

Middle East Summitry Launched At Camp David

County Schools Open To About 11,200 Students

About 11,200 Pitt County young people ended their summer activities this morning when 16 elementary and four high schools opened their doors to welcome students back for the 1978-79 school year. "Everything is operating smoothly," Superintendent of Pitt County Schools Arthur (Ott) Alford commented. "We have 700 plus fine, dedicated teachers on hand, plus hundreds more other employees like cafeteria and maintenance people, and it all looks like another good school year coming up."

Alford noted that the estimated first day enrollment of approximately 11,200 "will be increasing within 15 to 20 days. It will be that long before all vacations are finished and before some of the older students will finish up farm work."

He added that yesterday, the Board of Education "agreed that students starting late because of being engaged in tobacco harvest would be given an opportunity to make up work lost because of still being at work. As long as these students bring in a certification from their parents or employers that they have been working, their absences will be excused," he added.

Since most county students travel to school by school buses, Alford said "we'll have a fleet of about 170 buses on the county roads."

"I'd like to remind motorists to be watchful, and to keep in mind these buses will be on nearly every road in the county."

"At the same time," Alford added, "I would appreciate anyone letting me know if they observe a driver driving improperly, not giving stop signals in sufficient time, or doing anything else that appears not proper and in the best interest of the safety of our children."

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — The Middle East summit is under way, but without word on when President Carter will bring Egypt's Anwar Sadat and Israel's Menachem Begin into the same room for the peace-seeking business they came to conduct.

Although there was no announcement of a triangular Carter-Begin-Sadat conference, it seemed likely one would be arranged sometime during the day.

The three leaders are in mountaintop isolation with the Egyptian president and the Israeli prime minister at odds over summit goals and the role to be played by Carter.

"This is no time for maneuvers and worn-out ideas," said Sadat. He repeated his objection to Begin's limited goal of concluding the summit with an agreement to continue negotiations at a lower level — negotiations that Begin said might continue for months.

For his part, Begin said at an official arrival ceremony that he will pursue "all endeavors possible to reach an agreement so that the peace process can continue and ultimately be crowned with peace treaties."

Besides advocating a go-slow approach to the search for a Mideast settlement, Begin foresees Carter playing a limited role as a summit mediator.

But on his arrival, Sadat emphasized anew that he sees the U.S. president as "a full partner in the peace process."

On that point, Carter has seemed inclined to accept Sadat's position.

Begin did say that "the unique political conclave here" — his fifth meeting with Carter and third with Sadat — "is the most important, the most momentous of them all."

Sadat termed it "the crucial crossroads" and said: "The challenge is tremendous, but we have no choice but to accept the challenge. We cannot afford to fail..."

American's Trial Seen Nearing End

By SETH MYDANS
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) —

American businessman Francis J. Crawford clashed briefly with the judge over a piece of evidence today on the second day of his trial on charges of buying rubles on the black market.

Questioning of witnesses was completed and closing arguments were due in the afternoon session. At a break in the session Crawford said, "No one has shown me any evidence. If I am convicted, it will not be because of evidence in this court."

Crawford's Soviet attorney, Leonid M. Popov, told reporters he expected the trial to end today. Although the American could get eight years in prison, there was speculation he would get a light sentence and would be exchanged for two Soviet employees of the United Nations who are charged by the U.S. government with espionage.

Following completion of prosecution testimony which Crawford said was "like a fairy tale," Judge Lev Mironov cross-examined him for 45 minutes about how his employer transferred money in and out of the Soviet Union.

The cross-examination appeared to be an attempt to understand the financial procedures used by U.S. businessmen.

The judge produced a customs declaration he said showed Crawford once entered the country with $1,600 and left with $2,700, suggesting that he might have acquired the difference illegally.

"You've got it backwards," the American told the judge, insisting he entered with the larger sum and left with the smaller one.

As Mironov grew more and more testy, Crawford left his seat, went to the bench and pointed out the spaces on the form marked "entry" and "exit" in Russian.

"Enough, sit down," said the judge, annoyed, and he broke off the line of questioning.

After the cross-examination, a parade of minor witnesses began, including Izabella Naichan, an administrative assistant in Crawford's Moscow office, who said he was "a kind man who treated me well."

School Board OKs Calendar Revision

By REBECCA BUFFALO

The Pitt County Board of Education approved the revised school calendar for the present school year, despite opposition from members of the Pitt County chapter of ACT (Association of Classroom Teachers) Tuesday.

Annette McRae, ACT president and a teacher at North Pitt High School, protested the deletion of three teacher workdays in order for the end of the school 180-day calendar to come on June 8.

"We've got some eight teacher workdays before or at the first of school, but enough to do work within those 180 days," McRae noted.

McRae explained to board members that one of the days deleted, Nov. 3, was especially set aside in the original calendar for an NCAE-sponsored workshop which will offer teachers opportunities to learn more about teaching skills.

ACT member Betsy B. Reid, a teacher at Ayden-

Gifton High School, pointed out that the one calendar day, Jan. 25, was inadequate for teachers to have examinations graded, as well as to complete paperwork for the end of the semester.

Reid noted that the workday falls on a Thursday, which will mean that students will come back to school one day before the weekend.

The board members then discussed the possibility of changing the calendar so that Jan. 26 would serve as the workday.

Superintendent Ott Alford noted that the calendar committee had discussed this possibility, but that it had been dropped because gate receipts at high school basketball games would fall if children were not in school.

MacRae interjected Alford's remark, saying "Let's talk education for our children, not gate receipts."

Chairman Mark Owens Jr. called for the board to change the workday to Friday to allow the teachers to utilize the weekend, with Thomas Patterson, vice chairman, seconding his suggestion.

McRae queried the board as to whether the school closing could be delayed, but board member Bill McLawhorn cited several reasons in opposition.

"The children are hot, some are needed to work as soon as possible in the fields, and some college programs begin after June 8," McLawhorn stated.

The board then voted to approve the calendar as stated, except for changing the date of one teacher workday to a Friday as noted.

Representatives of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference came before the board to express displeasure concerning the transference of Mrs. (Clarence) Gwendolyn Gray, a former fifth grade teacher at Falkland Elementary School, to G. R. Whitfield School.

Golden Frinks, a SCLC representative, explained to the board that a petition, signed by 144 persons in the County Commissioners Officially Recognize Rescue Squad's Record

Pitt County Commissioners yesterday afternoon officially recognized the Greenville Rescue Squad for taking its second consecutive world championship title in heavy duty rescue competition last week, and commissioner Bob Martin of Bethel, for being elected a member of the Board of Directors of the National Association of County Officials.

Martin, a member of the Board of Commissioners since December 1956, is a past president and past member of the board of directors of the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners.

He was elected as a director of NACO at the NACC meeting in Asheville, August 26.

In recognizing the Greenville Rescue Squad, commissioners offered their congratulations for the squad's team which placed first in international heavy duty rescue competition and sixth in first aid competition at the annual conference of the International Rescue and First Aid Association conference in Houston, Texas last week.

It was the third world championship for the Greenville squad, which has taken a total of 38 awards in state and international rescue and first aid competition in the past 17 years. Fourteen of the awards were state first aid and rescue championships.

County tax supervisor Jimmy Hardee told commissioners yesterday that 52,526 tax bills have been mailed to property owners in the county. The postage, he said, amounted to $6,880, while the bills, if collected, would bring in between $8.88 million and $8.94 million.

Hardee reported that work on the revaluation is under way, with field work scheduled to begin in May 1979. The revaluation, which should be completed around October 1979 will put the new values on the tax books January 1, 1981 and the first bills for the new values sent out in September 1981.

Progress continues on the new 111-unit Southside housing development with the status of construction now standing at some 82 percent complete, it was reported at Tuesday night's Housing Authority session.

The Authority's executive director, Joe Laney, told the commissioners that the construction timetable called for 90 percent completion at this time but he observed that the project was "coming along real well."

All of the exterior brick work and roofing has been finished, he reported, and most of the unit work now involves interior areas.

Landscaping of the project area off Evans Street is some 98 percent complete, according to Laney, who added that 95 percent of the driveways and sidewalks have been poured at the site. Water and sewer work has been completed, he noted.

The director said that the general contractor still hopes to meet the initial completion schedule for the latter part of October. Early grading problems held up progress during the first months of the new project.

Possible names for the project are still being discussed, Laney said, but so far very little response has been received from outside the housing staff. The Bachelor Benedict Club suggested the name of "Faunt Park" for the housing development, it was mentioned.

Laney reported that the Authority is now looking for a bond buyer for the proposed mid-rise housing complex for the elderly. He said that Interstate Securities of Charlotte is serving as the bond agent for the Authority and is actively looking for a prospective buyer for the long-term bonds. Interstate, according to Laney, has indicated that there is interest in the new project.

He reminded the commissioners that bids for the project were opened Aug. 22 and R. N. Rouse and Co. of Goldsboro submitted the low proposal of $1,662,000. The low bid is close enough to the budget that the Authority should be able to gain approval from the Department of Housing and Urban Development, Laney said. HUD has indicated by phone that it will approve the Authority's request for an additional ten units, bringing the total unit package to 60, it was noted.

Laney said that the main item now is the financing and the Authority is hopeful that Interstate will be able to secure a bond source.

Commissioners agreed to have Les Turnage of Greenville conduct an appraisal on the present site now utilized by the Authority and Redevelopment Commission for central offices at 316 Roundtree Drive. The Authority earlier received approval from HUD to declare the property as excess.

The Authority has planned for years to return the residential structure now being used for offices back to the private market as a residence. The house will be appraised and advertised for sale, according to Laney, and hopefully a family will be interested in buying the house.

In planning to sell the house, the Authority and WASHINGTON (AP) — Bargainers in the postal contract dispute are resuming direct negotiations after an initial effort to sidestep a threatened mail strike led nowhere.

"The status quo remains," one union source said Tuesday after officials from the Postal Service and three unions ended a two-hour meeting, their first together since July 21.

The two sides were returning to the bargaining table today as they moved toward a self-imposed Sept. 16 deadline for either forging a contract settlement or letting an arbitrator do it for them.

Sources close to the talks said the unions spent Tuesday's session laying down their demand for a bigger wage increase than the 19.5 percent boost — including cost-of-living allowances — contained in the proposed three-year contract rejected by postal workers last month.

The Postal Service, which had refused to renegotiate with the unions until the eve of a scheduled nationwide mail strike, reportedly made no response to the union demands, according to the sources, who asked not to be identified.

The tentative contract's wage package, which provided for raising a typical worker's annual salary from about $16,000 now to $19,100 by 1981, was branded unsatisfactory by local union leaders and was a key factor in the pact's rejection.

The unions, representing 516,000 workers, want to remove the ceiling on the cost-of-living formula contained in the rejected agreement. They also want to rearrange the annual wage boosts to place the largest increase in the first year of the contract rather than in the third, as in the rejected contract.

Some local union leaders have revived calls for illegal wildcat walkouts after the settlement was rejected by members of all three unions — the 299,000-member American Postal Workers Union, the 181,000-member National Association of Letter Carriers and the 36,000-member mailhandlers division of the Laborers International Union.

Safe School Lunches

It's back to school time again! Children hurry off to school wearing new outfits and toting new school supplies. You may pack a special treat in your child's lunchbox. That's a great way to start off the new school year. Kids love lunches from home, especially when there is a treat or surprise inside. Be careful, though, to avoid packing a dangerous surprise in your child's lunchbox—food poisoning.

Packed school lunches can be dangerous if they are not prepared carefully. Bacteria and germs, which cause food poisoning, grow rapidly at temperatures between 40°F. and 140°F. And, warm temperatures in school lockers and desks provide a playground for growing germs and bacteria.

Here are some tips that will help you prepare safe school lunches for your children:

Keep Food Cold. Sandwiches containing meat and poultry products can be frozen the night before they are packed for lunch. Take them out of the freezer just before leaving the house. They will thaw slowly in the locker and be just right by noon. By keeping sandwiches cold, you inhibit the growth of germs and bacteria.

To keep school lunches cold, get a freezer gel device. Place one in each lunch bag. If you don't have one—make your own by taking a clean margarine container, filling it with water and freezing overnight. Just before your children leave for school, place the homemade device in the center of their lunch bags. This will keep lunches cold and safe.

Liquid food products can be kept cold by pouring them into a vacuum bottle or other insulated container.

Keep Foods Hot. During the fall and winter months—as the weather outside gets cool and crisp—soups and hot chocolate become popular lunchtime treats. To keep these foods warm until noon, pour them into a vacuum bottle or other insulated container when they are boiling hot. Put the cap on immediately. Steam escaping from the food should be kept inside to help keep the contents warm longer.

Keep Foods Clean. Be sure to clean and scrub all fruits and vegetables thoroughly before packing them in a school lunch. Cleanliness is the key to preparing safe brown bag lunches. Always wash your hands carefully with soap and water before handling food. Wear rubber gloves if you have a cut or infection on your hands. Make sure all utensils, cutting boards and counter surfaces are washed thoroughly with hot, soapy water immediately before and after they are used.

"Trading" is a common practice among class mates. However, this could be a dangerous practice. Discourage your children from "trading" prepared foods with classmates. There is no way of knowing if the other child's food was prepared and stored safely.

The Lunchbox vs. The Brown Bag. Lunchboxes hold the cold inside much better and are easier to keep clean. However, if you prefer a sack lunch, buy bags which are to be used specifically for this purpose. Mark them clearly and store them apart from your other bags. Do not use bags which have been previously used to carry groceries, lunches, detergents, etc. Used bags may contain harmful germs, bacteria and chemicals. With these tips, you can avoid packing any dangerous surprises in your children's lunchbox.

To Keep Cost Down, Keep Wedding Simple

HOUSTON (AP) — When Beth and Jack, and Kathy and Mark, announced their engagements, their wedding plans sounded very similar.

Both couples were to be married in a church with a reception following. Both girls planned long wedding gowns, invitations, music. Florists and photographers were hired and cakes ordered.

Beth and Jack's wedding cost $700. But when Kathy and Mark said "I do," it cost Kathy's dad $5,000. What made the difference?

"It was not any one thing that made the difference, although the biggest cost in both weddings was the reception," said Betty Crager, a professional planner who coordinated both weddings. "In nearly every phase of the wedding plans, Beth chose to keep it simple and watch the budget."

When cost is a factor in planning a wedding, Ms. Crager has these suggestions for judicious savings:

—Invitations: Consider handwriting invitations to save printing costs. For an engraved look consider thermography — much less expensive than engraving and looks very similar.

—Photographs: Don't skimp on quality, but do be sure you understand separate charges for extra prints, an album, a portrait, etc.

—Flowers: Think greenery and simple flowers like daisies and other garden varieties to cut costs.

—Reception: The reception is the single largest cost in a wedding and the time and place indicate how lavish the food and beverage choice should be. The church hall is usually the least expensive place to hold the reception and if the bride eliminates alcoholic beverages it greatly reduces the per-guest cost.

A morning wedding almost requires a brunch or light lunch type of menu for the reception. Early afternoon hours between 2 and 4 p.m. permit the bride to serve champagne and wedding cake and tea sandwiches. Evening weddings are very social and seem to promote the notion that you will be serving something more than cake.

The type of wedding brides prefer, says Ms. Crager, often depends upon their age. The 19-to-23-year-old: She and her parents usually want a traditional church wedding. Her parents live in the same city and it is an important social event for them and their friends.

The 25-to-30-year-old bride: She is a career woman, whose family usually lives in another city. She and the groom invite their friends and are concerned with making their wedding simple and more personal. Often the bride pays for this wedding or she splits the cost with her parents or the groom.

The 30-to-50-year-old: She is the divorced bride who wants a church wedding either because she never had one or because she wants an opportunity to get her children and friends involved in the marriage ceremony. Even without orange blossoms and lace, this can be a lovely wedding and a reception where everyone knows one another and has a good time.

Ms. Crager formed Events, Etc., in Houston after taking a course on handling special events in Washington, D.C., from White House social secretary Gretchen Posten. She considers herself a professional mother-of-the-bride, helping brides to sort out the good from the gaudy among purveyors of flowers, food and photos.

"All brides are beautiful," she says, "but not brave. They let well-meaning friends complicate their wedding plans with ideas that turn out to be costly and needless. I try to pare these ideas down to size and help brides select the pomp to suit their circumstances."

August has nearly caught up with June as the most popular wedding month, says Ms. Crager, who notes these current trends:

—Paper hearts or tissue paper rose petals have nearly replaced throwing rice at the departing couple.

—Today's brides are wearing their mother's wedding gowns, both as a tradition and to save the cost of a new gown.

—Popular songs like "You Light Up My Life" are being used instead of "O Promise Me" for wedding music.

—Many couples are writing their own wedding vows.

—Wedding cakes, tiered or flat, are being decorated with fresh flowers.

—Barefoot-in-the-park weddings are popular with young couples, says Ms. Crager, and can be quite lovely.

Women Benefit From Inventions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Inventions patented in September were a godsend to women, according to IPO, Inc., a non-profit public educational group dedicated to preserving the patent system as an incentive to innovation and creativity.

On Sept. 10, 1846, Elias Howe Jr. of Cambridge, Mass., patented the first workable sewing machine. Women were soon using them in their homes and many later found jobs in factories when Isaac M. Singer used Howe's patents to help create a giant ready-made clothing industry.

M.R. Bissell in September 1876 literally helped housewives off their knees when he patented an upright, push-type carpet sweeper, an instant success.

Boon Or Bane For Handicapped?

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: As a longtime faithful reader, I know that you have frequently appealed to employers to hire the handicapped. And now I see by your column that you object to the practice of using the telephone to solicit business.

Abby, you must surely be aware that a large number of handicapped people are employed as telephone solicitors. How do you reconcile your attitude toward hiring the handicapped with your objection to the telephone solicitation — which provides so many handicapped people with jobs? (Sign me)

"ONE OF THEM"

DEAR ONE: My best defense is expressed in the following letter from another reader:

DEAR, DEAR ABBY: May I direct this to your readers who are employed as telephone solicitors: I realize that many of you are shut-ins, and that type of work is ideal for invalids, but please consider my circumstances.

I am also an invalid—confined to bed and wheelchair—and when my phone rings, sometimes just reaching for it is so painful that I let it ring.

I am on medication and pain pills most of the time, and I sleep irregular hours, so you can imagine how I reacted when someone awakened me to offer me a special rate for dancing lessons!

So please be a little more understanding if I sound slightly irritated when you call.

LIVING WITH PAIN

DEAR ABBY: I am a man of 62, married 39 years, no children. I have never written to a columnist before, but we had an experience I think should be published.

Saturday our lawn needed mowing and weeding, the garage needed cleaning, and I wanted to watch the ball game.

My wife saw four teenage neighbor boys dawdling aimlessly in front of our house, so she called to them, told them our lawn needed mowing, and asked if they were interested in earning a little money. They almost mobbed her. One grabbed the mower, the other the rake, another the grass shears. The fourth went around the house, found the hose, washed down the garage and driveway, swept out the excess water, coiled the hose neatly, and put it back where

Synergy Switch Program Set

Pitt County Home Economics Extension Agents are planning a special event for consumers of all ages. This event, Synergy Switch, stresses a cooperative approach by the total family to conserve in all phases of life.

The event will have three segments all related to practical ways of conserving energy. Subjects covered will include: "Synergy Sense in the Kitchen," "Dressing by Degrees" and "Wood Burning Stoves — Selection, Installation, Use." Sam Uzzell, assistant agricultural extension agent, and Jim Kea, assistant area forestry agent, Miss Addie Gore, Mrs. Evelyn Spangler and Mrs. Sue May, home economics extension agents, will participate in presenting the subject matter.

Synergy Switch is scheduled for Tuesday, Sept. 12, in the Agricultural Extension Office, Greenville. The same program will be given at 9:30 a.m., at 2 p.m. and again at 7:30 p.m. In order to make appropriate arrangements, it is necessary to request pre-registration for each session. Interested persons are asked to call 758-1196 by Friday, Sept. 8, indicating the asked to call 758-1196 by Friday, Sept. 8.

he found it. Then he started pulling weeds. There was no arguing or bickering. They rotated all the jobs, and when they were finished, our lawn looked better than it had looked in years.

My point is this: If more people would hire idle teenagers to do odd jobs, and give them a chance to earn a little pocket money, it would add to their confidence and self-esteem. We might even see a sharp decline in juvenile delinquency and vandalism. There are always odd jobs they can do, and it wouldn't cost much.

Just give the kids a chance to prove themselves, and you might be pleasantly surprised.

J.B. IN MILWAUKEE

DEAR J.B.: I'm with you! ("For Satan finds some mischief still for idle hands to do.")

CONFIDENTIAL TO BIG JOHN IN MANASSAS, VA.: Hang in there. No one would have crossed the ocean if he could have gotten off the ship in the storm.

N.C. Plans Extraditing Accused PCB-Spillers

JAMESTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — North Carolina officials, anxious to begin the trial of a father and two sons accused of causing environmental damage along that state's highways, planned vigorous action today to extradite the Jamestown area residents.

The office of North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt said the governor would ask New York officials for quick action in getting Robert J. Burns, 49, president of the Transformer Sales Co. of Allegany, and his sons, Randall, 20, and Timothy, 23, back for trial.

Hunt was "prepared to call (New York Gov.) Hugh Carey if he needs to," said Gary Pearce, Hunt's press secretary.

Hunt reportedly signed a governor's extradition warrant on Tuesday.

The trio was held overnight at Chautauqua County jail in Mayville, a jailer said. Federal officials planned to transport Burns and his sons to Buffalo for arraignment on eight federal charges of improperly disposing of the poisonous chemical PCB. The charges were filed Tuesday, and relate to North Carolina charges filed Aug. 30.

Each of the three defendants faces four state felony and three state misdemeanor counts of dumping oil containing PCBs in a North Carolina county, Halifax.

Both state and federal charges stem from the alleged spraying of 31,000 gallons of PCBs-laced oil along 270 miles of North Carolina roadways.

No charges had been filed against Burns or his sons in New York, but the men were under investigation for having stored some 6,400 gallons at sites in Cattaraugus and Chautauqua counties.

Judge Lee Towne Adams of Chautauqua County Court at Mayville granted $5,000 bail for each man Tuesday, but before they could post bond on the state indictment, authorities were notified that federal detainees were en route from Raleigh, N.C., to keep the trio in custody.

A spokesman for the U.S. attorney's office in Raleigh said the detainees, a "hold" order which nullified the right to bail, were drawn on "an eight-count information charging them with violations having to do with the disposition of toxic chemicals."

U.S. Attorney George M. Anderson said the three men were charged with "knowingly and willfully" disposing of PCBs in 10 North Carolina counties. He said they could face fines of up to $25,000 and one year in jail on each of the eight counts.

Concerned Over Junk Food Diet

PROVO, Utah (AP) — The craving for junk food that Brigham Young University students seem to have worries school officials.

More than 2 million candy bars, 500,000 snack cakes and 125,000 cans of soda pop were consumed last year by BYU students, who are not allowed to smoke or drink. And while BYU's policy forbids disclosure of financial matters, a student newspaper report placed the total spent by the school's 25,000 students on junk food in excess of $500,000. The school is owned and operated by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon).

Blame Ticks In 2 Deaths

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Ordinary dog ticks probably caused the sudden deaths of a local couple by infecting them with Rocky Mountain spotted fever.

That's the diagnosis by health authorities who were baffled until Tuesday by the deaths of Leonard Whiteside, 49, and his wife, Jo Ann, 47, within two days of each other.

At a news conference here Tuesday, doctors said tissues from the bodies of the couple were "loaded" with bacteria causing Rocky Mountain spotted fever.

Dr. Charles Miller, director of the Mecklenburg Health Department, emphasized that the disease could only be transmitted by ticks, and not from one person to another.

The deaths of Whiteside on Friday and his wife on Sunday were coincidence, he said.

"This has to be an exceedingly rare circumstance," Miller declared.

The couple became ill after returning from a trip to Myrtle Beach, S.C., on Aug. 21. They suffered from headaches, fever, nausea, diarrhea and muscle cramps at home for several days before both were hospitalized at Presbyterian Hospital late last week.

The Whitesides received proper treatment at the hospital but "the disease had progressed too far," Miller said.

Rocky Mountain spotted fever was high on the suspect list but there was no evidence of tick bites on either body and neither victim developed a symptomatic rash.

But results of tests conducted early Tuesday at the University of North Carolina medical school in Chapel Hill uncovered the spotted fever bacteria.

One of the couple's three children also fell ill last week, but Miller said Tuesday the girl had recovered and apparently did not have spotted fever.

The deaths of the Whitesides prompted an intensive investigation by local health officials and investigators from the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta.

At a news conference Monday, Miller admitted "We are all baffled."

Miller said Tuesday that only three or four cases of Rocky Mountain spotted fever had been reported in Mecklenburg County this year, but authorities believe several cases were not reported because the victims recovered.

Miller said it was unlikely the Whitesides were infected by the same tick, and it would be impossible to determine when and where they were infected. Symptoms of the fever appear three to 10 days after infection.

Miller emphasized that Rocky Mountain spotted fever "is rarely fatal if people receive adequate treatment."

Begin Inquiry Into Bombing

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — The FBI and the U.S. Treasury Department have started an investigation at the request of Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., into the bombing of a Dayton area trucking firm.

Jeffrey Stone, an aide to the Senate Commerce Subcommittee on Monopolies, which Kennedy chairs, was dispatched here after the bomb blast Tuesday damaged a firm whose owners had been critical of lax enforcement of trucking industry regulations. Herschel Wimmer of Fort Thomas, Ky., an owner, said the blast at the Vandalia offices of Dayton Air Freight Inc. caused $50,000 in damage. There were no injuries.

Washington In Nat'l Register

Our neighboring city of Washington, N. C. has been nominated for listing in the National Register of Historic Places.

It was said that there are still buildings of historical interest in the town on the Pamlico.

Washington, which advertises itself as the first town to be named after President Washington, has a courthouse which was built in 1786 and is one of the two oldest courthouses still standing in the state.

Washington and Greenville are about the same age as cities. Unfortunately in Greenville most buildings which date back any length of time have either been destroyed by fire or demolished.

Hopefully the old structures left in Washington won't meet the same fate. If the town can be included in the National Register of Historic Places perhaps its oldest buildings can be protected.

Project's Disapproval Disappointing

It was a disappointment to the city that a request for a Young Adult Conservation Corps Resident Project for the city was not approved.

City officials hoped for approval of the project to help the city develop its wilderness area north of the river. Instead the project was awarded to a state park.

The decision is a setback for the city's parks plans but it should not be the end of the road. Planning for development of the park is sound and other ways should be found to carry it out.

THIS AFTERNOON Balanced Growth

By BILL NOBLITT

There's much more to balanced growth for North Carolina than simply pushing in structural development.

In the person of Hunt, a moderate, thoughtful, balanced growth leader, we have a man who will be necessary for those who would analyze and understand the proposals put forth by the state and his agencies. It keeps this in mind.

The bottom line is essential: a growing economy, a growing population, and the people who are all going to do better economic and social conditions in the state.

And the impact of results will be a much broader range of activities than just economics. For it has been known that time and again that a better job with better income leads to more rewarding living, and that the off-spring, perform better in life, the obvious fruit of better education, health, education and community living.

Broad Impact

So a careful study of the proposed, Balanced Growth Policy for North Carolina now being debated in leadership circles across the state makes it almost every legislative proposal, every new agency program put forth every consideration of change of a major sort will for some time be weighed in the balance of what it does or doesn't do toward the end of equalizing opportunities in North Carolina.

Hardly any segment of life imaginable is left untouched by the tentative listing contained in the publication put out this summer by the State Goals and Policy Board: children, the elderly, state government management, transportation, health, welfare, the family, education at all levels.

Beneath each discussion is the proposition that the state will grow and change, with more jobs and more people locating here. What services, how and where, qualities of the good life and out of doors, keeping roots in the small towns and farmland — those are the themes underlying the studies at hand.

A major example of how this philosophy will — even in its early, still tentative stages — begin to shape policy and decisions in a significant way can be found in the conclusions and recommendations of the Governor's Commission on Public School Finance.

Those proposals being handed to Gov. Hunt this month by members of the commission chaired by State Senator Ed Renfrow, D-Johnson, are designed to balance the investment of public funds in the schools. Even though this state has a system in which the state takes a large share of the cost of local schools, that approach at bottom is designed to provide a basic floor of support.

More Funds

But excellence even in those basics is often affected by the ability — and willingness — of local communities to come up with more money to hire additional teachers, buy more and better equipment, build and equip schools, and to attract more highly skilled and trained personnel.

Beyond the basics, when it comes to sciences and languages and music and arts, the differences become even more pronounced.

The commission gathered a wealth of data on how much each of the 100 counties spends in addition to the state funds, and comparisons of that effort to ability in terms of local wealth. That information is in the report. The proposals are complex for correcting the inequities; they are in the report, and will be the subject of much debate next year when the General Assembly must face the question of how to provide more state funds to raise up those local schools which lack the means of raising themselves.

Meanwhile, as Senator Renfrow points out, the State Constitution guarantees every child equal access and opportunity educationally.

If state equalization aid is not instituted, he says, the Constitution is meaningless. Governmental leaders in other areas of concern are approaching equalization (balanced growth) with an equal fervor.

SECOND WIND--AS THOUGH HE NEEDED IT!

By ART BUCHWALD It's All In The Image

WASHINGTON — On the question of human rights we must not overlook the highly respected Americans who receive large retainers from some of the most repressive regimes in the world. Some are Washington lawyers whose names are household words, and others are American public relations firms who will do and have done anything for a buck.

The other day, at his behest, I met with Fish, president of a Washington PR firm.

Fish was in a fine mood. "We just got the South American country of Tuna as an account," he told me.

"But isn't Tuna ruled by a ruthless junta that has tortured and jailed thousands of opposition leaders?" I asked.

"That's the image they have now. But after we get our campaign under way it will be known as the bulwark of anti-communism in South America."

"How did you get the account?" I asked.

"I went down and made a presentation to Gen. Baracuda myself. I told him my country has a bad image in the United States, mainly because he keeps shooting all the opposition leaders. He said it was an internal matter. But I pointed out to him that the Carter regime is trying to cut off foreign aid to countries that do not respect human rights."

"Did you suggest in your presentation that the junta stop jailing and killing the opposition?"

"Of course not. I would never have gotten the account. What I told him was that he could still do it as long as he has a good public relations firm in the United States to see that his side of the story is told."

"Did you explain how you'd do that?"

"By taking out ads in The Washington Post, The Washington Star, the New York Times and the Wall Street Journal announcing that the junta was only torturing and shooting the opposition until it could hold free elections."

"He liked that?"

"He thought it was a great idea. I also proposed that we bring senators and congressmen down to Tuna and put them up at the Hotel Trocadero and entertain them for a week at the junta's expense. We'd arrange sightseeing tours for them and military parades, and have them talk to 'peasants' who think that Gen. Baracuda's government is the greatest thing since the invention of white bread."

"You really put a lot of work into your presentation."

"I also suggested that Tuna give scholarships to the leading American universities for the study of South American military coups."

A New Pricing Scheme

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's April 1977 energy program has undergone some major surgery of late at the hands of its framers: it has been given a new centerpiece.

The centerpiece that came with the plan — long identified by administration officials as a tax on crude oil — has apparently given way to a complex natural gas pricing scheme unlike anything contained in Carter's original bill.

You do not hear much talk from the White House these days about the oil tax — apparently a silent acknowledgement of the obituary several prominent senators pronounced over it months ago.

Instead, the gas deregulation "compromise," which will be taken up in the Senate in the next few days, is now receiving the star billing. To Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd, it is no less than "the axis on which our image turns abroad."

Jody Powell, the president's press secretary, calls the legislation "the culmination of two years of work."

It's true that Carter did make a campaign pledge in 1976 to work for gas deregulation. But since then, his administration has spent far more time arguing against decontrol than for it.

Just a year ago Carter was hinting that he might veto deregulation legislation then before the Senate — if it ever reached his desk.

About the same time, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, a staunch supporter of Carter's energy proposals, issued a statement denouncing deregulation. Part of it read:

"There is absolutely no guarantee that deregulation will produce more supplies: what it will produce is economic

40 Years Ago Today

September 6, 1938

During the eight days the Greenville tobacco market has been operating this year, an average of approximately a million pounds has been sold each day.

Heavy offerings confronted auctioneers and buyers as they started on the new week of sales yesterday morning, but the floors will be cleared early this afternoon.

So far this season, 7,855,124 pounds of the leaf have been sold, bringing $1,691,852 or an official average of $21.34 per hundred pounds.

Good tobacco sold stronger yesterday than on any day this season, bringing up to $38 per hundred weight. The majority of the offerings continue to be made up of poor to medium quality, and it is believed that most of the yield in this section comes in that class.

The general average this year is running more than a dollar a hundred higher than at the same time a year ago. Offerings and money paid out are also ahead of comparative figures than last year.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Mondale's Gas Warning

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — In his effort to sell the compromise natural gas bill to Congress, Vice President Walter Mondale defied both logic and world financial opinion by declaring that nothing less than the rate of the beleaguered dollar is at stake.

Mondale, meeting privately with legislative assistants of senators who are uncommitted on the gas bill, did not hedge. If the bill is not passed, he said, the dollar is doomed. A few of the Senate aides raised eyebrows, but many others reported back to their bosses that the vice president had made a strong case indeed.

Actually, overwhelming sentiment among the world's central bankers is that the gas bill, providing for slowly phased deregulation of natural gas prices into the mid-1980s, will have little or no impact on the dollar.

To counteract that argument, one of the liberal opponents of the bill — Sen. Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio — is using an unusual ally: the Chase Manhattan Bank. Metzenbaum is distributing an internal memorandum written by Chase vice president Robert Slighton, an economist, which contends:

"The argument that passage of the compromise gas bill would play an important role in halting the decline in the dollar and strengthening the U.S.

balance-of-payments is at best highly exaggerated and at worst just plainly wrong."

A footnote: The president's agents, in seeking support for the bill from business groups, use the magic word "deregulation" — a label Mr. Carter shuns in public for fear of losing support from consumer states.

The 'Superb' President

Backstage efforts by aides to wean President Carter from his incessant use of the word "superb" proved only partially successful in his most recent press conference.

Mr. Carter, both privately and publicly, uses the adjective "superb" so frequently — particularly when applied to somebody under attack — that it has lost nearly all meaning. In one staff conference, he even referred to the "superbity" of one widely criticized official. So aides have pleaded with him to drop "superb" for a while.

Nevertheless, in his Aug. 17 press conference, the president used the forbidden word twice — both times in reference to officials departing under controversial circumstances. Resigned White House aide Midge Costanza was praised for her "superb services"; fired Gen. Walton Walker was lauded for having "performed superbly."

Doleful In N.H.

Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas felt compelled to cancel a scheduled political appearance at a county fair in Plymouth, N.H., Aug. 30 because of Gov. Meldrim Thomson's wrath over Dole's vote to give the District of Columbia full voting representation in Congress.

Conservative Republican Thomson expressed his outrage at Dole's Senate vote publicly and pungently. So Dole, a possible 1980 Republican presidential candidate, sent out a feeler: if he encountered Thomson at the state fair, would Thomson take him around. The answer: the governor would welcome Dole with a handshake — but nothing else.

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

School days! School days! Yes, it's that time again. Greenville City Schools and Pitt County Schools are now in session. More students than ever before will be on our streets and highways — riding buses, bikes, cars and walking.

Parents and students alike should be aware of the rules of safe conduct on or about school property as well as the safety precautions to be used while enroute to and from school. Children should be advised to stay on the sidewalk when walking; do not dart out from between parked cars and don't play in the streets. Also, advise children of the safest route if they are walking or riding a bicycle to school.

If your child rides the bus, remind him that one person, the driver, is responsible for the safe transport of 30 to 40 children and should be obeyed. Encourage children not to distract the driver, to be courteous to fellow passengers, remain seated while the vehicle is in motion and don't engage in horseplay while on the bus.

Schools educate for safe and healthful living, create and maintain a safe and healthful environment, and offer health and safety programs. But, the schools can not do it all! Parents are the first and most important teachers in a child's life and they must teach safety to their children and set a good example by practicing safety measures.

Encourage safety, practice safety and you'll be rewarded by the safety of your child.

The Consumers Are Organizing

By LOUISE COOK

A growing number of consumers are learning that it pays to organize and the government is trying to help buyers band together for their rights.

No one knows how many consumer groups — public and private — have been formed in recent years. There are several hundred state and local consumer units alone. The 11-year-old Consumer Federation of America, one of the nation's largest consumer organizations, has 215 member groups.

According to the Office of Education of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, one of the first steps to take is incorporation. "The act of incorporation often gives a group an important psychological benefit, a sense of continuity."

Consumer organizations usually apply for incorporation under Section 501 of the Internal Revenue Code; that's the section for non-profit groups. They generally apply for C-3 or C-4 status, depending on how much lobbying they want to do. Lobbying by C-3 groups is more restricted and contributions to these groups are tax deductible. C-4 groups, in contrast, are free to engage in more legislative advocacy, but contributions to these groups are not tax deductible.

An Internal Revenue Service booklet, "How to Apply for Recognition of Exemption for an Organization," Publication 557, explains the forms and procedures to follow to gain non-profit status. The booklet costs 40 cents and is available from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office,

Washington, D.C., 20402.

Fund-raising is another necessary step on the road to organization. Grants awarded by public and private foundations are an important source of money, but they are often overlooked by people who lack experience in the field. To find out where the money is, HEW suggests subscribing to "The Grantmanship Center News," published six times a year by Grantsmanship Center, 1015 Olympic Boulevard, Los Angeles, California, 90015. The annual fee is $15.

Consumer groups also are eligible for federal funds under the Consumers' Education Program, established in 1972. Congress provided $4 million for program grants in fiscal 1978. Further information is available from Director, Office of Consumers' Education, U.S. Office of Education, Washington, D.C., 20202.

Any new organization faces some pitfalls and you can avoid trouble by following a few basic rules. Leaders of well-established consumer groups, polled by HEW, offer these do's and don'ts.

—DO build a dues-paying membership. The fees need not be large, but it is important to establish your group as being worth an investment.

—DO publish a newsletter. A simple mimeographed sheet is enough to keep members in touch with what's happening.

—DON'T speak out on issues without preparation. One slip can undo months of work by causing a loss of credibility.

—DO involve new members in projects right after they have joined. Don't let them lose their enthusiasm.

FORECAST

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service predicts rain for portions of Nevada, Oregon and Idaho, northern Montana and North Dakota and a wide section of the Great Lakes region today until Thursday. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
High pressure still is in control of North Carolina's weather and fair skies and little or no rain are in prospect for at least another couple of days.

Winds are light and the National Weather Service says this will tend to concentrate haze and pollutants in lower layers of the atmosphere. This may be most noticeable in western parts of the state where the air is nearly stagnant.

Overnight temperatures are ranging mostly in the comfortable 60s while daytime highs are holding in the middle 80s.

A warming trend is expected to set in Thursday with temperatures possibly reaching the low 90s in some areas.

On the coast, winds were reported today to be east to northeast 5 to 15 knots. They are expected to shift to the northwest 5 to 15 knots Thursday.

bowed out and left the Plymouth fair and the governor off his schedule. His outlook for New Hampshire's first-in-the-nation primary is not bright, with Mel Thomson gunning for him.

Rising Carter Star

Presidential aide Anne Wexler hit her stride at the recent national governors' conference in Boston, far outdistancing Tim Kraft, the president's chief political conduit to the states.

Charming both Democrats and Republicans, Wexler defused several potential political explosions. The governors were impressed. Gov. James Exon of Nebraska, one of Mr. Carter's toughest Democratic critics among the governors, told us: "They need more Wexlers in the White House. She's got her head screwed on right."

Kraft, on the contrary, was a major disappointment. When the Democratic governors asked him to speak about politics at their breakfast meeting Aug. 28 he was unresponsive and inarticulate to the point that several governors privately criticized him. "Kraft just didn't want to talk to us," said one governor.

devastation."

It was not until early 1978 — after failure of repeated attempts by House-Senate negotiators to produce a compromise leaving price controls on natural gas — that the administration signaled its willingness to support gradual price deregulation.

"The gas compromise that Carter has now adopted as his own would lift federal price controls from newfound gas by 1985 and allow a steady increase in the regulated price between now and then.

Although the bill contains features designed to cushion consumers against sudden price increases, it still bears little resemblance to Carter's original proposal to place federal price controls on all natural gas flowing in this country.

Carter's plan, which was backed by consumer groups, passed the House. But the Senate rejected it in favor of a producer-backed bill to lift federal price controls over the next two to five years.

he current compromise is the product of more than eight months of touch-and-go negotiations between the House and Senate to reconcile those wide differences. And even though the president likes it, the compromise is being actively opposed by both consumer and producer groups.

So while the administration still wants a crude oil tax, it is clear the natural gas compromise has — at least for the time being — become the adopted centerpiece of the president's energy plan.

will take money from anybody," I agreed. "Was Gen. Barracuda concerned about how much your PR campaign would cost him?"

"No, because he figured he could get American companies that do business with him to ante up most of it. And what he didn't get from them he could just confiscate from the people he was planning to throw into jail."

"Does your conscience bother you for taking on this account?"

"You have to be kidding. This is a real challenge for an American public relations firm. If we can change Gen. Barracuda's image in the United States, we might even get Idi Amin for a client."

"I never thought of that," I admitted. "One more question. Why did you want to see me?"

"Well, one of the things I promised in our presentation was that we'd bring American newspapermen down to Tuna, on the cuff, of course, and have them write about what a great tourist spot it is."

"I'd love to go," I told him, "but I've already promised the Herring public relations firm I'd do some puff pieces for them on Cambodia."

Church-Affiliated Schools Vow To Continue Fight

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Administrators from 63 of the state's fundamentalist church-affiliated schools repeated their vow Tuesday to go to jail if necessary rather than file state-required annual reports on their operations.

The schools lost their first court battle over the state-required annual reports Tuesday when Superior Court Judge Donald Smith ruled that 11 of the 63 schools that had been taken to court by the state would have to file the reports.

But the schools say they will appeal that ruling, all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court if necessary. The Organized Christian Schools voted unanimously Tuesday at a meeting at Friendship Baptist Church in Raleigh to appeal.

In the meantime, Smith's ruling means the schools must file the annual reports on their operations for the school year which just began within two weeks. But administrators say they will not. The ruling exempted them from filing the reports for last year.

They argue the reports, which are required by the state Board of Education, constitute regulation of religion by the state.

However, Smith ruled the state has the right to regulate non-public schools in areas including curriculum requirements, promotion and grading practices, teacher certification and the length of the school day and term.

"It's either appeal or go to jail," said the Rev. Kent Kelly, administrator of the Calvary Christian School in Southern Pines.

Carr said one of the main areas of concern was Smith's finding that the curriculum in non-public schools must substantially the same as that in public schools. And the administrators object to the requirement that teachers meet state certification standards.

Smith ruled in favor of the schools in some areas. He found that no statute authorizes the state board or superintendent to issue "non-standard ratings" as a substitute for teaching certificates.

Smith also ruled that the state

Board of Education does not have the right to define an "approved" non-public school; to require that textbooks be substantially the same as those in public schools; to require that the number of teachers be the same; or require that physical facilities be inspected every year for health and safety.

Smith said the authority to inspect and set requirements for physical facilities is vested in state agencies other than the Board of Education.

City Counts 4 Accidents

An estimated $7,300 property damage resulted from four traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police, Tuesday.

Investigators reported heaviest damage resulted from a 1:05 p.m. collision at the intersection of Greene Street and Mumford Road involving cars driven by John Marvin Mills of 2413 Umstead Ave. and Mary Matthews Bland of Route 4, Greenville.

Damage from the collision was set at $2,500 to the Mills car and $2,000 to the Bland auto by police who charged Mrs. Bland with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety.

Trucks driven by Herbert Harper of 323 Clairmont Cir., and Jack Russell Bryant of 215 South Meade St. collided about 9 a.m. at the intersection of First and Summit Streets, resulting in an estimated $1,000 damage to the Bryant truck and $100 damage to the Harper vehicle.

JoAnn Carroll Baldree of 217 Josie Ln. was charged with failing to stop for a stop sign following investigation of a 6:10 p.m. mishap at the intersection of 13th and Cotanche Streets.

Police reported the Baldree car collided with an auto driven by Paul Ronald Scery of Glendale Court, causing an estimated $800 damage to the Scery car and $200 damage to the Baldree auto.

Scott Buck of Route 3, Greenville was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 9 a.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard, 700 feet West of the Evans Street intersection.

Officers identified the other driver involved as Otis Bruce Taylor of Winterville, and estimated damage at $400 to the Taylor car and $300 to the Buck vehicle.

EPA Insists On Towers

SOUTHPORT, N.C. (AP) — If the Environmental Protection Agency stands by its position that Carolina Power and Light must build cooling towers at its Brunswick nuclear plant, the company is expected to take the case to federal court.

The EPA says it has concluded that the present cooling system at the plant is destroying marine life in the Cape Fear River. Last November, regional EPA administrator John C. White ordered the towers built. CP&L appealed to White's superiors in Washington, who ordered the EPA office in Atlanta to reconsider the case.

Last Thursday the Atlanta EPA office upheld White's order and denied CP&L's request for formal hearings on the effect of its current cooling system on the environment.

The company says the towers would cost $25 million a year for 25 years. The state Utilities Commission says the towers would mean consumers would pay $2.76 a month more on their electric bills.

WORKSHOP MEETING

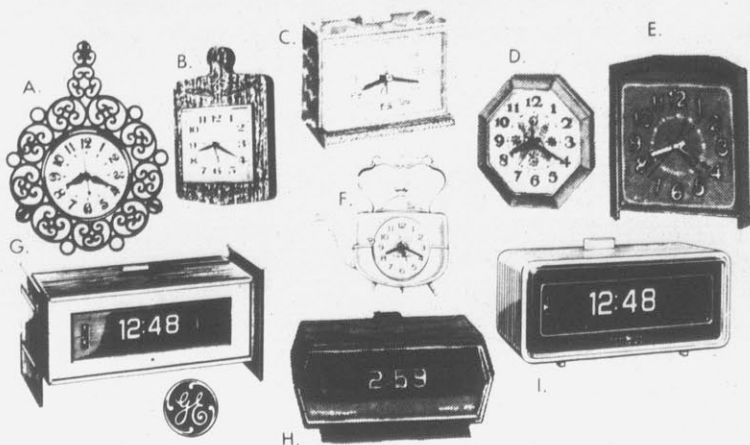

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission has scheduled a general workshop session for Wednesday night, Sept. 6 at 7:30 p.m.

The public is invited to attend.

Congressman Denies Payoffs, To Fight Indictment

By JAMES RUBIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Daniel J. Flood, D-Pa., under indictment on charges he lied in denying he had received payoffs, says the charges against him are false and are the work of "desperate men under pressure."

REP. DANIEL FLOOD

A federal grand jury in Los Angeles indicted Flood Tuesday on three counts of giving false testimony at the trial of a former aide and before a grand jury.

In a statement, Flood said: "I completely deny all of these assertions and implications as well. For 30 years I have served the people who elected me in the best manner I knew how, and time after time they have demonstrated their confidence by returning me to office for 14 additional terms.

"I have never done anything to destroy that confidence, and ever mindful of that fact, I am certain that these charges will be proven false, charges made by desperate men under pressure."

The Justice Department said no date had been set for Flood's arraignment.

Flood, 74, has been accused of lying when he testified on Oct.

11, 1977, at the trial of his former aide, Stephen B. Elko, that he did not know that William F. Peters, a former trade school operator, gave $5,000 to Elko.

Elko was convicted of taking $25,000 in bribes to influence

Flood in connection with federal funds for a now-defunct chain of trade schools in California. Serving a three-year prison term, Elko is cooperating with federal authorities.

Flood's indictment said the congressman knew of the $5,000 payoff from Peters within a few days after Elko took the money in the spring of 1972.

Flood also was accused of lying when he denied to a federal grand jury on June 2, 1977, that he received $1,000 in the Congressional Hotel in Washington from former lobbyist Deryl Fleming.

The indictment also charged that Flood testified falsely when he told the grand jury he did not receive $5,000 from Peters at the congressman's command post for disaster relief in the Wilkes-Barre, Pa., area.

If convicted, Flood faces up to five years in prison and a $10,000 fine on each count.

Crafts Show At Shopping Center

For the fourth year, a group of artists and craftsmen will hold a two-day show at Pitt Plaza Shopping Center. The event will take place on Friday and Saturday, Sept. 8 and 9.

Those taking part will demonstrate and have for sale articles in a variety of media — watercolor, ceramics, jewelry, macrame, batik, wood carving, photography, etc.

A new artist included in the group this year is Michael Williams of Raleigh, specialist in stained glass.

The public is invited to view the show.

Get Advice From 'Freshman'

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — It is his first year as well, but he is the president. So A. Bartlett Giamatti had some advice for the 1,375 members of Yale's freshman class.

Giamatti, chosen last December to succeed Kingman Brewster Jr. as head of the 277-year-old university, cautioned freshmen Monday against "growing isolationism," urging the students to keep the "public interest" in sight while preparing for careers.

The new Yale president will be formally inaugurated Oct. 14.

Farmville To Make Final Application For $273,300

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
FARMVILLE — Farmville Commissioners last night voted to make final application for Community Development funds in the amount of $273,300 for rehabilitation and demolition of inadequate housing in a small section of town.

The final public hearing was held with citizens voicing concern that the money, if received, for improvement or demolition of 48 houses in an area bounded by Moore, Walnut, Wallace and George streets be used "for the people who need it most, not for rich landlords."

The Commissioners assured that this would be the case, that the priorities set by them for this project call for owner-occupied houses to be repaired first and then for money to be allotted on a priority basis according to the resources of the owners. Rents would be kept the

Seek Exemption From Licensing

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The pastor of a church at Southern Pines has asked the state Office of Day Care Licensing to exempt church-operated day care centers from licensing requirements.

The Rev. Kent Kelly, pastor of Calvary Memorial Church and administrator of Calvary Christian School, wrote the state agency saying the church will no longer accept a privilege license from it.

Wrappers Hide Cans' Contents

ORMOND BEACH, Fla. (AP) — What you see is not always what's in the can — with Ron Sarzier's novelty wrappers.

Sarzier makes plastic coverings that cool cans and disguise their contents: beer becomes soda pop; soda pop beer.

Three encounters with a law prohibiting consumption of alcohol on public streets and beaches prompted the labels, Sarzier says.

"One time I'd just walked out of the motel door with a beer and, wham, I got nailed," he said. He estimates sales at 440,000 so far.

Sarzier says soft drink makers have had mixed reactions: one cola distributor bought 10,000 wraps as giveaways, while another fired off a not-so-nice letter.

"I suggest that your interests can be satisfied in our conscience before God protected by a simple courtesy on your part," Kelly said in a letter to the office.

"An administrative decision to exempt from licensure church day-care centers which meet your fire, health and safety standards will settle the matter," it said.

John S. Sokol, director of the Office of Day Care Licensing, was not available for comment Tuesday, but officials have said in the past they would insist on licensing of church-run centers.

Kelly also is a leader of a move to exempt church-operated schools from regulations of the state Board of Education. A Superior Court judge in Raleigh upheld the state in that case Tuesday.

Ten church-run day care center announced Friday that they would refuse to apply for license renewals but the one operated by Kelly's church was not among them.

"We intend to continue, as in the past, to file with your office all requested forms..." Kelly wrote. "It is also our intention to permit inspection of our facilities at your convenience to insure that such information is valid." As a matter of religious conscience, we ask only that regulations be amended to give day-care ministries of churches exemption from state licensure if they meet fire, health, and safety criteria."

same for five years and profits realized by sale of any house attributable to the improvements would go back to the town. Thus, Administrator Patrick Thomas said, the benefits would be realized by the tenants, not the landlords.

The Board accepted an offer from the Farmville Chamber of Commerce to furnish a committee of five persons, to, free of charge, study the possible uses of town-owned buildings in the downtown area. The committee would be composed of one member appointed by Mayor Sara Albritton, two by the Chamber, one by the Farmville Economic Council and one by the first-chosen four members. The Board asked for a report of the committee no later than its regular January meeting.

A request presented by Dick Craft on behalf of the Farmville Church of God to have its water bill adjusted due to the waste of more than $50 worth of water because of a leak was approved. The adjustment would be, the Commissioners said, to the average of the church's water bill over the past three years.

Administrator Thomas reported that the town has received verbal notification of federal approval of a grant to construct an additional ball field and two tennis courts at the municipal athletic field site. Contracts should be received within a few weeks, he said, adding that the town's matching share is already in capital reserve.

The Board entered into an agreement with the Pitt County Schools, based on a recommendation from Commissioner LeRoy Redden, to provide the equipment and labor to construct a ball field at H. B. Sugg School which would be for school use, first; then for town use; and also for casual use by residents of the area. Town equipment and labor only after some street projects have been completed, it noted.

Thomas reported that the State Department of Human Resources has made inquiry about the status of the town's plans for a far-reaching water system extension. The grant from the state for $243,007 for three wells, an elevated tank and about 16 miles of pipe is extended until Jan. 21, 1979. Thomas said, and the town has so far set aside only $100,175 of the needed local share of $808,259.

Ordinances directing repair or demolition were enacted for two houses, the owners of which Building Inspector H. P. Norman has been dealing with since 1972. The houses are one at 108 W. Hines Street and one at 207 W. Pine Street.

David Starling was on hand concerning a petition for water extension up U. S. 258 to Toddy. It was pointed out that this extension can be cost-justified only if someone can obtain commitments from about 40 potential customers. Starling said he would talk to a trailer park owner in the area and a few other residents and be back. Cost of the extension would be about $37,000 the Board indicated.

Bids were accepted from General Electric Supply Company for $12,316 for electric transformers and from Rigby Electric for electric cable. Both were low bidders.

It was reported that the state's official estimate of Farmville's population now is 5,090, a decline from the last official estimate of 5,150.

The board agreed to accept coverage from Unimark-McDonald Company for public officials liability coverage in the amount of $1 million. The premium cost is $2,600.

The board agreed to change its policy concerning a waiting period for group insurance coverage to 30 days for both salaried and hourly-waged employees.

Next Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. was set as the time for a meeting of board members with eight to 12 different landscape architecture firms. The commissioners will hear 10-minute presentations from each concerning landscaping in the downtown area.

There was discussion of going ahead with plans for a town hall. Thomas pointed out that building costs in the Kinston area are documented at a 14 and a half percent increase over the past 10 years, so any waiting is a money-losing matter.

Harold Flanagan was appointed to the Board of Adjustments to replace Russ Cotton, who has resigned.

New View Of Contempt Charge

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — The New Jersey attorney general's office, which prosecuted the New York Times for criminal contempt, now is supporting the newspaper's claim it was denied a hearing on journalistic privileges. "The trial judge did not invoke a procedure which was open to him," Attorney General John Degnan said Tuesday in arguments before the state Supreme Court on Tuesday.

The court reserved a decision on appeals by the newspaper and reporter Myron Farber, convicted of criminal and civil contempt for defying a court order to surrender their files on Dr. Mario J. J. Casalevich.

The court also left pending a decision on Degnan's motion that the issue be sent back to the trial level for a ruling on the constitutional and statutory issues.

Farber is free pending further action by the court. A fine of $5,000 a day against the Times has been stayed.

Degnan told the court Tuesday he would ask the contempt convictions be sustained if the Supreme Court decides not to remand the case to the trial level.

The Times and Farber have argued they were denied a hearing on the legal issues because Judge William J. Arnold, presiding at the Jascavich murder trial, said he must see the documents before ruling.

The somewhat conflicting position taken by the attorney general sparked Jascavich's attorney, Raymond A. Brown, to accuse Degnan of entering the appeal because he was "politically motivated."

Degnan, who denied the charge, told the court, however, that he was "not entirely comfortable" with his position in the case.

He took a strong stand in support of the Times in the newspaper's argument that the subpoena for materials was overly broad. He told the court the subpoena was in effect saying Jascavich has "a Sixth Amendment right to rummage through a reporter's files. This is not so in New Jersey."

Joins Office In Greenville

David Andrew Leech has begun his law practice in Greenville in association with attorney Sam Underwood.

Leech, a native of Plymouth, graduated from Plymouth High School and earned his undergraduate degree in 1973 from Duke University.

DAVID LEECH

The new attorney received his law degree this year from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill School of Law.

Leech holds membership in the American Bar Association.

He is married to the former Betsy Jean Hoggard of Williamston.

Try To Return $700 To IRS

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — George and Betty Gould don't plan to touch the $700 they got from the Internal Revenue Service. In fact, they've been trying to give it back.

"I really don't have any money coming to me," says Gould.

The $700 is apparently part of an IRS effort to find taxpayers who never got 1976 tax refunds that they deserved. Gould saw his name on a list of such taxpayers published by a local newspaper.

He suspects the problem dates back to 1976, when the Goulds put a $700 tax refund in an IRS credit account toward their 1977 taxes.

That's apparently the money the IRS sent the Goulds in a $700 check.

"I plan to put it in the bank and patiently wait," says Gould.

Murder Charged To Four Youths

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Buncombe County grand jury Tuesday indicted four teen-age residents of the state Juvenile Evaluation Center at Swannanoa on first-degree murder charges.

The youths were arrested following the beating death of Larry Buchanan, 37, a cottage supervisor at the center, early the morning of Aug. 21. A District Court judge last week ordered that they be tried as adults.

The defendants are David Byron Wooten, 17, of Dallas, N.C.; Michael Shawn Tilley, 16, of King; Lindsey Scott Campbell, 14; and Steven Scott Cooper, 15. They are being held without bond in the Buncombe County Jail. No trial date has been set.

Delays Trial Of Accused Spies

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A federal judge, bowing to diplomatic considerations, has postponed jury selection in the trial of two Soviets accused of obtaining U.S. defense secrets.

U.S. District Judge Frederick Lacey ordered jury selection delayed until Sept. 27 so the trial would not coincide with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko's visit to the United States later this month. "I want to do whatever I can to advance the discussions...that are going to take place with one of the leaders of the U.S.S.R.," Lacey said Tuesday.

New Probation-Parole Officer Named In Pitt

FARMVILLE — Albert Anthony (Tony) Smith has been appointed Probation-Parole Officer for the Farmville area. Smith's assignment was effective Sept. 1, 1978.

A native of North Carolina, Smith was born at Fort Bragg and graduated from East Carolina University with a business degree.

He is married to the former Lee Ann Norris of Greenville, and they have one daughter, Tammy Lynn. Smith is a member of Holy Trinity United Methodist Church, Greenville Lodge 284, and the Masons.

In his new position, he succeeds Patrick Higgins, who has been assigned to PRAC (Pre-release and After Care) program.

ANTHONY SMITH

Since August 1974 he has been associated in the parole field of law enforcement, and was first assigned to Jacksonville. In the spring of 1976 he transferred to Washington, where he worked with Beaufort County officials until his transfer to Pitt County.

As Probation-Parole Officer in Farmville, his basic duties will be supervising parolees and probationists and taking clients from the local courts, all in the adult category of persons.

In addition, Smith will assist in making investigations in conjunction with the N. C. Parole Commission and local courts.

Indict The Ex-Chairman

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Frank M. Clark, who as a congressman chaired the House subcommittee that virtually set the salaries of maritime union members, has been charged with mail fraud, perjury and income tax evasion.

As chairman of the House Merchant Marine subcommittee, Clark helped determine the level of federal subsidy to U.S. shipping concerns. That money helps keep seamen's salaries high and prevents the U.S. shipping industry from turning to cheaper foreign labor.

U.S. Attorney Blair Griffith announced the 13-count federal grand jury indictment Tuesday and said it followed a three-year investigation by the FBI and the Internal Revenue Service.

Clark, 62, represented the 25th Congressional District for two decades. He made an unsuccessful bid to regain his seat last spring.

He is accused of arranging congressional paychecks for two people who maintained his home in the Lawrence County community of Bessemer.

He also is accused of arranging federal payments for 11 other people who staffed his campaign headquarters.

The grand jury accused Clark of conducting the illegal scheme from January 1971 through January 1975.

Heavy Sales At Farmville

FARMVILLE — Volume of sales on the Farmville tobacco market Tuesday was unusually heavy, with leaf grades accounting for the most volume this season, according to Louis N. Williams, sales supervisor, Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade.

Non-descript grades accounted for the smallest volume yesterday, with mostly leaf grades and lugs stronger than Thursday. Williams noted. Stabilization receipts totaled 1.49 percent of gross sales, compared with 6.49 percent a year ago.

The Farmville tobacco market sold 671,837 pounds for $968,761, an average of $144.20 per hundredweight. The average was $124.66 last year. To date, season totals for the Farmville market are 12,670,888 pounds for $16,757,331, an average of $132.25, compared with $110.65 per hundred pounds last year.

Sign Contract With Red China

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Kaiser Engineers Inc. says it has become the first U.S. firm ever to be awarded a contract to develop mines in Red China.

The contract announced Tuesday is for the development of two iron mines as part of China's plan to double steel production to 60 million metric tons by 1985, said Kaiser president James McCloud. The amount of the contract with the China National Technical Import Corp. was not disclosed at the Chinese firm's request. The work is expected to take about a year.

Poetry Forum To Meet Thursday

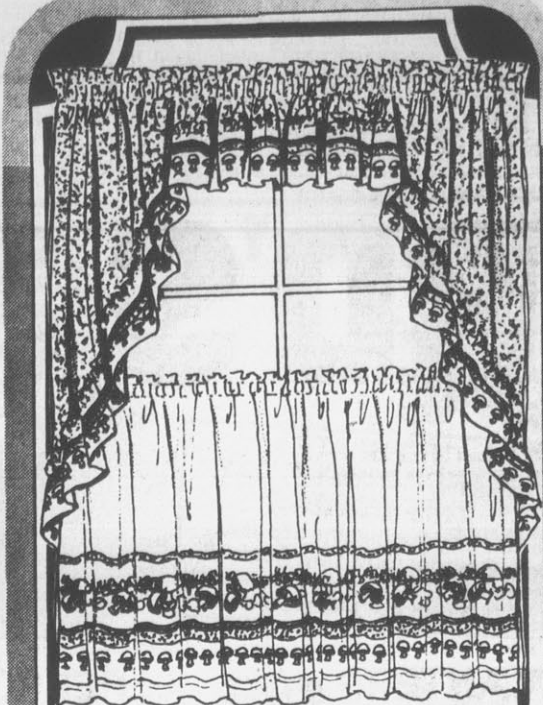

The first meeting in the 1978-79 season of the ECU Poetry Forum will be held Thursday, Sept. 7 at 8 p.m. in Room 242, Mendenhall Student Center.

Peter Makuck, new director of the forum, invites all regular members, former members and anyone interested in poetry to attend.

At these twice monthly meetings — held on the first and third Thursdays of each month — poetry by those attending is read and discussed.

There are no membership fees or requirements, and refreshments are served.

A Pioneer Woman Parachutist

By DR. H. G. JONES
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Perhaps it was just one of the signs of the times: The world seemed too busy celebrating the first successful manned balloon flight across the Atlantic to pay much attention to the death of aviation's pioneer woman parachutist.

Ben Abruzzo, Maxie Anderson and Larry Newman are the heroes of the moment, whereas Tiny Broadwicke's exploits took place over half a century ago. Still, her death in California on Aug. 25 deserves notice, particularly by her fellow North Carolinians.

She was really Mrs. Georgia Thompson Brown, but the public knew her as Tiny Broadwicke — the first word descriptive of her size and the second representing the name of the man who made her famous.

Born Georgia Ann Thompson on a farm near Henderson in 1893, she was already a widow and mother when in 1908 at the age of 15 she visited the State Fair where she watched intently as a carnival balloonist prepared his contraption for ascent.

She later said, "When I saw that balloon go up and I gawked at it as it ascended into the heavens, I knew I'd never be the same." She pestered the balloonist to give her a ride.

Impressed by her gall and her size — 4 foot 8 inches and less than 100 pounds — Charles Broadwicke, the balloonist, allowed himself to be talked into making her part of his act.

In fact, she took his name, and as Tiny Broadwicke the Doll Girl, she made aviation history as a parachutist.

For several years, the act traveled with the Johnny J. Jones Carnival. Tiny said: "I toured the country with the carnival, making as many as three cutaways in one jump. A cutaway is when you release one chute and open another. 'I dropped in one chute from the balloon, then slipped out of that one into another and out of that one into still another before hitting the ground.'"

Charles Broadwicke developed for Tiny a special type of backpack parachute, and in 1912 a young man named Glenn L. Martin watched her act with great interest.

Martin, whose name was to become familiar with aviation, believed that airplane pilots should be prepared to use parachutes, and he sought to prove his point. On June 21, 1913, he carried aloft Tiny Broadwicke who parachuted into Griffith Park in Los Angeles — the first woman ever to jump from an airplane.

Later the same year Martin flew her in a seaplane, and Tiny parachuted into Lake Michigan.

In 1914, Tiny conducted a series of jumps in the "Coat-pack" developed by Charles Broadwicke. The demonstrations finally convinced the Army of the practicability of providing parachutes for its pilots.

For the next two years Tiny was an exhibition parachute jumper at the San Diego World's Fair. She continued jumping until 1922 when she estimated her total number of jumps at more than a thousand.

Her last jump was memorable: The Curtis Jenny biplane used in the jump was piloted by another famed aviator, Clyde Pangborne, and the mayor of Los Angeles was on hand to observe.

Commenting on her many experiences, Tiny said: "Oh, I got banged up all right. Broken bones. Sprained ankles. Wrenched back. Dislocated shoulder. But I was young and loved every minute."

She continued, "Sometimes I wound up tangled in tree limbs. Sometimes I splashed into rivers, lakes and mud ponds. Once I landed in high voltage wires."

And another time she fell onto the caboose of a freight train pulling out of a station.

Tiny Broadwicke became a legend among aviators. She was the last surviving female member of the Early Birds, an organization of persons who soloed prior to Dec. 19, 1916.

When someone questioned her qualifications for membership, she quipped, "Well, I went up in the balloon and nobody brought me down."

Tiny Broadwicke remained a darling of aviators throughout her life, and she frequently was the person of honor at air shows and demonstrations. One of her historic parachutes is preserved in the North Carolina Division of Archives and History, another in the Smithsonian Institution.

Last week, they brought Tiny back to North Carolina for burial in her native Henderson County from where, 70 years ago, she left her 12 hour per day cotton mill job for the excitement of the sky. Her name will live in the annals of aviation history.

Craft Classes Are Scheduled

Greenville Recreation and Parks Dept. craft classes for juniors will begin Wednesday, Sept. 13 and will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. every Wednesday for a period of seven weeks.

Youths between the ages of 10 and 14 can attend, and a fee of $7 will be charged to cover materials and refreshments.

Also, there will be two craft classes for seven to nine-year olds on Mondays or Wednesdays from 3:30 to 5 p.m., to begin Monday, Sept. 11 or Wednesday, Sept. 13. The fee is $5.

Pre-registration will be from 3:30 to 5 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 6 at 2000 Cedar Lane. For further information, call 752-4137, ext. 250.

Plan Sessions Of Playschool

Two new sessions of playschool for children three to five-years old begin this month.

One begins Thursday, Sept. 14, the other on Friday, Sept. 15. Sessions will meet from 9:30 to 11:45 a.m. for ten weeks.

A fee of $5 will be charged to cover the cost of refreshments during the ten-week period.

Classes will be limited to the first 25 children registered. Registration will be held Thursday and Friday morning, Sept. 7 and 8 at 9:30 at the Recreation and Parks Library Complex, 2000 Cedar Lane. For more information, call 752-4137, ext. 250.

SHE'S A KILLER-DILLER
CALCUTTA, India (AP) — Game wardens are considering prosecuting a 20-year old woman who killed a tiger with her ax when it approached her while she was collecting firewood in a forest.

The killing of tigers is banned throughout India.

Scotch-Irish Symposium

ASHEVILLE — A two-day Scotch-Irish in America Symposium is being held on Friday and Saturday, Sept. 8 and 9, in Asheville.

Presented jointly by the University of North Carolina at Asheville and the New University of Ulster at Coleraine, Northern Ireland, the first day of meetings will take place at the Inn-on-the-Place in downtown Asheville.

Meetings on the second day, Saturday, will be on the UNC-Asheville campus.

Speakers include Dr. William E. Highsmith, Chancellor of UNC-Asheville; Professor J. L. McCracken, New Ulster University; Trevor Parkhill, Northern Ireland Public Records Office, Belfast; Professor Gordon Teffettler, Valdosta State College, Valdosta, Ga.; Professor Brian Lacy, Magee University College, Londonderry; Professor Charles Carlton, NCSU, Raleigh; and others.

The general theme of the symposium will be the continuing connection between the two cultures in Ireland and in America.

The symposium is open to the public. Registration is $15, with an additional charge for meals. Participants will receive a copy of "The Irish-American Review," which will publish the papers given at the symposium.

How Representatives And Senators Voted

HOW THEY VOTED

By Roll Call Report

WASHINGTON—Here's how area senators were recorded on major roll call votes in the days immediately preceding the Senate recess that began Aug. 27. The House was in recess during the reporting period.

THREE R's—Rejected, 30 for and 62 against, an amendment to kill a proposed program to upgrade the teaching of reading, writing and math in the nation's elementary and secondary schools. The new program would spend $754 million over five years, chiefly in grants to state and local education agencies for initiatives to improve curricula and teaching with respect to the basic skills. The amendment was proposed to HR 15, a bill extending the Elementary and Secondary Education Act for five years at a total cost of $51.5 billion. The bill goes to conference with the House.

Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., sponsor of the amendment to delete the basic skills program, said "it would inevitably increase federal control over all aspects of our local public school system."

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., an opponent of the amendment, said: "If we cannot do something to make sure that youngsters can read, write and compute, we shall not be too effective in building a structure above that."

Senators voting "nay" favored the new basic skills program.

Morgan and Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., voted "yea."

DOUBLE-DIPPING—Failed, 32 for and 58 against, to table stricter limitations on "double-dipping"—the practice of military retirees taking civilian jobs in the federal government and thus getting dual U.S. paychecks. Failure of the tabling motion left intact a $47,500 ceiling proposed on the combined income of most military retirees who take civilian jobs with Uncle Sam. The ceiling is part of S 2640, the Civil Service reform bill later passed (87-1) and sent to the House.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., a supporter of tabling and thus killing the proposed ceiling, said: "I am getting a little sick and tired of hearing the man in uniform kicked around because he has the expertise, he has the know-how, that certain agencies of the government have to have...."

Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., an opponent of tabling, said: "I think the reason there is great concern about (double-dipping) is that if we permit this military pension business to linger and linger, as it has for decades, then one of these days it will bankrupt even the incredibly wealthy Pentagon."

Senators voting "nay" favored the stricter limitations on double-dipping.

Morgan and Helms voted "nay."

NEW SENATE BUILDING—Voted, 61 for and 11 against, to approve and send to the White House the conference report on a $6.8 billion supplemental appropriations bill (HR 13467). The bill originally contained $54 million to advance construction of the third Senate office building—an edifice labeled a "palace" by its critics but defended as necessary office space by its supporters. With this vote, the Senate reluctantly went along with a House decision to delay any more funding for the controversial structure until after the 1978 congressional elections.

Sen. Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., a supporter of both the bill and the new building, said: "If the House keeps delaying (construction), it might cause the present cost of $101 per square foot...to exceed the $186 per square foot cost of the Rayburn House Office Building."

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind.,

an opponent of the bill and the building, said House members voted to kill the $54 million outlay because of constituent pressure, and that "there are a number of our constituents who simply do not want...a substantial new edifice constructed."

Most senator voting "nay" had voted in early August against the $54 million outlay for the third Senate office building.

Morgan voted "yea" and Helms voted "nay."

CETA—Passed, 66 for and 10 against, a bill (S 2570) extending the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) for four years, at a first-year cost of $10.8 billion and potential total cost of more than $40 billion. A companion bill is pending in the House. The current CETA program expires Sept. 30.

CETA is the main government program for putting the unemployed—chiefly the poor—to work. A major thrust of S 2570 is to train the hardcore unemployed while curbing corruption and abuses in local CETA programs nationwide.

Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., a supporter, said that while CETA is "not perfect" it "strives not to foster a dependence on government, but to train men and women to be independent and productive members of society."

Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., an opponent, said it would be "difficult to contrive a more efficient and politically corrosive means of creating employment than by the public service employment programs of CETA."

Senators voting "yea" favored extending CETA.

Morgan voted "yea" and Helms voted "nay."

Bond Script By Connery

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Sean Connery hasn't yet said whether he will take another turn as James Bond, but the former screen 007 shares writing credit on a new script, "James Bond of the Secret Service," to be produced by Kevin McClory for Paramount Pictures.

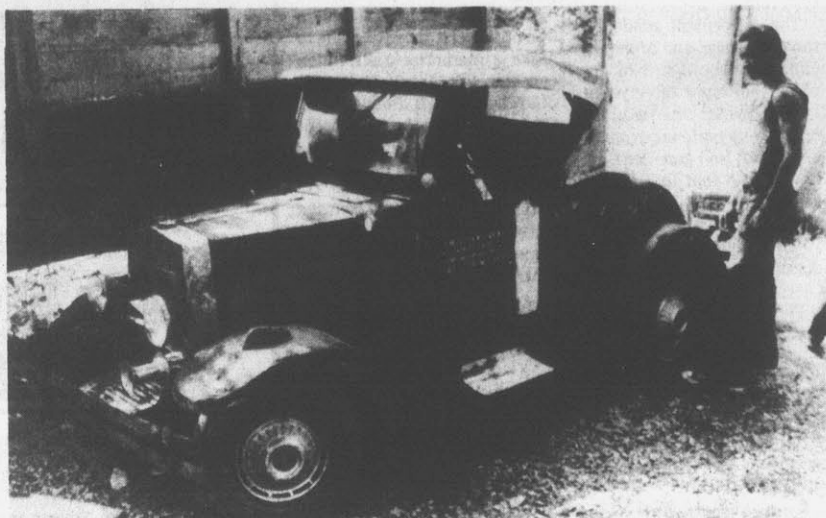

McClory, who produced the 1965 Bond feature "Thunderball" starring Connery, said shooting would start next spring from a script written by himself, Connery and novelist Len Deighton.

Connery originated the James Bond screen character with "Dr. No" in 1962, but after "Diamonds Are Forever" in 1971 yielded the role to Roger Moore. Moore has since completed three features about the invincible British secret agent and has started his fourth.

McClory's right to film a Bond feature had been contested by Albert Broccoli and Harry Saltzman, producers of most of the 11 pictures inspired by novels of the late Ian Fleming. McClory successfully argued his "Thunderball" contract entitled him to remake that picture after 10 years.

Broccoli, who retains rights to other future Bond films, began filming a new one with Moore, "Moonraker," in Paris Aug. 14.

Connery said in an interview last year he might consider starring in another Bond picture if he were satisfied with the script. The actor contributed to the scripts of his own Bond features, but "James Bond of the Secret Service" will mark his debut as a credited screenwriter of a Bond film.

A PIECE OF JUNK — McNeal Watt, right, looks at his home-built automobile at his home in Joliet, Ill. He spent four years building the car from pieces of junk he collected. He says it cost $50 to build, and has had several offers to buy the car, but he's turned them all down. (AP Laserphoto)

Fall Or Spring Is For Painting

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI)—Fall or spring are better times than summer for housepainting, says housing specialist Ardis Hutchins.

"Many painting failures can be attributed to a surface that was either damp or exposed to strong sunlight during painting," says the University of Nebraska Extension specialist.

For best results, she recommends a clear dry day when the temperature range is 50-90 degrees Fahrenheit, the air is still and insects aren't too thick.

A wood exterior covered with top-quality paint should not need re-doing more often than every six years, she says, adding that painting more frequently sometimes does more harm than good. Blistering can occur if the old paint underneath reliques.

A New Use For Waste Fly Ash

PARSIPPANY, N.J. (UPI)—Fly ash, a waste product from coal-burning electric generating plants, is used as a partial replacement for cement.

Subsidiaries of General Public Utilities Corporation have contracted to sell as much as 200,000 tons of fly ash annually to the construction industry, said Fred Glickman, GPU vice president for materials management.

"Fly ash has qualities similar to cement, and in many cases increases the strength of cement products," he explained. "The fly ash content of cement may be as high as 20 percent."

He added that the sale of fly ash not only provides income from a product formerly regarded as a total waste but also eliminates the cost and environmental problems of disposing of it in landfills.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rose sharply today, continuing the rally begun in the latter part of Tuesday's session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up 6.49 to 893.10 shortly after the opening bell.

Advances took a 3-1 lead over declines on the New York Stock Exchange.

As in the previous session, analysts said today's market's surge was not contingent on any particular piece of news.

Brokers described the market as "anticipatory," awaiting release of wholesale price figures later this week and the outcome of the Midwest summit talks at Camp David. They also said upcoming Congressional action on taxes and the natural gas bill were causing hesitancy.

Early prices included Sperry Rnd. up 1/4 at 47 1/2; Dupont, up 1/4 at 129 1/4; Fairchild Camera, up 1/4 to 40 1/4; United Technologies, up 1/4 to 49 1/4; and IBM, which edged off 1/2 to 300 1/2.

On Tuesday, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial rose 7.28 to 886.61.

Advances outnumbered declines by a 4-3 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume came to 32.17 million shares against 35.07 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .37 to 58.91.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .36 at 171.06.

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — North Carolina broilers: market steady. Supplies moderate. Demand good. N.C. dock weighted average price is 46.25 Cents per pound this week for small purchases of plant grade broilers picked up at processing plants. Estimated slaughter Tuesday totaled 1,461,000 head and average live weight 4.01 Pounds per bird on Sept. 1.

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — North Carolina Hens: market steady to lower for heavy type hens. Supplies fully adequate. Demand very light in North Carolina, fairly good out of state. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm 17-18 cents; fob plant -100 few.

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — N. C. Eggs: market unchanged. Supplies adequate. N.C. Weighted average price for small sales of consumer grade A eggs in cartons delivered to retail stores: 67.88 cents per dozen for large white; medium 57.47; small 39.13.

Greenville Mart Prices Climb

Prices on the Greenville Tobacco Market continued to climb Tuesday as a new high of $140.48 per hundred pounds was recorded.

J. N. Bryan, sales supervisor of the local Tobacco Board of Trade, said that the market sold 1,091,826 pounds yesterday for $1,533,769, in recording the record figure.

More leaf and cutters were available for sale Tuesday, he said, while the volume of primings, lugs and non descript tobacco decreased.

Top practical price remained at $1.55 per pound, he added.

For the season, the market has sold 20,582,848 pounds for $26,406,675, an average of $128.29 per hundred pounds.

Falkland community, was partially destroyed Monday night. He presented the remains of the petition to the board.

According to Frinks, several persons in the Falkland community are dissatisfied with Mrs. Gray's transfer and "the high-handed way it was handled by the county board."

Frinks said that there was "antagonism on both sides" on the Gray matter, citing Mrs. Gray as "one of Falkland's strongest teachers."

Frinks mentioned that a meeting will be held Sunday for county residents to voice their opinions. He also mentioned that he had heard that the county educational system may be a testing ground for no competency tests.

Chairman Owens responded to Frinks' statements, saying that he had lived most of his life in the Falkland community and stated that the board wished only to do good for all children.

Superintendent Alford later stated that Mrs. Gray met with members of the board prior to the board meeting yesterday.

"Mrs. Gray has accepted her position at G. R. Whitfield and does not wish to be reassigned to Falkland," Alford said.

The board discussed the possibility of those children who are still working in the fields after the opening of school being issued excuses up until Sept. 22. The board voted to approve the excuse, noting that it would be applied to farm work only.

Mrs. McRae reminded the board that in past years, the excuse absence had been abused. Chairman Owens asked that Mrs. MacRae or other teachers should bring those offenders to the attention of the board.

A letter of request from the Bill Clark Construction Company was presented to the board concerning a possible purchase of land located on both sides of State Road 1204 near the southeast and southwest intersection of N.C. 43.

The letter stated that the land is in the Falkland School District, and if so, the company would not be interested because it would feel that sales would be restricted.

The letter pointed out that the decision against buying would not be a reflection on the Falkland school staff or anyone associated with it, but rather an "economic decision generated by market conditions that we as developers cannot ignore."

Superintendent Alford noted that development must take place in the Falkland school district. He assigned a committee consisting of board members Bill McLawhorn, William Earl House, and Thomas Patterson to look further in the matter and report to the board at a later date.

Associate superintendent Thomas L. Craft Jr. reported to the board concerning a lease document for proposed community school programs for Ayden-Grifton High School, Chicod, Wellcome Middle, and D. H. Conley. The lease documents are held by the county board of education and the county commissioners.

Alice Keene, Community Schools Program director, explained to the board that the schools may utilize the proposed facilities during the day, but time must be set aside for the community to utilize the facilities after school hours.

Board member Douglas R. Jones pointed out that the school would need the facilities after school hours for school activities. Several of the board members discussed the power of the schools over the facilities.

The board approved the lease document, noting that the schools will be able to control the situation.

Mrs. Donna Ware, Director of Food Services for the Pitt County School System, submitted a report on the lunchroom status in Pitt County, noting that total expenditures were down from the previous year.

Supplemental sales receipts totaled $85,000, Ware said. She explained that the sale of these supplemental food items help keep the cost down for the actual lunches. A total of 32.96 percent of Pitt County students participated in the school breakfast program, with 88.90 percent participating in the lunch program.

Mrs. Ware told the board that a pilot program at W. H. Robinson School that allowed school children to select their own food in a cafeteria atmosphere was successful, with a significant reduction in plate waste. Mrs. Ware stated that schools with seventh, eighth, and ninth grades will participate in the choice program, with high schools already involved.

The board approved a ten cent increase in the cost of adult lunches from 75 to 85 cents. This was in compliance with the state board of education's recommendation that adult lunches should be charged as to cost of preparation.

Adult lunches cost 86.05 cents to prepare, so the board voted to let in-kind services pay the extra penny and a half.

The board voted to give additional help to the four county high schools in regards to maintenance help with the building of field houses. Also, it was voted to spend surplus current expense funds for purchase of an offset press and plate maker for the central office. Associate superintendent Craft noted that the item had been deleted from the budget by the county commissioners.

Louis W. Gaylord Jr., a local attorney, reported to the board that repair work on the interior walls of D. H. Conley has been done by the contractor and architect of the school in reparation of damages when the school was turned over to the county in 1975.

The agreement made by the contractor and architect called for the board to approve the repair three years later. Gaylord reported that he and associate superintendent Craft had gone to D. H. Conley and that the repairs seemed to be acceptable. Craft agreed, and the board voted to enter a motion of dismissal concerning the case.

The board also approved the following members to respective school advisory committees: Doug Oakley, Jimmy Little, Belvoir, Jerry Wooten and Carolyn Evans, Falkland; Ann Arnold, Brenda Lewis and Ray Wilkins, Bethel.

Early dismissal was granted for Ayden-Grifton area, Sept. 25, and Farmville Central area, Sept. 26, at 2 p.m. for a teacher workshop featuring Madeline McElveen of the State Board of Education. The workshop concerns the use of volunteers in the schools.

Housing . . .

Redevelopment Commission has scheduled an addition of some 2,000 square feet to the Newtown community center on Broad Street for use as new office quarters. Both staffs will move to the Newtown site upon sale of the present facilities.

Three vacancies existed in the housing units operated by the Authority during August, according to Sallye Streeter, director of tenant affairs, who said that two families purchased homes on the private market.

Average rents for the various projects included: N.C. 22-1 (Meadowbrook), $62.65; N.C. 22-2 (Kearney Park), $70.87; N.C. 22-3 (Moyewood), $72.88; N.C. 22-4 (Moyewood), $69.20; and N.C. 22-6 (Newtown), $78.71, for an overall average of $71.60.

Obituaries

Clemmons

Mrs. Maggie Clemmons died Tuesday in Pitt County Memorial Hospital. She was mother of Mrs. Lottie Mae Pittman of Williamston. Funeral arrangements are incomplete at Phillips Brothers Mortuary.

Gaskins

Miss Helen Keene Gaskins, 65, died Tuesday in High Point Memorial Hospital.

Funeral services will be conducted Thursday at 11:30 a.m. at St. Paul's Episcopal Church here by the Rev. John Price. Burial will be in Greenwood Cemetery.

Miss Gaskins, a Greenville native, had lived in High Point for some time and was employed as bookkeeper for the Froelich Company. She was a member of St. Mary's Episcopal Church, High Point.

Surviving her are three brothers, Hogan, Claude and Charles Gaskins, all of Greenville; five sisters, Mrs. E. C. Wilkerson and Mrs. Dale Gidley, both of Greenville, Mrs. J. Poe Jenrette of Asheville, and Mrs. J. H. Froelich and Mrs. Ben Ridge, both of High Point.

The family suggests that in lieu of flowers, those desiring to make a memorial contribution consider St. Mary's Episcopal Church of High Point or St. Paul's Episcopal Church of Greenville.

The family will be at the home of Charles P. Gaskins, 229 Orton Drive, and will receive friends at the Wilkerson Funeral Home from 7:30 to 9 p.m.

Keyes

AYDEN — Mrs. Julia Bob Ellis Keyes, 802 Englewood Place, Ayden, died Tuesday at Pitt Memorial Hospital. She was the wife of Mr. Johnnie Ray Keyes and the daughter of Mrs. Beulah Mae Wilson Ellis. Funeral arrangements are incomplete at Norcott & Company Funeral Home, Ayden.

Mr. Jimmy Ross Jr., 25, died this morning in N. C. Memorial Hospital, Chapel Hill.

Funeral services will be conducted Friday at 2 p.m. in the Wilkerson Funeral Home Chapel by the Rev. Ted Reynolds. Burial will be in Greenwood Cemetery.

Mr. Ross, a Pitt County native, had been a resident of Greenville for most of his adult life.

Surviving him are a daughter, Victoria Ross of Greenville; his mother, Mrs. Leona Elks Ross of Greenville; a brother, Bobby Ross of Greenville; and two sisters, Mrs. J. D. Nobles and Mrs. Joseph E. Leggett, both of Greenville.

The family will receive

KIDNEY DAMAGE

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — One in five patients requiring major kidney treatment in Australia has brought on the condition by heavy, steady use of pain-killer compounds containing aspirin combined with a variety of other substances, a visiting Australian specialist says.

Leif Ragains Masculinity

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scandinavian explorer Leif Erikson, dubbed "that courageous Norseman" in a presidential proclamation last year, has regained his masculinity.

A Washington newspaper poked fun at the neuter gender used by speechwriter Griffin Smith in a Leif Erikson Day proclamation signed by President Carter last year. And Carter sent his speechwriters a note, "Leif Erikson: a Norseman? — J.C."

"We concluded that anti-sexism had been carried far enough," Smith said. This year's proclamation describes Erikson as one of a group of "brave men battling fearful odds" and "a race of men who were truly masters of the sea."

Pirates Have Long Way To Go To Beat State

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

"Saturday was a memorable occasion." Coach Pat Dye of East Carolina University told the Greenville Sports Club's first meeting of the 1978-79 year yesterday. "The stage was set, but the show didn't come off."

Dye said that things were unorganized from the very first. "We even messed up the introductions. The 58-yard kickoff return was about the only thing we did right in the kicking game all night."

Calling the 14-6 victory over Western Carolina a "comedy of errors," Dye said he didn't think the Pirates had played as poorly before. "It was a frustrating night offensively."

He said that three things could have caused a night like Saturday. "One is poor conditioning, another is not being ready mentally, and the third is being overworked. I think what happened to us was a combination of the last two. We were tired from being on the field. Now I know we have speed, but we didn't show it Saturday. Very few of our players graded out on the offensive unit."

Defensively, however, Dye was quite pleased. "It looked like two different teams out there. We played a lot of people and we were fresh, since the offense had the ball so much." East Carolina ran 80 offensive plays as compared to 58 for Western Carolina.

"We've got to be pleased with the defense, since Western averaged over 400 yards a game last year. Their quarterback is a great passer, but our defense did a great job of mixing up and disguising the coverage. Eight turnovers is quite a night. The line and linebackers all did well, and the secondary had an outstanding night," Dye added that the defense had no penalties called against it.

"We were fortunate to play badly and win. We could have easily have lost. But I do feel that we learned something from it," he said.

While saying that he planned no drastic changes for this week's game with N.C. State, Dye did say he was worried about the game. "We have a long way to go before we have a chance to beat them."

Going over State's team, Dye said the kicking game would be a question mark. "They don't have anyone who has kicked in a game before, either on punting or for extra points or field goals. They have people who are supposed to be good, but they still haven't been tested as yet."

Defensively, Dye feels that State may be at its strongest. "They will be enormous up front," he said. "All of their line has played before and played well. Their secondary is young, however, and if they have a weakness, it may be there."

State's line, Dye noted, is anchored by All-America candidate Simon Guppton, a 255-pound junior. The defensive line averages 231 pounds as compared to 219 for East Carolina.

"Offensively, they have the best line of any State team we've seen. Their center, Jim Ritcher, is a true All-America player. They are all big (average 244, ECU 234). They are strong and physical and experienced. They have excellent people at split end."

They key man in the offensive backfield is running back Ted Brown, being touted as a Heisman Trophy candidate. Brown rushed for 1,251 yards on 218 carries last year.

"He's as good as anyone in the United States," Dye said. "Billy Ray Vickers complements him well, and Ricky Adams also is a good runner. They've also got several young backs who are excellent."

Dye said that the quarterback situation, however, is a question mark. "Scott Smith has taken only a few snaps from center in game action. He's untested and

Mixed Emotions Over First Games

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

The 1978 football season began in full for the four Pitt County schools in the Eastern Carolina Conference Friday night, and as usual for opening games, the coaches had mixed emotions.

Two of the teams came through with shutout victories. Farmville Central downed Williamston 18-0, while North Pitt handed Enfield a 22-0 drubbing. The other two didn't fare as well. Ayden-Grifton fell to Roanoke 18-14, while D. H. Conley, playing its second game of the season, was defeated by East Carteret 9-6.

This week, Farmville Central hosts Eastern Wayne, North Pitt travels to Southwest Edgecombe, Ayden-Grifton hosts a tough Tarboro squad and Conley entertains Washington.

North Pitt

The Panther victory was an historic one for the school: it was the first victory in an opening game and the first shutout win ever by a North Pitt football team.

"I thought we looked exceptionally well, for us, to be a first ballgame," coach Pat Smith said. "We made fewer mistakes than we ever have in an opening ballgame."

Smith said he felt the defense did a tremendous job. Tackle Tim Corey had an outstanding game both offensively and defensively, while linebacker Victor Evans also looked good.

"We're well-pleased to win the first ballgame for a change, but there was certainly a lot of room for improvement."

The Panthers this week face a Southwest Edgecombe team that has played two games and lost both of them by a total of 63 points.

"They're going to be smaller, but quicker than Enfield, and stronger on defense," Smith said. "Their offense has had problems, but this is their third game," giving them time to iron out some of those problems.

Smith looks for it to be a defensive ballgame.

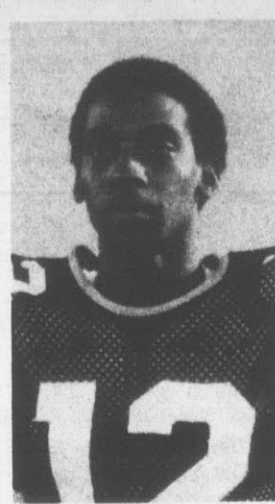

Farmville Central

"I thought we were real sluggish; we didn't move quickly at all," Jaguar coach Gene Brewer said of his team's victory.

"We made some mistakes offensively and defensively, but for a first game, we played probably average, maybe above average." We didn't make any big mistakes."

On offense, Brewer said quarterback Donald Freeman and running back James Tyson both had good ballgames. "Running back Donald Reid ran the ball well, while Billy McLawhorn caught the ball well. End Jeff Tyson had some good blocks and the entire offensive line looked good at times.

FC's Donald Freeman

Defensively, Brewer said he was pretty well pleased overall, although the team didn't hit as well as they are capable. Ronald Reid, Phillip Gordon, Ronnie Locust and Walter Blow drew individual praise.

The Southern Wayne game is "a mighty big one to be playing this early in the season," Brewer said. "They've got a good ballclub with about the same team we played last year. They've got some good football players."

Ayden-Grifton

Charger coach Dixon Sauls saw very little to be pleased with in his team's opening game loss. "Basically, we had a breakdown in execution on about every offensive and defensive down."

Sauls said the Chargers were at a disadvantage because Roanoke had already played a game, while Ayden-Grifton had not.

"With our turnovers and penalties, we just had too much to overcome. The only bright spot was that we did not give up after we went in 18-0 at the half. We had a chance to win the ballgame despite ourselves."

The game showed Sauls "we have to improve in all areas to have a good football team." The only individual performer to merit mention was running back Calvin Ellison. "He played well and also made a couple of hits on the specialty teams."

The Chargers are playing a much stronger opponent this week, Tarboro, which defeated last year's 4-A finalist Rocky Mount 28-18 last Friday night.

"They've got some outstanding personnel, a veteran team. They are big, strong and quick. They run a full-house T-backfield and have one of the outstanding running backs in the state in Kelvin Bryant."

"It will be a challenge for us to play them, but I feel like we are a much better team than we played last week and we're looking forward to the challenge."

D. H. Conley

The Vikings got a week's start on the other schools with a 9-6

A-G's Calvin Ellison

victory over East Carteret two weeks ago, but dropped a decision to West Carteret last Friday.

"We got a much-improved effort overall, but we just came up short," coach Chuck Dunn commented. "Offensively, we played much better. We were able to move the ball and we didn't make as many mistakes. But, defensively, we didn't do to well. We weren't able to stop them when we needed to."

Running back Curtis Joyner had an outstanding effort, Dunn said, rushing for 184 yards and a pair of touchdowns. Offensive tackle Sam Allen led the offensive line.

Defensively, the standouts were linebacker Noah Lee Edwards and safety James Chapman. "Of course, when your safety has to make 17 tackles, you know you have problems," Dunn said.

The Vikings face Washington this week, a team that is much-improved, according to Dunn. "We're just trying to work on the things we didn't do well last week" in preparation for the game.

Blue Is Gold For Dodgers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Vida Blue has been too good to be true for the San Francisco Giants, helping them to return to baseball prominence while adding to his own this season.

"I really want to be in a World Series one more time," says the Giants' left-handed pitching ace and home field cheerleader.

As San Francisco played its next-to-last series of the season against the Los Angeles Dodgers this week, Blue didn't get a chance to improve his 16-9 record. But he is expected to be on the mound in San Francisco next Monday or Tuesday night, when the 1-2 teams in the National League West meet again.

The Dodgers held a two-game edge over the Giants going into a makeup game today, after a Tuesday night rainout.

Once a sulking, brooding performer on Oakland teams that won three World Series in the early 1970s, the 29-year-old Blue transformed himself immediately after joining the Giants in a trade this spring.

"When I came over here, the guys were kind of quiet. I got into the dugout and started making noise," Blue recalls. "One day I stuck my head out and waved my arms, and the crowd reaction was great, so I sort of kept it up."

Inches Ahead

Willie Randolph of the New York Yankees heads for first as Detroit Tigers' first baseman Jason Thompson awaits the throw Tuesday night. Ran-

Stargell Sees Pirate Rally To Catch Philly

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Looking into the future of the National League East race, Willie Stargell sees something of the past. "It reminds me," says the Pittsburgh Pirate slugger, "of the 1971 World Series."

It was then that the Pirates were beaten in the first two games by the Baltimore Orioles, but came back to win the Series.

Just as the Pirates rallied to take Baltimore seven years ago, Stargell figures they're going to catch the Philadelphia Phillies this season. They took another big step in that direction by beating the New York Mets 8-0 Tuesday night and climbing within a half-game of the NL East leaders.

Once 11½ games back, the Pirates have been the hottest team in baseball of late — winning 22 of their last 25 games.

In other National League games, the Houston Astros edged the Cincinnati Reds 3-2; the Atlanta Braves routed the San Diego Padres 8-1 and the Montreal Expos outscored the Chicago Cubs 10-8. Rain washed out a game between the Los Angeles Dodgers and San Francisco Giants.

The Pirates combined the four-hit pitching of Jerry Reuss with a five-run third inning to defeat the Mets. Reuss, beset with injury problems all season, won only his second game against as many losses this year. He didn't allow a runner past second base.

Jerry Koosman started for the Mets and allowed one run in the first inning, then gave up five hits and five runs in the third. Duffy Dyer's two-run double highlighted the big Pittsburgh inning.

Astros 3, Reds 2

A run-scoring double by Jose Cruz and a sacrifice fly by pinch-hitter Bob Watson rallied Houston over Cincinnati. Houston went into the ninth trailing 2-1, but Terry Puhl led off with a single and scored the tying run on Cruz's double.

Loser Tom Seaver, 12-14, intentionally walked Dennis Walling and then issued another walk to Dave Bergman to load the bases before Watson pinchhit for catcher Luis Pujols and smashed his sacrifice fly to center.

Braves 6, Padres 1

A two-run homer by Jeff Burroughs, a solo blast by Dale Murphy and a grand slam by Rod Gilbreath backed the three-hit pitching of right-hander Phil Niekro as Atlanta beat San Diego.

A walk by Gary Matthews and Burroughs' 21st home run of the season in the first inning sent Niekro, 17-15, on his way to becoming the first 17-game winner in the National League.

Expos 10, Cubs 8

Doubles by Warren Cromartie, Gary Carter and Dave Cash keyed a four-run eighth inning that helped Montreal beat Chicago. Wayne Twitchell, 4-12, was the winner in relief while Bruce Sutter, 7-7, was charged with the loss.

Tennis Event Is Set

The Greenville Tennis Club's men's singles tournament will begin at 6 p.m. Thursday at the Jaycee and Elm Street tennis courts.

Play will continue through Sunday.

Top seeded players include Dan Crittenden, John Eatman, Don Ball and Jim Bailey. Other seeded players are Buddy Campbell, Mark Gray, Ron Hignite and Tom Sayetta.

There will be three flights with the first round loser in each flight dropping to a lower flight. Players and spectators should check the Elm Street courts bulletin board for further information.

Yanks Like September

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

For the past few seasons, the New York Yankees have found September to their liking. The Boston Red Sox loathe the month. And if a feeling of "deja vu" is prevalent in the locker rooms of the two American League East contenders, it is understandable.

The Yankees defeated Detroit 4-2 Tuesday while Boston was losing to Baltimore 4-1. Relentlessly, the New Yorkers have been chasing the Red Sox all summer. Now, they are just four games behind, the closest the defending World Champions have been to first place since June 9.

Last season, the Yankees stormed through September to take charge of the division while Boston did not play nearly as well. The same thing seems to be happening again.

Elsewhere in the AL, Kansas City blanked Oakland 3-0. Chicago nipped Minnesota 4-3. Cleveland defeated Toronto 6-2. The Texas-California game was rained out.

Roy White slammed a three-run homer and Dick Tidrow threw eight shutout innings before Rich Gossage stopped a ninth-inning Detroit rally for his 22nd save.

Detroit's Ron LeFlore extended his hitting streak to 27 straight games with a ninth-inning single and Phil Mankowski had a two-run homer.

Orioles 4, Red Sox 1

Jim Palmer won his 18th game, with Don Stanhouse relieving in the ninth to pick up his 21st save and eighth in relief of Palmer. Lee May homered, Carlos Lopez singled in the go-ahead run and Terry Crowley pinch-hit a two-run double to aid Palmer.

Royals 3, A's 0

Kansas City extended its Western Division lead to 1½ games over California as Dennis Leonard pitched a two-hitter and Frank White had a three-run double.

Leonard, 16-16, fanned seven and retired the last 15 batters in hurling his 18th complete game.

White Sox 4, Twins 3

A baserunning blunder by Dan Ford cost the Twins a run and, after a two-run rally in the ninth inning brought them within a run of Chicago, it may cost Ford even more.

"I've never had this feeling before," said Twins Manager Gene Mauch. "Ford will not get paid for today's game."

Steve Trout earned his pay in his first major league start, allowing five hits in the six innings he worked. In the seventh, with the bases loaded, Minnesota's Bombo Rivera singled home two runs.

But only one counted because Ford dawdled coming home from third and Jose Morales passed him when Ford failed to touch home plate.

Indians 6, Blue Jays 2

Andre Thornton's 29th homer of the season and Rick Waits' five-hitter carried Cleveland to victory.

Yesterday's Cryptiquip — UNWARY FOOTBALL PLAYER FLUBBED TEN FORWARD PASSES.

Today's Cryptiquip clue: X equals S

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Allergic To Horses But Paints Them

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — The two men, starting with half smiles from the suede canvas painting look like a couple of cowboys.

The one on the viewer's right has a fancy bolo tie and the look of a ranch boss. The one on the left has some deep lines in his face and looks like the foreman.

The one on the right is chairman of the board of a major oil company. The one on the left is a famous southwest artist.

"Someone walked by the exhibit in Albuquerque, stopped, and exclaimed, 'Why, that's Pete and Robert O.'"

The likenesses of oilman rancher Robert O. Anderson of Atlantic Richfield Oil Co. and artist Peter Hurd were put on the suede leather by a young woman artist who grew up in their neighborhood on the southeast NEW Mexico San Simon Ranch.

"Both men have been a strong influence in my life and work," said Sherry Beadle, now of Amarillo, Texas.

She says she's at her best painting old friends, such as Anderson and Hurd, and horses.

Despite the fact she all but grew up in the saddle and spent much of her life near them, Sherry is allergic to horses.

"Put me up on a horse and I begin sneezing."

She's been taking some acupuncture treatments recently in an attempt to free herself of the medication that has been necessary to control the allergic reactions.

She paints quarter horses, Arabians, thoroughbreds, saddle breds, Morgans and even Andalusians.

Of her choice of suede leather for a canvas, she said, "It's not an easy art form. It's difficult to correct on it. Once the paint is on, it's there."

She was also a staff assistant in the New Mexico Capitol chief clerk's office in Santa Fe, and assistant director for New Mexico's Movie Commission.

Raccoons In Connecticut Going Urban

By WILLIAM T. BLASE
WEST HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — For a solid month, Barbara Blanchfield had to live with six masked intruders who refused to leave. She finally had to call Raccoon Man to evict them.

Holed up in the Blanchfield home was a chattering family of chimney sleepers. Raccoons. Five babies and the mother.

Enter Charles Daniels, a 68-year-old retired oil burner serviceman who has been snaring raccoons at his own expense throughout Connecticut for more than 12 years. He got into it when state lawmakers first considered a call for a raccoon bounty.

"The chicken farmers and corn farmers was up to the legislature kicking up a fuss and wanted a bounty put on them," he recalls. "Some folks figured that if they ever put a bounty on them, well, they just would wipe them right out, so all the game clubs sent representatives up there."

Finally, a bargain was struck. The game clubs agreed to snare raccoons which unwittingly intrude on the premises or good graces of state residents. And the state agreed to forget imposing a bounty.

The Connecticut Department of Environmental Protection now issues permits to game clubs, which send someone out to pick up the raccoons.

That's usually Daniels. He says he's not surprised raccoons are taking up temporary residence in Connecticut homes.

"Where else are they going to go?" he asks. "There ain't no hollow trees anymore. That's where they make their home."

That and urban sprawl have narrowed the number of places raccoons can nest, he said. Daniels said he plucked 238 raccoons from the chimneys of West Hartford alone in 1976, and released them in state parks.

Daniels said capture of the raccoons can sometimes be a battle of wits.

Since the small animals with the bandit mask stripe across the eyes like "anything sweet," he usually begins by baiting a cage trap with grape-jelly and chocolate cream cookies. And then he waits.

Sometimes a raccoon will walk up to the trap, sniff the bait, turn up its nose and saunter off, shaking a furry tail. If the waiting game drags on too long, Daniels puts on heavy gloves and old clothes and wiggles into the chimney after them.

In the case of Mrs. Blanchfield's chimney sleepers, the situation was complicated because he did not want to take the babies away until they were old enough to survive on their own. Finally, he plucked five one-pound pups from their chimney nest and placed them in an old plastic bucket, leaving the snarling mother raccoon alone in her sooty roost.

"They're not always so obstinate," Daniels said. "This one here, she wants to put up an argument."

He stood outside the Blanchfield home, explaining he will release the cubs when they weigh about three pounds, at about five or six weeks old. They will grow to 25-27 pounds.

While Daniels was talking, the frantic mother raccoon scampered up to the top of the chimney, hooked her forepaws over the top, and looked down. She laid back her ears and let out a long soulful cry.

"She'll leave now," Connecticut's raccoon man said. "She has nothing to stay for."

Clock Reduces Electric Bills

READING, Pa. (AP) — Time clocks are being used by some customers to cut electric bills an average 8 percent, according to the local subsidiary of General Public Utilities Corp.

The utility said use of the clocks took advantage of low night rates by shutting off electric water heaters during weekday daytime hours, when energy costs are highest.

Under this method, water is heated only during the night and weekends. A storage capacity of 80 gallons or more is usually needed to keep water hot for the average family during the hours the heating element is shut off.

Glomar Explorer To Mine Seas

By PETER J. BOYER
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Looking more like a floating construction site than a spy vessel, the former CIA ship Glomar Explorer is being outfitted for a new job that lacks cloak-and-dagger intrigue.

The new Glomar will sweep the ocean floor in an experiment for an international consortium that wants to mine minerals from the sea. That is similar to the disguise of the old Glomar.

Howard Hughes built the ship in 1972 for the CIA's "Project Jennifer" — the code name of an operation that lifted a sunken Soviet submarine from the ocean floor. The Glomar conducted its secret 1974 operations while posing as a mining ship. Estimates of the total cost of the ship construction and CIA project run from $200 million to $550 million.

Ship superintendent James Culp, when quizzed about the Russian sub caper, simply says: "I'm afraid you'll have to ask someone else about that. I'm here to talk about mining."

The Glomar of 1978 is a maze of cables, cranes and winches. It is being rigged for a test run in the Pacific where an experimental system will sweep 18,000 feet below the surface to see if a mining operation is feasible.

Ocean Minerals Co. is using the Glomar for a 45-day test trip to start in November. The consortium is composed of Lockheed Missiles & Space Co., Amoco Ocean Minerals Co. and two Dutch enterprises.

If the voyage proves fruitful — and if international complications do not hinder matters — the consortium hopes to have its own ship mining the oceans by 1985, said program manager Conrad Welling.

It reportedly costs about $30,000 a day to lease the Glomar.

What the mining firm wants to dredge up are manganese nodules — clumps of mineral deposits that have the look and texture of shriveled, overripe avocados. The nodules contain manganese, copper, nickel and cobalt, the metals used in steel production.

Scientists estimate that 1.5 trillion tons of these nodules lie beneath the world's oceans. If they can be commercially mined, the United States would be self-sufficient in the four metals by the 1990s. The United States currently imports these metals at a cost of $1.5 billion a year, Welling said.

The Glomar, now owned by the Navy and sub-leased to the mining consortium, was chosen for the test mission because of its deep-sea capabilities.

Suspect 5 Have Legion Disease

NEW YORK (AP) — A health official says the only thing five suspected victims of Legionnaires Disease had in common was their employment in the city's garment district.

The disease has been confirmed in one death and suspected in fourth other cases, one of them also fatal.

The city Department of Health disclosed late Tuesday the possible outbreak of the disease that caused 29 deaths after a 1976 American Legion convention in Philadelphia.

Dr. John Marr, the department's director of epidemiology, said blood samples from the four suspected victims were being sent today to the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta. He said he hoped to have laboratory tests results by Thursday.

Jackie Mason Begins Acting Debut On TV

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
BEVERLY HILLS (AP) — Jackie Mason, the comic and ex-rabbi, makes his TV acting debut this fall in CBS' "Flying High" airline series — as a rabbi interpreting for a Russian defector.

Why the actor bit? Mason, 47, a short, complex man who mixes a swift, cutting wit with self-deprecation, self-appreciation and a keen sense of the ridiculous, kept a straight face as he explained:

"I decided I'm not only the greatest living comedian, I'm also the greatest living actor. I didn't get this information from anybody else. I listen to my own opinions a lot and I figured that if that's my opinion..."

The New Yorker's rich East Side accent swirled upwards amid the lunch cries of others for chicken soup and lox at Nate and Al's delicatessen. Mason's unofficial office when he's in town.

He went on to say his urge to emote has smoldered ever since he got great reviews in his first acting job as the star of a low-budget 1972 film called "The Stoolie."

"Every comedian thinks he's an actor," he sighed. "Most of us are full of (censored), but sometimes not."

Mason, often sighted on the Tonight and Merv Griffin shows and in the clubs of New York, Las Vegas and elsewhere, gained much fame in 1964 during a controversial gig on the late Ed Sullivan's show.

He was accused of raising a certain finger that sportscaster Don Meredith says only means: "We're No. 1." Sullivan thought it obscene. Mason denied he raised that finger. Sued Sullivan, too.

The suit later was dropped, the two made up, but it was a strange row for the son of a Russian-born rabbi, a son who actually had been a rabbi and whose two brothers still are rabbis.

Mason said he found early in his religious career he was in the wrong calling: "Basically, I'm not that religious."

Why then comedy, why not sell aluminum siding or such?

He blames his congregation: "They always used to say, 'Rabbi, you ought to be a comedian.' I always did a few jokes at occasions where you didn't have to be too serious — weddings, bar mitzvahs, brotherhood nights."

"I did it to balance out the seriousness of my performance as a rabbi. I didn't want to bore them to death. I knew they didn't want to hear terrific sermons. They wanted to be entertained."

Sinatra Boosts Lady Candidate

BOSTON (AP) — Frank Sinatra says there's "a wonderful ring" to Sen. Kathleen Sullivan Alioto. "It sings," he says.

But Ol' Blue Eyes wasn't singing Tuesday — he was dabbling in politics with a visit to Boston to boost Mrs. Alioto's candidacy for the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate.

The singer topped the bill at a $250-a-plate fund-raising dinner for the wife of his old friend, former San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto.

Sinatra said it was time "the ladies had a shot at government."

"One example of this is the fact women know more about budgets than men will ever know," he said.

AT QUARTERBACK — He's not very tall, but he is a top comedian, and that's enough to get Flip Wilson into the starting lineup on the University of Kansas football team (temporarily, at least). Wilson is in Kansas this week filming a television special in which he plays a backup quarterback for the Jayhawks. (AP Laserphoto)

Crowning Touch For The Bride

LINDSBORG, Kan. (AP) — Malcolm Esping's fingers nimbly attach a tiny pearl to a delicate crown.

When completed, the crown will adorn the head of the bride on her trip to the altar. Then it will be stored for the next generation to wear.

The 63-year-old Esping, one of about 20 artists and craftsmen in this central Kansas town nicknamed "Little Sweden U.S.A.," takes special pride in crafting Swedish wedding crowns, a Scandinavian tradition centuries old.

Esping, who wears a black felt beret and wooden shoes, operates from a two-room shop adorned by a wooden sign that says "Slojd" — a Swedish word meaning craftsman.

He uses small strips of metal to build a crown, which weighs only a few ounces. Most brides-to-be choose a silver crown, since gold costs about $150 an ounce. They pay between $75 and $125 to have a crown made.

Opening lead: King of ♦.

July was the largest bridge tournament ever held. At some sessions, more than 1,000 tables were in play!

Two relative newcomers to duplicate bridge reached an aggressive game on this hand from one of the secondary events in Toronto. South might have been content with a mere two-heart response to his partner's takeout double. Similarly, despite his four prime controls, North might have discounted some of his strength and passed three hearts because of his balanced shape.

South was Gary Mugford of Bramalea, Ont., and with a little help from the defenders, he read the cards perfectly to justify his optimistic bidding. West led the king of clubs, won by the ace. Declarer cashed three rounds of diamonds, discarding a club from his hand, then led a heart from dummy to his king.

The heart continuation was taken by the ace, the defenders cashed a club and continued with another club. Declarer ruffed and drew the last trump. His problem was to hold his spade losers to one — no easy task, for West was marked with the ace-queen of that suit for his opening bid.

Declarer found a way. He led the jack of spades, and East carelessly covered with the queen. The king won, and declarer continued a low spade from dummy. When East produced the ten, declarer was home. If East was left on lead, he would have to yield a ruff-suff; and if West overtook the ten with the ace, dummy's nine would be high.

Note that West can defeat the contract. He must win the jack of spades with the ace and exit with a spade. Declarer will now be saddled with two losing tricks in that suit.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deaf opening leaders!" FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, SEPT. 7, 1978

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Not a good day for whatever has to do with the lighter side of life. Gain the good will of one in power by showing an intelligent interest in an arrangement that will be advantageous to both of you.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Get busy with plans involving a bigwig that will help you both to make big progress now. Settle a practical matter with mate and be happier.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Good time to work out a policy matter with a partner and get everything on an even keel. If the present situation bores you, be on the alert for bigger opportunities ahead.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Seek the cooperation of a co-worker and get your work done. Try to understand what your family desires and establish more harmony.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Bring your finest talents to the attention of a bigwig who can help you get ahead faster. Show more interest in a good friend and gain favors you want. Don't waste time foolishly.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Look to a good family tie for assistance with a financial problem and get good results. Make a better plan to get yourself in a better position all around.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Discuss aims with good friends and gain their cooperation so that you gain them more easily. Find a better system for handling business matters more intelligently, speedily.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Listen to what a person in private life has to suggest so that you can live a more abundant life. Be alive, ambitious.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get together with good friends. Think out what your true desires are and how best to attain them. Steer clear of a known troublemaker.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You can now contact a bigwig you know and get the advice and support you need. Be careful where credit is concerned and improve your public image.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Elevate your consciousness and widen your horizons. Work toward worthwhile aims. Plan a trip with a good friend and add to present abundance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Go through with business activities that can improve your position in life. Consult with an expert so that you can increase production. Avoid one who is a worrywart.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A partner can show you how to get ahead in a project if you ask for advice. Try to be of help to others also so their burdens are lightened.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have the ability to plan a course of action to the minutest detail and then carry through precisely and successfully. Much romantic happiness in this lifetime.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel. What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!"

High Losses In Sports Cars

NEW YORK (AP) — Sports or specialty-type 1978 cars have higher than average losses in collisions, while regular four-door models have lower than average losses, according to the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety Information. The institute said a study also showed that collision losses were almost always more frequent and more costly for regular two-door models than for regular four-door cars.

MISSING

Male German Shepherd named Willie. His color is black and tan. He's very friendly and also very smart. He's not a registered dog, so he's not very valuable in money, but he is valuable to many people. Willie is the Pitt County Humane Society mascot and is loved by many people, especially his owners. He's been missing since Saturday morning, August 28th. He was lost in the vicinity of the downtown area of Greenville, at Georgetown Apts. The Pitt County Humane Society and the owners are offering a reward for Willie. If you have any information about Willie, please contact 757-6559 or call the owners at 758-1188. Any help will be greatly appreciated.

Don't Delay Treating Gallstones

The alliterative description of people with gallbladder disease is "fair, fat and 40." Medical catch phrases such as this are passed on from generation to generation. In many instances, this phrase does describe gallbladder patients. Yet there are many departures from it. One can be dark, thin and 30 and still be burdened with gallbladder problems.

The gallbladder is a small sac which lies underneath the liver, on the right side of the abdomen. Bile, a very important digestive "juice" is manufactured in the liver. Excess bile is stored in the gallbladder. When fatty foods are eaten, a message is sent to the gallbladder to empty some of its bile salts into the small intestine in order to help digest some of these foods.

Normally, the free flow of bile, through a tiny passageway, is unobstructed. When infection, irritation or inflammation of the gallbladder occurs, stones of varying sizes and shapes can form within the gallbladder itself, or in the tiny duct that carries the bile to the intestines.

These stones are composed of bile salts, bile pigments, calcium and other minerals.

When a gallstone becomes wedged in the small tube, it produces the typical symptoms of "biliary colic." A fatty meal often triggers the onset of the attack.

Excruciating pain in the upper abdomen, on the right side particularly, is often associated with nausea and vomiting. The pain is sometimes referred to the shoulder or the back. After the painful attack is over, the patient may again be free of symptoms.

It is unwise to neglect its importance and to delay a complete investigation of its cause. Even a single attack of biliary colic dictates the need for complete examination of the gallbladder.

Special studies, with dyes and X-rays, can easily determine the presence or absence of stones. Attacks can also occur if the gallbladder is infected, inflamed and non-functioning, even though there are no stones present. The same X-ray studies can actually measure how well the gallbladder empties itself, a good indication of its state of health.

Occasionally, during a routine series of X-rays of the intestines and the abdomen, stones may be seen in the gallbladder, without any previous complaint of biliary colic.

Diet and anti-spasm drugs can usually control the recurrence of gallbladder symptoms. When surgery for the removal of the stones is suggested, it must not be delayed for too long a period of time. Modern surgical techniques and the excellent safety record of anesthetics have considerably reduced the complexities of gallbladder surgery. Unwarranted delay can only invite complications.

Sheep See Comeback In New England

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — The meek may never inherit the earth, but at least one of their number (the sheep) is making a comeback in New England.

Two Hampshire College professors say that with proper training, equipment and technique, New England farmers can make the shy, woolly animal part of a regional agricultural renaissance.

The interest in bringing back sheep farming to New England is partially due to escalating energy costs that make the wide open spaces of the American West and Australia and New Zealand less attractive for herders.

The rocky hillsides of New England are once again becoming an economically sound place to graze sheep, according to Hampshire College professors Paul Slata and Raymond Coppinger.

The key to this sheep revival, they say, is the small, part-time farmer—often a white-collar squire who works in or near a city, lives in the country and keeps a few animals in order to stay in touch with the rural life.

Sheep once grazed throughout New England, but that changed as farming began to lose its grip in the region shortly after the Civil War. In the mid-1800s, New England farmers—who had cleared up to 75 percent of forest land in some states—abandoned their fields and headed for the great, flat plains.

The sheep went with them. A century later Vermont's sheep population had dropped from 3 million to 8,000. Western Massachusetts, which once counted more than 300,000, was left with 6,000.

Sheep, meanwhile, flourished in the plains states, Australia and New Zealand, and today most of the 19 million pounds of lamb eaten each year by Massachusetts residents is imported from outside the East.

But Slata and Coppinger said the combination that lured farmers west—cheap land, cheap transportation and mass production—was a casualty of the high price of energy.

So, along with Harvard botanist John Torrey, the pair are working on a plan to reintroduce sheep farming in New England.

—Biologist Coppinger is breeding, training and studying European sheep-guarding dogs. They can protect sheep against coyotes, he said, and he hopes, fend off their greatest threat—domestic dogs.

—Agriculturalist Slata is working with breeds of sheep that are hardy and fertile enough for the region's various farms.

—Torrey is trying to improve forage crops for grazing and find ways to reduce dependence on petrochemical fertilizers.

But can the great 19th-century exodus really be reversed?

"There are sheep people here willing and able to do it," Slata said. "But agriculture is not for the dilettante. People around here are not on a nostalgia trip, and neither am I."

The professors are not alone in their efforts. The Vermont Sheep Breeders' Association has an eight-year "blueprint" that calls for increased sheep size, population and price.

The state's sheep population has risen by 15 percent in each of the last three years, according to Tunbridge sheep farmer Henry Swayze, a director of the association.

Swayze called sheep "a really good agricultural sideline" for both large and part-time farmers: "They fit in well on a farm and they're fairly easy to handle."

Fare Collector Mutilates Bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $3 million sophisticated bus fare collection system installed by the Washington-area transit system to prevent theft has one problem—it's making confetti out of some of the dollar bills.

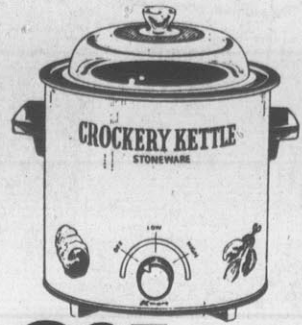

The Keene Transit fare system uses huge fans to suck coins and paper money out of bus fare collection boxes into a sealed vault in less than 30 seconds a bus. The system was installed so that humans would not be involved in transferring the money.

But transit officials say the money mutilation rate is running 27 dollar bills per thousand. To solve the problem, officials have hired workers to tape the dollar bills back together.

Attorneys Improving: Griffin Bell

By ED ROGERS
WASHINGTON (UPI)
Attorney General Griffin Bell believes the nation's lawyers are improving in their ability and integrity but decries the fact that in cities they no longer provide free work as a public service.

"I have found in my life that lawyers are as ethical a group of people I have ever known," Bell told UPI in an interview. "I think the law profession compares favorably with journalists and doctors."

A former Atlanta lawyer who also served as a judge of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, Bell defends the profession and also has taken steps to upgrade it since President Carter named him to head the Justice Department last year.

As to Chief Justice Warren Burger's statement that half the nation's trial lawyers are incompetent, Bell thinks he merely meant they are not as good as they should be. If Burger meant outright incompetence, Bell would say 10 percent.

But Bell conceded Burger may have received reliable information from judges around the country. While there is now a trend toward training lawyers for trial work, heretofore they got their trial training in court — starting green.

Bell himself is setting up seminars to train Justice Department lawyers in trial work.

Bell says he does not agree with all the criticisms President Carter made in his speech about lawyers in Los Angeles, but believes they are valid if taken as a list of improvements lawyers should seek to achieve.

Bell said he gained a fresh view of the profession by returning to private practice in 1976 after serving 14½ years as an appellate judge. He found "significant" changes.

One change, he said, was the huge increase in the use of a process called "discovery" that lawyers on one side of a civil suit use to get records and other evidence from the other side to help prepare for trial.

"Cases were discovered to death rather than being put on trial," Bell said. He added judges did little to halt the abuse and this meant big cases would "stay in discovery" for up to five years before reaching trial.

"Now this is terribly expensive and a great cause of delay," Bell said.

"Second," Bell said, "the idea of being appointed to criminal cases as part of your duty as a lawyer was a thing of the past."

Bell noted that the custom of assigning lawyers to represent criminal defendants who could not afford to hire one was replaced by having tax-paid public defenders in most cities.

"I think they ought to be willing to take criminal defense appointments," Bell said. But he added that criminal law has become "so complicated that a lawyer who does not regularly engage in that type of practice may be accused of being an inadequate lawyer."

"He might be sued ... if he loses the case," Bell said. "So that makes lawyers shy of taking these cases."

"The last great change I saw was, lawyers had generally gone out of the legal aid business," Bell said.

"They didn't need to worry about representing the poor in civil litigation because that burden had been shifted to the government through the Legal Services Corporation ..."

Bell was not a Rip Van Winkle returning from a 14½-year sleep, but as a judge he handled only appeals — a field that provides "a fairly narrow view of law practice," he said.

"I'd read about them in newspapers but it had never occurred to me what an impact — what changes had been made — because of those two things, public defenders and the change in legal aid."

The American Bar Association, Bell said, now wants the federal government to finance all public defenders used in criminal cases, even in state and local courts.

"The lawyers in the American Bar think this is what the federal government ought to do, apparently," Bell said.

But Bell said lawyers are members of a learned profession that is a "service profession" that is committed to represent the rich and the poor and see that there is equal justice between them.

Social Work Studies To Be Offered

ECU News Bureau

Employees of eastern North Carolina social service, corrections and other human service delivery agencies who wish to work toward college degrees may enroll in off-campus credit courses to be offered this fall by East Carolina University.

Classes will be scheduled in several Region IV locations, including Williamston, Elizabeth City, Rocky Mount, Wilson, Greenville, Goldsboro, New Bern, Kinston and Kenansville. Course offerings, ranging from two to four semester hours, will concern such topics as social welfare policies, issues and programs; social welfare legislation and case law; fundamentals of interviewing; human behavior; supervision; and crisis intervention.

The program, partially funded by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare under Title XX of the Social Security Act, is sponsored by the ECU Department of Social Work and Correctional Services and the ECU Division of Continuing Education.

According to program coordinator Homer Yearick, adjunct associate professor in the ECU School of Allied Health and Social Professions, individuals who participate may pursue the program at their own speed.

Courses will be taught at the various locations by ECU faculty members, and a departmental faculty advisor is available at each location, he noted. The fall semester courses will begin during the week of August 30 and end December 18.

Further information about the social work education program is available from the ECU Department of Social Work and Correctional Services, School of Allied Health and Social Professions, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C. 27834, tel. 757-6961.

Cites Ten Tar Heels

ECU News Bureau

"Ten Men of High Office in Revolutionary North Carolina, 1777-1783: A Test of the Martin Thesis in 'Men in Rebellion,'" an article by East Carolina University faculty historian Karl Rodabaugh, appears in the current issue of an international journal.

The article is included in "Histoire Sociale," a professional journal published by the Universite d'Ottawa, Canada. The 10 leaders discussed in the article include:

Samuel Ashe (New Hanover County), Thomas Benbury (Chowan County), Thomas Burke (Orange County), Richard Caswell (Dobbs County), Whitmel Hill (Martin County), Allen Jones (Northampton County), Alexander Martin (Guilford County), Abner Nash (Craven County), Edward Starkey (Onslow County), and John Williams (Granville County).

Rodabaugh, a specialist in South U.S. history, is the author of several articles in historical journals and a recent book-length study of the Farmer's Revolt in late 19th century Alabama.

Room For 15 At Costa Rica

ECU News Bureau

Places are available for 15 students in the spring, 1979, session of East Carolina University's Central American Studies Program at the Universidad Nacional in Heredia, Costa Rica.

The program, now in its sixth year, involves classes taught in English at the Costa Rican campus, with studies in Spanish language also available.

The spring session will begin Jan. 8 and end April 27.

According to Dr. Robert Cramer, director of the program, participation in the program costs a student about the same as a semester of study on the ECU campus.

Further information about the Costa Rica study program and application materials are available from Dr. Cramer at the ECU Department of Geography.

Lawn Mower Is Facing Design-Change Advice

By MICHAEL J. CONLON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — After five years of study, government safety experts are readying design-change proposals aimed at preventing the thousands of injuries power lawn mowers cause each year.

In response, industry representatives are mounting a congressional lobbying campaign to block the effort, claiming it is an illegal federal intrusion into private enterprise and would cost the consumer plenty.

At issue are three proposals developed by the staff of the Consumer Product Safety Commission. They are scheduled to be presented this fall to the four commissioners, who will decide whether any should become mandatory safety requirements for power mowers.

Each involves equipping mowers with devices that will shut them off when the user lets go of the handle.

The theory is that some of the estimated 61,325 injuries that occur each year — ranging from severed toes and fingers to cuts and bruises — are caused when the operator stoops to clear the blades of debris or to check the mower while its still running.

An automatic shut-off supposedly would render the mower harmless once the user lets go of the controls.

The Outdoor Power Equipment Institute, a trade association that represents many of the nation's lawn mower manufacturers, has been fighting the idea ever since it first surfaced at the commission.

The institute has obtained and made public a descriptive list of the prospective commission staff proposals. They would:

—Require a clutch device that will stop the blade from whirling but keep the engine running when the user gives up control of the mower.

—Require the engine to shut off completely when the user releases the handle, but equip the mower with a battery-powered starter that would revive the engine with the push of a button.

—Or, require a dead-man control that shuts off both the blade and the engine when the user loses control, plus a label on the mower warning about the potential hazard.

Dennis Dix, head of OPEI, said in an interview that the first option would raise the price of mowers about $30 each, the second $50 and the third about $15.

Pay For Space In Time Capsule

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Songwriter Sammy "Three Coins in a Fountain" Cahn and President Carter have each paid $3 to include memorabilia in a 50-year time capsule to be buried next month, says the California Parks Foundation.

Cahn sent a tape recording of his hits and Carter mailed a copy of his inaugural address.

NOT SO STRAIGHT AND NARROW — These freshly painted lines on Maine Street in Columbia (S.C.) were applied this way on purpose— sort of. Mike Cribb, city traffic engineer, explains that the lanes narrow at intersections to allow for a 10-foot wide turning lane. Also contributing to the scraggly appearance of the lines, however, was a machine that "got a little out of whack" when it hit bumps in the street, Cribb said. (AP Laserphoto)

Californian Trying To Raise Tobacco

By JOE BIGHAM
Associated Press Writer
PUMPKIN CENTER, Calif. (AP) — With a dozen plants in her back yard, 78-year-old Victoria Wood is the tobacco queen of California.

State officials say they don't know of anyone else who is growing tobacco in the golden state.

"I haven't seen any tobacco listed anywhere," says Ray Borton of the California Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

He keeps track of all the crops grown in each of the state's 58 counties and says tobacco isn't grown commercially in California because so many other crops are raised more easily and economically.

"It's just not here, although there may be a few backyard gardens where people try it," Borton adds.

Mrs. Wood, familiar with tobacco growing in her native Arkansas, wanted to plant some seeds in her vegetable garden "to see if it can grow in this country."

A niece compiled names of tobacco companies from cigarette packages "and kept writing until we finally found some seed," adds Mrs. Wood, who worked in the cotton fields until she was 68.

She planted broad-leaved burley seeds from Kentucky in February, and by late July the plants stood about 4 feet high.

The tobacco plants require plentiful irrigating just like the rest of her 1/4-acre garden, especially in this hot, dry southern San Joaquin Valley area near Bakersfield, where summer highs often exceed 100 degrees.

Tobacco is not the first southern crop planted here by Mrs. Wood, who moved to Pumpkin Center two decades ago. She says she's tried broom corn, adding, "I just make brooms out of it."

But she has no firm idea what to do with her tobacco crop which may make about a pound of tobacco when harvested.

"You can twist it up, cut it off and smoke it or let it dry and crush it up like smoking tobacco," she says.

"I'll give it away to anybody who wants it, I guess, 'cause I don't chew it nor I don't smoke."

Residential Use Overshadowed

PARSIPPANY, N.J. (UPI) — The American public spends about twice as much annually for gasoline and motor oil as it does for electricity for residential use.

This means about four percent of personal income after taxes is spent on gas and oil, compared with about two percent for electric power, says William B. Murray, vice president of General Public Utilities Service Corp.

Since 1967, when the cost of electricity was close to its lowest point, the cost of both gasoline and electricity have increased about 89 percent.

France Again In 'Flap' Over Rising Bread Prices

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — Bread is a word that can make the French heart miss a beat. After all, Marie Antoinette's supposed comment on the hungry — "Let them eat cake" — triggered a revolution.

Now, the price of bread is going up, and France is again in flap.

No one is storming the Bastille this time, but the current of editorial comment, talk-show time and official statements being devoted to the issue underlines how much bread is a symbol to France.

The price rise, which amounts to two or three cents a loaf, was part of the newly elected French government's major program to streamline the economy by getting rid of subsidies.

The price of bread had been fixed by the state since 1791, when the Revolution's leaders, before beheading Marie Antoinette, resolved that the Staff of Life would never again be out of reach of the poor.

So few Frenchmen thought finance Minister Rene Monory was overstating the case when he deregulated the price 187 years later and called his move a revolution for France.

Leftist newspapers condemned the action and played up an elderly group's bread protest — the only organized street action reported. The paper Liberation sarcastically predicted a black market in white bread and said the rich might now put their bread in Swiss banks.

Snapped Monory: "The French economy has been a hybrid for too long, with the chiefs of business calling for public help at the slightest pretext. You can't build a good economy on handouts."

Under controls, the famed baguette, the long, sausage-shaped French loaf, cost 1.25 francs. In the two weeks since prices were freed, it has crept up to 1.30, and even 1.40 in fashionable neighborhoods. A franc is worth 22 cents at current exchange rates.

With inflation at 11 percent a year, the price will probably go on rising. And even today there are some who harbor faint misgivings about tampering with an issue that has caused so much upheaval in France.

In pre-Revolutionary days, a laborer spent 50 percent of his wages on bread. French rulers, always aware of the dangers of a bread shortage, set up elaborate supply systems but these depended on the weather. So the price could double overnight.

Bread riots came almost yearly, and the victims were invariably the bakers, who were beaten, trampled and lynched. It's not surprising, thus, that French bakers have a patron saint, St. Honore, who is said to have heard the call of God while watching his mother bake bread.

In one incident, the lieutenant governor of St. Denis, near Paris, was chased up a church steeple and stabbed to death for pompously informing a crowd that "one does not sell bread to rabble for two sous a loaf."

Reprisals for the riots were swift. Once, 50 people were summarily hanged.

The revolutionaries who froze the price could not keep it down any more easily than the royalists they ousted. In 1795, for instance, inflation pushed the price up 1,000 percent in a month.

Today, bread consumes only 3 percent of a French household budget, so the bakers can rest easy. But many bakers oppose deregulation. Some fear a price war; others worry about being put out of business by large bakeries that buy ingredients by volume — and more cheaply.

Bread still is a political matter. Some complain that the bereted, mustachioed baker peddling loaves from a pushcart is disappearing. And last February, bakers stopped making quality croissants in protest against a government price ceiling, touching off a heated issue in a national election. "The croissant war," it was called.

Whatever St. Honore might think of Monory's new move, one thing is sure: There's no point in again telling Frenchmen to eat cake. It was deregulated along with bread.
