

An Offer By Israel

By LARRY THORSON
Associated Press Writer
JERUSALEM (AP) — Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan told Parliament today Israel is prepared to discuss the question of the ultimate sovereignty for the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

Israel also is willing to discuss a territorial compromise "if a concrete proposal is submitted." Dayan told the Knesset as he opened a debate on the Mideast situation.

The cabinet on Sunday rejected President Anwar Sadat's proposal that Israel return two areas of the Sinai Desert to Egypt as a goodwill gesture, but said it was willing to negotiate a trade for the northern coastal town of El Arish and Mount Sinai.

"Nobody can get something for nothing, and this will be the policy of Israel," Prime Minister Menachem Begin told reporters after the cabinet meeting. "No unilateral step is feasible by any country."

Dayan gave a 45-minute report on his meeting last week in Leeds Castle, England with Egyptian Foreign Minister Mohammed Ibrahim Kamel and U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance.

The Knesset corridors, meanwhile, were abuzz with the news that Commerce Minister Yigal Hurvitz, a hawk on the question of Mideast peace, had tendered his resignation over a budget proposal he regards as inflationary. Begin was trying to change Hurvitz' mind and smooth over the tiff between Hurvitz and Finance Minister Simha Ehrlich.

Dayan said the question of future sovereignty in the West Bank and Gaza is "the central gap between the Arab attitude and ours."

Israel's peace plan offers the Palestinian Arabs in the two occupied territories administrative autonomy, or limited self-rule, with continued presence of the Israeli army in these areas captured in the 1967 Mideast war.

"If Israel's proposal of administrative autonomy is accepted," Dayan said, "Israel is prepared ...to discuss after five years the question of the sovereignty over Judea and Samaria and the Gaza Strip." Judea and Samaria are the biblical names for the West Bank.

Egypt demands the return of these lands to Arab sovereignty and the withdrawal of Israeli troops to the pre-1967 borders "with minor rectifications," Dayan said.

Although Israel was willing to discuss a territorial compromise, Dayan said he had asked the Egyptian delegation at Leeds Castle if Egypt would agree to a compromise and they replied, "on no account, of course not."

Eighty Postal Strikers In New Jersey Are Fired

By The Associated Press

At least 80 striking postal employees have been fired in New Jersey, while in San Francisco union dissidents planned a campaign of roving picketing to show their discontent over a new contract.

Nearly half the morning shift workers at facilities in Jersey City and Kearney refused to work today, and union officials planned an afternoon meeting in New York to decide whether to sanction the wildcat strike, according to Robert Knoloe, a spokesman for the postal workers' union.

Roy Braunstein of Trenton, legislative liaison for the New Jersey Postal Workers Association, said the state organization at first did not sanction the wildcat walkout. But "now that brothers in the union have been terminated, we will have to reassess our position."

Twenty striking employees at the New York Bulk and Foreign Mail Center in Jersey City were fired Sunday and 60 more were fired overnight.

Meanwhile, postal workers vowed to send roving pickets to San Francisco area post offices in defiance of a judge's order to halt their wildcat strike.

An order temporarily enjoining "any further strike activity" at the San Francisco Bulk Mail Center, issued Sunday by U.S. District Judge Stanley Weigel, is "basically an intimidation tactic to try to break the strike and scare other workers," said Irwin Lum, shop steward for one of two union locals at the center.

"We'll be out there strong," he said, promising to surround the center, located in Richmond, Calif., with picket lines today.

Despite termination notices reportedly sent to at least 50 workers, union officials said they would increase picketing today with "roving pickets" at various bay area post offices. Ten union stewards were ordered by Weigel to appear in court today on the government's motion for a preliminary injunction against the strike. But Lum said the officials would be on the picket lines, with their attorneys representing them in court.

The two locals are branches of the American Postal Workers Union and the Mail Handlers Division of the Laborers International Union. They threw up their first picket lines Saturday morning.

The decision to defy the judge's order drew support from neighboring locals of the postal union in the east San Francisco Bay area and the National Association of Letter Carriers, which together represent some 1,800 east bay employees.

A meeting is scheduled this evening to decide if members of those two locals will walk out in support of the Richmond strike.

The Richmond center employs about 900 people and serves northern California, western Nevada, Hawaii, Arizona and the Pacific Trust territories.

The walkout has caused 24-hour delays in processing second, third and fourth class mail, foreign mail and military mail service. First class mail delivery has been unaffected.

Mail handling in Jersey City has been delayed one day, but Harry Nigro, regional communications director for the Postal Service, said Sunday, "There's no problem, the operation is operating."

As about 20 pickets marched outside the center's gates, 245 of 565 scheduled workers reported Sunday at 7 p.m.

No Soviet Objections To Shuttling Missiles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chief U.S. arms control negotiator says the Soviets have not objected to a U.S. strategy that would keep the Russians guessing the location of land-based missiles.

Paul Warnke said Sunday it has been understood for a year that both countries could deploy mobile missiles under a new arms limitation agreement that would last until 1985.

He denied a report in today's New York Times that an objection had been raised by Vladimir S. Semenov, the top Soviet arms negotiator. The Times said Semenov objected to the U.S. strategy in a private meeting with Warnke in Geneva.

"There has been no Soviet objection. For at least a year it has been recognized that both sides could have launchers of mobile missiles after the protocol period," Warnke said Sunday in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

Mobile missile deployment is prohibited in a three-year protocol now being negotiated, but not in a longer-term treaty that would limit overall numbers of missiles and bombers.

The latest round of strategic arms talks was held in Geneva earlier this month when Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance met for two days with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

It was widely reported that one of the points discussed was the United States' "shell game" strategy for mobile missiles.

Hundreds of missiles would be moved between thousands of empty launching silos in random fashion, complicating a Soviet effort to destroy U.S. land-based missiles in a first-strike attack.

According to unnamed Carter administration officials quoted by the Times, Semenov did not rule out U.S. mobile missile deployment. But he indicated some approaches — including the "shell game" strategy — would encounter resistance in Moscow.

But Warnke said the issue "wasn't discussed."

"There would have been no reason to bring it up," he said. "Both sides have the ability to deploy mobile launchers."

Suspect Prison Rioting Prompted By 'Example'

By The Associated Press

Georgia officials said today that a riot at the State Prison may have been prompted by an uprising one day earlier at an Illinois prison. A total of four guards and two inmates died in the two disturbances.

Both the Georgia institution at Reidsville and the Pontiac Correctional Center in Illinois were quiet today. "Tense but under control" was the description given by one Georgia official after Sunday's riot.

"Our feeling is this occurred because of the incident Saturday in Pontiac, Ill.," said Sara Passmore, spokeswoman for the Georgia Department of Offender Rehabilitation. She said it appeared from the outset that the riot was directed at the prison administration.

Two inmates and a guard died in the Georgia riot.

At the Illinois prison, three guards were killed and $3 million in damage was done in a seven-hour rampage by several hundred inmates. A clean-up of clothing and trash that littered the prison yard began.

The Georgia prison, beset by racial troubles and overcrowding, has suffered earlier outbreaks in which two inmates were killed and some 30 others injured.

Fears Tax Cut Impact

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the House Budget Committee says a Republican plan to cut taxes by one-third over three years would feed inflation, generate record deficits and boost interest rates.

Rep. Robert N. Giaimo, D-Conn., commented Sunday on what is known as the Kemp-Roth tax plan after it was analyzed by the Budget Committee staff.

Giaimo described it as a "pie-in-the-sky scheme, based on questionable economic premises which could have a devastating effect on the economy."

The budget committee staff used three different economic models in projecting the effect of the Republican tax cut proposal. All three predicted that inflation would accelerate and the federal budget deficit would soar to between $75 billion and $130 billion by 1981 if the Kemp-Roth bill became law.

While the plan was envisioned as reducing joblessness to between 2.1 percent and 5 percent, all three models predicted the proposal, if enacted, would strain personnel and industrial resources, producing, in turn, a negative effect on controlling inflation, the report said.

"In summary, the Kemp-Roth proposal would set off a huge surge in demand which would overwhelm our supply capacity and soon generate soaring deficits and roaring inflation," it stated.

The tax reductions called for in the proposal could be offset by federal spending cuts, but proponents of the plan have not suggested where cuts should be made, the report added.

Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., and William V. Roth, R-Del., are the chief sponsors of the tax reduction plan, which has gained widespread attention since California voters recently approved Proposition 13 to drastically reduce property taxes.

The Kemp-Roth proposal would lower personal income taxes in three steps from the present range of 14 percent to 70 percent to a range of 8 percent to 50 percent.

Small businesses would also be given a tax break by cutting the maximum corporate tax rate while raising the level of earnings at which full corporate income taxes must be paid from $50,000 to $100,000.

The plan would result in a tax cut of about $19 billion in fiscal 1979. The committee analysis said federal revenues would fall $53 billion in fiscal 1980 and $98 billion in fiscal 1981.

President Carter's rival tax cut proposal, scaled down from $25 billion to around $20 billion, is being studied in Congress. Carter's plan for lowering taxes involves changes in the tax laws in addition to the reduction.

A tax cut of this size and type would result in a deficit of between $25.8 billion and $37.6 billion by 1981, the committee analysis projected.

Beirut Battle Subsides After Lengthy Firing

By FAROWK NASSAR

By The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The latest outbreak of Syrian-Christian warfare in Beirut subsided into an uneasy lull at dawn today after nearly 36 hours of firing.

Christian spokesmen reported nine Christians killed and 62 wounded in 48 hours.

Traffic between the Moslem and Christian halves of the city resumed cautiously. But the Syrians' chief target, the Christian Hadass neighborhood in southeast Beirut, remained shuttered.

The firing started a few forest fires in the pine woods between the presidential palace and the residence of U.S. Ambassador Richard Parker, five miles east of Beirut. But a police spokesman said the fires were quickly extinguished, and neither the palace nor the embassy mansion 500 yards away were damaged.

The fighting began Saturday night in Hadass, subsided briefly at daybreak and erupted again in the afternoon. Shortly before dusk it spread to the Ashrafiyeh and Ein Rummaneh districts and the port area.

The Syrian command reported early today it was pounding Christian neighborhoods because militiamen were firing mortars from concealed positions.

The Syrians accused Christian militiamen of starting the trouble Saturday by shooting two Syrian soldiers on patrol. The Christian commands said their forces came under unprovoked fire from the Syrians.

One Christian spokesman said the Syrians were "fomenting the clashes on threadbare pretexts." Al Amal, the Phalange Party newspaper, said the Syrians "invented the sniper story, then shelled residential quarters indiscriminately."

The Syrians also accused the National Liberals and the Phalangists, the two biggest Christian parties, of "deliberately provoking Syrian forces."

Capital's Transit Still Crippled By Walkouts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commuters began a new week of huge traffic jams in scorching heat today as wildcat strikers continued to cripple the capital's transit system.

The walkout entered its fifth day as bus drivers, subway operators and mechanics defied a federal judge's back-to-work order and advice of their own union leaders to return.

Cody Pfantstiel, spokesman for the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority, said no more than 20 of the system's 1,600 buses were on the streets for the morning rush hour. Metro's rail system was shut down.

"For all intensive purposes, the transit system is non-existent this morning," he said.

On Saturday, U.S. District Judge Louis F. Oberdorfer ordered the workers to operate the buses and trains or face contempt of court citations. He threatened the strikers with fines and jail sentences.

With temperatures hitting 100 degrees and a pollution alert in effect Sunday, about 400 transit workers voted to continue the walkout.

They said they won't return until they're paid a 20-cent-an-hour cost-of-living increase due earlier this month, an issue that's scheduled for arbitration.

The workers also want amnesty for 180 Metro employees suspended by the transit system when they first walked off the job Thursday. Oberdorfer has given the union and Metro until today to show him an arbitration timetable that will settle the money issue by Aug. 6.

Crime Trend

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women are committing more crimes than ever before and the trend is likely to continue, according to a federally sponsored study released today.

Professor Rita J. Simon, head of the University of Illinois program on law and society, said "As you have more and more women working outside the home, they are getting jobs that place them in a position to embezzle or steal. With this larger female working force, it is simply a question of the law of averages."

Under a grant from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, professor Simon did a statistical survey on crimes committed by women and compared the results with statistics on women in the District of Columbia.

The study showed that women were arrested for 16 percent of the crimes committed nationally in 1975, compared with 10.8 percent in 1953. The percentage of women arrested for economic crimes rose six times in the 22-year period.

In 1953, 4.9 percent of the women arrested for serious crimes were charged with larceny and theft and 1.1 percent with embezzlement and fraud, the study showed. In 1975, the rates were 25.4 percent and 3.3 percent respectively.

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used. Transcribing is done once a day.

A HOTLINE APPEAL

FURNISHINGS NEEDED

Hotline has been asked to appeal for household furnishings and clothes for a family who had an explosion and fire in their home May 10. Milton and Bernice Carmon and their children have been living with relatives since the fire, but now have found a house. They need beds, pots and pans, tables and chairs, bed linens, blankets, towels and clothing for the three children.

There is a daughter with size 32 waist; a daughter junior size nine; and a daughter, child's size eight.

Gifts may be left at the Pitt Co. Dept. of Social Services, 709 Johnston Street. Inquiries may be made of them by calling 746-3147. Anything given the Carmons which cannot be used by them will be given to some else who can, they assure.

MAH JONG FEEDBACK

Maureen McGlohon says she knows of no Mah Jong group here, but would like to start one. She says she plays Wright Patterson rules and has a set and books to help beginners. Anyone interested in learning the game may call her at 756-6149, she says.

Several Hundred People Going On Tobacco Tour

Several hundred people representing all areas of the tobacco industry are expected to participate in the annual North Carolina State University-sponsored tour of on-farm tests in 17 counties beginning Tuesday.

The program begins tonight with a "Welcome Dinner" in Lumberton. Will Hanes, vice president of manufacturing, R. J. Reynolds, is the featured speaker, who will discuss the company's new promotional program, "Pride in Tobacco."

Tobacco growers, chemical and tobacco company representatives, county extension agents, members of the research and extension staff at N. C. S. U. and foreign guests will visit farm stops in Robeson, Columbus, Sampson, Harnett and Johnston Counties Tuesday.

Tuesday night, the annual banquet will be held in Durham. Horace Kornegay, president and executive director of the Tobacco Institute, Inc., Washington, D. C., will be the featured speaker.

Wednesday, tour stops will include a visit to the Duke Homestead and Tobacco Museum, as well as farms in Person, Franklin, Edgecombe, Wilson and Pitt Counties. Visitors will also have a chance to tour the Tobacco Research Station in Oxford.

Chap Tucker's farm, Kings Crossroad, will be the featured farm in Pitt County. A demonstration on mechanization will be held at his farm.

A "twilight tour" of Speight Seed Farm, Winterville, will round up Wednesday's activities.

Test locations and farm visits in Jones, Lenoir and Wayne Counties will be toured Thursday before the farewell luncheon.

Furney Todd, N. C. S. U. extension plant pathologist and director of the event, says the tour is designed to acquaint all participants with the latest information on tobacco disease control and general production. Growers, dealers and other interested persons are encouraged to attend any or all of the on-farm tours.

County extension agents request that those planning to attend any of the evening functions contact the extension office.

Differences Still Remain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance says the fundamental differences between Egypt and Israel were not narrowed at last week's foreign ministers' meeting in Britain.

But Vance said the ministers did talk about Israeli security and commented, "To that extent, I think it was positive. We have at least begun to open up the dialogue on that." The secretary spoke on the ABC interview program, "Issues and Answers."

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — William H. Gleysteen presented his credentials to President Park Chung-hee today, succeeding Richard Sneider as U.S. ambassador to South Korea.

Gleysteen, a career diplomat, last served as deputy assistant secretary of state for east Asia and Pacific affairs.

Chute Fails, Soldier Dies

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — A soldier plunged to his death Sunday when his parachute apparently failed to open during a jump session by a sport parachute club. Army officials said. The name of the victim was withheld pending notification of relatives.

A spokesman said the accident, the second involving parachutes in less than a week at Fort Bragg, happened when members of the 18th Airborne Corps Sport Parachute Club were jumping from a military plane over the Normandy landing zone on the base.

He said the victim's main and reserve chutes apparently failed to open.

Two soldiers were injured last Tuesday when their parachutes became entangled and failed to fully inflate during a military exercise being observed by Army Secretary Clifford L. Alexander Jr.

Spec. 4 Kenneth Darnell of Yanceyville was seriously injured and Spec. 4 Jarvis J. Johnson of Red Springs was hurt in the accident Tuesday.

Pitt Saving Bonds Figures

Sales of Series E and H Savings Bonds in Pitt County during the first half of 1978 were $403,946, according to R. W. Howard, county volunteer chairman.

Howard said that the six months total represented 45.2 percent of the county's goal of $894,250 for the year.

Savings Bonds sales in North Carolina rose to $62,522,280 for the first six months of 1978, Howard reported, a 15 percent increase over the same period last year and the highest six-month total since 1945.

Nationally, E and H Bonds sales amounted to $4.28 billion for the first six months of 1978, four percent higher than in 1977.

The FARM SCENE

LEROY JAMES
County Extension Chairman

The U. S. soybean crop last year was worth over $10 billion. That figure puts soybeans into the top 20 of all U. S. businesses—comparable to U. S. Steel and other giants—in terms of sales volumes.

Growth of soybean markets has been simply amazing. Just a few years ago, we were growing three-fourths billion bushels a year in the nation. Everyone figured we'd smother under a mountain of cheap dirt beans if annual production ever reached the one billion mark. Now, we're yearly crops in excess of one and a half billion.

The key to the booming soybean business has been exports. A whopping six out of every 10 U.

S-produced bushels goes overseas.

For example, on any given day, about 40 ships loaded with U. S. beans are plowing through the oceans en route to overseas customers. Without the foreign earning power of soybeans, the drain of U. S. dollars to buy foreign materials like oil, autos and televisions would be a gaping wound that would threaten the stability of the economic world.

According to officials, Europe is the biggest soybean customer. These countries buy four million dollars' worth of U. S. soybeans each day.

Our market share is also on the rise. In 1968, the U. S. supplied 31 percent of Europe's soybean requirements. By 1976, this share had climbed to 59 percent.

Accounting for nearly half of the total U. S. soybean exports last year, Europe is likely to stay our No. 1 customer for some time, according to experts.

In the Middle East, Iran has pushed to the forefront among developing nations. As the world's fourth largest oil producer, the country had a gross national product of $81 billion last year. Forty percent of this income came directly from oil.

The soybean producer leaders found a somewhat different picture in Egypt. The immediate roadblock standing in the way of stepped-up use of soy products in Egypt is lack of buying power. Per capita annual income is only $300. This compares with $2,400 in Iran, $6,780 in Belgium and $7,890 in the U. S.

We must keep on developing new markets and then produce beans to meet the demand. That has been the thrust of the soybean program all along. It's working well, and we need to keep it going.

DO YOU REALLY OWN LAND?

Do you really own the land you live on? Yes, but not unconditionally. There's no question that you, your family, and heirs have strong historic rights to your own land. You can build on it, dig in it, keep others away from it, sell it, give it away, or borrow on it.

But your rights do not override certain public rights. A utility company may buy rights-of-way for power lines. The telephone company may have the right to a five-foot easement for poles along your backlot line. Similar easements are purchased or granted for local electric power lines, underground sewer piping, natural gas lines, and water supply piping. You should know about all easements, rights and claims made on your land while you are living on it. This is the reason for a title search prior to purchase. When it's completed, you'll know if you title to the property is, or is not, free and clear of all "encumbrances" and, if not, what they are.

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please phone or drop in at BLOUNT & BALL REALTY CO., 201 E. Arlington Blvd., Greenville, Phone: 756-3000. We're here to help!

Teen's Mother Fears She's Lost Control

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My 14-year-old daughter wants to be "trusted" and I would like nothing better than to trust her, but she has lied to me so many times I have lost count. Last Friday she asked if she could spend the night at a girlfriend's house, so I let her. When I checked with the friend's mother, she told me that HER daughter was supposed to be staying HERE!

My daughter lies to me about where she goes, who she's been with, and just about everything she does. I am worried sick about her. I have tried to get her to go to a counselor, but she won't go.

I am a divorcee, work full time, and have cut my own social life to a minimum in order to be here when she wants me. But she's never around, and I am completely shut out. Please help me.

HELPLESS MOM

DEAR HELPLESS: You are not helpless. Counseling is available for parents who have lost control. You need to learn how to deal with a child who learned long ago how to manipulate you. Your local Family Service Association offers excellent counseling. And if there's a Parents Anonymous in your area, contact them, too.

DEAR ABBY: I love to play Bingo, and I play every chance I get. I hardly ever win, and it really runs into money when you play as often as I do. My landlord told me if I wanted to win at Bingo, I should get myself a book and study up on it. I have never heard of a book on Bingo, but if there is such a book, can you tell me where I can buy a copy?

E. B.: WINONA, MINN.

DEAR E. B.: I think your landlord is putting you on. Bingo is strictly a game of chance, and if there is a book on how to win at Bingo, I've never seen it.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter was married in a church. We went to a great deal of expense and effort to make her wedding as lovely as possible, and it would have been perfect, had it not been spoiled by a crying baby!

The baby's parents insisted on bringing their 10-month-old child to the ceremony, and when she started to cry and fuss, instead of taking her out of the room immediately, they allowed her to cry until her cries became hysterical screams! It was terribly distracting for those who were trying to keep their attention on the ceremony. Needless to say, it wasn't the baby's fault.

It's too late for us, because my daughter's wedding ceremony has already been ruined, but I hope you will print this so others will realize that children who are too young to understand the importance of keeping quiet do not belong at a church wedding.

MOTHER OF THE BRIDE

DEAR MOTHER: I have mentioned this in my column several times, and the number of letters I have received saying, "Babies belong in church" was astonishing. (P.S. I've visited the Mormon church and congratulated them on the good manners and respectfulness of their wee ones.)

CONFIDENTIAL TO "DAFT" (DEAR ABBY FANS TOGETHER): Your loyalty is deeply appreciated, but your devotion is embarrassing. I don't deserve it. Enough, please.

Are your problems too heavy to handle alone? Let Abby help you. For a personal, unpublished reply, write: Abby; Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Disprove Cancer Due Sweeteners

By C.G. McDaniel
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — The moderate amounts of artificial sweeteners used by human beings do not cause cancer, a major study in Baltimore has concluded.

The Baltimore study involved 519 patients with bladder cancer at 19 Baltimore-area hospitals between 1972 and 1975. It also involved 519 other people, called controls, who were matched for age, sex and other factors but did not have bladder cancer.

Since the government banned cyclamates in 1970 and restricted the use of saccharin in 1972, there has been much controversy, especially among those who use these sweeteners in diabetic diets or to control obesity.

The government actions came after studies of laboratory rats showed that dosages of the sweeteners — far in excess of those used by human beings — caused bladder cancer.

But the Baltimore study, conducted by Dr. Irving Kessler, now of the University of Maryland school of medicine, and J. Page Clark at Johns Hopkins University, showed that the relevance of animal tests to the problem of cancer development in humans is unclear.

"Species and strains within species differ widely in their response to the same environmental agents," Kessler and Clark said.

They conclude in a report published in the July 28 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association that the ingestion of artificial sweeteners, at least at moderate dietary levels, is not associated with an increased risk of bladder cancer.

In their study, Kessler and Clark questioned cancer patients and the matched controls about their consumption of artificial sweeteners in carbonated and non-carbonated soft drinks, iced tea and other liquids, and in salad dressings, candy, ice cream, pastry, gelatin, chewing gum and other foods.

Both patients and controls were questioned also about smoking habits, occupational history, diabetes and other factors that might have been involved.

Those who conducted the interviews did not know which subjects were cancer patients, and which were not. They found no significant difference in the amounts of food or beverages containing cyclamate or saccharin consumed by the patients or the controls.

Plan Appeal Duke Ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group opposed to plans by Duke Power Co. to build a nuclear generating plant on the Yadkin River in North Carolina are planning to appeal a ruling by the Atomic Safety and Licensing Board.

The board said in a decision issued July 14 that the dangers posed by radon-222, a substance some believe can cause cancer when present at low levels, are "insignificant in striking the cost-benefit balance for Power Station."

Radon-222, a radioactive gas, seeps from tailing pipes at uranium mining and milling sites.

Dr. Chauncey Kepford, a chemist from Pennsylvania, testified before the staff of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission last month that the government has ignored evidence that the Perkins plant in Davie County would contribute to many more cancer deaths than previously believed. The NRC staff and medical and atomic experts claim Kepford exaggerated the danger of the substance.

Duke suffered a setback last month when the Nuclear Regulatory Commission ordered its staff to make another analysis of alternative sites for the Perkins plant.

Miss Goodson, Mr. Bunn Couple Weds In Winterville Church

Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church was the setting for the wedding ceremony of Deborah Ann Goodson and Henry Bennett Bunn Sunday at 4:00 p.m.

The double ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Willis R. Stevens and the Rev. James Bailey. A program of wedding music was presented by Mickey Terry, organist. Mrs. Todd Pair sang "Evergreen," "The Wedding Song" and "The Wedding Prayer."

The church altar was adorned with two vases of white gladioli and majestic daisies. On either side of the altar were two half moon candelabra with greenery intertwined. Two spiral candelabra completed the setting.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Higgs Goodson and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Joseph Bunn Sr., all of Greenville.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Donna Goodson, of Greenville was her sister's maid of honor. Bridesmaids included Diane Goodson, sister of the bride, Sharon Goodson, cousin of the bride, and Cassie Deyton, all of Greenville. Mrs. Roger Herald of Salem, Va., and Barbara Lackey of Paducah, Ky.

Mike Bateman of Washington was best man and ushers included Chuck Bunn, brother of the bridegroom, Wayne Renn, Rusty Purser, Lee Cherry and Joe Goodson Jr., brother of the bride, all of Greenville.

The bride wore her mother's wedding gown of chantilly lace over satin designed with a scooped neckline appliqued with sequins and seed pearls. The full skirt extended into a chapel train. She wore a fingertip length illusion veil edged in lace to complement her gown. Her veil was held in place by a Juliet cap of imported lace and seed pearls, also worn by her mother. The bride carried a colonial bouquet of white daisies, roses, gypsophylla, a touch of yellow silk daisies and silk bluebell blossoms and greenery tied with long satin ecru streamers.

The honor attendant was dressed in a formal length gown of maize dotted voile designed with an open portrait neckline, fitted empire bodice and modified A-line skirt styled with a deep ruffled flounce at the hemline. The sleeveless gown was complemented by a short bolero jacket featuring short caplet sleeves and styled with ruffled crystal pleated edging. She wore a maize braid garden hat enhanced by an overlay brim of maize organza encircled with miniature silk flowers and centered in back with a maize Dior bow.

The attendants wore identical dresses and hats. The bridesmaids carried natural clustered bouquets of white and yellow daisies, gypsophylla, blue silkbell blossoms and greenery tied with matching satin streamers. The maid of honor carried a bouquet of white and yellow daisies, gypsophylla, blue silkbell blossoms and greenery tied with white satin streamers.

The mother of the bride wore a formal length mauve quiana dress with a flowing draped neckline, braided belt and full skirt. She wore a dusty rose orchid at her waist. The mother of the bridegroom selected a powder blue floor length crepe dress with long chiffon sleeves. It was complemented by a lace waistband. She wore a white orchid corsage.

After a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, S. C., the couple will live in Greenville.

Both the bride and bridegroom are graduates of J. H. Rose High School. The bride is a graduate of St. Mary's College, Raleigh, and is presently a senior accounting major at ECU. The bridegroom is employed at Eaton Corp.

A garden reception was held at the home of the bride after the ceremony.

The four tiered wedding cake was served on the patio. There was a yellow canvas covering in the yard which featured white parachutes draped underneath and bunting on the ends. The refreshment table was centered with a summer garden arrangement. The yard was decorated with lampposts filled with summer flowers and greenery highlighting the patio and sidewalk.

Assisting in greeting guests were Dr. and Mrs. Charles Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Phil Goodson and Mr. and Mrs. Billy Goodson.

Quick Cooking Is Popular

NEW YORK (UPI) — Fast-cooking recipes such as oriental stir-fried and rangetop skillet dishes are challenging the popularity of oven casseroles in American home kitchens, says Richard Guha, marketing director for a Chicago-based food manufacturer.

Speaking at a New York City awards lunch for a recipe contest, Guha attributed the trend to growing numbers of working women who also keep house. He said many of the fast-cooking contest entries combined processed convenience products with fresh foods.

Chicken and ground beef were the most popular economy dish ingredients for day-to-day cooking, he said, and shrimp, lobster, clams, salmon and other expensive seafood were popular for party menus.

Birthrates Down Throughout World

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Population Institute sees clear signs of a worldwide decline in fertility. Birthrates have fallen by about 15 percent in about 40 countries since the 1960s, the institute says. Those countries account for about half the population of the developing world. The decline has occurred primarily in the smaller, predominantly island, countries, the institute added.

Silent On Postal Rate Future

A nation which is already much dissatisfied with its mail service, has mercifully been spared the agony of a postal workers strike.

Postal Service and worker representatives reached a settlement Friday morning as the deadline for a possible strike came and went.

The best that can be said for the settlement is that it avoids a stoppage of the mails. The postal workers will not only get cost of living increases over the next three years but substantial percentage increases on top of that. The no-layoff provision not only lowers the incentive of individual workers to improve the mail service, it also hampers the Postal Service in its efforts to inroduce labor saving equipment.

Postmaster General William F. Bolger said the settlement was "very fair" and should insure no increase in mail rates for the next 2½ to three years. Left unsaid was anything about postal rates which have soared over the past ten to 15 years.

Avoiding a postal strike was important short range; however with the settlement made we don't see any hope in the future for improving mail service or reducing the huge costs of moving the mails. We are all for fair wages and benefits for the postal workers, but it is equally important that the nation have a Postal Service which moves the mails quickly and is cost efficient.

Research Funds Back In The Picture

The U. S. Senate Agriculture Appropriations subcommittee has agreed to appropriation of funds for continued tobacco research at the Oxford Tobacco Production Research Station.

Anti-tobacco forces were once threatening these activities and the funds were left out of the original administration budget recommendations. The funds were restored in the House, however, and favorable Senate action now seems assured.

The tobacco research facility does a lot of good, and eliminating the funds couldn't have helped anybody. Thankfully the appropriations are moving through Congress.

'Prop 13' Missed Point

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Governmental officials — local and state — protest too much that North Carolina is different from California; so taxpayers here have no incentive to join the taxpayer revolt.

Much is made of the fact that property taxes in this state aren't anywhere near so high as those which pushed Proposition 13 across and created an atmosphere plaguing politicians everywhere.

The North Carolina League of Municipalities felt compelled to broadside the issue, stating emphatically that "Taxpayers in North Carolina municipalities do not face the same tax pressure which ignited the approval of massive tax cuts in California."

The point is not, however, property taxes.

The point is governmental taxing, spending, waste, duplication and oppressive regulation.

In true bureaucratic fashion, government's response to the people harboring dreams of relief and pushing for reform has been: cut our dollars and we'll cut those vital services you demand.

Historically, government's explanation for increased spending is "public demand" for services.

It isn't a cut in vital services which people are seeking.

Wasteful

It is a cut in taxing too much to take in too many dollars to hire too many people to do too many jobs which citizens aren't even certain need to be done.

The response that services will be cut has been labeled the "Washington Monument" syndrome... threaten to close down that symbolic and popular tourist attraction and the protestors will back off.

Perhaps the California initiative missed the mark a little. Rather than striking a blow at taxes by installing a ratio of tax rates to property values, citizens enlisting in the war on waste would do well to focus on governmental waste.

The League of Municipalities, further along in that explanation of this state's favorable tax position, hits upon a valuable point for Tar Heels to consider: "Citizens here pay 71.4 percent of their state and local taxes to the state, much of which the state then shares with local governments." In short, your property taxes may be low, but your state sales and income taxes are high because the state collects the money for more things here than in California.

BILL NOBLITT

The proper target, then, becomes state government; and the appropriate focus becomes waste and governmental employees where up to 80 percent of the state budget is spent (salaries, fringes, and other direct expenditures on people).

A ratio of bureaucrats to privately employed taxpayers might suggest a more effective method of bringing governmental spending under control. The ratio currently (federal, state and local) is one governmental employee for every five private workers.

Vital Jobs

Would cutting governmental payrolls cut vital ser-

VICES?

What taxpayers see as vital are good teachers in decent classrooms with adequate supplies and equipment; reasonably well paved roads; police and fire protection; garbage collection; and health services.

Not so vital are the ranks of planners, supervisors, administrators, report writers, file clerks public relations people — a long line of bureaucrats reading and interpreting regulations, enforcing paperwork and safety rules, and otherwise implementing time-consuming and money-wasting programs on the citizens.

Even classroom teachers and the pothole patchers join citizens in protesting the army of supervisors and planners and clerks and bureaucratic overload which complicate their lives and duties.

The point of Proposition 13 being overlooked, or belittled, by government is a rapidly growing citizen dissatisfaction with governmental waste and mismanagement regardless of its relative size from one locale to another. Waste, however small, is the appropriate target.

The Half-Fare Phobia

WASHINGTON — There are many people who are afraid to fly, and psychiatrists and hypnotists are now holding courses to rid these men and women of their fears.

While a great deal of attention is being paid to the problem, there are still other people who are only afraid to fly with children (not their own). Fear of flying with children has been named "half-fare phobia," by Prof. Heinrich Applebaum, who is the only one doing work in this field.

"Most of my patients are closet half-fare phobics," he told me. "They are afraid to admit they can't stand children on airplanes. These people don't hate children. They just freeze up when they have to sit next to one."

"How do you treat them?" I asked the professor.

He took me into a large room that looked exactly like the tourist-class cabin of a 727.

"We simulate the exact conditions of a flight," Applebaum said.

In the cabin were 33 men and women, all Applebaum's patients.

Most of them appeared to be very normal. Some were reading books, others were knitting, and a few were wat-

Other Editors Say Breaking Rules

(The Raleigh Times)

ERA forces quite correctly regard as a decisive victory the House Judiciary Committee's vote to extend the deadline for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment.

The breakthrough in the committee paves the way for a vote in the House which is expected to approve the compromise which calls for extending the ratification date by three years, three months and eight days. A tough Senate fight is expected.

As a bonus to ERA advocates, the committee voted down an amendment that would have allowed states to rescind their approval.

We view the ERA issue without the high-pitched emotion that its opponents and advocates have carried into the struggle. Existing laws establishing women's rights are beginning to be felt in this country. But it is quite possible that an ERA amendment could speed up the process without creating the dire damages that anti-ERA extremists prophesy.

What we have opposed, and still do, is changing the rules of the game. Congress adopted a seven-year limitation for ratification that ends next March. The movement seems stalled with 35 of the required 38 states ratified and four state legislatures — Kentucky, Tennessee, Nebraska, Idaho — having voted to rescind their earlier ratification.

Now it appears that Congress, yielding to ERA lobbyists, is playing the role of the spineless coach responding to kids who have lost their ball game, saying, "We're sorry you didn't win, we'll extend the game three more innings." No wonder anti-ERA forces are incensed.

But more important is the precedent set if the ERA extension carries in the House and Senate. What about future amendments? Will the deadline set at the start be honored? Or will an extension be granted, depending on which side loses? ERA extension makes a liar of Congress.

So why have a deadline in the first place? Why not allow as much time as is needed for ratification of any amendment?

Such a plan should provide that states that have ratified an amendment have a right to change their minds just as long as they change them before the magic number for ratification is realized.

As things are and appear to be headed now, ERA opponents stand to be victims of poor umpiring in a game which all along has been marred by generally poor sportsmanship on both sides.

THE INSIDE REPORT

A Puzzled Visiting Bishop

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Bishop Abel Muzorewa, undoubtedly Rhodesia's most popular political figure, was in a state of distraught perplexity last week when he collided with U.S. policy on Africa as crafted by Andrew Young.

Muzorewa was not surprised by the cold-shoulder treatment from administration officials during his visit to Washington, even though he is the most important black in the biracial Rhodesian transitional government. What baffled the bishop was insistence on keeping economic sanctions against Rhodesia even though the white minority regime of Prime Minister Ian Smith finally has accepted black majority rule.

"Your government's policy is not realistic, to say the least, and remains very puzzling to me," Muzorewa told us over tea in his Mayflower Hotel suite. Ignored by the administration, the bishop is forced to swim in the quagmire of the U.S. Senate in a desperate quest for some U.S. recognition of the moderates in Rhodesia.

The Carter administration policy that so puzzled Muzorewa is explained candidly in the official State Department statement opposing an end to sanctions against trade with Rhodesia. The anti-sanctions amendment sponsored by North Carolina's Sen. Jesse Helms "would damage our relations throughout Africa and reduce our ability to urge a fair settlement on the Patriotic Front."

That is the heart of Ambassador Young's African policy: satisfy Africa's one-party states (most socialist and many Marxist) and the Patriotic Front's Soviet-armed guerrillas who want power but not elections. This puts a low priority on Muzorewa's hopes for a pro-Western democracy where a place for minority whites is reserved.

Indeed, the administration's officials look the other way when the bishop, a certified African nationalist, comes to Washington. President Carter would not think of seeing him. At this writing, national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski could not find time for him. Nobody at the State Department asked to see him; but Muzorewa, after four fruitless meetings with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, was not anxious to visit the State Department.

Far from ushering the bishop into the Oval Office, the administration flinched at even permitting him into the country this time. His entry visa was snarled in red tape until the State Department learned that Muzorewa was to meet with the Washington Post editorial board, which untied the bureaucratic knots.

With the administration adamant against the transition government, Muzorewa had to turn to the Helms amendment to end Rhodesian sanctions. The amendment failed in the Senate earlier this month on a surprisingly close 48-to-42 vote but will be offered again next week.

Muzorewa's experience is poignant. He came to Washington in years past to lobby for sanctions "so that we could bring Ian Smith to his knees." Now that Smith has finally accepted black majority rule (partly because of economic pressure generated by the sanctions), the Americans do not want to suspend them.

The reason for some senators is suspicion of Ian Smith. Thus Muzorewa finds himself defending his old blood enemy, telling senators that Smith has bowed to reality and proved a cooperative partner in the transition government. Besides defending Smith, the bishop must refute State Department horror stories of deteriorating conditions in Rhodesia, where intelligence reports actually show internal security not greatly different from six months ago.

There is yet another problem. Sens. Henry M. Jackson and Daniel Patrick Moynihan, moderate Democrats who do not disguise their contempt for the Andy Young African policy, voted against the Helms amendment the first time and may do so again. Muzorewa has had trouble even making an appointment with Moynihan.

The reason is less Ian Smith than Jesse Helms. Moderate Democrats feel the bishop is sinking in the Senate quagmire because he is spon-

Strength For Today

WITHIN A WALL
Regardless of what we may believe about predestination as applied to the life of individuals, certainly we live our lives within a perimeter of limited possibilities. It is probably best expressed in the statement found in the Bible: "Behold, I set before you this day life and good, death and evil."

We can have life and good, or death and evil. We are perfectly free to choose between them. But the framework within which we choose is rigid and unyielding. We cannot have life and evil, nor will we have good and death. These elements do not go together because the universe is not built that way. Man seems to have a certain freedom of choice, but he has it within the prescribed order built into the universe.

This order consists of God's moral requirements which we cannot break or transgress. But the greatness of His mercy consists in the revelation through Christ that we can have life, if we want it.

Investment In A Likely Fantasy

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Banks do it. Stock brokers do it. Mutual fund and insurance salesmen do it.

What they do is suggest to long-term investors or savers an education for their children or a comfortable retirement, knowing that the leavening of taxes and inflation may make such goals mere fantasy.

In the free enterprise world we tend to accept such hyperbole as a consequence of the competitive effort and the reasonable tendency of competitors to create the happiest picture possible.

But what should we think when Uncle Sam also plays the game through U.S. Savings Bonds, of which there are outstanding some $79 billion worth, owned by 25 million households, or roughly one in three?

"Americans earn over $4 billion in interest yearly on their savings bonds," the Savings Bond Division states. But not a word about 10 percent inflation that reduces it to a multibillion dollar loss.

"Here's how your dollars for education grow in Series E Bonds," Uncle Sam announces in a brochure designed to encourage bond purchasers as a way to meet rising tuition costs.

If you buy a $37.50 bond each month from the time your child is born to age 18 you will have accumulated, based on current 6 percent interest, a total of $14,260.94. Before inflation.

What rate of inflation should prevail during the next 18 years? The current rate of about 10 percent seems unlikely. What about half that? Too much? Then

Govm't Shuns Skunks

By Hugh A. Mulligan
AP Special Correspondent

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Lady in a nearby town (unlisted, terra incognita, name withheld to protect the guilty, after the custom of the age) says she has a skunk in her garbage can.

Lady calls the dog warden. "A skunk? Can't help you, lady, we only handle dogs."

"But it can't get out, and I don't know how long it's been there. We've been away for the weekend."

"Sorry, lady. If it was a dog, we'd come right out. Why don't you call the police?"

Lady calls the police.

"A skunk! Heh-heh-heh. We catch lots of them. Is it the two-legged kind?"

"What? Of course not, but the poor thing can't get out and we don't want to get too near it..."

"Wish I could help you, lady, but two-legged skunks are the only kind we deal with and we got all we can handle right now. Why don't you ring the firehouse? They're always getting cats out of trees and down from telegraph poles."

Lady calls the Volunteer Fire Company.

"A skunk? Gee, it wouldn't be fair to call the boys out for something like that. They been up most of the night saving the abandoned brick factory. Why don't you just tip the can over?"

"I'm afraid he might... well, you know..."

"Do his thing? Let go?"

"Yes..."

"They only do that when they're scared..."

"I don't know how scared he is, but I sure am and I don't want to get that close..."

"Tell you what you do, lady, call the game warden. That sounds like his department..."

Lady phones the game warden.

"A skunk? I'm afraid that's not classified as a game animal. Now if it was a deer or a fox or a mountain lion, we'd get right on it..."

"You mean you'd come if it were a racoon in the trash can?"

"Racoons don't get stuck like that. Too smart. They'd tip the can over first. Had four of them around our place the other night. Damndest thing you ever saw. One stood guard, two pryed open the steel door of the garbage bin and held it open wide enough for the fourth to squeeze in. What a mess..."

"Yes, and it's going to be quite a mess here, if someone doesn't do something soon about that skunk in my garbage can. You don't have Howard Jarvis' phone number, do you?"

"Who?"

"Howard Jarvis."

"You mean that nut case out in California who campaigns for lower property taxes..."

"It's called proposition 13..."

"I know all about it, lady. And you'd be the first to scream when they start cutting back services. People have got used to their government doing everything for them. You can't turn the clock back, lady. But look, call us anytime. That's what we're here for. And good luck with that skunk..."

Oh yes, about that skunk. The lady threw an old blanket cautiously over the side of the can and it got out without government intervention.

James Earl Ray Asking UN Ambassador's Help

PETROS, Tenn. (AP) — James Earl Ray, still trying to win a new trial for the 1968 killing of civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr., has asked the help of United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young.

Ray sent a letter — in which he said he is a political prisoner — to Young after meeting Friday at Brushy Mountain State Penitentiary with four congressmen on the House Assassinations Committee.

"Since Memphis is a lot closer than Moscow, I ask you to meet with President Carter and ask him to request that I be given a new trial," Ray said in his letter to Young. "Those trials in Moscow may be unfair and completely political but at least the defendants there have a trial. For 10 years, that is all that I have asked for."

The U.N. ambassador recently aroused the ire of Carter and some of the nation's diplomats when he said the United States has its own political prisoners. The statement came during the recent Moscow trials of dissidents Anatoly Shcharansky and Alexander Ginzburg. Young later clarified his remarks.

Young was one of King's aides and was with him at the Lorraine Motel in Memphis when King was killed by a rifle shot on April 4, 1968, during a municipal garbage strike.

In exchange for a 99-year prison term rather than the death penalty, Ray pleaded guilty in 1969 to killing King. But Ray tried to withdraw the plea three days after entering it. He has been trying ever since to win a new trial, denying he fired the shot that killed King. State and federal courts, including the U.S. Supreme Court, have turned down Ray's appeals.

He met Friday with Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, assassinations committee chairman, and three other congressmen. Ray later told reporters that his testimony at next month's Washington hearing may include previously unreleased information about King's death. Ray declined to provide any details.

He has met with the committee's staff eight times in the past two years behind the East Tennessee prison's walls. Ray's attorney, assassinations buff Mark Lane, said he had to evade efforts by Stokes and the others to subpoena testimony from Ray in private Friday.

Stokes and the committee's staff denied that they planned to subpoena testimony Friday from Ray but declined comment about what was said at the meeting. Other committee members there were Reps. Samuel Devine, R-Ohio; Robert Edgar, D-Pa., and Harold Sawyer, R-Mich.

With Ray was his brother, Jerry; Lane and Memphis attorney Duncan Ragsdale, one of Lane's associates.

Ray said the congressmen did not ask him specifically about the King assassination. Instead, he said, the meeting focused on what areas his testimony will cover and details for transporting him to Washington.

Sees 'Political Prisoner' Role

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — The Montgomery Advertiser quoted death row inmate John

Harris today as saying he is a "political prisoner" who was sentenced to the electric chair because he fought for prisoners' rights.

But he says he would not consider being swapped for a Russian dissident.

While American newspapers have given much attention recently to the trials in Russia of Anatoly Shcharansky, Alexander Ginzburg and Viktoras Pyatkus, the Soviet press has played up Harris' battle to escape the electric chair.

Some newspapers have suggested swapping the black inmate in Alabama for one of the Russian dissidents.

But the Advertiser quoted Harris as saying, "to leave this country and go to another country doesn't prove my innocence, and that's why I want to stay here and fight these cases to the end. I couldn't do that from Russia."

However, he said "I do appreciate the support of the Russian people."

People Didn't Care - Patty

CHICAGO (AP) — "I just try not to be bitter," says Patricia Hearst from the federal prison where she is completing a term for armed bank robbery. "I try to look at the good side of this."

... A lot of things have happened to me that I don't suppose will ever happen to anyone else," Miss Hearst said in a copyright interview with columnist Bob Greene published in the Chicago Tribune on Sunday.

"And because of that, I've grown," the 24-year-old newspaper heiress said. "I'm in prison now, but I'm still learning and I'm still growing and I just try not to let it get me down."

Miss Hearst, who entered the Federal Correctional Institution at Pleasanton, Calif., in May to complete a seven-year sentence after losing all appeals, says she no longer likes the nickname "Patty."

"It's just something from a bizarre headline" about her experiences with her Symbionese Liberation Army kidnappers, she said. "I don't think it's me anymore. I'm someone else. And Patty ... well, Patty is just that person in the headlines."

She said that during her ordeal first as captive, then fugitive and then defendant in a highly publicized trial, "it was hard for me to accept that there were so many people who didn't care. And yet if I take myself back to when I was 19, maybe I wouldn't have been much different from them."

"... I guess maybe I'm trying to figure out a way to see why people didn't care about me ...," she said.

"Part of it had to do with my grandfather (publisher William Randolph Hearst). A lot of people just hated the man, and because of that, the hatred carried on to me."

"Part of it came from people thinking I'd get off too easily. First it was, 'Oh, she'll get away with this, she'll never go to trial.' Then it was, 'Oh, she'll never go to prison.' Then it was, 'Oh she'll beat it on appeal. Then it was, 'Oh, she's out on bond, she'll never go back.'"

"And now ... now the same people are saying, 'I never thought this would happen to you.'" death for the killing of a prison guard during a riot at Fountain Correctional Center in January 1974, but his conviction is still being challenged in the courts.

Because he already was serving five life terms for rape, he was tried under a seldom-used 19th century law which makes the death penalty mandatory for anyone convicted of first degree murder while under a life sentence.

Prison officials have refused to let reporters interview Harris, but the Advertiser said the inmate gave written answers to a list of questions submitted through his attorney, Clint Brown of Mobile.

"I am a political prisoner," Harris wrote. "I received the death penalty conviction not because I committed murder, but because of my participation in the prisoners' rights movement" at Fountain.

In past court appearances, the condemned inmate said he was forced to take part in the 1974 prison riot. But in answering the Advertiser's questions, he says:

"Since I have been in prison, I have worked with the prisoners' rights movement in trying to bring about changes for better conditions, shorter working hours, and in protesting bodily abuse such as beatings and being placed in the doghouse (a small bare cell) without clothes or bed facilities."

"That," he says, "is the main reason actions such as hunger strikes, work stoppages and the taking of hostages had to be resorted to."

He says the 1974 riot "was a direct result of fear that prison authorities were getting ready to kill prisoner activists."

Approve ESC To Operate Program

WASHINGTON — The Mid-East Commission board last week approved the Employment Security Commission to operate the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act program in each of the five counties in the Mid-East region.

The commission board also approved Martin County Community Action Committee to service programs in Martin County, the Choanoke Area Development Association to operate programs in Bertie and Hertford Counties, and Pitt Technical Institute to work directly with Pitt County.

It was announced at the session that the Pitt County Health Department has received a $30,000 grant from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to deliver family planning services to teenagers for medical, educational and outreach services.

The Pitt Board of Health and the Board of County Commissioners must approve final plans and objectives of the project.

The Mid-East Board also approved the Area Plan on Aging, which identified the use of some $185,000 in grant funds for the region.

An Historic Preservation Survey and Planning Budget was presented and approved at the meeting. The proposal will be submitted to the N.C. Department of Cultural Resources in an effort to obtain funding for Historic Preservation Planning.

Aquathon To Raise Funds

AYDEN — The Ayden Golf and Country Club will sponsor an aquathon for Easter Seals on Aug. 5, 13 and 14.

Proceeds from the event, which is open only to country club members, will be donated to the Pitt County Easter Seal Society.

George Marshall, club swimming instructor, will serve as volunteer coordinator.

All ages are urged to participate in the aquathon. Registration forms may be picked up at the club swimming pool.

Trophies will be awarded to the two swimmers who raise the most money. Ribbons will also be given to the swimmers in each age group who swim the highest number of laps.

Aquathon participants will be obtaining pledges from sponsors in the Greenville-Ayden area.

For more information, call Jo Perkins at the Easter Seal Society office, 758-3230, or George Marshall, 752-0657.

Represented At 'College Day'

LAURINBURG — East Carolina University will be one of nearly 80 colleges and universities represented at a "College Day" program to be held for the 200 students of the Governor's School East here Wednesday.

According to Mrs. Elaine Liles, associate director of admissions, St. Andrews Presbyterian College, home for the newly-founded Governor's School, representatives will have an hour and a half Wednesday afternoon to talk with the rising juniors and seniors from 150 state high schools.

Prior to coming to St. Andrews, the representatives will hold a similar session at Governors School-West, Winston-Salem.

sored on this visit by the conservative Southern Republican. These Democrats are interested in a possible compromise by liberal Republican Sen. Clifford Case ending sanctions when free elections are held in December. But that would deny Muzorewa the immediate boost from Washington for which he came.

That even a Case amendment immediately ending sanctions would get many more votes than a Helms amendment obscures the deepening tragedy in Rhodesia. Bishop Muzorewa stresses that a democratic, biracial "Zimbabwe" should avoid the example of neighboring Zambia, where one-party dictatorship and economic stagnation followed the white exodus. But Zambia's President Kenneth Kaunda is lionized at state dinners by Jimmy Carter, while the puzzled bishop is treated as a leper.

Somebody's Pet Struck By Car

The Pitt Co. Humane Society reports that a fawn-colored small male dog has been taken to Dr. Greg Thompson's veterinary office after having been hit by a car on the Pactolus Highway near the Happy Store.

The dog, which looks well cared for and as if he belongs to someone, has only minor injuries and hopefully will be claimed by the owner, Humane Society Pres. Jeanette Fiore said.

Also found, she said, is a springer spaniel.

Several small "apartment-sized" dogs have been placed with the Society since the Adopt-A-Pet column was published Sunday, she said. Anyone interested may call the Humane Society, 758-PETS.

Craft, Magic Show Tuesday

The annual Children's Craft show, augmented this year by a magic show, will be held from 6:30 to 8 p.m., Tuesday, July 25, in the Elm Street Gym.

Crafts made by children taking part in various recreation programs will be displayed, including crafts made by those attending Tot Lot, Ducky's Fun Wagon, Camp Sunshine and the Jaycee Park Day Camp. Ribbons will be awarded to the best works in each group.

The added attraction of a magic show is to be given by John Williams from 7 to 9 p.m.

The craft and magic events are sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, and the public is invited to attend. Free refreshments will be served.

Explosions On 4th Anniversary

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Twelve time bombs exploded in Athens and Piraeus, the adjacent port city, on the fourth anniversary today of the collapse of the military dictatorship.

Police said no one was hurt and there was no significant damage. They also said they had no clues to who planted the bombs.

Closing Big Plant Site

By ANDREW SCHNEIDER
Associated Press Writer
SEABROOK, N.H. (AP) — Hundreds of construction lamps still blaze through the night at the Seabrook atomic plant. But this week, many of the project's 1,800 workers, laid off when the site was closed, will crowd New England union halls looking for scarce jobs.

In the statehouse and in the offices of Public Service Co., other groups will gather to search for some way to overrule a federal order halting construction at the sprawling plant.

An eleventh hour attempt by labor unions to postpone a Nuclear Regulatory Commission stop-work order failed Friday just before the 6 p.m. deadline, when a U.S. District Court judge ruled the injunction was being sought in the wrong court.

Judge Louis Oberdorfer dismissed the complaint, saying the matter should have been brought before the U.S. Court of Appeals.

The commission ordered the shutdown so a re-evaluation of the plant's location and of the system used to cool its twin-reactors could be made without the pressures of continuing construction.

Union and Public Service officials have told the workers repeatedly that the layoffs will be brief, but most workers say they are preparing for the worst.

"I'm like most of the other guys. I live from one paycheck to the next, and if that paycheck doesn't come, my family is in big trouble," said Tony Petre, a marine welder with three children.

"My wife and I talked about it all night. So I'll go down to the hall tomorrow and if there aren't any jobs, we'll pack up and move somewhere else."

Petre can afford to move from his Dover home. He has a highly skilled job that he says is "always in demand somewhere." He is living in a rented house with no lease.

Hundreds of others are not as lucky.

Workers who flocked to New England three years ago when the Seabrook project was announced came expecting eight solid years of work, many bought houses.

A large number, such as laborers, electricians and carpenters, say the job market is flooded with their skills and there is no place for them to go.

"I pour concrete, but so do a thousand other guys who are out of work," said a 34-year-old man from Manchester. "I've got a $44,000 mortgage on a house I just bought. I'll lose that house next month if Seabrook doesn't reopen because I know I can't find another job."

One worker who had heard the Nuclear Regulatory Commission had scheduled a pre-hearing conference Tuesday on alternative New England sites for the Seabrook plant said he was sure the plant would never be built.

"Hearings, appeals, law suits — all they do it talk," he said bitterly. "The country's out of oil. New England needs energy. I'm out of a job and instead of letting us build Seabrook and solve those problems, the government would rather talk."

Storm Leaves Path Of Ruin

By JOHN BRONSON
Associated Press Writer
EAST BRADY, Pa. (AP) — A violent thunderstorm swept through the Allegheny River valley following a four-day heat wave and left a path of destruction.

One man was killed while trying to dock his boat. About 60 persons were injured, mostly from fallen debris, when a funnel cloud dipped suddenly into the valley late Sunday afternoon.

The National Weather Service said the storm probably was a tornado, but they could not confirm it.

"I figured a normal storm was coming and all of a sudden it was like being in the bottom of a swimming pool," said George Wolf, owner of the KOA Campground at nearby Knox.

"The wind was so strong it bent two-inch steel pipes to the ground," he said, pointing to downed flagpoles at the battered campground.

About 30 camping trailers, some turned upside down, were demolished or heavily damaged at the campground, located in Clarion County. Some 1,000 persons were camping at the site when the storm hit, pelting the grounds with golf-ball sized hail.

Two women were pinned for more than a half hour when their tent-trailer was lifted upside down. They were hospitalized with broken arms, and six other campers were reported slightly injured.

The storm, which touched down about 5:30 p.m., crossed several Pennsylvania counties, including Clarion, Jefferson, Armstrong and Centre. Power lines were knocked down, trees were uprooted, mobile homes were overturned and roofs were blown off.

Killed was Charles Schockey, 37, of Butler. He and a companion were tying up a boat when the funnel appeared.

"One hit the deck and the other was swept in the water," said state police Capt. Robert Palladino.

Most of the injured were treated and released at five area hospitals.

Four persons were injured, one seriously, when a pontoon boat capsized on a creek near

Church And State Clashing In Court

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Superior Court judge was expected to begin hearing arguments today in the trial of a suit that may determine the extent of the state's power to regulate church-operated schools.

The trial is the result of the refusal of 11 Christian schools to file annual reports on their operations as required by the state Board of Education. Lawyers from both sides say they expect the trial to last as long as two weeks. The schools' attorneys have 32 witnesses lined up while the state will have seven or eight.

The trial should determine whether the state has the authority to withhold approval from schools that don't submit information on curriculum, facilities and teachers' credentials. When the state withholds approval from a school, its students are considered truants and parents can be fined for contributing to truancy.

The trial is also expected to determine how much control the board legally has over the church-affiliated schools. And while 11 are being prosecuted, the suit is aimed at 63 of the state's approximate 250 Christian schools who originally refused to file the reports.

The state has maintained that the reports are necessary to ensure that all children have equal educational opportunities.

Representatives of the Christian schools told the board in January that the reports were an attempt by the state to license religion. And those same representatives said they were prepared for a long, costly court battle rather than submit to the state's demands.

The state extended the fall deadline for the reports and amended them to contain only the questions required by law. But when the extended deadline arrived, 41 of the 63 schools had filed the amended reports and some of those were incomplete.

The state, through the attorney general's office, then filed suit, singling out 12 of the schools said to exemplify the types that either failed to file or filed incomplete reports.

After deciding not to make the schools file the reports so late in the year, Superior Court Judge Donald Smith in April set the trial date, saying a full trial exploring the state's power was warranted.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Siamese twin girls were in stable but guarded condition at Children's Hospital following a 15-hour operation to separate them.

A hospital spokesman said a team of eight specialists performed the operation separating Melissa Ann and Jamie Lynn Shumate of Sesser, Ill., on Saturday. The twins, born last Dec. 19 at Good Samaritan Hospital in Mount Vernon, Ill., to Marilyn Shumate of Sesser, were joined at the pelvic area.

Has Had Hiccups For 56 Years But Still Hopes To Find Cure

ANTHON, Iowa (AP) — Charles Osborne has had hiccups for 56 of his 84 years, but he hasn't given up hope of finding a cure.

"I'd give everything I got in the world if I could get rid of them," says Osborne, including the notoriety that sprang from a 1936 appearance on Robert Ripley's "Believe It or Not" radio show and put him in the Guinness Book of World Records.

"I don't know what it would be like not to have them," Osborne said. "I get so sore jerking all the time."

A veteran of many tries at a cure, Osborne is now being treated by Dr. Terence Anthony, an associate professor at the Southern Illinois University School of Medicine who has been interested in hiccups since he was a medical student.

Osborne's hiccups began on a farm near Union, Neb., in 1922.

"I was butchering hogs and hauling a 350-pound hog... While I was hanging the hog up I started to hiccup," he said.

He was taken to Omaha, Neb., for treatment by his employer. They stopped only to start again once he got home.

"I made four trips to Omaha. But every time I got back home they would start again. I've had them ever since," Osborne said.

Osborne continued to work as a farm laborer then bought his own farm. He retired in 1961. His wife died March 12.

He said the longest he has gone without hiccups was for 50 hours a few weeks ago. But except for brief reprieves, the hiccups are with him day and night at the rate of 40 times a minute, interrupting his sleep and ruining his taste for solid food.

"I don't know what to make of it," said Anthony, who said he is treating Osborne with various drugs.

Anthony said hiccups can be caused by irritation from many parts of the body, but so far he has not pinpointed any cause in Osborne's case.

"My feeling is he popped a small blood vessel at the base of his brain when he was lifting that hog," he said, explaining the vessel was probably at the junction of a nerve ending that controls breathing.

Osborne has learned one thing though — how to stop making noise.

"I used to make a noise all the time, night and day. Then I went to Rochester (the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn.) and I was there for 21 days. Every doctor looked at me and they didn't help. But they taught me how to control myself so I didn't make any noise."

Four Die In N.C. Traffic

By The Associated Press
Four persons died in weekend traffic accidents around North Carolina, the Highway Patrol reported. The deaths raised the state's traffic fatality toll for the year to 730, compared to 790 for the same date a year ago.

James Richard Cardwell, 20 of Lenoir, was killed early Sunday in a one-car accident near Hickory. Officers said Cardwell was fatally injured when he was thrown from his car after it ran off the road and overturned.

Steven Paul Jones, 19, of Winston-Salem died shortly after midnight Saturday when his car ran off the road and overturned near Winston-Salem, the patrol said.

A Randolph county youth was killed Saturday night when the car in which she was riding hit a ditch embankment near Asheboro. Officers identified the victim as Sandra Gay Roberts, 16, of Asheboro.

Charlie Rogers Helms, 32, of Roanoke, Va., died Saturday in a three-car accident about a mile north of China Grove on Interstate 85. The patrol said Helms was the driver of a car that hit another auto in the rear and was in turn struck from behind by a third car.

Paroles For Three More

WILMINGTON, N.C. AP— Three more members of the Wilmington 10 will be released this week from the New Hanover County prison unit, the state Paroles Board announced today.

The three are James McCoy, 25; Willie Earl Vereen, 24, and Jerry Gerald Jacobs, 26. All three plan to remain in Wilmington.

The Wilmington 10 are nine black men and a white woman convicted of taking part in the firebombing of a white-owned grocery store during racial violence in the port city in 1971.

The woman — Ann Sheppard Turner — was paroled, but the nine men were sentenced to long prison terms. Gov. Jim Hunt shortened those sentences earlier this year but refused to bow to international pressure to pardon them completely.

Under the shortened sentences, Joe Wright was first of the group to be paroled this spring. All the rest will be eligible for release by October of this year except Ben Chavis, leader of the group, who is not up for release before 1980.

Chavis and the others have maintained their innocence since their trial.

Should Be Warning Label On Overexposure To Sun

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Warnings on cigarettes and saccharin may be joined by a new danger notice: "Overexposure to the sun may lead to premature aging of the skin and skin cancer."

That caution cannot be printed on sunshine, of course, but a government-sponsored panel has recommended putting it on containers of sunscreen lotions and creams.

According to the Food and Drug Administration, ultraviolet radiation from the sun is the leading cause of cancer in the body's largest organ, the skin. There are more than 300,000 cases recorded annually.

While skin cancer is estimated to be 95 percent curable if treated in time, the experts warn that it is still a serious matter.

An FDA advisory panel studying over-the-counter drugs reports that overzealousness in developing the bronzed look can lead to more than sunburn's "ouch!" Skin cancer and premature aging of skin can result.

The panel recommended liberal use of sunscreen lotions and creams and noted that various factors play a part in sunburn and the more dangerous consequences: Time spent in the sun, where it is spent, complexion and even ethnic background.

Scientists note that 60 percent of the ultraviolet rays striking the Earth reach the surface between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m., so some of the hazard may be avoided by tanning at other times.

The American Cancer Society warns that a beach umbrella is not complete protection because the sun's rays are also reflected up by sand and water.

On a cloudy day, 80 percent of the dangerous ultraviolet rays still get through, the society warns, and even a wet T-shirt lets half of the radiation through to your skin.

Effective protection, the society says, includes loose fitting beach clothing, caftans, long-sleeved shirts and wide-brimmed hats. Your roots and where you live can also make a difference in the sun's danger to you, according to the experts.

People with fair skin and blue or green eyes, particularly those who freckle easily, are most susceptible, particularly people of Irish or Celtic background.

Ireland has the world's third highest skin cancer rate, following South Africa and Australia, although the Emerald Isle receives less than half the ultraviolet radiation of those countries.

In studying location, the National Cancer Institute reported that a southern area — Dallas-Fort Worth — had more than double the skin cancer rate of a less sunny northern one, Minneapolis-St. Paul.

The FDA advisory panel has recommended that sun lotions be required to carry the statement: "Overexposure to the sun may lead to premature aging of the skin and skin cancer. The liberal and regular use over the years of this product may help reduce the chance of these harmful effects."

The panel urged sunbathers to take their time, noting it takes about two weeks of careful sunbathing to obtain a tan without burning.

The group reported that most ingredients in sunscreen lotions are safe, with the exception of only a few used in foreign products.

And the group recommended adoption of the European "sun protection factor" system for rating the various lotions.

A few American products are already introducing a rating system for lotions and creams, and the panel's recommendations are expected to be opened for public consideration some-

Uncle Sam Now Owner Of Topless Go-Go-Cafe

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI) — It's barely past noon, an unfashionable hour for lunch, and already the Lone Star Beef House is jammed.

Furthermore, probably the last thing this crowd is thinking about is Lone Star beef.

It so happens that the unimposing little cafe on Ninth Street a block north of the J. Edgar Hoover Building is owned by the U.S. government.

And although it has a few steaks and beef sandwiches on the menu, most of its customers are drawn there by the novelty of patronizing America's first nationalized topless go-go-parlor.

What's a nice father figure like Uncle Sam doing with a joint like this? Is the bewiskered symbol of the republic turning into a dirty old man?

Well, it's a long story, but mostly a matter of inadvertence.

According to Justice Department officials, one of the previous owners, a Transportation Department employee, bought into the Lone Star with stolen government funds. So the department obtained a court order to get control of his share.

Then the other partner relinquished his part and the whole swinging scene became federal property.

Eventually, the General Services Administration, which handles such transactions, is expected to sell the place. Meanwhile, the publicity apparently is turning the Lone Star into a bonanza.

After the Washington Post recently reported on the government's new role as a go-go entrepreneur, business began growing by leaps and bounds, not to mention jiggles, quivers and undulations.

Or so a recent noontide visitor to the Lone Star was told by Rhoda, one of the undulators.

What kind of a place does Uncle Sam run? Certain raffish types who frequent dives of this stripe say there isn't much to distinguish it from the common run of topless arenas.

However, citizens concerned with social issues will be gratified to learn it is at least an equal opportunity employer.

Of the three dancers on duty the day this research was conducted, one was Puerto Rican, one of Oriental extraction and one black.

All exhibited a great deal of what federal sociologists call "upward mobility." Particularly Rhoda. She occasionally swung herself upside down from the top of the small mirrored stage, producing a rather interesting gravitational effect.

Rhoda told an interviewer later she used to be a gymnast.

Although the Lone Star is in the remnants of what was once Washington's tenderloin, and is sandwiched between an adult bookstore and a burlesque theater, it has a fairly high class clientele.

At least most of the males who dropped in at lunch time wore coats and ties and were comparatively restrained in their reactions to the dancers, including those who occasionally performed atop tables and the bar.

Rhoda explained that the Lone Star got a lot of business from people who worked at the FBI building down the street.

That figures.

The FBI, after all, is a part of the Justice Department, which engineered the federal takeover. Plus its agents and employees are imbued with a well-developed sense of loyalty.

For one visitor who ordered pork barbecue at the Lone Star Beef House, the food was a bit disappointing. But the service, rendered by a blonde in what looked like a one-piece pink bathing suit, couldn't have been more opportune.

The sandwich was served precisely between the times that dancers who identified themselves as Cheryl and Shorty were pulsating on top of the table. If it had been sitting there while either was doing her number, there could have been a serious accident. This is something the Occupational Safety and Health Administration may want to look into.

Presbyterian Income Rose

ATLANTA (AP) — The Presbyterian Church reports that, although its national membership declined by 0.9 percent last year, contributions to the church increased by almost 18 percent during the same period.

Contributions in 1977 totaled $245.2 million, up $37.2 million from 1976. That represents an average contribution of $280, up from $236 in 1976, according to figures released by the Office of the General Assembly.

At the same time, the church's membership declined by 7,923 to a total of 874,897.

The membership includes 869,700 communicants and 5,197 ministers. In 1976, there were 877,664 communicants and 5,156 ministers, the report said.

The number of women officers also increased. Of 35,459 ruling elders, 6,144 were women and, of 22,594 deacons, 3,700 were women. In 1976, there were 5,437 women elders and 3,609 women deacons, the report said.

It also said that church school enrollment dropped from 433,932 to 423,620 and that the number of churches also declined, from 4,036 to 4,010.

$499,413 Error By Computer

ALOHA, Ore. (AP) — William Buskirk knew water rates might be going up, but he was surprised when he got his bill.

The bill for two months' service said he had used 99 million gallons of water and came to $499,424.

Wolf Creek Highway Water District officials attributed the error to a computer and billed Buskirk his usual $11.

Invite Declined By Councilmen

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (AP) — City councilmen were a little suspicious when they were invited to come over and have some drinks out in John Sadowski's yard.

Their would-be host was wearing a gas mask over his face when he appeared at Thursday night's council session to issue his invitation.

And after hearing why Sadowski's invited them, the lawmakers announced that they had previous engagements.

Sadowski said he wore the mask to point up the unpleasant odors coming from the city's sewage treatment plant near his home.

One councilman said residents near the plant are living in a "hell on Earth."

Mayor Harry Chapman said the city would try to clean up the problem.

Family Wrecks

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Three hours after a 15-year-old boy was killed in a car crash, a separate accident killed his grandfather and injured his mother, sister and uncle.

Thomas Clifton Igo, 15, of Peculiar, was killed in an accident at 11:10 p.m. Saturday. He was a passenger in a car that attempted to pass another near Weaubleau and overturned.

His grandfather, Artie Ussery, 56, of Weaubleau went to Peculiar to pick up the boy's family. On the return trip, a car crossed the centerline into the path of the family's car and hit it head-on.

Ussery was killed. The uncle, Richard Lee Hendrickson, 24, of Lebanon, suffered head cuts. A sister, Barbara Igo, 17, suffered a shoulder injury and the boy's mother, Frances Igo, 36, received a broken jaw and a broken right hand.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined broadly today as the dollar slumped in foreign exchange.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 6.24 at 827.18.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than a 2-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The dollar declined sharply against leading foreign currencies and passed a psychological landmark when it slipped below the 200 Japanese yen level.

Analysts say the newest factor weighing down the dollar has been the recommendation of a committee of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries that OPEC peg prices against a package of currencies rather than in dollars.

The dollar's fluctuations in recent months have often set the tone for the stock market.

Continental Corp. topped the active list, off 1/4 at 24 1/2. A 200,000-share block traded at 24 1/2.

Gold stocks, which frequently thrive in periods of monetary uncertainty, gained ground today. Dome Mines climbed 1 1/2 to 84 1/2, and ASA was up 1/4 at 25 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index dropped .32 to 54.59. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .39 at 151.45.

Volume on the Big Board came to 10.01 million shares as of noon, against 10.21 million at the same point Friday.

Soldier Killed By Explosion

FORT BRAGG, N. C. (AP) — One soldier was killed and six were injured today at the 426th Signal Battalion motor pool, a base spokesman said. The nature and cause of the explosion were not immediately determined.

A spokesman at Womack Army Hospital said four of the injured soldiers were in serious condition while the other two were treated for less serious injuries.

The explosion, which occurred about 10:30 a.m., was being investigated by military officials and agents of the Fort Bragg district of the Criminal Investigation Command, a spokesman said.

Philadelphia Workers Return

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — City services returned to normal today as 19,600 municipal workers went back to work for the first time since July 14 when they struck the city in a contract dispute.

"Everything's back to normal this morning," said Hille Levinson, city managing director. "I checked around this morning and everybody's back on the job."

Sanitation workers were among those involved in the eight-day walkout, and Levinson said today's first priority would be removing accumulated rubbish and debris.

The workers' new contract provides for a 7 percent wage increase.

Investigating A Fire

SUNDAY MORNING FIRE — Staton House Fire Department answered a 12:09 a.m. call Sunday at Pop's Quick Way Store, located on Old River Road. According to Bob Joyner, Pitt County Fire Marshal, a considerable amount of damage was done to the store. (Reflector photo by Tommy Forrest)

An investigation is underway by the Pitt Sheriff's Department and Fire Marshal's office into an early Sunday morning break-in and larceny and related fire at a rural store.

Pitt Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that county authorities are looking into the possibility of arson in connection with the 12:09 a.m. break-in incident at Pop's Quick Way, owned by Claude Roach on Rt. 4, Greenville.

Sheriff Tyson said that the owner reported the theft of between $1,300 and $1,400 from the store, located on the Old River Road. Entrance was apparently gained after a rear door was forced open, he added.

Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner said that considerable fire damage resulted from the early morning blaze.

Staton House Fire Department responded to the fire call.

Some Relief In Texas Weather

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas residents who have been sweltering through a heat wave got relief with the first measurable rainfall in 45 days. But the weatherman says it may soon heat up again.

The high Sunday was 87, as nearly a half an inch of rain fell at the recording station at the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport.

Nineteen straight days in which the temperature rose to 100 or above had ended late last week.

No rain had been recorded at the airport for 45 days, although during the period, some light rain fell in Fort Worth. Several sections of Dallas received light rain Saturday.

Outspent U.S. In Military Field

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union spent $127 billion and the United States another $91 billion on military expenditures in 1976, the government reports.

While the Soviet expenditures were 40 percent higher than those by the United States, spending by the NATO allies in 1976 exceeded those of the Warsaw Pact, $147 billion to $139 billion, the study showed.

The information was released Sunday in the annual report of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, which added that nations of the world spent close to $400 billion on military expenditures in 1976.

Advices Against Restitution Bid

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, whose ancestors came from Japan, says any attempt to seek restitution for Japanese-Americans forcibly relocated during World War II would only rekindle old resentments.

Hayakawa, after addressing the closing banquet Saturday night of the Japanese American Citizens League's meeting, said in an interview: "The relocation was perfectly understandable...even the JACL supported it at that time."

Earlier in the week, league delegates unanimously endorsed a resolution seeking $25,000 redress for each Japanese-American sent to the relocation camps.

Junta Ouster

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The right-wing military junta that has governed Chile for five years today ousted one of its four members, Air Force commander Gen. Gustavo Leigh, who had publicly called on President Augusto Pinochet to speed up the return to democracy.

The government issued a statement saying Leigh was being stripped of both his military post and his seat on the executive body. It said he was being replaced in both positions by Gen. Fernando Matthei.

The other three members of the junta, which toppled democratically elected Marxist President Salvador Allende in a bloody coup in September 1973, are Pinochet, who is army chief, navy commander Adm. Jose Merino and Gen. Cesar Mendoza of the national police.

Leigh began his public criticism of the government early this year. In one magazine interview this spring, Leigh urged the junta to repair the international prestige of Chile by "concrete acts (showing) that we live in a state of law, with civilian participation."

Since January he has not appeared at public functions with other members of the junta.

Working On Anti-Porn Remedial Measures

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Denying charges that they are trying to infringe on First Amendment rights, leaders of the North Carolina Christian Action League say they hope local governments will be able to come up with anti-pornography laws that will stand up in court. D.P. MacFarland, executive director of the CAL, says officials in Asheville are working on an ordinance that would "correct flaws seemingly found" by the courts in a state anti-obscenity law.

If the Asheville ordinance stands up, he said, it could be used as a model for formulating a revised state law.

Officials of the North Carolina Civil Liberties Union and some religious leaders have accused the CAL and other groups of trying to suppress the rights of others by imposing laws prohibiting publication of certain material and forbidding entertainment they consider objectionable.

"Censorship and First Amendment guarantees don't apply to hard-core pornography," MacFarland said. "When you get to that, you're talking about something else."

But Mike Plumides, a Charlotte lawyer and nightclub operator, said he felt the CAL had shifted its attention from pornography to fighting the sale of liquor by the drink in North Carolina.

"They've given up on anti-obscenity because they know their campaign was an unconstitutional effort to destroy rights," he said. "And now they're gearing up for battles against liquor by the drink so they can challenge everyone's right to enjoy a mixed beverage."

George H. Gardner of Greensboro, executive director of the N.C. Civil Liberties Union, said he is concerned that many church leaders seem to have "no conception of the First Amendment. The reason for the Bill of Rights is to protect the rights of minorities to make choices."

The Rev. W.W. Finlator, a Baptist minister in Raleigh, said churches should not depend on police power to enforce moral standards and that it would be dangerous to give government the right of censorship.

But the Rev. Coy Privette of Kannapolis, a leader of the CAL, said communities should have the opportunity to set and enforce standards of decency.

"The U.S. Supreme Court said that pornography isn't protected by the First Amendment and the community can establish local standards of decency," Privette said. "One of the real problems has been in the area of enforcement. Some judges have issued opinions about unconstitutionality, but opinions don't make a bill unconstitutional."

Reggie's Back

seventh inning of Sunday's game against Chicago. Jackson returned to the Yankees from a five-day suspension. The team trainer stands with him. (AP Laserphoto)

Martin Blasts Steinbrenner

CHICAGO (AP)—New York Yankees Manager Billy Martin, who suspended slugger Reggie Jackson for defiance, may receive similar treatment — or worse — from his boss in the wake of his tirade against Jackson and biting remarks slung at owner George Steinbrenner.

Martin, who held his temper and his tongue when Jackson returned from a five-day suspension Sunday, lost control of both at O'Hare International Airport mere hours after the Yankees had recorded their fifth consecutive victory.

"The two of them deserve each other," Martin told the New York Times, referring to Jackson and Steinbrenner. "One's a born liar (Jackson), the other's convicted (Steinbrenner)."

"I am stunned," Steinbrenner told the Times when informed of Martin's remark, which apparently referred to Steinbrenner's conviction in 1974 for illegal political contributions.

A clause in Martin's contract with the Yankees prohibits him from making public comments critical of the outspoken New York owner. Martin's statement was in direct contravention of the clause and Steinbrenner told The Associated Press, "I'll have further reaction Monday morning."

That reaction seems certain to include severe punishment, possibly even Martin's firing, in view of the manager's contract violation. The statement came in the manager's second burst of fiery, explosive-filled comments made — apparently without instigation — moments after the team arrived by bus at the airport for a flight to

Kansas City.

Jackson was suspended after last Monday night's 9-7 loss to the Royals for bunting after a bunt order had been retracted — by signal and by verbal command — during the 10th inning of the 11-inning defeat.

Ultimately, Jackson popped out while bunting on a 1-2 pitch. Martin insisted the defiance of orders had been intentional though Jackson said Sunday after returning from the suspension: "Knowing what the consequences were, the suspension and the amount of publicity it generated, I probably would have swung. I just figured this would be the best way of moving the runner over, but I'd have rather struck out (swinging) and avoided the hassle."

Martin maintained, in his first diatribe, that Jackson knew he was being defiant. "I have never, in my career as a manager, given orders to bunt when there were two strikes on the batter."

"He (Jackson) knew it (that he was being defiant intentionally) and every one of the others knew it. Why else would he take his glasses off when he came back to the bench?"

"He did that because he expected me to punch him and it took the most control I ever has taken in my life not to," said Martin.

The two nearly came to blows in the dugout at Boston's Fenway Park last season after Jackson — in Martin's estimation — failed to hustle while fielding a hit by Jim Rice of the Red Sox.

Neither appeared to make any attempt to communicate with the other Sunday after Jackson returned from exile, and that was fine with Martin.

Before Sunday's game, Martin sniped at the slugger, noting he arrived after optional batting practice had begun.

"It was optional today whether the guys wanted to hit or not," he said, openly irritated. "But you'd kind of think he'd be out there a little early to hit."

Martin was asked after the game if the air would be cleared by an apology or a meeting with Jackson, who did not play Sunday.

"I don't want no apology," said Martin. "I don't believe in any apology when someone deliberately does something on purpose."

That was all Martin said on the matter after the contest. From his office, he went to the media room at Comiskey Park and was observed taking liquid refreshment with his coaches.

Then he boarded the bus — sitting across the aisle and a mere two rows in front of Jackson.

Babe Ruth Event Here

Teams began arriving today for the state 16-year-old Senior Babe Ruth baseball tournament being held at Guy Smith Stadium Tuesday through Saturday.

Eight teams, from all areas of the state, will participate in the event, including the team from Greenville. Five of the teams will arrive today, one tomorrow and one, Lenoir County, will commute to the games.

Volunteer families in the area will house the 95 team members. Although it appeared for a time as if housing might be a problem, things are "pretty much in order" now, according to Sterle Pittman, who is helping direct the tournament.

This is only the second year that a tournament has been held for 16-year-old Babe Ruth players. The teams coming here are all-star teams from their respective areas. During the season, these players participated with players 17 and 18 years old in the Senior Babe Ruth program. "The all-star tournament was set up to give them more playing time," Pittman said.

The winner of the state tournament advances to the regional event, which will be held in Havelock. "That's as far as it goes this year," Pittman said. "Next year, there will be a world series for these teams."

The teams which will be participating in the evenern N. C. from the Asheville area, Clark-

Griffith from the Charlotte area, Foothills from northwestern North Carolina, Central Carolina from the Chapel Hill area, Southwest from Rowan County, Albemarle from the Edenton area, Lenoir County and Greenville.

Four games will be held tomorrow night, four Wednesday, three Thursday, two Friday and one or two on Saturday. The tournament is double elimination.

Mayor Percy Cox will make a speech and throw out the first ball on opening day tomorrow.

Bill Whitehurst, Area G director, is serving as director of the tournament, assisted by Pittman, Ronald Vincent and Jerry Clark.

Royals' Lead Jumps; Red Sox Lose Ground

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

The Kansas City Royals and Boston Red Sox have passed this way before. The Royals are enjoying the "deja vu" effect but, for the Red Sox, it's like the recurrence of a nightmare.

The Royals won their ninth straight game Sunday, completing a three-game sweep of Boston with a 7-3 victory. The triumph moved Kansas City three games ahead of California in the American League West.

The Red Sox, meanwhile, dropped their fourth game in a row and seventh in their last 12. Their AL East lead over Milwaukee, once a solid 10 games, shrunk to a shakier five games when the Brewers topped Texas 17-8.

Elsewhere in the American League, the New York Yankees beat the Chicago White Sox 3-1, Baltimore bested Minnesota 8-5, Oakland was a 5-3 victor over Toronto and California and Detroit swapped a pair of 4-3 wins, the Angels taking the nightcap after the Tigers rallied in the last inning to win the opener.

As Kansas City took control of the West once again, the Red Sox might have been looking back at last season, when they built a solid midseason lead before wilting down the stretch.

"I think their club has more to do with it than my club," said Boston Manager Don Zimmer of the three losses in Kansas City, where Boston has won only two games in three years. "They're good hitters and have speed. And they keep the ball out of the air. That's a big thing on this artificial turf. It's a different story in Boston."

Brewers 17, Rangers 8
Milwaukee set club records for most hits and runs in a game as they swept Texas, sending the Rangers to their sixth straight loss. Larry Hise hit his 23rd homer of the season and added three singles while scoring three runs and knocking in four. Sal Bando homered and knocked in five runs and scored four with three hits. Gorman Thomas also homered, his 20th of the year.

Yankees 3, White Sox 1
New York stretched its winning streak to five games and handed Chicago its ninth straight loss as Ed Figueroa and Rich Gossage combined for an eight-hitter. Chris Chambliss doubled home Lou Piniella from first in the ninth inning for the winning run and Graig Nettles' squeeze bunt scored Chambliss.

Reggie Jackson returned to the team after serving a five-day suspension handed down by Martin last Monday. Jackson, who was suspended for disregarding the manager's orders in an at-bat against Kansas City, did not play against the White Sox.

Orioles 8, Twins 5
Lee May hit his first homer since June 26 and Jim Palmer won his 12th game despite not having his best stuff. Palmer gave up seven hits and four runs in seven innings. Don Stanhouse picked up his 13th save in relief.

A's 5, Blue Jays 3
Mitchell Page led off the seventh with his 11th home run of the season and Oakland got another run in the inning when Mario Guerrero doubled and was singled in by Taylor Duncan.

Before the game, A's owner Charlie Finley said he intended to keep the club and was not pursuing any potential buyers.

Tigers 4-3, Angels 3-4
Detroit won the opener with a three-run rally in the bottom of the ninth. Dave LaRoche walked Aurelio Rodriguez with the bases loaded to force in the tying run and Dyar Miller's first pitch in relief of LaRoche sailed off catcher Brian Downing's glove for a passed ball to score the winner.

Joe Rudi, who had a two-run double in the first game, homered in the nightcap in support of Nolan Ryan, 5-8. Ryan struck out 11 and hurled a four-hitter. One of those hits was a three-run homer by Rusty Staub.

with joy into the arms of her caddy, Bill Kurro.

Stacy Holds On To Open Victory

INDIANAPOLIS AP—Hollis Stacy, happily clutching a second consecutive U.S. Women's Open Golf Championship, had no illusions about herself.

"I'm not Chris Evert and never will be. I'm not Chris Evert or Jack Nicklaus. They really dominate. I'm not that type at all," she said.

It may be difficult to convince veteran JoAnne Carner or record-setting Sally Little of South Africa, one-shot losers to the gritty little Hollis in the rainy, stormy Sunday that provided one of the most exciting of all the ladies' tournaments.

There was the early, spectacular 6-under-par 65 — by two shots the best score ever fired in this tournament — put on the board by the pretty, slender Little.

There was the steady, grinding pressure exerted by the veteran Carner, playing in the last twosome with Hollis.

But in the end it was the fiercely competitive, almost combative, Hollis who won it with a last-hole scrambling par, climaxed by a 4-5 foot putt that sent her leaping and screaming

Nicklaus Wins Philly

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Jack Nicklaus just keeps adding to the legend.

Professional golf's premier player won the $250,000 Philadelphia Golf Classic Sunday. It was his 66th tour victory, second only to Sam Snead with 84.

The $50,000 first prize made it eight straight years that the one-time "fat kid from Ohio" has earned at least $200,000. It was the 16th straight year he's won at least $100,000, boosting his lifetime tour earnings to $3,336,343.

At Whitemarsh, Nicklaus built a three-stroke lead after two rounds, tying the course record the second day with a 64. He slipped to a 1-over-par 72 on the third round, falling one stroke off the pace. Then, Sunday, he caught up with Bruce Lietzke, passed him and held on to win.

Lietzke shot 74 the final day, stumbling with a double bogey and bogey on the front nine. When it was over, Nicklaus nipped Morgan, who was two strokes ahead of Jerry Pate and Hale Irwin, each with 273. Birdie putts on the 11th and 12th Sunday were listed as the key to victory by Nicklaus, although the winning shot was a 30-foot downhill putt on the 16th.

Even The Opposing Pitcher Is Pulling For Pete Rose

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

It seems everyone in the National League is pulling for Pete Rose, even the man against whom he could tie the league record for hitting in consecutive games.

Pat Zachry, a former teammate at Cincinnati who came to the New York Mets in the Tom Seaver deal, will face the Reds tonight as Rose goes for a hit in his 37th straight game. That would tie him with Tommy Holmes of the old Boston Braves, who set the NL mark in 1945. "I hope he gets a hit, and I hope we win," says Zachry, who has lost his last three decisions since the All-Star break. Rose came within one game of the record Sunday night, going 2-for-6 and driving in the winning run with a 14th-inning sacrifice fly in Cincinnati's 5-4 victory over Montreal at Olympic Stadium.

Rose's first hit, a single, came in the sixth inning in his third time at bat against Expos starter Steve Rogers, the man who earlier this year yielded Rose's 3,000th career hit. And he doubled off reliever Darold Knowles in the 10th.

But as far as the Reds were concerned, his most important appearance at the plate came in the 14th inning. Pinch-hitter Rick Auerbach led off the inning with a walk, went to second on a wild pitch and took third on a sacrifice bunt. Rose then sent a long fly to right fielder Ellis Valentine to score the winning run and give the Reds a three-game sweep of the series.

Giants 3, Pirates 1
Clark, whose 25-game streak is a Giants record, won't have a chance to extend his skinn today since San Francisco has a day off before hosting St. Louis on Tuesday. Jim Barr, 5-8, pitched a five-hitter for the Giants, relieving some of the pressure put on the bullpen.

Cards 2, Dodgers 0
Pete Vuckovich tossed 61-3 innings of no-hit ball, winding up with a three-hitter to pace St. Louis past the Dodgers. George Hendrick and Jerry Morales had the two Cards' RBI that made a loser of Don Sutton, 10-9. Vuckovich, 8-7, walked seven hitters, including three in the first inning, but got out of a couple of jams with some timely strikeouts and ground balls.

Phillies 12, Astros 3
Rich Hebner and Garry Maddox each smacked three-run homers and Jerry Martin added another shot to back left-hander Steve Carlton, 9-9, in his 200th career victory.

Braves 3, Mets 0
Atlanta jumped on Mets starter Jerry Koonsman, 3-11, for four singles and one run in the first inning and rookie left-hander Larry McWilliams and Gene Garber combined for the shutout. It was the second time this season the two had teamed to blank the Mets.

Cubs 4, Padres 3
Chicago right-hander Dennis Lamp, 3-10, scattered nine hits to beat San Diego with the help of some sloppy Padres fielding.

Rose Glad To Be In N. Y.

MONTREAL (AP) — Pete Rose is glad to be moving to New York tonight to attempt to tie the consecutive-game hitting record after surviving the daylight of Olympic Stadium. "I've had some great and wonderful things happen to me in New York," said Rose, now one game shy of the league record of 37 set by Tommy Holmes of the Boston Braves in 1945. The major league record is 56 games by Joe DiMaggio of the American League's New York Yankees in 1941. Rose ran his streak to 36 games Sunday with a single and double before driving in Cincinnati's winning run with a 14th-inning sacrifice fly in a 5-4 victory over Montreal. Rose continued his hot streak in difficult conditions — most players agree that the ball is tough to pick up coming into the batter during daylight hours at Olympic Stadium.

"This is the toughest ballpark in the league to hit a ball in," he noted. "I've talked to all the Montreal players, and they don't like to play day games here. It's tough to see when the sun's out and tough to see when the sun's in."

Williamston, Franklin Tied

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston and Franklin County split a pair of American Legion baseball games Saturday night and Sunday to remain even in their playoff series 2-2.

Saturday night, Williamston rallied in the ninth inning for a 10-9 victory, but Franklin County turned the tables on Sunday with a 5-0 shutout.

Williamston scored first in the Saturday night ballgame, coming up with four runs in the second inning. Franklin County gained the lead in the third with five runs and added one more in the fourth. Williamston scored one run each in the fifth and sixth to tie the game, but Franklin County got two in the seventh.

Williamston pulled to within one in the bottom of the seventh, but Franklin County stretched its lead back to two in the top of the ninth.

In the bottom of the inning, Trent Ange and Hank Edwards singled for Williamston. Bill Eubanks walked and Anthony Latham doubled in Ange and Edwards. Eubanks came in with the winning run on a singled by Ken Gurganus.

triples in the game, while Gurganus was 2-3 and Ange 2-4 for Williamston. Thomas Crudup paced Franklin County, going 3-5.

Sunday afternoon, Williamston got seven hits, but failed to score and fell to Franklin County 5-0.

Franklin County scored two runs in the fourth and three in the ninth. In the fourth, Allen Holmes, Jeff Strickland and Stacy Overman walked, while Duane Tetterton hit a single to score Holmes and Strickland.

In the ninth, Randy Wilder walked and Crudup singled. Holmes got a base hit to score Wilder. Crudup followed on a wild pitch and Holmes came in on a passed ball.

Crudup was 2-4 in the second game, while Latham was 3-5 and Charlie Smith 2-4.

The series resumes tonight in Williamston and then goes back to Louisburg for the final two games.

Ali Accuses

WASHINGTON (AP) — Muhammad Ali has charged that Leon Spinks took a drug from "a little black bottle" during the fight last Feb. 15 that cost Ali his heavyweight crown, the Washington Star reported today.

The newspaper quoted Ali as saying "I had that guy almost out in the 14th round. Then, wham! He's drinking out of that bottle between rounds and he comes out smoking."

The banner sports-page article by J.D. Betha, who visited Ali in his hotel room Sunday, said that some of Ali's own advisers in the room appeared stunned by the allegation.

Ali, who is scheduled to meet Spinks in a return title match Sept. 15, was reminded of the seriousness of the allegation and given the chance to change his mind, but he refused to back down, the article said.

Babe Ruth Team Tops Lee County

STATESVILLE — Greenville bounced back from a loss Saturday to defeat Lee County West 19-7 yesterday afternoon in the state 14-15-year-old Babe Ruth baseball tournament.

The local team exploded for nine runs in the first inning to put the game away early. Lee County scored first in the game when Reggie Petty hit a solo home run in the first inning. Mark Maddox walked, Ronnie McNeil hit a single and both of them scored on Junior Phillips' base hit.

But Greenville scored nine runs in the bottom of the frame. Mark Douglas singled, Junior Neal reached on an error and scored on Roger Williams' base hit.

The series resumes tonight in Williamston and then goes back to Louisburg for the final two games.

Sr. Babe Ruth Locals Ousted

ASHEVILLE — Union County handed Greenville's 17-18-year-old Senior Babe Ruth All-Stars a 5-3 defeat Saturday night to knock them from the state tournament.

Greenville had fallen into the loser's bracket in the double elimination event Friday by falling to Smoky Mountain.

The local team scored all of its runs in the first inning. Paul Stelfiff led off the frame with a walk and was put out when Joey Mattheis reached on a fielder's choice. Mattheis was thrown out coming home on Theodore Davis' base hit to center field. Ben Wilson singled and he and Davis scored on a double by Mike Phillips. Phillips came in when Jeff Hines reached on an error.

Union County pulled to 3-2 in the second. Ronnie Chaney and Paul Yow walked. Bobby Ghant singled in Chaney and Yow scored on an infield out. Two more runs came in for UC in the third. Robert Tobias and Willie Wynn singled and moved up on a wild pitch. They both scored on outs. Tobias scored the final Union County run in the fifth.

Wilson was the game's leading hitter, going 2-4.

Automakers Feeling Their Way To A 'World Car'

Multiple Charges Face Big Welfare Swindler

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Barbara Williams collected welfare for seven years. She also lived in a $170,000 house and drove a Cadillac. Authorities wondered how she did it and now Mrs. Williams is accused of pulling off the biggest welfare fraud in the nation's history.

Mrs. Williams, 33, is accused of swindling the system out of $289,857 by using at least seven different names and claiming 34 dependent children.

Tuesday, Mrs. Williams will be arraigned on 10 counts of grand theft and four counts of perjury.

"We don't know of a bigger welfare fraud case in the history of the country," said Deputy District Attorney Ron Wheeler. He the largest such case, to his knowledge, involved $18,000 in Chicago.

Mrs. Williams is accused of using phony identification to collect $239,857 in welfare checks and more than $50,000 in food stamps and medical aid from Sept. 17, 1971 to Feb. 27, 1978.

Wheeler said he could not explain how the woman got away with collecting all that money for so long.

"Either the county Welfare Department never checked to find out if the children actually existed or their work was very poorly done," he said.

Neither Mrs. Williams nor her attorney was available for comment.

The woman allegedly filed fraudulent claims at eight different welfare offices in Los Angeles County, using the surnames of Bowers, her maiden name, and Thompson, Price, Woods, Mitchell and Murphy.

The checks were then mailed to the addresses of friends and relatives, authorities charged.

It was an anonymous tip that gave the game away, authorities said.

The tip put the name Barbara Jean Thompson, one of Mrs. Williams' aliases, into the state welfare computer. The computer spewed out the names of six other women who listed the same or similar names of dependent children.

Only four of the children were real.

Investigators staked out Mrs. Williams' expensive home and found what they described as equipment for making phony identification.

Mrs. Williams' husband, Danny, 35, was arrested June 6 but was later released. Wheeler said he may be prosecuted for possessing the equipment, allegedly used for creating false drivers' licenses, social security cards and birth certificates believed used in the scheme.

A warrant was issued for Mrs. Williams' arrest. Police sought her for a week before she surrendered July 14. She was released on $50,000 bail.

Thirty-five witnesses testified at a two-day hearing earlier this month and Compton Municipal Court Judge John Leahy said there was sufficient evidence to order a trial.

Mrs. Williams was expected to plead innocent Tuesday.

In addition to the criminal charges, authorities said they may file liens on the Ladera Heights home and a four-unit apartment registered in Danny Williams' name and valued at $33,000.

Too-Friendly For Police Job

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Clark County is suing a California trainer because Kojac, a rookie police dog, would rather play around than chase criminals.

"He's a very timid dog. He'd make a good housepet," said his former handler, Lt. Doug Ray.

The county has filed suit in Superior Court against Gernet Reidel of Morgan Hill, Calif., seeking recovery of the $2,000 the county paid 16 months ago for the 3½-year-old German shepherd.

By DONALD WOUTAT
Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) — If all those boxy, little cars are starting to look alike, you are not hallucinating. You might be getting an early glimpse of "world car."

World car? It is an industry buzz-word as fuel gets scarce and costly and automakers look to the fast-growing market in developing nations.

The result could be cars from Kenosha that look pretty much like those from Nairobi. It could also be that some cars that do not make the grade will go the way of the Henry J, the Studebaker and the Pierce Arrow.

One European economist

SMOKING BANNED
TAIPEI, Taiwan (UPI) — The Civil Aeronautics administration of Taiwan has banned smoking on all domestic flights to protect passengers from "air pollution."

warns that the sheer wealth of General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. makes them a threat to major automakers worldwide as they aim toward developing a universal car.

Ford, GM and Chrysler Corp. already build nearly half the 30.8 million cars turned out annually around the world.

The trend toward a world car already is causing global reverberations as industry giants seek to expand, governments rush to make their countries attractive as plant locations and labor unions hold meetings to talk about worldwide collective bargaining.

It is hard to find two people who agree on a definition of the world car. But they agree it is not a new idea — it is 67 years old, in fact.

The Model T appeared in Detroit in 1908 and was being assembled in England just three years later. By 1920, the sturdy little cars were being put together in Brazil, India, Denmark and Spain.

The auto industry has been international ever since. In 1967, for the first time, more cars were built outside than inside North America.

And today's supposed world cars — the Volkswagen Rabbit, Ford Fiesta and Chevrolet Chevette are cited — come closer than the Model T to being international products. While the overseas Model T was largely built with U.S. parts, the Fiesta is the product of 16 parts and assembly plants in six European nations, coordinated from Dearborn.

VW's Rabbit-Gulf-Caribe sequel to the Beetle — the second world car — is made in West Germany, the United States, Mexico, Indonesia and Yugoslavia. The Chevette is the same basic car as GM subsidiaries build in England, Germany, Brazil, Australia and Japan.

Chrysler this year combined features of its French-built cars and introduced the first U.S.-built front-wheel-drive small cars, the twin Dodge Omni-Plymouth Horizon — and at the same time started building the identical Simca Horizon in France.

Most versions of these similarly styled international cars are put together with at least some locally produced parts that would fit the models built in other countries.

Such across-the-border standardization of parts, as opposed to identical cars worldwide, is regarded as the test of a world car.

"The story isn't so much identical cars as engineering cooperation and components exchange," says a Ford analyst. "The world car just doesn't exist in the image people want it to exist."

How did everybody come up with a boxy design? Because of the fuel shortages that sent prices up and prompted a U.S. requirement for gasoline economy — which translates into a need for smaller cars.

"You can get more in a box than a ball," says a Ford research man.

Likewise, the trend toward front-wheel drive means the drive train is up front, eliminating the transmission hump on the floor and allowing a lower floor and more interior room. It is also easier to sell front-wheel drive in Europe, where it is old hat.

It appears clear that U.S. companies can sell in Europe. The Fiesta quickly became the best-selling new car ever in Europe after its introduction there in 1976.

Ford of Europe is now the biggest single seller of cars in all of Western Europe, and the parent company got 42 percent of its 1977 profits from overseas.

On the other side of the world car street, VW started building Rabbits this year in Pennsylvania and is pondering a California plant. French government-owned Renault plans to build cars in American Motors plants in Wisconsin and sell AMC Jeeps in Europe.

Japanese automaker Datsun is looking for a site for a U.S. assembly plant. Honda is virtually certain to build cars next to its Ohio motorcycle plant now being built. Toyota, Japan's No. 1 automaker, is "studying" the prospect of building cars in this country.

GM and Ford, however, seem to have the jump on the real growth markets of South America, Africa, the Middle East and Asia, analysts say.

Political reality dictates use of both local labor and locally made parts when foreign plants are opened. This means that foreign governments seek the plants as employers of their citizens.

When Ford of Europe decided last year to build a $300 million engine plant in Europe, Britain, Spain, Ireland and West Germany came up with offers of tax breaks, job training and other incentives.

Ford decided on Wales, and it was estimated that the company got government aid and incentives for $125 million of the $330 million capital cost. The payoff will be 2,000 jobs in Wales by 1980.

HOW TO DO A LITTLE BUSINESS ON YOUR OWN...

Holding a garage sale is a fun way to do a little business on your own... but it takes a bit of planning.

Like you'll want to decide what to sell and how much to charge for each item... and then you'll need price tags so other people will know what you're charging.

And you'll have to be able to make change for all your customers... so that means you should have lots of one dollar bills and an assortment of coins.

Then you'll want to advertise your sale to attract that crowd. You can do it with a sign or signs in your neighborhood... but you'll want a bigger crowd than that... so you'll run an ad in Classified which tells the time and place of your sale to a host of potential buyers.

One more thing... get up early the day of your sale! When people read about a Garage Sale in Classified, they shop early.

Have fun with your little business adventure!

Hollywood's Renaissance: Never Been Healthier

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The recent furor over the practices — and malpractices — within the film industry has overshadowed the basic fact that movie companies have never been healthier.

The headlines have gone to David Begelman, the former head of Columbia Pictures who pleaded no contest after he was indicted on one count of grand theft of $40,000 from the company and three charges of forgery of endorsement on checks worth $40,000.

Newspaper and magazine articles also have raised questions over industry practices, particularly in deals with producers who release films through major distributors. Recently, Peter Guber, producer of "The Deep," said the undersea adventure had drawn $100 million at the box office, but "I've seen zero dollars in profitability for my company."

But while independent producers are generally displeased by the ways film companies are run, most stockholders are delighted.

The box office figures are outstanding. "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" has soared past $110 million in gross receipts from 516 theaters in the United States and Canada. "Saturday Night Fever" attracted $600,000 in theaters every day from January through March. "Star Wars" has grossed $219 million in U.S. theaters alone, bringing 20th Century-Fox rentals of $139 million.

The sunny outlook is not limited to stratospheric figures for individual films. Fortune magazine's annual survey of business corporations shows broadcasting and motion picture production and distribution the top industries in return for stockholders' equity, and in sales increases and return on sales.

Of the nation's corporations with the highest total return to investors, Columbia Pictures ranked third and 20th Century-

Fox fourth.

The Motion Picture Association reported that U.S. box office gross in 1977 was a record $2.37 billion, 12 percent over the previous high in 1975. And during 1977, major companies released only 118 films, the fewest ever.

The 1977 figures contrast sharply with those of six years ago, when the U.S. gross was around $1.35 billion. The major companies were distributing 250 features a year and losing money on more than half of them. The companies managed profits by selling features to television, but suddenly networks found they had enough inventory and TV prices for movies dropped by half.

With too much product and lessening demand, film-making operations were awash in red ink — except the ever-cautious Disney. Losses were as high as $40 million a year, and 20th Century-Fox and Columbia were near bankruptcy.

The film industry began to improve in 1974, when theater attendance jumped by 25 percent. By that time, nearly every major company had undergone a managerial revolution. The interim managers who had succeeded the rough-edged pioneers were swept out by a new breed. Most of them had not risen through the creative fields; they were agents, lawyers, financiers — men who knew how to make deals and manage large corporations.

Dennis Stanfill operates from the same 20th Century-Fox where Darryl Zanuck swung his polo mallet to make his points in story conferences. It's hard to imagine the 51-year-old Stanfill raising his voice. In the calm, efficient manner of an Annapolis graduate and Rhodes scholar, he has steered Fox to financial stability as chairman, president and chief executive officer.

Unlike Zanuck, Stanfill does not supervise the entire production schedule. He leaves that to Alan Ladd Jr., the low-key former agent who made such right choices as "Star Wars," "The Turning Point," "Silver Streak," "Julia" and "An Unmarried Woman."

Hollywood's prosperity, Stanfill says, may be the culmination of the management changes of the late 1960s and early 1970s — "It takes time for management to get moving. There is another dimension," he adds. "The market for the Hollywood product has never been more vibrant. Witness the business both here and abroad for our films in theaters. Also, the television market both here and abroad has never been better — and overseas sales to TV are a major source of revenue."

"The film business has been greatly aided by the rise of ABC to the top of the ratings. That has provided a more effective three-way competition among the networks."

The results are reflected in prices for big movies. CBS is paying MGM $35 million to show "Gone With the Wind" for the next 20 years. ABC reportedly will give Universal $19 million for "The Sting" and "Slap Shot." Columbia made a deal with CBS for "The Deep" at $7.5 million.

Stanfill notes that the film companies are enjoying better health because they no longer rely on movies alone for stability. Fox has invested in television stations, Coca-Cola Bottling and a ski resort. Warner Brothers also deals in toys, video games, records, music and book publishing. MGM has its Nevada hotel-casinos; Disney its parks, MCA-Universal its studio tours, a savings and loan, book and music publishing, mail-order business, records.

Sid Sheinberg, 43, is president and chief operating officer of MCA, parent of Universal Pictures. He is a graduate of the University of Texas law school who rose through business affairs to become head of Universal Television, the biggest film factory in Hollywood.

"There is nothing better for the film business than pictures that people want to see," Sheinberg says. "The prevailing wisdom used to be that the movie audience was largely under 20. Now we seem to be making a number of pictures that appeal to the older audience."

"I suspect there is an incremental older audience that wants to see films like 'The Turning Point,' 'The Goodbye Girl' and 'House Calls' — films that are more relevant to wider age groups."

A.—Although your side certainly has the balance of power, you might not have the defensive tricks to defeat an opposing game. In any event, the opponents have a cheap save against your vulnerable game. Don't give them any time to discover their massive fit. Force them to guess right away by bidding five diamonds.

You have a minimum opening bid, no source of tricks (unless partner has excellent diamonds), and a distinct liability in the form of a low doubleton in spades. Unless you are blessed with a great deal of luck, this hand will not produce nine tricks—and the final contract may be doubled to your eternal regret.

Business Notes

OFFER TO BUY

Eaton Corp. of Cleveland, Ohio reported that in accordance with its previously announced intention, it has made an offer to purchase any and all outstanding shares of stock of Cutler-Hammer Inc. of Milwaukee at a price of $58 per share in cash.

The Cutler-Hammer board of directors unanimously recommended that its shareholders accept the offer. It was noted. Of the company's 6.6 million outstanding shares, Eaton now holds some 32 percent, which it acquired in a previously announced transaction at a price of $55 a share.

Cutler-Hammer is engaged in the design and manufacture of electronic and electrical equipment, systems and sub-systems for industry, commerce and government. Eaton, which has a plant here, manufactures products serving the capital goods markets, and consumer and commercial markets throughout the world.

EARNINGS NOTED

Virginia Electric and Power Co. announced earnings per common share for the 12 months ending June 30 of $2.02, compared to earnings for the comparable period in 1977 of $1.86.

The average number of shares of common stock outstanding increased to 77,006,637 at June 30, from 71,082,576.

DEALER STATISTICS

North Carolina residents purchased $3.017 billion worth of new automobiles in 1977 from 855 franchised new car dealers, according to figures released by the North Carolina Automobile Dealers Association.

The average North Carolina new car dealer in 1977 employed 24 persons and paid an annual payroll of $229,000, the association reported.

The statistics indicated that there were 3,117,000 automobiles on North Carolina roads in 1977 and 931,000 trucks and buses. The U.S. total was 143.8 million vehicles.

INCREASED DIVIDEND

Planters National Bank announced that as a result of the best second quarter and first half results in the bank's history, directors have increased the regular quarterly dividend to 23 cents from 21 cents per share.

The action marks the 12th consecutive year the annual dividend has been increased. It was reported, and raises the current annualized dividend to 92 cents per share.

The dividend is payable Sept. 15 to shareholders of record Aug. 31.

Sees Massacre Of Biological Species

By ALICE Z. CUNEO
WASHINGTON (UPI) — One animal or plant species per hour may become extinct by the end of this century, a new report of the Worldwatch Institute said Saturday.

"Should this biological massacre take place, evolution will not doubt continue, but in a grossly distorted manner," said the report's author, Erik Eckholm.

All species are doomed to extinction, Eckholm said, but man — through worldwide development, killing of animals for food and profit, and use of toxic chemicals such as pesticides and industrial wastes — will accelerate the extinction of plants and animals.

"While recent estimates indicate one species per day becomes extinct, the rate may accelerate to one per hour by the turn of the century," he said.

"The fabric of life will not just suffer a minor rip; sections of it will be torn to shreds."

Eckholm said most of the species lost will be plants, many of them in the rain forests of Africa, Asia and Latin America. He estimated in the United States alone 10 percent of the plant species are threatened with extinction. Worldwide, 500,000 life forms will vanish by the end of the century.

For each plant, he said, 10 to 30 species along the food chain also are "taken with it."

The final result, he predicted, will be a "more hostile environment for man."

"We will not drive out the cockroaches, crab grass and rats," he said.

To preserve the "evolutionary options" for the future, he said the United Nations should speed up its "biosphere reserve system" where segments of certain ecologies are kept intact.

Currently there about 144 reserves in 35 countries, including about 29 in the United States.

He said the current species-by-species approach is inadequate because each time a development project confronts an endangered species the endangered species will lose in the long run.

He called the dispute in Tennessee over the snail darter fish and the Tellico Dam "the opening saga in an increasing number of disputes over human activity vs. the fate of plant and animal species."

Eckholm said the snail darter will be a "tempest in a teapot" compared with conflicts that will develop in the Third World.

Recent estimates, he said, indicate there are from 3 million to 10 million species in the world, many of them yet to be discovered in the rain forests of Southeast Asia, South

Cuba Is Pondered By Non-Alligned

By STEPHEN H. MILLER
Associated Press Writer

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — The countries that call themselves part of the non-aligned movement, steering clear of both East and West in world politics, meet here this week, and the international activities of one of their number, Cuba, may be a key issue.

Cuba's military operations in Africa and its close ties to Moscow are expected to be raised by some nations who consider them violations of the movement's principles. And Havana's challenge to Yugoslavia's leading role in the movement may produce some backroom politicking.

U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, here for the conference, said when asked about issues that might be discussed: "It's a question of who is non-aligned and who isn't."

The three-day meeting, beginning Tuesday, will bring together foreign ministers of 85 countries and the Palestine Liberation Organization. Over the weekend, ambassadors and other officials were putting the finishing touches on the agenda behind closed doors.

Observer groups, including the Organization of African Unity and the Socialist Party of Puerto Rico, also are taking part in the meeting.

Yugoslavia's President Josip Broz Tito '86, an independent-mind Communist who split with the Soviet bloc 30 years ago, was a founder of the movement.

"Non-Alignment for International Relations Based on Equality," read one of the giant red banners hung in the Yugoslav capital.

"Greetings to the Liberation Movements in the Struggle Against Colonialism and Foreign Occupation," said another, which included an Arabic translation.

Cuba, an increasingly active member of the movement, has been criticized previously by some members who contend it is carrying out Soviet policy in Africa.

At a meeting of movement coordinators in Havana in May, Cuba added fuel to the debate by proposing a draft document against "imperialism, colonialism and neo-colonialism." The Cubans did not include the word "hegemonism," a political code word often applied to Soviet efforts at foreign domination. "Hegemonism" is a favorite word of Peking propagandists in the political war between the Soviet Union and China.

The movement also is trying to cope with wars between its own members, including Somalia and Ethiopia and the sporadic border war between Vietnam and Cambodia.

Cuba is seen as a growing challenger to Tito's concept of independence and is active on all 20 commissions in the non-aligned movement. Cuba is scheduled to host a summit meeting of the movement next year, the first since a 1976 gathering in Colombo, Sri Lanka.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Don't Pry Into Friend's Illness

One of the men I've worked with for years hasn't been to the office for about a week. When I called his family to inquire about him, they told me he has a tumor of the heart. I never heard of this before and nobody else seems to have heard of it, either. Are they telling me the truth? Is there such a thing as a tumor of the heart? — Miss D.V., Mass.

Dear Miss V.:
Some families may believe it is too intrusive of others to ask personal questions about an illness in the family. In some instances, their answers may be evasive. When this occurs, friends should not be too insistent on pinning them down.

Actually, there are both malignant (cancerous) and benign (non-cancerous) tumors of the heart. Although they are comparatively rare, these tumors may arise within the heart muscle itself, or on the inner layer or on the outer covering of the heart.

Today, it is possible to establish the presence of these tumors by a variety of complex techniques. When a benign tumor is definitely found to be present, by the use of angiography and by echocardiogram, operations can be performed with a high degree of success.

Your prime interest, of course, is in the health of your colleague and the hope that he will soon be well enough to return to work. Showing evidence of your continued friendship is a great contribution to recovery. There really is no need to probe too deeply in the intimate details of his illness. The family may prefer it that way.

Every few months I get a pain in the tip of my tongue. It lasts for a few days, then disappears. No one seems to know what causes the redness or the pain. Could lack of vitamins account for this? — Miss L.O., Nev.

Dear Miss O.:
If a vitamin deficiency were present, the pain and redness of the tongue would not come and go at irregular intervals. Therefore, other reasons must be sought for this "glossitis," or irritation of the tongue.

Sometimes, jagged edges of teeth, poorly fitting bridge work or alterations of the bite may produce local irritation of the tongue. Excess tobacco, drinking tea or soups that are too hot can irritate the delicate lining of the tongue. Long use of antibiotics and allergic reactions to food may also produce the annoying symptoms you describe. Aphthous ulcers (canker sores) of the tongue should be considered, too.

Since the symptoms come and go, there is little chance that your condition is of any serious significance. Yet it does deserve a doctor's examination in order to be sure that it is entirely local.

Olivia Host To Newton-John

OLIVIA, Minn. (AP) — Olivia Newton-John! Step right up and meet Olivia, Minn.

The popular singer, dressed in blue jeans, a red, western-style shirt and a 10-gallon hat, was the guest of honor and grand marshal as the town of 3,200, about 100 miles west of Minneapolis, celebrated its 100th birthday Saturday.

Miss Newton-John responded to an invitation from Olivia's centennial committee, which said the town wanted to thank her for popularizing the name of Olivia.

"The letter was such a kick," Miss Newton-John said. "How could I pass it up? This is the only place I've ever heard of with the same name as me."

Subpoenaed To Share The Heat

GRANTS, N.M. (AP) — The Valencia County grand jury decided it wasn't going to take the heat alone, so it subpoenaed County Manager Pat Heth and the three county commissioners to explain why the courtroom air conditioner didn't work.

District Attorney Tom Esquei served papers on the county officials ordering them to appear at the meeting, where they explained repairs were in progress.

Record Turnout For N.Y. Ballet

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — The New York City Ballet, sparked by the addition of Mikhail Baryshnikov, drew a record 90,500 people to its three-week summer season at the Saratoga Performing Arts Center.

Center officials announced the attendance figure at Saturday night's final performance. Virtually every performance was sold out, they said.

The center was the site of Baryshnikov's July 8 debut with the New York City Ballet, in George Balanchine's "Coppelia."

Baryshnikov, 30, left the American Ballet Theater several months ago, saying he wanted to dance for Balanchine, who is also a native of Russia.

When 'Fallout' Has Cleared, Andy Young Will Stay

By PATRICK J. KILLEN
WASHINGTON (UPI) — When the fallout has cleared from his political prisoners bombshell, Andrew Young will remain Jimmy Carter's chastened but still uncensored ambassador to the United Nations. Young will continue to speak his mind, though perhaps with a bit more caution than before he was publicly slapped down by Carter. His effectiveness appears only slightly impaired. But suggestions, floated during the early days of the Carter presidency, that Andy Young might one day be secretary of state are no longer under serious consideration.

These are some of the conclusions UPI correspondents have drawn in taking the pulse of official Washington and checking with United Nations sources on the Young affair. UPI White House correspondent Helen Thomas said President Carter was as frank as he's ever been at his news conference Thursday night.

"The statement by Andy Young was unfortunate and I do not agree with it," Carter said. "I don't think there are thousands of political prisoners in this country ...

"The fact of the matter is that Andy Young has been and is very valuable to our country. He has opened up new areas of communications and mutual trust and cooperation, among the nations of Africa, in particular.

"At almost the same time when Andy made that unfortunate statement, he had been remarkably successful in bringing about a conclusion of the Namibian question which could have exploded into a very unsatisfactory conflict in southern Africa ...

"So I know that Andy regrets having made that statement which was embarrassing to me. I don't believe he will do it again."

Carter said he had no plans to clear Young's speeches in advance. "I trust Andy to realize that he will be more careful in the future ... And I don't intend to get into the censoring business."

Carter understands Young, and understands his philosophical approach to international politics, Miss Thomas reports. There is widespread belief that Carter would hesitate to fire Young since it would alienate his black constituency, which he badly needs.

Early in the administration there were rumors that Young may be groomed to be secretary of state. That is unlikely now. He has ruffled too many feelings among world leaders, and he is considered something of an unguided missile in the world of diplomacy.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's reaction to Young's statement at the height of the Soviet dissidents trials was "unprintable." But UPI correspondent Juan Walte reports State Department officials feel Young has done an outstanding job.

C. William Maynes, assistant secretary of state for international organization affairs, said: "There are several very concrete accomplishments that you can attribute to Andy. One of them is the Namibia negotiation which is an absolutely unique diplomatic experience."

Another senior official said: "There is no question that some of his public comments, or the interpretation of those comments, have occasionally caused difficulties. But they do not in any way that I can see personally outweigh the positive results he has achieved as ambassador."

The official acknowledged that a number of professional foreign service officers "tend to look at Andy from the other side of the telescope and see his faults magnified because his style is so at odds with the traditional diplomatic style."

At the United Nations, UPI correspondent Alvin B. Webb reports Young has gained in stature because he is not your basic diplomat.

The British do not like him. The Russians are not sure how he gets away with it and some of the Africans are suspicious of him. But for all of that, Webb reports, Young has won a reputation as an able ambassador, not loved, not necessarily even liked, but admired and respected. He has credibility, the most desired of diplomatic credentials.

On Capitol Hill, where a move to impeach Young was defeated in the House, there appears to be more dismay than support for the ambassador, a former congressman.

UPI correspondent Ira Allen reported these comments:

Senator Henry Jackson, D-Wash.: "There is no question it is hurting us around the world and hurting the election of Democrats."

Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Ga.: "Andrew Young is my brother and I love him ... But I sincerely believe my brother has erred and done wrong."

Rep. Teno Roncalio, D-Wyo.: "I have an abiding belief that America's best interest as well as those of all Africans, black and white, will be best served if Andy Young can continue in his present role."

Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa: "He must be more cautious and diplomatic in his public statements."

Several months ago Young was asked by Rep. Robert Lagomarsino, R-Calif., how Congress would know when Young was speaking for himself and when he was speaking for the administration.

Young replied: "You will know when I don't speak for the president when the president rebukes me."

And even though Young escaped this time, Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd, an important presidential adviser, put it on the line. Said Byrd: one more mistake, and Young should go.

"There comes a time when one's usefulness can be so eroded that one is no longer useful," Byrd said.

Anglerfish Uses 'Lure'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Fishermen use little artificial fish to catch real fish. Two California scientists report finding a fish that does the same thing.

Many species of anglerfish that use a fleshy appendage as bait on the end of a flexible spine have been known for decades. But the lure of the newly described anglerfish looks like a fish.

Not only does the anglerfish have a life-like lure dangling within grabbing distance, but the fish swishes it back and forth when an appealing target approaches.

"The thin, membranous quality of the bait allows it to ripple while being pulled through the water, simulating the lateral undulations of a swimming fish," reported biologists Theodore Pietsch and David Grobecker of California State University in Long Beach.

"The movements of the illicium (spine) and bait heighten the mimicry to a remarkable extent."

The researchers discussed the anglerfish in a report in the July 28 issue of Science, the journal of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. They said the sea creature is a previously undescribed species of the genus Antennarius.

To add its fishing ability, Pietsch and Grobecker said, the four-inch long anglerfish is camouflaged with an irregular body covered with bulbous protuberances and mottled with light-cream, dark chocolate-brown, and red and black hues.

The spine carrying the lure is a little more than an inch long and the fake fish is about half an inch long. When the anglerfish is not angling, the lure is laid back on the fish's head.

No Delivery Of His 'Good News'

GILMAN, Iowa (UPI) — Virgil Tone's "good news" mailbox is too high, and that's bad news.

Tone built the second box above his original "bad news" box to give the U.S. Postal Service a place to put his good news. He painted GOOD in big letters on the upper box, so the mail could be properly sorted.

But he says he has been informed the second box is higher than allowed under postal regulations. So the good news mailbox has remained empty.

"There's very little good news these days. It's getting worse all the time," Tone said.

Donald Roseland, a rural mail carrier who delivers Tone's mail, said he has contemplated delivering some good news for Tone, but he hasn't done it yet.

Launder Cash In Cement Mixer

WINNEMUCCA, Nev. (AP) — A fire that destroyed the Star Broiler Casino last month created an unusual problem — dirty money.

About $10,000 worth of nickels, dimes, quarters and dollar coins survived the fire, but were left scorched and dirty.

So the loot was dumped into a cement mixer and sloshed around with an exotic blend of cleanser, sand and water, which Star vault manager Louis Erquiaga called "an old Basque recipe."

'I know why I smoke.'

"There's only one reason I ever smoked. Good taste.

"So when I switched to low tar, I wasn't about to give that up. If you don't smoke for taste what else is there?

"But there was all that talk about tar. Unfortunately, most low tar cigarettes tasted like nothing. Then I tried Vantage.

"Vantage gives me the taste I enjoy. And the low tar I've been looking for."
