

James Earl Ray Denies King Slaying

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — James Earl Ray took the witness stand before Congress today and swore, as expected, that "I did not shoot Dr. Martin Luther King."

Ray, in his first public accounting under oath of the events surrounding the 1968 murder of the civil rights leader in Memphis, Tenn., told the House assassinations committee: "My testimony is the same that I would have given to a Memphis trial court if I had had that opportunity."

The 50-year-old Ray, accompanied by a phalanx of U.S. marshals, was brought into the committee's chamber under severe security provisions. Spectators, including photographers, were cautioned they would be expelled if they stood while Ray entered the room.

After his attorney, Mark Lane, engaged acting chairman Richardson Preyer in battle over Ray's treatment by federal authorities, Ray launched into a long and rambling preliminary statement.

Ray pleaded guilty to King's killing in 1969 but almost immediately recanted that confession after receiving a 99-year sentence in a Tennessee state prison.

"In respect to my guilty plea," Ray said, "it is not a difficult matter for an attorney to move his client to a guilty plea. I'm sure every member of this committee knows this." Ray's attorney at the time of his sentencing was Percy Foreman, a nationally known trial lawyer.

Then Ray returned to a story he has told in earlier interviews that he was a pawn in what he thought was a gun-running scheme by a man named "Raoul," and may have been set up by the FBI.

"I'm concerned about FBI informants coming up here to testify," he said. Ray repeated his claim that some FBI personnel are out to kill him, adding: "They have a license to kill."

Before Ray began his presentation, Lane protested that "Mr. Ray was beaten by federal prison official on Monday and held in solitary confinement with the lights on for 24 hours."

Preyer, D-N.C., shot back: "The question of the treatment of Mr. Ray is a collateral matter which is not before this committee. We will not deal with that."

As the hearing opened, more than a dozen federal marshals

ERA Gets Big Win In House

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of a 39-month extension for ratifying the proposed Equal Rights Amendment hope the momentum of an unexpectedly large House victory will hold up when the measure reaches the Senate and a threatened filibuster.

The House voted 233-189 Tuesday to extend the ERA ratification time limit to June 30, 1982. The current deadline is March 22.

Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., principal sponsor of the extension, said the 44-vote margin was "larger than any of us anticipated."

"The size of the House vote will give tremendous momentum to the effort in the Senate," said Ms. Holtzman, who is scheduled to meet with proextension senators on Thursday.

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., floor leader of the pro-extension forces, said, "We thought we were going to win by 25 or 30 votes."

In the Senate, a version of the extension measure — pushing back the ratification deadline by seven years — has become stuck in a subcommittee that is divided 3-3 on the bill. That means the Senate likely will ignore its measure and deal directly with the House-approved 39-month extension when returning from the Labor Day recess early next month.

Had the Senate been able to decide on its own version, the ERA question now would have been headed for a Senate-House conference committee to iron out differences in the two versions.

However, Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, who helped stall the Senate extension measure in the subcommittee, predicted a filibuster he said he would not lead but would support.

"I suspect there is going to be one awfully extended debate," Hatch said.

Leading anti-ERA lobbyist Phyllis Schlafly, who had an appointment in Hatch's office after the House vote, said she did not think the extension would pass the Senate and that opponents would challenge it in court if it did.

An aide to Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., chief Senate champion of the extension, said he was not sure if there was the required three-fifths majority for cutting off a filibuster.

The House vote marked the first time either House of Congress had approved extension of a time limit for ratifying a constitutional prohibition amendment. Until the Congress did not impose any time limits. The Constitution does not require a limit.

Before passing the extension, the House rejected 227-196 an amendment to allow state legislatures that have already ratified the ERA to reverse their votes. A similar amendment is expected to be offered in the Senate.

The ERA, which would prohibit discrimination on the basis of sex, has been ratified by 35 state legislatures, but those of Idaho, Kentucky, Nebraska and Tennessee later voted to withdraw their approval. The Kentucky action was vetoed.

Pitt Hospital Budget Is Set

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Net revenues for Pitt County Memorial Hospital during the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 are projected to reach $20,275,672; projected expenses, $20,450,422. Grants and other income are expected in the amount of $1,520,000.

The annual operating budget was approved last night by the hospital board of trustees.

Room rates are not to be increased.

Rate adjustments are to be held to a 1.9 percent, or an expected additional $443,187. Adjustments are to be made for specific services to provide revenue from each equal to cost of operation. These specific areas include labor and delivery rooms, operating rooms, ambulance department, clinical psychology services, speech pathology services, occupational therapy and hemodialysis unit.

Hospital employees' salaries are to be increased 5.29 percent overall, with administrative salaries increasing an average of 15 percent to bring them in line with other 300-400-bed hospitals in the area. Wages are to be increased annually on each employee's anniversary date.

Plans call for expansion of the personnel department, which is responsible for recruiting and training hospital employees. Hospital Director Jack Richardson said increased demand for nursing services and the opening of other new units require that special effort be made to recruit and train new personnel. He said several new positions were recommended, with an expected annual increase in operating cost of the personnel department of $53,671.

No subsidy was requested from Pitt County for hospital operations for the seventh consecutive year. Capital equipment projects were identified for three years and approval was given for $770,540 in capital expenditures during the coming year.

Richardson said the operating budget is projected to provide for full utilization of the hospital plant so as to benefit from "economies of scale" in that per-patient-day costs will rise only 99 cents per day under the new budget. This represents a six-tenths percent increase, from $170.49 in the current year to $171.48 in the new budget year.

He said grants received from the ECU School of Medicine and the Area Health Education Program to help fund house staff positions and subsidies received from the School of Medicine to reimburse the hospital for teaching expenses and operating costs help keep the overall operating costs down. "The current impact of the development of the medical school in Greenville has been beneficial to the economic operation of the hospital at this point," Richardson said.

Other increases in operating costs for the coming year include $106,484 for food; $188,000 for fuel, power and water; and $140,295 for hospital supplies.

Scattered Looting In Memphis As Massive Power Failure Hits

By LES SEAGO
Associated Press Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A massive power failure blamed by the utility on sabotage blacked out Memphis early today, adding to the woes of a city already reeling from walkouts by police and firemen. Labor leaders threatened a general strike unless a settlement comes soon.

Scattered looting was reported across town before power was restored, and a baby had to be delivered by flashlight at one hospital before emergency power could be connected.

At least seven persons were arrested in the looting, which took place at northside liquor and convenience shops. National Guard troops, already on duty for the strikes, were dispatched to the county jail to beef up security.

Police Director E. Winslow

Chapman said at an early morning news conference that the blackout was "probably due to sabotage," but a spokeswoman for Memphis Light, Gas & Water Division said the substation "was entered and that switches were thrown" to break circuits and cut off power.

Chapman said the FBI was assisting local authorities in investigating the break-in at the substation about 15 miles east of downtown Memphis.

Paula Payne, a spokeswoman for the utility, said someone threw a series of switches at the big substation, cutting off a main electrical power link with the Tennessee Valley Authority. The TVA's Allen Steam Plant on Presidents Island could not carry the power demands alone and automatically shut down.

The blackout left some parts of Memphis without water pressure because electric-powered pumps were out. Memphis International Airport had to shift to standby power.

Chapman said one man was being questioned about the blackout but he was not considered a suspect. He said the man, who was not a striker, had requested a lawyer.

There were no immediate reports of arrests for looting.

More than 1,000 National Guardsmen are patrolling the city with 100 to 125 non-striking police officers and 75 sheriff's deputies, while 200 Fire Department officials and non-striking firemen have 23 of the city's 48 fire stations open.

Roving pickets temporarily kept some garbage men and teachers off the job Tuesday. School is scheduled to start Thursday, but the teacher union has urged its 5,500 members to respect any picket lines.

The head of the Memphis AFL-CIO Labor Council, Tommy Powell, said he would ask the council on Monday to call a general strike and boycott of the city unless progress is made toward settling the police and fire wage disputes.

Gov. Ray Blanton also put pressure on city officials, demanding the city repay nearly $1 million he says is owed for National Guard services going back to a sanitation strike in 1968. He also called for a quick end to the police-fire dispute and offered to help both sides work out an agreement.

Blanton's action came as Mayor Wyeth Chandler modified his hard-line stance toward the strikers and offered to submit the police and firefighter wage demands to a referendum in November.

Chandler's offer was promptly rejected by both the Memphis Police Association and Local 1784 of the International Association of Firefighters. The unions want binding arbitration.

Some 1,100 policemen walked off their jobs Thursday night after rejecting the city's latest wage offer. They were followed Monday by most of the city's 1,400 firemen whose three-day strike in early July was interrupted by a court's back-towork order.

The strike and the dusk-todawn curfew imposed by Chandler after policemen struck has interfered with observances connected with the first anniversary of Elvis Presley's death today. Spokesmen at Graceland Mansion where Presley is buried have blamed the strike for cutting the number of fans who are in town for the observances.

Chandler, who ordered the strikers removed from the city's payroll, had said he would ask the City Council on Tuesday to withdraw recognition of the two unions, but instead he told the councilmen he was offering a compromise settlement. His plan would involve federal mediation, rehiring of all striking employees and taking the union's demands to the voters. But the wage package would have been dependent on a sales tax increase that would have to be approved by the voters.

PAPER

Is there a centrally located place where scrap paper can be taken to be stored until the Sheltered Workshop completes work on its recycling plant? E. D.

According to Chuck Clodfelter, recycling coordinator for the East Carolina Sheltered Workshop, such a plan would be impractical, because of the labor involved in handling the paper twice coupled with the extremely low market value of newspaper right now.

The bottom has fallen out of the newsprint recycling market, Clodfelter said, because of new laws affecting the use of shredded newsprint as an insulation material. This is where most of the newsprint went previously, he said.

The Sheltered Workshop, once it gears up its paper recycling operation, probably in late September, will work mainly with cardboard, for which there is a lucrative market. Anyone having cardboard in any fairly large quantity should contact the Workshop.

Clodfelter said he thanks you for the suggestion, however, and knows it was well intended.

Two Dead In Fight

NEW HILL, N.C. (AP) — A tavern argument erupted into a demolition derby early today in which one man drove his small truck through the tavern parking lot, killing two men and injuring eight to 10 others.

Shots were fired, and the truck roared off down U.S. 1 toward the Chatham County line with another truck in pursuit. Just after leaving Wake County, the first truck crashed and burst into flames.

The driver was in Wake Medical Center today.

The Wake County Sheriff's Department said no charges had been filed. The names of the victims and the cause of the argument were not immediately known.

The driver of the truck reportedly left the tavern after someone fired a gun during the argument, then returned to race through the parking lot.

Carter Moves To Aid His Urban Policies

By JONATHAN WOLMAN
AP Urban Affairs Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, in an effort to provide momentum for his troubled urban policy, is unveiling a number of personal directives to aid the nation's cities.

The president, acting in several key areas where legislation is not required, also hopes to aid other elements of his urban policy foundering on Capitol Hill.

The president scheduled a mid-afternoon session today to sign several executive orders. Included are directives that:

—Require all major legislation to be analyzed for its impact on cities.

City officials, who have long sought such reviews, contend that federal policies since World War II have inadvertently hurt central cities.

—Set up an effort to increase federal purchasing from firms in areas of high unemployment, with a goal of using federal purchasing power to expand economic opportunities in areas of urban distress.

—Give priority to central cities in areas where new federal buildings are needed. In recent years, many such facilities have gone to well-off suburbs, contributing to the decline of downtowns.

—Establish an interagency group to coordinate the implementation of federal urban programs. City officials say a White House-directed task force is needed because many federal aid programs cut across departmental lines.

"These administrative changes could be as important as millions of dollars," said a spokesman for the National League of Cities. "We're pleased that the president is finally taking these steps."

All four initiatives were previously announced in the rough, but it has taken months to work out the details.

"He's delivered, he's gotten his staff in gear," remarked the League of Cities spokesman, Randolph Arndt, on Tuesday.

But he said the league will continue to lobby for a White House Council of Urban Advisers — similar to the Council of Economic Advisers — to "provide the president with a continuing process for assessing urban programs."

Carter's urban policy has earned little favor in Congress, where most of the key tenets — his proposal for a National Development Bank, and his plan for a "soft" public works fund, for example — remain mired.

Secretaries To Sponsor CPS Review Course

The Greenville Chapter of the National Secretaries Association is sponsoring a Certified Professional Secretary Examination review course at Pitt Technical Institute Tuesday, Sept. 12, beginning at 7 p. m.

Membership in the chapter is not required. Secretaries and employers are asked to indicate interest by preregistering for the course. One may call Margie Davis at 756-3221 or Betty Thompson at 757-4496.

The 12-hour test is to be given the first Friday and Saturday of May, probably at East Carolina University. It is administered by the Institute for Certifying Secretaries. Presently only 11,116 secretaries have been certified nationwide. Surveys show that Certified Professional Secretaries, nationwide, average 15 percent more in salary earnings than non-CPS's.

The examination includes application of skills, techniques and related secretarial functions in six areas — environmental relationships in business, business and public policy, economics and management, financial analysis and the mathematics of business, communications and decisionmaking and office procedures. Consistent preparation enables the secretary to improve her standard of performance according to a release from the NSA.

The release also indicated that many colleges and universities are granting automatic credit hours to those who have attained the CPS rating and who enroll in degree programs.

CPS candidates must meet one of the following education and experience requirements:

High school graduation or equivalent (if not high school grad, two additional years of secretarial experience for each year of high school not completed) with a minimum of three years of verified secretarial experience, one of which must have been for 12 months continuous with one employer within the past five years, and the total within the past 25 years.

Two years of post-high school formal education, with a minimum of two years of verified secretarial experience, one of which must have been for 12 months continuous with one employer within the past five years, and the total within the past 25 years.

Or four-year college graduation, with 12 months of cumulative verified secretarial experience within the past five years.

GO FOR A LITTLE DIP

The velvety, thick consistency and tangy flavor of dairy sour cream adds a gourmet touch to a variety of foods, from appetizers to desserts. Now's a good time to try your hand at a little sour cream cookery.

For a tasty appetizer, try this sour cream dip:

SOUR CREAM-HAM DIP

1 cup dairy sour cream
1 can (4 1/2 ounces) deviled ham
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
1 tablespoon grated onion

Whip dairy sour cream until fluffy. Mix ham, mustard and onion. Blend into sour cream. Serve with crackers, potato chips or raw vegetables.

THE INDISPENSABLE EGG

Eggs are indispensable to cooking, and they appear in dishes on the breakfast, brunch, lunch, snack or dinner menu—in plain or party fare.

Eggs are an ideal food for people of all ages. They make a valuable contribution to the food needs of infants, children, and teenagers during the periods of rapid growth, and they continue to be valuable in the daily diet through adult years.

For older people, eggs assume an even greater value—they're readily available, easily digested and easy to prepare.

Those who have weight problems and are counting calories can figure that one large egg contains 80 calories—yet it supplies many of the nutrients needed for a well-balanced diet.

Keep plenty on hand for your many and various cooking needs.

Eggs are useful for: leavening—in cakes, breads, souffles, omelets; thickening—in custards, sauces, puddings; emulsifying—in mayonnaise, salad dressings; coating—for breaded poultry, meat and fish; binding—in croquet, meat loaves; egg loaves; to retard crystallization—in candies and icings; garnishing—for canapés, salads, main dishes; and for clarifying—soup stock.

A quick search of any cookbook will give the homemaker unlimited ideas as to how she can make eggs work for her in menus.

Moderate to low temperatures and proper cooking time are generally needed to assure uniformly tender, attractive egg dishes. High temperatures and long cooking cause egg protein to shrink, with an accompanying loss of moisture, making it rubbery and tough.

Treat your family to a cook's tour of the world by serving eggs.

Couple Weds In Houston Ceremony

HOUSTON, Tex. — Miss Elizabeth Reyna and William Vernon Tyson Jr., both of Houston, were married Saturday, Aug. 5, in a double ring ceremony. Officiated by Dr. B. R. Ringer, the ceremony took place at six o'clock in the evening at the Always and Forever Wedding Chapel.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Reyna of Houston. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Vernon Tyson of Greenville.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal gown of white satin and lace. The princess lined gown ended in double tiers of lace. She wore a matching lace mantilla and, carried a bouquet of yellow roses and yellow daisies.

Mrs. Esther McMillan of Houston, sister of the bride, was honor attendant and Grant Tyson of Myrtle Beach, S. C. brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

The bride is a graduate of the University of Houston and serves as case worker in social services for Houston and Harris County. The bridegroom is a graduate of N. C. State University, Raleigh, and is a chemical engineer with Hercules Inc., Houston.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was given by the family of the bride at the home and gardens of Mr. and Mrs. Andy Reyna.

Among other entertainments was a dinner party Friday night at Vargo's given by Mr. and Mrs. W. Vernon Tyson.

After a wedding trip to Acapulco, the couple will live in Braisewood, Houston, Tex.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement. Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to "The Daily Reflector" one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Croom Family Reunion Set

The members of the Croom family will hold their 48th annual family reunion at the Croom Meeting House, Sandy Bottom, located on Highway 55, eight miles south of Kinston Sunday.

The morning program will begin at 11, with the oldest and youngest attending and those traveling the longest distance being recognized. A program on the Croom family and the bicentennial and a brief business meeting will follow.

Those attending are asked to bring a picnic or covered dish dinner for the dinner to be held at the picnic pavilion at 12:30 p.m.

Mrs. Doris C. Outlaw, authoress of "The Croom Family," will attend the reunion.

The Croom Meeting House was built by Lot Croom in 1823. The building, owned by the family, contains its original furnishings.

Have Lawyer Inform Ex-Wife In A Letter

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my ex-wife. We were married for less than two years, never had any children, and then were divorced. That was 10 years ago, but she is still calling herself "Mrs. Sidney Feinbohm."

It is causing a lot of confusion because I am married again, and my wife is constantly being confused with the ex-Mrs. Sidney Feinbohm. To make matters worse, my ex-wife and my present wife have charge accounts at many of the same stores, and my wife gets bills that should have gone to the other Mrs. Feinbohm.

Is there any way I can force my ex-wife to quit using my name and take her maiden name back? She has still not remarried.

ONE WIFE TOO MANY

DEAR ONE: There can be only ONE "Mrs. Sidney Feinbohm" at a time. After your divorce, your ex-wife became "Mrs. her first name Feinbohm." If she isn't aware of this, have your lawyer inform her officially in a letter.

DEAR ABBY: I am going to marry a man I've gone with for many years, but due to circumstances I'll not go into here, we weren't able to marry until now.

This will be my second marriage. I have two sons, 12 and 17, and a daughter 15.

While discussing our marriage plans, my fiancé remarked that I should warn my daughter not to run around in front of him in scanty attire when we are all living together because, being human, it might arouse his "manly instincts." (I can't recall his exact words, but his message was very clear.)

When I reacted with surprise and chagrin, he said I had nothing to worry about, but he thought it only fair to warn me of what his reaction might be, and I should be thankful that he warned me beforehand.

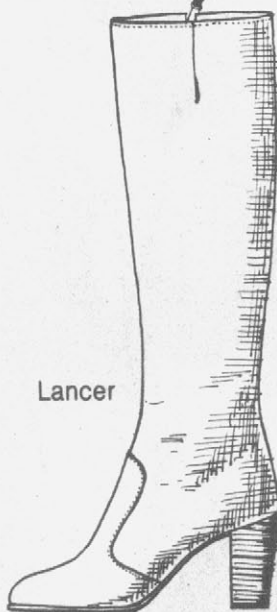

My daughter, who is very well developed for her age, is sometimes careless about keeping properly covered. I've had to remind her to be a little more modest in front of her teen-age brother.

My fiancé has known my children since infancy, and this remark has caused me to wonder if perhaps my daughter would not be "safe" with him.

Wedding Invitation

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Arrington request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter, Evelyn Christine, to Donnell Smith, on Sunday, Aug. 20, at 6 p.m. at Joy Temple Church of Deliverance.

Do you think I have a legitimate cause for concern?
SECOND THOUGHTS?

DEAR SECOND: No. If your fiancé had any unhealthy thoughts about your daughter, he wouldn't have asked you to warn her about her tendency to run around scantily clad. Let her know that more composure and less exposure is in order.

DEAR ABBY: Every day my husband picks up your column and says, "Well, let's see what Abby has to say to those nuts who write to a newspaper psychiatrist!" He would never admit that HE could use some help.

My husband is a good provider and generally a good husband, but he is a very poor father to our five children, who range in age from 2 to 10. He never pays them the slightest attention unless it's to punish them.

When a male friend comes over, the children compete for his attention and the man can't get the little ones off his lap. I am worried about how this will affect my children's lives. Will my girls be so hungry for male affection and approval that they'll become pregnant at 16? And will my sons grow up to be mama's boys? What can I do before it's too late? Or am I being silly?

SAL IN SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR SAL: It's sad that a couple who have spent almost a dozen years together have so little communication between them. Why can't you tell your husband these things? You seem to be an intelligent woman, and your complaints make sense.

If you aren't able to get through to your husband, find someone who can. He desperately needs to get this important message.

DEAR ABBY: In reply to DOGGONE MAD, who objected to the neighbor's dog doing its dirty tricks on his lawn: In order to discourage dogs from coming over on your property, just sprinkle a package of mothballs on the area that the dog has chosen for its dirty tricks.

One year our front yard looked like a cow pasture. Then a friend told me about the mothball remedy. I tried it, and it worked!

Senate Ponders Tax Measures

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, intent on providing college tuition tax relief for middle-income families, is debating whether to approve the grants favored by President Carter instead of — or in addition to — a new tax credit.

The president says the nation cannot afford both programs. He has been sharply critical of the Senate's proposed $500-per-student tuition tax credit, which was approved on a 65-27 vote Tuesday night.

Although the vote was lopsided enough to override any presidential veto, the margin by which the House approved its version of the credit last June was far short of the two-thirds majority necessary to override.

Even so, Sen. William V. Roth, R-Del., chief sponsor of the bill, said the Senate vote was "a clear signal that tuition tax credits are preferred to the costly, cumbersome Carter proposal."

Final Senate action is expected today on a modified version of the expanded grants program that Carter proposed as an alternative to the tuition tax credit. A similar plan has passed the House.

The basic provision in the Carter plan would increase from $16,000 to $25,000 the maximum family income level for which tuition aid would be available. The grants would range from $1,800 a year at the $6,000 income level to $250 at the $25,000 level. Similar increases would be made in college loan programs.

Before approving the tuition credit, the Senate ended three days of arguments over constitutionality by eliminating a provision that would have provided a credit for parents of pupils attending private elementary and secondary schools.

The House-passed bill includes tuition aid for those lower level schools and, thus, the issue will be among those to be decided by a House-Senate conference committee. But backers see little hope for retaining the elementary-secondary aid provision this year.

Senate elimination of that section left its version of the bill with these provisions:

—Effective last Aug. 1, a student — or his parents if he is a dependent — would be entitled to a credit for half the cost of tuition and fees paid for fulltime, public or private undergraduate college or post-secondary vocational school. The maximum credit, which would be obtained when 1978 income tax returns are filed next year, would be $250 per student.

—On Oct. 1, 1980, the maximum credit would rise to $500 and be extended to cover half-time undergraduate students.

To allow a review of the program, the Senate bill would end the credit at the end of 1984, unless Congress extends it. The House plan would expire at the end of 1980.

On a 59-39 vote, senators rejected an amendment that would have denied the college credit to any family with an income above $40,000.

But because of technicalities over budget-making procedures, the Senate refused to insure that the benefits would be available to families with incomes so low that they pay no income tax.

That left the credit available to those with incomes of $100,000 a year but unavailable to a four-member family receiving $7,000 annually.

Dollar Is Down Again

By JAMES R. PEIPERT

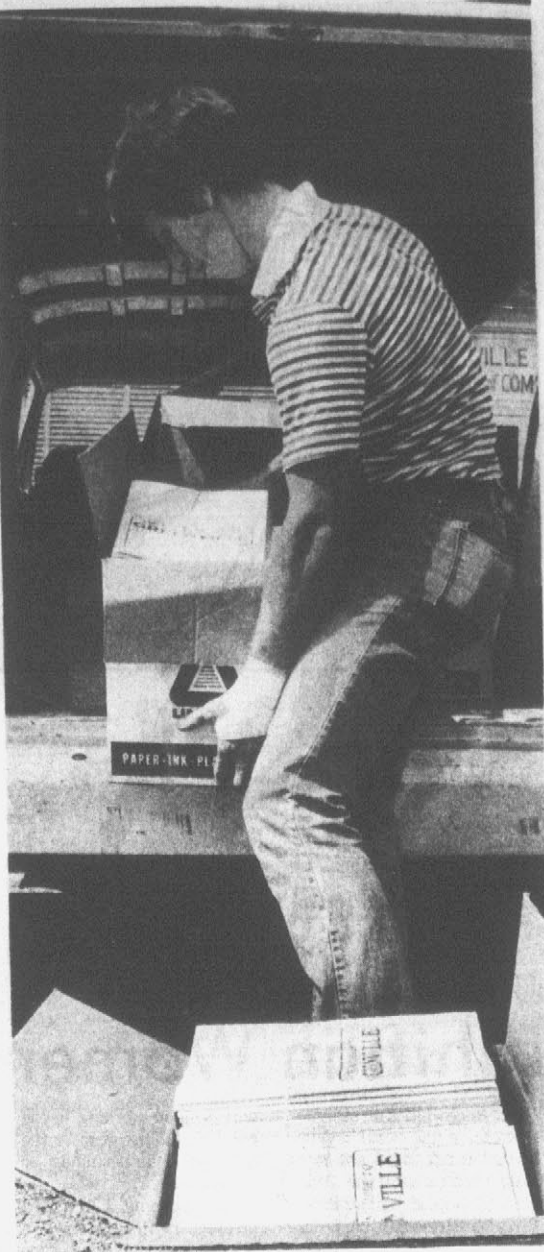

LONDON (AP) — The dollar slipped back on Europe's money markets but stayed above the record lows hit in trading Tuesday. It did somewhat better in Tokyo.

"It looks as if that one-day dollar recovery is now over," a London trader said. He predicted the dollar would move lower during the day.

The dollar's renewed weakness pushed up the price of gold, a traditional hedge for investors in times of monetary uncertainty, but it failed to reach the record high set Tuesday.

The metal was trading this morning at $214.875 an ounce in Zurich, Europe's biggest bullion market, and at $214.375 in London. At midmorning London's five major dealers fixed the price at $215.70.

Gold closed Tuesday in Zurich at $213.625 and in London at $213 but sold earlier in the day for a record $216.125 in Zurich.

Arrest Third Man In Rape

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A third man accused of raping four North Carolina teenagers hiking the Appalachian Trail June 15 was taken into custody Tuesday in Whiting, Ind., according to the FBI.

FBI agent Harold C. Swanson said John Howard Oaks, 42, of the Roan Mountain community near Elizabethton, was arrested Tuesday morning at a home in Whiting.

Oaks is one of five men wanted into connection with the rapes.

Oaks' two younger brothers, Gregory, 26, and Jerry, 24, are still at large, Swanson said.

David Jones, 22, of Roan Mountain, was arrested the day after the girls were assaulted. Billy Ray Johnson, 20, also of Roan Mountain, was arrested by police in Canton, Ohio, 11 days later. Both men are now being held in the Carter County Jail at Elizabethton.

Chinese Leader Given Warm Welcome In Romanian Capital

By ALEXANDER G. HIGGINS
Associated Press Writer

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Hua Kuo-feng flew around his enemies in the Soviet Union today and arrived in Romania on his first trip to Europe since succeeding Mao Tse-tung as chairman of the Chinese Communist Party.

Romania's Communist government, walking a neutral tightrope in the Moscow-Peking feud, gave him a warm welcome.

After spending the night somewhere in western China, Hua skirted Soviet territory and flew over Pakistan, Afghanistan, Iran, Turkey and Bulgaria to reach Romania, on the western coast of the Black Sea, the official Chinese news agency Hsinhua reported.

Hsinhua said he sent the customary greetings to the leaders of the countries he flew over.

Hua, 57, smiled confidently as he strode down the ramp from his plane, and he and President Nicolae Ceaucescu embraced warmly.

Hua shouted, "How are you?" in Chinese into a microphone, and the Romanian honor guard responded with a loud "Long Live Comrade President!" in Romanian.

Then the soldiers and many in the crowd of thousands began the customary rhythmic chant for notable visitors: "Ceaucescu! Hua Kuo-feng!"

Thousands lined the motorcade route to Scintea Square, where Mayor Ion Dinca welcomed Hua, and to Victory Square, where another stop was made. A Romanian TV announcer estimated 100,000 people were in the streets, about the same number that greeted President Ford in 1975 and Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev in 1976 but only a tenth of the estimated million who turned out for President Nixon in 1969.

One Killed In Prison Fight

REIDSVILLE, Ga. (AP) — A group of white inmates attacked black inmates with prison-made weapons at the Georgia State Prison today, killing one man and injuring three others injured before guards restored order, prison officials said.

The disturbance — the second major violent incident at the facility in less than a month — ended and all inmates were locked in their cells, according to a spokeswoman for the state prison system.

It was not known how many inmates were involved in the incident.

Sara Passmore, spokeswoman for the state Department of Offender Rehabilitation, said inmates in the prison's M building, a maximum-security cellblock, were going to work details about 7:30 a.m. when the incident started.

She said inmates in M building had continued to go to work details after a July 23rd incident in which one guard and two inmates were killed. The M building inmates, who are housed in single cells, had not been involved in that incident.

Since the earlier disturbance, officials have had daily in-

Rural Water System Desirable

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners last week renewed a commitment to a county-wide water system and decided to continue with the planning.

The commissioners expect to work with municipalities and rural water systems now in existence in formulating the plans.

Cost of providing county-wide water service to areas not now served has been estimated at $6.63 million.

It is anticipated that the system could be paid for with revenues and federal and state grants.

It would be difficult to quarrel with the wisdom of proceeding with the county water system. It will benefit rural residents and be positive step in the overall economic development of our county.

Meterless Parking Appears To Work

Recently the City Council approved removal of most parking meters in downtown Greenville.

City Manager Ed Wyatt reported last week that parking funds are breaking even.

So far things look positive for the no parking meter trial. The system will get a real test during the fall rush, but it looks as if the plan could work out.

'79 Assembly List

By BILL NOBLITT
(Second of Two Articles)

RALEIGH—All sorts of new governmental programs from buildings to emergency response are in the wish book now being compiled by Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr. and his agency heads.

It is clear to all observers that not all of the new proposals can be gotten off the drawing boards. Total spending would run hundreds of millions. The shopping list will be first trimmed by the agency heads themselves as they get proposals from staff. Then, the governor and his Advisory Budget Commission will cut and adjust.

Finally, the 1979 General Assembly will convene in January to begin the process of setting up a budget for two fiscal years (1979-80; 1980-81).

How realistic are such preliminary proposals? One agency head reports that staff requests soared past $660 million. That early list has been chopped to below $150 million.

Goodies

Here are some highlights from the shopping list:

Phil Carlton, secretary of Crime Control and Public Safety will push reorganization of the Civil Defense Program into a unified emergency response agency equipped and staffed to deal with real-world disasters whether caused by nature or otherwise. The Civil Defense pattern of storing food and water, drawing evacuation plans, and generally concerning itself with the eventuality of nuclear attack is now largely discredited, Carlton believes. What is needed is an agency which can take charge and respond to floods, hurricanes, plane crashes and such.

Other new things coming from Carlton's shop include: reform of juvenile offender law to provide a network of intake counselors to divert children from court and into services programs where possible; revision of sentencing laws; and merit selection of judges.

In the world of arts and culture, Secretary Sara W. Hodgkins wishes for a law requiring that one percent of the construction cost of any new state building be set aside to provide art, statuary, etc., for the enjoyment and education of citizens using such facilities. An "Art Bank" for items to be rotated on display in public buildings is another priority.

BILL
NOBLITT

A new State Library building has been planned since 1973. Action on that may be sought next year, along with increased funding for local public libraries.

After Human Resources Secretary Sarah Morrow gets through paying the bills for increased costs of Medicaid for the poor, higher welfare checks, and other mandatory spending (Total: $60 million less dollars) there's little left.

Get Drunks

But she thinks it is time for an all-out attack on drunk drivers in North Carolina, and is drawing up a statewide reform program including establishing traffic schools, intensive rehabilitation and counseling services, and mandatory jail sentences to insure that drivers convicted of being intoxicated participate cooperatively in the rehab work.

State parks, especially those near urban areas, will be listed prominently on Howard Lee's list. As secretary of Natural Resources and Community Development, Lee will also be involved in statewide land use planning and management, additional housing for the poor and a possible Fair Housing Law, and continued building of state-local partnerships.

Finally, would you believe a four-lane highway from Charlotte to the Coast? Dreamed of by a generation of North Carolinians, widening of U.S. 74 from Wilmington to Charlotte should be in final construction phases by the end of 1986, proposes Transportation Secretary Tom Bradshaw.

Bradshaw also would like year-round, staggered registration of motor vehicles to end the annual rush to get license plates or stickers.

Tahitian Women's Lib

Art Buchwald is on assignment for a few weeks trying to find out if there are any Cuban troops on Cape Cod. He left behind his all-time favorite columns.

Women's Liberation is working in Tahiti as well as, or better than, any place in the world. I discovered this when I visited the beautiful island of Bora Bora, which inspired James Michener's "Tales of the South Pacific." We stayed at the Hotel Bora Bora, where instead of hotel rooms visiting couples have their own grass-covered huts overlooking the crystal-clear, fish-happy lagoon.

One of the first things I noticed was that there were only women working in the hotel — at the desk or the bar, as chambermaids or waitresses.

One morning I made a discreet inquiry as to where all the men on Bora Bora were.

A Frenchman who lives on the island said, "They're probably still in their huts sleeping. They're very tired from celebrating the Fourteenth of July, which as you know has been going on for 10 days."

"But don't they have to go to work?"

"No, monsieur. The tradition of the islands is that only the women work."

"What do the men do?"

"Sleep, sail, fish if they feel like it. They manage to keep busy."

"But if the women work, what do the men use for money?"

ART

"The women give them the money they make."

"But that's wonderful," I said. "This is the country of true Women's Liberation."

"It has its advantages," the Frenchman said.

"Who takes care of the children?"

"The women."

"Who does the cooking, cleaning and washing?"

"The women. You see, monsieur, the men here respect their women and let them do everything. As a matter of fact, there aren't enough hours in the day for a woman to fulfill herself."

"What about marriage?"

"Some people get married, some don't. If a man tires of his woman, he can find another one."

"Then a woman here does not have to be tied down."

"No. As soon as her man leaves her, she is free."

"This is a Women's Lib paradise," I said. "It must make the men angry to know the women have all the jobs."

"Not really. You must understand that the Tahitian man is not as ambitious as the American man. Many, many years ago, Tahitian men discovered there was nothing they could do that their women couldn't do better. Once they made this discovery, they decided it was stupid to compete with them."

"If only American men could learn this," I said, "we would indeed have a happy country."

"I do not want to give the impression that our men do not work at all. Many of them play musical instruments when their wives dance for the tourists."

"You mean after they

Directors and other officials of the Pitt County Fair Association in session last night definitely agreed to go ahead with a proposal to erect buildings on the present fair-ground site a few hundred yards from the city limits on the Falkland highway.

Estimated cost for the work is $1,500. J. Hicks Corey, secretary-treasurer of the association pointed out that the frame buildings would be used for agricultural displays, exhibits and for stock and poultry.

More concrete plans for the Pitt County Fair, which will be held the week of October 1, also were mapped out. The Pitt fair is sponsored jointly by Greenville and Pitt County posts of the American Legion.

J. O. Duval, City Clerk, announced today that the Greenville swimming pool will be closed for the summer, September 5.

The pool was built with WPA funds and local appropriations. Persons in charge of the swimming center indicate that the season thus far has been successful.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Journalist Duty Vs. Law

From "The London Times"

The case of "The New York Times" reporter sentenced to jail for refusing to hand over his confidential notes to a court in a murder trial raises issues of general importance for the practice of responsible journalism. There was no question of concealing the fact that a crime had been committed. On the contrary, it was on the basis of the articles he wrote that investigations were reopened and a charge brought. But the defendant claimed that it was necessary for a fair trial that the notes should be made available, while the journalist, Mr. M.A. Farber, claimed that this would disclose his source and infringe his professional obligation of confidentiality. So there are the rival claims of the court with its responsibility for criminal justice and journalistic honour with its responsibility for those who give information in confidence.

"The New York Times" is able to pursue the case in a higher court. It was not successful in its appeal to the New Jersey Supreme Court but it now has the opportunity of going to the Supreme Court in Washington. For a British journalist and newspaper caught in a similar conflict of responsibilities there could be no legal redress. Confidential communications with lawyers are privileged in court. Doctors and priests do not enjoy this privilege by right, though in practice the courts are so reluctant to force them to disclose confidential information that they possess it "de facto." Journalists enjoy no such immunity "de jure" or "de facto."

British courts have proved to be somewhat sceptical of journalistic claims in this respect. In 1963, in the aftermath of the Vassall Tribunal, Mr. Brendan Mulholland of the "Daily Mail" was sentenced to six months' imprisonment and Mr. Reginald Foster of the "Daily Sketch" to three months for refusing to disclose their sources; and Mr. Desmond Clough of the "Daily Sketch" would presumably also have been sentenced if his source had not himself come forward. In 1971 Mr. Bernard Falk, a BBC television reporter, was sentenced to four days in a Belfast jail for refusing to say whether a particular person, who was accused of being a member of the IRA, had appeared in a television programme in which the participants had been told that their identities would be kept secret.

There is therefore ample experience as well as academic authority for the belief that journalists are legally exposed when they decline to comply with the instructions of a court to disclose their sources. Only those with a highly developed taste for martyrdom would care to do so lightly. Quite apart from the personal inconvenience and distress involved, they know that there are valid principles on the other side: as citizens they have as much interest as anyone in upholding the law.

But they also know that they too are upholding a valid principle. If journalists could never receive information in confidence some of the disclosures that are most in the public interest would never be made. Those in the best position to know if there has been improper conduct in any part of the public service or criminal activity in any field would often be taking an enormous personal risk if they were to say so openly. But they are not likely to say much confidentially unless they can be sure that the journalist will keep his bond.

VALUES IN CHURCH SERVICES

Many people seem to think that the most important reason for going to church is to listen to sermons. Yet the sermon is of secondary importance in every church service. The element of chief value is worship. And after that comes fellowship.

Most Christians need the moral support of their fellows. To meet in a sanctuary with people who hold the same beliefs that we do, who press toward the same objectives and share the same outlook on life, gives us inspiration and comfort.

It is interesting to note that St. Peter was alone on the night he committed his great sin of denying Jesus. Perhaps if there had been other disciples with him, he might have shown more courage.

Isolation can be as dangerous for modern Christians as it was for Peter. There is no factor upon which we can so confidently rely in our attempt to live a good life as the fellowship of other Christian believers.

Foreign Vacation Cost Rising

By LOUISE COOK

Down, down, down goes the dollar. Up, up, up goes the cost of that foreign vacation you dreamed about. Now is the time to make sure you get the best possible deal for your money.

As an individual, you can't do much to affect the value of U.S. currency overseas. You can, however, learn to take advantage of fluctuations in the dollar.

Compare exchange rates when selecting your destination. The dollar has been declining recently against almost all major currencies in Europe and the Far East. But it is still worth more than it used to be in some places. You'll get 200 more Italian lira for your dollar today, for example, than you would have in 1975. Inflation in Italy has eaten up some of the gain, but you probably will fare better there than you would in a country like Japan where rising prices and declines in the value of the dollar have gone hand in hand.

Shop around for travelers' checks. Credit unions often offer discounts to members. Banks may have special rates for depositors or senior citizens. There is a flat commission of 1 percent of face value charged on all American Express travelers' checks. Fees for other checks vary, however. Spokesmen for Barclays Bank said, that it is up to the financial institution or other agent who is selling the checks to decide on a commission. In some cases, there is no charge at all.

If you plan to stay in one place for any length of time, consider getting your travelers' checks in local currency rather than in U.S. dollars. You run the risk of losing money if the value of the dollar increases between the time you buy the checks and the time you spend them, but you gain the advantage of knowing in advance exactly what you have to spend. You won't have to cash checks at a hotel or store, where you will get less for your dollars than you would at a bank.

Another way to avoid unpleasant surprises while traveling is to buy a Eurailpass. The tickets entitle you to unlimited travel in 15 countries and must be purchased in the United States. There are five firstclass Eurailpasses for adults and a second-class Eurail Youthpass for those under 26. Prices range from $180 to $450.

If you are planning a package tour, read the fine print carefully and ask questions. Is there a clause that allows the tour operator to charge a supplement if the value of the dollar declines? What does the brochure mean when it promises a "first-class" hotel? Is a private bath included? Finally, think local. Stick to the foods and beverages of the country you are visiting if you want to save money. Fast-food hamburgers are now available all over the world, but you'll probably pay a premium for your American taste.

Ephemeris. The idea is to recognize the cooperation of other countries and encourage more. An ephemeris, as all navigators who use such things know, is "an orderly collection of information relating to the assigned places of celestial bodies at regular intervals."

How do you tell which committee hearing you've wandered into on Capitol Hill?

Rep. Otis G. Pike, D-N.Y., suggests you might look at what the audience is wearing. He wrote to constituents about two committees that were holding hearings on drugs, one with the announced title of "women and substance abuse."

"I believe they were talking about the use of drugs by women, not the abuse of women by men," Pike wrote.

"While I did not attend any of the hearings on drugs, a spy told me that the audience included quite a few young people, who wore long hair, blue jeans, sloganed T-shirts and sandals."

"The hearing I was attending, in the Ways and Means Committee, was on a different subject, and the audience dressed for the occasion. We were talking of taxes, of reducing taxes and that means money and that's how the audience dressed."

"Even the union representatives wore vests. There were Gucci loafers and initialed pinky rings. The language matched the couture."

But sometimes the language of tax debates lapses into witticisms.

The House was wrangling over the big tax cut proposed by Rep. Jack F. Kemp, R-N.Y., and Sen. William V. Roth Jr., R-Del. Rep. Charles A. Vanik, D-Ohio, reached for a way to dramatize his contention that it would force slashes in worthwhile programs — even a $50 billion reduction in defense funds.

"Yes, yes, you can vote for Kemp-Roth," Vanik told his colleagues, "but if you do, you better buy yourself the Kemp-Roth home defense kit. Get a slingshot, a flashlight and a stick and plan on defending yourself."

Lower Capital Gain Tax Relief Nearer

Interstate Securities Corporation

Lower capital gains taxes may yet be a reality, since the House Ways and Means Committee has recommended a reduction in the rate from 50 percent to 35 percent. The size of the final cut may change, but Congress appears to be in the mood to reduce taxes.

The proposal was not greeted with open arms in Washington. The Treasury Department put the price tag at $1.7 billion in lost revenues, and Fed Chairman Miller said the tax reduction was an inefficient way of stimulating capital investment. He believes faster write-offs provide more impact, dollar for dollar, than tax reduction. A Presidential veto must be viewed as a real threat, since Carter regards a reduction in capital gains taxes as a "windfall to millionaires."

As the arguments continue over lost Treasury revenues and increased capital spending, a National Bureau of Economic Research study has concluded that lower capital gains taxes will not reduce government tax revenues, but could increase the take. A sharp increase in the sale of stock could result from the lower tax, with resulting greater revenue for the Treasury.

The NBER study found that high tax rates simply discourage individuals from selling stock on which they have large gains. A lower capital gains tax would stimulate stock sales, but not just temporarily. Economic growth would generate more capital gains, and lower taxes would stimulate more trading activity and higher tax revenues.

Higher stock prices would also be justified since lower taxes would mean higher after-tax returns on stocks. The stock market would then become a more attractive investment arena. And, among other effects of higher stock prices on the overall economy are increased consumer wealth and higher consumer spending.

One further effect of the lower tax/higher stock price theory: a higher market price for stock implies a greater value placed on a company's assets. And the greater the value of those assets, the more attractive are additions to those assets. Thus, the capital spending boom in the 1960's resulted from corporate assets being valued 40 percent above their replacement value. Now, assets are being valued in the market at 85 percent of replacement values, meaning it is cheaper to buy existing plant than it is to build.

The actual result of a reduction in capital gains taxes may differ significantly from what has been theorized. If the studies are even partially right, the cost to the government appears minimal while the benefits could be substantial.

Dealers Show Set By Cox

GRIFTON — Cox Trailers Inc. will have its annual dealer show and meeting here Aug. 21 and 22, according to William F. Cox, president.

Cox said that approximately 125 people representing some 80 dealerships in 15 eastern states are expected to attend the show.

The firm, whose primary business has involved building boat trailers for nearly 30 years, is now the largest boat trailer manufacturer east of the Mississippi, the official noted.

He said that nearly 100 models produced by Cox will be on display, including trailers that will handle craft up to 27 feet in length. A new line of drive-on trailers will also be unveiled by the company at the show.

The dealer preview will include loading and unloading demonstrations at the plant, product displays, discussions of sales and advertising programs and tours of the plant.

The dealers and their wives will be quartered at the Holiday Inn in Greenville, according to Cox, where a dinner and dance are planned for Monday evening, Aug. 21.

During the dinner, dealers with outstanding sales records will be inducted into the Cox Champagne Club. Among the 15 dealers who will be honored with club membership are Joe Vernelson of Greenville Marine & Sports Center and Bill Stallings of Stallings Marine in Greenville.

Cox said that on Aug. 22, wives of the visiting dealers will be taken on a tour of historic bath and have a luncheon at River Forest Manor in Belhaven.

Approximately half the dealers have accepted invitations to fish for flounders on Aug. 23 at Drum Inlet on the Carteret County coast, the president added. Fred Cox, retired head of the firm who now lives in Atlantic, will guide the fishing expedition.

Pitt Hospital Board Receives Resignation Of Trustee Member

By CAROL TYER Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Memorial Hospital trustees accepted the resignation of W. Raleigh Carver of Pasquotank County as a trustee at their meeting Tuesday night.

In other business the board did the following:

— Approved the local CPA firm, Lowmore Warwick and Company for auditing services at a fee not to exceed $10,750.

— heard a report from the building committee concerning the viewing of schematic designs on how to add a bed tower to the hospital plant;

— heard a report from Assistant Administrator Rick Gilstrap on a disaster drill held this past Friday and the subsequent real treatment Saturday of 11 victims two critical of a motor vehicle accident in Greene County;

— heard a report from John Larson concerning the activity of Howell and Larson Associates conducting of interviews as a first step in its development of a long-range plan for the hospital;

— heard a report from Assistant Administrator for Nursing Jean Owens about the high turnover of nurses during the summer and the success of the Nurse Intern Program for 15 student nurses. Miss Owens also gave three nursing audit reports.

— heard a report from Rehabilitation Center Administrator Dave McRae about the center's greatly increased population since the arrival of Dr. Don Weir as medical director. The population this past month averaged 37-38, with as many as 42 at times. McRae said, and there were clients from 21 different Eastern N. C. counties.

— heard a report from Ben Weaver of the ECU Medical School, in the absence of Dr. William Laupus, Dean, who is attending a school for medical school deans at Boston University. Weaver said this year's beginning class of medical students will arrive Saturday and begin classes Monday. — approved the medical staff's recommendations of provisional active staff privileges for the following:

Dr. Thomas E. Burkart, internal medicine, with subspecialty, nephrology;

Dr. Allen F. Bowyer, internal medicine, with subspecialty, cardiology;

Dr. Thomas F. O'Brien, internal medicine, with subspecialty, gastroenterology.

— approved the medical staff's recommendations of advancement to full active staff membership for Dr. C. L. Smith, Dr. Walter Portes, Dr. Clark Bright and Dr. Verbena Sugg.

Reunion Will Hold

SEATTLE, WASHINGTON — A reunion of men who served aboard the Light Cruiser USS Nashville (CL43) during World War II is being planned during the month of July 1979.

The forthcoming reunion will be held in Nashville, Tenn. The USS Nashville took part in the Doolittle Raid on Tokyo and later became General MacArthur's flagship during many of his Southwest Pacific operations. The ship was purchased by Chile in 1950 and now serves as the flagship of the Chilean fleet.

Any former crewmen living in the Greenville area who may be interested in attending the reunion are to write to A. B. Speed, 13229 Des Moines Way South, Seattle, Washington, 98168.

Gunsmith Course

SNOW HILL — The Greene County unit of Lenoir Community College will offer an extension course in gunsmithing beginning September 7. The class, to be taught by Walter Ezzell, Jr., will meet at 6:30 p.m. each Thursday.

The course will run for 33 hours and will cover all phases of gunsmithing. It is a non-credit class open to all persons 18 or older, with a tuition fee of $5 (free to persons 65 or older). For more information, call 747-2451.

Fugitive Caught

Greenville Police arrested a local man Tuesday night on fugitive from justice charges from the State of Arizona, involving two counts of rape.

Capt. Paul Jewett said this morning that officers arrested William Thomas Rivers, 26, of 942 E. 14th Street, at 9:30 p.m. on the fugitive warrant from Arizona.

Rivers was placed in Pitt County Jail, Capt. Jewett reported.

"Of course," the Frenchman said. "It is part of their duties. The tourists would be very disappointed to come all this way and not see the Tahitian women dance."

"To think," I said, "they've managed to have all this liberation without a revolution."

Brother Gold Big Hit

By CAROLYN S. CARLSON
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — The block letters on the television screen announce: "Reflections with Brother Gold." The set at Atlanta's WTCG-TV studio is sparse — rose latticework and a lectern.

Into this reverent scene comes Brother Gold, a chubby figure carrying a black notebook and dressed in a black choir robe adorned with a gold chain and a medallion necklace. He steps to the lectern briskly, flashes a smile and proclaims his topic for the day. It is not a sermon but a rock music title: "This morning, 'I Want to Live' by John Denver," or "'I'm Only Joking' by Rod Stewart."

In a blustering, powerful church bass, with arms flailing not unlike a fundamental preacher in full swing, Brother Gold proceeds not to preach but to read the lyrics. Some of the words border on the ridiculous, but Brother Gold's pulpit cadence rolls on: "Get down, get down. Boogie, boogie..." one morning segment went.

Concluding his message, Brother Gold shuts the book, flashes another smile and glides solemnly off the set.

Thus ends the News Update Early in the Morning on Channel 17, an Atlanta station viewed on cable stations in 39 states. The taped, half-hour news show, including "Brother Gold" when there is enough time, is shown twice in the predawn hours.

"Brother Gold" is the whimsical creation of the actor, Jesse Waller, who also is WTCG-TV's promotion director, and news director Bill Tush.

Waller recently taped — 30 minutes without a goof — 12 more of the short segments to replenish the 22 spots already in the can, which date back to the birth of "Brother Gold" a year ago.

Waller said Tush at first had to choose the songs for him by listening to records because of the actor's impaired hearing. Eventually, he said, he found a magazine which publishes lyrics and he began making his own selections.

Because of his hearing problem, Waller said, he has never heard the lyrics and consequently feels more freedom in his interpretations. A speech and drama graduate from Syracuse University, Waller, 37, said he used to perform in stock musical

Party Official Claims Sheriff Forced His Support In Election

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Democratic Party precinct official, Adam F. Hales, testified Tuesday that Cumberland County Sheriff Otis Jones stashed a warrant against Hales in his desk drawer and threatened to use it unless Hales supported Jones in his campaign for re-election.

The testimony came during the second day of a superior court proceeding over a civil lawsuit filed by a special prosecutor seeking Jones' removal from office. The prosecutor, District Attorney Dan Edwards of Durham County, rested his case Tuesday.

The removal petition stemmed from a May 1977 incident in which Hales was charged with receiving a stolen pistol.

comedies, portraying bombastic characters similar to Brother Gold. However, his acting has been limited to "Reflections" since he joined WTCG-TV in 1973.

The case against Jones is being heard by Superior Court Judge Fetter Mills of Anson County, specially assigned to the case, and is being heard without a jury.

If Mills decides the evidence warrants Jones' removal, Jones still can assume the office in December because state law does not prohibit a removed sheriff from seeking or serving another term.

Jones was re-nominated in the May Democratic primary and faces no Republican opposition in the November election.

Major Charles Smith of the sheriff's office testified that Hales asked after his arrest in May to speak to Jones. The two men had talked behind closed doors, Smith said.

Smith testified that when Jones emerged the sheriff said: "Hang on to that case on Adam Hales. We'll take care of it later because he's going to help us."

The sheriff's department at the time was actively seeking information about the theft of $30,000 worth of tires from a local storage facility. Both Hales and his son, Donald, were charged in connection with the theft. The charge against Hales was dismissed; his son paid a fine and was placed on probation.

On cross-examination, Edwards asked Smith, "Do you know of any other case, before or since that time, that a warrant has been handled in this manner?"

"I don't believe so," said Smith.

GOLDEN SMILE — "Brother Gold" is the whimsical creation of the actor, WTCG-TV's promotion director Jesse Waller, and the station's news director Bill Tush. "Reflections with Brother Gold" is aired in the pre-dawn hours by the Atlanta-based station. (AP Laser-photo)

Hunt To Decide On Digging Up Roadsides

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State environmental and health officials briefed Gov. Jim Hunt Tuesday on the hazards of PCB and left the final decision to him on whether to dig up 250 miles of roadside contaminated with the toxic chemical.

"It's looking more and more like we're going to have to dig it up," said Steve Meehan, spokesman for the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development. "The depth is the question. Samples are being taken now and we'll make a recommendation to the governor on how deep we have to go."

Hunt is expected to announce his decision at a news conference scheduled Thursday.

Dr. Martin P. Hines, head of the epidemiology section of the state division of health, said Tuesday that blood specimens will be taken from some residents around the spill areas. Hines said doctors will examine the blood to see if there is any sign of PCB, or polychlorinated biphenols, in people exposed to the chemical.

PCBs have been dumped on about 250 miles of the state's roadsides in Piedmont and Eastern North Carolina counties. All the spills are believed to have occurred this month, and officials suspect deliberate dumping by persons attempting to bypass strict new federal disposal requirements for PCB.

Meehan said tests have proven false in a report Monday that a new spill had occurred on top of an earlier spill site along N.C. 42 near Sanford. Meehan said local residents reported a fresh spill, but he said investigators determined that there was no new spill.

Meehan said no final cost estimates are available for the task of digging up the contaminated soil, a layer one to three inches deep and as much as two feet wide in some areas. He said if the soil is dug up, the state must have places to store the PCB-damaged soil.

Environmental officials have proposed treating the spill sites with a solution of activated charcoal and soapy water. Robert Carter, head of the water quality division, said the charcoal would stabilize the chemical and prevent it from being washed away.

The state has offered a $2,500 reward for information about the persons who may have dumped the chemical from a tanker truck along the road. Investigators said Tuesday they had received dozens of calls.

Meanwhile, the State Bureau of Investigation has begun an intensive probe into the spills, assigning nine agents to the case.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A state official says that large quantities of PCBs were disposed of in city dumps and landfills with little concern for their potential impact on public health before the danger of the toxic chemical was discovered in the 1960s.

Robert Carter, state chief water quality official, said strict safety rules for PCB dumping were imposed by the chemical disposal industry about 10 years ago. He said more recent disposal sites are probably safe.

Carter said PCBs were discovered in the late 1800s and appeared in industry during the 1930s.

"It (PCB) is in city landfills, dumps and lots of places where industrial wastes of that nature are disposed of," Carter said Tuesday. "It's in printer's ink, solvents, paints, heat exchangers. Wherever cities have dumped that sort of stuff, that's where they are now."

"The one hope is that since this material pretty well binds up in a soil column, it will pretty much stay where it is," he added. "The location of most landfills has been pretty well thought out, particularly in relation to water supplies."

Carter state officials have tested some old dumps where PCBs are known to have been disposed of for possible leakage of the poisons into surrounding water. But he said no contamination has been found.

The recent PCB spills on the state's roadways are believed to have been inspired by strict federal laws which require disposal of PCBs in one of only three approved dump sites in Oregon, Idaho and Alabama, or burning in approved high-temperature incinerators, of which there are none yet.

Some dumping sites which formerly accepted PCBs will no longer do so because they fear they will not win federal approval and will be forced to dispose of the toxic chemical themselves, Carter said.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency estimates there are 440 million pounds of PCB in the nation, with between 70 and 80 percent of it buried as industrial waste or in discarded equipment.

PCBs have been suspected of causing cancer and birth defects in laboratory animals.

but tests indicate PCB doesn't cause cancer in humans, according to the Monsanto Chemical Corp., formerly the major manufacturer of the chemical. Monsanto stopped making PCBs in 1971.

A joint venture in the production of a revolutionary new diesel motor will be undertaken by Steyr-Daimler-Puch AG and BMW in the near future, according to the Austrian Press Service.

PCB WARNING — A sign along North Carolina highway 87 near Pittsboro warns pedestrians that the poisonous chemical polychlorinated biphenyl has been dumped along the roadside. The chemical, which reportedly causes cancer, has been deliberately dumped on rural roads in the state. (AP Laser-photo)

Illness Hits Near PBC Spills

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — More than two dozen people living or working near the sites of PCB spills along 250 miles of the state's highways have complained of headaches, vomiting and eye pain, state health officials say.

Health officials said that while PCB, or polychlorinated biphenyl, poses no immediate health hazards to humans, a solvent in which PCB is contained may be the cause of some illnesses that have been reported.

Dr. John Freeman, a public health veterinarian and head of the Department of Human Resources pesticide program, said that chlorobenzene compounds, particularly trichlorobenzene, are known to cause the symptoms that persons in the PCB-contaminated locations have reported to health authorities.

Freeman said the chlorobenzene compounds are used as solvents to soften the PCB, which is very thick. He said the compounds exude a mothball-like odor that has been detected in the PCB-dump sites.

Freeman said the illness caused by the chlorobenzene should disappear within a few days with no long-term effects, but he advised anyone suffering symptoms in the contaminated sites to consult a doctor.

One couple, Edgar and Jewel Bouldin, who operate a 48-acre farm and service station on Silk Hope Road in Chatham County, have seen their doctor about sore throats, eye soreness, nausea and headaches they have suffered since a PCB spill was found near their property last week.

"My eyes feel kind of like they've got a skim or something over them," said Bouldin in a telephone interview. "She (Jewel) had complained about her eyes and these terrific headaches a couple of days before they found out what that stuff was along the highway. We've never had this problem. The doctor says he doesn't know what to do. He don't know anything about it."

Bouldin said his condition had improved slightly but that his wife was still "as sick as last week." He said they feel threatened by the spill.

Farmville Quality Off

FARMVILLE — Quality of tobacco sold on the Farmville market Tuesday was not as good as Monday's offering, according to Louis N. Williams, sales supervisor. Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade. The volume of better grade cutters and lugs kept the day's average over the season average, with low grades of primings and nondescript off in volume. The Farmville market sold a total of 697,447 pounds for $891,996, an average of $127.89 per hundredweight. Last year, a total of 115,083 pounds were sold.

The season total for Farmville is 5,425,128 pounds for $6,742,054, an average of $124.27 compared to $95.49 last year.

Bike Sale Scheduled

Abandoned bicycles recovered by Greenville Police over the past six months, and stolen bicycles where ownership cannot be determined, will be sold at auction at 10 a.m. tomorrow.

The bicycle sale will be conducted in the alley beside the police department. In case of rain, the sale will be held in the rescue building at the city's central Fire and Rescue Department station behind City Hall.

TVA Scheduled To Ask For New Rate Hike Increase On Thursday

By MATT YANCEY
Associated Press Writer
KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Pinched by a July rate hike yielding $25 million less than they wanted, Tennessee Valley Authority power officials will recommend another increase on Thursday, officials say.

If put into effect Oct. 1, the increase would mark the third time in 15 months that TVA has raised basic electric rates to its 2½ million customers in seven states.

Chairman S. David Freeman said Tuesday that TVA's power staff hasn't given him an advance copy of financial projections for next year but he has received indications that an increase will be sought.

"I don't have any numbers but I have gotten some hints that the news is not going to be good," Freeman said. "The numbers they presented at the last quarterly review showed that we're having some difficulties."

TVA's residential rates, including monthly fuel adjustments, jumped above $30 per 1,000 kilowatt-hours for the first time this month under an 8½ per cent rate increase implemented July 1. TVA's rates also were raised 17 percent in July 1977.

The $60 million in new revenues generated by last month's hike was $25 million less than power officials said they needed when they sought a 12 percent increase from TVA's board of directors in May.

Freeman told the power division to tighten its belt to make up the balance, but TVA Power Planning Manager Hugh Parris said Tuesday the agency found only $13 million to cut.

"If you look back to the last rate review, I think that ought to give you a pretty good clue as to what we're going to recommend," Parris said.

He said the recommended increase will likely be less than the 8½ percent approved in May. "I've got figures but I'm just not going to talk about them until Thursday," Parris said.

A question remains on whether Freeman has the authority to raise rates without at least one other person on the three-member TVA board. The last increase was rushed after only a week's review to assure that former Chairman Aubrey Wagner would have a vote on it.

"I don't want to have to decide anything like that until I have to," TVA Counsel Herb Sanger said Tuesday. "I'm sure Dave will have a comment on that at that time."

Two board seats have been vacant since May 18, when Wagner retired. Director William Jenkins resigned May 5. President Carter so far has made no nominations for filling either seat.

Freeman said TVA's rates will continue to climb until some of its six nuclear power plants now under construction are completed. Parris said the first, Sequoyah near Chattanooga, will not go into operation until October 1979.

About one-fifth of a TVA customer's monthly electric bill is now going toward paying interest on TVA's $7 billion-plus debt, including about $4.5 billion in borrowings for power plant construction.

TVA traditionally has adjusted rates so that net operating revenues will equal 150 percent of its debt-service costs in order to maintain a triple-A bond rating, a necessity for borrowing in 13 states.

Since all of TVA's borrowing the past 18 months has been from the Federal Financing Bank, Freeman questioned whether that ratio still has to be met.

"The tentative answer I have is that the 1.5 test is important but as long as we're not actually selling bonds in the open market, I don't know that it's crucial," he said Tuesday.

"The financial community knows that TVA is unique," he said. "I think our bond rating is based on the TVA board's ability to raise rates rather quickly if they're needed without having to go through public service commissions."

TVA waited until the July-September quarter in both fiscal 1977 and 1978 for the past two rate jumps, partly on the theory that a larger increase then could be carried over to the next fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

"I recognize the criticism that we ended up with rather sizable rate increases," Freeman said. "I think they (the power staff) are obligated under the rules to come in Thursday with an entire picture for next year."

TVA provides electricity to 8 million residents in Tennessee and parts of Alabama, Kentucky, Mississippi, Georgia, Virginia and North Carolina.

Guzman Becomes Dominican Head

By ELOY O. AGUILAR
Associated Press Writer
SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) —

Bolstered by U.S. backing, landowner-businessman Antonio Guzman becomes president of the Dominican Republic today in the island country's first peaceful transfer of power to an opposition party.

Twenty-one gun salvos boomed early this morning as the ceremonies began in the capital on the Caribbean.

More than 600 dignitaries were expected, among them Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance to head a U.S. delegation including Ambassador Andrew Young and baseball great Hank Aaron.

There were no indications of any special security arrangements. But Santo Domingo was cleaner than it has been in months after a scrubbing and sweeping by special crews.

Guzman was to be sworn in by the president of the Senate, of which his opponents retained control in the election May 16, and then was to attend services at the Santo Domingo Cathedral.

Guzman says his biggest worry will be the shaky economy and that he will try to increase the national income and avoid a devaluation of the Dominican peso. The economy has been hit by the low price of sugar, the country's largest export, and the high price of oil, its biggest import.

U.S. support for Guzman, 67, and his Revolutionary Dominican Party was demonstrated when President Carter put pressure on military officers who attempted a coup by stopping the counting of votes in the presidential election when President Joaquin Balaguer, seeking a third term, fell behind.

The count resumed after Carter warned of possible economic reprisals if the military disrupted the electoral process. Final returns gave the presidency and control of the lower house of Congress to Guzman's party but a majority in the Senate to Balaguer's Reformist Party.

On Tuesday, Lt. Gen. Dennis McAuliffe, commander of the U.S. Southern Command, called on Guzman, and the call was interpreted as a warning to the Dominican military not to make another coup attempt.

Over $50,000 Is Unclaimed

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service has $52,000 in unclaimed tax refund checks that it would like to send out to North Carolina taxpayers, if the IRS could locate the recipients of the money.

The problem is that the persons who are entitled to the refunds may no longer live in the state.

"We've tried to reach these people in the past by letter, telephone and through the media," said Glenn Jones, public affairs officer with the Greensboro district IRS office.

"We've exhausted every effort. Most people moved away without leaving a forwarding address."

The refund checks range in size from $15 to $1,000 and date from 1976 back to 1972, Jones said. He said the IRS will not have a list of unclaimed 1977 checks until this fall.

"We'll hold onto a check as long as there's a chance a person will claim it," Jones said. If the IRS finds a person has died without leaving instructions about the refund, the check goes into the state's general treasury.

Persons who want to claim refunds must give the IRS their name and address as they appear on the original return, their actual name and address if different, their social security number, the type of form filed, the amount of refund claimed and their signature. The information should be sent to the Internal Revenue Service Center in Memphis, Tenn.

Hunt Testifies On Police Aid

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt Wednesday told a congressional subcommittee that federal aid to local police agencies should be channeled through state governments.

Hunt was in Washington to testify before the Senate Judiciary subcommittee on criminal laws and procedures, which is considering legislation reauthorizing the federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration. The LEAA distributes law enforcement grants to the states.

"Any reauthorization proposal for LEAA should clearly indicate in its declaration and throughout its parts that states have the primary responsibility through our federal system to control crime and improve our criminal justice systems," Hunt said in a statement released by his office in Raleigh.

"I recognize there is a desire by some high-crime-area cities and counties to want direct funding without state coordination of planning," he added. "But the high-crime areas include precisely the cities and counties with which the state needs most to have coordinated planning."

Hunt also urged that LEAA grants to the states be given with as few strings attached as possible.

"Different states have different needs and priorities, as do different cities and counties," Hunt said.

FORECAST

Until Thursday

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecast for Wednesday until early Thursday predicts rain for New York and most of the New England states. Rain is also in the forecast for parts of Montana, Idaho and Wyoming. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press

A cold front moved across the middle of the nation during the night, producing intense thunderstorms from the Great Lakes region into Texas.

A tornado late Tuesday touched down 10 miles southwest of Shelby in western Michigan, destroying four homes and causing some injuries.

Another twister destroyed a barn near Crystal Lake in northeastern Illinois. Other twisters were reported southwest of Oshkosh, Wis., near Rapid City, Mich., and near Ralls, Texas.

Strong thunderstorms continued to move across the Great Lakes region early today.

Elsewhere, a few thunderstorms over parts of Florida dissipated during the night and showers spread from Washington and Oregon into Idaho and western Montana.

Cool, dry air moved into the northern and central Plains, bringing temperatures in the 50s. Warm, humid weather extended from the eastern third of the country into the Gulf Coast states.

The forecast called for scattered showers and thunderstorms from New York into the eastern half of the Great Lakes region.

Durham Board Criticizes Tests

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The Durham City Board of Education has voted 4-1 to criticize the state's plans to require North Carolina high school seniors to pass competency tests before they receive a diploma.

The board was divided along racial lines in its vote Monday night.

"I'll vote 'Yeah' on a specific list of complaints, but I won't vote on a generalized motion," said Harry E. Rodenhizer, the board's only white member.

Durham City School superintendent Dr. Ben Brooks, who is white, said he felt the board's action "may cause rethinking of the competency test legislation, probably in high places."

"But I don't think the action taken by the board last night will be unique to the Durham city system," Brooks said Tuesday. "I expect school boards statewide to weigh the legislation and decide what action, if any, to take."

Dr. Theodore Speigner, chairman of the Durham board, said he hoped the action will "start a groundswell of resistance" to plans for the tests from the state's 145 school systems and will convince the General Assembly that the current testing requirements are unfair to rising seniors who have been illprepared for the tests.

The testing law states that students who fail to pass the tests after four attempts will receive certificates of attendance rather than diplomas. In a trial run last February, 54 percent of all students and 84.7 percent of black students failed to achieve a grade of 70 percent on the tests, which will be given in November, has not been determined.

Meanwhile, the North Carolina Coalition for Quality Education praised the Durham board's action and urged other schools board to follow suit. The coalition was formed Saturday to organize a student boycott of the competency tests.

Dr. Frank Yeager, superintendent of Durham County schools and chairman of their state Annual Testing Commission, said he feels the public wants accountability on the part of the school systems. He said he believes opponents of the tests are hurting the students.

Yeager said the coalition was asking students "to sacrifice an awful lot by advocating a boycott of the tests." He said he would be surprised if a large number of Durham students boycott the tests.

Bradham Is Dead

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — Caleb D. Bradham, 72, an independent businessman who sold soft drink flavors through eastern North Carolina, died here Tuesday after a long illness. Funeral services will be 2 p.m. Thursday at the First Presbyterian Church.

Bradham was the son of the founder of Pepsi-Cola Co., the late C.D. Bradham Sr. He attended the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and Babson Park Business School in Wellesley, Mass., before joining Pepsi-Cola Co. in New York City.

After working for Pepsi-Cola for several years, he started his own business.

Surviving are his daughter, Mrs. William P. Bundy of Kimberly, Idaho; sister, Mrs. Mary Tucker of Edenton; and brother, Georg W. Bradham, of Greensboro.

Pope Paul VI issued his edict against artificial birth control in 1968.

Buttlegging Grows Thanks To Low Tax

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Nearly 1.2 billion packs of cigarettes were sold by retailers in North Carolina last year, but only about 740 million of them likely were inhaled in this tobacco state.

The rest, 38 percent, were taken to other states — by tourists who filled car trunks with cartons by the dozen while passing through the state with the lowest cigarette tax, or by smugglers who hauled cases by the hundreds in huge trucks and made staggering profits.

"Buttlegging" it is called, and it's big business. Law enforcement efforts to stop the trade are hampered by the legality of most sales here and by the difficulty of tracing the cigarettes once they get to high-tax states where resale is illegal.

The illicit industry has flourished because of simple economics — North Carolina, which manufactures 52 percent of the nation's cigarettes, pays homage to the economic importance of tobacco by levying the nation's lowest cigarette tax, two cents a pack.

It doesn't take many illegal sales to generate a profit when packs bought at those prices, or as little as $3.50 a carton, are resold in places like New York City, where the tax is 23 cents a pack, or Pennsylvania, where it is 18 cents, or Florida, where it is 17 cents.

"Anybody'd be foolish not to do it at those prices," said a cigarette dealer, one of hundreds along the main North-South routes. He asked not to be named for fear of the growing interest in smuggling by the FBI and officials here and in northern states.

"If you're paying $7 or $7.50 a carton in New York and see them here for $3.50, you'll get a year's supply and maybe call Uncle Bob and see if he wants some too," he said. "So you end up getting about 300 cartons and pretty soon you've paid for your vacation."

But investigations in other states say that smuggling is not just a tourist operation but is often run by organized crime figures.

Legislation now before Congress would make the interstate traffic a federal offense, giving the FBI jurisdiction in the trade. Another proposal would replace state cigarette taxes with a uniform federal tax, with a rebate to the states to compensate for lost tax revenues.

In New York, meanwhile, the State Assembly has passed a bill to reduce the state tax by one cent and eliminate the eight-cent New York City tax on cigarettes. The measure, which is stalled in the state Senate, is intended to reduce the smuggling.

The trade has meant an estimated $400 million in lost cigarette tax revenues for states other than North Carolina and, some fear, has given organized crime a foothold in legitimate businesses.

The cigarettes are resold at discounted prices on city black markets or are sold through legitimate retailers with fake state tax stamps.

"We think that clearly it's big business. Tourists are just a small part of it," says Milt Lopus, secretary of revenue in Pennsylvania, where three gangland-style slayings have been linked to cigarette smuggling in the past two years.

"It ranges from organized crime to individuals who just come down on their own and bring back a truckload. But we are seeing now that individual territory is being carved out here," he added.

Bulk cigarette sales are legal here, as long as North Carolina taxes are paid and the tax stamp affixed, and most cigarette stands will sell unlimited amounts, no questions asked. One investigator noted:

"There's no secret about it. One dealer said it'd cost $2,000 to fill a car, and he'd throw in a blanket to cover it up."

For big operators, a full truck might carry 60,000 cartons and, in Pennsylvania or New York, a smuggler could resell them with a 50 cent discount and still clear $1.30 or more a carton.

"You're just dealing with fantastic sums of money," said J. Phil Carlton, North Carolina secretary of crime control and public safety and the man in charge of the state's anti-smuggling efforts. "A $150,000 profit transaction is not unusual."

The trade has dramatically affected legitimate cigarette sales. A recent study by the North Carolina auditor's office, which estimated the amount of cigarettes going out of state, also found that based on taxes, 138 packs were sold for every person nationwide in 1977.

In North Carolina, however, per capita sale was 217 packs; in New York, it was 126 packs, and in Pennsylvania, 120 packs.

The state estimate says that of $19.5 million collected in cigarette taxes here last year, $8 million was from packs smoked elsewhere.

But North Carolina cigarette revenues have declined 10 percent in the past two years while smoking nationally has been on the rise, and some officials have credited crack-downs on the trade in other states. The state this year began a new campaign to cooperate with other states, mainly out of concern that failure to might damage support in Congress for the federal tobacco loan-price system.

Republican Chairman Demands Ingram Quit Insurance Post

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Republican Party Chairman Jackson F. Lee demanded Tuesday that Democratic Senate candidate John Ingram resign his post as state insurance commissioner, after accusing Ingram of campaigning at public expense.

Lee, speaking at a press conference here, also accused other "high echelon" insurance department officials of campaigning on state time for Ingram.

"Mr. Ingram has been abusing his position as insurance commissioner, traveling around the state and spending taxpayers' money," Lee said. "I feel Mr. Ingram should resign immediately as insurance commissioner while he is running."

A spokesman for Ingram denied that there has been any improper mixing of politics and state business by Ingram.

Lee read a letter he has written to the chairman of the state Personnel Commission asking for a probe into a complaint filed last week by Nancy Davis, an insurance department secretary.

Mrs. Davis filed a complaint alleging that she had been forced to perform political tasks for Ingram in the office of W. Kenneth Brown, deputy insurance commissioner.

Insurance department officials have denied the allegations.

"The insurance commissioner's office has become the elect Ingram campaign office," Lee said. "This is just the tip of the iceberg."

Lee did not name other insurance officials in his charges, but said he had "definitely verified information" that they were campaigning on state time for Ingram. He said a state Republican Party researcher has been hired and will try to document cases of campaigning on state time by Ingram's staff.

Ingram could not be reached for comment on Lee's charges, but Ingram's campaign manager called Lee's allegations "absolutely untrue." Webb said the Ingram campaign has paid his political travel expenses.

"John Ingram is insurance commissioner 24 hours a day," Webb said. "Even during the primary he was able to take care of his state duties."

Ramps To Be Build

City Manager Ed Wyatt announced that the city expects to begin construction soon on a handicap ramp at city hall.

Wyatt, noting that a great deal of interest has been expressed in a ramp, said that the project is being worked on by P. A. Averette, finance officer, Alton Warren, chief inspector, and Charlie Holliday, director of engineering.

The city manager reported that the city is planning to better utilize the lobby space at city hall for needed offices. He explained that the space for the Tax Office will be expanded to provide room and an office for the tax collector in order that he may talk confidentially with citizens.

The Personnel Office will be moved from the third floor to the first floor, it was mentioned, in order to better serve persons seeking employment and be more convenient to city personnel.

Wyatt said that the city's Public Works Department also plans to construct a handicap ramp at the intersection of

Easy Flags Are Flying Less Now

By LeROY POPE
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — The flag of convenience trend which has mushroomed so dramatically in ocean shipping since World War II will grow less rapidly in the years ahead, says the Liberian Shipowners Council, Ltd.

The council is composed of large American, European and Asian ship operators, particularly American oil companies. The Liberian flag fleet is the largest in the world although it dates only from 1949.

The council, of which Jeremy M. Smith is executive director, has issued a study giving the following reasons for forecasting that relatively fewer American and European owned ships will be registered under Liberian, Panamanian, Honduran or other flags from now on:

—Increased national protectionism around the world. More governments are changing their laws to offer incentives to their shipowners to register vessels under their own flags.

—The spectacular rise of "third world" fleets, such as those of Brazil, Hong Kong, South Korea. These are not flags of convenience. The ships are owned or chartered by nations of those countries. Brazil has become one of the world's top ship builders.

—Rate cutting by ships built, owned and operated by the communist bloc nations, which in turn forces cuts and rebates by western shipping lines whether they operate under their own national flags or flags of convenience.

—The general change in the nature of ocean shipping other than big tankers, to container ships and specialist ships, which may require more highly trained crews.

—Worldwide demands for higher and more costly safety and inspection standards for flag of convenience vessels. These demands grow out such oil spill disasters as the collision of the Liberian flag tankers Pacific Glory and Allegro in the English Channel in 1970, the Argo Merchant wreck off Nantucket shoals at the end of 1976, the collision of the tankers Venpet and Venoil, under charter to Gulf Oil, off the South African coast, last year the explosion of the Sansinema in Los Angeles harbor in December, 1976, and several others.

In addition, the Liberian Council conceded that the activity of the International Federation of Transport Workers ultimately may limit the use of flags of convenience by European shipowners. The ITWF is a federation of unions and, according to the Liberian Shipowners Council the main thrust of its activity is to compel European shipowners to hire European seamen no matter what flag their ships fly.

Two influential British periodicals that follow shipping closely, The Financial Times and Seatrade Magazine, appear to give considerable weight to the efforts to the ITWF to organize a European boycott of Liberian flag ships.

Insofar as the United States shipowners are concerned, the trend to flag of convenience operation is more likely to continue to grow. The Merchant Marine Act of 1936 requires that all U.S. flag shipping must be built in American yards and crewed only by American citizens. The earlier merchant marine acts of 1916 and 1920 leaned in this direction. The Liberian Shipowners Council study says this requirement raises the cost of U.S. flag ship operation to as much as three times that of foreign flag operation and that U.S. government subsidies cannot offset this.

The Liberian Shipowners Council, which includes such magnates as D.K. Ludwig, C.Y. Tung and the Onassis Estate and such petroleum giants as Exxon, Mobil, Shell, Gulf, Amoco and Conoco, is much exercised though over the bad images the Liberian flag has presented to the world because of the oil spill disasters of recent years.

The Council contends that these disasters are great exceptions that the safety standards of most of the vast Liberian flag fleet are equal to those of ships flying the Stars and Stripes and often superior to the standards of British ships. While pay for officers and crews on Liberian ships is below that maintained by American unions, the council contends that the scales are higher than those paid on many European and Asian flag ships.

The officers and crews of the Liberian flag ships are drawn from all over the world.

First Sign Issues Quiet Warning

By JOHN PLATTER

UMTALI, Rhodesia (UPI) — Bill and Doreen Stanbury are a jolly English couple who would not alarm anyone unnecessarily. But the first sign as you check into their quaint White Horse Inn advises you "the safest area in the hotel is in the passage between rooms 2 and 8."

"Just in case we get rocketed," says Bill, a retired bank manager. "Our cocktails can be pretty fiery too. Come and have a drink, it's not that bad."

The only other — involuntary — guest at the once-thriving pub that surveys rolling, forested hills towards Mozambique and the hidden guerrilla hideouts, is a police reservist in battle fatigues.

"To ensure your safety," he smiles, cradling a rifle with telescopic sights attached. The four of us had a swell party around the fire that night, barely noticing the sporadic puff-duff of exploding landmines.

"Probably wild game trying to cross the minefields," said Bill. "There's the international border down the gorge and its stiff with mines to keep out the guerrillas."

The Queen's Hall in this frontier town packs 500 people and last Thursday it was jammed with mourners for the funerals of 12 British missionaries massacred in a secluded forest glade a few miles away.

The congregation sang "The Lord is my Shepherd," led by an organ echoing in the big hall. The coffins were lined up below a dias, surrounded by wreaths of green and yellow.

A day later, many of the same folk filed into Queen's Hall again. It was the start of Aloe Week, a festive time named after Rhodesia's flame-colored succulent flower.

Soldiers in black ties, with their coiffured ladies, wine and dined and danced until the wee hours, doing a two-step shuffle to whatever the band gave them, rock-n-roll, jazz, the boogie-woogie.

Mayor Doug Reed was there for both occasions, crowning Miss Aloe at the ball, invoking the Old Testament "eye-for-an-eye" philosophy at the funeral.

"Anyone who thinks we'll be cowed doesn't know his Rhodesian," growled the burly mayor.

Albert Mugabe is a 34-year-old trade unionist in Salisbury, a difficult occupation in Rhodesia. He's the publicity secretary of the Zimbabwe Trade Union Congress. He also stays in casual touch with his elder brother, Robert, the head of the guerrilla forces based in neighboring Mozambique and who, adding to the proliferating ambiguity that surrounds the Rhodesian conflict, is supposedly both a devout Jesuit and an ardent Marxist.

We're having coffee together — he says it's rare for him to share a drink with a white man in a white-patronized hotel — and I ask how come in his travelling around the country he feels immune from the frequent and apparently random road ambushes. "The guerrillas don't kill blacks indiscriminately. It's the whites they kill, indiscriminately," he replied.

The Rhodesian war has produced its own vocabulary, but it is surprisingly slim. A "terr" is a terrorist and terrs "rev" or attack a place. "Careful you don't get revved," is a frequent farewell. A dead terr is a "floppe" and shooting or killing is "slotting," which means when you go off to war you're off "floppe slotting."

However, it's a terrorist war in which the roadside ambushes are laid at random and, apart from running the gauntlet of fire, the most effective way to save your life is to return the fire. So most reporters no longer hesitate to arm themselves whenever moving in dangerous areas — quite different from bearing arms in combat.

The only "newsman" killed in the Rhodesian conflict so far was a British peer, Lord Cecil, who was armed when he and a colleague accompanied a patrol that made contact with guerrillas.

Correspondents — and the odd plucky tourist who still comes to Rhodesia — can hire mine-proof vehicles. But the dilemma then is that you don't have the necessary speed to accelerate through the ambushes.

The Club at Wedza in central Rhodesia can be a mournful place of an evening. Most of the farming folk who gather there have been hurt one way or another by the war.

Britain and the west are habitually run down for "selling out to the blacks and the communists." But the settlers try to carry on. Recently, Nigel Thorncroft decided what the hell and fulfilled a 35-year dream and built a new house — with a duck sanctuary.

Other pastimes can be trickier. The heavy guerrilla presence makes fishing a little dangerous in the rivers nearby.

"So one of us fishes while two stand guard," he says. "You never know when the blighters are going to put in an appearance." A friendly Scots lady, a Rhodesian resident of 30 years, was making herself a mid-morning cup of tea and a ham sandwich at the Salisbury headquarters of Premier Ian Smith's Rhodesian Front.

It was a cold day and she was muffled up in gray scarves.

Apropos of very little, she said miscegenation was the "worst sin a Christian can commit." Then she fished out a 3rd Century B.C. map by Herodotus and traced the ancient boundaries of Ethiopia.

She quoted from the bible: "From beyond the Rivers of Ethiopia my suppliants, even the daughter of my dispersed, shall bring mine offering."

"You see," she said. "South of the Zambezi is ours. It's not for these black heathens. The bible calls them beasts in the field, you know. You wait, God will sort all this out."

Did that mean she would be staying on?

"I don't know. I'll cross that bridge when I get to it," said the friendly lady.

House Lounge Unusual Site For Grain Deal

By STEVENSON FORSYTHE
JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The House Lounge of the Capitol is most often the site of trading by members of the appropriations committee. It recently was used for a more unusual purpose — world trade.

While a dozen representatives of grain companies watched, a member of a delegation from Taiwan read bids for what amounted to purchases of $27 million in corn and soybeans. Surrounded by murals showing the agricultural base of the state's economy, the 20-member delegation checked off two more items on its sizeable shopping list: 104,000 metric tons of corn and 54,000 metric tons of soybeans. The stop in Missouri was part of a tour in July through 15 states and the District of Columbia. By the time they headed for home, the Taiwanese had spent some $300 million for grain and $450 million for industrial products. H. K. Shao, director general of the Taiwan Board of Foreign Trade and head of the delegation, said there were several reasons for the mission. Taiwan is the 10th largest trading partner of the United States, he said, but last year the balance of trade was $5.6 billion in favor of his country. "There is evidently room for you to improve your share," he said. "This trip of course will not offset the trade imbalance, but it will help." As well as the buying mission — part of what the Taiwanese call a 'Buy More From America' drive — Taiwan has changed its trade restrictions to favor the United States. "We specifically lifted the ban on import of autos," said Robert C. J. Shih, Taiwan's counsel general in the Midwest. "Some countries were not happy with that." His country, Shih said, also has cut tariffs on household appliances and citrus fruit.

"We really want to balance trade," Shih said. "We are not doing business just for business' sake." Another reason for the mission, said Shao, is Taiwan's need for grain. "The Republic of China is one of the most important buyers of grain in the free world," said Shao. "The calorie intake of my people is the highest in the Far East; more than 2,700 calories per day." That is the same amount recommended for an American man in his prime. The Taiwanese expect to sign contracts on this trip 876,000 metric tons of barley, wheat, soybeans and corn. A metric ton is about 2,200 pounds. They also are buying cotton and plan to negotiate a cotton contract for 1979. A third reason for the trip, Shao said, is $20 billion in industrial projects his country is working on. They include power generation, petroleum production, telecommunications, and mining. For these, he said, machinery and parts are needed. "We sincerely hope American businessmen will make more effort to supply as much as possible," he said. The Taiwanese were in the United States earlier this year, spending $268 million on agricultural and industrial products. The success of that trip led to the present mission, and a third tour is planned this fall.

Farm Scene

By SAM UZZELL
Assistant Agricultural Extension Agent
Late planted corn in Pitt County and eastern North Carolina is now under attack by the fall armyworm, Spodoptera frugiperda. Last summer, the fall armyworm severely damaged many crops, especially corn and related grass type crops such as milo or turf. This year, the armyworms seem most apparent in late planted corn, or corn that is now silking and the ears filling out. The fall armyworm is generally a foliage feeder, but can damage corn in a manner similar to the corn earworm. The corn earworm attacks mainly corn ears through the silk end and eats its way into and around the kernels. It is found most often when the sweet corn is shucked and a worm surrounded by brown, gelatinous insect excrement is discovered. The fall armyworm differs slightly in appearance from the corn earworm. It has a black head with an inverted "Y" between the eyes. According to "Destructive and Useful Insects" by Doctors Mefealf, Flint and Mefealf, "Its body coloration varies from light tan or green to almost black, with three yellowish-white thin lines down the back from head to tail; on the sides next to the yellow lines is a wider, wavy yellow stripe spotted with red." By contrast, the corn earworm has a light brown or tan head and has alternating light and dark bands from head to tail and usually has a line that runs down the middle of the back. Its feeding location in the tip of the corn ear is also a good identifying character. There is a range of color variation from light green or pink to brown or nearly black. When either of these two insects no longer have succulent ears of corn to feed on, they will move to other crops that are still green and growing. The adults of both species are sandy or brownish moths that fly mainly at night or dusk.

The adults will move from mature and drying corn to home gardens, soybeans, peanuts, cotton, vegetables and grasses. The fall armyworm derives its name primarily from its habit of moving en masse while in the larval stages from one crop to wherever more food is available. These larval can consume enormous amounts of foliage at an alarming rate. Control of either insect is best accomplished when they are small and feeding outside the plant. They are not controllable when they have entered the ear. For severe infestations in field corn, methomyl (Lannate or Nudrin) should be applied with adequate water to ensure good coverage. Sevin can be sprayed or dusted on sweet corn. If the corn has many holes in the husk and ear due to worm feeding, the build up of aflatoxin is a good possibility.

On the later trip, Shao said, about $600 million will be spent, most of it on grain. The itinerary of that trip has not been planned, but Missouri officials want the Taiwanese to come back. No one was sure what portion of the grain purchased at the meeting in the lounge would come from Missouri, but Jack Runyan, state director of agriculture, estimated it would be as much as 80 percent. One of Runyan's assistants said even if the percentage is lower, Missouri will benefit. "Any time grain is shipped out of the United States, it's going to help midwestern grain prices," said Jack Ryan, the state agriculture agency's coordinator of international marketing.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened slightly higher today, continuing a rebound begun near the close of the previous session.

The Dow Jones average of 3021.21 issues opened up 3.64 at 890.77, and advances held a 5-3 edge over declines on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts said there was still concern over the state of the dollar, which eased slightly in foreign exchange trading today, but stayed above the record lows it set Tuesday. Those lows drove the market down Tuesday, but a late buying surge cut the losses at the end of the session.

Early stock prices included Allied Chemical, 36 1/2, up 1/2; Philip Morris, up 1/4 at 73 1/2; Exxon, ahead 1/2 at 47 1/2; and Texaco, off 1/2 to 26 1/2.

On Tuesday, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial fell 1.04 to 887.13.

Declines outnumbered advances by a little less than 3-2.

Big Board volume came to 29.76 million shares against 32.32 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks fell .08 to 58.48.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index dropped .34 to 161.56.

Here is a summary of market prices and conditions of North Carolina farm products as reported by the Federal-State Market News service of the N. C. Department of Agriculture:

and Capitol police officers patrolled the corridor in front of the hearing room.

Only Lane, news reporters and photographers and 30 spectators invited and screened in advance were allowed to enter the 200-seat room. They were required to pass through metal-detection devices and to allow officers to search briefcases and purses.

Ray's appearance before the committee comes after an 18 month investigation of King's murder in Memphis on April 4, 1968. Committee members seemed doubtful, however, that Ray's account could settle the mysteries of the case.

He has said he knew Raoul only by his first name and was involved in a narcotics and weapons smuggling racket with him. In some accounts, Ray has claimed Raoul framed him for the murder of King.

Because he pleaded guilty, Ray was never tried on the charge of killing King. Arguing that he was forced by his lawyers to enter the plea, he has petitioned the courts for years to grant him a trial.

Despite the past failures, Ray still seeks the trial and has won support from others who believe the fact-finding nature of a courtroom could establish whether there was an assassination conspiracy.

Lane repeated that argument at a news conference Tuesday. Given the variations in Ray's accounts, Lane was asked why Americans should believe Ray's committee testimony.

"The American people should not believe James Earl Ray," he replied. "But they should give James Earl Ray a trial and let the jury decide."

The Rev. Jesse Jackson and other civil rights leaders asked the Justice Department to support moves for a trial but Deputy Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti promised only to examine seriously any new evidence turned up by the committee or anyone else.

The committee heard testimony Tuesday from Dr. Michael Baden, New York City's chief medical examiner and spokesman for a panel of three pathologists hired by the committee to review the autopsy findings and conduct new medical tests.

Firestone Must Give Documents

WASHINGTON (AP) — Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. must give the government documents it says it needs in its safety investigation of the company's steel-belted radial 500 tire, a federal judge says.

U.S. District Judge Thomas Flannery on Tuesday gave Firestone 21 days to turn the documents over to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

The safety agency had asked the company for consumer complaint letters, warranty adjustment reports, the results of Firestone's investigations of accidents purportedly caused by failure of the tire, papers on the factual basis for lawsuits and other documents.

Firestone refused to furnish the papers and asked the court to dismiss the agency's petition or to transfer the case to a court in the northern district of Ohio. The company is based in Akron.

The safety agency recommended on July 7 that Firestone recall about 13 million of the steel-belted radial 500 tires after analyzing more than 6,000 consumer complaints alleging "more than 14,000 individual tire failures, 29 deaths, more than 50 injuries and hundreds of property-damage accidents."

$Million Market Day

The Greenville Tobacco Market recorded another million dollar day Tuesday as prices continued steady.

J. N. Bryan, sales supervisor of the Tobacco Board of Trade, said that the market sold 1,114,642 pounds for $1,392,840, an average of $124.96 per hundred pounds.

Top practical price paid Tuesday was $1.55 per pound, Bryan said, as offerings consisted of ten percent cutters, 70 percent primings and lugs, and 20 percent non-descript tobacco.

Stabilization receipts accounted for 11.31 percent of total sales, he reported.

Tuesday's sale brought season totals to 8,615,737 pounds sold for $10,417,984, an average of $120.92 per hundred pounds.

Newsprint Hike Not General One

By KRISTIN GOFF
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite a pending increase in the cost of newsprint announced by one major producer, industry observers see little prospect of an immediate industry-wide move in the same direction.

Bowater Sales Co., an Greenville, Conn. marketing subsidiary of Bowater Corp. Ltd., announced early this month that it would raise the average price of its standard 30-pound weight newsprint by $15 a ton to $335 for U.S. customers on Oct. 1.

But so far it appears to be alone in that decision.

Some major competitors have ruled out price hikes for at least the balance of the year. Others say they are studying the situation.

"We made that decision based on increased manufacturing costs. It was thoroughly reviewed then. We're going ahead with it," said a Bowater company official, who asked that his name not be used.

Bowater Corp. Ltd., a London-based holding company with mills in Canada and the United States, is ranked as one of the five largest suppliers of newsprint to the United States.

Such pricing decisions in the past have been followed by an industry-wide move. The latest widespread hike last spring saw average prices increase by $15 to about $320 a ton.

But sentiment this time appears far from universal.

"We have no intention of increasing the price of our newsprint before the end of the year even though we are feeling the cost pressure as most newsprint manufacturers are," said Denise Dallaire, a spokeswoman for Consolidated-Bathurst of Montreal.

Abitibi-Price Sales Co., a New York marketing subsidiary for another major Canadian producer, and MacMillan Bloedel of Vancouver, B.C., also reported no immediate plans to increase their prices.

Canadian manufacturers provide about 70 percent of the newsprint used by U.S. newspapers and have been filling the gap created by strikes that have closed a number of plants in the Pacific Northwest and halted production at Great Northern Company's newsprint facility in Millinocket, Maine.

The military Order of the Purple Heart was founded in the U.S. in 1782.

Blazers Haven't Decided To Give Bill Walton Up

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A lawyer for the Portland Trail Blazers says Bill Walton rejected team officials' efforts to talk him out of trying to leave the National Basketball Association team.

"We analyzed with him his complaints and tried to dissuade him from his views, but he was intractable," attorney Frank Rothman said Tuesday. "We finally decided that under the circumstances we'd attempt to see if we could arrange a trade."

But Rothman emphasized that the team still hasn't decided for certain to give Walton up, only to "attempt to work out a trade."

The Trail Blazers had announced Aug. 4 that they would try to trade the 6-foot-11 center at his request, but team officials had not, until now, discussed specific reasons.

Walton, after meeting with officials from four National Basketball Association teams, decided Sunday he wants to play for the Golden State Warriors.

Warriors General Manager Scotty Stirling began telephone negotiations Tuesday with Stu Inman, director of player personnel for the Blazers. Team officials say they want a deal that would leave them with a player or players to compensate for Walton's loss.

"We haven't decided to give him up," Rothman said. "We decided to attempt to work out a trade...He will be under contract to Portland until we can make a trade that is acceptable to us...It is for us in Portland to decide what trade we want to make, not for Walton."

He said Walton's contract with the Blazers, which has a year to go, has a provision that prevents the team from trading him without his permission.

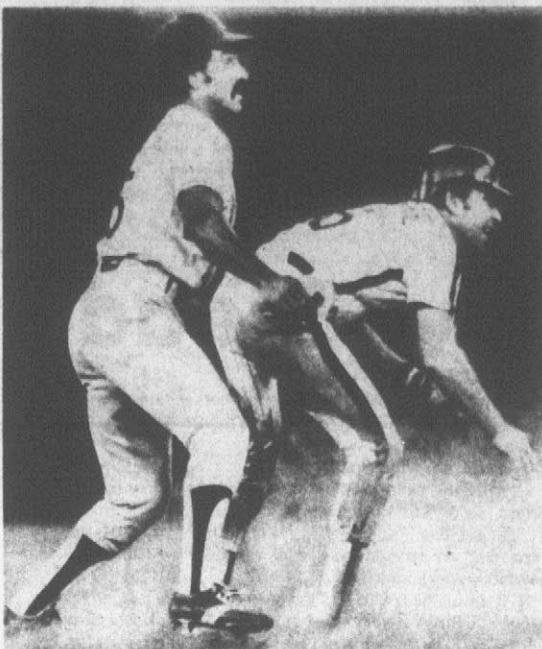

Rothman said that when he went to Chicago with Blazers owner Larry Weinberg Aug. 1, they had no idea Walton wanted to be traded. Rothman said he thought the meeting with Walton and his agents Jack Scott and John Basset was for the purpose of renegotiating Walton's contract.

"It was quite shocking," Rothman said in a telephone interview from his Los Angeles office. "When we arrived there Bill Walton had a prepared statement that he read to us...In the statement he indicated he was insisting that he be traded and would not play for the Portland Trail Blazers again."

Basset said Walton, 25, may get a five-year contract with Golden State that would let the Warriors pay Walton no money until he begins playing for them.

Walton's left foot is in a cast for a break suffered last season. His agents have indicated he thinks the Blazers rushed him back into action too soon after an earlier foot injury.

Rothman said Walton told the Chicago meeting he had reflected on the Blazers handling of his injury and "did not think it was good medical treatment."

Looking Ahead

Los Angeles Dodger infielder Dave Lopes (1) and Phillie Ted Sizemore both direct their attention to first base after Lopes forced Sizemore out at second in the fifth inning of their game Tuesday night. Lopes' throw was not in time for the double play, but the Dodgers won 5-4. (AP Laserphoto)

Casanova: Drugs Were Common

CINCINNATI (AP) — Former All-Pro safety Tommy Casanova, who recently retired after six National Football League seasons with the Cincinnati Bengals, says players ate amphetamines like candy during his college days at Louisiana State University.

Casanova, 10 months from graduating from medical school, made the remarks Tuesday in a copyrighted interview with Tom Callahan, a columnist for Combined News Service.

He later told The Associated Press that the practice of distributing pep pills in pro football and college ranks is not as widespread now as it was a few years ago.

"We were given little pills. Evidently, everyone in the NCAA was doing that. I didn't know what they were. Here, good luck," they'd say. We took them like candy," he said in the article.

Casanova, who played at LSU between 1968 and 1971, said "football is a game where, if you can't take the pain, you can't play."

Smith Bats In Winner

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

You can always second-guess the manager...and Philadelphia Manager Danny Ozark certainly left himself wide open to criticism.

With the score tied at 4-4 in the seventh inning, the Los Angeles Dodgers had a runner on third with one out and the switch-hitting Reggie Smith facing the right-handed Dick Ruthven of the Phillies.

"I thought they'd walk me in that situation," said Smith.

So did everyone else in Veterans Stadium Tuesday night. Normally, baseball logic would dictate an intentional walk to the Dodger outfielder, allowing Ruthven to face the right-handed Ron Cey.

But that wasn't Ozark's logic.

"We had something we wanted to do," said Ozark. "Only Ruthven didn't put the pitches where he wanted to. He did jam Smith — he didn't hit it that hard."

Smith, who has earlier hit a homer, did get the ball far enough out of the infield for a sacrifice fly and the winning run in the Dodgers' 5-4 triumph.

Reds 4, Pirates 3

Dan Driessen's solo home run in the 10th boosted Cincinnati over Pittsburgh in a game marked by the ejections of Pirate pitcher Bert Blyleven and Manager Chuck Tanner. Driessen's two-out homer, his 15th of the season, came off loser Ed Woodson, 3-6. Doug Bair, 6-4, got the victory. Blyleven, the Pirate starter, led 3-1 through six innings, allowing only two hits. But he yielded his second unearned run of the night in the seventh and both he and Tanner were ejected for hotly protesting a balk call by rookie umpire Joe West.

Expos 4, Giants 3

Ellis Valentine smashed a two-out, solo home run in the bottom of the ninth to lead Montreal over San Francisco. Hal Dues, 5-4, earned the victory with one inning of relief pitching. Charlie Williams, 1-3, came on in the ninth and surrendered Valentine's home run.

Cardinals 11, Astros 5

George Hendrick led a 17-hit St. Louis attack with a three-run homer and a pair of singles as the Cardinals trounced Houston. Hendrick's homer, his 13th, put the Cardinals on top 3-0 in the first inning and St. Louis went on to its ninth victory in 11 games.

Aurelio Lopez, 3-1, a 29-year old Mexican-born rookie, pitched the first seven innings for the victory. Floyd Bannister, 3-7, the first of four Houston pitchers, allowed St. Louis' first five runs and took the loss.

Mets 3, Padres 1

Craig Swan and Skip Lockwood combined on a five-hitter while Steve Henderson and Lee Mazzilli delivered run-scoring hits in the eighth inning to break a 1-1 tie and lead New York over San Diego.

Henderson's double delivered Elliott Maddox, who had walked and advanced to second on a sacrifice fly. Padres lefthander Randy Jones, 10-11, retired Willie Montanez, but then walked John Stearns intentionally before Mazzilli singled in another run.

Swan, 6-5, pitched 81-3 strong innings before needing relief help from Lockwood.

Cubs 12, Braves 8

Bill Buckner drove in three runs with a single and a double and Bobby Murcer and Dave Kingman slugged consecutive homers in the sixth inning to lead Chicago over Atlanta.

Buckner's two-run double capped a five-run rally against Atlanta starter Larry McWilliams in the second inning and his RBI single in the fourth climaxed a three-run uprising as the Cubs overcame a 7-0 deficit.

Noah Clark Hurts Hand

Junior defensive tackle Noah Clark was sporting a cast on his right hand in East Carolina University's pre-season football practice yesterday. Clark cracked a bone in his hand in a workout on Monday.

The injury hasn't slowed up the 6-1, 225-pounder, however, and he has been proceeding in practice as usual.

The Pirates began their drills on Monday and have been going through three-day practice sessions without pads this week.

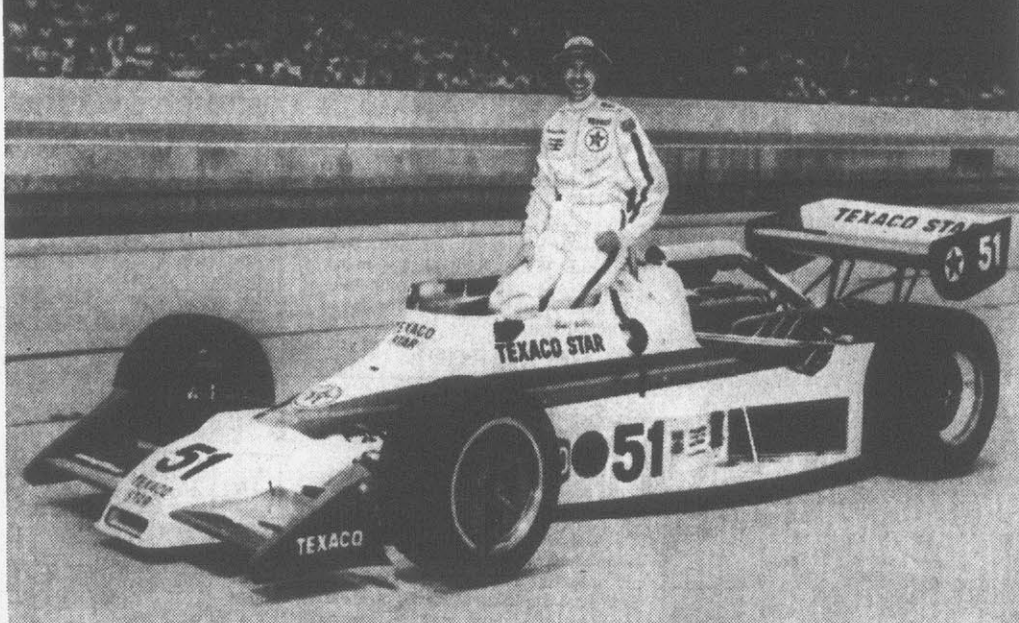

These sessions are devoted mainly to conditioning and learning plays and formations.

Tomorrow, the team will dress out in full gear for the first time and begin a series of two-day workouts.

Preparing For Bout

Mahaffey Seeks Third Straight

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — John Mahaffey, who has changed from a hard-luck guy to a major force in golf, goes after a rare third consecutive victory this week in the $300,000 Westchester Classic.

"This is hard to believe," Mahaffey said after a practice round over the hilly, 6,603-yard, par-71 Westchester Country Club course, the heat-damaged site of the rich event that begins a 72-hole run Thursday.

"It's unbelievable, but I'm loving every minute of it," said Mahaffey, who won the PGA National Championship and the Pleasant Valley Classic in his last two starts.

South African Gary Player became the ninth man in golfing history to win three consecutive tournaments earlier this season.

Putt Putt Results

Junior Knox carded an 81 for 18 holes to win the Tuesday night amateur tournament at the Greenville Putt Putt golf course. Second place went to Irving Bennett with an 83, while Earl White finished third with an 84 and Johnny Carrow followed with an 85.

All scores were handicap adjusted. Curtis Ebbs had the lowest gross total with an 88. The Putt Putt Amateur City Championship will be held next Monday and Tuesday nights with three rounds to be played each night. Course number one will be played Monday and course number two will be played Tuesday.

The entry fee for the tournament is $5. Practice times are 6-8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday with tournament tee-off times at 8 p.m. on both nights.

Ken Paramore is the defending champion.

Tingelhoff's Game String Will End

BY TOM CANAVAN
AP Sports Writer

Mick Tingelhoff didn't lose his job Tuesday like a lot of other National Football League players, but he did learn that something he has built for 17 years will come crumbling down Friday.

After 17 years in the NFL, Tingelhoff will miss a game. The 38-year-old center was hospitalized Monday with an infection in his leg. He was kicked two weeks ago in the Vikings' preseason opener against Washington.

Tingelhoff reportedly is responding to antibiotics, but is definitely out of the Dolphin contest Friday, which will snap a string of 328 consecutive preseason, regular season and post-season games in which he has played.

But Tingelhoff will return, which can't be said of a number of other NFL aspirants and veterans who were cut Tuesday as teams reached the mandatory 60-player limit.

Veterans Lydell Mitchell of the Baltimore Colts and Mike Kadish of the Buffalo Bills were among the familiar names who were at least temporarily dropped.

Mitchell and Kadish, both involved in contract disputes, were placed on their clubs' reserve lists, an administrative category for players who have not reported to their training camps. Should either player settle his problem and show up, the clubs would have to drop another player.

Two other veterans were among the Colts and Bills cuts. Baltimore released six players, including kick return specialist Howard Satterwhite, while veteran defensive tackle Marvin Upshaw was among the eight players dropped by Buffalo.

The Bills also were active in the trade market, swapping veteran tight end Paul Seymour to Pittsburgh and sending running back Stan Wintfrey to Detroit. In exchange, the Bills obtained wide receiver Frank Lewis from the Steelers and an undisclosed draft choice from the Lions.

Seymour was Buffalo's No. 1 draft choice in 1973. His best receiving season was 1976 when he caught 16 passes for 169 yards. Last year, he was used mostly in running situations and caught just two passes.

Lewis, a seven-year veteran, has caught 128 passes for 2,086 yards and 16 touchdowns in his NFL career.

In another cut day trade, New Orleans swapped veteran defensive back Chuck Crist to San Francisco for linebacker Skip Vanderbunt. Crist was one of the Saints' leading defensive players last season with 102 tackles, while Vanderbunt has started every game for the past three seasons with the 49ers.

New Orleans also waived six players including veteran wide receiver Don Herrmann.

In one of a plethora of releases, the Philadelphia Eagles released 15 players, including Larry Marshall, the leading punt returner in the National Football Conference last season, and veteran punter Spike Jones.

The Los Angeles Rams, fresh from the short reign of George Allen, announced the retirement of former Pro Bowl cornerback Robert James, while placing quarterback Carlos Brown on waivers and trading backup center Rick Nuzum to Green Bay for an undisclosed future draft choice.

The Rams also placed quarterback Mark Manges, their fourth-round draft choice from Maryland, and offensive tackle Charles Peal of Indiana, a 10th-round draft pick, on waivers.

Allen's old organization, the Washington Redskins, signed veteran quarterback Billy Kilmer to a two-year contract, while the Denver Broncos shipped punter Mike Burke to the New England Patriots for an undisclosed future draft choice.

The New York Giants waived

10 players and placed veteran offensive lineman Tom Mullen on the voluntarily retired list.

Mullen has been troubled by a series of shoulder and knee injuries in his four NFL seasons and played only eight games last year. Among those placed on waivers were running back Gordon Bell, a third-year player from Michigan State, and second-year tackle Bill Kahl-Winter from Princeton.

Green Bay placed quarterback Lynn Dickey on its reserve list. Dickey has been slow to recover from a broken leg suffered last season. The Packers also dropped veteran wide receiver Ollie Smith, who caught 22 passes for 357 yards last season, and asked waivers on veteran linebacker Fred Carr, who has been involved in a dispute over possible knee surgery.

Carr has requested the operation but the club has refused and General Manager Coach Bart Starr said the linebacker had "failed to honor verbal commitments and made a mockery of our conditioning and training program."

Atlanta cut 10 players, including No. 6 draft choice Rodney Parker, a wide receiver from Tennessee State, while the New York Jets dropped six players, including second-year wide receiver Shelton Diggs.

NFL teams must cut their rosters to 50 players by next Tuesday and to 45 before the start of the regular season.

Vendors To Meet

Any boys or girls interested in selling concessions at East Carolina University's home football games this season are asked to attend a meeting in front of Ficklen Stadium from 2-3 p.m. Saturday August 19.

Volleyball Meeting Set

Any girls who plan to play volleyball at North Pitt High School this year should report to the Bethel Clinic at 4 p.m. Thursday, August 17, for physicals.

Volleyball practice will begin on Monday, August 21, at 7 p.m. at the school gymnasium.

Southpaws Prove Steady

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Left-handers have a reputation for outlandishness rather than consistency. But four American League southpaw pitchers were incredibly steady Tuesday night.

The New York Yankees' Ron Guidry became the winningest pitcher in the majors with his 17th victory, a four-hit, 6-0 shutout of Oakland.

Not to be outdone, California's Frank Tanana posted his 16th triumph of the year, a six-hitter, as the Angels beat Boston 5-2.

Down in Texas, Jon Matlack threw a seven-hitter in out-dueling the White Sox' Steve Stone, a right-hander who hurled a two-hitter, in the Rangers' 1-0 triumph.

Yankees 6, A's 0

Guidry, 17-2, took the American League lead in strikeouts with 191 after fanning nine in recording his sixth shutout of the season, the best in the league. His phenomenal 1.79 earned run average leads the majors. The second-year major leaguer is 3-0 against Oakland this season and has allowed one run in 261-3 inning vs. the A's. Reggie Jackson smashed his 17th homer run with two on in the fifth.

Angels 5, Red Sox 2

Whatever magic Guidry works on the A's, Tanana has been using against the Red Sox in Anaheim. Tanana had a string of 47 scoreless innings against Boston at home snapped in fifth inning but still managed a seven-strikeout, complete game

Steinbrenner Long Mulled Ad

An AP Sports Analysis
By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — The tube, the tube — the inevitable tube.

George Steinbrenner, the New York Yankees' unpredictable boss, wrestled with his conscience for nine months before finally saying "yes" to the now celebrated beer commercial with his fiery on-again, off-again, on-again manager, Billy Martin.

The commercial, briefly destined for the cutting room floor, was saved when Martin, who resigned his job under duress on July 24, was dramatically rehired four days later, effective 1980, at the Yankees' Old Timers Game.

Now you can catch the 30 seconds of titillating, if ironic, dialogue on any of the networks — and join us all in wondering what went on behind the scenes.

"They approached me nine months ago with the idea," Steinbrenner explained. "I was reluctant. I wasn't sure about the propriety of an owner doing something like that with his manager."

"Then Cliff Robertson and Dina Merrill came to me with a story about the Mission Society in the Bronx. This is a project dedicated to motivating young people. It gets them involved. The mission was about to close for the summer for lack of funds.

"I asked myself, 'Why not do the commercial and give the money over to the mission?' I knew I would be criticized. But I didn't care. I felt the kids were more important than my reputation."

So the commercial was filmed.

The bizarre aspect of this little tete-a-tete is that it was filmed July 14, 10 days before Martin called his boss a "convict" and quit before he could be fired. It was almost prophetic.

McCann-Erickson, the advertising agency out of whose head the whole thing came, said the film was still in the editing stage when Martin resigned. Miller Brewing Co. said it wasn't sure whether the commercial could have been salvaged, but Martin's sudden rehiring rendered the problem moot.

"I think the thing would have been shelved out of courtesy to both me and Billy," said Steinbrenner. "I think business people ought to do more for kids."

Is National League Ready For Designated Hitter?

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Is the National League ready to lower its resistance to establishment of the designated hitter rule at each major league level? It's possible, but no more than verbal support for the rule first adopted by the American League in 1973 was expected today during the summer meeting of owners and general managers.

Bob Wirz, director of information for the office of baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, said a vote on the designated hitter was not on the formal agenda of the joint major league ownership meeting.

"It's possible that it could be kicked around at the league level, but it wouldn't be acted on formally," said Wirz. "Whatever comes out of a league meeting must wait for action until the next meeting of the joint council."

San Diego Padres General Manager Bob Fontaine is believed to be among those spearheading the effort to adopt the designated hitter rule in the NL.

And in the AL, Fontaine's counterparts were expected to devote time during their morning meeting to preparing a new pitch for interleague play.

One proposal for interleague action, resisted by the National League, calls for four games each year between two teams on a home-and-home basis.

Under the setup, natural rivalries would be given priority. They would include the Yankees and Mets in New York, the White Sox and Cubs in Chicago, and the California Angels and Los Angeles Dodgers.

But again, the machinery for such interaction was only in the preparatory stage, perhaps awaiting formal presentation during the winter meeting of owners next December in Orlando, Fla.

Proposals likely to be enacted included one to relax the rules which restrict the movement of coaches or managers to playing status more than once a year as sought by the Baltimore Orioles.

And the presidents of the two leagues, Lee McPhail of the American and Chub Feeney of the National, were to present a recommendation to establish greater flexibility in early season player option assignments.

Baseball's executive council, an 11-man body made up of Kuhn and the two league presidents plus four owners from each league, was to seek creation of a joint ownership committee to study umpiring.

Still another proposal, backed by the Philadelphia Phillies, was to permit the inclusion of performance bonuses based on batting, pitching and fielding accomplishments in player contracts.

The controversial brushback rule, this year altered to include automatic expulsion of a pitcher and his manager after a first such incident occurs, was also to be reviewed and possibly amended.

While the agenda seemingly included few troublesome items, Wirz said he was unable to predict harmony throughout the one-day talks.

"It just depends on how much uniformity in thinking exists," he said. "Sometimes you get an explosive situation when you're not looking for it."

Swimmers Shared Common Fate; Both Fought Sea But Lost Battle

MIAMI (AP) — The two swimmers seemed oceans apart — one a glib extrovert who unabashedly hustled sponsor money and publicity, the other a devout woman who stepped into the surf with determination and a soft prayer.

But in the end, Diana Nyad and Stella Taylor shared a common fate. Each challenged the sea, and lost.

It was Ms. Nyad, 28, who first gave up — weeping, swollen and screaming at her trainers Tuesday as they insisted she abandon the 103-mile crossing from Cuba to the Florida Keys.

She had covered more than 70 miles in 41 hours, 49 minutes since Sunday afternoon, but was pushed off course by winds and had not made it halfway to her targeted landing.

"I can't quit now," she begged from the water inside her heavy mesh anti-shark cage. "You don't understand." She had overcome violent nausea, jellyfish stings and terrible swelling of the lips and tongue caused by salt water.

She pleaded to swim on, but navigator Rich du Moulin shook his head. "The wind just pushed us too far west," he said. When du Moulin patiently repeated that it was useless to go on, she wept.

Miss Taylor, 46, had been swimming strongly since leaving Gun Cay in the Bahamas Monday morning.

She had a brush with a shark, which her attendants shot and killed, but pressed on with a song. "There's nothing in the ocean that can hurt me," she sang.

She, too, was bothered by nausea and jellyfish stings, but had stroked smoothly to within 18 miles of the Florida coast by Tuesday afternoon. Then, just as victory seemed certain, the current began pulling her north. The land curved westward and the gap from her to the shore widened. She called it quits about 3 p.m.

"I am tired," she admitted when she came ashore. "I would have continued the swim, but the boys made me give it up."

She was 32 hours and more than 100 miles from her starting point.

Ms. Nyad had said frankly all along that she was swimming for money. She retained an agent, sold rights to news organizations and signed sponsorship deals with makers of toothpaste and bottled water.

Her entourage at sea included trainers, navigators, a helicopter supply service and a $55,000 shark cage, built as part of a $134,000 budget.

"This swim could set up my whole future," she said before starting.

Miss Taylor emerged from obscurity. She had solid credentials in marathon swimming, including two successful swims across the English Channel, but she received only sparse publicity before the swim. She had a pair of support boats and two men on paddleboards to shoo away sharks.

Both women swam more than 60 miles, the distance Ms. Nyad said is recognized by marathon swimmers as the record. But whether either set a record is unclear. Ms. Nyad said she followed the rules of the International Marathon Association. But, she said, she was not in a marathon race; therefore, no record.

Israeli Scientists Find Algae That Produces Valuable Glycerol

By NILI BRESLER

REHOVOT, Israel (AP) — Scientists at Israel's Weizman Institute of Science have discovered a type of algae which can be used to produce glycerol — a valuable industrial chemical.

Glycerol is used in cosmetics, such as skin lotion and perfume, and also in medicines, ink, explosives and antifreeze.

"Glycerol has 1,000 uses," marine biologist Dr. Ami Ben-Amotz told The Associated Press. "and we'll be able to make it at less cost and effort than ever before just by breeding algae."

Until now, glycerol has been produced synthetically from petroleum and the fat used in soap-making. The odorless, syrupy chemical became almost prohibitively expensive as a result of the energy crisis. The current market price of glycerol is about $1,200 per ton.

Algae may prove to be the first natural source of glycerol to be commercially viable. Algae produce — and reproduce — with minimal investment of labor and capital. The single-cell plants reproduce by photosynthesis, doubling in number daily; all they need is sunlight and the carbon dioxide in the air.

The algae in question, called dunaliella parva, thrive in salty water. Researchers at the institute in Rehovot stumbled upon their glycerol-producing quality by accident.

The scientists were testing the highly adaptable algae to see how they sustain exposure to extreme amounts of salt. Dunaliella are found in the waters of San Francisco Bay and the Atlantic Ocean and even in water as salty as the Dead Sea and Utah's Salt Lake. It turns out that the mechanism which enables the versatile algae to survive environmental changes is a chemical reaction by which glycerol is produced. As the dunaliella reproduce, they manufacture the glycerol.

a chemical scientists believe — compensates for quantities of salt which are lethal to other organisms. The higher the salt level, the more glycerol produced.

The Koor Food Company and the Israel Oceanographic Institute are working together with the Weizman Institute to test the commercial potential of dunaliella parva.

A pilot plant in the Israeli Desert near Eilat consists of a series of portable pools of salt water set up in the open air. Each pool contains one variety of dunaliella. A biologist and one technician supervise the "harvest" of algae from the pools.

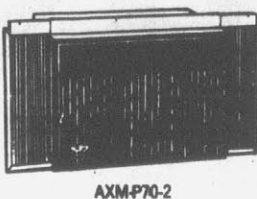

The Koor company has developed a way to recover the glycerol from the algae, Ben-Amotz said. He refused to give details because the method is an industrial secret, but basically it involves removing the algae from saline water and putting them in fresh water. They then "burst" and release the glycerol which separates from water just as oil does.

"Soon we may be producing large quantities of glycerol at internationally competitive prices," said Ben-Amotz. He added, "All we need is sunshine and salt water. Photosynthesis does the rest."

WALKING THE DONNER TRAIL — Barbara Maat, a 37-year-old Bridgewater, Conn., real-estate broker tugs a golf cart loaded with supplies as she follows the 1846 pioneer trail of the ill-fated Donner party. Ms. Maat rested in Salt Lake City for several days before her scheduled resumption of the 2,000-mile hike on Wednesday. (AP Laserphoto)

Introducing Kleenex® Super Dry Diapers. They keep babies so dry, we had to add wetness indicators.

The Kleenex Super Dry diaper keeps babies so dry, it has to let you know when it's wet. That's why it has wetness indicators—little letters inside toy blocks which become lighter with increasing amount of wetness.

Most Wheat Headed Out Of Country

By JOHN C. BRADEN
TOPEKA, Kan. (UPI) — Most of those amber waves of hard red winter wheat are in the elevator now. The farmer has done his job. It's up to the American marketing system to sell his product.

Wheat marketing is a case of export or die. Two out of every three bushels of wheat grown in the United States must be exported.

Most of the wheat grown in Kansas — the nation's largest wheat producer — and other plains states is hard red winter wheat, the descendant of a variety brought by immigrants from the Ukraine 104 years ago.

The variety is tailor-made for Kansas, hardy enough to be planted in the fall, and survive the winter and the hot, dry, windy spring and summer. It's also a cheap, nutritious winter pasture for cattle, another major Kansas product.

"Because of the makeup of hard red winter, it has to spend about 45 days at a temperature below 40 degrees," says Myron Krenzlin, administrator of the Kansas Wheat Commission in Hutchinson. "It has a dormant stage. If you planted hard red winter in the spring, it would be a beautiful plant. It would head out, but there would be nothing in the head."

Its chief disadvantage is it has a somewhat lower protein content than some other varieties of wheat from other parts of the country and other nations. However, Krenzlin said the difference is made up because the protein in hard red winter is of higher quality.

"There's protein and there's quality protein," he said. "Take two pencils. One is better than the other because of the way it's made."

Although it makes no actual difference in the wheat difference in the wheat quality, another disadvantage is its reddish color. Krenzlin said it sometimes is difficult to sell to foreign buyers who are used to purchasing varieties of white wheat.

"For example, England mills their flour to a color standard and it's easier to get their color out of white wheat than red," Krenzlin said.

The Wheat Commission, responsible for helping find and develop markets for Kansas' No. 1 product, is faced with such problems when dealing with millers who are reluctant to change suppliers and types of grain.

An unexpected opportunity came to Midwest winter wheat marketers this spring when rainfall caused sprouting problems in spring wheat from Canada and North Dakota. Wheat marketers saw the opportunity to advertise the millions of bushels of 12.5 percent protein hard red winter wheat as a substitute to foreign markets.

"We saw a chance to convert these foreign buyers to using hard red, which I understand, since the first of the year, they've been using," Krenzlin said. "Whether it will last more than a year, I don't know, but millers and wheat buyers tend to get into a habit. They don't like to change grists. So this could be the opening for hard red winter wheat."

Another breakthrough came with wheat blending studies conducted for the Wheat Commission in Europe. They showed native European wheat can be successfully mixed with 30 percent or more American hard red winter wheat for an improved baking blend. It is further ammunition in efforts to promote the U.S. product.

Recently an experimental white winter wheat was developed by Kansas State University that promises the same qualities as red winter wheat, perhaps a higher protein level, and caters to the preference of English millers and others who shy away from the red grain.

"I would say we will never replace red, but maybe with another wheat there will be more sales," Krenzlin said. "Instead of buying white wheat from Washington, perhaps they'll buy it from Kansas."

The new variety, still considered experimental, won't be available to farmers for a few more years. And one initial problem would be handling and storage since red dominates most bins and elevators now. The government forbids mixing more than 3 percent of a class of wheat in with another class.

Western Europe imports about 240 million bushels of wheat annually, only about 37 million bushels of which is hard red winter wheat from the United States.

The administrator was optimistic of the prospects for foreign sales.

He said the People's Republic of China appears to be in the market for more grain. Although a good Soviet harvest might reduce buying from Russia, that nation still is expected to buy several million tons.

Krenzlin also pointed to drought in Brazil and needs of other developing countries as factors in Kansas wheat sales. He mentions Japan as a good customer whose citizens have developed a taste for products made with American wheat.

The Wheat Commission, Kansas State University and grain interests have been stimulating foreign tastes by offering courses to grain millers and buyers from around the world.

In May, 25 Japanese millers came to Kansas for a short course in milling wheat. Visits have been set up for other delegations from Egypt, Iran, the United Kingdom, Central America, Bolivia, Romania, Ghana, Morocco and Portugal.

Proved He Loved Her

BY EDDIE ADAMS
AP Special Correspondent
TOMAHAWK, Ark. (AP) —

Noah's mom feared it might not last, and didn't attend the wedding. But Noah Barnett and Mary have been married 79 years now. They have 151 grandchildren to prove his mother wrong.

Her objection to Noah's marriage was his age.

"You should marry at 36, a man ain't boss until he gets to that age, he ain't got enough sense to boss a woman before then," Noah remembered his mother saying.

But Noah said that he had been in love with Mary from the age of 5 when he saw her playing in a barn. "She was the prettiest girl I ever saw, and was wearing pair of red tap boots with bright copper toes. Her hair was braided and hung down to her waist."

So on February, 2, 1899, the year the Spanish American war ended, Noah and Mary were married here in Tomahawk. They were both 19.

Today, they spend their hours quietly together in the frame house they built 71 years ago on their 40-acre Arkansas farm within sight of Pilot Mountain.

Holding hands often, they are making modest plans for their 80th wedding anniversary next year.

The Barnett's have five children, ranging in age from 66 to 78.

"We've been married almost 100 years and never had a quarrel," said the 96-year-old Noah.

Turtles Protected

RALEIGH — All sea turtles found along the North Carolina coast will be protected when new federal regulations become effective on August 28.

The loggerhead, the most common sea turtle in North Carolina, has had partial state-law protection in the past but will now be classified as a "threatened" species. It is estimated that 99 percent of sea turtles found in North Carolina are loggerheads.

The new law also places the green turtle under the threatened category. Three other species — the Atlantic ridley, leatherback, and hawksbill — are already listed as endangered.

Flashers Slow Up Speeders

By GORDON SCHULTZ
OLYMPIA, Wash. (UPI) — Flashers are taking to the freeways in Washington state to encourage compliance with the 55 mph speed limit.

These are not the type of flashers you might suspect. No raincoats are involved.

Let's say you're motoring down the freeway and there are no traffic cops in sight. You press your foot on the accelerator and increase your speed to 65.

Just when you start to pass the first guy ahead of you travelling at 55, you encounter your first flasher.

He holds up a bright yellow card in his window that says in big black letters, "55 PLEASE

He might even shake his fist and frown.

That's it. You've just been flashed.

The man who promoted this citizen effort at moral persuasion is Larry Bradley, director of the state Energy Office.

Bradley, Gov. Dixy Lee Ray's choice as the state's primary energy planner, began enlisting members in his "55 Flasher Club" a few months ago. He said he was bothered by the lack of attention to the national speed limit which was imposed as a means of reducing fuel consumption.

Bradley became the first highway flasher in his own right with a home-made card. Then, with the cooperation of the Washington State Patrol, Bradley issued orders to print 10,000 of the 8-1/2 by 11-inch signs.

"Nothing else seemed to be working," he said. "We needed a gimmick to get people's attention and this only cost $300."

Some of the signs were distributed to state workers. Some went to colleges. Others were distributed in local offices of Seattle First National Bank, the state's largest.

So far, results of Bradley's project are mixed although Bradley has gained a lot of notoriety out of the deal.

Some motorists laugh when they are flashed. Others get mad. Some respond by flashing back the same sign former Vice President Rockefeller once displayed to a group of hecklers.

Most seem to continue traveling above the posted speed limit but a few slow down, based on reports from people who have tried Bradley's experiment.

Some people get a big laugh out of the instructions Bradley printed on the back of the cards. Others have framed them for wall displays as an example of the bureaucratic mind at work.

First, the bearer is told the card is not a bona fide road sign and that possession does not make him a traffic cop or an employee of the Highways Department. He is told he is not entitled to set speed traps, use radar, or install flashing lights on his car.

"Also, while you could post it legally in your living room, it is highly doubtful that you could be in violation without a significant impact on your furniture."

Flashers are advised to show the card from the driver's side of the car if the speeder is passing on the left or on the passenger side when passed from the right.

They are asked not to flash when changing lanes or making turns and are told not to chase or antagonize speeders. Other things to keep in mind:

"1. Don't sit on this card, it's uncomfortable, doesn't do a whole lot for the card and makes its use rather difficult."

"2. Hold it right side up and out."

"3. Try to avoid flashing such people as state troopers and airplane pilots."

"4. Care should be exercised while flashing with open windows. Littering is against the law."

Bradley said use of the cards demonstrates a concern for conserving energy as well as a sense of humor.

Cards with the instructions on them may soon be collector's items. After some teasing, Bradley said the next batch of cards, if any more are printed, will only display the flasher's message.

His next project is now on the drawing board. It involves fastening large signs on the back of state-owned vehicles similar to the advertising signs often seen on the back of taxis.

Bradley envisions various motor pool fleets as a collection of pilot cars on the freeway.

Each sign would say something like, "I'm doing 55, how about you?"

Hike Up Mt. Sinai Is Tough

By MATHIS CHAZANOV
ST. CATHERINE'S MONASTERY, Israeli-occupied Sinai (UPI) — The best way to reach the summit of Mount Sinai is to get up with the moonrise and climb the steep road and 700 winding steps to the summit in the dark.

The sky is clear and the stars fade in the west. Cliffs of red granite and black volcanic rock catch the first sunrays. The view is breathtaking. So is the altitude.

Hikers with wobbly knees and wheezing lungs stop for an orange and a slug of water and wonder at the ingenuity of Greek monks and Bedouin workmen who created a road six feet wide on the side of a mountain that looms like a skyscraper.

At 7,500 feet, Mount Sinai is one of the highest peaks in the barren, isolated region, which has drawn holy men for thousands of years.

At the summit a chapel and a mosque stand near a cave where Christians and Moslems believe Moses spent 40 days before returning to the people of Israel with the Ten Commandments.

Rabbinical authorities decline to identify any one spot as the site of the Law-giving, but Egyptian President Anwar Sadat has said he will build a shrine there for all three faiths if peace is achieved with Israel.

The peak and most of the Sinai would go back to Egyptian hands under proposals by the Israeli government, so an unusually large number of Israelis spent their Passover vacation there this year.

From the mountaintop 3,000 stone stairs spill down to the monastery of St. Catherine. "The heart of the desert," an Israeli guide calls it.

For the believers it holds a convenient group of biblical sites, the burning bush where Moses spoke with God, the plain where the people of Israel waited for him to come down from the mountain, the hill where they set up the Golden Calf.

Tradition says monks guided by a dream found the remains of St. Catherine on a nearby mountaintop some 300 years after the native of Alexandria was martyred at the beginning of the fourth century.

Angels are said to have brought the bones to the site after she was put to death for, among other things, converting most of the imperial family.

The Crusaders spread her story in the West and the shrine once known as the Monastery of the Transfiguration was renamed St. Catherine's.

Within the sixth century walls are 2,000 religious paintings, a dozen of them among the oldest icons in the world.

These gold-tinged holy scenes survived the iconoclasm of the eighth and ninth centuries because of a bishop's defiance of orders from Constantinople.

There are pages from the fourth century Codex Sinaiticus, one of the first translations of the Old Testament into Greek.

A framed letter on the wall of the library complains that a Russian researcher took most of it away in 1865 and it was sold to the British Museum, where it remains today.

Monks have been here since at least the fourth century, served by their own Bedouin tribe, the Jabalis, or hill people. Tradition says they trace back to Roman slaves brought to Sinai by the Emperor Justinian to build the monastery.

Before the coming of Islam, the desert buzzed with the movement of hundreds of hermits and thousands of pilgrims and it was green with the vegetables grown for their food.

Now there are 15 monks in the monastery and perhaps 1,000 Jabalis in their goatskin tents and stone houses.

The neatly built structures are a startling contrast to the palm-leaf huts of Bedouins along the coast. But the other five tribes of the Sinai look down on the Jabalis because they see them as servile dependents of the monastery.

Centuries of isolation keep a hold on all the Bedouins, but the outside world intrudes even at a desert oasis, where visitors were startled to see a stereo tape recorder hanging from the horn of a camel saddle.

Nearby, tourists lolled topless on the pebbly beach while a veiled and black-robed woman washed her two-year-old son in the shallow salt water of the Gulf of Aqaba.

CASH KING RULES

Game Series #CK89

1. Get a FREE CASH KING Collector Card at the checkout counter or store office. Get a FREE Game Ticket every day you visit a participating store. Limit one ticket per family per visit. No purchase necessary. Adults only eligible. (18 yrs. or older)
2. HOW TO PLAY: Simply punch-out the perforated portions of your Game Ticket. Each Game ticket has four CASH KING markers. Each Marker corresponds to a square in the Games on your Collector Card. Some Game Tickets will contain a Saver Disc. Place the Saver Disc in the space provided on your Collector Card. If you get 10 Saver Discs, they may be exchanged for 10 FREE Game Tickets, giving you additional chances to win. Some Game Markers will say "You Win $1.00!" This is an instant Winner marker and you can collect your prize immediately from authorized store personnel.
3. Place markers in the corresponding die-cut squares on your collector card. EXAMPLE: If one of your markers is a "Seven of Clubs" in the $1,000 Game, insert that marker in the corresponding "Seven of Clubs" square in the $1,000 Game on Collector Card. If you obtain all four markers which match the four corner squares in the $1,000 Game you can win $2,000. All winning combinations are described on opposite face of Collector card. Markers may only be used to win in one combination in the $1,000, $100 and $10 Games.
4. WHAT TO DO IF YOU WIN: Submit all claimed winning markers to Store Office for verification. All Markers in a winning combination must be initialed by customer in the

IT'S FUN, FREE, EASY!

- presence of authorized store personnel before submission will be accepted. $2,000, $1,000 and $100 Winning Markers must be initialed in the presence of two (2) authorized store persons and approved by the general office. When a winning combination has been verified by authorized personnel you will be awarded your prize after furnishing your name and address.
5. All game materials will be rejected and judged void if not obtained from and verified by authorized personnel or if any part of any of the game markers is illegible, altered, mutilated, miscolored, misregistered, defaced, tampered with, forged, contains printing or other errors, or is irregular in any way. All game material submitted for verification becomes the property of Game Sponsor and cannot be returned. Liability for void ticket, if any, limited to replacement of ticket. Game Sponsor not responsible for lost or stolen tickets. Game material void where taxed or prohibited by law.
 6. Game will end upon distribution of all Game Tickets which may be before or after the scheduled termination date. Valid winning submissions must be presented within two (2) weeks after termination of game or prizes are forfeited. The offer to exchange ten (10) Saver Discs for ten (10) FREE Game Tickets expires immediately upon termination of Game. When and if verified claims for prizes in any category equal the number of prizes advertised for that category, then game, as it relates to that specific prize category, shall immediately terminate without notice and any unverified claim submitted at or after that time shall be automatically rejected.
 7. Only CASH KING game materials with series #CK89 valid for this game. Employees (and their respective IRS dependents and immediate family members) of Winn-Dixie Raleigh, Inc. and affiliates thereof, or of suppliers or any other company engaged in the development and production of Cash King are not eligible to play. State, federal and other taxes imposed on any or all prizes are solely the responsibility of winners.

8. CASH KING Marker for any CASH KING Game void if it does not have on it:
(a) Value of Game
(b) Name of Game
(c) Series #CK89
(d) Card and suit symbol
(e) Card and suit symbol spelled out
(f) Safety pattern background
- ACTUAL SIZE
- CASH KING MARKER FOR CASH KING GAME VOID IF ABOVE SIX (6) ITEMS ARE NOT CLEARLY VISIBLE.

9. CASH KING Series #CK89 Marker must conform in size, shape and detail to the example illustrated above and must contain the six (6) items of authentication described in Rule No. 8.

PLEASE READ!

Odds to win and number of prizes unclaimed will be updated in all participating stores and newspaper ads each week after thirty (30) days. All tickets and Collector Cards must have same series number and are valid only in that Series Number Game.

Game program may be repeated by popular demand. The total number and worth of prizes to be awarded will depend upon the number of winning tickets actually redeemed.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: P equals A

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Dear Charlie:
Sorry you couldn't make it down to New Orleans for the Fifth World Pair Olympiad. I found the city delightful and the hospitality unequalled, except at the bridge table where no one seemed to want to give me anything.

Every now and then I wonder whether I am beginning to lose my touch. I can remember days when a smile at the charming lass at my table would cause her to lose her aplomb and do the strangest things against me. No more! Either they're producing a tougher brand of female or I'm getting old.

Consider this hand from the Open Pairs, where my left-hand opponent was a delightful Parisian, Nadine Cohen. As you can see, my partner and I had reached a quite respectable five heart contract and, with the spade lead I had expected, I would have made an overtrick.

Nadine led the king of clubs and continued with the ace to give the defense their book. At this point I smiled very sweetly at her and prepared to table my cards and claim—after all, she knew I had no more clubs, so surely she would try to cash a spade in hope that that would produce the setting trick.

How cruelly I misjudged her. She knew from her partner's spade preempt that he had six and that, therefore, I was void in spades. Since there was virtually no chance for a trick in diamonds, she decided that her only hope was to find her partner with the jack of hearts.

So she continued with a low club, and her partner's ruff with the jack meant down one.

Should I give up smiling? As ever, Omar

Tennis Not Milner's Racquet

By JAY SHARBUIT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — On Sept. 5, Martin Milner appears in NBC's "Little Mo," essaying the first tennis teacher of the late champ Maureen Connolly. But he says tennis is not his racquet.

He played it in high school and for a year at USC. Then he quit. Still he doesn't speak of the game with malice aforethought.

"I don't hate it. It just doesn't do much for me anymore," says the actor. He conceded he may be the only one not now flailing away in those celebrity smash-and-lob festivals running rampant here.

"I seem to have the unhappy facility of liking things when they're out of fashion and not liking them when they're in," Milner, 50, a tall, easy-going man who was born in Detroit, lived in Seattle and went to high school and college here, is a veteran of some 60 movies, starting in 1947 with "Life With Father."

But he's best-known as one of TV's steadiest visitors, "Little Mo" being his most recent visit. He began it all in the 1950s as a regular in the "Life of Riley" and "Stu Erwin" series.

He also has starred in series on all three networks — four years in CBS' "Route 66," another seven in NBC's "Adam-12" and very briefly a few years ago in ABC's ill-fated "Swiss Family Robinson."

But he doesn't pine for the weekly route now unless he can spend most of each week with his wife, Judy, an actress, and their three kids.

"The only way I'd do another series would be if I only had to work a couple of days each week," he said. "Jack Webb offered me a role like that last year, but I had another commitment."

He spoke with the certainty of one who still gets residual checks from "Adam-12," still in reruns across America.

Right now, he says, the plan is to do two or three TV movies a year and appear in dinner theater plays with his wife.

They teamed up on stage for the first time last spring in "The Tender Trap" in Raleigh, N.C., he said, and plan to do it again this November in Jacksonville, Fla.

Meanwhile, they're keeping a parental eye on their daughter, Amy, 19, who's becoming a second-generation Milner in entertainment as a singer in a rock band just starting in the San Diego area.

"When she insisted on it, I just resigned myself to the inevitable, and now I'm very proud of her," said Milner, who always tried to discourage his kids from entering the show-biz game.

"I think it's a very precarious business," he explained. "I don't think the number of people who succeed — compared to the number of people who try — make it a good gamble."

But you gambled and succeeded, no?

"Well, I was a kid," he said. A grin crept across his face. "By the time I was at an age where I'd be making serious career decisions, I was working all the time. And making a good living."

Trial Awaits Laboratory Tests

ATLANTA (AP) — The trial of Patricia McLean will wait while laboratory technicians try to determine where about $6,000 in $100 bills fits into the case, a federal judge has ruled.

The prosecution claims Miss McLean, 29, obtained $6,000 from the father of convicted pornographer Michael Thevis for use in helping Thevis escape an Indiana jail.

Miss McLean, Thevis' former girlfriend, faces trial on two counts of aiding in the escape.

The defense claims that the $6,000 now in court custody is the money allegedly used in the escape and that Miss McLean had it in her possession until it was handed to prosecutors last Friday.

U.S. District Court Judge William C. O'Kelly on Tuesday ordered the trial continued until either Aug. 28 or Nov. 6 so the FBI laboratory in Washington can examine the money.

The lab is to try to determine whether the bills are those which authorities allege Miss McLean withdrew from a bank April 27. If it is, the fingerprints of the bank teller who counted it out and wrapped it will be on the bills, according to Assistant U.S. Attorney Harvey Harkness.

On April 28, Thevis, 46, walked out the side door of the Floyd County jail in New Albany, Ind., and disappeared. He was serving an 8½-year sentence for convictions on federal charges of arson conspiracy and transporting obscene materials.

The defense presented the money Friday, but prosecution officials declined to accept it. An FBI agent dropped it onto the floor in the federal courthouse.

O'Kelly on Friday ordered the clerk to seal the money and to hold it until Tuesday, when it was opened and what appeared to be three packets of bills in bank wrappers were taken out.

It was then revealed and sent to Washington. Also on Tuesday, O'Kelly took under advisement a defense motion seeking dismissal of the charges on grounds that the prosecution used testimony by Miss McLean before a federal grand jury in preparing its case.

At the time of the testimony she had been granted immunity from prosecution.

That grand jury probe led to racketeering indictments against Thevis and several associates.

The judge denied a defense request for a reduction in Miss McLean's $250,000 bond and relaxation of the requirement that she check in with a pretrial officer by telephone twice a day.

No Strong Feminist

WASHINGTON (AP) — The next White House adviser on women's issues likely will not be strongly identified with the women's movement, the head of the Women's Lobby predicts.

Carrol Burris said in a recent interview some people think the president and his top aides have no interest in picking a strong feminist to replace Midge Costanza, who resigned. The Women's Lobby is a private group that lobbies Congress on women's issues. A check of major women's organizations and some high female officials in government indicates great interest in the job.

A New Proposal For Metrics: Time Told In New Way 'Temps'

By LARRY BUSH
Ann Arbor News

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — With the nation gradually switching over to the metric system in weights and measures, an Ann Arbor engineer believes the clock should go metric, too.

Franklin L. Everett, president of the Ann Arbor Instrument Works Inc., and a retired University of Michigan engineering professor, has come up with what he believes is the first proposal for a metric time system.

Everett has divided the day into 100 equal parts which he calls "temps" as a metric replacement for the hours in a 24-hour day. In place of minutes and seconds there would be decitemps (one-tenth of a temp) and centitemps (one hundredth of a temp).

"Metric time seems so basic when time is one of the dimensions," Everett said in a recent interview. "If anyone else has proposed metric time, I haven't heard about it," he added.

Everett said he didn't think the time switch-over would be any more costly or inconvenient in most cases than the weights and measures change.

"People with expensive watches might complain, but it ought to make the watch and clock makers happy," he chuckled.

"And all the 5-year-olds in the world would be grateful because it would be very much easier for them to learn to tell time," Everett added.

Under the proposed time system there are about four temps in an hour but, as in learning a foreign language, it is best to learn to think in terms of the new dimension and not try to translate back and forth.

With 100 temps in a day, there would be 1,000 in 10 days — or one kilotemp — and a 30-day month would consequently be three kilotemps long. The 365-day year would be of 36.5 kilotemps' duration.

Under the proposed metric time system the usual work day would start at 37 temps (approximately 8 a.m.), the lunch hour at 50 temps (noon), and the work day would end at 70 temps (about 5 p.m.).

Everett said he had toyed with three different ideas on possible watch or clock faces for telling time metric style.

First, he diagramed a timepiece with three hands. The watch or clock face would have 10 large numbers in place of the present hour figures, each representing 10 temps (2.4 hours per number).

There were smaller markings for temps (14.4 minutes), and decitemps (about a minute and a half).

Next, Everett diagramed a timepiece with two hands like present hour and minute watches and clocks with 10-temp or one-temp markings. That timepiece, like some older pocket watches with a second hand on a small inner dial, had a small dial for decitemps.

His latest design is a three-dial watch with the big dial marked off in 10-temp and one-temp designations, and one small dial in decitemps and the other in centitemps (0.14 of a minute).

In the case of stop watches for athletic events and races, the dial could be marked off in millitemps, or one-thousandth of a temp (0.0014 of a minute) which, according to Everett, would be more accurate and understandable than fractions of a second.

Kenya's Young Blacks Seeking Jobs Held By 'Expatriate' Whites

By CHARLES P. WALLACE

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Kenya, the white man's last haven in East Africa, is becoming less hospitable to "expatriate" workers who hold the black nation's most skilled jobs.

The presence of American, European and Asian workers in Kenya — at a time of troublesome unemployment and rising expectations among Kenya's educated younger generation — has stirred public criticism and produced sharp divisions within the government.

The debate has racial overtones — many consider the term "expatriates" merely a euphemism for whites — challenging the government's commitment to make Kenya a model of racial harmony. There are about 19,000 foreigners in a work force estimated at 850,000.

The government appeared to be steering clear of public debate on the issue until Darius Mbela, the permanent secretary in the Ministry of Information and Broadcasting, denounced "guest workers" for oversteering their welcome.

"There are those, for example, who indulge in practices and maneuvers designed to make them indispensable," Mbela charged. He accused employers of "systematically frustrating" Kenyans out of jobs in favor of Europeans.

Similar charges have surfaced from time to time, but never at so high a level. Within days, Mbela was demoted in what was seen as a government repudiation of his remarks.

A few days later, Attorney General Charles Njonjo said "we should not use the expatriates as scapegoats."

"If we have a qualified African who is able to do a professional job, let us have him there," Njonjo said. "But where there are no qualified Kenyans, we should have expatriates."

But then Kimani Wa Nyioke, secretary-general of the Union of Kenyan Civil Servants, attacked foreigners in government employment. He charged that many expatriate engineers are "merely glorified mechanics and technicians."

"My educated guess is that only 30 to 40 percent of nonKenyan expatriates are really needed," he said. "The rest are undesirable on both political and economic grounds. Politically, white expatriates have continued to remind Kenyans that we have not fully become masters of our own house."

Life styles and attitudes of many expatriates often seem to incite more resentment than the jobs they hold.

It is not unusual for Europeans and Americans, who would be distinctly middle class at home, to live here in enormous homes tended by liveried servants and to frequent lavish private clubs.

At the same time, it is not unusual for a full Kenyan university professor to be earning $50 a week and other professionals even less.

In simplified terms, the expatriate problem might be illustrated by the cases of two men.

Matthew is a Kenyan with a high school education, something of a rarity in Kenya. When he graduated, Matthew could not find a job. Now, four years later, he works as a gardener for about $40 a month.

John also has a high school education, but he is a British expatriate working in a middle management job for a foreign firm. He earns $1,000 a month — which he says is low by expatriate standards — receives a housing subsidy, a free car and a paid trip to Europe every other year.

"My salary is about six times what a Kenyan doing my job would get paid," he says. "Sure this looks unfair, but quite frankly I don't think there is a Kenyan with enough experience to do my job and I wouldn't be here if they paid me Kenyan wages."

The Kenyan government is following a pragmatic course on the expatriate issue. It has established a Kenyanization of Personnel Bureau, which controls work permits issued to foreigners and has sharply limited the hiring of expatriates for unskilled and untechnical jobs.

On the other hand, the government desires to achieve development by attracting Western business and capital and so appears to believe that the expatriates must remain, at least in certain fields.

Kenya has about 1,000 doctors, most of them expatriates. The government's development plan calls for doubling this figure, but local training programs can provide only 400 new physicians. So the shortfall of 600 probably will be made up with new expatriates.

There are similar paradoxes in other fields. The government estimates it needs 200 more pharmacists than it can possibly train, 1,500 engineers, 1,200 to 1,600 mechanics and 300 accountants.

GOT A DOLLAR FOR A CUP OF COFFEE? — A coffee shop in Fukuoka, Japan, offers its clients a chance to get a cup of coffee for only 183 yen—the equivalent of one dollar on Tuesday. The dollar closed at 183.85 yen on the Tokyo Exchange, a record low, and most coffee shops were charging from 250 to 350 yen for a cup of the brew. (AP Laserphoto)

Legal Clam Size Changed

WILMINGTON — The minimum legal size of harvestable clams was changed to a one-inch thickness by the N. C. Marine Fisheries Commission at their August 9 meeting in Wilmington. The new regulation becomes effective September 15.

The change was to conform with northern markets, and also to act as a conservation method. The one-inch size increases the minimum legal size of clams, according to J. J. Smith, chairman of the commission.

Although no other official action was taken by the commission, several matters were discussed.

Among these was a concern voiced by residents of Holden Beach over the wholesale gathering of live sand dollars and shells. It is feared that such extended gathering will deplete part of the state's natural resources and residents feel there should be some kind of protection.

Edward McCoy, director of the N. C. Division of Marine Fisheries, said no regulation deals with non-commercial species of marine life. Commissioners said they needed to have more information on non-commercial aspects before any action could be taken.

Other issues discussed with no action taken included the five-inch minimum mesh proposal for flounder fishing; the percentage of under sized clams, crabs, and oysters allowable in a catch; reciprocal fishing agreement with Virginia; interrelationship of dredge and fill permits and CAMA permits; close-to-shore rock outcrops in fragile resource areas; and menhaden fishing near tourist areas.

State Still Tops In Tick Fever

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Last year, 223 cases were reported in the state during tickfever season, which runs from May through September. About 600 cases of the illness have been reported in the United States this season.

"We're just in the middle of the belt that goes from Maryland to Georgia," said Dr. J. Newton McCormick, head of the Communicable Disease Branch of the state Division of Health Services.

MacCormack said the number of tick-fever cases in North Carolina can be blamed on its vegetation and location of population centers of the Piedmont.

The disease is carried by common ticks that get on dogs. MacCormack said the ticks hide in the oak and pine forests of the Piedmont, near several cities filled with potential tickfever victims.

MacCormack said no deaths from the illness have reported in the state this year, although Rocky Mountain spotted fever can be fatal if not treated properly. Last year four deaths from the illness were reported in the state.

The disease got its name in the late 1800s when hunters and trappers in the northern Rockies began suffering from the bright red spots that characterize the illness.

MacCormick said the only prevention against the disease is to avoid tick bites. He said hikers in the woods should wear long pants and shoes and socks. Children should use caution playing with dogs during the summer months.

Catawba Men Get New Trial

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Court of Appeals ruling has given two Catawba County men a new trial and declared that a deputy unlawfully searched the defendants' vehicle and seized evidence for a drug trial.

Ronnie Lee Beaver and Johnny Lawrence Williams were granted a new trial in an Appeals Court decision Tuesday. The two were convicted in Catawba Superior Court May 29, 1975, of felonious possession of marijuana and the misdeemeanor possession of amphetamines. They were given three-to-five-year sentences.

According to evidence in the case, Catawba deputy Gary Poovey stopped a car containing the two defendants on Oct. 31, 1974.

Poovey testified that he saw a shot glass containing a white substance between Beaver's knees, but he did not make a request to search the vehicle before seizing the glass.

Testimony showed that when Poovey later requested permission to search the car, Williams refused.

Poovey later summoned a narcotics agent, who identified the substance as amphetamine. He then obtained a search warrant, searched the car and found five pounds of marijuana.

"As Officer Poovey had neither a good faith belief that the white powder was contraband or evidence or reasonable grounds to form such a belief, he did not have probable cause to seize the shot glass, even though it was in plain view," said the Appeals Court in an opinion written by Judge Burley Mitchell.

"The arrest of the defendants and the later search of their vehicle clearly arose from the unlawful seizure of the shot glass and its contents," Mitchell wrote. "The evidence obtained by these arrests and search was the product of actions not authorized by law and thus should have been excluded from evidence."

The Appeals Court ruling placed a limitation on the "plain view" doctrine in which the courts have said if an officer saw contraband or evidence of a crime in plain view, he could seize it.

To Review Management

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — State officials meeting with Cherry Hospital employees Tuesday over the controversial firing of the psychiatric hospital's personnel director announced the creation of a task force to review the management at the institution.

State officials at the meeting declared that the dismissal of David Plummer Jr. last week was "a personal and private" matter.

The Goldsboro-Wayne County branch of the NAACP has charged that the firing of Plummer, who is black, from his post as personnel director was racially motivated.

Officials said Tuesday they advised Plummer to appeal the decision if he wished.

State officials attending the meeting included Ben Ruffin, special assistant to Gov. Jim Hunt; Ben Aiken, director of state Mental Retardation Services; J.P. Johnson, personnel director for the state Department of Human Resources; and Henry McCoy, director of the state Human Relations Council.

Ruffin, who announced the new task force, said the panel will be composed of four community members and four persons from state personnel.

He said the task force will be appointed no later than Sept. 1.

Field Montgomery, director of Cherry Hospital, announced that he has requested funds to begin a "night owl" program at the hospital to provide short breaks for employees on the night shifts. He said there had been recent complaints by workers over a new policy to prevent workers from falling asleep on the job. Workers said supervisors had used unfair methods to determine if they were sleeping while on the job.

Workers who are found sleeping while on duty are given a written warning for the first infraction and are fired the second time, according to state policy.

NOTICE OF HEARING
Notice is hereby given that the Department of Human Resources, Division of Mental Health and Mental Retardation Services, pursuant to the authority vested in it by S.143B of the General Statutes of North Carolina, proposes the following:

(1) To adopt, on October 1, 1978, the diagnostic classification system of the Committee on Child Psychiatry of the Group for the Advancement of Psychiatry for use in the diagnosis of emotionally disturbed children (aged 0-18 years). It is the belief of the Department of Health and Mental Retardation Services that the G.A.P. diagnostic system provides for more accurate diagnosis of childhood disorders. Therefore, G.A.P. contributes to increased quality of care in child mental care centers and state facilities.
(2) To amend regulation 10 NCAC 140.0101, to be effective September 15, 1978. The proposed states contract specifications for providing local psychiatric care.
Notice is also given that any person interested may, by oral or written statement, or by argument relevant to the action proposed at a hearing to be held on the following dates:

U.S. Magazines Are Going Foreign

By MALCOLM N. CARTER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Ach du Lieber! More and more U.S. magazines are speaking with a foreign accent.

As profits climb apace and the dollar slackens against other currencies, foreigners are increasingly becoming owners of American magazines.

"The United States is the center of the world for our profession — it's the best place to be," says Daniel Filipacchi, the French publisher of ParisMatch and Oui.

"It's where you can make more money," adds Filipacchi, who is gambling more than $25 million on a revival of Look magazine as a weekly starting in January. "And it's where you can lose more money, too."

The Magazine Publishers Association has been so impressed by what it characterizes as a trend over the last couple of years that the organization has established a new category for foreign members.

Parents' magazine, with more than 1.5 million circulation, and a number of publications for children, Humpty Dumpty and Handy Andy for instance, are now owned by Gunter & Jahr. Largely because of Stern newsweekly, Gunter & Jahr is Germany's biggest publisher.

What's more, the company is launching a U.S. version of the monthly Geo to compete with the National Geographic.

It was a Briton, Vere Harmsworth, whose investment in Esquire enabled Clay Felker to take over that magazine after Australian Rupert Murdoch gained control of New York and New West, forcing Felker out as editor and publisher of those magazines.

This same Harmsworth, who heads Associated Newspapers Group of Britain, has also poured money into the Soho Weekly News here.

Murdoch, of course, broke into the U.S. mass market with the National Star and went on to acquire the New York Post. He acquired the weekly Village Voice as part of the New York magazine deal.

From Canada comes investments by a company controlled by the Toronto Star, which indirectly owns Tiger Beat magazine for teen-agers and Rona Barrett magazine for adults. And Bonnier of Sweden is the new owner of a corporation that publishes magazines for college students.

In addition, two London-based publishers have staked out bigger pieces of the U.S. market. The Financial Times wants to compete with the Wall Street Journal with a daily international edition, and the Economist hopes to raise circulation here by bolstering its New York staff.

Robert Farley, vice president of the Magazine Publishers Association, says the foreign entrepreneurs "have their own reasons" for investing in U.S. companies.

But he adds his "suspicion" that these reasons center on a more than 20 percent increase in revenues in the industry for two years in a row, bringing the annual total to approximately $2 billion.

"I think the reason for the trend is that the individual has an extraordinarily high return on an investment if successful," notes securities analyst Ed Dunleavy of Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner & Smith.

Other reasons might be that investors are always looking to expand their markets and that the dollar's weakness makes the United States particularly attractive, Farley says.

Securities analyst Ken Noble, a media specialist with Paine Weber Mitchell Hutchins, agrees with him.

To the foreigners, Noble adds, the American economy is free of uncertainties such as the election of a communist government and is otherwise "relatively safe."

Investors like to remain in businesses they already know, he notes, saying that is why publishers who are successful want to enter the market in a country where magazines do very well.

When asked why Gruner & Jahr has targeted the U.S. market, editorial manager Henri Nannen replies that the company has expanded as much as West German law allows.

"Only one way is open to us — to go abroad," Nannen continues.

Adds Filipacchi, who says "you don't have the market" in countries like England or Germany: "It's a kind of feeling, too. I enjoy to go to the United States. I don't enjoy going to Germany so much."

Although the trend is discernible in the magazine field, it is not noticeable for newspapers.

To be sure, Murdoch publishes the San Antonio Express and News in Texas, and Kenneth Thomson, whose family organization owns The Times of London, publishes more than 55 newspapers in this country.

A handful of small weeklies and dailies is published by Canadian and British companies, and a Canadian publisher started a Philadelphia tabloid recently.

However, the number of foreign-owned newspapers has not increased markedly. "There isn't a great deal of it," says John Morton, a newspaper analyst with John Muir & Co.

Kick Machine Needs Repairing

CROATAN, N.C. (AP) — Croatan's claim to fame, the self-kicking machine, delivered boots to the backsides of royalty in its better days, but a relative of the builder of the contraption says it isn't repaired soon, the town will lose its only landmark.

Tom Haywood built the selfkicking machine back in 1937 beside U.S. 70 near this Craven County town. And it put Croatan on the map. People such as the baron and baroness of Bern, Switzerland, took mulelike kicks from the machine. Harry Truman once slowed his presidential motorcade to get a better look. And the machine attracted tourists from all over the country.

"Needs new shoes," said Mary Elliott, Haywood's niece, as she backed up the machine for a good swift kick in the pants. But all it could muster was a pat. "It's in pretty sad shape."

Mrs. Elliott said Universal News Reel Co. and CBS Radio asked her uncle to bring his machine to New York for interviews. Haywood said accepted the offers for the "good of the country."

The contraption even drew the attention of the staff of Ripley's Believe It Or Not.

But the self-kicking machine's days of glory are in the past. Tourists still stop and use the machine when they can get it cranked up. Its stand is dilapidated and needs a coat of paint.

"Looks like it did the time the hurricane blew it off the stand. It's a shame," said Mrs. Elliott. Haywood willed the machine to her son, Thomas.

Mrs. Elliott said the machine's condition reminds her of Croatan itself, which she said could use a good kick in the pants.

"We've gone backwards instead of forwards," she said. "We lost our train station, our post office, our fire tower, our school."

"This is it," she said. "If this goes, we'll be flat out of landmarks."

CB Industry Birthday Set

By JOHN D. McCLAIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CB industry is planning a major celebration this fall of CB radio's 20th birthday.

Dubbed 10-4 Day, the celebration is planned for Oct. 4, complete with a cake cutting in Capitol Hill, gubernatorial proclamations, the opening of a traveling CB museum on the West Coast and special sales by CB manufacturers and retailers.

"The Federal Communications Commission established the Class D (CB) at time close to 14 million licenses have been issued, over 20 million CB users have joined the service and over 30 million CB radios have been sold," noted industry official John Sodolski.

"Nothing other than the telephone has had such a major impact on the American personal communications scene," he added.

Sodolski is vice president of the communications division of the Electronic Industries Association, a trade group representing CB manufacturers that is sponsoring the celebration.

By the end of July, more than half the nation's governors had signed proclamations describing Oct. 4 as "CB Recognition Day." Mark V. Rosenker, an association spokesman said, and others are expected to sign similar documents before 10-4 Day.

The most widely known of the so-called 10 codes often used in radio transmissions, 10-4 acknowledges receipt of a message, or means affirmative in response to a question.

Many CB radio equipment manufacturers and dealers are expected to hold sales and offer special merchandising programs to help celebrate, Rosenker said.

The EIA's 10-4 Day officially begins in Washington, where a specially designed birthday cake will be cut in the Capitol Hill office of Chairman Lionel Van Deerlin of the House communications subcommittee.

Later in the day, the state of Illinois will be honored in Chicago for its early recognition of the public safety aspects of CB radio and for being the first state to institute a National Emergency Aid Radio program that uses federal funds to promote use of CB radio for emergencies and motorist aid.

Elvis: Unanswered Questions

By RICHARD LOWE
Associated Press Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Their pilgrimage completed, two New Yorkers passed a dusk-to-dawn curfew encamped at the shrine of their idol who excited millions with the swivel of his hips and sneer on his lips.

The 1,500-mile journey for the first anniversary of the death of Elvis Presley was the fourth time Al and Maria Zappala of Syracuse, N.Y., pounded the blacktop to Graceland Mansion, where the king of rock 'n' roll and his mother are buried side-by-side.

"We had never been anywhere before Elvis died," Mrs. Zappala said early today. "My husband said, 'If I can get the time off, do you want to go to the funeral?' Did I want to go? We just threw some things in the car and we were off."

On this latest visit, Tennessee's largest city was embroiled in a strike by firefighters and policemen and Mayor Wyeth Chandler clamped an 8 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew on its 650,000 residents.

The Zappalas, who were unable to make hotel reservations, and about 50 other fans were told by the gatekeeper they had to either spend the night on the 13-acre estate or leave. Vester Presley, Elvis' uncle, said if the fans left once the gate was closed, they would not be allowed back in.

While several people passed pillows, blankets and soft drinks to him over the mansion's wall, Zappala said he and his wife journeyed to Memphis just to visit Presley's grave in October and April before arriving Sunday for the anniversary.

Mingling and chatting with the fans, some attired in sequined T-shirts proclaiming love for Elvis, Mrs. Zappala said she never thought policemen would still be on strike when she and her husband reached their destination.

"I can't believe they did this thing considering all Elvis did for this city and especially the police," she said as several teen-age girls scribbled their names on the wall by the wrought-iron gates adorned with musical notes.

A Shelby County sheriff's deputy, who asked not to be identified, said he didn't believe anyone near the mansion would be arrested.

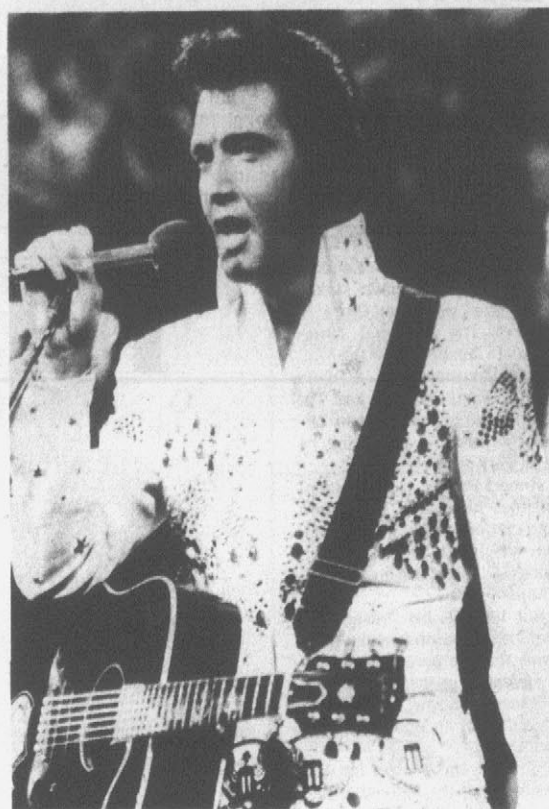

"I just can't believe I'm here," Mrs. Zappala said while talking with a woman whose left wrist sported an Elvis Presley watch and her upper arm a tattoo of "The King." Although weaned on Presley's music and gyrations, she said she managed to see him only once in concert. "He was supposed to be in Syracuse the Saturday after he died," Mrs. Zappala said. "We had driven around from Rochester when we heard about the concert on the radio and headed back to Syracuse for tickets. I stood in line for about 18 hours waiting. But he never made it.

"I never thought I'd be at the funeral but I had to do something. Now, I've seen him more times in death than in life."

Right Of Belief

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration will spend a year evaluating the impact of a new law protecting the right of Indians to practice their religion.

The president then will report to Congress on the American Indian Religious Freedom Act, which was prompted by Indian complaints that that government policies often trampled on sacred beliefs. The act declares, "Henceforth it shall be the policy of the United States to protect and preserve for American Indians their inherent right of freedom to believe, express and exercise the traditional religions of the American Indian, Eskimo, Aleut and Native Hawaiians." The president signed the law last weekend.

Firing Was Motivation

BESSEMER CITY, N.C. (AP) — James Brooks says getting fired from his metal worker's position here last year because he wasn't doing his work was the best thing that's ever happened to him. And now, he says he is working harder than ever before — independently but for the same company that fired him.

Brooks, 40, was a metal worker for Manufacturing Services Co., earning $250 a week after 15 years. But he got bored with his work, and his production dropped to such a low that J.A. Dalpiaz, president of the firm, fired him.

But in firing Brooks, Dalpiaz offered him an opportunity to work for himself. He set Brooks up as an independent contractor, running the same machines he had run for Manufacturing Services, but with earnings dependent on productivity.

Brooks said that his work during the first seven months of this year has made him a new man with a new attitude. He said he comes to work early and stays on the job late.

And Brooks said he is earning more money in his new job than ever before. He said he expects to net at least $25,000 for the year.

"When I was working for him (Dalpiaz), I didn't care whether those machines were running or not," Brooks said. "Now it's different. If I see those machines standing idle, I get upset."

"The best motivation I know," said Dalpiaz, "is for people to go into business for themselves. It worked for Jim Brooks. He is a totally different person today from what he used to be. Now he's working for himself and he's a hustler."

Brooks is one of seven workers at Manufacturing Services with contracts instead of regular jobs. "My company provides the sales, the purchasing, the shipping, the billing and the collecting," Dalpiaz said, "and these people run the machines. They come and go when they want to. All they worry about is running the machines and turning out the parts that will pass inspection."

Dalpiaz said Manufacturing Services keeps two thirds of the sales dollar and collects a fee to cover rental of the machines and electricity costs.

"The independent partner doesn't furnish anything but his own skills as a machinist," Dalpiaz said. "We insist that he make good parts and require him to give us first call on his services before he accepts any outside work."

Nixes Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Republican leader John Rhodes says it would be a risk if former President Richard M. Nixon became involved in GOP political affairs.

The Arizona Republican admitted Sunday that some Republicans feel Nixon could be valuable as a senior statesman commenting on foreign policy. But Rhodes told a television interview show: "I think we're getting along very well...and I would just as soon keep the cast we have."

Presley's Fans Still Flock To His Gravesite In Memphis

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Elvis Presley died Aug. 16, 1977 of hypertensive heart disease—natural causes—according to Dr. Jerry Francisco, the Shelby County medical examiner.

But the 42-year-old singer had been dead only a few hours when drugs began to be discussed in connection with his death.

A year later, the official cause of death stands, backed up by Presley's personal physician, a University of Utah toxicologist and a Las Vegas doctor who treated him.

But occasional questions still arise about the death of the "King of Rock 'n' Roll." Suspicions are fed by the handling of the autopsy report and by a book published shortly before his death.

Written by former Presley bodyguards Red West, Sonny

West and Dave Hebler, "Elvis: What Happened?" said Presley had used various drugs during his last years.

And a Memphis newspaper, The Commercial Appeal, raised questions about drugs found in Presley's blood and tissue samples during the autopsy.

Joe Esposito, a long-time friend and aide, found Presley on the floor of the singers' private bathroom shortly after 2 p.m.

Dr. George Nichopoulos, Presley's personal physician, and a Memphis Fire Department ambulance were summoned. Efforts to revive the entertainer were futile; he was dead at Baptist Hospital an hour later.

Six hours later, Nichopoulos and Francisco said at a news conference that Presley had died of cardiac arrhythmia—an irregular heartbeat. In the weeks that followed, Nichopoulos told reporters Presley had a low-grade case of diabetes and frequently failed to stick to his diet.

In October, at a news conference at the University of Tennessee Center for Health Sciences where he is a professor of pathology, Francisco released the final report on the post mortem tests.

Francisco said Elvis died of hypertensive heart disease, and coronary artery disease was a contributing factor.

He said drugs were found in Presley's body, but he said they had nothing to do with his death. He said all had been prescribed by Nichopoulos and were found in amounts consistent with therapeutic practices.

Sedatives methaqualone and Ethnamate, the painkiller codeine, and unspecified barbituates were found in significant quantities, he said, and an antihistamine, the tranquilizer Valium, the painkillers meperidine and morphine and Demerol, a sedative, were found in trace amounts.

Francisco said the drugs, in the amounts found, did not constitute an overdose, and he said it was unlikely that chemical reactions within the body could have contributed to his death.

But The Commercial Appeal, Memphis' morning newspaper, reported that a California laboratory which had conducted some of the drug tests, also found Placidyl, a depressant which can be dangerous if mixed with codeine, in Presley's blood.

How They Voted In Congress Roll-Calls

By ROLL CALL REPORT How They Voted

WASHINGTON—Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes August 3 through August 9.

HOUSE

CETA REFORM—Adopted, 230 for and 175 against, an amendment lowering the top salary paid under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA). CETA is the main federal program for putting poor people to work, primarily in state and local public-sector jobs funded by the U.S. Treasury. The five-year old program has become controversial because of reports it is riddled in many cities by such abuses as nepotism, patronage and fraud.

This amendment was attached to HR 12452, a bill to extend CETA for two years and safeguard it against abuse. The bill was later passed and sent to the Senate. This amendment limits to $10,000 annually the top CETA salary that can be paid in "low-wage" areas of the country, and to $12,000 the top pay for "high-wage" areas. Also, it limits the average nationwide CETA wage to $7,000.

Rep. David Obey, D-Wisc., sponsor of the amendment, said: "I do think a $15,000-a-year job for CETA is politically indefensible. I do not think our constituents understand why we ought to be paying people that large a salary for a CETA job."

Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., an opponent, said that if CETA is "to be something more than training individuals for menial, low-paying jobs...the Obey amendment certainly will not accomplish it."

Members voting "yea" favored lower pay for CETA job-holders.

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L. H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Stephen Neal, D-5, Richardson Preyer, D-6, Charles Rose, D-7, W. G. Hefner, D-8, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10, and Lamar Gudger, D-11, voted "yea."

Rep. Ike Andrew, D-4, voted "nay."

CETA—Adopted, 221 for and 181 against, an amendment to cut $1 billion from the public-service-jobs section of the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) and divert about half of that sum to youth unemployment and private-sector CETA programs. The amendment was attached to the CETA reform bill (see vote above).

It marks a shift in emphasis in CETA by increasing funding for training poor youths for private-sector jobs and decreasing money for putting poor adults in public sector jobs. Although it leaves several hundred thousand jobs for adults untouched, it favors the child at the expense of the father.

Rep. John Anderson, R-Ill., a supporter, said the "real scandal" of CETA is not how the money has been spent "but how it has not been spent. We are not just wasting taxpayers' dollars—we are wasting a precious national resource...I am speaking about the young people of our nation."

Rep. Parren Mitchell, D-Md., an opponent, said the amendment would destabilize poor families. "I would implore my colleagues to look at what that does to family life when the father comes to the son and says, 'Let me borrow two bucks from you so I can go out and look for work.'"

Members voting "yea" favored the amendment.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Gudger voted "yea."

DEFENSE CUTS—Rejected, 102 for and 252 against, an amendment to cut the Department of Defense appropriations bill by two per cent across-the-board. It sought to trim about $2.18 billion from the $119.4 billion bill for defense spending in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. The bill (HR 13635) was later passed and sent to the Senate.

Rep. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, the sponsor, said that after having served as a Navy pilot "there is no one sitting in this room today on the floor of the House who can convince me that there is not at least two per cent waste and inefficiency in the military."

Rep. George Mahon, D-Tex., an opponent, said the defense budget had already been cut by $3 billion in the Appropriations Committee and that "we should not tamper further with the defense program...."

Members voting "yea" favored the cut in defense spending.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner, Martin and Broyhill voted "nay."

SENATE
NEW OFFICES—Voted, 45 for and 29 against, to table and thus kill an amendment to permanently stop construction of the third Senate office building. When completed in the 1980's the Phillip A. Hart Building will be the most expensive federal building ever built. Although a removable cap of $135 million has been placed on it, critics say it will eventually cost more than $200 million. The tabled amendment was proposed to HR 13467, an appropriations bill later passed and sent to conference with the House.

Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., a supporter of tabling and an advocate of the building, said senators need more space because "we put up with crowded conditions...that no other executive agency of the federal government puts up with. We also put up with crowded conditions that many businesses would not put up with."

Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., an opponent of tabling, asked: "When everybody is looking to the federal government to do its part in curbing inflation, how can we justify going ahead with what will end up being the most costly federal building ever built in the history of this government?"

Senators voting "yea" favored construction of the third Senate office building.

Sen. Robert Morgan, D, voted "yea."

Sen. Jesse Helms, R, voted "nay."

BILLION-DOLLAR CONGRESS—Passed, 67 for and 20 against, a bill funding the operation of the legislative branch in the fiscal year which begins Oct. 1. The bill covers expenses not only of the Congress but also of support agencies such as the Library of Congress and the General Accounting Office. This marks the first time the legislative appropriations bill has exceeded $1 billion. The bill (HR 12935) was passed and sent to conference with the House.

Sen. Jim Sasser, D-Tenn., a supporter, said it is "regrettable that so much of the taxpayers' money must be expended in support of the legislative branch of government. But I say that many of these expenditures are made necessary by the wishes of the taxpayers themselves in the services they ask of their elected officials."

Sen. Harry Byrd, I-Va., an opponent, said: "The total figure in the bill before the Senate today in my judgment is too high...It is $1.118 billion and that figure compares with $116 million as a total cost of the legislative branch of government in 1960."

Senators voting "yea" favored passage of the bill.

MORE ATTORNEYS—Failed, 36 for and 49 against, to table an amendment increasing the number of attorneys in the Criminal Division of the Justice Department. Failure to table meant, in part, that the Senate went along with President Carter's request for 48 additional Criminal Division attorneys. The Appropriations Committee had opposed the increase.

Sen. Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., a supporter of tabling and thus killing the increase, said that any additional Criminal Division attorneys should be taken from other divisions. He said "...there is no shortage of lawyers in the Justice Department. They are falling over one another down there."

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., an opponent of tabling, said: "It is time we stop talking about the problem of major criminal activity....It is time, quite frankly, that we literally put our money where our mouths are....It is time we give the department the resources it needs to get the job done."

Senators voting "yea" opposed the additional Criminal Division attorneys.

Helms voted "yea." Morgan voted "nay."

Found Martini Lunch Fading

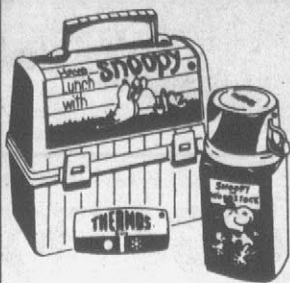

NEW YORK (UPI) — After hearing President Carter wish death upon the three-martini lunch, Fred Danzig, executive editor of the weekly trade paper Advertising Age, surveyed "20 major Manhattan food arsenals frequented by ad people."

He found a 50 percent reduction from the martini pace of five years ago. One manager said, "The three martini lunch has faded away to almost nobody." White wine is showing strength, so is plain mineral water.

Bruton Disagrees With NAACP

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State School Board Chairman David Bruton says he disagrees with recent statements by the NAACP, whose leaders have called the state's competency testing program discriminatory.

The NAACP and a Durham citizens' group met recently and criticized the test, which all state high school students will be required to pass before they receive a diploma. They said the tests would discriminate against black and poor-white students.

"There are a great many people in the community who feel the competency test is a way to exclude some young people from our high schools," said state board member Prezell Robinson of Raleigh. "I think the concerns are valid."

But Bruton said he believes the tests will have the opposite effect on students.

"I have been a little discouraged and disappointed with groups who say the competency test is a way to discriminate," Bruton said. "I see it as just the opposite."

"I believe we're honestly saying to a group of disadvantaged students who we haven't previously served right, 'Okay, we're going to do it right now,'" he said.

State Treasurer Harlan Boyles, an ex-officio board member, said school districts would not have to "do it right" as long as they issued certificates of attendance to students who fail the tests, as the board decided last week.

"As long as we insist on students passing the test to receive a diploma, the pressure is on the school systems to produce," Boyles said. "But when the certificate is offered, the systems have a way out."

Shore Up Loopholes

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State officials are already planning ways to shore up loopholes in the state's competency testing program, although the program isn't even under way yet.

Officials have discovered that there is apparently nothing to prevent a student from dropping out of school, waiting six months or longer and then enrolling in an adult high school program run by a community college.

Competency tests will not be required for graduation, with a diploma, from those programs, and officials are trying to decide who should take the first steps toward plugging up the loophole.

"The Department of Public Instruction and the state Board of Education will be looking at any loopholes and shoring them up," said Jerome Melton, deputy state school superintendent.

"We will recommend to the board, and I think the board will agree to, the shoring up of any loopholes where kids can escape the competency tests and get a diploma," he said.

Melton said the Community Colleges department should be the one to ask for competency testing in the adult programs.

"The state superintendent wouldn't have the authority to ask for competency testing in the adult high school program," Melton said.

But Charles Holloman, vice president of planning in the community college department, said Melton is wrong. He said the colleges administer the programs, but the diplomas are issued by local school units.

"The public school people might have to raise the question," Holloman said. He said new legislation may be required.

The competency tests will be administered to high school juniors this fall.

Ad Agencies Take Up Space

NEW YORK (UPI) — The 1,255 ad agencies in New York City occupy 9,047,750 square feet or 208 acres, twice the area of Vatican City.

Madison Avenue leads in floor space but Third Avenue is gaining, according to the Williams Real Estate annual survey.

New Pope Will Be Prisoner Of Luxury

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI worked from dawn until after midnight seven days a week, and Pope John XXIII agreed with his brother that the pope was a "prisoner of luxury."

Like his predecessors in modern times, the man the College of Cardinals elects to succeed Pope Paul will immediately lose most of his personal freedom.

He will get a 15th century palace filled with priceless antiques and art works, a staff of thronebearers, chauffeurs, cooks and secretaries, and a private army, the Swiss Guards, pledged to sacrifice their lives for him.

For this he takes on the burdens of the Roman Catholic church and of the 108-acre Vatican city-state, with their constant demands on his time. He also will be subject to the limitations of special security. Popes live on the top floor of the Vatican Palace, adjoining St. Peter's Basilica, with three windows looking out on the vast square from the papal apartment.

There are 1,400 halls, rooms, galleries and chapels in the palace, but the pope's apartment contains only six. He also uses a private chapel and a room set aside for television.

In his 15-year pontificate, Paul varied his schedule only when stricken with bouts of painful arthritis, which made walking difficult.

He usually got up at 4 or 5 a.m., awakened by a battery alarm clock by his bed, and often didn't turn in until 1:30 or 2 a.m.

His day was spent holding audiences, conferring with officials of the church and poring through mountains of paperwork churned out by the

Pope Paul and Pope John ate with only their closest aides, and usually in the papal apartment. No one can recall a pope eating at a restaurant.

Paul got his daily news in a summary prepared by an aide. He didn't have time to go through newspapers.

The pope also gives up speaking of himself in the singular "I," using the "We" form instead. The only public exception in Paul's 15-year pontificate was his unsuccessful handwritten appeal "on my knees" to the Red Brigades to free former Premier Aldo Moro.

The pope has three chief tasks that consume much of his time. He is the primary teacher of the church, giving out his views in speeches and encyclicals. He also governs the church through the Curia, the Vatican's bureaucracy, and he is the chief celebrant of Roman Catholic liturgy.

Asks For Prayers

WASHINGTON (AP) — First lady Rosalynn Carter says U.S. cardinals who will help select a new pope are asking Americans to pray for them as they go about their task.

Mrs. Carter spoke to the cardinals in Rome, where she represented the United States at the funeral of Pope Paul VI. She commented after her arrival Sunday at Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland, where President Carter welcomed her back. Other members of the U.S. delegation returning with Mrs. Carter were Leonel J. Castillo, commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization; Gov. Hugh Carey of New York; Rep. Robert Giaino, D-Conn. and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

Tar Heel Created Fraternal Insurance

By DR. H. G. JONES
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A North Carolina native is credited with being the "father" of fraternal societies that became commonplace in the 19th Century, which provided various types of insurance for their members.

John Jordon Upchurch was brought up in poverty in Franklin County, where he was born March 26, 1820. He received little education, worked on a farm, clerked in a country store, and tried his hand as a millwright.

united with it, and opened what was to be the first temperance house south of Mason and Dixon's line."

But a hotel without a bar proved unprofitable, and it was closed in 1844. Upchurch sighed, "We were in advance of the times. The people had not been educated up to this point."

Upchurch worked for a while on the Raleigh and Gaston

Railroad, then roamed around the country, working as a horse tamer and trader.

In 1846, he and his wife moved to Pennsylvania, where he went from job to job before becoming a mechanic on the Mine Hill and Schuylkill Haven Railroad.

During the Civil War, when other employees went on strike, Upchurch, by then a master mechanic, was placed in charge of soldiers and ran the railroad for a couple of weeks. It was during the strike that he developed a lifelong antipathy to labor unions.

He wrote, "I saw more and more the injustice done not only to capital, but to laboring men, whom they profess to befriend. I was thoroughly convinced the way these societies were managed, that they exercised a baneful influence upon the business relations of the country."

His aim was to "unite employer and employee into an organization and obligate them to some great principles."

His opportunity came at Meadville, Pa., when he joined the League of Friendship, Supreme Mechanical Order of the Sun, a secret workers organization then popular in the north. Not satisfied with the management of the order, Upchurch led a revolt of members and established Jefferson Lodge No. 1 of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, which became a model for other fraternal movements. Although the new group opposed strikes, it was more of a lodge than a labor union. Its novelty was the collection of a dollar per member which went into a mutual burial fund. This idea of a fraternal order providing for benefits upon the death or distress of a member caught on rapidly among the working class for whom insurance of any other type was out of reach. As the AOOW spread across the country, similar societies sprang up.

BC Attracts

More Tourists

VANCOUVER (AP) — British Columbia's travel industry generated $1.3 million in revenues in 1977, an increase of 14 percent over the previous year, according to the Canadian government office of tourism.

The province expects even more impressive gains this year as a result of Captain Cook Bicentennial celebrations.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Opponents of liquor by the drink in North Carolina have released their own study on the impact of mixed drinks in South Carolina, contradicting findings by the South Carolina Alcohol and Drug Abuse Commission.

Last week, the commission said per capita liquor consumption had declined in South Carolina since minibottle sales were approved, from 2.2 gallons per year in 1974 to 2.1 gallons last year.

People Who Care, led by the Rev. Coy Privette and Henderson Belk, Monday challenged the commission's figures.

Their group presented figures for South Carolina liquor consumption, saying the statistics had been compiled by the Distilled Spirits Council of the U.S. Inc.

The statistics showed consumption rose from 1.89 gallons per capita in 1974, below the national average of 1.97 gallons, to 2.11 gallons last year, higher than the national average of two gallons.

North Carolina figures in the same period rose from 1.53 gallons to 1.57 gallons, the report showed.

Dr. A.D. Link of the Alcohol and Drug Abuse Commission took issue with People Who Care's claim that liquor-by-the-drink has failed to slow liquor consumption in South Carolina.

He says the figures the group cites were compiled by the Distilled Spirits Council under a revised method based on tax revenue rather than wholesale receipts, which had been used until 1975.

Link said he did not have "the slightest idea" whether the 1.89 gallon consumption figure for 1974 was an accurate reflection of drinking habits in South Carolina. The problem was that his commission had to rely on outside sources for its data, he said.

"The set of figures is im-material," compared to the fact that per-capita consumption of 2.1 gallons last year was about half a gallon less than what the commission estimated South Carolinians would have consumed in 1977 without liquor-by-the-drink, he said.

Consumption had risen since 1960 and had continued to climb even after brown-bagging was enacted in 1967, he said. Only with the passage of the minibottle law did the increase in consumption slow, he added.
