Carter Favors More Research For Safer Tobacco

WILSON, N.C. (UPI) — President Jimmy Carter, campaigning for Democratic Senate candidate John Ingram in the heart of North Carolina tobacco land, said Saturday he favors continued research to make tobacco safer.

Carter spoke to an estimated 15,000 persons in front of the two-story red brick Wilson County Library. It rained briefly as Carter, without an umbrella or hat, spoke from a plywood stage.

Carter said he favors an "accurate and enlightened medical research program to make tobacco even more safe than it is today."

He toured a tobacco warehouse, viewed a mock auction and had lunch with Democratic Party officials before returning to Washington.

His remarks on tobacco came as American Medical Association researchers said more evidence has been compiled indicating smoking may be responsible for a variety of medical problems. There was no indication Carter was aware of the report when he spoke.

The President made several jokes about Joseph Califano, who has drawn the ire of the tobacco industry in North Carolina, the nation's largest tobacco producer, for his $26 million anti-smoking campaign.

"I had planned today to bring Joseph Califano with me, but he decided not to come," Carter said as the crowd shouted their disapproval of the Health, Education and Welfare secretary. "He discovered that not only is North Carolina the No. 1 tobacco producer, it is also the No. 1 brick manufacturer in the nation."

Carter did say Califano had urged him to come, saying "it is time for the White House to start smoking something regular," a reference to remarks by former aide Peter Bourne about drug use by White House staffers.

As if to underscore the importance of tobacco in the area, bumper stickers on a sign at the airport where Carter arrived read "North Carolina grows on Tobacco" and "Califano is dangerous to my health."

As he spoke, a handful of supporters of the Wilmington 10 chanted, "Free the Wilmington 10. Free the Wilmington 10." The Wilmington 10 are nine blacks and a white given long jail terms for charges arising from 1971 racial violence in Wilmington.

Near the end of his speech, reminiscent of his 1976 campaign appearances, Carter brought the crowd to life when he referred to the demonstrators as he commented upon his own support of basic human rights.

"One of those basic rights is to speak, even to shout, when other people are trying to speak," Carter said, adding it is one right he would never want to see ended.

Carter told the crowd Ingram is the type of candidate Carter needs to push his programs through Congress. He said Democrats are forming a team that will put the nation on the road to progress.

"We need your support of the team, the Democratic team which will work on the things that we need," Carter said.

Ingram faces a tough race with conservative Republican Sen. Jesse Helms.

Carter noted Ingram has pulled off several come-from-behind upset victories in his career. He said he expects Ingram to win and called him "a man not afraid to fight against public odds."

Ingram praised Carter for enforcing laws against what he said were "oil ripoffs" and appointing a committee to tighten anti-trust laws. He said Carter's support of the tobacco price support program was "giving our farmers a good crop and good prices."

In his remarks, Carter noted he won his first presidential primary majority in North Carolina two years ago. He told the crowd "you gave me a hand, you gave me your heart, you gave me your votes and you helped put me in the White House."

Carter again pledged to keep the nation No. 1 militarily. "We are a strong nation. We have always been No. 1 and we will always be No. 1." He repeated the theme he sounded at Nor-

Believes Tobacco, Health Programs Not Incompatible

By FRED McNEESE

WILSON, N.C. (UPI) — President Carter, with his coat off, toured a sweltering tobacco warehouse Saturday and told tobacco farmers he was proud of them.

He also repeated for the tobacco men, many sitting on piles of tobacco, his belief that support for the tobacco support program and good health programs are not incompatible.

"I'm thankful for what you have done," said Carter, as he discussed the hardships tobacco farmers must face with the growers assembled at Tobacco Growers Warehouse.

Carter participated in a mock tobacco auction as about 100 tobacco men looked on in the pungent warehouse. Carter walked the auction line with the auctioneer and tobacco buyers who bid over on stacks holding up to 250 pounds each of the yellow leaf.

Carter then watched as the leaf was loaded on a truck. The tobacco was unloaded from the truck and put back on the floor immediately after Carter left. Tobacco sales are not legal on Saturdays.

"I think anyone knows there is no incompatibility between the two commitments," Carter told his audience, adding the nation needs both good health and a strong farm program.

The president said he will continue to support tobacco.

"We will have a good loan program for tobacco in the federal government, you can depend on that," he said.

The president said there is "a good partnership" between farmers and government. He said tobacco prices are about 40 cents per pound higher this year, adding, "I don't think that is any accident."

As a parting gift, Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. presented Carter with a yellow hat bearing a "Pride in Tobacco" emblem on the front. The hat is part of a tobacco firm's promotion program to boost tobacco's image. Hunt's assistant press secretary, Stephanie Bass, was wearing the hat before Hunt commanded it to give to Carter. A Carter aide carried the hat for the president.

As Carter headed for his plane at the Rocky Mount-Wilson Airport, there was one last tobacco reminder visible for him.

41 Dead In Bus Tragedy

By ROD CLARKE

EASTMAN, Quebec (UPI) — A bus carrying physically and mentally handicapped persons home from a theater outing lost its brakes late Friday night on a steep village road, plunged into a lake and became a slowly sinking death trap for 41 of the 48 persons aboard.

The bus hit the water at about 45-50 miles an hour and floated out into the lake for about 500 feet. It settled into the lake as the victims, many confined to wheelchairs, screamed and tried desperately to pry open windows.

Norman Carpentier, a piano player at the nearby Lac D'Argent Hotel, said he saw the bus settle slowly in the water. He thought it took a half hour to go under completely but others estimated 15 minutes.

"Until that time, everybody, they cried," Carpentier said in the accented English of French Canada. "But after that we don't hear nothing. And the bus goes down in the water."

"The people were screaming. They called 'It's so cold. It's so cold. It's so cold. We want help. We want help.'"

A priest and two nuns were among the victims.

The accident occurred at about 11:45 p.m. in the village of Eastman, a dairy farming French Canadian community of about 500 people 70 miles east of Montreal.

The driver and two chaperones were among the seven people who managed to save themselves. Four of them were hospitalized in shock.

Police said the victims were returning to their homes in Asbestos, a mining town of about 9,000 people 40 miles north of Eastman, when the air brakes of their chartered bus failed on a steep and winding two-lane road, plunging the vehicle into the frigid waters of picturesque Lake D'Argent.

The group, ranging in age from 14 to 85, had attended a performance of the comedy "A Simple Double Marriage" at the Theatre de la Margolaine, a summer repertory company in Eastman.

Officials said there was no evidence that the driver was

Married For 65 Years, Couple Deeply Devoted To Each Other

ZEB AND NANCY HEATH . . . share a room at Greenville Villa Nursing Home here and they've shared 65 years of happy marriage. (Reflector Photo By Carol Tyer)

By CAROL TYER

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred "Zeb" Heath, married 65 years and very much in love, had a reunion this week. Heath, 87, came "home" to their shared Greenville Villa room after five weeks in Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Mrs. Heath, 85, has "a shattered back" which causes her to need a wheelchair when going out and a walker to get around the room, but get around she does to tend to her husband.

"Nancy takes good care of me," Heath says. "She's a wonderful woman. I don't mind tellin' anybody — I love that woman there."

Mrs. Heath laughed. "I never did give him cause not to."

The couple, who lived most of their married life near Ayden, were wed Nov. 9, 1913 in Winterville, the town in which Mrs. Heath, then Miss Nancy Dall, grew up. Her husband was a relative newcomer then. Born in Jones County, his family had moved to Kinston when he was 12 and then after several years of work in a cotton mill there, he had moved with them to Winterville in 1910.

"I've had to work all my life — till the last few years," he said. "I only went to school on the days the weather was too bad to work outside. That was what my daddy demanded."

Asked to tell about their courting days, Heath said, "To tell you the truth, when I was courtin' Nancy, I was courtin' seven or eight others, too. But I picked the right one."

"The day we were married we went to Kinston on the train and spent the night with my sister, Mrs. Davenport. The next morning it was cold, but clear and beautiful, and we sat out on the front porch a while. A neighbor girl across the street I'd gone with some wanted to know if I was married. My sister tried to tease and say no, but I told her to tell her yes, that I was lawfully and happily married and that was that."

The Heaths started farming in 1915, the year their oldest son, Leonard, now a Lenoir County resident, was born. "I never farmed for anybody who wanted me to leave," Heath said. "And I made a good livin' for my family. I knew how to raise and cure tobacco."

"Course, I had a lotta help. That woman would get right out there and plow with me. We'd work side by side."

"Yes," Mrs. Heath said. "I was afraid of the mule, but I'd plow the horse while Zeb plowed the mule. I'll tell you what it was. I just always liked workin' outdoors better than stayin' in the house."

"My wife's mother, Mrs. Jeamey Dall, lived with us for 19 years and she did a lot of tendin' the children and the house," Heath said. "She was as good to me as my own mother woulda been. And our daughter, Ruby, now Mrs. Junior Lee Dall of Simpson loved her so. She was always hangin' on her grandma's coattails when she was a little one."

Tears came to Heath's eyes as he told about an illness of their son, Leonard when he was "probably just a little over a year old. "We thought at the time it was tuberculosis and I was so scared our baby was gonna die. I stopped old Dr. — He was from Greenville — out by our gate one cold late afternoon and told him how sick our baby was. He was a little tipsy and he said, 'Bring him right out here to this buggy.'"

"Doc, I can't bring that baby out. It's too cold." I said, "Won't hurt him," he said. So we bundled him up and took him out. Doc looked him over and said, 'Have him in my office in the morning.' "I said, 'Okay, Doc, but you stay off that demijohn till we get there, okay?' He said he would and he did. And by God's help, he cured that baby."

Heath recalled with obvious pleasure the first car he ever drove. "We were livin' with Mr. Sethie Cox then and one day he just got (Continued on page A-7)

Carter also said his administration was making progress against inflation, calling it "one of my goals was well as one of yours." He added the government is working for a balanced budget "as fast as we can."

In remarks tailored for the primarily agriculture-oriented crowd, Carter said farmers were about to enter a "Hoover depression" when he entered office. But he said in his administration farm exports are now expected to set a record and that net farm profits will increase.

There were a handful of protest signs visible in the crowd. One said "Fire Young, help Rhodesia, defeat ERA" and another said "U.S. out of Africa, superpowers hands off."

Carter was greeted at the Rocky Mount-Wilson airport by a crowd of about 150. He shook hands with many who came out to see him.

An important two-day Bloodmobile visit, the first of the new fiscal year, is scheduled for Monday and Tuesday at the Moose Lodge here, according to Dick Carney of the local Red Cross Blood Center.

Carney, reporting that blood usage is up now and collections down as is normal, unfortunately, for the July and August periods, said that the Blood Center is running at some 55 to 60 percent of its inventory.

"The way our schedule is laid out this year", Carney noted, "we only have three visits this fiscal year at the Moose Lodge." He said that more mini-visits are scheduled in the county this year as well as several industrial stops.

Carney urged citizens to participate in this week's visit, which is scheduled for 11 a.m. until 5 p.m. both days. He said it will be five months before another visit is scheduled at the Moose Lodge.

The upcoming blood drive is being promoted by the county-wide Gallon Donor Club, according to Carney, who said that the Blood Center is "pushing to get our inventory back up."

The Bloodmobile will visit East Carolina University in October.

Why does my neighbor pay less for his auto insurance than I do?

Although it may seem that everyone is charged something different, there is only one basic rate for auto insurance in North Carolina. Frequently, one policy will cost more than another because a greater amount of insurance protection is being purchased. While there is a minimum amount of liability protection required by law, such an amount is inadequate in today's environment of use first and talk later. If your neighbor pays less, it may be that he is unwilling to spend a few extra dollars for needed protection.

Besides the amount of protection you choose, there are other things that can affect the cost of your insurance.

How can I save money on my auto insurance?

The best way to keep your insurance premiums as low as possible is to drive safely at all times. But there are other ways you can immediately reduce the cost of your auto insurance.

Insure all your autos with the same insurance company. Your normal premium is reduced 15% if you have all cars insured with the same company. Consider joining or creating a car pool. If you presently drive your car to work or school, insurance companies encourage car pooling by reducing your premium, if the car is driven to work or school only two days or less per week or two weeks or less every five weeks. Increase the deductible on your collision insurance. A "deductible" is that portion of a loss which you agree to pay, before the insurance company is obligated to pay anything. If you are presently carrying a deductible of $50 on your collision insurance, consider going to a $100 or even a $200 deductible. If you are willing to absorb more of the cost for small repair jobs, your insurance company will reduce the premium charged for your collision insurance. Drop the collision coverage on your older cars. Since you can never collect more than your car is actually worth, it is sometimes impractical to pay for expensive insurance coverage on older cars.

Why did my premium increase this year?

If your auto insurance cost you more this year than last year, you deserve to know why. Just about everything we buy is subject to occasional price increases. However, before you assume that insurance companies are just charging more, consider the other factors that can affect the cost of your insurance.

- Did the use of your car change since the last billing?
- Did you buy an additional car, or replace an existing car with a more expensive one?
- Were you, or a member of your family, charged with an accident or traffic violation during the year?
- Did a member of your family become licensed during the year?
- Has the amount of protection provided by your company been increased?
- Are you now being insured through the N.C. Reinsurance Facility?

What is the N.C. Reinsurance Facility, and how did I get there?

Your agent can tell you whether you are in the Reinsurance Facility. He has reviewed all of the companies in his office writing auto liability insurance, to determine if any of them will accept your insurance "voluntarily," which means that the company will charge you the normal premium and agree to pay your valid claims. If none of his companies wish to insure you voluntarily, your liability policy will be placed in the Reinsurance Facility, where premiums and losses are shared by all companies writing auto insurance in North Carolina. If your policy is placed in the Facility you will pay the normal premium plus about 10%. Since different companies have different reasons for putting a policy in the Facility, it can be to your advantage to deal with an Independent Agent who represents several insurance companies.

What affects the cost of auto insurance?

The cost of auto insurance is based on the number of accidents and the cost of paying claims in North Carolina. Every auto insurance claim that occurs in North Carolina becomes a statistic from which insurance rates are determined. In other words, these statistics reveal the likelihood of a particular driver having an accident, and thus the premium he should pay.

USE OF THE CAR

You are charged more if your car is driven to work regularly, or is used in your business. Naturally, a car that stays at home most of the time or is used on a farm is less subject to accidents.

WHERE YOU LIVE

If you live in or around an urban area, you are constantly in traffic, and your insurance premium reflects this additional exposure. If you live in a rural area, you pay less than others.

DRIVING EXPERIENCE

Most of us have been driving so long that we have forgotten how complicated it really is. Much of our driving ability is due to experience, a fact that is easily proven by statistics. If an operator of your car has been licensed less than two years, you pay a higher insurance premium. When all operators have been licensed more than two years, you go back to paying the lower premium at your next billing.

DRIVING RECORD

Charging additional premium for moving traffic violations and chargeable accidents is a widely accepted practice in our society. One reason is that it encourages careful driving habits by penalizing the driver who is careless. This system is called the Safe Driver Insurance Plan. Following are a few facts about how this Plan can affect your insurance premiums:

- Points, which cause higher premiums, are assigned for moving traffic violations and accidents in which an insured driver is at fault.
- These points remain on your insurance record for three years. If, after three years, no other points have been charged, you are once again eligible for the lowest possible premium.
- If you are not at fault in an accident, and have not committed a violation, you will not be charged points.
- All points obtained by all operators in a family are added together and assigned to a single car insured under the policy.
- The additional premium charged for these points depends on the amount of your coverage and the type of car you drive.

CONVICTIONS	POINTS	Illegal Passing	Points
Manslaughter	12	Speeding in Excess of 55 mph but not over 75	2
Planned Highway Racing	12	Following Too Close	2
Hit and Run, Bodily Injury	12	Driving on Wrong Side of Road	2
Highway Racing	10	Speeding Up To and Including 55 mph	1
Drunken Driving	10	Any Other Moving Traffic Violation	1
Transporting Wrecked Car for Sale	10	ACCIDENTS
Driving after License Suspended or Revoked	8	Chargeable accident resulting in bodily injury or damage in excess of $200 to the property of others or to your automobile	2
Hit and Run, Property Damage Only	4	Chargeable accident resulting in $200 or less damage to the property of others or your automobile	1
Reckless Driving	4
Passing Stopped School Bus	4
Speeding in Excess of 75 mph	4

AGE AND COST OF AUTO

All of the factors discussed so far affect the cost of both your liability insurance (what you pay others when you are at fault) and your physical damage insurance (protection against damage to your own car). The cost of physical damage insurance is also based on the age and cost of your car. Logically, the newer and more expensive a car, the more it costs to repair, and the higher your insurance premium for this protection.

Vance Trying To Salvage Israeli-Egyptian Talks

By ALVIN B. WEBB
JERUSALEM (UPI) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance returned to the Middle East Saturday for what seemed almost like a diplomatic mission impossible — rescuing the Egyptian-Israeli peace talks.

With the stalled negotiations in apparent danger of total collapse, Vance landed at Ben-Gurion Airport at the start of four days of talks aimed at getting the two sides to talk to each other again.

"This visit comes at an important time," Vance told reporters on the tarmac of the airport with Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan at his side. "We are at a crucial point in the peace process."

Dayan responded by calling Vance "probably the only one who can now move the stuck negotiations forward. I assure you we shall do our share for the continuation of the peace negotiations."

Egypt dealt the talks a crippling — and possibly fatal — blow Friday when Cairo Radio described Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin as a "racist dictator" and a political "schizophrenic."

It was one of the harshest criticisms of Begin since Egyptian President Anwar Sadat launched his peace initiative in November.

Vance declined to comment on the remark, but the waves of dismay it sent echoing through the secretary's traveling party were unmistakable.

"We have a common interest in trying to find a solution, in getting them back on the track," a senior U.S. official said. But his disappointment was evident.

The official added Vance "could be flexible" if the situation were to change — meaning he would be prepared to remain on in the Middle East if the two sides would agree to sit down and talk — a highly unlikely prospect.

Vance learned of the Cairo Radio report hours before his plane left Andrews Air Force Base at midnight Friday on a trip taking him first to Jerusalem for talks with Begin, then to Alexandria, Egypt, Monday to face Sadat.

Still the secretary went ahead, partly on the slender hope that something positive might develop, partly because it apparently would have been diplomatically embarrassing to have called it off at such a late date.

In Israel, little note was taken of the Cairo Radio criticism of Begin.

Vance's original idea, after the Leeds Castle conference in England last month, was that his trip would lead to an Aug. 9 resumption of talks at the foreign ministers' level at a neutral location in the occupied Sinai peninsula.

But to the astonishment of U.S. officials, Sadat announced July 30 that he could no longer negotiate with Israel "under current circumstances" — Israel's refusal to commit itself to returning the occupied West Bank and Gaza areas to Jordan and Egypt.

Vance came with no grandiose American "peace plan," but instead was meeting with Begin and Sadat for an "evaluation of where they stood in the negotiations," said a senior official traveling with the secretary.

Then, the official said, Vance will take "the views of the principals back to President Carter, and decide what to do."

Asked whether there was yet a chance the Sinai conference could take place on this trip, the official said, "Anything is possible. But I don't expect it."

Vance was meeting today with Begin and then with the prime minister's inner cabinet — the Ministerial Defense Committee.

THEY ALL SURVIVED — Government officials examine the wreckage of a Chilean Boeing 707 jetliner that crashed early Friday three miles from Buenos Aires Airport. All 64 occupants of the plane survived the crash and escaped from the plane before it burst into flames. Twenty-eight persons were injured and 13 hospitalized. One airport official said fog surrounding the airport area caused the pilot of the Lan-Chile airliner to stray from his assigned descent route. (AP Laserphoto)

Democrats Nominate Martin

WILSON, N.C. (UPI) — By a quick, unanimous vote, the state Democratic Party's executive committee Saturday nominated Superior Court Judge Harry C. Martin of Asheville as its candidate for a seat on the state Appeals Court.

Martin was appointed to the appeals judgeship July 29 by Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. His seat must be placed on the fall ballot, however, because he would serve more than 30 days before the Nov. 7 election.

Republicans have until 5 p.m. Monday to nominate a challenger.

Martin succeeds Appeals Judge David M. Britt, who on Aug. 31 will take over for retiring Supreme Court Associate Justice I. Beverly Lake. Lake will teach law at Campbell college.

Terrorists Kill Four In Pakistan

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) — Two terrorists shot their way into a Palestine Liberation Organization office Saturday and machine-gunned four people to death in the bloodiest attack yet in a worldwide vendetta between the PLO and more radical Palestinians based in Iraq.

The gunmen killed a Pakistani policeman and three Palestinians — the mission's telex operator, a medical student and a guerrilla studying with the Pakistani army — and escaped.

But the Islamabad gunmen missed their primary target, PLO Chief of Mission Yousuf Abu Hantash, who hid in his office while his would-be assassins ran through the halls shouting for him.

"This was a serious action plotted by the Iraqi government," Hantash said. "The Iraqi embassy supplied them with machine guns and organized the attack. We hold the Iraqi government responsible."

Iraqi Ambassador Ahmad Zafar al-Gilani later denied the charge, telling reporters, "We have sacrificed so much for the Palestinians. It is unbelievable we would go around killing them."

In Baghdad, Iraq, the state-controlled newspaper Al-Jumhuriyah repeated Iraqi charges that "reactionary, capitulationist elements of the PLO" were behind recent attacks against Iraqi embassies abroad.

In Beirut, the PLO also accused the Iraqi government of planning the assault and said police in Bangladesh had intercepted a load of weapons intended for another attack on PLO headquarters in Dacca.

Palestinian officials have warned that the Arab vendetta threatens to start a full-scale "civil war" among Palestinians scattered around the world.

Sheriff Sued For $6 Million

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Dade County, Fla., man filed a $6 million damage suit Friday accusing Richmond County Sheriff Raymond Goodman of conspiring to commit unlawful search and seizure to further his political career.

L. Lawrence Kato, describing himself as a prominent member of the community when he lived in Hamlet, said he was unlawfully arrested after Goodman and six other police officers searched his home.

The suit said Goodman, five deputies and a Hamlet policeman served a search warrant on Kato's wife the night of May 26, 1976, while Kato was away. It said they searched for four hours before leaving with stereo equipment, fishing gear and clothing.

"The affidavit on which the search warrant was based contained false information, which the defendant knowingly, willingly and maliciously swore to under oath," Kato charged.

Kato, who was arrested by the officers and later released from the Richmond County jail on $5,000 bond, said authorities entered his home under the authority of a warrant alleging unlawful drug activities.

"At no time had the plaintiff committed a felony or misdemeanor in or out of the presence of any of the defendants," the suit said. "Defendants had no reasonable cause to believe that he had."

The sheriff later described the arrest of Kato as part of a crackdown on breaking and entering in Richmond County, the suit said, and officers displayed Kato's property on the courthouse lawn in Rockingham, saying citizens could claim any property they thought was theirs.

Charges against Kato were dismissed by Superior Court Judge Robert Gavin at a trial in Stanley County in February 1977. Gavin held that Goodman and his deputies obtained evidence against Kato during an unconstitutional search and seizure.

Cost Of Necessities Up

By HENRY DAVID ROSSO
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The costs of "basic necessities" increased 15 percent between May and June while weekly real spending earnings for the first half of the year decreased by almost 3 percent, the National Center for Economic Alternatives reported Saturday.

The center, a private economic think tank, said the basic necessities — food, shelter, medical care and energy — "constitute nearly 70 percent of the consumption expenditures for 80 percent of American households."

"Inflation in the things that matter most to most families was dramatically worse in the second quarter of 1978 than generalized government statistics indicate," the center said.

The report said prices for the basic necessities rose at a rate of 13.2 percent for the first six months of 1978. The same prices shot up 15 percent between March and June, compared with an 11.2 percent increase in the Consumer Price Index.

The government's inflation figure for the first half of 1978 was 10.4 percent.

"Basic necessity inflation is undermining family budgets at an incredible rate," said center co-directors Gar Alperovitz and Jeff Faux. "Household energy and food purchases are the least postposable expenditures, with mortgage and rent payments and doctor bills close behind."

The report said "the contribution of basic necessity price increases to overall inflation rose from 73 percent in the first quarter to 79 percent in the second quarter of 1978."

Medical care costs decreased from 8.7 percent in the first quarter of 1978 to 7.5 percent in the second quarter on an annual basis, the report said, but the rate of increase for food rose from 15.7 percent to 20.9 percent, for shelter from 11.4 percent to 12.8 percent; and for energy from 5.4 percent to 12.3 percent.

The annual rate of price increases for the first half of the year was 8.1 percent for medical care, 8.8 percent for energy, 12.1 percent for shelter and 18.3 percent for food.

Saying the "average worker still is not keeping up with the cost of living," the report showed weekly real spendable earnings after adjusting for inflation and increased taxes fell by almost 3 percent in the first six months of the year.

News Briefs

Will Seek Indictment

HAYNEVILLE, Ala. (UPI) — A murder indictment will be sought against a former FBI informant who has been accused by two Ku Klux Klansmen of firing the shots that killed civil rights worker Viola Liuzzo in 1965, District Attorney Jobie Bryan said Saturday.

Bryan said he is going before the Lowndes County grand jury Sept. 18 to seek the indictment against Gary Thomas Rowe Jr., who in his role as Klan infiltrator was with Klansmen in a car from which the fatal shots were fired.

"I couldn't believe it when I was told the FBI never testified Rowe's gun that he had at the time," said Bryan.

Protesters Vow Occupation

PORTSMOUTH, N.H. (UPI) — Anti-nuclear protesters Saturday vowed an illegal occupation of the Seabrook nuclear power plant site if federal officials permit work to resume at the $2.3 billion project.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission, which suspended construction July 21, is considering a reinstatement of Seabrook's work permit following Environmental Protection Agency approval Friday of the plant's undersea cooling system.

The anti-nuclear Clamshell Alliance, which has spearheaded demonstrations against Seabrook, said it was preparing to protest illegally at the plant if construction resumes.

$37 Billion Weapons Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $37 billion weapons authorization bill, which includes money for a giant nuclear aircraft carrier, President Carter doesn't want, has passed Congress.

The bill, which cleared both houses on Friday, also includes $20.6 million for tests to convert civilian jumbo jets so that they can carry cruise missiles.

Separate appropriation legislation must still be passed to finance the programs.

President Carter has opposed building the $1.9 billion carrier, and wanted twice as much money as the bill authorized for the testing of the Boeing 747 jumbo jets.

Probable Pricing Violations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two major oil companies have been charged with probable pricing violations totaling $132 million.

The Energy Department on Friday accused the Atlantic Richfield Co., with probable violations totaling $93.8 million between August 1973 and December 1977.

The department also accused Getty Oil Co., of price violations totaling $38.2 million between August, 1973 and January 1977.

The two firms were charged with improperly using current regulations to reduce their previously recorded 1973 costs, resulting in subsequent price increases.

Accuses Carter in Griffin Hiring

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Republican Party Saturday accused President Carter of giving a fired government executive a high-level White House job because House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill "threw a temper tantrum."

In a strongly worded statement, Republican National Committee Chairman Bill Brock accused Carter of having "his priorities mixed up and in the process has displayed again his weakness in dealing with the leadership in Congress."

Brock was commenting on the hiring of Robert T. Griffin to a $51,000-a-year position in the office of White House adviser Robert S. Strauss. Griffin, a close friend of O'Neill's, was fired last week as deputy administrator of the General Services Administration.

Break Time, Raleigh Style

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — What was supposed to have been a discreet, amorous meeting under a helicopter pad atop a state office building Friday morning turned out the most talked-about event of the day among workers in a nearby building.

Witnesses said a man and woman slipped onto the roof of the state Administration building in downtown Raleigh shortly after 10 a.m., went under the governor's helicopter landing pad and became intimate.

About a dozen state employees who work on the top floors of the Albemarle Building, located about 150 yards to the north, watched the encounter.

"It was about break time, if you get what I mean," said one secretary who watched from the 11th floor of the Albemarle Building. She said the intimacy lasted about five minutes.

"Well, let's just say his pants weren't in their respective place," said another employee whose view was partially blocked by a vent on the roof. He added, "I just kept wondering what would have happened if the governor had landed while they were there."

An anonymous caller tipped State Capitol Police, but officers found only a man, fully clothed, atop the building. Although authorities said the identity of the man involved was known, but no action would be taken against him.

The roof and underpinnings of the helicopter pad, used by Gov. Jim Hunt and other high-level officials, are clearly visible from the top floors of the taller Albemarle Building.

Market Is Up To Expectations

As the first week of tobacco sales concluded the market seemed to be living up to quality and price expectations, although there was a slight price weakening on Thursday.

Following Thursday's sales, the big Eastern Belt had sold 19,497,657 pounds for $23,420,771 to average $120.12.

Greenville's Thursday average was $115.72 and Farmville's was $119.67.

In all cases the averages were far ahead of last year's.

Possibly even better prices are ahead. On Wednesday the Georgia-Florida Belt, where better tobacco grades are now coming on the markets, averaged $150.43.

Better quality tobacco seems to be the rule throughout the southeast. Buyers are paying well for it and little tobacco is going to Stabilization.

Nursing School Became Key Mission

Maybe not everyone noticed, but the ECU School of Nursing awarded its first Master of Science in Nursing degree Friday.

The graduate degree was instituted by the School of Nursing last fall, and ten more master's degrees will be awarded in December.

The ECU School of Nursing was the university's first major venture into the health field, an area which has become a major mission.

The nursing school now has one of the outstanding undergraduate programs in the south. Certainly we can expect that the graduate program will uphold the tradition of quality that has been established on the undergraduate level.

Bus-Use Not For Elderly

By BILL NOBLITT
 RALEIGH — It now appears that when the General Assembly passed a law authorizing local school boards to allow use of school buses by the elderly it was more a sentimental gesture than a logical piece of legislation.

Actually, say specialists, not many old people will be traveling on the yellow buses which can be made available for special trips.

Ignored in the decision were factors which effectively eliminate such activity: the buses have seats designed for young posteriors with little padding or width, hardly any leg room, no air conditioning, high steps, governors which keep speeds below 35 miles an hour, and a suspension system not designed for comfort over any distance.

The result, says one transportation expert, who by age would qualify for a ride: "If I rode on one of those things for 100 miles, they'd have to carry me off."

Heresy

Tar Heels who depend upon the almanac as a planting guide will be upset with Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham. He told students at a North Carolina Cooperative Council youth camp at White Lake that farmers can't rely on the moon and signs.

"A modern farmer must be a skilled agronomist with a knowledge of business administration, sound management practices and techniques of salesmanship and marketing", Graham contended.

True, but seed planted in the dark of the moon still won't come up, say the old-timers.

Both Ways

North Carolinians are beginning to worry that a proposed Balanced Economic Growth Policy for the state will necessarily mean that if one area gets special treatment, another will lose something.

BILL NOBLITT

The head of the department of economics at East Carolina University has spoken out strongly on the issue. Louis H. Zincone believes the plan should be stronger in protecting natural resources and the environment, takes way local control in favor of state decision-making, and will tilt toward more growth for the Piedmont and urban section.

Seafood Park

Dikes are under construction so dredging can begin at what will become the nation's most advanced and elaborate seafood industrial park at Wanchese Harbor on Roanoke Island.

The 15-acre harbor to be built will be surrounded by seafood handling facilities constructed in the park being developed with state and federal funds totalling nearly $5 million.

Local Promotion

Got a bright idea on how to promote travel and tourism in your area? The state can provide grants of up to $5,000 per project to "help initiate new and innovative promotional activities on a local and regional level", says Commerce Secretary D. M. (Lauch) Faircloth.

The state has $94,000 in matching funds for non-profit groups promoting travel and tourism. Applications are due before Sept. 15. In the past, the program has provided $383,000 to 166 promotional projects, including brochures and pamphlets, billboards, movies, advertising, etc.

Sunday Morning Notes

The War Between the States seems far off to present day Americans. There have been other fights since with outside enemies which have united us as a nation.

Except for reading about it in the history books it is almost as if the internal United States strife never happened.

It was very real, however.

and it vitally affected the lives of our ancestors who lived and worked in this very area.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Carter vs. Teddy And Tip

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
 WASHINGTON — The rare feat of provoking angry attacks from Teddy Kennedy and Tip O'Neill in one day was not really the apotheosis of Jimmy Carter's incompetent presidency but instead an attempted return toward the politics that propelled him into the White House.

President Carter was fully aware of the consequences of firing Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill's pal from the General Services Administration (GSA) and rejecting Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's national health insurance program. He decided that now was the time to present his own profile of courage: a president with a mind and principles of his own.

To some veterans of his 1976 campaign, the double jeopardy of alienating Kennedy and O'Neill was a watershed for Mr. Carter.

After 18 months of trying to appease conflicting constituencies in the Democratic coalition, the president was back to a broad-based appeal transcending those special interests. After so many "comprehensive" programs (tax reform, welfare reform, consumer protection) were dispatched to a deep grave on Capitol Hill while placating liberal pressure groups, the president this time marched to his old drummer.

The problem at the scandal-torn GSA stemmed from incompatibility between administrator Jay Solomon, appointed by Mr. Carter, and his career bureaucrat deputy, James Griffin. "We had to fire one of them," a presidential aide told us. "Were we going to fire Carter's man or O'Neill's man?" At issue was whether Mr. Carter is really president.

Health insurance posed tougher questions. The expensive Kennedy plan, supreme legislative goal of organized labor, has been under intense fire by the president's economic advisers. Its huge cost would make Mr. Carter's anti-inflation fight no longer credible. In private meetings, Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal put down proposed cost-control schemes as laughable.

But White House hand-wringers warned of a vengeful Kennedy, backed by labor, gaining retribution by running against Mr. Carter in 1980. In response, advocates of the old Carterism replied that a dramatic show of independence is just what the president needs.

Once the administration accepted the principle of the patient paying part of his medical bill even under national health insurance, support from the AFL-CIO's George Meany and the United Auto Workers' Douglas Fraser was lost. Still, there was hope until the end that Kennedy could be brought along.

That is why the president did not unveil his plan as a preemptive strike, but instead courted Kennedy with a private briefing July 28. Angered, the senator would not accept anything less than a comprehensive bill, informing Mr. Carter he would publicly disavow the program before it was announced.

The quiet Carter-Kennedy confrontation followed that morning's noisy breakfast where O'Neill bellowed to the president he was "breaking diplomatic relations" with the White House. It was interpreted throughout this city that the inept Carter presidency had managed to alienate the two most powerful men on Capitol Hill in a single morning.

The speaker was still breathing fire after the weekend. Kennedy was characteristically less ferocious, but had inspired dire forecasts within Mr. Carter's own administration. One assistant secretary told us the president's course will "polarize the party" and conceivably cost him the 1980 presidential nomination. What, then, should the president do. "Do what Teddy wanted," the Carter appointee replied.

However, this official, like many others in the administration and the White House itself, probably would desert who perceives only two sides — for health care or against it! he still hoped

Other Editors Say 44-Game Hitter

Greensboro Daily News

It was inevitable. Pete Rose's consecutive game hitting streak had to end sometime. And Tuesday night it did, at 44 games — against the lowly Atlanta Braves, ironically, where in the process of trouncing the mighty Reds, 16-4, Rose twice hit the ball on the proverbial nose, but was unable (in the words of the immortal Wee Willie Keeler) to "hit 'em where they ain't."

But Rose went out with class. After rookie pitcher Larry Mc Williams made a lunging stab of his second inning liner up the middle, Rose clapped his hands in appreciation of the nifty defensive play. And, after striking out in the ninth inning, a disappointed Rose managed a smile for the fans.

Joe Dimaggio's consecutive game hitting streak of 56 remains the most impressive record in baseball history. Babe Ruth's 60 home runs in one season seemed unobtainable at first, but then Hack Wilson clubbed 56 in 1930, Jimmy Foxx hit 58 in 1932, and Hank Greenberg blasted 59 in 1938. Finally, 34 seasons later, Ruth's record fell when Roger Maris hit 61 in 1961. Ty Cobb's 1915 record of 96 stolen bases lasted 47 years before Maury Wills scampered for 104 in 1962. Wills' record was then beaten a dozen years ago when 35-year-old Lou Brock stole 118 in the 1974 season.

But in the 27 years since the Yankee Clipper set his 56-game streak, no one — until Pete Rose — really came close. And Rose didn't quite get four-fifths of the way there.

Yet hustling Pete Rose, so different in style from the graceful and elegant Dimaggio, has displayed some of the most impressive hitting skills in years. Efforts such as his remind us of the beauty that is baseball. Because of the massive archives of baseball statistics, both lovingly and compulsively maintained through the years, you can witness on a humid, lazy summer evening a man competing simultaneously with the opposing team and with the performance of a legend who set an incredible, perhaps unobtainable record back in 1941. The year Pete Rose was born.

At one time there were indentations which were said to be the remnants of Civil War trenches thrown up on what is now the ECU campus. The trenches faced east to guard against a Yankee attack from Washington, which had been occupied by Federal troops.

And today a little stone marker stands in the Cherry Hill Cemetery on Pitt Street.

The inscription on it reads: "The ashes of 14 unknown soldiers dying in and around Greenville now repose here. Sleep soldier sleep... thy warfare o'er."

Carl Whitfield, the governor's safety representative stationed in Greenville, attended a meeting in Winston-Salem recently.

A golf course was available and Whitfield decided to play the par 36 nine-hole course during his spare time.

He played three holes, shot a 31 and gave up in disgust.

Returning to the club house, he was asked by some of the regular golfers what

Share Illusion Of Good Times

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
 NEW YORK (AP) — One of the diabolical consequences of inflation is that it encourages people to live an illusion of good times.

It's happening now, every day, all about us.

People who know better muffle their conscience and raise their lifestyle when the breadwinner gets a 6 percent raise, rationalizing their debts by telling themselves they've waited long enough.

"Isn't this what it's all about?" they say. "This is America. You work hard and you deny yourself until you can afford it. When the raises come you owe it to yourself to climb up the ladder."

To do so, of course, you must ignore the reality of 10 percent inflation, which leaves you 4 percent worse off than you were. No matter: credit is automatic. Easy credit is resin on the ladder.

That guilty conscience will not, however, permit rest. And so the individual puts some money in the bank, if not for the rainy day then for the needs of the future — education and retirement, for example.

The banks, the mutual funds, the stock market promoters all describe the benefits of doing so. You've seen the ads: son or daughter holding diploma while parents beam; youthful-looking retirees in Florida.

Reality? Unlikely. Illusion? Quite likely. At least while inflation rages. Savings accounts bring 5.25 percent, mutual funds perhaps the same, stocks more or less than that depending upon the choices made.

But little is likely to beat 10 percent inflation, which is about the present rate. It means you lose on savings and many investments. It means you might not be able to pay for education or retirement.

The Investment Company Institute just published a booklet with the usual suggestions and ascending graphs. Then it announced that in the 10 years ending in 1977 the average total return was 4.3 percent.

Poor enough, but consider that this is before deducting for inflation, which exceeded the rate of return. Purchasing power of the dollar actually was halved, and that's before taxes. The net? A loss.

Mutual funds or banks or stock brokers aren't entirely to blame even if they do paint those exhilarating scenes of future bliss. They too are victims of inflation. Everyone is.

Many stocks, corporate bonds, U.S. Treasury bills, Savings Bonds and other investments lost after-tax buying power during that same 10-year period. They had the appearance of winners, the substance of losers.

The Treasury Department's Savings Bond Division was upset with a story two weeks ago that told of Uncle Sam's participation in the illusion, especially in regard to his education and retirement models.

"Isn't it still better to save, than not save?" one official asked. To that a qualified yes. Yes, an investor perhaps would be better off than if he had never saved at all, although that too isn't certain.

Strength For Today

RELY ON BRAKES

Occasionally we see a road sign which advises, "Rely on your brakes instead of your horn."

That is good advice. In the larger context of life it means that we should rely upon our own actions rather than those of others. More specifically, we should control ourselves rather than depending on other people to control themselves. The person who lacks control of his language and temper, for example, is as dangerous to his family as the motorist depending on his horn is to pedestrians in his path. For the good of others, we need self-control.

But we need it for our own good, also. Strength and power are useless until they are controlled. In baseball, the pitcher with speed but no control never gets into the major leagues. And the man who lacks restraint and moderation cannot hope to succeed in society or business.

St. Paul expressed it well when he said, "Every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things."

Observations From Editorial Columns

Judge's Exasperation

Judge Albert W. Cowper was right on target with his recent response to a letter from the State Parole Commission. Parole case analyst Dorothy Jones wrote the judge for his views on possible commutation of the sentence of one Bert Hancock.

Judge Cowper had sentenced Hancock to prison for six to eight years for felonious breaking and entering and felonious possession of burglary tools.

That was back in September, 1974. Paragraph two of the letter to Judge Cowper read: "Inmate Hancock has been on escape since July 6, 1975 and we are investigating his case for possible commutation to a period of time which would make him eligible for parole."

Judge Cowper answered the letter with a question of his own: "Have you people lost your minds?"

His question is a good one. It might even be asked by Bert Hancock, himself, wherever he might be.

Here is a man who was sentenced to a minimum of six years in prison and escaped 10 months later.

And the bureaucracy is now interested in commuting his sentence to a period of time which would make him eligible for parole.

Perhaps some enterprising bleeding heart in the Parole Commission went over Bert Hancock's prison record and found that there had not been a single infraction since that little incident back in 1975 when he escaped.

That, no doubt, would be reason enough to merit consideration of time off for good behavior.

Judge Cowper's exasperation should be echoed by every law-abiding citizen of this state.

And if the Bert Hancock case is consistent with Gov. Jim Hunt's pledge to curb crime in this state, both the governor and the public need to take a long second look at his methodology. — Goldsboro News-Argus

Calling The Kettle Black

Citing a new study which reveals widespread racial discrimination at the Department of HEW. Sen. Jesse Helms has turned the tables on the almighty agency and called upon its indomitable employment practices the agency often imposes on colleges and universities.

Borjas found HEW men earn $2,986 more than women on the HEW payroll, and whites $1,945 more than blacks.

Helms explained he didn't bring the disparities to light to point out embarrassing statistics, but to question the use of such studies.

"Is it not possible", Helms' letter asked, "that the wage differences revealed at HEW may be explained not by past discrimination, but by considering differences in individual ability?"

"These differences have not, and cannot be observed and measured by the statistical methods mandated by HEW. And if such is the case with HEW, is it unreasonable to suggest that this may also be the case when such methods reveal differences at the University of North Carolina?" he concluded.

Today In History

Today is Sunday, Aug. 6, the 218th day of 1978. There are 147 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1945, the atomic bomb was used as a weapon for the first time as the United States bombed Hiroshima, Japan.

the president would end up "for" — that is, backing the "comprehensive" Kennedy bill.

But the corporal's guard of Carter loyalists is delighted with the president's decisions that have angered Ted Kennedy, George Meany and Doug Fraser (with Tip O'Neill as an appetizer). "My own guess is that if Kennedy wants to run he'll run, and how good Carter's health insurance is won't have anything to do with it," one loyalist told us.

He feels the president's backing of a health plan that makes it advantageous for the patient to find the cheapest care suits both the national mood and the stark limits of government resources. Indeed, there seems to be long-range political yield from a program that self-destructs if it proves inefficient.

There is quiet satisfaction over the provocation of Teddy and Tip among aides who regard the president's aborted crusade against expensive federal water projects as no blunder but the path on which he should have stayed. Far from continuing the Carter follies, this may be the beginning of — or a return to — wisdom.

A Conservative View

A Fundamental Law And A Fundamental Faith

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Man's struggle for religious freedom, a struggle that must have begun before Zeus took up residence on Olympus, continued last week in Raleigh, N.C. There the power of the state was pitted against the rights of the individual. Ultimately the U.S. Supreme Court may have to settle the issue.

The case that was tried in a Raleigh Superior Court involves the authority of the State Department of Education over 63 non-public Christian schools. In some respects, the litigation tracks earlier cases in Wisconsin and Ohio, but the North Carolina lawsuit contains some slightly different elements.

This is the situation: Twenty-odd years ago, in a desperate effort to salvage racially segregated education in some fashion, North Carolina adopted a number of laws having to do with private schools. Most of these laws were ruled unconstitutional, but some of them that were racially neutral remained on the books. Among them was a statute giving the State Department of Education power to enforce certain minimum standards of instruction and teacher certification within the non-public schools.

The intent was sound enough. In conjunction with what was known as the Piersall Plan of tuition grants, the statute was possess certain basic competencies necessary to properly discharge the responsibilities of American citizenship."

The regulatory act lay largely dormant on the books until about 1974. The various Christian schools voluntarily cooperated with provisions having to do with safety and sanitation. Then the public school lobby came to life with new proposals having to do with the certification of teachers, and the battle was joined. Early this year, the Christian schools flatly refused to file certain statistical reports. Their principal spokesman, the Rev. Kent Kelly of Southern Pines, publicly renounced the whole plan of state approval. Last week the state took Mr. Kelly and his co-defendants to court.

The Christian schools contend that our nation's fundamental law protects their fundamental faith. The First Amendment, as extended to the states, says there shall be "no law" respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof. To the Christian pastors, their schools are an intrinsic, inseparable part of their church. "Our church educational program is an establishment of religion," Mr. Kelly says. "On Sunday we have Sunday School in which we teach only the Bible. Through the week we have Day School in which we teach science, history, geography, reading, literature, social studies and every other subject as religious instruction with instruction. Both our Sunday School and our Day school are owned, operated, governed and staffed exclusively by the members of our church."

The defendants are not balking at safety and health regulations. These they concede. But they refuse absolutely to accept the principle that the state of North Carolina can approve or disapprove their teachers, curriculum, textbooks or program of instruction. They especially resist the growing trend toward state-supervised "competency" tests, intended to determine what children actually have learned.

Richmond Lattimore, the poet and translator, once defined the essential difference between Western drama and Greek drama. The one ordinarily pits right against wrong; the other pits right against right. In this sense, the confrontation at Raleigh is indeed a classic drama. The justifications for state regulation cannot be dismissed out of hand.

Yet my own sympathies lie with the defendants. I have visited some of the Christian schools, examined their teaching materials, talked with their teachers and ministers. Beyond any question, it seems to me, these schools are predominantly an exercise of religion. I do not see how North Carolina could validly license and certify a Catholic priest. The North Carolina regulatory scheme involves a massive entanglement of church and state. The requested injunction, in my own view, ought to be denied.

Facing South

Florida's Activist On Environmental Issues

MIAMI, Fla. — South Florida — which some deny is part of the South at all, but a northern enclave on southern real estate — is so newly settled that many of its pioneers are still very much alive. One still very much alive — and kicking — is Marjorie Stoneman Douglas, at 88 still active in the fight to save something (anything!) of Florida's natural environment for future generations.

Mrs. Douglas is best known as the author of The Everglades: River of Grass, a classic bit of nature writing that has never been out of print since she published it in 1947, although many of its facts are out of date. She has had a long career as a writer, but emerged in her seventies and eighties as an activist on environmental issues. One of the biggest was the successful fight to save the Big Cypress Swamp, adjacent to the Everglades, in the early seventies.

"Your predecessors gave away Florida land like drunken sailors", she once told Governor Reuben Askew.

She knows whereof she speaks. In her book Florida: the Long Frontier (1967) she chronicles the history of giveaways and cronyism that lured settlers and speculators to the rather forbidding climatic Florida in the old days.

In the twentieth century, Florida has had to contend with, in addition to politicians and developers, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. Mrs. Douglas has taken this group on, too, as well as sugar industry and the South Florida Flood Control District, all of them zealous to ditch and drain land.

"Engineers are nice people", she once said. "They don't beat their wives and they're probably nice to their children, but somewhere very young, they learned that the shortest distance between two points is a straight line and they never forgot it. Whenever you fly over Florida today and see water flowing — whoosh! — in a straight line, you know that the engineers have been on the job."

The only trouble with the engineers' straight lines is they do carry water off —

whoosh! — quickly into the ocean or gulf. Too quickly to allow it to do the job that nature intended, which is nothing less than the sustaining of life in South Florida.

The Everglades acts as a vast natural sponge, absorbing and storing water for the entire region. Rivers, too, in their natural meandering through the land, slow the loss of fresh water and allow it to be stored in lakes and the underground limestone aquifer. The damming of Lake Okeechobee, the draining of Everglades land for farming and the ditching of rivers such as the Kissimmee, mean that South Florida's lifeline is in danger. The damage has been incalculable.

And the amazing thing is that it happened so fast. When Mrs. Douglas first came to Miami in 1915, it was a rinkydink town of 5,000 people fighting heat, moshe shot. Absently minded Whitfield replied that he shot a 31.

The observers were awe struck. Whitfield laughed, and one commented as he left that Whitfield must be a good golfer to come back with such a score.

Of course, it all depends on how many holes you play.

The woman approached a clerk in a local store.

"Are you the one who sold this to my little girl?" the black woman asked, indicating a package.

The clerk braced for an argument. "What's wrong with it?" she requested.

"Nothing's wrong with it," the woman replied.

"Well, why do you want to bring it back?" asked the clerk.

Then the woman explained. "My daughter had five dollars and somebody gave her change for ten. I wanted to bring it back."

And she unfolded a $5 bill and gave it to the clerk.

The clerk looked relieved and said, "Thank you. Not many would do that."

quitoes and boredom in the summer, and living off tourists in the winter. Today, it's a concrete-paved metropolis, a business center for the region and a growing center for international trade with Central and South America.

As the daughter of Miami's first newspaper owner — her father was Frank B. Stoneman, publisher of the Miami Herald — Mrs. Douglas has had a front row seat at this drama. She could have led the life of a society matron; instead she became a reporter for her father's paper, then went on to write articles and short stories for leading national magazines. An opportunity to write one of the "Rivers of America" series led to her book on the Everglades and her involvement with Florida's history and environment — Barbara Deane, free lance, Tampa, Fla. Because of the appreciation, American visitors in Japan often are finding themselves hard-pressed to make ends meet. At the same time, a Japanese tourist here is finding a bus ride or a steak dinner is 30 percent cheaper, even though the price in dollars hasn't changed.

According to the Japanese consulate here, there are about 133,000 Japanese citizens living in the United States, including the 88,000 executives and government officials, their wives and children, and students.

New York bureau chief Hiroshi Fujita of Japan's Kyodo news agency said that only seven or eight years ago, Japanese workers here "used to receive much less than their American equivalents."

Moving Frustrating; But Worse For Child

What could be more frustrating than to look through twenty packing boxes for your toothbrush and find it in your pocket-book—three hours after you finally go out and buy a new one?

Nothing...except trying to communicate with a salesgirl while chewing Dentyne with your lips clenched.

At least that's what I thought before I watched my lonely two-year-old run gleefully toward a sandbox full of children—and not one of them spoke English.

Moving may be frustrating for an adult, but I'm beginning to realize that it's three times as hard on a child. Meg hasn't said much, except that our blue house was crying because we were leaving it. And maybe that's how Phillip and I first suspected a problem.

I mean, when a kid who can talk for four straight hours without gasping more than once for air gets quiet, there has got to be a problem.

Of course, we made an effort to spend more time with her—but that was hard considering we both were already spending twenty-four hours a day with her. In fact, the only means of escaping our very small, very temporary campus apartment was the bathroom.

No, what she needed was a friend of her own age—she could talk to without hand signals. And since there were no new ones to be found in our neck of the woods, we hit upon the next best solution. We took her back to Greenville for a rendezvous with an old one.

Meg was thrilled. The minute her friend Traci crawled into the backseat, Meg caught her in a clench that would have startled Mohammed Ali. When I buckled them into their safety belts—mostly to keep Traci from getting smothered—Meg contented herself with kissing Traci's hand. I don't know whether Traci had a good time, but Meg sure did. Traci couldn't turn her back without receiving a bear hug. We took them to the park, and I had to pry Meg off Traci so that Traci could climb down the monkey bars. We took them out to lunch, and Meg tackled Traci at the cash register.

When they both fell over on the floor and Traci hit her head, they both cried. Only Meg stopped first, and tried to kiss all Traci's tears away.

When we finally took Traci home, she was more than ready to say good-bye, but Meg was not.

"Why does she have to go home?", Meg asked.

"Because she needs a nap, and we have to go back to Durham," I said.

"But I want her to come with us," Meg insisted.

"I wish she could," I said. "But it's just not possible."

She thought a minute. Then bright with the two-year-old logic that makes all things possible, she made a suggestion. "I know, Mommy," she said. "Let's pack her."

Farmer Most Often Named As Unfair Victim

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — Farmers, senior citizens and small businessmen top a list of 12 groups as those not fairly treated by the Carter administration.

These three groups, as well as some of the others on a list handed survey respondents, are named more often today than one year ago, in August 1977.

Last August as many as 42 percent said none of these groups were unfairly treated. Today, the percentage is only half this, 21 percent.

Three in 10 adults (29 percent) currently name farmers as a group not fairly treated by the administration, while 25 percent name senior citizens and a like number (24 percent) name small businessmen.

Last year, only 12 percent of the public singled out senior citizens (up 7 percent), small businessmen (8 percent) and the unemployed (6 percent).

These findings help explain President Carter's decline in popularity since last August, when 66 percent expressed approval of his performance in office. The latest rating shows 41 percent approving, closely paralleling the approval scores recorded in six previous successive surveys taken since mid-April.

Here is a comparison of the latest results with those from last August:

GROUPS NOT FAIRLY TREATED

Groups	Latest	Aug. 1977	Point Change
Farmers	29%	12%	+17
Senior citizens	25	18	+7
Small businessmen	24	16	+8
People like yourself	21	11	+10
Unemployed	20	14	+6
Blacks	11	7	+4

Women	9	7	+2
Welfare recipients	9	10	-1
Union members	5	4	+1
Corporation executives	4	3	+1
Jews	4	1	+3
Catholics	2	1	+1
NONE	21	42	-21

NOTE: Totals add to more than 100 percent due to multiple responses.

Survey respondents were handed a card listing 12 groups and asked this question:

"Which one of these groups, if any, do you think are being unfairly treated by the Carter administration?"

The results reported today are based on in-person interviews with 1,500 adult respondents during the period July 7-10 in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation.

Charged With Conspiracy To Murder

By MICHAEL WEST
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Jeremy Thorpe, the former Liberal Party leader charged with conspiring to murder a male model who says they were lovers, went doggedly on with weekend constituency chores Saturday after hinting he will not resign from Parliament.

As Britain's biggest political scandal in 15 years raged around him, the 49-year-old politician was opening a flower show at Bishop's Nympton, a village in his rural parliamentary constituency of North Devon in southwest England.

At a reception organized by his party's constituency association at the small North Devon town of Lynton on Friday night, Thorpe hinted he will not resign from the House of Commons.

He told reporters: "I have a full range of duties scheduled.

both public and private, and will be continuing with these." He said he would probably make a statement "clarifying" his position, but not this weekend, and added: "The fact that I am continuing my range of duties as a member of Parliament is indicative."

Some five hours before, Thorpe and three others were charged with conspiring to murder 37-year-old male model Norman Scott.

Newspapers splashed an allegation by Scott 2½ years ago that "I am being hounded by people just because of my sexual relationship with Jeremy Thorpe." Thorpe repeatedly has denied the allegation of homosexuality. But increasingly scandalous headlines and the embarrassment of the Liberal Party over the affair forced him to resign as Liberal Party head in 1976. The party, last in power in 1910, polled 18.3 percent of all votes in the last British general election in October 1974. But because of Britain's winner-take-all electoral system it has only 13 seats in the 635-seat House of Commons.

But despite his party's weakness in Parliament, many observers believed before his fall as leader that Thorpe, an old Etonian from the top drawer of society, had the ability and charisma to head a coalition government.

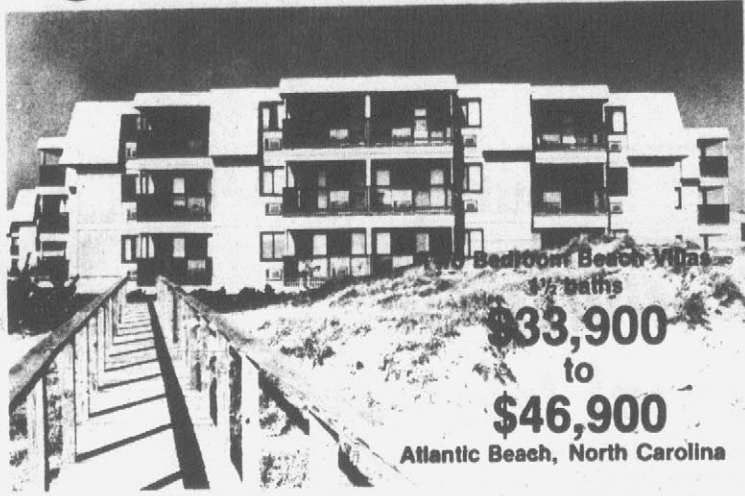

The charge stems from an investigation ordered by Prime Minister James Callaghan's Labor government into allegations made last October by British airline pilot Andrew Newton. Newton told the London Evening News he was hired by Liberal Party sources and paid $9,500 to kill Scott, who lives in North Devon.

Under British law, the accused did not have to enter pleas until a later date. The maximum penalty for conspiracy to murder in Britain is life imprisonment.

After their court appearance Thorpe and the others were each released on $9,500 bail until Sept. 12.

The affair is the biggest political scandal to hit Britain since War Minister John Profumo resigned in 1963 after admitting an affair with call girl Christine Keeler, one of whose other friends was Capt. Eugene Ivanov, assistant naval attache at the Soviet Embassy in London at the time. Profumo's admission nearly toppled Prime Minister Harold MacMillan's Conservative government.

Radio Club To Meet

The Brightleaf Amateur Radio Club held its first regular summer meeting last month, and because attendance showed sufficient interest, an August meeting will be held Tuesday at 7:45 in the Planters Bank basement conference room in Greenville (Third and Washington Streets).

For the past eleven years no meetings were held in July or August due to vacations, but spokesman say since the club membership has increased to over 70 members, the July attendance indicated a necessity for summer meetings.

A program showing operations of new equipment will be shown, also discussion concerning the new club room and equipment will be held.

Dr. Schroeder Expresses Interest

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — Dr. Charles Schroeder, founder of the prestigious San Diego Zoo, says he is interested in the possibility of serving as an interim consultant for the North Carolina Zoo until a new director is hired.

Dr. Jack Snow of Mount Airy, chairman of the N.C. Zoo Council's building committee, recently spent a day with Schroeder in San Diego discussing zoo matters. The two did not discuss the idea of Schroeder serving as a consultant.

However, Schroeder, 78, director emeritus of the San Diego Zoo, said he plans to write Snow that he would "most certainly be willing to come to North Carolina" to help in development of the natural-habitat zoo.

New Evidence On Health Hazard

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A $15 million study financed by six major tobacco companies and sponsored by the American Medical Association has produced new evidence that cigarette smoking is a serious health hazard, the Charlotte Observer reported Saturday.

The newspaper said in this morning's editions that a report summarizing 14 years of research on the effects of cigarette smoking supports the idea that smoking can be a major factor in development of lung, circulatory and other diseases.

It said the report has been completed and will be made public soon.

No Proof On Motivation Charge

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A former state corrections official who has charged his dismissal was politically motivated conceded Friday that he has no conclusive proof.

William C. Brown lost his $24,000-a-year job as North Piedmont area administrator of the state Division of Prisons Monday in the wake of a May 16 sexual attack on two Grimsley High School girls in Greensboro. One of 13 prisoners who were attending a track meet at the school has been charged with the assaults.

Moratorium On Annexation

SPRING LAKE, N.C. (AP) — Spring Lake and Fayetteville agreed this week to their fifth moratorium on competing efforts by the two municipalities to annex Fort Bragg.

The Spring Lake town board voted unanimously to go along with Fayetteville's proposal of a six-month delay in any efforts by either town to try to take the sprawling Army base into its city limits.

Agrees To $135 Million Limit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is proceeding with its new office building after reluctantly agreeing to limit the cost to $135 million, a pricetag that still would make it the most expensive federal building in history.

Critics said that without a limit on spending, the cost of present plans for the Philip A. Hart Senate Office Building — which boasts such luxurious features as 16-foot office ceilings, wood paneling, a gymnasium, indoor tennis court, rooftop restaurant and marble-lined atrium — could have gone far beyond $200 million.

Seven Charged In Drug Seizure

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — Seven persons, charged in connection with the seizure of more than 19 tons of marijuana off the Georgia coast, were being held in the Chatham County Jail today in lieu of bonds ranging from $10,000 to $100,000.

The seven were arrested Friday after drug agents seized the marijuana aboard the shrimp boat Tomahawk, anchored off Tybee Island near Savannah. Officers estimated the value of the marijuana at about $15 million.

out from under the wheel of his Overland automobile and told me to come around and drive home. 'I can't drive,' I said, but he said I could, so I did.

"That same afternoon late I hitched up a horse ready to go to Winterville. 'Put that horse back in the lot,' Mr. Cox said, 'and drive my car to town.'

"I might run it in the swamp," I said.

"If you're goin' in the swamp, I'm goin' with you," Nancy said, and she hopped in beside me.

"When we left Winterville that evening I had to drive in a great big circle because I didn't even know how to put it in reverse. But we got home safe and had a wonderful time."

"One day some time later Miss Jeamsy got to talkin' to me: 'Don't you want a car, Zeb?'

"I got a two-seat buggy and a wagon and a cart," I said.

"But," she said, "sometimes we might wanta go places we can't go in a buggy. You go on down and pick yourself out a car and I'll pay for it."

"So I went to Flanagan Buggy Company and talked to Mr. Flanagan, and he sent Coon Williams out pretty soon with a brand-new 1925 Model-T Ford. Miss Jeamsy sent back with him a check for a little over $400. I kept that car till we wore it out. That was the only one Nancy would ever drive."

"I drove till the state started sayin' folks had to have driver's licenses," Mrs. Heath said. "Then I quit. I had too much to do at home to drive anyway and Zeb'd take me anywhere I really wanted to go."

"I farmed up until 1941," Heath said, "when our youngest son, Earl, (now Farmville resident) went to work. He wanted me to try public work, too. So I did — I worked for Pepsi-Cola, first here and then in Kinston, for another 20 years. I loved my work there and I love all them Minges boys. They're the best people I ever saw to work for. They still come to see us out here."

"They liked me, too, because they knew I gave them a good day's work for their money. I once put up in Lenoir and Jones Counties 290 signs in five weeks, a job that took the man before me five months. The difference, though, was that I didn't take Hoyt's truck and ride around. I got out and dug four-foot-deep hole that would keep them signs where I put 'em."

The Heaths were church-going people in their younger days, first as members of Rose Hill F.W.B. Church and then Parker's Chapel F.W.B. Mrs. Heath still goes to Parker's Chapel and to services in the nursing home, but her husband is confined to their room.

Asked if they're happy in Greenville Villa, Heath said, "Well, I'd like it mighty well if we could still be out in the country, but in our present condition, this is where we need to be. Our children come to see us a lot and the people here are nice to us."

"And we're together. We were in another nursing home for a while that had three people to the room and kept us from roomin' together. I didn't like that a bit and Nancy didn't either. I hope I'm not goin' back to that hospital and that I can just be here with Nancy. I'm all right long as I've got her."

Philippine Concert Chorus To Sing Here Wednesday Night

MEMBERS OF THE CONCERT CHORUS... of the University of the Philippines is shown in a group pose. The chorus, in its only North Carolina appearance during a three-month world tour will sing in the First Presbyterian Church at 8 p.m. Wednesday, August 9. The concert is free and the public is invited.

In its only North Carolina appearance during a three-month world tour, the famed Concert Chorus of the University of the Philippines will be in concert at the First Presbyterian Church, Elm and 14th Street, at 8 p.m. Wednesday, August 9.

Beginning in July, the chorus sang in Tokyo, then began to tour eastward with appearances in Guam, Hawaii, and California. Prior to their Greenville date, they will sing in Dallas and Atlanta, then continue on to Washington; Chicago, Detroit, Boston and New York before heading for engagements in Canada, Spain, France, Germany, Italy, Thailand, Singapore, and then for a last stop in Indonesia before returning home. Host for the Greenville appearance is Bret Watson, a faculty member of the East Carolina University School of Music.

The Philippine Concert Chorus is the recipient of numerous musical awards, including the 1977 Aliw (Entertainment) Award as the Most Promising International Concert Performer (Group).

Rey T. Paguio is musical director, and Mary Hedwig Satuito is the pianist accompanying the chorus. Advisers are Teodoro F. Valencia and Onofre D. Corpuz.

In their Greenville program, the singers will perform the first part of the program in selections from traditional Western music. The second part of the program will consist of compositions by native Filipinos, and will be sung in Tagalog, the official language of the islands.

There is no admission charged and the public is invited to attend.

Movie Revives Memory Of Singer Buddy Holly

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

CLEAR LAKE, Iowa (AP) — He came rockin' and rollin' out of Lubbock, Texas, to live and die a legend. His songs soared up the charts to help shape the music of a generation.

Then, on Feb. 3, 1959, a midnight charter flight slammed into a snow-covered farm field five miles from here and Charles H. "Buddy" Holly — just 22 years old — was dead.

If, as the song says, that was the day the music died, people's capacity to remember hasn't.

The Globe-Gazette newspaper in nearby Mason City still gets requests for reprints of its front-page story on the crash. A movie telling Holly's life story has been released, and will open in this north-central Iowa area this week. And the singer lives vividly in the memories of those who packed Clear Lake's Surf Ballroom the night of Feb. 2 for what was to be Buddy Holly's last performance.

"The crowd just wouldn't let him off the stage that night. It was terrific," recalls Carroll Anderson, then manager of the Surf. "Buddy was a terrific young man."

"I didn't have too much of a chance to talk with Buddy — it was a big show that night. We also had Ritchie Valens, Dion and the Belmonts and, of course, the Big Bopper. Oh, he was a fantastic young man."

Anderson said. The bodies of Valens, who sang "Donna," and J.P. Richardson, the booming-voiced "Big Bopper" who sang "Chantilly Lace," were found near the wreckage of the plane they had shared with Holly. The crash also took the life of a 21-year-old local pilot, Roger Peterson.

Fans were bundled against the cold as they lined North Shore Drive, waiting to pay what Anderson recalled was "$1.50, I think," to get in.

"That was the thing then," said Tom Gilles, one of those who bought a ticket. "You'd go down to the Surf, dance up a storm, then go home at midnight. But most of the time they didn't have this kind of name."

Buddy Holly, who had 45 hits during his brief career, combined the country sound of the 50s with a driving rhythm-and-blues beat to create songs like "Peggy Sue," "It's So Easy," and "That'll Be The Day."

"Buddy was on around 9:30 and again at 11:30. We shut down at midnight then," Anderson said. "I think his shows were set to run about 20 minutes, but the kids wouldn't let him leave. Buddy was right at his peak."

When the concert did end, Anderson said, "Valens, the Bopper and Buddy were ready to leave. They had been on the road six weeks at that time and had three more to go.

"We settled up right then. It was something around $1,000 for Buddy Holly, maybe $850." From the Surf, Holly, Valens and Richardson went to the Mason City Municipal Airport where they had chartered a plane owned by the Dwyer Flying Service.

It was to be a 3½-hour flight to Fargo, N.D., the nearest airport to Moorhead, Minn. — the next stop on their winter tour. The four-passenger Beechcraft Bonanza took off shortly after 1 a.m.

When no word was received of the plane's arrival, flying service owner Jerry Dwyer set out to look for the party. But he was delayed for several hours by early morning fog.

Then, at 9:30 in the morning of Feb. 3, the plane's twisted wreckage was found in a cornfield a few miles northwest of the airport.

"That day, at school, it was like a morgue," recalled Robert Elsberry, then a high school freshman who went to the concert the night before.

Hirschhorn Shows Moore's Sculpture

By MIKE FEINSLBER
WASHINGTON (UPI) — To welcome the dean of modern sculpture into his ninth decade, the Hirschhorn Museum and sculpture Garden opened a take-another-look exhibit last Sunday of its 55 works by Brian's Henry Moore, famous for sculpture with a hole in it.

The exhibit opened on Moore's 90th birthday and will run through September 22.

Four of the museum's works by Moore were too big to move and remained outdoors but the exhibit marks the first public showing in its entirety of the Hirschhorn's collection of his works.

They were contributed, along with the rest of his collection, by uranium millionaire Joseph Hirschhorn.

The Hirschhorn owns more Moore sculptures than any institution in the United States, though not as many as the Toronto Art Gallery. They were made over nearly half a century — the first in 1928 and the newest, the huge "Two-Piece Reclining Figure: Points," purchased in 1974 for the museum's opening. It rests outside the Hirschhorn.

Moore came to Washington this year to supervise the installation outside the National Gallery's new East Building of "Knife Edge Mirror Two," believed to be his largest work.

Many of those on display are his small works. These are little known compared to the huge sculptures of reclining figures that are his trademark and are landmarks in public places throughout the world.

His sculptures are known for their holes, unstartling now but revolutionary when he introduced them in 1929.

His works are chiefly based on the human figure and he has said that the mother-with-child theme almost has been an obsession.

In its catalog to its show, the Hirschhorn asks for a fresh appraisal of the Moore, no longer a radical artist.

Initially his shapes and spaces "were strange and unsettling, requiring a new receptivity and concentration," the museum said.

"Now, however, we have become so well acquainted with his style that we are called on to overcome not its strangeness but its familiarity ... It is too easy simply to identify a piece as 'a Moore' and stroll on by, without granting it the hard looking that will fully unlock it."

Moore, son of a mining engineer, still lives in the same house in Much Hadem, England, that he always has. His monumental works command upwards of half a million dollars.

INDIAN ARTS — A circular house, a woven basket, and Indian costumes are in evidence in this photograph of two native American girls. The two are shown preparing food in the Wampanoag Summer Settlement of Plymouth, Massachusetts. The Indians last week re-created their ancestors' celebration of the year's first harvest. Dancing, singing, games and feasting highlighted the festival. (AP Laserphoto)

Fort Macon Events Listed

FORT MACON STATE PARK — In addition to daily tours of 150-year old Fort Macon at 11 a.m., 1 and 3 p.m., other events are scheduled throughout the week. Those on the calendar for today and the coming week are:

— Today, 3 p.m. — Catch A Wave. An experiment in learning to ride a "Boogie Board" in the surf while finding out about the coastal environment. Currents, tides, waves, and sand movement will be discussed by a member of the park staff.

Those attending are to meet at 3 p.m. at the lifeguard stand. (This program will be repeated at the same time on August 13).

— Monday, August 7, 10 a.m. — (Two Events) — "Say Hello to the Ocean" and "Let's Go Fish'n." The first program is designed to teach young children to learn to play safely at the beach. Featured are pointers on how to become acquainted with the water, the tides, waves and currents, and safety rules. Instructors are park staff lifeguards. "Let's Go Fish'n" covers salt water surf fishing and the use of equipment.

— Wednesday, August 9, 3 p.m. — Plants and Animals of Roosevelt Natural Area. Staff naturalist Mark Joyner will lead an exploration tour along the Hoffman Nature Trail that winds through ancient dune ridges and moss-draped live oak forests, over fresh water ponds, and along the salt marsh. The tour will be preceded at 3 p.m. by a slide presentation to be held in the N. C. Marine Resources Center, Pine Knoll Shores. The walk will begin at 4 p.m. at the wooden bridge at the corner of the parking lot. Bringing along insect repellent is recommended. This tour will be repeated on August 23.

— Friday, 11 a.m. — Let's Go Fish'n.

— Saturday, August 12, 9 a.m. — Edible and Medicinal Plants. A discovery tour of plants, led by a park staff.

All the events are free and open to the public.

Premiere Today For 'American Requiem'

MANTEO — "An American Requiem," an original choral work written by Rosalind MacEnulty, Music Director and arranger for "The Lost Colony," will have its North Carolina premiere at 4 p.m. today in the Mount Olive Methodist Church in Manteo.

According to the composer, "An American Requiem" combines an innovative use of ancient Latin requiem text with modern English poetic interpretations.

The composition is dedicated to the memory of Mr. Hal Furr, Mr. Johnny Long and Mrs. Evelyn Russell Layton.

Composer of the music for the first act of "The Lost Colony," Ms. MacEnulty holds a Master's Degree in music education from the University of Florida and is music director of Theater Jacksonville. A woodwind ensemble from East Carolina University will accompany the 39 voice choir performing the work. Members of the ensemble are Harold Jones, percussion; Lauri Nicholson, clarinet; Vince Pitt, bassoon; and Ann Seal and Carolyn Smith, on flutes. Ms. MacEnulty will accompany the ensemble on the church's organ.

Members of the choir are drawn from the cast of "The Lost Colony" and from residents of the community. One of the singers, bass Andy Griffith, played Sir Walter Raleigh in productions of the early 1950's.

New Show Opens Sunday, Aug. 13

An exhibit of paintings and drawings by Fred and Annette Williams Brooks, a husband-wife team, will open at the Greenville Art Center on Sunday, August 13.

A reception will be held from 3 to 5 p.m. to honor the artists. The public is invited and refreshments will be served.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

Joe R. Stines

For many children summer is a time of leisure reading, and the Children's Library is constantly adding new picturebooks and suspenseful juvenile novels to meet the reading interests of these children.

One such picturebook is LIZA LOU AND THE YELLER BELLY SWAMP by Mercer Mayer. If it's devils, gooblygooks, witches or haunts you're seeking, then you must join Liza Lou down by the Yeller Belly Swamp. Her mother calls her "Apple Dumpling" and warns her about the dark creatures who lurk among the weeds and bushes of the swamp. But Liza Lou can outwit the best of them. Her adventures are humorous and colorful. Her sweet rhymes-amusing.

"Yeller belly cottonmouth,
Possum up a tree
You can catch the swamp fever
But you can't catch me"

This delightful book published by Parent's Magazine Press will provide adventure and laughter for readers of all ages. Mercer Mayer's illustrations have never been more expressive.

Ezra Jack Keats has a new picturebook entitled THE TRIP. Remember Louie, the shy boy who would only talk to a puppet named Gussie, from Keat's last book entitled LOUIE. Well, Louie is back. He has moved to a new neighborhood where he knows no one. He builds himself a magical picture box which allows his imagination to travel back to his old friends. His day dream ends just in time for Halloween and a band of new and interesting friends.

Keat's use of collage and bright colors give special life to this work. Much of the adventure found within THE TRIP lies within its illustrations rather than its storyline.

For the older reader (grades 4-6), Betsy Byars has a new novel entitled THE CARTOONIST. This is a funny and poignant story of Alfie and his special room which could be reached only through a trap door in the living-room ceiling. No one ever entered Alfie's room except Alfie. Every evening, when he was supposed to be doing his homework, Alfie would be in the attic, drawing cartoon. His mother would be watching her TV quiz show before dinner, while Pap, his grandfather, was out on the porch reading yesterday's newspaper, yellow magic marker in hand to circle important news items, cursing the government at every page.

Alfie's attic room and his cartoons were what kept him going. But then one day his mother announced that Bubba, his older brother, had lost his job and that he and his wife were coming home. Alfie's only domain—his attic—was being threatened, and his world, the world of cartoons, was threatened too.

Join Betsy Byars as she tells of a boy's determination to protect his private space and his private dreams. THE CARTOONIST is humorous as well as entertaining.

Unpublished Manuscripts Found In Sandburg Home

FLAT ROCK, N.C. (AP) — Boxes and files are filled with letters, notes, manuscripts of poems and children's stories that have never been published and other papers of the late poet, Lincoln biographer, folk singer and story-teller Carl Sandburg.

They were found scattered throughout the main house and the Swedish House at the Carl Sandburg Home National Historic Site.

The materials are being indexed by Penny McJunkin of Richmond, Ind., with the help of some Youth Conservation Corps girls. Their work is being financed by an $18,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities and one from the National Park Service which administers the site.

"We have already filed 2,000 letters and have several thousand to go," said Mrs. McJunkin. "We don't have a full count of them yet, but there are boxes full of them from both houses and separating them is a problem."

Mrs. McJunkin has set up two filing systems for the letters one containing letters filed under the names of more famous individuals, the other under simple alphabetical headings.

They also include Mrs. Sandburg's goat breeding files, which are far more orderly than Sandburg's papers and records.

"He was a saver," Mrs. McJunkin said. "He has envelopes filled with news clippings. He appeared to be interested in many other peoples' writing."

She said the boxes were found in closets, hidden in corners, from the basements to the top floors of the two houses.

The list of letters in the files reads like a "Who's Who" of the political, literary and entertainment worlds.

Staton House Firemen Hold Open House

Open House will be held at the Staton House Fire Department today from 2 to 5 p. m. The public is invited to view the new three bay fire station located on N. C. 11 north of Greenville. This station, located on the site of the original Staton House Fire Station houses four trucks. The second station, located on the Staton Mill Road, houses two fire trucks. According to the chief, Darrell Williams, Staton House Fire Department was formed soon after two tragic fires in the area, the burning of the Frank Taylor homeplace about six miles north of Greenville June 8, 1960 and the destruction of a packhouse on the Wadie T. Carson farm one week later. People from four communities north of Greenville — House's, Staton's Mill, John's Town, and Mount Pleasant — attended a meeting and laid plans for the purchase of a fire truck and the setting up of a volunteer fire department for the protection of the area.

H. Hagan. There were 20 volunteer firemen. The first truck which cost something over $1,700 was financed by public donations and purchased from the state. It was kept at Harry Cooke's Store. Later a new truck costing $2,600 was added.

Taylor Farm seven miles north of Greenville. The purpose was to keep a truck within four and a half miles from members at all times. The Department's activities are financed by public contributions and the annual fundraising barbecue dinner. Staton House was the first rural fire department in the county. Present officers are Darrell Williams, chief; Milton Spain, assistant chief; and Danny Williams, George Jackson, Norman Pollard, E. J. James, Dalton Davenport and Jimmy Bell, director. There are 34 active firemen on roll, Williams said.

To Restore Masonic Hall

HAMILTON — The Historic Hamilton Commission, Inc., has announced plans to move and restore the Conoho Masonic Lodge building located in the town of Hamilton in Martin County. Mr. and Mrs. R. Hilton Everett, who presently own the building, are donating it to the Historic Commission. Another Hamilton couple, Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Johnson, Jr., are donating a lot on Liberty Street to which the building will be relocated. The lodge is a Greek Revival temple-form building constructed about 1850 on the west side of Front Street where Waldo Street is now located. W. W. Sherrod gave the property on which the building was built to Conoho Lodge and stipulated that a two-story building was to be built on the property, with the first floor to be used by the Hamilton Female Institute and the second floor to be used by the Masonic order and the Sons of Temperance. The building was moved to its present location on Horton Street about 1950 and has recently been used for storage. It is one of very few Greek Revival lodges remaining in North Carolina. Much of the interior detail is either intact or sufficiently evident to be accurately reproduced. In recognition of the building's importance, it is being nominated to the National Register of Historic Places. A number of gifts and pledges have been made to the Historic Commission in support of the project. Anyone interested in more details of the building and plans underway are to contact Mrs. Beth M. Craft, Hamilton Historic Commission, Hamilton, N. C., 27840.

Watson Leads By Five In The Rain

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

OAKMONT, Pa. (AP) — Tom Watson, his mop of red hair glistening wetly in the steadily drizzling rain, pulled away from the field with a gaudy, 4-under-par 67 and established an all-but-insurmountable 5-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the 60th PGA National Championship.

Watson, displaying the fire and finesse that has made him heir, apparent to Jack Nicklaus' long-time role as the world's premier performer, left his would-be challengers struggling far behind him with a 54-hole total of 203.

That's an improbable 10 shots below the listed par on the hilly, 6,989-yard Oakmont Country Club course, a famed old layout that sent Nicklaus down the road toward home Friday, a victim of the cut for the first time in a decade of competition in the game's four major tests.

And it put Watson, a leader all the way in this weather-plagued event, in firm command in his bid for a fourth major title.

The lead is so large — matching the biggest ever in this tournament — that it appeared highly unlikely anyone could catch him in Sunday's final round. Watson would have to lose it. No one else could win it. A round of par 71 by Watson would require Jerry Pate, his closest pursuer, to shoot a closing 66 just to tie.

Pate, the youthful winner of the 1976 U.S. Open, scored 7 birdies on his way to that score in the third round and had a 208 total.

"My job is to beat the golf course tomorrow, not try to beat any particular player," said Pate. "I'm not going to try to make up anything and keep hurrying along to look at leader boards. I'm just going to try to beat Oakmont. I can't do anything about what Tom shoots."

Pate, whose effort matched the best score of the tournament, could have been as much as 5 shots better. He had that many putts "actually go in the hole and come back out," he said.

Tom Weiskopf and Joe Inman were next at 209. Weiskopf, who spaced his round with an eagle-2 had to birdie the last 2 holes for a 69. Inman milked out the same score, also closing birdie-birdie with his jittery, grasping-closing-opening putting grip.

John Mahaffey, who lost a playoff for the 1975

U.S. Open and led through 67 holes of the next American national championship, had a solid, no-bogey, 3-under-par 68 that put him at 210.

"You could see a 5 or 6-shot swing tomorrow," he said. "It's that kind of golf course."

But that wouldn't be enough for him. He's 7 behind.

Chunky Craig Stadler, with a 67-211, and Lee Trevino, 70-212, were the only others under par going into the final round.

Johnny Miller, who won the 1973 U.S. Open with a final round 63 on this same course, bogeyed his last two holes for a 72-213.

Ben Crenshaw, who has so often challenged but not yet won in a major event, once again saw his chances disappear for the title he needs to confirm his stature in the game. Gentle Ben, tied for second going into the day's play, struggled to an anguished 75 that actually had him pounding his head in dismay. He was at 215.

Defending champion Lanny Wadkins had the same total after a 72.

Hubert Green, very much in contention through the first two days, fell back with 74-216.

Andy Bean, a three-time winner this season and the year's leading money-winner, had 70-214. U.S. Open title-holder Andy North was 73-220. South African Gary Player, who triggered a string of three consecutive victories with his triumph in the Masters this spring, was 71-219.

Watson, the 1977 Player of the Year and a three-time winner this season, opened the critically day with a 4-shot lead and a little concern about the way he was hitting the ball.

He'd had scores of 67 and 69 but said he wasn't striking the ball well, was scrambling and was "saved by a golden putter."

And he started shakily, taking bogeys on two of the first three holes.

That put him at 4-under par for the tournament and his lead was eroding quickly. A couple of quick birdies put Miller within 2 shots. And when Weiskopf, playing in front of Watson, holed out a 162-yard 7-iron shot for eagle-2, he, too, was within 2 strokes of the lead.

But the gritty Watson, who proved his courage in his dramatic confrontations with Nicklaus in the 1977 Masters and British Opens, quickly rallied. He birdied the next two holes and Weiskopf and Miller each fell victim to a double bogey.

Watson, a Tom Sawyer-type with his copper hair and face full of freckles, made the turn with a 3-shot lead and then began the move that left the rest of the field straggling in his wake.

The 11th went to a routine par.

And then he birdied the next three holes, from 10-12 feet on the 12th, from about six feet after a gorgeous iron shot on the par-3 13th, and from about 18-20 feet after driving into the deep, clinging, wet rough on the 14th.

Suddenly, with birdies on four of five holes, he was 10-under par.

But he missed the green and bogeyed the 15th, then regained the shot with another duce, from some 16-12 feet, on the 16th.

"It was like putting on a billiard table," he said. "I hit ever putt dead center."

Lee Trevino blasts from a sand trap during PGA play. He trails Tom Watson by nine strokes.

Dodgers Snap Losing Streak

By ERIC PREWITT
AP Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Los Angeles Dodgers broke a six-game losing streak behind the shutout pitching of rookie Bob Welch, beating the San Francisco Giants 2-0 Saturday on run-scoring singles by Bill Russell and Ron Cey in the eighth inning.

Welch, 3-0, scattered nine hits, walked two and struck out three in his first complete game as a major leaguer. Welch had to pitch out of a jam in the ninth. After he yielded a one-out single to Terry Whitfield and walked pinch hitter Mike Ivie, he struck out Jack Clark and got Heity Cruz to fly to left.

The Dodgers managed only five hits off Giants right-hander Ed Halicki, 5-6, but three of them came in the eighth. Russell singled to left field with two out, scoring Johnny Oates from second base to break a scoreless tie, and went all the way to third on some sloppy fielding.

the ball before throwing toward home, and third baseman Darrell Evans, the cutoff man, threw wildly over second base for an error as he tried to throw out Russell.

Oates had opened the inning with a single and gone to second on Welch's sacrifice.

Russell scored from third base on Cey's infield single after Reggie Smith was walked intentionally.

The Dodgers' losing streak had dropped them 4½ games behind the Giants who lead the National League West, but their victory Saturday moved them back to within 3½.

Welch was making his first appearance against the Giants and just his fourth start in the major leagues. Halicki went into the game with a lifetime record of 8-4 against the Dodgers.

Another big Candlestick Park crowd, 49,203, was boisterous as usual with the Dodgers in town and the visitors protested loudly over an incident in the bottom of the third.

Smith was showered with a cup of beer as he went into the right field corner and up against the grandstand wall going after a long foul ball hit by Evans.

Evans ended the third, leaving runners at second and third, by flying out to left fielder Dusty Baker who made a fine running catch.

With one out in the San Francisco third, Halicki singled. Bill Madlock fouled out before Jim Dwyer doubled to right to create the Giants' first scoring threat.

Clark, the Giants' leading hitter, was not scheduled to start because of a jammed knee suffered the night before, but Giants Manager Joe Altobelli used Clark in the ninth as a pinch hitter. The Dodgers' Bill North, scheduled to start in center field, was scratched from the lineup because he pulled a hamstring chasing a would-be burglar at his home in Oakland Friday night.

Saints Top Eagles

By GORDON MOTT
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Wes Chandler's 92-yard punt return and Tom Meyers' interception of a Mike Cordova pass led the New Orleans Saints to a 14-7 preseason football game victory over the Philadelphia Eagles Saturday.

The Eagles took a 7-0 lead into the second half, but Chandler took the first punt of the half on his own eight-yard line and went all the way for the score. Tim Gibbons kicked the extra point.

On the next series of downs, Meyers intercepted a Cordova pass intended for split-end Wendell Williamson and returned it 32 yards to the 24-yard line of the Eagles.

Seven plays later, running back Chuck Muncie scored from the two-yard line. Gibbons added the conversion making it 14-7.

In a unanimous decision, referee Waldemar Smith of Puerto Rico had Corro ahead 145-143, judge Juan Jose Guerra of Mexico scored it 146-145 for Corro and judge Jesus Cellis of Venezuela had it 146-144 in favor of the champion.

The 15-round fight was mostly a tactical, defensive battle with more infractions than solid punches. Neither boxer appeared tired at the end, although Harris spent the better part of the battle dancing away from the champion.

Now They Argue: Was Rose's Streak Tougher Than Joe's?

By NORM CLARKE
AP Sports Writer

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Joe DiMaggio-Pete Rose debate is on.

Never mind that Rose's 44-game hitting streak ended 12 games shy of DiMaggio "unbreakable" record of 56 straight.

The assault on baseball's safest record raised a question that will be eternally argued:

Was Rose's streak, the second best in major league history, accomplished under more difficult circumstances?

—Rose did it at age 37 —

when most ballplayers are creaky relics — and in a season when National League pitching was regarded at its finest in years.

—DiMaggio, 26 then and out of baseball at 36, was blessed with superior speed and didn't have to face fresh relief specialists armed with a vast arsenal of "out" pitches.

"If someone wants to make comparisons that's fine. But I'm not going to," said the Cincinnati Reds star.

"I will say this. Joe DiMaggio had to be a great hitter. I think he was good enough that he could do it against today's pitchers.

"But the guy who beats him is going to have to be a guy like me — a guy with the advantage of being switch hitter who makes contact. When you've got guys like Houston's J.R. Richards and Steve Carlton around, it almost has to take a switch hitter."

"It's possible, but not probable. It takes a hell of a lot of luck," said Rose, who maintains he had little of the latter during his bid.

Ironically, both started their

Nancy Lopez Pulls Into Stroke Lead In European LPGA Tourney

By ROBERT JONES

SUNNINGDALE, England (AP) — Nancy Lopez and Betty King, both in their first year as professionals, Saturday moved to the top of the field in the European Women's Golf Championships here, Lopez snatching a one-stroke lead at the end with a 6-under-par 216 for three rounds.

Lopez, 21, has already won seven major tournaments this year. King, who will be 23 in one week, hasn't won one yet. But Saturday she surged through the field from her 2 under par starting point, at one time was 7 under, and finally finished at 217, 5 under.

Lopez teed off this morning 4 under and only one stroke behind joint leaders Vivian Brownlee and Sally Little. But both Brownlee and Little faded during the day, leaving Lopez with a clear run to the top.

Lopez had an adventurous round that mixed six birdies with four bogeys and proved conclusively she has fought her way out of her recent slump.

She started with a pair of birdies through the first three holes, aided by putts of seven and 10 feet, got herself bunkered twice for a couple of bogeys and finished the outward nine with a birdie on the eighth. That was the hole where she took a triple bogey in the first round.

"It owed me that," she said.

Coming home, Lopez was on the green in two and two-putted for a birdie on the par-5 10th, then hit a fine tee shot on the 295-yard, par-5 11th, used a pitching wedge from the edge of the green to run up to the cup but failed to run the ball more than a couple of yards.

She then two-putted for a 5, "the dumbest bogey you ever saw," she said in disgust.

King started off like a champion with four birdies in the first five holes. Then she momentarily lost her putting touch, two-putted on the sixth for a bogey, then had to take three putts at the next hole after being bunkered with her second.

That cost her a double bogey but then her putter started to sing sweetly again and she collected four birdies with putts of 15 feet, six feet, again from 15 and from eight.

Those four birdies put King at the top of the leader board, but on the par-3 15th she missed the green, overshot with her second and two-putted for a bogey-4. That put her level with Lopez but another bogey on the 18th, when she landed in a trap with her second and two-putted from 10 feet, cost her the lead.

Coming up behind Lopez and King was Murlie Breer, who started one stroke ahead of King and one behind Lopez. She had an undistinguished journey out and turned in a 1-over-par 37 but three birdies on the last four holes earned her a 73 and third place at 4 under.

Little, leader for the first two rounds by virtue of a 5 under par first round, faded badly going out with three bogeys and not a single subpar hole. Coming home she looked like fighting back when she scored three consecutive birdies. But a trio of bogeys spoiled the day for her and she finished fourth, tied with Pat Bradley and Barbara Barrow at 3-under-par 219.

Brownlee disappeared from the pack of leaders with a horrid round of six bogeys and only one birdie to drop five strokes on the round and finish at 222, even par.

But as Brownlee faded, Judy Rankin, the current titleholder and twice a winner here, came into the picture with a third-round 70, lowest score of the day. It was not good enough to make any impact on the leaders, as she started 5 over par after a second-round 79.

Quarterback Situation: There's A Starter Back, But Little Help

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Great strength and possible weakness highlight the position coached by East Carolina University assistant Al Kincaid. His duties are the quarterbacks.

The great strength is the return of co-starter Leander Green from last year's team. The possible weakness in the position is that so far, no one has stepped up to take over the number two position.

"Right now, we only have one quarterback we know can play, one who is proven under fire," Kincaid said in referring to Green, a 5-8, 170-pound junior. "He had a good sophomore year, and a good first half of spring practice before he dislocated his thumb. He was moving the ball better against the defense than ever before."

"But in the second half, after Leander got hurt, the offense found it hard to move the ball against the defense. It was a combination of things, but it shows us how important Leander is to us right now."

During the spring, Green had shown improvement in his passing. "He has a strong arm, but was inconsistent last fall. He can run as anyone around can. But he's not that big, and he needs to stay healthy."

That rings especially true in the light of the fact that no one has shown he wants the number two job.

"It's still up for grabs," Kincaid said. "I think a lot will depend on how hard the others have worked during the summer."

and Henry Trevathan (5-10, 170, Junior). Also on hand is Ernie Saltmarsh (5-10, 187, Sophomore).

The three are among the smartest on the team, Kincaid points out. That appears to be one factor in their favor.

"Steve may be mechanically better than Leander, but Leander overcomes his weaknesses with speed and quickness," Kincaid said. "Steve has to improve his throwing. Not throwing well at times affects his whole game. There is no reason he can't be a good quarterback."

Trevathan had a good spring, and that could help him along. "He was behind because he missed last spring with an injury. But he's improved tremendously and is almost the equal of Steve. He's sound mechanically, throws well, but doesn't have the speed of the others."

Saltmarsh played with improvement and has a good arm, but lacks great speed. "He still doesn't know the offense that well either," Kincaid said.

Also returning is Tony Tripp (6-2, 200, Junior), who has been inconsistent. "He's our biggest and strongest quarterback, and if he ever gets consistent would have a chance to help us."

Through the four returning back-up men, it come through the through—and come through quickly in the fall, the Pirates may look to an incoming freshman to fill the role.

"We've signed three," Kincaid said. They are Jesse Hilton of Enfield, who is described as a lot like Green; John Felton of Edenton; and Mickey Bentley of Pensacola, Fla., who is also a kicker. Jesse Ebert of Rocky Mount is also expected as a walk-on.

"Seeing Jimmy (Southerland—now graduated) and Leander both play, we found that we always had one rested, fresh quarterback in the game. That made a difference in a lot of games in the fourth quarter. We'd like to be in the same situation this fall."

"We don't want Leander to play every series, but someone has to come on to help him. Steve and Henry didn't play as well in the second half of spring practice, and this probably hurt their confidence. But we haven't given up on either of them. We're just waiting for one of them to step forward and take over."

"It would be awfully tough for a freshman to come in and take over," Kincaid added. "so it will probably be up to one of them."

It's Only Funny Before The Race

By JERRY GARRETT
TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — "Hmmm, looks like Cale's crew is over there changing engines," remarked one of Richard Petty's team members. Petty, surveying a half-smoked cigar through pitch black sunglasses, considered the information for a moment, then replied, "Yeah, their other one wouldn't go but 195 mph."

Those sitting around Petty chuckled.

"I wonder if they're just taking their qualifying engine out?" pondered the team member.

"Nah, they're taking out the little engine they qualified with and putting in the big one for the race," Petty deadpanned. "Most guys use their big engine for qualifying and their little one for the race. Junior's boys do it the 'other way around. Keeps ever'body on their toes."

Petty says he's able to kid around about how much faster Yarborough and some of the other drivers in General Motors makes go until the race starts. "Then it ain't funny no more," said Petty, as he prepared for Sunday's Talladega 500, the last race before he switches from a Dodge to a Chevrolet.

Petty qualified sixth fastest, his best in a long time in his boxy Magnum, but he said that effort only emphasizes the problems he's had trying to make the Dodge a winner this season.

"We used every trick we learned so far this year setting the car up for this one. I mean, it's really radical. But after qualifying, I was there running in a draft with Darrell Waltrip at 49.8 (seconds per lap, or about 192 mph). I thought that was pretty good since I qualified at 50.3. But then Cale and Benny Parsons go out and run 49-flat (195 mph)," Petty noted. "If I can hang on to them in the race, I might be all right. But if I can't, it's all over. It's been that way all year."

Even though Petty has been racing Chrysler products almost continuously for two decades, he's decided there are no rules changes ahead likely to help him, and the only thing to do is switch. He's through fighting it.

"For example," he said, "the Chevrolet Monte Carlo is a big car, bigger than say an Oldsmobile. But it's two inches lower in front than a Magnum, and two inches narrower. You can figure that out for yourself — it's already got 140 square inches more frontal area than a Monte Carlo. It's like putting a big wing on the front."

Petty bought a brand new Monte Carlo recently from driver Cecil Gordon and a slightly used Buick from one A.J. Foyt of Hockley, Tex. Petty said the Monte Carlo will be ready to race at Cambridge Junction, Mich. two weeks from now. The Buick will be ready later in the year, "but it may not be a Buick by then," Petty added. It could be a Chevy, or even an Oldsmobile just by changing the body panels.

"The odds are with the GM cars," Petty said. "The majority of the races this year have been won by GM cars. If we've got one, our chances are better. There's no chance with the Dodge — nobody's been doing the job with the Dodge."

In fact, 1978 could be the first year since 1958 that a Chrysler product has not won a Grand National stock car race.

The middle of the year is not the best time to change horses,

Petty said, "but I've got no choice."

"I've already wasted a half year on this thing here," he said pointing to the blue and red Magnum, which looked racy enough. "Wasting a whole year would be twice as bad."

But it gives the Petty operation a lot of catching up to do. "I've got three or four guys back at the shop now working on the car, and three or four working on the engine, and one guy working on something else," said Petty, not elaborating on the "something else."

"It's gonna be hard for us to work it all out in four weeks and have to run against them cats that's been working on it for four years."

Petty, whose only previous experience in GM cars has been his lackluster performances in the International Race of Champions series, explained that he's optimistic his team can be competitive within five weeks.

"That's our goal," he said. "It won't take as long for us to catch up as it did for them to get there. The things they did two years ago are now common knowledge. So I figure that puts us only two years behind.

"We're gonna use each race in that five-week period to learn more about the car. GM cars still got wheels and spindles and motors and rear ends like Dodges, but how they do it is different. I've never driven a car with the suspension set up on four coil springs. And Maurice (his brother and crew chief) has never worked on one. The Dodges and Plymouths all had torsion bars instead of springs. The one year with Ford it was two springs and bars.

"It's gonna be a week-to-week operation. We're gonna learn some things at Michigan that we're gonna be able to start with at the next race. We're gonna improve from there each time out.

"We aren't having too much trouble finding parts. Some of the good stuff they're behind on, but somebody's always got it somewhere, especially if you have enough money. That was always the problem at Chrysler: There was one guy you go to for parts, and if he don't have 'em, there aren't any."

For the next few months, however, Petty will be having a million-dollar garage sale for all those Chrysler parts he's hoarded over the years. He doesn't expect any problems clearing his inventory.

"There are still a bunch of cats running Dodges who can't afford to change over," Petty commented. "They'll be able to buy anything they want now, nothing there's never been nothing of ours that hasn't been for sale — if you had enough money."

So Petty's shops will be filling up with General Motors parts as fast or faster than the Dodge parts leave. But what if the GM cars don't put him back in the Winner's Circle?

What then for the 40-year-old Petty? It's clear he doesn't even like to consider the possibility.

"You can't look nowhere else," said Petty, who is a budding politician, running for the Randolph County, N.C. council this fall. "If I can't win in that, it won't do to go looking for any other thing. There's nothing that's as competitive as a GM car, and no rules changes I can see anywhere ahead that are gonna make it any different."

Does that mean Petty might be a full-time politician next year instead of a race driver, if he doesn't start winning by the end of the season?

It's possible, but not probable. Petty plans to evaluate the situation at the end of the season, although he admits he's already thinking about what kind of car to field in the 1979 Daytona 500.

"I won't measure the success of the season in the number of wins," concluded Petty, a non-winner since July 1977. "If I can be competitive, then I've gained, because I haven't been competitive in the Dodge all year."

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jerry Remy and Dwight Evans lined two-run homers and Carl Yastrzemski added a solo homer and an RBI single, leading the Boston Red Sox to an 8-1 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Saturday.

Dennis Eckersley, 13-4, scattered eight hits as the Red Sox regained a six-game lead over the runnerup Brewers in the American League East.

Remy's first homer of the year, a line drive just inside the right-field foul pole, followed a single by Butch Hobson and gave the Red Sox a 3-1 lead in the third inning. It was the second baseman's sixth homer in 2,068 times at bat in the major leagues.

Singles by Yastrzemski and Carlton Fisk leading off the Boston fourth chased loser Ed Rodriguez, 2-5. Fred Lynn followed with a sacrifice fly and Garry Hancock delivered an RBI single off Randy Stein, as the Red Sox went ahead 5-1.

A walk and Evans' 20th homer made it 7-1 in the sixth and the Red Sox scored again in the seventh on a single by Rick Burleson, a wild pitch and Yastrzemski's RBI hit.

Singles by Robin Yount and Ben Oglivie and a sacrifice fly by Larry Hise gave the Brewers a 1-0 first-inning lead. The Red Sox tied it in the second inning on Yastrzemski's 11th homer of the season.

Hale's Homer Wins Game, 3-2

OAKLAND (AP) — John Hale, batting just .183 entering the game, hit a two-out ninth inning home run Saturday, giving the Seattle Mariners a 3-2 victory over the Oakland A's.

It was Hale's fourth homer of the season, and it came after the A's had broken up a seven-inning one-hitter by Seattle starter Byron McLaughlin.

The victory went to Jim Todd, 1-3, the third Mariners pitcher of the afternoon. Hale's drive over the right field fence was hit off Oakland starter Matt Keough, 7-8.

Seattle scored two runs in the fourth inning on successive singles by Ruppert Jones, Leon Roberts, Bruce Bochte, and Dan Meyer.

The A's tied the game in the seventh as right fielder Joe Wallis led off with a walk and went to third on a two-out single by Dave Revering.

Shortstop Mario Guerrero hit an 0-2 pitch to the right-center field wall for a double, scoring Wallis and pinch runner Miguel Dilone.

CHICAGO (AP) — Gary Carter drove in four runs with a single and a bases-loaded double, and left-hander Ross Grimsley won his 13th game Saturday as the Montreal Expos defeated Chicago 7-4. The loss snapped the Cubs' four-game winning streak.

Carter's RBI single gave the Expos a 1-0 lead in the second inning and his three-run double capped a six-run uprising against loser Dave Roberts, 4-7, in the fifth inning.

Chris Speier drew a walk to open the Montreal fifth but was forced at second on Grimsley's grounder. Dave Cash singled and Andre Dawson doubled to drive in Grimsley. Roberts issued an intentional walk to Ellis Valentine to load the bases before Tony Perez sent a sacrifice fly to deep right field to make it 3-0.

Larry Parrish was walked intentionally to reload the bases for Warren Cromartie, who beat out an infield single and drove in the third run of the inning. Carter then doubled down the right field line to clear the bases and give the Expos a 7-0 lead.

stirred the nation. Rose faced 47 different pitchers — the exact number DiMaggio faced in 56 games.

"The things that give me the most satisfaction is the fact that I'm 37 years old, it came after a 6-for-51 slump and the pitching is better than ever, mostly because of the great relievers around."

He kept the streak intact against 10 pitchers who have been named to at least one of the last three All-Star games: Vida Blue, Steve Carlton, Don Sutton, Phil Niekro, Ross Grimsley, John Montefusco, Tommy John, Steve Rogers, Rick Rhoden and Pat Zachry.

"I honestly believe this is the best National League pitching from top to bottom since I've been in the league. There are no more lambs," said the 16-year veteran.

"A testimony to that statement is that a .321 batting average is leading the league and only about 10 of us are hitting over .300. And 25 homers is leading the league, plus runs scored are way down."

"The year Joe did it (1941), someone (Ted Williams) hit .406," said Rose.

His totals for the streak were led down more intensely. "If you have personal problems, the easiest way to forget them is to hit .320. I just don't believe I can hit .220, no matter what kind of problems I have."

Fan reaction helped spur him on.

"The fans were great," said Rose. "I'd walk down the street in New York and they'd say 'we love Joe DiMaggio, but we hope you break his record.' Nobody said anything nasty. Sometimes there's a voice in the background that says 'you're a bum,' but I never heard any of that during the streak."

We Think You Should Know Why You May Not Get To See A Carolina Football Game This Year

Just a few seasons ago, it was easy to get seats to a Tar Heel Football game at the last minute. Sell-outs were rare and some games were played in Kenan Stadium with more than a third of the stands empty.

During those years, the easy availability of tickets was a convenience for fans and never caused a serious financial problem to the Carolina Athletic Department. Then, almost overnight, the cumulative effect of inflation and a greatly expanded women's athletic program changed all that. Then it did become a problem—a serious one.

That's when you began seeing the sizzling letters spelling "Carolina Fever" on billboards, mailing pieces, TV commercials and newspaper ads beckoning fans to Kenan Stadium. And as they always do, Carolina fans came through in record numbers, filling Kenan to the brim and greatly strengthening the total Carolina Athletic program in the process.

And to our Carolina fans everywhere who have supported Tar Heel Football so magnificently of late, we would like to take this opportunity to extend our deepest appreciation.

Ailing, Angry Bill Walton Is Asking Portland To Trade Him

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — An ailing and angry Bill Walton says he wants out of the team he helped to the 1977 National Basketball Association championship. And the Portland Trail Blazers, taken by surprise, say they'll try to accommodate him.

Ailing with an unhealed foot injury and angry over the way the team handles injuries, Walton was not around Friday when the announcement came from the Blazer office.

In a typically Walton manner, he left a prepared statement with friend-turned-agent Jack Scott and secluded himself with his family.

"He's very angry that he has to leave the best teammates and fans he will ever have. He's angry that the situation was created where he had to do that. I have never seen him so upset and angry," Scott said.

"Money had nothing to do with it. The Trail Blazers offered him a guaranteed contract for whatever he wanted. If they didn't think his injury was going to heal, they wouldn't have offered that."

He said Walton would like to play for one of seven teams — San Diego, Los Angeles, Denver, Philadelphia, Boston, New York or Golden State.

"It's not just Bill," Scott said. Injuries are a part of sports. It's the care and treatment of injuries that are Bill's concern. An athlete's career is very finite. Bill has three or five years or so at his prime to play and he just made the decision that he had to be in an environment that maximized his opportunities to play as a skillful player, which he is."

Walton's statement was anything but angry. It lauded his teammates and the Portland fans.

"This is the most difficult decision I've ever had to make regarding my basketball career," it read. "The tremendous loyalty and support of my teammates and Trail Blazer fans have made the decision that much tougher."

"My only hope is that when I return as an opponent and a visitor that Trail Blazer boosters will treat me with the same respect and love as they always have," the statement said.

Missing from the statement were plaudits for Coach Jack Ramsay, General Manager Harry Glickman or other team officials.

"I think by omission he ex-

More Marks Shattered

THE WOODLANDS, Texas (AP) — Jesse Vassallo says he was entirely too calm Friday night prior to the finals of the men's 400-meter individual medley race at the Amateur Athletic Union Long Course Swimming Championships.

"I asked the coach to put on some music while I was on the rubdown table but it didn't do any good," Vassallo said. "I guess when they started the introductions, I sort of just went crazy."

Vassallo, representing the Mission Viejo, Calif., Swim Club, continued his craziness in the water, zooming to a world record 4:23.39 clocking for his second victory of the meet.

Tracy Caulkins of Nashville, Tenn., captured her third individual championship with an American record 4:47.06 time in the women's 400-meter individual medley.

Caulkins trailed runnerup Nancy Hogshead of Jacksonville, Fla., during the first 200 meters before taking control on the breaststroke leg.

Cynthia Woodhead of Riverside, Calif., was a surprise winner over Stephanie Elkins of Jacksonville, Fla., in the finals of the women's 100-meter freestyle with a meet record 56.73 clocking.

Chartering Bus To Grid Games

The Pitt County Chapter of the East Carolina University Alumni Association will charter bus trips to two away football games. The games are against North Carolina State University in Raleigh on Saturday, September 9 and against the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill on Saturday, September 16.

Setups and light snacks will be provided aboard the bus. Participants will be expected to carry a picnic supper for the lunch or evening meal. The cost is $10 per person each trip. Tickets for the games must be purchased individually from the ECU Athletic Ticket Office. For further information contact Curtis Howell at 752-7166.

pressed his feelings," Scott said. "Who he left out expressed his concerns."

Team officials had no comment other than a one-sentence statement:

"The Portland Trail Blazers announced today that Bill Walton has asked to be traded prior to the 1978-79 season and the club has informed him it will attempt to abide by his wishes," it said.

Ramsay, returning from a Hawaiian vacation, said he was "totally shocked." He said the last thing Walton had said to him was, "Coach, have a good trip. See you when you get back."

Walton's brother, Bruce Walton, said in San Diego that he believed Bill was bitter about pressure to play while hurt.

"He was a little disappointed in the way the foot thing came down. The trainer and doctor said everything was fine and as it turned out he ended up playing half the basketball game on a broken foot."

Walton is represented by Scott and Portland attorney John Bassett. They said Walton made the decision at least a month ago while resting at a health resort in Arizona.

No decision has been made as to where Walton might go, Scott said, although speculation centered on San Diego.

Walton is from the San Diego suburb of La Mesa, Calif., and has in the past expressed a desire to move to a sunny climate.

"Obviously, San Diego is his home town and we'd love to have him," said Irv Levin, owner of the yet-unnamed San Diego team that moved west from Buffalo.

"He's obviously a hell of a ballplayer," said Vice President Irv Kaze. "Who wouldn't like to have a guy like that? But that doesn't mean we got him."

The Denver Nuggets said they aren't interested. In a prepared statement President-General Manager Carl Scheer said "We have not had any contact with Walton or any representative of his. No interest. Period. None."

Los Angeles stopped short of saying they weren't interested, but stressed they have the center spot filled.

"The Los Angeles Lakers already have gone on record that Kareem Abdul-Jabbar is the Los Angeles Lakers' center," said spokesman Shep Goldberg.

In New York, things were different.

"If it's true and he's available, then naturally we're interested," said Knicks General Manager Eddie Donovan.

Bob Bester, public relations director for Golden State Warriors, said the team had not evaluated the situation. "We certainly are not negotiating with Bill Walton — that would be tampering," he said.

Philadelphia said they hadn't been involved — but would be.

"We have to be interested," said General Manager Pat Williams. "Walton is the most valuable player in the game."

"Now I know why they (Portland) were so fervent to trade for the No. 1 draft pick after last season."

Boston President Red Auerbach said he would be in touch with the Blazers. "Everybody wants him. The question is whether you have what it takes to get him. I'll probably call them this weekend."

"Bill is still on crutches. He has had discussions with doctors independent of the Trail Blazers and they say his foot his healing and as long as he's given the opportunity to rehabilitate it in a proper way without undue pressure to play, it will heal fully," Scott said. "But it will take time. He won't be ready for the opening of training camp."

Seahawks Win, 17-9

SEATTLE (AP) — Running back Sherman Smith scored a pair of touchdowns and rookie safety John Harris intercepted two passes and recovered a fumble to lead the Seattle Seahawks to a 17-9 National Football League preseason victory over the San Diego Chargers Friday night.

Smith's two-yard burst over the middle brought the Kingdome crowd of 58,853 to its feet and gave the Seahawks a 7-0 lead with 12 minutes left in the second period. Seattle's leading rusher the past two seasons scored again from four yards with 3:38 remaining for the game's final score.

Jack, Arnie Groan And Head Home; Others Play And Groan

OAKMONT, Pa. (AP) — The pro golf tour is not all gold, glamour and glory. It is also pain and frustration.

Listen to the boys in the horizontally-striped shirts, peacock slacks and gleaming shoes tell it like it is — sometimes, as in the 60th PGA Championship.

"I felt like I wanted to throw up," said Arnold Palmer after shooting 10-over-par 152 for two rounds and missing the halfway cut.

"The wind went out of my sails at No. 12," said Jack Nicklaus, the winningest champion of all-time, after 3 double bogeys that sent him to the sidelines with 79-74-153. "I was 3 under par for the day after 11, and I hit a good drive at the 12th but the ball kicked left into a bunker. Then I hit into a ditch, chopped out onto the green in 4 and 3-putted."

"I wasn't concerned with missing the cut. I was concerned only with getting back in the tournament."

After skying to a rare 79 in his opening round, Nicklaus quipped: "For a while, I wondered if the ball was round."

Slump-ridden Johnny Miller, who fired a record last-round 63 in winning the U.S. Open on this same Oakmont course in 1973, said the skies no longer look as rosy.

"If somebody had told me golf was going to be this tough I would have taken up tennis," Miller said after shooting a 72 for 141. "That stinking driver. I'm not ready. I tried 20 different things on my swing — open stances, closed stances. I'm my own worst enemy. If I were a betting man, I wouldn't bet on me."

Joe Inman, whose 68 put him in a tie with Tom Weiskopf and Ben Crenshaw for second place after 36 holes, 4 behind pace-setting Tom Watson, said:

"People who achieve greatness must go that extra yard — football and basketball players, businessmen, even sports writers. I haven't been able to go that extra yard. I've got to be more motivated. My potential would be better."

Added Weiskopf: "I like this course. It has variety. It keeps me interested. The importance of a major tournament like this is to let it become exciting and hold interest."

Moaned Crenshaw, who felt his second-round 71 should have been better: "It was kind of a struggle all day. I never really got in position. It was a poor day for me. When I hit the greens I was too far away."

Hubert Green, only six shots back at 142, warned about the stickiness of the greens, especially No. 11. "You won't see many guys going to the 12th tee singing 'The Star Spangled Banner,'" he said.

Even the leader, Tom Watson, was not exhilarated. "I didn't hit the ball that well," he said. "I sank two putts of 20 feet and holed out 70 feet from a trap. I was saved by my golden putter. Everything seems to be going my way."

East Coast Goat Is New West Coast Hero

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Irv Levin was a hero in Boston not long ago, but recently — and suddenly — Levin's popularity has hit rock bottom in the East. It's risen just as rapidly in the West.

Levin is the Beverly Hills movie mogul who swapped the Boston Celtics for the Buffalo Braves and moved the Braves to California.

"I was a great hero in Boston until the middle of last year," said Levin, majority holder of the new San Diego entry in the National Basketball Association.

"I remember back in 1976 when we won the world championship and there were 300,000 lining the streets cheering our motorcade. But last year somebody had to take the heat and it was the owner."

The 56-year-old attorney was the owner of the Celtics for three years before completing that controversial swap with Braves owner John Y. Brown that brought the club here last month.

As a result, after seven years of starvation, San Diego basketball fans have a team to replace the ABA Rockets who fled to Houston in a hail of controversy.

The transfer of team ownership between Levin and Brown — complete with its accompanying seven-player deal made worse by the possible exit from Boston of Sidney Wicks — gave Levin the status of a leper in New England.

One Boston journalist recently wrote that Levin was "a con man who had sweet-talked Boston, (then) slid a knife in Red Auerbach's ribs." But Auerbach, the Celtics' president and general manager, says he harbors no ill will.

"Believe me, I've had a lot of owners and Irv Levin is a good guy," Auerbach said in an interview last week from his Washington, D.C., home. "He never stuck a knife in my back. I don't lie. That's not my reputation. We're the best of friends."

"Irv is a businessman but he's also a fan," Auerbach continued. "He stayed cool and kept his head last year when a lot of things went bad and a lot of owners wouldn't have done that."

But that won't wash in Bos-

Padres Keep On Surprising

Jim Kyle

THE SAFETY PROCEDURES for the marine target ship bombing course in the Pamlico Sound near Brant Island, as outlined in this column a couple of weeks ago, are not being followed, local fishermen who are in the area regularly claim.

2Lt. J. C. Farrar, U. S. Marine Corps public information officer at Cherry Point, recently described the "standard procedure" for insuring that no stray boats are in the target area during bombing runs. Among the safety points mentioned were:

A daily survey of the area by a U-11 light reconnaissance plane to determine if any boats are in the target area.

The deployment of a search and rescue helicopter with an external microphone to instruct boaters to leave the area.

A network of buoys and signs around the perimeter marking the area as hazardous.

A series of watchtowers near the target area, which are manned during bombing runs.

Marines in boats in the area to direct misguided boaters away from the target area.

In addition, Farrar said the three area fishermen who were trapped on the target ship during an actual bombing run were not spotted because they got into the area before the watchtowers were manned. They were eventually spotted by aircraft, he said.

FARRAR'S COMMENTS BROUGHT a rash of arguments from area fishermen, including those who were trapped on the target ship. They charged that the safety procedures are not being followed.

"Almost two-thirds of it (the list of safety procedures) is not applicable to that area," said Bill Everett of Ayden who, along with Jeffrey King and Tom Langley, was stranded for nearly 14 hours on the target ship in June.

"In the last three to four years, there have not been any signs at the Hobucken (Brant Island) target ship. There are no boats manned by Marine patrols, no watchtowers from Pamlico Point to below Jones Bay, no signs or buoys and they do not send out air rescue helicopters every time they come out there."

Dwight Jenkins of Winterville, who said he has fished in that area for several years, concurred with Everett. "There are no towers, no marines in boats and no reconnaissance planes. I've been fishing there for about three years and I've never seen any."

The two, and several other fishermen, said the standard procedure for directing boats out of the area seems to be for the aircraft to make a low pass over the area before the bombing runs begin. Most fishermen know that this means for them to get out of the area, they said. Everett said if all the outlined safety procedures had been followed, "it would have been impossible for them not to know we were on the ship." The trio swam to the ship after their boat was swamped several miles from shore, but only about a mile away from the target ship.

Everett also asked, "If they saw us, why didn't they notify the Coast Guard?"

IN A FOLLOW-UP telephone interview, Farrar said the men were not actually seen by the bombing pilots, who make their runs at 350-500 knots.

"As for the buoys and signs, they do post buoys and signs, but they are the subjects of constant vandalism. The residents destroy them to fish there and (the Marines) are constantly having to replace them."

Farrar said the reconnaissance by U-11 and helicopter "does happen," and he didn't know why these aircraft have not been seen by fishermen.

The watchtowers, he said, are not in the water, but on land at the entrance to the target area, some distance from the target ship. "They are not visible from the target ship by people in boats," he said.

The safety procedures, as outlined, are followed if boats are in the area, he insisted.

"Everybody's been waiting for us to fall on our faces all year," says Padres Manager Roger Craig. "but we just keep coming back." One of the reasons for San Diego's unprecedented success is Rollie Fingers, the self-proclaimed unstung hero of the bullpen.

"We're just playing loosey-goosey out there," said Fingers, who picked up his 26th save of the season Friday night in San Diego's 3-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Fingers, who led the National League with 35 saves last season, retired the last four men in the game, including an inning-ending strikeout in the eighth after Padres reliever, John D'Aquisto, had loaded the bases on walks.

Partners File Suit

CLEVELAND (AP) — Charging that George Steinbrenner has frustrated their attempts to sell their stock in the New York Yankees, Gabe Paul and Francis J. "Steve" O'Neill have filed a $3.1 million suit against Steinbrenner.

Paul was president of the Yankees until late last year, when he returned to Cleveland to join O'Neill in taking over the Cleveland Indians. Paul and O'Neill were members of the group that bought the Yankees in 1973 with Steinbrenner.

Paul said Friday he and O'Neill have a buyer for their Yankee stock but Steinbrenner has refused to approve the deal.

"We have a signed agreement with the purchasers, but it requires approval of the general partner (Steinbrenner)," Paul said. "The papers are signed, and the money's in escrow."

Under terms of the agreement completed June 1 the sale becomes void if Steinbrenner's written approval is not received by Aug. 13, Paul said.

"I'm sorry it had to come to this, but it's got to be resolved," Paul said.

The Indians president said the $1.1 million sale to a group of New Yorkers had been approved by Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn and the president of the American League.

Paul said the breach-of-contract suit filed in Cuyahoga County (Cleveland) Common Pleas Court includes $2 million punitive damages plus $1.1 million compensatory damages.

The petition also seeks an order to force Steinbrenner to approve the sale, saying his refusal could place Paul and O'Neill in violation of a major league rule prohibiting any person from having an interest in more than one club.

"Not that there are any deals pending or that we could make one, but as it stands right now, we are prohibited from dealing with the Yankees until the sale is final," Paul said.

Steinbrenner was reported to be in Tampa, Fla., and could not be reached for comment.

O'Neill, an investment banker, is co-founder of Leaseway Transportation Corp.

Lawyer Robert G. McCreary, said the case was assigned to Judge Daniel O. Corrigan but no date was set for a hearing.

The victory was San Diego's 10th straight, extending the club's longest streak in history. The Padres had a six-game streak in 1969.

The Padres' victory, coupled with San Francisco's 2-1 win over Los Angeles, left San Diego four games behind the third-place Dodgers in the NL West. Cincinnati is two games out in second and the Dodgers 4 1/2 back in third.

The Padres snapped a 2-2 tie in the eighth. After two were out, Reds ace reliever Doug Bair, 4-4, walked Gene Tenace, and when Broderick Perkins tapped a roller back to the mound, Bair threw wildly past first, allowing Tenace to score. Tenace had doubled home two runs in the first inning.

Bob Shirley, 7-11, got the win in relief of Padres starter Gaylord Perry, who yielded a fourth-inning sac fly to Mike Lum. The Reds also scored in the seventh on a sac fly by Pete Rose.

Elsewhere in the NL, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh split a pair, the Phils winning the opener 2-0 and the Pirates taking the nightcap 5-2; the Chicago Cubs downed Montreal 6-4; Atlanta clobbered Houston 7-2, and the New York Mets walloped St. Louis 8-3.

Giants 2, Dodgers 1
Left-hander Vida Blue gave up two hits in 82-3 innings for his 10th straight victory and became the major leagues' winningest pitcher with a 16-4 record. Blue had a no-hitter going until Ron Cey led off the fifth with his 13th homer of the season.

The Giants scored an unearned run in the second when Larry Herndon tripled and went home on right fielder Reggie Smith's fielding error.

Bill Madlock drove in the winning run with a fifth-inning homer, his ninth of the season.

Blue had a one-hitter going into the ninth and, after retiring the first two batters, he gave up a double to Smith. Randy Moffitt came in to get the last out and registered his ninth save.

Phila 2-2, Pirates 0-5
Philadelphia right-hander Larry Christenson, 8-10, struck out a career high nine batters and scattered six hits to record a shutout in the first game.

Garry Maddox drove in a run with a triple and scored on Larry Bowa's single as the Phils got all their offense in the fifth inning.

In the nightcap, Bill Robinson drove in two runs with a single and a double, and Pittsburgh's rookie starter, Don Robinson, 65, tossed a five-hitter.

Cubs 6, Expos 4
With one out in the seventh and men on second and third, pinch-hitter Bobby Murcer drove in the tying run with a bunt single, and Bill Buckner followed with an RBI hit, giving the Cubs their fourth straight victory.

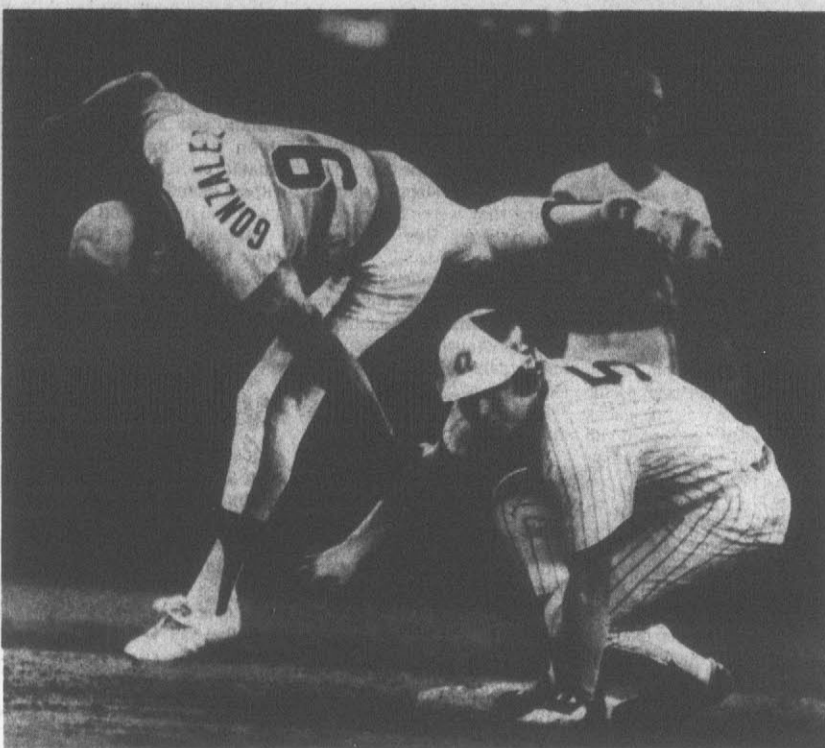

Dave Kingman smacked a two-run homer, his 17th of the season, for the Cubs in the second inning. Rick Reuschel, 10-9, retired 15 consecutive batters at one stretch before the Expos broke a 3-3 tie with a run in the top of the seventh.

Braves 7, Astros 2
Atlanta's Jeff Burroughs hit a three-run home run in the first inning, his 16th of the season, and Phil Niekro, 13-11, pitched his 15th complete game of the season, striking out 12. Niekro now has 2,117 career strikeouts, 28th on the all-time list.

Burroughs' homer came off Astros Mark Lemongello, 7-10.

Mets 8, Cards 3
Joel Youngblood and John Stearns each drove in three runs, and Craig Swan, 4-5, scattered nine hits and struck out four through eight innings to deal St. Louis its seventh consecutive loss.

A two-run double by Stearns, who had drawn a bases-loaded walk in the first inning, started the Mets' four-run ninth inning. Youngblood's RBI came on a pair of singles and a sacrifice fly.

'Unknown' Angels Blast Twins By 12-3

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer
It isn't always the big names that win games.

The California Angels, for example, blasted the Minnesota Twins Friday night with help from one player who was happy he had been injured, another who felt weak, and a pitcher who hadn't "contributed anything to anyone since 1976."

Brian Downing contributed three hits, drove in two runs and scored twice to pace California's 12-3 rout of Minnesota. He attributed an improvement at bat to a heel injury he suffered a month ago.

"It's made a world of difference," said Downing, who has raised his average some 40 points to .240 since his return and had a two-run double in California's seven-run third inning.

"It made me realize I was putting too much weight on my back foot. I've changed, and now I'm able to hit the breaking stuff to right field."

"I'm kind of glad I got hurt," he said.

Carney Lansford had been hurt Thursday night in fielding practice, when a ball hit him over the right temple.

"I didn't feel strong at all. I had a bad headache tonight," he said, though his contribution belied that. Lansford, headache and all, had four hits, drove in three runs and scored twice.

All this helped veteran right-hander Al Fitzmorris win in his first starting appearance since September 28, 1977. A last-minute replacement for Dave Frost, who was idled by a back injury, Fitzmorris benefitted from the Angel offensive on three Twins pitchers and managed 52-3 innings in evening his record at 1-1.

"It's been so long since I helped 3a team, it really felt good," said the 32-year-old Fitzmorris, who started the year with Cleveland but was disabled by muscle spasms in his neck.

He was activated on May 10, appeared in just seven games while compiling a 6.28 earned run average, and was released by the Indians on July 13. A week later, after a stint in the minors, the Angels purchased his contract.

"I didn't contribute anything to anyone since 1976," said Fitzmorris, who was 15-11 that year with the Kansas City Royals. "If they score 10 runs for me every time, I'll be a 20-game winner."

If they score 10 runs every time, they'll make a more serious charge at the American League's West Division lead. At it was, the victory brought the Angels within 1 1/2 games of the Royals, who dropped a 5-4 decision to Toronto Friday night in suffering their fourth consecutive loss.

In the other American League games, the Milwaukee Brewers blasted the Boston Red Sox 6-2, the Baltimore Orioles edged the New York Yankees 2-1, the Texas Rangers hammered the Cleveland Indians 8-0, the Oakland A's bested the Seattle Mariners 6-1, and the Detroit Tigers walloped the Chicago White Sox 7-1.

The victory was the Angels' eighth in a row over the Twins, who lost starter Dave Goltz to a back injury after California's first batter.

Brewers 6, Red Sox 2
Sal Bando and Gorman Thomas hit two-run homers, while Cecil Cooper and Larry Hise hit solo shots as Milwaukee took over the major league lead in home runs while handing the Red Sox their 12th loss in the last 17 games.

The Brewers beat the Red Sox with the long ball. Their 123 homers this year are two more than Boston's total. The victory only Milwaukee's fourth in the last 11, brought Milwaukee within five games of the Red Sox.

Orioles 2, Yankees 1
Doug DeCinces hammered a

Ron Guidry pitch 440 feet for a two-run homer as Baltimore handed the Yankee ace only his second loss in 17 decisions. His other defeat came at Milwaukee on July 7. Guidry allowed only five hits, walked none and struck out 10, his eighth double-figure strikeout this season. The Yankees' third-inning run was unearned. Prior to that, they had managed only one run — unearned as well — in their last 22 innings.

Rangers 8, Indians 0
Al Oliver drove in three runs, two of them in a six-run Texas second inning, to lead the Rangers past Cleveland and back an eight-hitter by Ferguson Jenkins.

Jenkins also struck out eight to pass Tim Lincecum and take over 11th place on the all-time strikeout list. Jenkins has 2,545.

Blue Jays 5, Royals 4
Al Woods hit a triple and two singles and scored the winning run on Rick Bosetti's ninth-inning single to lift Toronto over Kansas City.

Pete LaCock had doubled in the seventh and scored on Clint Hurdle's single to give the Royals a 4-3 lead.

A's 6, Mariners 1
Designated hitter Willie Horton drove in three runs to back John Henry Johnson's seven-hitter and help Oakland beat Seattle for the 11th time in 12 games between the teams this season.

Johnson came within one out of his third shutout of the Mariners this season, but was touched for a ninth-inning run when Tom Paciorek's single delivered Leon Roberts.

Tigers 7, White Sox 1
Lance Parrish and Aurelio

Rodriguez hit homers and Alan Trammell drove in two runs to spark Detroit's sixth victory in seven games.

Tigers rookie Kip Young scattered 10 hits in pitching his third consecutive complete game in his third major league start.

Ex-Deac Coach Mills Suing Wake Forest

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Former Wake Forest football coach Chuck Mills filed a suit Friday accusing the school and athletic director Gene Hooks of breach of contract.

Mills, who was fired Jan. 3 after the Demon Deacons won only one game during the 1977 season, charged that the university terminated his pay on July 1 and asked for $151,381 in damages. The defendants have 30 days to submit a response in Forsyth County Superior Court.

Wake Forest officials issued a statement denying the allegations and saying they had operated within the constraints of Mills' contract, which had three years left at the time of his dismissal, in offering him several other jobs at the school.

Mills said he regretted the timing of the suit, filed less than two weeks before the Deacons open football drills Aug. 15.

"I have always sort of resented coaches who filed suit, but now I feel that I do not have any alternative," he said. In an earlier statement, Mills said he had tried unsuccessfully to reach an amiable solution.

"Since my dismissal, I have avoided the media and maintained a low profile, not wanting to call attention to myself nor wanting to embarrass the university," he said. "I hope to continue this posture. I am not eager to plead the situation through the media. The courts will suffice."

In a statement released by sports information director Pat Gainey, the university said Mills' complaint contained inaccuracies and libelous allegations against Wake Forest and Hooks.

"Mr. Mills did not satisfactorily perform his duties as head football coach for the purpose of creating and sustaining a successful collegiate football program at Wake Forest University," the statement said.

It said Mills was removed from his job as head coach under his contract's reassignment clause and university officials "have discussed reassignment of duties and have offered new positions to Mills."

"As evidence of Wake Forest University's humane concern, we offered fine alternate positions to Mr. Mills. Mr. Mills refused all job reassignments which would have secured his salary for the remainder of the contract."

Govm't Spends $1 Billion Yearly To 'Sell' Itself

By DONALD LAMBRO
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The federal government is spending at least $1 billion a year solely to promote, communicate and sell its programs and sometimes itself to the American people.

Each year, hundreds of millions of tax dollars are spent to run an "army" of nearly 20,000 public information and public affairs workers, moviemakers and broadcasters, writers, editors and advertising specialists. This army gets larger and more expensive every year.

Salaries for top government press officers — some of whom have been elevated to the rank of assistant secretary — now peak at $50,000 a year. Most make more than $30,000 a year. Ernest Lotito, head of the Commerce Department's public information office, earns $47,500 a year and says, "I'd take the job if it paid $5,000 less."

Despite numerous audits and surveys, no one in the government knows precisely how much is being spent for all public information programs.

However, officials in several sectors of the government, including the Office of Management and Budget and the Civil Service Commission, privately maintain the annual cost is now between $1 billion and $1.5 billion.

The estimates include $500 million for audio-visual programs, over $200 million for advertising, and about $400 million for all other public relations and public information programs, including the salaries of the employees to operate them.

While much of the government's public information function fulfills necessary and often vital educational and communication needs, a large proportion of it appears extravagant or unnecessary.

Literally hundreds of "news" releases are issued daily to promote statements and speeches by agency officials. Costly exhibits are placed in federal office buildings displaying larger-than-life pictures of department and agency heads.

Agencies are providing news broadcasts and voice feeds to radio stations around the country, implementing expensive video-tape and playback systems, and running ambitious film and audio programs as well.

Virtually no agency of government, no matter how tiny it may be, is without a public relations program. Even President Carter's government reorganization task force, formed to cut waste from a "bloated" bureaucracy, has a press operation and regularly issues material touting its accomplishments.

The Defense Department has one of the largest public information and public relations forces in the government, costing more than $25 million a year (excluding advertising for recruitment). Within its operation is a press and public affairs staff of 316 persons in the Pentagon, plus more than 1,200 military and civilian workers scattered among the services and Defense agencies.

Despite its smaller size, the Department of Agriculture virtually matches Defense with a 1,000-worker information-media force costing $26 million a year.

USDA's information army includes 311 public information officers and specialists, 90 writer-editors, 50 general information officials, 19 illustrators, and 59 film specialists.

USDA writers turn out a mountain of material each year — everything from the annual USDA Yearbook (often used as a giveaway campaign item by members of Congress who get allotments of the book each year) to literature on "How to Grow Strawberries" and suburban lawn care.

The Health, Education and Welfare Department, Washington's largest department in terms of expenditures, has a "public affairs" staff of 459 whose salaries and activities cost $25.4 million a year.

The total includes 96 media information specialists, 57 writers who turn out speeches, articles and statements, 90 who work fulltime on HEW publications, plus 44 who handle film and broadcasting projects.

The Commerce Department, which surrounds many unrelated agencies like the U.S. Travel Service and the Census Bureau, has a yearly public affairs budget of $5.6 million.

Commerce's Office of Public Affairs, serving just the office of the secretary, has 20 employees and a budget of nearly $800,000.

Even one of Commerce's sub-agencies, the Maritime affairs budget of $494,000, with a staff of eight, while the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) has a public affairs budget of $1.1 million, with about 30 employees.

Stanley Eames, director of public affairs for NOAA which includes the Weather Service, says one-third to one-half of his staff's work is concerned with safety and education.

Although the Interior Department is the third smallest department in terms of expenditures, it has a total public affairs staff of 341 requiring a budget of over $9 million a year.

Labor, meanwhile, has an $8.3 million public information budget (excluding printing costs), with a staff of 162 people, including 55 information officers, 35 writer-editors, and 20 editorial and publication assistants.

The newest department, Energy, formed last October, has 106 public affairs employees with a budget of $2 million.

Said an OMB official, "When you look at the functions of each department and what needs to be communicated, and then see what is being put out, there is clearly more being done than is absolutely necessary."

Often there are excesses. The 44-member White House press office issued a report last spring defending the barroom behavior of Carter aide Hamilton Jordan. It required 33 pages of material. In comparison, President Carter's 1978 State of the Union speech totaled 15 pages.

Public information chiefs like Lotito staunchly defend their public information efforts, saying, "We're here to get information out to the public. The news media couldn't survive without us."

One of Commerce's newest information programs is a new Spanish language broadcast effort which Lotito says includes "radio feature material, informational stuff, where to go on a vacation, how to save energy."

But he says that if it had to, Commerce's operation could be run "for less than we're spending now."

Lotito also admits that in the process of disseminating information, he is out to shine the department's image: "If I can make the department look good in the process, I'm happy to do it."

Through the years public information jobs have been elevated in rank and pay. Chief information officers at Defense, Treasury, HEW, and State hold the title of assistant secretary, posts that pay $50,000. As an assistant secretary of Defense for public affairs, Thomas Ross outranks everyone in the active military except the members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Other chief public information officers hold the lower rank of assistant to the secretary, which pays $47,500.

Meanwhile, Washington is increasingly turning to a more direct form of communication with the public — advertising.

The government is among the top 20 advertisers in the country, right up there with Proctor and Gamble and Coca Cola, spending an estimated $200 million plus yearly to "sell" the public on everything from stamp collecting to the beauty of our national parks.

The Defense Department has the largest and perhaps most necessary advertising budget because of the need to maintain recruitment, but advertising can also be found in dozens of other agencies.

Amtrak, the government's rail passenger corporation, spent $9 million last year trying to convince Americans to ride its trains. Similarly, Conrail, the quasi-government "freight line corporation, spent $1 million in advertising merely to promote "public awareness" of its existence.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission has run radio spots to remind skiers to keep their bindings tight, and created "Grandma Nature," an elderly woman in lace and tennis shoes who lectured television viewers about safety in the nursery.

The Postal Service has run a $4 million ad campaign to get people to write more letters and thus increase the sale of stamps, which drew a "Golden Fleece" award for wasteful spending from Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis. It also advertises heavily to get people interested in stamp collecting.

The Office of Management and Budget audited the advertising expenditures of 62 agencies and found $122 million in outlays. But an OMB official said the figure was "very understated. It is now easily over $200 million a year."

Perhaps the most criticized yet most persistent of government public information activities is filmmaking, a government-wide expenditure that President Carter's media adviser, Barry Jagoda, says is a $500 million a year enterprise.

The government owns more than $1.5 billion in film, television and other audiovisual equipment and has in the past 40 years produced thousands of films to communicate various messages to the public — everything from how to brush your teeth to the thrill of hydrofoil racing.

While some government films serve important educational and training functions, a great number of them are made solely to glorify an agency's accomplishments — such as a 14-minute film on the skills of the Navy's bobbed team.

Jagoda, who investigated federal movie making for President Carter, says that within a two-year period there were 52 films produced by the government's drug abuse agency — many of which were duplicative.

"We found persistent agency self-promotion in these films," Jagoda said in an interview.

Cocos Island Again A Beacon To Path Of Wealth

By MATTHEW T. KENNY
ISLA DEL COCO, In the Pacific (UPI) — Legends of buried pirate gold and a dazzling array of fish in surrounding waters have long made this remote island a peculiar rendezvous for treasure hunters and anglers.

Seldom, however, have the distinct obsessions of those motivated to set foot on this mist-shrouded speck in the Pacific, sole offshore possession of Costa Rica, overlapped.

One near-exception was the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, who is said to have harbored a lingering desire to look for the loot of buccaniers while pulling in the big ones.

Journeying here several times aboard U. S. warships to fish in the years before World War II, Roosevelt reportedly devised secret calculations about the supposed pirate treasure, saying he hoped to test them after leaving the White House.

Today Cocos Island (as it is called in English) — not to be confused with Cocos Island in the Indian Ocean — is once again playing the role as a beacon on the path to wealth.

Only now, the riches are sure and certain — the vast schools of yellowfin tuna which migrate surrounding Pacific waters.

For little Costa Rica, a Central American coffee growing nation which has paid scant attention to the island since claiming it in the 19th century, Isla del Coco has suddenly become the key to a fabulous maritime kingdom.

The reason lies in international acceptance today of the 200-mile offshore fisheries conservation and management zone.

Situated 300 miles southwest of Costa Rica's Osa Peninsula, the island thus serves to extend the Central American nation's fisheries jurisdiction over more than 310,000-square miles of the Pacific Ocean — an area 10 times that of Costa Rica itself.

The bottom line of this new maritime reality is that all foreign tuna boats fishing within 200 miles of Isla del Coco — and most of them operate out of San Diego, Calif. — must henceforth come to economic terms with Costa Rica beforehand.

This is the heart of a new foreign policy proclaimed by President Rodrigo Carazo, who took office last May 8.

And to enforce it, Costa Rica — one of the few nations in the world without an army — is now establishing a modest coast guard flotilla, comprising five gunboats built in Morgan City, La., to patrol the waters around Isla del Coco.

"We don't want to keep foreign fishing boats out of these waters," Carazo said. "We just want to receive some compensation for the enormous riches they have been harvesting for nothing up to now."

Carazo recently became the first Costa Rican president ever to land on the island, which is lashed by heavy rains much of the year. He led a party of seasick government officials and newsmen there to reaffirm his nation's sovereignty over it.

This correspondent was the only U. S.-based newsmen in the historic expedition.

The 48-year-old chief executive made the voyage — in 14 hours through rough seas — from the Pacific port of Puntarenas aboard a 105-foot gunboat carrying a two-seat helicopter on its fantail.

His vessel anchored off Water Bay, whose U-shaped approach is lined on both sides by heavy rain-soaked jungle rising about 200-feet into, on that day, misty cloud cover.

The Costa Rican leader was welcomed by Col. Guillermo Marti Vargas, chief of territorial security who had led a detachment to survey the 10.4-square mile island and to plant Costa Rican flags at various conspicuous points.

After a helicopter survey of the island, whose mountain peaks rise as high as 2,800 feet, Carazo dedicated a plaque marking the occasion of his visit.

Then, addressing the nation over a live radio hookup, he said that instead of legendary treasure he sought "the conquest of a new frontier...to convert Costa Rica into a maritime nation."

"Costa Rica has not only the right but the obligation to utilize its marine resources for its own good, rather than leaving them to foreign exploitation without any benefit to the nation," he said.

But Carazo emphasized his government hopes to implement the new policy in harmony with the United States, whose San Diego-based tuna boats will be most affected.

Later aides told UPI that Carazo has received written assurances from President Carter that "the United States does not oppose Costa Rica's desire for a new approach to international conversation and management of tuna."

A meeting of nations comprising the Inter American Tropical Tuna Commission, dating back to 1948, is tentatively planned for La Jolla, Calif., this month.

Besides Costa Rica — which has announced plans to withdraw from the commission — and the United States, they include Mexico, Nicaragua and Panama.

The importance of the upcoming meeting was spelled out by American diplomatic sources who said approximately 12 percent of all yellowfin tuna taken in the eastern Pacific is caught within Costa Rica's new maritime fisheries zone. And of that catch, 84 percent is reportedly pulled in U. S. boats.

After approximately eight hours on the island — during which he learned that it has three volcanoes, an assortment of waterfalls, wild pigs, goats, deer, many types of birds but no snakes, Carazo headed back to Puntarenas.

Carazo elaborated on his policy objectives during the return voyage.

Costa Rica wants the adoption of a plan whereby ships fishing in its maritime zone pay fees in accordance with the amount of their catch, not a standard licensing apparatus such as that now used by Ecuador in its waters, for example.

Aside from revenues collected by his nation, the Costa Rican leader said, some of the money paid by tuna fishermen should go to underwrite tuna conservation and management techniques for continued prosperity of the Pacific Ocean's piscatorial riches.

Although aides joked about not looking for treasure during his brief stay on the island, the search for millions in pirate plunder has drawn countless adventurers here for the past 150 years.

What success they may have had remains a tantalizing uncertainty even today.

The most authentic account of buried treasure — from official Spanish and British archives — dates back to 1821 when South American revolutionary armies were closing in on Lima, Peru, and a revolutionary naval force, led by English adventurer Lord Cochrane, was blocking the Peruvian coast.

Desperate officials of the crumbling Spanish Empire in Lima discovered a British schooner, the Mary Dear, docked at the port of Callao. They hurriedly loaded gold, silver and jewels — whose value has been estimated at anywhere from $12 to $60 million — aboard the vessel under armed guard.

The master, a Captain Thompson, agreed to run the revolutionary blockade to Panama. But soon after putting to sea the Spanish guards were slain in a bloody massacre supposedly led by the mate, James Forbes.

Whatever the case, the Mary Dear next put in at Cocos Island. The cargo — taken ashore in 11 long-boats — was quickly buried. But as soon as the vessel headed out to sea, Spanish patrols overtook it, forcing it to Panama where the crew was summarily hanged.

Thompson and Forbes were spared on condition that they lead the way back to the loot. Once ashore, however, they somehow escaped into the jungle and stayed hidden until the Spaniards left.

Months later they were rescued and, posing as shipwreck victims, were taken to Puntarenas.

Whether they ever succeeded in getting the treasure, or any part of it, is still debated in Costa Rica. One popular version holds that it eventually wound up in California.

Two other swashbucklers stand out in the lore of Cocos Island.

One involves Capt. Benito Bonito, also known as Pedro Benitez, whose outstanding feat was the reported seizure of $11 million in gold from a mule convoy from Mexico City to Acapulco in 1819.

The other was Capt. Edward Davis who roamed the Pacific in the 1680s and whose achievements included the sacking the city of Leon, Nicaragua, and the blockading of Panama.

It's enough to shiver anybody's timbers.

Restorers Are 'Healers' Of World Art Treasures

EDITOR'S NOTE—Extremists bomb Versailles Palace, old world masterpieces are slashed, mold attacks Da Vinci's Last Supper, but all is not always lost. Seemingly hopeless damage can often be repaired by art restoration experts — Renaissance blends of artist, historian, chemist, carpenter, surgeon and often specialist in the breeding habits of worms.

The 84-year-old director of restoration at Versailles, declares with assurance: "All will be restored."

His confidence is well-founded. The world's great museums have been restoring art treasures for centuries, and, recently, European specialists say they have made major advances in the battle against the ravages of man, nature and time.

"Any damage to a work of art is tragic, of course," one French expert puts it. "But today our techniques are sophisticated enough to cope with almost any disaster."

Art restoring is expensive, exacting work. Paulet estimates he will need two years and a million dollars to repair the bomb damage.

Experts are extremely cautious about discussing their work, largely for fear of furthering the recent spate of attacks against priceless objects. They also fear arousing professional jealousies.

At Paris's Louvre Museum, a journalist can wait weeks for permission to see the studio where 26 specialists work with space-age chemicals and six-foot-high microscopes to restore up to 900 paintings a year.

The Louvre's restorers, considered among the best in the world, rarely have to worry about slashes because attacks against art have been exremely rare in France.

But in any case, says one Louvre expert, "Most simple slashes — and many molds — are usually pretty easy to fix. Every case is different, of course, but in most slash cases all the canvas remains, it's just cut. We can put on a new back, restore the structure and reveal the paint."

The Louvre's Renaissance men and women spend most of their time transferring centuries-old paintings to modern canvases, removing layers of yellowed varnish or dense white clouds of mold, or meticulously retouching or repainting chipped paintings.

"You're never quite sure what you're going to find when you start restoring a painting," says Gilberte Emile-Male, head of the service of national restoration for national museums. "The result is often what appears to be an entirely different painting."

Many of the most spectacular discoveries come from undoing the damage of earlier restorers, who often repainted masterpieces to make them conform to the social mores of the day.

"Once I was removing yellowed varnish from a painting with a stiff-looking woman with a high-necked dress and got the impression something was not quite right," one restorer says.

"I did a little investigation and found that a Victorian restorer had repainted the woman. Beneath his work I found a sensuous, smiling woman with a dress that barely covered her bosom."

At the Louvre, as at many museums, a panel of historians, scientists and conservation experts make a careful study before any piece is restored. Works are X-rayed and photographed with ultraviolet and infrared light. Spectroscopic analyses are made of the paint, all historical data and market values are examined and a careful course is charted for the restorer.

The Louvre works on the theory that anything done should be able to be undone. Consequently, all work is done not with permanent oil-based paints but with washable water-based materials.

The Louvre helps spread its expertise by providing consultation services to museums around the world. Louvre researchers have also developed a mobile laboratory so restorers can work anywhere in France, thus avoiding the expense and risk of transporting restoration projects to Paris.

Modern art and all its eccentricities, however, have posed a whole new set of problems to restorers.

"Since the Impressionists, painters have not respected the colors," says Miss Male. "So restoration is often difficult.

Today, of course, there are no more rules left at all."

To cope with these new problems and the increasing interest in restoration, France is opening its first national school of restoration in September. Until now aspiring French restorers had to be schooled abroad or trained as apprentices.

One thing the schools don't often teach is the breeding habits of worms, which often burrow into the wood of Italian primitive paintings and do extensive damage.

"Worms can drive you nuts," one restorer says. "But it's all part of the challenge. In restoration every project is an adventure."

PARIS (AP) — In a musty Old World studio, among a clutter of beakers, palettes and gilt picture frames, the pieces of a tragic jigsaw puzzle lie scattered on a worktable.

Some of the pieces are large, jagged-edge slabs. Many are minute slivers. Others are missing altogether.

Gadgetry Is U.S. Staple

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

CHICAGO (UPI) — Would you spend about $3 for a special brush to clean mushrooms?

A Seattle manufacturer, NorPro, introduced such a gadget at the 69th semi-annual housewares trade show in Chicago recently. The brush has very fine nylon bristles the manufacturer says pick up dirt by static electricity, thus preserving flavor and texture that would be endangered if the fungi were rinsed, washed or peeled.

Gadgetry was a staple of the American housewares industry even before it held its first trade show at a Chicago hotel in 1939.

"It used to be all low ticket items," says Dolph Zapfel, managing director for the National Housewares Manufacturers Association. "I think the price barrier has been broken."

He could have been thinking of:

— A $65 rolling pin from Cuisinart. The ball-bearing plastic pin is ridged lengthwise, to roll puff pastry and other delicate doughs.

— A pillow-covered bathroom scale, about $42 from Terrillon, perhaps for people who get cold feet at the thought of weighing themselves.

— A cordless control to turn television, stereos, lamps and other appliances up to 400 watts on and off from 50 feet away — about $25. WhistleSwitch, Universal Controls Corp., Los Angeles.

— And for $110 Imperial Knife Company of Providence, R.I., showed a seven-knife set and sharpening rod in a canvas roll for storage and portability.

Inexpensive gadgetry and utensils still outnumber the high-ticket items. Besides the mushroom brush, new items included:

— A tube-shaped perforated spice infuser, also from Nor-Pro, for spices to be removed from food before serving. About $2.29

— Small size sink racks and drainers from Rubbermaid, Inc., of Wooster, Ohio, and Greene Hill Products of Hicksville, N.Y. Rubbermaid's is 2by-11-by-12½ inches and about $3. Greene Hill's is 8½ inches wide, 2½ inches high and adjusts from 15½ inches long closed to 21¼ inches expanded; price about $7.

— A scoop-shaped three-cup plastic flour sifter, also from Rubbermaid, calibrated in half cups and metric. About $2.50.

Held Program For Children

WINTERVILLE — The Winterville Jayettes sponsored a Children's Activity Month in July. Children in the Winterville school district, ages five to ten, met every Wednesday at A. G. Cox School from 2-4 p.m.

The children played kickball and softball, as well as made Happy Face pins, sandpainted, decorated flower pots, planted seeds and made gumball birds.

Patsy Kittrell, Althea Weatherington, Ellen Avery, and Peggie Harris, chairman, participated in the program.

Shipbuilding Abroad Is Worse Off Than In U.S.

By LEROY POPE
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — The depression in the world's shipbuilding and ship operating industries is worse abroad than in the United States.

That's because neither shipbuilding nor ship operation has been of critical commercial importance to the United States since the age of sail. Congress and the public tend to think of shipping and shipbuilding largely in terms of national security rather than profit-making operations.

The cancer in shipbuilding and ship operating began, of course, with the Arab oil embargo of 1973. The infection soon spread to dry cargo operations. The gloomy state of the world's shipbuilding industry was presented dramatically at the end of May in Lloyd's annual report of the condition of the industry and the market as of March 30. If anything, things have become worse since then.

Lloyd's said the free enterprise world's ship order book had fallen to the lowest level since 1966 and would get worse because 57 percent of the tonnage on order was due to be delivered this year. Deliveries of new ships, many of which the ship operators didn't really need, right now, were running at two and a half times the rate of incoming orders.

All leading shipbuilding countries except Sweden and Brazil were hit by the critical slump. Brazil had a gain because it is a relative newcomer to shipbuilding with low costs and Sweden had a gain because it had already suffered a big decline. No figures were given for the Soviet shipyards.

Japan, the free world's biggest shipbuilder, had the biggest loss, followed by France, the United States and Britain.

The Japanese also faced continued pressure from Greek shipowners — among the world's biggest fleet operators and among the best customers of Japan — to grant them a two-year moratorium on orders for Greek ships being built in Japanese yards.

This was because of depression and the decline of the U.S. dollar against the yen. The Greek shipping tycoons collect their revenues in dollars. Anthony Chandris, president of the Greek Shipowners Union, wanted the Japanese, after they had stalled on granting the moratorium from early March to June, that they were risking losing the goodwill of their best customer.

The critical state of the shipping and shipbuilding businesses clearly is benefiting the communist bloc nations. Mainland China has been buying big used container ships at bargain prices. According to the semi-official Japan External Trade Organization, China bought at least 33 used container ships for $127 million.

JETRO also said the Peking government has been buying used fishing trawlers and coastal craft and placed an order in a Hong Kong yard for 16 freighters ranging from 6,000 to 15,000 tons.

The Soviet Union's huge Baltic Shipping Co. caused consternation in western shipping circles by winning a contract to haul large urban buses from West Germany to Houston for $3,500 a bus against the lowest bid from an American shipping line of $6,500. American companies are contesting the bid on the grounds that the Russian bid was way below cost.

But Brazilian and South Korean shipowners are widely reported to be undercutting established rates on liner freight — general cargo, that is — by as much as 40 percent.

The Senate Commerce Committee recently issued a report calculating that U.S. flag shipowners are making illegal rebates of perhaps $100 million a year in order to stay in overseas markets against this kind of competition. U.S. flag coastal ships, of course, are protected against foreign flag competition. So are the Great Lakes and Inland Waterways fleets, therefore the American ship operating industry as a whole is not so badly affected. The Maritime Administration reports the industry earned $118 million last year, up from $99 million in 1976. The revenues for 1977 were $2.4 billion.

It's not easy to discover the profits of individual American shipping lines, however, because most of them are owned by conglomerates and their financial results are combined with such businesses as steel and oil. Also, a vast proportion of the American controlled shipping does not fly the Stars and Stripes but is registered in Liberia and other "flag of convenience" countries in order to hold down crew costs.

One big American shipping line, Pacific Far Eastern, recently went broke and is in liquidation. Leaving the Maritime Administration holding the bag for $98 million in mortgage guarantees. This represents almost two-thirds of the administration's guaranty fund. Rep. Paul McCloskey, R-Calif., tried to get the government to take PFE over and spend about $30 million to put it on its feet in order to avoid this exposure.

Roy Yowell, a Maritime Administration official, said Pacific Far Eastern failed because of mismanagement. The line got into trouble after it was taken over in 1974 by the politically active Aloto family.

But the crisis in shipbuilding and ship operating has caused such big money losses that it also is causing concern by officers of eight to 10 large U.S. banks that hold around $7 billion in shipping loans. Various Wall street analysts have calculated that Citibank of New York had more than $2 billion of such paper; Bank of America of San Francisco $1.3 billion and Manufacturers Hanover, Chase Manhattan and Morgan Guaranty Trust well over half a billion dollars worth.

Recycling Idea Gains

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Some Americans are losing their reputation as the throwaway generation. They earned $45 million last year by recycling 6.1 billion aluminum beverage cans.

To increase both figures, the aluminum industry has started a nationwide 24-hour-a-day toll-free number people can call to learn the location of their nearest recycling center.

More than 2,200 such centers exist in 49 states, excluding Alaska. Some areas have mobile vans that stop periodically at neighborhood shopping malls.

Most centers are run by aluminum companies, but some are operated by local civic and environmental groups.

Most pay up to 17 cents per pound — the equivalent of about 23 all-aluminum beverage cans.

Recycling aluminum cans is a particularly big energy saver, says the Aluminum Association. It takes 95 percent less energy to produce the metal from used cans than from ore.

Even unmarked aluminum cans are easy to identify. They have a rounded bottom edge and an indented bottom and a magnet will not stick to them.

The toll-free number for collection point information is 800-223-6830, except in New York State, where calls should be made collect to 212-765-8003.

Snakes Scared Burglars Away

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Burglars broke into a bar here and tampered with a coinoperated machine, but they left before finishing the job.

"The only thing we can think of is the burglars must have seen them," owner Joe Lahiff said. "They must have scared them off."

"They" are three boa constrictors. They were on the floor of the manager's office, which was as far as the thieves got.

Lahiff said he normally kept his dog at the bar to ward off intruders, but that morning, the dog was with him and the snakes were just filling in.

The snakes belong to his wife, Mary, and have been household pets for about a year. Lahiff said.

The public is invited says the pastor, the Rev. D. Bernard. The church is located at the corner of Venters Street and Highway 11 South.

Women To Sea Duty

By RUTH YOUNGBLOOD
HONG KONG (UPI) — Six young Chinese women have cracked the last male bastion in the Crown Colony's police department. They have switched from shore to sea duty.

Initial doubts of male superior officers and colleagues vanished when they mastered the basics of seamanship.

The Police Marine Division that patrols Hong Kong harbor was an exclusive male preserve until Deputy District Commander John Turner was asked to consider women aboard the launches. Many female officers were already handling all aspects of land work.

"I say it can't be done," said Turner, recalling his first reaction. "It wasn't I was anti-women's liberation, but I was concerned that the young Chinese women might be prone to seasickness, and we had no separate changing accommodations for them."

But Turner agreed to give it a six-month try with six volunteers from the Police Training School.

"I was sure no one would be interested, but more than 20 cadets applied," he said in an interview. "The six selected knew they would be guinea pigs in a sense but that didn't alter their enthusiasm and sincerity a bit."

The new constables began harbor patrol duties in February. Turner is delighted with their performance.

He is considering asking for 50 more volunteers and expanding the small area at Marine Headquarters where the women change into their uniforms.

Plans are also under way to modify a larger launch that patrols the harbor for 24-hour tours of duty. The changes would provide sleeping and bathroom sections for the women.

The first six are admiringly called "the Blue Berets of the Sea."

All underwent intensive sea training at headquarters before beginning work on the 45-foot-long craft that patrols the 23-square-mile harbor.

"Most didn't know the difference between port and starboard," Turner said. "But did they learn fast."

The port in Southeast Asia is among the world's busiest. It also has all the problems associated with an urban environment in its 80,000-member community of "boat people."

"The challenge is terrific," says Myra Tung, 21. Working an eight-hour shift six days a week "never becomes boring when there's so much going on," said the constable.

All beginners, women and men, are paid $280 a month.

Maintaining law and order in the harbor involves a lot more than handling boats, signaling, working with ropes, disaster preparedness and memorizing laws governing the waters.

Smuggling drugs into Hong Kong in ordinary-looking fishing craft or junks is a perennial problem.

Turner said prostitution also is a big business on sea and land, but the mobility factor of a floating brothel presents unusual headaches.

"Interestingly, we have found the girls (the female constables) have unusual tact and efficiency in dealing with women. The nature of the vice does not embarrass them a bit," said Turner.

"Serving a summons on land usually involves no more than going to an address," Miss Tung said. "But when the address is a junk and that junk moves, delivering a summons can become quite complicated."

Reports to top Marine Division officers indicate the Blue Berets "are keen and competent" no matter what the assignment.

The ratio of 1,000 men to six women at sea does not faze the women constables.

"They treat us like sisters," Miss Tung said. Constable Josie Chan, 21, who works on the same launch, agreed.

She said she and the other five never expected to have the opportunity for sea duty and were happily surprised when chosen. "We knew we were the guinea pigs," she said, laughing.

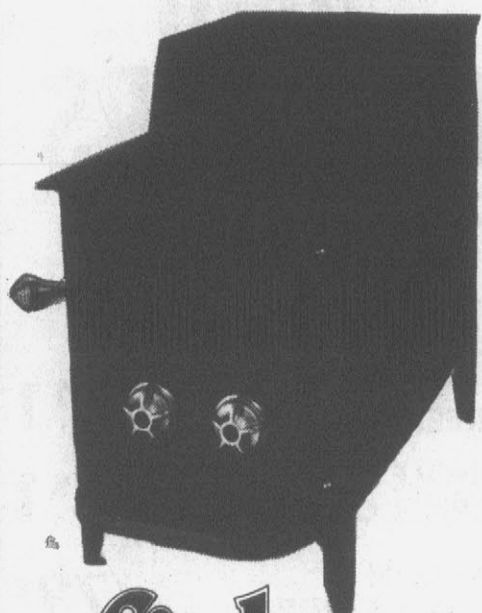

Turner is the first to admit his initial misgivings were wrong. "In fact, the women have boosted the morale of their male colleagues," he said, "and not one has been seasick."

Preserved Seashells Maintain Beauty

If you are one of those persons who can't resist the allure of a beautiful seashell, it follows that you also want to do everything in your power to preserve them.

Literally speaking, your seashells will last indefinitely, providing they are properly cleaned. In fact, tender loving care may revive colors you didn't even know were there when you plucked the shells from toast-warm sands of summertime.

Shells gathered from beaches usually require only a bath in plain water or a mild detergent solution. Then a light application of oil, such as baby oil, will restore colors worn from tumbling in surf and sand, in addition to the bleaching effect of the sun.

It is the live specimen, as well as those gathered by hard-core collectors from mounds discarded at fish houses, that require in-depth cleaning both to restore original colors and to remove any inhabiting creatures.

For small coquinas, clams and snail-style shells still housing their little animals, try either of two methods, place in fresh, warm water; bring to a boil slowly and after two or three minutes remove. Larger animals may be boiled 10 minutes or more. After boiling, remove the animal by taking a hook, pin or tweezers, depending on the size of the shell, and rolling the animal outward. If it does not come out easily, boil some more.

An advantage to boiling coquinas, which are tiny clam-like shells found in abundance at North Carolina beaches, is that their broth can be used to make chowder.

Many glossy shells, such as cowries, olives and marginellas, crack when subjected to rapidly changing temperatures, so if you choose this method of cleaning, bring them to a boil slowly.

A second way of cleaning still inhabited clam-type shells is to freeze them for several days and then thaw gradually. After opening, remove the animal with a hook or pin.

Another alternative is to soak animal-inhabited shells in fresh or salt water until the shell opens and the animal drowns or disintegrates. If you decide to use this method, be sure to change the water daily so that acids from decomposition will not damage the shell's surface.

Still another technique for cleaning and purifying heavily encrusted shells and those with dead animals, such as whelks, conchs and murexes, is to soak them for a few minutes in a solution of one half cup bleach to a gallon of water. Use tongs to remove and scrub with a small brush. Any soft bristled brush will do.

If the shell is still dirty or inhabited, try soaking it longer, even up to several hours, but check frequently to make sure the solution is not fading the color or damaging the shell's exterior. You may increase the amount of bleach up to 50 percent of the solution, but do so at your own risk. Too much bleach will do the same thing to shells that it does to clothes. It can and will disintegrate your treasured "finds" beyond salvaging.

If the bleach treatment has failed to completely cleanse particularly stubborn shells with dead animals such as conchs, find a place outside your house (away from open windows and neighbors) and place the shell, animal down, on a flat surface. Within two to three months at the most, the animal will dislodge, and another dipping in the bleach solution should make the shell functional. If it doesn't, continue to dip in the solution until you have gotten rid of the animal and any offending odor.

After you have cleaned the shell, whatever method you choose, rinse it in fresh, cool water and allow it to dry thoroughly. Remember that bivalves (clams, scallops, etc.) will remain in the position they dry in.

If you plan to display your shells, oil them lightly with mineral or baby oil. The original colors should surface.

For shells used as planters or groupings, a clear acrylic spray rather than oil will both restore the natural color and help prevent dust accumulation. Or, simply storing cleaned shells in boxes will preserve them until you decide on a use for them. So treated, your shells literally will last several lifetimes.

OLIVES AND OTHER GLOSSY SHELLS... need to be cleaned with care so that the hard finish will not crack. For shells such as these, commonly picked up on sandy beaches, a bath in plain water or a mild detergent is usually all that is necessary.

BIVALVES... such as this large cockle which was plucked from knee-deep water at Atlantic Beach by a surfer, will remain in the position they dry in.

THE ATLANTIC MUREX... is a type of shell to be found in mounds at fish houses and often is inhabited by its own or a roving creature. These types need to be disinfected as well as cleaned in a bleach solution.

Nutrition A Magic Word Despite Fast Foods

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

DALLAS (UPI) — Nutrition is a magic word to American consumers, regardless of their day-to-day behavior, says Ruth Clark, senior vice president for a New York City market research organization.

Mrs. Clark says many are torn between their desire for a more nutritious diet and the decision to eat at fast food restaurants although they know ahead of time the food does not fit nutrition criteria.

She spoke at the 41st annual convention of the Food Marketing Institute, whose membership includes food retailers and wholesalers, manufacturers and related industries in the United States, Canada and abroad.

She said interest in nutrition is due largely to Americans' "all-consuming passion for physical fitness.

"If you have any doubts about the importance of the physical fitness trend, just count the people you personally know well who are jogging, doing exercises, participatory sports, etc., all in the name of well-being."

Mrs. Clark, senior vice-president of Yankelovich, Skelly and White, Inc., expects the fitness trend "to grow and grow and grow."

She based her prediction on a family nutrition trends study completed by her organization in February this year for "Woman's Day" magazine.

A national representative sample of 1,188 consumers 18 years of age and up were questioned in the final phase.

Asked how their current interest in nutrition compares with that of a few years ago, 77 percent said it was higher.

Yet, 71 percent agreed with the statement, "There's too much talk these days about what's good and what's bad for you when it comes to food."

Mrs. Clark said people are caught between their desire for government regulation and nutritional labeling, and their confusion over labeling language and government regulations.

She said these factors are a major barrier to families eating more nutritiously.

Consumer attitudes and behavior don't always match, she added.

Asked what considerations most influence their choice of food, the consumers named, in this order: balancing the budget (41 percent), weight-watching (35 percent), recommended nutrients (17 percent) and not sure (seven percent).

Asked their major concerns about food safety, ingredients and additives, 83 percent ranked appearance first on a list of 13, followed by vitamins, pesticides use and calories.

Mrs. Clark said the respondent ratio of 80 percent women to 20 percent men was selected so the study would more accurately reflect the ratio of persons making food decisions at home.

The fast food restaurant fad has taken the U.S. by storm, so much so that supermarket delegates to the convention ranked fast food departments at or near the top when they talked about competing for consumers' food dollars.

Yet consumers picking a fast food restaurant apparently forget about nutrition. Asked the major factors that influenced such choices, 55 percent ranked speedy service first, followed by friendliness of employees, appearance and decor, food variety, close to home and take-out service.

Asked about major barriers to good nutrition at home, 72 percent put pleasing their families at the head of the list, followed by budget, controversy over product safety, in a rut about what to cook and concern about calories.

Other barriers they named: between-meal snacks, no time to cook, eating in restaurants, everybody eating at different times and children asking for products advertised on television.

The study showed average consumers already feel they are eating more nutritiously than they did a few years ago.

And they feel guilty about eating in fast food restaurants because most associate those establishments with bad diet.

Yet, they keep on doing it: 36 percent said they had visited a fast food restaurant once in the past month, and 28 percent said they had visited four or more.

"It's almost as bad as going to a party," Mrs. Clark said.

They ranked party-going third on a list of favorite leisure time activities that influence diet negatively. Television watching was first, movie-going second, and fast food restaurants, fourth.

Only 58 percent said nutritional labels were easy to read, and 78 percent wanted labels to include more ingredient information.

Only 27 percent said they use labeling for meal planning, as opposed to 59 percent who use it to help get value for their dollars.

Mrs. Clark said the trend to demand nutrition labeling even for raw foods "is largely a reflection of concern with product safety."

Consumers ranked freshness first on a list of 10 major concerns about diet, health and food. Eating a balanced diet was fourth, following enough exercise and enough rest.

Asked if labeling and package warnings made a lot of difference in their buying habits, consumers put product dating, government warnings and advertised specials at the head of a list of 10 factors. Nutritional labeling was eighth.

The study divided families into conventionals and unconventional in their attitudes toward mealtimes, food choices and eating habits.

Unconventionals were defined as consumers who believe a balanced food day is more important than the old-fashioned balanced meal; that three squares a day are not necessary; and that any food can be eaten at any meal.

The groups were split 52 to 48 percent, Mrs. Clark said, but "I'd be willing to bet by 1980 the conventionals will be over the fence and on the other side."

Attitudes and behavior also parted company when consumers were asked what trade-offs they would accept. They voted for:

— More nutritional information on products even if it means higher prices;

— Stop advertising to children even if it cuts down on children's programming;

— More government safety regulations even if it means higher prices;

— And elimination of pesticides even if it cuts supplies and increases prices.

They voted against:

— Elimination of preservatives from such foods as jams and jellies at the expense of storage time;

— Elimination of artificial coloring from foods such as meat, gelatin mixes and sauces at the expense of appearance;

— And elimination of saccharine in soft drinks and diet foods at the expense of flavor.

The public is "sick of all the confusion, especially when it runs counter to their own self-interest or availability of substitutes," Mrs. Clark said. "... consumers are making their own judgments about what is important in product safety and what is not."

But she said she expects them to move cautiously in demanding withdrawal if a product is important to them and has no readily available substitute.

Sixty-five percent of the consumers surveyed hold government responsible for public education on nutrition, yet government tied with schools for last place on a list of 10 main sources from which they currently get such information.

Magazines and newspapers ranked first. Magazine and newspaper advertisements were eighth.

Miss Roberson, Mr. Adams Wed

BAYSIDE SHORES — Jackie Lynn Roberson and Nelson Dean Adams, both of Greenville, were married Saturday at 5 p.m. at the summer home of the bride's parents here at Chocowinity Bay, Washington. The Rev. Ralph Messick and Nan Cheek of Hooker Memorial Christian Church officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James David Roberson of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Doris Adams of Greenville and the late Mr. James Adams.

The vows were spoken before a bridal arch entwined with English ivy. The bridal path leading to the arch was decorated with white wicker baskets holding springerite ferns. Hanging baskets of assorted ferns interspersed with trailing begonias were featured among the pine and weeping willow trees. Guests stood around a rose garden for the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, wore a formal length gown of white tulle over white peau de soie designed with a scoop neckline and stand-up

Queen Anne collar, outlined in scalloped miniature silk Venice lace. The fitted empire bodice was enhanced by appliques of floral Venice lace. The short, flared caplet sleeves were edged in the miniature lace. Matching lace also encircled the waistline, from which fell the full circular skirt, extending into a chapel length train. She wore a imported braid bridal hat overlaid in tiers of silk organza accented with motifs of silk floral Venice lace. A double Dior bow of illusion at center back extended to chapel length with appliques of silk daisy lace scattered over the entire veil.

The bride carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses, baby's breath and English ivy, tied with yellow ribbons. Her only jewelry was a diamond necklace, a gift from the bridegroom.

Norma Whitaker of Greenville, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. She chose a formal length gown of floral print organza in shades of spring green, yellow, blue and orange. The gown was styled with a squared portrait neckline and short butterfly sleeves that fell down the back of the gown. The full circular skirt was enhanced by a cummerbund of goldenrod voile. She wore a garden hat in matching the goldenrod yellow encircled with the floral print organza. She carried a cascade bouquet of yellow miniature carnations, blue pom poms and white baby's breath, tied with yellow ribbon.

Kim Phelps, Betty Bartlett, Ramona Cannon, Tracey McLawhorn, cousin of the bride, and Dawn Adams, sister of the bridegroom, all of Greenville, served as bridesmaids. Each wore a gown identical to the honor attendant's dress and carried a white wicker baskets filled with English ivy, baby's breath, yellow carnations and tied with yellow ribbon.

Miss Angela Hudson, cousin of the bride of Tarboro, served as flower girl. Her dress matched the honor attendant's gown. She carried a white wicker basket filled with yellow rose petals and tied with yellow ribbon.

ding. The mother of the bride wore a formal length, V-neck sleeveless knit dress of coral and white accented with a white hybrid orchid corsage. The bridegroom's mother chose a formal length light blue V-neck dress with lace bodice and flowing chiffon over taffeta skirt accented with a white hybrid orchid corsage. Grandmothers of the bridal couple were remembered with white phalaenopsis orchid corsages.

The parents of the bride entertained at a reception following the ceremony in the garden of their summer home. The brides' table was covered with a white satin cloth and centered with a mixed arrangement of summer yellow and blue bridal flowers. After the first traditional slice was cut by the bridal couple, the four-tiered wedding cake was served by Yvonne McLawhorn, aunt of the bride, and Irene Adams, aunt of the bridegroom. Punch was poured by Betty Brown, aunt of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Bill Morrisette presided at the register. Molly Merritt distributed the rice bags.

For a wedding trip to Williamsburg, Va., the bride wore a two-piece blue suit and wore the roses lifted from her bouquet as a corsage. The bridal couple will reside in Greenville after the trip.

The bride is a graduate of J. H. Rose High School and is a senior at East Carolina University. The bridegroom is also a graduate of Rose High and attended ECU. He is employed by "The Daily Reflector."

Mrs. Norman H. Pollard, aunt of the bride, entertained the bridal couple, parents and grandparents with a formal dinner Thursday night.

The mother of the bridegroom entertained Friday evening with an after-rehearsal dinner for the wedding party and out-of-town guests. Yvonne McLawhorn, aunt of the bride, gave a bridesmaids' luncheon Saturday afternoon. The bride presented her attendants with gifts.

On The Local Scene by Rosalie Trotman

(Editor's Note: Free lance writer Patricia Evans Mills, of Rt. 2, Greenville, is guest columnist this week.)

If you want to collect a crowd, you don't have to parade naked down Evans Mall — just hang some paper on a wall in a public building. This week I've been doing just that at the Mental Health Center. Watching a skilled craftsman at work seems to be fascinating to most people. Free paperhanging lessons were dispensed to everybody, from psychiatrists to small children. Each had chosen one particular aspect of the job to be concerned with. For instance, how one cuts around a light switch or thermostat. One counselor was concerned with the method of cleanliness I was employing. I spread an old mattress pad on the floor behind me stacked my pasted paper on the far end, leaving the near end free to drop scraps on. This method worked fine, except when crossing doorways, when the mattress pad dropped a little behind, to avoid having a hazard in front of the door.

The counselor watched me drop scraps, (and, occasionally throw them) as she went through the halls in the course of her work. One day, as she came toward me, I attempted to sail a large scrap across two doorways to the mattress pad. Contrarily, the scrap kited across the hall and landed, paste-side down, of course, on the carpet. The counselor looked up at me in mock seriousness as she said, "I've waited all week for you to do that."

Most people stand in utter concentration as the paperhanger performs his sleight-of-hand magic, like cutting a hole in the middle of a piece of paper, and fitting the hole snugly around a thermostat, then say in amazement as they see the finished work, "How did you do that?"

A carpenter came up as I was making a stripe run straight down a crooked corner. "You ha't know whatcha doin' to do that dontcha?"

"Well, yes, there are certain tricks that you should learn."

"My wife wants me t' hang some in our bathroom, but I don't think I want to," he said, then launched into a dissertation on straight joints in the hanging of panelling that sounded much like paperhanging.

Small children express speechlessly the wonder of us all with their great round eyes and awed faces. Even I, as many times as I see it, can't help the burst of emotion I feel when the surface of a wall begins to glow with color and design under my hands. That's why I enjoy spectators when I work — our kinship to each other is reaffirmed in the common experience.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

According to her height and weight on the insurance charts, she should be a guard for the Lakers.

She has iron-starved blood, one shoulder is lower than the other, and she bites her fingernails.

She is the most beautiful woman I have ever seen. She should be. She's worked on that body and face for more than 60 years. The process for that kind of beauty can't be rushed.

The wrinkles in the face have been earned... one at a time. The stubborn one around the lips that has deepened with every "No!" The thin ones on the forehead that mysteriously appeared when the first child was born.

The eyes are protected by glass now, but you can still see the perma-crinkles around them. Young eyes are darting and fleeting. These are mature eyes that reflect a lifetime. Eyes that have glistened with pride, filled with tears of sorrow, snapped in anger, and burned from loss of sleep. They are now direct and penetrating and look at you when you speak.

The bulges are classics. They developed slowly from babies too sleepy to walk who had to be carried home from Grandma's, grocery bags lugged from the car, ashes carried out of the basement while her husband was at war. Now, they are fed by a minimum of activity, a full refrigerator, and TV bends.

The extra chin is custom-grown and takes years to perfect. Sometimes you can only see it from the side but it's there. Pampered women don't have an extra chin. They cream them away or pat the muscles until they become firm. But this chin has always been there, supporting a nodding head that slept in a chair all night... bent over knitting... praying.

The legs are still shapely, but the step is slower. They ran too often for the bus, stood a little too long when she "clerked" in the department store, got beat up while teaching her daughter how to ride a two-wheeler. They're purple at the back of the knees. The hands? They're small and veined and have been dunked, dipped, shook, patted, wrung, caught in doors, splintered, dyed, bitten and blistered, but you can't help but be impressed when you see the ring finger that has shrunk from years of wearing the same wedding ring. It takes time—and much more—to diminish a finger. I looked at mother long and hard the other day and said, "Mom, I have never seen you so beautiful." "I work at it," she snapped.

Greenville Debutantes Entertained

Greenville debutantes, their mothers and grandmothers were entertained at a luncheon Thursday held at the Greenville Golf and Country Club given by Mrs. L. T. Shotwell and Mrs. V. E. Wells Jr.

Debutantes honored were Elizabeth Garrett, Beth White, Grayson Deyton, Jane Farley, Patricia Wilkerson, Sherrill Cheatham and Muriel Flanagan.

The luncheon table was covered with a white cloth and decorated with arrangements of pastel snapdragons, roses and baby's breath. The foyer featured a miniature debutante holding an arm bouquet of red roses banked by magnolia leaves.

The honorees were given gifts of sterling silver stickpins by the hostesses.

Prior to the luncheon, refreshments were served at the home of Mrs. Shotwell.

80-Year-Olds Have It Made

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: A friend of mine is giving her father an 80th birthday party. Her invitation read: "No gifts, please. But do bring an appropriate poem or piece of philosophy to place in a scrapbook to commemorate the occasion."

About four or five years ago, you had a letter in your column from a man who was glad to be 80 because it served as an excuse for everything. I thought it was so good that I cut it out, and now I can't find it. That letter would be ideal for my friend's scrapbook. Please, Abby, try to locate it and run it again. Thank you.

PHOENIX READER

DEAR READER: A sharp-eyed secretary located it. And here it is—with pleasure:

DEAR ABBY: We oldsters sure do get away with a lot just because we've managed to keep breathing longer than most folks. I have just celebrated my 80th birthday and I've got it made.

If you forget someone's name or an appointment or what you said yesterday, just explain that you are 80, and you will be forgiven. If you spill soup on your tie, or forget to shave half your face, or take another man's hat by mistake,

Gavin-Ayers Vows Said

BLOUNTS CREEK — Ina Tice Ayers and Richard Durell Gavin were united in marriage Saturday at 3 p.m. at Elizabeth Chapel Church of Christ here. Maxie Gavin, uncle of the bridegroom, officiated at the double ring ceremony. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Harris Tice Sr. of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Gavin of Blounts Creek.

The church was decorated with tiered candelabra filled with white flowers. A decorated prie-dieu was placed at the altar where the bridal couple knelt for the closing prayer and benediction.

Mrs. Maxie Gavin of Washington, pianist, presented a program of wedding music. Miss Adele West of Laurinburg, soloist, sang "We've Only Just Begun" and "The Wedding Prayer."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a formal gown of ivory silked organza over peau de soie and Venise lace. The gown was fashioned with a high neckline which featured scattered Venise lace over the sheer yoke, an empire waist and sheer bishop sleeves with cuffs trimmed with lace and bridal buttons. The full skirt was enhanced with lace appliques, while the chapel length train fell from a bow centered at the back of the waistline. The bride selected a long mantilla with scattered appliques of Venise lace attached to a Camelot lace-covered cap. She carried an orchid attached to a prayer book tied with bridal satin.

Mrs. Harriet Jarman of Monroe, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. She wore a formal length maize organza gown designed with a high neckline encircled with white ruffled Cluny lace. Lace bands accented the empire bodice, centered with miniature maize covered buttons, which also decorated the sheer bishop sleeves. Matching satin ribbon trimmed the waistline. She chose a ruffled brim white straw hat banded in maize ribbon with long streamers and carried a long-stemmed mum.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Susan Clark of Winterville and Mrs. Nancy Ross of Greenville, sisters of the bride. They wore gowns styled identically to the honor attendant's in blue organza. Both wore hats banded in blue ribbon and carried long-stemmed mums.

Miss Angela Ayers, daughter of the bride, served as flower girl. Her dress matched that of the honor attendant. She carried a basket of mixed flowers.

The father of bridegroom served as his son's best man. Ushers included Thomas H. Tice Jr. and Billy Tice, brothers of the bride, both of Greenville. The bride's mother wore a pink dress with matching accessories. The mother of the bridegroom chose a mint green dress with matching accessories. Both mothers wore white carnation corsages. Mrs. Otis Cowan presided at the guest register.

The bride is employed by Empire Brushes of Greenville. The bridegroom is employed by Texas Gulf of Aurora.

Home Teletype A 'Radio' For Deaf

By JOE EDWARDS
 Associated Press Writer
 NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — At the public library they're developing a system to teletype the latest news, weather, job listings and other data to the homes of the deaf.

Under the program, which is supposed to be the most extensive of its kind in the country, home teletype machines are to be connected by telephone with an automated information center at the library. Using an acoustic coupler, the deaf can dial a special telecommunication number at the center and get a printout of various types of information.

Library officials hope the information can include up to 41 minutes of local, state, national and international news, current weather forecasts, up to 2,000 job listings, public service announcements and possibly texts of speeches and news conferences conducted by government officials.

"We're the first in the country to do this on this level," project coordinator Steve Terry said in an interview. "No one else is providing the amount of local information that we will."

Terry hopes the service will be free, but those participating may have to buy the teletypes — which cost up to $1,400 new and $300 used. The machines can be purchased from a commercial manufacturer or from a local deaf man, who reconditions them for a living.

"We are lobbying in Washington for money to buy the teletype machines for the deaf," Terry said. "One of my goals is to come up with the money some way."

Sword Broker Is Advertising

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Dick Dodge, a 43-year-old former telephone installer, took out the following advertisement in a local newspaper recently:

"Honda, '77 Accord, 5 spd. 12,000 mi., $4,950, or trade for fine samurai swords."

"It's no joke," Dodge said. "I'm a Japanese sword broker. I want to get rid of an extra car, so I figured I'd combine that with work. There is a large retired military population in San Diego. Many people brought these things back as souvenirs."

The swords, he says, range in value from $100 to $10,000, depending on age and condition.

Dodge and his Japanese wife, Kayoko, live half the year here and half in Japan, where they trade their wares at auctions.

"I take the swords back to Japan and sell them myself for double the price," Dodge said.

Found Gold In Snail Pen

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (AP) — A 39-year-old French entrepreneur has found a gold mine in California's common garden snails.

Francois Picart, who ran a family inn on the outskirts of Paris, now pays people to pick common garden snails, which he turns into one of the world's greatest delicacies — escargots.

"California is a snail paradise and I can produce better escargots here than they do in France," said Picart, who converted a butcher shop in Santa Rosa into an escargots factory.

Picart pays 25 cents a pound for deliveries and also trucks in snails from artichoke farms in Pescadero, where they are picked by farmworkers.

The snails are kept in pens, where they feast on fresh cabbage, wheat bran and corn meal.

When they reach the right size, they are fed a water-only diet for 24 hours. Then they are cooked for three to five minutes, removed from their shells, washed again and cooked in herbs and butter.

And with a final American touch, Picart freezes the escargots and places a label on the package: "These escargots were born in California from French ancestors."

Leon Keyserling: A Pursuer Of Full Employment

By DONALD H. MAY
WASHINGTON (UPI) —
For 45 years Leon Keyserling has been a knight errant of economics pursuing the grail of full employment.

Working behind the scenes, he has been one of the principal draftsmen of the Humphrey-Hawkins bill, which would create new, policy-making machinery designed to lead the nation toward full employment.

Three decades ago, he had a hand in shaping the Employment Act of 1946, which established policy machinery to seek "maximum employment, production and purchasing power."

In between, Keyserling has espoused — sometimes as a solo voice — a brand of economics which goes deeper than growth rates and price indices and is at its heart a set of life values.

Keyserling, now 70, discussed his work in the large, tree-shaded Washington home, where he and his wife Mary, also an economist, live and work.

He began by challenging the idea — held by, among others, President Carter — that unemployment has been improving and that inflation is the nation's top problem.

"It's really a confusion between means and ends," Keyserling said. "The employment of people is a human as well as an economic end. It's a social end. It's a moral end."

"Prices — like taxes, like wages, like Social Security payments — they're all means toward that end. And you have to evaluate the means in terms of the end."

Keyserling contends that for 15 years the country has been confusing ends and means in attempting to control inflation by allowing unemployment to remain high.

"The administration is doing it now when it says we've got to have a tight budget to fight inflation," he said. "(Federal Reserve Chairman William) Miller is doing it when he says we've got to raise interest rates higher and higher to fight inflation because that's problem No. 1."

As Keyserling sees it, unemployment is falling only when viewed in the short run, since the worst of the recent recession. The unemployment rate fell from 9 percent in May 1975 to 5.7 percent last June, although Keyserling says statistics underestimate the problem and the true rate is 8 or 10 percent.

"Unemployment today — and by unemployment I include idle plant — is much higher than at the comparable stage of any of the four previous recoveries since 1953," Keyserling said.

The current recovery is at its peak, he added, and "unemployment is higher at the peak of recovery than it was at the trough of two of the earlier recessions."

Each recession over the last quarter century, Keyserling contends, has left the country with more waste of human and production capacity than its predecessor: "We're chronically losing ground."

He says America is in a "long term retreat" from the "ultimate source of our wealth and progress," the full utilization of these resources.

He estimates that since 1953 this has cost the nation $5.3 trillion in national production (measured in 1977 dollars), more than 72 million person-years of employment and more than $1 trillion in tax revenues, which could have been used for major national needs.

The federal deficit, he says, is largely the result of unemployment. In the past, he said, inflation has tended to be lowest when the economy has been close to full use of its resources.

On top of all this, Keyserling said, are the social costs of unemployment — including crime and suicides — as well as social danger: "What are we going to do when (resentment over) 40 percent teenage black unemployment erupts again?"

The Humphrey-Hawkins bill amends the Employment Act of 1946 and sets an "interim target" to reduce unemployment to 4 percent by 1983. Beyond that it would create machinery through which future presidents and Congresses would set and try to reach targets intended to lead to full employment and full use of resources.

This concept goes far back in Keyserling's career.

He came to Washington in 1933 from Columbia and Harvard Law School. As legislative assistant to Sen. Robert F. Wagner of New York, he worked on New Deal legislation dealing with economic recovery, labor relations, housing, banking and Social Security. Before and during World War II, he held posts in a series of housing agencies.

In 1944, he entered an essay contest sponsored by a brewery on the subject of post-war employment and won second prize of $10,000. His thesis was that the president and Congress should set goals and develop policies to achieve a full economy.

Keyserling interested Wagner and several other senators in the idea, and it became the basis of the Employment Act of 1946, which set up the president's Council of Economic Advisers and the congressional Joint Economic Committee.

Keyserling maintains the "true mandate" of the 1946 law has been ignored: "All too frequently, those in charge refused to set any goals. The whole process was ignored. They've issued business reports, mostly of a forecasting nature."

President Truman appointed Keyserling vice chairman and later chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, a post he held until 1953.

"Harry Truman," Keyserling said, "did not have six or eight principal economic advisers, where you could never tell who it is, and where they're vying with each other for ascendancy, and you don't know whether its Blumenthal or Schultz or Strauss or Lance, when he was in, or Eisenstat."

His term on Truman's council included the end of World War II, demobilization and the Korean War.

"Yet during that seven-year period, half war and half peace," he said, "we averaged 4 percent unemployment and got it down to 2.9. We averaged 3 percent inflation and got it down to 0.8."

"We did that by application of exactly the same kinds of principles and policies that have been written into the Humphrey-Hawkins bill."

Keyserling left government in 1953 and until 1971 was a wellpaid consulting economist in Washington. His clients ranged from 13 of the 15 largest utilities to New York City's policemen, firemen, transit workers and schoolteachers.

"I decided I'd provided myself with adequate security," he said, "and that I really wasn't interested in helping people make a little more money. So in 1971 I shut the whole thing down, and I've done nothing but public service work since."

Keyserling describes himself as a liberal "in the sense that I believe the ultimate purpose of an economy is to meet the needs of people and that America has become a rich enough economy to exhibit some equity and fairness and morality even if it slows down our rate of economic growth."

But he insists this greater equity actually would enlarge growth.

"The primary purpose of the federal budget," he said, "was expressed better than anybody else by a man named Abraham Lincoln when he said the function of government is to do for the people what they cannot do so well in their separate and individual capacities."

He deplores the growing mood of the country to cut taxes.

"Most of the discussion is to the effect that everything we've done has failed," he said, "that the main liberal viewpoint toward economic policy has failed; the New Deal failed; Johnson's domestic policies failed; we gotta do the opposite; we'll just cut taxes incontinently and therefore there'll be more money to spend and everybody'll have it."

"The New Deal didn't fail. It made many errors. It didn't do more because of opposition, because there were inadequate amounts of what needed to be done. The poverty war failed because it wasn't funded, not because it wasn't a good idea."

"And now the people who didn't fund it ... now want to abandon entirely the idea of public investment to meet needs that obviously can't be met privately."

While he favors some shift from property taxes to more progressive forms he opposes tax cuts which ignore the "great needs" of the nation.

Shipbuilders Busy, But Fear Big Cutbacks Coming

DAY AND NIGHT the Newport News Shipbuilding Co. builds huge commercial carriers like these, and navy vessels. At the same time, executives at the nation's largest shipyard worry about the future. (UPI Photo) in Bath, Me. Another yard, Seatrain Shipbuilding Corp. in New York, eliminated its night shift.

Electric Boat shipyard in Groton, Conn., a division of General Dynamics that does solely Navy work, fired 3,000 blue and white collar workers, but landed new contracts and is rehiring.

Bethlehem Steel's Sparrows Point, Md., facility has an empty order book after 1979. Unless new orders come, there could be big cutbacks in the 3,100-man work force.

Asked about Assistant Commerce Secretary Blackwell's prediction the shipyard may close, a Bethlehem spokesman requested anonymity, then said: "He is entitled to his opinion, but we are hoping to get new work so we're not one of the yards that has to shut down."

Maritime officials, both private and government, insist the shipbuilding industry will not sink. They say demand for new ships will be stronger when current vessels age and are rendered obsolete — but, possibly, only the strong shipyards will survive.

Edward Hood, president of the Shipbuilders Council of America, said: "I'm not close enough to the management philosophies of the shipyards to say if any will fold, but from the standpoint of available work and projections of probable contracts, a number of yards face critical decisions."

"The shipbuilding industry has historically been one of ups and down," he said. "I'm confident that once the world economy picks up, there will be a restoration of shipbuilding in this country."

The crux of commercial shipping problems, a reduced demand for tankers, can be traced directly to the Arab oil embargo.

Since the end of the embargo, the price of oil has increased better than six-fold. As a result, demand has not grown as fast as projected — and shipbuilding has suffered.

The problem is worldwide. The Maritime Administration says 353 tankers — two of them American-owned — are currently unused. Other idle tankers have been converted into cargo ships, gutting that market.

An overabundance of ships has driven down rates, aggravating shippers' problems.

Fleets from the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, as well as newcomers from South Korea and Brazil, are moving into the tight market by undercutting rates up to 40 percent.

The government agency in Norway that guarantees ship mortgages wants to limit liabilities by renegotiating terms of guarantees with lenders. Japan's largest shipper, Japan Lines, has managed to avoid bankruptcy, but only by stretching out the payment of debts totaling $300 million.

The Maritime Administration says many American shippers are riding out the storm well, but others are suffering. Two San Francisco-based firms, Pacific Far East Lines and Bulk Food Carriers, have slipped into limited bankruptcy, but both still operate.

Thirty years ago, U.S. ships carried 60 percent of the nation's foreign trade, according to the industry-sponsored National Maritime Council. Today, that figure is barely 5 percent.

Shipbuilders have urged Congress to pass legislation that would require that up to 9.5 percent of the nation's imports and exports be carried on American-made ships. Thus far, these efforts have failed.

Simultaneously, the industry blames another part of its problems on government inaction in the area of energy and environmental policies.

There are now 16 liquefied natural gas tankers being built in the United States, but new orders have come to a halt.

They are being held up until the government decides how much LNG should be imported and at what price.

Orders for tankers have been held back not only from a slowdown in the growth of energy demand, but also because of a pending decision on whether they must have special design features, such as double bottoms, to prevent oil spills.

Also, the Carter administration has decided to slash the Navy shipbuilding program from 30 to 15 ships a year for the next five years, reducing a major source of work for private shipyards.

Traditionally, the industry receives federal financial assistance. This fiscal year, it will receive nearly $560 million in construction, operating and other subsidies. There is a possibility of more federal help.

Last spring, President Carter ordered a six-month interagency study of the maritime industry's problems. Renewed efforts are also expected in passing legislation to limit foreign flag fleets from participating in regular U.S. trade routes.

A.L. Winall, Newport News' manager of commercial ship marketing and sales, is waiting anxiously.

"Unless our government develops a maritime policy that will result in the U.S. maritime industry being competitive with other maritime nations, there is a distinct possibility that there will no longer be a U.S. maritime industry as we know it today," he said.

By THOMAS FERRARO
NEWPORT NEWS, Va. (UPI) — Day and night, the Newport News Shipbuilding Co. builds huge commercial carriers and Navy vessels. At the same time, its executives worry about the future.

On July 7, only days after laying off 1,000 of its 25,000 employees, the nation's largest shipyard announced cancellation of a $150 million contract for an ultra-large crude oil carrier for Zapata Corp. of Houston. It could foreshadow more cutbacks — unless new work can be secured.

Since there are few contracts available, Newport News Shipbuilding — and the rest of the industry — is in troubled waters.

Experts say that up to 50,000 blue and white collar employees, nearly 30 percent of the maritime work force, may be laid off in the next few years. As many as 20,000 production workers could be trimmed in the next 18 months. Robert Blackwell, U.S. Assistant Commerce Secretary for Maritime Affairs, predicts that some shipyards may fold, including Bethlehem Steel Corp.'s Sparrows Point, Md., yard.

There are several reasons for the shipyards' plight, which dates back to the 1973 Arab oil embargo.

The main problem is an overabundance of tanker and cargo ships. Contributing factors include the depressed world economy, foreign builders and shippers undercutting American rates, indecision over pending federal maritime regulations and President Carter's halving of Navy shipbuilding, all of which is done at private yards.

"Right now, there are more than enough cargo ships to go around and there is a glut of tankers," said Steve Vincent, a public information officer with the U.S. Maritime Administration, which helps subsidize commercial shipbuilding.

"The layoff of 1,000 persons at Newport News is one of several we foresee down the road for the industry," added Vincent. "There simply aren't enough contracts coming in to keep them at full employment."

Newport News and many of the nation's other 14 commercial shipyards are now relatively busy. But others already have half-empty drydocks, and future prospects for all are grim — there just isn't enough work to go around.

In addition to the commercial shipyards, there are eight Navy yards, plus a half-dozen private shipyards that do Navy work exclusively.

Newport News, a division of Houston-based Tenneco, is one of a few involved in both commercial and Navy work, a factor that may help it better endure the crunch that isn't expected to ease until at least the mid-1980s.

All the yards are feeling the pinch.

Currently, there are 58 commercial ships on order in the United States, 48 scheduled to be delivered by the end of 1979, according to the Maritime Administration.

In 1970, when the future appeared bright, Congress predicted there would be orders for 20 new tankers each year. During the past few years, however, the figure has been less than half that.

This past year, 40 employees were laid off and then recalled at the Bath Iron Works shipyard

Finding Some Uses For Wood Waste

EUGENE Ore. (AP)—Wood waste from logging operations that once went up in smoke or kept down weeds in someone's garden is now being developed into products that could heat a building or be used for many other purposes.

Researchers around Oregon are tinkering with experimental factories to see if the tons of bark and scrap wood produced every year can be used profitably.

In Albany, Ore., a company working for the federal Department of Energy is using a $3.8-million testing laboratory to squeeze heavy fuel oil out of powdered wood chips.

A 50-year-old Brownsville, Ore., entrepreneur turns out about 125 tons of wood pellets per day, described as more efficient than coal. The pellets, dubbed "Woodex," have heated a hospital for two years.

An old sawmill about 10 miles north of Eugene produces a form of wax from Douglas fir bark that can be used in furniture polish, carbon paper and plastic moldings.

Rudy Gunnerman's Brownsville factory sells Woodex — which looks like rabbit food — to about a dozen institutional customers in the Pacific Northwest. He said pellets costing $1.20 to make provide the heat output of coal costing $2.40 or oil at $3.

His process starts with bark delivered to the plant from local lumber mills. It is ground to the consistency of face powder and then compressed at pressures of more than 30,000 pounds per square inch.

Western State Hospital has used the pellets for heating since 1976. Jim Spangler, hospital plant manager, said the fuel saves about $500 per day in heating costs, reduces maintenance and has eliminated spending $200,000 for anti-pollution equipment.

Researchers Seek Avoiding Of Damage To Brain

EDITOR'S NOTE—Can brain damage be avoided when oxygen to the brain is shut off by heart failure or head injury? Doctors in Pittsburgh think they may have found a way to put an injured brain to sleep with barbiturates and awaken it when the injury heals, avoiding the damage that so often is unavoidable.

By DAVE TABOLT
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) — A man is injured in a traffic accident and arrives at the hospital in a coma. He has suffered a severe blow to the head. Brain activity is abnormal.

One consequence of the injury is swelling of the brain. If the swelling continues, the brain will eventually choke off its own blood supply. Death or permanent brain damage is almost certain.

As a last resort, doctors administer a barbiturate. Every few hours for four or five days, the dose is repeated. Artificial life support systems keep the patient's body functioning.

The treatment ends and the drug wears off. Within two days, the man regains consciousness. The swelling is gone, and while he may have paralysis or partial blindness from the blow, secondary damage — brain swelling — has been averted.

The scenario isn't medical fiction. Doctors have already found they can shut off a human brain with barbiturates and then restore it without permanent damage. (Barbituric acid, first synthesized in 1864, is now used for sleeping pills, anesthetics, and to control epilepsy.)

The treatment is being applied clinically in desperate cases, is still in the experimental stage and is not without critics. Some doctors say the use on humans may be premature; others believe the side effects of barbiturates may outweigh the advantages of the treatment. And if barbiturates restore to normal life people who would have suffered brain damage, they may also allow some to live with permanent brain damage who otherwise would have died.

"For my money, the question is not answered yet," says Dr. John Michenfelder of the Mayo Clinic.

For Dr. Derek Bruce, a neurosurgeon at Children's Hospital in Philadelphia, however, the treatment has proved a success. Bruce says it has cut the death rate among young people with serious head injuries from 50 percent to 9 percent. And in San Diego, it cut the adult death rate in 60 cases from 50 percent to 25 percent.

"We take total control of body and brain and try to keep it at rest," says Bruce. "It's a concept of suspended animation coming to reality, if you like. We're talking about something that three to four years ago was unthinkable. Now it's do-able."

Dr. Peter Safar heads the University of Pittsburgh Resuscitation Research Institute, where doctors saved a middle-aged man from brain damage despite 22 minutes of circulatory arrest. In the past, normal recovery was thought impossible if the heart was not restarted within five minutes.

"The brain, although very vulnerable, is specially managed has a greater survival potential than we realized in the past," says Safar, an anesthesiologist.

The Pittsburgh team began work on animal brain resuscitation tests in 1970, and in 1974 opened an intensive care unit for monkeys whose brains could be shut off under anesthesia. Relying on earlier barbiturate studies with stroke victims, Dr. Edwin Nemoto and Dr. Achiel Bleyaert suggested that the first monkey trials test the drug's value in treating simulated cardiac arrest.

"The results were startling," says Safar. So human trials were begun. Controlled trials at 10 American and European medical centers are now planned, with some patients getting barbiturates and others getting standard care.

Researchers are divided over human experiments. At present, they are being used only in the extreme cases — persons clinically dead.

Candidates for brain resuscitation at the University of Pittsburgh and associated medical centers aren't breathing, and have no pulse in major arteries. Their hearts have been restarted, but their brains have stopped, with no sign of electrical activity. They have been comatose at least 10 minutes.

In 40 trials here and in Europe since 1975, 14 of 22 patients whose hearts stopped for five minutes or longer recovered full brain use. Some died, but not due to brain damage.

"I think on the basis of what we know, probably 90 percent or more of such events would have led to permanent brain damage or death with standard treatments," Safar says.

But some researchers argue that further laboratory work is needed.

"Do barbiturates administered after cardiac arrest alter the pathology that develops in the brain? For my money, the question is not answered yet," says Michenfelder.

Wineries Have European Roots

By CAROLE FELDMAN
Associated Press Writer

EGG HARBOR TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — On the sandy soil at the shore and in the industrial north, 11 "little old winemakers" call New Jersey home, making the Garden State the nation's fourth largest wine producer.

The winemakers are mostly automated private concerns, annually producing 4.5 million gallons in 60 varieties, or 1 percent of the nation's total wine output.

California leads the nation in wine output, producing 306 million gallons annually. New York is second with 30 million gallons and Illinois third with 8.5 million gallons, according to figures from the state Department of Labor and Industry.

"People have to be educated to New Jersey wines," said Barbara Muller, hospitality manager for the Renault Winery here. "Americans were brought up thinking you can't make good wine in America."

Many of the New Jersey wineries have their origins in Europe.

Louis Nicholas Renault left Rheims, the champagne capital of France, in 1864 and established what is now the state's largest winery.

Frank Tomasello, who learned winemaking in Italy, founded Tomasello's winery in 1933. Krumm Winery in Linwood and Gross Highland Winery in Absecon Highlands were founded by German-instructed winemakers.

New Jersey wines are produced predominantly from New Jersey grapes and are sold primarily in New Jersey.

The cost of raising grapes has resulted in a drop in wine production in the Garden State, said Scott McGlasson, spokesman for the state Department of Labor and Industry.

Costs also include a $3,000 fee for the license required by the state Division of Alcoholic Beverage Control.

New Jersey farmers last year grew 1,100 tons of grapes on 352 acres. All but 200 tons of the grapes were sold for processing, state agriculture officials said.

It takes about five years for a vine to produce good winegrapes. The pressing and fermentation process takes about eight weeks and then Renault ages its wines for four years in oak casks 80 to 120 years old, Mrs. Muller said.

Several vintners conduct taste tours, giving prospective customers a glance at the winemaking operations and a sip of the product.

White Collar

Crime Study

NEW YORK (AP) — Law enforcement agencies have a difficult time battling white-collar crime due to a lack of adequate information, according to an American Management Association survey.

A substantial grant has been awarded to the AMA by the Justice Department's Law Enforcement Assistance Administration to conduct the nation's first study of white-collar crime.

The AMA says it has created a "Crimes Against Business Council," which is to develop instructions for managers on how to prevent these crimes and what to do about them.

Replacing All 3,000 Windows

NEW YORK (AP) — The Woolworth Building is replacing all of its approximately 3,000 windows in a move to cut by 20 percent the amount of energy needed to heat and air condition the 60-story building.

The $2.6-million contract for the new thermo glaze windows is billed as the largest single agreement of its kind ever awarded in the United States.

ESP Dean Looks Back On Voyage Into Unknown

EDITOR'S NOTE—Dr. J. B. Rhine has spent a long lifetime in hot pursuit of slippery phenomena that a lot of other scientists don't believe exist. Extrasensory perception was a researcher's battleground when Rhine entered it and has remained one. Now in his eighties, the dean of ESP looks back on his voyage into the unknown.

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Over 60 years ago, Joseph Banks Rhine and his wife, Louisa, were much taken by claims of mediums to communicate with the departed.

Both doctors of botany, they started wondering if this could possibly be true. They were skeptics, but they were determined to find out if the dead could communicate with the living. It was a quest that would twist and turn and change directions, but one that would dominate their lives. It was also a quest that would turn ESP into a household acronym.

Now in their 80s — "We average 84," says Dr. Rhine — they admit they never found the answer to that particular question.

But along the way, they found others. J.B. Rhine, as everyone calls him, became the dean of Extrasensory Perception. His experiments at Duke University and later at the independent Institute for Parapsychology at the Foundation for Research into the Nature of Man, convinced millions of the existence of ESP, got the U.S. government interested and produced reams of far from readable reports on efforts to harness this elusive ability in controlled experiments.

There were sour notes, too. The Rhines were battered by controversy as they tried to prove the existence of this other side of the mind; they were accused of juggling figures and, after all these years, many scientists feel they have proven nothing.

Rhine, still spry at 83 with a full head of gray hair and mellow brown eyes, is undeterred. "Far from that," he says. "My ambition grows. There is so much left to do. It's been harder and slower than I had anticipated. But there are more possibilities now."

"Whenever I say 'I, I mean we,'" Dr. Rhine corrects himself, nodding his head to his wife, a scientist of parapsychology in her own right, the author of four published books and presently in search of a publisher for her fifth.

The Rhines grew up together in northern Ohio and after 58 years of marriage, they still can look like teen-agers on their first date.

The Rhines were teaching at the University of West Virginia, he in botany and Louisa in Latin, when they decided to follow their quest.

With only a few hundred dollars in their pocket, they set off for Harvard University to try to work with Professor William McDougall, an Englishman whose interest in psychic research was well known. Their first communication was definitely without the psychic touch.

"He was about to get on a steamer to go around the world," recalls Dr. Rhine. "We barely caught him before he left."

Instead, they trained for a year with Dr. Walter Franklin Price of the Boston Society for Psychic Research.

"We practically camped in the park," recalls Mrs. Rhine. "I cleaned bathrooms in a rooming house and J.B. stoked the furnace that year," remembers Mrs. Rhine. That was 1926-27.

The following year, they followed Dr. McDougall to Duke.

The Rhines worked with mediums for 10 years. They found mostly frauds, but they also found some who were getting information in inexplicable ways — for example, knowing the inscription on the grave marker of an investigator's relative. How did the mediums get the message? The Rhines started poking into telepathy, clairvoyance, precognition and later into psychokinesis — moving objects by mind power. They coined "psi" as an umbrella term for such phenomena.

"After 10 years of study and getting mediums into the lab, we decided we weren't getting anywhere," says Dr. Rhine. "We all knew the medium had gotten the information telepathically, but we could never see the way to show she got it from the dead. We all decided to put it on the shelf. We weren't ready. There was no sense in building bridges with the same span missing in all of them."

Instead, he turned his attention to ESP. He started the world of psychology and science when he published a report about a young divinity student, Hubert Pearce, who in the early 30s was able to beat the laws of chance. Sitting in one building, Pearce was able to call Zener cards, a special deck of 25 with five different symbols, being pulled by an experimenter in another building.

Those who didn't want to accept his finding simply said he cheated. Others asked, but what if he didn't? Dr. Rhine asked why and how this remarkable subject was able to attain such a score. He has never found that answer.

Dr. Rhine, hard of hearing ever since he was a Marine sharpshooter in World War I, has had other outstanding subjects. But he has never been able to isolate why ESP sometimes works and sometimes doesn't. Even Pearce lost his ability after his girl friend jilted him.

Dr. Rhine's experiments moved from individual card guessing to working with computers and polygraphs; to working with animals, groups of students, random subjects; to combinations of ESP and psychokinesis, tests miles and miles apart, the effects of hypnosis and reviews of all the literature.

But after all these years, what have we learned?

Dr. Rhine is guarded in his reply.

"It isn't like most things in the physical sciences, where there is a more predictable outcome. We're up against so much. If this were an orthodox science, we would have been accepted long ago. It's really a materialistic world beyond anyone's dream. We have become so successful in overcoming health problems and food problems. We expect everything to go that way. When it doesn't the critics say we must be doing something wrong. We are too used to the senses giving us perfect answers.

"We're in the dark on the very idea of the mental. What is the reason I don't see red or green? This is far from the physical world. The physical world almost stands between us. We've been blinded by our materialistic habits of mind. If we can wake up from that, that would be the breakthrough."

The one thing parapsychology has never been able to produce is the truly repeatable experiment. For instance, if you mix hydrogen and oxygen under the right circumstances, water will always result.

Not so with ESP. A subject may score incredibly high for days, then drop to chance or below. What parapsychology has never found is the formula under which ESP can be demonstrated. Perhaps there is none.

Research continues.

Over the years, Dr. Rhine has tried to meet his critics head on.

To accommodate objections, "we have made changes we thought weren't necessary," Dr. Rhine says. "We still meet them halfway or more. We raised our standards (of research) as to what was significant. I'm more critical than the critics."

He is busily polishing the remarks from a recent debate with Dr. Paul Kurtz, a philosophy professor at the State University of New York at Buffalo. Dr. Kurtz heads the Committee for the Scientific Investigation of Claims of the Paranormal, one of the many questioners of parapsychology. Dr. Kurtz contended that parapsychology has never been able to repeat the precise results of experiments in the laboratory and that other investigators have been unable to duplicate the findings that Dr. Rhine and other parapsychologists have claimed.

Counters Rhine: "You can't expect someone with no experience to be able to do that."

Dr. Rhine also complains that opponents like Dr. Kurtz lump parapsychologists with little green men from Mars, Pyramid power and Bigfoot. Not so, says Kurtz. "Rhine must be given due credit for trying to apply the scientific method." But Kurtz doubts the significance of many of the experimental statistics.

Dr. Rhine is cooperating with two historians who want to write the history of parapsychology. "There is a certain state of ripeness. It has been 100 years since it turned experimental," says Dr. Rhine. And he feels the future is expanding.

"We've done most of our stumbling in the past. We are learning fast. We're getting better training, but we have miles to go. We know now we're not going to go on the rocks. We're not boastful, not cocksure, but we're hard to scare."

Just To Spend $1 Trillion

FARMINGTON, Conn. (UPI) — Economists throw numbers out in a blizzard of digits — the U.S. will have a gross national product this year of $2 trillion; world free trade is a $1 trillion, $70 billion market. What does it all mean?

Well, says Emhart Corporation in its company newspaper, $1 trillion would buy you 172.4 million cars, or 18.4 million new houses.

To put it another way, if you shopped 24 hours a day, seven days a week, you'd have to spend $100,000 a minute for 19 years to spend $1 trillion.

FEWER STILL SMOKE

CHICAGO (UPI) — Fewer than one doctor in five now admits to smoking, according to the American Medical Association. In a poll, 18.2 percent of doctors said they still smoked, compared with 30 percent 10 years ago, the AMA said.

COUNT ON THE 1580

When you've got 67 years of building peanut harvesting equipment behind you, you pretty well know what you're doing. The Lilliston 1580 is a prime example.

There are 5900 pounds of clean harvesting performance here — a lot less weight than you'll find on other makes. Here, too, is the exclusive separator system which adjusts to a wide range of field conditions.

Every pound's working for you. There's none of that dead weight that only builds up costs. Yet it brings in a payload as big as anything else in its class.

And it's a true Lilliston — built to run hard and run long. Steel channel framing, for instance, gives the 1580 extra strength, reducing the metal fatigue that's the big factor in long performance.

It's all here in the Lilliston 1580. This is some lean machine.

More Records Certified As Gold, Even Platinum

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

We must be buying more records, or we're all buying the most popular ones, because more records were certified gold and platinum by the Recording Industry Association of America during the first six months of 1978 than during the first half of last year.

Expresses Self In Photographs

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Despite the handicap of deafness, Richard Norton, 19, has been successful at a hobby he hopes to make a career — photography.

"Because I am unable to hear any speech even with a hearing aid, verbal communication is very difficult for me. I use my photography to communicate and to express myself," says Norton, who has won more than 40 photography awards.

His interest in picture-taking began in 1971 when his family took a trip West.

"I wanted to be able to tell people about the trip," says Norton, of Greenwich, N.Y. "My speech was not good, but I could show pictures."

His success with a simple camera and four rolls of film encouraged him to enter the county fair, where his photographs won two blue ribbons. His most recent and largest award came from being named a national winner in the 4-H photography project sponsored by Eastman Kodak Co.

For this he received a $1,000 scholarship grant he's using at Rochester Institute of Technology, where he's a sophomore at the National Technical Institute for the Deaf, one of two colleges for deaf persons in the United States. He is majoring in photography.

"I need a career in which oral communication will not be of major importance, and where my technical and artistic talent can be used," he says. "I would like to be a photojournalist or a sports photographer."

"The 4-H photography program encouraged my early efforts and my awards have convinced me that I can succeed at this in spite of my handicap."

Norton has taken several thousand still photographs, and used snapshots to help him get A's on English compositions. He has produced nine movies including three comedies, two horror films, two travelogues and one drama, plus a 10-minute movie based on the Edgar Allan Poe story, "The Tell-Tale Heart."

In addition to horse races and other sports, a favorite photographic subject is people, especially children. Among his suggestions for getting good snapshots of children:

"Let children play until they forget the photographer is present. Then take your pictures. Be patient; move in close to record expressions and details so important in photographs of children. Be alert to changes in lighting, particularly if there are unattractive shadows on the subject."

PLAN YOUR HOME

TRI-LEVEL PLAN, TWO STORY LIVING ROOM

For a vacation home without a hint of "roughing it," the Beaufort, an appealing three level design, combines decks and balconies with an impressive two story living room.

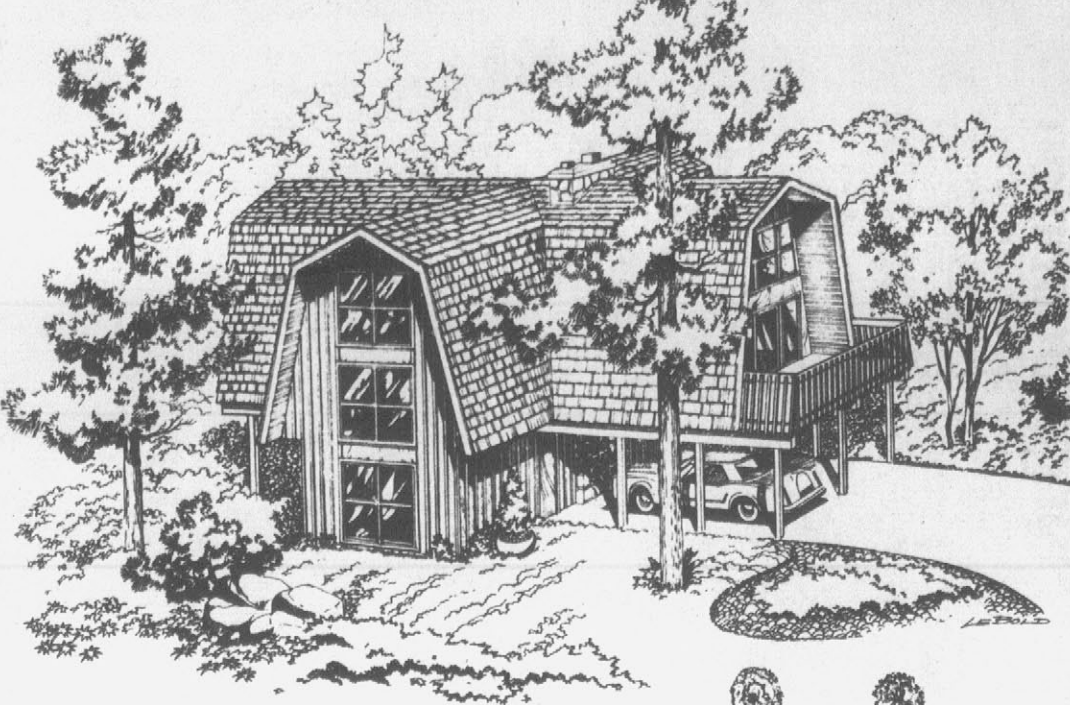

Families can enjoy themselves away from it all or invite friends and entertain in style in this well-equipped leisure plan. Besides three bedrooms and two and one half baths, the Beaufort shows a laundry center, storage room, and open kitchen-dining room.

Entry is into the lower level, where a carport is set to shelter two cars with ease. At the lower level are the storage and laundry functions, with half bath added for convenience. A utility room is also provided.

Upstairs, on the main living level, the 19-ft. living room rises two stories to become the focal point of the home. Warmed by a wood-burning fireplace, the living room is liberally glassed on both levels, with sliding glass doors connecting indoor and outdoor space.

Another deck skirts the dining room and kitchen, a substantial area for family meals or entertaining, and a third borders the master bedroom, with its three closets and adjoining bath. Each of the decks is accessible through sliding glass doors.

On the third level, the design fashions an appealing group of bedrooms and balconies. One indoor balcony overlooks the living room, while the two outdoor balconies are united to the large bedrooms via sliding glass doors. A full bath separates

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG AP Newsfeatures

Has any reader ever placed a hammer on a scale?

Not likely. If you do, you will find that your 16-ounce hammer (the most common household type) actually weighs 20 ounces or 22 ounces or 24 ounces or something else more than 16 ounces. That's because the weight usually stamped on the head — and the classification by which hammers are sold — refers only to the weight of the head and not the complete hammer.

Why so much discussion of hammer weight? To call your attention to the necessity of choosing a hammer that you find easy to swing. When you buy one, pick it up and swing it as though you were hammering a nail into wood. Do it again and again, no matter how many persons in the store are staring at you. Don't buy it if it doesn't feel right. If you are a golfer, you know well how a difference of an ounce or two in the weight of a club can affect your swing.

If, like most home do-it-yourselfers, you will be using the hammer on common and finishing nails, get a claw hammer of medium weight, that is, the so-called 16-ouncer. If you will be using it mainly for hitting small hand chisels and punches and for riveting, shaping and straightening unhardened metals, get a ball peen hammer. For striking cold chisels, brick chisels, star chisels and driving home hardened masonry nails, a three-pound, hand-drilling hammer is the proper tool.

There are numerous other kinds of hammer for specific purposes, among them, a magnetic track hammer that has a magnetic face on one end to help set tacks before driving them home with the other end.

Everybody knows you should never use a hammer with a loose or damaged handle, but the trouble is that most persons never discover there is anything wrong until there is an accident. Get into the habit of inspecting the handle before each use. While you are at it, look at the hammer head to be certain that its striking face and edges do not have any dents or chips and that the face is not mushroomed. While the hammer handle can be fixed or replaced, the hammer should be discarded if the head is damaged.

People Differ On Priorities

NEW YORK (UPI) — The United States and Russia have different priorities where lifestyle is concerned, according to RCA economists.

In the United States, there are 130 million television sets and 220 million persons, or 59 television sets for every 100 persons. There are 71 telephones and 52 cars for every 100 Americans.

In the Soviet Union, there are 50 million television sets and 258 million persons, or 19 television sets for every 100 persons. There are only seven telephones and approximately two cars for every 100 Russians.

Some other "don'ts" when using a hammer are: don't strike anything with the side of the hammer; don't use glancing blows; don't strike another tool, such as a cold chisel, wedge or punch, unless the face of the hammer is about twice the area of the struck tool; never use a hammer to strike another hammer; and don't neglect the use of safety goggles, which will prevent eye injuries if chipping should occur.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1.50 to this paper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

Don't Fire Up With Gasoline

ORANGE, N.J. (UPI) — With the cookout season going into full swing, the National Burn Victim Foundation issued this warning: "Never use gasoline to start a barbecue fire because it can be deadly!"

Harry J. Gaynor, president of the foundation, explained that when gasoline is poured on the briquets or charcoal in a barbecue grill, it immediately starts to emit heavier-than-air fumes that drop to the ground and accumulate around the legs of persons near the grill.

"Even in the brief interval it takes to strike a match and apply it to the gasoline-drenched fuel the accumulation of fumes can get dense enough so that, when the fuel is ignited, the ground area adjacent to the grill, can burst into a sheet of flame."

FREQUENT QUESTION

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The two questions most frequently asked by tourists at the Capitol building have nothing to do with history. They are "Where's the ladies' room?" and "Where's the men's room?" according to the National Geographic Society.

Solar-Heat Homes Save Money

By VIVIAN BROWN AP Newsfeatures

Solar energy is much on the homeowner's mind these days, and like any other technology there are many new terms to trip the neophyte prospective user.

How does it work? What is an "active" solar system? A "passive" one? What makes the solar heater tick?

The first thing it needs is the sun coming up every day! If it's cloudy or overcast, then a supplementary heating system is needed for backup.

How they make a solar heating system work:

Orientation of the building is important. The proper siting of the solar collector takes into account the sky location of the sun — winter and summer.

In the northern hemisphere for instance, the north pole is tilted toward the sun in the summer — the earth is now farthest from the sun — and away from the sun in winter when the earth is closer. This creates the natural phenomenon of seeing the sun high in summer, lower in winter.

To the astronomer these facts make up the seasons. For the homeowner interested in building a solar collection system for his home, it means due south is the desirable position for locating the building. Roof overhangs and trees aid in cooling for the summer months.

In addition to the site orientation another important facet of solar heating is the selection of materials — all masonry, brick, concrete, adobe, stone have natural heat-holding qualities that make them attractive building materials for solar systems.

In practice, thick walls will change interior temperatures more slowly in reaction to outside temperature changes.

Hence the evolution of architectural designs of homes in the old days. Thick walls basically meant homes were cooler in summer and warmer in winter. Homes built with adobe, stone, or brick-type material accomplished this goal. The prevention of rapid heat changes in the interior was the secret.

A modern technical term to describe this is "time lag."

Today, this same formula applies to a home — whether solar energy heating is used or not — building materials are a primary consideration when conserving energy is a problem.

In passive systems the dependency is more on the type of building material instead of mechanical heat circulators.

The passive system uses the building walls to collect and store solar energy before passing it on to a storage device, which can be water, brick, concrete, rock, or air space. Through a natural event the air circulates — warm air moves up, cooler air moves back into the system by being fed through at a lower level.

Passive systems are attractive because they have no pipes to freeze or leak in colder areas and are not as sun-dependent.

Drawbacks of the passive system at this time, the brick experts say, are greater heat losses (in periods of no-sun) than with an active system. Also, design practices are more rudimentary at this stage in development.

Active systems are more complex. They consist of a solar collector, heat storage, pumps or fans. These systems collect solar energy through a plate, or plates placed over black heat absorbers. The absorber captures the heat which comes through and transfers the heat by mechanical means of circulation. That's where the fans, valves, pumps, pipes and ducts come into play.

Chief drawback to this system is the care which must be taken to prevent leaks in pipes (if water is used), the weight of the water reservoir on roofs and the prevention of cracking or seal-loss around the glass collector-plates.

One family's home in Royal Oak, Md., was built to take advantage of a passive solar heating system.

The family's 1,300-square-foot brick house has no roof-top collector but instead depends on a brick wall construction for their basic heat-by-the-sun thing.

During the winter of 1976-77 (a cold one) the family paid only $104 for electric heating from November to February. Their highest electric heating bill was $50 for the month of January ('77). A Franklin stove added to their comfort on very cold days.

The electrical supplier in the area estimated the family paid only one-third of the heating costs of a similar-sized home without solar heating.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG AP Newsfeatures

Q — In the house we just sold, we had a quarry tile floor in the kitchen. After a year or two, it became stained and we found it almost impossible to get out most of the stains. In the house we are moving into, probably before you get this letter, the kitchen also has a floor of that kind. We are covering it up temporarily so that it doesn't get any stains on it, but when we do take off the covering we hope to know how to keep stains from remaining on the tile. Can you help us?

A — The stains are not on the tile; they are in it. Unglazed quarry tile is porous. To prevent certain stains from sinking into the tile, give it two coats of a sealer. While some hardware and paint stores carry the kind made just for this purpose, you may find it easier to get the proper sealer by buying it from a store that sells quarry tile.

Q — The knotty-pine walls in our family room were finished with shellac a few years ago. They are beginning to get seedy looking and we want to refinish them. Is it necessary to take off the old shellac? We'd like to avoid using a paint or varnish remover if possible.

A — Rub the walls with denatured alcohol, which will prepare the surface for whatever finish you decide to use. This will act as a cleansing agent and, in most cases, dull the old finish. If there are any remaining glossy spots, sand them down.

Q — The front door of our house has an aluminum door, the kind that uses a screen insert or a window insert, depending on the time of the year. It is somewhat pitted and we would like to paint it. How do we prepare the surface and what kind of paint should we use?

A — Use steel wool to smooth the pitted areas, then apply a coat of aluminum primer. After that has dried thoroughly, any kind of exterior trim paint or enamel will do.

Q — I have never had much luck with spraying. Now I would like to put a black lacquer finish on a table that never had any finish on it, but I want to do it without using a sprayer. Can lacquer be brushed on?

A — Yes. When you buy the lacquer, ask the dealer if it is brushing lacquer. In applying it, after diluting it about 50 percent with lacquer thinner, work rapidly in small sections at a time and do not go back over any area. Two or three light coats are better than a single thick one.

(The techniques of using varnish, lacquer, shellac, stain, bleach, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," available by sending 35 cents and a long, STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

Needn't Look Like Fortress

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Today's average homeowner doesn't have to build a house that looks like a fortress to protect it from burglars and other intruders, a leading protection services expert says.

"Modern technology has made fashionable and reliable alarm devices much less expensive over the last few years," says William N. Wray of Honeywell Protection Services. "So it is much easier to build very safe homes with open spaces and architecturally friendly atmosphere."

"In the last few years there has been a growing trend even among average income homeowners to install combined burglar and fire alarm systems," he says. "Qualified systems can be connected to a U.L.-Listed monitoring center for as little as $20 a month. Here experienced operators can immediately notify police and fire departments of emergency situations — even if the homeowner is away."

An Ever-Vigilant Buyer Might Survive Inflation

EDITOR'S NOTE—In these times that try consumers' pocketbooks, it may bring comfort, or envy, to know that people who make a living buying know how to cope with inflation. Their secret? Let the buyer be wary and ever vigilant. Here's how it works in one large corporation.

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK
AP Newsfeatures Writer
BOSTON (AP) — If managing a household budget in these inflationary times seems a hair-pulling task, consider Peter Tremblay's job.

He buys what the Gillette Co. needs to make razors, blades and cigarette lighters: bulk quantities of metals, plastics and paper, a quarter-mile-long room full of machines, and the thousands of nuts, bolts, gaskets and whatsits needed to keep them whirring and clacking.

Tens of thousands of items in all, supplied by more than 2,100 vendors, at a cost of $40 million to $60 million a year. Because so many razors, blades and lighters stream off the assembly line, a cost increase on even the tiniest part can throw him askew.

So while a grocery shopper gets annoyed over lettuce prices, Tremblay frets over volatile industrial commodities. There is no better picture of this than the green chart he keeps to track copper prices. At one point the jagged orange line soars so high so fast that he had to tape an extra sheet of paper on top to accommodate it.

In all his 35 years as a purchasing agent he has never seen the kind of steady, continuing inflation prevalent today. "Back a few years ago we didn't think of inflation," he says. "Now we think about it all the time."

Remarkably, however — and instructive for those coping with the squeeze on their personal incomes — Tremblay is about to beat it. While consumer prices in general have been rising at a 10 percent rate this year, Tremblay has been paying 5.2 percent less than last year on average for all the items he buys.

The secret is aggressive purchasing and specific cost cutting — knowing more about the things he buys than the salesman, challenging every price increase and looking at each item for ways to save money.

Most businesses have people who do what Tremblay does, with varying degrees of sophistication. If they are aggressive, they become sort of a built-in brake on inflation, trimming the price increases that begin mounting long before a product reaches a retail store.

Each Gillette division — the company also makes shampoo, cologne, pens and other products — has a cost reduction committee and a yearly goal. Last year Gillette was able to reduce product and packaging costs, labor and materials, by more than $30 million.

"Cost reduction programs themselves don't result in a lowering of prices," a spokesman says. "But they can help us to maintain an existing price or reduce the amount of a price increase. To this extent you can say that cost reduction helps us keep our product costs down and helps fight inflation."

This spring, Jim Webster, the purchasing agent for an engineering firm in Tennessee, put together a symposium of businessmen, professors and government officials to study inflation. Their meeting seemed to signal a growing awareness that corporations can throw a lot of weight, through careful buying, against inflation.

"Not every company has a systematic cost reduction program," says Webster, a former president of the 22,000-member National Association of Purchasing Management. "If they did it would have a significant influence on the country's inflation rate."

In the credenza of his office at Gillette's South Boston razor and blade factory, Tremblay keeps three blue notebooks, filled with pages of cost reduction projects. Inside the cover of each is a calendar with the dates and times of each monthly meeting he will have this year with his subordinates. The No. 1 item on the agenda each month is cost reduction.

"That's the key to fighting inflation — take a look at it every day," he says.

Every price increase is challenged. "We ask them to justify everything," Tremblay says. "Most of them do."

If he can't talk a price down, he asks the supplier how it can be trimmed. Perhaps a production and shipping schedule can be shifted. Maybe a specification for a part can be changed.

Tremblay buys brass — 70 percent of which is copper — for razor and lighter parts. In December 1973, copper cost 69 cents a pound. By April 1974, it had jumped to $1.10 a pound.

One cost-cutting project started that year involved changing the thickness of a piece of brass inserted in a razor handle from 0.050 inch to 0.040 inch. That saved the company $50,000 a year.

Just shopping around for the lowest price won't always work. Many things Tremblay buys are specially designed for Gillette. A simple one-part plastic razor handle, for instance, requires a full sheet of blueprints. "I know I can get everything I buy cheaper, but it won't be the same quality," he says.

Tremblay's goal is to match the controllable expenses of his office, like salaries of the 30 people there, with equal savings. That's about three quarters of a million dollars a year, and he's managed to do it every year recently except 1974, when he missed by a hair.

That was during a period of shortages and double digit inflation that found some purchasing agents wanting and others rising in prestige in their companies. Tremblay was able to get everything he needed; but others couldn't. Many factories had reached capacity. Black markets appeared, people were hoarding. (Remember "the great toilet paper shortage scare?") Throughout Gillette's plants, prices of things like cans, plastics, fluorocarbons and alcohol jumped 18 to 20 percent.

"Almost suddenly" the manager who had never heard of the purchasing agent got interested," says Robert Jenal, a vice president of materials management and manufacturing at Gillette.

'Charlotte' Is Barbera's Pride: Animated Film To Air On CBS-TV

Charlotte's web tops the scene. An animated musical version of E.B. White's classic story, "Charlotte's Web," featuring the voices of Debbie Reynolds, Paul Lynde, Henry Gibson and Agnes Moorehead, will be rebroadcast as a two-hour special presentation, Tuesday, Aug. 8 and Aug. 15 (8-9 p.m. both dates) on CBS-TV.

Joseph Barbera weaves dreams for the world. Over the years, his and his partner's (William Hanna) cartoon creations of Tom and Jerry, Yogi Bear, Huckleberry Hound and the Flintstones have delighted countless millions of children through the magic of animation.

"But our pride and joy, our flagship, the ultimate in our creative efforts," he says "is 'Charlotte's Web.'" the animated musical version of E.B. White's classic story for children (and anyone else who believes in miracles).

"Charlotte's Web," featuring the voices of Debbie Reynolds, Paul Lynde, Henry Gibson and Agnes Moorehead, will be rebroadcast in two parts on the "CBS Family Film Classic" on two consecutive Tuesdays, August 8 and 15, 8 to 9 p.m. on CBS-TV.

The heroine of "Charlotte's Web" is, of course, the beautiful large gray spider, Charlotte. In the story, she introduces herself to Wilbur, the pig, and explains why she weaves webs: to kill for food, in order to live. Wilbur is appalled at the notion, but Charlotte soon proves that her web can give life, too. Before the story ends, Wilbur learns the most important lesson of all: that neither life nor death can exist without the other.

"Charlotte outsmarts the humans who want to kill Wilbur for bacon," notes Barbera, who considers the essence of the timeless story to be its emphasis on truth and miracles.

"Charlotte is very truthful," he says. "She tells only the truth — to Wilbur, to the other animals, and, through the miraculous woven words in her web, to the humans. And even on the most literal level, the story shows the value of a spider — that they do good, which a lot of people don't know."

Memorable Interview

Selected segments of interviews with Dolly Parton, Henry Winkler, Donny and Marie Osmond and Bing Crosby will be featured on "The Barbara Walters Special," airing Wednesday, August 9, 10 to 11 p.m. on ABC-TV.

Ms. Walters visited Dolly Parton in her $130,000 touring bus, in which Dolly lived for 300 days while travelling 150,000 miles with her band last year. In discussing her public image that the singer has chosen, Ms. Walters says "You're very beautiful; you don't have to wear the blonde wigs. You don't have to wear extreme clothes, right?"

Ms. Parton: "No, it's certainly a choice. I don't like to be like everybody else...I would never stoop so low as to be fashionable. That's the easiest thing in the world to do. So I just decided that I would do something that would at least get their attention. Once they got past the shock of the ridiculous way I looked and all that, then they would see there was parts of me to be appreciated. I'm very real, where it counts, and that's inside. But I just chose to do this. Show business is a money-makin' joke and I just always liked tellin' jokes."

At Henry Winkler's modest but comfortable home in Los Angeles, he introduced the television audience to his new love (now his wife), fashion publicist Stacey Weitzman.

Henry Winkler and his then longtime girlfriend Stacey Weitzman invited Barbara Walters to their modest Los Angeles home for a long conversation about love and success in an interview which will air again as part of "The Barbara Walters Summer Special." The program brings together some of her most outspoken conversations and airs on Wednesday, Aug. 9 (10-11 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Keyes Was 'Second-Story' Man

A funny thing happened to producer Paul Keyes on his way to becoming a juvenile "second-story" man.

He met Frank Sinatra, whose first television special in more than three years, "Sinatra and Friends" (encoring Wednesday, August 9, 9 to 10 p.m., on ABC-TV), was produced by Keyes.

"I was show business-struck from as early as I can remember," Keyes explained. "The only place in my hometown of Portland, Maine, where the big bands played was a nightspot which served hard liquor. I couldn't get in (because of his age)."

However, he found a way. "I'd wait — this was when I was about 14 or 15— until the bands arrived with all of their equipment, which had to be lugged upstairs to a second story area. I'd pitch in and help them," he recalled.

"By the time I'd go back and forth to the second story a couple of times, I was accepted as one of them. That way I got to meet and hear all the big bands, and one of the biggest thrills was meeting Frank one night."

Whale's World Explored

Hal Linden introduces Orky and Corky, two killer whales, who despite their species name, can be very friendly, on ABC News' Emmy, Peabody and ACT Award-winning magazine series for young people, "Animals Animals Animals," airing Sunday, August 6, 11:30 to 11:55 a.m.

The program explores through film and fast-moving, colorful animation the role of the whale in art, history, legend, mythology and the environment. It also features an incisive documentary segment filmed at San Ignacio Lagoon off Baja California, Mexico, where Dr. Ted Walker takes viewers on an expedition for a closeup look at the California gray whale.

"The Tail of the Whale" is an animated fable which certainly proves that while there are some very fine tales about whales, there are also whales with excellent tails — and that one good turn deserves another.

In an animated poem, "The Whale, the Minnow and the Shadow," the big and little creatures each try to figure out whether its shadow is real or imagined, but apparently only the shadow knows.

Premise Still Exists

NBC-TV's "The Doctors" is one of the popular daytime series that has passed the endurance test with flying colors by celebrating their 15th anniversary recently. It joins the ranks with other soaps that have passed the test — "Guiding Light," "General Hospital" and "The Edge of Night," to name a few.

It's interesting to note that the origin of daytime dramas can be traced all the way back to Charles Dickens, who started writing continuing stories for the London Times. Sales skyrocketed as readers would eagerly buy copies just to find out what was happening to Dickens' characters.

It wasn't easy in Dickens' day to come up with a continuing story line that would hold the reader's interest, and it's even more difficult to tow the mark in the ratings with an interesting 'soap' today. There is definitely a winning formula, and shows such as "The Doctors" are due a tremendous vote of confidence for finding this elusive formula.

Soap operas are in a world all their own, and it's a difficult world in which to survive. They must be given time to find their niche in the lives of viewers, and this isn't done over night. Appropriate groundwork must be laid; and endless stream of characters must be introduced, and the prime ingredient, of course, is cohesiveness.

The viewer is insulted if the dialogue is too blunt and lulled to sleep should it be too heavily coated with sugar. This means that writers must be extremely delicate with the scripts — at the same time adding the right amount of clout.

Characters must, above all, be believable, which places a heavy burden on the actors.

Stars Like 'Police Story'

Why have so many film stars and big name performers, who seldom, if ever, appear on television except to star in their own series or movies-for-TV, made an exception in the case of "Police Story"?

"Quality," "prestige," "meaningful," "dramatic," "realistic," "special," are just a few of the adjectives used by actors and actresses to explain why they gave up vacations or squeezed in a performance between motion picture assignments to star in the dramas.

Starring in "Stigma," a two-hour "Police Story" drama to be telecast on "The Big Event"

Sunday, Aug. 6, 9 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV, is Mike Connors, one of television's top stars in the perennial Top Ten series "Mannix." Connors, in his first TV acting appearance in a year, portrays "Manny" Mandell, a police officer awarded the distinguished Medal of Valor for capturing two criminals in a shootout in the segment.

Martin Milner, who starred on the "Adam-12" series as Officer Pete Malloy for seven years, co-stars as Mandell's contemptuous partner.

The cast also includes television personalities Cameron Mitchell, James Darren, Diane Baker, Laraine Stephens, Shelley Novack and David Ladd, former Los Angeles Police Chief Tom Reddin, the show's technical consultant, appears in a cameo role.

Another well-known star who was featured in a "Police Story" drama two years ago was Gabriel Kaplan. His starring role as a narcotics officer was the first dramatic role he had ever played in a career devoted entirely to comedy.

"I'd had opportunities to work in other dramatic shows, says Kaplan. "But with my 'Welcome Back, Kotter' series, there just wasn't time to do them. But when the 'Police Story' offer came along, I made the time."

Former football great Jim Brown also starred in an episode which marked his first acting role in a television show since the early sixties when he worked in an "I Spy" segment.

Donald O'Connor grabbed at the chance to play a reformed Junkie in an episode.

TROUBLE ON THEIR BEAT—Martin Milner (l) and Mike Connors, as a couple of patrol officers, visit the scene of potential trouble on their beat, in "Stigma," a "Police Story" drama to be telecast on "The Big Event" Sunday, Aug. 6 (9-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Misfortune Hits Crew

Michael Landon and the cast of NBC-TV's "Little House on the Prairie" were relaxing in the deep shade of a 100-year-old oak tree as the waited for the camera crew to call them for the next shot.

It was their first day back in town after a two-week trip into the woods of Northern California where they had been filming scenes for the upcoming season. They were glad to be "home" because the trip had been plagued with accidents.

An assistant director had been hospitalized with cracked ribs and a punctured lung after a fall. Another man had broken a finger.

Lindsay and Sidney Greenbush, the twin girls who play the part of Carrie Ingalls, were also jinxed on the trip: one fell and broke a tooth; the other had an allergic reaction to fruit which left her face so swollen she couldn't face the camera.

Five other members of the crew were still suffering from severe cases of poison oak.

"Well," said Landon as he led the cast out of the shade and back to work, "let's hope the worst is over."

Two minutes later, as the cast assembled a few feet away from the tree, there was an explosive cracking sound and a huge limb, later estimated to weigh well over a ton, crashed to the ground on the spot where they had been sitting.

"Wow," said Landon as the dust settled over the shocked crew, "the worst is over."

LINDA BLAIR SIGNED FOR FILM

Linda Blair, who was nominated for an Oscar for her performance as the girl possessed by the devil in "The Exorcist," stars with Carol Lawrence, Lee Purcell, Jeremy Slate and Macdonald Carey in "Summer of Fear," a two-hour movie for NBC.

The suspense thriller centers on Rachel Bryant (Blair), a young girl who has a terrifying encounter with witchcraft after her cousin Julia (Purcell) loses her parents in an auto accident and moves in with the Bryant family.

Slate and Lawrence portray Rachel's parents, Carey is an elderly professor whom the terrified girl turns to for advice on how to overcome the evil forces making her life a nightmare.

Van Johnson, Alex Karras, Bert Convy and Peter Brock guest-star in "Downshift to Danger," an episode of "McMillan and Wife," starring Rock Hudson and Susan Saint James, which will be rebroadcast Monday, August 7, as the "CBS Late Movie," at 11:30 p.m. on CBS-TV.

FOUND MOTHERHOOD—Laura Ingalls (Melissa Gilbert) finds an abandoned baby and experiences feelings of "mother" love and joy at the discovery, in "Be My Friend" on "Little House on the Prairie" Monday, Aug. 7 (8-9:30 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Stakes Are High

Commissioner McMillan (Hudson) and his wife, Sally (Miss Saint James), are competitors in a sports car rally with the stakes a $1 million collection of antique cars. When the rally is marred by pranks and freak accidents, the Commissioner begins to suspect the other four couples: Hollywood producer Harry Jerome (Johnson) and his wife Gwyneth O'Gara (Pamela Hensley); George and Louise Knowlnd (Breck and Hildy Brooke Al and Maggie Potter (Karras and Mary-Robin Redd); and Tom and Della Wheatley (Jim Antonio and Barbara Bosson).

Dogs Used In Plan

Nicol Williamson, who plays the Nazi officer in the current film comedy "The Cheap Detective," guest-stars as a suave psychologist — one with homicide on his mind — in "How to Dial a Murder," a "Columbo" drama starring Peter Falk which will be rebroadcast on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies" August 7, 9:30 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV. Tricia O'Neill, Kim Cattrall, Joel Fabiani and Frank Aletter also guest-star.

Dr. Eric Mason (Williamson), a noted psychologist specializing in mind control, uses his expertise to carry out the slaying of his best friend and primary assistant, Dr. Charles Hunter (Fabiani), with the help of his two pet Doberman pinchers. As Lieutenant Columbo tries to discover why two seemingly lovable Dobermans would, without reason, attack someone they knew, he engages in a head game of his own to expose Dr. Mason before the dogs are put to sleep.

The two Dobermans in the show, Laurie and Hardy, were actually played by three dogs. One, Midnight Sun, is a 6-year-old male who's a five-year veteran of movies and television. Also on hand were two of his daughters, 5-year-old Twilight and 4-year-old Schoene.

The dogs have starred in such canine theatrical releases as "Daring Dobermans" and "Courageous Dobermans."

"They were selected for film work because of their temperament," Cindy James, one of the on-set animal trainers, explained. "Their disposition and willingness to be trained have to be considered. Some dogs don't like to work, so they aren't so desirable. It should be fun for them to work."

Even at such young ages, the dogs are victims of type-casting. They play loveable dogs trained to be killers.

That fact, however, escaped Falk, who in the final scene of the show, is knocked down and attacked by the Dobermans in a surprise ending to this homicide caper.

James Franciscus Stars

A top secret mission is threatened by the animosity between the men responsible for its execution and their leader, in "Hell Boats," a war drama starring James Franciscus, to be broadcast for the first time on television on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies," August 8, 9 to 11 p.m., on CBS-TV.

In 1942, with Western Europe in Nazi hands, the North African coast is threatened. The island of Malta, blockaded under constant bombardment, is deemed the only hope for preventing Nazi control of the entire Mediterranean.

An idealistic American, Lt. Cmdr. Tom Jeffords (Franciscus), is sent to Malta with a plan to break the blockade. Secrecy being essential, even the men responsible for execution of the plan using torpedo boats called "hell boats," are kept in the dark. Jeffords, however, arouses the animosity of his comrades and to complicate matters even more, becomes infatuated with the wife of a fellow officer.

KATHY CRONKITE SIGNED FOR SERIES

Kathy Cronkite, daughter of noted news correspondent Walter Cronkite, has been signed for "Hizzoner," a new NBC-TV series.

The marital problems of a British Commander (Ronald Allen) and his wife (Elizabeth Shepherd) complicate a secret military mission to break the Nazi stranglehold on the Mediterranean, in "Hell Boats." The WW II drama will be broadcast for the first time on television on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movie," Aug. 8 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Garcia Trial Is Reenacted

The explosive murder trial of Inez Garcia, a cause celebre for the women's movement, will be re-enacted in a 90-minute courtroom drama on Tuesday, August 8, 9 p.m. on PBS.

"The People Vs. Inez Garcia" stars Silvana Gallardo as Garcia and Robert Loggia as her attorney Charles Garry; the dramatization is based on an adaptation of the actual court transcripts of Garcia's original trial in Monterey, California in 1974. At that time she was found guilty of murdering the accomplice of the man she accused of raping her.

The drama poses questions of vital concern to both men and women: "Is rape a justification for murder?" "Can an alleged rape victim get a fair trial in a judicial system dominated by men?" "Can minorities get a fair shake in the criminal justice system of the U.S.?" "What is the legal definition of 'self-defense'?"

Born in New York City of Cuban and Puerto Rican parents, Inez Garcia was unable to read and write. In 1974 she was living in the dusty farm town of Soledad, California to be near her husband, an anti-Castro Cuban in Soledad Prison for a politically-connected bombing. In the closely-knit Chicano culture of Soledad, she was considered an outsider with a virtuous reputation.

On March 19, 1974, Garcia was temporarily living in the same apartment as Freddie Medrano — a friend and not a lover — when Luis Castillo, a self-confessed junkie, and Miguel Jimenez, son of an influential Soledad family, visited. Both had been drinking.

Garcia asserted that she shot Jimenez in self-defense, while the state charged that it was first-degree murder growing out of an argument. Medrano, her co-defendant, was acquitted. Garcia was found guilty of second degree murder in a trial her supporters called "sexist and racist." In December 1975, the State Court of Appeals reversed her conviction on grounds that the trial judge erred in his instructions to the jury. Between trials she served 15 months of a five-year-to-life sentence and was freed on bail to await a new trial.

On March 4, 1977, the jury in Inez Garcia's second trial returned a verdict of not guilty. Ms. Garcia's acquittal has been heralded as a landmark decision, with grave consequences for future perpetrators of rape.

Medicine VS. Sorcery

"The Girl Called Hatter Fox," dramatizing the mystical union that binds a young doctor to a terrified teen-age Indian girl locked in a struggle between her Indian heritage and the white man's world, will be rebroadcast on "The Saturday Night Movies" August 12, 9 to 11 p.m. on CBS-TV.

The film stars Ronny Cox as Dr. Teague Summer and introduces teen-ager Joanne Romero in the title role of Hatter Fox. Conchata Ferrell and John Durren also star.

Dr. Summer first sees Hatter Fox, a 17-year-old firebrand, in a local New Mexico jail, where she is being held for disturbing the peace. Called in to administer to another young Indian prisoner, he is suddenly attacked and stabbed by the agitated and fearful Hatter Fox for no apparent reason. She is then sent to the state reformatory for girls for that attack on Summer. There, she is placed in a straitjacket to control her wild behavior. The reformatory administrator, Mr. Winton (S.J. Launer), then calls in Dr. Summer in hope he might establish some link with the disturbed girl.

Reluctantly, Dr. Summer agrees to leave his post with the Bureau of Indian Affairs and take up residence in the reformatory. What follows is a titanic emotional struggle as the young doctor and the frightened, yet stubborn, Indian girl clash in a desperate battle of wills heightened by supernatural overtones.

Joanne Romero stars as Hatter Fox, an American Indian girl locked in a spiritual death struggle between her heritage and the hard realities of the white man's world, in "The Girl Called Hatter Fox" to be rebroadcast on the "CBS Saturday Night Movie," Aug. 12 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Heroine Is New Breed

"Cleopatra Jones" isn't your usual heroine. Cleo is tall, black and immensely sensual. She's a Federal agent on an anti-drug crusade who can somehow summon respect from both the police, establishment and her own community. She's a crack driver' an ace marksman, but she seems to prefer the more cozy involvement of hand-to-hand combat.

Tamara Dobson stars in the title of "Cleopatra Jones," which will air Tuesday, August 8, at 12-midnight on ABC-TV. Co-starring are Bernie Casey and Shelley Winters.

The action centers around the mob's vendetta on Cleo after she skillfully masterminds the destruction of their $30 million poppy field in Turkey. Planting a bag of heroin in one of Cleo's drug rehabilitation centers, the mob tips off the police and the community centers are ordered closed.

Undaunted by this vicious move, Cleo begins an all-out effort to dig up evidence that is needed to defeat the mob.

GRIFFITH CAST IN "SALVAGE"

Andy Griffith, after an absence of a year from television, has been signed to star in "Salvages," a two-hour movie for ABC-TV.

The actor will play Harry Broderick, a wheeler-dealer junk yard proprietor who comes up with an idea to put together his own space trip to the moon.

The roles will mark Griffith's first television appearance since "Washington: Behind Closed Doors" on the PBS presentation, "Pirandello—Six Characters in Search of an Author."

Price Likes Ghouls

Vincent Price clearly enjoyed himself. With flowing black cape and ghoulish makeup he looked like a cross between Count Dracula and the Joker. "There must be some small children around here that I can frighten," he said with a wicked grin. Price, the veteran of 103 films, was on location in Burbank guest starring as a hammy former horror film star trying to make a comeback in the

"Bad Day for Bluebeard" episode of "The Snoop Sisters," starring Helen Hayes and Mildred Natwick. The segment will be rebroadcast Wednesday, August 9, at 12:30 a.m. on CBS-TV. Price has played mostly villains in his long career, but in recent years his film roles have been almost entirely about the macabre. "Theater of Blood" is one, for instance. "Actually, these are sort of gothic tales...Edgar Allan Poe type of things rather than outright horror stories," he says. "I love to do them. They're great fun and these films use more ticks and special effects than any other kind of movie." In "Bad Day for Bluebeard," Price plays a man who is, among other things, a gourmet cook and art lover — two of the abiding loves of the off-screen Vincent Price.

'Hawaiians' Airs On CBS

The epic story of the mainland families who settled in Hawaii and made it an American Pacific outpost is recounted in "The Hawaiians," starring Charlton Heston and Geraldine Chaplin, to be rebroadcast on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movies," August 9, 9 to 11 p.m., on CBS-TV. Based on James Michener's best selling novel, "Hawaii," and as a sequel to the movie of that name, "The Hawaiians" focuses on Whip Hoxworth's wife, Purity (Miss Chaplin), misunderstands and mistrusts her "crude" husband, a feeling she passes on to their son, Noel (John Philip Law). Intricately intertwined with the fortunes of the Hoxworth family are the lives of others who have come to Hawaii — a Chinese concubine (Tina Chen), and the Japanese girl (Milo Mayama) who fills the lonely gap in Whip's life, as well as the descendants of the other pioneer American mainland settlers who battle for supremacy on the Islands. Walter Mirisch produced the film, which was directed by Tom Gries and written for the screen by James R. Webb from the novel by Michener for the 1970 United Artists release.

Comedy Involves Roguish Romance

Love — and $12 billion in diamonds — is the lure for an ambitious American businessman-turned-burglar and a beautiful but bored Swedish socialite when they challenge the world's greatest security system to bring off the world's greatest robbery in "Anything for Love," a comedy thriller of roguish romance making its television premiere as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," August 6, 9 to 11 p.m., on ABC-TV. "Anything for Love," which stars Candice Bergen, Charles Grodin, Sir John Gielgud, Trevor Howard and James Mason, was released originally as "11 Harrowhouse." The Consolidated Selling System in London — the world's clearinghouse for diamonds — holds a permanent inventory of 20 million carats in diamonds, and to keep that inventory permanent the diamonds are protected by armor plate, would resist a cannon, a heating device that can "feel" any living presence, and a network of laser beams that can quickly and permanently eliminate the living presence. The challenge is almost unthinkable for any would-be thief, but the reward for a successful heist — 20 million carats translates to some $12 billion wholesale — would very nicely support Chesser (Grodin), the woman he loves (Bergen), and their heirs and assigns for generations to come. For Chesser, the money is worth thinking about. For Maren, his already wealthy ladylove, any new excitement in her overprivileged life is worth thinking about. So they decide to do it. Their chief obstacle — besides the security system that could fry them like overdone eggs — is a man called Meecham (Gielgud), who wat-

Charlton Heston and Geraldine Chaplin star as a rough-hewn settler in Hawaii and his non-understanding wife, in "The Hawaiians," based on James Michener's epic novel, "Hawaii," to be rebroadcast on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movie," Aug. 9 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

DOUBLE-DUTY FOR EURE

Wesley Eure (Mike Horton on "Days of Our Lives") will be absent from the popular daytime series from time to time during the next few months during the filming of the movie "C.H.O.M.P.S." in which he has a major role.

Paris Delights Featured

An impressionistic video collage of the history, cliches, and delights of the city of Paris is presented in "Paris A La Carte," the third episode of the five-part "Visa" series, to be broadcast Thursday, August 10, at 7 p.m. on UNC-TV.

"Paris A La Carte," created by Don Foresta, Kit Fitzgerald, and John Sanborn, combines the stately picture postcard images of Paris with the city's own reflection of things American, creating a view of a culture where food, wine, grace and relaxation are an integral part of even the most contemporary urban pace.

The broadcast begins with narrator Russell Connor describing Paris as "the city where good Americans go to their final reward. Many of us, however, prefer to claim the reward in advance, bringing with us a trunkful of history, fantasy, prejudice and romance — and we are destined thereafter to carry a part of Paris with us wherever we go."

Absorbed by Paris' love-hate relationship with the American lifestyle, Foresta, Fitzgerald, and Sanborn feature a generous sampling of Parisian adaptations of fixtures of American life, ranging from a display of McDonald's restaurant and the "Little Manhattan" building development in the suburbs of Paris (complete with its own Statue of Liberty) to scenes from French-language broadcasts of American television's "Gunsmoke," "Happy Days," and "The Bionic Woman."

A sizeable portion of "Paris A La Carte" also features acquisitions from French television, including hypnotic station identification films, risque lingerie commercials, and excerpts from a Yves Montand special and the Paris evening news. The broadcast also explores an outdoor food market, a French bakery and the spectacular new Beaubourg Arts Center.

Music for "Paris A La Carte" is a combination of American rock and roll as interpreted by French musicians, and an American version of the French "can-can" and strolling accor-

Pike's Peek

By Charlie Pike, TV Showtime staff writer. HOLLYWOOD — While there's been a lot of speculation whether or not Jaclyn Smith will ever marry boyfriend Dennis Cole, it would seem they're finally planning to do something. Jackie and Dennis just made a joint purchase of a home in Bel Air for a mere $350,000, which is generally not the type of home one buys for rental property.

The premiere of "Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band" was one of the most lavish affairs of the year in Hollywood, but it was a couple no way associated with the film that caused most of the commotion and captured all of the attention. Male model Mike Edwards, known only to his peers and friends, was the center of attention when he arrived with Priscilla Presley on his arm, and neither denied that they're very much the steady couple.

Neile McQueen had a frightening experience when she arrived home late in the evening and was preparing to retire when the residence's burglar alarm went off. She grabbed a pistol that ex-hubby Steve had taught her how to use and no sooner had it in hand when she was confronted by an intruder. The uninvited guest said he was checking out the alarm, which was an unconvincing alibi as far as Neile was concerned and she suggested the man leave, or she'd shoot. He did, she didn't, and no one was injured and no harm done — except for some very rattled nerves.

Daytime matinee idol David Hasselhoff, Snapper to the fans of "The Young and the Restless," has to turn down an offer to appear as the celebrity contestant on the revived "Dating Game." It seems his steady girl, Roberta Layton, or Dr. Casey Reed to 'Y & R' viewers, simply wouldn't allow it.

Bill and Susan Seaforth Hayes will take advantage of their September two-week vacation and travel to Bavaria, Austria and Germany, revisiting some of the places the "Days of Our Lives" couple discovered on their honeymoon, and taking in as many new sights as time allows.

Cindy Williams and Penny Marshall just signed new contracts for "Laverne and Shirley," which calls for them to earn $37,500 per show for the first half of the season, and escalating to $45,000 per show by season's end.

Casting Completed For 'Taxi' Series

Casting of the regulars has been completed for "Taxi," ABC-TV's new personality-oriented comedy series about the lives of a group of New York City cab drivers.

Playing the lead roles of Alex Rieger will be Judd Hirsch, who left the Broadway production of Neil Simon's "Chapter Two" to join the "Taxi" ensemble.

Also starring is Andy Kaufman as Latka Graves, a mechanic of indeterminate national origin whose command of the English language is tenuous but whose affection for American women is considerable. The inventive comedian's routines has been featured on such programs as "Saturday Night Live" and "The Tonight Show."

Jeff Conaway will star as Bobby, a talented young actor working as a cabbie while awaiting his first big break. An accomplished musician and dancer, Jeff starred in

"Grease" on Broadway and is currently co-starring with John Travolta in the motion picture version of that show. He has also appeared in guest starring roles on television series.

John is a lost soul who lands in the taxi business more by default than by design. He is played by Randall Carver, a Texas native whose credits include a continuing role on "Forever Fernwood" and appearances on "Emergency," "The Six Million Dollar Man" and "The Waltons." He also was seen in "Midnight Cowboy."

Tony Danza draws upon his own real-life experiences in his portrayal of Tony Banta, a driver and part-time prizefighter who often feels he has been defeated by life. A graduate of the University of Iowa with a Bachelor of Arts degree, Tony has been a fighter and has had numerous bouts as a middleweight.

Daytime Sweepstakes

ABC led the networks with 10 Emmys in the Fifth Daytime Emmy Awards held in New York City recently. NBC came in second with nine statuettes, with CBS running third by corraling six awards. PBS and Phil Donahue's syndicated talk show, which originates in Chicago, also received two trophies.

ABC's children's programming received four Emmys including Outstanding Children's Informational Series ("Animals Animals Animals"), Outstanding Children's Instructional Series ("Schoolhouse Rock"), Outstanding Children's Entertainment Special ("Hewitt's Just Different," an "ABC Afterschool Special"), and Outstanding Children's Informational Special ("Very Good Friends," another "Afterschool Special").

Richard Dawson, host the Daytime Emmy Awards, received an Emmy of his own when he was named Outstanding Host in a Game or Audience Participation Show for his hosting duties on "Family Feud." Mike Gargiulo, director of "The $20,000 Pyramid," received the Emmy for outstanding Individual Director of a Daytime Game or Audience Participation Show, and the writing team of "Ryan's Hope" was honored for the second year in a row when they received Emmys for Outstanding Writing for a Daytime Drama Series. Four technical awards were given to ABC.

Although "Kangaroo" has been the recipient of numerous awards since its debut in 1955, this is the first time the program has been honored with an Emmy.

NBC programs and actors swept the top honors including Outstanding Daytime Drama Series ("Days of Our Lives") and Outstanding Game or Audience Participation Show ("Hollywood Squares").

James Pritchett captured the top honor — Outstanding Actor — for his portrayal of Dr. Matt Powers in "The Doctors" and Laurie Heineman was honored with an Emmy as Outstanding Actress for her portrayal of Charlene Frame Matthews in "Another World."

"The Hollywood Squares" won the Academy's top game show honor.

Phil Donahue won an Emmy as Outstanding Host in Talk, Service or Variety Series, and Martin Haig Mackey was honored as Outstanding Individual Director of a Variety Program for the PBS show "Over Easy."

"Captain Kangaroo," television's longest-running children's program, with Bob Keeshan as its creator and star, and Richard Dunlap, director of the daytime drama, "The Young and the Restless," won two awards for CBS.

Herman Stars In 'Sparrow'

"Sparrow," a one-hour adventure-drama starring Randy Herman as an enthusiastic young private detective, will be presented on Friday, August 11, 10 to 11 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Jerry Sparrow (Herman) has just joined a large detective agency in New Orleans. A self-educated crime buff, Sparrow's tenacity and zeal do not make up for his lack of experience in the eyes of his boss, Medwick played by Gerald S. O'Loughlin. While other detectives are busy trying to solve a million-dollar jewel heist, Medwick puts Sparrow on the trail of a missing bird.

Veteran actress Lillian Gish makes a rare television appearance as Mrs. Benet, the wealthy woman who offers a $10,000 reward for the recovery of the bird.

Sparrow's not at all happy at the thought of spending his time looking for a bird, rather than tracking down the jewel thieves, but a series of freak coincidences works in his favor. Sparrow gets a piece of the action after all.

Cathy Hicks plays Sparrow's beautiful next-door neighbor, Valerie, and Jonelle Allen, Kurt Knudsen and Dolph Sweet also appear in this one-hour drama.

Madcap Adventures Recounted

June Allyson, Ray Bolger, Rick Nelson, John Byner and Carol Lawrence lead an all-star cast into madcap comedy and romance on a Hawaiian dream holiday shared by four couples — winners on TV's "Dating Game" — and one harried chaperone in "Three on a Date," when love and laughter mingle on "The ABC Friday Night Movie," August 11, 9 to 11 p.m., on ABC-TV.

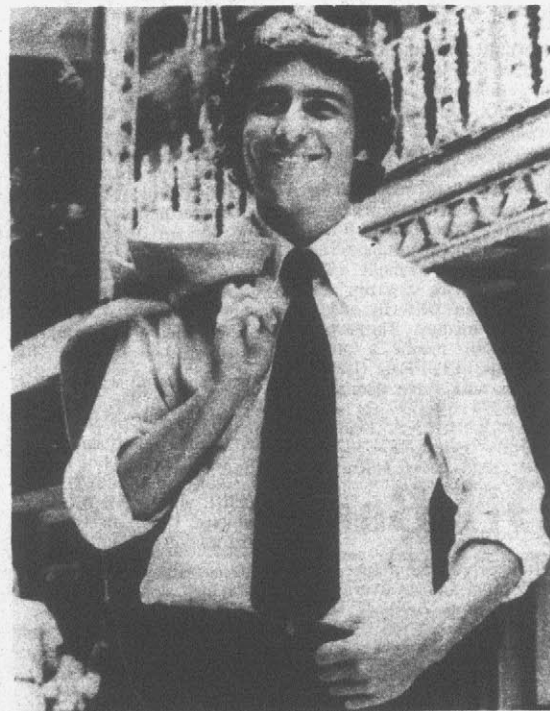

The movie is based on the true-life recollections of Stephanie Buffington.

Also in the cast are Meredith MacRae, Didi Conn, Gary Crosby, Patrick Wayne, Geoff Edwards, Loni Anderson and Forbsey Russell.

Miss Allyson plays a gingery widow who gives stuffy widower Ray Bolger a new view of life. John Byner, who covers his insecurity with wisecracks, is attracted to Loni Anderson, a Playboy "centerfold girl" with more heart than brains. Meredith MacRae is paired with handsome Patrick Wayne, who plays a celebrity who learns that not everybody is impressed by his fame.

Rick Nelson is a magazine writer from New York, posing as a slow-talking westerner to get an undercover story, who falls for the pixie-like Didi Conn. (Miss Conn is featured in two films, "You Light Up My Life" and "Grease.")

Gary Crosby is cast as a photographer for a scandal magazine working with Nelson, and Miss Lawrence portrays the producer of the show, emceed by Geoff Edwards.

Randy Herman stars as Jerry Sparrow, a private detective in New Orleans in "Sparrow" a drama special airing Friday, Aug. 11 (10-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Staubach Keys Dallas

The World Champion Dallas Cowboys will visit Denver for a 3 p.m. collision with the American Conference Broncos

Dallas quarterback Roger Staubach will be back in action when the Dallas Cowboys meet the Denver Broncos in a rematch of Super Bowl XII, Saturday, Aug. 12 at 3 p.m. on CBS Sports.

Dallas' defense was the strength of the team all season, and in the early goings last year it was the defense that actually carried the team. The offense, while always explosive, came into its own in the last four or five games. Certainly Tony Dorsett's addition to the regular lineup was a big factor, but perhaps the most important single ingredient in the Dallas success story is Roger Staubach.

Staubach, at 36 years of age, will return as the NFC's top-rated passer. Last season, he guided an offense that led the conference in points with 345 and the entire NFL in total offense with 4,812 yards. Roger completed 58.2 per cent of his passes for 18 TDs to rank first in the NFC and second in the league, nine tenths of a rating point behind Miami's Bob Griese.

The real measure of Roger Staubach, the man and the quarterback, was best exemplified after the Super Bowl. As Staubach proceeded to the jubilant Dallas dressing room, the Cowboys' chief physician confronted him.

"Roger," said the doctor, "that little finger is broken." "I know," acknowledged Staubach, "but isn't there some way we can avoid it, just for a week? I really want to play."

At that point, Cowboys' President Tex Schramm persuaded Staubach to get the finger set.

That it took that much persuasion says a great deal about the attitude of this former Naval Academy Heisman Trophy Winner.

Festival Presents 'Joey'

"Joey," the story of a young Puerto Rican boy who moves with his family from a tenement to a large, partially constructed apartment complex in New York finds himself bullied by three toughs, will be rebroadcast on "The CBS Saturday Film Festival," August 12, 1:30 to 1:56 p.m.

In Joey's first encounter with the trio of bullies, he is warned that the apartment is "theirs," is called derogatory names because of his nationality, and is coerced into a football game that turns into a beating.

Joey's continual sufferings, the love and consolation he receives from his family, and his final ability to beat the system with the help of a Sensei (master of the martial arts) who teaches him self-defense, evolves in the sensitive film, throughout which the music of Carly Simon is woven.

The film was written, produced and directed by Luis San Andres.

Swimmers And Divers On ABC-TV

Coverage of the AAU Swimming Championships from Woodlands, Texas, and the AAU Diving Championships from Mission Viejo, California, will be presented on "ABC's Wide World of Sports," airing Saturday, August 12, 5 to 6:30 p.m.

The winners of these AAU Swimming and Diving Championships will qualify to represent the United States in the World Swimming and Diving Championships in West Berlin, which will be televised by the Network Saturday, August 26.

Competitors figuring prominently in this year's National AAU Swimming Championships include Brian Goodell of Mission Viejo, California, Olympic gold medalist, defending AAU Champion and American world record-holder in the 400 and 1500-meter events; and Peter Rocca of Concord, California, the defending AAU Champion in the 200-meter backstroke, and the swimmer considered by many to be the heir apparent to John Naber, now retired, winner of four gold medals and a silver in Montreal in 1976.

The big story could be among the women swimmers. A strong field of young American girls has emerged since the 1976 Olympics. Among them are teenagers Cynthia Woodhead of Riverside, California, in the freestyle; Jennie Hooker of Mission Viejo, another freestyler; Kim Linehan of Sarasota, Florida, butterfly and individual medley; and Tracy Caulkins of Nashville, Tennessee, who swims the backstroke, butterfly and individual medley. These girls could well mount a strong challenge to the East German women, who have dominated the world swimming scene.

Jim Lampley will report on the competition, along with expert commentator Mark Spitz, winner of an unprecedented seven swimming gold medals in the 1972 Olympics in Munich.

The show will also focus on the 10-meter platform competition at the AAU Diving Championships. Cynthia Potter, an Olympic bronze medalist from Dallas, Texas, will be shooting for her 27th National AAU diving title, which would be an all-time record.

Also competing will be Phil Boggs of Ann Arbor, Michigan, an Olympic gold medalist and defending AAU platform champion; Greg Louganis of El Cajon, Calif., an Olympic silver medalist; and Debbie Wilson of Columbus, Ohio, an Olympic bronze medalist.

Andrea Kirby will describe the diving, along with expert commentator Ken Sitzberger.

He's Hard To Keep Off Base

Remember the old saying about a walk being as good as a hit?

Well, that's pretty much true since the main objective is to get on base via whatever means possible. If you have any doubts about that, just ask the Padres first baseman-catcher Gene Tenace.

Through the Padres first 75 games of the 1978 campaign, Tenace was the easy club leader in base on balls with no less than 52 walks to his credits in the 61 games in which he had appeared. Now then, also figure in that Gene had 27 base hits in those 61 contests and you'll find that counting just base hits and walks, he was on base 89 times.

What's more, that figure gets even better looking when one considers the number of occasions when he was hit by a pitcher or reached via a fielders choice or an error. In fact, if you were to figure in every time he reached base via any means, you would find him residing on the sacks virtually 50 percent of the time.

In four of the past five seasons (including last year when he set a club record with 125 walks) he has received 100 or more free tickets to first base and the odds are greatly in his favor to make it five years out of six this season with his great start.

Through his first nine major league seasons (only seven of them on a fulltime basis), Tenace had an even 600 base on balls. Statistically speaking, that's an average of 0.63 walks per game (952 encounters heading into 1978).

By comparison, the all-time base on ball leader, Babe Ruth, finished his career with 2056 free passes for an average of 0.82 per game. However, runner-up Ted Williams had the better percentage figure with 2019 walks and an average of 0.88 per game.

Another Comeback For Littler

ABC Sports will present live coverage of the 60th PGA Golf Championship from the Oakmont Country Club in Oakmont, Pa., and final-round play will air Sunday, August 6, at 4:30 p.m.

The tournament carries a purse of $300,000, with a first prize of $50,000, and this year Gene Littler is hoping to collect.

Last season at Pebble Beach, 47-year-old Littler was on the threshold of topping his own three-victory year of 1975. Already a winner last year at Houston, Gene was enjoying a five-stroke lead in the PGA Championship during the final round.

However, his renowned picture swing failed him down the stretch, when he bunkered his approach on hole 10 and bogeyed. Then he bogeyed holes 12, 13, 14 and 15, and closed with a 76, falling into a tie with Lanny Wadkins.

Before the playoff Lanny said: "I hate to see it happen to Gene. He's one of the nicest guys around. But I'm making a comeback too."

On the first extra hole of the playoff Lanny matched Gene's par 4 with a brilliant performance.

Both played the second hole perfectly, but it was on the third hole of the event's first extra-hole playoff that Littler's hopes were shattered. Wadkins beat him with a par four.

Still, it was a lucrative year for the leather-faced gentleman from San Diego as he went home at the end of August with earnings of $119,759. Aside from the PGA, Gene was second at Tucson, made checks in 16 of 21 events and finished in the top ten of six tournaments.

It seemed poetic justice when Littler shot a 70-65-57-74-274 at Houston, to carry a five-stroke lead into the final round and beat Wadkins by three.

Perhaps this year's PGA Championship will provide Gene Littler with another comeback.

ABC Sports will present the final round of play of the PGA Championship Sunday, Aug. 6 at 4:30 p.m. Gene Littler, who succumbed to Lanny Wadkins in last year's sudden death playoff, is hoping to add another victory to his lucrative career.

Super Bowl XII Rematch

In a rematch of Super Bowl XII, the defending World Champion Dallas Cowboys and the AFC Champion Denver Broncos clash when CBS Sports kicks off its 23rd season of National Football League coverage Saturday, August 12, at 3:00 p.m.

In Super Bowl XII, the Cowboys ended the American Football Conference's five-year NFL title reign over the National Football Conference, with a 27-10 victory, and evened their Super Bowl record at 2-2.

With the largest TV audience ever to view a sporting event (an estimated 90 million), Dallas converted two pass interceptions by safety Randy Hughes and cornerback Aaron Kyle into 10 points, and Efren Herrera added a 35-yard field goal to give the Cowboys a 13-0 advantage at halftime.

The Denver offense had trouble up against the hard-hitting Cowboy defense, but came back momentarily at the outset of the third period, when quarterback Craig Morton engineered a drive to the Dallas 30-yard line, from where Jim Turner booted a 47-yard field goal to make the score 13-3. After an exchange of punts, Dallas wide receiver Butch Johnson made a spectacular diving catch in the end zone to complete a 45-yard pass play from quarterback Roger Staubach to put the Cowboys ahead 20-3.

However, the momentum swung back to the Broncos when one of the NFL's top "game breakers," Rich Upchurch, returned the kickoff 67 yards to the Dallas 26. With great speed, Rick is not only an outstanding receiver despite his comparatively small stature, he is also the NFL's finest return man.

It was Rick's return that set up the one and only touchdown scored by the Broncos during Super Bowl XII.

Unser Seeks Win

Indianapolis 500 champion Al Unser and four-time Indy-winner A.J. Foyt are expected to be the favorites to take the USAC Texas 200 summer edition (a 200-mile race for Championship division Indy-type cars) which CBS Sports will broadcast live, Sunday, August 6, at 4 p.m.

Tom Sneva, who won the race last year, is expected to return to Texas World Speedway in College Station, Texas. Sneva was the United States Auto Club's overall champion in 1977, and he leads the pack this year, after eight races, with 2,673 points. A repeat victory here would be worth another 400 points to Sneva.

Unser is currently second in Championship point standings, with 2,420, after his victories in the Indianapolis 500 and the Pocono 500.

When Al was last at Texas World Speedway, Lady Luck wasn't with him. Things have definitely changed, however. Practicing for the Coors 200 last April, Al hit the wall at more than 200 miles per hour, demolishing the new First National City Travelers Checks Lola, prepared by Jim Hall, a car owner from Midland, Texas. Al missed the race but came back in his very next race to win the Indianapolis 500 for the third time in his career.

After winning the Indy 500, Unser remarked: "I thought there were eight cars capable of winning if they ran good all day, but I honestly don't know if mine was one of them. I was very much hesitant about the way things would go today. I kept waiting for Sneva, Andretti, A.J., and my brother to pass me, but when they didn't I thought, 'I must be in pretty good shape.'"

The next month he won the Pocono 500 which, combined with last year's win in the California 500, gave him a clean sweep of the last three 500 mile races. He is the first driver in history to attempt a "Grand Slam" in one season when he goes for a win in the 1978 California 500 in September.

Maiden Gets Big Break

Each year, hundreds, perhaps thousands, of young hopefuls migrate to Hollywood in the seemingly never-ending desire of being discovered. There have been just enough legendary success stories to keep fueled the hopes of would-be actors that stardom is just around the corner.

One such story involves 19-year-old Joanelle Romero, a dark-eyed, dark-haired actress of Indian ancestry who made her film debut in the title role of the two-hour, dramatic motion picture, "The Girl Called Hatter Fox," to be rebroadcast on "The CBS Saturday Night Movies," August 12, 9 to 11 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Miss Romero's big break began in the living room of her parents' home. A theatrical agent, visiting her mother, actress Rita Rogers, met the slim teen-ager. Later the agent learned of the part of Hatter Fox, a contemporary 17-year-old American Indian girl tragically caught between her heritage and the white man's culture, and immediately thought of young Joanelle. A test was arranged and she got the part.

Ronny Cox, who stars as the young doctor who fights to preserve the girl's life, comments that "Joanelle was remarkably right for the role, which requires the actress to run the gamut from an animal-like flare of emotion to quiet repose. A difficult task for any newcomer. There is an inherent stoicism in the American Indian that almost precludes their ever being able to physically project such strong emotional swings of character. Nevertheless, she did it."

Miss Romero was born on October 5, 1957 in Albuquerque, N. Mexico (coincidentally the location for some of the Hatter Fox story) and she was raised in Hollywood. She won a modeling contest as a 9-year-old, and appeared in various children's theater projects.

She plays guitar and sings and has worked professionally in small New Mexico niteries with her brother, Leroy Robert II. She's been an observer at the Actor's Studio in Hollywood for several months and delights in her etching hobby. She's part Navajo, Apache and Choctaw.

Telly Savalas Stars In Drama

An American businessman in Europe, accustomed to a lavish life style, joins a plot to uncover a cache of a million dollars in gold hidden during World War II, in "The Golden Heist," a suspense drama on "NBC Saturday Night at the Movies" August 12, 9 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV. Telly Savalas stars with Robert Culp, James Mason and Aldo Ray.

Savalas portrays Harry Morgan, broke and down on his luck in London when he is contacted by Ernst Furben (Mason), who commanded a German POW camp during World War II. Morgan is surprised by his former enemy's proposal, but he agrees to participate in a scheme to locate a hidden Nazi fortune.

The first step in the plan is to free Holtz (Wolfgang Lukschy), a former Nazi Lieutenant who is believed to be the only man alive with knowledge of the secreted fortune's whereabouts. Locked up in the maximum security Siegfried Prison, and guarded by military police of the four allied nations, Holtz is nevertheless abducted in an elaborate scheme with the cooperation of Prior (Ray), who's a guard at the prison. Then, Morgan and his comrades set out to pressure Holtz to reveal the location of the gold. They ultimately learn that the site of the cache is in East Germany. Their greatest challenge follows when they arrive behind the Iron Curtain and discover that the gold in now buried beneath a modern apartment building.

Robert Culp stars as Sly, a thief who joins in the conspiracy.

"The Golden Heist," released theatrically under the title "Inside Out," is a 1975 Warner Bros. release.

FOR PRISCILLA JOHNSON McMILLAN, author of Marina and Lee

I hear you're the only person to ever have known both President Kennedy and Lee Harvey Oswald. How did you come to meet them? —B.T., Kilgore, Texas

● I met John F. Kennedy in May 1953 when I worked in his Senate office as his researcher on Indochina. After I stopped working for him, I sometimes saw him on his visits to New York. We laughed a good deal and he bounced ideas off me. I was 11 years younger than he and liked him very much. I met Lee Harvey Oswald in Moscow in 1959. He was a defector to the U.S.S.R. and I was a journalist in search of a human-interest story. He was a quiet boy and seemed more like 17 than 20 years old. He appeared lonely and lost in Moscow and told me he could barely speak Russian. We talked for four or five hours and I wrote a newspaper profile of him. He was 11 years younger than I.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Can you tell me anything about Jerry Hall, the girl who might step into Bianca's shoes as the next Mrs. Mick Jagger? —K.H., Charlottesville, Va.

● Jerry is from Dallas, and those who knew her as a child claim she announced at an early age she was going to be famous and the richest, most beautiful model in the world. She's 21, more than six feet tall and comes equipped with brains as well as beauty, with an IQ of 162. At the start of her modeling career she was rejected by a local model agency because of her height. "You're so tall, the men around here will look small in comparison," Jerry was informed. "Texas men won't like that. Try for a different job or go to a different state." Rather than be crushed, Jerry set out for New York. She later worked in Europe. Her mom, who has four other daughters, says of Jerry: "She's a good-living, sweet and kind girl."

FOR ARTHUR ASHE, tennis star

I heard Pancho Gonzales was a major influence on your career. Is that true? What did he do for you? —J.S., Joliet, Ill.

● One day, when I was a junior in high school, a bunch of us youngsters played in the Eastern Junior Championships at Forest Hills. Pancho Gonzales and the other pros were practicing there, and Gonzales agreed to hit a few balls with us. I was 14 years old and very impressionable, and it was then that I knew tennis was the career for me.

FOR PENNY MARSHALL, star of ABC-TV's Laverne & Shirley

I hear you're leaving the series for a film career. What gives? —V.H., Pascagoula, Miss.

● That's simply not true. I am working on a TV movie, Love Me and I'll Be Your Best Friend, which will be aired in the fall, and maybe that's how the rumor started. It's filmed in the Bronx, N.Y., building where I lived for 17 years, and it also uses the restaurant where I liked to hang out. Fun for me because I'm working with Bob [husband Bob Reiner].

FOR KIM CROSBY, America's new Junior Miss

What do you dislike most about kids your own age? —I.B., Rome, Ga.

● The disrespect some of them have for their parents. I'm not stuffy or square, but I have fun with my folks. I don't like the way some kids are rude to grownups, who are strangers, such as not standing up on a bus when an old lady or man gets on. I've heard it said that rude parents have rude children. It doesn't always work that way — I know some awful nice moms and dads who have rotten children.

FOR STEVE SPIELBERG, director of Close Encounters of the Third Kind

With all those great effects in Close Encounters, which was the hardest to create? —E.G., Battle Creek, Mich.

● Trying to get a night sky, with stars, on film. We had to "create" a big sky with stars. The crew didn't shoot those night scenes at night — they were done during the day. The night sky was put in afterwards, at the studio. We spent 12 months of experimentation before we got it right.

FOR JAMES BEARD, gourmet-author

You're a great chef. So which would you rather do — cook at home or eat at a fine restaurant and try new dishes? —S.I., Pueblo, Colo.

● That's hard to answer. It's true that if one doesn't eat out he misses the new chefs and new dishes. Then, too, there's the pleasant camaraderie one enjoys while sitting in a crowded restaurant where everyone seems to be happy and carefree. On the other hand, there is a soul-satisfying quality about cooking at home and cooking for one's friends.

FOR JAMES H. SAMMONS, M.D., Exec. Vice Pres., American Medical Assn.

Why is there a snake on the emblem of the A.M.A.? —G.G. Crabtree, Lansing, Mi.

● In Greek mythology Asclepius was the god of medicine. He was usually depicted, in statuary and other representations, with a snake, which in ancient Greece was considered to have medicinal powers. The snake was always wrapped around a staff, a caduceus, the symbol of a herald. In time, they became the emblem of medicine.

PRO Vincent T. Wasilewski, president, National Association of Broadcasters

Unlike cable television, commercial stations do not levy a service charge to viewers. Instead, programming costs are offset by advertising revenues, which permit your station to bring local news, weather, sports, entertainment and public affairs vital to the community. If it continues to go virtually unregulated, cable television could import channels from far-off cities and your favorite programs could be seen on several cable channels. The viewer would not receive any new benefit. It would, however, affect your local station's ability to broadcast locally oriented programs. Advertisers would soon lose interest in buying time since programming is being duplicated on cable. Local service would disappear.

PRO AND CON Should Cable TV Come Under The Same Regulation As Broadcast TV?

CON Robert L. Schmidt, president, National Cable Television Association

No. Broadcast television sends signals over public airwaves; cable does not. For years Federal regulations have been designed to keep broadcast stations profitable, many of them by restricting the growth of cable. Now, in most parts of the country, the airwaves can't carry any more broadcast signals. Cable systems can provide up to 36 channels, offering everything from sports events in distant cities to programs produced by local community groups. Government regulation is the major barrier between the public and the wide variety of entertainment and services cable television can deliver. The public interest should be the sole criterion for government interference in the marketplace.

WHAT A SUMMER FOR WOMEN IN SPORTS!

Ten years ago women weren't allowed to run in the Boston Marathon — or in any race longer than a mile and a half.

A few months ago 200 women completed that grueling 26.2-mile Marathon course.

This summer some of the hottest sports stars who are doing their thing — proficiently, prettily, persistently and professionally on golf courses, tennis courts and in the water go by such names as Nancy, Chris and Diana.

We, then, are part of the reason why women athletes have come such a long way in such a short time. Millions of us watch female athletes on TV as they perform feats of skill, endurance and beauty (can we ever forget Rumania's gymnast Nadia Comaneci or America's skater Dorothy Hamill as they were winning gold medals at the 1976 Olympics?).

Hundreds of thousands of us flock to grandstands, stadiums, arenas and pool-sides for a close-up view of women golfers, tennis players, swimmers, track stars, racing car drivers, basketball greats and jockeys.

Their exciting performance and our enthusiastic response have permanently changed the way we spend our leisure time. The face of sports will never be the same.

NANCY LOPEZ

WYKAGYL COUNTRY CLUB, NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y.

Nancy Pletzer

When the people who do such things sat down to pick 1977's Man of the Year in Sports, their choice, strictly speaking, was not a man. It was a boy, 17-year-old jockey Steve Cauthen. When they get together again to make this year's choice, there's a good chance it won't be a man this time, either.

Nor a boy. The 1978 Man of the Year in Sports might very well be a woman — the attractive, vivacious 21-year-old golfer Nancy Lopez.

Since women's golf does not attract the attention from either the public or the media that a lot of other athletic events do, Nancy would need to have something extra going for her to get recognition like that. Like maybe if she completely dominated her sport in her very first year as a professional. (She has.) If she earned more money in the first 12 months of her pro career than any other golfer — man or woman — ever did. (She has.) If she won more cash prizes in a calendar year than any woman golfer in history. (She has.) And since the people who make this annual award always say that they take into consideration both athletic achievement and personal qualities, it would help if Nancy is handling her fame nicely. (She is.)

Nancy Marie Lopez was born in Torrance, Calif., on January 6, 1957. The following year the family moved to Roswell, N.M., where her father, Domingo, opened the East Second Street Body & Fender Shop.

He was a golf nut, and when his day's work was done, he would pick up his wife, Marina, and off they would go to the links. When Nancy got to be 8 years old, she began to tag along. "Daddy just put the ball on the ground," today she recalls, "and told me to hit it into the hole way down there."

Little by little, Domingo, who was a fine amateur golfer (a 3 handicap), realized that his daughter had natural talent. But there was one big difference in the pattern. The relationship between daughter and father was based on a much more substantial foundation than golf.

DIANA NYAD

MIAMI BEACH

"I feel a very strong and real pressure to be the best," says 5' 6" Diana Nyad. But that's nothing new. When she was in the fifth grade she wrote an essay saying, "I want to be the world's greatest athlete, the world's greatest surgeon, speak six different languages and play four instruments." She may not have achieved these goals yet, but she's well in the running — or swimming, as the case happens to be at this point in her career.

The 28-year-old long-distance swimmer is easily one of the world's great female athletes. She hasn't taken up medicine yet, but she's written an autobiographical book, soon to be published by Random House, speaks at least two languages fluently and plays clarinet and piano. "Sometimes I think I could have excelled in music, but I started too late."

Not so swimming. When she was in the seventh grade at Ft. Lauderdale's Pinecrest School the coach asked her to come out for the team. "I was ready for whatever presented itself." Today she's a record holder and veteran of marathon swims around Manhattan Island (a distinction that put her on the front page of the New York Times twice), across icy and turbulent Lake Ontario, down the dark and cold European North Sea Coast, through the treacherous water off Australia's Great Barrier Reef and, most recently, the most grueling of all: the never-before-attempted, 130 mile, nonstop, shark-infested Cuba-to-Florida run.

"I don't know where my desire to be best comes from," she says. "I wasn't precocious and my parents never cared if I achieved anything. But I can see the desire even in my dreams."

Perseverance, which she says is the main ingredient of her success, surfaced early in Diana's char-

CHRIS EVERT

LOS ANGELES

Since '71, when Chris Evert, then 16, became a courtside and nationwide word ("terrific") because of her play in the women's singles division of the United States Lawn Tennis Association (USLTA) National Championships at Forest Hills, N.Y., she has been acknowledged as perhaps the best known female athlete in the world.

Just how great a tennis player is Chris Evert?

"I think she could be the best woman player ever to pick up a racquet," says Jimmy Connors, a world-ranking male tennis star, "and she has played like it for a number of years. Chrissie is Number One."

Christine Marie Evert was born in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., on December 21, 1954. Her father, Jimmy, has been the tennis pro at a local park for almost 30 years, and her mother, Colette, has become familiar to fans at the U.S. Open, Wimbledon and many other tennis tournaments around the world.

The second of five children, Chris has two brothers, Drew, 24, and John, 16, and two sisters, Jeannie, 20, and Clare, 10. All the Evert youngsters love tennis, and they often get together to help Chris or Jeannie, who is also a top player, train for their tours.

Chris went to St. Thomas Aquinas High, a parochial school, and was protected and shy as a child. But in the eighth grade, things began to change. She had to choose between being a tennis player or a cheerleader and, after talking with her father, she decided on tennis.

The year 1971 was the turning point for Chris. At the age of 16 she became the youngest semifinalist in the history of the women's National Championships at Forest Hills. "Chris was the whole show," recalls tennis great Jack Kramer, "and every time she stepped on the court it was a thrill."

In 1974, Chris not only won Wimbledon but captured five of the big European tournaments, seven of the 12 Virginia Slims events and earned $261,460, all at the age of 19. It was during this per-

'Smoking. Here's what I'm doing about it'

"I like the taste of a good cigarette and I don't intend to settle for less. But I'm aware of what's being said. So I began searching for a cigarette that could give me the taste I like with less tar.

"I found Vantage. A cigarette that really gives a lot of taste. And with much less tar than what I'd smoked before.

"What am I doing about smoking? I'm smoking Vantage."

NO LONGER "FOR MEN ONLY"

Two recent innovations are paving the way for more females to participate in amateur and professional sports.

The first change, which took place in July of this year, is set forth in a Federal statute that guarantees girl students the right to learn the same athletic skills — and to take part in the same variety of sports — as boys do.

The second innovation, in effect since 1974, stemmed from a declaration by the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women that financial aid for athletes no longer is "for men only." AIAW spokesperson Joan Hult explains, "Any college that gives sports scholarships to male athletes must now do the same for women."

NANCY LOPEZ

"He never pushed me," Nancy says, "He would encourage me to do better, but he would never get mad at me when I didn't. He'd say, 'It makes no difference how you play. We'll always love you.'"

At the University of Tulsa, Nancy won the national collegiate title — and the heart of a college pitcher Ron Benedetti.

There are two questions that reporters always ask about the relationship between Nancy and Ron. The first is: How does he feel about having his girl friend beat him on the golf course? That's easy to answer. Ron has never played golf.

The other question is tougher. Can they have a happy private life when she's always in the public spotlight?

Nancy answers, "I'll play golf as Nancy Lopez, but away from the tour, I'll be Mrs. Ron Benedetti." Ron adds, "I don't feel the least bit threatened by her success. If we get married, I'll support her."

What a life it must be for Nancy with the laughing face and flashing eyes. Twenty-one years old, queen of the golf course, adored by the crowds, in love with Ron. When you win five straight tournaments — a women's record, it has to be a little tough to keep your feet on the ground. But just about every day, no matter where the tour takes her, Nancy puts through a long-distance call to the East Second Street Body & Fender Shop in Roswell. Then she talks to her father for a long time — and she listens, too. It's changed a lot since Nancy's mother died last year, but in some ways it's the same: "It makes no difference how you play. We'll always love you."

DIANA NYAD

acter. While most of her fellow students dated and partied in their spare time, she maintained a rigid training schedule.

Diana, who now lives in New York City, was a sprinter then, but an unexpected attack of endocarditis, an inflammation of the heart, put her on her back for four months and ended her dream of participation in the 1968 Olympics.

"No matter how many setbacks you have you've got to keep going," she says.

Such convictions have seen her through incredibly darker days. In 1974, for instance, she was the first person — not just first woman — ever to swim the 32 miles across Lake Ontario, a feat she dubs "the toughest (with the exception of the Cuba swim) I've ever done."

CHRIS EVERT

lod that she became engaged to Jimmy Connors — but, by the end of the year, the engagement had been canceled. She and Connors are still good friends, and now and then rumors pop up that they're again a love match.

Chris states that she "played her best tennis in 1976," which was also the season in which she began her World Team tennis career with the Phoenix Racquets. Her record was phenomenal: she lost only five of 67 matches, won 10 out of 13 tournaments and earned $343,368 in prize money.

Public press and other players praise her — and she's been given a number of awards, the most recent of which was from the Ladies Home Journal as a "Woman of the Year 1978" designee.

Worst was the cold. "It was 57° the whole time." The grease she wore came off fast.

"I would stop and throw off my cap and goggles and cry. 'I can't, I can't take another stroke.' I was frozen and shaking, and when I got within five miles of the shore the Niagara River currents started coming against me."

But she recalls her trainer's shouts of encouragement: "Honest, we've checked the charts and you're getting there; take 10 more strokes." I would try and he'd say, "See, now you're on." I kept going.

"I have tremendous stamina and determination, but I couldn't have done this without the physical ability," she says. She advises would-be's in any endeavor to make sure they have the proper abilities for their chosen fields and then set "high but reasonable goals."

"The award is a step forward," Chris says. "At last women are being singled out and recognized for their achievements."

But despite her achievements, the tournament routine caught up with her late last year, and, starting in January, she took a hard-earned four-month break from competitive playing. Now that she's back in action, Chris is just as dedicated and serious about her tennis as she's ever been. According to Connors, one of the reasons Chris is enjoying herself more these days is that "she has nothing to prove anymore."

Stephanie Tolleson, her friend and teammate, places Chris Evert, superstar, into personal perspective: "She's just a normal girl like everybody else. She's working hard at her job and trying to do it well as she can. She kids and she jokes. She has a good sense of humor. She's fun."

Cool it. Baby, it's hot outside! And you should know how to keep cool at home without relying too much on your air conditioning. Air conditioners are expensive to run, both in dollars and in terms of energy consumption. Central air conditioning, for example, can increase the average electric bill by as much as $230 a year, depending on the unit's efficiency rating. Each window unit can add more than $50 to the average yearly electric bill.

Batting the breeze. Properly used, fans can be inexpensive, energy-efficient alternatives to air conditioning. An attic or window fan will pull cooling air through an entire house at night, and on days when the outside temperature is lower than it is inside. The average annual cost to operate a window fan is less than $7; an attic fan, about $12. Initial costs are low, too, compared with most air conditioners.

"When they're all happy, they generate a good breeze."

Do it right. On days when there simply is no alternative to air conditioning, you'll save money—and energy—if your system or units are well maintained and efficiently used. Clean the filters every month, and have the air conditioners checked by a professional every couple of years. If it's both hot and humid, turn the fan to "low," and close the fresh air intake. If possible, locate window units on the north side of the building, out of direct sunlight. And turn individual units off when you leave the room. In most cases, it takes less electricity to re-cool a room than it does to maintain the temperature while you're away.

Long-term solution. While they won't help keep you cool tomorrow, here are some facts to keep in mind for the future. Trees are nature's own air conditioners. Planted along the west and east sides of your home, mature shade trees are up to seven times more effective than window shades and drapes in deflecting the sun's heat. The taller the better; trees that overhang the roof keep heat from building up in the attic. Ivy and other types of climbing vines on the south walls also reduce heat buildup.

Cooling shorts. Do the day's cooking early in the morning, or in the evening—when it's cooler—and serve more cold meals... If you have a choice, use fluorescent lights wherever possible, instead of incandescents... Turn lights and appliances off when they're not needed; every one is a source of heat... Keep blinds, shades and drapes drawn during the day.

DOCTOR TESTED—The above inch losses could certainly be called 'amazing'—even fantastic—yet each of these women was a subject in a special slimming test conducted by a prominent American physician who observed and verified each and every measurement. These 'fantastic' inch losses are documented facts, they are true and accurate results—results that could be yours—with Slim-Skins. As just one measure of Slim-Skins total effectiveness consider this: While the most successful and widely advertised 'fat-burning' diet program claims to be able to shrink your waist up to 3 inches in just 7 days, the average waist reduction of the doctor's Slim-Skins test group was over 3 inches in just one day—actually in just 25 minutes.

FANTASTIC INCH LOSS WITHOUT DIET. Slim-Skins takes off the excess inches exactly where you need to lose them, without dieting—and most important, you look good every inch of the way. With the 'crash diet' program you get thinner but may end up worn and haggard looking with lots of loose skin and flabby tissue. With Slim-Skins, as you lose inches, your body becomes tighter, sleeker, firmer and more shapely—glowing with vitality. And yet the Slim-Skins works so amazingly fast that you can actually measure the difference in just 25 minutes.

INCHES DISAPPEAR OR YOUR MONEY BACK. Slim-Skins is a bold new slenderizing concept that actually combines with your own vacuum cleaner to create a super new inch reducer so far ahead of its time that it reduces excess inches 7 times faster than 'crash-diets'. Just step into the Slim-Skins, snap the attached hose to your vacuum cleaner with the universal adapter—which fits any make vacuum cleaner—and turn on your machine. The second you turn on your vacuum cleaner, the Slim-Skins seem to come alive—to cling and mold themselves to your body like a second skin—to exert a vigorous, subtle, totally delightful reducing action on every single inch of your body from beltline to knees. Not every user may experience the same degree of inch loss as the users above but you must lose a total of 9 to 18 inches from your waist, abdomen, hips and thighs in just 3 days or your money back.

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

FIND OUT IF "YOU ARE WHAT YOU EAT"

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. How good food tastes to you is affected by the sounds you hear while you're eating.
2. If you have a compulsion to touch or move your plate when served, this provides a clue to your personality.
3. When you're troubled with what psychologists term "free-floating anxiety" — feeling tense and distraught for no reason that you can put your finger on — treating yourself to a delectable meal of your favorite foods can cause your phantom anxieties to vanish.
4. How well balanced you are mentally and emotionally depends to an appreciable extent on how well balanced your diet is.
5. How much coffee you drink provides an indication of your general attitude on life.

ANSWERS

1. True. Studies at the Psychological Laboratory, University of Copenhagen, have demonstrated this even affects how pleasant or how insipid a glass of beer may taste. In the tests, all subjects were given samples of various kinds of beer to taste and judge. Tests were first accompanied by harmonious musical sounds, next by sounds which were regarded by subjects as discordant, off-pitch and inharmonious, then with no sound. Findings: all subjects said the samples of beer tasted much better when the musical sounds were considered to be harmonious than under the other conditions.
2. True. In a University of Utah study on this rather odd subject, Plate-Touching in Restaurants, it is noted that "In observing social dining habits the investigators have repeatedly noticed a marked, widespread and apparently unconscious habit of touching (or slightly moving) the dinner plate immediately after its service." The study showed that people who are given to plate-touching are much more likely to perform this ritual after being served by someone else than after serving themselves (as in a cafeteria or buffet-style restaurant). And it is suggested that "Plate-touching may simply indicate resistance; i.e., no matter where the waitress puts the plate, the diner adjusts it to assert his freedom to choose plate position."
3. False. Studies conducted by a team of Northwestern University specialists show that although some individuals may eat more when anxious, there is little support for the popular notion that eating serves to reduce anxiety.

4. True. Nutrition studies at Hunter College indicate that a well-balanced diet plays a significant role in determining how well balanced you are mentally and emotionally, how subject you are to psychosomatic illness and how susceptible you are to depression.

5. True. Studies at the University of Toronto indicate a definite relationship between the number of cups of coffee a person drinks daily and his general attitude and the way he reacts to the ups and downs, pressures and miscellaneous hassles which are part and parcel of everyday living. People who take life easy, who don't allow themselves to get unduly upset by minor irritations and frustrations, enjoy the pleasure of a cup of coffee when they feel like it — but are seldom immoderate in their consumption of "the cup that cheers." # SPACE-PROBE VENUS-WHY? HOW MUCH WILL IT COST? IS IT WORTH IT?

NASA is attempting to penetrate the Venusian clouds and 900-degree heat to discover secrets of this hostile planet that can help us here on Earth.

Preview of a Pioneer spacecraft collecting data on Earth's "twin" planet

Multiprobe (foreground) will join Orbiter (rear) on Venus this December

Pioneer Venus 2 should rocket into space this Monday, August 7, to follow Venus 1, which was successfully launched last May 20. FAMILY WEEKLY wanted to know why this present mission of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) is important to us and how its cost can be justified.

We spoke with Dr. Lawrence Colin, a project scientist at NASA's Ames Research Center near San Francisco, and this is what he had to say in answer to our questions.

Family Weekly: What benefits can we expect from the Pioneer Venus mission?

Dr. Colin: The primary purpose is to understand the origin and evolution of the solar system. In addition, by studying harmful gasses on Venus, we can better deal with Earth's air-pollution problems. We're also trying to learn more about Venus itself.

FW: How much does the Pioneer Venus mission cost the taxpayers?

Colin: $225 million.

FW: Are we getting our money's worth?

Colin: It'll cost each American 20 cents per year over a five-year period. For that, we'll gain the pride of accomplishment, and we'll maintain our leadership in world technology. It's difficult to predict precisely what and how much we'll find out. There's always the chance we'll learn something we never expected. Right now, we're just trying to understand the processes by which certain things happen.

FW: What do we know about Venus at present?

Colin: In some ways, Venus resembles Earth: it is the same size, has the same mass and density and was formed at about the same distance from the sun. In other ways, however, it's very different from our planet: Venus is constantly covered by clouds, and its surface temperature is 900°F., its atmospheric pressure is about 100 times that of Earth and about 97 percent of the atmosphere is carbon dioxide — and there's virtually no water.

FW: Why is Venus so different from Earth? Can Earth become like Venus?

Colin: The answer to your first question is: we don't know. As to the second, there's a similarity that can make one shudder. Venus's atmosphere lets solar radiation in but doesn't let it out. This is called the "greenhouse effect." The trapped solar heat stays there.

Earth has a greenhouse effect, too — and it may be increasing. Carbon dioxide is accumulating in our atmosphere largely from the burning of fossil fuels for the past 100 years. Many scientists feel this is causing our surface temperature to rise. Perhaps by studying Venus, we can keep this situation from getting out of hand and causing our ice caps to melt, resulting in floods.

FW: How else can observing Venus help us understand Earth?

Colin: Venus may have once had oceans, which have since "leaked" out into space as a result of high heat. Could this happen to Earth? We want to know. Also, unlike the Earth, Venus has no magnetic field to deflect gas blowing out from the sun — the solar wind. The Pioneer Venus mission will try to determine how this relates to our planet.

FW: What is the overall importance of the Venus probe?

Colin: It represents the first time that the conditions of a planet have been studied so intensively on a global scale. This leads to "comparative meteorology" — a study of three key planets, Mars, Venus and Jupiter, to develop an understanding of general climatic conditions over a long period of time. We have to go out into space because the Earth's atmosphere is too complex. Mars and Venus, on the other hand, have simple weather systems that are dominated by certain characteristics. If we understand these situations, that should give us a handle on one set of weather processes on Earth.

FW: How does the Pioneer Venus mission work?

Colin: It consists of the two spacecraft. Pioneer 1 is the Orbiter, weighs 1,280 pounds and is about eight feet wide and 15 feet high. It will circle Venus for eight months. Venus 2 is a Multiprobe and consists of a transporter "bus" that will carry one 700-pound probe and three 200-pound ones. Twenty days from Venus, the four probes will be released. They'll measure the altitude and composition of the clouds, temperature and chemical makeup of the atmosphere. Since the conditions are so hostile, the probes' instruments are housed in titanium compartments. They'll make their observations through eight sapphire windows and one diamond window. They can withstand the heat. The findings of Orbiter and Multiprobe should give us some insights into weather processes.

FW: Will there ever be manned interplanetary travel?

Colin: Someday we'll see a man on Mars — in the next century.

FW: And on Venus?

Colin: I doubt it. The conditions there are very hostile. Better yet, I'd say no.

HOW NEW MORTGAGE LAWS AFFECT YOUR HOME'S VALUE

You can choose from many financing (and refinancing) methods to fit your family's income needs.

By Dorothy Tymon

A few months ago the financial present and future of James and Thelma Brown, each 62 years old, seemed black. They owned their own home — almost. That "almost" was decisive, for from their retirement income — after paying for food, clothing and the other basics — they still had to squeeze out six more years of $178-a-month payments on their current mortgage. And they just didn't have enough money.

What to do? They could sell their house, but they loved it. And even if they put it up for sale and even if they found a buyer and even if they received $50,000 for it (actually, $42,000 after the mortgage balance of $8,000 had been deducted), they'd still be in trouble. For the law is clear: after such a sale, if they didn't purchase a new home within 18 months for an amount equivalent to or more than the money they'd received from selling their own house, they'd have to pay a sizable profits tax. And even if they'd been able to buy a new place within the time limit, they'd probably have to pay more than what they'd sold their own home for.

Luckily, that's when the Browns learned about something called the Reverse Annuity Mortgage (RAM). The mortgage payments they'd already made on their home over a period of 19 years — and the fact that property values had skyrocketed because of inflation — proved to be a valuable asset.

From the moment the Browns signed for RAM, monthly payments on the old mortgage stopped and a reverse procedure began. In accordance with the plan they chose, the bank now pays the couple $250 a month.

This has been made possible by their borrowing $30,000 of their equity, payable to them by the bank in monthly installments over 10 years. The loan bears 9 percent interest. Advantages are: the Browns get additional income; they don't have to pay the annuity during their lifetime; if either dies, the other continues the plan; they can sell at any time — with excess money going to them after the mortgage is paid off.

Today a home buyer can find a smorgasbord of borrowing plans, including RAM, from which to choose. Each form of mortgaging has variations, depending on the borrower's circumstances, but fundamentally they work as follows:

Graduated Interest Rate (GIR): This plan is tailored to first-time home buyers whose incomes are presently low. Payments during the early years of a 30-year mortgage are pegged at about half of the usual rate, then increase 5 percent annually — paralleling a mortgagee's own increasing income — until termination.

There are many advantages — and some drawbacks — to the GIR mortgaging method, and Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) representatives or local bankers can provide details.

Flexible Payment Mortgage (FPM): This plan is designed for young people or families with good income potential. They can qualify earlier than is traditional for home ownership because, for the first five years, they pay interest only and no principal. Amortization begins in the sixth year and payments are increased to retire the loan balance by the end of the agreed mortgage period.

Four-Percent FHA: This plan, in effect as of October 1977 under Section 235 of the Federal Housing Administration Home Ownership Assistance Program, is earmarked for middle-income families who fall within prescribed family-size and income maximums. Those eligible can obtain a mortgage on a new home with interest as low as 4 percent.

The cash down payment is 3 percent (or $750) for the first $25,000 plus 5 percent of the price over that amount. On a $45,000 house the total down payment required is $1,750.

Full details may be obtained from the nearest HUD office.

40-year Mortgage: This plan is based on the statistical fact that if the term of a mortgage is extended, the size of each monthly payment is reduced. Payments on a conventional mortgage of $37,000 at 9 percent for 30 years would be $334 a month. Extending the payment period to 40 years reduces each monthly payment by about $46.

Big Brother Teaches Baby Care

New parents at several Ohio hospitals are learning to care for their babies from a computer designed by a nurse at Ohio State University's College of Medicine, and called "HIBABY".

Parents can take the half-hour course on a portable computer terminal brought into the mother's hospital room. After the parents have responded to the computer's questions on infant care by typing their answers on the terminal, the computer prints out its reply. For example, the computer asks, "If you keep a baby warm and dry and offer him food every few hours, do you need to respond each time he cries?" A "yes" answer gets a reassuring "You're so right! A baby is always crying to express a real need." A "no" answer results in the computer printing that "Experts today feel a baby always cries for a reason."

What Your Hair Color Communicates

Is it true blonds have more fun? Most people think so, according to a study conducted at Brigham Young Univ. by Dennis Clayton and Michol Maughan.

"All blonds are considered rich, successful, happy and attractive, but not especially brilliant," say Clayton, currently an asst. prof. of psychology at Ohio's Mt. Union College.

Redheaded males, on the other hand, don't fare too well. Clayton, himself a strawberry blond, says that redheaded males were perceived as weak and homely but good. However, redheaded women were seen as dynamic executive types. Not too surprisingly, brunettes were viewed as average.

Why the negative response to redheaded males? Clayton says one possible explanation is that clowns tend to have red hair, as do other comic characters such as Howdy Doodly.

Animals Learn Fast

Do you have a difficult time giving up foods you know are bad for you? Take a lesson from the animal kingdom:

Hundreds of sheep in California's Antelope Valley owe their lives to tasting bad. That's because the coyotes that had been preying on them have learned to loathe mutton.

Dr. Stuart R. Ellins, an assoc. prof. of psychology at Cal. State College, San Bernardino, felt that coyotes could be turned off sheep if they became ill from eating the animals' meat.

Ellins and his students placed sheep carcasses injected with an emetic in sheep-grazing areas. A half hour after the coyotes ate the meat they became nauseated — and apparently learned to associate the nausea with the taste of the meat. And Ellins says they no longer attack the live animals, either.

Ellins says that the coyotes learn their lesson after one experience because of their adaptability. "If the animal gets sick from a particular food and he's lucky enough to survive," he says, "he'll never eat that food again."

How To Avoid Wasting Time

Don't waste the time you spend waiting. Instead use this "dead time" constructively as well as minimize boredom and frustration with these suggestions from Dr. Michael A. Milan, asst. prof. of psychology at Georgia State Univ.

- Carry reading material with you. You'll be surprised at how much reading you can do in your "dead" time.
- Carry postcards and use waiting periods to keep in touch with friends.
- Take care of small chores — balance your checkbook or make a list of things you want to get done.
- Organize your thoughts. When waiting for a meeting or an interview, use your time to write down points you want to make or questions you want to ask.

Quick Takes

The afternoon is the toughest time to stay on a diet says a study of Mass. members of The Diet Workshop. The post-lunch and pre-dinner period from 3-6 pm was the time when the dieters said they felt the strongest hunger pangs. Other bad times reported were after dinner and before bedtime, with only a handful of midnight snackers.

Many companies are helping outgoing employees find new jobs. Services offered to laid-off employees by a growing number of firms include counseling, writing resumes and lining up job interviews. Fear of litigation and desire for a better image are said to be among the factors behind the trend.

Short people may have the last laugh on those who put them down. According to a study in Science Digest, men in the "short" category of 5'8" lived an average of 80.2 years while those taller than 6 feet lived an average of only 66.6 years. No hypothesis was offered to explain.

Public confidence in physicians has fallen to a new low and most people believe that doctors overcharge according to a recent Harris poll. Only 39% of those surveyed said that they had a "great deal" of confidence in physicians, the lowest percentage since the question was first asked in 1966 when 73% of the respondents said yes. As part of their vote of "no confidence," more than 2 out of every 3 respondents said they believe doctors are overpaid and that recent fee hikes are unjustified.

Are the toughest "critics" of low tar cigarettes satisfied with the taste of MERIT vs. leading high tar brands?

Read the results from a new nationwide research effort.

Results Confirm Breakthrough

Confirmed: Majority of high tar smokers rate MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading high tar cigarettes tested! Cigarettes having up to twice the tar.

Our Story: IT IS A CRISP AUTUMN DAY AND SIGNAL FIRES GLEAM FROM EVERY HEADLAND ALONG THE BRISTOL CHANNEL WARNING THAT A VIKING SHIP IS IN SIGHT. BUT THE DRAGONSHIP IS NOT INTERESTED IN PLUNDERING AND SAILS TO THE END OF THE CHANNEL.

AND THERE ENTERS THE AVON RIVER AND FOLLOWS IT AS FAR AS THE SHIP WILL FLOAT.

THERE THE SHIP IS BEACHED. A HORSE IS BROUGHT ASHORE AND A SWARTHY LADY MOUNTS. THEN WITH AN ESCORT OF VIKING WARRIORS, BEGINS THE JOURNEY TO CAMELOT.

BUT AT THE GATES OF CAMELOT GUARDS REFUSE TO LET ARMED VIKINGS WITHIN THE WALLS. AT A WORD FROM THE STRANGE LADY THEY REMAIN OUTSIDE WAITING.

IT IS ARN WHO, RIDING HOMEWARD, FIRST RECOGNIZES THE VISITOR. "TILlicum!" HE CRIES, "DEAR TILlicum, MY BELOVED NURSE, WHO HELPED BRING ME SAFELY INTO THE WORLD!"
