City Pupils Fared Well In Achievement Tests

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Students in four elementary grades and one junior high grade in Greenville City Schools in most instances scored higher than their peers in North Carolina and nationally in achievement tests given to first, second, third, sixth and ninth grade students last spring.

In an unusual move, the State Department of Public Instruction in Raleigh on Tuesday held a press conference to report to school officials and the press summary details on the results of achievement tests administered to North Carolina school students this past spring. The department at the same time authorized release of the information effective today.

In Greenville, as in all the other school systems in North Carolina, a battery of achievement tests were given to students in selected grades.

For first and second grade students, a reading and a mathematics test was used. These are not achievement tests in sense that tests given to students in higher grades are, but are tests designed to give indicators of the individual student's potential to perform and achieve. Results obtained from these tests provide general measures of performance to help teachers pinpoint each student's strengths as well as weaknesses.

Technically, tests given students in grades one and two are known as "reading and mathematic criterion-referenced tests."

A compilation of results reveals that Greenville first and second graders performed at a level above both the state and national levels.

Summary information in the compilation shows:

— FIRST GRADE, Reading Test — Grade Equivalent: Greenville City Schools, 1.8; North Carolina, 1.7; and nationwide, 1.7.

— FIRST GRADE, Mathematics Test — Grade Equivalent: Greenville City Schools, 2.1; North Carolina, 2.1; nationwide, 1.7.

— SECOND GRADE, Reading Test — Grade Equivalent: Greenville City Schools, 3.2; North Carolina, 2.8; nationwide, 2.7.

— SECOND GRADE, Mathematics Test — Grade Equivalent: Greenville City Schools, 3.2; North Carolina, 3.2; nationwide, 2.7.

(The term "grade equivalent" equates to the performance level of students relative to a year and month level of performance. Thus, second graders in Greenville in reading performance achieved a reading level of third grade, second month, compared to a state student average of second grade, eighth month, and a national average of second grade, seventh month).

In addition to grade equivalents, summaries are also provided in the compilation report on percentile ranks. The figures given below indicate the percentage of Greenville students performing better than students on a national average. Similar percentile figures for North Carolina are also given. The percentile rank figures are:

— FIRST GRADE, Reading: Greenville, 56; North Carolina, 52. — Mathematics: Greenvile, 71; North Carolina, 72.

— SECOND GRADE, Reading: Greenville, 63; North Carolina, 54. — Mathematics: Greenville, 67; North Carolina, 65.

Other Grades

Achievement tests in reading, mathematics, and language (including spelling except for ninth graders) were given to all students in grades three, six, and nine in North Carolina school systems.

Unlike tests given to students in the first two grades, tests given in the higher grades were disigned to obtain general measures of performance of each individual student and to

Pushed 7 And Leaps

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A woman apparently distraught over the suicide of her husband pushed her seven children off an 11th-floor hotel balcony in downtown Salt Lake City today, then jumped herself, police said. The woman and four of the children were killed.

Hospital spokesmen said three children were in critical condition with multiple fractures and head injuries.

Police Maj. Harry Parke said the woman pushed the children before jumping herself. He said she apparently was distraught over the death of her husband, Bruce Longo, Wednesday night. Parke said the death was reported as a suicide but he was unable to give details.

Parke said the family had been living in the International Dunes Hotel, where the incident took place, for several months.

Tel Aviv Market Bombed

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The Israeli air force today attacked Palestinian guerrilla bases in Lebanon in retaliation for a terror bombing in Tel Aviv earlier in the day, Israel Radio reported.

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A terrorist bomb exploded under a stall selling T-shirts and children's clothes in an open-air market this morning, and Israel Radio reported 50 persons were wounded.

A police announcement earlier said at least 10 had been wounded but made no mention of deaths. The radio report said 26 persons were seriously hurt in the blast.

Blood-soaked T-shirts and children's clothing were strewn about the maze-like alleys in the center of the market, and police strung barbed-wire around the area and collected bits of shrapnel from the explosive device.

Vita Meshulam, the owner of the stall where the blast occurred, said the area had been crowded with shoppers.

"I was standing across the way, and suddenly I felt a blast on my legs, but I wasn't hurt," Meshulam said. "I went running over to see what I could do."

Carter Administration Trying Reshape Tax Cut

By EDMOND Le BRETON

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, trying to reshape a $16.2 billion House tax cut bill, is off to an unpromising start with its last minute efforts to shift tax relief back to lower-income brackets and decrease planned cuts in capital gains taxation.

Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, President Carter's tax envoy, took the proposed changes to Capitol Hill on Wednesday where Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, called the proposals unacceptable. Ullman's panel has written the tax plan now being considered in the House.

But the chairman said discussions were continuing on a possible Treasury Department,Ways and Means Committee compromise to permit consideration, at least, of the amendments in the House.

That procedure is considered unusual because the House traditionally, when considering tax measures, takes up only proposed floor amendments already considered and rejected by the Ways and Means Committee.

Up to now, Ullman said, he has no plans to ease pressure for passage of his committee's bill with no provisions for the Carter amendments.

Although exact details of the administration plan have not been worked out, Blumenthal's discussions showed concern for:

—Directing individal tax relief to families with incomes below $40,000.

—Cutting back capital gains reductions by boosting from 10 percent to 15 percent the committee's proposed "alternative minimum tax."

That proposal would replace the current 15 percent minimum tax on one-half of the capital gain, which is not normally taxed. The minimum tax is imposed upon those who would otherwise escape taxes altogether.

The principal author of the committee bill, Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., said he doubted the administration amendments would receive the support sought. But he insisted he was open-minded and would discuss possibilities with other members.

Jones said that if the bill were reshaped to Carter's liking, it would lose all or nearly all the Republican support he said it now enjoys. Although Democrats have nearly a 2-1 majority in the House, a substantial number are believed to favor the Jones bill's relatively lenient treatment of capital gains.

The basic tax relief in the Jones bill would rise sharply with income. For example, estimates by congressional specialists are that a hypothetical family of four with $15,000 income and deductible expenses of 23 percent would save $77, while such a family with $40,000 income would save $486.

Another administration proposal that could be expected to please the AFL-CIO would increase the tax credit in the present law from $35 a person to $100. The labor federation had proposed an increase to $150.

Arab Gunmen Kill PLO Spokesman

By PAUL THREUTHARDT

PARIS (AP) — Two Arab gunmen attacked the Paris offices of the Palestine Liberation Organization today, assassinated the PLO's chief representative in a hail of bullets and killed another employee with a grenade before being captured by police.

The PLO official, 40-year-old Izziddin Qalaq, was slain with 16 bullets, police said. He had been in Paris as the PLO representative since 1972 and was known as a supporter of PLO chief Yasser Arafat in his struggle against Iraqi-backed extremists who reject any idea of negotiations with Israel.

The second PLO employee died after a grenade explosion blew off his leg, police said. An anonymous caller later claimed Palestinian radicals were responsible.

One of the raiders fled soon after the initial attack and was caught minutes later, police said. After a tense two-hour siege, the second was overcome by employees of the Arab League's Paris office, in the same building as the PLO, was forced to release a hostage and then was turned over to French officers, police said.

The two terrorists, one with blood running down the side of his head, were taken away for questioning.

It was the second bloody terrorist operation in Paris in four days. An Arab gunman seized hostages in the Iraqi Embassy here Monday, and two persons were killed and four others wounded in a bizarre shootout between Iraqis and French police after he surrendered.

The PLO, the Arab League and the Franco-Arab Chamber of Commerce share offices in an elegant 19th-century building.

Cuba-Florida Swim Doubted

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The man who claims to have done what Diana Nyad is hoping to do — swim from Cuba to Florida — is again being accused of being a fraud, this time by someone outside the Nyad camp.

Richard Mullins, publicist for the Swimming Hall of Fame here, dismisses Walter Poenisch's claim, saying that the 65-year-old has defrauded the public before.

PLAN A GIANT EYE

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Preliminary plans for construction of what would be the world's largest telescope — with a 33-foot diameter mirror — are underway, scientists report. A Soviet telescope with a 19.8-foot mirror is the world's largest.

Mixed Results Emerge In N.C. School Tests

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Results of the first statewide testing in North Carolina's public schools were released today and, Gov. Jim Hunt said, they reveal "some good news and some bad news."

"The good news is that North Carolina students are performing at or above the national norm in reading and in math at both grades one and two," Hunt said.

"The bad news is that, in the higher grades, particularly the ninth grade, our students are not doing well," he added.

The tests were administered in the first, second, third, sixth and ninth grades, and are the first of what is to be an annual testing program that was pushed by Hunt and enacted by the General Assembly.

"For the first time, we might have an accurate picture of education in North Carolina," said Durham County school superintendent Frank Yeager, chairman of the commission that devised the testing program.

More than 463,000 children took the tests, almost 99 percent of the students in the five grades that were included.

The results showed several trends:

—Family income has a direct relation to scores, with children from families earning $15,000 a year or more scoring generally higher.

—Girls did much better than boys, expecially in the higher grades.

—Students in mountain and upper Piedmont schools tended to do best on the tests, while the lowest average scores came from northeastern counties and the sandhills counties of the southeast.

—Black children generally did not do as well as white children, and the performance gap grew wider in the higher grades.

—North Carolina school children scored roughly the same on the tests as children in other states, but first and second graders did significantly better.

—North Carolina school children did well in areas that required memorization, but where questions involved analysis or abstract thought, their scores slipped.

The release came after most parents whose children participated received printed analysis on their child's test scores.

Hunt, in a morning news conference, said the results showed "the main thing you can do for a kid is to help his daddy earn more money." He said it also showed a "clear need to emphasize reading."

The results showed students in grades one and two scored above the national average in math and reading, but the scores slipped below the average at the third grade level. Scores in reading, language and mathematics were just below the average in the sixth grade, but spelling was above average.

In the ninth grade, students scored seven months behind the national average in reading and math, and four months behind in language. There were no spelling results in that grade.

Greenville Leaf Market Topped $1 Million Mark

Poundage and money both went over the one million mark on the second day of sales activity on the Greenville Tobacco Market, according to Tobacco Board of Trade sales supervisor, J. N. Bryan.

The official reported that Greenville warehouses sold 1,111,805 pounds Wednesday for $1,323,379 in averaging $119.03 per hundred pounds. The second day average compared with the opening figure of $119.56.

Yesterday's marketing results brought season totals to 1,825,772 pounds sold for $2,177,001, an overall average of $119.24 per hundred pounds, he said.

Stabilization receipts were up slightly to 2.7 percent, Bryan added, from one percent recorded on Tuesday.

Top practical price paid by buying companies on the second day of auctions was $1.55 per pound, according to the sales supervisor.

Offerings consisted of approximately 70 percent primings and lugs, 15 percent cutters, and 15 percent non-descript tobacco. The non-descript figure represented an increase over the opening day report.

Quality remained high, Bryan said, as growers continued to market a clean product. "The warehouses are staying full," he noted.

LOST TO LIGHTNING

The home of Warren and Connie Haddock in the St. John's community near Grifton was struck by lightning and burned to the ground Tuesday.

The family of four lost everything they owned. Anyone wishing to help them is asked to donate household goods or clothing. They may be reached through Warren's father, Lewis Haddock, Rt. 1, Box 238, Grifton (near O'Quinn's Grocery off Highway 118); phone, 524-4806.

Sizes of the family members are as follows: Warren — pants, 34-34, shirt 15 to 15 and a half; shoes, 12; Connie — slacks, nine-12; blouse, medium; shoes, seven; Christy, a daughter — six or seven; Michelle, a daughter — two or three.

How Can She Keep Her Age A Secret?

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: When I married Herb I knocked four years off my age because he was two years younger than I. We've been married 21 years, and Herb still doesn't know my real age.

We're planning our first trip abroad, and in order to get passports, I sent away for our birth certificates—mine to be sent to a post office box that I got especially for this purpose. My husband frequently sees the mail before I do, and I don't want him to see the year of birth on my birth certificate.

I suppose I am acting childish about this, but Herb is the kind of person who would rib me the rest of my life if he found out.

Is there some way I can doctor up my birth certificate (or the passport) so my husband won't find out how old I am?

FORT SMITH, ARK.

DEAR ARK.: Don't "doctor" up anything. Be cool. Herb may not even notice the year of birth on your passport. Or tell him in advance. If he ribs you, he ribs you. Women have been getting the rib ever since Eve.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 15 and my boyfriend is 18, and we've been going together for four months. For my birthday last week, he bought me a really sharp black lace bikini bathing suit with a shorty beach coat to match.

He knew I wanted it because we saw it in a window when we were walking together. I thought it was real neat of him, but my mom hit the roof when she saw it. She said it was not a proper gift for a guy to give a girl unless they are engaged.

What's wrong with it?

PAM

DEAR PAM: Among proper people, "intimate apparel" is considered an improper gift for teens who are just "going together."

DEAR ABBY: Our son is a professional photographer and one of the best in town. He snaps everything and everybody but his own mother and father.

From the time he was a small boy, he was interested in photography as a hobby, so his dad and I always saw to it that he had the best equipment.

Now that he is a professional with a fine studio, you would think he would offer to take our pictures, but he never has. Even at family gatherings when he's busy taking candid shots, if we don't stick our faces in a couple of pictures we'd be left out entirely.

We are average-looking people and wouldn't break his camera. It would be nice to have some good studio pictures of ourselves before we get old and gray. We haven't had a decent picture taken in 10 years!

What do you suppose is the matter with him? Any suggestions?

MA AND PA

DEAR MA AND PA: He's thoughtless. Call his studio and ask for an "appointment." (P.S. And if he sends you a bill, frame it.)

Health Field Drawing More Male Nurses

NEW YORK (AP) — While women are working in jobs once designated "for men only," more and more men are entering at least one profession formerly regarded as "woman's domain" — occupational health nursing.

That's the report of Dorothy M. Saller, registered nurse and executive director of the American Association of Occupational Health Nurses. This national organization is made up of approximately 10,000 registered nurses employed by business, government and industry to protect the health and safety of the U.S. work force.

"Men are being readily accepted into the profession by their female co-workers," Miss Saller said, pointing to the fact that male members of the group are being elected to positions of high responsibility in the association.

For example, registered nurse Larry Hanniga, divisional manager of nursing services, IBM Corp., Franklin Lakes, N.J., has been elected to both the national board of directors and presidency of the New Jersey Association. Men are also serving in the top office of other state and local associations.

The only man in an eight-nurse medical department, Daniel J. Bennett, 29, comments on the role-reversal question from everyday first-hard experience. "No problems whatsoever." Bennett, employed by Chrysler Corp. Warren Truck Assembly Plant, Warren, Mich., has been in occupational health nursing since 1971.

While there is no record of the very first male occupational health nurse in this country, a sprinkling of men have been members of the association since its founding in 1942. The '70s, however, saw the beginning of a significant increase in the number.

Between 1970-71 and 1974-75, the number of men awarded bachelor degrees in nursing went from 253 to 1,095, according to Department of Health, Education and Welfare figures. And, Miss Saller said, this increase has been reflected in the growing number of men in occupational health nursing.

What attracts male nurses to occupational health nursing? The same things that attract women.

Among them: regular hours and the benefits of being on a company payroll. Diversity of responsibilities — for instance, screening and testing for early detection of diseases, rehabilitation, counseling, health education, working with programs in special areas such as alcoholism, drug abuse, obesity and behavior problems.

Teaching and caring for ambulatory patients are aspects of occupational health nursing to the liking of Mark Stauder, 32, Southwest Industrial Clinic, Palos Heights, Ill. He became interested in this nursing specialty while caring for industrial patients in hospital emergency rooms, and recognized the need for a better method of handling industrial injuries

Today his nursing responsibilities are coupled with administration of the clinic, which provides occupational health care services for companies and municipalities not large enough to maintain their own medical units.

"Nursing gender matters little to the patient receiving proper care," Stander says. "And mutual respect between males and females in the profession is certain to eliminate any role-reversal conflicts."

Dean W. Clemans, 33, Grand Island, Neb., says he welcomes the opportunity to help people cope with their problems and to be independent and make the decisions that go with operating a one-nurse medical unit. He is employed by Sperry New Holland, a farm equipment manufacturer with 1,100 employees, both men and women.

A former wildlife biologist, Clemans finds his present position much more satisfying, and he sees his future in the field of occupational health nursing.

In light of the ready acceptance of male nurses by both colleagues and employees, as well as the special appeals of the profession, says Miss Saller, she foresees more and more men entering occupational health nursing.

"And like those already in this field," she says, "They will have a great deal to contribute to the protection of the health and safety of our country's work force."

Bridal Shower Held Saturday

Miss Karen Forrest, bride-elect of Paul Stocks, was honored with a floating miscellaneous bridal shower Saturday night in the Ayden Methodist Church fellowship hall.

Guests were greeted by Irene Tripp. Lula Wilson and Mary Harper assisted in registering guests and recording gifts.

Marian Hardee invited guests to the refreshment table which was covered with an imported white cutwork cloth and centered with an arrangement of roses. White lighted tapers, wedding bells and vases of roses and snapdragons completed the decorations. Jean McLawhorn and Gladys Corbett served cake and Cindy Dunn poured punch.

Special guests included Mr. and Mrs. David Forrest, Mr. and Mrs. Alton Paul Stocks, parents of the couple, Mrs. Elva Lee Forrest and Mrs. Corney Stocks, grandmothers, and Philip Stocks, brother of the bridegroom-elect.

Miss Forrest was remembered with a white daisy corsage by the hostesses' Joyce Nobles, Sandra Loftin, Irene Tripp, Sandra Mitchell, Diane Worthington, Cindy Dunn, Marian Hardee, Jean McLawhorn and Gladys Corbett.

Step To Correct Deficiencies

It has been clear for some time that North Carolina has grossly inadequate facilities for handling its prison population.

Overcrowded and antiquated facilities have been the rule. The lack of single cells has made the handling of prisoners difficult, and the conducting of any sort of rehabilitative program virtually impractical.

The deficencies have been recognized by the administration and the State Legislature and steps are now underway to correct this.

Most symbolic of the $72.7 million program to upgrade the prison facilities is a major construction and renovation project now getting underway at the old Central Prison in Raleigh..

The prison was built in 1884 for 950 inmates. In a $27 million project, much of the old prison will be torn down and replaced, and other facilities will be extensively renovated.

Gov. Hunt recently said, "Just as Central Prison has been inadequate for many years now, so has our approach to fighting crime.

He cited overcrowding in the state's prisons and said some judges simply would not sentence convicted offenders to jail because of the overcrowding.

Central prison will provide space for maximum security prisoners, but extensive building is underway at other prison units throughout the state when medium and mimimum security will be maintained.

"All of this is to do one thing, and that is to make our prisons a workable tool in the fight against crime," the governor said.

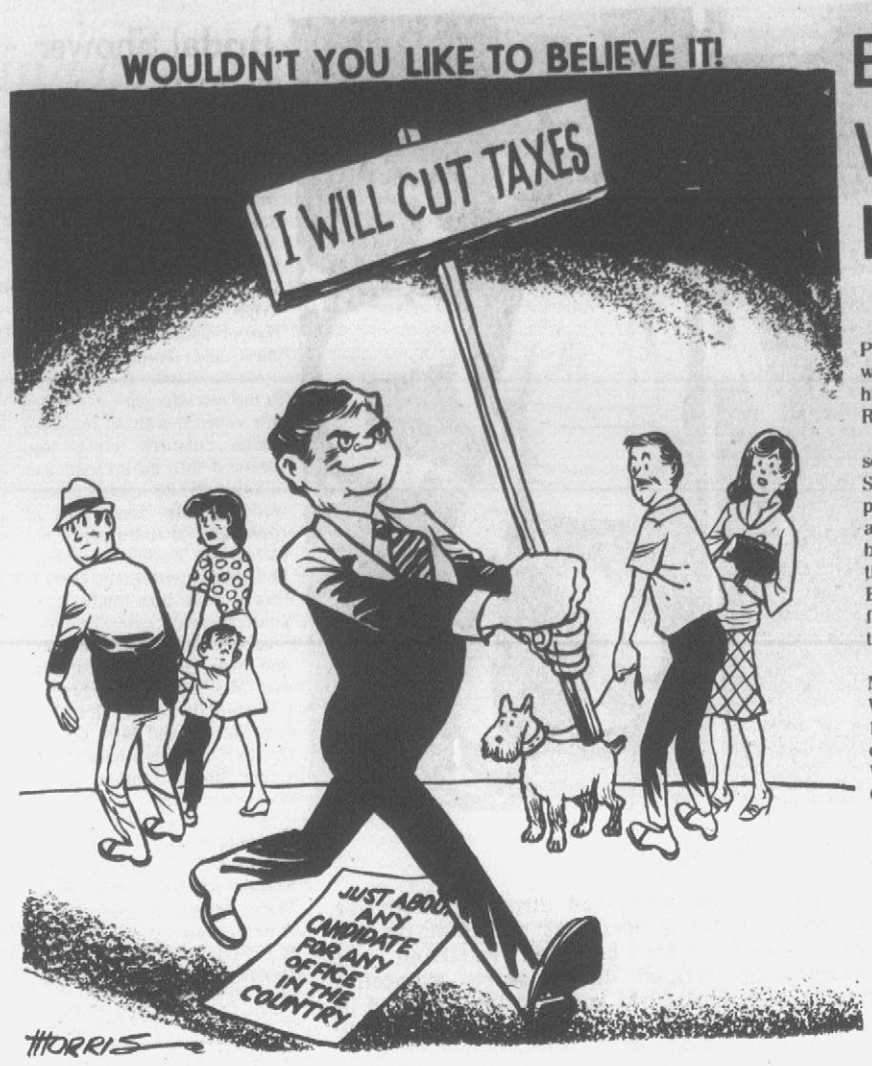

North Carolina delayed too long in improving the physical facilities of its prison system. Now, however we are spending large amounts of money for better facilities and it should help authorities to deal better with the housing and rehabilitation of prisoners.

Area People Would Endorse Proposal

The Carteret Chamber of Commerce is hard at work attempting to convince the Department of Transportation of the need for a third bridge to Bogue Banks.

Most recently the chamber has invited DOT representatives to meet with Carteret representatives on the island.

Most people in our area, frequently confronted with traffic tie-ups at Morehead on summer weekends, would heartily endorse the plans for a new bridge.

Began With Nixon

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has an adviser with the initials F.D.R. who got his start in government in Richard Nixon's White House.

Franklin Delano Raines first served Carter as an assistant to Stuart Eizenstat, the president's domestic policy adviser. More recently, he has been an associate director of the Office of Management and Budget and thus an important figure in the Executive Office of the President.

In 1969, the first year of the Nixon presidency, Raines was a White House intern. Then, in 1970-71, he was assistant to the chairman of a Nixon-sponsored White House Conference on Children and Youth.

Asked if he's a Democrat, Raines responded, "What else could I be with my initials?"

In truth, the 30-year-old Seattle native was not named for Democratic President Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

"I was named for my father and my uncle," he reported.

His parents, he said, simply added a syllable to his uncle's name, Frank. And whoever made out his birth certificate misspelled his father's name, Delno.

Of course, Raines added, his parents were admirers of the original F.D.R.

Robert Strauss, the president's ambassador for trade negotiations and chief anti-inflation jawboner, was nettled when a reporter suggested cattle prices would drop without being nudged by the federal government.

"You are talking to a fellow who used to play the commodity market pretty good," snapped the wealthy Strauss.

"I love to gamble. And all you fellows who know so much about those indications about what the market is going to do, I find out busted me about 12 or 14 times in my life."

Like some fellow Texans, the engaging Strauss only exaggerates occasionally. But you can always count on him for a ribtickling story, which may even turn out to be true.

Empty Seats But No Rides

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — There are thousands of North Carolinians in rural areas who need a ride to work or the grocery store or the doctor's office.

And there are hundreds of vehicles shuttling about hauling people one place or another under various governmental "human services" programs.

But the two don't match up. Trying to cut through the nettlesome regulations, resolve bureaucratic wrangling and turffighting, and come up with the funds to provide transportation to those who need it is proving a major task for the state's Rural Transportation Task Force.

"In most counties, the transportation is there. It only needs to be used efficiently", says Alice Garland, director of a rural transportation study project for the Department of Transportation.

Her attitude is echoed by others in the agency, and in a statewide survey of needs and problems, and existing solutions.

The task force is now trying to gear up for a new federal program which will provide $75 million for rural transportation nationwide — approximately $4 million of that for use in North Carolina.

Many Buses

That sounds like a considerable sum for such a purpose. Actually much more than that is already being spent each year in this state. The survey identified nearly $10 million in transportation funding in North Carolina last year; locating 1,039 vehicles serving people in 97 of the state's 100 counties.

But almost all of those vehicles are used exclusively by one governmental (or private non-profit) agency, and any attempt to provide rides for others not being served by a particular agency ran afoul of redtape and regulations.

For instance, buses are used to carry trainees to the Concentrated Employment Training Act programs to classes, and even to jobs after training is finished. But they may not be used to carry a next-door neighbor to work at the same place if that person is a vocational rehabilitation client rather than a CETA client.

So the sotry goes. The summary of the statewide study puts it this way: there are no overall policies, no coordination, very little information, inconsistent rules and regulations, feelings of territoriality, lack of initiative, and little regard for the problem.

BILL NOBLITT

Yet, "Many in North Carolina are not provided the mobility ... for reasons of age, income, handicap, or lack of access to an automobile. The rural nature of the state and resulting low density development creating further reliance on the automobile, compounds this problem for many of the state's residents."

That rural domination (more than half the population live in rural areas or small towns) may prove an asset, however, in qualifying for federal funds and in drawing up a plan to provide rural transportation.

One Agency

David King, assistant director of the public transportation division of the Department of Transportation, sees the task as one of piecing together the existing single-agency operations and other transportation services for handicapped, elderly, and poor into "a single operating agency, and covert this into a system serving the general public."

This process will take a long time, King admits. First, there must be some local leadership in pushing for such a system. Then, local boards of county commissioners must get involved and agree to put up local funds. Additionally, the agencies now operating transportation must be willing to give up the funds and jobs and their names on the side of the bus.

The key to all of this is county commissioners. Will those leaders, as a task force member suggests, be willing to call the various local providers into a room and tell them "dammit.... ..cooperate," in order to make a system work?

King feels that as various communities do build a public-serving system the idea will spread eventually across the state.

A Catastrophic Illness

WASHINGTON — Mr. Carter begs the question. In putting forth his pussyfooted program of ten principles for national health insurance, the president would have us consider only the details of coverage, cost and administration. He skips nimbly over the threshold question: Should we have national health insurance at all?

Until a convincing case can be made in support of national health insurance in America, the details are irrelevant. No such case has been made. On the contrary, the arguments against national health insurance get more persuasive all the time.

To justify so radical a departure from traditional forms of health care, proponents might reasonably begin by arguing that health services in America are so poor that greater governmental intrusion is imperative. The proposition won't wash. Since 1970, infant mortality has dropped 25 percent, life expectancy has risen by a year and a half, and nine of the ten leading causes of death have declined. As Dr. Richard E. Palmer observes, "those are hardly the elements of crisis."

Speaking for the American Medical Association, Dr. Palmer makes some other points. While the distribution of doctors is uneven (and in a free country it could not be otherwise), the U.S. has more doctors per capita than almost any other nation in the Western world. The government's own studies find that typically a family is no more than 17 minutes away from a doctor, a clinic or a hospital. Public opinion polls indicate that Americans overwhelmingly are satisfied with the care they receive.

Nevertheless, do the people want a program of national health insurance? It depends upon how the question is put. Phrased in terms of "free" medical care, the question understandably draws an affirmative response. But when an NBC survey asked about a program paid for "through increased taxation", it was a different matter altogether. There simply is no convincing evidence of public demand for the kind of program that Mr. Carter would impose on the country.

One reason for public opposition can be found in present high levels of health insurance. Roughly 92 percent of our people already are covered by some form of medical insurance. More than half of our people have major medical or "catastrophic", coverage. The terms of coverage vary widely — and in a free country this is a good and healthy situation. Those who want "first dollar" coverage can get it; those who want $50 or $100 deductible have that freedom of choice also.

A second reason may lie in public hostility to government programs generally. The administration of a plan of national health insurance would wind up in the same superbly efficient hands that managed last year to lose or mistakenly to spend a mere $7 billion. The people are fully aware of the slipshod, cumbersome, grossly inept administration of Medicare and Medicaid. More of the same? Who Wants it?

The best that can be said of Mr. Carter's ten principles is that, if any program at all is to be adopted, his gradual approach makes more sense than Sen. Edward Kennedy's grandiose production. The president would start small; he would give some account

To the editor:

As a concerned, law-abiding citizen, I would like to bring to the attention of all emergency vehicle drivers that more caution should be used to prevent endangering human lives. I know that every second could mean a life, but why risk a collision that would endanger other lives by being in too big a hurry?

To illustrate: I was on my way home yesterday from Greenville traveling toward Ayden on the four-lane N. C. 11 when the Winterville police car, the Winterville fire truck and two, I assume, volunteer firemen came out of Winterville and crossed the four-lane without stopping at all for the oncoming traffic.

I was traveling 50 miles per hour, but had to brake so suddenly that I skidded on the wet surface. I intend no reflection on the Winterville Departments. I have seen this happen in Greenville and in my hometown of Ayden many times.

I am writing this so that in the future a little more caution might be used in consideration of human lives not involved in the emergency, but traveling the highways and streets and at the mercy of situations such as this one.

40 Years Ago Today

August 3, 1938

With the New Carolina Warehouse on Dickinson Avenue completed here, the Greenville tobacco market this year will operate with an even dozen warehouses to handle an anticipated heavy flow of the golden weed.

Floyd McGowan, a native of Pitt County who has actively engaged in the warehouse industry in Greenville for the past 15 years, is proprietor and manager of the organization.

H. L. Rivers, civil engineer supervising work on the city's municipal stadium, said today 73 WPA workers are busy pouring cement groutings, a preliminary to setting up the steel for the recreation center.

Workmen are also grading for a skating track and running track. Rivers explained that the race track will be one-quarter of a mile long and the skating track will be 279 feet in length.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Carter's Media Wizard

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — President Carter's melancholy performance during his prime-time press conference July 20 helps explain why Gerald Rafshoon, his senior image rebuilder of six weeks standing, is called "the p.r. Potemkin" within the White House.

That evening's follies were all under Rafshoon's stage management: the first prime-time news conference by this president; the ban against an opening statement praising the Bonn economic summit; the decision to refuse questioning on the Peter Bourne affair. Since joining the White House staff fulltime, Carter adviser Rafshoon has failed to slow the president's long decline.

Probably nobody could. What brings grumbles in the White House — no longer feud-free — is that Atlanta advertising man Rafshoon has not used his personal influence to guide the president into a more orderly course. Colleagues complain that Rafshoon's greatest accomplishment so far has been his own aggrandizement as "the curly-haired media whiz."

His first initiative upon entering the White House chilled expectations that a sophisticated public relations operator had come aboard. He proposed a Fourth of July nationally televised speech by Mr. Carter based on a patriotic theme, actually to be delivered on June 29 before the president started his vacation.

Cautious suggestions that this would not help the president much did not move Rafshoon. Nor did he approve a draft speech prepared by a staffer. Nothing would do but that the speech must be written by the eminent liberal historian, 75-yearold Henry Steele Commager. Reached in Denmark, Prof. Commager set to work quickly on a long speech. It was soon pouring into the White House, take by take, on the diplomatic cable from the Copenhagen embassy.

Commager now assumes the idea was discarded. In fact, the networks said no to free television time. From that moment, suspicion was planted at the White House

Strength For Today

TENNYSON

In 1850, after years of grinding poverty, things began to happen for the budding English poet, Alfred Lord Tennyson. In the spring of that year he published his great poem "In Memoriam". In June he married the woman to whom he had been engaged for fourteen years. In November, he was named Poet Laureate of England.

Our fathers and mothers read Tennyson more than we do now, yet his poetry is a staple in all English courses "In Memoriam", an elegy on the death of a friend, came the words of two well-known hymns—"Strong Son of God, Immortal Love", and "Ring Out, Wild Bells." Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar," placed by him at the end of his collected poems, is perhaps our most moving funeral hymn.

In his work Tennyson sounded a message of faith. Thus when his triumph finally came, he was able to speak out nobly as the poetic voice of his nation.

Attention On Small Business

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Ever since World War II, when the growth of Big Business was spurred by the need for huge amounts of armaments, Small Business has felt neglected and even discriminated against.

Now it is beginning to feel better. As one small business advocate put it: "The time seems right for a compensatory period of growth of the entrepreneurial, independent small enterprise part of the economy."

In the past month the House Ways and Means Committee approved a tax bill that delights Small Business, the White House scheduled a Small Business Conference, and Congress approved a Small Business advocate.

Milton Stewart is the that, say friends who have listened to him denounce the stranglehold of Big Government, Big Business and Big Labor. Those are his words quoted above.

What is different now is that the Small Business Administration has an executive, the first ever, who will argue before other government agencies the wisdom and justice of keeping Small Business in mind.

Why should they? Self-interest, for one thing. Small Business is the primary creator of jobs. Small Business is innovative and inventive, whereas Big Business sometimes turns sterile and beaucratic.

Stewart, who once headed a venture capital firm and later the National Small Business Association, cites figures showing that bet- million jobs were created in the United States.

"Three million of them were created by state and local government" he said, the remainder by small business. The one thousand largest industrial concerns began with 16 million and ended with that."

With a Small Business advocate only now being appointed, there is the suggestion that the Small Business fight is just beginning. But in fact it has considerable momentum. President Carter, for example, was enlisted as an ally while he was still a candidate.

Now that he is president, Small Business supporters will not let him forget. Nor are there indications he has. The president's letter to Cabinet heads regarding the White House conference

In the letter he told them to appoint "either an assistant secretary or personal aide to deal directly with the Honorable A. Vernon Weaver," administrator of the Small Business Administration.

Carter was firm in what he desired, saying he wanted them to be able to tell not about plans but accomplishments in improving the climate between small business and the administration.

Weaver, a former Little Rock, Ark., insurance broker, and his deputy, Patricia Cloherty, a former financial executive, will conduct 12 regional forums to prepare for the conference, to be in January 1980.

"It represents probably the opportunity of a century for small business to express that Rafshoon more closely resembled the naive inexperience of the past 18 months than its antidote.

While planning the aborted Fourth of July operation, Rafshoon was in charge of a major political speech by the president to be given in Houston on June 23. Although Rafshoon promised a "thematic" approach in future Carter speeches, the energy theme originally proposed for Houston was lost in a typically Carterite ramble. Whether Rafshoon really tried or not, his impact was imperceptible.

But Rafshoon clearly views the speech-writing operation as the core of his new job. He has tangled with senior political aid Anne Wexler, who has strong views about political input, over speech-writing responsibility. "I think we have some very talented speechwriters who need some direction," Rafshoon told us. Whether those speechwriters need that help, Rafshoon's influence as an insider is essential for the president actually to read what is written for him.

Thus, the rambling, ouston speech doused early hopes. Rafshoon seems less interested in the words and substance that make up speeches than in image-making. Short of getting the president to go through speech drafts prepared for him, Rafshoon himself is not keen about wading through printed words.

It is particularly galling for some Carter aides that while doing little to rehabilitate the president, Rafshoon has become a darling of the media. "Sightseeing to the drumbeat of image-builder Gerald Rafshoon," began the New York Daily News in explaining the president's July 6 tours of Civil War battlefields. "Carter's media wizard" was reported as telling the president, "in effect, to go out and meet people."

Rafshoon is probably more victim than perpetrator of such publicity. Particularly anxious of late to halt the Rafshoon media blitz, he rejected a recent bid from ABC's "Issues and Answers" and vetoed a proposed article on him for People magazine. "Jerry has turned down about three-fourths of the media requests," reports a sympathetic colleague, "but he probably should have turned down the other fourth, too."

Rafshoon complains that every public movement by the president is unfairly attributed to his advice. He denies parentage of either the Civil War battlefield tour or the president's much publicized warning of dismissal for illegal drug users on the White House staff. Nevertheless, staffers profess to see Rafshoon's imprint on the president's anti-drug memorandum (considering the vigor with which Rafshoon personally threatened his own subordinates if they smoke marijuana).

Whether Rafshoon is personally responsible, the release to the press of Mr. Carter's "confidential" memorandum against staff drug usage is all too reminiscent of the fumbling amateurism that has plagued his White House. His failure thus far to introduce professionalism — while being so lavishly publicized as Jimmy Carter's savior — explains why uncharitable colleagues compare him with Prince Potemkin.

to economic and administrative factors; and he would accord the private insurance companies "a significant role" in the whole scheme.

But the principles are so vaguely stated that it is impossible to know what the president truly has in mind. We are given no estimates of cost. Nothing is said of the tax increases that would be required. The dimensions of an expanded bureaucracy cannot even by guessed at. Welfare Secretary Joe Califano indicates that a "catastrophic" program is a "first-stage possibility," but proposals for catastrophic programs come in sizes ranging from $12 billion to $80 billion in the first year. How would "catastrophe" be defined?

My dictionary defines catastrophe as "a momentous tragic event ranging from extreme misfortune to utter overthrow or ruin." That definition exactly fits the proposal that the United States embark upon any comprehensive plan of national health insurance.

As public services were phased in, private medical care would be phased out. If Congress fell into the folly of "first dollar" coverage, the illusion of "free" medical care would gain credence. The costs of health and hospital care would soar out of sight. Regulations would be piled on regulations, and the old virtue of personal responsibility would succumb to the anesthetic of government control. The best way to avoid this dreary road is not to take it at all.

The bidding:

1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ♣.

It is all too easy to overlook the obvious at the bridge table, especially if you don't take time out to count your tricks. Look at the sad fate that befell South on this hand.

After North showed enough strength to respond at the two-level, South bid what he thought he could make. North wisely made no move despite the fact that he held the ace-king of his partner's suit—those cards had already been taken into account for his first response and he had nothing extra.

West led his singleton club, and the hand was soon over. Declarer won the ace, cashed the ace and king of trumps and then discarded his lone heart on the king of clubs. West ruffed and exited with the ace of hearts, and in the fullness of time the defenders collected three diamond tricks for down one.

Since North had bid the suit, declarer should have taken into account the possibility that West's lead was a singleton. Had he stopped to count his tricks, he would have seen that he had nine—seven trumps and the two minor-suit aces. While it is true that he would have made his contract if the king of clubs lived, he did not need that trick. He could score his tenth trick by ruffing a diamond in dummy.

After winning the ace of clubs, declarer should immediately lead ace of diamonds and another. The defenders are helpless. They can win the diamond and shift to a trump to dummy's king, but it will avail them naught.

Declarer gets back to his hand by ruffing a club high, and then he ruffs a diamond in dummy with the ace of trumps. Now it costs declarer nothing to try to cash the king of clubs, discarding a red card from his hand. West can ruff this trick, but declarer doesn't mind. He had already assured himself of his contract.

Prepared To Take Women Into Crew

WASHINGTON (AP) — If women are allowed to serve on Navy ships, the Charleston-based USS Compass Island will be one of the first to welcome them aboard.

The Navy is still waiting for Congressional approval of legislation that would ease restrictions against women's going to sea.

But approval seems assured, and in the meantime the Navy has begun a volunteer recruiting program and chosen five regular Navy ships for assignments to the some 375 enlisted women and 55 officers it will select.

The House and Senate are now considering a joint conference report, which contains legislation already approved by both chambers.

Under current law, women may be assigned only to hospital ships and transport-type ships — none of which are now in service.

The Navy has asked for the legislation because women who can't get regular sea duty are denied promotional opportunities.

In addition, a federal judge recently ruled that certain system-wide restrictions against women on ships should be eliminated. He added, however, that Congress may give the Navy reasonable female sailors.

The new legislation would allow assignment of women to temporary non-combat jobs on regular ships. It excludes shipboard assignments to some aviation, construction and communications positions.

An aide to the Senate Armed Services Committee said the assignments are temporary — long enough for Navy women who seek promotions to accumulate the required on-board experience or "to become oriented toward a particular job" necessary for career advancement.

The other ships selected for women's service are the submarine tender USS L.Y. Spear and the repair ship USS Vulcan, both at Norfolk, Va.; the destroyer tender USS Samuel Gompers at San Diego; and the gunnery and missile test ship USS Norton Sound at Port Heuneme, Calif.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecast for today until early Friday predicts showers for the east coast from Maine to Maryland and the western parts of Virginia and North Carolina. Showers are also expected for parts of Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press

Warm, tropical air will continue to bring cloudy skies and scattered showers and thundershowers to North Carolina for the next several days.

The tropical air system is being fed into the state by a low pressure system over Georgia, according to the National Weather Service. The low-pressure system is expected to remain stationary for the next few days.

The weather service says showers and thundershowers will increase across the state today as a cold front moves in from the midwest. The front is expected to reach the western slopes of the Appalachians Friday. But the front is expected to weaken considerably as it moves across the North Carolina mountains.

Around the state Wednesday, skies were partly cloudy. Afternoon and evening thundershowers were confined mainly to the eastern part of the state. Precipitation in most areas was light.

Afternoon temperatures Wednesday were slightly lower than on Tuesday, but the coastal and western Piedmont areas had temperatures in the upper 80s up to 90. Wilmington recorded the state's high Wednesday of 90 degrees.

Asks To Meet James Earl Ray

CHICAGO (AP) — Contending the FBI hasn't been truthful, the Rev. Jesse L. Jackson is asking for a prison interview with James Earl Ray, the man convicted of fatally shooting Martin Luther King Jr. in Jackson's presence.

Jackson said his action was prompted by a letter Ray sent him, professing innocence and telling of a conspiracy to murder King.

"All the circumstantial evidence points to these conclusions: The FBI knows more than it has told us. It could be reluctant to tell all because it was involved. Or it could be reluctant because of what it didn't do to prevent the assassination," Jackson said in an interview Wednesday.

King, head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was slain at a Memphis motel April 4, 1968. Jackson was one of several King aides standing with him when the fatal shot was fired.

Ray, now 50, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to 99 years in Tennessee's Bushy Mountain state prison.

Ray's letter to Jackson was dated July 21 and said:

"I did not kill Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

"I believe the evidence that I can give you about how I was used, moved around the country, paid substantial sums of money, directed to buy a rifle and directed to report to Memphis on April 4, 1968, will be helpful in establishing the fact that there was a conspiracy to murder Dr. King ..."

Ray's letter to Jackson asked for a new trial saying: "At a trial I am sure I will be able to prove that I am innocent and the secret FBI files which we will see at the trial will lead to the real murders..."

Jackson, now head of Operation Push, said today he would like to interview Ray at the prison because "I'd like to to hear from his own mouth, beyond the letter, if he has something to say that we don't already know about Martin's death."

Jackson said Tuesday that he was sending a telegram to President Carter in an effort to obtain a trial for Ray.

Ray pleaded guilty to King's murder and was sent to prison without a full trial. But since his sentencing he has often contended that he is innocent and deserving of a trial.

Jackson said Ray needs a trial to establish his allegation of a conspiracy because the court procedure would be necessary to subpoena pertinent FBI files.

Ray "wants to have a public trial even if it means that he may be electrocuted if he is found guilty," Jackson's telegram to Carter said. "He is confident that his information is substantial." Jackson also said in the telegram that Ray's "right to trial is a human right."

Says Courts Let'em Go

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Police Chief Danny K. Dixon says police are unable to control prostitution in this military-oriented city because offenders are usually given light penalties.

Dixon said prostitutes often are fined only $25 and ordered to pay court costs of $27, an amount "they can make in about 30 minutes. He said judges have the authority under state law to impose a maximum penalty of two years in jail and a fine.

If lengthy jail sentences were handed down, he said, "then we would not have a prostitute left on the street.

"It's gotten to the laughing stage of even the prostitutes asking the officers if they want a date because they know nothing's going to happen," Dixon said. "You can't clean up something like this without the help of the judicial system."

Fayetteville police began a crackdown on prostitution last week and Dixon said they recorded 80 arrests over the weekend.

He said last weekend was a payday weekend at Fort Bragg and Pope Air Force Base, bringing in an estimated 200 prostitutes who "know more about the pay system than we do."

He said prostitution leads to other crimes such as auto theft, drug violations and other activities.

"We've been trying to tell people that it's not just prostitution, it's a whole bag that goes with it," Dixon said.

Expansion

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — R.J. Reynolds Industries Inc. is planning a $35.2 million expansion of its research and development facilities in Winston-Salem.

James R. Peterson, executive vice president of the company, revealed the plan Wednesday for construction of a four-story laboratory and another four-story building next to the Reynolds Bowman Gray Development center.

"Opportunities for research and development in any business are directly related to the rates of change in that business' products," Peterson said. "The rates of change in our tobacco and packaging businesses are increasing rapidly, hence the increasing opportunity for R-and-D investment."

Officials said design and engineering work are under way, construction should begin in about a year and completion is expected by October 1981.

The research and development expansion is expected to benefit RJR Archer Inc., a packing subsidiary of the firm. Research personnel of RJR Archer, Reynolds Tobacco and Reynolds Industries will share the facilities.

California Is Still Waiting For The Big Quake

EDITOR'S NOTE: Beneath California, the 600-mile long San Andreas fault lies poised to deliver a minute or two of catastrophic shaking. But most Californians don't think about that, including AP reporter Bill Gardner, who here offers some thoughts on the curious apathy of those who live atop a sleeping giant.

——By BILL GARDNER
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — I sometimes wonder if maybe these scientists warning of the "Big Quake" aren't in cahoots with my mom.

She's always telling me I ought to come home and get the heck out of California before it's too late. It's only a matter of time, she says, before an earthquake knocks my house off its hillside perch.

Now comes this news story: "Scientists at the Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md., say new calculations suggest that the next major earthquake on the San Andreas fault may be larger and might occur sooner than expected."

It's true, of course, that there aren't many earthquakes or hillside perches where I grew up in central Illinois. It might be nice and safe to go back, but I'm going to stay right here and take my chances with the big one.

I've hardly seen a bolt of lightning in the six years I've been here. No tornadoes, no snow, no icy roads, not many muggy days. And if I have to risk an earthquake for all this, well, nothing's free.

Mrs. Robley Evans, who came here with her husband from Wisconsin in 1959, feels the same way. They lived in the San Fernando Valley when the San Fernando quake struck in February 1971 and killed 58 people.

Thomas Nemes, a woman's clothing manufacturer, also lived in the San Fernando Valley in 1971. A few days after the quake, Nemes said he was "definitely considering leaving Los Angeles."

Seven years later, Nemes is still here.

One measure of the concern people here have about earthquakes is that less than 5 percent of the homeowners had earthquake insurance at the time of the 1971 quake. It's about the same today.

The San Fernando quake was a big quake but not the Big Quake. It measured 6.6 on the Richter Scale, but scientists say a quake of more than 8.0 is due in Southern California.

They figure an 8.0 quake — which scientists consider a "great" quake — should occur on each segment of the San Andreas Fault every 100 years. Northern California last had a big quake in 1906, so one isn't due there yet. But Southern California last had one in 1857.

Earthquakes don't necessarily kill people directly. All but nine of the 58 victims of the San Fernando quake died in the collapse of one hospital. Three others died in the collapse of another hospital.

And there are plenty of old buildings around that were put up before modern construction codes required extra strengthening for earthquake protection. The City of Los Angeles is taking an inventory of those buildings. It's found 5,800 so far and expects to find 3,000 more.

A great many of these buildings are residential hotels and apartment buildings. Mostly old people live there. If anybody should be worried about earthquakes, they should.

Jim Davis lives in one of those old buildings. It's a fourstory job, made of red brick and by the front door is a barely readable iron sign that says "Blasdel Arms."

But it's not the Blasdel Arms and hasn't been for some time. Painted on the building's side is another sign. Much of the paint has chipped off, but the words "Bel-Rio Hotel Apartments" can be made out.

Davis lives on the second floor. His door is open and he sits — no shirt on — by himself on his old couch, sipping something. He's 46 and says he came here 15 years ago from Oklahoma for a piece of California prosperity. He's quick to say he has a job, in the back shop at a drycleaner. Pays $105 rent.

Earthquakes don't worry him. "If it's going to happen, it's going to happen. If the quake is strong enough, it can knock down any building."

Geoffrey Goddard's wife died of cancer seven years ago and he lives by himself in a fifthfloor apartment of another old building. After years of "termite work," he's retired at 62 but looks older.

There have been several fires in his building but he feels safe. "I'm right next to the fire escape," he says. "I can get out of here in nothing flat."

Earthquakes?

"I don't know what's to worry about," he says. "It might happen 16 seconds from now or 16 years. You aren't going to do anything about it anyway."

Goddard is from New York and would like to return east for a visit.

"If I had a car, I'd take a trip back to New York. But I know it's just like I left it, same old 8 million people."

Over at the Bel-Rio, Davis, too, thinks about his old home sometimes. "If I died, I'd rather be in Oklahoma. I ain't put down no roots here even though I been out here 15 years."

The community of Palmdale, population 12,600, sits atop a desert plateau about 60 miles north of Los Angeles. It also sits atop the San Andreas fault — right on top of it. But like their neighbors down in the city, Palmdale people aren't much worried.

"I don't think anyone really worries about it," said Patricia Hunt, a city hall secretary. "Everytime there's a new prediction in the paper, you think about it for a while and just forget about it."

Ponder A Possible Signal Of Volcano

MENLO PARK, Calif. (AP) — Seismologists said they were not sure if a rash of minor earthquakes centered near Mount Shasta signaled a potential volcanic eruption, but they continued studying while aftershocks from the quakes continued into their second day.

Although Mount Shasta has not erupted for 200 years, it is still classified as an active volcano by the Interntional Volcanological Association.

Scientists at the U.S. Geological Survey said the first quake hit shortly after 2 a.m. Tuesday and measured 4.2 on the Richter Scale. Seven additional ranging in magnitude from 3 to 4.2 were recorded in the following hour.

Shocks continued through Tuesday and were still being recorded Wednesday morning, the Survey reported.

Survey scientists said they would cooperate with seismologists from the California Division of Mines and Geology in studying the significance of the rash of quakes.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

An earthquake of 3.5 on the Richter scale can cause slight damage in the local area, 4 moderate damage, 5 considerable damage, 6 severe damage. A 7 reading is a "major" earthquake, capable of widespread heavy damage; 8 is a "great" quake, capable of tremendous damage.

The San Francisco earthquake of 1906, which occurred before the Richter scale was devised, has been estimated at 8.3 on the Richter scale.

Groans Followed Announcing List Of Fire Deaths

By HENRIETTA LEITH
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — From high atop a tall crane, firemen in a bucket sprayed water on blackened beams and girders. Smoke billowed from smoldering ruins.

All day and all evening Wednesday, hundreds watched the three men in the "cherrypicker," pressing against police barricades in their curiosity to see where six men perished.

Hundreds more jammed Ocean Avenue with their cars, riding by and staring at the burned-out Brooklyn supermarket as long as they could before police urged them away.

But in two small, old brick firehouses on tree-lined streets not far from the fire scene, no crowds gathered. There were just grim-faced men standing in big doorways, waiting to go out on the next fire.

MOURN THEIR COMRADES — A New York City firefighter places a comforting arm about weeping comrade after roof of a burning Brooklyn area supermarket gave way, sending six firemen to their deaths below. (AP Laserphoto)

Six comrades had been carried to fiery deaths when the roof of the Waldbaum's supermarket collapsed beneath them. It was the fire department's worst tragedy in 12 years.

Seven firemen are hospitalized, four in critical condition; 36 other persons were injured, all firefighters except for an Emergency Service police officer and a medical technician.

Uniformed Firefighters Association President Richard Vizzini said his union was "outraged" by the fire. He blamed the deaths on "undermanning and a delayed, inadequate response" to the fire — two recurring themes in the union's current contract drive.

Mayor Edward Koch, who was at the fire scene, retorted, "There are six dead heroes today and we're not here to discuss collective bargaining over their bodies."

Koch said the deaths were "hard to accept."

"It indicates how much we owe our firemen. It's just overwhelming. It's very difficult to talk about."

Both the Fire Department and the union scheduled news conferences today to discuss their investigations of the fire.

The cause of the fire was not immediately known, but the cause of the deaths and most injuries was obvious: collapse of the roof on which at least 12 firemen were chopping ventilation holes.

Ladder Company 156 on East 14th Street lost three men. Ladder Company 153 on Avenue U lost two men.

At 5:15 p.m. the list of dead was broadcast over the fire radio.

Order 5-5-5-5 began: "It is with profound regret ..."

The names of the six men followed; so did groans from firemen.

Battalion Chief Joseph Smithwick briefed a whole new complement of men at 156 who were brought in from other firehouses.

Smithwick said all those who had fought the fire with the dead firemen from 156 — Lt. James Cutillo, 38, Charles Bouton, 38, and William O'Connor, 29 — had been sent home, even those not injured in the four-alarm blaze.

They were too emotionally involved, he explained, to fight another fire that day.

"I'm pretty emotional myself," said Smithwick. "Five of them were my men. They all had wives and children.

NEW YORK: and children.

"It's like a wake," he added. "You know there's nothing you can do. Everybody here has a feeling of sadness, of helplessness."

Over at 153, the firemen who had fought fires with James McManus, 45, and George Rice, 38, and seen them plunge screaming through the roof's gaping hole, had been sent home, too.

The sixth fireman who died was Harold Hastings, 40, an aide to the chief of Brooklyn's 42nd Battalion.

"It's very difficult for me to express my thoughts," Fire Commissioner Augustus Beekman said Wednesday. "We are always sorry to lose men, but if there's another fire next door we just run to it. That's our job. After 113 years, we know we will always be back. It's just our job."

John Madigan was one of the rooftop firemen tossed into the flames. "It just melted away," he said of the roof. "Generally you'll hear a crack or something. ... It just gave way."

Madigan missed the core of the fire and escaped by crawling toward the rays of the sun's light — "God's light," he called it.

Capt. Frank Gudelis was also on the roof.

"I was at the front of the building," he said. "I was there when the whole thing fell out from under me. All I can remember was the sound, the roar of the roof collapsing, and then I didn't hear anything at all. I had my leg trapped momentarily. Then the guys brought me out."

When fireman O'Connor fell into the inferno, his wife and children were watching. They had arrived at his firehouse to pick him up from work just as the alarm sounded, and they followed the engines to the supermarket.

"His wife came to the fire...and he waved to her from on top of the building," said Pat Halpin, a boyhood friend of O'Connor. "Then the roof caved in and he was reported missing. That was the last she ever saw of him."

According to Virginia Marrone, a Waldbaum's cashier, the first hint that something was awry came at 8:10 a.m., shortly after the store opened. A workman came down the stairs and said, "There's a fire in the men's room. Get out of the store!"

Using the store's public address system, Miss Marrone told 10 employees and 10 shoppers to leave. "Some people — would you believe it — wanted to be checked out," she said.

The building was undergoing renovations, including a 30-foot extension into a rear parking lot. The roof was freshly tarred and a sprinkler system had been installed — but it was not working yet.

Four alarms brought 150 firemen to the fire, but the roof fell in before most arrived.

The worst New York fire in terms of loss of firemen's lives was on Oct. 17, 1966, when 12 died in a blaze that destroyed three buildings in Madison Square.

Shoe Store Will Open

Robert F. (Bob) Thompson announced the opening this Friday of a new shoe store, The Bootery, at 301 Evans Mall.

Thompson, who has been in the shoe business for some 30 years, said that he formerly operated The Bootery in Greenville from 1944 until 1954.

The new store, he reported, will offer shoes for men and women.

According to Thompson, interior renovations have been completed at the Evans Mall facility in preparation for tomorrow's opening.

Operating hours, initially, will be from 9:30 a.m. until 5:30 p.m., he said, Monday through Saturday.

A native of Roper in Washington County, the new store owner is married to the former Virginia Kirkman of Burlington and they have two children.

PROPAGANDA HERO DIES

MOSCOW (AP) — John Pinter, an American miner who gave up his homeland in 1921 and became a Soviet citizen, Communist party member and propaganda hero, has died at age 85, Tass said Wednesday.

Notebook, Badge Stopped A Bullet

BENNETTSVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Maybe a Bible would have done it, but Bennettsville Police Detective Lt. Norman R. Gehm owes his good health to a notebook and badge in his pocket — right where a motorist aimed his .22-caliber handgun.

Ghem, 40, thought the two men in a car along a highway bypass in Bennettsville were having car trouble Wednesday afternoon, and he stopped to offer assistance, Bennettsville Police Chief Eugene Copeland said.

When he approached the car, the two apparently heard the police radio in his car and learned that Ghem, not in uniform, was a policeman, he said.

One of the men then pointed his gun at Gehm. "They had the drop on me and handcuffed me," Gehm said. They took his service revolver, told him, "Goodbye" and shot him with their gun at a range of about six feet.

Gehm said he has a notebook with a hole "from one end to the other" and a nicked badge holder.

"It kind of took my breath away, and I went back up against their car," he said. He said his thoughts were, "If you're not dead, just lay here."

Wyatt Appointed

Ed Wyatt, new city manager here, has been appointed by Gov. Jim Hunt to the North Carolina Code Official Qualifications Board.

Wyatt was appointed to a position designated to be filled by a city or county manager and will serve until July of 1982 on the 20-member board.

Lee Ball, local contractor and realtor, is presently on the board for a tenure that extends to 1979.

Both Wyatt and Ball are members of the board's Qualification and Evaluation Committee.

The Code Official Qualifications Board was created in 1971 by the General Assembly and was an outgrowth of the Legislative Research Commission Report concerning establishing standards for employment and certification of codes officials.

Texas Flood Waters Claimed 8 Lives

By GREG THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer

BANDERA, Texas (AP) — Raging floodwaters that have killed at least eight persons in the central Texas hill country gathered new strength today after rains dumped an additional 14-inch deluge overnight.

The waters of the Upper Guadalupe River reached new crests today, even as authorities were still trying to locate persons missing from Wednesday's flooding.

The National Weather Service in San Antonio warned residents of the Guadalupe flood plains to evacuate a 20-mile area. About 200 persons were forced to leave Kerrville and nearby Ingram on Wednesday night.

The torrential rains spawned by tropical storm Amelia caused rivers to surge from their banks into riverfront communities and campsites early Wednesday.

Humble homes and exclusive dude ranches, alike, were ravaged, and the LBJ ranch was turned into a swamp.

In a region where residents recently worried about drought, one river rose 10 feet in one hour, submerging a highway bridge.

Heavy rains that hit the area Tuesday and Wednesday turned several normally placid rivers into surging death traps. In a 48-hour period ending Wednesday night, Kerrville had received 22 inches of rain.

The flooding devastated much of Bandera, Comfort and Medina.

Kerrville resembled a war zone as National Guard troops, Army and state police helicopters and scores of police deposited stunned refugees at evacuation centers.

Telephone communications were severely hampered in the stricken areas and it was difficult to account for residents and visitors. Many officials feared the death toll would rise.

Children rescued from the Serendip Camp on the Medina River were taken to the Pipe Creek Volunteer Fire Department. Refugees from Camp Bandina were taken to a church in Bandera.

National Guardsmen forded a stream late Wednesday night to rescue 156 girls from the isolated Herman-Scott camp. The girls were taken to a high school in Comfort where they were reunited with their families.

Early today the Texas Department of Public Safety reported the Guadalupe River rose 10 feet in one hour, covering a highway bridge on highway 281, about 40 miles north of San Antonio.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe asked that all three counties be declared disaster areas and made eligible for emergency assistance funds and programs.

Claribel Lovelace, 80, built her sturdy rock house in 1934, a respectful 700 yards from the sometimes stormy Medina River. On Wednesday the Medina paid a terrifying visit — with eight feet of churning, muddy floodwaters.

It left Mrs. Lovelace gasping for breath for two hours. But she survived.

"My mouth was against the ceiling and my hair was in the water," said the frightened Mrs. Lovelace, who was plucked from the water by rescuers in an Army helicopter. "I only had six inches of air to breathe.

Entrances to the LBJ Ranch near Stonewall were blocked by the raging floodwaters of the Pedernales River. Rising waters failed to reach the house, but came within feet of the stone fence circling the family cemetery where the late President Lyndon B. Johnson is buried.

The water ripped through Clint Dowell's automobile dealership about 150 yards from where the Medina normally flows, tossing dozens of new and used cars around like fishing corks and demolishing the building.

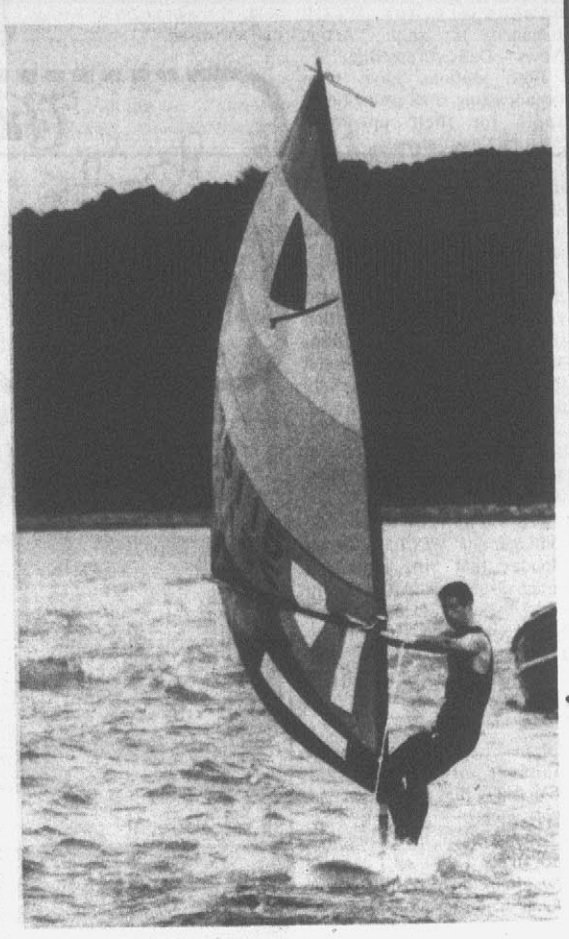

When the waters receded, Dowell's inventory was scattered up and down the Medina or stacked like cordwood in the mud-covered parking lot. He estimated the damage at more than $1 million.

Bandera's lucrative Medina River dude ranches were the hardest hit. Army helicopters rescued many vacationers from trees or rooftops, among them the 1977 Miss USA, Kim Tomes of Houston.

A spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety said the list of confirmed dead included two women at Bandera, two men at Comfort, and three adults and a 12-year-old boy at Center Point, between Comfort and Kerrville.

The Medina reached a record flood stage, cresting at 45 feet. The previous record was 43 feet set in 1919. The usual level of the river is 10 feet.

In Comfort, police said the Guadalupe was seven feet deep over much of the town. The local football stadium was under five feet of water. As the flood began to recede about noon, cars and trucks were standing on end, tangled in lifeless power lines. Appliances floated downriver.

Designing New Gas Chamber

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — It isn't every day that an architect is asked to design a gas chamber, but that's a task John Duncan of Charlotte is performing.

"It's pretty different," Duncan said during a telephone interview Wednesday.

A new gas chamber will be built in the administrative building of a maximum security penitentiary that will be constructed after the century old Central Prison is torn down. The chamber is in a cellblock of the old facility.

"All we've done is design an airtight room with a viewing window," Duncan said. "We did a lot of research and couldn't find that many states that use gas. There's nothing so specialized about it that it couldn't be used for something else" if the method of execution is ever changed or capital punishment abolished.

Authorities said 187 men and two women have died in the present gas chamber since Allen Foster of Hoke County, who was convicted of rape, became its first victim on Jan. 24, 1936.

After the state assumed responsibility for executions from the counties in 1910, it initially used an electric chair. A total of 172 men were sent to their deaths in the electric chair before the method of death was changed by the legislature due to questions about the humaneness of electrocutions.

Officials say the gas chamber will be eight feet by 10, airtight and equipped with a window, two doors and an outside vent. The two heavy, wooden chairs in the old chamber will be moved to the new one.

Dinner In Wilson Will Honor Helms

WILSON—The North Carolina Congressional Club is sponsoring a dutch treat dinner to honor Republican U.S. Senator Jesse Helms on the eve of Democrat Pres. Jimmy Carter's visit to Wilson, this week.

The N.C. Congressional Club, of which Helms is honorary chairman, has scheduled the dinner for 6 p.m. at the Holiday Inn Friday, some 18 hours before the president's scheduled visit to Wilson about noon Saturday.

The affair is designed to give area residents an opportunity to meet and talk informally with North Carolina's senior Senator.

The North Carolina Congressional Club is a bi-partisan organization based on the conservative principles of individual freedom, the preservation of the free enterprise system, and fiscally sound government.

Tickets for the Wilson dinner Friday may be secured by calling Batten Auto Parts, Inc., at 243-5183, or Candace Wilder at 291-1355.

Two Collisions Here Yesterday

An estimated $1,000 damage resulted from two collisions investigated yesterday by Greenville Police.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from an 11:27 a.m. collision on Nash Street, 50 feet South of the Ward Street intersection invloving cars driven by Rena Pearl Bridges of 1714B West Conley St., and William E. Jones of 1611 Lincoln Dr.

Police, who charged Jones with following too close, estimated damage at $425 to the Conley car and $275 to the Jones auto.

Cars driven by Toni Bruce of Fayetteville and Marilyn Jean Brewer of Beeville, Texas, collided about 1:50 p.m. at the intersection of Fifth and Meade Streets, causing an estimated $200 damage to the Bruce car and $100 damage to the Brewer vehicle.

'Action News' Is Doubling Up

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Local television viewers may soon be able to get a double dose of "Action News," with two competing stations both claiming the name for their newscasts.

Last Friday, WRET-TV (Channel 36) issued a news release saying, "It's official. WRET-TV has announced...the title of ths station news program as 'Action News.'"

On Monday, an advertisement in local newspapers for WCCB (Channel 18) said: "Action News — Daily via satellite."

Both stations have been broadcasting slick promotional spots for their upcoming "Action News" shows.

The two stations were among three of the four commercial stations in Charlotte involved in a recent network affiliation shuffle.

WRET became an NBC affiliate last month after several years as an independent station that did not have local newscasts. WRET is scheduled to start its own newscasts early next month.

WCCB lost its network affiliation with ABC in the shuffle and is now an independent station.

Jim Thrash, general manager of WCCB, said on Monday that "the matter is under discussion (with WRET) and I expect it to be resolved within a day or so. That's really about it."

Thrash did not return telephone calls to his office Wednesday.

Robert L. Schuessler, general manager of WRET, said Wednesday that no solution had been reached.

"We've been in discussions with them. That's all I can tell you," he said. "I think it's a friendly matter that can be resolved."

Asked if lawyers for either station had been involved, Schuessler said "it's nothing like that," and added that he had only spoken to Thrash by phone.

He said WRET had not known of WCCB's intention to use the "Action News" title until this week.

For the time being, Schuessler said, WRET will continue to promote its "Action News."

"I assumed everybody knew what we were doing (in planning the news format)," he said. "I'm not angry with them, just surprised."

Gynecologist Opines No Ethical Questions In Test Tube Babies

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A gynecologist at the University of North Carolina Medical School says he sees no ethical problems with test tube fertilization for women unable to become pregnant.

And Dr. Jaroslav Hulka, an associate professor of obstetrics and gynecology, said he expects test tube fertilizations to be performed at North Carolina Memorial Hospital within a matter of months.

"In my mind, it's medical therapy to help a woman become pregnant who has damaged tubes," Hulka said. "The moral and ethical questions are entertaining to discuss, but put yourself in the shoes of a woman who wants to have a child and can't and then ask yourself what is morally wrong with aiding conception."

He said the technique will be used only for women who can't conceive because of damaged fallopian tubes.

Hulka said Dr. Patrick Steptoe, who along with Dr. Robert Edwards perfected the technique that led to the birth in England last month of the world's first test tube baby, did research in Chapel Hill 12 years ago on keeping eggs alive away from the ovaries.

He said he has five or six patients who could be candidates for the procedure because their fallopian tubes are so badly damaged that normal conception is impossible.

"I began telling some of my patients many months ago to keep reading the papers because something good was going to happen in July," he said. Hulka said he knew of the success Steptoe and Edwards were having with the technique before it became public and he urged his patients not to have surgery because the test tube fertilization technique would be available soon.

Hulka said the use of a telescopic instrument allowing a doctor to view the ovaries has been available for some time.

"What is significant is that Steptoe and Edwards coordinated perfect timing, literally to the hour, of obtaining an egg from a woman and figuring out how to fertilize the egg once it was obtained," he said.

"Never before has the time of ovulation been so precise so that the egg could be extracted at just the right time, combined with Edwards' knowledge of what to do with the egg once it is removed.

"Once we learn what Steptoe and Edwards know and combine that with the experience of area researchers, there is no reason why the operation can't be performed in Chapel Hill," Hulka said.

He said he plans to go to England for a week or two in December to learn the technique from Edwards and Steptoe.

Tax Notices Mailed Out

WINTERVILLE — Winterville citizens who pay their property taxes in August will receive a two percent discount, according to Elwood Nobles, town clerk.

Taxes were mailed today, Nobles said. He urged Winterville citizens to take advantage of the two percent discount, since it is offered only in August.

The tax rate is 70 cents per $100, the same as the last two years. A total evaluation figure of $13,925,267 was reported for 1978.

Nobles reported the old age exemption figure totaled $394,361. He pointed out that taxes may be paid during regular working hours at the Winterville Town Hall or by mail.

Job Training Opportunities

Training opportunities for unemployed veterans in two basic field of employment — construction and mechanics trades— are now available through two local agencies.

Eligible veterans can contact the Veterans Affairs Office at Tipton Annex on Greenville Boulevard or the Employment Security Commission, 3101 Bismarck Street, for information and assistance into getting into the training program.

The training is part of the HIRE II program, designed to provide on-the-job training for veterans.

No Farmville Fuel Charge

FARMVILLE — Farmville utilities customers will find something missing from their August electric bills, Utilities Director J. A. Wooten says. There will be no fuel adjustment charge.

The absence of a fossil fuel charge is due to no charges to the town from the wholesale supplier, Carolina Power and Light Company for the past month of service, he said.

City Engineer At N.C. Meet

City Engineer C. A. Holliday recently returned from Asheville where he attended the summer meeting of the Professional Engineers of North Carolina.

Holliday has attended 18 meetings of the organization during his 22 years of employment with the city.

Major topics discussed at the session included energy utilization, scholarships, Engineers Week, professional engineers in government, and legislative matters affecting engineers.

The veteran city official was recently recognized at the annual meeting of the N.C. Chapter of the American Public Works Association and presented life membership in the national organization.

(NOTE: In all percentile figures quoted above, nationwide figures are in all instances based on a median percentile figure of 50 per cent, with for example, total battery rating of ninth graders in Greenville of 57 indicating that 57 per cent of local ninth graders scored higher than the national average.)

Comparisons

In reviewing the results at an informational session by members of the Greenville School Board on Tuesday night, members expressed pleasure over the high level of performance achieved by students in the Greenville schools.

The total study is in considerable detail, and summarizes achievements of students in relation to a number of socioeconimic factors—such as male and female students, blacks and whites, economic level of the families of students, and the educational level of parents.

Also taken into consideration were precentages of students in handicapped programs; those in special programs provided by ESEA Title I funds; and students (above the fourth grade level) studying in programs for gifted and talented children.

School board chairperson Mrs. Terry Shank suggested and the board concurred, that the board send principals, for dissemination to teachers and staff, statements of appreciation for the general excellence of instructions that made possible the high achievement level of students in the city schools.

— In general comparisons (relative to grade equivalents only) between the Greenville City Schools and Pitt County Schools, figures show fairly close degrees of achievement in grades one, two, and three, with a gap in levels more noticeable in grades six and nine.

The report shows:

— First Grade, Reading: Greenville, 1.8 and Pitt County, 1.8—Math: Greenville, 2.2 and Pitt County, 2.2

— Second Grade, Reading: Greenville, 3.2 and Pitt County, 2.9—Math: Greenville, 3.2 and Pitt County, 3.0.

— Third Grade, Reading: Greenville, 3.7 and Pitt County, 3.4— Language, Greenville, 3.6; Pitt County, 3.6 — Math: Greenville, 3.6 and Pitt County, 3.5 — Total: Greenville, 3.6 and Pitt County, 3.5.

— Sixth Grade, Reading: Greenville, 6.8 and Pitt County, 5.9— Language: Greenville, 6.7 and Pitt County, 6.0 — Math: Greenville, 6.7 and Pitt County, 6.3 — Total: Greenville, 6.7 and Pitt County, 6.1.

— Ninth Grade, Reading: Greenville, 10.0 and Pitt County, 8.4— Language: Greenville, 10.5 and Pitt County, 8.5 — Math: Greenville, 10.0 and Pitt County, 8.4 — Total: Greenville, 10.1 and Pitt County, 8.4.

PTL Reaps Donations

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The PTL evangelical organization, which issued a plea recently for contributions to help overcome $6 million in debts, says viewers responded last week with more money than at any time in its history.

Jim Bakker, president of the organization and host of the syndicated PTL Club television show, told of the response to his pleas during the taping of the program. Officials did not say how much money was donated.

PTL was reported to have gone into debt for a multimillion-dollar construction project called the Positive Living Center, which will include a Christian university, campground and retiremnt complex near Charlotte.

PTL Network officials said last month that the organization was $6 million in debt in early July but that the indebtedness had been reduced to $4 million by the end of the month. They said last week that donations amounted to about $1.5 million a week in early July

Special Church Services Set

Special services will be held at New Hope House of Prayer Holiness Church Saturday, 8 p.m., with the Rev. C. E. Tetterton and the Union Prayer Band from Washington.

Sunday, 2 p.m., a special singing program will be presented by the Gospel Tones Nos. One and Two from Hookerton.

Elder E. M. Davis, pastor, invites the public to attend. The church is located on Brown St., Greenville.

AP WRITER DIES

NORWALK, Conn. (AP) — Vivian Brown, 65, longtime Associated Press Newsfeatures writer, died Wednesday.

Area People Invited To See President Carter

Two members of the advance contingent of the White House Press Corps, in a brief visit to Greenville on Wednesday afternoon, stressed that people in the Greenville area are most welcome to see President Carter on his visit to Wilson on Saturday afternoon.

Sharon Metcalf and David Joyner, part of the team making advance arrangements for the president's North Carolina visit, were in Greenville to coordinate matters and to ensure that the public is aware of an open invitation to be on hand in Wilson.

"We really encourage the people of Greenville and the area to take this opportunity to see and hear the president," said Ms. Metcalf. "His trip has been planned to provide time for the general public when he makes his scheduled stop in the grounds in front of the Wilson Library at 249 West Nash Street."

President Carter is scheduled to arrive at the Rocky Mount-Wilson Airport at approximately 12:30 p.m. aboard the Jet Star, a smaller plane than Air Force One, the plane the president usually travels on.

From the airport, the president will motor to the Wilson Library grounds. Prior to making a brief speech, the president and the public will be entertained by local bands, singers, and a combo.

Following the entertainment and the president's speech, the presidential party will join local Democrats for a private luncheon, then visit a local tobacco warehouse where a mock auction will be held.

At the conclusion of the auction, President Carter and his party will return to the airport for the return trip to Washington.

Those planning to make the trip are urged to arrive early in Wilson in order to get parking places within walking distance of the library.

New Manager At N.C. Port

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Robert F. Goins, director of engineering and development for the state Ports Authority, will replace Charles H. Sunder as manager of the Morehead City terminal on Aug. 15, according to an announcement made here today by Adm. William M.A. Greene, executive director of the Ports Authority.

Sunder's resignation was accepted Wednesday by Greene, who praised Sunder for his work since taking the position at Morehead City in September 1976.

Goins, a retired U.S. Marine Corps lieutenant colonel, has served as head of Ports Authority engineers since November 1977.

Greene also announced today a major reorganization of his staff involving two executives at the Ports Authority's Wilmington terminal.

Effective Sept. 1, E.E. "Jack" Lee, deputy executive director, will head all trade devlopment, marketing and traffic coordination for both ports.

Leo L. Lively, director of trade development, will be transferred to Raleigh, where he will coordinate Ports Authority trade efforts with the state Department of Commerce's international trade and industrial growth programs.

"These changes are part of a trade plan I have comtemplated for several months," Greene said. "They will align the trade development and economic growth goals of the Ports Authority with those of Gov. Hunt and the Department of Commerce.

"Such a move gives us greater access to businesss and industrial development leads, ensures continued port efficiency and increases the utilization of our staff to its fullest potential," Greene added.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market continued its powerful surge on the heaviest first hour volume ever before steadying later in the day.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange climbed to a torrid 34.06 million shares by noon, more than double its 15.58 million shares the previous day. In the first hour alone, 20.13 million shares changed hands, topping the previous record of 17.58 million set during the spring rally on April 25.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which leaped more than 22 points on Wednesday, climbed more than 12 points in early trading before easing off a bit.

The noon index was up 8.58 at 892.07 in what analysts said reflected the leveling effect of some investors selling to take profits on big price gains in stocks.

The NYSE composite index rose .55 to 58.37, while gainers outnumbered losers by a margin of more than 3-to-1.

Analysts said the euphoric mood which produced such dramatic gains was inspired by hopes of a downturn in interest rates and widely followed Wall Street doctrine known as the Dow theory.

That theory supposedly shows a "buy signal" when both the industrial and transportation averages establish new highs for a significant period of time. Still, some analysts said the sheer momentum which began late Wednesday carried over into early trading today.

"Its a combination of things and its partly psychological. But it isn't as if this rally came out of the blue, the market has been building up to it for a period of weeks," said Larry Wachtel, an analyst at Bache, Halsey, Stuart & Shields.

Blue chips, which are favored by institutional investors, posted strong gains.

American Telephone & Telegraph, rose 1⅛ to 61⅝; General Electric gained 1½ to 56; and International Telephone & Telegraph rose ⅝ to 32⅞, all in active trading. Citicorp, up 1 to 25⅞, topped the noon NYSE active list.

IBM, which Wednesday soared 13⅞ points, was up another ⅜ to 290⅛; and General Motors rose ⅝ to 64⅛.

On the American Stock Exchange, trading also was heavy. The market value index rose 1.10 to 157.68.

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — The trend on the North Carolina hog market was steady Thursday. Wilson, 48; Rocky Mount, 47; Kinston, 39.50-40.50; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Chadbourn, Ayden, Pine Level, Laurinburg and Benson, 48.50; Tarboro and Bethel, 34.50-37.50; Salisbury, unreported; Spivey's Corner 46-47.

Poultry

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — The trend on the North Carolina f.o.b. dock broiler market was firm today, with supplies moderate, demand good, weights desirable.

The dock weighted average price for next week is 43.38 cents per pound for small purchases of sized plant grade broilers picked up at processing plant. Estimated slaughter today 1,355,000.

Concerned Over 11th Grade Testing

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Results of the pilot reading Competency Test given to eleventh graders last spring in the Greenville City Schools have given rise to concerns expressed on the part of members of the Greenville City Board of Education.

In a report outlined to board members on Tuesday night by Superintendent Clenn Cox, figures reveal that scoring on the SHARP (Senior High Assessment Reading Proficiency) test indicate that a significant number of rising seniors may not pass the competency tests to be given early in November this year.

The report provides data on two assumed levels—a 65 per cent passing score, and a 70 per cent passing score. The dual figures are used as state officials have not yet made a firm determination on whether the 65 or 70 per cent criteria will apply.

Based on the 65 per cent figure, results of the pilot reading competency test shows that 14.04 per cent of rising seniors in Greenville would have failed. This compares with a 12.7 per cent projected failure statewide.

Using the higher 70 per cent figure, the failure rate of students in Greenville would have been 18.72 per cent—with an 18.0 failure rate statewide.

The figures causing the gravest concern on the part of school board members are those projecting failure rates for black and white students.

According to the report, if the pilot test had been for real, 29.81 per cent of black students in Greenville would have failed at the 65 per cent figure; and 40.37 per cent would have failed at the 70 per cent figure.

In contrast, only 2.94 per cent of white students would have failed at the 65 per cent grading figure; and 3.78 per cent at the 70 per cent figure.

However, Cox and Jean Haislip, a specialist of the Northeast Region Center in Williamston, both emphasized that these figures do not alone represent a true picture, and that the actual gap in failure rates between black and white students would be a much narrower one based on achievement figures below or above the 65-70 per cent span.

Director of Secondary Education Mrs. Kay Whitehurst noted that following the test and the initial report of results, a total of 60 students were provided remedial reading training, and that on a second testing, 30 of these students achieved passing scores.

Board and staff members have stressed that remedial programs will have priority in order to provide every opportunity to students who stand a chance of not passing the competency tests to be given in November.

Delegation Was Divided

WASHINGTON (AP) — North Carolina's House delegation voted 8 to 3 Wednesday for a move to lift sanctions against trade with Rhodesia after Dec. 31, 1978, unless the president determines a government chosen by free election has been installed.

The measure was approved by a vote of 229 to 180.

Voting for the bill were Democrats Ike Andrews, L.H. Fountain, Lamar Gudger, W.G. Hefner, Stephen Neal and Charles Whitley and Republicans James Broyhill and James Martin. Opposing it were Democrats Walter Jones, Charles Rose and Richardson Preyer.

The delegation also split over an amendment, defeated by a vote of 243 to 166, prohibiting the sale of arms to Chile until that government turns over to U.S. custody three Chileans indicted for murder in the slaying of a former Chilean diplomat and his secretary.

The amendment was supported by Hefner and Rose and opposed by the other nine North Carolina congressmen.

Firing Said 'Political'

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — William C. Brown, charging he was fired as head of the North Piedmont area of the state prison for political reasons, says he plans to fight the dismissal.

Authorities said the dismissal, effective Wednesday, resulted from the sexual assaults of two high school students by a prison inmate who was attending a prep track meet in Greensboro.

Brown said he plans to ask Gov. Jim Hunt to intervene on his behalf and that me may file a federal court suit claiming he did not have adequate opportunity to appeal the dismissal.

Two other corrections employees also were disciplined as a result of the May 16 assaults at Grimsley High School in Greensboro.

Brown maintained that state prisons director Ralph Edwards said he would not discipline anyone in connection with the incident that Edwards changed his mind because of public reaction. He said he was given the choice of early retirement, a demotion or a transfer.

"I told them I was not in line for either one," he said. "Taking a demotion or a transfer would be admitting that I had done somehting wrong."

The 49-year-old Brown, who had worked for the prison system for 30 years, was in charge of 12 prison units and 1,800 inmates in 11 counties.

Thirteen inmates from the McLeansville prison unit were taken to Grimsley High for a track meet as part of their high school diploma program. Michael Anthony Mayhand, 22, who had less than six weeks to serve before his release from a breaking-and-entering and larceny sentence, was charged with attacking the two girls.

WANTS INVESTIGATION

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — Dr. Carl Johnson, chief county health officer, is asking a federal investigation of what he says is evidence of higher leukemia and cancer rates for some employees of the Rocky Flats Nuclear Weapons Plant.

$121.37 At Farmville

FARMVILLE—Farmville had a full sale market yesterday, with top prices of $1.55 per pound, according to Louis N. Williams, sales supervisor, Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade.

Sales consisted mostly of primings and some cutters and leaf, according to Williams.

A total of 373,887 pounds were sold yesterday as compared with 352,560 pounds last year.. An average of $121.37 per 100 pounds was reached yesterday, as compared with the $82.77 figure of last year.

The two-day total poundage for the Farmville market was 1,062,897, with a two-day total of $1,278,922. The average was $120.32 per 100 pounds.

$150.43 Average On Ga.-Fla. Mart

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP) — The practical top price for the majority of flue-cured tobacco leaf and cutter on the Georgia-Florida markets was $160 per hundredweight today, remaining steady with Wednesday's prices.

During early sales today, better grades of lugs also were bringing the top prices, according to the federal-state market news service. Prices for lower grades changed little from Wednesday.

The volume of sales was mostly moderate and heavy, the service said. Some points experienced light sales, however.

Total sales on the belt Wednesday were 4,091,912 pounds at $150.43 per hundredweight.

Georgia farmers sold about 3,451,427 pounds at $150.65 per hundredweight Wednesday, bringing season totals for the state to 39,864,085 pounds at an average of $139.57 per hundred, the USDA said.

Totals for Florida Wednesday showed that 640,485 pounds was sold on Florida markets Wednesday at $149.22 per hundred, raising season totals to 6,955,212 pounds at $140 per hundredweight.

Total belt sales for the season through Wednesday were 46,819,297 at an average of $150.40 per hundred pounds, according to final U.S. Department of Agriculture figures.

Dedication

Red Sox Rally Might Start Turnaround

NEW YORK (AP) — It all depends on your point of view, so the Boston Red Sox acted like they won Wednesday night's game while the New York Yankees wore the mien of losers.

The scoreboard, however, read 5-5 when play was halted after 14 innings at 1:16 a.m. toay. The game will be completed before tonight's regularly scheduled contest.

The Red Sox, who have been slumping of late, felt like winners because they trailed 5-0 after three innings, caught up with two runs in the fourth, two in the sixth and one in the eighth and survived New York threats in the 12th and 14th.

And the Yankees felt like losers because they helped the Red Sox rally by contributing three wild pitches and a pair of bases-loaded walks and wasting a 12-7 hit advantage.

Don Zimmer, whose Red Sox have dropped 11 of their last 14 games and have seen their American League East lead shrink from 10 games on July 8 to 4½ over the Milwaukee Brewers — the Yankees trail by 6½ and the Baltimore Orioles are 7½ out — isn't about to throw back anything these days.

In other AL action, the Orioles edged Milwaukee 6-5 in the completion of Monday night's suspended game, but the Brewers took the regularly scheduled contest 5-3; the Cleveland Indians downed the Kansas City Royals 5-2; the California Angels trounced the Oakland A's 8-2 and the Seattle Mariners defeated the Minnesota Twins 3-1.

Orioles 6-3, Brewers 5-5

Larry Hisle and Sal Bando blasted home runs and Mike Caldwell notched his seventh straight victory as Milwaukee defeated Baltimore, beating Jim Palmer for the first time in 11 outings.

Prior to the regularly scheduled game, a two-out, 10th-inning single by Mike Anderson gave the Orioles a 6-5 victory in the completion of a contest suspended after nine innings by a local curfew Monday night.

Caldwell, 14-5, allowed solo homars to Ken Singleton and Doug DeCinces before needing relief help in the ninth from Lary Sorensen, who gained his first save.

Mariners 3, Twins 1

Jim Colborn fired a six-hitter and designated hitter Bob Robertson blasted a two-run homer in the sixth inning as Seattle defeated Minnesota.

Juan Bernhardt had an RBI single as Colborn chalked up his third victory in 12 decisions. Minnesota's only run scored in the fourth on Butch Wynegar's sacrifice fly.

Angels 8, A's 2

Lyman Bostock backed Don Aase's four-hit pitching with a solo home run, two sacrifice flies and an RBI single as California defeated Oakland and moved within three games of first-place Kansas City in the AL West.

Bostock hit his third home run of the season in the sixth inning, had sacrifice flies in the third and seventh and a runscoring single in a three-run eighth.

Indians 5, Royals 2

John Grubb smashed a home run and Tom Veryzer added a run-scoring double to highlight a four-run sixth inning as Cleveland swept a three-game series from Kansas City.

The Royals picked up runs on Clint Hurdle's bases-loaded walk pn the first and Al Cowens' run-scoring grounder.

Garber: No Comment On Rose's Remarks

ATLANTA (AP) — A telegram was waiting for Atlanta Braves pitcher Gene Garber when he arrived at Atlanta Stadium on Wednesday.

It was from Cincinnati, and the bearded relief ace was ready for a verbal attack after striking out Pete Rose in the ninth inning Tuesday night to end a hitting streak that had stretched to 44 games.

"It said, 'Thank you for getting him out. He deserved it,'" Garber said.

Rose had repeated Wednesday some of his criticism of Garber for throwing him changeups rather than challenging him, but Garber declined to comment on Rose's remarks.

"I could understand him saying those things after the game because that was in the heat of the battle," said the Braves' right-hander, who retired Rose twice in the final three innings to earn his 13th save since coming to Atlanta in a trade with Philadelphia.

"I wish he had got a hit but not at my expense," Garber said. "I've got a family to feed and that's my job, to get people out. I threw him changeups because that was what I was getting over the plate and I certainly didn't want to walk him in that situation.

"I'd be happy to say he continued his hitting streak off me if I gave 100 percent and he hit it," he added. "What really is a shame is it had gotten down to one at bat, when he had five. I still can't believe 44. That's phenomenal. I don't think I have 44 hits in my life."

McWilliams said no one had sent him messages of any kind.

"There was no hate mail," he said. "There hasn't been time for it to get here from Cincinnati.

"I didn't know how to react to helping spoil the guy's record," he said. "I really did kind of want to see him break the record, but not against us."

Rose, the scrappy Cincinnati Reds' third baseman, said Wednesday he believed he could have gotten a hit off McWilliams had the youngster stayed in the game.

Rose In New Streak

ATLANTA (AP) — Pete Rose says he's setting his sights on the National League batting crown and hints that there are just enough games left in the season to give him another shot at tying the major league consecutive hitting record.

"I'm 45 out of 46 now and one for one with 55 games to go," the Cincinnati third baseman said following the Reds' 6-2 victory over the Atlanta Braves Wednesday.

It took a miraculous catch by Atlanta pitcher Larry McWilliams, but Rose's 44game hitting streak ended Tuesday night, tying him with baseball legend "Wee" Willie Keeler for the all-time NL record.

Maybe Rose doesn't really believe it, but the the way he came out hitting Wednesday night makes it seem possible that the 37-year-old scrapper could hit safely in every game for the rest of the season to tie the all-time mark of 56 games set by Joe DiMaggio of the New York Yankees in 1941.

Rose drubbed Atlanta pitching for four hits, including a double and a home run, in his first four at bats Wednesday night.

"I guess I proved I can hit when the pressure's off," Rose said, "but I didn't have anything to prove.

"I think I have a chance at the batting title and you've got to accumulate the hits and add them up."

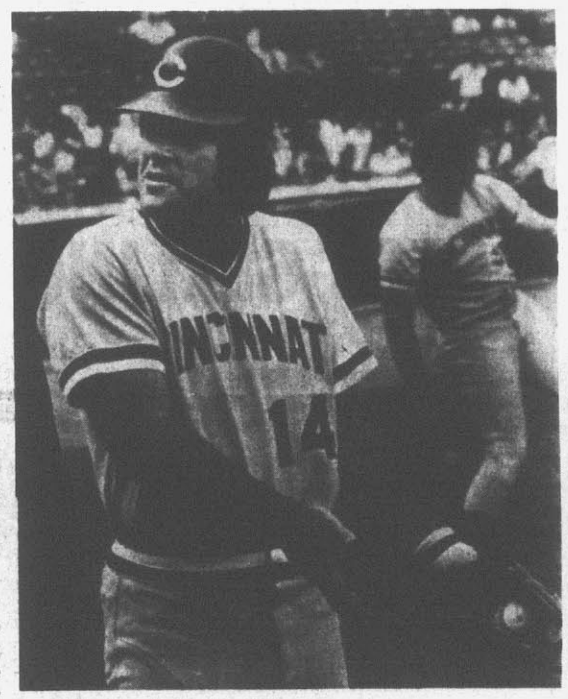

Rose is hitting .318, second only to Atlanta's Jeff Burroughs at .321.

"I hit the ball hard," Rose said of his 4-for-5 outing, "just like I did last night.

"I wish I had got a hit last night," he said. "If I said I didn't I'd be lying."

But Rose added that he's not going to dwell on the end of the streak.

"I forgot about last night," he said. "I didn't try any harder than I did last night. I didn't feel any looser tonight."

Williamston Postponed

HAMLET — The fifth game in the best-of-seven series for the Eastern American Legion playoffs between Hamlet and Williamston was rained out last night.

Hamlet, which holds a 3-1 lead in the series, was to again play host to Williamston tonight, seeking to win up the series and move into the state finals. Williamston, with its back to the wall, must win to force Hamlet to travel back to Williamston for the conclusion of the series.

TAYLORSVILLE—Union County defeated Greenville 14-4 in six innings yesterday to win the state 13-year-old Babe Ruth baseball tournament.

Union County scored four runs in the first inning and three in the second for a 7-0 lead. Greenville got on the scoreboard with a pair in the third, but UC added four more in the fourth. Greenville got two more in the fifth, but Union County scored one in the bottom of the inning and then two in the sixth. The game was called when UC got ahead by 10.

Robbie Bell was the winning pitcher and Fred Hailey the leading hitter for Union County. Hailey had three hits, including a home run. Brent Curton and Kenny Sossman each had two hits for Union County. Marshall Rand was the losing pitcher. No Greenville batter had more than one hit.

Donnie Miller got things rolling for Union County in the first with a walk. He went to second on an error and stole third. Hailey singled him in and then stole stole second and went to third on an error. Robbie Bell singled him in and stole second. Blan Rushing also got a base hit and a steal. Sossman knocked in both runners with a double.

Randy Thomas singled and stole in the second, but was thrown out on a fielder's choice by Miller. Miller stole second and reached third on an error. Rick Curton singled him in and Adam Laney also got a base hit. Hailey doubled to score Curton and Laney followed on a passed ball.

Greenville's first runs came in the third inning. Louis Fletcher walked and Kenny Kirkland reached on an error. Jeff Wilson got on by an error to score Fletcher and Kirkland followed on another UC misplay.

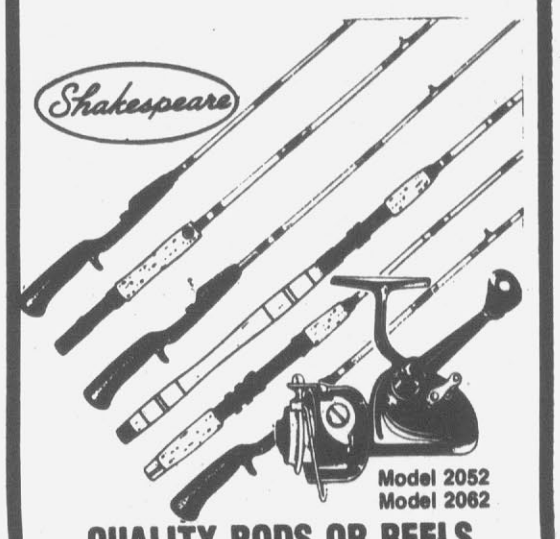

In the fifth, Chip Cayton walked and Horace Barrett got on by an error. Cayton stole third and scored on a throwing error, while Tony Burroughs hit a fielder's choice to score Barrett.

Padres No Longer Are Dodger Patsies

By The Associated Press

For years they've been waiting for the Los Angeles Dodgers and San Diego Padres to develop a real rivalry in Southern California.

Well, they've finally got one.

The Padres, longtime patsies to their powerful neighbors to the north, are no longer playing that role these days.

They've won a club-record nine straight games, including a four-game sweep of the Dodgers that culminated with Wednesday night's 2-1 victory.

Elsewhere in the National League, Cincinnati whipped the Atlanta Braves 6-2; San Francisco stopped the Houston Astros 4-2; the Philadelphia Phillies beat the New York Mets 8-6; the Pittsburgh Pirates blanked the Montreal Expos 3-0 and the Chicago Cubs edged the St. Louis Cardinals 3-2.

Reds 6, Braves 2

Pete Rose doubled, singled twice and hit a home run in his first four times at-bat and Tom Seaver hurled a three-hitter to lead Cincinnati over Atlanta. Rose, whose National League record-tying hitting streak ended at 44 games against the Braves Tuesday night, led off the game with a double. He then singled home a run in the second and led off the fourth with a single before sending a drive over the right field fence in the sixth for his fifth homer of the season.

"I guess," said Rose with a grin, "I proved I can hit with the pressure off."

Giants 4, Astros 2

Terry Whitfield swatted a three-run homer as San Francisco snapped Houston's eightgame winning streak.

Whitfield's fourth-inning blast, his eighth homer of the season, followed a walk to Darrell Evans and a single by Willie McCovey off loser Tom Dixon, 5-8.

John Montefusco, 8-4, gained his first victory since June 25.

Phillies 8, Mets 6

Garry Maddox drove in four runs, three with his ninth home run that capped a five-run second inning, and Philadelphia hung on to beat New York.

The Phillies gained an 8-0 lead in the first five innings and escaped with the victory despite a five-run rally by the Mets in the eighth featuring Lee Mazzilli's two-run homer.

Pirates 3, Expos 0

Bruce Kison and Kent Tekulve combined on a three-hitter and Phil Garner hit a solo home run as Pittsburgh beat Montreal.

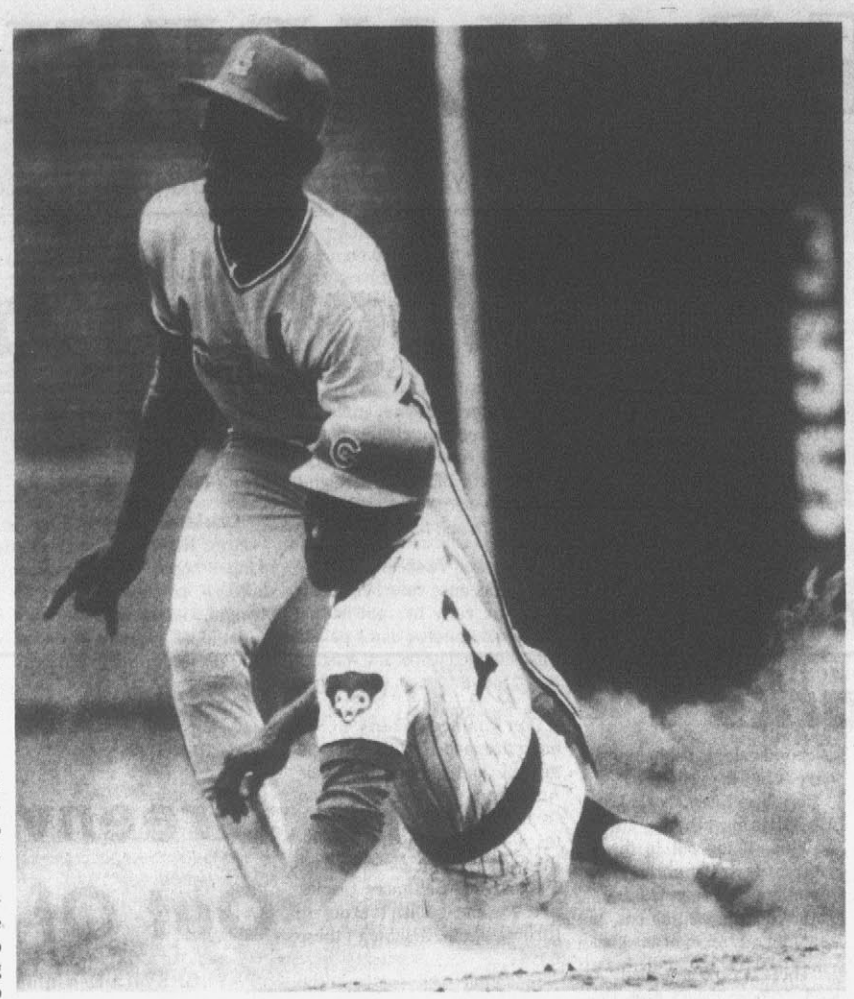

Kison struck out seven batters, including the side in the sixth, and walked only two before needing ninth-inning relief help from Tekulve, who notched his 18th save. Kison reportedly was developing a blister on his pitching hand.

Loser Dan Schatzeder, 4-3, gave up six hits, including Garner's homer, and walked two batters in 72-3 innings.

Cubs 3, Cardinals 2

Mike Vail's two-run triple in the first inning backed the seven-hit pitching of Mike Krukow and Bruce Sutter, leading Chicago over St. Louis.

It marked the Cubs' 11th triumph in as many meetings with the Cardinals this season.

Sudden Stop

Women Turn In More Records

THE WOODLANDS, Texas (AP) — Teenage women swimmers Tracy Caulkins, Kim Linehan and Cynthia Woodhead are taking up the same recordbreaking chorus at the Amateur Athletic Union Long Course Championships that they played in April at the AAU Short Course meet.

And the East German women likely are listening.

Caulkins and Linehan set world records previously held by East Germans Wednesday night and Woodhead issued a warning that the U.S. women are serious about international swimming competition.

"We don't care if the East Germans are taking steroids or lifting weights or what, we're not afraid of them," Woodhead said after setting a meet record in the preliminaries of the women's 400-meter freestyle.

Linehan, 14, reeled off a world record 4:07.66 in the finals of the same event and Woodhead, who was on a world record pace early in the race, finished second.

Caulkins, a 15-year-old Nashville, Tenn., schoolgirl, followed with a world record of 2:15.09 in the 200 individual medley.

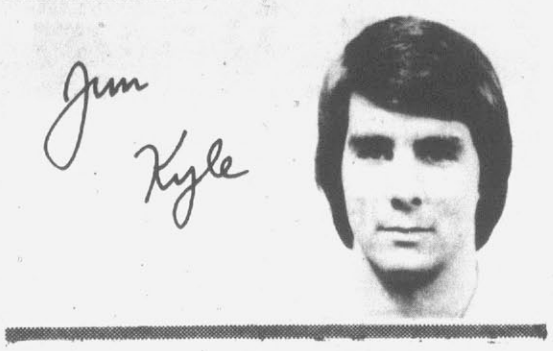

Caulkins set five individual American records at the AAU Short Course Championships in April and Woodhead broke two others.

Steve Lindquist of Jonesboro, Ga., set a world record in the men's 200-meter individual medley prelims with a 2:04.39 clocking, but he couldn't keep pace with Jesse Vassallo in Wednesday night's finals.

Vassallo won the event in 2:05.90 and Lindquist, the 1976 Junior Olympic champ, finished second in 2:05.97.

Jeff Float of Sacramento, Calif., upset world record holder Brian Goodell in the finals of the men's 400-meter freestyle with a 3:54.32. Bill Forrester of Auburn, Ala., the fastest qualifier into the finals, was second and Goodell finished fifth.

FORMER EAST CAROLINA linebacker Harold Randolph's chances of making the team with the Dallas Cowboys are about even at this point, according to George Heddleston of the Cowboys' public relations office.

Heddleston said Randolph is making progress as a rookie in the team's training camp and is expected to see action in this week's pre-season opener with the San Francisco 49ers.

The high point of camp for Randolph came in a rookie scrimmage on July 20 when he intercepted a pass against the San Diego Chargers and returned it 40 yards for a touchdown, Heddleston said.

The Cowboys will have three more cut dates before the season begins. The team will be cut to 60 by August 16, to 50 by August 22 and to 43 by August 28. "I'd say his chances are about even," Heddleston said of Randolph getting past the final cut.

Right now, there are six or seven veterans ahead of Randolph at linebacker, Heddleston said. "He figures prominently if someone gets hurt or if Tom (Landry, the Cowboys' head coach) decides to keep another linebacker."

The Cowboy spokesman added, "I think he can play somewhere in the league. Of course, it's tougher to make this club because we have so many veterans."

Randolph, who was 6-2, 195 during his senior year at East Carolina, has put on weight and is now over 200 pounds, Heddleston said. A native of Greenville, Randolph anchored the Pirate defense for two years, piling up an amazing number of tackles. He was the Cowboys' 14th-round draft pick.

Great Catch Ends Streak

Atlanta Braves rookie pitcher Larry McWilliams may spend many years in the majors, but he will probably never make a more memorable defensive play than his stab of Pete Rose's line drive Tuesday night.

McWilliams' second-inning effort was most responsible for ending Rose's consecutive game hitting streak at 44. Rose was 0-4 with a walk in Cincinnati's 16-4 loss to the Braves in Atlanta.

Rose had never faced McWilliams before Tuesday night. The left-hander walked the Reds third baseman in the first after building up a full count. In the second, Rose slapped the first pitch back to the mound and McWilliams stretched to his right to make the catch. If McWilliams hadn't reached the ball, it was a sure base hit.

Rose came up three more times, grouding to short in the fifth, lining to third in the seventh, and finally striking out for the last out in the ninth.

"Charlie Hustle" will now enter the record books tied with "Wee" Willie Keeler, who said he "hit 'em where they ain't." Rose, who was able to do that at least once per game from June 14 to July 31, hit 'em where they were Tuesday night.

Qualifying Set Here

Brook Valley will serve as one of five qualifying sites for the Michelob Classic, formerly the Carolinas PGA Open, on Tuesday.

The tournament, to be held September 12-14 at Hilton Head, S.C., will attract a field of 156 golfers, to be cut to the low 70 for the final round of the 54-hole event.

About 60 golfers will be vieing for 25 spots in play at Brook Valley on Tuesday. In addition to qualifying for spots in the tournament, local prizes will be awarded to low scorers.

In addition to Brook Valley, qualifying rounds will also be played Tuesday at Tanglewood of Clemons, Alamance Country Club of Burlington, Columbia (S.C.) Country Club, and Bay Tree of Myrtle Beach.

Baker Whizzes Around Talladega In Trials

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Buddy Baker clocked 192.719 miles per hour Wednesday in practice runs for Sunday's $217,000 Talladega 500 stock car race.

Baker, two-time Winston 500 winner from Charlotte, N.C., drove an Oldsmobile.

"It's been a long time since I felt like I was equal to everyone else. Now I think we can show them something," Baker said.

Cale Yarbrough came in at 191.103 mph, also in an Olds.

Four other drivers reached speeds of better than 189 mph. They were Lenny Pond, Dave Marcis, Darrell Waltrip and Bennie Parsons.

Richard Petty, preparing to enter his last race in a Dodge, had a speed of 187.394.

Petty said his problems this season have not all been the problem of the Dodge. "Our racing luck ain't been all that good either," he remarked.

On Sunday, Petty will enter the track in a Chevrolet.

Qualifying for Sunday's race continues Friday.

Herrera Wants Cowboys To Trade Him; Salary Not Enough

By The Associated Press

Tom Landry doesn't expect the Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys to make many changes this season. But kicker Efren Herrera is making that a hard promise to keep.

"I can't think of anything radical we might do," Landry said Wednesday during a break in training at Cowboys' National Football League camp at California Lutheran College. "Certainly we're not going to stand still but the changes we do make will be subtle."

Herrera is not being subtle. The Mexican place-kicker asked the Cowboys to trade him, saying the team hasn't offered a salary commensurate with his standing as the top kicker in the NFL.

"I'd like to be traded," Herrera said. "If they don't think as highly of me as I think of myself, it's time to move on."

Herrera, who is being fined $500 per day for each day he misses camp and currently owes $6,500, said: "It's gone too far. I don't think they have any plans for me. Maybe it's time to move to another team which appreciates me more than the Cowboys."

Herrera was believed asking a salary of about $80,000. The Cowboys have offered an estimated $45,000.

The Cowboys and the rest of NFL open their preseason this weekend. San Diego faces Seattle on Friday. On Saturday, it's San Francisco at Dallas; Cincinnati at Tampa Bay; Oakland at Chicago; Kansas City at Green Bay; Washington at Minnesota; Philadelphia vs New Orleans in Mexico City, Mexico; New England at Los Angeles; St. Louis at Miami; Pittsburgh at Baltimore; Denver at Houston and Buffalo at Detroit.

In an off-the-field settlement, Los Angeles County's Chief Attorney John Larson said he has concluded that neither the county nor the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission could prohibit the Rams from keeping the Los Angeles designation after their move to Anaheim in 1980.

Meanwhile, the Colts and Lydell Mitchell have still failed to come to contract terms and the running back missed his 12th day of camp. He is being fined $500 for each day he misses the training sessions.

In other training camp activity, a bolt of lightning struck the north goal posts as the New Orleans Saints ran through a passing drill. Coach Dick Nolen halted the practice 15 minutes ahead of time.

In the Falcons' camp at Greenville, S.C., wide receiver Alfred Jenkins fractured a small bone in his right hand and is listed as questionable for the Atlanta's opener Monday with the New York Jets.

Chicago signed free agent center Jon Morris. The Bears did not disclose the terms or length of the 15-year veteran's contract.

The Detroi Lions acquired defensive lineman Dave Gallagher and running back Marsh White from the New York Giants for future draft considera

Eyes And Cameras On Jack

Fans' eyes and cameras are directed to Jack Nicklaus as he finishes putting on the sixth green at Oakmont, Pa., Country Club, the site of this year's PGA tournament. Golfers spent a little time practicing and more time relaxing Wednesday as they prepared for today's tournament start. (AP Laserphoto)

Sixteen Years Ago, New Golf Era Began

An AP Sports Analysis
By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

OAKMONT, Pa. (AP) — Like two ships in the night, the paths of Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer crossed just outside the PGA press tent, and an enterprising photographer leaped to the occasion.

"Mind if I get a shot of you two guys?" the cameraman asked. "Our office pulled an old picture when you were in the Open playoff here in 1962. Arnie, how about patting Jack's stomach — he was a little bigger then."

"Yeah, about 30 pounds," Nicklaus said good naturedly. "Hey, Arnie, you haven't changed much."

"Ten pounds maybe," acknowledged Palmer, now a jolly but trim-looking 190 pounds.

Harking back to that historic playoff 16 years ago which abruptly altered the course of golfing history, Palmer remembers mainly his harrowing experience on Oakmont's marblefast greens — 11 three-putters in total — and Nicklaus recalls almost nothing at all.

"I was just a kid wanting to win my first golf tournament," Nicklaus, a 22-year-old pro rookie at the time, said. "It wasn't until years afterward, looking back, that I realized the significance of it. I said, 'Good grief, I beat Arnold Palmer, the legend, and in his his own backyard.' It was a sobering thought."

It was not for a decade or more that the full impact hit home to golf observers. It was that humid weekend in June, 1962, that the curtain started falling on the fabulous Palmer era and the blond, fat kid from Columbus, Ohio, began his ascension to a peak that may never be scaled again.

Nicklaus, now 38, lean, poised and handsome as a matinee idol, goes after a record-tying fifth PGA championship today and his 16th major title covering also the Masters, British and U.S. Open classics. Palmer, never regaining his old lastgasp magic, has drifted gracefully into the background.

"That big strong dude," Palmer said of his arch rival. "I knew he was pretty good. He had come close when I won the Open at Denver in 1960. But I never seriously considered him as the man who was going to take over golf.

"Beating me as he did here in the Open certainly had to have a great deal of influence on the game — more from his standpoint than from mine. It gave him a tremendous confidence. If I had won, I might have been able to hold him off a few more years."

He didn't, and he couldn't.

Tying Palmer in the 1962 Open and forcing a playoff, Nicklaus threatened golf's reigning hero. Fans, most of them Arnies's neighbors from the Allegheny foothills, openly resented the upstart from Ohio.

Nicklaus Likes Speedy Greens; Wadkins Isn't Toasting Them

OAKMONT, Pa. (AP) — The greens are groomed for speed in golf's 60th PGA Championship. Jack Nicklaus will drink to that. Lanny Wadkins won't.

"The faster the better. Anytime you have fast slick greens you eliminate an awful lot of fellows," said Nicklaus, who sipped cold orange juice after Wednesday's final practice round.

But Wadkins wasn't toasting the putting surfaces at Oakmont Country Club, where championship play begins today.

"I got here, saw the greens, and decided I wasn't going to have any drinks or coffee all week," said Wadkins, the defending PGA champ who's failed to make the cut in eight of 20 tournaments this year.

"It's just going to be a case of how good your nerves are, and I figure I'll need all the help I can get," added Wadkins, who was to play in a threesome with Nicklaus and U.S. Open titlist Andy North.

Nicklaus, coming off consecutive victories at the British Open and the Philadelphia Classic, is bidding for his fifth PGA title. That would tie him with Walter Hagen for the alltime lead.

After playing here two days last week, Nicklaus skipped all but the final practice round this week.

"I like fast greens, but I was hoping they weren't overreacting to a 63 shot here in 1973 and trying to make the golf course so nobody could play it."

Nicklaus referred to the finalround 63 that Johnny Miller shot here to win the 1973 U.S. Open. The score, still a record for Oakmont and the Open, came on a day when the greens were slow and mushy due to heavy rainfall.

"I like the fast greens because the better players win on fast greens. I've had lots of times when I've had trouble with fast greens. But when I'm playing well, when I'm right, then I feel I'm usually right up there with this kind of course," Nicklaus said.

Arnold Palmer would agree with that. He remembers when he lost to Nicklaus here in the 1962 U.S. Open.

"Jack has a knack for putting these greens which is not common among most of the players," said Palmer.

"I recall in 1962 he 3-putted only once in 90 holes, and that in itself is a major accomplishment."

That's why Palmer regards Nicklaus as the obvious favorite here.

"I don't know that there is anybody who merits the favored position Nicklaus does," said Palmer, who has never won the PGA.

"You can talk about the other guys, Tom Watson and the guys that have played good recently, and you still have to come back to Jack."

Beyond fast greens, the PGA has a $50,000 top prize that will go to the winner. There's $30,000 for second place and $20,000 for third.

The leading PGA money winner so far this year is 6-foot-4, 210-pound Andy Bean, whose checks so far total $245,588.

Second on the money list is Nicklaus with $243,622, followed by Watson at $222,729 and Lee Trevino at $203,920.

Marr Hasn't Found Time To Play Golf

Dave Marr, semi-retired pro golfer, will be at Oakmont this weekend for the 60th PGA championship, but he won't need his clubs. Marr, who rarely plays in tournaments these days, will stick to the broadcast booth where he will handle color commentary for ABC.

"I've only played in two tournaments this year," says Marr, who won the PGA in 1965, "and I won't play in any more. I just haven't had the time. You have to really work at golf to be any good. You have to practice constantly.

"It's just not something you can turn on or off like a faucet."

Strange Wildlife Is Found On Galapagos Islands

QUITO, Ecuador (UPI) — Some 10,000 tourists, mostly Europeans and Americans, visit the Galapagos Islands each year to see the giant turtles for which the islands were named and to marvel at exotic flora and fauna.

The Galapagos lie 580 miles west of Ecuador in the Pacific. The equator cuts right through the archipelago, which consists of 19 islands, 42 islets and 26 rocks.

It is a bird watcher's paradise because one-half of the many bird species on the islands are not found anywhere else.

Naturalists say that the Galapagos are one of the few places on the planet earth where an entire ecological system may be observed in a nearly primitive state.

The islands are of volcanic origin and scientists conjecture that those species which cannot swim or fly reached the islands floating on sizable masses of vegetation.

UNESCO scientists say the following are unique to the Galapagos Islands: 50 percent of the fowls; 32 percent of the plants; 86 percent of the reptiles; 72 percent of the ants; 57 percent of the spiders; and 23 percent of the coastal fish.

Espanola Island in the Galapagos is the only spot on earth where the albatross is known to nest. From April to December, literally thousands of them can be seen among the coastal rocks, mating, nesting and hatching their eggs.

The giant turtles are literally five-by-five (feet), weigh up to 500 pounds, and can easily carry a man on their shells. Their ancestry can be traced 250 million years back through the process of evolution.

The only marine iguana in the world is found in the Galapagos. It is a fierce-looking, green lizard related to the ancient saurs. It eats algae in shallow coastal waters and snorts salt from its nostrils.

One of the most interesting, unique birds is the carpenter finch, which wields a cactus thorn in its short beak to extend reach for spearing insects in the plants.

There are only four land mammals on the islands, two species of bats, and two species of seed-eating rats.

Despite the equatorial location, the islands are washed by the frigid Humboldt current, and there are penguins, double-fur seals, and sea lions, which originated in Antarctica, Southern California and the Sea of Japan, respectively.

The Incas are credited with discovering the islands. Charles Darwin did important research there for a month in 1835 in relation with his "The Origin of Species." Ecuador took possession of them in 1831.

In 1957, UNESCO created the Charles Darwin Biological Station in the islands, and the Ecuadorean government declared most of the aggregate 7,800 square kilometers of land mass a national park.

There are about 3,000 residents in the islands, mainly on Baltra, including scientists, government personnel at the capital of Puerto Baquerizo, hardy remnants of a colonizing effort, and commercial fishermen.

Ecuador attempted to colonize the islands during the 19th century. The effort failed, mainly due to a lack of water. Only a handful of the islands have springs. There are no rivers.

The colonizing effort did irremedial ecological damage to some islands, however. Rats followed man to the islands. The colonizers introduced chickens, domestic dogs and cats, goats, pigs, cattle and burros, all of which turned wild when man pulled out. The government organizes periodic hunting parties to reduce their numbers.

Baltra island is served by an airfield built by the United States for anti-submarine patrolling during World War II. Most tourists fly one-way to or from the islands and sightsee from a hotel-ship. Articulate, ecology-conscious guides trained at the Darwin station, accompany tourists to shore in launches. The sights are seen along established tourism paths.

Tours operate from Quito and Guayaquil, Ecuador, year round except for September which is considered too cold. January through March is the rainy season, but nonetheless the most popular tourist season because it falls during the U.S. and European winter. A majority of tourists are nature buffs. Tour organizers recommend tennis or crepe-soled shoes for walking on the lava-strewn islands.

Metropolitan Tourism of Quito offers the following plans:

—Plan Iguana, aboard the 68-passenger hotel-ship Iguana, a two and one-half day voyage from Guayaquil to the islands, four and one-half days visiting the islands, return by airplane, $590 first class and $85 for airfare. Economy class $380.00 and $85.00 for airfare.

—Roundtrip by air, Thursday through Monday aboard the Iguana, first class $395 and $370 for airfare; Economy $265 and $170 airfare.

—Plan Delfin, combines a stay in the Delfin Hotel at Puerto Ayora, Indefatigable Island, and four days of island-hopping on the yacht Delfin, $260 plus $170 airfare.

—Plan Isabela, a private yacht for 16 persons with double or four-place cabins, four days, $580 plus $170 airfare.

Other companies have other plans, including a family plan combining a visit to the Galapagos with the Amazon jungle, from $240 to $305 for four days; and plans on the hotel-ships Neptuno and Bucanero similar to the Plan Iguana. The Neptuno offers a single stateroom for $1,127 for one week; a double $552 each; and a triple $452.00 each.

Arrangements may be made in advance or through hotel travel agents in Quito and Guayaquil.

Savings For Shoppers In No-Frill Products

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

The tissues are unscented, the peas are uneven and the packages are unmarked.

But the prices are lower. And consumers apparently are willing to skip the trimmings on "no-frills" groceries and take the savings.

Retailers report that the unbranded products introduced in supermarkets from coast to coast in recent months are selling well, despite generally lowkey advertising. They say they don't have — or won't release — specific sales figures, but spokesmen for some of the first stores to stock the products are unanimous in their enthusiasm for the concept.

The idea started in France in 1976 when a chain named Carrefour introduced a group of low-cost products packed in plain cans or boxes, without any brand name. Jewel Cos. started testing the plan in February 1977 and formally introduced it in Midwest stores eight months later. Star Markets of Cambridge, Mass., a part of the Jewel operation, followed suit and so did retailers across the country. A&P, the nation's second-largest chain, recently started a line of generic products in its stores in the Washington, D.C., area.

How much can you save by skipping the frills? Prices vary, but the products in the plain wrappers generally sell for 25 to 35 percent less than national brands. At one A&P store, for example, a 15½-ounce can of cut green beans was selling for 31 cents, about 33 percent less per ounce than the national brand.

In some cases, the no-frills products are virtually identical to national or house brands except for packaging. (Packaging costs vary widely, but the Department of Agriculture says that in 1976, the latest year for which figures are available, 8.7 cents of every dollar consumers spent for farm-produced foods went for packaging.)

In other cases, there IS a difference. Paper products are often available in white only and lack perfume. Detergents may not be as strong as the brandname cleansers. Canned fruits and vegetables are standard quality rather than fancy. Peas may not be uniform in size, for example, and fruit may be bruised, but the stores say the difference is a matter of eye appeal, rather than nutritional value.

Jewel says its 108 no-frills products sell for 10 to 35 percent less than national brands. "It is still in the expansion stage," said spokesman Michael Hatt. "Oh, yes," he added, when asked if the products were doing well. Hatt said people generally try non-food products first. "I suspect there's less brand loyalty in the non-food area," he added.

John Vecchione of Star agreed. "I think the consumer is more willing to gamble with something she doesn't have to put on her plate," said Vecchione.

Robert Wunderle, a spokesman for Supermarket General Corp., which introduced no-frill items to its 106 Pathmark stores on the East Coast earlier this year, noted that most of the products are staples for which there is an established customer demand. "We're just giving the consumer a third alternative (to national and house brands)," he said.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — HARSH CACOPHONY MARRED MODERN SYMPHONY.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: T equals S

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Implant Unneeded Pacemakers

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Doctors are stitching electronic heart pacemakers into the chests of people who don't need them, says a new study.

The report, prepared at the University of Oregon, recommends the sometimes risky operations be limited to patients with serious heart illness.

About 200,000 Americans now carry the battery-powered heart regulators. While the researchers declined to speculate on how many received them needlessly, they said many doctors install them in people who are relatively healthy but show presumed signs of later heart trouble.

The report, published in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine, says that doctors have misread these signs and put pacemakers in people who stand little risk of serious illness.

"There are an excessive number of people receiving pacemakers," Dr. John McAnulty, who directed the study, said in an interview. "Our study indicates that they would be protective in only a very few."

Installing a pacemaker costs about $6,000, and recipients require life-long care that costs about $20 a month. They are also exposed to a variety of dangers.

"The risks are that you can have trouble with the surgery that is needed to install it, including death in some cases, infections related to the surgery, perforation of the heart by the pacemaker wire or a problem with the pacemaker that means the patient must come back for repeated surgery," McAnulty said.

The National Heart and Lung Institute says about one-third of all pacemakers malfunction, requiring additional surgery.

McAnulty said some doctors routinely install pacemakers in patients whose natural heart rhythm systems have malfunctioned. This disorder, called bundle-branch block, occurs when one of the muscles that carries electrical impulses to the heart's pumping chambers becomes damaged. Ordinarily, the victim suffers no pain and lives normally.

However, some doctors believe this disorder can lead to complete heart block. When this happens, all messages from the body's natural pacemaker fail to get through. The heart beat slows, resulting in dizziness, fainting or sudden death.

The Oregon doctors studied 257 people with bundle-branch block. After 25 months, 15 people — or 6 percent of the total — had died from complete heart block.

"If we followed the criteria used by a lot of other places, at least 30 percent of the people who we followed would have received a pacemaker," McAnulty said.

"You can't just take any persons with bundle-branch block and put a pacemaker in them," he said, adding that there was no way to identify in advance the 15 people who died of complete heart block.

"If we could predict who those 6 percent are and put pacemakers in them, it would be terrific," he said. "But it's not worth the risk and expense to put them in all patients just to protect the very few."

Women's Farm Group Is Seeking A Better Deal

By MARCELLA S. KREITER

KEELER, Mich. (UPI) — Connee Canfield took her dissatisfaction with the farmers' lot out of her pickle patch and spread it across the country.

Mrs. Canfield, 34, the mother of two, is head of a group of women farmers fighting what they consider unfair farm prices and government over-regulation. The group, Women for the Survival of Agriculture in Michigan, inspired similar movements from California to Maine to Texas and has taken its gripes to Washington.

"It all started in August, 1971, because of depressed prices," said Mrs. Canfield, sitting at her dining room table in jeans and a gray sweatshirt bearing the slogan, "American Agriculture 1978 Movement."

"At the time in the fruit and vegetable industry, a lot of things happened that hadn't happened before. We were swamped with regulatory agencies. It was horrendous."

Mrs. Canfield said farmers were upset. The men would go to meetings and scream about what should be done.

"But the men couldn't do anything about it," she said. "They got wrapped up in the bureaucratic structure. We just didn't worry about that.

"We formed a women's group. We did things we had heard our husbands talk about but we didn't have to go to a board of directors for approval."

One of the things was picket processing firms in an effort to boost prices. It worked.

"We picketed. We closed them down. What most people don't realize is that a farmer can deliver a crop without knowing how much he's going to get paid for it, and then it can be six months before he's paid at all," she said.

After the picketing, the women's farm group fought a successful battle for state legislation to give farmers a fair price for their crops.

Mrs. Canfield said that, under the marketing and bargaining measure, farmers take a look at the whole crop situation and submit a price to a bargaining commission. The commission then gets estimates from processors who have decided what they want to pay for a crop.

"Then the fairer price is picked. It's all very business-slike," she said. "The bill is supposed to take care of our problems. Sometimes it works; sometimes it doesn't. But if we set up picket lines we'd be in contempt."

Mrs. Canfield doesn't think of herself as a militant. With her curly brown hair, easygoing manner and 8-and 3-year-old daughters running around the house, she doesn't look the part either.

In fact, the militant label was pinned on by former Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz.

"Right after he was appointed, we (the women's farm group) went to Washington to tell him about conditions," she said. "He didn't even know there was agriculture in Michigan. He was the one who termed us militant."

She said the characterization stuck after the group talked about parity.

"He said it was a free market system and that unit pricing just wouldn't work. They say it's a free economy — supply and demand. But that's not how it works at all.

"The government told cattle ranchers a few years ago they were getting low prices for their cattle because of oversupply. So the minute the price starts moving up so they're breaking even, the government steps in and raises import quotas. That's fair?"

The group is now setting its sights on reforming workmen's compensation laws.

"The rates are so prohibitively high you're almost afraid to hire," Mrs. Canfield said.

As a child, Mrs. Canfield lived in the nearby resort town of Sister Lakes. She did not move to the farm until 12 years ago when she married.

Astrologer Sees Zodiac Treatment In Psychology

By LLOYD G. CARTER

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI) — Astrologer Mary Orser foresees the day when psychologists will routinely consult the zodiac in treating patients.

Holder of a master's degree in psychology and author of three books on astrology, Ms. Orser was in the San Francisco Bay area lecturing and casting charts and visiting relatives in San Jose.

She is well aware that astrology is generally discredited by the scientific community but notes the scientific world has been wrong before.

"I have the feeling that astrology in the future is going to come back into its own, possibly under different names," she says, describing astrology and psychology are similar arts.

"For instance, there are a lot of psychologists now who are beginning to use it. I've worked with psychologists and I've been able to predict, for instance, when a person who was under a cyclic pattern was in a calm period."

"I've been able to predict to the day when he (the patient) was likely to become more disturbed. I remember when I did that and the psychologist called me up and said, 'Well, you sure hit it.'"

She says astrology, which she compares to personal weather predicting, can aid both patient and psychologist by providing explanations about their personality, its strong and weak points.

The basic premise of astrology is that the sun, the moon and the planets and stars have a subtle but discernible impact on human beings and that personalities can be studied and future events divined through its application.

Historians say astrology is as old as civilization, probably beginning when the first men and women turned their eyes heavenward and wondered what was happening in the cosmos.

While there has been no undisputable evidence documenting the validity of astrology there have been some studies citing influences of full moons on crime and suicides.

Humans, whatever else they are, are also energy fields that are effected to some degree by electromagetic waves, gravitational forces, light and a number of other still unknown forces.

RCA radio engineer John H. Nelson has shown a correspondrence atmospheric magnetic disturbance, solar flareups and conjunction and aspects of major planets.

French psychologist Michel Gauquelin has produced some remarkable studies showing a high statistical correlation between certain planetary positions in the birth charts of people in certain professions.

Ms. Orser's latest book, just released, called "What's My Sign" (Harper and Row), analyzes the signs of about 70 celebrities and is a primer on how to guess the signs of other people.

Her first book, "Instant Astrology," has gone into its third printing in a little over two years and sold over 30,000 copies. She has taught astrology at community colleges near her home in Woodstock, N.Y. for several years.

She says determining sun signs is a skill that can be developed and compares it to spotting people from foreign countries.

"I once met someone who knew an actor who had astrology as a hobby, and he was able, many times, many more times than chance, to look at a person and tell them, even within a few days, when they were born. And it makes a certain sense, because any actor is trained to observe and consciously observe certain characteristics."

She deplores greedy astrologers, the numerous charlatans which she admits riddle the field, and the immensely popular newspaper horoscopes, which she says are so general as to be meaningless.

"There's too much trying to make it over simple; that if you are this sign, you have to act this way. The truth is your sun sign, which is the sign the sun was in when you were born, is just one influence," she says.

"And where your moon is, and your rising sign and all the others, can modify the other (sun sign) so that it means you are less typical. If you see someone where the sun, moon and rising sign are all the same sign, they are likely to be really clear in the sign, but most of us are a kind of mixture."

A Switch By SHP Office

DALLAS, N.C. (AP) — The church van in which one person was killed and 14 injured Saturday in a head-on collision with a car did not cross the center line before the crash, the state Highway Patrol office in Monroe reported Wednesday.

The Patrol office in Raleigh told The Associated Press Saturday that the van had veered left of the center line on U.S. 321 in Gaston County near Dallas, causing the crash that killed Ardith Irene Delgado, 19, a member of the staff of the Tabernacle Baptist Church Children's Home in Greenville, S.C.

The Raleigh office was still reporting that version of the crash Wednesday, but the Patrol office in Monroe said the other vehicle had been the one to cross the center line.

"It was probably their radio report," said a Patrol spokesman, referring to the erroneous Raleigh report. "It apparently got scrambled."

The lone occupant of the car and 13 other passengers of the van were hurt. The van was taking children from the home in Greenville to Maiden, where they were planning to sing at a church camp.

Greene Unit Registering

SNOW HILL — Preregistration is now underway at the Greene County Unit of Lenoir Community College for credit and non-credit courses for the fall quarter which begins September 5.

Credit courses include typing, business and basic communication. Also, special courses are planned in teacher aide's programs. Interested persons are to pre-register by August 30.

A large number of non-credit courses are being offered encompassing arts and crafts, repair courses, first aid, auto and mechanic related courses, estate planning, etc.

Selected courses will be offered at the Walstonburg unit; and ceramic classes will be available in LaGrange, Mewborns Crossroads and Shine.

Non-credit courses are open to persons 18 years old or older with a $5 tuition fee for each course. There is no fee for persons 65 or older.

For more information, call Snow Hill 747-2451.

Practice Plus Some Patience

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Ronald Jones took a tip from an old adage — the one that says "if at first you don't succeed, try, try again"—to bag his first turkey.

He had no luck last year.

"My friends thought I was crazy, and I'll admit I almost went broke hunting," said Jones, a former local high school tennis star. "I must have gone hunting 30 times."

This year, in his second trip, he bagged a gobbler tipping the scales at a robust 20 pounds and 8 ounces.

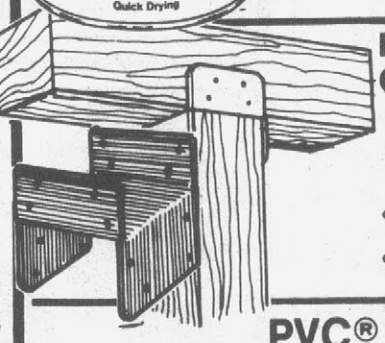

"Last year I only saw one turkey, so I thought maybe I didn't know how to call them properly," he said. "So I got myself a good caller and did a lot of practicing."

MOORE'S

Sees Struggles For 'Lou Grant'

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When the "Lou Grant" series began last fall, it got critical cheers but low ratings. But top ratings came this summer for reruns of the CBS newspaper show starring Edward Asner.

Excluding last week, when it was bumped for a beauty show, the series has been among America's 20 highest-rated programs for two months. It even headed the Nielsen standings in the first week of July.

A good summer, yes, but will "Lou Grant" ratings stay up there when the series starts its second season in September. Its executive producer, Gene Reynolds, answered the question this way:

"I think we're going to have tough going. We'll be up against football (ABC's Monday night version) in the East, and football is always very tough.

"It (his series) is a literate show, a basically serious show. It's never going to have the kind of easy going that other hit shows like 'M-A-S-H' or 'Laverne and Shirley' have.

"Sure, we have to make a popular show to stay in business. But I think we're always going to have to fight for our lives."

Reynolds, a soft-spoken, reflective man, joined "Lou Grant" last season after doing "M-A-S-H" five years. He said when the Asner series began its initially low-rated life, it had abnormal opposition.

"We were up against the World Series twice, the playoffs once, 'The Godfather' and that Park Avenue prostitute thing." He referred to NBC's highrated "79 Park Avenue" miniseries.

"It's a period they go through in television called kill time, in which they really try to wipe you out," he laughed.

"It was a rough period. But finally I think the show developed a following and this summer, people who hadn't seen it got the chance to because it faced more 'normal' programming."

He meant it wasn't opposed by major movies, big-budget specials.

"It's great for us," he said. "It gives the audience a chance to develop an appetite for it that we hope continues into the fall."

During the show's low-rated days — it was shifted in late winter from Tuesdays to Mondays and will be there next fall — did CBS ever tell him the ax was imminent?

"No, they never said that," he replied. "But I'm certain it crossed their minds. It certainly crossed ours. But when we finally got some normal weeks, the numbers started picking up, even on Tuesdays."

It began, he added, with a Jan. 3 show, "Airliner," which was 11th or so in ratings and was the first sign of better times ahead.

He said CBS, which initially ordered 13 episodes, ordered another four at mid-season, then another five, for 22 shows in all.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, AUGUST 4, 1978

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You are now able to combine your intuitions and your judgment by which you can best extend your activities into more productive lines, especially where culture, art and music are concerned.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You have new ideas at this time which can bring you recognition if you follow through on them. Prove your devotion to the one you love.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) If you concentrate now you get the right solution to a perplexing problem. Be sure to handle a business matter wisely.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Find the best way to gather the information you need to improve your routines. Come to a better accord with family members.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Plan the most practical way to add to present abundance via orthodox methods. Avoid arguments with your mate tonight.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Showing more affection and thought for family members is wise. Try to be more outgoing and less temperamental at this time.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Show your devotion to friends by helping them with their affairs. Also, discuss a personal matter with one who can assist you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Contact a congenial you want to accompany on a trip and gain mutual benefit. Be sure to handle your money wisely.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Good day to pay more attention to civic matters and gain more respect. Make plans to improve your career in some way.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A new project crops up that you should look into very quickly and make it part of your life. Your intuition is accurate now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Seek the right methods of handling obligations in the future and become more efficient. Be careful with finances.

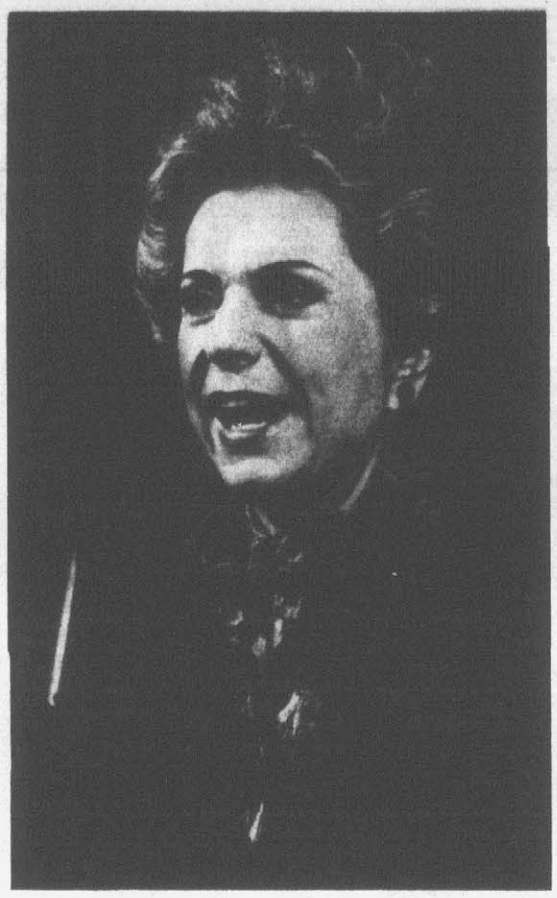

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Discuss a new plan with an associate first, then seek approval from a higher-up. Show that you have poise.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A time to enjoy yourself and remove any tensions you may have. Study your financial situation and cut down on expenses.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will learn the lessons of life well and should therefore be given the finest academic education possible to prepare for a most successful life. Add some musical training. Don't neglect ethical studies early in life.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely YOU!

TOTIE FIELDS—Comedienne Totie Fields died Wednesday, who had been making a comeback after a leg amputation, two heart attacks and breast cancer. The once-rotund nightclub and television entertainer was 40. Miss Fields, chosen by her colleagues as Entertainer of the Year in January, died of an apparent heart attack the day before she was to open at the Sahara Hotel. (AP Laserphoto)

Will Replace Phyllis George

NEW YORK (AP) — Phyllis George, the former Miss America who brought an offbeat touch to CBS sports in the winter of 1975, will be replaced this fall on "The NFL Today" by former Miss Ohio, Jayne Kennedy. Miss Kennedy will serve as co-host with Brent Musburger and Irv Cross in the football program.

Help Is Available To Forest Landowners

Help is available to forest landowners — under the North Carolina Forest Development Program Act — in establishing new forest, with the State paying for up to 60 per cent of the cost, according to Pitt County Forest Ranger Mark Webb.

Webb said landowners, under the program passed by the 1977 General Assembly, may establish up to 100 acres of new forest each year.

The basic requirements, Webb said, "are that the land be capable of growing commercial timber and that the landowner have a forest management plan which has been approved by a representative of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development."

The Forest Ranger explained that a management plan contains a description of present and future courses of action to be followed to assure maximum forest productivity and environmental protection.

"The landowner may make the forest management plan himself," Webb said, although, "most prefer to have this done by a forester. This service is provided by the Division of Forest Resources and by consulting foresters."

Any work needed to establish a new forest is eligible for cost-sharing payment, Webb explained, including tree planting, the cost of the seedlings, and work needed to prepare the land for planting.

The program, which became effective July 1, also includes funds to provide work needed to release seedlings and sprouts of valuable species from competing vegetation.

"I've already received a number of inquires from landowners who want to establish new forests," Webb said, but indicated there are, "many, many more acres of commercial forest land in the county which need attention."

Webb noted that the program includes funds to aid landowners in establishing another forest on cut over land.

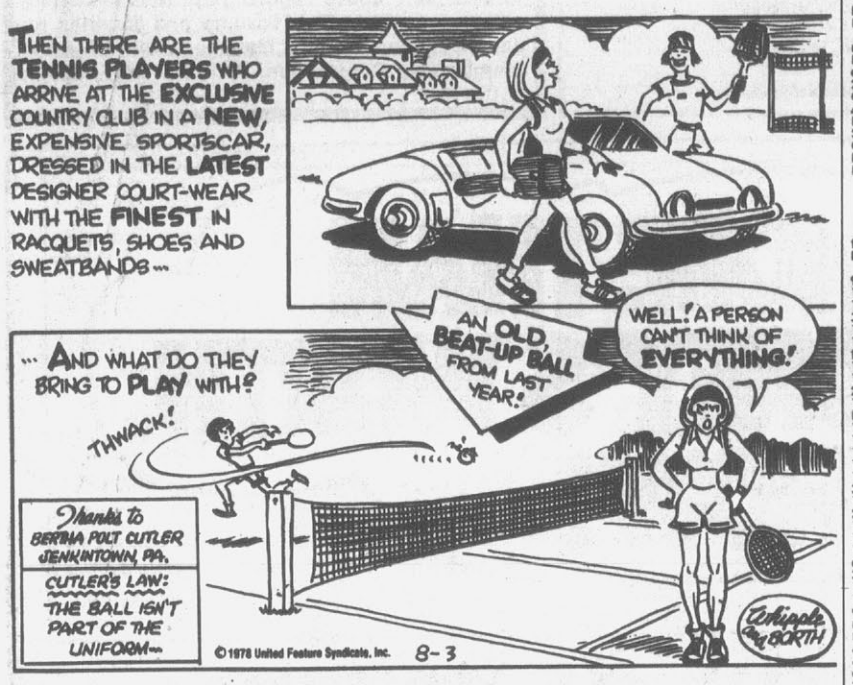

Webb said he could be contacted by calling 756-0414, or writing P. O. Box 515, Bell Arthur, N.C. 27811, for further information.

Miss USA In Tree Branches

BANDERA, Texas (AP) — Miss USA of 1977 found herself up a tree — and she was glad to be there.

Kim Tomes, 22, spent most of Wednesday morning clinging to tree branches alongside the roof of a dude ranch camp house to escape flood waters from the flooding Guadalupe and Medina rivers in Texas' hill country.

Steve Muller, a Houston businessman staying at the Peaceful Valley Dude Ranch, said she was his stranded companion atop the roof.

SUPPLEMENT TO: The Daily Reflector and The Reflector Shoppers Guide

CONTEST DETAILS

Our professional buyers recently put together the 10 best values at Lowe's. And to emphasize how great this lineup is, we've made a contest out of it. Shop around and compare prices. Then pick the one product from our Top Ten that you think represents the very best value. If your choice agrees with that of our buyers, you could win a 16 h.p. Heavy Duty GardenTractor by MTD or one of ten Toro Cordless String Trimmers. Entry blanks are at each Lowe's store. On August 19, 1978, each store will hold a drawing. The first entry drawn in each store that correctly identifies the #1 Value will be sent to Lowe's Headquarters. On August 22, 1978, the Grand Prize and Second Prize Winners will be drawn. No purchase necessary. You do not have to be present to win. Winners will be notified. You must be 18 or older. Void where prohibited by law. Deadline for entry is August 19, 1978, so enter now!
