

Proposition 13 Fallout Mild In N.C.

By The Associated Press

California's Proposition 13 is triggering a wave of discontent over property taxes across the country, but any effect it may have in North Carolina apparently will be on the state income tax.

An Associated Press survey has uncovered little evidence of a property tax revolt in the state — with the exception of the Winston-Salem area — but Gov. Jim Hunt has jumped on the tax-reduction issue with a campaign for an income tax rebates next year.

He had said earlier in his administration he felt hemmed in by campaign promises not to raise taxes.

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green and leaders of tax-writing committees in the General Assembly recently endorsed Hunt's proposal by calling for either rebates or a cut in taxes when the legislature meets in January.

One of the reasons North Carolinians have not joined in the property tax furor apparently is the relatively low rates homeowners pay.

"The property tax in North Carolina is low compared with national figures," said H.C. Stansbury, director of the Tax Research Division of the state Department of Revenue. "There's been a continuing effort to reduce the tax rates that senior citizens with fixed incomes pay on homes and property."

Another factor, Stansbury said, is the conservative nature of voters — and their elected officials — in the Tar Heel state.

"It seems to me that the level of services is certainly modest here compared with states like California," he said. "As long as we have a conservative General Assembly as far as spending is concerned, that keeps your taxes relatively low."

What overt discontent over property taxes there is in North Carolina is centered in Forsyth County, where Winston-Salem dentist Richard Nash heads a group called Stabilize Taxes on Property which is seeking a rollback in rates.

Nash, who maintains that tax rates can be cut without a reduction in essential services, said STOP hopes to get at least 56,000 of the county's 111,000 voters to sign petitions calling for the reduction. He said the group has collected almost 31,000 signatures in two and a half months.

"It's a moral thing, a straw vote, because we can't have a referendum like Proposition 13 in North Carolina," Nash said. He said STOP has a budget committee reviewing city and county revenue and spending figures to come up with ways to reduce spending.

Nash said STOP is asking political candidates to state their positions on taxes and will campaign against officials who fail to live up to

Martial Law In Two States Of Nicaragua

By LEW WHEATON

Associated Press Writer
MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Anastasio Somoza declared martial law today in two states where guerrillas attacked national troops and broke open a fresh offensive aimed at forcing Somoza from power.

"There is no longer any doubt. It is a civil war," said Alvaro Chamorro Mora, vice president of the anti-Somoza Conservative Party.

A decree issued by the presidential press secretary said all constitutional guarantees were suspended for 30 days in the states of Esteli and Masaya in the southwest, where guardsmen battled guerrillas in the streets of the capitals.

The guard, Nicaragua's 7,500-man army and police force, said Sunday that its forces were "maintaining control and order in the whole country." But the Red Cross said there was heavy gunfire in two sections of the capital and in the cities of Esteli 65 miles north of the capital, in Masaya 18 miles to the south and in Leon, 65 miles to the northwest.

A Red Cross spokesman said no exact figures were available, but there were casualties in the Sunday battles in the outlying districts.

A national guard spokesman said "complete normality" had been restored to the capital, where the government newspaper Novedades said at least 16 persons were killed in fighting Sunday.

Unofficial reports said there were many casualties in other parts of the capital, and incomplete reports told of at least 20 dead and many more wounded in other cities in the terrorists' new offensive.

"Casualties among the terrorists were high," said a government communique, but it gave no figures.

Chamorro Mora said the Sandinista guerrillas, named for a guerrilla leader killed fighting the U.S. Marines in the 1930s, had launched an offensive throughout the country.

Blazes set by the guerrillas Saturday night were reported still burning more than 24 hours later in Leon, about 60 miles northwest of the Managua, and Masaya, 18 miles south of the capital.

The Sandinistas struck almost simultaneously at five police stations in the Managua area, witnesses said. They also attacked national guard command posts in Leon, Masaya, Esteli, Diriamba, Chinandega and Granada. All the attacks began between 6 p.m. and 7 p.m. Saturday, launched by guerrillas firing automatic weapons.

The national guard claimed it ended the fighting in Leon by 2 p.m. But the Red Cross said there was heavy firing again late Sunday night.

No Breakthrough In Summitry Indicated

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — The Mideast summit, now in its sixth day, is moving ahead in fits and starts with no sign of a major breakthrough in resolving sharp differences between Israel and Egypt.

Although progress on some key issues has been reported by an official spokesman, there has been no formal conference of the three major summit participants since last Thursday.

There was a widespread expectation that the discussions involving President Carter, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat will continue at least until midweek.

Begin said Sunday the summit was "going well" but other sources offered more cautious assessments.

"We need another two or three days to crystallize things," said Ezer Weizman, the Israeli defense minister, who again met separately with Sadat during the weekend.

Sources close to the Egyptian delegation said the summit was moving slowly and that there had been no breakthrough.

After taking Begin and Sadat on a Sunday tour of the Civil War battlefield at Gettysburg, Pa., Carter met for an hour with the Israeli prime minister at Camp David. The two leaders were joined by key advisers.

Begin made his optimistic comment about the meetings when he encountered reporters during the battlefield tour.

"You can see they are going well," said Begin.

He seemed to be referring to the evident rapport among the participants rather than to the Arab-Israeli dispute itself.

Weizman was more cryptic than the prime minister when he was asked, "How are you doing?"

"We are doing," the defense minister responded.

Before the Gettysburg trip, Carter attended Protestant religious services here and conferred by telephone with the Shah of Iran.

Carter lent the Shah his personal support but also called for more "political liberalization" in the troubled country.

Iran is considered a force for stability in the Middle East and Persian Gulf. Carter, in telephoning the Shah, reaffirmed the U.S. commitment to the embattled monarch.

The three summit leaders traveled together to Gettysburg in Carter's bullet-proof black limousine.

Carter showed Begin and Sadat several of the high spots of the 1863 campaign in which Southern forces led by Gen. Robert E. Lee were repulsed with heavy casualties in their second and last effort to invade the North.

Reporters were kept far enough away from the summit principals to maintain the Carter-imposed secrecy that has marked the summit.

Meanwhile, there were these comments on the summit:

— Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., predicted that Egypt will not be satisfied unless Israel produces "definite movement" in its stance on Mideast peace.

— Syria's president, Hafez Assad, said in an interview published in West Germany that the talks will fail.

Some School Strikes End

By The Associated Press

Teacher strikes affecting nearly 280,000 students ended today, but more than a half million pupils across the country were still out of school as their teachers and education officials tried to agree on contracts.

Several pacts were approved over the weekend, but some new strikes began today. Most disputes concerned pay and class size.

The biggest back-to-work movement today was in Philadelphia where the 250,000 pupil school system opened a week late after a strike by the city's 13,000 teachers. Teachers accepted a two-year contract calling for a 15 percent increase over two years that will result in a salary range of $19,000 to $22,425.

Norwalk, Conn., teachers voted Sunday night to accept a new contract and return to work today, ending a four-day strike against the 14,000 pupil system.

In Waterloo, Ill., officials of the school board, the teacher union and the service worker union agreed Saturday to seek federal mediation in their dispute, ending a two-week strike against the school system of 2,000 pupils.

In Collinsville, Ill., teachers voted 289-14 Sunday to ratify a two-year contract that gives raises of about $1,700 in the next two years, ending a strike against the 7,200 student school district that began Aug. 27.

The 14,500-student Fall River, Mass., system was struck for the first time in the city's history today.

The 8,300 student Chelmsford, Mass., school system was struck today after weekend contract negotiations broke down with the 500 teachers over guidelines for reducing the workload.

Cleveland schools were closed for a second day because of a strike by 10,000 school system employees, including 5,000 teachers, who have not had raises in two years.

Officials in New Orleans talked with striking teachers throughout the weekend and school board officials announced settlement of the dispute early today.

Mess Section Of Local Nat'l Guard Chosen Best

The 514th Military Police Co. of Greenville received the National Guard's Phillip Connelly Award here Sunday in recognition for having the best mess section in the state.

William E. Ingram, Adjutant General of the North Carolina National Guard, made the award presentation to 514th representatives at the Greenville Armory.

Ingram presented the award to SFC Julian Pierce, the unit's food service sergeant, and his cooks for their work in meeting the criteria for the top mess service award.

The award, honoring the late Phillip Connelly who was for years a motivating factor in food service in the armed services, recognizes excellence in the preparation and serving of food to Army National Guard personnel during field kitchen operations.

Criteria for the award includes the quality of food service, the acceptability of prepared food by patron personnel, the efficiency and sanitation preparation, plus food and energy conservation.

The competition first began at the battalion level and recently culminated with the winning field operation at Camp Lejeune in August.

1st Sgt. Mayo Allen of the 514th said that the mess section is now one of 50 in the nation competing for the Readiness Region competition. He said that 22 Guard mess sections from all over the nation will advance from the region competition, with the overall winner receiving a trip to Las Vegas.

Also on hand for the presentation Sunday were Brigadier General Colleen McKinney of the 139th Support Group, and Capt. Leon Wright, commander of the 514th MP Co.

Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon said he knows of no speed limit for parking lots, which are considered private property dedicated to the public use. However, police and highway patrol can charge careless and reckless driving on such property, as well as driving under the influence, if it's warranted. He said in the situation which you described, careless and reckless would have been charged if it had been seen by a law enforcement officer.

"This parking lot is leased operated by a Mitchell Agency in Alabama and so far Hotline has not been successful in locating it. We would like to have the address, so as to find out if there are any plans for signs or humps, as you suggested.

Housewares, Where Small Operator Can Get Started

By JEANNE LESSEM
UPI Family Editor
 CHICAGO (UPI) — Dolph Zapfel, a 30-year veteran of the American housewares industry, says all it takes to get started in the industry today is a bright idea and a little capital.

"Today the industry is still mostly small and medium manufacturers," Zapfel said in an interview at the 69th semiannual housewares trade show. He is managing director of the National Housewares Manufacturers Association.

"Ever hear of Scapoose, Oregon?" he asked. "We have two exhibitors from there."

"I get five to six requests daily from manufacturers I never heard of. And we're short 500 booths."

Zapfel joined the industry association in 1948 after working for a housewares industry trade publication. He said the recent show was the largest July show ever for the $25 billion industry. 1,588 manufacturers displayed their wares on seven miles of aisles in the McCormick Place exhibit center.

"There are so many success stories," he said. "Grayline of Elgin, Ill., was started 25 or 30 years ago by the late George Gray. He made the products in his basement with his family's help."

Grayline Housewares today is a leading manufacturer of vinyl-coated wire goods for kitchens, closets and bath.

Candidates for similar success stories at the midsummer show included:

—A Houston home economist who "never considered myself creative" but who has invented a household scale to convert favorite family recipes to microwave oven use and sold it to a major manufacturer.

—A Hawthorne, Calif., grandmother who is earning royalties from a manufacturer for her multipurpose microwave ovenware.

—A semi-retired couple in Kansas who bought rights to a stovetop and fireplace or campfire corn popper from its inventor and started up an entirely new business.

—A company in Belle Chasse, La., that makes equipment for mopping up oil spills now makes a household mop from the same material to skim excess grease from food.

—A Northport, N.Y., designer in business about three years whose patented plexiglas cook-book stand is rapidly being "knocked off" by other manufacturers who know a good idea when they see it.

—The wife of a leading housewares company salesman who has launched a kitchen textiles line with cotton aprons printed with historical French graphics. Penny Davidson Reese's company, Janus Two of South Philadelphia, Pa., also imports one-handed push-button salt and pepper mills designed by two Danish architects.

Thelma Pressman, the inventive California grandmother, teaches microwave cookery at cookstores, colleges and in private classes. Her microwave utensils, made by Blisscraft of Hollywood, reflect a woman's practicality: plate covers reverse to cook-and-serve dishes; the covered roaster reverses to a 7-quart covered casserole.

Mary Beth Cyvas, the scale designer, is also a microwave cookery teacher in a retail store. Mrs. Cyvas (pronounced chee'-vas) developed the scale because students kept asking how to convert favorite family recipes to their appliances.

"Basically, I went backwards," she said. "I cooked things and noted the weight, time and cooking power."

The result is a traditional platform scale with calibrated dials that show cooking time in minutes for high, medium-high, medium and low power for microwave units with power outputs of 600-700 watts. It is made by American Family Scale Co., Inc. of Chicago.

Electric corn poppers are proliferating rapidly, but Emery and Jessie Brinkman said their Popall Popper has been around at least 30 years and still is selling. It looks like a large aluminum saucepan with a hinged lid and crank handle.

Another old-timer holding its own despite new electric and microwave corn poppers: Leyse Aluminum's Aladdin. It looks like a covered saucepan and converts to one. "We've been making it for 50 years," said a spokesman. It retails for about $6, he added.

The oil mop is only a few years old, said Richard McCarthy III, marketing director for Pro Diet Mop, Inc., but the company is already developing a new model. Seems the mop fibers used to recover oil spills pick up oil so pure it is resold to the oil companies. The "second generation" kitchen mop will do the same thing with cooking fats and oils, McCarthy said.

Corinne McGrady, the cook-book stand designer, is expanding her line to include vinylcovered steel shelves that can be hung horizontally or used like pegboard or as drainboards. Mrs. McGrady also makes air-tight plastic spice jars with vinyl-covered wallmounted racks.

He's Had It With 'Worthless' Wife

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I read so many letters about cheating husbands, I wonder if anyone ever wonders how they got that way. Well, here is MY day:

I go to the breakfast table to find my usual bowl of cold cereal and instant coffee. (No toast; we're out of bread.) My wife, who went from 120 to 180 pounds in two years, joins me in a soiled bathrobe, pinned together because she's been too busy watching soap operas and talking on the telephone to sew on buttons.

I'm wearing the same shirt I wore yesterday because she didn't have time to iron. (I couldn't even match up a pair of socks this morning.)

It's only 7:30 a.m. and I'm already disgusted and irritable before going to work as a supervisor in a noisy office.

When I return home at 5:15 p.m. I find our 2-year-old still in his pajamas, and my wife is wearing the same soiled robe. The breakfast dishes are in the sink, and I notice an empty one-pound box of chocolates and a half-eaten pie by the TV.

When I'm about ready to go to the nearest McDonald's, she tells me "dinner is ready." ("Dinner" is canned spaghetti, instant potatoes and a tossed salad that should have been tossed into the garbage.)

Two years ago, she quit work to have our baby, saying she'd return to work when the baby was a year old. Obviously, she has no intention of going back.

No matter how late I stay up, I go to bed alone because she wants to watch more television.

Would you blame me if I started looking for a woman who cares how she looks, and offers me some pleasant conversation, companionship and a little affection? So far, I haven't, but I'm considering it.

I'd be better off being a bachelor, eating out, and sending my clothes to a laundry. At least, I'd have good food, clean clothes and warm arms, and it would be cheaper than keeping a worthless woman.

DISGUSTED IN BLOOMINGTON

DEAR DISGUSTED: Obviously, your wife is not the same woman you married. But why are you telling ME all this? Do you want to improve the situation, or set up some justification for cheating on her?

Has it ever occurred to you that your wife may have become lazy, slovenly and addicted to food and television because she's sick?

Before you write her off as a "worthless woman," try to find the reason for her apparent deterioration. With loving concern instead of criticism, plus professional help (starting with a physician) you might be able to save her. It's certainly worth a try.

DEAR ABBY: If you knew for a fact that your sister's husband had been keeping another woman for over five years, would you tell your sister?

Many others know it. My sister is bound to find out some way, and when she does, she will surely realize that I must have known it, too.

LONG ISLANDER

DEAR ISLANDER: There are exceptions, but in most cases, the wife also knows, but has too much pride to admit it to anyone.

Keep your lip zipped, and should she one day admit that she knows, please be big and don't chime in with those who would say, "I knew it all along."

DEAR ABBY: About a year ago my wife seemed to turn frigid, and last week I learned the reason why. She's been having an affair with a friend of our son's!

My wife is 38 and very well built, and this kid is 16 and big for his age. (He was 15 when it started.) He hung around our house a lot, but I always thought he came over to see our boys. (We have three, ages 10, 12 and 16.) It never dawned on me that something was going on until I saw my wife kissing him goodbye in the yard. Then she said, "I love you." (I read her lips.)

I had a long talk with her and she admitted that she was having an affair with this kid, but she said she still "loved" me and it was only a harmless little fling. (How "harmless" can it be if they are having sex?)

I told her I didn't want to see that boy around our house anymore. Should I tell his parents? What should I do now? We've been married for 18 years. I'm 39 and have never been unfaithful in my life. We had a wonderful marriage until she started fooling around with this kid. Please advise me.

CAN'T SLEEP IN VEGAS

DEAR CAN'T: You can't tolerate an extramarital affair, whether you call it "fooling around," a "fling" or whatever. Nowhere in your letter do you say that your wife has agreed to stop seeing this boy. If she insists on seeing him, you should insist that she get counseling. And remind her that she is contributing to the delinquency of a minor!

If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters For All Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

One-Dish Chinese Meals Are Easy To Cook And Economical

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

A few weeks ago I had a postcard from China. It came from my friend Florence Lin who, with a group of other Americans, has been visiting there.

Florence wrote: "Here we are in Kwangchow — the best food in China. Our house meals are delicious but not unusual. So we asked I have a real banquet. I suggested this and, of course, everyone agreed!"

When Florence returns, I plan to ask her for an up-to-date culinary report for this column. In the meantime her new book, "Florence Lin's Chinese One-Dish Meals" (Hawthorn, $7.95) is wonderfully practical. For here are dishes that are easy to cook, economical, well-balanced and delicious. You need no special equipment or hard-to-find ingredients to prepare Florence's one-dish meals. Isn't that encouraging?

An example of one of the lovely recipes in Florence's new book is Braised Fish with Scallions. Tried at my house, it's a dish I look forward to making and serving over and over again.

FLORENCE LIN'S SU YU
 (Braised Fish with Scallions)
 1 1/2 pounds whole butterfish (about 6 small ones)
 12 small scallions, cut into 4-inch-long sections
 1 teaspoon salt
 1/4 cup sugar
 1/4 cup soy sauce
 1/4 cup distilled white vinegar
 2 tablespoons corn oil
 2 tablespoons sesame oil

The fish taste better if cooked a day ahead, and this dish will keep up to 2 weeks in a covered container in the refrigerator.

Yield: 4 to 6 servings. This recipe can be multiplied successfully.

Choice of fish: Small smelts or other fine-textured small fish may be used instead of butterfish.

FLORENCE LIN—Author of "Florence Lin's Chinese One-Dish Meals."

Miss Buck Entertained

Miss Karen Lou Buck, Oct. 20 bride-elect of John Robert James, was honored at a floating miscellaneous shower Friday night at the Cherry Education Building of the Black Jack F.W.B. Church.

The refreshment table was covered with a silk and lace cloth and centered with an arrangement of carnations and asters in pink, green and white.

Miss Buck was remembered with a corsage of white carnations.

Approximately 60 guests were present for the evening.

Hostesses were Mrs. James S. Sanders, Mrs. Bruce Buck, Mrs. Hugh Hardee Jr., Mrs. Robert Stokes, Mrs. Bill Kittrell and Mrs. Melvin Buck.

Next Wet-Dry Test Tuesday

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The next battle between the wets and drys is set for Tuesday when voters in Orange County and Chapel Hill, Black Mountain and Southern Pines go to the polls on the local-option liquor-by-the-drink law passed by the General Assembly in June.

Although wets won a resounding victory in Friday's mixed-drink endorsement by Mecklenburg County voters, drys are looking forward to scoring triumphs in some of the upcoming liquor-by-the-drink votes.

Following Tuesday's vote, Sanford and Louisburg voters go to the polls on Sept. 20 and Dare County votes Sept. 22.

New Hanover County and Asheville vote Jan. 16. That month, in as yet unscheduled elections, Sunset Beach, Southport and Long Beach will consider the mixed-drink issue.

Orange County is considered a prime candidate for liquor by the drink by both opponents and supporters of the issue. In the statewide referendum held in 1973, Mecklenburg, Wake and Orange counties were the only counties voting for mixed-drinks. Southern Pines is also seen as a likely candidate, but both sides will admit that Sanford, Louisburg, Black Mountain and Dare County are other matters. And the victory in Mecklenburg is not thought to have helped the dry cause.

"The only hope the drys had in Southern Pines was to turn the momentum around," said Jim Godfrey, a leader of the mixed-drink forces there. "And the only way they could do that was if Charlotte (Mecklenburg County) went down the drain."

In Orange, liquor by the drink supporter Toni Ewell, agreed. "I think we will definitely win now," said Ms. Ewell, chairman of the Orange County Citizens for Local Option.

However, a new Christian Action League chapter in Orange hopes to beat mixed drinks with votes from northern Orange around Hillsborough.

In the 1973 referendum Black Mountain voters opposed mixed drinks by 619-355. This time, only the opponents have mounted a campaign for votes.

Farmers Market

According to Samuel N. Uzzell, assistant agricultural extension agent, plans are under way for a Farmer's Market for the Greenville and Pitt County area.

The market will probably be a small curb type where producers can sell fresh produce directly from the farm to the consumer. Uzzell said the market may open by next May.

Interested commodity producers should contact Uzzell at the Pitt County Extension office, 203 W. Third St., 7581196.

According to Uzzell, meetings will be held this fall with potential growers to make ground rules for farm market operations.

Meeting By Rose FHA

The first meeting of the J. H. Rose High School chapter of the Future Homemakers of America met Friday to elect officers and name members to committees.

Elected officers were as follows: Angela Best, president; Carla Avery, vice president; Teresa Taylor, secretary; Clayton Staton, treasurer; Kim McRoy, reporter.

Committee members were as follows: Brenda Smith, Jackie Mitchell, Tina Rawls, Carla Avery, Robin Barnhill, Planning; Braxton Gray, Chauncette Dixon, Emma Reeves, Cindy Mercer, Lora Arrington, John Walton, Program; Brenda Smith, Angela Johnson, Doug Edwards, Carlton Wilson, Refreshment; John Walton, Braxton Gray, Lora Arrington, Gwennetta Teel, Kathy Miller, Registration; John Walton and Janice Manning, Relaxer.

The next meeting will be Friday and every fourth Friday during the school year. Marion G. Wilkes is the club advisor.

LWV Committee Meets Tuesday

The Criminal Justice Committee of the League of Women Voters will meet Tuesday at 8 p.m. at 406 Rotary Avenue.

The meeting will focus on plans for the coming year, as well as formulation of a statement to be presented at the Governor's Conference on Crime Control, to be held here later this month. All present and former members of this committee, as well as any other interested citizens, are encouraged to attend. For further information, one may call 752-5296.

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦95 ♠KQJ10763 ♦852 ♣6
Partner opens the bidding with one diamond. What do you respond?
A.—The choice is between a response of three hearts and four hearts. We recommend the more aggressive action for two reasons: (1) Partner will be reluctant to move over three hearts if he is short in your suit for fear of two trump losers when, in fact, your suit is capable of playing for one loser opposite a void! (2) You have length in partner's suit, which increases the trick-taking potential of your hand. With a different distribution or concentration of high cards we would be content with three hearts.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦AK83 ♥954 ♦K6 ♣QJ104
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
1 ♦ Pass 3 ♦ Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Partner's jump is forcing, so we must bid, but we do not relish the rebid. Three no trump might be our only makeable game. However, we cannot bid it because we do not have a heart stopper. The only solution is a waiting bid of three diamonds. Even though partner might think our hand is unbalanced, that seems to be the lesser of evils because it doesn't bypass our probable game.

Q.3—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦5 ♥A1072 ♦83 ♣K109843
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
3 ♦ 4 ♦ Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—If partner feels he is strong enough to force you to select a contract at the five-level, you surely have enough strength to contract for a small slam. We would make the straightforward response of six clubs. If partner passes, fine. Should he correct to six diamonds, we would recorrect to six hearts. (On this sequence partner would be marked with a heart-diamond twosuit.)

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦KQ1052 ♥AK ♦A83 ♣A103
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 4 ♦ Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—Although North's bid is preemptive, it is difficult to imagine him making that bid without the ace of spades, a minor suit card and a singleton. That should give you reasonable play for slam, so we would take a shot at six spades.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦K7 ♥AJ872 ♦KQ83 ♣95
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ Pass 3 ♥ Pass
4 ♥ Pass Pass 4 ♦ ?
What action do you take?

A.—Double. You have a minimum hand with nearly a quarter of your values in the opponents' suit. Since you are likely to incur a minus score in five hearts, you must warn partner not to bid again. If you pass at this point, which is forcing, partner will place you with little or nothing in spades, and is likely to make the wrong decision.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦A95 ♥AK843 ♦KQ ♣874
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
2 ♥ Pass 2 ♦ Pass
4 ♥ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—The purpose of your two-spade bid was to prepare for a slam try if North jumped to game over two spades. Even though North has not shown much more than a minimum, the fact that you have so many controls could mean that slam depends on no more than your partner's club holding. You can highlight this by bidding five diamonds, even though this entails a slight risk in that partner, too, could have three losing clubs.

Q.7—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦AK6 ♥AK1072 ♦92 ♣875
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ 1 ♦ 2 ♥ Pass
3 ♦ Pass 3 NT Pass
4 ♦ Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—There are only two reasons why North would refuse to play three no trump—either his hand is too weak and distributional to play in no trump, or he is interested in slam. In either case, it would be wrong to rebid your hearts or repeat your no trump bid (which would be natural, not Blackwood). The correct action is a cue-bid of four spades, telling partner you have a good hand and allowing him to make the final decision.

Q.8—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦AJ73 ♥AJ1082 ♦6 ♣KQ6
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
Pass 1 ♦ Dble. 1 ♦
Dble. Pass Pass 2 ♦
Pass 3 ♦ ?
What do you bid now?

A.—It looks as though West was taking advantage of the vulnerability to throw a monkey wrench into the auction. Partner has shown good spades by making a penalty double of one spade, and you have much more than you might have had for a takeout double. Bid three spades.

Have you been running into trouble? Let Charles Goren help you find your way through the maze of DOUBLES for penalties and for takeout. For a copy of his DOUBLES booklet, send $1.85 to "Goren-Doubles," c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07048. Make checks payable to NEWSPAPERBOOKS.

The Bellweather Referendum

In Mecklenburg County mixed drink sales were approved Friday in what had to be a bellweather referendum for the state.

It was the first referendum held in North Carolina under the new law allowing local option votes as approved by the State Legislature this year.

It was not surprising that Mecklenburg voters approved mixed drinks — sentiment for liquor-by-the-drink had long been centered in that populous area. What was surprising was the large margin by which Mecklenburg voters approved of mixed drinks.

There had been strong opposition from anti mixed drink forces in Charlotte and some observers, while feeling the measure would pass, were predicting it would be close. Instead, Mecklenburg voters approved mixed drinks by a margin of over 2 to 1.

Of course, a one vote majority would have made mixed drinks just as legal for Mecklenburg County, but the first referendum was being watched throughout the state for an indication of how other areas might go.

Southern Pines, Black Mountain, Orange County, Sanford, Louisburg and Dare County all have referendums set soon. If liquor-by-the-drink carries easily in these areas, as it has in Mecklenburg, we can expect to see votes called in many counties that have not yet taken any action on the matter.

No doubt, the issue will fail to carry in some counties, but the Mecklenburg vote is an indication that approval of mixed drinks is not going to be difficult to obtain from voters in many areas.

Status Symbol Labels

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

DUBLIN, Eire (AP) — For some years now in lieu of nipping lobby ashtrays, which in some emerging and quite a few declining nations is deemed a felony, this itinerant Toscanini of the typewriter has been collecting hotel labels as a souvenir of his to-ing and fro-ing on the face of the earth.

These rapidly vanishing status symbols of the inkeeper's trade are the colorful gummed stickers that bell captains and hall porters in the posher hostels freely affix to one's impedita to gainsome free publicity for the premises and provide another reason for giving them a pourboire.

The paste-on ad gimmicks impart to both the house and its departing guest a glossy aura of prestige. They also serve to cover up the scuffs and rips in one's luggage and even keep the old carpetbag in one piece against the onslaughts of morose airport baggage handlers and violence-prone stevedores.

Forty or 50 overlapping labels gaily trumpeting the traveler's peregrinations from "The Ritz" in Lisbon to the "Crillon" in Paris to the "Savoy" in London to the "Shah Abbas" in Isfahan and "The Regent" in Fiji might not save a calfskin three suiter from being cleft in twain by a forklift truck at Orly Field or from being agandoned on a dolly in the monsoon rains of Panang.

They might, perchance, keep the outer skin attached to the frame long enough for Uncle Sam's customs men to have a go at it, with their singular skill and leaving everything hanging out at the hinges, before a New York taxi driver applies the coup de mort by slamming down his trunk lid.

A global spread of fading hotel labels on a wellworn Galdstone bag gives fair warning to porters and bellhops everywhere on the spreading palms circuit that here is an experienced traveler not prone to giving lavish rewards for surly service. Ice cubes, quick, my good fellow.

The desk clerk knows straight away not to settle this lodger next to the elevator shafts, directly below the disco bandstand or across from the church steeple that bongs the quarter hours all through the night, unless he wants to hear language that will wilt his carnation and blow the computer.

In addition, when there's no place to go and no readies to get there with, the grounded globe trotter can always sit on the cellar stairs dreaming of the far away places, the bygone vacations and long-spent expense accounts spelled out in living color on a dusty portmanteau or busted carry-all.

A Major Disaster That Didn't Happen

It didn't turn out that way, but a fire involving a gasoline truck at Falkland Elementary School Friday could have been a disaster.

Instead rural fire departments the Falkland Life Support Squad and law enforcement officers responded promptly to bring the fire under control. A school employee and the truck driver reported the fire to the school principal and the children were quickly evacuated to a safe area.

It was as good a test of emergency procedures as any of the organizations could receive.

State Policy Off Track?

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Over the past 12 months North Carolina ran hard to get off the bottom in manufacturing wages. She failed.

We remain the lowest paying state in the nation, and can no longer thank God even for Mississippi — average pay there is $5 a week higher than this state's $176.80. Then come South Carolina, Florida, Tennessee, Georgia and the rest of the nation. The national average is $246.04. The Southern average is $199.75.

What's going wrong? Labor Commissioner John Brooks thinks it is because the state for years has committed itself to wooing and winning any industrial prospect in sight regardless of how low-paying it might be.

Further, he doesn't see that changing even with all the hoopla currently surrounding development of a Balanced Growth Policy for North Carolina.

Not Policy

There is a distinct difference between industrial growth and economic growth, Brooks argues, even though most people equate one with the other. Landing numerous industrial plants without concentrating on those paying the highest wages still won't boost Tar Heel salaries.

The heart of the emerging Balanced Growth policy is dispersal of industry to small towns and rural areas so North Carolinians can keep their roots at home.

"That is speaking to popular notions ... give everybody a plant. That isn't policy", Brooks said bluntly.

"And the state is certainly not in need of 10 more industry hunters and an airplane to go flying about finding prospects. That only appeals to the public," he said.

The heart of the matter is to provide skilled technicians in the job market, the commissioner believes. Not just "helpers", because the state is already training plenty of those. But the journeymen craftsmen in a host of fields who can command salaries of $30,000 a year are in critical supply.

Top industrial prospects run surveys and find a shortage of skilled labor, Brooks said. They then look elsewhere. Meanwhile, this state continues to recruit any industry available.

BILL NOBLITT

Now such lower skill plants may be needed, Brooks concedes, to provide jobs for those people not qualified for higher ones. But he is convinced that North Carolina must make a strong commitment now to training the people for tomorrow's economic growth. "Even if we did that, we couldn't produce results for several years", he added.

Priorities

The production of a Balanced Growth Policy is of little concern to Brooks. His real concern is with the General Assembly. "The Legislature needs to reconsider its priorities instead of always adding to formal education.

"The universities, the kindergartens, teacher salaries — those always come first. We still ignore that more than half the high School population which doesn't go to college. We need to take seriously the need to train people for really good paying jobs," Brooks says.

Two side effects of this action would be better control over inflation since the cost of skilled labor in a tight market is a big factor in the cost of building a house or producing goods, and reduced crime as more people get better jobs and more income without having to resort to property crimes, Brooks believes.

Brooks said he is attempting to have influence in the production of the Balanced Growth Policy and in shaping how the state promotes economic growth, but isn't certain just yet whether his ideas are being considered seriously.

A New Senate Building

WASHINGTON — I must admit I was as critical as most people when I heard that the Senate's new, ornate office building, originally budgeted for $45 million, would now cost an estimated $122 million, and that the way things were going might well climb to $200 million by the time it was completed in 1981.

But then I talked to a lobbyist who persuaded me that the building was absolutely essential, no matter what it cost.

"It's impossible," he told me, "for lobbyists to do their work in the two Senate buildings now in existence. We have no place to sit while waiting to see senators. I've been in offices where there have been so many lobbyists that half of us had to sit on floor."

"What about the halls?" I said. "I thought that's where you people buttonholed most of the senators and their staffs."

"The halls used to be okay for lobbying," he replied. "But you don't realize how the lobbyist population has exploded in the last few years. We have lobbyists lobbying lobbyists. The halls of the two buildings are mob scenes. You'll start working on a senator and another lobbyist will suddenly elbow you out of the way and without so much as an 'excuse me, start making his pitch for some other bill. Government can't operate under these conditions. That's why it's essential that we have this new Senate building no matter what it costs."

"Can't you lobby away from the Capitol at a nice restaurant or club?"

"No way. You have to be where the action is. When a bill is being debated on the floor you have to move in right away and warn the senator about the pitfalls in it. If you can't get to him immediately he might not realize how dangerous an amendment is to a lobby's cause."

"You're in a tough business," I said.

"Of course I'm in a tough business. But that's what I'm being paid for. At the same time we're being impeded at every turn. If it was just the lobbyists clogging up the halls I wouldn't mind. But now you have amateurs coming in every day wanting to see their senators, and the television and press people keep getting in your way. It's a jungle up there in those old senate offices and the only thing that is going to save us is a new building."

"But everyone feels that with the cost of government skyrocketing the Senate should be more careful about overruns on its own offices."

(Greensboro Daily News)

It's some consolation, we suppose, that American businessman Francis Crawford received a suspended sentence for alleged currency violations in a Moscow court. It could have been much worse.

Crawford, the Moscow representative for International Harvester Co. was dragged out of his car at a traffic light last June 12 and tossed into the city's Lefortovo prison. His arrest and treatment — including many hours of grueling interrogation — were of a piece with the harassment of American newsmen in Moscow in recent months.

Crawford's arrest, it now appears, was crude Soviet retaliation for the recent arrest in this country of two Soviet United Nations employees accused of spying. There had been talk of an agreement to exchange Crawford for the Soviets. But the Carter administration insisted that Crawford's case be processed first so no specious link between Crawford and espionage could be made. Under the terms of the sentence slapped on Crawford, he is at least free to leave the country.

The Soviets' handling of Crawford's trial was ludicrous — not unlike the courtroom charade used to convict Soviet dissident Anatoly Scharansky a couple of months ago. Crawford was accused of falling in with a nasty crowd of Soviet black market currency manipulators.

American observers in the courtroom openly guffawed when the Soviet prosecutor, reaching the crescendo of his closing statement, imperiously asked where Crawford could have purchased those extra travelers' checks he said he used to pay his way around Moscow — at the American Embassy? The prosecutor, woefully ignorant of the habits of the American tourist abroad, didn't realize you can get them down at the friendly Moscow American Express office.

Crawford's release, the fruit of months of intense State Department maneuvering, is welcome nonetheless. He could have been consigned to a maximum of eight years on a Siberian rock pile. Still, his summary arrest, trial and conviction leaves a bitter taste. Which American businessman will be the Kremlin's next plaything?

THE INSIDE REPORT

The New Right vs. Cohen

By ROWLAND EVANS

and ROBERT NOVAK

AUGUSTA, Me. — In a paradox of ominous import for the Republican party, Rep. William Cohen's bid for the Senate seat now held by liberal Democratic Sen. William Hathaway is threatened by a "constitutional conservative" candidate running as an independent and backed by the national "New Right" political apparatus.

The objective: to transfer enough votes from Cohen to 30-year-old Hayes Gahagan, the Bible-quoting independent, to guarantee the reelection of Hathaway, a liberal Democrat, over an impure Republican. That would wreck the Republican party's most glittering prospect for defeating an incumbent Democratic senator.

The paradox lies in the fact that moderate-liberal Cohen is supported by the Republican conservative establishment, including Ronald Reagan, Rep. Jack Kemp and Utah's Sen. Orrin Hatch.

Praising Cohen's "excellent record" as a three-term congressman, Kemp on Aug. 14 wrote Maine businessmen urging "strong support" for Cohen. Reagan personally endorsed Cohen here Feb. 9.

Reagan went further. He telephoned Cyril Joly, a conservative who ran Reagan's 1976 presidential campaign here and resigned as Republican national committeeman to work for Gahagan, in a vain effort to dissuade Joly from breaking with his party and Bill Cohen. Joly and state Rep. Walter Hichens are the only regular Republicans backing Gahagan.

At 38, Cohen is one of the bright, young stars in the beleaguered Republican party. But he is far from toeing the line of ideological purity demanded by the New Right, which wants to bar him from the Senate in the effort to mold the party to orthodoxy. "Case is gone and Javits is going," one New Right leader told us privately, referring to long-time liberal Republican Sens. Clifford Case and Jacob K. Javits. Case was defeated by conservative Jeff Bell in the New Jersey senatorial primary; Javits is 74 years old and may not run again.

Thus, when Gahagan formally announced his candidacy July 4, flanked by a replica of the Liberty Bell, the New Right offered immediate political goodies:

Campaign indoctrination courses by the National Conservative Political Action Committee for both Gahagan and his campaign manager; $1,000 contribution from NCPAC plus political "services"; $1,000 from the Committee for the Survival of a Free Congress; $500 from the Coors employees' political action committee; campaign school for two Gahagan youth volunteers, courtesy Young Americans for Freedom.

Cohen now holds a margin easily comfortable enough to elect him — in a two-man race. But Gahagan may peel off 5 to 10 percent of Cohen's vote — possibly enough to reelect Hathaway.

This would have been laughable four years ago. That was before James B. Longley, running as a conservative independent, stun-

Strength For Today

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

Millions of children today, in contrast to the situation earlier in our history, are growing up without religion playing any part whatsoever in their education.

They get little religious education in the home. Few of them go to Sunday-school, and those who do get religious instruction for less than an hour one day a week. In the higher brackets of education religion is eliminated and often treated as a matter of no concern.

A situation of this sort will eventually affect the life of a nation. President William Lord, of Dartmouth, writing many years ago and seeing the trend which was beginning even in his own day said, "Neither liberty, nor learning, nor wealth, nor arms, can stay the decline of a people among whom the redeeming spirit of Christianity has no permanent abode."

His words become more portentous as the years pass. — Elisha Douglass

Comglomerate Allure Emerges

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Though their collective image took a severe beating a few years back, the diversified companies known as conglomerates have hung on to a prominent place in American industry.

At the moment, few observers foresee a return to Wall Street's conglomerate craze of the 1960s, when a good many companies went on acquisition sprees merely for the sake of making acquisitions.

In the siege of recessions and bear markets that followed, a lot of the shaky empires that were built up in those years collapsed or had to be at least partly dismantled.

But recently conglomerate stocks have shown signs of regaining some of their former allure for investors on Wall Street.

Conglomerates' continuing importance to the economy is evidenced by the brand names that still represent them — Canada Dry soft drinks (Norton Simon Inc.), Fruit-of-the-Loom garments (Northwest Industries), Kent cigarettes (Loews Corp.), Gibson musical instruments (Norlin Corp.) and Paramount Pictures (Gulf & Western Industries), to name a few of the most familiar.

Actually, there is no "conglomerate industry." Business and securities analysts tend to group the companies together simply because they are too diversified to fit any of the traditional industry categories.

"We use the term

'conglomerate' to describe those multi-industry companies commonly included in that grouping even though a 1960s definition of the term no longer is applicable," the brokerage firm of E.F. Hutton & Co. said in a recent report.

"The wheeling and dealing of flamboyant conglomerateurs using 'Chinese paper' and accounting gimmicks to acquire multi-armed empires has been severely restricted since the 'good old days,'" wrote analyst Roland Williams.

Among present day conglomerates, he said, there are "no two even remotely alike or guided by the same destinies."

"The quality of companies; growth prospects and market appeal among conglomerates range from very high to very low. Some of the old-line multi-industry companies such as Minnesota Mining, Textron and TRW were only partially involved in the frenetic acquisition activity of the 1960s and required fewer adjustments in the post-acquisition digestion period."

The conglomerates' return to respectability has been accompanied, as one might expect, by an improved showing in the prices of their stocks, many of which nosedived between 1968 and 1974.

In the 90 days ended Sept. 1, the Value Line Investment Survey reported, the average conglomerate stock price rose 11.5 percent, outpacing the 8.5 percent gain recorded by the Dow Jones average.

Virginian Is New Miss America

By MARK CRANE

Associated Press Writer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP)

Kylene Barker opposes legalization of marijuana, thinks the proposed Equal Rights Amendment goes too far and isn't terribly interested in politics. But she promises her reign as Miss America won't be controversial.

The 22-year-old daughter of a Galax, Va., meat cutter told reporters after her selection as the 51st Miss America that she considers herself to be "like the girl next door" and wants "to be friends with everybody."

"As Miss America, I'll have to be careful how I answer questions," the former cheerleader and baton twirler said Sunday. "I just might refuse to answer some questions" about hotly debated issues.

Miss Barker, who is the shortest Miss America since 1926 and the first to be chosen from Virginia, said two of the people she admires most are Jacqueline Onassis "for her fashion innovation" and actor Burt Reynolds.

"I love all his movies and I would like to meet him," the 5-foot-4 blonde told reporters.

Miss Barker defeated 49 other state contestants Saturday night for a $20,000 scholarship and more than $50,000 in personal appearance bookings that go with being Miss America.

Her talent performance of an acrobatic dance to "Rocky" and "Feel So Good" treated the audience of 18,000 at Convention Hall to a spectacle of aerial cartwheels, splits and backward somersaults.

Miss Barker, who said being genuine is the most important quality Miss America should have, said she "enjoys the advantages of being a woman," like having men open car doors for her and being taken to dinner. "I don't get upset when someone calls me a girl," she added.

She said she probably would vote for the ERA, but that she has reservations about how it might affect such areas as military service.

Miss Barker said she has not tried marijuana and does not plan to.

"In junior high school, I did a research paper on heroin and other harder drugs," she said. "I feel that if you start out with marijuana, then you could eventually go to the harder drugs."

The green-eyed swimming enthusiast said religion should be an important part of life for American youth. Asked if she was a religious person, she said, "I am a Christian and I was baptized."

Miss Barker said she did not vote in the last presidential election because she missed a promised ride home from college.

She described herself as a "fairly conservative" person, but said she never got involved with politics.

Miss Barker, an apparel design and fashion merchandising graduate of Virginia Tech who has designed many of her clothes, said her ambition is to open a women's clothing shop in Roanoke.

"I feel that I am a typical American citizen," she said. "I think Miss America should look like an all-American person, like the girl next door, and not someone superficial that people are afraid to touch. I don't want people to put me on a pedestal."

Derailment Killed Three

MIAMISBURG, Ohio (AP) — Two women and a month-old baby were killed when a Conrail freight train derailed and crashed into a two-story house, authorities said. Seven people suffered minor injuries.

One freight car stood inside the ruins of the house where the bodies were found and another was part way into the structure. Other cars in the 20-car train were piled nearly as high as the house.

"They just stacked up like a car wreck," said Police Chief Ronald McBride. "They squeezed together like an accordion."

The dead were identified as 4-week-old Michael Joseph Call and Kathy Barkalow, 17, both of Miamisburg; and Linda Humerick, 26, of Germantown, Ohio.

Seven people were taken to Grandview Ambulatory Center, where six were treated for minor injuries and released, officials said. The seventh, a bystander who was not in the house, was kept at the hospital and was reported in good condition today.

Police said they believed they had accounted for all the people in the house but that they were still searching the debris.

Police and Conrail officials were still trying to determine the cause of the derailment, which squeezed most of the cars against an abandoned feed mill.

ned this state by getting elected governor. Longley, who is not running for reelection, is neutral in the Senate contest, but his precedent-setting 1974 victory, coupled with his extraordinarily high popularity today, has set an enticing example. Maine's notoriously unstructured voters are disillusioned with politics-as-usual; Gahagan's simplistic pledge for drastic reduction of federal spending and interference in state affairs and against what he calls "the flim-flam" of traditional politics could have some impact on independent-minded Down-Easters.

Cohen has formidable assets. "Billy is a smart politician," a top Hathaway operative told us, "but more important, he is a captivating courtier. Women look into his blue eyes and he sweeps them away."

He has "swept away" maverick Democratic Mayor Lillian Caron of Lewiston, Maine's Democratic stronghold, who is campaigning for him there and in the heavily Franco-American hamlets of the St. John River valley. William Rogers, former national commander of the American Legion, heads his veterans' committee — a pointed rebuttal to New Right charges that Cohen is soft on defense.

Indeed, the New Right case against Cohen is spotty. He opposed the Panama Canal treaties (but not early enough to suit the New Right); the defense-oriented American Security Council rates him 78 percent (compared to Hathaway's 20 percent) on "key" national security issues; he is an original sponsor of the Kemp-Roth tax reduction bill; he has serious doubts about the new SALT treaty.

The New Right's nightmare is not Cohen's record but the spectre of a formidable moderate Republican in the Senate who is convinced that there must be room for diversity in the Republican party — a conviction that elected Republican officeholders overwhelmingly share.

Buchwald...

Some taxpayers worry that if the senators get more office space they'll hire larger staffs.

"Larger staffs mean more efficient legislation. The extra space will make everybody's work easier. For example, it isn't generally known, but a great deal of the legislation in this country is originally drawn up by lobbyists. If we could have a place to work in a senator's office it would speed up things tremendously."

"Do you mean to say you're hoping to get desk space in the new Senate office building?"

"Not really desk space. But it would be nice if a desk and typewriter were available so we could type an amendment as a bill is being proposed on the floor."

"I imagine the private restaurant on the top of the new Senate office building will be very helpful for you people, too," I said.

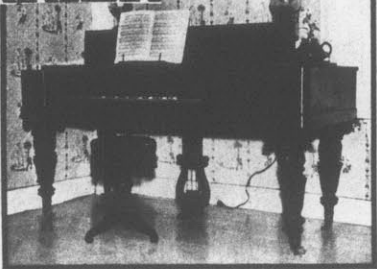

"That was my idea. I lobbied it through at the time," he said. "I pointed out that as long as they were spending so much money on a new office building, the least the senators could do would be to have a restaurant with a view. It's one thing to vote money for the departments of government, but it brings the reality much closer to home when you can actually see them."

"You make a strong case for spending so much of the taxpayers' money for another Senate building."

"If I couldn't make a strong case," he replied, "I wouldn't be here."

White House Says Vesco Looked To Carter Aides

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer
THURMONT, Md. (AP) — The White House says fugitive financier Robert L. Vesco tried but failed to get several of President Carter's closest advisers — including his choice as secretary of state — to help end Vesco's legal problems.

Jody Powell, White House press secretary, said emissaries for Vesco, who is hiding out in the Bahamas from trial on five federal indictments, made an approach in December 1976 to Cyrus R. Vance, after he was designated secretary of state, and apparently sought aid from Attorney General Griffin B. Bell.

In addition, Powell told a group of reporters at the Mideast summit press center here, a Vesco hiring wanted to seek help from Carter's principal assistant, Hamilton Jordan, but was dissuaded from doing so by Richard Harden, a lower-ranking presidential aide.

Powell said, however, the administration wants to arrest Vesco and bring him to trial. He produced statements from administration officials that the Vesco matter had gotten highest-level attention.

Powell met with reporters late Sunday after syndicated columnist Jack Anderson reported that Vesco directed a "high pressure lobbying campaign" at Jordan and Atlanta attorney Charles Kirbo, a Carter intimate.

Kirbo and Jordan both angrily denied Anderson's accusations, saying they had never made any effort to interfere on Vesco's behalf or ever been asked to do so.

Powell acknowledged that an Albany, Ga., attorney, Spencer Lee, was retained in Vesco's behalf. He said Lee, a Carter campaign manager in 1976, was a longtime Jordan friend from the same hometown.

Anderson's column, distributed to newspapers last week for release today, originally began by saying that "President Carter's two closest confidants, top aide Hamilton Jordan and Atlanta attorney Charles Kirbo, have been linked to a $10 million political fix."

But Anderson sent newspapers a revised version of the column over the weekend, eliminating the reference to Jordan and Kirbo being "linked to a $10 million political fix."

The administration mounted an extraordinary effort to counter Anderson's original allegations. This effort included:

—The hiring by Jordan on Saturday of Edward Bennett Williams, celebrated Washington trial lawyer, and issuance by Jordan of a statement containing a thinly veiled threat to sue Anderson. —The convening of at least two unannounced White House briefings at which Jordan, Powell and officials of the Departments of Justice and State sought to refute Anderson's original column.

Anderson said Sunday he rewrote parts of his column because the Justice Department later provided him new information about its efforts to get Vesco back to the United States.

The columnist originally reported the department abandoned efforts to extradite Vesco from Costa Rica, where he lived until he fled to the Bahamas last May 3, five days before the inauguration of a new president who had made his presence a campaign issue. In his revision, Anderson said the department "quietly switched tactics" to seek Vesco's expulsion.

The columnist acknowledged "there was no hard evidence they (Jordan and Kirbo) lifted a finger to help" Vesco. But he contended that on the question of whether they were contacted, "there are telephone messages and letters."

Jordan called Anderson's story "an incredible fabrication and despicable lie." Kirbo called it "an absolute lie by an irresponsible reporter."

Anderson said Vesco interpreted abandonment of the extradition effort and the transfer of Terence Todman from his ambassadorial post in Costa Rica "as a signal that the fix was in."

Shortly thereafter, the columnist said, Vesco began machinations that "transformed a $42,500 payment into a multimillion-dollar stock deal," which he suggested was arranged as a would-be payoff.

Anderson said he had documents showing "the two ringleaders of the Georgia group" were Lee and R.L. Herring, now in jail under $500,000 bond awaiting trial on unrelated fraud charges.

structure will carry assorted farm and contractor supplies and will use a self-service merchandising system, according to Lee. Commodities include farm machinery parts, power and hand tools, pumps, drill presses, and a variety of equipment.

Tobacco harvest is nearing completion in Pitt County, as is the corn crop. As good drying conditions continue, more and more corn will be coming out of the fields.

How far away are peanuts from harvest? The peanuts that are on sandy light land and may have suffered more from dry weather could possibly be a week or ten days away from digging. The majority of Pitt County peanuts need two weeks to a month before optimum digging time arrives. It would be time well spent to pull a few plants throughout the field to check for maturity from now on.

Even though most peanut fields were planted about three weeks later than normal, the good growing conditions of the summer have enabled the majority of Pitt County's 6,500 acres of peanuts to catch up and get back on a normal schedule. Most of the peanuts in our area are of the Florigiant variety, and if planted in a normal year between April 25 and May 10, should theoretically be ready around Sept. 20. Keep in mind the wide variations in maturity that can be expected, perhaps, even in the same field.

The peanut plant has a fruiting period of about two months. While some peanuts are maturing underground, there are others on the same plant that are flowering and pegging. So, it's no small task to determine the best dates to dig the most mature peanuts without losing too many over-mature pods. If digging begins too early to harvest the first pods, then later pods may be too immature to get top yield. On the other hand, if digging is too late, the more mature peanuts will begin sprouting and will shed off the vines and be left in the ground. The weather also becomes a more adverse factor later in the season.

To determine the best time to dig "goobers," pull a few plants every few days throughout a field and shell all the pods. If the kernels are filling out the pods and are tightly bound in the shell and the inside of the peanut shell has begun to change from white to brown, then the peanuts are getting ripe. If many of the stems have begun to decay, then digging should proceed very soon. Other clues to ripe peanuts are yellowing foliage, prominent veins on the peanut hulls and a dark coloration on the inside of the hulls. The leaves may also be spotted and have a tendency to drop.

Presently there is a test in Pitt County where the presence of an amino acid, agrinine, is being monitored weekly. The peanuts are dug each Tuesday and collected. They are then tested at the Food Science Laboratory at North Carolina State University. The level of agrinine is checked and measured against data gathered and developed in Georgia by Dr. Clyde Young. This particular field of peanuts in Pitt County was approximately 27 days away from optimum maturity when measured by that Oct. 2 will be optimum picking for this field. This is only a rough guide in determining maturity and much more work will need to be done in North Carolina on this technique.

So, be sure that you put plenty of foot prints in the field while checking for maturity and late season disease. There will be a strong demand for extra large and fancy kernels this year. Knowing when to harvest peanuts this year can really pay off, often as much as 1,000 pounds per acre.

Cars Collided Here Yesterday

Cars driven by Lou B. Harris of 409 Church St. and Lyndell Jerome Eaton of 1503B Halifax St. collided about 3:10 p.m. Sunday at the intersection of Evans and Tenth Streets.

Police estimated damage at $200 to the Harris car and $500 to the Eaton auto.

Flash Flood Is Receding

ST. CHARLES, Va. (AP) — State Highway Department crews have been called in to help clean up mud and debris left when a settlement dam broke and engulfed this southwest Virginia community with up to 5 feet of water in some places.

About 5 feet of water surrounded the St. Charles Elementary School and the school's ball park, but no injuries had been reported late Sunday night, said Lee County Sheriff Paul Harber.

The sheriff said the dam to a settlement pond, part of a stip job above St. Charles on Bonnie Blue Hollow, broke about 6:30 p.m. Sunday. He said he had no official report but estimated damages at several thousand dollars.

Flash flooding triggered by heavy rains apparently caused the pond behind the dam to overflow into the town, Harber said. He quoted an eyewitness as saying that "if it rained any more, we would lose the town."

The eyewitness reported the streets of the community were "as turbulent as a river and as uncontrollable," said Harber of the third flood to hit the area in the last two years.

Harber said the waters had receded about 10 p.m., but he said the accumulation of debris and mud would take "two or three days to clean up." The cleanup operations were under way Sunday night.

Engineers Will Meet Thursday

The Northeastern Tarheel Chapter of the American Institute of Industrial Engineers will meet Thursday, 6:30 p.m., at the Holiday Inn Restaurant, Greenville, for a social. At 7:15 p.m., dinner will be served with the business meeting following at 8 p.m.

Cost per person will be $6.50, which includes set-ups. Officers will be elected at this time. Members are urged to attend.

Band Boosters Meet Tuesday

The Greenville City Schools Bands Boosters Club will meet Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Rose High School band room.

The proposed club budget will be discussed. All parents and friends of the bands are invited to attend the first meeting of the new school year.

The monthly meetings will be held on the second Tuesday.

Still Champion Seed-Spitter

PARDEEVILLE, Wis. (AP) — Lee Roberts of Rio became a four-time champion as he spit a watermelon seed 34 feet, 10 inches to win the men's title in the annual U.S. watermelon seed spitting championships.

Roberts, the defending champion who also won in 1972 and 1974, topped by two feet the distance of second-place Dan Fotuanski of Mosinee.

Other winners Sunday included George and Dorothy Herold of Portage, with a total distance of 33 feet in mixed doubles. In the four-man team category, Kent Steele, Kent Neff, Wally Gunther and Jeff Williams, all of Pardeeville, won with a combined distance of 115 feet, 6 inches.

SERVICES TONIGHT

Services will be held tonight, 7:30, at St. Luke's Free Will Baptist Church, Norris St., Greenville. Featured speaker will be Ernest Dupree of New York, N. Y. The Rev. Hattie Mae Cobb, pastor, invites the public to attend.

Held Lavish Pooch Party

SEATTLE (AP) — It was Taras' sixth birthday and a party seemed in order — champagne, presents and formal pageanties.

Not many dogs have lavish birthday parties with 200 formally dressed human guests and a belly dancer for entertainment.

"Taras is sort of my substitute child," says his owner, Darlene Novak, a Northwest Airlines stewardess who gives the Samoyed a birthday party every year.

The party went into the early hours Sunday with yacht cruises, disco dancing and door prizes that were donated. The winners received evenings for two at discos and restaurants, sporting equipment, tennis lessons and dog grooming coupons.

Staff at the party wore T-shirts with pictures of Taras and bow ties. Tuxedo-clad guests wore name tags with the pictures of Taras. The cake was decorated with a picture of Taras and was flanked by an ice sculpture of — you guessed it — Taras.

Taras received "oodles of bones," a personalized towel, a Waterford crystal drinking bowl, and a singing telegram.

Closing Door To 'Lawful Dictator'

By STEVE GERSTEL

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A 40-year-old "time bomb" is about to be defused, ending the possibility of a "lawful dictatorship" being set up in the United States during a national emergency.

Four states of emergency still in force providing the president with sweeping powers in times of crisis will expire on Thursday.

And new legislation will make it possible for Congress to terminate future states of emergency, even if the president objects.

The National Emergencies Act, which terminates the four emergency states and governs such declarations in the future, was passed Sept. 14, 1976.

The two-year delay in implementation was to give the administration a chance to ask Congress for new statutes to replace the 407 laws that a president could have invoked under the states of emergency.

Sen. Charles Mathias, R-Md., the prime mover behind the legislation, said, the two-year-old measure "defuses a time bomb at the heart of government."

"There has been in the United States for upwards of 40 years the potential for lawful dictatorship under the banner of national emergency," Mathias said.

Fourteen States And D.C. Hold Primaries Tuesday

By CLAY F. RICHARDS
UPI Political Writer
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Fourteen states and the District of Columbia hold primaries Tuesday — highlighted by challenges to Democratic Govs. Ella Grasso of Connecticut and Hugh Carey of New York by their lieutenant governors.

The biggest primary day of 1978 features contests for governor in 12 states, Senate races in five, and House contests in all 14.

The races also feature comeback bids by two Republicans: Harold Stassen, running for senator in Minnesota and former Sen. Edward Gurney, a member of the Senate Watergate committee who was later acquitted in a kickback scandal, running for the House in Florida.

For Rep. Fred Richmond, D.N.Y., arrested on charges of soliciting homosexual favors from a young man, the primary is a question of political survival. For Richard Cheney, once Gerald Ford's White House chief of staff, a win in a Wyoming House race could launch a political career.

The bitterest races are in New York and Connecticut. Lt. Gov. Mary Ann Krupak turned on Carey the day he announced for re-election and said she would run against him rather than with him.

The same is true in Connecticut where Lt. Gov. Robert Killian has lashed out at the record of the governor he has served with for the past four years.

In Minnesota the death of Hubert Humphrey means both the state's Senate seats are open this year. The governorship also is on the ballot, and the climate has swung to the right since Humphrey died.

Democrats Sen. Wendell Anderson and Gov. Rudy Perpich are both favored to win nomination, but could lose to Republican challengers in the fall.

Here at a glance are some of the other primary races:

Wyoming — Democratic Gov. Ed Herschler, opposed by Margaret McKinstry, 63, a member of the Cheyenne Community College board, Republican Sen. Clifford Hansen is retiring and six candidates — three in each party — are battling for his seat.

Florida — Democratic Gov. Reubin Askew can't seek another term. Seven Democrats and two Republicans want his job. The most expensive primary race in Florida has resulted with more than $6 million expected to be spent.

Vermont — GOP Gov. Richard Snelling is unopposed, while newspaper publisher Bernard O'Shea and state Rep. Edwin Granal compete for the Democratic nod.

Rhode Island — Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I. has two little known opponents, and is expected to win the nomination, and the November election, easily.

Arizona — Gov. Bruce Babbitt, who became governor last March when Wesley Bolin died, is challenged in the Democratic primary by Dave Moss, who runs a Phoenix brokerage firm. There is a three way Republican primary.

Nevada — Seven Democrats and four Republicans are running for governor. The favorites are Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Rose and Republican Attorney General Robert List.

Colorado — Gov. Richard Lamm is unopposed on the Democratic side. Two state senators, Ted Strickland and Richard Plock, seek the GOP nod. Sen. Floyd Haskell, a Democrat viewed vulnerable in November is unopposed. Republican primary pits Rep. William Armstrong against astronaut Jack Swigert.

New Hampshire — Republican Gov. Meldrim Thomson is favored over former Gov. Wesley Powell and Lucille Lapinskas, a housewife who opposes "dirty books" in schools. Sen. Thomas McIntyre expected to survive Democratic challenger. Raymond Coughlan, a retired Navy engineer.

Maryland — Acting Gov. Blair Lee, a Democrat seeking to win in his own right the job he took over when Gov. Marvin Mandell was convicted of mail fraud, is opposed by Baltimore County Executive Theodore Venetoulis and two others. Former Sen. J. Glenn Beall is favored over two candidates in the Republican governors' race.

Minnesota — Anderson is expected to win renomination and his likely Republican opponent will be Rudy Boschwitz, owner of a chain of plywood stores, whose opponent is former Gov. Harold Stassen. In the other Senate race, Rep. Donald Fraser and longtime Humphrey associate Bob Short battle for the Democratic nomination, while attorney Dave Durenberger is favored on the Republican side. In the race for governor, incumbent Perpich is expected to survive a Democratic primary challenge, but faces a tough November battle against Rep. Al Quié, the heavy favorite in the GOP race.

Wisconsin — Gov. Martin Schreiber is in the Democratic race with millionaire businessman David Carley. Rep. Robert Kasten and Lee Dreyfus, chancellor at the University of Wisconsin, compete in the GOP governors' race.

Utah — No races for governor or senate. Law professor Ed Firmage and banker Peter Cooke are in the Democratic race for right to face Rep. Dan Marriott this fall.

Washington, D.C. — Mayor Walter Washington, first appointed by Lyndon Johnson in 1967 and then elected in 1974 when the vote was extended to the capital city, faces a strong challenge from City Council President Sterling Tucker and Councilman Marion Barry in a Democratic primary that is tantamount to election.

Assert Chemical Test Proves Schizophrenia

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer
MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Scientists say they have developed a simple chemical test to diagnose schizophrenia, a group of mental disorders believed to affect millions of people.

Dr. Rajendra Varma, a biochemist with Warren State Hospital in Warren, Pa., said Sunday that a chemical test of urine would help back up traditional, imprecise ways of diagnosing the disorder such as watching for changes in behavior and attitudes over a period of time.

She said she knew of no other similar chemical tests.

Schizophrenia is a group of mental disorders that affect people in varying degrees. The condition can occur at all ages, but most frequently begins to appear in young adults.

Sometimes brought on by a traumatic event or another change in a person's life, schizophrenia can be expressed as a detachment from reality, difficulty in making logical associations and a decreased range of emotion.

Doctors treat the disorder primarily with drugs and psychotherapy.

Ms. Varma's work involves measuring the level of glucuronic acid in the urine. Studies of 60 male schizophrenics showed that it was significantly lower in 72 percent of them than in 30 normal males, she said at a briefing during the national meeting of the American Chemical Society.

"As the patient recovers, the values should go up and these values could be coordinated with other tests to check the progress of treatment," Ms. Varma said in an interview.

Tests so far have been with white men age 25 to 45, but work with women is expected soon, she said.

Females normally have lower levels of glucuronic acid, so males were used first to better test the method.

In recent years, scientists have been looking at possible biochemical causes of schizophrenia, focusing on changes in brain chemistry that affect how information is processed or transmitted.

Glucuronic acid is a glycosaminoglycan protein substance that is a component of the blood-brain barrier and certain nerve-cell sites in the brain.

These substances are made naturally in the central nervous system, but studies show they undergo chemical changes because of such environmental factors as learning, experience, stress and emotional changes,

Ms. Varma said.

Changes in brain chemistry that could be involved in schizophrenia therefore could be of genetic or environmental origin, or both.

"The brain is the organ primarily involved in schizophrenia," Ms. Varma said. "Since the brain is not accessible to chemical analysis in the live patients, analysis of the body fluids provides an alternative approach."

Ms. Varma said the test developed by her hospital is inexpensive and comparatively simple to perform.

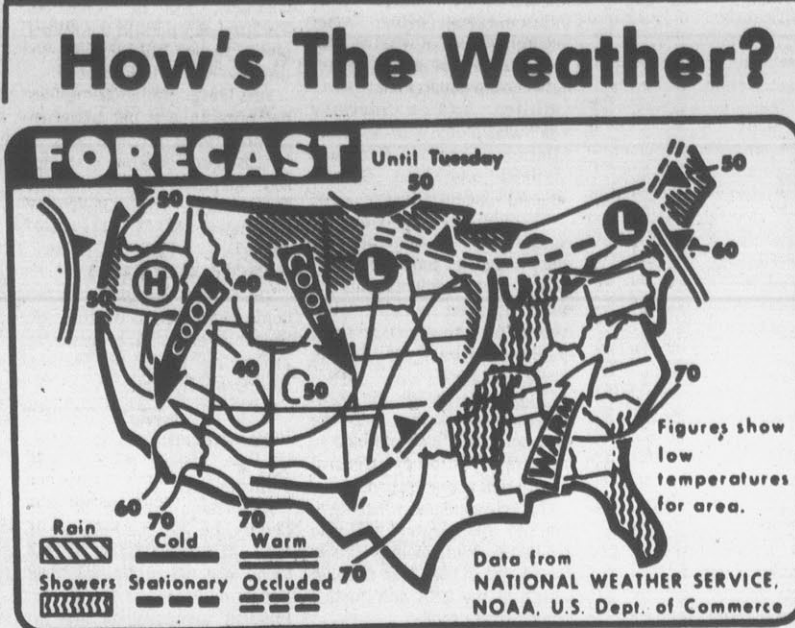

However, she added, no clinical test is 100 percent accurate and she hopes to design hers so it can be used routinely in conjunction with other diagnostic methods.

AUCTION — John C. Dahlinger, who claims to be the illegitimate son of Henry Ford, said he is auctioning his mother's estate, including what he said is Ford's crib and other gifts to his mother from the auto pioneer. (AP Laserphoto)

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is forecast today for New England as well as part of the Pacific Northwest. Rain is also expected over the northern Plains, changing to showers over the Great Lakes and running as far south as

Louisiana. Showers are also expected for most of Florida. Temperatures will be cool over the Pacific Northwest and warm over much of the remainder of the nation. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

A cool front passed across North Carolina Sunday, bringing with it unsettled weather that is expected to prevail through Tuesday. Skies will be mostly cloudy and scattered showers and thundershowers will occur. The showers and thundershowers will be most numerous across the mountains and along the south coast.

Widely scattered thundershowers developed this morning in coastal plains sections of the state and some heavy storms ranged along the coast south of Wilmington.

High temperatures today and again Tuesday will range from the 70s in the west to the low and mid 80s in the east. Lows tonight will range from some readings in the mid to upper 50s across the mountains to around 70 along the coast.

NEW YORK (AP) — A rising dollar gave the stock market a boost today, continuing a week-long rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial issues was up 3.04 to 910.78 at noon.

Advances outnumbered declines 10-3 on the New York Stock Exchange.

The dollar rose past the 2-mark level in West Germany and was up more than 2 yen in Japan.

The U.S. currency showed strength against almost all foreign standards, falling only against the British pound.

Pan American World Airways led the most-active list, rising 1/4 to 10 1/2. A 346,000-share block traded at that price.

The NYSE composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks rose .25 to 60.49. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gained 1.03 to 176.16.

Volume on the Big Board was an active 19.14 million shares at noon, off from 22.22 million shares in the first two hours of Friday's session.

Blue-chip issues were among the most active, continuing a trend begun late last week. Ford Motor gained 1/4 to 46 1/2. Dow Chemical advanced 1/4 to 30 1/2. Sears Roebuck was unchanged at 23 1/2 and General Motors fell 1/4 to 65 1/2.

Among other issues, John Deere Co. rose 2 1/2 to 35 1/2. Boise Cascade gained 1/4 to 33 1/2. Mobil rose 1 1/2 to 71 1/2. Kerr McGee advanced 1 1/2 to 71 1/2 and Philip Morris was up 7/8 to 76 1/2.

Connors, Evert Win Titles

NEW YORK (AP) — Bjorn Borg's Grand Slam dream and Pam Shriver's Cinderella story both ended as tennis' love match, former sweethearts and current "good friends" Jimmy Connors and Chris Evert, waltzed off with the big prizes at the U.S. Open.

Connors was at his fiery, fist-shaking, foot-stomping best Sunday in trouncing Borg, who was bothered by a blister on his right thumb, 6-4, 6-2, 6-2 for the men's title.

Hours earlier, Evert sent the 16-year-old Shriver back to school with a 7-5, 6-4 tennis lesson in the women's championship before a record crowd of 19,537, including 18,032 paid, and an international television audience.

"I came here to play tennis, to win the U.S. Open — and I did it," exulted Connors, who achieved a measure of revenge for the 6-2, 6-2, 6-2 beating he suffered against Borg two months ago at Wimbledon.

It was Connors' third U.S. Open title. He won in 1974 and 1976 and was a beaten finalist in 1975 and 1977.

Before the tournament, Connors had vowed to go "to the ends of the earth" to stop Borg's Grand Slam bid — the French, U.S. and Australian opens and Wimbledon, all in the same year. Borg already had won the French Open and Wimbledon, but instead of the ends of the earth, Connors was able to halt that streak in New York.

"It seems I play my best tennis when I come to New York," Connors told the crowd, which often has rooted against him in his matches here and which had mixed allegiances Sunday. "Whether you like me or not, I like you."

Borg, meanwhile, couldn't give his best effort because of a painful blister on the thumb of his racquet hand. The injury occurred Saturday and was treated with ice packs, oral medication and spray antiseptic in the 24 hours before the match.

Twice the racquet flew from Borg's hand as he attempted to serve, and on other occasions he seemed to mis-hit the ball after apparently losing his grip. Although Borg insisted the blister hadn't bothered him during the match, his coach said otherwise.

Whether a healthy Borg could have handled Connors, the way he was playing Sunday, is questionable.

"I hit the ball real solid and real deep throughout the match," said the 26-year-old Connors. "I was fired up when I was out there."

Connors broke service in the fifth game and held the rest of the way in taking the first set, then broke again in the third game of the second set. After that, it was all Connors as he dealt Borg his first defeat in 50 matches, not counting a pair of defaults due to injury.

"For sure I'm disappointed," Borg said of losing his bid to join Don Budge and Rod Laver as Grand Slam champions. "But there's always next time."

There should be plenty of next times for Shriver, the lean 6-footer who lent a breath of fresh air to this tournament with her on-court play and offcourt charm. The youngest Open finalist ever, she was to begin 11th grade classes at McDonough High School in Lutherville, Md. today.

Her strong serve and volley game was not enough to stop Evert from becoming the third woman to win the U.S. Open four years in a row. Molla Bjurstedt did it in 1915-18 and Helen Jacobs in 1932-35.

Bob Lutz and Stan Smith won the men's doubles title. Billie Jean King and Navratilova won the women's doubles, and Betty Stove and Frew McMillan captured the mixed doubles.

Total paid attendance for the first Open to be held at the National Tennis Center, following the move from the West Side Tennis Club, was a record 275,300 for 21 sessions.

State QB Directs Victory In Debut

By The Associated Press

North Carolina State quarterback Scott Smith directed a dominating, 29-13 win over East Carolina in his starting debut, but didn't put the ball in air as much as might have been expected.

He connected on four of just seven attempts, including one for 66 yards.

"Why pass when the running game is going so good?" Smith responded when asked about it afterwards.

He might have asked why score touchdowns too. The Wolfpack scored enough to win on a school record five field goals by sophomore Nathan Ritter, a 145-pound sidewinder who hadn't been in a varsity game before.

Ritter got the call six times, missing a chance to tie the Atlantic Coast Conference game record when he was wide on a 41-yarder, as Smith repeatedly guided the Wolfpack inside the Pirate 30, only to stall without a touchdown.

The victory over arch-rival East Carolina ended a two-year domination of the series by the rival independents, and came on the first day of ACC football. Elsewhere, Duke stunned Georgia Tech 28-10, Maryland downed Tulane 31-7, and Wake Forest beat Virginia 14-0.

For N.C. State, Smith scored one touchdown on a short run, and Woodrow Wilson intercepted a late Pirate pass and carried it 86 yards for another.

"It wasn't pretty," said State Coach Bo Rein later. "But there were a lot of people. It was a typical opening game with too many mistakes."

Duke 28, Ga. Tech 10

With veteran quarterback Mike Dunn sidelined with a sore thumb, reserve Stanley Driskell responded by running for a touchdown, passing for another and setting up a third.

"He was always in the wings, ready to go," Duke Coach Mike McGee said of the junior. "He was primed to play."

Tailback Greg Rhett dispelled rumors Duke couldn't run with 154 yards in 25 carries.

"I was ready, but it was his day," Dunn said. "I'm glad Stan got his chance to play. He deserved it."

Maryland 31, Tulane 7

Tulane Coach Larry Smith learned not to believe everything he reads. "Maryland is a very fine team," he said after taking the drubbing. "I didn't believe all that stuff I read in the papers about how beat up they were."

Despite a string of injuries in the backfield, Maryland mounted a running attack with 110 yards from Steve Atkins. Senior quarterback Tim O'Hare starting for the first time, went 7-for-11 with two touchdown passes.

Wake Forest 14, Virginia 0

Wake Forest's win in the first conference game of the season suddenly put the Deacons, in last place last year, on top of the conference this week.

"I feel great," said new Coach John Mackovic. "We stayed with what we planned to do."

Quarterback Ken Daly hit 15 of 36 for 205 yards and a touchdown.

"Our offense never played like they could," said Virginia Coach Dick Bestwick. "Our blocking was terrible. We just couldn't run what we usually do because of their nose guard."

Next Week

Defending champion North Carolina opens its season next Saturday at home against East Carolina. N.C. State hosts Syracuse on regional television. Virginia hosts Navy and Clemson opens with The Citadel at home. In night games, Maryland is at Louisville and Wake Forest hosts Virginia Tech.

Bouton Hurls Braves' Loss

By The Associated Press

Jim Bouton, World Series hero in the mid-1960s, is back in the middle of a pennant race. Somebody else's.

Bouton, the recycled pitcher from another generation, made his first start for last-place Atlanta Sunday. He pitched no-hit ball for three innings before Los Angeles solved his knuckleball for six runs in the next two frames en route to an 11-5 victory.

Several of the Dodgers felt that Bouton, who last pitched in the major leagues in 1970, shouldn't be masquerading as a pitcher in the middle of their National League West Division race with San Francisco.

Elsewhere in the NL, Cincinnati downed the stumbling Giants 8-1, St. Louis stopped Philadelphia 8-6 in 10 innings, the New York Mets beat sliding Pittsburgh 11-9, the Chicago Cubs defeated Montreal 6-3 and Houston nipped San Diego 3-2.

In the NL West, the Dodgers lead the Giants by four games going into tonight's important meeting between the teams at San Francisco, with Cincinnati 6½ games back. Philadelphia moved four games ahead of Pittsburgh, with the Cubs 2½ games further back, in the NL East.

Bouton, who began his comeback this year as a batting practice pitcher for Savannah, said he belonged on a major league mound.

"I was satisfied," said Bouton, who won two World Series games for the New York Yankees in 1964. "I think I showed everybody I had enough pitches to get people out again."

The Giants are in a tailspin going into tonight's game against Los Angeles, having lost five of their last six games. Johnny Bench socked a three-run homer and Dave Concepcion had a pair of run-scoring singles for the Reds.

Tom Seaver, 13-14, beat the Giants for the first time in five tries this season.

Ken Reitz's two-out triple that barely eluded right fielder Bake McBride's shoestring catch attempt knocked in the winning run for St. Louis, ending the Phillies' six-game winning streak.

The Pirates, meanwhile, are happy to leave New York where they lost all three games, including a wild slugfest Sunday. Elliott Maddox's RBI single and John Stearns' run-producing grounder in the eighth keyed the triumph for the last-place Mets.

Mick Kelleher, a first-inning replacement for ejected Rodney Scott, stroked a pair of RBI singles, pacing the Cubs' victory. Scott was thrown out at the plate by Montreal right fielder Ellis Valentine, then was thrown out of the game by umpire Harry Wendelstedt for arguing the call.

Houston's J.R. Richard now needs only 26 strikeouts to set a National League mark for right-handers in one season. His 11 strikeouts Sunday raised his league-leading total to 267 and helped Houston down San Diego.

Yes, said Ken Stabler, I really did fumble on purpose.

Yes, said Dave Casper, I really did help the ball along.

No, said Jerry Markbriet, there was nothing wrong with any of that.

The Oakland Raiders, a National Football League power for many years, appeared doomed to their second straight loss of the season Sunday.

But with 10 seconds to play and the Raiders 14 yards from the San Diego goal line, Stabler intentionally fumbled and Casper fell on the ball in the end zone for a touchdown. Errol Mann kicked the extra point with no time remaining and Oakland had a 21-20 victory.

Markbriet, the referee, ignored the howls from the Chargers' bench.

Victory is something

Baltimore Coach Ted Marchibroda would like. For that matter, he probably would be happy with just a touchdown, a field goal, a safety, any kind of a score.

The Colts have not been playing the best brand of football this year. They've been shut out twice and have allowed 80 points — tops in the NFL. After their 38-0 loss at Dallas last Monday night, the Colts came home Sunday and were blitzed 42-0 by the Miami Dolphins.

In Sunday's other games it was Chicago 16, San Francisco 13; Cleveland 13, Cincinnati 10 in overtime; Green Bay 28, New Orleans 17; Houston 20, Kansas City 17; Pittsburgh 21, Seattle 10; Dallas 34, the New York Giants 24; the New York Jets 21, Buffalo 20; Washington 35, Philadelphia 30; New England 16, St. Louis 6, and Los Angeles 10, Atlanta 0. On Saturday night it was Detroit 15, Tampa Bay 0. Denver visits Minnesota tonight.

Among NFL highlights Sunday:

—O.J. Simpson, in a losing cause, ran for 108 yards to outduel Chicago's Walter Payton, who rushed for only 62.

—The Brown's Don Cockroft booted a 27-yard field goal 4½ minutes into sudden-death overtime to give Cleveland its victory.

—Green Bay rookie James Lofton wowed the crowd in Milwaukee. Green Bay's "other" home, with touchdown catches of 42, 47 and 18 yards from David Whitehurst.

—Houston rookie Earl Campbell rushed for 111 yards on 22 carries and scored two fourth-quarter TDs to vault the Oilers past Kansas City.

—Dallas' Tony Dorsett rushed 24 times for 111 yards in Dallas' victory over the Giants.

A Classic Court Rivalry

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — There is nothing in the annals of tennis to compare with it. You have to reach back into the history of the ring to find the fire and ferocity that sparks the classic court rivalry of Jimmy Connors and Bjorn Borg.

They are the re-creation of the knock-down, drag-out slugfests of Tony Zale and Rocky Graziano. They are the shortpants, racquet-swinging replicas of Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier — Flushing Meadow's answer to the "Thrilla in Manila."

They stand today as the two truly great heavyweights of the modern game — the feisty, aggressive, often arrogant little left-hander out of Belleville, Ill., and the phlegmatic, imperturbable Swede.

Who's No.1?

Borg, who previously had won at Rome and Paris, crushed Connors in their center court final at Wimbledon in July 6-2, 6-2, 6-2. Connors' hurt ran deep.

"I will follow him to the ends of the earth," a tight-lipped

Jimmy vowed at the time. He made good his threat. And for Connors, it was sweet and brutal. The score: 6-4, 6-2, 6-2.

He said after his humiliation at Wimbledon he looked at the films of the match and "got sick" after watching only after two games.

"So I started out aggressively," this time, he said. "I never chicken out on a single shot."

Borg glumly agreed. "Jimmy — he was too good for me," he said, refusing to fall back on the alibi of a sore thumb on his racket hand. "He never let up on the pressure."

A sellout crowd of more than 18,000 in the new National Tennis Center seemed to forgive Connors his previous indiscretions — his vulgarity, rudeness and arrogance — and cheered wildly as the court assassin cut his tall, bearded rival down to size.

It was a study in calculated destruction.

Who remembers ever seeing the fuzzy balls hit so hard and with such seemingly reckless abandon as by Connors and Borg on this crisp Sunday evening?

There are two sledgehammer hitters alike only in the unrestrained manner they attack the ball. Connors is the smallish, bulldog-tough bar room brawler. He pounces on anything in his sight. Borg is the unshakable Swede — coldly efficient, deadly in his shot execution.

With airplanes flying overhead and shots bouncing off the concrete like missiles, one felt he was under military siege.

It was obvious from the results of Saturday night's East Carolina-N.C. State game that the Pirate offense is still lacking in punch.

Perhaps a lot of that lack had to do with the fact that two of the first string running backs, Eddie Hicks and Tony Collins, sat out the game with injuries sustained in the opening game.

A lot of it also had to do with the tough defense that N.C. State threw at the Pirates.

And a lot of it had to do with the quarterbacking situation of the Pirates. The abilities of Leander Green are well-known. Green showed what he could do last season. But thus far this season, he has not been able to duplicate that. Then, late in the first half Saturday, he suffered rib injuries, the diagnosis of which, at this writing (Sunday), had still not reached us. Hopefully, he will be ready to play by this coming Saturday, along with Hicks and Collins.

Beyond Green come Steve Greer and Henry Trevathan as the only other players with any varsity experience. And Trevathan actually took his first game snap against the Wolfpack Saturday night. The remaining quarterbacks are untried and still learning freshmen.

Pat Dye was asked Saturday night about his "quarterback problem" by the press. "I don't know if you'd call it a problem," Dye said. "Leander is doing his job. But if things break down and don't go right, the quarterback gets the blame because he's in the middle of every play. I still have faith in him."

Dye did say that more effort is going to be put into moving the freshmen candidates along.

Injuries also continued to plague the Pirates in the State game. Besides Green's injury, tight end Joe Godette left the game early with an ankle injury, while defensive backs Gerald Hall and Willie Holley were also sidelined during the second half. Hall with a hand injury, and Holley with cramps. Both of them are expected to be ready by Saturday, but Godette is uncertain right now.

Again, the Pirate defense can get nothing but laurels for its performance. State got only one touchdown off the Pirate defense, and only the outstanding kicking of Nathan Ritter did the true damage. State's first touchdown was set up by an offensive fumble in good field position, and their other touchdown came on a long pass interception return. Ritter's five field goals provided the true margin of victory for the Wolfpack.

Despite the offense's lack of consistent punch, they still ended up with nearly as much yardage as the Wolfpack. Four big plays provided nearly two-thirds of the ECU attack.

The Pirates ended up with 253 yards in total offense, and 160 of that came on four plays, two of them the Buc scores. Dye pointed out that last year, it was the big play that won for the Pirates—long touchdown runs and interceptions.

This year, the Pirates weren't as fortunate. The task now turns to trying to regroup, count the injured, and fill the gaps left by those who will not be out there Saturday.

East Carolina's schedule allows no rest down the line. The Tar Heels will be a tough opponent, one listed in nearly every poll as a Top Twenty team.

Then comes Southwestern Louisiana, a team that beat the Bucs last year. Texas-Arlington lost both of its opening games, but has shown the ability to put points on the board. VMI lost its opener in a close game to another Pirate foe, William & Mary; while Southern Mississippi has opened with two wins. Richmond lost two very close games and could be extremely tough by October 21. Appalachian State started with a win, as did Marshall.

A tough road lies ahead, filled with challenges the Pirates must rise up to meet.

Whitworth Wins

DENVER (AP) — Lightning suspended play for an hour and when action resumed it was Kathy Whitworth who jolted the field with a sizzling 5-under-par 67 to claim her 80th career women's professional golf title.

Whitworth pocketed $9,000 for her 3-stroke victory Sunday in the National Jewish Hospital Open over the 6,376-yard Green Gables Country Club layout.

Pat Bradley, the second-round leader, suffered a disastrous double bogey at the par-3 seventh hole. Combined with Whitworth's birdie, it accounted for a 3-shot swing and put Whitworth in the lead to stay. "I just didn't have it today," said Bradley, who fired a 2-over 74.

Whitworth added birdies at 14 and 16 to finish at 211, three strokes better than Bradley, Gloria Ehret and Jo Ann Washam. Grouped at 215 were Hollis Stacy and Sandra Post, while Jan Stephenson, just 1 stroke off the pace as the final round began, slipped to a 76 and was in at 217 with five other golfers.

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Jerry Pate has had a good year moneywise but the 1978 U.S. Open winner really wasn't satisfied until Sunday.

Returning to the site of his last PGA tour triumph, the 24-year-old became the first repeat winner, since Tom Watson captured the Bing Crosby National in 1976, by taking the $175,000 Southern Open Golf Tournament.

Pate shot a steady 69 Sunday for a 269 total, 11-under-par over the 6,791-yard Green Island Country Club Course to hold off the charge of fast-finishing Phil Hancock who had a 64 for 270.

"It's very satisfying to win after three second place finishes," said Pate, who was the runner-up this year in the Phoenix Open, the Colonial and the PGA.

"There was only about a three-stroke difference in those tournaments (between winning and finishing second) but it meant about $80,000," said the confident blond who increased his season earnings to $167,999.

ninth on the money list.

"I figured it was about time to win one," Pate said of his fifth tour triumph in only three full seasons on the tour in which his career earnings are $422,504.

"It has turned out to be a good year now that I've won and I still have the Pensacola Open and the World Series left," said Pate, whose triumph qualified him for the latter tournament later this month.

Pate and Hancock also finished 1-2 here last year. The only difference Sunday was that Hancock was in the chase until the end while a year ago he finished seven shots back.

Pate ran off 14 consecutive pars before knocking in his only birdie, a 12-footer on the 15th hole which he described as "actually the only one I needed."

Hancock, playing about a half hour before Pate, ran off the last of his six birdies on the 15th hole to catch Pate but could only par the final three holes.

"I knew I had to keep making birdies because I started so far back and to keep the pressure on Jerry," said the 24-year-old Hancock, a second-year pro.

"I'm not too disappointed. Of course I wanted to win the golf tournament, but mainly I wanted to win $10,000 or better to get in the top 60. It wasn't a win for me but in a way it was," said Hancock, who picked up a purse of $19,950 to increase his earnings for the year to $64,473.

He now is 39th on the money list after being 65th prior to the tourney.

Tied for third place at 273 were rookie Jim Nelford and veteran Don January. Nelford had a 64 and January a 68. Another shot back were Chi Chi Rodriguez and George Cadle. Rodriguez had a final round 67 and Cadle a 69.

Rocky Thompson, the second-round leader who had failed to earn a cent in eight previous tournaments this year, shot a 69 for 276 and earned more than $3,000.

Crittenden

Gets Victory

Dan Crittenden defeated John Eatman 7-5, 6-3 Sunday to win the championship flight of the Greenville Tennis Club's men's singles tournament.

In the A flight, Tom Sayetta downed Bryant Kittrell 7-5, 6-3, while in the B flight, Bobby Short defeated Larry Talbert, 7-6, 6-3.

The next event will be the men's doubles tournament with play beginning on Thursday. Players and spectators should check the bulletin board at the Erms Street courts on Wednesday for information.

Yankees Sweep To Tie Red Sox

By KEN RAFFOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Who's afraid of the big, bad "Green Monster"? Certainly not the New York Yankees.

With fabled Fenway Park and its legendary left field wall — the Green Monster — as the backdrop, the Yankees swept through a four-game series with alarming ease, capping its own Boston Massacre with a 7-4 beating of the Red Sox Sunday.

That pulled the red-hot New Yorkers even with the Red Sox in the American League East, a situation hardly imagined when the Yankees started the important series last Thursday night four games back.

It wasn't only the four-game sweep, but the humiliating way the Yankees did it in Boston's backyard. They pounded 14 pitchers for 42 runs and 67 hits in the series.

Each team has 20 games left in the fight for the division championship, with Milwaukee and Baltimore hovering close behind.

Meanwhile, the California Angels also made things interesting in the AL West, beating Kansas City 13-3 and moving within a half-game of the Royals, the division leaders.

Elsewhere, the Minnesota Twins beat the Milwaukee Brewers 3-1, the Cleveland Indians stopped the Detroit Tigers 7-4, the Chicago White Sox edged the Seattle Mariners 2-1, and the Texas Rangers beat the Oakland A's 8-3 in the first game of a doubleheader before losing the nightcap 2-1.

Graig Nettles, Roy White, Thurman Munson and Bucky Dent had three hits apiece as the Yankees went on an 18-single binge. Ed Figueroa and Gossage combined on a five-hitter as the Yankees streaked to their sixth consecutive victory and their 16th in the last 18 games.

Don Baylor drove in five runs with a grand slam homer and a single as California walloped Kansas City. The Angels' Nolan Ryan, 7-12, scattered nine hits and struck out 12. Kansas City starter Paul Spittorff, 16-12, didn't retire a batter.

Glenn Borgmann's two-run homer in the third inning snapped a club record-tying 30-inning scoreless streak for Minnesota and Dave Goltz won his 12th game of the year as the Twins beat Milwaukee.

Rick Manning greeted reliever John Hillier with a run-scoring single in the ninth inning and Buddy Bell followed with a two-run homer, boosting Cleveland over Detroit.

Chicago beat Seattle as Thad Bosley scored the tie-breaking run on an errant pickoff attempt by pitcher Glenn Abbott. Bosley opened the fourth inning with a single and went to second when Abbott hit Mike Colbern with a pitch. Abbott then attempted to pick off Bosley, but his throw went into center field and Bosley scored.

Jack Kucek was the winner and picked up his first major league victory since 1974, scattering six hits.

Doyle Alexander scattered eight hits and Texas capitalized on four unearned runs in the fourth inning in beating Oakland in the first game of their doubleheader.

Tim Lincecum's run-scoring single capped a two-run rally in the ninth inning as the A's rallied to win the second game. Pete Broberg hurled a four-hitter for Oakland in the nightcap.

Drowned In Rescue Of 3

WEST ONSLOW BEACH, N.C. (AP) — A Sneads Ferry man drowned in a rip current off the coast here after saving an 11-year-old boy and two other would-be rescuers trapped in the turbulent water.

Jerry Dean Burdette, 36, a civil service employee at Camp Lejeune, drowned as his family watched Saturday night. His body was found washed up on the beach more than an hour after he was swept under by the waves 100 yards from shore.

The drowning was the third this weekend attributed to abnormally high tides and strong rip currents. Two swimmers drowned Saturday off the coast of Nags Head after being caught in undertows.

Burdette swam into the current in an attempt to save Jay Knox, 11, son of Earl and Gloria Knox of Sheriffs Ford in Catawba County. The boy was floundering about 100 yards offshore, rescue spokesmen said.

Two bystanders who tried to go to young Knox's aid also disappeared beneath the ocean water, Delores Faye Burdette, the victim's widow, said Sunday.

Burdette led the men out of the current and helped them toward the shore before completing the rescue of the little boy, she said.

Rescue workers said Burdette was able to assist the Knox youth to a spot where he could make it back to shore before Burdette was overcome by the current and pulled underwater.

According to the chief of the West Onslow Beach Rescue Squad, Lydia W. Thompson, there was no way anyone could have found Burdette in the darkness.

Mrs. Burdette and her son and daughter witnessed the drowning from shore.

"The (Knox) boy blamed himself," Mrs. Thompson said. "He said to me when he came in, 'If I hadn't been out there, then Uncle Jerry — that's what he called him — wouldn't have drowned.' The boy was so upset we had to take him to a hospital."

Speaking in Italian Sunday to a crowd of 80,000 from the window of his apartment overlooking St. Peter's Square, the pontiff said the desire for peace was especially fervent among the poor, "because they suffer the most as a result of troubles and wars."

year with 14 of the most-wanted fugitives still at large.

Terrorist suspect Willy Peter Stoll, wanted in the 1977 killings of three prominent Germans, was slain by Duesseldorf police last week in the first big strike in West Germany this year against the fanatical Red Army Faction.

But the taking of the 28-year-old Stoll brought chilling proof that some of the three dozen terrorists thought to have fled abroad last year have defiantly returned to resume their war on West German society.

"What worries us is that the terrorists have returned, even though it was thought to be too hot for them here in the last six months," said a West German security official, who asked not to be named.

"They have lots of money, probably several million marks, from bank robberies and probably directly from countries like Libya," he said. "You should see the quality of the phony identity papers Stoll had. That stuff costs money."

Stoll was shot last Wednesday by plainclothes police who challenged him at a Chinese restaurant in Duesseldorf after a woman patron recognized him from a wanted poster.

Ordered to put up his hands, Stoll instead grabbed for his pistol loaded with dum-dum bullets, a soft-nosed bullet that expands when it hits. A policeman shot faster, hitting him four times, and Stoll died of internal bleeding, authorities said.

An extensive police search of the Duesseldorf area failed to locate other Red Army suspects, but police did find an apartment believed used by Stoll just before he was killed.

Stoll was the sixth prime suspect nabbed in recent months for the 1977 terrorist killings of chief federal prosecutor Siegfried Buback, banker Juergen Ponto and industrialist Hanns Martin Schleyer.

Four suspects were captured by Yugosloslav police in May and are still jailed there while the Bonn and Belgrade governments try to work out a prisoner swap — the Germans for Croatian extremist opponents of Marshal Tito living in West Germany.

Brigitte Mohnhaupt, 28, Rolf Clemens Wagner, 33, Peter Boock, 26, and Sieglinde Gutrun Hoffmann, 33, were captured in Zagreb after the Germans circulated their descriptions around the world.

Another suspect, 25-year-old Stefan Wisniewski, was arrested in France last May and has been extradited to West Germany for trial.

Ten women wanted in the killings remain at large: Susanne Albrecht, 27, Friederike Krabbe, 28, Elisabeth von Dycq, 27, Silke Maier-Witt, 28, Juliane Plambeck, 26, Inge Viett, 34, Angelika Speitel, 26, Sigrid Sternebeck, 29, Monika Helbing, 24, and Adelheid Schulz, 23.

The four men on the most-wanted list are: Rolf Heissler, 30, Joerg Lang, 38, Baptist-Ralf Friederich, 31, and Christian Klar, 26.

Klar and Miss Schulz, who are lovers, were spotted with Stoll in August while making charter helicopter flights in southwestern Germany, apparently in search of new terrorist targets.

Police were tipped by the helicopter pilot about three suspicious passengers. Agents watched and photographed them but did not recognize their true identities until after they had disappeared.

Police said Stoll, Klar and Miss Schulz escaped detection by altering their appearances from the hippie look of wanted posters to shorter hair, makeup and clean-cut clothing favored by young German business people.

The Federal Criminal Office in Wiesbaden stocked a sophisticated computer with personal data on the terrorists and other criminals, placing 1,300 terminals in police stations, airports, border control points and other public offices to enable instantaneous checks of suspects picked up with false identity papers or disguises.

The government has refused to reveal the exact cost and extent of the anti-terrorist campaign, but millions of dollars and thousands of police are involved. The national budget set aside some $650 million for internal security this year, some $100 million more than in 1977.

The computerized identification methods and a new spirit of cooperation among governments of the East and West has benefitted the German campaign against the Red Army Faction.

Soon after the four suspects were picked up in Yugoslavia, four other Germans on a second wanted list of Red Army suspects were captured in Bulgaria. Holland also captured three suspects in the 1977 wave of violence and is preparing to extradite Knut Folkerts, 26, Christoph Wackernagel, 26, and Gerd Schneider, 29.

Gunter Sonnenberg, 23, was grabbed by West German police last year after a gunfight. He, Folkerts and Klar are believed to be the masterminds behind the assassination of prosecutor Buback in Karlsruhe, along with his driver and a police companion.

Ponto, chairman of the country's second largest commercial bank, was killed at his home in suburban Frankfurt apparently resisting would-be kidnappers believed led by Miss Albrecht, a Ponto family friend.

Schleyer, head of West Germany's Industry and Employer's Associations, was kidnapped in Cologne in 1977 by terrorists who ambushed his car and killed his driver and three police escorts.

Schleyer was killed by the kidnappers after seven weeks of captivity when West Germany refused to release 11 jailed comrades.

Peace Prayers For Middle East

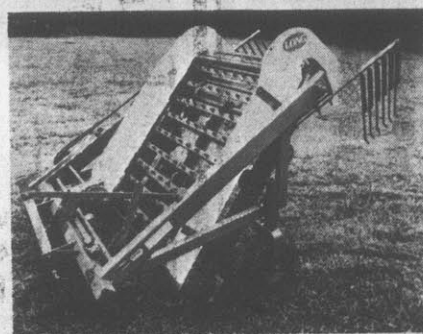

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul I, declaring "all men are hungry and thirsty for peace," says he is praying for the success of the Mideast peace talks at Camp David and is impressed that the men involved seek help in public prayer.

Speaking in Italian Sunday to a crowd of 80,000 from the window of his apartment overlooking St. Peter's Square, the pontiff said the desire for peace was especially fervent among the poor, "because they suffer the most as a result of troubles and wars."

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat attended Moslem prayer services Friday at the Maryland mountain retreat, where he, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and President Carter are discussing a Middle East settlement.

Pioneer Movie Mogul Jack Warner Is Dead

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Jack Warner, the fun-loving motion picture tycoon who produced the first talkie and helped shape Hollywood's "Golden Age" with a stable of stars, is dead.

The 86-year-old Warner, last of Hollywood's studio autocrats, died Saturday at Cedars-Sinai Hospital of a heart inflammation. His wife, Ann, was at his bedside. He had been hospitalized since Aug. 13.

Warner and three of his brothers built a movie empire and produced the first talking motion picture, "The Jazz Singer," in 1927.

Wayne Osmond Has Infant Son

PROVO, Utah (AP) — When Wayne Osmond, of the singing Osmond family, learned of the birth of his son, he went on a shopping spree for baseball and football gear.

Steven Wayne weighed six pounds, 11 ounces and was 19 inches long when he was born Wednesday to Wayne and Kathy Osmond at the University of Utah Medical Center in Salt Lake City, said family spokesman Ron Clark.

Kathy, a former Miss Utah, married Wayne in 1975. The couple have a daughter, Amy, who will be 2 in November.

"Wayne was so pleased and excited about his new son he went out on a shopping spree and came home with a load of baseball and football gear," Clark said.

JACK WARNER

Warner "left far more than just his name imprinted on the studio he ran for so many years," Ted Ashley, chairman, and Frank Wells, president of Warner Bros. in Burbank, said Sunday.

Warner was born Aug. 2, 1892, in London, Ontario, one of 12 children of Ben Warner, a Polish immigrant.

Stirred by the 1903 release of "The Great Train Robbery," Warner and brothers Harry, Sam and Albert formed Warner Bros. It grew into one of Hollywood's largest studios and the corporate ancestor of Warner Communications, an entertainment industry giant that made more than $1 billion last year.

The brothers scraped together $1,000 — including $150 from a horse Jack pawned — bought a projector, rented a vacant store in New Castle, Pa., and converted it into a theater. The theater's 99 chairs were borrowed from an undertaker, so customers had to stand when there was a funeral.

The brothers soon moved to California and their first effort in 1917, "My Four Years in Germany," was a critical success that grossed nearly $2 million and established them as major producers.

Jack became known for his dashing ways and flamboyant antics, but it was his business sense that earned him respect among his peers.

Warner was known to sand-wich tennis games and high-stakes casino gambling in between such deals as buying the film rights to "My Fair Lady" for $5.5 million and signing an unknown Errol Flynn for $150 a week.

The studio grew to the biggest in town, with such actors as John Barrymore, Humphrey Bogart, James Cagney, Miss Davis, and Hollywood's favorite canine, Rin Tin Tin.

He is survived by his wife, a daughter, Barbara Howard, and a son, Jack. Services will be private.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC's sex-spice "Soap," lambasted by religious and homosexual groups when it began last fall, is starting Season No. 2 with almost none of the criticism that preceded its debut.

This is the gospel according to Anthony D. Thomopoulos as he begins his first full season as ABC's programs chief. He began there last February when Fred Silverman decamped to run NBC.

In a wide-ranging chat recently with eight scribes here, he said he thinks the reason "Soap" is returning with little public uproar is that the show "has been fairly well-received and accepted."

He said he feels that when viewers finally saw the half hour sitcom after all the hullabaloo last year, "the judgment made by the public was that the critics were wrong."

And, in contrast to last year when 19 ABC affiliates either aired the series late at night or refused to put it on at all, virtually all ABC stations will air it this season as scheduled, he said.

Among them, he added, is WJZ in Baltimore, the only top 50 market station last fall to say no soap to "Soap," which chuckles about such matters as homosexuality, infidelity and the Mafia.

And unlike last season, when each "Soap" began by advising that certain of its "dialogue and situations may not be suitable for all members of the family," there'll be no such advisory now except when ABC's censor feels it is warranted, he said.

On another item, he was asked if he felt Fred Silverman shuffled NBC's new schedule at the last minute to avoid taking on top-rated ABC early in the season, in effect stalling for time until he can get shows that he thinks will be hits on the air to challenge ABC's top shows.

Thomopoulos diplomatically said he didn't know why the shuffling.

Two other matters: John Travolta and Farrah

Fawcett-Majors.

Travolta, the "Welcome Back, Kotter" co-star who hit it big in the movies "Grease" and "Saturday Night Fever," will return to "Kotter" this season, but only appear in eight episodes.

Miss Fawcett-Majors, who left "Charlie's Angels" to try for a film career, then was asked for leaving her show, will be back in "Angels" this season, but only for three episodes.

Will they return to their series next season, too?

"There are plans to have them come back on a limited basis if we do proceed with the shows," Thomopoulos said. He gave no details on how many episodes Travolta would appear in during the 1979-80 season.

But he said Miss Fawcett-Majors, when the suit against her was dropped, agreed to do three more "Angels" episodes next season.

The greying, 40-year-old executive grinned when asked to predict which networks would be No. 2 and 3 in the ratings this season.

"I'm just going to take the position ABC is going to be No. 1," said Thomopoulos, whose network officially starts its new season tonight.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, SEPT. 12, 1978
Your Daily HOROSCOPE
from the CARROLL RIGTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day when you need to keep your enthusiasm on a high level for best results. Make a special point to avoid getting involved in any disputes. Let others see your best side.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) While taking care of business affairs allow time to cheer up those who are depressed. Use extreme care in motion.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) A younger person you meet can be most helpful to you in the days ahead. Strive for increased harmony with family members.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Make sure you maintain business promises you have made, otherwise you could find yourself in more trouble than you bargained for.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Do those little thoughtful things for your mate that will bring increased happiness to both of you. Be logical.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You have tasks to perform that seem dull, but if you make a game of them, you will even enjoy the work. Handle a business matter wisely.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Any work you have to do now should be done in the spirit of cheerfulness. Plan more time to be with the one you love.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't be so serious at home and try to lighten the mood there. Be sure to handle important business matters wisely at this time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be careful in talking to co-workers at this time since the wrong words could lead to a severance of connections. Be alert at all times.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Study your expenses well and don't overspend where recreation is concerned. The evening is fine for social pleasure.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Forget negative thinking, and think and act positive for best results at this time. Be charming with others.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) There need not be any limitation to the scope of your thinking and acting at this time. Listen to what an expert has to suggest.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A good friend may be in a bad mood now, so make allowances for any slights. Find a better way to gain your cherished aims.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have interesting ways of solving problems of a social kind and the education should be directed along lines of troubleshooting, and connected with the government in some capacity. Give spiritual training early in life.

Future Doctors Bound To Serve Urban Ghetto

By BEVERLY J. MOORE

ATLANTA (UPI) — Twenty-four students with a moral commitment to apply their future skills in urban ghettos and undeveloped areas begin classes today at the first black medical school to open its doors in the 20th century.

The Morehouse College School of Medicine, which will offer two-years training to start, begins operations in what was formerly a health-science building. But with the help of a $5 million federal matching grant school officials hope to have the new school facilities built by 1981 and to begin a complete four-year program two years later.

Dr. James Storey, assistant dean of admissions at the medical school, said one objective was to "recruit" students from the underserved areas — rural and ghetto — and encourage them to return to those areas when their studies are complete.

He said all of the students, 21 blacks and three whites, have morally committed themselves to establish practices in either rural communities or urban ghettos.

Agretta Eneas, one of the medical students and a 23-year-old native of Nassau, Bahamas, says being in the inaugural class of the nation's third black medical school gives her a chance to turn a near 20-year-old dream into a reality.

"I've wanted to be a doctor since I was about four years old," said Ms. Eneas, who is a graduate of Spelman College.

Ms. Eneas said in recent years she has become increasingly aware of the shortage of general practitioners that serve both rural communities and inner city ghettos. She said she chose Morehouse in pursuit of a medical career that will eventually help alter that problem.

"We're trying to do something a little different from other medical schools," said Storey, adding that the student's economic situation was an important factor in recruiting.

"We tried to recruit those students that other schools would not take but for the wrong reason — their economics," he said.

Storey said tuition and fees for the academic year total over $5,000 and "all of our students needed financial assistance to be here." He said students were awarded financial aid, grants-in-aid, loans and fellowships, on the basis of their need and academic performance.

Storey said also the medical school has established guarantees with the Medical College of Georgia, Emory University School of Medicine, Howard University Medical School and Meharry Medical College to accept into their third-year classes students from Morehouse. He said Morehouse received temporary accreditation from the Liaison Committee on Medical Education last spring.

Howard and Meharry are the other two predominantly black medical schools in the country.

Morehouse medical student Beverly Simons said her goal in becoming a doctor is "to be competent while doing something to serve others."

Mrs. Simons, who received her undergraduate degree at

Pearson Exhibit By Smithsonian

WASHINGTON (AP) — A showing of works by Ronald Pearson is being held at the National Collection of Fine Arts, Smithsonian Institution, through Oct. 15.

"A noted craftsman who has worked in metal for 30 years, Pearson is concerned with the reflective quality of iver and a '9sr form,' the museum says. It adds, "His jewelry is so strikingly handsome that he considers it sculpture as well as adornment."

Spelman and a Masters Degree in health sciences at Emory University, said she would likely practice in a small town where there is a shortage of doctors.

'I know why I smoke.'

"There's only one reason I ever smoked. Good taste.

"So when I switched to low tar, I wasn't about to give that up. If you don't smoke for taste what else is there?

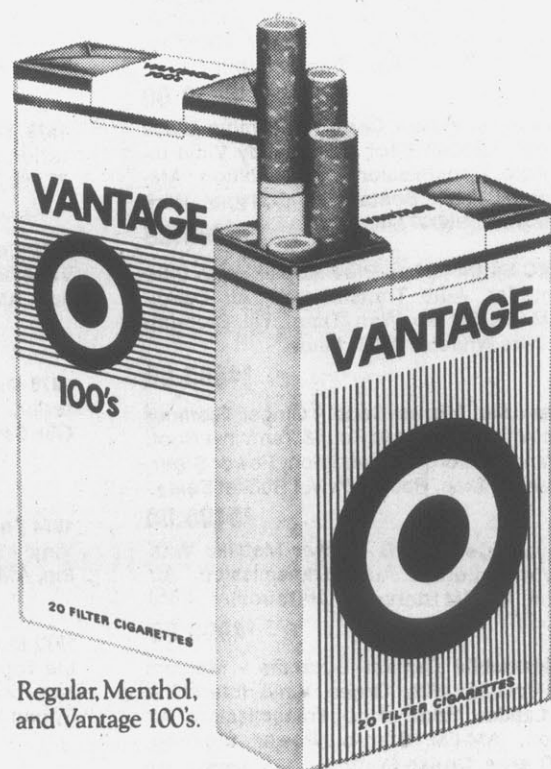

"But there was all that talk about tar.

"Unfortunately, most low tar cigarettes tasted like nothing. Then I tried Vantage.

"Vantage gives me the taste I enjoy. And the low tar I've been looking for."
