U.S. Urged To Prop Up American Dollar Value

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Foreign financial experts welcomed the U.S. Federal Reserve Board's effort to bolster the sagging value of the dollar, but they stressed they saw the move as little more than "a stopgap measure."

They urged further efforts by the United States to prop up the American currency, which has plummeted in value against major world currencies in the last 15 months.

The Federal Reserve decided Friday to raise its discount rate to commercial banks from 7¼ percent to 7¾ percent, effective Monday. The discount rate is the interest the Federal Reserve charges member banks to borrow money.

The White House announcement Friday that a breakthrough had been made to advance President Carter's energy package in Congress also was expected to have a positive effect on the value of the dollar.

The increase in the discount rate is expected to make shortterm borrowing more expensive for some business borrowers and could lead to higher interest rates for the general public.

By forcing up interest rates, the United States hopes to reduce the domestic money supply and help curb inflation, currently running at an annual rate of 10.7 per cent, and make U.S. investments more attractive to foreigners, thus improving the U.S. trade deficit.

The move was seen as the first positive action by the United States to ease worldwide pressure on the dollar after two days of reassuring statements from the White House failed to relieve that pressure.

A senior Finance Ministry official in Tokyo praised the action but stressed it was only a "stopgap measure" that must be followed by concrete steps to shore up the dollar.

A Bank of Japan spokesman said the discount rate increase will help the dollar to some extent but he insisted further action must be taken within the next two or three weeks to halt the dollar's slide.

"We believe the Reserve Board's action is certainly a step to stem the current disorderly monetary market and (we) hope the United States will take further financial and other appropriate measures soon," the Japanese bank official said.

"We're not so optimistic that this step alone will solve every problem," he added.

The board's announcement came too late Friday to help the dollar on European and Japanese foreign exchanges, where it continued to sag amid widespread disappointment with Carter's failure to announce specific measures to revive it at his news conference Thursday. The annoucement did, however, boost the dollar on the New York foreign exchange in late trading Friday.

Few European government officials or monetary experts were available for comment over the weekend.

However, London's highly respected Financial Times commented: "Unless a 'followthrough' results in terms of a more credible anti-inflation policy and effective intervention in the foreign exchange markets, the dollar could topple at the next bit of bad news."

The paper noted that the Reserve Board's action "won it back some of its lost credibility" following the U.S. government's reluctance in recent months to take any firm steps to brake the dollar's slide.

The Times of London cautioned that the "White House's rejoicing ...might be premature.

The London Guardian's financial correspondent, Alex Brummer, stressed, "The fact that even modest action like raising the discount rate could turn the rating of the dollar has led to suggestions ... that it is within the grasp of the Americans to turn the tide against their currency through relatively traditional weapons."

The daily La Stampa, in Turin, Italy, was less optimistic.

"A ...plan was expected from Carter, but it didn't come," the newspaper said, adding, "The moves to support the dollar are not sufficient to restore faith in the American currency."

DOLLAR GAINS SOME STRENGTH — Traders at the Bank of America's foreign money exchange man open lines to European financial centers in New York. Promises Action

By MICHAEL DOAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration promises more action in the next few weeks to keep the dollar from taking a beating on international exchange markets and from eroding Americans' purchasing power at home.

The decline in the dollar on exchange markets is felt immediately only by tourists and foreign exchange traders. However, it shows up in this country later in the form of higher prices and other economic problems.

Worried about the impact, the Federal Reserve took action Friday to push interest rates up in support of the dollar.

The White House, agreeing with the action, added, "There will be a series of continuing actions over the next several weeks to deal with these problems."

The administration gave no indication what other actions were being considered. President Carter has asked for Cabinet recommendations.

The dollar has lost over 30 percent of its value in the past year against the Japanese yen, 33 percent against the Swiss franc and 15 percent against the German mark.

These currencies were particularly strong already, but the dollar has also lost ground to the weaker British pound and the Italian lira. The drop was particularly steep in the past week.

At first it appeared that the decline was caused by speculation fever in world trading exchanges. But most economists now agree that the problem is a problem of the U.S. economy.

Contributing to the problem, they say, are:

—The trade balance. Most of the $26 billion deficit with other countries last year is blamed on oil imports from the Middle East. Meanwhile, Germany and Japan have enjoyed trade surpluses. But a lower dollar may improve the trade deficit by making U.S. goods cheaper overseas and foreign products

Hearing Set On Alaskan Oil

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Congressional hearings begin Monday on what to do with Alaskan oil — distribute it via pipelines directly to eastern and midwestern states from the West Coast where it is now shipped or first trade it for a higher grade crude from abroad.

As it is, oil from Alaska's North Slope continues to pile up along with California oil in West Coast ports, unsuited for most refinery processes there and creating an ironic glut in a nation concerned over heavy reliance on foreign oil imports.

A number of alternatives and vested interests were expected to be heard before the special subcommittee of the House Interior Committee meeting in San Francisco for two days.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., according to his staff, will appear Monday to offer a plan for reducing U.S. dependence on foreign oil.

Oil industry leaders, congressmen and companies proposing various east-bound pipeline routes — one across Guatemala — were scheduled to testify.

Under the foreign trade-off proposal, Alaskan oil would be traded to Japan for higher grade, lower sulfur crude which Japan acquires from the Persian Gulf and Indonesia. Such a swap would allow better use of West Coast refineries, most of which are not equipped to process the heavier, highsulfur crude from Alaska but are able to process the so-called "sweet" crude they would receive via Japan.

Committee staffers say the hearings will take up only short-term answers to that question. One such plan calls for running a pipeline 227 miles across Guatemala — a private undertaking by a Guatemala group.

Not of the specific interest to the present hearings, staffers say, are long-term transcontinental pipeline proposals.

Alaskan oil bound for the eastern markets presently is transshipped through the Panama Canal, a slow and expensive process that is one reason for the glut of Alaskan crude in California.

Several factors account for the overabundance in California, said to be stacking up by as much as 400,000 barrels a day.

Refineries in the state are producing less refined oil because of the glut in residual fuels — those left after products such as gasoline have been refined out. Cheaper sources of energy have become available, mainly natural gas from Canada and plenty of hydroelectric power from heavy winter rain and snow.

The market is thus down for the residual fuels and refineries are stockpiling.

The federal government has offered incentives to California refiners to try to ease the oil bulge in the state.

$199.95 Competency Test Kit

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — School systems across North Carolina are buying instructional kits designed to help prepare students for the state's new competency testing program.

An official of Media Consultants in Cary, the firm marketing the materials in the eastern part of the state, said Friday that schools are snapping up the kits, priced at $199.95, so quickly he can't keep a supply on hand.

Educators and spokesmen for the company that publishes the competency tests all say the kits are designed to help prepare students for test questions posing "real-life" problems but do not take questions from the examinations.

"To teach the test, you have to take the test items and show them to the students," said Keith I. Wilson, senior products manager for CTBMcGraw Hill, which produces the tests. "The thing we try to do (with the kits) is teach the objectives measured by the test."

The kits, made by Educational Development Laboratory, a subsidiary of CTBMcGraw, are designed for use by teachers, and most officials say one kit per school is sufficient.

High school juniors will take the competency test this fall and, beginning the following year, seniors must pass the test in order to graduate.

Test questions are designed to measure the ability of students to master 10 broad objectives in reading and 11 in math. They require students to perform such tasks as filling out a job application, balancing a checkbook or reading a road map.

The instructional kits include exercises for students based on those types general types of skills, Wilson said. He said employees of Educational Development Laboratory never see the competency test.

Wilson said the exercises are a logical way to teach students to deal with the kinds of problems they will face on the competency tests.

"If you are going to teach kids to read a road map, you don't do it with a telephone directory," he said. "You use a road map."

To Seek Funds To Aid U.S. Military Costs

TOKYO (AP) — The Japanese Defense Agency will ask Parliament for an additional $118 million over the next two years to shoulder a larger share of U.S. military costs in Japan, the Kyodo news service reported today.

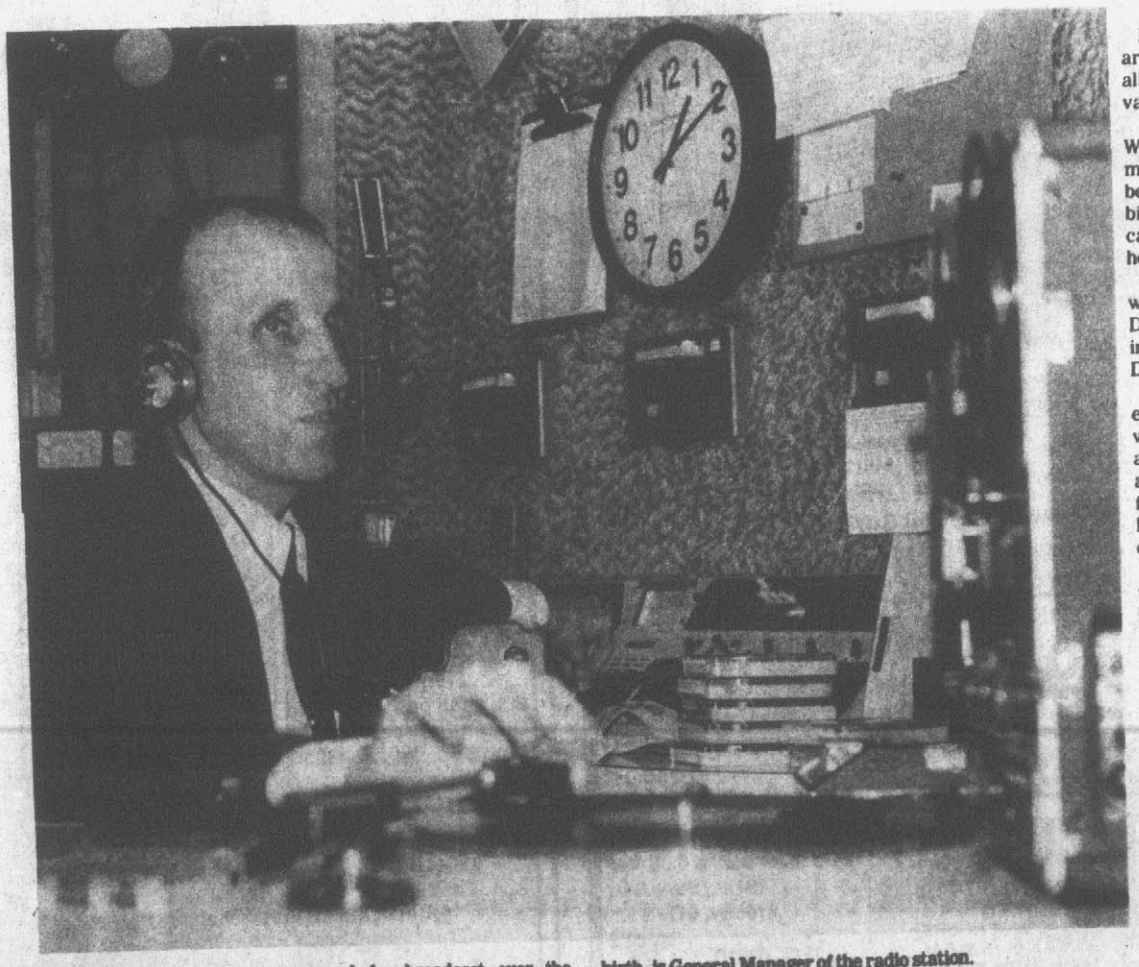

Kyodo quoted Defense Agency sources as saying the budget, if approved by Parliament, will finance construction of housing at American bases in Yokota, Iwakuni, Misawa and Okinawa.

Defense Minister Shin Kanemaru, during his visit to Washington in June, told Secretary of Defense Harold Brown that Japan was willing to pay more to help maintain U.S. forces in Japan, Kyodo said.

Hard hit by the dollar's loss of value against the Japanese yen — 30 percent in the past year — American military officials have been calling for more spending by Japan, it said.

The United States pays about $1 billion a year to keep troops in Japan. Japan, under an agreement with the United States spends $537 million annually, Kyodo said.

Praise Of The Lord Fills Blind Disc Jockey's Daily Life

WBZQ-1550 AM, cues up a record for broadcast over the Christian-music radio station. Danny, blind since shorly after birth, is General Manager of the radio station.

By LYNN CAVERLY
Reflector Staff Writer

Danny Dyer's light blue eyes are alive with excitement, but all he can see out of them are vague shadows.

General Manager of WBZQ-1550 AM, local Christian-music radio station, Danny has been blind since shortly after birth. But in talking to him, one can't help but believe him when he says "I will see again."

"It is God's will that man be whole in body, mind and spirit," Danny said, with his arm lifted in praise of the Lord who fills Danny's everyday life.

Being a disc jockey is hectic enough for the sighted, what with meter readings, putting in and taking out tape cassettes and time schedules that must be followed down to the second. But for Danny, it all seems second nature.

Interested in radio since he was a child, Danny, who is 35, has been working in the broadcasting field since September, 1962.

"I grew up in a good phase of radio," Danny reminisces, "There were the mysteries, soap operas, live shows. But I was always told I couldn't work in radio because I would get an electrical shock."

Danny says there alot more handicapped persons in radio today, due to the many special adaptations available that allow alternative ways to do the job for those who are unable to do it the conventional way.

For example, sighted persons in radio can take the meter readings that must be recorded every three hours simply by looking at the right dials. Danny owns an audio device to read the meters with. The device puts out a sound that falls silent when he has the correct reading.

Danny also owns his own braille typewriter, and believes strongly that handicapped persons should provide any special adaptations necessary for them to do a job.

"Some handicapped persons feel different than I do," said Danny. "They feel that the employer should provide these things for them. But when you compete on the job market, you don't do it on the basis of what you don't have, you compete with what you have. And by owning these adaptations, I have a decided edge over the others."

By thinking this way, Danny has only experienced unemployment twice in his life. He has, at one time, worked 30 hours a week at a television station while working 40 hours a week at a radio station.

Danny's present position is his first management level position. He has been with WBZQ since February. Originally from Manassas, Va., he has worked in Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia and New Mexico. He received his formal training from the Cambridge School of Broadcasting in 1962 and hopes to get more schooling in the future.

"I have run into a couple of situations where I was denied the chance for a job because of my blindness," said Danny, "but I don't feel bitter about it. It is up to the individual what will happen in his life, not others. It is not right to depend on others when so many opportunities exist."

Danny is presently on the air from noon to 2 p.m. with a phone-in program "Swap 'N Shop", along with news and music. "We are trying to get more involved with the community," Danny said. "I also do a little bit of everything else, but then everyone around here does that. It gives us a chance to make a little more money that way."

Danny never blames his blindness for any failures he has experienced in his life, and doesn't blame others.

His blindness was a result of too much oxygen present in the incubator he was placed in after being born prematurely. This abundance of oxygen burnt the film on his retinas. He has some perception of light, but no color recognition or depth perception.

"There was this one time," Danny begins one of his many stories. "while I lived in Asheville, that the church members said they would foot the bill if there was anything that could be done to regain my sight.

"We located some doctors in Winston-Salem who were willing to try and hopeful that they would be successful.

"A couple of weeks before I was to go see them, I kept having this pain behind my eyes. The doctors told me that the pain had been caused by a marked deterioration of the optic nerve, and if I had come to them before this pain started I would have had a good chance of regaining my sight.

"But now, the medical opinion is that my case is hopeless. My opinion is different."

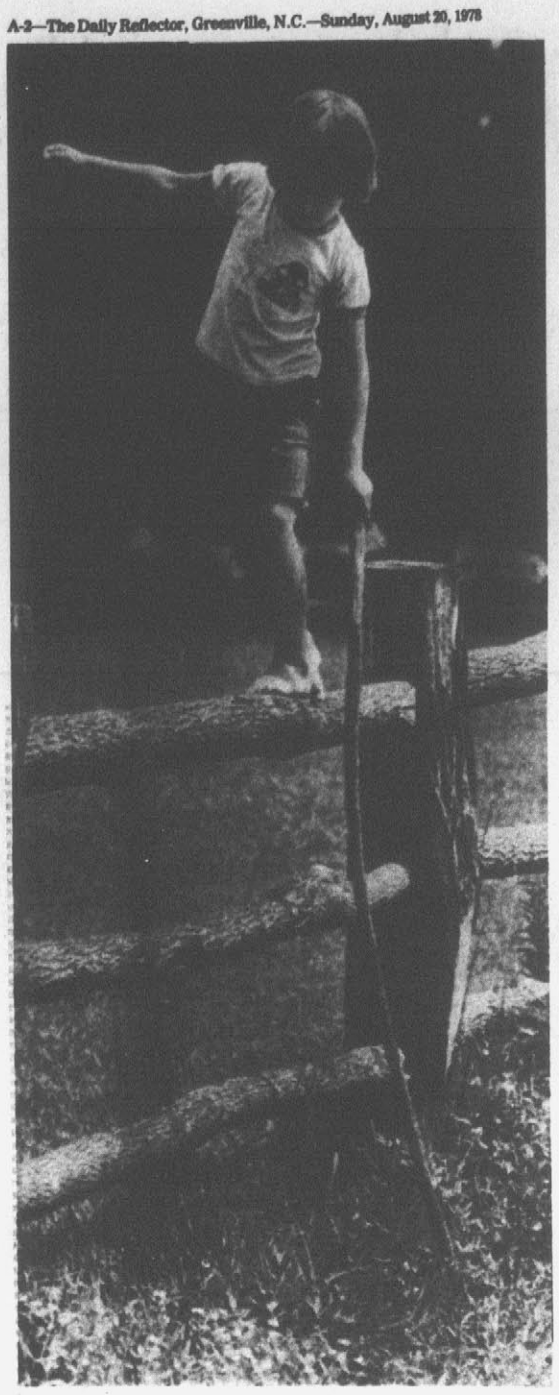

Danny's belief in the Lord is as unpretentious as it is unfailing. He tells of the times before he gave his life into the Lord's hands, the searching for some meaning to his life.

"I was 17 years old, close to suicide and on the way to becoming an alcoholic." Danny said, not hesitating a bit in revealing this personal side of his past. "And not as a result of my blindness either.

"I gave my life to Jesus figuring I had nothing to lose and everything to gain. It was no heavy emotional experience. But I did find a purpose for being here.

"A lot of people say to me, 'Of course you should be a Christian Danny, after all you work for a Christian radio station, you have a vested interest in it because of your job.'

"You know what I tell them," Danny said, smiling the whole time he tells this story, "I am not a Christian because of my job—I have this job because it is my way of serving the Lord."

Woman In Trouble Used As Ploy

Man Killed In Ambush

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A vacationing West Virginian was killed, another was injured and three men were locked in the trunks of their cars when they stopped early Saturday to assist what appeared to be a woman in distress.

Wake County Deputy Sheriff W.E. McClair said that in two instances, motorists were flagged down by the young woman whose car had apparently broken down.

When the motorists pulled over to help, two men, armed with a sawed-off shotgun and a .38-caliber pistol, emerged from the woods and robbed them.

The first robbery occurred around 2:30 a.m. just south of Raleigh. George Ballentine, 19, of Raleigh, said he was robbed of $12 and was locked in the trunk of his car. He was not hurt.

The second incident occurred several hours later several miles away near the Wake-Durham county line.

In that incident, three West Virginia men on vacation stopped to help the girl. The two bandits came out of the woods and forced two of the men into the trunck and forced the other to drive them away, police said.

After driving several miles, they pulled behind an abandoned house. At that point, the motorist who had been made to drive was shot and killed, police said.

After the killers left, the two men locked in the trunk pried their way out with a tire tool. One of them had been struck with a pistol and suffered a head laceration. The other was not injured.

Wake County authorities identified the dead man as Jerry Romain, 33, of Point Pleasant, W.Va. The two men locked in the trunk of the car were identified as Roger Bumgardner and Richard Pickens, both of Point Pleasant. Police said Bumgardner, who was struck on the head with a pistol, was treated for lacerations at a Wake County hospital.

In the first robbery, Ballentine said he stopped to help a stranded woman motorist about 2:30 a.m..

"I drove up to the front of the car, and a girl came over and said she didn't know what what was wrong with the car and that she didn't know how to get the hood up," Ballentine told reporters.

"Just about the time I got the hood up, two guys came out of the bushes," he said. He said the two robbed him of $12 and forced him to get in the trunk of his car.

"I was real happy to get in that trunk," he said. "I thought they were going to kill me." He said he escaped through the back seat and called police.

more expensive here in the United States.

—Energy policy. Foreign traders cite the inability by Congress and the Carter administration to agree on an energy policy as a major problem. A program to reduce oil imports may reduce the trade deficit. The administration won a victory in this area Friday when a natural gas bill was —Uncertainty. It focuses on doubts about what economic policy is and who is making it: Congress, Carter or the Federal Reserve Board.

—Inflation. Consumer prices are rising at a rate of more than 10 percent a year. If the dollar is worth less in the United States, it also becomes worth less to foreigners. It also means an unstable economy, some economists say.

"Put altogether, inflation is rising, there is no Federal Reserve backbone (and) the administration is unable to get its policy enacted," said an economist for a Washington economic research group.

"People are saying let's get out of the dollar and it's not just overseas, most dollar holders are in this country," said the economist, who asked that his name or the name of his group not be identified.

One effect of the dollar's decline is to allow imported products to go up in price in this country. That allows many American producers to raise their prices also.

It is hard to figure the effect on inflation, but there are some estimates that a 5 percent decline in the dollar for a full year adds 0.5 to 0.75 percent to inflation over one year.

The dollar's decline also may have subtle effects that cannot yet be calculated. The dollar is the world's main reserve asset, and the Arab oil-producing countries conduct many of their transactions in dollars.

With those problems in mind, the Federal Reserve said it tightened credit Friday because of "recent disorderly conditions in foreign exchange markets as well as the continuing serious domestic inflationary problem."

Rising interest rates are intended to reduce the money supply and help reduce inflation.

They also make U.S. investment more attractive to foreigners. If the money comes into this country, there are fewer dollars overseas and their value starts to increase again.

Going All Out

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The legal adviser to Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. says his investigative team is "going all out" in its probe of a lease and agreement that has cost the state several hundred thousand dollars.

Jack L. Cozort said Friday nine to 10 investigators have worked on the 1975 lease of space in a state-owned hospital in Wilson as well as on a related food service agreement. That latter deal involved the purchase of $606,319 worth of food for $190,164 over a two-year period that ended earlier this year.

A corporation owned by Roy G. Sowers Jr. of Sanford and three associates owned the lease for space.

State Approves First N.C. Peat Mine Permit

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — First Colony Farms Inc. has won state approval for an experimental program to determine whether it is economically feasible to mine peat as a source of energy.

The state Division of Land Resources notified officials of First Colony, a Creswell-based corporate farming operation with 300,000 acres in North Carolina, Friday of the decision to grant a permit for mining of peat on a 219-acre tract near Creswell.

Jim Simons, a mining specialist for the state agency, said the two-year permit, the first in North Carolina, will be issued when First Colony posts a $25,000 bond that is necessary to ensure reclamation of the land.

First Colony has proposed the mining of an estimated 407 million tons of peat from 146,000 acres of bogs in northeastern North Carolina.

The North Carolina Electric Membership Corp., an electric utility, would like to build a power plant that would burn peat to produce electricity for 45 years.

Simons said there should be no major environmental damage from the experimental mine. There have been proposals to reclaim the mined land for row-crop farming, planting of trees or building of lakes.

Robberies Suspect Held

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Police say a 37-year-old Virginia man who was charged with the holdup of a Durham bank Thursday has confessed to the robberies of several other banks.

The FBI had said earlier that Edward Howard Berger of Richmond was a suspect in a very substantial number of other bank robberies in Virginia, Pennsylvania, Maryland and North Carolina."

"He admitted several armed robberies, but I can't say where or how many," Durham Detective J.R. Robinson said Friday. Robinson said none of the other robberies was in North Carolina.

Robinson said several hundred dollars was taken in Thursday's holdup of the Northgate branch of the North Carolina National Bank. Berger was arrested near the bank a few minutes later.

Several Accidents Listed

Several accidents occurred in Greenville Friday, but resulted in no personal injuries.

At 12:40 p.m., Levi Gardner Jr. of Ayden Rt. 2 was charged with a red light violation after his car collided with a vehicle being driven by Kirby Ray Hudson of 311 Hillcrest Drive at the intersection of Memorial Drive and the Belvoir highway.

Damages were estimated at $600 to the Hudson car and $800 to the Gardner vehicle.

At 1:10 p.m., cars operated by Juanita Clark Anderson of 1819 Norcott Circle and Owen Burney of Greenville, Rt. 8, collided at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Chestnut Street. No charges were logged.

Damages were estimated at $200 to each vehicle.

At 2 p.m., Blanche Waters Tetterton of 308 W. Third St. was charged with a traffic light violation after her car struck a vehicle being operated by Lydia Linda Askew of 418 W. 15th St.

The accident occurred at the intersection of S. Greene St. and Fifth St. Damages were estimated at $400 to the Askew car and $200 to the Tetterton vehicle.

Balloonists Receive Heroes Welcome In London

ATTEND DINNER 1ST — The three U.S. balloonists who flew across the Atlantic Ocean meet British balloonist, Major Christopher Davey, at London's Hilton Hotel Saturday afternoon after they had flown here from Paris to attend a dinner with the two British balloonists who were unsuccessful in their attempt to cross the Atlantic. By MICHAEL DENNIGAN

LONDON (UPI) — Three Americans who conquered the Atlantic by balloon flew to London Saturday — this time by jet — and received a spontaneous heroes' welcome from hundreds of cheering and applauding passengers at Heathrow Airport.

Ben Abruzzo, Max Anderson and Larry Newman, all from Albuquerque, N.M., came to London like conquering heroes to buy a consolation dinner for two British balloonists who barely failed in their attempt to cross the Atlantic last month.

The rivals had a bet that the first to make it would buy dinner for the others. The Americans were paying off Saturday night.

Well-wishers cheered and applauded the American balloonists and their wives, who were surrounded by autograph hunters and cameramen as they walked through the airport to meet one of the British balloonists, Maj. Chris Davey.

Davey and co-pilot Don Cameron ballooned from Newfoundland to about 100 miles off the French coast but had to ditch into the sea. They cancelled plans for another attempt after the Americans landed in a wheat field Thursday, 50 miles west of Paris.

"It was a very emotional meeting," Davey told reporters.

"The first thing I said to Ben was, 'Marvellous to see you on British soil. Well done, you old bastard'."

Abruzzo, at 48 the oldest of the balloonists, said, "It was a fine greeting. I know I had mixed emotions about our meeting and I guess Maj. Davey had as well."

The dinner at which the rival balloonists planned to exchange experiences was being held at the Savoy Hotel which invented a "Double Eagle cocktail" in honor of the American balloon, Double Eagle II.

The Americans planned to rest in London before flying back to Paris Tuesday to accept several official French government awards and return to the United States Friday aboard a supersonic Concorde flight to Washington, compliments of Air France.

"We decided it would be nice to come to Europe by the slowest means possible and return by the fastest," said Newman.

Before returning home, the balloonists also plan to return to thank Roger Coquerel, the farmer who owned the four-acre wheat field near Evreux where they landed Thursday.

Sightseers trampled much of his crop beyond recovery but Coquerel said his insurance would cover the damage.

"If I'd known they were coming I'd have broken out a barrel of cider," he laughed.

The balloon and gondola, under guard at a nearby air base, will go on display at Evreux city hall next week when the town celebrates the 34th anniversary of its World War II liberation.

Second Carter Visit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will campaign for Democratic Senate candidate John Ingram in Asheville, N.C., on Sept. 15, the White House announced Friday.

Charles H. Smith, an aide to state Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, said tentative plans for Carter's visit call for a $500-a-couple fund-raising program at the Biltmore Estate.

"Wallace Hyde and I'll be coordinating the thing," Smith said in a telphone interview. "I'm helping Ingram raise money."

James Earl Ray Returned To Jail

By DANIEL F. GILMORE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — James Earl Ray was back behind bars Saturday and, barring a miracle when his congressional "trial" resumes in November, appears destined to serve his full 99-year sentence for killing Martin Luther King.

The House Assassinations Committee took Ray out of his Tennessee prison and gave him the public forum he has sought for years to plead his innocence despite a formal confession of guilt. But it also revealed new evidence that Ray and his lawyer, Mark Lane, found "most damaging."

Two surprise developments Friday dealt severe blows to Ray's claim — a retired British policeman's statement that Ray boasted of killing King shortly after his arrest in London in 1968, and another witness' admission that his support of Ray's alibi was fabricated.

Lane responded angrily to the written statement from the policeman, saying he understood the officer had been charged with corruption and fired in disgrace. That forced an abrupt delay until November in further questioning of Ray.

Scotland Yard later said the officer — Alexander Anthony Eist, now a pub owner — was found innocent of corruption in a trial earlier this year.

When Ray reappears before the committee in November, questioning is expected to focus on whether he was part of a conspiracy rather than a lone killer. The committee holds hearings in September on conspiracy theories about the killing of John F. Kennedy.

Ray will have much to ponder after three days of hearings that produced:

—Testimony that he left Los Angeles in 1968 and, paralleling King's movements, went to Selma, Ala., Atlanta, and finally to Memphis, Tenn., where the civil rights leader was killed by a bullet from the rifle Ray admits he bought.

—Evidence that Ray was in Atlanta on April 1, 1968.

In an outburst that made his lawyer wince, Ray told the committee if anyone could show he was in Atlanta April 1 "I'll just take responsibility for the King case right here on TV." The committee produced a woman, now 75, who said from a wheelchair that she had made out laundry and dry cleaning receipts to a man calling himself Eric Galt, an alias used by Ray, in Atlanta on that day.

—A surprise admission of lying from the only living supporter of Ray's alibi that was at a Memphis service station when King was killed.

"This story is completely false," said Dean Cowden, who had first corroborated Ray's alibi. Cowden, a commodity dealer, said he was more than 400 miles away at his Port Neches, Texas, home at the time and had given false information to help a friend who was an investigator for one of Ray's earlier lawyers.

— Fingerprints connecting Ray to a $600 bank robbery in London June 4, 1968, shortly before his arrest, and committee indications that there is evidence linking Ray to a still-unsolved $27,000 bank robbery at Alton, Ill.

That would conflict with Ray's claim he was financed by a mysterious crony named "Raoul" and possibly explain where he got the money to buy a car and travel extensively.

Rep. Samuel Devine, R-Ohio, read aloud the transcript of an interview with Eist that he said the committee obtained just two weeks ago.

Of Ray's role in the King killing, Eist said: "During the course of conversation, he definitely — he didn't actually come out with it — but it was there in the conversation that he done it. He was quite proud of it."

"It's false," said Ray. Both he and Lane said the statement was the "most damaging" evidence yet presented.

Announcement Expected On Use Of Lake Gaston Water

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The Army Corps of Engineers is expected to announce Monday that Lake Gaston, astraddle the Virginia-North Carolina border, should be used to supplement water supplies in southeastern Virginia.

A congressional source said Friday night that Col. Douglas Haller, the new head of the Army engineers' district office here, spent the last three days in Washington talking with Virginia and North Carolina congressmen about Lake Gaston as the water source.

"There is very little major opposition to it," an aide to Rep. Robert W. Daniel, R-4th, said. "Nearly everyone agrees it's the best possible choice."

The populous southeastern Virginia area that includes Norfolk, Virginia Beach, Portsmouth and Chesapeake presently consumes about 90 million gallons of water a day. The daily need is projected to grow by 78 million gallons over the next decade.

State Water Control Board officials had indicated earlier this summer they believed the Blackwater and Nottoway rivers could be used as the water source.

The corps is scheduled to announce its recommendation at 2 p.m. Monday at the engineers' district office here.

Residents and public officials of localities on both the Virginia and North Carolina sides of the lake have protested any move to tap the lake for southeastern Virginia's thirst.

They contend construction of treatment and pumping facilities would lower their property values and turn the clear waters into a mudflat.

North Carolina also contends that using the lake as a water source for southeastern Virginia would stifle industrial development on the Roanoke River in North Carolina.

North Carolina state officials, including Gov. Jim Hunt, oppose using Lake Gaston for southeastern Virginia.

Col. Howard Newman, Haller's predecessor, two months ago said Lake Gaston was the tentative choice.

Robert Nordstrom, an Army engineer who managed a study of water sites, recommended Lake Gaston to both Newman and Haller because its storage provisions are adequate without constructing additional dams.

"The Blackwater and Nottoway river system is not a viable alternative because of objections by agencies such as the National Marine Fisheries," he said.

Environmentalists believe damming the system could prevent fish migration and stop swamp drainage entering from Albemarle Sound, a food supply source.

WTHWWM, Not TGIF

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — School superintendent John Prasch says forget about "TGIF."Instead think "WTHWWM."

Prasch says he wants to get rid of the "Thank God It's Friday" syndrome in the schools because it's demeaning to a teacher's work.

Instead, he told his 600 teachers during a pep talk Friday to kick the "TGIF" habit and think, "What The Hell's Wrong With Monday?"

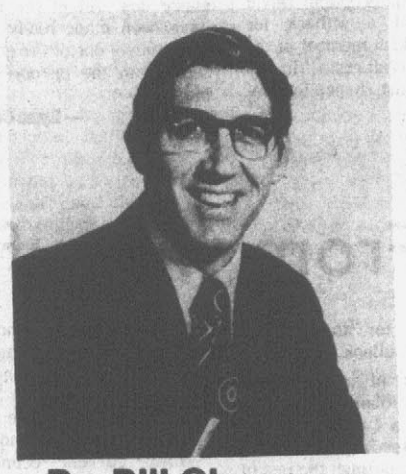

The letters are hard to remember, Prash concedes, but he says that's the point: people are almost afraid to do something unless it's easy.

Prasch says the psychology of "TGIF" is catchy, with people actually believing they're not happy with their work and wanting to get on to something else.

He hopes the "WTHWWM" campaign will catch on around the nation with people looking ahead to the next day or week instead of feeling glad they're finished with what they're doing.

Hospital Agreement Is Working

A report to the Pitt County Memorial Hospital board of trustees recently was significant, particularly to the taxpayers of Pitt County.

Director Jack Richardson said for the seventh consecutive year no subsidy request will be made of Pitt County.

Among other things he pointed to grants from the ECU School of Medicine and the Area Health Education program which fund house staff positions. Subsidies from the medical school reimburse the hospital for expenses of teaching and for operating costs. These tend to keep down general operating costs to the people of Pitt County.

"The current impact of the development of the medical school in Greenville has been beneficial to the economic operation of the hospital at this point," the director said.

Pitt County was venturing into a virtually untested area when the agreement was made to develop the new Pitt County hospital as a joint teaching center with the forming medical school.

Now, however, the working agreement between the county and the medical school is looked upon as a model for other institutions wishing to develop such a relationship.

And, according to Richardson, the development of Pitt County Memorial as a teaching center for the medical school is proving of financial benefit to the people of Pitt County.

The venture should be constantly reviewed to make certain that both the county and the School of Medicine are benefitting. At this point, however, it looks as if the agreement is working better than most would have dared dream.

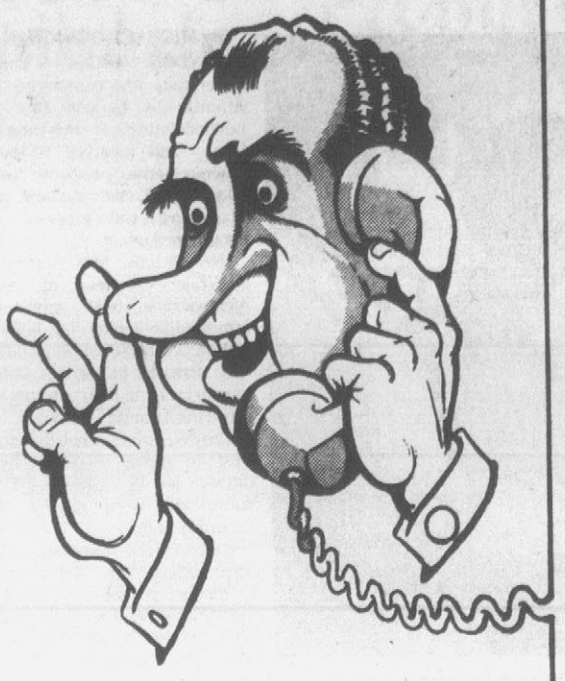

Most Prisoners Desire New Trials

James Earl Ray, who pled guilty to the killing of Martin Luther King, has denied that he committed the crime before a House committee.

He is seeking a trial on the charges in hopes of gaining his freedom.

Ray has presented little hard evidence that he was framed for the shooting and claims he was pulled into the matter by a mysterious "Raoul."

Our society should never fail to pursue any new leads in the case. Nevertheless it is well to remember that the prisons are full of persons who want new trials years later, after the evidence has tended to dissipate.

"Man! We're really on the ol' comeback trail! Now, you just keep on . . ."

In Line For Top Job

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—Exactly what is that those Blacks are protesting North Carolina's high school competency tests are trying to say?

Is the complaint only that some or even all of the questions are racially biased when a socially, economically, and culturally deprived youngster tries to answer them?

Or, it is that any test or other demonstration of failure of large numbers of Black students to measure up to even a minimum level of competency is a sinister new strategy on the part of racists in this state to perpetuate prejudice and hatred?

The answer is much on the minds of state education officials and top-level administrators working for Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr.

If the test as an instrument contains some demonstrably biased material, then fixing it is simple enough. The commission has already worked hard at doing just that. But more could be done if specific problems are identified.

If, however, the present threat of legal action and boycott represents a Black rejection of the very idea that educational shortcomings exist and steps to fix that are essential, then no simple solution is in sight.

National Focus

North Carolina's dilemma is compounded by national attention being drawn to this situation. Talks with a dozen educators and key administration officials uncover deep frustration and confusion regarding the arguement. A public hearing later this month (August 22) before the competency testing commission is expected to help focus the differences.

Early indications are that lack hostility to the test actually aries from a dislike for any approach which seeks to establish a minimal or generally acceptable level of performance, and especially any material which purports to show that Blacks, moreso than whites, tend to fall below such a measurement.

Those who favor the tests, on the other hand, feel that the mechanism allows identification of children with problems in the schools, and that only through this approach can changes be implemented to help those children learn better. If the problem children happen to be poor, have parents who are poor and now well educated, and come from homes where they didn't enjoy books, travel, and emphasis on education—and they happen to be Black as well—then, we need to know that, goes the reasoning.

BILL NOBLITT

"If Black leaders reject this, then they're cutting off their noses to spite their faces'" says one highly placed officials. "What they had better be doing is telling their youngsters to get busy and learn so they can compete in this real world."

Frustration

Much of the frustration in officialdom arises from what is seen as a pattern of rejection by some Black spokesmen of all efforts to raise individuals to a higher level of performance and participation. Language skills, teacher certification, social promotions, diplomas or certificates, discipline, honors classes—a long list of school arguments—are wrapped up in one definition of the dilemma: shall we strive to achieve excellence as a society, or shall we be satisfied with mediocrity so that all are "equal"?

"The Italians, the Irish, the Japanese and Chinese all demanded excellence of their children. They made those children go to school and work hard and learn to speak properly and write well so that they could achieve in this society...and they have," one educator pondered.

"But here, we appear to have a leadership group threatening ugly things to keep their children from aspiring to higher levels of achievement."

Sunday Morning Notes

The Associated Press teletype carried a news story Tuesday which included comments by State School Board Chairman David Bruton on the state competency testing program.

As most readers know, state high school students will be required to pass the test before they receive a diploma.

Soon a revised version of the story appeared on the teletype. Seems competency had been spelled wrong.

The "Jaws" movies are built around sharks eating people, but at Morehead last week people gathered to eat shark.

The occasion was Dr. Frank Schwartz, a shark expert from the UNC Institute of Marine Sciences, speaking.

"The Carteret News-Times" reported that 200 people tried shark meat coated in corn meal and fried in oil. The feeding time was extended for half an hour, but some people were still turned away.

Shark's liver was once used for vitamin A. The liver makes up a third of the shark's weight. The vitamin A can be extracted, Dr. Schwartz said. The liver should be cut into four-inch chunks, get a pressure cooker and take it a block away from the neighborhood, and simmer the liver for several hours. The oil, containing vitamin A rises to the top.

If people get vitamin A out of sharks, wonder what nourishment sharks get out of people?

At any rate those who ate the shark rated it at an average of 4.5, between very good and excellent.

"Texture much the same as white meat of chicken. Needed salt and hold pepper juice," a taster commented.

Dr. Schwartz noted that sharks are common around Carteret County and he had a word of caution to swimmers, surfers and fishermen.

"Respect them," he said. "You're entering their domain."

Shore Up The Dollar

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — For more than a year the value of the once-prized U.S. dollar has drifted steadily downward, and no one seems to know when it will stop. Lately the decline has been worse than ever.

After months of following a hands-off approach recommended by his advisers, President Carter now seems determined to try to put a floor under the falling greenback, but there is reason to fear that any emergency actions to protect the dollar will be doomed to failure.

The fall in the dollar has been overdone at times, particularly when it lost 5 percent of its value in a single day against the Swiss franc this week, and 8 percent in a single week in July against the Japanese yen.

But the downward plunge, from all available evidence, reflects real trends and real underlying economic conditions that will not be changed by stop-gap measures.

An economist for a major Midwest bank summed up the view of several experts when he said that intervention by the government to buy up dollars with foreign currencies might prop up the value of the beleaguered greenback for a time, but only for a time.

Intervention in this manner has been tried before and it is considered the most-likely option for the government to take again if it decides to act.

"The moral of the past is that we could expect a temporary solution at best," he said. "But it would just be a matter of time before it reversed again," he said.

Clearly the dollar is in trouble, and the cost to Americans in inflation and lost confidence has been high. The dollar has lost over 30 percent of its value in the

Azores And Propaganda

By ROBERT H. GOLDSBOROUGH

The Azores and Communist Propaganda

"The archipelago of the Azores, nine little volcanic islands in the Atlantic beginning some eight hundred miles west of Portugal, are of vital important to the defense of the Western World." Thus began J. Evetts Haley's incisive article for our WASHINGTON DATELINE column on May 22, 1978. Three days later, Senator Jesse Helms (R.-N.C.) entered the Haley article in the Congressional Record of May 25. In his prefatory remarks, Sen. Helms underscored the military significance of these Portuguese-held islands.

On July 5, the Communist Party of Portugal went into a full-scale propaganda attack against Sen. Helms, the Haley article and WASHINGTON DATELINE in a two-page centerspread of their paper "O Diario". Because the communists are completely aware of the military importance of the Azores, they were enraged that Haley's article supported the pro-US Azorean Independence Movement, known as the F.L.A.

It is reasonable to ask: Why are the Portuguese communists so enraged over the article and does the Azores really have military importance? General Daniel O. Graham, former director of the Defense Intelligence Agency said: "In any reinforcement of Europe or the Mediterranean area, The Azores are critical." Mr. Haley emphasized this point by listing four key military bases located on the islands: the American Air Force base on Terceira, the NATO refueling station on San Miguel, the NATO submarine sonar tracking station on Santa Maria, and France's missile guidance and tracking base on Flores. "NATO's all-important submarine sonar tracking station, on Santa Maria , is the only base in the Atlantic from which the movements of hostile Russia's vast fleet of submarines can be monitored simultaneously as they range with impurity along the coasts of the Americas, Northern Africa and Europe," according to the Haley article.

On the mainland, the government is a mixed leftist bag—now in a state of uncertainty—because Soares, the Socialist head of Government is out. After four years of Communist Socialist policies, Portugal's economy has collapsed. It even granted independence to Angola and Mozambique when a band of Soviet-supported terrorists claimed they "represented the people."

The Azoreans have watched all of this with alarm. They are a quiet law-abiding and peaceful people. For several years they have ask-

Unsettling Policy

(Greensboro Daily News)

The news out of Israel couldn't have been worse. On the eve of the Israeli-Egyptian summit conference at Camp David, the Israel cabinet had decided to proceed with plans to establish five new settlements in the occupied West Bank.

There was only one word to describe the timing of the decision: Flabbergasting. Every member of Prime Minister Menachem Begin's cabinet knows the settlement policy is a major sticking point in the delicate Mideast negotiations.

President Carter, for one, has expressed open displeasure over the policy. Secretary Vance reiterated that since this week: "Our position is clear," he told a congressional committee. "There should be no settlements."

Apparently that view finally prevailed in Jerusalem— at least for the time being. Just as suddenly as it appeared, the settlement plan has been shelved until after Camp David meeting. The decison was considered a setback for Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon, a hawkish member of the cabinet who has advocated "settlements at all costs." In this case, the cost could well have been one last chance for progress toward peace in the Middle East.

Strength For Today

UTILIZING OLD AGE

The ancient Greeks made it a point to utilize the wisdom of old age to its fullest. Perhaps this is one reason why they were such a marvelously creative people.

They did not believe that because a person had grown old he was useless. They did not expect men beyond middle age to take part in Olympic Games, but they did expect him to write epics and dramas, to design temples, and to write philosophy. The result of this approach to life was that the Greeks developed human capacities to the fullest.

The recent bill passed by Congress raising the retirement age shows a new awareness of the abilities possessed by people of mature years. But if old age is to fulfill its potential, the people in this group must welcome new challenges and face calmly and confidently the prospect of competition with others younger than themselves. Some things they cannot do, but in everything that relates to experience they should be able to keep pace with young competitors.

Optimism From Manufacturers

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — After three good years in a row for the auto industry, there is no shortage of optimism emanating from General Motors Corp. headquarters.

GM Chairman Thomas A. Murphy, who is known for his upbeat business forecasts, stayed right in character this week in his assessment of the outlook for the 1979 model year.

Combined deliveries of cars and trucks in the United States, including imports, will reach a record total of almost 15.4 million units for the 1978 model year, Murphy estimated. In the year that begins next month, he projected a further gain to better than 15.5 million.

Murphy based these figures on an equally bright forecast for the general business outlook.

His script calls for the Gross National Product to grow at a 4 percent annual rate, after adjustment for inflation, through the rest of 1978 and into next year.

"The consumer sector is likely to be a sustaining force deriving continued support from rising real incomes and further increases in employment," he said. "Moreover, despite record increases in consumer installment debt, consumer debt repayments have remained in line with rising income."

GM's projections naturally command attention. It is, after all, the nation's largest industrial company, as measured by sales, and the second largest in terms of assets and employment, with nearly 800,000 workers on the payroll at last count.

But attention is one thing and agreement another. Many current economic projections call for a substantial slowing in business activity soon, and the auto industry is normally expected to follow the trend of the over-all economy closely.

By traditional Wall Street measures, investors are maintaining a cautious approach to GM's stock. The yield on the shares, based on dividends paid over the last 12 months, is a lofty 10 percent, and the price-earnings ratio is a modest six to one.

Analysts who follow the auto industry also note that Murphy's earlier projection that 11.75 million cars would be sold in the 1978 model year has proved to have been too high.

GM's capital spending plans suggest that the company is backing up its view with a strong commitment of dollars to new plant and equipment — to the tune of $5 billion in calendar 1979.

Observers hasten to note, however, that those plans are not solely a matter of GM's judgement. They are dictated to a considerable extent by laws setting future safety and fuel-efficiency requirements for the industry.

With those large capital needs, auto executives like Murphy would seem to have extra reason to hope his optimistic sales projections are on target.

Observations From Editorial Columns

Over-Regulation Of Drinks Likely

One of the dangers of launching into any new venture is the tendency to over-regulate. This could lead to difficulties in enforcement. That's what may be happening as a result of the public hearings on liquor-by-the-drink regulations.

The committee conducting the hearings has been receiving countless suggestions on what may be done and what may not be done when mixed drinks are offered for sale.

Already the board is beset by thorny questions about what constitutes a private club, where the liquor may be purchased, advertising and countless other suggestions about "control."

The latest brainstorm comes from drys, some of whom are advocating "dry" and "wet" areas in restaurants. Inasmuch as some restaurants are already offering "no smoking" areas, the operation of restaurants to accomodate the special desire of all customers could be highly complex. The sight of a mixed drink at someone's table might infuriate some extreme drys but it is not likely to be injurious to their health.

Restaurant operators will have a hard enough time living up what seems likely to become over-regulation. Keeping controls as simple and as few as possible is the best way of assuring that those which are necessary will be enforced.

NAACP Has A Bad Idea

The state NAACP has gone off the deep end.

By calling the North Carolina competency testing program "part of a new racist strategy" and trying to block it in court, the association appears to be pursuing neither equality nor justice. It is pursuing special treatment.

The program is scheduled to begin this year. By 1980, high school seniors will have to pass the tests before they can graduate.

During a trial run in February, a dismal 54 percent of all students failed the math portion. Many blacks in North Carolina come from poverty-level backgrounds, and their failure rate on the tests has been even higher.

The NAACP tied this together with a higher expulsion rate for blacks and a greater percentage of blacks in special-education classes and claimed to see a "new racist strategy."

Nonsense.

The testing project is simply an attempt to evaluate the quality of education in North Carolina and do something about improving it. Efforts to stop the program can only be viewed as attempts to suppress the truth.

If any segment of our schoolchildren are doing poorly, we need to know about it-if only as a spur to do something about the social conditions that are causing them to fail. Sticking our heads in the sand won't do anyone a particle of good.

ed for their independence. The FLA freedom movement, which represents perhaps 90%of all Azoreans, is extremely pro-American, However, current US policy is opposed to their independence and consequently there are signs throughout the islands proclaiming "AMERICA YES—CARTER NO."

The key to the Azorean independence question—as far as mainland Portugal goes—is the large sum of money paid to Portugal by America (NATO & France) for the military bases. The left-wing Portuguese government desperately needs those dollars and hence repeatedly refuses to grant independence to the Azoreans. At the same time, the mainland government has allowed huge Soviet transports carrying Cuban Troops to Africa, to refuel at the Santa Maria airfield. Perhaps Andy Young should be asked to explain America's inconsistent foreign policy which favors the take—over of Rhodesia by Soviet and Cuban backed terrorists, but opposes the peaceful pro-American independence movement on the Azores, one of Portugal's two remaining vestiges of colonialism.

In light of Portugal's intransigence, the F.L.N. has taken a firm and reasonable stance. The independence movement has issued a statement: "We want to negotiate but we will not flee from conflict if absolutely necessary." They proudly proclaim they "have rejected all temptation coming from outside groups that would like to use us for their own purposes." Our reporter from the Azores tells us that the Azorean people are politically more astute than Carter when they assert "Western policy during the last few years has been disastrous both for America and for its allies. The idea that the best response to communism is support of socialist regimes is a suicidal one."

To say that we live in a strange era is an understatement especially when America's foreign policy is dictated by the "Andrew Youngs" who treat our friends as enemies and our enemies as friends. The strong spirit of the Azoreans, with their deep faith in God and their commitment to freedom, may act as a candle which will be on the beacon of hope for the free world.

past year against the Japanese yen and 33 percent against the Swiss franc. Only the Canadian dollar has done worse than the U.S. currency.

Those who argue against temporary measures to protect the dollar, and until recently at least their numbers included Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, say the trade imbalance, inflation, uncertainty and the energy situation are causes of of the dollar's decline.

An economist for a Washington-based research group summed up the problem: "Put altogether, inflation is rising, there is no Federal Reserve backbone, the administration's inability to get its policy enacted, there is massive uncertainty....People are saying let's get out of the dollar, and it's not just overseas, most dollar holders are in this country."

Coleman's Latest Report Has New Outlook

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Twelve years ago, Professor James S. Coleman delivered himself of a report on school desegregation. In glowing terms he proclaimed the educational benefits to black children that would flow from integrated classrooms. In those days the author of the Coleman Report was the liberal's darling.

Then disillusion set in. The more Professor Coleman looked at his evidence, the more he became dissatisfied with it. The studies of other researchers fortified his doubts' Publicly acknowledging that he had fallen into "wishful thinking." Now he has delivered himself of a brief but powerful paper setting forth half a dozen "incorrect beliefs" about desegregation. At least in liberal circles, he is nobody's sweetheart now.

Professor Coleman's paper was delivered April 21 before a community college in Dearborn, Mich. Considering his eminence in the field of civil rights, it is curious that his address has received so little attention. Here he is on the attack. In the genteel world of academia, he punches with something close to bare knuckles.

It was once assumed, he notes, that elimination of school segregation owing to official actions would eliminate all, or nearly all, racial segregation in public schools. This "romanticism" has now been dispelled. Most segregation is the result of residential patterns, and it cannot successfully be ended by court order.

A second assumption—Coleman's original assumption of 1966—was that integration automatically would improve the achievement of lower-class black children. It hasn't worked out that way. Careful studies "show either no achievement effects, or else losses." What once appear to be fact is now know to be fiction. "It is not the case that school desegregation, as it has been carried out in American schools, generally brings achievement benefits to disadvantaged children."

A third false assumption led the courts to impose busing orders to create instant racial balance. The judges supposed they could thus assign particular children to particular schools and make the assignments stick. The judges were wrong. The courts orders produced white flight to the suburbs and achieved instability within the major cities. The process continues. "Seattle is about to engage in a plan which will almost certianly be unstable." In Illinois, the State Board of Education is "still living with the romantic fiction that a government plan of student assignment will result in enrollments matching that assignment."

Professor Coleman attacks another set of incorrect beliefs that have prevented development of constructive policies. There is the assumption that lower-class black parents, when provided with opportunity for choice in education, will not use it. This belie is in part "a conceit of the educational professionals, who believe they know better than parents or children what is good for the children." It also manifests the arrogance of the white liberal who believes that while blacks "should be given benefits, they should never be given choice."

In point of fact, says Professor Coleman, blacks increasingly have turned to Catholic parochial schools in order to escape "the low educational standards, disorder, physical dnager, and moral risk they see in the public school to which their child has been assigned." He would enlarge the opportunities for freedom of choice, first through the voluntary transfer of minority children to schools of their choice anywhere in a given state, and second through the use of tuition vouchers "to be used in any accredited school, public or private."

Desegregation can be made to work in our major cities, Professor Coleman believes, but only through some radical changes in thinking at high levels. There must be less coercion by government and more incentives toward voluntary cooperation with parents. We should rid ourselves of the "curiously racist" notion that all-black schools are inherently inferior. This simply is not so. Of great importance, state legislatures must prevent suburban school districts from barring transfers by inner-city children.

The original Coleman Report of 1966 was widely publicized. It was cited as scholarly authority in dozens of court opinions. The professor now has confessed erros, boldly and courageously, and has done his best to correct the record. But don't hold your breath until the judges who cited Coleman I begin to cite Colman II instead.

The Stone Junkies: A Southern Legend

PARKS, La—It's a typical scene for any weekend of the long, sultry southwest Louisiana summer. The Stone Junkies are battling for a top place in a slow-pitch softball tournament, in Parks or as far away as Houston. Coach Dave "Ku-nook" Thibodeaux exhorts "Solo," "Bear," "Wildchild," "Hypolite" and other Junkies as they go to the plate and typically punch over the winning runs. After the presentation of trophies and a post-game meeting and celebration, presided over by team president Jules "Big Boy" Ambrose, the pride and joy of Parks' 400 black Creole residents return to the Snowball Stand, the team's central headquarters in the small community, where friends join them for a lively analysis of the latest triumphs. Indeed, since forming over seven years ago, the Junkies have given Parks much to celebrate.

"The way we started is very funny," laughs Ku-nook. "This guy came here and said 'hey, y'all want to play? We got a softball tournament.' We actually didn't know what softball was at the time. He told us we would be playing for cases of beer so we said 'sure , fine.' We went with the idea of playing for beer; won two games and some beer...and we just kept on playing ever since.

"Our name? Oh, we were all talking in front of the Snowball Stand and one of the guys started singing 'Stone Soul Junkies,' the Curtis Mayfield song, and he just decided to give us that name. Now people ask why we picked 'Junkies,' 'cause its supposed to be something that means you're on drugs, but actually 'Junkie' to us is that we are addicted to playin' ball."

Their addiction has kept the disciplined team together even when facing adversity as the first local black softball team endeavoring to play in what were all-white leagues and tournaments. "We were beating everything here which was black," Ku-nook recalls. "Everybody in Parks said, 'Well, why don't y'all go big time?' which means playing the white boys." Despite being "dumbfounded" when they rudely discovered that "hey, 'cause we black we can't play," the Junkies refused to quit and repeatedly became the first black team to play in several leagues and tournaments.

"We'd go to tournaments and we'd go to tournaments and we'd be THE black team. People expected us to fight and argue, but we were going there as we should with respect. If the umpire would make a bad call, regardless if he was white or black we wouldn't argue. And if somebody would argue, I would argue" asserts Coach Thibodeaux. "Several years ago we joined a league where it was a hassle for us to go way down there to play, but we just joined it to say 'they're gonna have a black team.' It took a while, but now we're accepted. In fact, we have quite a few white players who back us now."

Over the years, the Stone Junkies have practiced hundreds of times. Players have broken fingers, twisted ankles, and bruised thighs, but always the same 18 or so guys come back, year after year, to "put-out" at the tough practices so they can wear Junkies' gold and black. Why, since softball is purely amateur, do the players have such devotion? Ku-nook sums it up simply: "Our team is mostly a home team. The guys on the team grew up together. When we play, we play with pride and dedication. When you're winning and having people there praising you, and you're gettin' trophies, it makes you feel good. Look, we have guys on the team that graduated from college. They could've gotten jobs out-of-state, but tried their best to get jobs around here to keep it together. A lot of people are proud to be a Junkie. We have a name and we call ourselves a legend."

Junkies President Jules joins Ku-nook in affirming that the team is as strong as ever and will continue to "give Parks a name."

"It's mostly an established team," he explains, "but we're picking up a few young players, too. There have been a lot of ballplayers that have tried to become a Junkie. You gotta get out there and show us you can do it, 'cause when you beat guys like Wildchild and Hypolite, you gotta be a superstar. And to the people of Parks, that's just what the now-legendary Stone Junkies are.

Inflation: Week's Pay, Half-Week's Groceries

I thought I knew what inflation was. It was walking into a supermarket with a week's salary and walking out with half a week's groceries. It was reading about the federal investigation into funeral expenses and realizing that I couldn't afford to die.

But what really taught me the meaning of inflation was returning to a rental situation after owning a home for three years.

Now, my husband, Phillip, and I were sure that we could live more cheaply by renting while he went back to school. After all, three years ago we had rented a small but comfortable three bedroom house for $145 a month. We soon found, however, that about the only thing $145 will get nowadays is an unfurnished tobacco barn.

And we soon discovered that the $200 range was no better. We did find something in this range that resembled a house. There was only one problem...it was sitting on pilings in the middle of a swamp.

We were getting desperate. Because not only were we begining to realize that rents had gone up more than our capacity to pay, but because rental houses were almost as scarce as they were expensive. And meanwhile, we were storing our furniture and living in an apartment furnished with two melamine plates and a Bundt pan.

Everyday we combed the newspapers for ads. And everyday we found the same thing. Permanent advertisements for houses from $500 to $750 a month. Advertisements for rental services that for a $40 fee offered to sell a list of houses that had already been rented. And advertisements for dream houses that, when we called, had just been rented to friends of friends of the present occupants.

But last week in the morning THE ad. Three bedrooms, two baths, fenced back yard.

"This has got to be IT," Phillip exclaimed when he hung up the phone.

It was IT, all right. IT had three bedrooms—one blue, one lavender and one pink. IT had two bathrooms—with pinky-tan tile and brown and pink wallpaper. IT had one kitchen—with blue and red wallpaper...and pink appliances.

"What do you think?" the landlady asked.

I fingered the handle of the pink refrigerator. "Well, it certainly is...uh...colorful."

"We'll take it," Phillip said.

"When would you want to move in?" the landlady asked me.

"I didn't even know they made pink appliances," I gulped.

"Today," Phillip said.

"I have several other people to show it to," the landlady said. "I'll call you."

So we waited. That night we ate pork and beans out of our Bundt pan and stared at the phone. Phillip kept hoping that she'd call him past midnight to spite him for calling her at 5 a.m., but she didn't.

When the phone finally did ring the next day, Phillip grabbed it with more anticipation than he had shown on our wedding night.

"It's ours," Phillip yelled, grabbing me and twirling me around. "Phew! I never thought I'd get this excited about paying out $300 a month."

"Yeah," I said. "And I never thought I'd get this excited about pink."

Looking To '80: Kennedy Stronger Than Carter Against Republicans

BY GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — Sen. Edward Kennedy runs a stronger race than President Jimmy Carter in test election contests against both his principal challengers, former President Gerald Ford and former California Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Kennedy leads Ford by a wide 59 to 41 percent margin, while Carter manages no better than a stand-off against the former President, 51 to 49 percent.

Kennedy leads Reagan 61 to 39 percent. Carter also leads the former California governor, but by a narrower margin, 55 to 45 percent.

Kennedy's current margin against Ford represents a gain since a May survey when the senator's lead was 55 to 45 percent. Against Reagan, however, Kennedy's support today closely matches that recorded in the earlier survey.

Carter's lead over Ford has narrowed slightly since a late March-early April survey when he led 53 to 47 percent. The president, however, has increased his lead marginally over Reagan since the earlier survey when he led 52 to 48 percent.

Kennedy, Ford Are Top Nomination Choices

As reported yesterday, Kennedy holds a wide 44 to 20 percent lead over Carter as the top choice of the nation's Democratic voters for the 1980 presidential nomination.

On the GOP side, Ford leads Reagan among Republican voters by the score of 37 to 31 percent, closely matching findings from an earlier survey conducted in late March and early April.

Following is the question asked in the survey:

"Suppose the presidential election were being held TODAY. If Sen. Edward Kennedy/President Jimmy Carter were the Democratic candidate and Gerald Ford/Ronald Reagan were the Republican candidate, which would you like to see win?" (Those who named another person or who were undecided were asked: "As of today, do you lean more to Kennedy/Carter, the Democrat, or to Ford/Reagan, the Republican?")

Here are the latest results compared with those recorded in May pairing Kennedy against the two Republicans:

Kennedy Vs. Ford

The latest results reported today are based on personal interviews with 1,137 registered voters out of a total sample of 1,555 adults, 18 years of age and older. Interviews were conducted in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period July 7-10.

First Camel Clinic Open

By MICHAEL PRECKER
Associated Press Writer

ABU TELUL, Israel (AP) — The patient groaned miserably. Her knees were bound so she couldn't stand up, her mouth was roped shut and a firm hand was clamped on her tender nostrils.

It's the only way to treat a camel.

"Those teeth are very sharp," Dr. Shemtov Balli said as he carefully drew a syringe full of blood from the neck of a 12-year-old mother of two. "It takes a strong man to hold her."

Balli treats the fabled desert beasts at Ben-Gurion University's new camel clinic, which the university says is the world's first.

When the camels can't make it to the school's new veterinary hospital in Beersheba, the doctor drives to Bedouin encampments in the surrounding Negev desert for on-the-spot checks.

One such camp is Abu Telul, five miles east of Beersheba.

"Camels are usually pretty hearty," Balli said — his patient required only skin ointment for a small patch of eczema — "but they're not immune to viral, parasitic or bacterial diseases."

And what camels get, they can pass on to man. That is why the clinic hosted 150 Bedouin sheikhs at July 4 opening ceremonies to offer camel examinations at 50 Israeli pounds (about $3) per animal.

"About 50 diseases can be spread from desert animals to man," said Dr. Daniel Cohen, director of the Isan Center for Comparative Medicine, part of Ben-Gurion's desert research institute.

"Some diseasee are dormant, but when man moves into the desert, problems arise. So if we're going to have major settlement in the desert, we ought to know if any health dangers exist."

There are political reasons, too. Balli said the clinic combined "a good gesture to help our Bedouin friends with our research on desert animals. And thn9the biggest desert animal."

Cohen, a veterinarian born in America, also said the implications "are broader than just solving Israel's problems. This is a clear example of what we can offer our neighbors" in peacetime, he said.

The objects of all this attention are hump-backed creatures that have carried their masters into war and plied caravan routes in Africa and Asia for thousands of years.

But Cohen said most of what is known about them is "folklore. There hasn't been a full scientific investigation and we'd like to do it."

Today Bedouins use trucks to haul things, and it is likely that more Israeli camels give rides to tourists than perform traditional tasks. But Balli, who estimates Israel's camel population at 3,000 with another 25,000 in the Sinai — most of which is occupied by Israel — said the animal remains important.

Many Bedouin families, he said, keep female camels for milk, then slaughter them at about age 25, using the tough meat for sausage.

Cohen said, "This will be a starving planet and camels do well in many areas where starvation will be a big problem. They eat many things that other animals don't and they don't have to be near water all the time."

At this point, the veterinary hospital, Israel's first, can handle only small animals. But Cohen plans a large-animal facility and an enlarged research center on the desert hillside outside Beersheba.

On Tuesdays the clinic sets up shop under a large metal overhang next to the hospital. "Usually I see the owners at the Arab market on Thursday and they tell me to save a place for them," Balli said.

Balli, who learned to treat camels in his native Iraq before immigrating 26 years ago, said treating the animals is usually safe.

"The only real danger," he said, "is in late winter, when the males are rutting. It's very dangerous even for the owner to approach it. I know of two cases where a rutting male killed its owner. That head snapped down and by the time help came it was too late."

But camels are sometimes cantankerous and precaution is sensible.

So, on this day, as Balli prepared his instruments, the Bedouin owner crept up behind his camel, tied her legs before she could react, and wrapped a rope around her mouth.

She flashed her teeth, strained her neck and groaned — a loud, resonant, belch-like moan.

The Bedouin grabbed her nose and held tightly.

"Hari!" he shouted, an Arabic version of "shut up."

Balli checked the eyes, ears, mouth and skin, collected blood and feces samples for the laboratory, and soon it was over.

Instantly the camel calmed down and resumed chewing her cud. Balli and the owner retired to a tent for sweet tea with camel's milk.

"When I first came here, the Bedoin wouldn't come to a doctor, for humans or animals," the camel doctor said.

"They had their own treatments, everything from herbs to burning sticks. Now they see the benefits of new methods."

$50,000 Award In Test Tube Case

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal jury has awarded a 34-year-old Florida woman $50,000 — and her husband $3 — for the anguish caused by their thwarted attempt five years ago to become parents of the world's first test-tube baby. She had sought $1.5 million.

But the jury also determined Friday night that Dr. Raymond Vande Wiele, who admitted destroying the experiment, was innocent of harming Doris Del Zio's property — the test tube containing the incubating embryo that was to have been transferred to her womb.

Vande Wiele said he destroyed the embryo because it was not sanctioned by his hospital and could have created a "monstrosity."

Nevertheless, Mrs. Del Zio — who lives in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. — called the verdict "a vindication for all women" and a vindication of the two doctors who conducted the unfinished experiment.

Asks For Investigation

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Police Chief John Faircloth has asked the State Bureau of Investigation and the district attorney's office to look into allegations of illegal conduct by members of the High Point Police Department.

Faircloth announced the requests Friday and said allegations have been circulated in the city in recent weeks by a former policeman who was fired two months ago and two reserve officers who resigned this week at the request of Faircloth.

Figures May Have Misled Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Critics of President Carter's veto of a $37 billion weapons bill say the president was using the wrong figures and may have been misled on how much savings the veto would produce.

"The president has vetoed the wrong bill," said Rep. Bob Wilson, R-Calif., the ranking GOP member of the House Armed Services Committee.

Wilson said the figures Carter used in justifying the veto are part of a House-passed defense appropriations bill, and do not match those of the weapons authorization bill that was vetoed.

The White House and Pentagon had no immediate comment on the matter.

New Archives Office To Open

RALEIGH — The Western North Carolina office of the N. C. Division of Archives and History will open the first week of September in Asheville. Sara W. Hodgkins, secretary of the N. C. Dept. of Cultural Resources, has announced plans for the opening.

The new office will provide technical and consultation services to the 24 most western counties in the areas of archeology, historic preservation, archives management and museums. Members of the office will also survey and document buildings and items of historical interest as part of continuing programs of the division.

Questionaires On Airport In

A total of 111 out of 181 questionnaires have been received by the East Carolina University Regional Development Institute as part of a conducted survey concerning the PittGreenville Airport.

The questionnaires, which were mailed at the end of June, were sent to a systematic sampling of area businesses, industries and health and education organizations.

Mack Simpson of the RDI reported that the Institute was pleased with the response to the survey.

"There were three types of responses included in the space reserved for additional comments," Simpson noted. "Some people who really use the airport a lot felt that the airport should be upgraded to include commercial flight."

"Many persons replied that Kinston is too far for feasible use by their companies, and one good comment included was that Kinston was designated as the principal airport for this area, so what was the purpose of the questionnaire?" Simpson continued.

The survey results were mailed to the North Carolina Departemnt of Transportation, Aeronautics Division, which will use them to determine the economic impact of the airport on the surrounding area.

According to a cover letter sent with the questionnaire, "the information received will help state and local governmental agencies in their efforts to upgrade airport facilities and services and in showing potential investors the value of the airport to established businesses."

Sixty-one percent of the businesses, 60 percent of the industries and 83 percent of the health and education organizations responded to the survey.

All of those who responded utilize the airport and felt that the airport has been of economic benefit to them.

Sending Delegates To MOD Conference

The Coastal Plains March of Dimes will sponsor Mary Kirkpatrick to attend the ASPO (American Society for Psychoprophylaxis and Obstetrics) National Convention to be held in Keystone, Colo., 70 miles west of Denver, Aug. 21-24.

Both Kirkpatrick and Margy Maira, physical therapist and childbirth educator in Williamston, will represent the Greenville Childbirth Educators at the convention.

Active in the Greenville and Williamston areas for approximately a year, both women have been instrumental in the following: implementing a monthly film showing, compilation of Pitt and Martin County perinatal guides, establishment of a Caesarean childbirth class, sponsored by EAHEC and training of new area childbirth educators.

The emphasis of the convention will be on "the provider, consumer and educator." Featured national speakers are on the conference agenda.

During the year, both women, along with Diane Johnston, plan to have a more comprehensive health education in both counties.

Ms. Kirkpatrick is on the board od directors for the Coastal Plains March of Dimes.

Held Two Clinics On Babysitting

The Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service sponsored two babysitting clinics Wednesday and Friday.

The Pitt County Sheriff, Fire Marshal, Agricultural Extension Service, and Health Departments, as well as the Greenville Police and Fire Departments aided in giving the boys and girls pertinent tips on babysitting. Mrs. Vickie Haddock, a registered nurse, also assisted in the program. Mrs. Evelyn Spangler, home economics extension agent, coordinated the program.

Due to the great interest, a final babysitting clinic will be held Tuesday, 9:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m., at the extension office. Interested persons must preregister by calling 758-1196. There is no charge for the clinic, but participants must bring their own lunch and drink.

Volunteer Greenville

The following needs for volunteer service are announced by Nancy Harrington, director of Volunteer Greenville:

Volunteers are needed to be Girl Scout leaders for all ages of girls. Training is available for those interested.

Volunteers are needed to counsel women in alternatives to abortion, pregnancy, and services available to them. Training will be provided for interested persons.

People are still needed for the taping program through the N.C. Library for the Blind and Physically Handicapped, which involves taping books for the blind. Interested persons should call Volunteer Greenville for more information.

For more information for these and other volunteer opportunities, please call Mrs. Harrington at 752-4137, extension 262 or come by the office at 2000 Cedar Lane.

Downtown Association Favors PWD Expansion

The board of directors of the Downtown Greenville Association, meeting recently, voted unanimously in favor of the proposed Public Works Department expansion program.

In a letter to City Manager Ed Wyatt, the board members indicated that they were pleased not only to offer their endorsement but also to actively participate in the bond referendum campaign.

The City Council, meeting on Aug. 10, adopted a notice of intent to conduct a bond referendum on Nov. 7 for a new public works facility. The Council will introduce the bond order on Aug. 24 and call for a public hearing on the order.

Mrs. Helen Pope, president of the DGA, said that association members feel that the Public Works Department "has done not only an outstanding job, but an amazing job considering the facilities they had available to perform their daily responsibilities."

The spokesman added that the DGA was "particularly pleased with the continuing cleanliness of the Central Business District, plus the fact that requests for special services are answered immediately."

She said that in the three years of the association's existence, every request has been granted "with obvious interest and application."

Mayo Allen, director of Public Works here, attended the meeting and explained the difficulties being experienced in each of his departments and in the overall operation of public works due to limited facilities.

Allen pointed out that with all of the city's growth and additional requirements, the public works section still occupies the same facilities that were in use 40 years ago.

Tobacco Farmer Show In November

The latest in farm products and equipment will be on display at the Farmers Tobacco Warehouse, Greenville, at the third annual Tobacco Farmer Show, Nov. 14-16.

This show, the largest indoor display of farm products and equipment in the Southeast, will be free to the public.

"What we're trying to do is bring the newest and most up-to-date tools for producing tobacco and many other crops, including swine, where farmers can take a critical look at them," said Jim Swindell, manager of the show, which is sponsored by "The Flue Cured Tobacco Farmer," a Specialized Agricultural Publications magazine.

"You will have a chance to see chemical, fertilizer, seed and equipment displays and talk with company representatives who will be there to answer your questions. Other ag related groups will also be on hand, historical, educational and agribusiness groups," Swindell commented.

"Last year, we had over 190 exhibits in the five and a half acre warehouse, all of real interest to farmers and their families," Swindell said.

One highlight of the show will be the Nov. 14 appearance of P. R. "Bobby" Smith, the Barrow County, Georgia native who's serving as assistant secretary of agriculture in Washington. The commissioners of agriculture for the five fluecured tobacco producing states are scheduled to speak Nov. 15.

Jerry Clower, the popular country comedian, will appear Nov. 14, with country singer Don Williams to perform Nov. 16.

The city of Greenville will hold its own Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival concurrently with the show.

News Briefs

Will Save $178 Million

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Changes in the way the federal government manages its cash will save taxpayers $178 million a year, Budget Director James McIntyre said Saturday.

The revisions, similar to ones now being made by corporations that handle large sums, involve speedier collection and payment of bills by six government agencies to cut down the time federal money remains idle, neither collecting interest nor serving the agency designated to spend it.

Feud Hamstrings Talks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American arms negotiators are hamstrung by a quiet feud among senior U.S. officials over how long the United States and the Soviet Union should agree to ban all nuclear tests, informed sources said Saturday.

President Carter ordered his envoys this spring to negotiate a full test ban treaty. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance told Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in June of Carter's hopes for such a ban, rather than just a further limitation of undergound nuclear tests.

Carter To Address Convention

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — In an apparent bid to mend fences with organized labor, President Carter has agreed to address the September convention of the United Steelworkers of America in Atlantic City, USW officials said Saturday.

"The White House announced Friday that President Carter would attend," a union spokesman said. "We invite all U.S. presidents to speak at our conventions."

Carter's acceptance of the offer followed a meeting on unemployment Friday at the White House where he chatted with AFL-CIO president George Meany with whom he reportedly had been feuding.

Kucinich Close Winner

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Mayor Dennis Kucinich went into the record books Saturday as the winner of one of the closest elections in Cleveland history with an official recount showing he beat back attempts to throw him out of office by 236 votes.

The Cuyahoga County Board of Elections completed its tedious ballot-by-ballot recount of just over 120,000 paper ballots cast in the citywide recall election last Sunday and reported 60,250 Clevelanders voted to keep Kucinich in office while 60,014 voted to remove him.

To Investigate Bourne's Action

ATLANTA (AP) — The Georgia board which licenses doctors has authorized an investigation of Dr. Peter Bourne, the White House aide forced to resign because of a questionable drug prescription.

Cecil Clifton, director of the Composite Board of Medical Examiners, said Friday the board's investigative division has been told to look into the Bourne case to determine if further action is necessary in Georgia, where Bourne holds a medical license.

Bourne, former chief drug adviser to President Carter, faces possible criminal charges in Virginia because he used a fictitious name on a prescription for Quaalude, a powerful tranquilizer.

Miss Lillian Bored At Party

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — President Carter, his brother and sisters were gathered for a surprise 80th birthday party for their mother when Miss Lillian got bored and left to chat with reporters.

"I'm tired of the crowd in there," she announced, sitting down in the press room of a motel in Americus, Ga., where the party was held.

She said it was her third celebration since Tuesday — her birthday — and that she did not know most of the 50 guests at the party.

The party, planned by Billy Carter, also honored first lady Rosalynn Carter's 51st birthday which was Friday.

Nixon Criticizes Administration

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon has criticized the Carter administration's domestic and foreign policies, saying that they haven't dealt effectively with either inflation or "increasing Soviet adventurism."

Nixon also discussed plans for a new book in a taped telephone interview with former Los Angeles Mayor Sam Yorty.

Speaking from his San Clemente seaside villa, Nixon told Yorty that the present administration has no effective anti-inflation policy.

"The major issue in the United States is the high cost of living," Nixon said, adding that he doesn't "see any policy that they are following in Washington which will cut back on the cost of government and thereby get at the cause of inflation...."

Feels Relationship Being Damaged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaders of the nation's predominately black colleges feel that the relationship between their institutions and the federal government is being damaged by the Carter administration, according to the president of Atlanta's Clarke College.

"We feel that in recent months, certain officials in the Carter administration have created a negative environment for black colleges," said Dr. Elias Blake Jr. on Friday.

"These officials have spread false impressions that black colleges are receiving too much federal support and have not used it effectively," Blake said.

Distributes Leaflets On PCB

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Health officials have distributed 5,000 leaflets about the hazards of PCB to residents of areas where the toxic substance was dumped along road shoulders.

Dr. Martin Hines, epidemiologist for the N.C. Division of Health Services, said Friday the leaflets were handed out by 14 local health departments in 18 counties. PCB spills, believed to have been intentional, have been reported along 250 miles of highways.

"The leaflets were distributed because of the concern about the criminal dumping of PCBs along North Carolina's roads," Hines said. "There is no immediate danger to health, but we want to make sure that all people living along or near the roadways where the spills occurred are notified so they will not walk in the spill areas.

Moslem Fanatics Burn Three

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Moslem religious fanatics opposed to banks, liquor stores and nightclubs set fire to a movie house, burning three people to death, an Iranian news agency said Saturday.

The zealots, opposed to Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi's attempts to modernize Iran, slipped into the cinema through a back door early Friday in the holy city of Mashad in eastern Iran, doused the theater with gasoline, then ignited it.

Three employees of the theater, all in their 20s, died in the inferno and a person sleeping inside was injured, the Pars news agency said.

Tidal Wave Hits Acajutla

ACAJUTLA, El Salvador (UPI) — A tidal wave slammed into El Salvador's main port, sweeping 10 people away and leaving 2,000 homeless, the Red Cross said Saturday.

Red Cross spokesman Francisco Javier Mendez initially said 100 persons were missing but only 10 remained unaccounted for Saturday.

The tidal wave, spawned by an earthquake in the Pacific centered off the Pacific coast of neighboring Guatemala, roared into the popular seaside resort at 9:36 a.m. (12:36 p.m. EDT) Friday sweeping away 50 fishing huts as if they were match sticks.

Avant Garde Rock 'n' Roll A Challenge

By BRUCE MEYER
United Press International

Every art form has its avant garde. And rock 'n' roll — even if its status as "art" is debatable — is no exception. There is always a handful of musicians who seem to care little for traditional success, shrugging off both celebrity and the financial rewards enjoyed by the pop stars. Instead, such artists immerse themselves in a game — a kind of boundarystretching game with the audience and, ultimately, with themselves.

The avant garde rockers choose to make music that challenges the most nimbleminded members of the mass audience to follow; music that carries the most flexible fans along as it literally stretches the boundaries of popular music. The game has just one rule: the artist must never get so far ahead that he or she loses the audience entirely.

Naturally, some musicians are better at the game than others.

The New Wave has contributed its share of more-or-less avant garde artists, among which the most interesting are The Cars, Devo, Talking Heads, Television and The Stranglers.

But, partly because they retain traditional guitars-anddrums rock instrumentation, such New Wave acts are not hard-core avant garde. Not like Brian Eno or Kraftwerk.

Eno is one of the premier experimentalists of our time. A graduate of Britain's Roxy Music (which, before its demise, also contributed the remarkable singer Brian Ferry, violinist Eddie Jobson and guitarist Phil Manzanera to the music scene), Eno has recorded the sound of earthworms traveling through the soil and released albums consisting largely of white noise and tapes being played backward at the wrong speed.

Sch recordings break the rule of the game, going much too far for an appreciable fraction of the pop music audience to follow. But that is not the case with Eno's latest record, "Before And After Science" (Island PS-9478).

In "Science," Eno has struck a near-perfect balance between his well-developed sense of strange and his rarely revealed feel for melody and lyric.

As with most avant garde records, "Science" — with its poly-rhythmic electronics and sometimes monotonal vocals — will not sit well the first time through for many listeners. But for those willing to cut their minds loose a little, a marvelously hypnotic tune like "Backwater" or a Latinesque excursion like "Kurt's Rejoinder" could demonstrate just how much fun the boundarystretching game can be.

In their way, the four wellgroomed young men who form Kraftwerk are even further out than Eno. Kraftwerk is an electronic keyboard group from West Germany who had a hit record a couple of years back with "Autobahn" and whose latest album, "The ManMachine" (Capitol SW-11728), further develops its intense but deceptively low-key style.

"Man-Machine" is definitely not for everyone and Kraftwerk makes that clear by starting the album out with a track that sounds like something R2D2 might punch up on a jukebox before plugging in at a tavern for 'droids. Much of the rest of it sounds like disco music for the Brave New World. It's a strange record, but attractive in an appropriately mechanistic fashion.

And — like it or not — it just may provide a taste of the future of rock 'n' roll.

Freeflow Dancers To Appear At Roxy

The Freeflow Dance Company from State College, Pa. will be performing the weekend of August 26-27 at the Roxy Music, Arts and Crafts Center on Albemarle Street.

Freeflow, a group of modern dancers, perform dances developed from the movement theories of Todd, Laban, and Sveigard, focusing on movement creativitiy in dance, body alignment, care and relaxation.

The schedule for the two days are:

— Saturday, August 26, 10 to 11 a.m. — Children's workshop in creative movement for young people ages 6-9. 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Non-dancers and beginners. Dance improvisation for adults and young adults.

— Sunday, August 27, 12:45 to 2 p.m. Poetry workshop with Rock McMonagle. Poets are invited to bring copies of their poems to be read and discussed. There will also be dancers on hand to interpret poetry. 8 p.m. Dance performance by members of the Freeflow Dance Company. A performance of original group pieces, poetry dances and solo works.

Admission to the children's workshop is 50 cents; to the adult workshop, $1; and the evening performance is $2 ($1 to Roxy members). There is no charge for the poetry workshop.

Tickets and further information are available at The Silver Thread, 218-A East Fifth Street. Telephone 752-3601.

Program Of Piano Lessons

Piano instruction for children is being offered under the auspices of the School of Music East Carolina University, beginning the week of September 5. Faculty member E. Gregory Nagode will head the instruction program.

Classes are being offered to youths between the ages of six and 18, in two categories, beginners and advanced students.

The programs are designed to develop basic skills, including reading, transposition, harmonization, improvisation, etc. Advance students will receive two lessons weekly.

Persons interested in enrolling children are to contact Nagode at 757-6331 or 758-5672 for additional information. Deadline for registration is August 30.

Nagode, an Assistant Professor of Music and director of the piano pedagogy program at ECU, is also an active member of the N. C. Music Teacher's Association. He serves on the association's Executive Board and is chairman of collegiate auditions.

O'Neill Play For New Bern

NEW BERN — Eugene O'Neill's autobiographical play, "Long Day's Journey Into Night" will be presented in New Bern by the Academy Theater of Atlanta on September 18.

Cast members in the production will be Edward Lee, Gay Griggs, Chris Curran, Larry Larson, and Yvonne Tenney. Lee and Griggs were nominated by the Atlanta Circle of Drama Critics for Best Actor and Best Actress for the 1977-78 season.

The New Bern production will be in the New Bern High School Auditorium at 8 p.m., and is being sponsored by the Craven Community Arts Council with the assistance of a grant from the Southern Arts Federation and the National Endowment for the Arts.

The English dramatist and poet Ben Jonson died in 1637.

Living History Event

FORT MACON STATE PARK — The First North Carolina Volunteer Infantry will give its fifth living history program at Fort Macon State Park, near Atlantic Beach, on August 26 and 27.

The 30-member Confederate reenactment group will recreate garrison life in the old fort as it was in the 1860's. The troops will prepare meals, sleep, march in formation, and demonstrate infantry tactics and drills.

Hours for the living history program are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday, August 26, and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Sunday, August 27. There is no admission charged and the public is invited to attend.

RESTORATION PLANNED — The Conoho Masonic Lodge in Hamilton, now a storage building festooned with vines and surrounded by farm equipment, is planned for restoration by the Historic Hamilton Commission, Inc. Built about 1850, the lodge is a Greek Revival temple-form building, one of the few of its style still extant in eastern North Carolina. Hamilton is a Martin County village, 30 miles from Greenville. Plans To Launch New Magazine

WILMINGTON — The English Department of the University of North Carolina at Wilmington and the Lower Cape Fear Council for the Arts have announced plans to launch the "Tugboat Review," a new literary magazine for eastern North Carolina.

A non-profit effort, the magazine will not contain advertising.

All residents of eastern North Carolina are being invited to submit original material for consideration. The staff of "Tugboat Review" will consider short stories, essays, poetry, and any work of art that can be reproduced effectively in black and white — such as pen and ink, pencil, charcoal sketches or woodcuts.

James Collier, an Associate Professor in the UNC-W English Department will serve as editor-in-chief. Others on the magazine's staff will be Robert Davis, Executive Director of the Lower Cape Fear Council for the Arts, who will be business manager; prose staff — Joanne Corbett, Elizabeth Pearsall, and Steven Carter; poetry staff — Marjorie Megivern, Nancy Bullard, and David James; and art staff — Donna Lanier and Margaret Collier.

Material to be considered for possible publication is to be sent to: The Tugboat Review, Dept. of English, UNCW, Wilmington, 28403. Submissions are to be accompanied by a self-addressed, stamped envelope for returning material.

Two issues are planned annually, a spring and an autumn issue, with the first issue planned for the fall of 1978. Subscriptions will provide primary funds for the publication of this projected magazine, as it is a non-profit venture. Subscription is $3 per year and subscription requests are to be sent to: The Tugboat Review, Lower Cape Fear Council for the Arts, Box 212, Wilmington, N.C., 28402. Checks or money orders are to be made payable to "The Tugboat Review."

Receives Art Scholarship

A $600 national art scholarship for study in New York has been awarded to Amy M. Leggett of Greenville, a recent graduate of the East Carolina University School of Art.

Miss Leggett will attend the Studio Semester in the New York City Program of the Empire State College of State University of New York as a recipient of one of five Delta Phi Delta scholarships awarded this year. The society is the national honor society in art.

These scholarships are awarded on the basis of art and academic record, with consideration of financial need. Miss Leggett earned the BFA degree in painting from ECU this summer, and attained a high academic records.

She is a 1973 graduate of Rose High School and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Amos C. Leggett.

PAST & PRESENT

WASHINGTON (AP) — An exhibition of more than 200 works called "Past and Present: A Century and A Half of a National Collection" is on display at the National Collection of Fine Arts, Smithsonian Institution, through Sept. 4.

The exhibiton examines the history of the NCFA and its expanding collection.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Willie Mae Gibbs

Dr. Isadore Rosenfeld, a world-famous physician and cardiologist whose belief is that the best informed patient gets the best medical care, has written a book that is the first such book ever written by a doctor for patients. THE COMPLETE MEDICAL EXAM tells everything you need to know about your physical health: how your body functions, how to tell when something is really wrong, when to see your doctor (and what to tell him), and most important, how to understand what he says and does to you. Dr. Rosenfeld has taken the mystery out of medicine, deciphering the hieroglyphics and jargon that usually surround medical terminology and turning them into plain English any layman can understand. Through the knowledge available in this book, you can learn how to answer all the questions your doctor will ask you; see why the checkup is such a vital procedure; learn what to expect from your physician; how your personal habits, family and medical history can help him help you; and learn how clinical tests and other routine and special examinations can send out early warning signals of trouble. Armed with the advice Dr. Rosenfeld offers in THE COMPLETE MEDICAL EXAM, you can participate in your next checkup and understand what it is all about.

To the numerous books written on the subject of child-rearing has been added one that is unique in offering parents practical advice and guidance and in actually giving them real answers to their real problems. NOBODY SAID IT WOULD BE EASY addresses the problem of raising responsible kids—and keeping them out of trouble. In this book Dr. Dan Kiley shares what he has learned through more than ten years of experience working to re-educate children in trouble with the law. His book is not a blueprint for each and every parent's questions, but its intent is to teach parents a crime prevention approach that covers definitions, explanations, insights, new perspectives, general strategies and many recommendations for stopping trouble before it gets started. The corrective measures advocated by Dr. Kiley qualify the resultant principles and actions as a new specialization in the child-rearing field called Protective Parenting. This process means protecting a young child and then gradually teaching the child to protect himself. Further it involves teaching the child to identify trouble before it hits and to turn to one's "self" for help. A Protective Parenting Questionaire included in the book allows you to determine how effective you are as a protect parent. All parents and everyone concerned about America's children owe it to themselves to read this book and learn the art and science of Protective Parenting from Dr. Kiley.

Grant Competition Set

WINSTON-SALEM — The National Endowment for the Arts and the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art (SECCA) announce the third grant program of Individual Artists Fellowships for Southeastern Artists. The program is supported by matching funds provided by the CIBA-GEIGY Corporation.

Artists 18 years old and older with established residency in North Carolina and 10 other southern states may apply for an individual grant.

There will be seven $2,000 grants available for painters, photographers, printmakers, and sculptors. Final application must be postmarked by October 31, 1978 to be considered by the selection panel.

Interested artists are encouraged to request guidelines and applications from: SECCA, 750 Marguerite Drive, Winston-Salem, N. C., 27106. The telephone number is 725-1904.

New Show At EEii's

BELHAVEN — An open house is being held from one until five today to honor Pat Daughtridge, Fayetteville artist whose watercolors are going on view at EEii's little KORNERS of the World.

A graduate of Atlantic Christian College, Wilson, Ms. Daughtridge is a native of Rocky Mount.

An award winner in local and regional art shows, Ms. Daughtridge will also exhibit pen and ink sketches, and notecards, in addition to watercolors.

She and her husband, Glenn, and their two daughters spend part of each year at a cottage on the Pamlico River, where she finds subject matter for many of her works.

The Broadway play, "Same Time, Next Year," by Bernie Slade, has grossed more than $22 million.

Lighthearted Nostalgia Set In Contemporary Techniques

NATURALLY CONCENTRIC . . . is the title given by artist Fred Brooks to his painting of assorted reptilian creatures arranged in a formal pattern.

THE CENTER DETAIL . . . of Annette Brooks's valentine-like mixed media work entitled "Banded Spoon, Maiden's Webbed Delight.

The art show by husband-wife artists Fred and Annette Brooks at the Greenville Art Center has the vibrancy of a summer garden , a delightful bouquet of lighthearted nostalgia fitted to contemporary techniques.

Brilliant reds, golds, royal purples, candy pinks and ice cream greens make this show as festive as a child's birthday party.

The works by Annette are unabashedly feminine. She uses lace and gold foil paper, mock pearls, dyed feathers, satins and silks, sequins and velvet and even tiny bells to create mostly small works of art with the appeal of old valentines or long ago wedding souvenirs.

To these rich materials she adds superbly detailed drawings to create a satisfying blend of all the diverse materials employed.

Though more spare in details than the works by his wife, those by Fred Brooks employ a similar basic approach — a carefully conceived correlation of materials employed in a controlled, usually formal pattern.

In both their works, the two project images that successfully combine exotic materials with contemporary techniques.

A couple of earlier, larger and much more simplified works seem out of context with the remainder of this lavish show. With that exception, it is a show with many fascinations on a playful, intimate scale.

Collection Of N.C. Art To Open At Wachovia

"Portrait of North Carolina," a representative cross-section of Tar Heel scenic attractions painted by artist Samuel D. Bissette, will go on view at Wachovia Bank and Trust Company on Thursday, August 24.

The 40 watercolors that form the collection were commissioned by Wachovia to provide a traveling show for North Carolinians, a show that encompasses typical scenes of beauty from the seashore to the mountains.

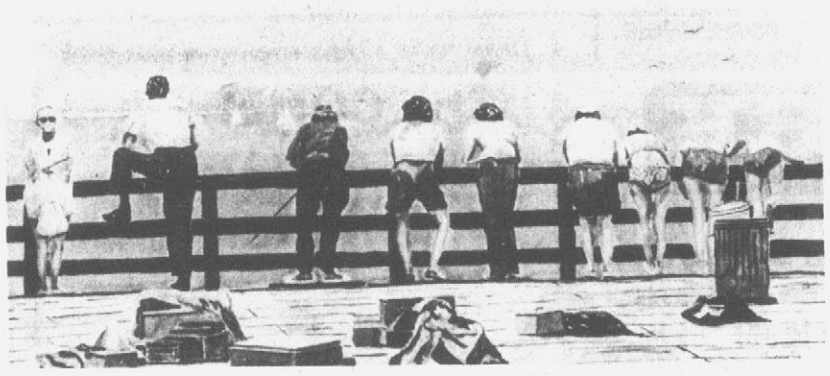

Bissette, retired chairman of the board of People Savings and Loan Association in Wilmington, is a latecomer to painting. The 55-year old businessman began painting in 1970 and has since devoted much of his time — "usually three nights a week from 8:30 to midnight and perhaps one day during the weekend" to painting.

As subject matter, Bissette has turned to readily identifiable scenes — buildings and landmarks like Charlotte's Mint Museum, the Old Market House in Fayetteville, and the Wright Brothers Memorial at Kitty Hawk — as well as flowers, water, sand, hills, trees, boats, and seasonal activities of Tar Heel people.

The result is an album of familiar and not so familiar portraits of North Carolina today.

The showing in Greenville is the final North Carolina exhibit before the collection goes to Washington, D. C. for a three-week viewing at the FDIC Building there.

Officials at Greenville's Wachovia Bank have invited the public to view the paintings at the Wachovia Building located between Washington and Greene and Fourth and Fifth Streets.

THE FISHING PIER . . . by Samuel Bissette, is one of 40 watercolors depicting North Carolina scenes to go on view at the Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. Building on Thursday, August 25. The public is invited to view the collection commissioned by the bank as a traveling show.

Multi-Media Show Slated For Wilson

WILSON — The Arts Council of Wilson is sponsoring the "Eastern North Carolina Vortex Multi-Media Show" beginning tomorrow and continuing through August.

At the Art Center galleries at 205 Gray Street, the show will consist of a visual arts exhibit, and also a series of arts performances to be held Saturday, August 26 at 2 p.m. in the Choral Room of the Hackney Music Building on the Atlantic Christian College campus.

Coordinated by Third Century Artist Tom Braswell, the exhibit will involve a number of eastern North Carolina artists. Among those scheduled to exhibit and perform are: Hiroshi Sueyoshi, potter and Visiting Artist at Cape Fear Technical Institute; Alice Wilson, photographer from Raleigh; Brigetta Weyer, painter and Visiting Artist at Wilson County Technical Institute; David Kelly, poet from Raleigh; visual artist Susan Parrot of Kinston; weaver Virginia Davis, Wilson; Susan Reinties, dancer of Newport; and photographers Bill Anderson of Wilson and John Scarlata of Kinston.

Third Century artists taking part are: poets Tom Braswell, Wilson, and Glenn Wilson, Washington; painters Freda Kyle, Goldsboro, Alta Steed, Kitty Hawk, Nanette Rogers, Wilson; sculptors Barry Bailey, Elizabeth City and Johnnie Mizell, Nags Head; musicians Mike Thompson of Washington and Byron Charles of Wilson; photographers Nelson Farmer of Wilson and Lisa Morphew, Newport; and visual artist Rob Morphew of Newport.

The exhibit and performances are free and open to the public. For information on specific exhibition and performance times, call the Arts Council of Wilson, 291-4329.

Hospitality House

Several people connected with the outdoor drama "Sword of Peace" will be guests on Kay Currie's "Hospitality House" airing from noon til 1 p.m. today over WITN-TV.

Ty and Jeffryn Stevens, who play the lead roles of Simon and Elizabeth Dixon; and Professor of Theater at Western Illinois Dr. Joseph Epolito, the play's guest director; are on the show.

The cast of "Joseph," to be presented at St. Paul's Episcopal Church at Beaufort on August 24-25, will sing two songs and also show the technicolor dream-coat used in the play. Kay also talks to director Donnie Dudley and pianist Cathy McLees.

Other guests on today's show are Carol Southerland, librarian at Williamston High School who has a role on the Governor's Conference on libraries; Mrs. Teena Ocello, president of the Lenoir County Branch of Cystic Fibrosis; and Joan Cone, interviewed by Kay in Los Angeles. Ms. Cone is a cookbook author and will demonstrate flounder cooking at Morehead City during September.

Accepts New Position

Greenville's Ron Williams, formerly an art teacher and coach of the Cross Country and Wrestling Teams at J. H. Rose High School, has accepted a position as instructor of art and wrestling coach at Athen's Drive High School in Raleigh.

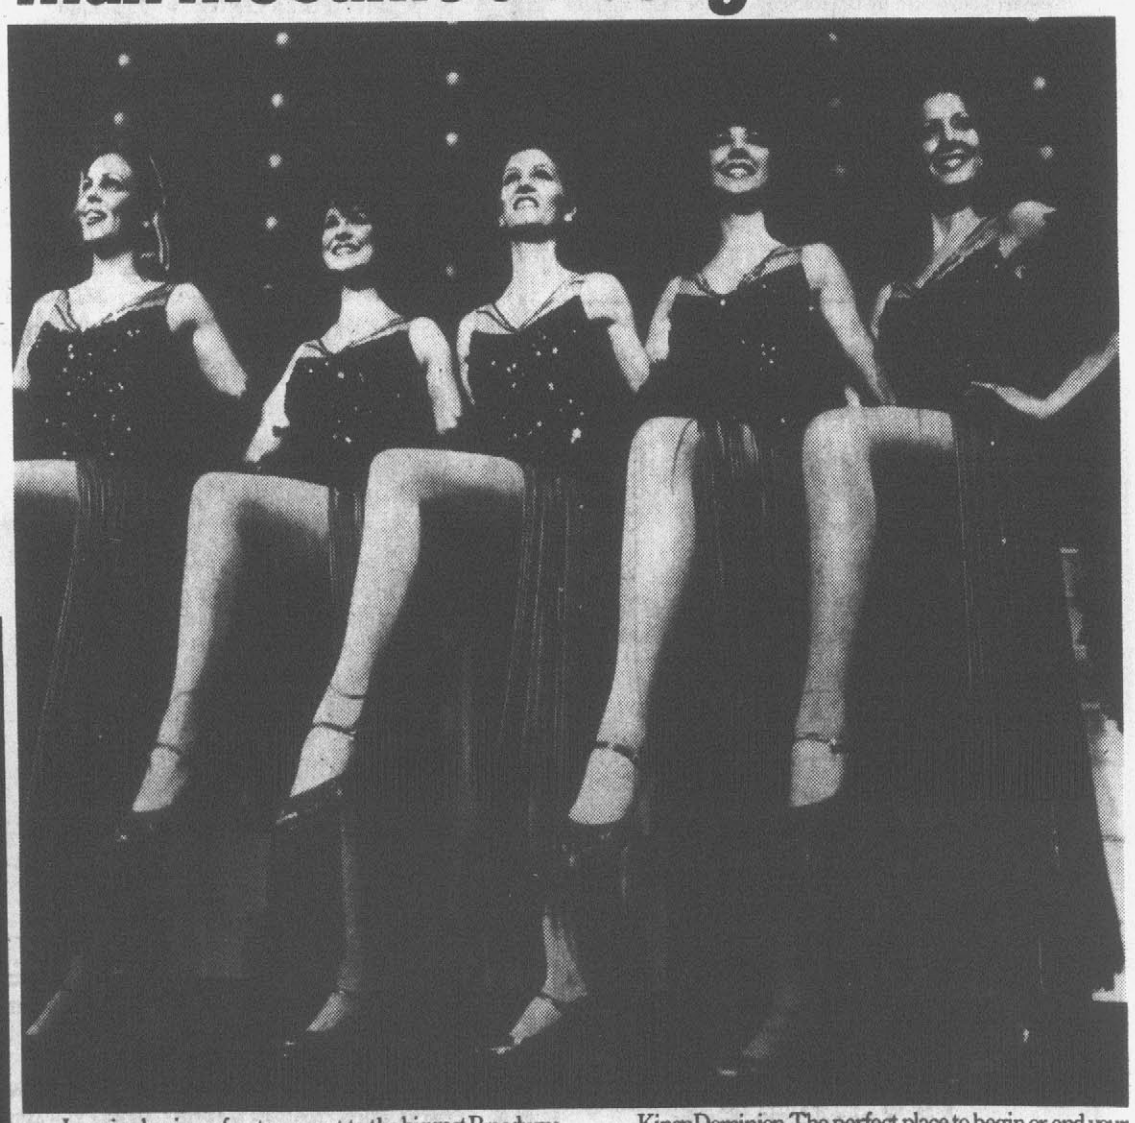

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Williams of Greenville and is married to the former Yvonne Jones. Williams is a 1968 graduate of Rose High School and received both the bachelor's and master's degrees in art from East Carolina University.

A teacher at Rose High for the past five years, this past summer he taught art at St. Andrews Presbyterian College at the Governor's School in Laurinburg.

Dean George McRorie Retiring After 40 Years In Education

George Spencer McRorie, Dean of Student Affairs at Pitt Technical Institute, is retiring this fall after spending 40 years in public education in North Carolina.

He will deliver the commencement address on August 24 to the largest graduating class in the history of Pitt Tech.

McRorie joined the Pitt Tech staff in July 1964. The school opened that fall with 12 teachers and 80 students, with a curriculum of three vocational and six technical programs. In January 1965 McRorie became Director of Student Personnel, which later was called Dean of Student Affairs.

The Pitt Tech student body has grown from 80 at that time to 1800 today. The curriculum now has 15 vocational and 23 technical programs.

Dr. Bill Fulford, President of Pitt Tech, says that McRorie is largely responsible for the tremendous growth of the school. "What this institution has accomplished since 1964 has been due to the giant of a man, Mac."

"Mac has rendered invaluable service in determining programs that Pitt Tech offers in light of potential student needs and of employment opportunities," stated Dr. Charles Russell, assistant to Fulford. "He has recruited students from all over the area, even out of tobacco fields."

Providing educational opportunities for students is an important issue to George McRorie. "Opportunity is important," McRorie said. "Some people need a chance at college. If it doesn't work out, then there are other alternatives. I don't think anyone should be denied an education if he is willing to work for one."

Prior to coming to Pitt Tech; McRorie was a teacher and guidance counselor at Rose High School. "His reputation was one of the finest in the state," Fulford stated.

McRorie began teaching in 1938 at Jefferson. He joined the army in 1942 and served in the airborne glider troops, spending two years in the European Theater during the war. He returned to North Carolina in 1946 and taught at various schools prior to coming to Greenville in 1958 to teach senior English at Rose High. He also served as assistant principal at Rose.

Although he hasn't taught public school for a while, McRorie has been teaching Sunday School at Robersonville United Methodist Church for the past 25 years. He has also been involved with local education by serving on the Martin County Board of Education for ten years, the last four as chairman.

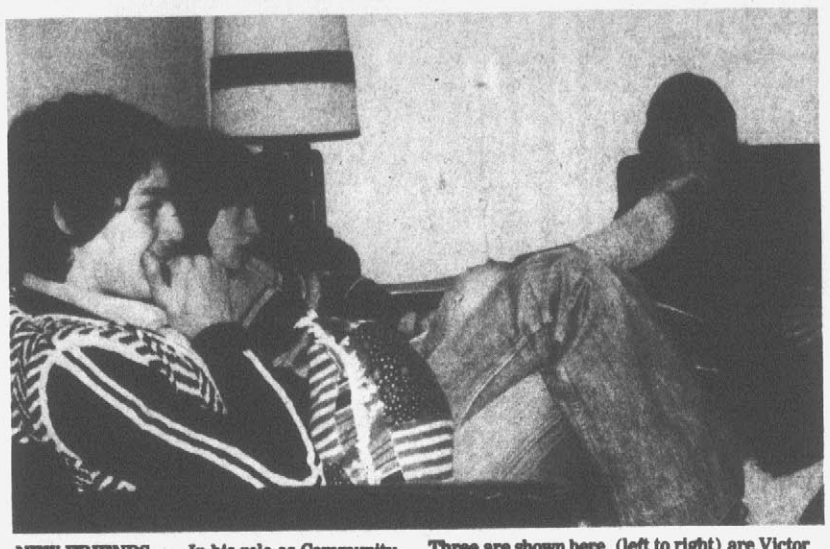

A native of Rurtherfordton, McRorie graduated from Appalachian State, and received his master's degree from East Carolina University. He has also done post graduate work at UNC-Chapel Hill, N. C. State and Florida State.

He is married to the former Bernice Roberson of Robersonville and they are the parents of three children — George Spencer, Jr., Cassandra Thompson, and Alonza, and three grandchildren.

Commenting on his long career in education, McRorie said "I have seen no drastic change in students over the years. Every generation has its problems. Look at history and literature. Crime, poverty, and war have always been with us. All my life I was told that my generation and every generation since has been told they were going to pot. It always happens. One generation of young people is no worse than any other."

Community Ambassador Jeen Kim

Finds The Netherlands 'Beautiful'

NEW FRIENDS . . . In his role as Community Ambassador, Rose High rising senior Jeen Kim is making new friend in The Netherlands. Three are shown here, (left to right) are Victor Boutier, Russell Eldorf, and Luit Thoma. Eldorf is a member of Kim's host family.

"The Netherlands is really a wonderful and beautiful country," writes Jean Kim, Greenville's Community Ambassador of Good Will. Kim, a rising senior at Rose High School, is currently living in "Heerenreen, a city of about 30,000 in the Friesland Province."

The family Kim lives with is named Elford. "There are two sons, Russell, 16, and Michael, 17. The Elfords lived in Canada for 15 years and have been in The Netherlands for six years now."

Kim explained that because he came directly to his host family from the states, "I didn't get to see much of Amsterdam."

He writes that in many ways life in the small European country resembles that in Greenville or anywhere else in America. "It's amazing, the similarities I find between the U.S. and The Netherlands. "The popular music is the same — the same top 40, disco, rock, jazz. The young people here are very fashion conscious, and clothes are expensive."

One major difference is the weather. "The climate is cool, breezy, and overcast mostly. Rain falls often but usually in short periods."

Kim reports that the Elford family "lives right by a fairly wide canal with lots of sailboats and motorboats passing by. Houses are modern and neat, and there are lots of flowers and plants in the front windows of every home."

Language is no problem for Kim as "Almost everyone speaks good English. I believe that it is part of the Dutch tradition to be helpful and friendly."

At the time of his letter, Kim was making plans to meet the mayor of Heerenveen to present to him the key to the city Greenville, Mayor Percy Cox gave Kim a key to present to the mayor where Kim would be visiting.

Serious Step

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican daily Observatore Romano says the decision of the Lambeth Conference of Anglican bishops to accept female priests was "an extremely serious step" that will drive the Roman and Anglican churches apart.

The paper said the Anglican decision helped unite churches in the Anglican communion that have disagreed on the ordination of women, such as American Episcopalians, but that the step "happens at the cost of greater distance from the Roman church."

Filed 1600 Fake Returns

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Vietnamese who filed 1,600 fake tax returns to claim $300,000 in refunds has been sentenced to prison by a judge who took him to task for stealing from the country that gave him a new home.

U.S. District Judge Irving Hill said Hong Duong was guilty of "the biggest scheme I have ever seen" and chided him Friday for stealing from the country that "warmly and hospitably" took him in. Doung, 26, was sentenced to three years in prison and fined $5,000.

Duong, who came to this country in 1971 as a student and holds a business administration degree from Cal StateLos Angeles, stood before Hill with tears streaming down his face.

"I realize the wrong thing I have done, and I feel sorry," he said.

Defense attorney Jan Lawrence Handzlik said Duong became obsessed with the idea of bringing his 20-member family to the United States from Communist Vietnam. The attorney said Duong and his commonlaw wife, Hong The Ly, 27, who have two children 1 and 2 years old, lived in "squalid conditions" without proper clothing or medical attention, and did not benefit from the money. Duong has accounted for only $30,000 of the money and said the rest was stolen from him.

However, Hill said the missing funds could be in "some hidden place, foreign or domestic."

Duong pleaded guilty July 18 to two counts of a federal indictment alleging that he and his wife had submitted more than 1,600 fake state and federal income tax returns in 1976 and 1977 using fictitious Thai and Vietnamese names.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Leonard Sharenow said the couple filed for $300,000 in refunds and received $150,000, which was placed in more than 100 savings accounts opened under phony names.

Miss Ly, who pleaded guilty to one count of the indictment, was scheduled for sentencing Aug. 25.

Guinnane Quadruplets Complete Boot Camp

By PETER MATTIACE
Associated Press Writer

CAPE MAY, N.J. (AP) — The Guinnane quadruplets do almost everything together, so when Paul decided to join the Coast Guard, it was only natural that his three brothers follow him.

Paul, Peter, Vincent and Gerard Guinnane, 17, of Detroit graduated from boot camp at the Coast Guard Training Center here Friday and won promotions from recruits to seamen apprentices.

"We like to stick together. We're a close-knit family," explained Peter, who earned two medals for his rifle and pistol marksmanship during boot camp.

Under a special Coast Guard program, the quads will return to civilian life for their senior year in high school before serving six years of active duty.

To hear the mild-mannered seamen explain it, Paul was the one to decide on the Coast Guard.

"We all wanted to join some kind of reserve unit and I said, 'Hey, you guys, want to join the Coast Guard?' and they said OK," Paul said.

"We all thought it was a good idea," Gerry said.

He said the quads were a camp curiosity for a while, especially among the cooks at chow time. But they had no special privileges among the 114 raw recruits in their class, he added.

Vince said the 5-foot-4 lookalikes caused little confusion among their superiors or shipmates.

The Coast Guard will break up the foursome after high school. Paul has orders for gunner's mate school at Governor's Island, N.Y. The rest are going to machinist technician school at Yorktown, Va.

The seamen come from a tradition of military men. Their father and grandfather were longtime soldiers in the British army.

PROGRAM FORMED

WASHINGTON (AP) — Formation of an endowment program to "better serve the needs of opera and musical theater" has been announced by the National Endowment for the Arts.

It said specific plans for the new program would be announced later in 1978 with implementation planned for fiscal 1980.

Alan Tapie, co-leader at Westchester, watches his tee shot at thirteen

Westchester Lead In Two-Way Knot

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Longshot Alan Tapie parlayed a hole-in-one and a birdie-birdie finish into a 4-under-par 67 and a tie with journeyman Gibby Gilbert for the third-round lead Saturday in the $300,000 Westchester Golf Classic.

Tapie, a mustachioed nonwinner in 4 years of tour activity, and the sturdy Gilbert had matching 54-hole totals of 205, 8 strokes under par on the hilly little 6,603-yard Westchester Country Club course just north of New York City. Gilbert shot a 68 in the warm, almost windless weather.

Hubert Green, who said he "had a chance to blow the tournament wide open" with a front-side 31, cooled off to a 37 on the back nine and, with a 68, was one shot out of the lead at 206.

Jack Nicklaus, winner of the British Open and three American tournaments this year, was in danger of falling out of contention for a third Westchester championship but birdied two of his last three holes to get in at par 71 and 207, only 2 strokes back going to Sunday's final round of the chase for a $60,000 first prize.

He was tied with Dave Eichelberger, Grier Jones and Lee Elder, also 6 under par. Elder had a 68. Jones shot a 66. Eichelberger came from far off the pace with a 66 that, strangely, included only a pair of 3s on his card and those on the first 2 holes.

"Obviously, I wasn't all that great," said Nicklaus, who had to rally from a double-bogey 6 in the 12th hole, where he drove into a fairway bunker and hit the lip coming out, and required 35 putts on the sometimes-bumpy greens.

Tom Watson topped a group of four at 208 after a 70. Second-round leader Ed Sabo fell back with a 74-209.

John Mahaffey, recent winner of the PGA and seeking a third consecutive victory here, shot a 72 and was a distant 7 strokes behind at 212. He was tied with Andy North, the defending champion and U.S. Open titleholder who had a 69.

Tapie, 29, winner of $46,000 this season in his best year ever, hit irons close for birdies on the second and fifth holes and heard the roar when Bob Greenwood, playing just in front of him, holed a wedge shot for an ace on the sixth.

Moments later Tapie, using a 9-iron, duplicated the hole-in-one, his second as a pro.

With a multiple-man scramble in progress — seven players either led or shared the lead at one time during the round — he fell back with bogeys on the 15th and 16th, each time missing the green, then got his share of the lead with the closing birdies. He flipped a short approach to 2½ feet on the 17th and dropped an 8-footer on the final hole.

Gilbert's big move came with deuces on the 14th and 16th holes. He missed an ace by about 6 inches, the ball sucking back dead on line with the hole, on the 14th, and scored from about 15 feet on the 16th.

"Overall, I'm very happy," he said. "It could have been a shot or two better — but it could have been a whole lot worse."

The veteran Gilbert, a three-time tour winner, had a chance to take the lead alone on the relatively easy par-5 18th, but missed the green with his second shot and chipped well by the hole. He two-putted for the par thatleft him in a tie for the top spot.

Kenyans Ordered Home

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Five of Kenya's top athletes, all of whom are on scholarship in the United States, have been forbidden to compete in other countries and ordered home immediately, the nation's highest sports authority said Saturday.

All five had competed in the Commonwealth Games in Canada earlier this month and were expected to take part in a big international meet in London next week.

The five athletes at the center of the storm are Mike Boit, gold medalist in the Commonwealth Games 800 meters; Michale Musyoki, who won a silver medal in the 10,000 meters, Fatwell Kimaiyo, Commonwealth record-holder in the 110-meter hurdles, Wilson Waigwa, one of the world's fastest runners over 1,500 meters, and Joel Cheruiyot, a promising young middle-distance runner.

Sam Ongeri, chairman of the amateur athletic association, said the five athletes could be banned for life from further competittion abroad because they took part in an invitational event in Zurich earlier this week without official permission.

As a result of the ban, only Henry Rono, double gold medalist at the Commonwealth Games and holder of four world records, and Sam Kipkurgat will compete at the London Crystal Palace competition out of the original seven expected to attend.

Rono took part in the Zurich meeting but was not involved in the row because he sought and received permission to run.

The tough line being taken by the Kenyan association is seen here as part of a campaign to bring into line some of their wayward track stars who have a tendency to operate independently of the Nairobi establishment.

At Wednesday's Crystal Palace meeting, Rono is scheduled to compete in the one-mile event and Kipkurgat in the 800 meters.

Ongeri said he had cabled the International Amateur Athletic Federation about the ban.

He said he had received reports that some of the athletes had also taken part in a meet in Berlin Friday.

"I am going to be firm," Ongeri said. "It is better to have a well-behaved team and win no medals than to have 10 indisciplined gold medallists." Kenya placed fourth in the medals chart in Edmonton.

All five athletes are studying in the United States on track scholarships and took part in the All-Africa games in Algiers before the Commonwealth Games.

A ban on competition would mean the automatic loss of their athletic scholarships.

Tempers Flare As Mets Defeat Los Angeles, 8-4

NEW YORK (AP) — For the second time in as many games, tempers have flared while the first-place Los Angeles Dodgers played the last-place New York Mets.

An angry confontation took place at second base Friday night, when the Dodgers' Reggie Smith slid hard into Doug Flynn while stealing second. And Saturday, before the Mets scored four times in the sixth inning on the way to an 8-4 triumph, Los Angeles third baseman Lee Lacy rushed Tim Foli after forcing the New York shortstop at second.

"I never cursed him, I never said I wanted to fight," said Lacy, speaking softly after the game. "I just said, 'Foli, if you had slid, you'd be safe.'"

Foli didn't slide in the fifth when he was forced at second — on a close play — when Steve Henderson cracked a grounder to Lacy. "I don't think it was really any of his business," said Foli, who stayed on second after being called out and offered his opinion of the judgment to umpire Paul Pryor.

"I wanted to say a few things to the umpire, said what I wanted, and was ready to leave when Lacy jumped in," said Foli. "I just told him it's none of his business. They're in a pennant race. They know it. Maybe their nerves are ...just shot because of the way they have to play everyday."

The tension may have presented itself on the force play. Foli stood at second and Lacy approached. The distance between them decreased with each passing word. Finally, Lacy dropped his glove and charged Foli, but was detained by pitcher Don Sutton as players from both benches rushed onto the field.

Order was restored, and an inning later Henderson's two-run single capped the New York burst and snapped the Dodgers' four-game winning streak.

After New York reliever Dale Murray, 6-5, pitched out of a bases-loaded, one-out jam in the top of the sixth, the Mets went to work against Don Sutton, 12-10.

John Stearns doubled and Bruce Boisclair walked. One out later after Doug Flynn walked to load the bases, pinchhitter Ron Hodges lofted a pop fly that was dropped by shortstop Bill Russell. Russell had entered the game at the start of the inning after Ron Cey batted for Enzo Hernandez.

Stearns scored on that play, snapping a 3-3 tie. Then Lee Mazzilli drew a bases-loaded walk and, one out later, Henderson cracked the single that helped the Mets to only their second win in eight games and just their fifth in the last 19.

Lenny Randle had an RBI single in the seventh inning to make it 8-3 and Reggie Smith hit a sacrifice fly for Los Angeles in the ninth.

The Mets pulled even at 3-3 in the fourth. Willie Montanez singled and took second when Stearns was hit by a pitch. He went to third on Boisclair's fly ball to center, and scored after Randle grounded to first baseman Steve Garvey.

Affirmed Disqualified

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — Calumet Farm's Alydar, runner-up in each of the Triple Crown events, won the $104,800 Travers Stakes Saturday when his arch-rival, Affirmed, was disqualified and placed second for interference before a record crowd of 50,122 at Saratoga Race Track.

Affirmed, who became the 11th Triple Crown winner in history this year, crossed the finish line first ahead of Alydar, but was placed second after a steward's inquiry and a foul claim by Alydar's jockey, Jorge Velasquez.

Affirmed, racing on the inside, crossed in front of Alydar approaching the half-mile pole and Alydar dropped back. Alydar made another closing rush at Affirmed but fell back by 1¾ lengths.

It marked only the third victory in 10 meetings for Alydar against Affirmed in this great thoroughbred rivalries.

Affirmed, the 3-5 favorite who had won all eight starts this year and nine in a row dating back to last year, was ridden by Laffit Pincay, who was substituting for Steve Cauthen, the injured 18-year-old sensation. Cauthen was hurt in a spill here Aug. 9.

Alydar finished 3¾ lengths in front of Meadowhill Stable's Nasty and Bold. Fernando Acevedo's Shake Shake Shake finished fourth and last, another 15¼ lengths back.

McGinnis Trade: Swap Of Talent For Teamwork

By The Associated Press

Julius Erving was sitting on the floor in front of his locker, ice packs balanced on his chronically sore knees.

His Philadelphia 76ers had just won their game rather easily, but Erving had contributed little. He had looked like just another player out on the Spectrum floor, a shocking disappointment for those who remembered the brilliant Dr. J from his days with the New York Nets.

Equally shocking were Erving's comments after the game.

"You may never see Dr. J again," he said, his voice barely audible amidst the blaring radios and tape decks that are constant companions to many of his teammates. "With the situation here the way it is, certain adjustments have been called for. I've had to change my game; we all have. Within this framework, I can't do the things I used to do.

"When are you going to see the old Dr. J?" he asked, repeating a newsman's question. "Maybe never."

That was a situation the 76ers could not tolerate, and that was why they traded all-star forward George McGinnis to the Denver Nuggets this week for forward Bobby Jones, with reserve guard Ralph Simpson coming to Philadelphia as a throw-in.

It was a swap of talent for teamwork, a brilliant individual for the consummate team player, an outstanding soloist for a man who will be happy to play second fiddle in a first-class orchestra.

And because the 76ers now have the team-oriented Jones to play forward opposite Erving, the fans around the National Basketball Association may finally get an eyeful of the old Dr. J.

"The word is complement," said Sixers Coach Billy Cunningham. "We had too many players who played the same kind of basketball. George and Julius tried so hard to complement each other, but I just don't think they were able to do it. I think Bobby will help make us a sounder team. And we'll see the exciting side of Julius Erving next season."

The importance of the latter cannot be overstated. At his best, Erving is the most exciting player in the game, one capable of carrying a team all the way to a championship. But the framework of the Philadelphia 76ers — a highly paid, undisciplined collection of individual stars — never allowed Erving to perform at his best. Thus they were beaten in the playoffs by better organized teams, Portland in 1977 and Washington last spring.

No one is better aware of the situation than McGinnis.

"I've never been on a team with such tremendous talent as the 76ers," he said. "It was almost frightening. But I think a lot of guys suffered on that team. Some guys had to give up some things. After all, there was only one basketball."

With Jones around, Erving will get to do his thing with that basketball. Jones is the perfect role player; if the NBA gave awards for the best supporting actor, he'd take home the Oscar every time.

He's the best defensive forward in basketball, and that's one phase of the game in which the Sixers have needed improvement. He annually leads the league in field goal percentage, happily dumping in those little 10-footers and seldom taking a bad shot. He is the ideal player to fill in the background while Erving shines in the spotlight.

"The Sixers helped themselves at both ends," is the way one rival NBA general manager viewed the trade. "Jones will play defense better than anyone else they have, and he'll make Erving that much more effective on offense."

Ironically, McGinnis joins a Nuggets team that already boasts superstar David Thompson and such other accomplished offensive players as Dan Issel Charlie Scott and Anthony Roberts.

But the Denver people say they're not worried about become a Rocky Mountain version of the 76ers.

"I'm not concerned in the least that we can handle the array of talent assembled here," said Nuggets President Carl Scheer. "George McGinnis is one of the great players in professional basketball. He's demonstrated that he is an exciting, talented player, and he will give us that extra dimension in scoring and rebounding."

Coach Larry Brown agreed.

"We know what George can do, and he'll be playing with some people who I think will make it easier for him to do well," said Brown.

And McGinnis says he believes Denver is "a completely different team from the one I left — I expect no ego problems here. I don't think I'll have to give up so much. I think this will give me a chance to be George McGinnis again."

It will ulso give Julius Erving a chance to be Dr. J again, something basketball fans in Philadelphia and around the league can certainly look forward to.

Hurdle's Shot Leads Royals Past Rangers

KANSAS CITY, Mo.(AP) — Clint Hurdle hit a two-run homer and Dennis Leonard scattered six hits to give the Kansas City Royals a 3-0 victory over the Texas Rangers Saturday.

Ferguson Jenkins, 11-8, held the Royals hitless until Pete LaCock led off the fourth with a single. One out later, Hurdle hammered a Jenkins' pitch into the right field bleachers for his sixth homer of the year.

Kansas City added a run in the eighth when LaCock doubled and scored on a single by Darrell Porter.

The Royals loaded the bases in the seventh on singles by Al Cowens, Amos Otis, and Fred Patek. But Richie Zisk made an outstanding running catch of George Brett's line drive to end the inning.

A's Defeat Bosox

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Designated hitter Rico Carty drove in two runs with his 22nd homer of the season and an infield out as the Oakland A's defeated the Boston Red Sox 8-4 Saturday and snapped a sevengame losing streak.

John Henry Johnson, with relief help from Mike Norris and Bob Lacey, won his 10th game of the season.

The A's got four runs off Boston starter Bill Lee, 10-10. Carty led off the second inning with a home run and the A's got another run on a single by Taylor Duncan, two infield outs, and a single by rookie Bruce Robinson.

The A's scored two more runs in the third on a double by Dell Alston, a single by Mitchell Page, Carty's infield out, and an error by shortstop Rick Burleson.

The Red Sox got a run in the fourth on a single by Bob Bailey, a stolen base, and a single by Butch Hobson. A home run by Dwight Evans made it 4-2 in the sixth.

The A's got what proved to be the winning run in the sixth.

Post Leads By Two In Dearborn Tourney

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Sandra Post, who surged to a 3-stroke lead at 7-under-par after 14 holes, bogeyed the next three Saturday, then recovered with a birdie on the final hole to take a 2-stroke lead after the third round of the $150,000 LPGA event at the Dearborn Country Club.

She shot a 1-under 71 for a 54hole total of 211, two better than her co-leader of the first two rounds, Kathy Whitworth, and Pat Meyers.

No one else in the field of 74 bested par at the 6,411-yard, par 72 layout near Detroit.

Top prize in the 72-hole event, which concludes Sunday, is $22,500.

Post's string of bogeys, at 15, 16 and 17, dropped her into a tie for the lead with Meyers at 4-under-par. But Post, who drove into the woods off the 18th tee, blasted a brillant second shot 10 feet from the pin and sank the putt for a birdie 3.

Meyers, in the threesome with Post, was also in the woods on her drive. She didn't recover nearly so well and wound up with a bogey.

She finished with 70 for the day.

ECU's Dye Pleased With Team's Progress

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

"I've got to be pleased with the progress we've made," head coach Pat Dye said after watching his East Carolina Pirates in their first game-type scrimmage of pre-season practice.

The team began practice last Sunday and had four days of work in shorts before beginning work in full gear on Thursday. Yesterday, the first team went against the second team in a full-contact scrimmage and won by about five touchdowns.

"We've been very lucky all week from the standpoint of the weather," Dye said. "We've done a lot of work and haven't missed a single practice. We've been able to get in just about everything we plan to do."

Dye was especially happy about the fact that the coaches have been able to work with the team's younger players, as well as get the veterans squared away. "We've brought the young kids a long way."

The team has also been relatively unhampered by injuries. The only major mishap so far is a broken jaw suffered Friday by Jesse Hilton, a quarterback-defensive back from Enfield. Dye said he may be out for the season and will possibly be redshirted.

The coach had praise for the entire offensive unit, which had only one turnover, an interception, and was forced to punt only once in the scrimmage. "The entire offensive unit has done real well — we just don't have a weak link on the offensive unit."

The entire offensive backfield, starting quarterback Leander Green and running backs Theodore Sutton, Anthony Collins and Eddie Hicks, drew praise from Dye for their scrimmage performance. Dye also liked the work of the offensive line.

The defense, the coach said, is a little harder to evaluate. "It's hard to get a real good picture as far as the defensive team. We haven't run the best defense against the best offense'. The competition is not as strong as we would like for it to be, but overall, we've got more players than ever. We don't have the super player on defense, but we've got more depth than we've ever had."

Dye said the defensive unit is having some problems with technique, however, that will have to be ironed out in the remaining two weeks before the opening game.

Linebackers Tommy Summer, Mike Brewington and Jeffrey Warren drew individual praise from Dye for their work in the scrimmage.

In the remaining two weeks of practice before the Sept. 2 opener with Western Carolina, the Pirates will be working on execution, technique, fundamentals and conditioning, Dye said.

"We'll hit a little every day and have one more big scrimmage before the first game."

ECU Booters Sign Three

East Carolina University soccer coach Brad Smith announced the signing of three high school players recently, as well as the team's 16-game fall schedule.

Smith signed Brad Winchell of Atlanta, Terry Rainer of Orlando, Fla. and Stanley Griff of Rockaway, N. J. to grants-in-aid. The three will join the Pirates for the first time this fall.

Winchell starred at North Springs High School, where he scored 37 career goals and was twice most valuable player. Rainer was chosen first team all-Florida for his play at center halfback for Maynard Evans High. Griff was a standout fullback at Morris Knolls High.

East Carolina opens soccer workouts today with the first game set for Sept. 9 in Raleigh in the first round of the Mayor's Cub Tournament. N. C. State, Duke and North Carolina are the other teams in the event.

The complete schedule:

Sept. 9-10 Mayor's Cup Tournament at Raleigh (N. C. State, Duke, North Carolina); 16 Catawba; 19 at Elon; 24 at UNC Charlotte; 27 at Duke; 30 Campbell;

Oct. 6 at South Carolina; 10 N. C. Wesleyan; 14 Pembroke State; 17 UNC Wilmington; 23 at N. C. State; 26 at UNC Greensboro; 29 William and Mary;

Nov. 4 Appalachian State; 8 North Carolina.

Jai-Alai Could Hit New Jersey

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Florida has been conquered. So has Connecticut. But is the rest of the United States ready for another sport played mostly by non-Americans?

The sport is jai-alai, a basque game played on a three-walled court by either two or four players. Not dissimilar to handball in its rules, jai-alai arenas (known as frontons) feature parimutuel betting on the outcome of seven-point games, with eight teams involved in each game.

There are frontons throughout Florida, one in Newport, R.I., three in Connecticut, one in Las Vegas and, if the major promoter of the sport in this country, World Jai-Alai, has its way, the game soon will expand to New Jersey. And then ... who knows?

"Actually, jai-alai is not close to being a fact anywhere else, aside from New Jersey," says Dick Donovan, president and chief executive officer of World Jai-Alai. "In New Jersey, there's a referendum on the ballot for November, and it's got the backing of Governor Byrne and the support of municipalities throughout the state.

"If the referendum passes, the legislature probably will form a jai-alai commission and it will go from there."

The fact that New Jersey already has legalized gambling in Atlantic City will work in kaialai's favor. But there won't be any frontons in Atlantic City if the voters opt for jai-alai in the Garden State.

"Frontons worry about casinos taking money away," says Fred McKenna, public relations director for World JaiAlai. "So Atlantic City isn't a likely place for us to go.

"We've scouted sites in Elizabeth, Newark, Asbury Park and Camden. We like to be near a big city or adjacent to major highways for easy access."

Proximity to New York would be a major factor in the choosing of a site for the first Jersey fronton. Connecticut has frontons in Bridgeport, Hartford and Milford, all of which are at least twice the distance from New York as Elizabeth or Newark.

"My gut reaction is that the cities will benefit from jai-alai if we get it in New Jersey," adds Donovan. "There'll be major construction projects, it will be a catalyst to get the city going. That's why Newark would be a good place."

While expansion to New Jersey is foremost in World JaiAlai's plans, if the referendum passes, the organization always is looking for potential areas to move into.

"We've heard of interest in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Maine," says McKenna. "In Pennsylvania, Jack Kelly, who is known for his involvement with the AAU, has tried to get u bill in the works for jai-alai in the state."

One reason jai-alai hasn't spread to most areas of the country is that parimutuel betting on humans is illegal in most states. Also, the game is not well-known in many areas.

That could be changing.

"There has been a little expression of interest from a television network," notes McKenna. "We run a Tournament of Champions between the Miami and Tampa frontons and a condensation of that might be shown in the future.

"Bruce Jenner did a feature on jai-alai for 'Good Morning America.' He was taught by Gonzalez, an American from Miami who also was a decathloner. And Jenner picked up the game very quickly."

Pirates Win First Game Of Doubleheader

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Frank Taveras scored two runs, and the Pittsburgh Pirates took advantage of some wildness by Houston starter Floyd Bannister for their fifth straight victory, a 4-2 decision over the Astros in the first game of a twinight double-header Saturday.

Taveras also stole three bases, giving him 31 for the season.

Pittsburgh right-hander Bert Blyleven, 9-9, scattered six hits in eight-plus innings before yielding Houston's first run with none out in the ninth on Enos Cabell's single. Grant Jackson then yielded Jose Cruz' RBI fielder's choice before Kent Tekulve came in to register his 22nd save. It was Tekulve's 68th appearance this season, tops in the major leagues.

The Pirates pecked away at Bannister, 3-8, for their runs on five hits and seven walks. Bannister, who lasted 61-3 innings, also was charged with a balk and a wild pitch, both of which figured in the scoring.

Phil Garner scored the Pirates first run when he singled, went to second on a balk and came home on Steve Brye's single in the second inning. Taveras scored in the third when he walked, stole second and third and came home on Manny Sanguillen's ground out.

Reds Outlast Cubs

CHICAGO (AP) — Mike Lum's fourth hit of the game, a tie-breaking single in the 10th inning off relief ace Bruce Sutter, and pitcher Tom Hume's two-run single led the Cincinnati Reds to an uphill 9-7 victory Saturday over the Chicago Cubs.

Dan Driessen opened the Cincinnati 10th with a single and when right fielder Bobby Murcer dropped Johnny Bench's line drive Driessen was forced at second. Dave Concepcion singled before Lum's base hit scored Bench. Hume then singled home two more runs through a drawn-in infield.

Sutter, 7-4, was the loser and was tagged for three runs in the ninth when the Reds tied the game at 6-6. Hume, 6-11, the winner and the sixth pitcher employed by Cincinnati, was touched for a run in the last of 10th when third baseman Pete Rose made an error on Dave Kingman's ground ball with the bases loaded.

Hands Off

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The New Orleans Jazz has threatened to seek league penalties if other National Basketball Association teams try to sign its discontented forward, Leonard "Truck" Robinson.

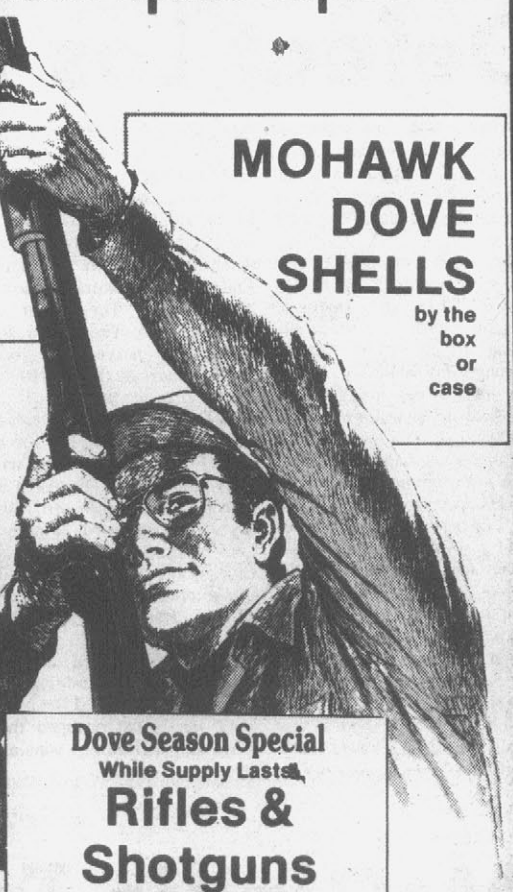

The team sent a message to the 21 other franchises warning that talks with Robinson would be considered tampering, which is subject to league sanctions.

Connors leaps to return shot

Peiffer Sees Early End To Career

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — You spend your high school and college years learning and refining skills you will use in your profession.

Once you get there, you are a success. Then, suddenly, you are forced out of that field and have to search for a new way to make a living. Imagine how it would feel.

Dan Peiffer doesn't have to imagine. The scenario is painfully real.

At age 27, after a brief fouryear career, Peiffer is no longer a National Football League player. A repeatedly battered right knee has knocked him out of his job as starting center for the Chicago Bears.

He was kicked by a cow on his Cape Girardeau, Mo., farm and a few days later, on March 1, the knee was operated on for the third time. Still, he felt he would be ready to play this season.

"But then when I strained my knee in the fourth day of camp, there was a nine-day period there where I wrestled with my mind back and forth," he said. "When I finally did make the decision to come out and announce it, I was at peace with myself."

On Aug. 3, Peiffer retired from pro football.

"He's made as positive a contribution to the team as anyone in the last three years," said Bears' General Manager Jim Finks. "It's a shame. Here's a guy right in the prime of his career. He's been a real asset. You don't replace guys like that."

The night of Aug. 5, his retirement just two days old, Peiffer was in front of a television set, trying to watch the Bears open their exhibition season with Oakland.

"I started to watch it on TV and then they started to highlight the offensive line and talk about some of the offensive linemen and I couldn't watch it. I had to turn off the TV," he said.

"There is an adjustment period and I'm in it right now."

Peiffer said he always wanted to play high school football and when he did, he set his sights on college ball. He didn't think seriously about the pros until scouts talked with him while he was at Southeast Missouri State.

"Then I made that a goal and worked for that," he said.

In 1973, the St. Louis Cardinals drafted him in the 14th round, then released him but "I left there knowing that I could eventually play. It's just experience and being in the right place at the right time was all I needed."

He played 23 games with the Florida Blazers of the World Football League in 1974. He was a Bears' captain in 1975 and 1977 and played every offensive down last season. He was in four games in 1976 before having surgery on his left knee.

Center "is a position that you expect to play at least 10 years and when I came here in 1975 I started out pretty good," said Peiffer. "They came right out and said that I'd be their center for the next 10 years. Well, then all these unforeseen complications happened and even when I came to camp this year I thought I had another three to five years left. And then to have it end so suddenly.

"It was a shock but I accept it now and I'm ready to go on to the next stage, whatever it's going to be."

Peiffer stayed at the Bears camp at Lake Forest College after retiring to rehabilitate his knee, then planned to pursue job opportunities at home.

He said he might have been able to take this season off and strengthen his knee so he could play next year. But he said it's not worth the potential danger.

"It's just the risk factor of another injury. That would mean a fourth operation and the doctors just said they wouldn't guarantee how it could come out," he said.

The way he strained his knee in practice "was one of the reasons I decided to give it up," Peiffer said. "I was running and I just made a cut, a move to pick up a block, and when I planted and drove my weight off that leg it just slid on me and strained the ligament.

But it was Peiffer's cow that delivered the crushing blow.

"I was working my cattle one day," he said, "and I was separating the calves off the cows to wean them. I had them stirred up and I had them penned side by side and I walked behind this one cow and it just kicked me with no real provocation. It just let me have it, caught me right in the side of the knee, just perfect."

But Peiffer had his revenge. The next day he had the cow slaughtered.

"That was vindictive," he admitted. "I was upset and I took it to the butcher and had it butchered there. I've still got part of it in the freezer. It learned a lesson. It's hamburger now."

Peiffer said he's planned to have a cow slaughtered last spring. The incident made his choice easier.

"I never had an injury problem in my life. I never even so much as missed a practice in my life, let alone a game. And the tide just turned against me when I got here.

"But I have no regrets. I enjoyed the time I was in pro ball," he said. "I made it a lot farther than a lot of people. I enjoyed it."

Ali Wants To Spread Goodwill

DEER LAKE, Pa. (AP) — Former heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali says he intends to use his vast recognition to become an international ambassador of goodwill when he retires from the ring.

When that will be Ali isn't saying, but the former champ — speaking at his training camp in preparation for his Sept. 15 rematch in New Orleans against new champion Leon Spinks — says he will donate his wealth to charity while pursuing world harmony.

"The world is waiting for me. I always knew God had a purpose for me. I thought it was to be a boxer, but now I know it's more — to be a world man.

"Look, I'm getting on planes, flying all over the world, talking to presidents and great world leaders. I went to see (Soviet President Leonid) Brezhnev after the Spinks fight. I'm going to see Ian Smith in Rhodesia," Ali said.

Ali told a reporter he plans to form a charity organization to be known as WORLD.

"I'm going to start this charity organization so I can help poor people and give them food all across the world," he said.

"I own an office building in Chicago that will serve as headquarters for WORLD. I own properties in Washington, D.C., that I will turn over to WORLD.

"I will give my training camp at Deer Lake to WORLD. I'll give my Rolls Royce to WORLD. All my wealth will go to WORLD," he said. "I'm going to get me a four-door Chevy. I want to get rid of all my worldly things. I'm only interested in spiritual things."

Asked if he thought it difficult to part with his wealth, Ali said, "Allah don't put no burden on a soul that he can t handle."

Connors Advances

STOWE, Vt. (AP) — Top-seeded Jimmy Connors scored a 7-6, 4-0 victory over fourthseeded Bob Lutz and Tim Gullikson beat Eliot Teltscher 6-3, 6-4 in the semifinal matches of a Grand Prix tennis tournament.

Connors and Gullikson will face each other in the final Sunday.

Lutz was forced to retire after four games of the second set of his match with Connors because of a tendon pull in his right knee, probably incurred in the first set tie-breaker.

Connors, hitting a ball out of the stadium and arguing the line call on the last point of the tiebreaker with head umpire George Parker, managed to have the point replayed. Connors won the point and the set.

In the other semifinal, third seed Tim Gullikson controlled the match, his serve keeping Teltscher off balance. Gullikson had four service aces and won 18 points with his serve.

In the preliminary rounds, the 19-year-old Teltscher, who has been a pro for just three months, had knocked off two of the top seeds, Kim Warwick and Harold Solomon.

Lady Bucs Ink Runner

East Carolina women's track coach Laurie Arrants has announced the signing of Carol Belcher of Virginia Beach, Va. to a grant-in-aid for the coming year.

The versatile Belcher, a graduate of Cox High School and the Lady Pirates' lone track signee for the year, is a standout in the long jump and 440. She also participated in gymnastics and field hockey in high school.

The Virginia Beach Sports Club honored her as the outstanding female athlete in the area.

Rangers Get 'Unearned' Win

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The Kansas City Royals handed the Texas Rangers a game Friday night — and the Rangers almost dropped it.

All their runs were unearned as the Rangers defeated the Royals 4-3, but Texas almost threw the game away with some poor defensive play in the bizarre game at Royals Stadium.

"Neither team played very well today," said Texas Manager Billy Hunter in an understatement, "but the good guys survived. We gave them a lot of help, but they could say the same thing about some of the runs we scored."

Mike Hargrove singled leading off the Texas first and took second on a wild pitch by rookie Rich Gale. After Jim Sundberg beat out an infield hit, both runners scored when first baseman Pete LaCock threw wildly to second base on a double-play attempt.

The Royals' manager was in for more shocks later in the game. In the Texas fourth, Bobby Bonds singled and took second on a throwing error by shortstop Fred Patek. Then Richie Zisk struck out but was saved by a passed ball.

John Lowenstein singled home Bonds and Zisk, who moved around to third, came home with the Rangers' eventual winning run on a ground ball by Toby Harrah.

In other American League games, the Boston Red Sox beat the Oakland A's 6-3; the New York Yankees defeated the Seattle Mariners 6-1; the California Angels beat the Baltimore Orioles 3-2; the Milwaukee Brewers blanked the Detroit Tigers 2-0; the Chicago White Sox trimmed the Cleveland Indians 7-1 and the Minnesota Twins beat the Toronto Blue Jays 4-3 in 10 innings.

Red Sox 6, A's 3

Jim Rice had four hits — including his 30th homer of the season — and scored three runs as Boston beat Oakland.

Rice, the major league leader in homers and runs batted in, hit a two-run shot off Steve Renko in the first inning for his 100th and 101st RBI. The slugging outfielder doubled in the sixth and scored on a single by Carlton Fisk to send the American League East leaders ahead 3-2. After the A's tied the score, Rice triggered a game-breaking, three-run rally in the eighth with a base hit.

Yankees 6, Mariners 1

Ed Figueroa held Seattle to four hits and Mickey Rivers drove in one run and scored another as New York defeated the Mariners. Paul Mitchell, 6-12, battled Figueroa, 12-8, in a 1-1 pitching duel until the Yankee seventh when Rivers drove in a run with a ground ball.

The Yankees scored twice more in the eighth to put the game away as Graig Nettles and Bucky Dent delivered RBI singles.

Angels 3, Orioles 2

Don Baylor hit a two-out solo home run in the bottom of the ninth inning to lead California over Baltimore and move the Angels to within two percentage points of front-running Kansas City in the American League West.

Baylor's 25th home run of the season came off loser Scott McGregor, 12-11. The victory went to Chris Knapp, 12-7.

Brewers 2, Tigers 0

Gorman Thomas lined a tworun, second-inning double to back Lary Sorensen's eight-hit pitching and pace Milwaukee over Detroit.

Sorensen, 15-8, allowed only three runners to reach scoring position as the Brewers extended their winning streak to six games and cooled off the Tigers, who had won 11 of 14.

White Sox 7, Indians 1

A two-run triple by rookie Mike Squires and a two-run homer by Ralph Garr highlighted a four-run, first-inning outburst that helped Chicago beat Cleveland.

The White Sox scored their first four runs off Rick Wise, 9-16, as Bob Molinaro led off with a single, Don Kessinger followed with a double, Squires tripled to deep center, and, after a line-out by Lamar Johnson, Garr drilled his third homer of the season.

Twins 4, Blue Jays 3

Glenn Adams' RBI double in the 10th inning led Minnesota over Toronto. Winner Jeff Holly, 1-1, pitched four scoreless innings in relief of Dave Goltz, allowing two hits and walking four. Tom Murphy, 4-9, took the loss.

The Twins had tied the score at 3-3 with a two-run ninth against Murphy, who came in to pitch after starter Tom Underwood had fired four-hit ball for eight innings.

Tarkenton Seems Recovered

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

If his performance against the Miami Dolphins is any indication, Fran Tarkenton is fully recovered from the first major injury of his career. And it will be rival defenses that will be hurting this season when they face the Vikings' quarterback.

Tarkenton suffered a broken leg last Nov. 7. He returned to the National Football League wars Friday night in Miami's 30-22 preseason victory over Minnesota.

"I felt fine; I didn't think about the leg at all," said Tarkenton, who was 17 for 29 for 209 yards passing including two touchdowns. He hit Chuck Foreman on a two yard score and connected with Ahmad Rashad on a 73-yard bomb.

"I got a workout, and it felt good. It was all right for a preseason game."

"I think preseason games are a little misleading," added Vikings Coach Bud Grant. "We like to put on a good show, but at the end you would have seen Chuck Foreman in there if it had been a regular season game."

Miami quarterback Bob Griese threw touchdown passes of 40 yads to Nat Moore and 27 yards to Norm Bulaich and went 11 for 17 for 136 yards.

In the only other preseason game Friday, Washington edged Baltimore 17-16 as Joe Theismann hit Reggie Haynes with an 18-yard scoring pass for the winning score.

Neither Theismann nor Billy Kilmer is sure who is No. 1 at QB in Washington. Nor is Coach Jack Pardee.

"I'm not thinking about who's going to start," Pardee said. "I'm purposely not thinking about it."

Kilmer has had two of his 10 pass attempts intercepted, while completing seven for 106 yards. Theismann has completed seven of 12 for 119 yards.

The highlight of Saturday's action is the battle for Texas. The Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys host the Houston Oilers in an exhibition game that annually provides a wild shootout.

Dallas owns an 8-3 edge in the series which began in 1967. The Oilers won last year's encounter 23-14.

"We've got talent, desire and aggressiveness," said Houston defensive end Elvin Bethea. "We're gonna win and earn a lot of respect. I'm not usually an optimistic person because the last time I said we'd have a great season, we went 1-13 in 1973."

On Sunday, Kansas City plays at New England and the Bay Area rivalry between the Oakland Raiders and San Francisco 49ers is renewed at Candlestick Park.

The long football weekend, which began Thursday with Los Angeles routing Seattle 26-7, ends Monday with Cleveland hosting Detroit.

The Bills faced unenviable prospect of playing against the Broncos' vaunted "Orange Crush" defense with an offense led by a pair of untested quarterbacks. With starter Joe Ferguson sidelined by a stretched ligament in his right knee and backup David Fowler having retired, Ken Johnson and Fred Besana will call signals. Neither has played a down in a regular season NFL game.

"When you lose your starting quarterback and the men behind him haven't played a lot, you have problems getting the passing game going," said Bills Coach Chuck Knox. He didn't have to add that without O.J. Simpson to spearhead the running attack, avoiding getting crushed by the Denver defense will be difficult.

Simpson, traded to the 49ers in the offseason, is expected to make his debut for San Francisco against the Raiders.

"O.J. will start and play a few series against the Raiders," General Manager Joe Thomas announced Friday.

Sports Info Clinic Set

The East Carolina University Sports Information Department will conduct a clinic on Saturday, Sept. 2 about sports information principles and techniques. The session will be free for interested high school and junior high school coaches and their student aides who will be working with the media.

The four-hour program will begin at 9 a.m. Later in the afternoon, a tour of the new ultra-modern ECU football press box is scheduled.

Those attending the clinic are invited to remain for the Pirates' home opener at 7 p.m. against Western Carolina University as guests of the sports information office. There will be no charge for these tickets, but advance notice will be required for football tickets. The deadline is Wednesday, Aug. 30.

"This is part of our extension effort to assist the community and the state," said Walt Atkins, ECU's sports information director. "We will be concerning ourselves with covering football, football statistical work, understanding the media and how best to meet their needs, as well as principles for dealing with the media on a day-to-day basis."

Atkins will also be conducting a week-long seminar next summer for those students desiring more intense personal instruction and concentrated practice in the skills of journalism and sports information work. Carefully-selected counselors will enhance this program.

There is no charge for the Sept. 2 clinic, but advance reservations are recommended. Contact the sports information office by mail at Minges Coliseum, East Carolina University, Greenville, N. C. 27834 or by calling 757-6491.

GTA Seeks Members

The recently-founded Greenville Tennis Association, a group formed to increase interest and appreciation of tennis among minority citizens and others, is holding a drive for new members.

Membership is open to everyone, and women and children are especially encouraged to join. Free instruction will be given to beginners, intermediates and advanced players.

The GTA currently has 30 members. Those interested in joining can call 758-4545 or 756-3578 after 6 p.m. or show up at the weekly practice sessions at 8:45 Saturday mornings at the Evans Park tennis courts.

Brook Valley Golf

The John Proctor Memorial golf tournament for seniors was held at Brook Valley Country Club last week and Reynolds May took low gross in the championship flight.

Second low gross went to Gene Ward, while Howard Proctor was low net and Mike Dilanciano second low net in the championship flight.

In the first flight, Sammy Kee was low gross, while Bob Powell was second low gross. Horton Rountree was low net and Billy Morton second low net.

Andy Boles was low gross in the second flight and Les Turnage was second. Low net went to Polly Williams with John Lewis taking second.

Harry Leslie took low gross in the third flight, followed by Emile Lacoste. Frank Doyle was low net, followed by Harry Hagerty.

Lida Hayes Freuler won a Ladies' Day Bingle Bangle Bungle, with Ruth Billica taking second and Mary Meade Powell placing third. In another Ladies Day event, a no penalty tournament, Maxine Hawley was first, Evelyn Ward second and Ellen Fleming third.

In a recent Jack and Jill tournament, first place was claimed by the team of Pam and Joey McGroarty and Vera and Chip Pennington with a 32.

There was a five-way tie for second place in the event between the teams of June and Bob Glutting and Glo and Bill Clark, Evelyn and Gene Ward and Francis and Howard Wilson, Maxine and Red Hawley and Arie and Ed O'Donnell, May and Bob Haverty and Barbara Walker and Al Haverty and Staley and Harry Wilson and Dorothy and Wally Wooles.

In a junior superball tournament, Kelly Kee, John Catlett and Simon Moye took first with a 63. Steve Woodward, Raynor Casey and Susan Corbett were second at 65. David Rhodes, Brian Hill and Scott Kee came in third with a 70 and Mike Moye, Spencer Mayo and Jody Smith were fourth at 71.

THE STATE WILDLIFE Resources Commission is facing possible severe financial difficulty and a 40 per cent increase in hunting and fishing license fees is one of the steps being considered to alleviate the problem.'

"We're going to need some sort of help if we are to continue to properly manage the wildlife resources of this state," according to Robert Gordon, chairman of the Commission. "We've made a careful study of the agency's programs and budget, and it is obvious that we're either going to have to find some additional revenue or cut back on our current level of services. The problem is real and it is affecting us now."

Gordon added that the Commission is being asked to greatly expand its services in a number of areas and said one of the alternatives would be to cut back on some services. "However, we don't believe that this is a realistic and practical approach, nor do we believe that sportsmen and other wildlife enthusiasts would want us to cut back services."

The Commission's budget has been reviewed time and again, Gordon stated. "Even after cutting in many areas, we will still be over $5 million short of being able to provide requested services during the 1979-80 biennium.

THE WILDLIFE COMMISSION, unlike most state agencies, operates exclusively on monies generated from the hunting, fishing, trapping and boating public. It is unable to dip into the state till for more tax support when prices go up.

Gordon said a possible source of increased revenue would be to boost the price of state hunting and fishing licenses from $7.50 to $10, the price of the combination license from $10 to $12.50, the price of the sportsman's license from $25 to $30 and the price of the $3.50 big game license to $10.

Other possible sources of additional revenue being studied include:

A fur resource assessment which would require that all pelts be tagged with revenue tags. Under this plan, a system of fur dealer taxes would also be implemented.

Elimination of free and reduced license fees which are required by state statutes to senior citizens and some handicapped sportsmen.

Elimination of the current exemption from license requirements for individuals fishing in their county of residence with natural bait.

Recouping of interest paid on wildlife and boating funds while they are being held in reserve by the State Treasurer's office.

A mechanism, similar to the check-off boxes currently used for contributing to political campaigns, whereby all state taxpayers would be able to allocate $1, $5, or $10 of their state tax refund for wildlife conservation programs.

ALL OF THESE proposals would require legislative action. "It is clear that something must be done and that it must be done during the next session of the General Assembly," Gordon said.

"Whatever happens, we must have the support of those interested in the continued conservation of North Carolina's wildlife resources. Whatever input and recommendations the public has on this matter would be gratefully appreciated."

First Annual Pamlico Regatta

The Hobie Cat fleet 257 will sponsor the first annual Pamlico Regatta on Sept. 9 and 10 on Swan Point near Broad Creek in Washington. Around 70 Hobie catamarans are expected to attend with fleets coming from throughout North Carolina and Virginia.

Boats in the 14-foot and 16-foot classes will be competing in the two-day event, with three races on Saturday beginning at noon and three on Sunday beginning at 11 a.m.

The boats will be launched from Swan Point and Stan's Sport Center. The best public viewing will be along both sides of the river from Broad Creek. Spectators who desire to watch the race aboard their own boats are requested to stay out of the actual race course limits.

Maddox' Steal Fails As Giants Defeat Phils

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

In the past week, the Philadelphia Phillies have seen their 5½-game lead over Chicago in the National League East slip to two games, so Garry Maddox tried to steal one back, literally.

Trailing 6-4 entering the bottom of the ninth, Maddox doubled home a run, stole third and then tried to steal home with Jose Cardenal at bat. Home plate umpire Ed Montague called the Phils speedster out, ending the inning and the game as San Francisco posted a 6-5 victory over Philadelphia Friday night.

Giants catcher Marc Hill had Maddox out by four or five feet — or did he?

The Phils weren't so sure. Witness:

—If Hill leaves the catcher's box before the pitch, it's a catcher's balk, and Maddox is awarded home.

—If Hill interfers with Cardenal, the batter takes first and Maddox returns to third with another chance.

It appeared that Hill may have done one or both (Cardenal swung at the pitch but after backing off from the plate), and Phils Manager Danny Ozark was puzzling over these points of baseball etiquette.

Pinch hitter Mike Ivie provided the winning runs for the Giants with a two-run homer in the ninth off reliever Tug McGraw, 8-5.

Willie McCovey had homered earlier for the Giants, his 12th of the year, to help San Francisco keep pace with the Los Angeles Dodgers in the NL West. Los Angeles beat New York 7-3 Friday, maintaining a one-game edge over the Giants.

In other NL games, San Diego edged Montreal 3-2, Pittsburgh beat Houston 6-3 and St. Louis ripped Atlanta 5-1.

Reds 8, Cubs 3

George Foster and Johnny Bench smacked consecutive home runs in the first inning off Cubs starter Dave Roberts, 5-8, to ignite Cincinnati over Chicago. The Cubs came back in the second with homers by Dave Kingman, No. 21, and Manny Trillo, but the Reds answered with two runs in the sixth to salt the game away.

Dodgers 7, Mets 3

Tommy John, 14-9, continued his mastery over the New York Mets with 7⅔ strong innings before Charlie Hough finished up. Steve Garvey provided the Dodgers' firepower with four RBI, three on his 17th homer of the season.

The Dodgers gave John a 6-0 lead in the top of the fourth with three runs.

Padres 3, Expos 2

Pinch hitter Gene Tenace smacked a sacrifice fly in the seventh inning to cap a two-run rally that boosted San Diegos to their third straight victory. After loading the bases on two singles and a walk, Expos starter Steve Rogers walked in the tying run and Tenace lofted his game-winning fly ball.

Pirates 6, Astros 3

Pirates starter Jim Bibby, 7-7, aided his own cause with a solo homer, the first of his career, and Frank Taveras and Omar Moreno each scored twice as Pittsburgh won its fourth in a row.

Cards 5, Braves 1

Cards right-hander Pete Vuckovich, 11-9, yielded one run in seven innings of work — the first earned run he's given up in 25 innings — to lower his ERA to 2.18, the lowest among NL starting pitchers.

Affirmed's Syndication

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — Triple Crown winner Affirmed tentatively is scheduled for syndication in January, with stud duty to follow in 1980 at Spendthrift Farm near Lexington, Ky.

The announcement was made Friday after a meeting between Spendthrift Farm owner Leslie Combs II and Louis Wolfson, owner of Harbor View Farm and the 3-year-old colt.

Final plans for the syndication, including its value and the number of shares, will be announced in January, according to a statement by the owners.

Affirmed's value as a stallion prospect has been estimated as high as $15 million.

Sunflower Farm Blooms On Hooker Road

Bradshaw Men Cultivate The Crop

SUNFLOWER, plant of the genus Helianthus of the family Asteraceae, native particularly to North and South America.

The sunflower, with its bright oval leaves possesses an aesthetic quality like its image, the sun, and is highly valued as an ornamental plant, but beneath all that beauty there is still another kind of commercial value.

Seeds.

Dried sunflower seeds can be harvested as a source of poultry food, for a light-golden-yellow oil used in various cooking and manufactured products, or straight from the plant as food.

A Marine colonel and his two sons are in the process of cultivating a crop of sunflowers for its seeds and selling them as birdseed here in Greenville.

Colonel Harvey D. Bradshaw, 1404 Hooker Road, and his sons, Paul Bradshaw, 20, a psychology student at ECU, and Toby Bradshaw, 21, a biochemistry major, have grown a 12 to 13-acre crop of Mammoth sunflowers along Hooker Road.

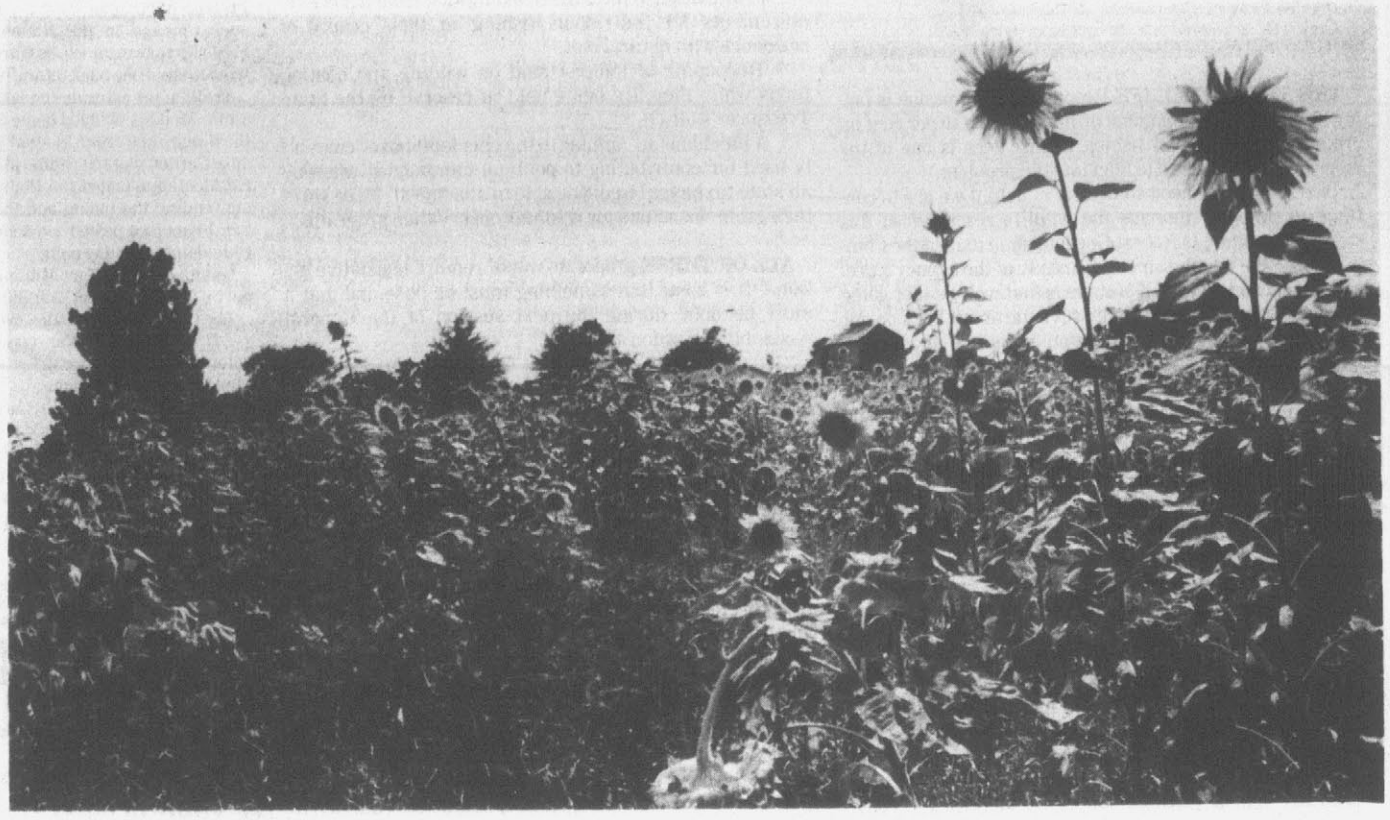

The reason? "We really planted them because they're pretty," Paul said, "but we have grown them for the seeds.

"Anyway, they are prettier than tobacco," he added. "A lot of people squeeze the seeds for their oil and use it for cooking and rubbing on their hands."

While Colonel Bradshaw directs Wing G-3 operations at Cherry Point — he is also a fighter pilot — Paul and Toby tend the crop, a not too demanding job since sunflowers, with a little help from the sun, grow virtually on their own once they have been planted.

According to Toby, planting sunflower seeds requires something like a minimum of four hours per acre.

"We disced the field three times at about 30 to 45 minutes an acre, and then planting the seeds with a planter took about two hours an acre, putting down the fertilizer at the same time," he said.

A field of 25,000 sunflowers mid-way to harvest on Hooker Road.

Paul Bradshaw stands beside a 15-foot Mammoth

"We set the planter 30 inches apart but some of the seeds dropped in between and now some of the plants are growing on top of each other," he said. "When they grow together the stalks are tall and thin, while the ones spaced grow short and thick."

In a field behind the house, a number of the estimated 25,000 plants reach a height of 15 feet.

"The reason they grow so tall when they are grown close together is because they are competing for space," Paul said. "Spacing allows them to expand and grow independently.

"We planted some of these seeds as late as the third week in June. Initially we bought 50 pounds of seed but we've only used 35 pounds, at a cost of about $1.50 per pound, not including fertilizer, which is expensive. We have used two and one-half tons of fertilizer at a cost of about $120 a ton.

"It is better to plant them in early June when the spring rains are gone and, of course, they take the summer sun really well."

And what kind of care do sunflowers require? Practically none. "You could just stick them in the ground and they would grow," Paul said. "They seem to grow pretty good in the grass: in fact, they grow so fast they get ahead of the grass."

Of course the sunflowers are being cultivated as a money crop, but the trio of growers do not seem to have any high expectations of making a large return.

"A good tobacco farmer can lease an allotment for 35 cents a pound to make money," Toby said, "and with 2,000 to 2,500 pounds an acre, he can make about $700 an acre.

"A good sunflower farmer makes about $110 an acre. I think we can make that, net, as compared to a peanut farmer who makes about $100 an acre.

"We've never done any before so we don't know where we're going to sell them. People can come by and buy them if they want to.

"The main market is in the Midwest, and the only other big field I've seen around here was in Goldsboro."

Colonel Bradshaw says "a lot of people have stopped by and asked what we're going to do with them, and to comment on them.

"This is the first year we've tried and we don't know if we're going to make any money, but the boys thought they would do something that looked nice, and seeds are not really expensive.

"Once they dry, if people want to stop by, the heads are for sale at 40 cents a pound. We planted the Mammoth variety, which is really good for eating."

When the Bradshaw farmers are ready to pick the crop, following the first fall chill, when the seeds are ready to dry out, they will go out with 50- pound bags and fill them with cutoff sunflower heads. "They mature within 80 to 90 days after planting," Paul said. "Then you're supposed to strip the leaves off to help the seeds dry out: but it's a little impractical because of the number and heights of the plants."

One sunflower head a foot in diameter could yield as many as 2,000 seeds.

"It won't be long after they dry out in the fall that rabbits will begin eating them," Toby said: "but they are real insect resistant.

"Experts suggest that people plant sunflowers in their gardens to keep insects away. Around here there aren't enough planted in the same place, so there probably aren't any insects around here to get them.

"We'll cut the heads off after the seeds dry out and try to sell them as birdseed in 50-pound bags," he said.

Since bright sunflowers attract bees, there has been no problem with pollination. "It's not unusual to find three or four bees on one at any time," the Colonel said.

Paul said that since the first crop was planted, "pigeons have started nesting, doves, cardinals love them, and gros beaks will be coming in the winter.

"They will hang on to the plant and eat the seed right out of the head."

"Once the frost kills the plant we will gather the heads," Toby said. "I guess you could use a combine or something to shake the seeds out of the heads, but we don't have one. So we'll just fill the bags with sunflower heads and store them in a pack house here where we used to pack tobacco."

Paul categorized four types of sunflowers: "Mixed Colors — yellow, gold, brown and mahogany- red; one called Teddy Bear, bushy, two feet tall; Sungold, chrysanthymum-shaped, ornamental, five to six feet; Mammoth — for birdseed eating, up to 15 feet. We planted the Mammoth variety," he said.

Another interesting aspect is that sunflowers never get confused about where they are going, because they have the sun to lead them.

"When it's a cloudy day they point straight up," Toby said, "since the light is diffused from the clouds.

"But when the sun is out it activates a growth hormone — auxin, found in all green plants — in one side which pushes the other side towards the sun."

"And that's how they follow the sun," Paul said. "They follow the sun all day and at night they all point towards the west. By time the sun comes up they will start turning the other way."

Toby said that people say "when you have a couple of acres of sunflowers and they turn their heads toward the sun, it's really beautiful," and that he can attest to the fact.

Do they mind if you stop by and pick one?

"Not particularly," the senior farmer said. "A friend of mine called and asked if he could get one for his daughter's debutante ball, and I said yes, because he could get her a nice fresh one." The hand-picked corsage was for Dwight Garrett's daughter, Martha.

"We don't mind if they come by and pick one, as long as they ask."

Yesterday's Cryptoquip— THE FRUG IS OFTEN FROUGHT WITH TORTUROUS WRITHING.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: F equals I

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Ethel Merman Looks Back On Career

By GLENNE CURRIE
UPI Lively Arts Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Cole Porter said he'd "sooner write songs for Ethel Merman than anyone else in the world."

A lot of people would sooner hear her sing than anyone else in the world.

For 40 years — from 1930, when she introduced "I Got Rhythm" in the Gershwins' "Girl Crazy," to 1970, when she became Dolly Gallagher Levi in "Hello, Dolly!" — Ethel Merman was the brightest, brassiest, sassiest, most popular of all musical comedy stars.

In her recently published "Merman—an autobiography," co-authored by George Eells, she sums up her career:

"I have appeared in thirteen Broadway musicals — none ran less than six months. I was lucky enough to have the songs in my first show written by George and Ira Gershwin. Then Cole Porter wrote five shows for me. Irving Berlin? Two of my greatest. And Jule Styne and Steve Sondheim provided the capper for my career with 'Gypsy.'"

Today at 69 (she likes to say she's 66 but feels 33) the voice and the power are still there.

But in a recent interview in her midtown hotel apartment she said in her own blunt fashion, "The type of theater that is popular today just doesn't appeal to me."

These days her public appearances are mostly on TV or in concert with symphony orchestras, this month in the Hollywood Bowl and other dates booked into 1979.

When interviewed she was in the middle of a high-pressure publicity tour for the autobiography.

"I'm exhausted, bushed," she said, though she didn't look it, sitting in her living room in a multi-layered, multicolored hostess gown.

"I was up at the crack of dawn for the 'Today Show,' then telephone interviews and taping two more TV shows."

She said publishers Simon and Schuster asked her to write the book.

"My literary agent and I got together and we decided on George Eells. We did a lot of research on it and he's done a tremendous job. We went up to the Museum of the City of New York, which has all my scrapbooks. I haven't been keeping my clippings lately. My father used to keep the scrapbooks."

The book is dedicated "To Mom and Pop, To My Daughter and My Son."

Father Edward Zimmerman, an accountant who loved music and taught her to sing, play piano and read music, died last Dec. 22 at the age of 97. Not long before he died, he told her, "I'm lucky, Ethel, to be 97 and still have all my marbles."

Her mother, Agnes, died in 1974. As a partial thank you to Roosevelt Hospital, where her mother spent some time before her death, Ethel Merman spends a day a week in the hospital gift shop, when she's in New York.

"The hospital is in the process of constructing a new gift shop," she said in the interview. "As soon as I get back into place I'll be over there again."

There is no kitchen in her 3½-room apartment: "Even if there were I don't know how to cook. I never eat alone. If I am alone I go to bed and watch TV. I may be in bed by 7:30. I watch my good friend Jack Klugman in 'The Odd Couple.' I love Mike Douglas, Don Rickles."

The walls of the apartment are covered with paintings, the furniture with her needlepoint — plus her collection of Raggedy Anns and Raggedy Andys on one rocking chair — the floors with hooked rugs. Of one rug covered with sunflowers.. she said, "Mary Martin gave me the canvas for that."

There is no real jewelry around. Cat Burglars cleaned her out in 1970, and now she only has costume jewels and paste. Her tastes have simplified in other ways, too. Where once she drank champagne at the Stork Club, she now drinks American chablis. She quit smoking in 1959.

She still handles all her own correspondence, having kept up her typing since her preBroadway days.

"I've never had a secretary," she said. "That's what keeps me busy. If I had to write in longhand no one would ever hear from me."

On her dressing table are two items that play a large part in her daily life, both reminders of people she loved and who died from drugs. (Today, you'll never find a sleeping pill or a tranquilizer in her apartment.)

The first is a man's wristwatch inscribed RDL. "I still wear it," she said. Newspaper executive Robert Daniels Levitt was her second husband, the one great love of her life, though their marriage ended in divorce. He took an overdose of sleeping pills in 1958.

The other is a copy of The Daily Word, a monthly published by Unity Village which provides a comforting message for every day. She started subscribing in 1967 when her only daughter Ethel died of a combination of drugs and alcohol, leaving two children.

The message for the day of the interview: "I give freely to life and life gives freely to me."

Apt for Ethel Merman.

Equally apt was her comment when the Tony award went to Mary Martin for "The Sound of Music" instead of to Merman for "Gypsy:" "How are you going to buck a nun?"

So was her decision the following year when, though she'd been an active campaigner for Richard Nixon, she sang "Everything's Coming up Roses" at President John F. Kennedy's inauguration festivities.

Ethel Merman always has had a multitude of friends, from the Duke and Duchess of Windsor through J. Edgar Hoover to Sherman Billingsley, Billy Rose, Mike Todd. She never lacks for company, for people to go to dinner with — or men wanting to marry her.

She says three of her four marriages were major mistakes.

Of Bill Smith, whom she married in 1940 and who divorced her the following year, she says in the book, "I married him for all the wrong reasons. We all make mistakes. That's why they put erasers on pencils." She met Levitt in 1940 when he was earning $200 a week and she was making about 20 times that. They were married in 1941 and divorced in 1952. "He was the only guy I deeply loved. The others were mistakes, and some of them were beauts."

In 1951 she had met Bob Six, six-foot-four president of Continental Airlines. They were married in 1952 and divorced in 1960, after years of what she called his "absences, thoughtlessness and greed."

Her much-publicized marriage to actor Ernest Borgnine in 1964 lasted just 38 days.

"Don't ask me what I was thinking about when I said yes. The only defense I could cook up would be temporary insanity." When a reporter asked why they split up, she replied, "I'm a lover, not a fighter."

PUBLISHES AUTOBIOGRAPHY — For 40 years, from 1930, when she introduced "I Got Rhythm" in the Gershwin's "Girl Crazy," to 1970, when she became Dolly Gallaher Levi in "Hello, Dolly," Ethel Merman was the brightest, brassiest, sassiest and most popular of all musical comedy stars. She sums up her career in her recently published autobiography. (UPI Telephoto)

Pupil Money Varies In N.C.

RALEIGH, N. C. (AP) — Local per pupil expenditures vary considerably across North Carolina, ranging by as much as nearly $500 between high and low extremes, according to an analysis by the Research Department of the North Carolina Association of Educators.

The organization said today the study of raw data from the state Board of Education shows the largest per pupil expenditure in the state moneywise is the $552 in the Durham City schools. The smallest per pupil expenditure is $54.41 in Craven County schools, the study showed.

Percentagewise, Chapel HillCarrboro schools lead.

"This is certainly not equal educational opportunity," said Lloyd Isaacs, executive secretary of the NCAE. "All children ought to have the same opportunity for the best possible education no matter where they live."

Chapel Hill-Carrboro's local expenditure is 37.4 percent of the total while the other 62.6 percent is state and federal funds.

Other school systems with local expenditures per pupil of more than 30 percent include: Charlotte-Mecklenburg County, $505.82 or 35.0 percent; Durham City, $552 or 33.2 percent; Winston-Salem-Forsyth County, $408.31 or 30.7 percent; Hendersonville City, $423.70 or 30.5 percent; and Greensboro City, $417.12 or 30.1 percent.

Craven County, with the lowest money figure, also is lowest in percentage, 4.5 percent of its total coming from local funds.

Grand Hotels Are Making Comeback

By GREGORY JENSEN

LONDON (UPI) — Enough of little boxes and standardized American efficiency. Grand Hotels are coming back.

At least they are in London, where currently the Ritz is getting ritzier and three other major hotels are being restored to their original grandeur.

Americans, it has been said, built hotels abroad so they could travel anywhere in the world and still sleep in the United States. Since World War II, "international standards" applied to hotels have come to mean American standards.

But in London, says the British Travel Authority, "there is a change of mood."

In all four London hotels being renovated there is a switch "away from modern architecture and design to the more elaborate ambience of the traditional Grand Hotel," the BTA says.

One outstanding example is the Ritz, that "marvel of Edwardian opulence, all gold leaf and rococo magnificence," as it has been called. Cesar Ritz built it on the fringe of Green Park in 1906. It has been decaying slowly ever since.

But now new owners have decided to put the elegance back. The high-ceilinged Louis XVI Dining Room overlooking the park is being spruced up and the Palm Court, with its cucumber sandwiches for tea, will get a pink spotlight to enliven the fountain.

The restored basement ballroom is being turned into a gambling casino.

Elsewhere new American-style comforts are being cloaked by square yards of gold leaf and elaborate ornament, every possible detail in the fashion of 1906. Modern fire laws require "emergency exit" signs, so a professional sculptor is molding some in Edwardian baroque style.

Not long ago the owners of the Hyde Park hotel, a favorite of the late Sir Winston Churchill and Gen. Charles de Gaulle, brought in a fashionable design team to remodel the 201-bedroom hotel for the 1980s.

Workmen began by stripping coats of paint from pillars and walls. Everywhere they scraped they found marble underneath — rich, colorful marble with names like Pink Portuguese, Verdi Green, White Sicilian.

Out went the 1980's design. Now the Hyde Park's lobbies are a riot of richly veined marbles, glowing with the elegance of its "grand hotel" architects intended in 1908.

The Grosvenor Victoria hotel is a run-down legacy of the great age of railway hotels in the mid-19th century. Trains were brand new then, and British railway companies forged a chain of grand hotels throughout Britain, as far north as Inverness, Scotland, to cosset their travelers.

The 200-bedroom Grosvenor Victoria, hard by Victoria Station, was one of these. But it had fallen far from its 1861 grandeur into a Class C hotel distinctly down at the heel.

Now it is being totally rejuvinated. Its lofty lobby, four stories high, is a mass of scaffolding while ornate plaster ceilings are restored. A threeyear renovation program not only will put the grand hotel flavor back into public rooms and bedrooms but will clean the richly sculptured facade.

The Park Lane hotel is only 51 years old, but so was its plumbing. So the grandson of its builder is spending nearly $6 million to restore its Art Deco ballroom and refurbish its 326 bedrooms to add modern comfort without destroying the character or spaciousness of 1927.

One of its restaurants, already restored, is lined with wall panels carved in 1725 which once adorned the library of American banker J. Pierpont Morgan's London home.

None of these renovations is being done for pure nostalgia. Obviously owners believe the Grand Hotel manner will prove popular enough to repay their investments.

"Perhaps some international travelers were once wary about old-fashioned places," the British Travel Authority says. "But visitors now are actively seeking out places that are different, and Britain's grand hotels could become a tourist attraction in their own right."

Simon Nathan One Of A Kind

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

You meet such interesting people in photography — or get letters from them from different parts of the world. Like the one that came recently from Japan from Simon Nathan.

My name was emblazoned in poster paint so I knew it was from Simon — that's one of his trademarks.

You know Simon Nathan, don't you? The guy with two first names?

You should. He's a one-of-akind character, like the cameras he dreams up, has built, collects and uses all around the world.

Maybe you met Nathan when he wrote a column for U.S. Camera magazine — or when he bounced to Camera 35 — or switched to the Donnybrook Photo Report — or changed to Modern Photography — or landed at Popular Photography?

Well, he's writing again.

This time it's for his own publication, "Simon Says: Photography Newsletter," a biweekly report. It contains offbeat items and behind the scenes news about cameras, films, techniques, personalities, rumors and ideas. It's distinctively illustrated with penand-ink drawings by his associate, John West.

This latest issue of SS:PN was mailed from Japan where Simon was visiting before heading for Cologne, Germany, for the world's largest photo bash, Photokina, which opens Sept. 15.

Here's an interesting item Simon discovered at the Dai-Ichi Hotel, at Shimbashi — an unusual film processing service.

The hotel distributes to its guests a brochure printed in English entitled: "Wait Until Morning." What you're waiting for is their color print service. If you give them a roll of film by 8 p.m. — and it can be Kodak, Fuji or Sakura in either 35mm, 126 or 110 cartridge — color prints will be ready by 8 a.m. next morning. Or, if film is left by 8 a.m., it will be ready by 8 p.m. that night.

The brochure cites four reasons why this overnight printing service is valuable for camera fans. 1.-You get excellent color balance and brilliant prints. 2.-Your film will avoid damage from X-rays going through airports. The danger is greatest for exposed film that has not yet been processed. 3.It can detect camera malfunction immediately. The prints are a check against a possible tendency toward over-or underexposure and make sure the camera is working properly. 4.-You can travel with colorful prints and have something to look at, talk about and share with others.

After further sleuthing in Japan, Simon peered into his crystal ball and ventured that: "There could be a made-inAmerica Nikon SLR. Where would it be made? California, possibly. It has year-round favorable climate — the labor force is available there, especially in electronics, and well trained — air freight from West to East tends to be faster and rates lower — and the 200-orless-yen dollar makes it economically attractive. We're talking about camera bodies s t first and perhaps three or four of the most popular lenses."

Here's an example of another idea from a previous SS:PN:

"NO FRILLS FILM. It's the suggestion of SS:PN that "No Frills Film" could be sold in the same way as no frills peanut butter (plain label) and no frills airline seats (no meals, midweek). Object: economy. It could be from Fuji, Kodak or Ilford in a plain box with all necessary data printed on the box or inside. There would be no extra paper to package.

"A store sells it alongside the other colored film boxes. The store staff has tried the film and can provide the processing or the chemicals to do it at home. Who knows, maybe one of the large national chains can use the idea, right from here?"

I mentioned that Simon dreams up cameras and has them built. One of his favorites is the Simon-Wide, a camera that uses normal 120 roll film and delivers a 2¼-by 7-inch transparency or negative. He gets four pictures on a 12-exposure roll of 120 film.

His latest Simon-Wide version (there were at least three others) was built in Japan by a machinist. It incorporated parts of camera bodies from British naval surplus and from Mamiya, interchangeable lenses from Schneider in Germany, film holders from a Dutch inventive genius and a Linhof viewfinder.

TWO STORY DESIGN SUITS LARGE FAMILY

By Jerry Bishop

Four ample bedrooms, a large laundry, an abundance of closets, even a library for a moment of quiet make the Raleigh, a two level traditional design, ideal for a large or growing family.

To preserve the traditional exterior, the double garage is tucked behind the home and given a side entry. Small-paned windows and a colonial-inspired front door add interest.

The floor plan, however, is a delightful mixture of old and new. An up-to-date traffic pattern melds with antique features such as the large library and the not-new but quite convenient first floor bedroom.

Guests are ushered into the gracious foyer with coat closet and living room at right and library at left. The library, a comfortable 14 ft. in length, can be closed off from the living areas with the door and also merits direct access to the powder room. This area can adapt to use as a family room as well as library.

Formal in approach and intent, the 16-ft. living room features a wood-burning fireplace and abounds with windows. Neighboring dining room is visually enlarged via sliding glass doors to the terrace.

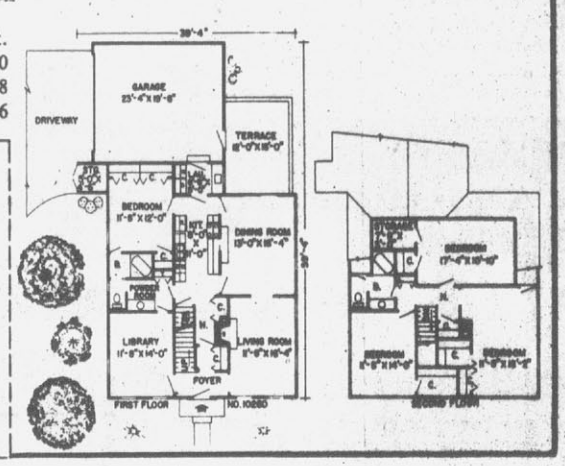

Corridor kitchen, handy to the dining room, is set opposite the efficient laundry, where a garage access suggests double duty as a mud room. Completing the first level is the well-closeted bedroom with access to the combination bath and powder room.

On the second level, three large bedrooms are lavished with space and closets. Besides the storage room on this floor, the design calls for a storage room off the garage and a basement.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

What's new on the market?

THE PRODUCT — A new type of loose-fill attic insulation.

Manufacturer's claim — That this is a pre-cured, dried and shredded urea formaldehyde foam ... that it has high thermal efficiency and so less of the material is required to meet the "R" standards recommended by government agencies ...that it is highly fire-resistant ...and that it must be installed only by certified dealers and distributors who use a special "shredderblower" machine.

THE PRODUCT — Self-adhesive sandpaper for disc and vibrator sanders and sanding blocks.

Manufacturer's claim — That the sticky-back sheets of sandpaper can be attached without clamps or pressure rollers, usually used to hold the papers to finishing sanders ... that selfadhesive discs and pads do away with holding devices on disc sanders ... that the special sandpaper is excellent with a plastic hand-sanding block ...that the paper may be wrapped around dowels, curved pieces or even your hand to sand hard-to-reach places ...and that the paper stays flat with less chance of shredding and tearing.

THE PRODUCT — A paint stripper in an aerosol container.

Manufacturer's claim — That this stripper removes virtually any paint from almost any surface without brush, fuss or muss .. . that it also removes such things as tar, carbon, ink, epoxy, graffiti, labels and decals ... that it is non-flammable, non-corrosive and non-caustic ... and that the surface is quickly and easily cleaned later with warm or cold water, air pressure or a scraping instrument.

THE PRODUCT — A new light bulb designed especially to make plants grow better indoors.

Manufacturer's claim — That this bulb screws into an ordinary incandescent socket yet uses 20 percent less electrical energy than an incandescent light ... that it actually is a combination of incandescent, fluorescent and high intensity discharge lights ... that if the outer glass bulb is broken, the incandescent filament extinguishes the mercury arc, thus preventing any possible injuries from ultra-violet energy ... and that the bulb has the color and long life of fluorescent lights and has a two-year replacement warranty.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck N.J. 07666.)

(The insulation is manufactured by Aerolite SPE Corp., 8025 Dixie Highway, Florence, Ky. 41042; the sandpaper by the 3M Co., St. Paul, Minn. 55101; the paint stripper by J.C. Sales, P.O. Box 623, Doylestown, Pa. 18901; and the light bulb by Duro-Lite Lamps, 17-10 Willow St., Fair Lawn, N.J. 07047.)

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I would like to avoid a problem that plagued us last winter. One of the walls in our house gets cold when the temperature outside falls below 40 degrees or so. This wall then starts to sweat and the water drips down the wall to the floor. Is there any way of preventing this, so that we won't have the same trouble all over again next winter?

A. — Presumably this is an outside wall. It gets cold because it does not have sufficient insulation (perhaps none) to prevent the passage of the cold air. Have a professional check it for you. If you need insulation, you can have it blown into the walls, as with cellulose, mineral wool and other loose fills, or pumped in, as with one of the foam products. Why does a cold wall sweat? Because the heated, moist air in the house settles on it and condenses. If both the air and the wall were cold, there would be no condensation. Ditto if both the air and the wall were warm. There might not be any problem, either, if the warm, moist air were permitted to escape quickly, via an exhaust fan or vents in the exterior wall, or if it were trapped, via a dehumidifier. But your best solution is insulation, since this will also help to save fuel costs.

Q. — Because steel-wool pads were used on our laminated plastic countertop next to the sink, much of the red color has come out. Can this type of material be painted?

A. — Yes, but if there are any glossy spots, sand them down, otherwise the paint will not grip properly. Painting a laminated plastic top doesn't always produce the anticipated excellent results, but you may be satisfied with it if you use an enamel and work carefully.

Q. — The poured concrete foundation that shows above ground for a foot or two on the outside of our new house has a few small cracks in it. The builder says these can't be fixed now because the house is still settling. Is he right?

A. — Probably. Wherever there is a crack, mark each end of the crack with a pen or something that the rain won't wash out. Examine the marks every week or two to determine whether the cracks are lengthening. If they aren't, then a repair can be attempted. Try to get your builder to promise to fix the cracks as soon as the settling has ended. That will depend on how "new" your house is or what contract arrangement you have with him.

Jobstyles In The Year 2000

EDITOR'S NOTE—For many years — ever since mass production dominated the American economy — the ways of work seemed cast into an iron mold. But life patterns are changing, and so are job styles. By the time the 21st century opens, a day's work for a day's pay may be taking some remarkable unconventional forms.

By JONATHAN WOLMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American workplace, says one top corporate official, is a staunch bastion of tradition.

"People change and products come and go," he says. "But on the job it's 9 to 5, Monday to Friday, New Year's to Christmas."

And so it has been. It was 40 years ago that Congress legislated the 40-hour week, and despite high hopes and much talk, the average still hovers around 39.

Yet, there's evidence that many traditional work routines are being elbowed aside on the road to the 21st century.

By the year 2000, job conditions will reflect basic trends in the workforce itself: an older, more self-assured group than today. More women will be active in dual-career families where the working father will share housekeeping responsibilities.

New jobstyles will reflect changes and new expectations. Though part of the workforce will remain tied to eight hours a day, five days a week, millions will find themselves in the thick of these trends:

—The work week will shrink. The U.S. Chamber of Commerce says employers should expect the four-day, 32-hour work week for most workers by 2000. Increases in vacation and holiday time also will sustain the growth in leisure time.

—A continued increase in the percentage of women, especially young mothers, who hold paying jobs.

—With more than one breadwinner at home, fewer jobholders will feel trapped in undesirable jobs.

—Worker wanderlust will grow to epidemic proportions. Experts say American workers will shift jobs eight or nine times, and many will change careers two, even three times, before retirement. Mid-career sabbaticals will provide breaks in the lifelong work routine.

—Job changes that involve transfers from one city to another will be a major problem. Already, employers complain that young executives often are reluctant to accept promotions that involve uprooting a spouse from a good job in a two-career family.

—More workers, but still a meager minority, will opt out of the rat race, choosing to adopt simpler lifestyles and simpler jobstyles.

—Retirement will be a gradual process, rather than the abrupt dismissal at 65 that marked recent decades, with phased-retirement plans and post-retirement careers.

"We will get away from the notion that you work 40 hours a week for 40 years of your life and then you wake up one morning with nothing to do," says economist John Palmer of the Brookings Institution.

On the road to the 21st century, the role of work in people's lives is changing significantly. "In primitive times," says Fred Best, a researcher for the National Manpower Commission, "work took up 33 percent of the average person's lifespan. It dropped to 29 percent in the last century and has since dropped to about 14."

The work ethic, it seems, is slipping. "Hard work leads to affluence; affluence leads to new lifestyles, new lifestyles diminish the work ethic," says Clark Kerr, president of the Carnegie Council of Policy Studies in Higher Education.

Imaginative and expanded use of part-time work opportunities is likely to provide a key shift in 21st-century work arrangement.

Already, more than 20 percent of the nation's workforce hold part-time jobs. In some auto plants, where a good chunk of the workforce has a chronic ailment known as the Friday Flu, plant officials have given up psychoanalyzing and hired some Monday and Friday workers.

This use of permanent part-time jobs to spread the available work and reduce unemployment is called work sharing.

At Local 3 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers in New York, union members have embarked on "unemployment sharing," by rotating whatever layoffs are made necessary by a slow market.

Part of the Local 3 workforce is immune from these rotating layoffs, but even they pitch in to relieve layoff pressures by taking eight weeks unpaid vacation. The old system, layoff by seniority, took a heavy toll on young workers.

Another way to create part-time jbs is to take a full-time position and simply split it in two. This is called job sharing and already is beginning to catch on, especially in California where New Ways to Work, an employment resource center, has been promoting job sharing in the San Francisco area.

For some industrial unions like the United Auto Workers, which faces erosion of membership as assembly lines are further automated, shrinking the work week seems the answer. The UAW considers its current contract a foot in the door. It provides for seven paid personal holidays spread throughout the year. This timeoff device lets automakers operate the plants fulltime by rotating extra workers from job to job.

The jobstyle changes that may have the broadest impact in the next decades probably will involve scheduling flexibility.

Examples are compressed time — compressing the 40hour work week into three, four or 4½ days; task scheduling — setting job responsibilities and then allowing workers to leave when the day's goals are fulfilled; and "flexitime."

A typical flexitime arrangement allows employees to put in their eight hours any time within, for example, a 12-hour period, providing they work a mandatory "core period" that provides mid-day stability.

Employees usually like flexitime options, but it complicates overtime arrangements, as the eight-hour day becomes difficult to distinguish.

Mrs. Olmsted, at New Ways to Work, reports great interest in another evolving work trend: the mid-career job change. Employment experts agree that the increasingly restless American workforce will be changing not only jobs more often, but skills as well.

Michael Clossen, who chucked his job as a Stanford University administrator to take a position at New Ways to Work, says, "There are lots of reasons to switch gears: maybe the field dries up, like teaching or horse-shoeing; maybe the worker has simply grown out of the job but isn't eligible for promotion. Most likely, the worker is just bored."

Employment experts predict a 21st-century flurry of job jumping, and employers — who dislike the instability — will seek ways to keep workers interested.

One way, perhaps, is job rotation, especially in factory work — say from the warehouse to the assembly line to the loading dock, which will eliminate the boredom of routine tasks.

Another more exotic way is the concept of mid-career sabbaticals.

Steelworkers, for example, can take a 13-week sabbatical every seven years as part of the industry contract with the United Steel Workers. And in California, the Rolm Corp. has a "Continuous Service Leave" plan that allows employees with six years' continuous service to take time off, with pay.

While some employers besides colleges and universities — where the sabbatical has been long established — are providing such leaves, one futuristic proposal is something called "Educare." Under Educare, workers would be entitled to time off in mid-career to continue their education or take job training for a career shift. The cost would be borne by the taxpayers from general federal revenues.

That may be too rich for the economy's blood even in the 21st century, but the general practice and concept may well spread.

Experts believe that in the 21st century, more workers than today will try to avoid the mainstream of work — permanently.

Computers Aid The Gardener

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

When you see a computer spewing out figures and words, think of the benefits it has for farmers and gardeners as well as for bookkeepers, vote tabulators and such.

The folk who raise fruit and other foods are finding computers of increasing help. In fact, there was a computer game for visitors to the recent New York State Horticultural Society Agricultural Experiment Station booth.

In a few minutes, for instance, apple growers could relive the dangers of growing a crop. The game, developed as a teaching aid by students and scientists at Cornell and Michigan State univerisites, was named Applescab. It was designed to simulate real problems encountered by apple growers as they try to control this troublesome disease.

The game begins at the start of a growing season and develops day by day. The player must decide when to spray pesticides for disease control, using data about new tree growth, disease prevalence, present and future weather. The computer records spray costs and the extent of disease so that at the end of the season the grower knows whether he has made or lost money. The object of the game is to use as few sprays as possible to control disease, but still make a reasonable profit.

Also on display was a microprocessor that is being used in orchards and potato fields to predict disease-producing weather conditions. These are battery-powered, tiny computers.

When conditions are right for disease development, the computer will tell the grower when and how often to spray. In this way, he uses pesticides only when absolutely necessary.

A new computer is being installed on the New York State Agricultural Station campus at Geneva. The hope is that eventually a terminal in each county (62) will be connected not only to the Geneva computer but to another on the Ithaca campus of Cornell University. This will permit specialists to provide information speedily and accurately to cooperative extension agents so needs of the individual growers can be met promptly.

Attract Hummingbirds

If you'd like to attract hummingbirds to your yard you'll have to offer them some special plant attractions. They'll only go to flowers that provide nectar. Of course, they'll be helping you, too, because while visiting they carry pollen from one flower to another, encouraging pollination. The pollen is carried on the hummingbird's head and bill.

The hummingbirds seem to like red or orange flowers, including cardinal flower (Lobelia cardinalis).

Other hummingbird attractions are honeysuckle or Lonicera, which blooms only in early spring in our Midwest, and Lonicera sempervirens, which blooms for a longer time. Others are Aquilegia canadensis, American columbine, which has red-orange flowers in May or June; Salvia pratenis or blue sage, a perennial for sunny or semi-shady places, with May or June bloom; Penstemon hybrids (beard tongue), which blooms from June to August. Others are Delphinium formosum or hardy larkspur, and Silene, or catchfly.

There aren't many hummingbirds in the eastern United States. But there are reported to be more than 300 species in the western United States and South America.

GARDEN CLINIC

N.C. State University Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. Are all kinds of leaves suitable for making compost? (H.W., Henderson)

A. Pine needes are slow to decay and not as suitable for making compost as hardwood leaves. However, almost any kind of organic matter can be composted. This includes leaves, grass clippings, potato peelings and other vegetable scraps. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. Grasshoppers have really been hopping around my place this summer. What will control them? (L.C., Pilot Mountain)

A. Although grasshoppers are among our most familiar insects, they are usually not a problem in North Carolina. If you do find it necessary to use an insecticide, Sevin and malathion are among the insecticides that will control grasshoppers. Follow label directions. (Jim Baker, extension entomologist)

Q. What are some of the last vegetables that can be planted in the summer with any prospects of them maturing before frost? (Mrs. H.W., Hillsborough)

A. Leafy greens and lettuce can be planted until September 1 in the Piedmont. These includes such things as kale, mustard and leaf lettuce. Radishes can be planted as late as September 15. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Q. I've heard the term "restricted use pesticides." What are they? (H.D., Goldsboro)

A. Pesticides that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency says are potentially hazardous to humans, animals, or the environment. An example is methyl parathion, an insecticide used on cotton and other farm crops. Restricted use pesticides are supposed to be applied only by certified applicators. Pesticides recommended for homeowners and hom gardners are labeled for general use. Examples are Sevin and malathion. They can be applied by anyone. (John Wilson, extension pesticide education coordinator)

Recycle Those Old Clothes

NEW YORK (UPI) — One way to save money on your back-to-school clothing budget: play with accessories and adjust your fashion eye to see your old standbys in a new light.

This advice comes from "Seventeen" magazine, which also suggests: keep the new looks in mind as you try on those standbys in front of a mirror.

Hang on to:

—Anything that's really good, expensive, and well-made — or that you dearly love. If it doesn't work this season, you can reconsider it next year.

—Classics such as pleated skirts, shetland sweater and blazers.

—Pants you like that fit, including wide straight-legs you can update by tapering.

—Tunics and bigshirts.

— Heirlooms, antique-shop finds, and genuine period pieces.

—Almost anything you can layer.

Scrap:

—Anything worn out, frayed or too far gone to repair.

Keeping local charities in mind for wearable items, consider donating:

—Anything you haven't worn for the past four years.

—Outdated fads such as platform shoes, short skirts and tight sweaters.

—Anything that doesn't fit and can't be made to without a major overhaul.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A time when you can solve any family or home problems in a logical and reasonable fashion. The use of tact can produce right results when dealing with others at this time.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Go to places where you can be inspired to live a more worthwhile life. Plan how to stretch your finances and have more security.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Listening to the advice of a good friend is wise. Discuss the future with family members and friends. Show true affection for mate.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Know what your personal aims are and go after them in a most direct fashion for best results. Make a sensible plan for the future.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Study affairs of a highly spiritual nature and learn a great deal from them. Turn new contacts into friends.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Be sure you carry through with promises in a most conscientious way. Take time to be with mate and show true devotion.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Listen to suggestions of a loyal friend and follow through on them and get excellent results. Give more thought to a personal wish.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Ideal day for meditation and knowing just where you are headed in the future. Do something to improve your health.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Study a new philosophy now that could prove beneficial to you in the days ahead. Show more consideration for loved one.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Allow time to engage in creative work that appeals to you. Rid yourself of any tensions you may have at this time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You have to be extra patient in going after that data that means a good deal to you, if you are to get. Use care in motion.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Use good common sense methods and improve your monetary position so that you have more security.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) If you are more practical, you can soon get rid of that feeling of discontent. Take time to improve your appearance.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will understand the problems of others and how best to solve them, so encourage in this, and then this can be a most successful life. High scholastic marks can be made here. Religious training early in life is important.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, AUGUST 21, 1978

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Potential changes or different arrangements can produce excellent results if you let your presently powerful intuition combine with your best judgment to give you the answers for pioneering in new fields.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You gain personal aims easily now. Handle important business affairs intelligently. Spend the evening with good friends.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Do not agree to any changes that would upset your present position and prestige. Listen to the advice of good adviser.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Certain changes in personal relationships are good now but retain those who can be of great help to you in the future.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Give more attention to paying bills and improving credit. Follow advice of a business expert.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Follow through with a situation that can help you grow and develop more quickly. Cultivate new acquaintances. Avoid a gossiper.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Handle important obligations with skill and knowhow and advance more quickly toward larger goals. Strive for more peace at home.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Making little changes where partners are concerned can bring about greater mutual success. Something unexpected may occur today that can be turned to your benefit. Keep eyes and ears open for it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Show more efficiency at whatever work is ahead of you and gain more material benefits from it. Come to a better understanding with coworkers also. Avoid the social in the evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Look for more interesting forms of amusement to enjoy after work is done. Your friends can be very helpful in this.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan 20) Try to establish more harmony at home instead of making matters worse. Be sure you select new personnel intelligently.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Look for more information about important interests and then use it wisely. Be clever in the handling of money.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Study financial interests and don't get into any new ones until you have investigated every angle. Put in economy measures.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will like to make drastic changes and will do so throughout the lifetime. Teach to first study every angle of any change to avoid problems. An ideal chart for one who likes to delve in real estate and investigative work of all kinds.

Make Mine Straight

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Rudy Gentry was more shook up than usual when he heard what he thought was a customer ask for a drink of water as he was closing up Pogo's Tavern.

Gentry found the request came not from one of the bar's regulars, but from a mynah bird sitting alone in a booth.

Turns out the bird was Joe, one of two mynahs stolen from Portland's Washington Park Zoo four days ago.

GOLD PLATE AWARD

Janet M. Stoughton president, and agents of Quixote Travels Inc. of Greenville, received the Gold Plate Award recently from United Airlines.

Only 20 travel agencies out of 110 received the award in North Carolina, it was announced, as qualification for the award was based on the production of a minimum of $100,000 on United Airlines per year.

NAMED PRESIDENT

William G. Sizemore, senior vice president and secretary of the Wachovia Corp., has been named president of Wachovia Mortgage Co., the corporation's mortgage lending subsidiary.

Hans W. Wanders, chairman of the board of Wachovia, said that Sizemore will replace Williams E. Arant Jr., who is joining Hibernia National Bank in New Orleans, La. as executive vice president.

ELECTED TO BOARD

Durward Harris of Harris Super Markets Inc., Greenville, was elected to a new term on the board of directors of the N.C. Food Dealers Association.

The election took place during the association annual convention banquet recently in Charlotte. The session was attended by 3,500 persons.

CASH DIVIDEND

The board of directors of Family Dollar Stores Inc. declared a quarterly cash dividend on its common stock of eight cents per share, payable Oct. 12 to holders of record at the close of business on Sept. 13.

Family Dollar said that the dividend represents a 14 percent increase over the seven cents per share dividend paid in the preceding quarter, and is the fourth dividend increase since the company declared its initial cash dividend in the second quarter of fiscal 1976.

1978 TOP CLUB

Henry Leland Briley of Greenville qualified as a member of the 1978 Top Club of New York Life Insurance Co. Membership is based on 1977-78 sales records, the company announced.

As a member of the club, Briley has been invited to attend an educational conference in Washington, D.C.

RECORD ASSETS

Southern Management Inc. here announced that assets as of the close of the fiscal year on June 30 reached a record total of $4,319,000.

Carl R. Woxman, president, said that the figures represent an increase of $538,294 or 14 percent above last year's total. Net earnings also reached a record total of $763,487, he said, an increase of 20.4 percent.

The company operates ten consumer finance offices in eastern North Carolina under the name of Great Southern Finance.

INTEGON DIVIDEND

The board of directors of Integon Corp. declared a regular quarterly dividend of ten cents a share, payable Sept. 8 to shareholders of record Aug. 25.

NEW MARKS

The Procter & Gamble Co. reported that sales, earnings and dividends for the fiscal year ended June 30 reached record levels for the 22nd consecutive year.

Net sales for the year totaled $8,099,687,000, an increase of 11 percent over net sales of $7,284,255,000 for the previous year.

Net earnings amounted to $511,668,000, up 11 percent over earnings of $461,463,000 for the preceding year. Earnings per share of common stock were $6.19 compared to $5.59 for the previous year.

Dividends paid during the year totaled $2.70 per share. The company's current quarterly dividend is at the rate of $3 per year, it was noted.

SALES UP

James E. LaVasque, president of Oakwood Homes Corp., reported consolidated sales of $34,756,000 for the fiscal year ended June 30, up 18 percent from the $29,454,000 for fiscal 1977.

Consolidated net income was $2,041,000, a 29 percent increase over last year's $1,583,000.

Oakwood Mobile Homes has a sales center in Greenville.

INCREASE REPORTED

Jack Eckerd Corp., operating 869 drug stores in 15 states, announced sales of $1.131 billion for the fiscal year ended July 29. The totals represented a 15.4 percent increase over prior record $980 million revenues in fiscal 1977.

In announcing the company's passing of the $1 billion sales level, Stewart Turley, chairman and president, noted that final quarter sales were $281.4 million, up 15.1 percent from prior year record levels.

The Eckerd Drug chain, the company's largest division, recorded a 16.1 percent sales increase to $1.034 billion, which compared to $890.5 million in 1977.

ENDED TENDER OFFER

Eaton Corp. of Cleveland, Ohio announced that it had ended its tender offer for any or all of the outstanding common shares of Cutler-Hammer Inc. of Milwaukee, Wisc. The offer was for $58 per share in cash, it was reported.

The offer, which began on July 17, closed Aug. 7. Through the offer, approximately 1.9 million Cutler-Hammer shares have been tendered.

Before Eaton made the public offer to purchase the Cutler-Hammer shares, the companies had signed a definitive agreement to merge. The merger, which requires Cutler-Hammer's shareholders approval, will be voted on at a special shareholders meeting.

King Of Hoboes Losing Constituents

By ROBERT C. MILLER

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) — As with all the empires in history, "King" Filer's is doomed. Done in by diesels.

Gordon "Bud" Filer of Altoona, Pa., as "king of the hoboes," has seen his constituency shrink from tens of thousands to hundreds as the railroads in America went out of business and the fast-moving diesels replaced the steam locomotives.

The 69-year-old Emperor of the Knights of the Road, Air and Seven Seas figures one of the easiest ways for a man to get himself killed these days is to try to grab a free ride on a diesel-powered freight.

"The great days of hoboing went out with steam trains," explained Filer at the annual Hobo Convention in Anchorage. "In those days it took the hogger (engineer) a mile or so to get up speed, and you could station yourself outside the yard, lope along the train and swing aboard without a problem. Today those diesels are doing 50 miles an hour before they're on to the high iron (main track).

"And as for riding the blinds (behind the tender of the locomotive), forget it. There aren't any tenders anymore, nor is there any way of hoisting yourself aboard."

Filer bristled when asked if there was any difference between a hobo and a tramp.

"You're darn right there is," he exclaimed. "A hobo is a wanderer in search of employment. A tramp is a wanderer attempting to escape work."

The Knights of the Road, which they and 1,044,336 other wanderers have joined in the past 70 years, was started by the late Jeff Davis in 1908. The Knights got "royal" recognition when the British Parliament allegedly proclaimed Davis an emperor and King of the Hobos. Filer became Emperor after Davis' death.

Filer said there were only eight hoboes who attended the first "convention" at Miami duuring the winter of 1908, but there were a hundred the next year, and several hundred each year after that.

Hoboing reached its peak during the Depression years, said John "Frisco Jack" Sopko, of Trafford, Pa., when there were hundreds of thousands out of work and thousands riding the rails seeking jobs.

"'Bos in those days were a lot like the Masons and Knights of Columbus," he said. "They'd try to help each other, and it was pretty much a share and share alike fraternity.

"There was always a mulligan (stew) simmering in every jungle (rendezvous spot outside a town) and every Bo that wandered in would toss what he had into the pot. We always carried something to eat along and although few of the ingredients would pass any sanitary inspection law, those mulligans were tasty and nourishing."

Filer, who started his hoboing in 1925 and then quit when he found he could get free train rides by working for the railroads, said the two biggest jungles he ever saw were just outside Fresno, Calif., and Des Plaines, Ill.

"Bos would come from all over the country to Fresno when the fruit picking started," Filer said. "But most of the time things were orderly and quiet. Sure, there were always some trouble makers, but hoboes would go out of their way to avoid trouble. Life was tough enough in those days.

"The jungle outside Chicago was sort of the change-trainshere place as Chicago always bragged that all the railroads came into Chicago."

Coffee was the mainstay of hoboes, and the brewing of the beans was done very simply.

"You just took off one of your socks, put the coffee in the sock and swished the sock around in the boiling water until you got the strength you wanted," said John Babiak of Jeannette, Pa.

Although Jeff Davis was acknowledged as king of the hoboes, the legendary Knight of the Road was Leon Ray Livingston who left his "A-No.1" mark on hundreds of water towers, trestles, signal towers and freight houses all over America.

Livingston, who died 40 years ago, claimed he hopped his first freight train when he was 11 years old and spent more than 30 years wandering around the country. During the last years of his life he was a loudly applauded speaker at church and civic groups where he lectured the teenagers on the evils of running away from home.

All this year's conventioners gave up hoboing long ago and came to Alaska by plane. All have comfortable, even prosperous, means, but all are proud of their hoboing days.

"But hoofing is finished," said Filer. "Now if you're broke you go on welfare. You don't have to grab a freight and move on to somewhere else where there might be work. And if you do have the wanderlust, who would want to travel in a box car when he can hitch a ride on the highway and travel in an air-conditioned car?"

Child Evangelism Fills Summer Days

Seven children gathered in a recent Monday around an oak on the grounds of a Winterville school and were told that God loves and offers each of them everlasting life.

The seven were participating in a Five-Day Club of the Child Evangelism Fellowship of Pitt County. Their teacher, Elaine States, led the group in a pledge of allegiance to the U. S. Flag and a short prayer, then sang songs with them and told Bible and missionary stories. Her message throughout was one of personal salvation. She left with each child a Bible verse to learn for the next day and an invitation to be back at the same tree at the same time for the next four days.

An hour after the meeting was over, Miss States had materials in place in front of some steps at another Winterville school for another Five-Day Club meeting, this one conducted by Mrs. Viola Stancill. The message and the format were the same.

Miss States is Missionary Director for Pitt County of the 40-year-old international, interdenominational organization, Child Evangelism Fellowship. A minister's daughter educated in Oregon, she was a teacher in a Kinston Christian school doing volunteer Child Evangelism work when she was approached in 1976 by the local committee about becoming full-time director. During the summer of '76 she engaged in 12 weeks of intensive training at the Fellowship's Leadership Training Institute in Warrenton, Mo. The course equipped her, not only to be a children's worker, but to recruit and conduct short-term teacher training classes for volunteer Child Evangelism leaders and for Sunday School and other lay teachers interested in teaching children about Christ.

She is eager to meet people interested in doing volunteer work with Child Evangelism, either as teachers or as hosts or hostesses. There is a special need in Pitt County for men and teenagers to be volunteer teachers, she said.

Miss States is the only paid Child Evangelism worker in Pitt County. Her salary and other expenses of the ministry are paid for through contributions of local churches and individuals. The local Child Evangelism Committee, which has been active here since 1970, is composed of seven members: Dennis Sutton, Charles Barber, Faye Barber, Chuck Barber, Frank Little, Kenneth Rollins and Viola Stancill.

In addition to the summer Five-Day Clubs, Good News Clubs during the school year are held during the school year from October through May. Children from three through 12 years of age are encouraged to attend, though no one of any age is ever turned away, Miss States said.

Materials for teaching in the clubs is provided by the Fellowship's publishing house in Missouri. Every song, every story has large-lettered, colorfully illustrated visual aids for the teacher to use.

A rally is held once a year, usually in the spring, for area children. The one last spring, judged highly successful, featured a black-light-using colored chalk artist.

Available here, too, is the weekly airing of the Fellowship's "Treehouse Club" on Channel 7 each Saturday at 7:30 a. m.

Miss States and CEF Committee members and other volunteers often go door-to-door inviting children to participate in both the Five-Day and the Good News Club meetings. They also visit churches to explain their program and recruit both participants and volunteers. A monthly newsletter telling of CEW activities is written and mailed by Miss States.

"Our message is one of fundamental Christianity," she said. "We keep away from things that divide the major denominations and do not promote any denomination over another.

"We encourage every child who makes a personal decision of faith to find a church and we sometimes make a pastor aware of a particular child's interest in or ties with his church. But we leave it to the church and the pastor to teach the things that distinguish denominations.

"Our concern is wholly that each child hear The Good News at a time when it can become a foundation for his or her future years. We believe that childhood professions of faith are valid and needed as anchors, especially through the often-difficult teen years."

Information about Child Evangelism may be obtained by writing Miss States at Box 983, Greenville or calling her at 756-7917.

Microwave Utensils Dominate Housewares Show

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

CHICAGO (UPI) — Food processors got 66.9 percent of the vote in a trade paper survey that asked housewares retailers to pick hot products for fall.

MARY MOHR...demonstrates the Yougourmet, an electronic yougurt maker, at the recent National Housewares Show. The manufacturer is Rolmex Electric, Inc., of Varennes, Quebec, Canada.

But this reporter, walking the seven miles of aisles at the 69th semi-annual housewares show in Chicago's McCormick Place exhibit halls, got a different impression.

Kitchen electrics, as usual, tended to dominate the new products category, but microwave cookware was everywhere. Corn poppers, yogurt makers, coffeemakers, food slicers and frozen dessert makers are also proliferating.

Among established metal, glass and glass-ceramic cookware manufacturers expanding into microwave utensils are Corning, Wear-Ever, Mirro, West Bend, Foley, AnchorHocking, Chicago Metallic Products, Inc., of Lake Zurich, Ill., and the Nordic Ware division of Northland Aluminum Products, Inc., of Minneapolis. Both Chicago Metallic and E-Z Por Corp. of Wheeling, Ill., which makes disposable aluminum foil cookware, introduced disposables that can be used in both microwave and conventional ovens.

Nordic's line includes batteryoperated and spring-operated turntables that eliminate the need to turn food containers manually during cooking.

Another Minneapolis manufacturer, Leisure Technology, showed tongs, two stirring spoons and a stirring spatula that the manufacturer says remain cool to the touch when left in food as it cooks.

Microwave utensil materials now include glass, glassceramic, regular ceramic, pottery, disposable coated paper and thermoplastics, some with non-stick coatings. The paper and some plastics can also be used in conventional ovens up to moderately high temperatures.

One new thermoplastics line designed by a California woman who teaches microwave cooking classes is multipurpose: plate covers and a large covered roaster convert to covered casseroles. The designer is Thelma Pressman of Hawthorne; the manufacturer, Blisscraft of Hollywood in Gardena, Calif.

The newest designs in processors are a 16-speed electronic model from Hamilton Beach, a General Electric processor that converts to a five-speed blender by changing bowls, and two new Cuisinarts. The home-style Cuisinart, Japanese-made, has about twice the power and capacity of the manufacturer's French-made models, on-off and pulse buttons and a feed tube that reverses from front to rear.

Cuisinarts also introduced a French-made processor for commercial use that the manufacturer hopes will also appeal to well-heeled home cooks. For $600 retail, it offers 70 percent larger bowl capacity than the original machine, on-off pulse switches and capacity to chop two pounds of meat or knead four pounds of yeast dough at one time. The unit comes with a built-in cutting board, seven discs and an extra work bowl.

Two major manufacturers, Presto and Hamilton Beach, introduced hot air corn poppers that work without fat, and Republic Mlding of Chicago, a microwave ovenmodel that also needs no fat.

Yogurt makers are getting larger and coffeemkers, smaller.

Melitta introduced two coffeemakers that brew 12 ounces at a time and Hamilton Beach, a one to four cup espresso maker. Sunbeam showed a 12-ounce hot beverage maker-with a soup bowl cover and two cups and spoons that nest inside the unit. Wingaersheek, Inc., of Peabody, Mass., introduced a two-cup hot water heater and dispenser that also makes drip coffee.

Rolmex Electro, Inc., of Varennes, Quebec, Canada, was among the manufacturers introducing large-quantity canister-type yogurt makers. The two-quart Yogurmet comes with 30 grams of freeze-dried starter to make six quarts of yogurt with the creamy texture and delicate flavor of French yoguard. The starter will also be sold separately.

Contempra Industries, Inc., of Tinton Falls, N.J., has a twoquart unit, and American Best Coffee, Inc., of Sun Valley, Calif., showed an imported onequart canister-type yogurt maker, a Belgian import that also makes cottage cheese, sour cream and buttermilk. Starters for all four dairy products are included.

Salton's new two-liter yogurt maker, a multi-cup model, includes a cheese-making gadget: a folding plastic stand with a small knitted cotton bag to drip the yogurt through.

Electric grills are also getting smaller. Northern Electric Co. of Chicago introduced a 7-by-11-inch unit with three broiling levels; Regal Ware, Inc., of Kewaskum, Wis., a multipurpose grill about the same size that comes with a non-stick coated drip pan that can also be used to cook on top of the grill while making toast below the heating unit.

The Allendale, N.J.-based division of Krups, West Germany's largest manufacturer of small electrics, introduced a compact multi-purpose device that grills, barbecues, stews and boils with two optional attachments, waffle iron grids and a rotary grill.

Wear-Ever came out with an electric version of its lowpressure chicken fryer introduced earlier this year, and Presto, a rangetop model with a goof-proof safety interlock system and casserole handles that lock the lid in place effortlessly.

Countertop electric food slicers that work like commercial ones were introduced by Waring, Oster and Rival. The slicers are part of a steadily growing trend toward home-size models of professional appliances and utensils.

Convection ovens also fall into this category. They cook faster than conventional gas and electric ovens because a fan circulates the hot air continuously. Farberware introduced the first home portable in 1973. Now it is marketing a set of three stainless steel mesh trays to convert the oven to a dehydrator.

Cuisinarts showed a portable countertop convection oven that looks like an ovenproof glass roaster. The 16-by-14½-by-13inch oven can also be hung on the wall. All parts except the power unit are dishwasher safe.

Add to the list of manufacturers of electric ice cream freezers that operate with ice cubes and table salt: Hamilton Beach's two-quart model, with basic recipes on a dial in the motor base; the two-quart Master Chef from Northern Electric Co., Chicago, with two basic recipes on the cream can's plastic storage lid; and the one-quart 60-watt Freezit from Lakewood Manufacturing, Torrance, Calif. The manufacturer says 12 minutes is normal churning time for his machine, compared with 30 minutes or more for most other makes and models.

Miss Carson Weds Saturday Afternoon

Miss Christy Regina Carson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur George Carson of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., was married Saturday afternoon at four o'clock to Charles Jeffrey Carawan in the sanctuary of Saint James United Methodist Church.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland Eugene Carawan of Greenville.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dewey Tyson, pastor of Saint James United Methodist Church. Stephen Vaughn presented a program of nuptial music.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white gown of alencon lace, English net and qiana. The high slit Victorian neckline was encrusted with English net and beaded alencon lace. The empire waistline was edged with imported alencon scallopes. The long straight sleeves were made of the net with lace and seed pearls. The qiana skirt flowed into a chapel length train.

The bride wore an imported madonna mantilla edged with alencon lace and seed pearls that fell to waltz length in the back with a full length illusion veil covering the gown. She carried a nosegay of white roses and white miniature carnations with gypsophila and springerii fern tied with a white satin bow and streamers.

Mrs. Jeannie Carstarphen of Greenville, sister of the bride, was honor attendant. She wore a russet gown of qiana fashioned with double spaghetti straps of self-fabric, empire bodice and accordian pleated skirt. The gown was accented by a chiffon overlay with a high neckline. She carried a nosegay of yellow daisies and yellow miniature carnations tied with a yellow bow and streamers.

Bridesmaids were Miss Marion Harvey and Ms. Beverly Killgo, sister of the bridegroom. Each wore a gown identical to the honor attendant and carried a nosegay of yellow daisies and cushion poms tied with a yellow bow and streamers.

Miss Ashley Carawan, niece of the bridegroom of Cary, served as flower girl. She wore a long sleeveless white gown trimmed with lace under the bodice. She carried a small white basket of white and yellow daisies tied with a yellow bow and streamers.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and groomsmen included Dr. Roy E. Carawan, brother of the bridegroom, and Donald Howard, brother-in-law of the bridegroom. Jeffrey Carstarphen, nephew of the bride, served as ring bearer.

Mrs. Joyner B. Jackson of Greenville directed the wedding and was given a corsage of white roses.

The mother of the bride wore a pale yellow formal length V-neck gown with chiffon sleeves accented with a corsage of yellow roses and white miniature carnations. The bridegroom's mother chose a formal length aqua gown with a long sleeved jacket of matching lace accented with a corsage of white roses and blue tipped miniature carnations. The bridegroom's grandmother was remembered with a corsage of white roses and pink miniature carnations.

The parents of the bride entertained at a reception following the ceremony in the Lake Ellsworth Club.

The bride's table was covered with a white lace clothand centered with an arrangement of white gladioli, white chrysanthemums and cushion poms. After the first traditional slice was cut by the bridal couple, the five tiered wedding cake was served by Mrs. Donald Howard, sister of the bridegroom. Punch was poured by Mrs. Roy E. Carawan, sister-in-law of the bridegroom.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Carawan of Fairfax, Va., presided at the register. Johnny Carstarphen, nephew of the bride, distributed rice bags.

The parents of the bridegroom entertained Friday evening at an after-rehearsal dinner for the wedding party and out-of-town guests at the Three Steers.

Mrs. Thomas E. Carawan and Mrs. Thomas L. Scoopmire, aunt and cousin of the bridegroom, gave a bridesmaids luncheon Saturday morning at the Holiday Inn. The bride presented her attendants with gifts.

For a wedding trip to Maine, the bride wore a three-piece blue and white suit and a corsage of blue tipped carnations. The couple will live in Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of Fort Lauderdale High School and ECU. The bridegroom is a graduate of J. H. Rose High School and attended Pitt Technical Institute and ECU. He is employed in the engineering department of Grady White Boats, Inc.

MRS. CHARLES JEFFREY CARAWAN

MRS. BOBBY WAYNE CARSON

Carson-Shirley Vows Said

VIRGINIA BEACH, VA. — Jeryl Lynne Shirley of Virginia Beach, Va., and Bobby Wayne Carson of Elizabeth City were married Saturday at 3 p.m. at the Virginia Beach United Methodist Church. The Rev. Ellis Jennings Bedsworth of Bethel, pastor of Bethel United Methodist Church, performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Robert Shirley of Cary. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse William Carson of Rt. 1, Bethel.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a wedding dress she had made of ivory lace lined with ivory crepe. The sleeveless gown featured a scoop neckline, fitted bodice with a flounce along the hem and a scalloped ruffle along the neckline. She wore a single strand of pearls and carried her mother's Bible topped with a yellow orchid. The bride wore a halo of daisies and baby's breath in her hair.

Miss Gail Janice Shirley of Cary, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor, with Miss Mary W. Ritter of Greensboro as bridesmaid. Both wore dresses made by the bride of peach scalloped eyelet. The dresses were fashioned with empire waists, V-neckiines, butterfly sleeves and flounces at the hemlines. Both carried daisies, baby's breath and greenery in wicker baskets accented with yellow ribbons. They wore peach picture hats.

Miss Nancy Acey and Mrs. Dorothy Garbarino of Virginia Beach, Va., and Miss Jacqueline Whitehurst of Charleston, S. C., served as honorary bridesmaids. Mrs. Virginia Acey served as mistress of the wedding ceremony.

The bridegroom's father served as best man. Ushers included David Ludwig Shirley of Greenville, brother of the bride, and B. F. Manning Jr. of Bethel.

Miss Billie Carole McPhail, organist, presented a program of nuptial music.

The reception was held at the home of Miss Patricia Anne Carson, sister of the bridegroom.

After a wedding trip to Annapolis, Md., the couple will reside in Elizabeth City.

Violence Isn't Prime Concern

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — A recent study of TV viewers shows that the issue of television violence is not the prime concern of most viewers.

Bissy Genova of Syracuse University's School of Information Studies conducted a study in Eugene, Ore., to examine the behavior of TV viewers as a consumer group. She found that the issue of violence on television apparently isn't of major importance to viewers in the overall context.

"Predictable plots, repetitive stories, and generalized program level were what viewers primarily looked for," she says. "Only after that did they express a concern about issues such as violence, sex, and other narrower questions."

Of the 149 people interviewed, Dr. Genova says the concern which surfaced regularly was fear of censorship. Many felt the best place for control of television is at home with the family.

Miss Williams Is Bride

MRS. JIMMY DEAN CRAFT

GRIMESLAND — Miss Sharon Kaye Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ormond E. Williams of Greenville, became the bride of Jimmy Dean Craft of Grifton Saturday at 3 p.m. at the Grimesland Pentecostal Holiness Church.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Craft of Grifton.

The Rev. Bobby T. Williams of New Bern, uncle of the bride, and the Rev. Danny Nelson officiated at the double ring ceremony which included lighting the unity candle.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Randy Buck, organist. Mrs. Jeannette Williams, aunt of the bride, sang "The Twelfth of Never" and "One Love."

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of white organza over white peau de soie designed with a Queen Anne neckline outlined in scalloped chantilly lace beaded with pearls. The empire bodice was overlayed in French chantilly lace which extended over the waistline edged in beaded scalloped lace. The sheer lace sleeves featured cuffs of scalloped lace. The modified A-line skirt was enhanced with tiers of organza edged in scalloped chantilly lace that extended around the attached chapel length train.

She wore a walking veil of illusion edged in scalloped chantilly lace to complement her gown, held in place by a Camelot cap overlayed in the matching lace beaded with pearls. The bride carried a colonial bouquet of yellow roses, white daisies and baby's breath with blue miniature carnations and matching yellow and blue streamers.

Kathi Williams, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and the matron of honor was Mrs. Jane Williams of Grifton, sister of the bridegroom. They were attired in light blue polyester organza gowns fashioned with a halter neckline, empire waist and a double ruffle cape. An inset cummerbund encircled the waist and the skirt ended in a wide flounce. The gown featured a bustle that attached at the waist with a self-fabric rosebud. They wore matching blue sheer picture hats trimmed with braided organdy tubing, satin flowers and streamers.

Bridesmaids were Miss Dell Worthington and Miss Gina Williams of Greenville and Miss Debbie Stevens of Grimesland. They were attired in maize polyester organza gowns and wore matching picture hats identical to those of the honor attendants. The junior bridesmaid was Miss Cara Williams, sister of the bride. She was dressed in a maize polyester organza gown styled similar to that of the bridesmaids and wore an identical style hat. They each carried a nosegay of yellow pom pons, blue miniature carnations and white baby's breath with yellow and blue streamers.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Calvin and Ray Craft of Grifton, brothers of the bridegroom, Dalton Williams, brother-in-law of the bridegroom of Griftolliams of Greenville, uncle of the bride.

The couple presented their mothers long-stemmed yellow roses at the end of the ceremony.

The mother of the bride wore an apricot formal length gown with a blouson top and accordion pleated skirt. The mother of the bridegroom selected a light pink formal length gown with an accordian pleated skirt. Both wore white rose corsages. Mrs. Roy Williams and Mrs. Lucy Arnold of Greenville, grandmothers' were wearing carnation corsages.

Mrs. Mary Kittrell of Greenville directed the wedding and Miss Daunita Arnold, cousin of the bride, presided at the register.

A reception was given by the bride's parents following the ceremony at the Masonic Lodge, Grimesland.

The bride's table was covered with a white lace cloth and centered with a five branch silver candelabra holding an arrangement of yellow snapdragons, white fuji mums and blue pom pons.

An after-rehearsal party was given by the bridegroom's parents Friday night at the King and Queen Restaurant for members of the wedding party and out-of-town guests. A bridesmaids breakfast was held Saturday morning at the Three Steers.

The bride is a graduate of D. H. Conley High School and is employed by J. H. Hudson, Inc. The bridegroom is a graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School and is employed by Procter and Gamble.

The couple will live at Rt. 9, Greenville, after a wedding trip to unannounced points.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

It wasn't my idea to buy the jawbones and teeth of a shark to bring home from our vacation.

Okay, so I take the blame for buying the ceramic chess set, the two Aztec dolls in full costume, and the round mirror surrounded by bread dough flowers, but the shark's orthodontic nightmare was definitely my husband's idea.

I told him, "You can buy a shark's mouth on every street corner in the United States. Why do we have to lug it back over 3,000 miles?"

"You should talk," he grumbled. "I thought we made a pact never to buy any souvenir we couldn't pack in our luggage, wear, eat, or pour over ice cubes."

"If you're referring to the Mexican hat I bought with the sequins, you'll change your mind when it covers a wall in the family room, and Tom dances around it at our next party."

As we stumbled on the plane, I said, "Besides, that gross thing smells."

"It does not smell," he said defensively.

"Then why are people on the airplane trying to open their windows?"

"I can't get my feet under my seat," he said. "You're going to have to move the drum. Maybe if you took the shopping bag on your side, I wouldn't have to hold the drum between my knees."

"Okay, I'll take the shopping bag if you'll take the sourdough bread we bought in the airport. And remember if the Grecian urn in the shopping bag breaks, let it be on your conscience. Besides, I don't see why you can't put the bread in the shark's jaws."

"Can you imagine how this conversation sounds to the people in the seats in front of us?"

"I don't care what it sounds like. We have to get all this stuff under the seat. What did you do with the coconuts with the cute Indian faces?"

"Over by your handbag."

"Look, let me out in the aisle and I think we can stuff all this under the seat."

Minutes later, I straightened up and slid into the seat. At that moment, two sets of upper and lower teeth clamped around my backside, causing me unbelievable pain.

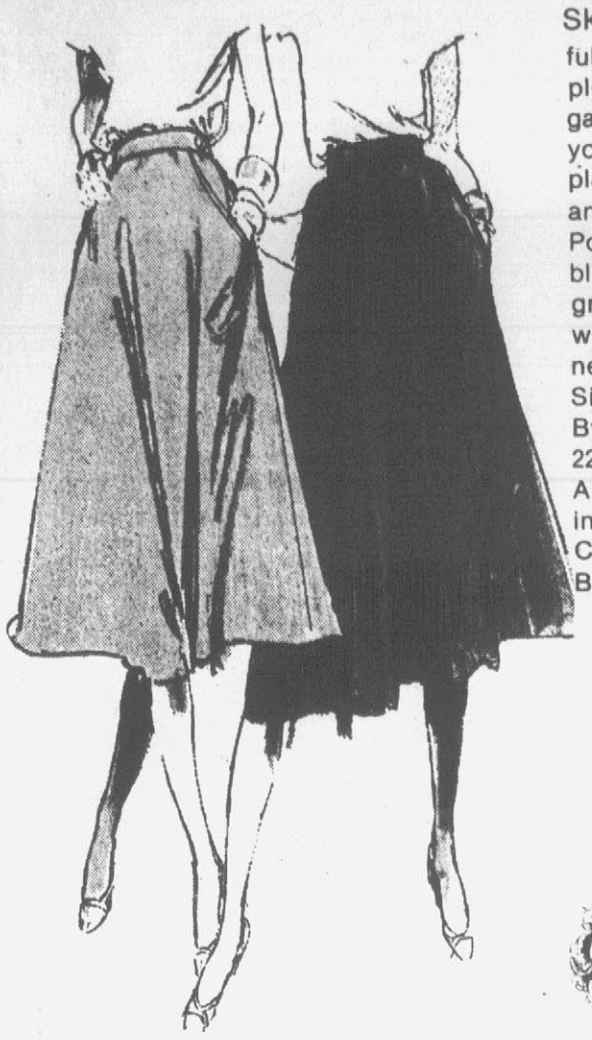

"What's the matter?" asked my husband.

"I've just made a sequel to Jaws I and II that no one is going to believe."

My husband was smiling. No one will convince me he didn't put the shark up to it.

Couple Speaks Vows Saturday

KINSTON — Holy Trinity Catholic Church here was the scene of the Saturday afternoon wedding ceremony of Mary Lynn Dawson and Daniel L. Bowlin. The double ring ceremony was performed at three o'clock by the Father John Wall.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. Miss Suzanne Dawson of Washington, D. C., sister of the bride, was honor attendant and bridesmaids included Cathaleen Dawson of Honolulu, Hawaii, and Jenine Dawson of New York City, sisters of the bride, Mrs. Rhonda Goddard of Lowell, sister of the bridegroom, and Robin Pulzone of Chapel Hill.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Wallace H. Dawson of Selfridge AFB, Mich., brother of the bride, C. David Bowlin of Woodbridge, Va., brother of the bridegroom, James P. Gantz and William P. Terry, both of Greenville.

Parents of the couple are Col. and Mrs. Wallace H. Dawson III of Selfridge AFB, Mich., and Mr. and Mrs. Max L. Bowlin of Lowell.

A program of wedding music was presented by Miss Gatha Cole, organist.

The bride wore a formal length gown of white chiffon fashioned with a fitted bodice of alencon lace and seed pearls. The dress featured a high neckline of sheer illusion and a cathedral length train. Her Juliet cap was attached to a matching veil of chiffon, lace and seed pearls. She carried a cascade of white roses, baby's breath and ivy.

The attendants wore formal length gowns of pastel pink and green flowered batiste featuring a bertha collar and accented by ribbons encircling the waist. Their matching picture hats were trimmed with pink and green silk flowers and ribbons. They each carried bouquets of pink silk roses and white flocked baby's breath accented with pink and green streamers.

The bride's parents gave a reception after the ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ely Perry Jr., Kinston. Miss Ruth E. Perry presided at the guest register.

The serving table was decorated with an arrangement of silk flowers and baby's breath. Refreshments were served by Miss Sarah Beth Rhiddlehoover, cousin of the bride, Mrs. Elizabeth Moffett, Mrs. Sarah McLeod, Mrs. Helene Molina and Mrs. Elizabeth Rhiddlehoover, all aunts of the bride, and Mrs. Martha Mullis, aunt of the bridegroom.

Elizabeth Ann McLeod, cousin of the bride, distributed pink and green taffeta roses filled with rice to guests.

After a cruise to the Bahamas and to Disney World, Fla., the couple will live in Greenville.

The bride is a pediatric nurse at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. She is a graduate of the ECU School of Nursing. The bridegroom is currently doing post graduate work in business administration at ECU and is a graduate of UNC-C. A rehearsal party was given by the bridegroom's parents at the home of Mrs. Bynum Johnson, Kinston. Members of the bridal party and honored guests were entertained at the pig pickin'.

MISS JACKIE DAWSON. . .is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack D. Dawson of Greenville, who announce her engagement to Dean Sherwood Wilkerson, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Wilbur Wilkerson of Greenville. The wedding will take place Oct. 14.

AFTER-SWIM FARE
Wheat Germ Cookies

WHEAT GERM COOKIES

These have rather crisp edges and soft centers when they come from the oven: the edges soften in storage.

- 2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1½ teaspoons baking powder
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- 1½ teaspoons cinnamon
- ¼ teaspoon nutmeg
- 1 cup vacuum-packed regular wheat germ
- ¾ cup butter or margarine, softened
- 1 cup firmly packed dark brown sugar
- 1 large egg
- 1 teaspoon pure vanilla
- ¾ cup milk
- 1 cup finely grated unpared zucchini, not packed down
- ½ cup raisins

Stir together the flour, baking powder, salt, cinnamon, nutmeg and wheat germ. Cream butter and sugar; beat in the egg and vanilla; stir in the flour mixture in several additions alternately with the milk. Stir in zucchini and raisins. Drop by rounded tablespoonsful, a few inches apart, onto lightly greased cookie sheets. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until browned around the edges — 12 to 14 minutes. With a wide spatula remove to a wire rack to cool. Store between layers of saran in a tightly covered container. Makes about 40 cookies.

Note: We used a hand grater for the zucchini so it would be in fine, moist shreds.

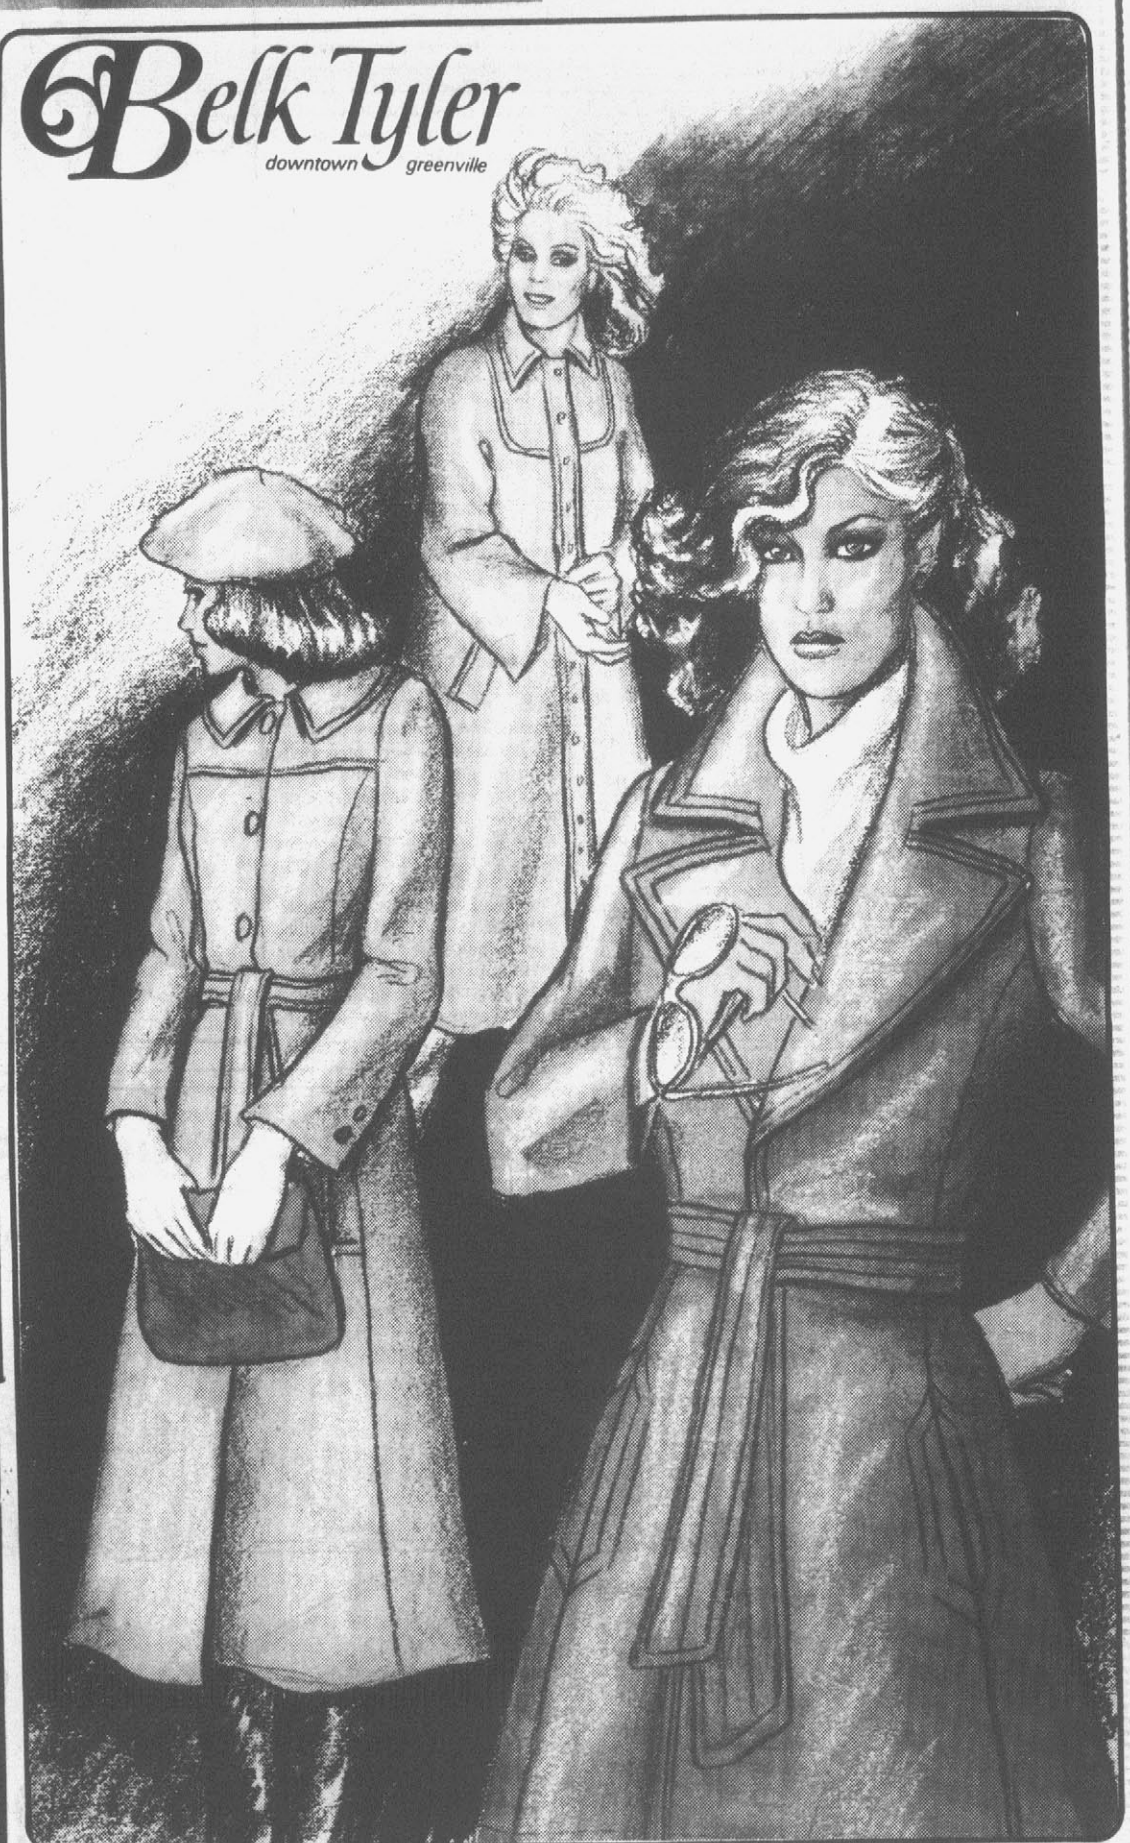

Never use galvanized screen on food drying trays. The acid reaction my be dangerous and the food will be darkened. Fiberglass, vinyl and copper screening are also not acceptable. Use only aluminum screening, wood slats or dowels.

Miss Whitehurst Weds

VANCEBORO — Miss Alma Ruth Whitehurst and William Carter Jr. were married Saturday in a 4 p.m. double ring ceremony held at Joseph Branch Free Will Baptist Church here. The Rev. Julius W. Randolph and the Rev. Leedrew Strong officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Pearline Chapman of Englewood, N. J. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Nona L. Carter of Chapel Hill.

Given in marriage by her uncle, Stevenson D. Chapman, the bride wore a white gown of crepe de chine over taffeta, with an empire bodice of ivory and Belgium lace trimmed with ruffles. The full puffed sleeves had motifs of lace on them. The scalloped hemline was attached to a chapel length train. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses, baby's breath accented with English ivy and pastel streamers.

Mrs. Martha J. W. Smith of Greensboro, cousin of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a crepe satin gown in melon with cap sleeves and a circular neckline with empire bodice accented with Belgium lace. She wore a white silk rose in her hair. She carried mums with baby's breath attached with melon, yellow and green crepe satin streamers.

Attendants were Ms. Evonne Pollard of Vanceboro, cousin of the bride, Mrs. Nona Carter of Chapel Hill, sister of the bridegroom, Mrs. Lillie Atkinson of Greenville, Mrs. Lossie Savage of Washington, D. C., Ms. Michele Cave of Teaneck, N. J., cousin of the bride, Mrs. Marilyn Phillips of Winterville, Ms. Sarah Lassiter of Grimesland and Ms. Carol Chapman of Greensboro, cousin of the bride. They wore gowns identical to the honor attendant's in colors of yellow, green and melon. Each wore a white silk rose headdress. They carried bouquets of mums and baby's breath accented with melon, yellow and green crepe satin streamers streamers.

Miss Keishanna Checkera Whitehurst, daughter of the bride, wore a floor length yellow gown with puffed sleeves and back sash trimmed with Belgium lace. She carried a basket of mixed flowers.

Train bearers were Rosalind Nichol Smith and Lynn Dixon. Both wore identical white floor length dresses with long puffed sleeves and bows as headdress.

Charles Street of Chapel Hill was best man. Ushers were Jackie Ray Whitehurst of Vanceboro, brother of the bride, and Tony Hackney of Washington, D.C. Groomsmen were Tommy Roach of Greenville, brother of the bride, Herman Foushee of Washington, D. C., Ray Rogers and Ernest Brown, both of Greenville, Thurman Dorche and Alton Harris, both of Wilson. William Earl Brown of Grimesland, cousin of the bride, was ring bearer.

The mother of the bride wore a floor length gown of pale yellow qiana and the bridegroom's mother wore a floor length gown of blue qiana. Both were presented with corsages of baby white roses.

A program of nuptial music was presented by the Rev. John H. Taylor, organist, and Mrs. Marian Jones, soloist, both of Greenville. Vocal selections included "We've Only Just Begun," "Because" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Ms. E. M. Porteur of Greenville directed the wedding.

Immediately following the ceremony on the lawn at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson D. Chapman, uncle and aunt of the bride, a reception was held. Mrs. Odel White, cousin of the bride, received the guests. After the couple cut the first slice of cake, Mrs. Mary Lou Cannon Greenville served the cake. Mrs. Dorothy Chapman Wallace, cousin of the bride from Greenville, presided at the register. Farewells were said by Mrs. Hattie Staton of Greenville. The tables were covered with white satin cloths accented with mixed flowers and English ivy.

A dinner was given after the wedding by Mr. and Mrs. James E. Williams at their home for the wedding party and out-of-town guests.

After a wedding trip to Sea Pines Plantation at Hilton Head Island in S. C., the couple will reside in Wilson.

The bride is a cashier at Greenville Utilities and is a graduate of D. H. Conley High School. She is presently attending St. Augustine College in Raleigh. The bridegroom is an installment loan manager at Branch Bank and Trust Co. Statonsburg. He is a graduate of Chapel Hill City Schools and graduated from North Carolina Central University with a degree in business administration and a degree in accounting.

An after-rehearsal party was given at the home of Mrs. Rebecca Chapman of Vanceboro, aunt of the bride.

Mrs. Bishop Presented Gift

The Junior Woman's Club held a covered-dish supper at the home of President Vicky Bishop Wednesday night for a board meeting.

A decorated going away cake was given to Mrs. Bishop, who will be moving with her family to Kitty Hawk. Past President Shelley Basnight presented Mrs. Bishop a gift for her outstanding service.

First Vice President Kathryn Gray gave information to department chairmen and yearbooks were distributed for the coming year.

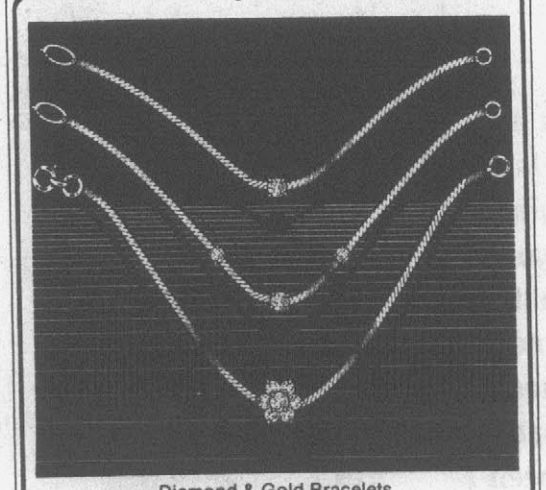

Maggie Brown, chairman of ways and means, discussed plans for the fall movies. The next general meeting will be held Sept. 6 at First Federal.

The board discussed the formation of a juniorette club at Rose High School, which will be sponsored by the junior women.

Foods selected for home drying should be of the highest quality possible — fresh, sound and at the "right" stage of maturity.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are trying hard to cope with the most heartbreaking tragedy a parent could ever experience—losing a child.

Our son was only 18. We're sure he didn't want to end his life. He died of an overdose of drugs. He had everything to live for. He was an honor student, a fine athlete, good-looking and popular. He had such great plans for the future, and had already been accepted to the university of his choice. He had never been in any kind of trouble and we never knew him to touch drugs of any kind. He wasn't an addict. He was a green kid experimenting with pills and angel dust (PCP).

I don't know why I'm writing to you, Abby, except that our son used to read your column every day and he thought you were a "neat lady." Maybe I want to ask you to tell kids who read your column to stay away from drugs. They just don't realize what a terrible price they might pay for wanting to get "high" or experience new sensations.

And yes, Abby, he was our only son.

HEARTBROKEN IN N.Y.

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: You have my sympathy. May I recommend a wonderfully supportive group who call themselves "The Compassionate Friends"—a self-help organization for parents whose children have died. Many bereaved parents have found that their grief is lessened by quietly listening to one another, sharing experiences, talking out their feelings and sometimes crying openly together. There are over 100 chapters in the United States—several in your state.

The person who made me aware of "The Compassionate Friends" said, "Losing a child is positively the worst thing that can happen to a parent, and the only people who can understand it are those who have been through it. This organization was a lifesaver for me."

The national coordinators are Arnold and Paula Shamres, whose 10-year-old daughter was killed in an accident. The Shamreses will provide information about this organization to anyone who writes to them at P.O.Box 3247, Hialeah, Fla. 33013. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for their reply.

DEAR ABBY: What would you do if you received the following card:

"Happy Birthday. Buy yourself a $10 gift, and send me the invoice."

1. Ignore it.
2. Buy gift, and send invoice to giver.
3. Thank giver of gift (?) and forget it.

P.S. The gift (?) is not from a spouse.

BIRTHDAY BABY

DEAR BIRTHDAY BABY: Find a book on etiquette that includes "gift giving," and send him an invoice.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to demand equal rights—for MEN! To cite one example of the injustice to males:

If a WOMAN undresses in front of a window with the shade up, and a man stops to look at her, HE is arrested for being a peeping Tom. But if a MAN undresses in front of a window with the shade up, and a WOMAN stops to look at HIM, HE is arrested for indecent exposure.

If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters For All Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

by Rosalie Trotman

Lisa Laughinghouse, 17, of Greenville, has been selected as one of 24 crew members from the nation by McDonald's Corp., Oak Brook, Ill., to participate in the national Muscular Dystrophy Telethon to be hosted by Jerry Lewis Sept. 3-4 in Las Vegas, Nev.

She was chosen on the basis of her community work for muscular dystrophy patients, fund raising efforts to support the muscular dystrophy campaign as a McDonald's employee and her overall excellent employment record.

She was also judged on outstanding personal qualities which qualified her to participate on the television presentation.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Billy Laughinghouse, Lisa is a rising senior at J. H. Rose High School. She is a member of the Keywannettes and serves as a board member. She was a member of the school's SGA last year.

Lisa will leave Sept. 1 for Las Vegas and will spend five days there. "When I was told, I couldn't believe it— it's a great opportunity," she said.

The Alpha Omega Chapter of Epsilon Sigma Alpha Sorority of Greenville will hold its first annual antique show and sale Aug. 25-27 at the new New Bern Armory, 317 Glen Burnie Dr.

The show hours are from noon to 10 p.m. Friday, noon to 8 p.m. Saturday and noon to 6 p.m. Sunday.

Collections of English paste porcelains will be shown by Angela of London Antiques of Virginia Beach, Va., antique jewelry by Crawfords Corner of Sicklerville, N. J., primitives by Woodworm Antiques of McLean, Va., miniatures by Sal's Antiques of Kensington, Md., and formal furniture by Tallwood Antiques of Great Falls, Va.

The show will benefit the various philanthropic projects of the Alpha Omega Chapter.

Dockside Priest Has Host Of Unusual Roles

By CARRICK LEAVITT

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — The Rev. John G. Bosch's duties range from driving sailors to the golf course to sobering up cooks. In between, he conducts church services.

Bosch is director of Oakland's Apostleship of the Sea, one of 360 similar Catholic-sponsored dockside ecumenical churches around the world. The apostleship ministers to the 800 seamen from any of 30 maritime nations who each week enter the port of Oakland, second only to New York in volume of containership cargo.

But services performed are unlike those in ordinary parishes. For instance, Bosch, 51, said with the twinkle in his eye, "Every time the Cashu Maru or any other of the numerous Japanese vessels ties up nearby, you can expect a call from the crew about 6 a.m.

"No, they aren't Buddhists suddenly interested in a Christian Mass. They're looking for a ride to the local golf course. The green fees are $50 in Japan. When they get over here they all want to go golfing."

Bosch, who speaks four languages but not Japanese, says there's always one crewmen who will own up to speaking English — but usually not unless he thinks he has to.

"One time I was driving a load of Japanese sailors through an area of the docks where the roads are snarled when one called out, 'Oh, my God! Watch where you're going!' That's the first time we learned he could speak English."

The church itself was built under Bosch's direction in 1971. A modular building, its walls contain no angles less than 90 degrees.

"We wanted it to be the complete opposite of a ship. It's a place where the men can get away from the sea and the cramped spaces on shipboard."

A new wing to the building has just been dedicated, and a 60-year-old statue has been donated by a parishioner.

The 12-foot-tall statue, called the Christ of the Seven Seas, had for many years been in the St. Hippolytus church in Assen, Holland, but the church was abandoned. Don Clair of Oakland found the statue, worth an estimated $800,000, in a warehouse and had it shipped to California where it was cleaned up and installed in front of the Apostleship of the Sea.

Inside the church, sailors watch television, use the recreational facilities, buy food, use the telephone and write letters. The church also provides help in emergencies, as when 30 Chinese crewmen from the Malaysia Permai were placed in his care after the ship nearly sank in the stormy Pacific last December. He fed them, thanks to Chinese restaurants in Oakland.

Bosch remembers one occasion when police brought in another man who had been assaulted outside a bar.

"It was 11 p.m. and it took forever to get this man to talk lucidly. He didn't know the name of his ship but kept saying he had to sail at midnight. We poured more coffee into him. Finally he said something about Berth O at midnight.

"I went outside a looked down the docks and there was no ship at Berth O. We told him he'd missed his ship.

Auto Best Method Of Travel

By MURRAY J. BROWN
UPI Travel Editor

Planes, trains and buses have fixed routes and schedules to keep. So, next to shank's mare, probably the best way for American travelers to see and feel Europe is by automobile.

Touring by car allows you to set your own pace and itinerary. With no timetables to worry about, you can stop and smell the roses and swap stories with the locals wherever and whenever.

I remember:

—discovering charming little country inns with duck ponds shielded by weeping willow trees where my wife Dorothy and I slept under huge featherbed quilts and breakfasted on newly laid eggs, slabs of home-cured bacon and milk fresh from the family cow.

—sharing lunh of cheese, sausage, bread and wine with a farmer and his wife who were working in the field when we stopped to ask directions. They not only refused to accept any payment, but the farmer later climbed into his truck and drove almost 10 miles to show us the way to the nearest town.

Rental rates in Europe vary from country to country and, if itineraries are flexible, travelers can shop for the best bargains before leaving home. Make sure the bottom-line figure includes taxes, insurance and any other extras.

Travel agents offer scores of fly-drive packages which usually include round-trip air transportation, a car with unlimited mileage and, sometimes, some hotel accommodations. Arrangements can be made to pick up the car at the airport on arrival, if desired.

You can go on your own, too. Rental cars are available at most international airports and major cities throughout Europe. Independent local firms might not have as big a selectionas Hertz, Avis and other international agencies and you might not be able to rent it here and leave it there, but rates can be lower.

Find out about car-rental taxes, which can add significantly to costs. In France and Sweden they can add more than 20 percent to the bill. You could save money if you rent a car in some other country, if it doesn't inconvenience you.

You usually will have to buy insurance, and rates also differ. But you will need the international motor insurance card — commonly referred to as the carte verte or green card — if you plan to drive across borders.

Expect to pay substantially higher prices for gasoline than in the United States, particularly in view of the recen ddecline in the dollar. On the continent, gasoline is usually sold by the liter, but the average price works out to about $1.60 per gallon. There are 3.8 liters to a gallon.

However, in France in July motorists paid about $2.75 per gallon for super fuel which is about equal to regular gas in the U.S. Gas in Italy sells for about $2.25 per gallon, but discount coupons are available to tourists. They must be purchased from the nearest Italian National Tourist Office in the United States before departue.

You can cut costs, too, if you rent a car with a manual rather than automatic shift. Hertz notes that they are not only on the lower end of the rate scale but also use less fuel. Traditionally, car rental rates in Europe do not include gas.

Smaller cars, naturally, rent for less than big ones, American or European. Incidentally, if it is a Europeanmade subcompact, odds are that it will be equipped with front-wheel drive.

A friend at Renault suggests that if you have never driven a front-wheel drive car, with either automatic or manual shift, take time to check it out before heading for the open road. There is a difference in handling

Driving is on the right — except in the United Kingdom — and international road signs are used throughout Europe. Major highways are good to excellent, with speed limits ranging from about 55 mph in Spain to about 80 mph in West Germany. Speed limits and mileage — and speedometers — are in kilometers. One kilometer is roughly equal to ⅝ of a mile.

Car renting in West Europe is virtually the same as in the U.S. A basic requirement is a valid driver's license from your home state. The minimum rental age is 21, although in some countries and for certain types of cars it is 25. Some countries have a maximum age, too, usually 70.

Rental cars also are available in the Soviet Union, Poland, Czechoslovakia, East Germany, Bulgaria, Hungary and Romania through travel agencies or the U.S. offices of Hertz, Avis and other companies who have agreements with the stateowned rental services in those countries. One-way rentals may be made within the Eastern bloc countries and between them and certain Western European nations, with an additional drop off charge.

Hertz reports that cars rented in Austria may also be driven into Eastern Europe. Visas and the international driving permit are required for such travelers. To obtain the IDP, which is recognized by more than 100 countries, send $3, two passport-type photos and a photocopy of your driver's license to your local American Automobile Assn. You do not have to be a member of AAA. Allow about two weeks.

Her Status Is Legalized

TORRANCE, Calif. (AP) — Linda Krol has apparently become the first dental hygienist in the nation to win legal recognition of being self-employed.

The other 32,000 registered dental hygienists in the nation are all employees, usually of a dentist or a group of dentists.

Miss Krol began her own business in 1976, setting up office next to the dentists she had worked for since 1965. She was quickly challenged.

Someone filed a complaint against her with the state Board of Dental Examiners, charging that the 35-year-old woman's separate office meant in effect she was not under the general supervision of the dentists for whom she provided services. The supervision is required by law.

Working with her attorney, however, Miss Krol reached an agreement with the board. The agreement, among other things, requires her to place the names of the dentists she serves on the exterior door of her office suite.

She now has her own payroll, and employs three other registered dental hygienists and a receptionist.

Sioux Falls is the largest city in South Dakota.

"The Standard Codes" Compliance Report #7729-77

The Wrangler Low-E Homestead® is a complete package of all materials necessary to build this home from the foundation up.

Not a pre-fab . . . not a shell house. Each energy-efficient Homestead® is a complete materials package to build the home of the future - today - on your lot from the foundation plate up. Construction labor costs not included. You furnish the land, labor, and foundation. We provide everything else from the inside out. And that includes not only the blueprints and building materials, but also paint, carpet, light fixtures, etc. The materials furnished will meet or exceed the minimum property standards of FHA. Any changes required to meet local or state building codes may alter the price accordingly. The materials are delivered to the home site as work progresses, so there's a minimum of waiting or wasted materials.

The Low-E Homestead® has been specially designed from the ground up to be the most energy-efficient you can buy!

Our Low-E homes can reduce energy use by up to 65% over conventional homes! How? Well, what we've done is combine all the existing energy-saving techniques with some innovative building methods. You get extra insulation . . . double-paned windows . . . extensive caulking . . . a super energy-saving heat pump . . . light-colored heat reflecting roof . . . and many other energy-saving components that can save you thousands of dollars over the years. With the price of energy and owning a home steadily rising, you really owe it to yourself to look into the Low-E Homestead®.

The Low-E Homestead® can cost no more to build than a minimum property standard home having similar features.

Does that sound too good to be true? Well, believe it! We've utilized some innovative building techniques to really trim labor costs. And our homes require fewer board feet of lumber, which reduces construction costs even more. Even better than that - studies have shown that a Low-E home is as structurally sound as a conventionally built one.

Ten Years Ago—The Prague Spring Dies

EDITOR'S NOTE: Ten years ago today, Warsaw Pact forces marched into Czechoslovakia to crush the "Prague Spring" liberalization drive of the Czech Communist leadership. From Geneva, where he is based, an Associated Press reporter who covered most of the Prague Spring and its aftermath wrote this reconstruction based on documents, top-level eyewitness accounts, and his own recollections. He was unable to revisit the scene this month. Prague authorities, without stating a reason, declined his request for a visa.

——By HANNS NEUERBOURG
Associated Press Writer

In Czechoslovakia, 10 years ago, the crisis seemed over.

True, there had been jeers at East Germany's Walter Ulbricht, a key opponent of Prague's concept of "socialism with a human face."

But at the end of the all-day summit meeting at Bratislava on Aug. 3, 1968, Leonid Brezhnev had bearhugged Alexander Dubcek, the reformist Czech Communist Party chief, as "Dear Comrade Sasha."

And the joint communique spoke no longer of a counterrevolutionary threat in Czechoslovakia. It pledged signers to respect "equality, sovereignty, national independence and territorial integrity."

It also, however, spoke of a "joint international duty" to protect socialist achievements — a phrase not clearly appreciated then.

"You can now calmly leave for Switzerland," Foreign Minister Jiri Hajek told me. He, too, left on a holiday. It ended brutally.

Moscow, as it turned out later, had prepared months before to use force, if necessary, against the Prague reformers whose liberal ideas had struck a responsive chord among the "New Left" in the West but also threatened to stir new restiveness in the Soviet bloc.

Logistics had been prepared as early as June by thousands of Soviet signal troops and other expert units, who were in Czechoslovakia for Warsaw Pact "staff maneuvers" that went three weeks over schedule.

New Soviet "maneuvers" began on the border Aug. 11, but few Czechs worried. Two days earlier, they had welcomed Yugoslavia's President Josip Broz Tito, the maverick Communist, on a euphoria-filled visit.

On Aug. 17, civilian-clad specialists of the Soviet military intelligence arrived in Prague aboard a special Aeroflot airliner to make contact with proMoscow Czech agents.

In Moscow, the party central committee had given the order to march.

Then, shortly before 11 p.m., Tuesday, Aug. 20, some 200,000 Soviet, East German, Bulgarian, Polish and Hungarian soldiers supported by massive armor crossed into Czechoslovakia at almost 20 border points.

An Antonov-24 pathfinder plane had landed at Prague's Ruzyne Airport with electronic gear to direct transports. They arrived regularly after midnight, spilling out light armor and elite airborne units.

The Czechoslovak party presidium, meeting with Dubcek in Communist headquarters, received the first word shortly before midnight through a telephone call from Defense Minister Martin Dzur.

"So they have done it and they could do this to me," said Dubcek, according to a close adviser, Party Secretary Zdenek Mlynar.

After things calmed down somewhat, the leaders drew up a proclamation for broadcast over Prague radio, branding the invasion as incompatible "with the principles of international law."

But, it added, armed resistance was "now impossible."

Prague residents, jolted awake by the transports' roar, were stunned listeners. At the CTK, the Czechoslovak news agency, CTK Director General Miroslav Sulek tried in vain to have his staff move a statement that the armies were answering a request from a "revolutionary workers and peasants government" that purportedly had just replaced the reformist regime.

Meanwhile, the streets had begun to come alive with flagwaving people, and police cars, their sirens shrieking.

Shortly before dawn, red-bereted paratroops of the Red Army's "Tamansker" elite division drove up in three armored vehicles at party headquarters, surrounded the building and rushed upstairs, guns ready. A black Soviet Embassy Volga sedan had shown them the way.

"Suddenly, the door of Dubcek's office was thrust open," Mlynar relates. "About eight soldiers and officers burst into the room and took position around the large table. All were armed with submachine guns which they pointed at our necks. Behind them came two senior officers, one of them a colonel, so short that he seemed almost a midget. But he had a lot of medals.

"He announced that we were under his 'protection.' Someone, I believe Dubcek, wanted to say something. But the dwarfish colonel shouted, 'Sit still, do not speak Czech.'"

For almost five hours, Dubcek and other party leaders were held at gunpoint before being hauled off by plainclothes security agents.

In the hillside presidential palace, also surrounded by Soviet troops, another group of Moscow emissaries tried in vain to talk President Ludvik Svoboda, a 73-year-old "Hero of the Soviet Union," into signing a prepared document listing a Kremlin-backed government.

So the plan to legalize the invasion by claiming it followed a request from government leaders — a version also maintained by Moscow at the United Nations Security Council — had blatantly misfired.

Ten years later, there was no full explanation why the Soviets had so misread the situation they would find in Prague.

The Soviets also seemed unprepared for the welcome they got from a people united in cold fury and despair. Clandestine television and radio transmitters took the place of silenced stations. Seas of humanity engulfed Soviet tanks that youths painted with swastikas.

But except for a few cases of soldiers losing their cool in the face of hostile crowds, outbursts of violence were rare. "Don't provide the occupiers with pretexts," police loudspeaker cars warned. The total death toll was estimated at well below 100.

Passive resistance made the country a labyrinth in which Soviets lost their way. Road signs were ripped off, street and house number plates removed. Soldiers could not find food, cigarettes or water.

Hundreds of young men and women practiced the Russian and Marxist dialectic they had learned in school on wide-eyed Red Army men — who were prepared for combat but not for explaining why they came. With demoralization widespread, several units were exchanged overnight.

Svoboda, meanwhile, got Soviet agreement on a top level meeting in the Kremlin. But when Dubcek and other party leaders joined him, they were told the alternative to "compromise" was a bloodbath. After lengthy discussions — and a "sedative" injection — Dubcek signed a protocol consenting to "temporary" stationing of Soviet forces in Czechoslovakia until "normalization" of the situation.

It was the death sentence for the Prague Spring.

Motorcycles Have Become Major Problem For Capital

By MONTE HAYES
Associated Press Writer

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — The young woman was so frightened by the crowd of motorcycle riders around her car that she leaped atop the auto and began shouting for help.

Passing motorists shook their heads. They knew the cyclists would not harm her and meant only to intimidate her into paying for the damage to the bike that had collided with her car. Still, the scene was a reminder that motorcycles have become a major problem in this city of three million.

By latest count nearly 40,000 registered motorcycles, most with open mufflers, rocket through the narrow Caracas Valley, many carrying bill collectors and messengers for companies that have given up on the city's telephones and mail service.

Periodically, newspapers launch campaigns protesting that the motorcycles cause smoke and noise pollution and an excessive number of traffic accidents and deaths. Critics claim that the cycles are also being used increasingly by purse snatchers, and even bank robbers, for quick getaways in Caracas' traffic-choked streets.

"Motorcycles here are a social problem," says transit official Domingo Ricovery Lopez.

Hunched over their bikes' handlebars and hurtling through heavy traffic at 60 miles an hour, many of the city's young motorcycle riders see themselves as future Johnny Cecottos. Two years ago Cecotto won the world motorcycling championship in the 350 cc. category, coming home to a hero's welcome that included an invitation to lunch with President Carlos Andres Perez.

In 1933, King Edward V of England and his brother, both murdered in 1438, were re-buried.

Building Enterprises

The many extraordinary features of this Cherry Oaks home are too numerous to list. A house for the large family, it has four bedrooms, each adjoining one of the two large bathrooms. A large screened-in-porth, a spacious heavily cabineted kitchen, large living, dining, and den areas are just the beginning of this home's many offerings.

$77,500 (assumable)

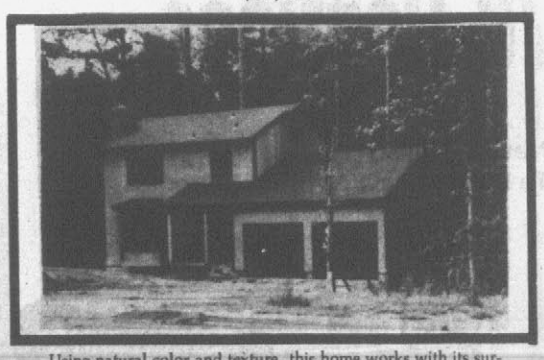

This home combines quality, sensible use of space, and a very reasonable price to provide a home that you can be proud of for a price you can afford. It has three bedrooms, 1½ baths, a family room with a fireplace, and a kitchen with an adjoining dining area. It features spacious rooms with ample closet space, a utility area, a storage area, and FHA approval.

$39,000

Located in Cherry Oaks within easy access to the recreational facilities, this elegant home provides formal living and dining areas as well as an inviting den with a fireplace and built-in bookcases. The kitchen is adjoined by an informal dining area built with a bay window. Three bedroms with two full baths and a dressing room complete the living area of the home. Heating and cooling is supplied by an economical Heat pump system.

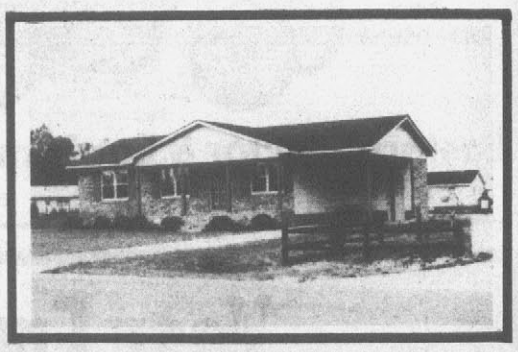

$64,500

Using natural color and texture, this home works with its surroundings to form a pleasant blend. The three large bedrooms and two baths upstairs combine with a sunken living area, half-bath, dining area with double French doors, kitchen with adjoining dinette and a beautiful covered deck to create a truly outstanding home. With insulated windows, dual heat pumps, and a full insulation package, this home is a rare fusion of beauty and function.

756-6133

This charming home in Fox Run is designed to offer comfortable living space with minimum waste for an economical investment. It features three bedrooms, 1½ baths, a family room, a gracious kitchen with dining area, a utility room, heat pump system for heating and cooling, and a carport with storage area. A larger lot is included and the house is FHA approved.

$39,000

We are putting the final touches on this comfortable home in Cherry Oaks. It's living area includes three bedrooms, two baths, a living room with fireplace, a dining room, a den, a study with built-in desk and bookcases, and a utility room. The house is styled with rough-sawn wood accenting the brick exterior, and includes a two-car garage and many extras on the inside.

Three New Principals In Pitt Schools

By REBECCA BUFFALOE
Reflector Staff Writer

While Pitt County school children are enjoying those last few days of relaxation, three new county principals are busy preparing for the coming school year.

Josh Potter

Mrs. Janie Manning, principal at Bethel Elementary, is no stranger to administrative duties. She served as supervisor in the county school system for kindergarden and first grade, as well as library media services for grades K-12.

Mrs. Manning says she'll miss one her duties as director for Title 4-C, more commonly known as "Project Promise," centered at Wellcome Middle School.

"I will miss it, but I am looking forward to the challenge of the new year," Manning commented.

Mrs. Manning hopes to provide Bethel Elementary's projected enrollment of 627 students with a better instructional program.

"This is our school, it doesn't belong to me or the teachers, but the children," Manning commented. "By law, children may attend school. It is the privilege of the principals and teachers to work in this school."

Manning has worked with her teachers and the school advisory council in working for an early release program, which will allow children to enter school at 8:10 a. m. and be dismissed at 2:40 p.m.

"The purpose of the program is not to provide teachers with free time, nor to send students home earlier, but to afford all an opportunity in-depth to improve the quality of our educational program," she stated.

Manning spoke of her conferences with Bethel teachers and their support of the new program.

"I could not ask for things to go better," she said. "The teachers are totally supportive and are taking the suggested objectives as their own."

Judith Budacz

Parents will play a great role in the new program with their continued support of educational activities.

"Parental encouragement is important in three ways," Manning explained. "They may assist children at home or suggest follow-up activities to strengthen educational abilities, come for conferences, and just have a better knowledge of the total school program."

Manning noted that the school has a strong PTA chapter, as well as interested persons who have volunteered time for school activities.

Bethel Elementary will have football programs for seventh and eighth grade boys this year with Glenn White as head coach.

Manning announced that Bill James, Dennis Palmer, Jim Martin and Joe Pilgreen, all members of the Bethel community, have volunteered time to work with the budding football program.

Bethel Elementary will have a new look this fall, with lowered ceilings, grounds improvements, and new paint, as well as tile to cover the wooden floors.

Manning said that Roscoe Lock, assistant principal at Bethel, had been a "tremendous assistance."

"We've been working together and having conferences with our teachers," she stated. "We're going into this year as a team, not as individuals."

Josh Potter, principal at North Pitt High School, has served as principal for both Falkland Primary and Elementary Schools, as well as a two-year term with Greenville Christian Academy.

Potter hopes to have a good rapport with the North Pitt school community, as well with his teaching staff.

"I've been really impressed with the behavior, attitude and morale of this faculty," Potter commented. "They have a good feeling about themselves and their accomplishments and this enthusiasm serves as motivation for the students."

Potter spent the last few months of the prior school year working with James Allen, who retired as principal.

"There's no finer gentleman than Mr. Allen," said Potter. "His wisdom, wit and foresight are tremendous. I just tell folks that he left some big shoes to fill and I'll just have to wear my own."

Although North Pitt, along with the three other county high schools, will receive three minicomputers for math purposes, Potter feels that people, not equipment" are the school's most valuable asset.

"I've been calling personnel this summer, working on schedules and preparing for our Level Three reading program," Potter explained. "The competency test results have caused drastic changes for some of our students and we're preparing for those changes."

Potter said that selected ninth graders will take two hours of reading, with those eleventh graders who need help, three hours.

"Another thing I want to accomplish this year is to draw a broader base of our community into the school," Potter noted.

North Pitt was used this summer for a CETA reading program to improve reading skills for 16-year-olds. Work has been done on the air conditioning system during the summer.

"Hopefully, the air conditioning will be in fine shape for the opening day," said Potter.

Mrs. Judy Budacz has spent a large portion of her summer making home visits to some of the 180 students who will be coming to Falkland Elementary School this year.

Mrs. Budacz, who has taught at W. H. Robinson School in Winterville, is excited about the pilot reading program being offered at Falkland this year.

"We will be the only school in Pitt County using the program," she noted. "This will provide the teachers with increased supplementary materials that would not have otherwise been available."

Two main objectives for Falkland Elementary as planned by Mrs. Budacz and her staff are to look at each child individually as to each one's needs and increased parental involvment.

"An important part of Gov. Hunt's primary reading program is providing each child with individual attention from adult volunteers," Budacz noted. "It is the responsibiljty of the school to make valuable use of the community resource people."

Falkland Elementary, because of its small student enrollment, is prized by parents for the care and attention given to each child, according to Budacz.

With the state's new testing program, teachers will be able to access students' strengths and weaknesses.

According to Mrs. Budacz, the county school system will use the Barbe Skills Checklist for the second year as a means of evaluating individual progress, as well as its own math checklist and criteria for evaluation.

Mrs. Patricia Dail, secretary, has aided Mrs. Budacz this summer in learning her way around the school, from the furnace to the water pump system.

Although Mrs. Budacz doesn't have an assistant principal, she has been able to get in touch with Josh Potter, former principal, at North Pitt High School.

All three new principals will be ready for school doors to swing open Sept. 6 for a half day of orientation, with Sept. 7 as first full day.

BACK TO SCHOOL AND COLLEGE

Anticipating all that's new and exciting in the world of education, here's a glimpse at the many opportunities awaiting students of all ages!

From kindergarten to high school to the college campus, education is taking all sorts of new shapes, branching out into special fields.

Sending the youngsters off to nursery school well-prepared

Sending your tots off to nursery school or kindergarten? Before you do, pay as much attention to outfitting them as you would your older children.

There are many things they'll need to be well-prepared, so don't forget to stuff their schoolbags with a selection of the following:

A collection of pencils and magic markers in bright colors; a rainbow of crayons; enough construction paper to get them started on a multitude of projects; erasers, possibly in interesting shapes or shades; non-toxic glue either in a bottle, or in the form of a convenient stick; a pair of scissors with rounded ends, so that small children unused to using them won't cut themselves instead of the paper. If your child will be toting his or her own lunch to school, a lunch box will be in order. Let your child choose the one that is most appealing, to increase pleasure in its use.

If he or she will be eating school cafeteria food, tuck a little purse into the schoolbag to hold the necessary money, and prevent it from getting lost.

Extras you might want to keep at home for use in your child's own crafts corner include clay, finger paints, a sheaf of white paper suitable for both drawing and painting, and a palette of water colors with a selection of brushes.

Rely on neatly packaged items: small packages of tissues, for example, are easier for the young child to handle. You might find that prepackaged moist towelettes will encourage children to clean their hands after eating or making a mess.

Tests Give New Challenge To Schools

PRINCIPALS MEET — Greenville City School system principals meet with superintendent Glenn Cox to discuss teacher assignments, bus routes, and food services during a five day meeting period prior to the opening of school. Cox said about 330 teachers will be employed for the coming year with approximately 200 other staff members. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

According to Pitt County Board of Education Superintendent Ott Alford, the big thrust for the coming year will be preparing county eleventh graders for the competency tests which will become valid as of this year.

"This gives us something to work with," Alford noted. "At the same time, this will cause a drastic change in high school, period."

Pitt County students are having trouble in three areas: decoding (the realization of what printed letters mean when they are put together), vocabulary and comprehension, and higher learning skills.

"These problem areas also affect students' comprehension of math problems," Alford stated. "Sometimes teachers feel that the problems are so simple that they move on by them."

After studying children's test scores on both the competency and standardized tests, the Pitt County School System has seen a developmental problem in grades four through eight.

"The further the children go gradewise, the further they fall behind," said Alford. "Also, when young people get into their teen years, peer pressure makes them do a lot of things that detracts from their studies."

Pitt County Schools face the same problem that many schools throughout the country have come to terms with— that of moving too far, too fast.

Alford has met with the school system planning team in preparation for changes in the school system retention policy.

"We're taking a whole new look at the policy," Alford said. "With a more stringent retention policy, there will probably be a greater drop out rate."

Alford noted that students who fail the competency tests may opt to stay and retake the test up until age 21.

However, Alford predicts that young people having problems may drop out early instead of being retained.

"Children who are held back two to three years may never make it to high school," he commented. "They will drop out when they reach the mandatory age of 16."

Another change for the county school system which will take place on the administrative level is the assistant superintendent of personnel position, filled by J. L. Keeter of Winterville.

Alford explained Keeter's new position, saying that the newly-created post will cause a "major shift of duties" in the office.

"Mr. Keeter will work in all aspects of personnel," Alford added. "This will add to our efficiency, since I have had to deal with personnel before."

"This ultimately will accrue benefits for the school system, for no industry can operate efficiently without a personnel officer," he continued.

One of Alford's biggest plans is increased emphasis on cultural arts, an area which has received notice for the last three years.

"Lots of teachers and parents are interested in the cultural programs," Alford stated. "Miriam Harris, our cultural arts coodinator, has done a great job in organizing the programs and bringing forth a higher quality of student effort."

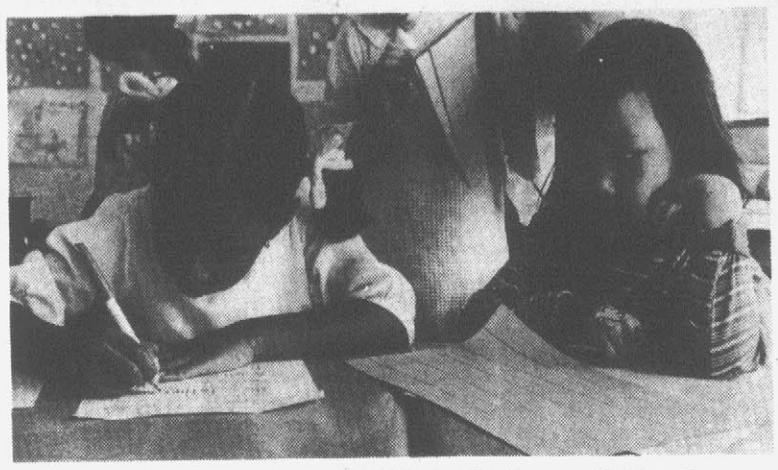

There will be a continued emphasis this year in implementing Title Nine Programs in the county schools for a better balance in male-female oriented programs.

"There have been limited athletic activities for women, though we've made great strides in the last two years," Alford stated.

"We've added volleyball and softball programs for girls this year," he continued.

Education focuses on special needs

Schools reaching out to minorities

WATCHING OTHER STUDENTS AT WORK can often be as profitable to the young pupil as the classroom assignment itself. By observing how her fellow classmates approach a given situation, she can add to her own knowledge and understand that there are many interesting and different ways to reach an end. WASHINGTON, D.C. —While school bells ring this fall for millions of American children, summoning them from city streets, leafy suburbs and far-off farms, it is still uncertain whether the tolling will be heard in the lettuce fields, among the onion rows and across America's "fruited plain."

These are where the migrant children are, most of them working in the fields two and three hours before school and about four hours after school.

And if they miss school, none but a very few persons—those especially interested in the migrant problem—get overly concerned about it.

Those who care

For a generation or more the condition of the migrant child has been the topic of writers, researchers, educators, government officials—and the migrants themselves.

While awareness of the problem has increased, along with some improvements in the status of the traveling agricultural workers, there still remains a long row to hoe before real progress can be measured in substantial terms.

There are some 800,000 migrant children in the country. According to Roy O. Fuentes, director of the National Education Association's special Migrant Education Project, 300,000 work with their parents and contribute to the family income.

While they are primarily Chicano—of Mexican and southwest Hispanic heritage—others include blacks, Asians, Puerto Ricans, West Indians and Appalachian white persons.

Computerized help

A hopeful start has been made on the problem of ignoring the previous educational experience, or health history, of the migrant child—provided that child is registered in the Migrant Student Record Transfer System (MSRTS), a computerized system with its central data bank in Little Rock, Ark.

Within four to 24 hours the school officials can get the academic and health history of registered migrant children, no matter where they travel, as well as information about what the children know, be it whole numbers, fractions, or reading levels.

When the system is used it can eliminate the past practice of constant testing and re-testing, innoculating and re-innoculating, of migrant children—when, that is, they weren't ignored altogether. More than 500,000 migrant children are reported to be registered in the system.

High dropout rate

Studies show that the dropout rate for students in the nation generally is 23 percent.

But for migrant children, that figure soars to 80 percent. They usually end their formal schooling at age 13, after achieving an average educational level of 5.3 grades.

The research also shows that most of the students leave school before graduation because they fall behind academically—and their weaknesses are particularly severe in reading and language skills.

The problem is not only compounded by their mobility, but by the conflict between their own culture and that of the dominant American society, their problems with the English language, and the discriminatory practices and negative attitudes which they encounter.

Hope for the future

In the light of this, and also because there has been a growing public awareness of the problem, a number of special programs have been established to meet migrant needs—primarily through the use of federal funds.

Some small but promising examples of what can be done under systematic application of "migrant money" provided under the Elementary and Secondary Act (ESEA), were pointed out earlier this year by the NEA in a review of migrant education efforts in the Texas Rio Grande Valley.

Equal educational opportunity is crucial to migrant farmworkers' children, if they are ever to break out of the poverty cycle in which they find themselves.

That translates to educational programs designed for the special needs of migrant children to help create choices for escaping their environment.

Flossing is the key to good dental care

It's back-to-school time for children and adults alike in the realm of dental health!

In the past few years, developments in oral hygiene and preventive dentistry have been popping up as quickly as cavities in a candy-hungry mouth. Now, it is entirely possible, using the techniques of preventive dentistry, for today's children to live an entire lifetime without every having either a toothache or a cavity, according to Dr. Stephen J. Moss, Chairman of the Department of Dentistry for Children at the New York University College of Dentistry.

Since the late 1960's, when dentists and dental scientists came to recognize that plaque, an invisible, sticky coating of germs, is the primary cause of tooth decay, many gum diseases and resultant tooth loss, preventive dentistry has gained widespread acceptance, and a whole new set of rules has been instituted for the care of teeth.

Fresh start

The first step to good dental health is clearing away a number of bad habits and misconceptions which have grown up over the years.

Most people have been taught to brush straight up and down, but that is a habit which should be broken in the interest of optimal tooth care. The up-and-down motion may cause material to be impacted underneath the gums.

Contrary to popular belief, the use of a brush alone is not sufficient in the prevention of tooth decay. Dental floss is necessary to remove decay-causing material from between the teeth where a toothbrush cannot reach. The proper use of dental floss is the most effective method of getting rid of debris and disrupting plaque between the teeth and at the gum line.

Recent clinical studies have proved that daily flossing is effective in reducing tooth decay between teeth in children, and helps eliminate gum bleeding in adults.

Today, 97 percent of dentists recommend the use of dental floss to their patients as part of a daily tooth-care routine. Johnson & Johnson offers five varieties to meet the needs and preferences of users: waxed, unwaxed, extra fine, extra-wide surface Dentotape and mint-flavored floss. Occasional use of floss is not enough.

Necessary and effective

Flossing should be done as often as brushing, at least once a day.

Flossing is necessary for the removal of odor-causing particles from between teeth, which even the most conscientious brushing may miss.

There are five important points to remember about preventive dentistry:

1) Flossing is the first step toward the removal of debris and plaque.

2) Brushing afterwards will complete the job the flossing began.

3) Use of an effective flouride toothpaste will help build resistance to tooth decay.

4) A good diet plays a significant part in the development and maintenance of sound, healthy teeth and healthy supporting structures. Frequent consumption of sweets makes teeth particularly susceptible to decay.

5) Visiting a dentist as often as he or she suggests for a checkup is a necessary adjunct to at-home tooth care.

If all of this is terribly confusing, take heart! An overwhelming majority of dentists now demonstrate to their patients the techniques of preventive dentistry. They and their hygienists help adults bridge the gap between what they have done for years and what they should be doing, and aid children to get the hang of it all.

Dental care is one area in which parents and children can learn and practice the basics together, for a lifetime of good dental health!

Never too old to learn . . .

Adults are tackling keyboard

Adults are joining kids in the annual back-to-school march, taking continuing education courses in greater numbers every year.

And piano lessons are among the most popular in the adult education repertoire. According to a recent Gallup survey, some fourteen million adult Americans regularly play the piano.

Increased leisure time is partly responsible for newfound adult interest in piano, but playing the keyboard also helps adults ease the tensions of modern living.

Piano playing is personally rewarding too, as novice adult musicians successfully meet the challenge of employing completely different skills than those used in their jobs.

"I can forget my day-to-day troubles and completely relax at the piano," explains one Midwest executive who had never played the piano before he started lessons a few years back.

Adults across the country echo his sentiments—indeed, a recent survey shows that 83 percent of all Americans wish they could play a musical instrument.

If you are one of those Americans, and you'd like to try your hands at the keyboard, don't let your age hold you back.

Age has nothing to do with an ear for music or achievement level—if your desire is there. And if you did take piano lessons as a child, chances are that your motor skills are just dormant, waiting for you to nurture them again.

For any adult who decides to take up piano, the National Piano Foundation offers some tips for musical success:

- Whether you had previous instruction or not, whether you were good at the keyboard or not, your motivation for taking piano lessons today is different than it was 30 years ago. If you want to learn to play now, you can.
- Set aside a private time for daily practice. It's important to have a piano in your home and a time and place you can call your own, if only for half an hour.
- Find a teacher who is skilled in handling novice adult pianists. Teaching adults is different from teaching children.

Your instructor should understand you are interested in a rewarding hobby, and not necessarily in learning to perform with perfection.

- Group classes may offer a good, solid beginning. Such groups can give you strong support from fellow novices. Just be sure you will have some of the instructor's individualized attention.
- Have a goal in mind. While you shouldn't expect to master a difficult sonata or a complicated jazz number right away, a good teacher can help you meet your objectives in a reasonable amount of time.
- Talk over the musical pieces you'd most like to play with your teacher.

If the individual piece is too difficult for your current skills and abilities, the instructor can suggest another, more readily mastered, piece in the same style.

New peanut butter fun

Almost every kid from three to 93 loves good old-fashioned peanut butter, whether it's spread thickly on bread with jelly for the classic "P and J" sandwich or just scooped out of the jar (by finger, if mother's not watching!).

Peanut butter is not only one of the country's most loved sandwich spreads; it also has the benefit of being a highly nutritious food, rich in protein.

Why not try some exotic new tricks with peanut butter that will delight the taste buds of students at lunch or during recess with their surprising combinations.

We've all had peanut butter and jelly sandwiches. But did you ever combine peanut butter with thinly-sliced hamburger dill pickles for a tangy new treat? Or, if you prefer your peanut butter sweetened, a peanut butter and banana sandwich is a true delicacy.

Peanut butter is the perfect topping for celery sticks, which are apt to be discarded by the lunchbox set if not "jazzed up" a bit. Peanut butter also goes well with apple slices, pears, even onions!

Community colleges open way to international study

WASHINGTON, D.C., —While continuing to stress service at the local level, community colleges are responding as well to educational needs on an international scale.

Community college people recognize, says Edmund J. Gleazer, Jr., president of the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges, that they can learn much from educational systems of other countries and at the same time contribute to educational developments abroad.

That's why the presidents of Navarro and Tarrant County Community Colleges in Texas, Brevard Community College in Florida, Florida Junior College at Jacksonville and Bunker Hill Community College in Massachusetts found themselves in conference recently with the presidents of some 100 Chinese junior colleges in Taipei, Taiwan.

They had been invited there to work out student and faculty exchanges, as well as other linkages, in technical education.

The Republic of China, with 10 huge industrial projects either a reality or on the books, was looking for ways to improve its technical education and thus help solve manpower problems.

The American community colleges were anxious to send faculty members to Taiwan for the study of Chinese history and culture—as well as the new technologies being developed.

That's only one example of the kind of international development that is being undertaken by community colleges.

Hundreds of Nigerian students are now studying at places like Lansing Community College in Michigan, Miami Dade Community College in Florida and Modesto College in California.

With assistance from the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges, hundreds of Nigerian students are completing technical education programs in community colleges, paid for by the Nigerian government.

Nigeria, like many other developing countries, has turned to the U. S. institutions for help in training people for technical work for a country that needs skilled workers, not more professionals, as it attempts to develop its industrial capacity.

NIGERIAN STUDENT Sylvester Ntull, center, receives explanations from Lansing Community College instructor L. Majors as another student looks on.

As a bonus, the Nigerian students bring an added dimension to community college life. American students get an opportunity to learn about a culture far different from their own.

Often, international education takes the form of technical advice and consultation. Charles County Community College in Maryland, which has developed an outstanding waste water technology program, helped to set up a sewage treatment program in São Paolo, Brazil.

The fifteen technical education colleges in South Carolina provide still another example of the international dimension. TEC, which lures business and industry to South Carolina by providing needed manpower education programs, hosts delegations of foreign educators from throughout the world each year.

In one of the more novel international efforts, students from Lincoln Land Community College in Springfield, Ill., formed a model United Nations delegation to visit Cuba. They were the first U. S. academic group to visit that country since travel restrictions were lifted.

Iowa's Kirkwood Community College, sometimes called the "college in the cornfield," seems an unlikely place for international activity. But the college has opened its doors to students from other countries—and they have come. Some 150 Indo-Chinese students, for example have enrolled in an intensive "English as a second language" program.

Florence Masters, head of the Kirkwood foreign language department, said the College's experience reflects a larger trend. "The international content in community college curriculums is becoming widespread," she noted.

Traditional faculty and student exchanges are also taking place between U. S. community colleges and similar institutions in other countries. Neighboring Canada has been especially active in promoting such exchanges.

Community colleges, it would appear, are rising to a challenge laid down by U. S. Commissioner of Education Ernest L. Boyer in a recent speech:

"There has been a shocking attitude in higher education that it was somehow 'illegitimate' for our two-year institutions to concern themselves with international education . . . I reject absolutely such nonsense.

"Indeed, I'm convinced that the two-year colleges not only have a right to establish international linkages—they should lead the way."

College survival kit helps every freshman

If there's one thing that all students going off to college for the first year have in common, it's probably that age-old fear of the unknown.

How will it compare with high school? Will I be able to do all the work? How will my grades be? Will I have to study all of the time?

Now there's relief at hand for all anxious freshmen in the form of a College Survival Kit, an all-inclusive manual about college ways and means.

The College Survival Manual was compiled by Irv Brechner during his senior year of college at the request of friends and fellow students who marvelled at his ability to excel in his academic work while keeping up an active and varied extracurricular schedule.

The proper use of time is the theme which runs throughout the booklet, for as Mr. Brechner states, "the difficulty of the work is not the problem. The proper use of time is the main obstacle which causes the collapse of many students."

There are no regulated study halls, no daily assignments, no supervising parental figures at college to monitor a student's progress. College provides the student with complete freedom of time—freedom that can be used for highly creative purposes.

The College Survival Kit gives dozens of hints for getting off to a good start, provides proven study techniques successful exam-taking methods, pointers on paper writing, and much more.

If you're headed off for your first year of college and worried about what it will be like, the College Survival Kit is available from Mr. Brechner for $3.00 per manual. The address is COLLEGE SURVIVAL KIT, Dept. M, Box 264WOB, West Orange, NJ 07052.

Dormitory hot plate cooks will love versatile tri-pan

Rejoice, all ye dorm-dwellers who cope with one-burner cooking! The tri-pan is here—a three-sectioned, non-stick skillet that makes it possible to cook or heat several different foods at once.

Day or night favorite

This paragon of pans, made in France by T-Fal, is a boon at breakfast-time (bacon, eggs, hash browns all hot at the same time). It's great, too, for late-night snacks and impromptu parties.

Never a mess

Biggest boon of all is that patented super-slick interior featuring 100 percent pure PTFE. No soaking, no scrubbing, no mess—ever! One swish of a soapy cloth does it.

Triple the fun!

Impress your friends with a tri-pan party—and the following foods dear to every student's heart:

PIZZA DIP

(Makes about 2 cups)

- 1 can (8 ounces) tomato sauce
- 1 tablespoon instant minced onion
- ¼ teaspoon oregano
- ½ cup chopped stuffed olives
- 1 can (4 ½ ounces) deviled ham

Spoon mixture into one section of T-Fal non-stick tri-pan. Heat until bubbly. Serve with taco chips and potato chips for dipping.

COCKTAIL FRANKS IN BEER

(Serves 4)

- 1 pound cocktail franks
- 1 tablespoon instant minced onion
- Beer

Place franks and onion in one section of T-Fal non-stick tri-pan. Add beer to fill compartment. Heat until bubbly. Spear franks with toothpicks.

GARLIC NUTS

(Serves 4)

- ½ pound mixed salted nuts
- ¼ teaspoon garlic powder
- ¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese

Mix ingredients and spoon into section of T-Fal non-stick tri-pan. Stir gently with wooden or plastic spoon over medium heat until nuts are hot.

Interested in science? Discover enzymology!

Do you know what makes a firefly light up? Or how meat tenderizer works? How does a doctor determine if one of his patients has had a heart attack? What is it that a plumber uses to help unclog a drain, and what puts the clear sparkle in a good brew of beer?

Nature's catalysts

These are not a series of interesting trivia questions, but rather examples of the vast range of substances dependent upon one important biochemical group, for the answer to all of the above is enzymes.

In all organic material, enzymes are the substances which make chemical reactions take place. There are literally millions of enzymes— each one a chemical catalyst designed to trigger a specific reaction. Consequently, there are countless opportunities for careers in the different facets of enzymology available to science students looking for an exciting future.

All-encompassing field

Enzyme research penetrates almost every field of science, from medicine to food preparation to industrial chemistry. In fact, the current developments being made in the use of solar energy involve intensive enzyme research.

Dr. E. Kendall Pye, Associate Professor of Biochemistry and Biophysics at the University of Pennsylvania, is currently working on the development of combustible fuel made from cellulose, the basic "skeleton" of all plant matter.

This fuel would be produced by enzymes breaking down cellulose into an energy-rich sugar called glucose, which can then be converted through fermentation into alcohol fuels such as ethynol and methynol—which can run a car.

Sound complicated? That's part of the challenge and the excitement of enzyme research. And, as for its rewards, if this experiment can be put into mass production, the results will be spectacular.

Says Dr. Pye, "Of all the cellulose produced in one year on this Earth, we would need only 10 percent of that to produce all of the food and fuel for the Earth's population."

It's never too early for science students to get started with enzyme study, and special projects and experiments can be conducted in the school laboratory with the teacher's permission that will demonstrate, for example, how enzymes work in cheese production, how they convert protein to amino acids, and how enzyme addition benefits laundry aids.

Enthusiastic researcher

Joseph Mullaney, a high school student from St. Mary's, Pennsylvania, is one science lover who can vouch for the fun and fulfillment there are to be found in enzyme research.

Joseph began to experiment on the production of liquid fuels from biomass, and as part of his research he wrote to Dr. Pye requesting guidance. Dr. Pye was extremely helpful to Joseph and supportive of his project, which later won second place in his regional Science Fair, where he competed with science students from all over north-western Pennsylvania and New York State.

Joseph was, of course, quite justifiably proud of his award. But, above all, Joseph learned a lesson that can serve as an inspiration and guideline for all young science students.

Vital careers

In his own words: "Of course I was happy to win, but more important than that I learned a lot concerning the scientific method of approach. I hope someday I will follow a career in this field and help develop new research for the technology of mankind."

Good luck to you, Joseph Mullaney, and here's to all the very important future enzymologists across the country. It's a career whose basis we literally can't live without.

Children recognize beauty of a personal, 'living' gift

By GRACE M. STANISTREET

A letter came for me today, "me" being a teacher of many years—and many children. It was from Chris, a teenage boy who had once been a student of mine.

Letters of affection and appreciation do not come easily to most of us at any age. Is it any wonder, then, that I felt glad and at the same time very humble to receive this long, lovely letter? It made me remember the many times that I have felt humble before youth.

Children have the art of giving what I call "living gifts." You ask, "What do you mean by living gifts? Do you mean loving gifts?" No, I mean living gifts.

"Oh, then," you say, "you mean something alive or something that sustains life, like a gift to a cause?" These are living gifts, yes, but not the ones I'm talking about. I mean a gift that has cost someone time, effort and thought.

I am reminded of a friend who is eighty years old. She recalls that as a child she had bought something for her mother. She had sacrificed some of her weekly allowance to save for this particular gift, and she was so very proud to present it. When the package was opened the mother said, not unkindly but without really thinking, "What did you spend your money for that for?"

Seventy years have passed and the memory of that hurt is still there. It takes a special awareness to recognize a living gift.

An American woman living in Mexico invited two friends to her home for a birthday. She lived some distance out of town. One of the friends, also an American, was driving to the party when she saw a woman with a heavy pack on her back walking in the same direction. It was a very hot day and the woman in the car thought, "I wish I could give that woman a lift," but the highway was separated from the walkway and she couldn't stop.

Sometime after the woman in the car had arrived at her friend's house, the woman with the pack also arrived. She was an artist, a potter, and she had brought several pieces of her work so that her friend might choose the one she liked best.

When it came time to leave, the American with the car begged to drive her home. But the Mexican artist said in her halting English, "Thank you, but, the walk is part of the gift."

I mentioned to a friend that I was taking a trip by car to parts unknown. She said, "Oh, the AAA comes in handy for that." I said, "We gave up AAA sometime back, but we do miss it on occasions like this."

Three days later my friend came to the house with guide books and a tour mapped out in a Triptik from AAA—a living gift!

When you have received a package from the other side of the continent, or just a hundred miles away, have you ever thought about the time and effort that person put into its mailing?

First, a box of the right size must be found, then papers for the inside and outside, then the tape or string to fasten it. The address must be looked up (was it apartment 3F or 3E and what is the zip code?), and a pen found to write it all down.

Now to the post office. It's closed. Oh well, tomorrow. Tomorrow and the car has a flat. At last the post office, where there's a long line and you must get to an appointment. The line moves slowly, but finally the window comes into view. The stamp is put on the package, and then—only then—is it on its way. Surely the "walk" was part of that gift.

I am reminded of a box of blue, the loveliest living gift I ever received. It came from a little girl, very little, who knew that I loved the color blue. On my birthday she stood before me, hands behind her back. "You'll never guess my present," and then with a rush she said breathlessly, "It's a box of blue."

She brought it out and placed in proudly in my hands. It was wrapped in blue paper, a bit wrinkled, and tied with a lopsided bow of blue ribbon. "Open it!"

I did, and inside I found: a blue crayon, a bit of blue ribbon, a piece of blue glass, a paper butterfly painted blue, a scrap of blue cotton and a flower, dead, but blue!

Organize your morning routine for a brighter start to each day!

If morning "rush hour" in your home is hectic, it may be time to reorganize and streamline your family's routine.

A bit of planning will get every family member off to a better start and leave the kitchen tidy, too. Here are some suggestions:

The breakfast table can easily be set the night before, ready for the A.M. rush. Since everyone is on a time schedule, assemble quick breakfast foods such as fruit, cereal, and toasted bread or rolls on a countertop and let each person take his own.

This system is easier on mom who then only has to prepare the foods that need cooking—hot cereal, bacon and eggs, and pancakes.

After breakfast clean-ups needn't hamper anyone's hurried routine. For quick and easy on-the-spot cleaning use Grease Relief® degreaser. Just spray it on all areas of the stove—range top, hood, burners—and other soiled and greasy surfaces and wipe with a damp sponge or paper towel.

A good part of the morning chaos can be eliminated by doing as much as possible the night before.

Have your children select and lay out their school clothes for the next day; homework assignments should be completed and school books neatly stacked to avoid frantic last-minute searches.

Early morning traffic jams in the bathroom can be avoided by posting a time schedule. Staggering everyone's wake-up and allotted bathroom time will avoid conflicts and still get each family member out of the house on time.

Good dental care for children starts with good home training

Just before school begins, there's a whirl of activity. Shopping excursions are combined with trips to the doctor and the dentist, at which point many children become uneasy.

Wise parents will make an effort to ease their children's minds, and calm their irrational and unnecessary fears.

The need for some reassurance beforehand is likely to be particularly strong if this is the child's first visit. The American Dental Association has some excellent and most practical tips for parents to make use of prior to taking their children to the dentist those crucial first few times.

A good deal of the child's anxiety stems from fear of the unknown. The best way to conquer this is to prepare the child beforehand. Telling the child exactly what is involved clears the air, and allows the child to think about the situation for a while, bringing up any questions as they occur.

With toddlers particularly, the best way to make them comfortable about the upcoming visit is to act it out first, in a play situation. Play "dentist" with your child, reversing roles if the child desires, or help your child to play "dentist" with a favorite doll or stuffed animal.

Make sure your child knows that you will be there during the session at the dentist's, for that knowledge will be the greatest comfort of all.

If the dentist discovers cavities, your child in all likelihood will have to be prepared for the unfamiliar experience of the drill. Explain to your child exactly what is going to happen to allay his or her anxieties.

Another way of reassuring children in this situation is to make them feel that they are a part of the process. Some children like to use a hand-held mirror to watch the dentist at work.

Choosing a dentist is particularly important. You may decide to use your family dentist, or you may opt for a practitioner who specializes in work with children. In either case, don't be afraid to ask the dentist you have chosen any questions that may occur to you before the visit.

Of course, dental care is not something that takes place only in a dentist's office. Dentists themselves agree that the most important part of tooth care goes on in the home. Your dentist or hygienist will be glad to help you learn the proper way of cleaning teeth, so you can teach your children in turn.

Proper brushing is the key to healthy teeth, so help your children to use a toothbrush, which at first will seem rather unwieldy in such small hands. Also, encourage your children to learn to use dental floss, and show them the proper method for doing so.

Your dentist can tell you a great deal about food, and give you guidelines as to what is good for teeth and what is not.

Teaching your children good eating habits early will help them to establish a diet regimen that will stand them in good stead for years to come. For free booklets about teeth and dental care, write to the American Dental Association, Dept. M, 211 East Chicago Ave., Chicago, Ill. 60611.

What's your vitamin I.Q.? Test it, for health's sake!

Now that school is in session, it's a good time for youngsters and parents alike to take a refresher course on the ABC's of good nutrition.

What is your "Vitamin I.Q.?" Why not sit down with the rest of your family and take this mini-quiz as a start towards finding out how much you know about the essential micronutrients—and how much you might need to learn!

Circle the correct answer to each of the following questions:

1). In government and university surveys, what percentage of Americans has been repeatedly shown to be deficient in their intake of such vital nutrients as Vitamins C, A, B_1, B_2, Folic Acid, Iron and Calcium? a.) less than 20% b.) 20-50% c.) more than 50%

2). Which of the following common things is not known to interfere significantly with the absorption and utilization of one or more essential vitamins? a.) overweight b.) smoking c.) chronic alcohol consumption d.) the Pill

3). Which of the following is not a good dietary source of iron? a.) liver b.) eggs c.) milk d.) whole grain cereal

4). Which of the following is not known to have any toxic effects associated with very large doses? a.) A b.) B_{12} c.) C d.) D e.) Iron

5). Which of the following is not truly a vitamin (that is to say, which is not a micronutrient proven essential to life)? a.) B_6 b.) Biotin c.) B_{15} d.) Folic Acid

6). What are USRDA's of vitamins and minerals? a.) the minimum daily requirements b.) the maximum dosages you can safely take without a prescription c.) standards for food and vitamin labeling based on the average intakes of healthy Americans

7). Which of the following is essential to help the body use calcium and phosphorus properly, for strong teeth and bones? a.) A b.) B_2 c.) C d.) D e.) E

The correct answers are: 1)b; 2)a; 3)c; 4)b; 5)c; 6)c; 7)d.

If you answered all but one or two of these questions correctly, you are relatively nutrition-conscious, and probably maintain a fairly well-balanced diet. Keep up the good work!

YOUNGSTERS AND PARENTS ALIKE can benefit from a good lesson on the ABC's of nutrition. For all the answers to your questions on the essential micronutrients, the authoritative Vitamin-Mineral Reference Wheel is a handy teaching and learning aid as well as a reliable nutrition reference source. And, for a further aid to better understanding of vitamins and minerals and how they function in the body, the attractive full-color wall chart, "Vitamins and Minerals in Your Body," will serve as a constant reminder of good nutrition for the entire family. Both the Vitamin-Mineral Reference Wheel and the wall chart are available from the Vitamin Information Bureau for just $5.00, c/o The Vitamin Information Bureau, News Dept., 664 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago IL 60611.

If you missed three, you may want to improve your knowledge of the basics.

And, if you missed more than half the questions, it is definitely time to get more facts about the role micronutrients play in good nutrition and general health.

All of these important questions, plus countless others, are answered succinctly and factually on the ingenious Vitamin-Mineral Reference Wheel, a unique device made available from the Vitamin Information Bureau in an effort to help everyone know the ABC's of good nutrition.

This attractively designed, plasticized teaching/learning aid is intended to serve as a handy, reliable nutrition reference source for both families and professionals. It can be hung conveniently in your kitchen, for example, from its attached 12" chain.

Also available from the Bureau as a further aid to good family nutrition is a large, full color wall chart, "Vitamins and Minerals in Your Body," that will serve as a constant reminder of which foods best provide which elements and what role each plays in the body, along with all the current USRDA's.

The chart is available for $3.00, and the authoritative Reference Wheel for $3.95, from the Vitamin Information Bureau.

You can really start towards better nutritional habits by ordering both the wheel and the chart for the special price of $5.00.

Whether you send for both or only one, if you address your envelope to the attention of the News Dept., the VIB will include free the 16-page booklet, "Vitamins and Your Health," and a seven-day diary/checklist entitled "How Do You Score on Nutrition?" for recording your selections of food for their micronutrient and protein values.

The address is: The Vitamin Information Bureau, 664 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, IL 60611.

Career education: one answer to a dilemma

By BRIAN A. BROWN

Where am I going: What kinds of jobs are there? To whom can I turn to learn about locating them?

These are some of the questions junior and senior high school students ask when they begin to think about their futures. At that point in their development they need guidance to reach some basic decisions about their lives.

An interest sparked in a particular career could set them on the right track to choose intelligently the course they need for career preparation.

One of the main problems with youths in this age bracket is their limited knowledge of vocations, apathy toward school, and lack of participation in the classroom.

Concurrent with that road-block to learning, teachers cannot prepare them with the basics and also provide career interests.

To supplement career guidance, the Exploring Division of the Boy Scouts of America, Greater New York Councils, developed a program called "Career Education Exploring." Through this project, students in New York City are exposed to a wide variety of job opportunities.

The program provides a better understanding of a future in a technical or professional career area. It also motivates youths to explore career possibilities, while giving them the opportunity for out-of-class learning experiences, which are an integral part of the career match-up.

Kathy Koffer, a Boy Scout Exploring Executive, developed the program three years ago. She succeeded in bringing the program to 14 schools and 800 students.

The project was so fruitful that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare's Emergency School Aid Act funded a proposal that Ms. Koffer and a Scouting director submitted to increase the number of youths they could service.

The program allows a professional to match his expertise with students who are interested in his profession, even though they may not want to attend college, are physically handicapped, or have a slight learning disability.

Career sessions, held twice monthly during school hours, are coordinated with a different speaker who is a business professional, manager, or entreprenuer.

The program thus far has been hailed as a vehicle for reducing vocational stereotyping, increasing attendance through greater student interest, and providing positive role models for the students. And for gifted youths, it is the catalyst that can set career aspirations on target.

The scope of career sessions is broad and constantly expanding. Many corporations are involved, including American Airlines, Black Enterprise Magazine, the Bronx and Brooklyn Attorney's Office, CBS, Celanese Corp., Coast Guard, Consolidated Edison, and the New York Transit Authority, to mention a few of the companies that support the project with manpower and donations.

What does one teacher, used to dealing with apathetic students, say about the Career Education program? "This is the first thing in a long time that they've really been interested in. They've never been exposed to anything like this before.

"It took me months to get them off the backs of buses and the streets . . . But they're overcoming their background, though it took a lot of doing."

New Museum Brightens East For Children

AURORA — School children in eastern North Carolina can now captilize on visits to North Carolina's newest museum — a museum that features unique geologic events of the past in coastal North Carolina. At the museum, visitors can learn about a variety of topics from photosynthesis to the unusual creation of coastal rivers and the communications of humpback whales.

The museum is located in the small coastal community of Aurora in Beaufort County. The site itself sits firmly atop one of the world's largest and most valuable deposits of phosphate, a vital material in fertilizer. The accumulation and concentration of phosphate under coastal North Carolina was formed some 15 million years ago.

Phosphate mining in Beaufort County by Texasgulf, Inc., has unearthed what scientists at the Smithsonian Institution term "one of the single most significant contributions ever in the knowledge of coastal plain paleontology."

Major Fossils

The major fossils on display at the museum were donated by Pete Harmatuk of Bridgeton — a small town just across the Neuse River from New Bern. Harmatuk, an avid amateur fossil collector, works with the Smithsonian team which has been studying the Beaufort County deposit for more than ten years and will soon publish two volumes on the area.

The fossils have many stories to tell. One large whale vertebra tells of ancient pain. It's encrusted with more than an inch of arthritic growth. Another section of whale bone shows the results of an ancient shark attack, as vicious then as now.

Crowd Pleaser

A big crowd pleaser at the museum is a four by five foot reproduction of the jaw, complete with teeth, of one of the greatest flesh eaters of all time, the Great White Shark.

This monster, ancestor to the modern great white of movie fame, grew to 50-55 feet lengths with seemingly endless rows of six-inch teeth, is recreated at the museum. With this to spark interest in the teeth, the museum also provides abundant mine reject material loaded with sharks' teeth and fossils.

Enthusiasts can sift through this material and take away whatever they find.

Huge Murals

The real feature of the museum is the artwork which brings fossils to life. Two huge murals — one eight feet by 24 feet — were created for the museum by Whiting Toler, with assistance from the Smithsonian and geologists at East Carolina University.

They depict life represented by the fossils in their natural habitat. One shows life five million years ago over Beaufort County when the ocean waters ended near Raleigh. This was the domain of great whales and the Great White Shark.

The other mural depicts Miocene Beaufort County 15 million years ago and is the first visual representation to combine the various theories describing the unique time when phosphate was accumulating under what is Beaufort County today.

To Entertain, Inform

"Our purpose was to use the fossils to entertain and to inform," Rusty Walker, Communications Director of North Carolina Phosphate Corporation, and one of the museum's organizers, explained.

"The geologic history of this area is unique. With the environmental movement now current, we are beginning to appreciate just how unique modern Beaufort County and coastal North Carolina is," he added.

"Our 15-foot photographic montage of the Pamlico River and erosion is just one of many evolving displays we hope to use to show this," Walker said

The museum is a joint project involving the Town of Aurora with Texasgulf, Inc., North Carolina Phosphate Corporation, and others.

It is open Wednesday through Sunday from noon until 7 p.m. in downtown Aurora.

Some recycling knowledge can pay your way through college!

As the cost of a college education soars ever higher, many of today's students face a double burden of keeping up with their studies while earning enough to stay in school.

Why not consider going into business for yourself with a worthwhile income and hours you set yourself?

How? By recycling the used corrugated boxes discarded every day by stores and factories in your town.

The only equipment needed for recycling is a willingness to work and a van or pick-up truck—even a station wagon will do.

The first step in getting started is to call a local waste paper dealer who will buy the boxes you collect. Waste paper dealers, listed in the phone book under "Waste Paper," will tell you how much they pay for used boxes. Call several dealers to obtain the best price.

Once a firm price is established, all you have to do is start collecting boxes.

The most obvious targets are supermarkets, furniture stores, liquor stores, convenience stores—any place that receives a large volume of products packaged in boxes.

One young recycler in St. Paul started a collection route after school, and was able to average $200 per month. Today, he recycles boxes as a full time job, and the company he started grosses more than $150,000 a year. Other part-time recyclers typically earn between $20 and $75 a week.

Complete information on how to start recycling used corrugated boxes, as well as other types of waste paper, is available free by writing to: Manager, Paper Stock Conservation Committee, American Paper Institute, Dept. MS, 260 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10016.

School photos: investment in future memories for all

Along with concerts, plays, and "meet the teacher night," photography day rates as an important event on the school calendar. This is the time when students all across the country sit for their individual and class group photos.

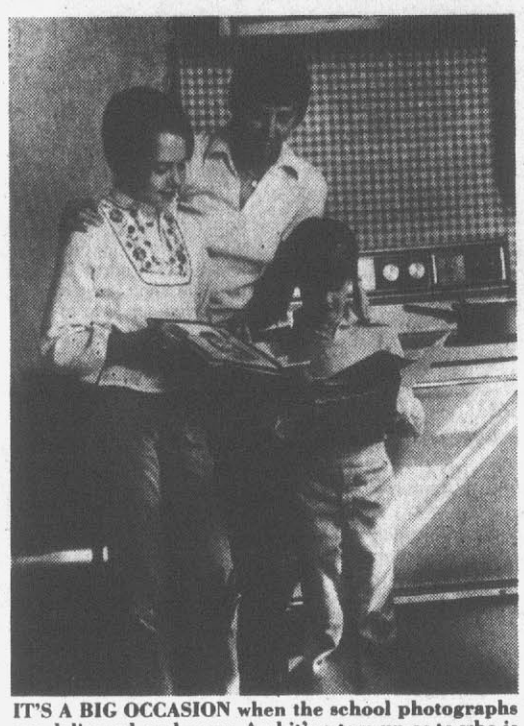

And it's little wonder school photography day has been part of our American tradition since the early 1900s. The photos are an investment in future memories—memories that parents and children, alike, will want to preserve in quality color prints on Kodak paper.

Of the estimated 32 million school children who will be photographed this year, nearly 75 percent will have these professional pictures made sometime during the first months of school. And the packet of prints will be returned in time for holiday giving to parents and other relatives.

Most photo packets contain several wallet size prints ideal for the children to swap with new friends. Often the school is supplied with one of these small photos for use in school records or local publicity of student achievements.

School photos today are invariably bright, colorful prints showing the child in a head-and-shoulder view or three-quarter pose. Scenic backdrops and appropriate props are often used to create a relaxed, natural setting for the photo.

To be sure your child will look his or her best, Kodak experts suggest bright-colored, wrinkle-free clothing for this important date with the camera. Hair should be recently trimmed and neatly combed away from the face.

IT'S A BIG OCCASION when the school photographs are delivered each year. And it's a toss-up as to who is more excited—Mom or children—about these colorful pictures that capture the meaningful moments of student days.

Formidable companion!

MARY HAD A LITTLE LAMB that followed her to school but today's kids prefer a more ferocious companion such as the occupant of the Buddy L Brute Shark Tank Trailer. Sturdy steel and high impact plastic construction assures the "shark" won't escape. The water-tight see-through tank may be filled with water by removing the swallow-proof top hatch. There's a Buddy L toy to suit every youngster's taste and they are all made to meet or exceed all government safety requirements.

Top grade sounds for a student's relaxation

The beginning of a new school year brings with it new books to read, new lessons to be learned, new subjects to be studied and, with more time spent indoors, a renewed interest in listening to music for many students.

This year give your favorite student the gift that truly keeps on giving—the gift of music. And, for a choice that will get straight A's in sound, style and price, the nationwide Radio Shack store chain suggests you consider a stereo compact music system.

Space-saving stereo compacts provide quality sound and an attractive appearance with virtually any combination of music sources you want, including records, radio and tape. The separate, matching speaker systems supplied with a compact can be positioned for the best sound in any room.

Prices for stereo compacts, such as those sold by Radio Shack under their nationally known Realistic brand name, range from under $100, to $350 for their top-of-the-line Clarinette-101 "everything" compact. The Clarinette-101 Features a 3-speed record changer, AM/FM stereo receiver and both 8-track and cassette recorder/players built-in.

Toward the other end of the scale is the Clarinette-15, a quality 2-speed stereo turntable with dust cover and speaker systems. The Clarinette-15 also has tape input jacks for later addition of a tape deck, if desired.

Regardless of the use to which the compact will be put—background music for relaxation or disco music for parties—there is a stereo compact that's just right from your neighborhood Radio Shack store.

Versatile kids' rooms for study, play, sleep

The start of a new school year means it's time for your children to "buckle down" into organized routines.

Subdivide

This year, help make the adjustment period easier on your youngsters by setting up study, play and sleep areas in their rooms.

Clearing away the clutter and organizing the space can be a mutual parent/child effort. Not only will you both know where everything is, but your youngster will be more inclined to keep his room neat and orderly, if he's had a hand in decorating and arranging it.

Children are rough on furniture and do outgrow the decor every few years. However, accommodating your youngster's changing needs doesn't mean you must spend a small fortune on furnishings.

Simple to clean

Choose durable, easy-care materials such as plastic laminates and sealed or painted wood. Furniture made from these materials tends to be less expensive and can be cleaned easily with Fantastik® spray cleaner. Just spray it on washable surfaces and wipe with a clean cloth or damp sponge.

Lightweight plastic bins or baskets make perfect containers for toys, games and school materials.

Storage boxes can even be empty grocery cartons, decorated with construction paper and paint; they can be color-coordinated to categorize their contents—one for play and one for schoolwork.

Easy studying

A comfortable study space will have a positive effect on your youngster's work habits. Make the most of the space available and keep most-used materials in easy-to-reach places.

Pens, pencils, rulers, erasers and paper can be put in desk drawers or on table tops in colorful holders. School books can be kept on shelves or bookcases over or beside the desk.

Accessorize!

A small bulletin board is a handy accessory for posting upcoming after-school activity schedules.

An un-made bed can make the entire bedroom look messy. Have your youngsters use an attractive quilt instead of a blanket and bedspread; each morning, quilts can simply be smoothed out and pillows fluffed up.

Be sure there's a night table nearby with a lamp and a small alarm clock to help ring in the new day.

Homage Paid To Noted Composer: Steve And Eydie Celebrate Berlin

SOMETHING TO CELEBRATE--Steve Lawrence and Eydie Gorme will be joined by a number of guest stars, including Carol Burnett (l) when "Steve and Eydie Celebrate Irving Berlin," on Tuesday, Aug. 22, (9:30-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Jerome Kern once said: "Irving Berlin has no place in American music. — He is American music."

Someone, also, once said that every 30 seconds, somebody, somewhere is singing an Irving Berlin song.

Steve Lawrence and Eydie Gorme will be just that when "Steve and Eydie Celebrate Irving Berlin," Tuesday, August 22, 9:30 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV.

Helping them celebrate will be guest stars Leslie Browne, Carol Burnett, Sammy Davis, Jr., and Oscar Peterson.

Following are some of the songs that will be heard, and some facts of interest regarding them:

"There's No Business Like Show Business" (1945)— Berlin wrote this song to fill some time during a scenery change in "Annie Get Your Gun." The song almost was left out because Berlin wrongly thought that Oscar Hammerstein II didn't care for it. The song went on to become the unofficial show biz anthem.

"Be Careful, It's My Heart" (1942) — From the movie "Holiday Inn," with Bing Crosby and Fred Astaire. Said musical director Walter Scharf: "We thought this song was going to be the big hit, but a few days after he had given me the song, he came up with another one. It seemed nice enough but no one thought it would be much else." The song: "White Christmas."

"White Christmas" (1942) — Bing Crosby sang it on a radio program in conjunction with the film, "Holiday Inn," which introduced the song in 1942. Berlin knew the song would be a hit, even though others didn't. "White Christmas" became a motion picture in 1954, with Crosby, Danny Kaye and Rosemary Clooney. (Astaire had to withdraw because of illness.)

"Check to Cheek" (1935) — From the film, "Top Hat," starring Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers. The film was a success wherever it played — except at its sneak preview in Santa Barbara, Calif. It was the wrong audience. Other audiences loved it.

CBS Broadcasts Poll

Analysis of a poll conducted by CBS News shows there is deep and widespread worry that education in American public schools has not only not improved, but has declined perceptibly.

The poll will be an integral part of the three-part special, "Is Anyone Out There Learning?: A CBS News Report Card on American Public Education," to be broadcast Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, August 22, 23 and 24 (8 to 9 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

Forty-one percent of those polled said education today is worse than the education they received, a figure that rises among urban dwellers (49 percent) and those over age 65 (46 percent). While 35 percent overall said education today is better, more than half of the blacks polled said it had improved.

Societal changes clearly had their effect. Racial integration of schools received mixed reviews as to its effect, but busing was seen as deleterious by 50 percent of the sample, a figure that shrinks to 27 percent among blacks.

CBS News Correspondent Walter Cronkite (l) is the anchor of a three-part report, "Is Anyone Out There Learning?: A Report Card on Public Education," with Correspondent Charles Collingwood as field correspondent. The series will be telecast on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Aug. 22, 23, 24 (8-9 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Entertainment, Inspiration

From beautiful Nashville, the heart of country music, Oral Roberts brings his one-hour special "Oral Roberts...In the Key of Country," airing Saturday, August 26, at 8 p.m., on Channel 6. Designed to set your toe tapping, your heart smiling, and your spirit soaring, it's an hour of entertainment and inspiration in the key of country.

Special guests Mel Tillis and Minnie Pearl join regulars Richard Roberts and the World Action Singers with Ronn Huff's orchestra to provide musical highlights. The fast paced special ranges from humorous to reverent...from entertaining to edifying.

Oral Roberts' message for the hour is entitled, "The Three Greatest Moves of Your Life," a provocative message with a fishing story.

In the program, set in the famous Opryland Park and Theater, Roberts proves once again that inspiration and entertainment do mix. Adopting television's own standards of dazzling sets and sophisticated sounds, Roberts has blended in his incompromised gospel message with such skill that the total effect is a palatable package entirely suitable for prime-time TV, but which still serves Roberts' end purpose of getting out the good word.

'Animals' Features Frogs

Hal Linden, star of ABC-TV's young people's magazine series, "Animals Animals Animals," explores the world of the frog in art, history, legend and literature in the program airing Sunday, August 20, 11:30 to 11:55 a.m.

'Animals' goes to Arizona State University to talk with Jack Fouquette, who studies the sounds made by the frog and its terrestrial cousin, the toad. "The main function of the call of the frogs and toads," says Fouquette, "is to bring the males and females together. The males are the only ones that call. The females are attracted to this call and they home in on a given male of their choice and the two mate. The call will attract a female only of the same species as the male, so that it keeps the species spearated."

The program also visits Calaveras County, California, for the Jumping Frog Jubilee, an annual event immortalized in a short story by Mark Twain.

A classic fable about a big frog in a small pond that grew too big comes to life in colorful animation. Hal Linden goes to Silver Springs, Florida, and to a nature center in Los Angeles to observe various kinds of frogs and toads.

She's Learning How

Elisabeth Brooks auditioned for the role of a nightclub singer on NBC-TV's "Days of Our Lives," and won the part, yet the audition was the first time she ever sang professionally.

"And now I'm taking singing lessons," says the talented actress, who has a regular role on the Emmy-winning daytime drama.

"The show was looking for an actress who could sing and play the guitar," says Elisabeth. "They didn't want a polished singer either. I sang for the head writer, Ann Marcus, and Wes Kenney, the co-executive producer, and they liked me. I play Theresa, a girl who used to sing with a rock group, made some albums then became an alcoholic. She's on her way back up and is hired to sing in Doug's (Bill Hayes) Place."

Elisabeth has been an actress and as a hobby, a song writer. "I've written about 25 songs, mostly country, and even sang one of my own songs, 'Sleepy Time Baby,' when I auditioned for the show.

"In fact I've never really learned anybody's music but my own until I started singing on 'Days.' Since I went on the show I've performed songs like 'I'll Have to Say I Love You In a Song,' 'I Write the Songs' and 'Don't Let the Sun Catch You Crying.'".

Elisabeth is now taking singing lessons from Ron Anderson, a Hollywood vocal coach.

"In just a short time my range has been enlarged a full octave and I'm more in the soprano range than that of an alto.

"I've made demos on some of my songs and I still play guitar and sing at home. Someday I'd like to be a success as a songwriter. I know the songs are good."

Eastwood In 'Joe Kid'

Clint Eastwood stars as a loner who makes his own rules, caught between two deadly forces in a bitter Mexican-American range war in "Joe Kidd," an explosive western adventure airing as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," August 20, 9 to 11 p.m., on ABC-TV.

Robert Duvall, who will star in the title role in "Ike," the six-hour TV drama about Dwight D. Eisenhower's war years, also stars in "Joe Kidd" as a ruthless land baron who has stolen his massive holdings from the original Mexican settlers of New Mexico. Kevin Thomas in the L.A. Times said, "As strong as Eastwood and John Saxon are, it is Robert Duvall who captures the imagination," and the San Francisco Chronicles's critic called Duvall "one of the screen's most talented actors."

John Saxon plays Luis Chama, a bad man using the wrong means to fight for a good cause, and Stella Garcia is Helen Sanchez, a beautiful woman he dominates and deserts.

Frank Harlan (Duvall) and a sheriff's posse go after Chama after the Mexican-American leader raids the town of Sinola and burns the forged deeds that have taken land from his people. Joe Kidd at first refuses to join the posse, but when he discovers that Chama has also ransacked his homestead and cruelly injured his ranch hand, Kidd accepts a gunfighter's fee of $1,000 and joins the chase.

Placing Helen Sanchez under his personal protection, Kidd rides with Harlan's hired killers until he discovers that they are even more brutal than Chama's men. With no clear-cut right evident on either side, Kidd fights a lone battle to protect Helen and the innocent villagers who have becomes hostages, a fight that leads him to drive a locomotive off the tracks and into the town's saloon for a final deadly shootout.

FIGHT FOR LAND–Stella Garcia portrays a Mexican-American woman and Clint Eastwood stars as a landowner who joins forces with the Mexican-Americans when a range war breaks out over valuable territory at the turn of the century in "Joe Kidd," airing as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," Aug. 20 (9-11 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Vereen On Stage

The versatile Ben Vereen, singer, dancer, actor and mime, takes center stage for a dazzling "Evening at Pops" Sunday, August 20, at 8 p.m. on PBS.

Vereen sings "I'll Play for You" by Seals and Crofts, dances the "Good Time Ladies Rag," and sails into a "Career Medley," drawing on his Broadway roles in "Pippin," "Hair," and "Jesus Christ Superstar." Finally, he launches into a moving tribute to Bert Williams, the great Ziegfeld Follies star.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra round out the evening with an assortment of classics in the Pops tradition, including Schubert's "March Militare," Humperdink's Overture to "Hansel and Gretel," the Waltz from "Eugene Onegin" by Tchaikovsky, and selections from Richard Rodgers' "Sound of Music."

Vereen's interest in the performing arts began in junior high school.

Homosexual Struggles

Brad Dourif, Academy Award nominee in 1975, stars as an Air Force sergeant who fights to stay in the service after declaring his homosexuality, in "Sergeant Matlovich vs. the U.S. Air Force," an NBC World Premiere movie suggested by an actual incident. It will air Monday, August 21, 9 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV.

Dourif was nominated for an Oscar as Best Supporting Actor of "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," in which he played the boyish stutterer.

Matlovich, a decorated Vietnam veteran, faces a court martial after his declaration. The Air Force maintains that he be discharged because his homosexuality violates regulations. But his attorney maintains that the regulation is unconstitutional.

Matlovich fights to stay in the service, saying it is his life and that his homosexualtiy would not adversely affect his performance.

The drama was filmed on location in Southern California.

DEFENSE STRATEGY–Brad Dourif stars as an Air Force sergeant who declares his homosexuality and then challenges the service's attempt to expel him, in "Sgt. Matlovich vs. the U.S. Air Force," on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies" Aug. 21 (9-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV. Barra Grant play his attorney.

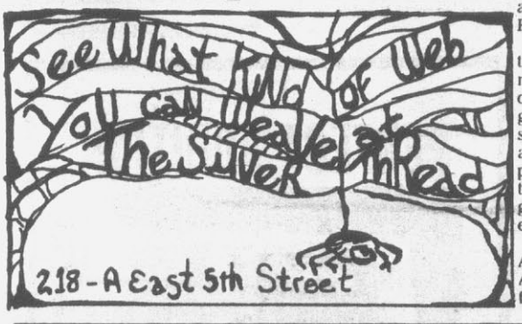

Movie Stars Kelly

Grace Kelly stars as the hauntingly beautiful Princess Alexandra in "The Swan," airing as the "CBS Late Movie," Monday, August 21, at 11:30 p.m. Co-starring are Alec Guinness, Louis Jourdan and Jessie Royce Landis.

Prince Albert (Guinness) arrives at Princess Alexandra's castle with the prospect of finding a Queen for his vacant throne. Alexandra's mother, Beatrix (Landis), is determined not to let this opportunity pass and forces her daughter on the Prince.

Albert is not especially interested in courting and spends most of his time in the castle's dairy then the Princess's rose garden. Beatrix, determined to see her daughter chosen for the available throne, conceives a plan: she invites handsome tutor, Agi (Jourdan), to the grand ball, unaware of his long enduring love for the Princess.

The plan backfires when Alexandra realizes she too loves Agi and is radiant in her new found happiness.

Big Band Sounds

Live from Wolf Trap Park, Tex Beneke and his Orchestra — with guest stars Helen O'Connell and Bob Eberly— brings the Big Band sounds of the 1940's to PBS Monday, August 21, at 9 p.m.

It will be an evening of discovery for the young and nostalgia for the over-40 set as music made famous by Glenn Miller and Jimmy Dorsey — "Little Brown Jug," "Tuxedo Junction," "Green Eyes" — swings again in the open air setting of the nation's park for the performing arts, near Washington, D.C.

A young saxophonist recruited by Glenn Miller in 1938, Tex Beneke brought with him not only an ingratiating personality and swinging tenor sax, but a voice that soon became familiar throughout America, singing "Ida, Sweet as Apple Cider" and the runaway hit, "Chattanooga Choo Choo."

After Miller's death during World War II, Beneke was asked to lead a reunited Glenn Miller Orchestra, which attracted record-breaking crowds for several years. Today Beneke has his own orchestra, but the Miller aura still persists.

Guest stars Helen O'Connell and Bob Eberly made musical history with Jimmy Dorsey's band in the early 40's with their romantic duets "Amapola," "Tangerine," and the smash hit, "Green Eyes," which sold more than three million records. At the height of her career, during World War II, Helen O'Connell left Dorsey's band for the "hearth and home bit," as she put it. Later she returned to show business and appeared as a regular on the "Today" show. She now co-hosts the annual Miss U.S.A. and Miss Universe Pageants.

Bob Eberly recorded more hit songs than any other band singer in an era that included Frank Sinatra, Dick Haymes and Perry Como. His total of 16 hits — 11 of which topped the Hit Parade in 1942 and 1943 — included "Maria Elena," "High on a Windy Hill," "The Breeze and I," "My Ideal" and "My Prayer."

School Problems Focused

There is a great deal of concern that too many of the more than three million public high school graduates in the class of 1978 are unprepared for college or for the job market-place. These are children from all kinds of backgrounds who can't read or write or do math well, and to many concerned Americans, their failure suggests there is something fundamentally wrong with the American public school systems.

On the first of three reports, "Is Anyone Out There Learning?: A CBS News Report Card on Public Education," airing Tuesday, August 22 (8 p.m.). Students, parents, teachers, educators, public officials, and members of the business community will assess the problems and the strengths of the public schools. The Denver school system was chosen for examination because, while it is better than the national norm, its weaknesses are the weaknesses of schools across the nation, whether white suburban or black inner city.

This broadcast zeroes in on three representative families — one white middle class, one black, and one Chicano— whose children know firsthand an all-too-typical decificiencies of a "good" school system.

George Holley, father of three high schoolers, says his oldest son "will not look for his education in the school system, because they have failed." Mrs. Jackie Limon wants to know "Why didn't they come to me and say, 'Mrs. Limon, your son is in the eighth grade...and he can only read at the fourth grade level'...why did they wait until the tenth grade?" Mrs. Mamie Craft, whose son is often absent from school and is a poor reader, says, "With all the latest equipment they have and different types of things they have to work with, I think my education was better than theirs."

The complaints heard most often is that many students have not mastered the basics: reading, writing and math. In fact, a national study by the U.S. Department of Education indicates that 13 percent of all 17-year-olds are "fuctionally illiterate."

Skelton Hosts Tribute

Red Skelton, one of America's great clowns whose TV shows ranked among the nation's top 10 for 20 years, hosts "TV: The Fabulous 50's," Lucille Ball, David Janssen, Michael Landon, Mary Martin and Dinah Shore join him in his nostalgic look at some of the top stars, popular shows and memorable moments of the period. The special will be rebroadcast Tuesday, August 22, 8 to 9:30 p.m., on NBC-TV.

Skelton will introduce clips showing the fun provided by him and such other comedy giants as Milton Berle, Groucho Marx, Jack Benny, Bob Hope, Jimmy Durante, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Steve Allen, Ernie Kovacks, Sid Caesar, Jackie Gleason and Art Carney.

Skelton's return to television provides a reminder of his multiple accomplishments, interests and talents:

— He has composed more than 5,000 songs.

— He is an expert at Bonsai gardening, the oriental art of shaping and dwarfing trees and plants.

— He began his show business career at the age of 10.

— He is an accomplished painter.

— He has composed marches that are played by more than 10,000 high school and college bands.

— He writes and illustrates at least one short story a week.

— He is a 33rd Degree Mason, the highest degree attainable.

— He made his radio debut in 1937 on "The Red Foley Show."

— He starred on a 1939 New Year's Eve vaudeville bill that included Frank Sinatra, Burt Lancaster in an acrobatic act, Jo Stafford and Harry James.

— He has made 30 motion pictures.

— He is a photography fan and almost always carries a camera.

— He received an honorary Doctor of Literature degree from Emerson College, Boston, Mass.

— He always has a cigar in his hand or mouth, but never lights it.

— His poem, "The Circus," was written as a tribute to his father, a clown whom Skelton never knew; he died two months before Red was born.

Gazarra Plays Capone

The rise of Al Capone from street punk to gang king and his fall through betrayal is recounted in "Capone," a stylized crime drama, to be broadcast in its television debut on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies," August 22, 9 to 11 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Capone, played by Ben Gazzara, is one of many tough Brooklyn street kids when a local New York hood (John Cassavetes) first notes his potential. He soon shows he has the necessary ruthlessness, but his big chance comes when he recognizes that a gangland big shot, Johnny Torrio (Harry Guardino), is ripe for elimination. Capone betrays Torrio and finds himself on the top of the heap.

Heading the crime operation in Chicago, however, means watching out for deadly rivals. Yet, there is time for fun with a spoiled flapper (Susan Blakely) who comes his way. But outsiders are not Capone's only worry. Within his organization are ambitious underlings, like Frank Nitti (Sylvester Stallone), eager to take over control.

Gazzara impersonates Capone with a breezy, believable performance, harshly spewing out the script's heavy dosage of crude epithets, while chomping on a cigar. Susan Blakely's hip-swiveling portrayal of Iris seems almost second nature, and Harry Guardino makes an effective contribution as his overly-cautious partner.

Ben Gazzara stars as the legendary crime figure Al Capone, in a drama that chronicles his rise and fall, "Capone," to be presented on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movie," Aug. 22 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

EXTRATERRESTRIAL REUNION

Production of "Battlestar Galactica," the spectacular new space series premiering in September on ABC-TV, provided an extraterrestrial setting for the reunion of series star Lorne Greene and his fellow Canadian, guest star John Colicos. It was over 20 years ago that Greene and Colicos costarred in "Hamlet" for the Canadian Broadcasting Company, with Greene as King Claudius and Colicos as the vengeful Danish prince. In "Battlestar Galactica," however, the roles have switched with Greene as Adama, the leader of a space-age immigrant fleet struggling to survive against the power-hungry Count Baltar, portrayed by Colicos.

"I'm the Benedict Arnold of the distant future," said Colicos, "a kind of galactic Judas. In character, Lorne and I are still archenemies just as we were in 'Hamlet.' This time, Lorne is the hero and I, over the years, have discovered that villains are like blondes — they have more fun."

DAVID CASSIDY SIGNED BY NBC-TV

David Cassidy has been signed to star as a young police officer in four yet untitled one-hour programs to be broadcast on NBC during the 1978-79 season.

The character will be based on the role Cassidy performed on the recent two-hour "Police Story" special entitled "A Chance to Live," which garnered impressive Nielsen numbers when it aired last May, and ranked among the top 10 programs for the week.

In his "Police Story" role, Cassidy played a young rookie cop who posed as a high school student to bust a drug ring. This was his first television performance since "The Partridge Family" completed production more than three years ago. Cassidy became an international teenage idol during his four years as Keith Partridge and through the popularity of his record albums which sold in the millions.

PAT BOONE'S FAMILY SIGNED BY ABC-TV

The Pat Boone family — Pat, Shirley, Debby, Cherry, Lindy and Laury Boone — has entered into a long-term agreement with ABC-TV to star in two holiday specials which could lead to a possible weekly series for the well-known singing family.

The "Pat Boone and Family" specials will be telecast during the Thanksgiving and Easter holidays.

Major guest stars for the comedy and variety specials will be announced in the near future.

Rescue...At Last

The shipwreck castaways of the popular television series "Gilligan's Island" will finally be towed-in after 14 years on their "uncharted desert isle," courtesy of NBC-TV, as six of the seven original cast members return in "Rescue From Gilligan's Island," a two-hour World Premiere comedy movie currently in production for presentation during the fall.

Bob Denver (as Gilligan), Alan Hale Jr., Jim Backus, Natalie Schafer, Russell Johnson and Dawn Wells will reprise their well-known roles as the lovable band stranded on an island paradise after the Minnow (their tourist vessel) was beached during a tropical storm.

The series, which ran from 1964-67, is still enormously successful in reruns across the country. Resuming the story 14 years after the wreck, the castaways have all but abandoned any hope of rescue until an impending tidal wave forces them to leave their adopted home and put to sea in three huts lashed together. The force of the massive wave carries them into the shipping lanes, where they are spotted and returned to modern civilization — and a society which they have humorous difficulties adjusting to.

NBC-TV's Deanne Barkley, said: "We are happy to provide millions of devoted 'Gilligan' fans who have enjoyed the popular series and its characters with a fitting rescue after all these years of waiting."

Hale co-stars as the eternally flabbergasted Skipper; Backus as the obscenely wealthy Thurston Howell III; Schafer as Lovey, his wife; Johnson as the inventive Professor; and Wells as the naive ingenue, Mary Ann. Judith Baldwin joins the old cast as Ginger, the voluptuous Hollywood starlet.

Focus On Four Areas

The second in the series, "Is Anyone Out there Learining?: A CBS News Report Card on Public Education," Wednesday, August 23, at 8 p.m., will present a wide range of opinions on why public school pupils are not learning as well as they could...and should.

The broadcast will concentrate on four areas of great concern to those who have studied American public schools: the quality of teachers and teaching materials, lack of discipline in the schools, and the effect of television on students' learning ability.

The problem is not money. A record $80.7 billion is spent each year to educate some 44 million elementary and high school students. But their 2 million teachers are often blamed.

While they have more degrees, are better paid and better protected than their 1965 counterparts, a study for the College Entrance Examination Board suggests that teachers are less dedicated, spend less time in the classroom, are more permissive, give few writing or homework assignments, and don't enforce high academic standards.

Many teachers say that they, like their pupils, are victims of the system, with indifferent parents on one side and weak, ineffectual administrators on the other. The pressures can be enormous; a study in Los Angeles showed that teachers exhibit the same neuroses and anxieties as war veterans.

Textbooks themselves are said to be undergoing what U.S. Education Commissioner Ernest Boyer calls an "eroding" of "hard substances."

Quickly changing values and a new permissiveness are most often cited as the causes of poor discipline in the schools, which manifests itself in violence, vandalism, and destruction of a learning environment.

The broadcast will also examine television, the influence of which is basic: by the time a child reaches first grade, he or she has watched more than 4,000 hours.

LOUISE FLETCHER CAST IN FILM

Louise Fletcher, in her first television drama since winning an Academy Award (Best Actress, "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," 1975), stars in "Thou Shalt Not Commit Adultry," the premiere segment in a series of two-hour NBC movies for television entitled "The Ten Commandments."

Fletcher will portray Sally Kimball, a woman who considers adultry after an auto accident leaves her husband permanently paralyzed.

Gene Wilder Was Skeptical

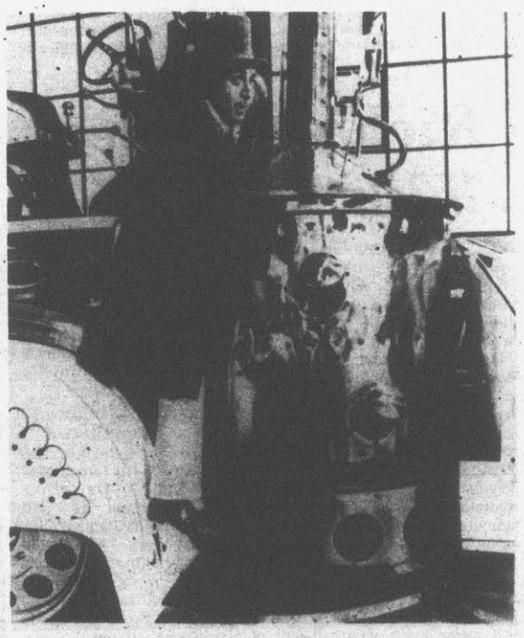

Gene Wilder, who starred in the title role in the musical fantasy "Willy Wonka and the Chocolate Factory," almost didn't take the part. "I was skeptical," he admits. "The Dahl script was charming and beautiful but I didn't see myself doing a children's story."

Wilder was talking about the script by British author Roald Dahl, based on his children's book, "Charlie and the Chocolate Factory." In the film, to be rebroadcast Wednesday, August 23, 8 to 10 p.m., on NBC-TV, Wilder portrays Willy Wonka, the world's most famous confectioner who offers to five children holding lucky candy bars a grand prize, with surprising results.

After talking with the filmmakers, however, Wilder was favorably impressed and decided to take the role. "I could see that the film was going to be made on the highest satirical level for children and adults," Wilder recalls, "and gradually it started to come into focus.

"It became clear to me that Wonka had to be a series of brilliant ideas which would light up like a match. I would have to have imaginative and physical ideas for every scene. It meant day after day of practice on the trampoline. I also worked constantly with a magician learning all sorts of sleight-of-hand tricks."

Acrobatics and magic were not the only firsts for Wilder in his demanding role. He was also called upon to sing and dance. Leslie Bricusse and Anthony Newley, the same team that collaborated on the Broadway hits "Stop the World — I Want to Get Off" and "Roar of the Greasepaint — the Smell of the Crowd," wrote six songs for the film.

SPECIAL MAN—Gene Wilder stars in the title role of the world's greatest confectioner in an encore telecast of the popular fantasy adventure "Willy Wonka and the Chocolate Factory," on "NBC Movie of the Week," Wednesday, Aug. 23 (8-10 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Solutions Explored

The Greensville County, Virginia, school board took an unusual step to counteract poor education by stopping social promotions and holding students back if they fail standardized exams. Grades, national test scores and students' studying habits all improved.

In Hunt Valley, Virginia, 467 parents have volunteered to help in the classrooms, working, for example, with the pupils in reading laboratories. One student said is was "super...that they are lending their time, their free time that they could be using on their own kids...I think they (the teachers) really need help, because they have a load."

These are just two programs that have been instituted in an attempt to improve the quality of public education. These and other programs will be examined on the third segment of the series 'Is Anyone Out There Learning?' airing Thursday, Aug. 24, at 8 p.m. on CBS.

Thirty-four states have minimum competency testing, standardized examinations usually given to seniors to ensure they have learned certain basics; and, in 17 states, passing the exam is required for a diploma. While such testing is popular, it has it critics. Too many students pass, they say, and the tests came too late in their academic careers.

Television is often cited as the biggest culprit in interfering with children's education, but there is another side to the tube.

Television as an educational tool is being explored in a number of areas. A television program about books, called "Cover to Cover," is one of 150 educational purposes. One program uses primetime hits to teach basic principles in various fields, while in another, students study scripts from their favorite shows to learn basic reading skills.

The broadcast will look into the move to improve teaching by having topnotch teachers teaching other teachers, like Denver's "instructional resource teams" and California's Bay Area Writing Project. It will also examine special programs for special problems.

Pike's Peek

By Charlie Pike, TV Showtime staff writer.

HOLLYWOOD — Bruce Boxleitner and Kitty Holcomb, who met as brother and sister on "How the West Was Won" and are now husband and wife in real life, have said all along that they're going to buy a home and begin a family. Well, they're halfway through their plans. They just bought a fashionable ranch-style house on an acre parcel in the Hidden Hills section of Los Angeles that comes with a stable and corral, for a fashionable $200,000.

An out-of-town visitor to the "Charlie's Angels" set had this summation of the show's stars. "Jackie Smith is gorgeous but doesn't seem to be a very happy person. Cheryl Ladd is pixie cute but seems unsatisfied. Kate Jackson is a pretty together lady." Interesting.

Sidney Poitier was on hand at the 16th Annual Karate Championships hosted by karate expert Ed Parker to unveil a bust of the late Elvis Presley in a karate stance. Parker was Elvis's teacher and has now become Sidney's instructor, as well as "CHiPs" star Erik Estrada. The championships, held in Long Beach, were dedicated to Elvis' memory.

They can deny it as much as they want, but it's becoming more and more evident that John Travolta and Marisa Berenson only have eyes for each other. Besides the fact that Marisa flew from Rome to Hollywood to attend a party John tossed at his Malibu home, the phone line from L.A. to Rome has been a busy one now that Marisa is back in Italy.

Bob Ginty, who has gone from "Black Sheep Squadron" to "Paper Chase," has also gone from swinging single to a man very involved, but he's also gone from a newcomer who tells all to a more knowing veteran who won't reveal the lucky lady's name.

Brenda Dickson of 'Young and Restless' was unable to move into her and her husband's new Pacific Palisades home as planned, and the couple has had to move into an apartment until the end of the year because they sold their old residence.

Richie Tangles With The Mob

Jim Rockford's protege, 23-year-old private investigator Richie Brockelman, finds himself in the midst of The Mob and a slaying while trying to clear his 'perfect' brother of an embezzlement charge, in "The Framing of Perfect Sydney," to be rebroadcast on "Richie Brockelman, Private Eye," Thursday, August 24, 9 to 10 p.m., on NBC-TV. Dennis Dugan stars in the title role.

Sydney, accused of embezzling funds from the Farmer Construction Company, turns to his young brother for help. Richie — relying on numerous disguises and his innocent, youthful appearance to track down leads — bungles the investigation and gets himself and Sydney labeled as armed and dangerous fugitives sought in connection with the slaying of a company executive.

Barbara Bosson co-stars as Sharon, Brockelman's tolerant and trusted secretary in the series.

Dennis Dugan has appeared in TV's "Columbo," "M*A*S*H," "Cannon" and "The Waltons." His film credits include "Smile," "Day of the Locust," "Norman, Is That You?" and "Harry and Walter Go to New York." He played Richie Brockelman in a 90-minute film telecast last year, and appeared again as the character in a two-hour episode of "The Rockford Files."

Ah...Those Nurses

ABC-TV's comedy series, "Operation Petticoat," tells the adventures of a Navy crew — and Army nurses they rescued — during World War II aboard the world's only pink submarine. Circumstances of the war keep them together as the "Sea Tiger," of dubious seaworthiness and no firepower, sails the Pacific from island to island.

Based on the popular 1959 movie, the series derives its rich humor from strong character relationships, plus the high-charged presence of women where only men were meant to be.

Starring as the distractingly beautiful nurses are Jamie Leigh Curtis, Melinda Naud, Dorrie Thomson and Bond Gideon, four vivacious, out-going young actresses who have a zest for life and high hopes for successful theatrical careers.

Jamie (Lt. Barbara Duran), the daughter of Tony Curtis and Janet Leigh, is possessed by boundless but well directed energy, and says, "I want to try everyting once — and again if I like it."

She likes lots of things, too. Outdoor activities, for example: tennis, baseball, basketball, surfing, swimming, scuba diving, fly fishing, sailing, gymnastics, backpacking, mountain climbing, running on the beach, working out with weights. Next on her list? Sky diving.

Melinda (Lt. Dolores Crandall) is the eldest of six children, whom she helped care for — "And we love each other." Which may help explain the effect that her dancing eyes, fun-loving smile and warm, outgoing presence has on people. After she had left the room at a recent social occasion, a suddenly dispirited gentleman inquired after a moment, "is somebody turning off the lights?"

Dorrie's (Lt. Ruth Colfax) high school movie ambition was not to be an actress — she was too shy even to recite in class — but a stuntwoman.

Today, her outside interests definately lean toward the dangerous — snow skiing and water skiing. What's more, she runs her own ski boat — a jet. Dorrie parctices gymnastics and runs two miles a day. "Running can bring about a marvelous meditative, transcendent state," she says.

Bond (Lt. Calire Reed) is another outdoor gal. She enjoys skin diving, tennis and gymnasitcs, and particularly loves backpacking and skiing in the mountains of colorado.

They are a great group of girls, and one thing is for sure. With these comely beauties around, there's never a dull moment on the 'Petticoat' set.

Cash No Easy Duplication

How do you duplicate $1,119,000 in cash for the camera without having it look fake?

In "Brinks: The Great Robbery," it was done with a combination of real and 'play' money. And, to ensure that there would be no repetition of the rip-off which is the central theme of the drama, an armed guard was close by to keep a secure eye on the real stuff during the filming.

'Brink's' is a dramatization of the planning, actual robbery, and subsequent investigation by the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the 1950 heist of more than $2,750,000 from the Prince Street, Boston, facility of Brink's Incorporated by a group of armed, masked men. The film will be rebroadcast as the "CBS Late Movie" Friday, August 25, at 11:30 p.m. on CBS-TV. Starring are Leslie Nielsen, Carl Betz and Stephen Collins as FBI agents, and Darren McGavin, Cliff Gorman, Burr DeBenning, Michael Gazzo, Art Metrano and Bert Remsen as members of the gang.

Soon after the successful robbery, the gang met to divide their loot. It was this scene which provided the movie's personnel with their big headache: how to make $1,119,000 look real. The problem could have been worse — the gang had to destroy $90,000 in brand new bills and over $1,500,000 in thousand-dollar bills, which could have been instrumental in their apprehension if they were ever used.

The money in the scene was in $10,000 bundles. The inside of each bundle was fake, but 238 real hundred-dollar bills faced each bundle — $23,800 for the worried film-makers to keep track of. To compound the possibility of any getting lost, the scene was filmed on location in a Hollywood suburb, with the attendant curious bystanders adding to the hazard. Hense, the armed guard playing nursemaid to the 'props.'

Both he and the film's production manager breathed the legendary sigh of relief when the scenes with the real and bogus money were completed — the fake bills heading back to the studio prop room and the real bills returning to the bank from which they had been borrowed.

"All the way to the bank I worried about what would happen if I had somehow mixed one of the fake bills in with the bank's money when I separated the bundles," prop man Julian Gordon recalls. "Imagine, being arrested for trying to pass play money to a bank."

The bank would probably have called in the FBI.

Beauties On USO Tour

Susan Perkins, Miss America of 1978, and six 1977 Miss American state finalists, departed August 1 on a 30-day "Miss America USO Show Tour" of the Mediterranean to entertain American service personnel.

Accompanying Susan on the tour are: Miss Nebraska, Linda Kay Hallstrom; Miss New Jersey, Mary D'Arcy; Miss South Carolina, Catherine Hinson; Miss Utah, Kristy Deakin; Miss Texas, Lori Smith; and Miss North Carolina, Kathy Fleming.

Richard Gilliland, John Astin (r), Dorrie Thomson, Jamie Lee Curtis, Melinda Naud and Bond Gideon (l to r) portray characters on the half-hour comedy series "Operation Petticoat," telecast Fridays (8:30-9 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Hale Irwin Is One Of The Best

ABC Sports will present live coverage of the Colgate Hall of Fame Classic from Pinehurst Country Club, North Carolina, Saturday, August 26, at 3:30 p.m.

Hale Irwin tore up the revered Pinehurst No. 2 course with a 20-under 264 to win last year's Colgate-Hall of Fame Classic by five strokes. He is hoping for a repeat performance when ABC televises the event live from Pinehurst Country Club, N.C. on Saturday, Aug. 26 at 3:30 p.m.

The winner of last year's $50,000 purse, Hale Irwin, will be among the top pros entered in this year's tournament. With more than $100,000 in the bank this year, he is well on his way to his fourth consecutive $200,000 season.

One of the finest golfers on the PGA Tour, Irwin is in his 10th year as a touring pro, and he's won numerous tournaments and well over $1.3 million in earnings.

In retrospect, 1977 turned out to be perhaps the most satisfying year of his career. Near the end of the schedule he won the San Antonio-Texas Open for a personal high of three victories in a single season and passed the $200,000 mark in official earnings for the third year in succession. Only one other man, Jack Nicklaus, cashed more than $200,000 in purses in those same years, and that indicates the talent bracket that Irwin occupies.

Hale left the University of Colorado in 1968 with a degree in marketing, and NCAA golf title, and the honor of having been selected twice as an All-Big Eight Conference defensive back. He joined the PGA Tour that fall and has climbed steadily on the money list each year.

In 1974, he reached the highest pinnacle in his sport when he won the U.S. Open at Winged Foot (Mamaroneck, N.Y.). That, in addition to his fourth-place finish in the Masters, proved to golf experts that Hale Irwin would be a major force for years to come.

On the 1975 tour, Irwin won the Atlanta Golf Classic by four strokes over Tom Watson. Four weeks later, he swept the Western Open at Oak Brook, Illinois. In October, he became the second man in history to successfully defend his Picadilly World Match Play Championship as he defeated Al Geiberger 4-and-2 over the Wentworth Club course at Virginia Water, England.

After winning the Atlanta Classic last May, Irwin was informed that his finish in the Spring Tour Seasonal Championship had also qualified him for the World Series of Golf. However, a clerical error was discovered and his starting position was awarded to Graham Marsh. Irwin had been credited with more Spring Tour points than he had earned, while Marsh was given fewer points than he had earned.

Reasoner Anchors CBS Watershed Special

The watershed year of 1968 — a year of political, cultural and social upheaval whose impact is still felt today — will be examined in a two-hour CBS News Special, "1968," airing Friday, August 25, 9 p.m., on CBS-TV.

The broadcast will mark the return to CBS News of Harry Reasoner, who will anchor the review of the events, moods and attitudes of a decade ago.

1968 was a volatile year for America, a year which sent shock waves through the very core of our traditions, life styles and institutions. The emotional climate was highly charged as the killing intensified on the battle fields of Vietnam, and violence erupted on the streets of our cities. It was a year of political assassination and political paranoia, a year in which the ideas and values of the middle-class were openly defied. The generation gap split apart, and a new wave of energy — and exuberance — swept the nation.

Among the events examined on the broadcast are:

..The Tet Offensive and the battle Khe Sanh — how they marked the turning point in the Vietnam war for many Americans, and for Washington.

..The Black Movement — its evolution from the non-violence of Dr. King through the "black is beautiful" awareness program; the riots following King's death, and the rheotic of such emerging leaders as H. Rap Brown and Stokely Carmichael; the government's reaction to the movement and its leaders.

..Television — its role in bringing the reality of the fighting in Vietnam and the hostilities erupting in America's streets into the living room its use by the politicians and the Madison Avenue packagers — from the charisma of Bobby Kennedy to the style of Richard Nixon.

..Student protests — the issues that sparked the national unrest, which began on the Columbia University campus; the CIA's role in these and other campus activities, and how these revolts led to a widening of the generation gap.

..The Democratic National Convention in Chicago— the mood which led to the battle of the National Guard and Mayor Daley's riot police against protesters, bystanders, newsmen — and undercover agents, two of whom identify themselves on the broadcast in footage shot during the melee by CBS News and a Hollywood production team.

Series About Legendary Hero Figure

Production has begun on "Buck Rogers," a two-hour NBC World Premiere movie starring Gil Gerard as the legendary hero whose exploits in outer space have entertained people for almost 50 years.

Gerard, who guest-starred last season on "Little House on the Prairie" as the handyman who had romantic designs on Caroline Ingalls (Karen Grassle), stars as 20th century astronaut Buck Rogers, who is frozen in suspended animation while exploring deep in space in the year 1987.

When his ship finally returns to Earth orbit, he is intercepted by the conquering Draconians, who revive him. Convinced he has imagined their existance, Buck is allowed to return to earth. He expects to contact Houston for re-entry. Instead, he finds a vastly altered world — Earth in the 25th century.

In addition to his 'Little House' role, Gerard starred in "Killing Stone," a TV movie telecast earlier this year. He also had a starring role in the daytime drama, "The Doctors," for two-and-a-half years, has guest-starred in "Hawaii Five-O" and "Baretta," and appeared in the movie, "Airport '77."

Also starring are Erin Gray as Col. Wilma Deering, commander of Earth's defenses, and Tim O'Connor as Dr. Huer. Gray has guest-starred in "Police Story" and "Gibbsville," and appears in "Evening in Byzantium." O'Connor's television credits include "Police Woman," "Lou Grant," "Columbo," "Police Story" and "Wheels."

Guest-starring in "Buck Rogers" are Henry Silva as Kane, an Earthman who has thrown in with the Draconians, and Pamela Hensley as Princess Ardala, daughter of Draco, king of the space-conquering race. Silva was in the TV drama "Contract on Cherry Street" with Frank Sinatra, and guest-starred in the premiere episode of "Quark." Hensley had a recurring role in "Kingston: Confidential," starring Raymond Burr.

College Football Looking Back

Before you take a forward glance, it never hurts to look backward. When it comes to college football — like world affairs — an understanding of the past makes the future a littler easier to comprehend.

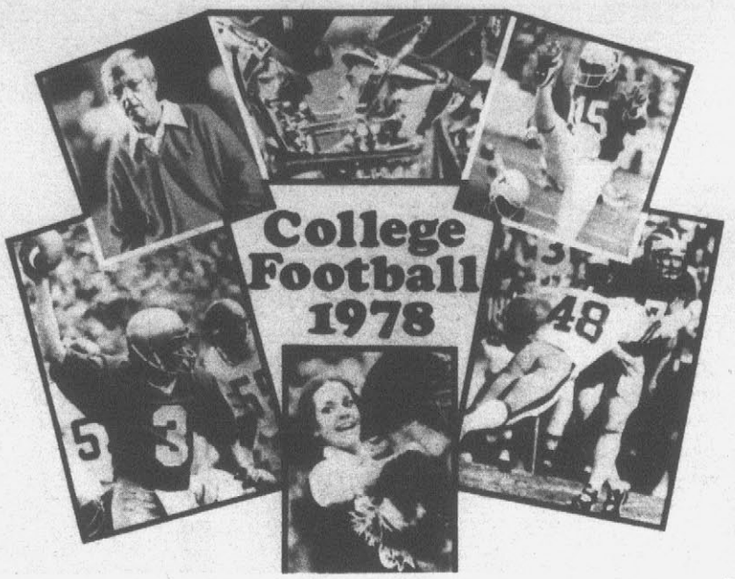

Looking back through the past fifteen years of NCAA football, there have been two schools which have fielded consistently powerful teams. Admittedly, Oklahoma, Southern Cal, Michigan and Penn State have enjoyed their moments in the lime light. Yet, close examination of the record book, plus a look at the national titles captured, reveals some interesting facts: Notre Dame and Alabama have been the "cream of the crop" during the era. Since Notre Dame won the national championship in 1977, the law of averages points to Alabama in 1978.

In addition to the law of averages leaning toward Alabama, there exists an abundance of talent playing for Bear Bryant this season. This year's edition of Crimson Tide football could very well be the finest group assembled by the Bear. That in itself is quite noteworthy considering Alabama's 1961, 1964, 1965 and 1973 teams all captured national crowns.

With Alabama the heir apparent in the SEC, we can expect them to tangle with Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl. Although Oklahoma appears to have the inside track in the Big 8, you can be assured Iowa State, Colorado and Nebraska are also planning a sunny New Year in Miami.

Ohio State, Michigan State, and Michigan will battle for Roses as usual. It appears, however, that Ohio State has the edge on this season.

A real wing-ding of a shootout is shaping up in the Southwest Conference, putting Arkansas and Texas in their traditional rivalry for the crown with Texas A..M scheduled to be a bridesmade.

The 1978 College football season will be previewed on Saturday, Aug. 26 at 8 p.m. on ABC-TV. Keith Jackson will host College Football 1978 with special segments on the top Heisman Trophy Candidates, the finest quarterbacks and the top 21 schools in the nation.

NBC-TV Signs

"The World's Greatest Athlete," Bruce Jenner, decathlon gold medal winner for his record-breaking feats at the 1976 Olympic Games, who has since carved out a formidable career in broadcasting, has signed a long-term, exclusive agreement, effective Nov. 1, with NBC-TV to be an all-round on-screen personality.

Under the agreement, Jenner will be prominently involved in a wide variety of projects encompassing both NBC Sports and entertainment telecasts.

Chester R. Simmons, President, NBC Sports, said: "We are delighted that Bruce Jenner is joining in this exciting period of growth by NBC Sports. His personality and talents will be utilized in a number of important assignments, including the network's telecasts of the 1980 Olympic Games from Moscow, the Olympic trials and the Sunday series, 'SportsWorld'"

Oakland Never Left

"Can the Raiders Come Back?" "Oakland Will Be Back in 1978." These are the headlines that keep appearing in print concerning the Oakland Raiders.

On Saturday, August 26 (9 p.m. on NBC-TV), the Raiders will meet the Los Angeles Rams, and in preparing for the contest, the Rams know that Oakland has not gone anywhere.

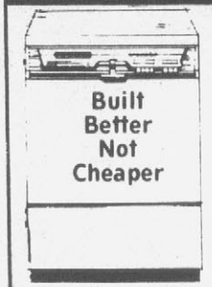

The Raiders have been in existance for 15 years. Duing that time, this team has achieved a Super Bowl crown, an American Football League Championship, an American Football Conference Championship, nine Division Championships, 10 years in the playoffs, and 14 winning seasons, including the last 13 in a row. The Raiders' record of 150-49-11 (.754) since 1963 is the best in pro football.

Since the first Division Championship in 1967, the Raiders have maintained an even more incredible domination of pro football in terms of consistent victory. In these last 154 league games, the Raiders have won 119, tied 7 and lost only 28 for a remarkable winning percentage of .810.

When a team plays in their Conference Championship game for the last five consecutive years and reaches the NFL playoffs 10 times in the last 11 years, it hasn't gone anywhere. You begin to wonder where the rest of the conference is.

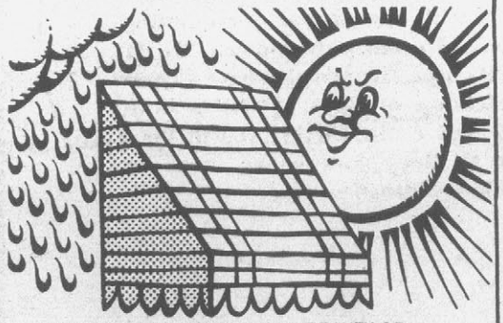

The fact that Oakland hasn't gone anywhere to come back from is especially evident when you consider their plight in the AFC Championship game. The third quarter fumble by Denver and Mike McCoy's recovery was disallowed — while television showed without a doubt that the official had erred— and Denver scored on the next play for the decision margin of an eventual 20-17 victory.

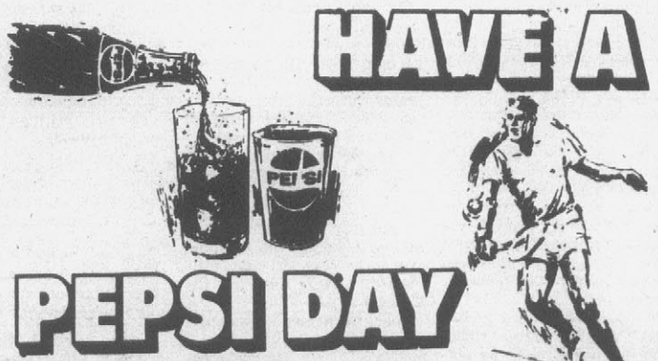

The Raiders have the ability and the manpower to be fitted for their 1978 Super Bowl rings now.

Doesn't Look Part

Susan Dey, a beautiful, blue-eyed blonde, would never appear to be a parent guilty of child abuse. So, for that very reason, producer-writer Joanna Lee cast the slender, former New York fashion model as a deeply troubled mother incapable of facing up to her psychological problem in "Mary Jane Harper Cried Last Night," a powerful, two-hour film to be rebroadcast as the "CBS Saturday Night Movie," August 26, at 9 p.m. on CBS-TV.

"There is no sterotyped child abuser," noted Miss Dey. "It could be anyone, even your next-door neighbor."

She hadn't the slightest reservation about accepting the role, one of the most difficult she has attempted, says the actress, one-time star of the TV series, "Loves Me, Loves Me Not." "I thought it was a story that needed to be told. I liked the part immediately, and I'm grateful I was selected for it."

As a social worker, played by Bernie Casey, says in the film, "To solve this critical problem we must make direct contact with people. I think our film will reach a lot of them."

Miss Dey's dramatic portrayals have ranged from a revolutionary killer in "The Streets of San Francisco" to an innocent victim of imprisonment in "Cage Without a Key." But none demanded the depth of emotion called on to play Rowena Harper, the disturbed mother.

"I had to look at the part two ways," says Miss Dey, "objectively analyzing it as an outsider, and subjectively putting myself into the various degrees of schizophrenia Rowena demonstrates. The greatest challenge was to integrate those varying states of mind with the dialogue.

"Playing a mentally ill woman was an acting departure for me. To show near normality one moment, then lapse into irrational behavior the next was a taxing experience."

Like everyone else creatively connected with "Mary Jane Harper Cried Last Night," Susan Dey came away with an important sense of accomplishment.

"I can't emphasize too strongly how vital is the social message contained here," she says. "The statistics are shocking, and the incidence of child abuse continues to increase."

Unser Battles For USAC Points

Indianapolis 500 winner Al Unser is expected to challenge Tom Sneva for the point-standing lead of the United States Auto Club, when CBS Sports broadcasts, live, the Milwaukee 200, Sunday, August 20, 2 to 4 p.m.

But they'll both have to contend with Johnny Rutherford, the defending champion of this 200-mile race, who is also expected to compete. Over the years, Rutherford has become one of the winningest drivers in the United States Auto Club. He is the fourth ranking money winner in USAC history and the sixth in all-time Championship points.

Last year Rutherford posted two victories on the one-mile oval at the Wisconsin State Fair Park in West Allis, in the Milwaukee 150 and 200.

Sneva seems on his way to a second straight USAC championship in 1978. He leads this year's competitors with 3,268 points. Last year, he won the Texas 500 and was second behind A.J. Foyt in the Indy 500. Foyt, who won the Texas Grand Prix, has indicated he'll be in the starting field for the Milwaukee 200.

Steve Krisiloff, who is currently in fifth place in points with 2,055, and finished third in the Texas Grand Prix behind Rutherford, is also expected to be on hand in Milwaukee.

Another driver who has come on strong is Rick Mears, who won the Milwaukee 150 this past June. Mears is Mario Andretti's racing teammate and was a front-row qualifier at Indy earlier this year.

Unser, who sits second behind Sneva in the point standings, holds 2,444 points. He won the 1976 Milwaukee 200 with an average lap speed of 121.907 miles per hour. Last year, Rutherford, while slowed by several caution flags, averaged only 103.798 miles per hour.

Second behind Rutherford last year was Pancho Carter, with Wally Dallenbach third. Dallenbach currently is third in the USAC point standings with 2,298, while Rutherford is in fourth place with 2,211.

New National Smoker Study:

Merit Scores High Marks On Five Key Points!

'Enriched Flavor'™ cigarette proven major alternative to high tar smoking–see results below.

Can MERIT taste hold its own against leading high tar brands?

Does MERIT satisfy smokers over a long period—or are MERIT smokers slipping back to old high tar favorites?

Read the bottom-line results of new research conducted with smokers like yourself.

Research Confirms Breakthrough

Confirmed: Majority of high tar smokers rate MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading high tar cigarettes tested! Cigarettes having up to twice the tar.

Confirmed: Majority of high tar smokers confirm taste satisfaction of low tar MERIT.

And in detailed interviews conducted among current MERIT smokers?

Confirmed: 85% of MERIT smokers say it was an "easy switch" from high tar brands.

Confirmed: Overwhelming majority of MERIT smokers say their former high tar brands weren't missed!

Confirmed: 9 out of 10 MERIT smokers not considering other brands.

First Major Alternative For High Tar Smokers

MERIT has proven conclusively that it not only delivers the flavor of high tar brands—but continues to satisfy.

This ability to satisfy over long periods of time could be the most important evidence to date that MERIT is what it claims to be: The first major alternative to high tar smoking.

This week: 20,000 more items

FOR DANIEL J. BOORSTIN, Librarian of Congress

How many miles of shelves does the Library of Congress have, and how many books do they house? How many new volumes are added each week, and what is the oldest work in your collection? —George Hill, Seattle, Wash.

● Our holdings occupy 337 miles of bookshelves. Those holdings, however, are not only books; they include manuscripts, music scores, maps, photographs, motion pictures and information in many forms. Of the 73,500,000 items in the Library on Sept. 30, 1977, a little over 18,000,000 were books. The Library increases these holdings by almost 20,000 items a week. The earliest specimen of printing, save one, in the Library of Congress is a Buddhist sutra printed in 975 A.D. The exception is a small votive charm made in Japan in 770, of which we have three fragile specimens.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Why is the President angry with his cousin, Hugh Carter? Neta K. Ayres, Smith Center, Kan.

● You must be referring to the rumors that the White House is miffed over Hugh Carter's book, Cousin Beedie and Cousin Hot. Hugh's story of his relationship with the Carter clan in Georgia. FW checked with the author who said, "I have had no blasts from the White House, nor do I expect any. The only blasts I have had came from the President's mother and from his brother, Billy. [Miz Lillian, it seems, objected to Hugh's characterization of her, and Billy sided with his mother.] In fact, I received this note from the First Lady: 'Thank you for your book. Jimmy and I are both reading it now and enjoying it — Rosalynn.'" He goes further: "I'm very close and friendly with the White House Carters and see them whenever I'm in Washington."

No blast from the White House

FOR MARSHA MASON, star of The Goodbye Girl

What will your next film be? Are you really 37? How do you keep yourself so young? —Thomas O'Neill, Honesdale, Pa.

● I'm getting ready to do Promises In the Dark, a drama, in which I play a physician. And I'm not 37, I'm 36. If I do look younger than I am, it's because of good eating habits, enough sleep and a clear skin. Also meditation. They keep me looking and feeling good — there's nothing like a focused mind to reflect in one's personality.

FOR JOHN RITTER, star of ABC-TV's Three's Company

I hear you're into karate and psychology. What sparked your interest? Also, why didn't you follow in your father's [Tex Ritter] footsteps and take up singing? —L.F., Redondo Beach, Calif.

● I've always been interested in the body and the human condition. Karate is a combination of awareness of mind and body. Psychology always fascinated me because it tells why we do the things we do. As to singing, I just can't carry a tune — even if it's in a basket.

FOR BEVERLY SILLS, opera star

Your nickname, Bubbles, seems a bit unusual for an opera star. How did you get it? —Joel Allard, College Station, Texas

● I got it the day I was born — and it's not a very glamorous explanation. I arrived in the world with an enormous bubble of spit in my mouth. The doctor took one look at it and said to Mother, "You'll have to call her 'Bubbles.'" It stuck, and people say it still fits because I have a bubbly, effervescent personality.

FOR ERICA JONG, whose latest book is How to Save Your Own Life

Were you surprised at the success of Fear of Flying, and do you think it became a best seller because of luck or judgment? —N.S., Terre Haute, Ind.

● Everybody is surprised by success. But success is neither luck nor judgment. Some writers have the unconscious ability to express the things that many people are thinking. This is what makes them so successful. They become voices for their age.

FOR EDGAR BERGEN, entertainer

Someone told me you're disappointed with your career. Why? —R.S., Dothan, Ala.

● No, that's not true. However, if I had to live my life over again, I would do some things differently. I would never stop going to school. I'd never stop learning and make sure I took an endless series of college courses that would send me off to classes at least once a week. As to my performing, I wish I had set aside 10 percent of my income to invest in personal advertising and publicity.

FOR PATTY BERG, golfer

How far can you hit a golf ball, and did you ever make a hole-in-one? —P.N., Aurora, Ill.

● At my best, I drove approximately 215 yards. That has changed some now because golfers have to have more carry on the ball since the courses today are constantly watered. Yes, I had a hole-in-one. It was on June 27, 1959, on the 7th hole, 170 yards, at Churchill Valley Country Club, Pittsburgh, Pa. It was the first registered in the U.S. Women's Open.

PRO AND CON

Will Property-Tax Ceilings Cause A Major Decline In Public Services?

PRO Leo T. McCarthy, (D) Calif., Speaker, State Assembly

Where local government relies heavily on property taxes, services are bound to be affected by drastic cuts in property-tax revenues — unless other taxes are raised to make up the loss. California's legislature softened the impact of Proposition 13 by giving $4 billion of the state's accumulated surplus to cities, counties, schools and special districts. Even so, local government budgets must be reduced an average 10 percent in the first year alone. What happens in succeeding years is a matter of great concern. The prospect is that local governments, without a bulging state surplus to bail them out, will face a tough choice: shift the tax burden to other sources or sharply reduce the services they now provide.

CON Howard Jarvis, author Proposition 13, Chairman, American Tax Reduction Movement

The property-tax limitation enacted in California will reduce total spending by only 9 percent. The people know there is at least 9 percent waste in government. The elimination of the waste makes it possible to reduce property taxes substantially — about two-thirds here — without severe declines in public services. Since the election, most local governments have adopted new budgets. Consistently the word has been: small personnel cuts, some minor service changes and reduction in anticipated pay and benefit increases for public employees. Most observers agree now that the impact of cutting property taxes to 1 percent of market value was very close to what I had projected.

'LIVING' ART

By Gary M. Krino

Only two things have been able to stop this Southern California show in its 43-year history: World War II and rain.

And when all 116,000 tickets are gone three and a half months before the production opens, you know the spectacle has to be something special. That's the case with the Laguna Beach Pageant of the Masters, which takes live models and magically incorporates them into human reproductions of the world's great art.

When you sit in Irvine Bowl, an outdoor amphitheater on the city's Festival of Arts grounds, on any night during a six-week period in July and August, you're amazed as bright lights bring each successive living work of art into sharp focus. Your eyes are overwhelmed by the color and subject matter of great masterpieces such as Frederic Remington's Indian Warfare and Salvador Dali's Madonna of Port Lligat.

When the final magnificent artwork, Leonardo da Vinci's The Last Supper, is spotlighted, you join Laguna Beach residents and tourists in applause.

This immense response stems, of course, from the wondrous illusion that some live models are actually painted figures on canvas and that others are three-dimensional pieces of ivory, glass, wood, bronze and marble in sculpture, jewelry, carving and statuary.

The reality behind the illusion comes from thousands of hours of work by hundreds of volunteers. Those who serve as models have a motto that they observe unerringly: "Don't move!" Each pose is held two minutes, but often 120 seconds can seem a lifetime.

"Sometimes people are literally stuck to the front of the picture," says Don Williamson, the production's director. "They are held on by various contraptions — hidden belts, shoulder harnesses — and by just plain determination and two small holes for their feet."

Yet with all the planning and all the rehearsals, there have been incidents that defy human or mechanical control.

One took place a number of years ago when the program opened with The Venice Bell, which features two bronze giants striking a bell. The original is in Venice's St. Mark's Square.

"At the time it was struck," Williamson says, "we released a flock of pigeons from behind it to recreate the scene that takes place in St. Mark's when the bell is rung. Ours were homing pigeons, and they returned to their roosts after each flight. But this particular night, one of the pigeons was new. He got confused and circled the amphitheater until the fifth art display of the evening caught his eye.

"It was two white marble statues, Pygmalion and Galatea. That pigeon swooped down out of the sky and landed on the female model's breast, skidded down her front in the slippery body makeup and latched on to her thigh.

"The audience was hysterical, but that woman never moved. When the curtain closed, she got a standing ovation."

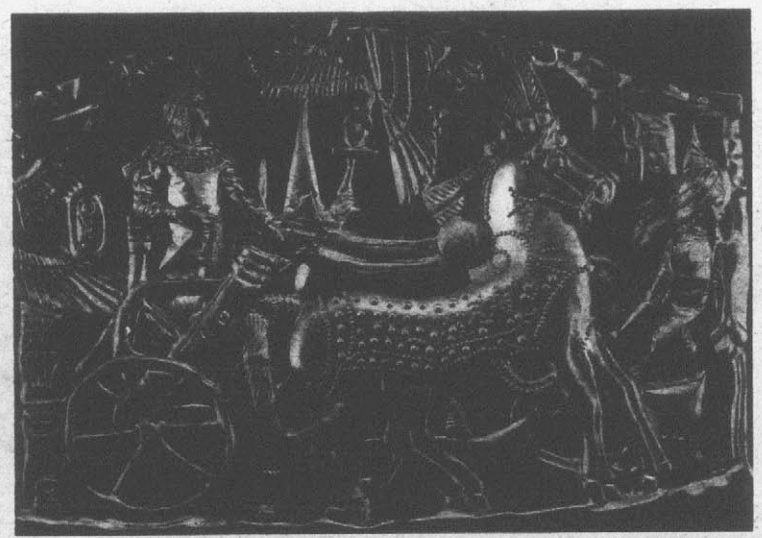

Despite memories of pigeons past, 1,000 people responded this year when the casting call went out in January. Three hundred (two casts of 150 each, which alternate from week to week) were chosen to appear in the 50 subjects that are on the two-hour program. "Without these volunteers," Williamson says, "we'd have to fold up."

FW

A touch-up before the pose.

HOW TO S-T-R-E-T-C-H YOUR BUDGET TO BEAT INFLATION

Helpful tips on getting more food for less money without sacrificing nutritional value.

By Bob Rosenblatt

Inflation is a greedy beast, gobbling up your dollars, chewing away at your savings accounts, reducing your pay raises to peanuts.

A few numbers will serve to demonstrate just how bad things are for you as the value of the dollar keeps shrinking. If your family income in 1970 was $13,220, you had to make $21,210 last year simply to maintain the same buying power. This year you'll need to earn $22,671 to afford the standard of living you had eight years ago.

What can you do to stretch the shrinking dollar, short of winning the Irish sweepstakes or having a hot streak in the casinos of Las Vegas or Atlantic City?

There are effective techniques you can use to help deflate some of the adverse effects of inflation. Whether shopping for canned peas or maintaining a car, a careful consumer can squeeze more value out of the diminishing dollar.

The budget battle begins in the grocery store because food prices have been rising faster than the general rate of inflation. Shopping the "specials" is still a good way to save. Supermarkets advertise their "best buys" in the Wednesday and Thursday newspapers, with the sales themselves taking place on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

There's one other valuable aid for the dollar-stretcher: premium coupons. Such premiums, which guarantee discounts on the purchase of various items, are meant to tempt you to try new brands or products — or to retest and retaste tried-and-true ones. It's the supermarkets' way of saying "why not sample this?" or "are you short of that?" — and the effect can be more savings for you.

These premium coupons are made available to you in a variety of ways: sometimes you receive them through the mail; often you can clip them from newspaper ads; and usually you can find them attached to some cans and boxes on store shelves. Before you go shopping, be sure to sort out the coupons you want to use. When you redeem them at supermarkets, the pennies you save can add up.

When you shop for meat or poultry, you can also save money. Meat that is labeled "prime" is usually served in restaurants or sold through some key retail markets; meat that is graded "choice" or "good" is the kind you find in most butcher shops and supermarkets.

"Choice" meat is at least 10-cents-a-pound cheaper than "prime," and "good" is 10 cents below "choice." A steak that's marked "good" is leaner, less juicy and harder to chew than a "choice" cut. If you don't mind the difference, you can save a substantial amount of money.

Turkeys are all of the same quality — grade A — but there might be a price difference of 5 cents a pound or more between one with a nationally advertised brand name and one with a house label. Chicken sold whole is cheaper per pound than chicken carved up into pieces.

While you're hunting for bargains at the grocer or butcher, don't forget the chances to shave the costs involved in driving your car to and from the store. Pump your own gasoline at the self-service island, saving at least 6 or 7 cents a gallon.

If you drive to work, there is saving in numbers: traveling alone, it costs you $886 a year for a 20-mile round trip in a compact car. In a two-person car pool, you and the other rider will each save $380; if you have two companions, each one of you saves $486.

Next week: More tips on how to save money on everything from appliances to zippers. FW

SOVIET GYMNASTS: THE PRICE THEY PAY TO WIN

Can the U.S. cope with their extreme training and conditioning techniques?

By Gordon Maddux

With memories of television images of Russia's Olga Korbut at the 1972 Olympics in Munich and Rumania's Nadia Comaneci at the 1976 Olympics in Montreal still fresh in people's minds, many Americans are asking: isn't it about time that our young gymnasts start winning Olympic medals?

Let's put this question into proper perspective. Yes, Nadia's Olympic score of five 10's indicated that she'd achieved gymnastic perfection, but what physical and emotional price did she have to pay? The answer, I'm afraid, is a sad one. Nadia is a virtual robot: wind her up and she wins the gold medal. She is clearly a product of the Rumanian system or, rather, the Bela Karoli system (devised by the coach who discovered her).

There's no denying that the Karoli training regimen is competitively productive, but is it ethical and is it humane? For instance, when the Rumanians came to the U.S. on tour in October 1977, they ate a total of just five meals during the 14 days they were here, with one of those "meals" consisting of two slices of tomato and a half-cup of shredded lettuce.

These girls subsist mainly on a diet of nutrition and vitamin pills. The reasoning behind this is keyed to one of the facts of women's gymnastics: young girls tend to be better than older ones and are capable of performing more complicated routines. This is a result of the ratio of weight to strength: a smaller girl is relatively stronger for her weight than is a larger one. In addition, girls who learn acrobatics when they're very young run into a problem when they reach puberty: their bodies change in shape as well as size, and their centers of gravity shift. In order to continue as gymnasts they must then relearn their skills. The Rumanians believe — and base their training program on the conviction — that if you can keep the fat content of a girl's body to less than three percent of her weight, you can postpone the onset of menstruation.

When you combine that kind of biological manipulation with public adulation, you have the makings for a disturbed childhood.

It's my feeling that if we have to do what the Rumanians do, it's not worth it. This sport should be fun, and kids should develop normally and naturally into adolescence — and then into adulthood.

I'm happy to say that without resorting to totalitarian training methods America is producing some outstanding gymnasts — youngsters who should be winning medals in world competition in the upcoming Olympics. Kurt Thomas and Bart Conner could lead the men's team to a third-place finish behind the two perennial powers in gymnastics, Russia and Japan. Individually, Thomas and Conner could win gold medals.

Thomas, a 22-year-old student at Indiana State University, is the current U.S. champion, and early this year he came in first in three major international competitions during one six-week period. Conner, a 19-year-old student at the University of Oklahoma, won the National Collegiate Athletic Association all-around championship and led the Sooners to the collegiate team title.

On the women's side, Kathy Johnson, a 19-year-old from Belcher, La., and Donna Turnbow, a 16-year-old from Long Beach, Calif., have dominated U.S. gymnastics for the past two years. Kathy is an elegant performer who this year traded places with Donna to become the number-one ranked woman in this country. Donna is an excellent technician who teamed with Kurt Thomas this past April to win the Champions All meet in Britain.

The increasing participation of our youngsters in gymnastics will continue as more and more parents realize the benefits of such training — poise, self-confidence, good health — benefits that go far beyond competition. And, on the international scene, maybe the next Olga or the next Nadia will be named Donna or Kathy and they'll come from Louisiana, California or somewhere like that. Wouldn't that be great? FW

THE PROSTATE GLAND: IT'S NOT AS MYSTERIOUS AS YOU MAY THINK

And here are the facts that men — and women, too — need to know about the ways it functions.

Jacqui Morgan

By Irwin J. Polk, M.D.

The precise function of the prostate confuses — and concerns — many men because they believe it has something to do with virility (but they're not sure of the interrelationship), and they fear it will give them trouble in middle age (but they don't know exactly how). For both males and females, FAMILY WEEKLY separates facts from misinformation about this physiologically and psychologically important gland.

The prostate gland is situated deep in a man's pelvis, behind the pubic bone, in front of the rectum and just below the bladder. It is about the size of a walnut and can be felt readily by the examining finger of a doctor.

The prostate is the largest of the accessory sex glands in men. Under the influence of the male hormone it secretes fluid which supports and carries the semen. Nevertheless, it is possible to live completely without the prostate gland, even to produce children without it.

However, the prostate is important to the sex process. The urethra, which carries urine from the bladder on its way out of the body, passes through the prostate gland. When this gland enlarges during the sex act, it presses on the urethra, closing it off and preventing the urine from the bladder from mixing with semen and prostatic secretions. So the prostate gland does play a significant but unnoticed role in the reproductive years.

It is often more obvious in middle age and later. Two diseases of the prostate gland are fairly troublesome to middle-aged men. With aging, the prostate gland enlarges somewhat and can block off the outflow from the bladder, making difficult the flow of urine. Early symptoms of this problem — benign prostatic hyperplasia — include difficulty in starting and stopping the urinary flow, while frequency of urination and increased urgency to urinate may occur.

Sometimes the prostate gland becomes inflamed and infected. The symptoms are the same, again caused by blockage of the urine. Enlargement and tenderness can easily be noted by the doctor at the time of a rectal examination. Prostatic infections can frequently be treated with medicines to relieve congestion and infection in the gland.

There is a more serious disease that often involves the prostate gland. The prostate is the most common site for malignant growth in men over 50. Again the symptoms are often the same, a result of obstruction to out-flow of the urine, so it is important that urinary-tract symptoms be diagnosed and treated early. Benign enlargement and infection are much more common causes of urinary-tract symptoms, but malignancy is the most threatening condition. Surgery is the usual treatment for it, often with follow-up courses of hormones and chemotherapy.

Too many men wait too long before seeking medical attention because of a widespread but mistaken notion that treatment to the prostate gland will decrease sexual function. On the contrary, correcting prostatic conditions may actually improve sexual function as well as your general health. FW

HOW TO MAKE CLEVER CONVERSATION PIECES

Here are some quick ideas for turning "throwaways" into practical, artistic creations.

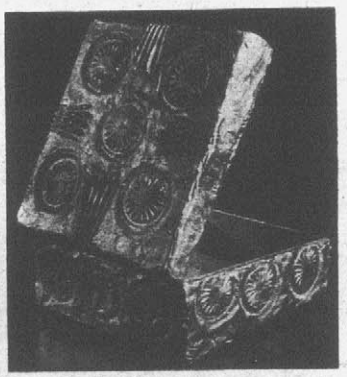

A clay drain tile makes a handy umbrella holder when it is gift-wrapped.

Peas, beans and other seeds provide materials for mosaic ecology plaques.

It takes a bit of magic to make this braided bracelet — it's done from one solid piece of leather.

An empty cigar box, jar or vase can become a gilt treasure with special clay made from kitchen ingredients.

Now that the flea markets are coming to a close, it's time to start doing something with all your fabulous finds.

Ladles and mailboxes become conversation pieces when they are filled with arrangements of dried flowers. And those buttons and other trinkets you have been collecting can be displayed inside clear plastic paperweights or encased in picture frames.

Fall's harvest of peas, beans and other seeds provides materials for making mosaic ecology plaques. Owls, roosters, butterflies, flowers and geometric designs can all be composed with seeds.

If you happen to come across an old clay drain tile, it can be turned into a nifty umbrella holder. There's a clever way to disguise it and have it match your décor.

If all these crafty ideas aren't enough to keep you busy, here are a few more that you can learn.

Turn empty cigar boxes, jars or plain vases into sculptured gilt treasures with special clay made from ordinary kitchen ingredients.

With a bit of "magic" you can fashion braided bracelets, necklaces and belts out of a single piece of leather.

For instructions on turning flea-market finds into conversation pieces, making seed mosaics, a clay tile umbrella holder, kitchen clay accessories and braided jewelry, send for FAMILY WEEKLY's special leaflet.

Here's how to order instructions: Send $1 for each copy of Crafts Potpourri leaflet #311 to:

Observations

High rollers. Casino gambling came to the East Coast late this spring, with the opening of Atlantic City's first hotel for high rollers. But a far more important and costly form of gambling began in the area several months earlier, when the U.S. oil industry finally began its search for oil and natural gas under the Atlantic Ocean to the east of the dowager New Jersey resort.

Openers. Two years before drilling began, the industry anted up more than $1.1 billion to the U.S. government just to get into the game. That's how much it cost to lease selected tracts on the Atlantic Outer Continental Shelf. For this stake—$90 million of it put up by Mobil for interests in eight tracts—the companies also received the right to spend additional large sums on drilling this untested frontier where the odds are 5 to 1 against finding oil and gas in commercial quantities.

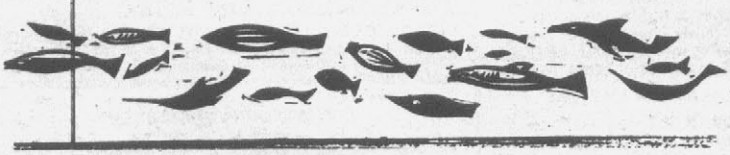

"Our drilling boss lives in Atlantic City!"

Bust hand. The Atlantic search is focused in an area known as the Baltimore Canyon, a U-shaped undersea trough which extends from Long Island, N.Y. to Cape Hatteras, N.C. The first petroleum-seeking well ever drilled in the Baltimore Canyon was dry. But in the high-stakes game of offshore oil and natural gas, you can't drop out after one bad hand.

Playing the odds. In June, Mobil and its partners began drilling their own first Atlantic well, in 215 feet of water. It will take about four months—and cost about $9 million—before we know if there's anything worthwhile under the drill bit. To lessen the odds against disappointment, our seismic ships spent two years over the Baltimore Canyon, electronically "mapping" rock formations under the seabed in search of the most promising prospects.

Big winner? If the leased section of the Baltimore Canyon lives up to its promise, says the U.S. Geological Survey, it could add as much as 870 million barrels of crude oil and 11 trillion cubic feet of natural gas to our domestic reserves. While this certainly won't be anywhere near enough to make America self-sufficient—as North Sea oil is doing for the United Kingdom—Atlantic oil and gas will help reduce our heavy dependence on dollar-draining imports. Which is why part of the $1 billion Mobil will spend throughout this year to find and produce oil and natural gas is being bet on the Baltimore Canyon.

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

Does getting along with your conscience have any medical importance? Do women have more "shoulds" and "musts" than men?

YOU AND YOUR INNER VOICE

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Conscience has been humorously described as something that hurts when everything else feels good. Some people ignore its promptings, others live by them. But the way the average person's conscience works is difficult to define.

2. Getting along with your conscience has medical significance.

3. The extent to which your conscience determines your behavior is likely to depend on whether you're a man or a woman.

4. How often you feel guilty about things you did or didn't do is apt to depend on whether you're married or single.

5. The best time to ask another person for a favor is when his conscience is bothering him about something.

6. A man who is on good terms with his conscience has a definite edge with women in affairs of the heart.

ANSWERS

1. False. In his definitive treatise on Conscience and Guilt, Dr. James A. Knight, Professor of Psychiatry and Associate Dean, Tulane University School of Medicine, defines it simply and succinctly. "Conscience," he observes, "is recognized by most authorities as representing inner controls. With this faculty man is usually able to recognize right from wrong, to act upon the right and to restrain himself from doing that which he recognizes as wrong."

2. True. As Psychiatrist Knight concludes in summing up the findings of his studies: when one challenges and violates the principles of his own value system (as voiced by his conscience), he does not succeed in breaking these laws; he breaks himself against them. He cites, for example, the case of a man "whose physician called a pastor and said, 'I have been treating this patient for a stomach condition and have done all I can. His problem is really outside the field of medicine. He has cheated his sister out of her inheritance. When he comes to grips with this and reaches a proper solution, he will no longer have stomach trouble.'" Evidence would seem to indicate that for peace of mind, and physical well-being, it's important to follow one rule: do as you think you should.

3. True. In a study conducted by a team of University of British Columbia behavior specialists, a 7-point self-rating scale designed to measure sex differences on conscience as a determinant of behavior was constructed and given to men and women university students. Findings: the women rated themselves significantly higher on conscience as a factor determining their behavior. And findings of other investigations are cited supporting the fact that females are more inhibited and controlled by conscience in their behavior than males.

4. True. At North Texas State University, investigators subjected a random selection of men and women students to tests designed to ascertain guilt feelings. The findings showed that guilt and anxiety are definitely related; that the levels of guilt and anxiety are significantly higher in the never-married than in those of other marital classifications and in females than in males.

5. True. A good time to ask the boss for a raise, or a friend for a loan, is when his conscience is troubling him about something. Psychological studies at the University of Wisconsin show that when a person does something he feels guilty about, he suffers a temporary loss in self-esteem. And the opportunity to reestablish his self-esteem by extending a helping hand to another person makes him much more likely to grant favors.

6. True. Psychological studies at Old Dominion University (Virginia) indicate that the "low-guilt" male who is on good terms with his conscience is likely to have the inside track in relationships with the fair sex, is more at ease in their company and more adept at "reading the signals" in romantic situations. The findings strongly suggest that "high-guilt" men are simply lacking the ability "to discriminate between women who are giving different cues regarding their mood and approachability." FW

'Smoking. Here's what I'm doing about it.'

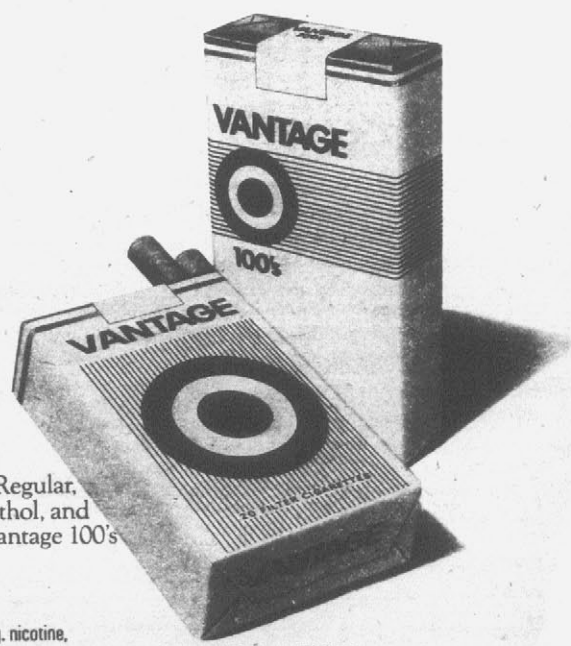

"I like the taste of a good cigarette and I don't intend to settle for less. But I'm aware of what's being said. So I began searching for a cigarette that could give me the taste I like with less tar.

"I found Vantage. A cigarette that really gives a lot of taste. And with much less tar than what I'd smoked before.

TAKE ONE

They say our son takes after me,
It is a sight I fail to see:
My son a-running hopes to catch me
And from the lead I hold to snatch me.

They say, in fact, and swear it's true,
That I take after my dad, too,
Indeed take after his dad some.
I think it is a little dumb.

We hear about the human race—
I'm in it, and I'm in third place.

More and more doctors think that people should work after 65, and lots of bosses think it wouldn't hurt before that.
—Henry Leabo

"I thought you said your son was going to become an ear specialist," the businessman said to his friend. "Now I hear you've talked him into becoming a dentist. How come?"

"Oh, that's simple. I just pointed out to him that while everyone has 32 teeth, they have only two ears."
—Rose Sands

UP THE FIRE POLE

A woman hurriedly dialed the fire department. "Come quick," she shouted at the man who answered the phone. "I have a fire in my basement."

The fireman kept his cool. "What have you done about it so far?" he asked.

"I threw some water on it," she replied, "but it didn't help."

"Well then," answered the firefighter, "there's not much use in our coming over. That's all we would do about it."
—Lane Olinghouse

A diminutive bus passenger couldn't reach the overhead strap, so he hung onto the whiskers of the gentleman next to him. The astonished gent yelled, "Let go!"

"What's the matter?" the little fellow asked. "Getting off here?" —Audrey Earle

COOKING SUMMER VEGETABLES WITH AN ORIENTAL BIAS

You don't need a coolie hat or a wok to cook these easy Far East-inspired vegetable dishes.

By Marilyn Hansen

COOK-AND-STIR CHICKEN AND EGGPLANT

1 lb. eggplant, unpeeled and cut in fingersize strips
½ teaspoon garlic salt
2 whole chicken breasts, skinned, boned and cut into 2-inch × ½-inch strips
1 tablespoon corn starch
2 tablespoons soy sauce
¼ teaspoon ground ginger
¼ cup corn oil
¼ cup diagonally sliced green onion
¼ cup chicken broth

1. Sprinkle eggplant with garlic salt and let drain in colander.
2. Mix together chicken, corn starch, soy sauce and ginger. Set aside.
3. In large, heavy skillet, heat 3 tablespoons of the oil over medium heat. Add eggplant, stirring frequently, until browned on all sides. Remove from skillet, set aside and keep warm.
4. Add remaining tablespoon corn oil to skillet. Stir in chicken mixture; cook until tender. Add eggplant, green onion and broth and cook 1 minute longer, stirring constantly.

Makes about 4 servings

JAPANESE STYLE STIR-FRY VEGETABLES

½ lb. broccoli or zucchini
3 tablespoons corn oil, divided
½ lb. green beans, cut into 2-inch pieces
2 tablespoons soy sauce
1 tablespoon sherry
2 medium onions, sliced
¼ lb. mushrooms, sliced
1 clove garlic, minced

1. Break broccoli into small flowerets. Cut stem into 1½-inch lengths. Slice lengthwise into ¼-inch slices. If using zucchini, slice in ¼-inch slices.
2. In large skillet, heat 1 tablespoon of the oil over medium-high heat. Add green beans; cook, stirring quickly, 3 minutes. Reduce heat to low. Add soy sauce and sherry. Cover; simmer 5 minutes. In another large skillet, heat remaining 2 tablespoons of the oil over medium-high heat. Add onion; cook, stirring quickly, 2 minutes. Add broccoli; cook, stirring quickly, 3 minutes.
3. Add mushrooms and garlic; cook, stirring quickly, 2 minutes or until vegetables are crisp-tender. Toss with beans.

Makes 4 servings

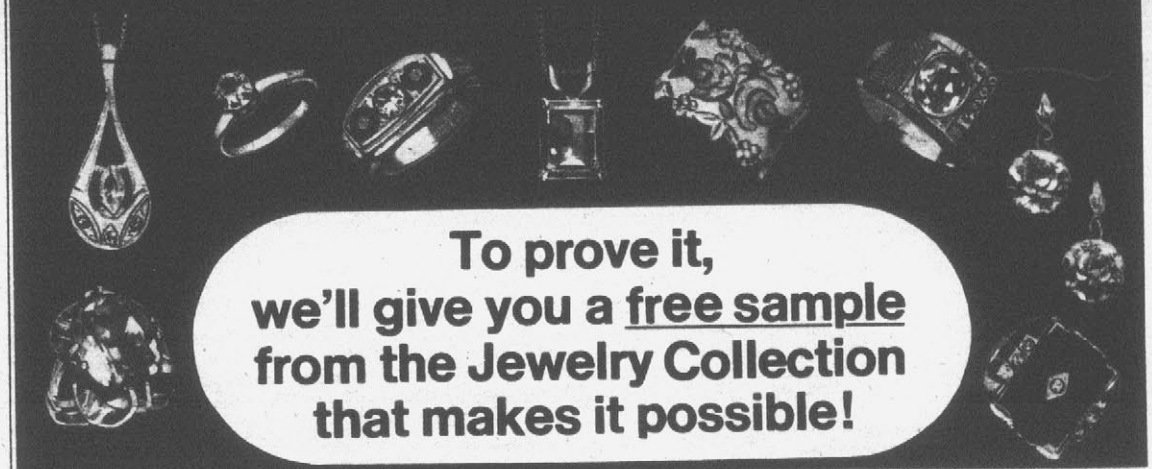

QUICK STIR-FRY SHRIMP

cup water
tablespoons soy sauce
tablespoons sherry
tablespoon corn starch
clove garlic, minced
teaspoon ground ginger tablespoons corn oil
1 lb. medium shrimp, cleaned (about 2 cups)
1 small tomato, cut in wedges
½ cup green pepper, cut in ½-inch pieces

1. Stir together corn syrup, water, soy sauce, sherry, corn starch, garlic and ginger.
2. Heat oil in a large skillet over medium-high heat. Add shrimp; cook, stirring occasionally, about 3 minutes.
3. Stir in tomato and green pepper. Add corn-syrup mixture. Bring to boil, stirring constantly, and boil 1 minute.

Makes 4 servings

Sounds impossible, doesn't it? Well, it isn't. In fact, if you just mail the coupon below to us, we'll start you in this business one week from today . . . and we'll throw in a free sample to boot!

OVER 250 FAST-SELLING STYLES OF MEN'S AND WOMEN'S JEWELRY!

Merlite Industries, a famous name in Direct Selling for 30 years, has assembled an incomparable collection of the world's most beautiful jewelry: rings, watches, earrings, pendants, crosses, fashion accessories, gift items . . . all priced to sell and sell FAST.

There are dozens of styles featuring the fabulous Merlite DIA-SIM®, the man-made simulated diamond that's so brilliant, so hard, so blazingly beautiful that only a trained jeweler can be sure it's not a real diamond. Diamonds cost as must as $1,500.00 per carat . . . but YOU can offer your friends the amazing DIA-SIM for as little as $21.00 per carat, hand-set in a magnificent mounting!

In addition to the DIA-SIM, the Merlite Collection includes nearly every popular gemstone you can name, in either natural or high-fidelity simulated form: emeralds, rubies, opals, jade, turquoise and dozens of others. These exquisite stones are mounted in luxurious, designer-crafted settings of 10K gold fill, 18K heavy gold electroplate, and solid sterling silver. And even though Merlite Jewelry looks very, very expensive, retail prices start at just $6.00 . . . and most Merlite styles sell for $30.00 or less!

JUST SHOW . . . AND SELL!

If you're interested in making money – and we mean real money – here's your chance! Just show Merlite Jewelry to people in your area – friends, neighbors, fellow-workers – and we'll give you a 200% – yes, TWO HUNDRED PERCENT – profit on every Merlite item they order from you!

Think of it! When someone orders a $15.00 Merlite Ring from you, YOU keep $10.00 for yourself! When someone orders a $24.00 Merlite Pendant, YOU keep $16.00! Just show our jewelry, write up the orders, and put your profits in your pocket!

And by the way, that word "show" is important. Don't even try to sell Merlite Jewelry – because it isn't necessary! These lovely creations really do sell themselves – on sight – wherever you show them. Your only "problem" may be convincing your customers that you're not kidding when you tell them that such expensive-looking jewelry costs so little!

WHAT IN THE WORLD

Lifesaver

Tens of thousands of Americans now have a better chance of saving a life because of a handy, animated wallet-size card which reminds them how to do CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation). Developed by Dr. Herman N. Uhley and staff at San Francisco's Mount Zion Hospital and Medical Center, "The ABC's of CPR" card shows the technique in motion. When tilted, the images on the card move, showing how to perform the three basic CPR steps.

So far, 12,000,000 Americans have learned how to administer CPR, a technique experts believe could prevent as many as 300,000 heart-attack deaths a year. But since those who have learned the technique don't have a chance to practice it unless they take a refresher course, Dr. Uhley says some form of review may be needed to keep the knowledge fresh for use in an emergency.

To order your personal CPR card, send 35¢ and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Community Relations-FW, Mount Zion Hospital and Medical Center, P.O. Box 7921, San Francisco, Calif. 94120. And if you're interested in taking a CPR course, contact your local Red Cross or Heart Association.

What's A Cricket?

There's one kind of cricket people want to have around the house so much they'll even go out to buy it — Cricket, the children's literary magazine. Edited by noted critic Clifton Fadiman, Cricket is one magazine children can take seriously. The monthly magazine, which is aimed at youngsters 6-12, contains a blend of education and entertainment. Vocabulary assistance for readers comes from cartoon characters in the margin.

Cricket prints stories, artwork and poems by well-known authors and artists as well as work by children. It also prints readers' letters, which have even included an original recipe for elephant stew from an 11-year-old.

Scotch For The Whole Family

There's a new kind of Scotch that's sweeping the U.S. — Scottish games. The games, which include traditional Scottish events, such as Highland dancing, piping and caber-tossing, are now played in more than a dozen states, and thousands of spectators are expected Labor Day weekend for a competition to be held in Santa Rosa, Calif.

One of the competitors there will be Bill Anderson, the unofficial King of the Games. Anderson, a burly 270-lb. construction foreman from Aberdeen, Scotland, tosses the telephone-pole-size cabers better than anyone in the world — as well as throwing hammers and weights. Appointed a Member of the Order of the British Empire in 1977, Anderson has been tossing cabers for 20 years and has won some 3,000 individual competitions during that time. He competes in an average of 35 Highland games a year.

Anderson says he learned to toss the caber (which is thrown for accuracy, not distance) and to be a competitor on the farm where he grew up. "There were 11 of us, 9 boys and 2 girls, and there was plenty of competition," he recalls. Right now, Anderson's 2 young sons are anxious to follow their father's footsteps, but his older boy would rather play other sports such as soccer or rugby.

For more information about Scottish games in the U.S., write: Fred Vaughan, North American Scottish Games Association, P.O. Box 3436, North Myrtle Beach, South Carolina 2958.

Calculators Really Do Help

Does the use of calculators to teach mathematics in elementary school undermine children's performance? No, says a National Science Foundation-funded study of students in five states — not if they're used correctly.

"We found the calculators were highly motivating for elementary students and a source of sustaining motivation," says Purdue Univ. professor Grayson H. Wheatley, the study's co-director.

Wheatley, who says the calculators had the most effect on the youngest children, thinks they are helpful in teaching math because they "allow the child to concern himself with problem-solving skills rather than repetitious computations."

He says, however, "Don't have the child use calculators to check his work. If he's spent half an hour doing his calculations and then checks them in a few minutes, he may come to see the calculator as a way of cheating." Wheatley says, "Calculators should be a way of reinforcing the child's mathematical skills, not short-circuiting them."

Wheatley believes parents can safely encourage children of any age to use calculators as they will help their interest in math. He says the child can use them to play mathematical games, to develop his math skills or to help the parent work out such everyday math problems as food bills or balancing a checkbook.

Quick Takes

Los Angeles has the worst air quality in the country says a study by the National Wildlife Federation. According to the report, Los Angeles had "unhealthful, very unhealthful or hazardous air" on 318 days in the year surveyed. The next-worst cities were Denver, with 177 bad-air days, and Albuquerque and Philadelphia with 150 bad days.

Want the latest fashion look? Try old clothes. Old is new across the country as yesterday's secondhand clothes become today's fashion trend setters. Among the hot items being sold in "antique" clothing boutiques: vests, embroidered shirts and dinner jackets. In addition to the look, secondhand clothes buyers say they are attracted by the fabric and workmanship of older garments.

Friday is an unlucky day for banks. According to a survey by the Bank Administration Institute, nearly half of all the bank robberies in the U.S. occur on Friday.

A small group of "high risk" doctors accounts for the bulk of malpractice claims says a report published in the New England Journal of Medicine. The report says that a four-year study of doctors in the Los Angeles area showed that fewer than 1% of them "accounted for 10% of all claims and 30% of all payments made by the insurance plan."

Prince Valiant

in the days of King Arthur

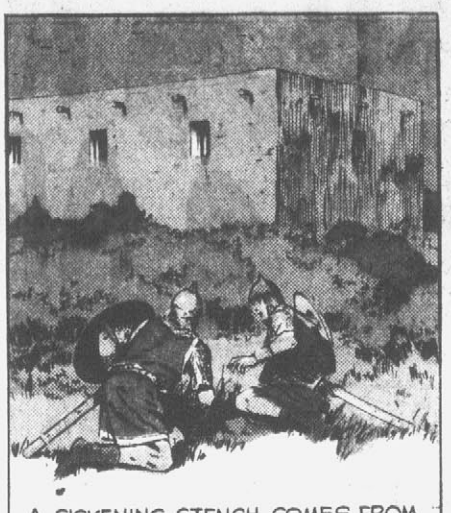

by Hal Foster

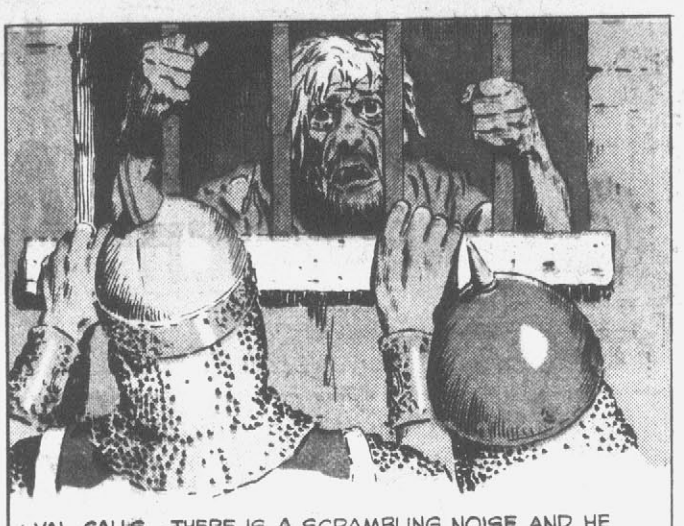

Our Story: THEIR SHIP SAILS SLOWLY PAST THE MAD EARL'S GRIM STRONGHOLD. HERE BOLTAR IS IMPRISONED, BUT IT WOULD TAKE AN ARMY WITH WAR MACHINES TO TAKE IT.

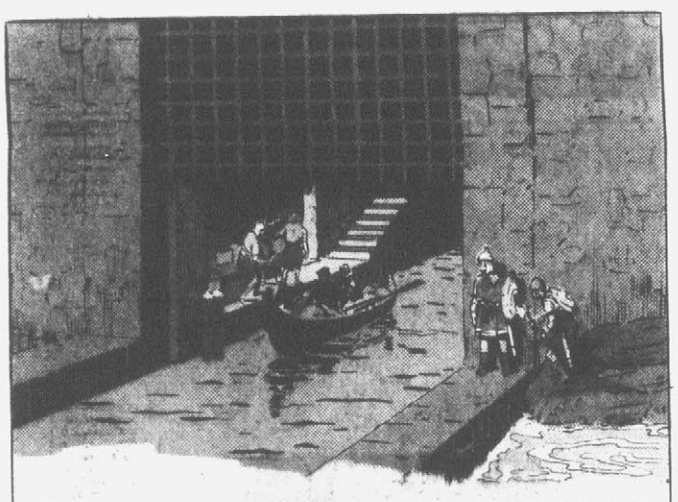

WHEN THEIR SHIP IS OUT OF SIGHT OF THE CASTLE, VAL AND ARN GO ASHORE TO SEE IF THERE MIGHT BE A MORE VULNERABLE PLACE AT THE REAR.

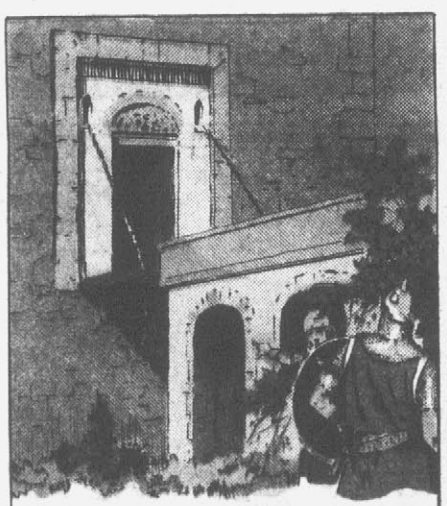

A SICKENING STENCH COMES FROM A LOW BUILDING ATTACHED TO THE REAR OF THE CASTLE. MOANS CAN PLAINLY BE HEARD. VAL AND ARN CREEP UP CLOSE TO ONE OF THE SMALL BARRED WINDOWS.

VAL CALLS. THERE IS A SCRAMBLING NOISE AND HE STEPS BACK AS A HIDEOUSLY SCARRED FACE COMES UP TO THE WINDOW. THROUGH HIS BROKEN TEETH HE MUMBLES; "GO! GO QUICKLY, FOR THIS IS THE EARL'S TORTURE CHAMBER. WE WHO HAVE OFFENDED HIM HAVE BUT ONE HOPE... DEATH!"

"SUCH AN ABOMINATION MUST BE WIPED OFF THE FACE OF THE EARTH!" HISSES VAL. "LET US FINISH OUR EXAMINATION; THE WATER GATE SEEMS TO BE THE ONLY PLACE FOR AN ASSAULT." CREEPING ALONG CLOSE TO THE WALL WHERE THEY WILL NOT BE SEEN THEY EXAMINE THE PECULIAR WATER GATE.

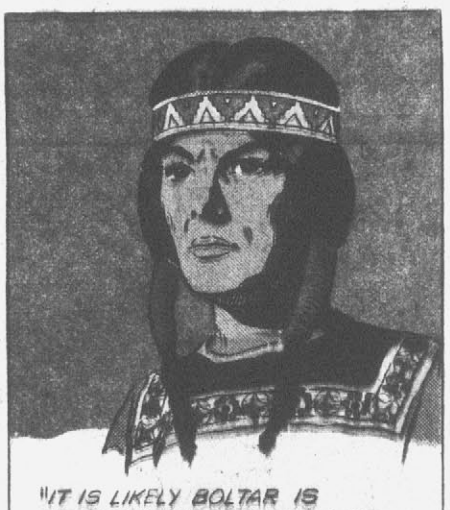

THE GATEWAY AT THE BACK IS HIGH IN THE WALL AND REACHED BY A DRAWBRIDGE. THE CASTLE LOOKS IMPREGNABLE TO THEIR SMALL FORCE.

NIGHT HAS FALLEN BEFORE THEY RETURN TO THE SHIP WITH THEIR DISAPPOINTING REPORT.

"IT IS LIKELY BOLTAR IS IMPRISONED IN THE JAIL. WE MUST RESCUE HIM ON OUR FIRST ATTACK," SAYS TILLICUM, "OR THE EARL WILL KILL HIM."
