Controls Not Envisioned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter says he will not include mandatory wage or price controls in his "tough" new anti-inflation strategy and only "an extreme emergency" would change that decision.

In a wide-ranging interview with visiting news executives, Carter also predicted "a rapid conclusion" for Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty negotiations and said he hoped the Camp David agreements would lead to relations between Israel, Jordan and the Palestinians as well.

The interview was conducted Friday but the transcript was released Saturday.

The president said he has not yet made all the final decisions on his new anti-inflation plan — primarily because of his attention was absorbed so long by the 13-day Camp David summit — but predicted the plan "will be a tough, strong step in controlling inflation."

He said the approach will contain "all we can do within the present statutory bounds.

"I am not in favor of mandatory pricing and wage controls and I don't have any intention of putting them in unless our country reaches an extreme emergency," he said.

He added that, at present, there is "certainly not any prospect of that at all."

Carter also said he believes labor unions would be "receptive" to a plan in which workers and industry had to "share the burden."

Essentially, he used the same language as the AFL-CIO President George Meany, who warn3d Monday that the program had to be fair to gain union compliance.

The president said his plan would be announced "very quickly," but set no deadline.

Triumphant Return For Sadat

...And Angry Reactions From Other Arab Nations...

By MAURICE GUINDI

CAIRO (UPI) — Millions of Egyptians poured into the streets Saturday in a tumultuous welcome for President Anwar Sadat, a peace hero at home but denounced as a traitor by Arab radicals. The outpouring eclipsed the reception he received when he came back from his historic journey to Jerusalem.

Officials estimated the turnout Saturday at five million people, far more than the one million who came out to the streets in November.

Flags, arches of triumph and pictures of Sadat bedecked the route of his motorcade to his home on the Nile.

To the honking of horns, the wailing of sirens and the beat of drums and pipes, the triumphant motorcade slowly made its way through the surging crowds, held back by baton-wielding police.

Men danced in the streets and women ululated, sounding the shrill Arab cry of joy or sorrow. Standing on the back seat of the open limousine, a beaming, but obviously exhausted, Sadat smiled and waved to the crowds.

Streamers in the huge, cheering multitude declared: "Blessed are the peacemakers" and "No to war, no to (Arab) rejection, yes to peace."

Despite the obvious Egyptian yearning for peace all indications were that the road ahead would be long and difficult. King Hussein of Jordan attacked Sadat personally in a bitter statement Saturday in Amman and the hardline Arab States were reported sending Syrian President Hafez Assad to Moscow to enlist Kremlin support against the Camp David accords.

The usually softspoken Hussein reacted angrily to Sadat's reported vow to negotiate the future of the West Bank himself should Hussein not join the peace talks and said the prospect of a separate Israel-Egyptian peace treaty "shatters the very foundations of my policies and beliefs, and of very many in the entire Arab world."

Arab analysts said Assad will consult Moscow on the formation of an Arab hardliners joint military command and the establishment of a "stragegic alliance" to ensure Moscow's moral and material support for the anti-Sadat front.

The Israeli parliament was preparing for a bitter debate on the accords although Prime Minister Menachem Begin also received a tumultuous welcome when he returned Friday from Washington. Public opinion polls showed a majority of parliament members was ready to approve the summit conclusions although the Knesset was deeply divided.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance marked time in Saudi Arabia pending the start of his talks in Damascus today with the Syrian president who hosted the anti-Sadat summit conference this week and then postponed the Vance visit one day. Vance spent Saturday visiting the Saudi Arabian and American oil installations at Dharan.

Damascus reports said Assad would tour several Arab nations, including Saudi Arabia, after consulting the Russians. Sadat also was consulting with the Saudis. He dispatched a special envoy to Geneva Saturday to meet King Khalid, en route to Houston, Texas, for a heart operation next week.

In open defiance to calls by radicals for his assassination, Sadat drove in an open car from the airport, where he landed after a flight from Morocco, at 4:30 p.m. (10:30 a.m.EDT). He drove to his Nileside residence in the suburb of Giza, a distance of about 15 miles.

Crowds lined the pavements, eight and nine deep, in the hot, sunny weather, shouting: "Sadat! Sadat! welcome! welcome!" and "With soul and blood, we back you Sadat!"

Sadat was embraced by Vice President Hosni Mobarak and Prime Minister Mamdouh Salem, when he disembarked from the plane.

He shook hands with more than 100 high officials, parliamentarians, Christian and Moslem clergymen and senior army, navy and air officers.

Many could be heard whispering "Mabrouk" (congratulations) to the President, who replied: "May Allah bless you."

A delegation from the Sinai desert, which Egypt will regain from Israel under the Camp David peace accords, clapped and embraced he President.

A Touch Of Honey

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — Bert McElroy's living room ceiling leaks — not rainwater, but honey.

McElroy has been catching the honey, which he says began dripping from the ceiling a few weeks ago, in jars and has about a gallon of the sticky stuff so far.

Apparently bees originally built a hive in the ceiling between the living room and the bedroom above it, McElroy said.

He first was told of the problem by his father, who was pulling ivy vines off the house six years ago and bees began flying out of tiny holes in the masonry.

"He told me, 'Boy, I believe you have bees in your walls. You'd better do something about it,'" McElroy said.

Later, painters came across the holes and McElroy had them blocked. The bees then began coming out of the woodwork, he said.

Gradually, the bees left their home and a few months later the honey began dripping. McElroy drilled tiny holes in the ceiling to facilitate the draining.

"About a gallon of honey has dripped out in the past few weeks," he said. "I threw it all away at first, but I saved about a pint of the most recent honey. It's very thick and golden. I've tasted it and it seems okay."

But he said he didn't plan to eat it because it may contain chemicals from the paint.

Not A Belligerent Loner

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

ANTELOPE COUNTY, Neb. (AP) — Long ago a great catastrophe befell certain inhabitants of this planet.

The Great Plains of America were a tropical savannah in those days, where camels and zebras roamed, along with beavers as large as bears and herds of rhinoceros. Yes, herds.

Because of what Michael Voorhies has found buried in the Nebraska earth, we now know that the rhinoceros, thought always to have been the belligerent loner it is today, was once a herd animal, and we know a great deal more as well.

"It is an important find — a unique find," Voorhies said. "There is much yet to be learned."

We have that ancient catastrophe to thank for his find.

It happened 10 million years ago. A volcano erupted, probably in what is now Yellowstone Park. It blasted into the sky a huge cloud of volcanic ash, actually minute glass crystals.

The thermals over the Plains caught the volcanic cloud and dumped it, suddenly, upon this section of Nebraska.

"This was a small lake, watering hole," Voohies said, kicking at powder-white earth where his digging has exposed a mass of bones. "This is where animals gathered especially in times of stress."

And there they stand at the watering hole, their complete skeletons preserved in the suddenly smothering volcanic ash.

They face the same direction. The bull rhinoceros is in front. Cows with calves follow. Inside the skeleton of one cow is the skeleton of an unborn calf. Other animals were at the watering hole: horses, camels, turtles.

"We have found no new kinds of animals here," Voorhies said. "What we have found are complete skeletons rather than a bone here and a bone there such as we previously relied on.

"This gives us new details of

Urged To Reconsider

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Consumers Council Saturday urged the University of NorthCarolina Board of Governors to reverse its decision to reject a proposed labor education and research center at North Carolina Central University.

"The Board of Governors rejected the center at the urging of corporate management interests of the state ...and no single economic interest should have the right or power to dictate the scope of the educational services provided by the university," the council said in a compromise resolution passed at its annual meeting here.

William A. Johnson, chairman of the UNC Board of Governors, said Saturday that the board does not plan to reconsider the proposed center, and that outside interest groups do not dictate UNC policy.

The council is a private, nonprofit citizens' group interested in consumer affairs.

The resolution calling for a UNC labor education center was written after council members objected to an original resolution proposal that accused the UNC Board of Governors of "anti-academic narrow-mindedness."

The approved resolution said corporate interest groups persuaded the board to reject the proposed center even though a board committee had recommended its approval.

The board's planning committee, which had approved the plan for a labor education center last October, rejected the plan Sept. 7, after a wave of reaction from the state's business community.

Council Adopts City Pay Plan

The City Council, meeting Friday morning, reviewed the Pay Plan and Classification Study conducted by the League of Municipalities and then adopted the plan, effective Sept. 28.

The study, the first undertaken here since 1973, reviewed all of the salaried positions of the city, including library employees and airport personnel.

Under the adopted plan, some 73 positions are upgraded with accompanying pay increases while several positions will have job title changes but no pay adjustments. Some 480 positions are included in the city employee staff.

A five percent pay increase is included for the positions that are upgraded under the plan, which was authorized earlier this year.

The Council also approved the city's 100 percent participation in group life insurance coverage for city employees and their dependents. The full coverage plan goes into effect Jan. 1.

Currently, employees share half of the insurance costs with the city.

In a third item Friday, Council members gave their approval for the reduction of the city's longevity pay plan, taking into consideration that the salaries the city employees are now paid are comparable to those paid to most other employees.

N.C. Man Arrested, Faces Charges

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A Harnett County man who was believed to have drowned Aug. 27 in a boating accident near Carolina Beach was arrested here Friday morning while attempting to cross the United States border into Canada.

Archie Randall Holmes, 34, a Dunn automobile dealer, was arrested on a gun violation charge by U.S. Customs officials after a routine search of a bus in which he was riding. He was also charged with attempted insurance fraud in North Carolina.

Officers said Holmes was using the alias of Danny Strickland, the name of one of the two men who survived the accident.

Gregory Simonian, assistant police chief in Buffalo, said Holmes was carrying a .38-caliber pistol and a .24-caliber automatic pistol. He said Holmes was also carrying $5,000 in cash.

The attempted insurance fraud charge, filed by the New Hanover County Sheriff's Department, is a felony under North Carolina law. Simonian said Holmes waived extradition proceedings to North Carolina.

Simonian said Holmes would be arraigned Saturday on the gun charge. New Hanover officials said they had forwarded a detainer to New York so Holmes would be held without bond pending the extradition.

New Hanover authorities said Holmes' assets included 28 insurance policies valued at about $500,000.

Sources said Holmes was wanted for questioning in a federal probe involving allegations of corruption in the Wilson County Sheriff's Department.

Carter Politicking

INGRAM GETS CARTER'S SUPPORT — President Jimmy Carter is shown as he prepared to address a reception crowd at the Biltmore House in Asheville, N. C., Friday after being introduced by Democratic U. S. Senate hopeful John Ingram. Carter flew to North Carolina to help Ingram raise money for his campaign. (AP Laserphoto)

By HELEN THOMAS
UPI White House Reporter

ALIQUIPPA, Pa. (UPI) — Riding the crest of his glamorous Camp David summit triumph, President Carter Saturday did some politicking in a tough mill town renowned for good steel and great football players.

Weary but relishing his rising poll ratings, he barnstormed western Pennsylvania and central Ohio in a style that was pure Jimmy Carter — a "town meeting" appearance in Aliquippa, a speech for a Pennsylvania congressional candidate and some Democratic fund-raising in Columbus, Ohio.

First stop was a one-hour question-and-answer session with townspeople in the Aliquippa high school, the so-called "town meeting" format Carter devised as a means of fulfilling his inaugural pledge to "stay close to the people."

He polished the technique in small towns like Clinton, Mass., and Yazoo City, Miss., where the questioning focused less on international affairs than on inflation, unemployment, the struggle with federal red tape and similar down to earth issues.

The setting was similar in Aliquippa, population about 22,000, an Ohio Valley steel milling town near Pittsburgh.

In this part of America, autumn weekends are dominated not by politics but by the action on high school gridirons that turn out football stars with assembly line regularity. Aliquippa's latest hero is running back Tony Dorsett of the Dallas Cowboys.

The second stop took in another football hotbed — Columbus, home of the Ohio State Buckeyes.

Saturday's road show followed a similar all-day tour through the Carolinas Friday.

That came atop the marathon, 13-day Middle East summit plus a week catching up on White House work, and it all left the athletic, energetic president admitting he is feeling the strain.

"I came here still tired," he said at the conclusion of Friday's appearances. "I haven't had any time off yet."

Nonetheless, he plunged into his Democratic campaign work as though he were running again himself, reviving his 1976 inspirational calls for "a decent nation, a truthful nation."

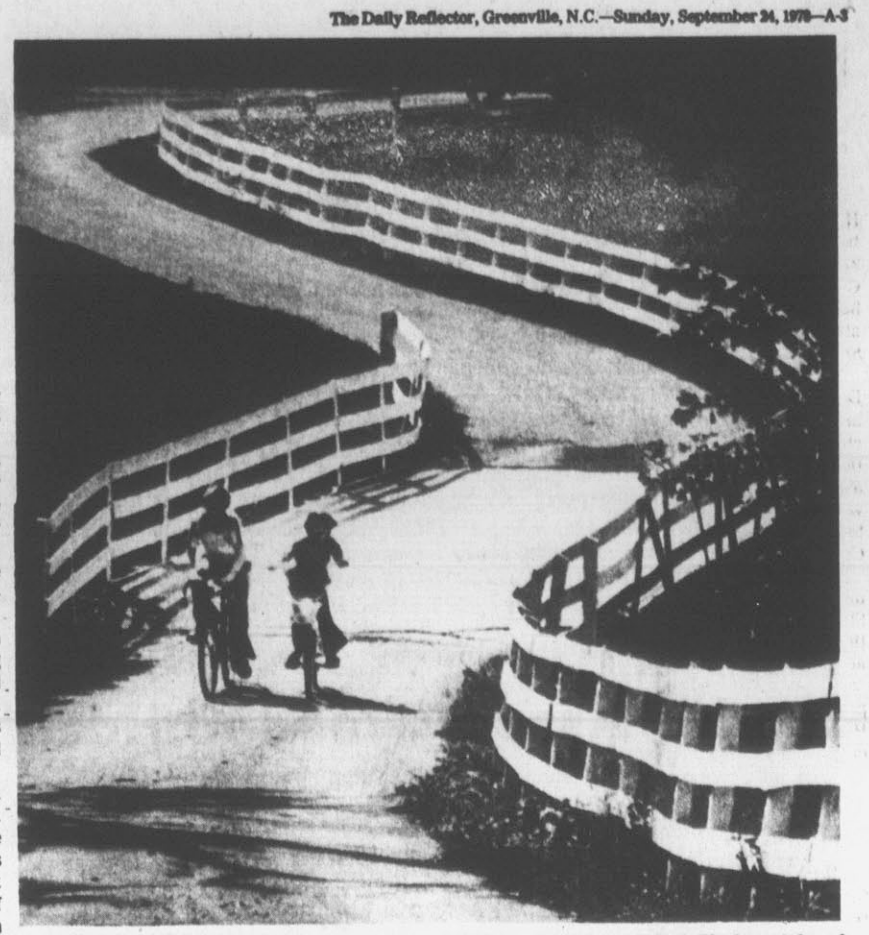

One of the beneficiaries of his stumping, South Carolina Senate candidate Charles "Pug" Ravenel, pretty well summed up the reason for Carter's vigor.

The president, Ravenel said, has passed through "the smarting, debilitating criticism of the recent past into the warm, glowing light of his summit success."

Suddenly, no Democrat is wary of having Jimmy Carter on his bandwagon, and a White House official told UPI Carter has lined up about four political trips for late October in the climactic weeks of the campaign.

The president capitalized on the Camp David glamor, telling one South Carolina crowd Friday that Egypt's President Anwar Sadat had said Carter's southern background increased his talent as a mediator.

"You have sensitivity about our problems in the Middle East because you are from the South," he quoted Sadat as saying. "You know what it means to suffer the tortures of the aftermath of a war, an occupation government and deprivation and struggle."

Israelis Block Highway

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Israeli settlers opposed to the return of the Sinai Peninsula to Egypt blocked a highway with their tractors Saturday, creating a massive traffic jam.

The demonstration tied up hundreds of cars carrying Israelis who had hoped to spend the day at the beach near Yamit, one of 20 settlements slated to be given up if the Knesset, the Israeli parliament, approves.

"Do you understand the significance of the (Camp David) agreements?" the settlers asked in a leaflet handed out to motorists. "It means concessions on everything and unprecedented danger."

Police and soldiers ordered the settlers to break up their blockade, but the demonstrators began driving slowly up and down the road with much the same effect as their blockade.

Beirut Bombarded

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Syrian troops bombarded a heavily populated Christian section of Beirut with rockets Saturday and snipers traded fire in the downtown commercial district, the bloodiest outbreak of fighting in 15 days.

At least 13 persons were wounded as Syrian rockets and mortars smashed into the once-teeming neighborhood of Ashrafiyeh, pushing the casualty toll in 24 hours of fighting in eastern Beirut to two dead and 27 wounded. Most of the wounded were Christians but the Syrians reported three casualties.

Moi Successor To Kenyatta

ANAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Daniel arap Moi, a popular but colorless politician who served as Kenya's vice president for 12 years, Saturday became the successor to the late President Jomo Kenyatta without a murmur of dissent.

Although a number of formalities remained to be completed to seal his selection, the process became moot Saturday morning when Moi was the only candidate to submit his name for the presidency of the nation's only political party.

Last Rebel Stronghold Smashed

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Government troops have smashed the last rebel stronghold in a two-week uprising against President Anastasio Somoza, and the Nicaraguan leader says he now is ready to talk with opposition leaders to end the "prolonged riot" that claimed an estimated 1,500 lives.

The National Guard, Nicaragua's 7,500-man army and police force, announced Friday it had "suffocated" rebel resistance and restored "peace and tranquility in Esteli," a city of 35,000 about 90 miles north of Managua where Sandinista guerrillas and their civilian supporters had held out against government troops since Sept. 9.

Death Toll Reaches 25,000

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Rescue officials said today the estimated death toll from the earthquake that ravaged eastern Iran last Saturday has climbed to 25,000.

The new figure was issued after authorities checked a population census taken in 1975 in the more than 100 towns and villages devastated by the killer quake.

Tabas, an ancient oasis-city of mosques, historical monuments and mud-brick dwellings bore the brunt of the quake. The city of 17,000 was virtually flattened and the Red Lion and Sun, Iran's Red Cross, said only 2,000 residents survived.

The agency said at least another 10,000 people died in surrounding villages. It gave no estimates of those injured or left homeless by the quake.

Mekong Delta Flood

By PAUL WEDEL

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Massive flooding has devastated much of Vietnam's Mekong River Delta rice basket, killing at least 74 persons and leaving 1.5 million more in need of urgent relief, official Radio Hanoi said Saturday. Flooding also was reported in Thailand and Cambodia.

A Vietnamese Foreign Ministry official said 1.5 million persons were "in need of urgent relief." He appealed for international aid including help from the United States.

Hanoi broadcasts monitored in Bangkok, gave the first reports of the extent of largescale flooding beginning Aug. 12 which swept through nine southern Vietnamese provinces killing people, submerging houses, drowning thousands of farm animals and destroying rice fields.

Hurt by drought and insects last year, the latest floods indicate more hard times ahead for the Vietnamese people, already on very short rations.

Hanoi radio said the overflowing Tien and Han rivers in the Mekong Delta have killed 74 people and affected 2.1 million others, of which 1.5 million are in desperate straits. It said 200,000 houses were submerged.

Court Upholds Proposition

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The constitutionality of the Proposition 13 measure approved by tax-weary California voters in June has been upheld by the state Supreme Court.

The measure, which sliced taxes in half, was approved by a 2-1 majority of voters. It has helped lead the way for a nationwide tax revolt.

"We do not consider or weigh the economic or social wisdom or general propriety of the initiative," the court said Friday. "Rather, our sole function is to evaluate (Proposition 13) legally in the light of established constitutional standards."

Proposition 13's co-author, Howard Jarvis, turned 76 Friday and called the court's action a "marvelous birthday present and a bigger present for the people of California."

Paul Gann, the initiative's other orginator said, the court "acted with great speed and wisdom today. They upheld Prop 13 and Prop 13 was a clearly expressed will of the people of California."

The measure, which went into effect July 1, cut property taxes about 57 percent by limiting taxes to 1 percent of market value. It also requires a two-thirds vote of the Legislature to raise any non-property state tax and a two-thirds vote of municipal bodies to raise local taxes.

State Attorney General Evelle Younger, who defended the measure before the state Supreme Court, said the ruling means "people are going to have more efficient, less expensive government."

Disparities Seem Inexcusable

Gov. Hunt has called on the State Utilities Commission to investigate the high cost of retail electricity in the Virginia Electric and Power Co. area.

VEPCO serves Northeastern North Carolina retailing to many customers and wholesaling to customers such as Greenville.

The Vepco rates have run considerably higher than rates charged by Duke Power Co. and Carolina Power and Light Co. in North Carolina.

Vepco blames the higher rates on the rural nature of the North Carolina area it serves and also the fact that it depends more heavily on oil for power generation.

The State Utilities Commission, however, in carrying out the investigation intends to study Vepco's allocation formula for the entire Vepco service area.

The Utilities Commission has ordered Vepco to furnish data and studies for the investigation and allow access to its books and records for the investigation.

Vepco's retail rates are said to be 23 percent above CP&L's and 26 percent above Duke on the average. Vepco industrial customers average 19 percent above CP&L and 38 percent above Duke.

These disparities are inexcusable. Vepco should be serving this area at rates competitive with other power companies operating in this area. The State Utilities Commission's investigation should show some positive results.

Should Assure Needed Hospital Space

A long range hospital study may call for additional land acquisition and further zoning in the Pitt County Memorial Hospital area.

Director Jack Richardson reported on the planning to the hospital trustees Tuesday.

Since the hospital was planned, it has gone from being a county facility to a regional referral facility affiliated with the ECU Medical School.

We should do everything possible to enhance the health facilities growing in the area and to provide adequate space for future hospital expansion.

Court Pics Further Away

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — A televised scene inside the courtroom as fugitive Joan Little appeared for pre-trial processing has all but eliminated the chance for in-court cameras anytime soon. Supreme Court Chief Justice Susie Sharp was upset over the incident. An appointment with her, involving Superior Court Judge James H. Bailey, to discuss allowing cameras was scrubbed; and Bailey now says he sees no need to even try to talk about the subject with Miss Sharp.

Ironically, the television crew took their pictures through a glass panel in the rear courtroom door. They never stepped into the courtroom itself.

Technically, however, the rules put down by the chief justice ban cameras from courtrooms and adjoining corridors or lobbies.

So intent is Miss Sharp in her administration of that provision that cameras have even been banned at ceremonies installing new judges on two recent occasions. The rules specifically allow pictures at ceremonial occasions. But when the chief justice says No, who can you appeal to?

Bailey now says it will be up to a new chief justice when Miss Sharp retires late next year. Speculation on that post centers around Joe Branch and Phil Carlton.

Plan Ahead

A growing number of judges and attorneys favor pictures in the courtroom under controlled conditions such as allowing only one television camera and one still camera with the location established, and only then with agreement from all participants.

The technical advancements of late, allowing both television and newspaper photography without bright lights, would make the cameras unobtrusive, says bailey; and critics who argue that judges and attorneys would "ham it up" overlook the fact that judges and attorneys "ham it up" even when there are no cameras, Bailey commented.

BILL NOBLITT

The best approach, Bailey adds, would be for news media representatives to search out supportive judges and attorneys and together draw up rules on which all could agree for presentation to the next chief justice.

More Bureaucrats

Consider this report in the recently published summary of labor statistics: "During the past 12 months, total employment in the state has risen by 92,000 (up 3.6 percent). The major portion of this gain was in non-agricultural wage and salary employment which jumped by 71,700 workers, as evidenced by strong increases in the following industries:

"Furniture, up 3,700; apparel, up 2,500; construction, up 7,000; trade, up 13,000; service up 17,300;

"And government, up 19,600."

Land Policy

Gov. Jim Hunt adds his endorsement to plans to push local land use planning rather than a statewide land management approach.

"We need to have local land use plans; not a central body doing statewide land use planning," he says.

Earlier approaches to a statewide counterpart of the 20-county Coastal Area Management Act now in effect are being abandoned in favor of state support for local planning.

THE INSIDE REPORT

A To-Be-Continued Task

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The success or failure of President Carter's skillful mediation at Camp David in building a "framework" for peace now depends not on Egyptian President Anwar Sadat or Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin but squarely on Jimmy Carter himself.

The "framework" will not stand alone; it must be fleshed out with the help of moderate, pro-Western Arab powers. Only the president has the political clout to expand the promise of Camp David — a dramatic display of U.S. mediation unprecedented in American history — into the Mideast peace Mr. Carter has worked so hard for.

The president's clever handling of Sadat's demand for eventual Arab sovereignty on the West Bank shows how indispensable his role was at the summit. Without eventual self-determination for West Bank Palestinians, Sadat insisted, there could be no separate Egyptian-Israeli peace.

Nothing in the documents signed by Sadat and Begin delivers such guarantees. But behind the cold print, return of the Sinai Peninsula to Egypt and eventual return of most of the West Bank to Arab sovereignty were linked together.

"You made a commitment to be a full partner in the peace talks," Sadat said in his solemn, restrained statement Sunday night sitting in the East Room with Begin and Mr. Carter. "The continuation of your active role is indispensable."

That was Sadat's veiled warning: Only you, Mr. President, can make these peace talks successful; if they fail on the West Bank, success between Egypt and Israel is not guaranteed.

Behind Sadat's pointed reminder that Mr. Carter continues as a "full partner" were hours of private talks in which the president pledged that if Sadat would sign with Begin, the U.S. would bring about an end of Israeli rule over 1.5 million Arabs on the West Bank and Gaza.

As former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, who was kept informed of developments throughout the secret talks at the 13day summit, told us: "The only possibility now is that most of the West Bank will revert to Arab sovereignty."

Begin himself set the stage for this probable outcome. Last winter he promised autonomy, or self-rule, to West Bank Arabs with Israel retaining authority over military security. He conceded nothing on Israel's own claim to West Bank sovereignty, a claim backed only by alleged biblical revelations.

But Carter persuaded Begin at Camp David to base a West Bank settlement on United Nations Resolution 242 "in all its parts," with Palestinian autonomy guaranteed. That virtually resolves the sovereignty question.

The ingenious route Mr. Carter chose to arrive at this result was persuading Sadat to accept an indirect link between a speedy Egyptian-Israeli peace, to be followed by an Arab-Israeli deal on the West Bank tied directly to Begin's self-rule offer.

Some skeptical administration Mideast specialists suspect that Begin's strategy on the West Bank will be to "screw up" the process of West Bank self-rule, since each step of progress there depends on specific Israeli approval. Likewise, cynical Begin-

Strength For Today

THE SHAPE OF THE FUTURE

A little over one hundred and fifty years ago, the scientists of the day insisted that it would be impossible for vehicles of any kind to travel at speeds of more than thirty miles per hour. The reason they gave was that no one could breathe at such speeds.

Time, of course, has made this statement absurd. More things have taken place to change living conditions during the past one hundred years than have occurred during the previous 1,000 years. But certainly not all these changes are for the better.

Standards of living are vastly improved; but mass destruction of human life is possible today on a scale never envisaged before. Science and the soul of man are running a race, and so far science is in the lead. Until we learn to put scientific discoveries under the control of spiritual principles, the danger of catastrophe grows ever larger. And so far, the possibility of effecting this transformation appears to be dim.

Sunday Morning Notes

When President Carter, Israeli Prime Minister Begin and Egyptian President Sadat announced a settlement of Middle East differences in a dramatic television appearance last Sunday night it was an event of world interest.

It also interrupted regular television programming throughout the United States.

Thirteen- year-old David Schlienz was watching along with most of the nation. He was aware that the leaders had been closeted at Camp David for days attempting to hammer out an agreement.

Prime Minister Begin appeared on the screen with a broad grin.

"Look," young David commented to his parents. "Begin has been with President Carter so long he even smiles like him." David is a student at E. B. Aycock School and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Schlienz.

Louis is a member of the ECU board of trustees. He and his wife were ushered in the special box upon arrival at the stadium.

Louis said he couldn't see anybody he knew down in the stadium. "I wanted to wave to them," he quipped.

It's always that way. . .but try getting pulled for speeding on the highway and see how many of your friends come along while the blue light blinks.

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

The press, radio and tv leave me really knowing little about the conflict in Nicaragua. Every report, visual, spoken and printed, which has come to my attention has been obviously partisan in nature. And the partisanship is exclusively Rebel Partisanship. This is not correct journalism. Yet this partisanship is the same that permeates the whole of news reporting throughout American journalism.

Some facts have been included quite casually in the reports from Nicaragua which suggest that there may be another side to the news, as yet unreported.

(1) In a country of 2,200,000 people, the army has 7,000 men (the 1978 World Almanac reports that there are also 4,000 paramilitary men). If there were a truly popular uprising, this seems to be a very small number to suppress opposition to the government which has been twice elected in the past 10 years.

(2) There is a hard-core Marxist center to the rebel activity in Nicaragua, as there is in other Latin American countries in both North and South America. These Marxists have received both training and support from Castro's Cuba.

(3) The Rebls placed themselves in civilian locations in the city of Leon. The news media report damage and casualties to these civilians charging the government with brutality for fighting the Rebels where they were rather than waiting for them to regroup themselves where there were no civilians.

When can we understand that guerrilla action, including Terrorism, is warfare? And people are killed in warfare. When can we understand that guerrilla warfare must be met by war? When can we understand that peace is destroyed by guerrilla action, not by reaction of government to guerrillas?

Business establishments use black lists. Police departments use a criminal list. The Greenville Police Department, however, has added a new list to its collection. This is known as a whiskey offenders list.

Here's how the list is compiled. Whenever they nab a person for illegal possession of liquor for purpose of sale, the person is placed on this list.

To date, there are 31 names on the list. Some of them had been indicted on several occasions for illegal possession of liquor, or for selling whiskey.

George Kittrell of Winterville has just returned from Canada where he aided farmers there in the curing and handling of tobacco.

Kittrell declared that the Canadians have a good crop and farmers are optimistic over prospects for good prices.

Farmers there sell their tobacco in a different manner than is used in this country. In Canada, buyers go to the barn where they grade the tobacco and purchase it direct. A government appraiser goes behind the buyers to see that the farmer receives a fair grading for his product.

Cloned Grape Vines

By MICHAEL BLUMSTEIN

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — While scientists debate the possibilities of duplicating human beings from a single cell, a University of Rhode Island professor cloned a vineyard.

Dr. William R. Krul, a professor of plant and soil science, discovered a single breed of grape that can be reproduced by cloning — taking one cell from an organism and getting it to multiply until there is a carbon copy of the parent.

To date there's been no indisputable evidence of cloned human beings, but scientists have successfully cloned "soft" plants such as asparagus and carrots.

Krul is believed among the first scientists cloning "woody" plants: in particular, grapes.

Traditionally, vines are reproduced with cuttings rooted in sand. But Krul can put a single cell in his test tube and wind up with a healthy plant.

Dr. Michael Faust, chief of the U.S. Agriculture Department's fruit laboratory in Beltsville, Md., said Krul's methods have "tremendous advantages" for the wine industry.

To clone a plant, Krul takes an individual cell from a "young, immature" section such as a stem and places it in a medium which includes nutrients, sugar, vitamins and hormones.

The cell splits in two and new cells continue to divide until a "tumor-like mass" forms. Cells are taken from the mass and put in a medium with different hormones until new plants begin to grow. Once he figures out why it clones so easily, he hopes to get other types of grapes to reproduce from a single cell.

"Taking cuttings is perfectly acceptable but if you find a rare mutant and you only have one small piece of wood, it would take several years under conventional methods to grow many plants.

"With cloning, you get thousands and thousands of plants in a relatively short time," he said.

"It will be a tremendous advantage," Faust agreed. "When we develop a new variety, we can produce 10,000 plants in months."

Krul and Faust both say cloning also produces healthier plants. Bothersome viruses, common to grape vines, aren't transmitted through cloning as they are through cuttings.

"There is a good demand for virus-free vines. Most people are limited in the number they can produce," Krul said.

Although most grape vines take three years to produce fruit, the scientist said his cloned vines had fruit after one year. The next step is to test the plants "for trueness to type — to make sure we've still got what we started with."

The few bunches of grapes he has harvested seem to be satisfactory, he said.

"In color, shape and flavor, there is no way these grapes can be distinguished from the plant that gave up the original cutting," he said.

Seeking The Skilled Executive

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analys

NEW YORK (AP) — This is the anatomy of the search for a highly skilled executive, compiled in answer to a newsman puzzled inquiry: "Just what is it that an executive search firm does?"

The quest began in August 1977 when the client, a computer maker, telephoned Bartholdi & Co., a search firm based in Wellesley, Mass., for help in finding a highly professional security manager.

Ted Bartholdi, company president, himself once recruited from IBM and formerly president of a technology company, met with the client's employment manager a week later and learned that the job entailed:

—Protection of company offices, factories and new product plans.

—Executive protection from terrorist attacks around the world.

—Auditing and security of computers the client used in its own operations, in order to protect against white-collar thievery.

At a meeting a week later with the line executive to whom the new employee would report, job details were further defined and Bartholdi learned everything he could about the concern.

A fee equal to 30 percent of the candidate's first-year guaranteed income was agreed upon, payable in part as an initial $2,000 retainer and $2,000 a month during the length of the search.

Anything remaining would be payable when the candidate began work. The client would reimburse the Bartholdi firm for its expenses and for expenses it paid on behalf of candidates.

Ted Bartholdi assigned himself the job of "engagement officer" with day-to-day responsibility. A consulting officer was named to assist him in planning overall strategy.

They selected the names of 500 individuals from the directories of the American Society for Industrial Security and the Society of Former Special Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Inc.

Letters were sent to all 500. One hundred telephoned in response, 70 of them interested in the job themselves. Fifty responses came by letter, again expressing interest or recommending others.

All the respondees and those recommended were telephoned to eliminate those who might decline because of geography or the general terms of the compensation package. After the phone calls, Bartholdi interviewed 25 candidates — at restaurants, airports and the like.

The field was narrowed to five. Each was interviewed by the client employment manager and line executive. Bartholdi was not present.

With the help of a detailed background profile prepared by Bartholdi, the client narrowed the field to two, whose backgrounds were again examined intensively to separate impressions from facts.

This final exam, called a reference audit, involved telephone calls to individuals who worked with the candidates, soliciting their views on the candidates' strengths, weaknesses and other characteristics.

With bonuses, the candidate was earning more than $50,000 a year. The client wanted to pay only $40,000 and took several days before agreeing to Bartholdi's recommendation of a $45,000 offer.

Cost to the client was $17,300 — Bartholdi & Company's 30 percent fee of about $13,500, and $3,800 in e

Observations From Editorial Columns

Bothered In Harnett

The four-day week of the State Department of Transportation is bothering officials in Harnett County.

It's not the fact that state highway workers are on the job only four days and are then idle for three which bothers the folks in Harnett.

What bothers them most is seeing all that expensive highway machinery setting there idle for three whole days when roads need fixing.

There's not much the Harnett officials can do about it, however, because the Department of Transportation believes it gets more done with a four-day work week than under the regular five-day system.

The four-day work week has been tried in some private industries, including this area, especially in textile manufacturing. There have been mixed reports on the results. Some industries which tried the four-day plan have abandoned it, and some workers who were enthusiastic at first have said that working longer hours under the four-day plan made them too tired to fully enjoy the three days of free time.

At any rate, the four-day plan does not appear to be catching on across the country, and one of the reasons may be the same as that voiced in Harnett County. Plant owners hate to see expensive machinery idle for three days in a row. — The Pilot, Southern Pines

A man was charged the other day with firing a shotgun into a crowd of north Charlotte partygoers. None was seriously injured, fortunately, but the kicker to the whole episode was that there was no apparent reason for the shooting.

That is, of course, unless you consider experience. And, that experience shows that the man charged had been arrested 31 other times, with 18 convictions going back to 1970.

Those convictions ranged from traffic violations to rape and they included such offenses at hit and run, larceny, possession and sale and delivery of heroin, assault on a female, storebreaking and larceny, prison escape and others. Some of his arrests involved multiple charges.

There is no excuse for such situations. Sophistication of today's techniques and efforts in the field of social and psychological work should long since have precluded the freedom for one man to continue building his criminal record.

At times, the man was out of jail on bond and awaiting trial on charges only to be re-arrested on other charges. Oh, yes. Of the 18 convictions, in some cases he received suspended sentences or the charges were dropped.

Money Hungry

The state Wildlife Resources Commission has taken leave of its senses with a proposed 40 percent hike in hunting and fishing license fees. The increase could have no other effect than to discourage people of modest means from participating in these activities.

The hike would raise resident hunting and fishing licenses 25 percent to $10, and big-game licenses (additional for hunting turkey, deer, bear or boar) nearly 300 percent to $10.

Persons fishing with live bait in their own county, a widespread leisure activity never before taxed in North Carolina, also would be brought under licensing regulation to raise revenue for the commission.

This regulatory body, which already collects about $9 million a year in license fees, is moving toward a costly game and fish program for a limited clientele. It isn't believable that the legislature will allow it to continue in that undemocratic direction. — The Hickory Daily Record

Today In History

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Sept. 24, the 267th day of 1978. There are 98 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1963, the U.S. Senate ratified a treaty with Britain and the Soviet Union limiting nuclear tests.

On this date:

In 1780, in the American Revolution, Benedict Arnold escaped to a British ship after attempting to betray the West Point fortifications on the Hudson River.

In 1789, the U.S. Supreme Court was being formed, and President George Washington named John Jay of New York as the first Chief Justice.

In 1869, thousands of businessmen were ruined in a Wall Street crash known as "Black Friday."

In 1934, Babe Ruth made his farewell appearance as a regular player with the New York Yankees.

In 1941, Allied governments in World War II pledged adherence to the Atlantic Charter.

In 1955, President Dwight Eisenhower suffered a heart attack while on vacation in Denver, Colo.

Ten years ago: The United Nations General Assembly opened its 23rd session and admitted Swaziland as the 125th U.N. member.

Five years ago: Former CIA agent Howard Hunt told a senate committee that former White House Special Assistant Charles Colson had been aware early in 1972 of the scheme that led to the Watergate break in.

One year ago: The United States and the Soviet Union said high-level talks had narrowed their differences on a proposed agreement limiting strategic bomber and missile forces.

Today's birthdays: Former astronaut John Young is 48 years old. British entertainer Anthony Newley is 47. Third baseman Eric Soderholm of the Chicago White Sox is 30.

Thought for today: Most people put off until tomorrow that which they should have done yesterday — Ed Howe, American writer, 1853-1937.

watchers worry that he will deliberately but secretly plot to have the Israeli parliament vote against Begin's no-newsettlements pledge. That pledge is conditioned on the Knesset's approval.

Cooler heads here dispute such concerns. While cautioning that nothing at all is guaranteed, they do not believe Begin or his government would deliberately undermine Begin's own agreement on new Jewish settlements — an essential element of Mr. Carter's mediation.

Also essential is help from King Hussein of Jordan, who has no desire to play any role at all on the West Bank. But it would be surprising if he did not come along under pressure. Only Mr. Carter can exert it.

The president came down from the Camp David summit with no more than advertised -- a "framework" for Mideast peace that can be filled in only if Mr. Carter continues what Sadat calls his "indispensable" role as a full partner. Further success will lead not only to a profound change in the bloody Middle East; it will also confirm Jimmy Carter as a leader to be reckoned with.

Artificial Jobs With No Past And No Future

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — The Congress seems determined to extend the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act, known for short as CETA, and it perhaps is futile to keep hollering against it. Nevertheless, for the record, this wasteful, minsmanaged program continues to provide a prime example of much that is wrong in government today.

Yes, the CETA outlays have accomplished some good. It would be impossible for even the most incompetent bureaucrats to ladle out $10 billion a year and not do some good. Since I last wrote about CETA, scores of local administrators and Job-holders have written in defense of the program, and their sincereity is not to be questioned.

But the faults in CETA are too deep to be remedied by cosmetic amendments to the law or by conscientious people here and there. At bottom, the problem is simply that the Congress is attempting to work miracles, and the Congress isn't up to the job. The theory is that if only enough billions are appropriated, somehow the hard-core unemployed will be born again as skilled labor. Life doesn't work that way.

Too many billions have been provided. Given an appropriation of ten or eleven billion dollars, no agency on earth could spend the money responsibly. The temptations are irresistible, and hundreds of con artists, hustlers and streetwise opportunists have made no effort to resist them. Under the device known as "substitution", municipal governments have abused the program by using federal funds to pad their local payrolls. In terms of National contributions toward a significant, lasting reduction in hard-core unemployment, CETA's record is pathetically poor.

The Republican Study Committee has been putting together a CETA scrapbook. A typical item: CETA recently gave $336,000 of our tax money to La Raza, a Hispanic organization "with a history of political activism." The purpose of the CETA grant is to help others get CETA grants. This is hardly the kind of training in job skills envisioned by the naive authors of the act.

Out in California, the Thousand Oaks News-Chronicle reported last month that CETA workers were being used in its area "to conduct a toilet-flushing conservation survey".

Down in Louisiana, the States-Item charged that CETA funds were used to help a state senator run for office. Among the hard-core unemployed hired by the New Orleans regional service center were the senator's niece and nephew. This particular CETA center was supposed to provide a reading program for children, but for six months no children showed up. The CETA workers spent their idle hours working hard at doing nothing, and being well paid for their labor.

The Northern Virginia Daily and the Winchester Star last week chronicled a CETA snafu involving Puerto Ricans flown in chartered planes to Dulles Airport with a view toward putting them to work as apple pickers. There's nothing wrong with that idea, but many of the Puerto Ricans who arrived were totally unprepared for the arduous demands of an apple orchard. They could not manage the 22-foot ladders, nor heft the 50-pound buckets, and even with some patient tutelage, they were picking only six to eight bushels an hour. The growers, faced with harvesting a 4.4 million bushel crop in 40 days, refused flat-out to hire more than about half of the Puerto Ricans flown in. The rest had to be housed in motels and finally most of them were flown back to San Juan. It was a costly fiasco in every way, and a cruel disservice to the disappointed workers.

Government can make a sensible contribution, of course, to the unemployment problem. Government can create an atmosphere in which business and industry can make the profits and retain the capital that adds up to tools and jobs and production. But little of lasting value can be created by throwing billions of tax dollars into busy little artificial jobs with no past and not much future, either.

Dr. Grady Young Built Up Acupuncture Skills

ATLANTA, Ga. — Twenty-nine years ago when Dr. Young graduated from veterinary school, he weighed 135 pounds and stood 5'5" tall. He wondered how he could handle the larger pets he would be treating, some as heavy as 2,000 pounds, and so he advertised in a veterinary journal for suggestions. Of the 200 replies he received, one made a difference. A German vet asked, "Why don't you try acupuncture?"

The young vet's subsequent search for information on acupuncture proved fruitless. Nowhere in this country could he find a book on the subject. In desperation, he wrote a used bookstore in London, and they sent a volume on the subject written by a husband and wife missionary medical team working in the Orient. But the book did not reveal specifically how Dr. Young could use the method efficiently.

"Thus we began acupuncture by trial and error. We failed nine times for one success," Dr. Young admits. "We would remember the points with which we had success and then use them over and over."

days, a black Labrador retriever in the final stages of chorea lay on Dr. Young's examining table. The violent jerking caused by the disease made it difficult to hold the dog on the table.

Her owner said, "Put Jet to sleep, Doctor. She's suffered enough." These words came hard, for Jet's master was a paralytic who needed her companionship.

While Dr. Young prepared for the task ahead, Mrs. Young said, "Why don't you try acupuncture, Grady?"

Dr. Young agreed and injected the dog with a mild Lugol's solution cut with one-half water. The procedure is known as aquapuncture, a form of acupuncture.

"After the treatment, I put the dog in the cage and instructed the kennelman to bring the dog to me the next day," Dr. Young recalls. "Then I got busy and forgot about him."

The third day the kennelman brought Jet back to the examining table. Dr. Young didn't recognize the dog. Jet's body no longer jerked. They administered vitamins and yeast, commonly used in treatment then, and returned the dog to her cage.

Several weeks passed and there was no sign of reoccurance. Finally, Dr. Young called Mr. Butler and asked him to drop by the clinic.

"Hold Jet out of sight until I give the signal," Dr. Young told his kennelman. "Then let her go."

When Mr. Butler arrived, Dr. Young said, "I want to tell you about your dog, Jet. I didn't put her to sleep; I treated her." At that instant, the signal was given and Jet bounded out, barking and wagging her tail. The crippled man cried with joy.

This early healing experiment with acupuncture preceded years of seemingly miraculous cures of hogs, horses, cows and cats, as well as dogs. Dr. Young eventually compiled his findings in a manual which he uses in seminars conducted at Purdue, Texas A&M and other universities.

Now considered an authority in the field of veterinary acupuncture, Dr. Young looks back on his success with pleasure.

"We will not do more than 15 to 20 percent of our work with acupuncture, he said, "and we produce healing in between 85 and 95 percent of those we treat."

Dr. Young carries on a full veterinary practice, using his downtown clinic in Atlanta for small animals, and his nearby farm (where he raises Nubian goats and cattle) for the larger animal patients.

Lately, coronary problems have stopped his 10-hour days, but he still has no plans to retire. Up before dawn, he spends a lot of time organizing the acupuncture seminars and carrying on a worldwide correspondence with colleagues in the field, from Brazil to Iran.

"I go a lot on nervous energy," Dr. Young concedes, "If I slowed down ...." The sentence remained unfinished, for the press of his work was on him. — Dorothy Prunty, free lance, Jacksboro, Tex.

All Else May Fail But Murphy's Law Stands

By GAIL MICHAELS

Our household always seems to operate under Murphy's Law. If something can go wrong, it will. Within the last six weeks both our bicycles have been stolen, our clothes dryer has broken down, my dishwasher quit, and my husband, who is allergic to grass, was presented after a three year hiatus with a lawn to mow. Worst of all, the new radial tires that we just bought for our car keep going flat.

Now, they don't do this when Phillip is around. They wait until he's at least 20 miles away, and I have to be somewhere in ten minutes. And of course, I don't know how to change a flat. What's more, I don't intend to learn. Perhaps I am an anomaly in this day and age, but, as far as I'm concerned, the men can have everything even vaguely related to tools and machinery. I won't even learn to operate a manual can-opener.

So, naturally, the first time a tire went flat, I called a service station. They sent someone out to the tire immediately and charged me only $4. And I figured that, given the alternative, I could afford those rates.

Unfortunately, as Phillip had warned, a mechanic is not always available. The next time the tire went flat, it was after 6 p.m. on a Saturday, and in every service station I called, everyone except the night attendant was off for the evening. I was supposed to meet Phillip in 15 minutes, and I had no way to get in touch with him in order to tell him what had happened. I got so frantic that I suffered an attack of temporary insanity...I actually considered changing the tire myself.

But since I had never had the opportunity to converse with a jack, I didn't know what one looked like. And nothing in the trunk resembled in any way my conception of one.

Luckily, just as I decided to let Phillip sleep on a street corner for the night, my neighbor's teen-age son drove into his driveway. The light dawned immediately. I trooped through the lush stand of weeds in our backyard, under the clothesline where rigor mortis was setting into my towels, and I grabbed the young man's arm. I steered him over to my car, opened the trunk for him, and watched in fascination as he identified something that looked like a large nutcracker as a jack and set to work.

"Well at least you got a chance to watch, so that you'll know what to do next time," Phillip said when I told him what had happened.

"Yes," I said. "Next time I'll call a service station again."

"Oh, brother," he sighed. "And what if the same thing happens that happened this time?"

"I'll find another neighbor."

"And what if you're on a lonely road after dark?"

"I'll lock myself in and wait till morning."

"You are absolutely the stubbornest woman I know," he said. "Don,t you know that you'll never be truly liber ated until your can do that kind of thing for yourself?"

"Yeah, and the next thing you'd be telling me is that if I'm capable of changing a tire, I can operate a lawnmower too."

"So?"

I looked at the pile of laundry waiting to be hung, the pile of dirty dishes waiting to be washed, and my spaghetti-covered daughter waiting, very unwillingly, to be bathed and put to bed. Then I looked out at our lawn. "So...", I said, "that kind of liberation I can do without."

Cost Of Social Security Is Also Felt Abroad

By DONALD M. McNICOLL
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) -- Until he retired a couple of years ago, Piet Meinema used to complain about the hefty social security deductions that took 16.4 percent out of his pay packet.

"Like most people, I thought I was paying too much for too little in return, but now I can say it was worthwhile."

As a married man, age 66, he gets $1,005 a month in pensions: $590 from the compulsory Netherlands state pension plan and $415 from the Dutch national airline KLM, for which he worked 20 years. Taxes cut this to $670 a month, but, "together with a little bit of my savings it enables me to do most things I want to do," Meinema says.

Retired workers in Europe generally agree with him that it pays to be in pension and other social security plans, especially if employers operate them in addition to those of the state, an Associated Press survey shows.

But inflation and mounting bills are forcing European governments to take a hard second look at social security. One after the other, they are having to subsidize the programs and often bail them out.

The costs are astronomical, since social security in Europe extends far beyond pensions for the elderly.

Years ago it was dubbed "womb to tomb" security. Now it's even pre-womb and posttomb. It can include free or subsidized contraceptive pills, unemployment and sickness benefits, funeral costs, and pensions for widows and orphans as well as the retired.

In Britain, the publicly funded National Health Service will foot the bill (amount undisclosed, but sure to be big) for the sophisticated technology and medical care that led to a test tube pregnancy for Mrs. Lesley Brown in a hospital at Oldham.

And British social security shells out $250 a week to finance "Big John Knight," 42, a jobless man who goes on fathering children although there are already 21 in the two homes he keeps for his legal wife and for another woman in the rugged hills of Cornwall.

The costs would be even higher if everyone claimed everything to which he is entitled. It's estimated that 900,000 people in Britain don't claim all they could — a total of $555 million.

Italy's economy is far from strong, yet of an estimated 57 million Italians, 16.5 million are receiving state retirement pensions worth $25 billion a year. The state's pension funds yield $11 billion a year less than that, so the state has to make good the deficit by loans and subsidies.

On top of this, the number of pensions paid to Italians who claim they are unfit for work soared from 1 million in 1959 to 5 million in 1976. And of 2.3 million Italian farmers enrolled in the National Institute of Social Security, all but 90,000 get some sort of pension. As a result, for every $100 farmers pay into the institute, farmers draw out $1,575.

"The terrific national illness of cunning has infected all social classes," says Leonardo Vanente, an Italian social security specialist.

An Italian worker pays 7.15 percent of his wages and his employer 16.46 percent to social security. The government is considering plans to shoulder part of the employers' contributions on top of the $11 billion annual deficit the government already meets.

Unlike other European nations, Switzerland, one of the world's richest countries, has no trouble providing retirement pensions of between $404 and $808 a month, financed by contributions of 5 percent each from employes and employers.

West Germany's social security system is also relatively stable, although poorer economic conditions of late have led some opposition Conservatives to predict a deficit of $16 billion a year in the next decade. To forestall that, the government has restricted increases in pension payments for the next several years.

An official of the Ministry of Labor says $610 a month was paid on average in 1977 to people who retired after 40 to 45 years work.

Guidance Counselors At Recent ECU Workshop

ECU News Bureau

Approximately 90 high school guidance counselors participated in East Carolina University's recent Secondary School Guidance Counselors Workshop, where they met with Walter R. Jacobs Jr., associate director of the southern regional office of the College Board.

The College Board produces the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) used throughout the nation as a standard for college entrance. The ECU College Board program was one of several offered at various host institutions for area counselors.

Among the topics of the workshop were College Board examinations, College Scholarship Service (CSS) financial aid programs and the National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test.

The day's events also featured a presentation by Robert Boudreaux of the ECU Financial Aid Office, a representative of the N.C. Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators.

Boudreaux explained eligibility guidelines and application procedures for the N.C. Student Incentive Grant Program and the N.C. Insured Student Loan Program.

Hosts for the workshop were officials of ECU's Office of Admissions. Assistant Dean of Admissions Gayle Everett coordinated the program.

Names and schools of guidance counselors who participated in the workshop follow:

Social Security....

many's 50-50 contributions from employers and workers, the French employer must pay into Social Security an average of 35.5 percent of wages and workers must pay 11.6 percent.

In 1976, the French system piled up a relatively modest deficit of $195 million. Economies have now brought a surplus of $600 million.

The average Frenchman can count on a pension of half his final salary when he retires at 65, up to a maximum of $435 a month. Women and some manual workers get the same deal at 60.

In Spain, which has had an inflation rate of more than 20 percent for the past three years, social security is a chronic headache.

Spanish employers contribute between 61.6 and 73.5 percent of each worker's salary, and each worker has to pay 10.7 to 17.3 percent of salary — yet the social security system is always in the red.

This year, the government raised its social security budget to $16.8 billion from last year's $12 billion.

Besides pensions — which last year averaged $90, just under half the average monthly salary — Spaniards get hospital and other medical care, including 80 percent of the costs of medicines.

The elaborate welfare system in the Netherlands now accounts for 22 percent of the national income, compared with only 9 percent in 1960. The state paid one-third of the $22 billion cost last year.

The Center-Right coalition that came to power last December says it plans cutbacks.

In Denmark, 40 percent of the state budget goes to social benefits, and less than 10 percent for defense. Of the half million state employees, 200,000 work in the social and health services.

But Denmark's heavy taxes on incomes, liquor and tobacco keeps the social security system going smoothly. Some 811,000 of Denmark's 5.2 million people get state pensions averaging $200 a month, plus payments from widespread private pension funds.

In Britain, just over 10 percent of the nation's income is devoted to social security. That works out to some $16.5 billion, which goes for medical expenses, death benefits, child allowances, and pensions.

The average worker pays about 5.75 percent of his earnings into the funds and the employer 8.75 percent. When a man retires at 65, he and his wife get a pension of $45.33 a week. This can be supplemented in various ways, such as with allowances to help meet electricity charges or local taxes, and by cheap or free travel.

The government has been trying to cut back, but frequently runs into furious protests.

"As a result of persisting economic problems, most European governments have lost their appetite for bigger and better social programs," says Donald F. Poden, director of William M. Mercer Benefits Ltd. and an expert on European social security.

"Many are caught in a dilemma, for an increase in social security taxes would have a deflationary effect on their already depressed economies, while a reduction in benefits is politically unthinkable."

Crossing-Repair

Mayo Allen, director of Public Works here, said that he has been notified by Seaboard Coast Line Railroad Co. that crews will be here early Tuesday to begin repair work on the Fourth Street railroad crossing.

Allen reported that his department will place barricades on Fourth Street at Elizabeth Street and at Pitt Street during the repair period. No thru traffic will be allowed during the period, he added, although residents of Fourth will have access to their homes.

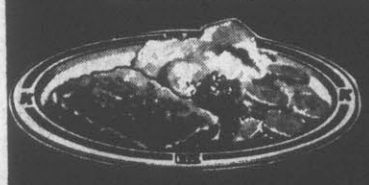

According to Allen, the barricades will be up all day Tuesday and possibly on Wednesday, depending on the repair time needed by Seaboard Coast Line.

Public Works Department personnel will be on hand during the repair period, the director stated.

He said that the crossing at Third Street will hopefully be scheduled for repair work within three to four weeks. Fifth Street crossing repairs were recently completed.

Allen requested the cooperation of the public during the repair efforts.

PLANE WRECKAGE — A Navy photographer stands on the mangled tail section of a Navy patrol plane that crashed with eight aboard Friday in southern Maine. (AP Laserphoto)

Bodies Of Eight Crewmen Recovered

POLAND, Maine (AP) — Despite reports from witnesses on the ground, there is no evidence a second plane was involved in the midair explosion of a Navy patrol plane that crashed into woods, killing the eight crewmen aboard, federal investigators say.

The bodies of the crewmembers aboard the P-3 Orion from the Brunswick Naval Air Station were recovered Friday. Names of the dead were withheld pending notification of next of kin.

The cause of the crash was undetermined, but investigators said reports that two planes collided were unfounded. When the Orion exploded, pieces of it shot off in different directions, possibly giving the appearance of two aircrafts, officials said.

"There was no indication of trouble" before air controllers lost contact with the Orion at 12:15 p.m., Navy officials said.

Wreckage was strewn over a two-mile area of this rural town. Pieces of the plane were hurled to the ground with such force that the engine bore a 1-foot-deep hole in Maine Highway 11. Large sections of fuselage blasted a clearing in the woods.

Claims Kidnap Rigged

NEW YORK (AP) — The 23-year-old baby-sitter on trial for kidnapping Calvin Klein's daughter says the fashion designer promised her $200,000 and no problems if she would abduct the child as a publicity stunt.

In testimony Friday in State Supreme Court, Paule Ransay also said she and Klein had been sexually intimate. Miss Ransay said she and Klein met three times last January and that on the second occasion, "We had sexual relations."

Klein has denied both allegations.

Miss Ransay is on trial with her half-brother Dominique Ransay, who is accused of taking part in the kidnapping Feb. 3 of 11-year-old Marci Klein. Both Ransays are natives of Martinique.

Speaking with a soft French accent, Miss Ransay sometimes appeared on the verge of tears during her court appearance Friday. She said Klein had promised her $200,000 in a kidnap plot involving herself, Dominique, and Cecil Wiggins. Wiggins has pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of second-degree kidnapping.

She said the fashion designer assured her that "there wouldn't be any problems." She quoted him as saying he wanted it done for "publicity" and that "if anything happened, I would get you some help."

Under cross examination by Assistant District Attorney Thomas Demakis, she was asked why she did not ask a friend to call Klein for help when she was arrested the day after the kidnapping.

"I couldn't ask my boyfriend to call the man I was having an affair with," Miss Ransay answered.

She said last January Klein called her and plotted the kidnap, telling her to lure Marci off a school bus with the story that he was gravely ill. She was supposed to claim later that she was forced into the scheme by unknown men, Miss Ransay testified.

Police said Marci was held about 10 hours in Miss Ransay's apartment while the father delivered $100,000 ransom to a drop in the Pan Am building. The money was recovered.

She said she could not remember the dates of phone calls Klein supposedly made to her or when he allegedly first broached the kidnap plan.

"Wasn't getting a call from Calvin Klein a big thing?" Damakis asked.

"I know a lot of famous men," Miss Ransay responded, "and I know a lot of rich men."

Wants Family To Become Indian Tribe

ATLANTIC, N.C. (AP) — Jerry Ellis Faircloth has already proclaimed himself king and his son chief. But he wants some recognition from the federal government. So he has asked that his family be recognized as an Indian tribe.

Faircloth, 76, and his son, Jerry Lee Faircloth, 33, have launched a campaign to win recognition of their family as an Indian tribe, complete with federal reservation and a government-purchased school and housing.

Articles of titleship filed Sept. 6 show the elder Faircloth as king of the Faircloth tribe and his son as the chief.

Faircloth, who also says he's a licensed minister of the Church of God Within, Inc., claims there may be 30,000 people who would qualify as members of the Faircloth tribe, including state Commerce Secretary Duncan M. "Lauch" Faircloth.

Officials at the U.S. Bureau of Indian affairs confirm that the Faircloths have applied for recognition as a tribe.

The two are buying 2½ acres of land in Atlantic and they want the government to buy four square miles now owned by a development company and turn it over to the Faircloths.

They say the reservation should also include fishing and oystering rights in Thoroughfare Bay, along with government subsidies for housing and a school.

The Faircloth tribal rules show the tribe will be a serious one.

"We intend to keep our tribe clean and free from the worldly things that are destroying the rest of the world," the rules say.

Dare Voters Say No

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — With voters in Dare County turning thumbs down on mixed-drink sales, the score on the issue now stands five areas for, two against.

In the last referendum on the issue this year, voters in Dare County defeated mixed-drink sales Friday with a 1,864 to 1,484 vote, prompting cries of disappointment from wet forces and the executive vice president of the North Carolina Restaurant Association.

Jerry Williams said he was "awfully disappointed. Dare County is one of my favorite places. I feel it's lost the chance to attract some tourists during the tourist season."

But Tanya Marshall, chairwoman of the mixed-drink committee in the county, said that group felt the people the county made their choice. "We will accept that decision," she said. "I'm disappointed the vote was not heavier in the beach area of Nags Head, Kill Devil Hills and Kitty Hawk. I feel if the vote had been heavier there the result might have been different."

Williams said he hoped the defeat of mixed drinks in Dare County will teach wet forces "not to take this vote for granted" when it comes up in January in several other counties.

As expected, the dry forces were jubilant at the vote. Manteo attorney Leonard Logan, chairman of the Christian Action League there, said "Just praise the Lord," in response to the result.

"We're excited," he said. "Considering the turnout I think people here took a stand that they did not want this because it would change this from a family beach, despite people who said that mixed drinks would mean more tourist revenue."

Dare County also turned down mixed-drink sales in the 1973 statewide referendum with a 1,070 to 964 vote.

"I've heard it said that for a tippler, it's a desert between Virginia Beach and Myrtle Beach," Logan said. "We tend to think of it as an oasis."

Dare County joins Black Mountain as the only areas that have turned down the local-option liquor-by-the-drink bill passed by the General Assembly in June.

Voters in Charlotte and Mecklenburg County, Southern Pines, Orange County, Sanford and Louisburg have approved the bill.

Judge Challenges N.C. Law

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Superior Court judge Friday ruled unconstitutional a law which makes it a felony for a man to have sex with a girl under the age of 16, but a misdemeanor if a woman has sex with a boy under 16.

Cumberland County Superior Court Judge D.B. Herring Jr. said the law denies equal protection under the law to men and dismissed a case in which a 19-year-old Fayetteville man was accused of carnal knowledge of a young teenager.

The Cumberland County District Attorney filed notice of an appeal of the ruling to the state Court of Appeals.

"It's a question that needs to be decided constitutionally by the Court of Appeals or the Supreme Court, if it ever gets that far," said Assistant District Attorney Richard Boyette.

But, he added, in the meantime the office will not prosecute persons accused of the crime.

"I'm surprised the thing hasn't been challenged before," Boyette said.

Assistant Public Defender James Parrish argued the unconstitutionality of the law in the case of Edward Vaughn Gaydosik, who was accused of the offense last Nov. 27.

The law uses the term carnal knowledge synonomously with the term sexual intercourse. The offense is different than the crime of rape, in which the victim does not consent to the act. For carnal knowledge, consent is immaterial.

It was not illegal for a woman to carnally know a male under the age of 16 until 1923, when the law was amended to make it a misdemeanor.

Heart Ass'n Held Meet

The Greenville Chapter of the Pitt County Heart Association met Tuesday evening.

Past Pres. Robert Thurber was presented a gift of appreciation for his outstanding guidance and leadership.

Jack Story, executive field consultant of the N. C. Heart Association, was the key speaker. He said 1977-78 was the year of the largest increase in money ever raised for the N. C. Heart Association. He pointed out that the work of the heart association is divided into four major categories -- medical and community programs, public relations, fund raising and administration.

Darryl Mills is the new area field consultant for the heart association. Any area chapter in need of his assistance is asked to contact Greenville Pres. Betty Owens, 756-7133.

The next Heart Association meeting will be held Oct. 26 at 7 p. m. at the East Federal building. All persons wishing to work with the Heart Association are invited to attend.

The Salvation Army was founded in 1865.

In 1778, the Potato War started over the Bavarian throne.

The Mark Of The Beast

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Is the mark of the beast on you? Because the Book of Revelation says if it is, you won't be among the 144,000 to be saved on the great judgment day.

But don't count on Biblical statements to be correct, said Dr. James M. Efird, Duke University divinity school professor. He said well-meaning but misguided revivalists have misinterpreted the meaning of some Biblical books.

Efird is working with a reclamation project to correctly interpret the symbols in Revelation and Daniel.

"The books are neither a timetable predicting the end of the world, nor an assurance of who and how many are going to be numbered among the saved when the end comes," said Efird.

In a new paperback book titled "Daniel and Revelation, A Study of Two Extraordinary Visions," he seeks to clarify the books for readers.

Efird said the books are puzzling in their symbolism, and he said many ministers and laymen ignore them rather than trying to decipher them.

Efird said he began with the premise that the Bible is a collection of different types of literature and that the differences should be appreciated by the readers.

"Daniel and Revelation are 'apocalyptic' literature," said Efird, who said apocalyptic comes from a Greek word meaning "revelation." "Apocalyptic literature was written for people undergoing repression.

"The apocalyptic books tell what God is going to do for his people in the light of persecution," Efird added. "They show that despite the presence of evil and wickedness, God is in control and will deliver his people."

Efird said the reader must think symbolically, not literally, when reading Daniel or Revelation. He said Daniel does not predict that the world is going to come to an end in the near future and neither does Revelation.

Revelation is complicated to explain because of its use of numbers.

"To the ancients, individual numbers had great symbolic significance," Efird said. "Seven stood for perfection, 10 for completedness and 12 for the people of God."

The "beast" whos mark is to be feared has a number — 666.

Efird said in ancient times people were identified by the total of the numerical values of their names.

Sarcastic, Bitter Helms At House Hearings

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In exchanges laced with sarcasm and bitterness, former CIA Director Richard Helms clased with outraged members of the house Assassinations Committee over the propriety of murder plots and mistreatment of a Soviet defector.

defector.

Helms insisted there was nothing extraordinary about his actions. The committee professed even greater shock that he considered such deeds ordinary.

Helms was questioned for nearly six hours Friday in a hearing which soon became a pitched battle of words.

Committee members and staff attorneys made it clear they found much to criticize in the CIA's clandestine operations. And Helms fought back.

He sidestepped questions by asking questions of his own. He complained that the committee questions were poorly phrased and imprecise. And time and again, he delivered acid remarks with a grim face and clenched hands.

The differences involved CIA plots to assassinate Cuban leader Fidel Castro during the early 1960s — up to the day President John F. Kennedy was murdered in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963. Conspiracy theorists see a possible Cuban involvement in Kennedy's death, but Castro has denied it and has blamed the CIA for trying to implicate Cuba.

The Warren Commission concluded that there was no evidence of a conspiracy and that Lee Harvey Oswald was the lone assassin. Helms, who was a deputy CIA director at the time and the agency's liaison to the Warren Commission, acknowledged he told the commission nothing about the plots to kill Castro and overthrow his government. Helms became CIA director in 1966 and served in that post to 1973.

The other issue splitting Helms and the committee was the CIA's imprisonmet of Yuri Nosenko, who defected from the Soviet Union in 1964 and claimed he had been a highranking KGB official with information about Oswald's three-year stay in Russia.

CIA officials suspected Nosenko was a Soviet plant and subjected him to three years of solitary confinement in an effort to force a confession from him. He was released in 1967 and the CIA later concluded he was a legitimate defector and now employs him as a $35,000 a year consultant.

Helms acknowledged that he authorized the solitary confinement — "this was the way all defectors were handled" — but said he did not expect it to last so long and never knew details of the treatment.

Bulls Run In Spain

PAMPLONA, Spain (AP) — More than 20,000 people crowded the streets of this northern city Saturday to watch the annual running of the bulls, delayed two months because of political violence in which one youth was killed and 150 persons injured.

The celebration, usually part of the San Fermin festival held each July, will run through Monday.

A crowd of male youths clad in white and wearing red scarves ran before the bulls through the old section of Pamplona from the pens to the bull ring where the beasts will be stabbed to death in the afternoon by bullfighters.

The running of the bulls lasted four minutes and nobody was injured.

Officials decided to resume the festival to try to recoup heavy losses incurred by hotels and other business because of the suspension.

Monroe Says Regulations Cheat TV Journalists

By LARRY KILMAN
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Television news would be better with less government regulation and more on-the-air opinion, NBC's Bill Monroe said Friday.

Monroe, executive producer and moderator of "Meet The Press," said the Federal Communications Commission and its regulations "ought to be scrapped in favor of free electronic media licenses on the sole condition that stations adhere to assigned frequencies."

He addressed the annual meeting of the Radio Television News Directors here Friday night and accepted the association's Paul White Memorial Award.

"I believe that the present apparatus of broadcast regulation cheats the broadcast journalist of the independence promised by the First Amendment and so cheats the American people of the vigor and diversity they're entitled to from all of our nation's media," Monroe said.

He said television news should have more individual opinion and editorials on the air, and he said the FCC's "equal time" doctrine is part of the reason for the editorial vacuum.

"The very existence of the FCC, with its compulsion to sanitize the air waves of the unequal, the unfair and the impure, the very existence of this federal control commission discourages the idea of assigning keen, thoughtful people to say what they want to say," he said.

Monroe said television opinion, the individual commentator, the audience response, and the station's editorial voice should all play a greater role in television news than they do today.

"Democracy needs not only the meat and potatoes of fact and information," he said. "It also needs the vitamins and minerals of argument and debate."

Monroe, who has been a broadcast journalist since the early days of television and is a long time advocate of parity for broadcast journalism under the First Amendment, also blasted the courts for recent decisions concerning the press.

He said he was "grateful" to journalists who were willing to go to jail to protect their sources.

"I am indignant that Myron Farber of the New York Times had to go to jail to protect his sources and may have to go again," Monroe said. "But I'm grateful that he was willing to go to jail for the right of all of us to seek information from frightened or nervous sources and guarantee them confidentiality."

Ford, Reagan Speculate on 1980

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former President Gerald Ford says he welcomes a Ronald Reagan campaign for president in 1980, and that he may make the race himself unless the Carter administration improves its record of the last 20 months.

Ford and Reagan, headliners in a three-day nationwide Republican "tax blitz," speculated about their plans for 1980 in separate news conferences at different stops Friday on the GOP tax attack road show.

In Chicago, Reagan — who nearly took the GOP nomination away from Ford in 1976 — said there was a "distinct possibility" he will seek the nomination again in 1980.

Proposes Tighter Standards

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorneys would have to meet new standards to argue federal court cases under proposals favored by a committee of judges, lawyers and law professors. And lackadaisacal performers would be subject to banishment from those courts.

The committee, appointed by the Judicial Conference of the United States, recommended Friday that lawyers be required to pass written exams and show they're experienced in trial matters before being allowed in U.S. District Court cases.

Beckoning Law Struck Down

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Two Cumberland County District Court judges in separate rulings Friday struck down a Fayetteville ordinance allowing police to arrest "known prostitutes" if they beckon to passers-by.

"It violates free speech and the right of assembly and it's vague and totally unenforceable," said District Court Judge Sol Cherry shortly after he and District Court Judge Lacy Hair found the ordinance unconstitutional.

Cherry said he has had doubts about the ordinance since it was adopted by the Fayetteville City Council in 1976 as an aid to police attempting to clear downtown Fayetteville of prostitutes.

Nothing To Implicate Hodges

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The FBI apparently has turned up nothing to implicate Luther Hodges Jr. in its investigation of possible violations of federal elections laws in his unsuccessful campaign for the U.S. Senate.

The investigation focuses on Charlotte radio executive Stanley N. Kaplan, an $85,000 loan Kaplan received from the Bank of North Carolina and contributions to Hodges from business associates, according to a report in today's editions of The News and Observer of Raleigh.

Also under investigation is whether the Bank of North Carolina funneled money into the Hodges campaign by raising the salary of its board chairman, C.D. Spangler Jr. of Charlotte from $200 per boardmeeting to $36,000 per year. Spangler was assistant treasurer of the Hodges campaign.

Senate Completes Budget Action

WASHINTON (AP) — The Senate completed action Saturday on a congressional compromise budget for the federal government's upcoming fiscal year, providing for the smallest deficit in five years.

By 47-7, the Senate approved a binding budget resolution for fiscal 1979, the year beginning Oct. 1, which calls for total spending of $487.5 billion against tax revenues of $448.7 billion. The resulting $38.8 deficit is the first of less than $40 billion since 1974.

The Senate's decision was the final step on the resolution. The House approved it on Thursday, 225-162. It does not go to President Carter for signature or veto.

Patricia Hearst Seeks Clemency

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst has signed a formal request to President Carter for clemency and it will be delivered to the Justice Department in Washington next week, the San Francisco Chronicle said today.

Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., and Rep. Leo Ryan, D-Calif., will turn over the document to government authorities on Monday, the newspaper said.

The article did not indicate the source of the information, but it quoted Ryan as saying, "I hope the President will view it as a question of mercy and not of politics." Ryan represents the district in which Miss Hearst's family lives.

Salvation Army School Serves 15-State Region

By CHARLES CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Fred Ruth, a silver-haired, 43-year-old major in the Salvation Army, describes his school like this:

"We're a little bit of a liberal arts school, a little bit of a seminary and very much an officers training school."

Major Ruth is the principal of one of the Salvation Army's four Schools for Officers' Training in the U.S.

The compact campus in south Atlanta draws committed Salvationists from the Army's Southern Territory, a 15-state region stretching from Maryland to Texas.

After two years of instruction and practice, the cadets are ready to be commissioned and appointed to any of the territory's 328 corps, the equivalent of congregations.

Seventy-five students are enrolled this fall — 40 women and 35 men, including 17 married couples who have among them about 30 children. All cadets live on campus and wear uniforms almost all the time, following very strict rules and a rigorous schedule.

"We have a highly disciplined setting," Ruth said in an interview. "Salvation Army officership is not for everybody. Not everybody can stand up under the pressure of it."

And in case anyone missed the message, the Cadet Handbook warns on page 1: "It will be well at the outset to recognize that cadetship and officership require dedicated individuals. There is a sense in which one who is so committed can never do again exactly as he pleases."

The curriculum is two-fold, combining book studies with field training in the Army's techniques of social outreach — including Christmas kettles, youth groups, hospital visits and the like.

"It is very heavy on academics. We are probably cramming three or maybe four years of school into two years. We are really requiring more, timewise than we should," Ruth said.

"We try to give them Saturday afternoon off, but that's it. And we can't even promise them this."

Bill Martin, 24, who was a Ph.D. candidate in political science at Virginia Polytechnic Institute before joining the Salvationists, agreed with Ruth.

"There's more work, more study, and less time to do it," he said, comparing his current load with college assignments.

Martha Jewett, a 25-year-old fellow cadet, saw another side to the constant work.

"There's no way we could learn what we need to know in two years," she said. "A corps officers has to be more than a pastor. He has to be a capable administrator, a social worker, a P.R. man, foremost a pastor, and sometimes a janitor."

Mrs. Jewett, whose husband Vern is another classmate, learned early about Army life — both her parents were officers.

"I've been going to the Salvation Army since I was a week and a half old. I've never really known anything else."

Martin's induction came later in life. When he was 16 he got a counselor's job at the Army's summer camp in his native Culpepper County, Virginia.

No one pressed him to enlist in the Army, he said.

"No one came on heavy to me in camp. The questions came to me myself. Their lives were so different from mine, and the people that I know. I knew something was missing."

Still, it was several years later that Martin decided to get out of an academic career and get what he thought was missing.

Both cadets were concerned about the Salvation Army's public image.

"We did a survey in Arizona, my husband and me," Mrs. Jewett said. "We were trying to discover what kinds of programs should be instigated at the local corps. A lot of people thought the Army was just a store, or just a welfare agency."

But she didn't need to take a poll to know how most outsiders perceive the Army. When her father was divisional secretary of the Georgia division, a high school friend came up and said:

"I heard you're in the Salvation Army. Does your dad drive a truck? Does he dish out soup?"

Martin, who as a teenager was impressed by the Army's low-key approach to religion, now thinks the organization may go too far in soft-pedaling the spiritual content of its worldly work.

"The public image of the Army is a social service organization and it's our own fault," he said.

"We were called by God to do a certain work. Everything we do is to improve man's relationship with God."

Job Stress Can Be Met

SILVER BAY, N.Y. (UPI) — Many executives and middle management personnel are better able to deal with higher levels of pressure than most people, says James J. Gallagher, a business consultant to industry.

Gallagher told a YMCA sponsored conference on management problems that stress also can be a major cause of being fired, when it causes poor job performance.

He said good news as well as bad can add to stress. A table in the "Journal of Psychosomatic Research" that rates 43 events according to the stress they engender gives death of a spouse a 100-point rating, divorce, 73 points, being fired, 47, a happy Christmas, 12, and traffic tickets, 11.

Gallagher, whose Career Management Associates counsels industry on firing practices and executives on coping with job loss, offers these stressreducing tips to chair-bound executives:

—Stand up during phone calls.

—Stand up and stretch five or six times daily, and always between meetings.

—Take catnaps. Lie down in your office and listen to your breath. This helps blank everything from your mind.

—Forget your convenient executive parking space. Park your car at the far end of the lot and walk to and from your office.

—Try to keep people on their feet during short meetings. It relaxes tension and makes the meetings even briefer.

—Overload your briefcase. You get exercise carrying the extra weight.

—Flex your arm muscles while carrying the briefcase. This helps relax tension.

Sisters Show Art At Local Art Center

DETAIL OF A WOVEN PIECE . . . Jensina Steinbeck Sheppard's wall hanging features colors of gold, tans, red, white, and dark blues.

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

Rachel Steinbeck Sturz and Jensina Steinbeck Sheppard, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. H. Franklin Steinbeck of Greenville, are jointly displaying a collection of their art at the Greenville Art Center.

The show, which opened Sunday, Sept. 17 with a reception, will be on view through October 10.

For her part of the show, Sturz displays a varied group of paintings and drawings. The paintings encompass many familiar eastern North Carolina scenes — old barns and weathered boards, marsh waters with cypress trees, a realistic painting of a single stalk of green tobacco, and rural places bright with autumn colors.

Her drawings, some in ink, others in washes or pencil, are architectural renderings of houses and shops.

Much of the art shown by Sturz are commissioned works on loan for the show; and accompanying explanatory cards give the history of conditions of the commission required by the purchaser.

Wall hangings, some woven, others of felt stitchery, woven pillows and fabric constitute the bulk of works displayed by Sheppard. She also shows examples of stained glass, and a finely crafted small table of cherry wood.

Viewers can see this show at the art center, South Evans Street, between the hours of nine and five daily, Monday through Friday.

One Boy Needed For Role

Needed — one young area lad with aspirations to be a child actor. And no previous stage experience is necessary.

On Tuesday, Sept. 26 between the hours of 4 and 6 p.m. at McGinnis Auditorium on the East Carolina University campus, special auditions will be held to select a young boy for the role of the son of a peasant woman — the woman Pippin eventually falls in love with.

The role is for the Playhouse production of the musical, 'Pippin', scheduled to open at McGinnis on October 20, with Ken Miller directing.

Preston Sisk, manager of the Playhouse Theater, said the basic qualifications they are seeking is "for a young boy somewhere between six and ten years old, preferably not taller than four feet.

"For this role," Sisk commented, "there is no singing and dancing talent required, and previous experience on stage is not at all necessary."

Interested boys, along with a parent or guardian, are asked to be at McGinnis at four o'clock for the auditions.

Suit Dismissed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A suit filed against Consolidated Foods Corp. to block large purchases of Hanes Corp. stock was voluntarily dismissed Friday by North Carolina Secretary of State Thad Eure.

Consolidated had bought 20 percent of Hanes stock without notifying Eure's office. The state's Tender Offer Disclosure Act requires that a statement of intent to buy 5 percent or more of a corporation's stock must be filed 30 days before the purchase.

ESP Expert Kreskin To Lecture Here

A man who goes by the single name of Kreskin, noted as a mentalist and ESP expert, will be at East Carolina University on Tuesday, Sept. 26 for a performance at 8 p.m. in Hendrix Theater, Mendenhall Student Center.

An investigator of the power of suggestion, and of extrasensory preception (ESP), Kreskin believes everyone inherently possesses a highly-developed mental ability.

He began experimenting with hypnosis as a child, after his interest in magic and ESP was stirred by the once-popular comic strip "Mandrake the Magician." Now, he doubts the validity of hypnosis and instead relies on his own personality, persuasiveness and sensitivity to guide, suggest, direct, and command in order to project thoughts or receive impressions.

He is the author of "The Amazing World of Kreskin" and has appeared in guest spots on the Mike Douglas, Johnny Carson and other television shows.

Tickets for the ECU performance are priced at $3 and are available from the ECU Central Ticket Office in Mendenhall.

Don't go straight to see this movie!
Because there's going to be nothing straight about a CHEECH & CHONG film.
Every generation has had their own comedy duo; the 30's had Laurel and Hardy. Abbott & Costello broke up the 40's and Martin and Lewis really fractured the 50's.
CHEECH & CHONG have helped make the 70's go "UP IN SMOKE."
CHEECH & CHONG are the comedy team that gave birth to rock comedy and in the process of turning on a whole generation, sold ten million albums, picked up numerous awards, including Cash Box and Billboard's best comedy duo, and a Grammy for their album, "Los Cochinos."
Now it's time for a CHEECH & CHONG movie.
C & C's "UP IN SMOKE" will make you feel very funny.
So don't go straight to see this movie!

Stephen Greene Art In Museum Of Art Show

WHITE, GREY LIGHT, 1968 . . . is one of the oil paintings by Stephen Greene now on view at the N.C. Museum of Art, Raleigh, through Oct. 15.

By MICHAEL MATROS
N.C. Museum of Art

RALEIGH — Thirty-five paintings and drawings by American artist Stephen Greene are now on view at the N. C. Museum of Art in a show entitled "Stephen Greene: A Decade of Painting."

The works are abstract compositions, with planes and shapes of color giving atmosphere to sharp and sudden lines, curves, and evocative symbols. The paintings and drawings are narrative, directional; the eye is led quickly into each work and along a path drawn toward a dramatic, and usually disturbing, conclusion.

In the introduction to the show's catalog, Robert Doty, director of the Currier Gallery, Manchester, N.H., writes that—influenced by existentialism, and particularly the works of French writer Albert Camus, Greene examines the paradox of faith and hopelessness. "His intention was and is to express the human condition in terms of pictorial symbol, to acknowledge (like Camus) 'the terrible things happening in a beautiful world.'"

The exhibition will run through October 15, and is supported by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts, a federal agency.

There is no admission charge for those viewing the show. NCMA hours are 10-5 Tuesday-Saturday, and 2-6 on Sundays, closed Mondays.

Artist Moro Epitomizes Old Japan

By
FREDERICK H. MARKS

TOKYO (UPI) — The essence of Japan can be found in a small two-story house in Nihombashi, one of the oldest sections of Tokyo, where Yoshitoshi Mori resides.

Mori is one of Japan's greatest contemporary artists.

For 30 of his 80 years, Mori designed kimono patterns. But in 1948, at the age of 50, he gave up what he calls his artisan work to enter the world of creative art. The result adorns such collections as the Museum of Modern Art in New York, the Chicago Art Institute, the Barcelona Museum of Arts and the National Museum of Modern Art in Tokyo.

Mori's technique evolves around the stencil print, but his style is a successful fusion of traditional Japanese subjects and painting, and the influence of such Western artists as Paul Klee, Pablo Picasso and Georges Roualt.

"I like to transmit my joy," Mori said in an interview, sitting in the tiny house his family has lived in for six generations. "If anyone else can share joy with me, I'm satisfied."

The diminutive Mori epitomizes the old Japan. He and his wife of 50 years lead quiet lives amidst the hullabaloo of downtown Tokyo. He sketches constantly, trying to capture the old Tokyo which still exists in the back streets despite the city's headlong rush toward the 21st century.

Mori's energy belies his 80 years. During the interview he rushed back and forth to his studio to fetch examples of his art. There were sensuous Japanese courtesans; fierce Samurai warriors; serene Buddhist priests; chanting workmen and earthy fishmongers (which Mori's father was).

"I try to depict events, folklore," Mori said. "What I've tried to do is modernize the old traditional (Japanese) painting."

Mori's technique is ageless. He first completes a sketch. Then, using a small knife, he transfers the sketch to the stencil, which consists of several thin layers of paper, bound together with lacquer and moisture-proofed with tannin. He places the stencil on top of rice paper and once again transfers the design. When adding the vegetable pigments he uses for color, he protects the rice paper with a paste which is then washed off when the print is completed.

Mori's successful venture into creative art has given him a security that other artists might have retired on. But he is content to continue his work, sketching and printing daily for hours on end.

"If I stop, that is the time I die," he said.

Each afternoon, he goes to the neighborhood bath house to soak and gossip with his neighbors. He and his wife spend their evenings watching traditional Japanese theater on television — he sketching constantly.

When asked how a man of his age manages to continue creating sensuous women — the traditional courtesan with a fold of her kimono dropped revealingly — he chuckled and noted that sometimes he stays up to the midnight hours to watch risque television shows where young Japanese housewives participate in "bosom contests."

"The sensuality — it comes from my imagination and the experience of my younger days," he adds more seriously.

Despite his traditional Japanese lifestyle (he often plays pachinko, a Japanese-style pinball machine, to exercise his fingers), Mori freely admits to the influence of Western art on his style.

"After the war, they had an exhibition of Paul Klee here in Tokyo," he said. "That shocked me and then I started to change my style. I call it simplified beauty — or the beauty of simplicity."

Picasso etchings and Roualt reproductions grace his study wall. Perhaps the most obvious influence is Roualt, with most Mori characters being outlined in heavy, dark lines.

Perhaps because of the influence of Western art, for a long time Mori was not accepted fully by the Japanese public. But that changed in 1964 when in an international exhibition in the United States, comprised of the whole spectrum of Japanese art, Mori was the only artist to sell consistently. Since then, Mori's audience in Japan has grown with each passing year.

And that is fitting, because essentially Mori has remained Japanese. In his early creative years, he studied under the Japanese master Soetsu Yanagi, and a faded photograph of Yanagi hangs in the place of honor in Mori's sketching studio.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Joe R. Stines

Recently the Children's Library has added three new titles to its religious collection. JOSEPH, DANIEL, and DAVID are companion volumes written by a Swiss author, Max Bolliger, and translated from German by Marion Koenig. DAVID won the National German Children's Book Award for the best book of 1966. All three works were illustrated by Edith Schindler. Her pen and ink drawings are powerful and simple, resembling woodcuts, and they are as convincing as the text. Bolliger adheres closely to the text of the Holy Scriptures and uses an impressive and yet childlike language.

In retelling the story of Joseph and his brothers, Max Bolliger's clear and direct narrative has a timeless quality. This portrait of Joseph, the dreamer and the ill-treated brother, inspires fondness and sympathy. It is a family story involving feelings of jealousy and repentance and, finally, reunion. It is also the story of a hero who saves a nation from famine after many arduous trials and privations.

Portraying David as he works out his destiny in an age of violence, the story opens with his life as a shepherd boy, his anointing by the prophet Samuel and his legendary encounter with the lion.

A new chapter opens in David's life when he visits the royal court to play his harp for the ailing King Saul. In the great war against the Philistines, David kills the giant Goliath. Days of great glory follow, during which he became a close friend of the King's son, Jonathan, and marries the King's daughter, Michal.

But King Saul's love for David turns to envy and hatred when he sees how popular David has become. David is forced to flee. After much sorrow and the final tragic battle with the Philistines, he is anointed King of the House of Judah.

As a boy, the prophet Daniel was taken into slavery in the court of King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon. The story of his rise to power, through his faith and his great ability to interpret dreams, is one of the most exciting stories in the Old Testament. The famous episodes of the burning, fiery furnace and of Daniel's escape from the lion's den are retold by Bolliger in swift, dramatic style. Pen-and-ink drawings on almost every page make this portrait of one of the great biblical heroes even more memorable and alive.

JOSEPH, DANIEL, AND DAVID by Max Bolliger make interesting reading for readers of all ages but particularly those within fourth through sixth grades.

East Carolina Cages Cajuns, 38-9

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

LAFAYETTE, La. — East Carolina finally got its offensive attack on track last night and took out the frustration of two straight defeats on the University of Southwestern Louisiana to the tune of a 38-9 victory.

The Pirates moved the ball almost at will against the highly-touted USL defense, which had given up only 20 points in two losses so far this season. Keying the attack were quarterback Leander Green and running back Anthony Collins, named co-offensive players of the game. Green threw three touchdown passes and Collins ran for 112 yards in the game, 101 of them before halftime.

Most of the action came in the first half of the ballgame as the Pirates ran away from the Ragin' Cajuns for a 38-3 lead. Green threw scoring strikes of 27 and 29 yards to Terry Gallaher and another TD pass of 38 yards to Billy Ray Washington. Gallaher's two catches set a new career TD reception record of 13.

The other ECU TDs came on the ground. Eddie Hicks got the first Buc score with a 15-yard run, while Mike Hawkins scored the other on a 14-yard carry. Bill Lamm added all five PAT's, plus a 25-yard field goal in the third quarter which proved to be ECU's only second-half score.

The victory avenged East Carolina's 9-7 loss to the Cajuns last season. As in that game, all the USL points came from the toe of John Roveto. He had a 29-yard field goal in the first quarter that gave the Cajuns a brief 3-0 lead and added kicks of 49 and 44 yards in the second half.

ECU defensive back Willie Holley was named the game's top defensive player. He broke up three Cajun passes and was credited with two assists on tackles. The Pirate defense held USL to just 148 total yards.

On the other hand, the Bucs rolled for 496 yards, 325 on the ground and 171 more in the air. Besides Collins' 112, the Pirates got 86 yards rushing from Theodore Sutton. Green passed for 169 yards.

"What happened in the first half tonight was what I had been expecting since the first game," ECU head coach Pat Dye said. "It finally happened tonight. This has got to be our finest hour of this year. The defense was outstanding again. It might have eased up a little in the second half, but that's understandable."

Dye praised the offense's performance, especially the blocking and Green's throwing. "The highlight of the game for me was Eddie Hicks' blocking'," he said.

The Cajuns drew first blood in the ballgame on Reveto's field goal early in the opening quarter. They won the toss and got a good kickoff return from Rodney Smith, who took the ball up the right side to the SWL 49.

On third down, Ken Mathews hit Willie Allen with a 27-yard pass to give the Cajuns the football on the ECU 21. Mathews threw a completion to Smith at the 12 and then got the first down himself with a carry up the middle to the Pirate nine.

The ECU defense stiffened there with the help of a delay of game penalty and Roveto came in on fourth down to make the kick with 11:59 left in the first period.

After the kickoff, the Bucs came out throwing on first down with Green hitting Washington on a fly pattern at the Cajun 30. He caught the ball on the run, but fumbled and Gerald Joseph recovered for USL at the 18.

The Cajuns picked up one first down, but were forced to punt from their own 47. Gerald Hall got a good return, but it was nullified by a personal foul and ECU took over at the Pirate 22, first and 25.

The Bucs failed to pick up the first down and Rodney Allen came in to punt on fourth and eight. His kick was taken by Allen, who was hit by Fred Chavis and fumbled the ball to James Freer at the USL 39.

On second down, Collins took a pitch around right end to the 27 and Green hit Washington for nine more yards on the next play. Collins picked up the first down at the Cajun 15 and then Hicks got a pitch on the left side, broke a tackle at the line of scrimmage and ran in for the score. Lamm added the kick and the Bucs had the lead, 7-3, with 4:30 left in the first quarter.

The rest of the half belonged to the Pirates, who didn't give up another first down until just before intermission. After a 27-yard punt return by Hall, the Pirate offense came back in with the ball at their own 46.

Greer came in to direct the attack and Collins quickly unleased runs of 13 and 24 yards, the second tainted by a clipping call against Washington. Greer kept the ball on an option down to the 15, and two plays later Hawkins carried a pitch around right end and picked up a good block on the corner from Sam Harrell and went 14 yards into the end zone just before the quarter ended. Lamm's kick made it 14-3.

On their next two possessions, the Bucs were able to penetrate deep into Cajun territory, but Lamm's field goal tries failed. His first attempt was wide left from 42 yards out, while the second was wide right from 36 yards away.

Charlie Carter set up the next ECU score with an interception at the SWL 39. The theft from Cajun quarterback David Guidry was made possible by Ruffin McNeill's tip of the football.

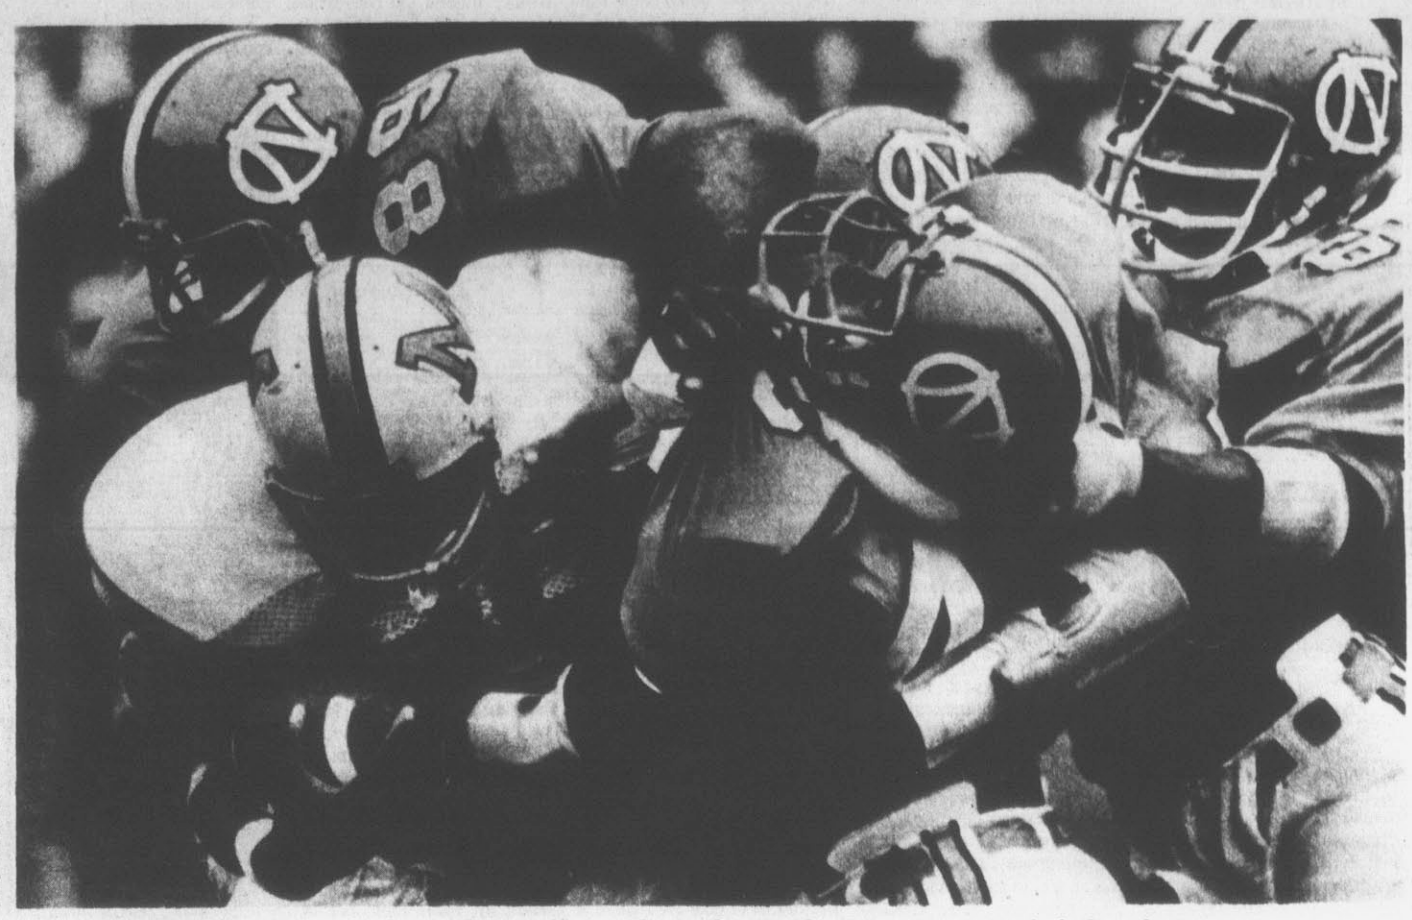

It took the Pirates just six plays to score with Gallaher's record-breaking catch from Green providing the final 27 yards. Gallaher, on a crossing pattern, made a leaping catch and fell into the end zone with 6:58 left in the half. Lamm got the PAT and it was 21-3.

The next drive began at the Pirate 35. ECU moved the ball on the ground down to the Cajun 27 where Green again connected with Gallaher for the score, this time on a post pattern with just over a minute left in the half.

Amazingly, the Bucs were able to get on the scoreboard one more time before intermission. Mathews dropped back to pass on a third down play at the USL 49, but Nate Wigfall broke through and hit him as he drew the ball back, causing a fumble which Cliff Williams fell on at the Cajun 38 with just seven seconds showing on the clock.

On the final play of the half, Washington broke loose on a post pattern and Green hit him at the goal line. After Lamm's Maryland's Steve Atkins drives for a first down despite Tar Heel defenders.

MarylandOutlastsHeels, 21-20

By BILL WELCH
Associated Press Writer

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Tailback Steve Atkins ran for two touchdowns and Ed Loncar kicked three field goals to lift Maryland past North Carolina 21-20 in an Atlantic Coast Conference game Saturday.

Trailing by five points with less than eight minutes remaining, Atkins took a pitch six yards into the end zone for Maryland's winnning score, and a pass by quarterback Tim O'Hare for a two-point conversion failed.

The score capped a long drive and was set up when O'Hare, facing second down and 28 to go, completed a 28yard pass to end Gary Ellis at the North Carolina nine.

North Carolina had taken the lead for the first time four minutes earlier when reserve quarterback Clyde Christiansen threw a five-yard touchdown pass. End Wayne Tucker caught the ball in the end zone after it was tipped by receiver Bob Loomis.

The win leaves Maryland 3-0 and drops North Carolina, the defending champion in the ACC, to 1-1.

Loncar was successful on first half field goals of 47, 34 and 33 yards, and Atkins scored his first touchdown on a 36-yard run.

North Carolina halfback Terrence Burrell scored on a one-yard plunge in the third quarter, and an attempt to a two-point conversion failed when quarterback Matt Kupec's pass fell incomplete.

Bruising halfback Billy Johnson scored North Carolina's first touchdown on a 34-yard run up the middle late in the first quarter.

Atkins, a senior, led all rushers with 162 yards in 28 attempts, and gained 99 of them in the first 10 minutes. Johnson led North Carolina in rushing with 64 yards in nine carries.

O'Hare completed 13 of 24 passes for 164 yards, and Kupec completed 14 of 24 for 127 yards.

Maryland, ranked 18th in the nation, led 15-7 at the half.

Loncar's 47-yard field goal came in the first minute of the game, after Atkins broke lose for 45 yards around his right side to the North Carolina 32.

Loncar added two more field goals in the second quarter but missed a 30-yard attempt with 15 seconds remaining in the first half.

Atkins' first touchdown capped a 51-yard drive in four plays, but Loncar's kick on the point after hit the upright and was no good.

Maryland was first to punt on its next possession but North Carolina's Steve Streater blocked it at the Terrapin 34. North Carolina kicker Jeff Hayes missed on his only attempt of the day, from 29 yards out, when it was blocked by Maryland's Lloyd Burruss.

Brown Pace State Victory

By BILL WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State running back Ted Brown romped for 158 yards and three touchdowns as the Wolfpack rolled over West Virginia 29-15 Saturday night.

Brown, a senior, scored on runs of 9, 8 and 2 yards while setting an Atlantic Coast Conference record with his 44 career touchdowns.

He kept the Mountaineer defense at bay all night, carrying the ball 33 times, catching three passes for 56 yards and even throwing one pass for 41 yards.

Brown moved up two places, to 13th, on the NCAA all-time career rushing list.

Running back Billy Ray Vickers added the other N.C. State touchdown on a two-yard run early in the second period.

N.C. State dominated the Mountaineers from the outset with Brown scoring on the first Wolfpack possession.

But West Virginia took a brief lead in the first quarter, 12-7, when reserve running back Dane Cronwell ran 24 yards for a touchdown.

That came after West Virginia scored a 31-yard field goal by Steve Sinclair, and a safety when guard Joe Jelich, sacked N.C. State quarterback Scott Smith in the end zone.

Vickers' score gave N.C. State the lead for good. It was set up when Brown took a Smith screen pass 37 yards to the West Virginia 21.

Brown scored his second touchdown midway through the second quarter after moving the Wolfpack into striking distance with his 41-yard pass to flanker Randy Hall.

N.C. State wore down the Mountaineers with sustained running in the second half. Brown's third score capped a drive that began on N.C. State's own 6-yard line.

Blue Devils Fight Off Gamecocks To Win Second Straight, 16-12

By GLENN STEPHENS
Associated Press Writer

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Duke Coach Mike McGee says senior quarterback Mike Dunn still hasn't fully recovered from a pre-season thumb injury, but he'd have a difficult time convincing the South Carolina Gamecocks.

Dunn, who sat out the Blue Devil's season opening victory over Georgia Tech, engineered an 80-yard touchdown drive late in the fourth quarter Saturday and tailback Gregg Rhett scored his second touchcdown of the game to give Duke a 1612 victory.

Dunn carried 13 times for 56 yards and completed two of eight passes for 45 yards.

"Mike Dunn is not in the form that he will be at Michigan as far as his throwing, but I feel confident he will have 100 percent recovery from the thumb injury," McGee said, after Duke ran its record to 2-0. "We are pleased at Mike's comeback.

"In the fourth quarter, he and Gregg Rhett had tremendous effort," McGee added. "However, being a former offensive lineman, I must say that there were nine other men out there opening those holes."

South Carolina Coach Jim Carlen also praised Dunn as a "great football player and a great young man. He's a credit to Duke."

Carlen said the Gamecocks were hurt by their inconsistency inside the Duke 30-yard line and blamed high grass at Wallace Wade Stadium for the problems of placekicker Eddie Leopard, who missed three field goal attempts.

Rhett scored on an 18-yard run in the second quarter and a 26-yard run with 3:07 left in the game to bring Duke from behind.

South Carolina took a 12-10 lead midway in the third quarter when Duke center Kevin Kelly snapped the ball over the head of punter Ricky Brummitt, who recovered in the end zone.

Senior quarterback Mike Dunn, making his first start following a pre-season thumb injury, then directed the Blue Devils on an 80-yard drive climaxed by Rhett's 26-yard blast over the right side of the line for the decisive score. Dunn keyed the drive with two 15-yard runs around left end and a 14-yard keeper around right end.

South Carolina's scoring came on a 39-yard by fullback George Rogers in the first period and Eddie Leopard's 36-yard field goal in the second quarter.

Rhett led the Duke rushing attack on 23 carries for 122 yards. Rogers, a 200-pound sophomore, was the game's leading rusher with 150 yards.

The Gamecocks marched 73 yards for a touchdown on their second possession, with Rogers bursting through the right side of the line and cutting down the sidelines for a final 39 yards.

Duke, stymied in the opening period, tied the game on a three-play, 53-yard drive. Dunn, who sat out the Blue Devils' season opening victory over Georgia Tech, passed 35 yards to flanker Derrick Lewis at the Gamecock 18, and Rhett took a pitchout around left end and dived into the corner of the end zone for the touchdown on the first play of the second quarter.

Leopard set South Carolina back in front on the next series and the Gamecocks moved to the Duke 13 before stalling. Leopard's 36-yard field goal came with 7:45 remaining in the half.

The Blue Devils were set up deep in South Carolina territory later in the quarter when nose Andy Schoenhoft recovered a fumble by Rogers at the Gamecock 19.

Georgia Bumps Clemson, 12-0

By TOM SALADINO
AP Sports Writer

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Quarterback Jeff Pyburn threw an 11-yard scoring pass to Carmen Prince, sophomore Rex Robinson kicked a pair of field goals and the aroused Georgia Bulldog defense stymied the highscoring Clemson Tigers for a 12-0 college football victory Saturday.

Clemson, 1-1, which clobbered The Citadel 5-3 in its opener last week, was hindered by six turnovers, four fumbles and an interception.

Two of the fumbles led to Robinson's field goals of 29 and 39 yards, giving the Bulldogs a 6-0 halftime edge.

Georgia, 2-0, took the secondhalf kickoff and marched 80 yards in 11 plays, topped by Pyburn's TD pass to Prince in the end zone.

The Tigers threatened twice in the second half, but a fumble and Scott Woerner's 45-yard pass interception ended Clemson's final scoring threat late in the final period.

The Tigers were foiled on the opening kickoff when Warren Ratchford fumbled and Woerner recovered on his own 49.

The Bulldogs moved to the 12 before scoring and Robinson, who hit three field goals in Georgia's 16-14 opening victory over Bailor, banged home a 29-yarder.

Midway in the second period, Georgia made it 6-0 when Robinson booted his 39-yarder after Georgia recovered a Tracy Perry fumble.

A sell-out crowd of 60,000 was on hand to watch Georgia record its second consecutive upset victory.

Willie McClendon again was the workhorse for the Bulldogs, rushing for 122 yards in 23 attempts. Pyburn completed eight of 14 passes for 82 yards.

Clemson's only threat in the first half came with 2:52 remaining, but it was in vain as place kicker Obed Ariri's field goal bid of 48 yards failed wide to the right.

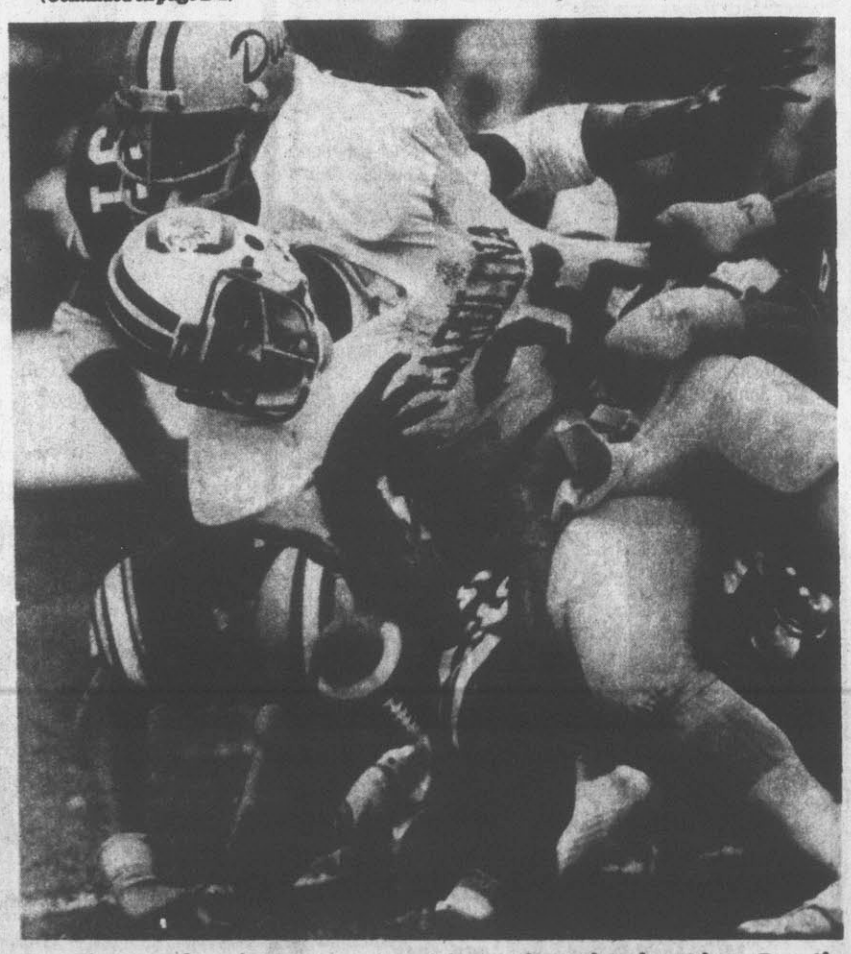

McClendon's 22-yard run keyed Georgia's 55-yard march in 11 plays prior to Robinson's second field goal. The drive stalled on the 22 and Robinson calmly booted his fifth consecutive three-pointer of the season.

Virginia Pulls Off Upset Of Army, 21-17

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — Tom Digorito slammed over from the 1-foot line on fourth down with seven minutes left in the game to give Virginia a 21-17 upset victory over Army Saturday.

Digorito's TD capped a seven-play, 89-yard drive engineered by Cavalier quarterback Mickey Spady. The big play was Digorito's 65-yard dash around right end.

Spady earlier had scored on a 1-yard keeper to cut Army's halftime 17-7 lead to three points at 17-14.

With Army quarterback Earle Mulrane directing a no-huddle attack, Jimmy Hill scored twice in the first period.

Hill's first TD came on a 16-yard run wide to the right, which capped a 55-yard, nine-play march. Then Hill went in on a pass of 2 yards from Mulrane after the Black Knights' Kirk Thomas had made an interception at the Virginia 27 and returned it to the 11.

In the second period, Virginia got on the board when Army's Phil Macklin fumbled and the ball was recovered by Bryan Holoman of the Cavaliers at the Cadets' 19. Three plays later, Spady hit tight end Mike Newhall with a 21-yard TD pass. Army came back on Corky Messner's 19-yard field goal five seconds before halftime.

Army's final drive fell short on the Virginia 45 when Mulrane's pass to tight end Clennie Brundidge fell short with 23 seconds to go.

Earlier in the fourth period, after Virginia had gone ahead, the Cavaliers' Tony Blount intercepted Mulrane on the Army 28, giving Virginia a scoring chance.

Army stiffened and held at their 20 with Spady being tackled by John Hilliard on a keeper to the right which gained two yards on fourth down.

Army, 1-1, failed to add to its total in the first period when Messner missed on a 35-yard field goal when went wide to the right. Virginia, 1-2, was paced by the running of Vigorito, who gained 182 yards on 27 carries.

Michigan Dumps Notre Dame

By JOE MOOSHIL
AP Sports Writer

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Rich Leach hurled three second-half touchdown passes, two to Doug Marsh, and a 40-yard clincher to Ralph Clayton Saturday to lead fifth-ranked Michigan to a 28-14 victory over Notre Dame.

It was the second loss in a row for the Irish and the first time they have lost two consecutive season games in 15 years. The Irish lost their last game of the 1972 season and subsequently were beaten in the Orange Bowl.

Trailing 14-7 at the half, the Wolverines turned a recovered fumble and two pass interceptions into second-half touchdowns against the mistake-prone Irish.

The victory was the second straight for the Wolverines, who opened last week with a 31-0 triumph over Illinois while Notre Dame, the defending national champion, was unable to come back from its 3-0 loss to Missouri two weeks ago.

The Irish struck for a quick lead when Russell Davis fumbled on the first play from scrimmage and three plays later, Joe Montana hit Dennis Grindinger with a three-yard touchdown pass.

Leach bolted 4 yards for a touchdown in the second quarter, to pull Michigan into a tie but Notre Dame came right back with a 75-yard drive to regain the lead on Vagas Ferguson's four-yard touchdown run.

The Irish took the second-half kickoff and marched to the Wolverine 26 before Ferguson fumbled and Curtis Greer recovered.

Leach directed a 71-yard drive in 15 plays before hitting Marsh with a five-yard touchdown pass.

Jerry Meter then picked off a Montana pass and returned 14 yards to the Irish 33. Five plays later, on the opening play of the fourth quarter, Leach connected with Marsh for 17 yards and a touchdown. Gregg Willner missed the conversion attempt and Michigan led 20-14.

Mike Harden then intercepted another Montana pass and two plays later Leach unloaded with his bomb to Clayton to put the game out of reach.

Michigan failed to make the conversion but with only 1:08 remaining, Greer tripped up Montana in the Irish end zone for a safety.

kick, the Pirates went to the dressing room with a 35-3 lead.

The Pirates' substitutes were sent in to mop up in what proved to be a relatively uneventful second half. Both teams scored once in the third quarter, both on field goals.

USL's came first after Ron Irving intercepted a Green pass and returned it 18 yards to the Pirate 32. The Buc defense held there and Roveto booted his second three-pointer on fourth down, a 49-yarder.

The Pirates countered with a 25-yard kick by Lamm late in the period. It came after an ECU drive stalled inside the Cajun ten-yard line. Sutton had carried 18 yards to the four, but the Pirates were pushed back to the eight on fourth down and Lamm kicked the field goal with 1:35 left in the quarter to make it 38-6.

Roveto added his third field goal late in the final period to cap a drive that began at the Cajun eight. The key play was a 48-yard scramble by third-string quarterback David Pingston that put the ball deep in ECU territory.

Dye reinserted most of his starters on defense and they prevented a touchdown, but Roveto split the upright on fourth-and-17 from the 27.

The Pirates return home after three straight road games next week to face the University of Texas at Arlington.

Cleveland 10, New York 1

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Sports Writer

CLEVELAND (AP) — Rick Manning's two-run bloop single ignited a 15-hit attack that helped David Clyde and the Cleveland Indians to a 10-1 victory over the New York Yankees in a nationally televised game Saturday.

The Yankees grabbed a 1-0 lead off Clyde, 8-11, in the first inning on Lou Piniella's RBI single. But the Indians struck back for four runs in the second inning off New York starter Jim Beattie, 5-9.

Manning's bases-loaded single put Cleveland ahead to stay and Jim Norris added a two-run triple on a line drive that was misjudged by center fielder Mickey Rivers.

Rookie Wayne Cage added his second solo homer in as many nights in the third inning and the Indians came up with three more runs in the fourth and single runs in the seventh and eighth, the latter on Cage's infield out.

Clyde, who worked his way out of a couple of early jams, wound up with a nine-hitter, four of those being singles by Willie Randolph.

Boston 3, Toronto 1

TORONTO (AP) — Jim Rice belted his 43rd home run of the season and Carl Yastrzemski and Jack Brohamer added run-scoring singles as the Boston Red Sox beat the Toronto Blue Jays 3-1 Saturday and moved within one game of the first-place New York Yankees in the American League East.

New York was routed by Cleveland 10-1 in its game Saturday.

Luis Tiant, 11-8, scattered seven hits to get the victory for the Red Sox. Dave McKay's leadoff walk in the sixth followed by Alan Ashby's double into the left field corner produced the lone run off the veteran right-hander, who struck out six and walked five.

Rick Burleson singled to open the game, stole second and scored Boston's first run on Yastrzemski's two-out single. The Red Sox made it 2-0 in the fourth when Butch Hobson doubled to left center and scored as Brohamer lined a single over the head of Jesse Jefferson, 7-15.

Rice lined the first pitch from Jefferson over the left field fence with one out in the fifth to account for the third Boston run. It gave the Red Sox slugger 386 total bases for the season, tops in the league and the most in the AL since Jimmy Foxx's 398 in 1938.

Los Angeles 5, San Diego 3

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lee Lacy slugged a two-run pinch homer to highlight a four-run seventh inning as Los Angeles came from behind for a 5-3 victory over San Diego Saturday.

Burt Hooton won his 19th game with relief help from Terry Forster, who pitched the final two innings for his 22nd save.

Gene Richards slugged a two-run homer in the third and Dave Winfield hit his 24th of the year with the bases empty in the fourth to give the Padres a 3-0 lead.

Dave Lopes singled home one run for the Dodgers in the fifth inning, then they reached relievers Mark Lee and Rollie Fingers for their four-run seventh.

Philadelphia 1-6, New York 0-3

NEW YORK (AP) — Larry Bowa collected five hits, drove in three runs and scored the go-ahead tally as the Philadelphia Phillies defeated the New York Mets 6-3 and completed a sweep of their Saturday doubleheader.

Philadelphia won the first game 1-0 on Larry Christenson's three-hitter. The sweep, combined with Pittsburgh's 3-2 loss at Montreal, enabled the Phillies to stretch their lead in the National League East to three games.

Bowa had three singles, a double and a triple in the second game.

He tripled home two runs in the Phillies' three-run second inning against New York starter Roy Lee Jackson. Bowa doubled with two out in the fourth and scored on an RBI single by Garry Maddox, breaking a 3-3 tie off loser Dwight Bernard, 13.

Dick Ruthven, 15-11, went the distance for the Phillies, allowing only four hits in pitching his 11th complete game. Ruthven allowed a leadoff homer to Len Randle in the first inning and two more runs on a double by Willie Montanez in the third, but held New York hitless over the final six innings. He walked two and struck out seven.

Christenson, 12-14, won for the first time since Sept. 2 by pitching his third shutout and ninth complete game of the season. He struck out five and walked two.

Montreal 3, Pittsburgh 2

MONTREAL (AP) — Pinchhitter Del Unser singled home Larry Parrish in the ninth inning to give the Montreal Expos a 3-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Saturday.

Parrish opened the ninth with a double off Bert Blyleven, 14-10. After Chris Speier grounded out, Unser batted for winning pitcher Ross Grimsley, 19-10, and singled up the middle to score Parrish, who barrelled into Pirate catcher Duffy Dyer at the plate.

Dyer was helped from the field and Parrish was removed on a stretcher.

Milwaukee 13, Oakland 4

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Tworun singles by Dick Davis and Don Money highlighted a six-run Milwaukee fourth inning and Larry Hisle's three-run homer keyed a five-run fifth, powering the Brewers to a 13-4 rout of the Oakland A's on Saturday.

San Francisco 3, Houston 2

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pinch hitter Tom Heintzleman's single scored pinch runner Vic Harris with the winning run in the eighth inning as the San Francisco Giants edged the Houston Astros 3-2 Saturday.

Despite the victory, the Giants were mathematically eliminated from the National League West race when the first-place Los Angeles Dodgers defeated the San Diego Padres 5-3.

Chicago 5, California 4

CHICAGO (AP) — Greg Pryor singled home Mike Squires in the eighth inning to give the Chicago White Sox a 5-4 victory over the California Angels Saturday.

Southern Cal Downs Alabama

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Charles White made up for two costly fumbles by shredding Alabama's vaunted defense for 199 yards, including a 40-yard touchdown run, as seventhranked Southern California knocked off No. 1 Alabama 24-14 Saturday and ended the nation's longest major college winning streak at 12 games.

The outcome was a direct reversal of last year's meeting between the two intersectional powers when Southern Cal was ranked No.1 but dropped a 21-20 decision to Alabama in Los Angeles.

Frank Jordan kicked a 40-yard field goal early in the second period to give Southern Cal a 10-0 halftime lead after a goal line stand stopped Alabama twice at the 1-yard line. The Trojans then marched to the Alabama 23 on a drive that lasted almost 8½ minutes and was aided by a fourth-down penalty that enabled them to keep the football.

Southern Cal wrapped it up in the final period on TD passes of 6 and 40 yards from Paul McDonald to Kevin Williams.

The Crimson Tide had pulled to within 10-7 when Major Ogilvie scored on a 41-yard dash early in the third period on the first play after White's second fumble was recovered by Murray Legg. White's first bobble killed a 73-yard drive at the Alabama two on Southern Cal's first possession. Legg also recovered that one.

But McDonald's touchdown passes to Williams built the Trojans' lead to 24-7.

Haas In Napa Lead

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — Jay Haas shot his second 66 of the tournament and took a 1-stroke lead over Tom Watson and three other challengers Saturday in the third round of a $200,000 PGA event, in which sub-par golf was the rule.

"Birdies definitely are flying out there," the 24-year-old Haas said after his 6-under-par round on Silverado Country Club's 6,870-yard North course. "I was 11 under after nine holes and barely on the leader board."

Haas, whose victory in the San Diego open last winter was his first as a member of the Professional Golfers Association tour, was 8-under par for the tournament and tied for third going into Saturday's round. His back nine Saturday included 3 birdies, dropping hm to a 14-under-par total of 202 for 54 holes.

LSU Struggles Past Deacons

By DAN EVEN
Associated Press Writer

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Tailback Charlie Alexander rambled for touchdowns of 11 and 32 yards Saturday night as 10th ranked Louisiana State struggled to a 13-11 nonconference victory over Wake Forest.

LSU, 2-0 and a three-touchdown favorite, sputtered on offense all night and capitalized on only one of six turnovers by Wake Forest. The Deacons fell to 1-2 with the loss.

Alexander capped a 50-yard LSU drive midway in the second quarter by racing 11 yards up the middle for a touchdown and added his second score late in the third quarter when he raced around left end and down the sideline for 32 yards.

Wake Forest scored on the final play of the first half after recovering an LSU fumble on the 13-yard line. Steve Schonert booted a 30-yard field goal as the clock ran out.

The Deacons pulled with two points with 4:37 to play, when Mark Lancaster blocked an LSU punt and Donnie Jackson ran 6 yards for a touchdown. The visitors added a 2-point conversion.

Doubles Finale

The two top-seeded teams in the Greenville Tennis Club's annual mixed doubles tournament advanced to the finals with Saturday victories.

The top-seeded team of Ron Hignite and Lib Procter defeated Charles Marshall and Helen Talbert, 6-1, 6-0. In the other semi-final match, Frances Cain and Wes Hankins downed Howard and Nancy Powell, 6-4, 6-1.

The finals will be held today at 1:30 p.m. at the Elm Street tennis courts. Players and spectators interested in the club's 35-and-over tournament should check the bulletin board at the Elm Street courts on Wednesday.

Rampants, Cards Battle To 7-7 Tie

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School dominated Jacksonville most of the night, but had to settle for a 7-7 tie ball game after the Cardinals were able to get their offense on track for one time in the game.

The Rampant defense smothered every drive the Cardinals tried to put together except for the first one in the second half, and even then, it took a trick play to pull off the touchdown.

The Rampant offense, while not generating as much spark as it would have liked too, put up a score in the first period and had a couple of other scoring opportunities before having to settle for the tie.

Led by Don McGlohon from his defensive end position, the Rampant defense completely humbled the unbeaten Cardinals. McGlohon was credited with five sacks of quarterback Phillip Foster, and just missed on two other attempts in the backfield. Both of those times, his containment helped other Rampants come in to make the tackles for losses.

Jacksonville finished the night with only 54 yards in total offense, and nearly all of that could be credited to the Cards during their 71-yard touchdown drive (helped along by a 15-yard penalty against the Rampants). At the end of the half, Jacksonville had minus eight yards in total offense, and after pushing that out to 71 yards in the third period, they fell back in the last.

Rose, led by the hard running of fullback Todd Tyson, ended up with 158 yards on the ground and 14 more through the air. Tyson rushed for 84 yards to lead the way and scored the lone Rampant touchdown, that on a two-yard dive.

Jacksonville's only score was a pass of 16 yards from Howard Williams to Michael James.

"They changed their defense at the half, and we had a little trouble adjusting to it," Coach Dave Bumgarner said afterwards. "And we didn't have the ball that much in the second half (24 plays as compared to 34 in the first half). We had a couple of bad snaps on punts that hurt us a lot and we had to play too much defense in the second half."

Bumgarner praised the play of McGlohon and said the entire defensive unit did an outstanding job except for the one Jacksonville scoring drive.

Neither team got off any kind of a drive until late in the first period when Rose finally got rolling.

The Rampants had scored a touchdown at the start of the drive, only to have it called back. Mark Shank took a Cardinal punt back 66 yards for a score, but a clip at the Jacksonville 41 nullified most of the distance and the score.

Nevertheless, it was the beginning of the lone scoring drive for the Rampants. After the clip penalty was marked off, Rose had to start from its own 44. After gaining three yards on first down, Tyson broke through the middle for 11 more down to the Jacksonville 42. Jamie Adams added six more, then Tyson got away for 22 more, nearly breaking it all the way. That put the ball at the 14. Derwin Clemons swept end for eight more to the six, and Rose got a first down at the four on third down. Tyson hit up the middle for two, then again went up the middle into the end zone with 2:42 showing on the clock.

Ted King added the PAT for a 7-0 lead.

Rose came right back on its next possession, moving from its own 26 to the Jacksonville 31 before giving the ball up on downs. A fumble on fourth and three cost them the ball.

Late in the half, Rose got it again in good field possession, at the Card 44 following a short put, but failed to pick up a first down. One last time before the end of the half, Rose took over at the Jacksonville 47, but again, on fourth and one, failed to pick up the first down.

Jacksonville got its only drive going in the early minutes of the second half. After holding Rose on the opening series, the Cardinals took over at the own 29. Mike Bradley broke away for 13 yards and Terrence David added ten more. After Eddie Colson put the ball on the Rose 44, a face-masking penalty moved it to the 29. From the 21, Jacksonville got six yards from Bradley on fourth and two, but Rose appeared ready to contain them, throwing the Cards back into a fourth and 11 situation at the 16.

Jacksonville then pulled a trick out of its bag, using an end-around pass for the score. Williams took a toss from Foster, as if to go with an end around, then passed to James alone in the end zone for the score. Randy Wisniewski added the PAT for a 7-7 tie with 4:44 left in the quarter.

Jacksonville got a break when a bad snap forced Rose to turn the ball over at the 19 on the next series. But the defense again seemed to hold, forcing a third and 14. But Foster hit James for a first down at the eight.

Then, trying to circle his own left side of the line for the score, Foster was hit just short of the goal line and Ron Butler just took the ball away from him, and the Cards never threatened again.

The Cards did offer some moments, however, after intercepting a Rampant pass at midfield with just under a minute left. But again the Rampants came through, as McGlohon sacked Foster twice back to the Jacksonville 44.

Rose, taking over on downs at the Card 3 44, got off a pass down to the 38, but didn't have any time outs left, and the clock ran out.

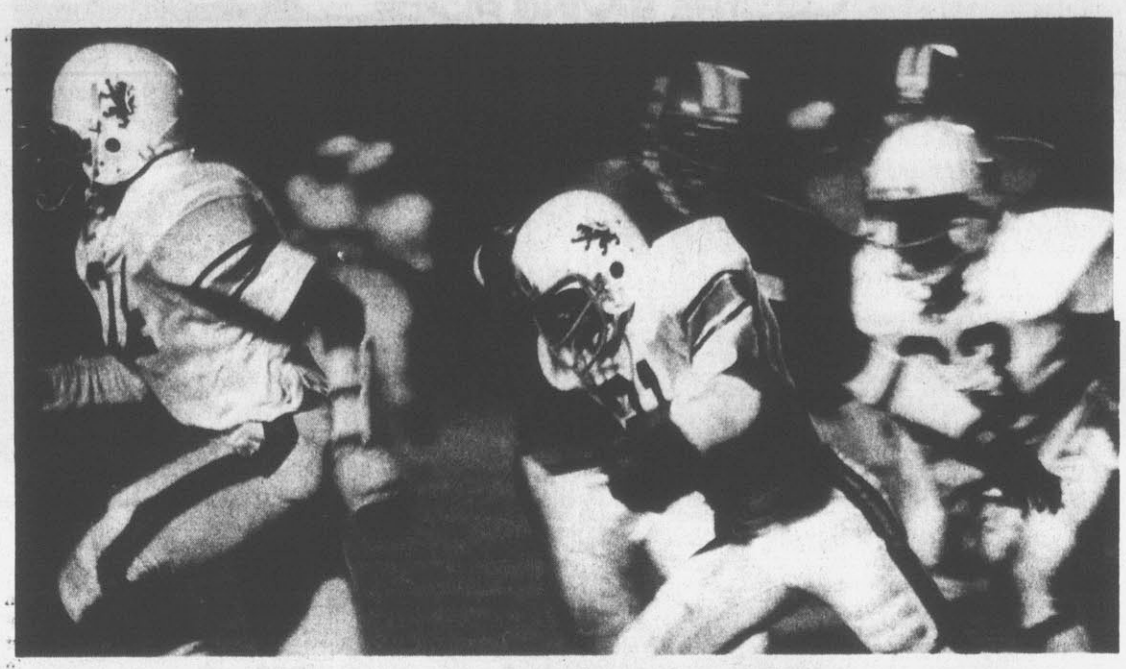

The victory moved the Rampant record to 1-2-1 on the year, while Jacksonville is now 3-0-1.

Panthers Rip Aycock, 24-7

PIKEVILLE — North Pitt High School after sweeping its non-conference slate, moved into Eastern Carolina Conference play Friday night and romped to a 24-7 victory over Charles B. Aycock.

The victory left the amazing Panthers with a 4-0 record on the season and a 1-0 league mark. Charles B. Aycock fell to 1-3 overall and 0-1 in the conference.

Terry Moore scored two of the Panther touchdowns, while Bob Hemingway had responsibility for two more.

The Panthers scored twice in the first quarter of the game to stake their claim on victory. Mickey Hines got the first score on an 80-yard pass from Hemingway. That left the Panthers in a 6-0 lead.

Hemingway came back later in the period to score a touchdown on his own, going in from four yards out. That upped it to 12-0.

Aycock came back with its only score in the second period. Don Jones scored on a six-yard run and Dave Thomas kicked the PAT to cut the lead to 12-7.

But North Pitt held them off the rest of the way and added two more scores of their own.

In the third period, Moore got his first touchdown, on a three-yard run. He added the other on an 11-yard ramble in the final quarter.

North Pitt goes for its fifth straight next Friday night when it travels to Ayden-Grifton.

Vikings Nip North Lenoir

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's Vikings opened up their Eastern Carolina Conference season Friday night with a 6-0 win over North Lenoir.

The game was a defensive struggle most of the way, with North Lenoir offering only one threat in the contest. That came early in the game when they drove inside the Viking ten but failed to come away with any points.

Conley's lone touchdown was set up by a bad snap on a punt by North Lenoir. The Vikings were able to cover the ball on the Hawk two yard line.

Jeff Allen then plunged over from the one yard line for a 6-0 lead. A two-point conversion run failed.

David Sutton intercepted one pass and recovered a fumble, while Noah Edwards was credited with 13 tackles to lead the Conley defense.

The Vikings are now 2-2 overall and travel to Greene Central next Friday. North Lenoir plays host to C.B. Aycock.

Farmville Central Opens League Play With 47-6 Win Over Rams

SNOW HILL — Farmville Central's defending Eastern Carolina Conference champions moved into league play Friday night and flexed their muscles in a 47-6 romp over Greene Central.

But oddly enough, it was the Jaguars' defense that did most of the work. Of the seven Farmville Central touchdowns, four were accounted for by the defense, returning fumbles, interceptions, and punts. They also added a safety.

Farmville started the scoring off by preventing one by Greene Central. The aroused Rams had driven down to the Jaguar two yard line and were threatening to take the lead when the ball was fumbled and Allen Moore scooped it up and ran 98 yards for the first FC score. Donald Reid kicked the PAT for a 7-0 lead and the Jaguars never trailed.

Jeff Tyson scored the first of four touchdowns for himself to put the Jaguars back on the board. He intercepted a Ram pass and returned it 37 yards for the score. That left Farmville in a 13-0 lead at the end of the quarter.

The offense finally put a score on for Farmville in the second period. Reid scored on a three-yard run to up the lead to 19-0.

Tyson scored his second touchdown of the night to round out the first half Farmville scoring. He mac. it to the end zone with a 51-yard pass from Donald Freeman, and Reid kicked the extra point, making it 26-0.

But then, Greene Central made it on the scoreboard. Marvin Suggs got the score, that coming on a 14-yard run.

In the second half, Farmville kept it going. First, Tyson scored on a 39-yard pass from Freeman to run it to 32-6. Then, Philip Gordon picked up another Ram fumble and returned it 23 yards for a score. Ronald Reid kicked this extra point, and it was 39-6.

Tyson finished up the evening for the Jaguars with a 65-yard punt return for a TD, making it 45-6. The final two points came when the Jaguars got a safety when a bad snap sailed over the punter's head out of the back of the end zone.

Farmville is now 3-1 overall and 1-0 in the league. Greene Central is 1-3 and 0-1.

The Rams entertain Conley on Friday, while Farmville is at home against Southern Nash.

Chargers Dump Southern Nash

SPRING HOPE — Ayden-Grifton, after being frustrated through its first three games, snapped a losing streak with a 26-12 victory over Southern Nash Friday night.

The win came just in time, as the Chargers were opening the Eastern Carolina Conference season. They are now 1-3 overall and 1-0 in the league. Southern Nash fell to 2-2 overall and 0-1 in conference play.

Neither team could score in the first period, and both put up touchdowns in the second quarter, which ended in a 6-6 deadlock.

Southern Nash scored first to take the lead for the only time during the night. Jimmy Baines got the score on a 68-yard pass interception return.

Ayden-Grifton came back later in the period to score on a 30-yard pass from David Smith to Billy Holland.

In the second half, the Chargers added three more touchdowns, two by Smith, to put the game away. Smith got the first of the A-G scores of the half in the third period, scoring on a three-yard run for a 12-6 lead.

In the final quarter, he scored on a three-yard run again, then hit Wayne Newton for a two-point conversion and a 20-6 lead.

Newton scored the final Ayden-Grifton touchdown on a 20-yard run in the final period.

Southern Nash, as it had opened the scoring, also closed it with Brian Raynor scoring with a 10-yard pass from Paul Morgan.

Holland led the Ayden-Grifton rushing with 73 yards, while Calvin Ellison added 70.

The Chargers play host to surprising North Pitt next week, while Southern Nash travels to meet defending ECC champ Farmville Central.

MONTREAL DYNASTY

MONTREAL (AP) — Does Montreal have a stranglehold on the National Hockey League? The record book says yes, and the Canadiens back that up on the ice.

The 1978 championship was the third straight Stanley Cup title for Montreal. It was the Canadiens' seventh title in the past 11. And it was their 14th Cup triumph in the past 23 years.

Padres Celebrate; Dodgers Are Glum

By BERT ROSENTHAL
AP Sports Writer

The San Diego Padres, in fourth place in the National League West and long out of pennant contention, had something to celebrate Friday night. The Los Angeles Dodgers, the division leaders and en route to their second straight title, didn't.

Why would San Diego, with an unspectacular 81-74 record, be happy, and Los Angeles, with a front-running 91-62 mark, be glum?

The Padres, by thrashing the Dodgers 12-3 with a 20-hit assault, had amassed their biggest hit and run productions of the year and had assured themselves of at least a .500 season — the first in their 10-year history.

The Dodgers, by losing, had their first place lead over Cincinnati sliced to 6½ games while their pennant-clinching number remained at three.

Slugging outfielder Dave Winfield, in the midst of his best major league season, led the Padres' attack with a homer, three singles and three runs batted in, spoiling the 51st birthday of Los Angeles Manager Tom Lasorda.

The Padres broke open the game with six runs in the fifth inning. Winfield started the uprising with his homer and Gene Richards singled in two runs during the big inning, when the surprisingly bumbling Dodgers made two of their five errors.

While the Dodgers were losing, their two closest pursuers were winning. Cincinnati beat the Atlanta Braves 6-4 and the San Francisco Giants, eight games behind Los Angeles, blanked the Houston Astros 2-0.

In the only other NL game, the Chicago Cubs defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 5-3.

The Philadelphia Phillies, leaders in the NL East by 1½ games, were rained out against the Mets in New York, and second-place Pittsburgh and Montreal were not scheduled.

Reds 6, Braves 4

The Reds kept alive their slim pennant hopes, rallying for three runs in the seventh inning — two on Johnny Bench's single and one on Dave Concepcion's hit — in beating Atlanta.

Earlier, Arturo DeFraitas and Joe Morgan homered for the Reds and Jeff Burroughs, Gary Matthews and Bob Horner connected for the Braves.

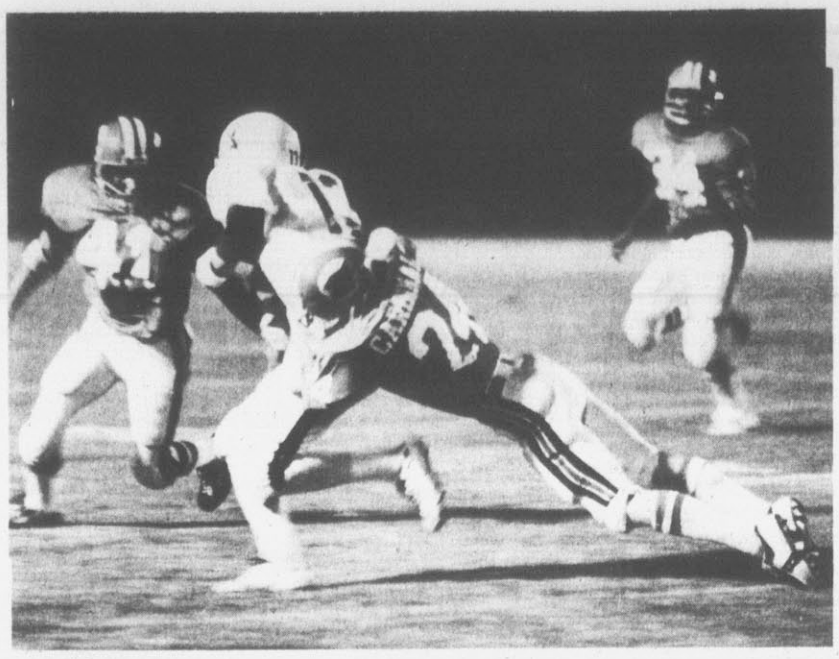

Giants 2, Astros 0

San Francisco's Bob Knepper took the league lead in shutouts with five, pitching a five-hitter and striking out eight as the Giants downed Houston. For Knepper, 16-11, it was his 15th complete game of the season and lowered his earned run average to 2.73. He helped his cause with a run-scoring single.

Cubs 5, Cardinals 3

Chicago continued its mastery over St. Louis this season, beating the Cards for the 14th time in 16 meetings. The Cubs overcame a 3-2 deficit with three runs in the ninth inning — two on Bill Buckner's single and one on Dave Johnson's infield hit.

Bullets Bow, 8-6

BATH — Bath High School rallied to take an 8-6 victory over Jamesville Friday night in the Tobacco Belt Conference.

Jamesville took a 6-0 lead in the first half, but Bath scored late in the game to win it with their two-point conversion play.

Jamesville is now 1-3-1 overall and 1-3 in the conference. Bath is 1-4 overall and 1-3 in the conference.

Details of the game were not available.

Jamesville plays host to Aurora on Friday, while Bath sits Creswell.

PPK Set Saturday

The annual Punt, Pass and Kick competition will be held Saturday at 10 a.m. at Elm Street Park.

The contest is open to boys and girls, ages 8-13.

Nationally sponsored by the Ford Motor Company, the Greenville Optimists Club is serving as a local co-sponsor, and will run the competition.

Youths who enter are judged on their passing, punting and kicking distance and accuracy, gaining cumlative points in the three phases of competition.

Registration remains open, and youths may register at Hastings Ford this week. They must be accompanied by a parent or guardian.

Competition is held in age groups, and local winners will advance to zone competition on October 14. Continued competition continues to the national finals at the Super Bowl.

WHIMSICAL RABBIT

NEW YORK (AP) — Shortstop Rabbit Maranville was only 5-5 and 155 pounds but he was a big enough player to make it to the Baseball Hall of Fame. He was famous for his vest-pocket catches of pop flies.

The Rabbit was also something of a flake. Once he waded into a hotel pool, where his team, the Boston Braves, was staying, caught a goldfish and took a bite out of it. On another occasion he crawled between the legs of the plate umpire while coming up to bat.

Williamston Claims First Victory, 20-0

ROANOKE RAPIDS — Williamston's Tigers, winless in their first three starts, came up with a 20-0 victory over Roanoke Rapids Friday night as they opened Northeastern Conference play.

The Tigers dominated the game most of the night, holding the Yellow Jackets to minus 11 yards in rushing yards.

Williamston held off an early Jacket threat that moved to the four before a field goal attempt went awry when the ball was snapped over the holder's head.

The Tigers then came back to drive for their first score. Chris Peele got the touchdown on an 11 yard run for a 6-0 lead. That held the rest of the first half.

In the third period, Williamston added to its lead. Larry Williams went over from the one yard line for the score. Keith Clark then passed to Vincent Peele for the two-point conversion and a 14-0 lead.

The final touchdown came in the fourth quarter when Steve Griffin caught a six-yard pass from Jim Lilley.

Roanoke Rapids offered one final threat late in the game, but the Tiger defense held them off.

Chris Peele led the Williamston offense with 71 yards rushing, while Butch Griffin stared both on defense and added 51 yards rushing.

Williamston, now 1-3, plays host to Washington Friday, while Roanoke Rapids visits Ahoskie.

Yankees, Red Sox Both Are Beaten

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Don Zimmer and Bob Lemon were left thinking about the ones that got away Friday night as the tailenders played spoiler in the American League East.

Zimmer's Boston Red Sox took a 4-3 lead into the ninth inning against Toronto, only to have the last-place Blue Jays score two runs in the bottom of the ninth and pull out a 5-4 victory.

Meanwhile, Lemon's New York Yankees rallied for three runs with two out in the bottom of the ninth to tie sixth-place Cleveland at 7-7, only to lose the game 8-7 in the 10th.

All of which kept first-place New York two games in front of Boston and had Zimmer shaking his head.

"What can I say?" he asked, the frustration written all over his face. "We have to win them all, but I said that before we came in here."

In other games Friday night, the Kansas City Royals split a double-header, winning the opener 4-2 and then losing to the Twins 4-0; the California Angels beat the Chicago White Sox 3-2; the Milwaukee Brewers blanked the Oakland A's 3-0; the Detroit Tigers defeated the Baltimore Orioles 7-5 in 10 innings, and the Texas Rangers swept a double-header from the Seattle Mariners 10-2 and 1-0.

Any combination of New York wins or Boston losses totaling seven will give the Yankees the AL East title, while Kansas City's magic number over California in the West is now four.

Blue Jays 5, Red Sox 4

Boston took a 4-3 lead in the eighth inning on singles by Carlton Fisk and Fred Lynn and a sacrifice fly by Butch Hobson.

But pinch-hitter Bob Bailor led off the ninth for Toronto with an infield hit off Andy Hassler, 3-5. Alan Ashby popped out on a bunt attempt, but Bailor took second on Dave McKay's bloop single to center. After pinch-hitter Doug Ault walked, Rick Bosetti greeted Bill Campbell with a single to center, driving in the tying and winning runs. Tom Murphy, 6-9, got the win.

Indians 8, Yankees 7

The Yankees erased a 7-4 deficit in the ninth inning on a bases-loaded walk to Reggie Jackson and a two-run single by Lou Piniella. But in the 10th Duane Kuiper walked, moved up on a passed ball by Thurman Munson and a wild pitch by Rich Gossage and scored on an infield single by Rick Manning. Yankees shortstop Fred Stanley got the ball hit up the middle by Manning but was unable to make a play.

Royals 4-0, Twins 2-4

Larry Gura, 15-4, pitched a six-hitter in the opener for Kansas City and Frank White snapped a 2-2 tie with his seventh home run of the season, and third in eight games, in the seventh inning. But the Royals were handcuffed on six hits by Minnesota's Geoff Zahn in the second game.

Angels 3, White Sox 2

Frank Tanana raised his record to 18-11 by stopping Chicago after giving up a two-run homer to Chet Lemon in the first inning. The Angels scored all their runs in the third inning on a run-scoring single by Rick Miller and a two-run single by Bobby Grich.

Brewers 3, A's 0

Ed Rodriguez pitched one-hit ball for eight innings before needing ninth-inning relief help from Jerry Augustine and Bill Castro as Milwaukee shut out Oakland. Robin Young had a two-run single for the Brewers.

Tigers 7, Orioles 5

Rusty Staub drove in four runs to raise his season total to 119 for the Tigers, who tied the game 5-5 with three runs in the seventh inning, a rally that was helped when Baltimore outfielders twice misplayed easy fly balls and let them fall for hits. Then in the 10th, Lance Parrish snapped the tie with a sacrifice fly and Alan Trammell added an insurance run with an RBI triple.

Rangers 10-1, Mariners 2-0

Texas scored nine runs in the first inning of its opening game against Seattle, with John Ellis' three-run homer the big blow. Ferguson Jenkins fired a three-hit shutout, striking out six, in the second game, the only run scoring on Pat Putnam's second-inning double.

MIGHTY WALTER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The incomparable Walter Johnson, of the blurring speed, pitched in 802 American League games for the Washington Senators and won 416. In a space of four days in 1908, Sept. 4, 5, and 7, he accomplished a record that has never been equaled.

Four New Coaches Still Are Unbeaten

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Everybody likes to make a good impression at a new job and that's what four new National Football League coaches, Ray Malavasi of Los Angeles, Cleveland's Sam Rutigliano, Neill Armstrong at Chicago and Washington's Jack Pardee, have done so far this season.

All four are unbeaten after three weeks of the 1978 season and will try to keep the good times rolling this weekend.

The only other NFL unbeaten is Pittsburgh with holdover Coach Chuck Noll and the Steelers go against Rutigliano's Browns in one of Sunday's big games.

Elsewhere Sunday, Baltimore plays at Buffalo, Denver is at Kansas City, New England plays at Oakland, Atlanta visits Tampa Bay, St. Louis goes to Dallas, the New York Giants host San Francisco, Detroit plays at Seattle, San Diego is at home to Green Bay, Los Angeles visits at Houston, Miami goes to Philadelphia, New Orleans is at Cincinnati and Washington plays the New York Jets.

The Monday night game sends Minnesota to Chicago.

Of the four unbeaten new coaches, Rutigliano would seem to have the toughest task staying that way Sunday. The Browns have not won at Pittsburgh since 1969, dropping eight straight there.

"What happened in the past, especially in Pittsburgh, is not going to affect our performance this week," said Rutigliano. "That record doesn't mean anything to me or my staff since it occurred before we arrived in Cleveland.

"Everyone on our team realizes that in order to accomplish the things we hope to achieve, it all begins with winning our division. Winning the Central title starts and ends with Pittsburgh, since they are the defending champions."

The Browns and Steelers are both 3-0 and tied for the American Conference Central Division lead.

Malavasi and Armstrong both are former defensive aides who have moved into head spots for the first time in their long coaching careers.

Malavasi, who replaced George Allen as coach of the Rams during the preseason, had spent the last five seasons as the club's defensive coordinator. And it has been the Los Angeles defense that has helped the Rams open a twogame lead in the NFC West.

LA leads the league in total defense with a yield of 600 yards and 28 points for three games. The Rams also lead their conference in rushing defense.

Armstrong's Chicago club has surrendered only 23 points in three games, the fewest allowed by any team in the NFL. The Bears' new coach spent the previous seven years molding Minnesota's defense and a year ago, watched Walter Payton set an NFL rushing record of 275 yards in a single game against the Vikings. Now, Armstrong will be on Payton's side of the field when the Beats meet Minnesota Monday night.

Pardee was Payton's coach in Chicago and moved on to Washington when Allen was dismissed. Now he has the Redskins in first place in the NFC East with three straight wins. Washington's surge has been paced by quarterback Joe Theisman, who leads the conference's passers with an 87.1 performance rating.

Hotshot

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, in cooperation with the Pepsi-Cola Bottling Company, is holding the "Hotshot" competition this year.

This is a basketball skills program for boys and girls, ages 9-18. There are six categories of competition, three for boys and three for girls: ages 9-12, 13-15 and 16-18.

Winners in each age group are eligible to go to area playoffs in 21 NBA cities. Area winners then go on to represent NBA teams in national competition.

Registration is now underway and continues through Saturday. The Competition begins on October 6 and 7, and concludes on October 14.

Entry forms are available to Elm Street Gym, South Greenville Gym, West Greenville Gym and Jaycee Park office.

Further information can be obtained by calling the Recreation Department office, 752-4137, ext. 220.

THOSE INTERESTED IN attending the 1978 Pitt County Ducks Unlimited banquet, to be held next month, are being urged to purchase their tickets early because the function will be limited this year to 200 persons, according to Eddie Smith Jr., chairman of the Pitt County DU chapter.

The local banquet has been such a success in the past few years that the large turnout has crowded the annual meeting place, the Greenville Golf and Country Club. This year, the local DU committee decided to limit the attendance at the meeting to 200 and also to eliminate the special rate for Greenwing members offered in the past.

Roughly 250 persons attended last year's banquet and auction, which raised some $26,000 for waterfowl conservation. Greenwings, the younger DU members, were admitted at a reduced rate. This year's banquet, scheduled to begin at 6:30 p.m. on Oct. 25, will cost $35 per person, regardless of age. As in the past, the admission price includes a $20 tax deductable donation to Ducks Unlimited.

This year's meeting will include the annual auction of waterfowl art and other related items, including the DU print of the year, "Fall Kaleidoscope...Wood Ducks" by Owen J. Gromme. There will be a special program for Greenwings held at a later date.

Tickets for the banquet may be purchased from any DU committee member, or at Bond's or Hodge's sporting goods stores.

First Fishing Tournament Successful

The Greenville Saltwater Fishing Club, which was formed a few months back, held its first fishing tournament last Sunday, which was termed a "tremendous success."

Around 20 boats participated in the event, a king mackerel competition, with some 35 fish being caught. Pete West and Byron Dickens took first place for the largest king caught, a 35½-pounder, while Leon Murdock had the most total poundage, 118 with a total of 13 fish.

Although pier fishing was allowed, all contestants fished from boats, either troll or float-fishing. A second tournament is planned for mid-October. It will be a two-day affair and included several categories.

List Of Proposals Available

Sportsmen and others interested in the proposed changes in North Carolina's wildlife resources law can obtain a free detailed summary of all the proposals.

"Because of the widespread interest in the proposed changes, we have compiled a detailed summary in booklet form, which is available to anyone who writes for it," said Woodrow Price, chairman of the N. C. Conservation Law Study Committee. The address for ordering copies is: Wildlife Resources Law Revision, Room 383, Archdale Building, 512 N. Salsibury Street, Raleigh, N. C. 27611.

The proposals will be discussed at a series of public meetings to be held across the state. The meeting for this area will be held at the courthouse in New Bern at 7:30 p.m. on Sept. 27.

The Conservation Law Study Committee is a body established in 1977 by the General Assembly to consider revision of the 1935 state game law. The Committee has agreed upon a number of tentative proposals to modify the provisions of the original bill, particularly in the penalties section.

Price commented, "If the bill passes, it will be the first comprehensive revision and updating of North Carolina's 40-year-old game law. There have been many amendments to the 1935 game law and many local game laws have been passed over the years. This has created a great deal of difficulty for wildlife officials in trying to enforce this complex set of laws.

"Also, the general public does not have ready access to the laws which control their hunting, fishing and trapping activities because so many are local laws which are buried in the statute books and are beyond the control of the Wildlife Commission. The result has been confusion among sporstmen and hindrance in the proper management of wildlife resources."

Pond Captures OD 500's Pole

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) Lennie Pond of Chester, Va., has won the pole position for five Grand National stock car races this season, but he's one just one race — a record-breaking Talladega 500 in August.

The Chevrolet driver will make his fifth start in the No. 1 spot in the $110,700 23rd annual Old Dominion 500 Sunday, thanks to his fastest qualifying speed of 86.558 mph Friday on the .525-mile track.

Because of hot weather in which the temperature approached 90 degrees, Pond failed to break the Old Dominion qualifying record of 87.637 mph set by Neil Bonnett of Hueytown, Ala., who wound up seventh Friday with a speed of 85.858 mph.

Besides the pole position, Pond earned a $1,000 bonus. The Sunday winner earns $17,000, and there will be $5,000 in lap money — $1,000 each to the driver who wins the most laps in each 100-lap segment.

Starting on the outside pole will be Chevrolet driver Richard Petty of Randleman, N. C., who hit a speed of 86.384 mph Friday. Petty has won 14 races at the local speedway, but he has yet to win on the Grand National circuit this season.

Chevrolet drivers also won the next three spots — Darrell Waltrip of Franklin, Tenn., 86.364 mph; Benny Parsons of Ellerbe, N. C., 85.968 mph; and Buddy Baker of Charlotte, N. C., 85.936 mph.

Defending Old Dominion 500 champion Cale Yarborough of Timmonsville, S. C., was sixth in an Oldsmobile at 85.890 mph.

The first 20 spots in the 30car field were decided Friday. The other 10 were scheduled to befilled today in advance of a $13,880, 150-lap National Championship Modified race.

Behind Bonnett in the top 10 were David Pearson of Spartanburg, S. C.,sin a Mercury; Bobby Allison of Hueytown, Ala., in a Thunderbird; and Late Model Sportsman driver Harry Gant of Taylorsville, N. C., in a Chevrolet.

The top 20 qualifiers were separated by just .782 of a second and 2.993 mpt in Friday's trials.

"It feels great to win the pole, but now I'd really like to win the race," said Pond, whose only previous circuit victory was the one at Talladega.

KNUCKLER TIPS

CHICAGO (AP) — Wilbur Wood of the Chicago White Sox says the name of his favorite pitch, the knuckleball, is a misnomer.

"A knuckler is actually thrown with the tips of the index and middle fingers," the veteran southpaw pointed out. "The ball is gripped right behind the stitches where the leather is softest. You have to throw it the same way all the time. Nobody really knows for sure which way the ball will break but most times it is down and away. When it goes the other way, the catcher has a problem."

PLAN YOUR HOME

STONE-SHEATHED EXTERIOR, SPACIOUS INSIDE

THREE BEDROOM HOME MARKED BY OPEN PLANNING

By Jerry Bishop

Beyond its stone-layered facade, the Roycroft, a three bedroom design, encompasses well over 2000 sq. ft. of open, livable space.

Living areas, already generously proportioned, seem even larger because of their unrestricted union to each other in the combination of family room/kitchen and dining room/living room. At the same time, the floor plan calls for formal as well as informal space and eliminates any need for cross-traffic.

Shake-shingled mansard roof, rustic stone siding, and traditional dormered windows create a fresh, attractive exterior that promises plentiful space inside. The floor plan, highly contemporary, shows a two level arrangement with attached garage and large basement.

Entry is into a gracious foyer with coat closet and access to the upper-level. The two-car garage can be reached from the foyer, a bonus in inclement weather.

To the right of the foyer, the formal areas of the home are ready for guests. The living room joins the dining room to result in an expansive area windowed on three sides.

Back the hallway from the foyer, the kitchen and family room fill informal activity needs. The family room stretches more than 23 feet and merits a wood-burning fireplace, while the kitchen shows ample space for family meals and opens to the patio through sliding glass doors. Placed behind the garage, the patio is guaranteed privacy and is ideally suited for cook-outs.

The upper level calls for three bedrooms and two full baths, with the front-facing master bedroom enjoying a private bath and large closet.

A basement adds another 840 sq. ft. of space for storage or recreation room.

Keep Eyes Open In Renovating

By GEORGENE KALEINA
Associated Press Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Renovating old houses, a nationwide trend that's luring young and middle-class families back to the cities, may be hazardous to those involved because of the threat of lead poisoning, researchers here say.

The risk is especially great for children and pregnant women, according to the scientists.

Dr. J. Julian Chisolm Jr., who has studied lead poisoning in children for most of his career as a physician, says persons who take on the task of doing over a home should be extra cautious, particularly if the home is 60 years or older.

Even though the use of interior lead-based paint was outlawed decades ago, there are many homes here alone in which the toxic paint was used before the ban. A large percentage of the homes have not been de-leaded.

"People ought to be careful (when renovating a home)," Chisolm said. "They're not aware of the danger."

Pregnant women should never be involved in renovating a home, the physician warned.

"Lead crosses the placenta to the unborn baby and the blood levels of lead in the mother and child are then the same," he said. "There has been a connection made between high levels of lead and the increased rate of stillbirths and spontaneous abortions."

Any woman involved in renovating a home should have blood tests to determine the level of lead in her system before getting pregnant, he said.

Children, especially ages 1 to 6 years, should be strictly supervised when they are around such renovation, he added.

Health officials have determined that 90 percent of pediatric lead poisoning cases result from a child eating peeling, cracking or flaking paint or paint plaster in his home.

The ingestion of lead can cause vomiting, abdominal pain, anemia, nausea, constipation or listlessness in a child.

If the disease goes untreated, there may be central nervous system involvement which can result in blindness, paralysis, mental retardation and finally death, according to a 1971 Health, Education and Welfare Department report.

The report continued that children could also be left with learning problems, partial loss of sensory perception and other behavioral or emotional difficulties.

A child is "relatively" safe from poisoning if the leadbased paint isn't chipping, Chisolm said. But renovating a home often involves completely stripping walls and ceilings.

Ventilation is a key factor, Chisolm said.

The area which is being redone should be well ventilated or the person should wear an aspirator, he said.

Chisolm also advises never eating in an area which is being redone, and the worker should wear coveralls which are then laundered separately from his other clothes.

Fashion Turns To Needlepoint

NEW YORK (UPI) — When it comes to needlepoint art, pillows and other home furnishing items may be taking a back seat to fashion accessories, according to judges of a national needlework competition held here.

The trend surfaced in the second annual Paternayan competition in which first prize was awarded to Susan Hall of Sun Valley, Idaho, for an elegant needlepoint bag. Second prize went to Jean Grimshaw of McHenry, Ill., for a needlepoint vest with two roostes in fighting trim confronting each other across the front.

Two of the judges of the nationwide competition, Susan Siegler of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and Jack Lenor Larsen, well-known designer, attributed the switch from pillows to purses to the new importance of handcrafted accessories in today's fashion picture.

Laying Turf On Housing Roofs

LONDON (AP) — The ruling council in suburban Lewisham is going to lay turf on the roofs of single-story extensions to 22 houses in an experimental development so families won't have to stare out their windows onto a blank stone expanse of roof.

But tenants won't be mowing their roofs, because the soil depth is only four inches and the grass won't grow long.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newfeatures

Several weeks ago, some of the readers of this column were asked to state their views on housing for the retired. The questions were addressed only to those persons 55 years of age and older, since it was felt that few younger persons think specifically about their retirement plans.

While the response did not match last year's 4,300 replies to another housing study — directed to all readers — there was a remarkable return.

The mailman brought 1,846 letters replying to the questions. Six hundred and thirtytwo were from men and women between 55 and 65; 1,002 from those between 65 and 75; 199 from those between 75 and 90; and 3 from persons 90 and over. Ten did not give their ages.

There was an overlap of the figures involving the non-retired and the retired, because some of those under 65 were already retired, some over 65 were still working, and some were working part-time. But on balance, 1,242 responders were retired, 604 not retired.

Some of the letters contained interesting comments. No names will be given because many asked that their identities not be revealed.

As one 74-year-old woman said, "If they find out how I feel about my apartment and this place, they may not renew ny lease."

The first questions were: Do you expect to seek out a retirement community? If you already are retired and live in such a place, how do you like it?

Three hundred and eleven of the non-retired said they expected to settle down later in a community of elderly persons. Two hundred and forty-six nixed the idea. The others didn't know yet or gave answers that could not be categorized. The outstanding element of this part of the survey was that those planning to look for a retirement community made little additional comment, but those opposed were emphatically against it. Their opposition could be summed up in the words of a 59-year-old man who said, in exactly this fashion, "NO! NO! NO!"

Of the 1,242 retired persons, 302 (couples were counted as one) said they lived in retirement areas, including apartments, mobile parks and combinations of two or more of them. One hundred and forty-two were satisfied with their arrangements, 104 found them adequate but not quite what they had anticipated, and 56 were unhappy about the whole thing.

Three Strikes On A Candidate

By VALERIE STRAUSS

RIVIERA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Mrs. B. E. "Billie" Brooks began her campaign for the Florida's state Senate with three strikes against her — "I'm black, a woman and a Republican."

And that's tough, especially for someone who admits that 10 years ago she was a "flaming liberal Democrat" who constantly argued politics with her conservative Republican husband.

Mrs. Brooks is the only black female Republican in the nation running for a state senate seat, and she's running against an incumbent in a predominantly Democratic five-county district.

"I guess I have three strikes against me to start with," she said, "but I hope it won't make any difference."

Mrs. Brooks, 36, is no stranger to politics. Her husband, Bobby Brooks, is in his second two-year term as the mayor of Riviera Beach, a community of about 30,000 with blacks and whites about equally divided. It was her husband, she said, who was responsible for her switch to the Republican Party.

"I registered as a Democrat when I was 18, and always considered myself a flaming liberal. I went to school at Tuskegee University 30 miles away from George Wallace's home from 1959 to 1963, and those were really hot years."

But in 1967, her husband of three years convinced her the Democratic party was ignoring minorities. She switched to the GOP and became what she calls a "moderate Republican."

"I really believe the Republican Party, at least in this state, is making a sincere effort to get blacks into the party," she said. "It's important to make both parties responsive to minority needs.

"The Republicans are committed to courting the black vote and helping minorities. Sen. Bob Dole said the Republicans lost in 1976 because they had not attracted the black voters.

Mrs. Brooks said she noticed the first significant change in GOP concern over minority needs during the Ford Administration.

"I don't think the party will regress in the 1980 presidential elections by chosing a very conservative man," she said. If it does, she says she'll sit out the national election.

Mrs. Brooks was asked by the Palm Bach County GOP committee to run for office in May. She agreed and quit her job as executive director of the Community Coordinated Child Care of West Palm Beach, a firm that supervises day care centers, to devote full time to campaigning.

"I am going around to churches, fraternities, sororities, small groups of any kind. I want the people to know I'm sincere about helping them, and I want them to tell me what their problems and needs are. The key to my campaigning will be the grassroots effort," she said.

Florida Republican Chairman Bill Taylor said the GOP is counting on "many disillusioned Democrats to vote our ticket" in November.

"As far as we are concerned, Jimmy Carter is the best friend the Republicans have. We have already seen the Democrats reacting badly to the administration and that's going to help us."

Taylor said Mrs. Brooks' race is of "top priority" and she will get financial as well as tactical help from the state party when the campaign against the Democrats begins in September.

A political organizing firm hired by the state party is already helping her plan campaign strategy, she said.

Incumbent Don Childers, DWest Palm Beach, will be Mrs. Brooks' Nov. 7 opponent.

For Mrs. Brooks, the hardest part of campaigning is raising money.

"I hate asking people for money," she said. "I'm kind of a low-keyed person, but I do go into black areas and ask them to have bake sales or car washes. It's a big help."

And daughter Bianca, 13, and son Bobby Jr., 10, are selling homemade ice cream to raise money for mon's campaign.

Fewer Babies By 'Right' Families

By MIMI WHITEFIELD

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Because the "right" people are not having babies now, children born to many other Americans may have a lower standard of living when they grow up, says a Georgetown University researcher.

The problem is not that "the wrong people are having children — it's that the right people are not having them," says Dr. Andre E. Hellegers, director of Georgetown's Joseph and Rose Kennedy Institute of Ethics.

"The American middle and upper classes — those who can most afford to have children — are less likely to have them," he said in an interview.

They are the people most apt to produce children who will have adequate incomes as adults and contribute to the social security system, he added. Hellegers specializes in the biological and social problems of obstetrics.

He said the crunch will come because the number of older Americans is increasing and they are living longer than ever before, while the birth rate is declining. About three million babies are born yearly, compared with slightly more than four million a year in the late 1950s.

The problem facing the United States is the opposite of the population explosion in Third World countries, Hellegers said. Instead of too many hungry children demanding care, there are too many older people in proportion to the work force.

"As a consequence, fewer people are becoming responsible for more people," he said. "Then the question is to look at the competency of those who will do the supporting."

Twenty percent of the children of today's smaller families will be born to teenagers, whose parenthood often interferes with continued schooling.

At the same time, professional couples or well-educated young adults who have been brought up with the concept of zero population growth are having fewer children or postponing them or deciding against parenthood.

LOOKING AHEAD — Dr. Andre E. Hellegers says because the "right" people are not having babies now, children born to many other Americans may have a lower standard of living when they grow up. UPI Photo)

Hellegers said the teenage birth rate has been decreasing for a decade and people over 20 are having even fewer children.

"The ability of these children of teenagers to make it into an advantageous economic grouping is highly questionable," he said. "This puts an even greater burden on the remaining children to contribute."

Hellegers expects the future to bring higher taxes and a lower standard of living unless affluent people produce enough children to support the so-called dependency burden or unless that dependency burden is decreased.

"You can't decrease the old and retired, but you sure as hell can improve the ability to contribute of the children at the bottom of the pile," he said.

"The children (of the poor) will either become a burden on society or become contributors and that depends on how we treat them."

Red China's Higher Education Takes A New Look

By CHARLES R. SMITH
UPI Senior Editor

HONG KONG (UPI) — China's colleges are ready to receive students for the first normal school term since the late Mao Tse-tung messed up the country's educational system a dozen years ago.

The freshman class entering more than 400 colleges and universities will number slightly more than 300,000. This is the cream of the crop of more than 6 million students who sat for the entrance examinations during the summer.

Although 278,000 enrolled last year in institutions of higher learning — the highest figure since 1965 — it wasn't a normal school year. They studied under a curriculum that still put heavy emphasis on politics and manual labor, which Mao and his radical followers advocated so strongly.

When the fall term begins this month, the students will be studying under a new curriculum. Their textbooks will be new — long on academic material, and short on the ideology on which Mao insisted.

The books also will draw more on foreign material.

Teachers will have more authority in the classrooms, where student anarchy once reigned. They will be using more modern teaching techniques picked up from abroad.

Several hundred visiting professors from the United States, West Germany, Great Britain, France, Japan and other countries will be lecturing at some institutions.

But the most important development will be the operation of "key" colleges and universities.

The brightest and best of the freshmen will be going to 88 "key" institutions selected by the Ministry of Education. The ministry said it was necessary to concentrate on these institutions in order to speed up and improve the quality of education.

"It is impossible to properly equip many schools at once," the ministry explained. "With education funds not readily available, we can only add to such equipment step by step. A thousand and one things call for attention, but there is no way to take care of everything at the same time.

"If existing manpower, material and financial resources were to be evenly distributed, an inevitable diffusion of forces would result. It everyone wants to advance at the same time, no one will. If the quality of education is not raised, and no qualified personnel are turned out, our country's modernization program will slow down...

"There is only one way to accomplish this mission. It is to concentrate forces on the proper operation of key schools. There is no other way."

These key schools will play a pilot role in the drive to "raise the quality of education" and "train personnel rapidly".

"Key schools will enroll students with superior educational level," the ministry said. "They will have more competent faculties and better teaching facilities while the state gives them aid in reference books and teaching equipment."

All this is part of the new look in Chinese education.

Nothing was more ravaged by Mao's chaotic Cultural Revolution than China's educational system.

The damage began in June 1966, when Mao ordered schools closed. He decreed that examinations should be abolished. Students would be selected on a "class basis" rather than on academic achievement. The school term should be shortened, Mao said. And it was.

Examinations, Mao declared, were "surprise attacks" that put an unnecessary burden on students.

He said more time should be devoted to political study. Nonpolitical studies should be supplemented by practical application, meaning that much of the students' time should be spent working on farms or in factories. Teachers also had to participate in "productive labor," Mao said.

This, Mao contended, would enable the students and teachers to "better serve proletarian politics and socialism."

More sons and daughters of poor peasants and workers would have an opportunity to enter college as a result of the lowering of academic standards and the shortening of the period of study — from four to three years for colleges.

The reform of the educational system probably went much further than Mao ever intended. Radical leftists, including his widow, Chiang Ching, and her cohorts of the notorious "Gang of Four", seized upon Mao's moves in the educational field as one of the main weapons in a war against intellectuals.

They brought anarchy to the classrooms when schools finally reopened — and even now not all are operating. Tens of thousands of teachers were driven from schools into communes, factories or labor camps.

"The educational front truly has been a disaster area," the Communist party newspaper People's Daily, admitted frankly in a recent article on the problems in China's educational system.

The article was one of hundreds published by the People's Daily and other official organs during the past several months on the revamping of the educational system now underway.

This is a top priority program.

The man behind it is Teng Hsiao-ping, the dynamic vice premier and party vice chairman, purged when Mao first began his assault on the system.

Speaking at a national conference on education earlier this year, Teng put the blame for the breakdown in education on Mao's followers, not on him.

Teng argued that it was never Mao's intention to lower the quality of education by overemphasizing ideology and manual labor, shortening the period of study and other related actions.

The dangerous decline in education was brought about by others pursuing a destructive course in Mao's name, Teng said.

"There is much that is new on the educational front since the overthrow of the 'Gang of Four' and particularly since the reform of the college enrollment system and the criticism of the 'two assessments'," Teng said.

(The "two assessments" were arguments used by the Gang and other radicals to attack moderate leaders and intellectuals who resisted their attempts to change the system. One assessment was that education in the 17 years before Mao ordered the system revised was revisionist. The second assessment declared students and teachers of that period should be regarded as enemies of socialism because their outlook was bourgeois.)

The important question today, Teng said, is, "how, under the new historical conditions to implement further the fundamental principle set forth by Chairman Mao that 'education must serve proletarian politics and be combined with productive labor.'"

"The 'Gang of Four', under the cloak of Mao Tse-tung thought, wilfully distorted and trampled on this principle and led the educational revolution astray, causing grave damage to education," Teng said.

No matter how damaging Mao's moves may have been, some of them had considerable popular appeal.

Lowering educational standards, abolishing entrance exams and opening college doors to students who otherwise would never have been able to attend, were moves welcomed by many.

The relaxation of discipline, which permitted students to attack teachers in open criticism sessions and which permitted students to have a role in running the schools, were praised by many. But the net result was anarchy in the classrooms and an exodus of teachers from their schools.

In one of the articles on education, one official newspaper in Peking said the nation is faced with a serious shortage of teachers as a result of their mistreatment in the past.

There are only about nine million teachers — many poorly qualified — for the more than 400 colleges and universities, 200,000 middle (high) schools and more than a million primary schools. Many of those nine million are still working in other jobs.

To help ease the shortage, the Kwangming Daily said it was imperative to get those teachers laid off under various pretexts" back into the classrooms.

"The issue of teachers returning to the ranks involves such trades and professions as industry, agriculture, commerce and public service," the article said. "Given the urgent need for qualified people, leading members at all levels must take immediate action to have teachers doing the work for which they were trained."

The quality of teaching also needs upgrading urgently, an education minisry official said.

To do this, teachers's colleges are being reinstituted. Teachers are being sent abroad to study modern techniques for the first time in many years. Those who do not go abroad are being given training in advanced teaching aids and methods now in use in other countries but kept out of China in the past by the anti-foreign attitude of the radicals.

"A great effort will be made to modernize teaching media and develop radio, television and film education." Liu Hsiyao, the minister of education, said in an 8-year plan his ministry outlined "for education in the new era."

Postgraduate training also is being resumed this month after a lapse of 12 years. A total of 9,000 postgraduate students will be enrolled in 207 institutes of higher learning and 144 research institutes.

Self Care Kits Readied

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two new medical self care kits are to be introduced shortly, according to the manufacturer.

Dr. Keith W. Sehnert, a pioneer in America's self care medical movement, helped design the Auto Trauma Kit and the Burn Trauma Kit, both made by Marshall Electronics Inc., Skokie, Ill.

The kit meant to help deal with injuries and other aspects of auto accidents includes: red flares, four "help" flags to hang from the car windows or hold up so visible to oncoming traffic.

Also: an emergency blanket to wrap under and around the victims to treat shock; muslin triangular bandages to use as slings or tourniquets, adhesive bandages, compresses, wound cleansing pads, adhesive tape, and wound scrubbers. On a stick-on sheet, about the size of the glove compartment door, there is listed an inventory of contents, instructions for use, and references to pages in the kit's selfhelp manual.

What to do first, say the instructions: "Move injured person if the car is in danger of burning, flooding or being struck by another vehicle. Strike fuses to warn traffic away."

Next are instructions for maintaining life — "Help injured person to breathe. Stop serious bleeding. Prevent shock. The third step is to "signal for help, using the 'help' flags." The fourth step is to render first aid — "and keep calm."

The instructions sheet reminds, "Be prepared. Read the Auto Trauma Kit instruction booklet before you leave home."

The burn trauma kit contains instructions, topical anesthetic, medicated ointment, burn ointment, bandage and tape. The initial instructions:

—Flush burn with cool water. If small, wash with soap.

—If burn is large, call for aid.

—Tell doctor cause of burn (flame, friction, electrical) and extent of burn. Tell him you have this kit. Follow instructions.

Giant Horses Make Comeback

By GREGORY JENSEN

MAIDENHEAD, England (UPI) — At first it is hard to credit that these monster animals are horses at all.

Stand next to the star exhibits at the Courage Shire Horse Center and you feel like a dwarf. Shires are the biggest horses in the world.

"They were originally war horses," said center manager Robin Lucas. "They were bred to carry heavy armor and an armored knight into battle."

There is still a monumental, almost warlike feeling about a full-grown shire. A cluster of them, as you can find at this center 26 miles west of London, has enough appeal to draw 150,000 visitors in an eight-month season.

"This is Barley," said Lucas, introducing a towering brown horse. "He was hit by a train once. Didn't do him much damage."

The impact — Barley was a straying two-year-old at the time — left a small scar under his tail. What happened to the train is not recorded.

But it figures that an iron horse could meet its match in a one-ton animal whose bulging eye looms eight feet off the ground. A shire's hind quarters are taller than a man. His silky nose is higher than many women can reach.

"The breed was dying a few years ago," Lucas said on a tour of the center's hollow square of stables. "Almost extinct, in fact."

Now these ponderous animals are as popular as Pekinese. In 1960 only 19 pedigree foals were born in Britain. Now the country has more than 22,000 shires.

"There's a very big export trade building up to the United States and Canada," Lucas said. The Shire Horse Society has more than 1,000 enthusiastic members, and its patron is Queen Elizabeth II.

A few British farms have put shires back in harness, and some of the center's show horses do farm work in the winter "to work off a little fat," Lucas said. Other shires haul coal wagons or brewers' drays.

Courage, a British brewer, opened its Shire Horse Center three years ago when its old stables for heavy horse teams were requisitioned for redevelopment.

"We've got 13 horses here now," Lucas said. "Old Captain, the white one, is 25 years old, and Boxer, he's 18. They're retired now. But the others are all working."

Ten or 11 days each month in season, the center hitches four huge shires to a show wagon and parades them at carnivals, fairs, horse shows and charity events all over the country.

"They're all a little excited today," Lucas said of his charges. "They know we'll be making a trip, and they all want to go."

"This is Jester," he said, striding into a corner stable. "Hey, Jester, get back there now." He leaned on the horse's flank, and it was like trying to push over a barn.

Jester is a monster even among the center's shires. He weighs 2,464 pounds and stands 18½ hands (6 feet 2 inches) high at the shoulder.

"There are four breeds of heavy horse, and the shire is the biggest of them all," Lucas said. All pure-bred shires alive are descended from Harwich, a horse foaled in 1881, but pedigrees go back to 1700 when the shire became a distinct breed.

This horse's power is hard to comprehend. At a recent London show two shires were hitched to an 18½-ton weight to see if they could move it. One horse pulled, and the weight moved even before the second shire took up the strain.

Yet these are "gentle giants" — the title of a book about them. Children scamper in perfect safety around "the pillared waterfalls of their legs." Even Jester moved when Lucas shoved.

Whether making an appearance or tethered in the center — there is a sound like thunder when they kick the walls — the shires always are the center of an awed crowd.

"Toward the end of the season they get a bit fed up with all the petting and attention," Lucas said. But shires have the temperament for that, too.

The Shire Horse Society says they have "docility, strength, good constitution, stamina, great power and adaptability. They are good doers (and) live to a good ripe age."

They also bring in bills as big as themselves.

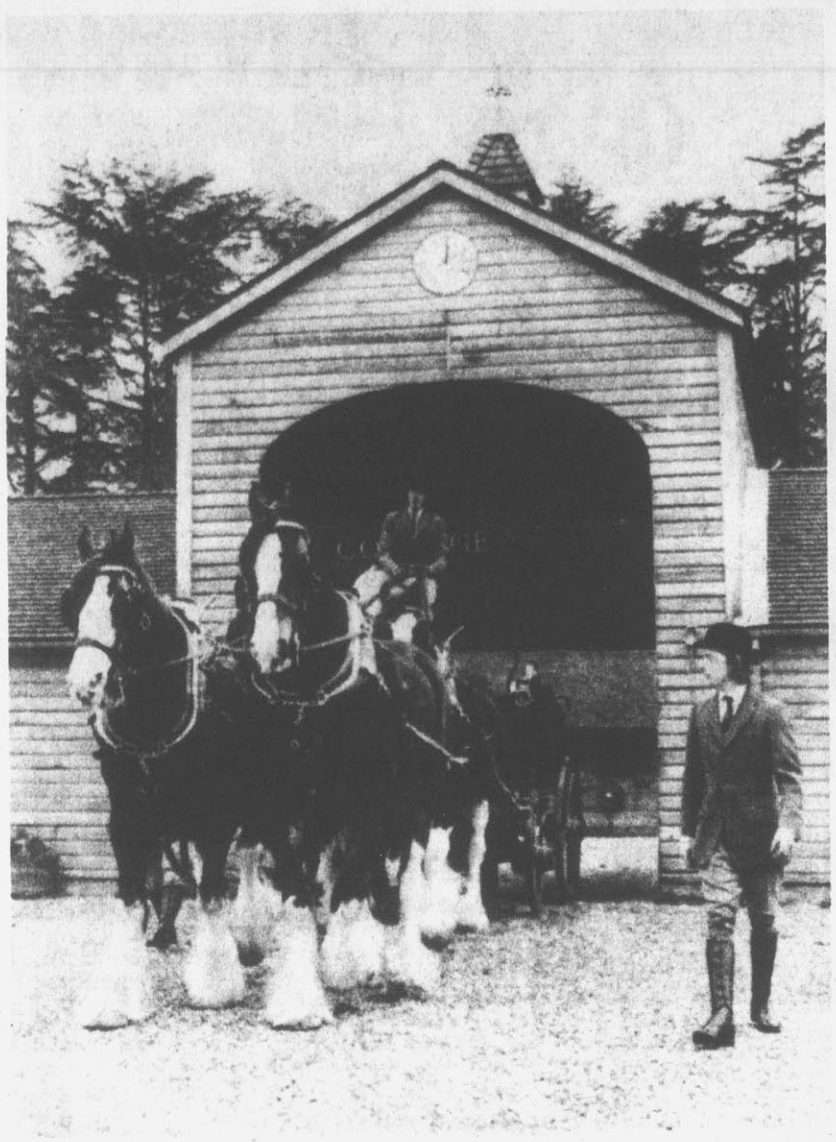

A set of harness costs $3,000, Lucas said. Their tailor-made collars are $10 an inch, and they are enormous. Each horse eats five times a day and costs $50 a week in food.

Lucas needs six grooms to care for 13 horses — "polishing a harness takes two days," he said. Their driver, Jim Lockwood, "has a magnificent pair of hands" and bulging muscles from controlling four shires with a set of reins. Blacksmith Harry Gregory gives each horse a new set of shoes every four to six weeks, "a very demanding job because of the weight," Lucas said.

So the Shire Horse Center runs at a loss — which is made up for in publicity and in prize ribbons by the hundreds.

Ribbons cram cases and cover walls in the center's Shire Museum, in its offices, and in the Shire Horse Inn next door — a pub whose decor also honors this giant and appealing breed.

"We've got lots more besides," Lucas said. "We've won so many ribbons we don't know where to put them."

Ladies Staff The Factory

By RICHARD BILL

TOKYO (AP) — An experiment begun last year by Yamaha Motor Co. to operate a motorbike factory with women workers has proved a roaring success.

With some degree of apprehension women were put on the assembly lines, as one official said, "to make better use of womanpower."

He said the women had won the admiration of their male colleagues when the all-woman factory produced 175,000 minibikes last year, 25,000 more than initially planned.

"They are making ladies' bikes so it makes sense that ladies should build them," said overseas department spokesman Hitoshi Ishida.

Another reason may be that women are considered skillful at precision work and that traditionally they earn less than men. The women earn $9,000 a year at the factory — about one-third less than their male counterparts.

When the experiment was launched in January 1977, the company management feared productivity would drop if only women operated the factory. Their fears have proved groundless and there are now plans to increase the number of female workers, Ishida said.

The factory started with 70 women but this has increased to 120, he said.

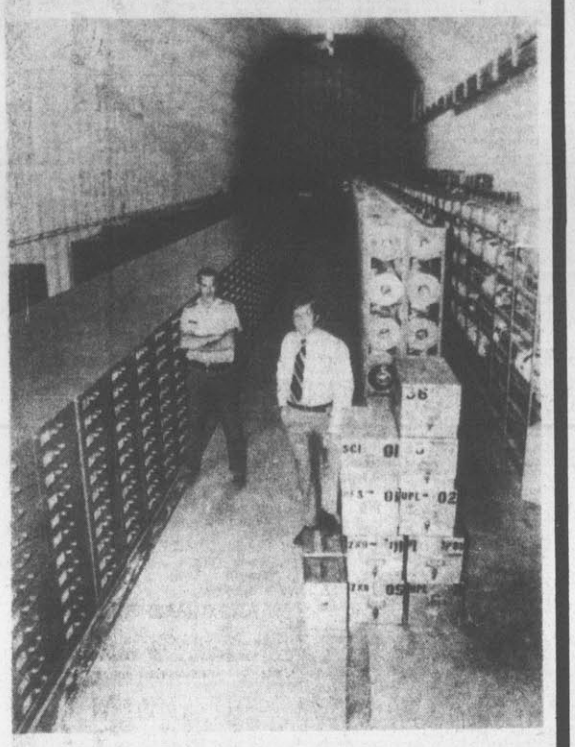

At present the factory is geared toward the domestic market and there are plans to put the women on larger and more powerful bikes in the future, Ishida said.

Mountain Is Safe Vault

By ROGER BENNETT

LITTLE COTTONWOOD CANYON, Utah (UPI) — A hundred years ago miners gouged narrow holes in the rock walls of Little Cottonwood Canyon and brought out the precious silver locked in the mountain.

Today, speculators and investors are going the opposite direction — squirreling away millions in silver ingots in a bomb and earthquake-proof tunnel blasted out of solid granite.

Hoards of precious metal are not the only things deposited in Perpetual Storage's vault, which burrows 215 feet into the granite wall. The company's biggest clients are corporations which want to protect vital business records and technical material.

Located about a mile up the canyon from the world-famous genealogical vaults of the Mormon Church, the commercial storage facility is protected by a sophisticated electronic surveillance system, as well as cowboy-booted, gun-toting guards.

The vault is 30 feet high and 35 feet wide and looks inside like a giant quonset hut with its corrugated steel lining. The temperature is an almost constant 57 degrees with a new control system that will keep humidity at less than 40 percent.

Perpetual Storage, a division of Omniwest Corp., started its vault in 1969 and opened for business a year later. Its Salt Lake City office is loaded with specialized equipment to turn business records into easily stored microfilm or microfiche.

The vault is lined with racks of film drawers and storage kits.

Most of the millions of dollars worth of silver and gold sits in sealed Army ammunition cans, most so heavy it takes two men to carry them. Other hoards of ingots are stashed in paint cans.

The compny is almost entirely owned by Bob Lynch, who made a fortune in banking and shopping centers in California. Lynch's 23-year-old son Pat came to Salt Lake this year to run the storage business after graduating from the University of Southern California.

The father's personal collections of Eocene era fossils and Indonesian art are also stored in the vault.

Young Lynch is remodeling the vault and the offices which are burrowed into the mountain.

Part of the upgrading of the facility is a new road which will replace the narrow, jarring switchback which leads from the canyon road up to the vault, located 140 feet above the canyon floor.

Lynch said many companies which lose their business records to fire, flood, theft or other causes, go out of business despite insurance. More than 90 percent, he said, suffer some kind of serios problem with the loss of the records.

"We sell catastrophe insurance and we have one of only two vaults in the country especially built for this kind of storage," said Lynch.

Lynch's biggest customer is General Electric and the list includes Avco, Fluor, Corp., and EST.

He calls his vault, "the Fort Knox of storage facilities."

Studies done by the Mormon Church when it built its giant vaults that hold the microfilmed genealogical records of millions of people, showed that if an earthquake hit the Wasatch Mountains, the whole granite mountain would move as a unit and not crack.

Lynch claims the vault is also fire and flood proof and could probably survive anything but a direct hit by a nuclear bomb. The facility produces its own electricity from generators on the Little Cottonwood Creek.

Entrance to the vault complex is gained only after a customer calls the central office to request entry. Once at the vault site, the visitor must show approved identification to a closed-circuit TV camera. He goes through an electronically controlled steel door, one of two that can only be opened when the other is closed.

The vault itself is behind a 12,000-pound steel door made by the same company and similar to doors that survived the atomic attack on Hiroshima. An armed guard accompanies each visitor.

Security is augmented by a system of electronic sensors that are connected to the main office as well as the Salt Lake County Sheriff's Canyon Patrol.

Lynch said many businesses don't realize how much trouble they'd be in if their records, contracts, plans or other materials were destroyed or lost to corporate thieves or clerical sabotage.

"A company should have three sets of vital records — one at their office, one in their own vault and one in an off-site vault like ours."

He pointed to a 1973 fire at a federal records center in St. Louis that destroyed 9 million Army service records as what can happen to vital records. The fire was started by a cigarette.

Business records are the company's main business but it is the sight of millions of dollars in silver sitting in the innocuous-looking ammo cans and paint cans that strikes the visitor to the vault.

"Its kind of a nice irony, you know," Lynch said. "Those miners worked their butts off to dig silver out of these mountains a hundred years ago and now people are putting that same stuff back into the mountain."

At 95, Stumbled On Secret Of Enjoying Life

By SUSAN POSTLEWAITE
Associated Press Writer

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — At age 95, Scott Nearing says he has "stumbled onto" the good life.

"It's a situation where we're enjoying life," he says. "Maybe we ought to be sitting and rocking, but we're not. We're enjoying life, and it's a life we can recommend to our friends."

From 25 to 30 people a week troop up the dirt road at Harborside in Penobscot Bay where Helen and Scott Nearing — among the leaders of the back-to-the-land movement of the 1960s — live in an isolated stone house they built themselves.

Most of their visitors want to see the garden and greenhouse and ask if there is still land available at a reasonable price, Nearing said.

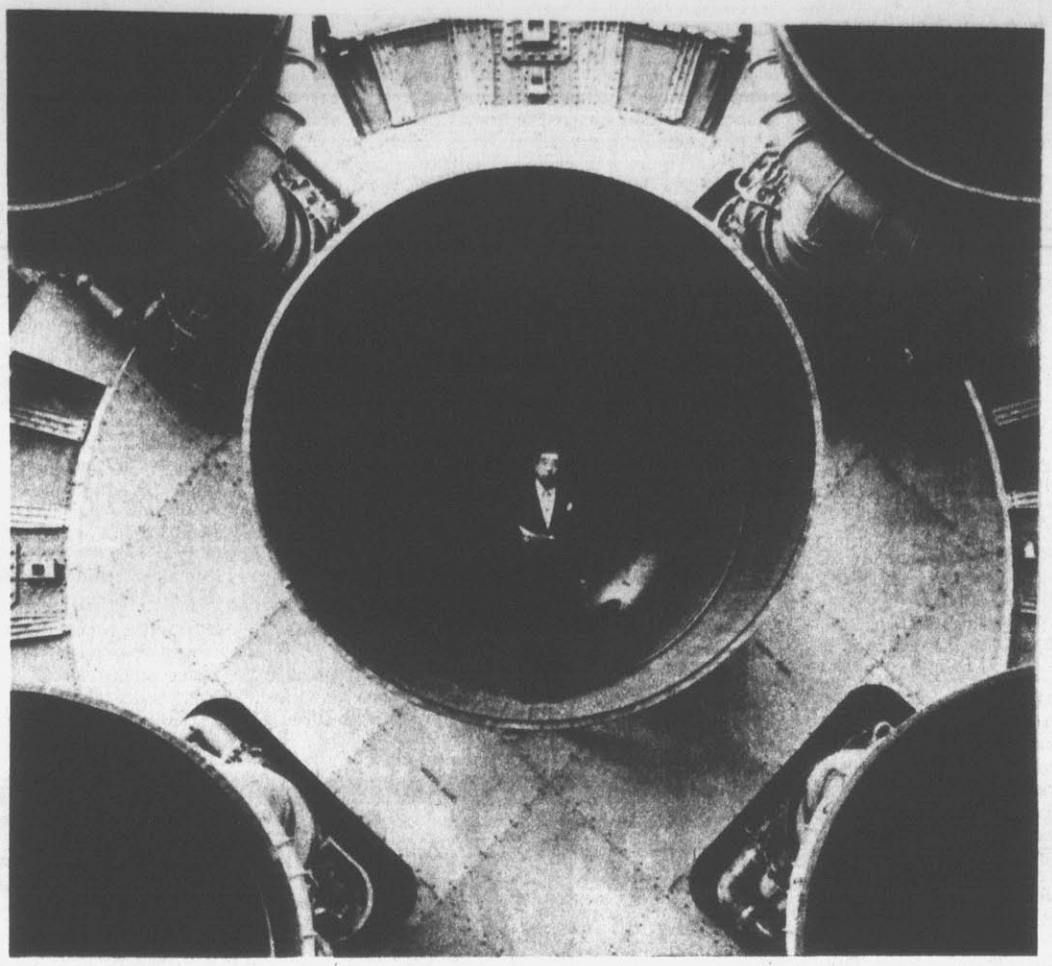

Nearing tells the pioneers, mostly young people from affluent backgrounds, that there is lan it's getting scarcer each year. He also advises that if they want to homestead, "Don't do it alone. Find at least one person who agrees with you."

A year ago, Nearing and Helen, 75, moved into their new, two-story stone house, without telephone or television. Last year, Nearing said, they took a "sabbatical." He published a new book, and Helen worked on a cookbook requested by a publisher, which she calls an "anticookbook."

An author, social critic and now a living example for young people attracted to "alternative" life styles, Nearing first gained prominence during World War I when his views :parked a dispute over cademic freedom. Fired from .e university for publishing anti-capitalist sentiments, he was later fired from another university for opposition to the war, he says.

Because of his writing and activities since then, he has been hailed by some as the "ultimate environmentalist," and grandfather of the ecology movement.

Nearing conceded he is less agile than he was 20 years ago, and he likes to take a nap before lunch, but he wears no glasses, his blue eyes are clear, he stands straight and his voice is strong. Only his white hair and sun-browned hands and face show his age.

NO SMOKING, PLEASE — Japanese broadcaster Hisanori Isomura delivers commentary about the space program from inside an engine on a Saturn 5 moon rocket on display at the Alabama Space and Rocket Center at Huntsville, Ala. Isomura and a Japanese Broadcast Corp. camera crew were filming part of an NHK special, "The Roots of the Space Age" in the city where Dr. Wernher von Braun led development of moon rockets and space stations. Isomura said Japanese interest in space exploration is strong, but that post-war feelings and laws limit the work that can be done. (AP Laserphoto)

Autumn's Harvest

Ribbon clown has orange felt hair.

Dried flowers in shades of rust decorate straw broom.

Autumn — the golden season — time for a harvest of needlework and crafts.

As summer ends, vacations are over and thoughts turn to entertaining and decorating. Family and friends return to the hearthside. Cozy times before the fireplace and after game entertaining fill the home with warmth and laughter.

Complement home decorating using Mother Nature's raw materials — corn shucks, dried grass and flowers. Fruits and vegetables lend beauty to decorations.

Consider a natural colored rope and ribbon braided wreath highlighted with miniature vegetables made of pendo clay. A straw wreath features corn shuck flowers, corn silks and sweetgum balls tied with burlap ribbon. A stone jug is filled with corn shuck flowers and a coat hanger is transformed into a fall scarecrow. A corn shuck man sitting on driftwood can be used as a centerpiece.

A clown made of ribbon can be used for a door hanging or a Christmas tree ornament. A straw broom, decorated with dried flowers in shades of rust and brown, can be used in a family room or den.

Natural raffia boy and girl can be dressed in calico prints. The figures can be made of dried grass, straw or corn shucks. Similar ones are made in Mexico of dyed palmetto fiber. Decorative pillows are appliqued with calico and homespun figures of Overall Sam and Sunbonnet Sue.

The pictured crafts and decorations were made by Mrs. Lucille Sumrell of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department.

Capable Of Making Decisions

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Our 24-year-old daughter, Debbie, has been living in New York for a year. (We live in California.) Debbie is a sensible, educated, single woman who has an excellent position. She's told us that she's romantically involved with John, a 33-year-old professional man. She says he is an outstanding person with fine qualities. They are not engaged, but he's the first man she's ever been serious about. Our only objection to this match is that John is not of our religion.

Debbie phoned to tell us that John's mother called her from Portland, Ore., and offered to pay her air fare there for the weekend to meet John's father, who is dying of cancer. They've never met Debbie, but have spoken to her on the phone often. John's mother said she felt that her husband would die happier knowing that his only son was going with a lovely girl.

Because my husband and I disapprove of our daughter's involvement with a man not of our faith, we told Debbie that we did not want her to go to Portland. Do you think we were wrong?

WONDERING IN WOODSIDE

DEAR WONDERING: Yes. A 24-year-old woman with your daughter's qualifications is capable of making her own decisions (including whom she should marry), and for you to put the kibosh on that trip for any reason was wrong. Whether or not Debbie and John marry, if she can make a dying man happy I think she should go. And I hope she does.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are finally being divorced after 12 years of a very stormy marriage and several separations.

My lawyer instructed me to move out of the house, so I did. The problem is that every time I go to the house to talk to my wife about some matter pertaining to the settlement, one thing leads to another and I end up sleeping there. (With her.)

It's ridiculous the way I go out and move the car so nobody will see it parked in front of the house all night.

Aren't we legally married until the divorce decree is final? If so, aren't we entitled to sleep together if we feel like it?

Please don't tell me that if we still want to sleep together we should consider saving our marriage. She is impossible to live with, and she says the same about me, but I must admit sex with her is the best. Do you think we're crazy?

BEING HONEST

DEAR HONEST: No. I think you're wise to recognize that fact that sexual compatibility isn't everything. But if you want to know if you're entitled to marital privileges until your divorce is final, ask your lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: In a courtship between a woman 68 and a man 70, who should offer the first kiss?

Please don't think this is a joke. I am a widow and he is a widower, and we are getting very close to where I will need the answer.

If he should make the first move, should I respond willingly? Or am I the one who should let him know I am not adverse to a romantic relationship? (I'm not, but I don't want to push for it.)

Women used to sit back and let the men make all the overtures, but perhaps women's lib has changed all that. Or has it?

OLDSTERS

DEAR OLDSTERS: If you feel like kissing him, go ahead and kiss him. He'll probably meet you halfway, and beat you to the finish line.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

About 10 years ago, a couple of boys were looking for a "snap course." They infiltrated a home ec. class.

It became so popular throughout the country special classes were formed and named "Bachelor Survival." In the past three years, the male enrollment has not only doubled, but in some high schools the males outnumber the females at the stoves.

What impact has this new breed had on our life styles?

I'll tell you what impact it's had. This country is producing (at an astronomical rate) what women who live in the kitchen refer to as "Domestic Jocks."

They're the Super Stars of the souffles . . . the dazzlers of the micro waves . . . the weekend headliners at the outdoor grills.

But they're stars. They don't do pans, spots, stains or ovens. They don't touch charcoal, dripping beaters, dirty blenders or skillets that have to be soaked. When they cook, it's first class all the way — fresh garlic, fresh lemons, fresh parsley and fresh mushrooms.

My husband never cooks out that I don't feel like I am assisting a surgeon at a double valve by-pass.

"Tongs! Quick! The tongs!" he commands. (I slap them professionally in his hands.)

"Good Lord, woman, I'm not plucking a baby bottle out of the water. I need tongs for steaks."

Next, "The pepper mill. Wipe."

I press a dishtowel to his forehead.

"Not the prespiration, you turkey — the sauce from my cute apron."

After hours of intense concentration, the Domestic Jock speaks. "Are the plates and forks for the salad chilled? Good. The potatoes done? The vegetables cooked just to the peak of flavor? Good. You sprayed for bugs? Fine. Because we are ready to eat . . . . . NOW!"

No warning. No time to socialize. No second drink. . Just like that. When he says the steaks are done, we are expected to have our forks poised for the first bite.

The other night he wandered into the kitchen, peeled off his asbestos mittens and threw them into the clothes hamper. "Well, I pulled another one through," he said. I looked at the kitchen sink, piled high with dirty pots, pans and dishes, the countertop with melted butter, dirty utensils, leftover rolls and wilted salad. The grill was corroded with barbecue sauce.

"Next weekend I think I'll do my kabob number on the grill."

I gave him a fetal ovation.

May Need Help But Don't Accept It

By WILLIAM SILBERG

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — Consider the plight of a 68-yearold retiree, out of touch with old friends, with children in different parts of the country, and an income that barely pays for essentials.

Or the 73-year-old widow in failing health who has been forced to sell the home where she spent most of her married life and move into the solitary confinement of an apartment or nursing home.

University of Michigan researchers say both may be prime candidates for suicide or that prolonged method of selfdestruction, alcoholism.

Researchers at the university's Institute of Gerontology contend that persons over 65 fall into the "high risk" category of mental health problems, accounting for 25 percent of the nation's reported suicides though they make up just 10 percent of the population.

"I think it's a response to loss," said gerontology instructor Georgia Hall. "It's also a response to the way society has treated the aged. It's a tragedy very often."

Among other things, the elderly lose their jobs and income, their health and friends, spouses and children.

It's difficult to gauge the extent of alcohol abuse, but various estimates place the number of elderly alcoholics at between 200,000 and a million.

"I think it's not an alcohol problem. It's a problem of some of the tragic consequences of being old," said institute researcher Edith Gomberg.

"In a way, there's a message that's being sent by an older person (who drinks). And the message is, 'It's really rough and I have no place to turn, so I'm going to turn to the bottle.'"

Ms. Gomberg said many with alcohol problems are "reactive drinkers" — people with no history of alcohol abuse who turn to the bottle as a solution to the problems that accompany old age.

Depression may combine with boozing and suicide in both men and women, she said. "But we find it more among elderly males."

Despite statistics pointing to their need for help, the elderly generally do not take advantage of treatment programs, accounting for fewer than 5 percent of the clients enrolled at community mental health centers, the researchers said.

Couple Speaks Vows Saturday Afternoon

BELVOIR — Miss Margaret Ann Clark and Jeffery Wade Wainwright were united in marriage Saturday at 3 p.m. in the Belvoir Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. Frank Brinson officiated the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Gail B. Clark of Greenville and Eason G. Clark of Tarboro. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Wainwright of Greenville.

The church was centered with an arched candelabra entwined with ivy, flowers and a wedding basket of white gladioli, pom pons, carnations, yellow daisies and marigolds. Seven branch candelabra, ferns and greenery were also used. Windows in the church featured single lighted candles with greenery and daisies. Honorary pews were marked with white satin bows and ivy.

Mrs. Edith Barnhill, pianist, provided a program of nuptial music. Mrs. Elizabeth Adams, soloist, sang "If" and "The Wedding Prayer."

After speaking their vows, the couple removed two outside lighted tapers from a three branch crystal candelabra and lighted the middle taper to symbolize the union of their marriage.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, wore a formal length gown of peau de soie. The empire bodice and full length bishop sleeves were overlaid with re-embroidered lace. Matching lace extended over the skirt featuring a hemline which flowed into a chapel length train. The bride wore a cathedral length veil with a border of lace matching her train, held in place by her satin Juliet cap. She carried a bouquet of white carnations, pom pons, and purple statice with matching ribbons and streamers.

MRS. JEFFERY WADE WAINWRIGHT

Mrs. Vicky Coggins, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. She chose a formal length gown of lavender and blue floral print of polyester crepe featuring a high neckline and modified waistline. Her headpiece was of lavender ribbon and streamers and she carried a nosegay of white carnations, yellow daisies and marigolds with matching ribbons.

Miss Regina Clark, niece of the bride, and Timmy Stancill, both of Greenville, served as miniature bride and bridegroom. Miss Clark wore a gown of white polyester featuring a full skirt and empire waist. The long sleeves and ruffled cuffs matched her neckline and collar. She wore a three tier illusion veil attached to a white satin bow in the crown and carried a nosegay similar to the bride's arrangement.

The father of the bridegroom served as his son's best man.

The mother of the bride selected a gown of lavender jersey knit with a mock-cape yoke. The mother of the bridegroom chose a yellow polyester gown with a sheer overlay. Both mothers wore white corsages of carnations and were presented long-stemmed red roses by the bridal couple at the procession.

Mrs. Brenda Carraway of Greenville presided at the register and Mrs. Nell Clark, sister-in-law of the bride, directed the wedding.

After a wedding trip to the North Carolina mountains, the couple will reside at Rt. 4, Greenville.

The after-rehearsal party was held Friday night in the church fellowship hall. Wedding bells, greenery and candles decorated the building. The main table was covered with a white cloth with a yellow lace overlay, centered with an arrangement of white and yellow carnations with touches of lavender. Crystal candleholders with tapers complemented the table. Guests were served cake by the mother of the bride and punch by the bridegroom's mother.

SAUSAGE AND CORN PANCAKES

We think Mark Twain would have approved of these all-American flapjacks!

- 1 cup all-purpose flour, fork-stir well before measuring
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- 2 large eggs, separated
- ½ cup milk
- ½ pound bulk pork sausage, cooked (see Note below)
- 1 cup corn kernels and pulp, cut and scraped from fresh cobs

Stir together the flour, baking powder and salt. Beat egg yolks and milk to blend; stir in sausage and corn. Add the flour mixture; stir just until dry ingredients are moistened. Beat egg whites until stiff; fold in. On to hot greased griddle, drop ¼ cupfuls of the batter, well apart; when bubbles form on top, flip over to brown other sides. (We used an electric griddle set at 375 degrees; each batch of pancakes took about 5 minutes to cook through and brown.) Makes about 1 dozen.

Serve with maple syrup.

Note: In a large heavy skillet, over moderate heat, crumble the sausage with a fork until it loses its light color and then cook gently for about 10 minutes. If there is an excess amount of fat in the skillet, you may not want to add it to the batter.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Take care of outside affairs early and then meet with a good adviser and follow suggestions. Accept some invitation later that will be good for you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Contact the wisest individuals of your acquaintance and get advice you need from them. Follow intuition, also. Good day to plan that trip you have in mind for a little later on.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Listen to suggestions of an associate and plan to cooperate for best results. Your judgment is not too good now, so rely on those you trust.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) If you do what you have agreed with partners, you gain their respect now. Get into community work that will bring added prestige, be of help to you and others. Don't give way to anger.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Get into the amusements that will give you a spiritual lift and make you feel happier during day. Later get together with older allies and work on creative ideas.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will understand the practical side of life and will want to feel secure, have a home, a job, or a business, and should have an education that is practical for best results. Teach early not to feel sorry for self, but to meet each problem that comes along bravely.

Dwindling Great Cranes Have Friend

By DION HENDERSON
Associated Press Writer

BARABOO, Wis. (AP) — It is not just that George Archibald talks to the birds. Not even that he talks to the oldest, rarest, most beautiful birds in the world. The thing is, when George Archibald talks to them, they answer. And sometimes, when he asks them to dance with him, they do.

And they should. Because the great cranes became the most important birds in the life of George Archibald, who has become one of the most important men in the lives of the birds, whose survival is threatened on much of the globe.

Most Americans know about the whooping crane, the continent's tallest bird, whose clarion once deafened the countryside during night-long passage, but whose numbers dipped to 22 wild birds and stirred the national conscience in 1941.

Through the combined efforts of individuals, societies and government agencies, there now are 77 birds in the wild census, and 28 more adults in captivity.

But of the 15 species of cranes in the world, nearly half are in trouble and several are more endangered than the whooper.

Which brings the story back to George Archibald, and a 65-acre converted horse farm astride the traditional sandhill crane migration path.

Here, in the headquarters of the International Crane Foundation, you can, Archibald says, "see more kinds of cranes in 15 minutes than most people could see in a lifetime."

The comment, like most scientific speculations, is conservative. In this country, for instance, many people can — or at least could — see the sandhill crane in one of its halfdozen variations. A few have seen whoopers. And that's it for North America.

The world's second rarest bird is the Siberian crane, which has a voice like bells ringing. There are two remnant groups in Asia, totaling some 360 birds.

The Japanese crane, celebrated in poetry for 1,500 years, is said to be the most respected bird in Japan. Because legend has it living for a thousand years, it is a symbol of long life; because it mates for life, a symbol of love. The species now numbers fewer than 500, many living year-round in nearly inaccessible marshes near Hokkaido. Ardhibald located their nests in 1972, found the area was part of a real estate development and aroused Japanese opinion to such an extent that the government pledged protection.

In 1974, Archibald found the last 1,500 splendid white-naped cranes feeding in a marshland separating the two Koreas. With a Korean associate, Kim Hon Kyu, Archibald proposed a 40-square mile refuge which won President Park's approval.

The International Crane Foundation resulted from a fortunate conjunction in 1971 when Archibald was completing his doctoral studies at Cornell's Laboratory of Ornithology, and Ronald Sauey was arriving to begin his.

Archibald — whose thesis was titled, "The Unison Call as a Useful Taxonomic Tool for Cranes" — had been living in an old animal science department building with 56 cranes of nine species. The place was called, unavoidably, the Cranium. When Sauey arrived, Archibald was sadly returning his friends to the zoos from which he had borrowed them. Archibald regretted the end of a program which had resulted, among other things, in five chicks of the rare white-naped bird.

Sauey suggested that his family's former horse ranch at Baraboo might be made into a permanent station, and ICF was born with the goal of "the conservation of the world's cranes through research, habitat protection, captive breeding, restocking, and public education."

With resident populations established — about 120 birds representing 14 of the 15 species — much of the program now is devoted to raising birds and developing techniques for restoring wild populations.

One of the major projects in process: placing Siberian crane eggs from Baraboo in the nests, in the Soviet Union, of European cranes previously selected and tagged at the other end of their migration in Iran. It is hoped that the chicks will follow their adopted parents back to Iran and reestablish a Siberian crane flock in the land of the Shah.

The ICF is supported entirely by contributions, mostly from a list of interested donors that numbers scarcely 1,000. It's possible to stretch the annual budget of less than $50,000 because the Sauey family receives only $1 a year rental, Archibald and Ron Sauey work without pay, as do the dozen or so selected graduate students who come to learn, and work, during the summers.

While the sight of splendor in flight, the incredible sounds and the spectacular courting procedures might seem reason enough to many for the mounting of defenses against further encroachments, cranes also have an important role in wetland management. When the birds that the ancient Ainu called Lords of the Marsh are flourishing, the great water banks around them are healthy. When they leave, deterioration begins and will, in the long run, lead to the decline of more than cranes.

Archibald, a 31-year-old with the soft trace of the Maritime Provinces in his speech, sums up his own involvement succinctly.

"The most important thing in my life is to help save these wild cranes and to have ICF to come home to. That's it for me."

Big Spillage In N.Y. Harbor

NEW YORK (AP) — Coast guard statistics show that 181,998 gallons of oil were spilled in New York harbor and adjacent waters during the first six months of 1978.

Officials said this was 3.5 times more oil than was spilled in the last half of 1977.

The Coast Guard said it is unlawful to discharge oil or any hazardous pollutant into U.S. waters.

This is not the time to be using more energy

This is Minnie Pearl with some facts you should know.
For lower fuel bills and long, trouble-free service, propane appliances are a better buy than electricity. Here's why:
1 They cost less to operate because they use less total energy than electric models...
130% less for furnaces
70% less for ranges
230% less for clothes dryers.
140% less for water heaters.
2 Since they have no coils or heating elements to burn out, propane appliances cost less to maintain.

Specialists Engaged In Mapping The Human Brain

By BRIAN SULLIVAN
AP Science Writer

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Harry Whitaker is exploring the small, mysterious sphere inside the human cranium, mapping the sites of language in the brain.

In a series of remarkable experiments, the University of Rochester neuropsychologist and neurolinguist has found that a much wider area of the brain than previously suspected is involved in language — more than half of the left hemisphere in 90 percent of all people.

Language function is located in the left hemisphere. The right hemisphere is devoted to visual and spacial functions.

Whitaker has also found that different languages occupy different parts of the left hemisphere in a person who speaks more than one.

Moreover, "our brain is as unique as our face," Whitaker says. Brains differ from person to person, something "we suspected, but this is the first direct physiological evidence."

The evidence derives from stimulation of brain matter during "open brain" operations on epileptics by a University of Washington neurosurgeon, Dr. George A. Ojeman in Seattle, with Whitaker in attendance.

"It gives us an opportunity to explore the brain that you can't do any other way," Whitaker says.

The open brain operation has been standard clinical practice for three or four decades in the treatment of epileptics who don't respond to drug treatment. Only about three to four percent of epileptics require the surgery. (Epilepsy traces to a brain malfunction characterized by "electrical storms," uncontrolled electrical discharge from the affected brain cells.)

The patient can be kept awake and alert during the operation because the brain itself is not sensitive to pain, Whitaker says. While the brain sends pain signals to the rest of the body, it has no pain sensors of its own. So it's possible for the neurosurgeon to open the scalp, using a local anesthetic, and proceed to test for "good brain or bad brain."

The point of the surgery is to find the damaged brain cells that are responsible for the intractable epilepsy and to cut the cells out in hopes of alleviating the condition. To test the cells, the surgeon uses a pair of electrodes, tiny silver balls five millimeters apart.

The electrodes constitute a probe to explore the brain cells. A very weak electrical current, of the same intensity as the normal electrical activity of the brain, is sent through the probe. The current, however, is converted to a different pattern so it deliberately interferes with the brain's normal functioning at that precise location.

To find the "bad brain" sections of the epileptic, the neurosurgeon performs what amounts to a direct EEG, electro-encephalogram. The electrodes are connected to a recording machine with a graph. When they come in contact with damaged brain cells the chart will display characteristic epileptic activity, jagged lines on the paper. The surgeon then has to decide how much tissue can safely be removed.

Under these circumstances, then, Whitaker had the opportunity to map the brain for the precise location of language function in "good brain." The technique is to evoke errors in the epileptic's brain function. Another person in the operating room will show the patient some familiar object, say a picture of a ship, or ask the patient to repeat a sentence. While the patient is doing this, the neurosurgeon moves the electrodes around the surface of the brain cells.

When the brain section involved in this language activity is touched with the electrodes, that brain function is suddenly interrupted — so quickly that the brain lacks time to compensate or reorganize itself — and the patient cannot complete the language task. That pinpoints the locations of language.

"You find out that way what that piece of brain is doing," Whitaker explains. He says the systematic mapping adds only a few minutes to an operation that can last 10 to 12 hours and is only incidental to the primary purpose of the neurosurgeon.

The Rochester scientist emphasizes his finding that a surprisingly large amount of the left hemisphere is devoted to language, especially when you consider the enormous range of motor and physiological functions the brain performs. The mapping of language sites also has implications for the neurosurgeon who is operating on epileptics.

The Sun Provides Hot Water For The Forrests

Mr. and Mrs. J. Tom Forrest of Greenville did not spend a cent on hot water this past summer and they thus saved about a third on their electric bills for that season.

The sun supplies the Forrests' hot water needs. And before winter arrives a portion of their space heating will also be sun-provided, thanks to Forrest's ingenuity. He plans to further use the solar heating system he installed in his home last March to turn an old air conditioner condensing coil into a supplementary solar space heater in his den.

"It's been nice," Forrest, a U.S. Postal Office mail carrier' said of the project which has occupied a good many of his leisure hours for about the past year. "I'm pleased because the system has far exceeded my expectations. I thought the collector would be only a preheater for my electric water heater. Of course, that's what it is, but it's worked so well that it's done the job alone this past summer. I disconnected the electric water heater because it is so poorly insulated, it's depleting heat from the whole system. One of these days, I plan to install a more efficient one. I'll encase it in an outer lining of hot water. But that's another project..."

The Forrests' collector is located on the ground against the south wall of their house. Its surface size is about 125 square feet and it's set at a 35.5 degree angle — Greenville's latitude. "I've heard some other angles recommended," Forrest said, "but it seems to me that the angle of latitude is the best year 'round."

The back plate of the collector is galvanized steel with three-quarter-inch copper tubing soldered four inches apart (coiled, of course) to it. Black paint covers it to absorb the sun's rays, which are trapped beneath three- by four-foot panels of plate glass (surplus from a local glass supply firm).

Water from the street flows into a 40-gallon tank inside the water storage tank and is heated by the heat around it.

Water heated as it flows through the collector is stored in a tank of almost 900-gallon capacity in the basement of the Forrests' home. The tank is made of marine plywood. It has a liner of 36-mil black plastic and is insulated by styrofoam.

The Forrests have 80 gallons of hot water capacity (when the electric heater is connected).

The only part of the system that Forrest did not improvise is a differential thermostat which causes the pump to work sending water through the collector only when the temperature in the collector is nine degrees higher than that of the water in the storage tank. It cuts off when the water in the tank is three degrees cooler.

The pump runs between four and a half and seven hours a day, depending on the degree of sunshine, Forrest said.

"My system is a composite of three or four ideas I got over the years out of 'Popular Science,' Forrest said. "I'm not a scientist. I just like to tinker."

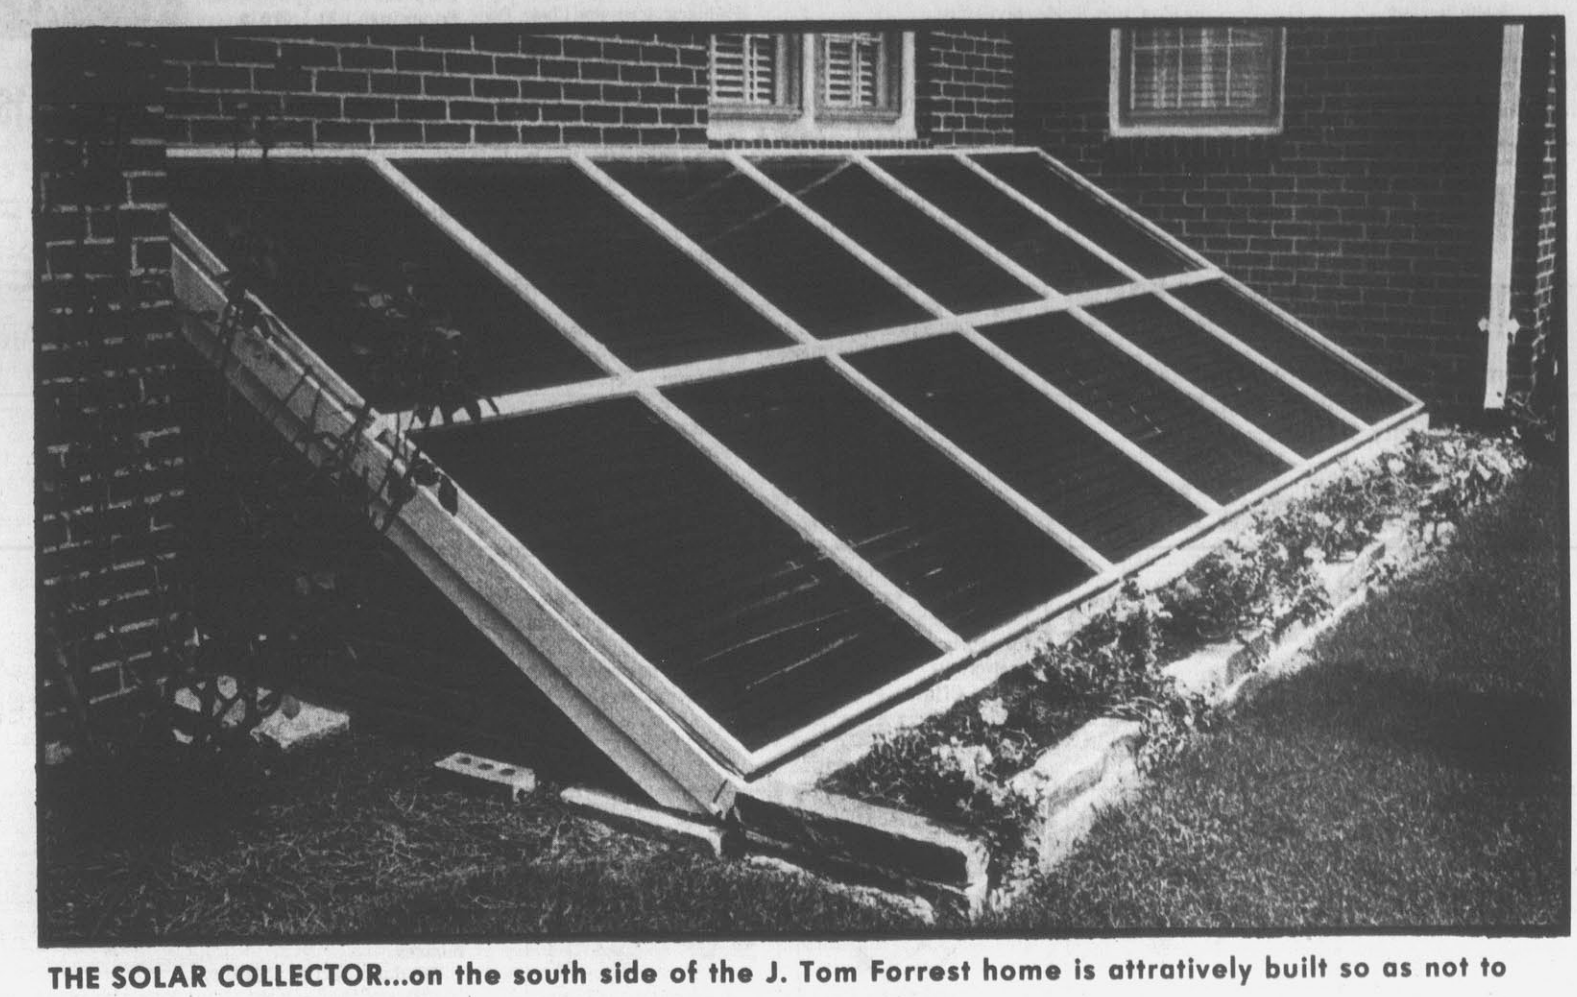

However, Forrest does take a scientific approach. He has a practice of making a model of almost every phase of every project he undertakes. Thus, before his solar collector was ever completed, he knew that a steel plate would work virtually as well as a more expensive copper one. He knows his den space heater will work because the model does.

He keeps records. He charts the temperatures of the water in the collector and in the storage tank every day. He meters the electric flow and knows exactly how many killowatt hours he's used and can compare these with figures previously kept. He knows his costs and will know when his costs, minor in contrast to those of a commercially built solar heating system, will equal what he might have spent on electricity or other fuel.

"The system will soon pay for itself," he said. "And even if it didn't, I'd be glad I did it. I like the self-sufficiency. And I've enjoyed working with it. It's been fun. That's enough said. It's been fun."

Flume Used Sixty Years

By PAT MOSER
The Columbian

UNDERWOOD, Wash. (AP) — It is probably the last of its kind operating in the West — and company officials say it's becoming more valuable every day.

It is the Broughton Lumber Co.'s log flume, built more than 60 years ago.

The flume is a 9-mile wooden chute using water from the Little White Salmon river to shoot rough-sawn lumber from the company's Willard sawmill to its finishing and shipping plant at the railroad stop of Hood, near Underwood.

Moving at slightly more than 9 miles an hour, lumber travels the downhill course in about 55 minutes.

The flume carries 130,000 to 150,000 board-feet of wood daily — enough to build a couple of dozen homes.

The flume is a penny-pincher. The company saves the cost of using huge trucks to haul the lumber on 13 miles of winding road.

"With energy-saving being so important, the flume becomes more valuable every day," says Don vanDeventer, plant superintendent.

Over its course, the chute descends 1,000 feet. In places, it is 70 feet above the ground. Its last 4 miles cling to cliffs along the Columbia River.

Along the way, porcupines cross the chute. Deer and bear roam below it. Rattlesnakes have been found on the 12-inch board path used to patrol the flume.

Darel Baumgarden, 25, is flume foreman. He and Mel Locke, 39, are believed to be the only full-time flume walkers in the country.

They walk along the flume looking for bad beams, leaks and jams.

"It's like a foreign country if you're not used to heights," says Baumgarden, who has been on flume patrol for six years.

Baumgarden and Locke have slipped several times. One time Baumgarden landed on his back in a rock pile. He couldn't return to work for several days.

The most hazardous job is repairing the flume. The men must carry materials and patch up the chute while standing or sitting on narrow scaffolding high above the ground.

Fireman Saved Puppy For Cat

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — No one could ignore the pitiful little whimpers and yelps emanating from deep within the storm sewer.

A tiny puppy had been whacked by a passing car and knocked into the dank underground conduit. Frightened and injured, it crept farther into the waterway to a cross-section of pipe.

Tom Testa of the Akron fire department went down a manhole with a flood light and a broom and coaxed the dog to him.

Charlene Kuts and her three children took the apparent stray home to their cat, Muffin. "That cat just took over like it was the dog's mother," said Mrs. Kuts' husband, James.

Airplanes Share The Highway

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Is that a plane in the passing lane?

With the state's blessing, U.S. 31E in Allen County is being converted from highway to landing strip and back to highway several times a day.

Sharing the highway is necessary so that crop-spraying airplanes can land to be refueled and resupplied with chemicals.

There are no airports in the county.

Charles Henry, an assistant state engineer, said he couldn't recall any other requests to use a highway as a landing strip but he said future requests might be granted if they were reasonable.

GE Celebrates Anniversary With Galaxy Of Stars—ABC

Twenty-four of entertainment's brightest stars will help celebrate the "GE All Star Anniversary," a two-hour extravaganza hosted by John Wayne on Friday, Sept. 29, beginning at 9 p.m. on ABC-TV.

Described as an "entertaining walk through the past century," the show blends music, dance and comedy to capture the essence of America's changing mood and tone in the 100 years that have elapsed since the founding of the Edison Electric Light Company, which became General Electric Company.

The roster of stars include Lucille Ball, Albert Books, Henry Fonda, Alex Haley, Pat Hingle, Bob Hope, Cheryl Ladd, Michael Landon, Penny Marshall, Donny and Marie Osmond, Charley Pride, John Ritter, Sha Na Na, Red Skelton, Suzanne Somers, James Stewart, Elizabeth Taylor, Leslie Uggams, Jimmie Walker, James Whitmore, Cindy Williams and Henry Winkler.

More than one hour of the mammoth birthday party will be devoted to extravagantly mounted song and dance full-stage production numbers.

Somers sings "I'm a Yankee Doodle Dandy" in a showboat setting, and does some high-stepping along with a line of dancers; Ball does the Charleston in a 1920's speakeasy; Ladd's swinging rendition of "Baby Face" in a lush Ziegfeld Girl setting shows that number one of "Charlie's Angels" could make it to heaven on the basis of her song and dance skill, and Uggams performs the startling feat of singing a medley with another beautiful performer who looks just like — and really is — none other than Leslie Uggams.

Relies On Instinct

"I don't like to analyze the way I work, what I do. Or why something works. Once you analyze comedy, it's not very funny. My gut instincts tell me a lot."

Johnny Carson was relaxing in his NBC office prior to taping another show. Each time he walks out in front of the 'Tonight' TV cameras, more than 15 million people watch him.

And this week, Carson will celebrate his 16th anniversary as host of "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson."

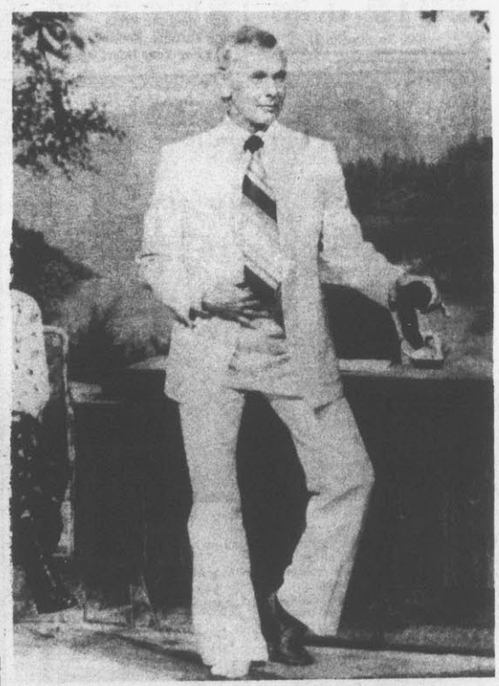

"My instincts tell me what to say, in what areas to go," Carson continued. "Like when Agnew was unknown, it was funny to make jokes about him. Now it isn't. He's in disfavor, like Nixon, so we got off of him. Wilbur Mills was also good for a laugh, but I got off him too, as soon as he admitted having an alcoholic problem. It just wasn't fair.

Sometimes the audiences tell Carson how far to go, or if he's gone too far with a particular subject.

Says Johnny: "We get a cross-section of the country in our studio audience, they come from all 50 states. I get a good reading from them. I do Carter jokes now because the people seem disenchanted. When I tell a joke about someone, and there's a groan, it tells you there's still an allegiance there.

"Our show is still holding up and it's gratifying. I think it's as good — even better — than it ever was. The humor has an edge to it, especially in politics. When I first took over (Oct. 1, 1962), I laid back to see where I was going and where I could go. I think the only others doing topical humor on TV at the time were the Smothers Brothers. Also, I think in 16 years, the level of humor between people on the show has improved."

For Carson, what he does is for laughs so he sums it up:

CARSON CELEBRATES 16TH YEAR — Johnny Carson celebrates his 16th anniversary as host of NBC-TV's "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson," Friday, Sept. 29, and takes time out from his "Tonight" schedule to talk about comedy and his program.

Mary Tyler More Returns To TV

Can there be such a creature as a 'new' Mary Tyler Moore? No, a 'different' Mary Tyler Moore would be more appropriate. After seven years as a devoted housewife on "The Dick Van Dyke" and an additional seven as an independent single woman on her own show, she's now spreading her wings in a different direction. Her new series, titled, simply, "Mary," premiering Sunday, Sept. 24 (8 to 9 p.m., on CBS-TV), spotlights the accomplished comedienne in a setting not seen before (with the possible exception of her specials).

Ms. Moore cheerfully describes the series as "the hardest work I've ever done. Part of the reason we ended 'The Mary Tyler Moore Show' was that we missed struggling and striving and having to prove ourselves. It's all part of growing and going on to something new. I've been dancing on and off (mostly on) since I was nine years old, and I started out as a dancer, so I feel very comfortable adding that element to a show.

"Actually, the fact is I've always wanted to be involved in something that contained music, and never really had the chance before. Ours is a grown-up variety show. It's also smaller and more intimate — it's not fire and flash and flowing chiffon. It's one-to-one — no guest stars. There's a repertory company of seven of us, and we will carry the show together as best we can."

Making Up Hard To Do

Bob Schiffer will rearrange your face.

He'll make you old before your time, young for your years, or even turn you into a dog.

Just ask Dean Jones. Thanks to Schiffer's expert make-up, the actor became an oversized sheep dog in Walt Disney's Productions' "The Shaggy D.A." The 1976 canine caper now makes its television premiere on "The Wonderful World of Disney," Sunday, Sept. 24, at 7 p.m. on NBC-TV.

Schiffer, Disney's affable make-up director since 1968, is an expert in making every physical transformation possible. He enabled Burt Lancaster to age from 18 to 80 in "Birdman of Alcatraz," made a "pumpkinhead" out of Jonathan Winters for a Disney Halloween TV special and created three faces for Jim Dale in "Hot Lead and Cold Feet."

Of his countless make-up assignments since joining Disney, he feels Jones' metamorphosis into a dog was the most challenging. Fifteen different steps were involved in the transformation with the actor spending an average of two hours for each make-up session.

"The Shaggy D.A." found Jones periodically assuming the body of a neighborhood sheep dog. There were inconsequential problems in the intricate process of molding, sculpting and applying the soft rubber nose, neck and fur, to make Jones resemble his canine counterpart. Schiffer encountered an unexpected difficulty, however, in constructing the dog's tongue.

"The tongue of a sheep dog is very sensitive and expands depending on the weather," Schiffer explained. "Six tongues of varying size had to be constructed. On each day of filming, the sheep dog's tongue had to be measured to make sure Jones would be wearing the right size tongue."

A tongue might be considered a minor detail, but Schiffer's meticulous handling of "minor details" has given him the reputation of being one of Hollywood's top make-up artists.

Considered an expert with ladies during a career spanning over three decades, he created make-up for Ginger Rogers, Joan Crawford, Myrna Loy, Ingrid Bergman and Rita Hayworth. Rosalind Russell called him "the best" and Marlene Dietrich refused to appear in "Judgement at Nuremburg" (1961) unless Schiffer made her up.

"What we make-up people do is seldom noticed by moviegoers," said Schiffer. "I guess that's the highest praise we can receive."

Rooney Joins 'Minutes'

"Three Minutes or So With Andy Rooney" is now a regular biweekly feature of "60 Minutes," alternating with "Point-Counterpoint."

CBS News writer-reporter Andy Rooney presented a series of similar essays on "60 Minutes" last July, while "Point-Counterpoint" contributing columnists Shana Alexander and Jack Kilpatrick were on vacation.

Rooney's first essay this season was about how streets are named in the United States. "Street names don't usually make a lot of sense when you get to thinkin about them," said Rooney. "Broadway probably isn't very broad. If a street is named Wolf Lane, it's usually a hundred years since anyone saw a wolf there." And, Rooney asked, "Is Main Street the most popular street name in America? No, it's Park."

Rooney, whom Time Magazine has called "the most felicitous non-fiction writer in television," is the recipient of an Emmy and three Writers Guild Awards. His many broadcast credits at CBS News include "Mr. Rooney Goes to Work"(1977), an attempt to find out whether or not Americans are working at their jobs; "Mr. Rooney Goes to dinner" (1976), a look at the way Americans eat out; and "Mr. Rooney Goes to Washington" (1975), an exploration of the Federal bureaucracy.

A Look Behind-The-Scene

When ABC-TV's "Battlestar Galactica" blazes across home screens each Sunday, 8 to 9 p.m., millions of viewers watch breathlessly as Lorne Greene, Richard Hatch and Dirk Benedict manipulate the giant man-of-war through vast star fields.

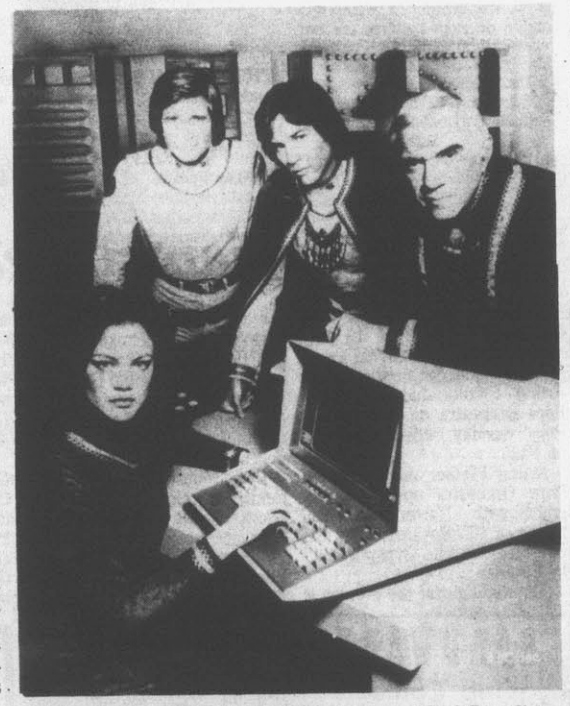

That's on screen. Behind the scenes, the driving force behind television's spectacular new space fleet is Academy Award winner John Dykstra and his company of talented special effects artists.

The launching of TV's most innovative new action-adventure series culiminated nine months of intricate, painstaking work by Dykstra and his dedicated crew.

Working in a two-story warehouse-turned-workshop in Van Nuys, Calif., Dykstra designed more than 45 miniature spaceship models for use in filming over 300 separate special effects. In addition to miniature photography, the process that propels the battlestar through space, Dykstra's ability to transport viewers into the seventh millennium of time also incorporates matte painting, blue screens, front and rear projection, animation and a special process climbing two or more individual pieces of film on a single frame.

Separate from the live-action production of "Battlestar Galactica" at Universal Studios, all of the special effects footage for the series is produced in Dykstra's workshop, utilizing a highly sophisticated motion control camera plugged into an electronic device with a 12-channel memory. Because of the camera's extensive memory capabilities, Dykstra is able to exactly reproduce "flights" of his miniature space ships.

The models must retain stationary in perfectly controlled light to sustain their large-scale illusion. Gliding majestically across a television screen, the Galactica warship appears to be gigantic. In reality, the largest of the specially designed space ships measures six feet in length and weighs about 60 pounds.

Lorne Greene (right), Richard Hatch (center), Dirk Benedict and Maren Jensen star as the voyagers aboard the "Battlestar Galactica," airing Sundays (8-9 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

'Otello' Airs On PBS

The Metropolitan Opera's Peabody Award-winning "Live From the Met" series will premiere its 1978-79 season Monday, Sept. 25, with a production of "Otello," Verdi's masterpiece of wrath and love. The telecast will air at 8 p.m. on PBS.

Singing the principal roles will be world-renowned soprano Renata Scotto as Desdemona, tenor Jon Vickers as Otello, and baritone Cornell MacNeil as Iago. Other distinguished members of the cast are Jean Kraft, Raymond Gibbs, Andrea Velis, James Morris, Robert Goodloe and Arthur Thompson. The opera will be conducted by James Levine, music director of the Metropolitan Opera.

Inspired by Shakespeare's masterpiece, Verdi's opera is set in Cyprus around the 16th century. It is the tragic story of a Moorish general caught between his love for his gentle wife, Desdemona, and the controllable jealous rage which consumes him. His ensign, Iago, plots his own advancement by preying on Otello's suspicion of his wife, the unfaithful Desdemona. Otello, easily conquered by Iago's evil fabrication, strangles Desdemona, then executes himself upon learning of Iago's treachery.

Verdi, after 16 years of retirement, was lured back to music by some of his close friends and associates to compose his work. His love for Shakespeare plus a collaboration with a young composer and poet, Arrigo Boito, led to the production and grand premiere of "Otello" at La Scala, Milan, on Feb. 5, 1887.

Frances Robinson, the Metropolitan's tour director, will be host for the series. The television broadcasts will also feature special intermission material especially prepared for the home viewer. All Italian-language performances will be telecast with English subtitles.

HUDSON HOSTS

Rock Hudson has been signed to host "Super Stunt II," a two-hour special to be aired in November on NBC-TV.

THE HUDSON BROTHERS (l to r) Bill, Brett and Mark go "Bonkers," the new musical-variety series to be aired on Monday at 7:30 p.m. on channel 12.

Young Pianist Featured

South African pianist Steven De Groote, winner of the 1977 Van Cliburn International Quadrennial Piano competition, joins Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra on "Evening at Pops" Sunday, Sept. 24, at 8 p.m. on PBS.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra open the program with Halvorsen's "Entrance of the Boyards," and the Overture to "The Gypsy Baron" by Strauss.

The highlight of the evening is De Groote's masterful performance of Prokofiev's Piano Concerto no. 3 in C major, op. 26. The 24-year-old De Groote has been hailed as a pianist with "great technical skills . . . agility, flexibility, sensitivity, nuance, delicacy and power."

De Groote was born into a family, in which, for three generations, almost every member has been a professional musician. "Father's side of the family was filled with musicians," explains the young virtuoso. "My grandmother was a composer in Brussels and she won the Prix de Rome. My grandfather gave voice lessons to the King of Belgium. Well, you see, there was a lot of music."

De Groote began performing solo and chamber music concerts throughout Europe and South Africa at an early age. Following his studies with the American pianist Lamar Crowson, whom he claims was his "first important teacher," he spent three years at the Brussels Royal Conservatory, and four years at Philadelphia's Curtis Institute of Music with Rudolf Serkin, Seymour Lipkin and Mieczyslaw Horszowski. De Groote became a finalist in the 1976 Leventritt Competition and was the only artist from over 270 applicants to win the 1977 Young Concert Artists International Audition.

In 1977 De Groote won the Grand Prize in the Fifth Van Cliburn Competition, as well as the prizes for the Best Performance of Chamber Music and the Best Performance of the Commissioned Work, "Ballade" by Samuel Barber.

ALAN...WHO??

The "M*A*S*H" series would be starring Alan D'Abruzzo if Alan's actor-father, Alphonso D'Abruzzo, had not changed his name to Robert Alda.

Rise To Stardon Told

LeVar Burton stars in "One in a Million: The Ron LeFlore Story," a new television movie about the incredible rise of Detroit Tigers centerfielder Ron LeFlore from prison to the major leagues, to be broadcast on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies," Sept. 26, 9 to 11 p.m.

Also starring in the film, which is based on the autobiography "Breakout" by LeFlore with Jim Hawkins, are Madge Sinclair, Paul Benjamin, James Luisi, Billy Martin (as himself), Zakes Mokae and Larry B. Scott. Former Tiger stars Al Kaline, Norm Cash, Jim Northrup and Bill Freehan also appear as themselves.

In the story, LeFlore, a 19-year-old hoodlum hanging out on the streets of Detroit, is sent to prison for armed robbery. Far from a model prisoner, he winds up in solitary confinement, again and again. He begins to mature when he learns that his younger brother, Gerald (Scott), is being drawn into the same street life of drugs and crime.

He is befriended by another inmate, Jimmy Karalla (Luisi), who encourages him to take up baseball. He is a natural, and soon becomes the star of the team. Karalla, through his friendship with James Butsicaris, a restaurant owner on the outside who knows Detroit Tigers manager Billy Martin, arranges for a tryout for LeFlore, who impresses Martin with his tremendous raw talent.

The Tigers sponsor his eventual parole and assign him to the minor leagues. Within two years, LeFlore has become the starting centerfielder for the Tigers, had a 30-game hitting streak and has won a starting position on the American League 1976 All-Star team — a one-in-a-million experience.

When Burton, who portrayed the young African — Kunta Kinte — bound into slavery in "Roots," went on location to a prison to film this movie, he found himself treated as if he really were that young slave in chains.

Of course, all the inmates had seen 'Roots'," he said. "It was incredible. What I got from them was an overwhelming feeling that they wanted the best for me in my career and in my life.

Satirist Returns

PBS welcomes Mark Russell — the master of political satire — for another hilarious series of half-hour telecasts when the first of four "Mark Russell Comedy Specials" for the 1978-79 season airs Tuesday, Sept. 26, at 9 p.m.

There are three factors that add to the unpredictable excitement of the series. First, the specials are presented 'live' — no pre-recorded material is used. Whatever happens, happens. Secondly, all of his material is topical — taken directly from the events of the day. Thirdly, Russell uses no cue cards. When he is on camera, Russell is on his own.

Once again, the specials will be telecast from the Katharine Cornell Theater on the campus of the State University of New York at Buffalo where he performs before an audience of 400 persons.

Russell is also a Buffalo native who recently commented on the city's origin. "Buffalo was built many years ago when they cloned Cleveland."

When it comes to political humor, one fact is certain. Russell is democratic about it — targeting his political satire at everyone and everything. There's no discrimination here. As far as his own political preference is concerned, Russell freely admits, "I'm a confused Independent . . . but I can be bought."

Russell views the present administration this way: "I think President Jimmy Carter is doing a good job fighting inflation . . . until I want to buy something.

"It's convenient that our President speaks fluent Spanish in Africa . . . because that's where all the Cubans are."

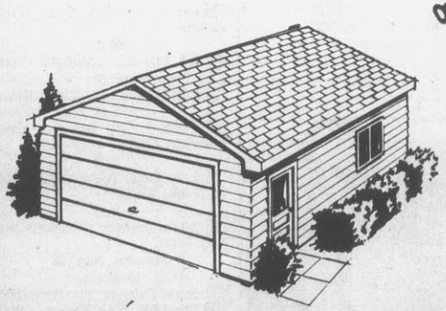

On the neutron bomb issue: "Are we going to have a neutron bomb or aren't we? In the words of Jimmy Carter, let me be perfectly cloudy. One thing about him, once he puts his foot down, he lifts the other one up."

Russell's hardly a stranger to the TV medium; he's been the host of a talk show, done news commentary and Dean Martin "roasts," and has been a guest on the Mike Douglas show.

Russell has been taking potshots at Democrats and Republicans alike since the early days of the New Frontier when he was a typical Washington D.C. nightclub comic, with risque routines and songs and funny props.

Drama Of Angry Conflict

The make-believe slaps and insults of a Punch-and-Jody show seem painfully real to a girl whose mother is guilty of child abuse without even knowing it in "One of a Kind." The sensitive story of family misunderstanding airs on the "ABC Afterschool Specials" series, Wednesday, Sept. 27, 4:30 to 5:30 p.m.

Diane Baker produced and stars in this story of an overworked mother whose anger at the frustration of her own life leads her to ignore her daughter's need for affection and simple respect.

Carrie Williams (Ms. Baker) is a young mother supporting her rebellious daughter, Lizzie (Stephanie Brown), and mother and daughter seem to fight constantly. Lizzie resents being left alone all day to run their beachfront concession stand while her mother is out working. Carrie resents Lizzie's need for her attention and the girl's desire to play on the beach with the other young people.

Resentment leads to anger, and anger leads to shouted arguments and blows as Lizzie feels unloved and unwanted and Carrie wonders why she is burdened with an ungrateful child.

A wandering puppeteer's Punch-and-Jody show — with the puppet-child scornfully treated as the "property" of the puppet-parent, to be knocked about at will — finally shocks Lizzie into a new awareness of her own worth, a realization that each individual is unique and special; not "property."

Child abuse comes in many forms, and "One of a Kind" deals with the all-too-common mother who would be shocked to hear the term applied to her own conduct. Her neglect of her child is not deliberate or consciously cruel, and while she is thoughtlessly wounding her daughter with her quick temper she is also depriving herself of the joy of sharing the special, fleeting years of the child's youth. This dramatic story can open important discussions between parents and children, and it is a fitting premiere for the new season of 'Afterschool Specials.'

'Special Treat' Airs

"Special Treat," NBC-TV's series of monthly young people's specials, will return for the 1978-79 season with four new productions and four outstanding encore presentations.

A new feature advocating "When You Turn Off Your Set, Turn on a Book" will be added this season to the presentations taken from books.

"The first 'Treat' of the season is "The Tap Dance Kid," to be telecast Tuesday, Oct. 24. The drama, based on Louise Fitzhugh's book, "Nobody's Family is Going to Change," stars Danielle Spencer (of TV's "What's Happening") and James Pelham, making his network television debut. It also features a special appearance by Emmy Award-winning actress Claudia McNeil.

Three additional new "Special Treat" productions, to be telecast in November, February and March, will be announced later.

The four shows to have encore presentations are:

"A Piece of Cake," starring Ossie Davis, Star Shimah and Al Freeman Jr., is the story about a student reporter who broadcasts an inaccurate story on the school's closed circuit TV station and spurs a student strike.

"Snowbound," which is based on the book by Harry Mazer and was recommended by the National Education Association. This is a compelling drama centered around a teen-age boy and girl with divergent personalities. The two learn to respect each other when they are thrown together in a serious fight for their lives during the worst blizzard of the winter.

"Five Finger Discount," starring Harriet Nelson, Dawn Lyn and Nancy Malone, who also produced the show. 'Discount' tells about a 13-year-old girl, new in town, who starts shoplifting in order to impress other youngsters and becomes one of their group.

"How the Beatles Changed the World," featuring popular singers Melissa Manchester, Frankie Valli, Richie Havens, Melanie and Davie Clayton-Thomas with Blood, Sweat & Tears performing their favorite Beatles songs. David Frost is the off-camera narrator for the program, also recommended by the National Education Association.

BATTERED WIFE — Karen Grassle, co-star of NBC-TV's "Little House on the Prairie," stars as a battered wife in "Battered," an NBC World Premiere movie to be presented Tuesday, Sept. 26 (9-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Suzanne Somers Stars

Suzanne Somers of "Three's Company" stars as a once-popular singer who goes to the beach to unwind and forget about her faltering career only to become involved in the problems of a group of young people, in "Zuma Beach," to be presented on "NBC Wednesday Night at the Movies," Sept. 27, 9 to 11 p.m.

At the beach, Bonnie (Somers) becomes the object of admiration by a group of teen-age boys who make a point to get acquainted with her even though she's an "older woman."

For her part, Bonnie is amused by it all and finds herself forgetting her problems as she becomes involved with those of the teen-age boys and girls she becomes friendly with during the Labor Day outing.

"Zuma Beach" was filmed at Malibu Beach, Calif., and on location in Hollywood.

NBC Wednesday Night Movie — "Zuma Beach" Sept. 27, 9-11 p.m. Suzanne Somers plays an older woman who dazzles and befriends a group of teen-agers during a Labor Day weekend at the Beach.

No TV for Vigoda

Abe Vigoda, unable to reach a salary agreement with the producers of ABC-TV's "Barney Miller," will not return to the series as had been anticipated.

Vigoda left the police comedy series two years ago when aging, ailing and cynical Detective Fish was retired and spun off into a series called "Fish," canceled after two years.

Vigoda is now appearing on stage in Chicago, Ill.

Von Karajan Is Featured

"I once figured out that if wanted to reach the audience that sees and hears concerts on television, I would need three lives and would have to conduct the same program every day — even if every concert were sold-out," said Herbert von Karajan. "An explosion has taken place in the need to hear music."

Maestro von Karajan will conduct and direct the Berlin Philharmonic in Richard Strass' "Don Quixote" and Weber's "Der Freischutz" on "Great Performances," Wednesday, Sept. 27, at 10 p.m. on PBS.

"Ten years ago when we talked about television, people said to me, 'Do you want to drive the public out of concert halls?' Who is it then that you are driving out?," asked the famed conductor. Three thousand people as against 60 million who have seen these telecasts? Today, we have reached a state of affairs where the figures are no longer comparable.

Maestro von Karajan, the Music Director for Life of the Berlin Philharmonic, is a conductor who stages and directs his own concerts and operas. Last season on "Great Performances," von Karajan conducted and directed Verdi's "Requiem" with Leontyne Price. Sometimes, a conductor will abandon a television production after it has been filmed, but with von Karajan, he is with it "from the first to the last moment."

"I am there when the editing is actually done. I have a team who do the cutting, but under no circumstances do I let anyone else decide where the cut is to be made. That is really how you can exert the most substantial influence on a project. Only the person who conducts can see the dramatic excitement in such a way that he can truly understand it in the performance."

The 70-year-old von Karajan agreed that a very high percentage of his energies are today devoted to the television and records. "For us, making a record is really the preparation for a stage version; and a stage version is really the gathering of experience for putting it down on film . . . it is really a unit. The re-recording, the concert and the film are spread over a much longer period of time than before . . . and for this reason I have made fundamental changes in my life. I always have a period of from 8-10 days of pure work (whether it's rehearsing, recording and so on) and after that I always take another ten days to two weeks for my preparation.

"The older I get, the more responsibilities I seem to assume — so much more of my time is required to make a television film. Before I merely followed the notes for my conducting. Now . . . "

MARY'S HAPPY OVER THE SLOT

Mary Tyler Moore is extremely pleased that her new, one-hour show has been given the time slot immediately following "60 Minutes." "We appeal to the same kind of audience," she says. "They're wide-awake and intelligent."

Mary describes her new series as "not a variety show — we have no guest stars. It's more of a revue — or, as someone said, 'a situation variety' show. I think it will be fresh. If the audience likes it, that's great — if not we can still hold our head high."

Finally! No Disguises

Ted Wass couldn't be happier. After spending a great deal of the initial season of "Soap" (Thursdays, 9:30 to 10 p.m., on ABC-TV) in disguises as his character Danny hid from the mob, this year he's discarding the cover-ups and is growing up!

"I think the character is maturing," the handsome actor says. "Danny was desperately trying to be Italian, trying on different identities to find what was what, and now it's time to grow up and be a little realistic.

"That's not to say he's going to be a mature and responsible adult overnight," Ted says with a grin. "He's still got a lot of maturing to do, but he's marrying the gangster's daughter even though she's a horrible person. That's the only way he could quit the mob. But now it looks as if Danny and Bert are going to become partners in a construction company."

Ted doesn't want Danny to mature so rapidly that he loses his vulnerability and naive personality. "However," he continued, "by disrobing and not living in disguises, I think Danny can find a place in the family and have a more defined place in the show."

Ted's role as Danny — disguises or not — really doesn't reveal the other multi-facets of the actor.

"Acting comes first, but I spent eight years playing and singing in rock 'n' roll bands. After that, I spent about five years training to sing the classics," Ted reveals. "There's something that excites me more than anything to be on stage performing as an actor and a singer. It's like the best of both possible worlds."

Clark's Live Wednesday

Recording sensation Barry Manilow, TV star Suzanne Somers (of "Three's Company"), Melissa Gilbert (narrator and co-star of "Little House on the Prairie"), triple Grammy winner Natalie Cole and venerable comedian Edgar Bergen, with Charlie McCarthy, will be the guest star on the second telecast of "Dick Clark's Live Wednesday," Sept. 27, 8 to 9 p.m. on NBC-TV.

Manilow's last three albums have all achieved platinum status (sales of over 1,000,000 each). He has a string of hit singles over the past three years, including "Mandy," "Can't Smile Without You," "Looks Like We Made It," "Copablanca (at the Copa)" and his latest, "Ready to Take a Chance Again" from the film "Foul Play."

Pike's Peek

By Charlie Pike
TV Showtime Staff Writer

HOLLYWOOD — Shortly after the TV movie about the singing duet JAN and DEAN arrived there were a number of inquiries as to the twosome's status. Of particular interest was JAN BERRY, who was seriously injured in a 1966 auto crash, which left him in a coma for a year. Well, today Jan still suffers from impaired sense of touch and partial parlysis, but he and JAN TORRENCE are making a career comeback and just recently appeared at a nightclub called Starwood in Los Angeles and received such a response they made two encores. It's also good to note that JAN'S singing voice is just as strong as ever.

DACK RAMBO, star of NBC's new "SWORD OF JUSTICE" series, and one of Hollywood's most eligible bachelors, has affectionately been claimed by MELINDA NAUD, co-star of ABC's "OPERATION PETTICOAT." They're inseparable.

After seven years in the role of Greg Peters on daytime's "DAYS OF OUR LIVES," PETER BROWN is leaving the show, and with him will go MARY FRANN, who portrays Amanda Howard. NBC tells us that both characters are not being written out of the show, but it's understood that since Peter's role, at least, is going to be leaving town he'll not be in it if it should be rewritten into a future storyline.

Very few of the "EIGHT IS ENOUGH" cast liked the insert of a laugh track in the premiere episode of the series, and the rumor is that they're letting ABC know of their displeasure.

Isn't it true that JA'NET DuBOIS of "GOOD TIMES" is more than a bit miffed by all the attention ESTHER ROLLE has received because of her return to the series? That's the scuttlebutt, and apparently there is some truth to it, particularly since JA'NET is all but being ignored by the media so far this season.

The OSMOND FAMILY may not be aware of it, but a West Coast book publisher is putting together an unauthorized biography of MARIE OSMOND.

This is the month that JAIME LYN BAUER has said she'll split from "THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS," but if that's what she intends to do, very little if anything has been said about it so far.

CASKEY SWAIM has heard from a great number of his friends as a result of the recent story on these pages, and to say he's thrilled in hearing from everyone "back home" is an understatement. He's ecstatic!

First Flight Re-Lived

The triumph of man's first powered flight will be re-lived when "The Winds of Kitty Hawk," a dramatization of the Wright Brothers' dogged determination to conquer gravity, will air on NBC December 17 — the 75th anniversary of their historic first success at Kitty Hawk.

Full-scale flying replicas of the original flyers and gliders, created in a bicycle repair shop by the two men whose 1903 breakthrough heralded the age of air power, were filmed in flight for the two-hour original teleplay.

The windswept beaches of Kitty Hawk, N.C., where Wilbur and Orville relentlessly battled time and time again to enter the dominion of the sky, were replicated for the special on location at San Luis Obispo, Calif. There Michael Moriarty (Wilbur) and David Huffman (Orville) faced the same elements — howling winds and the sting of blowing sand — braved by the Wrights 75 years ago.

The presentation takes the aviation pioneers and their family from their initial unsuccessful experiments through their first triumphant 12 seconds in the air and their subsequent 10-mile, 33 minute-33 second flight over the Hudson River and the Statue of Liberty.

Michael Moriarty, the prototypical Nazi in "Holocaust," and the relentless enforcer in "The Deadliest Season," holds an Emmy Award for his performance as the gentlemen caller opposite Katharine Hepburn in Tennessee Williams' "The Glass Menagerie" and the Drama Desk, Theatre World and Tony awards for his role in "Find Your Way Home" on Broadway, where he also appeared in Eugene O'Neill's "Long Day's Journey Into Night."

David Huffman, the idealistic union leader of "F.I.S.T.," recently starred in "The Matter of Karen Ann Quinlan," and has been seen in many other television dramas including "Captains and Kings" and "Eleanor and Franklin."

The cast also includes Eugene Roche as Bishop Wright, father of Orville and Wilbur; Kathryn Walker plays their sister Katharine; Scott Hylands is Glenn Curtiss; John Hoyt, Prof. Langley; and John Randolph, Alexander Graham Bell.

Intensive research for "The Winds of Kitty Hawk" was conducted with the assistance of historians at the Smithsonian Institution and the Library of Congress; in Kitty Hawk and in Dayton, Ohio home of the Wright Brothers.

PROGRAM TOOK 3 YEARS TO COMPLETE

"Alaska: The American Child," the ABC Sports presentation hosted by John Denver, was three yers in the making. It involved three separate trips to Alaska by the entertainer-environmentalist for filming and to write his original music.

Family Comedy Premieres

"Who's Watching the Kids," premiering Friday, Sept. 29 (8:30 to 9 p.m., on NBC-TV), is a family comedy about two youngsters who are being brought up by three single adults amid the 'round-the-clock fun of Las Vegas.

The youngsters are a street-wise, macho 15-year-old, Frankie "the Fox" Vitola (Scott Baio), and book-wise and precocious 9-year-old Melissa Turner (Tammy Lauren).

Two of the three adults are the young folks' older sisters — blonde Stacy turner (Caren Kaye) is Melissa's older sister and burnette Angie Vitola (Lynda Goodfriend) is Frankie's elder sibling. Both are showgirls at a local third-rate nightspot, the Club Sand Pile. The girls and their charges all share the same apartment.

Across the hall lives a young man named Christopher Day (Larry Breeding). Day has left his wealthy parents behind in their Long Island home and hopes to make it on his own as a hard-hitting investigative reporter for a TV network. To date he has only made it as far as reporting the weather and garden news on a local station.

Rounding out the regulars are Marcia Lewis and Mitzi Logan, the manager of the apartment house and emcee at the Club Sand Pile; and Lorrie Mahaffey as Memphis O'Hara, a singer at the club and also a neighbor in the apartment building.

Although Scott Baio is just 16, he has acquired an impressive list of theatrical credits, and this success can be traced back to one simple fact . . . he watched a lot of television as a youngster.

Scott's mother says that from the time Scott was a toddler, he was "fascinated" by TV . . . doubly so by the commercials.

THEY CALL VEGAS HOME — Larry Breeding (rear, center) plays the next-door neighbor of Lynda Goodfriend (rear,left) and Scott Baio (foreground), who plays her brother, and Caren Kaye (rear) and Tammy Lauren, who portray sisters, in "Who's Watching the Kids," the new family comedy on NBC-TV (Fridays, 8:30-9 p.m.).

Estrada's a physical fitness buff and health food advocate. Send your letters to "CHiPs," NBC-TV, 3000 W. Alameda Ave., Burbank, Calif. 91505.

Q: Did Soupy Sales' mother give him that name? How old is he? K. Wallace, Prince George, Va.

A: The comedian's mother named him Milton Hines, but he changed it when he embarked on a comedy career. Soupy's now 52, made his film debut in "Birds Do It" (1966), and has hosted several children's shows on TV.

Jules Verne And His Balloons

Jules Verne had a deep fascination with balloon travel, so it is fitting that a novel about the subject, "Five Weeks in a Baloon," turned out to be the work that established his fame.

The story began as a non-fiction article speculating on the possibilities of exploring remote regions by balloon. Verne thought the subject fascinating, but no publisher in Paris agreed with him. In fact, the article was rejected so many times that, in despair, Verne tossed out the manuscript. Luckily, his wife, Honorine, rescued it and urged one more try. This time, Verne approached Jules Hetzel, a publisher about to launch a new magazine. He didn't particularly like the article either, but saw in it the possibility of a stirring adventure novel.

An animated special based on the result of this brainstorm, "Five Weeks in a Balloon," will be rebroadcast on "Famous Classic Tales," Saturday, Sept. 30, 1 to 2 p.m. on CBS-TV.

Verne was always interested in technologies that opened up new possibilities. In fact, he belonged to a group of journalists and writers who shared his fascination, and it was thus that his specific interest in balloons was developed. A fellow member and friend, photographer Felix Tournachon, who worked under the pseudonym Nadar, was raising funds for a balloon of his own to be called Geant. Verne wrote an article about this project that was published in Musee des Familles.

In writing the fictional "Five Weeks in a Balloon," Verne had to come up with a solution that had plagued real-life balloon travel. In order to ascend, the balloonist had to throw out ballast. To descend, he had to release some gas. Eventually he ran out of both, sharply limiting the distance he could travel.

Whether or not his fictional balloon journey was feasible, the story went on to great success. Nadar had less happy results. His balloon made three spectacular but short, journeys before crashing. Luckily, both he and his wife survived the crash.

Verne himself took a balloon trip when he was 62 and a partial invalid. He wrote about the experience in an article bearing a title far less dramatic than that of his masterpiece. It was called "Twenty-four Minutes in a Balloon."

Dr. Samuel Fergusson, a British explorer, explains the operations of the balloon that will carry him, his nephew, Buck; a tribesman, Irumu; and Coco, the monkey, across Africa in search of a fabulous diamond, in "Five Weeks in a Balloon," based on Jules Verne novel, to be rebroadcast on "Famous Classic Tales," Saturday, Sept. 30 (1-2 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Legal Segment Scheduled

"Who's right?" a guide to actions young people can legally take in various types of everyday situations, will be a regularly scheduled feature on the new CBS News magazine series "30 Minutes," broadcast Saturdays, 1:30 to 2 p.m. Attorney Patricia McGuire, of the Washington, D.C., Street Law Program, will join "30 Minutes" co-editors Betsy Aaron and Christopher Glenn as the legal expert on the 2-and-one-half minute segment.

"Young people today are quite aware that they don't automatically have to submit to the demands of someone in an authoritative position merely because that person is an authority figure," says Joel Heller, executive producer of the series.

"But they don't always know exactly what rights they actually have in certain everyday situations, the limitations of their rights, and the responsibilities they must bear in turn. On "Who's Right?" we'll try to make the kids — and adults — aware of both their resourses and their responsibilities as we describe types of conflicts and explore the stands that could legally be taken.

Heels Are Getting Better

The defending North Carolina Tar Heels continue to be the team to beat in the Atlantic Coast Conference. Carolina is sporting a new coach and a new look this fall, but from all indications should be in the thick of the ACC title race.

North Carolina will meet the Panthers of Pittsburgh Saturday, Sept. 30, at 1:30 p.m. — one of the regional NCAA telecasts by ABC. Pittsburgh is coming off a solid 9-1-2 season that included a 34-3 romp over Clemson in the Gator Bowl.

Dick Crum, Carolina's new head coach, comes to them from Miami to Ohio — the "Cradle of Coaches" — which in the past has sent the likes of Woody Hayes, Bo Schembechler, Johnny Post, Ara Parseghian, Paul Brown, Sid Fillman, Carmen Cozza and Bill Mallory on to bigger schools and greater fame.

The Teen Scene

LEIF GARRETT'S negotiations with NBC are progressing slowly, the actor-singer says, but there's little doubt that Leif will have a show of his own before long. However, the one thing he's trying to avoid is the responsibility of "carrying" the show on his own. He'd like to share the show with another teen fave.

Speaking of Leif, his new single, "Made for Dancing," has been released, and his new album on the Scotti Brothers Record label, "Feel the Need," should be in the record stores by early October. Every cut in the album is original except for a re-make of the BEACH BOYS' "Fun, Fun, Fun."

Interesting trivia question: Who gave KRISTY McNICHOL her first screen kiss? Now a lot of reports have it as coming in the recently aired segment of "FAMILY" in which Leif Garrett made his debut as her boyfriend, but that's not true. Krist was first kissed in front of a camera in an episode of the show two seasons ago, by a young actor named WILLIE AAMES!

Everybody-but-everybody is anticipating JACLYN SMITH and DENNIS COLE to tie the marital knot before Christmas, but if they're making plans, they're being as secretive about them as KATE JACKSON and ANDREW STEVENS were when they tied the knot.

In case you haven't heard, LES McKEOWN of the BAY CITY ROLLERS is leaving the group. At least that's the impression he's giving, and he's not with the band in Japan during their current tour.

'Spider-Man' Adds To Punch

Preston "Spider-Man" Pearson gives the Dallas Cowboys' punch a little more gusto when they meet the St. Louis Cardinals Sunday, Sept. 24 at 4 p.m. on CBS-TV.

Through most of the 11 years of his pro career, not many football fans could remember Preston Pearson by his right name.

That's why the Dallas Cowboys running back grins and waves when he hears "Spider-Man" yelled by someone in the stands.

It is perhaps the long legs of Pearson, who is just a tad over 6-foot-1, that permit deceptive speed and brought about the nickname. The 33-year-old native of Freeport, Ill., never claimed blinding speed. But he moves faster than he appears to be moving and, "I think I can keep up with most running backs who are in the 4.6 to 4.7 range."

Preston and the Dallas Cowboys will play the St. Louis Cardinals Sunday, Sept. 24, and CBS will televise the game, beginning at 4 p.m.

Pastorini Is Key

His name, Dante Pastorini, sounds as if it belongs somewhere on the menu in an Italian restaurant. More commonly known as Dan, the youthful, handsome quarterback of the Houston Oilers will lead his ball club against the Los Angeles Rams Sunday, Sept. 24. CBS will televise the game, beginning at 1 p.m.

Pastorini was already dubbed as a quarterback with a tremendous arm before he entered the pro ranks. Houston took him as their number one draft pick in 1971 out of the University of Santa Clara. He was the third player tapped in the draft behind Jim Plunkett of New England and Archie Manning by New Orleans.

Immediately, Dan was challenged by Lynn Dickey for the starting quarterback spot, and the former displayed his cannonball arm in spring training which won him the starting spot. The Santa Claran started ten games in 1971 and lead every victory in a 4-9-1 season. In '72, he guided Houston to their only victory of the year, a shocking 76-70 upset over Joe Namath and the then-super Jets.

Nevertheless, the first few seasons for the young quarterback were far from successful. He ranked near the bottom for three consecutive seasons, completing less than 50 percent of his passes. His touchdown total was also pretty miserable. Much of his failure may have been due to an inability to run behind his very unsure offensive line.

"Sure," he said. "It would be great to be able to stand back there and pick your spots. That's what I'm trained to do. But with our club struggling on the offensive line, I run when I have to, and sometimes even when I don't have to."

Then came 1974, a "rags-to-riches" year for the Oilers. The exuberant, confident team recorded victories in six of their final eight regular season games to reach the .500 plateau for the first time since '68. Pastorini was clearly the main reason the team did so well, as his passing and steady leadership spearheaded the Oilers' success at the end of the campaign.

Pastorini piloted the Oilers to their best season since '62 the following year, when they won 10 and lost 4, barely missing the playoffs.

'Island' Gets New Look

There are dream cars. Fantastic cars. And now there are "Fantasy Island" cars.

Made especially for the costars to use in "Fantasy Island" (telecast Saturdays, 10 p.m. on ABC-TV), the car for Roarke, played by Ricardo Montalban, is a customized Plymouth Volare wagon. The one for Tattoo, played by Herve Villechaize, is a duplicate — in miniature.

The small motorized wagon, manufactured by F.W. and Associates, Tempe, Arizona, will be available through selected Chrylser-Plymouth dealers later this year.

"We believe this is the first time that duo cars have been so customized for a television series," said Mike Fisher, supervising producer of "Fantasy Island."

To create the Fantasy Wagon, which became the model for the smaller version, a Plymouth Volare wagon was adapted to suit the special situations created by the popular fantasy-drama series.

Red above the white sculpture line, and black below, it has no doors or windows, except for the windshield, for easy access and openness. A T-bar adds to the openness while retaining strength in the windshield header and a red and white canopy covers and drops down from the balance of the roof.

"There is no other car like it in the world," said Al Hoag, an advertising executive who designed the special car. "At least it was unique until the miniature car was made for Tattoo."

Carpeted in red on the floor, sidewalls and up over the edges, the Fantasy Wagon has white super soft vinyl bucket seats in the front and bench seats in the rear.

Grab rails on the dash and pillars are for passenger entry and exit convenience.

A Road Runner grille, Super Coupe bumpers, special grille guards and wheel flares complete the major detailing, said Hoag.

The miniature car, about one-third the size of the large Fantasy Wagon, is 84 inches long, weighs about 150 pounds, and, with its three horsepower gasoline-powered engine, has a top speed of about 15 mph.

"While it doesn't have an EPA rating," said Fred Wagenhals, president of F.W. and Associates, "it gets about 65 miles to the quart."

Ray Charles Hosts

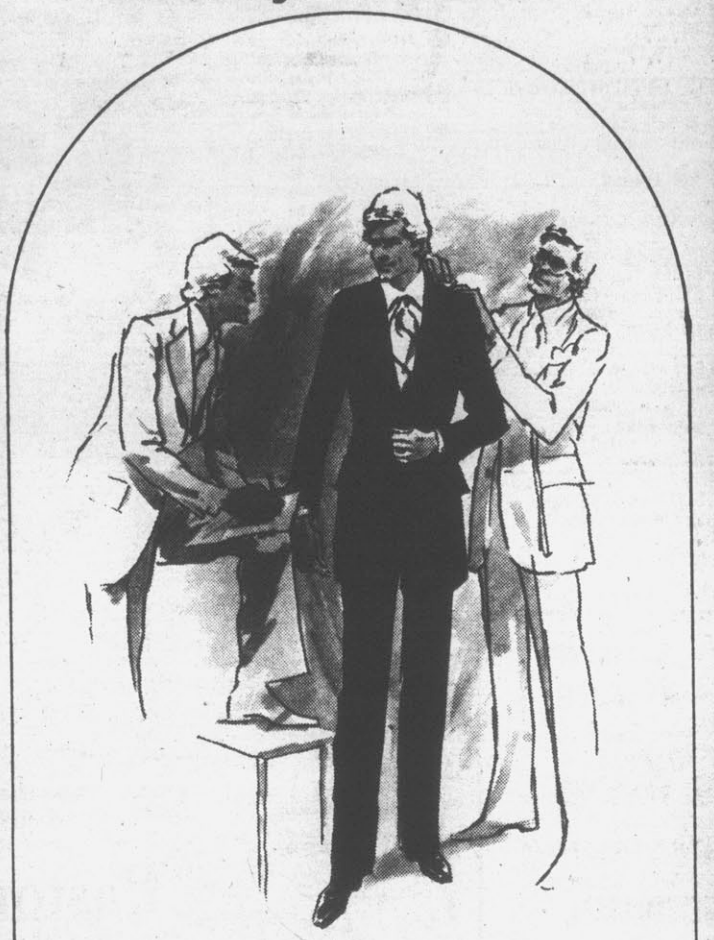

Rhythm-and-blues great Ray Charles displays an unexpected flair for comedy when he hosts the September 30th edition of "NBC's Saturday Night Live," 12 midnight to 1:30 a.m.

Appearing with Charles are the singing Raylettes and several of the original members of his band. Also in the guest line-up is comedian Franklyn Ajaye. The Not Ready for Prime Time Players are Dan Aykroyd, John Belushi, Jane Curtin, Garrett Morris, Bill Murray, Laraine Newman and Gilda Radner.

Musical selections by Charles are "I Can See Clearly Now," "What'd I Say," "Oh What a Beautiful Morning" and a medley of hits.

Among the comedy segments in which Charles is featured: a parody of a commercial for an audio tape cassette, in which Morris portrays Ella Fitzgerald; an interview with 'Tom Snyder,' with Akyroyd reprising his characterization of the NBC-TV personality.

NATALIE AND BOB: A MODERN COUPLE WITH OLD-FASHIONED VALUES

WHY PLAYERS LOVE AND FEAR COACH "BEAR" BRYANT

MYSTERY WRITER P.D. JAMES TURNS HER EXPERIENCES INTO BEST SELLERS

We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

Wide World

Citizen involvement is a must.

FOR WILLIAM H. WEBSTER, director, F.B.I.

What is the greatest deterrent to crime, and how effective are the Post Office "Wanted" posters in apprehending lawbreakers? — Thomas L. Adams, Kingsport, Tenn.

● The greatest deterrent is responsible citizen involvement within the framework of our criminal-justice system by honoring the law yourself and contributing to its honest, impartial enforcement. This means prompt reporting of crimes to which you are a witness or a victim. It means willingness to appear in court to offer testimony or to serve on a jury. As to the distribution of wanted flyers, it has been one of many investigative techniques utilized by the FBI and other law-enforcement agencies and has led to the location and arrest of many criminal fugitives.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Please bring me up-to-date on the latest with Bing's widow, Kathryn Crosby — G.B. Anniston, Ala.

● Kathy has resumed her acting career and is now touring the country with the national company of Broadway's Same Time Next Year. There also has been talk that she plans to write a book on her life with Bing. In between and keeping an eye on daughter Mary — now busy shaping a career as an actress — she is involved in selling Rising River Ranch, 70 miles south of the Oregon border, that Bing bought more than 20 years ago as "a retreat from the world." The decision to sell did not come easily but, of course, with the children grown, it has outlived its usefulness. "It was perfect for large parties, unlimited house guests, lots of mulled wine, group cooking and tremendous fun. Bing felt it was the most special place in the world," said Kathy.

Robin Platzer / Images

Remembrance of things past.

FOR PHYLLIS DILLER

I heard that face lifts are only good for 10 years. Do you plan to have any more? — W.P., Kokomo, Ind.

● Of course. I can state with certainty that when I'm 86 (25 years from now), I shall look even younger than I do now because I shall be recuperating from my 17th lift. I'll also be teaching cooking and comedy-writing to young, handsome men at Harvard University in exchange for painting and ballet lessons. And I'll run seminars at the school on rejuvenation and mental health.

FOR DAVID BOWIE, rock star

Now that you've made a movie, do you fancy yourself as an actor, not a singer? — M.H., Indio, Calif.

● No. Although I've finished Just a Gigolo and I'm going to do Wally (about painter Egon Schiele) later this year, I'm going to keep up with my concert tours and recordings. I don't want to give up music entirely. If I don't make it as an actor, I might have a hard job making a comeback as a singer. My plan is to get plenty of experience with character parts, not singing roles, then turn to directing.

FOR LAWRENCE O'BRIEN, commissioner, National Basketball Ass'n.

Do you foresee women playing professional basketball soon? — R.B. Meister, Clintonville, Wis.

● The increase of girls in this sport has been phenomenal and has produced several stars, such as Carol Blazejowski, Althea Gwyn and Nancy Lieberman. In fact, the caliber of play has reached the point where a women's professional league is in prospect as interest and participation in women's basketball at all levels will continue to increase significantly.

FOR CAROL LYNLEY, star of The Cat and the Canary

You said on a talk show that you find living in two apartments cheaper than one. Explain, please. Sounds impossible to me — M.P., York, Pa.

● I split my time between New York, my base, and Los Angeles. I'm always flying back and forth because of my work. And since I don't believe in long stays with friends, I'd have to live at a hotel during all my commutes. Hotel living is awfully expensive, and my yearly rent is much less than a year's hotel tab.

FOR JULIA CHILD, gourmet-author

Can a person on a budget be a gourmet cook? — Mrs. B. Post, Franklin, N.J.

● Of course. Gourmet cook, that much abused expression, means only good cooking. The important thing is to learn how to cook so that one can use all the good foods one sees in our markets — but buy them in season or when on sale or plan to use the cheaper meat cuts. Cooking is much more interesting when one has to make every penny count; then it's a challenge any good cook will accept.

FOR DAVID DOYLE, star of ABC-TV's Charlie's Angels

Whatever is wrong with your voice, making it so rough? — Charles Dyksen, Muskegon, Mich.

● I developed this rasp by barking signals while playing quarterback at Campion High School in DuChien, Wis. I used it improperly, from the neck up instead of training it to come lower down. Other than sounding strange, it doesn't bother me at all, and there's nothing wrong with my vocal cord. My brother sounds a bit like me. He played fullback at the University of Nebraska and made the same mistake.

PRO AND CON

Do "Truth in Menu" Laws Benefit The Consumer?

PRO Dr. Bailus Walker, admin., Environmental Health Administration, D.C. Dept. of Environmental Services

In restaurants consumers have very little control over what is offered them to eat. This, then, places a grave responsibility on regulatory agencies to protect consumers' rights. One of these rights is the right to be truthfully informed. Food must be what it purports to be. The consumer wants to be assured that the meat of hamburger is made from ground beef and nothing else, that fruit juice is indeed the juice of a fruit. Thus enforcement of truth in menu laws are an integral part of government consumer-protection efforts.

CON Thad Eure, Jr., president, National Restaurant Association

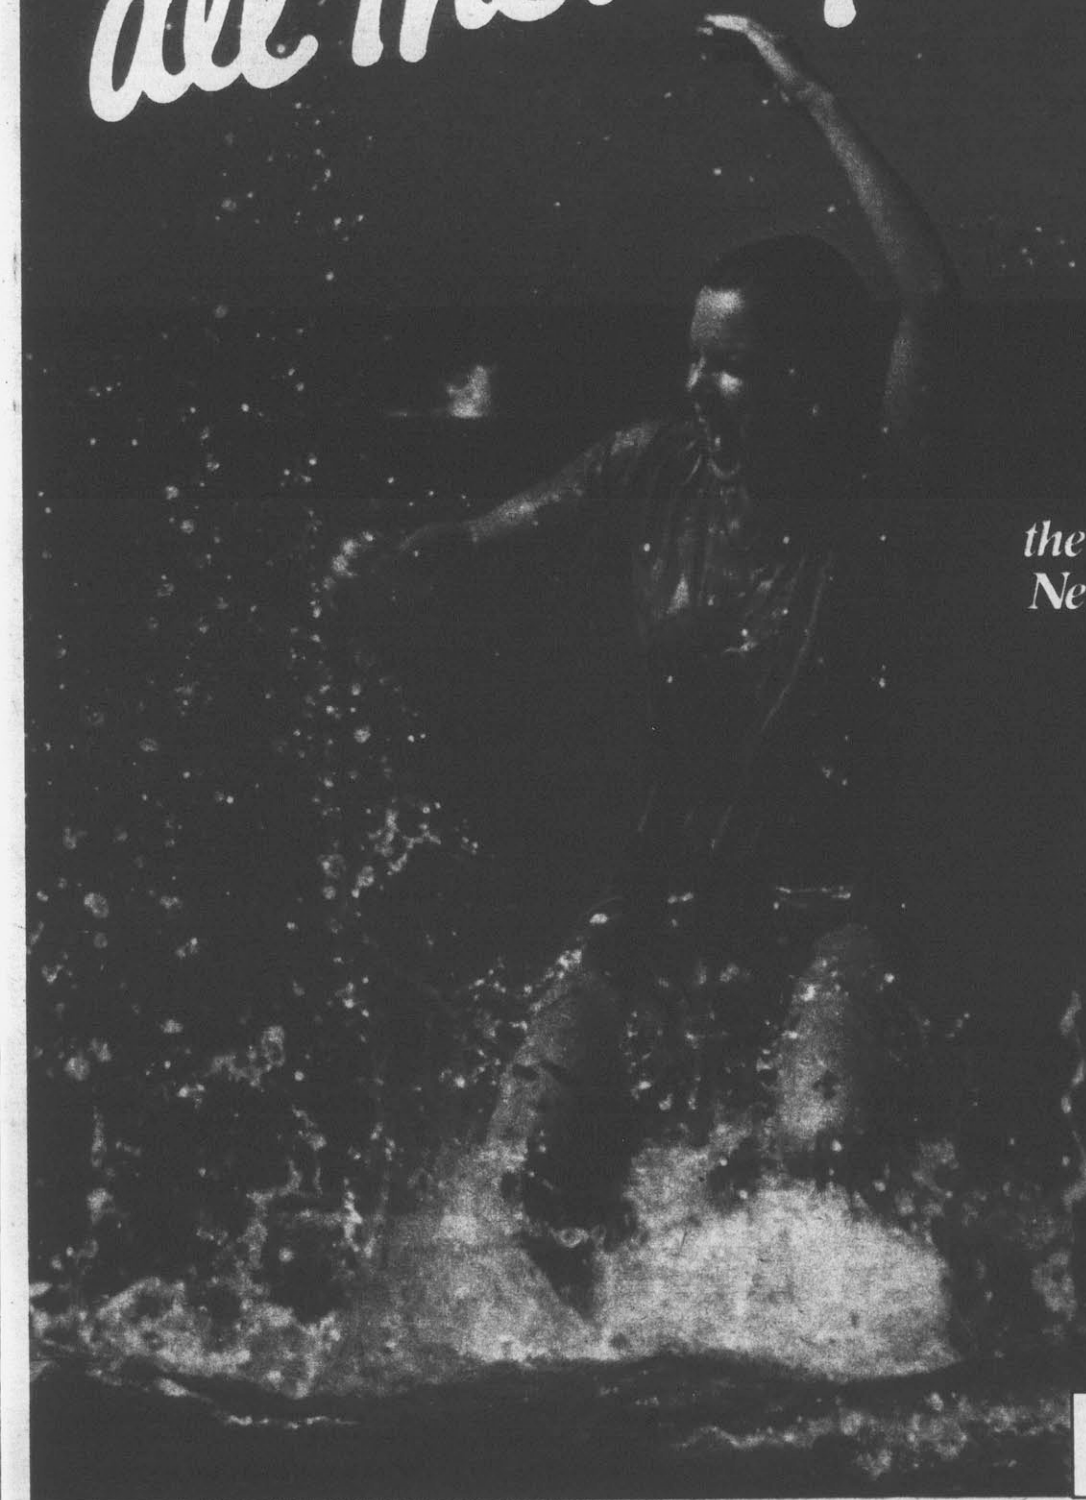

The answer must be: only if the consumer is willing to pay more for what he already has. Fraud laws already cover all businesses, including restaurants. Consumers are alert to — and active in — the exercise of their rights. And restaurateurs are well aware that their survival depends on customer satisfaction. But injecting the heavy hand of government into this mix only adds reams of regulations, scores of bureaucrats and inspectors, all to "protect the consumer" from "foot-long" hot dogs that measure 11 inches. It's not worth the price.

MARRIAGE CAN BE DIFFERENT —THE SECOND TIME AROUND

Marcia Reed / Transworld Features

With their home "invaded" by visitors, the Wagners are oblivious to the crowd; later, Natalie shows off works of art.

By Sue Russell

It could be the plot for a movie. They fell in love, got married and, just when everything seemed perfect, their lives came apart, and they divorced. Time passed, and although previously they'd discovered they couldn't live with each other, now they found out that they couldn't live without each other. And they fell in love all over again. . . .

When Natalie Wood and Robert Wagner were wed the second time around, they were determined to be happy — and stay happy — though married and famous. Natalie, who is the mother of two children, Natasha, 7 — by her interim marriage to producer Richard Gregson — and Courtney, 4 (by her marriage to Robert Wagner), says that she now realizes it's vital to maintain a balance in her relationships with her husband, her children and herself. "At different times in your life different things are important," she says. "Maybe your kids need a little more of your attention, or your husband or sometimes even yourself. I don't think that any one concern has to exclude the others."

So far, so good. But how does this attempt to be movie stars (separate but equal) and helpmates and parents work out in practice? What happens, for example, when on rare occasions they permit press people to enter their home while their children are also present?

The scene is the Wagners' living room. Natalie and Bob are posing for the still camera. "Smile," says the photographer. "That's perfect. . .just one more now, hold it." As Bob and Natalie change positions, smoothly, professionally, seemingly automatically, they manage to produce a whole range of facial expressions. At the same time, talking out of the corners of their mouths, they carry on a business discussion. The photographer moves in for some close-ups. The Wagners pose. Click. The Wagners joke with members of a BBC crew from England who are setting up equipment for a filmed interview. The Wagners pose. Click. Bob talks shop with some of his business associates. The Wagners pose. Click. Natalie steps out of the picture and listens intently as her two youngsters tell her that they must have a trampoline.

It is choreographed chaos, organized confusion, yet somehow it is a convincing demonstration that marriage and parenthood and career can mix effectively. In fact, Natalie — who made her first public appearance topless in the pages of Life at the age of 6 — can't imagine being completely fulfilled if any one of these ingredients were missing from her life.

Few divorced couples try again with each other, but Natalie and Bob are taking another chance on love.

Take the matter of Natalie's career, for instance. Despite a prolonged absence from the screen, she wouldn't dream of retiring. "I enjoy acting too much to give it up," she says, and she's proud of her performances in such pictures as Rebel Without a Cause, Splendor in the Grass, West Side Story, Gypsy and Love with a Proper Stranger. "Yes, I still get the same kick out of seeing myself on the screen. When it's right and it really works well, there's nothing like it."

Yet Natalie didn't hesitate for a moment to temporarily shelve her work in favor of the inevitable demands brought about by rearing a family. "I didn't think of it as sacrificing my career or anything like that," she says. But with the exception of the television play Cat on a Hot Tin Roof, which she made with her husband, Natalie disappeared from the screen during her pregnancy and early years of raising daughter Courtney.

Now that her children are past the age when they demand constant attention, Natalie is glad to be back at work. "I love my husband and I love my kids, but I don't think that I have to give up acting in order to be constantly aware of my personal feelings — as well as trying to be instinctively aware of theirs."

Next summer Natalie's latest film, Meteor, will be released — a hair-raising disaster movie depicting the impending threat of a giant comet devastating the earth. Natalie plays a Russian interpreter-astrophysicist and stars alongside Sean Connery, Brian Keith and Henry Fonda. Natalie, who was born Natasha Zacharenko, the daughter of Russian immigrants, was the ideal choice for the female lead. It had been a long time since she'd had much practice in speaking Russian, but she found that after a few brush-up lessons, she'd picked up enough of her second language to play the role most convincingly.

There's one scene in Meteor, however, in which Natalie's Russian accent is immaterial because her mouth is filled with mud and she can't speak. It's when New York has been destroyed and the Hudson River has broken through its banks into the Manhattan subway where Natalie and the others have taken refuge. They are forced to swim to escape.

Natalie recalls what happened during the filming: "There were over a million gallons of mud in holding tanks around this immense stage. As we swam, it came breaking through the ceiling and flying in all directions. (The director, Ronny Neame, wanted reality and we didn't use doubles.) But it was really frightening. You literally couldn't see or hear or say anything. The mud got in our ears and eyes and mouths — we actually had to wear earplugs."

Sometimes the Wagners' efforts to strike an even balance between Natalie's career and Bob's career (which includes starring roles in such motion pictures as What Price Glory, Titanic, Prince Valiant, All the Fine Young Cannibals, The Longest Day, The Towering Inferno and Midway) take a bit of fancy juggling to maintain family togetherness.

A case in point was the recent period during which Bob was on location in Hawaii making a six-hour television film while Natalie was back home in California with the kids, who were both in school. What to do? Well, Natalie and the children joined Bob; the youngsters were given special tutoring by an Hawaiian woman and, after the picture-making was finished, the whole family went island-hopping.

"I think it's nice for the children to travel and be exposed to things," Natalie says. "They did learn a lot about the culture of Hawaii."

Turnabout is fair marriage. Now it's Natalie's turn to work — on a TV miniseries based on the James Jones novel, From Here to Eternity, and it's Bob's turn (Natalie's nickname for him is R.J.) to keep an eye on Natasha and Courtney. "While I'm filming Eternity, R.J. will be home," Natalie explains. "It's really a nice way of working — and of relaxing — and it's good for the kids."

Three heads are prettier than one: Courtney, Natalie and Natasha.

On the rare occasions when their busy schedules permit time for parties, the Wagners enjoy having a few friends over for a casual dinner out by the pool, as they've just done to celebrate their sixth wedding anniversary.

Natalie enjoys preparing family meals. "I cook breakfast quite often on Sundays and occasionally dinners," she says. "And I do a lot of cooking when we're on the boat — in fact, I do it all."

The boat is a 60-foot power cruiser that she and R.J. both know how to operate. Despite its obvious luxury, the Wagners bought it in order to simplify their lives. On it the family can relax, be together and get away from it all. "It's more like a fishing boat than a yacht," Natalie says. "The children love to swim and dive, and they fish well."

When on dry land, the Wagners occupy a lavish yet comfortable home in Beverly Hills. Filled with plants, antique furniture and colorful paintings that Natalie has personally selected, it radiates genuine warmth. "We really love this place," she says. "It's a great family house." (It's an extended family that includes three dogs and six cats, dominated by a friendly poodle named Potato and an independent cat named Jaws.)

The house grows and changes as the Wagner family's needs and preoccupations expand and vary. "We're still doing things to it," explains Natalie. "That's probably why it looks a little bit cluttered."

The game room reflects his, her, and their interests. It contains a pool table and a large-screen TV set and a sauna and a Jacuzzi and a gymnasium. "R.J. is into martial arts, and I do a combination of Yoga and gymnastics," Natalie says. "I do a lot of stretching as well as ballet. I go in spurts. At one point we both got very interested in trapeze work. That was good exercise and a lot of fun."

This versatility — as a woman, wife and mother — is the same quality that has enabled her to be a reigning actress for a very long time. Although Natalie is considered one of Hollywood's truly beautiful women, she believes that rather than good looks, it has been luck and an ability to play complex characters that have kept her on top.

For Natalie, life doesn't slow down at 40 (a birthday she recently celebrated) but expands. "I see more and more interesting things opening up," she says. "Jane Fonda, for example, who's 40 now and talks about it very frankly, certainly seems to be working more than ever and doing a wider range of roles. I don't see it holding her back at all."

"I think it would be dreadful if a career was based primarily on looks because, my God...what happens? I mean it's inevitable, everybody does get older."

Natalie is the first to admit that her life did have its precarious periods. She agrees that it was unbelievably lucky to fall in love with the same man twice — and be able to marry him both times. Apparently, during the gap of 10 years, both Natalie and Robert matured, and each was ready to correct any previous mistakes. "I really didn't think we'd get together again," Natalie sighs. "I guess we both at one time or another kind of wished it. But we really didn't think it was possible. We were extremely fortunate that the timing was such that when we both thought about it, we were free."

Today, looking back 10 years to the time she was 30, divorced and childless, Natalie Wood philosophizes, "When you are young it's easy to take things for granted. But with any luck you develop the ability to be very grateful and appreciative of the good things that come along. And you work hard, very hard, to keep them good." FW

UNMASKING P.D. JAMES

When mystery lovers ask, "Whodunit?" the answer is this most unlikely queen of crime.

By Pam Lambert

To the casual observer, Phyllis Dorothy James White, as she sips her afternoon tea, seems to be a typical 57-year-old grandmother. But this genial-looking Englishwoman really leads a double life. In the past 19 years she has plotted some of the most heinous crimes on either side of the Atlantic — as the author of seven widely acclaimed mystery novels.

Her award-winning work, written under the name of P.D. James, has made her the heiress-apparent to the throne left vacant by the late Agatha Christie, a title which her admirers feel does not do her justice. In comparing James to the other great ladies of the classic English mystery story, including Christie and Dorothy Sayers, The New Yorker said, "The truth is that she is their superior in almost every respect."

James appears pleasantly surprised by the warm reception her work has received. To those familiar with her background, however, the wonder is not that her books have been so successful, but that they were written at all.

James began her first book when, at 39, she was working as a hospital administrator in order to support her two teenaged daughters and her mentally ill husband. Almost apologetically, she says, "I began writing disgracefully late. I had a lot of excuses, but I suspect they were just that. I realized that however difficult it would be, I had to do it because otherwise I would always be a failed writer to myself."

Three years later, her poet-detective, Adam Dalgliesh, made his debut.

As an author, James put her background as a hospital administrator to good use. Shroud for a Nightingale, which is set in a provincial nurses' training school, and A Mind to Murder, which takes place in a London psychiatric clinic, owe much of their justly praised atmosphere to her own experiences.

For the last nine years James has been tapping a fresh source of material — the Criminal Department of Britain's Home Office, where she works as a senior civil servant and has access to expert criminologists of every sort. Their assistance helped her create the realistic picture of a forensic-science lab in her latest mystery, Death of an Expert Witness.

Although James initially viewed mystery-writing as her literary apprenticeship, she says, "I came to realize that I could say what I wanted to about human beings in this form as well as in so-called straight novels." James — and her admirers — consider her a novelist who just happens to write mysteries.

Among the qualities that set James's books apart are her psychological insight and eye for detail. Because she sees so clearly into her characters and their frailties, there is an indefinable sadness, like the faint scent of sachet in a dead grandmother's bureau drawers, that lingers in the reader's mind after the novel has been put away.

James herself believes that some may find her mysteries slightly depressing because of the realism of her characters. "In books with stereotypes you feel, when they're over, that the victim will get up, brush himself off and take a bow. You don't care very much because you never believe in the character in the first place." James says that she thinks "the victim should be as real a character as the others, not just a dead body" — and so should the murderer. "If you're writing about real people, there's something to be pitied," she says. "You should be able to think: here was a human being, not a pasteboard villain."

The explanation of the sadness may also lie in one of James's recurrent themes, the contagion of violence. As Dalgliesh is made to observe in her latest book, "Murder was always solved at a cost, sometimes to himself, more often to others. . . It was a crime that contaminated everyone who it touched."

"Murder is still the ultimate crime," says James. "The victim may have been disagreeable, his existence may have been inconvenient to someone. But by solving his murder, the mystery novel affirms that human life is important."

Maybe that's why a nice lady like P.D. James writes mysteries. FW

BEAR BRYANT: THE SUPERHUMAN BEHIND THE LEGEND

Under his leadership, Alabama's Crimson Tide has won more than 270 games, but, at age 64, he's aiming for 316 — an all-time record.

Usually Bear Bryant's players smile with him as they savor the sweet taste of victory, but sometimes they must face defeat.

By George Smith

Come September, a legend and his football team will go about the business of breaking the sports oldest record: Amos Alonzo Stagg's 315 lifetime victories as a head coach. The legend is Bear Bryant. The football team is Alabama's Crimson Tide.

Bryant, a tall, slope-shouldered man out of Moro Bottoms, Ark., has more than 270 life-time wins (and 76 losses, 16 ties) and a football team that is again one of this season's favorites for the championship of the nation.

Nobody believes he can walk on water, but most will bet you their last dime the man knows where every rock is hidden.

What kind of man is the legend? During 20 years of covering his teams, the last three with my son, a member of the squad, I have come up with at least 20 different opinions.

There is a mystique to the man that is hard to explain. Cotton Clark, a halfback on Bryant's 1961-62 teams, will talk for hours on Bryant, finally shake his head and say, "He's just something special. I'm still scared to death of him. But I'll tell you one thing. Next to my daddy, he's the man I love and respect most."

My son Barry is much the same way: "He sends chills up my spine. And when he comes down out of that tower [at practice] and gets down on the field among us, you ought to see how things change. He gets your attention in a hurry, and he doesn't have to say one word to get it. But I love him. I don't know anybody on the team who doesn't. I'll guarantee you if he were being threatened, he wouldn't have to yell for help!"

George Smith writes on sports and is general columnist for The Anniston (Ala.) Star.

He will listen to his players.

Once, several years ago, he had Johnny Musso (now with the Chicago Bears) in his office for a discussion on leadership and his many social activities. Musso pointed out the players had few, if any, recreational facilities.

"I thought about that," says Bryant, "and Johnny was right. So I went to see the president, and we spent over $350,000 on an annex [to the athletic dorm] to get recreational facilities."

Paul Bryant Hall, known as the "Bryant-Hilton" when it was built, is plush. But there are dozens of athletic dorms built since much more plush. This summer, however, the dorm has undergone a major renovation. But it still will not have a swimming pool as the original plans for the dorm called for.

Which leads to some of Bryant's convictions.

"It's not that I want them [the players] to be like other students, because I don't," he explains. "They can't and be winning players. They have to make sacrifices and do without things other students have. And they gotta do it because they want to. They gotta have pride that they can.

"I had guys to come in here during that losing period [6-5 seasons in 1969-70] and say they wanted to be like other students. I told 'em if they wanted to be like other students to get the hell over there and be another student. I'm not saying anything against other students, mind you, just that you can't be like other students, do all the things they do and keep up with your schoolwork and play football . . . and win."

Winning is what, if nothing else, Bryant is all about. And yet, for all the winning and recruiting of players to do the winning, he can not explain what a winner is or has.

'Naw, I can't put it in words," he drawls. "But I damn sure can recognize one. And I think that's the difference between winning coaches and losing coaches. The first thing is to recognize a winner and get him in a game."

The man is not necessarily talking about great players.

"You can look at any team we've had since I came here and you will find three, four, maybe five great players. I remember some that had only one or two. But we've had a whole lot of them in that fourth quarter who got to thinking they were great."

Bryant admits his philosophy on handling kids has changed in recent years. He is much more open to change, some of his earlier players claim.

"Sure I've changed," he says. "Kind of rolled with the tide, so to speak. In the first place, kids are so much more knowledgeable. Fact is, they're a lot brighter than I am. Every kid is different. I used to try to treat 'em all alike, but that's ridiculous. The main thing is you have to treat 'em all fairly."

Bryant and the lady he calls Mary Harmon, a gracious, outgoing person, have two children, Paul W. Bryant Jr. and Mrs. John Tyson III. And there are four grandaughters and one grandson who call the legend "Poppa," just as do Mary Harmon and his two children.

The grandson, Mark Tyson, is a frequent traveling companion with "Poppa," and the two spend a lot of time on nearby lakes fishing together.

Mary Harmon, Paul Jr. and Mae Martin (Mrs. Tyson) supported his decision, at 64, to go for Stagg's record.

"I had talked to Dr. [David] Mathews [university president] about retiring before he went to Washington in the Ford Administration [HEW Secretary]. And I talked to my wife and children about it.

"They asked me what I was gonna do if I retired. I got to thinking about that. You know, nobody wants to die. I don't. And Charley Thornton [Bryant's aide] kept mentioning Stagg's record to me.

"And then it was recruiting time. I'd really enjoyed the year before, and I felt fine. I was up in Birmingham to speak to a quarterback club and they were writing all that stuff about it being my last year again. I didn't have much to say so I figured it would be a good time to let the kids we were trying to recruit know I was going to be around."

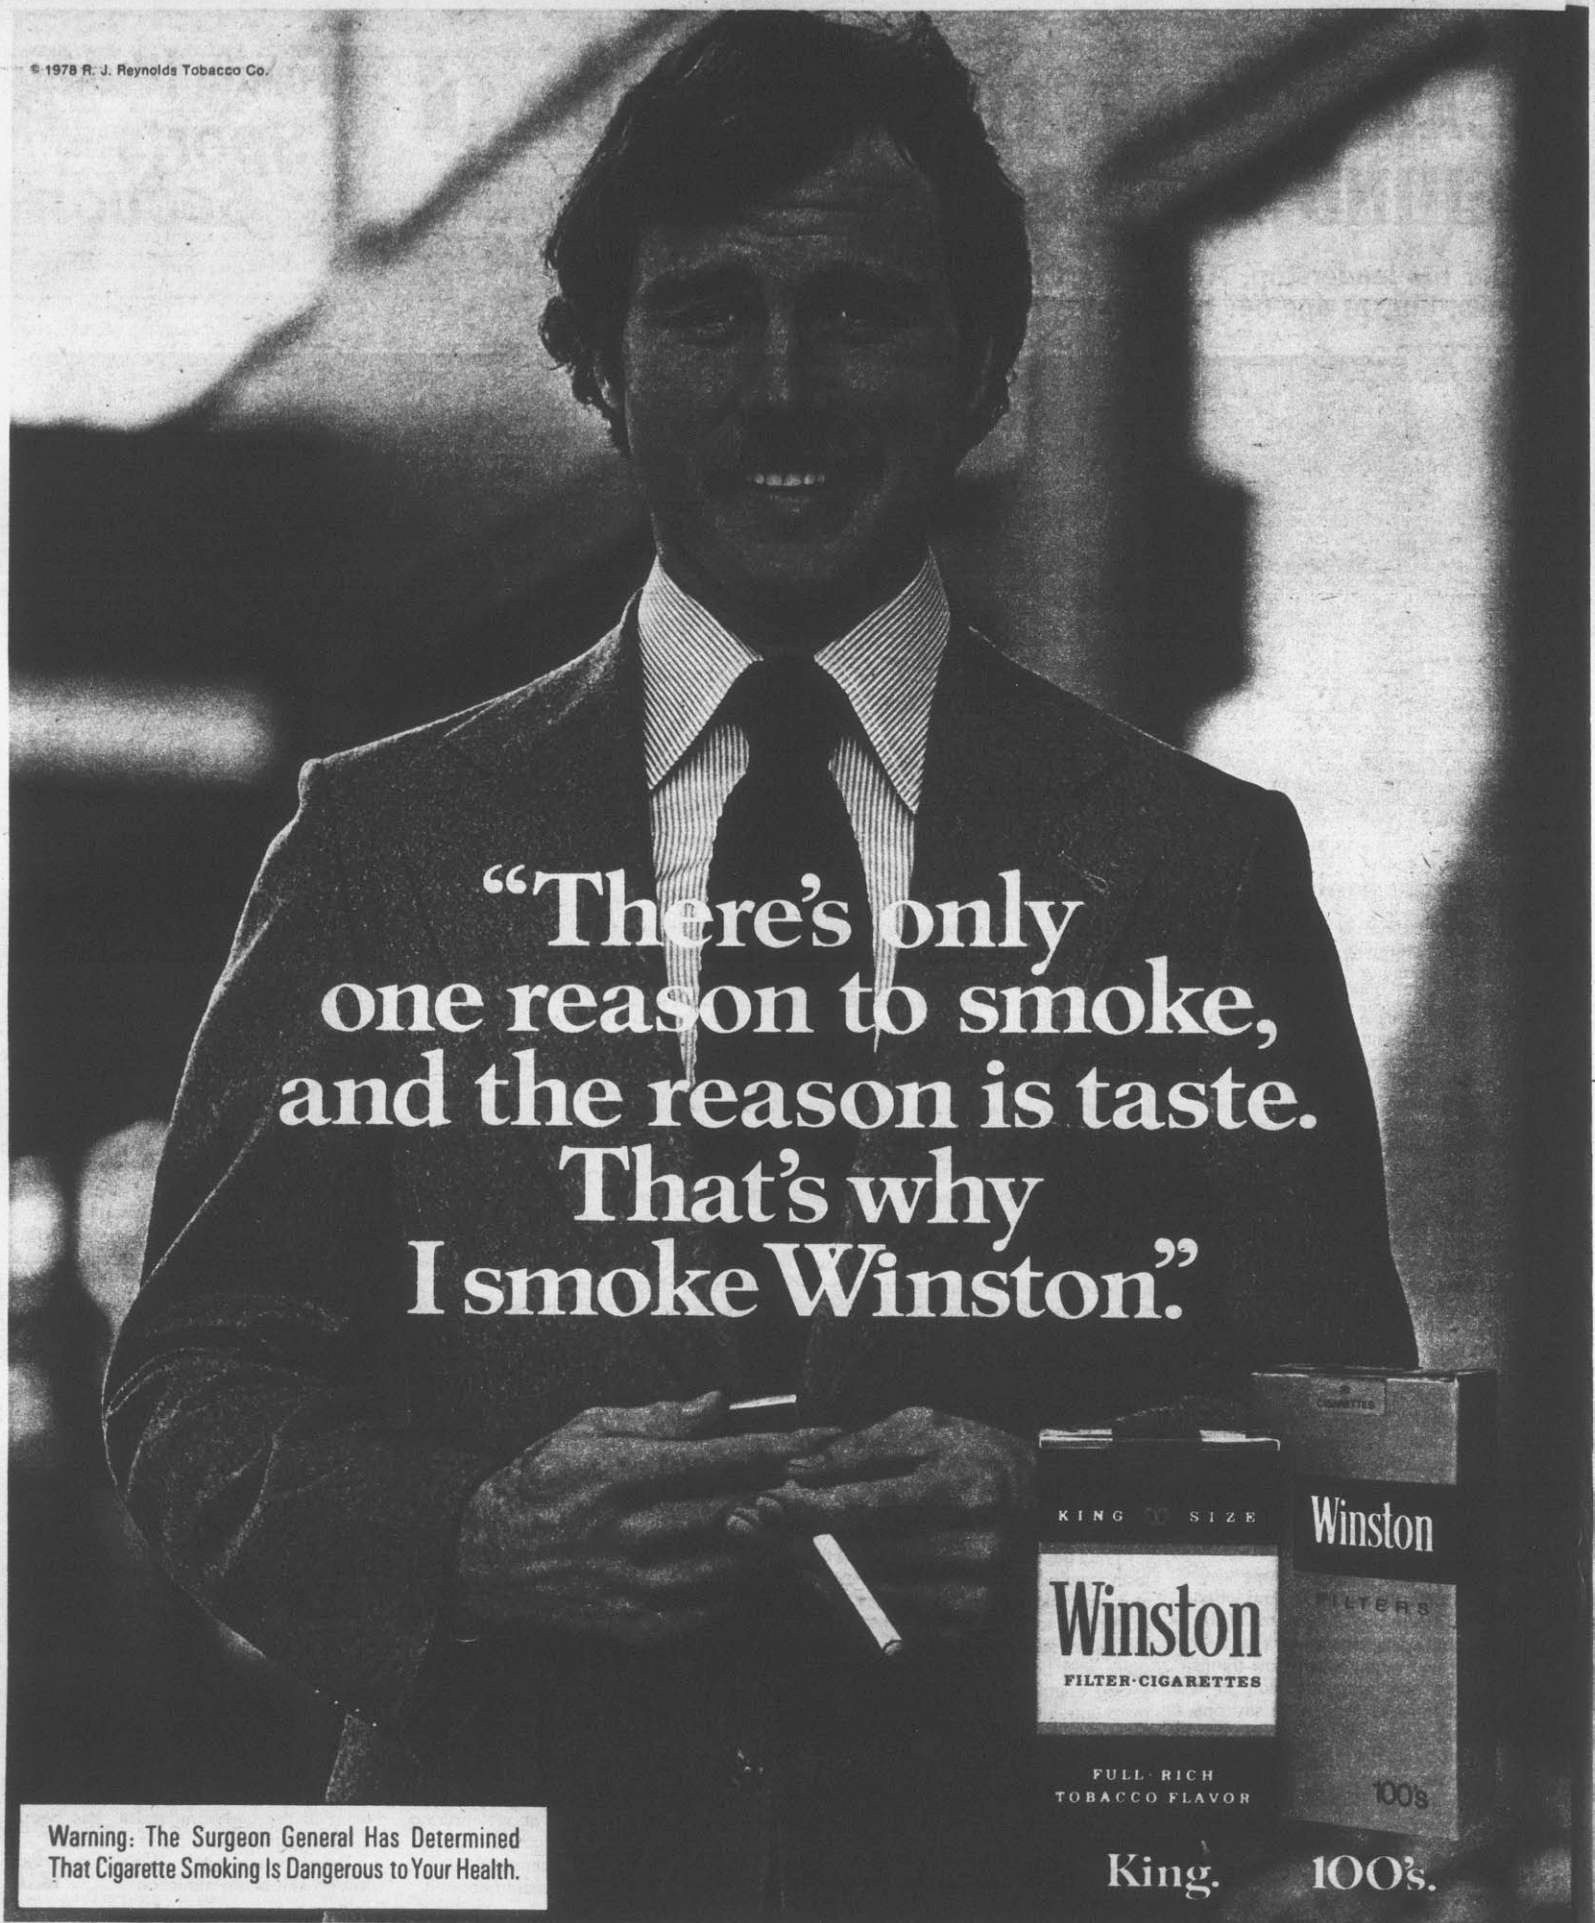

Bryant says his age and possible retirement have been used against him and Alabama for "at least the last 15 years.

"If they think a kid is coming down here to play for me, they tell the kid 'He's going to retire after one more.' If the kid is coming for some other reason, they say, 'What do you want to play for that mean old bleep for, anyway?'"

Recruits playing this fall could have a very good reason along about 1981. Bama's pace since 1971, the year Bryant went to the wishbone attack, has been 10.5 wins per season.

Being a tiny piece of a living legend can be an attraction. FW

JOHN CURRY'S ICE THEATER

This Olympic Gold Medalist plans an American tour to display skating as an art.

Ice-skating can be an art.

By Jane Hershey

What do you do for an encore on ice if you're an Olympic gold medalist in figure-skating, not to mention title holder of the European and World Figure-Skating Championships? For 28-year-old John Curry, Great Britain's Baryshnikov-on-skates, the answer is easy. He is about to embark on an American tour that he hopes will make Americans aware of how skating can be an exciting art form, like ballet, as well as a challenging athletic activity.

Last year in his native England, Curry took his own unique brand of free-style skating into a London theater, complete with flashing lights, symphonic music and choreography by such noted dance-world figures as the Royal Ballet's Kenneth MacMillan and America's offbeat Twyla Tharp. The response was overwhelming — skating could be more than chorus-line feather dusters doing figure eights, and this fall, a new version of that show, Ice Theater, will begin touring the United States.

Young John always knew just what he wanted out of life. "I really wanted to dance, but my parents tried to steer me into something else, since dancing wasn't acceptable at that time....for a boy. Skating was fine by them, and I fell in love with the smell of the old English ice rinks at once." Curry advanced rapidly, winning prizes at nearly every turn. By the time he was in his teens, he was determined to get the best training possible, so he got a bank to back him and headed for America. Most of his serious training for the 1976 Olympic and World competitions took place in Denver under the watchful eye of a down-to-earth Italian named Carlo Fassi. Everything paid off for this hard-working Englishman, who skated his way to number one to the strains of classical music.

"I've always felt that skating is a form of dance. I hope that people who have been recently awakened to the pleasures of dance through films like The Turning Point will see the dance element in my show. In England, everyone is very dance-oriented, and here, in America, the response is even more amazing. I think it's great that audiences get carried away and cheer at the ballet. Dance should be fun, and so should skating, both to perform and to watch. That's why I want to use things like laser lights and good music — they go with a new creative form like mine."

One thing that worries Curry is that people will think that his attitude towards skating is snobbish. "I'm not at all against traditional ice-dancing, which has now become an Olympic event, or against ice shows with clowns and circus music. I look on what I do as an extension of what can be done on ice. I would like people to come to my shows as if they were coming to Broadway or to a nice, familiar ballet like Swan Lake. I really want to see ice-skating grow as an American sport. I do hope that what I do sparks off activity in that area, too. Skating makes you feel so alive!" FW

THE BALLPLAYER WHO REFUSED TO DIE

Boston Red Sox manager Don Zimmer believes in miracles because he's seen them happen — to him.

By Frank Slocum

Donald William Zimmer, the manager of the Boston Red Sox — a team that at this point in the baseball season is battling for first-place honors in the American League East — is the most unlikely man to be where he is and to be doing what he's doing so successfully. He was never a star player (many managers were); he was traded too often to have any long service with one organization (many managers get their jobs because of stick-to-iveness); he is far too honest and outspoken t butter up the front office (some managers d — constantly); he wasn't a successful mino league manager — in his only successfu season his team finished four games abov .500, and in the following year it won only 4 games while losing 99 (some managers hea major-league clubs because they've chalke up impressive records as leaders of mino league teams).

Don sizes up the opposing team.

What qualifications does Zimmer bring t his job of managing the Red Sox, traditionall a star-studded team that seldom realizes i potential? For one thing, respect is a stron factor in Don Zimmer's life — not the respe that many managers say they "demand" fro their players, but the esteem and regard an loyalty that he gives to others. He had tha kind of respect for the late Charley Dressen manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers. He has it too, for a man named Joe Hawk, the coach o an American Legion team that Zimmer playe on as a youngster in Cincinnati. You lear something about Don Zimmer when you hea him talk about Joe Hawk.

"I still see him once in a while, and we hav dinner together. And I'll guarantee you tha when I'm with him, I don't use tobacco alcohol or bad language. That's not easy fo me like it is for him, but the way I figure it, he' earned that respect from me."

From Joe Hawk's American Legion team Don Zimmer signed a professional contrac with the Brooklyn Dodgers organization. B his third year he was definitely labeled a major-league prospect. He had worke himself up to the Dodgers' Elmira (N.Y.) farm club — and he was in love. On August 16 1951, Don Zimmer and Jean Bauerle were joined in matrimony at home plate in the Elmira ball park.

The following year was another good one for Zimmer, as he moved to Mobile, a step higher on the road to the majors. The next spring, Zimmer spent much of the training season playing shortstop for the Dodgers because PeeWee Reese, who "owned" the position, was having leg problems. Finally, when Reese recovered, Dodgers manager Charley Dressen had to send young Zimmer back to the minor leagues. Said Zimmer, "My heart was broken, but I still would have run in to a wall for that man. I know it was tough fo him. I can remember him walking up to me putting his hand on my shoulder and saying 'Zim, they really need you in St. Paul,' It wa lousy news, but he did it nice."

At St. Paul, Zimmer made it obvious that the day was approaching when he would be called up to the majors. He was leading the league in home runs and runs batted in until his whole life turned around on just one pitch. It was thrown by Jim Kirk of the Columbus Red Birds, and it hit Zimmer in the head. It caved in his skull, and he was rushed to the hospital for delicate nerve and brain surgery. His life hung in the balance for a week. A plate was put in his skull, and most people felt a sense of gratitude that, although his career was ended, he was still alive.

But in writing off Zimmer as a player, the experts had overlooked one thing — Zimmer. The next year he was back at shortstop in St. Paul, and by midseason was brought up by the Dodgers. By 1955, Zimmer was still waiting for Reese to retire, while filling in occasionally for an infielder who needed a day off. Early in 1956, tragedy struck again. Cincinnati pitcher Hal Jeffcoat threw a fastball that shattered Zimmer's cheekbone, and he was out for the rest of the season.

Zimmer made another comeback and actually stayed with the Dodgers (they'd moved from Brooklyn to Los Angeles) through the 1959 season. But then the travels began: two years with the Cubs, a stint with the New York Mets (he finished that season with the Cincinnati Reds), back to the Dodgers briefly, on to the Washington Senators and finally to Japan as a player for the Toei Flyers.

The Cincinnati organization decided to try him as a playing manager. The year was 1967 and, as Zimmer recalls it, "They started me off in Knoxville. I was hitting .204, and I had my club in sixth place. They promoted me to Buffalo. I hit .182, and my club was in seventh place. They decided they better not move me again. No telling what would happen."

Giving up playing completely, he managed the next three seasons in Indianapolis, Key West and Salt Lake City. Then he was hired as a coach by the Montreal Expos, and a year after he landed a similar job with the San Diego Padres. On April 27, 1972, the Padres released manager Preston Gomez, and he was replaced with Don Zimmer.

Zimmer lasted two years with San Diego, and was fired. That winter the Boston Red Sox hired him to coach third base. In July 1976 he became the team's manager.

Has it all been worth it? To Zimmer, there is no question. "I never knew anything but this game. I love my job. I think it's tough."

He's 47 years old now, he's got a plate in his head and he's bounced all over the big leagues and the bush leagues to get where he is. He has walked up to home plates all over the world, knowing that a fast ball he didn't duck in time might cost him his life. Yes, he has guts — and a fanatical devotion to baseball

Maybe it was summed up best by the late Gil Hodges, then the Washington manager, when he told the press that Zimmer — who was in the twilight of his playing career — was joining his club. Someone asked about Zimmer's qualifications, and Gil said, "Good pitching will get him out, and sometimes even bad pitching will get him out. He can't play every day anymore, and he can't do a lot of the things he could do when I first saw him play. But I can't think of a single situation where I would be afraid to use him. You don't scare Zimmer."

Hodges said that 15 years ago. It was true then, it was true before that time, it's been true ever since. FW

General Motors has built more than 850,000 personal-luxury cars with front-wheel drive.

Now GM teams it up with four-wheel independent suspension and electronic leveling control in three of the most individualistic new cars we've ever built.

Cutaway drawing of GM's front-wheel drive. GM is America's most experienced builder of front-wheel-drive cars.

In a few days, the 1979 Cadillac Eldorado, Buick Riviera and Oldsmobile Toronado will be introduced.

They are exciting new automobiles—completely redesigned to be America's only four-passenger, personal-luxury cars with front-wheel drive, independent four-wheel suspension and electronic leveling control.

They are also something more. They are General Motors answer to designing and packaging truly luxurious, highly individualistic cars with both driver and passenger satisfaction uppermost in mind.

As you probably know, both Eldorado and Toronado have had front-wheel drive for a number of years. For 1979, Buick Riviera joins this elite group. These new cars offer easy maneuverability, responsive engine performance and extensive corrosion protection. They are also beautifully appointed, comfortable, quiet cars offering more legroom front and rear than last year's counterparts. But before we get into specifics, let's talk about front-wheel drive for a moment.

The advantages of front-wheel drive.

Front-wheel drive offers impressive traction on wet roads and in snow or mud because there is greater mass distributed over the drive wheels. In addition, with front-wheel drive the center of gravity is forward, thereby providing good directional stability.

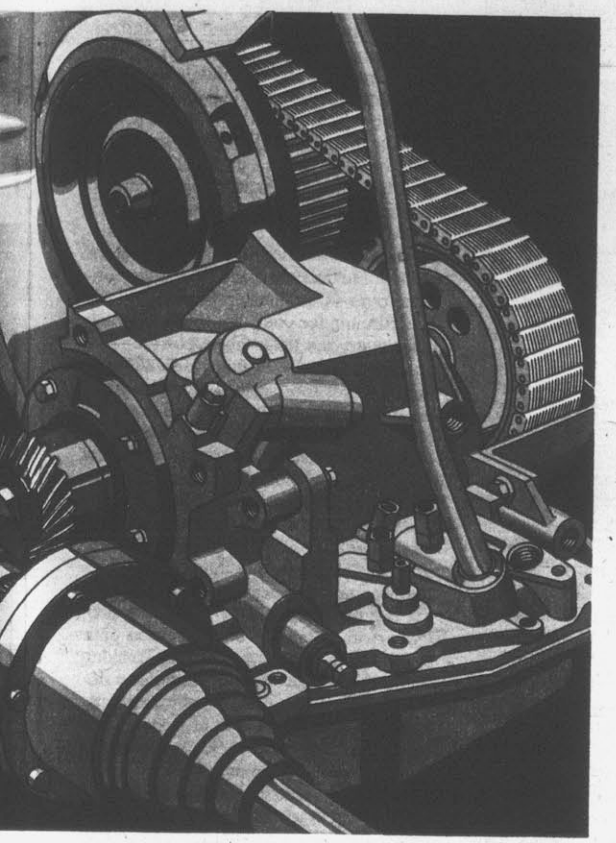

Finally, front-wheel drive permits a flatter floor in the passenger compartment. Result: greater comfort.

Cars you love to drive.

In addition to independent front suspension, these cars will also have independent rear suspension—the kind found on many of the world's most expensive automobiles.

They will also have a pneumatic stabilizing system coupled to the rear suspension that automatically adjusts the rear vehicle height to compensate for varying passenger and luggage loads. The result is a more uniform ride.

Deluxe Travel Trailer & Travel Van

The new Eldorado, Toronado and Riviera also have shorter turning circles over last year, so they're more maneuverable in city traffic and easier to park. "Agile" is a good way of describing them.

Engineering them quiet.

A quality of any great car is quietness of ride. Which is why we spent so much time and effort in this area.

Through extensive road testing and supplemental computer analysis, we developed a total vehicle structure that is tuned to help absorb road-induced vibrations. You get a quiet, solid feel.

In addition, we employed the latest acoustical engineering techniques to help minimize noises that might annoy the driver and passengers. And many hours of wind-tunnel and road tests helped us significantly reduce external "wind rush" noise. The result is a finished product you have to drive to believe.

Lasting good looks.

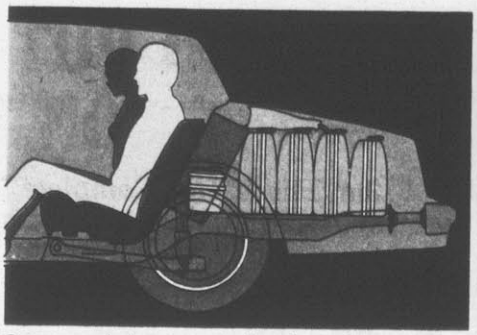

We started with new styling concepts we believe will make these new cars modern-day classics. To help maintain their good looks and value, they feature Body by Fisher and extensive corrosion-resisting treatments such as our ELPO process, in which the body is totally immersed in a corrosion-resistant primer that is electrically "plated" on interior and exterior metal surfaces.

There are many coated metal parts such as galvanized or Zincrometal® door panels, rear quarter panels and rocker panels.

And the broad use of other specialized corrosion-fighting materials, moisture-repelling sealants and tough acrylic finishes.

The "brain" behind GM's electronic leveling control is this compact sensing device. It is the product of solid-state electronics.

Compressed air automatically raises or lowers special shock absorbers to compensate for different load conditions.

A versatile family of engines.

For 1979, these new cars offer the kind of response and performance you'd expect from our "flagship" models.

The Cadillac Eldorado comes equipped with an electronic fuel-injected 5.7 litre V-8. And for the first time, Eldorado will also offer an available diesel engine, an alert 5.7 litre V-8.

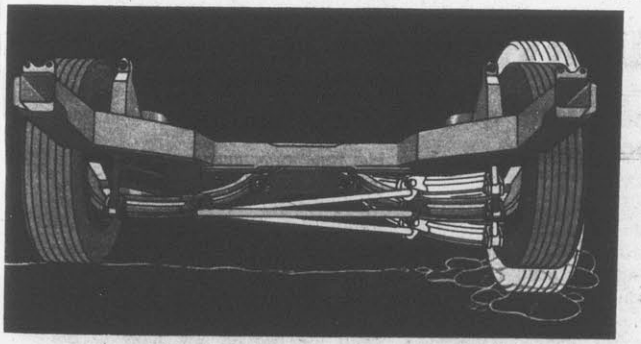

Buick Riviera will feature a standard 5.7 litre V-8 with 4-barrel carburetor, and an available 3.8 litre turbocharged V-6. Incidentally, this same turbocharged V-6 will be standard on a special new Riviera called the "S TYPE."

Finally, the new Oldsmobile Toronado will offer a 5.7 litre, 4-bbl. V-8 as standard equipment, and an available 5.7 litre V-8 diesel with surprising responsiveness.

These new cars are equipped with GM-built engines produced by various divisions. See your dealer for details.

So there you have it. A preview of some of the things to look for at your Buick, Oldsmobile, or Cadillac dealers.

See and drive these exciting new cars on September 28th.

The addition of independent rear suspension helps the car "hug" the road by allowing each of the four wheels to comform individually to the road surface.

MARK OF EXCELLENCE

THE MAN WHO PUT RUNNING 'ON THE MAP'

Jim Fixx's The Complete Book of Running has sold 455,000 copies — and it's still selling.

By Ernest V. Heyn

His name is James F. Fixx, and he is the author of The Complete Book of Running, which has been at or near the top of the best-seller list for more than eight months.

"How can you fill a book with facts about running?" asked the skeptics. Well, there are now more than 50 books on sale on the subject — and 50 more on the way. But Publishers Weekly says Jim Fixx's is "the breakthrough book" and adds that "sales of more than 455,000 copies are reported by its publisher."

Fixx has had a distinguished career as a magazine editor: seven years as feature editor of Saturday Review, then senior editor, executive editor and finally editor-in-chief of McCall's magazine. Later he was senior editor for Life and managing editor of Horizon.

His heart, however, belonged to writing. He wrote Games for the Superintelligent — which was so successful he wrote a sequel — and a children's book called Solve It.

Running, he says, is a natural tranquilizer, an enhancer of sexual pleasure and allows the runner to eat foods forbidden to dieters and yet lose weight.

Most remarkable of all is his claim that heart-attack victims can — with their doctors' blessing — compete in 26-mile races and feel better than they did before their attacks.

He makes no distinction between running and jogging.

Jim started slowly and ran a half-mile or so only three or four times a week. Soon he was studying books and magazines on the subject — and running every day. Two years later he won a 10,000-meter race in his age category.

His disposition changed. "I was calmer and less anxious. I could concentrate more easily and for longer periods. I felt more in control of my life ...."

He has found that many other runners have shared his experience. Beginning with a desire to lose weight and look and feel better, runners realize that their hobby has a unique salutary effect.

Hank Morgan / Random House

James Fixx "at work."

Jim advises the beginner to run 15 or 20 minutes as few as three days a week: "You may feel just as refreshed after a mile as I do after 10."

Jim writes that an easy run of a few miles can cure minor indispositions — headache, upset stomach, hangover. He asked a friend who wasn't feeling well whether he was going to a doctor. "Running is my doctor," his friend replied.

In his book he tells the stories of many people who have benefited by running. The common report is that they have been physically and spiritually converted. He relates running to meditation.

Jim gives advice on how to start, how to have your body tested — especially your heart — before you get involved, how to warm up for running, where to run, in what clothes and such.

And, if you want to compete in races, much sensible advice from experts is included. He devotes space to women runners, over-40 runners and kids.

Is running for you? Jim thinks running is for everyone (after the doctor's checkup). He says — with that reservation — you're never too old to run. A friend of his started at age 54, is now 58 and one of the top marathon runners in the world.

Another persuasive advantage to running is the psychological value. According to Jim, you feel better, you sleep better, your depressions are reduced or disappear and, he adds, your sex life improves: "Many people think about their sex lives as being activities separate from the rest of their activities. A running program over a period of time results in your appreciating everything more, making you more sensitive to everything you do. A woman who runs, looks radiantly healthy — and, let's face it, sexier. I see women at races who look tremendously healthy and, it seems, to me, more desirable. "'Actually," he concludes, "everything in your life is affected by running."

With all his enthusiasm, little wonder that Jim Fixx is the man who put running on the map. FW

THE CRAZE COMES TO DANVILLE

Roadrunners lead the way, and neither storm nor dog nor heckler stays their self-appointed jog.

Running is sweeping the country. In Danville, Ill., for instance, a town of 43,000 people about 120 miles south of Chicago, Jean Byram, family editor of The Commercial News, reports that everyone's doing it there, too.

Take Barney Hance. An Illinois state park employee, he has averaged a run of 10 miles a day for nearly seven years. With the Kennekuk Roadrunners, the Indian-named club for runners, of which he is president, he competes in monthly road races.

"People want to get away from the picture of the overweight, lazy, machine-age man," says Hance. "Running is a kind of rebellion against a society gone soft."

Not giving up is what Hance is used to. On one day during last winter's blizzard, he had to run part of his course backwards because of the wind. A half-mile from home, his eyelids froze shut. Once, when his car broke down, he ran to his job, 15 miles away.

But there are jokers and dogs.

"Every runner probably has to contend with drivers 'playing' with him," Hance complains, "swerving a car like they're going to hit you."

Mel Schriefer stares unfriendly dogs down — "eyeball to eyeball. I don't take my eyes off them."

Frank Harris, an ad executive in his 50's, graduated from jogging to running because "I got bored counting laps around the YMCA track."

He now runs every morning in a cemetery where, he says, "I do some of my best thinking."

Kennekuk member Jeff Miller, a high-school teacher and track coach, finds facing his early-morning Spanish class less painful if he runs before school.

"It wakes me up."

Even the hecklers are nicer in the morning, he jokes.

"One guy in a car asked me if I was hungry. Then he threw a jelly roll at me."

HOW TO WIN AN OLYMPIC CROWN

Three athletes tell how they train up to 10 hours a day and crisscross the country testing their abilities — all just for a chance to compete in 1980.

By Frank Bianco

Athletic perfection has a high price tag. Two years before the Olympics crowns the best of the best, hundreds of athletes across the country are mortgaging their lives, hoping they can ultimately cover the cost of one of those crowns.

Though the event only captures public attention every four years, athletes never stop training for it. The ambition transforms them into athletic nomads who travel miles — and sometimes relocate completely — so they can benefit from the best coaches and facilities. They crisscross the nation, testing themselves against competitors who are just as determined and often equally skilled. Here are the stories of three of them

Mark Lineweaver, 26, has devoted his life so completely to training for the decathlon since he graduated from college three years ago, that his wife, Georgia, refers to it as his profession.

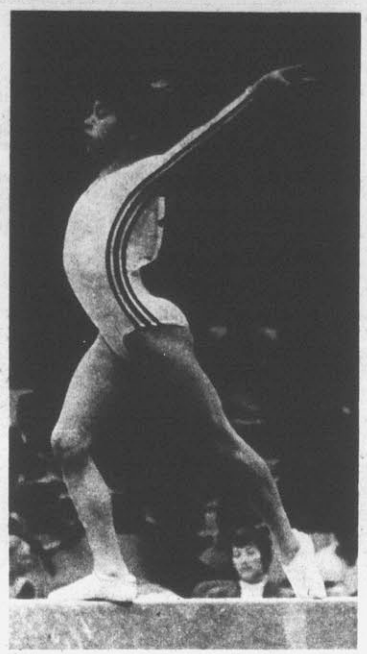

The couple, native New Yorkers, went to Houston in August, 1977, so he could train under the University of Houston's Tom Tellez, one of the nation's best decathlon coaches.

Lineweaver's day begins at 6:00 A.M. with a four-mile run. By the time he crawls wearily into bed at night, he will have trained eight to 10 hours, an all-out effort that can so exhaust him he's unable to fall asleep. Even away from the gym, training monopolizes his attention.

"More than once, I've been waiting on a supermarket line and found people staring at me," he explains. "I'd be concentrating so hard on learning a skill that I'd be rehearsing its movements right there on the line and not even be aware of it."

There are more than a dozen top decathletes currently training for the 1980 Olympics. Only three will go to Moscow. Says Lineweaver: "I'm not down here for the climate. I know there are only three slots on the squad and a lot of guys aiming for them. But, I tell you, nobody's going to be working harder than me."

At 12, Jackie Cassello is the youngest member of U.S. Gymnastics Federation's elite team, the nation's best women gymnasts. She could be the best by 1980 according to Linda Chenchinski, national chairwoman of the USGF.

"There aren't many girls willing to practice seven hours a day, seven days a week," she says. "Jackie will. She's got talent, and she's training under Muriel Grossfeld, a former Olympic gymnast and coach, who's trained more Olympians than anybody else.

"She eats, breathes and sleeps gymnastics," says her mother. "From the first, she preferred practice to parties and would cry inconsolably if we couldn't get her there for some reason."

"You can't always be perfect," Jackie says, "but I'd like to have everything 'under control,' by 1980."

Boxer Clinton Jackson fought his way to the quarter-finals in the 1976 Olympics before losing by a decision. A total of 176 amateur victories, 150 of them by knockouts, and seven national championships, have brought him more than a few offers to turn professional.

"But in boxing it means nothing unless you're an Olympic champion," he says. "They talk now about getting me $1,000 a fight. When I win that medal I'll get 20 times that much."

Jackson, a light middleweight (155 lbs.), recalls washing dishes after grammar-school classes to earn enough to buy two pairs of boxing gloves.

He refers proudly to his right hook as a "stapling machine," a blow that keeps people punched once he connects. He currently hones his technique before and after duty as a Nashville deputy sheriff, and has three wishes: "I wish I could just concentrate on training. I mean to win that medal this time. When I win that medal I'm going to wear it round my neck to show those people who doubted I could do it. And the third wish?

"I always have to watch my weight, and my mother makes the best chocolate pie in the world. Soon as I get home from Moscow, I'm going to sit down and have a pie all to myself." FW

HERE ARE THE NEW JOUSTERS

They charge like knights of old, lances ready, but never for a kill.

By Robert P. Bomboy

Between trumpet flourishes a booming voice calls for the Knight of St. Mark. There is the sound of galloping hoofbeats, and then out of the mists a rider appears. With his steel-tipped lance held level and at the ready, he crouches low over his horse's mane and thunders down the course.

This is a modern-day jousting tournament, a sport that has been practiced continuously, but with little fanfare, in the United States for more than 100 years. Thousands of persons take jousting seriously in Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Louisiana and Georgia, and jousting's Grand National finals are held each October on the grounds of the Washington Monument. Jousting, in fact, is the official state sport in Maryland.

Spear never pierces flesh, however, in modern jousting. Unlike their Arthurian antecedents, today's knights engage one another with lance, mace and sword only as part of the pageantry of mock battles during intermissions in the jousting tournaments. The main event is the Challenge of the Rings.

The rules are simple. Galloping riders must pass under three wooden arches and catch a small metal ring from each on the shining points of their lances. The rings set for the most expert riders are hardly larger than wedding bands.

Jousting's devotees can offer a score of reasons for this offbeat sport's soaring popularity. The tournament is highly competitive, requiring steady nerves and great skill. It is a colorful pastime, steeped in history and ancient pageantry. It is an authentic folk sport, open to young and old, man and woman. And it is nonviolent and virtually immune to the bitter arguments that mark most games.

"In jousting," says one longtime participant, "there are no bad calls by referees, no arguments. Either you spear the ring and bring it back to the judge's stand or you don't. It's the fairest sport I know."

Linda Gouker, 23, who has ridden in jousting tournaments since her 11th birthday, attained professional status — jousting's highest class of expertise — last year. Her husband, David, is a professional, too. "The professional ranking mostly has to do with a rider's skill," she says. "There's not much money in it. The prizes are only $25 or $30."

Money aside, riders like Linda and David compete for the silver-and-gold championship trophies offered at as many as 24 tournaments during a short season that begins in August and ends in October.

Jousting is not an expensive sport. Participants often share horses and fashion their own seven-foot lances, since they can't be bought commercially, and, if costumes exist, they are negligible.

The horses need only be fast enough to cover a 100-yard course in 10 seconds, but they have to be steady, for their riders' attention must be riveted on spearing the tiny hanging rings. Jousters spend months training their mounts to respond to commands rather than the reins. "You really don't control the horse," says curly-haired, mustachioed David Gouker. "The horse runs the course itself." His mount is part quarter horse, part Tennessee walking horse and comes from a line that had been used by earlier jousters.

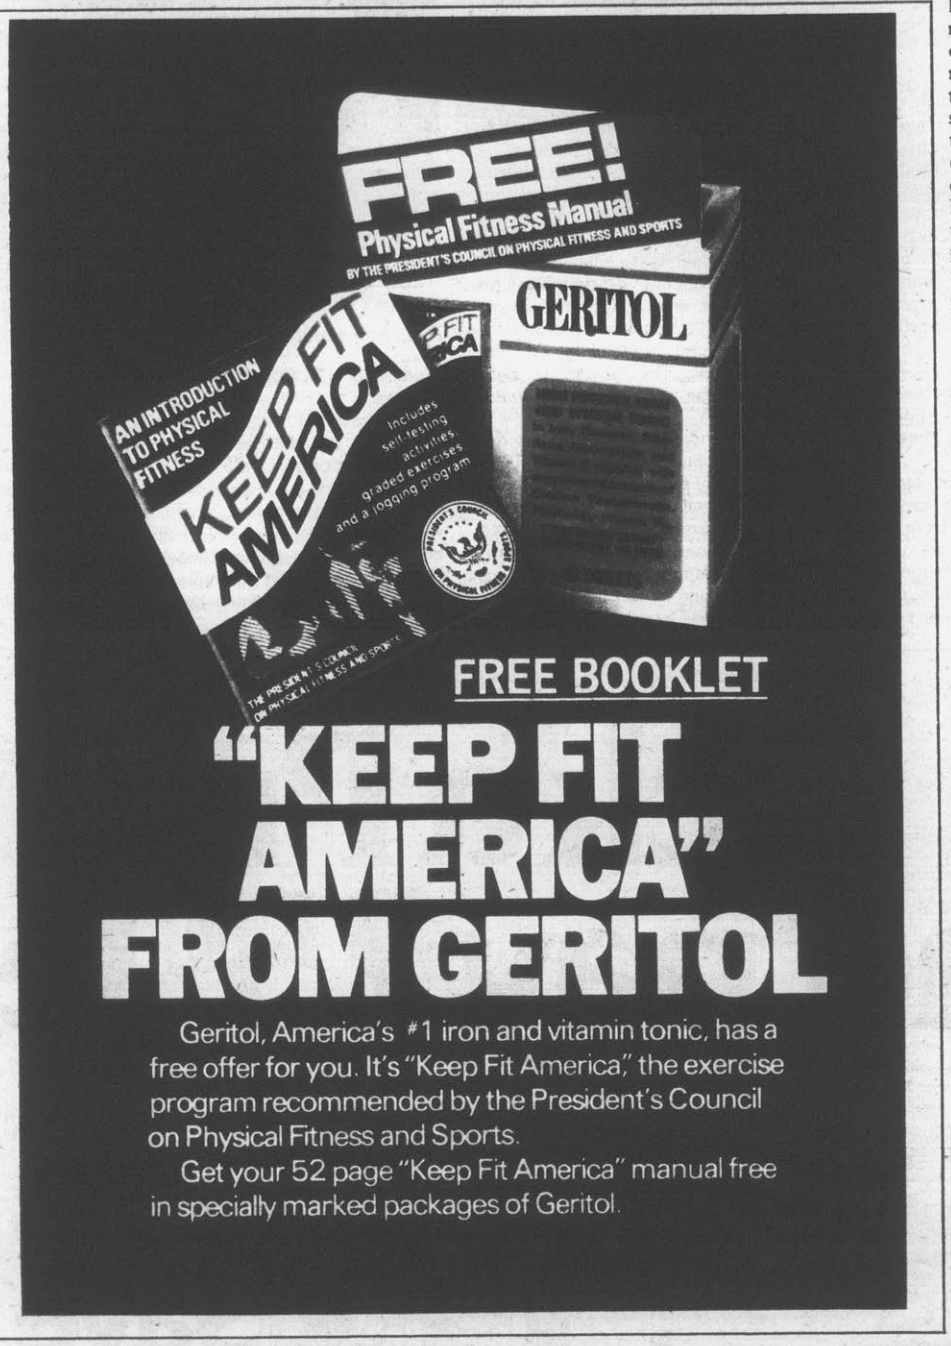

Besides horses and equipment, jousters must provide themselves with a fanciful or heraldic name. At any tournament there may be Lancelots, Gawains and Knights of Fairplay, but there also are calls for the Knight of the Little Red Wagon and the Knight of Egg in the Nest. Linda Gouker competes as the Maid of Misty.

At weekend competitions such as the 102-year-old Dutch Picnic Joust in the tiny village of Smallwood, Md., a few miles south of the Mason-Dixon Line, large crowds appear and national champions compete. The high-school band is on hand, chocolate ice-cream cones are sold, and a traditional Southern-fried chicken and ham dinner can be had for $3.75.

The fans come as much for the pageantry as for the competition — the opening parade of the knights and their ladies, the galloping rides up the sun-dappled course (each to the cry of "Charge! Fair Knight"), and the ceremonial color that follows the competition when the winning knight crowns the tournament's Queen of Love and Beauty, and the female winners honor the men of their choice.

At larger tournaments there are mock combats between knights in papier-mâché helmets and cable-stiched chain mail with wooden swords and cardboard lances.

And even though it's all in fun, a knight or two has found himself flat on the greensward with a bruised ego after the crash of two horses coming together at full tilt. The play-acting has become so realistic, concludes one participant rubbing a painful spot gingerly, that it's "getting to be the main attraction, like half time at football games." FW

How Family Weekly Affected My Life

PATTY WILSON: She's Still Facing The Challenges

Her epileptic disorder doesn't stop Patty from any big running marathon. She's become a national inspiration.

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

Tawny-haired Patty Wilson, 16, runs as if her life depended on it. And in some ways it does.

FAMILY WEEKLY first told Patty's story in an article: Patty Wilson's Magnificent Marathon, by Sheila Cragg, in our September 25, 1977, issue. It told how Patty, who has epilepsy, a disorder marked by recurrent convulsions, ran a 1,300-mile marathon and set a distance record for women.

"The first sparks ignited on the day the article was printed," says author Cragg (whose son also has epilepsy), "with phone calls that poured into the Wilsons from all over the United States." The next day, and for weeks after, the family received letters from people ranging from teenagers to the retired.

One young man wrote from prison to say Patty had inspired him to do something positive with his life. There were touching letters from people with epilepsy and other handicaps and those who wrote to congratulate Patty on her courage.

That was only the beginning of the incredible response to Patty's story in FAMILY WEEKLY. A producer who read the article took it to Universal Studios, which is now planning a two-hour movie on Patty in conjunction with ABC television. Roy Carlisle, an editor at Harper & Row, the publishers, was so inspired by the article that he asked author Cragg to write a book on Patty, which is now in progress.

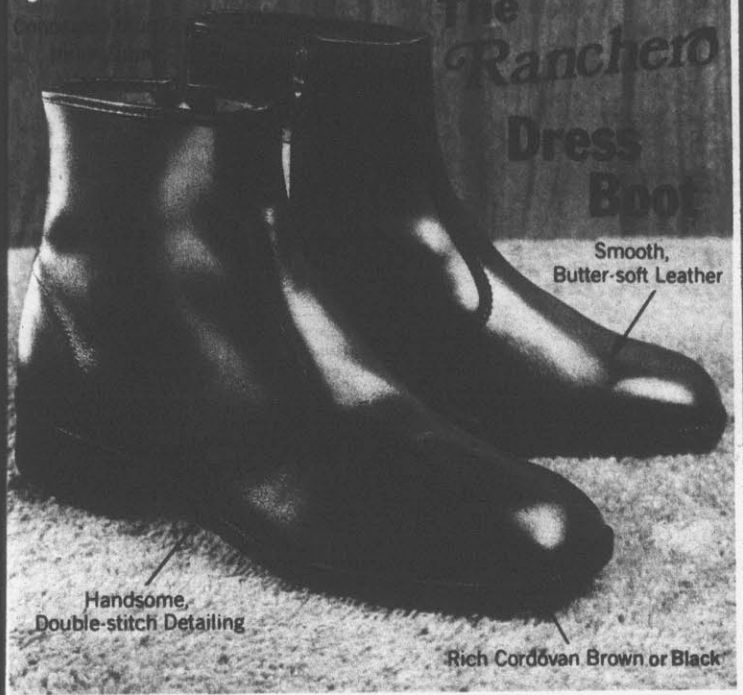

Then requests for permission to reprint the article started coming in. Notably, Reader's Digest ran the story in its April issue. And, because of the courage the article invokes, a textbook company will condense it for 4th-and-7th-grade readers and also convert it into braille and recordings for the blind.

One of the finest accolades came recently with the announcement by the Epilepsy Foundation of America that FAMILY WEEKLY and Sheila Cragg had won its hotly contested Journalism Award for 1977.

"Pied Piper" Patty has continued to run in marathons across the country, wearing her famous T-shirt emblazoned with "Run Patty, Run." Last month, in Minneapolis, she began her 'Super Run for Epilepsy,' a 2,000-mile marathon which will take her through or near more than 50 major population areas in the Midwest and Northeast. Patty's goal is to raise $2 million and try to increase the public's awareness about epilepsy in an attempt to reduce the stigma faced by people having the disorder.

Patty Wilson is a young woman of spunk and determination who has always maintained, "I haven't been stopped because of epilepsy. I never will!" FW

COMMONPLACE VINEGAR ADDS DASH TO ORDINARY DISHES

By Marilyn Hansen

Inventive cooks have been adding a little vinegar to thousands of dishes since prebiblical times.

White distilled vinegar, distilled from grain; apple cider vinegar, from apples; wine vinegar, from wine are the commercially processed products most widely available in America today. Vinegar can be made from a variety of starters, and herb-flavored vinegars are fun to try.

All vinegars are good for cooking. You'll find white distilled vinegar can be used for a sharp distinctive tang, apple cider vinegar adds a milder, slightly fruity, flavor and wine vinegar gives a mellow wine bouquet.

BARBECUED BEEF

4-lb. boneless beef chuck
3 to 4 cups water
1 onion stuck with 2 whole cloves
2 bay leaves
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
½ cup finely chopped onion
2 tablespoons brown sugar
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon dry mustard
1 cup ketchup
2 tablespoons cider or white vinegar
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce

1. Place meat, water, onion and bay leaves in a large, heavy saucepot. Simmer, covered, until tender, about 3 hours.

2. Remove meat and reserve 1 cup of the beef broth. Discard onion and bay leaves. Cool and shred meat; set aside.

3. In the same saucepot in which the meat was cooked, melt butter. Add onion; sauté until tender. Stir in sugar, salt, mustard, ketchup, vinegar, Worcestershire sauce and the reserved 1 cup beef broth. Add shredded beef; mix gently. Simmer, covered, for 30 minutes. Serve on split hamburger buns, rolls or sliced rye, pumpernickel or sourdough bread. Makes 12 servings

COPPER DOLLARS

Boiling water
1 large onion
1 large green pepper
1 cup sugar
1 can (10¾ ozs.) condensed tomato soup
¾ cup cider or white vinegar
½ cup vegetable oil
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
Salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste

1. Peel and slice carrots into ¼-inch thick slices. Place in saucepan, add boiling water to cover and cook 15 minutes, until crisp-tender. Drain and cool.

2. Slice and separate onion into rings; seed green pepper and cut into strips. Combine carrots, onion and pepper in large bowl.

3. In saucepan, combine sugar, soup, vinegar, oil, Worcestershire and mustard. Heat to boiling, stirring, until sugar dissolves. Remove from heat and pour over vegetables; mix well.

4. Divide mixture between two quart jars, cover and refrigerate. Serve cold as a salad relish side dish, alone or over fresh greens. Makes 8 cups

FIVE BEAN SALAD

1 can (16 ozs.) green beans
1 can (16 ozs.) wax beans
1 can (16 ozs.) peas
1 can (16 ozs.) kidney beans
1 can (16 ozs.) garbanzo or lima beans
½ cup chopped cauliflower
½ cup chopped celery
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped green peppers
¼ cup chopped pimiento
1½ cups sugar
½ teaspoon paprika
1 cup cider or white vinegar
½ cup salad oil

1. Drain beans; place beans in a large bowl. Add cauliflower, celery, onion, green pepper and pimiento.

2. Combine sugar, paprika, vinegar and oil. Pour over vegetables; mix well.

3. Cover and refrigerate 12 hours or longer. Makes 2½ quarts

DUTCH SPINACH SALAD

6 cups spinach torn into bite-sized pieces
¼ cup chopped onion
4 slices bacon, diced
¼ cup wine vinegar
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper

1. Place spinach and onion in a large serving bowl; set aside.

2. In a skillet, sauté bacon until crisp. Drain bacon on absorbent paper, crumble.

3. Slowly stir vinegar, sugar, salt and black pepper into bacon drippings. Bring to the boiling point.

4. Slowly pour hot dressing over spinach and onion; add crumbled bacon, toss lightly and serve at once. Makes 4 to 6 portions

VINEGAR PIE

1½ cups sugar
¼ cup butter or margarine, melted
1½ tablespoons cider or white vinegar
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
9-inch unbaked pie shell, frozen, defrosted — a mix or your own

1. Preheat oven to 350°F. In a large mixing bowl, combine eggs, sugar, butter, vinegar and vanilla; mix well. Pour into pie shell.

2. Bake until firm, about 45 to 50 minutes. Cool on a rack. Serve, garnished with chopped nuts or whipped cream, if desired. Makes 9-inch pie

VINEGAR TIPS

1. For a really fluffy meringue, add one-fourth teaspoon of vinegar to three egg whites.

2. If you are scaling fish, first rub vinegar all over the fish. This will make for easier handling and cuts down the fishy odor on your hands, too.

3. A half-cup vinegar added to a gallon of rinse water will eliminate dull soap film from glassware and will make it shine.

4. Vinegar is also great for beer glasses. Always wash them separately and rinse in vinegar water as above.

5. A little vinegar rubbed on your fingers before and after slicing onions will remove the odor of onions quickly.

6. To remove fruit stains from your hands, rub them with a little vinegar and wipe with a cloth.

7. To get the last bit of mayonnaise or salad dressing out of the jar, just dribble a little vinegar into the jar, put the cap on tightly and shake.

1 can Campbell's Beefy Mushroom Soup
1½ cups water
1 can (16 oz.) Chinese vegetables, drained
1 tbsp. each cornstarch, soy sauce
1 tsp. brown sugar

Freeze meat 1 hr. to firm (makes slicing easier); slice in thin strips. In skillet, cook carrot, celery, and onions with ginger in butter until just tender; push to one side. Add meat; cook until color just changes (about 3 to 4 min.). Add remaining ingredients. Cook, stirring until thickened. Serve over cooked rice with additional soy. Makes about 5 cups. M'm! M'm! 'I know why I smoke.'

"There's only one reason I ever smoked. Good taste.

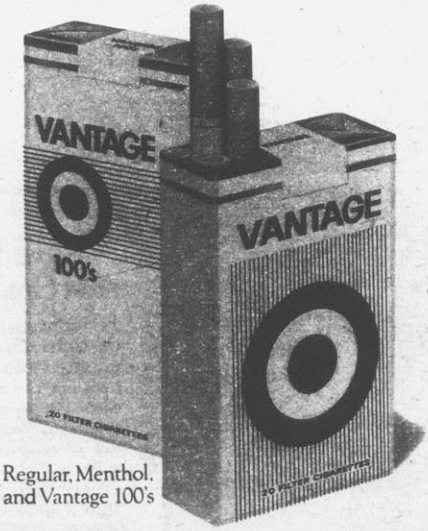

"So when I switched to low tar, I wasn't about to give that up. If you don't smoke for taste what else is there?

"But there was all that talk about tar.

"Unfortunately, most low tar cigarettes tasted like nothing. Then I tried Vantage.

"Vantage gives me the taste I enjoy. And the low tar I've been looking for."

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

Is your inventive ability affected by the people you know? Does it increase your self-esteem?

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT CREATIVITY

Frank Fitzgerald

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Your creative ability is affected by the personalities of your fellow workers and the people you socialize with.
2. Creative endeavor is self-rewarding and automatically increases a person's self-esteem and feeling of worth.
3. Stimulation of the various senses — sight, taste, smell, hearing — can result in "instant creativity."
4. Highly creative people tend to have a common set of traits.
5. Most people have a far greater creative potential than they realize.

ANSWERS

1. True. Studies at the University of Georgia found that "for some high-creative individuals the presence of a low-creative individual stimulated their creative functioning, and for other high-creative individuals the presence of a low-creative individual depressed their creative functioning."

2. True. In some cases this is a fact, but it is not true in others. In psychological studies at the University of Maine it was found that highly creative men have greater self-esteem than women of high creativity or people with minimal creative ability. However, women who were low in creativity were found to have "more positive self-regard than either creative women or non-creative men." It is concluded from the findings that: in the guidance and counseling of creative women special efforts should be made to bolster their self-esteem and to help them in understanding and coping with any feelings of fear and inadequacy they may have.

3. True. To find out what happens in terms of creativity when groups of individuals are exposed to simultaneous stimulation of their sensory processes, a team of behavioral specialists at State University College (Buffalo) exposed 460 subjects to strobe and colored lights (synchronized to music) reflecting in mirrored walls and ceilings to create visual stimulation; an original composition of string and percussion music stereophonically presented through earphones for auditory stimulation; reclining chairs that vibrated for body stimulation; special candy with carbonated centers for gustatory stimulation; and perfumers' oils permeating the air for olfactory stimulation — all occurring simultaneously in a darkened room for a period of 15 minutes. All subjects were given special tests designed to measure creativity before and after exposure to the various stimuli. Result: the majority made significantly better scores on creativity tests after exposure. Conclusion: stimulation of the various senses can — at the very least — be considered to induce behavior related to creativity.

4. True. In research at Brigham Young University, personality characteristics were studied of people who scored high on various creativity dimensions (fluency, mental flexibility, originality and elaboration). Findings: "Those with high profile on these creativity variables were self-confident, venturesome, placid and emotionally stable." Similar studies conducted by investigators from the University of Georgia and Marshall University (W. Va.) further show that people well-endowed with creative ability tend to be inquisitive, with an insatiable curiosity about a wide variety of things, remember well, feel strong emotions, are self-assertive, energetic, receptive to ideas of others, courageous in convictions and truthful even when it gets them into trouble.

5. True. Most people have untapped creative powers that are never used because they are unrealized. Often a person simply has never thought of himself as creative, and that forms a mental pattern that inhibits him from even trying to explore his creative potential. On occasion, some special circumstance may arise that forces him to tap his unrealized potential in order to save the situation. This characteristic of dormant creativity has been demonstrated by studies conducted at the Moscow (USSR) Psychoneurological Clinic, where success has been achieved "in enhancing creativity in drawing, playing piano, solving mathematical problems and performing other tests." In this case, the results have been achieved not by some situational factor jolting the individual into awareness of his creative ability but by hypnotizing the subject and convincing him while under hypnosis that he possesses creative powers he can call on at will. This procedure, it was found, "mobilizes potentialities that may often be completely unknown to the person." FW

THE TRUTH ABOUT PRESCRIPTION EYEGLASSES

If you own prescription eyeglasses, you've been getting unfair treatment. You've been paying much too much!

Harsh words, but true. That's what the FTC Bureau of Consumer Protection says. That's what distinguished Senators and consumer experts say. And that's what your own common sense says.

You know the price you paid for your prescription eyeglasses... $50, $60, even $90. Terribly high. And getting higher all the time.

Why those high prices?
The reason is simple. The people who have been selling eyeglasses have kept you in the dark. You have been screened by laws that prohibit advertising eyeglass prices!

If you can't shop, you can't compare. This causes "prices for prescription eyeglasses to be maintained at artificially high levels," says the Bureau of Consumer Protection.* In other words, you pay too much!

Time for a change.
It's high time someone did something about this situation. As a buyer of prescription eyeglasses, you deserve better treatment.

The laws have changed at last. And the NATIONAL EYEGLASS SERVICE is doing something—now.

You can now buy first quality prescription eyeglasses—from the National Eyeglass Service—at a fair price.

Believe it or not, that price is only $29.99 for single focus glasses. You can have bifocals, trifocals, and sunglass tints for a very small additional charge. Men's or women's, your choice of 17 different frames... whatever you select, you get the lowest possible price!

No compromise.
Make no mistake, these are the finest prescription eyeglasses available. They are made precisely to your doctor's prescription. They are exactly the quality you would get from better optometrists or opticians. Lenses of ophthalmic crown glass. Handsome fashion frames that are sturdy and comfortable, made by America's leading manufacturers.

How it is done.
This low price is possible because the excess profit has been removed. There is no retail store or fancy office overhead to pay. There is no display of several hundred useless frame styles to confuse you. You get a tremendous value. You pay as little as $29.99 for top quality.

Buying by mail.
Don't be fooled by all the professional mumbo-jumbo surrounding the purchase of eyeglasses. To do the job, we need only your prescription and a couple of very simple measurements. When you write us we will explain how to give us that information easily.

You'll receive your glasses very promptly, by first class mail. You'll see that they are as perfect as you can buy anywhere, and as comfortable as can be. We absolutely guarantee their quality and fit. You must be satisfied or your money will be refunded without a quibble.

Act now!
If you need new glasses, replacement glasses, or an extra pair for extra uses, mail us the coupon below. You won't pay those high prices any more!

ANYONE-CAN-DO-IT DECORATIVE PROJECTS

You'll be amazed how easy it is to get artistic results like these.

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

Using empty wine bottles as candle molds, mixing glues to make string, paper and fabric as hard as a rock and turning paper plates into rich-looking decorative accessories—these are just a few craft techniques easily acquired.

Bottle-shaped candles are conversation pieces when they are decorated with the bottle labels—which can be removed from the glass, with a vinegar solution.

Dolls that look like "china," globe ornaments and animal shapes can be made from paper with a special hardening solution you can mix with glue. The solution also can be applied to string and yarn for wrapping jars, bottles and other objects to give them interesting, textured surfaces.

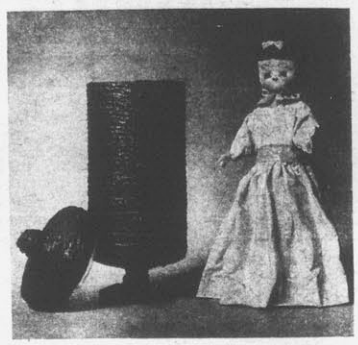

Designs on paper napkins can be transferred onto paper plates and other surfaces and made to "glow" by adding a coating of sugar beads.

These are three projects included in FAMILY WEEKLY'S new leaflet. It also describes how to turn fresh leaves into delicate angel feathers, how to treat pine cones so they burn in the fireplace in bright colors, make a decorative crackle finish with egg shells and make your candles dripless.

To order FAMILY WEEKLY's "Decorating-Magic Formulas" leaflet No. 312, send $1 for each copy to:

FAMILY WEEKLY MAGAZINE
P.O. BOX 438-N
MIDTOWN STATION
NEW YORK, N.Y. 10018

Be sure to include the leaflet number and your name, address and zip code. (New York State residents add sales tax.)

A solution made from glue and other household ingredients causes fabric, paper and yarn to become rock-hard. It can be used to make "china" dolls or add interesting texture to almost any surface.

Bottles can be used as molds for candles, with the bottle label used as decoration on the candle.

Accessories, such as paper plates and glass jars, take on a new look when they are spruced up with designs from paper napkins, then coated with sugar beads. The beads give them a glowing appearance.

MONEY

You Get A Tax Break If You Travel From Job To Job

Commuters need no reminder that the cost of traveling between home and job is an expense that cannot be deducted from their Federal income tax. But few people are aware that traveling from job to job is another story. If you work at two different places, you can deduct any unreimbursed cost of travel from one location to the other.

Simply keep a record of your fares and deduct them as travel expenses. If you use your own auto for your between-job commuting, you have a choice of two options on handling the expenses.

The first is that you can claim the actual operating expenses you incur while driving from job to job. These include gas, oil, repairs, license tags, insurance and depreciation.

The second is that you can make the paperwork simpler by using a standard rate of 17 cents a mile for the first 15,000 miles of business driving (10 cents a mile for the excess over 15,000).

In either case, you can also claim parking fees and tolls.

The Internal Revenue Service requires that you be able to substantiate that you actually drove the distance you claim in order to receive this standard-mileage form of deduction. So it's a good idea to keep a glove-compartment notebook in which you record this information, plus parking fees and tolls. (Note, however, that the standard deduction is only seven cents per mile when you use your auto to do volunteer work for charitable organizations or to get medical care.)

Whether you go by train, subway, bus or private car, keep in mind that the trip from that second location back home is nondeductible commuting, as is the cost of transportation between your home and a part-time weekend job.

JOBMANSHIP

Executives Take Risks — Can You?

You may dream of starting your own business some day or of leaving your routine job for a higher-risk, higher-potential position. But do you have the personality and temperament to do so?

To help you find out what kind of business-and-job personality you have, the United States Small Business Administration (SBA) has a self-rating questionnaire dealing with characteristics that are needed to be successful in risk-taking ventures. To test your responsibility attitude, the questionnaire asks you to choose one of the following: 1. "I like to take charge of things and see them through." 2. "I'll take over if I have to, but I'd rather let someone else be responsible." 3. "There's always some eager beaver around wanting to show how smart he is; I say let him." If you select No. 1, then you have the entrepreneur attitude. But if you choose No. 3, better keep working for someone else.

You can obtain the detailed SBA self-rating Checklist For Going Into Business, Small Marketers Aid #71 (free). Write: SBA, 1441 L Street N.W., Washington, D.C. 20416.

Bring Your Family History to Life

Your ancestors may be more interesting than you think says Leon J. Stout, senior asst. librarian at Penn State. Stout, who has assisted many genealogical researchers at the university, is convinced that most tracers of family history never go beyond the "bare bones" of names, dates, facts and figures with the result that the family history is "about as interesting as a telephone directory."

But, Stout says, you can bring your family history to life if you "flesh out" your ancestors by putting them in the historical context of the place and time in which they lived.

According to Stout, your town librarian can probably steer you to a number of specific histories available to anyone that will let you investigate how life was when your ancestors were alive. "If you know your ancestors' occupations, religion, when they lived and where, with some digging, you can make generalizations about their lives," he says.

Stress High Among Health Workers

Working in the health-care field may be hazardous to your mental health, reports a recent Government study by the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health. It found that among mental-health disorders in workers in 130 occupations, 6 of the occupations with the highest rate of admissions are in the hospital/health care field.

One possible explanation for the high rates is that health-related workers may be more likely to report mental-health disorders because of a heightened sensitivity to and acceptance of emotional disorders. But another is that these workers don't have decision-making powers over their own production, unlike physicians — who, as a group, were rated relatively unstressed.

Help Children Overcome Fears

How can you help your child overcome his fears? The first step, says clinical psychologist Dr. Benjamin B. Wolman, is to avoid being unduly alarmed — many common fears are a natural part of the child's development and will pass as he matures. For example, Dr. Wolman, author of the book Children's Fears, believes that at the end of the child's first year he will develop a fear of strangers as a result of his new ability to distinguish between people he knows and doesn't recognize.

Some of the child's fears, such as fear of fire, are realistic and should not be made light of Dr. Wolman says. Other fears may be irrational. But whatever the fear, Dr. Wolman cautions, it's important for parents to keep certain do's and don't's in mind: "Never ignore or dismiss the child's fear. Don't punish the child for being afraid, and never threaten the child with abandonment — that's the worst fear of all. Don't force the child into a situation he fears. Don't overprotect the child and make him feel helpless.

It's important to build the child's faith in himself and his abilities, Wolman stresses. "Praise his achievements, but without exaggeration." He advises listening patiently to the child and showing understanding of his fears, whenever possible trying to explain that there is really nothing to be afraid of.

"Keep the channels of communication open," Wolman concludes. "Whatever the child's fear, he'll feel better knowing someone is with him.

Pet Allergies

Are you allergic to your pet? If you're asthmatic, have migraine headaches or your eyes tear, the answer may be yes says Dr. Hank Newbold. Dr. Newbold, a New York physician, observes that many people are highly allergic to their pets, particularly cats, and may develop a variety of symptoms including sneezing, coughing and tiredness just by being in contact with them.

Some people may be allergic to one animal and not to another Newbold points out. He says that poodles and other dogs with wiry hair are less likely to trigger allergic reactions than other types of dogs or cats, which are the worst offenders.

Newbold advocates trying to stimulate allergic symptoms by cuddling the pet and holding it close to see whether you are allergic to it. But he cautions that some people who think they are allergic to a puppy are actually allergic to the animal's bedding or the newspaper used to train it. To find out whether this is the case, he advises washing the animal several times in a hypoallergenic shampoo.

If you suspect you're allergic to a family pet, Newbold suggests you board the animal for a week or two (perhaps during your vacation). Then when the pet comes home, fondle and cuddle it and see how you react.

Quick Takes

Treadmill stress tests for heart diseases may not be as accurate as generally thought says Medical Letter, a newsletter for physicians. The publication cites a study which found that 30-60% of men who had no symptoms of clogged arteries except a positive stress test were found to be free of heart disease. Erroneous test results such as these can cause psychological problems and lead to unnecessary physical restrictions, physicians warn.

Rape cases are often avoided by prosecutors due to low conviction rates and a feeling that they "aren't good for one's career" says a two-year study financed by the Justice Department. The study reports that only 1 of every 4 rape complaints results in an arrest, and just 1 in 60 leads to a conviction.

It's getting harder to claim a college degree you don't have says UCLA registrar Stanley Chin. According to Chin, more employers than ever are checking up on degree claims as a result of media accounts exposing diploma "mills" and "services" selling worthless degrees. Chin says that inquiries requesting verification of degree claims have increased by more than 10% since a network television expose of phony degrees.

STEVE CANYON

by MILTON CANIFF

POTEET CANYON IS BACK ON THE MAUMEE UNIVERSITY CAMPUS — TO LEARN WHY THE SURGE OF VIOLENCE AND HATE IN COLLEGE ATHLETICS CROWDS....

A JUNIOR COLLEGE TRANSFER STUDENT HAS BECOME A FOCUS FOR A WAVE OF VICIOUS PARTISANSHIP

HEY! YOU'RE SMILING! LET'S HAVE A LOUD—

KILL! KILL! OLENTANGY TECH!

AT FIRST THE MAUMEE KIDS LAUGH HIM OFF...

HOT DOG STUFF

MICKEY SCHMICKEY

SHOW BOAT

MAUMEE 6

THEN BUMPER STICKERS TURN UP — TO THE OWNERS' SURPRISE — BUT FEW ARE REMOVED...

UP YOUR OLENTANGY

A 'HOT' STORY HITS THE CAMPUS, THAT THE MAUMEE DEBATING TEAM HAD BEEN PELTED WITH ROTTEN EGGS DURING A TRIP TO TECH....

LISTEN! I WAS THERE! IT DIDN'T HAPPEN!

SHAD-UP, BI-FO

I HEAR IT WAS AWFUL..

AFTER WHICH THE RAH-RAH BOY BEGINS TO GET A RESPONSE FROM THE 'COOL' MAUMEE LUNCH-BREAK CROWDS...

THEN, JUST BEFORE DAWN ON GAME DAY, THE CONTENTS OF A GARBAGE TRUCK ARE STREWN THE LENGTH OF THE MAUMEE LONG WALK...

MAUMEE IS A DUMP! — GO TECH

GO TECH

MAUMEE

HOW DOES IT GO?

BEAUTIFUL! IT WOULD HAVE BEEN A 10-7 SCORE = NOW YOU CAN EXPECT A 40-POINT SPREAD!

BUT AT KICKOFF TIME, PRESIDENT BENN OF MAUMEE U. WALKS TO MIDFIELD WITH THE REFEREE AND SAYS =

NO ONE WISHES TO WIN THIS GAME MORE THAN I — BUT — IF MAUMEE STUDENTS COMMIT ONE ACT OF ROWDYISM TOWARD OUR OLENTANGY VISITORS...

...I HAVE INSTRUCTED REFEREE HULL THAT I, AS PRESIDENT OF MAUMEE, DECLARE THIS GAME FORFEITED TO OLENTANGY!
