Helicopters, Troops Join Nicaragua City's Assault

By LEW WHEATON
Associated Press Writer
MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — National guardsmen were reported advancing house to house under heavy sniper fire in Masaya during the night, trying to root out leftist guerrillas fighting to overthrow the family dictatorship of President Anastasio Somoza.

While helicopter gunships strafed the Sandinista guerrillas from overhead, Somoza's soldiers dashed from doorway to doorway, trying to evade the rifle fire of guerrilla snipers. There was no letup in the din of machine-gun and rifle fire and bomb explosions.

Refugees reported the city of 40,000, a rebel stronghold 18 miles northwest of Managua, was without electricity and running water.

Fighting also was reported in the cities of Leon and Esteli, and sporadic shooting and explosions could still be heard in Managua as the capital's central market and gas stations closed for the first time in the 18-day-old general strike against Somoza.

Reports from medical sources and visitors to hospitals indicated at least 100 dead in the Managua area, but many of them apparently were brought in from other areas.

Convoys of national guard trucks and jeeps armed with machine guns passed into Masaya Monday evening. A barricade of rocks and debris formed a checkpoint for the national guard, Nicaragua's army, which barred all civilian traffic and kept the city hidden from view behind a hill.

The soldiers rounded up reporters in Masaya on Monday afternoon and took them out of the city, sealed it off to outsiders including the Red Cross, then launched an attack. Four of the journalists were fired on by an army helicopter but none was hit.

The fighting in Masaya erupted late Saturday night as part of a coordinated attack on smaller army and police posts in most of the Central American nation's cities. The Sandinista guerrillas drive the guardsmen and police from the posts, then waited in hiding to ambush the reinforcements who were sent to man the posts.

Reports from Esteli, 90 miles north of Managua, were sketchy. Telephone communications were cut Sunday night, but a refugee said Monday that fighting was still very heavy and that he had seen five truckloads of guerrillas approaching from the north.

Security precautions in Managua were extremely tight. The Hotel Intercontinental, normally flood-lit at night and a prominent feature on the Managua skyline, was blacked out and soldiers patrolled the roof. Guests were warned not to let any light filter through the heavy curtains in their rooms.

Even stricter precautions were in force around the Bunker, Somoza's live-in office building in a military compound down the street from the Intercontinental.

Somoza has refused to yield to almost constant pressure to resign since the murder of opposition publisher Pedro Joaquin Chamorro on Jan. 10.

Israeli Concessions Uphill Quest For Carter At Summit

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — President Carter is making a "gigantic effort" to gain concessions from Israel but there is no evidence yet that he is succeeding in his uphill quest, diplomatic sources said today.

"It is too early to make a judgment either way," said one official, asking not to be identified. "But getting Israel to move has been the problem all along, even before the summit began."

A meeting announced for Monday night between the U.S. and Egyptian delegations was postponed without explanation. However, Carter arranged to meet with Egypt's Anwar Sadat today.

With Carter acting as go-between, there has been no face-to-face conference involving Sadat and Israel's Menachem Begin since last Thursday.

There was no indication that the two would meet today either, but Jody Powell, sole official spokesman for the participants, said Monday that Carter will bring President Sadat and Prime Minister Begin together at an appropriate point.

Powell, the White House press secretary, dismissed a reporter's suggestion that the hiatus in direct talks between Sadat and Begin indicated a stalemate.

"I don't think it would be appropriate to draw that conclusion," he said.

Powell said the summit had moved into a time-consuming phase of American-Egyptian and American-Israeli discussions, after a weekend review by all three delegations of "apparent progress" made last week on some key issues.

As Powell reported, is making an "even more intense effort" to bridge differences between Egypt and Israel but that "neither optimism nor pessimism is justified at this point."

As Powell described it, the process was reminiscent of difficult labor-management negotiations, with a mediator shuttling between the contending parties.

Carter met alone with Sadat for two hours Monday morning.

Formal Tobacco Festival Plans Are Unveiled Here

By REBECCA BUFFALO
Reflector Staff Writer

Formal plans were announced today for the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival to be held Nov. 12-18 in conjunction with the Tobacco Farmers Show in Greenville.

Charles Burnette, president of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce which sponsors the Festival, introduced Kelly Barnhill, chairman for the event, to the press.

Barnhill explained the importance of tobacco to the economy, noting that it is now a principal commodity in the southeastern portion of the United States.

"What more fitting place could be found to hold such a celebration than Pitt County, North Carolina, where tobacco is truly king!" Barnhill commented.

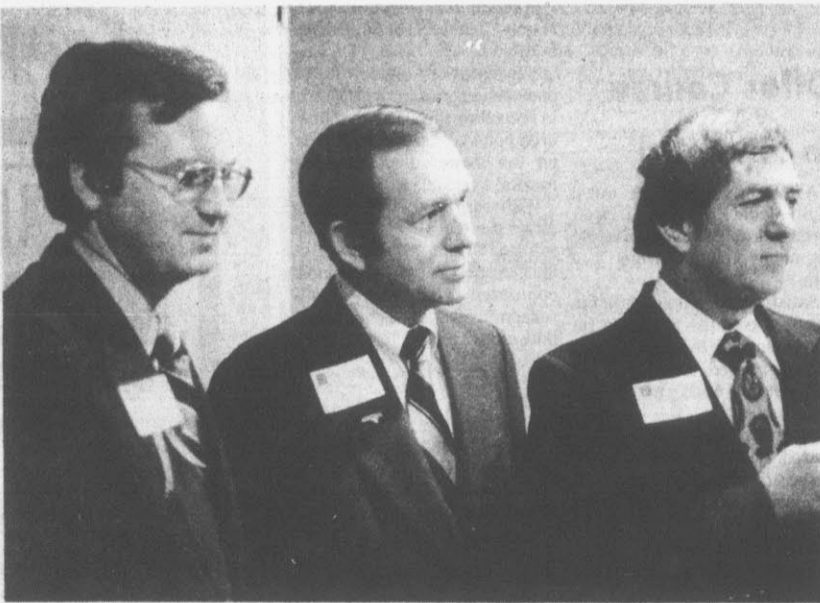

Details for the festival were given by Barnhill, who suggested that interested persons contact Mrs.

Beverly Reid at the Chamber office, 752-4101, for further details and suggestions.

On Nov. 3, Pitt County Banks will distribute special $2 "Tobacco Bucks" totaling $750,000, which represent total receipts for one day of

Steps To Higher ECU Quality And Excellence Outlined By Chancellor

AT COFFEE TALK ... Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce Membership Services Committee chairman David Nichols, Jerry

Powell, who introduced the speaker, and ECU Chancellor Dr. Thomas Brewer.

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

East Carolina University Chancellor Dr. Thomas Brewer outlined, "what we are going to try to do in the years ahead," for members of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce at a coffee talk sponsored by the chamber's Membership Services Committee this morning.

The chancellor said in the past, East Carolina has been an "outstanding university."

The years of rapid growth in enrollment, and expansion of the university's physical facilities are over, Brewer said, emphasizing that now, "we must turn our attention toward quality and excellence."

In outlining the steps toward higher quality and excellence, Brewer said the school will be, "fine tuning our university administration — we must have the most efficient structure possible — so all programs of the university advance toward the goals of the university."

He said too, that East Carolina must, "enlarge and develop outside support." The General Assembly provides adequate funds for a good basic program, Brewer indicated, but emphasized that the truly great public universities rely on private support for endowed chairs and professorships, scholarships and other university programs, to make them great.

"Our goal," Brewer noted, "is $10 annual giving for every living alumni," of the school, which would amount to about $350,000 per year. And, "this doesn't include the large gifts," he said.

"I will be very deeply involved as chancellor in this effort," Brewer pointed out.

The chancellor said, "we will be looking at programs in the university...implement fully the potential of the medical school...and constantly monitoring and evaluating," so that needed programs can be implemented and programs not meeting a need can be dropped.

Brewer suggested that two programs that might be added involve a regional educational diagnostic center and research and instructional programs in areas relating to the region's rivers, sounds and the "mighty Atlantic itself."

Brewer said too, "we want to improve our faculty," through increased faculty

Two Firms Qualify As Bidders On 2 Parcels In The Southside Area

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Two companies qualified Monday night as bidders on two disposal parcels owned by the Redevelopment Commission in the Southside area.

Commissioners approved Taylor-Payton Co. and the Evans Co. of Greenville as qualified bidders on Disposal Parcels W-1a, located at the corner of Perkins and Norris Streets, and C-2, located on Howell Street.

Joe Laney, Commission executive director, said that W-1a contains some 5,185 square feet while C-2 has some 89,200 square feet. The smaller parcel was platted prior to the 1969 zoning ordinance requiring 6,000 square foot lots in R-6 zones, Laney explained, and can be developed without a variance.

John Taylor, representing Taylor-Payton Co., said that his company wanted to bid on the property in order to provide "reasonably economical homes" in the $25,000 to $28,000 range, including the price of the lot.

According to Taylor, the residential construction would involve modular units and would hopefully be developed within 12 months. He indicated that the property would be suitable for 12 residential structures.

The Evans Co., which has already built residential structures in the Southside area, indicated that it wished to bid on both parcels in order to continue the same type of development.

The successful bidder will be required to submit plans to the Planning and Zoning Commission since the development of the large tract would involve a subdivision.

In other business, real estate officer Kirby Boyd reported that five parcels were acquired by the Commission since the last meeting and the staff is in the process of buying vacant property below the flood plain in West Meadowbrook.

Laney reported that the City Council has agreed that the Redevelopment Commission can begin to acquire property above the flood plain in West Meadowbrook, but only dilapidated parcels.

Two demolitions took place in West Meadowbrook, Boyd said, both involving houses above the flood plain.

Faye Brewington, Southside project manager, reported that one relocation

Chairman Of UF Division

Jerry Fulford, chairman of this year's Pitt United Way campaign, announced that Hal Knox has been named chairman of the Professional II Division.

In announcing the division chairmanship, Fulford noted, "The Professional II segment of our campaign is in good hands this year with Hal. I know he will provide enthusiastic leadership and help us attain our overall fund goal."

Knox, a native of Robersonville, currently serves as assistant loan officer at Home Savings and Loan Association in Greenville. He joined Home Savings after being associated with Planters National Bank from July of 1975 through April of this year.

The division chairman graduated from Robersonville High School in 1971 and attended N.C. State University from 1971 through 1973 when he transferred to East Carolina University. Knox earned his B.S.B.A. degree in business administration from ECU in 1975.

He is married to the former Janet Griffin of Bethel and the couple has one son. The family attends First Pentecostal Holiness Church here.

NOT STOPPING FOR BUSES

I have seen on Greenville Boulevard already this year that traffic is not stopping for school buses. Doesn't the law about coming to a full stop when a school bus throws out its stop sign apply even on five-lanes such as this? C. B.

It certainly does, says First Sgt. Pete Eure of the N. C. Highway Patrol. The law says that, unless there is a physical barrier between lanes of traffic, vehicles from both directions must stop for stopped school buses, he said.

GOT PLANTER

Apr. 20 I sent $15.95 to Carol Wright Gifts of Bergenfield, N. J. for two planters. I received one. I wrote about the other one, but have received neither the other planter nor a refund, either of which I'd be glad to get. Mrs. O. W.

Hotline sent a postcard to the company July 18. We soon received a copy of a letter sent to you, stating that your planter was on the way. You reported this week that you'd received it.

Ayden Plans Governmental Management Contract

By Rebecca Buffaloe
Reflector Staff Writer

AYDEN — The Ayden Board of Commissioners voted Monday to enter into a year's contract with MICA, a Durham-based corporation which offers management plans to different governmental bodies.

Town Manager Don Russell explained the 30-day clause, which allows Ayden to be able to terminate the contract with a written notice.

Dr. J. Elliott Dixon told Board members that he hoped the people of Ayden would understand the basis of the MICA contract.

"We're not letting Durham come down here and tell us what to do," Dixon commented. "The board will have approval of all projects."

Harry Mumford stated that the coming year would be a "very heavy" one concerning town business.

Dixon noted that the corporation was based on professional people who had served in all phases of governmental procedures.

Town Clerk Ralph Ford told the board that the Thoroughfare Plan has gone to the North Carolina Department of Transportation for consideration. The DOT basically approved the plan, but eliminated some intersections to alleviate a possible "Five Points" situation experienced by Greenville some years ago.

A public hearing was set for Oct. 9 so that the board may receive citizen input before the plan is finally adopted.

The board amended $7,500 to the 1978-79 fiscal year budget received from Pitt County for repayment costs of hauling solid waste to the county landfill.

Town Manager Russell explained to members that the money would help pay for two hydraulic lift loaders for the Sanitation Department.

Board members discussed the increasing amount of trash and garbage. Russell commented that the sanitation department was already stretching its limits by two pick-up dates a week, noting that the street department has had to assist the sanitarians in their job.

Mrs. Evelena Mewborn came before the board to ask permission to buy two lots owned by the Town of Ayden.

Board member Robert Booth explained that the board could allow the property to be sold by public auction or sealed bids. The members then discussed the advantages and disadvantages of the types of sale. Mayor Ross Persinger noted that a base limit should be set on the properties.

A public auction date of Oct. 30, 10 a.m., was set in the Town Office to sell the two lots. A minimum of $100 per lot was set. The board will accept the bids in the November meeting.

A total of $127.37 from tax additions was added to the 1978 tax levy, approved by the board. Town Clerk Ford then read the list of tax releases, noting that there had been some "mix-up" concerning abstracts.

A figure of $424.14 was released for taxes, with board members noting that the computer had made a good number of the mistakes. Corporate excess taxes totaling $6,860 were added to the 1978 tax levy.

The board voted to collect assessments on Edgewood St. until the Town has completed improvements on the street.

A Oct. 9 date was set for public hearings on improvements made on Power, West Ave. and Hart Streets.

Town Manager Russell submitted the library status report for the board's attention, noting that 8,839 people had passed through the library doors in the past year. A total of 1,951 persons had participated in summer activities at the Library.

Russell called the report "very encouraging" and praised the town librarian for her excellent work.

The board accepted a second lowest bid from Maddox Supply Co. for 14 pad-mount transformers for the proposed Fairmont Apartment complex.

Maddox's bid, $9,923.40, was higher than Westinghouse's $9,836 bid, but Russell asked the board to disqualify the low bid because of billing problems between the company and the Town of Ayden.

Utilities Director Mike Finney agreed with Russell that there had been problems in settling Ayden's account with Westinghouse.

Russell also listed for the board streets tentatively scheduled for improvements, as well as alleys, noting that the total cost of some $103,000 would have to be brought down before improvements could take place.

The board approved $100 for the Ayden-Grifton High School football program ad, and $80 for the school year-book ad.

Corey Stokes came before the board asking that the board make sure that tree trimming to be done on West Third St. be neater than that on East Third.

Stokes stated, "We have beautiful trees in this town and we've got a terrible situation on East Third St."

Mayor Persinger asked for comments from the board, noting that the town had many electrical outages last year.

Stokes said that whoever trimmed the trees did not cut away from the power lines.

Town Manager Russell commented that an expert in the field of tree trimming was needed. After asking Utilities Director Finney when the next tree trimming was scheduled, Russell told the board that he would write the state Department of Forestry concerning the matter.

In other business, the board accepted low bids from Oscar Hill and Mrs. Peggy Cox for a 1972 Chevrolet and a 1974 Plymouth.

Information concerning the "Open Meetings Law" which will go into effect Oct. 1 was discussed. A list of public meetings must be posted in the Town Office, with changes to be made public in seven days prior to the meeting.

Jerry Cox of the Ayden Housing Authority reported that new rents of $70 were charged in August.

The board went into executive session after regular business was completed.

ACLU Meeting On Wednesday

The Greenville Chapter of the N. C. Civil Liberties Union will meet Wednesday at 8 p. m. in the Methodist Student Center, 501 E. Fifth Street.

There will be a report and discussion of the Governor's Conference on Crime Control. Newcomers to the community are invited to attend.

Poor 'Stuck'

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — While the rich in the South get richer, the poor in the South are stuck, according to a new study prepared by the Institute for Southern Studies.

Despite recent economic growth, the gap between rich and poor people in the South remains about as wide as it was 25 years ago, the study says.

The study, which appears in the current issue of "Southern Exposure," says the richest 20 percent of the region's people receive 42.3 percent of its income, while the poorest 20 percent of the people receive only 5 percent.

The figures differ little from those of 25 years ago, although the poor have made some gains. In 1953, the poor took in 3.5 percent of the income, compared to 43.3 percent for the richest fifth.

The study, written by the Institute's director, Bob Hall, and a University of North Carolina economist, Bob Williams, is based on U.S. Census data. It covers 15 states from Maryland to Oklahoma.

"We are seeing the creation of a permanent underclass, and current economic development patterns are actually solidifying instead of solving this inequity," said Julian Bond, a Georgia state senator and president of the Institute.

Two factors contribute to the relative lack of progress among the region's poor, according to the study. Workers are not getting their fair share of the wealth generated from the New South's factories and government taxing policies are actually preserving the inequities, instead correcting the imbalance.

Wages, the study says, are not increasing as fast as profits. By one measure, productivity increased by 155 percent between 1963 and 1976, but average industrial wages increased by 116 percent.

Redevelopment ...

was handled in the project area since the August session and no relocations took place in West Meadowbrook.

Staff rehabilitation officer, Ed Cobb, said that one rehabilitation job was completed and he added that while no money is has been available for rehabilitation work, the Commission hopes to receive funds by Oct. 1.

Cobb said that some $200,000 in Section 312 money has been requested and hopefully $100,000 will be designated by Oct. 1.

Commissioners authorized Laney to write a letter to the city stating the designated time and place of the Commission's meeting as stipulated by the corporation bylaws. The city had requested that in order to satisfy requirements of the Open Meetings Law, the Commission pass a resolution establishing the regular meeting time and place.

Laney said that he had talked with the city attorney and it was agreed that since the bylaws of the corporation state the time and place for the meeting, a resolution would not be necessary.

A five percent cost-of-living increase for the next fiscal year, plus a small merit increase, was approved by the board members. Approval was also given to the anticipated out-of-town travel schedule for the commissioners.

Big Day On Leaf Mart

The Greenville Tobacco Market recorded its highest average of the season Monday as 1,021,472 pounds sold for $1,481,565, an average of $145.04 per hundred pounds.

J. N. Bryan, sales supervisor of the Tobacco Board of Trade, said that an increase in leaf and cutters contributed to the record average while lugs, primings and non-descript tobacco declined in volume.

Top practical price paid yesterday remained at $1.55 per pound, he said.

Stabilization receipts accounted for only 1.37 percent of total sales.

For the season, the market has sold 23,751,754 pounds for $30,870,685, an average of $129.97 per hundred pounds.

Cars Collided At Intersection

An estimated $700 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 1:44 p.m. collision yesterday at the intersection of Tenth Street and College Hill Drive, according to investigating Greenville policemen.

Officers identified the drivers involved in the early-afternoon mishap as John Allen Conway III of 503 East 11th St., and Ennis Lee Chestang of 207 Greenbriar Dr.

Crawford Says He's Willing To Return To Eastern Europe

By FRED GOODALL
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — American businessman Francis J. Crawford says he's willing to be reassigned to Eastern Europe, even Moscow, despite his arrest, trial and release by the Soviets on currency violations.

Crawford said if he were to go back to Moscow he "would like to think they would not harass me or view me with any malice."

He said he was disturbed at his arrest, "but it's always a possibility when dealing with a foreign country that has different cultures, different ideas."

Crawford and Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., appeared Monday at a news conference with officials of International Harvester Co., the Chicago-based farm implement manufacturer for whom Crawford works as a salesman. Company officials said Crawford would be given another assignment in the company, but did not say in what capacity.

Percy said it is his understanding the State Department did not make a "deal" with the Soviet Union to free the 37-year-old Crawford in exchange for the release of two Russians arrested in Woodbridge, N.J., and accused of spying.

"To the best of my knowledge there was no swap," Percy said at a news conference arranged for Crawford. "To the best of my knowledge it was never considered by the State Department."

Crawford said he believes he was arrested in retaliation for the arrest of the two Russians in New Jersey, but stopped short of saying a deal was made for his release.

Crawford was convicted in a Soviet court Sept. 7 on charges of buying 20,000 rubles on the black market. He was given a five-year suspended sentence and allowed to leave the Soviet Union the following day.

The news conference was called by Harvester. Arthur McQuiddy, a vice president of the firm, said it was resuming trade with the Soviet Union.

The company, which has sold $300 million in equipment to the U.S.S.R. since 1972, had stopped all trade negotiations after Crawford's arrest.

GSA Contract Findings Aired

WASHINGTON (AP) — The General Services Administration, already the object of several federal investigations, has been paying millions of dollars to a New Jersey firm for chairs and file cabinets that do not meet specifications, it was reported today.

The Washington Post, quoting unnamed sources, said that GSA investigators had found the contract violations in an examination of Art Metal Inc., the agency's main supplier of office furniture.

GSA technicians who examined and tested the office furniture supplied by Art Metal found that it bore little resemblance to what GSA had specified when it sought bids from manufacturers, the sources were quoted as saying.

Although GSA knew from pre-production tests that the office chairs did not meet specifications, the agency chose to ignore those findings earlier this year and award Art Metal a $5.5 million contract to make the chairs, The Post said.

In the process, GSA turned down bids from three other firms whose chairs met specifications, sources told the newspaper.

Philip J. Kurens, president of Art Metal, was quoted as saying he couldn't comment on the matter because of a pending court case.

The firm has challenged in federal court a recent decision by GSA Administrator Jay Solomon to cancel a $9 million contract awarded to Art Metal in August to supply more filing cabinets.

Federal agencies have complained in the past that many of the filing cabinets required extensive repairs before they could be used.

The company, which last year received $25 million out of a total of $32 million in sales from GSA contracts, has been under investigation by the GSA in recent months.

Other federal investigations of GSA are looking into allegations that corrupt employees and contractors are costing taxpayers $66 million annually.

Rec Commission Meeting Set

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission will meet Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the administrative offices on Cedar Lane.

On the agenda are the following items: discussion of the fall program by Charles Vincent; consideration of an ordinance regulating conduct in public parks; a presentation by the Greenville Tennis Association; comments by Steve Molar, regional recreation consultant for the state; and special recognition of Chris McLawhorn, who placed first in the Hershey National Track and Field Youth Program in Huntington, W. Va. recently.

Personnel At Workshop Here

Approximately 100 law enforcement personnel from Pitt and surrounding areas were in Greenville this morning for a Traffic Records Workshop sponsored by the Governor's Highway Safety Program.

Purpose of the workshop, a spokesman reported, was to teach the correct use of a new accident report form and to discuss the make-up of the new form.

The session, which ended with a noon luncheon, was held at Angelo's.

Tour Reminds Fans Of Turbulent 1960s A Collection Of Misspellings

By PETER A. BROWN
 BOSTON (UPI)—Time has brought many of the same changes to Peter, Paul & Mary that it did to the anti-war and civil rights activists who marched to the group's music a decade ago.

Peter Yarrow, Paul Stookey and Mary Travers have just made a national concert tour after seven years of going their separate ways.

They're older. Yarrow and Stookey are balding and Miss Travers isn't quite the blond bombshell that even confounding those tumultuous years. They've changed, but then so has their audience.

Like the former students and protestors who packed auditoriums and outdoor theaters for the concert — paying up to $10 a ticket and many forking over $6 for a "reunion T-shirt" — they've gone into business and devoted more time to family life.

They played to sellout crowds on the 17-city tour, with the concerts as much a reunion for the audience as for the group that taught music — and politics — to much of the nation's young in the 1960s.

Not surprisingly, at least in Boston and from reports elsewhere too, the crowds were heavily comprised of the 25-40 age group, dressed in everything from blue jeans to three-piece suits.

Some mouthed the words of the songs. Others sang out loud.

"They and their music helped me develop my philosophy about life. They helped a generation shape their thinking," said Mary Ann Krzyzna, 30, of Brighton, Mass. She remembers seeing them "three or four times while in college. I went into the Peace Corps after college and to some extent they helped me make that decision."

"I don't think you can separate Peter, Paul and Mary from the anti-war and civil rights movements during the 1960s. It was a big and important part of your life," said Miss Krzyzna, now a nurse.

Yarrow, although acknowledging his comments "will get me accused of megalomania," agrees. "I think we had a profound impact. Music was the language of the new culture and we were in the eye of the hurricane," he said in an interview after the group's Boston concert.

agreed to go our separate ways. If you have one who is into politics, one into religion and one into other things, its difficult."

Yarrow, the most political of the three, married the niece of former Sen. Eugene McCarthy during the Minnesota Democrat's anti-war 1968 presidential campaign. Since settling in Malibu, Calif., with his wife and two children, Yarrow has continued doing political benefits from coast to coast while getting involved in music production.

Stookey, 41, like many of his young admirers, became a "born again" Christian. He, his wife and three children moved to Blue Hill, Maine, where he lives and records music in a converted henhouse near the ocean.

Miss Travers, 41, has been the most visible of the three since their split, doing a series of tours, by herself and with others. At one time she was the name act with an up and coming folk musician named John Denver. She and her two daughters now live in New York.

Not saddled by the requirements of concert tours, the three devoted more time to family life. They did their own albums, but none had anywhere near the success of the 11 done by the group.

This year they decided to get back together, but not for good. Their "project" includes a studio album done before the concerts began, a concert album to be done this winter, the tour and possibly a television special.

"We decided a long time ago we would talk about a reunion when it was right," said Yarrow. "Each of us have missed it. We probably would have done it before, but we had such divergent lives."

"If we do something again," said Miss Travers, "it will also be on a project basis. We all have our own private lives, private problems and private commitments. This is not a comeback, but a regrouping."

Their music combines the familiar old favorites, many of them songs whose words thundered around the Washington Monument at countless peace rallies, with new material.

Despite the political overtones, their work lacked the rage that characterized the songs of many of their contemporaries and may explain the group's appeal.

"There were other folk singers, but they represented the burn down the building types," said Steve Mills, 27, of Alexandria, Va., who caught the group's concert while in New England on vacation. "They (PP&M) sang songs that made you want to hurt and made you want to think. They reminded you of a time when you cared about the world and thought you could do something about it."

Yarrow acknowledged that many came for the nostalgia, but said, "we hope they take away more than that."

Perhaps to convey that message, the concert opened with a song telling the audience, "some things are different; some the same; some turn over; some don't change."

They closed with a number saying "for all we've been apart, we're still the same, only better."

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
 Associated Press Food Editor
 Americans have always enjoyed cooking and-or eating dishes from other countries.

However, misspelling the names of these foreign specialties began long ago and continues today. Here's our latest collection of such misspellings. First, one from almost 50 years ago.

In "Favorite Recipes of the Movie Stars," published in 1931, Helen Twelvetrees, described as "a young star who doesn't bother her head about calories and vitamins, but usually takes a salad for lunch just because she finds it tempting," gave a Mexican salad as her favorite. Its name was misspelled as "Wakimoli." The late Helen Evans Brown, in her "West Coast Cookbook," published in 1952, cited a similar choice misspelling: "waca molay."

GUACAMOLE is correct. In its simplest form it consists of mashed avocado, lemon juice, chopped onion, salt and pepper, garnished with lettuce and tomatoes. Now a days guacamole is usually offered as a dip with tortilla chips for scooping it up.

In a cookbook published by the women's committee of a Midwest philharmonic association a recipe for "ramalade" is given. In a leaflet circulated by a cooking utensil manufacturer, there's a recipe for "remolade."

REMOULADE is correct. The name of this French sauce would never be misspelled in New Orleans, its home in the United States. Remoulade, according to Larousse Gastronomique, is "mayonnaise to which gherkins, capers, parsley, spring onions, chervil, chopped tarragon and anchovy essence are added." New Orleans cooks wouldn't consider making remoulade without adding mustard.

A recipe for a German coffee-cake, contributed by a home cook, recently showed up as "kucken."

KUCHEN is correct. There are many varieties of this coffee-cake; a traditional one is a sweet yeast dough topped with apples or plums.

In a food newsletter, we found a recipe for a popular Slavic bun. Its name is misspelled: "kolachky." KOLACHKY, KOLACH, KOLACE, KOLATCH or KOLACHES are the acceptable spellings in Webster.

In a recent recipe contest, the name of a French tart was misspelled: "kische."

QUICHE is correct. We're happy to say that the contestant's ingredients are impeccable — a filling of eggs, cream, cheese and bacon baked in a pastry shell.

No confession. Cecily Brownstone is fond in one of her columns. Her misspelling: "proscuitto."

PROSCIUTTO is the correct way to spell the name of the Italian dry-cured spiced ham that is now made in the United States. Cecily swears she will never again forget that the "i" should come before the "u."

Reader Wants Abby's Address

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I really shouldn't be calling you "dear" because you let me down twice, but I am giving you another chance. Before I waste another postage stamp on you, I want to find out if you answer letters from people who want a personal reply. I wrote you two long letters and you never answered either one of them.

I would also like to know if there is some box number I can write to instead of sending my letter in care of the newspaper here. I live in a small town where everybody knows everybody else, and I have a close (and nosy) relative who works at the newspaper, so I'm not about to spill my guts (excuse me) in a Dear Abby letter in care of the newspaper.

One more question: Must a letter be signed to make your column?

PROBLEMS GALORE

DEAR PROBLEMS: I answer every letter accompanied by a stamped, addressed envelope. If you do not send the required stamped envelope, I am not obligated to respond. Letters may be unsigned and still make the column, however.

And, yes, I do have a Post Office box. It's ABBY: Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.

DEAR ABBY: On November 16, 1977, my wife and I read the following item in your column in the Herald-News in Joliet, Ill.

"Dear Abby: I've just had the biggest slapdown in my life. My insurance company has disallowed the prosthesis I bought for the mastectomy I had four years ago.

It's not a case of vanity, or of replacing a piece of female equipment. It's a case of restoring equilibrium. Without proper balance, a woman cannot walk straight. Also, her neck and shoulders ache from the lopsidedness.

Those little pads and falsies from the department store don't work. At my son's wedding, I was dancing and having a marvelous time, when my sister caught my eye and whispered urgently in my ear, "Please go to the ladies' room and check your falsie!" (It had worked its way up to my shoulder!)

After that, I phoned my local American Cancer Society to find out where to get a properly fitted prosthesis. Just two days after I had it, my neck and shoulder pain disappeared. And it feels so good and looks so natural.

Abby, if you print this, maybe some bright insurance executive will see it and realize such a prosthesis is not simply cosmetic. It's vital to the health of a woman who has had a mastectomy.

St. Louis Woman"

And then your reply:

"DEAR WOMAN: Here's your letter. Insurance executives?"

Well, this is what ensued:

My wife, Barbara, who is also my business associate, read that article and with the ammunition you provided, plus her knowledge of the health insurance business, we convinced one of our primary health insurance agencies that breast prosthetic devices should be considered a legitimate expense for insurance purposes!

In addition to altering current practice, we were able to obtain favorable consideration for a claim made two years ago.

Abby, what you publish does have impact, and you are to be complimented for bringing this matter to the attention of the public.

Very truly yours,
 BEN C. HILL, C.L.U.
 LEMONT, ILLINOIS

DEAR BEN: Your letter made my day. Thanks for writing.

TIMES HAVE CHANGED—Time has brought many of the same changes to Peter, Paul and Mary that it did to the anti-war and civil rights activists who marched to the group's music a decade ago. Softners Can Cause Stain

A mysterious-looking stain that appears on clothes after they come out of the washer is often blamed on minerals in the water or trouble with the machine.

In reality, the trouble may be caused by fabric softeners according to agricultural extension specialists at N. C. State University. Many of these kinds of stains fooled experts at first. A researcher finally determined that the stains resulted from pouring undiluted fabric softener directly onto clothes.

To avoid such stains, be sure to add fabric softener to the water and not onto the clothes. To remove such a stain, boil the item in a solution of water and two ounces of dishwasher detergent and rinse adequately.

Dried foods should be stored, tightly sealed, in a cool, dry, dark place.

Vests Have New Look

The new vests in women's fashions are a far cry from the tight fitting menswear-type vests of seasons past. Boxy and loose-fitting, they fit over big tops and dolman sleeve shirts.

Best of all, they can be used to update last year's wardrobe for a minimum amount of money say NCSU agricultural extension specialists.

Try wearing them over blazers instead of under them for a new look this winter.

Time Given Industry Hunting

Gov. Jim Hunt, recognizing that new industry is a benefit to the state, is spending a great deal of his time luring industrial prospects to North Carolina.

The governor reports that he averages one or two personal visits per week to prospects. Numerous phone calls are also made by the governor.

Hunt says he pushes hard. "I just tell them we want them and we'll do whatever it takes."

The governor's efforts and those of other state and local officials appear to be paying off. New manufacturing plants announced for the first half of the year amounted to $1.2 billion and they are expected to provide 6,000 new jobs.

Hunt also says he is being selective about industries approach, shunning the low paying operations, and we hope that is the case.

Perhaps as much as any governor since Luther Hodges, Gov. Hunt is giving his time to industry hunting. The payoff can be very big for North Carolina in additional jobs and more revenues for state and local governments through additional tax funds.

Living In Russia Involves Some Risk

After what must have been a nightmare trial U. S. businessman Francis J. Crawford was set to leave the Soviet Union last week.

Crawford received a suspended sentence after being convicted of purchasing rubles at black market rates. Many observers believe the arrest was in retaliation for the arrest of two Soviets in New Jersey.

There is the risk of arrest for any American living in Russia. It is a risk that applies equally to businessmen, diplomats or journalists.

Tackling Drunken Driving

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — A statewide system to attack the growing problem of drunken drivers is hoped for by officials of the North Carolina Department of Human Resources.

A task force of court personnel, law enforcement people, experts on alcoholism and others will begin shortly to study present law and come up with recommendations for future change.

Underlying this activity is the barebones system envisioned by Human Resources Secretary Sarah T. Morrow which will provide mandatory jail sentences for convicted offenders as a lever to guarantee individual participation in traffic schools and intensive rehabilitation programs.

Fleshing out the manner in which that basic approach will work will be the job of the task force and eventually the General Assembly.

Clearly, what is now happening in the way drunk drivers are treated is not working. The legislature from time to time has changed the law in various ways.

No Progress
Yet studies continue to show drunk driving as a factor in the majority of wrecks, and despite the breathalyzer tests and implied consent laws, the conviction rate shows no improvement.

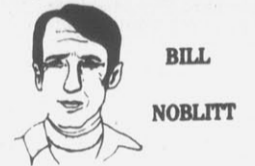

Mohe conviction rate varies greatly from one county to the next; ranging from better than 90 percent in Buncombe, Chowan, Currituck, Dare, Gates, Graham, McDowell, Montgomery, Perquimans, Randolph, Rutherford and Swain counties to less than half in Lincoln County and below 60 percent in Gaston, Rockingham and Stokes.

All of which has led an Institute of Government researcher to conclude that statistics do not show that new laws are having the desired effect, and the problem may be the lenient attitude the public has regarding drunk drivers.

The judges and district attorneys are elected officials. Do their attitudes reflect a public sentiment sympathetic to drunk drivers? Do jurors handle such cases with the attitude that "there but for the grace of God go I?"

One Institute of Government study concludes that all that can be done by law has been done, and removing drunk drivers from the road will have to await changed public attitudes.

BILL NOBLITT

It is also possible that the law has done too much. There are 21 state statutes on drunk driving, and within that collection are enough loopholes to drive a truck — even drunkenly.

Earl Griffith, assistant secretary for drug and alcohol abuse at the Department of Human Resources, says the lack of uniformity in the law and the strong local autonomy in handling drunk drivers are key problems in the present approach.

"We are starting from the bottom and working up to put together a system which will have positive impact," Griffith said.

Steps
A standard curriculum in the required traffic schools for first offenders, and the intensive rehabilitation and counseling program for repeat drunk drivers would be the heart of the program.

Those activities would be funded from fees collected from people convicted of drunk driving. Mandatory jail terms would be required to make sure the drivers participate. The underlying philosophy would be that anybody who repeats a drunk driving offense more than likely has a drinking problem and needs to come to grips with the likelihood he or she is an alcoholic — or on the way to becoming one.

Changed public attitudes are also needed, Griffith said, so that plea bargaining and reduced sentences in the courts would be lessened.

Ultimately, Griffith believes, the combination of mandatory sentences or alternative rehabilitation, statewide uniformity, and improved conviction patterns in the courts will lead to an attitude that "if I drive and drink, the chances of getting picked up are very good..."

Overweening Solicitude

WASHINGTON — A compulsive reader will read anything. The other morning, waiting on a slice of Arnold's Granola bread to finish toasting, I fell to reading the bread wrapper. The toaster was toasting, among other things, Thiamine mononitrate, mono- and diglycerides, calcium sulfate, ammonium sulfate and potassium bromate.

The label on a loaf of Safeway rye was even more extensive. This wrapper advised the presence of ferrous sulfate, thiamine hydrochloride, calcium propionate, mono-calcium phosphate, calcium carbonate, ammonium chloride and potassium iodate. It was impressive.

In theory, at least, such meticulously detailed labels also are informative. They are the consequence of rules and regulations imposed by the Food and Drug Administration that became effective July 1 as to bakery products. A comprehensive review of all food-labeling requirements is now in progress.

Eventually we will be knee-deep in ethoxylated diglycerides and homemakers will be rattling on like chemistry majors.

Yes, the newly required labels do inform, and it hard to quarrel with that function. But the recently published report of a House subcommittee on small business raises some sobering questions about the cost and value of these requirements.

What we have here is one more case of well-intentioned bureaucratic overkill. In order to provide some doubtful and speculative benefits to a tiny minority of consumers, the FDA has imposed new burdens and risks upon a major industry.

If the requirements had anything to do with health or safety, they could be rationally defended. If the rules were aimed at preventing fraud in the marketplace, no one could object. If there were a demonstrable, overwhelming demand from the buying public to know of protease enzymes in a loaf of bread, a political justification could be claimed. None of these factors is present. Bakery products present no threat to health or safety; the labeling requirements that had been in effect for 38 years were quite sufficient to prevent fraud; and as the subcommittee hearings made clear, the vast consuming, bread-buying public has raised no clamor whatever for chemical labeling. A few activist consumer outfits made noises, and the FDA's bureaucracy, eager for new rules to administer, leaped into action.

The House subcommittee directed its principal concern to the impact upon small bakeries. Evidently the little fellows have been having a hard time. Over the past 40 years, the number of independent bakers has declined from more than 10,000 to fewer than 1,000.

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — "My husband smokes like a fish," complained the woman in the supermarket the other day, which reminded me that another seminar in Obverse English might be in order.

Obverse English, you may recall from a previous simmering here in the stew pot, is delivering a glancing blow to the language so that everyday expressions and well worn cliches emerged slightly askew.

James Thurber, who lived in these exurban parts, first discovered this phenomenon in a house maid named Della who bit the mother tongue with her eye tooth so that she seldom could see where the rest of the sentence was going. She regularly startled the famous humorist with questions like: "Do you want cretones in your soup tonight?" and "Shall I burn the refugee in the incinerator?"

Since I last wrote about this rare knack for putting a little reverse English on the Queen's English, a number of readers have written in, reporting on how our living language is fertilized in their area and enclosing documented evidence.

September 12, 1938

After a car belonging to Hugh Sutton was stolen Sunday around 12:30 a.m., it struck a dwelling about eight miles from Ayden, wrecking the automobile and the home.

The car, estimated to have been cruising at a speed of 60 or 70 miles per hour skidded and struck the house about 25 feet from the dirt road, knocking part of the structure off its foundation.

The kitchen stove was upset; winter preserves were smashed; food was thrown over the floor. A local officer said the occupant of the house thought a "cyclone" had struck.

During the excitement the thieves, said to have been two men, made their getaway. Patrolman C. R. Williams expressed the opinion the men had been drinking.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Tax Fiasco Hurts Big Jim

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
CHICAGO — Failure to scant tax-cut fever abroad in the land has quickly shoved aside Gov. James (Big Jim) Thompson's presidential dreams and substituted a struggle for mere survival.

Most politicians still consider Thompson a sure winner over his under-financed, listlessly-supported Democratic opponent, State Controller Michael Bakalis. A Republican poll shows otherwise. Kept top secret by the Thompson camp, it reveals Bakalis within striking distance; one insider reports the difference less than 5 percentage points. "When Jim read that poll," a Republican politician told us, "he couldn't believe he had gone down so fast."

Believe it or not, it at least temporarily ended talk of the blond, 6-foot-6 charismatic governor as the savior of the Republican party's moderate wing. Plans for Thompson to win friends and influence delegates by campaigning around the country this fall have been abandoned. Aides prevailed on Thompson not to attend the recent Governors' Conference in Boston where his presidential prospects would have been a center of media attention.

Like California's Gov. Jerry Brown, Thompson missed the public's revision over high taxes; this summer he vetoed two tax-cut proposals. Unlike Brown, he bungled his recovery; the drive for a Thompson tax referendum has opened a snake's pit of political goblins undercutting his reputation as a crusading federal prosecutor which remains his basic political strength.

As 1978 began, Thompson seemed the sure winner for reelection and Bakalis a sacrificial lamb. Neither he nor his aides were interested in tax-cut measures introduced by state Rep. Don Totten, who ran Ronald Reagan's Illinois presidential campaign in 1976 and has promised to do so again in 1980.

When Totten visited Thompson to discuss a compromise version of his proposed constitutional amendment limiting state taxes, the governor turned thumbs down on any tax limitation. Thanks to Thompson's opposition, it died in the legislature. But the Democratic-controlled legislature did pass a Bakalis-backed tax rebate and a Totten bill to automatically lower taxes as inflation rises. Thompson vetoed both, though Republican politicians believe he should have used the item veto to get an amended version.

In following sound budgetary principles, Thompson was deaf to public anguish over rising tax burdens. Not until the hot breath of Proposition 13 reached the Midwest from California did the governor react. He personally drafted a proposition for the November ballot asking whether the public wanted unspecified tax limitation at an unspecified time. With some justice, Bakalis called it "Proposition Zero."

Now, the political pitfalls faced by the outsider in office converged on Thompson. Republican party workers, ignored by him for 19 months, dragged their Barbara Keating is a consumer advocate, but she does not operate or think in the Nader fashion. Mrs. Keating heads a group called Consumer Alert. In a recent speech she zeroed in on the cause of increasing prices.

This is the area ignored by most of the activists in consumer groups. They have ignored it so studiously that most of their efforts have resulted in great increases in prices paid by consumers for extremely doubtful protection, if any.

We laud Mrs. Keating on two counts: She recognizes the greatest threat to consumers as "...rising costs precipitated by over-regulation by the federal government..." and her group functions strictly by the contributions. She seeks to spur grassroots interest and to increase membership in Consumer Alert to several thousand.

Mrs. Keating said that nearly $1,000 of the cost of every car can be attributed to such safety devices as seat belts and emission control which have been mandated by government. She said that hamburger meat is affected by 41,000 different regulations "which surprisingly enough only raises the price about eight cents a pound. Consumers pay $62 billion a year for government regulations, which works out to about $300 for every man, woman and child," she said.

Among proposals opposed by Consumer Alert are government mandated airbags for cars, the elimination of nitrates from bacon and the banning of antibiotics in animal feeds. "There has been no proof of the harmfulness of nitrates and antibiotics to humans, and outlawing them has raised the price of food," Mrs. Keating said.

"Let the public decide what it wants and needs. Consumer Alert advocates a responsible balance. We just ask that businessmen produce a good product at a fair price without the intervention of government regulation. No one can speak for all consumers, and we don't try to," she said.

Without the inhibiting factors of regulatory control by government bureaucracy, the market place and competitive private enterprise will always serve to provide more people with more of the things they need and want.

Strength For Today

CARDIOLOGY
Many years ago a young physician named Martin Lloyd Jones, who was making a name for himself as a heart specialist, came to the conclusion that there was something fundamentally wrong with the human heart which medical science could not remedy. He therefore switched from cardiology to theology, entered the seminary, studied for the ministry, and became very prominent in the religious life of Britain.

Many people have discovered, as did Lloyd Jones, that the human heart is spiritually out of adjustment, but few people have the courage to take the bold step he did to correct the difficulty.

It is when we look at our own hearts and the sad, ignorant hearts of those who are round about us that we realize the wisdom of this young London heart specialist. Statistics tell us that heart trouble is on the increase. If we had statistics for the spiritual as well as the physical aspect of the problem, they would certainly be even more alarming.

Municipal Bonds To The Fore

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The "automatic" increase in income taxes that comes with inflation over the years has put more and more investors in a position to consider municipal bonds.

As most taxpayers know all too well, inflation tends to push individuals into higher and higher tax brackets even if their purchasing power remains the same.

Suppose for example, that a given family's taxable income rises from $19,000 one year to $20,500 the next.

If the annual rate of inflation is close to 8 percent, the family has made no gain whatsoever in real purchasing power — but it has climbed from the 28 percent income tax bracket into the 32 percent bracket.

This situation has prompted proposals in Congress that the tax structure be "indexed" to inflation, permitting higher tax rates only on income increases that exceed the inflation rate.

But even if such a measure is enacted, many Americans have already reached income levels where the tax-free feature of municipal bonds has appeal. In 1967, analysts at Standard & Poor's Corp. noted, only about one of every 50 American families had incomes above $25,000. By last year almost one in four were at $25,000 or higher.

A second factor making municipal bonds attractive at the moment, S&P noted, is the relatively high yield they offer after this year's general rise in interest rates. The firm's index of municipal bond yields recently stood at 6.04 percent.

Like other bonds, of course, municipals offer little or no protection against inflation. And sometimes the emotional impulse to save on taxes, regardless of other important considerations, can tempt investors to go into municipals when they would be better off elsewhere.

"You should only consider municipal bonds if tax-free income is more attractive than the after-tax return from other suitable investments," Standard & Poor's said.

"If you are seeking an inflation hedge and don't need additional income, growth stocks, offering you a chance for significant capital appreciation, would be a better choice. If all you want is safety, you would be better off in Treasury bonds or an insured savings account.

"And if you only need income and are in a moderate tax bracket, corporate bonds will generally bring you higher returns than municipals."

For those who have determined that municipals are suited to their needs, the firm offered these suggestions:

"Strive for diversification. If you don't have enough capital to invest in a few different issues, select a mutual fund or municipal trust."

"If you buy bonds on your own, stay with the higher ratings — AAA, AA or A — and the larger issues. In addition to greater safety, you will have greater marketability if you decide to sell."

The independents, to digress for a moment, have made great contributions to the industry. It was an independent, Smith's Bakery, in Mobile, that introduced wrapped bread in 1922; another independent, Zinzmaster Bakery in Minneapolis, stunned the baking world with sliced bread in 1931.

When the FDA first plunged into the formation of new labeling requirements, the small bakeries saw visions of bankruptcies ahead. The government's original proposal would have required every bakery to stock a tremendous inventory of different wrappers. Every ingredient was to be listed in order of predominance. Technically, a baker would have risked a heavy fine if at some point he changed his formula even slightly without changing his wrapper also.

Last April, responding to industry objections, the FDA relented. The new rule, effective in July, does not demand an ironclad listing by order of predominance. It also is anticipated that the FDA will take a reasonable view of the printing problem involved in getting all this stuff on the label of a cupcake sold in a vending machine. On other points, the FDA retreated not at all. Under the rules, it will be difficult and expensive for bakeries to experiment with new products. They will risk bureaucratic harassment whenever they make seasonal adjustments in their dough conditioners.

Who benefits from all this? Printers, packagers and bureaucrats — and an infinitesimal minority of highly educated consumers who know an ethoxylated diglyceride when they see one. A few persons who suffer from various allergies also may benefit. The general public is not truly informed, but merely bewildered.

And the new bread labels may be only the beginning. Hearings are now under way — they are scheduled for Little Rock and Washington in September, for Boston and San Francisco in October — on even more extensive requirements for all food products. From such overweening solicitude, may calcium propionate preserve us.

addressing a local women's club at a coffee klatch, heard herself introduced as "a very warm human bean."

Politicians seem to have a flair for this sort of verbal adagio. Tip O'Neill, the speaker of the House, told the American Society of Newspaper Editors in Washington he would "unturn every stone" to get to the bottom of the Korean influence peddling scandal.

In words misaimed at a convention of carnival geeks but exploding on the floor of the Louisiana Legislature, a Cajun lawmaker once advised that august body: "Don't bite your chickens before they hatch." It was he who also sought to sink an aid to dependent children bill with the ringing cry: "To hell with posterity, what's posterity ever done for us?"

Tax Forms Not Unduly Difficult, GAO Told

By LOUISE COOK

feet in collecting 589,000 signatures needed in a month to get the proposition on the ballot. Former Gov. Richard Ogilvie was among those ignored. While publicly denouncing Thompson's proposition, Ogilvie privately told Republican allies: "We've got to stop him." That was interpreted as opposing Thompson's drive for the White House.

Worst of all, Thompson did not appreciate the probability of forgery in an 11th-hour petition drive in Illinois. Despite highly publicized irregularities, the proposition has been put on the ballot, but court challenges and exposures persist. Fairly or not, it tarnishes Thompson's reputation as the U.S. attorney who put crooked politicians in jail — by Thompson's own assessment, still his political longshot.

Nor has Thompson fully adjusted to the politics of tax revolt. When they debated over statewide television in Carbondale Sept. 6, Bakalis closed by accusing the governor of "one of the great flip-flops of all time" in joining the tax limiters. Oddly, Thompson ignored the remark and closed by refuting Bakalis' charges that the state has not claimed sufficient federal welfare funds.

Earlier that day, Totten unveiled a new proposed constitutional amendment (intended for the 1980 ballot) limiting both state and local taxes. Thompson called to kid him about stealing his thunder on the Thompson proposition: "Turnabout is fair play," Totten replied. Thompson told reporters after the debate he might support Totten's new proposal — about three months too late.

Bakalis has told Totten he might endorse the new proposal, beating the governor to the punch. But Bakalis, too, is plagued by ambivalence on taxes. He is eager for backing from the well-financed teachers' union, formidable foes of tax limitation. After the Carbondale debate, he told newsmen he opposed any "tax freeze" because "it puts government in a strait-jacket" but the next day told us the Totten limitation is not a "freeze."

Thompson's greatest asset may indeed be Bakalis, who sounds like a liberal of the 1960s denouncing Thompson for not stressing rehabilitation at state prisons. Thompson comes over as a commanding presence, overpowering a colorless foe. Yet, that conceivably may not be enough. Big Jim Thompson has given a demonstration of how to self-inflict political damage in confronting the tax revolt.

The GAO, in a report issued earlier this year, said both the long and short forms are "written at a reading level beyond that of many taxpayers."

But a recent poll taken by the Roper Organization, Inc. showed that a large majority of people said the forms they filled out in April were "not very difficult" or "not difficult at all."

The reasons for the contradictory results are not clear. "Even if a group of taxpayers would say the forms were easier, I think there's a lot more that could be done," said Dick Fogel of the GAO.

The GAO based its report on the findings of a panel of experts, including a law professor, educators and a textbook publisher.

The Roper poll, conducted on behalf of H&R Block, Inc., a chain of tax preparers, was based on a survey of 2,007 persons, including 1684 taxpayers, who were interviewed in their homes in May.

Twenty-six percent of the taxpayers questioned said they made out their own returns in 1978, up from 23 percent in a similar survey in 1977. Those who prepared their own forms were broken into two groups: one group was asked to compare this year's forms with last year's and the other was asked how difficult the job was.

Thirty-five percent of the first group said this year's forms were less difficult than last year's and 45 percent said they were about the same. Forty-one percent of the second group said the forms were not very difficult to fill out and 34 percent said they were not difficult at all.

The Roper survey also found that 67 percent of the public believes the tax system is somewhat or quite unfair, up from 64 percent in 1977. One reason for the condemnation of the tax system as unfair may be lack of understanding. The Roper study found that:

—People greatly underestimate the amount of income tax paid by those in the upper brackets.

—Taxpayers overestimate the percentage of income they themselves pay in taxes.

—Three weeks after April 15, nearly half of those questioned did not know, within $100, how much they had paid in federal

Say Fish Kill By Chemical

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Authorities say they greatly underestimated the effects of a chemical spill that resulted from a train derailment near Wilmington Sept. 2.

Charles Wakild, regional supervisor for environmental management with the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, said Monday that about 37,000 gallons of glycol spilled from two tank cars, causing a fish kill in the area.

Seaboard Coastline Railroad had previously estimated that only 9,000 gallons of the chemical, used to make antifreeze, leaked from a single car.

State investigators said Monday they found dead fish in Mill Creek at a testing area about three miles downstream from the place where the pollutants entered the stream.

Wakild said the glycol and about 6,000 gallons of ammonium nitrate crossed about 100 yards of swamp and marsh from the crash site and entered the creek.

HELLO TO THE BIG APPLE — Former President Richard Nixon waves and smiles Monday night as he enters New York's Waldorf-Astoria Hotel at the start of a two-day visit. Brand Asbestos No. 1 Chemical Killer

By CHRIS CONNELL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Exposure to cancer-causing chemicals at American work sites may cause at least 20 percent of all cancer deaths — or nearly 80,000 people each year — with asbestos apparently the No. 1 chemical killer, government scientists say. The new estimates are sharply higher than past figures which placed the cancer toll from occupational exposure at only 1 percent to 5 percent, Joseph A. Califano Jr., the secretary of health, education and welfare, said Monday.

Indeed a single chemical, asbestos, may account for 17 percent of all cancer deaths annually. Other chemical culprits include arsenic, benzene and vinyl chloride.

Some 7.5 million workers potentially were exposed to four other substances, chromium, iron oxide, nickel and petroleum distillates, which could cause 3 percent to 18 percent of the cancers, the study added.

Childhood Deaths Due Cancer See A Decline

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Childhood deaths due to cancer have decreased nearly 40 percent in the United States during the past two decades, the American Cancer Society says.

The society released figures Monday that showed the United States ranking lower in childhood deaths from cancer than 31 of 43 nations checked by the World Health Organization.

Citing WHO statistics, the society said five of every 100,000 children in this country died from cancer annually in the late 1960s. Portugal had the highest death rate with eight per 100,000. Thailand had the lowest with one per 100,000.

In 1950, the U.S. rate was approximately 8 per 100,000, the society said at its three-day National Conference on Care of the Child with Cancer.

Dr. Robert W. Miller, chief of the National Cancer Institute's Clinical Epidemiology Branch in Bethesda, Md., told a panel of cancer researchers that further study of environmental hazards that may cause cancer is needed to help doctors develop new methods of prevention, early detection and treatment of cancer in the young.

In recent years, much has been learned about carcinogenesis in general from studies of cancer in children, or exposures dating back to childhood or even to intrauterine life," he said.

FTC Is Sued By Automakers

DETROIT (AP) — Three U.S. automakers are suing the Federal Trade Commission in an effort to block the agency's antitrust investigation of the auto industry.

General Motors Corp., two GM dealers, Chrysler Corp. and American Motors Corp. filed suit in U.S. District Court Monday claiming the FTC investigation is too broad and lacks purpose.

The suit also contends the federal agency has no authority to investigate the automakers' practices and lacks the basis to search for "suspected law violations on the part of the industry."

GM noted in the suit that GM staff personnel would be required to review some 200 million pages of records going back over 30 years to locate and produce the documents sought by the FTC.

In addition, the suit charges the investigation causes "competitive injury" to the industry by seeking confidential documents that would ultimately be made public.

No Evidence Sex A Factor

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Saying there is no concrete evidence that the University of North Carolina used sex as a factor to determine job tenure, lawyers for the school asked the U.S. Middle District Court to dismiss the sex discrimination lawsuit of Dr. Mary Carroll Smith, a former assistant professor of religion.

Dr. Smith joined the religion department faculty at Vassar College in New York last week. She had taught at UNC from 1976 until last spring under a federal injunction imposed until the suit could be settled.

Dr. Smith charged that the university did not rehire her because she is a woman.

But assistant attorneys general Edwin Speas and Betsy Bunting told U.S. District Court Judge Eugene Gordon that there was "no concrete evidence sex was a factor in the decision by defendants not to award promotion to the rank of associate professor or grant her reappointment to a second term as assistant professor."

Cheerleader Hospitalized

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A Georgia Tech cheerleader who hit his head on a track curbing Saturday during a flip before the Tech-Duke football game remained hospitalized today with a bruised spinal cord.

Dwayne Sanders, 19, was reported in stable condition at Duke Hospital with a fractured vertebrae in his neck. Doctors were trying to decide whether to move him back to Atlanta.

The injury paralyzed Sanders from the neck down, although Dr. Robert Wilkins said he had some use of his arms. Wilkins said it was too early to say what Sanders' prospects for recovery were.

Sanders was preparing for his first game as cheerleader Saturday by doing flips from a small trampoline. On one of them he was unable to stop the flip and struck his head on concrete near the track.

Miller Templeton, assistant dean of students at Georgia Tech, said Tech cheerleaders were sending cards and flowers to Sanders' hospital room.

Duke University president Terry Sanford Monday ordered a halt to the use of trampolines by Duke cheerleaders.

How's The Weather?

Deleware Busing Proved Calm

WEATHER FORECAST — Today's forecast extending into Wednesday includes rain and showers in a wide band from the Rocky Mountains east across the Mississippi River Valley and east toward the Atlantic coast, according to the National Weather Service. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Temperatures are expected to range somewhat above normal for the rest of this week as winds continue generally southerly. The threat of an afternoon thundershower also can be expected.

Today's weather was expected to bring scattered showers and thundershowers mainly near the coast and in the mountains, and they're expected to be more numerous over the mountains Wednesday.

Thundershowers were scattered across the Piedmont eastward to the coast Monday afternoon, with Wilmington measuring nearly an inch of rain. Showers, although widely scattered, lingered over a few counties in the west central part of the state early this morning.

The extended outlook calls for more scattered thundershowers Thursday and Friday, followed by clearing on Saturday.

Temperatures in the low to mid 80s Monday afternoon cooled into the 60s over interior areas early this morning while low readings in the mountains dropped to the 50s.

A weak low pressure system off the coast of Georgia was High temperatures today were expected to range generally in the 80s, with some 70s in the mountains.

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Public schools in northern Delaware were integrated virtually without incident as buses carried more than 21,000 students between city and suburbs under a court order that combined 11 school districts into one.

Gov. Pierre S. du Pont IV said Monday that he was "very, very proud" that "the people of our state have risen to the challenge." But he added: "One day does not make an entire school year. We have a long way to go."

The most serious problem encountered on opening day was the delay of some of the 600 buses that crisscrossed New Castle County, often making two trips of up to 17 miles each. Officials said 22 busloads of students were up to an hour late for classes.

Police reported only one scuffle as 92 schools integrated under the court order. Ninety of the 200 state policemen standing by were sent home two hours earlier than expected.

School officials said Monday's attendance was 93 percent of the 65,000 students expected to enroll. "It's not this high normally," said Philip A. Thoman, the school system's information director. "That's a wonderful first day figure."

"I'm very proud to be the superintendent of the school district today," said Carroll W.

Biggs. "I found there was less activity in my office today than there was last year operating just one of the districts."

U.S. District Judge Murray Schwartz's ordered Wilmington's school district merged with 10 suburban systems. Of the 47,000 students riding buses in the new district, more than 21,500 are being bused to achieve racial balance.

"I think everything is going to be okay here," said Robert Carroll, 16, one of the city residents attending Wilmington High School.

The school changed from predominately black to predominately white under the court order. The percentage of blacks in the district's schools ranges from 13.7 percent to 30.2 percent.

James Cornish, a 16-year-old senior at the school, said he was pleased at the absence of arguments and wisecracks. "Nobody wanted to start any trouble," the Wilmington resident said.

Biggs attributed the lack of trouble to "a lot of time spent in the community by a lot of people" and a community decision that "it wasn't right to disrupt the children's education."

The major anti-busing groups in northern Delaware have opposed demonstrations at the schools and many of the most outspoken parents took their children out of county schools during the 22 years the case wound through the courts.

To Ask Further CP&L Hearings

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission has decided to call for further hearings on the Carolina Power & Light Co. Shearon Harris nuclear plant in the wake of charges that it was misled by its own staff.

The NRC decision to reopen hearings came less than two weeks after it apparently had closed its docket on the Shearon Harris case by rejecting a last-ditch appeal by the North Carolina Conservation Council to halt construction of the $4.2 billion plant.

The charge that the NRC had been misled by some of its staff came from the Atomic Safety and Licensing Board, which held hearings on the plant in Raleigh last year. The ASLB told the NRC in a letter written Aug. 30 that two supervisors of the NRC Office of Inspection and Enforcement did not tell the whole truth about CP&L's ability to safely build and operate the plant.

Authentic English Stoneware. Free. From BB&T.

English Stoneware is something special. Made the way it's been made for over 150 years. By hand. By craftsmen.

Potters take the clay from their native England and fashion it into distinctive shapes. Each piece is individually dipped in a glaze. Then hand decorated by a talented artist.

All this care does make an elegant difference, recognizable in subtle variations from piece to piece.

By saving at Branch Banking and Trust Company, you can get your first three-piece place setting free.

That's a hand-crafted cup, saucer and dinner plate free, just for depositing $25 or more, in a new or existing BB&T Regular Savings Account at any BB&T office.

12 piece snack set for four.

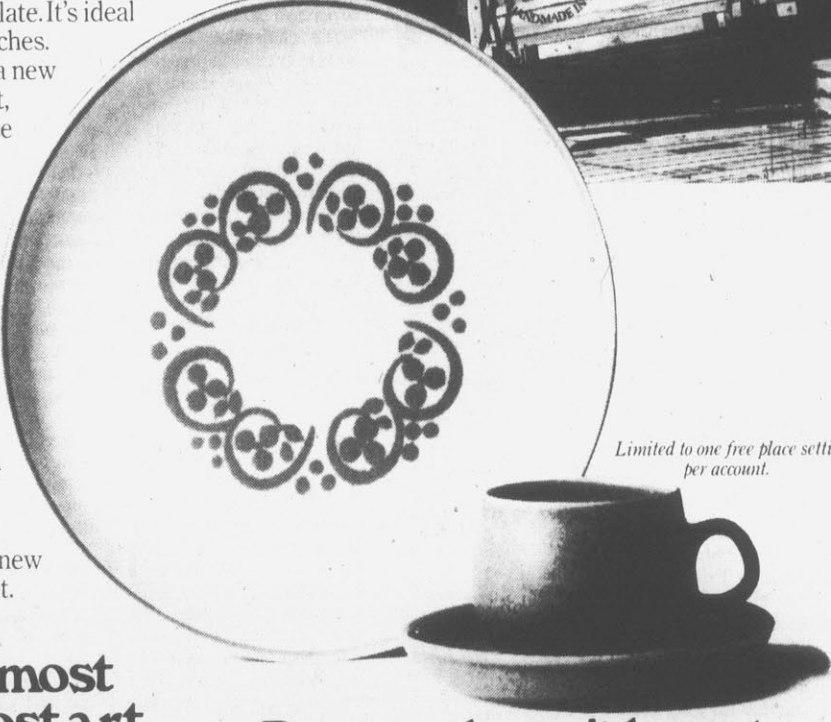

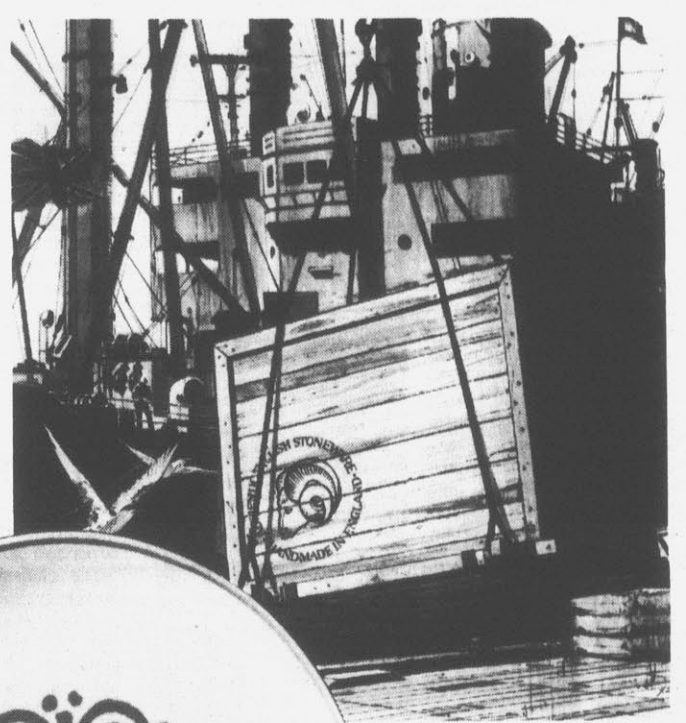

Each snack set consists of a coffee mug, soup/cereal bowl and a salad/luncheon plate. It's ideal for snacks, breakfasts and light lunches.

When you deposit $500.00 in a new or existing BB&T Savings Account, you may purchase this twelve-piece snack set for four for only $31.75.

26 piece service for four.

Entertain the idea of having enough Stoneware for a dinner party this evening: four dinner plates, four cups, four saucers, four bread and butter plates, four soup/cereal bowls, a 1.5 quart casserole dish with lid, an oval platter, a sugar bowl with lid, and a cream pitcher.

They can all be yours for only $65.00. Simply deposit $1,000 in a new or existing BB&T Savings Account. And entertain.

Limited to one free place setting per account.

Almost a lost art.

This Stoneware had its origin in Belper, England, which is near the origin of another famous story. That of Robin Hood. Sherwood Forest and Nottingham are just a short distance away.

Here, craftsmen have passed the secrets and skills of their art from father to son to grandson. Establishing a tradition of unsurpassed hand-craftsmanship.

Each piece of Authentic English Stoneware is hand-formed by craftsmen, glazed by hand, and the decorations are painted on by skillful artists.

The result is beautiful in an honest, natural way.

Matching completer pieces at special low prices.

When you make a savings deposit of $25 or more, you may purchase completer pieces at special low prices. For example, additional three-piece place settings are only $6.49 each. And you may pay for your purchases with cash, check or Master Charge. Whichever is most convenient.

If you've ever priced Authentic English Stoneware, and it's only available in the finest stores, you know that BB&T's offer is a remarkable value.

Beauty doesn't have to be fragile.

Authentic English Stoneware is as practical as it is pretty. You can do things with this Stoneware that you'd never think possible.

You can use it in a regular or microwave oven. You can freeze in it. You can put it in the dishwasher.

And yet, it will look like new after years of this kind of hard use.

This Stoneware is so strong that the supplier gives a limited two-year warranty. Which you can pick up at any BB&T office.

Start your collection today.

Stop by any BB&T office today and get your first place setting of Authentic English Stoneware free with a deposit of $25 or more in a new or existing savings account. And while you're at the bank, pick up a complimentary copy of our fully-detailed brochure.

Authentic English Stoneware is something nice to have. And BB&T is offering you a nice way to get it.

Wilson, 50.00; Rocky Mount, 49.00; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Chadbourne, Ayden, Pine Level, Laurinburg and Benson, 50.00; Tarboro and Bethel, 47.00-47.50; Salisbury, 48.00; and Spivey's Corner, 46.75-47.75.

Poultry, RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock broiler market was unsettled for next week, supplies moderate, demand moderate, weights desirable to heavy. The dock weighted average price for this week is 47.30. Estimated average slaughter for today 1,452,000.

Hens, RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina hen market was higher, supplies moderate, demand good out of state. Prices paid per pounds for hens over seven pounds at farm for Monday and Tuesday slaughter 19 cents.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices declined slightly today, backing off a bit after what analysts described as a disappointing showing by the market on Monday. Losers held a 5-3 lead over gainers in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, and the noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off 2.94 at 904.80.

Analysts said high hopes for this week had built up among investors after the Dow Jones industrial average reached its highest level in more than a year last Friday. But after an early 6-point advance Monday, the Dow turned back and finished unchanged for the day.

The economic news background was varied. The action of the money markets Monday seemed to confirm that the Federal Reserve had sought to tighten credit further. On the plus side, analysts cited apparently improved prospects for Senate passage of a bill calling for gradual removal of price controls on new discoveries of natural gas. Most energy stocks were fractionally higher. Del E. Webb Enterprises dropped 1 1/2 to 30 1/2 in active trading. The company said preliminary operating results for July and August indicated its third quarter earnings would be down as much as 30 percent from the like period last year.

The NYSE's composite index lost 13 to 60.25. But the American Stock Exchange market value index, already at a new high, gained another .18 to 176.48.

Volume on the Big Board slowed to 14.86 million shares as of noon time, against 19.14 million at the same point Monday.

development activities such as independent study, research, endowed chairs and professorships.

New faculty members, he pointed out, "will have to achieve much higher levels of accomplishment than in the past," in order to receive tenure at the school.

As for the school's physical facilities, Brewer told the chamber members he hopes to make East Carolina, "the prettiest campus in the state, join with Greenville and Pitt County in a major beautification campaign," to make the area an ecological showplace.

As far as buildings are concerned, Brewer said, "one of the desperate needs" at the school is renovation of Wright Auditorium or the construction of a new auditorium to seat about 2,500 persons.

And the university, he said, has requested a new classroom building and new administration building.

The chancellor said, too, that Memorial Gymnasium needs to be renovated and that a new intramural gym — a possible addition to Minges Coliseum — could be used to alleviate the demand on Minges, which is used now as an intramural and intercollegiate athletic facility.

Brewer suggested that a 12,000 to 15,000 seat field house-coliseum could be in the future. "I'd like to see us think about some joint effort," with the city and county, Brewer commented, on a civic center coliseum facility. "I don't know whether the state would let us do it," Brewer said, "but it's an interesting idea. We might provide the land," with the city and county building the building, he illustrated.

As far as athletics is concerned, Brewer said, "East Carolina must become very aggressive in seeking membership in some athletic conference or building a new one." The school's future, he emphasized, "is not as an independent."

Brewer said East Carolina also needs to, "go out and secure four 200 pound quarterbacks... completing 60 per cent of their passes."

The chancellor said the university must, "create a situation where every student may reach maximum potential... create the kind of learning situation where every student reaches his maximum potential."

"Education," according to Brewer, is "a total experience," suggesting that the school should expand cultural opportunities available to the students, as well as other programs.

The chancellor noted that housing is of great concern to the school's administration.

"I am confident," he said, "we lose students simply because there's no place to live. Our enrollment, is being limited," by housing in Greenville, and termed it, "a most serious problem."

Brewer suggested that another dormitory might be requested for the university if private enterprise can't provide for the housing needs of students.

Brewer said the people of Eastern North Carolina, "will determine what our

Subdivision Is Annexed By Winterville Board

WINTERVILLE — The town board last night annexed the 29.72 acre Weatherington Heights subdivision and received requests to annex two more tracts of land.

A score of homes are under construction in the Weatherington Heights subdivision, bordered on the South by Roberson Heights and on the North by secondary road 1130.

Requests to annex a lot East of Cooper Street, bought by the Kiwanis Club for a public park, and a tract of land East of W. H. Robinson School on which 30 units of public housing are being constructed by the Mid-East Housing Authority, were received by the board and accepted for investigation and consideration.

In other business the board amended the town's dog ordinance, redefining running at large and adding a requirement that all dogs four months old or older wear a collar or harness with a current rabies vaccination tag attached.

Running at large, as redefined by the amendment, means the "presence of any dog on any property, public or private, not owned by such dog owner unless dog is held in control by leash or other adequate means of physical control by a person sufficiently strong to hold such dog in control at all times."

The board also approved resolution authorizing completion of a full application for $496,000 Community Development rehabilitation grant, and denied a request to allow Sunnyside Eggs to use the town's sewer system to dispose of wastes.

Who's On Third?

Umpire Joe West of Greenville is emphatic that Chicago's Scott Thompson (1) is out at third base since Doug Rader (on bag) was there first after returning to the base in the ninth inning. New York's Sergio Ferrer offers his opinion that Rader should be out, while Lenny Randle (11) watches. It was all moot as the Cubs won 9-4. (AP Laserphoto)

Sox Ease Back Into 1st

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

Two home runs by Jim Rice helped the Boston Red Sox beat the Baltimore Orioles 5-4 and return Boston to undisputed possession of first place in the American League's East Division.

"This could turn us around," said Rice Monday night, aware that almost anything positive would represent a reversal for the Red Sox. They had lost nine of their last 11 games — including four straight to New York — and had seen the top spot slip from their grasp.

"At this point, I'm just worried about winning — and I don't care how," said Boston Manager Don Zimmer after Rice's 40th homer of the year gave the Red Sox a half-game lead over the idle Yankees.

Rice hammered a sixth-inning homer and his game-winner came on Joe Kerrigan's first pitch of the eighth.

In the other AL games, Kansas City clubbed Oakland 7-

2. Texas blanked California 1-0. Milwaukee trimmed Seattle 5-3. Minnesota nipped Chicago 3-1, and Cleveland beat Toronto 6-4 before losing 7-1.

Royals 7, A's 2

Darrell Porter hit two home runs and Amos Otis hit one to back the four-hit pitching of Marty Pattin and expand the Royals' lead to 1½ games over second-place California in the AL West Division.

Rangers 1, Angels 0

Ferguson Jenkins held California to three hits and fanned five to take over ninth place on the all-time strikeout lists in carrying the Rangers past the Angels. Jenkins raised his total to 2,584 strikeouts, passing Bob Feller's 2,581 and Warren Spahn's 2,583 in reaching the all-time Top Ten.

Brewers 5, Mariners 3

While the Yankees and Red Sox have battled for first, third place Milwaukee has stayed within 4½ games of the lead. Larry Sorensen, 17-10, was backed by RBI doubles from Don Money. Sixto Lezcano and Ben Oglivie as the Brewers won for the fifth time in seven games.

Twins 3, White Sox 1

Roy Smalley's two-run, fifth-inning homer powered Minnesota past Chicago. The White Sox protested the game, claiming the Twins' Willie Norwood wasn't fully in uniform because his name wasn't on the back of his jersey.

Cleveland 6-1, Blue Jays 4-7

Willie Horton drove in two runs and scored three to pace Toronto in the nightcap after Gary Alexander's two-run homer in the fifth had helped Cleveland triumph in the opener.

The Indians' Andre Thornton hit his 30th homer in the seventh inning of the first game, becoming the first Cleveland player to reach that milestone since Rocky Colavito did it in 1966.

Contest Winners

Randy Allen of 11 Carolyn St., Branch's Estates, Greenville, is the winner of the first weekly "Daily Reflector" Football Contest.

Allen correctly picked the winners in 27 of the 32 football games listed in last week's contest to take first place in the field.

Second place went to Earl Wilson of 204 Staffordshire, Greenville. He correctly picked the winners in 25 games. His victory, however, came on the basis of his point total pick. He picked 69 points as the most to be scored in any one game. A total of 68 points were scored in Tulsa's 35-33 win over Virginia Tech.

Twelve other people also picked 25 games correctly, but were further off in the point total.

The tie game between Illinois and Northwestern was counted as an incorrect guess on all entries, since it is possible to pick a tie in the contest.

The second of the ten weekly contests appears in today's paper.

Pirates Lose Fifth In Row; Giants Fall

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

The pennant hopes of the Pittsburgh Pirates and San Francisco Giants may be turning into so many shattered dreams thanks to untimely losing streaks and the winning ways of the teams they are chasing.

The Pirates, the hottest team in baseball less than a week ago, lost their fifth straight game Monday, a 10-3 pasting by the first-place Philadelphia Phillies. That dropped Pittsburgh five games behind the National League East leaders.

The Giants also fell five games back in the NL West by losing to Los Angeles 7-2. The Dodgers have beaten the Giants three times in eight days and San Francisco has lost five of its last six.

Elsewhere in the NL, Montreal's Ross Grimsley had a perfect game for 7-3 innings in the Expos' 3-1 victory over St. Louis; the Chicago Cubs beat the New York Mets 9-4; Cincinnati edged Houston 9-8 and Atlanta bested San Diego 7-2.

Pittsburgh started off well against Steve Carlton, getting three runs and seven hits in three innings. Willie Stargell had a two-run homer in the third, but Carlton limited the Bucs to one hit the rest of the way.

The Phillies' bats were hardly quiet, including Carlton's. He singled in two runs in a six-run fifth against Pittsburgh rookie Don Robinson, 12-6. Bake McBride closed the assault with a two-run homer.

Giants Manager Joe Altobelli was grim after Davey Lopes drove in three runs and Ron Cey belted two homers to beat San Francisco ace Vida Blue, 16-8.

"We have no options left," he said. "We have to win the next one with them, then have a strong homestand."

Expos 3, Cardinals 1

Grimsley retired the first 22 batters before George Hendrick lined a double to break up the perfect game. With the victory, Grimsley, 18-9, who signed with the Expos as a free agent last winter, tied Phil Niekro for the league lead in victories and equaled the Montreal club mark set by Carl Morton in 1970.

Cubs 9, Mets 4

Bobby Murcer had three hits, including a three-run homer, while extending his consecutive hit streak to eight at-bats, two short of the NL record. Dennis Lamp went the route with a 10th hit.

Reds 9, Astros 8

Cincinnati scored six times in the seventh, with George Foster's grand-slam homer the big blow, to take a 7-6 lead. Houston jumped ahead 8-7 in the top of the ninth on consecutive home runs by Bruce Bochy and pinch-hitter Jesus Alou. Then Ken Griffey pinch-hit a two-run single in the bottom of he ninth to vault the Reds to victory.

Braves 7, Padres 2

Gary Matthews slammed five hits, including a homer and a double, and Larry McWilliams won his eighth game in nine decisions since joining the Braves in mid-July.

Ohio State is sixth with 891 points, Texas seventh with 833, Southern Cal eighth with 780, UCLA ninth with 777 and Texas A&M 10th with 544.

The second Ten, in order, includes Missouri, Nebraska, Louisiana State, Pittsburgh, Notre Dame, Florida State, Kentucky, Washington, Iowa and Maryland.

Eight Get Awards

Winners' Awards were few and far between on the East Carolina University football team following Saturday's 29-13 loss to N.C. State.

Only eight players were graded out as winners by the coaching staff after a review of game films.

Charlie Carter was selected as Player Of The Week in the defensive backfield, while Zack Valentine received the award as a defensive lineman.

Billy Ray Washington was chosen Player of the Week in the offensive line, with Ruffin McNeill selected on the specialty team. No award was made to an offensive back.

Others receiving winner awards were Jeffrey Warren, Wayne Perry, Marvin Elliot and Rodney Allen.

Wants To Hold Purse

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — As much as $50,000 of Leon Spinks' proceeds from his fight against Muhammad Ali Friday night could be placed in escrow pending the outcome of a damage suit against him by a Jacksonville businessman.

U.S. Magistrate Ken McCotter made the recommendation to U.S. District Judge John Larkins Jr. Monday night that the money be put in escrow.

Larkins will decide whether the $50,000 should be held by the clerk of the federal court in New Bern pending resolution of the suit for which no trial date has been set.

Spinks is expected to earn more than $3 million from his heavyweight championship bout with Ali Friday night in New Orleans.

Jacksonville businessman John Lutz filed a civil suit last month accusing Spinks of breach of contract. Lutz said Spinks had made an oral promise to hire Lutz as his business manager several years ago.

Lutz said he was an adviser to Spinks when the boxer was in the Marine Corps at Camp Lejeune near Jacksonville.

The suit seeks $1 million in punitive damages and one-half of Spinks' earnings as a boxer for three years from the time he turned professional in 1976.

McCotter heard more than eight hours of arguments on motions surrounding the suit Monday before making the recommendation. Spinks was not present for the hearing.

Women Set Net Slate

East Carolina's women's tennis team will face a six-event schedule this fall which includes home matches with N.C. State, Duke and North Carolina.

Coach Barbara Olschner's first Pirate team opens at home on September 21 at 2 p.m. against the Wolfpack and closes the fall campaign in Greenville against the Tar Heels on November 6.

The complete schedule: September 21 N.C. State; 28 at Wake Forest; 29-30 at Methodist Invitational Tournament; October 4 Old Dominion; 31 Duke; November 6 North Carolina.

WEEKLY PRIZES

1st PRIZE $15.00

2nd PRIZE $10.00

CONTEST RULES

1. Thirty-two football games are placed on these pages. Pick the winner of each game (not the score) and write the team name opposite the advertiser's name on the entry blank. The entrant picking the most correct winners each week will be awarded $15.00. Second place $10.00
2. Pick a number which you think will be the most number of points scored by both teams in any one of the week's games listed and write your answer in the space provided on the entry blank. This will be used to break ties. In the event of a further tie the money will be equally divided between the winning entrants.
3. Only one entry per person per week. The contest is open to all except employees of The Daily Reflector and their immediate families.
4. Entries must be in The Daily Reflector office not later than 5:00 p.m. Friday or post marked not later than Friday p.m. Address entries to: FOOTBALL CONTEST, P.O. Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. (Reasonable Facsimiles also accepted.)

Angry Vikings Finally Win

By SCOTT PAVILLON
AP Sports Writer
BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) - It took the steady foot of a placekicker nobody wanted for four years to give the Minnesota Vikings an overtime victory over Super Bowl finalist Denver Monday night.

Rick Danmeier, signed as a free agent by the Vikings and placed on the injured reserve list last season, booted a 44-yard field goal with 2:56 left in sudden death to give Minnesota the 12-9 triumph in the nationally televised National Football League game.

"It was just a matter of kicking the ball straight and getting it up in the air," said Danmeier, who had tryouts with Atlanta in 1974, Minnesota in 1975, Chicago in 1976 and the Vikings again in 1977.

"As soon as I hit it and got it over the line I felt it was going to be good," he said. "I kicked it right down the middle. It was a little low, but I wasn't really worried."

Danmeier, trying to erase memories of recently retired kicker Fred Cox, also kicked field goals of 24, 46 and 21 yards to give Minnesota a 9-0 lead after three quarters.

The Vikings felt they had the game won in regulation time, but a controversial 25-yard field goal by Jim Turner as time expired sent the game into overtime.

Earlier Denver scored on a 1-yard run by Jon Keyworth, but Alan Page blocked the extra point try.

Trailing 9-6, substitute quarterback Norris Weese engineered a 37-yard drive to the Viking 5 with 11 seconds to play and the Broncos out of time outs.

Weese rolled to his right and was dropped for a 3-yard loss, but the officials stopped the clock with three seconds left, which gave Denver time to line up and get the kick away.

The Vikings were infuriated. Coach Bud Grant, in an uncharacteristic display of emotion, rushed onto the field to argue with referee Don Wedge and had to be restrained by Page.

"With three seconds to go how can you put a ball in play and get the kicking team on the field?" Grant asked. "There is no explanation to my way of thinking. He (the referee) was just about incoherent when I got out there. He was asking for help from other officials."

Grant replaced regular quarterback Fran Tarkenton with Tommy Kramer after Minnesota won the toss and elected to receive. Tarkenton said he had injured the thumb in his throwing hand early in the game and was having trouble gripping the ball. Kramer took the Vikings 56 yards in 10 plays, sparked by a 14-yard pass to Robert Miller and a 15-yard personal foul penalty on Denver's Don Latimer to get Minnesota into position for the winning kick.

"We had opportunities to win in regulation time," noted Bronco Coach Red Miller. "But we didn't get things going our way until late, maybe too late."

Both teams are now 1-1.

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) - Former Wake Forest standout Rod Griffin said Monday night he has agreed to terms of an extended contract with the Denver Nuggets of the National Basketball Association.

An All-Atlantic Coast Conference forward for the Deacons last season, Griffin said in a telephone interview from the Nuggets' rookie camp that he was satisfied with the contract worked out by agent Donald Bell and Carl Scheer, president and general manager of the team.

He refused to disclose terms of the contract but said it covers more than one year. After attending the Wake Forest-Virginia football game in Winston-Salem Saturday night, Griffin flew to Denver Monday morning for the opening of a training camp for rookies. The first-year players will join the veterans for practices beginning Friday.

"I don't know what they (the Nuggets) will do with me. I am prepared to do whatever they ask me," said Griffin, who played forward for the Deacons. He said he expects the team to decide what position he will play after viewing more practices.

Griffin, the 17th draft choice of the Nuggets, averaged 21 points and 10 rebounds to lead the ACC in both categories last season. He is Wake Forest's fourth all-time scorer with 1,985 points. "Rod has great hands and he is strong," Brown said. "He has played in a great conference in the ACC and he has showed he can play under pressure. There are big games one after the other in the ACC and that is the way it is the pros. You are always going up against good players. Rod has always seemed to get the job done."

"We feel he is as good as anyone shooting from 15 feet in," Brown added. "His physical strength is an asset and he jumps well from a standstill. We may have to work some with him on defense."

announced his retirement only to change his mind, said Monday that he would have quit the ring "if I didn't get another chance at Spinks or if I didn't think I could beat him."

This time, Ali's talk of retirement has the ring of being genuine. He badly wants to leave the fight game with the title he lost to the 25-year-old Spinks on a split decision last Feb. 15 in Las Vegas, Nev. And another fight after Friday's, should Ali win, would be risky at his age. If he beats Spinks, Ali would consider himself champion of all the world, even though the World Boxing Association is the only one of the two major boxing governing bodies which recognizes the fight in the Superdome as a title bout.

The World Boxing Council, which withdrew title recognition from Spinks for failure to live up to an agreement to fight Ken Norton, considers Larry Holmes champion.

"Holmes is a paper champion," said Ali. "I will go down as the first man to win the title three times. It will be no contest. He won't be as good as he was the first time. He can't be."

Ali, who is back in full voice for this fight after refusing to talk to the media for 2 1/2 months leading up to the first fight, found time to recognize Spinks' youth and ability.

"If he is as good as he looked the first time," said Ali, "he'll be around for five or six years. He's a good heavyweight champion because he beat me."

Pick Top Players GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) - North Carolina State free safety Woodrow Wilson and Wake Forest nose guard James Parker have been named Atlantic Coast Conference defensive players of the week for their part in football victories last Saturday.

Wilson, a 5-9, 179-pound junior, intercepted two passes as N.C. State defeated East Carolina 29-13. Wilson returned one 86 yards for a touchdown and nabbed the other in his end zone to end a Pirate threat.

Parker, a 5-10, 205 pound junior from Philadelphia, was cited by his coaches and by Virginia Coach Dick Bestwick as being instrumental in Wake Forest's 14-0 shutout of Virginia. He was credited with 11 takedowns.

The players were selected by a committee of the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association. Earlier, Duke quarterback Stanley Driskell and Maryland tight end Eric Sievers won offensive honors.

Flag Ball Registration WINTERVILLE - Registration for boys and girls flag football will be held Wednesday at A.G. Cox Field in Winterville. Registration will be from 3:30 to 4 p.m. The program is open to youths aged 6-10. There will be a $3 fee for shirts.

The league is also seeking interested adults to help in coaching. Anyone interested is asked to contact Ricky Phillips at 756-7065 between 2 and 5 p.m.

Coming Unbuckled

Minnesota Viking head coach Bud Grant loses his temper and almost loses his belt in an argument with referee Don Wedge at the conclusion of the regulation time of the game with the Denver Broncos. Grant and quarterback Fran Tarkenton (1) argued that the clock had run out when Denver was allowed to kick a tying field goal. (AP Laser-photo)

New Comedy To Aid Rating Race

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC, in its quest to stay first in ratings this season, will get much help from a new comedy premiering tonight. It's "Taxi," starring Judd Hirsch and a first-rate supporting cast.

Set in New York, it concerns the lives of folks laboring for the Sunshine Cab Co. Hirsch plays the only real cabbie. The others are just hacking until they get a break in their real calling.

They're guys like Tony (Tony Danza), a young boxer who tends to spend much time prone and unconscious on the canvas.

Which earns him considerable needling from the cheerfully sarcastic taxi dispatcher (Danny De Vito), who inquires: "What's it like having a cauliflower back?"

There also is Bobby (Jeff Conway), an unsuccessful actor who tells pal Tony he's up for a part in the play, "Equus," in which he'd play a horse.

"Yeah?" says his dim friend. "Which end?"

And there's the immigrant mechanic, Latka Gravas (played by a brilliant young comic, Andy Kaufman). His spirit is willing but his English is fractured beyond repair. Two other regulars, Marilu Henner and Randall Carver, round out the excellent ensemble.

Tonight's opener has the Sunshine boys lining up at a pay phone in the garage. They've learned the coin mechanism is malfunctioning and they can call anywhere in the world free.

In one of the show's many funny bits, Tony, a Vietnam vet, rings up Bangkok to say hello to a girl he loved while on leave there.

"Yes, operator, I want the V.I.P. Massage Parlor," he says. A short pause. "I'd like to speak to No. 12." Another pause. Then he sighs: "They say since the war's over they only go up to No. 9."

"Don't know if civilians will catch it, but GIs who've sampled Bangkok sure will. During the war, the city did have a fabled massage parlor where the ladies actually wore numbers to identify themselves."

The show centers around a call Hirsch is prodded into making to Brazil to talk to his daughter. He hasn't seen her since his wife left him 15 years ago, moved to Brazil and remarried.

He finds that the daughter, now 17, will soon fly from Rio to attend college in Portugal.

"What's her major, sardines?" he asks in amazement. Upon learning his daughter (Talia Balsam) will stop briefly in Miami the next day to change planes, he borrows a cab. And, with four colleagues, he roars down there for a brief, bittersweet and beautifully played reunion scene with her.

Kind of a slim plot, yes, but the dialogue, acting and direction give it all the sparkle, comic precision and timing that made the "Mary Tyler Moore Show" of yesteryear such fun to watch.

But then, consider that four MTM graduates — James L. Brooks, Stan Daniels, David Davis and Ed Weinberger — created "Taxi," produce it and wrote the premiere plot.

Looks like they'll have to put up with another winner.

A WONDERFUL WORLD — Actor Ron Howard and actress Suzanne Somers wave, surrounded by Disney characters including Minnie Mouse, Donald Duck, Poh Bear, Tiger, Capt. Hook, Goofy, Mickey Mouse, and The Seven Dwarfs during the taping of NBC's salute for the 25th anniversary of the Wonderful World of Disney series in Los Angeles. (AP Laserphoto)

Driver Indicted By Grand Jury

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Wake County grand jury indicted James Carl Adams Jr. Monday on charges of driving his pickup truck through a crowd at a tavern parking lot killing two and injuring six others.

Adams, 28, of Selma, was accused of murder in the deaths of Dale Gordon Logue of Moncure and David J. Simpson of Raleigh.

Officers said Adams was apparently upset over losing a $100 bet over whether his truck was more powerful than another man's when he drove through a group of about 90 people in front of a New Hill tavern.

Carlene Carter's Name Alone Spelled Stardom

By PETER J. BOYER
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — You can't be born royal in this country, but you can be born lucky. If your daddy's the porcelain king of Toledo, you know you can always go into tubs and toilets if your great American novel doesn't sell.

If ever anyone was born into success, it was blue-eyed, sweet singing Carlene Carter. The name alone meant stardom. No, no kin to Jimmy. Better than that. THE Carter family, from Nashville.

Carlene's grandma is Mother Maybelle Carter, the matriarch of country music. Mama is June Carter Cash. Country folk singer Carl Smith is her father. Johnny Cash is her step-daddy.

With that pedigree, all

Carlene had to do to become a country star was learn to stand in front of a microphone and avoid committing any heinous crimes. When it turned out she could sing, everyone knew Nashville would one day be hers.

She turned it down.

Carlene Carter wanted rock 'n' roll. She played lead guitar with a rock band when she was 11. The Electric Kumquats didn't go far, but the experience hardened Carlene's wish to be a pop star.

"It would have been really easy for me to kinda ride off that name and just play country music," she says in a Tennessee twang that could bend nails. "And I might be a lot more secure about my future and everything if I did that, but that's not what I want to do.

"I'd rather know that I did it myself, and I'd rather be doing what I wanted to do instead of doing what I was expected to do just because of tradition."

So now she's running the rounds of a pop singer — playing the pop nightclubs, indulging the rock 'n' roll press, touting her debut album. The LP, "Carlene Carter," is good, clean pop music, and allows Carlene to show off some powerful vocals.

It's interesting that in a time when everybody is claiming a few ounces of Southern blood, infusing a few obligatory licks of pedal steel and dobro into pop, some of the purest pop around comes from a girl who cut her teeth on the curtain weights at the Grand Ole Opry. Carlene is almost obsessive in her avoidance of anything country. Every recording studio in Nashville was awaiting her pleasure, but she flew to London to record the album.

"I went to England mainly because I wanted to be sure I was being myself when I recorded the album," she says.

"I wanted to do something different from what the other girls in Nashville do. They all have the same musicians, and it begins to sound alike."

WON'T RETURN — Actor Abe Vigoda is shown in the role of Detective Fish, which he first played on the ABC-TV series "Barney Miller". He later played the aging, ailing, and cynical detective in a series called "Fish" which ran for two years before being cancelled. Monday, Vigoda announced that he was unable to reach a salary agreement with producers and would not return to "Barney Miller" as previously announced. (AP Laserphoto)

Lenders Assert PTL 'Bad Risk'

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — PTL president Jim Bakker can't blame the financial woes of his religious network on unwillingness of banks and savings and loan companies to lend to religious organizations.

So say Charlotte area lenders. Spokesmen for those institutions say PTL can't borrow because it is a bad risk and doesn't meet criteria for borrowers. Representatives of several area churches said are treated like other borrowers and have no trouble borrowing money.

Bakker made an urgent appeal to 700,000 supporters last month asking for contributions. He told them that "financial institution after financial institution has said NO! We do not finance churches and religious organizations."

Seven bankers, savings and loan officials and commercial mortgage brokers told The Charlotte Observer that PTL would not be denied a loan because it is a ministry, but added the network is a bad risk because:

—Its land and facilities have limited uses and relatively little value as collateral.

—PTL hasn't been in business long enough to establish financial statements which analysts can examine to determine if the organization is financially sound.

—PTL's troubled financial history, high-interest loans, shortage of financial reserves and lack of investments and long-range planning don't make it strong enough to guarantee a loan without sufficient collateral.

"It's like a house of cards," said one analyst. "As long as the millions in pledges keep

from the CARROLL-RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Not a day or evening to act in dramatic manner or you could alienate those can be very helpful to you. Make a point to carry through with promises you have made to friends.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) If you act strangely with good friends, you find they will soon get away from you, so keep poised at this time.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't be forceful with others in business now or much trouble could follow. Take no risks with your reputation today.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have good ideas but they need more study before you put them motion, otherwise you could go in the wrong direction.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Avoid getting into an argument with an associate which could prove unpleasant. Express happiness instead.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Situations arise with co-workers that could lead to arguments, if you permit. Handle civic affairs intelligently.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get an early start on the work ahead of you and don't stop until you complete it. Sidelstep a troublemaker.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Keep busy at work and forget pleasure today which could lead you in the wrong direction. Await a better time for happiness.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be objective in handling home affairs and increase harmony. Don't permit anyone to come between you and your mate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be courteous with your friends despite difficult conditions that could be present. Strive for increased happiness.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Changing methods in monetary matters could be bad for you today, so stick to the tried and true for best results.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Find shortcuts that could help you gain your aims more easily. Wait until the evening for sociability you seek.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Attend to routine duties early in the day so you will have time for amusements later. Take needed health treatments.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one who can easily fix most anything that is mechanical, so direct the education along such lines for best results. Give fine religious training that will bring more harmony into the life.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

REQUEST NO FLOWERS
VATICAN CITY (AP) — Visitors to the grotto beneath St. Peter's Basilica have been told not to put flowers on the tombs of the popes there. Vatican officials said the heavy scent of the flowers made breathing difficult in the low-ceilinged grotto.

Labor Contracts Tested Mayor

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Edward Koch says his most trying experience since assuming office last January was negotiating contracts with the city's labor unions.

"The worst thing (of being mayor) relates to the labor negotiations," the mayor said during a radio broadcast Sunday, in which callers questioned the city's chief executive for 90 minutes.

A woman called in to say that her area "should be cleaned up" because men were

Global Trip By Nixon Expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon is expected to announce sometime this week an around-the-world trip as a private citizen.

The expected trip — to begin later this month — will include South Asia, Eastern Europe and Africa, according to those close to Nixon. Advisers, however, are counseling the former president not to visit Australia, where Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser has already said he wouldn't meet with Nixon.

Letter Costs Near $5 Each

NEW YORK (AP) — The average business letter costs about $5 to produce, says Successful Business, a magazine produced by the Commercial Credit Co.

Part of the cost can be attributed to a dramatic rise in secretarial salaries, the magazine reported, adding that more than 100 companies are now marketing sophisticated, labor-saving typing systems.

REVEAL EMBEZZLEMENT

TOKYO (AP) — Six local Communist Party officials in China's Honan Province have been fired and expelled from the party for embezzling more than $80 million and spending it on lavish buildings, banquets and gifts, says the official Hsinhua news agency.

Remote Isle Now Unlikely Fiefdom Of A Mercenary

By TONY AVIRGAN
MORONI, Comoro Islands (UPI) — This remote Indian Ocean archipelago, until now noted only for its exotic ylang-ylang perfume plant and its poverty, has become the unlikely fiefdom of Africa's last white mercenary leader and his ragtag army.

Having deposed the Comoros' despotic, drug-taking President Ali Soilih in a precision engineered invasion in May, French-born Col. Bob Denard and his 30 soldiers-of-fortune have made themselves rulers of the republic's three volcanic islands and 290,000 population.

The mercenaries run everything from the local army and police to the island's empty treasury and garbage collection.

Despite blustering threats by such mainland African leaders as Uganda's Idi Amin, who promised to "throw the mercenaries into the Indian Ocean," Denard and some of his followers appear to have every intention of retiring for life on their volcanic fortress.

"The women are young and pretty," enthused the 50-year-old mercenary king, who already has taken a local wife.

"I can eat well here, drink, sleep and make love," he said in an interview. "A man doesn't need any more. I plan to spend the rest of my days here and, if the people still want me, it would take 100,000 Cuban troops to get us off the islands."

For the moment, at least, bewildered citizens regard Denard as a hero for ousting the quixotic Soilih in an invasion which could have been lifted from Frederick Forsyth's novel "The Dogs of War."

Denard said he has not read the book about mercenaries attempting to seize control of an African nation.

Soilih himself had grabbed power in Moroni shortly after three of the trouble-plagued Comoro islands declared unilateral independence from France in 1975. The Christian population of the fourth island, Mayotten, voted overwhelmingly to retain its ties with Paris.

Soilih embarked on a presidency as bizarre, if not as brutal, as that of the man now threatening to avenge him, Uganda's Amin.

Quickly exhausting the country's treasury, Soilih attempted to mend matters by firing the islands' 3,500 civil servants. In their place, loyal, illiterate teen-agers were made responsible for handling everything from diplomatic affairs — with the only embassy on the islands, the Chinese — to education.

In what he termed a Chinese-style revolution, Soilih lowered the voting age to 14, burned all the islands' administrative records for the last 150 years and — warned by a sage to beware of man with a dog — ordered his teen-age goon squads to kill every dog on the islands.

The last straw came when he ordered the Comoros' largely Moslem women to stop wearing veils and banned traditional wedding feasts.

"Call on God and see if he answers," Soilih stormed at worshippers in May at Moroni's waterfront Grande Mosque.

A few hours later, Denard and his army — French, Belgian, two Germans and a lone British mercenary — slipped ashore, faces and suits blackened, from rubber Zodiac rafts at the town's main Itsandra beach. With them was their mascot, a German shepherd.

Denard, who had fought as a soldier for hire for nearly 30 years, had arrived aboard a rusting freighter, the Masiwa, which took 35 days to sail from France around the Cape of Good Hope.

"We told the French we were prospecting for oil, not to raise their suspicions," Denard said. "But when we got to the Cape we turned left instead of right." Denard's force quickly cut all telephone communications, put the islands' slumbering 200-man army to flight, killed four presidential guards and delightedly found Soilih drugged in the presidential bed with two women. Soilih was later shot, allegedly while trying to escape.

Denard rapidly installed the man Soilih had deposed, Ahmed Abdallah, and a local businessman, Mohammed Ahmed, as co-presidents of the Comoros, retaining actual power for himself.

He converted to Islam, took the name Said Moustapha Mouhadjou, bestowed Comoran citizenship on himself, married a local girl and announced his intention to retire to "this paradise" for the rest of his life.

When the regime sent a delegation to the summit meeting of the 49-nation Organization of African Unity (OAU) in Sudan, it was unceremoniously thrown out.

Amin said he was putting together an invasion force from African countries to attack Denard. Other nations held emergency meetings to discuss the mercenaries' takeover.

Denard is undeterred. Driving through the main island in his brown and white Ford he is greeted enthusiastically as the "No. 1 president" by an adoring population.

Denard said he has received hundreds of letters from other mercenaries eager to join him on his volcanic retreat and will invite carefully screened "technicians" to help him run the Comoros.

Denard, now 50 but still ramrod straight, planned, executed and even partly financed the invasion that has made him "king of the archipelago."

"There's good food here," he said — although it is very expensive and all imported. "And the women are pretty and young."

"Eat, sleep, drink and make love. There you have it."

"In six months the world won't think about us here any more. We will be left to our bananas."

Yet Denard, who has battled 30 years as a soldier for hire in wars from the Congo to Indochina, is sending shivers up the spines of African leaders who hoped the white mercenary had at last disappeared from the continent.

Denard boasted to a recent visitor that he was, indeed, Africa's last mercenary leader, the only one capable of carrying out the Comoran invasion.

He seems to have slipped peacefully into the slow, easy routine of the islands, his new local wife supervising his modest whitewashed home. He prays at the local mosque daily and said, "I would now like to make a pilgrimage to Mecca."

He reminisced about the mercenary life and what he insisted was his last fling.

"A few white soldiers can no longer win a war against an entire African army, as in the Congo," he said as he drove a visitor around Grande Comoro island in his command car.

"We can no longer undertake grand operations such as in Katanga (now Shaba province in Zaire). The only thing we can now provide is a specific service on a functional small scale."

"There was a time when our services were really needed, but that time is passing."

His stubby grey hair bristling in the tropical sun, his waist thickening slightly, Denard still takes pride in his physical prowess. He revels in giving the population exaggerated military salutes as he motors around the island in his green beret, khaki shirt and camouflage trousers, the uniform of a Comoran colonel.

"My role here is to put the Comoran army into shape and then retire. I am now a Comoran citizen. If I make a mistake they cannot throw me out. They can only put me in jail."

Denard and his mercenaries are still popular here. But he recognizes the wind could change.

"If the Comoran people ask us to leave, we will be gone the next day. If they don't want us to leave, it will take 100,000 Cuban soldiers to throw us out."

Denard said he staged the invasion because "a man reaches a point in his life when he sees it's time to settle down and select the place. This is it."

"There has never been an operation that has gone as smoothly as this. This is a very fitting end to my career. It's a magnificent finale. One shouldn't look further or one could end up with burned fingers. This is my last operation."

Other mercenaries, most of them clean-cut and in their 20s or early 30s, have followed their leader's example and plan to settle here.

They refer to themselves as "technicians" and run everything from the army and post office to the customs and telephones. As soon as they arrived they organized garbage details to clean up months of litter and made residents whitewash their homes.

"What we are doing here is like foreign aid," Denard said. "My men didn't ask for a contract before they came. They may stay or they may go."

Several already have left, bored by the slow life now so attractive to Denard.

"The army ran away before we could have a good bash," lamented one, sipping beer in the capital's only nightclub, the Coelaranthe. "Even the girls aren't as pretty we'd thought."

"It's not like the Congo (Zaire) here," an older mercenary added. "The women are not very friendly."

Some who expected to find their fortune were disappointed. The islands' coffers were empty.

"I receive no salary here at all because I realize that the country has no money," Denard said. He pays his men "around $600 a month. They understand the country cannot afford high salaries."

"But this is much preferable to being in a national army and being closed in. One breathes here. One has a sense of freedom that you would never find in Paris or New York."

Denard keeps an iron grip on his men, who refer to him almost affectionately as "notre patron" (our boss).

"There is no one to replace him," said one white itching for more action elsewhere. "There is no other patron."

INTRODUCING ALL-AMERICAN SAVINGS. FINALLY, HIGH INTEREST FOR EVEN ONE DOLLAR.

Having to save up $500 or $1000 just to open a savings account is crazy. It's unfair. It's practically un-American.

So at Planters we're introducing a concept that could revolutionize American savings.

All-American Savings. With the minimum deposit at a real, honest-to-goodness minimum $1, it makes high interest truly affordable to all Americans. What's more, it lets you add any amount. Anytime.

It's what you'd expect from Planters. After all, we're the bank that still knows the value of a dollar.

Annual Interest Rate	Maturity	Minimum Deposit	Additional Deposit
5½%	3 months	$1	Anytime
6%	12 months	$1	Anytime
6½%	30 months	$1	Anytime

WE STILL KNOW THE VALUE OF YOUR DOLLAR.

PLANTERS NATIONAL BANK

"Just because other places demand big deposits doesn't mean Planters does. They think All Americans deserve interest as high as 5½%, 6, even 6½% for as little as one dollar."

Urban Problems Are Widespread

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bigcity problems such as a high unemployment and low per capita income aren't confined to the industrial Northeast and Midwest.

A Congressional Budget Office report issued Sunday says the South also has its share of such problems. The sampling of 39 cities ranked four Southern cities in the top 10 listing of "high-need cities." The top 10 were Newark, N.J.; Cleveland; St. Louis, Mo.; Detroit; New Orleans; Buffalo, N.Y.; Miami, Fla.; Gary, Ind.; Baltimore and Tampa, Fla.
