Takes The Name John Paul I

Cardinal Luciani Elected 263rd Pope

By ERNEST SAKLER

VATICAN CITY (UP) — The College of Cardinals, meeting in the shortest conclave in modern history, Saturday elected Cardinal Albino Luciani, 65, the son of a bricklayer, a conservative and a surprise choice, as the 263rd pope of the Roman Catholic Church. He took the name John Paul I.

A crowd of 200,000 in St. Peter's Square greeted the announcement — after an agonizing 45 minutes of doubt caused by confused smoke signals — with cheers and cries of "Viva il Papa."

The new pope, who was until Saturday the patriarch of Venice, immediately made his first appearance on the balcony of St. Peter's Basilica to be introduced to the world and its 700 million Catholics with the traditional declaration by senior cardinal deacon Pericle Felici: "Habemus Papam" (We have a pope).

Dressed in a white, silk cassock, the ruddy-faced pontiff prayed briefly in Latin and then grinned broadly, eyes squinting through his wire-rim spectacles, and waved to the masses below, nodding in turn to every corner of the square.

Women pulled white handerkerchiefs from their purses and waved them at the balcony and children jumped up and down in response to the pleasure of their parents.

Although his predecessor Pope Paul VI was 64 when he ascended the throne of Peter, Luciani at 65 still is young by traditional standards and his pontificate could be a long one.

The swiftness of his election indicated many of the cardinals may have had his name in mind — though churchmen ranked him a longshot before the conclave began.

The princes of the church needed only four ballots over eight hours and 54 minutes to choose Luciani in the first day of voting in the conclave which started Friday.

The new pope's choice of a name suggested he intended to continue the liberalizing policies of his predecessors, Paul VI and John XXIII, though his record, with some exceptions — he initially opposed Paul's ban on artificial birth control — is a conservative one.

Luciani once said he found it hard to accept some of the progressive reforms enacted by the Second Vatican Ecumenical Council that ended in 1965.

The election of the 262nd successor to St. Peter was in doubt for 45 minutes when the smoke from the Sistine Chapel's tin chimney billowed from black to white and then to gray.

Black smoke signifies the voting was inconclusive; white means a new pontiff has been chosen.

Even Vatican Radio was uncertain and did not announce Luciani's election until almost 45 minutes after the first smoke.

St. Peter's Square quickly filled as thousands heard the news of the changing smoke.

On seeing the new pope, many in the crowd shouted "Viva il Papa" and some elderly women fell to their knees in prayer.

No official date for the new pope's coronation was immediately announced but churchmen have suggested either Sept. 8 or Sept. 15, both important feast days for Mary, mother of Christ.

The new pope immediately announced he and the 110 cardinals would remain in conclave until this morning, presumably to discuss church affairs.

Luciani was the third patriarch of Venice to become pope in modern times, after Pius X in 1903 and John XXIII in 1958.

The new pope's first words to the world were chanted in church Latin:

"May the holy apostles, Peter and Paul, in whose power and authority we trust, intercede for you with the Lord.

"May God Almighty have mercy on you and, forgiving your sins, may Jesus Christ lead you to eternal life.

"May the almighty Lord grant you indulgence, absolution and pardon for all your sins, time for true and fruitful repentance, an ever-penitent heart and improvement of your lives, the grace and consolation of the Holy Spirit and final perseverance in good deeds.

"And may the blessing of Almighty God, Father, Son and Holy Spirit, descend upon you and remain forever."

Luciani was an opponent of Pope Paul's controversial 1968 encyclical decreeing that no artificial methods of birth control were permissible.

He sat on a commission called by Paul to consider if any artificial methods of contraception could be acceptable to the Roman Catholic church and sided with the majority that said the pill could be permitted.

After Paul ignored the advice of his own commission and banned the pill and every other means of artificial contraception in his 1968 encyclical Humanae Vitae, the present pope remained silent on the subject from that time onwards.

The son of a Socialist migrant bricklayer from a Dolomite mountain hamlet, Cardinal Albino Luciani once said of himself: "I am only a poor man, accustomed to small things and silence."

Few people outside Italy ever heard of him before preparations began for the conclave.

Despite his active interest in the lot of the poor, Luciani is rated as a church conservative. He admitted to a reporter that he found it hard to accept the Ecumenical Council's teaching that all religions are entitled to liberty, in contrast with the old teaching that Roman Catholicism, as the "only true religion," has rights that others have not.

"The thesis I found hardest to live with was the one on religious freedom," Luciani said. "For years I had taught the public law theses of Cardinal (Alfredo) Ottaviani, according to which only the truth had rights. In the end, I convinced myself we had been wrong."

Cardinal Ottaviani, now 87 and the Vatican's No. 1 conservative, was Luciani's mentor through part of his career. But he also enjoyed the support of some liberal prelates and was among the first bishops appointed by Pope John.

Luciani was born Oct. 17, 1912, at Forno di Canale, a hamlet in a scenic but poor valley in the Dolomites, 33 miles south of the luxury skiing resort of Cortina D'Ampezzo.

His father was a bricklayer who worked in Switzerland in the summers and returned home in the winters before moving to the Venetian lagoon island of Murano as a glass worker. Although he was a Socialist party activist in his spare time, the elder Luciani never opposed young Albino's decision to become a priest.

Luciani attended seminary in the town of Feltre and graduated in philosophy and theology at the seminary of Belluno, the hometown of 19th century Pope Gregory XVI. He then graduated in dogmatics at the Gregorian University in Rome and was ordained a priest in 1935.

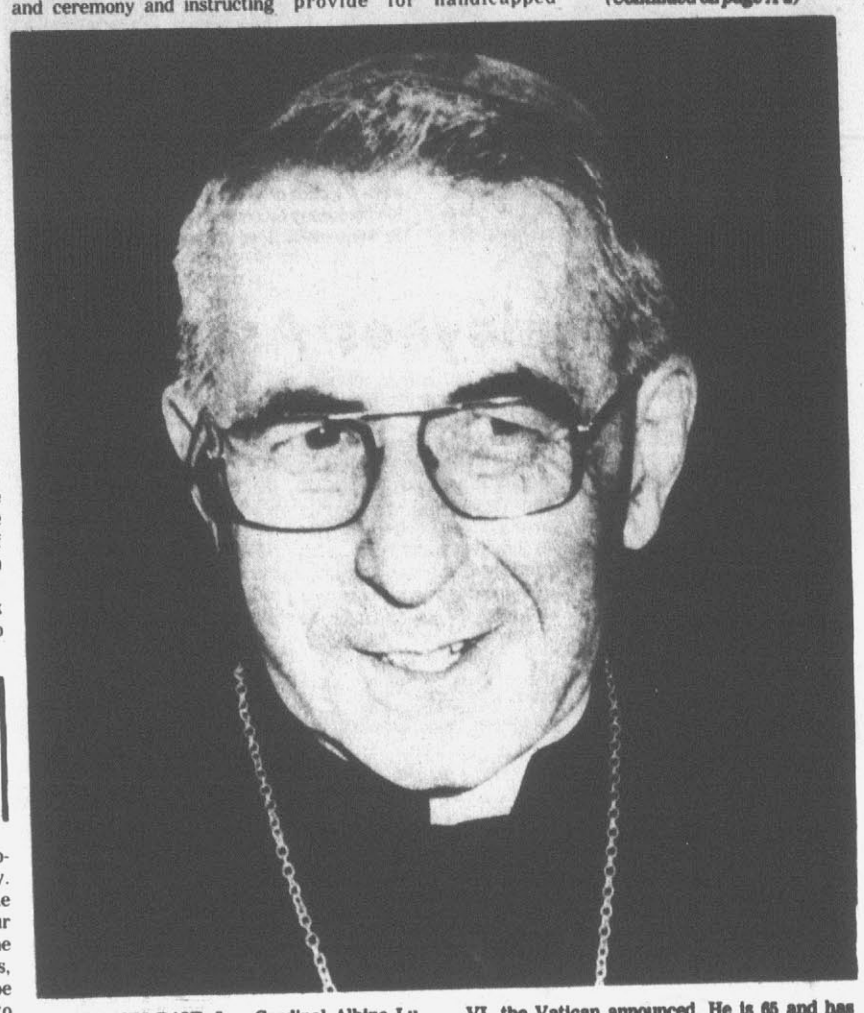

He returned to his home area to work as a parish assistant, a religion teacher in a mining technicians' school and a professor of theology, morals, canon law and sacred art. He later was in charge of catechism teaching in the Belluno diocese and wrote a book about his experiences, entitled with typical modesty, "Catechism Crumbs."

Pope John appointed Luciani bishop of Vittorio Veneto at the foot of the Alps in 1958 and Pope Paul made him patriarch of Venice in 1969 and named him a cardinal in 1973.

Luciani plunged into his work with enthusiasm, riding to mainland parishes by bicycle, doing away with official pomp and ceremony and instructing parish priests to sell their churches' gold ornaments to provide for handicapped children.

Carter's Telegram To Pope John Paul I

"Your Holiness:

"On behalf of the American people, I join people the world over in welcoming your election as pontiff of the Roman Catholic Church. We rejoice in the renewal of leadership for your church.

"In a world of rapid change, the basic needs of humanity remain the same: peace, justice, equity and the opportunity for life with dignity. These are still the supreme challenges that face us. Your voice and your efforts, in the tradition of your predecessors, can be an inspiration and a hope for all those who struggle to meet those challenges. I pray it will be heard and echoed by people of good will throughout the world.

"On this happy occasion, I extend to your holiness my deep respect and sincere good wishes for your papacy."

Pine Trees Are Top Tar Heel Polluters

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina may not be able to meet federal air quality standards because of pollution resulting from its large expanses of forests, a consultant says.

Everett Knight, a consultant to the state Department of Commerce, said the No. 1 air polluter in North Carolina is the pine tree.

Everett told the state Economic Development Board during a meeting this week that the state should seek a change in federal ozone standards for areas where there are large concentrations of trees.

Knight said federal ozone standards are based on the quantity of hydrocarbons released into the air. He said 68 percent of all the hydrocarbons released within the state come from the interaction of sunlight with plants — particularly pine trees.

"That's why the Smoky Mountains are smoky," he said. "because of the haze around the pine trees."

Greenville Schools Ready For First Day On Monday

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

"All is in readiness for the first day of the new school year and we're looking forward to a good year," Superintendent of Greenville City School Glenn Cox remarked on Friday.

When school begins for a partday, orientation period on Monday, a student population of between 5,300 and 5,400 is expected to be reporting in to classrooms.

"This figure will pick up a bit as we get into the first week of school," Cox said. "There's always a few families on vacation, and a few families connected with East Carolina University who are getting settled in. Children from these families will be starting after the first couple of days."

Cox said that most teachers at this point "are a little tired after a long, full week of getting schedules and classrooms in readiness, but they are looking forward eagerly to having students back in their classrooms."

For Monday, orientation day, students in grades kindergarten through seven will report to school at 8:10 a.m and be dismissed at 10:30. Students in grades 8-12 will report in at 8:40 and be dismissed at 11:30. Lunches will not be served Monday.

On Tuesday, the first full day of school, those in the elementary grades, including kindergarten, will report to school at 8:10 a.m. Kindergartners will be released at 1:30 p.m., students in grades one through six will be released at 2:30 p.m. and seventh graders will leave school at 3 p.m.

Take-in time for students in grades 8-12 is 8:40 a.m., with dismissal at 3:30 p.m.

The lunchroom program will begin operating on Tuesday.

"Every school is fully operational now, with teachers, aides, maintenance and custodial personnel assigned," Cox said. "Facilities are in good shape."

Bus routes, Cox noted, "with very few minor exceptions are just about the same as they were last year."

Cox added that each student had been mailed a letter of assignment, and that the letter included information on the bus that would serve each student.

Tight Housing For ECU's Fall Semester

By LYNN CAVERLY
Reflector Staff Writer

A new chancellor and an expanded football stadium are two major changes greeting an estimated 12,120 East Carolina University students Monday, when the 1978 fall semester officially opens with registration.

According to the Office of Institutional Research, the total number of students will reach an all time high with the fall enrollment.

"Last fall," said Robert Ussery of the office, "we had 11,986 enrolled. And that was a record enrollment itself."

Dormitories opened today at 9 a.m., with all 5,539 available spaces filled, creating an annual 'housing shortage' on campus.

"We have about 100 students signed up for the dorm that we won't be able to accomodate," said Dan Wooten, head of the housing department. "We expect to have these students in the dorms by the middle of the semester."

There will be about 50 students placed as third persons in some dorm rooms, and about 20 students will be housed in the Infirmary, both temporary measures, said Wooten.

"We expect to have the students out of the Infirmary in two weeks," said Wooten, "and to discontinue the need to have three to a room in four weeks."

Citing this fall as having the most critical housing shortage on campus since 1969, Wooten gave several reasons for this.

"There has been a national trend for students to return to on-campus living," said Wooten, "due to inflation. Not to mention the fact that privileges afforded the students who live in the dorms were not available until recently. Students can cook meals in the rooms, have private telephones and entertain members of the opposite sex in the rooms. This creates a more favorable environment for the students and encourages them to seek on-campus housing."

Wooten also cited the slight increase of enrollment as adding to the shortage of dorm space.

The only major physical change on campus has been the expansion of Ficklen Stadium, according to Director of Physical Plant James J. Lawry.

"Most of the renovating has been on the far side of campus around Minges and the stadium," said Lawry. "But we have also been busy painting and repairing some of the dorms so they meet regulation standards. Some work has been done on the sidewalks and some landscaping has been done."

Lawry added that work is be-

Greenville Championship Rescue Squad To Compete In Houston

To Help On Houston Trip

MONEY FOR SQUAD ... Doris Mills, Mavis Butts and Anne Duffus, members of the Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors, present Tony Brannon, Assistant Chief for Rescue a check for $1,500 for the Greenville Rescue Squad. Mrs. Duffus, chairman of the realtors' Make America Better Committee, which raised the funds, said the money was presented to the squad to help fund various squad operations.

The North Carolina Division of Forest Resources has come to the rescue of the Greenville Rescue Squad by providing transportation for the squad's heavy duty rescue competition team to Houston, Texas, Wednesday.

As he did last year, North Carolina Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, with the approval of the Council of State, arranged the team's transportation to defend their heavy-duty rescue world championship won last year in St. Louis.

The Fire and Rescue Services Division of the Department of Insurance provides training for fire departments and rescue squads throughout the state. Two of the department's instructors are former members of the Greenville squad.

"North Carolina's fire and rescue service is first in the nation," Ingram said in announcing the flight plans.

"I am pleased that I was able to arrange transportation for the Greenville team to defend its world title in Houston. "North Carolina can be proud of the Greenville rescue team in the fact that it is representing our state in international competition," Ingram emphasized.

The nine-man competition team last year flew to St. Louis on the State's twin-engine, turbo-prop Gulfstream — used by the Governor and other officials — which can fly from North Carolina to the West Coast non-stop. However, that aircraft is being refurbished and won't be out of the shop until after Labor Day. The other state-owned aircraft is too small to carry the team.

The Forest Service came to the rescue with their DC-3, used to transport men and equipment to various parts of the state during the fire season.

Based in Kinston, the DC-3 — used extensively during World War II by the military, and after by commercial airlines — is one of 14 fixed-wing airplanes and two helicoptors operated by the Forest Service out of Stallings Field. The Forest Service also has nine other aircraft stationed at other areas throughout the state.

Dick Clason, spokesman for the Division of Forest Resources in Raleigh, said the Forest Service, "works in various places with fire departments and rescue squads," and cooperates with the Department of Insurance on various fire problems.

"We are happy to cooperate with the Department of Insurance in providing transportation," Clason emphasized.

Greenville rescue and first aid teams have consistantly been top contenders for state and international honors in both first aid and heavy duty rescue competition.

Greenville was the first United States team ever to win an international heavy rescue championship, during competition in Montreal, Canada in 1962. The squad took their second World Championship trophy in St. Louis last year.

In all, Greenville teams have taken 11 trophies in international first aid and heavy duty rescue competition since 1961, and have 26 trophies given by the North Carolina Association of Rescue Squads — including 14 state first aid and rescue championships — during the same period.

"We're real proud of the record of the Greenville Rescue Squad and know the people within this area appreciate the total committment these men give for the protection of lives," Ingram said.

Tony Brannon, assistant chief of rescue and captain of the competition team, emphasized that winning in competition is not the most important benefit from the many man-hours of training required to compete against the best teams in the state and in international competition.

"Training for competition," Brannon said, "keeps the men on their toes, and better trained to handle the day-to-day

First Woman Parachutist

Georgia Brown, 85, Dies

HENDERSON, N.C. (UPI) — Georgia B. Brown, who in 1913 became the first woman ever to parachute from an airplane, died late Friday in Long Beach, Calif. She was 85.

Verla Poythress, Mrs. Brown's daughter, said Saturday the woman died of complications suffered after contracting pneumonia.

Known as Tiny Broadwick, "The Doll Girl of Aviation," the 5-foot-tall Mrs. Brown made her first jump in 1908 from a balloon and went on to jump more than 1,000 times in barnstorming tours across America.

During all those jumps she never wore a spare parachute, and suffered nothing more than a broken wrist and a scratched face.

On June 21, 1913, Mrs. Brown released the trap door of a biplane and parachuted down 2,000 feet to Los Angeles' Griffith Park. It was the first time a woman had parachuted from an airplane.

In 1914 she made the first official demonstration of the "coatpack" parachute developed by her foster father, Charles Broadwick, before a group of Army officials in California. Despite her successful landing with that early version of modern-day parachutes, the Army refused to use the so-called "life preservers" during World War I.

"It seems they were afraid that if pilots were equipped with lifelife preservers they would jump out of the planes at the first indication of trouble and let the plane crash," she said in a 1964 interview. "And at that time, the United States had only about three good airplanes."

Born in Henderson, N.C., on April 8, 1893, Mrs. Brown worked 12-hour days in the area's cotton mills as a teenager. She was married at the age of 15 and became a mother and widow shortly afterward.

Also while 15, she visited a county fair near Durham, N.C., and discovered Broadwick and parachuting. She became so fascinated with the Broadwick's balloon that she convinced the man to hire her. Later she adopted his name.

In 1922 she made her last jump, went to California and lived there the rest of her life.

Tropical Depression

MIAMI (UPI) — A zone of showers and clouds swirled into a tropical depression in the central Gulf of Mexico Saturday afternoon with winds of up to 35 miles an hour reported.

National Hurricane Center forecasters said a poorly defined circulation center was found in the area by an Air Force reconnaissance plane Saturday afternoon.

Winds from the center extended over an area 150 miles north and east.

At 6 p.m. EDT the depression was located about 400 miles east southeast of Brownsville, Texas, and was drifting slowly toward the west northwest.

Forecasters said some strengthening of the system was expected expected today.

are the poor, the little ones, who should not be helped by means of mere occassional alms, but in such a way as to insure their promotion," Luciani once wrote.

At the same time, the patriarch opposed the workerpriest movement and other forms of what he considered undue church involvement in the class struggle in Venice's industrial mainland suburb of Porto Marghera.

An advocate of theological moderation, Luciani said too many churchmen either refused to go beyond the First Vatican Council of 1869-70 that proclaimed the dogma of papal infallibility, or tried to liberalize the church farther than allowed by the Second Vatican Council in 1962-65.

"Vatican One has many followers and so has (an imaginary) Vatican Three, but Vatican Two has too few," Luciani once said.

Accuses Chinese

By SUZANNE GREEN

HONG KONG (UPI) — Vietnam Saturday accused China of assembling "tens of thousands" of saboteurs ready to cross into Vietnam. Peking said Vietnam attacked Chinese refugees with "bayonets, daggers and sticks" to keep them from fleeing into China.

Vietnam's accusation came in the fourth session of talks with China on their border dispute, attacking Peking for the latest border clash in which seven people were killed and a score injured.

Vietnamese Vice Foreign Minister Hoang Bich Son accused China of assembling "tens of thousands" of trained saboteurs who are poised to cross the border to continue undermining bilateral relations. Son's speech was broadcast by the Vietnam News Agency.

The talks between Son and Chinese Vice Foreign Minister Chung Hsi-tung began Aug. 8 in Hanoi to try to resolve the dispute over 160,000 Chinese who streamed across the border from Vietnam until Peking closed the gate July 12.

Two Die In Fire

HOLLY SPRINGS, N.C. (UPI) — Two men died early Saturday in a fire that destroyed a mobile home about a mile south of Holly Springs, authorities said.

A family member identified the victims as James D. Bobbitt, 52, and Dwight D. Norris, 21.

Rescuers said by the time they and firemen arrived at the 5 a.m. blaze there was little they could do to save the men. The bodies, they said, were burned beyond recognition.

One rescue squad member said it appeared the fire began in the middle of the trailer. The cause was under investigation.

Lightning Hits Three

ATLANTIC BEACH, N.C. (UPI) — Three persons were struck by lightning Saturday when a severe thunderstorm hit an arcade.

A spokeswoman for Carteret General Hospital in Morehead City said one of the group, a young girl, was put in the intensive care unit and was listed in guarded condition.

Another girl, a younger sister, was admitted in stable condition, as was a Marine from Jacksonville, the spokeswoman said.

None of the three could be immediately identified.

Meanwhile, Coast Guard units from Fort Macon searched for two persons overdue on a trip in an outboard boat from Morehead City to Cape Lookout.

Wants State To Pay All Education Costs

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (UPI) — The North Carolina Association of County Commissioners overwhelmingly approved a resolution Saturday to have state government pay the entire cost of public education.

The resolution also said there should be "fair wages to all public school personnel."

Association President J.T. Knott of Wake County said that under the resolution the General Assembly would boost teachers' salaries and thus eliminate the need for local supplements.

Such a move would help equalize educational opportunities around the state, he said, and be fairer than local supplements because state appropriations are based on income tax while localities get their dollars from the property tax.

Sen. Edward Renfrow, DJohnston, told the commissioners North Carolina could "realistically pick up $260 million (now spent on schools by counties) and distribute it on an equal basis."

Knott disagreed with some commissioners who said such a move would diminish local control of their schools.

"We don't have local control now," he said. "The state pays 70 percent and the federal government pays 10 percent. How can we have any control?"

15 American Dead Coming Home

By RICHARD H. GROWALD

HANOI, Vietnam (UPI) — From a field of their last battle, the remains of 11 American fliers lost in the Vietnam War began their journey home Saturday.

Eight U.S. Congressmen and 16 U.S. servicemen bringing the bodies home tended the 11 two-foot-wide metal boxes like treasure chests.

They took them from the Vietnamese Communists at the deserted end of a runway, swaddled the boxes in American flags and nested them in a Starlifter hearse plane for the final flight.

No bands played. No guns saluted.

Rep. G.V. "Sonny" Montgomery, D-Miss., chairman of the congressional delegation that had come to help make a peace at the end of the war, stood with right hand on heart and tried to put it into words.

He looked at the boxes of the fliers. "We are going home," he said.

The gray clouds shattered with thunder — across rice paddies and up Thud Ridge, the mountain range so-called by U.S. fliers because it was the anti-aircraft gauntlet they had to run to hit the field, named Phuc Yen in war but now Hanoi's version of an international airport.

The 11 boxes joined four coffins put aboard the C141 an hour earlier in Vientiane, Laos.

Montgomery's delegation had come to Vietnam, then Laos to press the search for Americans still listed as missing in action and to scout for Congress and the White House the possibility of improving U.S. relations with the Communists of Hanoi and Vientiane. They had not expected to be able to bring home the 15 remains.

But both the Vietnam and Laos Communists, eager to improve relations and open trade with America, produced the remains and vowed to search for more crash sites.

Governors Think Revolt On Taxes Here To Stay

By CLAY F. RICHARDS
UPI Political Writer

BOSTON (UPI) — The nation's governors, gathering for their late summer meeting, believe the nationwide tax revolt is here to stay — so they're taking steps to cut taxes and state spending.

Surveyed by UPI on the eve of the meeting, the governors agreed there is a tax revolt sweeping the nation. All but one of the 50 governors responded to the survey.

Governors from smaller states, most in the south, said their fairly low tax rates have kept the revolt from hitting them. But even they said they were looking for areas to cut government costs.

"The tax revolt has been with us for 200 years and I don't expect it to disappear," said Gov. Michael Dukakis, D-Mass.

The tax revolt will be a main subjects of the conference, with discussions scheduled on nine major steps that can hold down state and local taxes.

"There is no question that discussion of the need to put effective controls on government taxes and spending will be a dominant aspect of the meeting," said Gov. William Milliken, R-Mich., chairman of the National Governors' Association.

Most governors said their states would be badly hit if something similar to Proposition 13 were passed, because unlike California, which had a $5 billion surplus, they have no financial cushion.

"There is a myth these days that the states have large surpluses — a myth that has added fuel to the taxpayer revolt," Milliken said.

A few governors said they didn't have much of a tax revolt problem.

Gov. Brendon Byrne, D-N.J., said there "is no significant momentum for a tax revolt here." That is because he forced passage of the state's first income tax during his first term, an unpopular move that almost resulted in his defeat last year. He survived and is now praised because the income tax permitted property tax rebates.

Here is what some governors want to do in the area of tax cuts and government spending:

Gov. Milton Shapp, D-Pa. — "A major revision in public finance is an absolute necessity. Property taxes should be eliminated as a source of educational finance and replaced by a national education trust fund which would utilize the federal income tax system to finance schooling.

Gov. John V. Evans, D-Idaho — "A fixed tax credit for all individuals paying property taxes."

Gov. Jim Thompson, R-Ill. — "I am convinced the answers lie in controlling government spending and relating taxation and spending to needed services and the public's ability and desire to pay for those services.

Gov. Meldrim Thomson, RN.H. — "I am advocating that no increase in spending in any one year could exceed 5 percent except by a two-thirds vote of the appropriating authority.

Gov. Dixy Lee Ray, D-Wash — "By 1981 the state will have taken over full funding of kindergarten through grade 12 education costs, thereby relieving the property tax of the burden. The sales tax was just removed from food products.

Gov. Hugh Carey, D-N.Y. — "My administation already is embarked on a campaiogn of tax relief. My administration has reduced the growth in state spending in each of the last three years. Ceilings on taxes are not needed since we are already cutting taxes.

Gov. Bob Straub, D-Ore — "I have suggested that the $200 million state surplus be earmarked for property tax relief.

George Wallace, D-Ala. — "I have proposed a close examination of current programs and services, the discontinuance of give-away welfare programs on the national level and a close eye toward wasteful spending in all areas of governement."

Gov. John Dalton, R-Va. — "I have approached reducing the size and cost of state government from the other end, by eliminating some 2,700 state jobs and holding down on other expenses."

Gov. Richard Snelling, R-Vt — "I have already proposed amending the state constitution to place a limit on the annual growth of the state budget.

Gov. Robert Bennett, R-Kan — "I proposed amending the Kansas constitution to provide for a local property tax lid and a spending lid on state governemnt.

Gov. Edwin Edwards, D-La. — There is virtually no state property tax. Parish (county) and city property taxes are second lowest in the nation. Oil and gas severance taxes make the difference here. I don't even think about it."

Jenkins Honored By N. C. Civitans

GREENVILLE NOTE

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Dr. Leo Jenkins, chancellor emeritus of East Carolina University, was honored here Saturday night as the Civitan Club's District East Citizen of the Year.

More than 300 Civitans and their families attended the twoday Civitan meeting here, which was culminated with the awards banquet Saturday night. Bill Marley, district governor, presided over the session and presented the award to Jenkins.

In his tribute to Jenkins, Marley noted that Jenkins was a native of New Jersey who came to North Carolina following service in the U. S. Marine Corps during World War II. Jenkins was named dean at ECU, became ECU's president in 1960 and chancellor in 1972. He was named chancellor emeritus during ECU commencement exercises this spring.

"Since 1947, East Carolina University has grown from 20 major programs to 174 programs, from 18 buildings on 148 acres to 74 buildings on 410 acres, and from an annual budget of $1.9 million to $35 million," Marley said.

"This progress has not come easy. This Leo the Lion is not a paper lion," Marley added.

Civitan's District East is comprised of 75 Civitan Clubs located from Guilford County to the eastern boundary of the state.

Search On

RIEGLEWOOD, N.C. (UPI) — State Highway troopers, rescue units and the Civil Air Patrol searched eastern Columbus County near Wilmington Saturday for a small plane that eyewitnesses said was struck by lightning.

The four-passenger plane reportedly was flying in the area and lost radio contact with Washington traffic controllers at about the same time witnesses said they saw a small plane struck by lightning.

Wants Convictions Dismissed

CHICAGO (AP) — Charging collusion between judges and prosecutors in the Chicago 7 trial, attorney William Kunstler has asked a federal court to dismiss contempt convictions against him and three defendants.

Kunstler also charged that the FBI bugged defense strategy sessions during the 1968 riot conspiracy trial before U.S. District Judge Julius J. Hoffman. The contempt convictions stem from the behavior of Kunstler, Abbie Hoffman, Jerry Rubin and David Dellinger during that trial.

In his motion Friday, Kunstler said newly discovered evidence "will demonstrate that the entire trial simply did not constitute a judicial proceeding."

Hunt's Comments

By WILLIAM COTTERELL

BOSTON (UPI) — North Carolina Gov. James B. Hunt said existing federal urban policies "discriminate against small cities" in their emphasis on combatting unemployment and urban blight in decaying downtown poverty pockets.

Hunt, who takes over as chairman of the Southern Growth Policies Board next month, told representatives of Northern and Midwestern lobbying groups that smalltown America has downtown problems as bad as those in New York or Detroit, but that federal attention is concentrated on the better-known cities. Hunt said that 98 percent of the nation's cities have populations of 10,000 or less.

He said that — instead of opposing fighting community development grants to smaller towns — representatives of northern and midwest cities should recognize that the midsize towns have growing pains, too. Hunt said the recent federal aid to New York was made possible because "Southerners found it essential and a humane thing to do," but that some big city congressmen still fight federal aid to rural areas.

"These small cities, in so many cases, already have decaying core areas," said Hunt. "The present federal policies discriminate against small cities."

Hunt said the Community Development Act of 1977 provides that 80 percent of its money must "go to units in metro areas," although the current population shift is away from the cities and toward the small towns. He also said areas "with high population density" are favored for federal hospital grants, although many small towns are in greater need of a doctor or clinic.

"Our administration in Washington, which I strongly support, has only addressed the urban problems of the large, distressed cities," said Hunt.

The governor said the National Governors Association, which begins its convention in Boston Sunday, should urge the White House and Congress to enact "state-balanced growth plans" rather than pinpointing assistance to big cities. Hunt said the states have an obligation to put such an overall presentation before the federal government, rather than expecting Washington to consider small towns itself.

"It seems like the only thing we address is what can Washington do — well, damn it, Washington needs to do some things, but we need to do some things ourselves," said Hunt. "We need a whole different mind set; we have been too willing to just wait for Washington to hand it down, or to suggest the programs or suggest the guidelines."

Hunt also said the Carter administration has made a strong commitment to the states for giving governors a voice in economic development — particularly attracting overseas investment and expanding foreign markets. He questioned "how serious we see this and whether we're ready for an allout effort to get the economy of the United States moving again."

He said the states and local governments need "massive investments" for transportation and water pollution control, for instance, and that private capital formation for those purposes might be encouraged though loan guarantees from Washington. Hunt said, however, that the states would have to "come up with a good, sound, well-documented plan" for state-controlled smalltown development programs.

Disappointed Over Failures

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Harry E. Groves, dean of the North Carolina Central University Law School, said Friday he is "disappointed and dissatisfied" over the number of NCCU graduates who failed the state bar examination last month.

Groves issued a statement following reports showing that only 22 of the 43 NCCU Law School students taking the test for the first time got passing scores.

NCCU, a predominantly black school, is striving to improve its law school. Eighty-two percent of the school's graduates who took the test last year passed it, sparking optimism on the part of Groves and other officials.

But Groves said Friday it was unfair to compare NCCU to other law schools with greater resources.

Struggling With PCB Problems

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Agriculture, education, transportation and environmental officials are continuing to struggle with problems resulting from the apparently deliberate dumping of toxic PCBs along North Carolina highways this summer.

While sanitary engineers screened sites for burial of PCB-laden soil, educators and transportation leaders met Friday to discuss possible dangers to students who must await school buses in contaminated areas and Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham warned farmers to use care in harvesting crops from fields near PCB spills.

James F. Stamey, assistant chief of the state sanitary engineering section, said officials are checking several areas as possible burial grounds for contaminated soil that will be scooped up from about 270 miles of road shoulders where PCBs have been detected.

Charged In Murder Of Freshmen

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A 20-year-old Raleigh man has been charged with murder in the fatal shootings of two Shaw University freshmen from New Jersey.

Police said Carlton D. Montague was charged with two counts of murder Friday afternoon. He was held without bond pending a hearing.

Geoffrey Michael McArthur, 18, of East Orange, N.J., and Farley D. Chesley of Orange, N.J., were shot to death early Friday on a city street.

A third student, Derrick Owens of Montclair, N.J., said he, McArthur and Chesley were going to buy snacks about 1 a.m. Friday when they got into an argument with three men sitting on a wall near a store.

Construction Hearing Set

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — The Carteret County Chamber of Commerce is planning a public forum to discuss the proposed construction of a propane storage terminal on nearby Radio Island.

Dr. John Costlow, director of the Duke University Marine Laboratory at Pivers Island, told a civic club this week that state and local governments are supporting the proposal without telling local residents of dangers that might result.

The chamber of commerce has scheduled a forum on the matter Sept. 6 at the Duke Marine facility.

State officials and the Carteret County Economic Development Commission are supporting plans by Gulf Interstate of Houston, Tex., to build a 20-million-gallon storage terminal, which company officials maintain would have adequate safety features to prevent any danger to populated areas.

Exciting Developments Ahead

Originally planned as a class of 32 first year students the number was increased to 36 with the approval of accreditation officials.

The new first year class will join the 28 students who made history last year as the initial class in the newly created four-year School of Medicine. There had been previous one-year classes which transferred to Chapel Hill.

As the number of medical students increases so has the faculty, with 82 members to be on the staff as the fall semester begins.

Instruction will continue to be in Ragsdale — remodeled for that purpose — the science complex, Pitt County Memorial Hospital and soon in a wing of the old hospital.

In the future is a $25 million building to be constructed next to Pitt County Memorial. Funds have been appropriated and planning is underway for the building. Site work has been going on for some time.

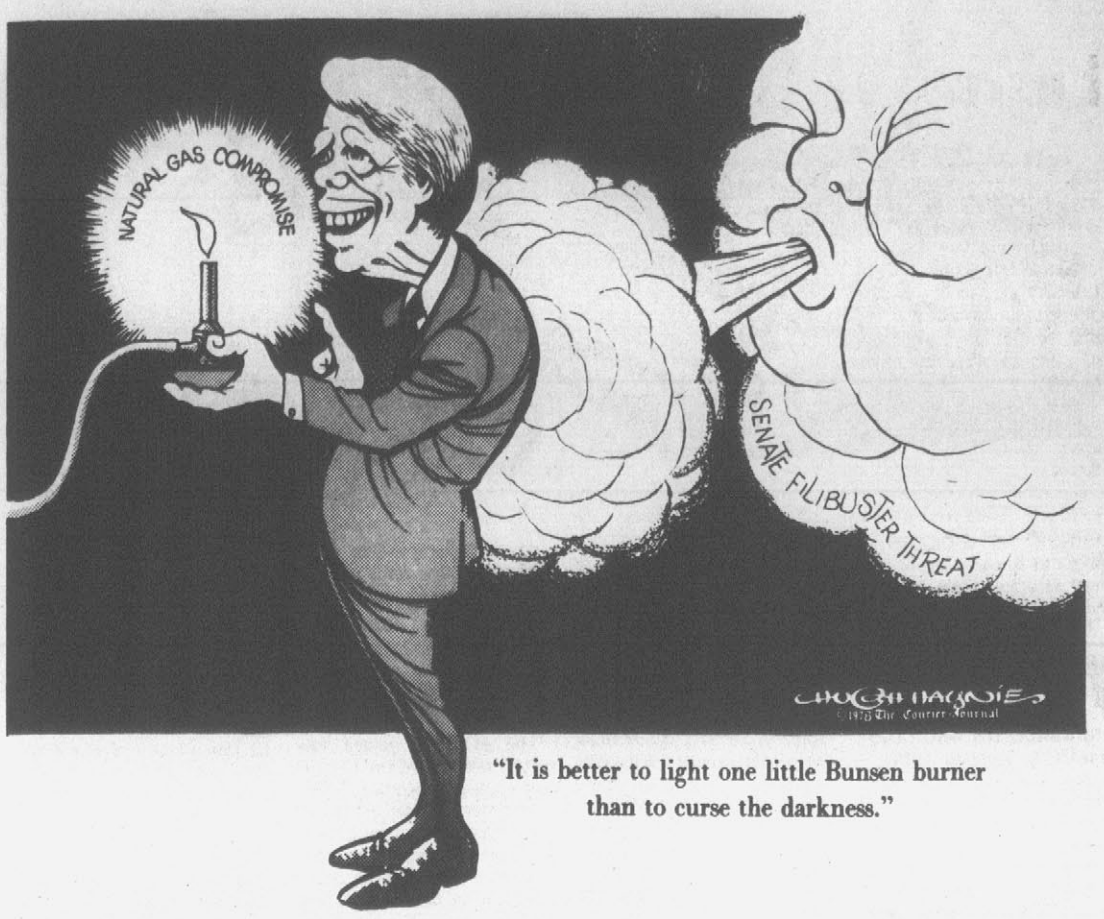

Beginning of a new class has already become routine for the ECU School of Medicine, but there are many exciting developments ahead, as the school goes about the job of training new physicians and providing better health care for Eastern North Carolina.

Cigarette Consumption Isn't Lagging

The Foreign Agricultural Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture says world production rose two percent in 1977 — from 4.05l trillion cigarettes in 1976 to 4.127 trillion in 1977.

The tobacco industry is beset by problems, but one of them, so far at least, isn't lack of buyers.

Seeks Real Tax Cut

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—State Senator Marshall A. Rauch, D-Gaston, says he is in favor of a "real tax cut" for North Carolinians; not the token porposal being promoted by the administration of Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr.

As chairman of the Senate Committee on Finance, Rauch would carry a prime responsibility for action in the 1979 General Assembly on a tax reduction.

"But it all depends on what the administration pushes for," Rauch said in deference to the strength being exercised in the General Assembly by the governor.

"It's easy enough for a committee chairman to block a proposal...but it's awfully difficult to initiate anything," he said.

The "token" tax cut now being talked would be a one-time credit against income taxes totalling some $100 million.

Rauch says he would prefer a readjustment of the income tax scale on a permanent basis so that high income people would pay more while those below a certain figure (perhaps $10,000 a year) would pay less.

Such a major adjustment would face two problems: legislators are notably slow to tamper with tax law for fear of creating unanticipated problems; and Gov. Hunt remains committed to any tax increase even for a small group of people in any particular category.

Overlooked

In all the salary raising activities of state government one group has consistently been overlooked: substitute teachers.

Substitutes still get $20 per day, the same as five years ago, while teacher pay has nearly doubled.

"He or she is usually called at 7 a.m., must be in the classroom when the children arrive, is responsible for teaching, playground supervision, lunchroom behavior, bus-loading and is able to leave the school after the children have left," a substitute complains in a note. And substitutes generally must be fully certified teachers to do the work.

This individual asked a member of the General Assembly budget committee why substitute teachers have been ignored, and the response is telling: "he wanted to know if the substitutes had a group to lobby or work for them."

Honest Politician

A slip of the tongue produced hilarity at a recent press conference by Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr.

When asked if special equipment would be needed to handle distribution of charcoal on roadside chemical spills in the state, he responded that present road equipment could do the job.

It would be the same equipment, he explained, which normally distributes fertilizer. And as a farmer, he went on, he was fully acquainted with such techniques.

Reporters familiar with politics broke into laughter as the realization dawned that spreading fertilizer was not the province of farmers, alone. The red-faced governor hastened to add that he was referring to "chemical fertilizers."

Sunday Morning Notes

For the team members, coaches, trainers and others connected with the program, preparation means long hours in the hot sun on the practice fields along Charles Boulevard. No matter how tough the practice sessions get, the players can take comfort in the fact that it will be even tougher when they face opponents who are bent on winning in scheduled games.

For some of the football players there is extra duty to get in shape. Included are sessions of running up the seat rows in Ficklen Stadium — all 58 of them.

Fans who have climbed to the top of the stadium know that it is pretty winding, even at a walking pace.

several team members were at work running to the top of Ficklen on a recent morning.

Pretty soon one of the traditional campus dogs showed up to see what it was all about.

Being affectionate towards the students, as campus dogs tend to be, the animal soon made his way up in the stands. As the football players came down from the top, the dog joined them. As they started running back up, the dog tried it.

40 Years Ago Today

W. T. Owens, Greenville post office affiliate, said today that plans are being mapped out for an eastern district meeting of the North Carolina Federation of Post Office Clerks to be held in Greenville on September 10 at 8 p.m.

An address by William I. Horner, national legislative representative of post office clerks' will feature the session. A banquet is being planned for the delegates to the meeting, the purpose of which is to form a permanent organization of post office clerks in Eastern North Carolina. Owens will be chairman of the session.

While plans for the meeting are in the embryonic stage, hope was expressed that several state dignitaries could attend and make talks.

Bad tobacco sold well and good tobacco sold badly on the opening days, growers in Raleigh said today and they blame the allotment of equalization board for the prices.

The kick is to be made in Washington, D. C., as there is nothing that can be done locally. The complaint of growers in Wake, Nash, Pitt and Edgecombe counties is that the equalization board is not an eastern body, Johnston County being the farthest east of all the communities represented.

The point, which the displeased growers make, is that there are apalling inequalities in the allotments, that middle counties of the state which have been growing small quantities of tobacco are given larger allotments and that the easterners feel the force of the ax. There is nothing the General Assembly can do about it, and only a visit to James B. Hunt in Washington, D. C. can bring relief, these growers say.

Won't Change Minds

By SHARON BOND
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State officials remain steadfast in their conviction that North Carolina must have a veterinary school, despite surveys which show it isn't needed, and even opponents have given up hope of stopping it.

"If Jesus Christ came down and said, 'Don't build that school because it is a waste of $35 million,' they would do it anyway," said state Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, a long-time critic of the idea.

A survey commissioned by the American Veterinary Medical Association predicts a surplus of veterinarians by 1985. The report said there are about enough veterinarians right now.

But William C. Friday, president of the University of North Carolina system, said the survey would not affect the proposed North Carolina school. Friday, who has not seen the survey, said the only potential obstacle to the North Carolina school is money.

The General Assembly has appropriated more than $9 million for the school, eventually expected to cost about $35 million.

Friday said the next step will be a request to the legislature for between $22 million and $25 million. The survey shouldn't affect the legislature's decision, he said, but budget considerations might.

"I think the essential point is that the livestock industry is now a billion dollar one in North Carolina," Friday said.

Gary Pearce, press secretary to Gov. Jim Hunt, said that while there may be a surplus of veterinarians nationally, there is a shortage in North Carolina, according to the Southern Regional Education Board.

That board issued a report earlier this year saying existing vet schools will produce enough annimal doctors to serve the South in the coming years.

The War Goes On

By PETER ARNETT
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — As America is reaching out to resolve its political differences with Vietnam, a bitter gulf dividing some of the war's survivors grows deeper.

It has led to charges of treason, a lawsuit, a suicide and continuing animosity.

The conflict is between two groups of Americans who were held prisoner in North Vietnam during the war — those who resisted their captors and those who willingly cooperated.

Neither side is large in this personal war. Both are convinced they are right. And the attacks on the anti-war POWs have only strengthened their convictions.

"Most of the POWs celebrate the day they were released. But I celebrate the day I was captured,," said Robert P. Chenoweth, a former U.S. army sergeant taken prisoner in 1968. "It was a red-letter day for me, the day I began understanding another race."

A peace committee that Chenoweth helped form actively opposed the war through taped statements and meetings with visiting pacifists.

Chenoweth's group infuriated senior Air Force and Navy officers also held prisoner. They demanded that the primary guide for resisting their captors be the U.S. Military Code of Conduct's requirement that only name, rank and serial number be given.

Two of these officers later filed charges against 10 in the anti-war group. The charges were dropped on compassionate grounds after the suicide of one of those named, Abel Kavanaugh of Westminster, Colo. He left a note saying he could not face imprisonment again.

The code of conduct has since been reworded to allow POWs greater latitude in responding to questions from their captors. The anti-war POWs see this as one vindication of their actions.

However, several books by former POWs and others have harshly criticized Chenoweth and the other anti-war prisoners. The critics continue to speak out against them on talk shows and on the lecture circuit.

On the other hand, at least four of the anti-war prisoners are still convinced they were right and continue to say so — also disputing the general view that torture was widespread in Vietnamese prison camps.

"The majority of POWs felt the same way I did but were reluctant to assist us because of possible reprisals at home," said Michael Branch, a former Army specialist 4th class who spent five years in prison and admitted signing anti-war statements, appearing on regular radio programs in Hanoi and writing letters to President Nixon and congressmen denouncing the war.

"I'm only sorry I didn't cooperate sooner," said Branch, now a graduate student at Ohio University at Athens. He is studying Southeast Asian politics.

Former U.S. Marine Lt. Col. Ed Miller of Los Angeles said he "openly criticized the war, I have always sad what I think. Our country thrives on dissent."

He was shot down in October 1967 and said he attempted to resist giving classified information. Since coming home, Miller has gotten a law degree and says he is "a lawyer for the downtrodden."

These prisoners also dispute the other POWs' views on torture.

"I don't believe the North Vietnamese had a systematic plan to torture prisoners," said Alfonso Riate of Los Angeles, a former Marine master sergeant imprisoned in 1967. He said he was held in several camps, including the notorious "Hanoi Hilton."

"To resist was to be punished, as I was after two unsuccessful escape attempts," Riate said. "But overall I think they treated us very well."

Miller said, "I don't believe most of the torture stories. I would say around 10 percent were tortured. One man I know was placed in solitary after going out of his way to give his captors a hard time."

"To my knowledge," said Chenoweth, "30 or 35 POWs were tortured, and they were the hardliners who believed implacably in adhering to every word of the code of conduct. I know torture was not a policy of the Vietnamese."

The former POWs talk

Other Editors Say Anti-Nuclear

Goldsboro News-Argus

Organized opposition to nuclear power production in this state should not go unchallenged. North Carolina in one of the leaders today in plans to produce electricity with nuclear generating plants.

There are some facts about nuclear power generating plants which can be presented with documentation:

1. There has never been a fatal accident involving radiation at a commercial nuclear power plant.
2. Authoritative studies have proven nuclear generating plants far safer than those using coal.
3. It is impossible for a power plant's nuclear reactor to explode.
4. While plants are located in areas where earthquakes are unlikely, the facilities are constructed to withstand major shocks.
5. Nuclear plants are economically feasible.
6. Safe disposal methods for nuclear waste have been perfected and are in use in at least two foreign counties.

There are those, of course, who envision a nation in which solar heat collectors and windmills provide all of our energy needs. How many windmills and solar collectors would it take to provide energy for even a medium size city?

The truth of the matter is, in many parts of the nation, there is no economically acceptable substitute today for nuclear power plants. Yet, anitnuclear forces, with a fervor reminiscent of the campus unrest of the 1960s, have managed to time and again block nuclear power plant construction.

We have seen too many times in this country where a fanatical few have managed to command center stage and wield tremendous influence with governing bodies. The vocal few succeed in the absence of opposition from the masses.

We should not—must not—let ourselves and our government be stampeded. It has happened in too many places already.

Strength For Today

THE SOURCE OF POWER

A puny vine growing in the corner of a vineyard of Hampton Court, a royal palace in England, suddenly produced an abundant crop of grapes. The head gardener, wishing to find the reason for this sudden transformation, began exploring the roots of the vine. To his surprise he found that they had tapped into a nearby spring.

Jesus spoke of himself as a well of water springing up into eternal life. When people find that well, their lives are transformed. Up to that time their lives have not been very productive, yet they have been satisfied, and doubtless the people close to them have been satisfied, if only because no one could visualize anything else.

But when the roots of a person's life reach out and tap the spritiual resources of the eternal, something new begins to happen. Our lives are spiritually weak not because God is indifferent to our needs, but because we have not spread out the roots of our lives to tap the sources of His power.

TIP Is Attracting Attention

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Among all the proposals advanced of late for fighting inflation, few have attracted as much interest as an idea called TIP.

The acronym stands for "taxbased incomes policy," an approach in which the government sets up tax incentives for companies to hold wage or price increases within a specified limit.

Advocates of TIP in one form or another have included such prominent economists as Arthur Okun of the Brookings Institution and Henry Wallich of the Federal Reserve.

The idea, being relatively fresh and untried, also seems to hold some attraction because it has no past record of failure. That sets it apart from such ideas as direct wage-price controls, which were imposed by the Nixon administration in 1971-74.

Some observers contend that controls still might work, if applied correctly. But few are willing to endorse them on the basis of the country's last experience with them, which was followed by two-digit inflation in 1974 and then the steepest recession since the 1930s.

Similarly, many economy-watchers see little real progress emerging from the Carter administration's jawboning efforts to get companies and unions to hold down wages and prices through voluntary restraint. Merely by default, then, TIP tends to draw some interest.

The Wall Street economic consulting firm of A. Gary Schilling & Co. argues, however, that the idea has several potential pitfalls.

The firm acknowledged in a recent report that TIP looks, at first glance, like an appealingly simple proposition.

Assume, for the purposes of example, that a wage-increase limit has been set at 7 percent a year. If employees of a given company receive an 8 percent pay increase, then the company's tax bracket for that year would automatically be raised, say, from 36 percent to 38 percent.

There are also proposed plans using rewards rather than penalties. Thus, the company that held to the 7 percent wage limit could have its tax owed reduced from 36 percent to 34 percent of its earnings.

This seemingly straightforward arrangement runs into its first obstacle when the question comes up of whether wages or prices should be the focus. From the company side comes the argument that it would work well only with wages; organized labor is likely to believe that prices are the only fair and proper target.

Light Of History

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Aug. 27, the 239th day of 1978. There are 126 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1945, American troops began landing in Japan at the end of World War II. It was the first foreign occupation of that country in modern history.

On this date:

In 1776, the British were victorious in the Revolutionary War battle of Long Island in New York.

In 1859, the first oil well in the United States was drilled near Titusville, Pa.

In 1862, Italian patriot Giuseppe Garibaldi was seized as he was on his way to capture Rome.

In 1928, the Kellogg-Briand Pact to outlaw war was signed in Paris.

In 1939, Nazi Germany demanded the city of Danzig and the Polish corridor.

Ten years ago: U.S. commanders in Saigon reported 7,500 enemy soldiers killed in nine days of fighting.

Five years ago: An exploding letter bomb blew off in the hand of secretary at the British embassy in Washington.

One year ago: Officials said relations between Washington and Moscow had become less strained because of cooperation in dissuading South Africa from proceeding with a nuclear bomb test.

Today's birthdays: Economist Walter Heller is 63 years old.

Thought for today: The emotions may be endless. The more we express them, the more we may have to express — British novelist E.M. Forster.

Government About To Regulate Once More

By JAMES KILPATRICK

One of the most depressing aspects of our supposedly free society is the government's itch to regulate the lives of the people. A companion aspect, equally depressing, is the people's willingness to have the government regulate their lives. The pending pop, gum and candy decree provides a case in point.

Back in April, the Food and Nutrition Service of the Department of Agriculture put forth a proposal having to do with the sale of foods in competition with lunches sold under the National School Lunch Program. The rules would prohibit the sale of soda water, frozen desserts, candy and chewing gum on school premises until after the last lunch period.

Carol Tucker Foreman, assistant secretary for food and consumer services, justified the proposed rule in this fashion: Many parents, nutritionists, school administrators, teachers and physicians have become increasingly concerned about competitive foods in the public schools. They believe the sale of these snacks may contribute substantially to increased plate waste, reduced participation in the program, and a general decline in the consumption of nutritious foods.

Mrs. Foreman emphasized that her department did not intend to be unreasonable. We are aware, she said, that many nutritious items are sold in the schools, including fruits, soups and ice cream. These could still be sold at any time. The intent is to prohibit the sale of only those foods "that do not make a positive nutritional contribution in terms of their overall impact on children's diets, dietary habits and appetites."

On that basis, Mrs. Foreman proposed to crack down on sales of soda pop, chewing gum, sherbets, ices, and an array of candies including, but not limited to hard candies, creams, jelly and gum-like candies, marshmallows, nougats, fudges, toffees, carmels, chocolates and chocolate-coated fruits and nuts.

The department advertised the proposed regulation on April 25, and at first set June 9 as the deadline for comments. The idea was to get the rule into operation by August 1, so that it would apply to the entire school year. But so many comments came pouring in that the deadline was extended to June 28. When they finally called a half, 2,176 letters stacked up.

Last week the School Programs Division completed an analysis of the comments. The melancholy fact—melancholy to me, anyhow— is that 82 percent of the letter writers approved the proposed regulation.

That is not all. Of the nearly 1,800 approving letters, roughly half asked that the regulation be amended to make it stronger. Many persons wanted competitive foods banned entirely. Others wanted the list of prohibited items expanded. On the opposing side, not even 10 percent protested the regulation as an unnecessary intrusion upon the responsibility of parents and school officials.

Quite a few school superintendents objected that Mrs. Foreman's rule would serve only to drive the children across the street to buy soda pop and chewing gum. This was the view of high school principals in Clark County, Nevada. They've been doing well, selling the Type A government lunch, with negligible plate waste and substantial freedom for the kids to buy competing snack foods if they want to. The Nevada principals saw the proposed regulation as an arbitrary decision that would have regressive results.

But this was a distinctly minority voice. The Nevadans were drowned out by a chorus demanding not less regulation, but more. Heartened by the response, Mrs. Foreman's outfit expects to issue a regulation next month that could become effective in the middle of the coming school year.

I don't intend to jump up and down, go into convulsions, or have the purple coniption fits. But the impending rule is one more little imposition by the federal bureaucracy upon an area that ought to be left to individual localities and to individual families. Local school systems are perfectly capable of writing their own rules and regulations on the sale of food. Parents can lay down the law to their children on the consumption of Mooey-Gooey-Wooey bars. Why do we need a federal decree?

The answer is that we don't need a federal decree, but we are about to get one anyhow. And another, and another, and another, unto the end of time.

openly about their experiences. Riate, who works with disabled veterans in an outreach program, said, "I tell them I suffer a stigma from the war. Most of them are sympathetic. They say I have done something few have ever done, that I resisted the war in prison. As the years go by, I feel I am being vindicated."

Chenoweth, who works for a Washington, D.C., research firm, said people continue to be surprised when he talks of his treatment during imprisonment and when he says he was sorry to leave Vietnam.

"I knew there was no danger from our captors," he said. "What I was most concerned about was our reception back when we would get released."

Branch is still bitter about the treatment he received when he came home. He said he wa ill with dysentery and was placed alone in a room at the Ireland Army Hospital at Fort Knox, Ky., with two military policemen outside his door.

Nowadays, in his classes, Branch argues with professors who he thinks do not understand the subtleties of Southeast Asian politics.

firm of Arthur D. Little Inc. of Cambridge, Mass., polled 2,200 veterinarians, all schools of veterinary medicine, departments of veterinary science, medical schools and all state veterinarians, according to the survey summary.

But the president of the North Carolina Veterinary Association said it didn't make sense to ask veterinarians if more vets were needed.

"That's like asking a man who owns an Esso station if he thinks a Texaco station is needed across the street," said Dr. D. Earl Hightower of Jefferson.

Dr. Terrence Curtin, head of the School of Veterinary Science at NCSU, said the number of vets polled represented less than 10 percent of the practicing vets in the country.

Curtin said there is a need for vets in all five types of practice covered in the survey, but particularly in the care of animals vital to the economy.

"The survey and its results will be a pain in the neck," Curtin said, "because everybody that said 'I told you so' will stand up and say it again."

But Adams said the survey wouldn't stop the new school.

"I don't think there is anything that would have made a difference," he said.

The run to the top was just too much for the dog, who after all, hadn't been through the prior conditioning, and each time he stopped before reaching the top.

Finally the dog gave it up and returned to the ground and other interests. No doubt with that attitude, he won't even qualify for team mascot.

At one time Greenville came alive in the fall when tobacco market opened. Now the opening is spread out through the summer.

Local residents will notice an abrupt change starting this weekend as the 12,000 students and hundreds of faculty members return to the ECU campus. As of today streets will be busy and restaurants crowded. A third of Greenville's population will abruptly be back in town.

Beating On Rocks Creates Sculptures

By GAIL MICHAELS

DAN RIDGE, Ky.—Lonnie Spencer, a soft-spoken man dressed western style, crouches over his work. A fissure is made here, a rough spot smoothed there and what was once just an ordinary rock begins to have life of its own.

Working in his front yard on Dan Ridge, Kentucky, Spencer says he taught himself to sculpt, just lets the rocks themselves decide what they eventually become.

"Usually I pick out a big rock and just start beating on it," he explains with a smile. "Whatever it starts to look like after a while, that's what I make out of it. Take that rock over there," he points to the bust of a coal miner at the edge of his front yard near the road. "It just looked like a coal miner, so that's what I made it."

Spencer has been sculpting as "a pastime" since 1968, when the head injury he suffered while employed at a local rock quarry left him too disabled to return to work.

"I needed to do something to pass the time," he recalls, "so I took to beating on rocks."

But his interest in cutting shapes and figures began earlier than this, with the whittling he did as a youngster. Over the years, small wooden figures became large, carved and painted totem poles. When whittling was no longer a challenge, Spencer moved on to stone.

"I like sandstone the best," he says, shooing the puppies that play around his feet. "Because it's easier to work with than most other rock. I get most of my rocks from Chimney Rock, although some have come from other local places. They each weigh about 100 to 150 pounds each."

Although all the rocks are large and heavy, the 40-year-old Kentucky native doesn't work with any that are huge enough to do an entire figure. Thus, all he sculpts is the head and shoulders of his subject.

"It takes about two or three hours to do a head if it's done in one sitting," Spencer explains. "But I usually don't do them that way. Instead, I work awhile and then I stop and drink some coffee or something. Then I go back and work on it again. This way it usually takes me two or three days to get one from start to finish."

Using a standard size hammer and chisel, Spencer has created between 30 and 50 sculptures, he estimates. Though he has sold a few, most he gives away to friends and neighbors. But one-the sculpture Spencer says has caused him both the most grief and the most pleasure-is on permanent display at the University of Kentucky in Lexington.

"It's the head of a cowboy,, he says, "and I consider it to be the hardest one I've done because it's made in two pieces. The cowboy's hat comes off."

Three other busts are also on display, these in the sculptor's yard where they can easily be seen from the road.

"People drive by all the time and look at them," Spencer says, gesturing towards the coal miner, pigtailed Indian, and a leering devil. "But they never get out and ask about them. I may have to move them to the backyard though, before someone has a wreck in my front yard," he adds, laughing.

Besides peering at the finished pieces passersby also crane their necks to see Spencer in his front yard chipping away on his latest work-an Indian chief complete, with feathered head dress. How did he pick his subject?

"Well," he drawls softly, "it just started to look like an Indian...."

Buying In-Season Is Out-Of-Season

It constantly amazes me that some women can anticipate in August a pants seam popping in December and can buy a replacement four months ahead of time.

I can usually anticipate a half-minute before it pops . . . just after I've used a shoe horn to wriggle in.

And I have to believe that the majority of women are like me. We need cotton skirts in August and wool slacks in January. We do not buy our winter wardrobes in July and our summer wardrobes in February.

We are out of luck.

If the strap on our only bathing suit snaps a week before a Labor Day beach weekend, our only recourse is to sew together two mittens and cut two holes in a stocking cap.

I have shivered past rows of bikini-clad mannekins in 20 degree weather only to walk into a department store and find that the mufflers were sent back to the warehouse two months before.

This kind of situation seems to happen to me at least once a season, and it is getting increasingly frustrating. This week when I walked past a window display of a polar bear and a beautiful girl clad in a ski outfit, I almost broke the window and handed her my canteen before I realized that she was only a dummy.

But the real dummies were inside. Models twirled around the store in cashmere coats. Salesladies were dressed in Pendleton wool. Of course, the store was doing everything in its power to sell these outfits. The air conditioning was turned down to 33 degrees.

I pulled my Mickey Mouse t-shirt to my elbows and knocked my blue knees through the "Misses" section.

"Can I help you?" a saleslady wearing a long plaid skirt and a velveteen blazer asked.

"Yes," I said, trying to hush my chattering teeth. "I'd like a nice dress to wear to church next Sunday. The sleeves just fell off my old one."

"I think we've got just the thing. We have a rack of lovely dresses right over there," she said.

I looked in the direction indicated by her graciously extended arm. There were corduroy jumpers, wool skirt and vest combinations, ultra-suede dresses, and a couple of long sweater-dresses. I could feel icicles forming on my nose, but I was not about to be fooled. "You've got to be kidding," I said. "I was thinking of something a little cooler."

"I'm sorry. We don't have any of those dresses left," she said. "Can't I interest you in something that's in season."

"In season!" I squeaked. "It's a hundred degrees outside."

"I meant the fashion season," she sniffed. "You need to buy your fall and winter wardrobe now, while the clothes last."

"You mean, before you put them up. I have to tell you, I'm getting sick of this. Buying coats in August is absurd. I'm sick of not finding the clothes I need when I need them, and I will not buy them when I don't need them and can't know when I will need them. I, for one, refuse to conform to this idiocy!" I finished with a flourish of my goose-pimpled arms.

The saleslady looked me over from head to toe. "Well," she said cooly. "No wonder you look the way you do."

African 'Old Guard' Reduced To Six With Death Of Kenyatta

By SERGE SCHMEMANN
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The death of Kenya's President Jomo Kenyatta has reduced to only six the "old guard" of African leaders who led their nations to independence and have survived the ensuing turmoil.

Some 42 coups, countercoups and palace revolts and several civil wars over the past two decades have all but cleared the roll of black nationalist leaders who presided over the demise of colonialism across the African continent.

Kenyatta, a witch doctor's son born in the last century, was probably best known as the African leader who led revolts against European colonial powers and most admired for guiding his nation to prosperity and stability.

Unlike the majority of his colleagues, he died peacefully in bed. His body is now lying in state following his death Tuesday.

By contrast Ghana's legendary Kwame Nkrumah, who opened the era of decolonialization in 1957 when his nation gained independence from Britain, was deposed while on a visit to Peking and died in exile.

Zaire — then known as the Congo — was independent from Belgium only five days in 1960 when it plunged into chaos. Within a year its radical first prime minister, Patrice Lumumba, was dead.

The surviving members of the "old guard" include two presidents of former British colonies, Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia and Julius Nyerere of Tanzania. The other four govern nations once ruled by France: Leopold Senghor of Senegal, Felix Houphouet-Boigny of Ivory Coast, Sekou Toure of Guinea, and Ahmadou Ahidjo of Cameroon.

Until a palace coup two months ago, the list also included Moktar Ould Daddah of the former French colony of Mauritania.

Those who still rule have persevered through varying combinations of charisma, ruthlessness, skillful politics and just pure luck.

Like all but a handful of the leaders of Africa's 53 independent states, they have abandoned all but vestiges of participatory democracy to counter the sharply conflicting and often incompatible ideologies, tribal cultures and languages that pull this continent apart.

Zambia's 54-year-old Kaunda, for example, presides over 70odd tribes in a landlocked nation wedged among a chronically unstable Zaire; Angola, which is supported by Cuban troops; and Rhodesia, which only now is headed toward black rule.

Although a Christian idealist who preaches nonviolence, Kaunda supports guerrillas fighting in Rhodesia and has detained political opponents at home.

Kaunda's pivotal role in southern Africa and his aspirations to an all-Africa mantle have been somewhat eroded by economic chaos at home prompted by the drop in the world price of Zambia's major export, copper.

Tanzania's Nyerere, 56, has earned the title "the conscience of Africa" for his quiet efforts to create a new socialist philosophy for the developing world.

A quiet visionary, Nyerere has given his relatively poor nation a stability unusual in Africa. His famous Arusha declaration of 1967 has made "Ujamaa," the Swahili word for familyhood, common across Africa as a symbol of an African brand of rural socialism.

Sekou Toure of Guinea, 56, has had the longest reign of the old guard, leading his West African nation since 1958.

In a bold move that made him somewhat of an enduring hero to younger black pan-Africanists, Toure severed all links to France at independence. "We prefer poverty in liberty to riches in slavery," he declared.

But Toure's years in power have been marked by numerous real or imaginary coup attempts and ruthless repression of opponents.

In the past three years he has taken steps to restore economic links to France, but he maintains close relations with the Soviet Union and still regards Lenin, Fidel Castro and Lumumba as his guiding spirits.

Senegal's President Senghor is somewhat unusual among African leaders in that he was born to relative wealth 72 years ago. He is also a highly regarded poet, who writes in French and has been considered for the Nobel Prize in literature.

The elder statesman of French-speaking Africa, Senghor has promoted relations with both East and West in his 18year rule while preserving special ties with France.

In Ivory Coast, Houphouet Boigny presides over a land he has turned into a showpiece of West Africa through partnership with the former colonial overlord, France.

His open encouragement of "neo-colonialism" has lured 50,000 Frenchmen to Ivory Coast and has provoked the derision of African nationalists. But the resulting prosperity has given Ivory Coast stability and at 72, Houphouet Boigny rules virtually unchallenged.

The last of the "old guard," 54-year-old Ahidjo is into his 18th year as president of Cameroon and appears to have overcome the ancient tribal feuds, communist-backed uprisings and widespread terrorism that plagued the nation's formative years.

Ahidjo has been accused of authoritarianism and ruthlessness in pursuing national unity, but his efforts have promoted modest economic progress in the West African land.

Despite the turmoil that toppled African revolutionaries and troubled the "old guard" survivors, the drive for independence continues. Today, across all of Africa, only the city-sized Spanish enclaves of Cueta and Melilla remain under European control. They are directly across the Strait of Gibralter from Spain.

Black Agent Files Suit Against SBI

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A black agent of the State Bureau of Investigation has filed a federal court suit accusing the SBI of racial discrimination.

Clarence Gooche Jr. of Durham County, an SBI agent for eight years, charged that he and other blacks suffer discrimination in rank, promotions, job assignments, employment benefits and opportunities because of their race.

Gooche asked that the U.S. District Court consider his complaint a class action suit on behalf of all black SBI employees and other blacks who have applied for jobs with the state agency.

The suit seeks injunctions prohibiting racial discrimination by the SBI and promotion of Gooche to a position he allegedly would have attained "in the absence of racially discriminatory policies and practices." It also requests that Gooche and others be compensated for wages lost because of discriminatory practices by the SBI.

SBI Director Haywood Starling could not be reached for comment on the charges by Gooche.

Gooche said he filed a discrimination complaint against the SBI with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission in July 1977. He said the federal agency notified him in May of his right to file a suit against the SBI.

Damages Awarded Former ECU Professor

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — A federal court jury ruled Friday that East Carolina University violated the rights of a former language professor and ordered the school to pay him $5,000 in punitive damages.

Dr. Robert J. Mayberry, a professor of romance languages for five years, charged that he was fired in 1972 because he criticized the head of the ECU language department.

Mayberry's attorney, William G. Pfefferkorn of Winston-Salem, said he will present the judgement to ECU officials Monday and ask that Mayberry be reinstated.

A jury of eight women and four men, which heard three days of testimony, deliberated for about 30 minutes before returning the verdict.

Mayberry charged in a complaint filed in September 1973 that his dismissal stemmed from criticism of Joseph A. Fernandez, chairman of the language department. He said he was told in April 1972 that his contract was not being renewed because of a drop in enrollment.

The former professor maintained that his dismissal violated his right to free speech and claimed that ECU officials failed to follow procedures outlined in a faculty manual when they fired him.

Mayberry testified that he disagreed with Fernandez's policy of requiring students studying advanced Spanish literature to speak only Spanish in the classroom.

Attorney Marvin Schiller of Raleigh, who represented the university, said U.S. District Judge Franklin T. Dupree will decide whether Mayberry should be reinstated and will make a decision on the amount of actual damages he should receive.

GACOC Statement Opposes Current CETA Funds Use

Lawton Nisbet, co-chairman of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce Congressional Action Committee, issued a statement Friday in accordance with the National Chamber of Commerce concerning opposition of the present Comprehensive Educational Training Act (CETA), with recommendations of several amendments.

The statement was issued in conjunction with state Secretary of Human Resources and Community Development Howard Lee's dismissal of Harvey M. Lincoln, director of the state's $140 million CETA program.

According to the statement, "The chamber opposes the present proposals because CETA has continued to expand with poor administration of funding and because CETA funds have not been directed toward its original purpose — to improve skills and job readiness of disadvantaged and unemployed people for private sector employment."

The statement recognized that the CETA programs in the Pitt County area had been "effective," but also asks that funds go toward development of more private sector jobs.

According to the statement, CETA funds should be deemphasized in their role in public service jobs.

The Board of Directors of the GACOC approved the statement's resolution. The recommendations will be sent to area Congressional representatives.

Injunction Issued Against National Postal Strike

By IRA R. ALLEN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. District Court Judge John Pratt Saturday issued a six-day temporary injunction against a nationwide postal strike that was to have begun as early as Monday.

"We just signed that order," Pratt told UPI from his home, where lawyers for the two biggest of the four postal unions and the U.S. Postal Service gathered in midafternoon. "It enjoins any strike or concerted work stoppage or slowdown and requires union officials to send out notices telling members to comply," he said.

The order expires next Friday, he said, and holds the unions and their presidents legally responsible for ensuring the mail will continue to be delivered.

Emmett Andrews, head of the 280,000-member American Postal Workers Union, said, "At this time I certainly would" comply with the injunction, but as for the membership, "I think some would and some wouldn't."

Asked if there would be a work stoppage or slowdown, he said, "I don't know. I can't really respond truthfully on this to answer who's going to do what at any given time in regard to individual members." Andrews said he is willing to resume negotiations with the Postal Service, which he said wanted to have the injunction as it went back to the talks.

There was no immediate response from 180,000-member National Association of Letter Carriers.

Talks between the quasi-governmental U.S. Postal Service and the two largest postal unions broke off early Saturday, with federal mediator Wayne Horvits saying he was trying to persuade the management representatives "to get into discussions."

A spokesman for the Postal Service, which wants the dispute submitted to binding arbitration, said, "We are not meeting with the (mediators) nor the unions today."

He said no new sessions were scheduled despite the mounting threat of strikes that could throw the postal system into chaos. He did say that a spur-of-the-moment decision to meet again was "a possibility."

Postal strikes are illegal and, in the event one should occur this week, federal troops would be pressed into service to deliver the mail.

Troops performed that service briefly in 1970 when 200,000 postal workers struck, mostly in East Coast cities.

The two sides had been called together by the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, and Horvitz promised to do all he could to keep the meetings going all weekend if necessary.

The service went to court Friday seeking a temporary injunction against a strike, but federal judge John Pratt said he would not issue one yet.

At that time, Pratt also said, "If there is the slightest indication the talks are breaking down over the weekend, I will not delay granting a temporary restraining order."

A spokesman said Saturday afternoon that the Postal Service might ask the court to carry out that promise.

Members of the two unions had ordered their leaders to call a strike five days after the contract was rejected, which would be Monday for NALC and Wednesdav APWU.

Seeks Legislation To Limit Search Warrants

By JOHN F. BARTON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House committee said Saturday the Supreme Court decision allowing police searches of newsrooms threatens the privacy of all citizens and should be overturned.

The House Government Operations Committee issued a report calling for legislation barring judges from issuing search warrants against the property of people who are not suspected of crime.

Journalists have complained that the court's 5-3 ruling will result in local police prevailing upon friendly magistrates to issue search warrants against news organizations in order to get information supplied by confidential sources.

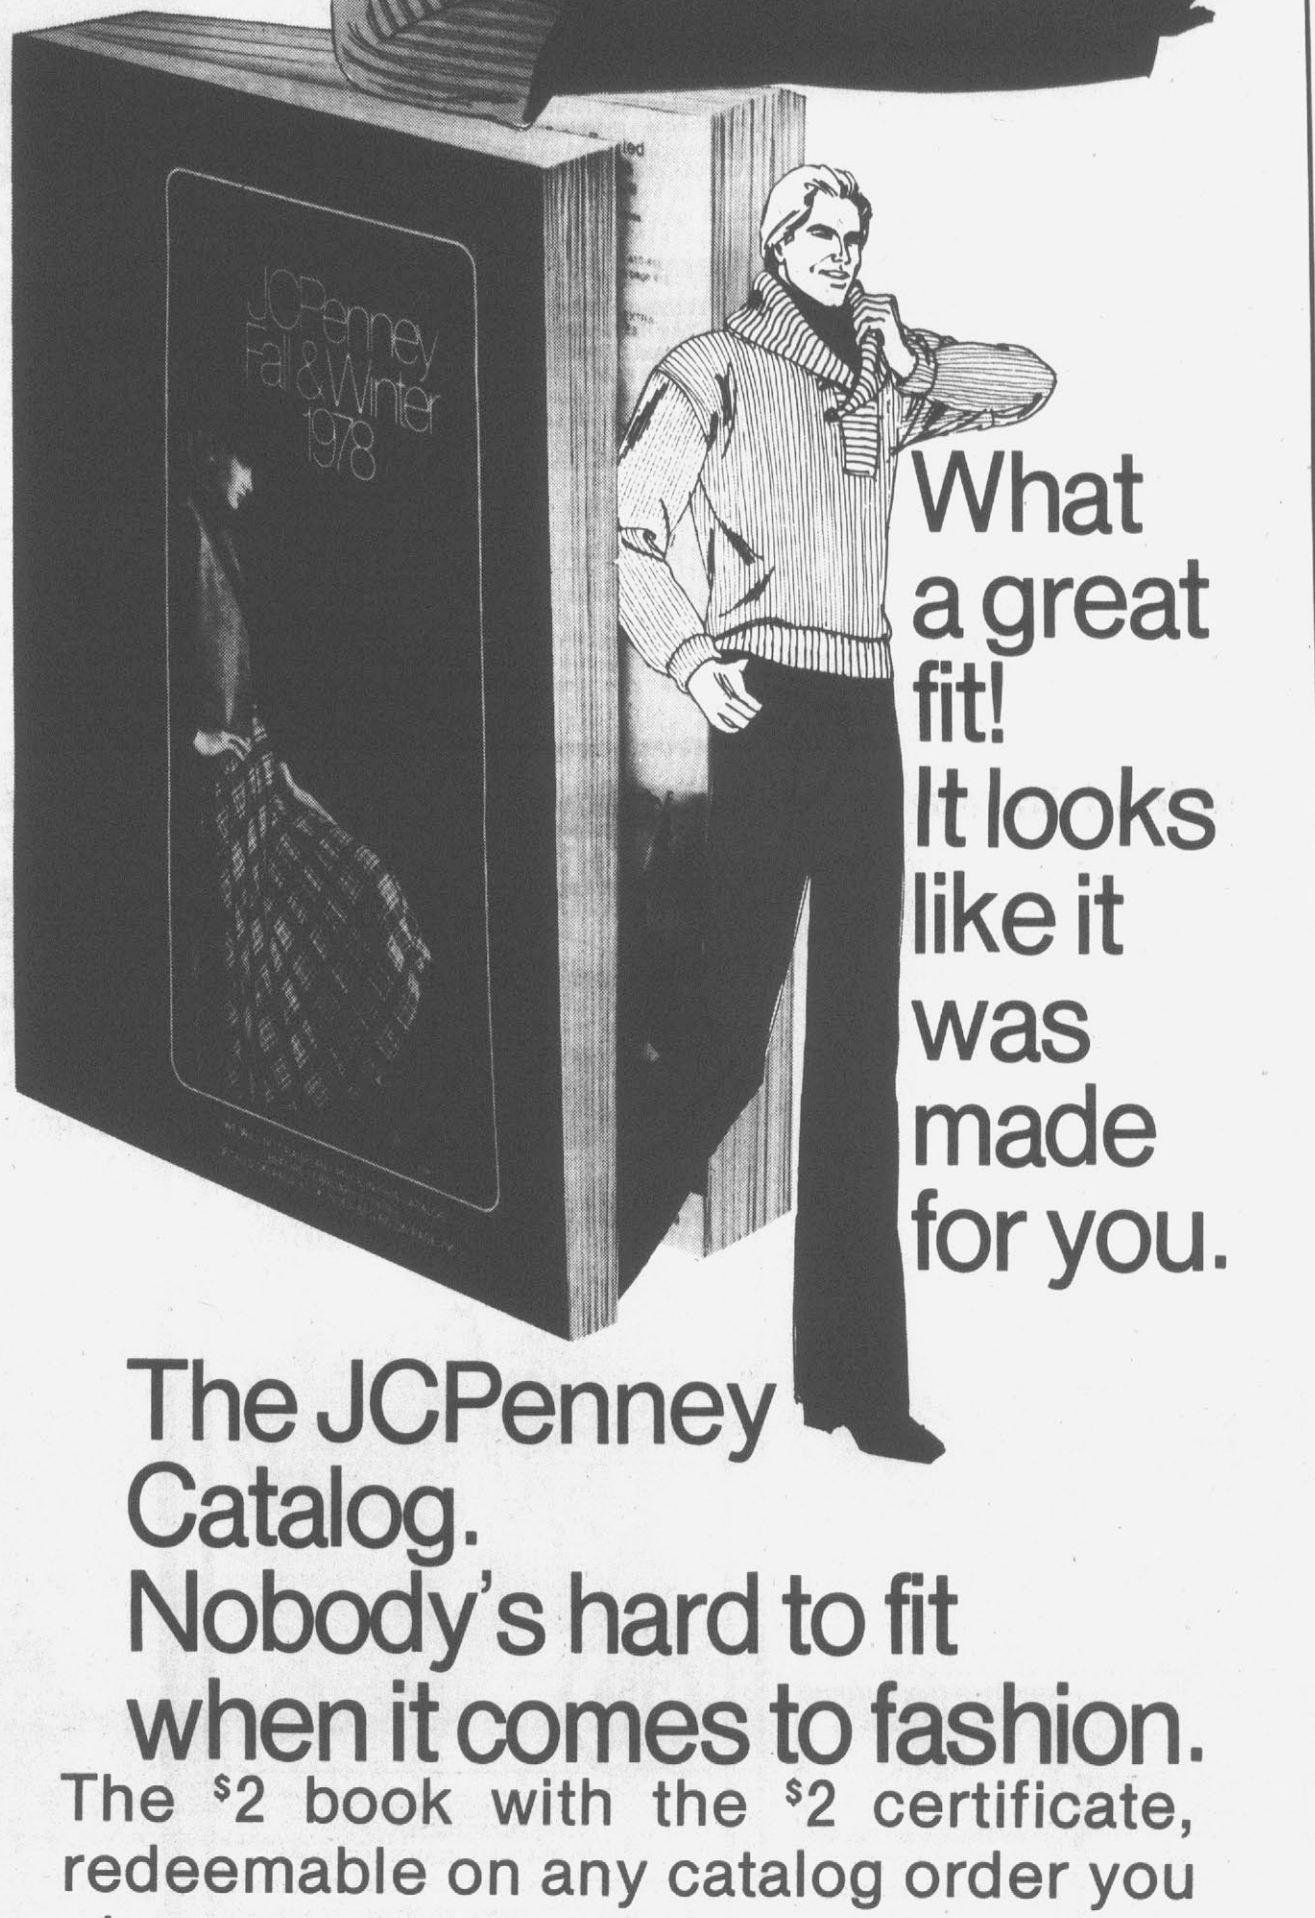

Civil liberties groups have argued, and the House committee agreed, that under the ruling police could freely search homes, offices and files of persons not suspected of wrongdoing in search of evidence about a crime committed by someone else.

The high court case involved a 1971 police search of a college newspaper, the Stanford Daily. Police were looking for photographs that might have identified participants in a demonstration in which several officers were hurt.

No pictures were found. But the college paper sued and won in lower courts. The Supreme Court court ruled last May, however, that such searches were legal.

Several bills have been introduced in Congress since that would limit the power of federal or state judges to issue such warrants. Many news organizations said if evidence is needed, subpoenas should be issued, because those orders can be argued in court before documents can be seized. Search warrants are issued without adversary legal proceedings.

The committee report said more than a dozen other searches of news organizations have occurred since the Stanford Daily search. "Most were in California and related to activities of the Symbionese Liberation Army," it said.

New Members Needed For Boys' Choir

THE GREENVILLE BOY'S CHOIR . . . is pictured at the time of one of its concert this past season. Ten new members are being sought for the local group of young boy singers between the ages of nine and 12.

By JERRY RAYNOR

"We are really excited about the prospects for the Boys' Choir this year," choir director Tom Hawley commented. "We have 28 boys from last year returning, and they're all fine singers."

This year too marks the first time the choir has had the same director for two consecutive years. These factors, plus a growing demand for local performances, point to the choir becoming an established group in Greenville.

Membership in the choir is limited to boys in the nine to 12-year old group. "This year," Hawley stated, "we need ten replacements and hope to get them during our opening period."

Rehearsals for the Boys' Choir begin on Monday, September 11. "There's been a change in time and place," Hawley says. "Rehearsals this year will be held between 4 and 5:15 p.m. at The First Christian Church next to Kroger's on Greenville Boulevard."

In a successful year just passed, the choir made several appearances, including a local Christmas concert and a Christmas concert at the Caswell Center in Kinston, a spring concert with the Greenville Community Chorus, and concerts for the Golden Kiwanis Club and Greenville Utilities Commission.

"We're hoping to have an even more active season ahead," Hawley commented. "Our first concert will be a Thanksgiving Vesper service, a special concert that will likely become a traditional one. We also hope to do more traveling to give concerts in the area." Other plans call for new robes and for adding music to the choir's current repertory. "We will be adding both sacred and secular music Hawley said.

Marshall Foster, a senior student in the study of organ at East Carolina University, is the accompanist for this season.

The Greenville Boys' Choir is a non-profit organization, and Hawley noted that much of the activities depends on community support.

"Anyone interested in considering giving their support should write to Greenville Boys' Choir, Box 1215, Greenville," Hawley pointed out. "The choir has as its goal not only performing in Greenville and the immediate area, but would like to extend its program to serve eastern North Carolina as well."

Story Of A Rare Night

MANTEO — The night of August 17 turned out to be a rare one at the Waterside Theater, site of "The Lost Colony" production.

First, there was a power blackout — not because of a storm, but a simple, never-happened before event in the 40 years since "The Lost Colony" opened in 1938. "We've had rainouts, raindowns, fires, two hurricanes and four years when we were closed during World War II, but never a blackout!" mused Mabel Basnight, box office manager since the show first opened.

And it happened on a clear, moonlight flooded night — the night before full moon on Friday, August 18.

"Most of the 1554 people in Thursday night's audience requested a ticket exchange for the following night's show," Mrs. Basnight commented. The Friday night performance also marked the 391st birthday of Virginia Dare — the first English child to be born in the New World.

The audience, Mrs. Basnight noted, filed out in a jovial mood, with ushers illuminating the aisles and exits with flashlights.

Overcoming their disappointment in not performing after hours spent in donning make-up and costumes, the actors and actresses accepted the situation and slowly returned to their dressing rooms.

Then suddenly, Mrs. Basnight reports, the cast realized that it was a perfect night for a moonlight swim and within minutes they were scrambling out of costumes and jumping off the fireworks pier behind the Waterside Theater into the silvery lit waters of Roanoke Sound.

Taped ECU Concert To Air On NPR Series

A taped concert by the East Carolina University Symphony Orchestra has been accepted for broadcast by National Public Radio and will be aired as part of the Fall 1978 series "Campus Musica."

The ECU tape will be available for broadcast within a two week period from Dec. 3 through Dec. 16.

The concert accepted was one performed in the spring of 1978 and features Beethoven's "Egmont Overture;" Schubert's "Symphony No. 8 (The Unfinished); Stravinsky's "Firebird Suite;" two arias from "Vanessa" sung by soprano Belinda Bryant, and the Robert Hause arrangement of Bach's "Loccata in G." The orchestra is under the direction of Hause.

Music by orchestras of 13 universities comprise the radio series. In addition to ECU, other schools which have had music accepted for the broadcasts include Drake, North Texas, Southern California, Northwester, Oberlin, Iowa, Yale, Brigham Young, Wisconsin and Cincinnati.

The "Top Ten" and "Top Country" listing of top tunes were not received this week.

Octavian captured Alexandria in 30 B.C. and Antony, who had been defending the city and was married to Cleopatra, killed himself.

Hospitality House

An interview with Andy Griffith at his Manteo home leads off Kay Currie's "Hospitality House" from noon to 1 p.m. today over WITN-TV, Channel 7.

Currie talks to Griffith about the work he's doing now and also about his daughter's role in "The Lost Colony."

Another guest is Andy Wolf, a Hungarian food technologist and skier. The sequence was filmed by Ms. Currie earlier this year in Los Angeles.

Peter Makuck Named Poetry Forum Director

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

The Poetry Forum of East Carolina University gets underway once more in September after its annual summer hiatus, with the first of bi-monthly meetings slated for Thursday, September 7.

And this year, there is a new director, Dr. Peter Makuck, who succeeds founder and long-time director Vernon Ward, recently retired from the English faculty at ECU.

"The Poetry Forum will continue to be an open forum for reading and discussing original poetry," Makuck said. "Those unfamiliar with the forum should realize that it is a casual, fluid group of both students and townspeople of all ages. New members, old members, former members who have dropped out and want to drop back in with new poems, will all be welcomed to the forum."

Meetings are held beginning at 8 p.m. each first and third Thursdays of the month in the conference room in Mendenhall Student Center. There is no fee involved and free coffee is served.

Matuck plans one slight change in the "Tar River Poets," the magazine of poetry published under the auspices of the forum.

"Tar River Poetry" is the new name to be given these volumes. "This will emphasize poetry, rather than poets," Makuck commented. "We will certainly continue to publish the best poetry from the Greenville area, but the magazine, beginning with the fall issue, will no longer publish the work of forum members exclusively.

"The next issue of 'Tar River Poetry,' to be available sometime in September, contains work by poets from both the East and West coast, North and South. There will be poems by established poets like William Stafford and Susan Fromberg Schaffer — both Nation Book Award winners in poetry — as well as work by unestablished poets."

Makuck added the magazine will also appear twice yearly.

A native of Connecticut, Makuck was educated in Maine and Quebec City. He holds a doctorate in American literature from Kent State University, Ohio.

He was recently a Fulbright Exchange Professor, visiting in France, where he lectured for a year on Modern American poetry.

Poems and short stories by Makuck have been published in more than 30 magazines including "The North American Review," "The Nation," "The Hudson Review," "Chicago Review," "The Sewanee Review," "The Denver Quarterly," etc.

Currently, along with ECU English Department faculty members James Kirkland and David Sanders, he is working on a poetry textbook to be published by Random House. To be entitled "Poetry: Sight and Insight," the book will be published in 1979.

Art By Stindt In New NCMA Show

RALEIGH — An unusual exhibition of objects, photographs of objects and descriptions of these same pieces are being displayed in the Collectors Gallery on the fourth floor of the N. C. Museum of Art.

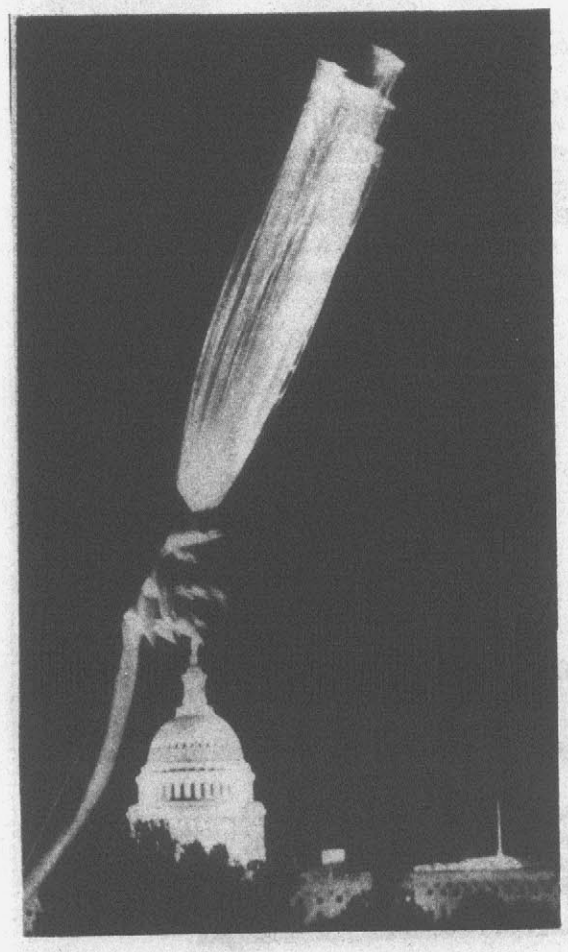

Artists featured in this exhibition of conceptual art are Ben Sarao of Chicago, and Henry Stindt, an art faculty member at East Carolina University, Greenville.

Sarao's series of works are entitled "Gods and Men," and among his photographs are a special variety of photo known as Micro-Fiche — similar to microfilm.

Stindt's works are represented by two series. The first, "Hand Tools," is comprised of actual objects, photographs of the objects and a written description of the hand tool. A hammer, scissors, a saw and a clamp are among hand tools juxtaposed in these forms.

is on "Winterville Porches." Originally, the series was made up of all four-poster white front porches found within the town of Winterville. Included were objects usually associated with front porches such as furniture, rugs, and toys.

"Photo Documentation" will be on view through September 3rd. The Collectors Gallery is open during museum hours — 10 am. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, and 2 to 6 p.m. on Sunday.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Margaret Clark

Three new titles recently added to Sheppard Memorial Library's shelves are about families, mothers, and the landed gentry.

THE MOTHER BOOK by Liz Smith is a delightful compendium of trivia about mothers, motherhood, and maternity. Here is everything you always wanted to know about mothers, but were afraid to ask. You'll learn the mothering secrets of America's most famous matriarch, Rose Kennedy; the great mother-son feuds of history (including George Washington, Lord Byron and Gore Vidal); and reminiscences from hundreds of famous people Phillis Diller, Amy Carter and many others. Here too are anecdotes about the mothers of the famous, infamous, and unfamous plus many obscure facts, overblown sentimentalities, jokes, cartoons and songs about mother.

Jane Howard turns to an even broader subject in her new book, FAMILIES. In this highly quotable collage on families, she combines a backporch informality with strong journalistic authority and comes up with dependable answers. Families, she finds, aren't dying, although "in flamboyant and dumbfounding ways they are changing their size and their purpose." Her crisscross country trek turns up gregarious Jewish, Greek and Southern clans; single parents, extended families, and precarious communal households. This account of how these clans and families celebrate, quarrel, disband, reunite and endure makes us realize how our lives are interwoven both with the families we are born with and with those we invent.

THE LANDED GENTRY by Sophy Burnham is about the upper class in America, about people of property and how the possession of property affects the character and personality of those who own it. It's about old, established, inherited money. Not all the people in this book are rich. Some are struggling to hold on to property that has been in the family for generations. Others live like Russian nobles. The author, a member of the "Landed Gentry" herself, now returns to her friends and talks to them about their past. She has fascinating intimate stories to tell of the inititation rites and rules of the very rich. Here too are moving tales of the most painful burdens of the wealth: forced marriages, divorce, alcoholism. Her book is a lively, gossipy portrait of a significant minority of America's population who are, indeed, to the manor born.

Motion Picture Office For N.C.

RALEIGH — The office of Governor Jim Hunt has announced the formation of a new state program under the Department of Commerce that would bring major motion picture and television productions to North Carolina.

The Office of Motion Picture Development, Hunt said, will be a "very aggressive program," aimed at boosting the state's economy by encouraging major studios to film on location in North Carolina.

William Arnold, director of the state's Division of Travel and Tourism, will supervise the new office. Mrs. Lois Winstead of Roxboro has been appointed to coordinate activities of the program under Arnold's direction.

Commerce Secretary D. M. Faircloth said the program has been under consideration for more than a year, following a recommendation by the Board of Economic Development.

"Some states with a lot less to offer in the way of scenery, facilities and climate has realized upwards of $20 million from this kind of activity," Faircloth said. "We expect to compete vigorously for this work just as we have for the travel and tourist dollar."

The Office of Motion Picture Development will be housed at the Division of Travel and Tourism, 430 North Salisbury Street, Raleigh, in the Dobbs Building.

NCSA Restructuring Performing Modules

WINSTON-SALEM — The touring performing modules with which students from the N. C. School of the Arts have played to high school audiences will be restructured in 1979 to provide two and three-day intensive workshops in performing arts.

The touring groups employing the modules have performed in 80 North Carolina counties during the past four years.

Also, the schedule will be revised this fall to include 10 high schools in counties not previously reached. After this, remaining funds will be used to support a series of specialized workshops involving short-term residency programs, each stressing a single performing art.

Initial scheduling will be arranged in cooperation with the Division of Cultural Arts of the N. C. Dept. of Public Instruction. Interested schools and community arts organizations, however, may inquire for full details by writing to: NCSA, Community Service Division, P. O. Box 12189, Winston-Salem, N. C., 27107.

Piney Woods Festival

WILMINGTON — The First Annual Piney Woods Labor Day Festival is scheduled for Saturday and Sunday, September 1 and 2 at the Hugh MacRae Park in Wilmington.

Festival hours will be 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday.

Artists and craftsmen will display their work and will also give demonstrations in techniques.

Entertainers to be on hand to provide programs for the public include the Chadbourn Strawberry Cloggers, the Greg Cagle Jazz Ensemble, the Donna Hardeman and Arlene Palmer Dancers, the New Knothole Revue, the Salt Marsh String Band, the Strolling Minstrels, John Glover, and Patrick Jewell.

Wilson Art Competition

WILSON — An art competition restricted to subject matter within the boundaries of Wilson County and also required to be completed within a two-week time frame has been announced.

The competition, "Portraits of Wilson," is for work completed between September 16-29. To insure observation of this rule, all canvases, paper or other materials the artist will work with must be registered and stamped immediately before work is begun. Stamping will take place at the Arts Council of Wilson from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays through Fridays, and between 1 and 4 p.m. on Sept. 16, 17, 23 and 24.

For more information on this competition, send a request for a brochure to: Mrs. Cheryl D'Amato, 1215 Waverly Road, Wilson, N. C. 27893.

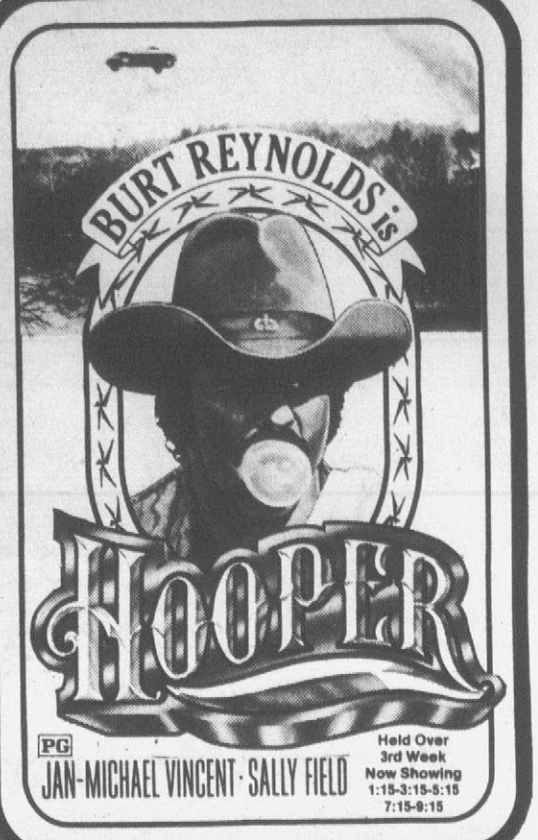

Shows Art By des Champs

RALEIGH — A show of the paintings of Minnie des Champs, a primitive painter of Sumter, S. C., will be shown at the Little Art Gallery from September 18 through October 28.

Ms. des Champs' paintings depict typical Southern rural scenes.

Documentary Work Honored

MIYATAKE DOCUMENTARY — This 1943 photo taken at California's Manzanar internment camp during World War II was taken by photographer Toyo Miyatake who was honored at the Biltmore Hotel in Los Angeles Thursday for his 50 years of documentary work. (AP Laserphoto)

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Toyo Miyatake carried contraband into the internment camp where he spent most of World War II — a forbidden camera lens and precious film which would portray a Japanese community that thrived despite its barren desert surroundings.

Miyatake's pictures were the only diary of life inside Manzanar, one of 10 camps where some 110,000 West Coast Japanese were confined by order of President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The black and white photographs, taken with a box camera Miyatake made with the 150-millimeter lens and wood from a wild apple tree, show high school graduations, family scenes and children at play.

In some, Japanese children stare solemnly through barbed wire fences; others catch the proud poses of young Japanese-Americans ready to leave camp to fight for the government that imprisoned them.

A box camera is not for use on the run, and the photographs — now at the University of California — are not the stop-action shots of fast lenses and high-speed shutters.

They are not a record of a grim life, and Miyatake is sometimes accused by younger Japanese of shooting the camp through "rose-colored glasses."

But that is not what he saw.

"In outside," said the nowfragile but alert 83-year-old, "most of the people are feeling against the Japanese and you don't know what's going to happen.

"I was feeling kind of jittery and insecure.

"When I came to the camp, I see nothing but Japanese. ...Actually I enjoyed it. I felt very comfortable."

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. — Richard J. Werner, former mayor of Santa Cruz and U.S. military governor of Italy in World War II, died Thursday at age 84.

Romantic Lead Charles Boyer Dead

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Charles Boyer, famed for his movie roles as a suave lover, died Saturday, two days short of his 79th birthday.

Boyer was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital in Phoenix, where he was pronounced dead at 11:45 a.m., officials said.

Boyer was stricken at the home of a friend, Marjorie Everett, authorities said. The cause of death was not announced.

Boyer was an actor whose sophisticated French charm established him as a "great Lover" of the screen. But his versatility also encompassed television and the stage.

Boyer's debonair manner and suave French accent captured the hearts of feminine moviegoers as he made screen love to Hollywood's most glamorous leading ladies, including Hedy Lamarr, Marlene Dietrich, Greta Garbo, Jean Harlow, Ingrid Bergman and Rita Hayworth.

But Boyer was also a fine actor who won critical praise for stage and screen performances.

He was active in television not only as an actor but as a successful executive. With Dick Powell, David Niven and Tom McDermott he formed "Four Star Productions," which became a top producer of network television shows. Boyer served as vice president in charges of finances.

The role that firmly established Boyer as one of the screen's greatest matinee idols was in the 1938 movie "Algiers," when he was widely quoted as whispering to Hedy Lamarr the famed line, "Come wiz me to ze Casbah."

But Boyer denied he ever spoke the line which became synonymous with his name.

"I never spoke that line in my life," he once said. "Nor has anyone else to my knowledge except for people impersonating me."

Nor was he happy about his title as a great lover.

"It is something I never earned nor wanted," he said. "I am not a lady-killer on screen nor off ... the majority of my roles have not been romantic ones."

His personal life was quiet. He married English actress Pat Patterson in February, 1934. Their son, Michael, was born Dec. 9, 1943 and died in a tragic shooting accident in 1965.

His best known films included "Gaslight" opposite Ingrid Bergman and "Love Affair" with Irene Dunne. Greta Garbo was his co-star in "Conquest" while Marlene Dietrich joined him in the "Garden of Allah." His leading lady in "Tovarich" was Caludette Colbert with whom he later co-starred in the Broadway hit "The Marriage Go-Round." Some of his other movies were "Shanghai," "Hold Back the Dawn" and "Tales of Manhattan."

Boyer was born in Figeac, France, on Aug. 28, 1899, to Maurice Boyer, a farm machinery manufacturer and dealer, and his wife.

Boyer displayed a remarkable memory at an early age. When he was three, he could recite a long, complicated religious work.

He loved school theatricals as a child and his father, who died when the boy was 10, thought his son might become a lawyer.

He entered the Sorbonne in Paris at age 18, but he spent his spare time haunting theaters. He became a great admirer and disciple of Lucien Guitry, the Parisan pioneer of lifelike acting.

He roamed Paris attending weddings, funerals, clinics, court trials and political meetings to study the mannerisms, facial expressions and reactions of people in various situations as part of his actor's apprenticeship.

After earning a degree in philosophy from the Sorbonne, he enrolled in the Conservatoire of the Drama.

Upon graduation, he was signed for a leading in "Lat Bataille" which firmly established his reputation as an actor. Fifteen years later the play was made into a movie, "Thunder Over the East," in which Boyer starred.

He once said the only suffering he had ever done for his art was when he played roles in Hollywood in which he knew he was miscast.

Already a popular star of the Parisan stage, he toured Egypt, Turkey and Romania with a repertoire company. In 1920, he starred in one of the first French "talkies," "La Barcarolle d'Amour."

With his deep romantic voice he was a sensation and Hollywood immediately lured him to the United States.

Handicapped by his very limited English, Boyer's first ventures in Hollywood were not particularly successful and he obtained a release from his contract.

He returned to the Parisan stage and began a serious study of English in his spare time.

His first successful Hollywood role was that of the psychiatrist in "Private Worlds."

With "Algiers," he became a star of the first order.

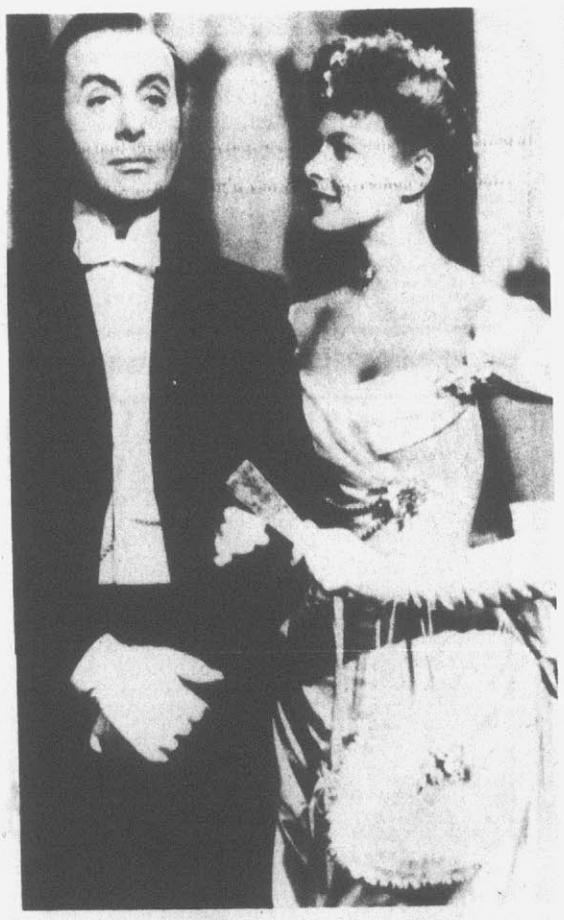

Boyer was as sensitive to misrepresentations about his native land as he was to the "great lover" label.

To clear up misconceptions about France he founded and financed "the French Research Institute." He noted "France was seldom portrayed correctly in the movies and this could be a source of information for them. His efforts with the institute were rewarded with a special Academy Award in 1942.

He joined the French army in 1939, at the age of 40, but was released in 1940 under a government decree permitting men of his age to return to private life. On Feb. 13, 1942, he became an American citizen.

In 1948 after the expensive flop "Arch of Triumph," he left Hollywood for New York where he resumed his stage career. When he returned to Hollywood, it was to roles that had "character" to them.

In the early 1950s, he appeared in the stage production of "Don Juan in Hell." He also appeared on the "FourStar Television Anthology." His later movies included "The Cobweb" and "Fanny."

BERG AND BOYER — Charles Boyer and Ingrid Bergman are shown in film "Gaslight" in 1945. The veteran, French-born actor, who played romantic roles opposite most of the top leading ladies of filmdom, died Saturday in Phoenix, Ariz. He was 78. (AP Laserphoto)

Irwin Holds Stroke Lead Over Watson

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — The hard-won round of 69, which was necessary to retain a lead in the face of Tom Watson's challenge, was just about what Hale Irwin anticipated Saturday in the third round of the $250,000 Hall of Fame Golf Classic.

"The aftermath of a hot round is kind of difficult," said Irwin, the defending champion who took the lead with a second-round 63 then had to work hard to retain it in the third.

"That was certainly the case today. It was doubly difficult because Tom was having a good round.

"I'm decidedly content with what I shot."

Watson, who played with him, closed to within a single stroke on the strength of his putting.

"It was like night and day watching us," he said. "Hale's hitting all the good shots and I was making the putts. The way Hale is playing, I'll have to play better tomorrow to have any chance."

Irwin, however, also has Tom Kite to contend with going into Sunday's final round.

"He's, what? Two back? Well, that certainly makes it a three-man race," Irwin said. "I'm leading, but with the players the calibre of Watson and Kite there, they can catch up."

Irwin, tied first by Tom Kite and later by Watson in the hot, humid weather, birdied two of his last three holes for a 54-hole total of 205, 8 shots under par on the famed No. 2 course at the Pinehurst Country Club.

Watson, gunning for his fourth victory of the year and the leading money-winning spot, had a second consecutive 67, including a 30-foot birdie putt on the final hole. He was a single shot back at 206.

"I made everything I looked at," Watson said.

"From being almost out of contention, I put myself right back in it," Kite said.

It was another 3 shots back to Curtis Strange, in fourth at 210 after a 69. Howard Twitty had 73-211 and Bill Kratzert and Jerry Pate, at 212, were the only others under par after three trips over the famed old course in the Carolina sandhill country. Pate had a third-round 72 while Kratzert closed up with a 67.

Arnold Palmer shot 69-215.

Irwin, who had taken the lead Friday with a brilliant 63, bogeyed two of his first four holes and had to birdie the seventh to regain a share of the lead.

"I put myself against the wall with that kind of a start, but, fortunately, everyone else was making bogeys then, too," Irwin said.

He rolled in an 18-foot putt on the 10th hole to take the lead alone, then was tied by Watson on the 13th. Tom scored from about six feet on the 12th and from twice that distance on the next hole.

Irwin, however, pulled away down the stretch. He had a 10-foot par-saving putt on the 15th, exploded a long bunker shot to about 6 feet and made birdie-4 on the 16th, then hit what he called "a ringer shot."

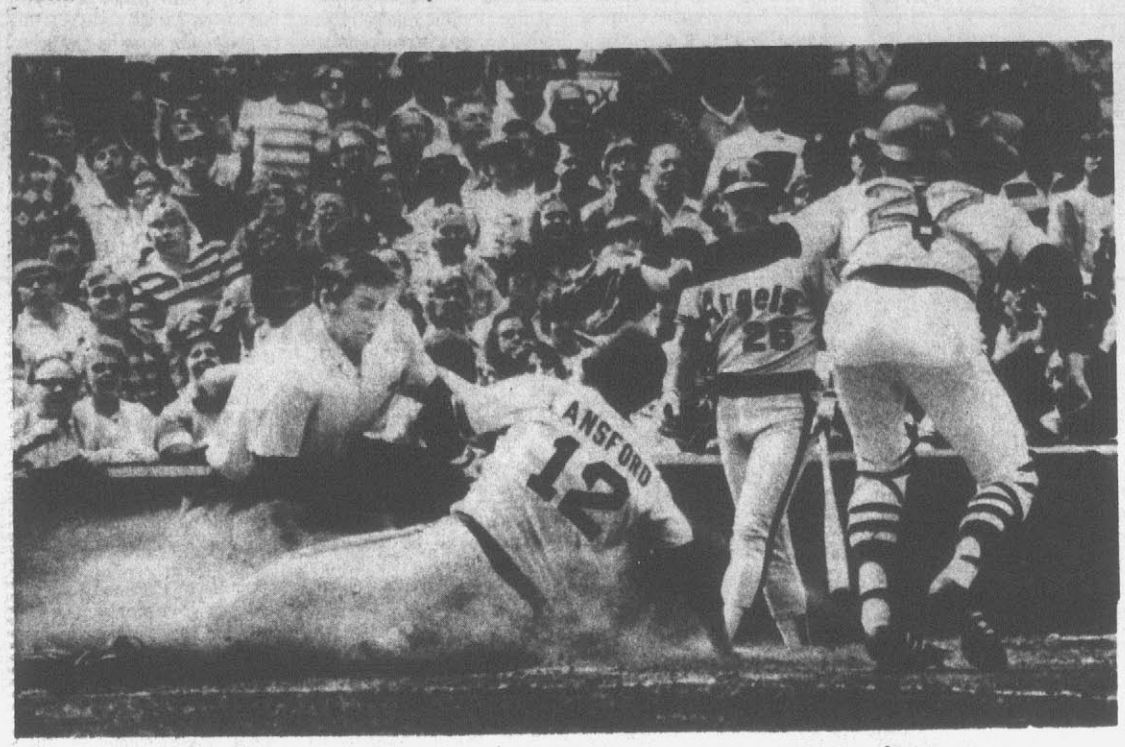

That was a 3-iron that hit the flagstick on the par-3 17th and slipped about two feet by. He made that one to go 2 ahead.

Only the closing heroics of Kite and Watson kept it close.

Kite, who had a wildly erratic effort that included five birdies and 4 bogeys, just missed on an eagle putt on the 16th, then scored from about 20 feet on the next two holes.

Hale Irwin reacts to missed putt.

Wright Hurls Boston Red Sox Past California In 7-1 Victory

By DICK BRAUDE
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Rookie right-hander Jim Wright finally has arrived, not just in the major leagues, but in the Boston Red Sox's starting rotation.

"It's nice to know when you're going to pitch," the 27-year-old Wright said Saturday after hurling a five-hit, 7-1 victory over the California Angels. "I've always said I just take the ball and throw, but it's good to know people have confidence in you."

Wright, who spent nine seasons in the minor leagues, was elevated to the starting rotation last week by Manager Don Zimmer, replacing Bill Lee after a string of poor showings.

Against the Angels, Wright got six runs in the first two innings from the Boston offense — including Jim Rice's 33rd home run — and narrowly missed his fourth shutout of the season. He won his eighth game in 10 decisions, although previous victories had been as a spot starter.

"He deserves a spot in the rotation," said catcher Carlton Fisk. "He bears down all the time and stays on an even keel. It's all confidence on his part."

The Angels had battered Wright in Anaheim 10 days earlier, but managed only five singles in Fenway Park. California's Lyman Bostock said he "can't understand why he does so well here," where Wright is 7-1.

The Red Sox chased Hartzell in the second inning with four runs on a series of line shots by Dwight Evans, Butch Hobson and Jack Brohamer sandwiched around two walks. Reliever Ken Brett gave up George Scott's 10th home run of the season in the sixth inning.

Wright yielded an opposite field double to Lyman Bostock in the first inning but allowed only three singles by Joe Rudi and one by Brian Downing the rest of the way.

Tired Pirates Have One Week Left Prior To Season Opener

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

As one observer put it, "Pre-season is over. The season starts now."

That was the way it was as East Carolina University's Pirates concluded drills Saturday, just one week away from their season-opener against Western Carolina.

This time a week from now, that game will be history. But for the coming five days, the Pirates will be "in-season" working toward that opening night game.

Coach Pat Dye termed his team "awfully tired right now," after the drills wound up Saturday afternoon.

"But we've gotten a lot accomplished during the past two weeks. And we've been fortunate in a lot of areas: we haven't had any practices rained out, we've had both hot and cool weather to work in, and we haven't had any bad injuries—nothing really to handicap us in getting ready for the season."

Dye added that the team probably hasn't had as much contact this fall as in years past. But this, he said, was due to the great experience returning this season.

"But I really don't think we're at the point of being a week away from our first game," he added. "At least we're so tired that I can't tell it if we are. There was no real quickness and explosiveness today. The concentration in assignments was not bad, though."

Dye said that in some cases, the Pirates have found some of the backup help they were looking for. "We still need depth at some positions, like running back and nose guard. We could use more help in the offensive line, although I think we have three or four tackles and guards and a couple of centers who can play for us.

"Joe Godette has done a real good job at tight end, but Perry Allred has been hampered by headaches and hasn't come as fast as we expected him to, so we've moved a freshman in who could help us later on."

One of the brightest spots, as far as Dye is concerned, is the way Steve Greer has responded at quarterback. "He's done extremely well. With him and Leander (Green) we're passing better than we ever have before. We have an extremely experienced offensive team, and that's got to be an asset for us."

Dye said the Saturday practice saw the defense get some things done today. "They responded well to coaching," he said. The offense was satisfactory.

Now the Pirates, off until Sunday night when they go over Western Carolina's scouting report, will take the next few days to polish their offense and defense and prepare for that opener.

That opener comes Saturday at 7 p.m. in the newly enlarged Ficklen Stadium.

Guess Who Won — Again

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — Right-hander Chao-Min Pan struck out 13 and hit a two-run homer as Pintung, Taiwan, defeated Danvillle, Calif., 11-1 Saturday to win its second straight Little League World Championship.

Taiwan, representing the PinKuang Little League, never trailed in the game.

Pintung jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the top of the first when its first two batters walked and shortstop Wen-Chu Pan singled home a run. Another single by center fielder Kuo-Chin Li brought home a second run and another scored on a passed ball.

Danville, representing the San Ramon Little League, scored its only run with two outs in the bottom of the first when Pan walked three batters and right fielder Mike Myers brought home pitcher Erik Johnson with a single.

Pan settled down, however, picking up strength as the game wore on. He allowed only four more hits and four walks.

Johnson, who picked up the loss, walked 10 batters and threw five wild pitches. He allowed two more runs in the second and was relieved in the sixth inning after grounding out one batter and walking another.

Pan hit relief pitcher Erik Bratlien's first pitch over the center field wall. After the pitcher's home run, Bratlien loaded the bases with a single and two walks and right fielder Shi-Wen Chen tripled home three runs.

Catcher Chen-Tang Hsu ended the scoring by singling home Chen.

Taiwan again displayed flawless fielding. No errors have been charged against them in three straight games in the series.

Kemper To Move

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Because it has not grown much in attendance in 10 years, Kemper Insurance Companies are prepared to move the Kemper Open Golf Tournament from Charlotte's Quail Hollow Country Club to the Congressional Country Club in suburgan Washington.

"As matters now stand," James Kemper, said Friday in a telephone interview, "I'm strongly inclined to recommend that we do go. The only terms we now have with Congressional are in a very general outline. But if the specifics follow the general outline, I will recommend we move the tournament."

By The Associated Press

GREENVILLE, S.C. — East Carolina University placed three members of its 1978 football team on the first Southern all-Independent pre-season team announced Saturday.

Selected from the East Carolina team were running back Eddie Hicks, defensive end Zack Valentine and safety Gerald Hall.

The Seminoles making the initial selection include center Gil Wesley and lineman Nate Handerson on offense, and end Willie Jones, guard Ron Simmons and back Ivory Joe Hunter on defense.

The team was chosen by the 14 head coaches and compiled by the sports information directors of the schools. Eleven of the 14 schools had at least one player selected.

Georgia Tech placed four players on the team, while East Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia Tech had three each; Miami and Southern Mississippi two each; and Memphis State, Tulane, Louisville and Richmond one each.

William and Mary, Tennessee State and Northeastern Louisiana were the only schools to miss. Ties in voting for center and defensive back added two players to the team.

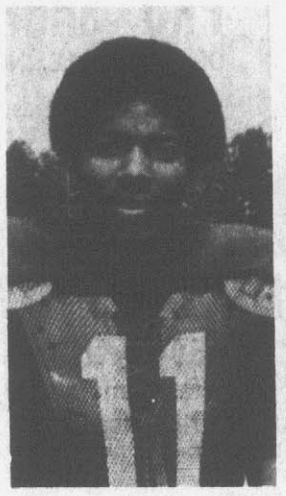

Jones and Simmons, along with offensive lineman Randy Butler of Southern Mississippi, topped the voting, being named on 10 of the 14 ballots.

Quarterback Roch Hontas of Tulane, the nation's top percentage passer last fall with 63.4 percent completion ratio, leads an impressive backfield which includes Eddie Lee Ivery of Georgia Tech, Eddie Hicks of East Carolina and Mickey Fitzgerald of Virginia Tech.

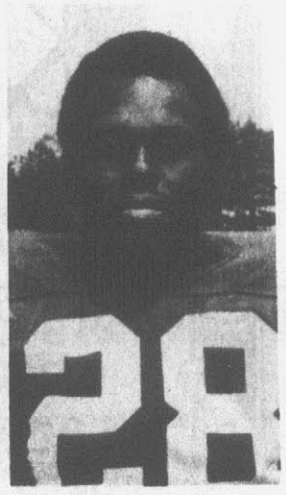

Ivery gained 5.9 yards per carry in 1977 while Hicks averaged 5.8 yards.

The quartet of Yellow Jackets selected include offensive lineman Mike Taylor, defensive tackle Mike Blanton, defensive back Don Bessillieu and Ivery.

Hicks, defensive end Zack Valentine and defensive back Gerald Hall were chosen from East Carolina. Center Danny Clancy of South Carolina shared that spot with Wesley.

Tide Noses Out Hogs For Poll Lead

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The Crimson Tide of Alabama, who finished a controversial second to Notre Dame last season, have been picked to win the 1978 national championship by The Associated Press college football board.

Arkansas, Penn State and Oklahoma also were picked to finish ahead of defending champion Notre Dame, which is fifth in the pre-season ratings.

Rounding out the pre-season Top Ten are Michigan, Ohio State, Texas, Southern California and Nebraska.

Alabama, Arkansas, Texas and Penn State finished behind Notre Dame last season, although the top five teams all had 11-1 records. Notre Dame won the national championship thanks to a 38-10 Cotton Bowl trouncing of previously unbeaten Texas, which was ranked No.1 at the end of the regular season.

This time, Alabama received 31 of 63 first-place votes and 1,215 of a possible 1,260 points from The AP's nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

Arkansas received 13 votes for the No.1 spot and 1,111 points while five members of the board voted for Penn State. The Nittany Lions accumulated 1,013 points.

Oklahoma received just one first-place vote but 997 points to nose out Notre Dame, which had nine first-place votes and 987 total points.

"Somewhere during the course of the season, someone is going to have to take that title away from us on the field," says Notre Dame Coach Dan Devine. "It's not impossible, but it's going to be very hard to do. Although we may not be pre-season favorites to repeat as national champions, I can assure you that we won't give up the title easily."

Of the remaining first-place ballots, two went to Southern Cal and one each to Texas and Texas A&M, which finished 16th in the voting.

Michigan received 908 points to 884 for Ohio State, 759 for Texas, 747 for Southern Cal and 563 for Nebraska.

The pre-season Second Ten consists of Washington, UCLA, Louisiana State, Pittsburgh, Kentucky, Texas A&M, Florida State, Clemson, North Carolina and Iowa State.

Last year's final Top Ten included Notre Dame, Alabama, Arkansas, Texas, Penn State, Kentucky, Oklahoma, Pitt, Michigan and Washington.

In the Second Ten were Ohio State, Nebraska, Southern Cal, Florida State, Stanford, San Diego State, North Carolina, Arizona State, Clemson and Brigham Young.

Stanford, San Diego State, Arizona State and Brigham Young failed to make this year's pre-season Top Twenty. They were replaced by UCLA, Louisiana State, Texas A&M and Iowa State.

DETROIT (AP) — Light-hitting Buck Martinez drove in three runs with a bases-loaded walk and a pair of singles Saturday as the Milwaukee Brewers snapped Jack Billingham's winning streak at nine games and defeated the Detroit Tigers 9-5.

Martinez walked to force in a run in the Brewers' three-run second against Billingham, 14-6, who didn't finish the inning. Martinez singled runs home in the third and fifth off Dave Tobik, who was making his major league debut.

Ben Oglivie drove in two Milwaukee runs, one with a single in the second inning and the other with a double in the eighth off Bob Sykes. Oglivie scored on a single by Larry Hisle.

Paul Molitor accounted for the Brewers' other second-inning run with a fielder's choice grounder, Don Money homered in the fourth and Gorman Thomas connected in the ninth, his 28th home run of the season.

Detroit rookie Lance Parrish clubbed a two-run homer in the bottom of the second off winner Bill Travers, 9-7. Rusty Staub added a solo shot in the third and doubled home a run in the fifth. The Tigers' other run scored on a triple by Ron LeFlore in the seventh.

Caulkins Ups Gold To Five

By ROBERT H. REID
AP Sports Writer

BERLIN (AP) — Tracy Caulkins, America's 15-year-old swimming star, raised her total of gold medals to five and world records to four Saturday as U.S. swimmers captured three of the five final events at the World Swimming Championships.

The Nashville, Tenn. youngster tied the world mark of 2 minutes 9.87 seconds in winning the women's 200-meter butterfly, then helped the American women establish a world mark of 3:43.43 in the 400-meter freestyle.

Still, she was not completely satisfied.

"If it had not been so cold, I probably could have broken the world record" in the butterfly, Caulkins said.

Joe Bottom, of San Ramon, Calif., won the men's 100-meter butterfly in 54.30 seconds, just off the world record of 54.18 which he set last year.

The Soviet Union, meanwhile, increased its gold medal collection to six with victories by Vladimir Salninkov in the men's 1,500-meter freestyle and Irina Kalinina in the women's platform diving.

The Russians were still far behind the Americans in the 49-nation championships. The U.S. swimmers have won 19 gold medals. q f836 44

Caulkins, who previously set world records in the 200-meter and 400-meter medleys, outswam teammate Nancy Hogshead of Jacksonville, Fla. Hogshead finished in 2:11.30, well ahead of Andrea Pollack, the queen of East Germany's swimmers and holder of the previous world record.

The U.S. victory in the women's 400-meter freestyle, the final event of the evening, meant the East Germans were still without a gold medal in the championships, which wrap up Monday. The East Germans finished second in the relay in 3:47.37 and Canada took third place in 3:49.59.

The freestyle relay was the only event the American women won in the 1976 Montreal Olympics, which saw East Germany emerge as the leader in women's swimming.

Joining Caulkins on the winning relay team were Jill Sterkle of Hacienda Heights, Calif., the only veteran of the Montreal Olympic team; Cynthia Woodhead of Riverside, Calif., who picked up her third gold medal, and Stephanie Elkins of Jacksonville, Fla.

Jagenburg, of Glens Head, N.Y., finished in 55.26 seconds, ahead of Sweden's Paer Arvidsson, at student at the University of California. Canadian Dan Thompson was fifth.

Bottom, who like Caulkins complained of the nighttime chill, said he was not surprised at winning.

"I knew that nobody could beat me today," he said. "That's why I wanted to break my own world record. If it had been a bit warmer, I would have beaten my record. But especially on the last 25 meters, I got very stiff."

Salninkov set a European record in capturing the 1,500meter men's freestyle, but was more than a second behind the world mark set by American Brian Goodell at the 1976 Montreal Olympics.

Bobby Hackett of Yonkers, N.Y., world record-holder in the 800-meter freestyle, took the bronze medal behind Borut Petric, who gave Yugoslavia its first medal in the competition.

Pollack said she felt lucky to have done as well as she did in the 200-meter butterfly.

"The way I swam this morning, I felt a little cramped, a little tired," she said. "I really didn't think I'd win the bronze."

Hogshead said she thought she could catch Caulkins until she made a bad turn at the end of the third lap.

"On the third lap, I was really feeling good in the water. Then I had a real bummer turn," she said.

Kalinina, who won the three-meter springboard event earlier in the championships, amassed 412.71 points with precision execution of her 12 platform dives.

Finishing second with 384.09 points was Martina Jeschke of East Germany. Melissa Briley of San Antonio, Texas, captured the bronze with 364.74 and Barbara Weinstein of Cincinnati finished fourth with 363.84.

Elena Vaitzhekhovskaia, daughter of the Soviet swimming coach, had been among the leaders until her final dive when she scored only 35.64 points. Her bad luck allow Briley, who finished with a splendid 60.84-point dive, to move into medal position.

Net Finals Set Today

Frances Cain and Nancy Powell will meet today in the finals of the Greenville Tennis Club's women's singles tournament.

They won their way into the finals with victories Friday and Saturday in the quarterfinals and semifinals.

The championship match will be held at 1:30 p.m. today at Elm Street Park.

In the quarterfinals, Mrs. Cain downed Kay Galya, 6-1, 6-1, while Anne Sayetta defeated Emma Wilkerson, 6-0, 6-1. Mrs. Powell beat Sharon wicks, 6-2, 6-2, while Carlie Wille beat Esther Warren, 6-1, 6-1.

The semifinals saw Cain beat Sayetta, 6-3, 6-3, and Powell down Wille, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2.

The next scheduled event for the club is the men's singles, set for September 7-10.

Umps End Strike

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Major league umpires returned to work Saturday, ending a one-day strike, but their attorney, Richie Phillips, said he expected them to be off the job again by Wednesday night.

Phillips advised the umpires to return to their jobs under terms of a temporary restraining order secured in Philadelphia Federal Court late Friday by Jim Garner, counsel for the American League. The order was signed by Judge Joseph L. McGlynn, Jr., who scheduled a hearing for next Wednesday morning on baseball's request for an injunction against the strike.

"We are very optimistic that no court will issue the injunction and that we will be back out Wednesday night," said Phillips, who was interviewed during NBC's Game of the Week broadcast.

McKay's Homer Downs Twins

TORONTO (AP) — Dave McKay hit his fifth home run of the season leading off the bottom of the 10th inning Saturday to give the Toronto Blue Jays a 4-3 victory over Minnesota and hand the Twins their seventh consecutive setback.

McKay connected off Geoff Zahn, 9-13, who went all the way for the Twins. He surrendered the tying run in the ninth. Bob Bailor led off with a single, was sacrificed to second, took third on Willie Horton's fly to deep center and scored when Al Woods beat out a bunt down the third-base line.

Minnesota had taken a 3-2 lead in the eighth on a single by Glenn Adams, a sacrifice and Bobby Randall's two-out single that scored pinch-runner Rob Wilfong.

McKay's homer made a winner of rookie Victor Cruz, 5-1, who took over from starter Jesse Jefferson in the 10th.

Rick Bosetti led off the Toronto first with an infield hit, took third on Bob Bailor's hit-and-run single and scored on Horton's sacrifice fly. The Blue Jays made it 2-0 in the second on Doug Ault's triple and a single by Rick Cerone.

Chicago, Rain Dampen Red Spirits By 8-6

CINCINNATI (AP) — Bobby Murcer cracked a bases-loaded single and scored when Cincinnati center fielder Cesar Geronimo let the ball get past him Saturday, sparking a six-run inning and carrying the Chicago Cubs to an 8-6 victory over the Reds in a rain-delayed game.

A storm stopped play for one hour, 59 minutes with the Reds ahead 4-2 after the seventh inning. Greg Gross led off the Cubs eighth with a single, Rodney Scott was walked and Bill Buckner singled, loading the bases.

Dave Tomlin relieved Doug Bair, 6-5, and Murcer lined a single over second which skidded through Geronimo and went to the wall.

The Cubs added two runs when Ivan DeJesus tripled to score Manny Trillo, then came home on a groundout by Tim Blackwell.

Mike Lum's pinch homer in the ninth brought the Reds within 8-6.

The Reds had gone ahead 3-2 on Ken Griffey's sixth-inning home run, a two-run shot. It was Griffey's fifth home run in the last seven games and the 14th run batted in since he had been moved to the third spot in the batting order a week ago.

Reliever Dave Roberts, 6-8, came on in the seventh and gave up a run on a walk, a fielder's choice and a single by Pete Rose.

Astros Score Early In Win

HOUSTON (AP) — Bruce Bochy's two-run double capped a five-run Houston first inning and J.R. Richard hurled a six-hitter for his 14th victory as the Houston Astros trounced the Pittsburgh Pirates 7-2 Saturday.

Richard, 14-11, struck out eight to run his major league-leading total to 244 as the Astros extended their winning streak to five games. The Pirates, who had a 10-game winning streak snapped Friday night, dropped their second in a row.

Houston scored five unearned runs in the first inning with the aid of three errors. Art Howe's run-scoring single, right fielder Dave Parker's throwing error, an RBI single by Dennis Walling and Bochy's two-run double provided Richard with all the support he needed as Houston gained its 19th triumph in the last 21 home games.

The Astros tagged loser Bruce Kison, 4-5, for two more runs in the second inning, scoring on Enos Cabell's RBI single and a wild pitch.

San Francisco Tops Montreal

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Heity Cruz doubled, homered, knocked in two runs and scored twice to power the San Francisco Giants to a 4-1 victory over the Montreal Expos Saturday.

Jim Barr, 7-10, scattered six hits while pitching the Giants to their fourth victory in the last five games.

Doubles by Cruz and Johnnie LeMaster gave the Giants a 1-0 lead in the second inning against loser Woody Fryman, 7-8, who pitched a one-hitter to defeat San Francisco in Montreal 10 days earlier.

Cruz' sixth homer of the season added a run in the fourth inning and singles by Larry Herndon and Darrell Evans and a walk to Jack Clark set up a run-scoring walk to Cruz in the fifth for a 3-0 lead.

Minnesota Stripped Of 24 Wins

By GENE LAHAMMER
Associated Press Writer

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The 1976-77 Minnesota Gopher basketball team has been stripped of its 24-3 record because the school allowed three players to compete in defiance of an order by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

The university said it was informed of the decision Saturday by the NCAA Council.

The official record of the 1976-77 team will be 0-27. The announcement said the Gophers' Big Ten conference standing and records are not affected by the NCAA action. The Gophers finished second to Michigan in the Big Ten that year with a 15-3 mark.

The university said the NCAA Council voted not to apply sanctions against the three players, Mychal Thompson, David Winey and Phil Saunders, who competed that season while a U.S. district court injunction was in effect.

The NCAA had ordered the university to declare the three players ineligible but the issue was taken to court. An appeals court later overturned the district court injunction.

The NCAA action means that Thompson will not lose his Big Ten scoring title that season and he continue to hold the university's all-time career scoring records. The 6-foot-10 center scored 595 points that season and averaged 22 points per game.

"We are pleased that the sanctions were not imposed against the players," said Robert A. Stein, university vicepresident for administration and planning, who argued the school's case before the NCAA Council in Dallas early last week. "We worked hard to insure that their oustanding accomplishments would not be wiped from the records."

McDougald Ready To Give Up His Stats For Winning Year

By BILL WELCH
Associated Press Writer

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Wake Forest junior James McDougald, an all-conference tailback and the Deacons' only offensive punch last year, says he isn't shooting for another 1,000-yard season or 40 carries a game.

The main thing, he says, is ending the embarrassment of last season's 1-10 record — a continuing a 10-game losing streak. And, McDougald says, he's ready to give up some personal statistics if that's what it takes in new Coach John Mackovic's passing game plan.

Of course, that hardly means the one-time Atlantic Coast Conference rookie-of-the-year from Maxton, N.C., is going to be given a diminished role this year. Mackovic is certainly counting on a third season of around 1,000 yards from McDougald.

But the new coach has been talking passing since he arrived from the Purdue staff early this year as the successor to fired Coach Chuck Mills, and he's expecting to see McDougald get the ball in more ways than a hand-off.

"I'll be catching a few passes, and running from the veer instead of the I," McDougald, soft-spoken and reserved, said during a visit by Operation Football, a writers' tour of the pre-season camps.

"It's going to be more wideopen. It's going to fake out some people," he added. "The linemen's job will be easier. It's a finesse offense."

McDougald caught a few passes last year, but he has been working on his receiving this fall and plans to see a lot more aerials from the new Wake quarterback, junior Ken Daly. Most will probably be fairly short, enough to get him across the defensive line without being hit.

"With the new offense, I might not get but 15, maybe just eight, rushes a game. But I'll do what it takes to win," he said.

In the past, that's usually meant more than twice that many — and usually it hasn't been enough for the Deacons to win. McDougald carried a school record 45 times against Clemson two years ago in his debut.

But for the entire team, last year is something they are trying to forget.

"We were embarrassed with our record last year, and I've taken it personally," McDougald said. "We just have to feel last year was a fluke season. We just gradually doubted ourselves and lost confidence. With the players we've got now, there's going to be improvement."

Both McDougald and Mackovic speak of a winning season as a goal for the team. If so, it would be the first for the skidding Deacs since 1971.

McDougald will have to run behind an offensive line that boasts 260-pound tackle Jackie Robinson, the only senior, assisted by three sophomores. There are four receivers who will share the load, led by split end Tom Smith.

On defense, safety James Royster is an experienced hand, but the line also has just one senior and three sophomores.

Still, McDougald is optimistic. And Mackovic — whose name dots Wake's record books from his 1964 season as Deacon quarterback — has installed a winning attitude since replacing Mills.

"The overall talent might not be as good as at some other schools,but it's good," McDougald said. "And the heart is there. That's what it's all about."

Expos Feel They Are Still In The Race

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

"It's still wide open," said rookie Montreal left-hander Dan Schatzeder, speaking of the National League's East Division title chase. "It doesn't look like the Phillies want to win it, so it's anybody's race."

The fourth-place Expos, though seven games under .500, are only seven games behind Philadelphia. Montreal, behind the adequate pitching and powerful hitting of Schatzeder, defeated the San Francisco Giants 8-5 Friday night.

Meanwhile, the Phillies gave up two ninth-inning runs and dropped a 6-5 decision to Los Angeles for their ninth loss in 13 games.

"Everything they swing at falls in someplace," said Philadelphia Manager Danny Ozark, fuming over the Phillies' second consecutive one-run loss to the West Division leaders. "You try to make a pitch to move the batter out of the way and he gets hit by the ball."

That happened in the Dodgers ninth when Ron Reed hit Ron Cey with an 0-2 pitch to put runners on first and second. One out later Dusty Baker singled to score Reggie Smith and tie the game 5-5.

One out after that Jerry Grote singled home pinch-runner Ted Martinez and the Dodgers had beaten the Phillies for the seventh time in a row. Coupled with the Giants' loss to Schatzeder, the triumph left Los Angeles two games ahead of San Francisco.

Meanwhile, St. Louis won a home run derby with Atlanta for an 11-10 triumph; Chicago clubbed Cincinnati 5-2; Houston snapped Pittsburgh's 10-game winning streak with a 7-5 victory, and New York trimmed San Diego 2-1.

"I just blew it — that's all there is to it," said Minton, 0-1, after the homers by Dawson and Valentine balanced a pair of homers by San Francisco's Darrell Evans. "I'm going nuts. I've never had a season like this."

The Giants haven't been more than two games behind since May 6.

Cardinals 11, Braves 10

The Cardinals' George Hendrick drove in seven runs with a grand slam and a three-run homer, offseting a two-homer, five RBI performance by Atlanta rookie star Bob Horner and handing the Braves their 11th loss in 13 games.

Hendrick doesn't talk to the media, and St. Louis Manager Ken Boyer wouldn't talk about why Hendrick doesn't talk. "I'm not going to get into that," said Boyer. "I have a good rapport with him. As long as he plays the way he's been playing, I'm happy."

Cubs 5, Reds 2

Rick Reuschel drove in three runs and pitched seven innings of four-hit ball, pacing the Cubs' victory over Cincinnati and recording his eighth consecutive triumph over the Reds.

Reuschel has allowed the Reds just two runs in 33 innings and hasn't lost to Cincinnati since May 8, 1976. The outcome left the Cubs just 2½ games behind the Phillies.

Astros 7, Pirates 5

Jim Sexton's solo homer in the fourth and a two-run triple by Enos Cabell in the fifth helped Houston beat Pittsburgh to snap the league's longest winning streak this season.

Joaquin Andujar relieved Joe Sambito in the ninth and pitched out of a bases-loaded jam to record his first save of the season.

Mets 2, Padres 1

Craig Swan backed his fivehitter by driving in a run in New York's two-run second inning, carrying the Mets past San Diego and recording his sixth consecutive victory since July 4.

Len Randle drove in the other run with a single, while Dave Winfield ruined Swan's shutout bid with an eighth-inning homer. The loss was only the Padres' third in the last 10 games.

Baltimore's Martinez Loses Bid For No-Hitter In Seventh

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

"In the fifth inning, Rick Dempsey said to me, 'Let's go throw a no-hitter,'" Baltimore's Dennis Martinez recalled, "and I said, 'Why not?'"

Because he had to pitch the seventh inning, too. That's why not.

Martinez, the third Baltimore pitcher this month to take a nohitter into the seventh inning and the third to lose it, gave up Bill Stein's two-out single, then settled for a two-hitter in the Orioles' 5-0 victory over Seattle.

In the rest of the American League, New York ripped Oakland 7-1, Cleveland nipped Chicago 2-1, Boston defeated California 6-0, Detroit defeated Milwaukee 6-3, Texas trimmed Kansas City 7-2 and Toronto beat Minnesota 7-3.

All major league games were officiated by amateur, minor league and collegiate umpires due to the strike by major league umps. Only in New York, where Oakland's Dave Revering was ejected for throwing his helmet after being called out on strikes, was there anything resembling a controversy.

Yankees 7, A's 1

Ron Guidry's 18th victory, achieved on eight innings of five-hit ball, was overshadowed by Reggie Jackson's grand slam homer, a sixth-inning tiebreaker, and Mickey Rivers' two solo shots.

Jackson got the ball out of the stadium when he had to, pulling a John Henry Johnson pitch around the right field foul pole for his 18th homer of the season, his second grand slam of the year and seventh of his career. He now has 1,001 career RBIs.

Indians 2, White Sox 1

Rick Waits pitched eight innings of four-hit ball — but when he gave up a leadoff single in the ninth, Indians Manager Jeff Torbog gave him the hook. Jim Kern preserved the victory over the White Sox with his 11th save. Buddy Bell and Gary Alexander singled home Cleveland's runs off Francisco Barrios.

Tigers 6, Brewers 3

Milwaukee's Mike Caldwell, gunning for his 17th victory, was shot down by Ron LeFlore's three-run homer in Detroit's four-run second inning. Rookie Kip Young got the victory, although he needed eighth-inning relief from John Hiller after Cecil Cooper hit a two-run homer for the Brewers.

Red Sox 6, Angels 0

Boston's Dennis Eckersley baffled California on four hits to run his record to 8-0 at Fenway Park and 15-5 overall, the most games he's ever won in a major league season. Jim Rice's 32nd homer, a third-inning shot off former teammate Don Aase, gave Eckersley all the runs he needed.

Rangers 7, Royals 2

Jon Matlack and Richie Zisk kept Kansas City second in the West, one-half game back of the Angels. Matlack stymied the Royals on five hits and Zisk crashed a grand-slammer to wrap up Texas' six-run sixth inning off Rich Gale. The Royals right-hander had gone into the inninng with a two-hitter and a 2-0 lead on Darrell Porter's two-run homer in the fifth.

Blue Jays 7, Twins 3

Al Woods drove in four runs, three with a homer in Toronto's victory over the Twins. It was the only afternoon game and began only a few hours after the umpire's strike began.

As a result, it started with local amateur umps behind the plate and at first, and coaches Don Leppert of the Blue Jays at second and the Twins' Jerry Zimmerman at third. The coaches left in the second inning with the arrival of a third local umpire.

Chargers Hope To Challenge For Title

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

The Eastern Carolina Conference runner-up for the past two years, Ayden-Grifton's football team is again hoping to challenge for the league title, according to coach Dixon Sauls.

The Chargers have lost only two league games in the past two seasons, both to Farmville Central, which has had two consecutive undefeated seasons. The Jaguars are again the favorites to win it all, but Sauls is hoping his team can offer some stiff competition.

"I feel like we've got a more experienced and better balanced football team than we had last year," Sauls said, "especially at this stage of the season. We've got 11 players that started at one time or another last year — that's unusual for us."

Sauls said the team is about where he wants it to be right now. There is room for improvement, but execution is good and the players have learned the system. "Of course, like everyone, we've been hampered in practice by tobacco, and we are small in numbers."

Experience will be a strong point for the Chargers this season, said Sauls, especially in the offensive line and at quarterback, where all-conference performer David Smith (6-1, 179) returns. A senior, Smith passed for over 900 yards last season, despite three games in the rain. He has an outstanding throwing arm and is a very knowledgeable player, according to Sauls.

Backing him up will be senior Donnie Jackson (5-11, 181). He will be a starter on defense and possesses outstanding poise for a first-year player, the coach said.

Junior Billy Holland (6-0, 186) will be the team's starting fullback. He was a starter last season, but played only half the year due to a broken hand. "He has the ability to be our best football player," Sauls said.

Junior Brady Quinn (5-10, 175), who filled in when Holland was injured last season, is also vying for the fullback spot, but has been hampered by missed practice.

Three players are battling for the running back spot, but holding the inside track at this point is junior Calvin Ellison (5-6, 150). He is the team's most outstanding hustler and possesses good quickness. All he needs is some experience.

Senior Hosea Coley (5-11, 163) and sophomore Anthony Chapman (5-9, 180) are the other two players fighting for the running back position. Coley, a first-year man, is the biggest breakaway threat, while Chapman was the leading rusher on the junior varsity team last season.

At flanker will be senior Wayne Newton (5-10, 177). He was a running back last year and is the team's fastest player. His speed could add a new dimension to the Ayden-Grifton offense — the long ball threat, Sauls said. He has a chest injury, however, that makes his early playing status questionable.

Backing up Newton will be the two quarterbacks and junior Maurice Edwards (5-6, 135), a junior varsity player last year.

Junior Clayton McLawhorn (5-9, 163) will start at left end. He is a returning starter and has good hands, although he needs to work on his blocking and speed. Senior Wendell Williams (5-5, 125), a first-year player, will back him up.

A sophomore, Chris Phillips (6-0, 178) has the inside track on the starting spot at the other end. He has good hands, but needs work on his blocking and patterns. Also vying for the spot is senior Sheldon McCarter (5-10, 162), who caught 15 passes for the team last year. He has the best hands on the team, but is behind due to missed practice time. Sophomore Larry Chapman (6-0, 168) is also working there.

At right tackle will be senior Jolly Dail (6-3, 195). A returning all-conference performer, Dail was a guard last season. He is termed an "outstanding technician" and a very intelligent player.

The other tackle will be senior Johnny Stocks (5-10, 190), who also started last year. He has lost a great deal of weight and needs to adjust to his new size, Sauls said.

Back-ups at tackle include seniors Chris Tripp (6-3, 195) and Hector Lewis (5-11, 230) and junior Todd Jackson (6-2, 175).

A returning starter, senior Ken Branch (5-11, 175) will be at the left guard position. He has been slowed by a back injury, but has great potential, Sauls said.

The other guard will be senior Ron Cox (5-10, 169). He was a defensive end last season, but also has good potential at guard. Junior Russell Farmer (5-10, 160) and junior Mark Anderson (5-7, 170) will be the replacements at guard.

Senior Corky Teachey (6-1, 195), another player who has lost weight, will be the center. His spot in the middle gives the Chargers a definite inside running threat, Sauls said. He is backed by Joe Edwards (5-10, 164), a senior.

On defense, the backs will be Coley and Donnie Jackson. McLawhorn and McCarter are vying for the safety spot, although neither has experience there. Edwards may also play some at safety.

At linebacker Holland, Chapman, Quinn, Ellison, and possibly Donnie Jackson, will all be fighting for playing time. Senior Bernard Coley (5-11, 150) will start at one defensive end, while Tripp will be at the other. Bernard is a returning starter, while Tripp was a guard last season. Back-ups will be Cox, Phillips and Chapman.

Dail, a returning starter, will be at defensive tackle, along with Todd Jackson, Stocks, Teachey and Lewis.

Senior Tim Odham (6-0, 180), a specialty man, will be at one of the defensive guarse guard spots. He should be an outstanding defensive player, Sauls said. Anderson will be the other guard, along with Edwards, Farmer and Ellison.

Overall, Sauls said the defense needs to gain experience at linebacker, and needs to "establish the fact that we are going to be hitters."

Handling the team's kicking duties will be McCarter on short placements and Newton, Tripp or McCarter on long placements. Smith and Quinn will punt, while Dail will snap on kicks.

Sauls said the ECC should be improved this season, with a number of returning players. Farmville will be the favorite, but "we hope to challenge again. We feel like we have the capabilities."

Tampa Bay Suffers First Loss As Miami Wins Florida Battle

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Now you didn't think the Tampa Bay Buccaneers would win all their preseason games, did you?

The team that debuted in the National Football League in 1976 by losing all 14 regular season games, then lost its first 12 last season before defeating New Orleans and St. Louis, had won all three of its exhibition encounters before Friday night.

"We do walk away with a lot of respect for Tampa, especially Doug Williams. Tonight he proved just how good he was," said Miami Coach Don Shula.

While Williams, the All-American quarterback out of Grambling, completed 16 of 34 passes for 216 yards and a touchdown, Bob Griese threw for three scores, including a 66-yard bomb to Nat Moore to put Miami on top to stay.

Shula was especially pleased at the Dolphins' defense in the final minutes.

"It was a great job by our defense, especially on that goal-line stand," he said, alluding to Miami's stopping the Bucs on four plays inside the 3-yard line with a minute left to play.

Tampa Coach John McKay admitted he was ready for the regular campaign, which the Bucs open Sept. 2 against the New York Giants.

Panthers Look For Improvement

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

North Pitt's football team will going after something the Panthers have never achieved before when it travels to Enfield Friday night — a victory in the opening game of the season.

"North Pitt has never won an opening game," according to coach Pat Smith. "We'd like to break that nine-year jinx."

The Panthers aren't expecting to roll right over the opposition, however. The team is not without some problems. "We're inexperienced at some key positions," Smith said, "and we don't have any depth."

But Smith said the team's attitude is good and practice attendance is the best ever at North Pitt. There is experience in the defensive backfield and the left side of the offensive line.

The Panthers will start Victor Evans (5-10, 152), a junior transfer from D. H. Conley at tight end. The split end will be senior Mickey Hines (6-0, 170).

At one tackle will be senior Reuben Matthews (6-2, 155). He was out last season with an injured knee, but Smith said he is expecting big things from him this year if his knee holds up. Junior Marty Barber (5-11, 190) will be the other tackle.

Senior Tim Corey (6-1, 185) is the left guard. He is a four-year starter, moved from tight end. "He will probably be the most steady offensive lineman we have," Smith said. The other guard is junior Mark Nelson (6-1, 174). This is his first year as a starter and he will be backed by Russell Clift (5-9, 160), a senior.

There is a battle going on for the starting center spot between senior Mitchell Leggett (5-8, 160) and junior Gentris Bryant (5-11, 160). "It's kind of a toss-up right now," Smith said.

In the backfield, sophomore Bob Hemingway (6-0, 155) "looks like he's going to get the starting job" at quarterback, according to Smith. He quarterbacked the junior varsity team for the past two years' but doesn't have any varsity experience, Smith commented. Backing him up will be junior Greg Langley (6-3, 167), who should see quite of action. He played two years ago, but not last year.

The two running backs will be senior William Knight (5-11, 170) and junior Terry Moore (5-7, 172). Both have experience and are fairly quick. Knight was injured in the team's scrimmage, however, and may not play in the first game.

The starting flanker will be sophomore Tony Pittman (5-6, 148).

Overall, the offense is uncertain, Smith said. "I don't really know what to expect from them with only four starters back."

Some changes will be made in the North Pitt defense this year. The team will switch to a 6-2, "which is a little bit different from what we have been running. I feel like the defense is going to come along a little better than what we've had in the past."

The defensive backfield features three experienced players, William Knight and brother Carl, (5-11, 142), a junior, at the halfbacks and senior Jerry Pitt (5-9, 150) at safety.

"All three played last year," Smith said, "and did a good job. We're expecting them to do well this year. Bryant will see quite a bit of action, also."

At the defensive ends will be Hines and senior Jerry Tyson (5-10, 152). Tyson is coming off a shoulder operation and played linebacker last year. "He's a good ballplayer and loves to hit," Smith said.

Matthews and Corey will be the defensive tackles, backed by Barber.

At one guard spot will be sophomore Melvin Simmons (6-1, 175). He's out for football for the first time and has been a pleasant surprise, Smith said. Senior Eddie Cox (6-1, 250) and junior Ronnie Austin (5-7, 240) are vying for the other guard position. Both are first-year players. Junior Bernice Jones (5-10, 155) will also play defensive guard.

Evans and senior James Joyner (5-10, 155) are the team's linebackers. Joyner played defensive end last year and was voted the team's outstanding defensive lineman. He is a little bit behind in learning his new position, however, Smith said.

Overall, the defense is fairly small, but quick. Most of the players are good hitters, according to Smith. "It depends on how well they come along."

Handling the kicking duties will be Hemingway (punting), William Knight (place kicking) and Hines or Evans (kickoffs).

Smith said there is no doubt that Farmville Central will be the favorite to win the Eastern Carolina Conference this season, but the Panthers definitely plan on improving on last year's 2-8 record.

"The main sight we've set right now, though, is that first ballgame," Smith said.

Roanoke Falls Short In Opening Game, 19-16

ROBERSONVILLE — Bertie High School scored twice in the final quarter, while holding Roanoke's Redskins to just one touchdown, and pulled out a 19-16 victory in the opening game for both teams Friday night.

Both teams did all their scoring in the first and final quarters of the game. Each scored once in the first period, then remained tied at 6-6 until the final period, when 23 points were put up on the scoreboard.

Roanoke struck first, when Charles Hines scored on a six-yard run to put the Redskins into the lead. A two-point conversion try failed however for a 6-0 lead.

Bertie came back with William Hoggard breaking a 26-yard run to put the Falcons on the scoreboard. Bertie attempted to kick on the conversion try, but it was no good.

The scoring stalled then until the final quarter.

Bertie struck first then, taking the lead on a Stanley Pugh dive from the one-yard line. Archie Wesson kicked the PAT for a 13-6 lead. Bertie never trailed again.

Roanoke got back on the board, but it came when Will Harris trapped and tackled Pugh in the end zone for a safety, cutting the lead to 13-9.

But Bertie then put the game out of reach with another score. That came on a seven-yard run by Pugh. Wesson's kick was wide.

Roanoke came back to cut the lead to three as Sutton Edmondson scored on a five-yard pass from Glen Cargile. Cargile then hit Anthony Latham for the two-point conversion for the final 19-16 margin.

Roanoke threatened on two other occasions, once fumbling away the ball on the Falcon two-yard line.

Field Goal Provides Win Edge For Vikes

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's Vikings made a little bit of history Friday night, and it helped them to victory in their opening football game of the season.

Conley edged past East Carteret, 9-6, to make the 1978 season-opener a happy occasion for Viking fans.

The history came about with just one second left in the first half, when Michael Clemons kicked a 28-yard field goal. The try was the first field goal attempt ever by a Viking team. At the time of the kick, the two teams were locked in a 6-6 tie.

Conley gained the initial lead in the game, scoring early in the second period. It was in the second quarter that all the scoring took place.

Clemons again accounted for the points, scoring on a 30-yard pass from Jeff Allen. The PAT kick attempt failed.

East Carteret came right back to tie it up, however, scoring on a 47-yard pass from Alan Barber to Sonny Godette. The Mariners attempt for a two-point conversion failed, leaving the score knotted at 6-6 until Clemons kicked his fateful field goal.

Curtis Joyner paced the Conley attack, gaining 84 yards on 17 carries. Godette was the leader for East Carteret, gaining 104 yards on 16 lugs, in addition to catching five passes for 47 yards.

Mitchell Inks Pact

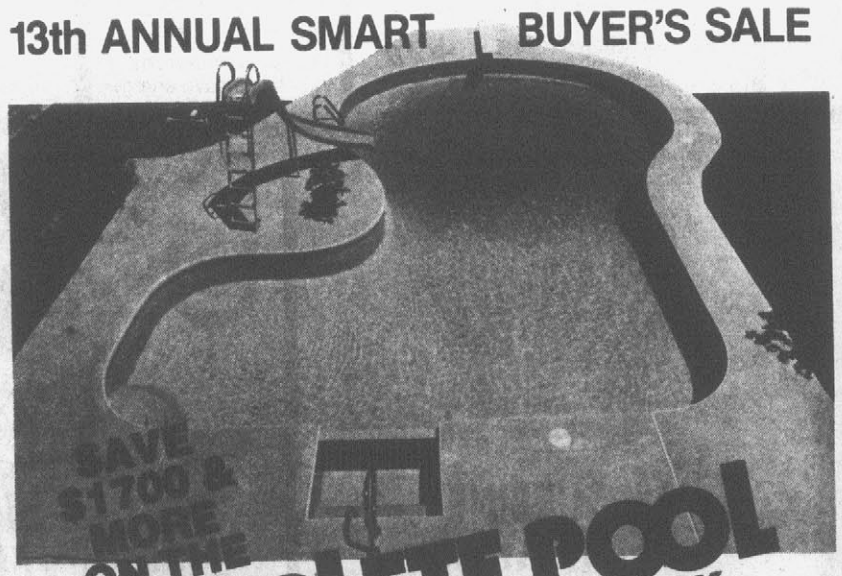

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Running back Lydell Mitchell has signed with San Diego and "the first time I talked to him,' says Chargers Assistant General Manager Tank Younger, "his initial statement was, 'I've been freed.'"

The chargers came to terms Friday with Mitchell, who was acquired Wednesday in a trade with the Baltimore Colts for running back Joe Washington and a fifth-round draft choice.

Mitchell, the American Football Conference's second-leading active rusher with 5,487 yards in his six seasons with the Colts, is expected to come to San Diego Sunday after settling business affairs in Baltimore.

"I'm very pleased it's finished," said Prothro. "I would anticipate he is in pretty good condition but not in football condition. There are two ways we could work this. We could work his tail off and in two weeks he would be ready. I'd say we will work him into it gradually."

Soccer Bowl Set For Today

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — It was not the happiest of times last year when Eddie Firmani resigned as coach of the Tampa Bay Rowdies and signed, only weeks later, as coach of the Cosmos.

"Speaking as an individual, and not for the others, the departure of Eddie Firmani left our club in complete turmoil," said Rodney Marsh, whose Rowdies meet Firmani's Cosmos Sunday in the North American Soccer League title game. "We had played 12 games or so, almost half the season, and we couldn't recover from his leaving. The Cosmos didn't look back, and we struggled the rest of the way."

The Cosmos, spurred by the arrival of Firmani and the intense desire to win a farewell championship for Pele, went on to the title they will defend in Soccer Bowl-78 Sunday before some 76,000 at Giants Stadium.

The Rowdies made the 1977 playoffs, but exited quickly.

"Eddie's departure from Tampa Bay was instrumental in the Cosmos' winning the title," said Marsh, whose successful attempt in the final shot of a shootout Wednesday night gave the Rowdies the American Conference crown.

"He called a brief team meeting and said he couldn't survive the pressure any longer. His original statement was that he was going to quit the game for a few months and think about his future. Three weeks later, he signed with the Cosmos.

STATE WILDLIFE OFFICIALS are trying to learn the cause of a striped bass decline in the Pamlico Sound and Tar River, and are taking steps to correct the situation.

"Since the mid-1960's, anglers have noticed a decline of striper fishing in the Pamlico Sound and Tar River," according to Don Baker, chief of the Division of Inland Fisheries for the N. C. Wildlife Resources Commission. "There is no doubt that a decline has taken place, but no one knows why. It could be from pesticide runoff, pollution, PCB's or any number of things. We met with concerned sportsmen to discuss the problem in January, and there are a number of approaches we're working on."

The Commission had planned to stock some large striped bass fingerlings in the lower reaches of the Tar River, but these plans unfortunately went awry when the young fish died. "Raising stripers is very difficult, and the fish allotted for this project were going to be raised to a large size," said Baker. "Unfortunately, those fish simply did not survive."

The Commission plans to stock stripers in the Pamlico Sound next year. But the stocking procedure may be counterproductive unless biologists determine what caused the decline and if those conditions are still present.

"It could be that the conditions that caused the striper decline in the Pamlico Sound have changed," said Baker. "Reports from Marine Fisheries indicate that we had a good spawn this year."

If the conditions are right, the fish populations will come back naturally in a short time. It will take three to five years for the fish to repopulate the sound to its normal number.

Sailfish Caught From Pier

A veteran Jacksonville fisherman came up with the rare achievement of catching a sailfish from a pier Tuesday. Angelo DePaola hooked the 7-foot, 42-pound sail and played it for 20 minutes, finally landing it on the beach.

The sailfish was caught at Topsail Beach and pier fishermen in North Carolina report they have never heard of such a feat in this state.

Program Aids Wildlife Refuges

Three eastern North Carolina wildlife refuges are undergoing extensive development and rehabilitation as a result of a new federal program, the Fish and Wildlife Service Young Adult Conservation Corps.

YACC camps established at Mattamuskeet, Pungo and Cedar Island have more than doubled the manpower available to maintain and improve these national refuges. Administered jointly by the Departments of Labor, Agriculture and the Interior, the YACC program was designed to help solve the nation's youth unemployment problem while accomplishing much-needed work on public lands.

A 15-member YACC crew is at Mattamuskeet and has undertaken 54 maintenance and building projects. Among the projects are: building storage houses and an equipment shed, painting the refuge buildings, planting millet to provide waterfowl food, aiding in secretarial work, mowing the grounds, collecting data and remodeling portions of the old hunting lodge.

Similar projects are being carried out by crews at Pungo and Cedar Island.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You feel tied down during the early part of the day to some long-standing duty or obligation that hangs on and on. However, by being conscientious in carrying through with it you find the later hours bring much pleasure for you.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Take care of chores early so that you can spend more time with family and friends. An evening for lightheartedness, so be happy and forget any worries you may have.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Dress nicely before you go out socially and make a fine impression on others. Get into lofty studies if you want to develop at this time.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Don't worry so much about money but get busy and study into new interests that could easily give you an abundance soon.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Take exercises that improve health and then off to gain the personal gains you have. Join a group affair that could benefit you greatly.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Tackle accumulated duties early and then spend some time with an adviser and plan for a better future. Eliminate petty annoyances in your life and be happier.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Ideal time to keep any promises you have made. Correct that mistake of the past. Follow rules that appear to apply to you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Rid yourself of stumbling blocks in the path of your advancement, and then get together with helpful bigwigs. Gain more prestige with the public in general. Be charming.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A friend could be annoying but ignore and then look into those new interests that please you. A personal aim may be slow in coming, but be patient.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be most practical and will understand home and property affairs well, although appearing to be somewhat slow in being thorough and painstaking. There can be much success here, whether in real estate, manufacturing of products, or selling them. Some musical talent here, also.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, AUG. 28, 1978

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Until the midafternoon powerful influences can direct and help you in whatever is of a basic nature to you. Your judgment is good and your intuitions are excellent. Go after what you want.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Use your good judgment and improve conditions at home, but don't permit an outsider to spoil the harmony there.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Get in touch with persons who can help you make your life more affluent and satisfying. Think constructively.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Know what your practical goals are and contact experts who can help you gain them. Go to the right sources for the data you need.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Morning is best time to contact influential persons who can help you advance in career matters. Make new friendships.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Contact associates and make workable plans for the future. Be sure to handle routine duties in a most efficient manner.

Filipino Busboy Youth Masqueraded As Doctor

By WAYNE SLATER
Associated Press Writer

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — For more than three months, Joseto Bueno examined patients, studied medical records and chatted regularly with nurses, technicians and physicians at St. Francis Hospital and Methodist Medical Center, police said. The only problem is that Bueno is an 18-year-old busboy.

Spokesmen for the hospitals said Friday they were at a loss to explain how the episode continued so long without being discovered, but said they were stepping up security efforts to avoid a recurrence.

They added that they were convinced that no serious medical blunders had occurred as a result of the alleged deception.

"It's a horrible story and one very isolated case," said Ron Pechan, assistant administrator at St. Francis.

"These are two very large institutions," he said. "If somebody came in the front door and pulled a white coat out of his pocket and put on a stethoscope and walked around the hospital, you wouldn't be able to tell he didn't belong here for a while."

Bueno, meanwhile, was free on bond after pleading innocent to a grand jury indictment accusing him of impersonating a physician.

Authorities said Bueno, a Filipino immigrant, was arrested last week when a security guard caught him with a stolen paging device.

Known to his friends as Chito the busboy, Bueno was fired from a Peoria restaurant recently because he wasn't a good worker, according to owner Harold Lambert. He added that Bueno "liked to play with knives."

According to a police report, Bueno:

—Spent several minutes trying to take a blood sample from a female patient before she demanded another physician.

—Gave a visiting doctor a tour of Methodist and introduced him to two doctors and two patients.

—Told a young woman at the Methodist information desk that she was to page him in case of a medical emergency.

Indicted In Rape Case

ELIZABETHTON, Tenn. (AP) — A Carter County grand jury has indicted four men for the gang rape of four teen-age North Carolina girls who were hiking on the Appalachian Trail.

The grand jury returned the indictments Friday against Billy Ray Johnson, David Eugene Jones, Jerry L. Oaks and Gregory Oaks, all identified as residents of nearby Roan Mountain, Tenn. Carter County officers said Jerry Oaks is in jail in Houston, and his brother, Gregory, is at large.

A third Oaks brother, John Howard Oaks, is in jail awaiting a preliminary hearing in the case after his return from Chicago, where he was arrested last week, officers said. He was not indicted.

The indictments accused the men of criminal sexual conduct in the first and second degree, aiding and abetting sexual conduct in the first and second degree and armed robbery. No arraignment dates were scheduled.

The girls, aged 16 and 17, said they had stopped June 15 at a campground near Hampton, Tenn., when several masked men assaulted them and stole some knives they were carrying as part of their hiking gear.

Two Die In Crash

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — Two North Carolina men have died in the crash of their single-engine airplane near this western Virginia mountain resort.

The plane crashed and burst into flames Friday about 400 feet from the runway of Ingalls Field, the highest airport in the eastern United States. It serves the nearby Homestead resort.

The victims were identified as John M. Thompson, 40, vice president of Pike Electric Co. of Mount Airy, N.C., and a passenger, Jerry Shinault, 28, also of Mount Airy.

U. S. Housing Boom Refuses To Die

By KRISTIN GOFF
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — To the surprise of analysts who have widely expected rising interest rates to choke off home buying, the housing boom refuses to die.

In two-thirds of the major housing markets, at least some lenders have been charging 10 percent for non-government insured loans on 80 percent of the cost of a home, according to a survey of 37 major markets released this weekend by Advance Mortgage Corp., a subsidiary of Citicorp.

"Many lenders and economists had looked upon the 10 percent mortgage as a kind of magic number: the ultimate psychological barrier which would repel would-be homebuyers. Yet in nearly all these markets, the rates had little or only temporary effect," said Robert J. Mylod, president of Advance Mortgage.

The main reason seems to be found in the inflation trends. Overall price inflation has run at around 10 percent in the first half of the year and may finish at about 7 or 8 percent for all of 1978. But home values have been rising much faster and are still seen as a means of combating inflation.

The National Association of Home Builders says, for instance, that the median price of a new home rose 13.2 percent to $55,800 in May 1978 from a year earlier. The price of an existing home climbed 13.8 percent to $47,800 in the same period.

The Commerce Department reported earlier this month that housing starts in July totaled about 2.1 million on an annual basis, the fifth consecutive month of strong housing starts and the third best month of the year.

Even with a seasonal slowdown in the upcoming autumn months, housing this year is expected to finish close to last year's 2 million new homes.

The Advance Mortgage Corp. survey projects that new housing starts actually coming on the market this year will total about 1.5 million, compared to 1977's record 1.54 million. But it notes a shift to slightly more condominiums, instead of single-family homes in markets like Washington, D.C., Chicago, south Florida and southern California, where land is scarce.

One boon to the mortgage market this year has also been new money-market savings certificates that permit banks and thrift institutions to offer savings interest rates tied to Treasury bill rates.

In other business developments this past week:

—Pan American World Airways said it wanted to merge with National Airways, offering $35 a share for National stock. The $300 million proposal threw a monkey-wrench into the plans of Texas International Airways, which has acquired nearly 10 percent of National and has applied to the Civil Aeronautics Board to take control of the Miami-based carrier.

Texas International made no comment on the proposal, which National is studying. Pan Am said it would battle Texas International for control of National if necessary.

900 Level Watched

By KRISTIN GOFF
AP Business Writer

The Dow average of 30 blue chip stocks finished within five points of the 900 mark every day last week and for the past 18 sessions has closed within 10 points of that number.

The Dow finished the week at 895.53 down just 1.30 from the previous week's close after touching, then backing away from, the 900 level in the final three sessions of the past week.

"We're at a pretty important standoff in the market," said Robert Stovall, an analyst at Dean Witter Reynolds.

Stovall said the market appeared to be split between buyers, who believed government efforts to aid the dollar would attract more foreign buyers of stocks, and those who felt that rising interest rates and other indicators bode badly for the economy.

The market fell off about 8 points on Monday in reaction to a decline in currency markets. It partly recovered the following day when the Treasury announced plans to increase gold sales starting at its monthly November auction as part of the government program to defend the ailing dollar.

Despite the Dow's slow movement, Stovall says, "The 900 tug-of-war is really masking a broadening market which has seen speculative buying."

Gambling stocks were among the week's notable gainers, but so were a number of companies involved in merger deals.

Pan American posted a net gain of 7⅝ to 8½ during the week and Texas International Airlines, on the American Stock Exchange, closed up 1⅛ at 15⅝.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I'm a pushover for those magazine articles that tell me I can put out a six-course dinner for eight in less than half an hour. (I can't shave my legs in less than half an hour.)

You know the ones I'm talking about. Those timetables that give you a minute-by-minute game plan of how you proceed with your meal. At 5:30, clean and chill the greens. At 5:40, put the water on to boil for the rice. At 6:00 slice the French bread and put in the warmer. At 6:15, toss the rice, etc., etc.

I tried one of those timetables a week ago that looked and sounded fantastic. The menu was: beef stroganoff over noodles, green salad, buttered fresh asparagus, dinner rolls and baked Alaska. The company was due at 7:00, I started dinner at 6:30. It went something like this.

6:30: Washed greens for salad.

6:32: Lined kids up to smell their breath to see which one had ripped off the cherry tomatoes for the salad. Sent son with cherry seeds in front tooth to store for new supply.

6:40: Sliced beef and put in skillet to brown.

6:40: Toilet stopped up in hallway, Ran to garage for plunger.

6:45: Put water on for noodles.

6:47: Smacked dog for licking ice cream that melted down side of cupboard.

6:50: Put on water for frozen asparagus.

6:53: Water for noodles went dry and burnt pan.

6:54: Discovered you had to put baked Alaska on board in very hot oven. Sent kids to find a board.

6:56: Water for asparagus boiled dry and burnt pan.

6:57: Husband announced ice cube trays were empty.

6:59 ½: Kids informed me they got the board from bottom of bird feeder.

7:00: Doorbell rang. Poured two tablespoons of sherry into the stroganoff.

HYPERTENSION MISDIAGNOSED

NEW YORK (AP) — Greater emphasis on early diagnosis and treatment of high blood pressure may mean that many persons — especially the elderly — are being misdiagnosed, according to Medical World News.

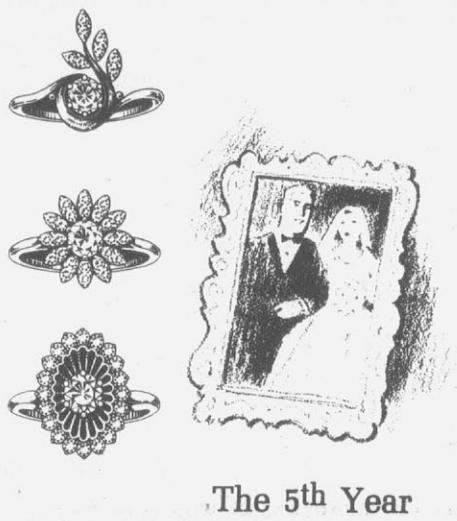

The magazine reports that some patients are consequently being subjected to unnecessary drug treatment.

Dr. J. David Spence, a Canadian physician, has warned that the standard arm or leg cuff measurements of blood pressure may be off by as much as 40 mm of mercury in elderly patients suffering from hardening of the arteries.

Similar errors may be recorded in younger persons with fat or large arms."

Tammy Lynette Cayton Is Wed To Joel Jones Saturday

The Arlington Street Baptist Church was the scene for the 2 p.m. wedding ceremony Saturday of Tammy Lynette Cayton and Joel Timothy Jones Jr. of Greenville. Tommy Tripp officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Cayton of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joel Timothy Jones Sr. of Greenville.

The church was decorated with a fifteen branch arch candelabra filled with chrysanthemums. Two spiral candelabra flanked the arrangement. The couple joined in lighting the unity candle.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a gown of white satalustie polyester organza and chantilly lace. It was fashioned with a Queen Anne neckline, empire bodice overlayed with chantilly lace and seed pearls and long bishop sleeves with motifs of lace and seed pearls. The full circular skirt flowed into a full chapel length train. The capulet headpiece was made of chantilly lace, seed pearls and satin ribbon bows, attached to fingertip tiers of silk illusion. The bride carried a colonial bouquet of miniature blue carnations, yellow roses, gypsophila and garden greenery, tied with white satin and lace streamers.

June Wease of Greenville served as maid of honor. She wore a formal length gown of blue mist sylesta over blue taffeta designed with a portrait neckline edged in self-fabric piping and enhanced by a sheer bertha collar that extended to a walking length drape in the back. The sleeveless gown was styled with a fitted empire bodice and A-line skirt. She carried a nosegay of yellow daisies and miniature blue carnations tied with yellow satin streamers.

Bridesmaids were Judy Lynn Little, Sandra Renee Jones, sister of the bridegroom, Patricia Ann Midyette, cousin of the bride, Lisa Murad, all of Greenville, and Gail Cates of Grimesland, cousin of the bride. Their dresses were styled the same as the honor attendant's in sundeck sylesta. They carried nosegays of miniature blue carnations and yellow daisies tied with yellow and blue satin streamers.

Joel Timothy Jones Sr. of Greenville served as his son's best man. Ushers included Ricky Ray Jones and Neil Jones, brothers of the bridegroom, Leavy Brock, Chip Cayton, brother of the bride, David Vaughn, all of Greenville, and Glen Dozier of Cary, uncle of the bridegroom.

Mrs. Eloise Jackson provided a program of nuptial music. Miss Manzer Saad, cousin of the bride, directed the wedding.

Immediately following the wedding, the bride's parents entertained at a reception at the church fellowship hall. Mr. and Mrs. Larry Baldree Sr. welcomed the guests and Mrs. Francis Hardee and Mrs. Betsy Westbrook, cousins of the bride, presided at the guest register, where the bride's portrait was displayed. The entrance to the hall was marked by white rattan wedding bells with white streamers and topiary trees. The hall was decorated with ferns, roses, and a mixture of late summer flowers.

After the traditional cutting of the first slice by the bridal couple, cake was served by Juanita Saad, aunt of the bride. Punch was poured by Marie Poore, aunt of the bride. A white damask cloth covered the table, which was centered with a six branched candelabra holding an arrangement of daisies and mums interspersed with gypsophila and white candles. Good-byes were said by Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Smith. Miss Amy Leonard, cousin of the bridegroom, distributed rice bags to the guests.

After a wedding trip to Washington, D. C., the couple will reside at Shady Knoll Mobile Park.

The bride and bridegroom are graduates of J. H. Rose High School. The bride is also a graduate of Pitt Technical Institute and is employed by the City of Greenville Public Works Department as a secretary. The bridegroom is a graduate of Lenoir Community College and is employed as a cost estimator for Barrus Construction Co.

Mr. and Mrs. Joel Tim Jones Sr., parents of the bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Dozier of Salem and Mr. and Mrs. John Thomas Jones of Red Oak, grandparents of the bridegroom, entertained at a rehearsal dinner Friday evening at the Three Steers Restaurant.

'Real' Dad Made A Mint Is He Entitled To It?

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I was born an illegitimate child, and while an infant I was adopted by the most wonderful couple in the world.

Eventually I learned who my "real" parents were, but I had no desire to intrude on their lives. I always felt that they had a right to the lives they had chosen, which did not include me.

I recently read that my "real" father had died. Perhaps I should mention that he had made an outstanding success in business and was well known in his community. In reading his obituary, I discovered that he had no wife or children, only one survivng sister.

I was told that even though I am an illegitimate son, I have a legal claim to his estate.

How do you feel about my coming forward now and demanding what is legally and rightfully mine?

Your answer will help me with a decision I must make soon.

NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: A lawyer can tell you whether or not you are legally entitled to anything.

As for your coming forward now and demanding what you think is "rightfully" yours: If you had learned that your "real" father had died deeply in debt, would you come forward now and offer to pay off his debts?

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a millionaire businessman who insists on holding all his business conferences in his private suana?

N. IN BEVERLY HILLS

DEAR N.: Maybe that's his way of sweating out the best deal.

DEAR ABBY: Today's generation seems to think it's necessary to advertise EVERYTHING on television and radio in order to sell it. We are two teenagers who happen to feel that personal hygiene products should NOT be advertised on radio and television.

For example: Your boyfriend comes over and you are watching TV together. Then one of those embarrassing commercials comes on, and there's nothing you can do about it but just sit there while your face gets red.

I don't know of anyone who appreciates these commercials. People who need these products don't need television to show them what the items look like. Everybody knows, so what's the point?

Is there any way to put a stop to these embarrassing commercials?

EMBARRASSED

DEAR EMBARRASSED: Write to the TV station and voice your complaint. Then write to the company whose products are advertised, and inform them that you will NOT buy their product because their advertising offends you.

(P.S. I, too, find that type of advertising offensive. Some products should be advertised in newspapers and magazines only.)

DEAR ABBY: I have a very personal problem I need help with, but I want to be sure you get my letter.

Where shall I send it? Thank you.

NEEDS ADVICE

DEAR NEEDS: Write to Abby, P.O. Box No. 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. And please enclose a stamped (15 cents), self-addressed envelope for a personal reply.

CONFIDENTIAL TO BARBARA: If you marry him for his money, you may have to divorce him to get it.

State Fair Still Family Event

By SANDRA L. LATIMER

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Banners wave, band music battles calliope sounds from amusement rides and carnival barkers vy for attention at food stands and games of skill.

It's all the fever of a state fair where Mom, Dad and the kids exhibit their prized projects and look at new products.

Today's state fair resembles a county fair, only much larger. But both still retain the family atmosphere that created fairs more than 100 years ago.

When the crops were harvested, the farmer would reserve the best to take to the fair. His wife would pack her best canned pickles, bake her favorite cake and take her quilt to display.

A fair also was a place where new products developed. A couple of farmers discussing a problem with equipment got advice from a merchant and soon there was a new product.

A day at the fair was a family outing. So there had to be something for the children to do. Amusement rides were added.

Then came the midway. And, of course, food stands.

By and large, fairs today are basically what they were years ago when most of America lived in rural areas.

With some changes: Early exhibitors were the farmer and his wife, while the kids came along for the fun. Today, while Mom and Dad still exhibit, the emphasis is on young exhibitors.

The 125th Ohio State Fair, which just concluded its 13 day run, had some 63,000 items on display from more than 10,000 exhibitors. Some 2.5 million people paid at the gate.

Tamie Rawn, 15, Canal Winchester, Ohio, has been showing livestock for six years. She and her two sisters were influenced by their brother Terry, now 20.

"We exhibit for competition, the chance to meet new people and go lots of places," said Tamie.

"And for the sportsmanship," said sister, Tricia, 13, "and challenge," said sister, Tonya, 16.

Many exhibitors do not stop when they outgrow junior fair, which ends when they graduate from high school.

Bob Rowe, 25, Gahanna, has been showing sheep for 15 years. Now he exhibits as a senior.

"I got into exhibiting for competition," he said. "It gets addictive."

While youngsters depend on the sale of their animals at the auction to cover expenses and put a little in the bank, Rowe and senior showmen use this as a way to get their name known in breeding circles.

Exhibitors work on their projects throughout the fair.

"You have to bathe, feed, water and bed down the animal," said Deanna Hart of New Albany, whose steer took grand champion award at the Franklin County Fair, and was the first animal sold at the livestock auction.

Many times youngsters have slept on a bale of hay at close to their animal. Nowadays, most stay in dormitories on the grounds.

The livestock auction comes near the end of the fair.

"First year members get emotionally attached to their animal," said Cindi Grover, 20, of Washington Court House, reigning Lamb and Wool Queen and a sheep exhibitor. "It's the first thing they had that is really theirs and they do cry."

Cindi remembers when she was younger and her sheep were sold.

"I had the champion sheep for two years in a row. I had fed and weighed the sheep every day and walked them every night. When I realized it was my last market lamb at the county fair, it was kind of sad. It was like a good friend leaving. I cried."

Exhibitors look forward to the livestock auction, knowing the sale will attract top buyers and high prices.

"Animals sold at the junior fair bring about 10 cents more than the current market price," said Brenda Esty of New Albany, who exhibited dairy cattle. "Buyers know the quality of the 4-H meat."

Miss Esty has shown dairy cattle for eight years. Her father showed dairy cattle and so did her brothers and sisters before her. Her two younger brothers are doing it, too.

"I feel cattle is your biggest money-making project, but then we've never tried anything else," she said. "You put down a couple hundred dollars for a steer. We raise our own grain for feed so that helps. And by the time it (the animal) is sold, you've made a couple of hundred dollars."

Youngsters put the money away for college or to invest in more animals, or like Cindi, when she was 11, to pay off a loan she had gotten at the bank for her project the year before.

She remembers getting that loan to buy her Dorset sheep.

"My father co-signed for me. I was scared to death I wouldn't be able to pay it back. But that year I cleared enough to pay back the loan and put a little away, too."

Not all young exhibitors are from the farm. Some are from the city or suburbs. They, too, get into the act with their 4-H, home economics and school club displays, scout troops, even marching bands and choirs that perform at various places on the 360-acre grounds.

Meanwhile, the women are just as busy with exhibits, displays and projects. Fairs have seen an increase in the number of fine arts displays.

Among displays in the Fine Arts area are quilts, afghans, knitted and crocheted items, canned and baked goods, sewing projects.

"Exhibiting is a hobby with women," said Carol Rings of Columbus, a home economist who judges fairs. "They like the competitiveness. They put their best efforts forth and want to see how it stacks up with someone else's."

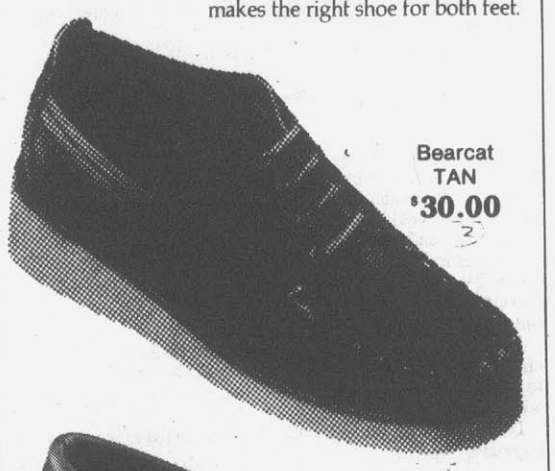

Rules for the various contests require the item be made by the exhibitor. But it may be made from a kit, such as an afghan, a sweater or a latch hook rug. And some entries are originals or modifications of patterns.

Carlene Carter's Not "Using" Name

By MARK SCHWED

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Carlene Carter wants to be known for her music, not her country relatives — grandmother Maybelle Carter, mother June Carter Cash, father Carl Smith and stepfather Johnny Cash.

In fact, all Carlene's aunts, sisters, step-sisters and children also sing.

"I haven't allowed them to help me in any way at all," Carlene says. "I don't want anyone thinking I'm riding off a name. I know they've played an influence on my growing up, but I never bought a country record until three years ago when I bought a Dolly Parton album.

"That would be suicidal to be known as June Carter Cash's or Johnny Cash's daughter. I'm not even his daughter. I'm his step-daughter.

"I've lived with him two years. I'm not his little girl. We're friends. But I'm friends with Waylon Jennings, too."

Carlene recorded her first album in London to get as far away from her Tennessee relatives' influence as possible.

"I was totally myself," the former cheerleader says. "I got to work with a really good band. The more I jump around and smile at 'em on stage, the better they play. I've figured that one out."

Although she has a powerful voice traditional to country singers, her album leans towards rock 'n' roll.

"There's still a lot of country in there," the blonde Southern belle says. "It's sort of gotten labeled as rock 'n' roll, but I don't like labels. I don't want the country music audience to turn me off, because there is a lot of country music in there."

Her new single, "Never Together but Close Sometimes," is a blend of rock, Jamaican-type music and country and has already made it big in England. "Every song that I write I will record, or songs that I hear that I wish I wrote. 'Never Together' is one I wish I wrote."

Carlene, 22, is single again after two short marriages and says she's going to stay that way for a while. "Oh, Yes! I'm strolling along. I'm having very good fun," she says with a broad grin.

"As far as my first marriage, I was so young then and it ended when I was so young. It was like I was someone else. I can't remember what it was like to be married to him.

"My second husband was dark and handsome. He swept me off my feet. I made no beans about the fact that I was going to get into music, but he had great expectations for what he was going to be, too. And the fact that it wasn't working out as fast for him as it was for me was extremely hard for him to handle."

Carlene lives in a 10-room house in Nashville with her children, a boy and a girl. "I'm glad to be here 'cause I don't get home hardly at all."

"I just want to make a living at my favorite thing. If something happened and I didn't get to make records, I'd be happy if I could just go on the road and play.

Carter-Prezioso Wedding Saturday Night

Our Redeemer Lutheran Church was the scene of the wedding ceremony of Rhonda Candace Prezioso of Greenville and Barry Howard Carter of Rt. 1, Advance. The Rev. R. Graham Nahouse performed the double ring ceremony Saturday evening at eight o'clock.

Daughter of Capt. (USN) and Mrs. Ronald Prezioso of Virginia Beach, Va., the bride was given in marriage by her father. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Maudi Howard Carter of Rt. 1, Advance, and the late Mr. Grady Carter.

The honor attendant was Sheryl P. Yaconiello of Norfolk, Va., sister of the bride. Bridesmaids included Pamela P. Hellman of Puerto Rico, Pearl Joyce and Terri Kay Prezioso of Virginia Beach, Va., all sisters of the bride.

The best man was David Carter of Advance, brother of the bridegroom. Ushers were Curtis Nebb of Ayden, Danial Yoakum of Greensboro, and Frank Yaconiello of Norfolk, Va., brother of the bride.

The bride wore a gown of French chantilly lace and organza fashioned with an empire waist and train. She wore a matching chapel length veil and carried a cascade of white roses, baby's breath and stephanotis.

The attendants wore pink silk organza gowns styled with fitted bodices and A-line floor length skirts. The dresses were sleeveless with a scoop neck and capelett collar. They carried pink sweetheart roses and baby's breath.

The bride is a graduate of ECU and is doing graduate work there. She is a teacher at Caswell Center, Kinston. The bridegroom is assistant manager at Ayden Agrico and is attending ECU part-time.

Two Photography Winner—One From Charlotte

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

Two high school graduates came to New York City recently to share the excitement, honor and the spotlight as dual winners of photography's top award for students: the grand prize of a $1,000 Kodak scholarship grant in the 1978 Scholastic-Kodak Photo Awards contest. This was the first tie for first-place honors in the contest's long history.

The winners, Susan King, 17, of Encino, Calif., and Gary Weinreb, 18, of Charlotte, N.C., represent all that's "right" with today's teenage youth. They are students of high academic standing, earnest, aware of today's world.

Both share the common feeling that they are able to express themselves through photography and that it is a vital element in their lives.

The two were selected as equal winners based on portfolios of 12 photographs put together to show the range of their creative seeing in both color and black-and-white, their camera skill, and their darkroom ability. Theirs had been judged best from among 250 portfolios submitted by high school seniors throughout the United States, its territories, and Canada.

The two portfolios, plus a third that won a $500 scholarship for Kenneth Glenn, 17, of Burbank, Calif., are among the total of 291 photographs on display at the Kodak Exhibition Gallery in New York City through Oct. 28. They are the national finalists from the thousands entered by junior and senior high school students in the competition conducted annually by Scholastic Magazine.

The level of proficiency demonstrated by this year's finalists is unusually high and shows the youngsters of today are probing with their cameras at every conceivable subject or situation, outdoors and indoors. The exhibit displays, too, are carried out with an imaginative flair that makes viewing a visual experience. Some of the photographs are finished in three-dimensional style to add realistic shapes and depth. For instance, one wide-angle dance group is mounted on a curved surface that swirls around the viewer. Another is a corner of a skyscraper built as a visual pyramid which juts out from the background.

The contest and exhibition also made it plainly evident that there is an elite corps of photography teachers in some high schools who inspire or guide their students along photographic paths that are consistently rewarding.

Miss King's teacher is her father, Warren King, head of the photography department at Reseda High School in Los Angeles. Warren King's students have captured eight of the top Scholastic-Kodak awards since 1970.

Twice before, his students have taken both of the two top scholarship awards in the same year. This year his students came away with 16 awards in the 1978 program, the largest number by any one school. That's persuasive evidence of teaching leadership.

Weinreb's teacher is Byron Baldwin of Myers Park High School in Charlotte. He, too, has hit the bull's eye more than once. Last year-another of his students, Alice Sebrell, was the top winner of the $1,000 scholarship.

Still another teacher with an impressive record this year is Bob Runyon of Tillicum Jr. High School in Bellevue, Wash.

More than a dozen of his students are listed as winners.

"Student motivation!" says Warren King. "Students enter our program with enthusiasm and the desire to make photography a part of their life.

"If their enthusiasm isn't genuine, and if their desire is short-lived, and if they don't apply themselves to the work we require, the misfits are weeded out fast. We maintain a strict discipline of work — but at the same time we make it exciting, stimulating and rewarding."

Stimulation is provided by frequent appearances of prominent professional photographers and former students who have become professionals. They illustrate their problem-solving techniques and the goals which lie ahead. Students are prepared for employment in a choice of many photo directions to suit each individual student's interest, ability and background.

One of King's innovative teaching aids is the use of an extensive library of recording tapes of photographic instruction. It has been his custom for years to record lectures and demonstrations. These have been filed with visual aids for use as reference on specific subjects.

The tapes are valuable tools for individuals or groups who missed a lecture, who are slower in learning, or who need repetition or self-coaching. After learning basic skills, photography's doors are open to opportunities in artistic fulfillment or jobs in many fields in the industry.

CHIVALRY

GLEN ROCK, N.J. (AP) — Chivalry isn't exclusively a male prerogative, as Kate Shaw proved here recently.

She sprang to the rescue and halted traffic in crossing-guard fashion as the ducks waddled to safety.

Other shoppers applauded and congratulated her.

Community Plant Bed Worked Well In Columbus County

by Woody Upchurch
North Carolina State University

WHITEVILLE — The tomatoes were as large as grapefruit, and the pole beans ran off the top of the seven-foot saplings supporting them. Marie Mitchell, her bare feet planted comfortably in the warm, moist eastern North Carolina soil, surveyed it all with beaming pride.

"I'll be shelling butterbeans til Thanksgiving," she exaggerated.

"Did you see the size of those tomatoes over yonder?" she asked, pointing to a back corner of the bountiful half-acre garden behind her mobile home in rural Columbus County.

"I've never had tomatoes that big before," she declared.

The Mitchells are among 200 Columbus families that are growing more and better quality vegetables as a result of an attempt by the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service to improve the nutrition of disadvantaged families through the Expanded Food and Nutrition Extension Program.

EFNEP is in 94 Tar Heel counties, but the Columbus County extension staff has added a twist that is making its program unusually successful.

"We found that the cost of seed and plants, as small as it was, discouraged many of the families from getting started," explained John Spaulding, Columbus extension agent. "That's when we hit on the idea of a community plant bed and free seed. This has allowed us to supply plants and seed, and say to the families, 'Here, all you have to do is plant them' The response has been excellent."

The board of county commissioners liked the idea and provided the nominal funding required to get the plant bed started.

Spaulding and extension aides Mark Lovette and Leslie Edwards prepared the bed in February. The transplants are carried to the families at planting time by the EFNEP aides, who are four paraprofessionals hired to work on a one-to-one basis with the families.

Through donations from seed firms and other local businesses, enough free seed and fertilizer have been made available to meet the needs of those who can't afford them.

Spaulding trains the aides in recommended vegetable varieties, planting dates, fertilization, and other production information. Although their work is normally confined to diets and food preparation, the aides have become proficient in their expanded roles as horticultural advisors, Spaulding said.

"Working with the families in the garden is one of the most effective contacts we have with them," said EFNEP aide Evelyn Smith. "They take tremendous pride and satisfaction in being able to grow a nice row of snapbeans or large tomatoes. Working with families in growing their gardens gives us a closer working relationship and helps build their confidence in us and what we are trying to teach them about nutrition."

The excitement and pride the gardens generate are infectious, said aide Flossie Bert.

"Children get caught up in it and so do the neighbors," Bert said. "They see what can be done and want to try it themselves."

Aide Luticia Jacobs told of a case in which the children of the family requested their own small garden in addition to the family's larger plot.

"We gave them seed and plants and helped them get started," noted Jacobs. "Now, when we visit the family, the first place we're taken to is the children's tiny garden."

Only a fourth of the families in the Columbus program had gardens before the Extension Service contacted them, according to Spaulding. He commented that those already gardening had added new vegetables and improved their production practices.

Mrs. Mitchell has done both, saying, "We've added some things we never grew before and changed to better varieties of tomatoes and snapbeans."

Program contacts made through the garden work enhanced the EFNEP aides' work to encourage better food conservation. Yvonne McPherson, for example, had never used a pressure canner before Evelyn Smith started working with her ine garden and the home.

"We're putting up more vegetables now and we're doing a lot better job of keeping the quality," said Mrs. McPherson as she and five of her seven daughters prepared corn, beets and tomatoes for canning and freezing.

How much does the garden mean to her? "I don't know how much money it saves us, but I wouldn't want to feed our family with only the food we could buy at the store," she replied.

Spaulding estimates the value of food harvested from an average size garden at around $500, noting that represents a sizable savings for EFNEP families.

The economic value is secondary to the effect the gardens are having on the families' eating habits, according to Spaulding and the home economists who visit the homes.

Through the gardening phase, the families are being introduced to vegetables they have never eaten before, such as eggplant, broccoli and cauliflower, Spaulding says.

"In many instances, raw vegetables from the garden are replacing some of the junk snack food children and adults have traditionally eaten," Spaulding said.

"These are the kinds of results we are looking for in this program," said Dr. T. C. Blalock, director of the state Agricultural Extension Service at North Carolina State University.

"To realize this kind of success, we need the innovative ideas such as the community plant bed concept developed by the Columbus County extension staff," Dr. Blalock commented.

'Ain't Had It Tough Till In Jail'

CLINTON, N.J. (AP) — The seven teen-agers were silent as they listened to the tough talk of the convicted murderers at the Clinton Correctional Institute for Women.

"You ain't had it tough 'til you come to prison," inmate 7239 told the girls.

"We all tell you our numbers because that's what we are," said 9699. "You lose everything when you come here."

The prisoners spoke of prison conditions, homosexuality among inmates and treatment by other prisoners and correction officers.

The inmates were rough and their language was coarse as they told the girls that they, too, could wind up in prison unless they attended school, refrained from using drugs, respected their parents and stopped running away from home.

The young women, aged 13 to 17, were here as part of the Clinton Lifers Group, modeled after a program between boys and the inmates at Rahway State Prison. Since May, about 100 young women have come to Clinton for encounters with the lifers.

Congratulations, Rising Senior

Congratulations, rising senior! Welcome to that final high school year filled with all its excitement, happiness, responsibility and decisions. One of the most important decisions you will face during the next year will be where to go to college. We would like you to consider Peace College, a small two-year college for women. We've been educating young women, many of them from Eastern North Carolina like you, for 106 years. Those women have discovered that Peace cares about the individual student and her future . . . whether it be demonstrated through regularly scheduled advisor-advisee sessions or through interest shown by a concerned faculty in and out of the classroom. You, rising senior, and your parents are especially invited to visit the picturesque campus and to meet the people involved in the life of Peace. You might just want to be a part of the Peace tradition. We hope so.

Underwater Photography Not Expensive, Very Interesting

By MURRAY J. BROWN
UPI Travel Editor

It's easy to distinguish the tourists from the natives. They're the ones with the cameras.

For maintaining a pictorial log of their travels — to share later with family and friends at home — is part of the enjoyment of visiting faraway places.

And in these days of aim-and-shoot cameras, you do not have to be a professional photographer to preserve on film the highlights of your holiday, even if it takes you under the sea.

A Skin Diver Magazine survey last year showed that about 32 percent of the more than one million skin divers in the United States carry still or movie cameras on their explorations of the fascinating undersea world.

Underwater photographers do not have to buy a lot of expensive equipment, according to Paul Yarrows of the Photo Information Department of Eastman Kodak. He offered these tips:

If you already own a camera, you can buy a waterproof, plastic housing — available at photo dealers, scuba shops or directly from the manufacturer — designed specifically for your camera model. Housings are usually moderately priced (as low as about $30 in some cases) depending on the simplicity or complexity of their features and controls.

If you have to buy a camera, first decide whether you want to take movies or print-slides.

"For movies, cameras with existing-light capabilities are ideal," Yarrow said. "No matter how deep you go, if you can see the subject adequately in the viewfinder, you'll be able to capture it on super 8 film. They do an excellent job of compensating for frequent changes in underwater lighting caused by reflected sunlight, air bubbles and dissolved or suspended matter in the water.

"If you prefer prints, still cameras with existing-light capabilities and built-in flash systems will provide fine underwater views. Used with highspeed Kodacolor 400 film, these cameras will take whatever you see in the viewfinder.

"With the built-in flash, you will catch even more color and detail, which otherwise could be lost to the bluish tones of the deep. For the 35mm users, the new Ektachrome 400 film offers exciting possibilities in the slide field."

Yarrow said that the amount of available light is most important in underwater photography. He noted that "the light is usually strongest near the surface, on a sunny day and between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. when the sun's rays penetrate the deepest."

Take most underwater scenes at short range. Yarrow said the ideal distance is within six feet from the subject. "Underwater scenes taken from up close, naturally, will generally be much clearer than those taken from a distance," he said.

He also cautioned that even though what you see underwater will appear much larger than it actually is, go ahead and base your shooting on the apparent size and distance. "Light refraction will affect your lens in the same way it affects your eyesight," he said, adding that "underwater feet" are actually only nine inches long.

Yarrow said it is especially important to keep a steady aim — to hold yourself and the camera firm against the action of waves, currents and swells. "If a stationary object is nearby, hold on to it with one hand," he said. "Near the bottom, stand or kneel. Or set your camera on a solid rock or coral formation."

Yarrow warned against two underwater photographic nonos. "Avoid aiming straight down because you'll probably lose your subject against the dark ocean floor. And never shoot far away scenes of tiny subjects that can easily get lost in a distant underwater background."

Go Flashlight-Armed When Apartment Hunting

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (UPI) — Almost anyone looking for a new apartment checks out the number and size of closets and the apartment house's proximity to public transportation, churches, schools and shopping.

But how many people think to carry a flashlight to look for signs of roaches or mice in their hiding places: behind and under counters and kitchen appliances; inside closets, drawers and along baseboards?

A flashlight is among the suggestions by an Evansville moving company in a brochure it has prepared for consumers.

Its list of questions to ask is accompanied by space to rate each item as good, average or poor. For example:

—"Will your furniture fit? (Take along tape and measure and list dimensions.)

—"Is the floor 'squeaky'?

—"If there is an elevator, is it well-lighted? Is there an emergency alarm?

—"Is window cleaning provided? How often?

—"What direction does the apartment face? (North and east exposures may require up to 20 percent more heat than other units in the same building. South and west exposures will require more cooling energy in summer.

—"Who is responsible for (appliance) repairs?

—Does sound from built-in noisemakers (faucets, furnace, air conditioner, garbage disposal, dishwasher) travel through the apartment? (Turn them on — see for yourself.)

Senior Citizens Go To College

By IIONA ROSS
Associated Press Writer

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — Eighty-seven-year-old Anna Brand got up at 8 o'clock every morning to learn the "Jersey hustle" in her exercise class.

The former New York City kindergarten teacher was one of about 500 elderly persons attending summer school at 15 colleges and universities around New York state this year.

The students, who must be at least 60 years old, are part of Senior Seminars, a program that begins in May and runs until September.

Skidmore College offered five non-credit, week-long seminars attended by 255 students. As in all participating schools, students paid $110 a week plus a $10 registration fee for room and board and three classes a day for five days. No outside reading or homework was required.

Besides being a fun vacation for seniors, the program allows the schools to receive money for previously idle facilities and brings them a whole new group of alumni.

"It's like being marriage brokers for happy clients," said Skidmore President Joseph Palamountain.

Program coordinator Sharon Arpey said the courses were no different from those offered to 18-to 22-year-olds.

"We don't want to teach old people to be old," she said. "The idea of the program is to give senior citizens a taste of college life. They sleep in the dorms, and they eat in the dining halls."

Mrs. Brand says she enrolled because she heard the program attracted a "good group." This was her first summer, and she says she knows "it won't be the last."

Augusta and Thomas Mann of New York City signed up for a second year of three weeks at three separate universities.

The 70-year-old former city school system administrative assistant said she and her husband "joined to get the experience of living on a college campus. We've had no formal education, and we wanted the experience of being with younger people."

Mann, a former accountant, says he doesn't necessarily read more material at college, but "when I go home, I'll go look in the library. I feel reactivated."

The 74-year-old enrolled in a mythology course. "I once took a trip to Greece and saw all the ruins. Now I know what I was looking at," he said.

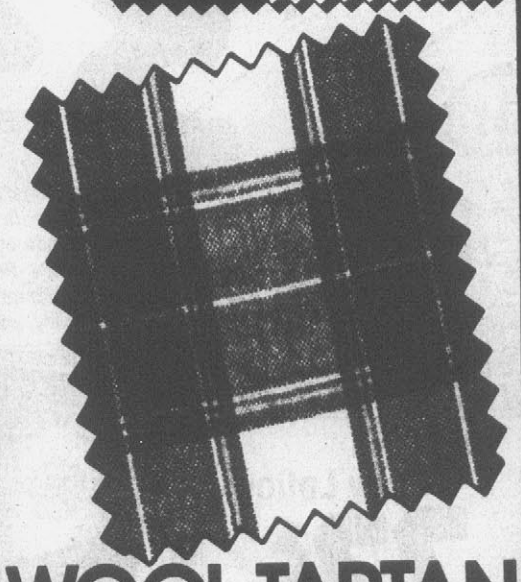

Mark Gelber, dean of special programs, says the students as a rule are "healthy for their age group; they're risk-takers, they're interested in learning, and they tend to be articulate. We have more women, possibly because they tend to live longer."

Gelber says the school doesn't actually make money, but "It prevents us from laying off staff during the summer, and it helps keep tuition costs down."

Another side benefit, he says, is that teachers "seem to be invigorated" by teaching people who have seen history. It was a first for one professor who "didn't have to mention that it wasn't Eugene McCarthy he was talking about."

Lynne Gelberg, who teaches a course on mythology, says old people are not blase. "They're very happy to be learning. So many younger students take it for granted and just don't realize how much fun it is."

Kilpeck Is An Astonishing Church

By GREGORY JENSEN

KILPECK, England (UPI) — People who don't believe in miracles ought to visit Kilpeck church. It is a bundle of them.

Kilpeck is perhaps Britain's most astonishing church, though few tourists visit it and even among Britons it is comparatively unknown. It is a tiny building, more a chapel than a church, in an out-of-theway location 155 miles west of London.

Its first miracle is that it has survived at all.

Not that it is so ancient — it is 844 years old, but there are many older buildings. It survived because Oliver Cromwell missed it.

Cromwell's Puritans were a catastrophe to English churches and church art. One sacriligious fanatic named William Dowsing, charged by Cromwell with removing "images and superstitious things" in churches, hammered to dust the heads of statues, used muskets to shoot angels off roofs and smashed every stained glass window in sight.

Hardly a church in England escaped this devastation, and the scars are still visible today. Kilpeck somehow was overlooked.

Yet this tiny church is loaded with "images and superstitious things." They are its second miracle.

Six beautiful pop-eyed saints are carved on the pillars of an interior arch. The main doorway is a profusion of Celticstyle heads, mythological birds and beasts, plus the Garden of Eden and the fall of man.

What is more, the church's roof is supported on stone corbels carved with 74 different designs — "heads, human figures, beasts, birds, monsters, many of them highly grotesque," according to a slim descriptive pamphlet. The Victorians removed some corbels they considered indecent.

Only two are at all religious in subject — which is surprising, if not exactly miraculous, on a church building. Their artistic quality is very high.

"Whatever all these carvings are intended to represent," wrote the church's one-time vicar, C. Windsor Richards, "the carvers must have had a fine sense of humor and great fun, not to mention, for those days, amazing skill."

In most old churches visual jokes and "great fun" are carved under choir seats or tucked unobtrusively on high roofs. Kilpeck's are visible, low, and are the main form of outside decoration.

Three slim carved crocodiles' heads protrude from one outside wall. Crocodiles in England?

But then, according to F. C. Morgan, Kilpeck's carvings contain "motifs derived from Scandinavian metal work, Byzantine art (and) the decoration of Anglo-Saxon crosses."

Experts have found other surprises about Kilpeck. The sculpture door frame, for instance, is not structurally necessary, holds nothing up but "seems to be a mere decorative fantasy of the artist." Time and again the experts fall back on the word "unique."

One expert, Dr. George Zarnecki, convincingly traced the origin of Kilpeck's "unique" sculptures to a 12th century pilgrimage to Santiago de Compostela, Spain, by one Oliver de Merlimond.

Santiago and Romanesque churches in France have carvings similar to Kilpeck's, but "there is no English prototype for such decoration."

This, perhaps, is Kilpeck's final miracle — that Oliver de Merlimond, if indeed it was he, brought back such strong impressions of Romanesque Spain and France that it gave rise to a whole school of sculpture confined to the county of Hertfordshire.

Dr. Sheehan: Running's The Real Of Our Lives

By MARY ELLEN HASKETT

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (UPI) — Some people consider running an exhausting physical activity to be avoided at all costs. Others accept it as a necessary evil of physical fitness.

Dr. George Sheehan has a different approach.

"Running is real and actual," said Sheehan, a 59-year-old New Jersey cardiologist. "Life is what you spend between races."

Sheehan's book (Running and Being, Simon and Shuster, $8.95) examines the sport from a philosophical standpoint, describing the intellectual release and enjoyment he gains from running. Sheehan equates the experience with joining the body and soul—an act which "brings together work, play, love, and religion."

According to Sheehan, everyone should run at least an hour a day to "forget God, country and family. If it makes you sweat in the bargain, then you've really got it good.

"For me, running is play and a lot of other people are finding that it's play. I thought runners would be loners. But we meet and love each other. It's odd for runners to be demonstrative."

Sheehan, who traveled around the country promoting the book, said his main point is to promote play — enjoyment away from the regular routine of life. "It's not about how to run, but about why to play."

The only way a person can become physically fit is to find the play activity that suits him or her, he said.

"It becomes its own compulsion. After people run for awhile, hardly any of them are caring about physical fitness anymore."

Experts who say running can hurt a person's health, in Sheehan's view, usually sit in their offices all day and pontificate, while the "common man finds his own truth."

A Stanford University study showed 2,000 calories of strenuous activity — or about 20 miles of running — can protect people against heart disease, Sheehan said.

"Sweating is one of the most cleansing activites one can have both mentally and spiritually. It seems to absolve you of wrongdoing."

Sheehan said a person can provoke a heart attack doing anything for which the body is not prepared, whether it be running or shoveling snow. "You have to read your body to determine how much it can handle."

"Plutarch said we are blind and deaf tenants of our bodies. And the people who say an hour on the road will kill you ... well, it's the other 23 that are killing you."

Women, he believes, are better than men at reading their bodies because they have a change in their bodies once a month.

"Men don't look to their bodies as the cause of emotional and mental highs and lows as women have learned. It's people who attack fitness programs who get in trouble. They are attacking their bodies instead of reading them."

At age 59, Sheehan has found that running every day is too exhausting. So he runs 10 miles three times a week and races on weekends. He has competed in about 50 marathons since he started running some 15 years ago.

"I used to race all the time. I still carry my gear in my car in case I find a race somewhere."

Sheehan said marathons give people a chance to challenge themselves even more than the chance to compete. "It's the moral equivalent of war that William James said we should have."

He adheres to his running schedule no matter where he is. He has run in downtown Dallas, Atlanta, and other major cities. Pollution, he said, is not a deterrent.

"It's better to run in pollution that to sit on your butt in Vermont."

Cats Are Adaptable

NEW YORK (UPI) — There are an estimated 23 million cats owned in the United States.

Fifty percent of the cat owners also own a dog.

One of the reasons for the cat's rise in popularity is his adaptability to apartment living. He can live indoors with his kitty litter box and never needs to be taken out. Because he is a clean, quiet creature, a cat is often more acceptable to landlords.

The top pedigreed breeds are the Siamese and the Persian.

Bird Is Service Station Pet

CHARLESTOWN, W. Va. (AP) — Fill 'er up, check the oil. Is that a bird on your shoulder?

Indeed it is. A parakeet named Bird.

"I take him everywhere," says Elmer English, a service station owner, "to the bank, down to auto parts places, just everywhere I go. And he's never tried to fly away.

"People are always coming up to me and commenting about the bird, and at first I was self-conscious about it. But I like the little fellow and he likes to go with me, so I take him."

He said the bird was a Christmas gift from his employees

CORN FRITTERS

Cooks who tasted these at the Pennsylvania Dutch Folk Festival in Kutztown ask us to repeat the recipe.

1 and 1-3rd cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
1 egg
2-3rds cup milk
2-3rds cup canned creamstyle corn
1-3rd cup drained canned whole-kernel corn
1 quart (about) corn oil

Stir together the flour, baking powder, baking soda, salt and sugar. Beat the egg and milk enough to blend; stir in both kinds of corn; add to the flour mixture and stir only until the dry ingredients are moistened. Into a large iron skillet pour enough corn oil to have one third full; heat to 375 degrees. Drop mixture by heaping tablespoons, 3 or 4 at a time, into the hot oil. Fry, turning once, until brown — 3 to 4 minutes in all. Drain on brown paper. Add more oil to skillet as needed. Makes about 1½ dozen.

Housing Dept. Goals Remain Unreached

By DONALD LAMBRO

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Since the Department of Housing and Urban Development was established in 1965, it has spent nearly $66 billion in pursuit of the official national goal of decent housing for every American.

Today that goal remains unreached: millions of Americans still live in grossly substandard urban and rural housing.

Over the years, federal housing programs of HUD and other agencies have financed the construction of over a million housing units. Had the government simply spent HUD's $66 billion to purchase housing for the poor, it could have bought — at today's prices — 1.3 million new $50,000 single family homes.

HUD currently is spending $10 billion a year. A five-week examination by United Press International found that tens, perhaps hundreds of millions of dollars are being spent on activities that have done little to provide better housing or improved communities for the nation's disadvantaged.

The survey found that HUD has begun a $13 million public relations campaign to improve its' image and promote its programs among the interests which benefit from them.

Other findings:

— HUD is spending over $50 million a year on low-priority or unnecessary research which duplicates work already done or overlaps other agencies' work.

— A significant chunk of HUD money appears to be benefiting, not the poor, but the banks, private investors, consulting firms and university researchers.

— Overhead costs for community development grants, which the administration is increasing this year, in some instances are as high as 74 percent.

Although HUD already spends about $3 million a year on its public information activities, it has quietly begun work on a $13 million public relations campaign conceived by a Philadelphia consulting firm at a cost of $64,000.

The proposed "National Communication Program" would mount a massive public relations blitz at a time when the Carter administration is trying to curb public information programs.

The plan was drawn up after Systems Research, Inc. had interviewed 91 top HUD officials to solicit their views on the department's public image.

Transcripts were turned over to HUD information officials, but Warren Dunn and Bill Wise, the assistant information chiefs overseeing the project, said they read only "two or three" of the interviews.

Rather than wade through what HUD's own top officials said about their public image, Dunn said he hired a second consultant to read the interviews conducted by the firs consultant.

"Too often," the report summarized, "the perception is that ...the Department is fragmented, scandal-ridden, inefficient, and an agent of last resort whose clientele is on welfare."

The image-building campaign, which Dunn says has the full support of HUD Secretary Patricia Roberts Harris, includes a "nationwide urban promotion encouraging community and private industry support" for the administration's expanded Action Grant Program.

The plan further proposes a nationwide communication effort "to disseminate basic energy conservation information," and "promotion of greater public awareness of assisted housing developments which are successes."

The campaign would run the entire gamut of public relations techniques, including fairs, expositions, conferences, symposia, exhibits, a speakers bureau, as well as broader use of the news media.

Other activities would include surveys of consumer attitudes toward HUD, plus a series of interviews with "important HUD constituency groups" to measure their attitudes toward HUD programs.

The plan also calls for development of "a new system to identify, categorize and prioritize primary audiences for messages needed to communicate HUD programs and products."

Said one HUD official who is familiar with the program, "This has got to be one of the biggest boondoggles around here."

HUD was created during the Johnson administration to pull together a number of housing and community development programs that over many years had been scattered throughout the government by Congress.

One of HUD's chief goals was outlined in the National Housing Policy Act of 1949: "The elimination of substandard and other inadequate housing through the clearance of slums and blighted areas, and the realization as soon as feasible of the goal of a decent home and a suitable living environment for every American family."

Toward that end, HUD is spending $522.3 million a year in public housing operating subsidies, more than $368 million a year in rental subsidies for low and moderate income people, and $850 million in housing assistance for the elderly.

But like other newly-created departments formed to coordinate scattered but related government programs, HUD's overhead costs, along with other budget items, have grown along with its programs.

Salaries now total $268 million a year for a fulltime staff of 15,052 which is authorized to rise by a full 15 percent — to 17,400 — in fiscal 1979 beginning Oct. 1. At least 2,440 HUD employes currently earn more than $30,000 per year.

When rents, utilities, and other overhead are added to salaries, HUD's yearly operating and administrative costs total more than $530 million.

The department is growing so fast, in fact, that it has already filled up a relatively new 10story building which cost over over $26 million — with no room to spare.

Spending $10 billion a year isn't as easy as it may sound, even with 15,000 people to help. But HUD bureaucrats constantly are coming up with new ideas.

A case in point is a $4.8 million "Urban Observatory Program," launched by HUD to funnel research money to local universities for work on community problems.

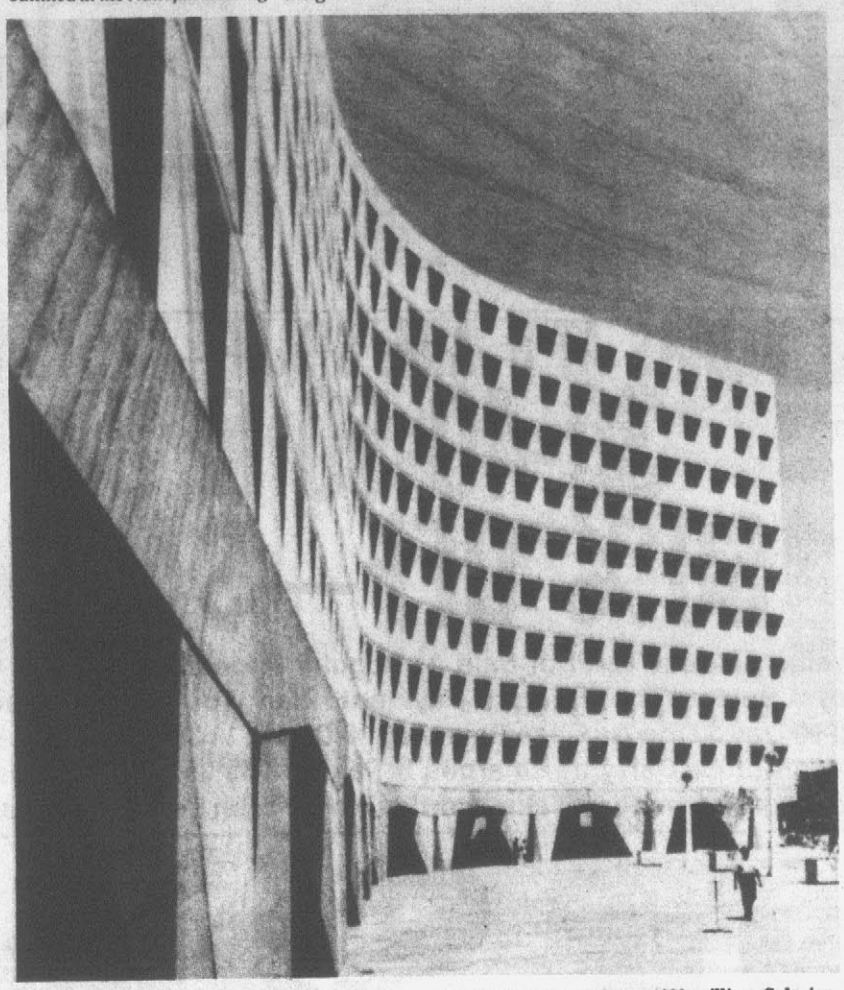

Much of the money was spent on public opinion surveys conducted by telephone to produce reports like "The Supply and Demand for Small Boats and Associated Services in Northeastern New Jersey." It said a survey of local marinas and boat manufacturers showed "a large demand exists for recreational boat facilities."

Other studies under this program overlapped responsibilities given to the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, and the Interior and Labor Departments, among others.

Many of the studies undertaken by HUD are referred to privately as "turkeys" by some of HUD's own employes. They say a significant proportion of the contracts let by HUD are either "misdirected or unnecessary".

One of them, for $184,000, was to study the feasibility of undertaking "post occupancy evaluations" of HUD-financed housing projects.

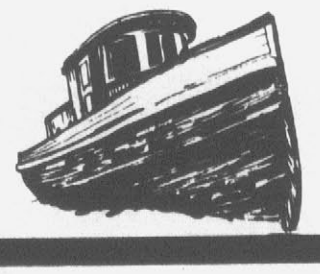

The final report numbered 466 pages, almost 200 pages of which were nothing more than a list of persons and organizations with expertise in related fields. Two on the list were dead; others were listed with no address.

FAST-GROWING DEPARTMENT — The Department of Housing and Urban Development, established in 1965, is growing so fast that it has already filled up this 10-story building which cost over $26 million. Salaries now total $268 million a year for a fulltime staff of 15,052. (UPI Telephoto)

Dollar Dip Hardship For GIs Abroad

BY WELLINGTON LONG

KAISERSLAUTERN, West Germany (UPI) — "You're not putting much trash out this week," the worried German landlady observed to her American GI tenant and his wife — as the U.S. dollar's foreign purchasing power sagged yet again.

Trying to help, she baked a cake for the young couple and let them have a bucket of cherries from the tree in her garden.

But the GI and his wife living in Germany need more than an occasional cake and bucket of cherries when a load of washing at the local laundromat costs more than a dollar — about three times what it would cost back home. In this high-cost energy country, their monthly household electricity bill is $45, their household gas another $30 per month and regular gasoline, if they can afford an old car, costs 66 cents per gallon and is about to go up again.

Some soldiers say frankly they are able to serve in what President Carter, during his July visit to the U.S. Army in Europe, proudly called "the point of the western sword," only because their parents send an occasional check.

An increasing number of others just pile up debts they will be able to pay off only after they end their foreign tour and return home.

The number of U.S. soldiers in Europe taking Army Emergency Relief loans during the first six months of this year was 13.9 percent greater than during the corresponding period of 1977.

The amount of AER loans and grants rose by 30.7 percent to a total of $647,151, the Department of the Army reported.

No one knows how many charge account debts back in the United States are being left unserviced for the duration of the soldier's tour in Germany. But that number is growing, too.

With 50,000 American soldiers and dependents, the Kaiserslautern military community encompassing both air and army bases is the largest American community outside the United States.

A growing number of its lowest ranking residents are living below the poverty level.

Furthermore, an increasing number of soldiers in the new, all-volunteer army are married and have at least one child here with them.

But the married recruit sent abroad to join the force of about 190,000 American soldiers permanently on station in Europe starts at a disadvantage. Because he has served for less than two years, the army won't pay transportation costs for his wife and children, so he usually begins his post-basic training military career by borrowing money to fly his family to join him in Germany.

The army has official quarters for only about one-half of the military families here, so the newcomer has to rent an apartment from a civilian German landlord — "on the economy" as the GIs say.

Those rents are high and, with the dollar's exchange value in Germany having dropped about 15 percent in the last year, get higher all of the time.

Sp4 Michael Semonin and his wife Janet typically pay 590 marks per month rent and utilities for a small apartment in Bad Kreuznach. A year ago they could buy the 590 marks for about $287. Today, the 590 marks cost them $300.

The dollar continues to slide despite all efforts to stop it.

Carter came to Germany in July not only to visit the Army but to participate in a conference of the leaders of the world's largest industrial democracies on measures to stabilize currency exchange rates.

In the four weeks after he returned to Washington, the value of the dollar in terms of German marks fell four percent.

"It is scary, considering what might happen," said a corporal sitting with other worried buddies in Kaiserslautern.

Life styles change rapidly and radically.

An American private's wife says she always leaves her electric blanket turned on back home in the U.S. and wraps it around herself because she always feels chilly. She did that during her first month in Germany and then discovered the cost of electricity here. She now turns it off the instant she crawls out of bed.

For the first time in her life, she confides, she also turns off all lights as she leaves a room.

Senior sergeants who used to take their wives to a restaurant every two weeks now limit such forays to every six weeks.

The army tried to help by opening its mess halls to soldier families three months ago, as the Air Force has for years. But mess officers of the 8th Infantry Division in the Palatinate and of the 1st Armored Division in Bavaria report families making "only light use" of the mess halls, usually because they live so far away it is cheaper to eat at home.

Perhaps as many as 16,000 low-ranking GIs in Germany now are below the poverty level and, if they were in the U.S., would qualify for food stamps.

But the army has been unable to convince the Department of Welfare to let it or anyone else act as an agent for a program to issue food stamps to soldiers in Germany who could redeem them in army commissaries.

Similarly, schools operated by the army for soldier dependents provide neither free nor subsidized lunches, although these would be available at home. "There is no mechanism" for a lunch program, an officer explains.

"These are only some of the gaps and disconnects facing a GI when he leaves the United States," says Lt. Col. Jacob Rome, an army Human Resources officer in Kaiserslautern.

The declining dollar also brings discomfort to older married soldiers who qualify for official housing on an army base, and to unmarried soldiers in barracks.

The Army and Air Force calculated their budgets for Germany for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1978, at an exchange rate of $1 for 2.40 marks. It is now less than two marks.

This means the Air Force in Germany had a shortfall of $51 million by Aug. 1, while the Army had a shortfall of about $132 million.

As military operations are maintained at an unreduced schedule, money is saved on housekeeping. Barracks and apartment repair programs have been scaled down, recreational facilities have reduced their opening hours.

One anticipated result is a reduced number of reenlistments.

Soldier after soldier interviewed around Germany said he or she would not reenlist after the experience here. "I will reenlist," said one soldier in Kaiserslautern, "but only on condition that they never again send me overseas."

Television Increased

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Koreans had 3.8 million registered television sets at the end of 1977, or one for every 1.8 households, according to a government survey.

This is an increase of 35 percent over the previous year. It was attributed to higher incomes and larger domestic production of television sets. There are 13 television stations in South Korea, which is slightly larger than Indiana.

Gives Plug To Tenn.

By EDGAR MILLER
Associated Press Writer

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Chattanooga?

The Brazilian gave his American friend a blank look then brightened.

"Oh, yes, the choo choo," he said.

Wherever you go, people have heard of the Chattanooga Choo Choo, immortalized in song by the late Glenn Miller and his swing band. For CB radio fans throughout the country Chattanooga's handle is Choo Choo City.

A few years ago a group of Chattanooga businessmen invested $10 million to capitalize on the famous name.

B. Allen Casey, chairman of the Chattanooga Choo Choo Co., said he got the idea from a visiting Russian who said he wanted to see the Chattanooga Choo Choo.

Casey and his fellow investors purchased the Southern Railroad passenger terminal which had been closed in 1970 when passenger service ended.

They restored the station, put a 1,600-seat restaurant in the concourse, turned the track area into gardens with splashing fountains, sculptures and gas lights and bought an 1880 Baldwin locomotive — a replica of the original Chattanooga Choo Choo.

With the engine are 48 old Pullman cars whose plush interiors would make yesteryear's railroad barons envious. Tourists spend the night in them for $48. There is also the Choo Choo Hilton Hotel.

According to Casey, a reporter in Cincinnati coined the name Chattanooga Choo Choo in 1880 when passenger service began between the two cities on the old Cincinnati Southern Railroad.

The name got its fame in 1941 when Tin Pan Alley composer Harry Warren and lyricist Mack Gordon wrote the song for Glenn Miller for use in the movie, "Sun Valley Serenade."

Warren, now 83 and living in Beverly Hills, Calif., recalled in a telephone interivew that Miller wanted a song about a train, not the city. He said Gordon came up with the words which seemed to fit the melody Warren composed.

Warren, though an honorary citizen of Chattanooga, has never been to the southeast Tennessee town.

The song was nominated for an Academy Award in 1941 but wasn't selected. Other well known Warren melodies are "You'll Never Know," "Lullaby of Broadway," "Shuffle Off to Buffalo," "On the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe," "You, Wonderful You," and "I Found a Million Dollar Baby in the 5 and 10 Cent Store."

Warren said he isn't writing much music any more. "Things are different today," he said. "The kids don't want the same kind of music. Now it's rock."

And, indeed, it is. "Chattanooga Choo Choo" has returned to popularity in a rock version currently high on the charts by a group called Tuxedo Junction.

Superflies Can Help

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Some people call them the "superflies" — giant bugs that like people a whole lot more than people like them.

But entomologists say the nasty reputation given to Blepharipa pratensis and Parasetigena silverstris, commonly called superflies, is undeserved.

They neither bite nor sting. In fact, experts say they are the only parasite that has caused a collapse in the state's gypsy moth population, which has stripped leaves from more than a million acres of Pennsylvania's forests.

"They're a large, friendly fly," said Robert Fusco, biological control supervisor for the state Department of Environmental Resources in Harrisburg.

At maturity, superflies are more than a a half-inch long — larger than the pesky house fly.

They're most common in June and July, when billions of eggs hatch following the mating season. But most people notice them in the spring.

"In the spring, the gypsy moth isn't breeding in large numbers yet, so they (the superflies) spend a lot of time around the human population," said Fusco.

Dollar Dip Hardship For GIs Abroad

Life styles change rapidly and radically.

An American private's wife says she always leaves her electric blanket turned on back home in the U.S. and wraps it around herself because she always feels chilly. She did that during her first month in Germany and then discovered the cost of electricity here. She now turns it off the instant she crawls out of bed.

For the first time in her life, she confides, she also turns off all lights as she leaves a room.

Senior sergeants who used to take their wives to a restaurant every two weeks now limit such forays to every six weeks.

The army tried to help by opening its mess halls to soldier families three months ago, as the Air Force has for years. But mess officers of the 8th Infantry Division in the Palatinate and of the 1st Armored Division in Bavaria report families making "only light use" of the mess halls, usually because they live so far away it is cheaper to eat at home.

Perhaps as many as 16,000 low-ranking GIs in Germany now are below the poverty level and, if they were in the U.S., would qualify for food stamps.

But the army has been unable to convince the Department of Welfare to let it or anyone else act as an agent for a program to issue food stamps to soldiers in Germany who could redeem them in army commissaries.

Similarly, schools operated by the army for soldier dependents provide neither free nor subsidized lunches, although these would be available at home. "There is no mechanism" for a lunch program, an officer explains.

"These are only some of the gaps and disconnects facing a GI when he leaves the United States," says Lt. Col. Jacob Rome, an army Human Resources officer in Kaiserslautern.

The declining dollar also brings discomfort to older married soldiers who qualify for official housing on an army base, and to unmarried soldiers in barracks.

The Army and Air Force calculated their budgets for Germany for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1978, at an exchange rate of $1 for 2.40 marks. It is now less than two marks.

This means the Air Force in Germany had a shortfall of $51 million by Aug. 1, while the Army had a shortfall of about $132 million.

As military operations are maintained at an unreduced schedule, money is saved on housekeeping. Barracks and apartment repair programs have been scaled down, recreational facilities have reduced their opening hours.

One anticipated result is a reduced number of reenlistments.

Soldier after soldier interviewed around Germany said he or she would not reenlist after the experience here. "I will reenlist," said one soldier in Kaiserslautern, "but only on condition that they never again send me overseas."

Television Increased

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Koreans had 3.8 million registered television sets at the end of 1977, or one for every 1.8 households, according to a government survey.

This is an increase of 35 percent over the previous year. It was attributed to higher incomes and larger domestic production of television sets. There are 13 television stations in South Korea, which is slightly larger than Indiana.

Gives Plug To Tenn.

By EDGAR MILLER
Associated Press Writer

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Chattanooga?

The Brazilian gave his American friend a blank look then brightened.

"Oh, yes, the choo choo," he said.

Wherever you go, people have heard of the Chattanooga Choo Choo, immortalized in song by the late Glenn Miller and his swing band. For CB radio fans throughout the country Chattanooga's handle is Choo Choo City.

A few years ago a group of Chattanooga businessmen invested $10 million to capitalize on the famous name.

B. Allen Casey, chairman of the Chattanooga Choo Choo Co., said he got the idea from a visiting Russian who said he wanted to see the Chattanooga Choo Choo.

Casey and his fellow investors purchased the Southern Railroad passenger terminal which had been closed in 1970 when passenger service ended.

They restored the station, put a 1,600-seat restaurant in the concourse, turned the track area into gardens with splashing fountains, sculptures and gas lights and bought an 1880 Baldwin locomotive — a replica of the original Chattanooga Choo Choo.

With the engine are 48 old Pullman cars whose plush interiors would make yesteryear's railroad barons envious. Tourists spend the night in them for $48. There is also the Choo Choo Hilton Hotel.

According to Casey, a reporter in Cincinnati coined the name Chattanooga Choo Choo in 1880 when passenger service began between the two cities on the old Cincinnati Southern Railroad.

The name got its fame in 1941 when Tin Pan Alley composer Harry Warren and lyricist Mack Gordon wrote the song for Glenn Miller for use in the movie, "Sun Valley Serenade."

Warren, now 83 and living in Beverly Hills, Calif., recalled in a telephone interivew that Miller wanted a song about a train, not the city. He said Gordon came up with the words which seemed to fit the melody Warren composed.

Warren, though an honorary citizen of Chattanooga, has never been to the southeast Tennessee town.

The song was nominated for an Academy Award in 1941 but wasn't selected. Other well known Warren melodies are "You'll Never Know," "Lullaby of Broadway," "Shuffle Off to Buffalo," "On the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe," "You, Wonderful You," and "I Found a Million Dollar Baby in the 5 and 10 Cent Store."

Warren said he isn't writing much music any more. "Things are different today," he said. "The kids don't want the same kind of music. Now it's rock."

And, indeed, it is. "Chattanooga Choo Choo" has returned to popularity in a rock version currently high on the charts by a group called Tuxedo Junction.

Superflies Can Help

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Some people call them the "superflies" — giant bugs that like people a whole lot more than people like them.

But entomologists say the nasty reputation given to Blepharipa pratensis and Parasetigena silverstris, commonly called superflies, is undeserved.

They neither bite nor sting. In fact, experts say they are the only parasite that has caused a collapse in the state's gypsy moth population, which has stripped leaves from more than a million acres of Pennsylvania's forests.

"They're a large, friendly fly," said Robert Fusco, biological control supervisor for the state Department of Environmental Resources in Harrisburg.

At maturity, superflies are more than a a half-inch long — larger than the pesky house fly.

They're most common in June and July, when billions of eggs hatch following the mating season. But most people notice them in the spring.

"In the spring, the gypsy moth isn't breeding in large numbers yet, so they (the superflies) spend a lot of time around the human population," said Fusco.

University Master At Grantsmanship

By MARY KOCH
Associated Press Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — The University of Washington may be a continent away from elite Ivy League institutions like Harvard, Yale and Princeton. But when it comes to drawing federal research dollars it has left those schools — and most others — far behind.

Each year as the nation's colleges and universities line up for $7 billion in federal grants, one of the biggest fistfuls goes to UW, much of it for medical and marine science research. The university has ranked among the top five recipients since 1968 and once led the pack for two years running.

In its most recent report, covering the fiscal year 1976, the National Science Foundation put Washington's share at $102.6 million putting it in third place behind Howard University and Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Not everyone on the Washington campus is enchanted by the steady influx of federal cash.

"It seems to me that the university must stop expanding, says Prof Edwin Hewitt, former chairman of the faculty senate. "Undoubtedly a great deal (of the research) is useful for the betterment of human kind, but we cannot do it all here."

Hewitt says the school's 37,765 students are suffering from an over-emphasis on research and under-emphasis on classroom teaching.

University administrators disagree. Dr. Ronald Geballe, dean of the Graduate School and vice provost for research says that without the federal money, research "would essentially disappear and the medical school would vanish."

He said that in 1954, "three years prior to Sputnik, the university's research grants amounted to only $3.3 million dollars, representing 18 percent of the school's operating budget. Now federal grants and contracts account for 33 percent."

Washington State is represented in Congress by two unusually influential senators, Henry Jackson and Warren Magnuson, both Democrats. But school officials say there's no relationship between that and UW's success in attracting grants.

Magnuson, an alumnus and, as chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee one of the government's most powerful budgeters, concurs.

Administrators insist that an excellent faculty and research in areas no one else is touching have drawn federal money, not the elusive art of grantsmanship.

Some recent activity has included:

—Studies of the arctic and Gulf of Alaska to determine the effects of oil exploration and shipment. The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration has paid more than a half-million dollars for this project, which began in 1975.

A preschool for precocious children, in operation on the campus since 1911. The Office of Education contributed $123,000 in 1976 to see what makes gifted tots tick.

—Five years of research, costing $1.9 million, into the lung disease that afflicts 100,000 premature infants each year. The National Institute of Heart and Lung Disease is picking up the tab.

—Development of a laser surgical scalpel to minimize bleeding, particularly helpful in the treatment of burn patients.

—Continuing support of three ocean-going vessels, including a 208-foot ship staffed by a crew of 22 plus a scientific party of 19. The National Science Foundation handed over $1.6 million this year for this segment of the university's marine research program.

The big health sciences center pulls in half the federal money, mostly from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Although health sciences account for only 19 percent of the total enrollment, they receive about 29 percent of the instructional budget.

UW physicians pioneered in developing bone marrow transplants for treatment of leukemia, open heart surgery and the artifical kidney.

Other departments favored by the federal government are oceanography, physics, forest resources and fisheries. "The university is to fisheries what MIT is to science," boasts Magnuson.

In all, the university received 1,741 awards in 1977, ranging from $100 to more than $1 million. But at that, the batting average is just about .500 because applications and proposals totaled 2,841.

All this federal largesse doesn't come without certain costs.

The university, for example, puts up with diligent federal auditors. And accounting for the research money brings inevitable headaches because, Gabelle says, "the government tends to approach research as a procurement process in the same way that the Army will buy shoes."

Moreover, the government has a way of reminding its beneficiaries that what it gives, it can take away. In 1973, for example, it threatened to cancel federal contracts the University of Washington failed to shape up its affirmative action program.

Comics No Easy Thing

By TOM McCORD
Associated Press Writer

MURFREESBORO, Tenn. (AP) — The Spiderman cometh, slowly. So does the magic of Dr. Strange the sorcerer, and the beauty of Isis, the reincarnated Egyptian princess.

All are comic book characters from the pen of Mike Vosburg, 30, a Michigan artist who spent the summer in this middle-Tennessee city. He painstakingly sketches the illustrations on 10-by-15-inch sheets, guided by brief plot outlines from his publisher. It takes about a day per four-frame page.

"You have to remember that your audience is kids," Vosburg said in a telephone interview. No matter what appeal comic books have for teenagers and adults, he said, the stories must make sense to children. Vosburg said "everything is tied to an economic string" in the comic book business and children are still the biggest buyers.

So, whether the plot is good versus evil, as with Spiderman, or speculative, as with Star Fire, a science fiction series Vosburg drew a few years ago, it must be simple.

Vosburg began cartooning as a kid in Pontiac, Mich. He doodled some of his favorite cartoon characters — "the comic-book amateur thing," he called it. He and some friends began taking more pains, drawing pictures, putting them on spirit duplicators and circulating them.

TUDOR STYLING BENEFITS DUPLEX DESIGN

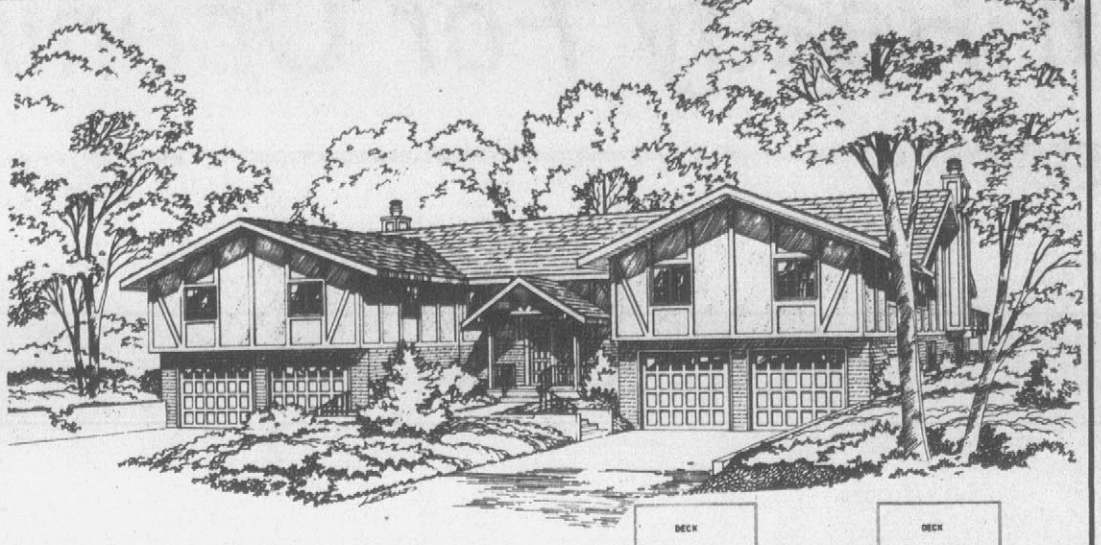

By Jerry Bishop

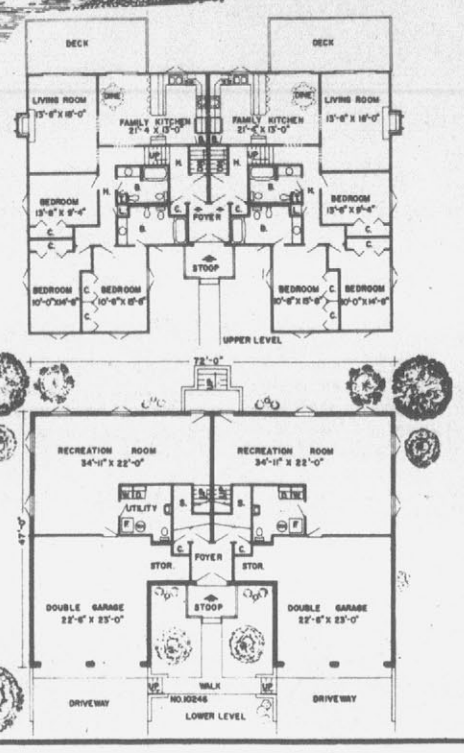

Small-paned windows, stucco, and half timbers fashion a charming facade for the Parkchester, a two family design. With over 2400 sq. ft. of living space and three bedrooms, each of the two units can accommodate the activities of an active family.

Despite the deceptively traditional exterior, the Parkchester offers a contemporary, even innovative, floor plan. Double entry doors lead into a shared foyer, but the sharing ends there. Hallways and cabinets act as buffers that minimize noise and protect privacy.

From the foyer, entry into each unit is a spacious hallway with coat closet and immediate access to the lower level. On that level, a 34-ft. recreation room with plenty of natural light and an outside entry provides a play room for small children, a party room for teenagers, or unlimited possibilities for bedrooms or storage. Completing the lower level is a double garage and convenient utility/laundry/half bath.

On the main level, a sizable family kitchen, complete with snack bar, broom closet, and dining area suggests informality, while the bordering living room promises quiet relaxation in front of the wood-burning fireplace. Both rooms merit sliding glass doors to a spacious deck.

DOUBLE HOME OFFERS FIREPLACE, FAMILY KITCHEN

Bedrooms are clustered to the front of the plan and provide three well-closeted bedrooms. The master bedroom, comfortably large, is favored with a private bath, and a second full bath is set close to the remaining bedrooms and living room. A linen closet and towel closet are shown.

Each of the units calls for a full-sized double garage with front entry and storage.

If you want to sell your house, you have to make it look the way it does 10 minutes before company is scheduled to arrive.

The trouble is that it has to look that way morning, noon and night. One of the things you learn when you put up your house for sale is that anybody is likely to want to see it at almost any time. It takes an unusual person indeed to suggest that "it won't be convenient right now; can you make it tomorrow?"

That's one area where a realestate broker can save you some headaches. You can let him know which times of the day are on the no-no list. He or she not only will keep everyone away at those times, but will do his or her best to see that only serious prospects are brought to the house. However, having too many periods when people can't view the house can work against you, since there is always the possibility that a prospective purchaser won't be able to arrange an appointment during your "at home" times.

No matter what method you use in an attempt to sell your house, there are certain things that can interfere in one way or another with the sale. Here are some do-nots to keep in mind:

DON'T jampack the closets with clothes or toys or junk. This always gives the impression that the house doesn't have sufficient storage space. It's better to put the excess into cartons or other boxes while the house is up for sale.

DON'T keep interrupting the real estate broker. Be sure ahead of time that he or she knows the house layout sufficiently to discuss it intelligently. But be where you can be asked questions if required.

DON'T forget to see that the home is well lighted. This is especially important with stairways and normally dark areas.

DON'T overlook the decorating theory that rooms crammed with furniture always appear smaller. Put unused pieces in the attic or basement, explaining if necessary that they are to be sold or disposed of when you move.

DON'T permit it to be too hot or too cold in the house.

DON'T neglect to have old bills on hand so that you can confirm statements about heating and cooling costs, taxes, etc.

DON'T postpone cooking chores because some persons are due to look at the house shortly. First, they may not be on time. And secondly, you want your place to look — and smell — like a home not a museum.

DON'T have the outside of your house looking like a junkyard. Some people are turned off a possible purchase before they even get inside the structure.

Questions And Answers

Q: How do you root a coconut?

A: Lay it on damp sand. Keep the sand damp and wait.

Q: Do hybrid lilies need to be dug up and separated periodically?

A: No. Hybrid lilies are a type of bulbless plant that will last indefinitely in the same spot.

Q: Can newspaper be used to mulch hilled potatoes?

A: I wouldn't do that because it offers a marvelous haven for slugs. Hill them with soil and that will keep them from turning green, which is the purpose of hilling.

Q: My blackberry bushes are taking over everything. How can I control them?

A: Take a scythe and cut a path through. Once you've done that, mow it occasionally to keep the path.

Q: How can I keep my plum trees disease free?

A: All fruit trees should have a regular spray program. Follow a disease chart found in any good gardening book. If you don't spray fruit trees, no matter what kind, the fruit will have holes.

Q: How are tomatoes grown in bags as they do in England?

A: Those specially manufactured growing bags are filled with a very specific type of peat moss that has been stabilized with fertilizers. It's not uncommon to get as much as 60 pounds of tomatoes from one bag.

Q: Should the leaves of tulips be dried before digging up the bulbs?

A: They certainly should. The tulip plants should be left in the ground where the sunshine is acting on the leaves of the plants to rebuild strong bulbs for next year. So don't dig them up until the leaves have dried up.

Q: What kind of bushes or shrubs should I plant to attract birds?

A: Mulberry trees have berries that birds, especially robins, will do almost anything to get. Hawthorn and barberry make winter feed for birds. Your garden center can give you a list of specific plants that make winter feed.

Q: How can I prevent scale on potatoes?

A: The problem is called scab, because it looks like a scab from a cut. It is caused by soil that has lime added to it. Potatoes will come out smooth if you make sure your soil is acid.

Million Dollar Dream Houses Still Available

By LILLIAN O'CONNELL
UPI Life-Style Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Capitalism is alive and well and living, sumptuously, at Sotheby Parke Bernet, world famous auction gallery.

So says Clark P. Halstead, Jr., and he should know. He is vice president in charge of Sotheby's new International Realty Corporation New York regional office and his job is peddling million dollar properties, give or take a few bucks.

Among the listings at this writing:

"Tirranna" (which means "running water" in Australian Aborigine), a Frank Lloyd Wright gem set in a 13-acre botanical park in New Canaan, Conn. Asking price $1.5 million, which includes some original Frank Lloyd Wright furniture.

A Palisades contemporary palace in Alpine, N.J., complete with indoor swimming pool of impression proportions. Cheap at $2.5 million.

Or, if you're more a traditionalist, you can have the Olson House in Cushing, Me., made famous by painter Andrew Wyeth. Price? On request.

It's not hard to find sellers, Halstead said. They come a dime a dozen, particularly now that inflation is so bad. But Edward Lee Cave, the firm's realty chairman, is highly selective in the choice of houses and retreats which the company will handle. Sotheby will not list white elephants. "Our public chooses from a galaxy of little worlds, islands in style of living if not actually so by geography," he said.

Finding buyers is something else, but if anyone can do it Sotheby can. They are the folks who in the 1977-78 auction season had sales in North America over the $100 million mark.

And many of the same people who buy all those paintings, works of art and antiques are also in the market for million dollar homes, Halstead said.

So if you're looking for just the right place to store a little of the loot from the "sale of the century" (the $34 million auction of the Robert von Hirsch art collection in London), how about a Medieval-style chateau on exclusive Fishers Island off Connecticut; Mrs. Averell Harriman's hill top retreat in Westchester County, just 45 minutes from Manhattan; or, if you prefer to build your own dream house, perhaps the largest undeveloped land parcel close to Manhattan — the 300-acre "Rio Vista" estate on New Jersey's Palisades — one-third the size of Central Park and available for only $10 million.

No? A Civil War battlefield in Louisiana? Shangri-La, a hunting lodge near Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, where Craig Claiborne once cooked wild boar? Twentyeight hundred acres of timber at the southern tip of the Blue Ridge Mountains in North Georgia?....

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — A few years ago, someone asked you whether roof gutters are necessary on a house. I didn't pay too much attention to it at the time, but now find myself in a position where I want to get some advice on the same subject. We are moving into a new house soon. It has wide overhangs and the builder says that roof gutters are not necessary. Is he right?

A. — There is no way to answer you specifically, but a general answer may enable you to find your own solution. The purpose of gutters is to carry rain from the roof to the ground. If not for them, the water would slide down the outside walls of the house, in which case the water would seek out the slightest openings and get behind the walls. The gutters carry the rain to downspouts, which ideally should have some method of moving the water away from the house, even it is only via splash blocks. Now, when there are wide overhangs on a house, the water does not go down the exterior walls and does hit the ground a bit away from the foundation. All well and good, if the drainage is excellent, whether by natural means or via drainage tiles around the bottom of the house. But very often, the drainage isn't good, especially when there are no drainage tiles. What should you do? If you can get gutters and downspouts under your original agreement with the builder, get them. If not, you may still be all right, since some houses do well without them. But keep a close eye on the situation every time there is a heavy rain to see whether the gutters may be necessary.

Q. — The ceiling in our family room is flaking and peeling. It was painted with latex paint a few years ago and before that with regular oil paint. We now would like to put up ceiling tiles, the kind that are attached with an adhesive. Will they hold to the ceiling, which is made of plaster?

A. — It would not be a good idea to try this. It might hold, but the odds are that, after a period of time, the loosening paint would take the adhesive and tiles with it as it pulled away from the ceiling. You have a choice of one of three methods if you are determined to use ceiling tiles. You can install a dropped ceiling, using the metal framework available for the placement of large panels of material similar to that of the tiles. Or you can remove all the old paint and then attach tiles with adhesive. Or you can attach furring strips to the ceiling, being sure they are nailed into place through the plaster into wood, and use tongue-and-groove tiles held in place with staples or nails. The first method is the most expensive but will give the classiest result. The second is the most work and the messiest. The third probably is the cheapest, but requires careful attention to details.

Weeders Guide: Test Facility

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

The 110 acres of Ohio farmland are sprinkled with beds where grass, vegetables and others plants are being tested.

There is a huge fertilizer plant, a seed-packing building, a tidy research center and underground watering systems.

Making the whole project go are knowledgeable people working to produce more sturdy grasses, better plant foods, and most of all, to lure you to be a gardener and make the chores easier.

The scene is the vast operation of Scott's, the Lawn People, at Marysville, Ohio, where the thick turf and the helpful staff made our visit informative and pleasant.

O.M. Scott was a farmer before the Civil War. Three years after the fighting ended he began selling seeds cleaned of weeds to his neighbors. In the early 1900s, a Long Island golf course order for seed changed the course of the Scott company.

Now it employs 1,350 workers, one in 10 of whom works in research to develop and improve products. There are five other scattered test areas to provide regional conditions — at Gervais, Ore.; Somis, Calif.; Cleveland, Texas; Apopka, Fla.; and Accokeek, Md.

This widespread operation is designed to provide for all regions of the country, including transition belts, to test home lawns, turf builders, various formulas of plant nutrients, and insect control.

"Our objective is a superior product," says researcher Ashton Ritchie.

Scott's has a one-hole golf course for testing, by putters and swingers, planted with Victa Bluegrass. It also has outside its office building a lawn flourishing on a concrete base. The Windsor Bluegrass, which may be lifted at one corner for the benefit of visitors to display the 1½-inch sod, was planted 12 years ago. It is watered daily — more often if the weather is hot and dry, and it is fed the same as other test plots where dozens of grasses are growing under good and adverse conditions.

Pesticides are tested for 3-5 years and must get state and federal registration. Fungicide tests are conducted in moisture control plots covered from rain.

Variations in fertilizer ingredients — nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium — brought lawn patches of varying shades of green and turf thicknesses; insecticides and fungicides bring varying susceptibility to insect ravages.

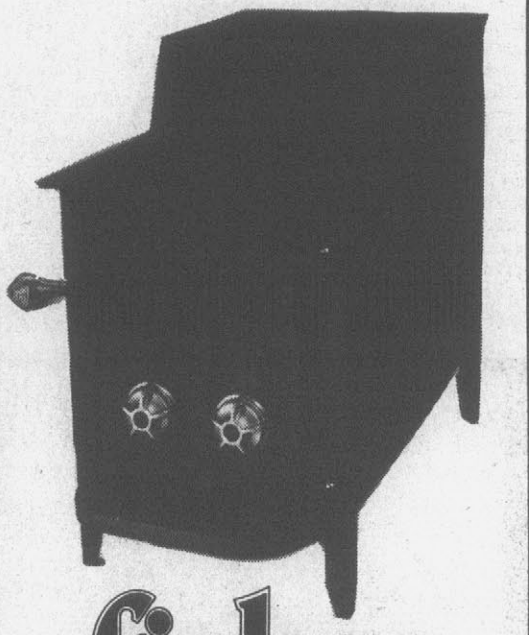

Joe Bell and Paul Jacquamin explained that a dark bluegreen color could mean a phosphorus deficiency. They said Bentgrasses were more susceptible than Bluegrasses to dollar spot and brown areas.

Leon Jaworski Defends Profession

By JAMES L. OVERTON

HOUSTON (UPI) — Accustomed to prosecuting and defending the indefensible during his half century at the bar, Leon Jaworski now finds himself defending his own profession.

No one is more aware the current attack on the legal profession than the man who has become, to many, the conscience of the constitution, the policeman of political morality.

Courtly and grandfatherly, he is more than a lawyer's lawyer. He is a superlawyer, a partner in one of the premiere Southwestern law firms where power and money are equations of the success formula.

After President Carter fired his salvo at the profession, Jaworski once again rose to the occasion.

"Some of us have voiced complaints about areas of retrogression of the bar as a profession," he conceded in a Law Day speech. "We see dangers of its nobility as a profession eroding. Some of us are concerned that there are signs of a transformation from a profession to just another commercial enterprise."

Later in an exclusive interview with UPI, Jaworski examined on a point-by-point basis charges by Carter that "we are over-lawyered and under represented."

Admitting there were areas needing work, Jaworski said that in most of his allegations, Carter was uninformed; that his remarks were ill-conceived and wronged the profession.

Worse, Jaworski said Carter adopted the words of an antilawyer speech writer and espoused them as his own.

"He's throwing the book at the legal profession and making statements that I don't think can be supported. This is not to say there are no members of the legal profession who have done wrong. I know of any number of instances. But to condemn the entire profession with a broad brush is not only insupportable, but also is a grave mistake on the part of any man who is supposed to lead this country."

Carter accused lawyers of invoking delay as a means of gaining ultimate victory in litigation.

"In the first place, there is a delay in some legal proceedings that is beyond the control of some lawyers in our present system of justice. It has its shortcomings but I still think it's the greatest system that is in the world and I'm familiar with all the systems, I think.

"There is no system in my judgment that ever will be devised that will not have some flaws and some shortcomings, as far as delays are concerned.

"There have been efforts made to cut down on delays. To attribute the present condition to lawyers and lawyers alone is a fallacy. If Congress, so long as federal laws are concerned, wanted to do so or if the judiciary wanted to have rules that expedited matters beyond what is the case now, it could still do it in the system within our constitution.

"As far as a lawyer's taking advantage, for example in the representation of a defendant in a criminal case, taking advantage of whatever rules are available to obtain delays, I don't blame them for that. I don't know any reason why a lawyer representing one charged with a crime needs to cooperate to bring the case up to a quick trial. That's not a part of his function.

"I think the blame, to put it in focus, is not being properly placed. I would say that certainly the legal profession holds a duty to try to help expedite wherever it appropriately can, but I would say there are ways and means available to President Carter. Why doesn't he send a message to Congress in which he points out specifically, in which (way) these delays can be avoided."

Carter said plea bargaining served the end of lawyers and judges, not justice.

Jaworski disagreed.

"Plea bargaining, to me, is one of the greatest vehicles that can be had in the system of justice, provided (and this needs to be underscored) that it is fairly used.

"I can tell you we would never have had the answer to Watergate, if it had not been for perfectly fair and proper plea bargaining. And yet, in every single instance, I did not give anybody immunity. I didn't give them a walk.

Then Jaworski, sitting in shirtsleeves in a straightback chair away from the desk end of his crisp and bright corner office, leaned toward the reporter, his voice in a crescendo.

"They had to plead guilty to a felony before I accepted their pleas. And the rest of the counts were dismissed. They wouldn' have gotten any more anyway because usually the court lets the sentences run concurrently.

"They had to tell the truth. If they didn't, they were subject to perjury."

"So what happened: I got the testimony of key figures, including the president's own personal counsel, Herbert Kalmbach. Of course, the White House got terribly nervous over that. The people who knew what the facts were were beginning to fold one after another. We were getting the story of Watergate as a consequence.

"Everyone of these people who turned government's evidence, so to speak, has gone to the penitentiary, has been imprisoned. What more can you ask? So what's wrong with it?

"Should one have gone ahead and tried them anyway, when they were willing to plead guilty to a felony?" Jaworski asked. "The sentences amounted to the same in the end."

President Carter said too often the amount of justice a person gets depends on the amount of money that he or she can pay.

Jaworski agreed that is a problem, not so much for indigents who have court-appointed counsel available to them, but to the average income-earning citizen with a family.

"I'm talking about the white collar worker who has a fixed income, especially in these days of inflation, and he has a cause of action, yet he doesn't have the money to hire a lawyer," Jaworski said. "As much as we have grappled with the problem, we haven't found a solution to it.

"What do you do under our system with a man who has income of say $10,000 or $15,000 a year, a family to support, has a cause of action, cannot qualify for indigent services, goes to a lawyer and cannot pay the lawyer fees.

"This is a very serious problem. And yet a lawyer cannot take a number of those cases without finding himself in deep trouble for all the expenses he has."

Jaworski said the American Bar Association, of which he served as president in 1971-72, has given more attention to that "than any problem plaguing us."

He said legal insurance may offer a solution but has not been properly tested.

Of concern to Jaworski and others is the proliferation of lawsuits as a means of solving problems or getting satisfaction.

Jaworski noted a lawsuit can be filed upon declaration of a pauper's oath or for about $20.

"Suppose the filing of a suit should require a $500 bond. What are you going to do about the individual who doesn't have the $500 but has a perfectly good cause of action. So you see there is an unfairness there and an inequality. The guy who has the money, okay, he can go to court. But the man who doesn't have the money can't go to court.

"Now, there are many lawsuits filed that have no value."

Has the American Bar Association resisted change and innovation?

"Well, of course, that isn't true," Jaworski said. "The ABA through the years — and I am familiar with what it has done — has grappled with many innovations.

"The trouble is some of these matters are just not subject to quick solution. That's the trouble with them. It (the ABA) has spent a tremendous amount of time and effort in all these problems. It has done much to find ways to streamlining the system of justice that has come up.

"A number of them have been passed to Congress with no action being taken. So let's not put the blame on the organized bar. Let's put it where it belongs. There was a list prepared of what the bar has been doing in the last decade or two, trying to come to grips with some of these problems. Some of it can't because of our system of justice and because of our constitution."

"The problem is," he said, "there have been social changes and new conditions have arisen. For instance, we find that you have to appoint a lawyer in every criminal case. Whether he wants one or not, the court appoints one. He's (the defendant) entitled to it. If that doesn't slow up the processes of justice — some of them want to come and plead.

"The matter of confession, the Miranda decision, OK, that's designed to protect the right of the individual so he's given all kinds of warnings.

"Yet, suppose a man comes up and says, 'Yes, I did it.'

"Well, wait, I've got to tell you all this."

"By the time you get through, he says, 'Well, maybe I won't confess, then.'"m

DEFENDS PROFESSION — Leon Jaworski, with a half century at the bar, now finds himself defending his own profession. He said that in most of President Carter's recent allegations about the legal profession, the president was uninformed. (UPI Telephoto)

Insurance Reform Going Slowly

By LeROY POPE
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Insurance companies are urging a go-slow response to recommendations of the National Association of Insurance Commssioners for drastic reforms in automobile insurance pricing.

The changes proposed by the commissioners meeting in Washington in mid-June ultimately could lead to a ban on any consideration of the sex, age or marital status of drivers or of locality in fixing rates.

The commissioners proposed that pricing of automobile insurance be based on the design and size of cars with the idea this eventually would force both Detroit and foreign automakers to build cars that are safer and less costly to repair.

The commissioners also called on the insurance companies to cooperate with them in providing data on which to base rate reform. The commissioners said only the insurance companies possess the necessary information.

Massachusetts already has outlawed rates that discriminate on the basis of sex or age. While many insurance companies strongly opposed this ban, one leading group of companies represented by the American Insurance Association adopted a wait and see policy.

Nevertheless, a spokesman for the Insurance Information Institute said most insurance companies feel statistical evidence shows the insurance commissioners are mistaken if they believe forbidding the setting of premiums on the basis of drivers' age, sex, marital status or place of residence will bring rates down.

"It will just redistribute the premiums," the spokesman said. "If the companies are forbidden to penalize young, unmarried, male drivers with higher rates, they'll have to charge older drivers and women more."

He said the ban on sex discrimination in rates would be the easiest for the industry to accept because sex discrimination is based on a less impressive amount of statistical justification than basing rates on age or marital status. He said the statistical evidence that young single drivers have the most accidents and most costly accidents is overwhelming and therefore they should be penalized.

On the subject of locality, the institute spokesman said the statistical evidence for continuing the present system of penalizing drivers living in areas with high accident rates is even more impressive.

In recommending the proposed changes, a task force report prepared by the insurance commissioners association, claimed that "most classifications for young and single drivers are derived from behavioral assumptions based on traditional sex roles and social patterns and may or may not be applicable to individuals..." and that "the fairness of such rate discrimination is under increased scrutiny" because it smacks of "guilt by association."

But the Insurance Information Institute spokesman denied that rates are based on any behavioral assumptions. They are based only on hard statisitcal evidence, he said.

He also raised the point that state insurance commissioners are political appointees — some even are elected — and that uneconomic political considerations might color their views.

In their aim to price insurance in such a way as to force the manufacturers to cars safer and easier to repair, the National Association of Insurance Commissioners raised several interesting points. For example, they said the variation of costs for the same repair on different models was enormous. They said it ranged from $13 to $406 in the same kind of controlled accident for different cars.

The major reason automobiles are so expensive to repair nowadays, the commissioners said, is that the profit-conscious automakers design them with an eye to ease and cheapness of assembly, not to ease and cheapness of repair.

It cited the bumper, which nowadays is a one-piece welded unit which is obviously easier and cheaper to attach to the car on the factory assembly line than the old-fashioned bumper. But if it's hit in an accident, the whole bumper has to be replaced at a high cost, whereas years ago any competent mechanic could repair a damaged bumper cheaply. This situation is designed into many parts of the car and it forces up repair bills and insurance rates.

The commissioners also noted that the Federal Trade Commission has monopoly suits against General Motors over crash parts for cars, prices of which went up 19.9 percent in 1975, then 9.3 percent in 1976 and 10.3 percent last year.

The commissioners also claimed the antitrust laws prevent the insurance companies from uniting to exert countervailing economic leverage against the auto industry to hold repair costs down and force the design of safer cars.

Finally the commissioners said that, "Essentially the same (car) models are good or bad from year to year. Proceeding from this, Allstate (Sears Roebuck's insurance group) has developed a rating plan which increases premiums for those models for which experience is worse than average, and decreases premiums for those models with better than average experience."

The commissioners, thus, appear to favor basing rates on statistical experience as regards the performance of machines but to oppose it as regards the performance of drivers.

Singer Won't Be A Failure

By BRUCE MEYER
United Press International

Genya Ravan looks you straight in the eye when she's talking. Don't try to make her blink; she already knows all the tricks.

"Nobody understands what a toll it takes on your whole being when it looks like you're gonna happen and then you don't," she says. "You feel like a personal failure. But I stopped. I'm never gonna feel like a personal failure again."

But if her aptly titled new album, "Urban Desire" (20th Century T-562) is any indication, there seems little likelihood she'll have to face the problem.

The music is uncompromising hard rock. The lyrics are street-wise, the band makes up for its lack of collective experience with musicianship and enthusiasm and Genya's voice has an engagingly gritty rawness reminiscent of Tina Turner at her best.

The album opens with a pure city song, "Jerry's Pigeons," written by Genya and members of her band at the last minute in the studio, a hot track with complex lyrics working off a relatively simple riff pattern that is typical of Genya's lyric style.

"They're wordy, my songs, but they're stories," she says. "It's not the basic 'I love you, you left me' stuff. I've been writing lyrics like that for years, but no one was ready for them before."

Not all the material on the record is as good as "Jerry's Pigeons," but at least a half-dozen of the 11 songs are top-notch and the album clearly demonstrates Genya's facility as both singer and producer.

She has discovered a major writing talent in Joe Droukas, an unknown who contributes three of the album's best: "The Knight Ain't Long Enough," "The Sweetest One" and "Shadowboxing." Genya also gets some help from a friend on one of her own tunes, "Aye Co'lorado;" in a rare guest appearance, Lou Reed contributes a few unmistakable lowkey vocal lines.

Ann Margret's Memories Of Elvis To Air On 'The Big Event'-NBC-TV

TRIBUTE TO ELVIS–Many of Elvis Presley's hits are featured in "The Big Event: Memories of Elvis," Tuesday, Aug. 29 (8-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

"It's a wonderful thing to be on a first name basis with the world. That was Elvis. Everyone knew him as Elvis.

Thus begins Ann-Margret's introduction to three hours of marvelous entertainment — "The Big Event: Memories of Elvis," encoring Tuesday, August 29, 8 p.m., on NBC-TV.

"I guess Bing was the first, but a lot of years went by before it happened again. And it was Elvis who made it happen. I would never have had the nerve to be known simply as Ann-Margret if it hadn't been for Elvis. He really started that marvelous familiarity, that instant recognition. Frank...Sammy...Lena...Elvis."

Ann-Margret says her performance on the show — a combination of two highly acclaimed specials by Elvis, one in 1968, the latter from Hawaii in April, 1973 -- was not as a performer but "as a fan. As someone who sits in an audience and loves to be entertained.

"If you're expecting to find out the real inside story of what Elvis was all about...you're going to get it. Because this is the real Elvis.

"You see...the real Elvis took place not behind closed doors...not in the shadows or hidden behind the walls of some mysterious castle in Tennessee. The real Elvis always happened right out in front where everyone could see him."

The evening with Elvis features a medley of his Gold Record hits, including "Heartbreak Hotel," "Hound Dog" and "All Shook Up." Among other songs are "Fools Rush In," "Jailhouse Rock," "Don't Be Cruel," "Love Me Tender," "Are You Lonesome Tonight" and the title song of the program, "Memories."

In the portion of the show from Hawaii, Elvis opens with "Blue Hawaii," then he sings "C.C. Rider," "Burning Love," "What Now My Love," and "My Way."

Anka—A Phenomenon

It's been over two decades since Paul Anka emerged as a rock 'n' roll teenage prodigy. Now he is very much an adult pehnomenon — singer, composer, entertainer, businessman.

Anka still works very hard at his craft. He likes to spend eight months of every year donig concerts, playing in Las Vegas (he's one of the superstars of that particular circuit), and TV specials. His latest special, "Paul Anka in Monte Carlo," airs Sunday, August 27, at 10 p.m. on CBS-TV. His guests on the hour of entertainment are Suzanne Somers and Donna Summer.

Now 37, Anka was born in Ottawa where his parents, both Lebanese-Canadians, operated restaurants. Paul is still a Canadian citizen. At 13 he was in Los Angeles, recording for RPM Records. He recalls: "The record stiffed out completely. So that fall, I went back to Canada — a failure at 13."

The big break came two years later, just short of Paul's 16th birthday. This time he was in New York with $100 make-or-break money and a tape with four of his songs. A & R man (later to become musical director for Paul) Don Costa liked what he heard, in particular a song written to Paul's younger brother's babysitter "Diana."

"Diana" was an instant smash, a giant selling record world wide and it propelled Paul Anka into an international name. By his 19th birthday, the former 13-year-old failure was a millionaire.

Suzanne Somers joins singer-composer Paul Anka for an hour-long entertainment special, "Paul Anka in Monte Carlo," Sunday, Aug. 27 (10-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

'Leningrad Ice Show' Presented

"The Leningrad Ice Show," taped on location at Leningrad's Sports Palace and hosted by Sally Struthers and Harry Morgan, will be presented Tuesday, August 29, 8 to 9 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Featuring a permanent company of 80 of the world's finest skaters, who combine ice skating with ballet, acrobatics and slapstick comedy, "The Leningrad Ice Show" opens with "Dance of the Moldau," a typical Russian dance number from the Republic of Moldavski. In "Puck, Puck," the skaters perform a spoof on the game of ice hockey. Other segments in the special include: "Hex," an allegory based on Russian folklore; the dance of the Prince and the Princess from Tchaikovsky's "Nutcracker Suite"; "Beautiful Red Rose," featuring a harem of beauties reminiscent of a Las Vegas chorus line' "Silhouette," boy-meets-girl — boy-loses-girl; and "Jewels from the Ural Mountains," a spectacular arobatic pas de deux.

In a comedic departure from the company's repertoire, Sally Struthers dressed in a Moravian costume, dons skates for an impromtu duet with male skater Babjenko.

All About Elephants

Hal Linden meets some memorable elephants in art, literature, legend and mythology, at the circus and on the plains of Africa and Asia, on "Animals Animals Animals," airing Sunday, August 27, 11:30 to 11:55 a.m., on ABC-TV.

In "How the Elephant Found Her Trunk," an animated segment, a lady pachyderm who could definately pack, like for a trip to Hackensack, packed so well that she couldn't tell the difference between the trunk on her head and her trunk full of clothes.

An animated fable titled "An Elephant Does," tells about a ravenous elephant in the town of Sweet Pickles which eats everything in sight, including pistachio milk shakes; owns a grocery store and proves that there is much more to an elephant than the elephant's eye.

The Circus Vargas, largest tent circus in the world, is in Ventura, California, where elehpants help raise the circus tent and then perform under it. Elephant trainer Clark Craig says, "Elephants are probably more individualistic than, say, horses or dogs...They say animals don't reason. An elephant would come as close as any to reasoning."

Hal Linden climbs aboard the elephant, Simba, at Bush Gardins in Florida, where Simba and two of her elephant friends, Annie May and Sally, do a little showing off.

Another animation segment explores the elephant's place in history, mythology, literature and art, showing the Hindu god of war and storms, Inra, seated on his cloud elephant, Airavata.

Robinson Anchors Desk

When ABC News and Sports President Roone Arledge announced that Max Robinson would be an anchorman on "ABC News World News Tonight," and would be anchoring the National Desk from Chicago, television followers asked "Why Max?" and "Why Chicago?"

Max Robinson knows why.

"ABC News was the locigal place to go," says Robinson. "I felt it was where things were happening." Arledge says, "Max has that sense of community news that benefits our viewers as he covers the great mass of stories that happen in mid-America."

Why establish an anchor desk in Chicago? "We want to humanize news, relate it to people and show how it effects them," says Robinson. "Things that occur in Washington are extremely important to the people in Washington. But if you go to Boston, Chicago, Des Moines or Los Angeles, people don't find them as important.

"How people in middle America or western America perceive the news is something that can be overlooked by a reporter who is stationed in the nation's capital. That is why I feel the location of the National Desk in Chicago is a most important step toward covering the news for all our viewers.

"I push stories to the senior producers in New York and Washington. I call it "Regional advocacy." We have a better understanding of a midwest news story than a producer a thousand miles away. If there's an important story elsewhere in the nation, and I feel it is being ignored, I'm going to push for it to get on the air. That advocacy has been missing in network news. We are trying to break down that often critized New York-Washington axis," says Robinson.

Much has been written about Robinson being the first black to appear as a regular network anchorman. Max, however, downplays his race as an issue.

"It will be more important when there are no longer any 'first blacks'," says Robinson. "I suppose it could be symbolic to millions of Americans, and not just black people. But in the future, I hope they will say that Max Robinson was one of those people who made a contribution to the progress of television. That's my goal."

Embryo's Life Revealed

The secret world of the living human embryo will be revealed when "The Miracle Months," award-winning human interest-medical documentary, encores Sunday, August 27, 8 to 9 p.m., on CBS-TV.

From the actual moment of conception through gestation and birth, "The Miracle Months" documents the mystery of human development, using radical new optical techniques to capture earliest pre-natal phases previously unseen by even most doctors.

The innovative fetal photography, made possible by radical recent developments in photographic technology, brings to viewers pictures that have never before been seen on television. Included is dramatic close-up film of a 40-day-old embryo, the size of a thumbnail, but alive and distinguishable, deep within a mother's womb. Fetal developments is then followed photographically throughout the term of pregnancy, branching out into the drama-filled world of modern medicine, where viewers share the hopes, fears, strategies, challenges and joys of three real-life cases.

The real-life dramas revolve around a mother with an abnormally positioned placenta, another whose RH factor is incompatible with that of her unborn baby, and a third whose three previous pregnancies had ended in miscarriage because of a weakness in her cervix.

A veritable arsenal of 21st century medical technology gives doctors the powerful tools they need to protect life still in the womb. In some cases, such as those presented in "The Miracle Months," these tools mean the difference between life and death.

BIRTHDAY BOY: The second birthday of John Tims, of El Cajon, Calif., arrives this year just one day before the remarkable circumstances of his birth are repeated on "The Miracle Months," award-winning documentary on human conception, gestation and birth encoring on Sunday, Aug. 27 (8-9 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Guitarist Joins Fiedler

Classical guitarist Angel Romero joins Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra for a romantic Latin-flavored "Evening at Pops" Sunday, August 27, at 8 p.m. on PBS.

A few seasons ago, by virtue of his solo performance in Carnegi Hall and as a member of the Romeros Quartet, the New York Times called Angel Romero "A rising star among virtuosos." Since then, his recitals and his performances as an orchestral soloist have continually reinforced this critical acclaim.

On the program Romero offers a dazzling performance of Vivaldi's Concerto in D major for Guitar and Orchestra, and Rodrigo's "Concierto de Aranjuez."

'Flying High' Premieres

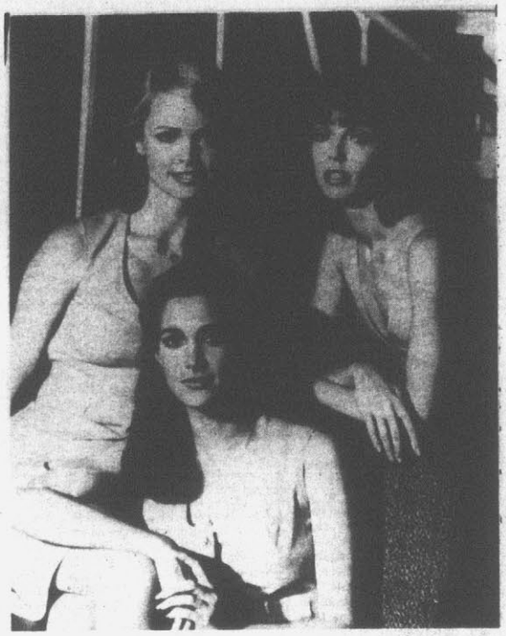

Three beautiful girls succeed in qualifying for airline stewardess training, become fast friends as they manage to complete the tough course, and then start getting a taste of the rigors and fun of the real thing, in "Flying High," a breezy yarn of romance in the clouds to be rebroadcast as a world-premiere movie presentation Monday, August 28, 9 to 11 p.m. on CBS-TV.

Heading the cast are three relatively new faces to television drama from the glamorous ranks of New York models: blonde Pat Klous, starring as Marcy Bower, a Texas lovely; brunette Connie Sellecca, starring as Lisa Benton, a Connecticut society beauty; and Kathry Witt, starring as Pam Bellagio, a charmer from New Jersey.

Marcia Wallace, popular for her regular role of the wisecracking receptionist, Carol Bondurant, on "The Bob Newhart Show," stars as Connie Martin, a flight attendant instructor for Sunwest Airlines. Jim Hutton and David Hayward guest star, respectively, as Paul Mitchell, a shy but love-hungry psychologist, and Burt Stahl, a passenger relations representative for Sunwest. Howard Platt stars as Sunwest Flight Captain March.

Marcy, Lisa and Pam, from contrasting family backgrounds, begin their training at the Sunwest flight attendant training center in California, hoping desperately that they can make the grade.

Meanwhile, Burt Stahl, trying to help his pal, Paul Mitchell, recover from the emotional wounds of a recent divorce, is urging bashful Paul to get himself some girl friends. Burt sings the praises of Sunwest's new crop of stewardess trainees and promises that if Paul will survey the trainees, he will get Paul together with whichever girls strike Paul's fancy.

Co-starring as three Sun West Airline flight attendants are curley-headed Kathie Witt (Pam Bellagio), long-haired burnette Connie Sellecca (Lisa Benton) and blonde Pat Klous (Marcy Bower) in "Flying High," a breezy yarn of romance in the clouds to be broadcast as a world-premiere movie Monday, Aug. 28 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Characters Are Legends

Every generation has one or two movie stars who have a special magnetism that rivets an audience. What they project on film rises above scripts, directors and plots — good or bad — and they establish an almost personal rapport with the audience.

Clint Eastwood, starring in "Dirty Harry," is one of those actors. The film will be rebroadcast on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies," August 28, 9 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV.

Rising from odd-jobs and bit-casting, Eastwood has become one of the top box-office attractions in the world, the idol of millions of moviegoers for his portrayal of the strong, silent man who knows what he wants and goes after it.

In an age when most movie stars portray anti-heroes who are beset by frustrations, the confused victims of chaotic times, Eastwood projects a fascinating person, whether he plays a westerner, or a detective — such as 'Dirty Harry' Callahan in "Dirty Harry" — or a soldier.

"The secret of the man I play," says Eastwood, "is that he's a super hero, a dream character for most men. The average guy in the audience says, 'I want to handle it just the way he's doing it on the screen.' In these days of lost individualism, in a computerized world where everyone is a number, this is appealing.

"A guy sits in the audience. He's scared stiff about his life. He wants to be that self-sufficient legend he sees in my pictures; a superhuman character who has all the answers, is doubly cool, exists without society, without anyone's help. Of course, it will never happen that way. Man is always dreaming of being an individual, but man, like other social animals, is really a flock animal."

Longwood Matches Air On Public TV

In 1964, when the U.S. Professional Tennis Championships were played at the Longwood Crickett Club in Chestnut Hill, Massachusetts, for the first time, Ken Rosewell defeated a field of just 12 players to win the $500 top prize.

In 1978 pro tennis has changed considerable. Prize money for this year's tournament has risen to a record $200,000 and the draw of players to 64. On Monday, August 28, PBS will air live coverage of the "U.S. Pro Tennis Championships" from 8 to 11 p.m.

Popular sports commentator and columnist for "The Boston Globe," Bud Collins, and former captain of the U.S. Davis Cup team, Donald Dell, will provide the live courtside coverage of the Longwood matches.

Slated to appear in the Championships are defending champion Manuel Orantes along with Arthur Ashe, John Newcombe and Raul Ramirez. Other entries are 1977 finalist Eddie Dibbs, Harold Solomon and Wojtek Fibak.

Longwood annually attracts one of the highest caliber fields in pro tennis. Bjorn Borg, winner of the past three Wimbledons, won it for three consecutive years (1974-76), and Jimmy Connors, who may appear this year, defaulted last year because of an injury.

Hughes' Life Traced

"The Amazing Howard Hughes," the four-hour special tracing the life and career of one of the century's most mysterious and elusive industrial tycoons, will be rebroadcast in two parts, on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies," August 29, and "The CBS Wednesday Night Movies," August 30 (9-11 p.m. both nights), on CBS-TV.

Starring Tommy Lee Jones as the late eccentric billionaire, Howard Hughes, and Ed Flanders as his long-time associate, Noah Dietrich, the program was based upon the book "Howard, the Amazing Mr. Hughes," written by Dietrich and Bob Thomas.

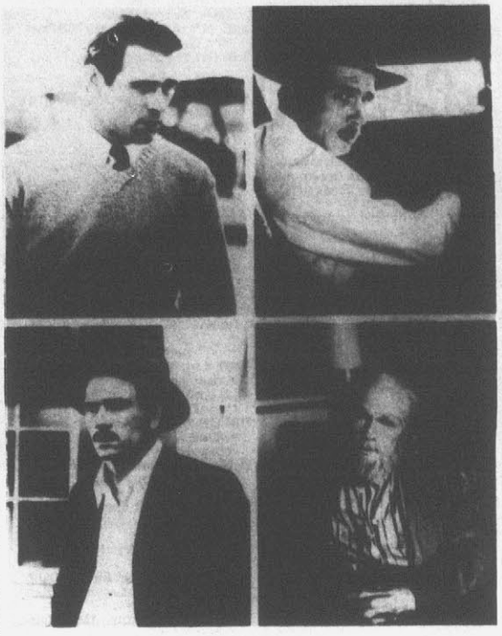

The program also stars James Hampton, Tovah Feldshuh and Lee Percell.

Part I (Tuesday) traces his career from the very beginning, in 1924, when, at age 18, he succeeded his father as head of the Hughes Tool Co. By age 20 Hughes had already developed an interest in Hollywood, and its starlets, and he made his first film, "Swell Hogan."

He also developed a strong interest in aviation and, in 1934, he flew his H-1 racer to a land speed record of 352 m.p.h. Part I ends in 1938, when Hughes, about to acquire Trans World Airlines, flies as a co-pilot for another commercial airline (under an assumed name) in order to learn the business.

Part II (Wednesday) opens in 1938, when Hughes breaks the global flying record piloting a Lockheed Lodestar around the world in three days, 19 hours and 14 minutes. In 1940, while involved with the filming of "The Outlaw," starring Jane Russell, he instructed Noah Dietrich to set up the Hughes Aircraft Co. Then, in 1947, already a billionaire, Hughes defied Congressional investigators probing the $70 million cost of his renowned "Spruce Goose" aircraft. His behavior showed a marked eccentricity by 1948.

In 1966, he moved to Las Vegas and bought the first of what became a chain of hotel-casinos. Part II of the program continues through Hughes' life in Las Vegas and the Bahamas, and ends in 1976, when Hughes, who had moved to Mexico, died in April.

Tommy Lee Jones stars as the elusive industrial tycoon Howard Hughes, in "The Amazing Howard Hughes," four-hour special that traces his life and career, to be rebroadcast in two parts on "The Tuesday Night Movie," Aug. 29 and "The Wednesday Night Movie," Aug. 30 (9-11 p.m. both nights) on CBS-TV.

No Ice Skating, Please

Under ordinary circumstance, the fact that Sally Struthers has weak ankles would not be an item to be whispered at Hollywood cocktail parties or repeated in a television network boardroom. But, as host, along with Harry Morgan of "The Leningrad Ice Show" (Tuesday, 8 p.m. on CBS-TV), Sally found her ankles put to the supreme test.

"I've never even been on skates before," she wailed, when questioned about her impromptu duet with Russian skating star Babjenko, one of the funniest segments of the upcoming special. "I could hardly stand up during rehearsals because of my ankles. And, as if that wasn't enough, I got all my directions through an interpreter. So, when the director wanted me to arch my back, it came out as 'cave your back.'"

Miss Struthers' experiences in Russia, on the ice and off, during the taping of "The Leningrad Ice Show" were the stuff of which slapstick routines are made. Once she got her skating "ankles" and had managed to translate the Russian stage directions, the next problem was being out-fitted in a costume. There was no one to translate the American clothes and shoe sizes into Russian. So, for the Moravian costume she wears in the duet, she had to try on every costume the company had in wardrobe.

Then, to find skates that fit, her foot was traced on a piece of paper and each of the Russian women skaters matched her foot to the drawing until one the same size was found. "It was just like looking for the glass slipper," Miss Struthers said. "A Cinderella story — Russian-style."

What about her impressions of the historic city of Leningrad?

"The Russians audiences were wonderful, especially the children," she said. "Everywhere we turned, too, there were awesome, historic sights to see."

Now that she is back on native soil, what are her plans for the future?

"I will not only be acting this season, but plan to co-produce a TV movie with my husband. Also, I'll be involved in the holiday parades for CBS. One thing I'm definately not going to do is get back on ice skates."

Aikens Stars As Cop

Claude Akins stars — with Steve Lawrence, George DiCenzo, Dennis Dugan, Cheryl Miller and Barbara Luna — as a tough, no-nonsense cop who is framed for a slaying and sent to prison, where inmates gleefully plot their revenge, in "The Broken Badge," a "Police Story" drama to be rebroadcast on NBC's "Big Event" Sunday, August 27, 9 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV.

Chick Stacy (Akins), a veteran beat cop with little sympathy for society's lawbreakers, is found guilty and sentenced to prison for the shooting death of Lilly (Luna), a blackmailing prostitute who had earlier complained of the officer's on-duty harassment. Although innocent, he stoically accepts his fact, aware that as an ex-policeman, he is a marked man behind bars.

While Stacy outwits and outhits his fellow inmates, a former patrol partner, Loebner (Dugan), and two Internal Affairs investigators, Bivins and Petrelli (Lawrence and DiCenzo), doggedly pursue the gossamer evidence, hoping to clear him before his luck for survival runs out.

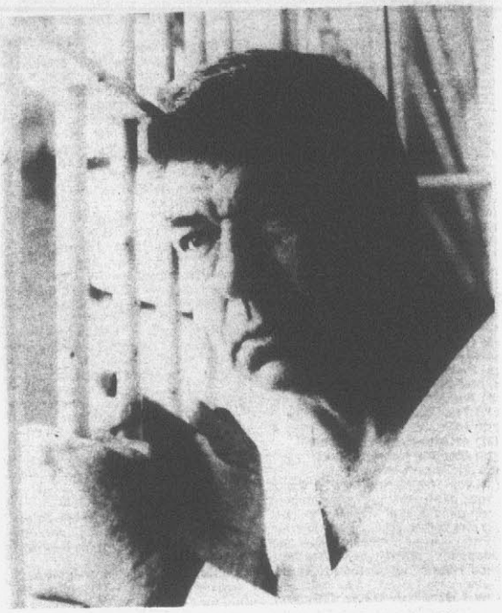

Claude Akins, who was born in Nelson, Ga., and reared in Bedford, Ind., has been acting since his debut in a church play at age 5. With acting as his goal, he majored in speech at Northwestern University. Following his graduation, and his marriage to Therese "Pie" Fairfield, he went to work for a Bedford limestone company as a salesman. The president of the company was a theatre fan and got Akins into the Barter Theatre in Abdingdon, Va., for a season. That was the inspiration that took him to New York City where he won a role in "The Rose Tattoo."

Following several seasons with touring companies, he landed a movie role in "From Here to Eternity" and has since appeared in such Films as "The Caine Mutiny," "Skyjacked," "Flap," "Devil's Brigade," "Inherit the Wind," "The Great Bank Robbery" and "Timber Tramps."

Akins starred as Sonny Pruitt in the highly popular television series, "Movin' On," and has also guest starred in other series.

Overwhelmed by the large numbers of fans — varying in ages from toddlers to senior citizens — on hand to greet him everywhere he's gone since filming "Movin' On" — Akins is pleased that audiences are finally connecting his name with his popular face.

An avid golfer, he is a member of the Hollywood Hackers, and shares the sport with his son, Claude Marion, a college student who hopes to become a professional golfer.

AKINS AS FRAMED COP—Claude Akins stars as a veteran beat cop who is framed for a slaying and sent to prison, in "The Broken Badge," a "Police Story" drama on "The Big Event," Sunday, Aug. 27 (9-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Thornton Wilder Plays On PBS-TV

Like many a successful author, Thornton Wilder began writing when he was quite young, filling notebook after notebook with cryptic short stories and fanciful plays. Now, four of those early works have been produced for television for the first time on "Wilder Wilder," which will air Wednesday, August 30, at 10:30 p.m.

The half-hour special is designed to illuminate the art, life and mind of the young Wisconsin-born author who later wrote such classics as "Our Town" and "The Skin of Our Teeth."

The program contains four short plays, ranging in length from five to seven and a half minutes. The plays were taken from a collection of Wilder's early writings entitled "The Angel That Troubled the Waters."

Until now, these unique dramas were considered unproducible parlor pieces and have never been performed on the stage. Wilder himself saw these early attempts as suitable only for recitation.

Thus, the translation from parlor piece to television drama called for video experimentation and ingenious set and property designs. Costumes, sets, and special effects had to be creatively combined to capture the hallucinatory and dreamlike quality of Wilder's lifelong fascination with moral and religious themes.

In addition, each play demanded the creation of a separate and complex environment. "The Flight Into Egypt" portrays the Holy Family fleeing Herod's soldiers, while aboard a loquacious donkey named Hapzibah. The biblical play-within-a-play takes place in a turn-of-the century business office of the Lord. "The Penny That Beauty Spent" is set in a rococo jewelry shop of Louis XV's France. The final play in the quarter, "And The Sea Shall Give Up Its Dead," takes place at the bottom of the ocean and concludes with the destruction of the universe.

Film Encores

Paul Newman stars as the legendary Judge Roy Bean, in the comedic western directed by John Huston. "The Life and Times of Judge Roy Bean," which will be rebroadcast Saturday, September 2, 9 to 11:25 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Ava Gardner, Anthony Perkins, Jacqueline Bisset, Ned Beatty, Stacy Keach, Tab Hunter and Roddy McDowall also appear in the film.

The Judge, "the law west of the Pecos," assumed his title after taking over the sleepy Texas town of Vinegaroon, hanging all of its outlaws (making him the only non-Mexican in the town) and confiscating their property for "court costs." His confidence as a lawmaker was based upon his intimate knowledge of the law, "having spent my life in its flagrant disregard."

But upholding the law was not the Judge's only activity — upholding the honor of the lovely actress Miss Lily Langtry (Miss Gardner) was the other. The Judge had never met Miss Langtry, and his blind ambition of her led him to install her picture over the newly renovated bar in the courthouse, and even to rename the town after her.

'Good Times' In Store

There will be more "Good Times" than ever, now that Esther Rolle is returning to the series to appear regularly as Florida, the family matriarch. To celebrate this fact, the 1978-79 season will open with a one-hour episode, the first of a four-part story.

Further news, as "Good Times" begins its sixth season, is that the series will move regularly to the 8:30 to 9 p.m. time slot on Wednesdays, one half-hour later than last year.

To establish Florida's return to the family (she had married and moved to Arizona), the premiere episode will deal with daughter Thelma's (Bernadette Stanis) impending marriage. Thelma has been dating famous football star Keith Adams (Ben Powers), and phones her mother in Arizona to announce the impending marriage. Before the hour is over, Florida has arrived home — never to leave again.

On her return, she finds the family greatly in need of a stabilizing influence. J.J. (Jimmie Walker) is having major problems at work and is in danger of losing his job. Penny (Janet Jackson), no longer the frightened little girl she was when she entered the family, is beginning to grow up. She will figure more prominently in the action as the adopted daughter of Willona (Ja'net DuBois). Michael (Ralph Carter), the youngest boy, has gone off to school, but will return for occasional episodes.

Esther Rolle returns in the starring role of Florida Evans Dixon in "Good Times," which begins its sixth season this fall, for broadcast on Wednesdays (8:30-9 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

'Day Of The Dolphins' Rebroadcast

"The Day of the Dolphin" has been variously described as an adventure story, a science fiction, a love story and a political fantasy. The film, which will be rebroadcast as the "NBC Movie of the Week" Wednesday, August 30 (8 to 10 p.m., on NBC-TV), is all of the above, and perhaps even more. Starring George C. Scott, with Trish Van Devere, Paul Sorvino and Fritz Weaver.

Several years ago, a prominent research scientist created a minor cause celebre when he withdrew from a government sponsored project, removing all his research notes rather than leave them to be misapplied for destructive purposes. The question of whether scientific enquirey can be carried out for its own sake and not be harnessed to a particular application has long been a heady topic. And in a large way, this question provides the substance for "The Day of the Dolphin."

Director Mike Nichols used the investigation of speech and communication among the frolicsome species as the jumping-off point for a profoundly moral thriller. Combining subtle extensions of scientific fact into fiction with ample doses of suspense and intrigue (not to mention the uncanny antics of the dolphins), the film appeals to a wide audience.

The settling is an isolated research base in the Bahamas where scientist Jake Terrell (Scott) and his wife, Maggie (Van Devere), have been training dolphins to mimic speech patterns and respond to verbal commands. His research leads him into a complicated nightmare of psychological and political intrigue.

A suspiciously persistent snooper, magazine writer Mahoney (Sorvino), blackmails Harold Demilo (Weaver), administrator of the foundation backing Terrell's project, into granting him access to the labs. Terrell's suspicions of Mahoney and unlawful government affiliation turns out to be true — the 'foundation' itself has planted a saboteur in the project as part of a bizarre plan to use the dolphins to plant mines under the President's yacht.

Six dolphins were caught and trained for the film, and the man responsible for the dolphins' education and welfare — Englishman Peter Moss — lived and worked with the animals for two years. He named them Buck, Ginger, Big Mama, Candy, Paddlefoot and Lulu.

Hobby 'Stamps' Him

Millions of television viewers know Sal Viscuso as Father Timothy Flotsky, the young priest in ABC-TV's comedy series, "Soap." His wife, Tess, a painter and illustrator, thinks of him as the Mad Hatter.

As a birthday present, Tess had a rubber stamp made for him, based on Tenniel's etching of the quirky "Alice in Wonderland" character. Sal sings his letters with it.

The Mad Hatter is only one of more than 150 rubber stamps with which Sal creates graphic messages on letters, invitations, menus (for his famous Italian dinners) and special occasion cards. There's a wild variety of images— from pirates to potentates, camels to cockroaches, apes to apples, lions to ladybugs. When Sal occasionally has to use a word or two to make his meaning clear, he has a choice of five alphabets.

Sal became interested in collecting and using rubber stamps about five years ago. "I'd get these rubber-stamp letters from my friend Jock Reynolds, a sculptor in San Francisco. Pretty soon I got to thinking, 'Hey, I'd like to put together letters like these.' It's natural, I guess. I'm an actor, I like to entertain. And these stamps make letters entertaining. So I started collecting."

Friends tell Sal his letters themselves become collector's items. His envelopes are equally vivid, and his local post office displays Xeroxed copies of some of them on the bulletin board.

Sal says there's a growing counter-culture of rubber-stamp collectors. He gets catalogs from a half-dozen firms. Prices usually range from $2 to $7. And of course there are swap meets for the aficionados. "It's contagious," Sal says. "I get wilder letters now from eight of my friends who've taken it up."

So far, Sal has been unable to find a stamp with the image he wants the most — a bar of soap. Apparently, it would have to be specially designed and made. Sal has dropped some heavy hits to his artist wife.

After all, he does have a birthday coming up.

Pike's Peek

By Charlie Pike, TV Showtime staff writer.

HOLLYWOOD — It may be a foregone conclusion, but Cher Allman is now living under the same roof as boyfriend Gene Simmons, the member of the rock group KISS who refuses to be photographed without his make up. However, what Cher may not know is that Gene is making it no secret among his friends that he has no intentions of marrying Cher.

James Garner's bad right knee, which has required surgery twice in recent years, has become such a chronic problem that it's already been pretty much decided that this upcoming TV season will be the last for his "Rockford Files." However, Jim has signed a new two-year contract with the network for projects such as TV movies after 'Rockford' ends its run.

Nels Van Patten, eldest son of Dick Van Patten of "Eight Is Enough," makes his film debut with a small role in an upcoming film which stars Valerie Perrine. It's not coincidental that Valerie and Nels are a new twosome.

ABC, NBC and CBS each have no less than a half dozen shows either in or about to begin production as mid-season replacements, which certainly doesn't say much of the line-up of shows ready to debut early in September.

Brenda Dickson of daytime's "The Young and the Restless" has signed her first recording contract and should have her first album ready for release by year's end. A formal announcement will be forthcoming any day now. So, until then, the identity of the label is being withheld.

Lynda Carter's recent Las Vegas and Tahoe nightclub engagements were so successful that it seems a certainly that she's not really concerned about the future of "Wonder Woman." When Lynda closed in Vegas she received a six-and-a-half minute standing ovation.

Sandy Duncan, whose career has been more of a housewife than an actress in recent years, may very well be re-directing her attention toward her career with the news that she and her husband, Dr. Tom Calcaterra, are trying it apart.

The "Charlie's Angels" set has once again been declared closed and off-limits to anyone who doesn't work on the show. It seems the sound stage at 20th Century-Fox had become crowded with an over abundance of outside visitors all hoping to catch Kate Jackson, Jaclyn Smith or Cheryl Ladd for a few minutes' conversation.

Segment Encores On NBC-TV

Robert Reed stars as psychologist David McKay, a specialist in tracking down runaways, searching for a mentally disturbed teen-ager who has run away to San Francisco to become a call girl, in "No Prince for my Cinderella," the premiere segment of "Operation Runaway" which will be rebroadcast Thursday, August 31, 9 to 11 p.m. on NBC-TV.

Terri Nunn and James Oleson guest-star in the drama, filmed on location in San Francisco and Los Angeles.

In checking the girl's background, McKay discovers a pattern indicating schizophrenic behavior and a duel personality. Cathy has run away to San Francisco with known prostitute Carolyn Roberts, and has assumed the identity of 'Barbara Hess.'

McKay's efforts to find the girl lead him from a muscle beach in Venice, Calif., to a hotel room in San Francisco where Cathy-Barbara believes him to be a customer.

Film Based On Tragedy

In 1841 an American ship, the William Brown, struck an iceberg and sank off the coast of Newfoundland.

Forty-one passengers and crewmen were jammed together in a life-boat as the Sea grew heavier and waves threatened to swamp the craft.

Acting on the first mate's orders, seaman Alexander Holmes assisted other crewmen in throwing a number of the passengers overboard to make the boat seaworthy.

Eventually, those on the boat were rescued and Holmes was tried and convicted of manslaughter in a classic case that today is being studied in law schools.

The incident, modernized and somewhat changed, is dramatized in "The Last Survivors," the "CBS Late Movie" to be rebroadcast Friday, September 1, at 11:45 p.m.

Martin Sheen stars as Holmes, upgraded in the film version to a second purser, who as the senior officer on the lifeboat must make the life-or-death decision as to which passengers will be thrown overboard.

The William Brown had been en route from Liverpool to Philadelphia with a heavy cargo, a crew of 16 and 65 passengers— Scottish and Irish emigrants.

The 24 hours after the ship sank was a horror for the survivors. They were lashed by freezing rain and were forced to bail constantly to keep the leaky boat afloat.

Through it all, Holmes was described by survivors as a "model of decision and strength." He had been the last crewman to leave the sinking ship and made "conspicuous" efforts to save passengers when the ship was struck.

During the height of the crisis in the lifeboat, Holmes, according to one witness, "finally became the only one whose energies and hopes did not sink into prostation."

Holmes's trial aroused widespread interest throughout the country. The courtroom was crowded with spectators.

The prosecutor contended that the crew did not have the right to make themselves the sole arbiters of life and death without consulting their victims and without drawing lots.

The defense lawyer argued that Holmes was following the first mate's order and was acting under conditions of extreme emergency and danger.

The jury deliberated for 16 hours and had no difficulty reaching a verdict before finding Holmes guilty.

Holmes spent 15 months in prison and was fined $20. The fine later was rescinded.

Scheme Stumps Columbo

Clive Revill, who starred as Fagin in "Oliver," on Broadway, guest-stars as a charming Irish poet whose verse belies his deadly scheme for homicide and arms-smuggling, in "The Conspiritors," a two-hour "Columbo" drama encoring as the "NBC Movie of the Week" Friday, Steptember 1, 9 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV.

Also guest-starring in the suspense drama are Jeanette Nolan, L.Q. Jones, Albert Paulsen and Bernard Hehrens.

While fronting for an Irish peace group, poet Joe Devlin arranges a candestine meeting with illicit arms dealer Vincent Pauley. When Pauley tries to pull off a doublecross, Devlin slays him even though it means eliminating his only source of illicit arms for Irish rebels.

Lieutenant Columbo attempts to link Devlin with Pauley on a few flimsy clues, but the happy poet tries to sidetrack the detective with his Irish charm, whiskey and a competitive game of darts at his favorite pub. In time, Columbo realizes the only hope he has of nabbing Devlin is to link him with the arms-smuggling caper.

UNUSUAL CLUE — When a gunrunner is slain, Lt. Columbo (Peter Falk) finds an important clue — an empty bottle of Irish Whisky — in "The Conspiritors," a "Columbo" drama to be rebroadcast on "The Movie of the Week," Friday, Sept. 1 (9-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Borg's Quest Highlights Events

Bjorn Borg will be shooting for the first U.S. Open title and his quest for the Grand Slam of Tennis when CBS Sports presents twenty-seven-and-one-half hours of exclusive coverage in the U.S. Open Championships from August 30 through September 10, at Flushing Meador, N.Y.

Jimmy Connors, Tracy Austin, Bjorn Borg (top, l to r), Martina Navratilova, Guillermo Vilas and Chris Evert (bottom, l to r) will be among the tennis greats expected to compete in the U.S. Open Tennis Championships at Flughins, N.Y. CBS Sports will broadcast live coverage of the Championships beginning Saturday, Sept. 2 from 1 to 5:45 p.m.

Having captured the French and Wimbledon titles, Borg needs the U.S. Open and Australian crowns to complete the Grand Slam, a feat last accomplished by Rod Laver in 1969.

Borg, the 22-year-old phenomenon from Sweden, has won more major international titles than anyone else in the sport at his age. He has taken Wimbledon three successive times (1976'77'78), the French Open three times (1974'75'78), and the Italian Open twice (1974 and 1978).

But Borg is not the only story on the international scene. The tempestuous Jimmy Connors looms as a major threat to stop Borg's Grand Slam march. The two have met 14 times, with Connors taking eight of the matches, but Borg has won five of the last six.

And, the hardcourt surface to be used in Louis Armstrong Stadium would seem to favor Connors' and Borg's game. Guillermo Vilas has shown his best form on clay, as evidence by his U.S. Open win at Forest Hills Stadium in 1977 on Har-tru — a surface similar to clay.

Connors, who has been a U.S. Open finalist in each of the last four years (winning in 1974 and 1976), will be one of the top seeds on the new, faster surface. Others who are expected to compete are Vitas Gerulaitis, Spain's Manuel Orantes, Arthur Ashe, John Newcombe, Eddie Dibbs, Harold Solomon and Brian Gottfried.

The women's international field is slated to draw defending champion Chris Evert, current Wimbledon champion Martina Navratilova, last year's U.S. runner-up, Wendy Turnbull, Evonne Goolagon Cawley, 1977 Wimbledon winner Virginia Wade, Billie Jean King, Betty Stove, and Tracy Austin, the 15-year-old sensation.

The 1978 U.S. Open Championships will have a new home for the first time since 1924. From 1924 through 1977, the National Championships were staged at Forest Hills Stadium, is part of the USTA National Tennis Center in Flushing Meadow Park, Corona, N.Y.

CBS Airs Hambleton Harness Racing Clips

CBS Sports, following its coverage of the United States Open Tennis Championships, will broadcast highlights of the 53rd annual Hambletonian, trotting's most prestigious race, Saturday, September 2, starting at 5:45 p.m.

Harness racing's classic race for 3-year-olds will again be run on the one-mile fairgrounds track in Du Quoin, Ill. It has been held there since 1957, when it was moved from Goshen, N.Y., after originating in 1926 in Syracuse, N.Y.

Billy Haughton, after winning last year's edition in world record time (1:55 3-5) with Green Speed, will be looking to tie Ben White for the most Hambletonian victories — four. The triumph with Green Speed tied him for second, at three "Hambo" victories, with Stanley Dancer, Del Cameron and Henry Thomas.

But it would seem Haughton's 23-year-old son, Peter, would have a better chance to win this year's race. Peter will drive Doublemint, the probable favorite, who has won three stakes races and been second once in four outings.

Billy Haughton's best trotter at this time appears to be Count's Pride, a fast-moving colt that has been finishing second and third behind the best in his class.

Doublemint's lone loss came after a six-week layoff (due to a splint bone problem) and his victory in the Matron, in Detroit, June 15. He was beaten by Brisco Hanover in New York in stakes and track record time in the Dexter Cup, July 29.

Two other colts rated a good chance are Speedy Somolli and Florida Pro. Speedy Somolli, the 2-year-old, champion in 1977, was a disappointing fifth in the Dexter Cup, but flashed his old form by taking the Founder's Gold Cup in Syracuse, earlier this season, in 1:57 4-5.

Florida Pro, driven by George Sholty, had an 11-race winning streak snapped by Speedy Somolli in the Founder's Gold Cup, in which he finished fifth. He had been a dominant factor among trotting colts his age this season until that race, and then finished third behind Brisco Hanover and Doublemint in the Dexter Cup.

Little League Championship Game

Coverage of the championship of the little League Baseball World Searies will be presented on "ABC's Wide World of Sports," Saturday, September 2, 5 to 6:30 p.m.

Some two-and-one-half million youngsters throughout the world are involved in Little League Baseball. A summer-long season culminates in this championship, played at the Meccas of Little League Baseball, Williamsport, Pennsylvania. Eight championship teams representing the United States South, East, North and West, Europe, Canada, Latin America and the Far East gather at Williamsport for the playoff series. The two teams making it through the playoffs will face each other in the championship game.

Howard J. Lamade Memorial Field, where the World Series Championship will be played, measures 205 feet down the left field and right field lines. It's 60 feet between bases, compared to 90 feet on a major league field. The Little League pitcher's rubber is 46 feet from home plate, compared to 60 feet, 6 inches in the big leagues.

Over the years, Little League Baseball has produced scores of fine athletes. Former Little Leaguers include Boog Powell, Mike Schmidt, George Foster, Don Sutton, Steve Garvey, Tom Seaver, Thurman Munson, Jim Palmer, Carlton Fisk, Reggie Jackson and Carl Yastrzemski.

Sportscaster Al Michaels will provide the play-by-play commentary.

"FRIENDLY FIRE" NOW UNDERWAY

Filming has begun in Stockton, California, on "Friendly Fire," a three-hour motion picture starring Carol Burnett, which will air on ABC-TV during the upcoming season.

Also starring in the production are Ned Beatty and Sam Waterson.

Miss Burnett plays a markedly different role from her previous television appearances as she portrays Peg Mullen, the mother of a young soldier whose death in Vietnam was attributed to "friendly fire."

Football Returns Saturday

NCAA football returns for 1978 with the season's opener set for Saturday, September 2, at 9 p.m. The contest will pit the pre-season's number one-rated team, Alabama, against another very formidable opponent from the top twenty — the Cornhuskers of Nebraska.

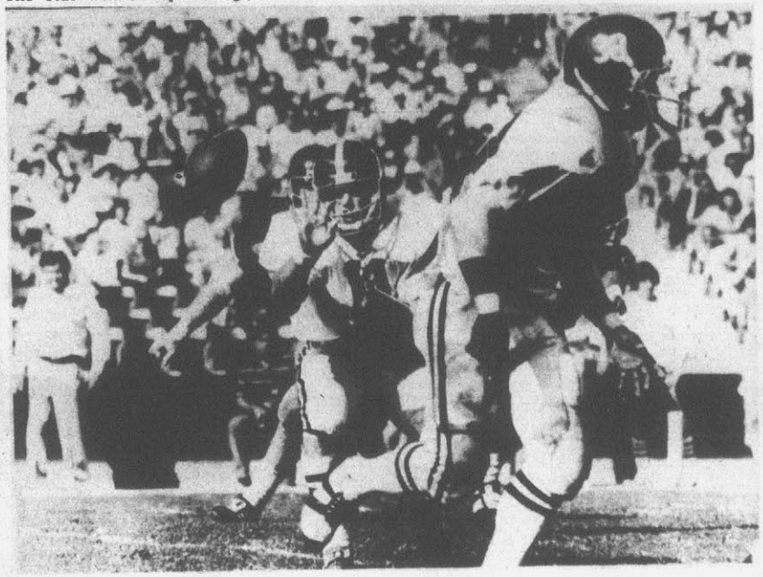

Last season Alabama had a 10-1 regular season, losing only to Nebraska, 31-24 in Lincoln. The 'Tide' went on to post a big 35-6 rout of Ohio State in the Sugar Bowl and finished second behind Notre Dame in the final poll.

In '78, Alabama plays a difficult schedule with four of the nation's preseason top twenty on board. Beside Nebraska, 'Bear' Bryant's boys meet Washington, Southern Cal and LSU.

For Nebraska, the moving forward of their schedule contest with Alabama, so as to accomodate televison and enable them to reap the dividends of the media, could possiblly present an obstacle to their National Title aspirations. Because of the scheduling, Nebraska has had to prepare themselves in a hurry, rather than having the luxury of not facing the powerful and experienced 'Tide' until the season's end.

There are several holes the Cornhuskers must fill in a hurry. With six offensive starters having departed since last year's liberty Bowl, only tackle Kelvin Clark and guard Steve Lindquist return to the blocking line. If the line doesn't 'jell' fast, Nebraska will not be able to run against the seasoned Alabama defense, led by tackle Marty Lyons and end Wayne Hamilton.

One of the key players to watch during the contest is Jeff Rutledge, brother of former Alabama quarterback Gary Rutledge, now with the New York Jets, who is perhaps the best quarterback in the nation. He will be throwing to Bruce Bolton and Keith Pugh as Bama does put the ball in the air more than other wishbones do.

The Nebraska Cornhuskers travel to Brimingham to meet the Crimson Tide of Alabama on the nationally televised season opener of "NCAA Football," Saturday, Sept. 2 at 9 p.m. on ABC-TV. Last year the Cornhuskers, with a 9-3 season record, handed the Tide their only loss in an 11-1 season.

Jayne Kennedy Joins CBS Team

Jayne Kennedy, an actress and sports enthusiast, will join Brent Musburger and Irv Cross as hosts of "The NFL Today," CBS Sports' Emmy Award-winning program broadcast throughout the National Football League Season. The show premieres for its 15th season Sunday, August 27 (1:30 to 1:45 p.m.), prior to the Cleveland Browns-New England Patriots pre-season clash.

The program, which updates and analyzes the football season each week, also will be broadcast in most areas at halftime and post-game, with highlights and details of other contests.

In addition, Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder will present his selections of the day's games and also have inside news about the world of sports on "The Greek's Grapevine." Jack Whitaker will present his timely commentaries on the program as well.

Ms. Kennedy was selected to replace Phyllis George after interviews and studio autitions with numerous candidates.

No stranger to television she has appeared in the dramatic series "Police Woman," "Police Story" and "Wonder Woman," and has also acted on such series as "Starsky and Hutch," "Sanford and Son," "The Six Million Dollar Man" and "Kojak." Ms. Kennedy also starred in the television movie "Cover Girls."

Two years ago, she was selected as the host of a one-half-hour pilot called "Yours in Sports." The concept was to feature noted athletes in personal settings, away from stadiums and arenas.

The 26-year-old native Ohioan was active in sports as a youngster, participating in track and field, volleyball and basketball. Among her numerous competitions was the state championships of the 1964 Junior Olympics.

Legendary Romance

He was called "the King" and was once MGM's top star. She was a wise-cracking comedienne who reigned as the country's number one actress on the Paramount lot. The 'he' and 'she' are Clark Gable and Carole Lombard, and together they are the subject of "Gable and Lombard," a nostalgic drama to be rebroadcast on "NBC Saturday night at the Movies" September 2, 9 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV. James Brolin and Jim Clayburgh star.

Gable (Brolin) and Carole (Clayburgh) meet at a Beverly Hills party, and she stages an elaborate practical joke that causes him to wreck his car.

When Gable demands that she pay for the damages to his 1932 roadster, a series of insults are exchanged and the actress ends the conversation with a perfectly placed swing at the actor's jaw.

When the two are brought together for a lunch to discuss a possible movie property in which the two stars would appear together, bad feelings erupt and the deal falls through.

After attending a party together, Gable and Lombard begin to spend time together and both are warned that if news of their romance — though he is still married — reached the businessmen who own the studios, a scandal will destroy their careers.

They continue seeing each other, however, and just when it appears that they will stay together, fate steps in and brings an unexpected end to their relationship.

The film depicts the two struggling with each other's shortcomings, with the pressures exerted by their studios, and with Gable's difficulty in obtaining a divorce. The dominant fact is that, at the heart of it all, they are just two ordinary kids who never loved until they found each other.

Washington, D.C. Wins

On a recent NBC Radio Network broadcast, satirist Mark Russell decided that the Nation's Capital would take a back seat to no other city in prestige. He proclaimed Washington, D.C., the winner of the New York City look-alike contest.

Said Russell: "Congratulations, Washington, you've won. Throughout the history of Washington, D.C., its citizens have had it lorded over them that even though it was the Nation's Capital, New York had the glamour, culture and real dazzle while Washington was podunk on the Potomac.

"The Gotham snobs were always quick to remind us about their opera, their symphony, museums and theatre and smirked at the fact when a ballet came to Washington, it was forced to perform in a dilapidated sports arena. So it went.

"'A pedestal looking for a mounment,' Dickens once called it; 'Sleepy Southern Town' became the most frequent cliche; and John F. Kennedy once proclaimed Washington to be a city with northern charm and southern efficiency. Well, the score has been evened somewhat in recent years; concert halls and museums openings are as common as lobbyist cocktail parties.

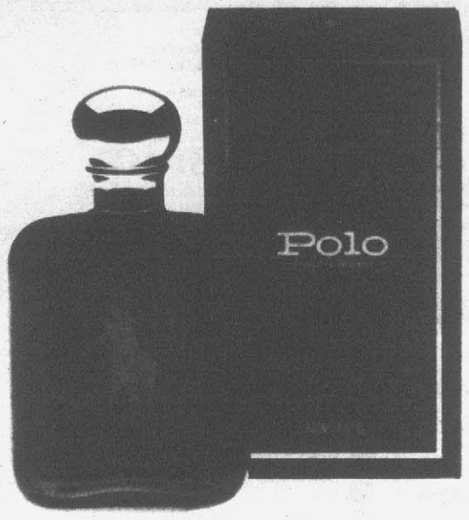

Van Patten Stars

Joyce Van Patten stars as Lyla Plant, an ex-taxi dancer married to Augie Plant (Norman Alden), one of her best ex-customers, and now settled in a rundown house in a borderline neighborhood of a Southern California suburb, in "The Plant Family," half-hour comedy, Saturday, Sept. 2 8:30 to 9 p.m. on CBS-TV.

Sharing Augie and Lyla's home are Geneva (Jo Marie Payton), one of Lyla's taxi-dancing pals and her teen-age son, Homer Jay (Dewayne Jessie), and Lyla's unmarried brother, Leo (Jesse White).

Ava (Kay Herberle), a married teen-age daughter of Augie and Lyla's, keeps moving in and out of the house, depending on the status of her marriage at the time.

POLO for men

The freshness of the dry woody notes is the result of the addition of romantic herbs...touches of basil and chamomile. Oakmoss and tobacco leaves add great warmth and rich resonant leather notes complete the blend with the vibrancy that makes Polo a truly Sporting Scent.

We Don't Sell No-Name Labels!...But we do sell well-known private labels at NO-NAME prices!

Kroger Private Label Price

No Name Price

WHY BUY A CAN OF CORN WITH NO BRAND NAME AND UNCERTAIN QUALITY...WHEN YOU CAN BUY BRANDS YOU KNOW, COMPETITIVELY PRICED & COMPLETELY GUARANTEED?

The fact is that there is almost no difference between the costs of plain labels and brand labels. And that small difference is much less than economies of higher volume enjoyed by many brand labels.

For years Kroger has been offering many items with brand names such as Avondale and Embassy...all unconditionally guaranteed to satisfy. We have no intention of cutting the quality of these products. But we urge you to check prices of the new no-brand products against the prices on Kroger Brand Products at Kroger Sav-On.

Certain news coverage might lead you to believe that so-called "Generic Labels" (that is, items packaged in plain labels without brand names) may be the solution to rising food costs. That just isn't so.

These unbranded products are now appearing in some supermarkets. At first glance, it seems to make sense that lower-quality products with cheaper looking labels could be made and sold at very low cost.

Kroger Sav-on FOOD AND DRUG STORE

unit pricing

...for wiser shopping and saving

Unit pricing in Your Kroger Sav-on store helps you — the consumer — shop more wisely by providing you with valuable price comparison information. It is one of the many informational aids you'll find at Kroger to assist you in getting the best buy for your food dollar.

On your Kroger Sav-on shelves, you'll see by each product a tag which shows both the total price and the unit price...so that you can see at a glance which of comparable products is lowest in price. The "unit price" is shown as "per ounce," "per quart," "50-count — whatever the appropriate measure is for the product.

Unit pricing can help you compare prices:

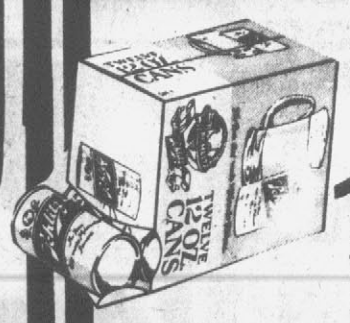

--Between like products (e.g., various brands and sizes of creamed corn, but not creamed vs. vacuum-packed corn).

--Between different brands, even when they vary slightly in size (such as a 29-oz. can for 41¢ vs. a 25-oz. can at 3 for $1).

--Between different sizes of the same brand (16 oz. for 24¢ vs. 29 oz. for 36¢).

Unit pricing cannot tell you about other factors which might affect your purchase decision, such as flavor, but it will provide the price information which is an important part of judging which product is the best buy for you. Use unit pricing...and save.

Folger's Coffee comes in 3 grinds — regular, electric perc and drip.

It tastes so delicious, Folger's is the leading brand in most of the country. Has been for years. Folger's is specially blended to give you a rich, full flavor that no other coffee quite matches. It even smells delicious! And Folger's is mountain grown. That's the richest, most aromatic kind of coffee there is.

It's the same delicious mountain grown Folger's. But it's flaked to release more rich flavor — so you use less. If you normally use 5 measures per pot you only need 4 measures of Folger's Flaked Coffee. So the 13 ounce can makes as many cups as a full pound. Try delicious Folger's Coffee or Folger's Flaked Coffee, they're both 100% pure coffee.

Save 20¢ on Comet Liquid...the bathroom cleanser that clings.

Comet Liquid clings to start loosening dirt even before you rub. (The tougher the dirt, the longer you leave it...up to 30 minutes.) Then, with some scrubbing, even this tough job comes clean.

Disinfects. Comet Liquid clings up under the toilet bowl rim where odor-causing germs hide.

Easier on finishes than most powders. Kinder to porcelain, chrome and many of today's new surfaces.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

Tennis: going public all the way.

FOR ED FABRICIUS, public-relations director, U.S. Tennis Association

After all these years, why is the U.S. Open being moved from Forest Hills? Where is it going, and will the event lose any of its prestige because of the transfer? —L.K., Albany, N.Y.

● Since 1923 the tournament has been held at Forest Hills N.Y., because of an agreement between the United States Tennis Association (U.S.T.A.) and the West Side Tennis Club (W.S.T.C.). Last year the contract expired and we could not come to an agreement with the W.S.T.C., so we decided that we would build our own public facilities. The key word is "public"; up to now it has been a private club. We will have a stadium in nearby Flushing Meadows that will seat 19,500 instead of Forest Hills' 13,500. We will have a great deal more space and many more courts open to the public at a nominal charge. And no prestige will be lost.

For 1979: still more Roots.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

What can you tell me about the TV sequel to Roots, and will there be a Roots: Part III? —H.I., Oceanside, Calif.

● Roots: The Next Generations, whose 8-month shooting schedules began in April, will not be called a "sequel." Said executive producer David L. Wolper: "A sequel means you finish the story and someone goes out and writes a new part or makes up a new story based on something in the original. This, though, is a continuation of Roots. We couldn't do the whole book in 12 hours, just most of it. Since we have four more generations to cover, we're really continuing the story." The 14-hour show, which will be seen early in '79, spans the period 1882-1970 and takes place in Henning, Tenn., and France, where Alex Haley's father was in World War I; the Pacific, where Alex was in the Coast Guard during World War II and in Ithaca, N.Y., and New York City.

FOR KAREN BLACK, star of Ripoff

How can you be the "devoted mother" you claim to be when you spend most of your time gallivanting around the world making movies? —J.C., Little Rock, Ark.

● I'm never away from my son Hunter, 2½, for more than six hours at a time. I take him with me everywhere I go. We have a van, complete with a room that has Hunter's bed and rocking chair — and it comes with us around the world.

FOR MIKE DOUGLAS, TV host and author of Mike Douglas: My Story

What's more popular on your show — safe or controversial subjects? —T.W., Bangor, Maine

● Give me the controversial ones — as long as we can shed some light on them. But not controversy for the sake of it or a steady diet of sex and titillation. Responsibility is the key word. And while our show is primarily entertainment, we have dealt with gut issues from our very beginning.

FOR GEORGE R. ARIYOSHI, Gov. of Hawaii

A major study shows residents of Hawaii live longer than residents of any other state. Why? —G.H., Seattle, Wash.

● It's probably due to our "double" sunshine — our warm and health-giving Hawaiian sun (which makes our islands the world's ideal place for sun energy development), and the sunshine and charm of our "aloha spirit," which warms the heart and makes people want to live a long time. And we do have big-city life, too, in Honolulu.

FOR MARLENE DIETRICH, actress

I know you're working on your memoirs, but what about acting? Have you given it up forever? —H.M., Terre Haute, Ind.

● No. You'll soon be seeing me in Just a Gigolo, with David Bowie. Do you know what it takes for an actress to come out of retirement after 17 years away from the screen? A good script — and a very good reflection in the mirror.

FOR MARY E. CLARKE, Brigadier General, GS Director, Women's Army Corps

● Better. In 1945 the very existence of a women's corps was the subject of hot debate. All of that changed, but only in the 1970's. Today women may be assigned to most units and job specialties, the only exceptions being specified combat units and the infantry.

FOR RUTH MAXWELL, author of The Booze Battle

Why do some people get drunk after only one drink? —I.P., Mesa, Ariz.

● When we know more about alcohol tolerance, we'll have a definitive answer. Meanwhile, I'd watch that slugging of glass after glass because, significantly, most alcoholics report an unusually high tolerance for alcohol during the early years of their drinking. On the other hand, social drinkers frequently complain of feeling drunk after just one drink.

PRO AND CON

Should Drivers Be Retested Periodically?

PRO Donald J. Bardell, Executive Director, American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators

The A.A.M.V.A. in its Policy and Position Statement advocates the re-examination of driver applicants at least every 4 years. This examination would generally consist of a vision screening and knowledge of the rules of the road, although as a bare-bones minimum we would favor a vision screening. Those who oppose this requirement believe it to be too costly and without scientific basis as an effective traffic-safety countermeasure. An argument for the requirement of a rules-of-the-road examination is that it is the most effective way to ensure that drivers possess the necessary knowledge of current laws and regulations pertaining to motor vehicles.

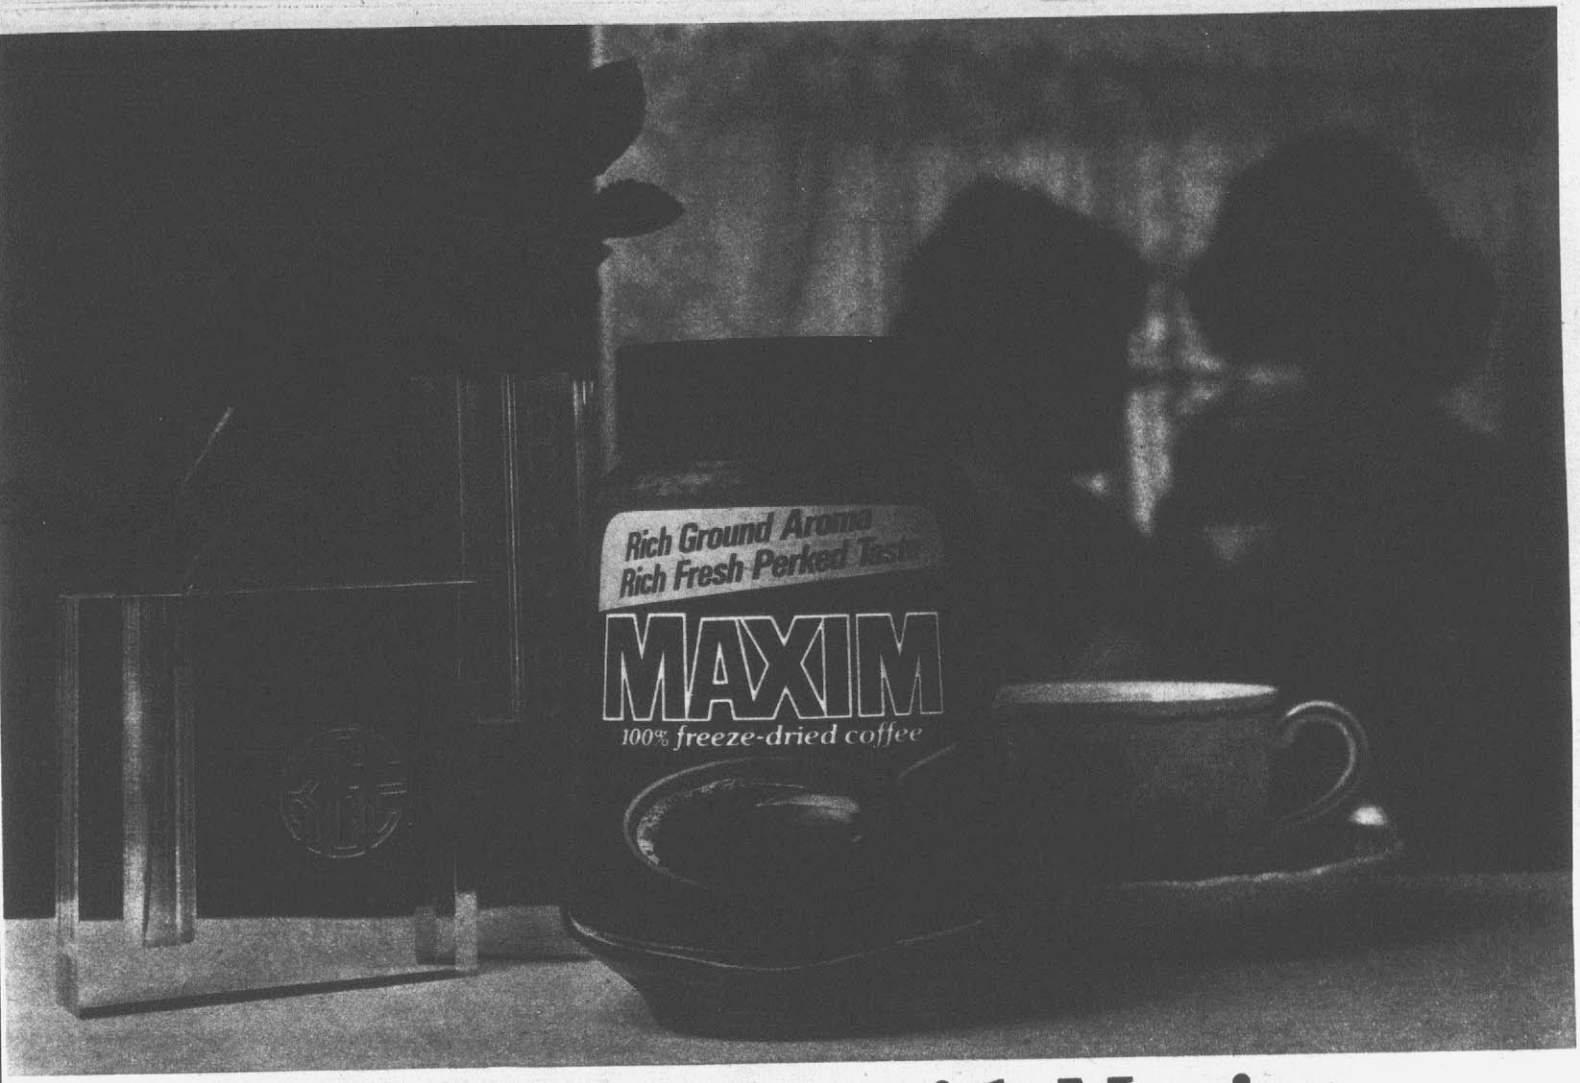

Illustration by Hal Just

CON Edward T. Hall, (R.) State Senator, Maryland

I have always opposed the automatic retesting of drivers, particularly as it affects senior citizens living in rural areas. Many, as you know, do not have other methods of transportation — there are no streetcars, buses, mass transportation. Many of these people drive merely from their homes to the store or to a pharmacy or to a doctor's office, never leaving the county in which they reside. An additional reason that I am against retesting is that it would be costly to administer. Also, retesting a driver's vision or his knowledge of rules of the road would not eliminate the problem of getting the drug-and-alcohol abuser off the road.

OUTWARD BOUND ON AN INWARD JOURNEY

By Bob Weinstein

"I found that I had more in me to give than I thought I had. When I got back I wanted to simplify my life." —Librarian

"I came here knowing my body was in for a workout. This was true, but the surprise was what my mind was in for." —Schoolteacher

"I'm sure glad it's over with, but I did a lot more growing up in these three weeks than I would have in three years." —Minister

"Outward Bound is something you carry with you. As Erich Fromm said about love: it's not a feeling, it's a way of living." —Stockbroker

"It's like getting 50 years of life compressed into just 25 days, and then becoming 21 again." —Physician

"I've never experienced such physical and mental stress, but at the same time I found that I could handle it." —Waitress

"I did the best I could, and I'm proud of myself." —Construction Foreman

Charles Wittman, a 33-year-old designer-engineer from Copaigue, N.Y., recalls his Outward Bound experience as if it happened just the other day. He spent a week and a half on Hurricane Island, located 10 miles off the rugged coast of Maine, in self-imposed daily torture. For his pain and discomfort, Wittman paid $275. That was three years ago. Today he'd have to pay $400.

No, Outward Bound is not a program of extended sadomasochism. Yes, it can be painful — but it also produces physical, mental and spiritual satisfaction. As one OB veteran, recalling a three-week ordeal, puts it, "It was hard but it was challenging. I think the challenge is necessary because life itself is a challenge. Outward Bound just fits it into a nutshell."

The basic philosophy of Outward Bound is that a person can develop confidence, concern for others and self-awareness when confronted by unusual, shared experiences involving service and adventure. OB puts this idea into effect by conducting strenuous courses in remote wilderness areas in which students are pushed beyond their limits so that they're able to do things they never felt were possible.

Charles Wittman's Outward Bound experience was atypically typical. He recalls spending a night on the ocean huddled in a two-masted craft — no bigger than a lifeboat — in the middle of a raging thunderstorm.

"When the storm stopped," he says, "we rowed from two or three in the morning till noon the next day in order to get back to Hurricane Island. There have been people who have had to row for four and five days on end.

"Practically everyone in our boat suffered from some degree of exposure. One guy had a pretty bad case of seasickness. When we finally got back, we just pulled in on the rocks and lay down exhausted. But it was a good feeling. It was the single most significant experience of my life."

For Charles Wittman, more was to come. There was the culminating "solo," three days and two nights in the wilderness, alone. He recalls, "They took me to an island and gave me minimal provisions, consisting of a jug of water, matches, a first-aid kit, a plastic tarpaulin, a sleeping bag and a Euell Gibbons book on what is edible and how to cook it.

"Looking back, I don't think I spent my time wisely. I got so into being Robinson Crusoe that I didn't use the opportunity fully."

When Wittman returned to "civilization" (he is one of 1,094 students from 42 different states who have graduated from Hurricane Island's Outward Bound program to date, the majority of whom completed a 21-to-26-day course for a fee ranging from $550 to $750), things had changed. The lessons he had learned in the wilderness carried over to his everyday life. He says, "I discovered that many of the so-called essentials are not really essentials."

This program originally started as a kind of naval operation during World War II. The late Kurt Hahn, who was an educator, developed an action-oriented "school" for personal growth to train British seamen. Out of it came Outward Bound.

More than 35,000 men, women and youngsters (16½ is the bottom age limit, but no one who is willing, curious and healthy is considered too old) have graduated from six Outward Bound programs in the United States since 1962, when the first OB "school" opened in Colorado. (For information call, toll-free, 800-243-8520.) The more than 6,000 annual U.S. graduates come from every state of the union and from every socioeconomic background. For those who can't afford the courses, scholarships are available, so that in the year 1977, $750,000 was set aside for 1,801 adults and youngsters who otherwise couldn't afford to participate in the program. OB is a nonprofit operation, with student fees accounting for only about half the income and the rest coming from private, foundation and corporate contributions.

Depending on the geographical locations of various U.S. programs, participants meet challenges that are indigenous to each place.

One student, Andy Cahn, a 41-year-old, seventh-grade schoolteacher from Armonk, N.Y., saw a National Geographic documentary on Outward Bound, but he wasn't convinced until a 53-year-old friend took the nine-day North Carolina course and suggested he give it a try.

Andy did. Ten people — six men and four women, ranging in age from 23 to 59 — enrolled in the nine-day adult course with him. "They were all there for seemingly one reason," he says. "To find out more about themselves."

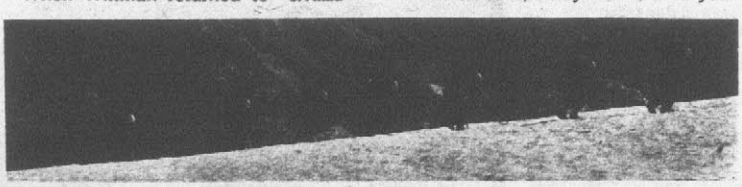

From the very first moment that he arrived in the wooded mountain country, Cahn was swept up into the OB life-style. The first three days were spent in climbing rocks. Then there was a three-day backpacking trip and a couple of days of white-water rafting. The OB regimen culminated with a seven-mile marathon run and a 24-hour "solo."

"Everyone did it all — and I think that is one of the amazing things about Outward Bound," says Cahn. "Throughout the nine days we all learned to take pride in other people's accomplishments, their successes, as well as our own. There was one woman who moved at a much slower pace, yet she managed to get through it all."

A year later, Andy's wife took the same course, and now they plan to enroll in one together. "It was an experience that was physically enervating," Andy says. "But more important, it taught me that everybody can't do things at the same pace I can. I've become a more patient person."

Even Henry W. Taft, Outward Bound's 50-year-old president, took a mountaineering course with a group of 18-year-olds two years ago. What happens to almost everyone who goes through Outward Bound also applies to Taft.

Perhaps 26-year-old Suzanne Gabbett, an OB graduate who is now a full-fledged Outward Bound instructor in Minnesota sums up the experience best: "The transformation is just incredible." FW

THE UNTROUBLED HEART OF GOLDIE

Acclaim for Foul Play has put a glow on her face, but it's only the topping to a new sense of contentment after five trauma-filled years.

By Tony Chiu

Chevy Chase and Goldie during a "safe" moment in Foul Play.

The fear that gnaws at show-biz stars is that when they're out of the spotlight for even a little while, their faces will be forgotten. That is why performers with no recent movie, show, play or album to plug will drop in on talk shows just to publicize themselves. Goldie Hawn is the exception that bends the rule. Although her current big-screen comedy-thriller, Foul Play, is only her second movie since 1973, she hasn't spent the past five years dropping in on Merv and Dinah and Mike to trade fudge recipes. So why is Hawn, at age 32, feeling so good about her career?

First, even though she's been relatively inactive, her face hasn't been forgotten. Goldie's CBS special last spring, her first major TV appearance in six years, drew such encouraging audience response that she'll do another come fall.

Second, because she's so keen on Foul Play: "I think it's great, it's funny, it's bizarre. It appeals to the weird side of me." "Bizarre" and "weird," indeed; the movie's seemingly uncomedic premise is no less than that of papal assassination. Yet film critics and moviegoers agree with Goldie when she uses the word "magical" to characterize the on-screen magnetism between co-star Chevy Chase and herself. Long before Foul Play opened, the team of Hawn and Chase was offered more scripts by producers who'd only screened the rough-cut.

Two years later she met Bill Hudson, of the singing Hudson Brothers, and soon decided he was the man with whom to have a family. And so even as she was filing for divorce, Goldie and Bill started on their family.

But Trikonis, whose own earnings paled before Goldie's, invoked California's community property law and asked her for a settlement of $75,000. As the bitter suit dragged through the courts, a new life began to grow and stir within Goldie's body.

"It was really amazing," she says in retrospect about her pregnancy, "but I didn't receive any repercussions at all because of my condition. It was probably the changed times — in the old days, it would have been scan-dal upon scan-dal." Finally the divorce came through, freeing her to wed Bill. "Boy, it was up to the last minute," Hawn says with a grin, as she recalls the wedding ceremony that took place in the late summer of 1976. "I was really big."

After that cliff-hanger there should have been a happy fadeout. There wasn't. Not only was Oliver Hudson born one month late, by means of a Caesarean section, but, Goldie says, the infant was stricken with "what they call 'meconium aspiration.' It happens to a lot of Caesarean babies — they inhale the meconium, which is their first bowel movement, and then they develop pneumonia." After two touch-and-go weeks, Oliver was at last removed from the respirator and brought home.

For the next year, motherhood was much more important to Goldie than her career. "It's more demanding than I could have dreamed," Goldie admits, "in the sense of an emotional attachment. It's not that I have to be there every moment, just feeling the need to be there. I love working, but, you know, even when I'm working I want to be home. It's like having another soul within your soul."

Today Oliver is a robust picture of health, and so Goldie has resumed her career, although with a completely changed perspective. "I really feel that I'm reemerging in a wholly different way," she says. "It's exciting to experience growth — and that's hard to do because I was young when I first made it in the business."

Although she was only 22 when she escalated to show-biz stardom, Goldie's preparation for her career-to-come began in her home town of Takoma Park, Md., at the age of 3 when she learned to dance. Her musician father and dance-instructor mother encouraged her. Despite her obvious talent, the little girl lacked self-confidence.

Today Goldie also remembers herself as being a self-conscious adolescent. She says, "I didn't really consider myself very attractive. My eyes were too big, my nose was flat, I hadn't grown out yet. I wasn't one of the girls that they always asked out for dates. In fact, I had to get myself a date for my senior prom. I was a really, really late starter."

But when she decided that she definitely wanted to be an actress, Hawn hit fast. At 19 she was a drama major at American University where, as she recalls, "I won an award for best-supporting actress for, of all things, Kafka's The Trial." Just three years later, after chorus-line stints in New York, Puerto Rico and Las Vegas (and when money ran low, at a go-go joint in New Jersey), Goldie became the golden ding-a-ling of the epochal NBC comedy, Laugh-In. But the sock-it-to-me burlesque bits palled after two-and-a-half seasons, so Goldie quit to make her first movie. For Cactus Flower she won the Oscar for "Best-Supporting Actress." Hawn was all of 25.

Starring roles in eight more movies — including the hits Shampoo and Butterflies Are Free and the underrated Sugarland Express — have led to a five-bedroom, antique-filled house on a California beach north of Malibu.

But Goldie, Bill and Oliver won't see much of home this summer — with Bill and his brothers Hudson in London filming episodes of Bonkers, a syndicated TV show premiering this fall, and Goldie in Italy filming A Trip with Anita, a farinaceous farce co-starring Giancarlo Giannini of Swept Away and Seven Beauties fame.

Steve Schapiro / Sygma

"I wouldn't have taken this film had it been anywhere else but in Europe," Hawn explains, "because I wouldn't want to be that far from Bill for that long a time. We're facing our first separation, which is not very much fun, but this way we'll be able to rendezvous once a week."

When the family returns to the United States, Goldie will begin preparing for her second CBS special, which she'll co-produce. "I don't want full control," she says, "because I don't want to lose my objectivity. But I do like to have the power to say, 'I don't like that.'" The fact that Hawn has been given that power — as well as, routinely, a percentage of her movies' profits — reflects not only her stature in the industry but also her shrewdness as a businesswoman.

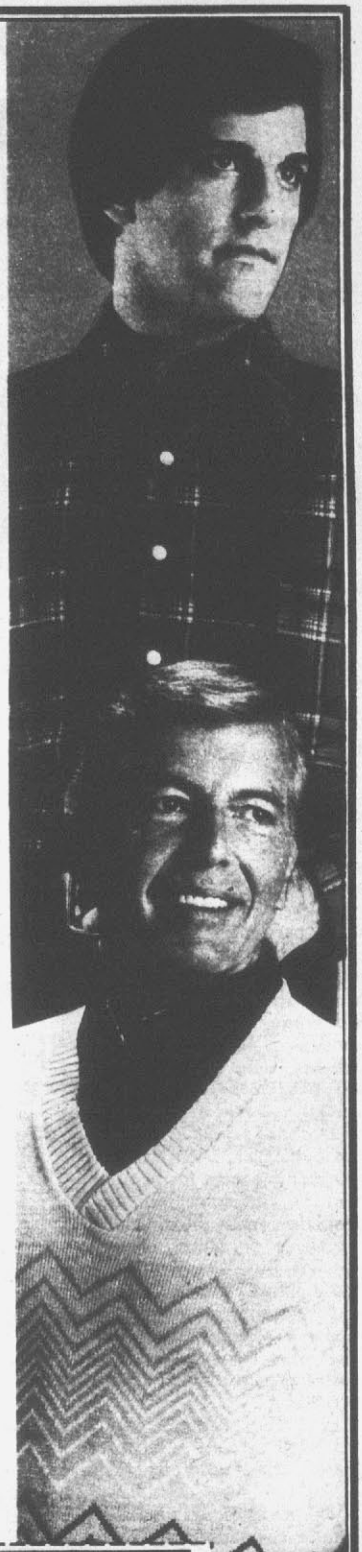

And after that? Although Goldie and Bill plan to increase the size of the Hudson family, Hawn's work calendar is beginning to fill up. She'd like to star in a Las Vegas cabaret act that would draw on her musical-comedy training. "I've abandoned it, and it's a waste," she says. "It's something that I love, and should be doing." And, of course, more films.

Goldie's heartened that the scripts now coming her way often involve "more mature people, and they're not always funny," for she'd love to shuck the last vestiges of her giddy-blonde image. Hawn doesn't emphasize the fact that she's sympathetic to feminism, but the movie she's most eager to launch involves the experiences of two married women; her dream package would be Lily Tomlin co-starring with her — and director Lee Grant calling the shots.

So the ambition is still there, but as Goldie looks back on the past five years, she muses, "People said to me, 'You're taking this time off. Aren't you frightened you're not going to be able to get back into the swing of things? That people will forget you?' I never feared that. I always felt I could open a dancing school if things got rough, and I still feel that way. It may not be as glamorous, but I certainly did enjoy it years ago when I was a dancing teacher. I never spent a happier time."

Then, perhaps thinking of her newfound happiness — of her son Oliver, who's fast approaching 30 pounds even as he approaches his second birthday, and of her husband Bill — Goldie smiles and says, "I still believe the family is the thing. I don't have to be in front of a camera to be fulfilled." FW

IS THERE AN HMO IN YOUR FUTURE?

It can lower your medical bills drastically — and give you excellent health care.

By Donna Buys

What is a health-maintenance organization? You're wrong if you guessed a gymnasium or a reducing salon. In part, an HMO is based on the ancient Chinese custom of paying doctors when you're healthy and prosperous so that they'll treat you when you're ill and poor.

Before we find out how an HMO works, let's look briefly at one of the 6.5 million people who are served by such organizations.

A 60-year-old man developed botulism, a form of food poisoning, and spent 154 days in intensive care at a Kaiser-Permanente medical center and another 30 days in its regular hospital unit. The cost of his hospitalization and treatment was $200,000.

He didn't have to pay this staggering amount because he had voluntarily enrolled in an HMO that provides comprehensive care—usually ranging from preventive treatment to coverage for out-of-state emergency service. Instead of receiving steep bills he just kept on paying the $48-a-month fee—the same amount he'd been paying since he first signed up for the plan, which covers all medical expenses for him and his wife. (In some instances, employers make these periodic payments on behalf of their workers. By law, any company that employs 25 or more people and currently covers them under a medical-benefit plan must offer them the option of enrolling in an HMO, if one exists nearby.)

In 1973, after discovering that such prepaid health programs deliver comprehensive health care at a cost that is 20-30-percent lower than comparable coverage provided by non-HMO insurance, the United States Congress passed a law to provide funds for establishing more HMO's.

In the last five years the number of HMO members has grown from 4.3 million to 6.5 million and is expected to reach more than 13 million within the next three to five years, according to Joseph A. Califano Jr., Secretary of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

How does an HMO differ from other health insurance? Coverage such as that offered by Blue Cross compensates policy-holders after they have run up expenses because of illness. The insurance company usually holds back a "deductible charge" once a year and then pays 80 percent of the remainder. But for a flat monthly fee that ranges from $25 to $50 an HMO covers a person for everything, from major surgery to prescriptions, from pregnancy to psychiatric treatment.

Other HMO advantages:

- Hospitalization is kept to a minimum—partly by having many diagnostic tests on an outpatient basis. Under other kinds of insurance the expense for such tests is reimbursed only if the patient is a hospital patient. This encourages more hospitalization—which translates into inconvenience for the person being tested and greater overall costs.
- Physicians receive a salary and have no financial incentive to urge office visits.
- Preventive care is encouraged; this is cost-efficient in the long run because serious illnesses are thwarted earlier.
- A wide variety of specialists is available under one roof, which facilitates doctors' ability to consult with each other on a particular case.

Employers also benefit when they cover their workers by prepaid health plans. For example, the Ford Motor Company saved $200 million last year with 5 percent of its employees enrolled in an HMO. Premium payments by employers to HMO is relatively low, according to the Office of Health Maintenance Organizations of HEW, because the average cost of belonging to a group in many regions of the country is less than the expense of being covered just for hospitalization under other forms of insurance.

Despite the many benefits to individuals and companies offered by HMO's, there have been some complaints. The most frequent criticism of the Kaiser program, which is the largest with 3.4 million subscribers, is that patients have to wait too long for service at the medical center. The problem stems from the fact that this particular HMO is so popular that it's been oversubscribed. Kaiser is trying to remedy the situation by not allowing new enrollments until at least 1980.

Fee-for-service physicians accuse HMO's of delivering inferior, impersonal care and claim that patients abuse the program by going to a doctor for unnecessary reasons. But 90 percent of patients who join HMO's are satisfied with the treatment they receive, according to the Office of Health Maintenance Organizations. And a Kaiser cardiologist in Los Angeles asserts that there is only a small number of patients who take advantage of it.

Acceptance of HMO's is growing among doctors. According to a Medical World News survey, "Pro-HMO sentiment is no longer confined to a small group of relatively idealistic physicians." Perhaps one of the most significant demonstrations of decreasing resistance to HMO's is the recent decision by the American Medical Association to offer its employees in Chicago the option of signing up with one of two HMO's or with the AMA's traditional hospitalization insurance plan.

It has been estimated that within several years HMO programs will be available to 75-85 percent of the population. To this end—and as a corrective to skyrocketing medical costs—HEW head Califano has vowed: "We intend to help make it possible for every American to have the option of joining a health-maintenance organization." IF YOU NEED TO BUILD UP YOUR BLOOD DON'T COUNT ON VITAMINS

Iron poor blood is the most widespread nutritional ailment in America today. And taking vitamins can't help, because vitamins don't contain iron.

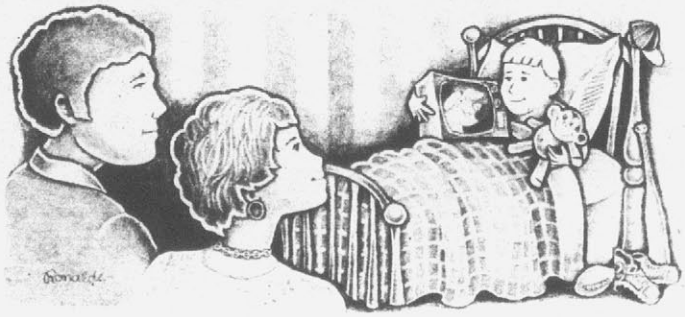

Take Geritol, every day. Geritol is so rich in iron, each tablet contains more iron than even a pound of calf's liver. Plus vitamins important to your health.

Geritol's iron will actually build your blood back to normal. That's what makes it different from just plain vitamins—and so important to you.

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

THE WAY CHILDREN REALLY ARE TRUE OR FALSE?

1. TV occupies so much of children's time and has such an impact on them that the resulting emotional attachment causes many to like television better than their parents.

2. A child's self-concept — how much he thinks of himself and how he rates himself as a human being — depends to a large extent on his physical strength and the degree to which he can throw his weight around in his relationships with his schoolmates.

3. A child's concept of good and bad behavior undergoes an interesting change as he grows older.

4. By the time a boy reaches late adolescence, he usually comes to believe that it's his father who understands him best.

5. When a child is an early reader it is usually the parents rather than the child who deserves most of the credit.

ANSWERS

1. True. A Longwood College (Va.) study compared "the degree of their attachment to their parents by presenting the following questions: 'Which do you like better: TV or Daddy?' and 'Which do you like better: TV or Mommy?'" Subjects were a random selection of 156 children aged 4 to 6 years, from four different schools. Results? In response to the first question, 44 percent preferred TV, and 56 percent preferred Daddy. To the second question, just 20 percent preferred TV and a significantly greater number (80 percent) preferred Mommy.

2. False. University of Northern Colorado studies of elementary schoolchildren in a 10-and 11-year-old age group compared physical strength and athletic prowess (standing broad jump to measure leg strength and power, performance of pushups and other tests) with their self-concept scores on a standard psychological test indicating how well they thought of themselves. Conclusion of the study: there is no significant relationship between positive self-concept scores and positive muscular-strength scores in either boys or girls.

3. True. In studies of schoolchildren in various age brackets at Saint Mary's University and Dalhousie University (Canada), it was found that as a child grows older he tends to view good and bad behavior in quite a different way than when he was younger. For example, when children with a median age of 8 years were asked the questions, "What does it mean to be good?" and "What does it mean to be bad?" most answered in a negative manner, such as "Good is not breaking windows," "Good is not hitting somebody" or "Bad is not being good." Older children, however, conceived of good and bad in a positive way — indicating they had consideration for the welfare and/or feelings of other people — such as "Good is when you help somebody" or "Bad is when you hurt somebody."

4. False. Behavioral specialists from the University of New Mexico and Westfield State College (Mass.) asked 413 male college students to fill out a rating scale in which each was to report how much he felt understood by his father, mother, best male friend, best female friend, favorite teacher or anyone else he chose to designate. Ratings were on a 7-point scale ranging from "virtually a total stranger" to "complete understanding." The results show that "sons felt relatively more understood by their best friends than they did by their fathers." Commenting on their findings, the testers noted, "What is astonishing is the relatively low ranking of the father." They suggest that the lack of father-son closeness may be necessary for a son's movement toward autonomy.

5. True. Studies at the University of Rochester show that "parents of early readers took their children to the library more often [than others], read to their children at an early age and created a language environment for them." And the investigators conclude that though it had been previously assumed that early reading was the consequence of both the parents' influence and the spontaneous interest on the part of the child, "Our results suggest that this may not be the case and that parents' rather than children's interest may be the main motivational determinant of early reading." Genuine Porcelain 22-Karat Gold-Trimmed IMARI-STYLE COLLECTOR'S PLATES

Wonderful news for lovers of fine Oriental Porcelain! Collectors today are paying astronomical prices for genuine Imari ware, according to a feature article in a famous national newspaper. A famous San Francisco store specializing in Oriental Antiques stated that slightly chipped or cracked Imari pieces would sell today for $125 to $225 each. Perfect 17th Century pieces bring $5,000 or more, but even 20th Century Imari is now being collected!

Our exclusive Imari-style plates come from Honshu rather than Kyushu, but you'd have to be an expert on Oriental porcelain to know that . . . they have the same kind of intricate "Nishikide" (brocade) patterns intermixed with "Pana" (floral) designs and landscapes. They display the same range of brilliant "Kakiemon" colors — from the distinctive "iron red" maroon and dark "cobalt" blue, to bluish-green turquoise, light blue and yellow. And each plate is lavishly trimmed with genuine 22K. gold, both on the rim and in the design itself!

Each of the four delicate, intricate designs is different, both in subject and in the rich colors used — so a single plate is a jewel to be admired — and the complete set of 4 a decorator's dream come true! Create a lavish, eye-catching wall or cabinet display, or actually use them as dessert or butter plates or candy dishes, to beautify your company table and win guests' compliments!

Hurry, order your set of these exquisite 6½" plates today — and if you're not totally delighted and thrilled with their beauty and workmanship — if a single admiring guest can even come close to guessing how little you paid — return them within 14 days and we'll cheerfully refund your money (except postage, handling and insurance). A MONTH-BY-MONTH GUIDE TO BARGAIN-BUYING

By Bob Rosenblatt

In Family Weekly's last issue we gave some tips on how to s-t-r-e-t-c-h your budget to beat inflation. Here are some additional helpful hints.

Monthly bargains can add up to substantial annual savings. Here's an abbreviated almanac of timely buying tips, courtesy of the National Consumer Finance Association, that you can mark off on your calendar for ready reference:

January Appliances, blankets, sheets and towels, radios, toys and stereo equipment.

June Frozen foods, furniture and lumber.

July Air conditioners, freezers and refrigerators, fuel oil

August New cars, coats, furs, window curtains and drapes.

December Men's and women's shoes, blankets and quilts, used cars.

By buying seasonal and monthly bargains, you should have some extra money — even after you pay your regular bills. Before depositing it in a savings account, shop around for the best deal to insure maximum income. Remember, interest payments can be figured in so many different ways that the same amount of deposited money can earn as much as $79.13 a year at one savings institution and as little as $29.25 at another — although in both cases the interest is calculated in terms of the same basic rate.

What's necessary, then, is for you to find out the method of interest calculation before you open an account. You get the best return on your savings when interest is compounded daily and paid from day of deposit to day of withdrawal.

If you're able to tie up money for longer periods of time, the rewards are greater. Accounts where the money is untouched for 90 days to eight years draw higher and higher rates, depending on how long you keep your money in that savings institution.

When you need to borrow money, make sure you know the annual percentage rate (APR), which is the real interest charge. You might call a bank and be told that the interest rate is $6 per $100 per year. But that bit of information doesn't reveal how the charge is calculated or whether the interest is deducted in advance from the money you borrow. The APR might be 10.9 percent or 11.58 percent, varying with the method of calculation. Find out the APR before you sign any loan papers. It's a shock to think that the rate is only 6 percent and then discover that the actual charge is almost double that.

Don't be embarrassed to shop for the best loan terms over the phone. Banks, savings and loan associations and credit unions are merchants: their product happens to be money. FW

Grass Seed Will Never Grow A Lawn Like This!

From Part Shade To Full Sun!

Save Now. Special Introductory Offer. Up To 200 Amazoy Zoysia Grass Plugs FREE

FULLY DROUGHT AND WEAR RESISTANT. Amazoy lawns take cookouts, parties, lawn furniture. You could even play football on it and not get your feet muddy. Rarely (if ever!) needs watering.

Grass Seed Is For The Birds! Zoysia Saves Time, Work, Money

By Mike Sandin

Years ago I was like nearly everyone else with a lawn. I worried about it more than any other thing around the house.

Then things changed. My company obtained a new grass just released by the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture. In honor of the explorer, Frank Meyer, it was named Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass.

We received only a small amount of this Grass — enough to plant test plots in our Nursery Farm.

From that small beginning, these few precious clumps of Zoysia Grass spread until they built a lawn so thick and beautiful that visitors stopped to admire it.

We Tell People, "Walk On It"

Instead of saying "Keep Off The Grass," we invited visitors to walk on it. It was an unforgetable experience for them — like walking on a thick pile carpet.

After walking on it, visitors learned that Amazoy Zoysia turf was crabgrass-proof, and the next question never failed: "How can I get some?"

Other Lawns Burn Out

Now, grass is my company's business; but it was a long time before an order of Amazoy Zoysia Grass was accepted. First we wanted to see how good this grass was. We really found out!

One summer the heat was so great you could fry eggs on the highway. Daily the sun blazed from cloudless skies; the drought worsened; whole ponds dried up. Meanwhile crabgrass flourished and took over lawns by the thousands.

IT RESISTS DROUGHT, STAYS GREEN THRU HEAT WAVES

Thrives In Poor Soils

When I planted it in sandy, clay soils and sub-soil, it took hold and thrived. Other grass in the same soils struggled and died.

I compared it to other grasses in the winter, too. Ordinary grasses may die or turn sparse and scraggly due to frost and winter, but in such weather my Amazoy Zoysia merely went off its green color . . . it stayed so thick you could walk on it and not get your feet muddy.

Through zero-cold winters and blistering summer droughts . . . through onslaughts by weeds and diseases . . . our Meyer Zoysia had proved it could "take it." It had earned the right to be called AMAZOY, our Trade Mark published coast to coast and border to border.

HOW AMAZOY LAWNS CHOKE OUT CRABGRASS AND WEEDS ALL SUMMER LONG!

If costly chemicals fail to control crabgrass for good, how does Amazoy Zoysia do it? Your deep-rooted, fully established Amazoy lawn grows so thick and luxurious that crabgrass seeds just do not germinate!

Your lawn chokes out not only crabgrass, but other weeds all summer long — year after year.

You will never need to spend a cent on crabgrass and weed killers again. So if you have wanted to get away from costly and dangerous lawn herbicides, Amazoy is your answer.

Your Own Supply Of Plug Transplants

Your established Amazoy lawn provides you with plugs for other areas as you may desire.

HERE'S WHY AMAZOY PLUGS ASSURE SUCCESS WHERE OTHER GRASSES FAIL

Due to Amazoy's national reputation, you may find other grasses offered that sound like it. But Amazoy's pre-cut plugs look different, ARE different. Our plugs are grown exclusively for transplanting. They are winter-hardened under professional supervision — for 3 full years! — before we take them from the soil.

Each sturdy plug is cut to contain precisely the right balance between soil, root and surface growth. When they come to you, they're ready to grow!

NEVER NEEDS REPLACEMENT

AMAZOY Saves Money, Cut Work. Never a seed to sow again with Amazoy! Year after year your lawn grows thicker, like a deep pile carpet. Defies enemies that kill other lawns.

PEOPLE WRITE TO ME

As Mrs. Harry Winslowe writes to me from the heart of wintry New England:

". . . How pleased we are with our Zoysia lawn! We had a lawn that was a disgrace. My husband used weed killers for every known weed, but next season new weeds sprang up. We dug the lawn up twice and reseeded before we learned about Amazoy. It does everything you say."

"Mowed It 2 Times," Writes Woman

Mrs. M. R. Mitter writes me how her lawn ". . . is the envy of all who see it. When everybody's lawns around here are brown from drought ours just stays green as ever. I've never watered it, only when I put the plugs in . . . last summer we had it mowed (2) times. Another thing, we never have to pull any weeds — it's just wonderful!"

Wonderful? Yes, Amazoy Zoysia IS wonderful! Plant it now and you'll cut mowing by ⅔ . . . never have another weed problem all summer, for the rest of your life!

PLUG AMAZOY INTO OLD LAWN, NEW GROUND OR NURSERY AREA

When planted in existing lawn areas, plugs will spread to drive out old, unwanted growth including weeds.

AMAZOY LAWNS CUT WATERING. CUT MOWING BY ⅔

Your drought-resistant Amazoy lawn not only cuts your water bills, it cuts your work in other ways: it cuts pushing a noisy mower under a broiling summer sun by ⅔. It resists blight, disease, most insects. IT WILL NOT WINTER-KILL TO 30° BELOW ZERO. After killing frosts, just goes off its green color, regains fresh new beauty every Spring – a true perennial that ends re-seeding forever!

THERE IS NO SEED

Reports U.S. Dept. of Agric., referring to Meyer Z-52 Zoysia. Experts advise planting only live grass to be sure of getting winter-hardy grass perf. by U.S. Govt., Meyer Z-52.

For Slopes, Play Areas, Bare Spots

Or correct problem areas such as slopes where Amazoy halts erosion, in hard-to cover spots, around swim pools, in play areas, etc.

NO SOD

Sod of ordinary grass carries with it the same problems as seed — such as weeds, disease, frequent mowing, burning out, etc. Amazoy is sold ONLY in pre-cut plugs . . . never a slab of ordinary sod you must cut up in order to plant.

PATENTED STEP-ON PLUGGER IS . . . . FREE WITH ORDERS OF 600 PLUGS OR MORE

Amazoy exclusive! No one else can offer you this patented 2-way plugger. Saves bending, time, work. Light, rugged, invaluable for transplanting. Cuts away competing growth as it digs plug holes.

MORE THAN A HALF-BILLION PLUGS SOLD, OUTSELLS OTHERS 10 TO 1!

The controlled transplant quality of Amazoy has made it another word for Meyer Z-52 Zoysia . . . the world's best known Zoysia Grass. If you don't want to take another chance with lawn disappointment, switch to the grass that assures your success: Amazoy. We guarantee every plug will grow, no matter your soil or why other grasses have failed you.

Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass Was Perfected by U.S. Govt.; Released In Cooperation With U.S. Golf Assoc. as a superior grass.

Order guaranteed Amazoy now, get your bonus plugs FREE. Your order will be shipped promptly for fullest growing season.

We ship all orders the same day grass is taken from the soil, shipping charge collect via most economical means.

ARMOUR'S ARMORY

MEET THE METER

The meter reader reads our meter
And jots down notes perforce.
He doubtless took, to read our meter,
A meter-reading course.

But we've three meters: water, gas
And one for electricity.
And so we have three meter readers,
None getting much publicity.

They quickly read and then they're gone,
They're none of them delayers.
Speed-reading meters they have learned
And hope we're speedy payers.

WHAT IN THE WORLD

Expectant Fathers

Men as well as women experience physiological changes during pregnancy according to recent research reported in The American Journal of Maternal Child Nursing. Such changes in the husband occur even though his body is not physically altered, says author Jacqueline Fawcett of the Univ. of Conn.

Fawcett cites one study of British men who experienced symptoms of physical illness with their pregnant wives, including gastrointestinal disorders and backache. Similarly, American men have been observed to develop "sympathetic symptoms of pregnancy," including nausea and vomiting, leg cramps and backache while their wives are pregnant.

Why do husbands exhibit those changes? Fawcett says the symptoms may be a man's way of expressing his involvement in the pregnancy and identifying with his wife. She believes the experience can help draw them closer together.

Teaching Your Dog New Tricks

You can teach a dog of any age new tricks as long as you remember 2 key words — patience and praise. To help your dog learn his lessons, here are some other tips from canine care experts:

- Take each lesson slowly and be patient; repetition is important in teaching.
- If your dog has difficulty learning a new lesson, go back and repeat one it has already mastered to bolster the animal's confidence.
- To keep your dog's attention, limit lessons to 10 minutes.
- Use your tone of voice as a teaching tool. Try to be convincing but not reprimanding when giving orders. Be sure to reflect praise in your voice.
- Use simple, one-word commands when possible. This will make it easier for the dog to connect the command with the desired response.
- Once the dog has learned to obey commands, you can progress to tricks such as "roll over," "fetch" and "jump."

How To Succeed In College

Many freshmen experience culture shock in their first few weeks of college because no one has prepared them for what to expect says Irv Brechner, author of The College Survival Kit. Brechner, an honors graduate of Seton Hall Univ. (N.J.) who planned his own college work so well that he found the time to write the 42-page booklet during final exams, says the hardest thing to adjust to is the tremendous amount of freedom college offers compared with high school.

What can the new collegian do to make the transition easier? Discipline is the key says Brechner. It's important to develop good study habits and keep up with readings to prevent pretest panic. To help prepare for tests, students should also develop the habit of taking comprehensive class notes, then copy them over after class to help learn the new material.

Although students naturally want to enjoy themselves, Brechner warns it's important not to let tempting social and extracurricular activities disrupt schoolwork. He advises making up a large monthly calendar with all upcoming assignments, papers, tests and activities marked in the boxes. That way, he says, the student can see at a glance when he's busy.

For more suggestions about how to succeed in college, including an unorthodox but effective method of studying for finals, send $1.25 for your copy of The College Survival Kit to: Irv Brechner, Box 264 WOB, West Orange, N.J. 07052.

Preserving Family Papers

Are you storing important family papers in the attic or basement? If so, you're unwittingly helping them to deteriorate faster than they should says Penn State's Anthony J. Vennett.

To preserve papers Vennett advises:

- Avoid storing papers in places that are excessively hot or moist.
- Roll rather than fold papers.
- Store papers in a dark place.
- Never store documents with paper clips or staples. They may rust and leave a stain.

Hiatus Hernia

Many middle-aged people experience frightening symptoms similar to those of a heart attack only to discover from their doctor they have an ailment they've never heard of — hiatus hernia.

Hiatus hernia occurs in 20-30% of Americans over 50 and is most common among the obese and women who have had a large number of pregnancies says Dr. Simmy Bank, a gastroenterologist at Long Island Jewish-Hillside Medical Center. Dr. Bank says the victim may experience one of two types of symptoms — either repeated heartburn or spasms with pain similar to that of a heart attack.

Anyone with the latter symptoms should call a physician immediately. If the doctor diagnoses a hiatus hernia, Dr. Bank says that a simple regimen can bring the condition under control in most cases. To prevent irritation of the esophagus by digestive acids, the patient will often be asked not to eat 2-3 hours before going to bed and to sleep on a bed with an elevated head. In some cases, medication may be prescribed.

Quick Takes

Personal prescription drugs are used by other members of the family in 41% of the households surveyed by Univ. of Minnesota researchers. The researchers say they found an average of 12 drugs in each household, which were kept in the medicine cabinet an average of 19.7 months.

Hot weather can literally get you down report researchers at Johns Hopkins Univ. The researchers found that more people reported suffering bouts of depression during heat waves than in any other type of weather.

Shoplifting is keeping pace with inflation. According to a survey by a retail firm, the average value of merchandise recovered from supermarket shoplifters today is $5.99, compared to $3.05 in 1966.

Scuba divers beware — the Journal of the American Medical Association reports that the most common contributing factor to serious injury among scuba divers is panic among the inexperienced. So when possible, buddy up for safety.

Mother knows best when it comes to diaper rash. Recent studies by dermatologists say that most cases of diaper rash are caused by simple moisture rather than ammonia produced by bacteria. So it makes sense to follow the common-sense measures used by many parents, including frequent changing, talcum powder and avoiding plastic pants.

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

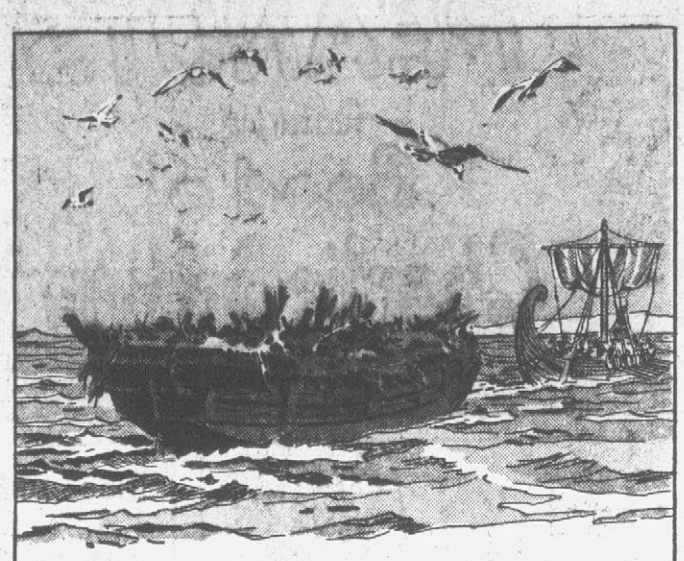

by Hal Foster

Our Story: BEFORE DAYLIGHT VAL CREEPS UP CLOSE TO THE EARL'S CASTLE AND, HIDDEN AMONG THE TALL REEDS, OBSERVES THE WORKINGS OF THE IRON WATER GATE. HE SEES HOW THE GATE IS RAISED TO LET SUPPLY BOATS ENTER AND LOWERED AS THEY LEAVE.

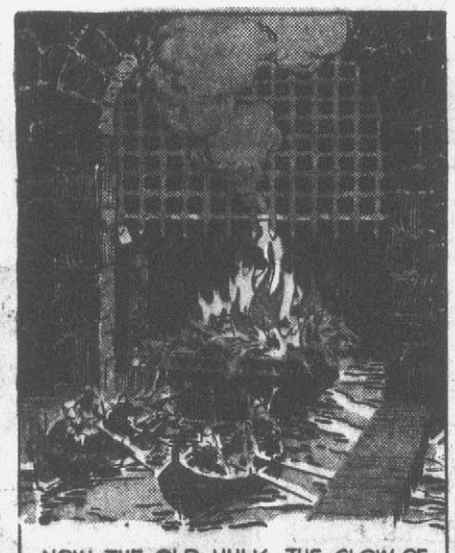

ONCE MORE THE DRAGONSHIP PUTS TO SEA, BUT THIS TIME THEY VISIT ALL THE SEAPORTS IN SEARCH OF A CERTAIN BOAT; A DIFFICULT THING, FOR EVERYONE FEARS THE VIKINGS.

THEY FIND WHAT THEY WANT... AN OLD HULK, ABANDONED AND ROTTING, BUT IT STILL FLOATS. THEY HAVE IT FILLED WITH ANYTHING THAT WILL BURN AND TOW IT BACK TO THEIR CAMP.

VAL HAD LEARNED THAT THE SUPPLY BOAT ALWAYS ARRIVES AT HIGH TIDE. SO, WHEN THE HIGH TIDE COMES AT THE DARKEST HOUR, HE AND HIS MEN SHOVE A WEDGE IN THE GATE.

NOW THE OLD HULK, THE GLOW OF THE FIRE DEEP WITHIN ITS HOLD, ENTERS THE WATER GATE AND THE CASTLE FILLS WITH SMOKE.
