CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) - President Carter prepared a quiet welcome today for his partners in a Mideast summit conference.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - A Wake Superior Court judge has ordered 63 church-affiliated schools to file reports with the state on teacher certification, graduation and promotion requirements, school terms and other information.

Smith, made public today, was expected to be appealed by officials of the schools, who had contended that state regulations interfered with their freedom of religion.

"We will do the best we can," Carter pledged, although he noted the summit issues are complex and the differences between his guests - Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel and President Anwar Sadat of Egypt - are deep.

American Goes On Trial Today In Soviet Union

By NIKKI FINKE

MOSCOW (AP) - American businessman Francis J. Crawford went on trial today on Soviet charges of currency speculation.

Western reporters were admitted to the courtroom today along with Crawford's American fiancée, Virginia Olbrish of the U.S. Embassy staff; his American legal adviser, Peter Maggs; U.S. consular official Robert W. Pringle and U.S. commercial attaché Stephen Sind.

William Ball of Harrisburg, Pa., attorney for the church schools, said he believed the decision would be appealed.

Sadat was arriving first, being formally greeted at an air base near Washington by Vice President Walter Mondale and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance before proceeding by helicopter to this presidential hide-away.

American oil magnate Armand Hammer, after a recent meeting with Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev, said he believed Crawford would get a light sentence and then be allowed to leave the country. Other sources said this was a "good analysis" of the situation.

Miss Olbrish, a secretary in the embassy commercial office, said Crawford, a 37-year-old native of Mobile, Ala., is "worn out" by weeks of frequent interrogation that preceded the trial.

Total cost of the project has been set at $776,000. The $18,000 from the Greenville City Council, $18,000 from the Board of County Commissioners, and a $36,000 grant from the State is already in hand to complete funding of the project, airport authority chairman James T. Little reminded the board.

Commissioners postponed action on approving the hospital budget for the coming year and postponed action on amending the Greenville City School budget, until both budgets can be studied further.

The board also received a report from the Pitt County Council on the Status of Women during their morning session, and complimented Mrs. Rena Manning, chairman of the council, on the study report.

Commissioners also approved the final plans for the Whispering Pines Subdivision, Section I, located Southeast of Simpson on Secondary Road 1755.

"I am informed that our clients will appeal," he said in a telephone interview. "Now, that decision hasn't been taken yet. It isn't official. All I have are strong indications."

Before leaving the White House Monday for Camp David, Carter said the summit comes at a time "when the political consequences of failure might be very severe and when the prospects for complete success are very remote."

Crawford, the Moscow representative of International Harvester, was arrested June 12, apparently in retaliation for the arrest of the two alleged Soviet spies. Denying that he had broken any Soviet laws, Crawford said he was a "pawn in a political chess game."

He is being tried with three Russians accused of major currency manipulations: Vladimir Kiselev, his seamstress wife, Ludmila, and a cashier at a souvenir shop for foreigners, Alla Solovyovo.

In addition to accepting the federal grant, commissioners named Little as agent to handle the funds for the Airport Authority.

Little said the project should be completed by the Spring of 1979.

Full Investigation Of GSA Allegations Has Presidential Support

By EVANS WITT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Jay Solomon was on a hiking trip in the Shenandoah Mountains when he got the call that President Carter wanted to know what was going on in the widening scandals at the General Services Administration.

and so he would feel comfortable that we were pursuing the investigation," said Solomon.

"I think it's very important to have the backing of the White House, I've had it all the time," Solomon said.

Carter prayed at a Baptist Sunday school session Sunday: "Let every heart involved be cleansed of selfishness and personal pride. Let us all turn to thee, God our father, for true guidance, wisdom, forgiveness of others in the search for common ground."

The two Russians are scheduled to go on trial in Newark, N.J. on Sept. 12.

Although Crawford is liable to a maximum sentence of eight years if convicted, Kiselev could get the death penalty.

Pitt Memorial Hospital director Jack Richardson told commissioners this morning that the state will provide about $835,000 in operating expenses for the medical facility during the coming year to offset the cost of using Pitt Memorial as the prime teaching hospital for the School of Medicine at East Carolina University. He also said the state will provide some $475,000 to supplement salaries of residents at the hospital.

So GSA Administrator Solomon - in blue jeans and a sweater - came down from a mountain lodge to join Deputy Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti for a Labor Day meeting in the Oval Office to brief Carter on the investigations.

The message that came out of the meeting was clear: Carter is giving his full support to the multiple investigations wherever they might lead.

The investigations are apparently now reaching a crucial point, reaching beyond low-level employees and officials and relatively small-scale corruption.

Issues long debated - and sometimes fought over - include Israeli occupation of land seized during the 1967 Mideast war and the fate of 1.1 million Palestinians living on the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

In contrast to the trials of Soviet dissidents, four Crawford has said he knew the Kiselevs only slightly after meeting them through a summer worker in his office. He said he gave Mrs. Kiselev some small sewing jobs to do and paid her with inexpensive Western goods.

Richardson said the hospital is "projected to operate in the black" during the next fiscal year and pointed out that a new bed tower now in the planning stage, "won't be built too soon."

"We wanted just to appraise him of everything that was going on ... no specifics, just in generalities

"No one is exempt from the investigation at all - either inside or outside of the government," said Civiletti, who was dressed in a blue pinstripe suit, in contrast to Solomon.

A White House official who asked not to be named said Carter wanted to encourage all those with knowledge of the scandals to be willing to name all those involved.

VENDERS CONNED?

At the East Carolina ballgame Saturday night, I was appalled to see a group of young couples more than once argue with young vendors over how much change they should receive. They'd claim to have given him or her more money than they actually did. I didn't think fast enough at the time, but would like to know how to report this group of people if I see it happen at any future game, if they have the same seats near mine. R. T.

Earline Leggett of the Athletic Department's Business Office said you should go directly to the concession house if you see anything of this nature again. Either she or her husband, King, will confront the accused immediately, she said. All you have to do is give seat numbers.

Anyone needing to report a vender, she said, needs to get a badge number.

Vendors of popcorn and peanuts only make about a nickel a box or bag, she said, so one successful con could rob them of all or most of their profits.

Ingram Offers Seek Cut In Social Security Tax

By KEITH MILLS
Reflector Staff Writer

In a campaign stop at the Pitt Airport Monday, U.S. Senate Democratic candidate John Ingram said he would fight to reduce social security taxes and declared himself the "only peoples' candidate" in the senate race.

Explaining how a social security tax cut should be funded, the state's insurance commissioner said the economy recession affected by the Nixon-Ford administration caused a significant loss of social security tax revenues.

"The economic recession that was caused by the Nixon-Ford administration set inflation on an upward spiral that has yet to be stopped," he said, "and it also sent unemployment to all time highs. "That unemployment caused a deep recession and that deep recession caused a severe loss of social security revenues," he added. "And that deep valley of loss of revenues for the social security system should have been funded in my judgment by general tax funds."

Ingram said he would focus his efforts to "preserve and perpetuate the strength of middle income Americans ... by strengthening retirement benefits through our social security system."

"Most Americans today fear that far too much of their paycheck is going into a system that may be bankrupt tomorrow unless something is done immediately."

He said the solution is to overhaul social security to protect citizens over 65 who

N.C. Seeing Payoff In Hunt For New Industry

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Gov. Jim Hunt is using a lot of his time and energy trying to attract new industry to North Carolina - and the effort seems to be paying off.

With the Hunt administration spotlighting industrial recruiting as one of its top priorities, North Carolina is outstripping neighboring South Carolina and Virginia in attracting new manufacturing plants.

Hunt says he averages one or two personal visits a week to important industrial projects and makes half a dozen phone calls each week to firms that have shown an interest in moving to the Tar Heel state.

"I just tell them we want them and we'll do whatever it takes," he said. "We push hard."

Although some of the new growth of the past 20 months was already in the planning stages when Hunt took office, development officials give the governor credit for putting his prestige on the line when it counts.

"Timing is important," Hunt said. "I never fail to make a call when I think it'll help. That one call sometimes helps, and gosh knows the number I've made."

North Carolina chalked up $1.2 billion worth of new manufacturing plants during the first six months of this year. Development officials say the plants will eventually provide more than 6,000 new jobs. South Carolina and Virginia had less than 25 percent of that growth.

Hunt said he is more selective in the kinds of industries he welcomes to the state, pointing out the successful push he made to bring a large Phillip Morris cigarette plant to Concord. He said he isn't interested in low-paying industries that exploit the labor market.

The governor uses the state airplane and helicopter and his limousine to show off industrial sites to industrial prospects.

Talmadge Is Still Backed

ATLANTA (AP) — A majority of 500 Georgians surveyed in a recent public opinion poll said they would vote to re-elect Sen. Herman Talmadge in 1980, despite the current investigations of his financial affairs.

Fifty-two percent of the 500 adults responding to the telephone poll, Aug. 23-28, said they would vote for the Georgia Democrat should he seek reelection in two years, the Atlanta Constitution reported Tuesday in a copyright story.

Thirty-two percent said they would not vote for him and 16 percent were undecided, the newspaper said, reporting the results of the survey of 500 Georgia adults in 55 localities across the state which it had commissioned from Darden Research Corp. of Atlanta.

The Senate Ethics Committee and the U.S. Justice Department are investigating the handling of expense and campaign funds by Talmadge's office.

A former Talmadge aide, Daniel Minchew, has claimed that Talmadge instructed him to deposit $13,000 in Senate expense funds in an account at the Riggs National Bank of Washington. Minchew said the funds were later turned over to Talmadge and members of his family.

In addition, the Atlanta Journal-Constitution reported in its Aug. 26 edition that an additional $26,000 in campaign contributions were deposited in the account in 1973 and 1974.

Talmadge has denied both accusations, but has acknowledged receiving $37,125 in excess expense money from the Senate, returning the money to the Senate secretary.

Receiving higher marks for performance than Talmadge in the Darden poll were Georgia's junior senator, Sam Nunn, and Gov. George Busbee.

The Constitution said 21 percent of those polled rated Nunn's performance in office as "very good," 45 percent said "good," 19 percent said "fair," 3 percent said "poor" and 1 percent said "very poor."

As for Busbee, 21 percent of the respondents rated his performance as governor "very good," 47 percent said "good," 23 percent said "fair," 4 percent said "poor" and 2 percent said "very poor," the Constitution reported.

SINGAPORE (AP) — Twenty Vietnamese refugees died of starvation and disease while adrift 36 days in the South China Sea, the Liberian tanker World Kingdom reported; but the tanker brought 54 survivors to Singapore today.

New Traffic Pattern Set Up For Three Farmville Schools

FARMVILLE — Persons delivering children to Farmville Central, Farmville Middle and Bundy Schools here must take a new route this school year.

They may travel westward only on Grimmersburg Street from the Wilson Street intersection to Pitt Street, so as to unload passengers on the side on which the Farmville Middle and Bundy schools are located. This means that those vehicles coming from town must take Wilson Street eastward and double back up Grimmersburg if they need to go to Middle or Bundy and keep straight on out, of course, for Central.

Unloading and loading on Davis Drive, used last year, will be limited to buses and Bundy staff members displaying staff stickers. Davis is one-way northward.

Speed limits during school opening and closing hours are 15 mph on Grimmersburg and 25 mph on Wilson.

Traffic control personnel are to be posted at the following intersections: Davis and Wilson, Wilson and Grimmersburg, and Davis and Grimmersburg. "We think this plan will greatly increase safety for our school children," Farmville Police Chief Ron Cooper said. "We've used about 15 gallons of paint out there, so as to try to make clear what direction people need to take. It's a change that's been badly needed, and we hope people will get used to it pretty quickly and realize it's for the good of their children. In years past, we've had cars unloading across from the Middle School and children crossing traffic in the middle of a block. It's just a miracle we haven't had a bad accident."

At Sugg School here, there will be no route changes and traffic control personnel will continue to be posted on George and Main Streets. A five-minute parking limit on the street in front of the school will be enforced, however, so as to prevent so much loading and unloading in the middle of the street, with children running from between parked cars, Chief Cooper said.

Policewoman In Midwife Role

COLUMBIA (AP) — A Columbia policewoman found herself pressed into service as a midwife early today when a man rushing his wife to the hospital stopped and pleaded for help.

Officer Christine Martin, 23, said she was waiting for a wrecker to tow her stalled patrol car away at 3:50 a.m. today on Garners Ferry Road when a man sped by with his hazard lights blinking and honking his horn.

"I thought he was drunk at first," said Miss Martin, an 18-month veteran of the force.

The driver of the car, John Hampton, pulled over about 100 yards down the road from Miss Martin and her partner on patrol, T.R. Metz.

"I guess he realized he wasn't going to make it to the hospital," Miss Martin said. "And he stopped where he realized there were two police officers to help him."

The officer called for an ambulance, but the mother, Constance Hampton, was in the final stages of labor. "We asked her if she'd broke water yet and she said yes, so I knew it was time," Miss Martin said.

They helped the mother remove some of her clothes, and the child, a girl, was delivered almost immediately, with Miss Martin's help.

"The ambulance wasn't there, so I just held it and told the mother and father it was a little girl," she said. "It wasn't breathing, so I stuck my finger in its mouth and it started hollering. So I knew everything was alright then."

Mrs. Hampton, 32, and her baby were reported doing well at Baptist Hospital.

Officer Martin's supervisor, Capt. W.E. Rabon, said his patrolmen and patrolwomen "normally don't get too much Sixteen persons were killed in traffic accidents around North Carolina during the Labor Day weekend, raising the state's highway death toll this year to 31. During the comparable period last year 981 persons were killed, according to the Highway Patrol.

The last reported traffic death Monday night involved a single car accident in Davidson County. Bobby Leon Barrier, 20, of Denton, was killed when he lost control of his car and wrecked on a rural paved road near Denton.

Nora Elizabeth Spate, 8, of Chowan County in Beaufort County was fatally injured Monday afternoon when a car in which she was riding skidded off the road and hit a tree.

All chamber members are encouraged to complete and return the surveys so final tabulation may be held before the chamber's third annual Out-of-Town Planning Conference in October.

Issues included in the survey are the city/county school merger, the Pitt Technical Community College status and liquor by the drink. For more information, call the chamber office, 752-4101.

Fine Arts Ball Date Set

"An Evening With King Tut" is the theme for the forthcoming annual Fine Arts Ball, which will be sponsored by the East Carolina Art Society.

This year's ball will be held Oct. 7 at the Greenville Golf and Country Club. Music will be provided by the Silent Majority. The club ballroom will be decorated with motifs depicting King Tut and his court.

Chairman for the event is Mrs. David Reid. Other chairmen include: invitations, Mrs. Jerry Powell; publicity, Mrs. William M. Monroe; special activities, Mrs. Ed Tipton II; reservations, Mrs. Max Joyner; tables, Mrs. David Middleton; treasurer, Mrs. Eddie Smith Jr.; and decorations, Mrs. Jack Koontz.

An auction of paintings donated by well known area artists will be held during the evening. Some of the contributing artists are Matt Smartt, Bob Pittman, Charles McNeill and Philip Moose.

The invitations this year were designed by Greenville artist, Dan Morgan, to complement the ball's theme. Through research, Morgan, Mrs. Reid

Perkins, Mrs. Larry Land and Mrs. Roger Mann have created an authentic backdrop of symbols portraying the Egyptian king's quest for life, "healthy and youthful forever and ever."

Decorations will include a pyramid, falcon gods, mummies, papyrus grass and jewels.

Invitations for the ball will be mailed this week.

Wish For Freezer Prompted Kerr's First Essay

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor
NEW YORK (AP) — Jean Kerr says a freezer is responsible for all those witty essays she writes.

Mrs. Kerr — who numbers among her many credits the hit play "Mary, Mary" and the best-selling "Please Don't Eat the Daisies" — explains:

"My play, 'King of Hearts,' has two kids in the cast and this apparently prompted a magazine to ask me to do a piece on kids. I was crushed. I wanted to do something profound, something, say, on the future of the theater.

"But my husband said to go ahead. I finally agreed, but only if I could use the money I was going to get to buy a freezer. After that other magazines started asking, and that is how the books began."

"Daisies," in 1957, was the first. It was followed by "The Snake Has All the Lines" and "Penny Candy." They've now been joined by a 44-item collection called "How I Got To Be Perfect."

Shifting in her chair, Mrs. Kerr, who likens being interviewed in an office to "feeling as if I'm trying to get a job, and I'm too old for it. I keep thinking you're going to ask me if I know how to type," says her favorite piece in the new collection is "When I Was Queen of the May."

The essay tells how she was picked by her teachers to be tallest girl in Scranton, my hometown...I thought the only future for me was in the circus. When I got old enough to date, I only dated basketball players. But when I'd go out with them, I'd be tongue-tied. I knew a lot but I didn't know what words to use that wouldn't make them say, 'Boy, look who swallowed the dictionary.'"

Obviously having a way with words, she took a summer college course in playwriting. The teacher was Walter Kerr.

"One thing, I never wrote the play that everybody wrote. The one about the world the day after the atom bomb blew up. I may have written a terrible play, but I never wrote that terrible play."

She and Kerr were married soon after and they now have five sons who range in age from 19 to 32 and a daughter, 14. She and the noted drama critic have worked together over the years — once on a revue called "Touch and Go," which "we did

Vacation For Julia Is Some Kitchen Play

EDITOR'S NOTE: When America's gastronomic queen, Julia Child, gets sick and tired of cooking, eating and writing, she and her husband, Paul, retreat to their home in the south of France. There she relaxes with old friends, takes in the Mediterranean air and, well, goes to a three-star restaurant or two and plays a bit in the kitchen.

Gusto Julia's got. As much on holiday as everywhere else, her days are all food: buying it, cooking it, eating it, talking and writing about it, and even pondering it like an obsessive philosophical dilemma.

Her small green and blue kitchen here is armed with the same weapons as her "arsenal" in Cambridge, Mass.: knives, whisks, spoons, graters, slicers and sieves, plus a food processor.

By SUZY PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer
GRASSE France (AP) — Julia Child lifted a green bean from its boiling water and tasted judiciously. "Still crunchily underdone," she sniffed, tossing it back into the pot. "Some old biddy once said if you boil beans quickly this way, they'll lose some of their vitamins. I say, if you're worried about that, eat more beans."

Julia's Nicoise is based on tomatoes, anchovies, tuna, capers, olives, plus a touch of Escoffier's version that includes steamed potatoes and green beans. "What's good enough for me," she says.

"This is absolutely non-traditional," she announces. "I'm going to make an aioli, or garlic-flavored mayonnaise, to accompany the salade Nicoise."

Julia Child on holiday is not too different from Julia Child at work. Even when she's in her own kitchen amid the rolling hills, vineyards and olive groves of southern France, the grande dame of American cuisine can't resist deflating a gastronomic myth or two.

The other day, while putting her touch to an unorthodox salade Nicoise for a vacation afternoon, Julia described her holiday life in France, defended American cooking, and tossed off a few useful kitchen tips.

Off a pulley she took an enormous bouquet of garlic. Using an olive-wood mortar and pestle, Julia pounded furiously at enough garlic to hold off a small army — seven cloves for seven people.

Her solution for garlic breath is succinct: "We just tell everyone to eat garlic, and then you won't notice it."

The other day a famous writer who has hardly set foot on Yankee soil in 20 years rambled on about the sloop that flows and oozes through American supermarkets.

Julia fumed. "That is complete nuttiness and not true."

There is great new interest in home cooking in the United States, even more than with the French, who don't bother so much. And you can get wonderful vegetables in the United States, if you know what to look for.

As always, there were the typical Child tips: "Tomatoes shouldn't be kept in the refrigerator. They die! You should simply leave them to ripen on the top of the fridge."

Assemblage of ingredients with local olive oil dressing means more to Julia than just tossing a salad.

"I've seen people swish everything together," she said. "And it just looks like hell." Her own production came out an artful mosaic of color and texture.

Shopping with Julia in the tree-shaded outdoor market is a treat. She scrutinizes everything as though she were buying an engagement ring and she loves the heady scents and fresh taste of all the herbs and vegetables of southern France.

French people do not know her as a star, and usually leave her alone. But in the hilltop village two minutes from her house, Julia is recognized by everybody.

She often embraces Michel, the local caterer-grocer, in a big hug and buys more pate than she had planned. One day while she was picking out bananas, a girl rushed up to her and gasped: "Oh, Madame Child, I heard one of my friends saying you were more famous in your country than (Prime Minister) Raymond Barre is in ours."

Her television shows and newspaper columns came next, turning the 6-foot-2, curly haired Julia into something of a cult figure among American cooks. Another book, "Julia Child and Company," is coming out in fall.

"You've got to cook with gusto," Julia, who is 66, said over her salad. "Otherwise it's no good at all."

French people do not know her as a star, and usually leave her alone. But in the hilltop village two minutes from her house, Julia is recognized by everybody.

Writers Nix Check 'Crusade'

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: It's obvious that you were never a waitress or you never would have given MIFFED IN MASS. the answer you did. (MIFFED asked for separated checks and was told it wasn't the policy of the restaurant. And you said, "Complain to the management, and if that doesn't help, next time take your business elsewhere.")

Abby, you have no idea how much time it takes to write up eight different checks and to collect from eight different people!

Also, when the chef gets eight separate orders, he thinks they're all singles and it creates confusion in the kitchen. Please be fair and tell both sides of the story.

DEAR BETTY: OK, color me "fair." I received a good number of complaints about my answer. Here's another:

DEAR ABBY: Please don't start crusading for separate checks! I'm a waiter, and I can tell you that when a group of people come in together during the rush hour and demand separate checks, it's easy for one or two to walk out without paying. It happens often, and guess who gets stuck?

DEAR TONY: What you say makes sense. I surrender, dear.

DEAR ABBY: My sister brought her 5-year-old daughter to spend a few weeks with us this summer. We have a 7-year-old son who is an only child.

The youngsters spent a lot of time together and were very compatible. One afternoon they were exceptionally quiet, so I went to check on them. I was horrified to find them in the bedroom playing "doctor."

I won't go into detail here, but the little girl was the "patient" and my son was the "doctor," and he was "examining" her, if you know what I mean.

How would you have handled this situation? My sister and I don't agree.

DEAR FULLERTON: I would have kept my cool and not made a big deal out of it.

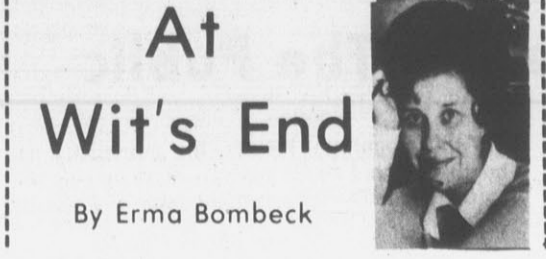

All kids are naturally curious about the bodies of the opposite sex, and "playing doctor" is one way to satisfy that curiosity. It's not serious—as long as they don't "operate."

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the 17-year-old who doesn't clean his room: You were right—up to a point. Yes, close his door, but don't go in and rake it once a week. It's his room, his mess and his responsibility.

If Mom always cleans up his messes, he'll grow up to be one more male who is convinced that if he doesn't clean up after himself, there will always be a woman to do it for him. First it's Mom, then it's his wife.

If he becomes messy enough to disgust himself, he will clean it up. How do I know? My two older daughters are now married and their homes are immaculate and neat. My youngest daughter, 17, is still at home and still a slob—just as her two older sisters used to be.

DEAR BEEN THERE: Welcome to the club! Shake hands with a charter member.

Picking a lifetime career is pretty important. It must be a kick in the head when you've completed your education only to discover the supply far exceeds the demand.

It's happening to teachers who are facing a decline in population and journalists who are becoming disciples of Woodward and Bernstein and ending up in the unemployment line.

I read two stories the other day that are really discouraging. One said if crime didn't increase, they didn't know how they were going to take care of the lawbreakers as the jails are running at capacity. The other story said that future priests in the Episcopal church far exceed the number of available congregations.

"It's not an easy road, believe me. Women throwing themselves in front of you saying 'Me next! I've been waiting since a week ago last Wednesday!' Wading through dirty clothes up to your waist... working in a space so small the mice are crouching... blazing trails where no other man or woman has ever gone before—behind a woman's washer."

Now, if it doesn't pay you to be good — or bad — where do you turn for a job that you can count on?

"But you'll never be out of work. Laundry, like leftovers and junk mail, will always be with us."

I don't know about all of you, but I'm directing my sons into a career that never seems to have enough personnel, whose services are always in demand, and who are the darlings of every group where housewives gather: a washer repairman.

"But what about that washer repairman on television who says he's the loneliest guy in town?"

"You nunny," I smiled. "When you get to be really big you get an unlisted number!"

As I told my son, "Forget medicine. Forget law. Who gets rewarded for science and research that saves lives? You find out how to take a pair of training pants out of a clogged-up pump, boy, and you can write your own ticket.

"How would you like to turn the corner of a street in your truck and see women rush into the street with flowers and shouts of 'Liberator! Liberator!' I'm telling you a man never stands so tall as when he stoops to replace a timer."

Propane Terminal Is Arguable

In Carteret, Beaufort and Morehead residents are now raising questions about a 21 million gallon propane terminal which is being planned for Radio Island.

The terminal obviously would be a boon to Eastern North Carolina, since it would put a major supply of propane gas within easy reach. It could also attract major industries to the Carteret area if they needed to be close to a propane gas supply.

The big question being raised, however, is what happens in case of fire?

A Chamber of Commerce executive asked, "The question has often arisen, is this going to justify the safety hazard this is going to bring to the area? It is going to stop other industries from coming here?"

But another county official said, "I see it as an energy source for Eastern North Carolina and partly for Carteret County."

Many Carteret residents still recall a tanker fire in the harbor some years back. Fortunately the inferno was confined to the ship and did not set off tanks of gasoline on land, but even at that it was an awesome sight.

We can see many advantages to Eastern Carolina if the propane terminal is built and we hope it can be done. Still, we sympathize with Carteret County citizens in raising questions. They should do so, and they should have answers.

Mail Service Is Owed To The Public

Last week the nation — temporarily at least — was again spared the possibility of a postal strike, as the negotiators went back to bargaining.

That's fine, and we hope they get the details worked out.

In the meantime, though, the administration should vow that the mails will keep moving no matter what. Our government owes that to the public.

Palominos For Hong Kong

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Roy Rogers is still King of the Cowboys in Hong Kong.

Two Tar Heels departing this week for a new life in that Oriental city demonstrate this. Skipper's Lucky and Cutter's Dividend are golden palomino quarter horses from this state whose new home will be the Riding for the Disabled Association in Hong Kong.

Glenn Petty, horse specialist with the North Carolina Department of Agriculture, says the Roy Rogers films still shown in Hong Kong prompted the search for the particular horses in this state.

More importantly, Petty tested a lot of horses before making the final selection for the horses must fill a special role: providing sound muscles for riders who suffer physical, mental, or emotional problems.

Still more importantly, the idea that horses and the handicapped just might prove a winning combination appears to be spreading from

Hong Kong to North Carolina.

Visited

Lucky and Dividend visited in Raleigh the other day on their way from North Carolina to take a plane from New York to Hong Kong.

Children in a pilot riding program conducted at the N.C. State Fairgrounds were the excited hosts. The kids are participants in this state's first effort to organize volunteer adults and youngsters, the horses, and the handicapped into a program called Wake Handicappers on Horses.

Alice Walker, program assistant for Four-H Club work at N.C. State University and the Wake County Four-H Club handled the arrangements. Hopes are to expand the effort to other communities in coming years.

Can handicapped youngsters and horses really get along well?

Mrs. Walker and the specially trained riding instructor, Susan Harris, had this to say in a report they prepared on the idea:

BILL NOBLITT

"Learning to ride improves a handicapped's balance, posture, coordination and self-image. Communication with an animal gives the child a sense of freedom, accomplishment and self-confidence. The riding program provides physical and emotional therapy as well as the social benefits of making many new friends."

In Hong Kong, the Riding for the Disabled Association has some 50 regular volunteers working with more than 200 youngsters each year. Doctors typically refer those who can benefit most from the program.

Donation

Petty was asked to find the horses and help with flight arrangements by R. J. Reynolds International, which is giving the animals to the riding association.

There are now some 200 such associations in a program which only has been in existence since a young Danish rider who had suffered crippling poliomyelitis won a silver medal in the 1952 Helsinki Olympics.

Ed Horrigan, speaking for the Reynolds firm, said finding suitable horses was "quite a challenge. We wanted palominos because they represent something typically American and will generate excitement and enthusiasm about the program."

"But we also wanted horses that were saddle trained, gentle, accustomed to children, in excellent health and between four and six years old."

"It took some time to track these two down, and I don't think we could have done it this soon without the help of the state's Department of Agriculture."

Behavior Boys Undercut

WASHINGTON — Twenty or 30 years ago, the Hatch amendment would have been regarded as inconceivable. Even five or ten years ago, few persons would have understood "behavior modification" in the public schools. But it is a measure of the weird goings-on in public education that last week the Senate understood perfectly what Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah had in mind.

The senator was determined to crack down on the arrogant curiosity of a gaggle of crackpot psychologists who have invaded the public schools. With the eloquent support of Sen. Sam Hayakawa of California, Hatch succeeded in writing into the pending Elementary and Secondary Education Act an amendment that will put on the brakes. There wasn't a dissenting vote.

The Hatch amendment applies to every public school receiving federal aid, which is to say, to every school in the country. It says bluntly that "no student shall be required, as part of any applicable program, to submit to psychiatric examination, testing or treatment, or psychological examination, testing or treatment, without the prior consent of the parent."

The ban will apply to tests or questionnaires that deal with political attitudes' sexual attitudes, and intra-family relationships. No child may be interrogated, without his parents' permission, on any mental or psychological problems "potentially embarrassing to the student or his family." Here and there, we may suppose, a few ultra-sophisticated parents will agree to putting their children through a sexual inquisition. In such an event, the parents and the inquisitors will deserve each other.

The overwhelming majority of parents, said Senator Hatch, will refuse absolutely to feed the prurient curiosity of the intellectual peeping Toms.

In his remarks to the Senate last week, Hatch cited as a typical example a sex education program in Wisconsin that starts at the kindergarten level. In this "pre-evaluation training", children as young as ten are told how to get an abortion. He could have cited a hundred other programs that involve invasions of privacy. One questionnaire sent me from California asks of fifth-grade boys: "Do you often play with your penis?" The same questionnaire asked of little girls: "Do you often see your father with no clothes on?"

Senator Hayakawa, in his remarks to the Senate, inquired rhetorically how such attitudinal tests ever got to be part of public education. It is the result of a flourishing heresy, he said, a heresy that rejects the idea of education as the acquisition of knowledge and skills. Instead, the heresy regards the fundamental task of education as therapy.

"Everyone, it is believed, is to some extent neurotic because of repression, inhibition, reaction formation, symbolic displacement, or whatever. Everyone, therefore, needs diagnosis, to examine the extent and seriousness of his or her illness. Everyone ardently needs to be said, needs to be straightened out."

"To inquire into the sexual attitudes and beliefs of eight-

Upbeat Needed By Ford

By DONALD WOUTAT

Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) — Ethel Merman can belt out a song, but can she make America forget about the Ford Pinto fuel tank?

The singer is part of a star-studded cast assembled by Ford Motor Co. for a multimillion-dollar television special commemorating a 75th anniversary year that so far has been bittersweet.

It has been a year of sparkling performance in the marketplace for Ford — and of unprecedented attacks.

Strictly speaking, the network variety show — to be aired Oct. 5 on CBS — has nothing to do with the avalanche of difficulties that has recently struck the No. 2 automaker.

But Ford aches for some upbeat music — perhaps Miss Merman's "On With The Show" — as the company launches its 1979 models, which will be officially introduced the day after the TV show.

Industry analysts say Ford is big and rich enough to weather its latest difficulties. But some warn the company will be hardpressed to keep its current sales momentum if troubles continue to pile up.

The anniversary year has featured:

—The recall of about 1.5 million 1971-76 Pintos and 1975-76 Mercury Bobcats to fix an allegedly dangerous fuel tank. While Ford trumpeted its contributions to the world since 1903, Pinto owners began driving around with warning signs on the backs of their cars.

—More than 4 million recalled vehicles and the threat of the biggest recall in automotive history — 9 million Fords — because the automatic transmission might inadvertently slip from park into reverse. Such a recall could dwarf the Pinto case in cost.

—The highly publicized firing of President Lee Iacocca by Chairman Henry Ford II. It split the board of directors, angered some Ford dealers and other Iacocca loyalists and

40 Years Ago Today

September 5, 1938

Labor Day brought little interruption to business in Greenville, only the post office and liquor stores observed the legal holiday.

Banks and stores find it inconvenient to close on Labor Day because it comes during the busiest time of the year.

A crew of laborers started work this morning on erecting new buildings and otherwise making preparations for the American Legion sponsored Pitt County fair, to be held the week of October 17.

The two American Legion posts in the county, at Greenville and Farmville, took over operation of the fair two years ago, and both exhibitions have been termed successful.

The association is undertaking a building program. A farm exhibit and industrial display building 125 by 100 feet is being constructed. In addition 20 swine pens are being erected, accommodations for 50 head of stock are being made, a poultry building 30 by 60 feet is being constructed and a farm implement yard 120 by 60 feet is being provided.

KIDS WHO ARE KEPT HOME

Living Rooms Are School

By MALCOLM N. CARTER
Associated Press Writer

They dare not entrust their children to the schools, public, private or alternative.

For some, the reason is as straightforward as the quality of education. For others, it's what they see as a premium paid in conformity as the price of success. For still others, it's values taught or flouted.

They have turned their living rooms into school rooms, teaching their own children at home and defying convention.

Besides society's disapproval, they also invite lawsuits under state compulsory education laws. To avoid detection, some never register their children in school. Others resort to ruses. Most fear publicity and won't be named.

Whatever their number — and guesses place the number between 5,000 and 10,000 families — they are a frightened few among millions of parents who send their children to school and many others whose children are taught at home because of handicaps, for example.

"Most of the people that I'm aware of are quite scared," says a New Jersey mother who is reluctant to discuss the subject for fear that authorities will be reminded to clamp down.

She's 40, the wife of a plumber and herself a former teacher. She keeps her 6-year-old at home because she thinks schools are "stifling," not because of fundamentalist religious or moral principles that underlie the majority of similar parental decisions.

"Most people like the system, and I guess that's why I decided to get out rather than to try and change it," she says.

School, she adds, "is not a nourishing place for my son to be. It decides too much for him. It decides at what level, what subject, what pace he'll learn."

She says she hasn't thought ahead to any problems that could result from her son's lack of formal credentials, and she sees home study as an outgrowth of having had natural childbirth, nursed her son and, later, prepared his baby food at home.

There are dozens of children on their street and she doesn't worry about his ability to get along with others in his age group.

"The social life that kids get in school is mean anyway," she insists. "They certainly don't work out problems for themselves."

The New Jersey mother

keeps in touch with like-minded parents through a kind of underground newsletter. She tells about one couple who took their children out of school because they felt the kids were getting dumber every year, and a Texas policeman who wanted his children to learn that God created life.

In Utah, John Singer is under a court order to send his five children to school but says he'd rather die than expose them to the sex, drugs, homosexuality and venereal disease that he says are rampant in the schools. An excommunicated Mormon who champions polygamy, he's kept the law at bay — and his kids in a one-room schoolhouse of his own construction — with his guns.

In Yacolt, Wash., Patricia Smith is fighting an impending school board action aimed at returning her daughters, 11 and 8, to the classroom after four years of teaching them in their converted garage.

Other Editors Say Federal Pay Hike

(Greensboro Daily News)

On his return from vacation last week, President Carter turned his attention to, among other things, the matter of a pay hike for federal employees. Ignoring the advice of a presidential advisory commission which said only an 8.4 percent increase would keep federal pay scales in line with the private sector, Mr. Carter opted for a smaller 5.5 percent hike instead.

In this decision, the President had little choice. Last April he committed his administration to the 5.5 percent increase as part of his war on inflation. The President wisely perceives that if his administration cannot win a modest wage increase for federal employees, then where can it succeed? No matter that the postal employees — who aren't under direct federal control — are threatening an illegal strike because they regard a proposed 6.5 percent average wage hike as too little.

Public employee representatives predictably denounced the President's proposal. But it will take a vote of either house of Congress to override presidential will, in which case the 8.4 percent increase would automatically go into effect.

It may be true, as public employee spokesmen maintain, that fede hikes have no real impact on inflation and that a rollback in this year's increase will eventually erode the government's ability to hire qualified personnel. But the federal pay plan can't be treated in such easy isolation. The President has made the 5.5 percent figure a cornerstone of his entire inflation fighting package. Failure here would rub off psychologically on private industry; and so, Mr. Carter hopes, will success.

Much rides on congressional sentiment. But if the Senate's recent approval of the President's civil service reforms is a good litmus test of opinion on Capitol Hill, public indignation over the high cost and inefficiency of government should win the day here, too.

Debating Chances Of Recession

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — The passing of Labor Day, and the arrival of the so-called "Business New Year," finds analysts in the financial community once again debating the chances of a recession.

That may have a familiar ring to it for people who remember how much recession talk there was at this time last year — and at Labor Day, 1976, for that matter.

But as of this month the recovery from the last economic slump is 3½ years old, which means it has already exceeded the lifespan of the average period of expansion since World War II.

"Age alone doesn't signify much," acknowledged Lora

S. Collins, director of business conditions analysis at the Conference Board, writing in the private business research organization's magazine, Across the Board.

"But the underlying fact is that economic growth phases do not go on forever. Something happens."

"Every business cycle has its particular set of things that go wrong, but a common thread is the tendency to overshoot." The economy reaches a point where productive capacity is strained, inflation heats up, interest rates rise and built-up inventories become a drag on new orders.

"The probability of a recession next year is based on the expected emergence of 'natural forces' such as these," Miss Collins said. "It need not be a severe slump, because current evidence doesn't point to deep imbalances developing in the economy. Big imbalances cause big shakeouts."

A suggestion that the economy might be losing momentum came in the government's report last week that the index of leading economic indicators, which is designed to signal the likely future course of business activity, fell 0.7 percent in July.

But few panic buttons were being pushed on the basis of that one number. The rule of thumb is that it takes three consecutive monthly declines in the index to sound any clear warning.

"The leading indicator index has tended to decline by 2 percent to 3 percent within a three-month period before the post-war recessions," Richard B. Hoey of the brokerage firm of Bache Halsey Stuart Shields Inc. pointed out. "This has not yet occurred."

Even should it give a definitive warning signal, many observers are reluctant to put too much credence in the index. Last summer, they note, it dropped for three consecutive months, foreshadowing trouble that never really materialized.

It also has fallen sharply in each of the past two Januarys, depressed by the effects of severe winter weather which were largely dispelled by the time spring came.

THE WAY TO SPIRITUAL TRUTH

The story of Thomas, one of the original twelve disciples, carries an important meaning for those of us who live in this modern scientific age.

Thomas was an honest doubter, like so many intelligent people today. He would not believe spiritual truth until it was proved to him, and the proof he demanded was physical and material. He declared that he would not acknowledge the resurrection of Christ even if he saw it with his own eyes. He must have further physical proof. He must touch the nail marks in Christ's hands and thrust his own hand into the wound in Christ's side.

The opportunity for physical proof was offered to him, but he did not take it. He had something better. He was conscious of the Lord's presence, and that answered all his doubts.

In material things, seeing is believing. In spiritual things, believing is seeing. We never understand a spiritual truth until we first believe it.

—Elisha Douglass

"I believe in a supreme being," the Mormon mother says. "And the religion I was teaching at home was being aborted in the classroom."

Says Robert Sessions, a 33-year-old philosophy professor in Decorah, Iowa, who is battling in the courts to keep his 8-year-old son, Erik, at home: "We're more concerned about what happens to children as people. They learn best when they're motivated to learn."

He opposes the notion that learning takes place only in a classroom and doesn't like competitiveness in the schools, among other things. Although the Supreme Court permitted the Amish to educate their children at home in a 1972 ruling based on constitutional guarantees of religious freedom, the Lawyers Committee for Civil Rights Under Law says just 26 states allow home instruction for other reasons as well.

But University of Massachusetts professor David Schimmel, head of the Legal Literacy Program, says the state statutes permitting home study give the courts considerable leeway.

These laws generally require an education at home to be "equivalent" to an education in school. Officials may, therefore, question the qualifications of the teacher, the content of the curriculum and the chances for social interaction, Schimmel says.

"For those who do proceed in this way," he observes, "it's a tremendous undertaking."

Those who do beggar classification.

"There doesn't seem to be any easily grasped common denominator, except by definition they seem to be independent-minded, stubborn people," observes John Holt of Boston, author of several books on education and an advocate of home instruction.

Holt runs a newsletter, "Growing Without Schools," that reaches 700 subscribers. He thinks the number of keep-the-kids-at-home parents is probably below 10,000.

The New Schools Exchange in Pettigrew, Ark., dedicated to "humanizing education," says it's receiving "hundreds" of letters every year. The Seventh Day Adventist's Home Study Institute says 600 of its home students pass up its religious courses. This suggests home instruction unrelated to the denomination's religious purpose.

Mary Royer of Portland, Ore., head of the National Parents League, says she has been helping half a dozen families a week set up schools for their own and, sometimes, other children as well. She puts the total at 275 schools in 28 states over the past decade.

Behind it all, she sees the "determination of many parents who refuse to be further intimidated and who are protecting their children from the incredibly immoral incursions persistently thrust into the family structure and into the minds of the innocents."

An Illinois woman with seven children at home asked that her name not be used because "I don't want to make waves."

She says her disaffection with schools began when a daughter she considers gifted was put into a class for problem children. Her daughter became passive and suddenly hard to manage, the woman says. Now 14 and the family's oldest child, she hasn't attended school since sixth grade.

The mother says she supervises her children five hours a day, instructing them as they cook, clean and do laundry. Her 8-year-old son, for example, learns percentages while figuring the sales tax during shopping trips. The children also read histories and biographies and attend classes at a natural history museum.

"Education is supposed to be an aid for life," she says. A conservative Roman Catholic, she insists parochial schools teach "heresy."

Parents have varying systems. A New York father began teaching his son about botany in Central Park, then advanced to chemistry and physics when the boy happened on a periodic table of elements.

In Washington, D.C., the mother of 8-year-old Susan makes the nation's capital into a school, taking the girl through the Smithsonian Institution, attending mime shows and jazz concerts and watching nature movies.

"Susan can drag you through the history of the universe, through natural history on up to the latest Mars landing," boasts her father, a pediatrician.

For him, the joy of home study is the joy of watching his daughter blossom. For a Roman Catholic in Chicago, it's the need to inculcate her children with her religious precepts. For a dropout professor in a Pennsylvania commune, it's the desire to emphasize values other than competitiveness, possessiveness, regimentation and achievement.

Their reasons may vary, but they are unified in one belief: No one, not a school superintendent, not a state statute, not a court of law, must prevent them from educating their young as they wish.

"I don't see how you can keep a kid from learning except to send him to school," the New Jersey mother says.

Adds the Illinois mother of seven, "I'm aiming for children who are free and independent, who are going to go and feel, 'I'm OK, I can do it.' They're going to be society makers, not society adapters."

FTC Activity Under Increasing Criticism

Will Picket At State Hearing

RALEIGH — Amy Arrendell, spokesperson for The Kudz Alliance has announced that members of the alliance will conduct a picket line outside the N. C. Utilities Commission hearing scheduled for Wednesday, Sept. 6.

"North Carolinians have already cut back significantly on their electricity consumption in the past year, with little or no encouragement from the state government," said Arrendell. "But we can still go much further... numerous studies have shown that conservation can provide a real boost to the economy by creating many new jobs. Therefore, we think it is vital for the utilities commission to act now to help bring these benefits to North Carolina consumers."

The picket line will begin at 9:30 a.m. in front of the Dobbs Building, 430 N. Salisbury Street. The commission hearing begins at 10 a.m.

These issues likely will be debated this month on Capitol Hill, where many legislators want to allow either house of Congress to veto FTC actions.

Rep. Elliott H. Levitas, D-Ga., is leading the veto push. "The Assuming the Hatch amendment sticks in the bill as finally enacted, the states and localities might create enforcement mechanisms of their own. It could be required, for example, that copies of every proposed examination be deposited in some public office for press and public inspection. Appropriate penalties could be prescribed for teachers who administer tests without first seeking informed approval from parents. Principals who failed to obey the Hatch amendment could be held responsible for the loss of federal funds.

I get angry letters from parents about these bizarre incidents, but I don't get nearly enough angry letters. Parents are too docile, dumb or brain-washed. We ought to get mad at the behavioral boys who would cure our children of non-existent illness. And we ought to stay mad.

Guerrilla Says Rhodesian Airliner Was Shot Down

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Guerrilla leader Joshua Nkomo said today that his men shot down the airliner that crashed in northwest Rhodesia two nights ago but he denied survivors' reports that they murdered 10 of the 18 survivors. Nkomo gave no details but told reporters in Lusaka, Zambia, his headquarters, that the Air Rhodesia plane was shot down shortly after it left Kariba, on the Zambian border, "because these planes flying to Kariba with civilians also carry troops and military supplies." There had been speculation that the four-engine Viscount was hit by a ground-to-air missile after one of the survivors, Anthony Hill, 39, told reporters: "There was a tremendous explosion. Then flames started shooting past the window on the starboard wing." Investigators were examining the wreckage at the crash site 35 miles southeast of Kariba, and a military communique said "a starboard engine appeared to have exploded, and the starboard external side of the plane was heavily scorched."

Guerrillas of Nkomo's Zimbabwe African People's Union operate in the area from bases in Zambia. In June 1977, they fired a missile at a private plane near the border, missed it and hit a hotel, causing heavy damage.

The airliner, with 56 people aboard, crashed Sunday night shortly after taking off for Salisbury from Kariba, a lake resort on the Zambian border. The 52 passengers included 42 white Rhodesians and South Africans, two white Scots and eight Asian Rhodesians who had been holidaying at the lake. Hill told reporters at a hospital in Kariba the plane broke in two. The front portion burst into flames, and the survivors, all in the last five rows of seats, wormed their way out of the tail section.

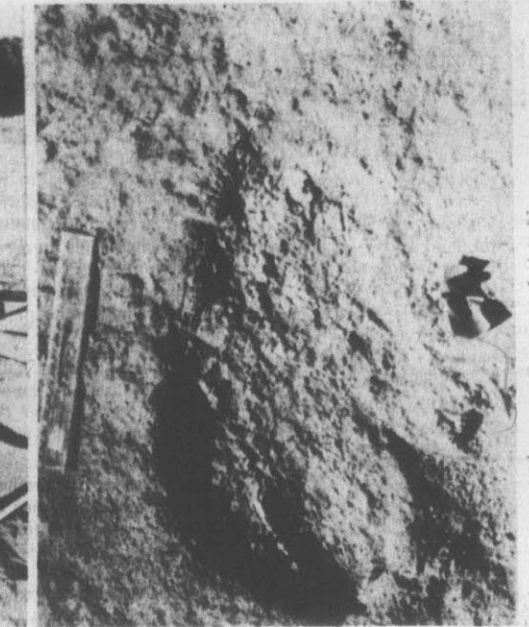

Many were injured, but five were able to go for help. Hans Hansen, 35, said about an hour after the crash nine guerrillas emerged from the bush. "When they first approached us," Hansen reported, "they said they were going to give us water and help. Then when they gathered us together, they said, 'You have taken our land! We are going to kill you!' and they started shooting."

He said the guerrillas killed seven women, two children and a man and bayoneted one of the women after they shot her. The bullets missed Hansen, his 31-year-old wife, Diana, and Hill. They escaped into the undergrowth and hid through the night. Rescue teams found them and the five who had gone for aid, a total of eight survivors from the crash and the massacre.

The government said the guerrillas looted the wreckage and the bodies. The eight survivors were reported in good condition at the hospital in Kariba.

Teacher Strike Means An Extended Vacation

By The Associated Press
Teachers provided an extended summer vacation for thousands of school children today as labor woes kept many classrooms empty.

Teachers are on strike or threatening to strike in some of the nation's largest districts — New Orleans, Boston, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Dayton, Ohio, Seattle and Pontiac, Mich.

Weekend negotiations failed to produce agreement in Pontiac, and the school board ordered teachers who have been on strike in advance of the school's opening to report to work today or be fired. But talks continued and Superintendent Odell Nails delayed the start of classes for the 21,000 students from today until Thursday. In Marion, Ind., half of the 331 striking teachers cited last week by a circuit judge on contempt charges for defying a back-to-work order were scheduled to appear in court today. The remaining teachers were ordered to appear Wednesday. The Marion strike began Aug. 28.

The Dayton Education Association votes today on whether to strike the city's 37,000-student system. The schools open Thursday and teachers are scheduled to report Wednesday.

In Cleveland, where classes open Friday, teachers say they do not want a third straight year without a pay raise. But school officials say they cannot afford a raise because the system has received an emergency $20.7 million loan that requires budget-cutting.

New Orleans' school superintendent, Dr. Gene Geisert, offered amnesty Monday night to all striking teachers who return to work by Wednesday. Earlier Monday, about 2,000 New Orleans teachers and sympathizers marched through the downtown business district.

The New Orleans strike started Wednesday. Classes for the district's 91,000 students have operated with a skeleton crew. On Friday, bus drivers and janitors joined the strike and only a third as many students as normal were in class.

Strikes are under way in five Pennsylvania districts including Philadelphia, the state's largest, and 92 other districts remain without contracts, but most are expected to settle without a strike.

In Philadelphia, 13,000 teachers have been on strike since Friday, although classes for the city's 250,000 pupils are not scheduled to begin until Friday.

In the 55,000-student Seattle district, teachers accused school officials of possibly using a contract dispute to cover up unpreparedness for desegregation busing.

But school Superintendent David Moberly denied the accusation and accused the teachers of "reaching for straws."

Says Agency Seven People Killed As Helicopter Falls In Crowd

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The executive director of the state Inmate Grievance Commission, which begins its fifth year of operation this week, says the agency's work is paying dividends for North Carolina's correctional system.

Fred Morrison Jr. said Monday the commission has processed 18,687 cases during the past four years and dealt with matters ranging from clothing to legal rights to smoking privileges. Composed of five members appointed by the governor, the commission meets monthly to make recommendations to the secretary of the Corrections Department. It has a staff of six to screen appeals from prisoners.

Morrison said in a news release that the existence of the commission "has helped to reduce tension and provide a stable rehabilitative atmosphere by providing formal channels for communication of complaints." The most conclusive proof of the worth of the agency, he said, is that inmates use it. "It has been a way for them to relieve pressures in a constructive way, rather than striking or cursing a guard or setting a fire," Morrison said. "There is no way to estimate the intangible value."

He said the changes that have been brought about by the grievance commission include: —Some relief of crowding in prisons; —Approval of incentive pay for inmates on prison work details; —Employment of a full-time chaplain and recreation director at the Correctional Center for Women and improvement of medical services; —An increase in the number of books in prison libraries.

Says Agency Seven People Killed As Helicopter Falls In Crowd

By EARL BOHN

DERRY, Pa. (AP) — Twelve-year-old Mary Beth Allison was laughing as she dropped handfuls of pingpong balls numbered for prizes from a helicopter to a crowd attending a Labor Day church festival.

Moments later the helicopter — its blades turned into giant scythes — plunged into the crowd, injuring 19 people and killing seven, including Mary Beth's mother. "Everybody was running for those balls," said Denise DeCaro of New Derry, who was mingling in the crowd. "The girl was laughing. Then there was blood everywhere."

Hospital spokeswoman Andrea Guzik said 11 of the 19 people brought to the facility remained hospitalized today, including three in critical condition. Eyewitnesses said the church parking lot was covered with blood and severed bodies after the three-seat helicopter, a Hughes 269-C, crashed.

"There were people lying all over the place, some with their heads off and arms off," said Helen Irwin, who saw the crash from outside the family tavern a half-block away. "One man, his body was cut in half. It was just a terrible mess." Latrobe police Sgt. Joseph Muchinski said about 500 people were at the festival on the last day of a three-day annual fundraiser.

Federal Aviation Administration inspector Dave Koutz said the blade tips of the helicopter were traveling at 350 to 400 mph. "The pilot indicated the possibility that the engine might have failed. She did attempt to land," Kuntz said.

The pilot, Pam Nelson, and the two passengers, Miss Allison and her father, Leo, a church janitor, were uninjured, authorities said.

Mrs. Nelson's husband owns Nelson Helicopters, based at Allegheny County Airport in West Mifflin, said Derry policeman Ronald Bolen.

For several hours after the mishap, firemen scooped up body parts and placed them in plastic bags. They were taken to a temporary morgue established in a cafeteria inside St. Joseph's hall, where the Rev. John Wilt administered last rites.

No Easy Life In Her Freedom

By RICK SPRATLING
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP) — Suzanne Bohannon left a Florida mental hospital five months ago, ready for a new life after 23 years in the wrong place.

But being free is not easy for a crippled 39-year-old who grew to maturity in a mental institution. The Rehabilitation Center at Jackson Memorial Hospital provided a temporary home, but now center officials say it is time for Miss Bohannon to go.

But officials and Miss Bohannon are not sure what is next.

"We have places for people who are very independent, and for people who are very dependent," says Islia Rosado, the center social worker who is trying to find a home for Miss Bohannon. "But we don't have many places for people who are someplace in between."

Born with a spinal tumor that left her legs withered, Suzanne Bohannon was not wanted by her parents, and she wound up in a mental hospital.

She tried to tell attendants she was not crazy. "A few times I got laughed at," she says. "Other times I got extra Thorazine...I was drugged most of the time."

Books provided a sanctuary. "I read, read, read," she says. "I think reading saved my sanity, partially. That and my faith in God." Books are stacked about her hospital bed now. A statue of the Madonna sits nearby.

Freed in early April after getting word to Sally Zinman of Loxahatchee, Fla., organizer of a fledgling Mental Patient Rights Association, Miss Bohannon found new life at the county-run Jackson Center.

She dropped Suzanne, and came to be called by her middle name — Gloria. She took field trips with other patients, sipped cold beer, saw harbor lights from a cruise ship and squealed through "Jaws II."

And there was daily physical therapy, which she says she loves, but some hospital workers say she often skips. "She was using the hospital as a hotel," said one official who declined to be named.

And three weeks ago a hospital committee told her she no longer qualified for Medicare benefits.

Indians Own Big Share Of U.S. Energy Resources

By MARK POTTS
NEW YORK (AP) — The Indians who own half the U.S. uranium reserves and billion of dollars in other energy resources are becoming vastly better businessmen than their forbears — the Mannhattans who lost their island home for just $24 in trinkets.

Though a source of pride to the Indians, their new financial approach is seen differently by businesses that deal with them. "They're afraid they're going to get beaten, so they drive the hardest bargain they can," said John LaGrange of Bear Creek Mining Co. in Spokane, Wash. "But," LaGrange added, "in many cases they drive such a hard bargain they drive themselves out of the market." Ed Gabriel, executive director of the Council of Energy Resource Tribes, said of the Indians' bargaining stance: "In all cases that I know of, they're going competitive in the bidding and they're going very rough on the negotiations. I'm very proud of them." The energy council, formed in 1975 by 25 tribes representing almost one-third of the nation's Indians, provides a voice in Washington and gives technical help in managing Indian energy resources.

Those resources are considerable. Indian tribes occupy only 4 percent of the nation's land but own half the uranium reserves, 16 percent of the coal areas and 4 percent of the natural gas and oil fields, plus acres of forests and mineral deposits.

"They're energy-rich," says Gabriel. "You're talking about 250,000 people owning billions and billions of tons of coal, billions of tons of uranium, and 4 percent of the oil and gas."

Gabriel puts the worth of Indian land "definitely in the billions" and says it could greatly improve the Indians' living standards.

Indians represented by the tribal energy council now earn about $1,400 per capita annually, and Peter McDonald, the Navajo who is chairman of the energy council, says getting the most for their resources is a necessity for the Indians.

"Unless we manage our resources properly now, we will not have them in 20 or 30 years," he said. "I think it will mean our survival and a future for our children."

The Indians blame the government for some past business problems. Gabriel says, for example: "The government, acting as a trustee through the Bureau of Indian Affairs, has done a pretty sloppy job."

BIA officials admit that bad judgment or poor advice soured many leases and say they now scrutinize leases more carefully — while turning over more of the responsibility to the Indians.

The Indians do not view all past agreements unfavorably — many timberland leases with paper firms have worked out well, for example.

In cases where the Indians see past wrongs, they are using the law to try to right them. They are trying to renegotiate more favorable deals on many BIA-signed contracts and have had a measure of success.

McDonald recently led a successful fight for renegotiation of his Arizona tribe's coal lease with El Paso Natural Gas and Consolidation Coal. The lease, signed in the mid-1960s, gave the Navajos a royalty of 15 cents a ton, included few environmental safeguards and did not mention who would reclaim land destroyed by strip-mining.

The tribe wanted more "because the lease that existed was unconscionable," McDonald said. The new arrangement ties the royalty to the consumer price of coal, which has risen considerably since the first lease, and makes environmental and reclamation allowances.

It means a total of $250 million over the next 25 years, which McDonald would like to go into education and long-term economic development. And the tribe is seeking renegotiation of other contracts involving coal and uranium.

Several other recent cases indicate how seriously Indians are taking what they view as threats to their resources.

In Maine, in perhaps the most celebrated case, a group of tribes is demanding 12.5 million acres they claim was unjustly taken from them — land including large forests and a major copper and zinc deposit.

In Washington state, the Colville Indians are seeking other development partners after breaking off negotiations with a unit of Kennecott Copper Co. over development of a large deposit of minerals.

In Montana, the Northern Cheyennes and Crows are fighting for renegotiation of coal mining leases signed before the energy crisis drove coal prices up. The Indians went into court to demand that the developers justify their prices. The court found the prices too low, and the developers are appealing.

Companies affected by the new Indian economic philosophy are hesitant to discuss particulars, but some will tell you they are not happy with the new approach. Said

LaGrange, the mining man: "They look for the best bargain, but they don't always follow the covenants of business. They tend to drive a pretty hard bargain or an unreasonable bargain — or because of tribal politics, no bargain."

But Gabriel does not think Indians are seeking goals that are particularly unrealistic.

"They aren't driving a harder bargain than Alaska is, or than foreign governments are," he says. "They're driving equal bargains."

How's The Weather?

FORECAST

Until Wednesday

WEATHER FORECAST — The forecast from Tuesday through Wednesday includes rain for the Rocky Mountain states extending westward into California, according to the National Weather Service. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press
A fair weather system extended today from the upper Midwest into North Carolina and was associated with an area of high pressure centered over Ohio. This system should remain nearly stationary for a while, promising fine late summer weather for the state through Wednesday. The only problem that may occur during the next couple of days associated with the weather is the possible build-up of pollutants and haze near the ground.

Very light winds and a stable atmosphere are expected and this could increase air pollution levels near industrial centers.

A weak cold front pushed into North Carolina Monday and early risers found it just a little cooler this morning. Temperatures generally peaked in the mid 80s over much of the state Monday, making it fairly comfortable for Labor Day observances. Wilmington was an exception as its high for the day reached 91 degrees.

High temperatures are expected to range in the 80s for the next couple of days with lows in the 60s. Readings in the mountains will be a bit cooler.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A very good time to show your affection and devotion to those you are fond of but not by being extravagant but rather by letting them know that you are looking for a satisfactory relationship with them. Study and ferret out answers you need.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Showing your devotion for the one you love is fine, but it is not right to spend too much money. Pay as many bills as you can.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) An associate may want to change a part of your agreement and it might be wise to do so. Make long-range plans with one you are fond of.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Use your own good judgment in going after pleasures that please most. Improve your business affairs with the aid of a partner.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You know what fellow workers expect of you so be cooperative and get your work done. Forget a slight ailment you may have; it's only temporary.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A change of attitude is needed if you are to understand the situation at home better. Put those ideas to work that will add to present income.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You have to be diplomatic in going after a personal goal that means much to you. Use charm. Buy a gift for one with whom you have argued and pave the way for a reconciliation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Working on a good plan for bettering your position in life is wise now. Take a financial expert into your confidence. Don't take risks that could bring a money crisis to your door.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Concentrate on aims that mean the most to you and gain them with relative ease. Use charm instead of force with others.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Ideal time to confer with a bigwig and get needed support to improve your position in life. Give more attention to loved ones.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Go to an older person for the aid you want for a personal aim and then you attain it. Avoid an associate who does not agree with your views now. Be careful of strangers today, tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Plan well before you tackle outside duties and then you get fine results. Later be charming socially. Take no risks with reputation.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Look to a clever and serious friend for the assistance you need with a new project. Forget amusements for now and concentrate on the important. Make big headway and then rest.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be full of curiosity, which is fine, provided you teach early to go after only those things that are worthwhile. Also teach to confide in parents and later in partners instead of being so secretive.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market edged upward today despite a sharp tumble among gambling issues.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average stood at 882.28 at noon, a rise of 2.95.

Gainers took a 7-6 lead over losers on the New York Stock Exchange.

The gambling stocks fell as brokers flashed "sell" orders in the wake of actions Friday by the NYSE and American Stock Exchange to attempt to stabilize the volatile issues by tightening restrictions on buying the issues on credit.

Analysts said, however, that the market was absorbing the losses as investors switched from casino issues to other stocks. "The quieting down of the gambling stocks has allowed the blue chips to come to the fore," said Larry Wachtel at Bache Halsey Stuart Shields.

Ramada Inn paced the active list, sinking 1 to 10 1/4. Ramada Inn owns a small percentage of Del E. Webb, a casino operator, and is rumored to be considering entering the gambling business itself. Webb dipped 2 1/4 to 29.

The NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks gained .10 to 58.64. At the Amex, the market value index fell .30 to 170.40.

Volume on the NYSE was 13.37 million shares in the first two hours, down from 14.05 million in the comparable period Friday.

Among the gambling issues, Bally Manufacturing sank 4 to 53 in active trading. On the Amex, Resorts International class A fell 3 1/4 to 107 1/4 and Golden Nugget dropped 3 1/4 to 30 1/4.

Exxon rose 3/4 to 50 1/2. The company said late Friday that it had found hydrocarbons in its exploratory well in the Baltimore Canyon off New Jersey, but the results were "inconclusive" and required more tests. Texaco, which has found natural gas in a well a few miles from Exxon's project, rose 1/4 to 25.

Declares Pentagon Overpays

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Pentagon overpays workers by $900 million a year, says a Brookings Institution study. It warns the waste must be cut for America to keep military pace with the Soviet Union "without unnecessarily increasing the financial burden of defense."

"If reform is not undertaken, the nation will continue to spend more than is necessary for defense," said the report, written by a three-man team headed by Martin Binkin, a Brookings senior fellow.

The Pentagon had no immediate comment on the report. The study criticized the "steady enrichment" of the Pentagon's white-collar civilian employees and what it called overpayment of blue-collar defense workers.

It also contended that about 377,000 jobs now filled by military personnel could be handled by civilians, including private contractor personnel, to save additional money "without jeopardizing national security."

The Brookings Institution is an independent, non-partisan research organization whose studies have been influential in shaping government policies.

About 55 percent of the Carter administration's proposed $126 billion defense budget for next year is designated for personnel costs, mostly pay and upkeep.

The study said the present manpower mix of about 2 million military and 1.1 million civilian employees of the Defense Department is not cost-effective and, if present trends continue, "is likely to become less so."

The authors wrote that many civilian defense employees are "being compensated at unjustifiably high levels."

White-collar civil service employees include clerical workers and professional specialists.

Primary Time For Alabamans

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) - Two U.S. Senate seats and the governor's mansion are up for grabs in Alabama, and Republicans feel this might be their year to make real gains in a state locked up by Democrats.

When Mrs. Wallace died of cancer after 16 months in office, the lieutenant governor, Albert Brewer, ran the state for the next 32 months, the only period in the past 16 years when Wallace or a member of his family has not been governor.

Ten Democrats and three Republicans are running for their parties' nominations for governor today.

Republicans and Democrats also will nominate candidates today for two U.S. Senate seats. Sen. John Sparkman is retiring, and seven Democrats and one Republican want the job.

The other Senate vacancy is the result of the death in June of Sen. James Allen. Wallace appointed Allen's widow, Maryon Allen, to her husband's Senate seat until the general election this fall. Mrs. Allen and four other Democrats are running along with two Republicans for the remaining two years on Allen's term.

Showdowns Confront Congress

By TOM RAUM Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) - Congress is returning from its Labor Day recess to face showdowns on natural gas deregulation and on a $2 billion nuclear powered aircraft carrier President Carter does not want built.

Both issues pose crucial tests for the president's policies and his ability to deal with Congress.

Senators coming back to town are sure to find themselves heavily lobbied on the gas-pricing bill, both from the administration, which supports it, and from opponents. Most of the opposition is coming from consumer groups and some segments of the oil and gas industry.

A large group of undecided senators still appears to be the key to the measure that took more than eight months for House-Senate negotiators to work out - and both camps are out to win over these wavering members.

Senate leaders hope to begin debating the bill on Thursday - although there remains a chance that action will be put over until the following week.

The White House is depicting the legislation - which would remove large quantities of natural gas from federal price controls by 1985 - as critical to the success of Carter's longstalled energy program and to U.S. prestige abroad.

It is being opposed by an unusual coalition of Senate liberals who see it as too costly to consumers and conservatives who do not

The Game Is Not Everything In American League Action Monday

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer
Of course the pennant races are still on. The New York Yankees have pulled within five games of the Boston Red Sox in the American League's East Division, and the California Angels still are one game behind AL West-leading Kansas City.

But there were other developments Monday that had little or nothing to do with baseball.

—In Toronto, the Blue Jays' Willie Horton allegedly was struck by a mounted policeman and one of his children was stepped on by a policeman's horse during an altercation in the Exhibition Stadium parking lot before a game against the Cleveland Indians.

—In Bloomington, Minn., White Sox Manager Larry Doby alleged first base umpire Joe Brinkman made a "racial slur" while arguing with Doby during Chicago's 2-1 loss to the Minnesota Twins.

—In Baltimore, both benches cleared after Boston pitcher Dennis Eckersley knocked down Baltimore's Larry Harlow with a double-forearm shove after Harlow had been tagged out in a play at the plate. Harlow had to be restrained by an umpire from going after Eckersley and there was more wrestling before order was restored.

The games. Oh yes, Cleveland topped Toronto 5-4; Minnesota nipped Chicago 2-1; the Orioles beat the Red Sox 5-3; the Yankees beat Detroit 9-1 for Ron Guidry's 20th victory before the Tigers won the nightcap 5-4; Seattle beat Milwaukee 4-3 before the Brewers won 5-0; California beat Texas 8-7 and Kansas City bested Oakland 5-3.

Indians 5, Blue Jays 4
Gary Alexander hit a two-run double and scored on a double by Ted Cox in the three-run sixth that carried Cleveland past Toronto.

Twins 2, White Sox 1
Roy Smalley and Mike

Cabbage knocked in the runs that backed Geoff Zahn's four-hitter and lifted Minnesota over Chicago in the contest that saw four White Sox players ejected.

Orioles 5, Red Sox 3
Lee May's two-run double in the sixth inning put Baltimore ahead to stay before the fracas at home plate.

Yankees 9-4, Tigers 1-5
A three-run triple by Chris Chambliss capped an eight-run New York seventh and made Ron Guidry the major leagues' first 20-game winner.

The Tigers won the nightcap after a two-out error by Yankee left fielder Gary Thomasson in the eighth.

Mariners 4-0, Brewers 3-5
Homers by Gorman Thomas and Ben Oglivie carried

Milwaukee in the nightcap after Seattle had taken the opener on Lee Stanton's ninth-inning RBI single.

Angels 8, Rangers 7
Bobby Grich had four RBI to carry California past Texas, which got two homers from Bobby Bonds.

Royals 5, A's 3
Amos Otis drove in four runs and Al Hrabosky provided clutch relief to help Kansas City beat Oakland and keep the Royals a game ahead.

Staubach Not Happy Despite 38-0 Romp Over Baltimore Colts

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
DALLAS (AP) — It was the second most explosive offensive show in the 18-year history of the Dallas Cowboys, but quarterback Roger Staubach was more peeved than pleased.

Staubach destroyed Baltimore's "Sack Pack" with four touchdown passes as Dallas opened defense of its world championship with a 38-0 nationally televised rout of the Baltimore Colts Monday night.

Dallas didn't even punt as it charged up and down the field for a 583-yard offense for Coach

Tom Landry's 14th consecutive season-opening victory. "I was good in some spots and bad in others...I wasn't particularly pleased," said Staubach, who surrendered two interceptions early in the game.

Staubach's touchdown passes covered 91 yards to Tony Dorsett, 8 yards to Billy Joe Dupree, 38 yards to Drew Pearson and 36 inches to Jay Saldi. Completing his last 11 passes, Staubach finished with 16 completions in 22 attempts for 280 yards.

Dorsett, the flashy tailback who was NFL offensive rookie of the year in 1977, did something no other Cowboy has ever accomplished. He rushed for 147 yards and caught passes for 107 steps. No Cowboy had ever rushed and received for 100 yards or more in each category in one game. Dorsett also wasn't overly pleased.

"I feel receiving is one of my weakest points and I need a chance to get accustomed to it," he said.

Dorsett left three Colt tacklers in his wake for the second Cowboy touchdown after he caught a batted pass that was intended for a wide receiver. He was so alone on his touchdown jaunt that he slapped hands with Drew Pearson and Tony Hill before he scored.

Baltimore played without injured No. 1 quarterback Bert Jones and halfback Lydell Mitchell, who was traded to San Diego in a dispute with management.

On Saturday night the NFL's 59th season officially kicked off with the Giants beating the Buccaneers 19-13 in Tampa Bay. Joe Pisarcik, who replaced injured quarterback Jerry Golsteyn, hit Johnny Perkins on a 67-yard touchdown pass that broke a 10-10 tie in the third period.

On Sunday, seven of the 13 games wound up as upsets.

The Denver Broncos, resuming their sensational play of 1977 when they beat Oakland for the American Conference championship, defeated the Raiders 14-6 by converting a pair of turnovers into touchdowns — Craig Morton's 6-yard pass to Haven Moses and Otis Armstrong's 1-yard plunge.

Five Pirates Draw Praise

Five players were named by East Carolina football coach Pat Dye yesterday afternoon as players-of-the-week for their performances in Saturday's season-opening 14-6 win over Western Carolina.

Fullback Anthony Collins was named as the top offensive back, while tight end Joe Godette was cited as the top offensive lineman. Tackle D. T. Joyner and strong safety Ruffin McNeill were chosen by the coaching staff as the top defensive players for the game. Freshman Glen Morris was selected as the top special team performer.

Collins rushed for 84 yards to lead that category. While Godette did not catch a pass, his blocking was an integral part of the Pirate running game.

Joyner contributed nine tackles, including four for minus 21 yards, while McNeill made five stops and intercepted a Catamount pass, returning it five yards. Morris added three tackles as a member of the kicking team.

On defense, 17 players in all received grades which qualified for winners' awards in the opening game. Cale Takes Fourth Southern 500

By VAN VANUICH
Associated Press Writer
DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Cale Yarborough says he's happy to be the first four-time winner of the Southern 500 stock car race "because this old track has beat me and a bunch of others a lot of times."

Waltrip of Franklin, Tenn., said after the race. "I beat Darlington and Cale beat us both."

Waltrip said, "I wish we could have won. But I really can't say I'm disappointed. I did the best I could and we got beat in the pits."

"My crew made the decision to put on two more tires and that's really what beat us," Waltrip said. "I didn't argue with them when they told me they were going to change tires. I was busy racing. I just told them we'd lose the race if we changed tires. It was their decision to make."

Several wrecks occurred during the race forcing drivers to drop out of the 29th annual Labor Day Classic called the "granddaddy" of NASCAR's super speedway races.

Sideways In The First Turn
Ricky Rudd of Chesapeake, Va., (22) skids sideways in front of Bobby Allison of Hueytown, Ala., in the first turn during the Southern 500 stock car race at Darlington Raceway Monday.

Allison was able to get around Rudd without incident. Rudd was leading the race at the time of his skid. Cale Yarborough was the eventual winner. (AP Laserphoto)

He was knocked out of race on the 167th lap by a four-car pileup that also included Chevrolet drivers Coo Coo Marlin of Columbia, Tenn., D.K. Ulrich of Harrisburg, N.C., and Grant Adcox of Chattanooga, Tenn.

Vilas Loses; Surface Blamed

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "If I were him, I wouldn't come back here," said Ion Tiriac, who watched helplessly Monday night while his protege, Guillermo Vilas, lost to Butch Walts in his bid for a second straight men's singles title at the U.S. Open tennis championships.

American's home-court advantage had ultimately done in Vilas, the Argentine clay-court specialist. By home court, Tiriac meant the Deco Turf II surface, the hard, slick covering that is best suited for the U.S. Open, which is being held for the first time at Flushing Meadow Park.

Pirates Pull Within One Of Philadelphia

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer
Three weeks ago, the Philadelphia Phillies were making playoff plans and the Pittsburgh Pirates were thinking about October vacations. Three weeks from now, it may be the other way around.

Elsewhere in the National League, the Chicago Cubs dropped 4 1/2 games off the pace in the East by losing 5-3 and 6-5 in 10 innings against Montreal; Los Angeles moved two games in front of San Francisco in the torrid West race with a 5-4 victory over the Giants; Cincinnati stopped Houston 6-3 and San Diego beat Atlanta 8-4.

In the opener, Warren Cromartie's fifth-inning pop-up was lost in the sun by Chicago shortstop Ivan Dejesus and two runs scored on the play. Gary Carter's squeeze bunt scored Larry Parrish with the decisive run in the 10th inning of the second game.

Kite Romps To Easy Victory

By MIKE HENDRICKS
AP Sports Writer
ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP) — This time, Tom Kite could have penalized himself one stroke — as he had done a week earlier — and it wouldn't have made any difference.

His biggest challenge came Monday when Hayes eagled the third hole and Kite bogeyed the fourth hole, cutting the deficit to two strokes.

Bill Bonham's first victory since the All-Star break and three hits by Joe Morgan led the Reds' win. Bonham, 10-4, left the game after yielding a leadoff homer in the seventh to Dennis Walling. Bonham had numbness in his right elbow and thumb.

Crowd Gives Guidry Help

NEW YORK (AP) — The count on Lance Parrish, the Detroit batter, was no balls and two strikes. Ron Guidry, the New York pitcher, stood behind the mound, a slight smile playing across his features.

The Yankee Stadium crowd of 46,896 began the rhythmic applause that starts every time Guidry gets two strikes on a hitter, but this time they added a little something extra — a long and loud standing ovation.

Parrish, who had struck out twice and singled, grounded a foul past third base, prolonging the inevitable. More applause. He took a pitch for a ball. More cheers. Then he swung and missed a blazing fast ball and the Yankees had a 9-1 victory in the opener of Monday's doubleheader, making Guidry the major leagues' first 20-game winner.

With 40,000 people screaming he almost doesn't have a chance," said Guidry, who allowed five hits, walked three and struck out eight.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — CHIC SCHOOL OUTFITS CHARM YOUR SMALL FRY.
Today's Cryptoquip clue: Z equals W

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

LOS ANGELES (AP)—NBC, led by Fred Silverman, starts its "Preview Week" tonight. Don't ask me what's on. NBC's schedule changes so often it is said all its shows are now called "To Be Announced."

But industry sources say NBC, which recently yanked the new "Runaway" series from its fall roster and put four series in new slots, now is mulling another play so radical even ABC is worried.

It may end all its program-shuffling, the sources say.

The real radical part is that NBC may soon shuffle six nights of the week around, instead of shuffling programs around. If adopted, this is how the new arrangement initially would look: Saturday night would occur on Tuesday, Monday night on Saturday, Thursday night on Monday, Wednesday night on Friday and Friday night on Wednesday, or whichever comes first.

Sunday night would continue to be on Sunday night until further notice, the sources said.

Under the current system, NBC's changes last week went this way:

"Grandpa Goes to Washington," set for Wednesday, was moved to Thursday; "Lifeline" went from Wednesday to Sunday; "The Eddie Capra Mysteries" ventured from Sunday to

Friday night, while "Sword of Justice" went from Friday to Saturday night.

Had NBC adopted its plan to move nights, not programs, sources say, the changes it made last week would read thusly:

"Grandpa" is on Friday, which formerly was Wednesday; "Lifeline" stays put on Sunday; "Capra" is on Wednesday, which once was Friday, while "Sword" airs on Tuesday, which used to be Saturday.

Adoption of the night-moving plan by NBC could have serious schedule repercussions for the other networks. They might be forced to adopt it, too, to stay competitive.

It would mean, for example, ABC's popular "NFL Monday Night Football" would appear on Saturday, which used to be Monday.

And the hit "Love Boat" would be on Monday, which used to be Saturday until NBC moved Saturday to a new night.

CBS, the most conservative of the networks, probably would just take a whole bunch of aspirin and cancel Tuesday.

Industry sources point out that NBC's night-moving idea, while bold, has certain hazards.

For example, "Saturday Night Live" would have to air on Tuesday, since that's when Saturday used to be. True, NBC could alter its plan slightly and have Saturday occur on

Seek To Cut Mouse-Loss

FLETCHER, N.C. (AP) — Researchers from North Carolina State University are trying to find ways to halt the destruction of apple orchards by pine and meadow mice.

Bill Sullivan, research assistant at NCSU and supervisor of a new building at the Mountain Horticultural Crops Research Station in Fletcher, said apple orchards provide ideal living and feeding conditions for mice. The absence of predators in the cultivated areas makes live even easier for rodents.

"The purpose of the experiments will be to find the best, most economical and safest methods of controlling the two rodents," Sullivan said.

"The building will enable us to conduct experiments on the use of toxicants in controlling pine and meadow mice in a safe environment," he said.

"You have to remember that mice are mammals just as we are, and that means that you have to be extremely careful with the types of toxicants you use on them."

He said 12 to 15 mice per acre may be found in a natural environment but that there have been estimates of as many as 140 mice in each acre of the orchards, where rodents kill thousands of trees by eating away the bark in a ring around the trunk.

continued with a low card in that suit, presenting declarer with a second club trick. He hoped to get in with the king of spades to cash his clubs.

Declarer was fully aware of his left-hand opponent's reputation, yet West had given him a trick to which he was not really entitled. The only reason he could find for this largesse was that West expected to get in with the king of spades to cash more clubs.

So declarer adopted a line based on the fact that West was not by nature charitable, and that he held the king of spades. Instead of repeating the spade finesse, declarer cashed his red-suit winners, then exited with a club.

West was able to cash three club tricks to go with his jack of spades, but he came down to king and one spade and was forced to lead away from the king into declarer's ace-queen tenace. That gave declarer nine tricks — two spades, two hearts, three diamonds and two clubs.

Our readers will, no doubt, notice that West could have avoided the end play by exiting with ace and another club, but that does not detract from declarer's brilliant card reading.

Helms, Ingram Step Up Race

By The Associated Press
Republican Sen. Jesse Helms and Democratic challenger John Ingram stepped up their U.S. Senate campaigns on Labor Day by launching new offensives.

Helms, hospitalized following surgery on his back last Friday, launched a new series of 30-second and one-minute television commercials showing him delivering a conservative message.

Thomas Ellis of Raleigh, estimated it will cost more than $30,000 to run the spots on stations across the state during the first 10 days of this month. Helms said in a recent campaign mailing that he needed to raise $109,000 for advertising this month.

While Helms was in Raleigh's Rex Hospital, Ingram skipped across the state by airplane, holding a series of news conferences in cities from Asheville to Wilmington. The Democratic nominee said he will fight to reduce Social Security taxes by looking toward general federal revenues to fund the program if he is elected to the Senate. He also said he has helped consumers as state insurance commissioner by holding down the cost of premiums.

Ingram also continued to criticize the "super rich and special interests," a label he has applied to Helms' supporters. Meanwhile, Ellis indicated he is concerned over a possible

Weeps Resin On Anniversary

DURBAN, South Africa (AP)—Scientists are puzzling over a wooden memorial cross made in 1918 by members of the South African Corps which weeps resin every year on the anniversary of a World War I battle where more than 2,000 South African soldiers died. The cross was made from a length of pine taken from Deville Wood in France, the scene of the battle.

First N.C. Test Friday On Local-Option Liquor Bill

SIGNS OF THE SEASON — Billboard at top carries sentiments of those opposed to mixed-drink sales while sign at bottom, placed in juxtaposition by photographer reflects supporters of liquor by the drink in Charlotte. (AP Laserphoto)

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)

When North Carolina's new local-option bill on mixed drinks gets its first test here Friday, supporters of the measure hope it's dry — bone dry.

If it's wet, with rain, voter turnout will likely drop. Liquor proponents in this state where mixed drink sales have been banned for 70 years fear a low turnout would mean defeat here and perhaps trigger a chain reaction of losses in other localities.

"We have the majority of the vote — there's no question about that," claims Jerry Green, chief strategist for the pro-liquor forces. "But if our people think we've got in in the bag, something like weather could have an effect. That scares me."

Opponents of the mixed-drink measure, led by a Baptist minister and a department-store magnate who says he has had his own problem with the bottle, argue with Green's assessment of voter support.

But both highly organized sides agree that the outcome of the referendum in Charlotte and surrounding Mecklenburg County hinges on voter turnout.

Passage of the measure would allow mixed-drink sales locally in restaurants and private social establishments.

While neighboring states adopted mixed-drink laws in recent years, North Carolina held out. Only beer and wine sales and "brown bagging," in which a customer carries his liquor bottle in a bag and mixes his own drinks, have been legal here.

The N.C. General Assembly's passage of the controversial local option bill last June left Oklahoma the only state in the country without some sort of mixed-drink legislation.

Both sides in the Mecklenburg County referendum agree that this is a crucial test for the local-option bill.

"If we can lick it here in Mecklenburg, I don't think it has a chance anywhere else in the state," says the Rev. Coy Privette, a Baptist minister, successful opponent of liquor in previous battles and Republican candidate for the state legislature.

"I would not be surprised at all if a defeat here led eventually to efforts in the General Assembly to repeal the whole thing," says Privette, who is Green's counterpart in the battle.

Issues in the spirited campaigns have ranged from whether mixed drinks will help draw tourists and conventions to whether supporters of mixed drinks are risking the wrath of God.

Henderson Belk, a leader of the opponents, said recently, "You watch whoever's involved in the campaign (for mixed drinks) and see what happens to them."

Belk, a member of a wealthy family that operates department stores in the Southeast, cited as an example the family of the late Joseph Kennedy, who imported Scotch whiskey. The family lost three sons to early deaths, including the late President John F. Kennedy.

Competition Is The CAB Aim

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board is making it clear that he does not favor any airline merger that would remove competition from a particular route.

Chairman Alfred E. Kahn said the board might eventually approve some mergers but warns, "We're trying to expand the industry not contract it." The CAB currently has pending before it cases involving the proposed merger of North Central and Southern Airways and the attempted takeover of National by Texas International.

Merger talks also have started between National and Pan Am and between Continental and Western airlines. The airlines are responding to a new CAB policy to increase competition.

English poet Percy Bysshe Shelly died at sea in 1822.

"Basically we have tried to ignore that kind of emotionalism and stick with the facts," says Green. He has based the proponents' campaign on mixed drinks as a better way to control liquor consumption than brown bagging, where the drinker pours his own.

While Privette declined to align himself with Belk's remark, he steadfastly contends liquor is an emotional and moral issue.

"To say this is not a moral issue is not reality," he says. "The very fact that you have to control liquor makes it a moral issue. You don't control things that are good."

Mecklenburg County has a history of supporting liquor by the drink, with voters favoring it in 1971 and again in 1973.

But the 1971 vote, another local-option measure, was declared unconstitutional before the first drink could be poured. The 1973 approval was in a statewide referendum which failed by 2-to-1.

The upcoming referendum has sparked interest anew, with a record 17,000 new voters registering to bring the county's number of voters to 182,000.

Most of those new voters are in their 20s and are either apartment dwellers or young family types, and will probably vote for mixed drinks, says Bill Culp, director of the county's elections board.

He expects a turnout of about 100,000 voters on Friday, including a core of about 35,000 who "can be expected to vote no anytime liquor pops up."

In the final days, both sides are pumping thousands of dollars into advertising campaigns and organizational efforts. Local papers continue to be deluged with letters to the editor.

And both sides are predictably saying they expect to win.

But despite all the money, all the ads and all the arguments, there is a feeling among some participants and observers that most people have already decided where they stand.

"We felt from the beginning this issue is not something you could get people to change their minds on. It's a matter of getting out the vote," says Green.

Ed Williams, editorial page editor of the Charlotte Observer, says this liquor question had drawn more letters than any other issue during his five years with the paper.

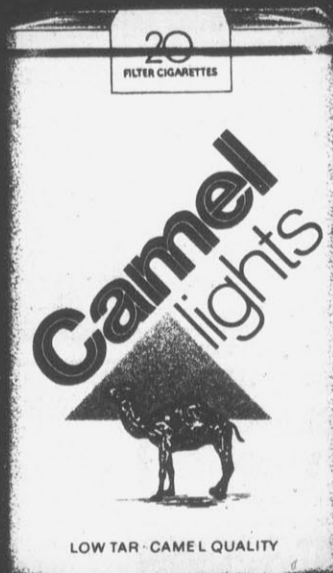

"But these letters are not designed to persuade. It's mostly to say, 'here's where I stand and why.' If you're fiercely against liquor by the drink, nobody can sit down and logically convince you it's a good thing, and vice versa."

Even if Mecklenburg County approves the measure, it will probably be the first of the year before mixed drinks will be served. Specific regulations have to be written and licenses have to be granted.

So if the proponents win Friday, they'll be pouring their celebration libations from those familiar brown bags.
