Chileans Charged Record $119.56 Average In Letelier Plot; For Greenville Market

Doubt Extradition

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) - The Chilean government says it has ordered house arrest for its former security police chief and two of his men charged in the United States with plotting the assassination of Orlando Letelier. But their extradition is not expected.

Retired Brig. Gen. Juan Manuel Contreras Sepulveda, Col. Pedro Espinosa Bravo and Capt. Armando Fernandez Larios have been placed under preventive military arrest for a maximum period of two months pending the outcome of legal proceedings, the Interior Ministry said Tuesday night.

Contreras and Espinosa are at their homes and Fernandez is in a military hospital. "All under military custody and guard," an army communique said. It did not say why Fernandez was hospitalized.

The request for their detention was made by the United States, which said it would send formal extradition requests "in a matter of weeks." Observers said chances are slight the men will be extradited but a local trial is possible.

The three Chileans and four anti-Castro Cuban exiles in the United States were indicted by a federal grand jury in Washington Tuesday for the bomb assassination of Letelier as his car moved through Washington's Embassy Row on Sept. 21, 1976. A young woman associate in the car, Ronni K. Moffitt, also was killed, and her husband, Michael, was wounded.

Letelier was ambassador to the United States, foreign minister and interior minister under the late President Salvador Allende, the Marxist overthrown by the military in September 1973. He was arrested and exiled after the coup and became an outspoken foe of President Augusto Pinochet's military government.

Contreras headed the Chilean junta's security police, the DINA, from its organization in early 1974 until its dissolution a year ago. The Washington indictment said he "initiated the action which began the conspiracy and ... ordered the assassination of Orlando Letelier." Espinosa, director of operations for DINA, was accused of conveying the assassination order to Capt. Fernandez and an American DINA agent, Michael Townley. The indictment said Fernandez then went to the United States and shadowed Letelier to determine his habits.

"I don't think that there is anyone who seriously believes that General Pinochet will voluntarily give up people who could trace the murder of Mr. Letelier and my wife directly to his doorstep ..."

Michael Moffitt said in Washington. "Sources very close to the investigation tell me the chances are probably less than 10 percent that we'll get an extradition."

Although the Chilean government acted swiftly in detaining its three indicted nationals, it said their arrest did not signify guilt and was taken "exclusively under provisions of the existing extradition treaty between both countries."

That 1902 treaty provides that each country will extradite people charged with crimes in the other country but that neither country is bound to hand over its own citizens. Under a 1933 pact, Chile agreed to try its own citizens if it does not extradite them.

Townley, who was deported by the Chilean government last April and cooperated in the U.S. investigation, was named a co-conspirator in the indictment but was not indicted. Prosecutors in Washington said he agreed to plead guilty to a single count of conspiracy to murder in the next few days.

The four Cubans indicted for participation in the alleged murder plot were Guillermo Novo Sampol, Alvin Ross Diaz, Virgilio Paz Romero and Jose Dionisio Suarez Esquivel, all of Union City, N.J.

Paz and Suarez are fugitives while Novo and Ross are in jail in New York City.

A fifth Cuban exile, Guillermo Novo's brother Ignacio, was indicted on the lesser charges of lying under oath and concealing knowledge of a felony. He is in jail in the District of Columbia.

The indictment said Paz and Townley, who is an electronics technician, bought the materials for the assassination bomb at a Sears Roebuck store.

Pre-season optimism that Tuesday's opening prices on the Greenville Tobacco Market would be better than last year's first sales was realized as high quality offerings brought a record opening average for the market.

J. N. Bryan, sales supervisor of the local Tobacco Board of Trade, said today that Greenville warehouses opened their 88th season with an average of $119.56 per hundred pounds, up $33.23 per hundred pounds over the 1977 opening average.

"I thought the tobacco looked real good yesterday," Bryan observed, noting especially that farmers flocked a "clean crop," free of excessive sand and other foreign matter.

of 713,967 was down slightly from last year opening figure of 747,739, total money yesterday amounted to $853,622, compared with $645,521 in 1977.

Greenville's average Tuesday was just under the Eastern Belt's overall figure of $119.91 as 13 of the 17 markets in the belt held opening sales.

According to Bryan, offerings on the warehouse floors here yesterday consisted mainly of primings and lugs with the P and X grades of leaf comprising roughly 70 percent of the total volume.

Some 20 percent of the volume involved cutters, the spokesman said, while ten percent was made up of non-descript tobacco.

An encouraging aspect of the opening sale involved the Stabilization or loan program receipts, Bryan said, with only one percent of the total sales designated for the program. Last year, opening day Stabilization receipts amounted to 9.75 percent.

The low percentage of tobacco going to the loan program indicated that farmers marketed less of the lower-quality bottom leaves that the industry said were not needed due to an oversupply of lower stalk tobacco in the Stabilization inventory.

Top practical price paid here by the buying companies was $1.55 per pound, according to Bryan.

Kinston topped the 13 markets Tuesday in opening average with $129.14 while Wallace recorded the low average for the day of $106.04.

Robersonville, Ahoskie and Washington were scheduled to open their warehouses today while the Tarboro market will hold its first auctions on Thursday.

Crane First In '80 Race

WASHINGTON (AP) - Conservative Republican Philip M. Crane entered the 1980 presidential race today with a promise to liberate the American people from "confiscatory taxation and excessive regulation."

At a news conference in a room across a hall from the Senate chamber, the Illinois congressman said his candidacy was "a commitment to the future. A restoration of the American dream to its proper custodian, the American people."

"A commitment that as a free people liberated from excessive government, we can achieve and together embark on the greatest and most exciting, productive century our country has ever known," Crane said.

He thus became the first announced candidate of either major party for the 1980 nomination.

Crane said the nation's leaders "appear filled with self-doubts about the future. Our institutions are working to deny individual fulfillment through confiscatory taxation and excessive regulation."

In making an early leap into the 1980 campaign, Crane said he was taking a lesson from the political success of Jimmy Carter in 1976.

"If we learned nothing else from Jimmy, it's that an early declaration is beneficial to your candidacy," Crane told reporters days before his announcement.

"There can be only one nominee and I think I'm the frontrunner as soon as I make my declaration," said Crane, who scheduled a news conference today to make it official.

While technically correct, Crane also is aware that he's bucking Ronald Reagan's powerful appeal among conservatives. Reagan is expected to make one more run for the White House.

U.S. Will Reopen 3 Posts In Turkey

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Key American observation posts of Soviet military activity - closed by Turkey three years ago when Congress stopped arms sales to that country - will reopen within a matter of months, military sources say, now that the arms ban has been lifted.

Congress imposed the embargo in response to Turkey's use of U.S.-supplied arms to invade and occupy the troubled island of Cyprus, whose Greek and Turkish residents have feuded for generations. The embargo has been a major source of trouble in President Carter's dealings with Turkey.

Carter, who won a hair-breadth foreign policy victory when the House voted 208-205 Tuesday to lift the embargo, issued a statement immediately afterward warning Turkey against resorting again to arms to resolve the still-festering dispute over Cyprus. "Any effort to impose a military solution would be actively and unequivocally opposed by the United States," he said.

Resumption of intelligence operations in Turkey, the military sources said, will plug what they consider to have been a serious gap in the U.S. ability to monitor important military developments inside the Soviet Union. Defense Department officials recently told Congress that experience gained since the shutdown shows that the actual loss has been severe.

Three vital intelligence bases will be reopened, but a fourth, at Karamursel, will not be put back in action, officials said, because it no longer is considered necessary or worth the expense.

In addition to the intelligence bases, the Pentagon plans to move quickly to reactivate a long-range navigation station at Karga Burum, possibly within a week.

The Senate gave its approval to ending the embargo last week. There are minor differences between the Senate and House measures that remain to be worked out in a conference committee. The embargo repeal is part of a larger $1 billion military aid package.

I'm tired of wearing slacks all the time, but I have to because my legs are badly malformed. I think this is due to a condition I had as a child which I was never taken to a doctor for. I remember terrible leg cramps. I'm too embarrassed to go to a doctor now, and have thought of answering some of those ads that say they can help you increase your leg size. But I'm afraid of them, too. Can you find me some help?

Hotline told Cathy Paige of the Pitt County Community Health Department about your problem. She's very understanding and very eager to try to guide you to the right place to get help. She wants to talk to you well in advance of the next Orthopedic Clinic at the Health Department. These are held the fourth Friday of each month. Farmville Commissioners agreed last night to study during the next month whether to tear down or repair buildings on the old high school grounds and to make a decision at the next regular meeting.

Estimates on reroofing the old agriculture building, ranging from $2,770 to $4,643.22 were heard, but no decision was made. The Commissioners expressed doubt that, even if the roof is repaired, the building can be used for anything other than "rough storage." They said the money might be better spent tearing down the building and applying funds toward preparations for a new municipal complex on the entire one-block site.

Hope was expressed that some kind of gymnasium could be maintained by the town. A decision needs to be made as to whether to keep the entire gym building as it is now, to tear down the annex which includes classrooms and a lobby, or to tear down the whole structure and start over with a less expensively constructed gym in another place.

Pete Anderson, president of the Farmville Senior Council, appeared to introduce himself and other Council officers, including D. D. Burge, vice president; and Mrs. Hallie Bass, secretary. He said a Board of Directors will be picked soon and a charter adopted.

Town Administrator Patrick Thomas, who doubles as tax collector, said he believes collections this year will be "a couple of percentage points higher than those of last year, because of new policies and procedures. Some 97 percent was collected last year.

Thomas reported that verbal notification has been received from the Mid-East Commission that Farmville's application for $2,700 in grant funds to assist in planning improvements to the town's solid waste system has been awarded. Much of this work is within the original scope of service sought from MICA, the cost-saving consulting firm retained by the town, and the grant may therefore partially offset their fee, with an eventual "double saving" being the results if they produce cost-saving improvements, he said.

As a technicality, two definitions (of BOD and suspended solids) were added to the town's Industrial Cost Recovery Ordinance.

A resumption of this meeting was set for Monday, Aug. 8, at 2 p.m. in the Town Conference Room to decide whether to accept a Housing and Urban Development Community Development grant for housing improvement. The Commissioners expressed concern as to whether other towns who have accepted this kind of grant have been pleased with how it worked out for the landowners who received the grants and for the town administering the programs and the agreements that would be a part of it. They asked the administrator to contact other towns and provide a memo on the subject before the meeting. The reason for the continuation of this meeting to decide the issue is that action needs to be taken in time to retain a Regional Development Institute person to help with grant applications due Aug. 30. If the grant is to be sought.

It was reported that the town has been turned down on its application for HUD (Continued on page 12)

Hugs Secretary, Steams His Wife

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Why can't women be as broad-minded as men? We've been married 15 years, and my wife is doing a super job with our home and children, but she's letting a small incident she happened to witness make a difference in our lives.

Now, you're a business woman, Abby, and you know how hard it is to keep a good secretary. Mine has been with me for five years and she does a great job. She's always on time, she's efficient, and the price is right.

Well, last week my wife dropped in at the office, and she happened to see me hug my secretary. I've made friendly gestures like this for some time to show I appreciate her, but now my wife is steamed, and she's giving me a hard time.

Abby, will you please say something in your column about how hard it is to find a good secretary?

JULIUS

DEAR JULIUS: A good plumber is also hard to find! I mean one who comes immediately when you call him, has all the parts he needs with him and does the job at a price that's right. How would you like to come home and find your wife "showing her appreciation" by hugging him?

The next time you want to show your "appreciation," try money.

DEAR ABBY: You told a reader that you took Catholic instruction to better understand Catholicism—to learn, not turn. What a beautiful ideal! I'm Catholic and regularly read publications of other religions.

Our small parish in Lockport, N.Y., has conducted a weekly series where ministers and pastors are invited to tell us about their beliefs and show us their churches (unfortunately, there is no synagogue nearby).

I hope your example prompts others among your millions of readers to become more curious and understanding, and less prejudiced and blindly accusative.

A.M., JR.

DEAR A.M.: So do I. Prejudice is based on ignorance. I can't stress strongly enough the importance of learning about religions that differ from our own. Where there is knowledge and compassion there cannot be hate or prejudice.

DEAR ABBY: In a column, you used the phrase, "You can insure this feeling by..."

The word is ensure, unless one can insure feelings as Betty Grable's legs were insured.

Ensure means to make sure, to make more probable. Insure means to provide for indemnity or reimbursement in the event that something happens. And, for good measure, assure means to promise. Example: The salesman assured him that insuring his life would ensure his family's financial security.

Words are our professional tools, and we do well to keep them sharp.

WILLIAM H. HEWITT: WHITTIER, CALIF.

DEAR MR. HEWITT: My Webster's New International Dictionary (Second Edition; unabridged) shows that "insure" is a synonym for "ensure"—and vice versa—(Betty Grable's legs notwithstanding).

CONFIDENTIAL TO HEARTBROKEN AUNT IN ANOKA: Don't be so quick to judge. Sometimes it takes more love to give away a child than to keep it.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

WHAT'S IT WORTH? WASHINGTON (AP) — How much would it cost to hire someone to do the jobs done by a fulltime homemaker?

A lot. The American Council of Life Insurance estimates it would cost more than $17,000 a year to hire outside help to do the cooking, cleaning and numerous other jobs done by a homemaker.

Quality Good—Prices Better

Area tobacco markets opened Tuesday and, as was expected, quality was good and prices paid were better than last year.

Farm observers had been saying that growers had the best quality tobacco in years and the hopes were for good prices reflective of that quality.

First day's sales were not disappointing. Assistant secretary of Agriculture Bobby Smith, in Greenville for the opening, said the situation was "looking great." Smith, who represented U. S. Sec. of Agriculture Bob Bergland, said the upcoming visit of President Carter to Wilson indicates the government's commitment to the tobacco program. John Cyrus of the N. C. Department of Agriculture said Tuesday's tobacco was some of the cleanest he had observed this year. There have been complaints in years past about sandy or trashy tobacco. A low take by Stabilization Corp. was seen by observers for the first day's sales. All-in-all the opening day sales on the Eastern Tobacco Belt seemed to bear out the optimism among growers and observers of the tobacco scene. If prices hold, and increase as better grades come on the market, this could be one of the best years ever for the tobacco farmer.

Bypass Means Commitment To East

Gov. Hunt officially cut the ribbon to open a 23 mile segment of the U. S. 70 bypass at New Bern Monday. The $29.2 million project will offer an improved route in the east from Morehead City to Raleigh. While Pitt County is not directly on the route, the bypass will mean improved traffic conditions on U. S. 17 at New Bern. The U. S. 70 bypass is an indication of a new commitment in North Carolina to providing better eastern roads. We hope there will be no lessening of the efforts to construct major highways tying the East to the remainder of the state.

THIS AFTERNOON

Boon In Business Travel

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — The typical tourist scene in North Carolina is envisioned as a sunburned family loaded down with recreational gear and heading for the beaches or the mountains. That is not necessarily the case. Business travel is big and growing rapidly across the state. Take this example: Travel activities surrounding the Southern Furniture Market generate spending of more than $40 million each year. The market covers 11 counties stretching from Burlington to Lenoir, a distance of over 150 miles. Two shows — in the fall and in the spring — make up the 10-day Furniture Market drawing more than 70,000 buyers and manufacturer's representatives. Another example: Conventions are growing in importance, with 315,804 delegates attending 1,028 conventions in North Carolina last year. Those conventioners spent $46.3 million.

fairly consistent level of business travel."

BILL NOBLITT

The economic analysis has been published in pamphlet form, and provides a handy guide to where people travel, why, and how they spend their money. A variety of sources were used by Lewis and Leona Copeland of Knoxville, Tenn., to provide what they feel are dependable statistics. In 1977, all travelers in North Carolina spent $1.768 billion including $591 million spent by Tar Heels traveling in their own state. Out-of-state visitors spent $1.117 billion. Breaking that down into purposes of the visits, businessmen spent $568 million while $1.2 billion was spent for recreational purposes or personal trips.

Where It Goes
How do travelers spend their money while away from home? The automobile takes the largest share, with gasoline and auto repairs accounting for 22 cents of each dollar. Other transportation claims 14 cents of each dollar (bus, rail, or airline). Lodgings collect 17 cents of each dollar spent, and food takes 21 cents. Sporting goods and recreational services or activities collect 14 cents. The survey, incidentally, proves another point: people had rather travel in the South than elsewhere, even when they live here. While all travelers were spending $23 million in the 11 southern states last year, residents from the South only spent $16.7 billion traveling in all other regions of the nation. That gives the South a net balance of $6.3 billion. Nearly half the visitors are from the Northeast, 31 percent from the Great Lakes region; and 20 percent from western states.

Feeding Sleeping Bags

(Art Buchwald is on assignment for a few weeks trying to find out if there are any Cuban troops on Cape Cod. He left behind his all-time favorite columns.)
I was very surprised to read in the newspaper last week that Mrs. Ford said her family was cutting down on their food bills as a way of fighting inflation. The reason I was surprised was that Mrs. Ford has teenagers, and there is no way under the sun you can cut a food budget when you have teenagers living in the house. It isn't the immediate family that costs money — it's feeding everyone else's children that sends your food costs skyrocketing. In the past most of us could get away with giving a strange child a glass of milk and a cookie. But in recent years we seem to be sustaining large masses of youth, which I have dubbed, for the want of a better name, the sleeping bag generation. Last month my grocery bill for a family of four on Martha's Vineyard was $791. This is what happened. Three sleeping bags showed up at the door. A voice from one of the sleeping bags said, "We're very good friends of your daughter Hilda, and she said we could camp on your property when you got here." "I don't have a daughter named Hilda," I said. "What's her name?" a voice from another sleeping bag asked. "Jenny." "That's it," the voice said. "We're good friends of Jenny, and she said we could sleep on your lawn so we won't be arrested and tortured by the police with chains and rubber hoses." "We won't be any bother," a voice from another sleeping bag said. "We have stale doughnuts for dinner." I gave permission for them to camp out on the lawn.

Reform Still A Dream

By WALTER R. MEARS AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — Back when President Carter was campaigning for a top-to-bottom overhaul of the federal tax code, his program was short of specifics except for one clear target. He wanted to do away with the tax break for capital gains, the income derived from the sale of stock, real estate and other assets. But Congress has other ideas. Now Carter does, too. "We have spelled out our position very clearly," he said the other day. "I am not opposed to capital gains reductions as such." Clarity never has been the Carter trademark on the tax issue. During his long campaign, he fended off questions about the specifics of what he said would be a total revision of the tax laws, saying he would need time in office to study the questions involved and put together a complete package. But he did say from the beginning that all income should be taxed alike. "One provision would be to tax capital income and earned income the same way," he said as a candidate. He tried to move in that direction in his tax proposal early this year, seeking an increase of about $140 million in capital gains taxes. But Congress is headed in the opposite direction, and the House Ways and Means Committee has approved a bill that would reduce capital gains taxes by about $1.3 billion. Carter said he would not accept a tax bill that would undo the minimum tax on sheltered income in the process of lowering the capital gains rate. "I think that is an unfair approach and it is unacceptable to me," he said. "Other modifications in capital gains rates would be acceptable to us." But the modification obviously is going to be downward, not

Age Problem For Reagan

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan has toyed with a dramatic response to the political hazard of his age: a pledge to serve only one term if elected president. Reagan, 67, asked a group of prominent Republican businessmen several weeks ago for their opinion of a one-term promise. That exchange has been relayed to Republican politicians across the country. However, Reagan's political advisers have argued vigorously against this approach, contending it would only call attention to the age problem. They convinced Reagan to say no more about it. Since the vice president becomes heir-apparent in a oneterm presidency, Reagan also has considered an innovation in picking his running mate. In that same conversation with businessmen, he suggested a possible free selection of his vicepresidential nominee by the national convention. That idea, too, was vetoed by Reagan advisers as a sign of weakness. Since then, he said nothing more about not picking his own running-mate. Kennedy's Rebuff Facing harsh opposition in the Senate, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy withdrew a highly controversial amendment last week that would have forced public disclosure of all private bank loans to countries charged with violating human rights. Kennedy produced his amendment (also sponsored by Sen. Frank Church, soon to be chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee) at the end of the Senate's long debate on the security assistance bill. Written with the knowledge of former Kennedy staffer Mark Schneider, now a top State Department human rights official, the proposal brought an angry response from Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan. Moynihan described the amendment as "an alarmingly statist, an alarmingly illiberal proposal...that private persons and private institutions must behave as the state behaves." Worse, said Moynihan, the amendment seemed aimed at a single country: Chile. "I do not at all question that we should talk about Chile," Moynihan told the late-night Senate session, calling Chile "that brutal regime." But how about Afghanistan, he asked, where 5,000 persons were "slaughtered" when a pro-Soviet regime took power three months ago? The reason, the New York

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:
President Carter's plan for national health insurance is a clear departure from the Constitution. Socialized medicine will not promote the general welfare. National health insurance presupposes that government should meet all our needs. The Constitution limits the federal government so as to allow the individual to work and enjoy the fruits of his labor. If he cannot meet his own needs, then the family unit is available. If not the family, then the local or state government may help. But the federal government should never be the meeter of needs. Unfortunately, federal income taxes confiscate the fruits of our labor. The President's Council on Wage and Price Stability has said, "It is all too apparent that right now with current reimbursement programs and the ubiquitous and often conflicting morass of regulations, the federal government, instead of being part of the solution, is part of the problem of rising health care costs." Liberty is our priceless power to choose. Carter's plan — though not as swift and socialistic as Senator Kennedy would like — is an experiment on our liberty. Shall we follow England and Sweden down the road to serfdom?

40 Years Ago Today

August 2, 1938
Money began flowing in Greenville this week as machinery in the city's only large industry — tobacco factories — started turning. Between three and four thousand people were employed this week by the factories "working" Georgia tobacco. Pay rolls will be turned loose in Greenville this week-end and thousands of dollars will be spent. Pitt County schools will open on Thursday, September 1, it was announced today at the offices of the Board of Education. The various units in the county system opened on September 2 last year. In making the announcement of the opening date, D. H. Conley, superintendent, said by starting Thursday all preliminary work could be completed by the first of the next week and regular class work begun on Monday. The Thursday and Friday also will make up for the two days to be observed as a Thanksgiving holiday, making the weeks come out even before Christmas holidays.

Public Paying For Negligence

By JOHN CUNIFF
NEW YORK (AP) — What is the public's responsibility to individuals who fail to protect themselves? Homeowners in the northern New Jersey town of Plainfield suffered heavy flood damage in early August 1973, much of it uninsured. Following the destruction, there was a rush to buy protection. Of 329 flood policies sold during the entire year, 220 of the purchases came in August and September, right after the flood. Wherever you go the pattern is repeated. "When it comes to locking the barn door after the horse has been stolen, human beings are without peer," says Howard Kunreuther, concerned but not surprised observer. Kunreuther worries not just for the property owners who suffer losses, but for the public which, he says, is bearing more and more of the bill for the negligence of individual property owners. "Between 1966 and 1976 the Small Business Administration made 19 times as many disaster loans (worth 11 times as many dollars) as it did during the preceding 12-year period," he reports. That money came from taxes, Kunreuther points out. That is, the public was asked to share the individual's loss, even though the individual in many instances had the werewithal to protect himself — and did not. As chairman of the University of Pennsylvania's Department of Decision Sciences, Kunreuther has observed procrastination often, and not just in regard to ear-the policyholder without insurance. But the owner insures. Meanwhile, the less likely but disastrous event is not covered. This, suggests Kunreuther, is illogical. "Standard models of rational economic behavior would predict just the opposite choice," he said. Rational or not, tests show it is the way people act and react. Even with heavily subsidized premiums under the National Flood Insurance Program, people have declined to buy. Kunreuther states, and he cites the Rapid City flood as evidence. When that South Dakota city was ravaged in June 1972 by water pouring from storms in the Black Hills, only 29 policies were in force, although the city had qualified under the national plan a year earlier.

WIPING OUT THE ENEMIES
The story is told of an ancient Chinese emperor, who confronting an insurrection, took a vow that he would destroy his enemies. He captured all of them in a quick and successful military campaign. But then, to the astonishment of his generals, the emperor punished no one. "Is this the way in which you fulfill your promise?" asked his first minister with considerable asperity. "Your royal word was given that your enemies would be destroyed; and behold, you have pardoned them all, and even caressed some of them!" "I promised," replied the emperor, "to destroy my enemies, and I have done so. They are my enemies no longer. I have transformed them into friends." Certainly the most effective way to slay one's enemies is to slay the enmity which causes them to be enemies. As it happened in olden days, it continues to happen that when an enemy is well-treated, he usually becomes a friend.

dial evening including a walk on the lawn. Hours later the canny Long electrified a packed National Press Club audience with his plan to limit the capital gains tax to 30 percent of the gain, at rates between 14 and 65 percent. The purpose of Long's and similar proposals, bitterly resisted by the president, is to encourage capital formation: money to stimulate new investment.

The timing of Long's intimate dinner with the Carters and his decision to go public with the anti-Carter capital gains tax proposal brought wry chuckles to some top-level congressional Democrats. They claimed it dramatized the president's difficulty in changing the hearts and minds of the Capitol Hill grandees who count most in getting the Carter program through Congress.

WHITE HOUSE SNAFU
Some 35 members of the House elected to the 94th Congress in the post-Watergate Democratic victory of 1974 were kept waiting a half-hour without water or coffee in an empty room in the White House on the morning of July 27. Their mission: an informal chat with the president, at his invitation. When Mr. Carter, delayed by other business, finally arrived, several of his angry guests — including some Democrats — had stalked out and returned to Capitol Hill to avoid missing quorum calls and committee sessions. Those who stayed got their money's worth: almost one hour of "rapping", with Jimmy Carter, including an airing of gripes and grievances on both sides which one congressman called constructive. But the tardy president hurt some feelings. "When our Class of '94" — that is, the 94th Congress — "was invited to the White House by President Ford," one member told us, "we got breakfast and Henry Kissinger. This time we weren't even offered coffee."

who camped on my property in Martha's Vineyard. If I refuse hospitality from them I am considered an ogre by my children, Hilda and Edward, or whatever their names are. But if I let them spread out on the grass I'm going to get another $800 grocery bill.

I'm sure Mrs. Ford is telling the truth when she says she's been able to cut back on her food bills. But I figure the only way she has been able to do it is by having the Secret Service boot all the goose-feather sleeping bag acquaintances of her children right off the White House lawn.

Seventh Draw

BAGUIO CITY, Philippines (AP) — Challenger Viktor Korchnoi's unofficial Israeli second found a sensational variation that brought the seventh game of the world chess championship to a surprise draw today instead of an expected victory for Soviet champion Anatoly Karpov.

It was the seventh straight draw of the match, in which one of the players must score six wins to get the world championship and $350,000. Experts figure the match, now in its third week and at three games a week, will last two or three months.

The 27-year-old Soviet champion offered a draw after Korchnoi's sealed 42nd move — an expected queen to rook 8 check — was opened.

It was Yasha Mured, who emigrated to Israel from the Soviet Union in 1976 and who was celebrating his 38th birthday, who came up with the series of moves that turned expected disaster for Korchnoi into an acceptable draw.

Urges Turnout In Carter Visit

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt is urging Wilsonites to turn out in force for President Carter's visit Saturday. He and Democratic U.S. Senate candidate John R. Ingram opened a Welcome Carter headquarters here Tuesday. But so far, town officials haven't had much to do with the planning of the visit.

Mayor H.P. Benton Jr. isn't involved, and the city's Chamber of Commerce hadn't been asked to help with the visit as of Tuesday. Chamber officials said they were told to refer questions about the president's visit to a special White House office set up in a downtown hotel.

Carter is scheduled to arrive at the Wilson-Rocky Mount Airport about noon and leave at 3 p.m.

Local police say they are involved in security arrangements for the trip. Police Chief Robert Key said he and Secret Service agents were collaborating on security for the Carter motorcade.

"I have been pre-planning the security with federal people all week," Key said. "I will be calling in extra officers Saturday; all off-duty men will be called in."

"Of course, we will be coordinating this with the state Highway Patrol and the Wilson County Sheriff's Department," Key added. "It's a big job to plan for this kind of thing."

Gov. Hunt, along with other state and local officials, will meet Carter at the airport, according to the White House press office.

Carter is expected to travel in the motorcade from the airport to the Wilson County Library, where he will greet supporters and give a brief speech.

"Several local bands are scheduled to play in a program before the president's arrival," Sherry Metcalf of the White House press office said. "President Carter will address Wilson residents and supporters on the library lawn. Then he will attend a private luncheon with state Democrats at the Heart of Wilson Motel."

In opening the welcome headquarters, Hunt said Carter cares about the tobacco farmer and the Democratic Party. "That's why he's coming here," the governor said.

Takeover Accepted By Colonial Stores

ATLANTA (AP) — Directors of Colonial Stores Inc. have agreed to sell the firm to Grand Union Co. for $35 per share of stock, abandoning a month-long battle against the takeover. Colonial officials announced Tuesday.

The takeover would create the nation's eighth largest food store chain with 849 stores along the East Coast from Florida to Vermont and assets of about $2.6 billion.

Colonial had been fighting the takeover attempt since late June, when Colonial's directors rejected a $30-per-share offer from Grand Union, a New Jersey-based supermarket chain.

Atlanta-based Colonial filed suit in U.S. District Court here in an attempt to prevent the merger, and legal papers also were filed with the Georgia commissioner of securities and the Virginia State Corporate Commission. Colonial is incorporated in Virginia.

Colonial "has agreed that it would withdraw all pending litigation against Grand Union" as part of the new tender offer, Ted Simmons, Colonial's vice president for public relations, said Tuesday.

Simmons said the offer is subject to review by the Federal Trade Commission. Colonial had charged that the Grand Union takeover might be a violation of FTC anti-trust regulations.

Grand Union indicated it expects to mail tender offer material to Colonial shareholders on or about Aug. 4, Simmons said. But the New Jersey firm would not purchase tendered shares until Aug. 29, the earliest legal date under FTC time requirements, he said.

The announcement also said the parties intend to enter into a merger agreement under which any Colonial shares outstanding after the Grand Union offer up, as he wanted it to be in the first place.

Carter said he is "flexible enough." It is flexibility with a purpose: to get the best deal possible out of Congress.

That certainly represents a change in tone from the position Carter took on June 26, when he said the capital gains tax provision pending then would be a step backward, away from the reforms he wanted, and threatened a veto.

His position now is that he will look at the final product, sign it if it is in the best interest of the nation, and veto it if not.

Whatever he gets, it will not come close to the proposals he sent Congress early this year, let alone the terms he outlined during the campaign.

"It is time for a complete overhaul of our income tax system..." he said then. "It is a disgrace to the human race. All my life I have heard promises about tax reform, but it never quite happens. With your help, we are finally going to make it happen. And you can depend on it."

would be converted into cash at $35 a share.

If required under Virginia law, the merger would be submitted to a vote of Colonial shareholders "as soon as practical after completion of the tender offer in compliance with applicable legal requirements," the joint announcement said.

Home Gardening Keeps Growing

By BRIAN B. KING
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — America's 32 million home gardeners, faced with rising supermarket prices, harvested $14 billion worth of fruits and vegetables last year — 8 percent of what consumers spent on domestically grown food. One of several indicators that the home gardening craze which began in 1973 is providing stiff competition for the food industry is a recent survey by the Gallup Organization Inc. showing that the value of homegrown food is up from $10 billion in 1976.

The privately financed survey based the homegrown food value on average supermarket prices for fruits and vegetables and an average garden size of 770 square feet.

Other indications of the competition were provided by the Agriculture Department's Evelyn Kaitz in a current issue of the department's Food Situation Report. She wrote:

—Available information indicates 11 percent of the processed fruits and vegetables consumed by Americans last year came from home gardens.

—Consumption of fresh, canned and frozen vegetables grown by farmers dropped from 157.7 pounds in 1973 to 155.8 pounds last year, a decline of 1.2 percent. Potatoes and sweet potatoes were not included.

—Fresh vegetable consumption, which had been declining before the boom in backyard plots, picked up in 1974, 1975 and 1976. The figures were down last year, however.

—Consumption of fresh fruit, 90 pounds per person in 1960 before beginning a decline, also experienced a comeback. Consumption went from 74 pounds to 82.1 pounds between 1973 and 1977.

Ms. Kaitz also cited figures showing that some 6 million acres were devoted to home gardens last year.

That's "about the same used for growing the principal commercial fruits and vegetables" by fulltime farmers, she wrote. But she noted "the commercial acreage is used more extensively."

Ms. Kaitz said that three years of surveys by the department have found an increase of about 4 percent a year in the number of home gardens since 1973.

The department estimates that for every hour someone spends in a home garden, there's a net return of $3 to $5.

Home gardeners are bound to receive additional encouragement from food prices that are expected to increase 10 percent by year's end over 1977 prices.

Prices of fruits and vegetables have been rising faster than those of any other food group — at an annual rate through May of 36.7 percent.

Indict Five On Loan-Sharking

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Five people were indicted Tuesday in connection with an alleged loan-sharking operation by a federal grand jury investigating waterfront corruption.

Federal officials said the indictments were the first phase of a wide-ranging probe of International Longshoremen's Association units here and in Morehead City. The alleged operators were charged with using a local business to collect unlawful debts.

Two people were charged with operating the alleged loansharking scheme. Three others were charged in separate indictments with perjury before the grand jury during its investigation.

James Lee, a former ILA member who owned and operated the fifth Avenue Snack Bar, and Rosa Belle Davis, a snack-bar employee, were charged with using the establishment to collect payment of interest and principal on loans at more than twice the legal interest rate and with conspiracy to violate the law.

The illegal collections occurred between July 30, 1971 and Aug. 5, 1977, according to the government. They ranged from $10 to $168.

The activities are violations of the federal Racketeer Influence and Corrupt Organizations Act and carry a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison and a $25,000 fine.

Theodore DeBose, Albert Formey and Bernest Moore were indicted for making false statements to the grand jury on Nov. 1, 1977. The charges carry a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine. The indictments said the men falsely told the grand jury that they paid no interest on money they borrowed from Lee.

A spokesman for the U.S. Attorney's Office in Raleigh said the local charges resulted from an investigation by the Internal Revenue Service, FBI and U.S. Department of Justice.

The spokesman said the investigation at both ports for possible similar violations and other charges, including embezzlement, would continue. He said the special grand jury would meet again this fall.

FINANCE BACKGROUND NEW YORK (UPI) — A survey by an executive search firm, Egon Zehnder International, has found that 19 percent of U.S. corporate chief executive officers has a background in finance.

Award Nursing Degrees Friday

ECU News Bureau
The first graduate degrees to be awarded by the School of Nursing of East Carolina University will be conferred in special ceremonies Friday, Aug. 4.

Receiving the Master of Science in Nursing (MSN) degree will be Jean Morris of Colerain, and Carolina Phillips of Seven Springs. They are the first two graduates to earn advanced degrees in the graduate program initiated by the School of Nursing last Fall. Ten more graduate students are scheduled to receive their Master's degrees in December.

Each candidate for the MSN degree must complete advanced clinical training in a functional area of teaching. Both Morris and Phillips did clinical concentration in medical-surgical nursing—Phillips at Lenoir Memorial Hospital, Kinston, and Morris at Pitt Memorial Hospital, Greenville.

The graduate program in Nursing is directed by Dr. Dixie Koldjeski, director of graduate studies and assistant dean. There are currently 23 new admissions for the Fall semester, and the program totals more than 75 students, Dr. Koldjeski said.

The purpose of the graduate program is to offer the training and clinical concentration needed to teach nursing or to function in advanced capacity in a hospital situation.

funds for a $220,000 fire protection program. It was hoped that this money could be used to provide a second fire station (on the other side of the railroad tracks) for Farmville. Some $36,240 has been set aside so far for this project.

A grant the town has received is a Planning and Management Assistance one from the Division of Community Assistance. $11,000 is to be used for land use plan extension and update, a master plan for drainage control, zoning ordinance update and revision, and management monitoring and evaluation. Some $6,600 is to be provided by the federal government and $4,400 is to come from local sources.

Landscaping of the downtown was discussed, with no action taken. There will be 14 green areas to be landscaped plus the old school property.

It was decided that the R. L. Davis Cedar, which served last year as a town Christmas tree, should be replaced. It blew over during a storm some time ago, and though it was righted, it died. The tree is located in the parking lot behind the 100 block of South Main Street (west side).

Approval was given for $9,250 in pipe replacement and $2,400 in street patching on Bynum Drive to replace a troublesome sewer line.

It was decided that the town will foot the bill for changing meters that are presently on the fronts of buildings in the downtown area (13 of them) to the backs and that owners of the building will have to reroute their inside wiring. Underground wiring will also be run to four residences on North Main Street which are in the downtown improvement area, which will have all wiring underground, with the owners bearing the cost of hooking up. The town will furnish new meter bases when needed.

A yield sign for the point that Greene Street runs into Forest Hills Cemetery was approved. The tendency has been, the Police Department reports, for cemetery-bound vehicles on Greene to continue into the cemetery, forgetting southbound traffic on Waverly.

A fire hydrant will be put in adjacent to the Worthington Warehouse as soon as the area is annexed, but not before unless it is paid for, with no promise of reimbursement, by the Worthingtons, the Board said. Annexation is expected in July, 1979.

A street running between the Worthington Warehouse and Dean Oil Company was designated Ratley Road, in honor of Mrs. Robert May's father, who lives in Red Springs. The land for the dedicated street was originally owned by the Mays.

A resolution to declare the dwelling at 113 W. Acton Place certified for occupancy was passed. The house, once condemned, has been brought up to code by Mrs. Mary S. Blount, its owner.

Commissioner LeRoy Redden was given the go-ahead to talk with the owner of a house at 108 W. Hines Street which will be demolished if it is not repaired soon. A decision will be made at the September meeting, it was indicated. Mark Hart is in charge of the property for the Cecilia Hart heirs.

The Board renewed the town's commitment to the Pitt County Selective Mutual Emergency Fire Aid Pact.

Commissioner Walston expressed concern that every person who does a repair job for his neighbor for a modest sum should not have to have a contractor's license. Commissioner Farrior said, though, that state law requires this licensing and the town cannot lessen the state law, only supercede it.

Hope Avoid Filibuster Over Natural Gas Plan

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sentiment is growing on both sides of the natural gas pricing fight to avert a Senate filibuster and hold an early vote on the critical section of President Carter's national energy plan.

Supporters of a compromise on natural gas say they are confident they can break a filibuster planned by liberal Democrats. But they have doubts, whether the bill itself will win Senate approval.

"We have the votes for cloture (ending debate), but I'm less sure about the bill," Sen. Henry M. Jackson, chairman of the Senate energy committee, said Tuesday.

Two Republicans active in the energy fight also agreed that the 60 votes needed to attain cloture would probably be gathered together by early next week.

They are Sens. John Tower of Texas, a firm opponent of compromise, and Pete Domenici of New Mexico, who is among the 10 Senate conferees backing the multibillion dollar legislation.

compromise back to a conference committee, thus averting a final vote.

Tower says the bill delays a lifting of federal controls for too long, while Abourezk says it will reward natural gas producers by overcharging residential consumers.

The natural gas compromise, the product of six months of occasionally bitter negotiations between senators and House members, would permit federal price ceilings to rise from the present $1.47 per thousand cubic feet to just under $2.

The price would then rise by about 10 percent a year until 1985, when controls would be lifted.

Because the natural gas pricing issue affects different regions of the country so differently, the compromise remains fragile only three days before it is scheduled to go to the Senate floor.

East Named To GOP Bd.

Dr. John P. East of Greenville, a member of the Republican National Committee, has been appointed to the Board of Advisors for the North Carolina Federation of College Republicans.

East, a political science professor at East Carolina University, is one of 24 members of the board, described by the group's chairman Rudy Ogburn, "as a listing of our Party's most distinguished and respected members."

Ogburn said, "their willingness to join our board and lend their prestige to our organization demonstrates the commitment of the North Carolina Republican Party — and its leaders — to youth involvement in the Grand Old Party. Each of these individuals understands and appreciates the contribution which young people can make in strengthening the Republican Party's base."

Among members of the advisory board, in addition to East, are U.S. Senator Jesse Helms, Congressman James T. Broyhill and James G. Martin, former Gov. Jim Holshouser, former Congressman Wilmer Mizell, and several former State officials during the Holshouser administration.

Another Of Carter 'Inner Circle' Resigns Office

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Margaret "Midge" Costanza, the feisty presidential aide whose style never suited the Carter administration, is resigning after 18 tempestuous months as an outsider among the president's inner circle.

The controversial firebrand, who had witnessed a steady erosion of her power, hand-delivered a letter of resignation on Monday, just days after she "had words" with President Carter.

The letter — "the most difficult I've ever written" — became public Tuesday night, as Ms. Costanza reportedly vacationed in Florida.

Her resignation followed by 12 days that of Dr. Peter G. Bourne, the president's adviser on drugs who had written a fictitious patient name when he prescribed a powerful sedative for one of his employees.

Carter, after showing initial reluctance, accepted Ms. Costanza's resignation "with regret," according to sources who asked not to be named.

What was characterized as Ms. Costanza's first argument with the president arose last week after Gerald Ralshoon, the new White House communications adviser, abruptly canceled her appearance on ABC's "Good Morning America" program so that she would not upstage a colleague also booked on the show.

Once the administration's liaison with minorities, women and various interest groups, Ms. Costanza's domain had been limited in May to handling women's issues. At the same time she was removed from her large office near Carter's to smaller quarters in the White House basement. Her staff was cut at the same time. Her other duties were given to Anne Wexler, former deputy undersecretary of commerce, who joined the White House staff on April 19.

There was speculation that the reduced responsibility was a signal for her to resign. Friends, who asked not to be named, contend she threatened to leave in May, but decided to remain after Carter assured her she would not be moved out of the White House altogether.

This time, at their meeting

Monday, Carter urged Ms. Costanza to take a two-week vacation and think about whether she wanted to resign.

Though she insisted her decision to quit was final, the White House did not announce the resignation immediately and had no plans to do so until it was leaked Tuesday evening.

"She's just beaten down and that's ironic because she's so resilient," a friend said.

Friends had been worried about her health, noting she often worked 19-hour days, and had not had a vacation since she took the job.

Jaycee Scholarship Is To Be Given Rose Grad

ECU News Bureau

A second annual $300 Greenville Jaycees Scholarship Fund check to aid a local area freshman student at East Carolina University has been presented to ECU Chancellor Thomas B. Brewer.

The Jaycee scholarship was initiated in 1977 as a memorial to the late Clarence Stasavich, former ECU football coach and athletic director. It will be awarded to a graduating senior from Greenville's J.H. Rose High School who has been accepted and plans to pursue a degree at ECU, according to Jaycee president Jerry Creech.

Creech said the annual scholarship has a "special meaning" among the many Jaycee projects designed to benefit the local community.

Dr. Brewer said "We are delighted that the Greenville Jaycees support the education of a needy student with this gift of $300. It is through such thoughtfulness that students will be able to continue progress

Things Occur In Body In Moon Phases

AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — All those stories you've heard about aberrant behavior and the full moon may be true.

Cops and bartenders would agree with Dr. Ralph W. Morris, professor of pharmacology at the University of Illinois Medical Center, who says:

"During periods of the full moon, there seems to be an increase in individual metabolism rates as well as an increase in tensions and anxieties.

"A person's enzymes and many of his hormones are more active during the full moon. The heart rate may be at its peak. People are generally in a more excited state."

The university says some scientists believe the Earth's gravitational and electromagnetic fields are responsible. "The moon affects these fields as evidenced by the ebb and flow of ocean tides," Morris says.

Tolerance for disease and drugs also can change with the phases of the moon, he says. A study at the university's College of Pharmacy indicates that bleeding ulcer crises peak just before the full lunar phase. And a study of 88 patients with angina pectoris, chest pains related to heart disease, showed that 64 percent of the attacks came between the full and last-quarter phase. "Only about 36 percent occurred at new or first-quarter moon," Morris says.

Best Time for Pain

Speaking of timing, the earlier in the day you go to the dentist the less it may hurt.

A study at the North Chicago Veterans Administration Hospital, an affiliate of the Chicago Medical School, indicates that pain is more tolerable in the morning than in the afternoon.

Pain, in the form of mild electrical current, was applied to 22 healthy office workers, staff, and medical student volunteers in the morning and early evening.

The average amount of electricity which produced pain in the morning was 6.22 milliamperes. In the evening, it only took 5.61 milliamperes, according to the study by Dr. Eugene J. Rogers and Barry Vilkin reported in the Journal of Clinical Psychiatry.

Stress on the Job

Working women are subjected to more stress than working men, but they handle it better, says Dr. Irving H. Tracer, a psychiatrist at Michael Reese Hospital and Medical Center in Chicago.

"Women are more open about their feelings," Tracer says. "They can discuss things. Men bottle up their emotions and direct them at their heart, arteries and stomach."

Tracer says working women must cope with sexism on the job, primary responsibility for the family and making sure her job doesn't threaten her marriage. Yet, he says, women suffer fewer heart attacks, ulcers and high blood pressure than men.

"Women don't bottle up their emotional reactions to such stresses," Tracer says. "To put it simply, they are not afraid to cry at work."

"Nursing Bottle Mouth"
"Nursing bottle mouth" may affect 1 in 20 children ranging in age from 12 months to 3 years, say specialists in children's dentistry at the Long Island College Hospital in Brooklyn.

Using a bottle filled with fruit juices, milk or other sweet liquids can decay a child's teeth, say Drs. Nathan Trotter and Jack E. Brenner.

The decaying process can begin even before teeth cut through the gums, as bacteria penetrate the gums. The upper

Alcohol, Drugs and Teen-Agers
Teen-agers given to heavy use of alcohol and drugs are unhappy, distressed, problem-ridden, have a low opinion of themselves and feel their parents are unloving and hostile toward them.

"In fact," says Dr. Robert Pandina of the Rutgers Center of Alcohol Studies, "this cluster of emotional traits was found to be so indicative of the heavy users of alcohol and drugs that it was possible to pick out many of them just from the psychosocial profile, without prior knowledge of their drinking and drug use habits.

"The implications of these findings are very important for prevention and intervention," Pandina says. "When we find a youngster with this psychosocial profile, the chances are very good that he or she is actively involved with alcohol and/or drugs or has a high potential or risk for becoming involved. Remedial measures can then be undertaken."

The findings emerged from a study of 1,970 students in grades 9 through 12 in a junior high school and two high schools in Middlesex County, N.J., and 250 girls and boys in the same age range being treated at centers for alcohol and drug problems.

Home Canning Guide Is Free

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Home canning and freezing can prevent waste from your home garden, but the U.S. Department of Agriculture warns against canning more than your family will use in one year. "Although food held longer is safe to eat, it may lose nutritional value or quality, especially if you store it at temperatures above 70 degrees F.," says the department. Free copies of "Beginner's Guide to Home Canning and Freezing" can be obtained by sending a postcard to: Consumer Information Center, Dept. 653F, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

'Star Wars' On Wall Covering

CLEVELAND (UPI) — The "Star Wars" craze now extends to wall coverings. A new pre-pasted washable strippable wallcovering depicting characters from the hit movie is being introduced at more than 1,500 decorating centers of a nationwide chain. The wallcoverings retail at $9.99 per roll or $2.49 per strip. ("Star Wars," Sherwin Williams Decorating Centers).

$16 Billion Tax Cut Is Probably To Be Offset

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even if a proposed $16.2 billion tax cut becomes law, the federal tax bite for all but a few Americans will go up next year because of inflation and a higher Social Security tab, according to new congressional figures.

The figures, compiled by staff economists for the Joint Committee on Taxation, show only people in the $15,000 tax bracket would end 1979 with a lower tax bill — and the reduction would be only $2 to $3.

taxes approved last December. While economists' calculations were based on a projected inflation rate of 7 percent, the latest Carter administration prediction is for an overall inflation rate of 7.2 percent this year.

There have been efforts in this election year to roll back the Social Security tax increases, but those moves died in mid-May when the House Ways and Means Committee rejected the ideas.

The same committee last week approved the $16.2 billion tax cut. Although the legislation is not what President Carter had wanted, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said Tuesday he expects it to be approved by the full House.

The tax cut bill — if examined without considering other factors — would provide for a tax break of from $105 to $213 for single people earning from $20,000 to $30,000 a year. The reduction would be from $146 to $304 for a family of four in the same income range.

Peter Davis, an economist for the joint committee, said Tuesday night that when inflation and the higher Social Security payroll taxes are taken into account, however, the tax picture appears quite different.

Under those circumstances, according to figures compiled by Davis, that same middle-income taxpayer would be paying anywhere from $83 to $261 more in taxes in 1979 than he paid this year.

For a single person earning $10,000, the tax cut legislation before the House would amount to a cut of $15. But after inflation and the Social Security tax hike, that same taxpayer would be paying $40 more than he paid the previous year. For a married person with two children, the bill would go up $29.

The tax approved by the Ways and Means Committee is considerably smaller than the one originally proposed by President Carter. The president's plan outlined in January — a hefty $24.5 billion reduction — was designed to offset both inflation and the higher Social Security payroll taxes.

Pageant Was Most Watched TV Show

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The beautiful part of last week for CBS was its telecast of the "Miss Universe" contest. The beauty show, seen in more than 18.2 million homes, was the week's top-rated evening program.

But ABC had 10 programs among the highest-rated 20 and edged by CBS in average nightly ratings for the week ending July 30. Its programs were seen in an average of 10.9 million homes.

CBS's programs were seen, on the average, in just over 10.8 million homes, while NBC was third, averaging 9 million homes a night, according to A.C. Nielsen Co. figures made public Tuesday.

The Nielsen said the week's lowest-ranked show was NBC's Saturday night repeat of the first part of its "Rhinemann Exchange" miniseries. That was seen in only about 5.8 million homes.

After "Miss Universe," the nine top-ranked shows last week were CBS's "Alice," 16.7 million homes; ABC's "Three's Company," "Fantasy Island" and "Starky and Hutch," respectively seen in 16.5 million, 15.7 million and 15 million homes; CBS's "All in the Family," also 15 million; ABC's "Laverne and Shirley," 14.6 million; CBS's "Switch," 14.4 million; ABC's "Love Boat," 14.3 million; and CBS's "Barnaby Jones," 14 million.

The next 10 top-ranked shows: ABC's "Charlie's Angels" and "Carter Country," CBS's "Hawaii Five-O," ABC's "Happy Days," NBC's "Rockford Files," CBS's "60 Minutes," ABC Monday Night Movie: CBS's "On Our Own," ABC Sunday Movie; and CBS's "Rhoda."

From the bottom up, the week's five lowest-rated shows were NBC's "Rhinemann Exchange," CBS's "Tom Sawyer, Part 1," the CBS Friday Night Movie, ABC's "Kraft Comedy Hour," and "Welcome Back, Kotter."

No Trip For Tokyo Rose

CHICAGO (AP) — Iva Toguri D'Aquino, World War II's "Tokyo Rose," will not be making her first visit to Japan in 29 years next month, says a nephew.

Mrs. D'Aquino was unavailable for comment, but her nephew, David Toguri, said Tuesday that his aunt feels such a trip would be too expensive.

Reports of a visit surfaced after Mrs. D'Aquino's friend in Japan, writer Fuyuko Kamisaka, said Mrs. D'Aquino planned a reunion with her Portuguese-born husband, who still lives in Yokohama.

Mrs. D'Aquino, 61, was born in the United States but was sent to Japan by her family to care for a sick aunt in 1941. She was stranded there when the war began and took a job with Radio Tokyo to support herself and her husband.

In 1949 she was convicted of making propaganda broadcasts for the Japanese to U.S. troops during the war. She served 6 1/2 years in prison. Gerald Ford issued a presidential pardon to Mrs. D'Aquino and restored her citizenship just before he left office in 1977.

Mrs. A'Aquino has been working for the family-run J. Toguri Mercantile Co., an oriental gift shop on the North Side.

Charges Face Ingram Backers

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The Rev. W.M. Cavers and Harold C. Lassiter, local supporters of Democratic U.S. Senate candidate John Ingram, were charged Tuesday with violating state elections law in the May 30 Democratic runoff between Ingram and Luther Hodges Jr.

The two were charged with allegedly distributing unsigned leaflets derogatory to Hodges. State law requires that any published charge derogatory to a candidate be signed by the person making the charge.

The charges were the result of an investigation by the Mecklenburg County district attorney's office, which looked into the matter at the request of the county board of elections. Cavers and Lassiter are scheduled for trial on Aug. 29.

Roof's Collapse Kills 5 Firemen

NEW YORK (AP) — Part of the roof of a burning supermarket in Brooklyn collapsed today, killing five firefighters, authorities reported. At least one other firefighter was missing.

At least seven firemen were injured in the four-alarm blaze at a Waldbaum's supermarket. Six of them were taken to Coney Island Hospital, where a spokesman reported none was "in any life-threatening situations." Condition of the seventh fireman was not determined immediately.

About 150 firemen from 30 companies were battling the blaze.

The fire appeared to have started in a section of the building undergoing renovation, said Margaret Trudden, who lives nearby.

She said she could see heavy smoke coming from the building but not flames.

The rally is scheduled to get underway at 12:15 p.m. at the Wilson County Library grounds, she said, and will involve a brief speech by the president.

Ample room is available at the rally site, Mrs. Speir mentioned, and parking will be on nearby streets.

The rally will be the only public appearance made by the president in Wilson, it was noted.

Rose (0-For-4) Streak Ends

ATLANTA (AP) — Pete Rose's dramatic chase of Joe DiMaggio's all-time record of hitting in 56 straight games ended at 44.

"I would have liked to see what would have happened if I had gotten up in the 50s," Rose said Tuesday night after failing to hit for the first time since mid-June. He was 0-for-4 with a walk against rookie left-hander Larry McWilliams and veteran reliever Gene Garber of the Atlanta Braves.

"But 44 is not bad," said the scrappy 37-year-old captain of the Cincinnati Reds. "I'm not really disgusted because I hit the ball well. I'll come back tomorrow and get a hit."

It was a sensational catch by McWilliams in the second inning that prevented Rose from moving out of a tie for the all-time National League record set by Willie Keeler in 1897 when he hit safely in the first 44 games that season.

Rose, who had walked on a full-count pitch to open the game, drilled a vicious liner through the middle on his first pitch from McWilliams in the second. The lanky 6-foot-5 McWilliams, appearing in only his fourth major league game, reached back and speared the shot about waist high.

Rose later grounded out to shortstop Jerry Royster in the fifth inning and lined into a double play to rookie third baseman Bob Horner in his first trip against Garber in the seventh, setting the stage for the final drama.

It came in the ninth after Garber had fanned the first two Reds he faced.

The crowd of 31,159 gave Rose a half-minute ovation as he stroled to the plate.

Rose fouled off the first pitch, attempting to bunt toward Horner at third. He then took two straight balls, low and inside, drawing a scattering of boos from the crowd. Rose fouled a 2-1 changeup at his feet and then struck out on another changeup, tipping it into the mitt of catcher Joe Nolan. "Garber was pitching like it was the seventh game of the World Series," Rose said. "He had a 16-4 lead."

Asked if he were saying the Braves' right-hander should have laid one in for him to hit, Rose replied:

"No, I don't mean that. "But I hope I get to see him (Garber) again tomorrow in a one-run game," he added. "I hope I hit a frozen rope right up the middle."

Garber, who recorded his 13th save since coming to the Braves in a trade with Philadelphia earlier this year, was undaunted.

"I don't know how I'm supposed to pitch in the seventh game of a World Series, because I never had done that," he said. "I have an idea if I was pitching like it was the seventh game of the World Series, he probably was hitting like it was the ninth inning of the seventh game of the World Series."

"I wanted his streak to continue, but I wanted to get him out, too," Garber added. "That's what I get paid to do."

It has been a season of two major accomplishments for Rose, who broke into the major leagues in 1963 with the nickname "Charlie Hustle" for the extraordinary effort he put forth in games.

He started the year — his 16th in the majors — needing only 34 hits to become the 13th player in history with 3,000 career hits, and he attained that goal on May 5 with a single off Steve Rogers of the Montreal Expos.

Asked if that had presented more pressure than the hitting streak, Rose said, "No, I couldn't visualize a 34-for-600 season."

Rose was asked if he thought he might have another long streak in him.

"I don't know if I'm too old to have another streak like that or not," he said. "There are only, what, about 56 more games left. I don't want to do that again and go crazy all winter. But I'll be trying to start another streak tomorrow night."

Rose had equalled the 5-foot-4 Keeler's NL record with a sixth-inning single off a rare fastball from Atlanta knuckleballer Phil Niekro Monday night before a crowd of 45,007, lured by the greatest run ever made at

Williamston Crushed By Hamlet Club, 27-7

HAMLET — Hamlet's American Legion baseball team gained a 3-1 advantage in the best of seven Eastern title series of the legion playoffs last night, crushing Williamston, 27-7.

Hamlet, leading 7-3 after six innings, exploded for 16 runs during the seventh inning to put the game away.

Hamlet cracked out 21 hits in the ball game, led by High with three. Two of those hits were home runs, as High hit a three-run blast in the first and a solo shot in the fifth.

Cole, who had two hits, had a solo home run in the sixth ining. Wallace, Stubbs, Kirkley and Davis also each added two hits for Hamlet. No one managed more than one hit for Williamston, which got seven hits.

After Cole's three run homer put Hamlet ahead in the first, Williamston came back to tie it up on a three-run round-tripper by Anthony Latham in the top of the second.

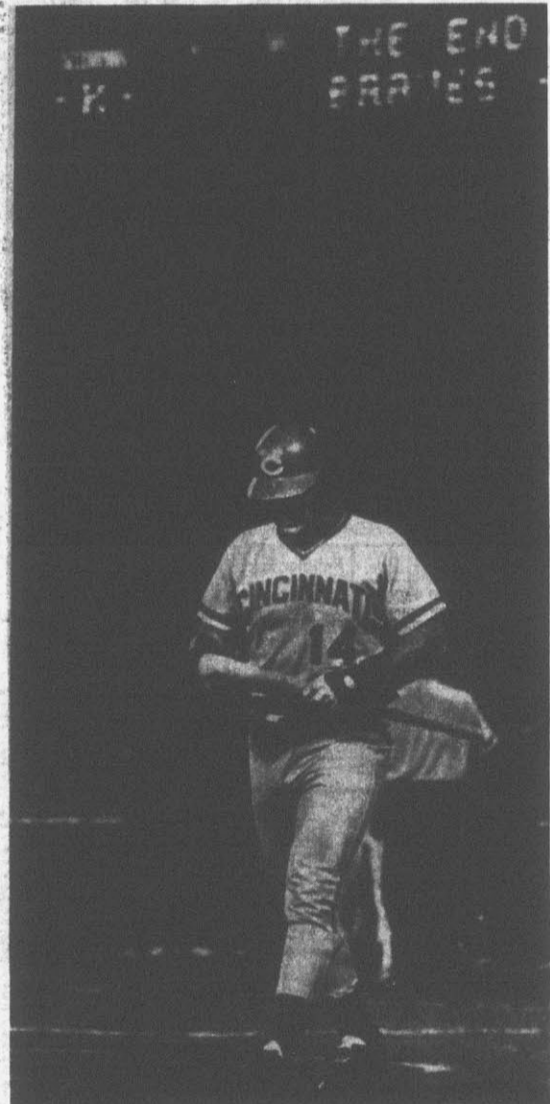

But Hamlet moved back ahead with one in the bottom of the second and never was headed again. The other four Williamston runs came in the ninth, when Trent Ange hit a grand-slam home run.

The two teams resume the series tonight in Hamlet, with the host team trying to close out the series. Should Williamston win, the series would return to Williamston for its conclusion.

Babe Ruth In Finals

TAYLORSVILLE — Greenville's 13-year-old Babe Ruth All-Stars captured a 6-0 victory over Wilmington yesterday to gain the finals of the State Tournament here.

Terry Smith hurled the victory for Greenville, knotching the shutout. He also added two hits to the Greenville batting, as did Mont Carter and Roger Carroll.

Greenville is to play unbeaten Union County tonight at 6 p.m. for the championship. A Greenville victory would force a second game at 8 p.m. with the winner of that taking the title. A Union County win in the first game would end the double elimination event.

Further details of the game were not available.

Carolina's Crum Is Worried About Bucs

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — First year North Carolina football Coach Dick Crum, who has inherited the Atlantic Coast Conference defending champions, is not too happy about prospects for the Tar Heels first game.

UNC has a late season opener, Sept. 16 against East Carolina. ECU opens early, and will have already faced Western Carolina and North Carolina State when it goes to Chapel Hill.

"The thing that concerns me most about our schedule is that ECU will be in their third game when we open against them," Crum said Tuesday. "That's enough time for them to get the wrinkles out, and we may still be a little rough."

Crum, who came to UNC this season from Miami with the departure of veteran Coach Bill Dooley, met with all six other ACC coaches and with area sports writers here. Earlier in the week, the writers predicted UNC would finish the season second behind Clemson, followed by Maryland, N.C. State, Duke, Wake Forest and Virginia.

Crum, commenting after the meeting, said he hoped future scheduling would avoid such a mismatch in game experience.

"I'd like to see some kind of gentleman's agreement in the NCAA so you couldn't do that," he said. "It's tough to play a team with that much experience."

Furthering the first game challenge, Crum acknowledged, is that most observers see a game against independent ECU, a bitter in-state rival, as a situation where there is nothing to gain but everything to lose. Though praising ECU as a strong team, Crum said UNC fans will expect a victory.

And that, facing the underdog, is just the opposite position Crum was in last year at Miami. "I've never been in the position before where we've played someone we've just got to beat," he said.

Crum said his offensive switch from the "I" formation to the veer will showcase the running of sophomore Amos Lawrence. But he said returning offensive guard John Rushing will miss the entire season due to knee surgery.

N.C. State Coach Bo Rein said his offense, with standout quarterback Johnny Evans now graduated, will hinge on the running of Ted Brown. Rein said Brown may carry the ball 40 times a game.

Maryland Coach Jerry Claiborne said his quarterback position is still unsettled, with none of four possibilities emerging as the starter during spring drills.

Duke's Mike McGee said his team's hopes will ride with senior quarterback Mike Dunn. McGee said this year's team is a younger one.

John Mackovic, new Wake Forest coach, said his team will be doing plenty of passing. He predicted running back James McDougald, who has rushed for a total of 2,000 yards in two seasons, will reach 1,000 yards again.

Virginia Coach Dick Bestwick said he had ACC-caliber players at all positions for the first time. The Cavaliers were 1-9-1 last year.

Lots Of Experience Give ECU Defensive Secondary Good Look

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The defensive secondary at East Carolina could be the strongest it has been with the return of a number of people with experience including three of the four regular starters.

The only losses out of the secondary, coached by Bobby Wallace, were Steve Hale and Drew Fish, the latter a reserve. Hale, who started, will still be around as a graduate assistant.

"Actually, you could say that we've got four starters back," Wallace said. "Ruffin McNeill and Gerald Hall both started at the same position at different times during the year." That occurred when Hall was out injured.

Returning to the corner positions are Charlie Carter (5-9, 175, Junior) and Willie Holley (5-9, 180, Junior), both of whom started last season. Backing them up will be James Freer (5-8, 170, Junior) and Thomas McLaurin (5-10, 165, Junior).

"This gives us good depth with quality athletes," Wallace pointed out. "The mistakes they made last year were due mainly to inexperience, not to lack of ability. McLaurin too can play either at the corner, or at free safety. He's an excellent pass defender."

The safeties will be McNeill (6-1, 190, Junior) and Hall (5-10, 185, Senior). Backing them up will be Bill Pinkney (5-10, 168, Sophomore) at the strong safety, and Wayne Perry (6-0, 185, Sophomore) at free safety.

"Hall will move over to free safety instead of being the strong safety," Wallace said. "But if necessary, he can move back over. Perry had a super spring for us after he was switched from the running back position. He learned a lot."

With a year of experience to work together, the backfield appears to be one of the stronger positions on the field, especially with its good depth. "Last year, the four people who started had never played together when they opened the season. This year, they've got a year together behind them."

That experience, Wallace points out, is very important in the secondary.

"If we have a weakness, it is probably our height," he added. "But we have the speed and aggressiveness to do a good job."

Wallace does not look for much help, if any, from the incoming freshmen. "We haven't gone for defensive backs as such in our recruiting this year. We may move some in from other positions, but we will have no one new to start with, except some possible walkons."

All in all, prospects for the secondary are bright. There is speed, aggressiveness, quickness, and depth. The experience is there, and Wallace feels it could be a great season for the group there.

Gene Shue Hired As New Coach For San Diego's New NBA Entry

SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Diego's new National Basketball Association club has hired former Philadelphia and Baltimore Coach Gene Shue, who told victory-starved fans of the team that they can expect a winner.

Shue is the NBA's winningest active head coach with a 448434 career record. But in the league's Pacific Division, San Diego finds itself in a bracket in which every team — Los Angeles, Phoenix, Golden State, Seattle and Portland — had winning seasons last year.

"That's the major problem — the unbelievable competition," Shue told a news conference Tuesday after San Diego owner Irvin Levin announced his appointment as coach.

"We will play a style of basketball the fans are anxious to enjoy," he said.

The 46-year-old Shue was fired last Nov. 3 at Philadelphia and replaced by Billy Cunningham. Shue coached the 76ers for four seasons and led them to one Eastern Division crown.

His record at Philadelphia, where the 76ers made it to the NBA championship round in 1976-77 only to be demolished by Portland, was 157-177. But "Gene is the winningest head coach active today in professional basketball," noted a confident Levin.

Shue said he signed a two-year contract with a "mutual option" for a third year.

The new NBA club was moved from Buffalo by Levin after he traded the Boston Celtics to Braves owner John Y. Brown.

Shue's lineup tentatively is expected to include 6-foot-11 Sven Nater at center, 6-9 forwards Kermit Washington and Sidney Wicks and Randy Smith and rookie Freeman Williams at guard, Kevin Kunnert, a towering 7-footer, is expected to share time at center.

Shue said that "a lot depends on Wicks — if he can revert back to his form in Portland."

Also, he said, Smith and Williams probably "will need some help" in the backcourt.

Levin said he and Shue would decide about Wicks after the former UCLA star meets this week or next with Shue.

Shue said he plans to keep up with the best teams in the division and that the Trail Blazers, without question, are the club to beat.

"There's a question about Bill Walton's health," Shue said. "But I don't know if that's true." He ranked the next three toughest teams as Los Angeles, Phoenix and Seattle based on last year's records.

Levin is running a contest to let fans pick a name for the new team, with an announcement expected next week. Some have suggested the franchise keep its old name — the Braves.

Shue said professional basketball fans in San Diego, which saw its first and last NBA team vanish when the Rockets moved to Houston in 1971 after four seasons, "can expect a winning team."

Shue joined the NBA in 1954 as the No. 1 draft choice of the Philadelphia Warriors after a college career at Maryland. He also played with the New York Knicks, the Detroit Pistons and the Baltimore Bullets.

During his 10-year playing career, Shue scored 10,068 points, averaging 14.4 per game and when he retired in 1964, he had more points than any other guard in NBA history. He was also named to play in five NBA All-Star games.

With Shue as head coach, the Bullets won four divisional titles, making the playoffs five times.

He was named Coach of the Year in 1968-69 when he took the Bullets, who finished in the cellar the previous year, to their first division crown. That team had a record of 57-25, a .695 winning percentage and Shue's best ever.

Jack Leads The Pack As Golfers Invade Oakmont For Tourney

OAKMONT, Pa. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus is back on top, and two fallen stars may have omens going for them in this week's PGA Championship — the golfing prize that may forever elude Arnold Palmer.

Play starts Thursday at the Oakmont Country Club, where Nicklaus was achubby 22-year-old when he won his first pro title by edging Palmer in the 1963 U.S. Open.

Recently, Nicklaus won the British Open with 72 holes he called "the best major championship I've ever played."

He hadn't won a major tournament in nearly three years, but that raised his career total to 17: three British Opens, five Masters, four PGAs, three U.S. Opens and two U.S. Amateurs.

"If I continue to work at it, I'll win several more," Nicklaus predicted.

But there may not be any more for Johnny Miller, who won the 1973 U.S. Open here with a record final-round 63. Golf's top money-winner in 1974 with $353,021, Miller ranks 102nd among the pros this year with winnings of $16,090.

After a practice round this week, he reported soreness in his neck in the same spot where he developed pain before taking the 1973 U.S. Open.

Is Miller counting on that as a sign of impending success this time?

"No, I'm not superstitious," said Miller. "Maybe Oakmont just has an allergy for necks."

Another young player here welcomed a little superstitious support. That was Lanny Wadkins, the defending PGA champion.

Last year, Wadkins missed the cut in a tournament that preceded the PGA. He missed the cut last week at the Hartford Open.

"Maybe," he suggested, "the same thing could happen again."

Maybe, but Wadkins has yet to win a tournament this year and he's missed the cut eight times in 20 events.

"It was a lot more fun when I was playing well," he said. "The way I'm going now, winning any tournament would be special."

Winning the PGA would be special for Palmer, too. It's the only major title he's never won despite 20 tries. His best finishes have been three ties for second place.

"I'm concentrating," Palmer said after Tuesday's practice round.

"I haven't won a PGA, and I do want to win a PGA — very badly," he said.

Though he is a member of the Oakmont Country Club, the 48-year-old Palmer has also never won a major tournament here. Three times he played in the U.S. Open here. He missed the cut in 1953, lost to Nicklaus in 1962, and was out-charged by Miller in 1973.

"I hope I play well this time. Yeah, I hope I play well," said Palmer, who's made time for a half-dozen practice rounds here in recent weeks.

Palmer has also been a consultant on a few changes made at Oakmont.

The 75-year-old course, with its massive undulating greens and rolling hill-top fairways, is regarded as one of the world's finest.

Net Event Scheduled

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will hold a City Junior Round Robin Tennis Tournament August 14-19.

The tournament is open to city residents and will have two age brackets, 15-18 and 14-and-under.

Girls and boys will play in separate divisions.

Boston's Lead Crumbling As Chicago Adds Latest Defeat

By The Associated Press
The Boston Red Sox are losing confidence and losing ground. Most of all, they're losing games — 11 of the last 14. The team some thought unstoppable has stopped hitting and stopped smiling. "In the first half of the season, every time we took the field, we felt as though we would win," said Boston captain Carl Yastrzemski. "Now, I don't know. We have to grind it out. We shouldn't think about losing." But the standings serve as a constant reminder. A 10-game lead that had seemed so comfortable now stands an uneasy 4½ after a 5-2 loss to the Chicago White Sox Tuesday night. The Red Sox have seen their winning percentage drop in proportion to the team batting average: Jim Rice is 3-for-27 and George Scott is 1-for-28. Yankees 6, Rangers 1 Willie Randolph capped a four-run second inning with a two-run triple and Reggie Jackson also tripled as Catfish Hunter and Sparky Lyle combined to four-hit the Rangers. Hunter, shelled in his last outing, pitched eight innings — his longest stint of the year — before Lyle came on in the ninth and served up Bobby Bonds' 20th homer this season for the Texas run.

Mariners 13, Twins 6 Bob Stinson drove in five runs with a grand slam and a sacrifice fly, and teammate Leon Roberts delivered four with a three-run double and a sacrifice fly to help Seattle overpower Minnesota. A's 1, Angels 0 Rick Langford pitched a three-hitter and struck out 11 Angels, helping Oakland beat California to pull into a second-place tie with them, four games behind leading Kansas City. The Oakland run scored in the second when Mario Guerrero walked, Taylor Duncan singled and Miguel Dilone hit a run-scoring single. Indians 2, Royals 1 Buddy Bell's pinch single in the seventh scored Rick Manning from third base and handed Kansas City its second consecutive loss for the first time in a month. The Royals, who have lost only four of their last 18, took a 1-0 lead in the second when David Clyde's balk allowed Amos Otis to score from third.

Tigers 3, Blue Jays 2 Phil Mankowski doubled home the first Detroit run in the second inning and later scored on a wild pitch to lift the Tigers over the Blue Jays. The game attracted 19,269, sending Toronto over the million mark in home attendance a second straight year. Astros 4, Giants 2 J.R. Richard struggled with his control but held San Francisco to four hits in 8½ innings and Enos Cabell delivered the game-winning hit as Houston beat the Giants. Richard, 11-9, struck out 11 to boost his league-leading

Embraceable Ewes Get Rough Welcome To National Football

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Welcome to the National Football League. With banged-up knees and taped ankles, several in the all-rookie lineup of the Los Angeles Rams cheerleading corps creaked into a Coliseum practice session. They are 27 smiling but hobbling survivors of 805 girls who auditioned to become members of the Embraceable Ewes. There are signs their pain may pay big dividends. "We've got a lot of knee braces after working out our routines for three months on a cement floor. There's back problems and all kinds of muscle problems," Beth Schaffel, 19, said Tuesday.

Among the Ewes is Cis Rundle, 30, a stunt double for actress Cheryl Ladd of the "Charlie's Angels" TV series. Her right knee is wrapped in a heavy elastic bandage, and her left calf is taped because of a related injury, she said. "I had to go to the Rams' physician, Dr. Robert Kerian, because I re-injured a knee," stuntwoman Rundle said. "Then I was favoring the knee so I pulled a calf muscle ... but I'll be able to dance without the tape." The girls and a 58-year-old "Pom Pom Mom" will receive just $15 per National Football League game, beginning with their debut at Saturday night's preseason opener between the Rams and New England Patriots. Television camera shots of the Dallas Cowgirls made the time between line plunges more interesting for football watchers in recent years. But unlike the Cowgirls, the Ewes came to being on the doorsteps of an entertainment industry. Before their first official appearance, the girls already are starting to share in a financial bonanza. Ewes have appeared on four nationwide television shows. A Las Vegas showman act is in the works for next winter along with a possible network television variety show of their own for September, 1979.

The price for a personal appearance by one of the Ewes in the Los Angeles area has shot up to $250 per day. Each girl gets half of her appearance money, and the other half is shared among all the girls. David Mirisch, a Los Angeles public relations man, is directing the Ewes venture on behalf of the Rams. A live concert with Bob Hope in San Diego in a few weeks and a record album of the music they dance to are among other deals in the works, said Mirisch, who says he has been contacted about putting together an attention-getting dance line for the New York Knicks of the National Basketball Association. Phyllis Wagner, 58, is just under 5-feet in height and not shy about her weight of "about 200 pounds." But she is a full-fledged member of the troupe. "She's our Pom Pom Mom," Mirisch says of Wagner, a Ram season ticket holder for 27 years. She was a surprise "walk on" at the first tryout and the idea of "someone to represent the average fan" appealed to Mirisch. She also will wear a blue and gold uniform and perform some of the less strenuous dance steps.

one month and one day after Peter Edward Rose was born in Cincinnati. When DiMaggio's streak reached 44 games, he had recorded 66 hits in 174 at bats for a .379 average. Rose went 70 for 182 with a .385 average during his 44-game streak that started on June 14 before taking the 0-for-4 collar Tuesday night. He had lifted his season batting average from .267 to .316 during the streak.

McWilliams was booed when he walked Rose in the first inning, although the Reds' infielder drilled a liner that landed about five feet foul. He fouled off two straight 3-2 pitches before the walk. Then, in the second, Rose was out before he left the batter's box. When he realized McWilliams had made the self-defense catch, Rose dropped his bat and applauded the young Atlanta hurler.

He grounded out on a 2-0 pitch in the fifth inning and then lined hard into the double play to Horner in the seventh on a 2-2 count. Then came the strikeout in the ninth, only the sixth time Rose had fanned since his hitting string began. "The last one was a great, great changeup," said Nolan. "He tipped it, and it stuck in the mitt." The crowd stood and cheered as Rose returned, head bowed, to the dugout and back to the clubhouse.

A chant of "Pete, Pete, Pete" went up throughout the stadium and Rose returned to the field several minutes later, doffing his cap to another long ovation.

He also received a bouquet of roses from the Atlanta organization for the second night in a row, the first coming Monday and containing 44 flowers, one for each game in his streak. "If I had any guts, I'd have bunted that last changeup," Rose said. "It would have been a good pitch to bunt, too. It fooled me. He did a good job on me." "There was just one thing on my mind, and that was to throw strikes," Garber said. "The last thing I wanted to do was walk him and stop the streak that way. I pitched him just like anybody else in that situation. Ask the other two batters how I pitched to them in the ninth.

"I'd like to talk to Rose and congratulate him for a fantastic contribution to baseball," Garber added. McWilliams, now 3-0, said he was "a little nervous, and excited" when the game began. After leaving for a pinch hitter in the bottom of the fifth, he said he returned to the clubhouse, took a shower and "listened to it on the radio and watched some of it on TV."

Rose said he wasn't relieved it had ended. "I'm teed off. I guess it is a load off my shoulders. What more appropriate way to end it than to end it at 44 in Atlanta?" That was a reference to the uniform number of former Atlanta great Hank Aaron, who broke Babe Ruth's all-time home run record with No. 715 here on April 8, 1974, and went on to finish his career with 755. "It's been exciting," Rose added. "I really enjoyed it. I'm glad now he walked me, for I might have been 0-for-5."

Atlanta Stops Rose, Reds In 16-4 Setback

By The Associated Press
The boom is off the Rose. Pete Rose's news-making hitting streak came to an end at 44 games Tuesday night when the Cincinnati Reds' star was shut out by two pitchers in a 16-4 loss to the Atlanta Braves. "I'm not relieved," said Rose, somewhat distressed. "I'm more teed off. But I guess it is a load off my shoulders." Rose went hitless in four official trips and walked once. He was retired twice by rookie left-hander Larry McWilliams, who walked the Cincinnati third baseman in the first inning, and the final two times by reliever Gene Garber. "Garber was pitching like it was the seventh game of the World Series," Rose said. Later appraised of Rose's remark, Garber retorted: "I had an idea he was hitting like it was the ninth inning of the seventh game of the World Series."

In the other National League games, the Houston Astros whipped the San Francisco Giants 4-2; the San Diego Padres edged the Los Angeles Dodgers 1-0; the Montreal Expos nipped the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-3; the New York Mets turned back the Philadelphia Phillies 5-1 and the Chicago Cubs stopped the St. Louis Cardinals 4-2. McWilliams, 3-0, was lifted for a pinch-hitter in the fifth, when the Braves came from behind with a five-run rally, sparked by a three-run homer by Horner and a solo blast by Dale Murphy.

Astros 4, Giants 2 J.R. Richard struggled with his control but held San Francisco to four hits in 8½ innings and Enos Cabell delivered the game-winning hit as Houston beat the Giants. Richard, 11-9, struck out 11 to boost his league-leading strikeout total to 205. Padres 1, Dodgers 0 Derrel Thomas' one-out, bases-loaded single in the ninth inning broke a scoreless tie as San Diego nipped Los Angeles. Randy Jones, 9-9, pitched a seven-hitter for the Padres' first shutout over the Dodgers in the team's 10-year history. Expos 4, Pirates 2 Andre Dawson hit a two-run homer as Montreal scored four times in the second inning and hung on to beat Pittsburgh. Winner Steve Rogers, 12-8, gave up eight hits and three runs through 6½ innings before being relieved by lefthander Darold Knowles, who gained his fourth save. Mets 5, Phillies 1 John Stearns' 12th homer, a three-run clout in the seventh inning, carried New York over Philadelphia. The homer came after loser Steve Carlton, 9-11, who struck out the first two batters in the inning, then gave up a single to Tim Lincecum and a walk to Steve Henderson.

French Police Protest Immunity Of 3 Iraqi

PARIS (AP) — Several hundred policemen shouted "scandal" and "shame" outside the Paris police headquarters to protest the French government's decision not to prosecute three Iraqi Embassy staff members accused of firing on police as they removed a Palestinian terrorist from the embassy.

A French policeman and an Iraqi were killed in the shootout Monday following an 8½ hour siege at the embassy. The terrorist and three other persons were wounded, and the police arrested three Iraqis.

After conferring with Iraqi Ambassador Mundhir Tawfik al-Wandawi, the government agreed that the three men were entitled to diplomatic immunity. Although the police identified them as embassy security guards, French Foreign Ministry officials said they were two secretaries and an attache who were on the Iraqi diplomatic register.

The government apparently granted them immunity to keep from jeopardizing France's sizable sales of Mirage fighter jets to Iraq and its purchases of Iraqi oil.

The police demonstrators said they would complain to President Valery Giscard d'Estaing if the Iraqis were released. It was expected that their protest would be ignored and that the three would be sent home to Baghdad speedily.

The Palestinian gunman had surrendered to the police after holding nine embassy employees hostage while he sought the release of a woman held in London for an abortive attempt to assassinate the Iraqi ambassador to Britain.

The police said as they were putting their captive into a car, embassy security guards opened fire on them in an apparent attempt to kill the terrorist. The police returned the fire.

The Iraqi ambassador claimed the police were fired on by friends of the terrorist and not by members of his staff.

Gov. Hunt Names New Banking Commissioner

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt has appointed a new state banking commissioner he says will be a strict regulator who shares his concern that the commission operate in the public interest.

Hunt appointed James S. Currie, treasurer of Carolina Power & Light, as State Banking Commissioner Tuesday. He succeeds Thomas Brafford, who was named interim commissioner in April after former Commissioner John Tropman resigned under pressure from the Hunt administration.

State Secretary of Commerce D.M. Faircloth said in April that the banking department was not adequately supervised. He made the comment after reviewing investigative reports by the State Bureau of Investigation and the FBI.

Currie, who served as State Commissioner of Revenue under former Gov. Luther Hodges, will take over duties in the $32,400-a-year post Sept. 1. Brafford has agreed to continue as a consultant and advisor on technical matters.

"I've been impressed with James Currie's distinguished career in public service," Hunt said.

Currie said he would take early retirement from CP&L to accept the banking post. He would not discuss the amount of pension benefits. His successor at CP&L, where he currently earns $53,333 per year, has not been named.

"I like public service," Currie said. The banking commission position "seemed to be a position that needed my talent."

Currie joined CP&L as assistant treasurer in 1961 and became treasurer in 1967. In addition to serving as State Commissioner of Revenue from 1957-60, he was executive secretary of the Commission for the Study of the Revenue Structure of the State from 1955-57.

A lawyer, Currie graduated from Davidson college and received law and master's

Deputies Sound 'Moon Alarm'

LEWISTON, Idaho (AP) — Several Nez Perce County deputies apparently were moonstruck the other morning when they turned in a call that a firelike glow filled the sky about 13 miles east of Lewiston, near Lapwai.

Deputies said the glow came from areas that previously had burned.

They reported that the closer they got, the bigger the glow.

After a few minutes of silence, a radio dispatcher asked the deputies more about the fire.

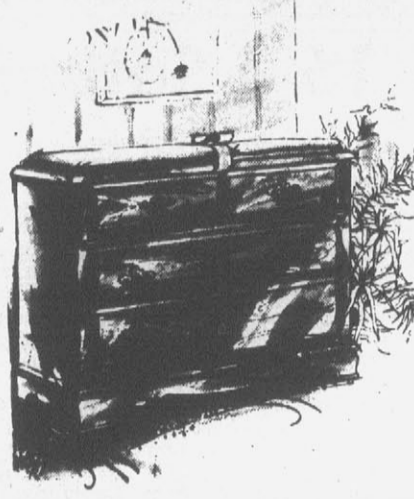

It was a false alarm, the deputies radioed back.

Some Are Winners In Inflation Time

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most Americans think they lose from inflation, and most probably do. But there are lot of people who manage to break even, and others who are outright winners.

Nearly breaking even are the 35 million persons who receive Social Security payments, federal employees and workers whose union-negotiated wage increases keep pace with prices.

Winners include most physicians, corporate executives and workers whose wages and other benefits have exceeded the rise in the cost of living.

Barry Bosworth and the Council on Wage and Price Stability, which he directs, have been outspoken in their criticism of those who are ahead of the inflation game, saying they are gaining at the expense of the rest of the population.

Among labor unions, Bosworth has singled out the 2.2 million member Teamsters, the United Auto Workers and the United Steelworkers as being among those whose gains have put them in a privileged position relative to other workers.

Wage and benefit increases for major unions have been averaging between 9.5 percent and 10 percent a year. Bosworth says, while overall average worker earnings have been rising by about 7 percent, close to the recent rates of inflation.

However, since the 7 percent average includes those whose wages increased by substantially higher figures, it means a lot of workers are receiving much smaller gains.

"These major unions have to be brought back into line with the rest of the economy," says Bosworth. "If these contracts again come in in the range of 30 percent and over (for three years), you might as well forget talking about decelerating inflation at any time in the near future."

Having said that, however, he adds that the average worker has done "terribly."

The government reported last week that workers' real spendable earnings, or earnings discounted for inflation and taxes, declined 0.4 percent in June and were down 2.3 percent from a year earlier.

Corporate profits kept up with inflation last year, rising an average of 11 percent for the biggest 1,200 companies, according to Business Week magazine, compared with an inflation rate for the year of 6.8 percent.

Pay of corporate executives also has tended to far outpace inflation. The magazine reported that during 1976, for example, direct pay of executives — salary plus bonuses — increased 27.2 percent. Corporate profits were up 26 percent that year, but inflation was just 4.8 percent, making it a good year for executives.

"Sometimes they get bonuses even when there has been no increase in profits. I've never understood it," said one administration official, who did not want to be named. He said that while corporate profits and executive salaries have generally been ahead of inflation, dividend payments have not.

Bosworth recently told the House Budget Committee that big business and big unions escape the injurious effects of inflation because of their power in the marketplace.

"It's not hurting them," he said. "If the cost of living goes up, then wages go up. The companies pass it through (into prices) without any particular difficulty."

"The people who suffer from inflation are the minority groups, people in retail trade and people on the fringes of the economy), they get hurt by unemployment and inflation," he said.

A number of corporate executives confirmed to a reporter in background interviews in 1974, when inflation was 12.2 percent, that it wasn't a serious problem for them because they could pass along their higher costs into prices.

Besides corporations and large labor unions, physicians have been a clear winner over inflation in recent years, the wage and price stability council said in a recent study. It said physicians fees were up 9.3 percent last year and have risen 80 percent faster than other prices in the economy since 1950.

"The median income of self-employed physicians — $63,000 in 1976 — is higher and has risen faster than that of any other major occupational or professional group for which historical income data are available," the study said.

Farmers also have done quite well as a group in the past year, as their income rose 20 percent over the 12 month period ending in June, according to the Agriculture Department. However, farm income is volatile and has fallen sharply in some years.

Pet Can Thrive On Vegetables

NEW YORK (UPI) — "Cats and dogs aren't eating as much meat as they used to," says Ruth Ann Manners, author of a recently published vegetarian cookbook. "When you buy food for pets these days it's often meat in name only. What you may get is a high proportion of hydrogenated vegetable protein and soy flour, with little or no meat — only meat by-products."

But the absence of real meat in these pet foods is not all bad, according to Mrs. Manners who, with her brother-in-law, William Manners, has written "The Quick and Easy Vegetarian Cookbook."

"The vegetable ingredients in pet foods, derived from soy beans, contain exactly the same high quality protein as meat, and at a fraction of the cost. Corn, barley and wheat are other good ingredients in these foods, and cats and dogs seem to thrive on them."

Family Dives Into The Music

DAVIS, Calif. (AP) — Jerry Carver's violin lacks strings, but it does have a diving board and underwater love seat.

Oh yes. It's concrete and 75-foot-long, fine for swimming laps.

Carver offers two reasons for building his swimming pool in such an unconventional shape.

His back yard was too long and narrow to accommodate a typical pool.

The Carver family is very attached to the violin. Two children play the instrument and wife Carolyn taught it in public schools. Carver says the pool shape is copied precisely from a violin in his wife's collection.

Ups And Downs By Disc Jockey

MODESTO, Calif. (AP) — Disc jockey Kenny Roberts has had his ups and downs during the last two weeks.

The KTRB radio personality has been sitting in an elevator all that time to raise money for muscular dystrophy.

KTRB announcer Ron Richards said Roberts raised about $700 in donations during his charity stint. He got five minutes off each hour, and because it was the only elevator in the local department store, he had to learn to shower quickly.

Higher Fees, Taxes Pay California Revenue Loss

By JENNIFER KERR
Associated Press Writer
SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)
— Because of Proposition 13,

many Californians are paying more these days to buy drinks, go to the movies, zoo or race track, keep library books overdue, park their cars and poison porcupines.

These fee increases and fines are among the many efforts of the state's 58 counties and 417 cities to make up for lost tax revenues following Proposition 13's requirement to cut property taxes by 57 percent.

And if the tax cut initiative's aftereffects sweep eastward with the same force of the tax revolt that triggered it, other Americans may soon be paying for services that were once free or offered at lower costs.

Among the specifics: in San Francisco and Sacramento, visitors to zoos and museums will get hit, in Oakland and Sacramento, moviegoers. Admission at Santa Anita and Los Alamitos race tracks will go up. And in Santa Monica, the slow reader who gets his book from the library will pay more for keeping it overdue.

A hotel room will cost more in dozens of cities — with taxes going from around 6 percent to 8 percent to 10 percent of room charges. One city that raised hotel taxes is much-visited San Francisco.

Businessmen and builders will have to pay more for almost all the permits necessary to start construction or do business.

The proposition, passed overwhelmingly on June 6, chopped local government revenues by $7 billion by cutting property taxes.

After the vote, and until the state bail-out law was signed June 24, local governments scrambled to trim budgets and find more money by July 1, when Proposition 13 took effect.

One reason for haste was because the Jarvis amendment also requires two-thirds approval by voters to create or raise taxes. Some cities passed increases but kept them inactive until and if needed.

Fees and taxes most commonly raised, says Suzanne Foucault of the League of California Cities, were business and construction permits, hotel-motel taxes and fees for services such as sewers, street cleaning and recreation.

Raising fees for services is in keeping with the Jarvis philosophy of having users pay for specific things, rather than property owners in general. Naturally, those using such services are not happy with fee increases.

Raising construction permit fees "has kicked the average price of a home up $1,000 to $2,000," said Robert Rivinius of the California Building Industry Association. He said 40 to 50 governments raised fees, some up to 2,500 percent, and noted a California home already includes $2,500 to $9,000 in permit fees.

The state Chamber of Commerce thinks some 30 percent of cities and counties raised business permits anywhere from 15 percent to 100 percent, though many changed their minds later. "This inhibits growth and does not make a whole lot of sense because these people can provide jobs," the chamber's John Dehoney said.

More fundamentally, many Proposition 13 supporters feel that raising fees or taxes is not what the tax revolt is all about. Some are ready to take action.

In Montebello, a citizens' committee took out a newspaper ad saying the city council had "repealed" Proposition 13 by adopting new taxes. A North Hollywood group formed to watch officials who might try to raise fees and taxes instead of cutting spending.

Not every city had a load of complaints. Orange County doubled park and beach fees, most from $1 a person to $2, with a new $1 charge for a pet, and county spokesman John Bushman noted:

"We haven't had too many complaints. They kind of expected the fees would go up. Most people are more surprised about the animal fee."

Shasta County raised fees for almost its entire list of services. A smallpox shot went from $2 to $5, a venereal disease exam from nothing to $16.50, and poisoned porcupine bait from $1 to $2.

New fees in Sacramento include one for city tennis courts, although Recreation and Parks Director Solon Wisham Jr. admitted, "We might have to hire a thousand-pound gorilla to collect the fees."

The Inglewood City Council passed a 10 percent "tipplers tax" on drinks in bars, which public information officer Dick Taylor said could bring in $1.5 million a year. A state law prohibits such taxes, but a bill to allow them has been introduced in the State Assembly.

Inglewood also is trying a fire service fee, which Taylor believes is among the nation's first. The city provides basic fire protection and a property owner pays for any extra needed because his building is wooden, has a flammable roof or does not have a smoke detector.

Inglewood will charge for sidewalk maintenance, tree-trimming and traffic signals, too. Home owners will pay 32 cents a front foot and busi- nesses 90 cents a front foot Taylor said.

MILKING A KRAIT — Miami Serpentarium owner and director Bill Haast, who's been bitten by poisonous snakes over 100 times in his career, milks venom from a deadly krait. Haast is expecting a shipment by air of 100 kraits from Hong Kong. The krait venom is used in experimental treatment of Lou Gehrig's disease. (AP laserphoto)

Plan August 5 Jug Sale

The Greenville Jaycees announced plans to culminate their project to raise funds for muscular dystrophy with a five-gallon jug sale on Saturday, Aug. 5.

Ron Hartis of the local chapter said that Jaycees will be selling the glass jugs, which have become popular as terrarium containers, all day at four Greenville locations.

Jaycees will be stationed at Pitt Plaza, Greenville Square, Nichols and on Evans Mall beginning at 9 a.m., the spokesman reported.

He said the jugs will sell for $4 with all money raised Saturday going to the muscular dystrophy project adopted by the National Jaycee organization. Local Jaycee chapters were charged with having their own projects to raise funds for the national endeavor, he added.

In addition to Saturday's project, the Jaycees earlier raised approximately $500 at two local events utilizing their popular "dunk booth." The money will be added to funds collected during the jug sale project, according to Hartis.

CUT ALONG DOTTED LINES

Come Dew Or Ant Mounds, Cyclomower Mows

By JOSEPH A. REAVES
NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The expensive nuisance to farmers of migrating fire ants is helping end a century-old method of harvesting hay.

The fire ants, named because of their painful bites, began migrating northward from South America in 1966 and since have spread to at least nine Southern states.

In their wake, the ants have left hundreds of thousands of hard mud nests that cause expensive and frustrating problems for farmers who cut their fields with traditional "cycle bar" mowing machines.

"They make these mounds of dirt that can be as much as 18 inches high," said Allen Tarver, a farm machinery salesman in Folsom, La., north of New Orleans.

"When the cycle bar mower drives into one of those mounds, it just stops the whole thing. They get jammed. And as the ants became more plentiful, it became impossible to cut."

The cycle bar mowers operate on the same principle as a pair of scissors or shears. The cutting blades swing toward a stationary bar beneath the mower and then quickly retract for another cycle.

Since the early 1900s, cycle bar mowers have been the accepted tool for cutting hay and grass. Farmers simply grew accustomed to long delays when wet hay, wind-blown grass or — more recently — ant nests caused their machines to jam.

Now, however, a new mower developed in Europe is becoming increasingly popular on farms in the United States.

"They have a rotary cutting device," Tarver said. "They cut those ant nests like they weren't there. In real dry weather, all you see is a puff of dirt and the ant nest is gone."

The new mowers were developed by P.J. Zweegers and Zonen of the Netherlands, which calls its product the Cyclomower. Similar competitive mowers have since been introduced by several other European companies and the prices range from about $2,200 to $3,000 apiece.

"These machines are very, very popular," Tarver said. "In the South, the cycle bar mowers aren't really competitive any more because of the fire ants and the dew. The (rotary) mowers are the only machines to use in the South." Farther north in haymaking regions such as Wisconsin, fire ants have yet to become a problem. But farmers there are slowly switching to the new mowers to eliminate problems caused by wind-blown hay or wet grass.

The J.S. Woodhouse Co. of Springfield, Mass., has sold 150 rotary mowers in three years and company officials predict sales are on the increase. "(The rotary mowers) are especially effective in rainy, wet conditions," said John McKenna, general manager of Woodhouse. "There are a lot of problems with conventional cycle bar mowers. They keep getting clogged."

McKenna said cycle bar mowers sell for about $400 less than rotary mowers and still dominate the market in the Northeast. But the newer mowers are rapidly becoming more popular. "Next year (the rotary mowers) should make a 10 percent dent (in the market)," he said.

Martin Ford, a rotary mower distributor for 10 states from Florida to Illinois, said he is "just beginning to scratch the surface" with his machines.

"The prime area where Cyclomowers are used in the U.S. is the Southeast, where heavy Bermuda grass is abundant," Martin said. "They operate at excessively high speeds and can cope with dense growths of grass or grass that is bent toward the ground by wind or rain."

The "excessively" high speeds Martin spoke of are about 12 mph, nearly twice the speed of conventional mowers. The high speed and lower maintenance costs are two more reasons the new mowers have increased in popularity.

"I bought one of the first ones they put out three years ago in May," said Roger Jimmerson of Horton, Ala. "I've got two of them. There ain't much maintenance and you mow when it's wet. I wouldn't give them up for nothing."

Jimmerson works 50 acres of hay, about one-eighth the size of Ray Canton's farm in west central Louisiana.

"We haven't had any trouble and this is our third season," Canton said. "We had to get away from that old cycle bar mower because of the ant hills. "I replaced one little thing on it since I got it. We haven't been out no money really since we bought it."

Rotary mowers have been popular in Europe for more than a decade, but they are just beginning to spread to other places besides the United States. Representatives from the Soviet Union and the Republic of China have approached Zweegers for licensing rights to produce the machines in their countries. "We caught on in our area by going from door to door and exposing it to the farmers," said Tarver, who owns distribution rights for Cyclomowers in Louisiana, Texas, Mississippi, Alabama, Kentucky and Tennessee.

"Once we did that, they took off on their own. We almost say they followed the trail of the fire ant. And they're like the fire ant — you introduce one and you've got more."

SUPPLIER DOLLAR DAY

Pot-Hunter Had Its Own

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The crew of the Coast Guard cutter Dauntless, out to catch marijuana smugglers red-handed, is a little red-faced.

Several ounces of marijuana were found on the ship while it was at Little Creek amphibious base here for training recently and three crewmen were disciplined.

"It's all pretty embarrassing," said Lt. Cmdr. Howard A. Newhoff, the ship's executive officer.

"What makes it even worse is our position in the Coast Guard," Newhoff added. The Dauntless, based in Miami Beach, Fla., is one of four 210-foot cutters assigned to intercept smugglers carrying marijuana into the United States.

The marijuana was found aboard the cutter during the weekend of July 15. Three men in a car were stopped and questioned on that Saturday and four others were implicated the next day during a ship search.

Cdr. Clinton H. Smoke, skipper of the cutter, demoted the three men, fined them and assigned them punishment chores.

Smoke said it would be naive to think none of his men smoked marijuana.

"So long as they don't smoke it on board — and they don't — there's nothing I can do," Smoke said.

"Most of them were smoking the stuff before joining the Coast Guard, and they find it difficult to see why they have to stop."

SPIDER INEQUALITY
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The female golden silk spider weighs 100 times more than the male, says National Geographic World magazine. The females spin webs up to a yard wide and so strong that they can be used as fish nets.

A Limit To The Debts Of Buyers

Interstate Securities Corporation

New homes are being purchased at record rates as well as record prices. New cars, with costly optional equipment, are selling at near record rates. Sales of recreational vehicles, boats, jewelry, and other luxury items are on the rise. Americans are borrowing heavily to finance these purchases, despite high interest rates, to beat even higher prices they expect inflation to generate. They are willing to pay the high price of the American dream.

The cost of the American dream is an alarming one trillion dollars in consumer installment debt outstanding. That amounts to $4,748 per person. Of the total debt outstanding, more than 60 percent is represented by home mortgages. Auto loans account for about 8 percent and other installment loans 13 percent.

The outstanding debt is a record 79 percent of personal after-tax income versus 75 percent in the Sixties and Seventies. Payments on that debt require more than 15.3 cents of each dollar of after-tax income, compared with 14.7 cents a year ago.

Repayment obligations are being met currently, but any economic slump could cause delinquencies to rise sharply. Consumer attitudes are turning more cautious as talk centers around slower economic growth. Retail sales are flattening, showing that consumers are being somewhat more careful about adding to their adding to their debt load.

There is no doubt that the rapid expansion in installment debt cannot continue. Because of inflation, a dollar doesn't buy as much as it did early in this recovery. So, it takes a higher level of lending to move the economy a given amount than it did then. In itself, this is inflationary and leads to even greater inflationary expectations.

The major concern is that consumers will slow their buying to the degree that retail sales will decline. Inventories would then become too heavy and production and employment would have to be reduced. To the degree that financing terms are more liberal than a few years ago, future spending may be restrained as well. How sharply consumers will cut back on debt purchases, and when, is unknown, but any change in spending patterns is likely to have an immediate impact on the health of this recovery.

Water Polluted During Course

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Water produced by municipal plants is degraded on its way from the waterworks to the home tap," Donald L. Porth told recent meeting sponsored by Resources for the Future.

Water passing through antiquated mains, water meters and home plumbing can pick up undesirable pollutants, Porth explained.

"Home systems can contain a variety of metals, such as black iron, galvanized iron, copper and brass," he said.

Togetherness To The Hospital

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — When Frances Syner and her sister-in-law, Jean Keough, each became pregnant they began a mutual routine.

"Our very first prenatal visit we went together, and every one all the way through," Mrs. Syner said of their visits to Dr. Vito Coppa.

Recently, at a local hospital, Mrs. Keough gave birth by Caesarian section to Elizabeth Anne, 7 pounds, 2 ounces. Some 10 hours later at the same hospital, Mrs. Syner gave birth to Catherine, 7 pounds, 9 ounces.

Churchill Enshrined In Borneo

By KENNETH L. WHITING
BANDAR SERI BEGAWAN, Brunei (AP) — The late Sir Winston Churchill is enshrined in a tiny northern Borneo sultanate that clings to its ties with Britain.

A larger-than-life statue of the British statesman, bronze cigar clamped in bulldog jaw and right hand waving his trademark V-for-Victory salute, stands in front of the Churchill Memorial Museum in steamy Bandar Seri Begawan.

Churchill never visited Brunei. Former Sultan Sir Omar Ali Saifuddin ordered the memorial built after he had attended Churchill's funeral in 1965 "as an inspiration and a challenge to the youth of today and tomorrow."

Wealth from Brunei's oilfields enabled the now-retired sultan to build the $1.5 million complex in 1968. It is connected to an aquarium and a library.

The royal family's fixation on Churchill also resulted in Brunei's purchase last year of one of his paintings. Churchill's widow had to sell two of them to cover her expenses and Brunei paid 26,000 pounds (then about $47,917) at public auction for one titled "The Pope's Palace at Avignon," completed in 1925.

"The Brunei government has great admiration for the late Sir Winston," London art gallery owner Andras Kalman said at the time.

"When the government heard of Lady Spencer-Churchill's financial plight, they asked their agents here to get in touch with me about the sale of the paintings."

Brunei was willing to buy both paintings for no more than 30,000 pounds ($56,250) each, Kalman said. A Canadian businessman got the second one for a bid of 48,000 pounds ($89,583).

The painting has pride of place in the museum, which is laid out from entrance to exit to follow Churchill's life.

Admission is free. Near the entrance is a figure of the first Duke of Marlborough, a Churchill ancestor. A tiny model shows the room in which Churchill was born. Nearby is a model of a small boy, the young Winston, playing with toy soldiers.

Pushbuttons start Churchill's recorded voice telling the British people in World War II that he could offer them nothing but "blood, toil, tears and sweat."

One diorama shows a darkened London skyline. The push of a button starts sirens screaming, the drone of aircraft engines and bomb blasts as searchlights probe the night sky and fires spread in the city. The sound track is an actual recording of a Luftwaffe raid on London during the blitz.

Another recording starts Churchill's adversary, Hitler, ranting at a mass rally when a light beam is tripped in front of a life-size photograph of Der Fuhrer.

Copies of all the books Churchill wrote are on display. So are cigars of the brand he favored. There is even a receipt from the tobacconist for the cigars.

This exercise in colonial nostalgia is unique in Asia and may be the largest collection of Churchilliana outside England.

Feel Pinch Of Fewer Tourists

OTTAWA (AP) — Tourist-related businesses in Quebec are gearing up their advertising campaigns after a drastic reduction in the number of U.S. visitors, according to hotel owners in the area.

The hoteliers say the slump in the U.S. economy, the reluctance of the mostly French-speaking Quebecers to speak English with Americans, and the refusal of many businesses to give an exchange rate on the U.S. dollar, worth 10 percent more than the Canadian, have contributed to the tourist decline.

NEWMAN NAMED

NEW YORK (AP) — Al Newman has been named vice president — worldwide advertising, publicity and promotion for the Motion Picture Division of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Newman was formerly director of advertising, publicity and promotion for the company's film and television divisions.

Displaced By Returnees To Inner City

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Ernest Moore, slightly built and creased with age, fears he might have to join a new army of displaced Americans, "urban nomads" being forced from inner-city homes by affluent people returning from the suburbs.

have been vanishing from the inner city, according to a report Monday by the National Urban Coalition. They are being squeezed out of city space by developers who see a long-term gain among well-to-do suburbanites for the city life they left behind.

"I don't know what will happen to us," Moore said.

"If you are an elderly, poor, working-class renter or homeowner who lives in an area undergoing rehabilitation or in a suddenly fashionable neighborhood, you are a prime candidate for displacement," said M. Carl Holman, president of the coalition.

Based on a two-year study in 65 neighborhoods in 44 cities, the research and educational group, supported by business, civic and civil rights leaders, recommended low-cost housing rehabilitation loans, tax breaks and grants to help families in affected neighborhoods fix up their own homes.

Patricia Harris, secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, joined Holman at a news conference to announce that her department will give $125,000 to the Urban Coalition to counsel potential victims of urban displacement.

It is one of 200 such grants totaling more than $3 million awarded to similar groups this year.

"You have a problem that's sticky wicket," conceded Bruce Lyons, a real estate developer who paid $120,000 for a house on Moore's street below Embassy Row in northwest Washington. Lyons had it renovated.

Moore, 72, has $370 a month to live on.

building and you rent an apartment, are you there because I let you or because you have a right to be there? Maybe the Supreme Court can decide it."

Moore put it another way. "There's not much crime here now," he said. "It's improved a lot. And there are more children. I don't know what kind of (other) changes they'll make. They may want to get all the colored out of here."

Moore tipped his straw hat to passers-by. "Used to be colored and white all along this block," he said. "Now all my friends are gone but me. I'm the only black man left on the block."

Now his building has been sold and the new owner has hinted they might have to leave. "I'll rent a house somewhere," he said. "I do the best I can. I've been here 25 years. If I have to, I'll go back to Richmond. But I don't want to. My friends come back and say, 'You're still here?' And I tell 'em I'm holding on. That's the story of me."

Former Sun Record Co. Studio Being Restored

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)—A former Sun Record Co. studio—piece of rock 'n' roll and Memphis music history—is being restored for the first anniversary of Elvis Presley's death.

The studio is where the singer, then employed as a truck driver, cut his first records under producer Sam Phillips in the mid-1950s. "We want to restore it as much as possible to the way it used to be when Elvis recorded there," Ed Moore, manager of Gray Lines Sight Seeing Tours Inc., said Tuesday.

The tour line, which is operated by Music City Services Inc.—with offices in Nashville and Memphis—is planning to turn the one-story building into a tourist attraction in time for the Aug. 16 anniversary of the singer's death.

"We're trying to find the original recording equipment and what would appeal to an Elvis fan," Moore said. "We plan to have everything from the original recording equipment to a shirt Elvis wore and a piano and a guitar he used."

Moore said restoration work began nearly two weeks ago on the former studio—where such artists as Charlie Rich, Jerry Lee Lewis, Johnny Cash and B.B. King launched their recording careers.

"We're trying to make it clean and livable," he said. "We're putting in carpeting and acoustical tiles. That alone will cost several thousand dollars. The cost of the equipment will determine the final price."

Moore and Jerry Hanover Schwartz, a Memphis attorney who managed the leasing of the Union Avenue property, declined to say how much the lease cost.

Up until March, the building, owned by Schwartz' grandmother and two other women, was used as an automobile storage site, Schwartz said.

He said the Schwartz and Vignand families have owned the property since 1946, and leased it to Sam Phillips in the 1950s when he used it as a recording studio.

Phillips recalled that Presley cut "Blue Moon of Kentucky" and another tune, previously recorded by a group called the Ink Spots, in the singer's earliest days at the studio.

Northeast Has Huge Book Fair

REDDING, Conn. (UPI)—A tradition started by Mark Twain is expected to draw hundreds of bibliophiles on Labor Day weekend to this small town in Western Connecticut to browse through and buy the more than 40,000 volumes which will be on display at the biggest book fair in the Northeast.

NEW HAIRDO FOR MARY—Actress Mary Tyler Moore, shown here with a new hair style, will be back on TV this fall with a new series, "Mary". It will be a variety show with a resident company, and no guest stars. She and seven characters will do sketches, songs and dances. She says "I cut my hair for two reasons. First I was going to China, and they don't have things like blow-dryers. And then I thought it would be good physically to get away from the Mary Richards look." (AP Laserphoto)

First '79 LTDs In Production

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Ford Motor Co.'s first 1979 model LTDs have begun rolling off the assembly line, marking the ninth time since 1963 that the company has introduced a totally redesigned auto.

About 600 of the luxury cars are to be produced daily beginning in September at the company's plant here, officials said.

Ford officials would not reveal new features of the as-yet unmarketed LTDs, but the new model will be 600 to 800 pounds lighter and 15 inches shorter, the company reported.

Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

fenders follow to the first two rounds of the suit, the odds now favor a drop rather than a finesse. But more importantly, South failed to count the hand, which would have virtually ensured the contract.

From the bidding, it was almost certain that West had started with five spades and East with four. After losing the trump finesse and ruffing the spade return, declarer should enter dummy with the nine of trumps and ruff a club. Next, he gets back to dummy with a high diamond and ruffs the last club.

These maneuvers will bring to light the fact that, in addition to his five spades, West started with two hearts and three clubs. That accounts for ten of his cards. Therefore, he has to have three diamonds.

So declarer should simply cash his top diamonds. When the jack falls, as expected, the ten becomes declarer's eleventh trick.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deaf opening leaders!" The distributional odds can be learned from various sources—most notably "The Official Encyclopedia of Bridge." But knowing the odds is no substitute for counting out the hand.

After South entered the auction with four hearts, East decided that his length in partner's suit weakened his side's defensive prospects, so he chose to sacrifice at four spades. North felt that he had sufficient values to give his side a shot at closing out the rubber, so he went on to five hearts.

West led the king of spades and declarer ruffed. He tried the club finesse, but East won the king and continued spades. Declarer ruffed, crossed to the ace of clubs and ran the ten of trumps to West's king. Back came a spade, forcing declarer to ruff again.

Declarer drew the outstanding trumps, and the fate of the contract now hinged on the diamond suit. South knew that the probabilities favored a 4-2 split, so he cashed the king and queen and then finessed the ten. That lost to the jack-down one.

Declarer's knowledge of bridge mathematics was faulty. While the a priori odds suggest a 4-2 split of six cards, once both de-

Gold Is Useless But Treasured By All

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
"O cursed lust for gold,
"To what dost thou not drive the hearts of men!"
"The Aeneid." Virgil. 70-19

B.C.
Gold. The dream at the end of the rainbow. The ring that ties two people together. The symbol of man's hope and of man's greed.

It is neither the rarest metal in the world nor the most expensive. But gold has a mystique that has lasted through the ages and has helped push its price to record highs in recent days.

What's so special about gold?
"It's a historic thing," said
William Butterman of the Bureau of Mines. "It has a very ancient reputation...It's very durable in a chemical and physical sense...It's quite rare and was even more so in ancient times."

James Jolley, Butterman's colleague at the bureau, had another explanation. "There's a lot of charisma about it," he said.

Jolley is an expert on platinum, which is both rarer and more costly than gold.
Worldwide platinum production in 1977 is estimated at just under 3 million troy ounces, compared to 38.5 million troy ounces of gold and 318.4 million troy ounces of silver. A troy ounce equals 1.097 regular ounces.

$250 an ounce, while gold — even after its sharp rise — is just over $200.

Platinum, however, doesn't have the same appeal. "It's just a white metal," said Jolley, adding that gold's yellow color is unique among natural

Gold is easy to shape and polish; it doesn't rust, tarnish or corrode. Because of its relative scarcity, it is prized as one of the few things which, in a time of soaring inflation and currency fluctuations, will always be worth having.

Most newly mined gold goes for jewelry and dental purposes. The rest of it is bought and sold, then bought and sold again, and again, by investors who swap paper certificates rather than actual gold bars.

The drawing power of gold goes back before the birth of Christ and it seems just as strong now as it was then. The Egyptian King Tutankhamen was buried in a solid-gold coffin more than 3,300 years ago;

today, thousands of Americans are flocking to exhibitions of articles from his tomb.

Gold was, in part, responsible for the exploration of the Americas.

"Get gold," was the message Spain's King Ferdinand gave his conquistadors when he sent them to the New World in 1511.
From 1492 to 1600, more than 8 million troy ounces of gold — much of it mined by slaves or stolen from temples — came from South America. The Soviet Union and South Africa are today's biggest gold miners, but during the 17th and 18th centuries, South America mines produced up to 80 percent of the world's supply.

California and Australia in the mid-19th century marked another expansion in production. More of the precious metal was mined in the 25 years from 1850 to 1875 than had been mined in the preceding 350 years.

Exploration and modern technology have boosted production, but gold remains a rare commodity. The amount mined in 1977 throughout the entire world is the equivalent of just under 2,000 tons. In contrast, the United States alone produced more than 600 million tons of coal in the same year.

The United States holds more gold than any other country — 277 million troy ounces, or 8,460.6 tons. About half of it is kept in Fort Knox; most of the rest is in mints in Denver and Philadelphia and government assay offices in New York and San Francisco.

In 1717, Great Britain became the first country in the world to link its currency directly to gold; other nations followed through the years until all of the world's money was tied to the gold standard.

In 1933, to prevent bank depositors from withdrawing money in gold, President Franklin D. Roosevelt imposed a ban on private ownership of the metal by U.S. citizens. The ban was incorporated in the Gold Reserve Act of 1934. That act, in conjunction with a separate world agreement, also fixed the price of gold at $35 an ounce.

In 1968, the world's central banks agreed to let the price of gold on the free market fluctuate. Three years later, after a series of complex financial developments, including a drop in the value of U.S. currency, President Richard Nixon cut the link between gold and the dollar. The world monetary system was off the gold standard.

The move set off sharp increases in the price of gold on the free market, but the prohibition on American ownership of gold remained until December 1974 when Congress lifted the ban. There were predictions of a new gold rush, but the surge of demand failed to materialize. The price edged steadily up, but stopped just short of $200 an ounce. That barrier was not broken until last Friday when speculators looking for an alternative to the shrinking dollar pushed the price to a record of just over $201 an ounce. By Tuesday, gold had risen still further to more than $205 an ounce.

No one really knows. Sir Thomas More, in "Utopia," questioned why gold, "which in itself is so useless a thing, should be everywhere so much esteemed."

Four Collisions Here Tuesday

An estimated $8,150 property damage resulted from four collisions investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

damage resulted from a 4:55 p.m. collision on Red Banks Road, 255 feet East of the Church-side Drive intersection involving a truck driven by Victor
Thomas Corey of Route 1, Winterville, and a car driven by Brian Gray Finnegan of Virginia Beach, Va.

Police, who charged Finn-
center, estimated damage at $4,000 to the Corey vehicle and $2,500 to the Finnegan car.

Vehicles driven by Jefferson Moye of Route 6, Greenville and Curtis Braxton Cuthrell of Belhaven collided about 3:53 p.m. at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Tenth Street, causing an estimated $700 damage to the Moye car and $300 damage to the Cuthrell truck.

Ronald Joseph Mills of Apex was charged with failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident following investigation of a 3:46 p.m. collision at the intersection of Tenth and Monroe Streets.

Investigators said the Mills car collided with an auto driven by Frank Joseph Donnelly of Raleigh, resulting in an estimated $250 damage to the Donnelly car and $100 damage

Cars driven by Mamie Rae Wells of 1216 Davenport St. and Susan Crowther McKenzie of 105 Terry St. collided about 5:08 p.m. at the intersection of Arlington Boulevard and the Greenville Square entrance.

Police estimated damage at $300 to the Wells car and said no damage resulted to the McKenzie vehicle.

Just Saved It For Lean Times

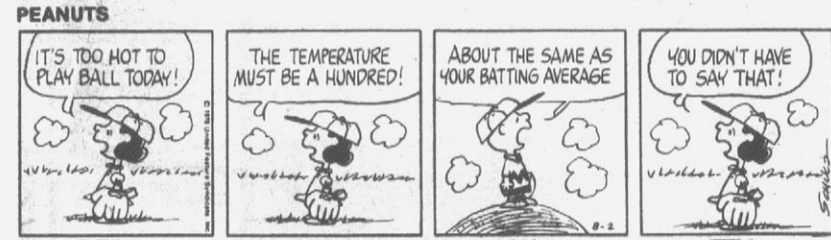

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) —
It wasn't a test tube affair, but the reptile staff at the Rio Grande Zoo was puzzled when a coachwhip snake laid seven eggs — and no male had been around for over a year.

But a little scholarly digging explained it all. Attendants found that snakes have the ability to store male sper-matzoa in little internal folds and use it as needed to fertilize their current crop of eggs.

delivery that can't be attributed to a recent male visit, the staff won't be alarmed. Colubrid snakes, such as the coachwhip, have been known to delay fertilization for up to six years, the attendants learned.

Eritrean Guerrilla Appreciates The Soviet Way

By CHARLES P. WALLACE
KHARTOUM, Sudan (UPI) — At first meeting, Hagos Abraha seems an unlikely political commissar.

His floppy felt boots, dirty jeans and denim jacket are anything but martial in appearance, and the wisps of hair which constitute a beard suggest his youth — 26 years — rather than a revolutionary zealot.

He was born in Asmara, capital of the territory on the Red Sea which Italian colonialists named Eritrea, and which has become the stage for the longest war in Africa.

Hagos' father was a cook for American servicemen stationed at a communications base in Eritrea, once an important listening post for the United States on the crossroads from the Mediterranean Sea to the Indian Ocean.

"My father was a simple man," he says. "And my mother was a simple wife."

He is the product of an American-style education — U.S. volunteers helped set up the educational system and many of his classes were taught in English.

"I even had an American teacher," Hagos recalls. "She was a black American missionary — Sister Vera — who used to come over and teach us the bible."

Hagos was then a member of the Ethiopian Coptic Church, one of the oldest Christian religions. "But now I am an atheist," he says.

Hagos attended university in the Ethiopian capital of Addis Ababa. His homeland had long been incorporated into the Ethiopian empire and there were no colleges in Eritrea.

While in the university, he joined an underground cell of the Eritrean Liberation Front, which had declared war on the Ethiopian regime in 1961 and has been fighting for the independence of Eritrea since.

"We had a group called the 'uneasy club' which used to meet in the evenings in the YMCA," he recalled. "As soon as everyone else would leave us alone, we would have discussions of Marx and Lenin, using books which we had purchased on the black market."

Why Marx and Lenin? "Who else has written as they have about oppression of the masses and the struggle for self-determination?" he replied.

His group was discovered by the authorities in the final, repressive days of Emperor Haile Selassie. Hagos was obliged to flee the university after his third year and return to Eritrea, or as he put it, "I went back to the front."

That was four years ago, and Hagos says he has been fighting since. In that time, the Eritreans captured 98 percent of the province from Ethiopian government troops, and while victory is far from being in sight, so is defeat.

Six months ago, Hagos made his way to Khartoum, where the Eritreans have their rear command structure and communicate with the outside world.

Hagos was made a member of a four-man committee, with two delegates from the ELF and two from the rival Eritrean Peoples Liberation Front, which is in charge of information. They beam propaganda broadcasts back to Eritrea from the Sudan, and otherwise look after public relations.

"I am a political commissar," Hagos says with pride.

The two Eritrean groups have fought some bitter battles between themselves, but are hopeful that they have finally succeeded in composing their differences for the war against Ethiopia.

Unlike his EPLF colleagues, who view the Addis Ababa government as fascist, Hagos says the ruling Dergue has some progressive and reactionary elements, and the reactionaries seem to have the upper hand.

He describes his group as a "national democratic movement," whose primary goal is the "full national independence of Eritrea." As a result, he sees little likelihood of a political accommodation with the Ethiopians.

"It is clear that the Ethiopians have chosen war as the only possible course for them. They keep attacking and we keep crushing them. I am confident of victory," he says.

One of the more startling things about Hagos is that he is an unabashed Stalinist.

"I like Russian policy," he says. "I like their way of running things."

"The United States is the vanguard of the reactionary movement in the world. The Soviets on the other hand have always been generous under the banner of national liberation."

He dismisses Soviet aid to the Ethiopian government as the result of reactionary policies by the Somali government which he believes was guilty of aggression against Ethiopia in the recently concluded Ogaden war.

What about Stalin's executions, the purges, the Gulag? "You know, we Eritreans have killed many thousands of Ethiopians in the fight for our independence. A regime should not be judged merely by how many people it kills."

In fairness to his colleagues, Hagos hastens to point out that his views are not necessarily shared by all Eritreans fighting the Ethiopians.

"Like anyone else we have differences of opinion, but on the whole, I think we are a pro-Moscow movement," he says.

A representative of the PLF, who also serves on the information committee adds: "We are not for the Russians or anyone else. We are for the Eritreans."

According to a western observer close to the Eritrean movements, rhetoric such as that expressed by Hagos is not uncommon near the Eritrean battlefield. The political textbooks which exist, he says, mainly bear the imprint of Moscow's publishers.

"We have a program for the future of Eritrea," Hagos says. "It will be up to the broad masses to decide which way we go after we have achieved our independence."

"Naturally, there will be no room there for bourgeois influences such as private capitalism."

Same Standards Set For Drugs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The difference between a generic drug and a brand name drug is largely one of price.

The Food and Drug Administration sets identical standards of safety, strength, purity and effectiveness for all drugs, regardless of the manufacturers' labels they bear.

Generic drugs usually are less expensive than their brand name equivalents, says a new brochure from the Consumer Information Center. From 60 to 70 of the 200 most frequently prescribed drugs now are available generically. Antibiotics lead the list. They account for more than half of all generic prescriptions.

Single copies of "Generic Drugs: How Good Are They?" are free from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 691F, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

How Tar Heel Senators, Representatives Voted

By ROLL CALL REPORT
WASHINGTON—Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes July 20 through July 26.

HOUSE
PEACE CORPS FUNDS — Adopted, 276 for and 120 against, the conference report on a bill authorizing $112.4 million for the Peace Corps during fiscal 1979.

Rep. William Broomfield, R-Mich., a supporter, said the Peace Corps "has generally done a good job in fielding motivated and hardworking American volunteers willing to immerse themselves in the grass roots development problems...in more than 60 countries."

Rep. Bill Young, R-Fla., an opponent, charged that the Peace Corps spent $47,500 last year on abortions for Corps volunteers. "These were the very same volunteers who were in the field on these countries supposedly to teach poor women how not to get pregnant," he said.

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L. H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, and G. Hefner, D-8, voted "nay."

OCEAN MINING — Adopted, 214 for and 184 against, an amendment giving jurisdiction over mining of minerals on the ocean floor to the Commerce Department instead of the Interior Department. The amendment was attached to a bill (HR 3350) establishing the federal government's authority to regulate deep sea mining in international waters. In part, the bill provides federal backing of companies such as U.S. Steel and Sun Oil, which are partners in international consortia set up to mine the ocean floor's wealth of copper, cobalt and other minerals.

Rep. John Breaux, D-La., a supporter of the amendment, said: "The Department of Commerce already has come up with the programs and the ability to move forward on this problem of our resources in international waters."

Rep. Joe Skubitz, R-Kans., an opponent, noted that the Interior Department already has jurisdiction over mineral extraction from the U.S. Outercontinental Shelf, and that to put the Commerce Department in control further out in the ocean "makes no sense and could create a bureaucratic nightmare."

Members voting "yea" favored the amendment.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Hefner, Martin and Bro yhill voted "yea."

Rose and Gudger voted "nay."

METRIC SYSTEM — Defeated, 75 for and 302 against, an amendment to delete $275,000 for salaries and expenses of the 17 U.S. Metric Board. The amendment was proposed to H.R. 13467, an appropriations bill later passed and sent to the Senate. The board is in charge of the nation's ongoing voluntary conversion to the metric system. The object of the amendment was to eliminate the board's operating funds and thereby render it useless.

Rep. Philip Crane, R-Ill, sponsor of the amendment, criticized government involvement in metric conversion. He said: "Let us return from the air to the ground. I can just see an Illinois farmer, when buying fertilizer, asking for 30 many kilograms per hectare. It would not happen..."

Rep. Robert McClory, R-Ill., an opponent, said the Metric Board is "a vital necessity...The principal concept underlying the board is that it is to act to coordinate and plan for a voluntary shift to the metric system."

Members voting "yea" favored abolishing the U.S. Metric Board.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner, Martin Bro yhill, and Gudger voted "nay."

SENATE
MEALS FOR THE ELDERLY — Adopted, 59 for and 29 against, an amendment to the Older Americans Act (HR 12255) to authorize $100 million in fiscal 1979 and $120 million in 1980 for home-delivered meals for the elderly. The bill was later passed.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., the sponsor, said: "Many of these homebound persons will end up in institutions and nursing homes if adequate care is not provided to them in their homes. Home-delivered meals are a vital part of the home services..."

Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., an opponent cited the high cost of the program, adding, "Nothing is more near and dear to the hearts of all of us than adequate care for America's elderly, and adequate nutrition being the key element in that. But there are some limits to these budgets..."

Sens. Robert Morgan, D, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "yea."

RHODESIAN ECONOMIC SANCTIONS — Adopted, 59 for and 36 against, an amendment to soften U.S. economic sanctions against Rhodesia. The amendment permits President Carter to lift the U.S. Trade embargo if the Rhodesian government makes a substantial effort to negotiate with guerrillas fighting it and holds free elections. It was proposed to S 3075, later passed and sent to the House.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., a supporter, said the amendment would preserve U.S. stature as an "honest broker" in the effort to find a peaceful solution to the move toward majority rule in Rhodesia. He called it preferable to an immediate lifting of the trade embargo.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-M.C., an opponent, said the Senate should vote instead for his amendment to immediately resuspend trade with Rhodesia.

Senators voting "yea" favored adoption of the amendment. Many Senators voting "nay" wanted to immediately lift the sanctions.

Morgan and Helms voted "nay."

TURKIST ARMS BAN — Adopted, 57 for and 42 against an amendment to repeal the 42-month-old embargo on U.S. military aid to Turkey. It was attached to S 3075 a bill later passed and sent to the House. The amendment places future aid to Turkey under frequent congressional review, and expresses congressional displeasure with the Turkish army's continuing occupation of nearly half of Cyprus. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., a supporter, argued that the arms embargo "has not worked and there is not good reason to suppose that it will work as intended in the future." The ban, he added, has "poisoned" U.S. Turkey relations and forced the U.S. to give up access to important intelligence installations in Turkey.

Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Nd.,

an opponent, said lifting the embargo would be "condoning aggression" by Turkey against Greek Cypriots. He claimed elimination of the ban was being proposed "without a single concrete action to remedy or to rectify that aggression."

Senators voting "yea" favored lifting the arms embargo.

Morgan and Helms voted "yea."

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

The Company Physical and Privacy

My company insists on a yearly physical examination by their own health organization with which they have a contractual relationship. I resent this. I feel that this is an invasion of my privacy. From the point of view of health, I feel that my own doctor's examination should be completely adequate. — Mr. A.J., Pa.

Dear Mr. J.: I am certain that your doctor's physical examination does encompass all the elements and tests that normally would be included in an industrial and executive health examination.

The presentation of your own doctor's findings is usually sufficient to waive the need for an institutional examination. Most large organizations establish the rules for a regular yearly examination because so many of their executives and workers carelessly overlook this protection for their health. In essence, this is the basis for the concept of good preventive medicine.

A study of 600 executives was recently undertaken. It was found that 83 percent of the executives that were studied had some significant health problem. Obesity, a most important threat to good health, was the most frequent and troublesome problem. Diabetes, high blood pressure, gout, hernias, ulcers, hiatus hernias and many other disorders were uncovered during this routine study.

Since it has been shown that the destiny of any organization depends on the health structure of everyone employed, it can be said that good health then becomes good business. Both the worker and the employer benefit from this excellent system of regular checkups.

Confidentiality exists in the doctor-patient relationship whether the examination is done by your own doctor or by the specially chosen group of doctors who are guardians of the health of a large organization.

I'm concerned because my son is going to have a hernia operation and the doctor says he will use a spinal anesthesia. He's 32 years old. How safe is this type of anesthesia? — Mrs. C.Y., Calif.

Dear Mrs. Y.: Spinal anesthesia is a very safe procedure. Highly trained anesthesiologists frequently choose this type of anesthesia for surgery of the lower abdominal cavity, for hernias and for surgery of the lower extremities.

An anesthetic is painlessly injected into the spinal canal. The nerves that radiate from that area are blocked and are freed from pain sensation. There are some advantages to this type of local anesthesia rather than a general anesthesia. There is no need for your concern. You can be sure that your son's doctor and surgeon made this choice for a very specific reason and to further insure his rapid post-operative recovery.

No Newspaper If No News

MT. OLIVET, Ky. (AP) — No news may be good news, but in Kentucky's Robertson County, it occasionally means no newspaper.

Bob Poage, publisher of the Robertson County Weekly, says he checked around and couldn't find any news this week — so he decided not to publish.

It's not the first time things have been so slow around Mt. Olivet, the county seat. Poage says the paper's 500 subscribers get no paper about once every three months.

GSA Said Overcharging Rental Space

BY DONALD LAMBRO
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — The General Services Administration; the government's building and maintenance agent, is overcharging many federal agencies millions of dollars in yearly rents as the result of an obscure 1972 federal law.

In one case involving the leasing of space for the Department of Agriculture in Texas, the GSA has proposed billing the USDA nearly 12 times what the owner of the building is willing to charge the government.

Federal agency officials and congressional investigators say that such overcharging is widespread, adding possibly tens of millions of dollars to the rental costs of federal offices and agencies throughout the country.

"Many of our state office people say we could be doing a lot better if we were leasing space ourselves," said Robert Reynolds, a USDA deputy director.

John Baize, a House Agriculture Committee official, added, "We're talking potentially about millions of dollars in added rental costs."

"If the GSA is putting that much more onto the leasing costs, I think it's an agency we can do without," Baize said.

While the higher rents paid to GSA by the agencies actually represent internal transfers of funds within the government, the result is that a larger than necessary chunk of agency budgets are consumed by non-program costs.

Much of the apparent overpricing is the result of a little-known 1972 law passed by Congress which requires GSA to charge rents based on the average costs for comparable rental space in each area.

Agencies pay this rate — known as the Standard Level Users Charge (SLUC) — in each city or town where GSA leases space, regardless of whether the rental space was leased by GSA at a significantly lower rate.

"The law mandates that we charge (agencies) the commercial equivalent," said one GSA official who agreed the law provides no incentive to pass along savings derived from cheaper rental costs. "That law really puts us into a constraint."

The GSA pays out about $400 million a year to rent nearly 91 million square feet of office space for various federal departments and agencies. They in turn pay GSA the set SLUC rate which goes into the agency's operating fund.

A startling example of GSA's rental practices can be found in Temple, Tex., where the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service and other USDA agencies are considering consolidating some of their area offices.

Albert Aldrich, the realtor in Temple handling the rental, says the owner of the Goldstein-Migel building, once a department store, will rent 36,000 square feet of space to the government for 88 cents a square foot over a five-year lease, excluding utilities, taxes and maintenance costs. This comes out of $2,666 a month, or almost $32,000 a year.

With utilities and taxes included, the base rent would come out to nearly $100,000 a year.

However, the GSA — scrapping its own $7.93 "SLUC" rate for the area — has estimated USDA would have to pay $10 a square foot, resulting in an annual rental bill of over $360,000, far higher than the original rental offer.

"I know that it does seem to be unfair," said Tom Ratliff, GSA's regional information officer. "It does seem to be unreasonable. But we must charge the SLUC rate."

Officials said that in this case the SLUC rate for the Temple building, one of three being considered by USDA, was higher than normal because of anticipated renovation costs. USDA officials, however, say that the building is satisfactory and ready to move into.

Rep. W. R. Poage, D-Tex., deposed last year as chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, said most department heads are unaware that their regional and state offices are often paying more than necessary for rental space under the present system.

Poage said he sat in on a meeting with Agriculture Secretary Robert Bergland "and he (Bergland) said he didn't know this."

"No matter how cheap the government originally gets the lease, the GSA charges higher leases to federal agencies based on some formula they work out," Poage said, adding that the Temple case was "not an isolated instance."

Complaints from officials throughout the government about GSA's leasing costs are not uncommon.

Says Reynolds, "The rent we pay often has very little to do with what they (GSA) are paying for a particular building. And we're getting quite a bit of flack from our local folks."

"They're saying we know we could be getting cheaper space on our own. And sometimes I think they're right. We could do better on our own."

Reynolds adds that because of the present government-wide rental system, "You lose some of the economy in the process when you have a central agency who doesn't always have your own interest at heart."

It is not widely known that all federal agencies pay what amounts to rent to GSA, even those occupying major federal buildings built and paid for many decades ago.

It wasn't always so. Before 1972 agencies used government buildings for free and GSA paid all rental and maintenance costs out of its own budget. But Congress decided that each agency's budget should reflect all of its costs, including overhead.

Thus, in 1972 Congress ordered that GSA charge agencies for all GSA-controlled space and directed that the rents be based on "approximate commercial charges for comparable space and services."

USDA, for example, which occupies several large government buildings that were built many years ago pay GSA "rent" on those properties at the $8.21 per square foot. According to USDA's rent schedule, scheduled to take effect by 1980, the rent is to climb to $9.49 per square foot.

Rents paid to GSA are put into the agency's Federal Building Fund which is used to pay for all the property activities: construction, repair, and leasing.

In some cases, income is used to offset unusually steep rents other agencies in certain high cost areas of the country.

"I think," said they are taking places like Temple, charging the department 10 to 11 times as much as they pay, so they can lease buildings in high rent areas like Washington where GSA pays $12 to $14 per square foot but charges agencies $8 to $10. GSA can make up the difference in places like Temple.

"It makes it look like they are getting places cheaper than they actually are," Poage said. He added, however, that "on balance I suspect most agencies are paying more rather than less."

Despite several inquiries from UPI, GSA was in the beginning reluctant to say what the property was actually being offered for by the owner, insisting the actual rent by the owner was "irrelevant to the SLUC rate GSA would set."

At one point GSA officials in its Fort Worth regional office told UPI that the rental offer was $9 to $11 a square foot, or exactly what GSA originally estimated to the USDA.

It wasn't until Poage called GSA officials in Fort Worth, that they admitted that the 88-cent per square foot was the base rent being asked by the building's owner.

But GSA also said the Temple building was in need of "extensive renovation" and that this plus extra costs of adding parking space were responsible for driving up the estimated rent.

Poage, however, said he toured the building with two ASCS board members and found it had been renovated parking lot with room for 80 three years ago, was fully carpeted, had two new elevators installed, and came with a Poage said. "It's ready to move into."

Dried Blood Gaining In Court Room

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — They put James Love on trial for the gruesome New Year's Eve murder of a little boy and his 14-year-old babysitter, but they'd never found a murder weapon, had no fingerprints and couldn't even suggest a plausible motive.

Nevertheless, there were those two drops of dried blood — one on the former Marine corporal's knee-length boots, the other on the door of the suburban duplex apartment where the two were slain.

It was enough, thanks to a tell-tale enzyme. Love was convicted and sentenced to 300 years in the penitentiary.

That was in 1974 and marked one of the first courtroom successes of blood enzyme identification. Now it is used in a handful of the nation's 250 crime labs.

The detective work in Love's case was done by the Regional Crime Laboratory in Independence, Mo., which had begun intensive research into blood enzyme identification only months before.

Experts studied the blood on the boot, which investigators thought might belong to the babysitter, Sheila Curtright, and the stain on the door, which police believed was Love's.

Miss Curtright and Love each had the same blood type, which at one time would have thwarted the investigation. But blood enzyme tests showed a distinction definite enough to convince a jury.

"We believe it is a fingerprint in some ways," says Brian Wraxall, a serologist on leave from the London Metropolitan Forensic Science Laboratory at New Scotland Yard. "It's individual to a given person. The question now is to prove it..."

In Love's trial, the techniques were limited to determining — in a narrower way than possible with the A-B-O typing system — that a blood stain could not have come from a particular person.

"We cannot say absolutely that a defendant is guilty," says Wraxall, in the United States to develop and teach simpler blood identification techniques.

"We take each individual enzyme system in a dry blood stain and find its distribution among the population. Then we multiply all the population distributions and end up with a small percentage — often less than 1 percent."

Love's murder conviction, one of the first courtroom tests of enzyme identification in the United States, resulted from hundreds of tests at the Regional Crime Laboratory, according to director Gary Howell.

Despite the advances in blood study, the number of labs acquainted with the techniques is small, and the number using the techniques even smaller.

"Blood identification is the most difficult item of physical evidence submitted to a crime laboratory," says John Sullivan, manager of the forensic science program for the National Institute of Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice.

The institute, a research arm of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, has spent more than $1 million on serology research in the last seven years.

Part of the money has gone to Wraxall's work in blood identification techniques. That study, completed recently, is undergoing evaluation. If LEAA approves the results, Wraxall will conduct training sessions for crime labs.

Despite inroads, the precision of blood enzyme work still falls short of fingerprint identification, and Metzger says it isn't likely to outrun fingerprints as evidence before 1990.

"We've got the easy enzyme systems identified now," Metzger says. "The rest will be much more difficult."

Notes Wraxall: "Some prosecutors aren't even aware of what we've done yet. It'll be a process of education, letting people know what we can do in the lab."

Rare Hero Directs Naval War College

BY MICHAEL BLUMSTEIN
NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — The White House form letter on the wall has a hand-scribbled message on the bottom: "Your heroism is an inspiration to us all! J.C."

President Jimmy Carter's note to his Annapolis '47 classmate Adm. James Bond Stockdale is clearly an understatement.

The white-haired Stockdale, 54, president of the Naval War College, sits in his mahoganypaneled office. His icy blue eyes stare out the window at a breathtaking view of Narragansett Bay.

It takes only moments for him to return to Sept. 9, 1965, when he was flying an A-4 jet fighter-bomber leading a flight of 35 American planes trying to knock down the Thanh Hoa Bridge in North Vietnam.

But an unexpected dense fog rolled over the area first and Stockdale ordered the formation to split up and go for an alternate target: boxcars on a nearly railroad.

As he went to the attack, his plane was slammed by 57 mm anti-aircraft fire, forcing him to eject. He parachuted down and became the Navy's highest ranking prisoner of war.

When Stockdale touched earth, his shoulder was broken. Quickly captured, he was stripped naked, rolled down a street and beaten until his left kneecap shattered. It was later broken a second time, leaving him with a permanently straightened and deformed leg.

He spent 7½ years as a POW, but calls them "some of the happiest days of my life."

Four of those long years were spent in solitary confinement. He scoffs at the idea of fatal loneliness.

"After the first week or two, you do think you're going to go crazy, but after a year or two, with all the mental gymnastics, plans and prayers, you hardly have enough time."

"You go to bed disappointed that you didn't have more time. Solitude is a good way to live after you get used to it."

He said the common fear of going crazy from being alone is the result of "the modern proliferation of entertainment."

To emphasize his faith in the electives, Stockdale has decided to teach a course called "Foundations of Moral Obligation."

An apparent believer in strict morality, he paraphrases Plato as saying, "You can't teach moral values directly but that doesn't mean it's a waste of time to reflect on moral excellence."

Emphasizing he is not preparing students to be prisoners of war, Stockdale said the War College is to the Navy what Harvard Business School is to industry: "an emotional and mental refueling."

The difference is the War College shouldn't emphasize administrative techniques, he said.

"Management skills are not the essence of a military man's profession. The winning of wars is more of a matter of national and personal commitment than the acquiring of the ability to administer technology," he said.

Stockdale said it was that same sense of tradition that kept his family together during his long absence.

The family now lives in Newport. His two younger sons are high school students. The two older sons are high school teachers.

Stockdale likes education. He said he expects to "write and lecture in military retirement and contribute as much as I can to the betterment of the Navy and its educational institutions."

He described the type of man he wants to educate, the kind he feels the Navy should turn out.

"It is not so much a man who stares off into space when someone breaks his arm, as a man who has mental discipline and carefully programs his energies and talents towards realistic goals and pursuit of worthy aims."

"He's not a brute. He's a self-disciplined scholar."

ADM. JAMES BOND STOCKDALE sits during ceremonies last October when he took over command of the Naval War College. He spent more than seven years as a prisoner of war in Vietnam. (UPI Photo)

By RAMESH C. PANDE
NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Millions of poor children in India work like slaves at an age when they should be either playing at home or studying in schools.

By the time these young slaves grow up, life becomes a dull and drab routine. With little education, they have no choice but to keep working as underpaid menials.

Neither the Indian government nor any social organization has statistics to show how many of the nation's children work illegally.

But it is estimated that at least three out of every five well-to-do Indian families in urban areas employ children as full-time or part-time domestic servants.

"Child servants are available for a song," said a restaurant owner in downtown New Delhi.

Restaurateur Sant Ram said cheap child laborers mostly migrate from the poverty-stricken northern mountain districts or are coaxed into working by their parents.

He employs six whose ages range from 10 to 15 at total monthly wages of $21.

Shakuntala Paulai, an undernourished girl of 8, works double shifts of dishwashing for four wealthy families in New Delhi. Her take-home wages at the end of a sweaty month are $15.

Shakuntala's 5-year-old sister, Angama, accompanies her to work and often helps with the work.

It takes Shakuntala two hours to wash dishes and clean the four apartments.

"I never knew rich people eat so much and use so many dishes," Shakuntala says.

The work is "back-breaking," says Shakuntala's mother, Lakshmi.

Lakshmi is myopic, lean and haggard and, above all, tired of child-bearing, like most other poor Indian women. She has five daughters and an alcoholic husband who sits at home squandering the family's hard-earned money.

International Labor Organization statistics estimate 50 million children will be working around the world by next year, the International Year of the Child.

Of these, more than 38 million will be in Asia, the ILO says.

Conservative estimates say India's capital, with a population of 5.3 million people, has about 125,000 domestic servants. Bombay is second, with 100,000, and Calcutta and Madras have about 80,000 each.

India's Anti-Child Labor Act prohibits employment of children as servants and calls for a nominal fine and six months' imprisonment. But prosecution is almost impossible, as it is difficult to enforce the law.

"Fear of death is put into our souls by the cruel employers and who can dare to go to the police?" said a father of a young domestic servant in New Delhi.

He said employers often hold back a couple of months' salary so their employees cannot leave. Also, false charges of theft by employers can ruin a child's career.

"Our poor children are the most exploited in India and no one has ever done anything to save them," one Indian social worker said.

"As long as there is lack of education in our rural areas and lack of employment, poor children will have no option but to run away to urban areas for possible employment and a square meal," he said.

When Stockdale wasn't in solitary confinement, he organized resistance to his captors. He taught new POWs to tap in code to communicate and make sure they weren't contradicting each other when forced to talk.

Stockdale had his own personal resistance techniques. After one excruciating torture session, he shaved zig-zag scars in his head and pounded his face with a stool so the North Vietnamese couldn't use him in a propaganda film.

Later, in 1969, Stockdale chopped up his wrists with a broken pane of glass rather than rat on his fellow prisoners. That act won him the Congressional Medal of Honor.

He was finally freed from Hao Lo prison, dubbed Alcatraz, on Feb. 12, 1973, when the prisoner of war exchanges took place.

Quickly back to active duty, Stockdale became a commander of the Pacific fleet and then director of Strategy, Plans and Policy for the Pentagon's Chief of Naval Operations.

Last fall, he was sent to the Naval War College. He took command Oct. 13.

Stockdale is a firm leader, but doesn't expect to institute radical changes at the War College like recent predecessor Adm. Stansfield Turner — another member of Carter's 1947 Annapolis class and now CIA director.

He hopes to institute more electives program. He said by next year, one-fifth of the curriculum will be outside the core program of strategy,
