Inflation Discourages Carter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter says it will be "a long, slow, tedious process" to break the trend toward double-digit inflation and federal spending restraints will not do it alone.

"I am discouraged about inflationary pressures," Carter said in a Friday interview with visiting news executives, the text of which was released Saturday.

He said the federal government must set the example by resisting pressures to spend more on behalf of clamoring interest groups, "but it is going to require a general sense that we are in it together, that we will make a mutual sacrifice ...

"We have not had as much success yet with the labor unions in holding down wage demands as we have had with some of the corporations in (holding down) their prices," he said. "But this is predictable.

"My own sense is that the workers will have to see some willingness on the part of government and business to hold down prices before they will be willing to make a long-term sacrifice."

In its monthly report on inflation, the Labor Department announced Friday that the Consumer Price Index increased 0.9 percent in May, largely because of the rising price of food and housing.

On a projected annual basis, that would be an inflation rate of 10.8 percent.

Government officials predicted the price spiral may ease slightly by summer's end, but Carter seemed more cautious.

"My guess is that food costs are leveling off, that the rate of increase will not be as great in the next six months," he said.

He said he has "good hope" the private sector will eventually join the federal government in the battle to reduce inflationary pressures, but added:

"It is going to be a long, slow, tedious process. We are going to have some disappointments. But the inflation rate has got to be controlled. It is my No. 1 domestic problem and I can only resolve it with the help of everyone."

As to federal spending restraints in the face of "increased demands from defense contractors, highway contractors, local governments, veterans, educators, farmers," he said he will use every means, "including the veto, to hold down unwarranted spending on the part of Congress."

On other topics, Carter:

—Said the Supreme Court decision in the Allan Bakke "reverse discrimination" case strengthened his resolve to pursue "an aggressive affirmative action program" that ensures minority businessmen get a fair share of federal contracts and bank deposits. "I would say the Bakke decision confirms our stand and leaves adequate option ... in all levels of American life for affirmative action."

—Said the Nixon and Ford administrations had kept Americans in the dark about major foreign policy initiatives by negotiating treaties like the first U.S.-Soviet strategic arms pact "in ultra-secrecy." He said his own style of "open," well-publicized negotiations creates problems, "but I think we are much less likely to make a serious mistake, as we did in Vietnam, as we may have of some items in the negotiation of SALT."

Syrian Forces Bombard Suburbs In Beirut

By DAVID D. PEARCE

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Fighting erupted in the southeast suburbs of Beirut between Syrian troops and right-wing Christian forces Saturday in what one resident said was "just like the bad old days."

The right-wing Phlangist party radio said 22 people had been killed and dozens of others wounded in Syrian shelling of the southeast suburb of Ain Rummaneh. It said over 100 shells and rockets hit the area.

Other rightist sources said at least three Syrians had been killed in the clashes Saturday, and an unknown number had been wounded, but no separate confirmation of the report was immediately available.

The state-run Beirut radio said President Elias Sarkis had contacted Syrian Pressident Hafez Assad in an effort to contain the incident. The state-run Damascus radio, however, made no mention of the fighting in its nightly newscast.

When the heavy shooting and shelling began, the streets of Beirut emptied and traffic thinned to a trickle.

"It's just like the bad old days," said one resident of the southeast suburb of Ain Rummaneh. "Fires have started in some places and there are explosions all over."

Syrian forces bombarded the southeast suburb of Ain Rummaneh from positions in the predominantly Moslem western sector of town.

The rightist sources said Bashir Gemayel, overall commander of Lebanon's rightist militias, had been detained by Syrian troops for half an hour Saturday on the Christian side of town, but that he was later released.

Rightist sources traced the flare-up of violence to a downtown Beirut clash earlier in the day in which one Syrian soldier was killed and five Lebanese, apparently rightists, were wounded.

The sources alleged that a Syrian soldier had thrown a grenade into a crowd of people "for no apparent reason" and was shot dead when he attempted to throw a second.

The sources said two Syrian soldiers were killed later in a clash with armed men, apparently rightists, in the downtown Tabaris area, the sources said.

Plot Charges Denied

JERUSALEM (UPI) — A spokesman for Vice President Walter Mondale Saturday denied charges the United States was plotting to force Prime Minister Menachem Begin out of office as "absolutely untrue."

Mondale, on a four-day goodwill visit, met former Prime Minister Golda Meir for more than an hour in Tel Aviv earlier Saturday and then returned to Jerusalem for his first talks with Israeli leaders.

About 250 supporters of the militant Gush Emunim movement demonstrated in front of Mondale's Jerusalem hotel Saturday, shouting "Mondale Go Home."

The demonstrators carried placards reading, "The U.S. Is Not an Ally But An Enemy." Police kept an eye on them but made no arrests.

Sharp disagreements over Israel's refusal to withdraw from captured Arab lands have strained relations between the United States and Israel and Mondale's trip was intended to reaffirm U.S. friendship on Israel's 30th anniversary.

Israeli Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon charged Friday that Washington, in an effort to forge a Middle East peace, was attempting to force the ouster of Begin, who has resisted U.S. pressure to withdraw from occupied Arab lands.

"It is impossible not to get the impression that the U.S. administration wishes to bring about the resignation of the prime minister," Sharon told an audience of businessmen.

In apparent response, Mondale's press secretary released a statement saying the vice president had been invited to Israel to help celebrate the Jewish nation's 30th anniversary.

"Any suggestion by anyone that he is here to interfere in Israel's internal affairs or politics is absolutely untrue," he said.

Mondale's meeting with Mrs. Meir was the only event scheduled for him before the end of the Jewish sabbath, which began shortly after his arrival Friday evening and ended Saturday evening.

Following the end of the sabbath evening, Mondale met opposition leader Shimon Peres, attended a reception given by U.S. Ambassador Samuel Lewis and conferred with Defense Minister Ezer Weizman.

Emerging from a meeting he termed "very friendly and reassuring for our country," Peres also criticized Sharon's remarks and said: "I don't think they represent the situation."

Gasoline Fire Possible Cause Of N.Y. Blast

By JULIANNE HASTINGS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Police said Saturday a can of gasoline in a frozen custard truck caught fire and touched off an explosion Friday that sprayed 162 noontime strollers with shrapnel-like bits of metal and glass.

Chief of Detectives James Sullivan said Bomb Squad members worked through the night to determine the cause of the explosion of a Mister Softee truck in Manhattan's Wall Street area.

"We have eliminated high explosives at the present time. There was no residue of high explosives found at the scene," Sullivan said.

Hospitals reported 162 people hurt in the Friday explosion. Twenty-two victims still were hospitalized, with five in critical condition.

Sullivan said the driver of the truck, Lee Balter, told police, "There was a fire and he tried to get out of the truck, but he was finally blown out."

At a news conference at police headquarters, Sullivan —

Recruiting New Police Force

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — City officials voted Saturday to begin recruiting a new police force in this eastern North Carolina city of about 18,000 following a walkout by all 34 policemen.

Police Chief John Worsham and the rest of the officers turned in their badges Friday night after the Board of Aldermen refused to consider a 10 percent pay raise they had requested.

After emerging from a meeting with the aldermen Saturday afternoon, Mayor L.R. Morgan announced that the city will begin running newspaper advertisements Monday for replacements, but he said officials are still hopeful the officers will change their minds and return to work.

Meanwhile, the city was being patrolled by Craven County sheriff's deputies, the state Highway Patrol and agents of the state Alcohol Law Enforcement agency.

Asked whether he had resigned or gone on strike, Worsham said only Morgan or City Manager J.C. Outlaw could define the status of the officers.

"As far as I am concerned, he has just walked out," Morgan said. "I haven't accepted any resignations; they've just walked out.

"We are going to start advertising Monday, but this is not to say that communications will not be maintained or established with the men," Morgan added. "We're advertising for police officers. This crisis can't continue forever."

Morgan said that no deadline has been set for the policemen to return to work.

"I am assuring the citizens of New Bern that the city has adequate law enforcement protection," Morgan said.

Thirty-three members of the police force showed up at Friday night's board meeting. The other policeman was sick and unable to attend.

The officers booed the aldermen several times and flung their badges on a table before stalking out of the courtroom where the meeting was held.

Worsham, a retired FBI agent who has been police chief for seven years, turned in his badge after saying he could not enforce the law by himself. Supporting the pay raise increase, he also said he was tired of fighting for operating funds from year to year.

The aldermen voted 4-1 for a budget giving police and other city employees a 6 percent pay raise. Morgan had endorsed the 10 percent raise sought by the policemen.

Holshouser Heads Liquor Committee

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Former Republican Gov. James Holshouser was named Saturday to head a bipartisan committee that will advise the State ABC Board on adoption of mixed drink regulations for North Carolina.

The appointment was made jointly by Gov. James Hunt and ABC Board Chairman Marin Speight. Others named to the committee were:

—Bill Clement of Durham, retired president of the North Carolina Mutual Insurance Co.;

—Mrs. Robert Andrews of Wilmington, past president of the North Carolina Medical Auxiliary;

—W.T. "Bill" Harris, past chairman of the Mecklenburg County Board of Commissioners and a prominent Baptist layman;

—John Belk, former major of Charlotte;

—State Rep. Hartwell Campbell of Wilson County;

—State Sen. William Smith of Wilmington;

—Gene Ochsenreiter, former mayor of Asheville;

—Al Lineberry, a Greensboro businessman and prominent Baptist.

Speight said the committee wants public input before it draws recommendations to implement mixed drink sales under the state's new law that permits local referendums on liquor by the drink.

Initial Merger Study For Schools Received

A Planning Data Survey of Pitt County and Greenville City Schools has been received, according to an announcement released simultaneously by Ott Alford and Glenn Cox, superintendents of the county and city schools, respectively.

The survey was requested as a result of a resolution approved on September 19, 1977 by Pitt County Commissioners, who asked the two school boards "to appoint a committee from each board to study, plan, and implement a plan of merger to merge the school districts . . ."

The next step occurred on October 18, 1977, when the two boards met in joint session to discuss the resolution and to hear comments from personnel of the state Division of School Planning. That was followed on November 8 by a request made jointly by the two boards for the study of the two systems.

Dr. Lacy M. Presnell, Director, Division of School Planning, had direction of the survey, with the survey committee chaired by Dr. Darrell Spencer, Assistant Director of the same agency.

Alford and Cox have indicated that survey materials will be shared with members of the school boards at their regular July meetings. The survey will also be presented to county commissioners at that body's August 7 meeting.

Also announced by the two superintendents is a plan to conduct a public review of the survey materials after the report has been studied and determination made of an appropriate course of action.

The survey is one of several steps to be taken relative to the possibility of an eventual merger of the two school systems.

Mousetrap Paperwork

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter says it used to take 500 pages to describe the regulations on the purchase of mousetraps for the Defense Department.

"No we have cut it down to less than one page," Carter told a group of visiting news executives Friday. The text of his remarks was released Saturday.

The president said the government has had "very good success" in reducing required paperwork.

"Towels used to be 20 or 30 pages," Carter said. "Now it is only one paragraph."

Dr. Thomas Brewer Assumes Duties As ECU Chancellor

By WILLIAM A. SHIRES
ECU News Bureau

Thomas Bowman Brewer, 45, historian, teacher and administrator, will assume duties this week as new chancellor of East Carolina University.

Dr. Brewer and his family — wife, Betty, and three children — were to arrive in Greenville July 2 and begin immediately settling into the ECU chancellor's home.

He planned to be at work in the chancellor's office on Monday morning, July 3, attending to administration of the third largest institution of higher learning in North Carolina.

A vice chancellor and dean of Texas Christian University in his native Fort Worth, Texas for the past six years, Brewer was chosen for the ECU chancellorship during a seven-months search which began over a year ago. He was elected by the University of North Carolina Board of Governors on March 10.

Dr. Brewer becomes the seventh chief administrative officer in the 71-year history of East Carolina University, succeeding Dr. Leo W. Jenkins who has served as president, then chancellor, since 1960.

Jenkins, now 65, will make his retirement home on the Carteret County coast at Pine Knoll Shores and also serve as a special advisor on economic development for Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr.

During their 18 years in the chancellor's home, Jenkins and his wife, Lillian, saw their six children grow to adulthood. Mrs. Jenkins has been hospitalized recently while recovering from a severe illness and the beige brick mansion on Fifth Street, adjacent to the campus, was vacated last week.

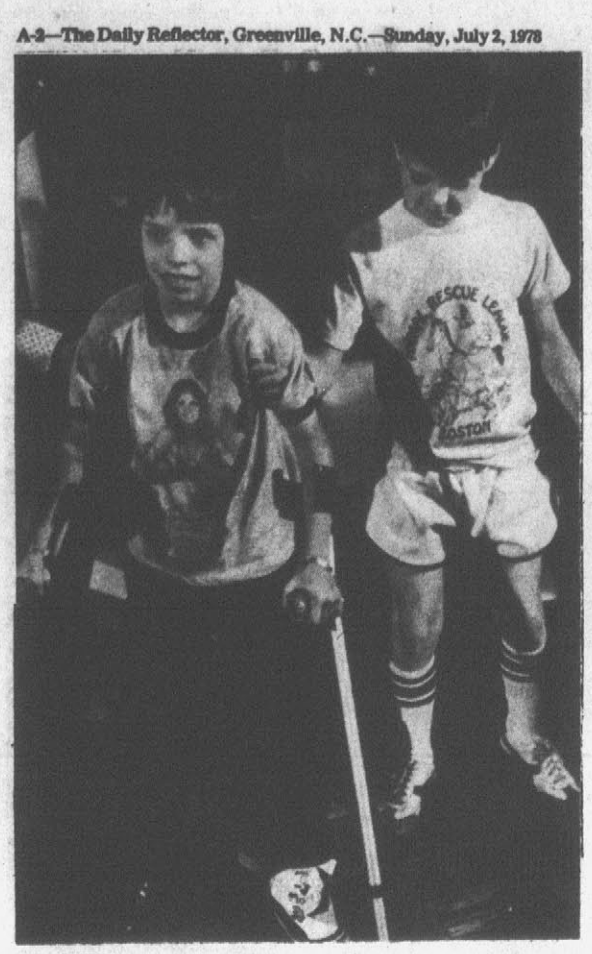

There have been recommendations in recent years that the chancellor's home at ECU be replaced with a new mansion. Brewer, however, opted to reside in the present home while certain alterations are done.

For one thing, the new chancellor wants a fence around the backyard.

The home also will be improved with a central air conditioning system and new electrical wiring.

Brewer was among several hundred applicants for the ECU chancellorship considered by a special selection committee. His application was submitted last August after he was nominated by a friend and colleague in the academic world.

Dr. Brewer holds the PhD in American history from the University of Pennsylvania. He received the B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University of Texas and has held teaching positions and professor ships in Pennsylvania, Texas, Iowa, Kentucky, and Ohio. He became a professor and Dean of Arts and Sciences at Texas Christian University in 1971.

Man Injured In Plane Crash

GARDNERVILLE — A Farmville man suffered injuries Saturday morning when his light crop-sprayer type plane crashed in a tobacco field just off rural paved road 1725, three-tenths of a mile from here.

Peter Michael Byers, 31, an employee of Pitt Spraying of Farmville, was reported in satisfactory condition at Pitt Memorial Hospital Saturday night.

According to Jimmy Haddock, a local resident who was in contact with Byers by CB radio, "he had a knock in the plane and thought it was the sprayer pump....a few seconds later he said he was going to try to make it to a small airstrip nearby."

Haddock said a few more seconds elapsed before Byers returned, saying the engine quit and he was going to land. Another CB'er called Byers and told him to pick a spot and set the plane down.

Attempting to land the plane on a farm path between a cornfield and a tobacco patch, Byers flew the plane at field level when it suddenly took a nosedive into the ground, spun around and came to rest in an upright position.

Upon impact, Byers' head struck the dash, leaving the imprint of his helmet. Eyewitnesses, who found the pilot strapped in by a harness, said Byers was spraying a nearby field when the plane crashed.

The plane, carrying a liqid spray, was heavily damaged in the accident, although no fire or other injuries resulted.

Bloodmobile Visit Set

The Red Cross Bloodmobile will be at Wright Auditorium on the East Carolina University campus Wednesday and the general public is urged to participate.

"It's only a one-day visit," says Dick Carney, administrator of the Tar River Blood Center here, "and many of the university students are not on campus during the summer, so the general public participation is greatly needed. Also, there's always a deficit of blood in the center after the Fourth of July holiday and this will need to be made up. We're really hoping and working for a big turnout!"

Hours during which one can give blood Wednesday are 9 a. m. to 3 p.m.

Friday Accidents

City Patrolman George E. Albertine of 204 Caddie Court was responding to a blue-light and siren call at 1:46 p.m. Friday when his blue-and-white passed through a red light and struck another vehicle.

The second car, operated by Percy Eugene Rogers of Winterville, was sent crashing into a building owned by H.A. Haynie Co. Rogers suffered cuts on his forehead and was transported to Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Damages were estimated at $2,000 to the patrol car, $800 to the Rogers vehicle and $1,000 to the building.

The accident is still under investigation at the Greenville Police Department.

Earlier Friday, around noon, no charges were preferred when a car operated by Mary Jones Rhodes of 2117 Southview Drive attempted a right turn on Evans Street and was struck by another vehicle being operated by Clifton Earl O'Geary of 13-J Oakhurst Circle.

Damages were estimated at $200 to the Rhodes car and $450 to the O'Geary vehicle.

Cyclist Hurt

Fifteen year-old Jerry Moye of 300 Cadillac St. suffered facial lacerations and an injured shoulder Saturday afternoon when he was unable to stop his bicycle and collided with a car at Myrtle and Manhattan Streets.

According to the investigating officer, Matthew Lewis Ward, 403-B Paris Ave., driver of the car, was traveling west on Myrtle Avenue when Moye, approaching a stop sign on bicycle with a group of friends, failed to yield the right-of-way and collided with the car.

No charges were preferred since the accident was unavoidable, the officer said: "Ward did what he could to avoid it."

Completes Requirement

KANSAS CITY, MO. — Dr. W. S. Dawson of Greenville has completed continuing education requirements to retain active membership in the American Academy of Family Physicians, the national association of family doctors.

The requirements call for members to complete a minimum of 150 hours of accredited continuing medical study every three years. The Academy, the second largest national medical association, is the only national medical group that requires members to keep up with medical progress through continuing education.

House Fire Saturday

Greenville firemen responded to a call at 11:23 a.m. Saturday to a home at 213 Paris Ave.

According to a fire department spokesman, the blaze apparently started in the front bedroom of the wood-framed dwelling when a lamp, sitting next to a window, ignited the curtains, spreading flames to some clothes hanging on a door, through the wall and onto the front porch.

However, the spokesman said Alex Bohler, who was occupying the room at the time, reported that someone had thrown some type of explosive device through the window. An immediate investigation of the area failed to confirm Bohler's report.

Heat damage was estimated as moderate, with heavy smoke damage throughout the house. The dwelling sustained no heavy structural damage, the spokesman said.

Served As Page

David W. Daniel of Greenville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Daniel of 227 Orton Dr., served as a page in Governor Jim Hunt's offices during the week of June 26. David will be a freshman at Wake Forest University.

Proposition 13 Put In Effect

By ROBERT B. GUNNISON

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Proposition 13 took full legal effect Saturday, but the financial doomsday that the tax-slashing measure's opponents forecast has yet to appear.

There have been layoffs and early retirements of government workers and teachers, angry demonstrations, closings of summer schools and libraries, cutback budgets and a lot of political pirouttes.

But the fiscal catastrophy predicted before the June 6 election has been blunted at least for one year by a new law that distributes much of the state's embarrassingly bloated $5.8 billion budget surplus to local governments.

The law requires that fire and police services be maintained at current levels. Opponents of the measure warned that fire and police protection would be cut drastically if the measure were approved.

Local governments face a $7 billion shortage of property tax revenue from Proposition 13, which rolled back assessments to 1975 levels, pegged taxes to 1 percent of assessed value and slowed assessment increases to 2 percent a year.

Although the measure took effect Saturday with coming of the new fiscal year, many local governments, school districts and even the state were without final budgets as the debate raged on about what is fat and what is not.

In the days before the Jarvis-Gann measure took full effect, there was frantic and sometimes contradictory action in city halls, the Capitol and courtrooms.

—Gov. Jerry Brown, an opponent of Proposition 13 before the election, signed another bill two minutes before the measure took effect to tidy up some loose ends in the big allocation bill.

—One day earlier, Brown was the target of curses and boos as he spoke to a rally of about 2,000 state workers whose salaries he has proposed freezing as a cost-cutting measure.

—A Brown-supported bill was defeated in the Legislature that would have stalled a 5 percent pay raise Saturday for all judges, whose salaries ranged before the hike from $66,935 for the chief justice of the Supreme Court to $45,700 for a Municipal Court judge.

—In Los Angeles, the 67 county flood control district workers were laid off, the first of an estimated total of 4,800 who may loose their jobs.

—Taking early retirements were 179 police officers and 169 firemen in the city of Los Angeles so they could receive higher pension benefits.

— In suburban Orange County, however, the Santa Ana Unified School District announced it would have a surplus of more than $7.5 million and would open a new $200,000 school on Sept. 11.

The state Supreme Court, which so far has refused to delay implementation of Proposition 13, has scheduled hearings for August to consider the constitutionality of the measure.

Male Prostitute Ring Operated By Marines

CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. (UPI) — Twelve Marines have been discharged and 30 others are under investigation in connection with a homosexual male prostitute ring that has operated from the base for three years, officials confirmed Friday.

Base public relations officer Lt. Col. Dan Brown confirmed the discharge of the 12 and the continuing probe by the Naval Investigative Service but would offer no further comment.

An officer on the base, however, said organizers of the ring approached "fair-skinned, young-looking kids" and "would strike up a conversation ... eventually suggesting that good money could be made on weekends by working for the ring."

The officer, who asked not to be identified, said those who agreed were taken to Orange County where they were photographed, often performing homosexual acts on each other. The photographs were then circulated in the Los Angeles area, he said, and the youths were hired as male prostitutes or for roles in pornographic movies.

He said the ring has operated for the past three years but surfaced only recently when the leaders became more aggressive in their efforts to recruit new marines.

The 12 marines were reportedly given honorable discharges after being presented with the alternative of a court-martial.

One Killed, Five Wounded By Sniper

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — A young woman was killed and five other persons were wounded early Saturday by rifle shots fired into a crowd of persons standing in the parking lot of a fast-food restaurant.

The dead woman was identified as Sandra Porter, 21, who was shot in the head.

Police said the shots apparently were fired from the roof of a garage adjacent to the parking lot of the Red Barn restaurant and from another spot across the street from the restaurant.

The sniper escaped and police said they had no suspects.

PIN Director Resigns

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The director of North Carolina's Police Information Network has resigned because of questionable spending practices uncovered by the State Bureau of Investigation.

Howard M. Livingston, whose resignation becomes effective July 31, said some of the findings are only "discrepancies" of opinion.

Andrew A. Vanore, senior deputy attorney general, said the SBI probe of alleged irregularities between November 1976 and August 1977 showed Livingston was advanced $1,656 for out-of-state trips, but failed to submit the reimbursements that were to come later from a federal agency.

Miller Denies Report

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal Reserve Board Chairman G. William Miller hotly denied a report Saturday that he had opposed a boost in interest rates for political reasons.

Miller called the report "false and absurd," in a brief statement issued through a Fed spokesman.

The board took the unusual step Friday of raising the discount rate, the interest rate it charges on loans to member banks, from 7 percent to 7¼ percent over Miller's opposition. The action was taken on a 3-2 vote and could signal higher consumer interest rates throughout the country.

Bombs Go Off In Italy

ROME (UPI) — Bombs went off at a Rome police station, a Florence courthouse and a Venice labor union office Saturday as politicians met to find a compromise candidate in Italy's deadlocked presidential election.

The Christian Democrats decided to withdraw their candidate after three fruitless ballots and abstained on the fourth round of voting.

Cambodia Claims Victory

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Cambodia claimed Saturday its troops crushed two Vietnamese border attacks in the past two weeks, inflicting 3,500 Vietnameese casualties.

An official Phnom Penh Radio broadcast monitored in Bangkok said remnants of the Vietnamese forces are fleeing "in disorder ... in shame."

The dates of the reported attacks — June 15 to 29 — roughly coincide with attacks on Vietnamese border villages reported by Hanoi.

Hopes To Overcome Centuries Old Schism

By ERNEST SAKLER

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Paul VI said Saturday he prayed to God to help the Roman Catholic and Greek Orthodox Churches overcome nine centuries of schism and join in common prayer to "all saints of the East and West."

The 80-year-old pontiff expressed his hopes in an address to Orthodox Metropolitan Meliton of Chalcedon, Greece, who had a private audience with him during a goodwill visit to the Vatican.

Meliton, who is the dean of the synod of the Orthodox Ecumenical Patriarchate in Constantinople (Istanbul), came to Rome for Thursday's 15th anniversary of Paul's coronation.

"May the Lord bless our efforts to clarify in a final way all those points that in the past caused tensions, clashes and even the interruption of our sacramental communion," the pope said.

Efforts to reunify the two churches, divided by nine centuries of schism, have been under way since Paul and the late Patriarch Athenagoras I of Constantinople launched a unity drive by exchanging a "kiss of peace" on Jerusalem's Mount of Olives in 1964.

Exchanges of visits and joint work by theological experts of the two sides have brought the two churches closer than they have ever been since a short-lived reunion in the 15th century.

Among the chief obstacles remaining are the Roman Catholic doctrines of papal infallibility and supremacy, which the Orthodox are unwilling to accept although they would be ready to give the pope a special rank of honor.

Violation Of Rights Reports

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Organization of American States Saturday approved reports of extensive human rights violations against Uruguay, Paraguay and Chile and urged those countries to end the abuses.

Ending a 10-day meeting, the OAS also approved a resolution directing its permanent council and the Inter-American Juridical Committee to draft international conventions on specific aspects of terrorism, such as taking hostages.

The OAS Juridical and Political Committee Friday rejected a Jamaican amendment to the terrorism resolution to recognize the right of oppressed people to struggle for freedom. The United States voted for the amendment, which reportedly relates to the struggle of blacks in Southern Africa to oust white-dominated governments.

The Juridical and Political Committee vote on the Uruguay and Paraguay resolutions was 16 for, eight abstentions and one against, with Uruguay and Paraguay voting "no" on each of their resolutions and abstaining on the other. Other countries opposing the resolution by abstaining were Bolivia, Nicaragua, Chile, El Salvador, Brazil, Haiti and Argentina.

The committee approved by a vote of 21 yeas to three abstentions — by Uruguay, Brazil and Argentina — the annual report of the commission, which urges Chile to continue cooperating with the commission.

The resolution also requests the Inter-American Juridical Committee and rights commission to draft a convention defining torture as an international crime.

It adopted a resolution commending the rights commission and denouncing rights abuses, after approving a Panamanian amendment to recognize the OAS principles of non-intervention.

The assembly also approved resolutions commending the United States and Panama for concluding the canal treaties and urging the United States to end alleged protectionist policies in sugar tariffs.

Closing Consulates In China

TOKYO (UPI) — Vietnam is closing two consulates in southern China as a result of the growing feud between Hanoi and Peking over the fate of ethnic Chinese living in Vietnam, the Kyodo news service reported Saturday.

Kyodo said a seven-member Vietnamese diplomatic staff closed its consulate in China's southern city of Kunmin Friday and left for home by train.

The agency, quoting Vietnamese diplomats, said another Vietnamese consulate in the city of Nanning would close over the weekend and its staff of eight would leave for home either today or Monday.

Recommends Retaliatory Moves

MOSCOW (AP) — The U.S. Embassy has recommended retaliatory moves against Soviet journalists in the United States for crackdowns on American correspondents in Moscow, Western diplomatic sources say.

The nature of the countermeasures recommended to the State Department was not specified by the sources, who asked not to be identified. But others said the State Department already has called in Soviet correspondents to check their credentials.

Group Lost Over $13 Million

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — An investigative report filed with the federal bankruptcy court in Greensboro says a textile conglomerate, The Washington Group, lost more than $13 million between 1973 and 1977.

Richard A. Gilbert, the firm's court-appointed trustee, also said in the report that the losses left the stockholders with a deficit of more than $8 million.

The Washington Group has filed for reorganization under Chapter X of the federal Bankruptcy Act.

In a related development Friday, Gilbert asked the court to allow him to sue former and present officers and drectors of the company for $10 million in losses he claims were caused by mismanagement.

The $10 million includes a claim for $2.5 million which he said R.J. Reynolds tobacco heir Smith W. Bagley of Winston-Salem and James R. Gilley borrowed in 1972 from a Virginia bank to buy controlling stock in Washington Mills Corp.

The 100-page report included possible reasons for The Washington Group's financial troubles, suggesting that the "first and primary cause was the unmanageable proportions that outstanding loans had reached.

By the end of fiscal 1975, the report said, the company's debts for mill acquistions, expansion and operations exceeded $30 million.

Other reasons given were the firm's loss of its two largest accounts in 1974, and its entrance into the sportswear market in 1976, which was an "overly ambitious expansion program."

Managers On Leave After Money Found

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A week after FBI agents drilled open five safety deposit boxes at a Northwestern Bank branch and reportedly found more than half a million dollars in small bills, the bank has placed two of its branch managers on "leaves of absence," according to bank officials.

The two are Odell M. Wilson of the Clemmons branch and Jack N. Crawford of the Advance branch. It was at the Advance branch that the agents opened the safety deposit boxes. The money was thought to be connected with an extensive heroin ring being investigated by federal and state agents.

No customer's name was listed for the five boxes, but a bank source said John D. McConnell Jr., a former lawyer from Raleigh, was listed as trustee.

McConnell is under indictment in Wayne County on charges of conspiring with Leslie Ike Atkinson, Frank Lucas and others in the heroin operation. McConnell pleaded guilty in New York last year to charges of lying in testimony about his involvement with Lucas in transferring money to foreign banks. McConnell was paroled after serving four months of a one-year sentence. He was disbarred in January.

Praises Decision

By THOMAS C. FOTY

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Commission on Civil Rights Saturday praised the Supreme Court's ruling in the Allan Bakke "affirmative action" case and urged President Carter to step up federal affirmative action program enforcement efforts.

Stephen Horn, vice-chairman of the commission, and president of California State University at Long Beach, told UPI after a special meeting of the presidentially-apppointed panel "our unanimous conclusion was that we were heartened by the action of a majority of the court, because the court expressed its unequivocal support for the consideration of race and ethnicity in admissions programs."

Horn said the five commission members are convinced the decision upholding most affirmative action programs "will help bring minorities into the mainstream of American life."

In its Bakke ruling, the Supreme Court invalidated the admissions program at the medical school of the University of California at Davis because it set aside 16 of 100 places in each freshman class for members of minority groups, and ordered the admission of Allan Bakke, a 38-year old white engineer.

But the court simultaneously upheld the constitionality of other school plans which use racial or ethnic background as a factor in determing possible admissions.

Horn called that part of the decision "a victory for those committed to civil rights and a victory for the constitution."

Sullivan said eyewitness reports that someone had thrown a device under the truck proved unfounded.

"If a device had been thrown under the truck, you'd find the seat of the explosion in the asphalt," he said. "There was no evidence of that."

A New Chancellor Takes Over

Tomorrow Thomas Bowman Brewer becomes the new chancellor of East Carolina University.

The 45-year-old Brewer, whose academic field is history, was chosen after a search by a blue-ribbon committee which involved studying the credentials of hundreds of candidates for the position.

He comes to ECU from his home town of Ft. Worth, Texas, where he was vice chancellor and dean of Texas Christian University. He will be the seventh chief executive of the local institution over its 71-year history.

When a new chancellor or president, begins his duties at a major university a new era can be anticipated. While the chief executive listens to many recommendations, ideas and opinions, his own assessments will ultimately have much to do with the direction the institution will take.

Certainly this has been true with previous administrations at ECU, and as time goes on we will see results of the new chancellor's guiding hand.

Developing programs, such as the medical school, will continue to grow, of course, but beyond that it is impossible to predict the directions East Carolina University will follow during the Brewer era.

We can say that Brewer is a highly qualified administrator, and we feel he comes to the local institution with a deep committment to carrying on the tradition of service to the people of North Carolina.

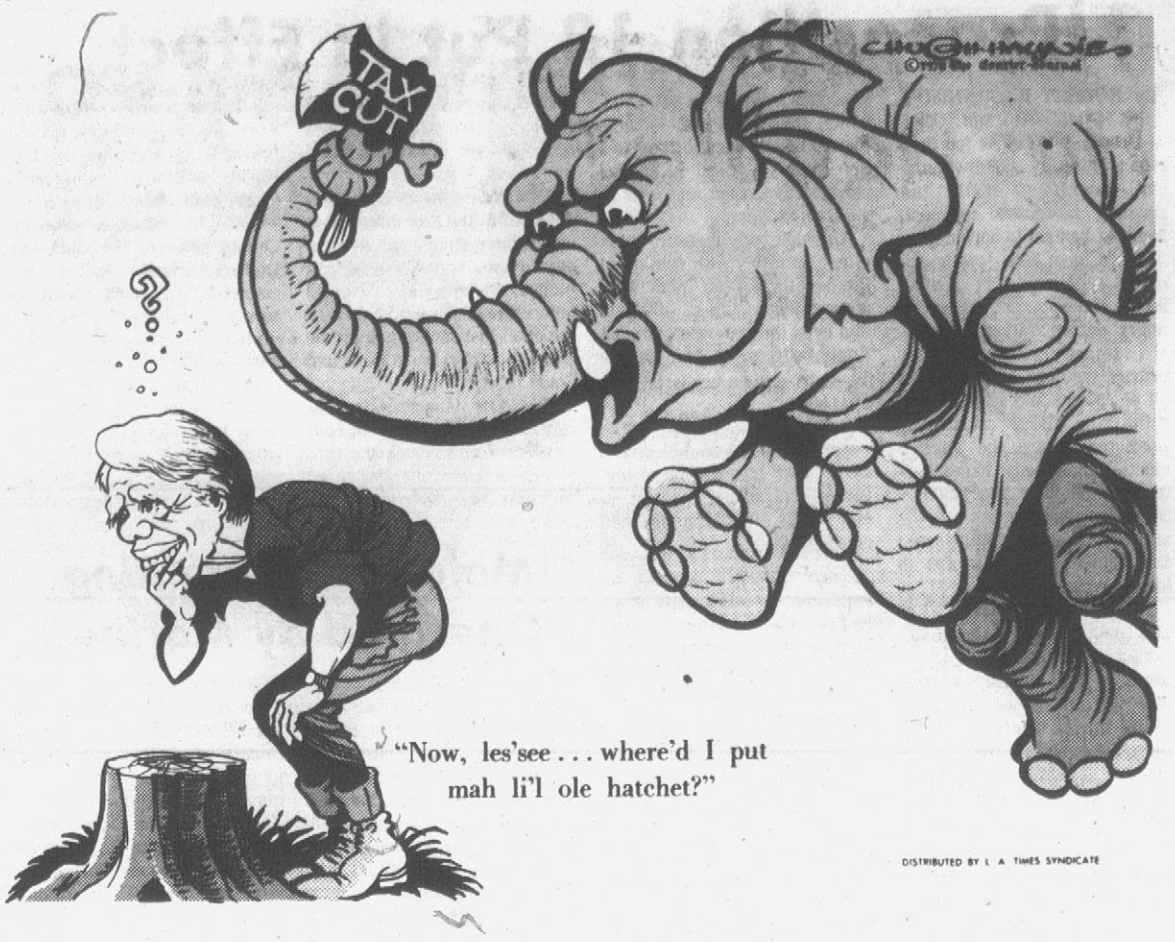

We are excited about the future of East Carolina University in all areas under the leadership of Thomas B. Brewer. We anticipate he will be hard at work in the chancellor's office tomorrow.

Farmville's Method Is Worth Studying

Farmville has adopted a budget for the 1978-79 fiscal year which is down 14 percent from the previous year and holds the 55 cents per $100 valuation tax rate.

Property taxes have not been raised for six years and Town Administrator Patrick Thomas says the budget is a "good conservative plan for the operation of town government in the coming year."

We don't know how the Farmville municipal government has held the line on spending, but we sure wish other governmental units would go and study Farmville's methods. Taxpayers at all levels could benefit from a good, conservative plan of operation.

Seafood Surprises Ahead

By Bill Noblitt

RALEIGH—A mechanical chewing machine at North Carolina State University is chomping away on some exotic new fish recipes these days.

The machine goes through meal after meal of experimental products, keeping careful records on graphs.

The object: testing new products in the test kitchen which should become available to shoppers in the supermarkets later this year.

According to Julie Bender, home economics editor of agricultural information at State's Agricultural Experiment Station, the researchers are being swamped with questions from companies interested in the new processing methods and products.

Fish have more protein than red meat, fewer calories than chicken, and can be served in countless ways. Besides, the product is available in great quantities at low cost on the North Carolina coast.

A lot of fish are thrown away, or parts wasted. Croaker, spot, mullet and blue-fish—researchers are discovering—can be used for everything from fish jerky to fish bologna to seafood pizza.

Pizza

Schoolkids in Carteret County are already munching seafood pizza in the school lunch program. A major effort is underway to perfect a seafood hot dog, relying on the American adoption of that old-time favorite as a way to boost seafood consumption.

While the machine keeps a record of its work, human tasters also evaluate the recipes, testing for springiness, hardness, chewiness, gumminess, oiliness, and ease of swallowing. Flavor is defined in terms such as smokiness, sweetness, saltiness, spiciness, and fishiness.

Research shows, says Ms. Bender, that quality of the product depends on following strict preparation guidelines including stringent sanitation, rapid chilling at time of catch, and proper handling at the processing plant.

In 1976, more than 15 million pounds of croaker were landed in North Carolina. Fisherman got about 10 and one-half cents per pound. But that fish has remarkably high nutritional value.

BILL NOBLITT

The answer is mechanical deboning flesh from the fish through a cooking process. Different temperatures produce different results, as do the fleshes of differend kinds of fish. Researchers are struggling to come up with a successful formula for producing fish flakes from the low-cost fish.

Flakes are used as extenders in more expensive seafood recipes using shrimp, crab, and clams, and in pizzas.

Already one firm is using the fish flakes in it's deviled crabs, and another has bought a machine to begin production.

Scholarly dissertations are research reports dealing with functional properties of fish tissues are just the first steps in seeking to boost the seafood industry in this state.

Record Year

Experts continue to predict tremendous growth. North Carolina has a wide variety of shell and fin fish along a coastline surpassed in length only by California, Texas, and Florida.

In 1976, more than 220 million pounds of seafood were docked in this state, with a value of $27.4 million. Retail value was estimated at a record $144 million; still far short of the potential billion-dollar industry.

Intense interest in seafood has developed in the past 10 to 15 years, and the Sea Grant program at N.C. State is conducting a variety of research projects in addition to recipe testing. Studies of marshlands, food chains, marine pathogens, product uses, erosion, waste disposal, environmental issues, marketing, disease control, and fishing methods, techniques, and equipment.

Sunday Morning Notes

William L. Shires, director of the ECU News Bureau, shared his thoughts as the Leo Jenkins administration ended at the institution.

"I was thinking about misplaced feelings," he said. "Maybe they repeat themselves.

"In August, 1945, I was working on the copy desk and telegraph desk and also as a reporter for the Jackson, Tenn. Sun when World War II ended with the surrender of Japan. The Sun put out an extra which was on the streets before sundown (CWT) early that evening and there was a big celebration. But later I had a panicky feeling. I went to the city editor, the late Robert P. Mahon, Jr., and said, "The war's over. What are we going to put in the paper?

"I had somewhat of the same feeling this week. Dr. Jenkins is retiring."

Well, we don't know what will fill up North Carolina newspapers in the months and years ahead. We do know, though that Jenkins generated more news copy, editorial, cartoons and editorials during his tenure than perhaps any other educator. In that sense he has been kind to the journalists.

News is always with us, though, and Shires says he recalls that Bob Mahon, an algebra teacher turned newspaper editor, avowed that peace would be just as interesting as the war . . . and far less grim.

"Mahon looked on news in terms of equations," Shires recalled of his old boss. "All factors had to be included. They had to balance, and they had to solve. There was no place for error. Unfortunately, his paragraphs looked clipped, like a column of figures . . . but he was a good city editor."

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

It is again that time of year when most of us start thinking about canning, as many fruits and vegetables would pile up and spoil at this peak season. Canning is fun, easy and relatively inexpensive. It has been used for food preservation since the early 1800's.

As with everything we do, we must think SAFETY. There are two main types of canners, water-bath and steampressure. Both can be used safely if we only go by the directions. In a water-bath canner, it must be deep enough so that the water is well over the top of jars. It is best to use a rack so that jars will not touch or hit side of canner. The rack will also help in removing jars from canner.

Fruits, tomatoes and pickled vegetables or acid foods can be safely canned in the water-bath canner.

For all vegetables except tomatoes, a steam-pressure canner should be used so that all micro-organisms that live almost everywhere are destroyed. In a steam-pressure canner, the temperature of 240 degrees will kill these micro-organisms.

The steam-pressure cooker or canner can be used safely, but you should always clean pet-cock and safety-valve openings by drawing a string or narrow strip of cloth through them. This should be done several times during the canning season.

Check pressure guage. An accurate pressure guage is necessary to get the processing temperature needed to make food keep. A dial guage, old or new, should always be checked before and during the canning season.

In both type canners, jars must seal to prevent air or bacteria from entering jar.

If you have any doubt if canned food is safe to eat, boil the food. Do not taste or use food that FOAMS during heating or that has an OFF ODOR.

For further information on canning, contact the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office located at 203 W. Third Street, Greenville.

Growing coolness between France and Japan over the war in China has resulted in abrupt French orders suspending importation of Japanese merchandise on the quota list.

The drastic move, coupled with the relative small volume of foreign trade involved, caused observers to link the commercial break with diplomatic incidents growing out of the Far East conflict.

Foreign traders said France never before had taken so severe a commercial action against any country. Yet the quotas involved, about a fourth of Japan's exports to France make up only about a half of one percent of Japanese exports and slightly less than that percentage of French imports. Imports of raw silk were not affected.

R. R. Case, who farms on the R. E. Harris Jr. land on the Falkland highway, today brought a cotton blossom to the city and said the blooms were beginning to make their appearance in large numbers.

It was not the first blossom to be reported this year. Ivey Smith of Bell Arthur brought in one on June 24.

Case said he noticed several blossoms along the road while coming to the city this morning.

Case Is Almost Re-Run

B WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's almost like a summer rerun. An embarrassed White House, a Senate that may have given too much consent with too little advice, and an embattled government official vowing to keep his job.

While the elements are similar, the troubles of David G. Gartner are not quite like those that befell Bert Lance a summer ago.

For Gartner, already at work as a member of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, is being challenged — by the president who appointed him — over a gift he received and disclosed before he was nominated and confirmed by the Senate.

Lance's banking practices stirred controversy after he became director of the Office of Management and Budget, and a tardy Senate inquiry eventually led him to quit.

Gartner says he will not resign. Lance said that, too, almost until the day he quit. But there is a difference there, as well. Lance held his job at the pleasure of the president. Nobody can force Gartner to resign from the commission.

And Gartner argues, unassailably, that no new information about his financial affairs led to the pressure against him but that, in fact, it was all on the record before he got his appointment.

At issue is a gift of about $72,000 worth of stock from Dwayne Andreas, put into trust for the education of Gartner's four children. The gifts were given between 1975 and 1977, while Gartner was an aide to the late Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota. Gartner said the stock was sold after his confirmation to the $50,000-a-year spot on the commission that regulates dealings in commodity futures.

Andreas heads a company that deals in the commodities business the commission regulates.

But as Gartner said Wednesday, he hasn't done anything wrong. He hasn't concealed anything, either. "If I resigned, it would look to the public as an admission of wrongdoing," he told the Senate Agriculture Committee.

In a sense, Gartner is a victim of a system that didn't

THE INSIDE REPORT

No Texas Fences Mended

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

HOUSTON — President Carter did not really mend long neglected Texas fences, thanks to shortcomings in both style and substance when he addressed some 1,200 black-tie $500-a-plate diners in the grand ballroom of the Hyatt Regency Hotel.

"I can't believe it," wailed a Southwestern politician-businessman who had spent $5,000 in after-tax dollars for a whole table. His disbelief: in the absence of a head table, the president was nowhere to be seen and was actually back in his hotel suite eating a solitary dinner. "Don't worry," a Washington-based lobbyist replied. "He'll be walking through shaking hands while we eat."

The lobbyist was wrong. While Texas arrangers of the dinner requested a walk-through, the White House vetoed it. Nor did the president show up at the mass cocktail party in the hotel lobby preceding dinner. Most diners saw him only when he marched to the microphone bathed in a spotlight, delivered his speech and marched out again.

Having passed up chances to mend those fences through increased personal contact, the president had to rely on one of his shortest suits: oratory. His style was snappier than usual and suitably conservative for this audience, but unfortunately built to an anti-climax on energy. While the audience was led to believe he would give them something new, Mr. Carter ended with an exhortation for his old energy program (opposed by most of his listeners). Some liked the patriotic appeal, but others shrugged their shoulders at a thrice-told tale.

The fund-raising dinner typified the president's two-day swing through Texas: he did fairly well but not well enough. "I think he made a dent in his problem," one Democratic insider told us, "but man, he's got a long way to go." The consensus remains that Mr. Carter would not carry this vital state today against Gerald Ford or Ronald Reagan.

The problem is not personal animosity but conflict on such key issues as oil and beef, aggravated by 1½ years of neglected politics. The turnout for the Houston fund-raiser, grossing over $600,000 for the Democratic National Committee, resulted not only from appeals by two popular Texans — national chairman John White and Ambassador Robert S. Strauss — but also respect for the Democratic president.

Moreover, Texas Democrats are anxious for Mr. Carter to succeed so he will be less of a drag on this year's state ticket. One $500 diner made a bad news-good news formulation: "The bad news is that Carter came at all: the good news is that he came in June instead of September." Fear of the Carter drag was expressed by the absence of Rep. Robert Krueger (candidate for the U.S. Senate) and Atty. Gen. John Hill (candidate for governor) at the president's Fort Worth and Houston airport arrivals.

Krueger, making a strong race against three-term Republican Sen. John Tower, campaigns as an "independent Democrat" to stress his un-Carterite posture. As the president arrived in Texas, Krueger attacked the Carter energy policy before an elite Houston businessmen's group. Nevertheless, Krueger that night was struck by the magnetism of the presidency itself and was havfng second thoughts about campaign appearances with Mr. Carter.

But when Krueger went to Austin the next morning to address the Independent Cattlemen's Assn., he closely followed Tower's attack on Mr. Carter's boost in beef imports. "For God's sake, Bob," a friendly cattleman advised him, "don't get yourself tied up with Carter." Heeding that advice Krueger uttered not one encouraging word about his president during a well-received assault on imported beef.

It is too late for Mr. Carter to reverse himself on beef or

THE GOOD LIFE

There are many people in the world today who insist that they live just as righteous lives without any religious commitment as those who are regular churchgoers.

Of course, never having tried faith, they are in no position to make the comparison. But more important, religious faith enters indirectly even into the lives of unbelievers. Usually the person without religious faith who nevertheless lives a clean and upright life has inherited a lot more than he cares to admit.

The standards of morality which he is proud to live by came from the Bible and were inculcated into him even without his knowing it by godly parents, grandparents, or someone else close to him in his formative years. The moral standards of this world did not happen by chance, nor were they the result of social evolution. They came from Christ and the Old Testament background, and have been passed down to us over the generations.

Desire To Own A House Grows

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Fads and styles forever phase in and fade out like artful transitions on a movie screen, reflecting changing tastes and desires, a measure of boredom, and the success or failure of promoters.

But through it all, the desire to own a house continues and even grows. Though attitudes about almost everything else change, housing remains a constant, and constantly influences opinions of other things.

Rising ownership, and anger over real estate taxes, played a large role in the California taxpayer revolt. As capitalists, homeowners are now influencing Congressional hearings on lowering capital gains taxes.

And the desire of families to join or remain among the 67 percent of households who own houses, has resulted in pressure that is bending the laws of mortgage lending and producing innovative lending arrangements.

Not all of the new mortgage techniques are available everywhere — in fact, some are very limited by custom or law — but, because of the needs involved, there seems to be an inevitability about their spread.

Even where lenders advertise nothing but conventional mortgages, enterprising borrowers with a flair for salesmanship have been talking their way into special arrangements that better suit their pocketbooks.

Balloon payments, for example, are nothing new to finance, but in some instances they are now being applied to mortgages.

Monthly payments on this type of loan are deliberately kept lower than the amount required to pay off principal and interest. At the end of the term, the borrower must pay a sum sufficient to retire the loan.

Generally, this final payment is larger than the borrower is prepared to pay, but the lender then may offer another loan to finance the "balloon." The latter then is paid off in monthly payments over time.

The benefit is epecially valuable to young couples whose incomes, though low, are growing. Presumably they will be better able after a period of, say, 10 years, to handle larger monthly payments.

The danger, of course, is that the original lender will decline to finance the balloon, thus forcing the borrower to scurry about in search of another source of money.

Step-rate mortgates also suit young couples with small but growing incomes. The terms call for regular rates increases over the life of the loan, which generally are for the customary 20 or 25-year periods.

Somewhat similar are graduated payment mortgages. Payments early in the contract are less than sufficient to amortize the loan. They rise gradually through the early years of the contract and then level off.

The Problem Has Doubled

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — Further evidence that alcohol abuse has become one of the nation's most serious problems is seen from a new Gallup study showing that the proportion of Americans who say that liquor has been a cause of trouble in their families has doubled in just four years.

Currently, one person in four (24 percent) says an alcohol-related problem has adversely affected his or her family life. The figure in 1974 was 12 percent. The uptrend since 1974 is recorded among most major socio-economic groups and in all regions of the nation.

The proportion saying liquor has been a cause of trouble is as high as one third among persons in the study who are separated or divorced.

The current study was undertaken by the Gallup Poll in close cooperation with Rev. David C. Hancock of Prevention of Alcohol Problems, Inc., Minneapolis, Minn., and Rev. David A. Works of the North Conway Institute, Boston, Mass.

The study also reveals that the proportion of Americans who admit to overindulgence on occasion has increased from 18 percent one year ago to 23 percent today.

Men are far more likely than are women to say they sometimes drink to excess. In addition, persons with higher incomes and or a higher level of formal education are the most likely to say they sometimes drink more than they think they should.

Percentage Of Drinkers Remains At High Level

The percentage of adult drinkers (18 and older) remains at the same level as last year — the highest percentage recorded in nearly four decades.

The latest nationwide drinking audit shows 71 percent of adults saying they use alcoholic beverages such as liquor, wine or beer. Only 29 percent are total abstainers.

The highest proportion of drinkers is found among men, younger persons, higher income groups, those living outside the South, professional and business people, and persons with a college background.

Focus On Trends Among Teenagers

Teenage drinking is causing particular concern among experts and parents alike. A Gallup survey conducted for the Charles F. Kettering Foundation revealed 55 percent of parents saying they believed drinking to be a "serious" problem among youth in their communities. And an overwhelming 84 percent favored a required school course on the effects of alcohol and drugs.

Teenagers themselves name alcohol as one of the three most serious problems facing their generation, as revealed by a Gallup Youth Survey. In addition, more than one-third of drinking teens (36 percent) say they sometimes drink more than they should. Among older teens (16 to 18), the figure reaches 43 percent.

Current Study Focuses On The 'Problem Drinker'

The current study takes a careful and revealing look at problem drinking in American society, often called America's No. 1 health problem.

Social observers have expressed alarm at excessive drinking and alcoholism in American society, pointing to findings that show alcohol to be involved in about half of highway fatalities and about half of all homicides. The abuse of alcohol also is a contributing factor to divorce, broken homes, child abuse, as well as other problems.

While most studies have focused on the alcoholic, the current study attempts to probe the behavior and attitudes of the "problem drinker." Each survey respondent was asked a series of 20 questions adapted from a list developed by the National Council on Alcoholism, Los Angeles County, Inc.

The 20 questions range from, "Do you drink to build up your self-confidence?" to, "Is drinking affecting your reputation or jeopardizing your job?" to, "Have you ever been to a hospital or arrested due to drinking?"

If the survey respondent answers two or more of 20 questions affirmatively, it could be an indication of problem drinking.

Thee results of the current study show that 25 percent of the total sample say yes to at least one of the 20 questions, with 14 percent saying yes to only one question and the remaining 11 percent saying yes to two or more questions.

Among drinkers, a total of 35 percent say yes to at least one of the 20 questions, with 20 percent saying yes to one question and the remaining 15 percent saying yes to two or more questions.

Following are the other survey questions, latest results and trends:

"Has liquor ever been a cause of trouble in your family?"

Truly: Paths Of Glory Lead To The Grave

BY JAMES J. KILPATRICK

In all the mountain ranges of the federal bureaucracy, one peak stands taller than the rest. This is the ponderous mass of the Federal Trade Commission. Last week, this mountain labored, and after three years of effort brought forth—a mountain.

Consider, if you please, the Final Staff Report upon Funeral Industry Practices. The volume runs to 526 tightly written pages, plus appendices and memoranda. This indegestible tome is garnished with 1,980 footnotes. Here the entire might, power and majesty of the greatest constitutional government on earth have been marshaled in awesome array—to propound a Trade Rule Regulation for funeral homes. Truly, it is precisely as the poet said: the paths of glory lead but to the grave.

Early on, you will find one sentence—one sentence—containing a friendly work for the funeral industry. The FTC staff acknowledges on page 2 that some readers might view the report as an indictment of funeral directors as an unscrupulous, unethical group. No so! "That characterization is both unintended and inaccurate, for we recognize the necessary and generally helpful service that many funeral directors render."

Unless my numbed perusal of this document has failed me, you can read another 524 pages without discovering a single redeeming line. On the contrary, the FTC staff plainly looks upon the nation's 22,000 funeral homes as one contemptible cesspool of greed and cynical exploitation. The funeral directors, in the staff's view, are rogues who prey upon grief-stricken families, taking advantage of their sorrow to bilk them for all the traffic will bear.

If the situation were truly this appalling, one would expect to find a record of thousands upon thousands of complaints, lawsuits and the like, directed against the gluttonous funeral homes. Amazingly, record evidence is that the number of consumer complaints is indeed modest and consumers are generally satisfied."

But the FTC staff has a ready explanation for this phenomenon: The stupid people do not know they've been had. "Logic dictates," says the staff smugly, "that the success of a fraud or confidence scheme is inversely related to the degree of consumer awareness of the scheme." The general public is "almost totally ignorant" of funeral practices. Or as an alternative, bereaved families do not complain because they may be overcome "by the shame of admitting gullibility."

The possibility that nine of ten families are satisfied with the prices and services of a funeral home is a possibility the bureaucratic mind cannot accept. The thought that burial services have only an infinitesimal effect upon interstate commerce is a thought no professional regulator can entertain. Thus the mountain must labor and produce a proposal for truly stultifying regulation of the funeral industry.

This is not the staff's first such proposal. Once before, in August of 1975, a sweeping trade rule was advanced. This latest report scraps the original version. Virtually every section of the 1975 proposal has been rewritten. The spirit remains the same. The idea is to protect the gullible, ignorant client from the rapacity of the rogues who run the funeral parlors.

The regulations would compel the funeral directors to tell their clients what is not required to say, in effect, that embalming is unnecessary, that cheap caskets are a wise choice, that expensive caskets are a waste of money, that outer burial containers are useless, and so on. In the staff's view, evertyhing is price, price, price. Price is all that matters, down to the price tags that must be displayed on the least expensive coffins in the showroom. The regulation, says the staff, happily chomping on an ugly infinitive, will permit the people "to comparison shop."

Is this regulation needed? Are the abuses so pervasive that federal intervention is positively demanded? Is there no remedy for unsavory and unethical practices short of this bristling, bureaucratic domination? I count myself a friend to this industry. I have spoken to its trade associations, met its leaders, been impressed by their decency. The deserve something better, it seems to me, than this mountainous, contemptuous smear.

Ray Vows Never Return To Mental Institution

By GAIL MICHAELS

CHARLOTTE, N.C.—The room is cramped and musty, not unlike most of the other rooms on the sixth floor of the Central YMCA in Charlotte, North Carolina. One the far side, just below the large double window, Ray Hubert Searcy sits on the edge of an oly army cot. A dingy sheet cascades over the top of one shoe.

Now Ray lowers his head and by fits and starts begins to strum a few notes on his battered old guitar.

"I can pick a bit, can't I boys?" he asks, talking to no one in particular. There are three others in the room, all black and in their early twenties. Ray is the only white.

"It'll take y'all 20 years to learn to play like that." The three young men nod their heads. Ray has always wanted to be a professional guitarist. And his talent is apparent. But at 38 the opportunity seems to have passed him by.

Beneath hair that is blond and unkempt Ray's scalp is scattered with small, oblong scars. Battle scars, Ray calls them. Rather they are the scars of a scattered legacy, of a frustrated and lonely life.

Throughout his adult life he has been tormented by bouts with mental illness. The scars on his head testify to the violence of those ordeals.

Because of emotional and mental instabilities Ray has been unable to get regular employment.

"Even though I'm supposed to be cured," he says, "my records say I'm still a mental imcompetent."

Now he washes windows to support himself.

"You must be resourceful or you won't survive," he told me once. "A man has got to be resourceful or he'll perish. It's a choice you have to make."

But where did it all begin?"

"When I first cracked-up, I was in California. That was in 1963."

Two weeks after he was committed he was released. He says he shouldn't have been. "I was still having hallucinations at the time, buy was afraid to tell anyone about them because of my paranoiac tendencies"—tendencies caused by his disorder, which was diagnosed "paranoid schizophrenia."

In the latter part of 1963, Ray was living in Baltimore, where he was trying to break into the country music circuit, when he was committed to a state-supported hospital in Crownsville, Maryland.

Released from Crownsville in April, 1964, Ray eventually found his way back to Asheville, North Carolina, the town where he grew up.

Not long after moving back to Asheville he was committed to Broughton Hospital, the state-supported psychiatric hospital in Morganton, North Carolina.

Ray remained at Broughton until June of 1969.

Dr. William A. Moody, the acting clinical director at Broughton, offers little in the way of encouragement or consolation to former mental patients like Ray.

"The recidivist rate for former mental patients is high'" he says. In North Carolina it is about 60 percent, a grim prognosis.

Since his release from Broughton, Ray has lived the life of a nomad, wandering about from town to town throughout the South, washing windows and doing other odd jobs to support himself.

"Whenever things start going good for me, my nerves always give out. But I will never go back to a mental institution again," he declares. "Not as long as I live. Never. A mental hospital is something out of a horror movie."

Now he lights a cigarette and toses the match aside. Smoke eddies upward to hang motionless in the damp and heavy air in the YMCA room.

work. Perhaps he did make a mistake in not seeing that this was one appointment he shouldn't accept.

But the more serious errors were not Gartner's.

Carter's staff knew of the Andreas gift, but did not warn the president.

So the White House went ahead with the nomination and it breezed through the Senate Agriculture Committee after Gartner had told the panel about the gift. The full Senate confirmed Gartner the same day, May 17.

That's the same Senate that resounded with promises of slower scrutiny in nomination proceedings after the Lance affair and came up with a proposal for an independent office to make sure appointments get more than rubber stamp treatment.

It was introduced, filed and forgotten.

Defection Can Be Due To Refreshment-Time

A number of explanations have been advanced for the decline of organized religion in the 20th century. Some experts say that global wars and technology have worked together to rob man of his faith in a divine order. Others say that the church puts many people off by its sometimes overwhelming concern over institutional questions to the detriment of social and spiritual issues. But I say that the primary cause of disaffection, at least among young parents, has got to be Kool-Aid and cookies.

I say this because every time I take Meg to Sunday School, she comes home looking like an advertisement for Spray 'N Wash. There are cookie or cracker crumbs adorning her entire facial region and cookie or cracker paste smeared all over the front of her dress. In addition, streaks of Kool-Aid grace her apparel in a more or less continuous line from chin to hem, depending on how full the glass was. Now I ask you, if facing a spectacle like that every Sunday for four years won't shake your faith, what will?

The worst thing about it is when there's a Sunday lunch invitation involved. When Phillip's parents invited us to a nice place for lunch last Sunday, I got up at 6:30 a.m. just so that I'd be sure to get us all ready in time. I polished shoes, ironed dresses, washed hair, dried hair, cleaned sleep out of eyes. Then I started on Meg.

I must say that she looked beautiful when I finished. She had a new haircut, an adorable yellow dress trimmed with lace, and black patent leather shoes so shiny that they sparkled like glass. I was so proud that I almost popped the pins out of my zipper. Then the ax fell.

"Are we ready to go to Sunday School?" she asked.

"No dear. We are going out to lunch with Nana and Pop."

I answered. "And the two are mutually exclusive."

"But I want to go to Sunday School," she whined as big tears began to brim over her lashes.

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself, Gail," Phillip said. "Are you more concerned with her appearance or her spiritual development?"

I paused, then answered, "Do you know how long it took me to iron that dress?"

Phillip shook his head. "Frankly, I expected a little better from you . . ."

"You obviously don't remember what they do to her down there. That church basement is a jungle."

"So take a bib."

My face lit up. Verily, I had experienced a religious epiphany.

When church was over, that morning we marched downstairs to collect our fashionable daughter. But what we found instead was a small hoyden pulling herself across the floor on her stomach.

"I can't stand it," I groaned. "What are you doing?"

"I'm playing alligator, Mommy."

She stood up, and I could see that the only real damage that the floor had accomplished was on the toes of her shoes, where the patent leather had permanently disappeared. However there was other unrelated damage. The front of her formerly yellow dress was now Kool-Aid pink, and she had three large tufts of bangs and cookie stubbornly matted in three different directions.

"What happened to the bib?" I moaned.

"She pulled it off," the attendant answered apologetically.

I turned to Phillip. "I'm thinking of converting," I said. "I wonder if the synagogue serves Kool-Aid."

energy. But his tone in Texas was markedly conservative - praising free enterprise, excoriating inflation, traveling the hard road against Moscow.

How much this rhetoric helps is debatable. Although the president's cry that "we are not going to let the Soviet Union push us around" drew cheers from a Fort Worth luncheon, Democratic politicians doubt it narrows the Carter confidence gap in Texas. While conservatives were not convinced, liberals sat on their hands at obvious applause points.

The problem is deeper than issues or ideology, as one prominent, plain-talking Texas liberal (a $5,000 table buyer at Houston) told us after the speech: "Jimmy Carter has lied to everybody in Texas from the blacks and the Mexicans to the oil boys. He has to start over from scratch."

His trip was a modest start, say most Democratic politicians. But he failed to make the most of it: his limp performance in Houston was followed by a widely publicized Army firepower demonstration at Fort Hood costing some $2 million. When the White House permitted the president's anti-inflation theme to be blunted by an Army public relations spectacle, Texas' confidence in the competence of the President and his men was not enhanced.

The Eagle Is Holding Out Against Extinction

By JOE WING
For The Associated Press

If you are lucky enough to hear the American eagle scream this Independence Day as tradition dictates, you might be disappointed.

This mighty symbol of our country emits "a creaky sort of yelp like the sound of a rusty hinge or a small puppy," according to one authority.

But the yelp might be one of optimism. The big birds are holding their own against extinction in the Great Lakes states and in the Pacific Northwest, and there are up to 7,500 in Alaska, says Lynn A. Greenwalt of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

"I am confident they will survive," says Greenwalt even though the American, or bald, eagle is officially listed as endangered in 43 states and threatened in five others.

Hawaii has no eagles.

Alexander Sprunt IV of Tavernier, Fla., research director of the National Audubon Society, believes there are lots of threats to the eagles in the lake region. "You can even make a case for saying that the Alaska birds are endangered because of oil spills and other ocean contamination."

He does concede that the eagles of south Florida and the Chesapeake are doing "reasonably well" despite Disney World and other development in central Florida. He also notes that the long-lasting effects of the outlawed pesticide DDT are wearing off.

The eagle was designated the national emblem by the Continental Cngress in 1782 — over Ben Franklin's vigorous lobbying for the wild turkey. (Had Ben won, there would be turkeys on dollar bills, uniform buttoms, flagstaffs and the presidential seal.)

The mystique of the eagle was well established long before the Continental Congress gave it the nod.

The Greeks thought of eagles as thunder-bolt bearing attendants on Jove; Roman legions cried "Forward the eagles" as they advanced their eagle standards, and Persian armies carried eagles into battle.

Ancient Egyptians depicted the great bird in art, early Christians made it a symbol of St. John the Evangelist, and Napoleon favored the eagle motif in decorations.

Russia and Germany adopted the eagle as a national symbol before the United States did, and most states still have at least one town with "eagle" in its name. Texas has three.

Despite this mystique, the eagle isn't all that noble a fellow. He dwells by the shore, living largely on fish. Although his talons can snare a live fish, he usually takes the easy way, picking up the dead or ailing or robbing fish hawks and their prey.

The bad eagle existed in North America alone, and besides the golden is the only eagle species that frequents this contnent.

Accused of everything from baby snatching, fish stealing and game killing to driving sheepanchers broke, these magnificent raptors have sufferd from guns, traps, poison and loss of habitat, even though harming them has been a federal offense since 1940.

Just recently three Texas were convicted and fined a total of $6,000 in a case involving the shooting of eagles from the air. Thousands of eagles drift down from the mountains in winter to the southwestern states. Some years ago the Audubon Society estimated that 20,000 goldes were slaughtered in Texas during a 20-year period.

The bald eagle is the strongest and toughest of all air-borne birds, sometimes soaring out of sight on seven-foot wings. The golden eagle, while lacking the American eagle's striking plumage, "seems built of finer clay," wrote naturalist Edward Howe Bush.

His beak is not so large or coarse, his feet are smaller, his form more compact and his nature more aggressive.

In flight, he is even more impressive, diving like a falcon from immense heights to strike a victim dead. It is estimated he can fly at 200 mph on the level. He is seen throughout the Northern Hemisphere and has been called the most numerous of the big raptors in the world.

The wildlife service estimates there are up to 60,000 goldens in North America, sharply contrasting with an Audubon Society figure of 8,000 to 10,000 some years ago.

The golden feeds his young largely on rats, mice and squirrels but can kill larger prey such as turkeys, small fawns, foxes and young pigs. Asian falconers have trained them to strike wolves, antelopes and wild goats and to hold them until the huntsman arrives.

There are four basic kinds of eagles: The booted eagle, including the golden, with feathers down to its toes; the fish and sea eagles, including the bald; the serpent, snake and harrier eagles, and the harpies, named after the avenging furies of ancient Greece.

None is safe from man, the greatest predator of all.

Brown says the persecution of the eagle is based on guesswork and prejudice and adds:

"In civilized countries it is questionable that eagles will survive."

Philadelphia's Rizzo Plans A National Campaign

EDITOR'S NOTE — In his two terms as mayor of Philadelphia, Frank Rizzo has lived up to his image — the hard-nosed cop who brooks no disruptions of the public order. Rizzo says he's leaving office next year to awaken America against "special privileges" for minorities. But he says he's not anti-black and says any black who thinks like he does is welcome to join.

By LEE LINDER
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Frank Rizzo, the former cop whose tough talk helped him become mayor during a period of racial unrest, says he's leaving City Hall to awaken American against "special privileges" for minorities.

He's not very specific about his crusade beyond saying he will make himself heard. But he's specific in his insistence that it's not directed against blacks, as some of his critics have suggested, and he indignantly rejected a recent endorsement from the Ku Klux Klan, which called him "a racist hero."

"I am not a racist," says the burly 57-year-old Rizzo, clenching his big fist and puffing on a six-inch cigar in his teak-paneled office, where pictures are taboo because he doesn't want nail holes in the wall.

"I have done more for minorities than any police commissioner or mayor in the history of this country."

Rizzo says he'd welcome blacks who think as he does into his "awake America" movement.

But his plan is to speak out against programs that have often been identified with blacks and other minorities — public housing and busing among them.

"Why have people fled the cities?" he asks. "Crime and busing. Schools. Quotas. Public housing. This is what's dividing (this country). When do we stop paying for past injustices?"

Rizzo is the son of a policeman and spent 29 years on the force after quitting high school and working as a $10 a week butcher's helper. He says he won't seek a third term next year, although many Philadelphians doubt that decision is final.

He also says he won't open a national headquarters for his campaign because he has enough national identification to go it alone.

"I don't have to leave this office," he says. "It's all over the country. We've received over a thousand letters from towns and cities I never heard of."

The heart of Rizzo's philosophy on "privilege" stems, he says, from his own experience. "I did it the hard way. I want to give every man the opportunity. If there have been any injustices, give extra schooling, extra this, extra that, to prepare him.

"But once you start, or qualify, or prepare for that job, you sit down as my equal. That's what this country is all about. Why do you jump over 50 men to reach a member of the minority?

"Suppose I give special privileges. Suppose the Jews say, 'Hitler killed 20 million Jews, we want 20 points.' Suppose Italo-Americans say 'Columbus discovered America, give us 20 points.' Suppose the Polish-Americans and all other people demanded special privileges, where would we be?"

For years Rizzo has been accused of being unresponsive to blacks, who make up 40 percent of Philadelphia's population, and of ignoring instances of police brutality. "When (the cops) are wrong, and trying to be right, I'll defend them," he once said.

Rizzo still has his hands full as mayor. Philadelphia averted bankruptcy in 1976 by increasing taxes more than 30 percent, prompting an effort to recall the mayor that garnered 200,000 signatures but was thwarted by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court.

Today, Rizzo refuses "even one penny more" for a troubled school system forced to cut $75 million from next year's budget and faced with a teacher strike in September.

The city is also trying to claim hundreds of millions of dollars in federal housing and redevelopment funds witheld because of alleged civil rights law violations Rizzo accuses Washington of prejudice, but an administration official calls that "the city's demagogic attempt to obfuscate its own gross failings."

A Democrat often at odds with the party organization, Rizzo was elected in 1971 with a reputation as a hard-headed police commissioner who kept Philadelphia quiet while other cities burned in urban riots.

Even today, whenever there is street trouble, he cruises to the scene in the black limousine he calls "Car One." Once in 1969, while police commissioner, he arrived at a disturbance with a nightstick stuck in the cummerbund of his tuxedo.

Rizzo describes himself as "a pretty simple guy," with no hobbies excepo "puttering around the yard." He says he discusses things with his wife, Carmella, and their two children, Joanna, 27, a parochial school teacher, and Francis, 33, who works for the electric company.

The city charter precludes a third term for mayor, but many politicians thought Rizzo would seek to amend it to clear the way. Some remain unconvinced even after the mayor's announcement that he'd step down next year "because I want to be a voice that's going to be heard not only in Philadelphia but across this great country."

Some skeptics think Rizzo, despite his big victories in the first two elections, might have trouble getting re-elected next year, a doubt not perceptibly shared by Rizzo.

"I don't like it to sound like self praise," he says, "but I can move to any state in this country, with few exceptions, and be elected governor after a year. I can move to any city and be elected mayor in a year."

So, he says, he needs only himself to win attention for his plan. "I can attract a crowd by standing on the corner," he says. "You got to admit this would be a pretty dull city without Frank Rizzo."

To Take Samples

A special survey team supported by the Department of Energy will be working in the Greenville area for the next several weeks to take samples to assess national uranium resources.

A survey of the nation's ground waters, surface waters and stream sediments to be completed by 1980 is the objective of the DOE program.

Surveyors will collect random samples at various spacings throughout the nation. The collected data will be plotted on maps, which will help serve to identify potential new areas favorable for uranium exploration.

Team surveyors will visit private residents in the Greenville area requesting permission to collect samples of well water or silt deposits from streams. They will carry identification cards and will be authorized by the Federal Government. Private citizens can aid this national effort in finding alternative sources of energy by allowing surveyors to obtain samples.

Nixon Returns To Public Life

By HELEN THOMAS
UPI White House Reporter

HYDEN, Ky. (UPI) — Richard Nixon returned to public life in high presidential style Saturday, cheered by crowds chanting "We want Nixon!" and regaled by a brass band playing "Hail to the Chief."

About 700 fiercely-loyal supporters turned out at London-Corbin Airport, some 65 miles from this tiny Cumberland Mountain hamlet, to see the former president step off a small private aircraft onto a red carpet, grin, wave both arms and end four years of life in virtual exile.

They waved signs reading "Nixon's the One — In 1980," wore "I like Nixon" lapel buttons and set up a boistrous welcome to show that — in this staunchly Republican land of rugged hills, coal mines and mountaineers — Richard Nixon is still king.

Thousands more awaited his arrival in a town decked out with flags and plastered with welcoming signs, where he was to dedicate Hyden's spanking new Richard M. Nixon Recreation Center today and make his first public speech since he resigned office in disgrace on Aug. 9, 1974.

"I came to see the greatest president we ever had," said Ronald Burns, 36, of Onedia, Ky., part of the worshipful airport crowd that pressed around Nixon, pumping his hand and shouting "God bless you," as Secret Service bodyguards kept close watch.

"It must be love," said Beatrice Hensley, 41, of Norwood, Ohio, by way of explaining her willingness to wait for her hero under a hot sun.

Although Hyden had planned to have an Army band greet the president, it declined to play "Hail to the Chief" — the anthem reserved by protocol for presidents — and so the welcomers brought out the four-piece Laurel County High School band. It played "Hail to the Chief" twice.

Wearing a light blue suit, looking grayer than when he left the White House in 1974, Nixon smiled and waved at the airport crowd, autographed some copies of his newly-published autobiography and spoke from a platform decorated with a huge sign reading, "Welcome President Nixon."

He confined his remarks to generalities in the manner of a happy, confidant political campaigner making a whistle-stop, praising Kentucky for its hospitality and saying that, with the support people like this, he was able to "make some progress in those years" when he was president.

NIXON GREETED BY WELL-WISHERS — Former President Richard M. Nixon arrived at the London Kentucky Airport Saturday afternoon and following a brief speech he moved into the crowd to shake hands with those who came to greet him. Nixon was in the area for the dedication of the Richard M. Nixon Recreation Center in Hyden, Kentucky. (AP Laserphoto)

New HIRE II Program For Vets Announced

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

The old Help Through Industry Retraining and Employment Program (HIRE) has been revised and updated and is now known as HIRE II.

The new program has the same basic goal as its predecessor, with the major difference being that HIRE II permits prospective employers to hire a single trainee or any number of trainees — whereas the old HIRE was aimed at multi-corporate level firms

To provide funding for HIRE II, North Carolina has been allocated $1.3 million to expend on the program, one designed primarily for on-site training for disabled veterans and for veterans of the Vietnam-era. However, other veterans will be considered in certain instances.

According to the Jim Hannan, manager of the Greenville office of the Employment Security Commission, "reimbursement to employers may amount to as much as one-half of the amount paid in wages."

HIRE II entails payment of a minimum wage of $3.50 per hour, as the concept is based on retraining persons who already possess skill levels of a degree beyond that of laborers and apprentices.

"We hope to get some good reaction," Kendrick Taylor, Veterans Employment Representative of the local ESC office commented. "Mainly, our office will write contracts for on the job training under this program, and provide qualified applicants for any available training job."

Another ESC administrator involved in HIRE II is Larry Hamby, Selection and Referral Officer. Hamby explained that veterans to be retrained "can be hired for as little as 160 hours of training, or as much as 1,040 hours, which stated another way equates for a period of one to six months."

All three ESC personnel said initial contact with local businesses was already underway. CETA is the prime sponsor agent for this statewide effort which is hoped will result in placing between 1,300 and 1,400 disabled and Vietnam veterans in HIRE II programs of training.

Hamby noted that although the Greenville office will basically serve Pitt County residents and others in certain areas of adjacent counties, "we are not limited in this respect. There is no residential restriction involved, except we will be working only with residents of North Carolina."

Area employers who may not have previously been aware of the HIRE II program are encouraged to contact the Employment Security Commission for complete details. The office is located at 3101 Bismarck Street, and the phone number if 756-2686. Daily hours are 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

"There's one important consideration," Taylor noted, "all funds for HIRE II must be obligated by September 30 this year, which means whatever help we can give or employers can provide must be done without delay. Once an obligation is made, we have a year from that date to fulfil the obligations of the contract made under HIRE II."

Cigarette Revenues Down

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A crackdown by law enforcement officers on the smuggling of cigarettes out of North Carolina apparently is responsible for a sharp drop in cigarette tax revenues, auditors have concluded.

State Auditor Henry L. Bridges released an audit Friday saying efforts by state and federal officials to stop the smuggling of cigarettes is the most likely reason for a 5.43 decline in state cigarette tax collections last year.

Bridges said there was no conclusive proof of the theory.

The state collected $20.3 million from cigarette taxes during the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1976 — down from $21.4 million for the previous bookkeeping year. It was the first decline in cigarette tax revenues since the state imposed a 2 percent levy in 1969.

Chavis Removed From Intensive Care

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State prison officials said Friday that imprisoned Wilmington 10 leader Ben Chavis has been removed from the intensive care ward at the Central Prison hospital and is recovering from surgery for appendicitis.

Meanwhile, about a dozen supporters of Chavis and the Wilmington 10 held a demonstration in front of the state Capitol Friday to protest the refusal by prison authorities to allow Chavis' personal physician to see him.

MacDonald Murder Trial Delayed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — New court action has delayed for several months the murder trial of former Green Beret Dr. Jeffrey R. MacDonald, who is accused of killing his wife and two daughters at Fort Bragg in 1970.

The trial will be delayed by the action of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which agreed June 19 to hear a motion by MacDonald's attorney challenging the murder indictment on the grounds that the matter had already been through court. Under a schedule fixed by the court for filing papers, the appeals court cannot hear the case before September.

Dr. English Jones Retiring

PEMBROKE — Dr. English Jones, chief executive of Pembroke State University for the past 16 years, announced Friday at the close of a meeting of the PSU Board of Trustees that he will retire June 30, 1979.

Jones, 56, the first Indian to serve as head of the university, was president and ater chancellor of the school. He has been a state employee for 30 years.

To Go Back To Work Monday

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The city of Asheville's 200 striking workers will return to work Monday to collect garbage, repair water leaks and fill potholes in city streets.

But many workers said they weren't happy with the agreement, which gave them no more money than before the walkout.

In Selling Hamburgers, A Flop

SAN DIEGO (AP) - Philippe Junot, the Paris socialite who won the heart and hand of Monaco's Princess Caroline, ran up a $500 phone bill at the California fast-food restaurant where he once worked and was a flop at selling hamburgers, a former Jack-in-the-Box restaurant executive says.

Junot, 38, who married the 21-year-old princess Thursday in Monte Carlo, once held a job in the San Diego suburb of Lemon Grove with the drive-in hamburger chain.

Junot "just didn't work out," said Al Johnson, a former vice president of Foodmaker Corp., which owned the Jack-in-the-Box chain at the time.

The firm's founder, Robert Peterson, "knew Philippe's family in Paris," Johnson said Friday. "Philippe's father was a prefect or some sort in Paris at the time." Today the elder Junot is deputy mayor of Paris.

"We were considering going to Europe with our operation about 1965," Johnson said in a telephone interview from his home in Colorado, "and we felt we needed to get some Europeans involved. We wanted three or four bright Europeans to come here to learn the business. Philippe turned out to be one of them."

But after three or four months as a management trainee working as a counterman at the Lemon Grove restaurant and as a waiter at a Shelter Island, Calif., restaurant owned by the chain, Junot was jobless.

"He just came here to have a good time," said Johnson. "He had never worked a day in his life.

"Then one day I discovered he'd been calling his girlfriend in Paris. The bill was up between $500 and $700.

Seeks To Increase N.C. Insurance Rates

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) -- Under schedules filed with the state Insurance Department Friday by the insurance industry, insurance rates for private passenger automobiles would rise an average of 5.6 percent and homeowners' insurance rates would go up an average of 9.1 percent next December 1.

Deputy Insurance Commissioner Byron Tatum said the department had not had time to study the requests but that the auto rate boost alone would cost North Carolina motorists $23 million — $16 million for liability insurance and $7 million for collision and comprehensive auto insurance.

Tatum said including a $23 million boost in auto insurance rates the industry put into effect last year the industry has request a $46 million increase in nine months.

"Rates for the basic auto liability coverage required by law would increase approximately $4 a year for most policy holders," said Paul L. Mize, general manager of the North Carolina Rate Bureau, which filed the rate increases.

He said the costs of medical care, auto repair and other items for which insurance pays have been rising at about twice the pace of insurance rates in North Carolina.

The proposed rate increases are subject to the approval of Insurance Commissioner John Ingram. However, under a law enacted by the 1977 General Assembly, the insurance industry can place the new rates into effect pending appeal if Ingram disapproves. If the courts should rule an increase is not justified, the insurance companies would have to refund any amount determined to be improper to the policyholder with interest.

The Issuance Department has 90 days to review the filings, hold a hearing and issue an order.

N.C. 11 Access OK'd

WINTERVILLE — The North Carolina Department of Transportation has reversed an earlier ruling and has allowed an access road on N.C. 11 at the Waller Tractor Co.

The access was authorized May 12 after several requests for access over the past three years have been denied.

Highway engineers had recommended the access not be granted, and Secretary of Transportation Thomas Bradshaw, shortly after the access was first requested, said its construction would, "violate sound highway design principals."

In reversing the earlier decisions, Bradshaw said his mind was changed after a 1969 court judgement was brought to his attention. That judgment exempted a property owner across the controlled access four-lane roadway from the access restriction provisions.

"It was a single business, not a shopping center or something that would generate a large amount of traffic," the official noted.

Farm Strike Leader Is Planting - Ideas, That Is

By DEBORAH FRAZIER

CAMPO, Colo. (UPI) — Ideas, not wheat, will be Eugene Schroder's 1978 crop.

A third-generation farmer, Schroder grew angry last August after pencil and paper figuring showed the wheat he spent $5 per bushel planting, growing and harvesting would bring about $2.40 at the market.

Over coffee, Schroder ranted about the deficit. He was talking with his brother, his father and his grandfather. At first, it was just as farmers have complained for generations — about prices, about the weather, and, of course, the government.

But Schroder's vexation went further. It spawned the American Agriculture strike movement, born with a cry for 100 percent parity, or a break-even price for crops with a cost-of-living factor figured in.

"It was crazy at first, but we talked to other farmers and it made more and more sense," said Schroder. "The word strike was real hard to swallow. But the prices we were getting were harder."

The maverick movement, lacking formal leaders and membership rolls, gained momentum through the fall and culminated in a strike called on Dec. 15. But subsequent lobbying in Washington D.C. failed to gain a parity-pledging law in time for spring planting.

As Schroder pilots his truck over the rutted road that subdivides his family's 8,000-acre farm, he explains the movement's revised goal of cutting production by 50 percent in 1978 to goad prices up.

He smiles as the vehicle bounds past a tractor plowing up a field of sprouting wheat, one way farmers have complied with American Agriculture's cutback plan. A few miles down the road, he gestures at examples of "poor boy farming."

"Sure, a lot of farmers are planting fence post to fence post as always. But that's just to qualify for the federal programs. They aren't fertilizing or waiting until the ground is warm or killing weeds. That's poor boying.

"If we can cut production by even 30 percent, the market will react. And we can do that with a little help from mother nature," he said, nodding out the window to a furrowed expanse, cracked by drought.

Education, not government loans and subsidies, is the solution to the farmer's problems, Schroder said. So, each day he, his wife and his father spend up to 10 hours each at the farm strike office in Springfield, Colo., educating.

Schroder said he wasn't any smarter than the average farmer when he started "figuring," but he knew the prices of pickups, gold and other products had risen during the past 50 years while wheat prices remained about the same.

Back in the kitchen of his house, Schroder explained his belief that the blame rests with the Chicago Board of Trade which he claims controls the wheat prices. He said the board has artificially depressed the market by trading more wheat than exists.

"They traded 13 billion bushels last year. We produced 2 billion. They claim there is a surplus. Our surplus was about wiped out in the Russian grain sale," said Schroder, sipping coffee at the family table.

As wheat prices provided by the board are read over the local radio station, the Schroder clan quiets. Leonard Schroder, Eugene's father, points out that half the prices quoted are for crops that are not harvested.

"How do they know how much wheat there will be? They don't know. We don't even know. Other producers, like Detroit, set their own prices. Why not farmers?" said the elder Schroder.

To gain control of the price-setting process, Schroder said farmers must cut back on production. He rejects government loans and subsidies as bandage measures that leave scars in the form of debts for the farmer and the nation.

Sitting under a calendar captioned "Don't cuss the farmer with your mouth full," Schroder quotes William Jennings Bryan:

"Burn down your cities and leave our farms, and your cities will spring up again as if by magic, but destroy our farms and the grass will grow in the streets of every city in the country."

The roots and trunk of American Agriculture are in Colorado and western states where rainfall is scarce, irrigation is expensive and ground water supplies are diminishing yearly.

Some critics say farmers who can't make ends meet shouldn't be farming. But coaxing crops from sandy soil is a way of life and the juxtaposition of wheat fields to range land testifies to the farmers' alchemy.

But Schroder said that even farmers in regions where the land is fertile and the rain plentiful have trouble because the current $2.40-$2.60 a bushel for wheat doesn't cover inflated equipment prices.

So Schroder, 31, a veterinarian who rarely practices, isn't planting wheat this year. He said he hasn't had to pay taxes in years, thanks to deductions granted for crop prices, and may end up making money.

"I've bought my half-crop from the Chicago Board of Trade. If the value goes up, I'll make a profit. If it doesn't, I won't be out a cent. It could be the best year I've had and I won't have lifted a finger," he said.

Since farmers are notoriously closed-mouthed about crops and acreage, it's hard to determine how much company Schroder has.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has one set of estimates, gathered by survey, showing the 1978 crop will be down 14 percent. Schroder has another set of estimates, gathered by grapevine, showing the harvest will be considerably less.

No one will produce a bumper crop, some farmers are "piddling" along and a good number are adhering to the 50 percent goal, he said.

"We have planted a concept. We have told the American farmer the truth and it is starting to grow. Give it time and at some point it will mature. It don't like this, but I am going to fight. And if it doesn't work, at least I know I went fighting."

Analysis Of EEG At Long Distance

GAMBIER, Ohio (AP) — E. A. Daneman is a neurologist, physician, psychiatrist, psychotherapist, scientist, inventor, businessman, lecturer and philanthropist, who works at home.

Hospitals across the country, from Florida to Oregon, telephone patient brain waves — readings from electroencephalographs — to his home for deciphering.

The measurements, called EEGs, are used to determine such disorders as epilepsy, brain tumors, brain hemorrhages, clots and mental illness. Daneman said 51 hospitals around the nation sent him EEG readings for analysis. He said he usually offered a diagnosis within an hour.

Daneman is co-inventor of portable transmitting equipment used to send EEG readings via telephone to decoding equipment in his home. Assistants monitor the telephones and assist with the work.

Each of the 51 hospitals has a portable transmitter, which weighs 14 pounds. It can be packed in a suitcase and taken to accident scenes.

Up to 100 transmissions — wavy lines on graph paper — are received daily by Daneman's staff.

The physician says 85 percent of the EEGs are normal, but when a disorder does appear the diagnosis he sends back includes a precise description of the problem and a prescription for treatment.

Daneman began specializing in EEGs at a Georgia hospital 22 years ago. He moved to Gambier in 1974 into a house he had admired while he was a freshman at Kenyon College.

The doctor graduated from Kenyon in 1947 after an unorthodox college life. He entered Kenyon in 1941, listing English as his major. After two years he transferred to the University of Cincinnati College of Medicine and earned his medical degree. He then returned to Kenyon to complete work on his bachelor of arts degree.

Friends and fellow citizens consider him a free spirit. He brews his own beer while not reading brain waves or Freud theories and has been known to pull a few practical jokes around town.

A sign in his front yard lists, among other credentials, tarot readings and voodoo lessons.

Borg, Connors Battle To Victories

By GEOFFREY MILLER
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Bjorn Borg and Jimmy Connors, top seeds in the Wimbledon Tennis Chamionships, had to fight long and hard Saturday before getting through to the last 16.

Borg, the defending champion, overcame Jaime Fillol of Chile 6-4, 6-2, 6-8, 6-4 and confessed he is not playing as well as last year.

"I want so badly to win this title three times in a row, and I am thinking about it on the important points," the Swedish star said.

Connors was on court for nearly 3 hours before wearing down 32-year-old Tom Gorman 6-4, 8-6, 8-9, 6-3.

Eight American men will line up in the last 16. Because bad weather this week has put the tournament behind schedule, they will have to play singles matches Monday and Tuesday in their bid for the first prize of $34,000.

Around 30,000 people milled around in the grounds of the All-England club and many struggled in vain to get a glimpse of the stars on the outer courts.

Connors and Chris Evert, top favorite for the women's title, both had to push their way through dense crowds to play on these courts. Evert dropped a set before defeating Laura Dupont of the United States 6-1, 4-6, 6-0 and admitted that playing away from the center court upsets her.

"I never concentrate so well on those outside courts," she said. "I keep looking across at the big scoreboard and seeing how the others are doing."

Gorman served well against Connors, and the left-hander had problems on a damp, uneven grass court. Gorman led 3-1 in the second set, but could not hold on. Both Americans broke service twice in the seesawing third set, and Gorman had a set point at 7-6 before going on to win the tiebreaker.

Besides Connors, five other Americans won third-round matches Saturday. Two others — Tom Leonard and Vitas Gerulaitis — advanced Friday.

Roscoe Tanner's cannonball service took him past Fred McNair of the United States 6-4, 6-2, 6-2.

Sandy Mayer outlasted 36-year-old American Marty Riessen, who is competing in his 15th Wimbledon, 8-6, 7-5, 6-3.

Brian Gottfried was kept at full stretch for two sets but then pulled away to eliminate Allan Stone of Australia 6-8, 9-7, 6-2, 6-1.

Tim Gullikson, the right-hander of the Dayton, Ohio, twins, whipped fellow-American Billy Martin 6-3, 9-7, 7-5.

Californian Hank Pfister needed nearly 3 hours to crack Nick Saviano, officially No. 51 in the United States, 9-7, 8-9, 6-2, 6-2.

Ilie Nastase put out the other Gullikson twin, left-handed Tom, 6-4, 6-3, 1-6, 6-3 but had a hard time doing it. The Romanian entertained the center court crowd by clowning and arguing with the umpire occasionally, but he won the match by sheer artistry.

Two Australians eliminated two South Africans. Geoff Masters downed the white-capped Frew McMillan 6-3, 7-5, 6-3. John Alexander won the first set 8-6 against Bob Hewitt, who then limped off with an ankle injury.

Borg vs. Masters; Wojtek Fibak, Poland, vs. Mayer; Tom Okker, the Netherlands, vs. Leonard; Nastase vs. Tanner; Gottfried vs. Gullikson; Pfister vs. Gerulaitis; Raul Ramirez, Mexico, vs. John Newcombe, Australia; Alexander vs. Connors.

In other action Saturday, Tracy Austin, 15-year-old prodigy from Rolling Hills, Calif., downed American Barbara Hallquist 6-3, 6-3 and reached the last 16 of the women's singles.

America's other high school starlet, Pam Shriver of Lutherville, Md., almost sprang the sensation of the day against British Wightman Cup star Sue Barker on the center court.

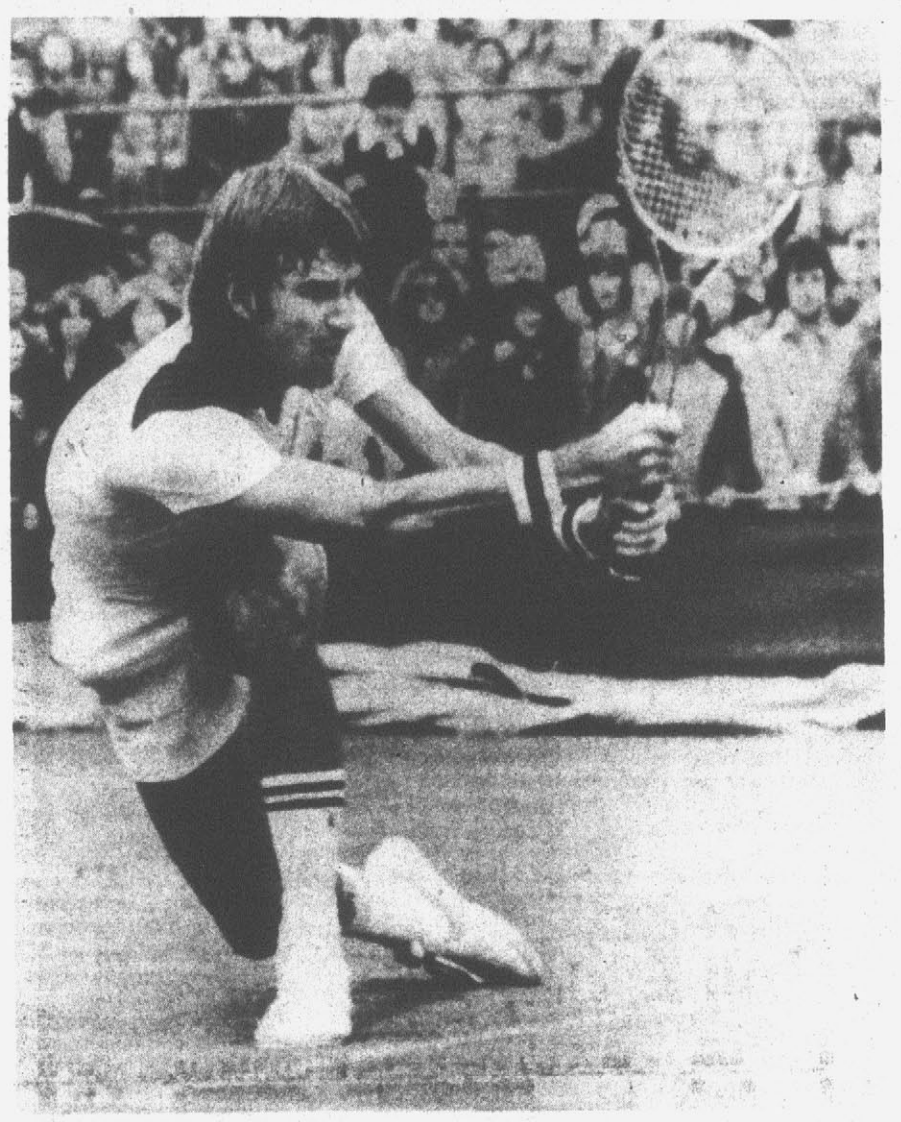

Pam had three match points in the second set and led 3-0 in the third before bowing to greater experience. Barker won 6-2, 6-8, 7-5.

Virginia Wade, defending champion, had her British fans on tenterhooks before edging past Yvonne Vermaak of South Africa 6-4, 4-6, 7-5.

Billie Jean King, a six-time Wimbledon singles champion, trailing by one set and 0-3, came back in true professional style and defeated Renata Tomanova of Czechoslovakia 4-6, 6-3, 6-3.

Martina Navratilova, the exiled Czech, also came from behind to eliminate American Barbara Jordan 3-6, 6-1, 6-4. Evonne Goolagong of Australia, seeded third behind Evert and Navratilova, beat Janet Newberry of the United States 6-4, 6-3.

One seed in the women's singles bowed out. Ruta Gerulaitis, 22-year-old sister of Vitas, thrashed Marita Redondo 6-0, 6-2. Redondo was made No. 16 seed when Rosie Casals pulled out of the tournament with an ankle injury.

Jimmy Connors backhands a shot during long match.

Blue Jays Clip Indians, 9-3

TORONTO (AP) — Designated hitter Rico Carty drove in four runs Saturday to lead the Toronto Blue Jays to a 9-3 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Tom Underwood, 5-7, got the victory with relief help in the eighth inning from Victor Cruz. The loss went to Don Hood, 4-4, who left the game in the third inning after allowing five hits and four runs.

The Blue Jays went ahead 3-0 in the first. Rick Bosetti and Bob Bailor hit infield singles, Roy Howell walked and Carty hit a sacrifice fly to score Bosetti. Otto Velez followed with a double down the left field line, scoring Bailor and Howell.

Toronto added a run in the third inning when Howell walked, moved all the way to third on a wild pitch by Hood and scored on another sacrifice fly by Carty.

The Indians, trailing 4-1, chased Underwood in the eighth when Rick Manning and Andre Thornton singled. Cruz came in and walked designated hitter Gary Alexander, struck out pinch-hitter John Grubb, then walked Bernie Carbo, forcing in one run. Larvell Blanks followed with a sacrifice fly to make it 4-3.

But Cleveland broke the game open with five runs in the bottom of the eighth, Carty driving home two with a single.

Burns Has LPGA Lead

By HANK LOWENKRON
Associated Press Writer

NOBLESVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Sandra Burns, who has never led an LPGA event since joining the tour in 1975, took the first round lead of a $75,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament with a 3-under-par 69 Saturday.

Burns, who missed the cut nine times this year, and has failed to finish any higher than a tie for 33rd in 1978, had to survive nearly 4½ hours of rain delays to claim the lead.

The 69 by Burns gave her a 1-stroke lead over Laura Baugh, still struggling to score her first victory on the tour since joining it in 1973, and Joyce Kazmierski.

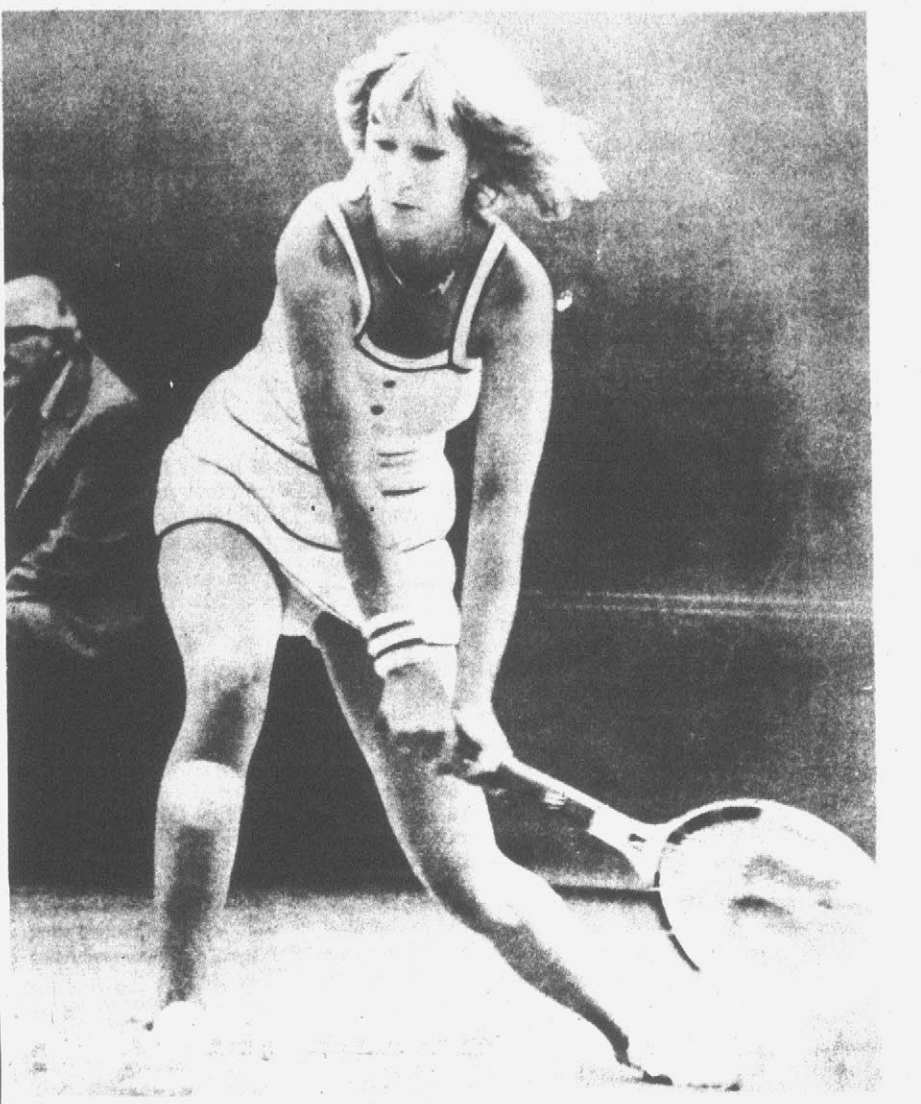

Marlene Floyd was next at 72 and Jennie Lee Smith of London was tied with veteran Sandra Palmer at 73.

Most of the tour's big names were still out on the course due to the rain delay. Nancy Lopez, the 21-year-old rookie sensation, was 2-over-par after nine holes.

The 27-year-old leader from Pittsburgh had four birdies on her front nine and was 5-under after 15 holes.

She had missed a 12-foot putt for a birdie on No. 15, a 452-yard, par 5.

Rogers Takes 2-Shot Lead In Western Open

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Bill Rogers, the third-round leader in the Western Open golf tournament, finished an otherwise good round with a bogey on the 18th hole Saturday. But he was talking almost as if he had wound up with a hole-in-one.

"I was glad to make 5 on 18 ... I really hit a terrible tee shot there and really could have spoiled a good round," he said after shooting a three-under-par 69 for a six-under 210 total. "I could have made 6, 7, 8, anything. I made 5."

That gave Rogers a two-stroke lead over Mac McLendon and Hale Irwin in the chase for the $45,000 top prize from the $225,000 purse.

Rogers, who had missed the cut in five of his past eight tournaments including last week's Canadian Open, shot a 33 on the back nine. His tee shot on the last hole went into a hazard but was a few feet out of the water.

His backswing was restricted as he chopped the ball into the fairway, leaving his ball 210 yards from the hole. He hit a two-iron within 40 feet of the pin and two-putted.

"It's the end of the round but it's a turning point," said Rogers. "Some of the putts went in today and I continued to hit the ball well."

McLendon, winner of the Florida Citrus Open earlier this year, shot a 68 for a four-under-par 212 total. Irwin, the 1975 Western winner, shot a 71 Saturday and said, "I've been playing well and hopefully we'll have the tee markers back tomorrow when the course will favor long hitters."

He stopped shot of putting himself and Rogers in that class but said, "I'm longer than he is and that's the guy I'm trying to catch."

For the second straight day, rain soaked the par-72, 7,083-yard Butler National course, causing a 15-minute delay in the start of the third round and a 20-minute suspension of play late in the morning. Three rain delays totaling 2 hours, 54 minutes marred Friday's round.

Defending champion Tom Watson, tied for the second-round lead with Forrest Fezler at four-under-par, shot a 74 and was four strokes back at 214. Fezler came in with a 78 and was eight back.

Watson, this 6ear's leading money winner on the tour and winner of three tournaments, experienced his usual third-round woes at Butler. When he won the Western in 1974 and 1977, he suffered through 75s in both third rounds before rebounding with 69s on the final days.

Watson took sole possession of the lead when he went five-under-par with a birdie at the fourth hole. But he had three bogeys, the last on the par-4 10th.

Friday, he birdied the first three holes on the back nine.

At 215 were Rex Caldwell, Bill Calfee, Bob Byman, Tom Kite, Charles Coody and Allen Miller.

First-round leader Cesar Sanudo shot a 74 and was at 217.

Rogers, who notched his first tour victory last February in the Bob Hope Desert Classic, birdied the par 3 eighth hole to tie McLendon, Watson and Irwin for the lead at four-under-par.

But he bogeyed the par 5 ninth hole before making a birdie at 11 and tying for the lead again with McLendon at four-under. Then, on the 12th hole, a 483-yarder, Rogers made an eagle to take command. He took a three-stroke lead at seven-under when he birdied the par-4 16th, but then bogeyed the last hole.

Phillies Nip Cubs, 2-1

By JOE MOOSHIL

CHICAGO (AP) — Bob Boone's homer and Ted Sizemore's run-scoring single provided the offense and Randy Lerch and Ron Reed took care of the pitching Saturday as the Philadelphia Phillies scored a 2-1 victory over the Chicago Cubs and took a four-game lead in the National League East.

"I don't know how long it has been since I won, but it was a long time in coming," said Lerch, who broke a personal five-game losing streak in posting his first pitching triumph in two months and raising his record to 4-6.

Reed fired three innings of perfect relief in which he struck out five of the nine men he faced to earn his fifth save.

Reed, angered when Manager Danny Ozark yanked him for a pinch-hitter Thursday with a three-run lead and two innings to go, admitted he took that "as a slap in the face. Later I thought 'Is he trying to tell me I can't hold a three-run lead with two innings to go?'"

Ozark laughed when told of Reed's remarks. "That's why he's pitching and why I'm managing," said Ozark. "Sometimes you do certain things for a psychological effect.

"Having a lead means nothing. I was looking for more intensity from Mr. Reed and I'm trying to get the best out of him. I think we got it all out of him today."

The Phillies scored an unearned run in the second when Richie Hebner singled, went to second on an error and scored on Sizemore's looping single to left.

Boone clubbed his seventh homer of the season to lead off the fifth inning off loser Dennis Lamp, 2-10.

Lerch didn't allow a hit until Larry Biittner singled with one out in the fifth. Larry Cox doubled Biittner to third but Lerch fanned Lamp to end the inning.

The Cubs got to Lerch for a run in the sixth on two-out singles by Bobby Murcer, Manny Trillo and Mike Vail.

The Phillies threatened in the first inning when Bake McBride singled and went to second on a wild pitch by Lamp. But Garry Maddox flied out and Greg Luzinski bounced out.

After giving up the unearned run in the second, Lamp held the Phillies hitless until Boone homered in the fifth. Two outs later, McBride doubled but Larry Bowa bounced out to end the inning.

Luzinski walked in the sixth but was thrown out attempting to steal. In the seventh, Boone singled with one out and was bunted to second but pinch-batter Tim McCarver bounced out.

With two out in the eighth, Maddox singled to left but was thrown out trying to stretch it into a double.

Chicago's only baserunner in the first four innings was Murcer, who drew a walk with two out in the first but was left stranded.

Montreal Edges Past Cardinals

MONTREAL (AP) — Del Unser homered off reliever Mark Littell in the ninth inning to give the Montreal Expos a 3-2 triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals Saturday.

Steve Rogers, 10-7, went all the way for the victory, allowing seven hits, walking one and striking out four. It was his sixth complete game triumph in a row.

The homer by Unser, his second of the season, came on a 1-1 pitch from Littell. Unser had replaced Tony Perez at first base in the top of the eighth for defensive purposes.

Montreal opened the scoring in the third. Gary Carter was hit by a pitch by John Denny, moved to second on a single by Chris Speier, took third on a sacrifice bunt by Rogers and scored on Warren Cromartie's sacrifice fly.

The Cards tied the game in the fourth when Jerry Mumphrey singled, moved to third on a throwing error by Rogers and scored on an infield single by Garry Templeton.

Andre Dawson's 11th home run of the season gave Montreal a 2-1 lead, but the Cards tied the game as Mumphrey led off the ninth with a single and scored on a two-out triple off the right-field wall by Keith Hernandez.

NEW YORK (AP) — Rusty Staub had four hits and drove in three runs and Lou Whitaker drove in three more Saturday as the Detroit Tigers pounced on ineffective New York pitching and trounced the Yankees 8-4.

Staub had RBI doubles in the second and third innings, a single to center in the sixth and a run-scoring single in Detroit's two-run seventh as the Tigers staked Jack Billingham, 6-5, to an 8-0 lead.

Whitaker delivered a second-inning run with a single to center and drove in two more with a single to right in the third. Detroit scored six runs in the first three innings with the help of eight walks from New York hurlers Andy Messersmith, 0-3, and Ken Clay.

Messersmith, still coming back from a spring training shoulder separation, was asked by the Yankees to spend some time in the minors early in June but denied the team's request. His performence Saturday left him winless since June 25, 1977, when he defeated the San Diego Padres while pitching for the Atlanta Braves.

New York got a run in the seventh on singles by Gary Thomasson and Fred Stanley, a walk to Damasso Garcia and a sacrifice fly to deep center field by Jay Johnstone.

Thomasson belted a three-run homer in the eighth for New York's other runs.

Doby's Debut Spoiled, 10-0

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Dave Goltz fired a six-hitter and Hosken Powell doubled twice and scored four times as Minnesota spoiled the managerial debut of Chicago's Larry Doby by beating the White Sox 10-0 Saturday.

Goltz, 6-5, was in command all the way, striking out seven and walking three in pitching his fourth complete game of the year.

The Twins took a 1-0 lead in the first when Powell led off with a double, took third on Chet Lemon's error and scored on a grounder by Rod Carew.

The Twins knocked out White Sox starter Francisco Barrios in the third when they scored three runs on four walks and two hits.

Reds, Dodgers Heating Up As Los Angeles Sweeps Doubleheader

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

One of baseball's hottest rivalries — the Dodgers vs. the Reds — is getting a little hotter, and Pete Rose is occupying his accustomed role as firebrand.

With a doubleheader sweep of the Reds Thursday night, 5-3 and 5-2, the Dodgers picked up two full games on the National League West-leading San Francisco Giants, who lost a pair to Atlanta.

Los Angeles is now three games behind San Francisco, moving into second past the Reds, who are 3½ games out.

Things started to heat up in Cincinnati when a fan behind the Reds dugout began hollering at Reds second baseman Joe Morgan after he popped out for the third time in the second game, and really flared up when Rose grounded out in the sixth inning.

Rose hollered something at Dodgers pitcher Bob Welch after the out, and when he took his position at third base in the seventh, he began to exchange heated words with Rick Monday on the LA bench. Rose charged the Dodgers dugout and had to be restrained by the third base umpire and Los Angeles Coach Preston Gomez.

In other NL contests, Atlanta swept San Francisco 10-9 and

NL Roundup

10-5; Chicago split a pair with Philadelphia, winning the opener 2-0 and losing the nightcap 6-5; St. Louis edged Montreal 2-1 in 10 innings; the Mets nipped Pittsburgh 6-5, and San Diego defeated Houston 5-2.

Braves 10-10, Giants 9-5

The Giants got a total of six home runs — five in the first game and one in the nightcap — but also got some shaky pitching by starters John Montefusco and Ed Halicki.

Montefusco gave up six runs on 10 hits in six innings in the opener, and Halicki was victimized for seven runs on five hits in three-plus innings in the second game. Jeff Burroughs and Darrel Chaney homered for Atlanta in the first game, and Biff Pocoroba and Dale Murphy hit home runs in the second.

Cubs 2-5, Phils 0-6

Chicago right-hander Mike Krukow, making his first start of the season, tossed a three-hitter and Dave Kingman smacked a two-run homer, his 16th of the season, in the opener.

Philadelphia earned a split in the nightcap with three runs in the top of the ninth.

Cards 2, Expos 1

Bob Forsch, 9-6, scattered six hits before leaving in the 10th, and Mike Tyson's run-scoring double gave St. Louis its victory. Montreal left-hander Ross Grimsley, 11-5, had a no-hitter going through 61-3 innings before Ted Simmons doubled.

Mets 6, Pirates 5

Trailing 3-2, New York rallied for four runs in the ninth inning then withstood a two-run Pittsburgh rally. The Mets' ninth-inning RBI hits were Ed Kranepool's single, Len Randle's double and singles by Joel Youngblood and Steve Henderson.

Padres 5, Astros 2

Ozzie Smith had four hits and scored three times as San Diego notched its sixth straight victory this season over Houston.

Dietzel Will Decide Tuesday

By DAN EVEN
Associated Press Writer

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Louisiana State University will have to wait three more days before it learns if its prodigal son — Paul Dietzel — will return as athletic director.

Decision day will be Tuesday.

"If I indicated what I'm going to do now, that would be a slap in the face of a very fine man, and I just can't do that," Dietzel said Friday after he was formally offered the job at LSU, a school he led its greatest football fame in the 1950s and 1960s.

The next move aparently is up to the Indiana University, where Dietzel has been athletic director the last 15 months.

"Everybody will know some time July 4th" he said. "I'll make my decision then."

Dietzel has said — and repeated in a statement Friday — he won't announce his decision until he meets with John Ryan, the president of the University of Indiana.

Most observers here think that is a formality, and that Dietzel will be the new athletic director when Carl Maddox retires Feb. 28.

As expected, the LSU Board of Supervisors voted 14-0 to offer the job to its most famed — and controversial — football coach.

The vote came after Dietzel met with the board for an hour and 45 minutes behind closed doors.

A special selection committee announced Monday Dietzel was its choice. He was one of eight candidates, and the only one not formally interviewed.

In a one-page statement, Dietzel said he was "very flattered by the attitude and the offer" presented by LSU board. He said there was a "candid exchange of ideas" during his meeting.

Salary and length of contract were discussed, but he said they wouldn't be factors in his decision.

"The remaining pertinent question at this point can only be answered after I have honored my promise to Indiana University President John Ryan: 'To confer with him before announcing my decision.' And that cannot be done until he returns to Indiana on July 4," the statement said.

"Until that time I will be unable to make any further statement."

Ryan is in Poland and won't return until Tuesday.

"It's hard to get a telephone number in Warsaw, Poland," Dietzel said.

"It's really a silly situation for me," Dietzel told the press, saying he couldn't say even if he was leaning toward taking the job. "You know me, I've never been one to be tongue-tied.

Should Dietzel take the job, he would be returning to the school he once said he'd never leave — but did, leaving behind bitterness among diehard Tiger fans.

And 16 years hasn't erased all of it.

Legion Rolls, 11-2

By WOODY PEELE

Pitt County's American Legion baseball team bounced back from three straight defeats to open the Area I Eastern playoffs with an 11-2 victory over Washington Friday night.

Paced by the hitting of Nuggie Worthington, Ronnie Chapman and Mike Shank, the Pitt team banged out 13 hits on the way to the victory.

There was only one sour note in the game. That came when starting pitcher Billy Mitchell was hit in the left ankle by a hard line drive and was forced to leave the game. A checkup at Pitt Memorial Hospital revealed no damage, and it was hoped that Mitchell would be ready to go should Pitt advance in the playoffs beyond this best-of-three game series.

With a one game advantage, Pitt need only win one game to gain a second round berth. The two teams were to meet Saturday night in Washington for the second contest. A Washington win would force a third game, that to be played today at 3 p.m. at Harrington Field.

Mitchell, who went six and a third innings before being forced to leave, gave up both of the runs, but had a no-hitter going until one was out in the fifth inning. The first run off him was unearned.

"I think we played a very good game," Coach Ed Hooks said later. "We hit the ball well, and made a good comeback from the three losses at the end of the regular season. I'm quite pleased to get the win."

Washington drew first blood in the game, pushing over an unearned run in the first inning. With two away, Pete Lee drew the only walk of the night by either pitcher. Drew Roberson followed with an easy grounder back to third, but the ball was thrown away at first, and Lee came all the way from first to score, with Roberson ending up on third.

Washington didn't get another baserunner until the fifth inning, and scored only once more, in the sixth.

That came when Octavus Wallace led off with an infield hit and moved to third on two ground outs. He scored when Roberson singled to right.

The Washington club had one more threat, in the seventh when Mitchell was injured. Lawrence Tolston reached on an error and with one away, Larry Woolard reached when his liner struck Mitchell. Relief pitcher Peter Pace advanced both runners a base on a wild pitch, but a strikeout and a bouncer back to the mound ended the threat.

Meanwhile, Pitt County jumped on Washington for three runs in the bottom of the first, taking full advantage of every mistake the eight-seeded team made.

With one out, Chapman bunted his way aboard, and Shank followed with a sharp hit to right. The ball was bobbled there, and both runners moved up a base. Kevin Adams struck out, but the catcher was unable to hold the ball, and had to throw down to first to get Adams out. Chapman came home and Shank took third on the throw. Greg Lee followed with a single to right, scoring Shank. A pickoff attempt let Lee move to third when it was errored, and a wild pitch scored him.

Three move came over in the third. Nuggie Worthington tripled to open the inning, scoring on a Chapman single. Shank got a hit and both were sacrificed up. Will Sanderson banged a hit into center, scoring both Chapman and Shank.

Pitt added one in the fifth. Shank got his third hit of the night and scored when Lee reached on an error.

The final four came over in the eighth. With one down, Pace reached on a hit to deep short. Then, after Jeff Aldridge flew out to right, where Pete Lee made an outstanding running catch, the fielder tried to pick Pace off first, but threw the ball into the Washington dugout. That moved Pace to third. Skip Topping reached on another error with Pace scoring.

Worthington got his third hit, a single to left, and an error on the play let him go on to third, as Topping came around to score.

Chapman then ended the scoring with his third hit, a home run down the right field line that just cleared the fence.

The winner of this best-of-three series will advance into the Area I Eastern semifinals, facing the winner of the Edenton-Williamston series in another best-of-three starting Thursday.

Williamston Rallies, 4-1

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston's American Legion baseball team pushed over three runs in the eighth inning to claim a 4-1 victory over Edenton in the first round of the Area I Eastern League playoffs Friday night.

The win gave Williamston a 1-0 lead in the best-of-three series that serves as the league quarterfinals.

Russell Holton went all the way on the mound for Williamston, hurling a four-hitter.

Williamston scored first, getting a run in the fifth inning. Hank Edwards was hit by a pitch, scoring when Anthony Latham doubled.

In the sixth, Edenton came back to push over its only run of the evening, Woody McDaniels walked, and moved up on a passed ball. He scored on an error when Williamston's catcher tried to pick him off.

Then, in the eighth, Williamston came back with three runs to take the win. Charlie Smith opened up with a double and Jack Curlings singled to score him. Curlings moved up on a steal, scoring when Russell Holton's fly ball to the outfield was dropped. Edwards then singled to bring in Holton.

Edenton's hitting was led by Hal Abbott with two, while Edwards, Latham and Curlings each had two. One of Curlings' hits was a triple.

The two were to resume their series Saturday night in Edenton, returning to Williamston for a 1 p.m. game today, if it was necessary.

The winner of the series will meet the winner of the Pitt County-Washington series in the second round, slated to start on Thursday.

Snow Hill In 6-0 Victory

SNOW HILL — Snow Hill gained the first blood in the best-of-three first round American Legion playoff against Goldsboro Friday night, taking a 6-0 victory.

The series was to move to Goldsboro for a game Saturday night, and will return to Snow Hill today if necessary.

The winner of the series will meet the Rocky MountWilson winner in a second best-of-three series staring Thursday.

Bill Wilder tossed a two-hitter in the shutout win, striking out 15 and walking just one. He allowed a hit in the first and one more in the second before retiring 18 straight. He hit one batter in the eighth and walked one in the ninth.

Snow Hill picked up its first two runs in the sixth. Russell Brann singled and Philip Gordon cracked a two-run homer.

The other four came in the seventh. Mike Chase walked and Jay Carraway singled. Gordon doubled in Chase, and Al Murray singled to score Carraway. Collyn Beaman singled in both Gordon and Murray.

Carraway, Gordon, Murrah and Beaman each had two hits for Snow Hill.

Gilliam Indicted

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — On the eve of his re-emergence as a professional football player, a county grand jury has indicted former Pittsburgh Steeler quarterback Joe Gilliam on a charge of possession of heroin.

The Davidson County grand jury charged Gilliam had possession of a foil packet of heroin when he was searched by police Dec. 18, 1976.

Only last week, the former Tennessee State football star received a suspended 45-day sentence for possession of marijuana.

He had also been placed on probation for two years.

Gilliam, who has joined a semi-professional football team in Pittsburgh called the Wolf Pak, was unavailable for comment.

McCovey Joins Elite Group With 500th HR

By ED SHEARER

ATLANTA (AP) — Willie McCovey joined an elite corps when he smashed the 500th home run of his career, but expressed only a feeling of relief, not elation, over the feat.

"I'm glad it's over," the 40-year-old San Francisco Giants' slugger said Friday night after becoming baseball's 12th player to reach the 500 homer plateau when he connected on an 0-2 slider from Atlanta's Jamie Easterly in the second inning of the opener of a twi-night doubleheader.

"It was more of a relief than a thrill to get it over with," McCovey said in a soft voice that showed no emotion.

"I was kind of anxious to get it behind me so we can concentrate on a more important thing — the pennant race," he added.

The Giants took a blow in that regard Friday night as the Braves swept the doubleheader 10-9 and 10-5, overcoming a 6-1 deficit in the opener.

McCovey's seventh homer of the year was an opposite field shot for the left-handed hitter, a 350-foot blow over the left field fence.

"I wasn't sure until it went out," he said. "I knew I hit it pretty good but the fact I hit it to the opposite direction, I just wasn't sure."

His Giant teammates poured out of the dugout to greet him at the plate, but there was only a brief ovation from an Atlanta crowd accustomed to milestone homers, having witnessed in previous years the 600th, 700th and record-setting 715th by the Braves' Hank Aaron.

Aaron is the game's all-time home run leader with 755. Others with 500 or more are Babe Ruth at 714, Willie Mays 660, Frank Robinson 586, Harmon Killebrew 573, Mickey Mantle 536, Jimmy Foxx 534, Ted Williams 521, Eddie Mathews and Ernie Banks 512 each and Mel Ott 511. Mays and Ott also played for the Giants.

Robinson was the last to reach the 500 mark, belting his on Sept. 13, 1971.

"It was a slider, high and away," said Easterly, a southpaw. "The 500th really didn't bother me. It didn't matter whether it was his first or his 341st or 500th."

McCovey's first major league homer came on Aug. 2, 1959 in the old Seals Stadium in San Francisco, a two-run fourth inning blast off Ron Kline of Pittsburgh.

Jackson? He's The One With The Hot Temper And Hot Bat

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

It's not hard finding Reggie Jackson these days — he's the one with the hot temper and the hot bat.

The demonstrative outfielder, "embarrased and humiliated" by criticism from New York Yankee owner George Steinbrenner earlier in the week, responded in typical dramatic fashion Friday night.

AL Roundup

He took out his anger and frustration on the Detroit Tigers, blasting a grand slam homer among three hits, and knocking in five runs to lead the Yankees to a 10-2 victory.

"If he doesn't think I can do the job, he should get somebody else," said Jackson of Steinbrenner. "What he said was as weak as a five-cent package of Kool-Aid in the ocean with two teaspoonfuls of sugar in it...and that's weak."

The seat of Jackson's vehemence stemmed from disparaging remarks made by Steinbrenner about the Yankee veterans after a doubleheader loss to the Milwaukee Brewers Wednesday night. Particularly, he was highly critical of Jackson for going hitless in seven at-bats.

In other American League action, the Baltimore Orioles edged the Boston Red Sox 3-2 in 11 innings; the Cleveland Indians blanked the Toronto Blue Jays 3-0; the Oakland A's turned back the Kansas City Royals 2-1; the California Angels defeated the Texas Rangers 4-2 and the Milwaukee Brewers blasted the Seattle Mariners 13-3. The Chicago-Minnesota game was postponed by rain.

Orioles 3, Red Sox 2

Pat Kelly's single sent home the winning run in the 11th inning as Baltimore beat Boston. The game featured 15 strikeouts of the Red Sox by Mike Flanagan and Don Stanhouse.

Rich Dauer, who was stranded after rapping a two-out double in the eighth, led off the Baltimore 11th with another double, only the sixth hit off Luis Tiant. Kelly followed with his game-winning single to right field.

Indians 3, Blue Jays 0

Horace Speed knocked in two runs with a single and triple to back the four-hit pitching of Rick Wise and lead Cleveland over Toronto.

A's 2, Royals 1

Mitchell Page hit his eighth home run of the season to break a tie in the seventh inning and give Oakland its victory over Kansas City. Page's homer came off losing pitcher Rick Gale, 7-3.

Angels 4, Rangers 2

Lyman Bostock singled home two runs, including the go-ahead tally, as California defeated Texas. Bostock singled home a run in the third inning to put the Angels in front 1-0, then drove home another in the seventh to give California a 2-1 lead.

They scored two more runs in the eighth inning in a rally keyed by Rick Miller's RBI single.

Old Timers Advance In Friday's Net Play

By WINSOR DOBBIN
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — With numerous young players emerging every year, no one is forgotten quite as quickly as yesterday's tennis idol.

With stars like Sweden's Bjorn Borg, 22, Jimmy Connors, 25, and Vitas Gerulaitis, 23, chasing the game's highest honors, there would seem little room at the top for the over-30s.

The 1978 Wimbledon tournament has proved there is.

Six players over the age of 32 had progressed Friday into the third round of the men's singles, and two 34-year-olds, John Newcombe of Australia and Tom Okker of The Netherlands, had reached the final 16.

Okker, who scored a surprising 6-3, 6-4, 6-2 victory over the No.4 seed, Guillermo Vilas of Argentina in the third round, said his rejuvenated form had much to do with the Wimbledon atmosphere.

"The center court atmosphere gives you a push," he said. "It brings back the desire to win.

"Ten or so years ago I went out with a desire to win every match. Now you win, or you lose."

Okker has not been seeded here in two years and never has won the title.

Wimbledon has had the happy knack this year of bringing the best out of a number of the game's elder statesmen.

Frew McMillan, the 36-year-old South African who has treated singles as an adjunct to his doubles career, beat No.12 Buster Mottram of Britain in straight sets.

His doubles partner, Hewitt, is still going strong at 38. The balding South African beaten George Hardie of the United States and Rhodesian Colin Dowdeswell in early rounds.

American Marty Riessen, 37, also proved the value of experience by beating two younger Americans, Mike Fishbach and Van Winitsky, in his opening matches.

Fillol, 32, won his first two matches but now faces the unenviable task of meeting Borg in the third round.

Both Newcombe and Okker already have won their third-round matches. Newcombe defeated his compatriot Phil Dent 6-1, 1-6, 6-4, 6-4, but Okker's triumph over Vilas, was the biggest upset of the tournament so far.

Okker, once the top player in Europe but now ranked No.104 in the world, played with amazing zest.

The Dutchman sped about the court and volleyed with great precision. At one stage, he dropped just one point in five games.

Newcombe played some superb tennis in beating Dent, who saved three match points before Newcombe finally clinched the victory.

Meanwhile, Borg had an easy victory over Australian Peter McNamara, 6-2, 6-2, 6-4. Gerulaitis, seeded third, crushed Sherwood Stewart, also of the United States, 9-8, 6-0, 6-2.

Three other seeds won Friday. Mayer defeated Mark Edmondson of Australia 6-4, 6-2, 4-6, 6-2. Raul Ramirez of Mexico eliminated Rod Frawley of Australia 6-4, 7-5, 6-3, and Alexander downed Anand Amritraj of India 5-7, 6-3, 7-5, 6-2.

In the women's singles, second seed Martina Navratilova beat Pam Whytcross of Australia 7-5, 6-1. Defending champion Virginia Wade of Britain beat Lesley Bowrey of Australia 6-1, 6-4, and six-time champion Billie Jean King beat Marie Pinterova of Czechoslovakia 6-3, 6-2.

Doby Named Chisox Manager

By SCOTT PAPILLON
AP Sports Writer

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Larry Doby has found both pleasure and pain in being named manager of the Chicago White Sox.

"It's so nice to work for a man like Bill Veeck," Doby said after being named by the Chicago owner to replace Bob Lemon at the helm of the White Sox Friday.

"You just work as hard as you can, and if the opportunity arises, you will certainly get the opportunity to fulfill your dreams."

Doby, a friend of Lemon's since the two played with Cleveland in the late 1940s, said he had mixed emotions about taking over the club.

"I was surprised and saddened to a certain degree," said Doby, 53. "Bob and I have been friends for quite a number of years. Although it's a happy moment for me it's still not as happy as you would like for it to be."

Only hours after Veeck had dismissed Lemon, the two sat in the press room at Metropolitan Stadium, drinking beer and chatting as they waited for the White Sox to meet the Twins.

"Let me emphasize this was an amicable and mutual decision," Veeck said. He added the decision to replace Lemon "isn't a commentary on his managing," but that "we felt that the club was not making any real progress and that maybe we could stir things up a little bit."

Lemon, a member of the baseball Hall of Fame, was in his second year with Chicago and seemed to take the change philosophically.

"We knew we'd have a different team this year — one which depended more on pitching," he said. "A year ago we just overpowered people and I was a very smart manager.

"I guess I wasn't too bright this year."

Doby, an outfielder who was the first black in the American League, signed his first contract when Veeck was president of the Indians. He retired in 1959.

Economics, Ecology Are Colliding In South America

EDITOR'S NOTE — The economy and ecology are on a collision course in South America. While some steps are being taken to save endangered species and virgin vegetation, a year-round yacht harbor is encroaching on the Island of the Penguins, inaccessible to man for some 3,000 years.

By SHIRLEY CHRISTIAN
Associated Press Writer

ALGARROBO, Chile (AP) — A dead penguin washed onto the beach recently, and one resident suggested it may have set out to protest man's intrusion on the nearby Island of the Penguins.

An autopsy was inconclusive, and ecologists are convinced that unexplained penguin deaths will become common in this resort community now that a yacht harbor is being built to connect the mainland with the island 500 feet offshore.

The estimated 800 penguins on the island represent one of the many confrontations between civilization and wildlife in Latin America. On the whole, nature is losing — to industrialization, pollution, pesticides, population and economic pressures.

The vicuna, which used to share the high Andes with the Incas, is down to a countable 900 in Bolivia, about 3,000 in Argentina and maybe 2,000 in Chile. The colorful macaw and other parrots are said to be gone from Rio de Janeiro. The orinoco crocodile, part of the lore of Venezuela's tropics, has been hunted mercilessly.

Other threatened species in South America include jaguars, some bears and deer, the condor, alligators, leopards and monkeys. Some conservationists also worry about the future of the fur seal along the Pacific Coast of South America because of mass slaughters of the babies for their skins.

There is evidence that the tide is turning, however. Peru rescued its vicuna population from near extinction and now has an estimated 45,000. Concerned Brazilians blocked an attempt to turn a biological reserve in Espirito Santo State into a commercial palm plantation. Brazilians also have proposed giving up bird feathers on carnival costumes.

Ecuador's government has limited visitors to 12,000 a year on the Galapagos Islands in an effort to preserve flora and fauna. The islands 600 miles off the Pacific Coast have birds that are unique to the archipelago and giant turtles, iguanas and tortoises.

Most Latin American governments have enacted laws in the past few years to protect wildlife, though many are short on enforcement funds. Many state and private protection agencies also have sprung up.

Dr. Juan Grau, a physician who is secretary-general of Chile's private institute of ecology and the country's leading conservation crusader, believes penguins arrived on the island off Algarrobo 3,000 years ago. He says two kinds nest in its rocks — humbolt penguins from northern climates and magallan penguins from the southern end of the world.

It is only 25 miles up the coast to the busy port of Valparaiso and about 70 miles inland to Santiago's million people but until recently the penguins were undisturbed on their one acre island.

Grau marshaled the ecology forces, including several university groups, and the penguins became regular headlines in Santiago newspapers.

President Augusto Pinochet ordered a halt to construction pending studies. Two months later, he allowed work to resume after government officials decided the harbor would be economically beneficial. They said the penguins would not be harmed because there would be no public access to the western side where they nest and swim.

The landfill is completed, and it's possible to reach the island on foot. Although police restrict human access, Grau says there is no way to prevent animals from reaching it and preying on the penguins.

Peru's rescue of its vicuna population, the smallest member of the camel family, is largely the work of Felip Benavides, a wealthy former diplomat who won the J. Paul Getty wildlife conservation award in 1974. In the Pampas Galeras national wildlife preserve that Benavides helped establish 10 years ago, the vicuna population has grown from 600 to 34,000. There are 11,000 elsewhere in Peru.

Now Benavides and his supporters are campaigning to protect an estimated 34,000 fur seals off Peruvian shores and trying to establish wildlife sanctuaries for the spectacled bear, the Andean deer, the condor, the almost extinct white-winged guan bird and a dozen other species.

Last year the Peruvian government allowed Prince Abdorreza Pahlavi, brother of the Shah of Iran, to come and hunt the rare spectacled bear. Benavides made no secret of his displeasure, declaring at a dinner which both men attended that the prince was "persona non grata" to Peru's chapter of the world wildlife fund.

The prince made his expedition into the mountains, but he returned emptyhanded, saying he hadn't found a suitable bear.

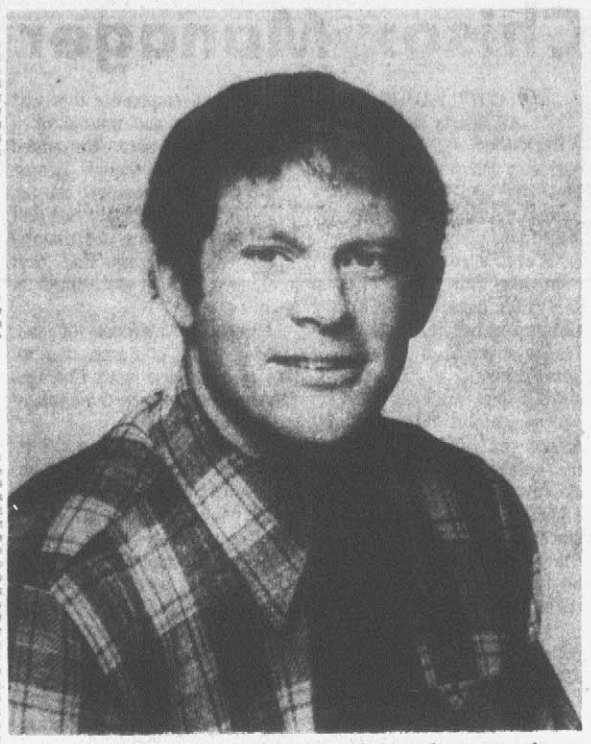

Fur and skin dealers are blamed for killing hundreds of thousands of animals whose skins are turned into coats, shoes and purses. These include alligators, jaguars, crocodiles and leopards in Venezuela, Colombia, Brazil and Argentina. Some are nearly extinct.

Most Latin American countries find that though their lists of endangered species are already long, the count has just begun. Guillermo Cuellar, an official of Venezuela's three-year-old nature foundation, Fundena, says there has been very little research to determine the damage.

But he says there's some optimism:

"Conservation is becoming fashionable in Venezuela, at least that's a step in the right direction."

'Wojo' Blends Brains, Brawn In Real Life

MAX GAIL holds a bachelor's degree in economics and a master's in international finance; the opposite of the role he plays in the "Barney Miller" series. (UPI Photo)

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Max Gail, who plays Wojehowicz — the not-too-bright Polish cop — in the "Barney Miller" series, gets so caught up in his role that it often takes a full day for the actor to regain his own identity.

Gail spends Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday rehearsing the show. On Friday he then finds himself playing Wojehowicz for 18 or 19 hours, often working until 4 or 5 a.m. when the show is filmed.

"The character of Wojo takes over," says Gail, "and I spend all day Saturday cooling out, trying to figure out who I am."

Among other things, Gail is a twin. His sister, Mary Roberts, is a singer who lives in New York. Max says he and his twin do not communicate very often but are extraordinarily close through ESP.

Max is also a bachelor who lives with a lady friend in a small beach house he describes as funky on a cliff near Point Dume, an hour's drive west of Hollywood. The house has a single bedroom and bath and was built as a temporary structure by its original owner.

Hippies moved in and out of the house over the years, but Max finds it ideal. The area is suitably rural and far enough from the city to give him a sense of tranquility.

The house reposes on ¾ of an acre which accommodates Max's two horses, a pair of quarterhorse mares named Angel and Pearl, given him by Danny Arnold who produces "Barney Miller."

Max keeps a third horse on the premises for actor John Savage, his friend and neighbor. There also are four cats, 10 kittens and Restless, a mixed Labrador and Irish setter.

Max spends hours riding miles of trails with friends into the canyon country behind his property or down along the beaches and surf.

When the ABC-TV show is in production Max arises every morning to jog 10 miles on the sand. He takes his long run as much to work off his hostilities as to keep himself physically fit.

After his run he showers, fixes breakfast and is off for the studio.

"I don't want to sound like a routine oriented person because I'm not," says Max. "But I have a job and that dictates that I follow some routines. But when the show is on hiatus I never know what I'll be doing when I get up."

One of the things Max does is write music, accompanying himself on the piano. He aspires to become a rounded entertainer some day and hopes to sing and play his songs on records. He makes frequent appearances as a singer at benefits.

Max has few personal possessions and likes to keep his life simple. His furniture is comfortable and informal.

The kitchen is starkly utilitarian. He often whips up omelets for friends who stop by. He fancies himself an expert on beef stroganoff too. But his lady friend does most of the cooking.

Gail is the antithesis of the blockheaded Wojehowicz. He holds a B.A. degree in economics from Williams College and a masters in international finance from the University of Michigan. He has been a construction worker, a waiter and has taught ancient history and English.

"An important part of my life right now is the American Indian predicament," he says. "I have a lot of Indian friends who started 'The Longest Walk' to draw attention to themselves by lobbying in congress.

The three day intensive training program was held on the Campus of University of North Carolina at Charlotte. During the event, Jaycee officers attended class on a variety of subjects which included leadership, communications, human relations and civic efforts. The event ended with State Jaycee President Harold Herring presenting diplomas to officers of the Greenville Jaycees.

Prelate Spurns An Invitation

NEW YORK (AP) — Archbishop Iakovos, head of the Greek Orthodox Church in the Americas, spurned an invitation from President Carter to explain his policy for lifting the arms embargo against Turkey.

Replying to presidential aide, Anne Wexler, the archbishop said he "must respectfully decline" to attend a defense of a policy already decided by the administration and "to which I conscientiously object."

"Please assure him (Carter) that...I will continue to pray that he may be given guidance and inspiration from above in his quest for peace. I strongly believe that peace cannot be promoted by sending arms to a 'well known' ally that has little regard for human rights and certainly less for peace."

Ask Surrender Of Handguns

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Delegates to the Church of the Brethren's annual conference have urged members to surrender any handguns they own to authorities as evidence of their commitment to the "Prince of Peace." The denomination also urged the U. S. Congress to restrict further the availability of handguns.

Attempt To Explain Black Holes In Space Theory

By RALPH WAKLEY

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The nice thing about the work of a theoretical astrophysicist is the challenge of such riddles of the universe as: How can something be so big it can't be seen?

That's the riddle presented by so-called black holes in space.

Since the first discovery of what might be an honest-to-goodness black hole in the early 1970s, Professor Richard Price of the University of Utah has been one of a growing number of space detectives attempting to confirm that black holes really exist.

"Why? Because black holes are the most interesting astrophysical objects that can exist in our universe," says Price. "They are perhaps the most exotic object in theoretical astrophysics.

"Black holes may tell us more than any other single thing about the structure of the universe. And, if they exist, they would tend to confirm Albert Einstein's general theory of relativity."

As in nearly everything else in the universe that has existed outside the range of man's eyesight, black holes have lived in theory for some time.

Price says near the end of the 18th Century a French scientist, Pierre LaPlace, first suggested the existence of very compact stars so massive they could not be seen.

LaPlace theorized these stars would have such a strong gravitational pull that they would prevent their own light radiation from leaving the surface, and, therefore, could not be detected by Earth-bound astronomers' telescopes. But Price said it took Einstein to correct and polish LaPlace's idea.

"Part of Einstein's theory of relativity tells us that if matter is packed together with enough force it would have a gravitational pull strong enough to keep anything from escaping once it enters the object," Price said.

So, the next question is: How can anyone see a black hole if it doesn't emit or reflect any light or other kinds of radiation?

"First, a black hole might reveal its presence by its effect on the motion of a companion star in a binary system," says Price.

In other words, the black hole and a nearby star would be trapped in each other's gravitational pull and orbit each other. The pull of the black hole could then be seen through its affect on the star neighbor. And it might be possible to see evidence of matter being pulled from the visible companion star and disappearing into the black hole.

This falling matter would be compacted, heated and ripped apart as it rushed toward the gravitational source. It would be the energy released from this "outside" matter that could be detected in the form of X-rays.

The trouble was that X-rays can't be detected by ground observatories because they do not penetrate Earth's atmospheric screen. So it took the launch of an observation satellite to pinpoint sources of intense X-ray emissions.

"Until the advent of X-ray astronomy by satellite, we didn't have enough data to search for a candidate for such a binary system. But the orbit of the Uhuru satellite in December of 1970 rectified this situation and provided astronomers with several compact X-ray sources," the Utah astrophysicist said.

One of these X-ray candidates with a companion star was identified as Cygnus X-1, about 7,000 light years distant from Earth. So a black hole has been found? "Maybe and maybe not," says Price.

"We also know that a neutron star would have tremendous gravitational pull, and should give rise to X-ray signals with the same general properties. Once a close binary X-ray source I found, we have to distinguish between neutron star and black hole possibilities."

In theory, both a neutron star and a black hole are former suns which have consumed their nuclear fuel. Once the fuel is gone, the internal pressure can't support the star's size and it collapses inward.

A neutron star would collapse until its atoms are converted into neutrons, and the neutrons are virtually touching. But a neutron star nearby would still be visible for centuries while it cooled down.

In a black hole, however, the gravitational collapse would continue until the very neutrons were smashed into super-small sub-atomic particles that have no known companion in the universe. A star with 10 times the mass of our sun — for example — would be compacted down to an object a few miles in radius.

Or, as Price puts it, "A similar compression of the Earth would result in a planet with the Earth's mass but with the width of only a thumbnail."

So that leaves Price and his fellow astrophysicist-detectives with trying to find ways to identify the difference between a neutron star and a black hole. And Price says, "There is a criterion for the distinction."

"Studies of neutron stars strongly suggest the maximum mass of a neutron star would have a strict upper limit of about four solar masses — four times the weight of our sun."

"Black holes, on the other hand, have no such upper mass limits. Therefore, to find a likely candidate for a black hole system, it is necessary to find an X-ray binary with a secondary (a black hole) more massive than about four of our suns."

And, according to Price, that apparently fits Cygnus X-1. Its visible star has an assumed mass of 25 of our suns. "This predicts that the dark secondary has a mass that is probably around eight or more solar masses."

"In any case, it would be significantly larger than the neutron star limit. For this reason, many astrophysicists now believe that Cygnus X-1 contains a black hole," Price says.

A second candidate for a black hole is called Circinus X-1. It was discovered in 1974 by satellite observations which showed that Circinus X-1 was similar to Cygnus X-1.

Dr. Herbert Friedman of the Naval Research Laboratory in Washington reported last November that a new large astronomical satellite called HEAO found that Circinus was producing "very striking" bursts of X-rays in patterns suggestive of the kind astronomers believe matter sucked into a black hole should produce.

A third candidate was added to the list in June. Dr. Ronald Polidan of Princeton University reported that he and a team of British scientists found what might be a black hole in the constellation Scorpio. They named it Scorpii V-861.

So can scientists now say they have found a black hole? Again Price says, "Maybe and maybe not."

Many Protest Ban Of Weekly

JOHANESBURG, S. Africa (AP) — The government's banning of the black Christian weekly, The Voice, has drawn protests from church leaders in many lands.

In New York, the Rev. Paul Wee, head of the U. S. arm of the Lutheran World Federation, called it a further step to "silence the forces of moderation and reconciliation." In London, Hans W. Florin, head of the World Association for Christian Communication, appealed for a lifting of the ban so "black Africans may once again have this voice to express their true feelings and concerns."

Full Sizes Downsized In '79 Auto Model Preview

By JEFFERY L. SHELER
UPI Auto Writer

DETROIT (UPI) — The shrinking of the American automobile goes a step further in the Big Four's fall lineup of lighter, leaner cars for 1979.

While the wraps still are on next year's models, an early glimpse at Detroit's autumn offerings shows only a handful of cars will undergo major changes. In most of those cases, change means smaller.

Due for downsizing treatment in 1979 are three of General Motors' last luxury landcruisers and Ford's and Chrysler's fullsize models. American Motors will drop its only fullsize car line.

The only exception to the "smaller is better" trend this year will come from Ford. Its restyled Mustang and Capri models will be longer and roomier but lighter than their 1978 counterparts.

Big gas-guzzling V-8 engines will continue to fade, giving way to more fuel-efficient small V-8s and 6-cylinder, 4-cylinder, diesel and turbocharged engines.

The slimming down and toning up is all part of the automakers' frantic drive to meet strict government fuel economy standards which require the 1979 fleets to average at least 19 miles per gallon — a one-mile improvement over the 1978 standard.

With even more stringent standards set for the next six years, reducing fuel consumption will remain the dominant theme in automotive design for the next decade.

At the same time, company officials are not willing to abandon the industry adage that "styling sells cars." They are pressing engineers to keep coming up with enough flash and "pizazz" to excite the car-buying public.

The excitement index this year, however, is not likely to set any records.

GM's new car lineup, due for unveiling late in September, will feature only three major styling changes — new and smaller versions of the front-wheel-drive Cadillac Eldorado, Oldsmobile Toronado and Buick Riviera. GM officials say the downsized models will get five more miles per gallon than the 1978 models.

The Eldorado — last of America's 5,000-pound luxury cars — will shed close to 1,000 pounds and will be shortened nearly a foot, making it similar in size to the Seville. The Toronado will be trimmed by roughly the same amounts.

Both cars were spared when GM downsized its fullsize models in 1977.

The Riviera, which already is lighter than the other two, will undergo somewhat less downsizing. It will be the first time the Riviera has come with front-wheel-drive, something the Eldorado and Toronado have had since the late 1960s.

GM plans to expand its use of front-wheel-drive — which reduces weight and saves space by eliminating the "hump" in the passenger compartment — when it unveils its new compact line next spring.

The smaller, somewhat boxier front-wheel-drive Chevrolet Nova, Oldsmobile Omega, Pontiac Phoenix and Buick Skylark were to be introduced this fall. But a variety of problems — reportedly involving engine cooling, air conditioning and heating complexities — resulted in a delay. They will be sold as 1980 models.

The rest of GM's fall lineup will will look much the same as this year's models with a few minor cosmetic changes.

In another step toward boosting fuel efficiency, GM plans to build more 350-cubic-inch diesel engines, which were optional on this year's Cadillac Seville and Oldsmobile Delta, and will offer a 260-cubic-diesel on some Oldsmobile Cutlass models.

GM also plans to more than double output of Buick's turbocharged V-6 engine to nearly 100,000 units.

Not to be outdone in its 75th anniversary year, Ford is planning to show off the largest restyling effort of any of the Big Four auto companies this year, with the all new Mustang as the flagship.

Downsized, redesigned versions of the Ford LTD and Mercury Marquis, a new LTD II wagon and a Mercury counterpart and an American-built Capri round out Ford's 1979 autumn offerings.

Along with its new sister car — Mercury Capri — the Mustang will bear little resemblance to its predecessors. Its styling will be sleeker and longer with a distinctive European flare.

The notchback version, one of six Mustang body styles that will be available, bares a strong resemblance to the Mercedes Benz 450SL, with its squared-off rear deck and angular roof line.

The gaping fish-mouth grille, characteristic of the Mustang for years, has been replaced by a broad, wedge-shaped grille comprised of black pigeon-hole squares nestled between horizontal pairs of rectangular headlamps.

A wide molding strip that wraps around the car is incorporated in a softnose front and rear bumper system.

The Capri will come only in a hatchback body style.

Both cars will share the same power train and suspension components. They will be available in the base 4-cylinder engine, a new turbocharged 4-cylinder, a V-6 and a V-8.

Although they are four inches longer than the 1978 models, the Mustang-Capri weighs 90 to 180 pounds less as a result of extensive use of high-strength steel, aluminum, plastics and other lightweight materials.

Ford also used lighter materials, as well as size reduction, to trim 900 pounds from the LTD and Marquis. LTD and Marquis wagons will be dropped.

Because of the lighter weight, a 302-cubic-inch V-8 will replace the 351-cubic-inch V-8 as the standard LTD and Marquis engine. The larger engine will become an option and will be equipped with Ford's new electronic ignition system that automatically regulates fuel and air mixture.

Ford's Fairmont-Zephyr and Pinto-Bobcat models will undergo superficial changes. The Pinto will be replaced in the early 1980's by Ford's new "world car", a front-wheel-drive subcompact code-named "Ericka".

Ford will showcase its 1979 models on Oct.6 in a two-hour television variety special commemorating the company's 75th anniversary.

Later in the fall, Chrysler will introduce new, smaller versions of its fullsize Chrysler New Yorker and Newport and an all new Dodge St. Regis, replacing the Royal Monaco. The Plymouth Gran Fury, which was dropped last year, will not return.

Chrysler officials said their new "big" cars will be more than 750 pounds lighter and about six inches shorter "and still provide ample room for six adults."

The No. 3 auto firm is doing away with its thirsty 400-and 440-cubic-inch V-8s, replacing them with a more fuel-efficient 360 V-8 as standard equipment on some models.

Chrysler also will unveil a sporty, two-door version of its Dodge Omni and Plymouth Horizon subcompacts, which were introduced this year as four-door hatchbacks. The new models will have the same drive train, including front-wheel-drive, but will have a restyled grille to distinguish them from the four-door models.

There will be few changes in Chrysler's Cordoba, Magnum, LeBaron, Diplomat, Volare and Aspen models. The Dodge Charger SE will be scrapped.

AMC's fall introductions, which may come as early as August, will focus on a restyled, more fuel efficient Gremlin expected to be called the "Spirit". The car will be sportier in appearance than the Gremlin, with a roomier and more gently sloping rear and larger side windows.

AMC officials announced earlier this year they would halt production of the firm's lone fullsize car, Matador, at the end of the 1978 model run. There has been no indication the struggling No. 4 firm plans to replace it.

AMC's Pacer and Concord are expected to return with few alterations.

Wall Street Watching Capital Gains Tax Bills

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street is watching with particular interest as Congress works on a variety of bills that would lower taxes on capital gains.

Measures proposed in the House by Rep. William Steiger, R-Wis., and Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., and in the Senate by Sen. Clifford Hansen, R-Wyo., would reduce to varying degrees the tax on profits from investments.

Naturally, the financial community is enthusiastically behind the idea. Wall Streeters argue that 1969 and 1976 laws that scaled down the tax breaks available on capital gains have hurt not only the stock market but the economy as a whole.

"Investors have had their capital expropriated by inflation, double taxation of dividends, a 70 percent maximum tax rate on 'unearned income' and a doubling of the tax on capital gains (under the 1969 law)," said Leslie M. Pollack, chief investment officer at Shearson Hayden Stone Inc.

"A reversal of this trend would be one of the most favorable things that could happen to the stock market and would be a step towards curing the chronic capital shortage."

President Carter has been sharply critical of the proposals, however. At his news conference last Monday Carter maintained that they would provide a "windfall for millionaires and two bits for the average American."

The following day, Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal labeled Steiger's proposal a "millionaire's relief bill."

While the debate continued, the stock market posted a modest loss during the past week in reduced trading as the Independence Day holiday period approached.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 4.07 to 818.95.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index lost .24 to 53.66, and the American Stock Exchange market value index was off 1.72 at 145.55.

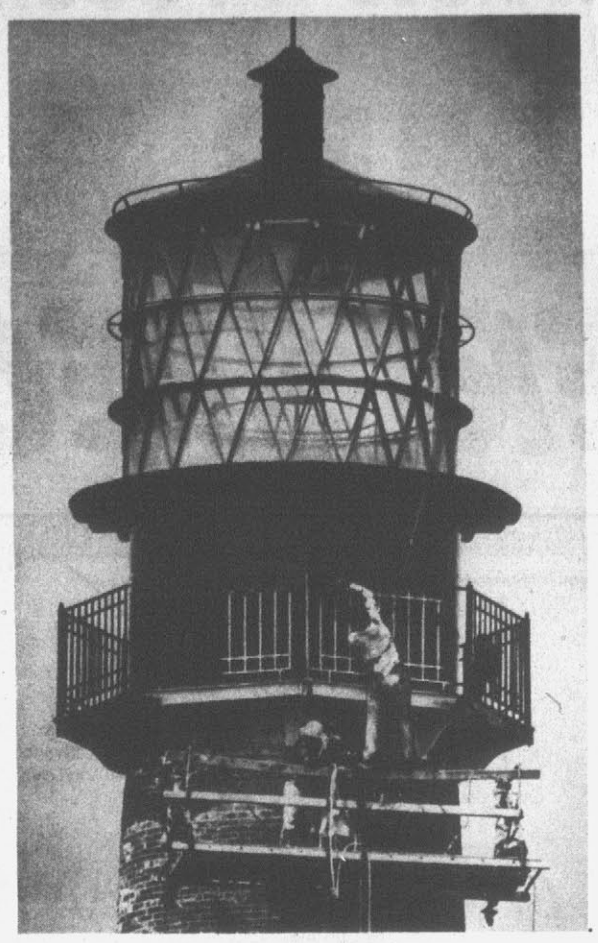

Big Board volume averaged 24.31 million shares a day, against 27.64 million the week before.

For the first half of 1978, which ended Friday, the Dow chalked up a decline of 12.22 points, having recovered most of a sharp January loss with the spring rally that set trading-volume records.

The debate over the capital gains tax proposals has set up a classic confrontation of liberal and conservative economic idealogies.

Those who favor bigger tax breaks on capital gains generally acknowledge that large investors would get most of the original, direct benefit. But they maintain that the resulting stimulus to investment would lead to new jobs and spread its effects throughout the economy.

Arthur Levitt Jr., chairman of the American Stock Exchange, told a Senate subcommittee, "The real benefits we are talking about here are the benefits of increased employment and economic expansion that a rollback to the capital gains tax would produce.

WATCHING HIS STEP — A construction worker sprays a coat of paint on the top of the lighthouse at Cape Florida State Recreation area on Key Biscayne recently. The paint job is part of an extensive renovation program at the lighthouse complex. The lighthouse, built in 1825, will be reactivated later this year. (AP Laserphoto)

Open Road Beckins—Mattie, 73, Obeys

By JEAN GREEN
Union City Daily Messenger

UNION CITY, Tenn. (AP) — Folks say Mattie Austin Douglas was born restless, and the 73-year-old woman says it must be true. She's been hitchhiking for 50 years and says she isn't ready yet to quit the road.

"People have been nice to me. I don't know how many raincoats they have taken off their backs and given me," Mrs. Douglas said in an interview.

She was 21 and had been married less than five months when she hitched her first ride.

"I went looking for my first husband," she said. "He ran off with another woman."

Mrs. Douglas had to interrupt her travels with the birth of her first child, but she didn't waste much time before she was thumbing again.

"I took to the road when the baby was 10 months old, hitching to Florida. I worked in people's homes, did a little housework and they would give me what they had put back, they wouldn't eat, or clothes they didn't need. I don't know how I really got by, but I did," she said.

Mrs. Douglas' family — a son and a daughter — live in the Chicago area but the gray-haired hitchhiker says the weather there goes against her health.

When Mrs. Douglas isn't on the road she can usually be found scratching a knot — hitchhikers' lingo for taking a short rest — at a small shack east of Dukedom, Tenn., on a rural deadend road. She doesn't know who owns the place.

"I'm not here long at a time, but I always know I got a place to go when there's time for a rest," she said. "They tell me I was born restless. I have to stay on the road."

There are no lights, no water, no telephone in Mrs. Douglas' home but she says she gets along nicely without them.

Mrs. Douglas, who last hitchhiked from Florida, is leaving just as soon as she plants a small garden to come back to. She says she'll head for Chicago, and on to California.

She has arranged, as she always does, for the Dukedom post office to hold her welfare checks and the letters from the people she's met.

"How could anyone like me," she said, "born back here in the hills with no education, ever have met so many nice people — even millionaires — if I hadn't taken to the road?" she said.

It is available in seven-ounce boxes and introductory foil packs. The fruit flavors are very mild and sweetness is light by adult standards. The products are made without added aromas, salt, sucrose or non-nutritive additives.

Eula P. Edwards Marries Levon Younger

The Little Creek Free Will Baptist Church was the scene of the Saturday afternoon wedding of Eula Pratt Edwards of Greenville and Levon Younger of Grifton.

The Rev. J. L. Wilson performed the candlelight double ring ceremony at 4:00 o'clock. The church was decoarated with white summer flowers and greenery and candelabra. The couple knelt on a profile prie dieu and lit the center candle in a three-branched candelabrum as a symbol of their unity.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Roger Ingram of Ayden, organist, and Mrs. Vivian HInes of Goldsboro, soloist, who sang, "Because," "The Lord's Prayer," and "We've Only Just Begun."

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Jessie W. Pratt of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Cora Lee Baker of Ayden. The bride was given in marriage by her mother and escorted by her brother, Ronald Pratt.

She wore an ivory venise lace-adorned gown fashioned with a Queen Ann neckline, empire bodice, and long bishop sleeves. The full skirt flowed into a chapel train. Her matching caplet, also adorned with venise lace, was attached to fingertip tiers of silk illusion. She carried a formal cascading bouquet of miniature white carnation, baby's breath, greenery and orchids tied with candlelight satin.

A leaky faucet wastes more than water. Hot water dripping down the drain is energy, fuel and your money being wasted. Turn the tap off tight. And if it still leaks, chances are it will only cost a few dollars to get it fixed — a lot less than the cost of wasting water and fuel.

Let 'Em Crawl, Climb, Swing

NEW YORK (UPI) — Motor and coordination skills need continual reinforcement if a child has trouble with reading or handwriting, says Darral G. Chapman, chief of therapy at the New York Institute for Child Development.

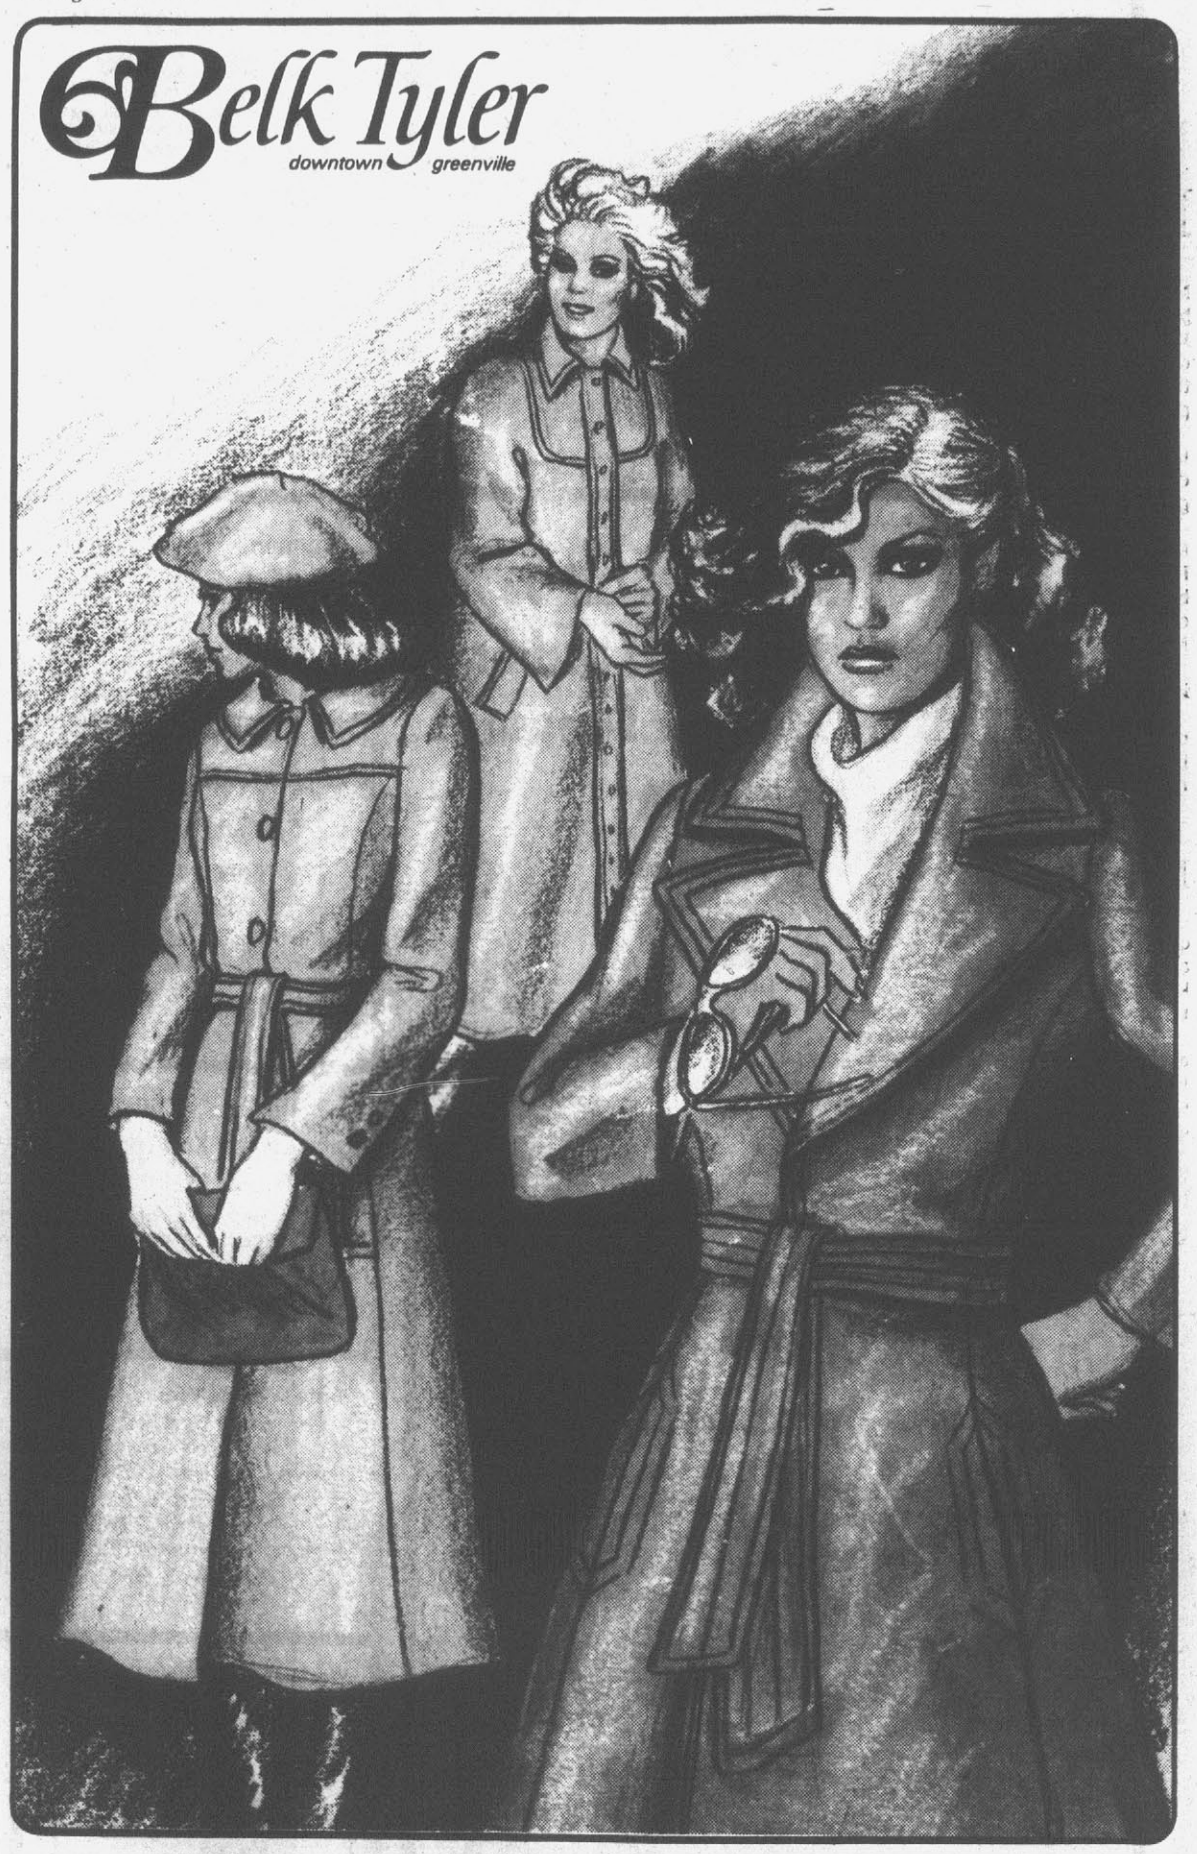

The institute is a non-profit center that specializes in diagnosis and treatment of learning disabled, hyperactive and underachieving children.

Chapman encourages children to climb on and swing from jungle gyms and overhead ladders to improve their eye-hand coordination and sense of balance. He says crawling on their bellies on the beach in a game of spies can also help develop basic coordination and body awareness.

CHICAGO (UPI) — If your outdoor barbecuing equipment and accessories are electric, keep these safety factors in mind:

—Use them only with heavy duty extension cords designed for outdoor use. An Underwriters Laboratories label on the cords will identify them.

—Never route extension cords through doors or gates where the insulation could be damaged, causing potential shock and fire hazards.

—Never remove the grounding plug on a 3-prong plug. Grounding plugs are designed to protect against shock. Each should be connected to a 3-wire, properly grounded receptacle.

—Before you buy any electric outdoor cooking appliances and accessories, look for the UL Listing Mark. It means the design has been tested by the independent non-profit organization and found in compliance with nationally recognized safety standards.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

(Author's Note: This is one of a series on "How America Vacations" . . . and how shots can help. Today's column deals with the stay-at-home vacationers.)

The decision to spend a vacation at home is not a snap judgment.

The idea first hits in January when the Christmas bills come, followed closely by a broken water heater, a defunct transmission, a clothes dryer that catches fire, and a note from the orthodontist telling you your child is a candidate for a horror movie. Plans are finalized one day when one of the kids comes in shouting, "Daddy! Daddy! Our grass is wet and squishy and smells terrible," and you realize your septic tank just died.

It is the death of the septic tank that convinces you that vacation traffic will be deadly, the food won't be nearly as good as what you can get at home, and besides what kind of an insensitive human being would abandon a pregnant gerbil who could possibly deliver breach? The parents appease the children by promising them a series of mini-tours around the state.

The first mini-tour takes Daddy no farther than the garage. He has set aside the first day to "pull the house together." This includes fertilizing, rolling, seeding and the exterior of the house, installing a humidifier in the craw space in the hall closet, wallpapering two bedrooms, fixing a leak behind the washer, and if there's time, stripping the kitchen cabinets and staining them a lighter color so the kitchen "won't seem so dark."

The second day is spent checking on all the houses of the neighbors who are vacationing and whom you promised to water plants, put clean newspapers down for the pets, bring in mail and cut the grass.

The third day, a car in the driveway heralds the arrival of Lester and Eunice and their four children (one who can bounce a ball steadily against the houe for 156 hours without stopping). Eunice's and Lester's septic tank also died and they are making a series of mini-tours around the state. They stay four days before pressing on to visit a worm farm.

The real plus of a vaction-at-home is that two weeks seem like three months and in January when it's time to sign up for another vacation, you refuse, saying, "Couldn't I just take a long lunch hour in August?"

Love's Got To Be A Two-Sided Thing

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating a 32-year-old man for the last 10 months. I am 23. He's nice-looking, well-mannered and can afford to show a girl a good time. He has brought me some rather expensive gifts (a stereo for my birthday and a color TV for Christmas). He tried to give me a diamond for St. Valentine's Day, but I wouldn't accept it.

I just don't love him and he knows it, but he says he's desperately in love with me. I never tried to lead him on. I told him from the beginning that I didn't love him and didn't think I ever could. I've even asked him to quit calling me, but he calls anyway, and if I have nothing better to do, I go out with him.

I have acted bored in his company, and I've even been rude to him, but he can't be discouraged. Any suggestions?

BORED IN BURLINGAME

DEAR BORED: If you really don't see any future with this man, don't go out with him again. The more you see of him, and the more you accept from him, the harder it will be to get rid of him. He plans to "wear you down." And if he succeeds, you'll both be sorry. A one-sided "love" doesn't last long.

DEAR ABBY: Elaine (not her real name) and I have been married for 14 years and have five children. We are both 36 years old.

A while ago Elaine joined a therapy group. (You know, they just sit around and talk about sex. Well, Elaine is the only married person in the group.

One evening a fellow from the group picked Elaine up and drove her to one of the meetings. He brought her home at 1:30 a.m. Elaine said they stopped for a drink on the way home. Another time Elaine accepted a dinner invitation with another man from the group.

She says she is innocent of any wrongdoing. I believe her, but I feel her conduct is a potential threat to our marriage. Am I wrong to object?

OLD-FASHIONED

DEAR OLD-FASHIONED: No. Every therapy group has a "therapist." Talk to Elaine's and ask him how you should handle this problem.

DEAR ABBY: Saw the enclosed in a Knights of Columbus newsletter and thought, "How true it is." If you think it's good enough for your column, be my guest.

DANIEL H. MILITELLO,
WESTFIELD, N.Y.

DEAR DAN: I do, and here it is:

"Someone has said that there are four kinds of 'bones' in every organization.

There are the WISHBONES, who spend their time wishing someone else would do the work.

There are the JAWBONES, who do all the talking, but very little else.

Next, there are the KNUCKLEBONES, who knock everything anyone ever tries to do.

And finally, there are the BACKBONES, who get under the load and do the work."

Hamby-Eakes Wedding Held Friday Night

First Free Will Baptist Church was the scene of the 7 p.m. Friday wedding ceremony of Peggy Joyce Eakes and Ronald Lee Hamby. The Rev. Davie Brinson performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Alice Allen of Greenville and the late Zeno Allen. The bridegroom is the son of Ruby Hamby of Winston-Salem and the late Robert Hamby.

The bride, given in marriage by her son, wore a formal length gown of candlelight organza, featuring an empire waist and high neckline with soft ruffled organza sleeves. The waistline and front were accented with floral Venise lace. The skirt was bordered with waffle lace and fell softly into a chapel length train. The bride wore a veil of candlelight lace and carried a single talisman rose.

The bridal attendant was Bernice Haddock of Greenville. She selected a dress of peach taffeta chiffon with a floral overlay and wide-brimmed peach hat. She carried a single yellow rose.

Steve Hamby, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man. Ushers included Ray Rouse of Ayden and Donald Hamby, brother of the bridegroom. Michele Hamby, daughter of the bridegroom, served as flower girl.

A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Roy Turnage. Patsy Manning, soloist, and Terri Nelson, accompanist, sang "You Light Up My Life" and "The Wedding Prayer."

Judy Smith directed the wedding. Delores White presided at the register and greeted guests.

A reception was given at the church following the ceremony. The table was covered with a lace cloth and highlighted with a basket of daisies, carnations and mums. Susie Myers, sister of the bridegroom, served cake and Delores White poured punch.

After a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, S. C., the couple will reside in Greenville.

The bride is employed by Burroughs Wellcome Corporation. The bridegroom is employed by the U.S. Army Reserve Technician Program.

Women Buy Sports Items

CHICAGO (AP) — Women constitute almost one-third of the market for jogging shoes, snow skis and hiking boots, according to a consumer survey prepared for the National Sporting Goods Association here and based on interviews with 32,000 U.S. families.

The report cites the influence of growing female participation for the strong sales increases in exercise, racket sports and softball equipment. Almost half the bowling balls and tennis rackets purchased are for women, as are one out of every five baseball gloves bought. In addition, women represent an estimated 30 percent of all skateboards purchased, the survey shows.

Graham, Fickling On Tort Liability

Larry Graham, local attorney, and Kurt Fickling, local insurance man, addressed the Pitt Co. Association of Insurance Women recently.

Graham discussed tort liability, explaining that trot liability laws deal with civil wrong which involve negligence that must fall below the normal standard of contduct that one would require of someone else. There are three requirements for civil wrong, he said — involvement of negligence, negligence as the cause of injury and damage.

Fickling discussed the legal liability of an insurance contract and how it relates to tort liability. He said there are several measures that agents and employees can take to prevent liability suits.

Mrs. Audrey Stillwell presided. Guests were Mrs. Vickie McSweeney of Moseley Bros. Insurance and Mrs. Mary Page of Tadlock Insurance.

Program chairman, Sandra Sawyer, announced that Charley White and M. E. Gooch and associates would address the July meeting.

It was announced that this club has again come home from the state convention with honors. The club won first place in safety and education and was named the most outstanding club in the state. The convention was held in Pinehurst.

DINNER FOR TWO

Chicken Curry — Rice
Green Peas — Salad
Kumquat Oranges — Coffee

KUMQUAT ORANGES

Refreshing and attractive.

2 large seedless oranges
4 syrup-preserved kumquats
Vanilla ice cream

Cut a very thin slice from the bottom of each orange if necessary to have them stand flat. Cut a generous slice from each top to make wide openings. With a serrated grapefruit knife, cut out the flesh from each orange in as large a cone shape as possible. Dice the "cones" and 2 of the kumquats; mix together and return to the orange "shells." Cover with plastic wrap and chill. At serving time, top with the ice cream and garnish with the 2 remaining kumquats, decoratively cut. Makes 2 servings.

Robert Hills Says

Menu Misrepresentation Is Consumer Rip-Off

By SUSAN GARLAND

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The menu description for "fresh wild American rainbow trout" conjures images of fishermen at bubbling brooks in nearby woods delivering their catch almost immediately to your restaurant table.

But rainbow trout are not commercially fished. They are usually imported hatchery grown fish from Denmark or Japan.

There's also a good chance the maple syrup on menus is not made from maple sap, the cream for your coffee is actually half-and-half, the fresh shrimp were frozen, the Roquefort is domestic blue cheese and the 16-ounce Delmonico is really 12 ounces of beef round, says communications consultant Robert N. Hills. He reached these conclusions in preparing a new booklet, "Truth-in-Menu: A Report on Consumer Fraud through Menu Misrepresentation," with a grant from Emersons Restaurants.

Hills said a survey by the District of Columbia Environmental Health Administration at 141 restaurants in the capital showed all those advertising fresh shrimp were actually serving frozen; 75 percent of the "baked ham" was not baked; three-quarters were "short-weighing" their meats and half the restaurants offering kosher products were serving less expensive products that did not meet orthodox Jewish requirements.

He found menu misrepresentations give food products names that denote higher quality, higher prices and greater desirability.

He said in an interview such misrepresentations are among the more common consumer rip-offs. He estimates they could cost consumers up to $1 billion a year.

He also said most consumers are either unaware of the rip-off or do not want to spoil a pleasant evening fighting with a waiter over whether the scallops are bay or sea variety.

That's why menu fraud is easier to get away with than other types of consumer misrepresentations, Hills said. Mixing canned fruit with fresh or substituting turkey in chicken a la king is often hard to detect, he added.

He suggests patrons send back food they think has been misrepresented — politely telling the serving person why and asking for proof the dish is as described on the menu.

If the restaurant cannot prove its case, he wrote, it should accept a change of order.

Hills suggests people who want to avoid confrontation ask their local inspection agency in writing to check out the item in question and notify them of the results.

The problem occurs partly because consumers do not shop around as they would when looking for a stereo set, he said. Nor are they in a position to readily compare products and prices with competitor's.

Hills believes government action is needed — either truth-in-menu laws or using current consumer fraud and food adulteration laws.

Los Angeles County passed such a law. After a warning to restaurants in 1974, Los Angeles County mandated menu reviews and kitchen checks in most of its 15,000 restaurants. The county has also levied fines and imposed probationary status, Hills said.

In Washington, Robert Neville, the counsel there for the National Restaurant Association said: "Just about every state has laws against false advertising. These are all broad statutes that could be applied to truth-in-menus." Neville said just such a law was the foundation for the Los Angeles action.

The Chicago-based NRA has published its own "Accuracy in Menus" pamphlet suggesting guidelines for its members. A restaurant advertising Florida orange juice on its menu, for example, should serve juice from Florida, the guide says.

But the NRA also says such items as Irish stew and Manhattan clam chowder are understood by customers as styles of cooking, rather than geographic origin.

The association disagrees with Hills's statement about the severity and cost of menu misrepresentation.

In a telephone interview, NRA spokesman Jerry Greenfield said such incidents are simple "errors" by restaurateurs unaware that maple syrup is a specific type of syrup, for example.

Greenfield also denied that restaurateurs would purposely try to defraud customers as Hills charges. Their businesses depend on consumer satisfaction, he said.

The industry group opposes special truth-in-menu laws and says current laws prohibiting fraud, false advertising and misrepresentation of products are enough.

It also says the most effective regulation is customer dissatisfaction and loss of patronage.

Free Music Lessons

CHICAGO (AP) — Anyone can learn to make music at former nun Rita Simo's school — especially the poor.

Ms. Simo runs a free music school in Uptown, a neighborhood largely on the decay. Anyone who walks in the door can become a stadent.

"Why should people be penalized for being poor?" she said.

"Why shouldn't poor people be able to develop their talent the same as everyone else? Everyone has some talent."

Eighty-three students age 5 to 70 are trying to develop their talents at the school, located in a storefront with paint peeling outside.

The woman who, along with five assistants, teaches them is a naturalized American from the Dominican Republic who attended the National Conservatory of Music before winning a scholarship to the Juilliard School of Music.

Ms. Simo earned two degrees there and won her doctorate in music from Boston University.

She became a Roman Catholic nun, but after six years found herself teaching music to upper-and middle-class students — not the poor.

She opened her Uptown music school two years ago.

"It was almost like I was trying to compensate for all the things I'd had," she said. "Even though my father ran a big dairy farm, I was able to attend the conservatory for free. Why shouldn't it be the same in this country, for everybody?"

She wants her school to evolve into a major free conservatory, but it still has a long way to go.

A year after the school opened, someone stole most of the donated instruments, leaving only two upright pianos. Instruments are still in short supply, though some new ones have been donated.

Two teachers and a secretary are paid a small amount from a federal jobs grant. Most of Ms. Simo's assistants work elsewhere to support themselves.

Ms. Simo takes some private piano students to help support herself and works each morning with old people.

Her big problem, she says, is finding the $200 cash she needs each month to pay the rent.

"When the 25th of the month comes around and I don't have the rent money in the bank, I sit down and start writing my friends," she said.

"But right now, we're in pretty good shape. Well, we need a drum teacher and a trumpet teacher and a decent typewriter and some percussion instruments like bells and tambourines and triangles. We also could use a cello teacher, a trombone, another flute and a desk lamp. The truth is, we can use just about everything."

Everything remains free, though. Ms. Simo tells of the little girl who wandered in and said she wanted to learn to play the piano.

"What does it cost?" she asked.

"It's free," she was told.

"My mommy's going to like that," she said, smiling.

Suggestions For Summertime Reading Pleasure

Unmistakably Vigorous First Novel Reveals A Clash Of Two Worlds

The Invention of the World. By Jack Hodgins. New York. Harcourt Brace Javonovich, 354 pages, $8.95.

Here's a novel about the brawling, carousing world of Vancouver Island, off the western coast of Canada. It's about the striking contrasts of that large island — the deep, old forests and the logging camps, the towns and fishing hamlets, the year-round people, the summer visitors, the trailer parks and tourists.

It's about a boisterous, crude people trying to figure out who they are while living in the shadow of British colonial tradition, seen in the finicky gentility of Victoria's hotels and gardens, and the imminence of American, seen in the half-welcomed, half-resented tourists from the States.

Past and present clash in this remote island world, too. The past is recalled in the story of Donal Brendan Keneally, who led a pack of Irish villagers to the wilderness and founded a religious community, the Revelations Colony of Truth. He was a spellbinder whose spiritual power had a tang of evil, and the story of his long reign and eventual downfall involves murder and betrayal.

The present belongs to Maggie Kyle, a girl from the logging camps who now runs the Revelations Colony of Truth as a trailer park while she tries to put her life together. Involved in her story is Wade Powers, who rakes in money from the tourists with a "genuine replica" log fortress he built, while he wonders how go to on living in a world in which he has no faith.

Bridging the gap between past and present are some strays and eccentrics Maggie shelters at the Revelations Colony. There's Lily, the daydreaming old woman who was Keneally's last wife. There's Mad Mother Thomas, hammer-wielding old vagabond who remembers Strabo, who signals cars on and off the ferry to the mainland, but whose real life is as local historian, collector of Keneally lore, trying to map a world that existed in one man's mind.

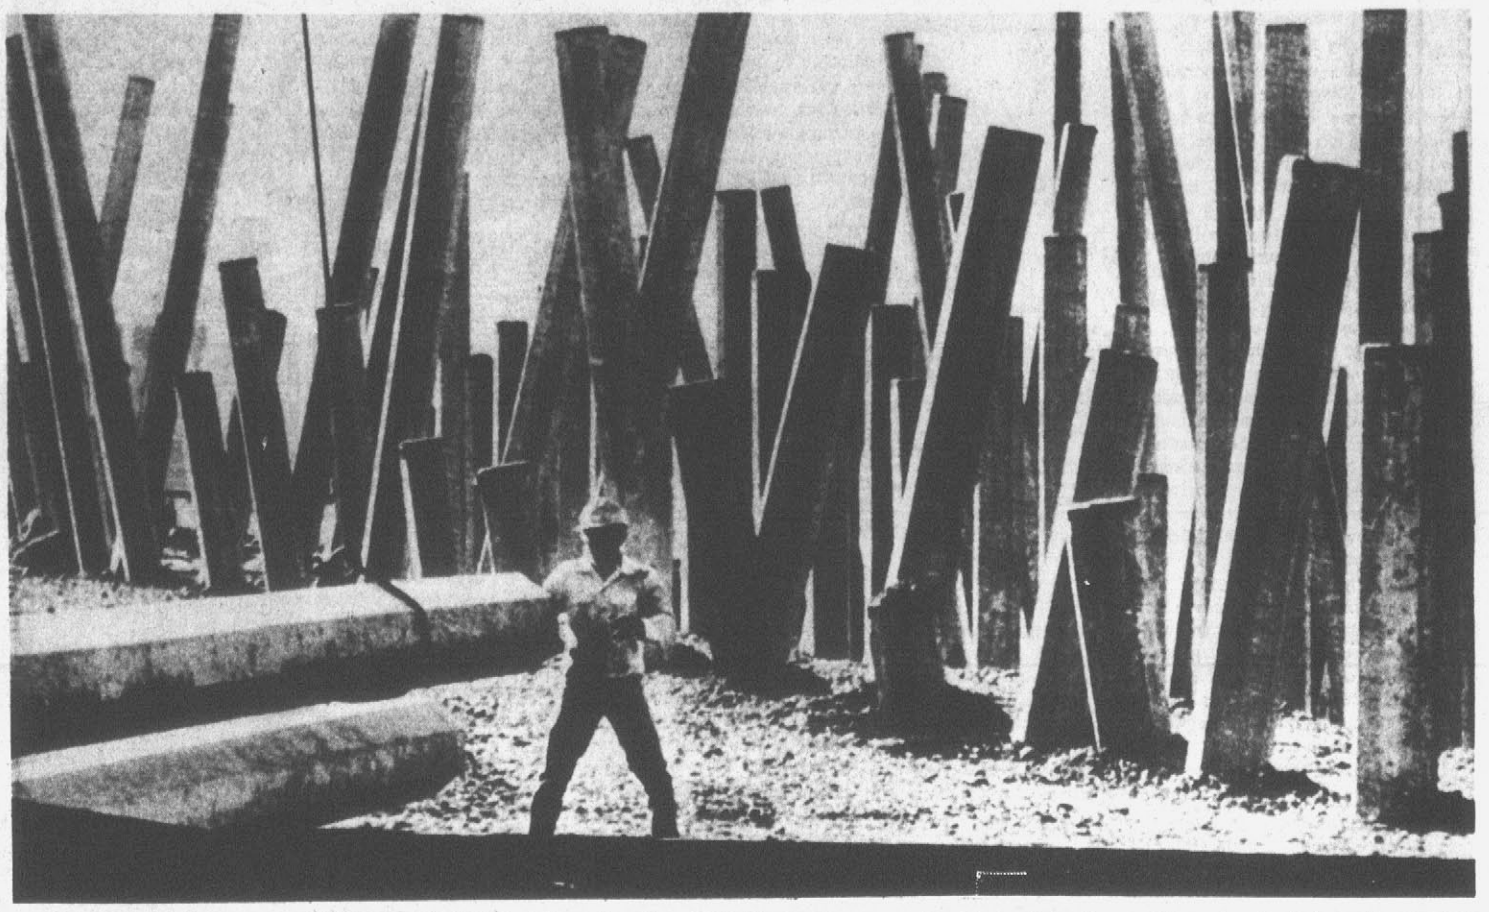

It's an ambitious work of fiction that Jack Hodgins has undertaken here, and the reader has to give him credit for vision if not for style. With its many locales, periods, and narrators, the novel is at times hard to follow and to stay involved in. Some characters never become three-dimensional. There's a hollow extravagance of language in the Keneally sections that sounds like an author trying to overcome faltering perception with sheer loudness of tone.

The vision of what this piece of the world is like, though, is present throughout the book. That's the crucial thing — and probably the basis for the exorbitant praise of Hodgins' work by Canadian writers, in the double shadow of Britain and America, to arrive at a sense and literary statement of their country's uniqueness.

It always seems to come out slightly devalued, like the Canadian dollar. Canadian writers who achieve international reputations, like Margaret Atwood and Mordecai Richler, tend to have international subject matter. But here's a book that shows a life genuinely and uniquely Canadian, and does so in a way that may be flawed but is unmistakably vigorous. Its' Jack Hodgin's first novel, and it may be the first work of a major Canadian writer.

Rewards Of Pier Fishing In North Carolina's Rich Waters

Pier Fishing in North Carolina. By Robert J. Goldstein. Winston-Salem, John F. Blair, Publisher. Illustrated, photographs, also drawings by Bruce Tucker. Paper, large format, 126 pages, $6.95.

Old hands (experts is another word) in fishing from piers along the ocean waters of North Carolina will not have need of this detailed guide. Just about everybody else who wants to know what to catch, when to catch it, and how best to catch it should benefit from a close study of this book.

If the fishing luck of most readers in past fishing efforts are akin to mine — a few paltry catches tossed back quickly before others can see, you'll suffer the same envy I have in viewing the clear photographs of smiling fishermen posing with spectacular catches. Perhaps this book might turn the trick in making it possible for heretofore non-scorers to land a proud catch worthy of being photographed.

Author Goldstein takes a tongue-in-cheek approach about pier fishing being one of the good things in North Carolina. He asks the reader to "read this book in private and don't tell anyone about it," knowing full well it's the type of book novices have been waiting for and will pass among friends until the pages loosen and fall.

He says there's 34 fishing piers along the coast of North Carolina, and pinpoints them in four separate, clearly drawn maps. All 34 are on the ocean side of the ribbon of islands off the mainland. It comes as a surprise to me that the heaviest concentration, 19 of the piers, are located from the New River (Camp Lejeune area) southward to the South Carolina border.

The chapter on individual piers, like all other chapters in the book, gives extensive information. Mail addresses and telephone numbers for each are provided. Specifications on the size and structure of the pier, the type of fish most frequently caught, motel and eating accommodations, and information on tackle shops are provided.

The longest chapter is devoted to "The Individual Fish." Dozens of fish are listed, described. Lowlier, less desirable specimens such as puffers, amberjack, and grunts are given their due right along with the species Goldstein refers to as those that fishermen "reverently and with hushed voice" acclaim as "'sport' fish, whatever that means."

So here's a writer who knows how to elicit the admiration of the class of people who get a thrill in catching anything that bears scales, whatever its desirability or lack of it may be in the eyes of specialist fisherman.

Again, full coverage is the criteria in this chapter. Latin names, the common name as well as lesser known names of fish are given. Feeding habits, migratory and breeding habits are discussed. Line drawings, many of them taken from the work of famed scientists like Linnaeus, Risso, Bloch and Walbaum, make identification simple. For those who devour all possible data available, fish that are commercially important are graphed in annual catches in thousands of pounds.

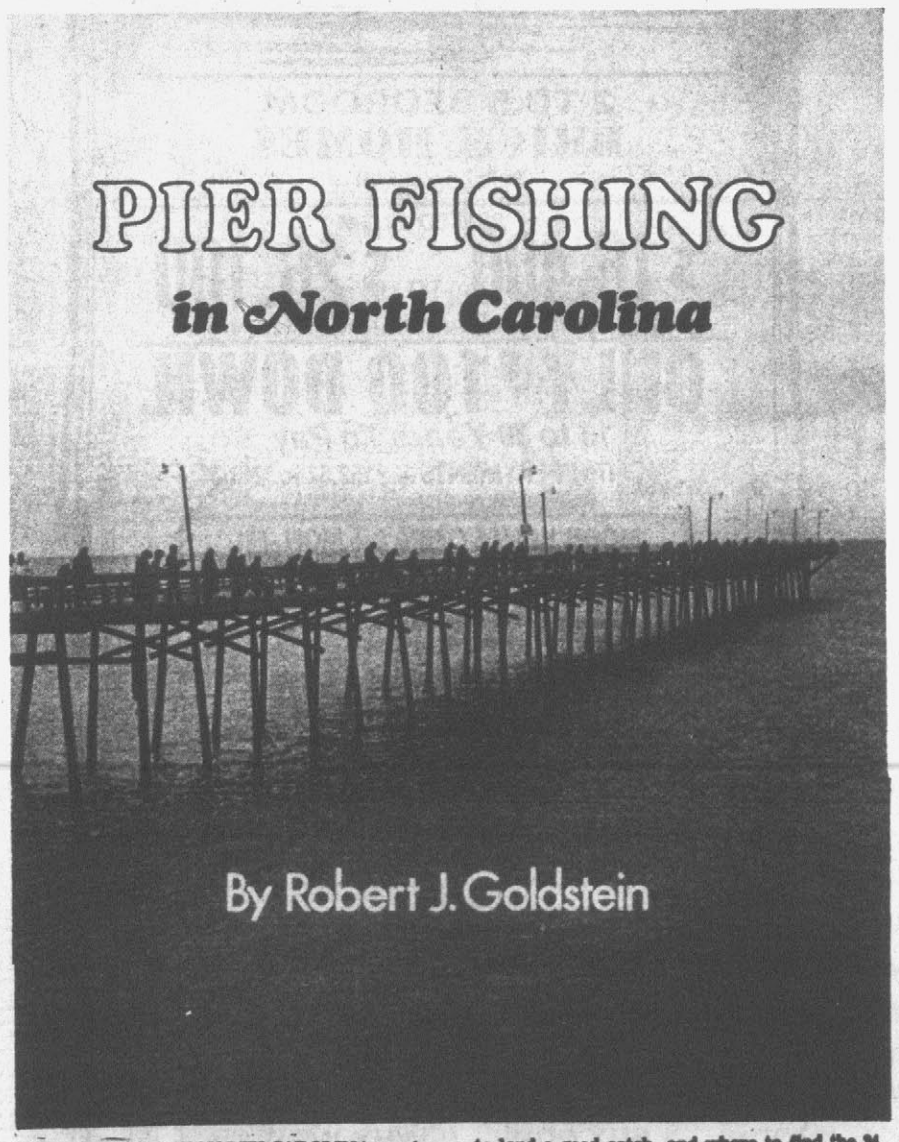

Fishing tackle, baits (live and artificial), and equipment, including all sorts of making-life-easy accessories form the subject of three additional chapters. For those who may be at a total loss on what to do with a rod and reel once it's acquired, Goldstein assures that not having such basic knowledge is nothing to be ashamed of. He then describes the mechanics of casting, along with suggestions for the safety of guarding of the caster and all within his reach.

Brief chapters on the origin of sea life, and one on the best times to fish round out the general contents of this informative book.

Sprinkled throughout the book are recommended reading materials; literature on fishing; and Goldstein concludes with a brief general guide on cooking your catch.

Though a how-to book, "Pier Fishing in North Carolina" is by no means a dull manual. It's the kind of book, a fisherman can turn to with enjoyment in the shade of a pier if he is disappointed with his fishing luck.

Colorful Legends Of Romance, Mystery And History Related In Whedbee's New Collection

Outer Banks Mysteries and Seaside Stories. By Charles Harry Whedbee. Winston-Salem, John F. Blair, Publisher. 141 pages, $5.95.

Greenville's Judge Whedbee's third book on the legends and folk tales of the Outer Banks and coastal North Carolina arrives just in time for summer reading fare.

The title is just a bit misleading. Somewhere along the way the words "tales of romance" should have been included in the title. To a far greater extent than in his two previous books, "Outer Banks Mysteries and Seaside Stories" presents a bouquet of old fashioned love stories, slender tales handed down orally, superbly retold in print by eastern North Carolina's favorite storyteller.

Some are of love fulfilled — most have a poignant theme and tragic endings. The thought occurs that a couple of these tales could be the basis for splendid movies.

The most intriguing and the longest of this genre is "The Indian Gallows." Caught in a timeless triangle of emotions of the heart are three young people — handsome, brave Prince Roanoke, son of King Cashie, monarch of all the Tuscorora tribes and heir apparent to the tribe's chiefship; Elnora Austin, beautiful daughter of a family cast ashore from a shipwreck; and Henry Redwine, Elnora's bethrothed, due to arrive from England at a later date.

Predictably, Prince Roanoke and Elnora, cast in each other's company, develop a mutual fondness The prince professes his love; the girl informs her suitor her heart belongs to another and that she must remain true to her vows.

In a plot worthy of grand opera, Prince Roanoke discovers his father is the instigator of a movement among Tuscorora tribes to massacre all the whites, man, woman and child. Wisely keeping his counsel, Roanoke avows to save his beloved and her family. At the proper moment, he slips away from his father's home on the Chowan River to rescue Elnora. Arriving at last, he is appalled to see the Austin home in flames, and sadly discovers the bodies of Elnora's parents, but no trace of the girl. Instinct leads him to a cave, the scene of many former happy trysts, and there he finds the grief-stricken girl.

Evading his own people, Prince Roanoke manages to take Elnora to safety in the town of Edenton, and there warns the townspeople of impending grave danger. At the same time, a ship from England arrives and one of the passengers is Elnora's intended, Henry Redwine.

Broken-hearted, but still the dutiful son of a king, Prince Roanoke returns to his tribe, aware of the penalty that awaits him for the treason of not joining the massacring forces. King Cashie denounces his son, and himself decrees that his son shall die, not in the honored Indian, method but instead, by the shameful English practice of hanging by the neck.

Legend has it Roanoke was hanged on one of two huge live oaks that had grown entwined together in the dense forest of Colington Island, near the present day Wright Brothers Monument. It was only early in this century that one of the fabled trees died, and romantics cut pieces from the ancient tree as reminders of the tragic history connected with the tree.

It would be good to know what kind of life Elnora had with her Englishman, if she knew of the fate of her Indian suitor, but this is beyond the scope of Whedbee's tale.

Of a different sort is "The Affair at Brownrigg Mill," a love story with a diabolical twist. Tim Farrow, a young widower and operator of a successful mill on Indian Creek north of Edenton, mourned the loss of his young wife and worried about the task of properly rearing his young daughter.

Then one day fate sent a young lady of strange beauty to the scene, a woman with brilliant green eyes and jet black hair, who thrilled Tim with tales of ancient Egypt as if she had lived there in Biblical times. Tim wooed and married this woman (who remains unnamed in the story). For some time, Tim's happiness knew no bounds. Soon, however, strange things began to happen, and suspicions of witchcraft began to be voiced against Tim's bride.

Eventually, distrust and suspicion fed in Tim's soul, as unaccountable destruction began to take place in his mill. Finally, Tim tricked his wife into thinking he was going some place else, and hid himself in the mill. It would be unfair to reveal the outcome of this suspenseful story, but suffice it to say it's a tingling shocker.

Several of the 15 tales in this volume relate legends that have their origins in England and Scotland; traditions or superstitions that traveled across the Atlantic and found new forms in a new home.

The origin of "The Legend of Old Buck" is rooted in Spain. The tradition of welcoming Old Buck is still observed at Rodanthe on January 6, known as Old Christmas. This is a beautiful story, one of exotic background transformed into a colorful rite that still lives today.

Then there's a touching tale of devotion, "The Little White Cloud." Scientists explain the presence of a lingering cloud off the Hatteras coast as a natural phenomena caused by the conjunction of cold Artic and warm Gulf Stream currents meeting and affecting the atmosphere above the meeting point. Whedbee takes the viewpoint, and most of his readers will agree, that the legend of a lovesick Indian girl who waited in vain for the return of her handsome Spanish lover, asking her gods that at her death she become a cloud to keep watch for her lover's return, is a far more attractive explanation than the scientific one.

In emphasizing the romantic angle of many of these stories, this in no way is intended to convey the impression that there is not in Whedbee's collection the usual quota of ghostly apparitions. They're here, and they are each wonderfully exciting tales of mysterious lights and sounds.

The creation theme is strongly evident in a story of desperation that has a happy ending, "The Legend of Mattamuskeet Lake." Following an unprecedented drought in a green, bountiful land, the Mattamuskeet Indians attempted to appease the great spirit with the offering of a huge, fragrant bonfire. According to the ancient legend, the fire got out of control, raged uncontrolled for many moons. In a final effort to calm the anger of the Great Spirit, King Coree summoned chiefs and families. The outcome was a decision to offer a human sacrifice. The lot fell to Prince Pamlico, a noble, brave and much beloved royal prince.

In an early manifestation of women's rights, the prince's sweetheart broke tribal taboos by asking permission to make her own appeal to the Great Spirit. The request was granted, and a miracle occurred. A great rain, unequalled in history, fell and extinguished the fire. The deluge filled burned out pockets beneath the surface of the earth, and thus was formed the present day Lake Mattamuskeet.

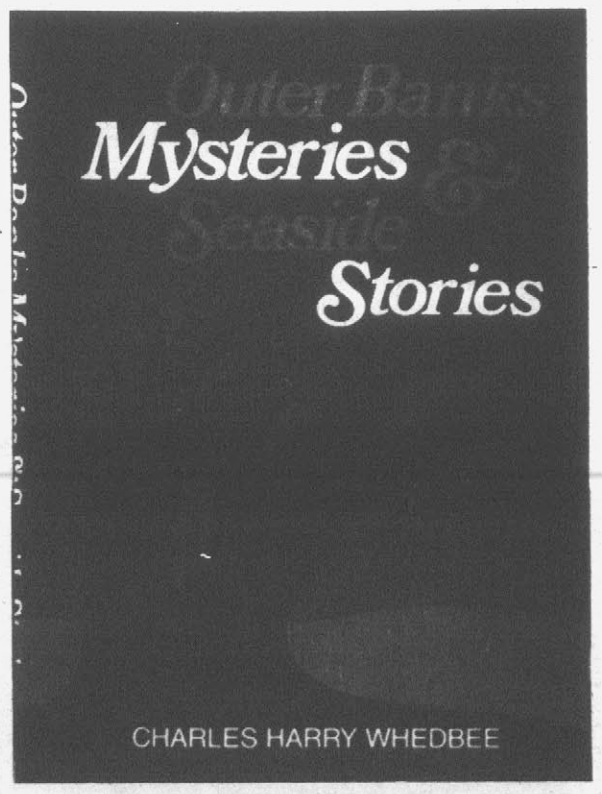

As in his previous books, Whedbee tells his stories in narrative form This style is ideally suited to the material, affording a satisfying directness and compactness.

"Outer Banks Mysteries and Seaside Stories" is the author's finest book, one in which he has perfected the art of blending elements of ancient story telling to bring alive fascinating tales of love, mystery, nature, people and customs — always with the sound of waves and the presence of forests close at hand.

He takes us back to a time when people lived simpler lives in a land whose tranquil beauty was fraught with danger and the excitement of survival.

This is a book to be shared by every member of a family, young and old.

ELEGANT DESIGN SUITS SLOPING LOT

THREE BEDROOM PLAN CALLS FOR WALK-OUT BASEMENT

By Jerry Bishop

Detailed luxury is the keynote of the Weymouth, a one story traditional designed for a back-sloping lot. With features such as the well-designed family kitchen, workshop, and master bedroom deck, the plan shows an attention to detail that results in maximum livability.

The exterior is marked by a hipped roof and bay window, with the design calling for a sloping lot so that the rear decks and walk-out basement are possible. Since the major living and work areas are found on the main level, the basement can be reserved for recreational use and finished as time and budget permit.

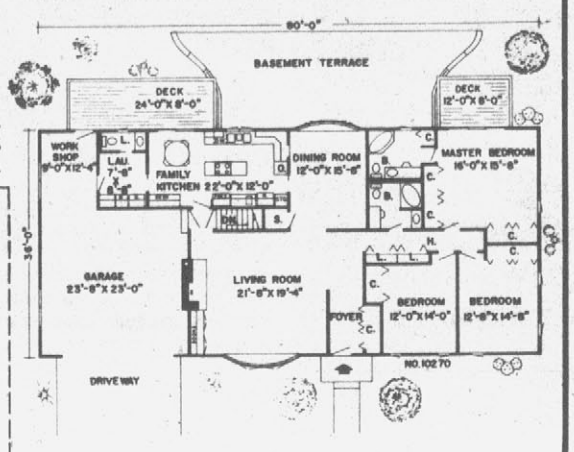

Entry is into an airy foyer, lined with a coat closet, and back the hallway or into the living room at left. One of the highlights of the design, the living room sports a bay window, wood-burning fireplace, and built-in bookshelves. Next to the living room, the bay-windowed dining room is large enough for dinner parties and offers a view of the terrace below.

Painstaking planning results in a kitchen complex suited to family dining and meal planning as well as routine food preparation. Central cook island, planning desk, and storage cabinet are specified, and the dining area opens to the deck via sliding glass doors.

Edging the kitchen is a laundry and half bath, and, beyond that, a sizable workshop with access to the deck.

Bedrooms are clustered in the right wing of the home and sprinkled with touches of luxury. Besides the sliding glass doors to its private deck, the master bedroom displays an unusually large amount of closet space and a private bath with built-in vanity and corner bathtub. Another bath with separate sink and vanity and corner tub serves the front bedrooms.

Planning The Outdoor Barbecue

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

Outdoor barbecues that include children sometimes end up looking like disaster areas, something to keep in mind when you plan one.

If youngsters aren't kept busy, they'll look for excitement on their own. What they find to do might cause a little excitement — and it isn't all fun and games.

At one barbecue five children managed to liven the social endeavor. For example, while the adults were enjoying a pre-barbecue chat, the youngsters were scouting outdoors and indoors for ways to express their individuality.

One 5-year-old boy found a can of green paint and then looked for a place to put it. Why not the white marble bust in the living room?

This bit of mischief was discovered only after his parents took him home.

One little girl decided to try her hand at fishing in the aquarium tank. She caught a few angel fish and put them in her soft drink filled paper cup. This, too, escaped the attention of the host at the time because it was left on a windowsill in the recreation room.

At one barbecue where the men were planning to fish at a nearby stream, disaster struck before you could say, "Go fish." A youngster investigating his father's bag of tackle — he had helped collect the worms — managed to get a fish hook into his thumb.

Parent and son spent hours at the local clinic waiting while similar repairs were made to other unwilling victims of weekend accidents. Among them was a child who had cut his hand badly picking up a broken bottle in the grass — he couldn't tell it was broken; another child was covered with poison ivy, and another had been bitten by a hornet — he had tried to kill it. Also on hand for treatment was a scoutmaster who had gotten in the way of a stray fishing cast made by one of his troop. He had a fishing lure caught in his leg.

To avoid possibilities of accidents, one parent hires a sitter for all the youngsters when a summer party is planned. It gives the parents a breather and the watchful eye of the sitter helps keep the youngsters in line, she explained.

"It is worth whatever it costs and sitters are delighted with the change of pace. They look upon it as a fun assignment. I've had two foolproof outdoor parties and am keeping my fingers crossed."

Nevertheless, all her parties start with an array of medicines within arms reach. She keeps bandages, cotton, antiseptic and other aids near at hand. She also has handy a safe-to-use wasp spray.

Three Govm't Agencies Seek Insulation Action

By MICHAEL J. CONLON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Three government agencies are putting pressure on the segment of the insulation industry that uses urea-formaldehyde foam to do something about consumer complaints about fumes from the product.

The pressure is coming from the Department of Energy, the Consumer Product Safety Commission and the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Among the cases investigated by the CPSC are these:

—After the insulation was installed in one wall at a rented house in Omaha, Neb., a couple and their seven-year-old daughter showed symptoms of formaldehyde poisoning, the commission report says. They were treated at a hospital and released but had to move to a new house because the fume problem was never corrected.

—In Pen Yan, N.Y., after UFF insulation was installed in several walls, a 63-year-old man noticed a smell for several days. He was later hospitalized and continued in the care of a doctor.

—A woman in Tucson, Ariz., developed symptoms of formaldehyde poisoning after living in a newly constructed house where foam was sprayed in the walls and attic. The woman and her husband had to move out of the house, an evaporative-type air conditioning system was later installed in the attic and eventually the foam had to be removed from the attic.

—In San Jose, Calif., "the 46-year-old victim and her husband suffered symptoms of formaldehyde poisoning," the commission said, "and a physician recommended the foam be removed from the home. Holes drilled in the walls for ventilation failed to reduce the fumes. The victims live with the windows open during the day and sleep in trailer at night."

—At Milpitas, Calif., after foam was installed in the walls of a house, two children suffered poisoning. Their parents were unsuccessful in removing the fumes. The family later allowed the mortgage to be foreclosed and gave up the house.

These incidents occurred from 1975 to 1977. In addition, the commission has a long list of newspaper clippings and consumer complaints on the subject. Most symptoms involve eye and respiratory irritation, headaches and nausea.

One official said the agency has 50 complaints on file, many from Connecticut. He said it is not known whether this is representative of the actual situation because, among other things, the agency does not even know how many foam insulation jobs are done annually.

He also said large manufacturers think the problems arose from on-site installation errors. The official said some segments of the industry believe a few low quality operators may be using foam products not really intended for insulation.

The three agencies recently expressed their concern to industry representatives at a meeting in Washington. The agencies have not yet decided if regulations are needed.

The CPSC also is investigating a request that it ban the bottle rocket. This is a type of fireworks that is launched by sticking the end in the neck of a bottle, a piece of pipe or a wooden trough.

The investigation began after the commission received a petition from the North Texas Fire Investigators Association, which represents fire investigators in 33 cities in Texas.

The association told the agency 153 fires linked to bottle rockets have occurred in its area in a four year period. It said the fires usually occurred when the bottle rockets fell on wooden shingle roofs, igniting houses.

The association called the problem a needless hazard and urged the commission to ban the devices outright by amending existing fireworks regulations.

Recycling Industry Under Restriction

NEW YORK (AP) — The negative image of the old-time "junkyard" continues to influence local officials, to the detriment of the nation's recycling efforts, says M.J. Mighdoll, executive vice president of the National Association of Recycling Industries.

"How can effective recycling in the community be accomplished if the industry's facilities are labeled 'junkyards' and its vehicles designated 'junk carts,' subject to fees and restrictions not imposed on other industries?" Mighdoll asks.

"While everyone agrees that recycling is vital to energy and resource conservation and in helping to control mounting solid waste problems, there are state and local laws that actually restrict recycling industry operations," he adds.

The restrictions, he notes, include licensing and zoning regulations which relegate recycling yards and plant to locations far from urban waste sources and the industrial manufacturers that buy the recycled material.

"They also include so-called 'beautification' laws which ignore the fact that recycling operations are as acceptable aesthetically as other industrial facilities," Mighdoll says, adding that "discriminatory" laws and regulations can — and sometimes do — put recycling operations out of business.

Unless there are nearby industrial markets for the metals, paper and other materials that are to be recovered, he points out, these municipal projects can be counterproductive.

"Without industrial buyers for the materials," he explains, "they will end up being dumped right back into the solid waste stream, which is hardly the purpose of setting up a municipal resource recovery project.

"Junk, in the real sense, may be an eyesore, but recyclable resources are not," he adds. "It's about time everyone appreciated the difference."

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Home owners approaching retirement age fall into three categories — those who have no intention of moving from their present abodes, those who plan to spend the rest of their lives in a community with people of their own age, and those who are vehement about not living with other elderly persons.

There have been many surveys about the preferences of senior citizens, a term embraced by some and scorned by others. But the results have been only partly illuminating, perhaps because some of the surveys have been undertaken by groups hopeful that the figures will support their own theories or interests. Since our own questionnaires on various subjects related to housing have been highly productive, let's try one on the matter of retirement housing.

First, the replies should come from persons 55 or over, since few persons give much thought to the practical details of retirement before reaching that age. Secondly, it would be helpful if the answers are accompanied by the ages of the responders, a bit of information that will help to classify the data. Third, state whether you are retired and, if not, about when you plan to do so. Send all replies to Andy Lang, Associated Press Newsfeatures, 50 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10020.

1. Do you expect to seek out a retirement community? If you already are retired and live in such a place, how do you like it?

2. If you plan to remain in your present house, why? If you already are retired and haven't moved, why did you not do so?

3. If you plan to move, but not to a retirement community, why did you reach that decision? If you already are retired to a non-retirement community, how do you like it?

4. Do you expect to retire to a rented apartment, a condominium or to another house? If you already are retired, which of these three did you select and are you satisfied with your decision?

5. What is the most important thing you hope to find in a new location if you do decide to move? Pleasant surroundings? Friendly neighbors? People with the same interests? A wide range of leisure-time activities? Readily accessible medical care? Ease of pedestrian movement? A different climate? If none of those, what?

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

Cars Take Big Share Of Money

PARSIPPANY, N.J. (AP) — Americans spend seven times as much on automobiles as on electricity for their homes.

Government statistics on how people spend their money show that 14.5 percent of income after taxes are paid in the United States is spent on buying, operating and maintaining cars, says William B. Murray, vice president of General Public Utilities Service Corp. On the other hand, he says, the cost of electricity for home use accounts for about two percent after tax income.

LESS TIME

WASHINGTON (AP) — In 1976, the average length of time a patient remained in a community hospital was 7.7 days, compared with 7.9 in 1972, according to the Health Insurance Institute.

Can Remove The Chlorine Taste

LOMBARD, Ill. (UPI) — Chlorinated water can be freed of its "swimming pool" taste in several ways, according to the Water Quality Association. The organization says water treated with chlorine can be rid of the chemical's taste by boiling, by letting it stand after it has been drawn from the tap or with the installation of a carbon filter on drinking water taps. Chilling of water also is recommended.

GARDEN CLINIC

N.C. State Univ. Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. Please give me some tips for trasplanting lady slippers from the woods to my yard. (E.C., Clayton)

A. Be sure to take plenty of native soil with the roots. Add organic mulch. Make sure the plants get sun at least half the day — preferably morning sun. Keep moist and fertilize lightly with one teaspoon of liquid fertilizer in one gallon of water applied over an area four to five foot square. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. My Bell pepper last summer produced many peppers but they were all real small. What could have been wrong? (Mrs. H.F., Concord)

A. I would suspect that you're getting shade from tall trees or buildings. Peppers need full sun to perform best. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Q. How can I get rid of kudzu in my vegetable garden? (R.Y., Siler City)

A.. Spot spray with Roundup or 2,4,5-T as per label directions. Be sure to get it only on those plants you wish to kill. These chemicals will kill most garden plants also. (Carl Blake, extension agronomist)

Q. How do I go about shaping my magnolia tree? The branches are very long and do not fill in the middle of the tree. (L.C., Wilson)

A. It is doubtful that this tree will ever fill in without a severe early spring pruning. Be sure to fertilize well and allow brances to develop near the soil survace. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticulturist)

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A commercial jet crashes short of the Charlotte airport. Scores of passengers are known to be dead in the charred wreckage. But who are they? And how, exactly, did they die?

A middle-aged man becomes ill and dies a day later, before his illness can be diagnosed. A local doctor is routinely assigned to find out what caused the death. He senses something suspicious — but what?

A worker dies while on the job. Was the death job-related — allowing the surviving spouse to collect special insurance benefits?

The answers to those questions — and dozens of others like them each day — come from a network of 625 doctors across North Carolina who comprise the state's medical-examiner system.

The nerve center of that network is a 10th-floor office on the University of North Carolina campus in Chapel Hill where, for upwards of 65 hours a week, Dr. Page Hudson deals with the reality of death.

Hudson's specialty is forensic pathology — a branch of medicine that links the nature of disease with questions of law.

In practice, that means performing autopsies, determining causes of death, assisting law-enforcement agencies and playing a prominent role in thousands of court cases a year, both civil and criminal.

Depressing? Morbid? Not at all — not to Page Hudson.

"Taint depressing at all," Hudson, 47, insisted in a recent interview in his antique-filled office.

"People identify us only with dead bodies. That's their hang-up. If we only dealt with dead bodies, it would be depressing," he said.

"But when there's a dead body, just think of all the other people who are involved," he added. "In a sense, our patients are the living who are connected with a death."

Those are the people Hudson refers to as his "consumers" — relatives of the deceased, law-enforcement agencies, funeral homes, judges, attorneys, insurance companies and the media.

A native of Richmond, Va., Hudson came to Chapel Hill 10 years ago when the medical-examiner system was created by the General Assembly.

Within four years, there was at least one medical examiner in each of North Carolina's 100 counties. Today, there are 550 of them across the state, in addition to 75 regional pathologists. Most of the medical examiners are licensed physicians; in seven small counties, because of a lack of doctors, the coroner acts as medical examiner.

The goal of the system, Hudson said, "is to have medical input into unusual or suspicious deaths," supplanting the role of the county coroners, an elected position generally held by non-doctors.

Of the 45,000 deaths each year in North Carolina, about 10,000 fall under the category of "unusual or suspicious," Hudson said.

That category, outlined by state law and regulations, includes suspected homicides, suicides, accidents, disasters, poisonings, and other violent deaths; deaths in police custody, without medical attendance, or during surgery; and deaths that have no readily identifiable cause or that may indicate a public health hazard.

When such a death occurs, a medical examiner — usually a doctor who agrees to take on the responsbility in addition to his regular practice — is one of the first to hear about it.

The first decision for the medical examiner is "whether or not it's a medical-examiner case," Hudson said.

"If it is, the next decision is whether or not to go to the scene. Either you tell them not to move the body until you get there, or if you're not going, you have the body removed to a funeral home, a morgue, a hospital emergency room or some other appropriate place."

The medical examiner's role often includes talking to the police, the rescue squad, the funeral director, witnesses, or the neighbors or fellow workers of the deceased about the circumstances of the death.

if he feels an autopsy is unwarranted, he must take a blood or urine sample and send it to Chapel Hill.

Based on his investigation and examination of the body, the medical examiner then writes a report on the cause or means of death. On the average, Hudson said, a medical examiner spends two hours on a case. He is paid a standard rate, either $25 or $50 per case.

Some cases are more complicated and time-consuming than others. Those are often the ones that, in Hudson's words, involve "the cops-and-robbers aspect" of the medical examiner's job, and what makes it different from that of a hospital pathologist.

"In medical-examiner cases, there is a much greater emphasis on external evidence, on what's going on outside the body — on clothing, for instance," Hudson said.

"In some cases, like a traffic accident, the cause of death is apparent, but there are traces around the clothing, flecks of paint that may help identify the car in a hit-and-run accident.

"Or, how is it that a person who supposedly was just pulled out of the water has dry clothes? You have to make sure everything fits. Is the wound compatible with the story?

"For example, in a child-abuse death, the parents might say the child fell off the couch. Fine, you say, but how does that give you an old bruise here, a new bruise here, a healing fracture over here? You're looking for medical evidence."

How much the medical examiner lends to the investigation of a case varies, Hudson said. "Sometimes we have a large piece of the whole puzzle, and sometimes only an insignificant piece," he said. "But you hear fairly frequently on an individual level that you 'really helped out on this case.'"

Of the 10,000 medical-examiner cases a year, about 4,000 involve an autopsy, Hudson said. Most are performed by the regional pathologists, but about 800 to 900 come to the medical examiner's office in Chapel Hill, either because the area where the death occurred has no pathologist or because of "unusual, unpleasant or otherwise remarkable cases that need our experience," Hudson said.

Many of the autopsies performed in Chapel Hill involve bodies that are partially decomposed or skeletal remains, he said. In a number of those cases, it is the pathologist's job to identify the body.

Although the circumstances of the death may be different, and the postmortem examination may be more thorough, the autopsies performed by Hudson and his staff of three pathologists generally follow the same standard procedure as any autopsy.

The pathologist makes a Y-shaped incision on the body to allow "minimum cutting and maximum viewing" of the internal organs, he explained. Another incision is made on the head, the scalp is rolled back, the top of the skull is removed and the brain is examined.

All the major organs are removed from the body. In most cases, Hudson said, "it's standard not to put them back. It makes it difficult in embalming." Some organs are kept for further examination; others are needed only until a culture can be made.

Contrary to the fears of some families, Hudson said, the autopsy procedure does not make it difficult to present the body at a funeral. The organs that are removed are replaced with packing material. The body is usually ready to be returned to a funeral home within two hours, Hudson said.

The medical investigation, however, has just begun. A team of toxicologists then comes into play, testing the samples taken from various organs to determine such things as drug and alcohol content.

And within walking distance of Hudson's office in the North Carolina Memorial Hospital complex are forensic dentists, physical anthropologists and other specialists who can be called upon if needed in a specific case.

One autopsy can lead to others, if there's an indication that certain deaths may be related. One such case started with a phone call to Hudson last February from a medical examiner in Robeson County.

Stuart Taylor, 53, became ill Feb. 2 with an apparent intestinal ailment. He was treated and released that day at a Lumberton hospital. The next day, after returning to the hospital, Taylor died before his illness could be diagnosed.

The medical examiner assigned to the case called Chapel Hill to ask for advice — Hudson said he gets a dozen such phone calls a day — and when he described the circumstances of the death, Hudson had a ready response.

Did anyone check for arsenic?

The body was brought to Chapel Hill, where an autopsy showed that Taylor, indeed, had traces of arsenic in his liver.

Taylor's 45-year-old fiancee, Velma Barfield, was subsequently charged with Taylor's murder, and five other bodies — including those of Mrs. Barfield's mother and two deceased husbands — were exhumed for autopsies. The five had died in similar circumstances.

Hudson performed the autopsies in those cases, although he will not comment publicly on what was found. Law-enforcement agencies are continuing the investigation. Mrs. Barfield's trial is pending.

Hudson said the case was "classic, just classic," noting that deaths from arsenic poisoning are found almost exclusively in the southeastern states. "In this job, you see it enough that it's in the front of your mind when you see deaths that follow nausea, vomiting. I asked him (the Robeson medical examiner), 'Who gave him arsenic?'"

Medical examiners are often key witnesses in trials. Hudson said each of the pathologists in his office appear in court 20 to 25 times a year — not only in criminal cases, but in civil matters as well.

He pointed out, for example, that an autopsy report can be crucial to a spouses trying to collect insurance benefits after a job-related death, or to families seeking damages in a wrongful-death suit.

That has been one of the uses of the autopsies on victims of the crash and explosion of Eastern Airlines Flight 212 on Sept. 11, 1974, three miles south of Douglas Municipal Airport in Charlotte.

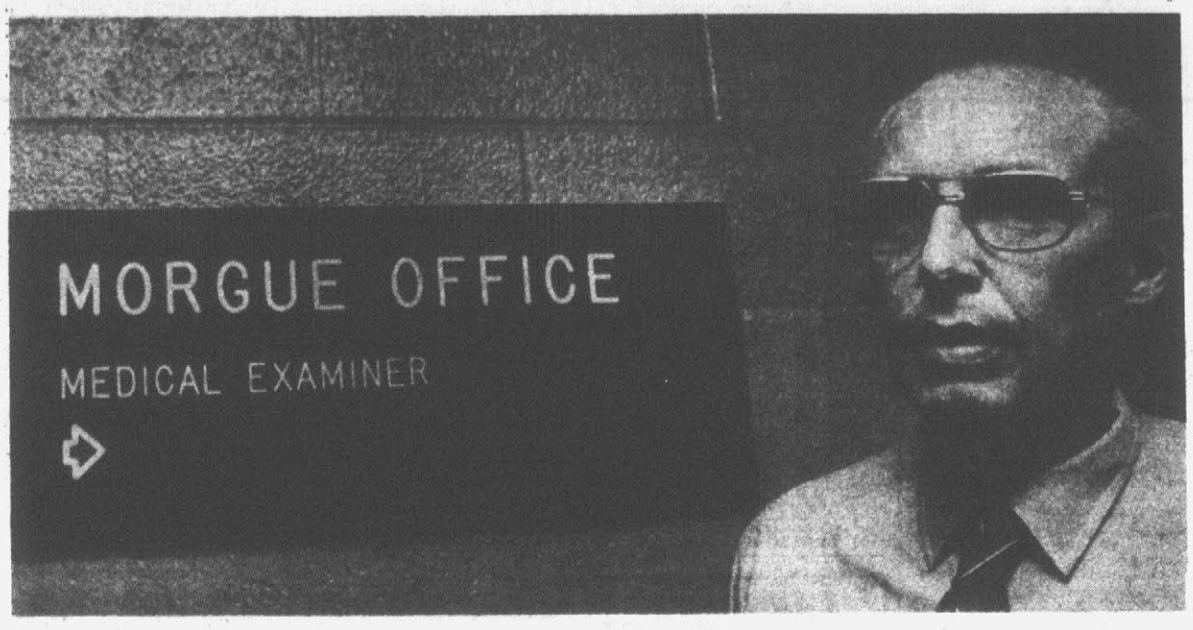

At last count, 78 lawsuits had been filed as a result of the crash, which killed 72 of the 82 persons aboard.

Hudson and three pathologists from Chapel Hill, in addition to the Mecklenburg County medical examiner, were at the scene within hours.

"It might occur to some people that we've got a passenger list and we know there's a plane crash, so what's the problem?" Hudson said. "But almost invariably there's someone on the passenger list who's not on the flight, or vice-versa."

Identifying the victims is largely up to the medical examiners, and they must get the bodies back to the families of the victims. At the Charlotte crash, that process took more than four days. And even with a plane crash, the cause of death must be carefully determined.

"In this particular case, only one-third of the victims died from the trauma of the crash; two-thirds died from burns and carbon monoxide from the fire," Hudson recalled. "Some were conscious for a while (before dying). That can be an important element in a civil suit — whether or not there is pain and conscious suffering. It could make a difference in the amount of the settlement."

SYSTEM ORGANIZER — State Medical Examiner Dr. Page Hudson is architect of a statewide network of 550 county medical examiners and 75 regional pathologists which have largely replaced the old coroner system which was staffed by elected officials, most of whom weren't doctors. (AP Laserphoto)

WEST GERMAN CONSORTIUM PULLS OFF $30 MILLION COUP — These treasures from the Robert von Hirsch collection were among those snatched from competitors by a West German consortium recently at Sotheby Parke Bernet's auction house in London. They include, top left, an enamel arm ornament thought to be from coronation vestments of Holy Roman Emperor Frederick Barbarossa; an enamelled gilt medallion attributed to Godefroid De Claire depicting an angel; and at bottom, an Albrecht Durer watercolor. The items accounted for $5.42 million of the almost $30 million bid by the consortium. (AP Laserphoto)

St. Thomas Choir Is Musical Ambassador For East Germany

By DETLEF RUDEL

LEIPZIG, East Germany (AP) — The 750-year-old St. Thomas choir made famous by Johann Sebastian Bach is flourishing under Communist rule and singing great church works as a musical ambassador for East Germany.

When Bach was cantor, or choir leader, of Leipzig's St. Thomas church school, the underpaid, disgruntled composer complained that many of his boy choristers were unfit to sing.

"Of the 54 members, 17 are usable, 20 could be usable later and 17 are incapable," he wrote in a 1730 letter to Leipzig city fathers.

Professor Hans-Joachim Rotzsch, 49, the 15th St. Thomas cantor to hold the city-paid position since Bach, has few of his illustrious predecessor's worries.

St. Thomas choir today wins rave reviews in frequent tours of Soviet bloc and Western countries including Japan, Belgium, Italy, Latin America and West Germany.

Acclaimed as being among the world's best exponents of the Bach choral tradition, the boy singers have been described in Western newspapers as East Germany's "ambassadors in concert dress."

The 92 choristers, age 9 to 18, are a hand-picked, professionally trained elite of East Germany's finest young voices whose grueling daily school routine ends just before dinner with three hours of choir and instrumental practice.

"The boys really don't have an easy life," Rotzsch said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Yet, East German boys are so keen to join the choir that the school is able to select only the very best, he said.

There were 140 applicants for 13 vacancies last year and only seven new choristers were selected from among 80 applicants this year.

Teachers throughout East Germany keep their eyes open for possible St. Thomas choristers, and any boy with enough talent can join the choir school.

But it tries to limit its intake to the Leipzig area because there is too little free time to allow boys from more remote parts of the country to travel home over weekends, Rotzsch said.

Bach was the most famous in a long line of St. Thomas cantors. The choir goes back to the 13th century, and is believed to have been formed when the original St. Thomas monastery was founded in 1212.

Bach's 27 years in Leipzig, until his death in 1750, were unhappy, marked by poor pay and constant friction with both his pupils and city employers.

Yet the choir gave the first performances of some of Bach's great works, including the St. John and St. Matthew Passions, the six cantatas forming the Christmas Oratorio and a host of other cantatas and church motets.

A key reason for the continuing prestige of the St. Thomas choir is that it has remained true to its proud musical traditions, resisting even Nazi-era attempts to turn it into a Third Reich propaganda instrument, said Rotzsch.

"Our culture minister has made me personally responsible for seeing that it remains that way," he said.

The present-day St. Thomas cantor says he is careful not to let the dust gather on his choir's laurels — especially since he feels that Bach's music remains very much alive more than three centuries after his death.

"It is no museum. Notes must be filled with life," said Rotzsch.

"We aren't just making music for intellectuals, but for all people, for the people of today."

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

How-to-books covering practically every subject of interest are available to library users. Three books recently added to the collection relate to subjects that are major concerns of numerous individuals.

Vicki Lansky, a mother concerned about the magical appeal of Continuously Advertised Nutritionally Deficient Yummies, has written a how-to-cookbook called THE TAMING OF THE C.A.N.D.Y. MONSTER. This book focuses on getting children to eat less sugary, salty junk foods...without sacrificing convenience or good taste. It also emphasizes the fact that nutrition is a matter of parenting since are the shoppers and providers. Features in the book include ideas for brown-bagging it to school, tasty altervatives to junk-food snacks, delicious...(more) nutritious desserts, food selections for sitters, tips on eating en route, and a selective guide for parents to use while grocery shopping. Another important aspect of Mrs. Lansky's book is her introduction on food additives which she indicates as her reason for selecting the recipes and topics included in her book. The new generation of parents whose "nurtition—conciousness" has been raised, but who still find the recipes in this book worthwhile.

HOW NOT TO SPLIT UP by Jane Appleton and William Appleton, M.D., is a unique self-help book for couples involved in a long-term relationship which is slightly rocky. Full of case histories, based on Dr. Appleton's clinical experience, and practical advice from the Appletons' own happy marriage, this book goes totally against the poupiar grain by advocating a marital (re) union rather than split. Chapters covering boredom, leisure time, fights, children, money, sex and careers explore the universal problems and great pleasures of a long-term relationship. A final chapter on "Making It" offers questions and answers which help couples evaluate and improve their marriages. The Appletons believe that a good union can mean warmth, dignity, encouragement, comfort, and fun. Their book can show how to change a relationship and make it better without changing partners.

Dr. Thomas Gordon, one of today's most influential psychologists and author of the bestseller P.E.T.—PARENT EFFECTIVENESS TRAINING, now offers to the lay public a comprehensive system of leadership tools, and shows, step by step how leaders can apply them with all kinds of groups. L.E.T.—LEADER EFFECTIVENESS TRAINING has already been used by many companies and groups, and like P.E.T., it works. Effective leaders need problem-solving methods, communication skills, and no-lose techniques for resolving conflicts. How to lead so that he will get the best results possible is the concern of anyone who finds himself in charge of a committee, an office, a company, an event in a club, a work group in a manufacturing plant or anywhere else. Leaders are made, not born. L.E.T.—LEADER EFFECTIVENESS TRAINING is the best guide available to leaders for training in how to motivate group members to pitch in and want to give their best; how to reduce resistance to change; how to tap hidden talent; and how to make people feel good about themselves, about their task and about you.

One of the finest examples of superb reproduction of color photography is to be found in the first issue of an annual survey of this country's leading visual artists: "American Showcase" — Photography and Illustration."

Co-publishers Tennyson Schad and Ira Shapiro have produced an arresting volume of 730 photographs and illustrations, of which 672 are in color, displayed on large-format pages.

The idea, conceived more than a year ago, was to offer a current source book of contemporary photography for reference by art directors, graphic designers, publishers, schools, libraries and students. The realization was accomplished with the cooperation of 140 photographers and 24 artists whose work is reproduced on one or two pages. They are listed by geographic regions and by their specialties.

The book's eye-catching format was designed by Herb Lubalin, creative designer of international repute and recently elected to the Art Directors Club Hall of Fame. The book, printed in Verona, Italy, comes in hard and soft cover editions.

American Showcase's concept had the cooperation of ASMP, the society for photographers in communications, as an effective promotional medium for photographers. The book will be in the hands of decision makers in advertising agencies, corporations and publishing companies. It includes a complete listing of ASMP's national membership.

In addition, more than a dozen top executives in communications offer illuminating — and sometimes controversial — points of view on the subject of visual representation. Here are some of the viewpoints:

"Today's classic images are tomorrow's cliches," says co-publisher Schad. "Artistic excellence in the graphic arts business demands a constant search for new answers to old visual problems. Originality and invention are sacrificed too often for what has worked in the past."

Work that is merely good — is not good enough, according to George Lois, an agency president. "Advertising should aim to be seemingly outrageous," he says. "I've had to shove, push, cajole, persuade, exaggerate, manipulate, be obnoxious — but always sell. My concern is with creating images that catch people's eyes, penetrate their minds, warm their hearts, and cause them to act."

Robert Miles Runyan, a graphic designer noted for his brilliant and flamboyant approach, chose photography as his medium of communication in producing a dramatic and imaginative series of annual reports.

"Photographs can combine visual impact with acceptance and credibility," he reports. "They can be realistic, impressionistic or abstract and can become part of the graphic design. The annual reports created a very special breed of photographers, programmed to function on many special levels.

"Playing back the data in his memory bank," Runyon added, "he can produce photographs that turn ordinary subjects into exciting images. He crawls into pipes and shoots out at a hard-hat looking in the open end. He makes people in the 'clean room' look like visitors from outer space.

"We provide our new breed photographer with an exciting creative working environment that makes him an effective partner in the design process. If you discover such a photographer, pay him well and love him," Runyan concluded. "Or send him to me."

Sheldon Seidler, citing his own preferences, is not interested in general portfolios. He recommends that photographers show specialized work that is handled superbly and innovatively. He believes most assignments don't work out because of miscommunication, not talent. The remedy for that is for a photographer to listen and thoroughly understand instructions and to ask the right questions in advance.

"I choose to work with those photographers," Seidler adds, "whom I think have the flexibility and enthusiasm to rise above the difficulties that all too often crop up on a project."

Stavros Cosmopulos notes that complex problems arise in this era of mass communication. "By and large," he says, "those problems can be overcome by sticking to one basic guideline: Keep it simple! Your message will never penetrate if it has too many points. Make one point and it surely will penetrate."

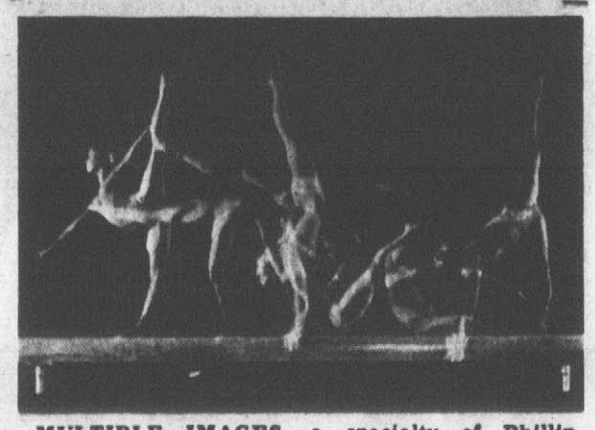

The statement from Reva Korda stresses three rules:

1. Open your ears and listen. Use words that real people use with the directness of real speech — not advertising jargon.

2. Open your eyes and look. Make a photograph that demands attention and that people will remember.

3. Open your heart. Deal with honest emotion and you will get maximum impact.

"American Showcase" is a source book in which the photographs can be studied again and again and there will be countless new discoveries with each scrutiny. It can be a home study course in how top flight photographers have solved innumerable creative problems and can guide you in solving yours. For information on its availability in your area, write: American Showcase, Box 729, Ansonia Station, New York, N.Y. 10023.

MULTIPLE IMAGES, a specialty of Phillip Leonian of New York City, occupy two pages in American Showcase, the new annual of top photographic talent. They also rated an exhibition at Neikrug Galleries in New York's mid-Manhattan in a display entitled, "The Walking Show."

Local Artists Chosen For SECCA Exhibition

WINSTON-SALEM — Two Greenville artists have had work selected for inclusion in the 46th Southeastern Competition: Drawing, Photography, Printmaking, being shown in the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art (SECCA) during July and August.

Roxanne Reep and Donald Sexauer are the two Greenville artists who are among 79 artists in the 11 state southeastern area with work chosen to be exhibited. A total of 363 artists submitted 1,235 entries. From this number, Gene Thornton, photography critic for the "New York Times" and contributing editor of "Art News" selected the 95 works to be seen in the show.

Included in the show will be works designated by Thornton and R. J. Reynolds Industries as Purchase Award winners.

The show will be open to the public from July 8 and remain on view through August 23.

BITTER CREEK . . . Shown here are four of the five members of Bitter Creek, one of two groups to be performing in today's Sunday in the Park. Also on hand will be members of the Green Grass Cloggers. The concert is free and begins at 7 p.m.

Festive Events Slated For July 4 Celebration

The traditional Fourth of July celebrations will be held again in the downtown area along Reade Street in the Third and Fourth Street areas. Sponsored by the Greenville Jaycees, this is the seventh consecutive year of an event that was inaugurated in the summer of 1972.

Several new games and competitions are being added this year. Among events to be staged are a canoe race from Falkland to the Greenville Town Common, sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department; a tug-of-war contest; hoola hoop contest; a model airplane demonstration; a skateboard obstacle course; a sack-race push-up contest; tobacco spitting contest; rolling pin throw, bubble gum blowing contest; egg toss, and many other competitions to be open to all eligible members of the public.

Displays will be set up at various locations on the grounds, highlighting aspects of Greenville and Pitt County's heritage.

Two of the major attractions, as in years past, will be the early evening fireworks display and a big street dance.

The celebration is made possible by the assistance of Greenville merchants and businessmen, interested citizens, East Carolina University, and the governments of the City of Greenville and Pitt County.

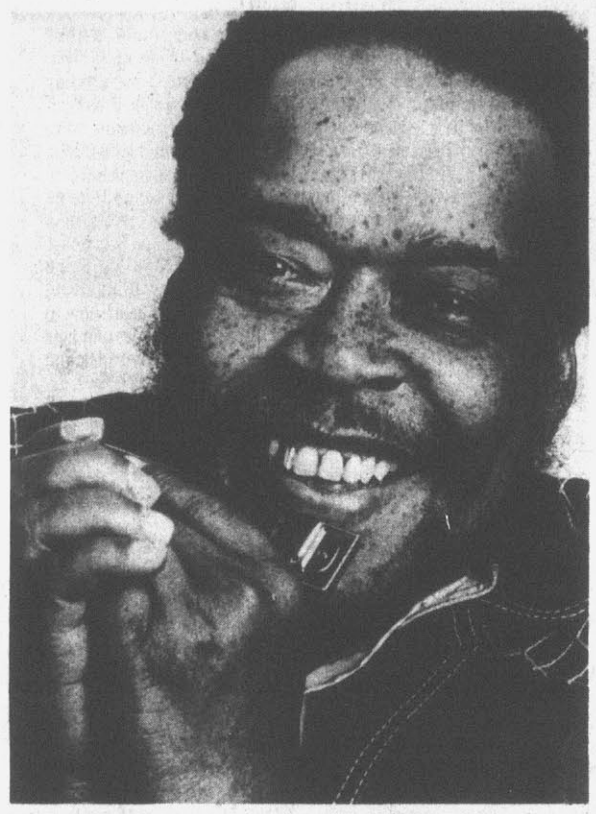

Bluesman Cotton Concert Saturday

Bluesman James Cotton, who originally hails from West Helena, Arkansas, is to perform in Greenville at 9 p.m. Saturday, July 8 at the Roxy Music Arts and Crafts Center, 629 Albemarle Street.

Tickets are priced at $5 when reserved; $6 at the door; and $4 to Roxy members. Ticket information and reservations can be made by calling 752-7483.

In his early career, Cotton perfected his music in sessions in Memphis with Sonny Boy Williamson and B. B. King — then went on to Chicago where he appeard on a steady basis with Muddy Waters before forming his own band.

Cotton is noted for his simple, direct emotional approach to singing the blues — sometimes in songs about being alone, at other times in songs about life gone bad, or in music that shouts about love. He is by turn a singer and a player of a favorite southern instrument, the harmonica.

JAMES COTTON . . . blues singer and harmonica player, will be in concert at 9 p.m. Saturday, July 9 at Roxy Music Arts and Crafts Center. Tickets are $5 in advance, $6 at the door.

Two Local Groups To Perform Today

Two local groups of young music makers, The Bitter Creek and Greenville's Green Grass Cloggers, are headliners for today's Sunday in the Park event east of Reade Street.

The Bitter Creek, who have played at numerous area and regional festivals, and who recently took a second place award at a competition held in Angier, is comprised of five instrumentalists, one of whom doubles as vocalist.

Members of Bitter Creek are Lane Hollis, banjo, Greenville; Frankie Harrison, Williamston, mandolin; Ralph Lilly, bass player, New Bern; Mahlen Webb, guitar and vocalist, Grifton; and John Worthington, lead guitar, Simpson.

Today's Green Grass Cloggers are drawn from a second contingent of performers from this group who has won numerous performance awards and played at events big and little up and down the east coast.

Just now, another contingent is on a national tour, and will be reporting back to Greenville soon.

Beginning time for today's concert by Bitter Creek and the Green Grass Cloggers is 7 p.m. Patrons are encouraged to bring along accessories for their comfort while sitting on the ground for the concert. The event is without charge.

Sunday in the Park is sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, under the direction of Stuart Aronson.

Distefano Composer Of Music For Bath Drama

The musical setting for North Carolina's newest — and third outdoor drama in the eastern part of the state, Bath's "Blackbeard: Knight of the Black Flag," is the work of a professor in the School of Music, East Carolina University.

Dr. Joseph Distefano is the composer of the setting which includes an overture, entracte, and various songs and dances in a score written for a symphonic orchestra, chorus, and vocal soloists.

Distefano's score, according to Stuart Aronson, playwright and director of "Blackbeard," "serves to provide added expression, movement, and continuity to the drama.

"The musical setting and the song and dance numbers are a welcomed addition to the play which alone make it worth seeing again for those who saw it last year during its premiere season," Aronson added.

Aronson is also an East Carolina University faculty member, with the Department of Continuing Education.

Distefano's music for the play was recorded locally by musicians from Greenville, with members of the Greenville Community Chorus assisting in the performance.

"Blackbeard: Knight of the Black Flag," is presented each Friday, Saturday and Sunday evening through August in the amphitheater on the river in the historic town of Bath, 45 miles from Greenville.

Firework Fantasy At The Lost Colony

MANTEO — A special attraction will be featured at the 4th of July performance of "The Lost Colony" on Roanoke Island.

At the end of the drama's first act, a display of fireworks will be set off to celebrate the departure of the ships carrying Sir Walter Raleigh's 115 English colonists to Roanoke Island in the new world. The colonists set sail from Plymouth, England in May, 1587 on a voyage that lasted just ten days short of three months, arriving on the North Carolina coast in July, 1587.

Master Carpenter and Chief Pyrotechnician Le Hook is in charge of the fireworks display — which will include blazing versions of humming birds, hissing serpents, fiery snowstorms, marsh fires and pryotechnical cuttlefish.

Tickets for "Lost Colony" performances can be reserved by calling 473-3414 or by writing to: The Lost Colony, Box 40, Manteo, N. C. 27954.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Detecting 'Small' Heart Attacks

I had a routine examination when I applied for insurance. The doctor insisted that I had a scar on my heart from a previous heart attack. I checked with my personal physician, and nothing in his records shows that I ever had a heart attack. I don't recall any symptoms. How do you explain this? — Mr. T.M., Pa.

Dear Mr. M.:

Some people, especially those with a high tolerance for pain, may sometimes pay little or no attention to a transient sense of discomfort. An episode of mild chest pain may often be "self-explained" as indigestion, and then totally forgotten, and never again recalled.

It is only later that changes in the electrocardiogram are picked up during an incidental visit to the doctor. The keen observer picks up these slight changes and attributes them to an overlooked small, but definite, heart attack.

We must all learn that even minor episodes of pain or spasm should be explained by the doctor, rather than causally passed off. Certainly not every transient discomfort of heartburn or indigestion should be labeled as a possible heart attack. Yet it is wise for everyone past the age of 40 to give more thought to the possibility that indigestion is not the only explanation for an episode of chest pain.

Dr. Michael Wolk, a cardiologist in New York City, said, "By the early recognition of 'small' heart attacks, there is a greater chance of preventing severe ones. It is then that a reorientation of patterns of living, avoidance of stress, elimination of tobacco and weight reduction can actually convert a small heart attack into an eventual life-saving experience."

You once wrote that there is almost an epidemic of syphilis among young people. If syphilis is neglected, what can it do to the body? Please do not print my state. — Mr. X.

Dear Mr. X.:

I know by your letter that you are a senior in high school. Syphilis does, indeed, exist in epidemic form and often destroys the lives of many young men and women. Promiscuity and liberalization of sex attitudes are in a great measure responsible for the devastation caused by this and other venereal diseases.

Syphilis can affect every organ of the body when it is untreated. In fact, this disease can mimic almost every other disease known to man. It is accepted by doctors that to know all about syphilis is to know all about the spectrum of medicine.

Syphilis can be best controlled in its early stage. When neglected, the second and third stages can affect the brain, the spinal cord, the heart, the liver and, in fact, every organ of the body.

Educational campaigns will go on relentlessly in the hope that young people will be spared the destruction of their lives by untreated venereal disease.

Priority Is Challenged

BOSTON (AP) — A regional United Methodist plan to get more blacks in the ministry was challenged after a ministerial candidate was rejected for ordination because he's white, but the church is sticking to its plan.

It had been challenged by a local congregation after its pastor's son, a white male ministerial candidate, was refused ordination because of the plan's provisions giving women and minority persons "priority over white males" until a set balance is achieved.

At present, the church's Southern New England Conference has 201 clergy, only 9, or 3.9 percent, of racial minorities. The set goal is 10 percent.

At a meeting on the matter, opponents argued no promising candidate should be passed over but supporters of the plan said the conference has an oversupply of clergy, and the need is not for more of them but for a more racially inclusive ministry.

The conference voted overwhelming to continue the plan. Names of those involved in the challenge to it--the congregation and the rejected ministerial candidate--were not disclosed, but officials said the candidate has since been ordained in another conference.

TO PAY DAMAGES

MONTREAL (AP) — The Quebec Superior Court ordered Dr. Antonio Moreau to pay $2,400 damages to Germain Cataford because a sterilization operation he performed on her did not prevent her having her 11th child.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: By your own ingenuity and cleverness you will be able to take a tense situation and work out such an annoyance so that it is resolved to your benefit and satisfaction. Your mind is alert and active and you need only to use your best intelligence to make this a memorable time.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Use utmost care in any kind of motion. Think out how to solve problems wisely. Be sure to stick to facts in any selling you want to do.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Study money matters well and be sure of what you are doing, otherwise you get into further trouble. Plan repairs that need to be made and then get to work on them.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You can handle that personal problem well now. Enjoy the social in the evening.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You think there is a limitation where reaching some personal aim is concerned, but actually all is going well for you. Be happy with those you love.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You can reach that personal aim best in the early part of the afternoon. A pal may be disappointing, but you can still have a delightful evening. Seek out trusted friends for best results.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be careful you take care of civic matters precisely and add to present prestige. Give more attention to current work you have to do.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Look into new and more lucrative outlets and put aside the one that has reached an impasse. A new contact you have made can be helpful and trusted now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Study your responsibilities well and then handle them meticulously. A tension you are under can work out to your benefit if you rid yourself of it quickly. Go over your bills for possible errors.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Try to reconcile with one who has opposed you in the past, since it is nothing serious. Civic matters should be handled efficiently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Use a different method at your regular work and get it done more efficiently and profitably. Convince a co-worker that it is best to do so. Think along more logical lines.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Go ahead with recreational plans even though you may run up against a small snag. Find a better way to make use of your talents and faculties. Get your ideas across to others.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Try to have more harmony at home by using more tact and good sense there. Get everything in good order and then entertain good friends there. Impress them with your geniality.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be good at meeting emergencies, and should have as fine an education as you can provide. Find the forte here early and concentrate on that.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, JULY 3, 1978

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Use your charm and be very cagey about making any commitments today. There is likely to be some confusion and deception present. Double-check conditions before making any changes.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You have to exercise much care in motion as well as in conversing with others if you want to avoid trouble at this time.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You have to be more careful than ever in handling financial affairs now, otherwise you could get deeper into debt.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) The present situation is not to your liking but be patient and all works out to your benefit later. Forget the social for now.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You must use diplomacy and tact in handling current affairs or you could get into trouble. Take good care of your health.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Forget a recreational plan for the time being. Give more attention to financial affairs. Use your wits when dealing with others.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) If you state your aims to a higher-up, you will get excellent results. Listen to what a trusted adviser tells you, but use your own judgment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You may want to run away from your obligations but it is better for you in the long run that you meet them boldly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You may think the one you love is not attentive but it's only because this person is now preoccupied with other matters.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be sure not to do anything that could irk an associate or it could prove costly. Avoid the limelight for now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Consider all the work you have to do and make sure you use the best method. Be careful of your reputation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Cooperate more with the ideas of family members and have increased harmony at home. Strive for happiness.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Do nothing to disturb a regular routine or you could regret it later. Search for the new appliances that could improve your work.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be good at solving difficult problems and should be given a fine education that could develop this talent. Teach to complete whatever task that has been started since there is a tendency here to jump from one thing to another.

Need Patience In Winemaking

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — "A little something" is what makes it all worthwhile, according to Jim Hartman, who calls himself "The Little Old Wine Maker."

Commercial wine producers are limited to largely standard formulas, he said, but the amateur can add that "little something" to make burgundy sweeter, for example.

Actually Hartman doesn't make or sell wine at the two Little Wine Maker shops he operates here. He sells all of the implements necessary in the art of wine making and estimates that he's had 6,000 customers in his four years in business.

He puts his customers in three categories: people with raw fruit that might spoil available; connoisseurs who can't afford to buy bottled wines that may be marked up as much as 10 times in a store; and the individual who wants a hobby.

Hartman says there is no limit to the amount of experimentation in making wines.

Equipment needed for making wine at home, says Hartman, is a 13-gallon primary fermenter, plastic jug, a 1-to 5-gallon glass jug, a siphon, a waterlock and 25 standard bottles. The investment is about $50.

Hartman is always on hand to dispense advice. Sometimes he dresses up in a costume, lederhosen and all, and gives German-dialect demonstrations in the gazebo of a shopping center where one of his shops is located.

His principal advice is patience; few people are aware of the time element in making wine, Hartman said. "Otherwise it's a super-simple process that requires no technical skill, allowing the wine to be made by the Good Lord," he explained.

Hartman also offers courses held twice a year at his shops. They run for seven weeks with two-hour meetings once each week. He demonstrates certain processes such as sugar, alcohol and acid balance and then sends the students home to practice. The course costs $30.

The Little Wine Maker, which Hartman terms a "small dollar business," is not Hartman's sole venture. He is principal owner of a window-glass and screen repair business and a floor-covering operation.

In addition, Hartman, 44, acts and sings and appears in local musical productions.

He estimates he spends 60 percent of his time on the Little Wine Maker ventures, up to 20 percent on the other businesses and 20 percent on theater and singing. He describes himself as a "kind of a free spirit."

And, for those not interested in making wine — Hartman says he can teach them how to make their own root beer.

GOING, GOING — Auctioneer Peter Wilson auctions a basonge wood male fetish figure at Sotheby's in London. The figure was one of the items in the 232 lot primitive art collection of Bolivian George Ortiz, who was forced to sell the collection after paying a $2 million ransom to kidnappers of his daughter last October. Total sale price of the collection came to about $2.95 million, in what Sotheby's termed the highest amount ever brought by a primitive art sale. (AP Laserphoto)

'Once An Eagle' To Be Colorcast On NBC's 'The Big Event' Sunday

MILITARY STORY–Sam Elliott (center and right) stars in "NBC's Best Seller: Once An Eagle" as Sam Damon, a war hero who becomes a career officer. Darlene Carr plays his wife; Glenn Ford (bottom center) is his mentor and

A Nebraska farmboy joins the Army, becomes a hero during World War I, and meets another young lieutenant who flaunts his proper upbringing and West Point commission, in Part I of "NBC's Best Seller: Once An Eagle," to be colorcast on "The Big Event" Sunday, July 2, 9 to 11 p.m. on NBC-TV.

Based on the best-selling novel by Anton Myrey, the drama concerns two regular Army officers — played by Sam Elliott and Cliff Potts — in the years from 1918 (the end of World War I) through World War II. Sam Damon (Elliott) is a devoted military man, committed to the welfare of his country and the men under his command, while Courtney Massingale (Potts) is an ambitious, glory-grabbing commander with his eye on personal advancement. The dramatic confrontation between the two takes place in New Guinea at the height of World War II.

"Once An Eagle" deals concurrently with the wives of the two men, Darleen Carr as Damon's and Amy Irving as Massingale's and how their husband's decisions affect their lives.

Glenn Ford appears as Elliott's father-in-law and his original commanding officer. Robert Hogan and Lynda Day George star as longtime Army friends of Damon; Clu Gulager plays an unfit officer who manages to survive within the system for more than 20 years; and Gary Grimes appears as Elliott's doughboy buddy during World War I.

Many well-known performers play guest-starring roles, including Melanie Griffith, Dario Salem, James Shigeta, Andrew Stevens and Anthony Zerba.

Jim Casts Impressions

The immediate impression is that James Arness is very definately a big, big man, physcially. More so, it seems, than one realizes in knowing him for more than two decades on television.

The second impression is that he's just as big-hearted as he is tall. He offers a friendly and firm handshake and a polite and informal verbal greeting in that familiar voice, easing what anxiety one might have in meeting an American television institution.

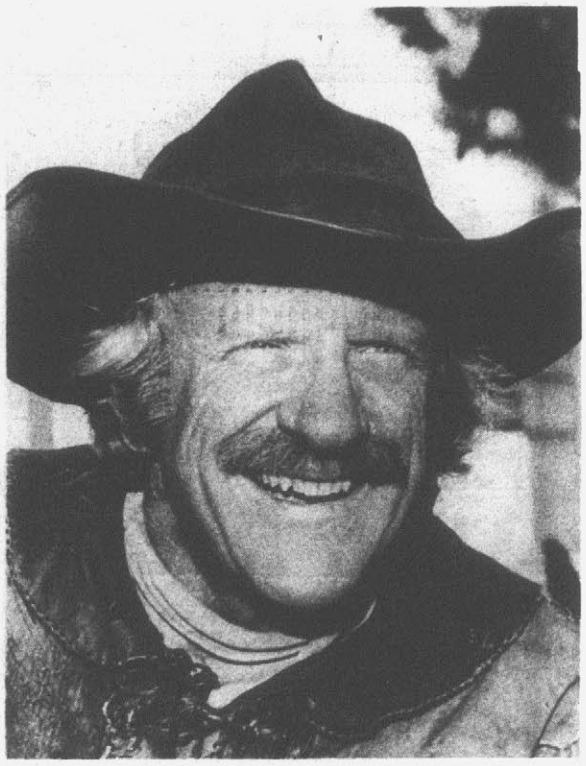

Recently Jim talked about his transition from "Gunsmoke" to "How the West Was Won."

"I wasn't really anxious to keep working after 'Gunsmoke' was cancelled," he explains, "but then — on the other hand — I had been off work about four months, hadn't been doing anything other than waiting around to see if 'Gunsmoke' would be renewed, and all the while figuring it would go again.

"So, as I say, when they cancelled 'Gunsmoke' and this project came along, it seemed like an ideal thing to do because it was not really contemplated as a series at that time. They were just doing it as a TV movie, and it was an interesting character and it was well-written — a good story and everything— so I felt, what the heck, I'll do it."

Arness also admits that having "How the West Was Won" to do immediately after the demise of "Gunsmoke" helped him ease out of a show that was so much a part of his life.

Arness is pleased over ABC-TV's decision to air ten, two-hour segments of "How the West Was Won" during the upcoming season. "They will begin next January after 'Monday Night Football' is over, kind of like feature-length specials, which is really the best, I think."

James Arness stars as Zeb Macahan, an appealing mountain man whose strength and courage symbolized the pioneer spirit of America following the Civil War, in ABC-TV's "How the West Was Won," returning as a weekly series in January, 1979. Arness recreates the role from the powerful western drama which won huge ratings when presented as a three-part, six-hour television novel in February, 1977.

Elizabeth Ashley Discusses Role

It might seem that a stage, screen and television star like Elizabeth Ashley and a middle-class divorced housewife, like the character she portrays in "Tom and Joann," would have very little in common.

"Joann is different from me," Miss Ashley says of her role in the one-hour drama, continuing the tale of the divorced couple introduced in the TV movie "Breaking Up." "But she is very possibly what I could have ended up being if I hadn't lucked into the priviledged life of a gypsy."

"Tom and Joann," airing Wednesday, July 5, 9 to 11 p.m. on CBS-TV, is both a comic and serious look at the relationship of a couple who maintain their mutual affection a year after their marriage has ended.

Unlike the heroine, Miss Ashely has lived the glamorous life of a star since she was a very young actress, first achieving success on the Broadway stage in her Tony Award-winning appearance in "Take Her, She's Mine" and in "Barefoot in the Park," followed by starring roles in such films as "The Carpetbaggers" and "Ship of Fools." But at one point, she gave up show business for marriage and a family.

"Six years later, my marriage had ended, and I had a son to raise," she says. "I realized I had to get a job. I was terrified." (Joann finds herself in similar circumstances when her marriage ends after 16 years, in the drama.)

"Joann is a complete reflection, not of the merchandized, packaged, propagandistic, media-hype modern woman, but the genuine article," Miss Ashley says.

Linden Looks At Owls

Host Hal Linden and a tame barn owl explore the world of the owl in art, literature, history, legend and mythology on ABC News' young people's magazine series, "Animals Animals Animals," Sunday, July 2, 11:30 to 11:55 a.m.

'Animals' goes to the owl clinic of Dr. Patrick Redig of the University of Minnesota who rehabilitates wounded birds of prey, including owls.

An animated fable, "The Owl, the Mouse and the Giraffe," focuses on a mouse who tries to become a very big cheese in the very big world, and an owl who finds out the hard way that silence is golden.

An owl learns to appreciate, rather than eat, a rat, rabbit, frog and a snake, in an animated poem, "Two Owls and Some Friends."

Wink Martindale Returns

Wink Martindale, the always smiling and cordial Tennessee gentleman, returns to the game show circuit as the host of CBS-TV's "The New Tic Tac Dough," premiering Monday, July 3, 10 to 10:30 a.m.

"I'm really very excited about the new show," Wink said during a break in the taping session of the series, "because I was really, quite anxious to find a show that was of the quality of 'Gambit.'"

"Gambit" was, of course, the daytime game show Wink hosted until it was cancelled two years ago.

"I'd had several offers for other shows," Wink says, "but I was anxious to find one that had a good game because you've got to have a good, entertaining game or you don't have anything.

"I don't mean just for the on-camera participants either," he adds quickly, "but for the viewers at home as well. You look at any of the really successful shows and they're structured so the people at home can participate simply by listening to it in some cases.

Charlie's Serious Side Is Evident In 'Switch'

As a comedian, Charlie Callas is a familiar face to viewers of such talk shows as 'The Tonight Show,' on which he has made over 50 appearances, and in major nightclubs across the coun- He's also a "serious actor," and proof that there is a "serious" side to Callas is evident each week in "Switch."

Callas co-stars on "Switch," which is seen Sunday, 10 to 11 p.m. on CBS-TV. He plays Malcolm, a small-time con man who is called upon to help series' stars Robert Wagner and Eddie Albert in their pursuit of swindlers.

"Playing Malcolm is the first time I've ever portrayed a 'straight' character on film," explained Callas. "The character is really Charlie Callas using accents and impersonations in his role, but I play it straight instead of broad, as I do in my nightclub act. I don't consider myself as and actor in the traditional sense, but rather as a personality."

Being flexible is nothing new to Callas, because he has learned to be that way. His first change came when he was in school, studying to be a navigator in the Merchant Marines. "I discovered I was more interested in music and becoming a professional drummer, so I went in that direction," said Callas.

As a professional drummer, Callas played with major bands in the late 1940s and the '50s. He was the 'show drummer' at the Copa, in New York, for many years — the height of his profession, he felt — but again he thought it was time for a change.

"While playing drums, I used to kid around with the audience, and discovered I had a talent to make people laugh," he recalled. "In 1962, I decided to pursue comedy full-time. There's only about 15 feet from the drums to the center-stage microphone, but it's also 1,000 light years away. It was like starting all over."

As a dramatic actor, Callas doesn't feel the change from standup comedian is that radical.

What I do in nightclubs is also acting, but I'm playing it strictly for laughs. In 'Switch' you see a subtle Charlie Callas."

Charlie Callas co-stars in the role of Malcolm on "Switch," airing Sundays (10-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV. Robert Wagoner and Eddie Albert stars in this detective series.

EDD STILL HOLDS RECORD

Edd Byrnes still holds the record for appearing on the most magazine covers in one month.

Watch Those Signals

Joe Louis fought one fight too many, and suffered a humiliating defeat. Muhammad Ali was dazed when a younger fighter took away his crown. Joe Namath spent his final year in football sitting on the bench.

Merlin Olsen decided that he didn't want to play football until someone tapped him on the shoulder and said, "That's enough, Merlin. We won't be needing you anymore."

"I still had a few good playing years left," says Olsen, who starred with the Los Angeles Rams for 15 years, "but I was getting signals that it was time to quit."

What are those "signals" that tell an athlete he's past his prime?

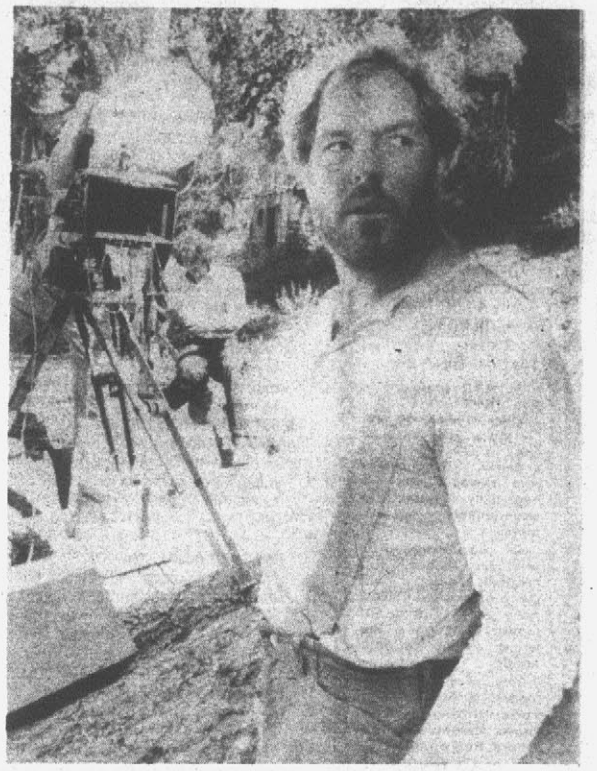

"Most people think that our legs give out first— or maybe our wind," says Olsen, who now stars on NBC-TV's hit "Little House on the Prairie" series (Monday, 8 p.m.), "but usually I think it is a matter of timing.

"During the last year I could see a play developing. I'd make my move to stop it — and every now and then I'd arrive at the spot just a fraction of a second later than I should have. I decided to quit while I was ahead. Football had been great to me, and I didn't want to give it anything but my best."

Merlin, who has now passed his "rookie" year in show business, has that same attitude about acting.

"I'm working my tail off. I had to work hard for everything I got in football — and I expect to do the same thing as an actor. I don't want anyone to give me anything just because I was a football star," says Olsen, who is working for his drama coach just as hard as he worked for his football coaches.

"I want to be a success in this business because I'm good — not because I'm big."

NEW ASSIGNMENT—Merlin Olsen, a professional football star for 15 years with the Los Angeles Rams, now is a regular on NBC-TV's hit series "Little House on the Prairie" Mondays, (8-9 p.m.). He says he's working as hard to do well as an actor as he ever did in football.

ABLERTSON CAST AS BALLOONIST

Oscar, Tony and Emmy Award-winning actor Jack Albertson will star in "Charlie's Balloon," an NBC movie-for-TV, as a retired railroad worker who attempts to cross the country in a hot-air balloon.

Adrienne Barbeau and Moosie Drier will also star in the adventure drama, which will feature cameo appearances by character actors Burt Freed, Pat Cooper and Slim Pickens. Production begins this week at California locations.

Albertson portrays a 72-year-old World War I veteran who has planned for years to use his expertise as a wartime balloon observer to fly in a hot-air balloon from the Pacific to the Atlantic.

'The Hindenburg' Encores Saturday

A German counteragent travels across the Atlantic in his nation's prestigious dirigible with a sense of impending doom, in "The Hindenburg" — a suspense drama based on one of the century's most spectacular air disasters — to be rebroadcast on NBC-TV's "Saturday Night at the Movies" July 8, 9 to 11:30 p.m. Academy Award winners George C. Scott and Anne Bancroft star.

Scott (Best Actor — "Patton," 1970) and Bancroft (Best Actress — "The Miracle Worker," 1962) portray two of the passengers aboard the huge lighter-than-air craft which crashed on landing at Lakehurst, N.J., in 1937.

When the Hindenburg takes off from Germany with 97 people on board, Agent Ritter (Scott) muses to himself, "I have an uneasy sense of disaster."

His fears are somewhat realized when, during the course of the voyage, he learns that eight travelers have a motive to sabotage the prestigious luxury craft.

Ritter becomes more and more convinced that there is a plot to destroy the dirigible, particularly after he discovers a bomb in the ship's rigging and a Gestapo agent finds a knife in a hazardous section of the Hindenburg.

As the ship nears the American seacoast, Ritter doubles his efforts to prevent a disaster and uncover any saboteurs.

"The Hindenburg" opens with an original black and white newsreel, an entertaining segment that capsulizes the history of ballooning and introduces the Hindenburg ("the pride of Germany") and, in its ususal light-mannered tone, provides an ironic contrast to the fictionalized drama that follows.

'Pops' Celebrates 50th

Every summer, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra entertain music lovers with free outdoor concerts on Boston's Esplanade, on the banks of the Charles River.

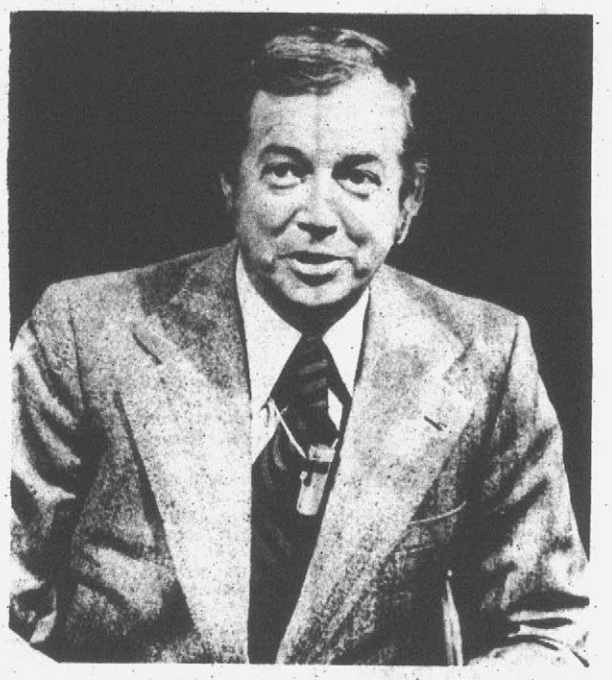

To the hundreds of thousands who have thrilled to these symphonies by starlight, each is a special event. But this year's series is extra special: 1978 is the 50th anniversary of the Esplanade concerts — the first free outdoor concerts ever given by a major symphony orchestra.

"An Evening at Pops Special on the Esplanade," airing Tuesday, July 4, at 8 p.m. on PBS, celebrates the Esplanade Concerts' golden annversary with a Fourth of July concert party for 300,000 people. The special includes music by Sousa, Handel, Strauss, and Offenbach, as well as two medleys of traditional hoe-down and American tunes.

Highlight of the evening is a spectacular performance of Tchaikovsky's 1812, Overture Solenelle. Church bells, howitzers, and a breathtaking display of fireworks accompany the music for this special occasion. Television cameras were stationed in helicopters, boats, and atop Boston's tallest building, the Hancock, to capture the full spirit of the celebration.

The special also includes a 10-minute documentary about Fielder and how he founded the first outdoor concert on the Esplanade on July 4, 1929. Says the Maestro about the concerts, "There were no entrances, no gates, nothing. It was wide open, sit where you want. That's what I wanted. It worked out pretty well."

It worked out so well that since the Maestro first stepped up to the podium in a hastily constructed wooden concert shell in the summer of 1929, more than ten million people have enjoyed Mr. Pops' unique outdoor musical celebrations.

Personable Hugh Downs has added to his long list of activities by becoming the new host of the news magazine series on ABC-TV, "20-20," which airs Tuesdays (10-11 p.m.)

DYAN CANNON STARS IN TV FILM

Dyan Cannon will star as Sally Sanford, the flamboyant San Francisco madam who became the mayor of nearby Sausalito, in "Lady of the House," a two-hour movie slated to air on NBC-TV.

"Lady of the House," based on Ms. Sanford's book, traces her colorful story from childhood through her election as the mayor of the wealthy Bay-area community. It includes the period in the 1930s and 1940s when she was the madam of the opulent Nob Hill bordello that was patronized by the rich and the famous.

Cannon, who received an Oscar nomination for her performance in the movie "Bob and Carol and Ted and Alice," has also starred in such films as "The Last of Sheila," "The Love Machine," "The Anderson Tapes" and "Doctors' Wives."

Saga Unfolds On PBS

"Star of India: Iron Lady of the Seas," a documentary which chronicles the 114-year history of the oldest iron-hulled merchant ship afloat, airs Monday, July 3, at 10 p.m. on PBS.

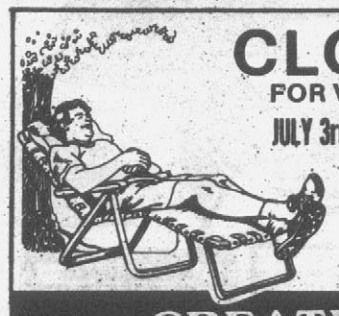

Launched in 1863 from the Isle of Man, England, the Star of India sailed around the world 21 times, then spent a quarter century working the Alaskan salmon trade out of San Francisco. After making her last voyage as a merchant ship in 1923, she was left to decay in the San Diego harbor until serious restoration efforts began in the early 1960's.

The program dramatizes the old sailing ship's hazardous life at sea through the use of authentic historical photographs and actual film footage. Also documented is her painstaking restoration, which took more than 15 years to accomplish. The hard work, love and devotion of those who fought to save this unique square rigger were climaxed by her triumphant July 4 Bicentennial sailing off the coast of San Diego.

Elizabeth Taylor Stars

Elizabeth Taylor, in one of her most effective performances, stars as a middle-aged woman who undergoes head-to-toe plastic surgery in a vain attempt to recapture her husband's waning affection in "Ash Wednesday." The film will air as the "ABC Summer Movie" Thursday, July 6, 9:30 to 11 p.m. Co-starring as the disinterested husband is Henry Fonda.

The film begins at an exclusive Italian clinic where Miss Taylor — convincingly made up with the jowls, wrinkles and pallor of a woman in her fifties — decides to take the plunge and submit to a head-to-toe cosmetic overhaul. Squemish viewers may well wither as Director Larry Peerce intercuts actual films of graphic surgery in a long, unsettling view of various incisions, fat-removals, realignment of eyelines, earlines and breastlines, etc.

Very gradually, as the bruises subside and stitches are removed, it becomes apparent that she has slipped off for a few weeks under the guise of a 'rest cure' without telling her husband, hoping that an instant reversion to youth might change his indifference.

BEFORE AND AFTER—Barbara Sawyer, played by Elizabeth Taylor, is a desperate 50-year-old woman who gives herself up to the knife of a plastic surgeon in the hope that her new image (right) will revitalize her foundering marriage in "Ash Wednesday," the "ABC Summer Movie," Thursday, July 6 (9:30-11 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Las Vegas Setting Provides Long Shot

Las Vegas is called the city that never sleeps. That's great for the gamblers and tourists, but for a movie producer doing a film there, it can be both a tremendous joy and a monumental headache.

"Telethon," encoring as "The ABC Friday Night Movie" July 7 (9 to 11 p.m.) on ABC-TV, was filmed entirely in Las Vegas. Producer Robert Lovenheim found the experience to be both harrowing and unique.

"Las Vegas is unlike any other location in the world," he said. "There are no two days that are ever alike and the people are totally unpredictable. We quickly learned that there was no sense trying to put together a shooting schedule. The city would dictate where we would film."

"Telethon" deals with romance and danger surrounding the telecast of an annual telethon. Lovenheim found that his major problem was finding a showroom or auditorium where they could build the telethon set, including the tote board and the tables where volunteers take phone calls.

The Game Is Politics

Sgt. Pepper Anderson (Angie Dickinson) is ordered to guard a former childhood rival whose vicious and narrow-minded city council campaign has made her the target of death threats, in "Tigress," a segment of "Police Woman" which will be rebroadcast wednesday, July 5, 10 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV.

Grudgingly, Pepper accepts her assignment to protect Amelia (Stephens), a ruthless demagogue whose extreme anti-deviate rhetoric has the law-and-order electorate clamoring for her victory. Battling her is an outspoken prostitute (Kitt). Seeking to cinch her election, the opportunistic Amelia illegally compiles medical evidence to blackmail her opponent (Galloway) into capitulating.

Suspecting more chicanery, Pepper and Crowley (Earl Holliman) try to prove that a botched assassination attempt on Amelia was as staged as her political rallies.

DISTAFF POLITICS—Laraine Stephens guest-stars as a woman running for political office who has to get police protection in the "Police Woman" episode, "Tigress" Wednesday, July 5 (10-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

BLAKE PLEAS FOR KIDS' RIGHTS

Actor Robert Blake met recently with President and Mrs. Carter to urge the same civil liberties for youngsters as adults and presented his concept for the "Children's Bill of Rights."

"Children have no rights," Blake told the Carters at the White House. "If they did, there would be fewer young people in trouble because of delinquency, drugs, suicide and other problems."

Amputee Seeks Revenge

Private detective Jay J. Armes lost his hands in a childhood accident when he was 12, but — far from slowing him down — it seemed to make him go faster. The El Paso (Texas) sleuth made his TV debut in "Hookman," an unusual detective drama airing as a segment of "Hawaii Five-O" Wednesday, July 5, 11:30 p.m., on CBS-TV.

In "Hookman," Armes portrays a man who, having lost his hands during the commission of a crime, sets out to kill the policemen he feels were involved in his maiming, including Hawaii Five-O chief Steve McGarrett, played by Jack Lord.

"Hookman" was created with Armes in mind, and has Armes doing feats that would be difficult even for a man with full physical resources. Armes' ease in accomplishing the script's action was a continuing source of surprise to Alan Reisner, director of the episode. And Lord said, "It was hard to believe."

'Five-O' supervising producer Bob Sweeney goes a step further. "What Armes does without the use of his hands is amazing," says Sweeney. "I think this should perk up a lot of people who have handicaps and tell them, in effect, that's no reason to curl up and quit."

Armes flies his own turbojet and owns a fleet of expensive automobiles. He lives in a mansion surrounded by a 24-foot high electical fence — because of threats made on his life — on the outskirts of El Paso, where he has established a private wildlife refuge. The inhabitants include a cheetah Armes walks at night on a leash, a bobcat, ostriches, tigers, an elephant, two "elephant shepherd dogs" and two falcons.

Throughout the "Hookman" episode, Armes is seen in such tricky action as scaling walls and assembling complex rifles. He accomplishes this with the aid of what he terms his "hooks," prosthetic devices that serve as his hands.

Life has been good to Armes, despite his handicap. Not only is he a very successful private detective, but his exploits have made him a celebrity. Armes won a measure of national fame when he recovered actor Marlon Brando's son Christian from a Mexican fishing village. That incident climaxed weeks of searching through California and Mexico. At one point, the Mexican police officers helping him declined to fly with Armes because he had no hands. "It would be unsafe," they said, and we all have large families."

Susan Blakely Signs

Susan Blakely, winner of the Golden Globe Award as Best Dramatic Actress for her performance as Julie Prescott in "Rich Man, Poor Man," and twice nominated for an Emmy Award for that role in both "Rich Man, Poor Man" and 'Rich Man, Book II,' has entered into an exlcusive agreement with ABC-TV under which she will star in three motion pictures or mini-series for television.

In addition, Ms. Blakely and her partner, Steve Jaffe, will acquire, develop and produce television properties exclusively for ABC through their company, Jaffe-Blakely Films, Inc. Mr. Jaffe will produce the projects.

In making the announcement, ABC-TV's Brandon Stoddard, said: "Susan Blakely has established herself as a dynamic and many-faceted new acting talent, in demand for both television and theatrical motion pictures. We are tremendously pleased that she has chosen ABC to continue and broaden her career base and look forward to a long and rewarding association with her and her partner, Steve Jaffe."

The agreement initially provides for Ms. Blakely to star in one television movie or mini-series a year for the next three years.

Ms. Blakely, who has recently signed to star in Harold Robins' "The Lonely Lady" — a theatrical feature shooting this summer — most recently starred in the critically-acclaimed TV movie, "Secrets."

A successful model before embarking on her motion picture and television career, she starred as the female lead in "Report to the Commissioner," as William Holden's daugher in "Towering Inferno" and with Sylvester Stallone and Henry Winkler in "Lords of Flatbush."

Popular Pilot Encores

Lance Kerwin stars as a teenager who experiences the joy, humor, problems and pain of adolescence in "James at 15." The pilot of the series, which introduced Kerwin in the starring role of James Hunter and also was the highest rated program of the week when it was originally telecast, will be repeated Thursday, July 6, 9 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV.

Lynn Carlin, Linden Chiles and Kim Richards also stars; Kate Jackson and Vincent Van Patten guest-star.

Young James, after months of adoration, finally wins the heart of Lacey. When James's father is appointed to a teaching position at a Boston college, the family is faced with moving from their small Oregon hometown.

Pike's Peek

By Charlie Pike, TV Showtime staff writer. HOLLYWOOD — The long-awaited Cheryl Ladd album on Capitol Records will be released in mid-July, appropriately titled "Cheryl Ladd." The LP is in no way connected with 'Angels' and it's said to be contemporary but neither rock nor disco.

Wedding bells are suddenly ringing in Hollywood. "Love Boat" regular Ted Lange will wed dancer Sherryl Tompson on July 23rd, and "CHiPs" star Erik Estrada is engaged to wed Kristi Lautner.

Meanwhile, "Eight Is Enough's" Connie Newton is making her wedding plans with David Needham, who is a member of the show's crew.

Fred Silverman, NBC President who has become a celebrity of his own right during the past couple of years, is said to be taking a close look at the four episodes of "Joe and Valerie," the disco-oriented series that got exceptionally high ratings two of the four nights it aired. Interestingly, the network aired the first two shows on Monday, the second two on Wednesday, and it's poor showing on the latter led to it's cancellation.

Steve McQueen recently spent three days in Las Vegas applauding ex-wife Neile McQueen's performance in "Can-Can," and also spent considerable time at her side, suggesting, reportedly, that he and Neile consider the possibility of re-marrying. Neile didn't say yes, but she didn't say no, either.

Suzanne Somers raised quite a few eye brows recently when she was spotted shopping in Beverly Hills wearing a fish-net dress without a slip and a huge floppy sun hat that was so big passersby had to duck and dodge the actress as she browsed.

"Gilligan's Island" will return to the tube in the form of a special sometime during the new season. Details aren't finalized as yet, but Dawn Wells recently postponed four weeks of a summer stock commitment in order to return to Hollywood for the special, and Jim Backus and Alan Hale are awaiting word on a start date.

Not surprisingly, security was a major problem during the two-week filming of "Charlie's Angels" at the Tropicana Hotel in Las Vegas, despite the game efforts of the hotel's management.

'Banacek' Returns

The owner of a professional football team (Robert Webber) calls on the services of a modern day bounty hunter, Banacek (George Peppard) to determine how and why a football player vanished on the field of play in front of a large crowd and a national TV audience in "Banacek," airing as the "CBS Late Movie" Thursday, July 6, at 12-midnight on CBS-TV.

In the drama, titled "Let's Hear It For a Living Legend," a star half-back is tackled and when the other players get up, all that remains of the ball carrier is his helmet. Banacek, whose specialty is working on unsolved cases in which the insurance money is more than considerable, is called in to learn how it was accomplished and by whom.

Wonder Woman Departs Island To Join Fight

A special 90-minutes episode of "The New Adventures of Wonder Woman," chronicling the legendary heroine's departure from her home on Paradise Island to join the fight for freedom and protect the secret of her Amazon culture, will be rebroadcast Friday, July 7, 8 to 9:30 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Lynda Carter stars as Wonder Woman, the legendary ageless heroine whose exploits during World War II helped make the world safe for freedom and who returns some 30 years later with an assumed identity, as Diana Prince, assistant to Steve Trevor, Jr. (Lyle Waggoner) at the Inter-Agency Defense Command.

On a top-secret mission with scientists developing a nuclear power plant for underdeveloped countries, Trevor's flight is sabotaged by a henchman of international terrorists leader Dr. Solano (Fritz Weaver) and is brought down on Paradise Island.

Wonder Woman discovers the plane and its occupants, among them Trevor, whose likeness to his father recalls her fond association with the major. Learning of the terrorist conspiracy, which threatens this and other sensitive international projects, Wonder Woman convinces her mother, the Queen of the Amazons, that she must once again go into the outside world, not only to help protect the free world from its enemies, but in this age of radar, sonar and laser scanning, to protect the secret of Paradise Island and its ancient culture.

Fritz Weaver portrays a terrorist leader who sabotages a top-secret mission, in a special 90-minute episode of "The New Adventures of Wonder Woman," Friday July 7 (8-9:30 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

George C. Scott Stars In 'Bank Shot' On CBS

Academy Award-winner George C. Scott stars as an ingenious criminal who manages to pull off the most unusual bank robbery yet, in "Bank Shot," to be broadcast Friday, July 7, 9:30 to 11 p.m. on CBS-TV.

Sorrell Booke plays Karp, a corrupt lawyer and master of disguise who springs skillful safecracker Walter Ballantine (Scott) out of prison so that he can execute another heist. The plan has the financial backing of El, played by Joanna Cassidy. The three of them, plus a few assorted allies, manage to pull off a unique bank robbery — they steal the whole bank. They don't just take the money. They take the bank building and everything in it.

But for all of their imagination and skill, Ballantine and his group have another hurdle — they must successfully escape the clutches of an F.B.I. agent (G. Wood) and the prison farm warden (Clifton James) who found Ballantine missing.

The screenplay was written by Wendall Mayes, based upon the novel by Donald E. Westlake. The film was directed by Tony Award-winner Gower Champion, who directed and choreographed the original Broadway production of "Hello, Dolly."

Quincy Aids Wife

Belinda J. Montgomery plays a battered wife who is aided by Quincy, series star Jack Klugman, in "Accomplice to Murder" on "Quincy" Friday, July 7, 10 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV.

Quincy stakes his reputation on his forensic findings that influential businessman Walter Steele (Robert Colbert) was responsible for the death of his estranged wife, Martha (Karen Philipp). While police arrest burglar Joey Kling (Randy Stumpf) for Martha's slaying, Quincy sets out to prove to the District Attorney's office that the cause of death was injuries suffered in a beating she received at the hands of her husband six months before.

In an attempt to piece together the events leading up to Martha's death, Quincy goes to a home for battered wifes. There he meets Bonnie DeMarco (Montgomery). He takes a personal interest in her case, realizing that one too many severe beatings by her husband could make her another fatality.

Track, Field Championships Air

Live coverage of the U.S.A. vs. U.S.S.R. Track and Field Championships, from Edwards Track Stadium in Berkeley, Calif., highlights "ABC's Wide World of Sports," airing Saturday, July 8, 5 to 6:30 p.m.

This rivalry between the United States and the Soviet Union, held 15 times since it began in 1958, has featured some of the greatest track and field athletes as participants. And this meet continues that tradition. Among those who have qualified to represent the United States this year are Clancy Edwards of USC, who has won both the 100-meter and 200-meter AAU and NCAA championships; Arnie Robinson of the San Diego South Ghetto Striders, gold medalist at Montreal in the long jump, and the current AAU champion; Mac Wilkins of Athletics West, world record-holder and gold medalist at Montreal in the discus; James Butts of the Tobias Striders, AAU triple-jump champion, and a silver medalist at Montreal; Franklin Jacobs of Fairleigh Dickinson University, American indoor record-holder in the high jump; Greg Foster of UCLA, the NCAA 100-meter hurdles champion; and Renaldo Nehemiah of the University of Maryland, the AAU 110-meter hurdles champion.

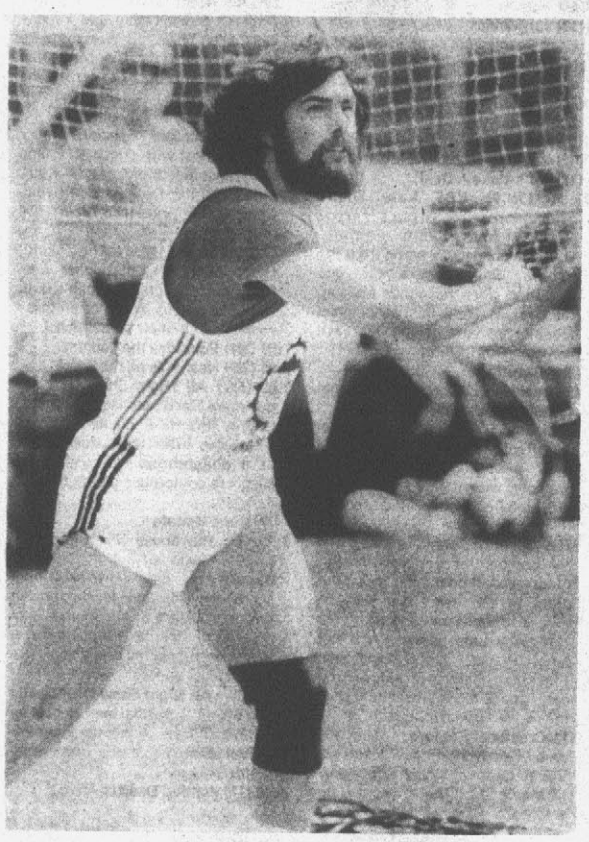

Some of the American women who have qualified are Evelyn Ashford of UCLA in the 100 and 200-meter events; Kathy McMillan of the Tennessee State Tiger Belles, silver medalist at Montreal in the long jump; Jan Merrill of the Connecticut Age Group A.A. in the 1500 and 3000-meter events; and hurdler Debbie LaPlante of Englewood, New Jersey, a member of the 1976 U.S. Olympic Team.

The past winners of this international competition read like a who's who of track and field. Here are just some of those names: 1958: Parry O'Brien, shot put...Hal Connoly, hammer; 1959: Don Bragg, pole vault. . .Al Oerter, discuss...Tamara Press, shot put; 1961: Valery Brumel, high jump...Ralph Boston, long jump; 1963: Bob Hayes, 100-meter...Jay Silvester, discuss; 1965: Willie Davenport, 110-hurdles...Wyomia Tyus, 100-meter.; 1969: John Carlos, 100 and 200-meter...Marty Liquori, 1500-meter; 1970: Valery Borzov, 100-meter...Frank Shorter, 10,000-meter; 1971: Steve Prefontaine, 5000-meter...Rod Milburn, 110-hurdles...Pat Matzdorf, high jump; 1973: Dave Wottle, 1500-meter; 1975: Medelyn Manning Jackson, 800-meter; 1976: Edwin Moses, 400-meter hurdles.

English Comedy Featured

"The Magnificent Six and a Half," the story of hilarious escapades involving a group of six imaginative children, plus the one half, a little girl named Peewee, will be rebroadcast on "The CBS Saturday Film Festival," July 8, 1:30 to 1:56 p.m.

This motion picture from England consists of two segments. In "A Good Deed in Time," the group, having embarked on a campaign of doing good, finds that even virtue has it hazards. By an odd coincidence, each good deed they attempt requires the use of a ladder.

Mac Wilkins of the Athletics West Club and a 1976 Olympic Gold Medalist will join many of the USA's top amateur athletes in the "ABC Wide World of Sports" telecast of the United States and Soviet Union track and field meet. The contest will be televised on Saturday, July 8 at 5 p.m.

CBS Takes A Close Look At Children's Television

"Children's Television on CBS: A Closer Look" is the title of a 16-minute videotape detailing the innovations in programming for young viewers.

Hosted by Bob Keeshan, creator and star of "Captain Kangaroo," the tape was made in response to the growing criticism and publicity about television for children. As Keeshan notes in the opening: "You know, we hear and read a lot about children's television from public interest groups, government agencies, educators, TV critics and parents. But what puzzles me is that many of those doing the criticizing apparently have not been watching."

Keeshan outlines the innovation in the CBS Saturday morning schedule, beginning in 1972 when the superheroes were phased out and made way for programs such as "Fat Albert and the Cosby Kids" — programs that balanced entertainment and learning.

Other highlights of the presentation include "In the News," "What's It All About?" "Razzmatazz," and the new magazine series "30 Minutes" — all designed to help young people understand the issues and events in the world around them. Culture and the lively arts are represented by clips from the "Festival of Lively Arts" and the "Saturday Film Festival." And "Captain Kangaroo" is represented, as it has been on CBS since 1955, as the only continuing daily network program for young people.

Also appearing is Dr. Gordon Berry, Associate Pfofessor at the Graduate School of Education at UCLA, who acts as chief adviser to CBS on Children's programs. Dr. Berry explains the role he plays in heading a panel of experts from different fields who review program and script material, discussing subjects and sensitivites.

The presentation has been distributed to CBS affiliates for their use in showing to local community groups to explain the Network's commitment in this area.

It concludes with a personal message from Keeshan about child viewing and parental responsibility: "The ultimate responsibility for what a child watches on television rests with the parent. While others may have their say, in the end it's the parent who should decide what we're doing on children's television, because parenting is a non-transferable responsibility."

TONI'S ACTING DEBUT

Toni Tennille will make her TV acting debut in "The Witness," a segment of "Love Boat" which will air early next fall. The distaff wing of the Captain and Tennille singing duet plays the witness to a murder who takes refuge aboard the cruise ship.

Also guesting in the segment will be Robert Reed.

Lassie Is Honored

One of Hollywood's most cooperative stars was honored recently — a star who, according to those who know her best — never had to call her agent, visit a hairdresser or take long lunch breaks. The star is none other than Lassie, who's had leading roles in movies, and on radio and television since 1942.

Nostalgia and sentiment ran deep at the Pacific Pioneer Broadcasters luncheon in Los Angeles as film clips from three generations of Lassie were shown. Betty White, an actress with a great affection for animals, introduced guests at the head table who recalled their experiences with the canine star.

Jan Clayton, Lassie's first TV mother, fondly recalled how many doors had been opened for her because of the series, and — most important — how many homes and hearts the show went into.

Australian Tennis

The Australian tennis legacy is long and rather legendary. The players came in waves from "down under" and dominated tennis from 1950 until just a few years ago. With names such as Sedgeman, Hood, Rosewall, Laver, and John Newcombe, the Aussies won 16 Davis Cups, 14 Wimbledons, and 15 Forest Hills since 1950. But the only real Aussie left is John Newcombe, and there are no more to take his place.

On Sunday, July 2, ABC Sports presents coverage of the World Invitational Tennis Classic from the composition courts of the Sea Pines Racquet Club on Hilton Head Island, South Carolina. Mixed doubles will be the event as John Newcombe and Diane Fromholtz take on Vitas Gerulaitas and Virginia Wade.

Newcombe is the last of the line and he embodies the Australian committment to winning. He is so competitive, so dedicated on the court. Yet, of the court he is also typically Australian, utterly at ease, very family-oriented, and known for his fondness of beer in large quantities.

His arm problems have almost ended his career and now his very competitiveness might force him to stop playing.

Hobbies Help Relieve Pressures

Pressure has always played a large role in professional sports. After all, the ability to perform under pressure is often-times an indicator of a player's worth to his team. Athletes seek ways to get away from the pressure of their jobs when they are away from the playing field. This can take many forms, and baseball players, in particular, have been known for their many diverse hobbies that help take their minds off the grueling pressure of the 162-game season.

While viewing ABC's "Monday Night Baseball" (July 3, at 8 p.m.), it might be interesing to reflect on the various ways players beat the aforementioned pressures. ABC will televise one of several regional games that night, continuing the format that gives the network an opportunity to present the game with the most importance at that time.

Let's take a look at the various ways some of the players 'beat' these pressures — their hobbies.

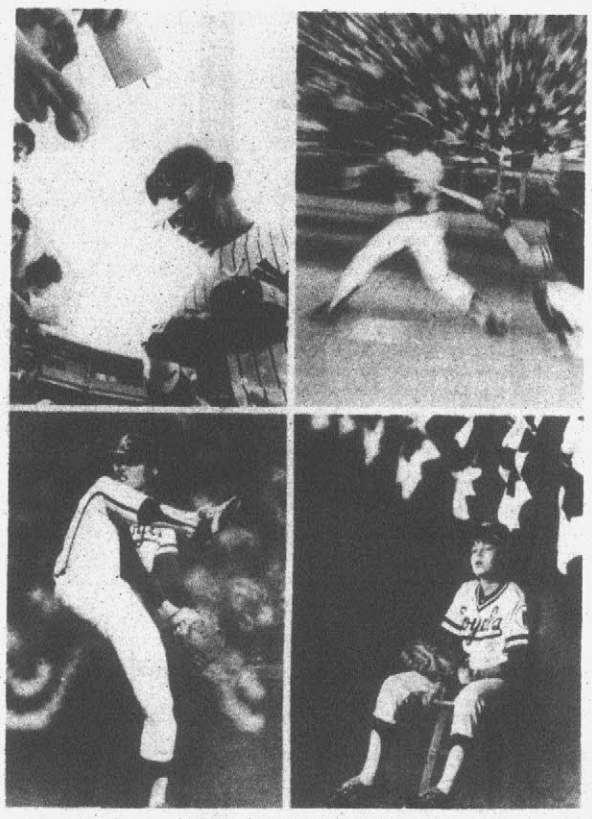

The hobbies of baseball players are as numerous and different as the players themselves. Many players do list hunting and golf as their hobbies, but others draw some mention, too.

Mike Marshall's hobby is chess. This is not such an unusual hobby for a man who is working on his Ph. D. at Michigan State. Catfish Hunter is an avid hunter who also likes to build things. Another pitcher who has a 'different' hobby is Reggie Cleveland, who's a skin-diver. Mickey Lolich and Mark Fidrych ride motorcycles to escape the pressures of the ball field. Denny McLain used to be a much publicized flyer and organist during his playing days.

Preston Hanna enjoys yoga and sailing — a hobby which should endear him to his famous boss Ted Turner.

The pitchers must be classified by themselves because they are different from the other players. The hobbies for their teammates are just a diverse, however. Chet Lemon collects shells and rocks while not studying Greek mythology. Willie McCovey reads comic books while teammate Darrel Evans studies old coins. Lenny Randle collects wine labels while Bob Davis, when not catching, is a snake hunter. And most people thought catching was dangerous enough.

Sometimes the hobbies of the players are determined to be dangerous by the management and the players are asked to redirect their enthusiasm. The hobbies are a release, and allows them to escape their fish bowl life and relax as they wish.

The third season of ABC's Monday Night Baseball continues on Monday, July 3 at 8 p.m. Additionally ABC Sports will present coverage of the mid-season All-Star game and both the National and American League playoff series.

Borg Seeks Third

Each year NBC Sports and the entire sporting world turn their attention to the London suburb of Wimbledon and the meticulously groomed grass courts of the fabled All-England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club.

NBC will provide exclusive coverage of the final round matches in the 101st edition of this tennis classic Saturday, July 8, from 12-noon to 6:30 p.m.

The Wimbledon tournament has remained constant, staid and unchanged over the years. The center court is used only during the two weeks of Wimbledon and then lies dormant until the next Wimbledon. The London tournament is the last major tennis event still played on grass, and the lovely green is slowly but surely being replaced by dead brown grass as the tournament wears on and takes its toll.

Chris Evert's Eager

It's offical name is the All-England Tennis Championship, but it's popularly and affectionately known as Wimbledon. And Wimbledon, a two-week-long traditional celebration of the very best tennis played in the world, is known far and wide as the oldest and most prestigious event in the history of the game.

NBC Sports' executive producer Don Ohlmeyer said, "Wimbledon is without a doubt one of the premier sporting events in the world and is a real jewel on the NBC Sports schedule. We plan not only to provide thorough in-depth coverage of the competition, but, also to capture the ambiance, tradition and personality of Wimbledon that makes it a truly great sporting event."

Coverage of the tournament continues on NBC Sunday, July 2, beginning at 2 p.m.

Chris Evert is seeded No. 1 for the women's singles, with defending champion Virginia Wade seeded fourth behind her.

Last year Chris overwhelmed Billie Jean King 6-2, 6-1 in 46 minutes. "It was the best match I have ever played on grass," said Chris. "I never let Billie Jean into it."

That set up the semifinal match between Evert and Wade, with Wade stunning the top-seek 6-2, 4-6, 6-1. It is a rare day indeed when Chris Evert is defeated.

"Don't get me wrong," she stated. "Losing is a terrible feeling. Disappointing. But losses are always a relief, too. They take a great burden off me, make me feel more normal.

Production Underway

Production started last week on one of the most ambitious projects for the 1978-79 season, "Backstairs at the White House," an eight-hour miniseries for NBC-TV.

The drama, which will feature a huge cast of top performers, tells the touching true story of a black maid and her daughter who work as servants at the White House during the terms of eight United States Presidents.

Olivia Cole stars as Maggie Parks, whose White House career started during the term of William Howard Taft. Leslie Uggams stars as her daughter, Lillian Rogers Parks, who followed her mother into White House service and stayed through the administration of Dwight Eisenhower.

Other stars of "Backstairs at the White House" are Victor Buono (as William Howard Taft), Julie Harris (Nellie Taft), Robert Vaughn (Woodrow Wilson), Kim Hunter (Ellen Wilson, the President's first wife), Claire Bloom (Edith Galt Wilson, his second wife), George Kennedy (Warren G. Harding), Celeste Holm (Florence Harding), Ed Flanders (Calvin Coolidge), Lee Grant (Grace Coolidge), Eileen Heckert (Eleanor Roosevelt), Estelle Parsons (Bess Truman), Andrew Duggan (Dwight Eisenhower) and Barbara Barrie (Mamie Eisenhower).

Also starring are Cloris Leachman (Mrs. Jaffrey, Head Housekeeper), Leslie Nielson (Ike Hoover, Chief Usher), Louis Gossett Jr. (Mercer, Head Houseman) and Robert Hooks (Mays, Doormand and Presidential Barber).

The teleplay is based on an updated version of Lillian Rogers Parks's best seller about the family's 52 years of White House service.

Friedkin Discusses 'French Connection'

Everything else I have done was like a sketch for this picture," said director William Friedkin, discussing his multi-Oscar-winning movie "The French Connection."

"The picture was designed to be entertainment," he continued. "If there is a message, I tried to keep it in the background."

Entertainment is certainly an obvious element of the film, which will be rebroadcast on "The CBS Saturday Night Movies," July 8, 9 to 11:10 p.m.

"What I want from a movie is what people want — an emotional release," Friedkin said. "They expect a movie to make them laugh, cry or feel anger or fear. I don't know of anyone who is qualified to bring them a message..."

Friedkin has made a complete reversal from his earlier days in filmmaking when he was examining on celluloid the difficult messages of playwrights like Harold Pinter. He is no longer involved with the intellectualism that dominated those early attempts. He is concerning himself with the tempo of the American way of life.

Elizabeth Gee

FOR LOUIS NIZER, attorney and author of Reflections Without Mirrors: An Autobiography of the Mind

Do you agree America has two kinds of justice — one for the rich and one for the poor? —G.S., Rye, N.Y.

● Without a doubt a man who can afford to engage very able counsel has an advantage over one who cannot. The legal profession has tried to diminish this inequity by supporting with millions of dollars such agencies as the Legal Aid Society. When President Kennedy was asked whether it wasn't unfair to have a draft in which one man goes immediately to war and another doesn't, he replied that it was unfair and that all life is filled with inequity. I wish it could be otherwise, but is it not unfair that a person can engage the leading heart surgeon if he has the money and another must be content with a lesser luminary? I once put the problem epigrammatically: "Perfect justice — impossible; approximate justice — acceptable; efforts to improve justice — always."

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

What's the real story behind the Marie Osmond-Andy Gibb romance? R.C., Ogden, Utah

● Their romance is truly a case of smoke without fire. A family friend described it as "one of the biggest put-ons in entertainment history." It started when Andy, brother of the Bee Gees group, confided that he was "attracted to Marie." (Whether he was serious, is unclear.) That remark was immediately seized upon and blown out of proportion. He happened to be in Hawaii at the same time as the Osmonds (Donny and Marie were making their first full-length movie there, Aloha Donny and Marie), and, naturally, since they're both in show business, their paths crossed. Andy and Marie did go out to dinner a few times, but her brothers and parents were there, too. Marie is distressed by the rumors, which she describes as a "one-sided situation — not coming from my end."

FOR CAROL BURNETT, actress

Have we seen the last of you on TV? —Jenny Amlie, Tustin, Calif.

● You can't get rid of me that easily. I'm working on a TV movie of the week based on Erma Bombeck's book, The Grass Is Always Greener Over the Septic Tank. Also in the works are a screenplay of a Laura Z. Hobson novel, a two-woman special in Nashville with Dolly Parton and a film with Robert Altman.

FOR LEE MacPHAIL, president, American League

Will the athletes of the next generation be superior to those of this one? —H.F., Norwich, Conn.

● Certainly. In every sporting endeavor that is measurable by a clock (baseball isn't, of course) the performances are superior with each succeeding generation (e.g. track and field, swimming). So why shouldn't baseball players be as good and better than their dads?

FOR RAPHAEL G. ALBEROLA, president, Berlitz School of Languages

How and when were the world's languages born? —J.P., Quincy, Ill.

● There are countless theories about the origin of languages. God's anger at the builders of the Tower of Babel is a popular one. There is also the Bow-Wow theory, which assumes that people began to speak by imitating sounds in nature such as barking dogs, crashing rocks or bubbling water. The list of such theories is long, but not one has been proved.

FOR CINDY WILLIAMS, star of Laverne & Shirley

What effect has your show's success had on you? —H.I., Joplin, Mo.

● I worry more: being in a top show is an awesome responsibility. I wake up in the middle of the night scared stiff that the scene I did that day was all wrong. I've lost track of people I wanted to keep in touch with. All the spare time I had before the show is gone. I thought that when I came into more money, I'd get everything I'd always wanted. But now that I can afford to treat myself, I don't.

FOR DOROTHY LOUDON, Tony Award-winning star of Broadway's Annie

Will you be in the movie version of the show, and don't you find it boring doing the same thing night after night? —Joan Mitchell, Waterbury, Conn.

● I'd love to do the movie, but doubt it. My name isn't big enough to carry the weight of a $9½ million production. Bored? Annie is a dream come true. They'd have to drag me off the stage, screaming.

FOR DORIS A. HANFORD, Mutilated Currency Branch, Dept. of Treasury

What's the strangest case of mutilated currency that has ever come to your attention? —Buell R. Snyder, Beachwood, N.J.

● It's the one where the husband hid a wad of money from his wife in the barrel of his shotgun. Only after he fired the gun did he remember. We requested that he find as many pieces of the currency as possible and forward the fragments to us. We were able to identify the currency and make payment.

PRO AND CON

Can The U.S. Defend Itself?

PRO Rep. Bob Carr (D.-Mich.)

Not for anything would I trade our military posture for the Soviets'. In some respects they have more manpower and equipment than we, but in modern warfare, quality far outweighs quantity. For example, the Soviets have 40 percent more submarine-launched missiles than we, but ours are so much more advanced. We also have free, reliable allies; the Soviets' have none, only enslaved satellites more likely to fight against them than for the Soviet cause. More importantly, if any nation were to attack us, we could annihilate it. True, we could not prevent the Soviet Union from simultaneously annihilating us, but mutual suicide is unlikely.

Illustration by Hal Just

CON Charles M. Kupperman, defense analyst and research associate, Committee on the Present Danger

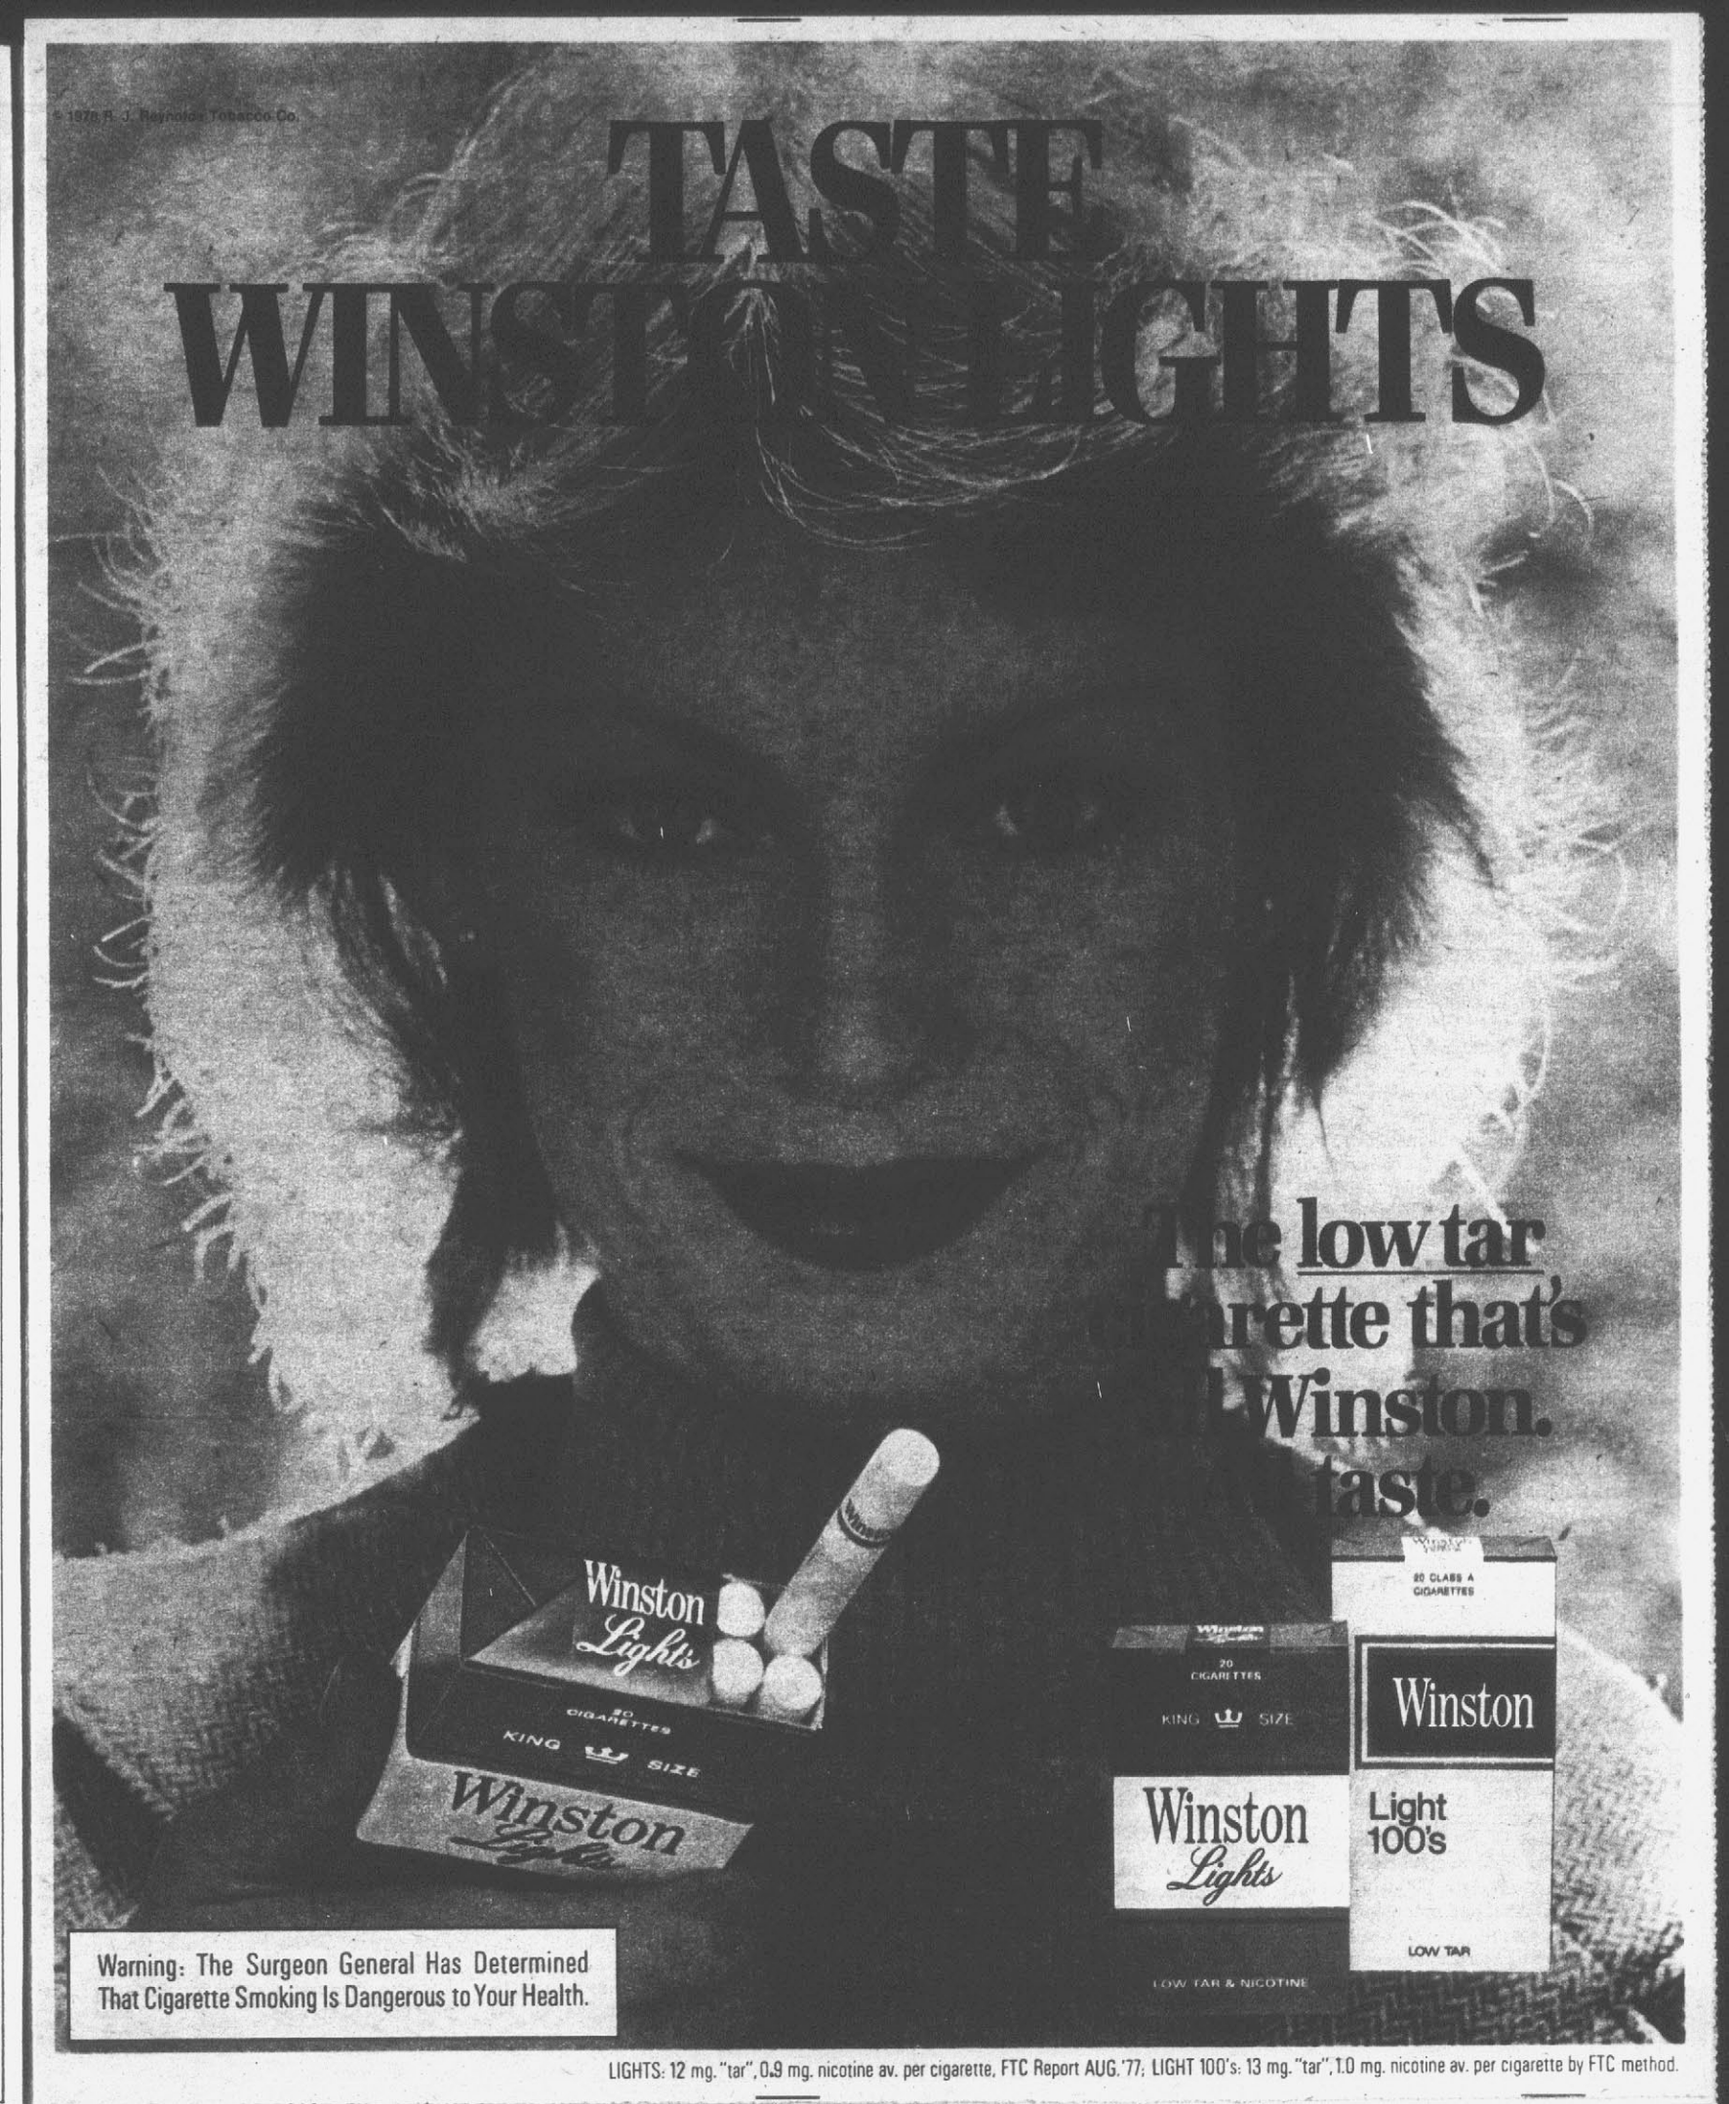

The ability of the U.S. to defend itself is in doubt. Soviet military strength has been increasing steadily for more than 15 years, and Soviet military spending now exceeds ours by 20 to 40 percent. In the area of nuclear strength, Soviet programs are designed to fight, win and survive a nuclear war. The Soviets continue to develop tanks and to deploy more powerful intercontinental land-based and submarine-launched ballistic missiles, bombers and submarines. The size, sophistication and rate of growth of Soviet military power far exceeds Soviet requirements for defense. A prompt response by the United States and our allies is now required.

JOHN JAKES: HIS HISTORY OF AMERICA REACHES MILLIONS

"Ultimately I'm a storyteller....I'm not trying to write sermonettes about the nation because if I lose the reader, I lose the game."

John Jakes

By Karen Levine

The Bicentennial functioned as a refresher course in American history for thousands of Americans. Shell's Bicentennial Minutes infused bits of history between soap operas and game shows. Fast-food stops from New York to the farthest reaches of our "manifest destiny" offered all sorts of information about the people and events of our past imprinted on their paper plates and cups. Nothing could have been more American than the merchandizing and selling of our 200th anniversary. Today, two years after the event, John Jakes — author of the outstandingly successful American Bicenntenial Series/Kent Family Chronicles — is still selling yesterday's news.

It's hard to imagine that any one American sprang from 1976 back to 1776 with more determination or enterprise than John Jakes. With more than 22 million copies of his books in print (volume eight has yet to be completed) and a successful television movie of the first, The Bastard, behind him, Jakes has become somewhat of a phenomenon as a "pop-historian." Last year he became the first author ever to have three books on the New York Times best-seller list in one year.

Jakes had worked for years as creative director of an advertising company's Dayton, Ohio, office and had written TV jingles, 200 short stories, 10 plays and 50 undistinguished novels before his agent approached him with the idea for the series. Pyramid was looking for someone to write a five-volume saga that would begin before the American Revolution and follow the descendants of one fictional family over 200 years. Their intention was to use historical events as a backdrop for the usual stuff of mass-market fiction — love, lust, blood, action and adventure. They needed, more than anything, a writer who could "turn the books out quickly."

Jakes fits that bill. He has the discipline and stamina to sit down at his Remington every day and turn out 6,000 words. His years in advertising had prepared him to write under pressure. Yet before his involvement with The Bicentennial Series, he had no particular interest in American history. He remembers being bored by high-school history teachers in Chicago.

His nonexistent background in history didn't bother his publisher. They didn't expect the history in the books to be very detailed and assumed he would learn enough to get by. They were surprised. Although Jakes claims to be less concerned with what "college history professors think" of his books than with providing good entertainment, no historians to date have taken issue with Jakes's recreation of our past.

Before beginning to write The Bastard, Jakes embarked on what was to be a massive research project. He has spent four months in the Dayton Library reading secondary sources on American history for each of his books. Although he rarely reads the sort of diaries that we come upon in antique stores, he does pay particular attention to the writers of the times. They give him a feeling for what life was like during the periods he writes about, and Jakes is more concerned with conveying that sort of "feeling" than with writing historical documents.

From his hotel suite in New York City, where he was winding up a national publicity tour, he discussed the nature of his research. "My characters and my research kind of generate the story," he explained. "When I come across a particular bit of information that moves me personally, I make a point of incorporating it in my book."

Jakes, whose stocky 6' frame looks more career-army than career writer, is eager to cite some examples of his method. Since he felt personally moved when he read of Paul Revere's depression following his first wife's death, he made a point of including that in The Bastard. The character of Ben Franklin — one of Jakes's favorites among the Founding Fathers — is presented with all of his idiosyncrasies: air baths, a fondness for a glass or two (or three) of Madeira and a predilection for young girls. Throughout the series Jakes has attempted to hook into the things that might transcend a history lesson and to touch his readers in a personal, emotional way.

"Ultimately I'm a storyteller," he says. "I'm not trying to write sermonettes about the nation because if I lose the reader, I lose the game."

In an effort to turn on people who, like himself, had been turned off history in school, Jakes looks for the details of daily life — the dress, weapons, housing and industry of the times. Since the main character of the first book, Phillip Kent, is a printer, Jakes went about studying printing in Colonial America. And since one of the most appealing aspects of his books is the interactions between Jakes's fictional characters and the real characters of history — from John Adams to Teddy Roosevelt — Jakes pays special attention to biography.

He began the work with concrete goals. "I set out to write as positive a history as I could," he says, "but I didn't want to write a Pollyanna history." He sounds a bit like he's anticipating some criticism. "I wasn't going to whitewash the ugly chapters," he continues, "the slavery, the agony of the Civil War, the way the Irish were mistreated or the land taken from the Indians." Of course, one simply couldn't "whitewash" those chapters of our history in this day and age, but Jakes seems genuine enough.

He presents himself as a "regular guy." He loves his wife. He trusts his family "to the bottom of my soul." He has "deep religious feelings" but isn't a "big fan of organized religion." And he loves to go to the movies, go out for hamburgers and play Frisbee. His greatest extravagance since his success was to buy an expensive pinball machine. And he "put new gutters on the house."

Aside from that fact that he's made at least a million dollars (Jakes refuses to discuss money), he's just like all his neighbors in Ohio — as American as his Bicentennial Series. Yet there must be something in all of this ordinariness to account for Jakes's enormous success, and one suspects it has to do with an early-childhood account of poisoning.

"I always say that I was poisoned by Errol Flynn and Max Steiner musical scores that set the whole tone for the kind of thing I love best — Anthony Adverse on the screen," Jakes explains in an effort to account for the success of his books. Indeed, his books are filled with the kind of action we used to find in an Errol Flynn movie. The volumes are replete with dueling, scheming, massacres, conflagration, patriotism and "a healthy sprinkling of sex."

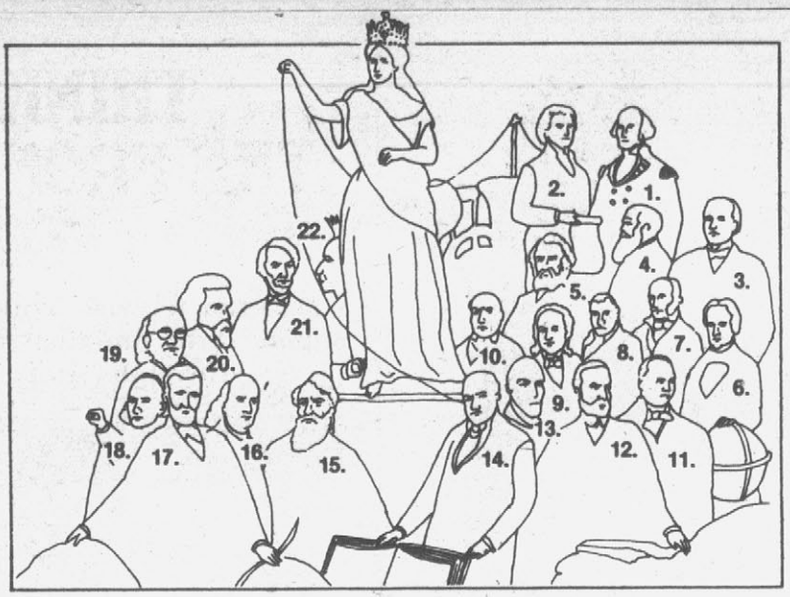

A thoughtful reader will probably stop for a moment to consider the likelihood of members of one family being present at every significant historical event in our nation's history. And there are times when the "history lesson" isn't very well-integrated into the plot — when you'll want to skip a few pages on the planning of the Boston Tea Party to get on to Phillip's progress with his new lady-friend. But there's no doubt that he's a craftsman when it comes to pacing.

One reviewer admitted that he "likes the books in spite of himself." If you're the kind of vegetarian who likes a hot-dog on the sly; if you're an ardent supporter of your local educational TV station but can't resist the reruns of the Honeymooners; if you loved Star Wars and can relate to Jakes's appraisal of it as "an Errol Flynn movie with science-fiction trappings"; or if you're a shameless fan of junk food ("I don't want to think about what's in it...it tastes good") and books like Airport and Valley of the Dolls, it's possible that one bite of The Bicentennial Series/Kent Family Chronicles may get you hooked. One fan said it was like "torture" waiting for the next book to appear! FW

ABOUT OUR COVER

The painting on our cover, Centennial Progress U.S.A., July 4 1876, was completed in 1875 by New York City artist Montgomery C. Tiers. The 68″ × 48¾″ oil is typical of Tiers's work; his canvases were of large size so that each portrait was a perfect likeness. They often were taken from photographs in his collection. The Hirschl & Adler Galleries in New York City, owners of the painting, value it at $15,000.

How many of the famous Americans in the painting are you able to identify? Check your guesses against this list: 1) George Washington; 2) Thomas Jefferson; 4) William Cullen Bryant; 5) Henry Wadsworth Longfellow; 6) Henry Clay; 8) Robert Fulton; 9) John James Audubon; 10) Daniel Webster; 11) "Commodore" Cornelius Vanderbilt; 12) Anson Burlingame (or John Jacob Astor); 15) Samuel F.B. Morse; 16) Benjamin Franklin; 17) Ulysses S. Grant; 18) Admiral David Glasgow Farragut; 19) Horace Greeley; 20) Frederick Douglass; 21) Abraham Lincoln.

As you can see, the experts still haven't been able to identify all the figures. If you think you know who one of the unidentified individuals is, write: Historical Cover, FAMILY WEEKLY, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022.

THINKING BIG: THE FRONTIER SPIRIT TODAY

California to New York in 54 minutes, icebergs to supply arid nations with water — two breakthroughs that could change our lives.

Dr. Stan Ries and his assistant examine experimental tomato plant.

A giant seaplane will carry 1,200 people, lessen airfield congestion.

By Fran Rogers Krajewski

Americans have always "thought big." It's been one of our great strengths, and it's still going on.

For example, you're in Los Angeles, but you want to be in New York City. Will 54 minutes be soon enough to get there? In the foreseeable future the trip may be that short and you can even stop off in Dallas along the way by way of a "Planetran." As described by its conceiver, Dr. Robert M. Salter, senior scientist of the Rand Corporation (the famed "think tank" of experts), Planetran is a subway system moving at thousands of miles an hour. Its long, narrow bulletlike cars will travel in underground tubes and be electromagnetically supported and propelled. Cars will float on these magnetic fields just as a surfboard rides ocean waves.

It will offer a safe, convenient, nonpolluting service, and while the Planetran carries us, it can move freight at the same velocity. And getting the tunnels dug is not the insurmountable problem it may seem. About 8,000 miles of tunnels were drilled in the 1960's alone.

Are there compelling reasons for Planetran? The answer is an emphatic yes according to Dr. Salter. "We need to get the bulk of truck traffic off highways and free these routes of much of the commuter auto traffic to restore to motorists the pleasure and convenience of driving through the countryside." The economy in speed to deliver the nation's groceries could by itself justify the plan.

From Japan's Shin Meiwa Industry Co. comes another mind-boggler. Concerned about the encroachment by large airports on our countryside and the burgeoning costs of airports, the company is blueprinting a 1,200-passenger giant of a seaplane. Its advantages are immediately apparent — no land to buy or people to annoy with noisy jets overhead and the mass movement of passengers.

The plane, called Shin Meiwa GS (for Giant Seaplane), will dwarf our jumbo jets. It will be triple-decked and football-field long. With an estimated cost of $60 million (the cost of three jumbo jets) and the aerodynamics well worked out, it could be flying above us in a decade.

Nature has a way of thinking big herself. Her icebergs tipped into the sky and bulky-big below the surface are inviting iceboxes and water buckets. Saudi Arabia and other places in dire need of water are considering hauling these monsters to their arid ports. When the idea was first broached, there were guffaws of disbelief. But the engineering has been worked out, and harvesting and transporting the frigid to the arid may be in our immediate future.

Our problems with oil have added still another giant of an idea to the pool of the possible. Our fertilizer comes from petroleum. There isn't much petroleum. So what substitute can there be? Dr. Stan Ries, a Michigan State horticulturist, has an answer. "As a substitute, we thought that the nitrogen-rich forages, like alfalfa, might be used in an emergency," he said. When vegetable field tests were made with alfalfa instead of traditional fertilizers, the results were astonishing. Alfalfa-treated tomatoes, for example, yielded an average of 11 tons per acre more. The implication of this think-big idea upon world food shortages is limitless.

Regardless of whether you believe DNA research should be carried out, the re-engineering of genes is here, and the good effects may be overwhelming.

Re-engineered genes (changing the basic structure) reproduce themselves. If the appropriate genes were successfully inserted into bacteria, they could become miniature pharmaceutical factories. For instance, the tiny creatures could supply great amounts of hemoglobin, insulin, vitamins and antibiotics. Not the least of the benefits could be a greatly advanced understanding of the molecular nature of disease — especially malignancy, which seems to occur when the genetic machinery goes awry. FW

TATUM O'NEAL: SEPARATING FACT FROM FICTION

"Sometimes she's 14 going on 40, other days 14 going on 10. If she didn't have a little bit of the little girl quality, you'd be scared to death for her because she would be a monster."

A moment in International Velvet, and a pleasanter one with costar Jeffrey Byron.

Tatum O'Neal is the youngest winner of an Oscar.

By Helen Dorsey

"I've grown up with adults," says Tatum O'Neal. "I know their responsibilities, their phoniness, their politeness. I can use it now."

It took only seconds to realize the tall, pretty, perceptive 14-year-old is nearly grown up. But is she? Her words sound so mature. Seated in her trailer, applying makeup, she was businesslike, poised, quiet-spoken. The Academy Award winner, the youngest to win an Oscar, was at the snooty Ledyard Farm horse trials in Hamilton, Mass., where segments of International Velvet were being shot. The sequel of the 1944 movie, National Velvet, which made Elizabeth Taylor a household name, is Tatum's fourth starring role.

Tatum O'Neal's already a household name, not so much for her performances as for her off-camera comings and goings. Every time she appears in public, her every move is chronicled by the press.

Fans read about Tatum riding around in limousines, going on shopping sprees in London boutiques with Bianca Jagger, buying out the store with Chastity, Cher's daughter, being interviewed by Andy Warhol, wearing a flashy, low-cut sequined gown, table-hopping and disco-dancing in nightclubs with her father, firing a chauffeur off a movie set and spouting expletives at her costar, veteran actor Walter Matthau, during Bad News Bears.

Sure, Tatum's growing up. She gets her first screen kiss in the $5.2 million International Velvet. Tatum is supposed to age from 12 to 18 on the screen. Braces for her teeth, stringy hairdo and simple school-girl dress make her look young. "The real problem," says director Bryan Forbes, "is trying to make her a believable 12- year-old. In real life, her emotional age has an even greater spread — from 9 to 39."

Nonetheless, Tatum's struggling to deal with her public. She's developed an adult's wariness in place of a child's trusting nature. Tatum's polite and uncommonly poised behavior puzzled many of the movie crew. "Tatum's an enigma. . . .She's too polite, too wary," most Tatum watchers observed. One teenager, an avid horsewoman, jeered. "Tatum's a phoney. Who does she think she's kidding? She thinks if she acts grown up, she can fool the press or fans and change her image."

Currently, Tatum and her dad are trying to overcome Tatum's brat image. Ryan, Tatum's biggest booster and protector, blames Tatum and himself for part of their "horrendous press. We've been a little snooty to the press. We're not cordial to reporters. This is the first interview I've given in three years. Tatum's under orders not to talk to the press."

Tatum often freezes if anyone refers to her friends or former classmates. Small wonder, too, since Tatum once told her father her classmates applauded when she told them she wouldn't be returning to the same school the following year. Tatum's movie career and traveling with her dad have often interrupted her education. Consequently, she's attended a series of schools and is tutored when she's working.

Ryan provides a familial atmosphere for his daughter. To protect her, he has "Big Diane," his beautiful, former secretary. 34-year-old Diane Lewis, travel with and chaperon his daughter.

"Tatum's father is the biggest influence on her life," says Diane. "She and her dad are extremely close. Tatum's very protective toward him."

Tatum's biggest heartache, according to Diane is being confronted by her image: "People expect her to be like the person they read about. It takes a little time before she can open up to trust someone. She's been stabbed in the back a few times. That hurts." Having Esme, her teenage neighbor who lives near her on the beach as her traveling companion, keeps Tatum from getting too homesick.

Tatum responds best to "much love and affection," says Diane. "All you have to be is honest with her."

Walter Matthau found Tatum surprisingly tractable. "People treat her like a spoiled child star," he explains. "They get the same treatment back. I found her cooperative and interesting. She's bright, well-informed and serious. She knows that acting requires teamwork."

Tatum's ability to handle herself around her movie peers as well as ride a horse impressed William Steinkraus, Olympic Gold Medal winner and technical adviser on International Velvet. Tatum took a two-month crash course in horseback riding, English style, to land the plum role.

"She's got more ability than you'd expect," comments Steinkraus. "Of course, she doesn't ride as if she's been riding for 15 years, but she has an actress's ability to take directions and do what you ask of her.

"She's still very young," continues Steinkraus. "Sometimes she's 14 going on 40, other days, 14 going on 10. If she didn't have a little bit of the little-girl quality, you'd be scared to death for her because she would be a monster."

Much of the press's interest in Tatum stems from her "bankability." "Tatum doesn't have an allowance," says her dad. "Diane gives her what she needs. She borrows my credit cards. Tatum's what you call a dollar millionairess. She made $2.1 million for Bad News Bears. The Government took most: we invested the rest." (Her take made her the highest-paid child actress for a single movie in cinematic history.) Tatum draws a cool $450,000 for International Velvet, plus a percentage.

Ryan gives Tatum a lot of credit: "She's much smarter than I. She knows the difference between a Malibu beach lifestyle and an English movie set. The British are so well organized and civilized. Bryan Forbes has done a wonderful job with her, controlling her and looking out for her. It's been a family atmosphere."

"Tatum's got extraordinary charisma," says Forbes. "She has that indefinable thing the camera uses, that strange alchemy that suddenly takes place between the lens and the celluloid."

The biggest pressure in Tatum's life will be, says Forbes, "when she tests her ability to make the Grand Canyon jump between being a child actress and a young adult. Much will depend upon the roles she picks. This is a landmark film for her career and in her real life as well."

Obviously, Tatum's thinking about her future, too. "Family's very important to me," she says thoughtfully.

Somehow she seems to equate choosing good films with choosing to be a good person: "I hope I'll keep on choosing to go down the right road. Hopefully, I won't choose a bad film. I'm very careful. Life's very tricky." FW

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

Is a sloppy dresser indifferent to politics? Do most Americans care whether the President likes sports?

WHY PEOPLE VOTE THE WAY THEY DO

TRUE OR FALSE

1. A man's attitude toward women tells a lot about the way he's likely to vote.
2. The typical nonvoter does not vote because he's so tolerant of the views of others and has difficulty making up his mind about political issues.
3. Closed-minded people tend to vote for candidates on the right.
4. The person who doesn't care how he looks doesn't care how he votes and is generally indifferent to political issues.
5. A Presidential campaign year is more nerve-shattering for many voters than for the candidates.
6. The characteristics voters most like to see in a President are the ability to inspire others, interest in military preparedness and an enthusiasm for sports.

ANSWERS

1. True. If a man has a roving eye, the odds are that he won't vote conservatively. In fact, psychological studies conducted by a team of Idaho State University investigators found that conservative voters of both sexes tended to be equally conservative where romantic involvements were concerned. These findings are borne out by other studies and are interpreted as indicating that "the fear of loss of control of one's impulses" associated with conservatism is a determinant of feelings about romantic relationships.

2. False. In his treatise titled Personality and Politics, sociologist David J. Hanson cites studies that provide a personality profile of the typical nonvoter: he is strongly opinionated, thinks he is smarter than people who do vote, entertains "cynical ideas about democracy and political parties, is intolerant of deviant opinions and ethnic minorities" and tends to be narcissistic and withdrawn.

3. False. A State University of New York study evaluates the findings of socio-political research, which indicates that "closed-minded people may be rightists, leftists or middle-of-the-roaders." It is concluded, however, that authoritarians of the political left and right tend to be about equally dogmatic.

4. False. Pennsylvania State University studies found that "it was possible to predict a student's social and political beliefs by observing his clothing and be correct 76 percent of the time." People who had no concern for clothing often evidenced strong concern with political issues and the importance of voting, and their views tended to range from left to extreme left. On the other hand, students who were concerned about clothing "to enhance the person and to give prestige value" tended to vote conservatively and to embrace the beliefs held by those who want to preserve the status quo.

5. True. According to studies at the Loma Linda University Scientific Computation Facility, in California, for some people the Presidential elective process, along with its transitional uncertainties, is a chaotic and stressful period that is difficult to endure. It may even result in a nervous breakdown. In fact, the studies conclude that if such stress is cumulative, "it is possible that, for some, a Presidential election is the proverbial 'straw that breaks the camel's back.'"

6. False. At least as indicated by a Middle Tennessee State University study that described these results: "To assess the relative value accorded to the characteristics of a candidate for national political office a questionnaire was prepared and distributed to college students at a state university with the following instructions: 'Of the 10 characteristics listed below, please decide which three you would most like to see in a candidate for the Presidency and which three characteristics you would value least: outstanding intellectual ability, experience in government, strong religious orientation, interest in military preparedness, concern for human welfare, honesty and integrity, interest in sports, understanding of international relations, ability to inspire, sensitivity to racial problems.'" Results: The three most valued characteristics were honesty and integrity, concern for human welfare and experience in government. Included among the least-valued characteristics were ability to inspire, interest in military preparedness, interest in sports. FW

The Doctor And You

How To Tell If A Headache Is Serious

Headache is one of the most common complaints a doctor hears. But it is a symptom not a sickness and rarely has a single, simple cause. So when you go to a doctor about your headache, he has his job cut out for him.

Ask the average person what doctor to see about headache, and he'll send you to an eye doctor. Many people think that a need for glasses causes headache, but this is rarely the case. Some eye problems cause headaches — glaucoma, for instance — but eye trouble is low on the list of headache causes.

Ask the average medical student about headache and he'll talk about brain tumor. Yet while headache sometimes develops in the late stages of a brain tumor, tumors are not a common cause of headache.

Most headaches are caused by tension. Muscles attached to the front and back of the head tighten under stress causing a headache that often feels as if your head is being fitted into a tight hat. Spasms of head muscles can cause constant pain just as keeping your fist tightly clenched for an hour or so will cause hand and arm pain. Tension, anxiety, even depression can cause the muscles to tighten and the headache to develop. Mild pain killers, sedatives and muscle relaxers are used to treat this most common type of headache.

Migraine is the second most common type of headache. It is caused by a spasm of blood vessels inside the skull and a widening of pain-sensitive blood vessels outside the skull. Pain develops as these outer blood vessels are stretched and made to pulsate. Sometimes the skin and scalp over the affected blood vessels are tender.

Typical migraine is a one-sided headache (the word migraine is a shortened form of "hemi-crania" meaning half-a-head). It is usually heralded by an aura, a sensation or feeling the patient learns will soon be followed by a one- sided headache. Along with the migraine, nausea and vomiting are common as are changes in vision, loss of the use of an extremity and changes in sensation. The headache is intense and throbbing and may last for days.

Migraine is more common in women than in men. Headaches occur more frequently around the time of the menstrual period than at other times during the month. But menopause does not necessarily mean the end of migraine for women. Birth-control pills, however, may induce migraine and increase its frequency and severity. So most doctors advise women with migraine or with a family history of it to avoid the pill.

Treatment of migraine is directed toward relieving the relaxed state of the blood vessels outside the skull. Ergot compounds, which cause blood vessels to contract, are often prescribed. A new medicine, propranolol (Inderal), has proven helpful for many patients.

Cluster or blood-vessel spasm headaches are more common in men than in women. They are one-sided, throbbing headaches, during which the patient has a runny eye and runny nose on the same side as the pain. Cluster-headache attacks come every day or night for a few weeks or perhaps months, then disappear as mysteriously as they came, perhaps never to return. Ergot drugs are sometimes helpful.

Here are some questions to ask yourself to decide whether your headache is serious. Does it wake you at night? If it does, you're in trouble. Few unimportant pains wake you out of a sound sleep. Can you relieve the headache with aspirin? Most serious conditions will not be helped by aspirin or any of the over-the-counter pain killers. Is the headache different from the ones you usually get? Is it stronger, longer? Does it have other symptoms accompanying it? If it does, see a doctor. And as a rule, one-sided headaches are more important than ones all over the head.

Remember: headache can be brought on by many causes at the head and elsewhere in the body. If you have a headache that persists or recurs regularly, have it checked out.

THE PAIN AND JOY OF BECOMING AN AMERICAN

"I want to contribute to this country. I want to build a future for my children."

Bill Newcott

The Americanization of the Si Hon Bui family: Hon and wife Cam with Co, Uyen, Al and the little ones, An and Y.

By Bill Newcott

One year ago, Si Hon Bui, his wife Cam and their five young children sat huddled in a Vietnamese hamlet, waiting for the moment they could escape from advancing Communist troops. They had moved from Da Nang to the small village for fear they might be killed by the soldiers who, it was said, often murdered those who sympathized with the former Government.

Today Si Hon Bui and his family live in a suburb of Los Angeles in a community made up largely of Vietnamese refugees. For the Si family and their fellow countrymen, the transition to American life has not been easy.

For the refugees, little seems the same as it was in Vietnam. The Southern California climate, considered scorching by many Americans, is chilly to native Vietnamese, who seldom experienced temperatures lower than 79°. Dressing for different seasons, and even different times of the day, used to be unheard of.

And the people of the United States...well. Hon Bui and Cam know they mean well, but the forwardness and loud mannerisms of Americans were, at first, disturbing for the quiet, mild-mannered Vietnamese.

"It is very difficult to change," said Cam. "The civilization here is very, very different."

After spending years in the crowded Vietnamese cities or the close village living conditions, the refugees find even the small open spaces of American suburbia breathtaking. Sitting in the living room of her family's small house, Cam looked through the window to the homes across the street. The houses could not have been more than five or 10 feet apart, but to Cam they seemed positively remote.

"The houses here," she said. "Every house is like a monastery. They are so far apart."

Since arriving here, the Si family, along with most other refugees, has often had to depend on Government subsidies and the kindness of others to manage. But the strong Vietnamese spirit of independence, which sustained many of the country's citizens through 20 years of war, never lost hold, and the new arrivals have tried to forge a place for themselves in their new world.

Almost immediately upon arriving, Hon Bui took a job. He soon realized, though, that he needed time to adapt to his new world, which was rapidly starting to look like a whole new universe.

Now, Hon Bui is studying English. When he has mastered the language sufficiently, he hopes to start a career in computer-programming. But first learning a new language and then a new skill is going to be difficult, and he knows it.

"I come here to live in my second country," he said. "I feel I must imitate the ancestors of this place. I want to contribute to this country. I want to build a future for my children."

As their father builds for their future, the children also are throwing themselves into the mainstream of their new home. Co Bui, 9, Uyen Bui, 8, and Al Bui, 6, are attending public school. Although they, too, must struggle with the language, they are doing well.

Cam is proud of her children's accomplishments and of her husband's preparations for the future. But she is no slouch, herself. A former French teacher in Vietnam, Cam also is anxious to make a contribution.

"Am studying typing," she said. "I will be a secretary." Besides following her studies, Cam also is a full-time mother to her two youngest children, An Bui, 4, and Y Bui, 3. Luckily, she has been able to manage the American method of shopping in grocery stores. "I have not much problem with money and the stores," she said. "Is about the same, in many ways, as in my country."

This week, as Americans remember the revolutionary spirit that brought this country into being, Si Hon Bui and Cam will be giving thought to their hopes for the future of both their new home and their old one. "I would like to go back," Cam said, "to visit. There are many soldier in the forest there. They are against the Communists. I hope they maybe win someday."

For now, though, the family that 12 months ago had little hope of escaping their country's debacle will have its first, and a most meaningful, Fourth of July.

"We thank God," Cam said, "and we thank America to help us have a happy life." FW

LOOK TO LEMONS FOR OLD-TIME, FAMILY-PLEASER RECIPES

Remember the light goodness of Lemon Icebox Cake, Lemon Sugar Cookies and creamy Lemon Curd? Here they are again.

By Marilyn Hansen

TIPS ON LEMONS

HOW TO BUY LEMONS:

Look for firm fruit with smooth, shiny skins. Avoid soft lemons with bruised, bumpy or wrinkled skins; they are old or have been badly stored.

HOW TO STORE:

Lemons will keep at room temperature for about a week to 10 days. In the refrigerator, place in plastic bag and store in covered vegetable crisper where temperatures are warmest. Stored this way, lemons will keep for at least a month. The plastic bag helps hold in natural moisture.

HOW TO GET MORE JUICE:

You will get 50 percent more juice if you bring lemons to room temperature and roll them with the palm of your hand on the cutting board before cutting and squeezing. Why? This step breaks down the tiny juice sacs in the fruit.

NEED JUST A LITTLE JUICE?

Roll lemon, poke hole in end with toothpick, squeeze and out comes juice. Replace pick for storing.

HOW MANY TO BUY:

One medium lemon will yield 3 teaspoons grated peel.

One medium lemon will yield 3 tablespoons juice.

Six medium lemons will yield 1 cup juice.

DO YOU KNOW?

You can keep white vegetables white by adding lemon to the cooking water.

You can keep cheese soft by rubbing with lemon, wrapping with damp cloth and then refrigerating.

A squeeze of lemon makes diet drinks taste better.

You can make your own mock buttermilk by adding enough milk to 1 tablespoon lemon juice to make 1 cup.

MARKET REPORT

There will be an excellent supply of lemons in markets now through the end of July. Due to heavy rains in California during late winter and early spring, lemons will be larger, and these will be the best buy.

2. In top of double boiler, with electric mixer or rotary beater, beat egg yolks well with ½ cup sugar and salt. Gradually beat in gelatin mixture.
3. Cook over boiling water until mixture starts to thicken (about 10 minutes), stirring constantly. Add lemon rind.
4. Refrigerate until mixture begins to thicken, about 45 minutes, stirring once or twice.
5. Line bottom and sides of an 8- or 9-inch round spring-form pan with ladyfingers.
6. Beat egg whites until foamy; gradually add remaining ½ cup sugar, beating until soft peaks form.
7. Fold beaten egg whites and whipped cream into thickened lemon-gelatin mixture. Spoon into lined pan.
8. Refrigerate at least 4 hours or overnight. Carefully remove from pan. Garnish with rosettes of additional whipped cream and grated lemon rind if desired.

1 baked 9-inch graham-cracker crust, chilled
Lemon cartwheel twist

1. In saucepan, thoroughly combine gelatin, 1 cup sugar and salt. Gradually stir in water and lemon juice until smooth.
2. Beat egg yolks well; blend into gelatin-lemon mixture. Cook over medium heat about 8 minutes, stirring constantly, until slightly thickened and gelatin is thoroughly dissolved. Do not allow to boil.
3. Stir in grated rind; immediately pour into a bowl. Chill in refrigerator until mixture mounds when dropped from a spoon; stir frequently.
4. Meanwhile, beat egg whites in large mixing bowl with electric mixer until soft peaks form when beaters are slowly raised.
5. Gradually add remaining ¼ cup sugar, beating at high speed until stiff peaks barely form and surface is glossy and moist.
6. Whip cream until it holds a soft shape. Carefully fold chilled lemon mixture into whipped cream and then into egg whites. Refrigerate for 15 to 20 minutes to set gel slightly.
7. Spoon into prepared graham-cracker crust. Refrigerate until completely set. Garnish with lemon cartwheel twist.

Makes one 9-inch pie, 8 servings

NEW FREEDOM FROM DAILY DENTURE "FIXINGS"

Snug Cushions hold dentures comfortably tight for weeks

No more "fixings" every morning with messy powders or creams. Even if dentures need "fixing" after every meal, here's important news. Snug cushions restore dentures' holding power so dentures stay comfortably tight for weeks. Snug, the soft, effective temporary aid, forms a "comfort bond" between dentures and gums. Sticks to dentures, not to gums. Rinse, scrub or soak Snug fresh and clean. Easy to remove, but won't wash off or flake away. So, end daily "fixings"! Use Snug to hold dentures comfortably tight for weeks. SNUG

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

HEAR HEAR

I know I need a hearing aid,
For me a new admission.
I long had thought it others' fault
And not my own condition.

I swore that others mumbled so
And spoke in tones so faint,
They were the ones to blame, and I
Had reason for complaint.

I now believe the blame is shared—
Not theirs or mine alone.
I'll get a hearing aid if they Will get a megaphone.

WHAT IN THE WORLD

Booklets For You And Your Family

Run for Life, a booklet endorsed by The President's Council on Physical Fitness, covers almost everything you need to know about setting up a personal running program. Request your free copy from: Conn. Mutual Life Insurance Co., 140 Garden St., Dept. FW, Hartford, Conn. 06115.

Planning a move? Then you'll be interested in the tips in 2 free booklets on renting an apt. and buying a home, available from: Shelter Guides, SC-3, State Farm Insurance Co., Dept. FW, 1 State Farm Plaza, Bloomington, Ill. 61701. Please write either "home" or "apartment" on the outside of your request.

Tips on Dry Cleaning discusses such topics as when home spot removal is safe. Send a stamped, self-addressed business envelope to: Internat'l. Fabricare Inst., Dept. FW, Box 940, Joliet, Ill. 60434.

Tips For Beginning Joggers

How can you get your jogging program off to a running start? Here are some tips from Dr. Richard C.. MacDonald, a Me. osteopathic physician and marathon runner.

- Run with a partner. The 2 of you can give each other crucial support.
- Don't jog in sneakers. The money you invest in a quality, flexible running shoe is more than worth it, as you need good heel and arch support each time your foot hits the ground.
- Try yoga or other stretching exercises to limber muscles before running.
- Eat well before your planned running time. Eating and digesting use energy you need for running.
- Stick to a running routine.

Firework Safety

Are you planning your own fireworks celebration for the Fourth? If you live in one of the 35 states that permit some sort of family-type fireworks, such as sparklers and snakes, here are a few tips from the Consumer Product Safety Comm.

- Look for a manufacturer's label and the words "Class C Fireworks" before you buy. If these do not appear, the item was manufactured illegally and probably won't conform to Fed. safety standards.
- Read the directions carefully. The most common cause of injury is misuse.
- Have an adult present. Children under 15 are prime victims of fireworks accidents. Proper supervision can prevent mishandling. Never give fireworks to small children.
- Never experiment. Don't take fireworks apart or mix anything with the contents. Never make fireworks.
- Ignite outdoors. Light fireworks in clear areas away from houses and flammable materials such as gasoline cans or dry brush. Do not ignite in metal or glass containers.
- Have water handy to douse misfired fireworks. Do not try to relight malfunctioning fireworks; soak them with water and throw away.
- Light 1 at a time and keep a safe distance away.
- Never carry fireworks in your pockets.
- Store in a cool, dry place.

Music From The Womb

Sounds that babies hear while in the womb are being used by British researchers to pacify difficult infants and to obtain reliable measurements of babies' hearing.

One of the foremost researchers investigating baby hearing, Dr. Michelle Clements of London, has built an apparatus that has already tested 2,000 babies. Babies are exposed to "primal sounds," including the sound of the mother's heartbeat heard through the uterine fluid, to test their hearing. Clements says response to these uterine sounds is more predictable than the babies' reactions to everyday noises.

Infants with the slowest responses or no responses at all are sent for further hearing assessment. When the testing is done within a few weeks of birth, appropriate treatment can be given to help minimize permanent hearing damage.

As for the soothing sounds, RCA is producing an album that will contain both simulated womb sounds and music that has been observed to pacify babies. Researchers say certain passages of Brahms do the trick.

Rooms At The Top

Is your office as professional as you are? You may be surprised at the answer, says prof. Robin Visci, a visiting instructor at Purdue Univ. who has been a design consultant to several firms.

"Furnishings that make a home comfortable and relaxing make an office inefficient," says Visci's colleague, Vicki Willis. "When an office looks too much like a residence, the professional image doesn't come across."

What makes for professionalism? Aim for a clean and crisp look. Among the no-no's, says Visci, are overstuffed chairs, pieces that are too soft and overdone, drapes that "give the visitor the feeling that he's in your living room."

Quick Takes

Moonlighting is on the rise among women according to the latest Gov't. statistics. Out of every 100 moonlighters, 27 are now women, the highest percentage ever. The figures indicate that currently 1¼ million women, or 34 out of every 1,000 women workers, hold an extra job.

Donations to charitable groups by Americans rose nearly 10% from the 1976 levels to more than $35 billion says the Am. Ass'n. of Fund-Raising Counsel. Health and welfare causes were the most popular recipients of corporate funds, and individual donors favored religion.

Drinkers, uncertain whether they've had one too many to drive safely, can now get a reading on the level of alcohol in their systems — right in the bar. Several bars have already installed the machines, which give read-outs based on a breath test that the user blows into the unit. In seconds, the user gets a read-out in percentages and 1 of 3 messages: "Don't Drive," "Take It Easy" or "You're O.K."

Who holds the family purse-strings? According to a study by a N.Y. City advertising agency, it's the woman of the house. The survey reports that in ⅔ of the households studied the woman writes the checks and pays the bills — regardless of whether she works outside the home.

Your completed Clock will measure 7¼" tall, on a scale of 1" to 1', with a door that opens and closes to reveal the solid brass clock weights and pendulum! Your Kit provides everything you'll need, from furniture-quality wood to solid brass clock face and hardware. It's so easy to make . . . at a fraction of the cost of the antique originals!
