Rent Control Cropping Up Again Across Country

By LEE MITGANG
AP Urban Affairs Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Rent control, dropped in the nation's major cities since this largest of them following World War II, is cropping up across the country again, not only in cities but in suburbs. Los Angeles and other

California cities are considering imposing rent limits. Washington, D.C., and Boston have such limits. And other cities in Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey and New York have adopted rent laws in the recent years of inflation and unemployment. "The middle class is hurting. Their lifestyle is impeded. And they've discovered rent control," explains Dr. George Sternlieb, an urban expert from Rutgers University in New Jersey, a state where many cities and suburbs have adopted rent controls in the 1970s. In some cases, government imposed rent limits follow economic developments beyond inflation. Alaska, for example, set up rent guidelines when the oil pipeline caused speculation that rent would rise 200 percent to 300 percent. Now, a number of California communities are considering rent control as a way to force landlords to share with renters some of their savings from Proposition 13, which required a cut in property taxes. However, the state Senate on Monday defeated a bill that would have forced most owners of rental property to roll back rents to May levels and give tenants 80 percent of their Proposition 13 tax savings. Assemblyman Tom Bates, sponsor of the legislation, predicted the defeat would spur efforts to impose local rent control laws. Sternlieb, who opposes rent controls as unfair and impossible to administer, sees another reason why suburbs are now imposing them. He says a hidden appeal — "the middle class's dirty little secret," he calls it — is that it tends to discourage new apartment construction. A suburb that wants to stay small, and keep poorer city dwellers from moving in,

often finds rent control a convenient ally. Thus the "no-growth" fringe benefit of rent control may give the system special allure in California, Sternlieb says. Rent limits are controversial wherever they exist. In New York, lan- (Continued on page 2)

'The Man Up Yonder' Has Kept Mrs. McKenzie Here 104 Years

FARMVILLE — "Why've I lived so long? Mrs. Emma McKenzie, who'll celebrate her 104th birthday Wednesday, echoed the interviewer's question. She flung her head forward into her lap, laughing. "Because the Man Up Yonder's kept me here.

There can't be no other reason, Honey." Then, the light in her eyes dancing, she added, "Oh, and maybe because I did what the Bible says about honorin' our parents that our days may be long. I never did give my mama or my daddy a sassy word. Children back when I was growin' up was scared of old folks. We won't sass like children is now, some of 'em, anyway. "Fact, the Holy Spirit give me a good lesson on age not long ago. I got to doin' a little worryin' about how much longer I was gonna live and what I was gonna do. And the Holy Spirit spoke to me and said, 'You don't do the worryin' 'bout how much longer. I'll take care of that.' So now I ain't worryin'. I'm just thankin' the Lord for every day and if I live 300 years, that'll be all right, too. My needs will be took care of." Many of Mrs. McKenzie's needs are taken care of through her son, Abner

Williams, 73, with whom she lives in a meticulously kept home at 309 Cameron Street, Farmville. "Abner's a good boy. He's my big ol' baby," Mrs. McKenzie said, glancing up at the faded photograph taken in childhood of the son who, during the interview, sat tending his own great grandchildren on the front porch. "He's always sayin', 'Mama, you ain't got to do that.' You've done enough work in your life.' I guess I have, but I feel good and I feel like workin', so I wish I could. Some days I feel so good I think I could go out (Continued on page 2)

Only Small Increase In Consumer Prices

By R. GREGORY NOKES
WASHINGTON (AP) — The government had the first good news for inflation-weary Americans in months today, reporting that consumer prices were held to an 0.5 percent increase in July as grocery prices declined for the first time in a year.

The July increase compared with price gains of 0.9 percent in each of the previous three months and was the smallest rise since a 0.4 percent gain last December. The Labor Department attributed the improvement to an 0.4 percent decline in grocery prices, the first drop since July 1977, and an 0.6 percent drop in the price of clothing, particularly for women and girls.

While the price report was a welcome development for consumers, it also should give support to the troubled U.S. dollar on world money markets, where the currency's value has declined because of inflation and the nation's trade deficit.

However, in an adverse development for the dollar, the Commerce Department said the nation had a foreign trade deficit in July of nearly $3 billion, the fourth largest on record. It said exports declined 3 percent to $11.8 billion, while imports rose 8 percent to $14.8 billion.

The figures were certain to be highly disappointing to the Carter administration, which had hoped for a continuation of the trend in recent months toward smaller monthly trade deficits.

The Commerce Department said there was a big increase in auto imports, which rose $206 million during the month. There were also substantial increases in imports of sugar, coffee and fish, although imports of oil were down 4 percent from the previous month, continuing the recent decline in oil imports.

The Labor Department said its Consumer Price Index in July stood at 196.7 of the 1967 average of 100. This means that goods priced at $100 11 years ago had increased in price to $196.70 last month.

The July increase of 0.5 percent, if continued for an entire year, would result in a 12-month inflation of 6 percent. The annual rate of price inflation in the three previous months was 10.7 percent.

The total increase in consumer prices since January has been 5.4 percent, compared with an increase during all of last year of 6.9 percent. The Carter administration now hopes to hold inflation to an 8 percent increase during all of this year. It had set a 6.1 percent target at the start of this year.

Chancellor Brewer Sets Theme Before Faculty

"I am ready to get started," East Carolina University Chancellor Thomas B. Brewer told the opening faculty convention yesterday as the fall semester got under way.

"I have looked forward to this opening," Brewer, who took over as head of the university in July, said. "For other than a Title IX grievance, an NCAA investigation, a Labor Department allegation, a biennial budget request, and two or three law suits, the first two months were just routine," he commented.

Brewer told the faculty, "I will attempt to outline some of my ideas, some of my hopes, and some of my expectations," and added, "I hope that my remarks are only the beginning of a continuing dialogue between all of us at East Carolina, for most of our opportunities can be realized only in this way, and most of our goals can be reached only by continuous examination and re-examination by the concerned parties."

"These discussions," Brewer continued, "will be characterized by openness and goodwill. Politics may be a legitimate way of life in some spheres. In universities, it is disruptive and leads to ill-feelings and barriers to trust.

I give you my solemn pledge that I will encourage and meaningfully participate in these university community discussions."

Brewer told the faculty, "we must gather our forces and concentrate our energies and direct them toward even greater excellence," and said, "success in this goal depends upon us as faculty members."

He added, however, that the university has a responsibility to help the faculty to reach its potential by providing facilities, monetary support, "and perhaps, most importantly, time."

Brewer said he would push for higher salaries, and announced the establishment of a $60,000 research fund, "from university monies," to be administered on a competitive basis to support research. He also told the faculty that the ECU Foundation would be asked to set up a fund of $10,000, "to take care of small items such as typing," and, "to further support the research effort, we have allocated an additional $18,000 in travel funds to insure that any faculty member delivering a paper or participating in a scholarly meeting will have funds available."

According to Brewer, "Most universities support scholarship. Few support teaching, which is the fundamental mission of the university."

"As a beginning, we have allocated $20,000 for projects designed to improve teaching."

The chancellor said, too, that $10,000 has been set aside, "for improvement of professional staff...to be used for attendance at seminars and workshops."

Brewer also said a program of competitive creative activity assignments, "which will allow faculty a full semester to pursue teaching improvement or scholarship," will be started in the Spring, to provide time for faculty improvement.

The chancellor praised Vice-chancellor for Business Cliff Moore, who Brewer said, "has recently shown remarkable agility in his office in solving some tricky financial problems. He may be able to do more...and this is no pun...for us here than anyone else. A university must have a chief fiscal officer with the ability and imagination to help us achieve our goals," Brewer em-

Hearing Here Sept. 13 On System Of Justice

Pitt County residents will have an opportunity to suggest changes in the state's criminal laws and improvements in the criminal justice system at a Governor's Conference on Crime Control to be held in Greenville September 13.

The public hearing is set for 9 a.m. at the Willis Building at the intersection of First and Reade Streets.

Secretary of Crime Control and Public Safety J. Phil Carlton is scheduled to preside over the session, one of 37 such hearings scheduled throughout the state.

Carlton said the primary purpose of the hearings is to give citizens an opportunity to lend their advice and suggestions on ways to reduce and control crime in North Carolina.

"This is not one of those opportunities for those of us in Raleigh to come and make speeches," Carlton said. "We will come to listen to any suggestions anyone wants to make about ways and means to fight crime. We are particularly interested in suggestions on strengthening our criminal laws and improving our law enforcement, court and correctional systems."

Carlton noted that, "we will evaluate any suggestions received as we attempt to prepare a package of legislative proposals to be submitted by Gov. Hunt to the 1979 General Assembly."

Administrative Changes At ECU Considered

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The posts of Vice-Chancellor for Health Affairs and Vice-chancellor for Administration and Planning at East Carolina University would be abolished and the posts of Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs and Vice-Chancellor for Institutional Advancement would replace them, if ideas presented to the Board of Trustees by Chancellor Thomas B. Brewer last month become a reality. "The Daily Reflector" has learned.

Brewer acknowledged Monday that he presented, "a discussion proposal," outlining his thoughts on reorganization of the administrative structure to the board at its July 27 meeting, and received approval to discuss the thoughts with faculty, staff and administrators at the university to get their reaction.

"We're gathering information...opinions," on the proposal now, he said. "We don't make any decisions without consultation... input," Brewer said, "...without weighing the pros and cons."

The chancellor said any decision on his part to recommend to the board a restructuring of the administration would be based on, "logic...the best information we can get," through discussions, "with the people involved, the faculty, staff and trustees."

"That's where it stands," according to Brewer. "I don't have a closed mind."

Brewer said the discussion proposal was, "my idea. I want what is most efficient for East Carolina. It's our obligation to the tax payers and to the people of Eastern North Carolina."

"I have thrown out ideas for discussion," he said, emphasizing that the proposal is a matter of, "structure, not personalities."

As outlined under the discussion proposal, the Dean of the School of Medicine would become a member of Brewer's staff, answering directly to the Chancellor. Other undergraduate academic programs now under the Vice-Chancellor for Health Affairs — the Schools of Nursing and Allied Health and Social Professions — would fall under the Vice-Chancellor for Academic Affairs.

A number of the responsibilities of the Vice-Chancellor for Administration and Planning would probably be taken up by the new Vice-Chancellor for Academic Affairs, while others might be handled by the new Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs.

"As far as possible," Brewer said, "I like to have faculty and staff input on potential policies." He noted too, that he holds a three-hour staff meeting each week so staff members can learn of, "other peoples' areas and problems," and so, "common problems can be discussed and worked out."

Brewer described his administration, "in corporate terms," as "committee management," where decisions are, "group decisions as far as possible."

The Legislature, Brewer said, "provides enough money for a sound university. But the truly great public institutions of this country are great because of private financial support."

Second Thoughts Over Propane Gas Terminal

BEAUFORT, N.C. (AP) — Residents of Beaufort are having second thoughts over whether a planned 21-million-gallon propane terminal will be an economic bonanza or a potential disaster.

Beaufort Mayor Richard J. Babcock said people in the area want more information about the terminal, which was announced earlier this year by Gov. Jim Hunt. The announcement that Gulf Interstate Engineering Co. of Houston was planning the mammoth import facility caught local officials by surprise.

"Of course, all we could do was to say, 'Isn't that fine, governor,'" recalled Babcock.

The most serious question now on everybody's mind is what would happen if the storage terminal caught fire and exploded. Such an explosion might also involve a 25-million-gallon military jet fuel storage area already located on Radio Island near the mouth of the Newport River, the proposed site for the terminal.

Since the terminal would be used to store liquified petroleum gas from ships until it could be carried inland, residents would like to know what roads or rail lines will be used.

"There have been a lot of questions raised that people haven't received answers to," said Stoney Creech, executive director of the Carteret Chamber of Commerce. "The question has often arisen, is this going to justify the safety hazard this is going to bring to the area? Is it going to stop other industries from coming here?"

Backers of the project insist that an abundant new energy source is exactly what the Morehead City-Beaufort-Atlantic Beach area needs to grow.

"I see it as an energy source for eastern North Carolina and partly for Carteret County," said Roy A. Stevens, the county's economic development director. "We do not have natural gas here, and propane would put us in competition for industrial plants that, right now, we can't even talk to."

But opponents, among them Dr. John D. Costlow, director of a Duke University marine laboratory on Pivers Island, insist that the terminal will add few jobs to the local economy and cost more in improvements to the local hospital and firefighting facilities than it will generate in tax revenues.

Transsexual Art Teacher Fired

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A transsexual art teacher who as a man wore unisex clothing and makeup to prepare his pupils for his sex-change operation has been fired by the suburban Chester-Upland School District.

District officials declined to comment on the 6-0 vote Monday night to dismiss Jenell Ashlie, citing the likelihood of litigation.

"They (lawyers) strictly directed us not to make any comments on this at all," said Earl Foster, school board vice president. "I can't expound in any manner."

The resolution to dismiss the 27-year-old teacher was approved on the recommendation of Superintendent John Vaul with no discussion. It said Ms. Ashlie's services "are hereby terminated on the grounds of incompetency, immorality and other improper conduct all of which are potentially psychologically damaging to students."

Martha Poor, president of the Chester Upland Education Association, said the union would support Ms. Ashlie at an upcoming hearing.

"She's been rated satisfactory by all her supervisors," said Ms. Poor. "As for the other charges, there's no evidence to

Avert A Postal Strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service and union negotiators are going back to the bargaining table under a delicately crafted agreement that removes the threat of a nationwide mail strike for at least two weeks.

"The nation can now be assured it will continue to enjoy uninterrupted mail service," said Postmaster General William Bolger after the compromise was reached on Monday.

Under the accord, the Postal Service and three unions will resume collective bargaining for 15 days under the auspices of a federal mediator, who will arbitrate any unresolved issues by the end of that period.

Both sides made concessions for their gains. Union leaders won further bargaining on key terms of the tentative contract that their rank and file had rejected earlier, at the cost of possible binding arbitration.

The Postal Service conceded reopening the bargaining, but won the element of arbitration and avoided — at least for now — what one government source said would have been "a very messy situation."

While the agreement appears to make a strike less likely, it does not rule out a possible rejection by union members of any future contract. Nor would it guarantee there would be no wildcat walkouts in the event of a mediated settlement.

support anything."

Ms. Ashlie was hired by the district more than two years ago as a substitute. She later became a full-time teacher and legally changed her name from Keith Komarnicki to Jenell Ashlie after the Aug. 4 operation.

Ms. Ashlie, who would have been the first known transsexual teacher in Pennsylvania, declined to comment on her dismissal.

However, she said in a recent interview that her 11 to 17-year-old pupils already had grown accustomed to treating her as a woman, because she dressed in women's clothes, wore her hair and nails long, and used makeup ever since being hired.

Rent Control...

lords and tenants have been arguing over them for years.

One problem here is confusion over a many-layered and chaotic bureaucracy that has grown up in the last 30 years. For 500,000 apartments, mostly older high-rises with long-time tenants, there is rent control, the strictest system. There is less strict rent stabilization for 770,000 others and no control at all for the remaining 600,000, mostly in smaller or new buildings.

Until recently, the city kept controls to help the poor. Now rent control has become a middle-class issue. Proponents including Mayor Edward I. Koch, who himself has a rent-controlled flat, argue that the city must keep some controls to prevent the middle class from fleeing.

Landlords argue that rising property taxes and utility and upkeep bills prevent fair profits under rent control. They also blame it for abandonment and deterioration of buildings, saying this causes property values to drop and leads to higher property taxes for small homeowners.

Tenant leaders contend, however, that real estate speculation, redlining and a host of social ills are more to blame for New York's housing problems than is rent control.

These have been the experiences in some other areas:

—Washington, D.C., has had rent control for three years. It is criticized by landlords because of red tape involved in getting rent increases and by tenants who feel the increases granted are too large.

It was nonetheless extended this year in modified form for another three years. Local observers say the City Council extended it because landlord groups fought so zealously to end controls that the council feared decontrol would lead to explosive rent increases.

A study titled "Rent Control" by Monica Lett of Rutgers University cites an acute housing shortage, rapid rent increases and evictions as factors leading to controls in the nation's capital.

—Boston began controls in 1969, followed by nearby Brookline, Cambridge and Somerville. Rent increases are granted mostly on a case-by-case basis, according to Ann Goggin of the Boston Rent Control Board. But last year, landlords were granted a citywide 11 percent increase to cover higher utility and property tax costs.

A housing shortage and one of the nation's highest per capita rent levels are the main reasons Boston turned to controls. The large student population creates a special problem for other residents. Landlords might charge, say, four students $150 apiece to live in a single apartment, which might raise a single family's rent in a similar apartment to $600 without some kind of rent control.

The city passed a law for gradual decontrol in 1976, but up to two-thirds of apartments remain under control. The rent ordinance expires in 1979, however, and then rent control could end altogether.

—Miami Beach, Fla., had rent control for three years, but the Legislature ended it by limiting the law to apartments renting for $250 or less a month — far below most rents in Miami Beach.

City spokesman Zeke George says a push for a new form of control could come if Miami Beach votes in November to legalize casino gambling, setting off real estate speculation.

—In Connecticut, cities including Danbury, Hartford, New Haven and Stamford have a mild system that allows tenants to complain to a local fair rent board that can roll back exorbitant rents.

—About 130 New Jersey communities including Newark have local rent control. The model for their ordinances, and the place where controls are under hottest dispute, is Fort Lee, a city just across the Hudson River from New York with many luxury high-rise apartments. Fort Lee's law effectively limits rent increases to 2.5 percent a year.

Landlords took the city to New Jersey Supreme Court in May, calling the law "confiscatory and invalid." No decision has been issued.

Tomorrow: Rent Control in California

Budget Busting Barrier

BOSTON (AP) — President Carter's top inflation fighter told the nation's governors today that the president is prepared to stop any "budget busting" legislation in his commitment to control inflation.

"The Carter administration is more than mindful that inflation is the most serious and devastating problem on the national and international scene today," said Robert S. Strauss, the president's special counselor on inflation.

Strauss, speaking on the closing day of the National Governors' Association 70th annual convention, said: "The administration is committed to cutting inflation down, and the president is prepared to veto any budget-busting bills."

Strauss' comments came as the government announced that inflation had increased by 0.5 percent in July. The administration now hopes to hold inflation to an 8 percent increase for the year. The announced target at the beginning of the year was 6.1 percent.

The governors' concern over the growing resistance by taxpayers to high government spending was underlined Monday when California Gov. Jerry Brown warned his fellow governors they face a "second American Revolution."

"There's no way you're going to stop it," Brown told his colleagues. "I can hear that train a' coming."

Sell Credit Bureau

After many months of consideration and study, the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce voted to sell the Credit Bureau of Greenville.

According to Charles Burnette, Chamber president, a study conducted by the Chamber accountant and tax attorney showed that the Chamber should sell the establishment because of its federal tax exemption status and the need and cost of modernization.

Another factor considered was the additional cost of space for the Credit Bureau in the new Chamber facility.

Several offers were reviewed before the Board of Directors voted to sell to Credit Enterprises, Inc. The Credit Bureau is located on 109 E. Third St., with the same staff and services as before. Chamber conferences and committee meetings are held in the former Credit Bureau office.

and chop in the field like I usta do."

Mrs. McKenzie was born Emma Rodan in the Pantego community of Beaufort County. She said she had 25 brothers and sisters. Her mother, she said, had three husbands and she was one of the earlier children. She now has only one sister, Jessie, living.

"My mama was a good woman," she said. "She raised her children to work hard and she never put hatred in their hearts for anyone, black or white."

"I never did hear her say a cuss word. But she'd get us if we did or if we, in any way, showed disrespect for anybody, most especially our elders. I'd come in sometimes and she'd say, 'Get them rags off. You're gonna get a switchin'. Get them rags off, I said. They didn't do nothin'. You did.'"

Mrs. McKenzie was first married to Daniel Williams and he was the father of her five children, Abner, Clifton, Dennis, Willie and Lorena. Williams died while the children were young, she said, and she was helped to rear them by her second husband, John McKenzie, who lived until 1962.

She lived in Pantego, she said, until she went "up north" in 1919. Most of her working years were spent in Chester, Pa. and Emporia, Va.

There is one Monday evening spent in Chester, Pa. during her 50th year that she considers the most important of her life. "I was saved," she said, "under a white man at a revival. That was the beginning of Emma McKenzie as a new person."

"You wouldn't 'ave wanted to meet me before that night. I'd a cussed you in a minute if you'd crossed me. I was a sinner sho' 'nough when I was a sinner, but now I serve the Lord and I have ever since that night when Evangelist Range showed me the way."

As she talked she rifled through her Bible and drew out a worn evangelical tract bearing

Range's photograph. "I love this man," she said. "God put him in that place that night to speak just to me."

Mrs. McKenzie said there was no place for formal education in her and her brothers' and sisters' childhood, only for work. "I never went inside a school house a day in my life," she said, "but I learned some spellin' and writin' and countin' from the old folks at home. And since I've been saved, the Lord's taught me directly things I needed to know."

Illness has not been a part of Mrs. McKenzie's life in recent years, though she said her mother told her she was a sickly baby, that she lived in fear of finding her dead in her bed when she was an infant.

"My coffin's been bought twice," she said. "When I was a child, they said I had consumption so bad they'd give up on me. Then when I was a young woman and my children were small, I got pneumonia and they thought I was gone again."

"But now I don't think about health. I just have it."

"I don't worry about clothes. I just have more than I can get around to wearin'."

"And I don't worry about food or where I'm gonna stay. The Lord provides."

Mrs. McKenzie says she's looking forward to her birthday Wednesday. "People've already started comin' by and bringin' me good wishes," she said. "A preacher from Baltimore was here this mornin'. He said he was gonna take me up there to his church soon so I could tell his people how to live the truth. I'll go. I don't believe in nothin' but the truth. That's what's keepin' me here. I'd be in the bottom of Hell right now if I hadn't found the truth."

Lizzie Borden, a New England woman accused of killing her father and step-mother with an ax, was arrested in 1892.

Green Sourfaced Symbol Aids Drive To Reduce Poisonings

By PATRICIA MCCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

'Mister Yuk' — a green sourfaced poison symbol toddlers helped design — gets help in his campaign to reduce the estimated six million accidental poisonings and 5,000 resulting deaths that occur each year in American homes.

Yuk, circular like a Smilie face, sports a mouth that turns down. His tongue sticks out. His eyes are squinty. His eyebrows turn up.

It's any angry, distressed face — the kind you'd make if you drank or ate something that tasted terrible, maybe burned your throat and made you choke.

Yuk is the centerpiece in a poison control program aimed at preschool children. The help he's getting comes from a new poison safeguard kit designed by Dr. Richard W. Moriarity, a Pittsburgh pediatrician and director of the National Poison Control Network.

The $7.95 kit, to be available soon, is designed to hang on a wall. It contains instructions, activated charcoal, syrup of ipecac, a vomit collector and easy-to-understand directions.

Moriarity said the great majority of poison exposures can be treated at home if:

1. You call your poison center, a hospital emergency room or a doctor first.

2. You follow the treatment recommendations carefully.

3. You have syrup of ipecac and activated charcoal.

"Eighty five percent of the cases can be treated this way at home," Moriarity said in an interview.

"The first thing a lot of parents do is rush the child to the emergency room and that's a shame — considering how many cases respond to home treatment.

"The emergency rooms are crowded to begin with and anything that can be treated at home takes off some of the overload.

"The home treatment of 85 percent of the poisonings also saves some money. It costs at least $20 just to get the minor service in an emergency room."

Moriarity pioneered the home treatment of poisonings by starting a new system at Children's Hospital in the University of Pittsburgh Medical Center some years back.

He set up professional help for distressed parents via phone. Now the headquarters of the national network is there — and help is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Regional centers in several dozen places across America are hooked into the system and may consult on stubborn cases or new-substance poisonings.

Each regional center also has satellite hospitals ready to accept patients needing hospital care to save their lives.

Moriarity said the kit with its ipecac and charcoal is only an end product of a total preventive education program showing parents how to train children to recognize and avoid common household poisons.

The instruction booklet tells how Yuk symbols should be put on containers of problem substances — with the help of the child.

Most children respond with disgust to the Yuk symbol — since it was designed with the help of children to give a feeling of something that's the opposite of yummy.

"It is green and not red, the usual poison sign color," Moriarity said, "because tests showed the toddlers love red, find it exciting. The shade of green we use is a better color for a danger sign they'll pay attention to."

"We gave up the idea of a skull and crossbones for poison markers when the skull and crossbones, in a test with many Pittsburgh-area kids, came in second in popularity. A Smilie face was number one."

The skull and crossbones reminded the kids of The Pittsburgh Pirates. It is the symbol of the baseball club. It reminded them of Long John Silver restaurants full of pleasant associations.

"If kids like red and respond favorably to the skull and crossbones, obviously we needed something besides the usual poison caution sign."

Through further help from preschool children, Yuk was created, and Moriarity thinks the symbol is working fine. His proof: in Pittsburgh, as one example, there haven't been any childhood deaths from poisoning for some time now.

Before Yuk and his campaign there were three deaths a year. Easy-to-read instructions on what to do in case of poisoning are a prime factor with Moriarity.

"The booklets with the kit are plain writing," he said. "None of that 'induce vomiting' stuff."

We say, 'make the patient throw up.'

"We don't say anything about consulting a physician either. We say call a doctor."

The easy instructions raise the chances the help given at home won't be mistreatment.

"Often, mistreatment does more harm than the poisoning itself," Moriarity said.

"For example, most laymen incorrectly believe they should make a person throw up as soon as possible, no matter what the poison."

"But if the product is a corrosive acid or alkali — as are many household cleaning products — the contaminated vomit can cause serious scarring and permanent damage to the alimentary tract, throat, vocal cords and lungs."

"In these cases, the simple administration of water or milk is the emergency course of choice until you can get professional help."

"If the poison is noncorrosive, and syrup of ipecac is recommended by the doctor at the other end of the line, he also may recommend activated charcoal after vomiting to help absorb and detoxify poisonous residue remaining in the digestive tract."

Instructions with the kit tell how to get an "Under 5 Understanding Cards" booklet to help young children to be on the lookout for poisonous substances. It also tells how to order Mister Yuk stickers.

"Previously, parents merely were advised to lock up poisons," Moriarity said.

"That made the child more curious and challenged him to get at the poisons."

"By now creating an awareness and identifying poisons for what they are — yukky not yummy — we have a preventive approach that is more rational and more effective."

Is It Love Or Lonesomeness?

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm sitting here in the county jail and I have a problem I need help with. Since I've been here I have fallen in love with a wonderful guy who is locked up on the floor below me. We have been talking through a crack in the floor, and have really gotten to know each other very well. We went to the same high school together, but we never dated.

We did a lot of talking back and forth, and he wants to marry me when we get out. Do you think it's really love, or are we just lonesome? I am nearly 20, and he is the same age. I could sure use some good advice, so please answer soon.

IN LOVE AND IN JAIL

DEAR IN: Being locked up and lonely can distort one's thinking, so don't make any decisions until you are free. Get to know each other better, and then decide whether you want to marry. "I do" is a two-word sentence — for life!

DEAR ABBY: I am a faithful reader of your column, and I kept hoping to come across a problem similar to mine from one of your readers, but so far no one has dared to declare himself.

I know I need help, but I don't know how to get it without incriminating myself. I am a shoplifter. I have been shoplifting for a long time, but it just dawned on me that I am doing wrong and I must stop myself before I get caught and disgrace myself and my family.

I am a woman in my late 50s. I have a wonderful husband and family, all the money I need, plus charge accounts in all the best stores.

Most of the things I take I neither need nor want. Please direct me to the right place for help.

CAN'T SIGN

DEAR CANT: Your problem is a medically recognized illness. Ask your family physician to recommend a psychiatrist or psychologist. And don't delay treatment out of shame. Your problem is not as uncommon as you might think.

DEAR PET OWNERS: With summer here, please do not take your pet along for the ride and leave him locked in a parked car while you do errands and shopping.

When the temperature is 85 degrees outside, the temperature inside a parked car (even with the windows slightly open) will reach 102 degrees within 10 minutes. And in 30 minutes it will reach 120 degrees!

The normal body temperature of a dog is approximately 102 degrees, and it can withstand approximately 108 degrees for a very short time before suffering irreparable brain damage or death.

So the next time you're tempted to take your dog along for the ride on a hot summer day, if you must leave him locked in a parked car — leave him home!

P.S. My pet consultant says, "NEVER park a car in the sun — even with the windows open — if a pet is inside."

End Non-Productive Spending

Gov. Hunt had some pretty good advice for county commissioners as they held the 71st annual conference of the N. C. Association of County Commissioners.

He urged county governments to hold down operating expenses.

The governor said he would also oppose any tax increases for the state government next year.

The state will help the county governments in holding the line on spending.

"We have established as our principle in state government that never again will we mandate programs for local government without providing the money you need to pay for them," the governor said.

At every level of government there is concern about the new spirit of revolt among taxpayers which was best illustrated by California's passage of Proposition 13.

Putting a lid on taxes is an arbitrary thing that can cripple government services. There is a better way and that is to eliminate non-productive spending in government and increase efficiency in the service areas. We hope local, state and federal government will work to these ends.

Society Will Be Major Beneficiary

Gov. Hunt was on hand for the beginning of a fund drive for the United Negro College Fund last week.

The governor called on citizens to be generous this year particularly since Dr. Prezell R. Robinson, president of St. Augustine's College is the fund's national president.

We concur with the governor. Even today the Negro colleges are filling a need for black students in higher education. Society will be the beneficiary of the financial aid we give.

THIS AFTERNOON Study Of Building Trades

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — A development boom in most North Carolina communities has prompted the fledgling Sunset Commission to direct its first intensive probe in that direction.

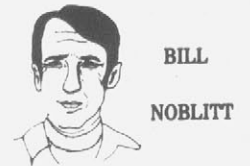

Nine industry-related licensing and regulatory agencies involved in building trades have been picked by the commission as the target for a series of public hearings beginning next month, and a report to the 1979 session of the General Assembly.

Sunset is the popular name for the Governmental Evaluation Commission established by the General Assembly to investigate the state's more than 100 licensing and regulatory agencies with a view of recommending whether those activities should remain in operation, or be terminated. In short, should the sun set on agencies which don't serve a public need.

With so many agencies to be reviewed, and a January 1979 deadline in sight, the commission decided to limit its first effort.

desirable development.

Or do some serve to restrict trade, guard monopolies, keep competition from becoming available, bar hopeful practitioners of the various skills in order to protect the "old-timers", and cause the public to pay higher costs through price-setting or fee agreements.

BILL NOBLITT

Attorney General Rufus L. Edmisten lists among his duties protection of consumers, and after a preliminary staff study which helped to promote creation of the Sunset Commission had this to say:

"In the past the licensing of occupations has been to protect the public from harm. The effect of licensing in recent years, however, has often been to protect those licensees from the demands of free enterprise."

Underway

The review process of the first group of agencies is already underway, with each being asked to respond to specific questions designed to show what the purpose of the regulatory agency is, how it tries to serve the public, and other factual data.

The public hearings to be held beginning in September will provide members of the trades and the general public an opportunity to describe how the agencies affect them. Special attention will be paid to complaints against the occupations, and how those are disposed of in this state as compared to other states.

Samuel L. Hays, a retired attorney who moved to this state after years of service in the New Hampshire Legislature, will conduct the hearings.

"The reason we are going into these agencies first," Hays explained, "is that they touch so many citizens in both an economic and in a safety or social manner."

More tomorrow.

HOW IT SEEMS FROM THE DAILY HEADLINES---

Sores Kept Open

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Overall relations between the United States and Cuba have worsened since Havana and Washington traded diplomatic missions a year ago this week.

Progress has marked a few specific areas of the relationship, but there is little talk these days about a "new era" in U.S.-Cuban diplomacy and even less talk about achieving President Carter's long-range goal of "full friendship with Cuba."

The diplomatic missions — "interest sections" in Washington and Havana — were established Sept. 1, 1977, primarily as a "channel of communications" to achieve better understanding. But, to a large degree, the result has been a better understanding of just how far apart the two countries are on fundamental issues.

Once again, the United States and Cuba are tangling over the issue of foreign intervention. For years, President Fidel Castro linked improved relations to an end to American "aggression" in Indochina.

Now, in a reversal of roles, the United States says closer ties with Cuba will not be possible as long as Cuba continues its military intervention in Africa.

Still, the relationship is not as bad as it had been. On humanitarian issues, there has been some progress.

Castro, for example, has agreed to permit the emigration of hundreds of people with either family or citizenship ties with the United States.

Three U.S. political prisoners have been released, and American officials say there is hope that four others may be freed. Some Cuban exiles have been allowed to visit relatives in Cuba.

SPEAKER SAM'S VERDICT

Never A Rubber Stamp

By EDMOND Le BRETON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — If House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill worries that the Democratic 95th Congress has not delivered everything he or President Carter wanted, he can take comfort from the verdict of one of his most powerful predecessors:

"There never was a rubberstamp Congress."

The man who made that observation ought to know. He was Sam Rayburn of Texas who, when he died in office Nov. 16, 1961, had been speaker more than twice as long as anyone else in history.

Comparisons between O'Neill and Rayburn were inevitable when the Massachusetts Democrat was named to the chair of the present House. He announced he intended to be a strong speaker, a designation generally denied the two men who served between Rayburn's and O'Neill's tenure.

It is still too early for a meaningful comparison. Rayburn presided over the House more than 16 years; O'Neill is in his second year. Conditions are far different, and so are the styles of the two.

But there is now readily available material for some future comparison, thanks to the Sam Rayburn Library at Bonham, Texas.

Rayburn never wrote his memoirs, but he apparently never threw away a scrap of correspondence. The library, established near the end of his life, bulges with his own and the public records relating to him.

The library's director, H.G. Dulaney, and two associates, history professor Edward Hake Phillips and staff member MacPhelan Reese, undertook to produce a Rayburn autobiography.

They pieced it together as much as possible out of the voluminous documentation of Rayburn's own words, filling chinks with extracts from contemporary writings about him.

The result, published as "Speak, Mr. Speaker," isn't exactly an autobiography. It is a rich though incomplete and uneven account of the life and times of a man who came to Congress in 1913, after having been speaker of the Texas House, and remained in Congress and in national politics into the presidency of John F. Kennedy — four wars, a depression and a near-social revolution later.

Pre-eminently, the book is a mine of quotable Rayburnisms, most of them newly unearthed. A whole book probably could be compiled of his advice to congressmen, especially young ones. Examples:

—"A man doesn't learn his job in the House until he's had his head bloodied a couple of times, but a leader may as well quit if his is bloodied too often."

—"No one has a finer command of language than the person who keeps his mouth shut."

—"Don't take the floor until you know you are ready — never just to hear the sound of your own voice."

—"My advice to any new member ... is to keep in mind that he has two constituencies: the people who sent him here and the colleagues with whom he must serve."

40 Years Ago Today

August 29, 1938

A serious dispute over the right of a U. S. gunboat in China waters under Japanese control was reported today from Kiukiang by authoritative sources.

The dispute concerns the gunboat Monocacy, which was shaken and showered with water, but not damaged by the explosion of two mines 80 yards from the gunboat anchored at Kiukiang.

A protest by Commander Lieutenant C. V. Conlan, a reliable informant said, was rejected by the Japanese consul who, in effect, contended that foreign warships were in battle areas at their own risk.

Lieut. Conlan was understood to have countered he was holding the Japanese responsible for any mishap resulting from Japanese operations or from mine explosions.

E. N. Peeler, secretary of the State Textbook Commission, is expected to address principals of the Pitt County school system at a meeting late today.

Secretary Peeler is slated to discuss free textbooks and rental system regulations of the commission. Part of the meeting will be devoted to routine matters.

G. P. Carr, principal of the Stokes school preside over the session, at which all county school principals have been urged to attend.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Panama Canal Boo-Boo

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Improbable opposition at the top of the powerful State and Defense Departments killed a politically vulnerable White House proposal to transfer operation of the Panama Canal from the Army to the Transportation Department, which would have greatly reduced Pentagon control over the strategic waterway.

The proposal, disclosed here for the first time, was designed to remove the U.S. Army from its traditional role as operator of the famed canal during the transition period between 1979 and 2000, when Panama takes control.

But in asking Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Secretary of Defense Harold Brown to consider this shift, on the advice of his Latin-American staffers, national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski ignored a political reality: taking the canal out of Army control would reactivate the strong lobby that fought the Panama Canal treaties early this year. It would jeopardize new legislation to be sent to Congress next year.

That legislation, called for by the treaties, will set up a new U.S. "agency" to run the canal. A presidential decision to take the canal away from Pentagon control would gravely worsen Mr. Carter's problem — bad enough anyway — to push the new law through Congress.

Within days after Brzezinski's proposal reached Vance and Brown, it died a silent death. The canal will remain under military control.

The Next Veto

Long before President Carter vetoed the defense authorization bill to prove his political manhood, his advisers had convinced him that vetoing a budget-busting public works appropriations bill would be far preferable to working out a compromise.

Consequently, when Sen. Bennett Johnston of Louisiana sat down across the table from administration officials to try to arrange a compromise on water projects, he found no give at all. Kathy Fletcher of the White House domestic policy staff refused to amend the now-famous Carter "hit list" of water projects.

To Johnston and other members of Congress this was proof that the Carter team had learned nothing

Other Editors Say Must Cooperate

Rocky Mount Evening-Telegram

For many months now, the battle lines have been drawn between Congress and the Carter administration, mainly over points of dispute in legislation sent to Capitol Hill by the White House.

But Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd thinks it is time to bury the hatchet.

He said that he has cautioned both the president and congressional leaders not to fall into a "them-against-us syndrome" where one side blames the other for failures to agree on policy.

It is true that Congress has given Carter proposals a rough time, but Byrd explained that "the fact that Congress does not follow through and act as a rubber stamp and give the administration what it wants in every jot and tittle doesn't mean we aren't cooperating."

Some members of Congress have complained of personal slights and the repeated failure of administration figures to consult with Congress before making legislative proposals.

The most recent flareup was when Speaker of the House Thomas O'Neill, was not informed beforehand that one of his friends was being fired from a key post in the General Services Administration.

O'Neill had been a staunch ally of the president in the House—something Carter desperately needed—but O'Neill was so upset that he refused for a time to allow White House congressional liaison aide, Frank Moore, in his office.

Carter quickly found another job for O'Neill's friend, Robert T. Griffin, and the feud was patched up. Even so, O'Neill still resents the way he has been treated by Carter's top aides.

Byrd insists that the cooperation between Congress and the president has been good. "When we start pointing fingers, the president isn't served, Congress isn't served, the people aren't served," Byrd noted. "Everybody ends up getting hurt."

That's the most sensible statement from Washington in some time.

Drama In The Dollar's Decline

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — For sheer emotional involvement, there haven't been many economic and financial news stories lately to rival the dollar's decline in foreign exchange.

The tangible impact within this country of currency fluctuations would seem to be small, since relatively few Americans have any regular experience changing their dollars for Japanese yen or Swiss francs or German marks.

But those 15-square-inch paper rectangles with the distinctive green ink on the back obviously are important to people as symbols, as well as units of legal tender. "Sound as a dollar," the saying went.

So policy moves by the Carter administration and the Federal Reserve are getting close scrutiny following the president's recent declaration that he was "deeply concerned" about the dollar.

Some observers remain skeptical that much progress can be made toward turning the dollar around until the country makes some headway on another, related problem — inflation.

Their argument, stripped down to very simplified form, is that the appeal of dollars compared with other forms of wealth began to decline because there were just too many of them coming off the printing presses. After that, market psychology took over.

This summer the dollar has fallen much more steeply against some leading foreign currencies than inflation rates and money-supply trends would seem to justify.

One reason for this, analysts say, was that speculators in the exchange market saw the Carter administration as indifferent to the situation and therefore unlikely to take any strong action to reverse it.

"Naturally, this indifference provides an enormous incentive to those who are speculating against the dollar," Albert H. Cox Jr., president of Merrill Lynch Economics, observed recently.

Thus, he said, the "speculative snowball" carrying the dollar downhill kept growing and picking up speed.

At some point, a declining currency is supposed to reach a level where goods produced in its home country become so attractively priced that foreigners step up their buying in that currency. Simultaneously, goods from strong-currency countries become more and more expensive, diminishing purchases of them from weak-currency countries.

This "self-correcting" process has been slow to take hold this time because of the perceived indifference in Washington and a couple of other factors, Cox wrote.

SIN & SALVATION

Many a person who goes complacently through life seeking little except his own personal satisfaction would do well to ponder his own spiritual inadequacy. On the other hand there are people — and there are many of them — trying to improve the moral caliber of their life — who are constantly afflicted with a sense of their own unworthiness.

The Bible has something important to tell both groups of people. It maintains in no uncertain terms that every person is a sinner in danger of judgment. But it also makes clear that there is no one on earth who needs to be hopeless about his sin. There is no sinner too evil for Christ to save. The Bible is a book of promises, and the greatest of these is the promise of forgiveness. It is our greatest need, and it is also God's greatest gift.

Here then is the relation between sin and salvation. No one is so good that he can do without Christ; no one is so bad that Christ cannot save him.

—Elisha Douglass

What do you say to your customers when you have to increase prices?

When someone raises the price of lemons, someone else has to pay more for lemonade.

And no matter how much you value your customers—and no matter how much you hate to increase their expenses—if you're in charge of the lemonade stand, you have to raise your prices. You may not like it, but that's inflation.

It's that way with electricity. Prices for the fuels needed to generate electricity are still climbing, and nobody in Virginia has to buy more of those fuels than Vepco. Add to that the rising costs of financing and constructing new power plants, and you've got the inevitable. Price increases.

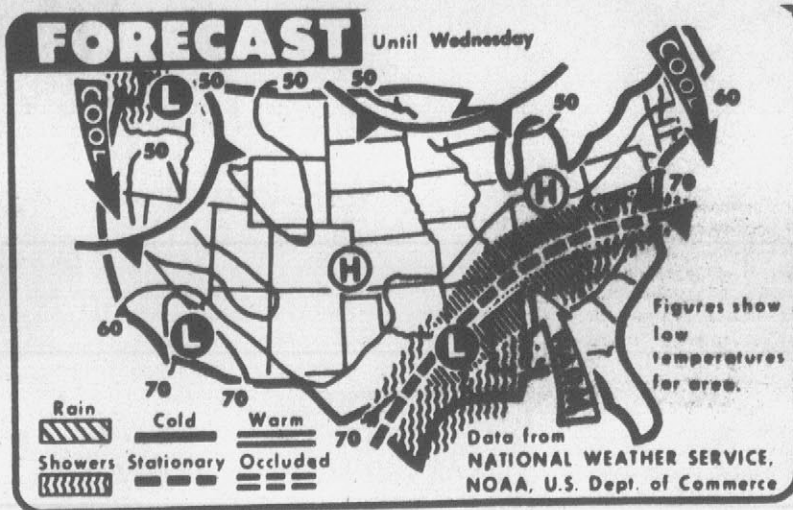

Conservation really does help. And Vepco will continue to fight for a reliable and affordable supply of electricity. We'll continue to point out the need for construction of new power plants as long as the need is there. And we'll continue to strive for a reliable, economical and balanced use of fuels. Of course, that doesn't mean those unwanted increases will just go away. But it does mean they'll be kept as low as possible.

And in these inflationary times, that in itself is some encouragement.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Wednesday's outlook includes a wide band of rain and showers reaching from southern Texas northeast up to Maryland, according to the National Weather Service. Showers are also expected for the northwest section of Washington. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
North Carolina's hot humid weather is hanging on under the influence of a weak high pressure ridge centered over the southeast. Winds are southerly which means an inflow of humid air.

This was expected to lead to scattered mainly afternoon and evening thundershowers today and the thundershow activity will increase over the mountains by Wednesday as tropical storm Debra, which was centered this morning over south-west Louisiana, moves northeastward bringing additional moisture. Much of the state was under heavy fog Monday morning as temperatures ranged from the upper 50s in the mountains to the mid 70s along the southeast coast. The lowest overnight reading was 58 at Canton.

As the fog burned off mostly sunny skies with haze prevailed across the state Monday. Afternoon temperatures ranged from the mid 80s in the mountains to the low 90s along the coast. The highest recorded temperature was 93 at Raleigh-Durham Airport and at Charlotte. A high of 92 degrees was registered at Fayetteville and Wilmington.

Low temperatures this morning ranged from the mid 60s in the mountains to the mid 70s along the southeast coast. Highs this afternoon were expected to range in the 80s in the mountains and the low to mid 90s elsewhere.

A Roundup Of Theft Suspects

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) —
More than 100 suspected thieves paraded before a hidden lens in recent months. But when the subjects found out they were on candid camera, there wasn't anything to smile about.

The camera had caught them selling what police described as stolen goods. To make it worse for the reluctant stars, the men buying the goods were undercover agents.

Charlotte police officers and State Bureau of Investigation agents today continued a roundup which began Sunday night for 109 persons charged in what police called the "sting" operation.

For six months, scruffy-looking undercover agents operated the fictitious C&S Enterprises in a storefront near downtown. After the bogus construction company opened, word was quickly spread through the underworld that stolen merchandise could be sold to "fences" at C&S.

From 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. daily, the agents negotiated with sellers over prices for stolen television sets, autos, clothing and guns. During the six months, 1,759 items worth nearly $500,000 were bought by the agents.

Cameras and a hidden microphone recorded the scenes.

Sunday night, officers began making arrests.

"A few tried to pretend they knew something was up but most of them were saying to themselves, 'I oughta kick myself in the ass,'" one SBI agent said of the arrests.

Officers showed a certain creativity both in running the operation and in making arrests.

Several suspects were arrested when they showed up at a motel, presumably to get details of a new deal from the men they had been dealing with at C&S.

They were given a sealed envelope and when they read the letter inside, they were told they had been dealing with lawmen and to "just freeze."

The name of the company itself was an inside joke. C&S, which is listed in the phone book, stood for city and state, a reference to the agencies working the operation.

And when Charlotte Police Chief J.C. Goodman made the first public statements about the case Sunday night, music from the movie "The Sting" played in the background.

Local and state officials praised the operation at a news conference Monday.

"I think it's time for some people to be put away and gotten off the streets of Charlotte," said Mayor Ken Harris.

Goodman said most of those charged in the operation were professional thieves who stole from homes and stores and sold the goods to "fences."

He said the Charlotte "sting" was similar to highly publicized operations that have been carried out in other cities.

"No matter how much publicity (the operations) get, they still work," he said.

'Black' Schools Draw Whites

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's five predominantly black colleges are drawing record numbers of white students to attend evening classes, officials of the schools said Monday.

Although about 90 percent of the students attending daytime classes at the schools are black, some of the campuses will have as many whites as blacks this fall for courses taught at night.

Estimates from administrators indicate that half the students taking evening courses at North Carolina A&T at Greensboro, Winston-Salem State University and Elizabeth City State University will be white. Fayetteville State University, which holds evening classes at Fort Bragg, has a white enrollment of about 80 percent for those courses.

There were no estimates on the racial breakdown at North Carolina Central University in Durham, but officials said the white enrollment for evening classes has increased substantially.

Educators say factors responsible for the shift include increased program offerings on the black campuses, efforts of the University of North Carolina System to increase white enrollment at the five schools and changing attitudes among whites.

Officials at Elizabeth City State said about 35 percent of the evening students were white last fall but that about half will be white this year. The percentage of whites at N.C. A&T is expected to rise from 20 percent three years ago to about 50 percent this year.

Boyer Death Is Ruled Suicide

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Actor Charles Boyer took his own life with an overdose of sleeping pills two days after the death of his wife of 44 years, Maricopa County Coroner Thomas Jarvis has ruled.

Boyer, the sophisticated French-born actor who had played opposite some of Hollywood's leading ladies, was buried Monday on what would have been his 79th birthday.

The private ceremony at Holy Cross Cemetery in Los Angeles was attended by seven close friends, including actresses Loretta Young and Irene Dunne and actor John Forsythe.

"He died of an overdose of Seconal — a suicide," Jarvis said after blood samples had been tested. Jarvis said "a very small amount of alcohol" also turned up in the samples.

Seconal is a barbiturate used widely as a sleeping pill.

Boyer died Saturday after being found unconscious about 10 a.m. and rushed to the St. Joseph's Hospital heart center. Jarvis had said Sunday an autopsy indicated previous heart disease.

"There were signs of a previous infarction," Jarvis said then. But he said he planned to send blood samples to a toxicology laboratory "to determine whether he might have overdosed on a drug." He said "there is no evidence of that, but we'll double-check."

Boyer's only child, Michael, died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound in 1965 at age 21.

His wife, Patricia, 68, died of cancer Thursday and was buried in Los Angeles.

In a career dating back to the 1920s Boyer may be best remembered for his role as a thief in "Algiers" — the movie in which he supposedly uttered the line "Come with me to the Casbah" to his leading lady, Hedy Lamarr. Although Boyer never said the line, legends of impersonators used it in his name.

Nixon's Guest

The cautious reentry of Richard M. Nixon into politics came on Aug. 22 when he met privately with the guru of the Republican tax cut movement, Arthur Laffer.

Nixon had expressed curiosity about the "Laffer curve" which seeks to justify the wholesale tax cut embodied in the Kemp-Roth bill. So Laffer, a University of Southern California economics professor, and his wife were invited to lunch at San Clemente.

Earlier Nixon broke his no-interviews policy by talking to Hugh Sidey of Time magazine and Godfrey Sperling of the Christian Science Monitor. Nixon told Sperling that Ronald Reagan, front-runner for the 1980 Republican presidential nomination, is lacking in "substance." Nixon's choice: John B. Connally.

GOP Backs Carter

President Carter's crash lobbying campaign to sustain his veto of the big defense bill is going backwards with House Republicans, who are mobilizing a campaign of their own to override the unprecedented veto.

Indeed, all but a couple of the 25 House Republicans who voted to strip the nuclear carrier out of the bill as the president wanted are now expected to switch and vote to override Mr. Carter.

That switch, pushed hard by Rep. Bob Wilson of California, ranking Republican on the House Armed Services Committee, and House Republican leaders, could complicate Mr. Carter's problem: lining up enough votes to prevent angry opponents from obtaining the two-thirds vote required to override a veto.

Activists Seek 'Intervention'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Jane Fonda and her husband, political activist Tom Hayden, want President Carter to diplomatically intervene in Cambodia to stop widespread executions reported there.

But the couple, who were outspoken opponents of the Vietnam War, told Carter in a telegram Monday that they disagree with a suggestion by Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., that an international military force be formed to topple the communist government in the Southeast Asian nation.

mercial flights between Miami and Havana have resumed on a limited basis, and there has been a steady flow of U.S. businessmen, academicians and tourists visiting Cuba.

Officials say progress on these exchanges has been made easier by the existence of the interest sections.

But Castro still belabors the United States in his speeches — although the targets of his criticism have changed. In contrast with his treatment of previous American presidents, Castro has been sparing in his criticism of Carter and on occasion has spoken kindly of him.

Castro's invective usually is directed at the CIA, U.S. "reactionary circles" and presidential national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski.

The recent World Festival of Youth and Students held in Havana suggested that Cuba, in its relations with the United States, is not averse to keeping open the wounds of the past rather than looking toward a better future.

Leaf Prices Improving

Prices on the Greenville Tobacco Market reflected continued improvement Monday as an average of $139.01 per hundred pounds was recorded.

J. N. Bryan, sales supervisor of the Tobacco Board of Trade here, said that warehouses sold 1,090,085 pounds for $1,515,325 in recording the new market high.

The increase in prices also saw a sharp drop in Stabilization receipts as only 3.98 percent of total sales was designated for the loan program compared to double-figure percentages last week.

Top practical price paid, yesterday was $1.55 per pound, according to Bryan, with an increase noted in the volume of leaf and cutters on the warehouse floors and less lugs, primings and non-descript offerings.

For the season, the market has sold 16,295,663 for $20,477,108, an average of $125.66 per hundred pounds.

Clearing Tracks Of 42 Derailed Cars

McEWEN, Tenn. (AP) — Railroad cranes arrived to begin clearing Louisville & Nashville tracks of 42 derailed freight cars today while safety officials studied the removal of two tankers full of a flammable chemical and evacuees waited to return to their homes.

There appeared to be no leaks or immediate danger and no

CLASHES CONTINUE — A jeep of soldiers guarding a prisoner passes construction vehicle, left, in streets of Leon Nicaragua on Monday. Clashes between demonstrators seeking the ouster of Pres. Anastasio Somoza and National Guardsmen continued in injuries were reported. The site is about 10 miles east of Waverly where an L&N propane tank car explosion killed 16 persons Feb. 24. With that disaster in mind, authorities ordered out 10 to 15 families within a half-mile radius after the cars jumped the tracks Monday afternoon. Humphreys County sheriff's deputies kept persons at least 2,500 feet from the wreck.

Charles Castner, an L&N spokesman in Louisville, Ky., said today, "All of our division officers along with a number of safety and environmental officials are on the scene this morning. The figure to open the line is 8 a.m. tomorrow morning. I think they want to transfer the load. They plan to bring in two tank trucks or two tank cars. But first they have to look at the cars."

The 99-car, 3-locomotive freight was bound from Memphis to Louisville. Castner said the derailed cars piled up in three groups.

Phil Hooper, L&N resident vice president from Nashville, said the train carried seven tank cars, four empty. Two contain propylene oxide, a flammable chemical, and one sodium hydroxide.

Hooper said he and others, including Civil Defense officials, examined the two derailed tankers. None were leaking and there were no telltale odors of escaping chemicals, he said.

Mrs. E.C. Hall, the sheriff's wife, said Monday night several of the evacuated families had been allowed to return home. "The electricity in the area has been shut off as a precaution," she said.

Sheriff's deputies and rescue squads, she said, patrolled overnight to keep people out of the area.

Castner said the cause of the wreck is not known.

Johnson said the site is a timbered area about two miles east of McEwen and less than a mile from U.S. 70. Deputy James Davis said one house is nearby.

In Washington, a spokesman for the Chemical Transportation Emergency Center, a chemical industry agency, said propylene oxide is a flammable liquid that can burn skin and eyes. He said breathing the chemical's vapors can cause dizziness. Sodium hydroxide is a caustic liquid soda but is not flammable.

Meanwhile, in East Tennessee, officials of the Southern Railway in Knoxville said a single rail car loaded with gravel left the tracks Monday night and rammed into a switching box at the John Sevier Yards.

An electrical fire began but was doused and no one was injured.

Crossing Repairs

Mayo Allen, director of Public Works here, announced that repairs to the railroad crossing on W. Fifth Street will be made on Thursday and Friday of this week.

Allen reported that he had received word from Seaboard Coast Line Railroad's office of the division engineer in Rocky Mount that the much needed repair work on the busy crossing had been scheduled.

He advised the motoring public that during the repair period, the Public Works Department will place barricades at the intersections of Elizabeth and Fifth Streets and Pitt and Fifth Streets.

Persons who need to pass the barricades to reach destinations on W. Fifth Street will be able to do so, he said, although no through traffic will be permitted. Barricades will go up at 6 a.m. Thursday and hopefully be removed by 5 p.m. Friday, he added.

Allen said that as soon as Seaboard completes its repair work, the Public Works Department will immediately reapply asphalt to complete the improvement project.

The director pointed out that the city has received "a lot of complaints" regarding the bumpy crossing and he asked for the cooperation of the public during the repair period.

Park Service Policy Aired

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A management policy calling for extensive wilderness, limited access to coastal islands and minimum development is being proposed by the National Park Service for Cape Lookout National Seashore in Carteret County.

The proposal was developed by the park service following a review of five alternatives outlined in an environmental assessment released in March.

The proposal includes a recommendation that 65 percent of the islands in the seashore be designated as wilderness areas and that facilities be developed at five sites. The administrative headquarters for the seashore would be on Harkers Island.

Final decisions on the management policy will be made after further review, according to Joe Brown, southeastern regional manager for the park service. He said he has ordered the preparation of an environmental impact statement on the proposals.

Brown said a draft impact statement, proposed general management plan and wilderness recommendations are expected to be completed by fall of 1979.

"The message from those individuals and organizations commenting on the alternatives is clear," Brown said. "The majority want most of the seashore designated as wilderness or natural area with only limited development or visitor facilities."

Downgraded

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Debra, a relatively tame storm that never reached hurricane intensity, was downgraded to a tropical depression early today as it moved deeper into Louisiana and headed for Arkansas.

Authorities said the more than 6,500 residents of the coastal parish of Cameron in southwest Louisiana evacuated in the face of the storm were told they could return home.

Sheriff's Deputy Russell Nunez said high waters from swollen tides and heavy rains had receded, clearing the way for evacuees to return.

Gale warnings were discontinued from Port Arthur, Texas, to Grand Isle, La.

One storm-related death was reported. A spokesman for Penrod Drilling Co. in Dallas said Danny G. Jackson, 27, of Winnsboro, La., was swept to his death by a 15-foot wave from a drilling platform located 80 miles south of Cameron. The body was recovered.

Gets Prison For Holdup

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — A 29-year-old New Bern man was sentenced to 24 years in prison Monday after pleading no contest in the holdup of a branch bank in which two bank employees were shot.

U.S. District Judge John D. Larkins Jr. accepted the no contest plea by William Aubrey McKay despite the objections of Assistant U.S. Attorney Douglas Parsons. Parsons complained that the plea had not been arranged in advance and there had been no plea bargaining.

The government had called 27 witnesses for the trial of McKay in the May 25 holdup of First Citizens Bank and Trust Co., but defense attorney Sam Whitehurst offered the no contest plea before jury selection began.

The only witness called to testify, FBI Agent Robert Shields, said witnesses reported that a gunman in his 20s or 30s entered the branch bank at James City, opened fire on two employees with a .38-caliber pistol and fled with about $8,500. He also described the investigation leading to McKay's arrest on June 2.

Two women employees of the bank were wounded in the holdup. Kathleen Gillikin, 48, manager of the branch office, was shot in the head and abdomen and Sandra Slinker, a teller, was shot in the shoulder, arm and hand.

Farmville Mart Leaf Quality Up

FARMVILLE — Quality of tobacco on the Farmville market yesterday was the best of the season, according to Louis N. Williams, sales supervisor of the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade.

Cutters and hogs accounted for most of volume. Nondescript grades accounted for only a small percent of sales. Stabilization receipts were 1.49 percent of gross sales, compared with 11.89 a year ago.

The market 655,009 pounds for $950,468, for an average of $145.11 per hundred pounds. This contrasts with $118.44 on the same day last year. To date the market has sold, 10,057,377 pounds for $13,055,620, for a season average of $129.83, compared with $105.72 last year. Yesterday's average was the highest on record.

Recycling Plant

DUBLIN, Ga. (AP) — About 75 percent of the construction work has been completed on a paper mill here which officials say will recycle about 150,000 tons of waste newspaper a year.

The mill is owned by Southeast Paper Manufacturing Co., a partnership formed as a joint venture by Cox Enterprises Inc., which owns The Atlanta Journal and The Atlanta Constitution; Knight-Ridder Newspapers Inc., and Media General.

The $131 million plant will convert old newspapers into new newsprint.

General Manager Ronald F. Wilson said the plant, which covers about 1,000 acres in Laurens County outside the city of Dublin, will use about 4.3 million gallons of water per day from the Oconee River to make the new paper.

To protect the river, waste water treatment facilities covering about 150 acres are being constructed, he said. Initial production at the mill is set to begin next June or July.

phasized. Brewer said there might be changes in university procedure, "to eliminate needless intermediate checkpoints in institutional functioning," as well as, "some administrative reorganization," citing a proposal now before the faculty, staff and trustees for discussion.

"Students and student life are of fundamental importance," Brewer emphasized. "We must re-examine our teaching at East Carolina and other universities as well...to ensure that our students do have a memorable experience, that they go into the world as competent and caring citizens, and that they will be trustworthy stewards of our heritage when it becomes their turn to act as principal agents of society."

Brewer told the faculty, "the academic process is the foundation of the university. It is true that a number of important activities are supportive to, and interlocked with, this academic process. "For example," he said, "we expect good athletic teams, a good student newspaper, and theatre visiting artists will be brought to our campus."

"But our central purpose must remain inviolate. We are an academic institution, and I pledge to you that we shall continue to be one."

Brewer said, "the chancellor's door will be an open one, but there is every expectation that normal and usual lines of communication be followed. Of course, I want everyone at East Carolina who really needs to see the chancellor to be able to do so. I've been a faculty member too long not to appreciate what an 'open' administration means."

"I want all of us to know a great deal of what is happening, and what is going to happen, at East Carolina. I want all concerned parties to be involved in decision-making, and I want us all to share in the rewards of our labor."

Brewer concluded, "here at East Carolina, let us view our past record with pride, and let us summon anew our spirits for our quest for excellence in the years ahead for those missions that have been placed under our trust. Together, we shall succeed."

Farmville Has Hearing On Grant Application

FARMVILLE — An estimated 30 persons last night attended a public meeting held by town commissioners on an application for a federal grant for rehabilitation of substandard housing in a section of Farmville.

Town Administrator Patrick Thomas said mechanics of the HUD program were outlined and the status of Farmville's application was explained. A preapplication for the $273,300 grant has been approved, he said, with the deadline for the official application set for Sept. 15. The grant would, if approved, allow the town to financially assist persons who wish to repair or demolish housing in an area bounded by Walnut, Wallace, George and Moore Streets.

Policies instituted by the board for this project, if approved, include the setting of priorities so as to help rehabilitate owner-occupied dwellings first; then dwellings rented out by persons without extensive financial resources; and finally those of which the owners have substantial means. Agreements would have to be made by the owners that rent on improved houses would not be increased for five years following completion and that any money derived from the sale of one of the houses that an appraiser would attribute to the improvement would go to the town.

Grant money could also be used to relocate persons displaced by demolition or rehabilitation.

Most Grade Prices On Tobacco Inched Higher

By The Associated Press

Most grade price averages were higher Monday on the South Carolina and Border North Carolina tobacco market, according to the Federal-State Market News Service.

Gains ranged $1 to $7 per hundred pounds for the heavy volume grades. Quality also improved on the Border Belt, with offerings consisting of more good and fair leaf and fewer cutters, lugs and non-descript. Leaf made up about 75 percent of sales, according to the news service.

The average price last week was $139.34 per hundred pounds, up $2.65 over the previous week.

Grade prices were strong Monday on the Old and Middle Belt, the news service reported. Most averages were up between $1 and $4 per hundred pounds, with lugs the most consistent gainers. The top price was $156

per hundred pounds for small amounts of better-quality leaf and lugs.

Quality improved with a sharp increase in volume of leaf and cutters, and a similar decline in primings and non-descript. The average price last week was $114.80 per hundred pounds, a gain of $7.19 over the previous week's average.

Quality and prices also improved on the Eastern North Carolina Belt. More good leaf and fair cutters were offered and less low-quality lugs, primings and nondescript. Most increases in grade averages were between $1 and $3 per hundred pounds. The practical top price held at $155 dollars.

The average price last week on the Eastern Belt was $131.54, up $5.78 from the previous week.

Eastern Belt markets reported sales of 8,591,722 pounds Monday for $1,956,858, an average of $139.17 per hundred pounds. The average was up by $7.39 from last Friday's sales. Eastern Belt sales for the season reached 127,893,063 pounds for $161,565,959, an average of $126.33.

Old Belt sales Monday were 5,762,131 pounds for $7,371,849. The day's average price of $127.94 per hundred pounds was up by $11.61. The season total for the belt rose to 57,581,088 for $65,439,901, an average of $113.65.

Sales on the Border Belt Monday were 4,776,520 pounds for $6,885,917, an average price of $143.60 — up by $5.87 from the previous day's average. Season totals were 112,629,668 pounds for $151,307,682, an average of $134.34 per hundred pounds.

Rain Ends; Reds Still Wet

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

The Cincinnati Reds have played 705 consecutive home games without being rained out and wanted to extend one of their few positive streaks.

They needn't have bothered. Oh, they kept the non-rainout streak going by waiting two hours, 46 minutes for the monsoon to stop. But then they went out, got just two hits off John Candelaria and Ed Whitson and extended a negative streak in doing so: the Pittsburgh Pirates won 3-1 to hand the Reds their fifth straight loss and the 15th in 21 games.

"It'll end," said Reds Manager Sparky Anderson, "but I don't know when." Time is running short. The loss left Cincinnati six games behind Los Angeles, which blanked Montreal 4-0 to extend its first-place lead in the National League's West Division.

In the other games, the Philadelphia Phillies clubbed the San Diego Padres 6-1 and the Atlanta Braves edged the Chicago Cubs 4-3.

Dodgers 4, Expos 0

Injuries to Rick Monday, Bill North and Dusty Baker forced Los Angeles to start a makeshift outfield, with regular second baseman Dave Lopes playing in center and catcher Joe Ferguson in left.

But Lopes broke a scoreless tie with his two-run, seventh-inning homer and Lee Lacy added a two-run shot to back

Burt Hooton's four-hitter, his second straight shutout.

The Expos, as usual, didn't provide much offense for Steve Rogers, 13-10. In his 10 losses this year, Montreal has managed 11 runs and has been shut out twice.

Hooton, 15-8, won for the 10th time in 12 decisions.

Phillies 6, Padres 1

Greg Luzinski and Bob Boone drove in third-inning runs to help Jim Kaat record the 260th victory of his career.

That's well down on the all-time list, but it brought Kaat within one career victory of the Padres' Gaylord Perry, who has won 15 this season.

"Gaylord was kidding me before the game," said the 39-year-old Kaat. "He said I wouldn't catch him. I told him I wouldn't catch him for a while, but I'd outlast him."

He just might. The left-hander said he wants to pitch "five more years or 800 innings — whichever comes first."

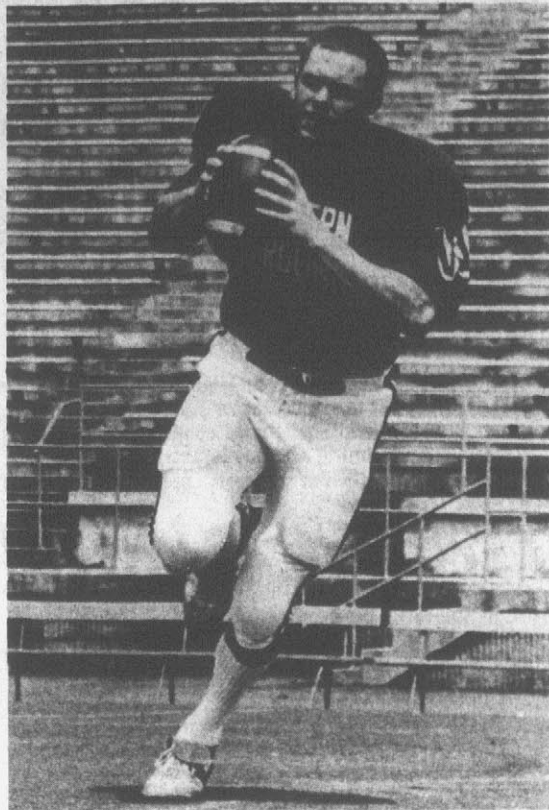

Perry, approaching his 40th birthday, has made no such claims.

Braves 4, Cubs 3

Jeff Burroughs' second homer of the game, a two-run shot in the sixth inning, gave him the National League batting lead and gave Atlanta its victory over Chicago.

Burroughs now leads Pittsburgh's Dave Parker .314 to .312.

The outcome snapped a seven-game losing streak for the Braves, their longest of the season.

Outstanding Passer

Mike Pusey, Western Carolina's quarterback, was the All-Southern Conference selection at his position last year, and is rated as one of the nation's top passers for this season. He and his fellow Catamounts will invade Ficklen Stadium Saturday night at 7 p.m. for the season opener against the Pirates of East Carolina.

Western Has Top Thrower

"Mike Pusey is the finest passer I've seen since I've been in Greenville," said fifth-year East Carolina coach Pat Dye after watching films of the Western Carolina quarterback in action from last season.

"He's even a better passer than Pat Sullivan was, I think," Dye added.

Sullivan was the Heisman Trophy winner in 1971, Dye's next-to-last year as an assistant at Alabama.

"Bob Waters does a fine job with the passing game, as good as any coach in the country," Dye continued about the opening game opponent for Saturday night. "And their running game complements their passing game so well. They have great speed at the skill positions, which makes for an explosive offense. You don't play many teams who average over 400 yards a game offensively."

Dye added that Western is not shy about throwing the ball. "I'll guarantee that we'll find out what kind of pass rush we have and how well our secondary will be able to cover people this fall mighty early."

The Catamounts average 406.5 yards per outing last fall, going 6-4-1. East Carolina was 8-3 in 1977.

The two teams meet Saturday in Ficklen Stadium at 7 p.m.

U.S. Romp Has Germans Dizzy

BERLIN (AP) — The American-dominated World Swimming Championships, the last big international swimming event of the year, has left battered East Germany looking for answers for the 1980 Olympics.

"There are still two years," East German freestyle swimmer Barbara Krause said after winning her country's only gold medal of the nine-day event.

"Swimming will develop and it will be harder to win," she said, assessing her own prospects and those of her teammates. "It's hard to tell who will be there."

Red Sox Score Three Times In Ninth To Pull Out 10-9 Victory

By The Associated Press

A baseball game is never over until the last man is out, and where the Boston Red Sox are concerned that last out never seems to come.

"With this club, I always feel we can pull out any game," Manager Don Zimmer said Monday night after the Red Sox scored three times in the bottom of the ninth inning and edged the Seattle Mariners 10-9 in a slugfest that produced 16 extra-base hits, including Jim Rice's 34th home run.

A day earlier, they came from behind with two runs in the bottom of the 12th to beat California 4-3.

The Red Sox maintained their 7½-game lead over New York in the American League East when the Yankees beat California 4-1. The loss, coupled with Kansas City's 3-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox, dropped the Angels 1½ games behind the Royals in the AL West.

Elsewhere, the Texas Rangers pounded the Toronto Blue Jays 11-3, the Milwaukee Brewers clobbered the Detroit Tigers 10-1 and the Baltimore Orioles downed the Oakland A's 7-3. Cleveland and Minnesota were not scheduled.

Yankees 4, Angels 1

Ed Figueroa pitched hitless ball for six innings and combined with Rich Gossage on a three-hitter as the Yankees defeated Frank Tanana. Figueroa hit one batter and walked one over the first six innings before Jim Anderson singled up the middle to start the seventh.

Royals 3, White Sox 2

Willie Wilson's ninth-inning sacrifice fly scored John Wathan with the winning run. Wathan opened the ninth with a double, his third hit of the game, and moved to third on Frank White's infield hit to set the stage for Wilson.

Rangers 11, Blue Jays 3

Al Oliver drove in four runs, two with his 13th homer. Toby Harrah, Richie Zisk and Bump Wills also homered for Texas. Oliver put the Rangers ahead with a two-run single in the fifth inning and homered in the seventh.

Brewers 10, Tigers 1

Jerry Augustine fired a two-hitter and Robin Yount smashed a three-run homer. The only hits off Augustine were singles by Ron LeFlore in the fifth inning — extending his hitting streak to 19 games — and Lou Whitaker in the eighth.

Orioles 7, A's 3

Doug DeCinces' two-run homer highlighted Baltimore's four-run eighth as the Orioles extended their winning streak to seven games and handed Oakland its eighth straight defeat.

Duke Has To Win For Dunn To Get Honors

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — In his three years at Duke, quarterback Mike Dunn has put on dazzling ball-handling shows, piled up more than 4,500 yards total offense and played heartstopping football.

What he hasn't done, though, is win the honor he's wanted for all that time — a place on the all-Atlantic Coast Conference team.

The chief reason for the failure, he figures, is the so-so record the Blue Devils have finished with each year. Duke hasn't had a winning season since Dunn was in high school.

"A lot of my teammates tell me, 'you'd probably be on more magazine covers and on T-V more if we had a winning season,'" said Dunn, tall and lanky and sporting a Blue Devil baseball cap. He was speaking during a visit by Operation Football, a writers' tour of the ACC's preseason football camps.

"I wanted to be all-conference quarterback for three straight years, and for the last three I've finished second in the voting. It just makes me think I've got to do more. We've got to improve on 5-6, which is what we were last year."

Dunn, from Hampton, Va., has drawn plenty of notice without the final honor, which last season went to Steve Fuller of Clemson. He's three times been the conference offensive back of the week, owns six Duke records, and is credited with almost single-handedly directing some Duke victories — such as a touchdown pass on the final play last year for a one-point win over Georgia Tech.

Virginia Coach Dick Bestwick said earlier in the week he thought Dunn was the difference between Duke's modest success, and seasons with records more like his own, which feature only one or two victories. Duke Coach Mike McGee is even more enthusiastic in praising his star.

"He is a remarkable player and a remarkable guy, Mike Dunn," McGee said. "This year I think he'll be a good thrower in addition to the best option quarterback I've ever seen. He's really got the great toughness and inner strength for playing with pain, that sort of thing."

The pain has been there, not only from the losing but from the hitting. Dunn, Duke's only real offensive threat last year, estimates he is hit by defenders on 80 percent of the plays.

"Mentally it doesn't bother me. Physically, on Sunday morning I'm hurting," said Dunn, who missed practice this week with a shoulder bruise.

Does he think some of it might be excessive, by defenders hoping to knock out Duke's main threat? "Yeah, sometimes it's cheap shots," he said.

"I've had a lot," he said, when asked who has done that. "Sometimes when we play the University of Virginia, there have been some late hits. And when we play Clemson and the University of South Carolina, just the rivalry we have creates a little friction."

Dunn is certain to repeat as the key element of Duke's offense this season, as the running game remains unsettled outside of him. Duke has three experienced running backs, led by Greg Rhett, but none ran for much more than 300 yards last season and they were not break-away threats.

On the offensive line, five of seven starters are gone. On defense, eight starters return, led by linebacker Carl McGee.

Dunn will direct the Blue Devils in his last season against a traditionally tough Duke schedule that includes trips to Tennessee and Michigan, and Georgia Tech at home.

"I just go all out. I feel it's up to me every Saturday to give it all I can," he said. "A lot of my teammates think I shouldn't take it so seriously. But that's just the way I am. The quarterback handles the ball every offensive play, and my job is to run the offense and direct the team. I get it started."

Spinks Will Get More Money

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Leon Spinks is being paid $3.75 million for his upcoming championship fight with Muhammad Ali — $500,000 more than the former champ, according to contracts on file with the state of Louisiana.

But Ali is getting some perks of his own, like 25 first class hotel rooms for more than two weeks and 40 free airline tickets for his friends.

Those details were spelled out in the contracts for the Sept. 15 fight on file with the Louisiana State Athletic Commission and state attorney general's office.

The contracts between the fighters and Top Rank Inc. of New York show that Ali will receive $3.25 million. It had been said that Ali would get less money than the man who beat him in February, but until the contracts were made public, it was not known how much less.

Ali will be able to soothe his ego with 30 first class roundtrip airline tickets and 10 economy tickets from anywhere in the United States.

And he will get four two-bedroom suites and 21 other hotel rooms for 16 days at sites approved by advisor Herbert Muhammad, as well as three chauffeur-driven limousines for the same period and 200 free fight tickets.

Clinic For Stats

The East Carolina University Sports Information Office will conduct a clinic on Saturday on sports information techniques, and principles, along with football scorekeeping and statistics.

The session is free to interested high school and junior high school coaches and their student reporters and statisticians.

It is slated to begin at 9 a.m. and will end at 1 p.m. Later in the afternoon a tour of the press box will be given, and those who wish to remain will receive free tickets to the East Carolina-Western Carolina football game.

It is requested that advance reservations be made if possible, by contacting Walt Atkins, Sports Information Director, East Carolina University.

The session will be held in Minges Coliseum.

Plunkett Saw Writing, But Not The Fine Print—49ers Cut Him

By TOM CANAVAN
AP Sports Writer

Jim Plunkett saw the writing on the wall last week — but not all of it.

"I think I can assume I'm not going to start," Plunkett said last week after completing one of his last 18 passes as the San Francisco 49ers compiled a 1-3 National Football League preseason record.

What Plunkett failed to read was the fine print that said he would be cut along with seven other San Francisco players Monday as the 49ers reached the 43-man roster limit.

The NFL roster limit will go back up to 45 players by Sunday, when teams can recall two players they previously placed on waivers.

"It's kind of a relief," said Plunkett, who for eight seasons has been one of the NFL's premier quarterbacks. "I guess I'm not too surprised. You shouldn't be surprised by anything in professional football," the 1970 Heisman Trophy winner added.

The 49ers had another surprise in store Monday when they placed All-Pro wide receiver Gene Washington on the injured waived list and announced that Steve DeBerg, a third-string quarterback a year ago, would be their No. 1 man this season.

The second-year player out of San Jose State completed 23 of 46 passes in the exhibition season.

DeBerg wasn't the only young signalcaller to earn the starting nod for a 1978 NFL regular-season opener.

June Jones III, listed as the No. 4 quarterback on the Falcons' depth chart when the exhibition season opened, was named Atlanta's starting quarterback for its opener Sunday against Houston.

Jones, who will replace Steve Bartkowski, the Falcons' starter last year, saw action in Atlanta's final game last year, but earned the starting berth by leading them to two preseason victories this year.

Atlanta also cut seven players including five-year veteran quarterback Kim McQuilken and placed defensive tackle Brent Adams on the injured reserve list to reach the 43-man limit.

Starting quarterback decisions were also announced in Cincinnati and Baltimore.

Ken Anderson, the Bengals' mainstay in recent years, will have an operation Tuesday on his injured right hand and will miss at least the first five weeks of play. John Reaves will assume his duties.

The Baltimore Colts had better news.

Bert Jones, who suffered an incomplete separation of his right shoulder in last Saturday's preseason finale against the Detroit Lions, thinks he will be ready for the Colts' opener against the Dallas Cowboys Monday night.

Joe Washington should also be in uniform for the Colts.

Washington, acquired in the trade that sent holdout Lydell Mitchell to the San Diego Chargers, announced he will report to the Colts training camp this week. The former Oklahoma running back had informed Baltimore Coach Ted Marchibroda early Monday that he will not be reporting to the team, but changed his mind later in the day.

Baltimore also announced the acquisition of veteran cornerback Dwight Harrison from the Buffalo Bills for a draft choice.

Easy Work Is Over For Terry Bradshaw

PITTSBURGH (AP) — So far in 1978, Terry Bradshaw's been buffeted by a bull on his ranch, tossed through a window in a movie stunt and given a broken nose in a National Football League preseason game.

Now, the Pittsburgh Steeler quarterback awaits the real rough stuff in the American Conference Central Division.

The always physical Houston Oilers have added a humble hulk of a rookie fullback, the come-close Cincinnati Bengals are regrouping after losing their quarterback with a broken hand, and the Cleveland Browns are rallying round a new coach after a training camp in which two ballboys spent time on the injured list.

Once again Pittsburgh is defending champion.

But it took a Houston victory over Cincinnati on the final Sunday on the 1977 regular season to make the Steelers champs — and they felt like survivors.

"I'm hoping we'll pull together this season," said Bradshaw, who spent the winter doing fight scenes for the movie "Hooper" and working on his Louisiana ranch, where he was bruised one day by a bull that barked him against a fence.

"We just never played together last year. We played helterskelter," said Bradshaw, who played last season with a broken arm bone and missed part of this preseason with a broken nose.

How the Houston Oilers go will depend partly on the No. 1 pick in the NFL draft, fullback Earl Campbell.

"He won't show off. He's the same person at 3 a.m. as he is at 3 p.m.," said Oilers Coach O.A.

"Bum" Phillips. So, apparently, is Oilers quarterback Dan Pastorini, fined $500 in camp for missing a curfew.

Briefs

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati authorities say they are investigating the possibility of arson in the May 19 fire that killed 26 horses at River Downs stables.

Hamilton County Police Capt. Herb Vogel said Monday he planned on Wednesday to visit Kentucky authorities, who are looking into a similar fire at Ellis Park at Henderson, Ky.

Anderson Township Fire Department Chief "Bud Stagnaro said he has almost ruled out the possibility that it was an electrical fire.

The fire chief said Vogel will talk with Wayne Lee Hannah, who is charged in connection with the fire at the Kentucky track.

Dr. Harold Kleinert was to perform surgery on the fractured hand of Cincinnati quarterback Ken Anderson, to be out five or six weeks.

"We're going to cope with it. I don't intend to go through this week downcast," says Bengals Coach Bill Johnson, who'll use John Reaves to replace Anderson.

Gone via trades are defensive end Coy Bacon, who had-mouthed the offense, and cornerback Lemar Parrish, who wanted more money.

Safety Tommy Casanova quit to full time on his medical career, and No. 1 draft pick Ross Browner of Notre Dame is out with an arm injury.

Last year, Cleveland finished 6-8 and without Forrest Gregg, ousted as coach. The new man is Sam Rutigliano, an assistant for 11 pro seasons.

The Browns led the division with a 5-3 record last year before quarterback Brian Sipe sustained a broken shoulder.

Rookies include tight end Ozzie "The Wizard of Oz" Newsome and running back Larry Collins, who rushed for 5,300 career yards at Texas A&I.

Then there's Greg Pruitt, who thinks he can gain 2,000 yards rushing and pass receiving but doesn't want to be a one-man offense.

"I want to contribute and be one of the reasons, not necessarily THE reason, the Browns win," says Pruitt.

Greene Central Must Rebuild As Only One Starter Returns

By WOODY PEELE

SNOW HILL — Graduation usually takes somewhat of a toll on a football team, but in the case of Greene Central High School, the handing out of diplomas was devastating to the Ram football squad last spring.

Only three lettermen return from last season's 8-2 team, and just one of those, Charles Lewis, was a starter.

All-in-all, it doesn't leave Coach Stewart Smith with much to brag about as the season opener draws near. Greene Central opens its season Friday night at home against Washington High School. Kickoff is set for 8 p.m.

"We don't have all that many people, but the ones we do have want to play. So I think that we'll come out pretty good despite the inexperience and youth," Smith said.

But there is no doubt that this is a rebuilding year for the Rams. "We could have as many as five sophomores in our starting lineup, and just one senior. So things will look good for the future for us. Maybe we won't be there this year, but we certainly should be an experienced team by next fall."

Perhaps the biggest disappointment, however, is that one player eligible to return didn't.

That was James Best, who rushed for over 1,000 yards last season, despite missing one game completely, and parts of two others. "He just didn't come out. I don't know why," Smith said. "Everyone talked with him, and told him what he was giving up, but he just didn't show up. Now, it's too late."

Best, according to most observers, was one of the top football prospects in the East this year.

The Rams will again operate from the I formation on offense, and from a five-man line on defense.

"We're going to be young and inexperienced, but I expect that we'll come along, if we can just keep our heads up early when the going is rough," Smith said.

Lewis will return to one of the guard positions, while Jeff Scott will take over the other. Jimbo Fulghum will be at center, with Jeff Jones and Thomas Jones at the tackles. Walt Tyndall and Jerry Edwards will be the ends.

Dallas Shackelford will handle the fullback duties, with linebackers; Harrell Smith and Doug Greenville at the corners, and Fulghum and Holmes at the safeties.

"Farmville is definitely the team to beat in the conference," Smith said. "Ayden-Grifton is also going to be strong, as will North Lenoir. Southern Nash will be improved."

"I don't guess that anyone has less experience than we do," Smith added. "So I guess you would have to say that we would have every right to finish last in the league. But I don't expect to be last. We're going for 10-0 right now."

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Colts' orthopedic doctor was to give an opinion today on whether quarterback Bert Jones will be able to play when the Colts meet the Dallas Cowboys next Monday.

Jones, who received a shoulder injury in Saturday's exhibition against the Detroit Lions, says he thinks he will be ready to play in the game, adding that there is no National Football League team he would like to beat as much as the Cowboys.

64 Soil and Water Conservation Plans were prepared for District Cooperators. The Plans included recommendations to help solve drainage and erosion problems.

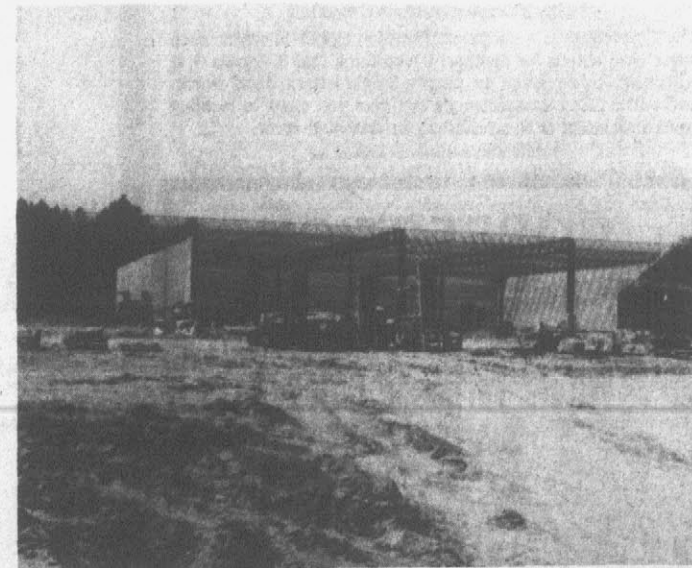

Approximately 400 acres of Woodland were planted by District Cooperators with the financial assistance of the Forestry Management Program and the USDA Forestry Incentive Program.

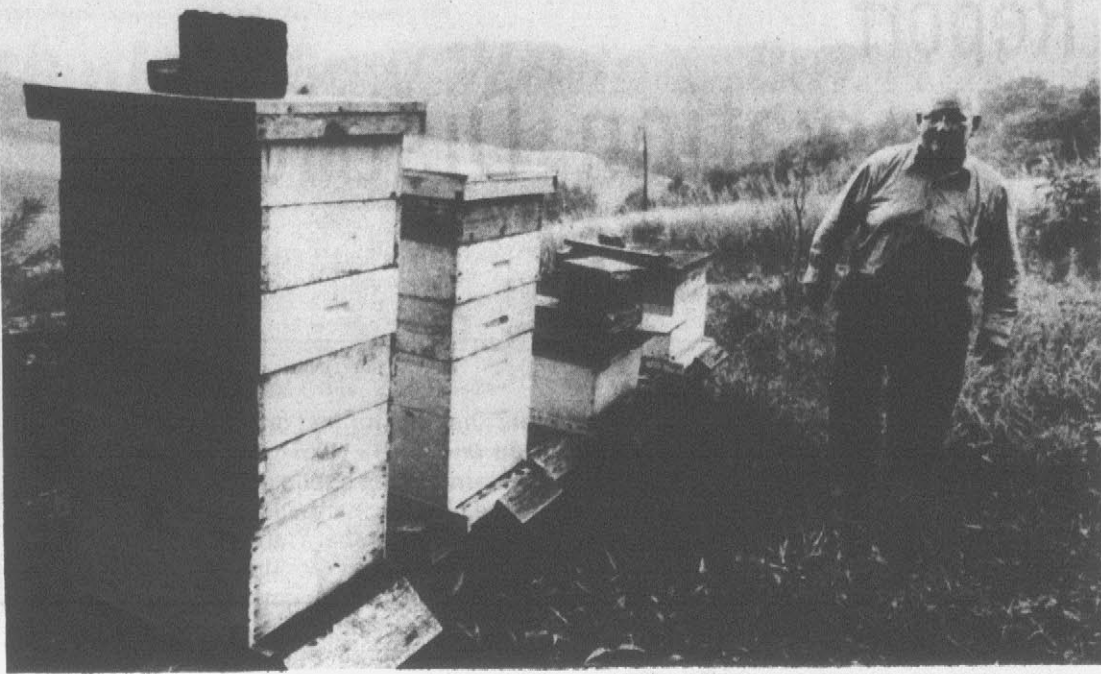

Approximately 160,000 feet of SUBSURFACE DRAINS were installed by District Cooperators to improve their poorly drained soils.

267 SOIL REPORTS were furnished to potential home owners concerning soil suitability for septic tank filter field drainage.

45 REVIEWS were made to Units of Governments on Shopping Centers and Subdivision Plats involving drainage improvement and erosion control.

SOURWOOD SAGE — Emmitt Oliver, of Deep Gap, N.C., won't say there's no such thing as pure sour-wood honey, but he does believe it is hard to come by. (AP Laserphoto)

Bee Keeper Is Convinced Most Sourwood Honey Not Real Thing

DEEP GAP, N.C. (AP) — Emmitt Oliver believes there is such a thing as sourwood honey, but you come upon it mightily seldom.

His own bees, he says, made some last year for the first time in 16 years. That's one of the reasons he's convinced that most of the sourwood honey sold in the mountains of northwest North Carolina can't possibly be real sourwood.

His other reason is that he knows "the fellow that hauls it in from Florida."

Oliver contends that almost all the honey promoted as sourwood is made in Florida, by Florida bees from orange and grapefruit blossoms, then trucked to North Carolina.

And while he frowns on the alleged fraud, he can't help but smile when he sees a car with a Florida license tag stopping at a roadside stand that has a "Sourwood Honey for Sale" sign prominently displayed.

"Them Florida folks," he explained with a grin, "come up here and buy it and then take it back home and say it's sourwood."

Oliver's theory about what makes pure sourwood honey so hard to come by is that "honeydew falls about the time the sourwood's blooming and the bees mix it."

What Oliver calls honeydew doesn't meet the dictionary definition of the term. But Oliver just knows that what he calls honeydew "falls so hard sometimes, it'll drip off the trees."

He pointed as an example to leaves that glistened in the sun as though they were wet or sticky but were neither wet nor sticky. And he can show how "anything under it turns dark — grass, blueberry bushes or anything."

The tendency of honeydew to darken whatever it touches, according to Oliver, is what turns a lot of honey that starts out to be sourwood into what he describes as "red honey."

This greatly reduces Oliver's profits on the honey — his "white honey" brings almost twice as much as his "red" — but that seems to be the only bad thing that happens.

He and his wife, Hestoria, both feel sourwood honey is overrated. "If it's pure," they explain, "it's awful thin."

They "use red honey all the time" because "red honey is thicker."

Hestoria said Emmitt "went out and found him a bee tree right after we moved out to ourselves" when they were married 48 years ago, and has had bees ever since.

Hestoria has worked with Emmitt and his bees for all 48 of those years — cutting honey-filled combs into chunks that will fit into wide-mouthed quart jars and "picking stingers out of his arms, neck, head and face," after he robs his bees without the protection of either a veil or gloves.

"He's always been crazy over bees," she explained, "and I've always hated them."

Dolly Leading Finalists In Country Music Awards

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country-pop vocalist Dolly Parton leads a set of finalists which includes some surprises for the 12th annual Country Music Association awards.

Miss Parton, who altered her country music singing style two years ago to a middle-of-the-road sound, is nominated for four top awards. Five others — The Kendalls, Kenny Rogers, Ronnie Milsap, Willie Nelson and Waylon Jennings — are finalists in three categories.

Miss Parton is a finalist for entertainer of the year, the most prestigious award, and for top female vocalist. Her "Here You Come Again" is a finalist for top album and top single.

Other finalists for entertainer of the year are Crystal Gayle, Milsap, Rogers and 1976 winner Mel Tillis. Milsap won last year.

Joining Miss Parton as finalists for top female vocalist are Janie Fricke, Miss Gayle, Emmylou Harris and Barbara Mandrell. Finalists for top male vocalist are Larry Gatlin, Milsap, Nelson, Rogers and Don Williams.

The finalists, announced Monday, were picked by country music singers, musicians, songwriters and music industry officials. Winners will be announced at the nationally televised awards show Oct. 9 at the Grand Ole Opry House.

Surprises in the balloting were the failure of Nelson's acclaimed "Stardust" album to make the finalists and Loretta Lynn's failure to reach the finalists for top female vocalist.

Completing the finalists for single of the year are "Blue Bayou," by Linda Ronstadt; "Heaven's Just A Sin Away," by The Kendalls; "Mommies Don't Let Your Babies Grow Up to Be Cowboys," by Jennings and "Take This Job and Shove It," by Johnny Paycheck.

Other finalists for top album are "Country Boy," by Williams; "Heaven's Just A Sin Away," by The Kendalls; "It Was Almost Like A Song," by Milsap, and "Waylon & Willie," by Jennings and Nelson.

Nominees for induction to the Country Music Hall of Fame are Johnny Cash, Vernon Dalhart, Grandpa Jones, Hank Snow and The Sons of the Pioneers. Other categories and finalists:

Non-Italian Cardinals Set Major Stipulation

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Non-Italian cardinals played a key role in the surprise election of Pope John Paul I, a prelate of pastoral experience instead of a veteran of the Vatican Curia.

Numbering 84 of the 111 men who voted in the conclave last weekend, the non-Italians could have ended the four-century hold Italians have had on the papacy. But they accepted, and some reportedly suggested, that another Italian should succeed Pope Paul VI.

ANSA, the Italian news agency, said although the "foreign" cardinals agreed to another Italian, they stipulated that he come from a diocese and be rich in pastoral experience rather than be a veteran of the Curia, the central church bureaucracy, like Pope Paul, or the Vatican diplomatic corps.

This eliminated such frontrunners as Cardinals Sebastiano Baggio, Sergio Pignedoli and Pericle Felici and opened the way to the election of Albino Luciani, the 65-year-old cardinal-patriarch of Venice and a man with more than 30 years of pastoral experience.

Cardinal Johannes Willebrands of the Netherlands told reporters the conclave sought "a good bishop, a pastor, who knows pastoral problems from his own experience."

Corriere della Sera, Italy's biggest newspaper, said the foreign cardinals found Luciani "full of positive notes: a man of God, poor, humble but intelligent, with good theological culture, intransigent on matters of doctrine and discipline but also ready to listen and enter into dialogue."

ANSA, reporting "in-discretions" from the secret conclave, said the choice boiled down to Luciani and Cardinal Corrado Ursi, the archbishop of Naples.

After two inconclusive votes

Saturday morning, the agency's account continued, Belgian Cardinal Leo Suenens and French Cardinal Francois Marty led a swing to Luciani. His cause also was helped by the fact that he once expressed willingness to vote for a cardinal from the Third World, Brazilian Aloisio Lorscheider.

Luciani was elected on the third ballot with between 90 and 100 votes, ANSA said. He needed only 75.

2 Solicitation Permits OK'd

City Manager Ed Wyatt announced the approval of two requests for solicitation permits.

Wyatt said that the request of the employees and families of employees of King's Department Store for permission to conduct a sidewalk solicitation on Aug. 26 to raise funds for muscular dystrophy was approved.

Also approved, he reported, was a request by the Greenville Jay-C-ettes for permission to conduct the annual candy sale here during the months of September and October.

Actors Everywhere Are Plugging The New Series

Actor Idled Since 1956 By Role Identification

series. Hodge is returning to television and acting after more than two decades. (AP Laserphoto)

By VICKI VARELA
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—He was "Captain Video," hero of hundreds of episodes of a popular 1950s TV space show. But when the show ended, so did Al Hodge's acting career, for no producer wanted someone so identified with one role.

Now Hodge is making an acting comeback as a CIA agent in a new movie, his first role since his six-year run as the heroic space captain ended in 1956.

"I am tickled pink to be back," the 60-year-old Hodge said as he signed a contract with producer Irwin Schiff for the movie "The Killing Season." "Captain Video," billed in the '50s as "television's most famous space show," featured a time machine in which Hodge traveled in each episode. It had as much impact for young people in the 1950s as "Star Wars" or "Star Trek" has today, said Stan Epstein, who was assistant director of the weekly show.

As Hodge signed his movie contract, a tape of one of the old "Captain Video" shows was running. Only about six tapes have been preserved, the others discarded accidentally about 10 years ago. "I think this is the first time I have seen the show since it went off the air in 1956," Hodge said, moved by the memories it stirred. "Captain Video" was filmed live five days a week from 1949 until 1956. Hodge was paid $60 a week for the Dumont network show, which was carried by 165 stations.

Hodge maintains his fine physique, but his hair has grayed and his eyes show that the last 20 years haven't been easy ones.

"Libraries, men's stores, real estate, clerical work, I have done it all since the 'Captain Video' days," Hodge said. "Unfortunately, there has been no show business work."

Hodge said people recognize him as "Captain Video" more often than you would think, and often greet him on the street as "Captain."

He returns to crime-fighting in his upcoming movie, which will be filmed in Canada in September.

Bring Life To Cartoon Roles

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—The Hanna-Barbera characters — from the Flintstones to Yogi B and Scooby Doo—will come alive as full-size stars of an NBC-TV Easter special with Michael Landon as host. The special will be a television version of a new arena show produced by Sarnoff International Enterprises. The Hanna-Barbera animated characters will be brought to life by actors in full costumes.

"I was a great fan of the captain in the early 1950s," Schiff said. "I heard through the grapevine he wanted to get back in the business and decided to cast him in this movie."

Hodge said he hopes the movie will lead to more jobs on television or in other movies. "As an actor, I would play anything," he said. "Well, almost — nothing pornographic."

Melina Sees Medea As Her Real Self

By MARNA B. PARKASH
WASHINGTON (UPI)—"I always cry for Medea," Greek actress Melina Mercouri says. "For me, Medea is a woman of tomorrow."

Miss Mercouri, whose latest movie is about an actress playing Medea, says the mythological sorceress "is the greatest part for a woman, a heroine who defends the rights of the woman."

Greek legend says Medea ran off with Jason against her father's will, helped him find the Golden Fleece, but then killed their two children when he abandoned her for another woman.

Miss Mercouri, who is touring the United States to promote the movie "A Dream of Passion," says she had trouble with the film because the leading woman is too much like herself. "I had a conflict with Maya because she was too autobiographical," she said in a recent interview. "It is Melina, but Melina in a not very kind way."

She said the movie, written by husband-producer Jules Dassin, is about a classic Greek actress who meets a modern-day American Medea. The film winds up with Medea, her 20th century version and the actress becoming one.

Miss Mercouri said the role of Maya was the most difficult in her life, making "me suffer more than everything I have done in my career."

Miss Mercouri, a left-wing Greek legislator and member of a prominent Athens political family, said the theater should be used to spread political ideas.

"The theater has always been a forum for expressing political and social thought," she said. "I learned as a child that by acting I could make the same points, win the same arguments as politicians."

(We should note that Mr. Foon is not too tightly wrapped. He likes to pretend he's an actor, but he's not. And there is no series called "Emergency Clowns," not yet, but one never knows.)

"Alfred E. Newport, the fine character actor, plays my partner, Biff," Niles revealed. "Biff is the kind of clown who will do anything for a laugh. Rollo's different, though."

"He needs to understand the motivation that makes people laugh and why he likes being a silly person. He just doesn't go about it willy-nilly. Rollo is what you'd call a Method clown."

As we pondered this intelligence, Niles Foon continued talking.

"Emergency Clowns" has been likened to Jack Webb's old "Emergency" series, but it's nothing like it at all," he confided. "For one thing, Julie London isn't in it."

"And it's not set in a firehouse. Rollo and Biff work out of a 'Chucklewagon,' an old Renault filled with 14 other clowns. The car is kept in a warehouse near Universal Studios.

"The warehouse has a siren which automatically goes off each time a network gets the overnight Nielsen ratings."

"When the siren sounds, the 14 clowns tumble out of the Chucklewagon and run around. Then they open the warehouse door. If they can get the car started, they blow the horn and race away."

Niles, clad in baggy pants, a polka-dot shirt, and sporting a red bulb on his nose, predicted

"Emergency Clowns" will be a big hit.

"What makes it unique is that Rollo and Biff are only playing to an audience of network vice presidents," he explained. "Those people are grimmies, particularly vice presidents in charge of comedy."

"Our show's humor will come from making them giggle."

"We will tell them Freddie Silverman has changed his mind and wants to teach science now," Niles said.

The co-star of "Emergency Clowns" also revealed he is writing a spin-off he thinks will help Mr. Silverman and NBC demolish ABC's "Happy Days" in the ratings. He was asked the name of the show.

"It is 'Emergency Happy Days,'" he said. He wanted to say more, but the men with the butterfly net closed in and took him away.

Eye Return Of Harry Reasoner

CHICAGO (AP)—Harry Reasoner, one of the two original anchormen on CBS-TV's "60 Minutes" news program, may be returning to the 10-year-old show.

The Chicago Tribune reported Monday that CBS will announce Reasoner's appointment around Labor Day. The newspaper said the change would take effect in October or November.

In New York, CBS said it has considered adding another person to the show, but a spokesman said no decision has been made on who it would be.

Reasoner recently rejoined CBS from ABC-TV, where he shared the evening news anchoring job with Barbara Walters. He now serves as principal anchor of the "CBS Reports" documentary series.

The United States dominated the Fifth World Pair Olympiad in New Orleans, winning the Charles Solomon Trophy for the best performance by a country for the fifth straight time.

American representatives were particularly strong in the Mixed Pairs event, where they swept the top five places. One of the most spectacular results from the Mixed Pairs occurred on this deal, which featured aggressive bidding by North, Judi Radin, who had just won the Women's Pair Championship, and brilliant play by South, Gerald Caravelli of Des Plaines, Ill. North's one-club opening was artificial, showing 16 or more points, and one diamond was negative.

At his second turn, South cue-bid the opponent's suit, asking for a stopper to play a no trump contract, but North couldn't oblige. Instead, she boldly introduced her diamond suit, and South went on to game.

West led the ace of hearts, ruffed in dummy. A club to the queen led to the king, and the heart return was again ruffed. Caravelli cashed the ace of trumps, noting the fall of the nine. He now proceeded to read the hand perfectly.

National Smoker Study Hails Merit.

'Enriched Flavor'™ cigarette scores high marks in five key areas.

Can MERIT deliver the flavor of leading high tar brands?

Does MERIT satisfy smokers over a long period—or are MERIT smokers slipping back to old high tar favorites?

Read the bottom-line results of new research conducted with smokers like yourself.

MERIT Breakthrough Confirmed

Confirmed: Majority of high tar smokers rate MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading high tar cigarettes tested! Cigarettes having up to twice the tar.

Confirmed: Majority of high tar smokers confirm taste satisfaction of low tar MERIT.

And in detailed interviews conducted among current MERIT smokers:

Confirmed: 85% of MERIT smokers say it was an "easy switch" from high tar brands.

Confirmed: Overwhelming majority of MERIT smokers say their former high tar brands weren't missed!

Confirmed: 9 out of 10 MERIT smokers not considering other brands.

First Major Alternative To High Tar Smoking

MERIT has proven conclusively that it not only delivers the flavor of high tar brands—but continues to satisfy.

This ability to satisfy over long periods of time could be the most important evidence to date that MERIT is what it claims to be: The first major alternative to high tar smoking.

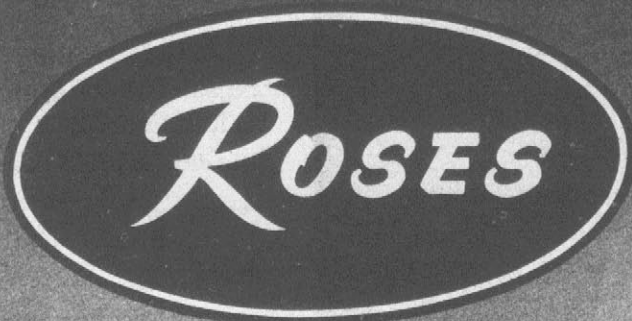

Kings: 8 mg "tar," 0.6 mg nicotine—
100's: 11 mg "tar," 0.7 mg nicotine av. per cigarette, FTC Report May '78
