Postal Strike Is Seen Less Likely

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chance of a nationwide postal strike appears to be fading because of reluctance by many union members to jeopardize their careers and risk going to jail.

Emmet Andrews, president of the largest postal union, the 299,000-member American Postal Workers Union, is sending a message to his members that there is "overwhelming grass roots resistance to the idea of defying the courts and going on strike."

In the message, which union members are receiving today, Andrews said an outpouring of sentiment against an illegal strike has reached union headquarters.

"Many if not most of the members" would not heed a strike call, Andrews wrote. "A strike that is only half a strike is a disaster by definition."

Three postal unions are deadlocked with the Postal Service over a new contract, and special federal mediator James J. Healy is preparing binding arbitration of unresolved issues by a deadline of 10 a.m. EDT Saturday.

The binding arbitration would cover the APWU, the National Association of Letter Carriers and the mail handlers division of Laborers' International Union. Together, they represent 516,000 postal employees.

"While a negotiated settlement is still possible, it is almost certain now that it will be necessary for me to resolve the issues," Healy said Tuesday.

As he spoke, big-city union leaders backed down from earlier threats to stage an illegal postal strike this week. Postmaster General William F. Bolger said the mail will get through even if there is a strike.

Bolger was applauded when he told a convention of business mailers that "it will be safe to mail" in coming days.

He said the Postal Service is better prepared for a walkout than it was during the 1970 wildcat strike, when about 200,000 postal workers left their jobs. Elaborate strike contingency plans include use of federal troops, non-movement of certain types of mail and allowing private firms to deliver letters.

Reacting to an electric service wholesale rate increase from VEPCO of 19 per cent, which will become effective October 1, the Greenville Utilities Commission (GUC) last night raised its electric rates to all customers by an average of 13 to 15 per cent.

Meeting in regular session, GUC approved two recommendations and tabled a third concerning the rate increase, which will cost Greenville approximately $3.4 million annually.

Director Charles Horne told the board that the VEPCO increase "appears to be excessive" and that Electricities' attorneys and engineers have filed to intervene in the proposed increase and to fight through the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission and the courts, if necessary, to reduce the wholesale increase.

The first recommendation approved adopts retail rates approved by the North Carolina Utilities Commission for VEPCO retail customers effective September 1.

The first recommendation approved by the board adopts retail rates approved by the North Carolina Utilities Commission for VEPCO retail customers, effective September 1.

The new rates, which will become effective October 1 in Greenville, reflect an increase in residential user costs of 10 to 20 per cent, or an average of 15 per cent (residential rates for minimum users of 100 to 300 kilowatts will not be affected); for minimum users of 100 to 300 kilowatts will not be affected; commercial users, eight to 12 per cent; and industrial users, eight to 12 per cent (earnings from large industrial accounts may be slight, or none).

Horne said in an interview today that VEPCO's increase is "exorbitant...but we are going to fight them tooth-and-nail to bring it down to something we feel is equitable."

"We are faced with a $3.4 million increase beginning October 1 and the commission has to pay for it; so we have no alternative but to pass the increase on to our customers," he said.

He added that GUC has been tracking, or trying to parallel, VEPCO's rates since 1971 in order to local customers rates at private power company levels. "So our customers won't be paying any more than customers for other private power companies in North Carolina," he said, referring to the new increase.

The second recommendation approved by the commission involves securing from R.W. Beck Associates, engineers, recommendations for passing the increase along to Ayden and Winterville, based on previous cost of service (Continued on page 16)

Pitt Bd. Rescinds 264 Resolutions

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners yesterday rescinded two prior resolutions — one adopted in June 1977 and the other in June 1978 — recommending the type and locations of the U.S. 264 four-lane project, and resolved to consider studies and recommendations of the N.C. Department of Transportation and to consider the wishes of all interested county residents before making its final recommendations on project.

The resolution adopted yesterday rescinded a June 1977 resolution supporting, "the development of a four-lane, limited access highway from Zebulon to the Coast passing through the general area now served by U.S. 264 highway."

It also rescinded a June 1978 resolution which recommended, "that the five miles of the present Farmville bypass be included in the new four-lane of U.S. Highway 264 from Greenville to Wilson." That resolution was adopted by commissioners at the request of Farmville area officials.

The resolution adopted yesterday said, "the Board is vitally interested in having a four-lane thoroughfare built that would be of the caliber to meet the transportation needs of the people of Pitt County," and noted that

Pitt Commissioners, "took the lead in organizing communities along U.S. 264 for the purpose of blocking efforts to have only one four-lane corridor for east-west traffic which would have left our U.S. 264 entirely and which would have excluded service to Wilson, Farmville, Greenville and Washington."

Citing the fact that the Department of Transportation is currently studying possible locations and design of the highway, and noting that public hearings will be held, the resolution continued, "it would be premature at this time to pre-judge the Department of Transportation...therefore, the Pitt County Board of Commissioners...resolves to consider the recommendations, studies and findings of the North Carolina Department of Transportation; to consider the wishes of all interested Pitt County citizens, and other valid facts before making its final recommendations as to the location.

Carter, Begin In Unannounced Talk

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — President Carter has met unannounced with Israel's Menachem Begin, settling off intensive U.S. deliberations in the search for a way to compromise Israeli and Egyptian differences over the future of the Palestinian Arabs.

The Carter-Begin session, which lasted nearly an hour and a half Tuesday night, was confirmed today by the White House press office more than 12 hours later. Carter and Begin had not met since last Sunday.

After the meeting, Carter left his principal advisers, including Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, working past midnight. It was understood the U.S. delegation is working on the precise language of a statement encompassing Palestinian and other issues.

Rising early, Carter went back to work at 6:45 a.m. EDT, meeting with Vance, presidential assistant Zbigniew Brzezinski and Harold Saunders, assistant secretary of state for the Middle East.

Carter has yet to impose a deadline for winding up the week-old Middle East summit, although it threatens to disrupt his own schedule for speechmaking and politicking.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said on Tuesday he knew of no plans to cancel Carter's planned trips Friday and Saturday to the Carolinas, Pennsylvania and Ohio.

"If we get to the point that it becomes an issue, we will deal with it then," he said.

The summit itself represents potential political peril for Carter, whose woes would be compounded by a failure here.

On the Palestinian question, Carter's goal is to find language acceptable to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin as well as Jordan's King Hussein.

Hussein has a big stake in the issue because many of the Palestinians live on the Jordan River's West Bank — a region Israel seized from Jordan in the 1967 war. Powell belatedly acknowledged on Tuesday that Sadat had telephoned Hussein a day earlier. He gave no details but said the Jordanian leader would not join the talks here.

Carter hopes for a Begin-Sadat compromise that would draw Jordan into the peace process at some future point. Hussein, however, has pledged to boycott Mideast peace talks until Israel agrees to withdraw from the West Bank.

A compromise acceptable to Hussein would bolster Arab support for Sadat, who has risked alienating other Arab states for his willingness to negotiate directly with Israel.

Begin last year offered civil self-rule to the 1.1 million Palestinians living on the West Bank and in the Gaza Strip in the Sinai desert. Sadat rejected that proposal, which would have left the Palestinians under Israeli military control.

Powell said he could not speculate when or how the mountaintop summit will end.

Carter and Sadat met Tuesday for the second straight day. It was learned that Carter sought not only Sadat's ideas but also his reaction to Israeli thinking, presumably about a summit-climaxing statement or declaration.

Neither Carter nor Sadat talked to Begin on Tuesday and, in fact, Begin and Sadat have not met formally since last Thursday.

Care of Pesticide Contaminated Clothing

A recent Iowa State University study dealt with the care of pesticide contaminated clothing. "Pesticide residue is picked up on the clothing worn during pesticide application. Because pesticides can enter the body through the skin, careful attention to clothing contaminated by drift or spills is required."

According to Mrs. Evelyn L. Spangler, Home Economics Extension Agent, "The study report included the following recommendations for care procedures:

Clothes worn while applying pesticides should be washed daily.

Do not mix pesticide contaminated clothes with other laundry.

Normal heavily soiled laundry procedure will remove the pesticide from the clothing. Follow this procedure:

Use hot water, 140°F. and normal or full water level.

Use the manufacturer's recommended amount of heavy duty phosphate-based detergent.

Thoroughly dry the clothes in an automatic dryer for 30 minutes at the regular fabric setting.

Remove any left-over pesticide from the washer by running the machine through the complete laundering cycle, using detergent but without clothes. (This recommendation is based upon preliminary data, but is a good precautionary step.)

"A typical question I get, says Mrs. Spangler, is 'I tossed a red shirt (or blue, or green, etc.) in the wash with my white things. Now all the white look pink. What can I do to remove the traces of pink color?'"

This type of laundry accident happens to a lot of us at some point in time. Sadly enough, the answer to "What can I do?" may be, "Very little." The dye which has been transferred from a non-colorfast article may be impossible to remove. For bleachable fabrics, try bleaching immediately using chlorine bleach, and repeat as necessary. For non-bleachable fabrics, the only suggestion is to use a commercial color remover. Remember, the color remover will remove the original colors in the article as well as the transferred color.

Men's Fashions Set Boys' Trends

By JOHN MOODY
UPI Men's Fashion Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Corduroys, classics and coordination are the lessons to be learned in boys' back-to-school wear this fall.

Whether the young man of your family is beginning to "dress to impress," or is still tugging on tops that will be roughed up on the playground, the trends influencing men's wear are seen now in the boy's department, too.

Corduroys were highly visible at fashion shows for the fall season and they're crowding the racks of varsity shops. Wide wale trousers — in almost any color, but mostly natural tones — are popular and are matched with sweaters of all types layered over shirts.

Vests have made inroads in sportswear outfits being shown this year, and young men's fashions are also picking up the vest look. They'll be seen matched up with plaid and flannel shirts, or over turtlenecks.

The thought of scanning the fashion scene to dress your son may seem more trouble than it's worth, but Larry Abelson, president of Pierre Cardin Boys' Wear, says it's becoming increasingly important to youth.

"Not since before the clothing rebellion of the 60s have youngsters given such thought to what they wear and how they look," he says. "Designer clothing is no longer merchandised only to those who can afford high-priced clothing. It is now readily accessible and within reach of most customers."

That, of course, is as much wishful thinking as anything on the part of one of the world's major designing lines. But it is borne out by the fact that sales of boys' wear have increased more than four-fold over the last few years.

The same classic blue blazer and gray flannel pants that Dad wears look sharp on his son, too, and many parents see that as the way to avoid the constant — and expensive — fight to keep their kids dressed "in style."

The classics, of course, will never change, although junior's size might.

Still, if your son's not interested in clothes, but you want to make sure he looks presentable, Jack Simpson, the fashion director for Sear's Children's Store, suggests "color coordination is the key to a versatile and long-lasting wardrobe."

"If a wardrobe is planned around colors that work together, it's easy to plug in pieces as needed. Kids don't outgrow tops and bottoms at the same time, so if the jeans are too short, many of the tops may fit."

Couple Honored On Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Levy L. Overton celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary at a reception Sunday, Sept. 3, in the fellowship hall of Memorial Baptist Church.

Hostesses were Mrs. Barbara Entzminger and Mrs. Dena Harrell. The receiving line was composed of Mr. and Mrs. Overton and their sons, Buddy and Sandy, of Greenville. Guests were welcomed by Mr. and Mrs. Bob Allen and presiding at the guest register were Dr. and Mrs. Wilkins Winn.

The refreshment table was decorated with a seasonal floral arrangement and crystal candelabrum. A four-tiered wedding cake was served by Mrs. Jo Ann Jones and Mrs. Ivey Snyder, cousin of Mrs. Overton.

Assisting were Mr. and Mrs. Bill Cobb, Mrs. Katherine Moore, Mrs. Dot Hendrix, Mrs. Snyder, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Kay Barnes, Mrs. Donna Humphrey, Stacy Evans, Karen and Kelly Gordon, Mrs. Harrell and Mrs. Entzminger.

Music was provided by Harold Jones on the marimba.

Approximately 200 friends and relatives attended the reception. Good-byes were said by Dr. and Mrs. Wease.

Program On Home Energy Sources To Be Held

RALEIGH — Wood and Solar as Home Energy Sources will be the topic of a program to be held Tuesday, Sept. 26, at McKimmon Center here.

The program will be presented by the Agricultural Extension Service and Industrial Extension Service of N. C. State University. The Energy Division, Department of Commerce, State of North Carolina and the N. C. Solar Energy Association will be assisting.

Subjects to be covered in the program which begins at 2 p.m. include the following: Energy Conservation Experiences With My Home — Actions and Savings, "Passive" Solar For Home Heating and To Reduce Energy For Heating or Cooling, Using Solar Energy For Hot Water and Home Heating, From Stump to Stove — Growing, Cutting and Storing Firewood, Selection, Performance and Proper Operation of Wood Stoves and Fireplaces, Safe Installation and Maintenance of Wood Burning Equipment — State Codes.

The program has been developed primarily for the "do it yourself" homeowner or builder. It should be helpful for commercial home builders or designers but it is not intended to be a full program in solar or wood heating for architects or consulting engineers.

Advance registration is suggested since the number of participants is limited. For in-home economics extension information call Mrs. Sue B. May, agent, 758-1196.

Horse Fancier For 87 Years

By ED STATTMANN

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Kathryn Hennick says she's been a horsewoman since age 3. That was 87 years ago, but she is still in the business.

Mrs. Hennick, a widow for the past 29 years, lives by choice in a 9-by-9 tack room in a stable on the Indiana State Fairgrounds. It has been her home, "off-and-on," since 1948.

She still owns a pair of harness racing colts she hopes to run, although they won't be in shape to race this season because her trainer quit.

Mrs. Hennick said her precocious interest in horses was family lore.

"They said I'd toddle out to meet the work horses coming back from the fields," she said, recalling her girlhood, spent in Connellsville, Pa.

She went on to become one of the first woman sulky drivers and a trainer who specialized in breaking mean horses for harness. She bought her first horse in 1913.

At 90, she's bright-eyed, although she complains she needs sunglasses outside lately, and a lively talker, though a hearing aid now helps her through conversations.

More than a half century of working with horses has given her powerful hands and arms and the ability to work a fuller day than most. Her day usually starts around 5:30 a.m.

"I've raced in 21 states and four provinces of Canada," said Mrs. Hennick, who once was one of only four women sulky drivers in the country.

She only ran into trouble once — with a young man she said drove unfairly and dangerously. She used a steel arch on her cart and broke his wheel, sending the troublesome driver down and to the hospital.

"From then on, I never had any more trouble."

She drove her last race more than 30 years ago at Cassopolis, Mich. — long after she had retired from regular driving. When her driver failed to show, she took the reins and went out a winner.

If she has a specialty, it's taming, balancing — the precise shoeing of a horse to balance its gait — and healing.

Mrs. Hennick studied under a veterinarian for two years early in the century — a time when working with a vet plus six months of college got you a veterinarian's degree. She didn't bother with college.

The first horses she bought as a young woman were duds, she confessed. But she learned her trade and was able to make good buys by taking horses considered too mean to handle.

She trained them with a combination of kindness and fearless discipline.

Anniversary Theme Is 'Greek Odysseys'

Odeil Evans and Boots Barlow were appointed co-chairpersons of the 50th anniversary of Epsilon Sigma Alpha at the meeting of the Gamma Delta Chapter.

The International Council and World Headquarters have announced plans to celebrate the anniversary with the overall theme "Greek Odysseys."

President Hester Latham announced "The Golden Year" as her theme. A calendar for the year's educational program was presented by the Educational Director Carol Stevens. Philanthropic Chairperson Edna Branch gave an outline of service projects for the year and plans were made to begin with children at the hospital.

Gamma Delta will participate in the challenge to aid in raising funds for Saint Jude Research Children's Hospital. Plans were made to sell hot dogs at a local super market Oct. 7. Ms. Latham and Ms. Rubelle Goin reported on the leadership conference held in Winston-Salem.

The North Carolina State Council will meet in Charlotte Sept. 16 and Mrs. Goin was appointed to represent the group.

The meeting was held at the home of Helen Sermons.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

There is no one on the face of this earth for whom I feel more compassion than the mothers of children who are on half-day sessions at school.

My neighbor, Iris, went through an entire year of this schedule and we almost lost her. We all went over one day and literally dragged her from the utility room and set her down in the living room.

"Where are we?" she mumbled numbly.

"In your living room," we said gently.

"I've never been here before," she said.

"Of course you have. It's the room right off your kitchen and utility room. Remember?"

She shook her head.

"All I remember is in September I went into the kitchen and the utility room and I've been there ever since. Rinsing breakfast plates, putting them in the sink, clearing the table, starting the washer..."

"It's all right," we said. "Don't dwell on it."

...and then picking up the pajamas and washing them, and making beds and it's lunchtime again and the kids are home and it's time to pick up the school clothes and wash them, and set the table and get lunch and rinse the plates and do the dishes and clear and it's dinnertime and I set the table and pick up the play clothes and wash them and get dinner and clear the table and rinse the dishes and start the washer...

...did I say that before?"

We nodded.

My kids went through it and it was a period that I paranoically refer to as the "Clothing Connection." It was like a game. Every time they moved ahead two spaces, they passed go and went directly to the closet. My five-year-old once set a record for changing clothes. Within a 14-hour period, he changed clothes nine times.

He had an outfit for eating breakfast, going to school, running through the hose, using the phone, eating lunch, answering the door, riding his bike, weighing himself, and one that he wore because there was nothing clean left to wear.

I couldn't walk through a room without encountering a pile of his clothes. It was like picking your way through cow chips.

I'll never forget poor Iris if I live to be a hundred... her hands shriveled from hand washes, her sinuses filled with laundry bleach, her brain fogged by lint. "When does it all end?" she said. "All this washing and ironing?"

We smiled. "On the day your kids start to do their own laundry."

Unpaid Chauffeur Had Patience

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: That letter from the ingrate who complained because the party who provided her with free transportation drove a two-door car which she found "uncomfortable," reminded me of a lady I used to drive to church every Sunday.

Every time we picked her up, my wife and I had to listen to a recital of her aches and pains. She also wanted to know why we couldn't go to a later mass so she wouldn't have to get up so early, and why we didn't sit in a different place in church.

But the last straw was when she asked my wife to sit in the back of the car "because she was younger!"

That was her last ride in our car.

UNPAID CHAUFFEUR

DEAR UNPAID: You don't say how long you served as an unpaid chauffeur for the church-goer, but if it was over a month of Sundays, you were either a slow learner or had the patience of Job.

DEAR ABBY: I used to enjoy reading your column, but lately you seem to be out to reform the world. Your column with all those statistics on smoking was a big bore. I smoke and enjoy it. Everybody has to die of something, and if I die because of my smoking, it will be my funeral, not yours. So lay off, will you?

SAM

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem that is having a bad effect on my marriage. This is the second marriage for both my husband and me. We get along very well, and he is an excellent husband in every way but one.

Once a week he takes his children out to eat, and always invites their mother to go along. He says there is absolutely nothing between them anymore, and I am inclined to believe him, but knowing he is with his ex-wife bothers me.

I have let him know how I feel about this, but he continues to include her with the children.

Can you help me with this problem, or do you think I'm making a big thing out of nothing?

WITHHOLD MY NAME

DEAR WITHHOLD: He knows how you feel. Now cool it. You say you are sure there's nothing between them, so don't nag or whine. You'll only put him on the defensive and force him to defend his right to include the children's mother if he so chooses.

DEAR ABBY: I commend you for devoting an entire column to document the dangers of smoking. It was a noble effort, but those who need it won't listen. I know. I have lung cancer. I smoked nearly three packs a day for 25 years. I was told more than once to stop. I cut down a couple of times, but I never really stopped. I just couldn't kick the habit.

The most important message in your column was, "If you don't smoke—don't start!" Those words should be written on every grammar school blackboard in the country.

Hang in there, Abby. I love ya'.

NEWT IN N.J.

American Legion Auxiliary Unit 39 held its meeting and a covered-dish dinner Thursday at the Legion Building.

Mrs. Sarah Ashton presided and welcomed members and guests. Mrs. Faye Adams, scholarship chairman, presented a $100 scholarship to Edna Avery Stokes, who is a student in the ECU School of Nursing.

Go Getters Awards for 1978 were presented to Elizabeth Eagles, Cora Wilson, Sallie Reagan, Magalene Avery, Frances Strawn, Mrs. Ashton and Mrs. Adams. Mrs. Strawn, membership chairman, made the presentations.

It was announced the First Division meeting will be held Oct. 7 at 2 p.m. at the Franklin Post Home. The Fall Conference will be held at the Sheraton, Charlotte, Oct. 27-29.

Reports were given by June Wease, Susan Tucker and Susan Warshawer on their activities at Girls State. Robert Henny and Richard Capwell reported on Boys State.

Guests present included Ruth Harris, Mildred Prebish, Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Wease and husbands of auxiliary members.

Mrs. Strawn, Mrs. Audrey Andrews, Miss Louise Tucker, Mrs. Ashton, Mrs. Martha Forest and Mrs. Adams were members of the dinner committee.

Mrs. Holloman Entertained

Mrs. Eva Holloman of 525 Hooker Rd. was honored Sunday in celebration of her 83rd birthday, which was Tuesday.

Approximately 75 persons attended the party. Mrs. Holloman's children in attendance were Mrs. Kenneth Baker and Mrs. Maggie Eason, both of Greenville; Connie Miller and Al Emerson, both of Richmond, Va.; and Clarence Holloman of Bladenboro. Her sister, Mrs. J. C. Paige was another special guest. On hand, also, were 13 of Mrs. Holloman's grandchildren and 10 of her great grandchildren.

Apparently Over-Stated Case

Opponents of tobacco over the years moved from admonishing smokers about the health dangers to declaring that cigarette smoke affects non-smokers in the same room.

It may well be a typical example of hysteria that affects such campaigns these days.

At any rate it turns out there are many scientists who disagree that cigarette smoke affects non-smokers.

Rep. Walter B. Jones has been conducting hearings on the matter as chairman of the House tobacco subcommittee.

Dr. Edwin R. Fisher, a pathology professor at the University of Pittsburgh, said, "there is a lack of scientific information incriminating atmospheric tobacco smoke as a health hazard."

Other scientists also reported that the lack of evidence refutes the claims that cigarette smoke adversely affects non-smokers.

Any individual has the right to choose not to smoke, but by the same token those who choose to smoke should not be harassed by by picky little regulations which are not based on scientific fact.

Especially Important To Handicapped

Another government program which will cost money is not exactly something to bring joy to the hearts of hard pressed tax payers.

However, the 180 units of housing for handicapped people for North Carolina could make life a lot easier for those with disabilities.

Ten of the units will be in Greenville and that is particularly important with the emphasis on handicapped training here.

Governor Hunt Said 'No'

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — A bid for increased funding of the North Carolina Wildlife Commission from the state's General Fund budget has been rejected by Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr.

Publicly, the governor is cautious in response to questions regarding a move now by that commission to gain the fund increases by hiking hunting and fishing license fees.

The state needs the resources, says Hunt, to manage and protect wildlife. "But, we have to look at any increase in fees in a hard way ... they are like taxes," he said. A pledge to oppose any tax increase undergirds the Hunt administration, and he speaks often of the ravages of inflation on citizens and the need for less governmental spending.

The Wildlife Commission has decided to seek approval from the 1979 General Assembly for a fee hike totaling nearly $3 million.

"I think the increase will have a difficult time in the General Assembly. Any increase will need a close look," Gov. Hunt commented in response to questions about the proposal.

Questions

Some of those questions have already been raised — privately — by top state officials when faced with a request from Wildlife for General Fund money to meet increased costs rather than taking the riskier path of General Assembly consideration of a license fee hike. The General Fund is regular state revenues which go into most state operations other than the Highway Fund of the Department of Transportation. Income taxes, sales taxes, etc., make up the bulk of the Genral Fund. The Wildlife Commission operates entirely on fees and federal grants with no tax support.

"They came to us and asked us to supplement the Wildlife operation with tax money ... and we said a flat No," one of Hunt's chief aides said privately. He insisted his comments be off the record.

"We could see absolutely no need for putting tax funds into what is a typical attempt at bureaucratic expansion by a state agency.

"There is a questionable need for the Wildlife people to have those high-powered vehicles and airplanes, the guns and all that special equipment ... even uniforms, for that matter," this source commented.

Wildlife Resources Commission officials say the $3 million annual increase is needed simply to keep pace with inflation and not for any major expansion of programs or projects.

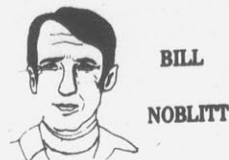

The agency is currently operating on a budget in excess of $9 million yearly, with about $1.5 million of that in federal funds and the remainder from departmental boating, hunting, and fishing fees. The commission is carrying a surplus in the bank of about $2.8 million.

No Supervision

The commission is one of the few activities in state government which operates without supervision despite governmental organization. It is autonomous in planning, organizing, staffing, budgeting, and direction.

Some of the elements which bothered Hunt administration sources are these:

- About half the cost of the monthly magazine comes not from subscriptions but from a subsidy using license money totaling about $100,000, and Wildlife officials rejected a suggestion that advertisements be sold;
- A statewide radio system is one of the most advanced and expensive installed by any state agency and is of questionable value;
- Funds are being put aside to construct a Wildlife Building rather than continuing to use available space in state-owned property.
- The single biggest program is law enforcement, and need for expensive vehicles, uniforms, sidearms and other equipment to check people for hunting and fishing licenses is questionable.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Raps Tax-Reduction Bill

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Despite sizable Democratic support for the Kemp-Roth tax-cut bill, Democratic national chairman John White unleashed an assault on the proposal in a private letter to top Democrats around the country, calling it "shoddy" and "reckless."

Accompanied by an inch-thick back-up dossier attacking the 33 percent, three-year tax reduction proposal of Rep. Jack Kemp and Sen. William Roth, White's Aug. 23 letter was his latest in a series attempting to rally Democratic support around President Carter's major legislative proposals.

On Kemp-Roth, White minced no words, describing "this shoddy, highly inflationary proposal (as) a clear sign of intellectual bankruptcy." Further, wrote White, the tax-cut plan exemplifies "reckless Republican policies" and "reckless economic measures."

Yet, when Kemp first brought his tax cut to the floor of the House on March 15, as an amendment to the Humphrey-Hawkins full-employment bill, 52 House Democrats supported Kemp. And when Kemp-Roth came to the floor as an amendment to the Ways and Means Committee's tax-cut bill, 38 Democrats voted yes. More undoubtedly would have except for a complicating parliamentary situation.

White's letter, in the words of one Democratic state chairman, is a "standard" effort to rally Democrats around the party banner. In fact, it may reflect two deepening concerns: how Democratic candidates can best handle the Kemp-Roth issue; and how to cut down Jack Kemp, a possible 1980 Republican presidential contender against Jimmy Carter.

Carter Lobbying Scores

The high-pressure White House lobbying campaign to pass the natural gas bill has succeeded admirably in one of its primary purposes: to split corporate executives from their Washington lobbyists.

The carefully staged White House shows, featuring President Carter himself, have exerted immediate impact on chief executive officers of companies not directly affected by the gas bill. Although their permanent Washington representatives in many cases recommended non-support of the bill, the top brass was bowled over by the president.

A typical case concerned one large manufacturing firm with important international trade matters now in the hands of the Carter administration. Acting on the advice of its permanent Washington lobbyist the company weeks ago decided to stay neutral in the natural gas fight.

But the company's chief executive officer emerged from his White House meeting determined to switch positions and actively support the bill. The overt reason: even though the substance of the issues involved seemed murky, the President of the United States had asked his help in the national interest.

However, the corporate president also may have been considering tariff questions, wholly unrelated to energy but vital to his company's future, now under consideration by the administration.

Nevertheless, the technique has two limitations. First, it is questionable how many times Mr. Carter can go to the well with this increasingly frequent lobbying

Strength For Today

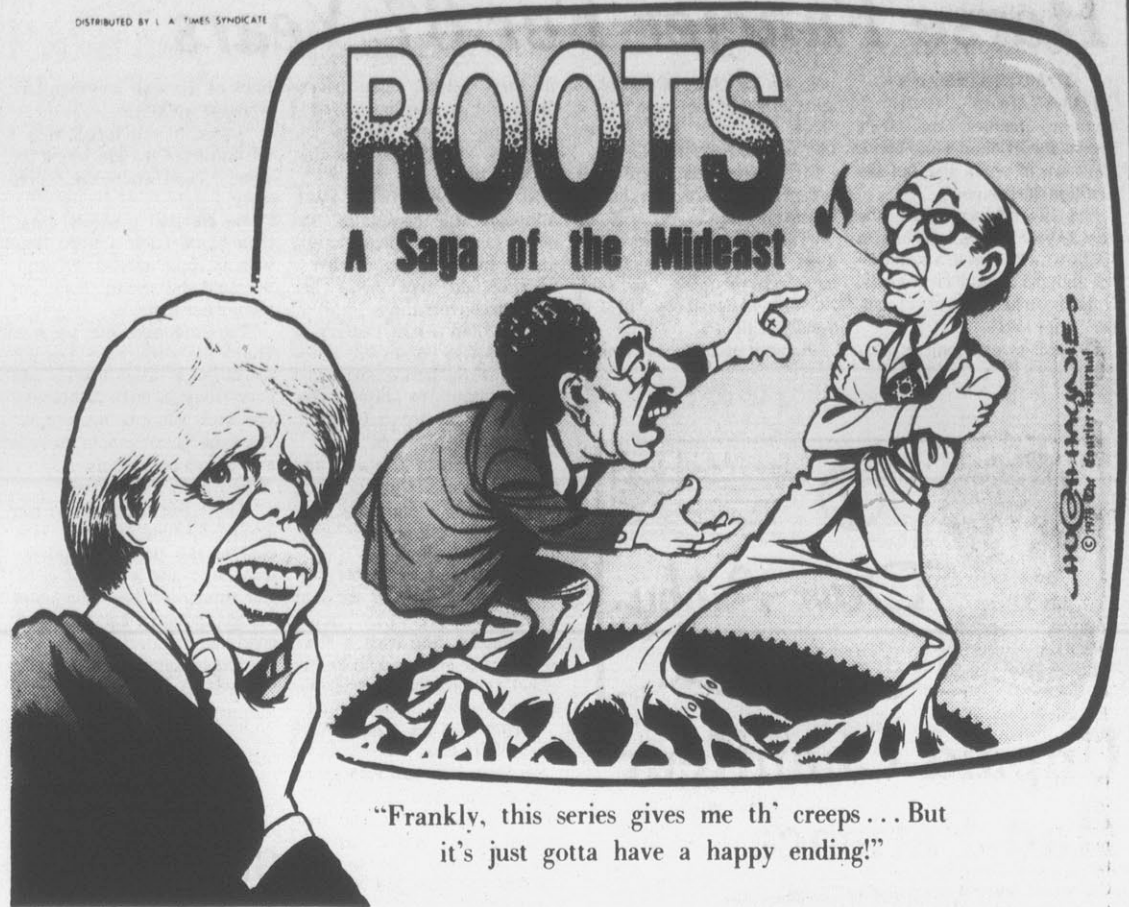

IN THE LIGHT OF THE CROSS

A minister was reading the Scripture lesson at an evening service when the lights of the church went out. It happened, however, that an illuminated cross at the back of the chancel was on a different circuit and so remained lighted. The minister simply walked to the end of the chancel, and in the light that came from the illuminated cross, continued reading the Scripture.

Like the minister, we must read the Bible in the light of the cross if we would understand it. The Bible is the revelation God has made of Himself through history — and particularly through the history of the Jewish people. From the earliest chapters of Genesis, the whole of the revealed Word looks toward the coming of a divine Savior.

We cannot understand the significance of God's long revelation of Himself through patriarch, priest, prophet, and apostle unless we read it in the light of the cross of Jesus Christ, which is the divine culmination of all that had gone before.

Confessions Of A Klutz

WASHINGTON — I stepped on a tennis ball this summer while running for another ball. I wouldn't mention it except that Time magazine did a piece on people over 40 who still think they are youngsters when it comes to sports. They ran a picture of me in a leg cast (I had a badly sprained ankle) and they called me a "klutz," which means a klunk who doesn't know what he's doing.

Naturally, I was offended, because Howard Cosell has said on many occasions that my performance on a tennis court could only be compared to Nureyev's on a ballet stage.

The problem with having any kind of sports injury when you're over 40 is not what it does to your body or even to your pride. It's the flak you have to take from well-meaning people who keep asking you what happened.

Since I was in the cast for six weeks, I was able to break these people down into categories.

In the first category were those who demanded to know WHY I stepped on the tennis ball. My stock answer for them was: "I always wanted to do it but I never had the nerve. It beats the hell out of ballooning, because when you're flying through the air you have a complete sense of weightlessness."

The second category of sympathizers I ran into would ask, "Why didn't you move the extra tennis ball off the court before you started playing?"

"Because that would have taken the fun out of the game," I would reply. "The thrill of tennis is to get the ball back without stepping on the one you left on the court."

I said this with so much conviction that most people would reply, "I didn't know that."

"Of course. Why do you think you play with three tennis balls? You need two to serve with, and one to leave on the court so you can trip over it."

ART BUCHWALD

The real agony of being in a cast is that you have to listen to everyone else's cast story. I don't believe I ran into one person who hadn't been in a cast at one time or another. And when you're on crutches, it's very hard to move away when someone starts telling you his or her own tale.

They were all horror stories and ranged from the fact that their bones hadn't been set right and had to be set again to how they were driven up the wall when their injured leg started itching and they had to poke knitting needles down the cast to get relief.

"The worst thing," one lady told me, "is that when they take the cast off and you see what your leg looks like, most people faint."

After a while I realized that people were not impressed with how I was injured, so I devised a story which would get their attention.

When asked what happened, I would say, "It's very boring, but if you're really interested — I was on a tennis court, and suddenly this flying saucer landed by the net and a little green man got out wielding a laser pistol. He said, 'Take me to your leader.' I didn't know who to take him to — so he shot me in the leg."

You would think that your own orthopedic surgeon would have sympathy for someone over 40 who had suffered a sports injury. But when I returned to Washington and went to my doctor to have the cast removed, he took one look at my leg and all he said was, "Did you have a nice summer?"

React As In 1958

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — As it warily watches developments in Nicaragua, the Carter administration is taking many of the same steps that the Eisenhower administration took in 1958 regarding Cuba.

At that time, Fidel Castro's guerrilla movement was gaining strength, and the days of strongman Fulgencio Batista were clearly numbered.

The State Department reacted then as it is reacting now to the troubles of Nicaraguan dictator Anastasio Somoza. It cut off the shipment of military aid to Batista, just as it has now cut off military aid to Somoza.

In its pronouncements, the Eisenhower administration tried to strike a moderate balance, hoping that a peaceful solution might be found. Of course, it was not. Castro seized power on Jan. 2, 1959.

Greenville voters went to the polls yesterday and approved five PWA projects estimated at a cost of approximately $625,000 of which 45 percent will be financed by grants already approved by the federal agency and the remaining 55 percent from bonds — sale of which was approved in yesterday's election.

Erl Stapleton, who heads the federal music project in North Carolina, was in Greenville late yesterday afternoon conferring with Norman Handley, director of the local federal music project and municipal band.

Director Handley said that he stands ready and willing at all times to offer music instruction to anyone under the program sponsored by the federal government.

See Short-Lived Price Trend

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In spite of a sharp improvement lately in government figures on the pace of wholesale and consumer prices, few economic observers are scheduling any victory parties in the battle against inflation.

"The recent slowing in the rate of inflation over the summer months has been more apparent than real," analysts at Merrill Lynch Government Securities Inc. observed in this week's bulletin to clients.

The rise of the consumer price index, which had been running at close to a 10 percent annual rate for most of the year, slowed to a 6 percent annual rate in July.

And in August the producer price index, one of the Labor Department's measures of wholesale prices, dropped at a 1.2 percent yearly rate, raising hopes for a further letup in pressures on retail prices.

But as private analysts were quick to point out, the dropoff in both these inflation yardsticks stemmed primarily from a decline in food prices, which are notoriously volatile.

And, while that might be potential good news for supermarket shoppers suffering from checkout-line trauma, it also suggests to the experts that whatever break occurs in the inflationary spiral might be brief.

Economists at New York's Citibank said they would like to be enthusiastic about the latest data. "But unfortunately we can't," they said, "since the slowdown was due largely to declining food prices. With the exception of the year-long slide in coffee prices, most of these declines should prove shortlived."

"Even if food prices show only moderate gains for the remainder of this year — a big 'if' in our estimation — there is little doubt they'll be accelerating again early next year."

Merrill Lynch Government Securities pointed out that, in contrast to food items, prices for industrial commodities are still climbing hard.

"The rate of increase in the industrial component of the producers' price index has increased to an annual rate of 8 percent over the last six months, compared to a 6 percent rate in the last six months of 1977," the firm said.

"Similarly, the services, and commodities other than food components, of the CPI have accelerated to an almost 5 percent annual rate this year from a rate just over 3 percent in the last half of 1977."

The Federal Reserve Board, likewise, has indicated its continuing concern over the inflation outlook by tightening credit further in recent days in its effort to slow the growth of the money supply.

tactic; second, whether those chief executive officers can sway any senators in the 11th hour of the long natural gas fight is even more debatable.

Shaky Tower
What started as a bold

Republican move to take over the Texas state government could end in defeat for Sen. John Tower, who 18 years ago broke the Democratic monopoly on Southern senators.

Oil millionaire William Clements, former deputy secretary of defense, has mobilized his formidable energy and vast fortune in a campaign long anticipated by Texas Republicans. But it has turned out to be a severe disappointment, with Clements running far behind state Atty. Gen. John Hill, the Democratic nominee.

What's worse, some influential Republicans believe Clements' hard-nosed conservative style is so abrasive that it is undercutting the entire state ticket — including Tower's bid for a fourth term in the Senate. Tower is now in a virtual dead heat with Democratic Rep. Bob Krueger.

Reagan's Manager
John Sears, the brilliant but controversial manager of Ronald Reagan's 1976 presidential drive, is slated to be relieved of day-to-day control over the 1980 Reagan campaign but will retain overall strategic direction.

For the first few months of the Castro regime, the Eisenhower policy seemed to be working. Relations between the two countries were fairly friendly, although Castro did not like the way the American press covered the early purges he conducted.

Castro visited Washington in April 1959 and had a friendly lunch at the State Department. But problems already were marring the relationship.

Historians still debate whether Castro was a life-long Marxist who waited for a year or two to show his true colors, or whether he was pushed into the arms of the Soviets by clumsy American diplomacy.

Whatever the case, relations soured as the Cuban revolutionaries began expropriating property — Cuban and American — without compensation. The American economic presence was huge. The United Fruit Co., for example, owned 270,000 acres of the island's best sugar land.

By May 1960, Castro established diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union. Eisenhower responded by ending American purchases of Cuban sugar, a body blow to the Cuban economy. The Soviets picked up the slack. By January 1961, Eisenhower had severed diplomatic relations. They are still severed, and the Cuban problem has been a chronic headache for the United States.

The analogy between Nicaragua today and Cuba in 1958 is imprecise.

One major difference is the opposition to Somoza. While Castro was clearly the leading figure in the Cuban revolution, there is no corresponding figure in Nicaragua.

There are civilian foes of the Somoza regime, and there are several factions within the Sandinist guerrilla movement.

While all of the Sandinists inveigh against "Yankee imperialism," only some appear to be doctrinaire Marxist revolutionaries. Others are nationalists, some even church-oriented.

State Department officials say they have no way of knowing which opposition leaders, if any, are likely to replace Somoza. If the Sandinistas come to power, these officials have only hazy ideas of which leaders represent what factions.

Children's Education Conference

ECU News Bureau

WINSTON-SALEM — Approximately 2,000 persons are expected to attend the 25th anniversary study conference of the N.C. Association for the Education of Young Children scheduled here Oct. 5-7.

The conference, open to all persons with a professional or non-professional interest in the education of the child from nursery through third grade, is being coordinated by the East Carolina University Division of Continuing Education.

Its sessions are of special interest to day care, nursery, Head Start, kindergarten and primary grade teachers; teacher aides; teachers of exceptional children; education administrators; staff training coordinators; parents; and health care professionals.

Keynote speakers are Dr. Alice Keliher, noted teacher, author, lecturer and consultant, who has served as special advisor to the U.S. Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare; and Dr. James Comer, professor of psychiatry at the Yale University Child Study Center.

More than 40 workshops and special presentations will be open to participants, focussing on a variety of topics relevant to the educational development of young children.

Further information about the conference is available from "NC-AEYC Conference," Office of Non-Credit Programs, Division of Continuing Education, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Former Marina Oswald Called To Testify In Kennedy Hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — As a 37-year-old mother living and rearing children in a Dallas suburb, Marina Oswald is light years removed from her life as the fun-loving Russian teenager who married Lee Harvey Oswald.

But Marina Oswald is traveling backward in time to describe for the House Assassinations Committee her life with the strange, volatile American accused of murdering President John F. Kennedy.

She was scheduled to testify today as the committee moves into a new phase of its hearings on Kennedy's assassination in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963.

Through the first five days of hearings, the committee has presented in mind-numbing detail the results of a battery of scientific studies of the evidence. Those reports generally support the Warren Commission's conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald, acting alone, killed Kennedy.

Today, the committee turns its attention to Oswald, summoning his widow to testify publicly for the first time.

Two years after the assassination and Oswald's murder by Jack Ruby, Marina married a Dallas factory foreman, Kenneth Porter, and they settled into what they hoped would be a private life in a Dallas suburb. Her two daughters by Oswald, June Lee, now 16, and Rachel, almost 15, live with them. A son, Mark, was born to the Porters in 1966.

They were divorced in 1974 but later resumed living together and Marina continues to use the Porter name.

How different was her life nearly half a world away in the Soviet city of Minsk, where she met Oswald at a trade union dance in March 1961.

Marina was not yet 20, a headstrong girl who left her home in Leningrad because she resented her stepfather's strong discipline, according to the Warren Commission's summary of the testimony she gave in sessions closed to the public.

In Minsk, where she lived with a favorite uncle and aunt, she enjoyed socializing with student friends, the commission wrote.

After a six-week courtship, Marina and Oswald were married. Oswald's diary entries showed that he proposed to Marina to spite another girl friend who had rejected him.

"In spite of the fact I married Marina to hurt Ella, I found myself in love with Marina," he wrote the day after his wedding.

But Oswald, who had settled in the Soviet Union in 1959, soon became dissatisfied with the dullness of life as an American expatriate working in a Russian factory. He returned to the United States with his wife and baby daughter in June 1962, and the family settled in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Thief Took Wheelchair

SEATTLE (AP) — A car accident robbed Bob Henson of the use of his legs and all but three muscles in his arms. Now, someone has stolen his $2,000 electric wheelchair.

"I don't think my problems are that big a deal, but that chair is my lifeline," he says.

Last month, Henson, 25, flew to Arkansas to visit his mother. But he had to board the plane at Seattle-Tacoma Airport before a friend arrived to take charge of the wheelchair, so Henson left it behind, with the understanding the friend would pick it up in 10 minutes.

The chair was gone by the time the friend arrived. Police and the State Patrol have found no sign of it.

"I'm feeling kinda blue. I don't like being immobile," Henson says.

"I'm at a total loss without the chair. See, I can't use my arms very much ... but with that chair I was totally free ... Well, not totally."

Henson, who was injured seven years ago, lives on Social Security and veterans' benefits.

Winner In Horse Show

AYDEN — Gary Taft of Elizabeth City riding "Country Bumpkin" was awarded the high point trophy at the Third Annual Ayden Collard Festival Sunday.

Laurie Daughtry of Ayden was presented the reserve high point trophy for her horse, "Dawn."

A total of 141 entries participated in the 26 classes, sponsored by the Pitt County 4-H Horse Fanciers club. English and Western horse and pony classes were featured, as well as hunter and pleasure driving classes.

Miss Ann Partin of Enfield served as judge with Roger Irwin as ringmaster.

According to Iris Edwards, 4-H Horse Club leader, and Mike Regans, associate agricultural extension agent, the success of the show was made possible by the hard-working Horse Club members and parents, as well as support from local businesses.

Soil Erosion Halts Work

PITTSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A state official said Tuesday he has recommended that a court order be issued to halt work on a Greensboro-to-Selma pipeline until steps are taken to prevent soil erosion at the construction site.

John L. Holley, regional engineer for the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, initiated enforcement proceedings that could result in a fine or an injunction against Colonial Pipeline Co. of Atlanta.

Colonial has been given until Monday to bring the 107-mile pipeline project into compliance with the state Sedimentation and Pollution Control Act of 1973.

State officials said earlier that Colonial was not following an erosion control plan. They said soil has washed into the Dry Creek and Haw River during recent rainstorms, causing an undetermined amount of damage.

The firm was ordered to install diversions to reduce surface water flow over exposed soil, to install silt fences along the banks of the river and creek and place sandbag walls in some areas.

"They have taken some action, but they have not done it correctly," Holley said. "The actions are not complete and the job has not been done right. To say the least, I am unhappy."

The 16-inch pipeline will transport liquid petroleum products.

Argentine meat exports totaled some $359 million in the first six months of the year, a 26.6 percent increase over the same period of 1977, according to the National Meat Board.

How Tar Heel Congressmen And Senators Voted

By ROLL CALL REPORT
WASHINGTON—Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes immediately following the summer recess.

HOUSE
SPYING ON FOREIGNERS—Adopted, 178, for and 176 against, an amendment making it easier for the U.S. government to conduct electronic surveillance on foreigners in the U.S. The amendment eliminated a proposed requirement that the government obtain a court warrant for electronic spying on foreigners suspected of threatening national security.

It stipulated that such surveillance need be authorized only by the attorney general and a designated "national security official" in the executive branch. It was attached to HR 7308, a bill setting stricter rules on U.S. government spying on foreigners. The bill was headed toward final passage and consideration by the Senate.

Rep. Eldon Rudd, R-Ariz., a supporter, said: "It makes absolutely no sense whatsoever for our intelligence personnel (to) obtain judicial warrants to conduct electronic surveillance against foreigners visiting our country—when those persons might have known or suspected ties to Communist governments or terrorist organizations.

Rep. Edward Boland, D-Mass., an opponent, said: "History shows and the record proves that often times the information which was collected under the guise of surveilling foreign powers, foreign embassies, and consulates was used against American citizens. That is the reason why we have an across-the-board warrant in this bill."

Members voting "yea" favored eliminating the warrant requirement.

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L. H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10, and Lamar Gudgeon, D-11, voted "yea."

Reps. Stephen Neal, D-5, Richardson Preyer, D-6, Charles Rose, D-7, and W. G. Heffner, D-8, voted "nay."

NEW YORK AID—Passed, 233 for and 132 against, a measure (HJ Res 1088) giving final congressional approval of the $1.65 billion federal loan guarantee said necessary to prevent New York City's bankruptcy. The bill, which now goes to the Senate, follows up the 1975 financial bail-out legislation for New York that expired June 30, 1978. In part, it appropriates the $1.65 billion on a standby basis.

Rep. George Mahon, D-Tex., a supporter, said: "I hope that this assistance will not only enable New York City to avert bankruptcy, but also will give the city an entree to the credit markets."

Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., an opponent, said: "here is the first chance for us to save some money for the people back home at the same time force fiscal responsibility on the city of New York."

Members voting "yea" favored the loan guarantee for New York.

Jones, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Heffner and Martin voted "yea."

Fountain, Whitley, Broyhill and Budger voted "nay."

ABORTION—Adopted, 224 for and 131 against, an amendment to prohibit U.S. Civil Rights Commission involvement in the abortion issue. It was attached to HR 12432, a bill extending the life of the commission through 1983. The bill was sent to conference with the Senate.

The commission was created 21 years ago to function as a federal watchdog over civil rights violations and make policy recommendations in that field. In recent years it has taken an interest in federal abortion policy—offering the rationale that anti-abortion laws discriminate against poor, minority women by denying them equal protection under the law.

Rep. Thomas Hagedorn, R-Minn., a sponsor of the amendment, said: "The issue of abortion, in itself, is a critical one—but it is not a civil rights matter."

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., an opponent, said: "Sometimes we disagree with the suggestions that the Civil Rights Commission makes. It does not mean that we should indulge in

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Heffner, Martin, and Gudgeon voted "yea."

Preyer and Rose voted "nay."

SENATE

BUDGET CUT?—Rejected, 25 for and 44 against, an amendment to lower by $17.7 billion the amount of the fiscal 1979 federal budget. It was proposed to H Con Res 683, the resolution setting budget ceilings to guide Congress in its consideration of individual spending bills. H Con Res 683, which now goes to conference with the House, already had cut existing fiscal 1979 budget authority by $11 billion, to $557.7 billion. This amendment sought an additional, across-the-board cut, to $540 billion. Fiscal 1979 begins Oct. 1.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, a supporter, said: "The reason that spending is out of control is that the Congress does not give as much weight to defending the taxpayer's purse as it does to accommodating the pressure groups and building its spending constituencies."

Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Me., an opponent, said: "There are program needs that cannot be further compromised or cut, or whose constituencies are such that there is no practical way to achieve further cuts."

Members voting "yea" favored cutting the 1979 budget across-the-board by $17.7 billion.

Sens. Robert Morgan, D, and Jesse Helms, R, did not vote.

Advantages of Group Therapy that you have it done now? If the doctor has advised it, you certainly should not delay doing it.

The procedure is a simple one; it may be a little uncomfortable, but it is not painful. A thin rubber tube is passed through the nose into the esophagus and then into the stomach.

Usually, the nose and throat are sprayed with a local anesthetic. This further decreases the discomfort.

After the tube is passed into the stomach, the fluid contents of the stomach are gently withdrawn. This is then tested for digestive juices, bile, hydrochloric acid and for cells that later can be studied under the microscope. Some valuable information can be gained for the diagnosis and, later, for the treatment of stomach ailments.

Another most important technique is now being used in many cases. An instrument called a "gastroscope" is inserted into the stomach, through the mouth. Almost is group analysis just as effective as any other form of psychoanalysis? — Mr. G.R., Wash.

Dear Mr. R.:
All methods, or schools, of psychoanalysis have a single purpose: To give people a better insight into their own personalities, emotions and conflicts. In this way, the individual can be freed of some of the stresses of living.

The newer analytical attitudes are aimed at reducing the time necessary for a person to be relieved of some of his anxieties and neuroticisms.

Group therapy is well accepted by most schools of psychoanalytic thought. Many analysts prefer to use group therapy as an addition to individual treatment. In some instances, group treatment is used alone.

One of the great advantages of group therapy is that it permits a large number of people to be treated at the same time. This reduces the cost of therapy. In some small communities, where there is a shortage of well-trained therapists, many more people can be given the advantages of this form of therapy.

The interpersonal play that is possible among all the members of a group also has distinct advantages.

I've been told that I might need to have my stomach pumped for analysis. Is it painful to have this done? — Mrs. B.B., N.C.

Dear Mrs. B.:
I'm somewhat confused by your question. When you say you "might" have to have your stomach pumped, is this speculative or is it essential every nook and corner of the stomach can be seen by the doctor. Photographs can be taken through the instrument. Small bits of tissue can be removed for microscopic study. The fluid content can be extracted for analysis.

This valuable procedure has been a boon for the early diagnosis of problems that might otherwise be elusive.

DR. COLEMAN welcomes letters from readers. Please write to him in care of this newspaper.

Old Fort Is Newly Restored

CORK, Ireland (UPI) — The 300-year-old Charles Fort, which was little more than a picturesque ruin on Ireland's southern coast, has been restored and opened to the public, the Irish Tourist Board reports.

A massive star-shaped structure with outer defenses more than 40 feet high, the fort was built in 1677 by Sir William Robinson on the site of a medieval castle. The parapets afford a magnificent view of the harbor of the resort and fishing center of Kinsale, where William Penn's father was once governor.

By The Associated Press
Although two more localities approved the sale of mixed drinks Tuesday, anti-liquor forces say a trend has not been set since localities have been voting in a predictable way.

The Rev. Coy Privette of Kannapolis, a leader in the Christian Action League and recognized head of anti-liquor forces in the state, said Tuesday night the favorable votes on mixed-drink sales — which now number three — had not discouraged or disheartened mixed-drink opponents.

"Our expectations were finalized," Privette said. "The vote in Southern Pines and Orange County went as we had anticipated as did the vote in Black Mountain."

Voters overwhelmingly approved mixed-drink sales in Southern Pines and Orange County Tuesday while the mixed-drink referendum in Black Mountain failed.

Last Friday, voters turned out in record numbers to approve the liquor-by-the-drink measure in Mecklenburg County. That election was watched by both wets and dries since it was felt it would affect the outcome of future votes in other areas.

But Privette said the votes on the matter thus far simply reflected voters' sentiments from the 1973 statewide referendum. In that vote, both Southern Pines and Orange County approved mixed-drink sales while Black Mountain did not.

Privette said if the outcome in Black Mountain had been different, then dry forces would feel they had problems ahead in their battle. "There is a pretty good indication that North Carolina is still pretty conservative in its outlook concerning the distribution of alcoholic beverages," he said.

Privette said the CAL and other anti-liquor forces would not feel a need to change their strategy concerning the issue because of the three pro votes.

In Tuesday's voting, final returns from Southern Pines showed 1,578 votes for liquor by the drink and 433 against. In Black Mountain, the issue was defeated by a vote of 477 in favor to 649 against.

The mixed-drink proposal was approved by an overwhelming margin in Orange County. Final returns showed a vote of 8,564 in favor of liquor by the drink and 3,066 against.

Margins in the Orange County vote were as high as 6-1 for the measure in some areas. Several precincts in rural parts of northern Orange County had margins of more than 3-1 against mixed drinks.

The local-option liquor-by-the-drink bill was approved by the General Assembly in June.

Killed During Mountain Climb

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A University of North Carolina associate professor of philosophy was killed Monday while climbing the Matterhorn in Switzerland.

Dr. Jane English, who joined the faculty at Chapel Hill in 1973, was vacationing with her husband, Dr. Lawrence Crocker, a philosophy professor at the University of Washington at Seattle.

Dr. English went to Europe in August to present a paper at the 16th World Congress of Philosophy at Dusseldorf, Germany. She was on leave from UNC this academic year to do research and write a book on the philosophy of feminism. Her specialties were ethics and philosophy of science and of feminism.

Four Traffic Mishaps Here

More than $2,200 property damage resulted yesterday from a series of four traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police.

Heaviest damage, according to officers, resulted from a 5:45 p.m. collision on Charles Street, 35 feet South of the 14th Street intersection involving a car driven by Benjamin Lee Heath of Route 7, Greenville, and a truck operated by Timothy Burroughs Robinson of Route 2, Ayden.

Police, who charged Robinson with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $25 to the Heath car and $800 to the truck operated by Robinson.

Robert Joseph Myers of Route 2, Colerain was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of an 11 a.m. collision at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Lone Street.

Investigators reported the Myers car collided with a truck driven by David Woodard of 101 Greenbriar Dr. causing an estimated $500 damage to the car and $100 damage to the truck.

An estimated $250 damage resulted to each of two vehicles involved in a 10:56 a.m. mishap. Police, who identified the drivers of the cars as Harold Woodrow Deltch of Route 8, Greenville and James Leo McDermont of Ayden, reported McDermont was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety.

An 11 a.m. collision at the intersection of Ninth and Forbes Streets involved cars driven by James Reed Bellows Jr. of Greensboro and Carolyn Reavis Setzer of Route 1, Stokes, according to police.

Damage was set at $250 to the Bellows car and $60 to the Setzer vehicle by investigators who charged Bellows with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety.

Leads Missionary Conference Series

AYDEN — The Rev. George Compton of South Boston, Va., deputation secretary for the World Wide New Testament Baptist Mission Board of New Bern, will conduct a missionary conference at the Community

Baptist Church here, 111 N. E. College St., beginning tonight at 7:30.

Services will continue through Sunday at 7:30 nightly, with Sunday services at 9:45 a.m., 11 a.m. and 7 p.m.

The Rev. Compton was born and raised in Clarksville, Va. and received his ministerial training at the Bible Baptist Seminary, Fort Worth, Texas.

REV. GEO. COMPTON

The Rev. Compton had pastored churches in North and South Carolina, Maryland, Indiana and Virginia, as well as organized several Independent Baptist churches, prior to his present position.

The board was organized several years ago to assist in the financial support of missionaries. Missionary aviation is offered as part of the New Bern headquarters training for those who need it.

Missionaries entering different mission fields will give testimonies and present slides of their work. The Rev. Stan Wingard, pastor, invites the public to attend.

ECU To Offer National Tests

ECU News Bureau
Four nationally-standardized tests will be administered at East Carolina University during October. They are the Dental Aptitude Test (Oct. 7), the Graduate Management Admission Test (Oct. 28), the Graduate Record Examination (Oct. 21) and the Law School Admissions Test (Oct. 14).

Persons who wish to take the tests, requirements for admission to advanced education programs at U.S. campuses, may write the ECU Testing Center, 105 Speight Building, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C. for further information.

Advance application must be made to take each test.

Here And There A Surprise In Primary Elections

By The Associated Press

Democratic Govs. Hugh Carey of New York and Ella Grasso of Connecticut easily squashed intraparty challenges while Harry Hughes upset acting Maryland Gov. Blair Lee as the nation held its largest number of primaries before the November elections.

A total of 14 states and the District of Columbia held primaries Tuesday with one of the biggest upsets being Hughes' defeat of the successor to former Gov. Marvin Mandel. Hughes is a former Maryland transportation secretary.

U.S. Rep. Donald Fraser slipped by millionaire businessman Robert Short for the Democratic-Farmer-Labor party endorsement in Minnesota and a chance to replace Muriel Humphrey, widow of Hubert Humphrey, in the U.S. Senate.

Carey had no trouble defeating Lt. Gov. Mary Anne Krupsak who failed to gain support from women and upstate voters. Death penalty advocate Jeremiah Bloom was third.

Carey will face Assembly Minority Leader Perry Duryea, who was unopposed for the Republican nomination.

Mrs. Grasso swamped Lt. Gov. Robert Killian by a 2-to-1 margin in the Democratic primary and will face Rep. Ronald Sarasin, who was unopposed in the Republican contest, in November.

City Councilman Marion Berry held a slender 1,000-vote lead in the Washington, D.C., mayoral primary with incumbent Walter Washington running third behind Sterling Tucker, also a council member. Election officials say the outcome may not be determined until absentee ballots are counted. Art Fletcher, who served in the Ford Administration, captured the Republican primary.

Here is a state-by-state rundown of the other races:

MARYLAND: Hughes' victory was seen as a repudiation of Mandel, who was convicted of mail fraud and racketeering and forced to step down in favor of Lee. Former U.S. Sen. J. Glenn Beall had no problem gaining the GOP gubernatorial nod.

NEW YORK: An acknowledgment by U.S. Rep. Fred Richmond that he had solicited sex from a 16-year-old boy did not derail Richmond's Democratic renomination bid in the 14th Congressional District, one of the poorest in the state. Richmond faced an aggressive challenge from Bernard Gifford, a former school administrator.

RHODE ISLAND: Providence Mayor Vincent Cianci ran away with the Republican gubernatorial nomination with 97 percent of the vote. He defeated Robert A. "Skip" Chernov, a rock concert promoter. Cianci has vehemently denied allegations in a New Times magazine article which said that as a law student in Milwaukee 12 years ago he was accused by a woman of raping her at gunpoint.

Sen. Claiborne Pell was easily renominated in the Democratic primary.

MINNESOTA: Lawyer David Durenberger, won the Republican U.S. nomination, and will face Fraser in November. The gubernatorial contest will pit Democrat Rudy Perpich against Republican Rep. Albert Quie. In a second U.S. Senate race, Wendell Anderson won renomination and a challenge from the Republican Rudy Boschwitz in November.

WISCONSIN: Lee S. Dreyfus, on leave as chancellor of the University of Wisconsin at Stevens Points, upended Rep. Robert Kasten for the GOP gubernatorial nomination. Dreyfus will face Acting Gov. Martin Schreiber, who took over when Patrick Lucey became ambassador to Mexico a year ago. Schreiber took the Democratic nomination easily.

NEW HAMPSHIRE: Conservative Gov. Meldrim Thomson had no trouble downing former Gov. Wesley Powell in the state's Republican primary. His opponent in November will be businessman Hugh Gallen, who won the Democratic nomination. U.S. Sen. Thomas McIntyre walked to an easy renomination and a November contest against Gordon Humphrey, an airline pilot and former coordinator of the state conservative caucus.

FLORIDA: Former U.S. Sen. Edward J. Gurney returned to the political scene, capturing the Republican nomination in the House district that first sent him to Washington. State Atty. Gen. Robert Shevin and State Sen. Robert Graham qualified for the Democratic runoff for governor and the former head of the Government Services Administration Jack Eckerd won the GOP race.

VERMONT: Republican Gov. Richard Snelling had no opposition in the Republican primary. He will face State Rep. Edwin Granai in November.

ARIZONA: Gov. Bruce Babbitt captured the Democratic gubernatorial primary with only token opposition, while conservative Evan Mecham, an automobile dealer, won the three-way Republican nomination.

COLORADO: Rep. William Armstrong defeated former astronaut Jack Swigert by a wide margin in a Republican primary. The winner will face Democratic Sen. Floyd Haskell, who was unopposed in the primary. State Sen. Ted Strickland beat state Sen. Richard Plock in the race for the Republican nomination to run against Gov. Richard Lamm, who was unopposed.

WYOMING: Former Wyoming House Speaker Alan Simpson was the winner in the Republican Senate primary while Ray Whitaker, the former state Democratic chairman, got the Democratic nod. Gov. Ed Herschler won renomination in the Democratic gubernatorial primary. Dick Cheney, White House chief of staff under former President Ford, gained the GOP nomination for the state's only House seat.

NEVADA: Lt. Gov. Bob Rose took the Democratic gubernatorial race and a shot against Atty. Gen. Bob List, a Republican, in November.

UTAH: Edwin B. Firmage, a law professor at the University of Utah, squeaked by Peter Cooke in the state's only major contest, a Democratic primary for the congressional seat held by Republican Rep. Dan Marriott.

See Job-Loss In Teacher Testing

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Coalition for Quality Education said Tuesday that the proposal for more competency tests for teachers was a move by the state to reduce the number of available teachers from poor and minority backgrounds.

The coalition has been fighting the competency tests that will be required for high school graduation in 1980. Now it is mounting opposition to a proposal last week by the University of North Carolina Board of Governors to require teachers to be tested before beginning their educational training, after completing their education and then again after three years on the job. The proposed tests would be required in addition to the National Teachers Examination which is a requirement now.

"At the same time that classes are too big and teachers' loads are so heavy that they do not have time to give adequate attention to individual students, thousands of teachers are unemployed, what does the state do? Rather than hire more teachers, it employs more competency tests to cut down the number of teachers available! Students suffer, teachers suffer from what is in effect a cutback," the Rev.

Leon White said. White is a co-founder of the coalition.

"Placing a test at the beginning of teacher training reveals that the state is not interested in finding those most qualified to teach," he said. Those who take this test have never been exposed to education curriculum, and there is no way of saying that those who fail these tests would make poorer teachers than those whose pass.

White predicted that the highest numbers of teaching students who fail all the proposed tests, especially the "entrance exam", will be those from black, white working class and Indian families.

Senior Club Held Meet

The Town and Country Senior Citizens Club met Thursday at the St. Paul Episcopal Church Fellowship Hall, with the Rev. Adrian Brown giving the devotional.

President Sarah Ashton welcomed back two members, Eleanor Hutchins and Gertrude Nicholas, then distributed North Carolina Senior Citizens I.D. cards, signed by the governor.

Members should contact Mrs. Ashton about the trip Oct. 23-25 to Old Salem, Asheville and the North Carolina mountains. There are still some seats available on the bus, according to Mrs. Ashton.

Sept. 21 was set for the birthday luncheon. Members must contact Ruby Parkerson for reservations by Sept. 15, and bring a $2 gift. Her phone number is 752-4822.

Dr. Lawrence Brewster introduced the Rev. David and the Rev. Carol Goehring, a husband and wife team at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Eula Andrews, Mrs. Pearl McCombs, the Rev. and Mrs. A. Brown, Mrs. Bernice Clark, Mrs. Helen Whitford, Mrs. Richard Turner and Mrs. Nettie Purser.

Trumpeter In Recital Friday

William Frazier, a senior trumpet student in the School of Music, East Carolina University, will perform in recital at 8:15 p.m. on Friday, Sept. 15 in the A. J. Fletcher Music Center Recital Hall.

His program will include two sets of Handel variations, J. B. Arban's "Fantasie Brillante," four Marcel Bitsch variations on a theme by Domenico Scarlatti, and a set of variations by Andre Wormser.

He will be accompanied by pianist George Stone, and by trumpeters Scott Carter and Richard Duncan.

There is no admission charge and the public is invited to attend.

Stamps In The News

By SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

Present and former British colonies in the Caribbean area have joined other Commonwealth nations throughout the world in celebrating the 25th anniversary of the coronation of Queen Elizabeth II by issuing beautiful new sets of postage stamps.

The Turks and Caicos Islands, southeast of the Bahamas, represent one of the last British colonies in the Western Hemisphere. Their new stamp set pays tribute to the coronations of four reigning monarchs prior to Queen Elizabeth.

Several of these past rulers have visited the Turks and Caicos. The 6-c shows the coronation of Queen Victoria. The 10-c features Edward VII holding the sceptre. The 25-c depicts George V's coronation. The $2 portrays King George VI, father of the present Queen.

Grenada, in the southern Caribbean, has issued three new stamps in honor of Queen Elizabeth's coronation. The 35-c shows the Queen at her coronation. The $2 features Queen Elizabeth wearing St. Edward's crown, holding the sceptre and orb. The $2.50 has a close-up of St. Edward's crown.

Antigua's coronation set consists of five stamps. Depicted are a portrait of the Queen and the Duke, the Queen at the Coronation, the Golden Coach, the Queen and the Archbishop of Canterbury, and a portrait of Queen Elizabeth.

The British Virgin Islands commemorates the 25th anniversary with three special stamps of the same value. One depicts the Royal Beasts symbol. The second shows a cameo portrait of the Queen and the third bears the "Great Iguana," the famous and fastmoving lizard found in the British Virgin Islands.

The Bahamas Islands joins the coronation stamp parade with two new issues.

The 16-c features three important pieces of coronation regalia — the sceptre with a cross containing a massive diamond, St. Edward's Crown which was made for Charles II and is worn only once in the lifetime of each monarch, and the Golden Orb symbolizing a world united. The $1 shows Queen Elizabeth at the Coronation wearing St. Edward's Crown and holding the sceptre in the right hand and the golden orb in the left.

All these stamps are available at your local stamp dealer.

The design of the indicia of the 1978 U.S. embossed stamped envelope honoring the sport of auto racing is based on a facsimile of a championshipclass, Indianapolis-500-type racing car.

The auto racing envelope follows several other U.S. postal stationery items issued in recent years to salute other sports, according to the U.S.P.S. A 1971 embossed envelope honored bowling while a 1973 aerogramme hailed hot air ballooning. These were followed by a 1974 envelope marking the 100th anniversary of the introduction of lawn tennis into this country. A 1977 envelope was a tribute to golf.

Luxury Liner Grows Larger

NEW YORK (UPI) — The luxury liner Queen Elizabeth 2 has grown larger over the years, according to Cunard.

The world's largest passenger liner in service was officially measured at 65,863 gross registered tons when launched. After new rooms were added in 1972 her tonnage increased to 66,851. She put on another 256 tons, for a total of 67,107, after the addition of two new suite room sections last December, the shipowners said. Gross registered tonnage is a measurement of size. Each 100 cubic feet of usable interior space equals one registered ton.

Light Vote Is Expected

LOUISBURG, N.C. (AP) — Only a light vote is expected when Louisburg decides on liquor by the drink Sept. 20. Town Administrator Tony Robertson says.

"If the vote is like the talk, there'll be a very light vote. I haven't heard it mentioned except in Church yesterday (Sunday)."

The minister at Louisburg Baptist Church reminded the congregation of the impending vote on mixed drinks and urged the members to vote against it, Robertson said.

While he would not predict the outcome of the vote, Robertson noted that Southern Baptists make up a large percentage of the population of the Louisburg area, and this could reduce chances for approval of mixed drinks.

There has been no organized campaign on either side of the issue, observers say, but they expect a little more activity in the final week before the election.

Only three local restaurants would be eligible for a license if mixed drinks are approved, and only one has made any effort in support of mixed drinks.

Gene Carroll, who operates The Villa, asked county commissioners to schedule the referendum, but observers said he has done little to promote approval of liquor by the drink.

Old Locomotive Added To A Future Museum

SPENCER, N.C. (AP) — The latest purchase by the North Carolina Transportation History Corp. has provided a boost in the number of artifacts at the historic Spencer Shops here which the state is restoring for a transportation museum expected to open in 1983.

The corporation purchased a 1926 Baldwin locomotive, six passenger cars, a baggage car and a 1944 Baldwin diesel for a mere $60,000, about $10,000 below what an operating locomotive with 2-8-0 wheel alignment is worth, according to H. Allan Paul, interpretations specialist with the N.C. Historic Sites section in charge of the Spencer Shops project.

Southern Railway donated its old shops at the small town of Spencer to the state last fall for the transportation museum. The shops were Southern's major locomotive and train car repair depot during the steam engine days.

The Baldwin is expected to arrive in Spencer today. It is being hauled from Mocassin Gap, Va., via Asheville. The purchase represents a major increase in the holdings of the nonprofit corporation. The locomotive was under steam in the last year while others that have been acquired by the corporation need extensive repair.

The locomotive was purchased from the bankrupt Southwest Virginia Scenic Railroad Co. of Hiltons, Va., which operated on Southern's 22-mile Bristol line. Formerly it was the property of Buffalo Creek and Gauley Railroad of West Virginia. It was used on the excursion train as late as 1975.

"Everything's intact on it," Paul said. "The only damage is one of the air pumps which has a crack in it which is easily fixed and the smoke box has a small hole in its front which is also easily fixed."

Corporation President Fred Corriher Jr. said the locomotive and cars may be used as early as next spring for excursion trips.

How's The Weather?

FORECAST

Until Thursday

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain and showers are expected in the period from today until Thursday morning from the northern Plains and Great Lakes to the lower Mississippi Valley. Mostly clear skies are due for the western half of the country. Cooler weather is forecast for the Northeast and the Plains. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

A cold front stretching east and west across northern Virginia through the Ohio Valley is moving southward and will be dipping into North Carolina during tonight and Thursday.

The front will bring somewhat cooler temperatures for tonight and Thursday and it also posed the prospect of scattered showers and possible thunderstorms for this afternoon and evening. Rain also is likely over the mountains Thursday.

High temperatures were expected to be in the 80s over much of the state today with some 70s in the mountains. Low readings tonight will range from the 50s in the mountains to the low and middle 60s elsewhere.

With rain likely in the mountains and partly cloudy elsewhere, temperatures Thursday will be mostly in the 70s to near 80.

Looking toward the weekend, the outlook is for scattered showers and thundershowers

Friday and Saturday, and fair and not as warm Sunday.

Decides Chavis Cannot Go To Receive Award

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Wilmington 10 leader Ben Chavis has been denied permission to travel to Washington to accept a human rights award from the Institute for Political Studies.

Corrections Secretary Amos Reed said today he made the decision "consistent with the overall program aimed at best meeting the needs and goals of Mr. Ben Chavis."

Chavis, who is currently attending Duke University Divinity School under the department's study-release program, was chosen recently to be one of two recipients of the award. The other will be Samuel Rubin, New York philanthropist. Trin Yarbrough, a spokesman for the Institute for Policy Studies, says Chavis was chosen because "although imprisoned, he has continued to work for justice and equality throughout the world, and was among the first to support the work to restore democracy to Chile after the military coup."

The Wilmington 10 are nine black men and a white woman who received prison terms following their conviction in 1972 on charges stemming from the firebombing of a grocery store during racial troubles in Wilmington in 1971.

They have won worldwide attention, especially since the three major state witnesses against them said they lied under oath at their trial. Earlier this year, Gov. Jim Hunt refused to pardon the 10, but he

Federal Govm't Insists On 4 Times As Much

By ELLEN HADDOW

Associated Press Writer
OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The town of Sidney may get a new snowplow after all. But the federal government is insisting the town take four times the money it says it needs.

Sidney, population 6,300 in Nebraska's panhandle, has been bogged down in federal and state red tape while trying for a year to get a snowplow to replace its aging homemade version. The current plow is a 1936 Civil Defense truck with a scraper on the front end. It was bought in 1954 for $50.

The town originally had budgeted $9,800, but found plow prices were more than expected. Add federal and state red tape, and the project snowballed to six digits.

Now, the federal government apparently has decided to give Sidney $99,900 for a plow, but City Manager Merle Strouse says he could make do with $25,000.

At first, the Federal Aviation Administration had said Sidney didn't get enough snow to warrant buying a snowplow. Then, the agency reversed itself and said the town could use federal dollars to get a new plow. But not just any snowplow — Sidney needed one costing at least $82,000 to meet federal specifications.

Strouse also was told the town's airport needed a $106,000 building to keep the snowplow in, plus $22,000 for an airport layout plan because a construction project had to be tied in.

After months of haggling, Strouse got the FAA to drop its insistence on an airport plan and to cut the grant to $106,000 — with $45,000 for a plow — and the town contributing 10 percent. Further discussions apparently got the agency to cut the grant even more.

On Tuesday, Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., announced the FAA would give Sidney $99,900 to help buy a snowplow and provide a garage.

Strouse said he had not heard from the FAA officially, but he insisted all the town needs "is a snowplow. That's it. If they say we can't have one without the other (a snowplow without a building), I guess we'll have to take both."

Strouse also said the town doesn't need that much money and that if the town does get the $99,900 grant, he'll recommend that the City Council use as little as possible.

"If we don't spend all the money, we'll send the rest of it back," he said.

Farmville Mart Volume Rising

FARMVILLE — Volume of quality tobacco continues to increase on the Farmville Tobacco Market, according to Louis Williams, sales supervisor of the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade.

Grade for grade, price remain steady, he said. Volume of nondescript grades was the lowest of the season on yesterday's sale. Stabilization accounted for 1.63 percent of gross sales. The market sold 622,455 pounds for $906,697, for an average of $145.66 per hundred pounds. This compares with $126.35 on the same sale day last year. To date the market has sold 15,223,554 pounds for $20,446,453, for a season of $134.30. This compares with $113.81 last year.

Gospel Sing On Saturday Night

A gospel sing will be held at the Meadowbrook Pentecostal Holiness Church Saturday night beginning at 7:30.

The guest singers will be the Nelms Family of Rocky Mount. The pastor, Rev. William H. Tyson, and church members invite the public to attend.

Noted Surgeon Joins School

ECU News Bureau
 An internationally known surgeon who pioneered techniques in vascular surgery has joined the East Carolina University School of Medicine.
 Dr. Charles Rob, a native of England, will practice general and vascular surgery at the medical school and will be responsible for the development of a vascular laboratory. The lab will provide consultation services to area physicians seeing patients with particular vascular problems.
 Rob comes to ECU from the University of Rochester School of Medicine and Dentistry where he was professor and chairman of the Department of Surgery for 17 years. He served as consulting surgeon to the Genesee, Highland, Rochester General and St. Mary's Hospitals in Rochester.
 In 1975 the International Surgical Society awarded Rob the Rene Leriche Prize for the most valuable work on the surgery of arteries, veins or the heart which had appear in recent years.
 Rob received his M.D. from Cambridge University and completed his postgraduate training at St. Thomas' Hospital, London. He served as professor of surgery at the University of London before coming to the United States in 1960 to accept an appointment as chairman of surgery at the University of Rochester.

Learning Flaws

Need Attention

NEW YORK (UPI)—Early detection and treatment of learning disorders can prevent future failure and frustration for children, their parents and teachers, advises the head of a national center devoted to the diagnosis and treatment of such behavior problems.
 Less than half of the learning-disabled children in this country are being identified early enough so that appropriate treatment plans can be devised, according to Dr. Alan C. Levin of the non-profit New York Institute for Child Development.

Richard Nixon Owed To Backer Elmer Bobst

NEW YORK (AP)—Richard M. Nixon owed a lot to Elmer Holmes Bobst, a financial wizard little known to the general public.

Because of that, the former president timed his current trip to New York — to sign a contract for a new book — to coincide with a memorial service for Bobst, who died Aug. 2 at the age of 93. When Nixon failed in 1962 in his bid to be elected California's governor, Bobst helped him get a new start as a senior partner in a Wall Street law firm.

In 1958, Bobst established a trust fund of more than $25,000 for Nixon's daughter Tricia. When she received the proceeds at age 21, Tricia lent her father $20,000 which he, in turn, used to buy two undeveloped lots in Key Biscayne, Fla.

And when Nixon ran for his second presidential term, Bobst was in the forefront of contributors with $100,000. In fact, Bobst always was considered one of Nixon's major financial backers.

Bobst was the Horatio Algertype the former president admires. He began as a $3-a-week drugstore clerk and became the honorary chairman and major stockholder of one of the world's largest pharmaceutical firms, Warner-Lambert Co.

Bobst once described his relationship with Nixon as "the strongest, certainly the most propitious friendship in my life."

Nixon was one of six men invited by Mrs. Bobst to deliver a eulogy at the private memorial service scheduled this afternoon at New York University's Elmbert Holmes Best Library and Study Center.

Around NYU, leaflets were passed out earlier promising that "Richard Nixon, America's first underground president, is sure to be greeted by large and varied mix of demonstrators." The letterhead proclaimed the leaflet was produced by the "Bring Abbie Home Committee," a group formed to obtain a pardon for former Yippie leader Abbie Hoffman who is a fugitive on drug charges.

Nixon encountered a few boos Tuesday when he walked from his hotel to the Warner Communications Building to sign a contract for a book to be published next year. But mostly the people who saw him were curious and friendly and many sought his autograph or a handshake.

At a news conference, his first since leaving office, Nixon said his book will be about the major issues facing the United States the rest of the century. He did not say what financial arrangements were made.

"Whether it will be a commercial success remains to be seen," he said. "I'm more interested in it being a book that will be read by the opinion makers in this country."

Rabbi Sues Six In Congregation

LONGMEADOW, Mass. (AP) — Rabbi Israel Silber has sued six members of his congregation for $1 million, charging that he has been assaulted, slandered, harassed and deprived of $24,000 in salary.

Silber, rabbi of Congregation B'nai Jacob, alleges the six slandered him by accusing him "of being dishonest, being untrustworthy, and of being unfit for his duties as rabbi." The suit also claims the six are trying to oust him as rabbi even though he has an automatic renewal clause in his contract that assures him of his job at least until next spring. It also charges that one of the six committed assault and battery against Silber last May 5.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was little changed today, continuing the standoff that set in early in the week.

Gainers took a very slight lead over losers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

But the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped .77 to 905.67 in the first half hour.

Brokers said there was little in the economic news to give the market a push in either direction.

Among the unsettled questions facing investors was the prospective outcome of Middle East peace talks at Camp David, Md.

In the meantime, trading interest continued to center on the gambling stocks. After sharp gains Tuesday a number of stocks in the group were delayed in opening today.

American Motors topped the active list in early trading, up 1/4 at 7 in a 120,000-share block trade.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average lost 1.30 to 906.44.

Declines held about an 8-7 edge on advances on the NYSE.

Big Board volume came to 34.40 million shares against 39.77 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index was unchanged at 60.38.

Tent Revival

Through Sunday

The Heflin Evangelistic Party of Richmond, Va., is conducting an old-fashioned tent revival here through Sunday, Sept. 24.

The tent is located on the Airport Road, across from the old fairgrounds.

Special sessions are held at the tent at 10 a.m. and evening services start at 7:30. The services include special singing and prayer for the sick.

The Rev. Wallace Heflin and teams have traveled to Russia five times and to Israel 17 times.

The public is invited to attend the services.

EASTERN STAR MEETING

Pride of the East, Chapter No. 524, Order of the Eastern Star, will meet at the Masonic Hall on West Fifth St. Thursday, 8 p.m. All members are urged to attend.

caliber and concept of the four-lane extension of U.S. 264.

The resolution concluded by urging the Department of Transportation to expedite its studies planning, "and to hold public hearings sufficient to afford the people and communities all along U.S. 264 in Pitt County to express their opinions the type of highway that is desired and the thoroughfare that is needed to best serve the public interests."

Board chairman Alton Gardner, in commenting on the resolution, said, "the Board of Commissioners saw fit to adopt this new resolution since there seemed to be some conflict with what we'd done before."

In addition to adopting the highway resolution yesterday, commissioners met with the Greenville City Council for their quarterly session to discuss matters of joint interest.

At that session, Gardner told council members, "we're not as far as advanced on the rural pick-up sites as we'd like to be," but indicated progress is being made in locating 40-cubic yard containers at sites throughout the county as part of the Solid Waste Disposal Plan.

County Manager Reginald Gray reported that renovation work is under way on the old hospital building.

Gray noted that when completed, the old facility will provide space for the Department of Social Services, the Agricultural Extension Service, the Pitt County Board of Education, studies, including the latest revision.

Ayden and Winterville officials will be notified of the new rates on the date GUC receive its report from R.W. Beck.

Recommendation three, which was tabled for 30 days, would authorize R.W. Beck Associates to conduct a cost of service study for all of GUC's retail rate schedules. The study would take three to six months and would cost approximately $35,000. Horne said recommended rates based on the cost of service study may be different from VEPCO's approved North Carolina rates.

the county's data processing center and the County Manager's office, as well as for the East Carolina University School of Medicine, which will occupy the "A" wing of the building until the medical school building is completed near the new hospital.

The county manager noted that the Johnston Street property now housing the Department of Social Services will be vacated as soon as the old hospital building is remodeled, as will the Tucker Building which now houses the extension service.

Guilty Plea To Lesser Charge

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Former Raleigh attorney John D. McConnell Jr., pleaded guilty Tuesday to a charge of accessory after the fact to possession of heroin. Superior Court Judge Forrest Ferrell continued sentencing until Oct. 2 or later.

McConnell, who has been disbarred, had been charged with conspiracy to distribute heroin along with 15 other defendants, including convicted drug smuggler Leslie "Ike" Atkinson. McConnell pleaded innocent in May.

Last year McConnell was charged with several counts of perjury in connection with federal court testimony in New York in 1975 about money he allegedly took to Bahamian banks for drug dealers.

After pleading guilty, he spent four months in a federal minimum security prison near Pensacola, Fla. He was paroled early this year. The Wayne County grand jury indictment came shortly afterward.

Faces Possible Murder Charges

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Camp Lejeune Marine has been charged in warrants with robbery and kidnapping in the Tuesday night holdup of a convenience store near here and the abduction at knifepoint of the woman clerk.

James Edward McKee was being sought today. Authorities said there would also be murder charges in the case.

The clerk, Gloria Bouknight, was found dead on the Camp Lejeune reservation not far from the store.

Funeral Thursday For Garlan Bailey

KINSTON — Mr. Garlan F. Bailey, 58, died at his home, 1307 Howard St., Tuesday. Funeral services will be held Thursday, 4 p.m., at the Northwest Christian Church, Kinston. Burial will follow in the Maplewood Cemetery, Kinston.

GARLAN F. BAILEY

Mr. Bailey was a native of Thomasville. He received his bachelor's and master's degrees at East Carolina University and had done graduate work at New York University, the University of North Carolina and Duke University.

He served in the Eighth Air Force in World War Two and was awarded the Air Medal and two gold leaf decorations. Bailey served as Information and Education Officer in charge of the Middle East Command during the Korean conflict. He was also a captain in the National Guard, serving as Liaison Officer for the Fourth Howitzer Battalion, 113th Artillery, headquartered in Washington.

Bailey served as principal in the following schools: Bell Arthur, Grimesland, Lewis Elementary, Harvey Junior High.

He was a member of Northwest Christian Church, the Kinston Kiwanis Club and a Mason, Lodge No. 475.

Bailey was named president-elect of the National Association for Continuing Professional Education last spring. He joined the extension division of East Carolina as assistant director in 1965, promoted to a full professorship in August.

Survivors: his wife, Frances Sutton Bailey; one son, Randy Bailey; two daughters, Becky and Cecelia Ann; one brother, Richard Bailey of Burlington; four sisters, Mrs. Veda Forbis, Mrs. Treva Lloyd, Mrs. Pauline Teague, and Miss Odessa Bailey, all of Thomasville.

The family asks that memorial contributions be made to the Northwest Christian Church, Kinston.

Director Of Zoo Named

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Retired Marine Lt. Col. Robert L. Fry of Jacksonville today was named director of the North Carolina Zoological Park near Asheboro.

Fry retired from the Corps this summer, last serving at Camp Lejeune as director of special services, in charge of recreational activities, beaches and post theaters.

Sources close to Howard Lee, secretary of natural resources and community development, said Fry's administrative abilities were what prompted his selection to the zoo post.

He replaces William Hoff, who resigned in February under pressure. Lee and other officials have indicated since then that they were less interested in finding someone with zoo experience than a person who could be a capable fund raiser and administrator.

CHAIRMAN RESIGNS

NEW YORK (AP) — The chairman of textile maker J.P. Stevens and Co. Inc. resigned from the board of directors of New York Life Insurance Co. and the chairman of New York Life quit the J.P. Stevens board Tuesday, handing the Clothing Workers union a victory in its campaign to cut Stevens's board links to other corporations.

Obituaries

Clark

WILSON — Sidney P. Clark, 52, died Tuesday. Funeral services will be held Thursday, 11 a.m., at the First United Methodist Church, Wilson, by the Rev. H. Lancel Watson officiating, with the Rev. Linwood Blackburn assisting. The burial will be held in Evergreen Memorial Gardens.

Survivors: one son, Sidney P. Clark Jr. of Greenville; two daughters, Miss Margaret Ann Clark of Wilson and Miss Lisa Blyth Clark of Raleigh; his mother, Mrs. Harry W. Clark of Wilson; one sister, Mrs. Joseph J. Herbert of Grifton.

The family will receive friends at the Thomas Yelverton Funeral Home, Wilson, tonight from 7-9.

Mills

Prince A. Mills, 64, died in Pitt Memorial Hospital Wednesday. Funeral services will be held Friday, 2 p.m., in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by the Rev. Floyd Cherry of Pine Level. Burial will be in Pinewood Memorial Park.

Mr. Mills was a native of Pitt County and spent his life in the Black Jack community. He was a member of the Black Jack Free Will Baptist Church.

Survivors: his wife, Mrs. Estelle Haddock Mills; one son, Jesse Lee Mills (Pig) of the home; three sisters, Mrs. Morris E. Elks and Mrs. J. Lester Dixon, both of Rt. 3, Greenville and Mrs. Ethel Lee Haddock of Rt. 2, Greenville.

The family will receive friends at the funeral home from 7-9 p.m. Thursday.

Sharpe

NEWPORT NEWS, VA. — Mr. Frank Andrew Sharp, formerly of Edgecombe County, died Saturday in Newport News, Va. He was the son of Frank Sharpe of Tarboro. Funeral arrangements are incomplete at the Hemby-Willoughby Mortuary in Tarboro.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON, SEPTEMBER 13, 1978

Only One Undefeated County Team

By JIM KYLE

Reflector Sports Writer

Two weeks into the regular season and guess which of the county's Eastern Carolina Conference teams remains as the lone unbeaten club.

It's not Farmville Central. The pre-season pick as ECC champion lost to 4-A Eastern Wayne 21-6 Friday night.

It's not Ayden-Grifton. The Chargers dropped to 0-2 on the season after a 48-0 rout at the hands of mighty Tarboro.

And it's not D. H. Conley. The Vikings, who have played three games, lost their second last week, a 29-0 defeat at the hands of Washington.

Give up? Why, it's little ol' North Pitt, riding high on the crest of two straight shutouts, the latest a 13-0 victory over Southwest Edgecombe Friday night.

The Panthers play their third game this week when they host Zebulon. Also on Friday night, Farmville Central will try to get back on the winning track at Havelock, while Ayden-Grifton will play at Washington. D. H. Conley will take the week off to regroup after two straight losses.

North Pitt

Pat Smith thought his Panthers looked good in the first quarter against Southwest Edgecombe, but after that the team seemed to give out of steam.

North Pitt scored all 13 of its points, on two William Knight touchdowns, in the opening period, "but our conditioning showed up in the hot and humid weather and our guys looked like they completely gave out," according to Smith.

"I take responsibility for that."

Smith said he was pleased with the overall play of the team's defensive unit. Linebacker Victor Evans tackled hard and tackle Reuben Matthews did a good job with two quarterback sacks.

The offense did a good job in the first quarter, Smith said, but didn't look disciplined after that. "We couldn't get a drive started — nothing seemed to click — and we had poor execution when we got tired."

Still, running back Knight showed up well with his two TD's and 120 yards on the ground. Tight end Tim Corey did a good job of blocking. Smith said.

The Panthers host Zebulon, a team which sports a 1-2 record, this week. Their lone win was a 48-0 victory over Gumberry last week," Smith said.

"Basically, they're the same team that beat us last year 16-12 up there," according to Smith. "They run the I. They're not big, but they're quick. Their quickness will test our defense."

Smith predicts a good football game between two evenly-matched teams. But he said the Panthers need to control the ball and do a better job of execution than they have.

D. H. Conley

Viking coach Chuck Dunn said his team's loss was "by far, the worst effort we've had this year. We didn't play very well at all."

Dunn said he attributes some of that to Washington, but said his team just played poorly.

"Offensively, we just didn't get anything going at all and the defense just stood around too much."

Dunn said two players gave an outstanding effort in the ballgame, cornerback-tailback Anthony Carmon and linebacker Noah Lee Edwards. "From the film, they came up with good plays more often than anybody else, but they were the only ones who stood out."

The Vikes don't play this week, so they have a little time to regroup and try to get some improvement. "The defense has been our weakest point, so we're going to have to reevaluate some of the things we've been doing. The defense is where we're working for our main source of improvement," Dunn said.

Farmville Central

Just after the loss to Eastern Wayne, coach Gene Brewer said the Jaguars had played a pretty fair ballgame, but he changed his mind when he saw the game films.

"We made quite a few mistakes, both offensively and defensively," Brewer said. "I feel like we could have played a lot better."

Brewer said the team had trouble with pursuit on defense, while a single individual caused a breakdown on nearly every offensive play.

The Jaguar coach couldn't single out any member of his team as having an outstanding ballgame. He said running back-linebacker Donald Reid had a good game offensively, but made some mistakes on both offense and defense. "We didn't have anybody that really stood out, we just gave kind of a mediocre effort."

Brewer said the team has been "trying to eliminate some of the little mistakes that we've been making" in preparation for this week's meeting with Havelock.

Havelock has "a lot of tradition, good size and good speed, and they play good, hard-nosed defense," Brewer said.

"I don't really know what to expect. They have had some close ballgames and they have scored a lot of points." He said the Jaguars will have to play good defense and move the ball on offense.

Ayden-Grifton

Charger coach Dixon Sauls actually saw some good in his team's lopsided defeat.

"Despite the score, our play was much-improved over our first game," he said. "Our execution and intensity was much-improved."

Sauls said Tarboro has an excellent team and an outstanding running back in Kelvin Bryant, who gained 223 yards Friday night. "They're going to win their share of games."

The Chargers were handicapped by a rash of injuries in the ballgame. Three players who were knocked out will probably not see action this week. Defensive end Chris Tripp tore ligaments in his knee and is out for the season. Defensive guard Tim Odham hurt his elbow and will miss one to two weeks, while cornerback Donnie Jackson suffered a hip pointer and is doubtful for this week's game.

Two other Charger regulars, linebacker Billy Holland and tackle Jolly Dail, were unable to play last week, but will hopefully be back for this week's contest with Washington.

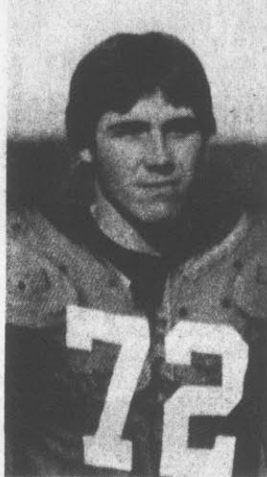

The Pam-Pack runs the power-I offense and has three outstanding linebackers on defense, Sauls said.

Tar Heels Will Field Veteran Squad

"Big, strong, experienced, quick." That's the way East Carolina University assistant coach Wayne Hall describes the Pirates' next foe, the University of North Carolina.

"They are a veteran team that's been ranked in the pre-season Top Twenty," Hall noted. "They have a lot of people back off last year's fine team, and I don't think the change in coaches is going to give them any problems."

Hall said the Tar Heels are very strong in the offensive line. "They have some outstanding people in the line. People like Mike Salzano, who is a true All-America player."

The line is, as Hall said, big. Steve Junkman, 6-3, 252, is the starter at left tackle, with Lowell Eakin, 6-2, 235, next to him at guard. Rick Donnalley, 6-1, 234, is the center, with Salzano, 6-4, 245, at right guard. Bobby Hukill, 6-4, 255, is the right tackle, with Bob Loomis, 6-3, 226, at tight end.

"Junkman is a two-year starter, while Eakin played some last year, and is just a sophomore. Donnalley is supposed to be a great center prospect (sophomore). Loomis, the tight end, was moved from fullback. He has good speed and quickness, and (Dick) Crum liked to throw to his tight end when he was at Miami."

Wayne Tucker, a sophomore, is at split end, backed up by former quarterback P.J. Gay. Jim Rouse is the split end. "Tucker may be the best athlete on the team," Hall said.

"They're not saying who's going to start at quarterback. They've got two listed as possibles, Matt Kupec and Clyde Christensen. Kupec is probably the better passer, while Christensen is a better runner. Kupec also is more experienced, and I really think that he'll end up starting, but both of them will play a lot."

The two backs in the new offense will be "Famous" Amos Lawrence, one of the top runners in the nation, and former Rose High School back Doug Paschal.

"Lawrence has got to be the best runner in the state," Hall said. "(Ted) Brown is bigger and stronger, but Lawrence has more agility and moves."

Hall said he looks for Carolina to run it straight at the Pirates early in the game. "Crum has always liked to establish the game up the middle to start with. But then, he's never had a runner like Amos before, so he might go earlier to the outside than normal. This will make it tougher for us to set the defense," he added.

The defense, which led the nation in scoring last year, returns seven starters from last year. Dave Simmons returns at the nose guard slot, with Bunn Rhames and John Bruges on either side of him. Rhames saw a lot of action in reserve last year, while Bruges beat out Donnell Thompson for a starting job.

the outside linebacking slots, with T.K. McDaniels back at the other. Buddy Curry is back at one inside slot, with Rick Downs and Lawrence Taylor, both sophomores, expected to see action at the other.

The secondary has a lot of experience returning with Bobby Cale and Ricky Barden at the corners, and Francis Winters and Bernie Menapace at the safeties.

If there is any question in the Carolina game, it is the kicking game, where an untested, but highly touted freshman, Jeff Hayes will perform. He is slated to handle all the kicking chores.

"I don't think there is a team we play this season with the talent North Carolina has," Hall said.

The two teams meet at 1:30 p.m. Saturday in Kenan Stadium in Chapel Hill. A sellout crowd of 48,000 is expected.

Buc Injured Still Uncertain

By The Associated Press — East Carolina coaches say that preparation for Saturday's game against North Carolina has been reduced to a "day-today thing," due to the possibility that the Pirates will not have the services of quarterback Leander Green and offensive backs Eddie Hicks and Anthony Collins.

Green, a 5-8, 175-pound junior from Jacksonville, suffered a severely bruised kidney in last week's 29-13 loss to N.C. State. His status for the game Saturday afternoon against the Tar Heels at Chapel Hill is uncertain.

Hicks and Collins are also on the doubtful list.

Valkyries Picked As Favorites In ECC

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

D. H. Conley is the pre-season pick of most of the area volleyball coaches to take the Eastern Carolina Conference championship this season.

The Valkyries are strong and experienced this season after finishing second in last year's tournament to Greene Central.

"Conley is the team to beat," according to North Pitt coach Gail Stanfield. "They have a lot of experience." The other coaches echoed that opinion of Norma Respass's team.

Respass, herself, said she wasn't sure what to expect going into the first match. "We should be strong at the net, we've got good size. And, defensively, we should be a lot better. They're aggressive."

Five players return for the Valkyries from last year's squad, including junior Pam Manning, an all-conference performer last year. Juniors Lexanne Keeler, Annie Hardy and Glenda Green are also back, along with senior Cassandra Tyson. Respass said all of these players are improved.

The other starting spot is not yet decided, but fighting for it are juniors Miriam Paramore and Tilda Garis and sophomore Tammy Streeter.

"All of my players are veterans. I expect a lot from them," Respass said.

In the conference, Greene Central will be tough, since the Ewes won the championship last year, Respass said, and Ayden-Grifton and North Pitt should be pretty strong.

"I don't like to make predictions, but my girls have played together for three years now. I feel very confident; they do, too. We hope to be on the top."

Greene Central

The Ewes won the conference championship with a tournament victory a year ago, but coach Tim Corbett is predicting no better than a 500 season for his team this year.

"Hopefully, we'll have a 500 year. We only had two returners, so this is a rebuilding year for us," he said.

Despite the inexperience, Corbett said he has a stronger front line than ever before, although the back line will be weaker.

The team's starting lineup includes three seniors, Iris Pridgen, a good spiker, Brenda Carraway, a good front line player, and Cindy Creech, a good all-around performer.

Three juniors round out the starting six: Melody Ham, a good all-around performer, Sharon Bright and Geraldine Hooks, two first-year players. In addition, freshmen Amy Kearney and Annette Bright are both expected to see a lot of action.

Corbett predicts D. H. Conley winning the conference championship, followed by Ayden-Grifton. "We'll just take one game at a time and shoot for 500," he said.

Farmville Central

First-year coach Kay White said her Lady Jaguars have good potential, but "it's just a matter of getting it all together."

The team has seven returning players, but since the volleyball program at Farmville Central is only in its third year, it is still a young squad, White said.

There are only two seniors in the starting lineup, Lisa Satterthwaite and Lynette Harris. Four juniors will start for Farmville, Gail Harris, Ellen Albritton, Peggy Dwyer and Beth Massey. Also expected to see some action is sophomore Lynn Webb.

White said her team has the potential to take the league crown this season, "but I don't know what they'll do. They lack a lot of composure."

"I guess Conley will be strong. But I'm not predicting a winner until I play everybody."

Ayden-Grifton

The Chargerettes also have a first-year coach, Kathy Purvis.

She said her team looked good in pre-season practice and scrimmages "and I feel like we're going to have a successful year."

The team has strengths and weaknesses in all areas, according to Purvis. "We have a few things we need to work on, but we're getting those under control now," she said.

The Chargerettes will start three seniors and three juniors. The seniors are Shonda Brock, Mary Rowe and Pam Fulford, while the juniors are Sandy Fulford, Irene and Marie Lewis. Purvis said Brock should be the team's most outstanding player.

A number of other players will see action for the team this season, according to Purvis. Sophomores Joan Albritton and Sarah Cannon are the two most likely candidates. Juniors Evelyn Artis and Edna Braxton, sophomores Delisa Black, Debra Ellis and Patsy Potter, and freshmen Lisa Ward and Sheila Rountree will all play this year.

Purvis said D. H. Conley will be the Chargerettes' toughest competition in the battle for the top spot in the conference. "We've got the material, if we can just get out there and put it to use," she added.

North Pitt

The Pant-HERS will be a small team, but they have looked pretty good in pre-season practice, coach Gail Stanfield said.

Only three of the team's members are returnees from last season, however, senior Cynthia Barnes and juniors Renaye Vernelson and Tammy Purvis.

Joining those experienced players in the starting lineup will be senior Cathy Harris, junior Starla Singleton and sophomore Connie Dupree. Sophomore Della Jenkins is also expected to be a regular.

The team's strong point is its serving, Stanfield said. "That's our most consistent area. We're also weak in some areas."

Stanfield said the Pant-HERS have a lot of potential. "The girls work together and have a lot of skill and they think," according to the coach. "I think they will have a good year."

NP Boosters

North Pitt will hold its first Booster Club meeting on Thursday at 8 p.m. in the school auditorium.

The Panther football team and coaches will be introduced and highlights of the team's two 1978 football games will be shown.

Three Leaders In East Race Lose Tuesday

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

The three leaders in the American League East have found yet another way to keep things interesting. But none of them could be satisfied with the new method.

All three of the top contenders lost Tuesday night. The Milwaukee Brewers, who were beaten 6-5 in the bottom of the ninth by Seattle, had to be the most disheartened. The Brewers knew first-place Boston had lost to Baltimore 3-2 and New York, now trailing the Red Sox by one-half game, was beaten 7-4 by Detroit. By winning, Milwaukee would move within 3½ games of first place.

The Brewers carried a 5-4 lead into the ninth, mainly on the strength of Larry Hise's three-run homer. But Tom Paciorek's two-run single with the bases loaded and one out gave Seattle the triumph.

"We had it all wrapped up," said Milwaukee Manager George Bamberger. "We're letting so many get away. We've had lots of chances to pick up ground. We've got to start winning games with leads in the ninth inning."

"Some of these last-place teams like Seattle get tough against you. They play hard."

Orioles 3, Red Sox 2

Dennis Martinez threw a three-hitter and the Red Sox made three errors in one inning to help Baltimore to victory. Martinez, 13-11, struck out seven in besting Mike Torrez, 15-10, who pitched a five-hitter.

Royals 8, A's 1

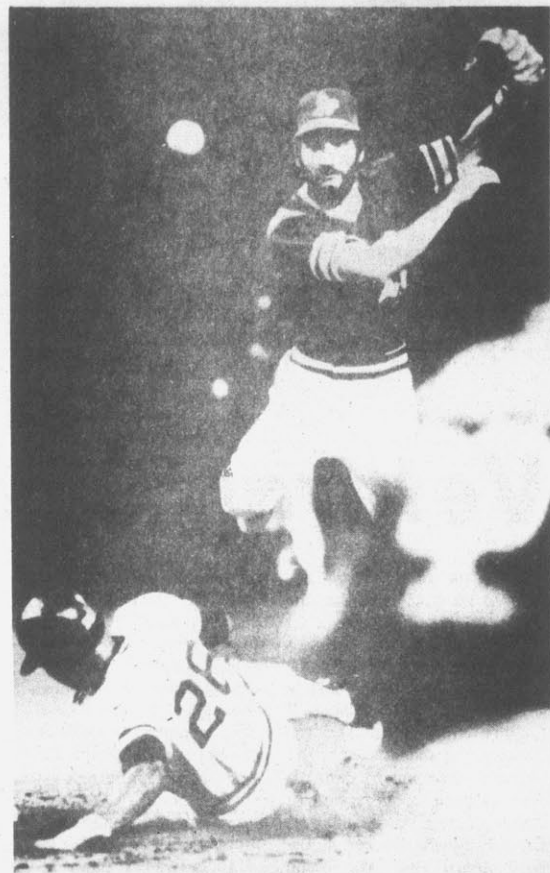

Larry Gura, having his greatest season, upped his record to 14-4 with a five-hitter. Pete LaCock supported the left-hander with three RBI.

Tigers 7, Yankees 4

Detroit, which still has two games to play with New York and seven with Boston, pummeled Yankees starter Dick Tidrow. Steve Kemp's three-run homer in the first inning set the tempo, with Ron LeFlore and Rusty Staub later adding solo homers.

Rangers 7, Angels 5

Juan Beniquez's two-run homer and Jim Sundberg's bases-

White Sox 6, Twins 1

Lamar Johnson drove in four runs with a pair of two-run singles and Rich Hinton posted a seven-hitter for the White Sox.

Name New Coach

Barbara Olschner, head tennis professional at Bogue Banks Country Club in Morehead City, has been named as women's tennis coach at East Carolina University.

Olschner, 27, replaces Cynthia Averett who resigned to assume a similar post at Rice University.

"Barbara will be a great addition to our staff," Laurie Arrants, coordinator of women's athletics, said. "This is the first time that we will have a teaching professional to coach tennis at East Carolina."

A 1974 graduate of UNC-Charlotte, Olschner has been a professional for four years. She has played in Florida during the winters and on the Southern Circuit in summers. She served at Bogue Banks three years.

Dodgers Drop Giants In NL 'Gunfight'

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Bill Madlock calls the National League West race a "gunfight" — and right now, it would seem the Los Angeles Dodgers have the drop on the San Francisco Giants.

The Dodgers further buried the Giants in second place by beating their top rivals 8-0 Tuesday night behind Burt Hooton's five-hitter and a four-RBI night by Dave Lopes.

"It's like finishing second in a gunfight — you lose," Madlock concluded after the fading Giants dropped six games behind the Dodgers.

The victory left the Dodgers extravagantly optimistic.

"We have the killer instinct — I can't see us losing if we keep doing what we're doing," said Hooton, who upped his record to 18-8.

"It's the first time I've done anything against them all year," added Lopes. "Hooton's the man — he just wrapped up the Cy Young Award with a shutout in a big game."

Hooton joined three other National Leaguers — Ross Grimsley, Gaylord Perry and Phil Niekro — as 18-game winners.

Elsewhere in the NL, the Cincinnati Reds edged the Houston Astros 4-3; the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the Philadelphia Phillies 5-1; the San Diego Padres trimmed the Atlanta Braves 3-1 and the Montreal Expos whipped the St. Louis Cardinals 5-1. The Chicago-New York game was postponed by rain.

The Dodgers only managed three hits off loser John Montefusco, 11-7, in 72-3 innings and held a 3-0 lead before scoring five times in the ninth inning off reliever Gary Lavelle.

Hooton improved his 1978 record to 4-0 against the Giants and registered his seventh straight victory while equaling his major league career high for victories in a season.

The Dodgers took a 1-0 lead in the fourth inning on Steve Garvey's RBI single, then wrapped up the game up with two runs in the eighth on Lopes' double and five more in the ninth in a rally capped by Lopes' two-run homer. Bill Russell doubled home three runs for the Dodgers in the ninth-inning rally.

Reds 4, Astros 3
Champ Summers slammed a home run in the sixth inning and a freak play in the ninth led Cincinnati over Houston.

Pirates 5, Phillies 1
A pair of two-run homers by Dave Parker and a solo shot by John Milner powered Pittsburgh over Philadelphia, snapping a five-game losing streak and reducing the Phillies' lead in the NL East to four games over the second-place Pirates.

Parker, who started the game leading the league in hitting, third in RBI and fifth in home runs, struck the game winning

Padres 3, Braves 1
Perry, aided by Dave Winfield's 22nd homer of the season, collected his 18th victory with a five-hitter as San Diego beat Atlanta.

Perry, 18-6, the major league's winningest active pitcher with 264 lifetime victories, pitched his first complete game since June 23. The victory gave the Padres their 74th victory of the season, the best showing in the club's 10-year history.

Expos 5, Cardinals 1
Rudy May fired a three-hitter for his first victory since June 5 as Montreal defeated St. Louis.

Conley Wins Match

FARMVILLE — D.H. Conley opened the volleyball season yesterday with a 2-0 victory over Farmville Central.

Conley won the opening game by a 15-12 score, then came back to take the second of the best of three match, 15-4.

In the second game, Tammy Streeter served up seven straight points as the highlight on the contest.

The game was the season opener for both teams. Farmville plays host to Greene Central and Conley entertains Southern Nash on Thursday.

Spinks Grew Up To Be 'Somebody'

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — "I knew I was gonna be somebody," said Leon Spinks. "If it was a drunk, I was gonna be the best drunk that ever was."

Well the kid that grew up in a St. Louis ghetto was somebody. He isn't the best drunk that ever was ... he isn't even a drunk. He isn't the best fighter that ever was, either ... but he is the heavyweight champion of the world, the conqueror of Muhammad Ali.

Leon Spinks knows where he came from, what he is and is learning what he can be.

"I'd like to be a world figure but I'd like to be a world figure my way," said Spinks, who, in a way, presently is mainly a figure of curiosity, a kind of fate-made freak who beat a living legend but in the minds of many people can't do it again Friday night in the Superdome.

Spinks is a man under pressure, and his reaction to the pressure is a fatalistic one. "I don't do any predicting," he said of his rematch with Ali. "The best man wins. The Man upstairs says you ain't gonna win, you ain't gonna win."

But while the spectre of defeat doesn't seem to frighten him, he is spurred by the knowledge that a victory takes him farther up the road from poverty, a station in life that shaped him but one he never wants to visit again.

"I think about the ghetto," Spinks said before a training session. "I think why do I want to go back and play my life as a repeat. You don't want to go back where you came from. If you do, you're a fool."

The 25-year-old Spinks doesn't fit the mold of a fool. But his public image since he won the title has been one of carelessness, possibly recklessness. His attitude is one of "I don't give a damn."

Spinks, painfully aware of the endless comparisons with Ali — "Ali is one hell of a promoter. He's a hell of a man" — said his

Since winning the title last Feb. 5, Spinks has had several run-ins with the police about driving violations and one concerning drugs. The drug charge was dismissed but the incident, like the others, was widely played in the news media.

"A lot of people in the press turn things around and manipulate things against me," he said. Then, as if to emphasize that he is his own man, he added: "They ain't puttin' no food on my table. They ain't putting no clothes on my back."

"I'm learning to deal with the world the way I want to," Spinks said, noting that he is not, and does not want to be a world figure like Ali.

"I want to make enough money to sit on my can," he said of his fighting future. As for his non-fight future, "The only thing I'm interested in is helpin' the kids."

Then the informal news conference ended and 25-year-old Leon Spinks, whose name is in the limelight but his future still in the shadows, went back to work.

The music he trains to blared through the New Orleans Municipal Auditorium and Spinks was back in a fighter's private world.

"Music keeps my mind off the pain I've got to go through," said Spinks.

Site Chosen

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Southern Hills Country Club was chosen Tuesday as the site of the 1982 PGA golf tournament.

Sister Ruth Tells More Of Jimmy

By MALCOLM N. CARTER
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Ad- mission to the U.S. Naval Academy was so important to Jimmy Carter that he would tread on soft drink bottles to cure his flat feet.

The future president once walloped a schoolyard bully much bigger than him in defense of his sister.

On the night of his nomination, he thanked brother Billy Carter as the person who made it all possible.

These are some of the details about President Carter that emerge in a new book to be published Oct. 4 by Ruth Carter Stapleton, his sister.

Although the $8.95 book titled "Brother Billy" does not focus on the president, it does reveal a bit about his development. To wit:

—Called "Hot" as a boy, the president-to-be kept inventing projects for the children in the clan. Among them were a treehouse and a ferris wheel that demanded "more engineering know-how and building material than we had."

—It was to defend his sister, Gloria, that Carter struck the bully. But when Gloria clobbered him with a wrench, he "plinked" her seat with a shot from a BB gun.

—Fearful that he could not gain entry to Annapolis, he sought to bolster the 128 pounds he weighed in high school by stuffing himself at the table and working out with weights.

—His future wife, Rosalynn, was the best friend of his sister Ruth, who brought them together on a movie double date. The couple dated the next two nights alone, and Jimmy proposed within days.

The picture Mrs. Stapleton paints is one of distance between the future president and three younger brothers and sisters, especially Billy, who was born 13 years after him.

But by the time he was nominated as the presidential candidate at the Democratic National Convention, they had grown closer.

"You know how much I love all of you," Carter was quoted in the book as saying afterward. "You know how much I appreciate all you have done for me. But the one person I feel most grateful to, the one I feel did the most to make it possible for me to wage this campaign and to make this night of victory possible is my brother, Billy."

"Billy, I want to thank you. Without you, it couldn't have happened. You stayed home and kept everything going."

According to Mrs. Stapleton, this exchange came in the wake of strains that Billy displayed as his brother's star rose.

One Saturday afternoon when he had a can of beer in one hand and a book in the other, phone call after phone call involving his elder brother's political business kept interrupting him.

"Billy walked to the phone, reached down and took the cord in his hand and gave it one powerful jerk," his sister recounts. "The wires separated from the wall. He then picked up the phone, carried it to the front door, walked out on the porch, and threw it as far as the monster would go."

Homemade Candy Needs Doctoring

ENGLEWOOD CLIFFS, N.J. (UPI) — Homemade candy needs doctoring to make sure it has the correct texture: creamy, chewy or crystalline.

Doctors can be common household acids such as vinegar, lemon juice or cream of tartar or something quite the opposite in flavor: corn syrup.

Acids interact with the sugar to reform crystals as in fudges or fondants or to prevent reformation of crystals as in taffies, caramels and brittle.

The same effect is achieved in some recipes by corn syrup. Used in the correct ratio to sugar, it holds part of the sugar in solution or permits the right amount to crystallize out.

Don't try to substitute an acid or other syrups or syrup blends for pure corn syrup or change the ratio of corn syrup to sugar, says the consumer service department of the Best Foods division of CPC International Inc. This could change the texture entirely.

Surprising Resistance To 2nd Term For Carter

NEW YORK (AP) — Associated Press-NBC News poll shows. Only 34 percent of the Democratic voters interviewed Tuesday following primaries in New York and Connecticut said they wanted Carter to try for a second term. Forty percent said they don't want him to run and 26 percent are not sure. This finding based on interviews with 4,900 voters as they left the polling places contrasted with a national AP-NBC News telephone poll in August. Half of the Democrats questioned nationally in that survey favored a Carter re-election bid with 39 percent opposing it. Eleven percent were not sure.

For all respondents nationally regardless of party affiliation, 50 percent did not want Carter to run, with only 38 percent favoring a bid for another term. Twelve percent of the 1,600 adults questioned Aug. 7 and 8 were undecided. The sentiment against a Carter re-election bid was stronger in New York than in Connecticut.

In the Empire State, Democratic voters split 42 percent to 32 percent against a try for a second term for Carter. In Connecticut, the party faithful were more evenly split, dividing against Carter by a slim 38-36 margin.

The poll findings reflect the sentiments of those who voted in the Democratic primaries in the two states, but they do not reflect the opinions of all Democrats in either state.

Despite those who say Carter has weak support from the party political pros, the poll found that those who most strongly identify themselves as Democrats favor a Carter re-election try.

Forty-four percent of those who said they were strong Democrats favored a bid for a second term, versus 33 percent who oppose it. This contrasts with those who identify themselves as only "weak Democrats," who break 31-38 against a re-election try.

This finding also held for those who said they attended political rallies and meetings or who belong to neighborhood political clubs.

while those who voted for Lt. Gov. Robert Killian were opposed to a re-election bid for the president by a narrow 41-38.

As with any sample survey, the results of the AP-NBC News poll could differ from the results of interviews with all Democratic voters in the two states because of chance variations in the sample. The size of the possible variation depends on the number of interviews.

For a poll of about 4,900 interviews, the results should vary no more than 2 percentage points either way simply because of sample errors. That is, if one could talk to all those who voted in the Democratic primaries in New York and Connecticut, there is only one chance out of 20 that the results would vary from the finding of this poll by more than 2 points.

A similar margin of error holds for the individual state surveys.

Ingram Plans Miss 2 Public Hearings

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — State Insurance Commissioner John Ingram says his campaign for the U.S. Senate is not cutting into the time he devotes to his state job.

A consumer activist group disagrees, but only mildly. The Charlotte office of Carolina Action asked Ingram to meet with group members and newsmen on Tuesday. The group wanted to air its opposition to a proposed 5.6 percent increase in auto insurance rates and its opinion on other insurance matters.

At the request of Carolina Action, Ingram's office has scheduled four public hearings on the proposed increase. But Ingram, who will rule on the increase, says he will only attend one of the four meetings.

When Ingram and Bob Morgan, a Carolina Action spokesman, talked about opposing insurance rate hikes Tuesday, there was much agreement. But the two differed on whether Ingram's presence was needed at the public hearings.

Morgan said the group asked Ingram to meet with members personally after he announced he would not attend all the hearings.

"I think the impact we could make on Mr. Ingram would be stronger if we could tell him face-to-face," Morgan said.

Ingram, the Democratic nominee against Republican Sen. Jesse Helms, said he would attend a hearing in Greensboro on Thursday but would miss the first hearing Tuesday night because of a campaign appearance in Gastonia. Other commitments would keep him from hearings in Raleigh and Durham next week, he said.

But the commissioner contended his attendance was not vital because an assistant would record testimony of citizens at those hearings and a court reporter would produce transcripts.

"It's not necessary because I'll be hearing the testimony and considering testimony taken at those hearings," Ingram said, adding that he would be the one to eventually pass judgement on the proposal.

Morgan, who said Carolina Action's involvement with Ingram was non-partisan,

Hold Man In Girl's Death

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — The body of a former high school homecoming queen who disappeared Monday afternoon was found near here Tuesday, and Cabarrus County Sheriff B. Roberts said a Concord man was charged today with murder in her death.

Roger Warren Clark, 21, of Concord was being held in the Cabarrus County Jail today without bond in the death of Phoebe Barbee, 19.

Roberts said no motive for the slaying had been established. It did not appear that Miss Barbee had been robbed, he said. Authorities were awaiting a medical examiner's report to determine the cause of death and whether Miss Barbee had been sexually molested.

"She apparently was killed with some sort of an instrument," the sheriff said. "I'd say she was probably hit on the head."

Roberts said he didn't think that Clark and Miss Barbee knew each other.

The young woman was last seen Monday afternoon, driving home from her job at a local hamburger shop. Witnesses reported seeing her being tailgated by an old blue pickup truck just inside the Mecklenburg County line.

Both vehicles reportedly stopped and Miss Barbee was seen getting into the truck. Roberts said Clark did not own such a truck but "had access to it."

Miss Barbee's car, a new gray Toyota, was found in Mecklenburg County. Her body was discovered Tuesday afternoon in Cabarrus County by a man and his wife who were squirrel hunting on an abandoned farm.

Woodcarver Preserving A Heritage

SILVER DOLLAR CITY, Mo. (AP) — For the first time, a group of woodcarvers living in the Ozark Mountains around here are earning a good living, working at their craft.

And the man responsible for their new-found prosperity is Peter Engler, a master wood-carver himself.

Engler, 45, began carving when he was a small boy, working in his parents' store. His work was always popular but he soon became involved in a typical predicament. Namely, it's hard to be both a master craftsman and a good business-man at the same time.

"A craftsman who opens up a shop soon spends most of his time selling his work, book-keeping and managing his business. Pretty soon, he has no time to carve," Engler explained.

There was another problem with woodcarving in this beautiful, yet sparsely populated, area. Since few people came here, no true market existed for the carvings.

That situation began to change 18 years ago with the opening of Silver Dollar City, a popular crafts village that preserves over 30 Ozark crafts. Engler was the first craftsman to open a shop at the village and his woodcarvings were selling well. To keep up with the demand, he began asking other woodcarvers, many living in the nearby hills, to produce carvings for his shop.

From modest beginnings, Engler now has about 50 carvers, many part-time, who produce carvings for him. They study together and teach young people their craft.

"The really good wood-carvers are people with simple wants and simple needs," he said. "They live close to the land, and they seem to be at home with nature and themselves."

Bob Robertson is one of Engler's favorite craftsmen. He specializes in large Indians that look both noble and serene, dressed in buckskin and wearing beads.

Though his Indians sell for several thousand dollars each, Robertson works in his modest home in Reeds Spring, Mo. A .45 caliber automatic pistol rests on the windowsill, and the rabbit and squirrel skins he uses to make trout flies hang from the rafters outside. An 8-pound rainbow trout, caught in a nearby lake, hangs on the wall.

Robertson studies his craft continuously, thumbing through a dogeared anatomy book. "Most men are 7½ heads tall so I use the head to keep my figures in proportion. I usually make the shoulders of my Indians three heads wide, and slope them slightly downward to give the feeling of power."

Woodcarving takes more work than innate talent, Engler believes.

Motor City's Air Not So Bad

DETROIT (UPI) — This Midwestern metropolis can put on airs over its air, according to a National Wildlife Federation study.

The federation's list of the nation's 20 most polluted cities — those with more than 25 days of bad air — didn't include Detroit, the nation's fifth largest city, points out its Chamber of Commerce.

Los Angeles led the list with 318 days of "unhealthy, very unhealthy or hazardous" air. Also included was Denver with 177 bad air days; Albuquerque, N.M., and Philadelphia, both 150; New York-New Jersey metropolitan area, 149; Boston, 147; Houston, 141; St. Louis, 140; San Francisco, 127; Spokane, Wash., 126; Phoenix, 118; Fairbanks, Alaska, and Washington, D.C., 90; Sacramento, Calif., 88; Louisville, Ky., 72; Steubenville, Ohio, 60; Cincinnati, 51; Omaha, 40; Memphis, 38; and Wichita, Kan., 25.

Arts Cool A Summer For Boston

By DAVID KAYE
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — When summer comes to Boston, the city's more mobile and affluent residents rush off to Cape Cod or the beaches north and south of the sweltering city. But the inhabitants of Roxbury and Dorchester are trapped on the sizzling streets, left to seek their own entertainment.

During the late '60s, that often meant trouble — burning, looting.

Katherine Kane, a former state representative and now a deputy mayor to Kevin H. White, responded to the problem 11 years ago by establishing Summerthing, a program consisting of 1,500 events including art classes, theater, music and dance — all performed free of charge in the neighborhoods of Boston.

Sherry Jellison, director of publicity for the Mayor's Office of Cultural Affairs, says Boston is the only city in the United States that "makes this sort of commitment to the arts in the neighborhoods."

The program is partially funded by the city and the remaining financial support comes from private sponsors.

Summerthing's concert series — the only program in which there is an admission charge — is sponsored by a brewery. This summer's program included performances by people like Andy Gibb, Leo Sayer, Pete Seeger, Arlo Guthrie, Al Jarreau and Grover Washington.

Summerthing runs for eight weeks, six days a week, and includes at least seven programs a day.

Miss Jellison says acts and programs are selected by coordinators in each of the city's 20 "neighborhoods."

"We are neighborhood-oriented," she says. "We don't want to send in an act that isn't going to be well-received in any neighborhood."

Jamboree is one of the main components of Summerthing's program. It includes workshops in theater and environmental arts.

Some of the free neighborhood concerts include Taj Mahal, Jonathan Edwards, the Dirt Band, New Riders of the Purple Sage, David Bromberg, Commander Cody and Patti Labelle.

Summerthing also sends three multimedia vans to alternating neighborhoods. Soul Train creates block parties complete with music and dancing and Disco Tech turns neighborhood streets into instant discotheques. The Moviebus shows free films.

Senior Summerthing includes museum trips, arts and crafts workshops, theatrical performances, Big Band dances and sing-alongs for Boston's elderly.

The Plaza Series consists of noontime concerts and poetry readings in City Hall Plaza.

"There's always been a desire among people in Boston to participate in the arts," Miss Jellison said, "but people have really had to seek out the arts. We hope that will change where the programs match the audience."

School Supplies Are Plentiful

NEW YORK (UPI) — When the hordes of American children come home from their first day of school this fall, the country's largest seller of school supplies will be ready and waiting for the deluge.

In anticipation of the usual demand for the most-needed items, Woolworth stationery buyer Frank Selfried has ordered two million standard No. 2 yellow pencils and one and half million pounds (two hundred million sheets) of looseleaf paper.

Paint Scraper Was Expensive

HONOLULU (AP) — A $5cent paint scraper lodged between the piston wall and cylinder of a torpedo launcher aboard the nuclear submarine Swordfish forced the ship into drydock for $171,000 in repairs, a newspaper says.

Repair crews at Pearl Harbor found the scraper after Navy divers had inspected the sub at sea but could not determine why the ship's torpedo system did not work, the Pearl Harbor Shipyard Log said. The Navy says it did not know how the scraper got stuck in the launcher.

Try Magic To Lighten Conferences

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Business leaders who trooped sleepily into the early morning Northwestern Bell Telephone Co.'s breakfast meeting were fully prepared to be lulled back to dreamland by a traditional sales pitch.

Instead, a young man, wearing a denim tuxedo and armed with a silk top hat, proceeded to make phone equipment appear and vanish at the snap of a finger as he built a professional magic act around the company's marketing message.

When he was through about 12 minutes later, the group was wide awake.

They had actually seen a telephone and a phone directory plucked from a two-dimensional movie screen into a three-dimensional reality in the hands of the young magician.

And a football he had been tossing about in his hand suddenly apparently wound up as part of the picture projected on the screen.

"Very well," Witkowski replied with a secretive smile.

He does it well enough, in fact, to expect to produce gross revenues of at least $500,000 this year, up from $200,000 in 1977.

"Which is a long way from pulling a rabbit out of a hat," he observed.

Witkowski, who has been doing magic tricks since he was 5, and earning money at it since the fifth grade, realized years ago that it was impractical to hope to make a living in show business with yet another magic act.

But then a large Minnesota tractor dealer paid him several hundred dollars as a high school student to make a new product appear in a puff of smoke as a means of introducing it to several groups of major customers.

It didn't take a flash of lightning to tell him that there might be other companies around willing to pay well for someone who could keep everyone awake at a sales meeting or perk up a trade-show demonstration.

"All of business is faced with communications problems," Witkowski said — how to motivate sales personnel, how to explain a complex new product to dealers, how to keep the attention of prospective customers at a trade show.

"If people are bored by traditional communications techniques, their response will be nil. But if I can inject a spark of interest into a relatively static business meeting, then the message will get through and they'll remember," Witkowski said.

To span the communications gap, some major companies have been willing to pay Witkowski anywhere from $4,000 to more than $20,000 to have him work their corporate message into his act.

Life isn't all rosy in the industrial magic game, however.

Witkowski recalled the embarrassment he felt one day as a 14-year-old performing before a group of local magicians.

"I had the old pull-a-rabbit-out-of-the-hat trick planned for later in the show," he recalled, "but every time my back was turned he'd poke his head up out of the hat, which I'd set down on a table. And every time I turned around to see what the audience was laughing about, he'd duck back in. Finally he just jumped out altogether, and the audience went to pieces."

That traditional magician's trick has not been a part of his repertoire since.

Restriction On 'Talwin' Use

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tighter restrictions are about to be put on the pain-killing drug Talwin, which has sometimes been overused by heroin addicts, the Drug Enforcement Administration says.

The prescription drug is to be controlled through strict accounting and record-keeping by manufacturers, drug wholesalers and pharmacies. Prescriptions are to be limited to five refills in six months.

In overdoses, the drug — also known as pentazocine — can cause psychotic effects, convulsions, coma and possibly death, the DEA said.

Twice-Paroled Rapist Finally Gets Sentence

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP)—A twice-paroled sex offender, who raped and bludgeoned a 13-year old schoolgirl just 10 weeks after his second release, was sentenced to 20 years in prison by a judge who lashed out at lawmakers for not permitting an even harsher sentence.

"Were it within my power, I would sentence you to spend the rest of your life in prison," Orange County Superior Court Judge H. Warren Knight angrily told Warren Dale Clewell, 30, of Mission Viejo at his sentencing Tuesday.

"You violated her, you raped her and you beat her with rocks and a wrench... and I can send you away for only 20 years and four months. ... A society that adopts a law such as that is as sick as you are."

He also said he could not understand a system that allowed life sentences for kidnap and robbery, but not for kidnap and rape.

Noting Clewell would be eligible for parole in 13 years, Knight said: "Judges are frequently criticized for not imposing more stringent sentences. This case demonstrates that the Legislature does not give us the tools we need to deal with the problem."

Clewell pleaded guilty to charges of attempted murder, rape, kidnapping, sex perversion and child molestation in the May 18 assault.

The girl whom he raped and pummeled with a monkey wrench was grabbed in front of her school and left for dead along a rural dirt road in Irvine. The junior high school honor student and gymnast, whose identity has never been released by authorities, underwent more than 10 hours of surgery and temporarily lost the use of her right hand. She is almost fully recovered now, authorities say.

Ten weeks before the attack, Clewell was paroled from Atascadero where he had been committed in March 1973 as a mentally disordered sex offender after pleading guilty to similar charges in an attack on a 14-year-old girl. That was his second commitment for such crimes.

Clewell was released after the Los Angeles County district attorney's office missed a deadline for filing a petition to keep him at Atascadero, where doctors had tried to extend his commitment.

Press Rally Raps Ruling

WASHINGTON (AP)—A recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling sanctioning searches of newsrooms is a "Nazi-like" invasion of freedom, says ABC-TV commentator Howard K. Smith.

Smith was one of several news media leaders to speak to a "First Amendment" rally of 400 reporters Tuesday night at the National Press Club.

The Supreme Court two months ago ruled 5-4 that the police could obtain warrants to search newsrooms for evidence even when the newspaper was not suspected of wrongdoing.

Smith derided that decision, saying it reminded him of Berlin in 1940, when he was a United Press reporter and the Nazis ransacked the office one night because one reporter allegedly "misreported bombing damage by the British."

sources we had," Smith recounted. "We became simply a relay station for official German communiques."

Other journalists warned that all Americans will lose a part of their freedom if reporters are forced to divulge sources.

"Freedom of the press 'serves a very important societal interest,'" said Myron Farber, a New York Times reporter who spent 26 days in a New Jersey jail last month for refusing to turn over his notes in a murder trial.

New York Times executive editor A.M. Rosenthal said if the sky wasn't falling on the First Amendment guarantees of a free press then "there's a lot of plaster falling from the ceiling."

Washington Post publisher Katharine Graham said the press needed to do a better job of explaining to "our readers how they lose when our newsgathering ability is undermined."

The rally raised an estimated $4,000 for the Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press.

Crackdown On Fence-Busters

AUBURN, Wash. (AP)—Police are cracking down on people who are fanning out through the Kent Valley, breaking down fences and setting cattle loose in their quest for psychedelic mushrooms.

The object of what has become an annual hunt is the psilocybe variety of mushroom, which produces a psychedelic sensation when eaten. Possession of the mushroom is not illegal.

Police have begun citing the hunters for trespassing and causing property damage. "We used to issue warnings, but we found we were warning the same people two or three times," Police Chief Jay B. Skewes said Tuesday.

SIDELINED

Night For Bad-Dialogue Buffs

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP)—Bad dialogue buffs will have a grand time tonight and Thursday with NBC's two-part debut of "W.E.B.," a searing series of raw emotion and stuff at a fourth-rated network.

The best oratory is from a ruthless young producer whose $30 million, 30-hour documentary may cost the network guy his job. If that happens, the mogul warns:

"...I will put in a call to Vegas to some childhood friends of mine who will get your legs busted in eight places and your ears cut off. Do you hear me, Mr. Producer?"

"W.E.B." is made by Lin Bolen, the young former NBC daytime programs boss. Her epic stars Pamela Bellwood, a good actress cast as the young head of daytime shows at the TAB Television network.

(TAB stands for Trans-America Broadcasting, but NBC says in future shows it'll mean Trans-Atlantic Broadcasting. A big change, but there's another: TAB's current president only survives two nights.

(NBC says John Colicos, now playing him, will be succeeded in future shows by Steve McNally. The series' regular Thursday run starts Sept. 21, unless NBC changes it to Sept. 43, or something.)

The regulars: Alex Cord as the wicked programs boss; Andrew Prine as the glib, cynical, boozing sales chief; Howard Witt as the kindly operations boss; Lee Wilkoff as a chief research nebbish, and Richard Basehart as a veteran, over-the-hill news chief.

Zalman King guests as David Howell, the young documentary-maker. He and daytime programs chief Ellen Cunningham (Bellwood) spend their nights together. They seem to be lovers, too.

She, a successful but not ruthless executive, really likes him. She notes they've been together a year now. Six months, he says.

"I'm a television freak," she wryly sighs. "I'm always a six-month season ahead of myself."

This exchange occurs late at night at her apartment during some soft gasps and warmup woo that is abruptly interrupted by Cord when he arrives to berate her beau and threaten his legs and ears.

Just before this, Cord and the rest of TAB brass have been berated by TAB's president at an emergency program meeting.

Seems the boss thinks

Howell's $30 million documentary, "Our America," is a "distorted, sick, vicious attack on everything I have ever thought our country to be."

He won't air it. He gives his troops 24 hours to find a substitute. Our heroine tries to salvage the documentary amid rampant sneers by Cord and anger from her lover.

At one point, the shocked producer says of his opus to Cord: "I was told you loved it." And hears this from the programs chief: "I didn't look at it, kid. I hire people to look at it."

Wonder who NBC hired to inspect "W.E.B." It's a turkey that has the flavor of last year's "79 Park Avenue." All it will do is make you (a) laugh yourself silly and (b) send condolences to the cast.

Memphis Hopes To Buy Elvis Presley's Home

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The city of Memphis wants to buy Graceland mansion, Elvis Presley's former home, to be part of a proposed museum for Presley memorabilia. City officials are encountering complications in arranging the purchase, however.

"I've practiced law for 17 years and never have run into the snags and pitfalls that I've found in this thing," Mayor Wyeth Chandler said Tuesday, describing for the City Council negotiations for the right to purchase the mansion.

"It's a very tenuous thing to say the least."

Chandler said the mansion, now property of the Presley estate, would be the key attraction in a proposed tourist complex that would include an Elvis Presley museum across the street from the mansion.

"The mansion is the key. That's what the people want to see," Chandler said.

The mayor said he does not want to spend taxpayers' money to construct a museum across the street from Graceland and then have the mansion sold to private business interests which might open it as a competing tourist attraction.

Graceland, a Georgian-style mansion on a 13-acre tract in the city's Whitehaven area, has

Presley and his mother, Gladys, are buried in a garden at the south end of the mansion.

Chandler said he has heard of at least one attempt by private interests to purchase "the whole kit and caboodle — Graceland, the memorabilia and everything else." But the mayor said Vernon Presley, the singer's father and executor of the estate, has said he would like the city to have first option to buy Graceland if it is sold.

According to Presley's will, the property is to go to his daughter, Lisa Marie, on Vernon Presley's death. However, there is some question whether Vernon Presley, as executor of the estate, can enter into an agreement to sell the property.

Beecher Smith, attorney for the Presley estate, refused comment Tuesday.

"There are just a lot of things going on right now and I think that any statement would be premature," he said.

A proposal for a Presley memorial has been discussed by city officials since shortly after the singer's death, but no firm plans have resulted.

Chandler said he does not know how much Graceland

Lotions May Help But Sun Still Poses Danger

By MICHAEL J. CONLON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Experts who have completed their review of the link between skin cancer and exposure to the sun say their concern is not a matter of this summer or next — but what happens to your skin 20 to 50 years from now.

It can take that long for today's dose of sun to show up as skin cancer or other changes in the skin.

That is why the scientists who reviewed the situation for the Food and Drug Administration have recommended that products which bill themselves as sunscreens carry a warning that too much sun can cause skin cancer or prematurely aged skin.

They have also concluded that sunscreen products do work, and they can help in reducing the incidence of skin cancer. Currently about 9,000 Americans develop malignant skin cancer each year, and another 300,000 develop benign skin disease.

While the report officially recommends that the FDA require a statement on sunscreen labels saying that "liberal and regular" use of sunscreens can reduce the chances of developing cancer, the suggestion was not a unanimous one.

Three of the seven outside experts the FDA called together to make the report disagreed with the warning recommendation. The consumer representative on the panel, who did not have a vote, also disagreed with the advice.

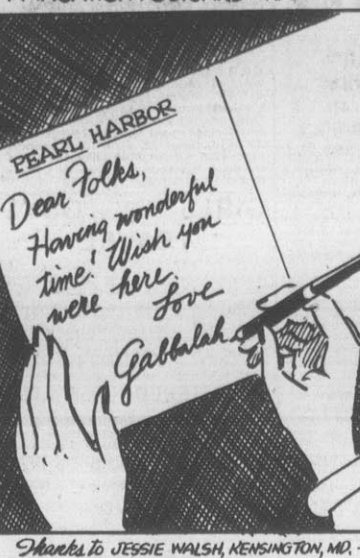

The reason, they said, is that the language would suggest to users that skin cancer can indeed be prevented by use of sunscreens, and that it doesn't take into account the fact that some persons may already have had too much exposure to the sun. The minority report concludes: "Because data are not yet conclusive that skin cancers are preventable by these over-the-counter products, the minority suggests that a claim of 'may reduce harmful effects of the sun' is acceptable, but the final step of preventing cancer is unwarranted at this time."

The FDA has published the report for comment and will make a final decision on whether to propose a label warning later on. It noted the disagreement among the experts and said special attention must be given to make sure consumers are not misled by whatever steps it finally takes.

The panel's report noted that damage to the skin is "cumulative and 20 to 50 years may pass before skin changes including skin cancers appear." Persons who do develop skin cancer are advised to use sun screens by their doctors, it added, not to correct the situation "but to prevent skin cancer from today's exposure from appearing 10 to 20 years hence."

GABBALAH CAN'T THINK OF ANYTHING MORE IMPORTANT TO SAY ON A VACATION POSTCARD THAN:

The report gives a clean bill of health to several sunscreen ingredients, including one of the most common — aminobenzoic acid, or PABA.

"For over 40 years aminobenzoic acid has been known to be an effective sunscreen," the report states. "Recent studies show it to be superior to many of the popular sunscreens marketed today for preventing sunburn."

It notes that preparations containing from 5 to 15 percent PABA are effective, if applied about two hours before exposure to the sun and reapplied after swimming or excessive sweating.

The report also concludes that sunscreen preparations "only extend the time it takes the sun to produce a sunburn. Tanning cannot be rushed, taking about two weeks in most white people."

ECU Awarded Teaching Grant

ECU News Bureau
A teaching grant of $30,956 has been awarded the ECU Department of Social Work and Correctional Services by the Children's Bureau of the U.S. Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare.

The Section 426 training grant of the Social Security Act, administered by the Bureau's Office of Human Development Services, was awarded ECU for the development, expansion and improvement of educational programs and resources for work in the field of child and family welfare.

A priority goal of the Children's Bureau in the use of Section 426 training grants is to increase the pool of trained workers and resources specific to the needs of the child welfare services program.

The grant will enable ECU to effect a needs assessment study among child welfare workers in 33 eastern N.C. counties to consider the modification of some courses or to develop and integrate special curriculum units that deal with key service delivery problems.

It will also enable the ECU Department of Social Work and Correctional Services to work more closely with the health care teams structured jointly by the School of Allied Health and Social Professions and the new medical school.

The department is currently in the process of employing a new faculty member who will direct this new effort.

Answer In Baby Boom?

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — What did you do during the blizzard, mom and dad? A baby boom the last half of October may provide the answer.

Obstetricians and maternity shops here are expecting more babies than usual around the end of October — nine months after a record snowstorm dumped more than 15.2 inches on the city in less than 30 hours. The blizzard confined thousands of people to their homes for at least three days.

Doctors say the theoretical due date of a baby conceived during the Jan. 25 blizzard would be around Oct. 19.

Dr. Jonathan Fisch, an obstetrician in his first year of practice, said he has one-third more babies due from mid-October to mid-November than in any comparable period.

"It may be happenstance, but it's probably from the blizzard," said Dr. Charles Echt, who estimated his caseload at 20 percent above normal.

"I usually deliver 20 to 25 babies a month," Dr. Thomas Ferrara said. "I have 40 due in October, mostly after the 15th. That's a big, big month for me."

He said some of his patients told him they ran out of birth control pills and couldn't get refills.

A spokesman for the Marion County Medical Society said its medical exchange was flooded during the snowstorm with calls for birth control pill refills.

There were more requests for pills than anything else, he said. Some people even placed operator-interrupt emergency calls that broke into conversations of people who needed more vital services or supplies.

"I'd say the situation was more life-threatening than life-threatening," he quipped.

Singles Turn To Fulfill Home Ownership Dream

By DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — They have long set the style, beating a course from bar to ski lodge to beach party to bed.

Single life may still be one big blast for some, centered on apartment complexes with swimming pools and no children. But for an increasing number this generation of single people — both the not now and never marrieds — the stability of home ownership is changing the essence of going it alone.

The trend started in the early 1970s, and real estate people say it is still growing. Social scientists say it could have profound effects on the traditional suburban life centered on children.

But it's not that the single population is moving to suburbia with vast changes in mind.

"I have a greater sense of security. I also have a feeling of a sense of home, which I never had with an apartment," says Paula H. J. Cholmondeley, a 31-year-old budgets manager who bought a house in Stamford, Conn., after living in a New York apartment for five years.

"My lifestyle has changed," she said. "I go out less. I spend more time at home and less time roaming around. I feel there's someplace I can now go and totally relax and unwind, which I did not feel I could do as well when I lived in an apartment."

Ms. Cholmondeley, like other young singles on today's housing market, decided to buy a house for financial reasons as well as practical considerations. She needed more space and to rent a larger apartment, she said, would not have been a positive return on the money spent as rent.

Dr. Margaret Levi, a 31-year-old political science professor, has owned a house in Seattle, Wash., with her boyfriend for 2½ years. Their mortgage payment is the same as the rent they paid for a smaller apartment.

"We figured it was cheaper than paying rent for the same space," she said. "Plus, we get equity and it's nice to have a place of your own. You can really create a space you like rather than take what the rental market gives you."

Single home ownership has made dramatic increases between 1970 and 1976, according to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. The number of single male homeowners under age 35 rose 213 percent from 158,000 to 495,000 during that time. Female homeowners, also single and under 35, jumped 141 percent from 80,000 to 193,000.

And the purchases are nationwide. In Atlanta, 8 percent of all homes sold are to singles, says the Chicago based National Association of Realtors. Twenty-five percent of all houses sold in Phoenix are purchased by singles.

Today's single homeowner is buying everything from factory lofts that need renovating to townhouses, brownstones, one-and-two-family houses in the suburbs, farmhouses and barns, condominiums and cooperatives. And the market has yet to peak.

"We now have a whole generation of youthful adults who know inflation. They don't remember when things were cheap, they know only that things will be more expensive so they are buying now," said Dr. George Sternlieb, director of the Center for Urban Policy Research at Rutgers University.

"What we have now is a housing buying panic by everyone," he said. "There is the feeling that if you don't do it now, you never will. More younger people are determined to go into a forced savings. Homeownership for some young people is like a super Christmas Club."

Singles are not just buying small homes to meet their immediate needs. Many are purchasing — or thinking about — three- and four-bedroom homes with an eye to reselling before the mortgage has expired.

"I want to make an investment and have it turn over in five years," says Victoria Chapman, a 34-year-old magazine editor. "Many young people don't even think in terms of paying off a mortgage. They're thinking of turning it over. Later I can buy something larger."

Ms. Chapman, who currently lives in a Manhattan co-op apartment, is looking to buy a country home for weekends and vacations. She plans to sell it and her coop in five years and buy a larger house.

"The house I always assumed would happen when I married and had a family might not happen," she said. "If I start buying things now, I'll have a place that means something when I'm 60 or 70. The place I have now is not my settling down place."

The emergence of the single homeowner in family neighborhoods and the suburbs has had an impact not only in the community, but on establishing the single lifestyle as a desirable and acceptable one.

"Our real problem is reshaping the suburbs to meet the demands of the new market," says Sternlieb. "There's the problem of how to reduce the forms of public expenditures that were geared to people who originally lived there and not for those who are now there. These new homeowners want swimming pools and tennis courts, not schools."

"But the concept of a homogeneous suburbia has not been the case ever, much less now. Suburbs now contain a critical mass of single people — never married, divorced, widowed."

Those who by choice have removed themselves from the mainstream of disco hopping, pickup bars and trendy boutiques are often surprised to find a new, but just as vigorous social life in the suburbs.

"When I first moved I thought there would be a lot of isolation," says Ms. Cholmondeley. "But I found quite the contrary. There's a subculture of single people who buy houses and do rural things like go to tag sales and play golf."

"There are men out there who would rather date women who live in the country than those who live in the city. It's convenience and they prefer that lifestyle."

Hungary May Trim Lottery Winnings

By ANDRAS TIMAR

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — There might be tough times ahead for future "lottery millionaires" in Communist-ruled Hungary. Their wins could be substantially cut to allow the "middle classes" to get more of the money.

There have been wins of up to 3.5 million forints ($200,000) in Hungary's state-run lottery, a weekly affair. The "full hit," as it is locally called, goes to the person who guesses five numbers correctly. He can pick the five numbers out of 1 to 90.

There are four classes, the full hit class of a correct guess of five figures, of four, three and two hits.

The correct guess of five is rare, so there are considerably more winners in the lower classes, and consequently less money going to each.

The win of 3.5 million forints by one person was "jarring on the people's sense of justice," Ferenc Szohar, the general manager of the lottery board, said in an interview with the government journal, Magyar Hirlap.

He indicated that a reform of the top wins was likely to be coming.

He claimed the "uneared millions" gave winners "the (average) income of a worker for a hundred years for a mere 3.30 forints" (about 20 U.S. cents) that a lottery ticket costs.

He said his records showed that there had been 179 lottery millionaires in Hungary since the start of the weekly game in 1957.

At present up to 13 million tickets are sold every week.

Szohar said he thought more money should be allocated to the "middle groups," by paying out less to the top group of the full hits and more to the lower numbers of correct guesses.

But, he added, a reduced chance of winning a lot of money could turn away many from playing the game.

Szohar countered criticism by disclosing that out of the 179 full hits, 39 were won by groups playing weekly with a large number of tickets in order to increase the probability rate of winning, while 45 others had more than one ticket holder.

Furthermore, he said, proceeds from the lottery — the share of the lottery kept by the state — was being used for subsidizing new housing.

CONDEMN CHILE

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The International Confederation of Free Trade Unions has condemned what it calls the "fascist" military government of Chile.

LITTLE BIT MEANS A LOT — Employee Leo Blankenship checks tolerances of turbochargers being made at Torrance, Calif. plant of Garrett Corp., one of the Signal Companies. If the tolerance varies more than two-thousandths of an inch, the turbocharger, used to boost power output of engines, will not work. (AP Laserphoto)

Cartoonist Salesman Of Education

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Morrie Turner admits he was a rotten student in his youth, but now that he is a nationally known cartoonist he has become a super salesman for education.

Turner, whose successful comic strip, "Wee Pals," is syndicated in nearly 110 newspapers around the world, spends a lot of time visiting colleges and schools encouraging kids to get the best education they can.

The 53-year-old artist recently made a trip to Archbishop Mitty High School in San Jose, 40 miles to the south, where he spent a week doing what he does best — talking to students about the importance of school while whipping up caricatures of each one in the wink of an eye.

Turner, who grew up poor and black in Oakland and learned to draw by copying the works of successful cartoonists, has a good reason for championing his cause. "In high school, I was always just a hop and a skip ahead of an expulsion slip," he said.

"I was a rotten student, and I got what I've got through a lot of luck and pure perspiration," he said. "With a little more education and a little more application I might have succeeded a lot sooner."

Turner attributes much of his artistic success to his mother. "She was my first booster, encouraging me from the very start," he said. "But I doubt if she or anyone else in my family ever expected me to make it really pay."

But pay it does. Today, Turner commands between $350 and $500 for a single drawing, a far cry from the day in 1947 when he received his first $5 check for a drawing submitted to a baking industry journal.

After a stint in the Army and a rash of $5 checks from other magazines for the "thousands of cartoons I must have turned out," Turner focused his attention on "the black scene."

"I tried to use my drawings to try to right the wrongs of the centuries, but the national magazines rejected me cold," he said.

With "Peanuts" creator Charles Schulz's encouragement, Turner began doing all-black versions of Schulz's legendary cartoons which he was able to peddle to a black-oriented Chicago newspaper for $40 a month.

But Turner said he found that job was "totally opposed to my innate belief in integration." That's when "Wee Pals" was born.

The first few strips had three central characters: Randy, a black; Paul, a Chicano, and Ralph, a white who Turner said "could have been Archie Bunker's nephew."

The cartoon strip began with syndication in nine newspapers in 1961, jumping to 60 after a few months. Its largest growth came after April 4, 1968 — the day Martin Luther King was killed.

Over the years, Turner has added new "personalities" to the strip, including Nipper, who is Turner himself; Charlotte, who speeds around everywhere in her wheelchair; George, an Asian; Jerry, a Jew, and of course, General Lee, everybody's pooch.

And who knows who will show up next?

"I've just met my first in the flesh Syrian," he said with a smile.

Closing Account As A Protest

CHICAGO (AP) — The National Council of Churches says it will close its checking account with the Continental Bank of Illinois because the bank refuses to bar future loans to South Africa.

The council said it objected to "the support that loans provide for apartheid and white minority rule." The association of 31 Protestant and Eastern Orthodox churches said the account had an average balance of $75,000 last year. The Rev. W. Sterling Cary, past president of the council's governing board, said the bank participated in loans of $82 million to South Africa, including money for airplanes.

Otters Are Daily Treat For Viewers

By GREGORY JENSEN

EARSHAM, England (UPI)

Otters are a rare sight even in captivity and an almost impossible one in the wild.

But they're an everyday sight for visitors to the Otter Trust, the world's only nature park devoted to these endangered animals. Founded only two years ago, the trust puts the public within biting distance of dozens of otters, and at the same time helps pull the otter back from the brink of extinction.

"One of our main aims is to breed endangered species and eventually release them in the wild," said Philip Wayne, founder and director of the trust.

"This place is unique. Quite a few zoos have otter pairs, but we're the only place with such a collection and the only ones breeding otters in such numbers."

The Otter Trust's three lakes, 118 miles north of London, also hold exotic wildfowl, and there is a nature walk along the River Waveney which runs through the grounds.

But the centerpiece of its 23 acres is a long line of wired-in enclosures straddling a small stream, which is widened to landscaped, natural-looking ponds. In each, separated from visitors only by a low wire net, two or four otters frolic among the trees or fight playful battles in the pools.

Otters need the help. "Of the 19 species of otter known to science, four are already in immediate danger of extinction," says an Otter Trust publication. "Their number has declined alarmingly in the past decade, and unless positive action is taken at once the otter may vanish from our rivers and lakes forever."

Otters are trapped and shot for their skins, poisoned by pollution and deprived of their habitat. They do "little or no damage to man or his interests," Wayne says, but in places like Scotland where no laws protect them otters are hunted with packs of dogs.

So in 1970 Wayne, a well-known British naturalist with three books and scores of television appearances to his credit, organized the Otter Trust "to help the otters of the world in their battle for survival."

"We have about 1,500 members now," Wayne said. The trust owns another nature reserve, has negotiated protection for otters along most of the River Waveney and even persuaded the government to build an "otter underpass" under a highway crossing an otter trail.

"This place opened in September 1976," Wayne said of his otter reserve. "Last year — our first full year — we had just over 40,000 visitors."

The first thing visitors see is a daunting sign: "All otters bite. Do not let children put fingers through the netting."

Otters form firm human friendships, but they bite as a reflex — seldom viciously but from fear of destruction. The chaos an intensely curious otter can cause in a house was a feature of Gavin Maxwell's book and movie, "Ring of Bright Water." A followup movie, based on "Tarka the Otter," is being partly filmed in an Otter Trust enclosure.

Otters are graceful, sleek as dolphins, inventively playful. But, they are scarce and solitary, silent by nature, constantly on the move and exceedingly elusive.

"Anyone searching through the literature will be struck by how little is really known about them in the wild," Wayne says in "The River People," his latest book on otters.

"What little we do know has been gleaned from the casual observations of fishermen ... or from specimens kept in zoos."

Wayne has seen — and photographed — every moment of an otter's life, including those secret and fiercely guarded moments just after birth.

"They're such fascinating creatures," Wayne said, "that many enthusiasts are prepared to endure sleepless nights in cold and wet for the chance of a quick glimpse of one. Here you can see them all the time."

1978 Pitt Fair Opens Sept. 25 In New Quarters

by D. J. Whichard

Today, Lester Turnage dropped into my office and advised me that he had notified the Fair Committee that I would furnish him a brief history of the American Legion Pitt County Fair before the end of the day. Knowing that Lester had devoted almost his full time for more than a year in the preparation and development of the new fairground, I felt that I could not turn his request down.

This brief on the fair is from free thought and recollection without time for checking into positive dates and other facts.

"Five Little Peppers and How They Grew"

This was a story of five very poor little children whose widowed mother struggled against odds and finally each of the five became successes.

Good Pitt County fairs are no rarity over a long period of years, but in the early thirties when W. H. Dail had given up the operation of the fair because of necessity of his other activities, the fair fell into outside hands and had sunk down to a point that it could not qualify as a fair representative of Pitt County.

It was at this stage that the American Legion decided to take over and try to build a fair for Pitt County. At that time the Pitt County Post and the Farmville Post of the Legion acquired a state charter for operation of the fair. Like the five little peppers who were poor and inexperienced, we started in the fair business.

When we turned to the Pitt County Farm Extension Service and the Home Economics agencies, we found that residents of Pitt County who had received premium checks for two years still had those uncollectible checks from the outside operators. It was only after a lot of pleading and action on my part assigning the assets of my newspaper to Miss Ethel Nice guaranteeing full payment of any premiums that our fair would offer together with any expenses incurred by her department for assistance in helping us to re-interest our people in exhibiting and supporting our fair, that they agreed to assist us.

Our fair the first year operated at the old fairground (now Guy Smith Stadium). After paying rent on the fairground and other expenses, including full payment of premiums, we found ourselves with what we thought was a profit of about $50. Before closing our books, we found that we still owed the Home Demonstration Department $53.53 which took up our $50 profit plus $3.53 more, all of which was paid in full.

Before the next year of operation, we leased from Col. E. G. Flanagan and J. E. Winslow the property at the corner of what is now Memorial Drive and Fifth Street. This property was leased for a period of five years with an option to purchase same at any time during the term of the lease for $4500.

In the meantime, a group of our legionnaires (I will not go into names because there were so many of them) operated a Saturday night dance at the old National Guard Armory along with sponsoring other affairs that helped us make enough money to make improvements to the fairground and operate the fair. With this extra financial help, we were able to grow as a fair and show improvements from year to year. Before the five years' rental and option were up, we paid for the Winslow/Flanagan property in full and then continued to have a better fair each year.

The continued operation of the Saturday night dances and other community affairs helped us accumulate some extra funds. About this time the Moye family contributed property for the building of Pitt Memorial Hospital. It was realized at that time that if and when the hospital was built on the Moye property, it would not be feasible to operate a fair almost under the hospital windows. We therefore made an agreement with the Moyes and the county that at such time as the hospital was occupied, the fair would move to another location.

With the surplus funds we had acquired, we bought a portion of the Sam Dudley property across the river adjacent to the airport, and in 1952 when the hospital was opened, we sold our fair property adjacent thereto and moved the fair to our new location where it has operated until this year.

After the Farmville and Pitt County posts had chartered the fair, the legion membership in the lower part of the county had grown to the point that an Ayden group, by mutual consent of the Pitt County post, was permitted to organize its own post. Since that group had been active in the Pitt County post and had contributed much to the operation of the fair it was decided by the owners of the fair to cut the Ayden post into receiving its pro rata share of any gains from the fair although the ownership still remained in the Farmville and Pitt County Posts.

Much time and effort over this period of more than 40 years has willingly and freely been given by legionnaires of Pitt County including veterans of World War I, World War II and such other conflicts as we have had since that time.

I will not undertake to go into what the new American Legion Pitt County Fairground has developed into. Although it is not yet completed, I believe what it has to offer this year and in years to come will mean much to this section. For several years the Pitt County Fair has been held just prior to the North Carolina State Fair and prize exhibits from this fair have been moved on to the state fair where they were likewise top prize winners.

When the new fairground is finally complete, it will be the finest fairground with the most to offer of any in North Carolina with the exception of the State Fair.

My wish is that the American Legion Pitt County Fair will show the progress over the next forty years that it has over the forty odd years past when it came into existence under American Legion sponsorship.

EXTENSION HOMEMAKERS CLUBS

Mrs. Sue B. May, Home Economics Extension Agent

Miss Addie R. Gore, Home Economics Extension Agent

Mrs. Evelyn L. Spangler, Home Economics Extension Agent
Directors

The Home Economics Division of the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service, North Carolina State University at Raleigh, has grown from the original canning clubs to a broader adult education program for the homemaker. It reflects the needs of contemporary living, with emphasis on consumer education, management, and family economics. Included are all phases of homemaking: Foods and Nutrition, Clothing and Textiles, Housing and House Furnishings, Home Finances, and Human Development. Each is equally important in developing a well-balanced home in which happy, healthy people are to live. Emphasis is also being placed on Community Service, Safety, Citizenship, Education, Health, Music, and Recreation. The newest research findings in Home Economics apply to both rural and urban homemakers. Educational Exhibits this year are planned in an effort to promote the total Home Economics Extension Program.

Organizations connected with the Extension Homemaker Programs in Pitt County are eligible to have nine exhibits, each 8x8 feet.

IMPORTANT: Entries must be made by 3 p.m., Monday, Sept. 25, 1978.

Flavor is very important, but cannot actually be judged since jars are not opened. Preserves should have an airtight seal (no paraffin) half pints or pint jars.

Explanation of Score Card

Shape—Fruits should be as nearly as possible original in shape and appearance.

Clearness and Color—Clear, and in some fruit transparent, not too dark.

Texture—Tender, but firm and plump.

Pack—Arrangement of fruit with reference to symmetry, though not particularly fancy pack.

Proportion of juice— $\frac{1}{3}$ to $\frac{2}{3}$.

Proportion of juice— $\frac{1}{3}$ to $\frac{2}{3}$ fruit.

Attend the Pitt County Fair—Sept. 25-30

The livestock building is not complete and The Fair has been forced to cancel plans for poultry and livestock exhibits.....but we're building for the future and bigger-than-ever stock shows and exhibits are planned for 1979 and subsequent years.

Tractor Pull— Sept. 22-23

Sponsored by Stokes Ruritan Club

Visit the log-cabins, representing farms of yesteryear. You'll be amazed at the old implements, and fixtures in the Farm Museum....reminiscent of years gone by.
