Time Running Out On The Mail

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
With a mail strike possible at midnight tonight, negotiators for the Postal Service and its unions today continued separate meetings with federal mediators rather than talking face-to-face. The mediators have kept the two sides apart since

Monday when direct negotiations were halted. The negotiators have talked to representatives of each side in separate rooms of a Washington hotel for the last three days and carried proposals back and forth. Wednesday's session lasted until about midnight.

A source close to the negotiations said privately: "They obviously will be together later in the day if there is anything that can be accomplished that way."

The current three-year contract expires at midnight tonight.

The major issue dividing the two sides is whether the Postal Service can fire employees to reduce its workforce.

The unions won a no-layoff clause in 1970 and say it must be included in any new contract. Postal Service negotiators want to eliminate the 25-word phrase in an effort to trim the workforce and hold down future increases in postal rates.

National union officials refuse publicly to discuss whether they would call a strike — illegal under federal law — if the midnight deadline passes. But sentiment at several local Wednesday indicated members would follow a national strike call. "We're prepared to go out," said the president of one local.

Stephen Albanese of an American Postal Workers Union local said 100 signs had been printed and permits secured to picket several post offices.

In Cincinnati, three locals representing 4,000 workers voted Wednesday night to follow a national strike call.

And Tucson, Ariz., Postmaster Arnold Elias said 90 percent of that city's 1,000 postal workers would walk out if a national strike is called.

If walkouts occur, Postal Service contingency plans call for Postmaster General William F. Bolger to ask President Carter to declare an emergency and order out federal troops to handle the mail.

Chief Federal Mediator Wayne L. Horvitz said Wednesday that differences over grievance procedures, arbitration and union recognition had been ironed out, but that "both sides ... are still far apart on several other issues."

Ga.-Fla. Leaf Bringing Prices Well Above 1977

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP) — More than 5.2 million pounds of flue-cured tobacco were sold on the first day of auctions Wednesday in the Georgia Florida tobacco belt, the U.S. Department of Agriculture reported today.

This brought an average of $127.51 per hundred pounds, nearly $50 per hundred pounds more than the average on opening day of sales last year, the USDA said.

This was compared with last year's record of $133.34 a hundred pounds, which came Sept. 12, the 35th day of sales.

The Stabilization Corp. picked up only 1.2 percent of Wednesday's sales, reflecting the quality of the leaf and the interest of the buyers.

On opening day last year, 26.5 percent of the total went into the Stabilization Corp.

The USDA said grade prices today remained generally steady, comparable to opening day's prices, with selected sheets going for $155 a hundred pounds.

Some selected grades today included: Fair orange lungs (X4F), bringing between $145 and $155 a hundred pounds; fair lemon primings (F4L), bringing between $133 and $150; and nondescript (N1GL), bringing between $90 and $130 a hundred pounds.

"This is some of the finest tobacco I've observed on opening day," said Georgia Agriculture Commissioner Tommy Irvin as he looked over the new crop at a warehouse in Moultrie, Ga.

Up to 90 percent of the farmers in some areas are leaving behind the bottom four leaves on each tobacco plant, as tobacco industry officials have urged, Irvin said. As a result, the market news service said the tobacco available for opening day was of unusually good quality, with more good and fair offerings and less tobacco graded non-descript or no grade.

About 2 percent of the offerings was graded sand, compared with nearly 23 percent of last year's first day offerings.

At Georgia auction points, 3,757,917 pounds sold for an average of $129.99 per hundred pounds. A total of 435,834 pounds was sold in Florida at an average price of $129.15 per hundred.

"Prices look real promising to me," said J. W. Franks, a Tifton area farmer. "It appears buyers are responding well to the fact that farmers left their bottom leaves on the stalk."

On offerings of heavy volume grades, X4F brought a $146 average, up $27 over last year; P4L brought $135, up $30 from last year; P4F brought $131, up $32; P5F brought an average of $125, up $30; and NIL averaged $112, up $26.

The agency said markets in Quitman and Sylvester, Ga., are not operating this year. Sales begin next week at Pearson, Ga., and Jasper, Fla.

Auctions were to begin at other markets today and Friday.

May Charge Carter Aide

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

White House drug abuse fighter Dr. Peter G. Bourne is on paid furlough today after conceding he put a fictitious name on a prescription for an emotionally troubled employee who wanted to keep secret that she was getting the much-abused sedative Quaalude.

All day Wednesday, the White House press office, Bourne and other principals refused to comment about disclosure that police in suburban Virginia are investigating the matter and have charged a former roommate of Bourne's employee with a felony.

At 7:45 p.m., White House Press Secretary Jody Powell handed out a three-page statement by Bourne and announced that the 38-year-old psychiatrist had requested the leave "because of my desire to clear my name as soon as possible and my concern that these implications do not interfere with the effective operations of the White House."

Bourne said: "I have consulted legal counsel and believe that what I have done was neither legally nor morally wrong."

But Paul Ebert, commonwealth's attorney in suburban Prince William County, Va., said he was considering prosecuting Bourne on either a misdemeanor or felony charge but would await completion of the investigation before deciding what to do.

According to Bourne's statement and that of his administrative assistant in the White House west wing, Ellen J. Metsky, here is what happened:

Ms. Metsky came to Bourne concerned about emotional problems which had caused her difficulty in sleeping. She asked that her name be kept secret.

Bourne gave her a prescription on July 7, made out to a fictitious name, for 15 tablets of the tightly controlled sedative methaqualone, also known by the brand name Quaalude. (Continued on page 10)

Exploring Compromise On Possible Federal Tax Reduction Move

By EDMOND Le BRETON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

The administration and key congressional Democrats are warily exploring compromise possibilities as long-delayed action resumes on a bill to cut federal taxes by $15 billion.

On the eve of House Ways and Means Committee consideration of the measure, the administration signaled on Wednesday it might modify its opposition to any easing of the capital gains tax on the profits from selling assets held at least a year. Carter had made a campaign issue of taxing capital gains as ordinary income and had threatened to withhold approval of any tax bill with provisions to relax the tax.

But an 11th-hour round of discussions with Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal left House tax writers with the impression Carter might accept capital gains changes that would:

- Ease the burden on homeowners selling properties whose value are swollen by inflation.
- Encourage investors to buy into new, risky enterprises.

- Ease the tax path of businesses wishing to dispose of one enterprise so as to invest in another, and perhaps even some modification of capital gains rates.

The White House insisted Carter has authorized no compromise committing him to a certain position, but that he had simply directed Blumenthal to check where sympathies lay on the tax issue.

The administration move came so late that some members of Ways and Means, which had suspended action for weeks because of the capital gains dispute, said there might not be time to act on any proposals until the bill reaches the House floor, after committee action.

With Congress aiming for an early October adjournment, pressures are building against bills that have not cleared at least one chamber. The Senate is expected to modify extensively whatever bill the House passes.

Electrocuted

BRUCE — A 17-year-old Route 1, Macclesfield youth was killed near here yesterday when the metal ladder on which he was working came into contact with an electric line.

Officials said Larry Wayne Sawyer was electrocuted while working on a tobacco barn near here when the aluminum ladder from which he was working came into contact with a 110 volt power line servicing the barn.

Sawyer was employed by Martin Dunn of Falkland who had contracted the work on the barn.

Willing To Keep Talking

LEEDS CASTLE, England (AP) — The meeting of the Israeli and Egyptian foreign ministers ended with no measurable progress toward Arab-Israeli peace, but their governments are willing to keep the negotiations going through American mediation.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance's decision to fly to the Middle East the first week in August to try to set up another foreign ministers' meeting gives an illusion of progress. But he decided before he left Washington to make the trip unless there was a total breakdown at the talks in Britain.

It will be Vance's fourth trip to the area in 18 months. The Carter administration, ignoring the advice of some experienced observers, is still going all out for a comprehensive settlement embracing Syria and Jordan as well as Egypt.

This means coping with a whole range of complex issues at once, an infinitely more complicated task than the difficult enough step-by-step approach taken by Henry Kissinger.

Planning To Heed Strike

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — If a strike is called Friday by national postal union leaders, most U.S. Postal Service workers in North Carolina will walk off their jobs, according to a local union official.

But few postal workers here are anxious to strike, according to a spot check by the News and Observer.

"This situation looks grave," said William H. Bunting of Asheboro, president of the N.C. Association of Letter Carriers.

"It's very seldom that the national president calls for a work stoppage, but it's very possible that this time they will," he said.

The current contract expires at midnight Thursday. Again Wednesday, the three unions representing postal workers were unable to reach agreement with the postal service on a new contract.

Local union leaders said they were ready to order a walkout if national union leaders give the word. But it was uncertain how many of the 670 local workers would comply with the walkout. Postal workers are forbidden by law to strike.

"I can tell you that if there's no contract, there's no work," said James E. Keith, president of the local American Postal Workers Union. "But we're hoping for a contract."

The local president of the National Association of Letter Carriers, John W. Gregory, said: "We're just waiting for word from our nationals. I'll comply with whatever they say."

Bunting said it was unlikely that North Carolina workers would join any wildcat strike.

Several workers interviewed said they didn't want to see a strike because they couldn't afford to be away from work or lose their jobs. But others said that while they didn't want to lose their jobs, they would follow union mandates concerning a strike.

Agree To Fund Leaf Research

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Senate Agriculture Appropriations subcommittee Wednesday agreed to provide funds to continue tobacco research activities at the Oxford Tobacco Production Research Station.

The subcommittee voted unanimously to include $3,311,000 in the U.S. Department of Agriculture budget for tobacco research for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. The budget proposal submitted by President Carter eliminated all funding for these purposes.

The Appropriations Committee will complete its work on the agriculture budget in the next two weeks. Final Senate action will follow. The House of Representatives has already passed the agriculture budget for the upcoming fiscal year, including the tobacco research funding.

House Approves Increased Debt

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation increasing the national debt to $789 billion, $16 billion less than earlier had been considered, has been approved by the House and now goes to the Senate.

The bill, approved 205-202 in the House on Wednesday, would set the limit through March 31, 1979. But Congress may have to increase the ceiling on treasury borrowing sometime in February. The Treasury has projected the national debt, at $794 billion.

REFLECTOR HOTLINE

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used. Transcribing is done once a day.

JEWEL TEA
Would you help us locate a Jewel Tea dealer in this area? My parents are sending all the way to Virginia to get tea. B. S.

According to the customer service representative of the Jewel Tea Company in Barrington, Ill., the closest sales representative to Greenville is William Long of 907 Daciana Avenue, Durham, N.C. 27701; phone, 919-682-2072.

Persons interested in being sales reps may contact Don Knapke, Salisbury; phone, 704-633-6307, the customer service person suggested.

COCOA FEEDBACK
The chihuahua which got out of his masters' car at a doctor's office and was written up in a Hotline item Tuesday was killed when hit by a car on Memorial Drive, Hotline has learned. A friend of the masters was told about the accident, got the dog and buried him in his back yard. The owners, who live in Oriental, expressed appreciation to everyone in Greenville who took an interest in trying to locate their pet.

Rural Development Forum Scheduled August 2

The Pitt County Rural Development Panel will hold a public meeting Aug. 2 to allow interested persons in Pitt County to air their views on the conservation of soil, water and other related resources.

The meeting, scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in the small courtroom of the Pitt County Courthouse, is part of the implementation of the Soil and Water Resources Conservation Act of 1977, which combines use of scientific data with public input to appraise and develop use of natural resources in a conservative manner.

"We hope that you will think about your own environment and then come and present your thoughts at the meeting," noted

Leroy James, chairman of the development panel. "I can promise that what you have to say will be fully considered in developing long-range conservation programs."

The Soil Conservation Service has a permanent assignment of controlling erosion and sediment, as well as maintaining environmental quality.

The Resources Conservation Act includes an appraisal of the state's soil, water and other resources for preparation of a five-year plan to protect and improve resources.

Jeane Hicks, state conservationist, describes the act as "an important opportunity to improve conservation programs already under way."

"For more than 40 years, starting here in North Carolina, the SCS has assisted local programs carried out through soil and water conservation districts," Hicks continued. "Now we'll have the added guidance of more public input."

James urges all concerned citizens to attend and participate in the August meeting. He noted that additional meetings will be held in the future to keep people informed on conservation, as well as get new ideas from interested citizens.

The meeting is one of a series of open forums to be held across the state as part of the USDA-Soil Conservation Service.

Sheds No Tears At His Departure

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: After 26 years of marriage, my husband walked out on me and I am happy about it! Al and I raised six children. We spent most of our lives moving around the world, and I'm ready to settle down, but I don't think Al is. When my father died (eight months ago) I began to suspect there was something going on between Al and my niece. (I'll call her Susie.) Susie was seen at the funeral home hanging all over Al. Then she sat there with her stockings feet in his lap, wiggling her toes! (Someone who didn't know me asked if SHE was his wife.) My son told me he stopped at Susie's house because he saw his dad's car in front. He said he waited a very long time for someone to open the door, then Susie showed up, half-dressed with her hair all messed up. A few minutes later his dad came out of the bedroom, looking like he had just gotten out of bed. I noticed that whenever Susie called, my husband would do whatever she asked, no matter what. (When one of our kids wanted something, he was always too busy or too tired.) He fixed Susie's car. He fixed her TV. He fixed her stereo. And it's a good thing he fixed himself with a vasectomy or he'd probably have fixed her that way, too. If Al wants a divorce, he can have it. With all the evidence I have, do you think I'm wrong for feeling as I do?
HAPPY IN HAMILTON, OHIO

DEAR HAPPY: Not in my book.

DEAR ABBY: Could you please tell me how to fight blackmail? Once I went on vacation with a friend. He took some pictures of me that I wish I'd never posed for. At the time I was in love with him, so I didn't mind. Since then, our love has faded, and I've discovered that he isn't the wonderful man I thought he was. Now he is threatening to show the pictures around and ruin my reputation if I don't give him money when his finances are low. I have given him quite a lot of money already, but he keeps coming around asking for more. Don't tell me I was foolish to have let such a thing happen. I know that. The question is, what can I do about it now?
FOOLISH IN PHILLY

DEAR FOOLISH: See a lawyer. Better to pay a lawyer once to protect you from a blackmailer, than to pay a blackmailer indefinitely to protect your reputation.

DEAR ABBY: Why can't mothers take the time to call the home of a "strange" playmate who comes to visit? My daughter was only 3 years old when some youngsters helped her over the fence that surrounds our yard. When I discovered she was gone, I became hysterical, and soon had the whole neighborhood driving up and down the streets looking for her. Thank God we found her safe, two blocks away—in the home of a child only slightly older than she was. At 3, our daughter knew her name and telephone number, but her playmate's mother never bothered to ask her name, or find out if her mother knew where she was. If a strange playmate comes to my house, I always ask, "What is your name? Where do you live? Does your mother know where you are? When do you have to be home?" Then I phone the mother to double-check. Please put this into your own words, Abby, and print it. It could spare many a mother the terrifying nightmare of having to hunt for her child after dark.

ERA Caravan To Visit

North Carolina's Equal Rights Amendment Caravan will visit here Thursday, July 27, from 7-9 p.m.

A special presentation has been planned in conjunction with the caravan's visit, which is being hosted by the Eastern Carolina Chapter of the National Organization for Women (NOW). The event is scheduled for Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

The caravan, a project of the N. C. NOW, is an effort to repeat the campaign activities of the 19th and early 20th century suffragists.

The local presentation will feature a film "How We Got The Vote," narrated by Jean Stapleton.

"The film depicts the parallel between the struggle for women's right to vote and the current campaign to ratify the ERA," said Georgette Hedrick, president of Eastern Carolina NOW.

Caravan volunteers will be available to discuss the proposed amendment with members of the audience and answer questions about the effect of the ERA upon American citizens.

The program is free and open to all interested persons. Child care will be provided during the evening.

Miss Quinn Entertained

Miss Susan Ann Quinn, bride-elect of Dalton Nobles, was honored at a miscellaneous shower Saturday night held in the fellowship hall of the Winterville Missionary Baptist Church.

Mrs. Delores Kenessey, Mrs. Oscar Hall, Mrs. Willard Joyner and Ms. Gwen Lee were hostesses.

The refreshment table was covered with a white lace bordered linen cloth and centered with an arrangement of white and yellow daisies. Decorations included a collage poster of the bridal couple, which showed different stages of their childhood.

Approximately 50 guests were present for the event.

Embroidery Workshop Features Mrs. Rhodes

Mrs. Mary Rhodes, English authority on canvas embroidery, conducted a three-day workshop on "Advanced Needlepoint Techniques" in Greenville Friday through Sunday.

She is currently on tour in the United States, sponsored by the Embroiderers Guild of America, to conduct workshops at guild chapters. Sixteen embroidery instructors from eastern North Carolina attended the workshop to learn more about advanced needlepoint techniques.

The workshop was co-sponsored by the N. C. Chapter of The Embroiderers Guild of America and Pitt Technical Institute. The president of the N. C. Chapter and local leader for the workshop was Mrs. Dixie Ray of Greenville.

Most of the instructors attending teach such courses at community colleges and technical institutes.

This is Mrs. Rhodes' first visit to the United States. She is the author of several books including "Ideas for Canvas Work." "Small Woven Tapestries" and "Needlepoint, the Art of Canvas Embroidery." She has been a tutor of embroidery and tapestry weaving in adult education institutes of the Inner London Education Authority for over 20 years. Mrs. Rhodes' husband is accompanying her on the tour. He takes photos for her books.

Community Cannery Reopens For Seasonal Work

COMMUNITY CANNERY — Johnny Goforth and his mother, Andrew Wilson, were among the first to take advantage of the Startown Cannery when it reopened. (AP Laserphoto)

STARTOWN, N.C. (AP) — The Startown Cannery finally reopened here, just in time for Catawba County-area do-it-yourself canners to can their home-grown vegetables without the heat and mess in their kitchens.

The cannery, which closed last year for repairs, opened its doors at 7:30 a.m. Tuesday, and customers were lined up outside with their baskets of green beans, tomatoes and corn. By 9:30, about 600 cans of vegetables had been canned, and the people were still pouring into the small clapboard building.

Inside the cannery, above the clanging of cans and hissing of steam, Randy Sigmon, the operator of the cannery, calmly directed the operation.

But Sigmon, of Hickory, said it's not necessary to know a lot about canning to can food well. "Anyone can bring food in to be canned, even if they don't know how," he said. "There's not that much to it. You pack your beans in cans, and then we take over."

Basic work for the customers involves cleaning the food to be canned, washing out the cans and seasoning or adding water.

Many people at the cannery said they wished the cannery had opened sooner, because they felt the peak season was almost over.

"I see some people from Hickory," said Nick Lynn, former principal of Union High School and a major backer who kept the cannery open. "They've come from all around. But I feel the cannery should have been open at least a month ago, because the big bean season is over."

Mrs. Betty Huss of Valdese, which is in neighboring Burke County, said she has been coming to the cannery for many years.

"If you've ever canned 95 jars of beans in one day, you'd drive down here," she said. "It would take two days of steady work at home to can what I've canned this morning, and we like beans."

Mrs. Joe Wright of Lawndale in Cleveland County agreed. "I'm just not going to can at home. It's just too easy to come over here. I was quite upset when they closed last year."

She said when the cannery closed last year, she did not can anything. "I froze some things, but it's just too messy to can at home. It's too hard."

Jack Matthews, director of construction and engineering, who supervised the repairs to the building, said repairing and reopening the cannery posed no major problems.

"We didn't spend any more than we figured (on repairs), and we didn't spend quite that," he said. The costs of the repairs was just under the $7,000 that had been allotted by the county to fix it up. Matthews said the only unexpected expense was for a boiler pump that did not work.

Matthews said responsibility for the canning operation has been turned over to the Community Schools Program.

Sigmon said the cost of canning at the Startown facility is only 22 cents a can, which he said appeals to his customers.

He said the first step in the canning operation is up to the customers. They wash out the cans and fill them with vegetables of their choice. If they put beans in the cans, they must add hot water and salt, Sigmon said.

Sigmon said after the cans are filled, they are put through a steam tunnel which pushes air out of the cans and raises the temperature to about 150 degrees Fahrenheit. The temperature requirement was set by the Department of Agriculture.

The cans are sealed with lids that have been labeled by the owners of the produce, with the Startown Cannery insignia, the date, name of the produce and their name. The lids are secured by cannery workers, who seal the lids with a special crimper. The cans are then cooked.

Sigmon said the first nine minutes of cooking are "vent time, which blows the air out of the retort or cooker. Then the temperature must come up to 240 degrees." Cooking time averages about 35 minutes but varies for different types of produce.

When the cans are "cooked," the canning process is complete, and the cans are cooled so the customers can take them home.

N.C. Bd. Of Elections Sets Violation Hearing

MARSHALL, N.C. (AP) — The state Board of Elections will begin a hearing Monday which will focus on allegations of election law violations here during the May 2 primary.

Before the May 2 election, suggestions that irregularities might occur caused agents of the State Bureau of Investigation to move into the mountain county as early as April 11. SBI agents stayed there to investigate circumstances surrounding the voting until May 16.

The SBI report has not been made public, but persons close to the probe say there have been allegations of fraud in handling of absentee ballots, improper attempts to influence persons to vote for particular candidates and threats against holders of patronage jobs.

Ken Babb of Winston-Salem, chairman of the Elections Board, said about 25 witnesses had been subpoenaed to testify at the hearing which could last for two or three days.

Babb, who directed the board's investigation, said there had been "some allegations of irregularities, but I can't discuss what they are yet."

Election disputes are not new to Madison County. There was a major scandal in 1964 when the state Board of Elections, probing irregularities surrounding a Democratic primary vote for the state Senate, revealed a widespread pattern of vote fraud and reversed results of the voting.

At the time, veteran Madison County Democratic kingpin Zeno Ponder apparently won the Democratic nomination over Clyde Norton of Old Fort. Norton carried two of the three counties in the district, but Ponder won by 400 votes on the strength of overwhelming majorities in Madison precincts.

The board invalidated the votes in six Madison precincts after an SBI investigation and extended hearings. It concluded that votes had been recorded for persons who were dead or had moved out of the county, that ballot-box stuffing had occurred, and that there had been a conspiracy to substitute one ballot box for another in one precinct.

Norton was certified as the winner after the state board removed the Madison County Board of Elections and named three new members.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Following a lecture recently, a woman who had been staring at me intently for the last hour shook my hand and said, "You're a weird little devil, aren't you?"

Before I could open my mouth in rebuttal, she was gone. I wanted to tell her that compared to some of the people who sent me letters, on a scale of seriousness, I was right up there just above Solzhenitsyn.

For example, there's Wendy Ward Ehlers, New York, who is "into lint." She wants a bag full of mine for her exhibition in New York.

It seems Wendy was doing four loads of laundry a day for a family of seven and amassed such a collection of lint she began experimenting with it artistically and transformed it into an object of art.

Pleased with her results, she began creating other objects of art by using cereal, shirts scorched by a new iron, teabags, and paper towels soaked in coffee. She enclosed a picture of herself in front of the capitol in Washington holding a sign saying, "Support the Wendy Ward Ehlers lint museum. Wash an extra load."

I never did that in my life.

And what about the woman in a Texas town that was so small she confessed it eventually got to her? One day she emptied the refrigerator, took out all the shelves, crawled into it and put an ice cube in her mouth. She had her daughter snap her picture. They entered it in a radio contest in Ft. Worth and won a diamond ring.

I never did that.

Nor am I an idea man like promoter John P. Hoffman, who sits around and comes up with such likely business ventures as sponsoring a non-violent fox hunt, in which horseback riders without guns and hounds chase a fox equipped with a beeper device.

I never did that. No, I never brought home chicken in a doggy bag like that woman in Victor, Mont., and put the handbag on a shelf in the closet and forget about it until the room died.

And I certainly never took my soundproof starter in my handbag on an airplane like a correspondent of mine. When she got to 30,000 feet, she not only smelled like a brewery, her handbag looked like a Japanese horror film.

No, I never did any of those things. But I understand the people who do.

Auto Auction On Saturday For Cancer

The Pitt County Automotive Dealers Association will sponsor an automobile auction Saturday beginning at 10 a.m. in the Krogers Save-On lot with all proceeds marked for the Pitt County American Cancer Society.

According to Cliff Frelke, co-chairman of the county cancer chapter, approximately 10 used cars and a new lawn mower will be auctioned.

Other local businesses are donating refreshments, which will be sold while the auction is held.

Tom Hawkins will serve as treasurer, collecting the proceeds for the auction. Those who purchase the automobiles may pick up the titles from the individual dealers.

"This is the first time the automobile dealers in Pitt County have done this," Frelke noted. "They want to get involved with the community."

According to Frelke, if the auction is successful, it may very well become an annual affair.

July 29 has been set for the auction rainedate. Frelke stated that he hoped auction proceeds would help the society reach its $17,000 yearly goal. The total now stands at $13,000.

Tractor-Trailer Killed Woman

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A 27-year-old Guilford County woman was killed Wednesday when a truck tractor-trailer went out of control during rush-hour traffic on U.S. 29 and jackknifed across the median, crushing the driver's side of the car.

Police identified the victim as Patricia McDaniel Solomon of Greensboro. Police said she was alone in the car.

Witnesses said a tractor trailer slowed down on the right side of the highway's northbound lane. But they said a second tractor-trailer did not slow down and swerved to miss the first truck.

Police said the second truck, driven by James Robinson, then jackknifed out of control, crossed the median and hit the Solomon vehicle.

Asset In New Traffic Artery

The city opened a major new traffic artery this week when traffic was turned onto a new section of Arlington Boulevard.

The section opened stretches from Evans Street to Hooker Road. It is a divided dual lane drive, and it is a link which will provide a thoroughfare from Red Banks Road to Memorial Drive.

Opening of the new section also provides access to the new Middle School in time for the fall session. Traffic signals have been installed at each end of the section, at Evans Street and Hooker Road, and pedestrian signals are included at Hooker Road.

Plans have also been made for installation of flashing signals at the Seaboard Coastline train crossing of the new thoroughfare.

Even though the new section is open and traffic lanes marked, the project is not yet completed. City Engineer C. A. Holiday said the surface is the base course, or first layer of paving. The finish course will be installed in about a month.

Even in its rough form, however, the new thoroughfare route is carrying considerable traffic already. It will be a major route from the southeast to the western part of the city, and we are sure it is welcomed by motorists who travel through this area of the city.

Money Traders Doubted Summit Vows

It was an old story last week — the U. S. dollar fell on the money markets of Europe following the Bonn economic summit.

The traders were telling us that they doubted the United States' ability to get its economic problems — inflation, trade deficits, huge oil imports — under control.

Yet we are a strong and vigorous nation, with some of the world's largest supplies of natural resources.

It should tell us that we have to make adjustments and make some moderate sacrifices in this nation. When world confidence in America is restored the dollar will move upward on foreign markets.

THIS AFTERNOON Hunt Projects Under Fire

By BILL NOBLITT
LEXINGTON, N.C. — If quite early remarks are a true indication of popular feeling, a couple of Gov. Jim Hunt's pet projects will face a tough battle in the 1979 General Assembly.

Both merit selection of judges and revision of law on sentencing criminals have drawn opposition as a series of public hearings on crime get underway across the state.

At one of the early public hearings, J. Phil Carlton, secretary of the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, invited audience response to those two complex measures.

Nobody in the audience of more than 60 spoke out in support. Several were critical of both. Law officers, attorneys, and local government officials dominated the gathering.

"I'd like to ask you a few questions", Carlton said as the three local citizens who chose to make comments finished. "There is considerable study now underway in preparation for the next session of the General Assembly approaches."

A committee of the N.C. Bar Association is working on the merit selection proposal which would establish a 32-member panel to nominate candidates from whom the governor would then select judges for superior and District courts.

Trial Run

This approach is now being given a trial run for Superior Court judges by executive order of the governor. A permanent change would require a vote of the General Assembly authorizing a statewide election to amend the Constitution.

Merit selection, Carlton said, goes to the heart of the Criminal Justice System — the way judges are selected. It would, "to the extent possible", remove partisan politics, allow a qualified attorney to offer services without having to run an election campaign, and would eliminate the insecurity of perhaps losing an election and having to pick up a law practice, which had been dropped. Public elections would be held periodically, but only for voters to say whether a particular judge should remain on the bench or be replaced.

Audience comments, however, were to the point that popular election makes a judge accountable to the people, that a 32-member nominating committee can be more easily swayed (or fooled) in naming candidates than could the people at large, and that the system for many years has worked well.

BILL NOBLITT

Most Superior Court judges over the years have been first appointed by a governor to fill vacancies, then must withstand an election challenge from an opponent. "This political system has produced some of the most outstanding judges in our state," one attorney remarked.

On the matter of sentencing, Carlton pointed out that the law now allows "just about every formula you can think of..." Judges end up with wide discretion, and those convicted for similar offenses can and do get widely varying sentences.

Fixed Time

The Presumptive Sentencing proposal to the Legislature would classify crime by severity, with the General Assembly setting punishments with narrow lower and upper limits. Any departure from those limits by the judge would have to be supported by a written account of mitigating circumstances in that particular case, or for that particular defendant, and all sentences would be subject to review by the Court of Appeals to assure compliance.

Generally shorter sentences would result since the criminal would be expected to serve at least half the time (a day off for each day of good behavior) rather than the present one-fourth needed to qualify for parole.

A law enforcement official protested that already we are "making our laws more and more liberal... you make our jobs more difficult. Is there no end? We spend more and more to fight crime and get less and less."

A lawyer rejected sentencing by "computer" instead of commonsense and intelligence. "People are different, and they commit different crimes. You have got to look at the circumstances in each case."

Letting Us Into Jail

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court's opinion in the matter of Station KQED came down on June 26, but before it could be adequately covered, we were overwhelmed with the Bakke case on June 28. Let me resurrect KQED. It involves some important issues of press freedom and public information.

Put in one way, the case involves a journalist's right to go to jail. That sentence is intended only to get your attention. What happened in this case is that reporters for Station KQED attempted to gain access to a notorious prison, the Greystone section of the Alameda Jail in Santa Rita, Calif. The sheriff gave them a run-around, refused to admit them, and finally made a generous offer: A reporter could join a trumped-up monthly public "tour" of selected facilities, limited to 25 persons, but the reporter could not bring camera or tape recorder along.

The station went to court and won an injunction compelling the sheriff to give the press access to the whole of the jail at reasonable hours. The trial court wanted to facilitate "full and accurate coverage of the Santa Rita facilities." The sheriff appealed, but the U.S. Circuit Court also found that the media have a right of access to prisons and jails.

The sheriff appealed once more' and last month he won. We of the press lost. The Supreme Court reversed the lower courts with a sweeping pronouncement to the effect that newsmen have no more rights of access than the man in the street has. That proposition merits review.

It should be noted, first, that the Court's high-horse pronouncement came trotting forth on wobbly legs. Only seven of the nine justices took part in the decision. Chief Justice Burger could find only two of his brothers, White and Rehnquist, to go along with his opinion. Stewart concurred in the judgment, but with so many reservations that he might almost have dissented. Stevens, Brennan and Powell dissented outright. That added up to 4-3 for reversal, but if Marshall and Blackmun had participated, the case might well have gone the other way.

Now, those of us in the news business do not contend that the press has some unlimited right of access to every agency of government. We have no right, in the name of the First Amendment, to rummage through the files of the CIA or to sit in on meetings of the National Security Council. Of course not. And we understand that in matters of private property, involving fires or criminal violence, we have no rights of access at all and must proceed on sufferance.

In earlier cases, the Supreme Court has said as much, but the earlier cases did not go nearly as far as Burger went for the Court in the case of KQED. The chief justice, it has to be said unhappily, has a fierce antipathy toward the press. He actively dislikes and mistrusts newsmen as a breed, and his testy prejudice threatened a way through his opinion.

What was involved in the KQED case was access to a prison. Burger held not only that the press has "no special right of access to the Alameda County Jail." He also held generally that neither the Fourteenth nor the First Amendment "mandates a right of access to government information or sources of information within the government's control." He rebuked the press for the unarticulated but implicit

First To Try Option

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Mecklenburg County will hold the first referendum in the state under the new mixed-drink bill passed by the General Assembly last month, and the battle here is getting spirited.

Both opponents and advocates of liquor by the drink have formed organizations, and are mounting campaigns that will cost several thousand dollars before the Sept. 8 election.

Opponents of mixed drinks, such as Henderson Belk of the department store family, tell church audiences that approval of the local-option measure will add to the number of drunk drivers.

On the other hand, advocates such as Charlotte public relations man Bill Hensley say, "We've got liquor and it's here to stay. This is a how-do-you-want-it-dispersed referendum." The issue has led to a "rather drastic" increase in the number of voter registrations, according to Bill Culp, Mecklenburg County elections board supervisor.

"Since June 1, we've had about 2,500 new registrations and 1,500 transfers. That's about four times normal for this time of year," Culp said Wednesday.

Mecklenburg County has a history of approving liquor-by-the-drink bills.

Voters here passed mixed-drink measures in 1971 and 1973. But the 1971 measure was ruled unconstitutional and Mecklenburg's approval in 1973 was on the losing side of a statewide referendum.

"Everybody's looking to Charlotte for some kind of leadership. It's important that we don't stomp our toe," said Hensley, who heads the Mecklenburg Mixed Beverage Committee, the pro-liquor force.

Hensley said his group hopes to raise $30,000 from small, individual contributions and "some corporate money" to pay for advertising and other expenses.

His group's campaign was kicked off Wednesday at a rally that attracted about 200 persons for speeches and socializing in a hotel banquet room. Although it was a rally in support of liquor by the drink, it was

THE INSIDE REPORT

A Self-Confident Carter

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Jimmy Carter, his self-confidence undiminished by political misfortune believes Democratic Senate candidates who now treat him like a leper would help him in the Senate and provide necessary votes for a new SALT treaty.

This is no public relations proclamation, but President Carter's private comments, most recently made to a visiting delegation of liberal Democrats. In this meeting and other similar ones, the president's faith in himself has seemed totally unaffected by his precipitous fall in public esteem.

During a half-hour meeting in the Oval office, the liberals expressed fear that U.S.-Soviet detente was on the rocks and that any newly negotiated arms control (SALT II) treaty probably would not get through the Senate. The president disagreed, predicting SALT II would be ratified by the Senate next year and that negotiations would get underway for a SALT III treaty.

One visiting liberal pointed out that some Democrats most likely to win Republican-held Senate seats tend to be conservative, hawkish and anti-Carter. Specifically, he mentioned Gov. David Boren of Oklahoma, Gov. J. James Exon of Nebraska and former Atty. Gen. Andrew Miller of Virginia.

The president laughed that off. He forecast he would get support in the Senate from all three on SALT and other questions. He particularly stressed a warm relationship with Virginia's Miller, forecasting that he would vote to ratify a SALT treaty.

That was an awesome exhibition of confidence, but perhaps not realism. Virginia is a defense-oriented state, and Miller has been campaigning in that spirit — avoiding identification with the president.

The other two Senate candidates mentioned are even more intent on avoiding the Carter imprimatur. Exon vows the president will not set foot in Nebraska during this campaign. Oklahoma's Boren never has forgiven Mr. Carter for reneging on natural gas deregulation and declined to attend a recent Carter fund-raiser in Dallas (while consenting to send his wife as a proxy).

Crane's Mysterious Backer

At least three strategy meetings preparing the imminent Republican presidential campaign by Rep. Philip Crane of Illinois have been held at the Virginia headquarters of the mysterious right-wing fund-raiser Richard Viguerie.

That confirms word which has been circulating through conservative circles since the 1976 election; Crane is Viguerie's choice for president, no matter whether Ronald Reagan runs or not.

While a superb fund-raiser,

Viguerie is no total asset. He has opposed so many Republicans and made clear so often that he is not a Republican but an independent conservative that he may prove a liability in Republican primaries.

A footnote: Viguerie has returned to concealing his operations. After the 1976 election, he tried to improve his image by hiring William Rhatigan, a well-liked public relations man in the Nixon-Ford administration. Now Viguerie has returned to "no comment" when asked about his participation in Crane's or any other campaign.

VP Realism

While scrupulously loyal as a vice president must be, Walter F. Mondale is realistic enough in private sessions about the hard facts of campaign life this year.

A Democratic candidate making an uphill fight for a conservative, Republican-held congressional district in the West talked bluntly about those facts during a recent visit with the vice president. The candidate said Mr. Carter was a distinct political liability for his campaign, and he had no choice other than to occasionally criticize

Other Editors Say Goal Of Quality

(The Pilot, Southern Pines)

In discussing the search for a new president of the State's system of Community Colleges, Dr. David Bruton, chairman of the Board of Education, says the system needs someone who can do for the colleges what President William Friday has done for the universities.

A unity of purpose and a goal of quality as well as service are sought, and those are things which President Friday has emphasized in the unified University system.

At the same time, however, as Dr. Bruton pointed out, there must be sufficient local autonomy in the community colleges for them to serve the people in their areas.

Duplication of programs is not a major concern for the community colleges, because they basically serve people, young and old, within commuting distances of their campuses.

There is a concern, though, for the quality of programs, a uniformity of quality, and that is what the Board of Education is seeking to emphasize.

North Carolina is proud of its community college system. It continues to receive the overwhelming support of the people because they can see first-hand the benefits from it.

There is no doubt that the establishment of the community college system is one of the most significant developments in education in this century. It is deserving of the support of the people, and we are confident that it will continue to receive it as long as it continues to serve their needs and aspirations.

July 20, 1938

The Greenville office of the State Employment Service has just moved into its new quarters at 815 Dickinson Ave., above the Railway Express office.

J. H. Rose made a report on the annual convention of the North Carolina American Legion at the regular monthly meeting of the Pitt County Post No. 39 at Respass' barbecue place last night.

The report was the main feature of the dinner meeting, which was attended by a small crowd. In the absence of Commander W. J. Bundy, Vice-Commander J. L. Winstead presided.

The tentative Pitt County budget, released this afternoon by the auditors office, reveals that a tax rate of 75 cents on the $100 valuation will be levied for the current year, in comparison with an 85 cents rate for last year.

Strength For Today

"IN HIM WAS LIFE"

There is a very arresting statement in the first chapter of John: "In him there was life." If the writer of this gospel had said that in Jesus was power or wisdom or perfect goodness, the statement would not be nearly so arresting as when it says that he had life.

The Gospel of John from that point on continues to show that there is a reality in the universe which it terms "life", and this "life" is characterized by unlimited power, a perfect sense of peace, and a joy indescribable.

When afflicted people came into contact with Jesus they were healed, but some had their lives changed in a more basic manner. It is as if this life which resided in Jesus was a contagion which men "caught" under certain circumstances. And when they did catch this life they were forthwith equipped to become citizens of an eternal spiritual empire.

Tax-Cut Not Easy This Year

By WALTER R. MEARS
WASHINGTON (AP) — Cutting taxes in an election year is supposed to be a piece of cake.

It makes voters happy, which makes members of Congress happy as they head into the campaign season.

But it is not working that way this year. Congress still is struggling with the issue, and President Carter has threatened to veto a tax bill if it includes, as is likely, a sharp reduction in capital gains taxes.

The House Ways and Means Committee resumes on Thursday its effort to come up with terms everybody can accept. The administration has indicated it might go along with a less drastic cut in the tax on capital gains, the profit realized from the sale of real estate, stock or other assets.

And Republicans are trying to make the most of the issue, figuring that no matter who loses, they win something. Rep. William A. Steiger of Wisconsin sponsored the capital gains tax cut.

"And even though a compromise may be necessary to get final action through the Democrat-controlled Congress, the fact remains that his is a Republican initiative," says Ronald Reagan.

At the same time, the Republicans are pushing their version of a tax cut, a one-third reduction over a three-year period. They claim that would spur the economy as to generate more revenue than it costs.

That idea has been around for a while, and although it has been rejected at least a dozen times, there is evidence now that the administration is taking the GOP challenge seriously.

The administration's two top economists bore down on the GOP tax bill in appearances before the House Budget Committee, calling it wasteful, inflationary and unrealistic.

"Whatever benefits might be envisioned would be quickly negated by the rise in prices and in interest rates," said Secretary of the Treasury W. Michael Blumenthal.

Charles L. Schultze, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, said to claim that such a tax cut would pay for itself is to look for a free lunch that does not exist. He called the Republican bill "a sure-fire recipe for inflation."

The Republicans, of course, dispute that.

Whatever the economics, the politics of it are clear. Republican National Chairman Bill Brock has said the big tax cut should be made the keystone of GOP campaigns this fall. Brock said the national committee will stage a series of seminars for candidates on the subject.

The White House wants a $15 billion tax cut, stripped of other features and open to administration reform amendments when it reaches the House floor.

It is more likely to get something along the lines of a compromise plan sponsored by Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., including capital gains reductions and a few of the changes Carter originally proposed as tax reforms.

Californians Feeling The Fallout Of Tax Revolt

By STEPHEN FOX
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Californians are feeling the effects of the tax revolt, and many can't tell whether they are winners or losers.

Gerald Edwards, who lives in Fountain Valley, got the lower property taxes promised by Proposition 13. But the 32-year-old homeowner isn't all smiles — the teaching job he hoped for was eliminated because taxes were cut.

"We bought in 1975 and our taxes have gone up, but I valued my teaching job more than the decrease in property taxes," said Edwards, a substitute teacher in Orange County for two years.

Jack Kenan saw property taxes fall at Academic Specialties Inc. in El Cajon, but Kenan, a contract estimator there, isn't sure the school supply firm really gained. Proposition 13 slashed property taxes; that meant curtailed spending for education.

"What we've lost in business more than offsets what we save in property taxes," Kenan said. "I have mixed emotions. We want our government to be well run and efficient, yet on the other hand we know it's going to hurt our business."

Kenan and Edwards, their livelihoods tied to revenue-short schools, already feel Proposition 13. Others find it tougher to figure out where they stand under the tax-cut measure.

Homeowners, big supporters of Proposition 13's 57 percent average property tax reduction, generally came out ahead. Many banks already have cut mortgage impound payments to reflect property tax savings. Yet homeowners also will have less to deduct from federal income taxes and will face — along with many others — increased fees for everything from dog licenses to golf games as cities try to make up for the lost property tax revenue.

Renters, 47 percent of the state's residents, have seen few pass-on rent cuts and generally feel they are victims of greedy landlords.

"There's been no impact at all from Proposition 13," says Joe Caux, chairman of a renters group in apartment-short Orange County. "We've gotten reports from 36 apartment complexes in the last week and a half that rents are going up August 1."

Landlords say that higher municipal fees and uncertainty over their final savings from Proposition 13 make rent cuts impossible now.

"The various city and county agencies have added all sorts of charges — license fees, sewer charges and so on," said Gordon Thill, an aide to Proposition 13 sponsor Howard Jarvis and a landlord. "If the politicians and bureaucrats leave me alone, I can make a rebate. But if they hand me some whopping increases ... I can't."

The real impact of Proposition 13 has been delayed by use of the state's $5 billion budget surplus to help local governments bear the $7 billion loss. Already, however, there are hints of the future.

In the Los Angeles suburb of Downey, for example, dog licenses now cost $10 — double what they were a month ago. Golf fees on Sacramento courses have been increased $1 and the state Capitol's parking meters now demand a quarter per hour instead of the pre-Proposition 13 dime.

One long-term effect of Proposition 13 may be a good one: an easing of the housing shortage that helped push up property values — and therefore taxes — in the first place.

Ben Bartolotto of the California Construction Industry Research Board says Proposition 13, by making home owning cheaper, could stimulate construction of 179,000 more units through 1980. That would mean 365,000 jobs in building and related industries, he says.

"Business benefits from the property tax reduction as well as homeowners, so this can mean improved economics for new business ventures, or in the case of existing companies, extra cash for expansion," Bartolotto said.

Not all executives would agree with Bartolotto's assessment but California's business community, which stands to receive about $4.5 billion under Proposition 13, is under intense pressure to recycle that money into the state's economy.

Business leaders say, however, that lower property tax deductions translate into higher corporate income taxes that will consume half their savings right away. Proposition 13 also reinstated California's business inventory tax and many business spokesmen say that and other hastily enacted municipal charges may wipe out their "windfall."

Oakland, for example, increased its business license fee from 90 cents per $1,000 of gross receipts to $14 per $1,000 — about 1,500 percent.

Also worrying businessmen are moves in the State Legislature to split the tax rolls and restrict Proposition 13 savings to residential property only, including rental units.

"It's difficult for business to make any decisions on what might be done with tax savings until we know whether business will in fact realize any tax savings," said a spokesman for Standard Oil of California, the state's largest industrial firm. "If these other taxes and fees go into effect and then they exempt business from Proposition 13, you wind up paying more."

Meanwhile, tax-cut movements have sprung up in other states and a congressional study says Proposition 13 will cause a spillover loss of 60,000 jobs nationally but a dip in the Consumer Price Index. Federal pension and Social Security payments, union wages and even some alimony payments are pegged to that index of inflation.

Most observers agree that the real impact of Proposition 13 will come next year — after the state's budget surplus is spent. How Californians react then may well determine whether their tax rebellion is real — or another West Coast fad.

the president.

He expected but received no argument from Mondale. The vice president replied that he understood the situation and realized that all candidates should do what they must to get elected.

Carter's Congressman
Intense congressional endorsement of Rep. William Steiger's amendment to reduce capital gains taxes is reflected by the support for it in the face of presidential opposition by the man known as Jimmy Carter's congressman: Rep. Wyche Fowler of Georgia.

Fowler, who left the Atlanta city council to replace Andrew Young in Congress, supports the president most of the time and defends him personally. But he objects to the Carter policy on capital gains, contending that the investor who takes risks ought to be rewarded.

assumption that newsmen are "the best qualified persons for the task of discovering malfeasance in public institutions." That assumption, he said, finds no support in the decisions of this Court. No one can quarrel with that.

The dissenters had a more reasoned and practical view of the problem. Newsmen may not be "the best qualified persons" to expose conditions in a rotten jail, but they often are the only persons ready, willing and able to do so. Grand juries, legislative committees and citizens' task forces are cumbersome bodies that ultimately must depend, in any event, upon the media to publicize their findings.

The KQED decision was one of the Court's feeble efforts in the term just ended. It tracked half a dozen other decisions that will hamper the press in doing its job. Yes, without apology, we do ask for "special privileges," but only to get at the facts the people are entitled to have.

Bolivian Presidential Election Results Voided

By HAROLD OLMOS
Associated Press Writer
LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — The National Election Court has voided the results of Bolivia's first presidential election in 12 years at the request of the military government's candidate after opposition charges that his victory was fraudulent. The court called for another election within six months. Gen. Juan Pereda, who had been declared winner of the July 9 election, asked the court Wednesday to annul the results and call another election "to avoid sorrow and tears for the nation." But adverse reaction from President Hugo Banzer indicated a split among the conservative officers who ousted a leftist military faction seven years ago. Well-placed sources said Pereda made his decision after an all-night meeting with the military high command. But Banzer on Wednesday said if the court annulled the election he would turn the presidency over to the military Aug. 6, the day that had been set for the inauguration of the new president. It is up to the armed forces to make "the decisions which are best for the life of the republic," Banzer said. Pereda, a former air force commander and interior minister, said another election should be held "to avoid sorrow and tears for the nation." He said he was sure his proposal would have the full support of the people and the military government. The electoral court stopped giving out results in the seven-man presidential race last weekend. It said then that about 70 percent of the vote had been counted, Pereda had 50.13 percent and former President Hernan Siles Zuazo was running second with 21.8 percent. The civilian politicians charged massive vote fraud to give the military candidate the majority necessary for election on the first ballot. Otherwise the new Congress also being chosen in the election would have to choose between the two top men. The action of the election court also voided the congressional election since the distribution of seats was decided by the presidential results in each election district. In annulling the vote, the election court seconded the opposition charges. It said there were irregularities all the way — in the campaign, the voting and the vote counting. And it said they were "of such magnitude that validation would constitute the establishment of a historical precedent." Siles Zuazo, a 69-year-old center-leftist who was president from 1956 to 1960, started a hunger strike Monday to protest the outcome of the election. He abandoned it on hearing of the court's announcement. Chronically unstable Bolivia has had more than 170 coups in the past 150 years, and Banzer fended off at least 19 attempts to unseat him.

Gave 78 Pints To Bloodmobile

The Bloodmobile conducted a mini-visit Wednesday at Procter & Gamble here and collected 78 units of blood during the four-hour drive. Mrs. Ruth Taylor of the Pitt Red Cross said that blood program officials were "real pleased" with the plant visit that saw only three persons deferred for various health reasons. Donors at P & G pre-registered for the visit, she explained, noting that the mini-drives are scheduled in order to collect blood at critical times when usage is high. The summer months are heavy usage periods, she mentioned. Mrs. Taylor thanked Procter & Gamble for offering the facilities yesterday and she also expressed her appreciation to the nursing staff and Emergency Medical Technicians at the plant who helped during the visit.

Mini-visits are also scheduled during the fiscal year in Grifton, Winterville and Bethel, she added, as an effort is being made to give everyone in the county at least one opportunity to donate blood.

The next regular Bloodmobile visit is planned for Aug. 7 at the Moose Lodge here under the sponsorship of the Gallon Donor Club.

Circle K Host To Carolina Officers

ECU News Bureau
East Carolina University's Circle K Club recently hosted members of the North and South Carolina Divisional Board of Circle K International.

Attending were District Circle K Governor Tommy Frederick of N.C. State University and district board officers from several campuses in the Carolinas.

The event's speakers included ECU Circle K president David Barber of Charlotte, campus sponsors Dr. David Stevens and Richard Farris, and local Kiwanis Club president John McConney.

The ECU Circle K plans to send a delegation to the international Circle K convention in Orlando, Fla., in August, which will include president Barber and vice president Glenn Brock of Fayetteville; administrative coordinator Mike Bumgarner of North Wilkesboro; and members Barbara Bumgarner of Youngstown, Ohio, Betty Lou Lovegrove of Tarboro and Beth Goelz of Charlotte.

At a March district convention the ECU club won top awards for excellence in overall achievement and for its service project, a local crime prevention campaign. At the international event, ECU will enter competition for similar awards.

Book Tells Of Actress

NEW YORK (AP) — Joan Crawford did not kill herself in 1977 but "most likely...had cancer of the liver or pancreas," a new biography of the actress reveals.

JOAN CRAWFORD

According to excerpts published in the August issue of Ladies' Home Journal, Miss Crawford's possible illness was not diagnosed because "she had returned to the faith she had discovered in the 1930s, Christian Science. She would not see a doctor or take any medicine."

In fact, insists author Bob Thomas, the Academy Award-winning actress died while watching televised soap operas as her housekeeper and an unnamed fan, in a nearby room, at a breakfast the star had prepared for them.

The biography by Thomas, a Los Angeles reporter for The Associated Press, is scheduled for publication in September by Simon & Schuster. It is entitled

Minister Will Visit Church

The Rev. Martha Greene, formerly of Simpson, pastor of St. Mary F.W.B. Church of New Haven, Conn., will arrive at Philippi Church of Christ Saturday morning for a weekend of fellowship in worship.

Accompanying her will be a bus and car entourage of choir, officers and members of her church in Connecticut. Breakfast will be served when they arrive.

Saturday night at 7:30 p.m. the New Haven Concert Choir will perform, with Rev. Greene directing the services.

Sunday at 11 a.m. Rev. Greene will deliver the sermon. Music will be rendered by the St. Mary Choir.

Dinner will be served at 1:30 p.m. in the church dining area.

The senior choir of Philippi, sponsors of this fellowship, invite the public to attend these services.

"Joan Crawford"

The published article also alleged that Miss Crawford beat her four adopted children, two of whom she left out of her will, and had an affair with the late Clark Gable. The affair might have ended in marriage, the book indicates, had it not been for interference from MGM studio head Louis B. Mayer.

Rumors Drove Joan To Alcohol

NEW YORK (AP) — Rumors that Sen. Edward Kennedy was seeing other women drove Joan Kennedy to drink, the Massachusetts Democrat's wife says. "I tried to talk about it, but I was embarrassed and Ted was embarrassed about it. Everybody was embarrassed, but nobody would really talk about it. Even my best friends would tip-toe around it," Mrs. Kennedy says in an interview in the August issue of McCall's Magazine.

"I suppose they were trying to protect me. And so I continued to drink more and more. And the situation got progressively worse," she says.

"Rather than get mad, or ask questions concerning the rumors about Ted and his girl friends, or really stand up for myself at all, it was easier for me to just go and have a few drinks and calm myself down as if I weren't hurt or angry."

"I found out that alcohol could sedate me. So I didn't care as much. And things didn't hurt so much."

Mrs. Kennedy, who first revealed her alcoholism in an Associated Press interview earlier this month, said that when her illness became apparent she consulted her sister-in-law, Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis.

"I felt close to Jackie," Mrs. Kennedy said, "because both of us needed space to be alone. When I realized my drinking was becoming a real problem I remember going to New York to see Jackie and talking about it. She understood."

Joan Kennedy went to Washington in 1962, the beautiful young wife of the newly-elected Massachusetts senator and sister-in-law of the president of the United States, John Kennedy, and his Attorney General, Robert Kennedy.

The president and his brother were assassinated. Mary Jo Kopechne, who had worked in the Robert Kennedy presidential campaign, was killed when the car she was in that was driven by Edward Kennedy went off a bridge at Chappaquiddick, Mass. Five years ago, Teddy Kennedy Jr. had his right leg amputated because of bone cancer.

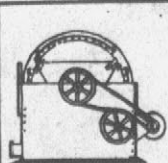

Mrs. Kennedy's admission of alcoholism followed by three months a similar admission by former first lady Betty Ford, who revealed she was undergoing rehabilitation for alcohol addiction.

"I drank socially at first," the magazine quoted Mrs. Kennedy as saying, "and then I began to drink alcoholically. But at the time I didn't know it. And so I did what a lot of Americans do when they have a drinking problem — they begin to try to hide it out of shame and to pretend it's not as bad a problem as it really is."

Mrs. Kennedy has moved into her own apartment in Boston, life lacked continuity." Mrs. Kennedy says she hasn't had a drinking problem since last summer and doesn't drink at all now but occasionally misses it "because it had become a physical and psychological addiction." "I am exceptionally happy in my sobriety," she declares.

Greenville Man In Who's Who Edition

Greenville artist-professor-author Edward Arnold (Ed) Reep is one of 193 Tar Heels and 12,500 Americans listed for the first time in the 1978 edition of "Who's Who in America."

This publication, now in its 40th year, is the standard reference book of compact biographies of Americans who have achieved success in a wide spectrum of professions in contemporary American society.

Reep, a native of New York who was raised in Los Angeles, has been an artist since his early years. In World War II, he was a war artist covering Sicily, Italy and North Africa. After his discharge as a captain at the end of World War II, his services were enlisted by the Pentagon in preparing a pictorial history of the U.S. Fifth Army.

In the years Reep lived in California following World War II, he taught art and also was a studio artist for MGM and for David O. Selznick. In 1956, Reep toured the world to do a series of watercolors for a special "Air Age" edition of "Life Magazine."

Reep came to Greenville in 1970 as an artist-in-residence in the School of Art, and has served on the art faculty since that date. He is a professor of art teaching painting. A book by Reep, "The Content of Watercolor," is widely used as a collegiate textbook.

Reep is married to the former Karen Patricia Stevens. They are the parents of three girls — Mrs. Susan Smith, Mrs. Christine Seidler, and Janine Reep; and one son, Mitchell Reep. They also have five young grandchildren.

Other North Carolinians listed in "Who's Who in America" for the first time this year are Attorney General Rufus Edmisten; Raleigh Mayor Isabella Walton Cannon, N. C. Museum of Art director Moussa Domit; and country singer Billy Wayne (Crash) Craddock.

Eastern North Carolinians selected for the publication the first time this year include: Warren Keith White of Tarboro; William Ward Daniels of Kinston; and George Garland Beasley, Goldsboro.

Chapel Hill led the state in the number of persons selected for "Who's Who" with a total of 34. Charlotte had 25, Durham and Raleigh 24 each, Winston-Salem 20, and Greensboro 14.

Well known Americans listed for the first time are entertainers John Travolta, Diane Keaton, Henry Winkler, Sylvester Stallone, Brian De Palma, Fernando Bujones, Peter Frampton; White House aides Jody Powell and Hamilton Jordan; and sport stars Bruce Jenner, Pete Rose, Bjorn Borg and Gordon Johncock.

Board To Meet

ECU News Bureau
Election of officers for 1978-79 highlights the agenda for the summer meeting of the East Carolina University Board of Trustees here July 27.

The term of Troy W. Pate Jr. of Goldsboro as chairman expires this year as does that of vice chairman Ashley B. Futrell of Washington.

The 13 member board will hold an executive session following remarks by Park and Chancellor Thomas B. Brewer and the election of officers. The board's executive session will be for discussion and action on personnel matters.

Sunshine Girls Plan Art Show

Operation Sunshine, a club of girls between the ages of 6-13, will hold an art show in the children's section of Sheppard Memorial Library Aug. 7-11 as part of the summertime schedule.

The club has toured the art school at East Carolina University. The girls have also swum, skated and participated in various arts and crafts activities.

Before the summer session ends Aug. 25, the club plans to go to King's Dominion Aug. 18.

The club surprised its director, Miss Wanda James, with a birthday party Monday.

May Not Order Probe Of Formaldehyde Spill

SANFORD, N.C. (AP) — Although the Sanford Board of Aldermen voted Tuesday to request a special criminal probe into a formaldehyde spill in the Cape Fear River, state officials said Wednesday that the probe may never be ordered. Water plants serving Sanford, Lillington, Dunn, Erwin and Benson were shut down after the spill was detected about 8 p.m. Sunday. Formaldehyde is a deadly chemical used in embalming and wood treatment. Sanford City Manager O.B. Stokes, who asked the board to request the probe after state officials said they had not yet determined the source of the spill, said Wednesday that the State Bureau of Investigation would only begin such a probe at the request of District Attorney John Twisdale. "They told me if at all possible, they would begin an investigation," Stokes said. "But they said the spill would have to be of a criminal nature." Stokes said he contacted the governor's office Wednesday morning, but was referred to SBI officials. Meanwhile, the governor's office reported that Howard N. Lee, secretary of the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, had advised the governor that the SBI was not needed.

Bob Carter, head of the water quality investigators, said Wednesday night he did not believe such a probe was necessary. "A criminal investigation requires at least a target," he said. "And right now, we're on a witch hunt — we have no idea who's responsible for the spill." Carter said he was misquoted by reports that he had said the spill was deliberate. Stokes has charged that the spill was deliberate and conducted by a company near the river. He said that Sanford officials has offered the use of laboratory facilities in the Sanford water plant to state investigators to test their samples, but he said the offer was turned down.

Visiting Lab In E. Europe

ECU News Bureau
Dr. Phillip J. Alder, East Carolina University professor of history, is attending the 1978 Illinois Summer Research Laboratory on Russia and Eastern Europe at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. Alder, a specialist in Serbian and Balkan history, will do research in 19th century Serbian political history making use of extensive holdings of periodicals, books and other research materials at the University of Illinois. He also will attend seminars. The invitation to attend the Summer Research Laboratory included visiting faculty privileges for Dr. Alder, and he was awarded a $600 travel grant by the ECU Research Council. Dr. Alder holds a Ph.D. from the University of Vienna. He served as a foreign service officer with the U.S. Department of State prior to joining the faculty at ECU in 1966.

Wheat Now Too Tall To Read Farmer Strike Sign

SPRINGFIELD, Colo. (AP) — "100 percent of parity or..."
The hand-painted sign stands in a wheat field in the flat, high prairie where the American Agriculture movement began last fall. The wheat now stands too tall to read the sign's impotent threat: "...strike."
The tractorcades were spectacular, the marches on Washington made news. Wheat production in the United States will be down 16 percent this year, say government and private forecasters, but they add that American Agriculture had little to do with it.

The federal government required wheat farmers to reduce their acreage by 20 percent this year to qualify for federal farm-assistance programs — 90 percent of wheat farmers in Colorado signed up, as did most farmers across the country.

And now there is dissension in the ranks. The movement has lost popular appeal, and some of the original leaders have been driven away by a new, conservative bent in the organization.
Instead of focusing on 100 percent of parity, the goal that galvanized hundreds of thousands of farmers across the country, talk and literature at American Agriculture's headquarters here focuses on the contention that an international corporate conspiracy is trying to bury the family farm in America.

Among the influential leaders in American Agriculture now, and one of the strongest supporters of the new conservatism, is Gene Schroder, a third-generation farmer and veterinarian.
"Farmers want to know why we have this cheap-food policy and who is behind it," said Schroder. "Farmers are getting a better education, and they will be back in Washington and wherever else they have to be. You'll see tractorcades and the whole works again."
Bud Bitner, one of the founders of American Agriculture, has his doubts. "I don't believe we'll see what we did last fall for a long, long time."

American Agriculture's original goal was to force the government to guarantee farmers 100 percent of parity. Parity is a ratio relating the cost of producing a crop to market value. At 100 percent of parity, a productive farmer would be assured a modest profit.
On Dec. 14, American Agriculture supporters struck. Their vow was to neither plant nor sell crops until they got 100 percent parity.

The movement was strongest in the wheat country from Texas to Montana where depressed prices were driving farmers off the land.
The combines are moving across north across Colorado and Kansas now. Production is down, but not by the 100 percent American Agriculture originally vowed, nor by the 50 percent they called for in January in an amended strike call.

And prices are up. Wheat that sold for $1.76 a bushel at this time last year is bringing $2.49 a bushel now at the grain elevators near Springfield. "Optimism is back in the farmer's heart now," said one American Agriculture leader.

Wilmington 10 Seen A Non-Political Case

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A state official who went to Washington to discuss the Wilmington 10 case says the U.S. State Department does not consider the Wilmington 10 political prisoners.
Jack Cozort, legal counsel to Gov. Jim Hunt, said after he briefed a State Department official on the case, the official told a reporter that the Wilmington 10 are not political prisoners.
Cozort said in a report to Hunt press aide Gary Pearce that he had met with Pat Derian, assistant secretary of state for human rights. Cozort went to Washington to discuss the case at the invitation of the State Department. He attended the meeting in place of Hunt, who had prior engagements and was unable to attend the conference.

Pearce said Cozort reported that after the conference, a reporter asked Ms. Derian if the Wilmington 10 are political prisoners and "she said no they were not."
Pearce said the State Department "gets a fair number of inquiries about the Wilmington 10 case and they want to answer them factually and responsibly. They simply wanted to be briefed for that purpose."
Pearce said Cozort "got a good reception. They listened, they sincerely wanted to know the facts in the case."

The Wilmington 10, nine black men and a white woman, were convicted on charges related to a firebombing of a grocery store in Wilmington during racial disturbances there in 1971. Supporters of the group have charged the convictions were politically motivated, particularly because of the civil rights activism of Ben Chavis, a group's leader.
Hunt refused earlier this year to pardon the 10. But he did shorten their sentences and all except Chavis will become eligible for parole before the end of this year. Chavis will be eligible for parole in 1980.

Reading Clinic For Area Pupils

ECU News Bureau
Forty-seven eastern North Carolina children are enrolled in the Summer Reading Clinic sponsored by the East Carolina University School of Education.
The program, which began June 29 and will end August 1, includes students who have completed grades 1 through 12. Each child meets with an individual reading teacher from 1 to 2:30 p.m. daily.
According to Dr. Mavel Laughter of the ECU education faculty, the program for younger students is concentrating upon strengthening the "basic reading skills" and providing "interesting reading experiences" to further develop the student's ability to read.
The program for older students in middle-grade and junior-high levels is designed to develop basic reading skills also, but will emphasize those reading skills which make studying easier as well as increase the students' reading speed," she said.

At the conclusion of the Clinic, reading skills of the participating students will be evaluated and a special instructional program for each based upon his or her present skills development will be planned.
Applications are still being accepted for the fall and winter reading clinics, said Dr. Laughter.
Parents who wish to enroll their children in the clinic should telephone the ECU Department of Elementary Education at 757-6833 for further information.

Hogs.
RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — The overall trend on the North Carolina hog market today was mostly steady to 75 higher. Wilson 47.00; Rocky Mount 46.50-47.00; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Chadbourn, Ayden, Pine Level, Laurinburg and Benson, 46.50; Tarboro and Bethel, unreported; Salisbury 44.50; Spivey's Corner, 44-45.00.

Poultry.
RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock broiler market was weaker, supply moderate, demand light to moderate, weights desirable. The dock weighted average price for this week is 50.44. Estimated slaughter today 1,440,000.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned mixed today, erasing the morning's 5-point gain.

At noon, the Dow Jones index of 30 industrial stocks was unchanged at 840.70. But advances led declines by about a 2-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 15.49 million shares in the first two hours of trading, against 12.71 million at noon Wednesday.

Although many forecasters are predicting an economic downturn toward the end of the year, investor hopes have been buoyed somewhat by healthy second-quarter corporate profit reports. In addition, spending on durable goods and housing has continued strong, possibly because of buying in advance of expected price hikes.

With inflation predicted to reach about 7 percent this year, consumers are spending because they have "no confidence in paper money or politicians anymore," said Robert Stovall at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc.

Stovall also noted traders have been encouraged by suspicions that the Federal Reserve may have decided against further credit-tightening policies for the present.

Airlines, which have been recording earnings gains on booming passenger traffic and which have been placing sizable orders for new planes, were among the most actively traded Big Board issues. Pan American led the most-actives, up 1/4 at 7 1/2, while Eastern Airlines rose 1/4 to 14. UAL Inc. rose 1/2 to 35.

Eastman Kodak was down 1 1/2 at 57 1/2. The photo industry leader reported a better-than-anticipated 42 percent gain in second-quarter earnings Wednesday and was ahead 3 1/2 in the previous session. Polaroid, which also reported improved earnings, gained 1/4 to 42 1/4. IBM rose 3/4 to 270 1/2 after a published report said the giant computer maker may be near the top of the industry in growth over the next year.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .11 to 55.21; at the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .43 at 151.43.

Terrorists Strike Again

ROME (AP) — Extremists shot a businessman in the legs near Turin during the night and set off bombs that slightly injured a policeman and caused extensive damage in Rome and Milan, police said.

Salvatore Russo, 41, an official of the businessmen's association of Grugliasco, near Turin, was shot in the legs by three youths who raided the group's offices.

After firing four bullets into Russo's legs, the terrorists painted political slogans on the walls praising Front Line, an extremist group and supporter of the Red Brigades, the gang that kidnapped and killed former Premier Aldo Moro.

Front Line also claimed responsibility for a bomb attack which damaged the offices of the businessmen's association in Milan.

Police reported the walls caved in and furniture was destroyed by the explosion of two TNT charges. No injuries were reported.

In Rome a powerful bomb apparently tossed from a moving car badly damaged a wing of Palazzo Valentini, seat of the provincial government offices at Piazza Venezia, in the heart of the capital.

The blast, at 4 a.m., slightly injured one policeman, smashed windows in the area and damaged parked cars.

Scores During Argument

While Milwaukee Brewer Lary Sorensen holds back catcher Charlie Moore as he argues with umpire Rich Garcia, Boston's Butch Hobson slides across the plate during seventh-inning action last night in Milwaukee. Moore was protesting a call on Boston's George Scott when Hobson sneaked all the way from first base to score. Boston won the game 8-2. (AP Laser-photo)

No Place Like Home For Fight

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

There's no place like home for a good baseball rhabarb. And they certainly had a good one in Milwaukee Wednesday night.

This particular argument took place between Milwaukee catcher Charlie Moore and home plate umpire Rich Garcia in the midst of a game-turning rally that helped the Boston Red Sox beat the Brewers 8-2.

Ooh, was Moore mad. Enraged when Garcia called George Scott safe on a play at home in the seventh inning, Moore dropped the ball and charged the umpire. Milwaukee pitcher Lary Sorensen had to restrain the catcher with a full Nelson hold.

"I thought when Scott slid, he missed the plate," said Moore. "So I dove after him as he came back for the plate and tagged him on the hand way before he got back. But the umpire said he got in the first time around because he called him safe immediately."

Garcia concurred that Scott was in fact safe the first time and that he didn't have to come back to make sure.

"When Scott slid by the plate, he caught the edge with his hand," said Garcia. "I signalled him safe immediately. The play was over there. I don't know why he came back, and obviously he would have been out then if he hadn't touched it the first time. But he did."

Moore was burned twice on the play, for while he was arguing with Garcia he forgot to call time. Butch Hobson sneaked all the way around from first base to score the fourth run of the inning and the Red Sox soon had enough runs to win with a 4-2 lead.

Elsewhere in the American League, the Baltimore Orioles beat the Chicago White Sox 10-3; the New York Yankees stopped the Minnesota Twins 2-0; the California Angels whipped the Cleveland Indians 3-0; the Kansas City Royals routed the Texas Rangers 11-4; the Detroit Tigers edged the Oakland A's 5-4 and the Seattle Mariners turned back the Toronto Blue Jays 6-2.

Frank Duffy's run-scoring single capped the controversial four-run seventh for Boston and the Red Sox scored four more times in the eighth to win going away.

It was Duffy's single to left that broke a 2-2 tie as Scott slid home and Hobson's run later made it 4-2.

Orioles 10, White Sox 3
Rick Dempsey and Doug DeCinces drove in two runs each to key a six-run rally in the fourth and Jim Palmer won his first game in more than a month as Baltimore defeated Chicago. The triumph snapped a four-game losing streak for Palmer, 11-8, who had last won

June 18 against Oakland. The loss was the sixth straight for the slumping White Sox.

Yankees 2, Twins 0
Ed Figueroa, 8-7, tossed a six-hitter and slumping New York won for just the third time in 12 games in beating Minnesota. The Yankees scored single runs in the fifth and seventh innings.

Angels 3, Indians 0
Struggling Nolan Ryan finally won a game after seven misses and regained the American League strikeout lead as he paced California over Cleveland with a six-hitter. Ryan, 4-8, had dropped five games in succession since beating Chicago on May 23. He struck out 10 batters, reaching double figures in strikeouts for the seventh time this season and 111th time in his career.

Royals 11, Rangers 4
Frank White doubled and tripled and drove in three runs, Fred Patek collected three singles and two stolen bases and Darrel Porter hit two doubles as Kansas City whipped Texas.

Clint Hurdle had two singles and lashed a two-run triple amid a seven-run outburst in the third inning to chase starter Ferguson Jenkins, 9-5, who hadn't lost to the Royals since 1976.

Tigers 5, A's 4
Jason Thompson's two-run single in a three-run seventh inning rallied Detroit over Oakland. Lou Whitaker's hit to deep short scored Phil Mankowski from third base and tied the score at 3-3. After Matt Keough, 6-6, walked Rusty Staub to load the bases, Thompson drove in the deciding runs with a ground single through the right side of the infield. Slaton, 10-6, pitched a six-hitter to snap Oakland's four-game winning streak.

Mariners 6, Blue Jays 2
Julio Cruz had three hits and drove in two runs and John Hale also knocked in two runs to lead Seattle over Toronto. Cruz's RBI single and Larry Milbourne's run-scoring double gave the Mariners a 3-2 lead in the second.

Cruz and Hale drove in runs with two-out singles in the sixth to give Seattle a 5-2 advantage and Hale's sacrifice fly in the eighth provided the Mariners with an insurance run.

Martin Outlines Law For Yankee Players

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — The law, according to Billy Martin, was neatly typed on 3½ pages of New York Yankees letterhead and placed in each cubicle of the team's dressing room at Metropolitan Stadium.

Rules governing "1) personal appearance, 2) personal conduct off the field, and 3) conformance with team requirements for reporting, travel and lodging" awaited the team after a 2-0 victory over the Minnesota Twins Wednesday night.

Included in the text were specifics of the team curfew, "1 a.m., except after night games," and a prohibition of group card games after curfew — at the risk of a $100 fine per participant.

Martin said the memo was not an attempt to create stricter team discipline. "No," he said. "The rules just have to be spelled out in case the players have a grievance and go to the players' association. This just spells the rules out so that everybody knows what they are."

Martin already has made one rule very clear: "All I ask of a player is that he hustles and obeys orders. They'll never have trouble with me if they do that."

That statement appeared aimed at the ears of Reggie

Jackson, who reportedly spent the second day of an enforced five-day exile with friends in San Diego. Martin suspended the controversial slugger without pay late Monday night for bunting — ignoring orders to swing away — during New York's 9-7 loss to Kansas City.

"His lawyer has been notified, and he (Jackson) has been notified, by registered mail, that we expect him in Chicago Sunday, and there's no reason not to expect him to be in Chicago Sunday," said Yankees General Manager Cedrick Tallis. "We don't expect any problems, and everything is going to be normal. I certainly hope so."

There was a mild return to normalcy Wednesday night. Right-hander Ed Figueroa pitched a six-hitter for his first victory since June 13, and was supported with RBI singles by Thurman Munson and Mickey Rivers as fourth-place New York won for the third time in 12 games.

Mike Hargrove of the Texas Rangers has batted in every position in the batting order.

North State Gains Semis

TARBORO — Two runs in the bottom of the sixth inning allowed Greenville's North State Little League All-Stars to slip past Tarboro 2-1 and advance to the quarterfinals of the Area II tournament.

Tarboro scored the games first run in the third when Michael Doughtie singled, moved up on a passed ball and came in on a double by Danny Hawkins.

North State had only one man in scoring position before the sixth, when it put the winning runs across. With one away, Kenny Waters walked for North State and Tony Taylor went in to run for him. After a second out, Marc Gatlin slamed a home run on a 1-1 pitch to provide the winning margin.

The game was a pitchers duel, NS's Patrick Rand against Tarboro's Jerry Butler. North State had three hits and Tarboro four.

The local team will face Northampton in the semifinals today with the winner going against the winner of today's Greenville-Tar Heel-Roanoke Rapids game for the Area II title.

Tyson Says ECU 'Clean'

According to Al Tyson, as far as he knows East Carolina University is guilty of no violations in its recruitment of him.

Tyson, a 6-10 center from D. H. Conley, who signed a basketball grant-in-aid with the Pirates, said as far as he knows the East Carolina basketball program is "clean."

The National Collegiate Athletic Association is currently conducting an investigation of ECU recruiting practices centered around Tyson and coach Larry Gillman.

Tyson was heavily recruited by a number of other schools, including Mississippi, which is believed to have filed a complaint against ECU with the NCAA. An NCAA investigator was recently here conducting interviews with Tyson, Conley coach Shelly Marsh, Tyson's teammates and ECU officials.

Approval Expected

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — The University of Maryland Board of Regents is expected to approve the appointment of former Duke University athletic director Carl James to replace Jim Kehoe as the Terrapins' athletic director at its meeting today.

The nomination of James, now executive director for the Sugar Bowl, was approved Tuesday by the board's athletic committee.

The full board generally goes along with the committee's recommendations, but James said Tuesday night he considered it "a little premature" to assume he will definitely get the job.

"I'm certainly pleased at the interest Maryland has had in me and I share their enthusiasm and look forward to meeting the people up there," James said in a telephone interview from New Orleans.

If he gets the job, James said, "I'd have to figure out ways to continue the great tradition they have."

Rose's Late Hit Continues String

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

It was probably the game's least important hit — and yet it was clearly the biggest one of all.

One thing the Cincinnati Reds didn't really need in the ninth inning Wednesday night was a baserunner. After all, Ken Henderson had hit a three-run homer in the seventh inning and George Foster had unloaded a grand slam in the eighth, all the clout the Reds needed to wallop Philadelphia 7-2.

But with nobody on and one out to go in the top of the ninth, there was still the matter of Pete Rose's hitting streak. Rose had grounded out twice, had struck out once and in the eighth inning had received a controversial walk. With that, it appeared Rose's streak would end at 31 straight games, six shy of Tommy Holmes' National League record.

But that walk started what turned out to be the Reds' biggest inning and it brought him back to the plate one inning later. "That's what happens when you play with a great offensive team," he said later.

And after one pitch, Rose was on first with a bunt single, acknowledging the cheers of 45,606 Phillies fans. The streak was still alive!

In three NL doubleheader splits, San Francisco beat Chicago 7-5 and lost 7-4. Montreal defeated Atlanta 8-6 and lost 3-1 and Houston beat New York 8-3, then lost 2-1. In single games, Pittsburgh defeated Los Angeles 6-3 and San Diego beat St. Louis 5-3.

The first pitch to Rose from Phil's reliever Ron Reed wound up rolling tantalizingly down the third base line. "It was a perfect bunt," said third baseman Mike Schmidt, who tried a bare-handed scoop of the ball but never really had a chance to throw Rose out.

Giants 7-6, Cubs 4-7
In San Francisco's first game, Larry Herndon collected four RBI with a trio of singles to make Vida Blue a 13-game winner, but the Cubs rebounded in the nightcap with Larry Bittner's three RBI on two singles. The split left the Giants two games ahead of the second-place Reds in the West and Chicago three back of the front-running Phillies in the East.

Expos 8-1, Braves 6-3
Ellis Valentine hit his 17th homer of the year, a two-run rocket in the fifth inning, and Warren Cromartie unleashed his first career grand slam and fifth homer of the season to cap a five-run ninth that sent Montreal past the Braves in their opener.

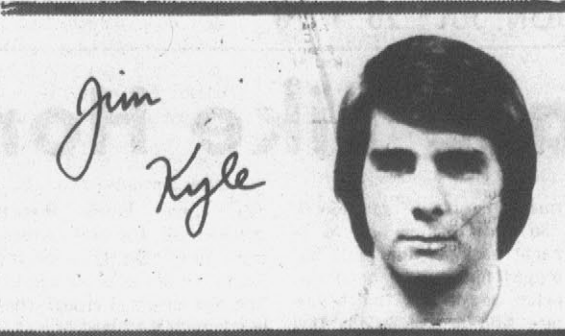

Jeff Burroughs' sixth-inning two-run homer, No. 13 for him, was all Atlanta needed in the finale as Buddy Solomon and Dave Campbell teamed for a four-hitter against the Expos.

Astros 8-1, Mets 3-3
Bob Watson ripped a two-run single in the ninth inning and hit his 10th homer of the season, a solo shot, in the third to propel Houston to its first-game victory over the Mets' Pat Zachry, 10-6. Luis Pujols had a pair of RBI for the Astros in the opener.

New York managed a split on the seven-hit pitching of Craig Swan and Willie Montanez's two-run double in the first inning of the finale.

Pirates 6, Dodgers 3
The Pirates pounced on Doug Rau for three runs in the second inning and Dave Parker hit a two-run homer in the fifth to snap Los Angeles' three-game winning streak, drop the Dodgers into third in the West, 2½ games back of the Giants and inch third-place Pittsburgh within four of the Phils in the East. Reggie Smith hit a two-run homer for the Dodgers.

Padres 5, Cardinals 3
Dave Winfield climaxed a three-run first inning with an RBI triple and Gene Richards had an RBI double to cap a two-run fourth in San Diego's victory.

day, Rose's William Barnes and D. H. Conley's Al Tyson.

Both showed great improvement in their stellar high school careers, according to their coaches, especially last season, their senior year. And both will be playing on college teams next season where they will have a chance for further improvement, Barnes at Chowan and Tyson at East Carolina.

"If he makes as much improvement in the next four years as he made in the last three, he might make pro," Rose coach Jim Brewington said of the 6-7 Barnes recently. Barnes averaged 19 points a game last season and was the leading rebounder for the Rampants, who finished second in Division I and lost a close game to Terry Sanford in the first round of the state playoffs.

"He meant so much to us. He was our inside game and our offensive threat," Brewington said. "And we had a team that could have won the state championship with some breaks."

"I just hope he can do real well in the future. I'd like to see him continue to play."

BARNES SAID HE was honored to be picked for the All-Star game. He said the East coaches, headed by Walker of E. E. Smith High in Fayetteville, write him about every week. But, he added, he isn't sure whether they will want him to play the center or a forward position.

"I guess they'll decide after we get up there and work out," Barnes and Tyson will be leaving for the game Friday and have daily workouts in preparation for the 30th annual contest Tuesday night in Greensboro Coliseum.

Barnes said he would rather play the post position, where he played in high school. That would put him vying against Tyson for the starting spot.

Barnes has been working on his game since the Rose season ended and is trying to play every day now. "I'm trying to get ready for the All-Star game and when I go to Chowan. I'm working on my ballhandling and rebounding, especially."

The workouts have improved his game, Barnes said, and he feels like he will be in good shape to compete against the other players in the game. Although he said he hasn't seen any of the West players play, he feels the East will have a strong team.

AT 6-11, TYSON will be the tallest player in the game. He averaged around 19 points and 14 rebounds in leading Conley to a second-place finish in the 3-A Eastern Carolina Conference.

"Of course, Al meant a great deal to our team," said Viking coach Shelly Marsh. "We wouldn't have had the record we had without him."

"He improved 100 per cent from his junior to senior year. If he continues to improve at that rate, he's going to be a real, real outstanding player at East Carolina."

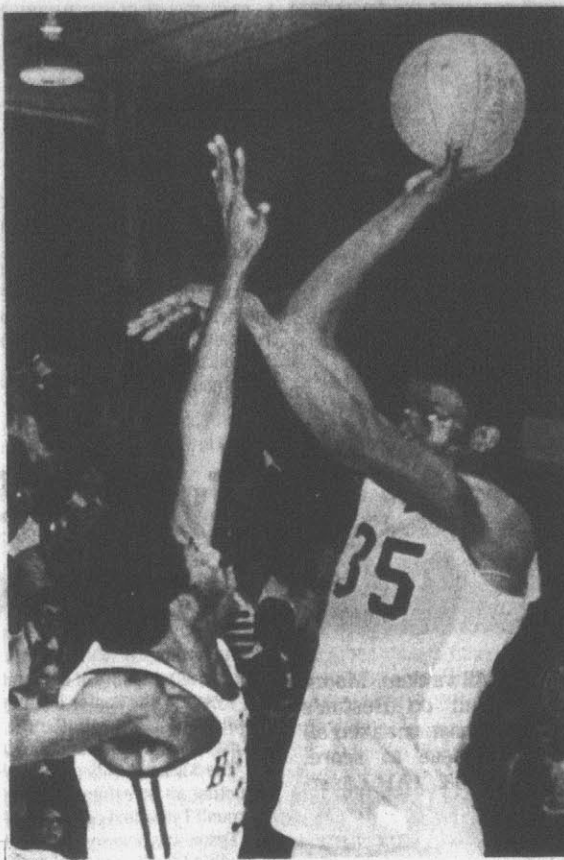

Tyson has only been playing organized basketball for two years, Marsh said, and that means he has more room for development than most high school seniors.

"The thing about Al is that he was a pleasure to coach. He worked real hard in the off-season, and not just on his game. He would run bleachers, wind sprints and long distances. It didn't seem a burden to him. He seemed to enjoy it and to know exactly how it would benefit him."

TYSON HAS CONTINUED his workouts since the end of school, he said. "I'm still working hard," he said, on both his inside and outside games. "I feel like I'm a stronger player now."

Tyson has also been working out with weights to improve the strength in his legs. "I'm working on my jumping and rebounding, plus my defensive shot-blocking." He added that he is also doing a lot of running.

Tyson also said he is honored to be picked for the All-Star game. "I'm happy to be picked. I really think it's going to be pretty good competition, but I'm going to do my best to get a starting position."

 S K R V V C K V P O N

Yesterday's Cryptiquip — GOOF-OFF ON FAIRWAY WILL FLY AWAY ON GREEN.
 Today's Cryptiquip clue: X equals D

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Speaking of Your Health...

Many Causes of Dizziness

One of the most common complaints brought to the attention of doctors is dizziness. Vertigo, or dizziness, is not a disease. Rather it is a symptom. The degree of vertigo varies from a tiny, momentary feeling of imbalance to a sudden, severe incapacitating spell.

A great many people complain of "dizziness" when in reality they mean a sense of light-headedness, blurred eyesight or faintness.

Because the statement "I feel dizzy" is often so vague and confusing, doctors probe deeply into every facet of the complaint so that there will be no mistaken notion about what the underlying problem is.

For some strange reason, an attack of dizziness is thought by some people to be an attack of Meniere's disease. And stranger still is the fact that the name "Meniere's" has a terrifying connotation that seems to suggest impending disaster.

Meniere's disease is a relatively rare disorder. It is true that dizziness is a symptom of this condition, but not all dizziness is related to Meniere's disease.

There is a temptation, too, to identify an attack of dizziness, mild or severe, with an inner ear disturbance. The reason for this is that the center of balance lies deep within the inner ear. There, three, tiny, semi-circular canals contain droplets of fluid which constantly adjust to every change of position of the head. There can, indeed, be an inner ear disturbance that causes dizziness. This is known as "labyrinthitis." However, this is far less frequently the cause of dizziness than many other conditions.

The following is only a partial list of the factors that are taken into consideration by the physician in an effort to establish a positive reason for vertigo, or the sensation of dizziness: 1) high or low blood pressure; 2) side effects of drugs; 3) ear infections; 4) eye disorders; 5) sudden, rapid changes of position; 6) allergies; 7) excess alcohol, coffee or tobacco; 8) arteriosclerosis of the blood vessels of the brain; 9) excessive intake of salt and fluids; 10) extraordinary fatigue; 11) low blood sugar; 12) emotional stress; 13) stomach upset; 14) motion sickness on a plane, train, ship or car; 15) neurological diseases.

It should be apparent from this partial, yet far-ranging list that close cooperation between the patient and the doctor is essential if the exact reason for dizziness is to be uncovered.

Often this unpleasant symptom calls forth a great deal of anxiety. Many people become concerned and believe that the vague sensation of dizziness indicates the beginnings of a severe illness.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good day and evening to consult with those who are experienced in subjects about which you know little and can steer you in the right direction. Be on your best behavior.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Make sure you know what you want to accomplish in the days ahead and then make arrangements for gaining them. Be logical.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Allow time to study a new outlet that could give you added income in the days ahead. Express appreciation for loved one.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Plan time to analyze a new interest instead of jumping blindly into it. Changing plans now could help you gain an important aim.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You have fine creative ideas now that should be put in practice without delay. Avoid one who is a troublemaker.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Adopt a new perspective on a plan you have in mind to gain the success you seek. Show increased devotion to family members.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Take time to study new methods for handling your work better in the future. Use extreme care in motion at this time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make early plans to engage in recreational activities later in the day. Use right methods to solve a personal problem.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get everything at home working on a more even keel and harmony reigns for some time to come. Improve your appearance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Think over what your true position is with your friends and then handle your work more efficiently. Dress neatly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Take needed steps to put your financial affairs in better order. Forget recreation and stick to what is important for now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Take time to improve your health and appearance. Be more willing to go out socially to the right places. Be clever.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Know which way you are going and how best to get there so that you have more abundance in the future. Your intuition is accurate now.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will easily understand modern trends and technology and should be sent to the most up-to-date schools in order to make the most of this life. Don't neglect ethical training. A good family life is in this chart.

As declarer, you should always try to play your cards so that you conceal your actual holding from the defenders, especially the one who represents a threat to your contract. Sometimes this can be accomplished by quite a simple maneuver.

Once North could show the values for a two-level overall, South decided that he had a shot at making three no trump. He got there by the shortest route possible.

West led his fourth-best spade, and dummy was a great disappointment. The opening lead had removed the only possible entry to dummy's club suit. If declarer knocked out the ace of diamonds, he would have only eight tricks. Therefore, he would have to score a club trick to make his contract.

Declarer had one big advantage—neither defender knew he had only a singleton club. If he could con the defender who held the ace of clubs (surely West, in view of his opening bid) into holding up the ace of clubs one round, he would be home.

To the first trick, declarer played the nine of spades from dummy. East followed low, and a careless declarer would win in dummy and lead the king of clubs. However, that would be a fatal error against competent defenders.

On the first club, East would start an echo by playing a high club, signaling an even number of cards in the suit. West would realize that whether East held two or four clubs, it could not gain to hold up the ace. If East held four clubs, declarer had a singleton; if he held only two clubs, then declarer had three and would always be able to use dummy's clubs.

Fortunately, South was more astute. He realized that West would be faced with a very difficult problem if he had to commit himself in the club suit before seeing what card partner would play.

So South overtook the nine of spades with the jack and led a club. West decided that declarer was more likely to hold a doubleton club than a singleton, so he played low. With a club trick in the bank, declarer shifted his attention to diamonds, and came home with two spades tricks, two hearts, four diamonds and a club.

Edwin Newman Surveys 'Golden Ghetto' Living

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It'd be hard to film a fight in mellow Marin County. The serenity there would move the most macho director to whisper through a pussywillow, "Lights...camera...meditation."

Well, tonight, NBC's Edwin Newman surveys all this tranquility in that San Francisco suburb during a one-hour special entitled "I Want It All Now."

What he digs up, besides an opening shot of a stark naked damsel two guys stroke with peacock feathers, is a show of trouble in the paradise he calls this "golden ghetto by the Golden Gate."

Pat O'Brien To Return To Stage

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Actor Pat O'Brien is scheduled to be back on stage Saturday evening after surgery to replace a battery in a run-down pacemaker, a spokesman for the Country Dinner Playhouse says.

Don Mutnick, vice president and director of operations at the theater, said Wednesday the role is being filled by A.D. Cover, who just closed in another production of "The Second Time Around." The 78-year-old O'Brien missed a week of performances.

Doctors said the depleted battery in the device that regulates his heartbeat caused O'Brien to become overly tired.

Marin is rich, one of the nation's 10 wealthiest counties, he says. It's beautiful, too, and "blessed with what is probably with best climate this side of the Mediterranean."

But it also has high rates of alcoholism, divorce, and, according to a suicide prevention spokesman interviewed for the show, a do-yourself-in rate well over twice the national average.

Why all this grief amid the splendid scenery, hot tubs, laid-back life style and ample leisure time?

The answer, it's suggested, is that having moved to what one witness calls "the end of the rainbow," many in the well-off, well-educated Marin Corps simply can't find much meaning amid all the goodies.

Surprise, it causes rampant partaking of mental therapy, "a light industry here in Marin County," Newman wryly notes.

"I once asked a pal, a Marin psychologist, what it was he did there. Said he, half in jest: 'M'boy, I'm in the relationship biz.'"

A growing biz in Marin, the special notes, is what Mark Dowie of Mother Jones magazine calls "the narcissism business," the "tremendous proliferation of 'Me' groups..."

Such tribes, run by gestalt-tenders and multi mystics, spawn what Cyra McPadden terms a "tremendous obsession with self," a Marin feature she spoofed in her fine book, "The Serial."

She finds this self-hug festival "sad to the extent that I see it wreaking a fair lot of havoc...in very specific ways."

The saddest example is the show's study of an attractive divorcee from Florida, mother of four kids aged nine to 16.

A Marin newcomer, she accepts a guru's concept that it's okay to downplay "the parenting trip," emphasize looking out for No. 1 instead of her tykes, and not feel guilty about being selfish.

"I'm not responsible for anybody but me," she says. "It's selfish. It's wonderful, though."

That it isn't wonderful for her kids and other offspring of Marin's "Me" generation is painfully obvious in the program's poignant interviews with these young victims of wealthy, broken homes.

Summation: "I Want It All Now," which looks at Marin ways as a possible sign of things to come nationally, is a mighty sobering peep beneath that county's fabled blanket of mellow.

If anything, it'll make you wonder why those advising the "Me" generation there aren't arrested for practicing futility without a license.

'Mr. Universe' Event Planned

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Three months after Miss Universe 1978 is crowned in Acapulco on July 24, Mr. Universe 1978 will be crowned in the same convention auditorium.

The National Sports Institute said it expects 250 men from 85 countries to enter the competition, which will be held at the Pacific coast resort Oct. 31-Nov. 6.

Hank Williams Jr. Finally Finding His Own Way

By SCOTT SHEPARD
Associated Press Writer
MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Some are born great. Some achieve greatness. And some, like Hank Williams Jr., have greatness thrust upon them.

The namesake of a country music legend, Williams since 1957 has filled the void left when his hard-living father, at age 29, died in the backseat of a new 1952 Cadillac.

Now, however, after nearly 21 years, Williams is through "living for more than one man."

Williams was only 8 years old when he was thrust onto the stage, "packaged as the ghost of Hank Williams." And the country music establishment "conspired" to keep it that way, he says.

"All Nashville wanted me to do was sing Daddy's songs, dress like him and act like him," he says. "That was fine for them, but it wasn't all right for me."

Initially Williams "thought being Hank's boy was the greatest thing in the world." An idol by proxy, he was a success as long as he "kept doing Daddy."

It didn't take long, though, for the schizophrenic career to take its toll. As a teenager, Williams said he drank heavily. In 1973 he turned to pills. Like his father had done 20 years before, he began inching closer to ruin.

Divorced from his first wife, Williams remarried shortly after returning to Cullman, Ala. His new wife, Becky, is described by friends as the "good hearted woman" of so many country ballads.

"It was the whole country-music syndrome," he explains. "I woke up drunk, went to sleep drunk. No hangovers.

Booze, sleeplessness, pills, depression. It just got to be too much."

A faltering marriage and the loneliness, music and alcohol that were his legacy "ganged up" on him. "So I tried the check-out route," he says.

His suicide attempt was aborted by friends, but it led him to a Nashville psychiatrist who advised him to leave Music City.

"My psychiatrist told me that Nashville had almost succeeded in making me Hank Williams...just like he is—dead!" says Williams.

The quiet, picturesque community of Cullman — located between Nashville, where his father's legend thrived, and Montgomery, where his father is buried — offered a perfect sanctuary for Williams.

So in 1974 he moved to Cullman, setting up household in a modest but spacious A-frame home overlooking a lake—a place where he could nurture his own musical concepts.

Those concepts blossomed the following year when he recorded a landmark country-rock album, "Hank Williams Jr. and Friends." His days of singing "crying-in-your-beer" songs were over.

Then tragedy struck. While climbing a Montana mountain in August 1975, Williams was swept 500 feet down the ragged side of a mountain.

"There was a boulder sticking straight up," he recalls,

"and I just hit it straight on, headfirst. It just literally split my face in half."

His condition was critical for three days. Fifteen days passed and his weight dropped from 205 pounds to 160 pounds. At one point, "I resolved myself that music was over," he says.

Once he was moved from intensive care to the rehabilitation unit, however, doctors brought him a guitar. And with Johnny Cash singing at his bedside, Williams joined in, slowly at first, but eventually "rolling along."

By October, Williams was back in Cullman, driving his pickup truck, shooting his guns, making "homegrown music" and "feeling good." But five operations were necessary to rebuild his face.

"It was a difficult time," he says of the months of recuperation. But those months taught him "how to relax, to enjoy life," something "Daddy never learned to do."

He realized, too, that his father "doesn't need me to keep his music alive." He says, "I can stay home and Daddy's royalties will roll in every few months whether I'm out there singing his songs or not."

Still, though, Williams' act includes some of his father's hits—"You're Cheating Heart," "Hey, Good Lookin'," "Jambalaya." Williams says, "I'll never leave them out."

One song missing from the act, however, is "Lovesick Blues," which established his father as the greatest draw the Grand Ole Opry ever had.

"I sang 'Lovesick Blues' for 20 years," says Williams, recalling those years spent as his father's "ghost." "I figure I've put in my time. Let somebody else sing the blues."

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Hot weather is forecast today in the Southwest and southern Plains. Mild temperatures are expected in the northern Plains with warm weather due for the rest of the country. Showers are expected from the central Plains to the Great Lakes and for the central Gulf. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Showers and thundershowers were expected to be on the increase in North Carolina this afternoon and evening, especially in coastal counties where additional moisture is building up in connection with a high pressure system off the coast.

A low center also has developed off the Florida coast and this has increased the easterly flow across the state. On a smaller scale one or two cir-clations have appeared along the North Carolina coast and these systems will slowly move west. The main low in the south will move into the Gulf area.

Temperatures climbed to the mid and upper 80s around the state Wednesday and are expected to be about the same today. Warm spots Wednesday were Fayetteville, Raleigh and Wilmington with a high of 89 degrees.

No Pay Increase For Wm. Friday

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The University of North Carolina Board of Governors planned to raise UNC President William C. Friday's yearly salary by 7½ percent. But for the second year in a row, Friday told the board his present salary is just fine, according to board secretary E.B. Turner of Fayetteville.

The salary hike would have raised Friday's pay from $58,500 to $62,300.

Friday is not the highest-paid employee in the university system. Several medical school personnel make more than he does.

A 7½ percent hike for the administrative personnel was the same given other employees of the system. It included the 6 percent pay hike approved by the General Assembly in June, and an additional 1½ percent to cover longevity and automatic increments received by other state employees.

UNC personnel receiving pay increases included Raymond Dawson, UNC vice president, from $52,500 to $56,450; Felix Joyner, vice president of finance, from $50,000 to $53,750; John Sanders, vice-president for planning, from $47,000 to $50,500; and Cleon Thompson Jr., vice president for student services and special programs, from $41,500 to $44,600.

Chancellors receiving raises included those at: UNC Chapel Hill, $58,250; N.C. State, $56,450; UNC-Greensboro, $52,500; East Carolina, $50,000; Appalachian State, N.C. A&T, N.C. Central and Western Carolina universities, $47,000; UNC-Wilmington and Fayetteville State universities, $43,000; UNC-Pembroke and UNC-Asheville, $42,550; N.C. School of the Arts, $39,350; and Winston-Salem State, $38,700.

Suicidal Despair Is Striking More Young People

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — At an age when they are supposed to have everything to live for, almost 5,000 teen-agers and young adults each year — about 13 a day — are so dyed in despair that they commit suicide.

That's about twice as many as 10 years ago and three times as many as 20 years ago. Suicide is the No. 2 cause of death among young people — accidents are No. 1. There are more suicides in the 15-24 age group than in any other population group.

The phenomenal increase in suicides and attempts — only hinted at by the statistics — is frequently blamed on breakdown of the family. Other factors cited are parents' confusion over their roles, drugs and alcohol, economic insecurity, changing values, stress and alienation, and the population bulge in the 15-24 age group.

Whatever the reasons, says Dr. Calvin Frederick of the National Institute of Mental Health, they add up to a state of mind that is "hapless, helpless and hopeless. They don't believe in the future."

The victims range from the seemingly happy-go-lucky who give no clear clues to the classic loners who scream silently for help.

Last June 11 in Weymouth, Mass., an apparently well-adjusted 17-year-old shot himself at a graduation ceremony, saying, "There are too many issues in America. It's the American way." He survived.

Last year in Glendale, Calif., a 13-year-old girl fatally shot herself on the day of comedian Freddie Prinze's funeral. She said in a note that his death and the deaths of a friend, a dog and a cat made it impossible for her to go on living.

They are but two of the statistics: Government figures for 1968 to 1976 show that the number of suicides by 15-to 24-year-olds rose from 2,357 to 4,747 — over 100 percent. That compares to about 25 percent for the total population.

Even among younger children — aged 10 to 14 — suicides increased from 116 to 158 during the 1968-1976 period.

Suicide affects the young of all races and socio-economic levels, but more young men than women take their own lives. The 1976 total for men 15-to-24 was 3,786, for women 961. But women attempt suicide at least twice as often, frequently with pills while men grab guns. Statistics don't reflect the full problem because not every suicide is reported as such. Furthermore, for every suicide by a young person there are many more attempts — some think as many as 50.

"It is a striking phenomenon and tragic because they haven't had a chance to start to live," said Frederick, chief of emergency mental health and disaster assistance at NIMH.

Frederick believes that suicidal young persons often have ineffectual father-son, mother-daughter relationships and often suffer great pressure by trying to live up to parental expectations.

He cites breakdown of the family, increased use of drugs and alcohol and the difficulty of getting a job and getting ahead as factors.

"The cards seem stacked against them, everything turns out badly, they don't have the resources to lift themselves up and then they lose hope. That is a suicidal combination," Frederick said.

Michael Peck, director of youth services at the Los Angeles Suicide Prevention Center, studies young suicides in a county with a rate of 19 per 100,000 for 15-to 19-year-old males — highest in the country. In the 1960s, he says, the classic suicidal youth was lonely and isolated — whose death brought the statement, "Gee, we never really knew him." Now Peck sees a new suicidal group, more aggressive, delinquent, troublesome, including users of drugs and alcohol.

Peck and others believe a big factor in their inability to cope is confused child rearing.

"Years ago, when parents were consistent in teaching values and discipline, children knew where they stood. Today, parents are confused about their own roles and don't know whether to be a disciplinarian or a best friend," he said.

"Yet kids need something not rigid but stable."

He cites two typical cases: —A 17-year-old boy walks quietly into his bedroom and shoots himself in the head with his father's rifle.

Afterward his parents — both professionals with a stable marriage — couldn't name one of his friends. They said he loved school — he told friends he tolerated it. They said he loved to go hunting and fishing with his father — he told others he hated hunting.

"They didn't know their son," Peck said. "When he wanted to talk, they didn't want to listen and said he had no reason to be unhappy."

—A 15-year-old girl takes a fatal overdose of sleeping pills. Her parents were fighting all the time and threatening divorce. She became more frightened, upset and insecure, but every time she tried to talk with them they pushed her away.

She started taking tranquilizers and guiped an overdose, hoping they would rush to her side and be reunited over her misery. It didn't work. She tried again and "succeeded."

Parents, say the experts, need to listen to their children and to ask them how they feel. Everyone is unhappy from time to time, but if the unhappiness doesn't abate, it is time to seek professional help.

And there are signs that can mean danger: A change in behavior. A child stops bowling on Wednesdays, stops homework. He oversleeps. He can't sleep. He gives away a prized possession, like a baseball glove, and says, "Here, I won't need this anymore."

Sometimes, when a young person decides death is the answer, there is a sudden change from depression to seeming light heartedness.

"Suicidal people want to escape from the pain," says Peck. "but suicidal people don't want to die."

Homecoming At Church Planned

FARMVILLE — Homecoming and quarterly meeting services will be observed at St. James Free Will Baptist Church this weekend.

A business meeting will be held Friday night. Holy Communion services will be held Saturday night, with the 7:30 p.m. service given by the Rev. Amos Edwards and his choir.

The Sunday 11 a.m. sermon will be rendered by the Rev. C. R. Parker, pastor, with a musical program presented by the Cherry Lane, Smith Chapel and St. James choirs.

The Rev. A. L. Miller, choir and congregation of Zion Hill will close out the services at 3 p.m. Sunday. The public is invited to attend this weekend of services.

Missile Test Impact Studied

WASHINGTON (AP) — Flight tests for the advanced MX mobile intercontinental ballistic missile are expected to have "a minimal environmental impact" to the region around the test site, the Air Force says.

The $400 million program to flight test the missile will take place at Vandenberg Air Force Base in California. The Air Force submitted the impact statement to the Environmental Protection Agency on Tuesday. The Air Force noted that missile and space vehicles have been tested in the area for the past two decades.
