Compromise Disputed Rezoning Plan

By LYNN CAVERLY
Reflector Staff Writer

A compromise was reached last night at a public hearing held by the Greenville City Council on rezoning of property along Hooker Road and Greenville Boulevard.

After 17 appearances at council meetings, residential property owners won a buffer zone between their property and commercial property, while those seeking rezoning of the land had most of the property rezoned for highway commercial use and office and institutional use.

The land in question is bordered by Hooker Road, north of Carolina Telephone, Greenville Boulevard to the south, and Seaboard Coast Line to the east. Residential property lies to the north.

The residents north of this tract of land feared the proposed rezoning of the land from R-6 (residential) to CH (commercial highway) because of the large investments they have made in their homes.

Harry Middleton, representing the homeowners of the Cambridge sub-division, said they were not opposed to reaching some sort of compromise, as long as a buffer was provided between any land rezoned CH and the land presently zoned R-6.

After much discussion from interested parties on both sides, the land east of Hooker Road and north of the land presently zoned CH along Greenville Boulevard, was rezoned CH, with the land intervening between the CH land and the R-6 property being rezoned O and I (office and institutional).

In two other rezoning matters, the council approved rezoning from CS (shopping center) to RA-20 (residential-agricultural) the property of Grover C. Maxwell Jr. The property is located on the west side of West End Shopping Center and lying within the city limits.

The council also approved the rezoning of property owned by Kenneth Whichard from RA-20 to CH. The property is located on the south side of Greenville Boulevard and east of Nichols Department Store and lying outside the city limits.

Ed Wyatt, city manager, reported that parking funds were breaking even and officials were pleased with the results. Wyatt also mentioned that his office is attemtpting to place more news items of general interest in the local media.

Wyatt also informed those in attendance that the Recreation and Parks Department had applied for a grant which will provide jobs for young adults and maintenance of city parks.

There are presently two vacancies on the Human Relations Council, one due to resignation and the other due to lack of participation.

Councilman Gray recommended Attorney Robert White to replace Warren Outterbridge. The council approved the recommendation and tabled until the next meeting filling the vacancy created by the resignation of Doug Hill.

A refund of overpayments by property owners along Brownlea Drive for improvements on that street was approved by the council. The reason for the overpayments was due to the actual cost being less than the estimated cost which the residents paid in advance.

Those receiving refunds are: C. E. Carawan, $90.00; Fleming and Associates, $166.56; Minin Co., $322.18; and Maplewood S, $355.49.

Mrs. Queenie Boyd was granted a renewal permit for her mobile home located at

Senate May Enlarge Tax Reduction To $20 Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The $16.3 billion tax cut approved by the House is on its way to the Senate, where the figure is likely to grow — perhaps to $20 billion.

Ignoring President Carter's call months ago for a $25 billion tax cut and his last-minute $18.1 billion compromise effort, the House on Thursday adopted, 362-49, the measure written by its Ways and Means Committee.

Indeed, most of the president's tax recommendations failed to survive House scrutiny, including his proposed curbs on the so-called three martini lunch and a capital gains tax increase.

He's also unlikely to prevail in the Senate, where Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., the Finance Committee chairman, has said a $16.3 billion reduction wasn't enough. He wants to add about $4 billion to offset inflation and next year's Social Security tax increase.

Long, who shepherds tax bills through the Senate, generally has his way on such legislation. His panel begins hearings on the tax cut bill Aug. 21.

The House-passed bill would provide income tax savings of $62 for a typical family of four with $10,000 income, $77 for a $15,000 family, and $146 for a $20,000 family.

For single taxpayers in corresponding brackets, the savings would be $15, $71 and $105.

In passing the committee bill, the House dealt Carter a blow by defeating, 225-193, his compromise which would have cut taxes an additional $1.8 billion and would have directed the reductions more to those with incomes below $15,000.

At the White House, presidential press secretary Jody Powell issued a terse, one-sentence comment: "If you make $50,000 or more, the House vote is great."

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., despite strained relations with the White House, made the final plea for the adminstration measure, terming it more equitable than the committee version and saying Carter would sign it.

At the same time, however, he said the administration had been tardy in bringing in its compromise, saying, "If it had been brought in four or five months ago, it would have sailed through Congress."

In adopting the Ways and Means Committee version, the House further ignored Carter by voting to retain a Republican-backed addition that would take inflation into account beginning in 1980 when taxing capital gains.

The amendment would have no immediate effect, but ultimately, according to estimates, could cost the Treasury $4 billion a year. It would cut capital gains receipts in half. Those gains are the profits from sales of stocks, real estate or other assets held at least a year.

Handwritten Testament

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI, in a 13-page handwritten spiritual testament made public today, asked "pardon from all those to whom I may not have done good" and asked that his funeral be kept "pious and simple."

He also gave all but a few of his possessions to the Holy See.

"I intend to die poor and so simplify all matters of this kind," the late pontiff wrote in a document composed in 1965, just two year's after his election as pope.

The pope's appeal for pardon came in two pages added to the testament in 1972, and he added three lines in July 1973 stressing again he wanted simple funeral rites.

"I wish my funeral to be very simple, and I do not wish any special tomb or monument," he wrote in the second of the two additions to the testament.

The Vatican has emphasized that Saturday's funeral and burial for Paul, who died last Sunday at age 80, will be simple.

In the 10-page original document, he sent a "special blessing and greeting to the Holy Land, the land of Jesus where I was pilgrim of faith and of peace."

Pope Paul called for his "personal notes, notebooks, correspondence and writings to be destroyed," including letters he had received of a "spiritual and reserved character."

Writing before the end of the Second Vatican Council, he recommended that the church listen to "some words of ours which we uttered for her seriously and with love."

The pope made some general recommendations on the relationship of the Roman Catholic Church with other Christians and with the world.

He wrote, "About ecumenism: The work of coming closer with separated brothers should be continued with great comprehension, with great patience, with great love; but without deviating from the true Catholic doctrine.

"About the world: One should not believe that it is good ...to adopt its thinking, habits, and tastes; but (one should) study it, love it and serve it."

The pope named the Holy See his "universal heir," but added that if anything is left of his personal property that comes from his family, "let my brother (Ludovico) decide freely about it."

Seeking Grant

Greenville's Recreation and Parks Department has submitted an application to the North Carolina Department of Natural Resources and Community Development for a grant that could mean $1 million for the city over a two year period.

If approved, the Young Adult Conservation Corps grant would provide $500,000 in the first year to provide jobs for young adults and further develop and maintain public parks, wilderness areas and recreational areas in city.

The possibility of funding for a two year period would provide $1 million to Greenville — with no city match required — to improve facilities.

If the grant is approved, the city will employ 44 young adults who will be given the opportunity to learn useful skills and gain employment experience, while at the same time develop the City's 343 acre Wilderness Park off Mumford Road, and perform maintenance and repair work on other existing recreation and park facilities.

Notification is expected within two weeks on the State's action on the grant application.

The Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors has asked Hotline to appeal to the community for donation of items for a "trash and treasure" sale, all proceeds of which will go to the Greenville Rescue Squad.

The sale is to be held Saturday, Aug. 19, from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Elm Street Recreation Center. Donation of household goods, clothing, plants —whatever— will be appreciated and may be made to any member of the Board of Realtors. For pick up of items, one may call Anne Duffus, 756-5395, or Mavis Butts, 758-0655.

This sale is part of the Board of Realtors "Make America Better" program.

Affirm Water Plans

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Board of County Commissioners, at an afternoon meeting yesterday, reaffirmed its committment to a county-wide water system and agreed to push ahead with planning.

Commissioners have been studying a county-wide water system for Pitt for more than 18 months. They agreed yesterday to cooperate with municipalities and community water systems and make final plans for the project.

Earlier this year, a revised county-wide water study estimated the total cost of such a project at $6.63 million, including construction, technical services, legal and administrative costs, land costs and contingencies.

Revenue bonds (to be paid from revenue generated by users of the system) and federal and state grants would be used to fund construction.

In other business yesterday, the board adopted a resolution asking the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners to adopt a resolution supporting reduced insurance rates in areas where rural fire departments use quick-dump tankers to supply fire department pumpers.

Six rural fire departments in Pitt now use such a system, which makes more water available at fire scenes.

Commissioners also raised the per diem travel allowance for county workers, putting the county per diem pay in line with recently changed State policy.

In-state travel was upped from $23 per day to $27 per day (for 24-hour period), while out of state allowences was upped from $35 per day to $37.

For periods of less than 24 hours, in-state travel was set at $15 per day, while out of state travel was set at $24 per day.

Mileage for individuals using their own cars on county business was increased from 15 cents per mile to 17 cents.

1978 Fluecured Crop Is Forecast 1.2 Billion Lbs.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Department of Agriculture estimates the nation's 1978 fluecured tobacco crop at 1.2 billion pounds, a 6 percent increase from 1977.

The USDA forecast also represents an improvement over the July estimate, an indication of continued good growing weather, the Crop Reporting Board said.

In its first forecast of the season, the USDA said Thursday that the 1978 burley tobacco crop will be an estimated 607 million pounds, 2 percent below last year's.

The indications for all types of tobacco point to a crop of 1.96 billion pounds, up 3 percent from last year, with a combined average yield of 2,077 pounds an acre compared to 1,997 pounds last season.

In a survey taken Aug. 1, at a time when 50 percent of the Georgia and Florida fluecured crops had been harvested, the board noted thers had been record prices for the first two weeks of sale.

Plantings were down in that belt by almost 5,000 acres.

In addition to improving yields, the better weather this year has improved quality after last year's drought damage, the board said.

Flue-cured yields were put at 2,033 pounds an acre, compared to 1,917 in 1977, while burley growers will get an average 2,342 pounds an acre after last year's 2,298, it said.

While burley transplanting was late this season because of a cool, wet spring, the board said, the crop is in fair to good condition with topping under way in most areas.

Producers of dark air-cured tobacco are growing a 4 percent larger crop at 22 million pounds, the report indicated.

Production of cigar-type tobaccos was placed at 56.6 million pounds, down 9 percent, fire-cured at 50.4 million, down 4 percent, and Southern Maryland at 29.9 million, down 200,000 pounds.

Indicated production of 1978 fluecured tobacco by types and belts, compared to last year's harvest, was:

—Type 11, Old and Middle Belts: North Carolina, 279,000,000 pounds estimated production and 283,200,000 last year; Virginia, 100,800,000 and 109,495,000.

—Type 12, Eastern North Carolina: 409,200,000 and 346,035,00.

—Type 13, N.C.-S.C. Border: North Carolina, 105,350,000 and 91,770,000; South Carolina, 147,000,000 and 138,720,000.

—Type 14, Georgia-Florida: Alabama, 936,000 and 1,045,000; Florida, 23,100,000 and 24,570,000, and Georgia, 131,150,000 and 134,875,000.

Gold Up, Dollar Sinks

LONDON (AP) — The price of gold set new record highs on both the London and Zurich bullion markets today, while the dollar hit new record lows against the West German mark and the Swiss franc for the second day in succession.

The price of gold jumped to $210-210.75 an ounce in Zurich and $210.50 in London, then London's five major bullion dealers pulled it back to $209.85 at their morning session fixing the rate for trading. The Zurich price slipped back to $209.75. The previous high in both markets had been $208 last Wednesday. The closing rate Thursday was $206.875 in Zurich and $207.65 in London.

On the foreign exchange markets, the dollar was being traded in Frankfurt at 1.9675 marks, down from Thursday's record low of 1.9710, while in Zurich the early rate was 1.6595 Swiss francs, nearly two centimes below Thursday's record of 1.6765.

The dollar also dropped on other European exchanges and in Tokyo. The early rate in Paris was 4.2950 French francs, down from 4.3075 at the close of trading Thursday. In Milan, it was 830.30 lire, down from 834.55.

Legionaires' Disease Bacteria Found In Ind.

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Apparent Legionnaires disease bacteria have been isolated in water used to air condition Indiana University's Memorial Union where 21 persons have contracted the disease in the past year, federal health officials said today.

The organism also has been detected in water from a nearby creek on the Bloomington, Ind., campus, "but whether the organism is transmitted from the creek to the cooling tower water or vice versa or both are colonized from a third source, I just can't say," said Dr. David Fraser of the national Center for Disease Control.

He hailed improved testing methods that allowed scientists to detect the bacterium in the water as a major breakthrough in fighting the disease which first gained national attention when it struck more than 100 persons at an American Legion convention in Phildelphia two years ago.

Further tests are being made on Bloomington water samples and on environmental samples from other places where Legionnaires disease outbreaks have been reported, "and further investigation of ways to control airborne infection may be fruitful," Fraser said.

But he declined to say that changes should be made in big buildings' air conditioning systems "until we understand more."

"If we start making recommendations before we understand the epidemiology of the disease, our recommendations will only be based on guesses," he said.

City School System Staff Changes Announced By Superintendent

Glenn L. Cox, superintendent of Greenville City Schools, today announced three members of the system's administrative staff will assume expanded roles.

John B. Smith has been named principal of Elmhurst Elementary School. Smith has taught in the city school system since 1955 and has served as assistant principal at E. B. Aycock Junior High School since 1974.

Smith is a graduate of Livingstone College and received his master's degree from Hampton Institute in 1968. He completed requirements for his principal's certificate at East Carolina University.

Joseph Smith Jr. will assume the position of assistant principal at E. B. Aycock Junior High School.

It is anticipated that Smith will spend approximately one half of his time as assistant principal and the other half as Special Projects Administrator, working under the direction of Cox.

Joseph Smith has worked in the city school system in an administrative capacity for 20 years. He has served as principal of Greenville Junior High School, Agnes Fullilove, Third Street and Elmhurst, where he has been for the past two years.

The position of Special Projects Administrator is a new position which focuses on specific needs of the school system. Several projected study areas include completion of a system policy manual, development of a public information program, revision of a teacher handbook and development of a system for consolidating some of the administrative reports required by agencies interrelated with the school system.

Cox announced that Charles Ross, director of elementary instruction for Greenville City Schools, has been named Director of Instruction.

Ross will assume additional responsibilities for the coordination of all instructional programs within the school system.

Cox commented that he, along with the Greenville City Board of Education, felt that the new appointments will be a real benefit to the system.

Couple Says Vows Sunday In Kinston Ceremony

MRS. JAMES HENRY GLISSON II

KINSTON — Debra Ann Brown and James Henry Glisson II were united in marriage Sunday at 3:30 p.m. in a ceremony performed in the First Presbyterian Church here.

Dr. Thomas Hamilton and the Rev. Hew Christopher officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Wayne Brown of Kinston, and Mr. and Mrs. James Henry Glisson of Rt. 10, Greenville.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and her attendants were Nancy Aycock of Kinston, matron of honor, Cathy Rose and Cynthia Lou Brown, sister of the bride, both of Kinston, Jan Cavenaugh and Pam Leviner, both of Greenville.

Dawn Conner of Kinston and Julie Harris of Rocky Mount, nieces of the bride, served as junior bridesmaids.

Ushers were Fred and Tom Glisson of Greenville, brothers of the bridegroom, Roderick Brown, brother of the bride, and Barry Langley of Greenville. The best man was father of the bridegroom.

The bride wore a formal length gown of silk jersey with a high neckline of sheer chiffon overlayed in scalloped white floral Venise lace, beaded with pearls. The fitted empire bodice was enhanced by a yoke of sheer chiffon embellished with appliques of beaded Venise lace and outlined in the scalloped lace featuring rows of pearl trim. The pointed butterfly sleeves were edged in miniature Venise lace and styled with a profusion of beaded floral appliques and miniature daisy lace motifs. The waistline repeated the scalloped Venise lace designs from which fell the full circular skirt and attached chapel length train.

She wore a chapel length mantilla edged in silk Venise lace attached to a Juliet cap overlaid in matching lace. The bride carried a bouquet of white roses with white daisies.

The bride is a graduate of ECU with a degree in art education. The bridegroom is majoring in computer science at ECU.

The couple plans to live in Greenville.

The parents of the bridegroom entertained at a rehearsal pig pickin' at their home. A bridesmaids luncheon was held Saturday at the home of Mrs. Ella Faye Comer. She was assisted by Mrs. Mary Ann Harris of Rocky Mount.

He Teaches 'Be Sneaky, Fight Dirty And Win'

EDITOR's NOTE — He's taught a thousand women how to fend off sudden attackers, but his method is nothing so refined as judo or karate. Matt Thomas teaches his self-defense pupils to use their wits first, but then to go straight for the vitals.

By TERESA CHUH
Associated Press Writer

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — The class Matt Thomas developed for women at Harvard, Radcliffe, Wellesley and Stanford Universities is not quite what you'd call charm school.

In fact, the three basics Thomas has literally pounded into the 1,000 or so women who have taken his classes in self-defense are "be sneaky, fight dirty and win."

Graduates tell strange tales of how they fended off attackers, using class techniques. Karen, for instance, recalls breaking a neighbor's window when she feared she was being followed. When the neighbor stormed out, the would-be attacker was scared off.

Lynne was approached by two men while waiting for a bus at a deserted station. She began picking her nose and the pair got disgusted and left.

Then there is Kay, who was grabbed from behind as she entered her dormitory. As her assailant began talking to her, she punched him savagely in the throat. He was still out 10 minutes later when police arrived.

Like these women, who prefer to remain unidentified, Thomas' students are trained both physically and mentally with several "model muggings." Thomas donned 20 lbs. of padding, shin guards, a bullet-proof vest and a modified hockey helmet resembling an over-sized rotting tomato, and "jumped" the women when they least expected it.

The women had to pummel Thomas into submission at least 10 times to pass the course.

"I tried to encourage them to overcome their inhibitions about striking out," Thomas says. "That's the most difficult part of the course for most women who have been taught to be nice and never physically aggressive."

Petite, blue-eyed Ellen Brigham, 24, a graduate of Thomas's class who teaches his methods to women at Stanford, says that contrary to the rules of judo, students are told to go straight for the groin, eyes, throat and temples.

"The actual technique is really simple," she says. "You just jump in and fight in the crudest, most powerful way you can. The only 'art form' is working on one well-delivered blow to the right place."

Mrs. Brigham, who took the class because she was alone when her husband went out of town, never has been the victim of an attack, but like other women, she worried about it.

"Not knowing what's out there and then not knowing what your own physical abilities are to cope with it can leave you feeling totally helpless," the soft-spoken graduate student says. "Now, at least I am more aware of what I can do if I am attacked."

Thomas, a former karate instructor, says he developed his approach to self-defense 6 years ago when one of his woman students — a black belt in karate — was raped by an unarmed assailant.

"After studying about 3,000 cases of assaults on women, I discovered that most are knocked to the ground before they realize they've been attacked," Thomas says. "How can karate do them any good when 90 percent of the technique is taught standing up?"

Thomas emphasizes, however, that physical defense should be saved as "a last resort."

"There are so many other ways to outwit an attacker that a knock-down, drag-out fight shouldn't be the only choice," he says.

Mrs. Brigham adds that a woman accosted at a lonely spot might find that suddenly babbling in a foreign tongue, clucking like a chicken or saying she has a bad case of poison ivy would discourage an accoster.

Women Bankers Successful

NEW YORK (AP) — Since the four Westchester offices of Barclays Bank of New York have been staffed entirely by women, business in those offices has doubled, reports John Whicker, president of the bank.

"Since our staff has been all female," says Sandra Ross, manager of the bank's office in Yorktown Heights, "turnover of personnel has been reduced dramatically, absenteeism has been curtailed and morale in terms of upward mobility opportunities has been greatly reinforced."

FIRST LADIES' GOWNS

WASHINGTON (AP) — With Rosalynn Carter's recent presentation of her inaugural ball gown to the Smithsonian Institution's collection of first ladies' dresses, each first lady from Martha Washington to Mrs. Carter is now represented in the collection with an inaugural dress or a dress worn during her lifetime.

WOMEN'S HISTORY COURSE SET

CHICAGO (AP) — A course that will deal with the significant contributions women have made to American life will be offered this fall by Daley College, one of the City Colleges of Chicago.

The course, "Women in American History," will explore such topics as how women's work became confined to the home, what impact industrialization and war have had on women and the women's liberation movement from a historical perspective.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

"Well," I said to my husband as he crawled into bed, "I hope you're satisfied. Your son is gone."

"You act like it was my idea," he said.

"Don't tell me you didn't encourage him to leave."

"All I said was he is old enough to develop some kind of independence."

"If anything happens to him, let it be on your conscience"

"What kind of crack is that? You went along with it."

"Only because I didn't want him to remember us screaming and shouting at one another. If he just had someone with him."

"Stop worrying. If everything weren't going well, we'd hear."

"The dog misses him already," I said. "He's in the utility room whining."

"Oh for crying out loud."

"I went by his room tonight. It was so . . . so picked up. I never knew he had a double bed before."

"Go to sleep and stop torturing yourself."

"Did you hear something?" I asked bolting upright.

"What did it sound like?" he asked.

"I don't know."

"What do you mean you 'don't know.' Everything has to sound like something for pete's sake."

"If I hear it again, I'll tell you."

"If you don't know what it is, then how will you know when you hear it again?"

"Are you trying to pick a fight with me, because if your conscience is bothering you, take it out on someone else. Admit it! You're worried, aren't you?"

"No."

"You're worried that you sent your son out into a world crawling with murderers, perverts, sex fiends and robbers who would tap you on the head with a tire iron for 35 cents."

"Will you go to sleep?"

"Did you leave the front door open?"

"No."

"I'm going down and open it. Just in case he should come home in the middle of the night. You know how he never carries his keys."

"That tears it," said my husband throwing back the covers and sticking his head out of the bedroom window. "Hey Buddy!" he yelled in the darkness "Everything okay out there?"

A sleepy head poked through the tent flap. "Aw c'mon Dad, you promised you'd let me camp all by myself."

Couple Shares Blooming Idea

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: We have found a solution for those who wish to give parties (birthday, anniversary, housewarming, etc.) but don't want their guests to bring gifts.

With our invitations, we say, "Please bring a flower to add to our birthday (anniversary) bouquet."

There are no unwanted gifts, no thank-you notes to write, and the bouquets are always lovely. But best of all, the guests will not have to come empty-handed, which pleases them and eliminates the strain on their pocketbooks.

CHULA VISTA, CALIF.

DEAR CHULA: What a bloomin' good idea! Thanks for sharing.

DEAR ABBY: Three cheers for you, Abby, for advising the woman who had been saving her sexy nighties instead of wearing them to hurry up and make use of them because it was later than she thought!

My husband is a pastor in the Reformed Church, and about 10 years ago we conducted a marriage seminar for 16 married couples.

When they registered, they filled out a questionnaire which contained the question: "Do you undress in the same room with your spouse—or do you undress in the closet?"

Six husbands said their wives undress in the closet, but only four wives admitted to undressing in the closet. (Only one husband undressed in the closet.)

Of those who undress in the closet, five couples are now divorced, and one couple is separated.

All the couples who undressed in front of each other are still married happily. Doesn't this tell you something, Abby?

PASTOR'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Yes. Where there's light, there's usually heat.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "HAD IT UP TO HERE IN MILWAUKEE": If you work for a man, speak well of him or not at all. I am aware that not everyone can speak well of his employer, in which case he should keep his mouth shut or try to find another job.

Nurse's Aide Specializes In Care For The Dying

By JANE SEE WHITE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Renetta Gaston says the 30 families who make up the remote Caribbean village where she was raised could teach Americans about death. She knows: She earns her living caring for the dying.

"In my village, they don't know the name of a migraine headache, but it's traditional for old people to die at home. The whole village helps. I think you could learn from us how to respect your old people," she says, her voice a soft West Indian lilt.

For two years, Mrs. Gaston has worked here as a nurse's aide. She says Americans are learning that a sterilized, motorized hospital bed and the company of cool, professional strangers is not always the best approach to death.

Each day Mrs. Gaston travels to the home of her patient — an aged woman, a 38-year-old man with cancer. Each night at her home, she says she prays for the dawn because "I just can't wait to get back to them. You never know when you leave them at night if you'll see them in the morning."

Last week, death came to the 89-year-old woman she had cared for daily since April. Some cases are longer, some shorter. Mrs. Gaston goes when they grow ill enough to need someone to feed them, help them bathe. She leaves when they die.

Today, the wide-faced black woman with soft brown eyes is waiting for her employer, UpJohn HealthCare Services, to assign her a new patient somewhere in New York City.

Nationwide, there are 2,500 home care agencies, according to the National League of Nursing. They provide registered nurses, licensed practical nurses, aides and housekeepers for the sick and disabled, for the aged and the terminally ill.

A study this year by New York's Health Systems Agency put the cost of skilled nursing homes for the chronically ill at $1,380 a month, compared with $857 a month for hospital care and $586 for home care.

Mrs. Gaston said, "As long as they have their own home, I think they should stay there and get somebody who can honestly take care of them. It's happier for them. They accept better. They see their children care.

"If you break up their homes and give away their things, it kills them quicker."

She says the families of the 10 terminally ill people for whom she has cared in the last two years came to understand that they were capable of caring for their dying relatives at home.

"I think people are getting ready to love their old people more now. They're not afraid of them. The more I get on these cases, the more I see families saying, 'She's an aide and she can do it and I can too.'"

UpJohn put Mrs. Gaston through a 17-week training program covering such details as how to care for the dying, how to lift even the most obese patient.

With 55,000 employees in 240 offices, UpJohn is the nation's largest private home health care provider. Maximum salaries range from about $3.50 an hour for an aide to about $6.25 an hour for an RN. Working hours are usually flexible, depending on the patient's needs.

As an aide, Mrs. Gaston is allowed to administer no medication. The job amounts largely to helping with the daily needs the ill can no longer meet alone — bathing, shopping, laundry, cooking. But Mrs. Gaston reduces the doing of her job to a single, not-so-simple ingredient: Love.

"You don't have to tell them anything. You let them see and feel that you care. You don't make them eat when you want them to and you don't make them get up at 8 o'clock, because they're dying. Because they're dying and it's all up to them.

"They are trying to accept it. The more patient and calm we are with them, that's the important thing. The more I do for them, the stronger I feel. Sometimes I think when they die, they leave me their strength.

"When I'm home, I can't wait to get back to them, because I want to be the one who always takes care of them.

"You suffer with them, too, but you can't show it. You can't show your sadness because you're the one they depend on to be strong. Sometimes I can't wait to get home to fall apart.

"The family is just like the patient. They know they can talk to you and they know they can trust you. It takes a whole weight off them. Not watching someone dying, that's a separate weight, but the knowing they don't have to worry because you'll take care of their sick and they can go on with their own lives while you're there.

"It's so great to see that they're not scorning their old people now. It's just to love them. We do the balance."

Nat'l PTA Threatens Five Network Station

CHICAGO (AP) — The National PTA is threatening to challenge the license renewals of five network-owned television stations if the networks continue to ignore pleas to improve the quality of programming.

Grace Baisinger, PTA president, said Thursday the networks haven't improved program quality since the PTA's first ratings last fall. She said the organization will survey TV again this fall and, based on findings, may challenge license renewals for three stations in Chicago, one in Detroit and one in Cleveland.

The Chicago stations are WMAQ-TV, NBC; WLS-TV, ABC; and WBBM-TV, CBS. The others are NBC's WKYC-TV in Cleveland and Detroit's WXYZ-TV an ABC affiliate.

She said the PTA's report card was based on the degree of sex and violence, offensive language, artistic merit and the stereotyping of women, minorities, ethnic and age groups.

The PTA, on the same day that television's Emmy Award nominees were announced, listed CBS's "Kojak" on its "most violent" and "most offensive" program lists as well as on its list of having "least overall quality." It was the only show so rated.

"Kojak" has been cancelled for next season. So have most of the shows mentioned on the PTA list of poor programming.

"Maude" was listed among the poorest in overall quality the same day the show's star, Beatrice Arthur, was nominated for the Emmy as best actress on a comedy show.

The PTA gave top overall quality ratings to 10 shows. They were, in order, ABC's "Donny and Marie" CBS' "60 Minutes," NBC's "Grizzly Adams," CBS' "Waltons," NBC's "Little House on the Prairie," ABC's "Young Pioneers," ABC's "Julie Farr M.D.," NBC's "World of Disney," ABC's "Happy Days" and ABC's "Eight is Enough."

The 10 shows considered poorest in overall quality were, in order, NBC's "Chuck Barris Rah-Rah Show," CBS' "Ted Knight," NBC's "Roller Girls," NBC's "Joe and Valerie," ABC's "Sugar Time," CBS' "Husbands, Wives and Lovers," NBC's "AES Hudson Street" plus three other CBS shows, "Kojak," "Another Day" and "Maude."

In the most violent show category, CBS had five, ABC three and NBC two. The least violent category was led by ABC and CBS with four each. NBC had two.

The national PTA surveyed 3,000 of its members last April as a basis for rating the shows.

ABC and NBC network executives had no immediate comment on the lists. CBS vice president Gene Mater said he had not seen the latest PTA study, but said that last year's PTA ratings were "unscientific and subjective."

The head of a privately-funded group that monitors the quality of children's television criticized the PTA study as useless.

"We feel a lot of programming on the overall quality list is very simplistically sweet," said Peggy Charren, president of Action for Children's Television of Newtonville, Mass. "A list like this doesn't really serve much of a purpose. Someone else's most offensive program might be my favorite."

Hazard Advice Is Downgraded

WASHINGTON (AP) — The man whose advice about the hazards of smoking appears on every pack of cigarettes sold in the United States has a new warning about low-tar cigarettes — "there is no known safe level of smoking of any cigarette of any type."

Surgeon General Julius Richmond conceded Thursday that "some cigarettes are less hazardous than others," but said "there is no data anywhere in the large body of scientific ing that holds out any hope that there is such a thing as a safe cigarette or a safe level of smoking."

His warning about low-tar cigarettes had strong backing:

—"... The comments on lowrisk cigarettes are admittedly based on assumptions that it may take years to prove or disprove," said the American Heart Association.

—The tobacco industry should "perform a service to consumers and the American public by stopping manufacture of the more hazardous brands," said the American Cancer Society.

The comments followed a report from a government scientist that a smoker could consume a pack a day of some low-tar cigarettes "without apparent risk."

The scientist, Gio Batta Gori, told The Associated Press that cigarettes are unsafe "but some are so low (in tar and other toxic substances) as to cause no observable hazard."

But the surgeon general cautioned that "no one should be misled by Dr. Gori's study into the belief that there is some way that one can adjust one's smoking habits and the cigarette one smokes and thus avoid all health risks."

Nuclear Energy Dream Proven

At one time nuclear energy seemed to be the nation's answer to providing power for generating electricity.

As the years have gone by, however, the dream of totally producing electricity through nuclear energy is far from realized in this country.

There have been growing objections from environmentalists and concern about disposal of nuclear wastes.

Nuclear powered generators are still with us, however and Duke Power Co. expects to build enough nuclear plants by 1993 to power 60 percent of its generating capacity.

Carolina Power and Light expects to be generating 44 percent of its capacity with nuclear energy by 1990, perhaps more.

Thus, despite the problems, the growth of nuclear generating plants is still ongoing — and they become even more important as the costs of fossil fuels soars.

It seems logical that electricity may be the basic energy source for the nation as fossil fuels decline. Electricity may even run our automobiles.

And nuclear power may still be the way that the generators are turned in the future. There are many problems yet to be completely solved, but we have proven the practicality of nuclear power generation.

Guaranteeing No Fiscal Responsibility

A recent letter to the editor from a New York man thanked us for helping him pay his taxes.

President Carter made it official this week, travelling to New York to sign a bill guaranteeing loans to New York City. In doing so he removed any incentive for New York to get its spending in line with anticipated revenues.

We can be sure there will be no fiscal responsibility in New York and the nation's taxpayers will guarantee it.

CACTUS IN THE ROSE GARDEN!

Young Prove Fertile

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Population experts blame the dramatic increase in the number of illegitimate children in America on the fact that many of today's unmarrieds consider themselves liberated but don't use proper birth control methods.

"One thing that bothers people is the high fertility among young teen-agers," said Dr. Paul Glick, head of the Census Bureau's population division. "They're liberated, but they don't know how to prevent having babies."

Glick was referring to a new fertility report released Thursday showing the annual number of illegitimate births in the United States had more than quintupled between 1940 and 1975.

The figures show that the annual number of births occuring outside marriage went from 90,000 or 3.6 percent of all births in 1940 to 448,000 or 14.3 percent of all births in 1975.

Glick, one of the country's leading authorities on population control, said the inflationary economy and high unemployment also have contributed to the high illegitimacy rate.

"They've (those factors) made it harder for young people to get married and set up housekeeping," he said. "As long as young people are postponing marriage and still engaging in an act that used to be more limited to married people, this is what happens if they don't take advantage of the excellent family limiting devices."

Glick said the high illegitimacy rate for teen-agers, which increased by 60 percent from 1962 to 1975, represents a generation gap.

"Young people didn't used to let themselves get into this," he said. "Also, the church has lost its force in many quarters."

Martin O'Connell, a statistician in the Census Bureau's fertility branch, said another reason the number of illegitimate children has increased is that many men no longer feel compelled to marry

THIS AFTERNOON

A Portrait Of The State

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — You don't have to be an educator to understand what the results of the trial-run competency test scores in North Carolina high schools mean.

And you don't have to be a sociologist to figure out what is wrong, and how long it is going to take to repair the flaws.

Neither do you have to be a professional planner in economic growth and development to read into the results the implications for the future in this state.

A simple set of two sheets of paper has done it for us. The State Department of Public Instruction produced the papers providing a map of the state divided into education districts.

The accompanying figures report on percent of students answering correctly less than 50 percent, 60 percent, 65 percent, and 70 percent of the questions in the reading and mathematics packages.

Race, Income

Results in those categories are further broken down into identifial groups: male or female, race, parental education, and estimated family income.

To put the report bluntly: Blacks from low-income families where the parents are not very well educated did badly, and those conditions are concentrated along North Carolina's coast, in the coastal plains area, and the eastern Piedmont.

American Indians from similar circumstances also did poorly, but not scoring so low as blacks.

White kids from high income homes and educated parents did best.

The conclusion is obvious. Here are some representative figures which describe the situation.

— Parental education: eighth grade or less, 48.5 percent scored less than 70 percent correct; grades 8 - 12, 30.4 percent; high school graduates, 13.8 percent; and higher education, 5.4 percent

— Estimated Family Income: under $5,000, 49.1 percent scored under 70 percent correct; between $5,000 and $15,000, 18.1 percent; and over $15,000, 5.3 percent.

BILL NOBLITT

— Race: 40.1 percent of black students scored less than 70 percent correct; 34.3 percent of the Indians; and nine percent of the white.

—Sex: 22.32 percent of the males, and 13.8 percent of the females got lower than 70 percent.

— Districts: Number one is northeastern counties from Pitt to Gates and eastward to the coast; 26.8 percent of the students scored under 70 percent.

Down East

District two from Wayne and Green counties south to Brunswick and east to Cartaret and Pamlico; 21.7 percent. District three from Edgecombe and Wilson west to Chatham; 20.4 percent. District four from Lee and Harnett west to Montgomery; 19.9 percent. Top was District eight, including all of southwestern counties from Rutherford and McDowell to Tennessee line: 13.4 percent.

Commerce Secretary D. M. (Lauch) Faircloth who is now deeply involved in strategies for a Balanced Economic Growth Plan for the state while running the agency to bring new jobs to the state took one look at the two simple sheets of paper and observed that contained on them is both the rationale and the answer to what is needed for North Carolina.

Poor education leads to low income jobs which leads to children who perform poorly in school; and the crescent of counties east of the fall line are most in need.

HONG KONG — This city, which has now become the PX to the world, has a population of 3,239,548 people, of whome 3,239,546 earn their living as tailors.

The making of suits in Hong Kong is the most important industry in the country; and in the struggle for the backs of men, this British crown colony looks like Gimbels' basement on a Saturday afternoon before Father's Day.

I didn't realize how important it was to have a suit made in Hong Kong until, after I took off from Rangoon, the stewardess gave me a police card to fill out. It demanded my name, my nationality, my passport number, and wanted to know if I preferred a single-or double-breasted vent in my jacket. I dutifully filled it out and gave it back.

When I landed at the Hong Kong airport I was whisked through the health authorities and sent to customs. The customs inspector asked me: "Do you have anything to declare?" I hesitated for a moment and then decided to come clean. "Yes," I said, "one shoulder is slightly lower than the other." He took his chalk and made a few marks on my sleeve.

On the airport bus going into town the bus driver while stopped for a red light, showed me several bolts of cloth and I selected one. At the hotel, while I was signing the register, I had my first fitting by the bell captain, who called off the measurements to the room clerk.

ART BUCHWALD

Since I had already selected the material on the airport bus, the reception clerk told me there would be no delay in getting to my room. On the elevator I had my second fitting, and when I got to my room my suit was finished and hanging in the closet.

Since I've been in Hong Kong, it's been one fitting after another. I don't really need so many suits, but because I bought one I've been forced to buy the others.

For example, the first evening I was in town I went into a drugstore to buy a toothbrush. While the druggist was wrapping it up, he inquired where the new suit I was wearing was made. I said at the hotel, and he shook his head sadly. "They gave you a split sleeve with a slanted cuff and flap pockets."

"Is there anything I can do about it?" I asked nervously.

"Well, I'm not a doctor," he said, "but I'll see what I can do."

He took a bolt of English herringbone cloth out of one of the medicine cabinets, and let me look at the magazines while he cut the pattern. In half an hour, the suit was ready. He was so proud of his work that he told

THE GALLUP POLL...

Many Support 'Controls'

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — Even though consumer prices advanced at a rate of better than 10 percent during the first six months of 1978, it seems as though no one wants to take the radical step of controlling wages and prices — no one, that is, except the American people.

Currently, 53 percent of Americans would like to put a clamp on wages and prices. Another 34 percent are opposed to such a move, and 13 percent are undecided on the matter.

Freezing wages and prices is an idea which is long overdue as far as most Americans are concerned. Three consecutive Gallup surveys since April have shown a majority of the public favoring a return to controls — a step long anathema to the Carter administration as well as business and labor leaders.

A return to controls has support from a broad spectrum of the American public including members of labor union families and residents of every geographic region.

Sharp differences do appear, though, when the population is divided by political affiliation, educational attainment and family income. As one might expect, Republicans are less apt to favor controls (47 percent) than are Democrats (56 percent) or independents (52 percent).

As has been the case in previous surveys, college-educated Americans aree less likely to vote for returning to controls (46 percent) than are those whose formal education ended at the high school level (54 percent) or grade school level (63 percent).

Similarly, those in the highest income bracket are less likely to favor controls than are people in the middle and lower income groups.

Heavy Opposition

Although most of the public may be convinced of the wisdom of returning to controls, advocates face a phalanx of impressive opposition.

Last April President Carter said that even if inflation should continue to higher levels mandatory wage and price controls would be counterproductive and that he could foresee no circumstances under which he would favor them.

Also, business and labor leaders have traditionally opposed controls. Labor leaders believe wage controls unfairly penalize union workers; business people prefer the ability to raise prices, and fear that controls will cause shortages in some commodities.

History Of Attitudes

For almost 40 years the public has approved wage and price controls during wars or periods of severe inflation.

Just over 10 years ago, in 1966, opinion was evenly divided between those who favored and those who opposed wageprice curbs. But as inflationary pressures built during the latter half of the '60s, opinion began to shift in favor of controls.

In a survey conducted just a few weeks prior to President Richard Nixon's imposition of a wage-price freeze as part of his Phase One economic program, public support for controls had reached its highest point since the Korean War, with 50 percent in favor and 39 percent opposed.

Just after Nixon froze wages and prices, a Gallup Poll showed Americans supported the move by a margin of six-to-one. Furthermore, surveys conducted at regular intervals during the three phases of Nixon's economic program consistently showed the public favored stricter controls as opposed to less strict.

And, since 1974, at least a plurality of the public has favored a return to controls.

Other Editors Say
Rural Areas' Need

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

Teacher salaries in North Carolina have generally been increased. That's good. The salaries are attracting more college students in the state's teaching ranks. That's bad.

The reason is that many of these are unable to find teaching positions in North Carolina.

Teachers are applying to metropolitan area schools throughout the state, leaving the rural schools with unfilled teaching positions. That, also, is bad.

Ideally, there should be a uniform distribution of teaching personnel between rural and city schools. Factually, it doesn't work that way.

State figures show that colleges and universities in North Carolina turned out 6,466 new teachers last year, but that only about 2,000 of them found positions in the state.

That leaves the remainder of the new teachers with two options: try to find teaching jobs in other states, or try to find work in some other field.

Tom I. Davis, information officer for the state Dept. of Public Instruction, says the average salary for teachers in the state has increased to $12,943, which is encouraging many college students to go into teaching.

The results, according to Davis, is an overabundance of teachers in North Carolina. Yet, despite the growing number of teachers in the state, many rural areas have difficulty attracting the teachers they need in their school systems.

Teachers, especially the younger ones just getting out of college, simply are not attracted to rural life. They tend to move toward the metropolitan areas where there is more to do.

The result is that rural school systems, particularly in the eastern part of the state, are going lacking.

Offices have not been set up as yet, but the fair manager has headquarters in the Greenville Hotel.

Work on the stadium in progressing steadily and pouring of concrete has started, with indications that erection of the steel framework will begin within a week or 10 days.

Approximately 80 men were working on the project today today. Most of the work heretofore has been on the grounds which are being leveled and drained.

The store to be occupied by Belk-Tyler is being remodeled throughout and a modern, attractive front constructed, indicating the building will be one of the most beautiful in the city when work is completed.

Strength For Today

GOD'S TIME PLAN

Sometimes we launch campaigns to improve our faults. But these campaigns seldom move along as fast as we wish, and we often wind up in discouragement and frustration as a result.

In these circumstances it might help us to consider God's time plan. The cabbage matures in a summer; the oak in a lifetime. God took millions of years to make the hills and the oceans; millions more to put a layer of soil over the earth, and millions beyond that to mature and develop life thereon.

If we can consider time in this relative manner, it might help us to appreciate the divine sense of patience which is everywhere evident in this world. With this realization in mind, it is easier to have patience with ourselves. Perhaps we seem no stronger morally, or wiser, than we were ten years ago. But probably we are, if we have made an effort to become so. It takes a long time to grow an oak, a mind, a personality, and a moral character.

Await Retirement Law Impact

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — It could be just a ripple, or the beginning of a revolutionary change in American work and retirement patterns. Either way, the course is set before the experiment begins with next year's ban on mandatory retirement at age 65.

Beginning Jan. 1, and with few exceptions, no one can be told to retire before they reach the age of 70. It's likely that before very long, Congress will remove that age barrier, too, as it already has done in the case of federal employees.

Congress passed the retirement bill with scant opposition, and President Carter said as he signed it that it was a time for celebration.

Now a critical economist suggests that they moved too quickly, with too little knowledge of what will happen under the new law.

"It has a potential impact larger than is commonly anticipated and more complex than is usually supposed," says Robert M. Macdonald of Dartmouth College. "It will affect individuals, organizations and activities unevenly, reducing efficiency and redistributing rights and rewards within the society ...Not enough is known about retirement behavior to predict with confidence what the magnitude or full range of these effects will be."

There are about as many forecasts as there are analysts on the number of people likely to keep working, or return to the work force, because of the new law. The Labor Department has forecast a first-year increase of about 200,000 in the work force, with smaller numbers of people opting to stay on the job in subsequent years.

But Macdonald, in a study published by the American Enterprise Institute for Public Policy Research, argues that all the estimates are suspect because they are based on the old system, when 65 was the almost universal retirement rule.

There are other factors, too, notably the easing of the earnings limit on Social Security recipients. It has been $3,000 a year, but it is to go up gradually to $6,000 in 1982.

Inflation also may lead people to keep working under the new law. Most pensions are fixed; the cost of living is not. In an AP-NBC News poll, 36 percent of those questioned said they didn't think their retirement income would be enough to live on. The same number said it would be just enough to cover living costs. Only 23 percent thought that pensions, Social Security and their other resources would give them enough to live comfortably in retirement.

In the same poll, 43 percent said that the new law would make it more likely they will work past age 65.

"The remarkable fact about the change in retirement practices is the lack of preparation for it," Macdonald says.

It must have been my new suit, because as soon as I was seated a woman who looked like a combination of Suzie Wong and the Dragon Lady came over to the table and sat down.

"You beautiful American man," she said, taking my hands in hers. "We dance for little while and then go to my place."

"Well, really," I said feverishly.

"Don't worry," she said. "I make you very happy."

An hour later we arrived at her apartment. She opened the door, took my hand and led me in. Then she turned on the lights. Seated in every corner of the room was a member of her family at a sewing machine. Her father started taking the measurements and damned if I didn't wind up with another suit.

Memphis Police Strike For Larger Pay Offer

By LES SEAGO
Associated Press Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Sheriff's deputies patrolled the streets of Memphis today after 1,100 police officers walked off their beats and onto picket lines.

Mayor Wyeth Chandler said a state of civil emergency existed and that National Guard troops would be brought in to help protect this city of 650,000, Tennessee's largest. National Guardsmen were used five weeks ago when firemen struck for three days.

The walkout came as thousands of tourists flocked to Memphis for a week of activities marking the first anniversary of rock 'n' roll idol Elvis Presley's death Aug. 16.

David Baker, president of the Memphis Police Association, said Thursday night that the presence of tourists and Presley fans in the city had been a consideration in the decision to strike.

The strike was ordered Thursday night in a secret session of the union's executive board after members rejected a city wage offer. Police and firefighters have been without contracts since July 1.

Picket lines went up at police headquarters and all four precinct stations and police headquarters at 11 p.m. CDT, 4½ hours after officers voted 528-266 against the pay proposal.

The offer called for a 6.653 percent increase retroactive to July 1 with raises of $22.50 a month and 7.5 percent by Oct. 1, 1979. The package would have boosted a veteran officer's monthly pay from $1,148 to $1,224 immediately.

Chandler asked citizens to stay home unless travel was absolutely necessary. During the firefighters' strike, he imposed a dusk-to-dawn curfew after hundreds of fires broke out.

Major Gen. Van Nunally, Tennessee deputy adjutant general, said he would meet with his staff before deciding which National Guard units would be brought to Memphis. The entire Tennessee National Guard is in summer training at Camp Shelby, near Hattiesburg, Miss., but the training was to end today.

"We have enough troops down there to swamp Memphis...if we need them," Nunally said.

Shelby County sheriff's deputies switched to double shifts when the strike was announced. "We had contingency plans in the event of a police walkout," said administrative officer Ron McKinney. "Reserves are on standby. We will act as the sheriff sees fit."

Picket lines went up with military precision at the North Precinct. At 11 p.m., two vans which had been parked about a block from the station rolled up and men carrying picket signs leaped out to station themselves across the driveway.

"Them are pickets — I guess that means we're on strike," said a lieutenant in the precinct house.

At the city's South Precinct, about six lieutenants and captains were left on duty with an inspector.

"They showed up all right, but not for work," said one captain when asked if his men reported for duty. "They're all outside."

$122.78 Day For Farmville

FARMVILLE — Offerings on the Farmville Tobacco Market yesterday consisted of more low grades of primings and nondescript than on any day this week, Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade Sales Supervisor Louis Williams said.

Leaf and cutter grades showed a slight increase in volume, in contrast to previous sale days. Stabilization receipts were less than those of the previous day. The market sold 717,378 pounds for $880,803 for an average of $122.78 per hundred. Last year on the same sale day, the average was $93 per hundred.

For the season, the market has sold 4,016,181 pounds for $4,913,144 for an average of $122.33.

The Gallop Poll....

Here is the question asked to determine current attitudes toward returning to wage and price controls:

"Would you favor or oppose having the government bring back wage and price controls?"

And here is the trend during 1978:

Favor Or Oppose Return To Controls?

	Favor	Oppose	No opinion
LATEST	53%	34%	13%
May 19-22	52	36	12
April 14-17	52	37	11
Feb. 10-13	44	40	16

And here are the current results by important demographic groups:

a woman they have gotten pregnant.

"A major consideration is that many illegitimate births used to be legitimized by the man marrying the pregnant woman," said O'Connell, a coauthor of the report. "Now a man is no longer required to take an oath before intercourse."

He added that studies about illegitimacy show that some pregnant, unmarried women are deciding they don't want to marry the unborn child's father.

"They have a low opinion of his ability to support a future family," O'Connell said, quoting studies.

The report showed also that wives are having fewer children than they used to, but that not many married women expect to remain childless.

Figures show that 5.4 percent of married women in 1976 exected to be childless, only slightly more than in 1960 when the figure was 4 percent.

City Council...

1806 S. Greene St., used as a personal residence.

A resolution declaring certain equipment and vehicles belonging to the city surplus to the city's needs and authorization of the sale of the equipment was approved by the council. The items will be sold at a public auction on September 9.

The council approved a resolution authorizing the Mayor and City Clerk to execute an agreement with the Seaboard Coast Line covering the construction and maintenance of an electric wire on property of the railroad at Winterville.

Approval of the sale of disposal parcel K-7a in the Southside Redevelopment Project was granted as requested by the Redevelopment Commission. Dr. Hazel Brown of Chapel Hill was awarded the land for her bid of $3,849.11.

A public hearing on September 14 for the purpose of considering a request by the Board of Trustees of East Carolina University was approved by the council. The university is asking that a portion of Charles Street between Ninth Street and the alley south of Mendenhall Student Center be closed.

The council approved the transfer of funds from the closed Workman's Compensation Fund to the General Fund of the city. The city now has Workman's Compensation insurance as part of its total insurance program to pay claims made by city employees injured on the job. This makes the special fund no longer necessary.

Mayo Allen, public works director, was approved as the city official to sign all necessary documents and represent the city relative to state aid for mosquito control.

Cash's Colonial, 124 W. Greenville Blvd., was approved for an off-premise beer privilege license. David's, The Steak Place, 2826 Memorial Dr., was approved for an on-premise beer and wine privilege license.

A tax rate of 13 cents per $100 valuation of property for the purpose of extraterritorial fire protection for industries was approved by the council.

One request for release of 1977 city taxes, six requests for release of 1976 city taxes, and one request for a refund of 1976 city taxes was approved by the council.

The semi-annual reports of the Planning and Zoning Commission and the Joint City-County Planning and Zoning Commission were both approved at last nights meeting.

Mervis Uniforms of Virginia Beach, Va., was awarded the bid for police fall-winter uniforms. They were the lowest bidder with a net delivery bid of $12,356.70 and a delivery date of 30-45 days.

Barrus Construction was awarded the bid for paving Eighth Street from Dickinson Avenue east to Cotanche Street. The estimated cost is $29,930.

The prohibition of parking on Arlington Boulevard was approved by the council last night, the ordinance becoming effective upon this adoption.

The council approved consideration of a notice of intent to conduct a bond referendum on November 7, 1978, for a new public works facility and authorized the notice of intent to be published in the "Daily Reflector" on August 14. The Finance Officer was designated to prepare and file a sworn statement of debt.

Before the meeting was recessed, Councilwoman Judy Greene expressed her praise to City Manager Ed Wyatt and his staff for doing such a fine job.

The council was recessed until August 24 when they will introduce the bond order and call for a public hearing on the order.

Roses Are The Reward

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Florists will love it. State legislators have decided to award meritorious state agency officials with roses.

And to carry the symbolism one step further, those department heads whose performance is considered below par could find ragweed in their mailboxes.

Sen. David Berger, D-Milwaukee, and Rep. William Rogers, D-Kaukauna, said they created the award to spotlight state agencies' superior performances and "just plain silly ideas."

"We intend to periodically send roses to agency heads or employees who have gone above and beyond their normal responsibilities in order to help us resolve public complaints or make the bureaucracy more publicly accountable," Berger said.

"However, I should add that we have sent a staff member out with a gunny sack with instructions to fill it full of ragweed," Rogers said. "If the past is any indication of the future, it could be a long, hard winter."

They added that they are paying for the roses out of their own pockets. As for the ragweed, they "will pay market price," they said.

An Exchange Of 'Estimations'

CANAL FULTON, Ohio (AP) — Jim Myers received an estimated water bill of $18.51 from the village water department, so he sent back an "estimated" check.

"If they can guess, I can guess too," said the Goodyear aerospace worker.

He sent the water department a $15 check and a note saying he was submitting "an estimated payment for an estimated bill."

"I have a meter in my basement and I'm paying for service in full," said Myers, 33. "If the water department doesn't have time to do its job, then I don't have time to do it for them."

Water department officials said they will apply the $15 towards Myers' bill and collect the remaining $3.51 next month.

She Plans A Hazardous Swim

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Even as Diana Nyad prepares to swim from Cuba to the Florida Keys, another longdistance swimmer says she plans a more hazardous venture — swimming from the Bimini Islands to Florida without a shark cage.

Stella Taylor, 46, a two-time conqueror of the English Channel, said Thursday she plans to swim the 100 miles without the elaborate $40,000 cage Miss Nyad will use for her upcoming swim.

John Mitchell Planning Push Court Fight For Freedom

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Attorney General John N. Mitchell, having lost his appeal for a quick parole from his Watergate prison sentence, plans now to carry his fight for freedom to a federal court.

Mitchell's lawyer says he will ask the U.S. District Court in Montgomery, Ala., next week to order Mitchell's release on the ground that he is being unlawfully detained at the nearby Maxwell Air Force Base prison camp.

The full U.S. Parole Commission on Thursday affirmed an earlier decision that Mitchell not be released until next Jan. 19. The commission also refused to change the Dec. 20 release date of former Nixon chief of staff H.R. Haldeman.

No reason was made public. The two men — among the highest ranking members of Richard Nixon's ill-fated administration — are the last Watergate figures still in prison.

Haldeman, who is imprisoned at Lompoc, Calif., and Mitchell became eligible for parole last June when they completed the minimum 12 months of their sentence.

The dates set by the parole panel's national commissioners mean that Mitchell will have served 19 months — counting five months on the outside for major surgery — and Haldeman will have served 18 months.

"John Mitchell, at age 65 and still recovering from two major operations, must now serve the longest prison term of any of the Watergate co-defendants — seven months longer than the minimum one-year sentence imposed on him by Judge (John) Sirica," said a statement issued by Mitchell lawyer Jerris Leonard.

Sirica initially sentenced Mitchell, Haldeman and former Nixon domestic counselor John D. Ehrlichman to terms of 2½-to-8 years for conspiracy to obstruct justice, obstruction of justice and lying under oath. He then reduced all three terms to 1-to-4 years.

Ehrlichman was released in April after serving 18 months.

Leonard said he will claim in his habeas corpus action that the commission misapplied its own guidelines that call for 12-16 months imprisonment for a crime such as obstruction of justice.

He will also argue that the commission disallowed Mitchell the five months he was free from prison for surgery to repair a weakened artery in his abdomen and to geplace histdg dh4ritic rught hip.

And finally, Leonard said, he will claim that one of the commissioners was biased against his client.

"The bureau of prisons, the commission's own hearing examiners and (former) Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski all unanimously have supported Mr. Mitchell's release," Leonard said. "Even attorney General (Griffin) Bell has declared publicly that Mr. Mitchell has already suffered enough."

Haldeman's lawyer, Frank Strickler, said only "We are extremely disappointed."

The longest sentence served by any of the 25 men sent to prison in the Watergate affair was that of burglary mastermind G. Gordon Liddy, who was imprisoned 52½ months for burglary, wiretapping, conspiracy and contempt of court.

Automation Fear Is Felt

NEW YORK (AP) — About 7,500 ground employees of Pan American World Airways, worried that automation was threatening their jobs, have returned to work after a brief walkout.

"Terms of the agreement were not announced, pending ratification by the union membership," a Pan Am official said in announcing the end of the strike. Employees were back at work 15 hours after the strike started.

The employees, members of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, include personnel who handle reservations, sales, passenger services, cargo, medical facilities and supplies.

Union spokesman Ronnie Belpanno said issues in the dispute were job security in connection with automation, pension improvements and cost of living protection.

The walkout caused delays of up to three hours on some international flights Thursday, but a Pan Am spokesman said most of the carrier's 235 daily overseas flights were in the evening or at night and departed on time or close to schedule.

Also involved were 900 maintenance employees, mechanics, laborers and others who walked out at Cape Kennedy as members of the Transport Workers Union honored Teamster picket lines. The action did not interfere with Thursday night's scheduled launch of a Trident missile.

U.S. Companies Anxious For Role In China Oil Reserves

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four U.S. oil companies and Chinese officials are attempting to negotiate agreements for sharing development of China's vast oil reserves, the State Department confirmed today.

Pennzoil, Exxon, Union Oil and Phillips Petroleum are talking with the Chinese, who have both offshore and onshore reserves and are in the midst of an oil development boom.

While it is not known whether the arrangements would bring Chinese oil to the United States, a U.S. oil expert said any significant increase in world production could make more oil available to this country.

"I will affirm the four oil companies have been for some time involved in business arrangements with the Chinese government," said John F. Cannon, a State Department public affairs adviser.

"The nature of those arrangements are private and they do not involve the United States government. They involve oil exploration in various areas, but we're not in a position to characterize their (the companies') arrangements with China or the Chinese government's arrangements with them."

Although Cannon described the talks as "company-to-government," the negotiations have the backdrop of a major public and private effort here to increase trade with China.

U.S.-China trade, which totaled $375 million last year, will probably top $700 million this year, Commerce Secretary Juanita M. Kreps said in June.

According to the Interior Department, China's crude petroleum production increased by 13 percent from 1975 to 1976, from 571.6 million barrels to 645.9 million barrels. A barrel holds 42 gallons.

While reserves of the world's most populated nation are unknown — geologists say they're significant — China already has reached the point where it's exporting 47.1 million tons of crude oil to Japan over a fiveyear period. By 1985, China's share of the Japanese oil import market is expected to have risen from 2.6 percent to 4.9 percent.

In a telephone interview with the Washington Post, J. Hugh Liedtke, Pennzoil chairman and chief executive officer, said he believes "the decision has been made in Peking and at the highest political level" to supplement China's own exploration efforts by "more than one" outside company.

"My guess is that this has an extremely high priority, and the pressure is on to get something done," he commented.

Liedtke said within 30 days, Pennzoil will send China a proposal for exploration of a major offshore basin, probably in the South China Sea.

He said the contract with the Chinese could focus on technical assistance, but added it could contain a profit-sharing arrangement and the right to buy some oil with those profits. Foreign oil producers have a similar arrangement with Brazil, he said.

Weigh Qualifications Of New Pope

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Now that the papal chair is empty, Christians around the world pondered the kind of man that's needed to fill it at this particular stage in history. What qualities now are considered especially important?

One word that comes up repeatedly in such disccusion is "confidence" — an outlook of zest and hopefulness about faith in a time when it's often viewed as troubled and threatened.

"Besides being someone who embodies faith, a certain joy in it and confidence about it now seems particularly important," says the Rev. Joseph O'Hare, editor of the national Catholic weekly, America.

Such assurance, he adds, "is an appealing kind of witness in itself" and is vital symbolic element.

That way in which the papacy symbolizes and projects the spirit of Christianity is a basic, though intangible, feature of the office.

While the pope holds many jurisdictional titles — Bishop of Rome, Supreme Pontiff of the Universal Church, Patriarch of the West, Sovereign of the State of Vatican City — a subtle, but primary role is the image he reflects of Christian faith.

That quality, whether or not of trust, buoyance, warmth and openness to others — is regarded as important to Protestants as well as Roman Catholic in the present ecumenical climate of interchurch cooperation.

Also the papacy, both in its historical and current significance, is the chief human representative of Christianity on the world scene.

"The first, and most difficult task for the new pope is to recapture the credibility of popes," says the Rev. Andrew Greeley of Chicago, a noted researcher on grass-roots Catholic opinion.

"It's a matter of leadership, and confidence is supremely important to it."

Numerous church analysts have pointed out that Pope Paul VI, before his death last Sunday, increasingly had reflected anguish, frustration and depression about church conditions.

Surveys showed wide dissent from some of his positions, particularly in his maintaining the ban against contraception.

In contrast, Paul's predecessor, the late John XXIII, radiated a confidence and enthusiasm about life, people and the church, spurning what he called the "prophets of doom" and injecting an upbeat mood through Christianity as a whole.

That kind of "winning image" is what's needed at present, a teacher and center of faith in a "pastoral sense", says O'Hare, rather than just a "head of a bureaucratic machine administering law and order in the ranks."

Women Priests Voted In Lambeth Conference

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer

CANTERBURY, England (AP) — The U.S. Episcopal Church could have a woman bishop within 10 years, a woman priest predicted after the Anglican Communion's decennial Lambeth Conference voted overwhelmingly to approve the ordination of women priests by the four national churches that are already doing it.

"This means we could see a woman bishop within 10 years, perhaps first in Washington, D.C., or in New York," said the Venerable Martha Blacklock, 38, who is Episcopal archdeacon of Newark, N.J.

But the Rev. Elizabeth Wiezner of Washington, D.C., who is on the staff of the National Cathedral, said she did't think there would be a woman bishop in the U.S. church "for quite a long while."

"There has been too much division, and a period of healing and reconciliation is now needed," she said.

The conference of Anglican bishops from around the world, held every 10 years to discuss the work of their churches, voted 316-17 with 17 abstentions to accept the ordinations in the United States, Canada, New Zealand and Hong Kong.

"The vote was the right one," said Bishop John Coburn of Massachusetts, who has ordained three women priests. "I was somewhat surprised at such an overwhelming majority. I believe it will further the cause of women's ordination and deepen the sense of unity in the life of the church."

But the conference in a complementary resolution cautioned that any decision to consecrate a woman bishop "should have overwhelming support in that member church...lest the bishops' office should become a cause of disunity instead of a focus of unity."

The primary resolution said that half of the Anglican Communion's 25 provinces either have ordained women or decided there are no fundamental or theological objections to their ordination. It also pointed out that Anglican churches are autonomous and can make their own decision on the admission of women to holy orders.

The resolution asked Anglican churches that do not ordain women to respect those that do. It said diversity was part of the Anglican heritage, and a dialogue on Christian unity should be continued with churches that oppose the practice.

Anglican churches have 64 million members in 165 countries, and about 150 women priests have been ordained.

Pledge Work To Orthodox Unity

HOUSTON (AP) — The general assembly of the Antiochian Orthodox Christian Archdiocese of North America has declared its "firm commitment to work toward the day" of Eastern Orthodox unity in America.

The 250,000-member Antiochian church, headed by Metropolitan Philip Saliba, is a branch of Eastern Orthodoxy which has about 6 million adherents in a dozen nationality branches in this country.

The assembly also urged President Carter to boost his defense of human rights to include the Eastern Orthodox Patriarch of Constantinople (modern Istanbul), the spiritual leader of all Eastern Orthodoxy reportedly subjected to various Turkish pressures recently.

Judges Include 13 Bookstores

DENVER (AP) — In an unusual switch, religious bookstores themselves —13 of them — served as judges along with book reviewers in picking winners of Gold Medallion Awards of the Evangelical Christian Publishers Association.

The awards, presented in five designated categories, went for inspiration to "Where is God When it Hurts?" by Philip Yancy (Zondervan); for biography to "A Severe Mercy" by Sheldon Vanauken (Harper and Row); for Bible study-theology to "Eerdmans' Handbook to the History of Christianty" edited by Tim Dowley (Erdmans); for fiction to "I Came to Love You Late" by Joyce Landorf (Fleming H. Revell Co.), and for juveniles to "Jesus, Friend of Children" (David C. Cook Co.).

Parish Council Role Said Poor

CHICAGO (AP) — A study finds that Roman Catholic diocesan advisory councils and priests' senates have compiled a "dismal record" in helping to guide policy, with less than 10 percent of them making effective decisions on a regular basis.

The report, compiled through a religious organization study funded by the National Science Foundation, says the consultative bodies have become "mechanisms of cooperation through which the hierarchy attempts to share responsibility for power rather than power itself."

'Watchdog' On Communication

NEW YORK (AP) — Religious, consumer and other nonprofit groups have formed a new watchdog organization, the Telecommunications Consumer Coalition, to keep an eye on ffederal regulations of telephone, television, radio and cable TV operations.

The Rev. Dr. Everett C. Parker of the United Church of Christ, chairman of the new organization, says that heretofore there was no single information source or agency where consumers could find out "about the complex issues and policies that affect our ability to send and receive messages," and the new group will fill that need.

The young adult choir of Sycamore Hills Baptist Church will celebrate its first anniversary at 3 p.m. Sunday.

The public is invited.

Bostonian May Have Named It

BANGALORE, India (UPI) — Unlike most large cities in India, Bangalore has no centuries-old tradition and not even a definite reason for its name, which means "town of boiled beans."

With nearly two million people, Bangalore is a planned city, recently developed, with well-maintained buildings and a race course that draws fans from throughout India during the race season.

The best guess for the name is simply that once upon a time some king or chieftain was excessivly fond of boiled beans.

Todd hunted with Robin Hood, and Kristen read CINDERELLA while barrels of rain pelted our windows. Mary prepared our chicken dinner in a deep-fryer which frequently became inaudible as thunder rolled and crashed outside. Light flickered brightly on my newspaper, and the radio crackled as electrical discharges split the sky.

Then, somewhere, a tongue of lightning found its mark. The radio became mute, and my newspaper vanished in darkness. The Merry Men and "Gus-Gus" foundered in the dark, and our supper cooled, half-cooked.

Downed lines! A real problem—whether they are the lines that connect the power station and home, or the lines between God and man.

Through the Church and the Bible, our prayer and worship make God's love for us a two-way line. Come to church this Sunday. Let God say, "Power restored!"

Potential Savings Vary Widely In Electricity Use For Summer

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Electricity bills are rising along with the thermometer, but the midsummer heat doesn't have to leave you either wilted or broke.

According to the Edison Electric Institute, the average annual electric bill for the 12 months ended April 30 was $340.86. Average annual electricity usage was 8,785 hours and the average price per kilowatt hour was 3.88 cents.

Individual costs — and potential savings — vary widely, of course, but certain basics apply no matter where you live or what you do.

Look at your cooling system, for example. According to the electric institute, the average room air conditioner, run for 1,000 hours per year, uses 860 kilowatt hours of electricity. (Comparable averages for central air conditioning systems are unavailable.)

Depending on your location, you may be able to cut down your use of air conditioning. Concentrate family activities in one place whenever possible and keep other areas closed off.

Turn up the thermostat. According to the American Society of Heating, Refrigeration and Air Conditioning Engineers, you can cut your air conditioning bill by 4 percent for every one degree you raise the thermostat setting.

Keep location in mind when installing air conditioning. Direct sunlight falling on a room unit increases its work load. If you have a choice, install the units on the north or shady side of the house. Compressor units of central air conditioning systems also should be located away from the sun and should be kept free of plant growth.

Use a fan when possible. The average window fan uses 200 watts; the air conditioner uses 860. You'll save 660 watts for every hour you use the fan instead of the air conditioner.

Install a whole-house fan in the ceiling of your living area or outside wall of the attic. The fan will draw air through the house from open windows. The movement of the air will keep you cooler. (Turn the air conditioner off when you turn the fan on; otherwise you'll simply draw cold air up and out through the attic.)

No matter what type of cooling system you use, there is no point in making it work harder than it has to. Shade windows from the direct sun to keep temperatures low naturally. The National Bureau of Standards says tests show that blinds and draperies can reduce heat gain through windows by up to 50 percent.

Light colored paints and roofing materials cut the amount of heat absorbed by the home. The Bureau of Standards says a dark-colored exterior surface gets as much as 60 degrees Fahrenheit hotter than the air temperature in direct sunlight. The same surface painted white would be only 20 degrees hotter than the air.

The best way to save, of course, is by improving the insulation of your home. Many people mistakenly think of insulation as a cold-weather conservation device. In fact, it works two ways. The same insulation that keeps the heat inside and the cold outside during the winter does the opposite during the summer summer.

EPA Scientists To Assist In Testing N.C. Poison Spillage

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Two scientists from the Environmental Protection Agency in Athens, Ga., were expected to arrive here today to assist the state in testing for toxic chemical wastes spewed along North Carolina roadsides.

State chemists have tested some 70 samples from about 15 spill sites to determine how many contained toxic polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) and how heavy the PCB concentration was.

Working in two eight-hour shifts, they also developed chemical "fingerprints" for use in court against anyone charged with dumping the chemicals.

In the fingerprint process, the composition of the spill samples can be matched with samples from trucks suspected in the dumpings.

Chemists with the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development confirmed four spills along roads totaling 70 miles in length contained PCB — a cancer agent that never breaks down once it begins to accumulate in human or animal fat tissue.

PCB tests on samples from the remaining sites, which cover about 130 miles of roads, were expected to be completed tonight.

State Attorney General Rufus Edmisten said Thursday investigators were developing leads he expects to result in the arrest of persons responsible for the dumping of PCBs.

He said four agents of the State Bureau of Investigation have been assigned to the case and an investigator for the Environmental Protection Division of his office is coordinating the activities of several state agencies involved in the case.

Edmisten urged the public to report any information that might help in the investigation, promising to "throw the book" at the persons responsible.

Citizens with information about the spills were asked to call the SBI's 24-hour line at 779-1400. A toll-free number also is available, 1-800-662-7610.

Investigators were seeking any information pertaining to tanker trucks seen traveling during the nights of Aug. 1, 2, 3 and 7 in 16 counties. They are Alamance, Chatham, Lee, Harnett, Johnston, Wilson, Edgecombe, Hoke, Nash, Franklin, Halifax, Warren, Vance, Granville, Person and Wake counties.

"We're treating this is a criminal act," he said. "We're doing crime scene searches and we have alerted all police departments, all sheriff's departent to be on the lookout."

The attorney general said there are seven state laws that likely were violated by those who dumped PCBs along the highways.

PCBs, used in the manufacture and repair of electrical transformers at a number of plants in the state, are known to cause cancer in laboratory animals. They are considered to be especially dangerous because they accumulate in the food chain, building up in the fatty tissues of humans.

Federal Money Allocated N.C.

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt announced Thursday that $250,000 in federal funds has been allocated for child development programs in the Appalachian counties of the state to provide transportation for the children to the centers.Hunt said the funds will provide transportation for about 50 percent of the 1,943 children in 24 counties in preschool, day care and child development programs.

"It's good. It's a beginning," said Sherri Metzger, child development program director for the four-country Land-of-Sky Regional Council.

But she said program leaders still do not know what their funding situations are since Hunt ordered a cutback in Title XX funds to the Appalachian Regional Commission counties in Western North Carolina.

Mrs. Metzger, who resigned her job as regional director for the program effective Aug. 31 in protest of the funding cutback, said a similar allocation would be needed every three months to keep the program going in the western counties.Hunt's office acknowledged that programs and staff in the 83 centers have been cut back to meet the new budget requirements.

"There was not enough money to continue the transportation service for the children to the centers," said Stephanie Bass, Hunt's deputy press secretary.

She said the budget for child development has been set at $170 per child per month and "that did not allow enough money to continue the transportation service."

The cutback came when Hunt implemented the pilot ARC project in 29 counties throughout the state.

Ms. Bass said the $250,000 allocation will come from funds allocated to child development centers in other parts of the state during the past quarter which didn't spend the money because they were not prepared for the program.

County governments in some instances are attempting to budget funds to supplement the state and federal funds coming in for child development programs.

Council Likes Rizzo In Office

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mayor Frank Rizzo has gotten a boost from City Council in his campaign to stay just where he is — in the mayor's office.

After stormy debate and threatened fisticuffs by two members, the council voted 12-4 Thursday to place on the Nov. 7 ballot a proposal amending the city's ban against a mayor seeking a third consecutive term. Rizzo has until Sept. 7 to sign the measure. The next mayoral election is in 1979.

Probe Sabotage Of Crop-Duster

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — State officials are working to identify a mystery chemical that was sprayed over about 100 acres of farmland near the Harnett-Cumberland county line last week after a crop-dusting plane was apparently sabotaged.

Meanwhile, the State Bureau of Investigation has been asked to investigate the incident, which resulted in $17,000 damage to the plane and heavy damage to at least 16 acres of farmland.

Officials in the state Department of Agriculture said Thursday there was no danger to public health from the chemical but added they would not know what chemical compounds may be involved until tests are competed.

John Scott, plant protection specialist with the Agriculture Department, said 16 acres were heavily damaged, with foliage burns in other fields ranging from light to medium.

The plane, owned by Farm Chemicals Inc. of Raeford, ceased spraying operations after its pilot began experiencing engine trouble and returned to its home base at Laurinburg-Maxton Airport, according to Scotland County sheriff's detectives assisting in the investigation.

Farm Chemicals was one of seven firms awarded a contract by the state Department of Agriculture to carry out a government-sponsored boll weevil eradication program in selected parts of Cumberland and several other southeastern counties.

Detective Bill Siler said the plane is believed to have been tampered with during the night of Aug. 1 while it was parked in a field near Wade. The plane sprayed the farmland the next day.

"We can't tie anything in just yet, until we receive the lab results," Siler said Thursday. "The SBI has been requested to assist and that's all I can say now."

Farm Chemicals President Alfred K. Leach said maintenance crews checking the plane after its return discovered chemicals mixed with engine oil and gasoline."I don't know of anyone who would do this, but in my opnion, it had to be someone who knew something about an airplane," Leach said.

One other crop dusting plane was left overnight in the same field but that craft apparent was untouched, officials said.

The engine in the $43,000 Cessna plane was declared a total loss. Leach said a backup plane would be used until the damaged craft is repaired.

Scott said the plant division should have some preliminary results from the samples taken from the damaged fields within a day or two. Work on the chemical analysis has been delayed because of priorities given to widespread spills of PCB reported in the central portion of state during the past week, he said.

Drivers Collide At Intersection

An estimated $4,550 property damage resulted from a 6:55 p.m. mishap yesterday at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and 14th Street, Greenville Police Department investigators reported.

Officers identified the drivers of the vehicles involved as Allen Dean Stanford of Courtney Square Apts., Bridget Marie Douglas of 337 Glenn Ct., and James Robert Birchard of Greenville.

Police, who charged Miss Douglas with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $2,500 to the Stanford car, $2,000 to the Douglas auto, and $50 to the Birchard vehicle.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned mixed today as traders made another attempt at a rally.

At noon, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up .52 at 886.00, but declines outnumbered advances by about 6-5 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. On Thursday, the Dow moved back and forth, finishing down by more than 6 points. The decline continued into today's early trading before the market began a slow turnaround.

Big Board volume came to 14.16 million shares in the first two hours of trading today against 16.77 million by noon Thursday.

Analysts have pointed to profit-taking by institutions, major buyers in last week's rally, as one reason behind the market's recent stop-and-go activity. In addition, worries over oil prices and over future Federal Reserve monetary policies — despite a weekly money supply report that cheered analysts somewhat — also have contributed to the market's uncertainty.

Sony led the NYSE most-active list and was unchanged at 8; a 333,000-share block traded at that price. National Can rose ½ to 19⅞. Sears Roebuck rose ⅜ to 24⅝. Tire makers' issues were lower, with Firestone off ⅛ at 12⅝ and Goodyear down ¼ at 17⅓. On the American Stock Exchange, an activelytraded Resorts International class A rose 1 to 89½.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .01 to 58.35; the Amex market value index was up .42 at 160.67.

Rhode Island Has 'Longest Mile'

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — That longest mile? It may be in the smallest state, Rhode Island.

The state's only measured mile, located on Interstate 95, turned out to be 5,775 feet when transportation officials, spurred by motorist complaints, took out their calibrators Tuesday.

As elementary school students learn, a mile should be 5,280 feet.

"We're a small state with big miles," joked transportation department spokesman Paul Kelly. "Everybody's just out of step with the measured mile."

More seriously, he said that when a "measured mile" ign was knocked down a few months ago, maintenance workers replaced it by relying on their truck's odometer.

"It wasn't really a very scientific way of doing things," admitted Kelly.

Dodgers Rip Giants By 12-2

LOS ANGELES (AP) — As young Bob Welch prepared to walk to the mound Thursday night at Dodger Stadium, one of his teammates suggested that Los Angeles might break out of its slump, that the Dodgers might even score 10 runs.

"I couldn't believe it," said Welch, "and to think the guy was wrong but in the right way."

The Dodgers thundered 16 hits off San Francisco ace Vida Blue and two successors for a rousing 12-2 victory that left Los Angeles and the Giants with identical 67-48 records in the National League West.

While the Dodgers and San Francisco deadlocked in the frantic race for first place, the Cincinnati Reds were clobbered 15-3 by the San Diego Padres, but remained just one-half game off the pace. However, they are now in third place rather than second.

In the only other NL game, the Philadelphia Phillies downed the Pittsburgh Pirates 3-1 and upped their lead in the NL East to 3½ games over the Chicago Cubs.

Reggie Smith led the Dodgers' biggest attack in nearly two months with a home run and three singles to account for five runs. Ron Cey slugged his 14th homer and Steve Garvey had a bases-loaded triple, a double and a single. The victory was Los Angeles' sixth in a row.

Blue, 16-5, was knocked out in the fourth inning as his 10game winning streak came to a resounding halt.

Welch, now 4-0, hurled his second straight victory over San Francisco. He launched the Dodgers on their latest winning streak with a 2-0 shutout of the Giants last Saturday.

Jack Clark slugged a two-out homer in the top of the first for San Francisco, his 19th of the year and the first off Welch since he came to the big leagues nearly two months ago.

But the Dodgers came right back against Blue with a threerun first, two on Smith's mammoth home run.

Padres 15, Reds 3

Gene Tenace drove in five runs with a three-run homer and a two-run double and Randy Jones evened his record at 10-10 as the Padres snapped a five-game losing streak. Tenace's sixth-inning homer made the score 8-3 and came off loser Mike LaCoss. It was his 13th home run of the season and the Padres' first since July 30. The Padres then sent 12 men to the plate in the seventh inning and scored six more runs on seven hits off Dave Tomlin and Tom Hume.

Phillies 3, Pirates 1

Dick Ruthven pitched a fivehitter for his fifth consecutive victory, tripled home the tying run in the third inning and scored the winner on Larry Bowa's double. Since coming to the Phillies on June 15 from Atlanta, Ruthven has posted an 82 record to boost his overall mark to 10-8. One of the Pirates' hits was Dave Parker's 18th home run of the season.

Four All-Americans Among ECU Track Signees Announced Today

Anthony Fields, the nation's fastest schoolboy in the 100-yard dash last spring, is among four all-Americas on a list of eight scholarship signees announced by East Carolina University track coach Bill Carson today.

Carson announced earlier this week that he had withdrawn his name from consideration at N.C. State and would remain as track coach at East Carolina.

Fields led the country's high school sprinters to the tape with a 9.3-second clocking for 100 yards, added a 21.1-second effort for 220 yards, which ranked fourth in America, and was honored by the "Washington Post" as the Metro Washington male track and field athlete of the year.

Another high school all-America, hurdler Antoine Holloman of Virginia Beach, Va., along with Daryl McCoy and Bill Miller, both all-Americas at Hagerstown (Md.) Junior College complete the all-star group.

Versatile springer Warren Days of Chinquapin, state high school 440-yard champion Carlton Bell of Tarboro, high jumper Russell Parker of Windsor, and hurdler Valentino Robinson of Richmond, Va., complete the list as announced.

"This is an outstanding group of young men who will add a lot to our program right away," Carson said. "But I'm particularly excited about their potential for the years ahead."

Fields, a Washington native and product of H.D. Woodson High, was the outstanding performer in the 1978 city Interhigh meet, where he set the Matro area record for the 100, breaking the 9.4-second effort posted in 1970. His 21.1 equalled the area record set in 1958.

"Anthony is the best short sprinter we have ever signed," Carson continued, "but at the same time he has the best range of any first year man, that is, from the 60 indoors through the 100 and 200-meters outdoors, right up to the 400-meters."

Fields had been a national leader as a junior as well, running with America's fastest schoolboy mile relay.

Holloman ranked second in the country among prepsters in the 330-yard intermediate hurdles at 36.8 seconds and as a senior won the Virginia indoor and outdoor high hurdles crowns and outdoor intermediate title while running for Princess Anne High.

McCoy, a 6.1-second performer in the 60-yard dash and an outstanding relay member, is from Roanoke, Va., while Miller, a standout miler, is from Pasadena, Md.

Days, a product of East Duplin High, will likely run the 200-meters in college, but his talents include the 100, hurdles and long jump.

Bell not only won the state 440 crown for Tarboro High last spring, but also showed good ability in the high jump and hurdles.

Parker took third in the state meet in the high jump at 6-feet, 10-inches, a height he cleared five times last spring in competition for Bertie High. He also has experience in the triple jump.

Robinson was second to Holloman in Virginia's indoor hurdles, and third outdoors while running for Thomas Jefferson High. He tied the national high school record of 7.1 seconds for the indoor high hurdles. He is the Eastern representative in the National Junior Olympic meet in Lincoln, Neb., having qualified with a 13.6-second win in a Philadelphia meet.

Runs Are Scheduled

The Coastal Carolina Track Club has set two runs for this Saturday.

Runners who wish to run six or more miles are asked to meet at North Pitt High School at 6 a.m. Saturday. Those wishing to run shorter distances are asked to meet at the East Carolina University track at 8 a.m.

Guidry Boosts Mark To 16-2

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

"I don't know where you'd find a better arm. If you went looking for the best arm you could find, that's the one you'd settle for."

That was Manager Bob Lemon speaking about Ron Guidry, the New York Yankees' ace left-hander. And Lemon should know what he was talking about.

Not only is he a Hall of Fame pitcher, but Lemon tried to acquire Guidry last year when he managed the Chicago White Sox.

Lemon was the Yankees' pitching coach two years ago when Guidry was a seldomused rookie.

"I knew he was a great prospect," Lemon said Thursday night after Guidry boosted his record to 16-2 with a three-hit 90 shutout over the Milwaukee Brewers. "When you saw that arm, you had to fall in love with it."

In other American League games, the Boston Red Sox edged the Cleveland 6-5 in 13 innings, the Baltimore Orioles nipped the Kansas City Royals 3-2, the California Angels trounced the Oakland A's 16-5 and the Toronto Blue Jays defeated the White Sox 7-3.

Guidry, who struck out nine Brewers and took over the AL lead with 182, was surprised at his sharp three-hitter.

Red Sox 6, Indians 5

Rick Burleson's single capped a two-run rally in the bottom of the 13th inning. Burleson's smash caromed off shortstop Tom Veryzer's glove and Gary Hancock, running for George Scott, who had doubled, raced home. The Red Sox tied the game earlier in the inning when the leadoff batter, Butch Hobson, was safe when first baseman Andre Thornton dropped his pop fly. The Red Sox trailed 4-1, but Fred Lynn hit a two-run homer in the sixth inning and Jim Rice tripled home the tying run in the seventh.

Orioles 3, Royals 2

Lee May, hitless in his last 10 trips, rapped a tie-breaking two-out single in the eighth inning after Ken Singleton tied the score with a two-run homer in the sixth. Doug Bird was charged with the loss even though he was removed before any runners reached base in the eighth.

Angels 16, A's 5

Lyman Bostock drove in four runs, including a bases-loaded triple, Don Baylor collected two doubles and a single and drove in three runs and Joe Rudi homered to pace an 18-hit California attack. Winning pitcher Frank Tanana, 15-7, gave up 11 hits and all five Oakland runs — including a three-run homer to Willie Horton — before leaving after seven innings.

Blue Jays 7, White Sox 3

Rico Carty's two-run homer snapped a tie in the seventh inning and Jerry Garvin snapped a three-month, 10-game losing streak, although he needed help from Victor Cruz in the eighth. Carty's homer, his 19th, gave him 66 RBI for the season, a record for the 2-year-old Blue Jays. Doug Ault and Ron Fairly had 64 last year.

Barber Still Likes Challenge

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — At the age of 47, and a millionaire in 20 years on the pro golf tour, Miller Barber still enjoys the challenge, refusing to give in to the PGA's "Young Turks."

"I still have the desire to play," Barber said Thursday after firing a 5-under-par 66 to share the lead with Ben Crenshaw in the opening round of the $225,000 Pleasant Valley Classic.

"I still like to beat the young guys," he added. "I also feel I know more about the game than ever. I'll hang it up only when I lose that competitive desire."

Barber, who has earned more than $1.4 million since joining the pro tour in 1959, carded an eagle and four birdies with only one bogey while sporting tape at the base of his left finger. He went out in 5-under 31 and came back in par 35.

"I missed three tournaments, including the PGA last weekend, after cutting my hand while trimming some bushes at home in Sherman, Texas." Barber said. "It doesn't bother me much now, but that's a dangerous place, Sherman. One time I went home and broke some ribs. Another time I had an attack of asthma.

"I played extremely well, for me," said Barber, who won the Phoenix Open earlier this year for his 11th tour victory. "You've got to drive the ball well on this course and that's the strong part of my game.

"I'm hitting the ball as far as I ever have. At least, I don't think I'm getting any shorter. I'm not getting any longer, either."

Crenshaw, 26, made his pro debut on a sponsor's invitation here in 1973. He has gone on to win more than $675,000, but he's bidding for his first 1977 victory.

"It was a nice and comfortable round," Crenshaw said after his 32-34—66 in the morning. "I made only one mistake, hitting three bad shots on the 16th, so it was a good solid round."

Barber and Crenshaw held a one-stroke lead over Mark Hayes and defending champion Ray Floyd heading into the second round today of the 72-hole tournament, worth $45,000 to the winner.

Floyd, who called the course "shoddy" after the pro-am event Wednesday, said "playing conditions were better." He added with a grin: "I think I've found a course I can play."

Bunched at 68, two strokes off the pace, were Bruce Lietzke, Bill Rogers, Bob Shearer and Rex Caldwell. Another stroke back were Andy Bean, the tour's 1977 leading money winner with $253,558, John Lister, Don Biez, Alan Tapie, George Burns, Fred Marti, Craig Stadler and Tim Simpson.

John Mahaffey, the newly crowned PGA champion, had a 71 as 52 players scored par or better in the first round.

Baugh Hopes 1st Win Near

MANHASSET, N.Y. (AP) — Laura Baugh, who has never been a winner since joining the ladies golf tour six years ago, is getting sick and tired of collecting weekly checks of only $900 to $1,200 for her efforts.

The pretty 23-year-old blonde ranks only 29th on this year's money list with $20,899 after 18 tournaments. Following her 3under-par 70 Thursday in the $100,000 classic at the North Hills Country Club, Baugh feels things will change.

Laura was three strokes behind Canadian-born Sandra Post, who carded seven birdies and only one bogey on the par 63, 6,413-yard course. Sally Little of South Africa was second in the 72-hole competition with a 68, one stroke better than Kathy Postlewait.

"I haven't shot any really low rounds this year," said Baugh, who is known more for her commercial endorsements than for her play on the golf course.

"Last week in the European Open (in England), I had five straight birdies in the opening round and shot a 70 on a par-74 course. Then I came back with a 79 the next day followed by a

Redskins, Packers Open NFL Weekend

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dave Butz is certain he will be the center of attention tonight when the massive middle guard and his Washington Redskin teammates square off against the Green Bay Packers.

And for his services, the 6-foot-7, 294-pounder is demanding a no-cut contract.

"Right now we're in a stalemate," says Butz, who mans the pivotal position in the three lineman-four linebacker defense introduced by Redskins Coach Jack Pardee. "It's a waiting game, but the longer they wait, the more likely it becomes that I'll play my option out."

The Washington-Green Bay matchup is the only National Football League preseason game scheduled tonight, but 12 are scheduled Sunday and the Philadelphia Eagles meet the Houston Oilers on Monday.

With Butz anchoring the defensive line, the Skins held Minnesota to 2.9 yards per rush last weekend but lost 20-13 because of a makeshift secondary and a bumbling receiver corps.

The double-or triple-team pounding Butz draws from offensive linemen while patrolling the trenches from middle guard dictates the need for a new contract, he claims. "If they're going to be using that 3-4 defense, I'd like some kind of insurance."

Green Bay Coach Bart Starr, on the other hand, needs to find a cure for his defensive pains. The porous Packers defense surrendered 5 yards per rush in a 17-14 loss to Kansas City.

"That was disappointing ...our defense can play much better," said Starr, whose Packers are also trying to adopt the increasingly popular 3-4 defensive alignment.

Veteran linebacker Fred Carr won't have anything to do with Starr's hoped-for defensive resurgence, however. Carr left camp early in the week and Thursday was given a 5 p.m. Saturday ultimatum by Starr to rejoin the team or not play this season and not get paid.

A Carr representative said the linebacker would rejoin the club before the deadline but would not participate in practices or games.

The point of argument between the parties is Carr's insistence that surgery for removal of a cyst on his right knee would help him play nearer his capabilities. Starr claims team doctors have deemed surgery unnecessary and vetoed the operation Carr sought.

Joe Theismann is expected to be Washington's starting quarterback for the second consecutive week, but veteran Billy Kilmer — though still bothered by a leg injury — may see some action.

Pardee will give his quarterbacks a new-look receiving corps, however, for the contest in Robert F. Kennedy Stadium.

Redskins tight end Jim Mandich, acquired early this year from Miami, gained a starting nod as Pardee moved Jean Fugett — the Skins' top receiver a year ago — from tight end to wide receiver.

Fugett's 6-foot-4, frame and deceiving speed was put to similar use two seasons ago when the Amherst grad played for Dallas.

"I'm going to like it," said Fugett. "I caught more passes as a wide receiver for the Cowboys than I did inside."

Washington has a 17-10 lead in its series against Green Bay, including victories in the past five meetings.

Saturday, Dallas is at Denver in a rematch of Super Bowl XII; Detroit visits Cincinnati; St. Louis is at Chicago; Minnesota is at Kansas City; Cleveland travels to Buffalo; New England plays at Oakland; Atlanta meets the Steelers in Pittsburgh; Los Angeles hosts San Diego; Baltimore is at Tampa Bay; Miami plays New Orleans at the Superdome; Seattle is at San Francisco and the New York Jets play the New York Giants.

The contests are a matter of life and death to the extra players on the rosters of virtually every team. Squad sizes must be reduced to 60 Tuesday.

The Cleveland-Buffalo game may decide which rookie quarterback earns the No. 2 spot to Brian Sipe. Coach Sam Rutigliano plans to split the secondhalf playing time between Johnny Evans and Mark Miller, and "What Evans does Saturday could determine a lot," said the first-year Browns coach.

The Bengals will seek their eighth consecutive exhibition triumph over Detroit when the teams clash at Riverfront Stadium.

Dallas definitely will be without second-year tackle Jim Eidson, rookie defensive back Kenny Randle and second-year running back Larry Brinson, all of whom are injured. Three others are doubtful.

The Cowboys will play a Denver team that is happy with its "Orange Crush" nickname but isn't at all thrilled about its new orange pants. The team was slated to wear its new road uniforms — orange pants and white shirts — against Dallas, but "nobody likes them," said one of the ball boys at the Broncos' training camp.

"The Oilers will be without ace punt returner Billy "White Shoes" Johnson again when they face the Eagles. Johnson continues his holdout, refusing to return to the club until this, the final year of his contract, is renegotiated.

Ronnie Coleman, the Oilers' leading rusher the last two seasons, says he expects to play out the option year of his contract because the offer extended before training camp "was ridiculous. It was embarrassing to me."

Greenville Golf and Country Club

A free clinic for junior members is being planned for Wednesday at the Greenville Golf and Country Club. Ages 9-15 will meet from 9 to 10:30 a.m., while ages 5-8 will meet from 2 to 3:30 p.m.

A second set of clinics will be held next Friday. Ages 9-15 will meet from 2 to 3 p.m., and ages 5-8 will meet from 4:30 to 6 p.m. The clinics are open to junior members of the club, both boys and girls.

Several Greenville golfers had their best rounds recently. Darnell Jones fired a 91, while Don White Jr. carded a 68. David Nichols had a 77.

A Dates and Mates nine-hole tournament will be held next Thursday.

The club's annual Pro-Junior Tournament will be held on August 24. Several area professionals will team with junior members from their clubs.

The annual W. S. Moye Memorial Golf Tournament will be held September 2, 3 and 4.

Ayden Golf and Country Club

The team of Ashley Moseley and Brooks Barwick captured first place in the championship flight of the Ayden Golf and Country Club's Member-Guest tournament. They shot a 135.

Paul Andrews and Ron Carpenter won the first flight with a 142, while Jamie Jones and Malcolm Rowe took the second flight by shooting a 143. Al Piland and Carl Kratzer won the third flight with a 146, while Shelton Averette and Harvey Brothers were the fourth flight winners with a 148.

Walter Claybrook and Cobbie Deans won the fifth flight with a 153. John Ham and Joe Gorlesky took low net honors in the tournament with a 114.

Ashley Moseley aced the fourth hole in the tournament with a seven iron.

Dale Anderson also recorded a hole-in-one on the ninth hole, using a five-wood.

Phil Replogele had his best nine-hole score, a 41, while Nancy Dudley recorded her best nine, a 50.

Jackie Replogele won the recent Ladies Day event, Beat the Pro.

Mike Martin Sr. eagled the 13th hole, holing out a five-iron.

Farmville Golf and Country Club

The team of Milton and Ann Barnett, Wilson Tugwell and Lila Joyner captured a Superball Tournament held Wednesday at Farmville Golf and Country Club.

Second place went to Ed and Sylvia Holsenback and Wilbur and Ruby Counterman. Third were Neal and Bobbie Walston and Roxie and Al Smith.

A Two-Man Superball Tournament will be held Saturday at the club. It will be an 18-hole affair.

Brook Valley Golf and Country Club

Brook Valley Golf and Country Club's annual Member-Member Tournament is coming up. The deadline for signing up has been extended to Wednesday, at 6 p.m.

Any member who wishes to play in the tournament and does not have a partner is urged to call the pro shop, and the club will attempt to pair him with another member.

A Jack and Jill event is scheduled for Wednesday. Those wishing to play may sign up on the bulletin board. A covered dish supper will follow.

Baugh Hopes...

74 and then a huge 81.

"In that 81 I had a bogey, bogey, par and double-bogey for a start and that brought me back to the $900-to$-1,200 class."

The final score of 302 meant a five-way tie for 22nd place and a prize of $976.

"Im trying too many things," explained the 5-foot-5, 115 pounder. "My swing is in pieces. Last week I had those five straight birdies and today I almost matched that. I had four out of five to open on the back nine. That indicates that I'm back in the groove."

Since so much was expected of Baugh, who has been runnerup on six different occasions through the years on the pro circuit, is it possible that she is putting herself under pressure to win?

"There was a time when I did that," said Baught. "Now I've gotten away from that and my goal is to be in the top 10.

"It really bothers me that I'm not doing better. I like to get goose bumps and get excited."

Was Baugh letting her commercials interfer with golf?

"Not really," she said, "but because I have been playing poorly, I scheduled a couple of endorsements. However, now that I am in my sixth year, I'm getting comfortable on the tour.

"I'm starting to know what I can do as far as mixing both golf and the commercials. I'm giving myself more time to set goals — and hopefully I'll achieve them."

Nancy Lopez, the 21-year-old sensation who already has won eight titles this year and who has set a tour money-record with $150,097, found herself 12 stokes behind Post.

Lopez, who had one triple bogey, one double bogey and three bogies, said: "I'm not giving up. It's easy to shoot a 79. All the other girls have to do is ask me. I'll tell them how easy it was."

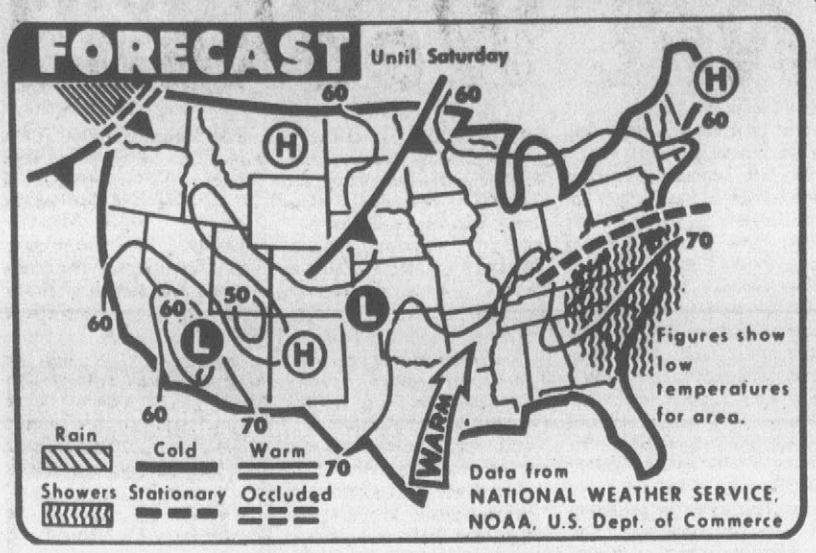
How's The Weather?



WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are expected for the period Friday until Saturday morning from Georgia to the mid-Atlantic region. Skies will be mostly sunny elsewhere. Most of the country will continue warm. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

A flash flood watch continued in effect for North Carolina's central and southwest mountains in connection with heavy thundershowers expected today and tonight.

The central and southwest mountains especially were suspectible to flash flooding mainly because of heavy thundershowers earlier in the week. Since then the ground has been saturated with moisture. Any additional heavy rainfall would quickly run off into streams and drainage basins.

Scattered thundershowers are expected throughout the state for the next couple of days in connection with a moist southwesterly flow spreading over North Carolina from the Gulf of Mexico.

The resulting cloudiness, however, will keep temperatures below normal. Highs will range from the mid 70s in the northwest mountains to the upper 80s along the south coast. Lows will be from the low 60s in the northwest mountains to mid 70s along the coast.

Under extensive cloudiness to the west highs Thursday ranged from 78 at Asheville to 92 at Wilmington.

Truancy Remains Big Concern

By NOEL YANCEY
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — When school bells ring this fall, thousands of North Carolina pupils won't bother answering the call for reasons that range from poor marks to financial problems to boredom.

State and local officials say they are sure that efforts to reduce truancy in public schools are bearing fruit, but there is scant statistical evidence to support that claim.

W. W. Peek, assistant state school superintendent, says that some school districts have shown "a definite reduction in the amount of truancy." In others, he conceded, "we may not be making as much progress as we'd like."

Peek acknowledged his optimism was "not more than an impression except we do know and I think we can document that as programs are expanded and improved, kids tend to stay in school longer."

But state officials actually have no idea how much truancy there is, because local districts don't break down absentee figures they report to the state.

In the 1976-77 school year, an average of more than 82,000 students or about 7 percent failed to attend school each day, according to Al Hill of the state schools' management information division.

That figure has remained fairly constant in recent years, Hill said.

How many of the absent students were truants? Hill said he didn't know, but truancy and the drop-out rate are generally assumed to go hand in hand.

Hill had no firm statistics for the dropout rate either, however. But he said the estimates his department has compiled show the dropout rate, too, is fairly constant, indicating that truancy seems to be resisting efforts to reduce it.

All the same, local school officials around the state report a number of special efforts aimed at reducing truancy, and some said those efforts were working.

Robert Bridges, assistant superintendent of the Wake County school system, said several steps have been taken to fight a "mild increase" in truancy in recent years.

"In the past school year, we initiated a new program for seriously disruptive children, who are frequently the truants," Bridges said. Special counselors worked with certain students whose attendance records were very bad. Bridges said the result was an "overwhelming" improvement.

Mrs. Catherine Ebert, coordinator of school social work services in the Winston-SalemForsyth County system, said 10 psychologists and 15 social workers had been assigned to seeing that children were happy in school.

"We are referring fewer and fewer children to juvenile court for truancy, because we're beginning to develop more resources within the community as well as in the school," she said.

Dr. Kenneth Newbold, newly appointed superintendent in Greensboro, says the Greensboro system's best response to truancy was an "optional school."

In the optional school, Newbold said students are given closer attention by teachers and see counselors regularly. Some attend school at night, so they can hold jobs. Newbold said lack of money was one reason many students skipped school.

Peek said most counties now have attendance counselors, but he said he believed the best way to keep kids in school is to keep school interesting.

"The thing that seems to make the most difference," Peek observed, "is more course offerings, that is to say, more relevant offerings that tend to be things the child sees as being directly related to his interest and needs."

Drug Effect

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A Mecklenburg County man was taken to the county mental health center Thursday after an outburst which his sister says occurred after he used the powerful animal tranquilizer PCP.

Jerry Benfield, 24, reportedly set fire to his house, stripped off his clothes and climbed to his roof where he threw bricks and shingles at passing motorists. Police said they talked with Benfield for two hours before coaxing him off the roof and taking him to the Mecklenburg County Mental Heath Center.

He was not charged in the incidents.

Alma Simms, Benfield's sister, said he had been smoking marijuana mixed with PCP just before the incident.

She said he set fire to three rooms in his home and burned two or three kittens to death before climbing onto the roof. The fire caused at least $5,000 in damage to the house, she said.

Mrs. Simms said the incidents were her brother's way of "reaching out for help." She said a relative had taken Benfield to the mental health center for treatment Wednesday, but he was not admitted because authorities were not convinced that he was ill.

Mental health center officials would not confirm if Benfield is a patient but said the center doesn't turn away anyone who needs help.

"Nobody has ever been refused services from this unit," said Lev Sherman, director of emergency services at the center.

Sen. Helms Assailed By Civil Liberties Union

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Calling him a "politician in search of an issue," leaders of the North Carolina Civil Liberties Union have lashed out at U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms for raising the issue of prayer in public schools.

In a joint statement, George Gardner, executive director of the NCCLU, and the Rev. W.W. Finlator, chairman of its executive committee, said Helms was attempting to use the "emotional divisive" issue for his own political benefit.

"Coming at the height of his campaign for re-election," the statement said Helms' action "bestows the image of a knight in shining armor defending God and prayer against the dark forces that surround our lives."

The Republican senator is running for re-election against state Insurance Commissioner John Ingram.

Helms offered an amendment onto an otherwise non-controversial bill to forbid federal courts to consider cases involving voluntary prayer in the public schools. Opponents of the amendment said it was clearly unconstitutional.

In a recent interview, Helms denied any political motivation in putting forth the amendment, saying "it's just something I feel strongly about."

Gardner and Finlator, who like Helms is a Baptist, said the amendment was an "attept to render null and void the ruling of the Supreme Court." The U.S. Supreme Court ruled in 1962 and again in 1963 that organized prayer in the public schools violated constitutional guarantees of separation of church and state.

The statement said the Civil Liberties Union "deplores the introduction of an issue so constitutionally questionable and emotionally divisive that it can only have the effect of polarizing the people in sterile and unprofitable debate, deflecting the energies of the public school system from its solemn assignment of educating our children."

Claim Sign Of Racism

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — President Carter seems more concerned about human rights violations abroad than racial discrimination at home, says the director of the National Conference of Black Lawyers.

"Just a few days ago President Carter had the audacity to travel to North Carolina and talk to tobacco farmers but refuse to recognize the Rev. Ben Chavis," Lennox S. Hinds of New York told reporters Thursday.

"We call the actions of the President racist," Hinds told a news conference at the opening of the organization's 10th annual gathering.

The Rev. Mr. Chavis, a black man, is in a North Carolina prison. He is one of the imprisoned blacks known as the "Wilmington 10." Some groups regard them as political prisoners. They were convicted of arson and conspiracy to assault during a 1971 racial uproar that claimed two lives.

Hinds said United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young was right when he spoke of "political prisoners" in the United States.

Hinds said President Carter worries about two Russian Jews whose trials in Soviet Russia recently made international headlines, but does little for American blacks.

The President says he won't comment on the Wilmington 10 because aspects of the case were still in court proceedings, Hinds said, "but he had a lot to say about those Russian Jews before their trials."

Hinds said the black lawyers' conference "calls on the world community to convene an international commission to investigate racism in the United States."

The three-day conference, with some 100 delegates registered, plans its own "commission" inquiries. Subjects: "Human Rights Violations in Criminal Justice," "Human Rights Violations in Economic Justice," and "Human Rights Violations in International Affairs."

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, AUGUST 12, 1978

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: There are delays and obstacles in almost everything you do during the early part of the day. By evening you have considerable energy to tackle financial matters and social ones also. Be outgoing.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You may not be able to finish all the tasks you planned early, but by late afternoon you find you can make up for lost time. Save amusements until evening.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Recreational activities are delayed so take time to make yourself more presentable and later all is fine.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Start work on a plan that will help you get ahead and try to perfect it. See what you can do to improve conditions at home. Evening fine for socializing.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You get a slow start in handling errands and shopping chores, but keep at it and finish. Not a good day to have talks with persons in business since they are in an irate mood.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You think you are low in funds, but if you make sure not to spend for unnecessary things, you soon can make your money stretch nicely.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Daytime is not good for going after personal aims, so wait until evening for such. Stop needling others, especially close ties, and be happy.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) There may be delays in getting chores done during the day but be philosophical about it. Have a good time with congenials later.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Stick to business during daytime. Entertain friends in the evening, but watch expenditures.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Handle boring matters early and then do whatever appeals to you most. Follow through with what adviser suggests.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Research new projects thoroughly before putting into operation.Be sure you really understand suggestions partner makes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You may have to spend more time than is necessary in handling obligations, but the effort will pay off handsomely. Try to please mate more and come to a better understanding.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Be considerate of those around you and gain their goodwill. An associate could be troublesome if you permit. Be firm.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will prove to be quite successful during the lifetime provided you teach early to work out problems. Permit to choose own profession.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

'Holocaust' Captures Most Of Emmy Nominations

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — In a likely prophecy of awards to come, NBC's mini-series "Holocaust" grabbed the most nominations for the 30th annual Emmy Awards, like "Roots" the year before.

"Holocaust," a nine-hour drama of Jewish heroism and suffering at the hands of the Nazis in World War II, which was aired in April, received 16 nominations.

It was the most-watched program ever for NBC and ranks behind only ABC's "Roots" as the highest-rated show of all time. "Roots," which told of the black struggle for freedom through the eyes of a single family, won nine Emmys last September.

The Emmy nominations were announced Thursday by the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences at the Pasadena Civic Auditorium, where CBS will telecast the awards presentation on Sunday, Sept. 17.

Nine nominations each went to the CBS comedy "All in the Family" and the NBC miniseries on the life of Dr. Martin Luther King, "King."

Eight nominations each went to NBC's "Saturday Night Live," CBS's "Carol Burnett Show," CBS's "M-A-S-H" and ABC's "Ben Vereen — His Roots." Vereen played Chicken George in "Roots."

Receiving seven nominations were ABC's "Family," NBC's "Our Town," ABC's "Washington: Behind Closed Doors," and NBC's "Ziegfeld: The Man and His Women."

In all, NBC received 123 nominations, ABC 92, CBS 88, PBS 32 and syndicated shows 13. The nominations are for shows broadcast between March 14, 1977, and June 30, 1978.

"Holocaust" was nominated as the outstanding limited series, with nominations for best lead actor in a limited series going to the major adversaries — Michael Moriarty as the Nazi official and Fritz Weaver as the Jewish doctor.

Rosemary Harris, who played Weaver's wife, and Meryl Streep, her Christian daughterin-law, were nominated as best lead actresses in a limited series.

Sam Wanamaker and David Warner were nominated as best supporting actors in a drama series and Tovah Feldshuh was nominated as best supporting actress. Blanche Baker was nominated as best supporting actress in a single appearance.

Gerald Green, who conceived the program and also wrote the best-selling book from the script, was nominated as best writer for a drama series. Marvin Chomsky was nominated as best director.

Here are some of the major nominations:

Best comedy series — "All in the Family," "M-A-S-H, both CBS; "Barney Miller," "Soap," "Three's Company," all ABC.

Best drama series — "Columbo," "Quincy," "The Rockford Files," all NBC; "Family," ABC; "Lou Grant," CBS.

Best limited series — "Holocaust," "King," both NBC; "Washington: Behind Closed Doors," ABC; "Anna Karenina," "I, Claudius," both PBS.

Best variety series — "Saturday Night Live," NBC; "The Carol Burnett Show," CBS; "Evening at Pops," PBS; "America 2Night," "The Muppet Show," both syndicated.

Best drama or comedy special — "A Death in Canaan," CBS; "The Gathering," "Young Joe, the Forgotten Kennedy," both ABC; "Jesus of Nazareth," "Our Town," both NBC.

Best variety special — "Bette Midler," "Doug Henning's World of Magic," "Neil Diamond," all NBC; "The George Burns One-Man Show," CBS; "The Second Barry Manilow Special," ABC.

Best lead actor in a comedy series — Alan Alda, "M-A-SH," CBS; Hal Linden, "Barney Miller,"ABC; Carroll O'Connor, "All in the Family," CBS; John Ritter, "Three's Company," ABC; Henry Winkler, "Happy Days," ABC.

Best lead actor in a drama series — Edward Asner, "Lou Grant," CBS; James Broderick, "Family," ABC; Peter Falk, "Columbo," NBC; James Garner, "Rockford Files," NBC; Jack Klugman, "Quincy," NBC; Ralph Waite, "The Waltons," CBS.

Best lead actor in a limited series — Hal Holbrook, "The Awakening Land," NBC; Michael Moriarty and Fritz Weaver, "Holocaust," NBC; Jason Robards Jr., "Washington: Behind Closed Doors," ABC; Paul Winfield, "King," NBC.

Best lead actor in a comedy or drama special — Alan Alda, "Kill Me If You Can," NBC; Fred Astaire, "A Family Upside Down," NBC; Hal Holbrook, "Our Town," NBC; Martin Sheen, "Taxi!!!," NBC; James Stacy, "Just a Little Inconvenience," NBC.

Best lead actor in a single series appearance — David Cassidy, "Police Story," NBC; Will Geer, "Love Boat," ABC; Judd Hirsch, "Rhoda," CBS; Barnard Hughes, "Lou Grant," CBS; John Rubinstein, "Family," ABC; Keenan Wynn, "Police Woman," NBC.

Best lead actress in a comedy series — Beatrice Arthur, "Maude," CBS; Cathryn Damon and Katherine Helmond, "Soap," ABC; Valerie Harper, "Rhoda," CBS; Suzanne Pleshette, "The Bob Newhart Show," CBS; Jean Stapleton, "All in the Family," CBS.

Lowell's Voice Still Vibrant

WEST BRANCH, Iowa (AP) — His hair has grayed and his step slowed, but Lowell Thomas' voice is that of a young man.

"I think it's the corn liquor I drink," the 87-year-old radio legend said Thursday. "Or maybe it's the skiing. They tell me I'm the oldest Alpine skier in the world."

Thomas came to West Branch to pay tribute to his friend, the late Herbert Hoover, on the 104th anniversary of the Iowa-born president's birth.

"He and his charming wife spent a great many weekends with us," Thomas told a crowd of about 2,500 at the Hoover gravesite. "I found he was a witty, humorous man and a great after-dinner companion. He was a great speaker, full of glorious anecdotes.

"Much of my life I've been looking for a wise man," he said. "And of all the men I knew, he was the wisest. He was also humble and witty. He'll rank as one of our more important presidents."

Forgave Cousin Before Death For His Refusal

PITTSBURGH (AP) — David Shimp, who turned away the pleas of a dying cousin for donations of life-prolonging bone marrow, was forgiven by the sick man shortly before the cousin was killed by a brain hemorrhage.

Robert McFall, a 39-year-old unmarried asbestos workers, died Thursday in Mercy Hospital, where he was being treated for aplastic anemia, a disorder that had threatened to kill him within the year.

"I feel like I could throw up right now," Shimp was quoted in the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette today. "I feel terrible about Robert dying, but he asked me for something that I couldn't give.

"I don't think I'll go to the funeral," he added. "I'll stay home and say my prayers."

McFall had asked Shimp for a bone marrow transplant that might have given him longer to live, but Shimp repeatedly turned him down. Shimp's decision was declared legal by an Allegheny County court.

Mercy Hospital spokeswoman Mary Beth Dickson said McFall might have suffered the hemorrhage even if he had undergone the transplant.

The hospital said McFall suffered a "massive intracranial hemorrhage which occurred in spite of vigorous transfusions of blood and platelets." His two brothers and sister were at his bedside.

"One of the last things he said was that he forgave his cousin and asked us to forgive him, too," said Beverly Hope, McFall's sister. "My brothers and I feel the same way as Bobby. We forgive him because we know he's an individual and has his own rights to make a decision. Since Bobby forgave him, we forgave him."

Aplastic anemia is a rare disorder in which the bone marrow does not produce enough red blood cells and platelets. The best treatment for the malady is a bone marrow transplant, according to doctors treating McFall. They estimated he would have had a 50 to 60 percent chance of survival with the operation.

Doctors said the 42-year-old Shimp was the only likely donor among McFall's relatives and volunteers tested, but the craneworker balked.

"There's no guarantee when doctors stick 100 needles into my pelvis that something won't go wrong," Shimp had said prior to his cousin's death in an interview with the Pittsburgh Press. "I'm already a middleaged man and I don't know if I can physically endure it.

"I'm not the monster many people think I am," he said.

McFall tried to force Shimp to help by filing suit. But Allegheny County Judge John Flaherty ruled against McFall.

"In our law, there's no duty to rescue someone or save someone's life. Our society is based on the right and sanctity of the individual," Flaherty said.

Doctors discovered McFall's illness when he was admitted to the hospital for a nosebleed in June.

"I'm proud of my brother and the way he died — with a lot of dignity," Mrs. Hope said. "He had an indomitable spirit to live right up to the end. He was at peace with himself and he was very happy."

Seek Psychological Aid for 'Binge' Eater

We have a terrible problem. Our 19-year-old daughter goes on binges of overeating. Sometimes she stuffs herself with food until she actually gets sick. She has no control over it and often empties our refrigerator with indiscriminate gorging. Her weight goes up and down like a yo-yo because after these binges she's filled with remorse and goes on a starvation diet. We haven't been able to learn why she does this. We're at our wits' end. — Mrs. B.E.B., Tenn.

Dear Mrs. B.:

Such uncontrolled ingestion of large quantities of food must be considered to have some deep-rooted psychological significance. I must, of course, assume that your daughter has been completely checked out in order to be sure that no existing medical problem accounts for these episodes of excessive eating.

Once underlying causes are eliminated, it is imperative that you concentrate on the psychological approach. The cycle of overeating followed by a sense of guilt can be broken only by a thorough evaluation of her emotional structure. Many psychological tests are available to pinpoint a previously undisclosed problem which, when attacked vigorously, can set your daughter on the pathway to recovery from this distressing overeating.

Far too many people refuse to acknowledge that an emotional problem exists and may, for years, delay its confrontation. I have often said that a psychological problem is not something to be ashamed of. The real shame is in not facing it and seeking the kind of guidance that will throw light on the problem so that it can be solved.

In recent months, the drug phenytoin has been considered enormously helpful in controlling episodes of uncontrolled eating. When prescribed by the physician in conjunction with psychotherapy, the chances are good that your daughter's overeating may be controlled.

This complex psychological and medical problem cannot be solved by family nagging and browbeating. If anything, such an approach tends to increase the problem.

My doctor always includes a rectal examination in a routine checkup. I find this very disturbing. Do you think this is necessary when there are no symptoms? — Mr. E.B., Texas.

Dear Mr. B.:

A rectal examination must be included in every general checkup if it is to be considered complete. This holds true especially for adults. Your doctor displays excellent judgment and medical wisdom. For the early detection of a rectal growth means the greater possibility of complete recovery.

The slight discomfort of such an examination is compensated for by its benefits.

Poll Indicates Public Wants A Tougher President

By EVANS WITT
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans don't think Jimmy Carter has shown the toughness they want in the nation's leader, an Associated Press-NBC News poll shows.

This perception plays a major role in the continuation of the public's low rating of Carter's work in the White House. In the poll taken this week, his job rating was at the most depressed level of his term.

The public perceptions of Carter were not all dark ones, however.

People's trust in Carter, as distinguished from their rating of his performance, was up again this month. This continues a trend that began earlier this summer after 15 months of decline.

The latest poll was taken Monday and Tuesday. The majority of the 1,600 telephone interviews were completed before it was announced that Carter would meet with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat at Camp David next month to try to restart the stalled Middle East peace talks.

Two-thirds of those interviewed said that, in general, Carter has not been tough enough as president in trying to get things done. About 25 percent said he has set the right tone and 3 percent said he has been too tough. Six percent were not sure.

This perception is related to Carter's low job rating.

Among those who think Carter has set the right tone in the Oval Office, his job rating is a split 49-49. But among those who say he hasn't been tough enough, his rating is 19-80.

Overall in this week's poll, 26 percent of the public gave Carter a "good" or "excellent" job rating. But 73 percent labeled his performance "only fair" or poor". One percent were undecided.

In the June AP-NBC News poll, 27 percent gave Carter good or excellent marks while 70 percent rated his work only fair or poor. Since the error margin for a poll of 1,600 people is 3 percent, it cannot be said that this change is a significant one.

The perception of a lack of toughness in Carter's actions goes beyond this country's dealings with the Soviet Union — the area usually mentioned in relation to presidential toughness.

Fifty-three percent said Carter has not been tough enough with the Russians, while 4 qercent said he had been too tough. Thirty-four percent said he has set the right tone. Nine percent were not sure.

The major bright spot for Carter is the public's trust rating.

Forty-seven percent said you can trust Carter to do what's right at least most of the time. Half said you can trust him only sometimes or almost never.

That 47-50 split compares to the 45-53 trust rating found in the June survey. Prior to June, the rating of the president who had made trust a major campaign pledge had fallen steadily since he took office.

Another major finding of the poll was a substantial base of generalized opposition to a Carter re-election bid in 1980.

Half of those questioned said they do not want Carter to run for re-election. Thirty-eight percent said they would like to see him run. Twelve percent were undecided.

The nation's Democrats were split on a Carter re-election bid. Half of the members of his own party said they want Carter to run for re-election. The remaining half were not so sure: 39 percent don't want him to run and 11 percent were undecided.

Among Republicans, 26 percent would like Carter to run, with 66 percent saying they don't want him to run. The rest were undecided.

The crucial and large group of independent voters split 53-33 against a Carter re-election bid.

Looking at those who said they voted for Carter in 1976, half of those said they want to see Carter run for re-election in 1980. But 37 percent of his 1976 supporters don't want to see Carter try again.

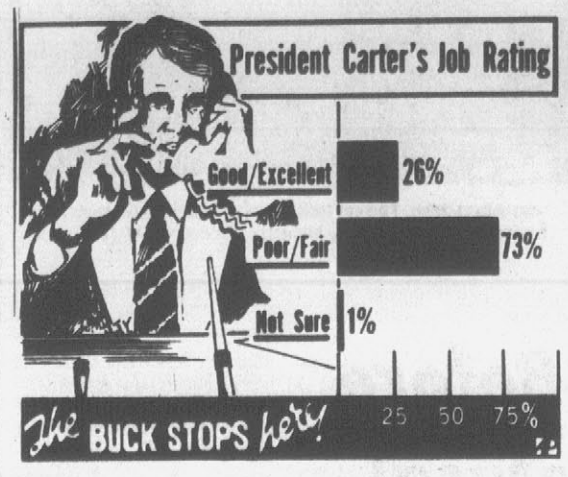
In recent months, AP-NBC News polls and others have shown Carter facing trouble when matched against potential 1980 primary of general election opponents in 1980. But such findings are a reflection of the potential opponent's popularity as well as Carter's.

The finding of this poll is significant because it shows substantial opposition to a Carter re-election bid, regardless of who the opponent is.

As with any sample survey, the results of the AP-NBC News polls could differ from the results of interviews in the sample.

For polls with 1,600 interviews, the results should vary no more than three percentage points either way simply because of sample errors. That is there is' dnlrhance out of 20 that the results of interviews with American adults would vary from these results by more than three percentage points.

Of course, the results could vary from other polls because of differences in the wording of questions, timing of interviews or the method of interviewing.



Judge Cleared By His Jury

HENDERSON, N.C. (AP) — Supporters of former District Judge Linwood T. Peoples gave a superior court jury a standing ovation Thursday after Peoples was found innocent on three counts of embezzlement.

Peoples himself sat rigidly and clutched his wife's hand as Judge Lacy Thornburg read the jury's decision. But as well wishers crowded around him after the verdict was read, he beamed and said, "I am very grateful."

The jury of nine women and three men deliberated for 2½ hours before declaring Peoples, 49, innocent on the charges that he pocketed $81 in court costs from three traffic violators in Vance and Franklin counties.

"We felt like he had done some things wrong, but (the prosecution) didn't show that he kept the money and spent it for himself," said juror Myrtle Allred of Caswell County. "And it looked like there might be a little politics to it."

Witnesses had testified that Peoples accepted $27 in court costs in three instances after promising to help traffic offenders with their tickets.

The tickets were placed in a file labeled with Peoples' name in court clerks' offices, witnesses said. After an investigation began, he tried to return the money, in one case 11 months after he accepted it, testimony showed.

Jury foreman Mary S. Ragner, a student at North Carolina A&T State University, said prosecutors lacked evidence to show a "felonious intent to convert the money to his own use."

Peoples faces trial again Aug. 21 in Vance County District Court, where he once presided, on 28 charges of misusing his powers as a judge. Two other embezzlement indictments have been returned against him in Granville County but have not been scheduled for trial.

Autopsy Shows Under Influence

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — An autopsy report released by the state Medical Examiner's Office shows that Dr. Archie Johnson Jr. was under the influence of alcohol when he was shot to death last month.

Johnson, 41, prominent in state medical, governmental and political circles, was fatally shot July 10 in the kitchen of the northwest Raleigh home he had shared with his wife and three children until he moved out a month earlier.

His wife, Betty Lou Barefoot Johnson, a National Republican Committee member, was arrested at the house shortly after the shooting. She was indicted on a first-degree murder charge and is free on $25,000 bond pending a trial.

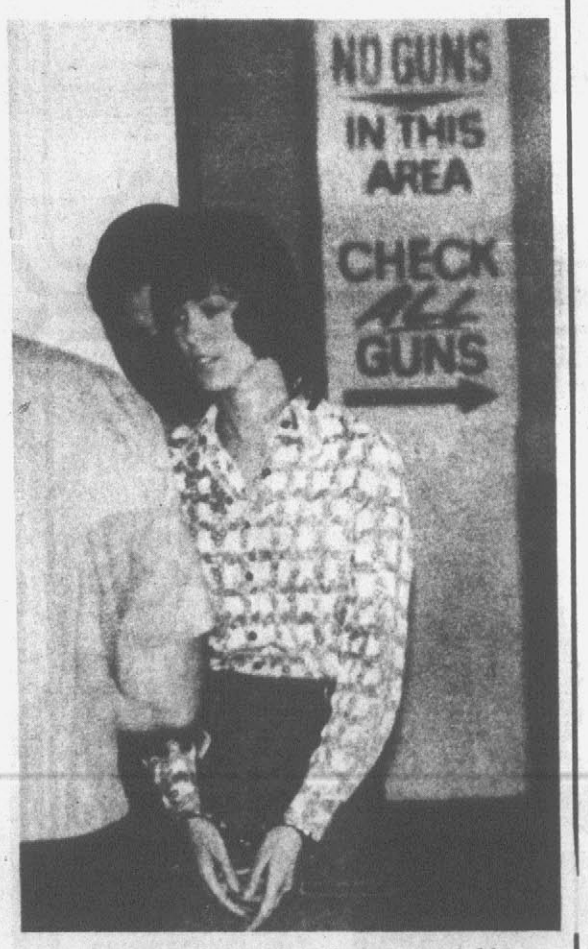
The autopsy, performed by Dr. Dewey H. Pate of Raleigh, showed that Johnson had a blood alcohol content of 130 milligrams percent. The amount is equivalent to a reading of 0.13 on a breathalyzer test, Pate said.

A reading of 0.10 is considered "under the influence" by the state Highway Patrol. Sgt. D.V. McLean said that about 8 ounces of 80 proof alcohol on an empty stomach usually would be required for a man of Johnson's weight to measure 0.13 on the breathalyzer test.

"A person with a blood level of 130 is under the influence, but not staggering," Pate said. "It's about the level you might get after having five or six drinks at a cocktail party and eating a few peanuts."

The shooting occurred shortly after Johnson had met his wife at a baseball game and returned home with her.

The autopsy said Johnson was killed by a gunshot wound to the forehead and one to the right side of the chest. A third gunshot wound to the abdomen could have been fatal if not treated in time, but did not play a major role in Johnson's death, the report said.



REJECTED — Leslie Van Houten is shown escorted into a police van leaving the Criminal Courts Building in Los Angeles Thursday. Van Houten's bid for either a fourth trial or reduction of her first-degree murder conviction in the Tate-LaBianca murders was rejected on the ninth anniversary of the LaBianca killings. Yesterday's Cryptoquip — HIP HOT LINE WILL STUNT WRITTEN PURPLE PROSE.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: P equals C

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Marines Will Join In NATO Excerises

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States will send some 25,000 fighting men, including about 10,000 Marines, to join other Allied forces in major war games aimed at sharpening defenses of NATO's weak northern European flank.

The exercise will underscore the importance given the U.S. Marine Corps in recent years in alliance strategy of bringing in hard-hitting reinforcements to repel any attack by Soviet troops against that lightly-held northern wing of the long NATO front.

American naval, amphibious and air units will comprise a large part of the multi-nation force that will stage mock sea, air and land battles this fall ranging from the English Channel into the Norwegian Sea.

Plans call for deploying a Marine regimental landing team, Marine war planes and a Marine combat service support group.

Some Marine reservists are expected to share in the experience.

Details of the deployments and the exercise are being withheld for the time being. But government sources, who asked not to be identified, said the Marines and significant numbers of Navy warships and amphibious vessels will leave from east coast ports and bases, including Camp Lejeune, N.C.

Air Force fighters normally based in western Europe will also be players in the widespread maneuvers, which have been given the name Northern Wedding. So will elements of the U.S. Strategic Air Command, probably B52 bombers which have been practicing ocean surveillance missions.

The sources said military contingents will be provided by Britain, West Germany, Norway, Denmark, Belgium, the Netherlands and Canada.

The maneuvers will be part of annual exercises conducted by NATO forces in several key sectors, including central Europe and western Germany, and the Mediterranean.

About 13,000 Army troops will fly to West Germany this month and next for exercises designed to gain experience in reinforcing the American 7th Army in West Germany in the event of a major emergency.

These exercises, accompanied by temporary reinforcement of U.S. air power in Europe from the United States, have been held annually for about 10 years.

But the shift of Marine Corps strategic focus toward Europe has come only in recent years after prodding by Pentagon civilian leaders.

The Marines for more than a generation had concentrated on the Pacific region, although they have kept battalion-sized units afloat with the U.S. 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean. The swing in focus for the Marine Corps, as well as for main U.S. military policy, followed the end of the Vietnam War.

The first Marine maneuvers in the European area on a major scale, except for a single exercise in 1964, came two years ago and, as in the case of the upcoming war games, concerned themselves with defeating a hypothetical Warsaw Pact attack on the NATO northern flank.

In keeping with the new European orientation of the Marine Corps, the Pentagon has moved to arm the corps with heavier fire power and tank strength so the Marines could contest Russia's armor equipped forces.

Salary Study For New Bern

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — The New Bern Board of Aldermen has authorized the Statet Personnel Office to study the salaries of city police officers who staged a 15-day walkout last month in a pay dispute.

The $3,200 study will be conducted by the agency's local government division from September to February.

In a resolution adopted this week, the aldermen said the study would provide information on pay and salary classifications and recommnedations "for review and appropriate action."

All 32 members of the police force resigned June 30 after the board approved a 6 percent pay increase for all city employees, rejecting the officers' request for a 10 percent raise.

About half the city's work force signed petitions requesting that a larger increase be considered.

Leaf Prices Are Steady

By The Associated Press

Prices on North Carolina's three flue-cured tobacco markets were mostly steady Thursday, with prices slightly weaker on the Middle Belt, according to the Federal-State Market News Service.

Gross sales on the Old and Middle Belt Thursday totaled 1,080,122 pounds and averaged $111.99 per hundred pounds, down $2.72 from Wednesday's average price. Season sales rose to 7,163,292, with the average price per hundred pounds at $115.84.

On the Eastern Belt, prices remained steady, with 5,292,233 pounds of tobacco sold. The average price per hundred pounds was $119.70, down 20 cents from Wednesday's price. Sales for the season were at 46,500,183, with an average price per hundred pounds of $120.67.

Prices rose slightly Thursday on the South Carolina and Border North Carolina Belt. A total of 5,790,965 pounds were sold, at an average price of $133.03 per hundred pounds, up .69 from Wednesday's average price. Sales for the season amounted to 65,060,404, at an average price of $131.24.

Opening lead: King of ♠.

Two young Canadians, Eric Kokish and Peter Nagy of Montreal, finished second in the Open Pairs Championship at the Fifth World Bridge Olympiad, held in New Orleans. A mixture of dashing bidding and skillful play saw them come close to capturing one of bridgedom's most prized titles. Watch Nagy perform on this hand where a bad trump break imperiled a seemingly secure contract.

The bidding was straightforward. Not even West's mild interference could prevent the Canadians from reaching their normal spot.

West led the king of clubs, then continued with the ace and another. Nagy guessed right when he chose to ruff with dummy's king of trumps—any other choice would eventually lead to defeat. On these two tricks East discarded the nine of diamonds and a spade.

Declarer led the nine of trumps from dummy, and East did well not to cover. Since he could not see all the cards, declarer made the normal play of overtaking with the jack, and West's club discard was a rude surprise.

Timing the hand carefully, Nagy crossed to the king of spades and led the seven of hearts. East covered with the eight and declarer won the queen. Back to dummy with the king of diamonds, and the two of hearts was covered by the four and taken with the six. The ace of trumps was cashed, dummy discarding a spade, leaving East with the only trump in the game.

Declarer led the queen of clubs, discarding dummy's last low spade, and East was a dead duck. If he ruffed he would have to lead from his diamond queen into dummy's tenace, so he discarded a diamond. But now declarer simply led to the ace of spades and East was again faced with a Hobson's choice: if he ruffed, he would be end played; if he discarded, declarer would simply cash the king of diamonds for his tenth trick, and East would score his trump on the last trick.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Opposition Is Stronger

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Mixed drink foes have added 20,000 people to their estimates of registered voters who may oppose liquor by the drink in the Sept. 8 local referendum.

Dries say the preliminary results of a massive telephone survey show there are many more voters opposed to the measure than they had thought.

"We felt at the outset there were maybe 50,000 registered voters in Mecklenburg opposed to liquor by the drink," said the Rev. Coy Privette, chief anti-liquor strategist. "Now, I'd say it's probably closer to 70,000 or 75,000 — about 43 percent of the county's registered voters."

About 1,500 volunteers are working on the survey, which opponents hope will reach every household in Mecklenburg County by Sept. 1, Privette said.

The veteran liquor fighter acknowledged that dry forces have their work cut out for them. "I've got to be honest," Privette said. "If the election were held today, we'd lose about 60 percent to 40 percent."

But Privette said opponents will focus on getting all the people with anti-liquor sentiments to the polls on the referendum date. He said voters who indicate in the survey they're against the measure will receive another call in early September, urging them to vote.

Mixed drink proponents, on the other hands, have announced they will distribute about 10,000 bumper stickers at various locations throughout the city in hopes of spreading the word about the referendum.

Wet forces have completed the first phase of their campaign, which was aimed at getting potential supporters to register, according to Bill Hensley, chairman of the pro-liquor forces.

The second phase, he said, will be aimed at getting people to the polls by publicizing the election with the bumper stickers, lapel pins and a media advertising blitz later this month.
