

Shcharansky 'Guilty'; Gets 15 Years Hard Labor

By SETH MYDANS
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Dissident Anatoly Shcharansky, whose cause was championed by President Carter and became the center of an international furor, was convicted of spying for the United States today and sentenced to 13 years at hard labor, his brother said.

The 30-year-old Jewish activist was also convicted of "anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda," for which he must serve seven years concurrently with his espionage term. Leonid Shcharansky said.

The sentence was two years less than the 15 requested by the prosecutor, the longest prison sentence allowed by Soviet law. The charge of treasonable espionage could have meant the death penalty, but the prosecutor had cited the defendant's youth and clean record in asking instead for a prison term.

The verdict and sentence climaxed twin dissident trials that have brought the Carter administration into a confrontation with the Kremlin over human rights. On Thursday, a court in Kaluga, 100 miles south of here, sentenced dissident leader Alexander Ginzburg, 41, to eight years at hard labor.

In a closing statement, Shcharansky said: "To my wife and my people I can only say, 'Next year in Jerusalem.' To this court which decided my fate in advance, I say nothing," his brother reported. "Next year in Jerusalem" is a centuries-old rallying cry of Jews dispersed from their homeland.

Just before word of the verdict, a dark green van believed to be carrying the defendant sped from the courthouse in central Moscow as supporters surged around it chanting, "Tolya! Tolya!" the Russian nickname for Anatoly.

Speaking to reporters and dissident friends outside the courthouse, Leonid Shcharansky said the judge specified that the first three years of his brother's term be served in prison and the remaining 10 in a labor camp.

Western correspondents were barred from the dissident trials and depended on relatives of the defendants, and occasional briefings from court officials, for information.

While the West's attention was focused on the Ginzburg-Shcharansky trials, a third dissident—Catholic activist Viktorus Pyatkus — was sentenced Thursday in Vilnius, Lithuania, to 10 years at hard labor and five years of Siberian exile.

He, too, was found guilty of anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda, but why his sentence was longer than Ginzburg's was not known. Pyatkus was a founder of the Lithuanian branch of the Helsinki human rights group to which Shcharansky and Ginzburg also belonged.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said in a statement he was "deeply distressed" by Ginzburg's sentence but made no mention of Pyatkus.

Shcharansky in a defense statement to the court Thursday asserted that because he worked only to help others in the Jewish emigration movement, the Soviet government was being nid told reporters.

He said he had been engaged in the "noble" work of helping others and publicizing their plight, but "it was a hopeless task to defend himself in this only half-open trial ... where invited spectators shout and jeer."

Shcharansky is a computer programmer who lost his job after he applied to emigrate in 1973. He was turned down on the basis that he possessed state secrets as a result of his work, though he denies that this was so.

He became active in the emigration movement and in 1976 broadened his activity to the so-called Helsinki Group formed in Moscow to expose Soviet failures to comply with the human rights provisions of the 1975 Helsinki accords on European security and cooperation.

The prosecutor, P. Solonin, said Shcharansky deserved the death penalty for "concrete illegal actions, for spying and other criminal acts." But he said the court should be lenient.

Brewer 'Renews' ECU Commitment

ECU News Bureau

The new chancellor of East Carolina University views a "commitment to excellence" as a primary requisite to achieving the university's goal of constructive progress.

A compact and covenant between the people and the university "was etched here at ECU in 1907," said Dr. Thomas B. Brewer in an address Thursday night. "So as I begin my tenure at ECU, I pledge to you a renewal of the covenant between East Carolina University and the people of Eastern North Carolina."

"We will continue to grow in comradeship and that comradeship will bring not just a fine university, but a superb university which uses its human resources, the most precious of all resources, and to make even more meaningful to the people of Eastern North Carolina the University seal — 'To Serve' — indeed it is the seal of the covenant," Brewer said.

Addressing a Kiwanis Club audience at Winterville, Dr.

CHANCELLOR BREWER

Brewer said, "We intend to strengthen the traditional functions of East Carolina University."

"The University has been and will continue to be an exciting and dynamic institution with rapid and constructive change taking place in all corners of the campus. All this has and will continue to occur because the faculty and staff want it to happen," he said.

Brewer said his role as chancellor is to stimulate, "But more importantly, to facilitate the accomplishment of goals and objectives of the various units of the university."

"I would fail in my responsibility if I did not have ideas as to how to achieve our mutual goal of ever improving quality," he said.

"Our goals will be high but realistic. We will be imaginative and bold. We will try new approaches and new ideas. Some will fail and some will work. But we will succeed."

Brewer said "we want the citizens of Eastern North Carolina and indeed the entire state to hold us to a high accountability. They should demand excellence of us and expect us to excel."

"If, indeed, we are to achieve the goals of the University, it will require the commitment to excellence from all: from parents and friends, from students and faculty, and from the administration and staff."

"Our heritage will not allow us to do otherwise," he said.

Jointly Lament Action

By FRANK CORMIER

BONN, West Germany (AP) — President Carter and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt joined today in deploring Soviet prosecution of dissidents, with Carter declaring that his criticism will not be silenced and Schmidt citing Eastern European human rights violations.

"Our voice will not be stilled as we consider these violations, and others around the world, of human rights," Carter said.

At an impromptu news conference following their only scheduled bilateral talks, the first questions sought their reaction to the prosecution of Anatoly Shcharansky and others in the Soviet Union.

"We deplore this action by the Soviet government," Carter replied, citing not only Shcharansky's case but similar moves against Alexander Ginzburg and Yuri Orlov.

Seeking in German, Schmidt said: "I would like to express my full agreement with what the president has said."

The German leader added that "such actions" are also taken "in the other part of Germany" and said that he would like to remind U.S. reporters "that there are also people in Eastern Europe who suffer under such conditions but are not given such public prominence" as the Soviet dissidents.

The U.S. president said it was obvious that "the courageous dissidents in the Soviet Union" are being tried, convicted and punished because they "sought basic freedoms" guaranteed under the Helsinki agreement, which he noted the Soviet Union "voluntarily signed."

Carter said he had just received a personal report from Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance on what the president termed Vance's "constructive meetings" in Geneva with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko.

Carter's meeting with Schmidt followed a sedate official welcome here after a breakfast conference with Vance that touched on new difficulties in American-Soviet relations.

Carter, who reached Germany so late Thursday night that the welcoming ceremony was delayed, was received by President Walter Scheel under misty skies at Villa Hammerschmidt, the West German chief of state's official residence on the Rhine.

Died At Age 100

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — Fred G. Gillikin, the Coast Guard's oldest veteran and leader of its first rescue operation in 1915, died Thursday at age 100.

Known to friends as Captain Fred, Gillikin was honored on his 100th birthday March 3 with a festival sponsored by the Cartaret County Chamber of Commerce. He remained active until he was hospitalized for a broken leg he suffered when he stepped in a hole June 22 at his home in nearby Marshallberg.

He joined the U.S. Lifesaving Service, a forerunner of the Coast Guard on Jan. 10, 1900, and became a member of the Coast Guard upon its formation.

Gillikin ended his active service with the Coast Guard 37 years ago. "I've been on inactive duty since 1941" he said on his 100th birthday, "but I am subject to recall at any time."

Conditional Permit For Private Club Is Approved

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The City Council, following a public hearing and intensive questioning session, voted to grant a request for a special use permit to operate a private club on the Pactolus Highway just down from the State of Transportation Department property.

In approving the request, submitted by R. C. Robbins, the Council stipulated that the only activities permitted at the club would be dancing with no live entertainment other than bands.

The Council also made the permit approval conditional upon the exclusion of films, topless activity, pornographic movies and massage parlor services from the club.

Mickey Herrin, local attorney representing Robbins, presented evidence in support of the permit application by way of offering testimony by Robbins.

Under questioning by Herrin, Robbins reported that the property, which contains a structure that will be utilized for the private club, is located some 700 to 800 feet from the Green Street intersection on the north side of the highway.

Robbins declared that no other private club is operated within 500 feet of his property and he noted that the lot has 150 feet of frontage on Pactolus Highway and runs to a depth of 250 feet. He estimated that 100 parking spaces would be available on the site with three to four employees hired initially.

In response to questioning by Mayor Percy Cox regarding the parking provisions, Robbins acknowledged that it would be hard to say how many cars could park on the property but he felt that the site would accommodate all of the persons using the club.

Membership fees will be charged, according to the petitioner, and a board of directors will serve. Saying that he is "putting a lot of money in this," Robbins assured the Council that he would not have "roughnecks coming in."

Chief Building Inspector Alton Warren told the Council that more than adequate parking area is available and fire exits are provided as well as emergency lighting.

Minors will be restricted from membership in the club, according to Robbins, with only persons over 21 years of age able to join. Beer will be served, it was mentioned.

Councilman John Howard asked that if the club turns out to be a massage parlor or place for X-rated movies, would the operating license be revoked. It was explained that if the conditions of the permit are not met, the license would be revoked.

Herrin added that the petitioner was not applying for an adult use permit.

The request was granted for a one-year period, subject to renewal.

In other business, Cox was called on to break a tie vote on an amendment to the Animal Control Ordinance relating to civil penalties for ordinance violators. The mayor voted in favor of the

New Bern Chief Is Back On Job

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — Police Chief John Worsham returned to his job today and a spokesman for the city's 34-member police force said most officers were prepared to return to work after a two-week job walkout.

Worsham was sworn in as chief this morning after the aldermen decided Thursday to give him the job he resigned when the entire police force turned in their guns and badges in a pay dispute.

Police spokesman Capt. P.O. Rodgers said today that most officers would return to work with the original 6 percent pay raise offered by the city, if the board of aldermen will rescind a resolution which accepted their resignations last Tuesday evening.

Aldermen Charles Kimbrell and Paul Cox both refused to comment on whether or when the board would meet to discuss the offer.

Rodgers said about 20 percent of the policemen have since obtained other jobs and would not return to work.

Planning Board Meeting Set

The Pitt County Planning Board will meet Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the Law Library at the Pitt County Court House.

Items on the agenda include a report on preliminary work for a proposed apartment, duplex and condominium ordinance, consideration of the final plan for the J. H. Blount subdivision, and consideration of plans for the Windermere Estates, Westbrook and Terry Dixon subdivisions.

Public Employees In 3 Major Cities Strike

By The Associated Press

Public employees launched strikes in three major U.S. cities Thursday night and early today, leaving Cleveland with no police on the streets, Louisville without fire protection and Philadelphia without the services of 19,600 non-uniformed workers.

Louisville firemen walked off the job and set up picket lines this morning, in protest of what they called the city's failure to bargain in good faith over wage demands. Union spokesman Steve Catlett said as far as he knew all the nearly 600 firemen were honoring the strike call.

The city immediately took steps to obtain a restraining order and said if firemen ignored it they would try to get National Guard troops to man fire houses.

The Kentucky Labor Relations Board has found the city guilty of unfair labor practices in its negotiations with the firemen, who had been poised to strike for a week. The city has offered a 5.5 percent wage increase, and the firemen, who now start at a salary of just over $11,000, have not made their demands public.

In Cleveland, 1,500 patrolmen went on strike Thursday night after 13 fellow officers were fired for refusing an order by embattled Mayor

Dennis Kucinich to start one-man daytime foot patrols in housing projects notorious for violent crimes.

Some water and garbage workers were honoring police picket lines this morning, raising the threat of a wider work stoppage in this city of 700,000 persons.

There were no initial reports of serious problems from the walkout, as non-striking police manned station houses. Kucinich, who faces a recall election next month, obtained a court order against the walkout, but police refused to return to work.

In Philadelphia, the nation's fourth-largest city, 19,600 blue-collar, clerical and professional city employees non-uniformed workers went on strike today after union negotiators refused to accept or reject a contract offer.

Supervisors filled in at prisons and the city water department, but a halt was expected in such services as trash collection and street cleaning.

The issues are wages and layoffs. The city was recently ordered by an arbitrator to give police a 9 percent wage hike, and said it might have to lay off 3,500 other workers to raise the money.

FAULTY GAS TANK?

I'm the owner of a 1972 Ford Pinto and have been hearing rumors for three months or more that this car, among others, has a faulty gas tank. I have called Hastings Ford here and was told I must wait for official notification from the Ford Motor Co. I was told that contacting the Ford Company would do no good since they would probably tell me the same thing. In the meantime, I am driving this possible "deathtrap." Where can I go to get information now? S.B.

Hotline called the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, which has a toll-free number — 800-424-9393. The person we talked to directed us to the Ford Motor Company National Owner Relations Office, Americana Road, Dearborn, Mich. 48121. From Directory Assistance, we obtained the phone number for this office, 313-337-6950.

We then talked to George Traynor, who was both helpful and cordial. He confirmed that Ford is planning to have local dealers make modifications on the gas tanks of all Ford Pintos manufactured for 1976 and before. He said letters are being sent out, but that, if you are not the original owner, you should contact the Ford Parts and Service Division, Ford Motor Company, Box 3333, Livonia, Mich. 48150. Give your name and address and the serial number of the car, he suggested.

Plans are, he said, starting in September, to have the following modifications made by local dealers: replacement of existing gas tank filler pipe with a larger one; replacement of existing gas tank filler pipe seal; installation of a polyethylene shield around the front of the gas tank itself; and replacement of gas cap with a newly designed one.

He said the costly modification program was prompted by National Highway Safety Administration rear impact crash tests, which Ford believes should not have singled out Pinto from among other cars built prior to 1977.

He said your chances of experiencing trouble before you're called in for your car's modifications are slim. Out of 28,000 auto fatalities per year, only about 170 have fire involved and only part of these are from rear impact crashes. There are more than 100 million cars on the road, most built in 1976 or before.

Women Busy With Many Roles Urged To Select Priorities

By CAROL DEEGAN
NEW YORK (AP) — Carol Suphina says its time for women to stop trying to live up to the "Superwoman" myth. "I don't know why modern day cliches are harder to fight than the traditional ones," she said. "We all laugh about the blushing bride and pink and white babies. But somehow the idea of being a 'Superwoman' maintains itself. We read about it all the time. And we fantasize about other women being more capable than we are."

Mrs. Suphina, 35, is a wife, mother, and worker. She has an 8-year-old daughter, Alexandra, and an infant son, Nicholas-Oliver. She is director of human relations here at Marymount Manhattan College.

Four years ago, Mrs. Suphina decided to go to work. She then began discovering the difficulties of combining her job with family responsibilities.

"My response as a 'Superwoman' was over-compensation," she said. "It didn't matter if I came home tired at night, I told my daughter, 'Let's play,' and weekends, 'Let's do.' I didn't have a spare minute to myself."

Now Mrs. Suphina says she has learned that she has chosen three very diverse roles — that of wife, mother and worker — three very demanding roles that take a lot of her time and energy.

Mrs. Suphina said she had also learned that she had her own physical and emotional limitations.

"I just can't be everything all the time to everybody, including myself," she said. So, Mrs. Suphina now tries not to do everything all at once. She tries to pick out "priorities."

Mrs. Suphina says part of the "Superwoman" myth is that "every Superwoman is super-organized" — and is therefore able to handle her various roles with ease.

"Well, I like to think I am organized, and yet what used to constitute just changes in my life when I was home with my daughter now constitute upheavals. Babysitters get sick, children get sick, babysitters quit for better jobs."

"My daughter's school closed for a week last year because of the energy crisis. I was organized, she was supposed to be in school. And that's where the craziness comes in. Because there's a constant need to re-make your time, rebudget your time, again and again," she said.

There's another myth that Mrs. Suphina would like to get rid of. The one that says "having a job makes a woman more interesting to her husband."

"Well, my skills have sharpened since I went to work. My intellect has grown, and you know, I hope it's true, I hope I am an interesting person. But I hope that I was an interesting person before I went to work, as a matter of fact."

"And as much as I may be more interesting as a person, the day-to-day intimacy of a marriage is much more difficult to maintain when both you and your husband are absorbed in your work, you're both tired, or you simply don't see each other. And that's true many nights, especially if you're trying to work out child care on a standard basis," she said.

Despite her busy life, Mrs. Suphina finds time to appear on panel discussions about women and work, sponsored by the Clairol Co. And she is actively involved in the founding of the Manhattan Center for Children of Divorce, an interest she gained while teaching a college course about divorce and children.

Does Mrs. Suphina regret her decision to go to work?

She is emphatic: "Absolutely not. If by some fluke of fate, I became independently wealthy, I would continue to work. I don't want to trade my children in. And I like being married."

Excessive Sun Can 'Age' Skin

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 17, and I sunbathe every chance I get because I like the way I look with a suntan.

Nearly everyone who meets me comments on my "beautiful" suntan, but they spoil it immediately by adding, "But if you don't stop doing that to your skin, you'll look like an old lady by the time you're 30!" Some have even told me that too much exposure to the sun can give me skin cancer. (Is that true?)

Abby, I think it's very rude of people to make such remarks. Please print this. Maybe it will shut up people who offer advice when it's not asked for. Thank you.

LIKES A SUNTAN

DEAR LIKES: Although unsolicited advice is seldom appreciated, you'd be wise to heed it. Excessive exposure to sun "ages" the skin prematurely, and it can cause skin cancer.

DEAR ABBY: My 15-year-old daughter just told me that she's been intimate with her boyfriend. He is her first and only. My daughter and I are very close, and she has always told me everything, but I'm shocked by this news. She thinks there's nothing wrong with it because she "loves" him.

Should I tell the boy's parents what is going on and ask them to tell their son not to see our daughter anymore? Knowing the boy, he would respect their wishes, but then my daughter would know I told them and it would ruin our good relationship.

Or should I ask the boy to stop seeing our daughter, and threaten to tell his parents if he doesn't comply? I'm sure if we broke them up the chances for the same thing happening with another boy would be greatly reduced since she is quite picky about whom she associates with. In the meantime, she may mature more. Please tell me what to do.

WORRIED MOM

DEAR WORRIED: Please don't call the boy's parents. Your daughter would feel betrayed and may close the door on future confidences. She needs your understanding and mature guidance more than ever now.

Parents rarely succeed in breaking up their children's love affairs. (They usually drive them underground.)

Keep the lines of communication wide open, and be sure your daughter knows everything a sexually active teenager should know in order to protect herself against VD and unwanted pregnancy.

This is not to suggest that you should condone her actions. Rather, it's a plea for facing reality and handling the situation sensibly and unemotionally.

DEAR ABBY: I recently telephoned a friend and asked her if she was going to be home that evening because I wanted to visit her. She said, "Yes, I'll be home, watching my favorite television program. If you want to come over and watch it with me, you are welcome. Otherwise, let's make it some other time."

What do you think of such a friend?

OFFENDED IN OMAHA

DEAR OFFENDED: I'd prefer her forthright brand of frankness to the person who tells me I'm "welcome," foregoes her favorite TV program, and resents me for it. Or the friend who tries to entertain me with one eye on the TV.

Are your problems too heavy to handle alone? Let Abby help you. For a personal, unpublished reply, write: Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

ISRAELI CHICKEN
The glaze has good, not-too-sweet flavor.

3-pound frying chicken, quartered
4 teaspoons prepared Dijon mustard

1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons butter, cut up small

1 small onion, finely chopped
1 cup orange juice
1/2 cup lightly packed light brown sugar

Spread the skin side of the chicken with the mustard and sprinkle with the salt and pepper. Place skin-side down in a 10 by 6 by 1 1/2-inch baking dish. Add the butter, onion and orange juice. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven, basting midway, for 20 minutes. Turn skin side up; stir the sugar into the juices in the dish. Continue baking in the 375-degree oven, basting several times, until golden brown and tender — about 40 minutes more. Remove the chicken and keep hot. Pour the juices into a 1-quart saucepan and boil gently, stirring often, until reduced and thickened; spoon this glaze over the chicken. Makes 4 servings. Hearings Scheduled On 3 Rezoning Requests

The City Council took action on a variety of items Thursday night, including the scheduling of public hearings on three rezoning requests.

Marvin K. Blount Jr. was appointed to a four-year term on the Greenville Airport Authority, succeeding Eddie Smith who indicated that he would not be able to serve a second term.

The board named Mrs. Priscilla East to the Planning and Zoning Commission, succeeding Mrs. Ruth Trevathan who completed two terms on the commission.

Col. Richard Blake was reappointed to a three-year term on the Public Transportation Commission after filling an unexpired term that ended this month.

William Clark and Mrs. Shirley Morrison were named to the Citizens' Bikeway Committee.

Other action included:

- Approval of applications submitted by Ms. Brenda J. Hansley, Ms. Annie Blount Harkley and Michael Jones for taxicab operator's permits;
- Granting of on-premise beer privilege licenses to Sutton's Citgo at 3300 S. Memorial Drive, the Rathskeller at 109 E. Fifth Street, and New Horizon Discotheque at 1311 W. Fifth Street, and an on-premise beer and wine privilege license to the Sting at Greenville Square Shopping Center;
- Scheduling of public hearings for Aug. 10 on requests for rezoning the Wilson Rhodes and Beacon Piano Co. property on Hooker Road from R-6 to Highway Commercial, for rezoning property adjacent to West End Shopping Center from Shopping Center to RA-20, and for rezoning property south of Greenville Boulevard between Seaboard Coast Line Railroad and Nichols Department Store from RA-20 to Highway Commercial;
- Waiver of the privilege license requirements for the Pitt County American Cancer Crusade in order to sell concessions at the Cancer Crusade automobile auction on July 22 at Kroger's; and
- Adoption of a resolution declaring the costs for the improvements on Brownlea Drive, from Tenth Street southerly approximately 1,330 feet to the Pauline Dail Parsons' property, and setting a public hearing for Aug. 10 to confirm the assessment roll.

City Council ...

Warren explained to the Council that a number of citizens had questioned the practice of having a warrant served on them for a court appearance in regard to violations of the animal control statute. He said that in checking with other towns, it was found that in some cases, the investigating officer writes out a ticket rather than serving a warrant.

According to Warren, the proposed amendment here would allow a citizen to pay a $15 civil penalty at city hall for violations involving "lack of restraint by chain or leash" rather than require an appearance in court and payment of a minimum of $27 in court costs.

The inspector, noting that it still involves a $5 fee plus $1 per day boarding fee to claim a dog from the pound, said that the proposed effective date of July 24 for the amendment would give the city time to advertise the new policy and have tickets printed.

Councilwoman Judy McGrath proposed that the matter be delayed until the next meeting in order to obtain more information. She said that she had questions that she wanted to have answered before she could vote in favor of the amendment.

A motion to table the matter, offered by Mrs. Greene, failed when Cox broke a two-to-two tie against the tabling action. Councilman Clarence Gray voted with Mrs. Greene to table the matter, saying that he was not satisfied with the time span in having the amendment become effective.

Councilmen John Howard and Charles Vincent voted against tabling. Vincent said that the amendment would make it easier for officers to give tickets and he added that he hoped there would not be indiscriminate issuance of tickets under the system. The councilman urged that the same "strict standards" apply to ticket issuance as it did regarding the serving of warrants.

The same two-to-two vote resulted on Howard's motion to adopt the amendment and Cox broke the tie in favor of adoption. Mrs. Greene and Gray indicated that they were not opposed to the ordinance amendment but were not ready to vote at this time.

The Council adopted a resolution authorizing formal application to the Urban Mass Transportation Administration for a capital grant to upgrade and expand the city's transit system.

The total grant of $630,130 involves an 80 percent federal share of $504,104 with ten percent shares provided by the city ($63,013) and the state ($63,013).

It was noted at the June meeting, when a pre-application was approved, that the grant would fund six transit vehicles, a ten-passenger van with lift for the handicapped, a service vehicle, and other equipment for the transit system.

Mrs. Greene commented, "In light of all the cutting we have just done last month to the 1978-79 budget, I would be very much opposed to applying for and accepting a grant that would cause an expansion of the transit program which, in the future, is going to possibly place an undue tax burden on the Greenville citizens."

She added, "I feel that the need for the program has definitely been established by the people who have used it and at the same time, I feel that we have other areas of service that are vital to our citizens." She said that "in this year's budget we have cut the budget for some of these services."

Mrs. Greene said that she would like to know that the plan set forth in the application would only serve as a planning tool for the transit program and not something that the city would have to go by.

Staff Planner Ben Shivar noted that it was understood that the city would not be able to afford the expansion on its own. He said that if the grant is not approved, new buses would be used for replacement vehicles rather than as an expansion of the system.

Approval of the formal application authorization was unanimous.

The Council members gave their approval to a revised service fee schedule for extrajurisdictional container service. Under the amended schedule, five days per week pick-up service will be provided for industry at a fee of $125 per month for the first container and $62.50 per month for each additional container located at the same pick-up point.

In providing the 52 additional days of service per year, the city will still require industries to maintain the same number of containers as serviced under the four-day per week schedule. The city had charged $100 per month for the first container and $50 per month for each additional container under the old fee schedule.

In A Way, Our Terminal Too

Over at Stallings Field Tuesday Piedmont Flight 906 left for Richmond, Va., becoming the first flight to embark from the new $2.1 million air terminal there.

The air terminal has been constructed at what is now being referred to as the Eastern Regional Jet-port.

"We've still got some kinks to work out, Kinston-Lenoir Airport Commission Chairman Jimmy Hodges said, "but we are mighty happy to be in it. It's the culmination of a lot of work for a lot of people."

The 26,000 square foot structure provides modern space for air passengers to purchase tickets, check in and out, check baggage and wait for their flights. Its opening is of considerable interest to the people of Greenville and Pitt County because more and more we are making use of the facility to catch flights to Washington, New York, Atlanta and other points.

It is a relatively short drive from Greenville via a dual laned highway and the facility provides pretty good service to several major cities. If traffic continues to build we can expect even more air service to major points around the nation.

Pitt-Greenville Airport is one of the state's busiest commercial airports, and it has commuter service furnished by Wheeler Air Lines.

It appears likely that major jet service is going to be centered at Stallings, however, and the improved terminal facilities are welcomed by Pitt County residents.

The Ambassador Damages His Country

United States UN Ambassador Andrew Young has his foot in his mouth again.

In an interview with a Paris Socialist newspaper, Young referred to "hundreds, perhaps thousands" of political prisoners in the United States.

If he spoke as a private citizen it would be one thing, but Ambassador Young speaks as an official representative of the U. S. government.

These are wild and ridiculous allegations by Ambassador Young, and most of the American public recognizes them as such. The tragic thing is that such comments have virtually destroyed his credibility as the nation's ambassador to the United Nations.

Millions To Prison System

By BILL NOBLITT

RALIEGH—Arguments have been plentiful over the years that North Carolina is shortchanging the prison system, failing to provide money enough to keep pace with the growing inmate population.

The figures now defeat that contention as record amounts are being spent for construction.

There is a grand total of $83.5 million presently either being spent, recently spent, or soon to be spent on new prison construction or updating of old facilities.

Pulling all the figures together is difficult. Some money is coming from federal sources ($8.6 million) in several different programs; some from appropriations by the General Assembly ($52.2 million); some from special reserve funds set aside by the General Assembly for building now being planned ($17.5 million); and another combination of state and federal funds ($5.1 million) earmarked for repairs and renovations of existing kitchens, dining rooms and other support facilities.

Pleased But Privately, high level government officials are pleased with the tremendous building programs, but somewhat reluctant to reveal totals since public and legislative reaction might work against additional investments in the future.

Correction Secretary Amos E. Reed, however, admits that his counterparts in other states often seek him out in an effort to learn the secret of such success in getting construction money. The secret, he says, is a strong support in the General Assembly.

Building now in progress and due completion in a year or two will provide more than 3,840 new prison spaces, mostly in single-cell units. That will go a long way toward relieving the serious prison overcrowding which has caused such concern in recent years.

There are currently about 14,200 inmates in space designed to hold 12,645. Just a year ago, the capacity was just 10,000. But predictions continue that by 1980 the prison population will top 15,000 and continue upward as younger, tougher criminals are sentenced to longer terms.

BILL NOBLITT

Besides building, several other steps such as speedier parole mechanisms, use of local lockups for short-term inmates, and decriminalizations or some minor offenses are also helping reduce inmate population.

A variety of construction approaches have been used. Thirty-two modular units similar to double-wide mobile homes have been installed. Two former juvenile training schools have been converted, one in Rocky Mount and the other in Moore County. At Cameron Morrison School, 100 female prisoners are due to be transferred from Raleigh in the state's first move to house women outside the central Women's Prison.

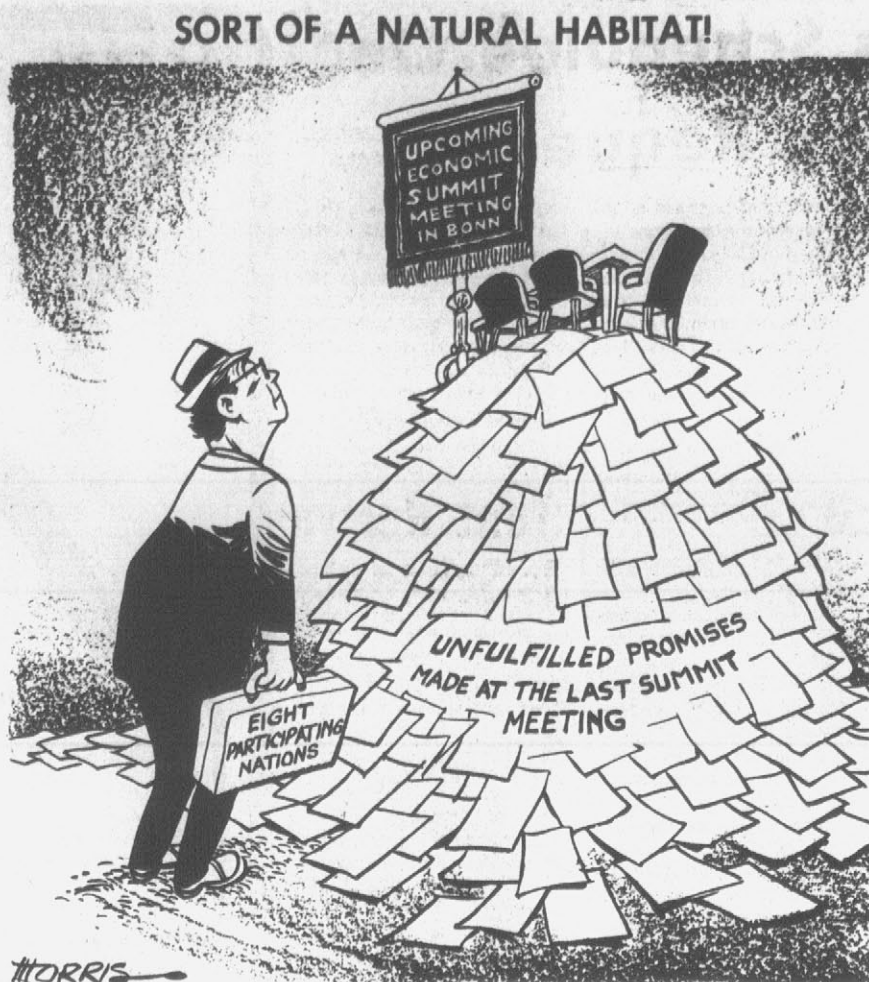

Inmate Labor

Prison inmate construction crews are now building simple concrete and brick units at existing prison field units. Eight have been completed and 12 more in the works. A building at Cherry Hospital is being taken over for inmates with mental problems.

Use of inmate labor is allowing construction of 528 single cells at a cost of $7.7 million; less than half the normal cost using private construction contracts. The Salisbury high-rise will house 480 and is costing $13.6 million, but that includes such support facilities as kitchens, classrooms, and dining rooms which are not needed when cells are added at existing prisons.

The state's symbol of prison antiquity, the gothic brick towers and rusty cell blocks of Central Prison in Raleigh, will soon be demolished and replaced by new maximum security buildings that will cost $27 million.

In all, the state is satisfying the demand for building more and better prison space.

Television's Big Secret

WASHINGTON—If you're wondering why all the action shows on television look alike, I think I might have an explanation. It was revealed by a television star, who told me that if I used his name he might never work again.

"So what's the secret?" I asked.

"There are only two writers in Hollywood scripting every television action drama."

"What are their names?"

"Al and Harry."

"Why only two?"

"Because no television producer wants to take a chance on new writers. Al and Harry are proven commodities. They started with Peter Gunn, and they've been signed up for every program that's been on TV since. Whenever someone wants a new show, Al and Harry get the call. That's why all the shows look alike."

"I don't understand. Why would Al and Harry write the same show over and over again?"

"Look, if you watch most action dramas, it's 10 percent dialogue and the rest of the time the characters speed around in automobiles. The most creative work Al and Harry have to do is figure out where their people are going to chase each other."

"It's true that most shows take place in automobiles," I admitted. "But at the same time, it must be hard to think of new ways each week to send a car over a cliff."

ART BUCHWALD

"I'm not saying that they don't have talent," the television star said. "I remember the first time Al, or maybe it was Harry, came up with the idea of having a helicopter chase a car. That was a real breakthrough in television writing. It was so successful that they now use it in every other show they do."

"They must be terribly busy."

"What have they got to be busy about? They have a card file of all the plots they ever used. When they do a new show, they go to the file and rewrite the same plot. Then they play tennis all afternoon."

"But it seems to me that at the end of the action dramas, I always see different writer credits on the screen."

"They're all pseudonyms for Al and Harry. The studios provide the names because Al and Harry don't have the imagination to think up their own."

"But why Al and Harry? Why not Sam and Max?"

"Al and Harry own the copyright on the psychopathic killer. They invented him during one of the early episodes of Dragnet. Without a psychopathic killer you can't have an action drama."

"Why is the psychopathic killer so important to these shows?"

"Because you don't need any character development. Almost every show starts out in a police station. The phone rings and the sergeant says:

Other Editors Say Human Rights

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

The trials of Russian dissidents this week may seem at first glance to be far removed from the high-level diplomatic conference table at which the Soviets and the Americans sit on occasion.

But the trial of Jewish activist Anatoly Ahcharansky comes at a crucial period of Soviet-American relations for the Carter administration's quick and firm admonition to the Soviet Union about the trial raises anew the questions of a link between human rights and detente.

A year ago it was Moscow which warned that detente would be damaged by the human rights offensive launched by the Carter administration. And it was the administration which said its human rights offensive should have no bearing on other aspects of detente, such as the strategic arms limitation talks.

Now it is the Kremlin which stirs the human rights waters again, announcing the trials of Shcharansky and Alexander Ginzburg. And it is Washington which responds with stern statements.

The State Department flatly stated that "the fate of Mr. Shcharansky and Mr. Ginzburg will be an important indicator of the attitude of the Soviet government, both with regard to observing its commitments under the Helsinki Final Act and to promoting a healthy atmosphere for the constructive development of Soviet-U.S. relations."

That is as plain as one can make it; the U.S. position on human rights, then, is linked with detente, as well as other things. There are some options open to the U.S. to display its disapproval of the trampling of human rights in the Soviet Union.

Already Barbara Blum, an official of the Environmental Protection Agency, has announced cancellation of a planned visit to consult with Soviet counterparts.

One Soviet expert on the White House National Security Council staff, Samuel Huntington, has suggested that economic sanctions might be applied.

Under such a plan, the administration could withhold approval for export of advanced U.S. technology grain and other items sought by Moscow.

As the trials of the dissidents in Russia continue, it will be of great interest to Americans to watch the administrations reactions—and its responses.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Sadat's Other Nightmare

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

CAIRO — A military map kept in a locked cabinet in the office of Gen. Abdel Ghany Gamasy, Egyptian defense minister, reveals more clearly than the words of politicians how far Soviet penetration of key African states has proceeded, which the U.S. plays by Marquis of Queensberry rules.

It shows that Soviet military advisers in Libya have doubled to 2,200 since Egypt gave Libya a swift blow last year in a bloody border dispute. It shows that these Soviet advisers are training Libyan troops down to the company level, with three to five "technicians" assigned each battalion.

Egypt today has little to fear from oil-rich but relatively powerless Libya, headed by the radical pro-Soviet leader, Col. Muammar Qaddafi. But the legends on

Gen. Gamasy's colored map point to this conclusion: while the U.S. flinches from any use of superpower power, the Soviet Union is penetrating key African countries with no such scruples, using money, propaganda, dirty tricks, guns and Cuba.

Egypt is a principal target. "They want to get even with President Sadat," Gamasy said, for Sadat's expulsion of Soviet influence here in 1972.

Speaking with diplomatic restraint, Boutros Ghaly, Sadat's chief African specialist, expressed the same point differently. He told us that major African states south of Egypt, where for centuries Egypt has blocked potential enemies to protect its Nile River lifeline, fear that the U.S. has "drawn a Korea-type defense line" excluding Africa. Another high Egyptian official said that "the cold war has moved to Africa, and any idea that the continent can be ruled off bounds in the U.S.-Soviet competition is an illusion."

Sadat was specific: Soviet pressure in Ethiopia, Chad, Sudan and Libya, with an eastern anchor in South Yemen at the southern tip of the Arabian peninsula, is "the first belt" of Soviet influence across Africa.

The "second belt" is targeted across southern Africa, from Angola to Mozambique. Neither belt has been buckled. In the north, for example, France is successfully contesting the Soviets in Chad. Sudan, Egypt's southern neighbor and close ally, has turned back Soviet efforts to exploit cultural, religious and racial differences between the Arab north and the black south. But the new Soviet presence in Ethiopia is a mounting threat to Sudan — and thus to Egypt.

The problem for Sadat is the future, as the Soviet Union pushes its aggressive role and the U.S. keeps insisting that Africa is no place for East-West confrontation. During Vice President Mondale's brief stop in Alexandria to see Sadat, the Egyptian president warned that Moscow's free hand in Africa was shredding confidence in the U.S. and creating Soviet strong points throughout the continent for future opportunities.

Sadat's worry seems reasonable. Ever since he ordered 15,000 or more Soviet advisers out of Egypt, cut dependence on the Kremlin and edged toward the U.S., Moscow has threatened retaliation. Sadat claims that a dressing-down of then-Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy by Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev in Moscow two years ago amounted to an "ultimatum."

He described this ultimatum to us as follows: "Tell Sadat we shall continue to have our plans in Africa and he will meet the consequences of trying to oppose us there."

The "first belt" across north-central Africa, if completed, would threaten Egypt with encirclement, yet neither Egypt nor any other anti-Soviet country can begin to muster adequate resources in response.

In fact, however, Sadat knows that a U.S. counter-strategy of the kind envisioned by him is not today under serious discussion in Washington. The fashionable talk among State Department

Strength For Today

LIFE AFTER DEATH

"But some will say, 'How are the dead raised up, and with what manner of body do they come?'"

The question of what happens to the human soul after death has been a perennial and a very intriguing one. The Bible does not say a great deal about life after death, but Paul says something of great importance which we should always bear in mind.

He says that we have both a natural and spiritual body. The natural body is the one we have now; the spiritual body is the one with which we shall be raised from the dead. After death the natural body decays, but this decay, like the disintegration of the shell of a kernel of wheat, makes possible the release of the spiritual body. It is then raised in glory.

Many of our puzzled speculations about life after death would be dispelled if we would read carefully what Paul has to say about it in the 15th chapter of I Corinthians. —T. A. Douglass

Steps Court Danger

By R. GREGORY NOKES Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) —

The money-managing Federal Reserve Board is up to its old tricks, pushing interest rates to the highest levels in years and contributing to fears of a new recession.

It's all reminiscent of 1974 when the Fed's pressure on interest rates and the money supply played a major role in the nation's plunge into the deepest and longest recession since World War II.

But wasn't that in the days of Republican presidents and the conservative chairman of the board, crusty old Arthur Burns? Didn't Democrat Jimmy Carter name his own man, G. William Miller, to run the Fed? What goes on here?

What goes on here is that the Fed, like the Congress and the presidency, has a role to play in government that sometimes transcends the inclinations of any particular chairman.

In other words, no matter what Miller's personal views might be, nor no matter how much he would like to please Carter, the business of the Fed comes first, and right now the Fed sees its business as fighting inflation.

The White House and the Congress are the spending branches of government, and, whether for better or worse, they are spending far more than the government has in revenues.

The Fed, on the other hand is in a position to try to counter the impact of excess spending, especially when it shows up in worsening inflation. It reacts almost instinctively by tightening the money supply, an action that, theoretically at least, relieves pressure on prices by pushing up interest rates.

With prices rising at an annual rate of more than 10 percent so far this year, the Fed has predictably reacted by tightening the screws on the money supply, pushing interest rates to 1974 levels. The cost of conventional home mortgages is now over

40 Years Ago Today

July 14, 1938

Although efforts had been made to influence the Tobacco Association of the United States to move up the opening date of eastern Carolina tobacco markets, it was definitely learned today that the auctions will start in Greenville and other cities in the belt on August 25, the date set recently at the annual convention of the Association.

Roses 5, 10 and 25 cent store will open for business Saturday at 9 a.m., following an informal opening tomorrow from 4-5 p.m. and Friday from 8-9 p.m. The new store, regarded as one of the city's most beautiful, is located on the northwest corner of Evans and Fourth Streets, across Evans from Blount-Harvey's department store. The building is practically new throughout and has plenty of room to display the large stock of merchandise. The store measures 52 by 120 feet.

Consumer Debts Keep Growing

By WILLIAM GLASGALL AP Business Writer NEW YORK (AP) —

Will the great American buy-on-credit boom continue, and what will a continued boom mean for the economy?

Those are questions economists at Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. are posing as consumer installment credit keeps on surging.

According to the Federal Reserve, consumer debt — loans for cars, appliances and other items, and charges on credit card accounts — rose to $227.6 billion in May. That's 18 percent ahead of last year's level and a whopping 2,745 percent above the total consumer credit outstanding at the end of 1948.

Why the increase? According to George Cruikshank, an economist at the New York bank, Americans after World War II "plunged into debt to satisfy pent-up demands for consumer goods." By the 1950s, buying leveled off, but "the first half of the 1960s saw a renewed upswing in installment debt, spurred by increasing acceptance of the use of credit for a variety of purposes."

Cruikshank, in a new report, attributes the credit boom to a change in attitudes "as the older generation, sorely tested by the Great Depression and somewhat cautious about debt, gave way to a generation more disposed to its use."

Much of the debt increase has come through new-car loans. Automakers are reporting robust sales this summer, and many of the cars are bought on credit.

While a two-year car loan was the norm 25 years ago, auto loans now last for up to four years. This means consumers can spread out purchases of increasingly expensive cars over longer periods, but it also means increased loan costs.

Quite a few economists — including the pollsters at the University of Michigan's Survey Research Center — believe the current retail sales growth is being fueled in part by consumers buying now to beat the almost inevitable price increases later.

This means added debts, and Cruikshank notes "a nagging question is being heard. Are consumers over their heads?"

The Morgan Guaranty economist says, "over the years American consumers have demonstrated a remarkable ability to control their appetite for on-the-cuff purchases. When families have found their paychecks pinched by payments for past purchases they have eased up on acquiring added installment debt burdens."

Cruikshank believes we may have reached that point. Traditional measures of installment debt indicate "unless things fly in the face of everything consumers have done in the past, the time is approaching... when consumers will moderate spending and debt additions."

Based on past indicators, the downturn should be moderate rather than severe, Cruikshank says. One possible reason for this is the historical relationship of consumers' liquid assets — cash and bank accounts — to total liabilities, which has changed little since 1961 despite numerous economic ups and downs. This indicates that savings and debts have increased side by side at about the same rate over nearly two decades.

Anticipating The Next Papal Election

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Technically, anyone can be elected pope. Under Roman Catholic rules, it could be a Paris policeman or a New Orleans plumber. But almost inevitably, it's one of the church's active cardinals, currently 117 of them.

They are a select fraternity, generally little known to the world at large, who make the choice in highly secretive seclusion, a locked-door conclave.

But for the first time, a group of influential Catholics seek to do what they can to open up the process to public scrutiny.

They launched their efforts
this week as an international "Committee for the Responsible Election of the Pope," is-

uing a volume of profiles of present cardinals, and also introducing a monthly newsletter,
"Conclave Confidential," weighing the prospects.

"We want full discussion of the men and the issues, rather than it being confined to a narrow club," said James H. Andrews of Mission, Kan., co-chairman of the group and board chairman of Sheed Andrews and McMeel Publishers.

It turned out the new volume of biographical appraisal, "The Inner Elite: Dossiers of Papal Candidates," by sociological specialist Gary MacEoin of Tucson, Ariz.

He spent three years in research and interviewing the cardinals, tracing their careers, attitudes and sway among their colleagues in the context of conditions that could affect their choice.

It was found that some of them hardly knew each other, being unable even to pronounce
the names of fellow cardinals, Andrews said. Even "more alarming," he added, was the fact that their impressions of each other seldom matched assessments of close associates.

Beyond that, he said there is an incredible "lack of basic information available to the world community about this inner elite" who will chose from among themselves the next pope, with his worldwide church authority and voice in international diplomacy.

The new group, besides seeking to turn the light — and power — of fuller information on the process, also is amassing data for computer projections of likely papal choices in various "simulated scenarios," with first results expected to be ready this fall.

The undertaking was described as not focused only on the "imminent near-term death" of Pope Paul VI, nearing 81 and increasingly frail, but as a continuing, long-term

attempt to illuminate the traditionally shuttered proceedings.

The new committee, presently about 25 prominent Catholic clergy and laity, mostly professors, columnists, researchers, authors and editors, plans to expand to a worldwide network, also enlisting some Protestant and Eastern Orthodox specialists because of ecumenical aspects of the papacy.

Philip Scharper, the group's other co-chairman and editor in chief of Orbis Books, Maryknoll, N.Y., said the project is a "logical extension" of reforms of the Second Vatican Council.

10 percent, the highest in recent history.

But there is a danger that as the Fed pushes up interest rates to slow the economy and cool inflation it may push them too high and plunge the country into a recession.
Treasury Secretary W.
Michael Blumenthal has said
the Fed is courting precisely that danger now.

Miller openly has admitted the Fed's actions could result in a recession if the White House and Congress don't cooperate by reducing federal spending.

But last week, Miller even voted against the latest increase in the Fed's discount rate, which was raised from 7 percent to 7 1/4 percent, the highest in more than three years. He was outvoted 3-2, though, the first time in recent memory a Fed chairman has been on the losing side in such a vote. The discount rate is the interest charged on loans to banks.

Members of the Federal Reserve Board are appointed for 14 years and once he names a member, the president no longer has any authority over him, or her,
which gives the Fed its independent status. It is technically responsible to Congress, but lawmakers frequently complain they have little influence over its actions either.

political appointees is that, if given enough rope, the Russians will hang themselves in Africa.

Compounding Sadat's concern is the predictable turn to new anti-U.S. radicalism throughout the Arab world and across north Africa if the U.S. fails to win Israel's acceptance of a Mideast peace plan. "If the U.S. now shows that Israel can deafen its ears to the president of the U.S.," one official told us, "the future may belong to Moscow
in this part of the world."

In short, evidence that the U.S. could not even deliver Israel for a Mideast settlement with the Arabs would reinforce skepticism here
over Washington's dubious response to Soviet activism in Africa. The two — Middle East and Africa — are halves of the same whole, a political fact that Jimmy Carter should understand.

Happy Beachhead

If you've ever taken a child to the seashore, you know what that first glimpse of the ocean can mean to a youngster... the lure of fascination... the foreboding of fear. Which will win the struggle?

But what a delight when hesitation ends and Jeannie finds her happy beachhead down where the waves wane, and the tide seeks its rest.

And if you've ever taken a child to Sunday School, you know what that first glimpse of strange surroundings can mean.

But, even if there are misgivings that first Sunday, Jeannie soons finds her happy beachhead.
And one day she'll plunge bravely and confidently into deeper reaches of the vast spiritual ocean that surrounds life.

Anything as vital as religious education deserves an early and earnest beginning.

Wilmington Port Expansion Endorsed By Governor

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A proposed $14.5 million expansion of the Wilmington port has won the backing of Gov. Jim Hunt, but the governor directed the State Ports Authority not to neglect the Morehead City Port.

"We'll do all we can to bring this expansion about," Hunt told the SPA after a briefing Tuesday on the plans for Wilmington.

Under the proposal, $13.6 million would be spent converting Berth C at the Wilmington port into a container shipping facility, complete with two container cranes. The Wilmington port now has one such crane, which cost $2 million.

Another $900,000 would be used to plan a $30 million expansion of an unused 52-acre tract adjoining the Wilmington port facilities. The expansion would be mainly for container freight.

Container traffic at the Wilmington port is expected to reach 32,000 containers a year by 1979 and 55,000 by 1981. The port handled 16,000 containers last year.

"We are very bullish on Wilmington as an opportunity to make more on our investment and to serve the people of North Carolina," state Sen. Jack Childers, D-Davidson, an SPA member, told Hunt.

Hunt admonished the board to avoid costly mistakes of the past. He cited the case of the container crane at the Wilmington port that has not been fully used since it was installed about a year ago because there is no paved storage area on which to stack containers as they are lifted off ships.

"We've got to stop making that kind of mistake with the people's money," Hunt said.

Plans for improvements of Berth C must be approved by the Department of Administration before a Sept. 1 deadline for budget requests to next year's legislature.

"I want these plans treated with great dispatch," Hunt told the board.

At the same time, he urged the authority not to forget Morehead City.

"I want us to work to get business for Morehead City," he said. "I feel strongly about that. I charge you to keep that in mind."

But SPA members indicated they don't know how to carry out the instructions. SPA Chairman Thomas Taft described the situation at Morehead City as a "crisis."

For the fiscal year ending June 30, Morehead City incurred losses totaling $607,663, 17 percent greater than the year before. At the same time, Wilmington had profits amounting to $466,663, down 33 percent. Staff members said the June dockworker strike was largely responsible.

Although the SPA staff has worked for months to generate more business for Morehead City, Taft said, "What we've been doing so far hasn't worked."

WANTED INFORMATION

regarding James C. Cobb and wife, Mary, who inherited land from William Bell of Pitt County in August 1850. James C. Cobb was the father of Robert John Cobb, born 1855, married Mollie A. Rountree, was a large stockholder in the old Greenville Tobacco Warehouse Company, organizer of the Greenville Banking and Trust Company, and its president for two years. He was vice-president of Cabinet Veneer Company and had a son named Cecil R. Cobb. I need the connection of James C. Cobb and wife Mary to William Bell from whom she inherited the land. Is there a family Bible anywhere? I will pay for documented evidence or Bible record. All replies will be answered and postage returned by Mrs. Sam Duggan, Moultrie, Ga. Route 4, 31768.

Summer Is Busy Season For USCG Auxiliary

The Coast Guard Auxiliary of Greenville, Flotilla 16-05, is in its busiest season with summer in full swing. Its most recent activities included assisting the Coast Guard at the Trent River Raft Race in New Bern, and at the water sports portion of the fourth of July celebrations in Belhaven.

In these two water-oriented events, the Auxiliary was given the responsibility of patrolling the waterfront during the peak of on-the-water activities.

In addition to occasions such as these, the Greenville Auxiliary commonly takes part in voluntary patrols or patrols carried out under the auspices of U.S. Coast Guard orders.

Earlier this year, the Auxiliary offered a free 13 lesson boating safety course at Pitt Technical Institute; a three-lesson basic boating course sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department; and the Young People's Boating Course for all fifth graders in the Greenville City Schools.

More than 2,000 people in Pitt

County have benefitted from public education programs given by the Auxiliary in the past five years. Another regular training and education feature of the Greenville Flotilla has been the maintenance of a boating safety booth at boat shows and fairs where local boaters can have questions answered about boating regulations and boat handling procedures.

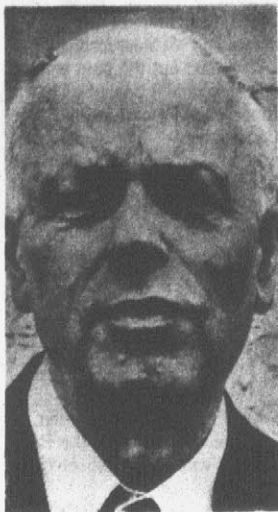

Five members of the Greenville Flotilla are qualified to conduct courtesy Marine examinations, and more than 100 boats are inspected each year by these inspectors.

Jim Hecker, Flotilla Commander of Greenville Flotilla 16-05, invites interested boaters including former Coast Guard smen and Navy men to attend Auxiliary meetings.

Auxiliary members receive training through the U. S. Coast Guard Institute and U.S. Coast Guard units. This training includes actual on-scene training as well as training in the Coast Guard Training Center at Yorktown, Virginia. Basically qualified members are given instruction in piloting, communications, search and rescue, seamanship, patrolling, weather, and administration.

The next meeting of the organization will be at 7:30 p.m. Monday, July 16 in the Conference Room of the East Federal Savings and Loan Association at the corner of Arlington Blvd. and Evans Street.

Reviewed, Approved

The Eastern North Carolina Health Systems Agency met Wednesday, and approved several projects following a review.

The proposals approved included projects in Craven, Wayne and Jones counties.

Roy Selby, executive director of ECHSA reported that contrary to recent reports, the Rocky Mount Sanitarium's application for replacement has not received final approval.

Selby noted that the hearing officer's report is in the hands of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare for final review.

The ECHSA annual meeting will be held in September, and will include an orientation session for new members, as well as educational activities for other Governing Body members.

Due to a conflict in meetings, the August ECHSA meeting will be held August 16, rather than on the normal meeting date.

'Youth Day' To Be Observed

Reddick Chapel Baptist Church will observe its annual Youth Day Sunday at 11 a. m.

The Rev. Vance Cotton of New Haven, Conn. will deliver the message and the Conetoe Chapel Baptist Church Youth Choir will render the music.

The public is invited, with young people as special guests, says the youth minister, the Rev. J. H. Carney.

Area Students In Pre-College Study

Two area students are participating in a special pre-college program during the second summer session at East Carolina University.

Lisa Lemar Haislip of Hassell, a rising senior at Roanoke High School, Robersonville, and Shawn Allen Carson of Winterville, who attends D. H. Conley High School, are two of nine students working toward college credit at ECU.

All have SAT scores of 1,000 or higher and rank in the top 15 percent of their classes. The students were recommended by their principals, high school counselors and teachers.

"They are ECU students in every sense," declared Gayle Everett, assistant dean of admissions. "They are earning college credit and we hope the college experience will be helpful and useful."

The students are paying regular expenses for tuition and fees, as well as dormitory rental, and are participating in regular campus activities. Course loads vary from five to seven semester hours.

Carson is taking two courses, art and speech, while Miss Haislip is enrolled in college algebra and sociology.

No Nostalgia In Rudd's Coming Special

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hughes Rudd used to be in the newspaper business. Tonight, he inspects same in "The Business of Newspapers," his first CBS special since he exited the CBS Morning News last year. Don't expect this one-hour effort by the ex-editor of the Rock Springs, Wyo., Daily Rocket to be a nostalgia trip. It concerns such distinctly unnostalgic things as: —Newspaper monopolies and what he calls a monopolies "potential for abuse: The power to select news to protect the paper's friends or to punish its enemies." —The growth of newspaper groups, with Rudd's dour note that wealthy groups are buying papers at such a rate "it's been estimated there'll be no independent papers left in 20 years." —Marketing gurus who advise how to attract young, affluent readers and have helped ire what is called "fluff journalism" in some quarters, the "lifestyle" section in others. (Curiously, he doesn't mention journalistic changes at The New York Times, which for so long was a bastion of hard news, and now sports a slogan that says The Times "is much more than the news.") He starts in Seattle with a marketing expert, his queries leading to: "Do people want a newspaper which is shaped by their leisure time interests ... or a paper that gives them serious news?" He then visits Boston's two rival papers for one answer. Monopoly power is studied in Phoenix, where he asks why the company that owns the town's two dailies didn't run a national series last year on organized crime and corruption in Arizona.

Both this and the hard news vs. light fare segments are interesting, but the show's real meat is its study of what the growth of newspaper groups in America may portend for the future. The big ones perused here are the Times Mirror Corp. in Los Angeles, and the New York-based Gannett company, owner of 79 papers. Most groups, Rudd notes, "are careful to avoid imposing editorial controls on their local editors, because if chains become callous absentee owners, they're heading into trouble."

Gannett president Al Neuharth says that what probably bothers Rudd — and a lot of critics — are fears "some hard-nosed businessmen who are thinking only of how much money they can put in the till will take control of all our newspapers." However, he says, while the short-term potential for that exists, "I don't think the public would let us get away with it, long-term." The fact most Gannett papers are monopolies in their markets, he says, has some economic advantages, but this "carries with it some inherent responsibilities." "And our editors take those very seriously. They're aware of the fact they are the main source of news and views." But in Rudd's show-closing remarks, he warns papers already are heading for trouble, that the "big news about the big business of newspapers is that the public shows signs of distrust and skepticism."

Novelist Sued By Publisher

NEW YORK (AP) — Novelist Terry Southern failed to produce a promised manuscript, The Dell Publishing Company charges, and they are suing to recover a $20,000 advance. The paperback publishers, in papers filed this week in U.S. District Court in Manhattan, charged that Southern, who lives in East Canaan, Conn., not only missed his April 1, 1973 deadline, but rebuffed private efforts by Dell to recover the advance.

Opening lead: Queen of ♡.

It is a sound policy to extract the opponents' trumps before they can be used to ruff away your winners. But don't overdo a good thing.

South judged not to leave the contract in three no trump, despite the fact that the auction strongly suggested that his partner had no more than a doubleton spade. Since neither of his suits were solid, there was a very real possibility that the enemy might get a red suit established before declarer could set up enough tricks for himself. Note that a heart lead would have sunk the no trump game. Declarer won the opening lead with the ace of hearts and immediately played ace, king and another spade. West won the jack and drew a fourth trump with the queen, leaving declarer with only one trump. Then West reverted to hearts, East unblocking the king, and declarer was forced to ruff with his last trump.

Too late declarer realized his predicament. When he led a club to try to set up the suit, West grabbed the ace and cashed three more heart tricks for a three-trick set. True, declarer would have made an overtrick if trumps had divided 3-3, but he risked losing control of the hand if trumps broke "normally," i.e., 4-2. Declarer should have seen that he could afford to lose two trump tricks and the ace of clubs.

After winning the ace of hearts, the correct line is to draw only two rounds of trumps and then drive out the ace of clubs. Now declarer will be able to maintain control of the hand because he will have one trump more than the defenders.

Assume West wins the ace of clubs and returns a heart forcing declarer to ruff. Declarer accepts the ruff, but simply continues to run his minor-suit winners. West can ruff at any time, but to no avail. The defenders can never get more than their two trump tricks and the ace of clubs.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? CARD OF THANKS

I wish to thank all of you for the warm thoughtfulness during my stay at Pitt Memorial Hospital as a surgical patient and my recuperation period at the home of my parents. Thank you all for the visits, calls, the numerous get-well cards that brightened my days, the flower arrangements and plants that filled my hospital room that seemed to have brought sunshine and all other gifts of love and a very special thanks for your prayers, whether far or near. God heard them.

To all of my friends, relatives, co-workers at Pitt Co. Dept. of Social Services, Lee Gayle, the Gosselaires, Majestic Civic Club, "Doc" and the Andrew A. Best Chorales, Eastern N. C. Reg. Assoc. of Black Social Workers, St. John's M. Baptist Church, W. L. Jones Traveling Choir, my pastor Dr. W. L. Jones and the members of Mt. Calvary F.W.B. Church and other churches and area ministers.

Special thanks to my surgeon, Dr. John L. Winstead, Jr. and to the fine staff and nurses on the North Wing, 2nd Floor at Pitt Memorial Hospital for being so kind and understanding to me.

May God Richly Bless You.
Mrs. Rosa L. Harris

Grifton Board Agrees Seek Matching Funds

GRIFTON — The Grifton Board of Commissioners adopted a resolution requesting matching funds from the Mid-East Commission for regional police training and a resolution for salary supplements under the Manpower Act in a meeting Tuesday.

Holiday pay was granted for police officers who worked July Fourth, with the stipulation that all future holiday workers would be given extra time off at a later date.

Mayor Dave Bosley announced that a warning sign would be erected in addition to the railroad crossing sign on Main Street.

The board passed a resolution requesting the League of Municipalities to ask for an inner-city study by the legislature to create a tax break on property improvements by property tax re-valuation of upgraded land values. This tax break would encourage businesses to keep their downtown locations instead of moving to an outside area.

Frank Privette and his aunt requested a cul-de-sac on Lenoir Avenue on the south side of Contentnea Creek, as well as additional police protection and lighting on the dead-end street. The board voted to look further into the matters.

Police Chief Linwood Outlaw gave the June police report of five arrests, 30 court hours, 45 complaints, 1,568 total hours worked and 2,816 miles driven.

Doug Quinn, utilities superintendent, gave a report for the June utilities. In a meeting held June 29, the board adopted its annual budget totaling $642,948. The tax rate of 75 cents per $100 was not increased.

A figure of $322,485 was included in the general budget, while $490,776 went toward debt service.

Will Meet For Church Visit

AYDEN — All choirs, ushers and officers of the Little Creek Free Will Baptist Church are asked to meet at Jackson's Service Station tonight at 7:15 to go to services at Antioch Free Will Baptist Church, Kinston.

The Interdenominational Ministers and Laymen's Workshop will be held Saturday night, 8 p. m., at the Grifton Chapel Free Will Baptist Church. Director Elder Jesse L. Wilson, Bishop J. E. Williams and Elders Shirley Daniels invite all ministers and laymen of all faiths to attend.

Referendum

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The City Council voted 4-2 Thursday night to call for a referendum on the sale of mixed drinks in Asheville.

The council decided to ask the Buncombe County Elections Board to set the referendum for the third week in January on the condition that guidelines on sale of liquor by the drink have been formulated by the ABC board and are available to voters before then.

Giants Dump Pirates, Widen Lead; Perry Gets Tenth Win

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

The San Francisco Giants' record is "top of the charts" in the National League.

A five-hitter by Bob Knepper helped San Francisco to its fifth victory in seven games, a 4-0 triumph over the Pittsburgh Pirates Thursday night. Now the first-place Giants, who have finished no higher than third the last six seasons, have the best record in the NL — and a widening lead over Los Angeles and Cincinnati.

"We're making it happen," said catcher Marc Hill. "It's been a very fun year."

It started in February, when San Francisco committed itself to ending the string of disappointments.

"In spring training you could tell," said Hill, who had a pair of RBI singles against the Pirates. "Everybody wanted to play. We wanted to get a lead and quit hearing this fourth-and-fifth-place stuff."

Knepper, 11-9 with the Giants in 27 games last season, raised his record to 11-5 with a five-hitter in his 21st outing Thursday night. Hill had two RBI singles and Mike Ivie homered.

Cardinals 6, Dodgers 1

Ken Reitz and Mike Tyson smacked run-scoring singles and Ted Simmons hit a two-run homer to back Denny's five-hitter and carry St. Louis past Los Angeles. Denny, who pitched his 10th complete game of the campaign, lost his shut-out in the ninth when singles by Bill Russell, Reggie Smith and Ron Cey pushed the Dodgers' run across.

Mets 4, Reds 2

Doug Flynn, who came to New York in the deal that sent the star right-hander to Cincinnati, drove in one run and scored another as the Mets handed Seaver his third consecutive loss and helped Koosman, 3-9, snap a six-game losing streak. Pete Rose extended his career-longest hitting streak to 26 games — tops in the majors this season and one short of the team record — with a single and double.

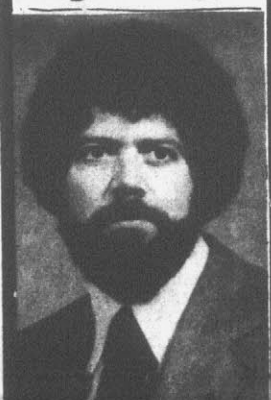

Expos 6, Astros 0

Gary Carter's two-run double capped a four-run Montreal sixth inning and backed a five-hitter by Ross Grimsley, 12-6, in carrying the Expos past the Astros. Montreal added two runs in the eighth, with Grimsley's single delivering one of them.

Padres 5, Cubs 2

Rookie first baseman Broderick Perkins drove in two runs with a single and his first major league home run to power the Padres and Gaylord Perry, 10-4, past the Cubs. Perkins connected in the fourth off Rick Reuschel, 8-6, and sparked a four-run sixth with his single. Perry retired the first 16 batters he faced.

Brewer Pledges Internal Inquiry As NCAA Investigation Continues

East Carolina University basketball coach Larry Gillman and his chief aide, Herb Dillon, were believed to have been questioned yesterday by NCAA investigator Tommy Yeagers.

While neither coach was available for comment, an inside source at the university said both had been questioned by Yeagers, who has been in Greenville for several days investigating charges against the ECU basketball program.

Apparently, the charges center around the recruitment of D.H. Conley star, 6-10 Al Tyson.

Dr. Thomas Brewer, the new chancellor of East Carolina, issued a statement yesterday concerning the investigation.

"The university is aware that an NCAA representative is in Greenville examining some allegations made by another institution concerning the recruitment of an East Carolina athlete," Dr. Brewer said.

"We are examining the allegations and assure the supporters of ECU that we will have a highly competitive program within the rules established by the

"Any future statement will follow our internal inquiry," the chancellor concluded.

Tyson, the tallest player in North Carolina this year, was highly sought-after by East Carolina, along with Mississippi, Memphis State and Old Dominion. Tyson's high school coach, Shelly Marsh, is known to have been questioned by Yeagers on Wednesday.

It is not known whether any other people have been questioned.

Yeagers and other NCAA officials have refused any comment on the situation.

Williamston Takes 2-0 Lead

WILSON — Williamston's American Legion baseball team gained a 5-1 victory over Wilson and moved within a game of clinching the Area I Eastern title.

Williamston leads the best-of-five series, 2-0, and can wrap up the title tonight back in Williamston. The winner of the Eastern series will meet the winner of the Franklin County-Johnston County series for the Area I title.

Marty Evans tossed a two-hitter at Wilson in the game, striking out 11 and walking four.

Williamston pushed ahead in the second inning, getting a run. Evans opened up with a single and came around to score when Glenn Cargile reached on an error.

Wilson came back to tie it up in the fourth, scoring its only run. Carey Griffin singled and Donnie Prince reached on an error. Tony Pollock walked, and a sacrifice fly by Larry Deans

Babe Ruth Teams Win To Reach The Finals

Prep LeagueGreenville 10, Albemarle 8

Greenville's Prep League All-Stars inched to a 10-8 victory over Albemarle to gain the finals of the Area G 13-year-old Babe Ruth Tournament in Windsor last night.

Greenville will now face the winner of the game between Albemarle and Windsor, to be played tonight, in the finals, scheduled for Saturday. A Greenville win would send them into the state tournament in Taylorsville, while a loss would set up one more meeting between the two finalists in the double elimination field.

Albemarle pushed over three runs in the second inning to take the lead. Danny Parker walked and Al Bunch singled. Both were sacrificed up, and Wade Stanton walked, loading the bases. Chris Perry then doubled in all three runners.

Greenville came back with five runs in the fourth to move ahead. Kenny Kirkland walked and stole second. Passed balls let him come the rest of the way. Rudy Stalls walked and Mont Carter also walked. Troy Hudson walked to load the bases. Marshall Rand reached on an error, allowing all three runners to score. A passed ball later scored Rand for a 5-3 lead.

Greenville added three more in the fifth and got the two in the seventh that meant the difference. Stalls walked and scored on a double by Hudson. Randy Warren then reached on an error, scoring Hudson.

Albemarle rallied for five runs in the bottom of the seventh before Greenville could put out the fire, but they managed to end the rally just in time.

Hudson had three hits and Warren had two to pace Greenville. Parker and Bunch each had two for Albemarle.

Babe RuthGreenville 10, Albemarle 7

The Greenville Babe Ruth League All-Stars slipped to a 10-7 victory over Albemarle last night and gained the finals of the Babe Ruth League tournament being played in Windsor.

Albemarle is to face Windsor tonight for the right to play Greenville Saturday night in the finals. A Greenville win will end the event, but a loss would force a final game, probably on Sunday. The winner moves into the state field in Statesville.

Greenville jumped into the lead with four runs in the first inning. Junior Neal walked and Billy Dough singled. With two away, Kenny Barnes walked, and a double by Emmett Walsh brought in all three runners. Patrick Wilson reached on an error, scoring Walsh.

Albemarle came back with two in the second. Williams singled and Rountree cracked a two-run homer.

Greenville added two runs in the third to up its lead to 6-2, then added two more in the fourth, and they proved the difference. Dough walked, stole second and Roger Williams singled. A balk scored Dough and walks to Barnes, Walsh and Wilson brought Williams around for an 8-2 lead.

Greenville picked up one more in the fifth and one in the sixth, while Albemarle scored two in the fifth, one in the sixth and two in the seventh.

Williams led the Greenville hitting with two, while Winslow and Williams each had two for Albemarle.

Two eagles were recorded at the Grifton Golf and Country Club during the past week.

Ray Eubanks picked up an eagle on the ninth hole, while playing a round with Freddie Powers, Tommy Riley and Bruce Clements. Clements also got an eagle on another round, while playing with Powers, Wes Barwick and Joe Salensky.

Lynette Bremmer got a birdie on the second hole, her first birdie ever.

A Ladies Tournament will be held at the club on Sunday.

Ayden Golf and Country Club

The second hole at the Ayden Golf and Country Club was attacked with eagles during the past week. No less than four were recorded on the hole.

Those making eagles included Bobby Congleton, Cecil Hinnant, J. C. Pollard and Steve Wingate. Wingate also had a 34 during the round. Tommy Gunn Jr. recorded his low nine, a 36.

A Superball With One Lady Tournament will be held at the club on Sunday.

Brook Valley Golf and Country Club

Two junior golfers recently recorded their lowest scores at Brook Valley Golf and Country Club. Kelly Kee Jr. had a round of 34-35-69, while Gordon Douglas recorded a 34-39-73.

Barbara and Jeff Walker and John and Lula Parker took first place in the Jack and Jill Tournament Wednesday.

Second place resulted in a tie between Bill and Sandra Smith and Arie and Ed O'Donnell; Joyce and Harry Hastings and Betty Lou Shinn and Emil LaCoste; Peggy and Joe Hallow and Pam and Joey McGroarty; and Nancy and Billy Clark and Margie and Bill Clark.

The Pitt County Junior Tournament will be held at Brook Valley on Tuesday. Junior members of the five Pitt clubs may call Brook Valley or their own pro shops to sign up.

The Interclub Championship between Brook Valley and Greenville has been postponed until September 30, and October 1.

Greenville Golf and Country Club

Greenville Golf and Country Club has announced its Ladies Day schedule for the next three weeks.

On July 21, a Beat the Pro event will be held. The better ball of pair tournament, over nine holes, will pitting the women against pro Gordon Fulp and his assistant Leigh Taylor.

On July 28, "Gambler's Delight" will be held, with a Better Ball of Pair event on August 4.

Ken Hite recently had a 36 on the back nine.

Bouton Terms Return Success

ATLANTA (AP) — Jim Bouton's minor league comeback of two months has been termed successful by his boss. But the knuckleballer of "Ball Four" fame also has been in the wrong place at the wrong time.

Bouton currently owns a 6-5 record at Savannah of the Class AA Southern League, including a 3-0 one-hit shutout in his last start.

The 39-year-old ex-sports-caster and best-selling novelist was a World Series hero with the New York Yankees, but he flopped a year ago with Knoxville of the Southern League and was released.

In Savannah, he owns a 3.58 earned run average with seven complete games in 11 starts. His mark includes three shutouts.

"The knuckleball was really jumping around. I felt like I could go 20 innings," the colorful Bouton said after his one-hitter Monday.

"Obviously, he's making good progress," said Bill Lucas, director of player personnel for the Atlanta Braves, parent club of the minor league affiliate.

"He's got a winning record," Lucas said. "He's trying to perfect a new pitch and he will have his moments. He hasn't got it down to perfection yet. But he's done all we ask of a Class AA pitcher."

Lucas said Bouton, who won 20 games in one season with the Yankees in the 1960s but has not played in the majors in eight seasons, nearly was promoted to the Braves' AAA farm club at Richmond recently. Instead, he was taken out of Savannah's pitching rotation.

"We tried to place him with Richmond, but at that time certain player changes came about and we couldn't move him up," Lucas said Thursday. "Then we had a pitcher come off the disabled list at Savannah and Bouton was taken out of the rotation."

"But he's back in now and actually he didn't miss a turn."

Bouton got another shot at baseball when he impressed Atlanta Braves owner Ted Turner during an exhibition against the Braves in Richmond this year.

But the former fireballer, who earns $1,000 per month, still itches for another shot at the major leagues.

"I'm not like other minor leaguers. I can't say, 'Hell, I've got a couple of years to develop.' I've got to produce now," said Bouton.

"A lot of people think I'm doing this so I can write another book about it... But that's just not so. If it were, it would be too easy for me to come back from a loss and say, 'Oh, but won't the book be good?'"

Savannah Manager Bobby Dews said he believes Bouton could make it back to the majors.

"Most knuckleball pitchers have more movement on the ball than Jim does. But when Jim's is working, it's really good — good enough to get him back to the majors," he said.

"When it's not working, I think big league hitters would kill him."

And kill him is what they may have to do to keep him out of baseball.

"Jim Bouton is a very interesting man. He's got aspirations and the ambition to get back to the big leagues," said Lucas. "And he's working his butt off to make it."

Marti, Morley Share Lead

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — Fred Marti, who has labored 14 years on the PGA tour without a victory, was a co-leader with defending champion Mike Morley going into the second round today of the $150,000 Ed McMahon-Quad Cities Open.

"I missed three greens, but I got the ball up and down with nice putts and when you do that, it helps your confidence," said Marti, who had five birdies and no bogeys for a 66.

Morley, who has not played well since early this year, had a round similar to Marti's with five birdies, despite driving with a spare club he had pre-

It was another typical day in Boston's Fenway Park, with eight home runs and a lot of stitch-popping hits. But guess what? It wasn't the Red Sox doing most of the damage this time.

The Texas Rangers looked as irrepressible Thursday night as the hard-hitting Red Sox usually do in their colorful ballpark and beat a steady tattoo off Boston pitching.

Before it was over, the Rangers pounded five homers and three doubles among their 17 hits and had a 12-7 victory over the team fearfully nicknamed the "Boston Manglers."

"This is the kind of game that can get us going," said Texas outfielder Al Oliver. The Rangers had lost 10 of 13 games before the All-Star break.

Toby Harrah was the most persistent of the Texas hitters, belting two homers and a single and driving in five runs.

In other American League action, the Baltimore Orioles beat the Minnesota Twins 8-6; the Oakland A's stopped the Cleveland Indians 7-3; the Milwaukee Brewers routed the Kansas City Royals 13-2; the Chicago White Sox whipped the New York Yankees 6-1; the California Angels blanked the Toronto Blue Jays 5-0 and the Seattle Mariners edged the Detroit Tigers 5-4.

Orioles 8, Twins 6

Two home runs by Ken Singleton and one each by Rich Dauer and Doug DeCinces, accounting for seven runs, led Baltimore over Minnesota. The triumph ended a four-game losing streak for the Orioles and halted an eight-game winning streak by the Twins.

A's 7, Indians 3

Mitchell Page and Taylor

Duncan each drove in two runs as Oakland snapped a five-game losing streak by beating Cleveland. The A's scored four unearned runs off loser Rick Waits in the second inning and added two more runs in the sixth on a leadoff home run by Dave Revering and another unearned run.

Brewers 13, Royals 2

Robin Yount's bases-loaded triple capped a four-run first inning, while Gorman Thomas hit a two-run homer and Don Money added a bases-empty shot as Milwaukee bombed Kansas City.

White Sox 6, Yankees 1

Veteran knuckleballer Wilbur Wood hurled a six-hitter, retiring 15 batters in a row at one stretch, to lead Chicago over New York. Wood, 10-5, allowed five singles, only one after the third inning, and Reggie Jackson's 14th home run.

Angels 5, Blue Jays 0

Don Aase, a last-minute substitution for Chris Knapp, who jumped the club in a contract dispute, pitched a four-hitter to lead California over Toronto. Knapp was placed on the disqualified list when he failed to report to the park. His agent had been unsuccessful in obtaining a raise after the right-hander compiled a 10-6 record at the All-Star break.

Mariners 5, Tigers 4

Larry Milbourne's run-scoring single capped a four-run, eighth-inning rally that carried Seattle over Detroit. The victory went to reliever Enrique Romo, 7-2. Jim Crawford, 2-3, took the loss in relief. Leon Roberts' three-run homer, his 12th of the season, tied the score at 4-4 in the eighth inning before Milbourne's game-winning hit.

East Carolina Signs Greg Lee

East Carolina University head baseball coach Monte Little today announced the signing of Greg Lee to a grant-in-aid.

Lee, who played his high school ball at J.H. Rose High School in Greenville, was the leading hitter on Rose's 15-6 team this year, playing at shortstop for the Rampants. Lee hit .328 for the season. He was the team MVP as he led them to the Eastern 4-A Division I co-championship.

Playing for the Pitt County American Legion team earlier this summer, Lee posted a .335 batting average as his team finished 16-5 and won the regular season divisional championship.

During his junior year at Rose, he captured the Most Valuable Player Award in the Williamston Invitational Tournament.

"Greg is probably the most outstanding defensive player I saw either in junior college or high school. I was impressed with his physical attributes and his mental capabilities at this stage of his career," Little commented. "If he can be productive at the plate, there is a good chance he'll be in the starting nine."

Greg is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Lee of Greenville and played under coach Ronald Vincent at Rose High.

Industrial American Champs

Burroughs-Wellcome captured the American Division championship of the Industrial softball league. Team members are: (l to r) front row, Mike Langley, Frank Taylor, Mac Gaskins, James Beaman, Walter

Palmer, Three Shots Back, Has Chance To Set British Record

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — Despite a catastrophe at the hole he hates most in the whole world, Arnold Palmer still has a chance to become the oldest golfer ever to win the British Open.

Saturday, when the tournament ends, Palmer will be 48 years, 10 months old. Tom Morris, with his Victorian whiskers and hickory spoons and niblicks, was 46 years and a bit when he won the Open in 1867.

Morris is a hallowed local legend, born and bred in this pretty old university town beside the sea. He is still the oldest man to carry off the coveted title. His golf shop has been standing beside the 18th green of the old course for 132 years.

Palmer finished the second round Thursday at 2-under-par 142 and only three shots behind the leaders: Sevvu Ballesteros of Spain, Isao Aoki of Japan and Ben Crenshaw. But he would have been even with them if he had not gone astray at his old enemy, the 17th hole, called the "Road Hole."

He drove out of bounds. He put his next shot into deep rough. Then he hacked out into a bunker.

"I finished with a good putt and a magnificent 7," Palmer said. Par for the hole is 4.

It was not the first time Palmer had made a mess of that hole when he needed most to conquer it. In 1960, he dropped a stroke there by rolling his ball through the green and into the road, and Ken Nagle of Australia finished one stroke ahead of him and won the title.

"They say it's a famous hole," Palmer said wryly. "All I can say is, I don't lie it. I've been playing it for nearly 20 years now. I try to do something different every time I come to it, and it doesn't do me any good.

"It cost me the title in 1960, and it did me a lot of harm this time. But I'm still in there. Physically I'm in great shape, and if my golf remains as good in the next two days I shall be happy."

Like Palmer, Ballesteros drove out of bounds at the 17th, lost a stroke and had to take his tee shot again.

Aoki and the other joint leader, Crenshaw, both tamed the 17th with par 4s. Ballesteros shot a second-round 70, Aoki had 71 and Crenshaw fired a 69. Bob Shearer of Australia and Briton Garry Cullen were at 140, and Watson, Tom Kite, Tom Weiskopf, Bob Byman and Tsumeyki Nakajima of Japan were in a bunch at 141.

Carner Says LPGA's Big Guns Waiting To Break From Slump

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — JoAnne Carner takes nothing away from Nancy Lopez' great year, but she offers an explanation for part of the rookie sensation's success.

The established stars of the Ladies Professional Golf Association have been mired in off-years at the same time.

Kathy Whitworth, Judy Rankin, Sandra Palmer, Sandra Haynie and Carol Mann, the game's top five all-time money winners before 1978, had collected a combined $3 million and 189 victories.

All are active in 1978 save

Haynie with these results: No victories and earnings of $70,000, little more than half of Lopez' money leading total.

Carner, seventh on the all-time money list with more than $443,000 going into this season, shook her head.

"I've never seen a year like it," she said. "We're like the Yankees — all the good hitters are in a slump at once. You don't know when the Palmers, the Rankins, the Whitworths are going to break out."

Lopez' scores in her seven victories this year support Carner's claim that the anticipated big guns have been silenced.

Five of Lopez' totals have been higher than the 1977 winner in the same event. In all, she's been a combined 13 shots higher than last year's champions in the same tournaments.

Carner has survived the superstars slump. She had won three times going into this $85,000 LPGA tournament that began today at Riviera Country Club.

Even though Lopez is back on tour this week, Carner likes her chances of winning a second consecutive title in this event that carries first prize of $12,750.

Her own game is near its zenith after a third-place tie with Penny Pulz at Wheeling, W.Va., last week.

"It's close. I found out what I was doing wrong. I was breaking too quick on my back swing. I was spraying left and right," said Carner.

This 14-year-old tournament attracted 92 pros and five amateurs. Eight of the top 10 money winners this year were in the field. The big absentees were Jane Blalock, the winner the last two weeks, and Jan Stephenson.

The 54-hole event is sponsored by Borden Inc.

Solar Energy Plant Operators Cite Frustrations

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — Solar energy plant operators recited their lists of frustrations: Water so hot it melts pipe solder, glassy sun collectors pounded by hailstorms and baseballs, a midnight pipe accident that poured 2,000 gallons of water into a gymnasium.

And then there's the sophisticated solar sensor, designed to track the sun all day to generate the most energy possible.

Except, said federal solar expert Myron Myers, "if it's not set right, it sees the sun go under a cloud for a couple minutes, says 'I guess it's nighttime,' and turns back to the east to wait for morning."

U.S. Energy Department officials and about 500 solar businessmen and researchers met in Atlanta Thursday and today to learn from each others' mistakes and talk over new projects.

They agreed they've made a lot of mistakes, but they also agreed they've come a long way in the past five years.

"The solar industry is becoming self-sustaining," said Myers. Production costs are dropping, and commercial production of solar energy hardware is doubling every nine months, he said.

Back in 1974, Congress ordered the federal government "to get in and then get out" of solar plant development. It provided seed money to help private companies push ahead in an area expected to grow in importance as oil and coal supplies diminish, Myers said.

The Department of Energy has sponsored 222 projects in its Solar Heating and Cooling Demonstration, and it approved another 83 just last month, he said. About $44.5 million in federal money was designated to help pay for the first 222 projects — at least one in almost every state — and the 56 in operation so far are heating and sometimes cooling office buildings, motels, schools, churches and even a jail.

Myers, chief of the systems demonstration office at Alabama's Marshall Space Flight Center, said the DOE will be severing its ties with the private solar projects next year.

But in Washington Thursday, Energy Secretary James Schlesinger was saying the Carter administration plans major new efforts to promote solar energy in the next few years.

Schlesinger gave no details other than saying successful adoption of solar energy on a large scale will have to be

"cost-effective" to gain wide acceptance.

Back in Atlanta, Myers reeled off figures supporting his contention that the 4-year-old federal program has worked well.

In 1974, federally backed private solar projects used nearly 30 percent of the commercially produced 136,000 square feet of collectors — those big glass triangles popping out on building tops. By last year federal projects accounted for only 12 percent of the estimated 4.1 million square feet of collectors, he said. And the private share of funding for the federal-private projects has risen from 22 percent to nearly 50 percent.

"That indicates the confidence of the people involved in producing the solar hardware," Myers said. "They're not going to produce it if they can't sell it."

He also said solar energy production costs are decreasing, from $89 per square foot of collectors on early federal-private projects to $37 per square foot last year.

Myers and other speakers at DOE's "Solar Update" conference noted that solar energy systems seldom provide all the energy a building needs all the time. And they said conventional fuels such as oil or electricity still are more economical — usually.

But that's beside the point, said Harvey Jones, who helps run a solar project providing some air conditioning at Florida's Walt Disney World.

He said that despite recent concern over oil prices, oil is still "ridiculously cheap, and the impetus for other people to build solar projects like ours will come only when people realize it isn't going to be like this forever."

Giving a federal shove toward such solar energy acceptance has been the point of the DOE program, Myers said, and he added, "I think we're getting there."

Other federal programs deal with federal buildings and private residences, but conference speakers concentrated on the commercial building projects.

The Atlanta conference was the first of four, with meetings scheduled July 16 in San Francisco, July 19 in Chicago and July 23 in Boston.

Classes Offered By Art Center

More summer art classes are being offered by the Greenville Art Center, classes made possible through a program of local government matching challenge funds.

The classes, mostly geared for young talent, are funded by Pitt County, the City of Greenville, in allocations of funds to match grants from the N.C. Arts Council and the National Endowment for the Arts.

For the forthcoming classes opening next week, Mrs. Edith Walker, director of the Greenville Art Center, stresses that registration must be made in person at the center, 802 Evans Street, for the limited number of openings for each class. The classes are without charge.

"These are classes designed especially for Pitt County citizens," Mrs. Walker said, "and we are fortunate to have national, state and local funds so that we can offer our young people these opportunities."

Classes scheduled are: Puppetry, to be held from 3 to 4:30 p.m. on July 18, 19 and 20, and on July 25, 26 and 27. These classes are strictly limited to eight students.

Painting and drawing classes — to be held Monday, Wednesday and Friday, July 17, 19, and 21 and on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, July 24, 25 and 26.

Students in the seven to 10-year old age group will be taught from 10 to 11 a.m., the 10-13 age group from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m., and for teenagers and adults, from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. Emmy Whitehead is teaching these classes.

Registration can be made at the art center between the hours of 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., and interested persons can register also during the hour preceding the beginning of a particular class.

SCSA Meeting Set In Denver

The 33rd meeting of the Soil Conservation Society of America will be in Denver, Colo. July 30-Aug. 2 to discuss the use of available land, water and energy to provide food and other necessities for the nation in the future.

Several dozen North Carolinians will travel to Denver, headed by Jesse L. Hicks of Raleigh, vice president of the international society.

Noted speakers include R. M. Davis, administrator of the USDA—Conservation Service, and Douglas Costle of the Environmental Protection Agency.

Cites Lack Of Control On Cattle Supply

Clint Reese, executive secretary of the North Carolina Cattlemen's Association, told members of the Pitt County Agribusiness Association Tuesday that education is important in promoting the state cattle situation.

Reese explained that the U. S. has not set controls of the supply of cattle. The lack of control affects beef prices.

"The last profitable year for cattlemen was 1973," added Reese. "Since that time, production costs have continued to increase at a steady rate, but so has the consumer expendable income."

The Pitt County Agribusiness Association meets every second Tuesday of the month at the Holiday Inn, Greenville. All interested persons are invited to attend.

Local Student Earns Award

WOODBERRY FOREST, VA. — Charles Downing Taylor Pace, son of Dr. and Mrs. Charles T. Pace of Greenville, and recent graduate of Woodberry Forest School was the recipient of the Harry T. Bowman Latin Award. Pace, who graduated cum laude from the school, will be a student at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill for the 1978-79 school year.
