Americans Celebrate Their 202nd Birthday In Many Ways

By The Associated Press

In the mountains of Montana, unknown organizers planned a marijuana smoke-in; in the prairies of Oklahoma, a jogging club scheduled a Freedom Run; and near the oceans, hundreds of thousands of Americans hoped for sunny skies as the nation today celebrated the 202nd anniversary of its independence.

Many localities ushered in the Fourth of July holiday with parades and pageants with patriotic themes and scheduled traditional fireworks displays for tonight, while others, such as Hopewell, Va., welcomed the holiday with peculiarly regional rites — a greased-pole climb and a tobacco spitting contest.

A less traditional celebration was advertised for Billings, Mont., where unsigned, one-page flyers appeared last week calling for marijuana smokers to gather in a public park to "defend your right to smoke, grow and share."

There was also a peculiar twist to the holiday in another part of Montana, near Bozeman, where Gallatin National Forest officials reported "quality" summertime skiing — the result of high-altitude snow.

In Oklahoma, the Stillwater Running Club was sponsoring a Freedom Run for some 40 joggers who are to lap Oklahoma State University and then run four miles through campus.

As befits a holiday honoring the Declaration of Independence, freedom was a prime theme of many celebrations.

At Independence Hall, Mayor Frank Rizzo was scheduled to present Philadelphias's highest award, the Freedom Medal, to Cardinal John Krol, the city's Roman Catholic archbishop.

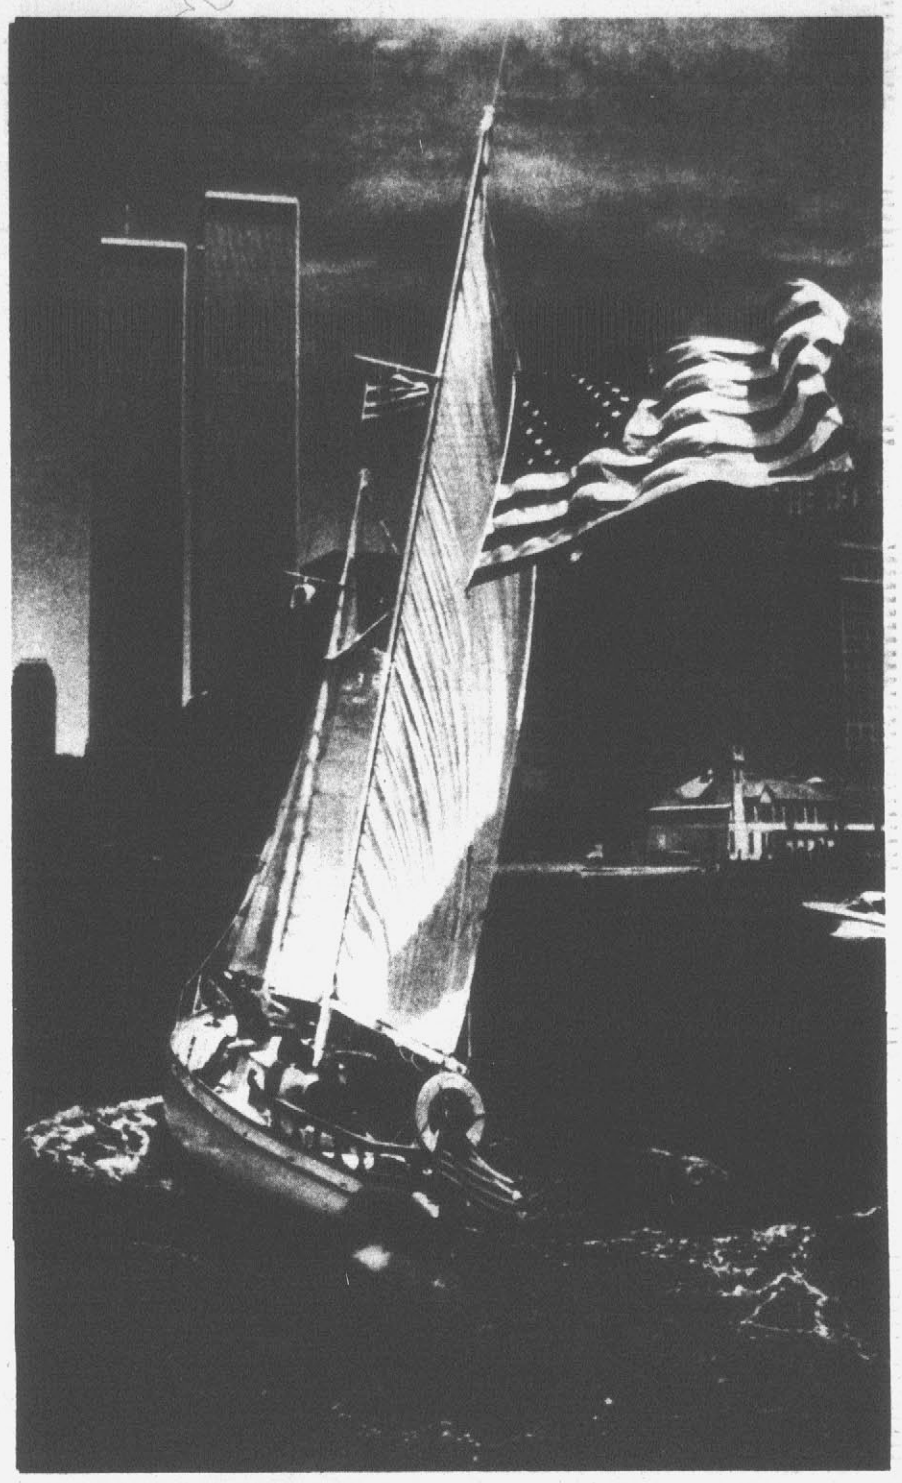

In Charlottesville, Va., Rob Coles, a descendant of Thomas Jefferson, was portraying one of the nation's founding fathers and its third president in a stage program called "Meet Thomas Jefferson."

Scores of veterans groups were staging marches and parades, with one of the largest the American Legion's annual pageant at Soldier Field in Chicago.

Music was playing a major role in Fourth of July festivities.

For the 50th Independence Day, conductor Arthur Fiedler and his Boston Pops Orchestra were planning to regale audiences with their rendition of Tchaikovski's "1812 Overture" and other works in a free concert on the banks of the Charles River in Boston.

Elsewhere, New Orleans was celebrating the late Louis Armstrong's birthday with an outdoor jazz concert, and 80,000-seat Rich Stadium in the Buffalo, N.Y., suburb of Orchard Park was playing host to a concert by the Rolling Stones. On Monday, the city of Providence, R.I., honored the late George M. Cohan, composer of "I'm a Yankee Doodle Dandy" and other patriotic songs.

Firemen Will Obey Court Order And Return To Work In Memphis

By LES SEAGO
Associated Press Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Memphis firefighters laid down their picket signs and returned to work this morning, ending a three-day walkout that spawned a state of civil emergency and saw hundreds of arson fires erupt in this Mississippi River city.

But the 1,400 firemen who left their stations at 7 a.m. Saturday said they were going back to work only because of a court order issued Monday afternoon.

"I've still got my picket sign in my car," one young firefighter said this morning as he carried his blue uniform on a hanger toward his midtown fire station. "If the negotiations don't go to suit us, we'll walk again."

Union President Kuhron Huddleston said Monday night the men had voted to obey the court order. He said he and other union leaders would return to the negotiating table with city officials in an attempt to work out a new contract.

A federal mediator has been called in to help reach an agreement.

Earlier Monday, Chancellor Robert Hoffman issued a temporary injunction ordering an end to the strike. The order, which permits minimal picketing only, came after a brief hearing in which City Attorney Cliff Pierce and union attorney Allan Blair were finally able to reach agreement on the injunction.

Hoffman did not specify a penalty should the injunction be disregarded. However, in similar cases, judges have ordered union officials back into court to answer contempt citations when their orders have been ignored.

More than 1,100 National Guardsmen, Navy and Marine volunteers and Forestry Service firefighters were on duty to provide fire protection for the city of 800,000 people. Mayor Wyeth Chandler said a 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew imposed Sunday would remain until the firefighters returned to work.

Fire Department officials said the number of fire alarms had dropped considerably since Saturday, when the strike began. At least 220 fires broke out Saturday night, mostly in abandoned buildings.

The city normally experiences eight fire alarms on a Saturday night.

"It's fairly quiet," Mike Kuykendall, an administrative assistant to the fire director, said late Monday. "In fact, fire calls have been slightly below average."

New Concessions Asked In Return For Resumption Of Egyptian-Israeli Talks

By ELIAS ANTAR
Associated Press Writer

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt (AP) — President Carter is getting the Israelis and the Egyptians back to the negotiating table this month, but the Egyptians expect the United States to force Israel to make concessions.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin and President Anwar Sadat agreed during Vice President Walter F. Mondale's visit to them this week to resume the face-to-face negotiations which Sadat broke off Jan. 18.

Foreign Ministers Mohamed Ibrahim Kamel and Moshe Dayan will meet in London with Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance about July 18. One qualified Egyptian source said his government looks on the meeting as a two-day, one-time-only round of talks without a commitment to continue talking.

"We agreed because Carter was insistent and because we wanted to satisfy the Americans," said the source.

"But everything has a price," said another senior Egyptian source close to the Sadat-Mondale meeting in Alexandria Monday. "We expect a political price from the United States."

Sadat has repeatedly said he would not resume direct talks with Israel until the Israelis bring "new elements" to the impasse resulting from Begin's insistence that the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip are Israeli territory and Sadat's insistence that Israel must agree to give them up.

Asked if Mondale brought any indication from Jerusalem that the Israelis had moved toward the Egyptian position, Sadat acknowledged: "To be frank, no."

Up for discussion in London will be rival Egyptian and Israeli proposals for the future of the two territories which Israel seized by Israel from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 war.

Begin has offered the 1.1 million Palestinians in the areas limited self-rule for five years after a peace agreement is concluded. He says after that period, Israel would be willing to discuss the territories' future relations with Israel and their Arab neighbors. But he has made plain that he expects the territories to remain Israeli territory.

Sadat at the least wants an Israeli commitment to withdraw most of its forces from the territories and to discuss the permanent future of the areas after a transition period.

Each government has publicly rejected the other's plan in advance. U.S. officials hope that once the deadlock is clear, both sides will accept American compromise proposals. Egyptian officials bristle at this suggestion, which could be an attempt to generate American pressure on the Israelis.

Sadat is reported planning some Israeli politicking of his own. Egyptian sources say he expects to meet with Israeli opposition leader Shimon Peres in Austria next weekend. The object, the sources say, is to undercut Begin at home by giving the impression that a deal would be possible if someone else was prime minister.

Puerto Ricans Hold Four Chilean Hostages

By RAFAEL L. MATOS
Associated Press Writer

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Four armed persons holding four hostages in the Chilean colsulate here softened their demands today after FBI agents negotiated with them through the night.

The quartet had demanded the release of four Puerto Rican nationalists from U.S. prisons and cancellation of the island commonwealth's Fourth of July celebration today in exchange for freeing the hostages.

The new demands were for a statement from the Puerto Rican government urging Puerto Ricans not to attend the celebration and for a statement from the White House promising to start work toward release of the nationalists, the FBI said.

Gov. Carlos Romero Barcelo and his government went ahead with plans for the big military and civilian parade this afternoon.

Police isolated the block in San Juan's old quarter where the consulate is located on the fourth floor of an eight-story bank.

"All we can do is wait," said an FBI spokesman.

The three men and a woman invaded the Chilean office Monday afternoon, taking Consul Ramon Gonzalez Ruiz, one of his staff and two unidentified persons in the office on business as hostages. Ruiz, allowed to speak to reporters by telephone, said they were being treated well.

One of the gunmen told The Associated Press the seizure of the consulate was also intended to express "repudiation of the representatives in Puerto Rico of the killers of the Chilean people," meaning the military junta that overthrew the late President Salvador Allende in a bloody coup in 1973.

The man spoke in Spanish and identified himself and his companions as Puerto Ricans although he did not appear to have a Puerto Rican accent. FBI spokesman Gordon McGinley said he talked by telephone with one of the men who "said they had no political connections. He sounded like a South American, but I couldn't tell from what country."

The gunman who talked to the AP said the group telephoned the State Department in Washington and dictated a letter to President Carter demanding the "unconditional release of our political prisoners, now," cancellation of the July 4th celebration in Puerto Rico and that Carter not permit the exchange of the prisoners for "spies."

This last demand apparently was a reference to recent reports that the U.S. government was considering exchanging the four imprisoned Puerto Ricans for U.S. citizens imprisoned in Cuba.

"We are not connected with any political or guerrilla group," the spokesman for the group said. "We are doing this because we want the freedom of our national heroes."

The FBI said the prisoners whose freedom was demanded were Lolita Lebron, Rafael Cancel Miranda and Irvin Flores, who were imprisoned for the attack in March 1954 in the U.S. House of Representatives in which five congressmen were wounded, and Oscar Collazo, who was convicted of attempting to assassinate President Truman in 1950.

Trust Is Up; Rating Down

By EVANS WITT
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans' trust in Jimmy Carter increased in June, but their rating of his performance as president continued at the lowest levels of his administration, an Associated Press-NBC News poll shows.

The rise in Carter's trust rating is a reversal of a long slide that started when Carter first began work in the Oval Office.

Forty-five percent of those questioned said they trust Carter to do what's right at least "most of the time." That's up five points from the 40 percent rating found in the May AP-NBC News poll.

But 53 percent said Carter can be trusted only "some of the time" or "almost never." That is down two points from May.

Two percent of the 1,600 adults interviewed by telephone June 27 and 28 were not sure.

Trust in Carter stood at its highest point in February 1977, days after he took office, according to an NBC News poll. At that time, 70 percent expressed trust in Carter, while only 25 percent said they lacked confidence in him.

From that poll until the latest survey, his trust rating had dropped steadily.

HELPFUL PATROLMAN

I had car trouble at the intersection of the 264 Bypass and Evans Street here Tuesday about 4 p. m. Traffic was heavy. Trooper Fred B. Davis of the N. C. Highway Patrol observed a service station attendant and me trying to move the car out of the intersection. He turned around and maneuvered his vehicle behind mine until I had cleared the intersection. I feel that Trooper Davis went beyond the call of duty and very possibly prevented a traffic accident. I am happy that we have troopers of this high caliber serving the people of this county and state. — Mike Langston

"Easy" Winds Fanning Men's Closets

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer

SPRING LAKE, N.J. (AP) — Change is the nature of fashion. Caution is the nature of men. And so men have clung, some say unfashionably too long, to sober suits and flannel apparel. But wait.

Stylish winds are blowing into boring closets. Fashion-wary men are becoming as fashion-wily as women, and fall will herald a striking change in what the gentlemen wear.

"Men's clothes are losing their uptightness as men begin to feel more creative," says Lee Wright, a new guard designer who calls the new style "facile" — Italian for "easy."

"Men are conditioned to be the navy blue suit in the corner and not to care how they look. That is changing," said Wright, who designs subtle, relaxed, richly textured clothes.

The loose, easy look. The traditional tailored look. The tight-fitting disco look — all are competing for a corner of a man's wardrobe and piece of his pocketbook.

Men's wear is becoming as dynamic as women's wear as designers try to loosen men's collars and unbutton their thinking.

New guard designers, like Wright, want to dress men in soft, "unconstructed" — or slightly lined — clothes. It is the first major silhouette change in 10 years and it is slimmer and less macho.

While padded shoulders are back for women, the new men's look calls for trimmer, realistic shoulders. Lapels are narrower, ties are skinnier and looser, collars are slight, even round. Pants are straight and pleated at the waist.

The flowing neck scarf is almost a standard accessory.

"I think that changing styles definitely reflect changing sexual images," says Wright, one of many designers at the recent fall preview here of the Men's Fashion Association of America.

It is not just high fashion for the few, although sweatshirt blazers, round collars and stringy ties will probably not abound.

But Sears and Montgomery Ward, longtime dressers of the man in the middle, will be stocking up on looser and more relaxed clothes that can be layered and combined.

The traditionalist need not fear. The old guard, like designer Donald Brooks, still opts for classic tailoring, refuses to bend to trendy breezes and says today's unconstructed jacket looks like tomorrow's laundry bag.

Brooks, a women's designer who entered men's wear and designed for Robert Redford, says the new unconstructed look is merely a slovenly fad disguised as style.

"Sloppiness is over and men are through with gimmicks," said Brooks, billed as one of the "Living Labels" by Greif & Co.

Still, fresh ideas are airing out stuffy closets.

"There's so much that hasn't been done in men's wear," says designer Charles Suppon, nominated for Coty awards for his women's and new line of men's clothes.

"Men want to look like men, but men are less open to change than women," he says. "The key is how much can you get away with and still be masculine."

Julia Caroline Keeping Weds Mr. Morejon Here

Julia Carolina Keeping became the bride of Celso Juan Morejon in a double ring ceremony in Red Oak Free Will Baptist Church here Sunday, June 25.

Dr. Harold W. Deitch officiated and the bride was given in marriage by her father. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Keeping of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Celso R. Morejon of Tampa, Fla.

The bride wore her mother's gown of white lace over satin trimmed with tulle and fashioned with a train. Her veil was attached to a Juliet cap trimmed with lace and pearls. Her bouquet was of yellow and white teacup roses and baby's breath.

Carolyn Anderson, sister of the bride was maid of honor. She wore a gown of blue and lavender with a lace neckline and pearl buttons. She carried white daisies and baby's breath and wore baby's breath in her hair.

Bridesmaids were Peggy Antonovich of Greenville, sister of the bride, and Rosario Morejon, sister of the bridegroom, of Tampa, Fla. Their dresses were long blue lace gowns and their bouquets and headpieces were like that of the maid of honor.

Melanie Marie Antonovich, niece of the bride, served as flower girl. She wore a long yellow chiffon gown adorned with white lace and carried a basket of varicolored daisies.

The best man was Harold T. Stevenson of Rt. 8, Greenville; the ring bearer, Henry Michael Keeping, brother of the bride. Ushers were Cleve Haddock of Greenville and Victor Camaco of Hialeah, Fla.

Sam Winchester Jr. was organist and Cleve Haddock was vocal soloist.

A reception was held at the Ramada Inn immediately after the ceremony. The Windy Ridge Band, composed of Cleve Haddock and Sherwood Harrison, played for the event, which was followed by a buffet supper.

After a wedding trip to the Bahamas, the Morejons will live in Hialeah, Fla. The bridegroom, a 1968 graduate of Ossining High School, N. Y., is employed by Airport Auto Supply in Miami, Fla. His wife, a 1976 graduate of Pitt Technical Institute, is employed by Twins Bikinis, Hialeah, Fla.

A bridal shower for the couple was given by the mother and sisters of the bride.

ELIZABETH COLCHIE'S COUNTRY SAUSAGE

A friend of ours highly recommends this.

- 2 teaspoons coarse (kosher) salt
- 1½ teaspoons sage
- ½ teaspoon thyme
- ¼ teaspoon peppercorns
- ¼ teaspoon summer savory
- 2 tiny dried hot peppers (about 1 by ¼ inch), seeds removed
- 1 pound lean pork, cut in 1-inch cubes
- ½ pound fresh pork fat, cut in ½-inch cubes

Grind the salt, sage, thyme, peppercorns, savory and hot peppers in a spice mill or mortar to form a fine powder. Combine half meat, half fat, half spice mixture in an electric food processor and process to medium mixture, stopping machine often to push down meat. Scrape into bowl. Repeat with remaining meat, fat and spices. Combine in bowl and knead thoroughly. Form meat into an 8-inch-long cylinder and wrap in plastic or waxed paper. Refrigerate at least 1 day before using. To cook: cut ¾-inch thick slices, place in a heavy skillet and place over moderately low heat. Cook until well browned on both sides, pouring off some of the fat as it accumulates. At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

(Author's Note: This is one of a series on "How America Vacations" and how shots can help. Today's column deals with the ever-popular camping.)

The first thing you notice is the convoy of vehicles groaning under the load of supplies of equipment, headed out toward the campgrounds where they set up food tents, toilets, sleeping facilities and map out the strategy for the week. They call it camping.

We used to call it World War II.

There are various degrees of camping, depending on your adventurous spirit. There's "primitive camping," where you tough it out with a sleeping bag, toothbrush, a saucepan, and only one Bee Gee album.

There's "car camping," which is inexpensive and lends itself to some great home movies. A word of caution: Children tend to grow spear-like elbows, fathers become moody and often hide, and mothers often sit around in a nightgown rocking back and forth.

"Tent camping" is interesting. A lot has been written about it, but all you have to know is don't undress when the light is INSIDE the tent.

The most popular form of camping is the self-contained camper, or as a priest said one day at a campground mass, "Look upon this ceremony as a 'hookup' with God." Hookups become your entire life.

Many women do not like camping because they do not like to cook with a shovel, Some find it inconvenient to scale a tree and hang their food out of the reach of bears. Many women accept challenges heartily, but cooking with solar heat during a rainstorm is not one of them.

Children, fathers and dogs usually love camping as they never see a meal being prepared. They think eating out of a Frisbee is neat, making an oven out of a cardboard box is far out and feeding quarters to a dryer for three hours to dry wet sleeping bags is a real swell time.

One of the plusses of camping is that it is an entire family effort and there are moments of real beauty and closeness. You are banded together by a strong sense of survival and somehow you want to say, "let's keep in touch. We'll write one another after this is over." I think the survivors of the Titanic felt like that.

Good Exercise

BOSTON (UPI) — Walking on the beach is good exercise for your feet.

The Sole Leather Council recommends walking on sand because its uneven, yielding surface is better for the feet than the hard, firm surfaces of sidewalks and streets. For extra muscle activity, the council suggests walking on dry sand instead of hard sand at the water's edge.

Extending the toes to grip the surface exercises muscles and tendons not ordinarily used. To stretch calf muscles, dig your heels into the sand so they are lower than the balls of your feet. This counteracts the forces exerted by wearing high heels.

Daughter, Authorities Should Be Alerted

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc

DEAR ABBY: I am a 38-year-old widow with three children. The oldest is a 14-year-old girl. There is a man I know who I thought was a really nice guy. He's divorced and has grown children. He seemed to like me and the children.

Last week he offered me money to let my 14-year-old daughter go to bed with him. I told him he was crazy. I told a policeman about it, and he said there is nothing anyone can do unless the man commits some kind of crime.

Abby, I am terrified that he might catch my daughter somewhere and rape her. (Maybe even kill her.)

I know he's a sick man or he wouldn't have asked me something like that. What should I do?

UPSET IN IOWA

DEAR UPSET: Don't wait until this man commits a crime. You don't say where in Iowa you live, but I advise you to immediately alert your chief of police, sheriff or county attorney. Let them know about this sick and potentially dangerous man and what he has in mind. Alert your daughter, too. And let me hear from you again. This situation should not be ignored.

DEAR ABBY: All my life my parents have taught me to be courteous and to respect my elders, but it's getting harder every day. I will give you an example.

Last week I went to a baseball game with two of my friends. They left their seats in the stadium for a few moments and while they were gone, a man about my father's age moved in and signaled another man to come join him. I told him those seats belonged to my friends, who would be back any moment. He said he would move when my friends returned.

Well, when my friends came back, this man refused to move. I reminded him that he had given his word, but he said, "Listen, kid, I'm 30 years older than you. You kids go find other seats."

Not wanting to start trouble, my friends and I left and sat somewhere else.

Now why are kids expected to show respect and be courteous to adults when adults act like this to us?

LOVES BASEBALL

DEAR LOVES: Teenagers complain (and justifiably so) that they are individuals and want to be judged by their own actions—not by what their peers do. The same goes for adults. The men were rude, but they, fortunately, do not represent ALL adults. Be fair.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are middle-aged and we're watching our weight. We do all right at home, but our troubles begin when we're guests in someone's home—especially when they serve midnight "snacks" after cards, etc.

We count our calories all week, and then the hostess puts all this stuff on the table and pushes it onto our plates, saying, "I've worked so hard, you've GOT to eat this!" Or, "If you don't eat it, I'll have to throw it out!"

We have come home stuffed and uncomfortable because we couldn't get out of eating. We tell ourselves, "Never again," but the next weekend it's the same story. Any suggestions?

KICKING OURSELVES IN HINSDALE

DEAR KICKING: Don't blame your hostess. Tell her in advance that you're dieting and ask her to please have some carrots, celery or fresh fruit for you to nibble on. (Or you could bring your own.) No one is forced to eat anything he doesn't want.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple do-your-own-thing ceremony, get Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Prepare carrot sticks and celery sticks to put in refrigerator to munch on for a low calorie snack.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Cooler weather is forecast Tuesday for the northern Plains and Northeast. Warm weather is expected for most of the country. (AP Laserphoto Map)

The Nation's Weather
By The Associated Press

A few thundershowers continued early today across the South, western Nebraska and western Texas, while heavy rains continued through New York and the Virginias, spoiling the Independence Day holiday for many easterners.

Today's thundershowers were not nearly as strong as the ones Monday that produced tornadoes in western Texas — two near Abilene and one near Lubbock.

Heavy rain left the Ohio Valley after pushing many streams over their banks, and scattered flooding was reported in New York City.

Meanwhile, about 250 families from the Rockford, Ill, area remained away from their homes because of flooding from the rain-swollen Rock River, authorities said. Nearly 500 families were forced from their homes following heavy rains Saturday and Sunday, and about half returned Monday.

Elsewhere, Southern California, southern Nevada, Utah and Arizona had mostly clear skies, while it was partly cloudy from Colorado to the Pacific Northwest.

Temperatures around the nation early today ranged from 42 in Elko, Nev. to 88 in Dallas.

Today's forecast called for scattered showers and thundershowers from east Texas across the southern portions of the Gulf Coast states, Florida and north through Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Light rain was expected over eastern New York and southern New England into southern Maine, while scattered thundershowers were forecast over Montana, Idaho, northern Wyoming and northern Utah.

Isolated thundershowers were expected to dot the central Rockies.

Mild temperatures were forecast for Pennsylvania, New York, New England, the Pacific Northwest, the northern half of the Rockies and the intermountain region. Temperatures were expected in the upper 90s and above 100 from New Mexico through northern Texas, over the south and central Great Plains and across South Dakota, Iowa and Missouri. The rest of the nation will be warm.

No Punishment For Ticket-Fix

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — District Attorney H.W. Zimmerman said Monday that the handling of citations by the Thomasville Police Department has not been proper but there is no punishment for such improper handling.

At a press conference in Lexington, Zimmerman said the second probe by the State Bureau of Investigation into alleged ticket-fixing in the department has turned up no evidence of any criminal violations.

"Two things appear certain from the news articles and the investigation," Zimmerman said in a memorandum. "One, that certain internal problems exist within the Thomasville Police Department, and two, the handling of traffic citations has not been proper."

Since there is no punishment for such improper handling, Zimmerman said, he plans to meet with the state attorney general's office later this month to discuss drafting new legislation for such incidents.

Zimmerman said reports showed there is apparently some kind of internal problem in the police department "involving disgruntled and dissatisfied officers." Such problems must be handled by the chief of police and the City Council, he said.

The first investigation was launched several months ago after several Thomasville officers told the High Point Enterprise they were coerced by superiors to void traffic citations for certain people.

Results of that investigation showed no wrongdoing concerning traffic tickets. But after the results were announced, the same officers who made the charges called it a "whitewash." A second investigation was then launched.

Zimmerman said in the memorandum that the SBI's second investigation involved examination of all traffic tickets issued by Thomasville officers between June 1, 1976 and June 1 of this year, with the exception of 10 tickets found missing. But a check of state records showed those 10 people had been prosecuted, he said.

Holding Taxes Was Important

A budget totalling $8.63 million for the city government, $34.38 million for Greenville Utilities and $1.55 million for Communty Development was approved by the Greenville City Council last week.

Like all governmental units and individuals the city government is beset by inflation and Mayor Percy Cox called the budget a "bare minimum" one. At that, though the tax rate was increased by six cents — from 63 cents per $100 valuation to 70 cents.

City Manager C. A. Holliday called it a "just" budget with no department discriminated against.

There were apparently almost no new employees to be added. One additional employee was authorized for the Parks and Recreation Department, and three Police Department employees, previously funded with federal grants, were included in the budget.

Missing from the budget were funds for the Eastern Carolina Sheltered Workship to help meet a federal grant.

The city fortunately still has some Community Development funds coming which will allow it to carry out some capital improvements projects.

Funds were also included for a five percent cost of living pay hike, and five percent merit pay raises for some city employees.

There are some disappointments in the budget — the failure to provide for the Sheltered Workshop and inability to provide more money for the library system being among them.

Still, holding down the tax rate increase was more important this year than ever. Difficult decisions had to be made as to what spending to cut out, in order to avoid an even larger tax hike.

Hopeful About Tabacco Market Opening

Opening date for area tobacco markets changes constantly, and this year will see South Carolina and Eastern North Carolina markets both opening on Aug. 1.

The opening on the Eastern Belt was earlier last year, but a late growing season has the crop behind in our area.

Nevetheless in only a month tobacco sales will start in Eastern North Carolina, and hopefully a good quality tobacco will be available here.

THIS AFTERNOON

Future Policy Under Study

By Bill Noblitt
(First of Two Articles)

RALEIGH—The corridors are mostly quiet at the State Legislative Building, and the meeting rooms for the most part are dark and locked.

But policy is still being shaped for future happenings even though the General Assembly is not in session, and will not return for formal proceedings until Spring, 1979.

From time to time, small knots of people gather in legislative offices; research staff goes about daily duties of gathering data and mulling reports of activities in other states.

And slowly, some of the meeting rooms are beginning to come back to life after the short budget session. Especially on important football weekends in the Raleigh-Durham-Chapel Hill area (study commission participants get travel and living expenses during meetings, so a session held on Friday in Raleigh puts a body in good shape for a Saturday outing at the stadium) lawmakers find themselves back in the planning boards.

Slow Start

The study process is getting off to a slower start than usual this year. Leadership of the General Assembly puts a lot of time and thought to the chairmen who will guide and the legislators who will participate in the study and recommendations to future sessions of the General Assembly.

One reason the 1978 budget session was able to finish its business so quickly was the insistence by the leadership that a number of controversial matters which might otherwise have been considered by the Legislature be kept in study commission control for full debate in 1979.

Membership and leadership on the committees will to a considerable degree determine the content of the ultimate report, the reception it gets from legislators, and the disposition of it. Those produced by veteran, experienced people with clout to push the recommendations will naturally get more favorable treatment. Those forthcoming from study groups lacking powerful leadership will likely get less attention and less favorable treatment. And as usual, a few of the studies are in reality only ego-soothers for some legislators who have pushed a special cause without success.

BILL NOBLITT

Slowness in getting started this summer is due to some degree to the thought which House Speaker Carl Stewart and Lt. Gov. James C. Green (and on some groups, Gov. James B. Hunt has appointees, too) must give to their appointments in relation to political realities, and their hopes for the ultimate shape of the recommendations, and disposition of those proposals by the 1979 General Assembly.

The System

Meanwhile, those privvy to the legislative system are keeping a close watch on the study commission activity.

The reports will be instrumental in shaping future decisions of the General Assembly, and future state policy. And it is well known that in some cases the study groups will carefully structure the gathering of data, recruitment of expert testimony, and production of final reports to support a particular position and influence the future decision-making process.

State agencies and organized groups across the state with full-time representatives in Raleigh will be able to keep in close touch with the proceedings; many have representation on the committees.

The average citizen, on the other hand, doesn't have the resources to keep up with what is happening, nor to have some part in the developing policy shaping and strategy for success.

To the veteran observer of state government and politics, however, the coming months are the most critical since important decisions will be make with little public involvement or concern.

Where's Independence?

The name of the holiday, as everyone knows, is Independence Day, and the name has a lovely ring. At least it used to have a lovely ring. What ever became of the concept of American independence? It doesn't seem to hang around much anymore.

A couple of items support that pessimistic view. A third story, this one from North Carolina, provides a spark of hope.

In Lebanon County, Pa., the local bar association five years ago set up a wholly voluntary program of legal assistance for the poor. The program is now struggling for survival; sad to say, the Feds are moving in.

The story puts one's teeth on edge. The 60 Lebanon lawyers recognized a professional obligation to the poor in their own community. Out of their own pockets, they have contributed the $14,000 a year required to hire a secretary and to meet overhead expenses. The county has provided office space at the court house. Two lawyers handle a case load that runs from 45 to 50 clients a month.

But, horrors! They are not using "federal money"! They have been taking care of a local problem on their own, through local effort. They are exhibiting—arrgh!—a spirit of independence! No such spirit is permitted to survive if a blanket of federal beneficence can be found to snuff it out.

To make a long story short, the federal Legal Services Corporation has now moved in. It appears that $60,000 to $70,000 in tax funds will be spent to open and operate a federal program of legal assistance to the poor in Lebanon County. There isn't room or need for two such programs in a small county. One will have to go. Shall we guess which one has superior resources and will survive?

The second item is like the first, but with a twist. Back in 1954, some compassionate, public-spirited people recognized a need among the elderly for home-delivered meals. The program came to be known as Meals-on-Wheels in America, a non-profit, all-volunteer service that looks after the homebound.

Probably it was too good to escape Big Brother's eye. The meals-on-wheels people make a modest charge for their meals; the rule contributes to the dignity of homebound persons who reject the notion of something for nothing. The program has saved taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars that might have been expended for nursing home care and for general welfare.

But 1965 brought the Older Americans Act, and 1972 brought all kinds of elaborage federal nutrition programs to provide "free" meals for the elderly, and now legislation is pending that would authorize $375 million in the next fiscal year for a spectacular expansion of the whole idea. Local grants would be provided, and what do you know? Some of the meals-on-wheels people themselves are hustling for the federal money, so long as they could get it with minimal controls and maximum local discretion. Other meals-on-wheels people are resisting valiantly, just as the Lebanon bar is resisting a takeover there, but federalization of the homebound is on its way.

Finally, there's an item from Moore County, N.C. It lifts the spirits. This is the story of the Jugtown Potters, a small community of craftsmen who trace their ceramic operations back to 1923. In 1970, when a program of state aid was established, they applied for and received a $2.500 grant to build new kilns. A few weeks ago, they gave it back—with an additional $500 as a contribution of their own.

The gift ranks with the most unheard of things we ever heard of. They actually gave the $2,500 back! Vernon Ownes and Nancy Sweezy, co-directors of the community, said the Jugtown Potters have reached a solid footing. They're not rich: Repayment of the grant means the Pot-

Louis' Home Town

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Whenever I'm in the French Quarter anywhere near the Fourth of July and a funeral band struts by, I always think it's a shame Louis Armstrong didn't go out that way.

It would have been the biggest, blarin'est, most soulful funeral in the history of New Orleans.

Louis belonged to the world, but this was his town. Like those other great American testaments, the Declaration of Independence, Stephen Foster and George M. Cohan, he was born on the Fourth of July.

Fifteen years ago, for an AP feature story, I traveled with Louis Armstrong and his band when they were doing one night stands in the towns along the Ohio River.

In the darkness of the West Virginia night, as the chartered bus caromed over the hills and around the sharp curves, Louis spoke of his beginnings and his end. He was born in the New Orleans red light district, placed in the Negro Waifs Home, and, in his words, "was reared in an ebony world of church people, gamblers, hustlers, cheap pimps, thieves, prostitutes and lots of children."

His earliest memory was of standing in the doorway of Sicilian Henry Matranga's place on Perdido watching the great Joe "King" Oliver "sweet talk his trumpet with one foot on a big brass spitoon and his cheek puffed out with wind and a chaw of tobacco."

His first break in life came at age six when Bunk Johnson contributed a bugle to the orphanage. Louis grew up on that bugle and soon he was sitting next to King Olive in Kid Ory's band. Next thing you know, he was heading up the Mississippi, "into Mister Charlie's country," to far away places, all the way to St. Louis, which W.C. Handy made famous, and Davenport, where Bix Beiderbecke, a white man, was doing original things with the jazz taught him by passing black musicians.

Long after the rest of the band were asleep on those lumpy leather bus seats, Louis let

Simon Says: Drop Out

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Never one to avoid blunt positions when he was Secretary of the Treasury, William Simon is saying out loud what other Republicans are whispering: Gerald Ford and Ronald Reagan should call it a career as far as presidential ambitions are concerned.

Simon makes clear he opposes a last hurrah bid in the 1980 election for either Ford, 65, or Reagan, 67. In fact, he thinks that the two old rivals should go on television and, arm in arm, drop out of the presidential picture to clear the way for younger men (not cluding Simon, 51).

This sentiment is held by more Republicans than openly admit it. The difference is that Simon talks publicly of his desire for a Ford-Reagan joint dropout as he travels the country making political appearances and plugging his best-selling book, "A Time For Truth."

But Reagan seems committed to a 1980 candidacy, and Ford is closer to making that decision than is generally realized. One Ford intimate who has been against a comeback attempt by the former president now tells friends that he believes a FordReagan rematch in 1980 is inevitable.

A footnote: Whatever Ford and Reagan do, Rep. Philip Crane of Illinois is about ready to announce his own candidacy. Crane, national chairman of the American Conservative Union, last week visited New Hampshire (scene of the nation's earliest presidential primary).

Jordan's Salt

The White House aide most responsible for slowing down the mad dash toward a new arms control (SALT II) treaty is not national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski but top presidential assistant Hamilton Jordan.

Jordan now sits in on all presidential meetings dealing with strategic questions. Consequently, he is viewed by defense oriented senators as the best avenue for relaying the political facts of life to the president,

He is certainly not a hardliner with doctrinal difficultias about SALT II. Rather, Jordan perceived what State Department officials and other White House aides had missed: a SALT II debate would not be a simple rerun of the Panama Canal treaties fight tage-managed by Jordan). As of today, there is not even a simple Senate majority for SALT II, much less anything close to the two-thirds vote needed for ratification.

No To Moynihan

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York is one of the capital's great persuaders and President Carter often has been persuaded. But the senator got nowhere with the president in one recent meeting.

Moynihan is the major force behind tax credits for tuition payments to private and paroc 4l schools and all colleges — a bill which the prasident has promised to veto if passed.

At the White House meeting, Moynihan employed his golden tongue to sing the proposal's praises. Mr. Carter smiled but said no.

Curiously, the president stressed one seldom, heard argument: that tax credits might be used to establish whites-only private schools to subvert racial integration. This seemed an inappropriate tension of Mr. Carter's battle against segregated private "academies" fought as governor of Georgia. Moynihan offered to amand the bill to exclude newly opened schools, but the president was not intere.sted in compromise.

Fighting Steiger

Anne Wexler, the politically skillful new senior staffer at the White House, has been assigned the difficult task of developing a counterattack against the Steiger amendment to the tax bill.

When Ms. Wexler arrived at the White House from the Commerce Department two months ago; there was no awareness among the president's staff of how successful business had been in

New Red Twist

(Rocky Mount Telgram)

Just what Moscow hopes to achieve through the civil charges brought against Craig Whitney of the New York Times and Harold Piper of the Baltimore Sun adds a new twist to Soviet conduct.

The charges involve alleged slanderous writing against Russian news agencies and the reporters have been ordered to appear before a Russian city court.

However, the fact that the Russians have decided to make public the hearing will turn the eyes not only of the world but upon the Russian people since the newsmen are expected to go into details in defending their writings.

Heretofore, Moscow has been content to surround with secrecy charges against foreigners and unless the city court at Kolonchevskays manages a masterful prosecution a whole lot may be learned about how the Russian news agencies manage to sweep everything under the rug.

Of course, it could be that the Americans are guilty, but one would hardly expect it, in view of the fact that both reporters are veteran newsmen and know that they are operating in an iron curtain country.

Still it will be interesting to discover just how the Russians manage this case in their usual way of managing news.

Naturally the Russian people are going to learn just what the reporters have been accused of and if the defense is adequate there seems to be a good chance that Russians themselves may have an opportunity to learn just how they are deprived of facts by their radio, television and newspaper reports.

The glare of publicity may even penetrate the iron curtain.

FINDING HAPPINESS

Happiness is where the contented heart is.

Many people believe that happiness is a matter of geography. They will find it in Florida or California, in a certain big city, or quiet little hamlet, near their relatives or far away from them

There are others who are confident that they will find happiness with a new job or amid a different social set. Still others associate happiness with a big bank account. Many a person suffering from delicate health or perhaps from a physical affliction feels that happiness will come in great abundance if this thorn in the flesh can be removed.

Yet happiness has nothing to do with where we are, or in what condition we are. It is a sparkling spring of gladness which flows from the center of people's hearts. It is an inner state of being which arises when we trust God with the simplicy of a child.

Most Uninformed On Death Costs

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Nobody likes to think about death, but avoiding the subject can make you vulnerable when you have to handle funeral arrangements.

The National Funeral Directors Association said the average funeral for an adult cost $1,348 in 1976, the latest year for which complete figures are available. And that figure does not count burial expenses, clergymen's fees, flowers, etc. which can double the bill.

A Federal Trade Commission report recently recommended that funeral directors be put under federal regulation — a move opposed by the industry association. If the FTC adopts its staff proposals, funeral directors would have to give customers itemized price information and would be prohibited from such practices as misrepresenting legal requirements and requiring a casket for cremation.

To protect yourself, you should learn ahead of time what is involved in the average funeral. The FTC report noted that grief-stricken customers are "in a peculiarly vulnerable position and enter the transaction (with a funeral director) in an especially weak bargainning position."

Howard C. Raether, executive director of the funeral directors' group, disputes the view that consumers are ignorant about funerals. "There are courses on death in grade schools, in high schools, in college," said Raether. "I don't buy the stories of ignorance."

Funeral homes use several pricing methods, including single-unit, bi-unit and itemization. The latter method, already required in some states and proposed by the FTC staff on a national basis, provides the most information; each component of the funeral is listed separately. Single-unit pricing means one figure is quoted for funeral arrangements; you have no way of knowing exactly where your money goes. With bi-unit pricing, the funeral home divides the bill in two parts — professional services and the coffin.

The coffin is the single biggest factor in determining the cost of a funeral. More than half the coffins used in the United States are steel; the rest are wood or more expensive metals. Prices vary according to the material of the exterior and the lining and padding.

Embalming is another major expense. Most state laws require embalming only under certain conditions — if the body is to be transported across state lines, for example, or if the body is to be held for more than 24 hours before burial. The funeral directors group describes embalming as "a disinfection of the dead body ...(which) provides for a temporary preservation..."

Other costs include: use of the funeral home, transportation of the body and mourners, flowers, clergymen's fees, newspaper announcements and copies of death certificates.

To cut costs, a growing number of Americans are joining funeral or memorial societies, non-profit groups designed to provide advance information and planning on simple, lowcost funerals. Further information on the more than 100 memorial societies across the country is available from the Continental Association of Funeral and Memorial Societies, 1828 L St., N.W., Washington, D.C., 20036.

Truce Quiets Beirut Guns

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A truce between Syrian troops and two Christian militias kept the guns silent in Beirut today after three days of the bloodiest fighting since the Lebanese civil war.

Police reported 132 Lebanese killed and 517 wounded. Property damage was estimated at upwards of $10 million.

Syrian casualties were not reported.

Syrian President Hafez Assad ordered his troops to "remain in your present positions ... to silence any hostile fire." Pro-Syrian newspapers reported he set two conditions for the truce:

1. That Syrian troops take up positions in Christian strongholds.

2. That Lebanese army officers who cooperated with Israeli forces in the recent invasion of southern Lebanon be dismissed and that Christian militiamen holding positions along the Israeli border hand them over to U.N. peacekeeping forces.

The newspapers said Assad and Lebanese President Elias Sarkis agreed on these conditions last month. They charged that the right-wing Christian Phalange and National Liberal parties and their militias, the Syrians' targets in Beirut for the past three days, had been "obstructing" the agreement.

Christian spokesmen replied that security in Christian areas should be maintained by Lebanese Christian forces and the Syrians should concentrate on restricting Palestinian guerrilla activity elsewhere in the country.

"The Syrians now have the rightists in their grip and are not going to let up until the militias agree to bow to their authority," said one veteran Lebanese journalist, Farid Naja.

The cease-fire Monday night was the thirdin the three days of fighting between Syrian troops, tanks and artillery and the militiamen in the Christian East Beirut.

Civilians in the Christian sector ventured out of basement shelters to take stock of the widespread devastation.

Smashed apartment houses blocked several streets in the slum quarter of Ein Rummaneh. The Christian Voice of Lebanon radio station said "tens of thousands of Syrian rockets" hit the district.

Electricity, water and telephone services were cut. High-tension wires and broken glass littered the streets.

One Syrian rocket hit the fifth floor apartment of Canadian Ambassador Andre Couvrotte just before the cease-fire was announced, but neither he nor his wife and two childen were harmed.

Man Battles To Keep Children From School

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — John Singer, who claims public schools would teach his children immorality, says a judge's ruling that his children can be taught at home is a partial victory.

But Singer, who faces a contempt-of-court charge, says he "would definitely resist" if law enforcement officers came to his 2½-acre Marion farm to arrest him.

"It's a little funny that someone is telling me to keep my children when my children are mine to begin with," Singer said of Monday's ruling by Second District Juvenile Court Judge John Farr Larson.

"It seems like they gave some today, but they still have me on the list as a bad egg," said the 47-year-old Singer, father of four boys and three girls whose ages range from 2½ to 13.

An excommunicated Mormon who believes in polygamy but does not practice it, Singer has said that sending his children to public schools would expose them to sex, drugs, homosexuality and veneral disease. He took his five school-age children out of school in 1974 to educate them in a one-room schoolhouse he built on his farm 60 miles east of Salt Lake City.

The South Summit School District at first allowed the home education, but Singer then objected to having to take roll and banished district monitors.

The district obtained a court order to take the children into protective custody and to arrest Singer and his wife, Vicki, 35, for child neglect. On Monday Larson vacated that arrest order, but kept in affect an arrest order for Singer, who has missed previous hearings in the case. Singer, who has not left his land in seven months, was not present for the latest hearing in Salt Lake City.

"I feel more and more like the pioneers. They constantly had to be on the alert. They constantly had to bear arms in order to be ready for any conflict at any minute's notice," said Singer, who carries a gun and has said he would rather die than be taken into custody.

"I would definitely resist," he said. "I feel that I have committed no crime and therefore I should not pay a penalty."

Larson said it would not be in the childrens' best interest to be taken from their home, placed in foster homes and sent to public school.

He said Singer could educate the children at home and urged him to set up an adequate education program.

Larson also recommended that Singer file a suit challenging Utah's compulsory education law. But Singer said the law does not concern him.

He said he would wait to see what the court ruling contained before deciding whether to comply. However, he said, "This is a closed and shut case as far as I am concerned."

Robert Orton, court-appointed attorney for the Singer children, said he would ask Singer to turn himself in to authorities, but said the last time the sheriff approached Singer, the sheriff had a gun pointed at his face.

New Bern Aldermen Don't Change Offer

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — The New Bern board of aldermen met in a closed session for four hours Monday night and emerged without changing the offer they originally made to the city's striking police force.

The aldermen passed a resolution instructing the city manager to reinstate any officer who wanted to come back under that offer, which included a 6 percent across-the-board pay hike and a 5 percent merit raise for up to 30 percent of the police department's employees.

Earlier Monday the 34 striking officers, including the police chief, held a meeting of their own and decided they would not compromise on their pay demands, spokesmen said.

All 34 officers turned in their badges at a board meeting Friday night in protest of the board's refusal to approve a 10 percent pay raise.

The city began taking applications for new officers Monday in case a compromise could not be reached. Harry Douglass, the city's personnel director, said 17 applications were distributed at city offices and 35 were mailed to applicants who had phoned.

But it will be several weeks before a police force could be recruited and trained if there is no compromise, city officials said.

Officers from nearby towns, Craven County sheriff's deputies, state Highway Patrol officers and agents of the Board of Alcoholic Control continued to provide police protection for New Bern Monday. Some officers were off-duty and others were on special assignment.

City Manager J.C. Outlaw said the situation had been quiet since the walkout. "I'm not suggesting things are normal, because they're not," he said. "But through the cooperation of other agencies, we've been able to provide law enforcement in New Bern."

At their meeting Monday, the former officers discussed plans for a trip to Raleigh at the end of the week, where they would attempt to collect retirement benefits.

Since the walkout, some of the officers have been working as security guards in local motels. Former Police Sgt. John R. Hardesty became a security agent at a local inn.

He left an $11,000-a-year job as a city police officer for a $5-an-hour one with the motel. He says he takes home more money at the security job than he did with the city.

Without their regular officers on the street, some of New Bern's residents are feeling a little lost.

One was an unidentified gentleman who frequents the streets with his bottle of wine. He said he missed the blue city police cars cruising the area.

"I miss hidin' from them," he said. "Those boys get me at least once a week, but not now. It's like my momma and daddy died."

Senility Top Elderly Problem

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senility, arthritis-rheumatism and heart problems are the top three chronic illnesses among Americans in nursing homes, a government survey shows.

The National Center for Health Statistics reported Monday that senility afflicts 58 percent of the more than 1 million Americans in nursing homes.

Another 34.3 percent of nursing home residents suffer from arthritis or rheumatism, while 33.5 percent have heart trouble, the survey said.

The survey conducted in 1973-74 said nearly 95 percent of the 1,075,800 residents then residing in 15,700 U.S. nursing homes suffered from one or more chronic conditions.

An estimated 5 percent of the 23 million Americans 65 or older live in nursing homes, the study said.

Senility is caused by an organic brain disease, and experts are just beginning to improve methods of treating it, said Dr. Robert N. Butler, director of the National Institute on Aging.

He said physicians frequently overlook the illness when attributing an elderly patient's death to pneumonia, heart failure or some other cause.

School Leaders Will Fight State

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Leaders of fundamentalist Christian schools are ready to take their case against state requirements to the U.S. Supreme Court or even to go to jail in defiance, according to a spokesman for the schools.

The Rev. Kent Kelley, pastor of Calvary Memorial Church in Southern Pines and former board chairman of the N.C. Association of Christian Schools, delivered a sermon in Charlotte Sunday night on government control of Christian schools.

The N.C. Department of Education has filed a suit asking that the more than 60 fundamentalist Christian schools in the state be required to submit reports on student enrollment, teacher credentials and curricula to state officials.

The department contends the information will ensure a proper education for each child, but Kelley and other Christian school leaders say the requirement would violate freedom of religion and ignore parents' rights.

"The name of the game is control," Kelley said. "With laws on the books in North Carolina that can tell us what books can be used, that can tell us what course of study is going to be used...they can say tomorrow you must teach these things."

"It was our attorney's assessment that the heart of the issue is whether the state or parent has the final say over the education of a child," Kelley said.

And the school leaders "believe enough to do whatever's necessary," including going to jail, he said.

Drops Tax On Profits

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — The Australian government has dropped plans to impose a resources tax on profits from oil and uranium mining.

Trade and Resources Minister Doug Anthony and Treasurer John Howard said Sunday that the government had taken into account "the possible adverse effect of such a tax on exploration and development and on investor confidence."

TRAFFIC DEATHS

WASHINGTON (AP) — A total of 49,200 persons died in traffic accidents in the United States in 1977, an increase of 2,500 over 1976, according to the Highway Users Federation.

In addition, the federation says, "the number of deaths per mile driven also edged upward, reversing an historic downward trend in the fatality rate, measured in deaths per 100 million miles driven. The death rate increased from 3.31 fatalities in 1976 to 3.36 in 1977."

As a gesture of their delightful independence, the Jugtown Potters asked that a part of their repayment be used for the Folklife Festival July 1-4 at West Point on the Bno Park in Durham. The festival centers upon people who made it on their own—independent people, possessed of the old virtue of self-reliance. I hope the country musicians played a couple of jigs for Jugtown.

out an audible sigh that was almost in perfect conterpoint to trombonist Big Chief Russell Moore's baritone snoring. He spoke of Papa Celestin's funeral through the French Quarter and, then at age 63 (he was born in 1900), of his own end, which was less than a decade away.

"I know it's corny," he said, "but that's the way I want to go, with a band out to the cemetery and back. I told my wife Lucille to give the boys all the whiskey they want. Let them get good and snookered with Ol' Satch, just so long as they blow me home."

It didn't work out that way.

When Louis died on July 6, 1971 the family decided America's ambassador with jazz portfolio to the world deserved something less parochial, more dignified. There had been some criticism, long ago, when he agreed to be King of Zulu in the all black mardi gras parade, so maybe it was just as well at the end that there was no mistaking the real king for a caricature. Given his popularity, the passions involved, a Dixieland funeral for the king born on the Fourth of July might have got out of hand.

Three Wrecks On Monday

Three traffic accidents occurred in Greenville yesterday, resulting in one minor injury and approximately $2,375 in damages.

Theresa Ann Marrow was taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital after being involved in an accident on North Greene Street at about 6:30 a.m. She was travelling in a vehicle driven by Johnnie Lee Marrow of Grifton. Also involved in the accident was Bobby Allen Proctor, the driver of the other vehicle. Police reports estimate damages at $550 to the Marrow vehicle and $100 to the Porter vehicle. There were no charges filed.

At 2:30 p.m. on South Washington Street, Lynette Paramore Norville, Rt. 6, and Syliva Lewis Edwards of Winterville, were the two drivers involved in a traffic acccident. No charges were filed and police estimate damages at $25 to the Norville vehicle and $300 to the Edwards vehicle.

Cynthia Ann Barefoot, 500 Kirkland Dr., was charged with a failure to yield violation following an accident on South Memorial Drive at 12:15 p.m. The driver of the other vehicle involved in the wreck, James Earl Harris, lot 30 Homestead Trailer Park, suffered approximately $200 in damages to his vehicle. Police estimate damages to the Barefoot vehicle at $1,200.

Men Burned On Boat

NEWTON, N.C. (AP) — Two men were severely burned Monday when a boat they had just refueled and were trying to restart caught fire on Lake Norman.

Charles Sturdivant, 28, of Nashville, Tenn., and Harry David Tibbs, 31, of Long Island, N.C., were treated at Catawba Memorial Hospital in Hickory for burns over the lower parts of their bodies.

Sturdivant was later taken to Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem, where his condition was reported as stable. Tibbs was transferred to the burn center at N.C. Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill where his condition was reported as "pretty good."

Catawba County Deputy Fire Marshal Rupert Little said from the reports he got, "I'm sure it was gas fumes in the boat that must have ignited. They'd had trouble starting the boat and all of a sudden it just blowed up, knocked them both in the water."

Bob Dylan In Concert

PARIS (AP) — "New wine, but always good," wrote one French critic as Bob Dylan returned to Paris after a 12-year absence and performed new material rather than his old hits.

The 7,000 fans who packed the Pavillon de Paris auditorium Monday night were expecting to hear again the abrasive, protest-filled folk music he presented here in 1966.

Instead, Dylan gave them an eight-member rock group and was reluctant to play any of his old folk material.

New Death Penalty Ruling Will Mean Closer Look At Other Laws

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — For numerous lawyers and state legislators across the nation, the Supreme Court's latest capital punishment ruling means new required reading.

For 99 Ohio death row inmates, the decision carries far more drama — a reprieve from the electric chair.

Invalidating Ohio's death penalty laws Monday, the nation's highest court reduced the death row population nationwide by one-fifth. It also gave all states a clearer look at what the justices will require of death penalty laws.

"This was an important case, not only because of the numbers involved, but for future litigation," said Jack Boger of the New York-based Legal Defense Fund, one of several organizations waging a national battle against capital punishment.

In a pair of Ohio cases, the court ruled 7-1 that the state's capital laws do not permit "the type of individualized consideration of mitigating factors" to escape being ruled unconstitutionally cruel and unusual punishment.

Although the seven justices voting against Ohio's sentencing procedures did so for varying reasons, only Justice William H. Rehnquist would have preserved the state laws.

Rehnquist was the only justice to disagree with Chief Justice Warren E. Burger's hopeful assessment that Monday's decision would provide "the clearest guidance."

"The signals from this court have not always been easy to decipher," Burger said in discussing past death penalty rulings.

Rehnquist agreed, adding, "I am frank to say that I am uncertain whether today's opinion represents the seminal case in the exposition ... of the 8th and 14th Amendments as they apply to capital punishment or whether instead it represents the third false start in this direction within the past six years."

In 1972, the court struck down all existing death penalty laws, ruling that they had been applied capriciously and arbitrarily.

Four years later, the justices ruled that the death penalty may be a constitutional punishment for convicted murderers but struck down several state laws it said were too inflexible in considering life and death.

Now, the court has attempted to hone its 1976 rulings, but in so doing has left unanswered capital punishment questions that likely will return:

—Whether the death penalty is constitutional for convicted murderers who took no part in the actual killing or those who never intended to kill their crimes' victim.

—Whether recent bans on all mandatory death sentences should make room for an exception for murders committed by prison inmates sentenced for life or by escaped inmates who had been serving life terms.

—Whether the death penalty is permissible for minors, and whether death penalty laws that preclude jury participation in sentencing are constitutionally valid.

Acting without explanation, the justices also cast doubt Monday on the validity of Arizona's death penalty laws.

They sent back the case of a condemned murderer to the Arizona Supreme Court for restudy in light of the Ohio rulings.

Boger said the high court had found Arizona's law similar to Ohio's in that it precluded consideration of all mitigating circumstances and therefore was invalid.

But Bill Schafer, chief of the criminal division within the office of the Arizona attorney general, said he thought the states' capital punishment laws would stand up under a state court comparison with Ohio's statutes.

The Supreme Court also let stand separate state court rulings which had invalidated death penalty laws in Pennsylvania and New York.

polled said Carter is doing a "poor" or 'only fair' job as president. That's up 1 percent from the finding of the AP-NBC News poll in early May.

Only 27 percent of those questioned last week said Carter is doing an "excellent" or "good" job, down 2 points from the last poll. Three percent were not sure.

The changes in the Carter job rating are smaller than the sampling error margin of 3 percent for a poll of 1,600 interviews. This means that one cannot say the changes are an actual decline in Carter's job rating. They could simply be chance variations in the sample.

Although not necessarily statistically significant, the change in Carter's job rating in June was in line with its downward trend over the last year.

Similarly small declines were found in people's ratings of Carter's performance in specific areas.

On the economy, only one in five Americans rated Carter's work excellent or good, while more than three out of four — 76 percent — rated him only fair or poor.

The public gave Carter a 22-72 percent negative rating on foreign policy, and a 25-69 percent negative mark on handling energy problems.

As with any sample survey, the results of the AP-NBC News polls could differ from the results of interviews with all Americans with telephones because of chance variations in the sample.

For polls with 1,600 interviews, the results should vary no more than three percentage points either way solely because of sample errors. That is, there is only one chance out of 20 that the results of interviews with all American adults would vary from these results by more than three percentage points.

Bartender's School Opening

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — One Friday night last March Richard McGee and his wife went out to dinner lugging the traditional North Carolina symbol of the cocktail drinker — a brown bag.

In the bag was a bottle of light Canadian whisky, and the couple ordered water to mix with their before-dinner drinks.

They got water mixed with a maraschino cherry.

And it was that, McGee says, and not the passage of local-option liquor-by-the-drink, that made him decide to open a bartenders' school. Still, McGee's graduates will surely come in handy as certain North Carolina localities approve liquor-by-the-drink.

"The cherry totally destroyed the taste," said McGee, a veteran of eight years behind bars in the Washington, D.C. area.

Among the 250 drinks students will learn to mix at his school will be the pink squirrel, Italian sombrero, boomer, and the pousse cafe. The last one is a carnival of color and taste created from seven layers of liqueur.

The 24-hour course will begin this month and will mix alcohol with psychology, both of which McGee says must be served with equal measures of precision. A drunk in a bar is the bartender's fault, figures McGee, since it's as much his responsibility to stop his customers from exceeding their capacities as it is to extricate them gracefully from overindulgence.

Bartending is a craft of nuance, from the cleaned ash trays to the quickly produced light for cigarettes, to the order of the liquor bottles — vodka, gin, whiskey, bourbon and scotch. That kind of order is integral to the speed and precision needed by a good bartender.

In 1976 when now retired Redskins running back Larry Brown opened his bar, Lace and Truffles, McGee was hired to bartend the opening. After Brown arrived in a limousine and guests like Ethel Kennedy were feasting on barbecued ribs, McGee took center stage before network television cameras and constructed a few Irish coffees.

The big moment came when he poured heated brandy from heated glass to heated glass to produce blue flames which smothered his hands and the glasses.

Like McGee says, "A bartender has authority. People listen to him before they will listen to other people."

McGee, who left Washington in December and purchased a home in Rockingham County with his wife, is now waiting for prospective students. He's also in the process of having his lesson plan copyrighted. But he doesn't include his method for unwinding after a night behind the bar: a glass of water.

Governor Gets Bitten

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Gov. James R. Thompson, whose hands were bitten while trying to break up a fight between two of his dogs, hopes some dog psychology will do the pets some good.

Both hands bandaged from the bites, Thompson said Monday he would send the dogs to the veterinary clinic at the University of Illinois in Urbana, to be tested by experts.

"They've done some pretty good work over there with dog psychology and testing, and there may be a chance to put them in a training program to see if they can get along in the same house," Thompson said.

The governor tried Sunday night to break up a fight between Guv, a 2-year-old Irish setter, and Sam, a year-old collie.

"They're at an age when the dog people tell me they want to decide who's boss," Thompson said. "And so, they started fighting, and I got in the middle of them, and couldn't separate them as quickly as I usually can."

Publisher Will Race

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (AP) — Los Angeles Times publisher Otis Chandler makes his auto racing debut Saturday in the World Championship for Manufacturers Six-Hour endurance race.

Chandler, 51, will drive a turbocharged Porsche 935, sharing the driving with fellow Californian John Thomas, an experienced endurance driver.

Chandler, who has raced in Porsche Club events on the West Coast, attended a driving school in California in preparation for his pro racing debut.

PWP Sets Meeting

Greenville Chapter No. 1058 of Parents Without Partners Inc. will hold an introductory meeting Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. at Tippy's Taco House.

This meeting is being held to explain the purpose and goals of PWP and is open to all eligible single parents. Literature about the organization will be available. Interested guests are encouraged to arrive at 6:30 and eat with the group.

To be eligible for PWP, one must be single and the parent of a living child. Custody is not a factor. Single men who see their children on weekends are especially encouraged to participate, as the organization offers a number of activities to promote greater interaction between fathers and their children. For more information, one may call 752-1674 evenings.

Cushner Is Named

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's family planning efforts will be headed by Dr. Irvin M. Cushner, a professor of medicine at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Cushner, who was named to the position Monday, also is board chairman of the Alan Guttmacher Institute, the reserch wing of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America. Cushner's duties will include developing policy on population and contraceptive research; treating health problems related to reproduction, and education programs, an HEW announcement said.

Bean Gets Win

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Andy Bean has rushed into the spotlight of the professional golf tour at the age of 25. Two of his three victories this year have come in pressure-packed playoffs.

With Monday's sudden-death victory over Bill Rogers in the Western Open and last month's similar conquest of Lee Trevino in the Memphis Classic, Bean has shown an ability to excel in head-to-head play and I've calmed down a bit. Not a whole lot of things bother me," said Bean, who is the leading money-winner in his third year on the pro tour.

"I'm learning patience more and more each year. That comes through experience and waiting. I'm two-for-two (in playoffs). I guess I've got the best average on the tour."

The final round of the $225,000 event was postponed by rain Sunday and when play began Monday, Bean's name was behind 14 others on the scoreboard and alongside another six who were at even-par 216 after three rounds on the par 72, 7,083-yard Butler National course.

Rogers, winner of this year's Bob Hope Desert Classic, led all the names at 6-under-par 210, two strokes better than Hale Irwin and Mac McLendon, who were tied for second.

But Bean mounted a furious charge of nine birdies in 13 holes and finished with a 66 for a 282 total. That's what Rogers had when he made an outstanding recovery after putting his tee shot in a water hazard on the 18th hole to make a bogey and drop back in a tie with Bean. He had a 72 for the round.

"A man came out and won the golf tournament today. He shot a round on a golf course that doesn't yield many rounds like that," said Rogers. "I have nothing but respect and good feelings for Andy winning the tournament."

The playoff lasted only one hole, the par-4, 381-yard 16th. Bean hit his tee shot into the right rough but made an excellent shot to within 5 feet of the cup.

Rogers followed a drive down

1978 Wimbledon Competition Has Seen Very Few Surprises

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — One of the most surprising aspects of Wimbledon 1978 has been the lack of surprises.

With both the men's and women's singles now at the quarter-final stage, seeded players completely dominate both competitions. Of the 16 quarter-finalists in the men's and women's competition, only one — Tom Okker of the Netherlands — is not seeded.

Among the women, all of the first five seeds have cruised through. Among the men, only Guillermo Vilas of the top five failed to find his way into the last eight. Okker's defeat of Vilas has been the only major upset.

On Monday, the favorites stayed in command.

No. 6 seed Roscoe Tanner lost his fourth-round match to ninth-seeded Ilie Nastase — but in view of Nastase's current form, that wasn't really an upset. Nastase played brilliantly, winning 2-6, 6-4, 6-2, 6-3 in a match that was soured only by a disputed double-fault call against Tanner on the final point. Nastase will play Okker in today's quarter-finals.

Top seed and defending champion Bjorn Borg of Sweden beat Geoff Masters of Australia 6-2, 6-4, 8-6 and meets eighth-seeded American Sandy Mayer, who won a thrilling five-set match from No. 13 seed Wojtek Fibak of Poland 6-4, 6-2, 6-8, 1-6, 7-5.

In the two other men's quarter-finals, No. 2-seeded Jimmy Connors, who has done nothing all week to refute suggestions that he is most likely man to meet Borg in the final, meets seventh-seeded Mexican Raul Ramirez while No. 5 seed Brian Gottfried faces third seed Vitas Gerulaitis.

On Monday, Connors defeated John Alexander of Australia 62, 6-2, 6-4 while Ramirez cruised past another Australian, three-time Wimbledon champ John Newcombe, 6-2, 98, 6-3.

Gottfried calmly defeated fellow American Tim Gullikson, 64, 6-4, 6-2 and Gerulaitis outlasted American compatriot Hank Pfister 6-3, 3-6, 6-2, 6-3.

The top five women seeds — Chris Evert, Martina Navratilova, Australian Evonne Goolagong, defending champion Virginia Wade of Britain and Billie Jean King — qualified, joined by 11th, 12th and 13th seeds, South African Marise Kruger, Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia and Virginia Ruzici of Romania.

Evert, who beat Australia's Kerry Reid 6-4, 6-4, now faces a clash with King, who defeated Britain's Sue Barker 6-2, 6-2. King is seeking a seventh singles title.

Navratilova, who beat Tracy Austin 6-2, 6-3, now meets Kruger, who downed Dianne Fromholtz of Australia, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3. Wade, who beat American Ruta Gerulaitis 7-5, 6-4, opposes Jausovec, who knocked out Wendy Turnbull of Australia 86, 4-6, 6-3. The remaining quarter-final is between Goolagong, who defeated Regina Marsikova of Czechoslovakia 6-2, 6-2, and Ruzici, who caused a minor upset by beating last year's beaten finalist, Betty Stove of the Netherlands, 5-7, 6-4, 6-3.

Fingers Helps Padres Win

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

You really have to hand it to Rollie Fingers.

Actually, that's just what the San Diego Padres did Monday night.

Just as he has done all season, the relief pitcher had his busy hand in another San Diego success — helping the Padres beat the San Francisco Giants 4-3.

"We're playing good ball and getting outstanding pitching," said San Diego Manager Roger Craig. "We've been scoring some runs and over the last month we've had the best pitching in the league."

Fingers has been one of those mainly responsible for that. Another one has been Randy Jones, who started Monday night's game and gained his sixth victory with Fingers' 19th save, high in the majors.

Playing their best ball of the season, the Padres have won 11 of their last 14 games and at last climbed to the .500 level with a 40-40 won-lost record.

"It all turned around about 3½ weeks ago," said Jones, who not only pitched well but triggered a decisive four-run, sixth-inning rally with a double off loser Jim Barr.

"All of a sudden, we've just jelled. I've felt all along this is the best club the Padres have ever had. There's no telling what it's capable of doing."

Jack Clark, who hit his sixth homer in the last five games for San Francisco, seemed somewhat discouraged despite a batting binge that earned him National League Player of the Week honors earlier in the day. The loss was the seventh in the last 10 games for the slumping Giants.

"Maybe we're not giving 100 percent lately," said Clark. "We're giving ball games away. We should be winning. We're in a team slump and we're flat out there.

"We can't be lackadaisical and let other teams win it for us. We've got to go out and do it ourselves. Maybe we should stop looking at the scoreboard to see what the Cincinnati Reds and the Los Angeles Dodgers are doing."

Actually, the Dodgers weren't doing too much Monday night. They lost 4-2 to the Atlanta Braves. The Reds, meanwhile, beat the Houston Astros 8-7 in 11 innings to move past Los Angeles into second place. Elsewhere, the Chicago Cubs stopped the St. Louis Cardinals 6-2 and the Montreal Expos beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 2-0. Rain postponed the Philadelphia-New York game.

The Giants took a 2-0 lead into the sixth. But then Jones led off with a double and scored on a triple by Gene Richards. Ozzie Smith followed with a single for a 2-2 tie.

Fernando Gonzalez sacrificed and Oscar Gamble was walked intentionally with two out. Rick Sweet then belted a run-scoring single and the final run scored on a fielding error by third baseman Darrell Evans.

Clark belted his 15th home run leading off the Giant fourth. Mike Ivie's triple and Johnnie LeMaster's squeeze bunt with two down completed the two-run rally. Larry Herndon's run-scoring triple following an error gave the Giants an unearned run in the sixth.

NL Roundup

Braves 4, Dodgers 2

Rowland Office keyed a four-run sixth inning with a three-run homer as Atlanta defeated Los Angeles and dropped the Dodgers back into third place in the NL West. Rick Camp, 1-2, earned the victory with relief help from Gene Garber, who posted his eighth save, fifth since coming to the Braves in a recent trade with Philadelphia.

The Dodgers led 2-0 on a two-run single by Steve Garvey in the third inning. But in the sixth, Office blasted his three-run shot off loser Burt Hooton, 7-7, and the Braves later added an insurance run on Bob Horner's RBI single.

Reds 8, Astros 7

Junior Kennedy singled with two out in the 11th inning to score pinch-runner Rick Auerbach and give Cincinnati its victory over Houston.

With one out in the 11th, Johnny Bench doubled off the third base bag. Auerbach came in as a pinch-runner and scored one out later on Kennedy's single. Doug Bair, 3-3, picked up the victory in relief. Joe Sambito, 3-5, took the loss.

Cubs 6, Cardinals 2

Pitcher Dave Roberts belted his sixth career home run and hurled six-hit ball through five innings to pace Chicago over St. Louis.

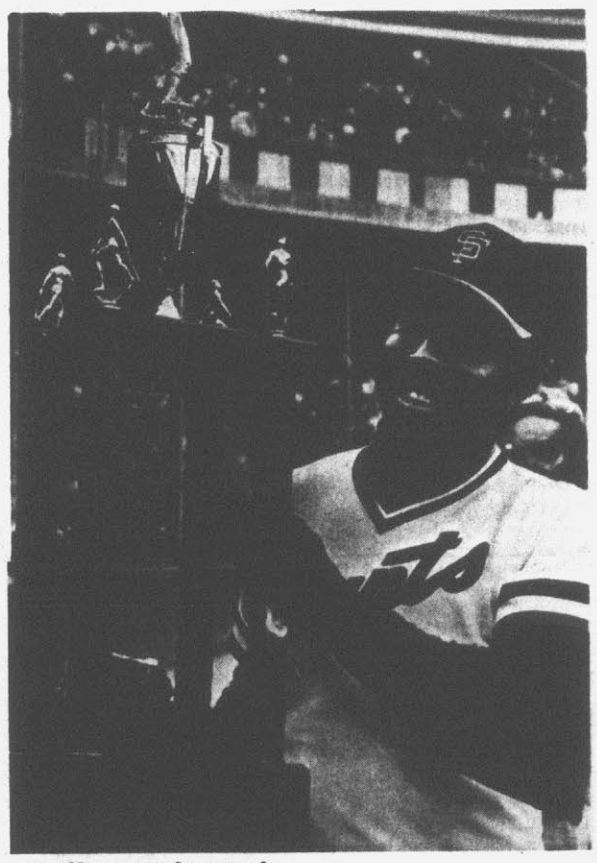

Roberts, a veteran of seven major league clubs, improved his record to 4-3 with his third victory over the Cardinals in as many tries. Donnie Moore and Bruce Sutter pitched in relief for the Cubs, with Sutter gaining his 10th save of the year.

Expos 2, Pirates 0

Hal Dues and Steve Rogers, making a rare relief appearance, stopped Pittsburgh on four hits and Dave Cash and Ellis Valentine each knocked in a run to lead Montreal over Pittsburgh.

Yastrzemski, Fairly Both Reach Milestones

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

Together, they have appeared in nearly 5,000 major league baseball games and collected more than 4,700 hits. Though separated by the breadth of a continent, Boston's Carl Yastrzemski and California's Ron Fairly have a lot in common.

Each reached a milestone Monday night. The 38-year-old Yastrzemski collected the 2,800th hit of his 18-year career as the Red Sox demolished the New York Yankees 9-5 at Fenway Park. Fairly, just over a week away from his 40th birthday, managed his 1,900th hit as the Angels topped the Kansas City Royals 7-4.

And there was something else. The Boston victory strengthened its soli first place in the American League's East Division while the California triumph returned the Angels to the AL West top spot they held for a few days in April and a few more in May.

"Statistics don't mean a thing at this stage," said Yastrzemski, who had a double, two singles and three RBI in Boston's victory. "Even though I'm hitting about .290, I really haven't felt comfortable at the plate this year. The big thing is we're winning. That's what counts."

The Boston victory was its 34th in 40 games at home this year and improved the major leagues' best record to 53-24. The Red Sox got seven doubles — two of them from George Scott — and one triple in a 12hit assault on three New York pitchers.

"I'm just waiting to get 2,000 now," said Fairly, a 21-year veteran who plans to play until 1980 in order to have played major league ball in four decades.

"If I don't do it this year, I'll do it next year," said Fairly, who has batted just 161 times while appearing in 53 of the Angels' 79 games. "I probably won't get enough at-bats (this year), unless I go 100-for-100, and I don't think anybody's done that."

In other AL games Monday night, the Chicago White Sox nipped the Texas Rangers 7-6, the Cleveland Indians clouted the Baltimore Orioles 9-0, the Detroit Tigers trimmed the Toronto Blue Jays 6-5, the Minnesota Twins bombed the Milwaukee Brewers 7-2 and the Oakland A's bested the Seattle Mariners 5-3.

AL Roundup

White Sox 7, Rangers 6

Jorge Orta's two-run homer followed a solo shot by Chet Lemon in the bottom of the ninth, carrying Chicago past Texas and making successful the home debut of White Sox Manager Larry Doby.

Indians 9, Orioles 0

Little-used Larvell Blanks hit a solo homer and a two-run single while Andre Thornton homered and scored three times to pace a 16-hit Cleveland attack and carry the Indians past the struggling Orioles.

Baltimore, which has lost nine of its last 11, managed just six hits off Mike Paxton.

Tigers 6, Blue Jays 5

Lou Whitaker, who thought he might be lifted for a pinchhitter by Manager Ralph Houk, lashed a bases-loaded two-run single in the bottom of the ninth to send Detroit over Toronto.

"I kept looking into the dugout," said Whitaker. "I thought Ralph was going to bring in a right-hander (to pinch-hit against Toronto left-hander Mike Willis)."

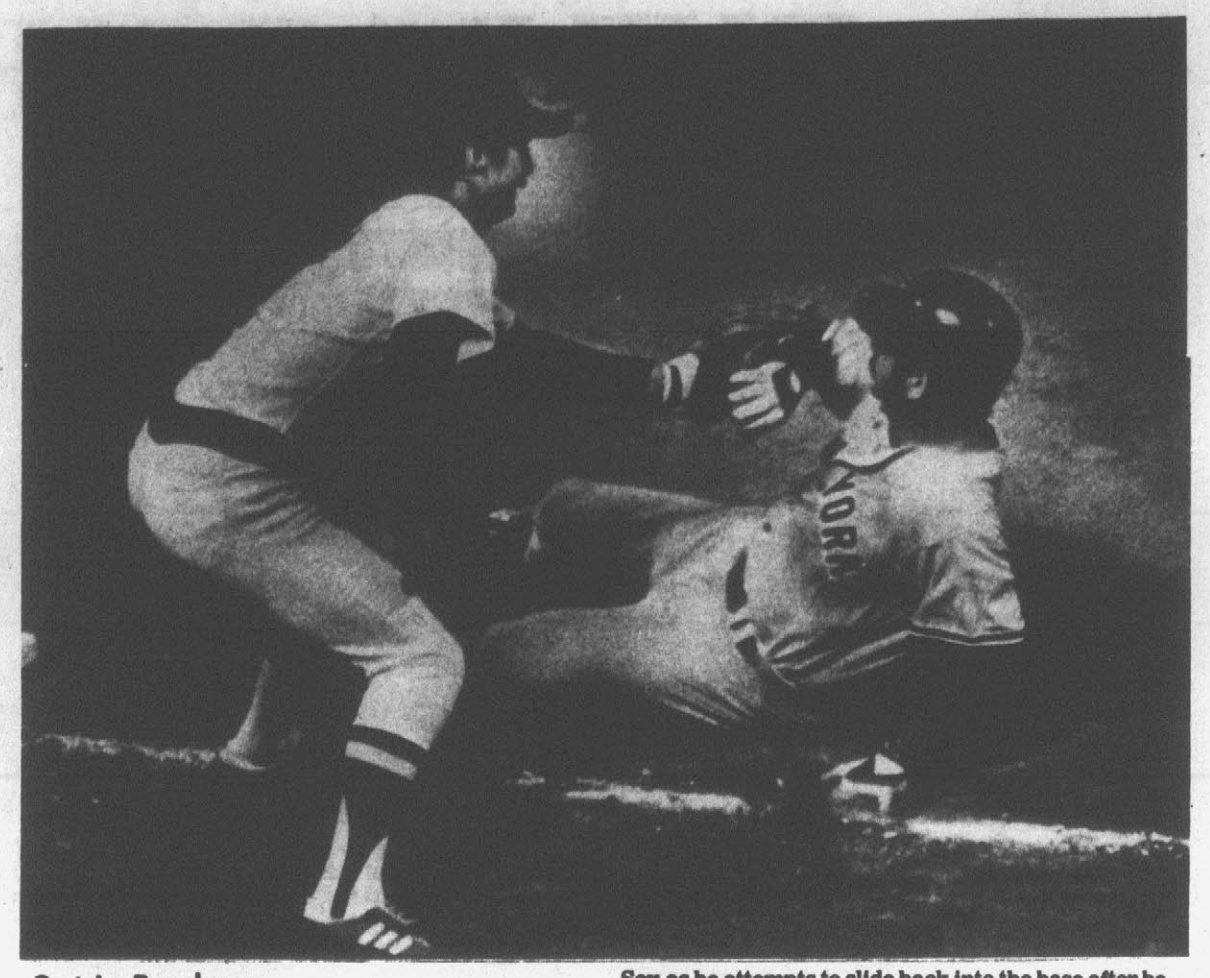

Houk admitted thoughts of sending right-handed batter Aurelio Rodriguez to the plate instead, but decided Whitaker "has been making good contact. I figured he could at least keep out of the double play and we could get one run in."

Twins 7, Brewers 2

Roy Smalley capped a four-run Minnesota sixth inning with a two-run homer, helping Minnesota rout Milwaukee behind rookie Roger Erickson.

A's 5, Mariners 3

Solo home runs by Joe Wallis and Dave Revering backed seven-hit pitching by three Oakland hurlers and sparked the A's' victory over Seattle.

Out In Rundown

The New York Yankees' Thurman Munson is tagged out at third base by Rick Burleson of the Boston Red Sox as he attempts to slide back into the base after being caught in a rundown in the first inning of their game Monday night. The Red Sox won the contest at Fenway Park. (AP Laserphoto)

Guthrie Short Money, Speed

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Janet Guthrie's sponsor money is running short and her stock car is slower than last year for today's Firecracker 400. But her face breaks into a smile at the mention of her ride in the 6-hour endurance race at Watkins Glen this coming weekend.

"From the sound of things, this looks like the best chance I've had to win a major race," she said. "I'll be driving a Porsche 935. I drove a 934 before and that's not as fast as the 935."

She didn't want to mention the name of her co-driver, not knowing if it's been announced, but a reliable source said he will be Brian Redman, one of the brighter stars of road racing.

Guthrie had the 36th starting spot among 41 drivers in the Firecracker 400.

"We did 182 and 183 miles per hour in qualifying last year," she said. "I was disappointed not to make the top 10 last year and this time I worried about making the field. I haven't taken my foot off the accelerator since I got here and the best I could qualify is 176.880.

"Our aerodynamics aren't as good since we can't use the Laguna front end and the horsepower is down. The engine builder says it's the chassis and the chassis man says it's the engine."

Car owner Linda Ferreri has the equipment up for sale, Guthrie said, and the Kelly Girl sponsor cut back its support. This year, there's only enough money left for three more races.

Janet Guthrie

"Linda is moving to San Francisco and doesn't think she can do a proper job of running the operation," Guthrie said. "I've talked about buying the equipment myself, but I need financing. I've got my fingers crossed."

Buffalo May Sue Braves Owners

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — City council members decided Monday not to sue the National Basketball Association under federal antitrust legislation to keep the Buffalo Braves.

But the city might sue team owners John Y. Brown and Harry Mangurian for breach of contract, said Councilman William L. Marcy Jr.

Marcy said councilmen agreed after meeting with Wall Street lawyer William Lawless that "there's not enough steam in the council to go into an antitrust suit, but there very well may be enough to go after damages for breach of contract."

He did not say when a decision would be reached on the proposal.

The Braves broke their multi-year lease on Memorial Auditorium early in May under an escape clause which allowed termination of the agreement after a season when fewer than 4,500 season tickets were sold. About 2,300 were sold in 1977-78, but city officials and most fans believe the team's front office violated a contract provision which called for a bonafide effort to make the franchise a success.

The Buffalo Evening News, in an editorial Monday, charged that the team had used the city as a scapegoat "for the management's own shortcomings and lack of commitment to Buffalo."

Two years ago, the panel sued in federal and state courts to stop the Braves from moving to Florida, ending without a legal ruling on either the antitrust or breach-of-contract ideas after former owner Paul Snyder gave up thoughts of moving the club.

Brown said last week that he and Irving Levin, owner of the Boston Celtics, had agreed to swap teams after Brown moves the Braves to San Diego, Calif.

The NBA Board of Governors will meet Friday in special session to consider the proposal. Levin is board chairman, and detractors believe the meeting will rubber-stamp a prearranged decision.

Guidry Heads Staff Of All-Star Pitchers

NEW YORK (AP) — Billy Martin didn't have to look far to find someone to head the American League All-Star pitching staff — especially after watching unbeaten Ron Guidry pitch all season.

Martin, manager of the world champion New York Yankees and the pilot of the American League for baseball's All-Star game in San Diego next Tuesday, named Guidry and six other pitchers to the AL team Monday.

Joining Guidry on the squad will be Yankees' teammate Rich Gossage, Jim Palmer and Mike Flanagan of the Baltimore Orioles, Frank Tanana of the California Angels, Jim Kern of the Cleveland Indians and Matt Keough of the Oakland A's.

Martin said a he will add an eighth pitcher to the team later this week.

Guidry, a flame-throwing lefthander, set a club record for consecutive victories Sunday when he beat the Detroit Tigers 3-2 for his 13th straight victory of the season. He is two short of the AL record for consecutive wins, which is shared by Johnny Allen and Dave McNally.

Rube Marquard holds the major league standard for consecutive wins with 19.

This will be the first All-Star appearance for Guidry, who is in his second major league season. He leads the league with 124 strikeouts and a 1.75 earned run average in 134 innings.

The seven AL pitchers have a combined record of 60-30 with a 2.53 ERA. Three of the seven pitchers are left-handed — Guidry, Flanagan and Tanana, while two of the seven are relievers — Gossage and Kern.

Palmer will be making his sixth all-star appearance. The three-time Cy Young award winner has a 10-6 record this season with a 2.31 ERA.

Flanagan, making his all-star debut, sports an 11-5 record and shares the AL lead in complete games with 10.

Tanana, 11-5, has now been named to the AL team for past three seasons, while Kern, 6-3 with seven saves, is making his second straight appearance for the AL in the midseason classic.

Gossage has only a 4-7 record, but has compiled an impressive 2.09 ERA and is tied for the league lead in saves with 12.

Blalock Wins Event

NOBLESVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Two consecutive runner-up finishes were more than enough for Jane Blalock, so the 32-year-old former schoolteacher ran away from the field early to score her 20th victory since joining the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour in 1969.

"I had a really good attitude," said Blalock after her five birdies and one bogey in Monday's final round of the $75,000 tournament gave her a 3-stroke victory over Joyce Kazmierski. Blalock's 68 in the final round gave her a 7-underpar 209 for 54 holes at the 6,044yard, par-72 Harbour Trees Golf Course.

the middle with a shot that sailed past the green. He chipped the ball about 10 feet past the hole and two-putted for a bogey. Bean then took two putts to record his par and supplant 1977 Western champion Tom Watson at the top of the money list with $240,058.

Bean, who won the Kemper Open the week before his Memphis triumph, said he planned to play in his first British Open this month. Rogers, 26, said he will skip it.

"I had my chance to win it (the Western) and I didn't," said Rogers, who led by 2 strokes after making an eagle-3 at No. 12. "If you had the whole group of touring pros to pick from to go head-to-head in a playoff with, he (Bean) would be the last one you'd pick."

Tom Kite shot a 68-283 for third, followed by Phil Hancock, 70, and 1975 Western winner Irwin, 72, both at 284. Watson, 71, and first-day leader Cesar Sanudo, 68, were at 285.

Little League

Optimists 12, Coca-Cola 5

The number three seeded Optimists upset topseeded Coca-Cola in the finals of the North State Little League tournament yesterday afternoon.

The victory sends the Optimists into a battle with Pepsi-Cola, the Tar Heel champions, for the city championship.

Coca-Cola took the early lead in the ballgame with three runs in the top of the first by Richard Pace, Darryl Pettis and Aaron Smith, while Mike Iaboni scored for the Optimists in the bottom of the frame to make it 3-1.

Gary Scott cut the Coca-Cola lead to one with an Optimist run in the second and the winners took the lead for good with three runs in the third. Brett Dye singled, Mike Iaboni reached on an error and Darrell Dunn doubled them home. He scored on an error.

Mike Sasser came across for Coca-Cola in the top of the fourth, but Dye and Iaboni both scored again in the bottom of the frame and the Optimists scored five runs in the fifth to seal the win. Coke's final run came in the sixth.

Sasser paced Coke with two hits, while Dye, Andre Wooten and Gary Scott each had a pair for the Optimists.

Pepsi-Cola 4, Exchange 3

Regular season champion Pepsi-Cola won the Tar Heel League playoffs with a narrow victory over Exchange yesterday.

The win puts Pepsi into the city championship playoffs against the Optimists, winners of the North State League tournament.

After Tim Norris scored for Exchange in the top of the first, yesterday Pepsi-Cola put two runs across in the bottom of the inning. Mike Kinley reached on a fielder's choice and Raju Singh got a base hit. Kinley scored on an error and Singh came in on a passed ball.

Hunter Bost tied the game with a run in the third for Exchange, but Kinley scored again in the fourth to return the lead to Pepsi. Curt Hendrix came across for Exchange in the sixth to even things up again, but Pepsi scored the winning run with none out in the seventh.

Ken Hofheinz led off the final inning with a double for Pepsi and Kendall Phillips plated him when he reached on an error.

No batter on either team had more than one hit.

Charleston Ponders Convention Center

By RONNIE LOVLER
Associated Press Writer

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — To be or not to be. That is the question surrounding a municipal government proposal for a hotel-convention center complex in the heart of this city's downtown historic area.

The legal crux of the matter — the city's case is awaiting a decision by the state Supreme Court — is whether the city is exercising its right of eminent domain according to the state constitution, which permits the government to acquire private property only if it will be put to public use.

Other issues revolve around linguistics and aesthetics — conflicting interpretations of the definition of urban blight joined with a debate on the effect a multi-story hotel complex will have on the city's traditional efforts to maintain its low-rise skyline.

The project, as presently outlined by Mayor Joseph P. Riley Jr., calls for the city and Holywell Corp., a Washington, D.C.-based firm, to jointly undertake development of a 430-room hotel, a 1,200-person capacity convention center, a 500-car parking garage and retail space — all to be located on a one-block square site.

The block is bordered by King, Meeting, Market and Hasell streets.

Financing for the proposed $38 million project would come from a $4.1 million federal grant and an $11 million municipal bond issue, with Holywell providing additional funds.

It is the city's definition of the proposed site as a blighted area which will provide the first impetus for the project to get underway. The federal grant is being given under a Housing and Urban Development program to rejuvenate decaying inner cities and will pay for acquiring property, relocating tenants and building traffic accesses.

"It will be the biggest ripoff of federal funds," according to Kathleen Sommerall, a tour guide and member of the city's zoning board. "I think it's one of the most vital areas of the city. Property values have gone up at least 50 per cent over the last three years.

"A few years ago there was nothing here," said Harold Adler, an architect involved with much of the renovation of the area. "Now it's becoming one of the healthiest sections of town."

Riley, however, while noting a resurgence in area adjacent to the proposed site, feels that the convention center complex is essential for revitalization of the city's core.

"The site could serve as a way of linking the resurging Market Street area with a declining old retail area and draw people into the central business district," Riley said.

According to Riley, tourism, a $370 million industry and the backbone of the city's economy has no "center of gravity". He believes the proposed complex could serve as a "hub of tourism activity."

Opponents, however, claim such a hub is neither needed nor wanted and fear the impact of having hundreds of cars and thousands of persons passing through the area.

Nancy Hawk, president of the Charleston Neighborhood Association, Henry Cauther, executive director of the Preservation Society of Harleston and Norman Olsen Jr., president of the Harleston Village Association represent organizations which are taking the city to court.

Mrs. Hawk, Riley's opponent in the 1976 mayor's race, claims such a project is "inappropriate for the middle of the city's historic district. We have enough tourists and with a convention center we would have them coming for the wrong reasons."

Cauther, echoing her sentiments, contended that if the project is allowed to go ahead, it will "ruin the area as a place to live. Look at the French Quarter in New Orleans - now no one lives there. The whole quarter is completely commercialized."

Olsen, meanwhile, says his organization fears that "our streets will become traffic feeders" and the city's already limited parking with be further restricted.

They say their organizations are amenable to construction of a small hotel on a vacant lot within the proposed site. They maintain the city already has a convention center in Gaillard Auditorium and is not fully utilizing it.

Kerry Gionis, who owns and operates several downtown restaurants, says the auditorium is not adequate for use as a convention center because it is tied up two months a year with the Spoleto USA festival, is far from the center of town and has no meal facilities.

Gionis says the project will not only bring the city more revenue by way of taxes and increased employment but will "enhance and improve the look of the block."

The Historic Charleston Foundation, has taken no official position with respect to the proposed convention center. Gregory Paxton, preservation administrator for the foundation, said the foundation believes "development on this block is very important, but we do have some reservations" and particularly the need for a convention center in the heart of town.

In a city where preservation of old buildings has become a way of life, many are also concerned about the proposed demolition of 20 to 30 old buildings now standing on the site. The city plans to maintain the facades of the structures, but many feel this is not enough.

"Our clout as a historic city is that we have the real thing," Cauther said.

Until the Supreme Court makes a decision on the legalities of the city's property condemnation and financing proposals, however, the city can do little more than draw up plans.

Opening lead: Three of ♠.

Little things can really mean a lot at the bridge table. To make this slam from the London leg of the Philip Morris European Cup competition, declarer must ruff two spades and a heart in dummy. Does it matter which suit he tackles first?

North-South bid aggressively to reach a tenuous club slam. After South showed interest in slam with his diamond cue-bid, North chose to cue-bid his second-round heart control. South needed no further inducement.

The lead of either red ace would have made declarer's life easy, but against Polish internationalist Janusz Polec, the opening salvo was a low trump. Polec then proceeded to play the hand as if he were looking at all the cards.

He won the ten of trumps and immediately led a low heart to the king. When this won, he continued with a heart to the nine and jack. Since West had no more trumps, he chose to exit with the ace of hearts. Declarer ruffed low in dummy and led the queen of spades, covered by the king and ace.

After cashing the jack of spades, declarer ruffed a spade with a high trump. He returned to his hand with a diamond ruff and ruffed another spade with the jack, setting up the fifth spade in his hand. A diamond ruff was the entry to draw the last trumps and cash the good spade.

Note that if, after winning the king of hearts, declarer takes the spade finesse, cashes the high spade and ruffs a spade high, he will be defeated. On this trick East can discard a heart, and now declarer cannot use dummy's low trump to ruff a major-suit loser—East will overruff!

There is a sound principle in this situation—if you must ruff two suits, it is usually correct to take the ruffs in your shorter suit first.

Hornet's Nest Are His Business Symbol

SALISBURY, N.C. (AP) — Some people use little flags fluttering from the rafters to decorate their places of business, and some use Chinese lanterns. And then there is Jim Myers. Myers uses hornets' nests.

There are at least 104 of them in his wholesale produce market beside U.S. 601 just north of Salisbury. They hang from the rafters. They dangle over the cash register. Some are piled beside the watermelons and some are perched atop the drink machine. A few are wedged in with the canned goods.

And more keep coming. That's because Myers' regular customers are constantly hunting for nests to add to his ominous-looking collection.

Myers has paid for only one of the nests. And the only reason he bought that one was because he knew how proud the little boy who was trying to sell it would be to have a dollar all his own.

He wouldn't think of selling one himself. His determination was tested by a man who recently offered him $75, even $100, for just one of the nests. But it was no sale.

Myers said he got interested in hornets' nests when he used to bird-hunt in the area and started watching the nests while he was looking up the trees for birds.

He says he's been known to carry one as far as three miles to get it back to civilization.

At first he just stashed his finds in a toolshed at his house. But about eight years ago, when he opened the market, "it just come to my mind to take the two I had down there."

Quite a few of his first-time customers wish he hadn't.

Myers says he's had quite a few potential customers start through the door and "just draw up." Then there have been those few that just "backed out."

But he insists the nests are harmless since there's never been a live hornet brought in with one, and that he's never been stung trying to get one out of a tree.

The old nest is abandoned, so "you don't steal their homes," he said.

Myers wouldn't think of trying to get a nest while the hornets are still using it because, "they catch more flies than anything in the world."

And because he firmly believes that "if you don't bother them, they don't bother you."

Study Women's Heart Diseases

By GARRY MITCHELL
Associated Press Writer

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Get off that treadmill fellows, women are running longer.

That's what a group of researchers recently found in combating heart disease in women.

Their study of 95 women, ages 19 to 69, also reiterates the medical conclusion that testing for heart disease in women has been handled insensitively.

Furthermore, exercise data exclusively for women should be used to diagnose heart disease in women, according to findings of the cardiology research team at the University of Alabama in Birmingham.

"In the past, cardiology research has neglected women somewhat," said Dr. L. Thomas Sheffield, professor of medicine and principal investigator of the research project. "We found that the established treadmill exercise test used to disgnose heart disease was effective for men but not for women. Interpreting electrocardiograms from this test was reliable when applied to men but unpredictable when used for women."

The study notes that treadmill endurance capacity decreases 10 percent per decade in active men, but only 2 percent per decade in active women.

A 60-year-old active, healthy male should be able to perform approximately 60 percent of the treadmill exercise he could accomplish as a 20-year-old while a 60-year-old female should be able to perform over 90 percent of the exercise capacity she was able to do as a 20-yyear-old, the study concludes.

Doctors have been searching for new methods to diagnose heart disease in women.

"Dr. Sheffield and his group are excellent observers," said Emory University medical professor Dr. J. Willis Hurst in Atlanta. "I certainly agree that it's more difficult to evaluate coronary disease in women than in men."

Hurst added that women are more likely to have "false-positive" exercise test results. He explained that in those cases results may appear to be positive, but, in reality, they are false. In some cases, heart disease can be detected through performance on the treadmill.

"I don't consider this work a breakthrough by any means," Sheffield remarked about the UAB study. He added: "I just think that it's a normal evolutionary extension of what was already known. However, we had our subject material to encompass the whole age range where earlier studies had not."

Sheffield said an age range of 19 to 69 was needed "in order to establish an effective diagnostic exercise test exclusively for women."

Dr. Jeffery S. Borer of the National Heart and Blood Institute at Bethesda, Md., pointed out that treadmill tests in the past were only conducted on men or mixed groups of men and women.

"The argument leveled against exercise electrocardiogram in women has not only been one of insensitivity, however, but lack of specificity," Borer said.

What is already known is that women outlive men, perhaps because they retain their ability to exercise longer than men.

Sheffield offered no explanation for the difference.

"I can't explain why active women retain their capacity for exercise better than men during the aging process anymore than scientists can explain why women outlive men by an average of eight years," Sheffield said.

Ceramics At Indian Site

By ROBERTA ULRICH

NORTH BONNEVILLE, Wash. (UPI) — Northwest Indians may have been eating from British-made China before they ever saw a white man.

That is one possible conclusion from early discoveries at the site of an archeological excavation near Bonneville Dam on the Columbia River 35 miles east of Portland, Ore.

A crew of more than 20 employed by Environmental Consultants Inc., of Dallas, Texas, under a contract from the Army Corps of Engineers, has worked at the site on the north shore of the river, where a new channel will flow to serve a second power house being built at the dam.

Preliminary finds indicate some usage of the site perhaps as early as 1270 A.D., when a massive landslide blocked the Columbia there. Other finds are from the late historical era, as late as 1870. The site was abandoned after that.

"What we're hoping to do is document the changes in the material and life of the Indians which occurred as a result of contact with Europeans and their trade goods and diseases," said Larry Keeley, co-director of the project.

At some time a Chinook Indian village was located at the site. "They were the great traders of the Northwest," Keeley said. "That would explain their having some items before Lewis and Clark arrived."

Among the finds are ceramic pieces which appear to be late 18th Century pottery from England, trading beads, square nails, bones and buttons.

Discoveries so far indicate the possibility that both settlers and Indians occupied the site. "We don't know whether the two existed side by side or whether we have two occupations compressed," Keeley said.

Moyewood Office Declared As Excess

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

A resolution declaring the Housing Authority's present office site in Moyewood as excess property was approved Monday night in view of the agency's plans to occupy a new office on Broad Street in the near future.

Joe Laney, executive director, explained that the present central office facility at 316 E. Roundtree Drive will no longer be needed after the Housing Authority and Redevelopment Commission staffs move into the new office, currently under construction as an addition to the Newtown community building.

Laney said that the declaration of the facility as excess was subject to approval by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Commission Will Meet

The Joint City-County Planning and Zoning Commission, which failed to have a quorum for last week's regular June meeting, will meet Wednesday at 8 p.m. at city hall.

Following approval by HUD, the central office, which is located in a house off NC 43 in the Moyewood section, will be appraised, advertised and sold on the private market. The house will be disposed of for residential use, it was explained.

Laney pointed out that the new office in the Newtown housing development should be ready in two to three months. He said that both offices may be occupied initially until the house is sold in order to avoid leaving the present office vacant.

Housing commissioners approved the retention of Rivers & Associates of Greenville to provide engineering services and guidance regarding drainage problems in the Moyewood housing development.

Laney said that erosion is taking place at ditches on the southern and western borders of the development and something needs to be done now to rectify the drainage situation. He added that Rivers has submitted a map to the Authority showing the existing drainage conditions and recommended solutions.

The executive director proposed that the Authority retain the firm as consulting engineers for the drainage work and also as a representative to talk with the N.C. Department of Transportation regarding the drainage problems caused by the construction underway on NC 43.

Laney reported that no new developments had taken place on the proposed mid-rise housing complex for the elderly and the staff is still working towards having the package ready to advertise for bids by July 15.

The new housing project under construction in Southside is approximately 65 percent complete, he reported, or some 15 percent behind the target schedule for this stage. He said that with good weather this summer, the general contractor still feels that he will be on schedule for an October completion.

Grading is 95 to 98 percent complete, according to Laney, and sub-surface and storm drainage work has been completed on Arthur Street.

Laney added that the Authority has been urged to consider a name for the new 111-unit project other than "Southside." He said that the Authority welcomes suggestions from the community regarding possible names for the development, which is situated south of 16th Street.

All units operated by the Authority were occupied during June, according to tenant affairs director Sallye Streeter, with average rent amounting to $71.45. Individual averages in the five developments included: N.C. 22-1 (Meadowbrook), $62.71; N.C. 22-2 (Kearney Park), $73.23; N.C. 22-3 (Moyewood), $74.90; N.C. 22-2 (Moyewood), $71.15; and N.C. 22-6 (Newtown), $66.92.
