

Middle East Summitry Nearing Climax

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer
CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — President Carter seems within reach of a comprehensive formula for continuing Israeli-Egyptian negotiations after the Middle East summit, now nearing a climax.

pessimism," diplomatic sources said the mood at the summit was upbeat as Carter worked to win the agreement of Israel's Menachem Begin and Egypt's Anwar Sadat to a peace-seeking blueprint. If an accord can be achieved, it would meet at least the minimum requirements for a successful conference, even if it did not ensure an ultimate Mideast settlement. Carter took an hour-long morning walk with Sadat today, following a 25-minute session with Begin late Wednesday night. Sources close to the conference said it would not end today. The sources, asking anonymity, said there was still a need for "more flexibility" on both sides.

with some issues still unresolved. Meanwhile, the Boston Herald American reported in a copyright story today that Begin had agreed to the principle of Israeli withdrawal from the West Bank of the Jordan River. The newspaper said that Jordan had agreed to resume peace negotiations and that Begin and Sadat might join Carter on nationwide television to announce the major breakthroughs. There was no immediate comment on the story from U.S. or Egyptian officials. In Washington, a spokesman for the Israeli embassy, who asked that his name not be used, denied as "completely untrue" reports that Israel had agreed to withdraw from the West Bank. In Bonn, West Germany, Syrian President Hafez Assad ruled out meeting with Sadat to learn what the thoughts and comments are. "We will learn the results of Camp David sooner or later," the Syrian leader told reporters. In his drive to nail down a summit-ending agreement, tentatively called a

"framework of negotiations," Carter canceled one appearance and postponed two speech-making and politicking trips. The broadly worded formula, which would deal with the future of the Palestinian Arabs and other key issues, would replace a "declaration of principles" that was nearing completion last January when Sadat broke off direct negotiations with Israel. Carter had been scheduled to host a White House reception and concert Wednesday night for race drivers from the stock car circuit, with singer Willie Nelson entertaining. The White House press office said the president had Mrs. Carter preside at the affair.

Central Arkansas Adding Up Losses In Sudden Floods

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Rain-swollen creeks were still out of their banks in many spots today as National Guardsmen patrolled to prevent looting after floods swept through central Arkansas, killing at least 10 people and causing millions of dollars worth of damages.

through homes and businesses. Buildings were washed from their foundations, roads were closed, and hundreds of people were stranded in cars and on rooftops. A school bus carrying 21 children was swept 300 feet down a creek on a rural road in Garland County, but all aboard were rescued.

An area in southwestern Little Rock was sealed off near Rock Creek and all people were ordered out Wednesday night. About 300 people were evacuated from an area south of Benton in Saline County late Wednesday when a dam on a small lake in a residential subdivision threatened to break. But they were allowed to return around midnight when authorities determined the danger had passed.

More rain threatened to add to the area's woes. Authorities said several people were still missing, but rescue units postponed their search until dawn. "It's too dangerous out there at night," a State Police spokesman said.

At one point, all roads into Little Rock were closed and a 30-square-block area of the state capital had to be evacuated. Authorities said today that water in most creeks was "spreading out and calming down," but that the level of water had not decreased much.

The floods caused seven deaths in Little Rock and three in neighboring Saline County. Two young boys, ages 7 and 4, drowned in Benton when they were swept away on a flooded street while walking with their mother and sister. Bystanders grabbed the women and girl.

Heavy thunderstorms hit the area at daybreak Wednesday and six inches of rain fell in five hours, sending creeks rushing out of their banks and swirling Guardsmen watched over parts of Pulaski and Saline counties that were evacuated during the floods.

The section dealing with "Wild Animals, Birds, Etc." sets forth the prohibition against action to "Give or offer, or attempt to give to any animal or bird any tobacco, alcohol or other known noxious substances." The same section also prohibits collecting, hunting, or killing any animal, bird, snail or reptile except for snakes "known to be deadly poisonous, such as rattlesnakes, moccasins, coral snakes..."

Rules Of Conduct For Park-Users Are Set Up

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer
Humans who in past days may have gotten a kick out of corrupting wild animals or birds by tempting them to smoke or drink strong drink will no longer be able to indulge in this habit with impunity.

Wednesday night, commission members unanimously approved a definitive ordinance that provides for proper behavior for patrons using the park and recreation facilities. The ordinance, entitled "Greenville Ordinance Regulating Conduct in Public Parks" now goes to the City Council, the approving authority for city ordinances. The comprehensive ordinance covers conduct relative to use of buildings and other property, trees, shrubbery, lawns, sanitation, traffic, bathing, swimming, boating, fishing, picnic areas and camping, intoxicating beverages (for people), fireworks, domestic animals, mode of dress, merchandising, advertising and signs, and park operating policy.

At the monthly meeting of the Greenville Parks and Recreation Commission the ordinance, Recreation and Parks Executive Director Boyd Lee pointed out, "has been drawn up not because we have had problems in all these areas, but because there's nothing in the city code book that actually spells out regulations for the city parks and recreation areas."

Jack Stephenson of Southport, head of the Brunswick County Resources Commission was named chairman, while John Gurganus, executive director of the Northampton Economic Development Commission was elected vice-chairman. Reese Hart, director of the Pitt County Development Commission was elected secretary-treasurer.

COUNTY OFFERING WOOD?

Is Pitt County going to provide a place for people to cut wood free as it did last year? That was a tremendously good service. I hope it's being offered again. P. F.

County Manager Reginald Gray said this service is not being offered this year. The place from which wood could be cut last year was the Pitt County Landfill. Now the county is using the Greenville landfill and, because of unauthorized use by hunters and four-wheel drive enthusiasts, no trespassing signs have had to be posted. When the county landfill site is reopened, wood cutting may again be allowed, Gray said.

If there is any other source of free wood in the county, Hotline will be glad to publicize it in a future column.

Jack Stephenson of Southport, head of the Brunswick County Resources Commission was named chairman, while John Gurganus, executive director of the Northampton Economic Development Commission was elected vice-chairman. Reese Hart, director of the Pitt County Development Commission was elected secretary-treasurer.

Jenkins, who stressed the importance of cooperation in developing the economy of the East, said last night that Gov. Jim Hunt will present a legislative package to the 1979 General Assembly for his balanced growth program. Jenkins is chief liaison man for the governor on economic development matters and represents Hunt at small-town functions such as groundbreakings and new industry announcements.

Following the presentation of a report by representatives of the Greenville Tennis Association, commission member Dr. Edgar Hooks recommended, and the commission approved, a motion that "the report is received favorably, and the commission offers its appreciation for the association bringing the report to the commission."

Development Ass'n Names New Officers

By STUART SAVAGE

The Eastern North Carolina Development Association — an organization of economic developers and allied organizations involved in economic development in 36 Eastern counties — held its first annual meeting here yesterday and this morning.

Highlighting yesterday's activities was the election of officers for the association, and a speech by former East Carolina University chancellor — now special advisor to the governor, Dr. Leo Jenkins at a banquet.

Jack Stephenson of Southport, head of the Brunswick County Resources Commission was named chairman, while John Gurganus, executive director of the Northampton Economic Development Commission was elected vice-chairman. Reese Hart, director of the Pitt County Development Commission was elected secretary-treasurer.

Jenkins also attends the Governor's cabinet meetings as an advisor.

This morning, Secretary of the Department of Transportation Tom Bradshaw and Secretary of the Department of Commerce Lauch Faircloth appeared on a panel discussion program, outlining how their respective departments aid in economic development efforts.

Faircloth emphasized, "there are a lot of things going for us in industrial development in Eastern North Carolina," but said unless a new industry, "comes to your town, it doesn't do a bit of good."

He noted that the finest town in which an industry can locate is the smallest town that can supply its needs. Faircloth noted that problems arise in the East in securing large tracts of land. "I've yet to understand," he said, how 2,500 acres of land in sight of the North Carolina National Bank offices in Charlotte can be put together for an industry, "and you can't get five acres in Tyrrell County," he illustrated.

Speaker Notes Decline In Student SAT Scores

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

"The major change this year is that every recipient gets a full advance copy of a representative SAT test," explained Walter B. Jacobs, Jr.

Associate director of the College Board's Southern Regional Office in Atlanta, Jacobs was on the East Carolina University campus Wednesday coordinating a workshop for local high school counselors on the subject of SAT, the standard Scholastic Aptitude Test administered to high school students in preparation for enrolling in colleges.

"When I say each recipient gets a full advance copy," Jacobs remarked, "that doesn't mean he will get the same test that he'll be taking. Security of actual tests is still strictly maintained. The representative test made available to students, it is felt, is only fair in the view of consumer rights to know what you're getting." One of the developments that has been a major source of concern to educators as well as the general public has been the consistent

Pastor To Head Division In UF

The Professional III Division of the United Way campaign in Pitt County will be handled this year by Dr. Harold W. Deitch, pastor of Red Oak Christian Church. Announcement of Deitch's selection as a division chairman was made by Jerry Fulford, 1978-79 campaign chairman.

"I appreciate Dr. Deitch agreeing to participate in this year's campaign," Fulford observed. "I'm sure that he will coordinate a successful fund drive in his division."

A native of Martins Ferry, Ohio, Deitch received his training at Kentucky Christian College and Butler School of Religion.

Deitch has served four churches in the past 40 years, including 22 years at The First Christian Church in Salem, Ohio. He came to Greenville in January of 1976 and since that time, 86 new members have joined the church.

The pastor has preached and conducted crusades in over 20 states, Jamaica, and Australia and 30 young people have entered the ministry under his leadership.

He serves on the board of the National Evangelistic Association of The Christian Church and is a member of the executive committee of The European Evangelistic Society. Deitch is also a member of the Salvation Army board of directors, is a Mason-Shriner, and holds memberships in the local Kiwanis and Exchange Clubs.

The new division chairman and his wife, Velma, reside at 204 Pearl Drive. They have two sons.

Study Group Completes Europe Tour

ECU News Bureau
A group of child development and family relations specialists from the East Carolina University School of Home Economics is back on campus, after a month-long tour of Europe. The group included Dr. Nash Love of the ECU faculty; undergraduate students Elaine Sesser of Kenly, Wanda Stancill of Greenville, Kathy Thompson of Bailey and Carole Mayo of Aurora; and graduate students Marilyn Love of Greenville and Lucy Marino of Morehead City. The students are candidates for degrees from the ECU Department of Child Development and Family Relations. Working with professors at several universities, the ECU travelers visited Italy, Switzerland, France, Great Britain and the Netherlands, in on-site studies of the European family. Also involved in the study tour were 35 faculty members and students from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and home economist Patricia Parker of Franklin. "The tour was an invaluable opportunity to compare first hand various European life styles to which we in this country owe our heritage," said Dr. Love. Most tour participants earned academic credit, through a joint arrangement by the ECU School of Home Economics and the VPI Dept. of Home Management and Family Relations, in cooperation with the ECU Division of Continuing Education.

DINNER FOR TWO

Skillet Game Hen Rice

Tossed Green Salad Fruit Cheese

SKILLET GAME HEN

My version of Mary Cantwell's version of Skillet Spring Chicken from Edna Lewis's "The Taste of Country Cooking" (Knopf).

1 fresh Cornish hen (about 1 1/4 pounds) 1/4 cup butter

1-3rd cup clear fat-free chicken broth

Salt and pepper

Split the hen in half. Cut off the narrow central spinal bone and discard. With a cleaver, flatten each half on both sides. Cut the joint (but not all the way through) between the wing and the breast so the wing will lie flat. In a heavy medium-size skillet over medium heat, melt the butter. Add the hen halves and brown thoroughly on both sides—about 10 minutes. Cover tightly and continue cooking over moderate heat, turning as necessary, until tender—20 to 25 minutes. Remove the hen, sprinkle with salt and pepper and keep hot. Add the chicken broth to the butter and drippings in the skillet and, stirring constantly, boil just until reduced and slightly thickened; pour over the hen. Makes 2 servings.

Special guests attending were Mr. and Mrs. Leonard McCall Thompson Jr. of Maysville and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lee Hardee of Winterville, parents of the honorees, Mrs. Minnie Hines of Winterville and Mrs. Ethel Crisp of Greenville, grandmothers of the bride-elect, and Mr. and Mrs. Ray DeBruhl of Trenton.

Mrs. Joe Best and Mrs. Wayne Evans and the other hostesses presented the honoree a corsage of pink carnations.

Saves Her Kisses For Her Brothers

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My wife of 29 years hates love-making. She often says she finds the whole idea "revolting." In fact, she doesn't even want to be kissed.

The odd thing is that when she is with any of her three brothers, it's kissy, kissy, kissy, all the time. Good morning kisses, good night kisses, and hello and goodbye kisses. (And she kisses them in between times, too.)

Although I have never strayed from the straight and narrow, I know that women find me attractive. I mention this because you usually take the wife's side in any marital squabble.

What do you make of this situation? I am not jealous. I am merely ...

MYSTIFIED IN OAKLAND

DEAR MYSTIFIED: Your wife probably fears that your kisses are just the preliminary to the "revolting" main event—an unlikely event with her brothers. She needs counseling on the role of sex in a "successful" (sic) marriage.

DEAR ABBY: Apparently you never dated someone who bestowed "ishy kisses," like the girl who wrote you about a poor kisser she dated.

You said, "Kiss him the way you'd like to be kissed. Then hang on to your hat!"

Not always so! I am happily married, but when I was dating I enjoyed kissing so much I always looked forward to the end of the evening. Some guys can kiss, and some can't. Some can eventually learn and some absolutely never learn.

I know, because I'm married to a great guy who just can't seem to get the hang of it. And I've been kissing him the way I'd like to be kissed for ten years.

I'm not complaining, and I wouldn't trade my husband for the world, but when I think of some of those super kissers I dated, I emit a secret sigh. Sign me ...

HOT LIPS

DEAR HOT: Don't give up. Tell your husband what he's doing right, and what he's doing wrong, and what he's not doing that he should be doing. Your great guy has the same equipment those super kissers had. All he needs is some instruction on how to use it.

DEAR ABBY: Without commenting on the legal, moral, or social aspects of the situation, here are the facts: My son and his girl friend, who are living together, have announced that they are going to have a baby. They are very happy about it. The girl's friends have "showered" her with gifts. As far as I know, the prospective parents have no plans to marry in the immediate future.

My question: How do I announce the birth of my first grandchild? Is there a way I can show my love and acceptance of this child—just as I love and accept my son—without seeming too inconsiderate of others who may who may have a strong opposition to such a situation? Sign me ...

FIRST TIME GRANDMA

DEAR FIRST TIME: Don't make an official announcement. Your obvious love and acceptance of the child will speak for itself. The "others" who oppose such a situation must surely realize that you are not responsible for your son's actions.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Everyone, at one time or another, has had to deal with peer pressure. Somewhere, there is an invisible, prevailing, dominant force that dictates that we either act like the majority of people act, or we're subject to censure. You either fight 'em ... or join 'em.

In Jane Howard's book, "Families," she touched upon one form of it when she described an agnostic divorcee who moved to Atlanta from Minneapolis. She got so tired of having neighbors ask which was the church of her choice that she finally hit upon a plan to get them off her case.

Every Sunday morning, she and her children would don their best clothes at half after 10 and pull out of the driveway in their car to return a couple of hours later. It was a Sunday ritual.

They never told anyone that they spent the entire time at Dunkin' Donut.

An elderly woman once confided to me that she got so bored with people who appraised her white hair, her age, and her status as a grandmother and said with shock, "You're kidding about not being able to knit, aren't you?" that she finally bought a knitting bag with little legs on it, filled it with yarn and carried it everywhere she went to ward off people bent on her conversion. Somehow, I always feel sorry

Significant Step By Pitt Bd.

The Pitt County Commissioners this week rescinded its previous actions concerning the location of a new U. S. 264.

The resolutions rescinded called for a limited access highway from Zebulon to the coast along the present area of U. S. 264, and a second one calling for retention of the present five mile Farmville bypass in the new highway.

In their place the commissioners resolved to consider the recommendations of the N. C. Department of Transportation and to consider the wishes of all interested county residents prior to making a recommendation.

The new resolution said "the board is vitally interested in having a four-lane thoroughfare built that would be of the caliber to meet the transportation needs of the people of Pitt County."

The board asked the DOT to expedite its studies and to hold public hearings to give Pitt County citizens the opportunity to discuss the type thoroughfare needed to best serve the public interest.

This newspaper has long maintained that a fully controlled access highway should be extended from I-95 into Pitt County at least as far as the present Eastern bypass of Greenville. Therefore we consider it a highly significant action that the County Commissioners have taken in rescinding a resolution which put them on record as favoring a non-controlled access portion of the proposed highway.

We have no doubt that, with adequate investigation of the highway need, the Department of Transportation will recommend the fully controlled access route for U. S. 264. We think the citizens of the county understand this need and they will voice their opinions in favor of the controlled access highway at any public hearings.

The previous county resolution could have been a major roadblock to the adequate planning of the new U. S. 264 and we are more than pleased that the earlier resolution has been rescinded.

No Better Location For The Festival

Plans have been announced by the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce for a Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival here Nov. 12-18 along with the Tobacco Farmers Show.

Tobacco is the major crop of Pitt County farms and the income it produces is essential to our economy.

There could be no better location for a tobacco festival than here in Pitt County.

Therapy Could Save Jobs

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The scene is not all that uncommon.

A supervisor sits down with an employee to review recent work problems: absenteeism, tardiness, promises broken, jobs left undone or sloppily finished.

The conversation generally concludes with the promise that if such continues, the job is in jeopardy.

Increasingly, though, there is another alternative. And if recent figures are accurate, more than a quarter of a million Tar Heel workers need that alternative.

There are more than 2.2 million working citizens in the state, and according to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and the National Council on Alcoholism, 10 percent have personal or medical problems which are contributing to problems at work.

A Movement

The alternative is an Employee Assistance Program currently reaching the status of a "movement" in North Carolina according to R. J. Blackley, deputy director of alcoholism and drugs for the state Department of Human Resources.

A number of major private firms are already engaged in such programs, and the Department of Human Resources recently launched one for its 18,000 employees. Blackley hopes the notion will spread to other state agencies and more private businesses as its value is demonstrated.

"These programs are not witch-hunts nor are they crusades. They are employer-employee benefit programs which combine sound management principles with a humanitarian approach", Blackley says.

Basically, here is how an Employee Assistance Program operates:

When the supervisor notes work problems and talks with the employee about them, he should become aware of the fact that alcohol, drugs, money worries, marital problems, or an array of emotional difficulties may be at the heart of the matter.

Without attempting to analyze the problem or counsel the employee, the supervisor suggests a conference with an occupational programs counselor who will attempt to pinpoint the problem and guide the employee to testing, counseling and rehabilitation programs. Many of those — either public or private — are already in place, and participation is usually available with present health insurance.

BILL NOBLITT

Pete Martin is an occupational program consultant with Human Resources. His role is to help take the emotion out of confrontation between supervisor and employee. The supervisor is the key to learning of the alternative program and suggesting it as an alternative.

A Solution

"The supervisor can document where work performance is not up to par — where someone is coasting — and can suggest an alternative to continued deterioration and eventual dismissal.

"Participating is the employee's decision," Martin said.

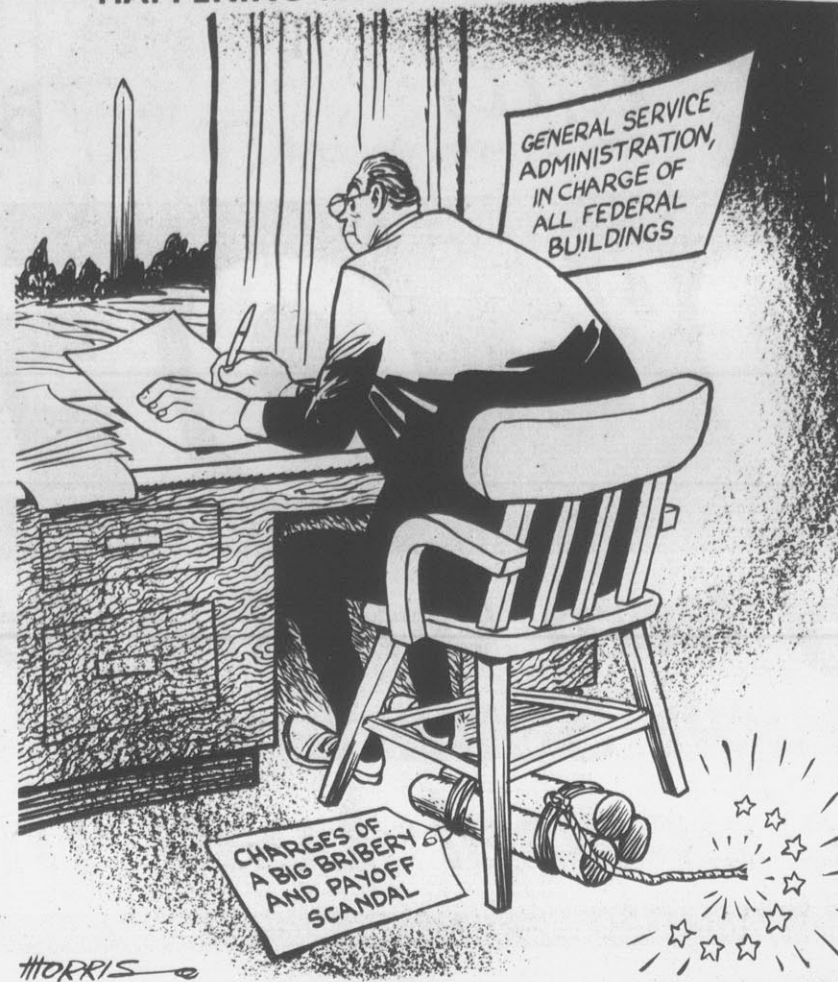

Will employees resent such intrusion in their private lives; the suggestion that something is wrong with them? Perhaps, the experts admit. Nobody likes to admit they have such problems.

But when government and industry openly accept that personal problems interfere with work performance and offer a chance to individuals to find solutions, it suggests to all that if you have a problem you don't have to hide it.

Human Resources Secretary Sarah T. Morrow puts it this way: "The program is remedial and preventive... to identify the problem at the earliest stage, motivate the individual to seek help, and refer the individual to the appropriate assistance."

Such programs don't cost; they save dollars in terms of job performance and valued employees kept on the payroll, the secretary added.

HAPPENING MUCH TOO FREQUENTLY!

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Everyone Else's Fault

WASHINGTON — America's labor unions are suffering these days from the condition, politically speaking, that Lifebuoy is supposed to prevent, and even their best friends are beginning to tell them.

Writing in The Nation, A.H. Raskin sees the sagging labor movement as "punch drunk and programless." Many unions, he remarks, are bedeviled by corruption and in trouble with their own members. Against aggressive business lobbying, labor's efforts have proved ineffective in Congress. Defeats on Capitol Hill are matched by defeats in the industrial arena.

Leaders of the AFL-CIO met here in Washington a couple of weeks ago to discuss these trends and events, but about all that emerged was bluster. To here these fellows holler, labor's plight is everybody's fault but labor's. Their "so-called friends", said Al Barkan, had let them down. "Union-busting" corporations are bankrolling anti-union campaigns. Right-wing reactionaries are striving with missionary zeal to eliminate the labor movement from American society.

The president of the Machinists' Union, fairly transported, linked the armies of the radical right with Hitler, Mussolini and Franco. He was convinced that these armies could be repelled only by "total redistribution of this nation's wealth and income." Brother Barkan, head of AFL-CIO's political education, urged his comrades not to moan and wail, but to fight back.

To judge from the press reports of all this oratory, nowhere was there even a suggestion that labor's own excesses have contributed to labor's recurring miseries — miseries that go far beyond the levels of aspirin and Band-Aids.

The 95th Congress is drawing toward a close. Organized labor contributed $8.2 million to congressional candidates in 1976, up $2 million from 1974. Labor worked strenuously to put Mr. Carter in the White House. When this Congress convened in January of 1977, there was every reason to believe that Brother Barkan and his colleagues would be sitting in the catbird seat.

Look at the record. Labor won a minimum wage bill, but not the bill it wanted. And that bill is very nearly the only bird in the game bag.

Other Editors Say Age Of Lawsuits

(Washington Daily News)

Everyday when we pick up a newspaper somebody is suing somebody else and so often for the most unusual and most unbelievable reasons possible.

We are living truly in an age when the attitude so often appears to be "if you don't like it, then sue." And we are having lawsuits all over the nation in matters which would have been unheard of a generation or two ago.

If a teacher spans a child, there is a criminal action and there is liable to be a civil action forthcoming. If a professor is released from his contract he immediately enters a lawsuit. If a person enters a store and stubs his toe, the store is the defendant in an upcoming lawsuit.

If a worker is fired, there might well be an upcoming suit in which the worker asks for back pay, reinstatement, and punitive damages.

If there is an auto wreck, somehow we seem to have lost out on the art of peaceful settlement. The thing to do is to enter a lawsuit and make some big charges.

A professional athlete under contract enters suit because the club owner will not renegotiate that already signed contract. Right now the professional baseball umpires, not satisfied with their contract which apparently was signed in good faith, are talking about entering suit.

We are suing all over the place and so many of the suits are so ridiculous from the outset that straight thinking people who want to live in peace and goodwill hardly know what to do or where to turn.

One better be so very careful today. One little mistake could mean a lawsuit. And it seems that there are always lawyers available to enter any type of lawsuit that one wishes to enter. It is just unbelievable.

We were told about the fellow who is almost a professional "suer". And it was said that he had sued just about everybody around. And in conversation he supposedly said "well you will be surprised how many people will pay off rather than go to court to fight a case." And we suspect that a lot of good people might settle some action for a few hundred dollars rather than go to court and fight for the justice, the truth, the decency, and the self-respect that ought to prevail. Somewhere in this country one day there might rise up someone with strength and leadership enough to straighten out our people and our land.

It could happen, and it could be that we shall lose some freedom and gain some security. The fears we have are over what the net result might be.

TAXPAYERS' REVOLT

Momentum Still Building

By Joseph F. Baldacchino, Jr.

In the wake of the dramatic acceptance by California voters of the Proposition 13 initiative to slash property taxes, some public officials around the country predicted that the fallout would be slight outside the Golden State. As the New York Times reported, these officials argued that "California's situation is a special case because of a blend of very high property taxes, a bulging state surplus, and the availability of the initiative process, which is open to voters in only 18 states." President Carter himself expressed this view.

But what these politicians apparently didn't know — or, more likely preferred not to face — was that the tax-limitation movement was already a national force long before the June 6 California vote. Indeed, it had scored its first victory fully 3 months earlier on March 7 when Tennessee voters gave 2-to-1 approval to a constitutional amendment limiting the "rate of growth" of that state's spending to the "estimated rate of growth of the state's economy."

Actually, the origins of the tax-limitation struggle date back at least to 1973. In that year, then Gov. Ronald Reagan almost succeeded in getting passage of Proposition 1, an amendment that would have placed limits on all taxes in California, not just the property tax.

Though that initial effort failed (with 46 percent of the vote), its supporters — led by Lewis K. Uhler, who as chairman of Reagan's Tax Reduction Force had spearheaded the California drive — kept right on working to enact similar amendments elsewhere. Writing in Human Events in April 1974, for example, "Uhler was able to cite tax-limitation activities that were already proceeding in at least eight different states. He founded the National Tax Limitation Committee at about this time to help promote such efforts nationwide. But such efforts, though serious, were hampered by a near-total blackout of media attention. Even the March 1978 triumph in Tennessee, which in retrospect must be considered a major landmark, (Continued on page 5)

Strength For Today

A PHILOSOPHER ON RELIGION

The eighteenth century French philosopher, Voltaire, speaking for himself and fellow philosophers, once said, "We have never cared to enlighten cobblers and maidservants. That is the work of apostles."

This statement eloquently explains why philosophy has remained the interest of only a small number of scholars through the centuries. Religion, on the other hand, has changed the lives of hundreds of millions, and the Bible is infinitely better known than all the works of philosophy put together.

Christianity's interest has always been in cobblers and maidservants, in the common variety of folk among whom most of us find our classification. No person was too humble for Jesus to reach down and touch during his earthly ministry. And no one today is so insignificant that the goodness of God is denied him.

"Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden" said Jesus, "and I will give you rest."

Public Baths Decline

By CHIKAKO YATABE
 Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — Affluence and changing lifestyles seem to be sending another Japanese tradition down the drain — the public bath.

Many would lament the passing of what for generations has been a centerpiece of social activity and a symbol of togetherness in these islands. But the latest statistics show that in Tokyo alone, 248 public bath houses have closed down since 1968.

While 2,400 remain in the city, a number are hanging on only through side activities such as coin laundries or through the loyalty of longtime customers. And the cause behind their disappearance — rapid growth of modern apartments with private baths — continues to grow.

It is part of a trend in which reinforced concrete has put the stamp of anonymity on many of Japan's cities, and individualism is taking over increasingly from the old ways of doing things in a group.

The sento — "money bath" in Japanese — dates back more than six centuries. In earlier days, men and women used the same facility without the barrier of modesty, false or otherwise. Outside influences and changing times brought an end to that, and today mixed bathing is found only in a few remote hot springs resorts.

The baths provide two huge tubs, one containing hot water and the other hotter, near scalding, to meet individual desires.

There is space outside the tubs where taps provide water for actual soaping and washing and rinsing off. This is never done in the tub itself, which is only for soaking and relaxing.

Like everything else, the cost of the public bath has gone up. Today it costs the equivalent of about 80 cents. Ten years ago it cost about 8 cents.

But there is more to the public bath tradition than just a place to become clean. It has been a place where people meet to discuss the day's happenings, gossip about neighbors while scrubbing another's back, and share the feeling of being

40 Years Ago Today

September 14, 1938

Work on the $334,000 building improvement program at East Carolina Teachers College is scheduled to get underway some time in the immediate future.

It was announced from the college today that the new classroom building costing $300,000 will be built on a site between the present science building and the infirmary.

Architect's plans call for a three-story structure. Science, industrial arts and home economics departments, including a home economics practice house and nursery, will be located in the building.

When completed, the building is slated to be one of the most modernistic and up-to-date buildings on the college campus. The building is expected to aid considerably in taking care of the increased class load in these divisions.

Economist Sees 'Blah' Outlook

By JOHN CUNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — The reelection hopes of President Carter won't get much help from the economy, if the expectations of a former economic adviser are fulfilled.

He termed the economic outlook for the next 18 to 24 months "blah," the translation of which means a weak economy and continued inflation and, sadly, little that can be done about it.

"There are no quick solutions," said Professor Lawrence R. Klein.

The most encouraging news offered by Klein, who served as the principal economic brain in the Carter election campaign, is that we aren't likely to have a recession.

While he conceded that a weak economy might serve as a partial corrective for recent excesses, his analysis isn't likely to inspire much enthusiasm for the administration's economic management.

Klein's views were made in conjunction with the release today of the quarterly projections of Wharton Econometric Forecasting Associates, an organization owned by the University of Pennsylvania.

In it, Klein and his associates, F. Gerard Adams and Richard M. Young, describe a future economy of 7 percent to 8 percent inflation, with some rise in the jobless rate starting in the last half of 1979.

Faced with a drab economy, previous administrations have attempted to quicken the pace of activity before election time, even at the risk of creating maladjustments to be dealt with later.

The Wharton Associates comment that the Carter administration isn't likely to react passively to the political aspects of continued inflation and unemployment, but warn that its options are limited.

They maintain that "solutions to the inflation problem seem to be restricted to a major and extended recession or a long period of slow growth supplemented by inducements to increased productivity."

Said Klein: "There are no quick solutions." The Wharton forecast assumes tax cuts of about $15 billion in both 1979 and 1980. But even when alternatives are worked into the computer analysis, the inflation rate through 1980 varies only minutely.

A greater tax cut, such as advocated by Rep. Jack

Kemp, R.N.Y. and Sen. William Roth, R.Del., would spur an advance in total output during 1978 and 1979, for example, but might still leave inflation near 7 percent.

That, at least, is the conclusion of the Wharton economists, who see the administration with almost no soundly based alternatives that might quickly boost its public image.

That image has become pitted and stained in recent months as retail prices soared and unemployment, though improved over a year ago, still remaining near 6 percent.

The question implicit in the Wharton forecast is whether the president can accept what it suggests is the sound course, that is, to permit time and restraint gradually to heal the economic wounds.

Open House Sept. 18 At Local ESC Office

An open house for employers in the Greenville area is being held from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. on Monday, Sept. 18 by the Employment Security Commission office. The office is located at 3101 Bismarck (corner of Bismarck and Dexter Streets).

Jim Hannan, manager of the local ESC office, says "this is a follow-up session on the meeting we had with various employers in the county earlier this year."

"At that time," Hannan added, "we asked employers what we as an employment agency were doing right, and what wrong. It was a fruitful session, and we feel that what we were told by local employers at that time has made a tremendous difference in our effort to make more work placements."

After that session, Hannan commented, "we saw our placement rate rise spectacularly. For example, we have placed 1,028 monthly in work for a one-month period, whereas for years 50 a month was considered average."

Hannan said that of the 1,028 placed, "325 were put to work in various industrial firms, the rest were agricultural workers."

All employers in the area, Hannan noted, are encouraged to come by for Monday's open house. "We hope to see employers who have not worked with us as well as those who regularly make use of our service."

Among activities planned for Monday are demonstrations of services available at ESC, and the manner in which the office administers these services, to include a typical session of job counseling, a job interview, as well as information on new employment insurance programs and how it benefits both employer and employee.

went virtually unheralded at the time.

Of course Proposition 13 was a horse of a different color. When citizens of the nation's most populous state voted to diminish their property taxes by nearly two-thirds, ignoring predictions of disaster from nearly every major state office holder in the process, that was simply too big to overlook.

And so, five years after the first shots were fired, the major news outlets finally discovered the tax revolt. The resulting publicity has spurred the movement beyond its wildest dreams. In fact, new groups have been springing up so quickly that it's impossible to keep track of them all.

In at least five states, amendments in one form or another have qualified for inclusion on this year's November ballot. In Colorado, a group known as Colorado Spending Limitation, Inc., is promoting a ceiling on state spending. Oregon and Idaho voters will decide on property-tax cuts similar to Proposition 13. And in Arizona and Michigan, amendments limiting overall tax levies will be up for approval. A Proposition-13-type initiative may also qualify for the Michigan ballot.

Efforts are also progressing in other states. In Massachusetts, for instance, the legislature overwhelmingly approved an amendment proposal in late June. This was the first of two required legislative approvals. If it passes again next year, the amendment will be placed before Bay State voters in 1980. Meanwhile, in Ohio a petition drive is being organized to put such a proposal on the November '79 ballot. And in Maryland, which does not have the initiative process, a group known as Limit has polled all candidates for state office on the tax-limitation issue and plans to publicize each one's position in paid advertisements prior to this year's election. A spokesman said response to the poll "has been overwhelmingly favorable so far, including a personal letter from Maryland's Acting Governor, Blair Lee, agreeing to sponsor the amendment to limit state spending."

Together, the NTLC reports some form of activity in at least 33 states with the momentum still building. The politicians, predictably enough, are getting the message. Speaking before the recent National Governors' Conference, Gov. Jerry Brown (D-Calif) termed the enthusiasm for tax cuts an "incredible phenomenon", adding that unless the federal government takes heed, "we could face the prospect of a second American Revolution in our time."

Brown certainly got the message. Prior to June 6 he was Proposition 13's most prominent detractor. Now he calls himself a "born-again tax cutter."

was to be the big one. It cleared the House by nearly a hundred votes, but it died in the Senate. Union leaders were certain they could get a common site picketing bill — after all, common site picketing had passed both Houses in the 94th Congress. This time the bill lost in the House; and a dozen Democrats who voted against it were Democrats who had accepted labor's money in their campaigns.

Labor has lost on consumer protection, on cargo preference, on the Humphrey-Hawkins bill, on repeal of the Hatch Act, on national health insurance. Thanks to the charm and grace of George Meany, the AFL-CIO has achieved full-blown alienation from the White House. In the public opinion polls, labor ranks behind even lawyers, ad men and the Congress in public esteem.

As it goes in Washington, so it goes abroad in the land. In 1967, unions won 59 percent of the elections sanctioned by the NLRB. Last year, they won only 46 percent. An even more disturbing statistic: In 849 decertification elections last year, unions won the right of continued representation barely 200 times. Less than one-fourth of the nation's labor force is unionized, and that feeble percentage dwindles as more women and young people come on the line.

Why have these things happened? Sure, energetic business lobbying is a factor, but it is the least of the factors. The people look about them and what is the image they see of labor? Striking police and firemen in Memphis, striking teachers in New Orleans, everywhere a contempt for the public interest. The people see a handful of willful truck drivers preventing the publication of great newspapers. The people understand the bully-boy coercion of the union shop, and the people resent it. Even a majority of union members oppose this coercion. The image could be much expanded: rigged elections, mismanaged pension funds, ties to organized crime.

In some ways, this is a mirror-house image, distorting the deserved gains that unions have won for their members. The image obscures the good and honest unions, but this is the consequence of labor's own lousy public relations. It will take a lot of political Lifebuoy to wash away the accumulated stains.

Housing Mart Is Promising

Interstate Securities Commission

Housing starts held above a two million annual rate in 1973-74, but collapsed at one point to less than one million starts annually. A large inventory of unsold homes prevented a quick recovery from the 1974-75 recession, and not until 1977 did housing starts again hit the two million annual rate.

Starts dropped sharply in the first two months of the current year due to severe weather, but they have since held above the two million rate. Considering the cost of new homes, the large number of homes built in the last three years, and the cost of financing the purchase, it may seem surprising that housing continues strong.

A simple regulatory change effective in June expanded funds for permitting mortgage lending by savings and loan associates to offer interest rates on savings that are competitive with money market instruments. An S and L, may now issue Money Market Certificates maturing in 182 days, paying interest equal to that of the last sale of six month Treasury bills plus 1/4 percent.

Housing starts typically slow late in an economic recovery as interest rates push higher. When interest rates on short term securities exceed those being paid by the S and L, money flows out of the S and L into the higher yielding instrument. Money becomes tighter and more expensive, and housing starts subsequently decline.

If this recovery were typical, money would currently be moving out of the S and L's since short term rates are still rising. The new Money Market Certificates, however, have caused a net inflow of money into the S and L's about double the rate of the first half of this year. Mortgage rates are at the highest levels in history, but lending activities are not being reduced since funds are plentiful. The housing market thus continues strong and could prolong the economic recovery.

together that has been important to the Japanese.

The density of population in Japan's major urban areas — 47 million people, or almost 42 percent of the total, live within a 30 mile radius of Tokyo, Osaka and Nagoya — has helped keep the public bath in business.

While Japan's economy has boomed, housing has lagged. Millions still live in tiny houses or apartments without individual baths or sewer connections.

In most new housing developments, a private bath is taken for granted. Many Japanese aspire to such living as soon as they have the means. An ambitious five-year plan calls for 8.6 million new housing units by 1980, miniature in size, astronomical in cost, but modern.

But those who still use the public bath because they have no choice are legion, and they can be seen regularly on the streets carrying their pans and towels for the day's bathing.

There also are those who do not look lightly on the passing of such institutions. Some have formed bath clubs to encourage the continuation of what they feel is one of the delights of Japanese life.

Budget-Balancers See Uphill Struggle

By W. DALE NELSON
 Associated Press Writer
 WASHINGTON (AP) — An organization that wants a balanced federal budget says it might present Congress next year with the first demand for a national convention to rewrite the Constitution backed by two-thirds of the states.

If it were held, such a convention would be the first since the Constitution was drafted in 1787, and some constitutional scholars fear it could turn into a no-holds-barred affair encompassing various efforts to alter the document that is the basis of U.S. government.

Officials of the National Taxpayers Union don't expect their demand for a constitutional convention to actually produce one, however, and the 10-year-old anti-tax organization isn't discouraged.

It says its real aim is to force Congress to act on its own, and it thinks Congress will indeed initiate a balanced budget amendment.

The Taxpayers Union wants an amendment requiring the government to balance its budget within four years of ratification — and to keep it balanced except in times of national emergency.

Amendments to the Constitution can be originated either by two-thirds vote of both houses of Congress or by a convention called by Congress after receiving applications from two-thirds of the states.

To go into effect, amendments must be ratified by three-fourths of state legislatures or state conventions. Congress decides which.

For all but one amendment, Congress has chosen legislative ratification. Repeal of prohibition was ratified by conventions.

Congress has received more than 300 applications for constitutional amendments, ranging from the first demand for a Bill of Rights in 1789 to recent proposals for world government and school prayer amendments — but none has had the backing of enough states.

The Taxpayers Union says chances are its request will be different. It now has approval of 22 of the 34 legislatures required. And, says the group's director, Charles S. Crawford, "It is quite possible that next year we will be able to get the necessary 12 states."

"We could, we could," adds Democratic State Sen. Jim Clark of Ellicott City, Md., who heads the Taxpayers Union lobbying effort. At any rate, he says, "we're going to get pretty close to it."

But, Clark notes, "I don't think Congress is going to let it go to a convention. I think they will go ahead and give us an amendment. They can control an amendment."

There is some precedent for his view. In 1912, when 30 states asked for conventions to get direct election of senators, Congress proposed such an amendment. However, Congress did not act after 32 states asked for a convention on apportionment of state legislatures after the 1964 Supreme Court one-person, one-vote ruling.

Some legal experts argue that a convention, though called for a single issue, would be free to make an overall constitutional revision.

Professor Charles L. Black Jr. of Yale University Law School has said a constitutional convention could propose "such amendments as that convention decides to propose." He said the procedure should be used only "to take care of a general dissatisfaction with the national government, or a breakdown thereof."

A committee of the American Bar Association concluded in 1974, however, that a convention could be called for a specific purpose.

A bill designed to limit constitutional conventions to the purposes for which they are called was passed by the Senate in 1972, but died in the House Judiciary Committee.

The calling of a constitutional convention raises all kinds of questions, among them: How many years are allowed for persuading two-thirds of the legislatures to call for a convention? Is it mandatory for Congress to call a convention when it gets a request from enough states? Does Congress have the power to review the convention's work? Do the courts? Does the president have any role?

How are the delegates to the convention to be chosen?

"It raises a broad range of really frightening possibilities," said Nels Ackerson, chief counsel to the Senate subcommittee on the Constitution. "It's wide open."

Ackerson said that if applications from 34 states were received, their validity presumably would be debated in Congress and "the answers also would very likely be tested in the courts."

The first legislature to call for a convention on budget balancing was North Dakota's on March 11, 1975. Others are Alabama, Arizona, Colorado, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Kansas, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia and Wyoming.

The Wyoming and Colorado legislatures are among the four in which both houses are controlled by Republicans. Arizona, Kansas and North Dakota are among the 10 in which control is split. The others are controlled by Democrats, except for Nebraska's, which is non-partisan.

The proposal has drawn no organized national opposition, but Common Cause fought it in Colorado, saying more careful study was needed. Bruce Adams of the citizen lobby group said the national organization was considering whether to take a stand.

Dr. Koldjeski, A Fellow Of Academy

Helen D. Koldjeski, Ph. D., R. N. has been named a fellow of the American Academy of Nursing.

Dr. Koldjeski is one of 50 fellows named to the academy in recognition of "significant contributions to the nursing profession." She is assistant dean and director of graduate studies at the East Carolina School of Nursing here.

She has held major posts with the National Institute of Mental Health and is known for the research she has conducted on the need for psychiatric mental health nursing which served as a basis for innovative curricula now being taught. She developed models for community health nursing in rural and semi-urban communities. One nursing expert has said that an upcoming book by Dr. Koldjeski "has the potential of becoming a breakthrough for the profession in general." It has to do with social-psychological strategies for bringing about changes in the system within which nurses practice and includes curriculum models based on general system theory.

Dr. Koldjeski received her Ph. D. in sociology with a major in social psychology behavior from Indiana University Medical Center in Indianapolis.

SAT Scores...

decline of SAT scores achieved by students in recent years.

"The decline has been national, and was first noted in 1962," Jacobs said. For the 16-year period since that date, Jacobs said the drop had reached "roughly a decline of 31 points on the verbal portion of the test, and about 40 points on the math portion."

The SAT, he added, "is the same for all students. There are no regional, state or national tests. It is the same standard for all students."

Jacobs, whose chief role is interpreting and evaluating SAT results achieved, particularly for North Carolina students, attributes the decline to two general factors. The first factor is attributable to the different kind of students taking the test in recent years compared to earlier years. The big change has been that essentially more females and more from minority groups have been taking the test.

"The second factor which can be attributed to a curious mixture of many factors, involves such things as students growing up spending more time watching television and less time reading, changes in family life structure, changes in curriculum grading patterns, and the impact of traumatic episodes of the late 60's and early 70's."

"All these," Jacobs commented, "contributed to the consistent pattern of falling scores."

Jacobs reported that need for nearby airport facilities where, "you can land an industrial jet at. If you don't have an airport reasonably close, you've got a problem," he pointed out.

The Commerce secretary noted that one of the State's most attractive features is the right-to-work law which has resulted in North Carolina having the smallest percentage of work stoppage because of strikes, in the United States.

Bradshaw, who pointed to the state's seven year transportation plan as an important factor in attracting industrial prospects, said the help received from local area citizens in identifying priorities in highway construction and other transportation needs has been an important factor in the orderly development of transportation in the state.

He noted workers need the "ability to get to and from work sites," and pointed out that the State may be able to help locally by providing access roads to industrial sites.

Prior to the panel discussion, Bradshaw said that a consultants report on the proposed four-laning of U.S. 264 from Wilson to Greenville should be in the hands of the Department of Transportation by the first of October. He noted that following a review of the report by DOT planners and U.S. highway officials, public hearings will be held in Wilson and in Greenville on the design and location for the project.

Bradshaw noted that the public hearings should be held on U.S. 264 about the first of November.

Other speakers on this morning's program included W. A. Greene, director of the State Ports Authority and Everett Knight, a consultant with the Department of Commerce.

Died Under A Load Of Wood

SWANNANOVA, N.C. (AP)—A Black Mountain man was killed Wednesday when a load of wood crashed down upon him at the Drymatic Lumber Co. here.

The dead worker was identified as Steven Bryan Gryder. He was killed instantly.

Authorities said Gryder went to unlatch a door to a drying shed that housed pallets of lumber stacked about 22 feet high.

Park Conduct...

Donald Ensley reported on the formation, goals and objectives of the Greenville Tennis Association, which currently numbers 80 members from among the black community and encompasses individual youths, students, and adults as well as families.

Midgette, principal spokesman for the association, stressed that the commitment of the association is not to the formation of a group of black tennis players per se, but rather "to introduce young black people to tennis, kids who otherwise would not have an opportunity to actively take part in learning to play tennis."

"We like to think of ourselves as a complement to the Greenville Tennis Club," Midgette added, "and like them, to support the interest of tennis throughout Greenville."

A non-profit organization, the association has an annual fee of $5 membership per individual, $10 family, to help provide for the cost of tennis equipment.

Lee spoke of the continued growing interest in tennis in recent years, and noted that the concept of the department envisages Evans Park as "the tennis center of Greenville. We're getting ready to add six to eight more tennis courts at Evans Park, as well two courts at West Greenville."

Lee, cautioning that because of federal policies regarding the existence of segregated groups, said that "we have to watch for pitfalls, how to differentiate between what appears to be separate racial groups and the reality of what is really the basic situation in Greenville because of population distributions."

Hooks further clarified the "reality of the situation" idea by saying "what we have are two groups organized as non-profit organizations, and as long as we accord each group equal use of facilities, there should be no question of violating regulations that might affect federal funding."

All commission members, as well as the trio representing the association, concurred in agreeing that the main thrust of the two tennis groups will hopefully lead to an eventual overall program of tennis activities without regard to racial overtones.

Reporting on the department's 1978 fall program, Assistant Director of Recreation Charles Vincent noted that the soccer program for young people "is the fastest growing of all our sports programs. We first began with 20 players, then moved to 60, on to 160, and today the number is 189."

Vincent said that "we will have to limit the program to 200, that is the most we can possibly handle." The soccer program in Greenville at this time is geared to boys and girls in grades one through eight.

Other new activities include bowling and soccer for handicapped persons, and a planned canoeing and camping trip for two groups of young handicapped persons — one group for the weekend of Oct. 7, another for the weekend of Oct. 14. "We are taking special precautions," Vincent noted. "There will be two counselors for each kid as well as others, mostly staff members, to assist."

Also new is a class in creative dance movements to be taught by Rita Nobles, and the probability of a class in disco dancing.

In a final action Wednesday night, commission members approved setting the second Wednesday of each month as the regular monthly meeting date of the commission.

By KEITH MILLS Reflector Staff Writer

During its Tuesday meeting, the Greenville Utilities Commission authorized Director Charles Horne to apply for a 25 per cent state grant to support the cost of a $162,000 water main extension project along Allen Road (SR1203).

The commission also approved the transfer of retained earnings in the gas fund, totaling $120,000, into the water projects fund to cover GUC's share of the cost of the project.

In other action, the board approved the June 30, 1978, audit report submitted by Don Parrott of John C. Proctor Co., certified public accountants.

The combined balance sheet for all funds shows current assets totaling $7,842,853.91, restricted assets, $832,922, fixed assets, $30,943,067.99, for total assets of $39,618,843.90; total liabilities $6,960,192.03, retained earnings, $27,748,164.96, for total liabilities and retained earnings of $39,618,843.90.

In a note accompanying the financial statements, the report says the Greenville Utilities Commission billed $326,013 more in fuel charges and $24,535.38 in gas surcharges than was charged GUC by VEP-CO. The overbilling, which totals $350,548.38, will be returned to Greenville Utilities' customers through reduced rates during the next fiscal year.

Director Horne told the commission that based on the latest filing with the state utilities commission GUC's natural gas will increase approximately 29 cents per million cubic feet for all September gas to a total of $2.76 per million cubic feet.

"Our present retail rates are $2.81 for interruptible gas and $3.45 for all firm gas," he said. "I would recommend, effective with all billings on or after September 15, 1978, our retail rates be adjusted as follows: interruptible gas, $2.96 per million cubic feet and firm gas $3.75 per million cubic feet."

Horne said the firm gas price is necessary to meet the projected budget for 1978-79. The commission approved the rate increase.

The board also approved additions to GUC's water and sewer extension policy, requiring main fees to apply to the full front footage of property to be served, and the main fee for single family residences on large, multi-acre, undeveloped parcels of land will be charged a front footage of 150 feet, or the front footage as currently developed, whichever is greater.

In other action, the commissioners approved the transfer of retained earnings totaling $55,000 to cover the cost of a preliminary design of a water treatment plant. According to Horne, proceeding with a preliminary design would expedite future construction.

A workshop involving GUC and the City Council to discuss the need for water, sewer and electric bonds will be held at 7:30 p.m. September 25.

Bids approved by the commission include: 25-75 KVA pad-mount transformers, Eastern Electric Supply, Inc., $20,950; 40,000 feet of 2/0 TPX cable, Rigby Electric Supply Co., $15,832.40; 40,000 feet of 4/0 TPX cable, Rigby Electric Supply Co., $22,098.80; 10,000 feet TPX cable, Rigby Electric Supply Co., $8,831; 75,000 feet 1/0 15 KV cable, Westinghouse Electric Supply Co., $31,762.50; 42 wood transmission poles, Escambia, $18,115.80; 58,560 pounds 1272 MCM conductors, $36,436.03; 65 115 KV insulators, Westinghouse Electric Supply Co., $13,477.75.

Atlanta Is Constructing Big New Airport Complex

UNDERGROUND ATLANTA AIRPORT — Engineers measure points along the bed of the "People Mover" which will connect the new terminal of the Atlanta Airport by a minirail to the four concourses from which passengers will board planes. At left center is an emergency bypass. (AP Laserphoto)

By JOHN CARVALHO
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — One day three years from now, an airliner arriving at the Atlanta airport will make an historic turn and inaugurate a new Central Passenger Terminal Complex.

"There will be no gradual phasing in," said Atlanta Department of Aviation Administrative Assistant John Braden. "One plane will be flying in to the old complex, and the next will be directed to the new complex."

Construction is about 30 percent completed, on schedule for the completion date of Jan. 1, 1981, according to Braden.

The new complex will accommodate 135 airplanes at once, and 60 million passengers per year, compared to the present terminal's capacity of 104 airplanes and average of 30 million passengers per year, which puts it second to Chicago's O'Hare Airport among busy airports in the world.

But the numbers are not the only awesome aspect of the "midfield expansion." The complex's futuristic design, encompassing underground walkways, computerized peplemovers and 1,000-foot concourses, seems equally impressive.

A $300 million bond issue is paying for the project. Braden said leases to airlines will provide Atlanta with the funds to retire the bonds at low interest, with no cost to the taxpayer.

The concrete used in paving the concourse taxiways is enough to pave 100 miles of interstate highway, or build seven 30-story office buildings the size of one city block, Braden said.

But the typical air passenger will not notice the concrete, mainly because he'll be traveling under it when going from the main terminal to the boarding gates.

A mile-long "People Mover" Mall is being built to connect the terminal with the four concourses from which passengers will board their planes. The mall is an elaborate tunnel which intersects the four 1,000-foot concourses where planes are parked.

Travelers will have three options: they can walk, board a moving sidewalk or ride an automated guideway transit mini-rail system.

Braden said the mini-rail, designed by Westinghouse, will be controlled by computer. There are no engineers. "Westinghouse guarantees that the system will have more than 99 percent availability," Braden said. "No car will be down for more than three minutes."

Should a breakdown occur, a computer will tell repairmen where the malfunction is located, and repairs usually will only involve replacing a control panel within the car.

Westinghouse engineers have promised that weary air travelers will not have to wait more than 103 seconds for the next train to arrive.

The more energetic commuter may want to walk from one concourse to the next, but it would entail a hefty hike. Braden said there is enough room between each concourse to park a Boeing 747 jumbo-jet on each side and still have enough room for two 747s to taxi, through side by side.

An escalator leads from the underground pedestrian malls to the second level concourses. At the top of each escalator is a flight information desk, a welcome feature since the concourses are 1,000 feet long.

The terminal itself will consist of two rectangular buildings connected by a walkway. Braden said the two buildings will provide twice as much curb space as the present single-building terminal.

The area of the concourses will be greater than that of the main terminal, which is unusual. But that's because 72 percent of the passengers arriving at the Atlanta airport are changing planes. Parking space also will be increased. Braden said the new terminal will have immediate parking space for 8,700 cars, and eventually will be able to accommodate 12,000 cars, double the present capacity.

A causeway will connect the new terminal with the interstate highway, and plans call for a Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit System rail station at the airport, which Braden said would make Hartsfield the only airport to have immediate access to a rapid rail system.

But for now, the new terminal is far from being ready to accept passengers. The framework of the two terminal buildings is just beginning to rise. The two concourses nearer the terminal are taking shape, with one, Concourse A, nearing completion. The taxiways surrounding the concourses are completed.

All this construction work currently is proceeding with "zero" disruption of airport business, Braden said.

Skyjacker Is Sentenced

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — A Wilmington man, who was convicted Wednesday of hijacking a Piedmont airliner in January, was sentenced to 50 years in prison, but will serve 35.

U.S. District Judge John D. Larkins Jr. ordered Sam Dawkins Jr., 49, to serve a 35-year term for air piracy and a 15-year term for interfering with a flight crew concurrently.

A jury of eight women and four men took 13 minutes to find him guilty of both charges and another 36 minutes to reject a defense argument that Dawkins was temporarily insane at the time of the hijacking.

The prosecution told the jury that intoxication should not be accepted as an excuse for hijacking a plane. He said the act endangered the lives of passengers aboard the airliner.

The maximum penalties are life imprisonment for air piracy and 20 years for interfering with a flight crew.

Dawkins was reported to have been drinking the night of Jan. 28, when he boarded a Piedmont plane in Greensboro and, pretending he had a gun in his coat pocket, ordered the pilot to fly to Havana, Cuba.

Witnesses said Dawkins threatened to kill the crew of the Cincinnati-to-Wilmington flight unless it was diverted to Cuba.

Urge Return Of Picasso Work

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is urging that Pablo Picasso's anti-war masterpiece, "Guernica," be returned quickly to Spain, but the New York museum which has the huge painting says the transfer is still a year or two away.

Picasso specified in his will that the painting should be given to the Spanish people after true democratic rule was restored in that nation, and the Museum of Modern Art says the final decision is up to Picasso's French lawyer.

Mystery In Those Ruts

UNIONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — It's all very strange, and Dillard Sizemore has no explanation for it. But he said he beats anything he's ever run across before.

Last Thursday morning Sizemore found long, deep ruts crisscrossing his driveway, yard and land. It was the second time in less than a week that he found the mysterious triangular slices cut out of the earth.

"There's nothing but those marks of whatever it is," he said. "No human tracks. No animal tracks, not even in the dew."

"I have no idea who or what did this," he said. "Beats anything I ever heard tell of."

Sizemore doesn't think the ruts are a prankster's trick. "There ain't no human being who's going to come out here at four in the morning and do this over 40 acres and not leave a mark on the ground," he said.

The goings-on haven't added to the peace and security of Sizemore and his family. He isn't dismissing the possibilities of what they might either.

"If that thing had come in the front door, I'd have probably torn down the back door getting out," he said, pointing out a rut that runs straight at the front door.

Although Sizemore isn't one to believe in UFOs, he said the idea of extraterrestrial visitors has crossed his mind.

After each set of tracks appeared, Sizemore called the Union County Sheriff's Department. The deputies, however, were unable to offer any explanation.

Discrepancies In Oswald Story

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Assassinations Committee is challenging Lee Harvey Oswald's widow to further explain why she has changed parts of her story since talking with investigators in the days following President John F. Kennedy's murder.

Marina Oswald Porter, who faces a round of cross-examination as she testifies before the committee for a second day today, told the committee Wednesday that differences in her accounts stemmed from her fright and confusion after the assassination.

She declined Wednesday to say whether she believes Oswald killed Kennedy, but acknowledged she "felt very uneasy" at the time because she thought he might be involved.

"It crossed my mind," she said under questioning. "I hoped Lee was not involved."

Rep. Richardson Preyer, D-N.C., asked her if, in hindsight, she could say whether Oswald did it.

"I don't know if I am qualified to make statements like that because I knew one side of Lee but I did not know his whole character," she replied.

Asked if Oswald protested his innocence during her one meeting with him at the Dallas jail after the assassination, Mrs. Porter said, "He never told me: 'I am innocent.'"

"Did he look calm?" she was asked.

"He looked scared," she said.

As the questioning ended Wednesday, some committee members were disturbed by discrepancies between some of the details of her current testimony and what she told FBI and Secret Service investigators in the days after her husband was arrested for Kennedy's assassination and then was slain himself by Jack Ruby.

One point involved the events of September 1963 when Oswald planned a trip to the Cuban embassy in Mexico City seeking a visa to Cuba.

"I was very upset about it," she recalled. "I did not know if I would ever see him again. I was responsible for one child, and another was on the way. I was quite lost."

Preyer noted that she had told FBI agents after the assassination that Oswald had told her nothing of his plans to go to Mexico City.

She said she told that story to the FBI because she was trying to protect herself and her husband.

She said she was frightened, confused, embarrassed and fearful that she, too, would be prosecuted "for being his wife." She also said her emotional state caused lapses in memory.

At 37, Mrs. Porter seemed confident Wednesday, composed, thoroughly Americanized and speaking English with only a slight accent — far different from the 22-year-old woman who spoke almost no English and was still struggling with the ways of a strange land that Nov. 22, 1963, when Kennedy was shot.

Two years after the assassination, she married Kenneth Porter, a Dallas factory foreman. They now live near Dallas with their son Mark and the Oswald daughters, June Lee and Rachel.

Crime Control Hearing Held Here Yesterday

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Phil Carlton, Secretary of the North Carolina Department of Crime Control and Public Safety presided at a public hearing here Wednesday morning designed to give area residents an opportunity to voice their ideas and suggestions on how to strengthen the state's criminal laws and criminal justice system.

Mrs. Betty Speir of Bethel, chairman of the Pitt County Democratic Executive Committee and a member of the Governor's Crime Commission also attended the session.

"We're here to listen," Carlton said, "not to make speeches," as he called for comments on laws, courts, law enforcement, the correctional system, and the juvenile justice system.

Carlton noted that ideas gathered in 36 similar hearings across the state will be compiled into a comprehensive crime control report for the Governor, who in turn will use the information as the basis for his legislative package to the 1979 General Assembly.

A dozen individuals presented ideas at the morning session. They ranged from suggestions to include more volunteers in programs of assistance for prison inmates, establishment of halfway houses and improved correctional methods, to teaching law to students in the public schools, scheduling court cases in a manner that will require law enforcement officers to spend less time waiting in court, and having more uniform sentencing for persons convicted of similar crimes across the state. Carlton noted that persons wishing to make suggestions can do so by writing his office in Raleigh, giving the suggestions to Mrs. Speir, or handing their suggestions to any State law enforcement officer for forwarding to Raleigh.

Nine Named Semifinalists In Nat'l Merit Program

Eight seniors from Rose High and one from D. H. Conley have been named semifinalists in the 24th annual National Merit Scholarship program.

The eight from Rose — Thomas Chenier, Rebecca Dixon, Caren Hix, Brantley Jolly, Jeen Kim, Candace Martin, Stephen Pierce, and Susan Tucker, and the Conley senior, Warren Franke — are among the 15,000 who have achieved semifinal status nationally and are thereby eligible to continue in the competition for about 4,100 Merit Scholarships to be awarded in the spring of 1979.

These 15,000 are the highest-scoring students from over one million from 18,000 high schools in every state who entered the 1979 program by taking the 1977 Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test given during their junior year in school.

A brief summary of principal activities of each of the nine follows:

D. H. Conley High School
— Warren D. Franke, the county school system semifinalist, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Franke of Winterville. President of the Conley Chapter of the National Honor Society, Franke is also a member of the Math Club and last year belonged to the Pep Club. He has worked with football teams as trainer, and was a marshal. A member of Winterville Christian Church, where he is a junior deacon, Franke likes constructing models of military equipment. He hopes to study at ECU and will probably major in physical fitness with emphasis on sports medicine.

J. H. Rose High School
— Thomas C. Chenier attended Governor's School this past summer and was co-editor of the school's yearbook. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Chenier, he is a member of the Student Government Association, and of the Chess, Math, and Spanish Clubs. He is also co-editor of VISA, the yearbook, and is a member of the Catholic Youth Organization. Interested in political science and math, he plans to major in either or both. Following political events, bicycling, and listening to music are his favorite pastimes.

— Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin H. Dixon, Jr., Rebecca Dixon is secretary of the National Honor Society chapter at Rose and is active in Youth Fellowship at Oakmont Baptist Church. She was a marshal for the 1978 graduation, a mat-maid for the wrestling team, and a member of the girl's tract team. She is active in the Anchor Club, the Monogram Club and the Keywantes.

— Caren Hix, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James Hix, is planning a career in medical research. Her hobbies include playing the flute, swimming, and reading. She is a member of the National Honor Society, the Rose High Marching Band, and as a junior was a member of the Girl's Track Team. She was also a marshal, and attended the 1978 N. C. Junior Science and Humanities Symposium.

— Brantley T. Jolly, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hayes, is vice-president of the local chapter of the National Honor Society and was head marshal last year. He is also vice-president of the Key Club, president of the Monogram Club, and parliamentarian for the Student Government Association. Jolly holds two letters in golf, and two

American Women Back Test Tube Baby Plan

NEW YORK (AP) — A national survey shows that 85 percent of American women polled believe the test-tube method of artificial fertilization should be available to married couples who cannot have children naturally.

The survey of 1,501 American women ages 18 and older, commissioned by Parents magazine and released Wednesday, also found that "with the group that really counts — women of childbearing age — a decisive majority of 58 percent would consider using the method."

The study was conducted by pollster Louis Harris between Aug. 4 and Aug. 6, a week and a half after Leslie Brown gave birth to the first test tube baby on July 25 in England.

It revealed that at the same time 63 percent would prohibit the procedure until further testing had determined the impact on birth defects. However, half the women also opposed federal funding for such research.

The "in vitro" (Latin for "in glass") procedure involves the mixing of a husband and wife's sperm and egg in a laboratory test tube to produce a developing embryo which would then be surgically implanted in the woman's uterus.

More than half — 52 percent — approved in general of the method, compared to 24 percent opposed and 24 percent unsure.

Those who disapproved said it was unnatural, dangerous or wrong for moral or religious reasons.

Parents magazine editor Elizabeth Crow said the survey was originally commissioned "because Parents (magazine) felt it was about time American women were asked how they felt about the procedure."

The poll's margin of error was plus or minus 3 percent.

According to the poll, part of the reason for support of the procedure was that 28 percent of those women questioned had experienced difficulty conceiving, and 20 percent said they had unsuccessfully tried to become pregnant for a year.

The survey revealed a tremendous desire for natural motherhood, to the extent that 49 percent of the women believed a married couple should be permitted to use sperm from another medically-approved man if the husband's sperm was inadequate for conception.

However, if given a choice, 57 percent would adopt a child if they could not conceive normally, 21 percent said they would use the test-tube method and 16 percent said they did not care which method was used.

Top Quality Of Season

FARMVILLE — According to Louis N. Williams, sales supervisor for the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade, Wednesday sales on the Farmville market contained some of the best quality tobacco of the season.

"Several piles of choice tobacco sold as high as $1.67 a pound and all were company purchases," Williams stated.

Volume of leaf grades continued to increase, with non-descript grades accounting for a small percent of sales. Stabilization receipts totaled .22 percent of gross sales, according to Williams.

The Farmville market sold 631,940 pounds Wednesday for $920,940, an average of $145.59 per 100 pounds. To date, the Farmville market has sold 15,855,494 pounds for $21,366,493, an average of $134.50 per hundredweight, compared to $114.46 last year.

Rodeo Cowboys Reluctant To Visit Doctor

By LASZLO K. DOMJAN
ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Rodeo cowboys, says a doctor, make poor patients.

They pay their bills promptly, but trying to corral them for treatment is difficult.

Dr. Bruce F. Claussen, who for 12 years has specialized in treating rodeo cowboys, describes his patients as stoic individuals who shrug off their injuries except in the most severe cases.

"The rodeo cowboy has no trainer or team doctor, and there is only a minimal amount of protective equipment available to him," Claussen said. "He takes his contusions, lacerations and fractures from one town to the next. Occasionally he seeks the competent advice of a sympathetic physician, but he may ignore that advice if he thinks he can win at the next rodeo."

The North Platte, Neb., physician presented a report on rodeo injuries at the annual convention here of the American Medical Association.

In addition to being an arena physician, Claussen served from 1968 to 1974 as chairman of the Buffalo Bill Rodeo in North Platte. He also has traveled to rodeos throughout the country.

"You might expect I'd have a full afternoon of going from one seriously injured cowboy to another," he said. "However, such is not the case.

"It is impossible for me to explain how man can avoid sustaining a severe injury when he is presented with some of the most impossible, death defying situations that I have ever witnessed."

He said the condition of the arena is probably most responsible for protecting the cowboy.

"The protective equipment of the rodeo cowboy is sparse," he said. "The ever present elastic wrap, various pads, chaps, gloves and homemade braces constitute the majority of paraphernalia that the cowboy will carry with him.

"A good soft arena with adequate organic matter will swallow up a cowboy when a horse falls on him. I have seen them crushed by a falling horse and get up with no significant injury."

He said rodeo producers ask for a soft arena if possible.

"However, I sometimes feel their concern is for their animal rather than for the cowboy who is on him."

Claussen said various animal protection organizations have worked with cowboys to improve the lot of animals used in rodeos.

"But," he said, "there have been few contributions to medical literature discussing the medical aspect of the competing rodeo cowboy."

Claussen said particular injuries can result from each of the five standard rodeo events — bareback riding, bronc riding, bull riding, calf roping and steer wrestling.

The bareback rider is most prone to upper extremity injuries such as dislocated shoulders, fractured clavicles and cervical strains. The bronc rider also may be a victim of upper extremity injuries, but he is more likely to suffer fractures of wrists, fingers and ankles.

Calf ropers are subject to ankle and foot problems.

"A loss of a digit is usually connected with the sport of team roping, in which the cowboy brings his rope around the saddle horn and is not quite quick enough to get his thumb or finger out of the way," Claussen said.

The steer wrestler, he said, "represents a collection of almost every knee injury described."

As for the bull rider, Claussen said: "Anything can and usually does happen to this courageous competitor. Crush injuries and facial injuries are not unusual."

Death in the rodeo arena is rare, he said. There usually are one or two fatalities a year.

animal to help his competitor win. I feel the sport of rodeo is unique in this partnership."

Claussen said the larger rodeos always have a doctor in attendance and all rodeos have at least one clown.

"More than one rider has had his life saved by the quick action of the clown in administering on-the-spot treatment," he said. "The rodeo clown is always moving and sometimes he is injured himself. I don't know of a clown who hasn't suffered a serious injury at some time in his career."

Claussen said because of the risk of injury, cowboys are willing to help their competitors.

"These men have amazing memories and they can tell you the good and bad aspects of almost any animal in most any major stock contractor's pen. This information is passed back and forth from year to year.

"It is not at all unusual to see a world champion help a rookie with his rigging and give him all the information he had on that

Flying Doctor Service Begun Fifty Years Ago

By BRIAN DEWHURST
MOUNT ISA, Australia (UPI) — When the Rev. John Flynn launched Australia's flying doctor service 50 years ago, a lot of people called him a lunatic.

How, they asked, could he take care of the sick in an area almost the size of the United States?

When Flynn, a Presbyterian missionary, first nurtured the idea shortly before World War I, he knew that only two doctors served an area of 124,274 square miles in Western Australia.

Another doctor took care of 497,000 square miles in the Northern Territory by himself.

Flynn figured that if inland Australia was ever to be populated, it needed families living on the great cattle ranches, some as big as European countries.

Flynn developed the idea of using Morse radio and airplanes to bring medical care to the people of the outback. His dream was to throw "a mantle of safety" around the rugged interior of Australia.

Flynn could not have foreseen that in 50 years it would grow into the vast operation that patrols the back country today.

Covering about 1.8 million square miles of some of the most desolate territory on earth, the Royal Flying Doctor Service has developed into a sprawling radio communication network that helped offset the outback's awesome loneliness.

South Australian Alfred Traeger bridged the communication barrier by developing a lightweight wireless that gave ranchers cheap and reliable radio contact with neighbors, who continued the relay to flying doctor bases.

The radio, which took over from Morse code keys, is powered by pumping a pair of bicycle pedals and can transmit a signal up to 300 miles.

On May 15, 1928, a crude signal was relayed to Flynn's Cloncurry base in western Queensland. Minutes later the doctor was airborne in a canvas-skinned DH-50 aircraft chartered from Queensland and Northern Territory Aerial Services, later to become Australia's national carrier Qantas.

With the plane, Flynn rescued a badly injured child and the world's first flying doctor service was born.

By 1934 the service, sponsored by the Presbyterian Church of Australia, had established 30 outposts equipped with transceivers.

Today, in its 50th year, the flying doctor service looks after more than 100,000 patients annually at homesteads, nursing posts, remote hospitals and missions.

There are 24 aircraft stationed at 13 regular bases throughout Australia, covering 75 percent of the Down Under continent.

Dr. Martha Baz is a young and attractive Sydney doctor who joined the service only a few months ago.

"What we are doing is bringing medical care and knowledge to the people in remote deserts and bushland," she said.

"There are planes constantly on patrol. If we are called to help someone who is sick or had an accident, the doctor can talk to his patient over the air, diagnose the injury and prepare a remedy to be administered on arrival.

"If the patient requires hospitalization he can be picked up and flown direct to the base hospital and treated by the doctor on the way."

And there's another side of the service that outback families appreciate.

The base radio stations also relay grocery lists and orders for machinery parts for delivery on the next plane.

Many outback farmers feel closer to their doctor and to each other than some city dwellers, even though they are hundreds of miles apart.

That is what Flynn set out to achieve.

Millions For A Disposal Site

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Michigan plans to build a disposal site for dangerous chemical wastes at a cost of $50 million to $100 million.

Officials of the state Department of Natural Resources said Tuesday that the facility would be the first state-owned project of its kind in the United States and that it was needed to handle the huge amount of toxic chemicals generated within the state.

The facility would include an incinerator and a clay-lined landfill for handling dangerous materials. It also would have waste treatment equipment so some chemicals could be reclaimed for reuse.

INTRODUCING ALL-AMERICAN SAVINGS. FINALLY, HIGH INTEREST FOR EVEN ONE DOLLAR.

Having to save up $500 or $1000 just to open a savings account is crazy. It's unfair. It's practically un-American.

So at Planters we're introducing a concept that could revolutionize American savings.

All-American Savings. With the minimum deposit at a real, honest-to-goodness minimum $1, it makes high interest truly affordable to all Americans. What's more, it lets you add any amount. Anytime.

It's what you'd expect from Planters. After all, we're the bank that still knows the value of a dollar.

Annual Interest Rate	Maturity	Minimum Deposit	Additional Deposit
5½%	3 months	$1	Anytime
6%	12 months	$1	Anytime
6½%	30 months	$1	Anytime

WE STILL KNOW THE VALUE OF YOUR DOLLAR.

PLANTERS NATIONAL BANK

"Just because other places demand big deposits doesn't mean Planters does. They think All Americans deserve interest as high as 5½%, 6, even 6½% for as little as one dollar."

Federal law and regulation prohibit the payment of a time deposit prior to maturity unless three months of the interest thereon is forfeited and interest on the amount withdrawn is reduced to the passbook rate.

Perry To Be Honored Friday

Friday, it's a special day for San Diego Padres' pitcher Gaylord Perry. It'll be his 40th birthday, and Padres' owner Ray Kroc is planning a little celebration. According to local reports, Kroc is flying the Perry family from Williamston to San Diego for Friday night's game against Houston. During the fifth inning, the game will be halted long enough for a rocking chair to be placed on the mound, and then presented to Perry. The Williamston ace is the oldest active pitcher in the National League, and currently has the best winning percentage in the league, with a 18-6 record. He is considered as one of the leading candidates for the Cy Young Award this year. Perry, however, will not be pitching in the game, but is due to go either on Saturday or Sunday against the Astros.

Hale's Season Is Frustrating

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Hale Irwin began today's Texas Open with $178,441 in 1978 winnings, making him sixth on the PGA money winning list. A good season, right? "Frustratingly good," said Irwin, who hasn't won a tournament since capturing last year's Texas Open. "Monetarily, it's been good, but in terms of victories, it hasn't been good," he said. "I've played well enough to win, but for one reason or another I haven't." "I noticed on my registration that they didn't give me any discount on strokes this year for being defending champion," he quipped. "It's an ego trip but it doesn't help that much." The $200,000 tournament is being played on the soggy, 6,325-yard Oak Hill Country Club course. Wednesday's program was called off after more than four inches of rain briefly flooded some fairways. Rose High School bids for a second straight football victory on their home turf Friday night, as the Rampants entertain unbeaten and unscored on Kinston.

The Vikings, in their two previous outings, recorded shutout wins, downing Northern Nash, 12-0, and Wilson Fike, 42-0. In both instances, the Vikes showed good passing attacks from their I-formation offense. That passing is expected to give the Rampants their stiffest test so far, and that's causing Coach Dave Bumgarner some worries.

The Rampants come into the game with a 1-1 record, having bounced back from their late 14-8 loss to Goldsboro to overcome New Bern last weekend, 31-13. "Although we missed a lot of line blocking, we had the holes available for our backs to get good yardage," Bumgarner said of the victory over the Bears. "We played good defense, but I'm still not pleased with the way the secondary is playing, and the way we're tackling."

One of the bright spots about the game was the fact that Rose was able to play a lot of people and find out what some of the younger, less experienced players were able to do.

"We did have one injury which hurt us," the coach said. "Calvin Whichard, who ran well when he was in the game," suffered a slight shoulder separation, and will be out of action for three weeks."

Bumgarner hopes for improved blocking in the line, and from the backs this week. One thing which helped last week was the flip-flopping of two linemen, Jerry Daniels and Wallace Brown, to help open holes for the fullback. "Todd Tyson (the fullback) did a good job running for us. Ron Butler and Will Sanderson blocked well at the ends, and Derwin Clemons, Reggie Selby and Doug Selby all ran well."

Kinston is more than just an everyday problem for the Rampants, however.

"They have the biggest team we've seen so far. They will average over 200 on the defensive line. They've been able to score a lot of points, and they haven't given up any yet. That's impressive."

"They have a good running and passing attack; it may be the toughest we've faced so far," Bumgarner added.

Bumgarner said that the deep pass patterns were a concern to the Rampant secondary. "We've worked a lot on the deep pass, but also on the short patterns too. Their quarterback is a good runner and their fullback returns from last year. They are really coming in here with a six-game winning streak. They won their last four last year before winning their first two this year."

Defensively, Kinston plays from a five-two set-up, and Bumgarner feels that this can cause Rose some problems.

"I think we will be able to move the ball on them," he said. "But the key will be whether we can stop them. I wouldn't want to get into any kind of a scoring contest with them."

Quarterback Keais Hoyt hit eight of 14 passes for two touchdowns against Fike last week, as Kinston picked up 167 yards through the air. Kinston also rushed for 396 yards, with Joe Dixon leading the way with 114 yards in just six carries.

Hoyt's chief target has been Gary Freeman who, in addition, to being the back-up quarterback, has been a big cog in the Vike offense at flanker. He scored twice against Fike and led the way in the victory over Northern Nash with his receiving.

The game, in Ficklen Stadium, is scheduled for a 7:30 p.m. kickoff Friday night. Rose goes on the road the following week against Jacksonville, before returning to face West Craven in the final non-conference game the next week.

Dye Says Pirates No Longer 'Hungry' Team

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Last week, Coach Pat Dye of East Carolina University was worried about the physical condition of his charges. This week, with the Bucs headed for Chapel Hill to face the University of North Carolina, it's the mental outlook that has him worried.

Not that the physical problems are over. They are improved in some ways, but not in others. "Eddie Hicks came back to practice yesterday (Tuesday), and that gave the offense a real lift," he said.

But quarterback Leander Green, who was injured on Saturday in the first half against N.C. State, is still not fully recovered, and is questionable. So is Anthony Collins, hurt two weeks ago against Western Carolina, and Joe Godette, hurt early in the State game.

"It's the same tune, different verse," Dye prefaced his remarks to the press. "Saturday's game (against N.C. State) was frustrating and very disappointing. We've never played them in the past when we weren't physically and mentally ready. We have been undermanned, but we've scratched and fought our guts out to win. But we didn't do that Saturday night."

While adding that State had something to do with the performance of the Pirates, more had to do with the way the Bucs played. "Nobody on offense was trying to win on every play. It's not our scheme or our game plan. It's just that we're not getting a concentrated effort. We're making mistakes due to poor concentration and not giving that second and third effort that it takes."

Dye wasn't even pleased with the defense. "The past two years, we've played hard, but we only had a few people playing that way Saturday. None of our defensive linemen graded out as winners, and only four defensive players overall were graded as winners."

Dye added that if there was a bright spot, it was on kick coverage and in the punting of Rodney Allen.

"Up to date, I'd like to say that everything is in order, but we are a long way from that. It's not good since we've played two games and have a big one coming up this Saturday. We're not close to being the kind of football team we are capable of being," he said.

"We've built our reputation by being aggressive, giving a good effort, our speed, quickness, execution, condition, and just outthumping people. But right now, the only thing I can say that we're doing is being in better condition. We haven't had our speed and quickness. We've been executing poorly, and we're not giving the effort we should be."

Dye said he felt that if Green plays as he is capable of playing, the Pirates can make a game of it Saturday. Otherwise, it will not be that close.

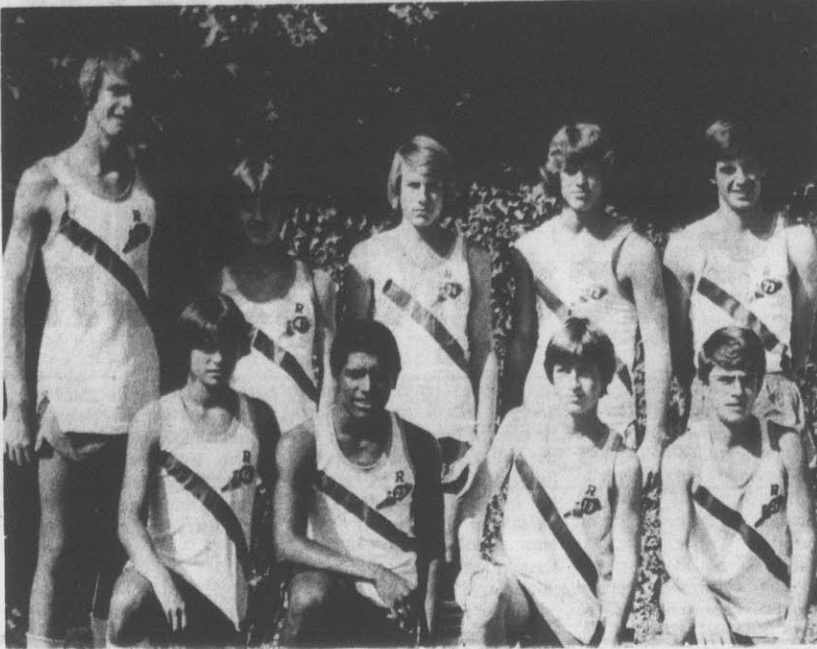

"I haven't given up on this team. Maybe the chemistry is just not right. But I think we have a fine staff. We have a good scheme offensively and defensively. We've got the best group of kids we've had from the standpoint of not being trouble-makers. And we have more ability than we've ever had; it just hasn't surfaced."

"We're in a crisis situation now. Usually when you are in this situation, something does surface. I just hope it's something good."

Dye characterized five types of football players he has known. "There is the type who has the ability and who gets out there and does everything he is capable of and who you can depend on in a tough situation. There is the kind who has the ability but never seems to get there when you need him. There is the kind who doesn't have the ability, but who fights his guts out to get the job done. There is the type who doesn't have it and is satisfied with just being a part of the team. And there is the type who never has any ability and just sits back and can never be a winner."

"We have too many people with ability just waiting and too many who could be fighting and scratching who are not doing it," Dye added.

"What we need is a hungry team. You've all seen a hungry dog. You throw a bone out there, and he's on it like a flash, and will fight for it. That's what we need right now on this team."

Rose, Conley Field Cross-Country Teams

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Two Pitt County high schools will field cross-country teams this fall, one of them for the first time.

Rose High School has had cross-country for several years now, while D.H. Conley is attempting to get a program on its feet.

Cross-country involves running off-track, through woods, fields, and the like, with different courses varying in distances, but usually from two and a half to three miles. Scoring is done in reverse order, with each person gaining a point in relation to the place he finishes. The top five finishers on each team are counted for team score, and the low team score wins.

Raleigh.

"The whole team returns from last year," Hochmuth said. "We've also added two sophomores, so we have pretty good experience. The only problem is that not many worked out that much in the summer."

Hochmuth said that Til Jolly, Dan Mayo and Michael Davis all reported in good shape and ready to go. "They should be our best runners during the season."

Others expected to add to the scoring include Blair Smith, Bill DaVanzo, Alan Parks and Ted Gartman.

"Since it is not an individual sport, but a team sport, everyone has a chance to help out," the coach said.

Hochmuth said he hoped that the team would peak late in the season prior to the conference meet and be at its best for that meet and the regionals. "We have the experience to do well, but I think the first couple of meets will show us how well conditioned we are."

Both Jolly and Steve

Blackwell are coming off injuries, and both were All-Conference last season. "Blackwell is just now starting to come around and could help us later on."

Others on the team include Sterling Ashby, Lathan Mills and Mike Tucker. "They can help if they work hard," Hochmuth said.

Rose's course starts at the Allied Health Building and the finish line is also there after covering three miles.

Conley

Conley is fielding a cross-country team for the first time, and has seven runners out for the team.

Chuck Dunn, who is also coaching the football team, is working with cross-country. Three of his players are also on the team, splitting their time as far as the sports go.

"Three of them have some experience," Dunn said, listing Shawn Carson, Joe Greene and Jeff Credle as the top prospects.

Others on the team are Billy Carmon, Melvin Baker, Michael Joyner and Lawrence Green. Carmon, Greene and Carson are also playing football.

"We're just trying to get some interest growing in the sport," Dunn said. "We have a couple of meets scheduled so far, but only one other team in the Eastern Carolina Conference has a cross-country team, Southern Nash." The two meet on October 26 at Conley.

"It's a learning experience for most of them," the coach said. "Credle might be our best, especially since he's not playing football. He ran a 10:26 two mile recently, and I think he has potential. He could possibly qualify in the regionals this year even though it will be his first experience."

Rose

The Rampants come off a 16-9 season last year, when they finished third in the conference. They have a new coach this year in Ron Hochmuth, who takes over from Ron Williams, who left Greenville to coach in

Collins May Learn Quickly

BEREA, Ohio (AP)—Rookie Larry Collins has yet to carry the ball from scrimmage in a National Football League game, but he'll be starting in place of Greg Pruitt if the Cleveland Browns' star running back can't play Sunday in Atlanta.

Pruitt, who has gained 226 yards in 44 carries so far this year, has been hobbling around the Browns' Baldwin-Wallace College training facilities on crutches this week. But he's still hoping that icepacks and continued treatment will reduce swelling in his severely bruised left calf to allow him to play against the Falcons.

"I've never missed a game yet," the 5-foot-10, 190-pound veteran said.

Cleveland Coach Sam Rutigliano said he talked it over with offensive backfield coach Jim Garrett and decided Collins would get the call if Pruitt is unavailable.

Pruitt, who already was bothered by a constant backache, suffered the bruise in the fourth quarter of last Sunday's 13-10 overtime victory over Cincinnati.

"We're going to have to watch from day to day with Greg," Rutigliano said. "And we believe Larry is ready. He was an integral part of our win last Sunday (with a 41-yard kickoff return in overtime), and that should help his confidence. Now we think he can move into the backfield."

The speedster from Texas A&I, drafted in the fourth round, agrees with his coach.

"I feel I'm ready. I like this offense and the way they have brought me along," Collins said.

KEEPS HEAD STILL

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Lon Hinkle, the winner of the 1978 New Orleans Open, says he concentrates on keeping his head still on every swing.

"I feel that if I can keep my head still," he explained, "my spine will stay steady and I will be able to rotate my shoulders and hips around it. If my head moves toward the target or away from it, my spine will move. That makes it more difficult to turn around it."

THE NEW YORK Yankees snuck into Fenway Park last week and massacred the Boston Red Sox, sweeping a four-game series to move into a tie for first place in the American League East.

The fall of the Red Sox was one of the worst collapses in baseball history. The Boston team had built up a 14-game lead in the division by July 19. Less than two months later, it was completely gone.

The Beantown fans, who have been packing small Fenway Park, have now begun to boo their team, and many left last weekend's games early on as the Yanks outscored the Red Sox 42-5 in the series.

The Red Sox had crept back to a one-half game lead after Tuesday night's games and the teams meet this weekend in New York for three more contests. All three games in Yankee Stadium were sold out by Tuesday. This series could determine the AL East champion.

WAKE FOREST FORWARD Rod Griffin has reached an agreement with the Denver Nuggets and signed a multi-year contract with the team. He reported to the squad's rookie camp this week.

Griffin, an all-ACC selection for the past two seasons, had a difficult time coming to terms with the team which picked him 17th in the NBA draft, and had talked of playing in Italy rather than the NBA this season.

Another all-ACC performer from last season, North Carolina guard Phil Ford, still hasn't signed or been traded by the Kansas City Kings, who picked him second in the draft. Ford has also mentioned playing in Italy, rather than signing with the Kings. He has said he would rather be traded, but Kansas City has refused to do so. Some sort of announcement on the situation should be coming soon as NBA teams begin pre-season practice.

"HE SHOULD BE" thrilled to death to be starting against us. We seem to bring out the best in kickers," East Carolina head football coach Pat Dye said of UNC freshman kicker Jeff Hayes.

Hayes is expected to handle punts, kickoffs and field goals for the Tar Heels as they open their season at home against the Pirates. And if history repeats itself, he could be in for a record-breaking performance.

During Dye's rein at the ECU helm, the Pirates have had a hard time with opposing kickers, going all the way back to 1974. Dye's first year, when Appalachian State's Jerry Harmon booted a 48-yard field goal to top ECU in a close game.

Two years ago, North Carolina squeaked out a 12-10 victory over East Carolina without scoring a touchdown. All the Tar Heel points came on field goals, three by Tom Bidle and one by freshman Jeff Arnold. Arnold's kick, his first attempt as a Tar Heel, was a 49-yard boomer.

Two teams kicked their way past the Bucs last year. South Carolina broke a four-game Pirate winning streak when Britt Parrish had four field goals in a 19-16 Gamecock victory. Parrish's feat included two three-pointers in the fourth quarter, one 41 yards and the other 43, as South Carolina rallied from a 16-6 deficit.

Southwestern Louisiana, which handed East Carolina a 9-7 loss in Ficklen Stadium last year, got all of its points on field goals, all three off the toe of John Roveto.

And in the Pirates' 29-13 loss to N.C. State last weekend, sophomore kicker Nathan Ritter scored 17 of the Wolfpack's points. He kicked a school record five field goals, the longest 48 yards plus two more over 40 yards. In addition, Ritter kicked PAT's after two N.C. State touchdowns. The High Point native was 5-6 in field goal attempts in his first game as a Wolfpack regular.

Yankees Move Into East Lead

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

It took the New York Yankees 144 games, but the World Champions are back where they say they expected to be all along—first place.

The Yankees took over the top spot in the American League East for the first time this season Wednesday night with a 7-3 victory over Detroit. Boston, which had led the division since May 23 and once held a 14-game lead on New York, dropped one-half game back when it lost to Cleveland 2-1.

"It was just a matter of time before we took over first place," said rookie pitcher Jim Beattie, who allowed just three hits in 61-3 innings before yielding to relief ace Rich Gossage.

"I knew we'd be in first place," added Mickey Rivers who, along with Lou Piniella, tripled in a four-run fourth inning that keyed the Yankee win. "I just didn't know if we'd keep it."

Piniella, whose bat is the hottest of the legion of hard-hitting Yankees, downplayed the accomplishment.

"We're World Champions," said Piniella. "You can't get excited about moving into first place with 17 or 18 games to play. You get too excited and all of a sudden you fall on your rear."

It has been the Red Sox who have been falling of late, however. While New York has won 35 of 49 games since July 25, when Manager Bob Lemon took over, including a four-game sweep of the Red Sox in Boston last weekend, Don Zimmer's Sox have dropped 11 of their last 14.

"We just ain't scoring no runs," said Zimmer, who has decided to bench slumping first baseman George Scott. "I went as far with the man as you can possibly go. It's not just one man, though. There ain't many moves I can make. That's one I can make."

Elsewhere in the AL, Milwaukee closed to four games out with a 7-5 verdict over Baltimore, and Kansas City increased its Western Division lead to 3½ games over California with a 9-1 victory over Oakland while the Angels were beaten 6-4 by Texas.

Dan Briggs was the hero for Cleveland, making a sensational sliding catch with the bases loaded and two outs in the second inning, then tripling and scoring the winning run on a squeeze bunt by Tom Verzer in the fifth.

Brewers 7, Orioles 5

Milwaukee jumped to a 7-0 lead, then held off the Orioles. Sal Bando homered and drove in three runs for the Brewers and Robin Yount homered.

Royals 9, A's 1

Dennis Leonard and Steve Mingori combined on a sevenhitter and Hal McRae drove in four runs, two with a homer. The game was delayed two hours by rain in the top of the seventh inning.

Rangers 6, Angels 4

A pair of two-run homers by Toby Harrah, the second in the bottom of the ninth, boosted Texas to its seventh straight victory over California in Arlington.

Two golfers were tied at 139, amateur Drew Butler of Hilton Head Island and Vic Lipscomb of Orangeburg. Butler shot a 69 Wednesday to go with an opening round 70, while Lipscomb came in with a 68.

Phillies, Dodgers Both Win, Move Closer To Winning Flags

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

East is West and West is West — and the Philadelphia Phillies and Los Angeles Dodgers are trying to keep it that way.

The Phillies and Dodgers, last year's National League playoff teams, appear to be heading for a replay this season as the pennant race heads into its final weeks.

The Phillies beat the Chicago Cubs 6-2 Wednesday night to hold onto their four-game lead in the East and reduce their division-winning "magic number" to 14 games.

The Dodgers, meanwhile, improved their lead in the West to seven games with a 6-0 decision over the Houston Astros, cutting their clinching number to 10.

The Phillies won behind a powerful pitching performance by Dick Ruthven, who had a perfect game through six innings and finished with a six-hitter.

"I wasn't greatly disappointed that I didn't get the no-hitter," said Ruthven, winning his 12th game in 16 since coming to Philadelphia from Atlanta in June. "It takes so much luck to get a no-hitter. And you can't afford to get so emotional that you can't handle a game."

The Dodgers won their game by virtue of Steve Garvey's hot night and a strong pitching performance by Bob Welch. The Los Angeles first baseman went 4-for-4 to lead a 12-hit attack and Welch hurled a four-hitter.

Elsewhere in the National League, the Pittsburgh Pirates whipped the St. Louis Cardinals 7-1; the San Diego Padres turned back the Cincinnati Reds 6-2; the Atlanta Braves defeated the San Francisco Giants 5-3 in 12 innings and the Montreal Expos edged the New York Mets 4-3. All the Phillies runs off Chicago starter Ray Burris and three relievers were unearned.

Dodgers 6, Astros 0
Along with Garvey's hitting exploits, Steve Yeager slugged a two-run homer and Rick Monday drove in two runs with a single and a sacrifice fly off loser Ken Forsch, 9-6.

Welch, 6-3, struck out four and walked none in snapping a personal three-game losing streak. After an infield single by Terry Puhl to lead off the fourth, the rookie right-hander retired the final 17 Astros in order.

Pirates 7, Cardinals 1
Three-run homers by Bill Robinson and Willie Stargell led Pittsburgh over St. Louis. Bert Blyleven, 13-9, tossed a five-hitter as the Pirates capitalized on the two homers and a total of 11 walks.

Losing pitcher Pete Falcone, 2-7, yielded eight walks in 22-3 innings and was tagged for a three-run, third-inning homer by Robinson, after a pair of passes.

Padres 6, Reds 2
Broderick Perkins' two-run double and Fernando Gonzalez's run-scoring triple keyed a four-run sixth inning as San Diego snapped the Cincinnati Reds' four-game winning streak.

The Padres sent nine men to the plate and collected five hits and a walk off Reds reliever Manny Sarmiento, 9-7, to give Bob Owehinko, 9-12, his first victory since August 2.

Braves 5, Giants 3
Dale Murphy and pinch-hitter Cito Gaston belted run-scoring singles in the 11th inning to lift Atlanta over San Francisco.

Right-hander Phil Niekro, bidding to become the first 19-game winner in the National League, worked the first 10 innings and didn't allow an earned run. Reliever Gene Garber, 4-5, was the winner with two innings of work.

Expos 4, Mets 3
Gary Carter hit a two-run homer and rookie Scott Sanderson and Mike Garman combined on an eight-hitter to help Montreal beat New York.

Sanderson, 2-2, allowed all eight New York hits, striking out eight and issuing two walks before getting relief help from Garman with one out in the ninth.

Mets loser Nino Espinosa, 10-14, suffered his first defeat this season against Montreal after three victories. Espinosa gave up a solo home run to Ellis Valentine in the fourth before Carter's shot in the sixth.

Ma And Pa Clay Visit Training Camp For Son's 'Last Hurrah'

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — "Now I want you to meet my mama," Muhammad Ali announced from the apron of the ring. "Come on up, Mama. Ain't she pretty?"

"Now you know why I am so pretty."

Odessa Clay, a matronly, pillowy woman in a bright floral dress, waddles to the edge of the stage. People cheer wildly. Muhammad's mother beams with pride. "Ain't he a card?" she comments, half under her breath. "That child — always spoofing. Ever since he was a little boy, he's been full of tricks and jokes. Always puttin' somebody on."

"And my pa," adds the former heavyweight champion of the world. "Cassius Marcellus Clay."

A dapper, dandy little man with a pencil mustache all decked out in a fancy beige pongee shirt, slacks and hat to match — waves recognition.

They're here for what is being hailed as Muhammad Ali's last hurrah — parents of the world's most celebrated and recognizable sports star who at age 36 here Friday night goes against young Leon Spinks in what some have termed the "Mission Impossible."

Their offspring is trying to become the first man in history to win the world heavyweight ring title a third time.

"Six rounds," said Papa Clay, who no longer has to work at his sign-painting job in Louisville. "My boy will win in six."

"I have seen all of his big fights all over the world," added Mama Odessa. "I have never cried. I am confident my son will win."

Will the 36-year-old Ali then retire, as he is insisting?

"I think so. I hope so," said his mother. "But I have never questioned his decisions to continue fighting." I would have liked to have seen him quit after his last fight with Ken Norton," said Marcellus. "He had proved everything."

The Marcellus Cassius Clays of Louisville are the center of the social set gathering for what has become Ali's greatest challenge.

The father said he always knew that his first born son was destined for immortality.

"But I didn't name him Marcellus Cassius Jr.," Papa Clay vows. "I don't think a child should be burdened with his father's name. I wanted to name him Rudolph Valentino but his mother said he must be a junior."

"I never wanted him to be a fighter — I wanted him to be an actor," said the mother. "He is a natural entertainer — looks like me, everybody says, but takes after his father."

So the second son of the Clays was named Rudolph Valentino and since has taken on the Muslim name Rachman. He is two years Ali's junior.

"No, it never was any trouble to call him Ali instead of Cassius," Mama Odessa said. "What he wants to be called is all right with me."

TOO MANY PITCHES

BOSTON (AP) — Luis Tiant, the Havana Perfecto who pitches for the Boston Red Sox, has a corkscrew windup and perhaps as many as a dozen different pitches which he delivers to American League batters.

Oakland's Doug Revere, a new member to the league, faced Tiant for the first time this spring and went 0-for-4 against Louis. "I've seen pitchers with assorted stuff," Revere moaned. "But this guy is ridiculous. He threw me nine different pitches."

Spinks Must Be Challenger

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — "He's got to fight like he's the challenger," said George Benton, who has been helping Leon Spinks get ready to defend the World Boxing Association heavyweight title against Muhammad Ali Friday night in the Superdome.

Benton, who helped trainer Sam Solomon prepare Spinks for his victory over Ali last Feb. 15 and who worked in former champion Joe Frazier's corner, is well aware of the Ali mystique.

"Anytime Ali throws one punch, he still might get credit for three," Benton said Wednesday.

But the mystique won't help Ali if Spinks is in good condition, said Benton. "The key is condition. I've only been here two weeks. I can't tell you how hard he's been training before."

But the former middleweight contender said he has seen indications that Spinks was reaching peak condition, such as snapping at aides.

Benton thinks Ali is in shape, but "he's in 36-year-old shape" and if Spinks is physically ready "it wouldn't surprise me if he stopped him."

Italian Author Insists Mussolini 'Executed Twice'

ROME (UPI) — Taking two bullet-riddled corpses, leaning them against a wall and shooting them again in a second "execution" four hours after the first sounds like a macabre Edgar Allan Poe plot.

Yet that is how an Italian author, who says he has spent 22 years looking into these things claims Italian Fascist dictator Benito Mussolini and his raven-haired mistress Claretta Petacci died 33 years ago.

Former journalist Franco Bandini, 56, says in his book "Life and Secret Death of Mussolini" that the second "execution" of the couple on April 28, 1945, was carried out to conceal the identity of the actual executioners. One of those executioners, says Bandini, was Luigi Longo, now 78 and president of the Italian Communist Party. Bandini says those present at the 12:30 p.m. shootings and the faked execution at 4:30 p.m. had been sworn to secrecy "for at least 50 years" and that a typed five-page document signed by four eyewitnesses is now in the files of the Communist Party in Rome's Street of the Dark Shops. A Communist Party spokesman said: "We will not have any comment to make about this. We stand by the account of Mussolini's death that is well known." He referred a caller to communist historian Paolo Spriano who said: "The minor details of Mussolini's death are not important. What matters is that he is dead." The communist account of the killing of Mussolini says resistance fighters captured him and Claretta at Congo on the shores of Lake Como as he attempted to flee with German troops on April 27, 1945.

During the time the man who ruled Italy for 13 years was taken with his mistress to the nearby village of Giulino di Mezzegra. The next day the couple were shot on orders from resistance headquarters in Milan, of which Longo was a senior member. Communist resistance fighter Walter Audisio, known as "Colonel Valerio," said in 1947 that he had fired the fatal bullets. Later the two bodies were displayed hanging head down at a Milan gas station until the prefect of Milan, Riccardo Lombardi, now a Socialist deputy, ordered them cut down.

shootings. Allegations that a Mussolini treasure, estimated at $80 million in gold bars, jewelry and cash, were seized at the same time as the Fascist dictator have never been proved or disproved.

Attempts to ask Longo himself about the Bandini allegation were met at his home and Communist Party headquarters by statements that he was not there, was busy, was on vacation or that the caller had the wrong number.

Milan when he was shot. Bandini asserts, citing witnesses he has spoken to over the years, that in fact Longo and another partisan, Alfredo Mordini, drove to the site and "hesitated a moment when they saw Claretta with Mussolini."

He said they both then opened fire and the two fell. "Mussolini hit by seven Czech-made 9mm submachine gun bullets and Claretta by about the same number." Bandini said Audisio was then ordered to take responsibility for the shooting. He said Audisio concealed the bodies in a garage, paraded two partisans disguised as Mussolini and his mistress through the village so they appeared to be still alive, placed the two bodies against a villa wall, and fired a burst at them so that the villagers could hear.

An inquiry into the roles of Audisio, Longo and others in the killings was shelved by examining magistrates several years later when Mussolini and his mistress were found to have been killed "in an act of war."

National Group Hoping To Preserve Carousels

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — People used to tease Jerry Betts about his interest in merry-go-rounds — until he became an authority on carousels.

Now, as a member of the National Carousel Association, he is one of 600 merry-go-round aficionados who share a goal of preserving and restoring historic carousels.

Betts, an insurance company officer, recalls his first ride on a merry-go-round at Niles Center, Ill., July 4, 1937.

"I was impressed, not only with the fun of the ride but with the beauty and the music," he said. He became obsessed with the colorful mechanisms.

"My father used to take me to carnivals and kiddie shows around Chicago. I loved it," he said.

When he was old enough, Betts went to carnivals alone. For three years in high school he operated a carousel. But the carousel business came on hard times after World War II.

"After the war, carousels weren't pretty any more. They were all plain, made with aluminum and there were no carvings," he said. "They even began using fluorescent lights instead of incandescent bulbs."

Betts blames rising labor costs for the bland merry-go-rounds.

"The beautiful old machines were all carved by hand," he said. "No one could afford to produce a machine like that any more."

His love affair with carousels remained dormant until 1962, when he read a history of the machines and learned there was national interest in them.

He began making forays to amusement parks and carnivals where old carousels were used, bought a band organ that had been part of a carousel in Elgin, Ill., started a collection that now numbers more than 1,000 pictures of carousels and a scrapbook stuffed with bits of carousel information.

The National Carousel Association, he said, wants to see that the machines are kept operating as complete machines.

"They are really an endangered species," he said. "The estimates are that there are only 300 to 400 still in existence." He said some carousels fall prey to speculators who find the antiques more valuable in pieces than as a whole unit.

"The hand-carved horses can bring $3,000 to $7,000 apiece," he said. "A guy can make four times as much money selling a carousel in pieces as he can selling it as a unit."

Revival Series Begins Monday

GRIFTON — Revival services will begin Monday evening at the Riverside Church and will continue through Friday, Sept. 22, at 7:30 p.m.

The Rev. Bobby White, pastor of a church in Richlands and a senior at Atlantic Christian College, will be the speaker. Homecoming will be held Sunday, Sept. 24.

The public is invited to attend.

CAROUSEL FAN—Jerry Betts of Columbus, Ohio, rode his first merry-go-round 41 years ago, fell in love with the machines and today is a leading expert, collector of carousel paraphernalia and member of a national organization working to preserve and restore historic merry-go-rounds.

Men Went Mad In Great Swamp

By WILLIAM CAMPBELL
THE SUDD, Sudan (UPI) — Many men have gone raving mad floating through this endless morass of green reeds and rotting water lilies.

Local tribesmen call it The Sudd and it's the biggest, maybe the most inhospitable, swamp in the world.

It is here, in the lowlands of southern Sudan, that the famous White Nile river spreads out into a murky swamp the size of Belgium, Holland, and Switzerland combined.

Nothing grows here except billions of light green papyrus reeds and millions of water lilies. The only visible form of life is the occasional crocodile or hippopotamus surfacing or floating in the thick, muddy waters.

At times the swarms of mosquitoes are so thick and the air so humid it is almost impossible to breathe.

More than one hundred years ago the English explorer Samuel Baker and 1,600 of his men riding in 59 boats were trapped in The Sudd while searching for the source of the Nile.

Hundreds of his men died of malaria and dysentery before they managed to free themselves from the rotting vegetation.

At one point even Baker began to lose hope. "It is quite impossible to remain where we are," he wrote in his diary.

Today little has changed for the traveler who takes the 1,000 mile steamer trip down the White Nile from Juba to Kosti.

The old British steamers that carried adventurous tourists on the amazing journey during the Sudanese colonial days are now rusty and falling apart. The run from Juba to Kosti is supposed to take only seven days but the old steamers seldom make the trip in less than two weeks.

Once in The Sudd, the steamers manage to crash into sandbars, take wrong turns into dead end channels, and get stuck for days in the water lilies that choke the Sudd river. For days on end there is nothing to see but reeds.

But the hospitality of the Sudanese tribesmen helps make the trip one of the true great African adventures.

Dinka and Nuer warriors dance on the crowded boat and offer to share their pipes of strong tobacco mixed with cow dung. The women offer pieces of fresh fish they pull from the muddy Nile waters.

The steamer stops at little river towns before and after The Sudd where villagers hold riverside markets, selling anything from chicken and sugar cane to little wooden stools.

An old witch doctor with a bunch of old dikdik feet hanging around his neck and a far away look in his eye stands by just in case a passenger on the steamer may need his assistance.

Soon the amazing steamer trips through The Sudd will be history. The Sudan government has started digging a 220 mile canal that will connect the free waters of the White Nile and drain part of the swamp.

HOW TO DO A LITTLE BUSINESS ON YOUR OWN...

Holding a garage sale is a fun way to do a little business on your own... but it takes a bit of planning.

Like you'll want to decide what to sell and how much to charge for each item... and then you'll need price tags so other people will know what you're charging.

And you'll have to be able to make change for all your customers... so that means you should have lots of one dollar bills and an assortment of coins.

Then you'll want to advertise your sale to attract that crowd. You can do it with a sign or signs in your neighborhood... but you'll want a bigger crowd than that... so you'll run an ad in Classified which tells the time and place of your sale to a host of potential buyers.

One more thing... get up early the day of your sale! When people read about a Garage Sale in Classified, they shop early.

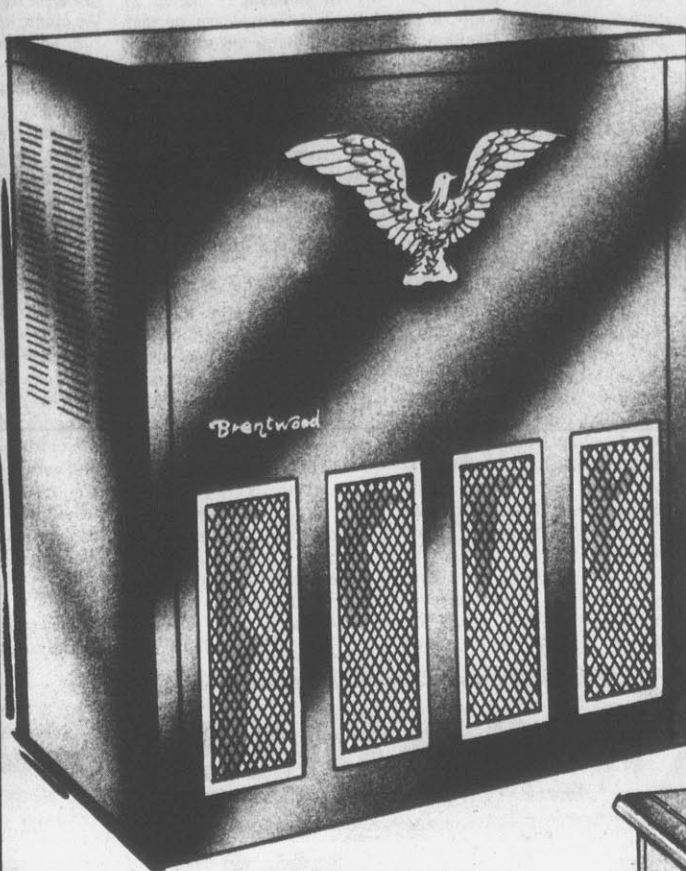

Have fun with your little business adventure!

THE SOUTH'S BEST SELECTION OF

Return Of The Death Penalty Perceptibly Nearer

By CYNTHIA MILLS
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — Time is running short in the battle to block or at least delay the return of capital punishment in America.
 An inmate on Florida's Death Row is perilously close to the end of a lengthy state and federal appeal process that so far has staved off enforcement of all but one death sentence in the last decade.
 A Texas prisoner is trailing just a legal step behind.
 "We might make it through 1978" without any executions, says Henry Schwarzhild, director of the ACLU Capital Punishment project which works against implementation of the death penalty.
 But, he says, they are "terribly likely" next year.
 Except for Gary Gilmore, who wanted to die, no one has been executed in the United States since Luis Monge was led into the Colorado gas chamber in 1967 as punishment for killing his wife and children.
 The Supreme Court threw out capital punishment laws across the nation in 1972 because of the arbitrary way they determined who would get death and who would get life prison terms instead.
 Many states promptly drew up new statutes in hopes they would pass the high court's muster, and in 1976 the justices upheld three of them providing structured sentencing and appeals procedures. Other states across the nation since have used the approved Florida, Texas and Georgia laws as models for re-enacting the death penalty.
 Today, more than 30 states have capital punishment laws — 20 of them adopted or revised since 1976 in efforts to comply with guidelines laid down by the high court. More than 400 persons are under sentence of death, the majority in southern prisons.
 Only long series of appeals on behalf of individual defendants have so far kept any actual executions besides Gilmore's from taking place.
 But now time is beginning to run short.
 Joel Berger of the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, which assists many indigent Death Row inmates, said it is "impossible" to predict a time schedule for executions because of the many variables.
 A simple mistake like a lawyer missing a court filing date, or missing an opportunity to obtain a stay could change the situation, he said. "We lose a lot of sleep over this."
 There also is the chance another Gilmore will appear, declining to delay his execution through appeals. Gilmore was shot by a Utah firing squad Jan. 17, 1977.
 Earlier this year, it appeared there might be a similar case involving Alabama inmate John Louis Evans III, who was scheduled to be executed in July and had indicated he wanted to die.
 But the state supreme court granted an indefinite stay at the last minute after Evans authorized lawyers to take his case to the U.S. Supreme Court while he campaigns to change the method of execution from electrocution to death by injection, so he can donate his organs to medical science.
 Oklahoma recently required a condemned man to appeal, even if it was against his wishes.
 The usual procedure for a person sentenced to death is to appeal through two or more levels in the state court system and then to the U.S. Supreme Court — a process that can take years.
 If unsuccessful on that round of appeals, the jailed convict may next seek relief in U.S. District Court — the lowest level of the federal court system — then in a federal appeals court and then once again in the nation's top court.
 After that, the inmate may seek a pardon, or ask for further court hearings on the basis of new evidence. But those efforts could well be only desperate last moves.

 John Spenkelink of Florida and Jerry Lane Jurek of Texas were the first in the nation to have reached the critical U.S. appeals court stage.
 The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans has not yet heard arguments on the case of the Texan who was convicted of strangling and drowning a 10-year-old girl during a forcible rape attempt.
 But it upheld Spenkelink's death sentence Aug. 21, and that case is headed for the Supreme Court — which may well be the court of last resort for the Floridian.
 "There's a possibility he will be executed by the end of the year," said Ray Marky, Florida's assistant attorney general. "He's running out of places to go."
 The case of Spenkelink, an unemployed drifter who killed his sadistic traveling companion, will bring constitutional questions at the heart of the capital punishment issue to the high court.
 It began in 1973 when Spenkelink, a 24-year-old escapee from a minimum security prison in California, picked up Joseph Szymankiewicz, a hitchhiker who had spent most of the past 20 years in prison in the Midwest. The pair, both heavy drinkers, began traveling together.

 It ended in a Tallahassee motel room when Spenkelink's gun went off during a fight. According to evidence introduced at Spenkelink's trial, Szymankiewicz had forced Spenkelink to have homosexual relations with him, had stolen his money and played "Russian Roulette" with him after boasting of killing a fellow inmate while in prison.
 The victim was a "terrible man" who submitted his assailant to "substantial provocation," Spenkelink's lawyer argued. But Spenkelink was convicted and sentenced to death.
 Gov. Reubin Askew first signed his death warrant last September, after the state's executive clemency board turned down his request for a pardon.
 Two broad questions, among others, are raised by his case:
 — Whether new studies showing that people are usually sentenced to death for killing whites — but not blacks — make today's new capital punishment laws as unconstitutionally arbitrary and discriminatory as the old ones outlawed by the Supreme Court.
 — How far-reaching is the impact of the high court's June decision knocking down the capital punishment statute in Ohio, which had a 99-person Death Row second only in size to Florida's. The ruling could affect many more persons, because the court plurality said states cannot limit the mitigating or mercy factors which may be considered in sentencing.

 There are more whites than blacks on Death Row U.S.A. today.
 John Spenkelink is white, and so was the man he is convicted of killing.
 Yet defense lawyers argue he is a victim of a subtle new type of race discrimination in implementing capital punishment.
 They charge Florida law — like that in many other states — tends to give the death sentence to people who kill whites rather than to people who kill blacks — no matter what the color of the assailant's skin.
 They say 92 percent of the more than 100 persons condemned in the state are on Death Row for killing whites. Only 8 percent were convicted of killing blacks.
 And while 63 percent of those convicted in Florida of a felony murder of a white victim were sentenced to death, only 15 percent of defendants convicted of the felony-murder of a black victim have received that sentence.
 Northeastern University Professor William Bowers, who has been conducting a study on the subject, says similar evidence has been turned up in surveys of the Georgia, Texas and Ohio Death Rows.
 He said he believed the "incredible ... extent of racial disparity we find" should be "presented to the Supreme Court and publicized nationally so it can be understood how the systb whose purpose is justice is operating in a most profoundly unjust way."

 Bowers, who wrote a book called "Executions in America," said it is not clear that anyone is purposefully discriminating. Prosecutors, judges and jurors may just "see crimes against white people as different from crimes against blacks," he said.
 The professor predicted the evidence of discrimination he has turned up "will certainly be one of the elements of the struggle" to abolish the death penalty. But the public is very frightened about murder," he said, "and wrongly imagines that the death penalty is some sort of solution to it."
 Spinkelink also argued the death penalty discriminates against males and poor persons. There are now only three women under death sentence c the country.

 Another issue is raised by the Supreme Court's splintered July ruling that judges and juries who impose the death penalty must be permitted to consider all mitigating factors.
 Only four members of the court formed the plurality that agreed on this line of reasoning.
 Civil liberties lawyers said at the least the decision would result in overturning the death sentences of 99 persons on Ohio's death row and more than 20 in Arizona, which has a similar law. But they were less certain what further impact it will have.
 "It may not require a lot of states to rewrite their statutes," said the ACLU's Schwarzhild. "but it is possible a lot of actual trials may be at least called into question on the issue." In other words, it is another issue defendants could raise to buy time for their defense.
 But Berger said the ruling may lead to a "careful review" of statutes in states across the country. He said some states with pre-1976 laws may have to change, and the ruling may be the basis for a number of individual appeals.

 In Spinkelink's case, he said, the trial judge noted that the Florida statute limited consideration to seven mitigating factors which did not include the "substantial provocation" he allegedly underwent. Defense lawyers have filed briefs bringing the recent Supreme Court decision to the appeals court's attention.
 Even before the Supreme Court ruling affecting the Ohio Death Row inmates, the South had the bulk of prisoners under capital sentence — nearly three out of five — while the Northeast had the fewest, according to a Law Enforcement Assistance Administration report.
 The largest numbers are in Florida, Texas, Georgia and Alabama.
 State legislatures across the country continue to struggle with the issue each time the high court provides new guidelines, and efforts continue to reenact or repeal capital punishment laws. Opinion polls continue to show a majority of the public favors them.

 In Ohio, legislative action to enact a new capital punishment law got underway even before all those on the state's death row had their sentences commuted to life following the Supreme Court's most recent ruling.
 Maryland Acting Gov. Blair Lee III signed a bill restoring the death sentence in his state in March, but Gov. Hugh Carey vetoed a capital punishment bill adopted by the New York state legislature. His state Senate failed by one vote May 1 to override his action.
 The Pennsylvania legislature is expected to vote this month on a veto by Gov. Milton Shapp to a bill adopted in June after the old statute was struck down last December by the state Supreme Court.
 French writer Jean Jacques Rousseau died in 1778.

House Votes Spokeswoman For UNICF Here Reform Bill To Support Local Group's Work

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is described as "delighted" by overwhelming House passage of a civil service reorganization bill viewed as the cornerstone of his plan to shake up the federal bureaucracy.

The measure which cleared the House Wednesday by a 385-10 vote is similar to a bill passed earlier by the Senate.

Supporters are predicting a conference committee will quickly work out the differences between the two versions and have a finished product to Carter for signature into law before Congress recesses next month.

Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., the bill's chief sponsor, said he hoped a conference committee could begin meeting next week.

Civil Service Commission chairman Alan Campbell said the president was "delighted" when he telephoned him at Camp David with news of the House vote.

Hailing the bill as equal in importance to the original Civil Service Act of 1883, Campbell said the new bill "not only guards against spoils but simultaneously promotes effective and efficient management."

In general, the many-faceted bill is calculated to make it easier for federal managers to reward good workers and get rid of incompetents.

"If you look at the total bill, the only significant loss (for the president) is in the veterans preference area," Campbell told reporters. Carter had hoped to revamp portions of Civil Service rules giving lifetime hiring preference to veterans.

The bill would establish a Senior Executive Service for high-level managers who could trade job security for a merit pay system that would give them a chance at higher earnings keyed to superior performance.

It also would create a new system whereby 72,500 mid-level supervisors would earn pay raises based on performance rather than longevity.

Other sections would write into law the merit principle to guide personnel decisions and create a special system to protect the salaries and jobs of federal employees who blow the whistle on waste or corruption.

One minor but highly visible section limits to $47,500 a year the amount that retired military personnel could receive from their combined military pension and federal salary. Because no such limit now exists, some military retirees draw up to $80,000 a year from the Treasury.

The House version also contains a provision for greater employee and union participation in labor-management decisions.

Sheryl Manley of the Southeast Regional Office for UNICEF visited Greenville Tuesday to support the local UNICEF drive and to show appreciation for local work.

"Churchwomen United, a local group, has been involved in UNICEF work the past few years," Manley noted. "Mrs. Cliff Everette served as coordinator for them last year, and Mrs. Dot Paschal will be coordinator this year." Manley, assistant regional director for the regional office, stopped in Greenville on her way to Wilson, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

"I stopped in Powellsville, a little town last night, to talk to a group there," she said. "They did a fantastic job two years ago raising $700 for UNICEF in a carnival."

Ms. Manley was also successful in locating two con-signees to sell UNICEF cards and stationery in the Greenville area. Usha T. Gulati and Umesh C. Gulati of the A-1 Import Shop at Greenville Square.

"I am really, really excited for the Gulatis, they will handle the holiday season cards," Manley said.

Manley spoke of misconceptions harbored against UNICEF, and explained

UNICEF's role in the world.

"We get no funding for projects from the United Nations nor are we funded solely from the United States," said Manley. "We have our own executive committee and send only goods and services to needy countries, not money."

"Our first concern is for children, their health, nutrition, sanitation and education," she continued. "According to the World Health Organization, approximately 10 million children suffer from malnutrition."

UNICEF employs two main fund drives, the traditional Oct. 31 UNICEF Day and the sale of gift items and stationery through consignment.

"I believe UNICEF is growing up," Manley pointed out. "The traditional 'Trick or Treat for UNICEF' on Oct. 31 has changed throughout the years with people now using bike-a-thons, auctions and other events to help raise money for UNICEF."

If a community does have children to collect for the Halloween date, the children should be educated to understand what and why they are collecting.

New Rabies Vaccine Due

ATLANTA (AP) — A new, more effective rabies vaccination with few adverse side effects is being made available for the first time in this country on an experimental basis by the national Center for Disease Control.

The CDC said in a statement that the vaccine provides a much higher level of protection against rabies than the old duck embryo vaccine and produces minimal adverse reactions.

In addition, the new vaccine probably would require about five or six injections, rather than the recommended dosage of 14 to 21 injections for the duck embryo vaccine, the CDC said.

The federal health agency said the vaccine was developed by inactivating a strain of rabies grown in human tissue. Although it has not been licensed in this country, the vaccine currently is being used in human field trials in the United States and Israel.

The CDC said 186 cases of treatment with the new vaccine have been studied. "The vaccine was well tolerated and no treatment was discontinued because of an adverse reaction," the statement said.

Forty-five persons in Iran bitten by animals with confirmed cases of rabies were protected from the disease, and 31 persons in Germany given the vaccine after rabies exposure also recovered, the health agency said.

Disruption Cost Her $125 Fine

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Sarah Dylan, ex-wife of singer Bob Dylan, was fined $125 and received a suspended 10-day jail sentence after she pleaded guilty to disrupting her children's classroom last year.

Mrs. Dylan, 38, whose plea was entered by her attorney in her absence Wednesday, admitted that she and three private detectives burst into Malibu Elementary School to take custody of her four children.

The youngsters, Jesse, 11, Anna, 10, Samuel, 9, and Jakob, 6, were the subjects of a custody dispute between the singer and his wife. Mrs. Dylan eventually was granted custody by a court. The Dylans, who had a home in Malibu, were divorced last year.

Railroads Fear Strike Result

WASHINGTON (AP) — Railroads hoping to prevent a strike against the Norfolk & Western Railway from spreading will appeal a federal judge's order which they fear could lead to expansion of the strike, an industry spokesman says.

The National Railway Labor Conference spokesman said Wednesday the railroads will ask the U.S. Court of Appeals here to overturn Tuesday's order by U.S. District Judge Aubrey E. Robinson Jr. which would allow striking clerks to picket other lines.

Baffled by Mystery Fever

Almost every night for the past few months I become sweaty. I take my temperature, only to find that it has gone up to about 101. When I get up in the morning and during the day there is no fever. I've had every kind of test, but no one has been able to explain this. Is there any place in the United States where I could go to get the answer to this strange situation? — Miss D.V.A., La. Dear Miss A.:

The possible causes of fever of unknown origin are many. Since fever is a symptom and not a disease, the underlying cause must be pursued relentlessly. Sometimes it takes the most arduous efforts, by both the patient and the doctor, to uncover the mystery of this strange condition.

Many times the history of the onset is a primary clue. Have you been taking unusual drugs? Have you been exposed to industrial fumes or other substances at work? Have you traveled recently to tropical or sub-tropical areas? Do you have any unusual allergies to animals? Have you been exposed to anyone with hepatitis or any unusual infection?

These few questions can give you only a fragmented idea of how complex and extensive the investigation must be if you are to uncover the cause of your persistent fever.

There is no one hospital center that is devoted to the study of unexplained fever. When samples of blood, urine and stools need special study, they are sent directly to the Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta. They work in conjunction with hospitals and doctors all over the country. Therefore, there is no need for you to go there personally. Traveling from place to place and from doctor to doctor means a great deal of duplication of work that has already been done. If you cooperate with your doctors and do not become discouraged, the chances are good that you will eventually track down the cause of this distressing problem.

***

We are campers. Very often we are confronted by the problem of drinking water from nearby streams. Are there any tests that we can do to make sure that the water is not contaminated? — Mr. & Mrs. R.R., Iowa.

Dear Mr. & Mrs. R.:

You undoubtedly know that there is no relationship between the appearance of sparkling clear fresh water and the possibility that it might be contaminated. Water might even taste delicious and still contain toxic chemicals that might have been poured into the stream from some distant place.

Well-controlled camping sites all over America carefully study and make known the chemical contents and the bacteria count of neighboring water. A good protective device is to boil all water for about 20 minutes before drinking.

Hiss Recital Set Sunday

Works by Bach, Mozart, Wolf and Strauss will be featured in the faculty recital of baritone Clyde Hiss at 8:15 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 17.

The recital will be held in the A. J. Fletcher Music Center Recital Hall. The public is invited and there is no admission charge.

Dr. Hiss, a member of the School of Music, ECU voice faculty and director of ECU's Opera Theater, will be accompanied by pianist-organist Ellen Reithmaier Nagode, and assisted by an eight-member chamber ensemble and a 16-voice chorus of voice students conducted by Robert Irwin.

Selections on Hiss's program include the J. S. Bach Cantata No. 56, "Ich will den Kreuzstab gerne tragen;" and songs by Mozart, Hugo Wolf and Richard Strauss.

Dr. Hiss joined the ECU music faculty in 1965, and has been active as a solo performer in campus musical productions. He has also appeared in solo recitals and with symphony orchestras throughout the Midwest and East.

The 40-year-old governor, who is campaigning for reelection, has been linked romantically with Miss Ronstadt for several years. She has helped raise campaign funds for him with concerts.

High-Speed Fun By A Most Inventive Comic

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) —

I, pardon the personal reference, think Robin Williams is the funniest, most wildly inventive comic to come down the pike since Jonathan Winters. But is situation comedy for him?

The answer, premiering tonight as "Mork and Mindy," is a resounding yes. Williams' new ABC show is brilliant, high-speed fun, loaded with wonderful sight and sound gags and ad-libs by the young star.

He plays Mork, of the distant planet Ork, sent to earth — in a huge egg, no less — to observe life. It's a punishment tour. He's supposed to have no emotions, but always is kidding around.

Pam Dawber, a lovely, young, very gifted actress, is cast as Mindy, a Boulder, Colo., resident who befriends him.

Events start late at night as his egg gently lands on earth. You see it crack, a hand pops out, then Williams with a triumphant "Ah-hah!" A smaller egg lands. He cracks it open and peers in.

"Only one suitcase," he cries. "You lost half my luggage."

Mindy, parked in nearby woods with a boyfriend, has a spat with the guy. He drives off. In her car. She starts walking and meets Williams, who seems to be wearing a priest's outfit.

(Close observers will see he may have his suit on backwards.)

Later, at her house, she suspects the lad is odd. For starters, he sips a glass of iced tea through his fingers. He asks how she drinks tea. She says with her mouth, of course.

"How do you talk and drink at the same time, wow, must be Dool City," he marvels. Thinking he's a foreigner, she asks how he says thank you in his native language. "We spit," he beams.

The truth emerges. She promises to teach him earth ways if he teaches her about planet Ork. They then discuss parents. He says he was a test tube baby. "Yes, my father was an eyedropper, the scum."

In time, he meets her father (Conrad Janis), who runs a music store with his mother-in-law Elizabeth Kerr. Pop soon fears this strange stranger is living in mortal sin with his daughter.

Amid all this is a flashback scene of Monk's first visit to earth, when he learned from The Fonz how to chase girls and the chased Laverne of "Laverne and Shirley."

Also in the hour: A deputy sheriff, chicken eggs Williams thinks contain tiny Orkans and a sanity hearing. All of it is done with a sense of spontaneity and playfulness that defies description. It is industrial-strength humor, with a fine script by Dale McRaven, author of the late, great "Texas Wheelers" series.

The only drawback: Kids all over will be mimicking Mork's Ork sounds, such as "zabak," "gribble" and "na-no-na-no," and sit as do the Orkans, face down in the chair. But why not? See "Mork and Mindy." You'll become a weekly patron for sure.

Mob Travolta

LONDON (AP) — It was a case of Wednesday night fever when Hollywood star John Travolta arrived at the Empire Theater in Leicester Square for the first night of his movie "Grease."

Some women cried out and others fainted. One guest had her dress ripped down the back. Several photographers lost equipment and one had two flash guns smashed.

Travolta's bodyguards had to climb on the roof of his limousine to shout at shoving fans to get back as police cleared a path for Travolta and his girlfriend, Marilu Henner. "I was terrified — I've never known anything like this," Travolta said once safely inside.

Travolta and co-star Olivia Newton-John were hurried out of a rear entrance before the film finished to avoid more trouble. While he stayed in his hotel, she went to a party for 1,000 guests.

Today's Cryptquip clue: L equals O

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.
