U.S. Economists Cheered By August Trade Deficit Decline

By MICHAEL DOAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's trade deficit fell to $1.62 billion in August, an encouraging sign for the nation's economic outlook.

The government said today. The August deficit followed a $2.99-billion trade gap in July and was the second smallest of the year. The reduced deficit was encouraging to economists who fear that trade problems are contributing to inflation in this country in reducing the value of the dollar overseas. The improvement came at a good time for U.S.

economic officials, who have been telling world monetary officials meeting in Washington of the prospects for improvement in U.S. trade.

On Tuesday, President Carter announced a new program to stimulate trade by promoting exports overseas.

The United States increased its exports in August by 5.7 percent to a record $12.47 billion, with the biggest gains in food and airplanes.

Imports dropped by 4.7 percent to $14.09 billion as Americans bought fewer foreign shoes, automobiles and other manufactured goods.

Imported oil continued to be a big problem, however. The Carter administration says nearly all of the U.S. trade gap can be attributed to purchases of oil from Middle East countries.

Oil imports rose $209 million in August to $3.35 billion after declining the previous month.

Despite the overall trade improvement in August, it appeared likely that the trade deficit for the year will surpass the $26.5 billion record in 1977.

So far this year, the United States has purchased $20.98 billion more than it has sold abroad. The trade deficit has been larger than the August figure in every month except June, when it was $1.6 billion.

In his announcement Tuesday, the president outlined what he said were the first steps to get U.S. businesses to start promoting their products abroad.

"Our export problem has been building for many years and we cannot expect dramatic improvement overnight," Carter said in a statement. "Increasing exports will take time, and require a sustained effort."

If the plan works, the president said, the economy will grow, new jobs will be created, the dollar will become stronger and inflation will be curbed.

The program involves loans to exporters and easing of some of the environmental and legal restrictions exporters face.

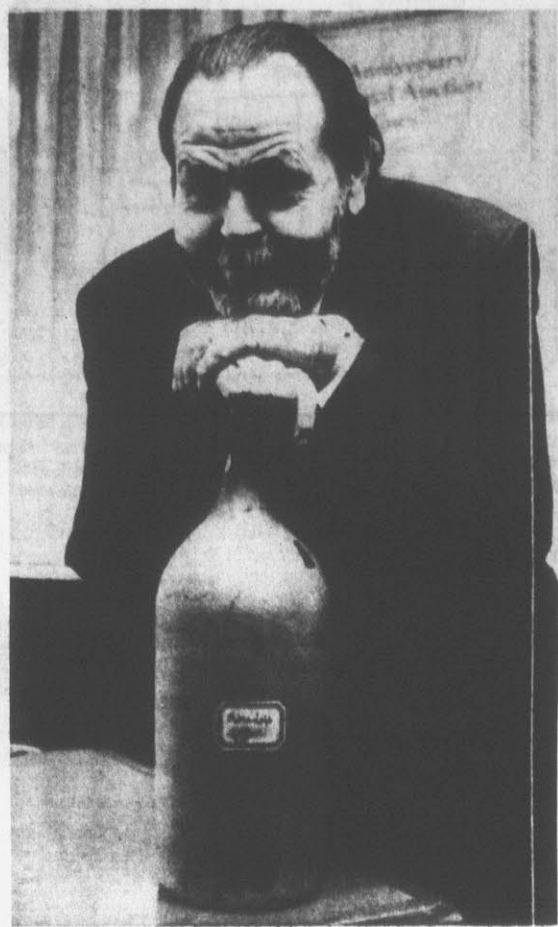

The U.S. trade deficit this year is already ahead of the record year of 1978, but Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal held out hope Tuesday that it will improve.

In a speech to world monetary officials, Blumenthal pointed to progress in Congress over energy legislation and increasing ability of foreigners to buy U.S. products.

"I am confident that these efforts, combined with the slowing of the U.S. economy and more satisfactory growth worldwide, will substantially reduce our current account deficit by perhaps as much as 30 to 40 percent from current levels," he said.

He said it will be critical for the United States to control inflation. The Labor Department said Tuesday that consumer prices rose 0.6 percent in August, higher than the 0.5 percent mark in July, but still well below the rates recorded earlier in the year.

Government economists were encouraged that food prices were stable. However, medical and housing costs continued to rise.

$18,000 GAMBLE — John Grisanti of Memphis, Tenn., poses with the Jeroobam of Chateau Lafite 1864 for which he paid $18,000 at an Atlanta, Ga. auction and took delivery on Tuesday in East Hartford, Conn. Grisanti, who owns a restaurant in Memphis, will open the wine at a dinner in Memphis Oct. 28, which will benefit St. Jude's Hospital. At the dinner will be 30 invited guests who will pay $1,500 apiece to attend and sample the wine. Grisanti says that there is no way of knowing whether the wine is still good until he opens it for his guests. (AP Laserphoto)

Possibly A Third Aircraft In Area Of Collision Scene

By STEVE FOX
Associated Press Writer
SAN DIEGO (AP) — A second light plane may have played a part in Monday's collision of an airliner and single-engine plane, perhaps confusing the airline pilot who "may have thought he was past the aircraft he actually collided with," a federal inspector says.

At least 150 people were killed when the Pacific Southwest Airlines jet and Cessna 172 crashed into a residential area. It was the nation's worst air disaster.

Phillip Hogue of the National Transportation Safety Board said that a twin-engine plane may have played a part in the disaster.

But Hogue emphasized Tuesday that investigators were nowhere near fixing blame for the crash.

"The only conflict I have at this moment is to determine if the PSA pilot saw the aircraft he collided with," Hogue said. "Did he see a third aircraft out there or did he see any aircraft at all?"

Hogue also said that the PSA Boeing 727 and Cessna were being controlled by the Lindbergh Field tower on the same radio frequency, contrary to testimony in Washington on Tuesday by Elwood Driver, acting chairman of the safety board. He said Driver might have received wrong information before testifying the planes were talking to different towers on different frequencies.

The small plane was practicing instrument landings and the jet was descending for a landing when they collided.

"It was virtually head-on," Hogue said of the crash.

Hogue said pilot James McFeron, 45, calmly reported his jet was going down as it plunged into the North Park neighborhood three miles from the airport. "We're going in," Hogue quoted McFeron as telling the tower in a soft voice.

The death toll included 135 aboard the jetliner, two in the Cessna and at least 13 on the ground killed by chunks of metal and bodies cascading down on the neighborhood. At least nine people were injured.

Hogue said McFeron, a 17-year veteran of the airline, may not have been aware of the single-engine Cessna 172. "He may have thought he was past the aircraft he actually collided with,"

Hogue said McFeron might have been confused.

"Listening to the tower, it's apparent that the twin-engine plane was making its approach," he said. "They had made their approach before the single-engine one. The pilot said, 'We've passed,' but we're unsure what plane he was referring to. The pilot probably was confused."

He said the pilot of the third plane had not been located but that investigators planned to study communications tapes in an attempt to learn the craft's registration number.

Hogue marveled at McFeron's "calm statement that he was going down."

"I cannot begin to account for it," he said. "Because when that airplane was hit, it had to be a matter that was understood in the cockpit."

Price Change

Home delivery and Sunday edition prices for "The Daily Reflector" will increase October 1, according to Circulation Manager B. R. Hardee.

The new home delivery rate will be $3.50 per month, while the single copy Sunday price will increase to 35-cents.

The single copy daily price of 15-cents will remain unchanged, Hardee said.

The October 1 price change is the first increase since the 15-cents daily price, the 30-cents Sunday edition, and the $3 per month home delivery charge were set in July 1975.

Hardee said the rate increase is the result of rising costs of newsprint and other materials used in the publication of the newspaper.

Vows To Lower 'Legal Boom'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — HEW Secretary Joseph Califano Jr. says his department is forming "crackdown teams" to lower the legal boom on "notorious doctors" who use forged Medicaid forms to prescribe drugs to pushers.

Califano told the Commonwealth Club that Health, Education and Welfare Department fraud units are being set up in 16 states which accounted for 62 percent of Medicaid payments in 1977.

Begin's Party Split But Knesset's OK Expected

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer
JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin's party is badly split over his agreement to abandon the Jewish settlements in the Sinai Desert if Egypt makes peace with Israel, but the Knesset is expected to endorse the Camp David agreements overwhelmingly today.

With leftist opposition parties supporting the accords, analysts predicted 75-90 of the 120 members of the Knesset, the Israeli Parliament, would vote in favor of them.

Begin met Tuesday with the powerful Foreign Affairs and Security Committee and with Knesset members of his own Likud Party. He told them the Camp David negotiations nearly collapsed over the settlement issue until he decided that "peace is preferable to the settlements," but he failed to win over militant opponents of the accords.

One Likud member, Yosef Rom, complained that the decision to dismantle the settlements was made "as a result of an ultimatum. Peace reached by surrender to this kind of dictate cannot hold up."

The Laam faction of the Likud, which holds eight of the party's 45 Knesset seats and two places in the cabinet, planned to vote against the accords or abstain. Education Minister Zvulun Hammer, a member of the National Religious Party, reportedly was considering voting for the accords and then resigning to avoid the accusation that he backed Begin only to retain his cabinet post.

Political analysts said the depth of the adverse reaction within Begin's power base could spell trouble for him in the future, but he still has a sizable majority and does not have to face elections until 1981.

Diplomatic sources said U.S. officials were seeking support for the Camp David agreements among Palestinians in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River, but the initial reaction was negative.

The accords envision the end of Israel's 11-year military occupation and self-government for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. But most Palestinians demand an independent state, and Israel rejects that.

The sources said the Americans believed that respected Palestinians, including some nationalist leaders who publicly condemn the accords, would cooperate and come forward to be candidates for the administrative council that is planned.

The sources said many Palestinians privately believe the Camp David accords provide the only realistic chance of ending the Israeli military government.

County Court House Among The Deficients

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Court House, like so many others in North Carolina, is in need of minor repairs, has only a fair public access rating for major activities within the building, and is rated practically inaccessible to the handicapped.

Likewise, court houses in Greene and Martin Counties are in need of repair and have low accessibility ratings.

Those points and others were contained in a report of a three-year study of courthouse facilities in North Carolina, carried out by the School of Design at North Carolina State University for the Administrative Office of the Courts.

The two-volume, 850 page report, liberally sprinkled with photographs and sketches, rated only 18 of the state's courthouses adequate to excellent and six counties in the East — including Martin — are in immediate need of new buildings.

The Pitt County facility was listed 44th among the court facilities in the state in overall physical condition and 55th in public access rating (with a score of 3.75 — three is fair, four is adequate, five is excellent). The building ranked 45th (tied) for handicapped access, with a score of 1.80 (one is very poor, two is poor, three is fair), along with 55 other with a very poor rating.

According to the report, the 1911 building and an annex added in 1965 contain about 41,000 square feet of usable space, of which 17,829 square feet are now being used for judicial functions. The report indicates that some 27,746 square feet are needed at the present time.

The study recommends that selected non-judicial functions now located in the facility be relocated to other facilities and 15,500 square feet be renovated at an estimated cost of $280,000 to provide space for judicial needs through 1985 (when an estimated 33,290 square feet will be needed), and later, relocate other non-judicial offices and renovate to provide the 37,200 square feet projected for the year 2000.

The study noted that if court facilities in Ayden and Farmville are considered satisfactory and are retained, recommended relocations and renovations could (Continued on page 16)

Deadline Near

Pitt Board of Elections supervisor Margaret Register reminded citizens of the county that the deadline for voters to register for the Nov. 7 general election is drawing close.

Miss Register said that citizens who have not yet registered have until 5 p.m. on Monday, Oct. 9 to get their names on the books.

She explained that under the Uniform Election Law of North Carolina, when a person registers once with the county, he is eligible to vote in all elections.

New residents of the county who have not registered, as well as persons who have changed their names and addresses since the last election, she reported, should make sure they are properly registered.

People who have had name or address changes need to fill out a short form that insures they are now registered in the precinct in which they live, the supervisor added. Persons who did not vote in the last general election should check to see if their names are still on the books.

FAIR EXHIBIT HALL — Pitt County Fair manager Sam Winchester talks to Art Pitzer, manager of the North Carolina State Fair, in the exhibit hall at the fair's new location on northeast

Greenville Boulevard at the Rams Horn Road intersection. The exhibit hall at the new 33-acre site provides space for about 70 booths. A livestock building is planned for the future. The new site is more than twice as large as the 14-acre site on the Airport Road used for the past 25 years.

Not Utilizing Ports In N.C.

Morgan Eases Path To Anti-Smuggling Law

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A State Ports Authority report shows that North Carolina produces almost twice the value of goods for shipment out of state than Virginia or South Carolina do, but that ports in those states ship six times the cargo loaded at North Carolina ports.

The report concludes that instead of shipping millions of dollars worth of merchandise out Charleston, S.C., and Norfolk, Va., the goods should be shipped from Wilmington and Morehead City.

The SPA has added the report to the evidence it hopes will justify its request for $14.5 million for major expansion of the Wilmington facility.

The report shows that in 1976, North Carolina produced goods for export worth more than $2 billion, but that only 36.2 percent was shipped from North Carolina ports.

North Carolina also shipped more goods to other states in 1976 than South Carolina or Virginia.

But Norfolk shipped products valued at $4.67 billion in 1976. Charleston shipped $1.34 billion worth of cargo. North Carolina ports shipped only $800 million in goods.

WASHINGTON — Sen. Robert B. Morgan, D-N.C., removed a legislative roadblock in the path of a cigarette smuggling bill Tuesday when he agreed to a compromise measure worked out by Senate aides.

The bill would make cigarette smuggling a federal crime.

Morgan said he expected the bill, altered substantially in the deal, to be passed quickly by the Senate and to become law by the end of the current session of Congress.

The House will vote on a similar bill soon.

Aides to the bill's sponsors — Sens. Henry L. Bellmon, R-Okla., and Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass. — had bargained for weeks with Morgan aide Alfred Pollard to reach a compromise on the bill, which Morgan had blocked through technical maneuvers.

The smuggling bills are designed to cut into the multi-million dollar cigarette smuggling trade.

The Morgan compromise also limits the kinds of records the secretary of the treasury could require cigarette wholesalers to keep and stipulates that violators must "knowingly" break the law to be guilty.

Morgan said his biggest concern about the original bill had been the record-keeping provision, which he said could have been written so freely as to "impose a burden" on honest cigarette dealers.

The Senate measure calls for prison terms and fines of up to five years and or $100,000 fines. The House bill calls for penalties of two years and $10,000 fines.

WEATHER FORECAST — Warm weather is expected in the forecast period until Thursday morning, from the central Rockies through the southern tier of states to Florida. Weather is expected to be cooler from the Northwest to the upper Great Lakes and mild along the Atlantic coast states. Rain is due from the eastern Gulf to the Tennessee Valley. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press

A cool northeast wind flow prevailed over North Carolina today, promising more fall temperatures. Meanwhile, a high pressure system off the New England coast was moving further offshore, heralding a wind shift to east and southeasterly.

Today's high readings were expected to range from the 60s in the northwest mountains to the low 80s in the southeast portion of the state. Thursday's temperatures may be slightly warmer with the change in winds.

Another cold front will be approaching the northwest portion of the state late Thursday and with it will come the threat of showers.

Temperatures ranged generally in the 70s around the state Tuesday, although some mountain spots got no higher than the 60s and the coast had some readings in the low 80s. Wilmington recorded a high for the day of 82 degrees.

Little Change In Farmville Mart Leaf Prices

FARMVILLE — Grade for grade, prices on the Farmville tobacco market yesterday were approximately the same as on Monday, according to Louis Williams, sales supervisor of the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade.

A large volume of low-grade cutters, lugs and primings were responsible for a small decline in average from Monday's average. Top practical price was $1.60 a pound. Highest price paid by a company was $1.65 per pound. Stabilization receipts were .65 percent of gross sales.

The market sold 607,013 pounds for $899,202, for an average of $148.14 per hundred pounds. This compares with $125.88 on the same sale date last year. To date, the market has sold 20,171,458 pounds for $27,790,663, for a season average of $137.77. This compares with $117.86 at the same point in the sales season last year.

Police List 3 Accidents

An estimated $7,200 property damage resulted from three traffic mishaps investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Officers reported an estimated $3,000 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in an 8:18 p.m. collision at the intersection of Memorial Drive and N.C. 33.

Drivers of the vehicles were identified as Oscar Lee Davis of 107 Trent Cir., and Alma Patrick Freeman of Winterville.

Police noted that both drivers and a passenger in the Freeman vehicle were taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment of minor injuries and then released.

A car driven by Austin Cullen Daniels of 203 Woodside Dr. collided with a parked car owned by Lena House Brown of 413 Bonners Ln. about 11:58 a.m. on Kennedy Circle, 75 feet East of the Bradley Street intersection, according to investigators, causing an estimated $200 damage to the Daniels car and $600 damage to the Brown vehicle.

Police reported $200 damage resulted to each of two trucks involved in a 4:44 p.m. collision at the intersection of Skinner Street and Dickinson Avenue.

Drivers of the vehicles were listed as Kerby Junior McLawhorn of 120 Corbett St. and Melvin Douglas Spell of 1806 West Conley St.

Gunman Robs A Restaurant

A man, armed with a pistol, took a small amount of money from the Pizza Inn on Greenville Boulevard in an 11:30 p.m. robbery last night, according to Police Chief Glenn Cannon.

Cannon said the man entered the restaurant, ordered a drink, then pulled the gun and demanded money from the cashier.

Greenville officers, assisted by members of the North Carolina Highway Patrol, the Pitt County Sheriff's Department and dogs from the North Carolina Department of Corrections, searched the area until about 1:30 a.m. for the man, who fled on foot, but with no success.

Cannon said investigation of the incident is continuing.

Neighborhood Meet Planned Thursday

A neighborhood meeting will be held in the South Evans section on Thursday night for residents living in the area formerly designated as the site for the new Public Works facility.

Joe Laney, the city's Community Development task force director, said that the purpose of the meeting is to make sure that the residents of the area understand that the proposed facility will not be located in the area as anticipated.

Laney noted that the area generally extends from Pitt Street to Seaboard Coast Line Railroad and from 11th to 14th Streets.

According to the CD director, the meeting is also being held in order to solicit the ideas of citizens of the neighborhood concerning reuse possibilities and improvements as a means of making the area a better place in which to reside.

The city is looking at the reuse possibilities in the area, he said, and is considering both the residential character and industrial uses.

Laney said that no changes are anticipated in the entire east end of the neighborhood from Pitt Street east, which has been designated for retention as a residential section, brought about by a concentrated housing rehabilitation program.

In addition, no changes are considered in the original plan to widen 14th Street through the project area, he added.

Representatives from the city's Planning Department and Redevelopment Commission will be on hand for the 7:30 p.m. meeting at Cornerstone Baptist Church at 13th Street and the railroad.

Timely Reminder From Reader

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: This evening while working in my yard, I noticed the very pretty little neighbor girl—about 6, wandering up and down the street in nothing but her panties.

A few months ago I saw this same little girl and her older brother struggling to get a heavy band instrument from the bus stop (three blocks away) to their home, so I stopped and offered to drive them to their home. They accepted gladly. I assumed they knew me. Once in the car it became apparent that I was a stranger to them!

Abby, please remind parents that it is their duty to instruct their children never, never to get into a car with a stranger.

DEWY, OK., MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Thanks for a timely reminder.

DEAR ABBY: Who should pay for what in a live-in type relationship?

The female is divorced, has two children and is on welfare. The male is well-to-do, with a good steady job. Should the rent and food expenses be divided?

In this case the guy pays no rent and is living in her home. THE FEMALE

DEAR FEMALE: In any kind of relationship, the assets, liabilities and responsibilities should be shared 50-50. And if you're the female living on welfare, you (and the taxpayers) are supporting the guy who's living with you.

You might consider living with this free-loading, well-to-do creep just long enough to confirm a common law status (under recent court decision), and then sock it to him!

DEAR ABBY: You answer to that 16-year-old who felt that girls expected him to make a pass on the first date fell short. The kid said, "On the first date, I feel no irresistible urge to make out with her or even 'kiss her,'" and you said, "Most girls prefer the slow approach."

Why didn't you tell him that the only right time to kiss someone (or to make love) is at the precise time when the urge is irresistible? If it happens on the first date, you're in business. If it hasn't happened by the 15th date—don't kiss her just because you think you ought to. Admit the fact that the chemistry is wrong in the relationship, and then either go on enjoying her company on that basis, or end it on that basis.

If everyone just followed their inclinations—or didn't act when the inclinations weren't there—there would be a lot less stress, guilt and resentment between the sexes.

I am a 45-year-old divorcee, and believe me, most middle-aged men don't seem to understand this any better than 16-year-olds.

W.C.M.

DEAR MS. M: The rules for kissing, dating and making love are vastly different for 45-year-old divorcees and middle-aged men than they are for 16-year-old boys on their first dates!

I still say, the slow approach is preferable for kids. They may feel like making out (or making love) on the first date, but they lack the experience and maturity to handle it.

Consumers (You) Pay For Loss

The Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce is developing a program for merchants aimed at reducing shoplifting and its enormous cost to the honest public.

The program will help merchants to inform the public of the cost and consequences of shoplifting. The consequences are obvious. Shoplifting is stealing and there is risk for those who do it of facing indictment and possible penalties.

The cost should be obvious to all of us, even those who shoplift under the pretext of "ripping off" the merchant.

Clearly every item that is stolen represents a cost to the store. That expense has to be covered somewhere if the business is not to go broke. Thus shoplifting costs eventually wind up in the price that all the honest customers pay. In other words the public eventually pays for shoplifting.

Whenever anyone brags about what he was able to filch from a store, all of us can bear in mind that we will eventually pay the price of the item the thief got for nothing.

The answer to this vexing problem of our modern society is not simple, but hopefully programs such as the chamber is planning will help.

Beyond that it will take some stern action on the part of the courts if honest shoppers are to avoid paying for what a few steal.

Historic Structure Is Worth Saving

Erosion is threatening the famous old Cape Lookout Lighthouse and the National Park Service is considering several moves to save it.

The least expensive seems to be moving the structure and its accompanying buildings to safer grounds at a cost of $1 million.

That's a high cost but thankfully allowing nature to simply destroy the structure has been ruled out, since it is an historic structure.

THIS AFTERNOON Spared Ugly Spectacles

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — North Carolina has been spared the ugly spectacle of striking public employees — teachers, policemen, firemen — marching and demanding and making threats which in some cases have been carried out.

There have been strikes in recent months: Asheville, New Bern, Rocky Mount — and threats: Chapel Hill, Raleigh, Durham.

But over the years local officials have resolved labor problems with little disruption and little time in North Carolina. Typically, where genuine problems have existed, both elected and appointed officials have sought to remedy them. Where unmeetable demands were made, local governments have by and large stood firm and when a deadline for orders to work or be fired is at hand, the strike ends.

What makes the difference in this state?

North Carolina stands alone in the nation with a law specifically prohibiting local governments from bargaining with unions. It is the only state with a law which expressly voids any contract between public employees and labor unions.

In 45 other states, the law either mandates or permits collective bargaining and contracts between cities and their employees.

The Law

In an article written for publication in "Southern City", the magazine for the statewide League of municipalities, James French credits the unique North Carolina law with avoiding troubles in this state, and dismisses the argument that municipal labor problems are avoided through union contracts.

In one recent 24-month period, city workers struck 862 times in 45 different states; most of them in "flagrant violation of laws in most states against strikes by public employees", says French, director of personnel and employee relations for the League of Municipalities.

French defines the North Carolina law as holding to the premise that "in a democratic society the political decision-making process is equally open to all individuals and groups."

BILL NOBLITT

In sum, he notes, that government has no competition for vital services such as water, disposing of waste, protecting life and property.

"When organized labor drives up the price of these essential services, governments have been increasing the price to citizens by raising taxes without fear of losing any customers.

"Units of government are easy prey because unions meet with less resistance from elected and appointed officials who are not motivated by profit,"

French reports.

Citizens

Importantly, where government and union bargain, public decision-making power is taken away from citizens and given to private unions "not subject to citizen control or accountability", French believes.

The North Carolina law has been upheld by the United States District Court which ruled that when unions get a voice in running government, other interest groups may be left out of vital decisions.

There is always the possibility of change in North Carolina. The various public employee associations regularly attempt to get the General Assembly to change the law, and otherwise get around it.

French says the best local course is "refusing to yield to persistent pressure... for free union dues collection service in the form of automatic payroll deductions, a union phenomenon essential to their existence known as dues check-off."

Strike Taking Its Toll

NEW YORK CITY—The New York City newspaper strike is starting to take its toll on the Big Apple. You can see it in people's blank expressions and hear it in their desperate voices.

seemed to be doing so well with China. "Howard Hughes passed away in his sleep." "It's hard to believe," my friend said. "He seemed like such a young vital person." "Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton split up." "Now that's one I didn't hear. How are Sonny and Cher doing?" "They split too." "What are people reading these days?"

ART BUCHWALD

Other Editors Say Hazardous Living

(Rocky Mount Telegram)
Lifestyle, as defined in practice by most Americans, should be considered a deadly word. It's not the leading killer diseases themselves that are the nation's primary health problem, according to a Connecticut physician, but the habits of millions of individual which are responsible for the prevalence of these diseases.

Many cases of the top three killers — heart disease, cancer and cirrhosis — can be traced directly to the lifestyles of the victims, notes Dr. Joseph Kristan, spokesman for the Lifestyle Council of Connecticut which is promoting improved health habits during a "Lifestyle Awareness Month."

Curative medicine has proved "one big flop" in meeting the challenge of the killers, according to Dr. Kristan.

Instead, the public should be healing itself by altering its lifestyles, which means, naturally, cutting back on consumption of such accessories to the high life as tobacco, alcohol, sugar and caffeine.

In her own words, it's a simple case of living, American-style, being hazardous to our health.

Then there's that other consequence of the American lifestyle: overweight conditions. This is one definite way Americans could improve their health and ease the national energy bind at the same time.

Collectively, we are lugging around .3 billion pounds of excess body weight, according to University of Illinois Professors Bruce Hannon and Tim Loman.

This is the equivalent of the energy used by four major cities in an entire year. If all the surplus fat were shed, they calculate, the energy conserved in food transportation and storage, refrigeration and cooking and the production of agricultural fertilizer would meet the needs of Boston, Chicago, San Francisco and Washington.

If personal health isn't a sufficiently persuasive argument for getting rid of the national flab, it is suggested, patriotism might be. Well, maybe. At least for dieters it would give new meaning to an old slogan: We gave.

40 Years Ago Today

September 27, 1938
An average price in excess of $25 per hundredweight was struck for the first time this season yesterday as the Greenville tobacco market experienced its best day of the season, good quality as high as $60.

To use the words of persons familiar with the situation, "tobacco really went to town yesterday." Yesterday's sales put an additional $403,918.52 in the pockets of farmers selling their product on the Greenville market. Offerings totaled 1,596,230 pounds.

Yesterday's figures brought the season's offerings to 23,749,636 pounds, or an sold for $5,152,882.52, or an official general average of $21.70 per hundredweight.

When a tobacco hoghead upset the fire alarm mechanism at the Ficklen Tobacco Company yesterday afternoon, the aged fire alarm in the city became twisted and local residents were unable to determine just where the possible fire could be.

The firemen knew, so they sped to the tobacco company, but found no blaze to subdue. Later in the afternoon, a power transformer in a radio at the home of Paul Hill on Evans Street burned out and firemen were summoned. Only slight damage was done, however.

"No, but three other guys did. John Glenn is now a senator from Ohio."

"I guess I have a lot of catching up to do," he said. "How's Jimmy Hoffa?" "I didn't have the heart to tell him."

Not everyone in New York is without a newspaper.

COLD WAR TACTIC Unswerving Soviet Goals

By R. H. GOLDSBOROUGH
"Everywhere freedom is on the defensive. And while the physical dangers that threaten us are grave enough, I am even more concerned over the threat posed to our survival by the collapse of our political judgment and the weakening of our will to resist." This alarm was not sounded by a conservative Republican, but by a liberal Democrat, the late Sen. Thomas Dodd in his 1968 speech titled "The Myth of Detente". How prophetic!

In warning America and his "woolly-headed" Congressional colleagues that detente was a non-existent pipedream, Sen. Dodd explained: "It is a myth which the Soviet propaganda apparatus in the free world assiduously cultivates." Dodd is in his grave, but his warning is more needed today than when it was issued.

While our Congress is blithely investigating our own intelligence services, some American left-wingers are in Cuba setting up a world-wide network to expose and disrupt our CIA personnel and its activities.

And in Washington the dreaded Soviet KGB has virtually unlimited access to the halls of Congress and White House briefings.

In December of 1977, John Maury, former Assistant Secretary of Defense, testified before the House Intelligence Committee during its investigation of the CIA. Maury had been a CIA chief in charge of investigating Soviet operations and so was speaking from firsthand experience when he stated "I remember a Soviet intelligence officer, a defector, said some years ago that members of the KGB were always taught that their first priority was to put out the eyes of their adversary by degrading and disrupting his intelligence service."

To accomplish this the dreaded Soviet secret police, the KGB as the Komitet Gosudarstvennoi Bazonosti is known, has published a secret in-house document entitled "The Practice of Recruiting Americans in the USA and Third Countries." Published by the First Chief Directorate of the KGB, it lists a dozen top priority targets for Soviet recruitment: first, government officials with classified clearances; second, members of the American press.

It is logical that the free press would be a top priority for KGB recruiters according to Maury who explained ".... an agent under press cover is in fact two agents. He is an espionage agent with excellent mobility and access, but he is also what the KGB calls an agent of influence, well-suited to disseminate misinformation..." and, "He can openly pry into the most sensitive secrets of the White House, the Pentagon and CIA, without attracting suspicion."

The world-wide KGB propaganda apparatus has very definite totalitarian aspects such as: a) central coordination, b) intensity, c) duration and d) disregard for truth. On the matter of duration, their worldwide campaign against the U.S. development of the neutron bomb began in mid-1977 and continues to this day according to the House document. Two examples of the KGB directed propaganda based on a total disregard for truth are their efforts to blame the CIA for Italian President Aldo Moro's kidnapping and KGB's falsification of a Jimmy Carter speech they circulated in order to anger the Greeks.

Under cover of a "mythical" detente the Supreme Soviet sent a delegation of its members to

Someone has said that character is what a man is when he is in the dark. And that character is measured not primarily by what the man does but why he does it.

his moral principles. Is there any doubt as to which of these men has the most commendable character?
Some people live decent lives because they are not particularly tempted to live otherwise. Most of us keep within the speed limits on the highway not as a matter of principle, but to avoid getting tickets.
The gauge of character is motive. ARE we living good moral lives? If the answer is yes, the next question is more important — why?

Carter 'Grades' In Economics

It's not quite the way I would have written it," said Blume, disclaiming responsibility for the news release.

The authors don't merely concede there's been a dramatic shift of ownership that can hardly be exaggerated. They declare it, and document it. But they urge care when making interpretations.

for instance, said Blume, despite the growth in institutional trading to 70 percent, individuals still own more than half the shares outstanding. They own more shares but they trade less.

But these and other findings are for the moment lost sight of because of the misimpression that the authors challenge the decline of individuals and the rise of institutions as market forces.

In actual fact, various parties are concerned that transformation of the market — to one in which institutions do most of the trading in large, blue-chip stocks — has had material consequences.

Some capital-hungry companies, for example, maintain the institutions ignore their securities while filling portfolios with shares of a favored 50 or a favored 100 companies, such as AT&T and IBM.

Such behavior over a period of time, it would seem, might deprive small but growing companies of capital, while enhancing the size of already large concerns, simply because they already are large.

And, as Blume and Friend observe, institutions fail to exercise voting power in companies, choosing instead to express displeasure by selling shares, making the affected companies more vulnerable to takeovers.

FCC Agents Locate Area CB Violators

NORFOLK, VA. — Agents of the Federal Communications Commission using mobile radio direction finders located numerous CB operators who were violating a wide range of FCC rules in Greenville, Kinston, Farmville, Vanceboro and Washington.

J. J. Freeman, engineer in charge of the FCC Norfolk office, said that these violations ranged from procedural ones such as failure to identify by FCC signed call letters and communicating with stations more than 250 Kilometers away, to technical ones such as out of band and overpowered operations.

CB stations in the area were using external power amplifiers (linears) and that it appeared that the FCC engineers needed to return to this area again in the near future.

The aim of FCC enforcement is to increase compliance with FCC rules and preserve the band for its intended use. These rules have been extensively revised recently and all CB'ers should obtain a copy of the new rules by sending $1.25 to the Superintendent of Documents.

your tea with a biscuit. You freshen up, and rest in bed reading, ringing up, writing, painting, thinking and doing whatever doesn't make you nervous.

That, apparently, is the nerve center of the whole diet: don't get nervous, even about the mounting telephone bill as you chatter with your friends in recumbent ease.

"Then at midday," columnist Quinn continues, "You get up and go for an hour of strolling." — This probably to prevent bed sores and give the phone a rest. — "Then again in bed after a light lunch of meat, vegetables and water. In the afternoon you receive your friends, while in bed and while sipping with them a strong tea."

Sandwiches and cakes are permitted the visitors, but the couchant calorie counter must be satisfied solely with the tea.

"At dinner," Quinn resumes her rundown, "you participate in the family evening meal, eating cheese and vegetables and drinking milk. Then to bed again." Nothing about a midnight snack or somnambulant raid on the fridge.

If the slumbering slimmer can endure this indolent pace for a week, "you lose three or four kilos" (up to almost 9 pounds), Quinn promises, "and emerge from bed with splendid complexion, soft humor and resplendent eyes."

Which is the way I usually arise from bed anyway, except the scale always shows I have put on another pound or two. It must be nerves.

Many desperate souls are buying out-of-town papers from as far away as Washington, D.C., Philadelphia and Boston. You would think this would fill the news gap, but these people are more confused than those who have no papers at all.

One lady who gets the Philadelphia Bulletin every day said to me, "If someone doesn't fill these potholes on 63rd St., I'm going to march down to City Hall and give Mayor Rizzo a piece of my mind."

"Rizzo isn't your mayor," I told her. "Koch is."

"Don't kid me," she replied. "I read the papers every day."

Another pal who gets the Boston Globe every morning said, "If we don't get some tax relief in this city soon I'm going to write to my senator, Teddy Kennedy, and tell him he better not ask for my vote in 1982."

"Teddy's not your senator," I told him. "Javits and Moynihan represent New York."

"Then how come you never read about them?" he wanted to know.

A sports fanatic who has been reading the Washington Post for more than a month has suddenly become a Redskins football fan.

"Don't you feel disloyal to the New York Giants team?" I asked him.

"Why should I when they moved to San Francisco?"

tour the United States. The delegation included the shifty-eyed Leonid Zamyatin — KGB propaganda expert — recently named director of the "Information Department" of the Central Committee for the CPSU. Zamyatin is responsible for directing all foreign propaganda. Zamyatin and Boris Ponomarev — the Soviet Politburo member who "oversees" propaganda efforts — both were in the Russian delegation which visited newspapers and radio stations in several American cities earlier this year.

The House Intelligence Committee report states, "It is apparent that one purpose of their (the Soviets') mission was to determine major concerns of American opinion makers, as well as the susceptibility of American mass communications to Soviet media operations."

It defies explanation as to why the Administration would approve U.S. travel for the Soviet propaganda leaders. Their objectives are neither friendly nor constructive. Here is a partial list of documented Soviet propaganda objectives: a) to influence both world and American public opinion against U.S. military and political programs; b) to demonstrate that the U.S. is an aggressive "colonialist" and imperialist power; c) to isolate the U.S. from its allies and friends; d) to discredit those who cooperate with the U.S.; e) to discredit and weaken Western intelligence services and expose their personnel; f) to create a favorable environment for the execution of Soviet foreign policy, etc.

Perhaps we need another Senator Dodd to warn America that the Soviets still consider detente a cold-war tactic which they deceptively use to close the eyes of American "woolly-heads" in Congress, in the Administration and in the media.

Barbara Jordan To Stick Around

WASHINGTON (AP)—Barbara Jordan is leaving Congress, but she's keeping an interest in Washington.

The Texas Democrat will join the board of directors of Evening Star Newspaper Co., publisher of The Washington Star, the company said Tuesday.

Ms. Jordan is retiring after three terms in the House. She will take up her new duties after the present session of Congress adjourns.

Ms. Jordan gained national attention as a member of the House Judiciary Committee that recommended the impeachment of President Richard Nixon and as a main speaker at the 1976 Democratic National Convention.

Rule 'Death' For Poisoner

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP)—A Kernersville woman Tuesday became the first woman to be sentenced to death since the death penalty was reinstated 16 months ago.

Rebecca Case Detter, 39, was sentenced to die after being convicted of killing her husband last year by arsenic poisoning.

Her husband, Donald Gene Detter, 39, died in June 1977 after his food and beverages were laced with an ant killer containing arsenic.

The jury of four men and eight women deliberated about three hours before returning the verdict.

Judge William Z. Wood set Nov. 24 as the date for Mrs. Detter's execution. The case was automatically appealed.

Mrs. Detter's son, William R. Detter, 18, was charged Monday with conspiring with his mother to commit the murder and was arrested shortly after Mrs. Detter was convicted in Forsyth Superior Court.

During the six-day trial, one witness said she was with William Detter when he bought some ant poison, and another said the youth offered $5,000 to have his father killed.

Wake Forest Univ. Officials Propose Breaking Baptist Tie

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — Wake Forest University representatives proposed Tuesday that a formal link between the university and the Baptist State Convention be broken.

University representatives said they are not seeking to sever all ties to the Baptist convention, but a convention official said he interpreted the proposal as a severance.

Wake trustees proposed changes in the school charter that would take away the convention's power to elect, remove or replace trustees.

All the university's trustees are now elected by the annual convention. Trustees must be North Carolina Baptists and 25 percent must be from churches with fewer than 400 members.

The proposed changes call for just a majority of the trustees to be North Carolina Baptists. The board would elect its own successors.

Under the proposal, the school would no longer be referred to in the charter as an agency of the Baptist convention.

The plan was presented to the convention's executive committee as the consensus of the university board of trustees. Board Chairman James W. Mason and Wake President James Ralph Scales made the presentation.

"The changes would mean the substitution of a totally voluntary, and I think, joyful association for one of coercion," Scales said. "Above all else, we seek to strengthen the relationship of the university with the convention. The school would remain integrally Baptist."

Both Mason and Scales said the proposal would ease the tension between the school and the convention over who controlled the university. They said the plan would also improve the school's ability to attract money and expertise.

Dr. Cecil A. Ray, general secretary-treasurer of the convention, said he believed the proposal was meant to sever ties, which would mean it could not be acted on until November 1979 because it would have to be on the agenda of two annual conventions.

The proposal drew the support of the chairman of the executive committee, the Rev. Bob D. Shepherd of Sanford.

"I think this could be a solution to the dilemma in which we find ourselves," Shepherd said. "I think it would ease many tensions caused by differing opinions of the role of trustees and ownership of Wake Forest University."

The university's proposal does not ask the convention to end its financial relationship with the school. The convention now gives 6.5 percent of its annual budget to Wake Forest, about $815,000 in 1978 — 4 percent of the school's budget.

Just Minutes To Flee Fire

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (UPI) — Tests by the National Bureau of Standards reveal that a family has an 89 percent chance of escaping a fire safely within three minutes if it has smoke detectors on every level of its home. If there is just a single smoke detector outside the sleeping area, the chances of getting out in three minutes drop to only 35 percent.

The three-minute period is vital, according to fire expert Edward J. Roach of Honeywell, who says that in many cases flames and deadly smoke make escape impossible three minutes after a fire begins to blaze.

Prisoner Is Preparing Own Case

By GWEN M. LACOSSE

LEAVENWORTH, Kan. (UPI) — Cantrell Blair wants to return to the Chicago courtroom where he was sentenced to federal prison for robbery. He hopes to do it as a practicing attorney.

Blair decided four years ago to go back to school — inside the U.S. Penitentiary at Leavenworth where he is serving two consecutive eight-year sentences for postal robbery in his native Chicago. His goal was to obtain the high school degree he abandoned as a 15-year-old.

Less than a month after entering the prison in 1974, he passed a test and received his high school equivalency certificate.

As a teen-ager Blair said he held little stock in the value of school. But with his appetite for study whetted by the high school certificate, he decided to pursue a college degree through the continuing education program at the University of Kansas. Under the program, instructors visit the prison to teach classes to 100-150 of the prison's nearly 2,000 men.

Blair, 26, wants to complete his undergraduate degree in political science at KU and then attend law school there. The interest stems from his criminal record, he said.

"I was interested in law from the moment I was prosecuted, from the moment I was convicted. If there's a way in (to prison), there's a way out."

This fall he becomes the first prison inmate to receive a scholarship from the university. He has received other government aid in the past.

The scholarship for 1978-79, according to assistant financial aid director Jeff Weinberg, is for perfect academic performance during fall 1977 — straight A's.

Nevertheless, it's a long road to graduation — with at least two semesters of course work ahead and parole about a year away.

It is a structured life Blair leads today — study, part-time work in the stockroom for $10 a month and more study in the small, book-lined cubicle he calls home.

Blair said pursuing a college degree has been a lesson in self-discipline and sheer determination. Some school and prison officials have lent encouragement, he said, but support from fellow inmates is generally lacking. "The pressure inside these walls to keep a man down is tremendous."

He has been scorned by fellow inmates. Some, who see him with books under his arms, call him "the All-American boy." Others tell him he "thinks he's too much," and "you know it all."

Blair said he tries to tell other inmates that academic education is more worthwhile than a street education from the penitentiary, which he calls "a prep school for crime."

Some have listened. "I put a lot of them in school," he said. He may be an example of what prison officials like to point to as rehabilitation, but Blair said his rehabilitation is a product of his own making, not the prison system.

"I constantly tell the men that we are not in this degree program for the sake of the penitentiary."

He is discouraged at times, as when he thinks of his sentences. "How much longer do I have to pay?" he asks. "I'm not a career criminal."

But his study schedule helps crowd out such thoughts. "It (the degree) is worth the wait," Blair said. "I've got nothing else to wait for. I've found something I like to do. That's all I really look forward to."

He dreams of catching a glimpse of KU. "They tell me it (KU) is real pretty," he said.

He expects his most difficult adjustment will come with the search for a job when he is released. He would like to return to the federal courthouse in Chicago where he was sentenced — as a practicing attorney. He says he is undaunted.

"I know what I'm facing. I'm going to make it because I'm determined to make it. It may take me 5, 10 or 15 years but nothing's going to stop me. And I'm almost there."

WILL NOMINATE SADAT
LONDON (AP) — Patrick Cormack, a Conservative member of the House of Commons, says he is going to nominate President Anwar Sadat for the Nobel Peace Prize.

Railroad Strike Impact Grows

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

As travelers coped with the second day of a railroad strike that has crippled parts of 42 states, two major automakers announced layoffs due to parts shortages and, by one estimate, half the nation's average daily food shipments by rail were halted.

Two-thirds of the nation's railroads were brought to a virtual standstill Tuesday when a strike on behalf of a 4,600-member local in a dispute with a Virginia-based railroad was expanded to 43 other carriers.

The union has argued in court hearings that since other railroads were chipping in money and equipment to help the strikebound Norfolk and Western Railway, the union had no chance at the bargaining table unless it could expand its strike.

Federal judges in several states issued temporary restraining orders in an attempt to get the railroad workers back on the job but the initial union reaction was to ignore those orders.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall scheduled a news conference today to outline the Carter administration's plans for trying to end the strike.

Sources who asked not to be identified said Carter was expected to refrain for now from declaring a national emergency and ordering rail workers back on the job, opting instead for stepped-up mediation efforts.

Congress traditionally has passed emergency legislation quickly to end any long strikes because of the devastating national impact they can have.

But nationwide rail walkouts have been rare in recent years. The last one was in 1971 when railroad signalmen walked off the job for two days.

Hours after the Brotherhood of Railway and Airline Clerks threw up picket lines at dawn Tuesday, two-thirds of the country's rail capacity was paralyzed, stranding thousands of commuters and millions of tons of freight.

Both General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. said they would begin cutting back operations and laying off some workers today at facilities where parts shipments had not arrived.

A GM spokesman said a continuation of the strike could shut down most of its assembly operations by the weekend.

Chicago faced a second day of huge traffic jams as some 100,000 commuters were forced to their autos after three commuter lines halted operations.

In addition, Amtrak, the national rail passenger line, estimated that about half of its 52,000 daily riders were denied service Tuesday. The figure would have been higher but Amtrak trains along the heavily-traveled Boston-to-Washington corridor, where Amtrak owns its own tracks, were able to keep running.

The strike succeeded in idling more than 330,000 of the nation's 500,000 railroad workers Tuesday, according to union and industry officials.

New Shad Festival Design Idea Sought

GRIFTON — The Grifton Shad Festival announced a contest to select the secondary theme for the 1979 Shad Festival and to choose a design idea for the cover of the new souvenir brochure.

The Festival, which will take place April 20-22, has emphasized the sport of shad fishing since its start nine years ago. Shad fishing will always be the primary theme.

In 1976, the Festival broadened the theme to include America's Bicentennial. Since then, the Festival Committee has decided to plan double themes each year.

The 1977 secondary theme was the Tuscarora Indians, with the 1978 theme as "Those Were Our Days," a homecoming-nostalgia reunion theme.

Contest rules are as follows: — Anyone of any age can enter, and there is no limit on the number of entries a person can make.

— Entries must be postmarked no later than Oct. 31, and may be mailed to "Design a Theme," Grifton Shad Festival, Box 928, Grifton, N.C. 28530.

— The theme must have some relevance to Grifton's past or present, or to activities of her citizens.

— The theme must offer possibilities for Festival decorations, costumes, artwork, or dance, so that Festival decorations, etc. can be built upon the theme.

— The idea of the souvenir brochure cover does not have to be restricted to fish, but should include some element suggestive of fishing.

— The cover design does not have to be a finished work of art. Rough sketches will be acceptable, as ideas are more important than the artwork.

— The Shad Festival reserves the right to modify designs and layouts and to adapt suggestions in the interest of visual or graphic impact.

— The chairman of the Shad Festival publicity committee shall select the winning design idea for the souvenir brochure cover.

— Winner of the theme-and-design contest will be presented a trophy during the Shad Festival Queen pageant and will be given a credit line on the cover of the brochure. (Four thousand copies of this brochure will be printed and distributed.)

Chicago's Candid Alderman A Campus Hit

Apple Fritters
Made With
New Crop Apples
Diener's Bakery
815 Dickinson Ave.

By ROBERT MACKAY
CHICAGO (UPI) — Vito Marzullo, as much a part of Chicago as the union stockyards or Mayor Richard J. Daley ever were, is fast becoming a hit on the college campus speaking circuit.

The short, stocky Italian immigrant is an old-time politician — a breed being replaced by young men and women whose campaigns, speeches and style of dress are developed by New York advertising agencies.

The 82-year-old Chicago alderman, who never got past the fourth grade, can be crude and vulgar — but equally candid and lovable. His candor is the main reason he is now in demand on college campuses.

This year, Marzullo received a standing ovation at Harvard and good receptions at Northwestern and Illinois-Chicago Circle.

"I don't tell them anything," said Marzullo with a strong Italian accent. "I just lay down my background. I never manufacture any stories ... speeches, questions or answers. Sometimes they don't like my grammar very much but when I get through they like my tastes, because I speak the truth."

"I never profess to be doing something I'm not. That's the trouble we're having in the country today, everybody's trying to run somebody else's business, and all these dogooders ... Johnny-comelately's, you give them a $10 bill and they can't even get a dog out of a dog pound — but they wanna run the country."

Marzullo, dean of the Chicago City Council, first became active in politics in 1919, nine years after his family came to the United States and settled in the "melting pot" of Chicago. After dropping out of school, he worked during the day and went to trade school at night until he became a machinist.

He became the Democratic precinct captain in his neighborhood "for fun" because no one else wanted the job.

He since has been elected a state representative seven times, an alderman seven times and a ward committeeman — the post that counts the most in Chicago Democratic circles — six times. He only faced opposition once, in 1967, and beat his opponent by a vote of about 15,000 to 1,000.

"In my 58 years of politics, I've seen presidents, governors, mayors, state's attorneys, legislators, come and go," Marzullo said, smiling slightly and leaning back in his chair.

"They get defeated because the people catch up to their line, because they talk to people from both sides of their mouth. Or they get so tired and disgusted with themselves that they quit."

"I believe in service and communication with the public and treating other people the way you want to be treated yourself. I'm not the easiest man in the world if people come to me with a chip on their shoulder ... demanding things on account of religious or racial background or ethnic background. I'm allergic to those kind of demands."

Marzullo then leaned forward in his chair and said loudly: "This bullshit ... that you've got to give preference to the blacks or to the Latinos. Did they give preference to the Italian or the Poles when we came from Italy or Poland or the Germans or the Jews or anybody else? Nobody gave us any preference. In fact we were the underdogs all the time.

"Nobody knows the trouble we went through. What did we do? Did we take the law in our own hands, defy law and order, destroy life and property? Or did we struggle to learn the American way of life? Let them look at the record. We didn't have an easy life."

Marzullo criticized one prominent Chicago religious leader for accepting donations from welfare recipients and then allegedly spending it on himself.

"Is that the kind of leadership we want in this country? Not as long as I have any (heart) beatings, pal!"

Marzullo leaned back in his chair and folded his hands on his stomach.

"I never looked for anything for nothing all my life since I came from Italy. I'm not a fighter. I don't look for trouble. But I'll tell you one thing, I don't turn away from trouble."

"When I came to this country, I came with one thought in mind, to be a good American. I worked for everything I got."

Marzullo has six married children and 19 grandchildren, but he said none has indicated a desire to seek political office.

"I don't care if they run, as long as they're Democrats," he said.

Marzullo "broke" with the Democratic machine and the late Mayor Daley only once, during the 1972 presidential campaign. Daley announced his support for Democratic nominee George McGovern, but Marzullo refused to support the liberal South Dakota senator and some observers felt Marzullo was simply expressing Daley's private feelings.

Fires Plague

The Southeast

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Fire takes its greatest toll in the southeast section of the United States, according to a survey by one of the nation's major manufacturers of smoke detectors.

The region including North and South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana has the highest percentage of fire deaths by population, reports James T. Thompson of Honeywell's Residential Division.

Reasons for the high fire death rate in these states are unclear and apparently unrelated to the number of households, the study shows. Arkansas, for example, ranks 32nd in number of households, but third in percentage of fire deaths per million population. Alabama is 20th in households, sixth in fire deaths; Louisiana is 19th in households, 10th in fire fatalities; Georgia ranks 13th in households, seventh in fire deaths.

Factors Behind Dollar's Decline

Interstate Securities Corporation

World Bank gets its funds from subscriptions to bonds by various countries and individuals. The U. S. share in providing funds is now approximately 30 percent.

The background on the fluctuation of the U. S. dollar versus other currencies begins at the end of World War II. A conference on international monetary matters was held at Bretton Woods, N. H., in the United States. One of the things decided at this conference was the creation of a stable system of exchange rates between the world's currencies with financial backing to maintain stability. The price of every nation's currency was fixed in terms of the U. S. dollar. The inflation and monetary growth of each nation was then tied to that of the U. S. If a particular nation's currency fell, it would have to sell dollars and buy its currency to bring it back into line with the fixed rate. The U. S. was obligated to keep the price of gold at $35 per ounce.

In 1973, the U. S. government decided to allow the dollar to float in relation to other currencies. Since then, the weakness of the dollar is primarily caused by three things. First, the basic economic theory of supply and demand has had its effect on the dollar in international monetary trading. Second, purchasing power parity has had a very important effect. Essentially, if inflation rates of two countries are equal, then their currency rates will be stable. Finally, the psychology of the market itself has become an important factor in the dollar's decline.

Homecoming At Church Sunday

Annual homecoming day services will be held Sunday at Saint Paul Pentecostal Holiness Church.

The guest speaker for the 11 a. m. worship service will be the Rev. B. C. Harrell of Roanoke Rapids, a former pastor of the church. Special music will be provided by Mrs. Erlene Stocks and the Saint Paul Trio.

Pastor Maurice Phelps invited the public to attend the services including lunch in the church fellowship hall at 12:45 p. m.

Fund-Raising Sale By LWV

The League of Women Voters will hold a "White Elephant-Donkey Sale" Saturday from 10 a. m. to 2 p. m. at the Elm Street Recreation Center.

A variety of items will be offered for sale. Proceeds will be used for educational and service projects within the community.

Pamphlets On Bond Program

An organization of local citizens known as "Friends of Public Works" will distribute pamphlets today containing information about the Nov. 7 Public Works bond referendum.

A spokesman for the organization said that plans call for the pamphlets to be distributed to every household in Greenville in an effort to provide citizens with data on the bond program.

YOUTH DAY SUNDAY

Youth Day will be observed at Bells Chapel Holiness Church Sunday, 11 a. m. The pastor, the Rev. Thomas Dixon, invites the public to attend.

Tapioca May, In Years Ahead Fuel Cars, Trucks And Boats

By LeROY POPE
UPI Business Writer
NEW YORK (UPI) — Americans know tapioca as a nourishing root flour used for puddings and food fillers, but in the years ahead it could play a big role in fueling cars, trucks and boats.

Dr. Alfred Globus, head of Guardian Chemical Co. of Hauppauge, N.Y., who has been experimenting for years with fuel mixtures of gasoline, lowgrade ethanol alcohols and a catalyst called Hydrelate, has obtained a 500-acre tract of land on the Brazos River in Texas near Houston and backing to build a plant to distill ethanol from the tapioca root.

If things go as planned, about 10,000 gallons of the ethanol will be sold daily to one or more local refineries. It will be mixed with gasoline and the catalyst in an initial proportion of 10 percent ethanol to 90 percent gasoline. Globus expects the proportion of ethanol eventually will be raised to 25 percent, which the American Petroleum Institute has concluded is the ideal mixture for good mileage and economy.

"Either mixture definitely would be competitive in price with straight unleaded gasoline," he said.

Globus had driven cars for several years on mixtures containing as much as 40 percent ethanol with no damage to the motors, but such mixtures are not really fuelefficient and would be justified only if the price of gasoline went much higher than it is now, he said.

Globus also has a venture pending in Australia to make ethanol for fuel from the cassava, or manioc, plant, as tapioca is known in much of the world. He said the deal is being delayed simply because gasoline isn't yet expensive enough in Australia to make it seem very profitable.

Brazil actually is the country most advanced in the use of alcohol-gasoline fuel mixtures. The Brazilians have launched some 170 programs with projected costs totaling nearly $800 million aimed at the development of alcohol-gasoline or all alcohol fuels. Most of these still are in rather elemental stages.

The Brazilians are experimenting with bagasse (sugarcane waste) and certain weeds and currently are building a cassava distillery with a capacity of 18,000 gallons a day at Belo Horizonte. What is holding the program back in Brazil is that Petrobras, the Brazilian state oil company, makes much more profit out of gasoline than it could hope to make out of an alcohol fuel mixture. Professor Jose Goldemberg of the University of Sao Paulo said recently.

More than a score of American senators and representatives have begun to show interest in alcohol as a motor fuel additive. Some are interested in the "gasohol" project envisioned by Nebraska corn-growing interests because they think motor fuel from corn has political clout. But sawdust, wastepaper, cornstalks and a wide variety of weeds also are proposed. Globus says cassava seems to be the most promising in the United States and in many other countries. "It is highly disease resistant, it doesn't have to be harvested annually and it can be grown in comparatively large areas of our Gulf states on land not presently being farmed," he said.

Nevertheless, government officials and oil industry spokesmen remain skeptical about the ready availability of any raw material for alcohol additives for motor fuel.

Jack Freeman, senior engineer of Sun Co. of Philadelphia, who also is chairman of the API's alcohol fuels task force, recently told a House subcommittee that "the real problem with alcohols as fuels is their poor prospects for availability in large quantity at low price."

Freeman poured very cold water on the hopes of Nebraska and other corn producing states concerning tax advantages for gasohol, a mixture of 90 or even perhaps 80 percent gasoline and ethyl alcohol made from corn as a motor fuel. He said it would take at least two units of energy to produce one unit of ethanol from corn or any other grain for every unit of energy obtained.

Freeman said that even producing ethanol from sugar cane waste as Globus originally proposed for 40-60 mixtures with gasoline, might turn out to be only a break-even proposition.

Freeman also contends that the use of ethanol or methanol alcohols blended with gasoline in auto engines entails unknown risks. He says they could cause engine stalling, hesitation, impaired acceleration and power surging and that methanol gasoline mixtures could cause a rise in both hydrocarbon and nitrous oxide emissions, and that "the consequences of a serious spill with a fuel containing methanol can only be speculated on in view of methanol's extreme affinity for water, its acute toxicity and rapid biodegradability."

Globus and a number of other oil company chemists agree with Freeman about the perils of methanol.

But Globus insists there are no such risks with ethanol and 30 members of Congress led by Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., Sen. Russell Long, D-La., and Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., have petitioned Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland and Energy Secretary James Schlesinger to start an aggressive pursuit of a program to develop alcohol motor fuels.

Senator Percy and 20 other members of Congress also have moved to exempt alcohol-based motor fuels from the 4 cents a gallon federal gasoline tax provided the alcohol is not derived from coal, gas or oil.

West Germany and Brazil are the only countries where the governments currently are financing alcohol motor fuel development but research is going on in many countries.

General Motors and Ford officials have disputed statements by Freeman and others that alcohol-based mixtures would present big problems in engine operation. They point to the fact that methanol alcohol has been used successfully in racing engines for years and the French successfully used ethanol made from wine in a motor fuel during World War II.

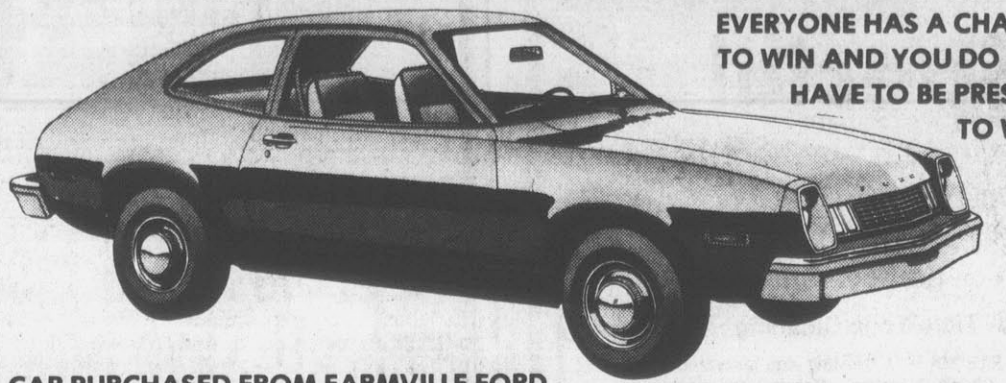

Methanol is used in racing cars because it gives high speed, although poor mileage, and because it doesn't burst into flame readily if a racing car is wrecked.

But methanol is derived from natural gas, which is not replaceable, or from wood and the United States is not presently replacing its yearly consumption of timber.

Find Payoff In Gasoline Theft

BIRMINGHAM, England (AP) — The thieves who stole 1,000 gallons of gasoline found the perfect solution to how to get rid of it. They found a gasoline station closed for modernization, poured it into the pumps and opened up for business on a cut-rate basis. So far, police have not caught the culprits.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market pushed ahead today, getting a boost from better-than-expected statistics on the nation's trade balance.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 4.15 to 872.31 in the first half hour.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about a 7-4 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The government reported this morning that the nation had its second smallest trade deficit of the year last month, with imports exceeding exports by $1.62 billion.

The trade-deficit problem has been cited as a primary reason for the dollar's decline in foreign exchange. The dollar rallied against leading foreign currencies on today's news.

On Tuesday Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal predicted an improvement next year in the U.S. balance of payments deficit.

U.S. Steel was the early volume leader among NYSE issues, up 1/4 at 27.

In Tuesday's session the Dow Jones industrial average gained 5.81 to 868.16.

Advances outnumbered declines by better than a 2-1 spread on the NYSE.

Big Board volume came to 26.33 million shares against 20.97 million Tuesday.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index rose .43 to 57.81.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index climbed 1.46 to 168.25.

Courthouse...

(Continued from page 1) be reduced by 5,400 square feet and the cost of renovation reduced by $132,000.

Only three of the state's courthouses were rated barrier-free by the report, which recommended action be taken to provide facilities for handicapped persons at the Pitt County building.

Although not noted in the report, Pitt County Commissioners have awarded contracts to have the old hospital building renovated to provide space for some county offices now housed in the court house annex — including the Board of Education and the county manager's office and the county's date processing center.

A good portion of the space vacated by the relocated offices will be used for court-related facilities.

For Greene County, the study recommended expanding the judicial use of the court house in Snow Hill by relocating non-judicial function offices, upgrade the building by providing insulation, and improve handicapped accessibility.

The study rated the Greene building 91st in public access with a rating of 3.0 and 21st in handicapped access with a rating of 2.97. The building's overall physical condition score of 3.84 ranked it 32nd among all courthouses.

Some 6,877 square feet out of the 11,000 square feet of usable space are now being used for court-related functions, while 8,341 square feet are now needed, the report said. The report said no additional space would be needed until after the year 2,000.

The Greene County Court House was constructed in 1935.

As for the Martin County Court House in Williamston, the report suggested that a new courthouse containing 16,000 square feet of usable space be constructed, and the old facility be renovated at an estimated cost of $370,000 to provide for county government office space.

The study ranked the Martin County facility 91st in physical condition, with a score of 2.86, and 70th in handicapped access with a rating of 1.62. The building ranked in 87th place in public access with a rating of 3.17.

The report indicated that renovating the 1887 building for county offices would preserve the structure, which has been nominated to the National Register of Historic Places as has the Pitt and Greene County courthouses.

Only 17 of the state's courthouses are in adequate to excellent physical condition, according to the report, which noted that 69 need minor repairs and 10 need major repairs.

Some 55 of the state's cour-thouses rank very poor in handicapped access, with 21 poor, 17 fair and only three good (four counties had court houses under construction when the report was compiled and they are not included).

The study ranked 51 court houses as fair in public access and 39 as good, while listing six as poor.

Visiting Mentalist Is An Audience-Pleaser

By CAROL TYER
 Reflector Staff Writer

"The harnessing human imagination is the most powerful force there is," says Kreskin, the "sensitive" who appeared at Hendrix Theater on the East Carolina University campus last night.

The entertainer, who's billed as "The World's Foremost Mentalist," was here for a return performance, having been at ECU about a year and a half ago. His enthusiastic audience game him a standing ovation at the conclusion of the two-hour-and-43-minute program. No one in the packed theater seemed to enjoy the performance more than he did, even though his schedule is such that he had 505 performances last year.

He has a syndicated television show made in Canada and has appeared 80 times on "The Johnny Carson Show" and an even greater number of times on "The Mike Douglas Show." He declares that none of his shows are edited — that even the failures are included.

One segment of last night's show which he always does and occasionally fails at, he says, is finding his paycheck by extrasensory perception. He was escorted to an offstage dressing room by two members of the audience while three more audience draffees hid the check. If he does not find the check, he refuses to accept payment for the evening's work, he said. Last night he found it — under the blouse of a woman in the audience — and discreetly requested that it be handed to him by her.

He asked for concentration by each member of the audience on certain names, dates and the like meaningful to him or her personally and then proceeded to call out various names, combinations of letters, and the like that were quickly recognized by one or another in the crowd. This was perhaps the most impressive part of the show, except for the final segment, which dealt with what is commonly known as hypnosis, something that Kreskin says does not exist. "Hypnotism" causes no physiological changes in the body, as meditation and other levels of consciousness do, he said. What it is, he maintains, is "guided imagination."

He invited onto the stage about 50 persons and soon had most of them petting and naming imaginary animals, cleaning up after them, and losing and recapturing them. Those volunteers kissed on the forehead by others on the stage found themselves "glued" to their chairs when the group was seemingly dismissed from the platform.

How does it all work? The human mind and body are capable of feats of which one seldom dreams is Kreskin's explanation. One can hold an idea so clearly in his mind that the energy to bring it into reality can be brought into use. He says he's trained athletes by this method and has just recently

Fair Turnout Said 'Good'

Pitt County Fair officials said today that Tuesday night's attendance at the new Fairgrounds was, "good," and reported that some 250 senior citizens attended a special program at the fair this morning.

Exact attendance figures for Tuesday were unavailable this morning, but spokesmen said attendance at the special Senior Citizens' Day program was, "the best we've ever had."

A special program for preschool children will be presented from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. Thursday, while a special program for handicapped children will be held Friday morning.

Admission to the special morning programs is free. They include special demonstrations, rides and refreshments.

Fair manager Sam Winchester noted that the Greenville Rescue Squad, which won its second consecutive heavy duty rescue world championship in international competition September 1, will demonstrate various techniques used from 7 p.m. until 9 p.m. Thursday.

challenged the two top chess players in the world to simultaneous match. He'll play them both at the same time blindfolded, he declares.

Pitt Teams Win First League Games

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer
After a less than totally successful non-conference season, Pitt County's four members of the Eastern Carolina Conference surprised the rest of the league with four victories last Friday night, the first night of loop competition.

Three of the four games were won by two touchdowns or more. Only one, D. H. Conley's 6-0 shutout over North Lenoir, was what could be termed competitive. In the other games, Ayden-Grifton defeated Southern Nash 26-12, North Pitt downed C. B. Aycock 24-7 and Farmville Central rolled over Greene Central 47-6.

Only two of the four teams had winning records going into Friday night's ballgames. North Pitt was 3-0, while Farmville Central was 2-1. D. H. Conley was 1-2 and Ayden-Grifton was 0-3. Of course, all the schools now have identical 1-0 ECC records.

In this week's action, Ayden-Grifton hosts North Pitt, Conley is at Greene Central and Farmville Central entertains Southern Nash.

Ayden-Grifton
The Chargers started on a low note this season, but improved each week, according to coach Dixon Sauls, and finally got into the win column Friday night.

"We won a game, and that's different for us," Sauls said. "I think for the first time, we executed on our running game." The Chargers rushed for 279 yards in the contest. Sauls said five backs, running backs Calvin Ellison, Billy Holland, Donnie Jackson and Anthony Chapman, along with quarterback David Smith, all rushed for over 50 yards each. "We had a balanced rushing attack."

Sauls said the players came together as a unit in the ballgame. "For the first time, our players seemed to depend on each other. They picked themselves up. Hopefully, we've matured as a football team."

The coach praised the individual offensive efforts of Wayne Newton, who scored twice in the game, Smith, who threw for a touchdown and ran for two more, and Ron Cox, Corky Teachey and Ken Branch on the offensive line.

Defensively, Sauls said the return of Donnie Jackson and Tim Odham to the Charger lineup sparked the team. He added that Joe Edmonds had a good ballgame.

The Chargers meet undefeated North Pitt this week and Sauls said the Panthers have gained a lot of confidence from their four victories this season. "They are playing extremely well. They are the best executing North Pitt team I have seen."

The Panthers have outstanding athletes at the skilled positions, Sauls said, especially William Knight, a running back-defensive back.

"For us to win, we've got to establish our power running game, control the football and keep them from making the big play."

North Pitt
Panther coach Pat Smith said the Chargers have such a great amount of size and strength it will take an outstanding game from North Pitt "just to stay on the field with them."

Smith said the Chargers are a much better team than their record indicates. "It's just surprising to me that they're 1-3. I can't understand what their problem has been. They are big and strong and they have good running backs and a quarterback who throws the ball real well. They're going to be mighty tough."

The Panthers are the surprise of the season so far as they sit atop the conference with a 1-0 league mark and 4-0 overall record. The latest victory came over C. B. Aycock Friday night, but Smith said the team made quite a few mistakes in that game.

Defensively, the Panthers didn't tackle well and the linebackers were getting out of position. The team was also hurt by trap plays.

On offense, the biggest problem was that the linemen weren't holding their blocks. "We were getting off the ball well, but not holding blocks."

Smith said.

The team was also hurt by 115 yards in penalties.

But Smith said he was "real pleased with the way our guys battled. They showed a lot of will to win." The coach was also pleased with a goal line stand just before halftime that held the Falcons after a first-and-goal at the two.

Terry Moore had his best game of the season against Aycock, rushing for 105 yards, Smith said. He was aided by the fact that the Falcons often keyed on William Knight. Quarterback Bob Hemingway also had his best game, and is gaining in confidence every week, according to Smith.

The defensive standouts were tackle Melvin Simmons, filling in for the injured Reuben Matthews, and end James Tyson.

DHC's Noah Lee Edwards

D. H. Conley
Viking coach Chuck Dunn praised his team's defensive effort, which held North Lenoir to 152 yards and prevented the Hawks from scoring.

"We got by far our best defensive effort of the season. For the first time, everybody seemed to play with a little enthusiasm. That made quite a difference."

Dunn said inconsistency hurt the Vikings' offense. "We lacked concentration, particularly on first down," he explained.

The Conley specialty teams aided in the winning effort with punter Tony Perkins doing a good job of keeping the Hawks backed up.

Individually, Dunn praised the defensive efforts of David Sutton, who intercepted a pass and recovered a fumble, and Noah Lee Edwards, the team's leading tackler.

This week's opponent, Greene Central, is always a tough foe for the Vikings, Dunn said. "They're big, but fairly inexperienced. We are too, overall."

Dunn said it's always tough to play the Rams in Snow Hill and it will take a lot of preparation and a good mental attitude for the team to have a shot at winning.

Farmville Central
An outstanding defensive effort keyed the Jaguars' romp over Greene Central last Friday. The Farmville defense was responsible for four of the team's seven touchdowns, plus a safety.

"The defense played aggressive," coach Gene Brewer said, "they played pretty heads-up."

Brewer said the offensive unit got adequate blocking, but had a problem with fumbles. The Jaguars lost the ball four times by putting it on the ground.

"Overall, I thought we played about average, or a little bit above average."

James Tyson played real well in the ballgame, according to Brewer, scoring three touchdowns. Carl Davis also did a good job blocking and all the receivers caught well.

Defensively, the whole front line did a good job, while the secondary was about average. "We felt like they threw some passes we should have at least knocked down, or maybe intercepted, that we didn't get to."

Brewer also cited the blocking on the specialty teams, which returned a punt for a touchdown and very nearly broke a kickoff all the way.

The biggest thing about this week's opponent, Southern Nash, is good athletes in the key positions, Brewer said. "They can be a good football team."

The Firebirds are aggressive and a lot stronger than Brewer had expected at the beginning of the season. He said the game could develop into a wide-open affair because Southern Nash likes to throw the ball a lot and has some good receivers, along with a number of good running backs.

Cox: Chargers Playing Together

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer
Ayden-Grifton's football team got off to a slow start this season, losing its first three non-conference games, but the Chargers got their first win last week and things are on the way up, according to guard Ron Cox.

Cox said the Chargers, expected to be stronger before the season began, have improved quite a bit in their first four ballgames, and now that they are playing Eastern Carolina Conference games, should continue to do well.

"We have improved a lot on offense; we're running the ball a lot better. I think the defense is pretty good. It's weak in some spots, but I think we can cover them up."

Alexander Spoils Bid

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

The crowd of 3,662 rose to its feet at Memorial Stadium in Baltimore as left-hander Mike Flanagan faced Cleveland's Gary Alexander for what it hoped would be the final out of the first no-hitter by an Orioles' pitcher since 1969.

Then, almost in unison, they sat down when Alexander launched his 26th home run of the season into the right field bleachers.

"The pitch," Flanagan explained after the 3-1 victory Tuesday night, "was not really where I wanted it."

But it was just where Alexander wanted it.

"He'd been getting me out with curve balls all night," said Alexander, who connected on a 2-1 pitch, "so I was looking for the curve ball. If he had thrown me the fast ball inside, I probably would never have swung. But it's hard to second-guess him now."

Flanagan, 19-14, may well do enough second-guessing himself. After Alexander touched home plate, he gave up singles to Ted Cox and Duane Kuiper, then was replaced on the mound by Don Stanhouse, who preserved the triumph for Flanagan and recorded his 23rd save in the process.

Meanwhile, the American League's top East Division teams remained one game apart with five games to play while the Kansas City Royals clinched their third consecutive AL West title. The Yankees beat the Toronto Blue Jays 4-1 behind Ed Figueroa, while Boston ace Dennis Eckersley carried the Red Sox to a 6-0 victory over Detroit.

Yankees 4, Blue Jays 1
Bucky Dent and Mickey Rivers cracked RBI doubles in the second inning to carry New York past Toronto and keep the Yankees' first-place lead at one game in the East.

After the game, women reporters were allowed in New York's clubhouse for the first time. An equal access ruling had been handed down in federal court Monday, and five women newsmen tested it Tuesday night.

Red Sox 6, Tigers 0
Jim Rice's 44th homer of the year, alto-run shot in the fifth inning, backed Eckersley's seven-hitter and carried the Red Sox past the Tigers. The homer gave Rice 393 total bases, bringing him closer to becoming the first American Leaguer to collect 400 total bases since Joe DiMaggio did it in 1937.

Royals 4, Mariners 1
Kansas City permitted itself a mild celebration after Larry Gura's three-hitter carried the Royals to their third straight crown.

But the champagne festival lacked the intensity of the last two.

Gura, 16-4, got offensive help from Amos Otis, who singled twice and drove in two runs to raise his average to .300 and his career-high RBI total to 95.

A's 10, White Sox 3
Rob Picciolo's second homer in two nights capped an eight-run seventh-inning rally and helped Oakland beat Chicago to sap a six-game losing streak.

Twins 6, Rangers 2
Roy Smalley's RBI double and two Texas errors helped Minnesota score five ninth-inning runs and snap a seven-game Rangers winning streak.

Angels 4, Brewers 3
Carney Lansford singled home Danny Goodwin in the 10th inning to lift California over Milwaukee.

Joe Keeps Phil From 20

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

Joe Niekro had a bittersweet victory over his brother, while those Pennsylvania blood brothers, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, moved a little closer together in the National League East.

Joe Niekro of Houston beat Phil Niekro of Atlanta 2-0. Joe's third victory in five fraternal decisions, keeping Phil from winning his 20th game. Both knuckballers said they had a trouble getting a grip on the situation Tuesday night.

"I don't like to (face him) if I don't have to," said Joe Niekro, whose 13th victory in 27 decisions kept the Astros from falling below the Braves into the NL West cellar. "We both do our best to win. I don't think it's as tough on him and me as on the folks back home.

"I want to see him win 20, but I want to win as many as I can, too. Phil feels the same way."

Meanwhile, it appears the four-game, season-ending weekend set in Pittsburgh between the Pirates and Phillies will decide the NL East flag. The Phillies beat Montreal 5-3 to reduce their magic number to three, then lost to Rudy May's four-hitter, 3-0.

Pittsburgh, meanwhile, beat Chicago 5-2 and is 3½ games behind Philadelphia.

Phils 5-0, Expos 3-3

Jim Kaat, 39 years old and supposedly washed up, pitched six solid innings for Philadelphia in the first game. Greg Luzinski carried the offense, knocking in three runs with a two-run homer and a single.

Astros 2, Braves 0

Ken Forsch relieved Joe Niekro in the ninth to save Houston's victory. But Phil will pitch in the Braves' season-ending series against Cincinnati in his bid for his third 20-victory season.

Pirates 5, Cubs 2

Another greybeard, Willie Stargell, had a big night in Pittsburgh, contributing a three-run homer to the Pirates' 21st straight home victory. The homer, his 26th of the year, was No. 427, moving the 37-year-old slugger past former Cub Billy Williams into 15th place on the all-time homer list.

Padres 4, Giants 1

Another ancient pitcher, 40-year-old Gaylord Perry, won his sixth straight game and ninth in his last decisions, raising his record to 21-6. He needed relief help from Rolfe Fingers, who notched his major league leading 36th save. Gene Richards cracked a pair of triples, eventually scoring both times, to increase his NL lead in three-baggers to 12.

Reds 6, Dodgers 4

Pete Rose, 37 and still running, played in his Cincinnati record 2,500th game. He had two doubles for 51 this season, tying him with former Red Frank Robinson for another club record.

Mets 3, Cardinals 1

Craig Swan pitched three-hit ball for seven innings and became the NL leader in earned run average among starters with a mark of 2.43. The Mets broke a 1-1 tie in the sixth on John Stearns' RBI grounder and Dan Norman's run-scoring single.

ECU Splits

East Carolina University's women's volleyball team split a pair of matches last night at Minges Coliseum.

East Carolina bowed to the University of North Carolina, 2-0. The Lady Pirates fell to the Lady Heels, 15-5 in the opening game and 15-12 in the second.

They came back, however, to down Appalachian State, 2-0, in their second match. The Pirates took the first game, 15-9 and won the second, 15-12.

The split left East Carolina with a 4-2 mark on the season.

The Pirates travel to N.C. State on Friday.

Mavs Stronger Than Record

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

A team that has not won in four starts usually doesn't cause a great deal of excitement, but the Movin' Mavs of Texas-Arlington might be an exception.

they have an outstanding offense, and will give the Pirates of East Carolina a stern test come Saturday night.

Like East Carolina, Texas-Arlington is a wishbone team, and the meeting of the two is one of two wishbone meetings in the country this year. (The other comes later this season when Appalachian State visits East Carolina.)

The Mavs rank 14th in the nation in rushing yardage with an average of 264.5 per game.

And they know how to put the points on the scoreboard, averaging 19.3 so far this year.

Texas-Arlington lost its opener to Drake, 25-23, then fell to strong West Texas State, 18-10. They bowed to another Texas neighbor, tough North Texas, 28-23, and were beaten this past weekend, 28-21 by Louisiana Tech.

So while the Mavs have moved the ball and scored, they've given up a lot too. "But their opponents have been a good team," ECU assistant Wayne Hall pointed out.

"They have a great quarterback in Roy Dewalt (6-2, 205). He's a good runner and operates the wishbone offense very well. They have a strong fullback in Bill McClesky (6-2, 210) and two fast halfbacks (Tony Felder and Phillip Jessie).

"Their offensive line is very big, one of the bigger teams we face," Hall added. The line includes 6-5, 240 Greg Suchicki at left guard, 6-2, 279 Dewey Wakefield at left tackle, 6-2, 220 Murray Francis at center, 6-3, 245 Bill Harris at right guard and 6-6, 245 Bill Plymale at right tackle.

"Dewalt is leading the Southland Conference in rushing and scoring and total offense," Hall pointed out. "He's a lot like Robbie Price of Appalachian State when he was at his best," Hall said, "and he's one of the better quarterbacks we see this year."

Split end Gary Lewis has excellent speed and is the main target for Dewalt when he goes to the air. "He's 6-6, 210, and has 4.5 speed," Hall said. "Dewalt likes to drop back and just put the ball up for him to grab with his great size. Like us, they throw mostly to keep the defense honest."

Hall said that Texas-Arlington would be the most physical team the Pirates had played so far.

Defensively, Hall feels that the Mavs strength lie in its linebackers, proclaimed by T-A coach Bud Elliot as the three best in the state of Texas. "And that covers a lot of ground," Hall pointed out, noting that schools like West and North Texas, Houston, Texas, Texas Tech, and the like are all in that state.

The three are 6-1, 220 Willie Thomas, 6-0, 220 Rob Michelsen; and 6-3, 212 Cliff Odom.

"Their line is big and strong and they try to use the mobility of their linebackers from inside out. They have a small secondary, but it has good speed."

The line averages over 230 on defense, while the backs come it at about 185.

Ron Cox...

One of the biggest reasons the team is playing better is that the players are working together, the 5-10, 169 Cox said. "We've played more team ball since we've gotten in the conference. Everybody put out effort, everybody helped everybody and it really felt good playing Friday night." The Chargers won 26-12 over Southern Nash.

Cox, a senior, sees continued success for the Chargers. "All the team has forgotten about the first three games we played. I think we can go 7-0 in the conference."

Ayden-Griffon coach Dixon Sauls thinks a lot of Cox, a second-year player in his first year as a starter. "He's a dedicated team player — a coach's player," Sauls said. Cox has shown "marked improvement" in his play at offensive guard and is one of the team's top linemen at this point.

Cox said playing in the offensive line "gives you a chance to beat your man one-on-one, and it will show up if you beat him. I really like it." His responsibilities as offensive guard are to block his man or move him to a certain place, and also to keep him from getting into the backfield.

Last week, the Chargers' injury situation thrust Cox into a starting role at defensive end and he responded admirably, Sauls said. "He did an outstanding job last Friday in his first start," the coach commented.

According to Cox, he had more confidence in his defensive end play against the Firebirds. The position is tough, however, because "they're pulling everything and the kitchen sink at you. You have to beat all the interference out and hopefully somebody will make the tackle."

Right now, Cox said, he likes playing offense a little better than defense because he is worked harder at it.

Cox's big interest is drafting. He has taken drafting courses for the past three years and would like to become an architect. He is interested in attending East Carolina University or UNC at Chapel Hill or Charlotte.

As an Ayden-Griffon football player, he is helping the Chargers draft what they hope will be a successful season.

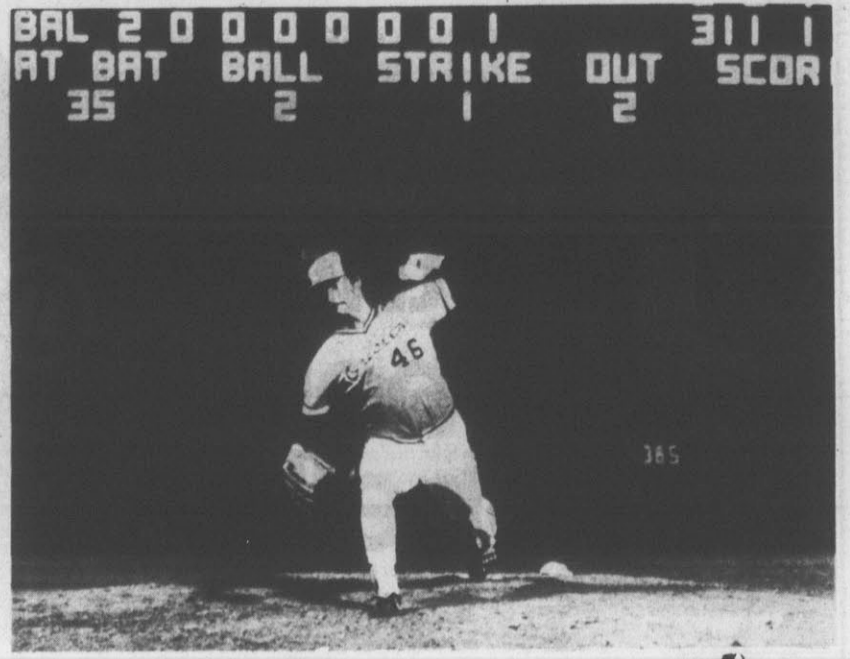

35 Are Winners

A total of 35 East Carolina players were designated to receive winner awards for outstanding performances in the Pirates 38-9 win at Southwestern Louisiana. The ratings were determined by the coaches after grading each player from the game film.

On offense, linemen Joe Godette, Perry Allred, Matt Mulholland, Wayne Inman, Jeff Hagans, Nelson Smith, Mitchell Smith, Mitchell Johnston and Terry Heywood; wide receivers Mike Gallaher and Billy Ray Washington, along with backs Leander Green, Steve Greer, Mike Hawkins, Anthony Collins, Eddie Hicks, Theodore Sutton and Sam Harrell were recognized.

On defense, linemen Vance Tinger, Oliver Felton, Noah Clark, John Hallow, D.T. Joyner, Zack Valentine, Fred Chavis and John Morris; linebackers Tommy Summer, Mike Brewington and Jeffrey Warren, as well as backs Gerald Hall, Ruffin McNeill, James Freer, Wayne Perry, Charlie Carter and Willie Holley were named.

The Pitch That Did It

Baltimore Orioles' pitcher Mike Flanagan fires a 2-1 pitch to batter Gary Alexander of the Cleveland Indians that was hit for a home run to spoil Flanagan's bid for a no-hitter. Flanagan had gone eight and two-thirds innings and needed to retire Alexander for the no-hitter. (AP Laser-photo)

Natural Gas Bill Expected Win Senate Okay Today

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A year ago today, a weary Senate held its first around-the-clock session in more than a decade, battling over the natural gas section of President Carter's energy program.

Now, on the anniversary of that all-night filibuster, a compromise version of that same legislation as finally headed toward expected Senate approval.

This time there was little suspense over the outcome.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd predicted the administration-championed bill, which would lift federal price controls from most natural gas by 1985, would pass the Senate by as many as 20 votes. And opponents of the measure — a coalition of liberals who call it too costly to consumers and conservatives who say it doesn't deregulate prices quickly enough — conceded in advance the long battle was lost.

Opponents were badly defeated on two trial votes and virtually abandoned the search for votes Tuesday after the Senate rejected, 55-36, their second attempt to scuttle the compromise by returning it to committee for redrafting.

No converts had been gained for either side since a 59-39 rejection of a first recommittal motion last week. Differences between the two recorded votes reflected only the absence of more members the second time around. "We've been touching bases but all the bases have been empty," said Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., who had offered the recommittal motion. The House gets the measure next. A fight is expected there too, but the administration is believed to have the upper hand.

House leaders plan to combine the gas bill with a number of other fragments of Carter's 17-month old energy plan and to pass the whole package at once.

The energy plan Carter called the "moral equivalent of war" called for continued price controls on gas but at higher levels. The House went along, but the Senate — after breaking that 1977 filibuster — voted instead to deregulate gas prices after two years.

Although far different than his original proposal, Carter backed the compromise as the best that could be negotiated.

The White House waged a forceful lobbying campaign for the measure, making it into something of a symbol for the entire stalled energy program.

Congressional economists estimate the deregulation legislation will cost consumers $16 billion through 1985 in higher gas bills.

It would allow the price of newly discovered gas to double until the lids come off on Jan. 1, 1985. In the meantime, gas produced and used within the same state would be subject to federal price controls for the first time.

Controls could be reimposed for a single 18-month period under the compromise. And industrial consumers would have to pay proportionately more for gas than homeowners, at least initially.

Jack Albertson Takes Time Out For Hospital

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Jack Albertson has gone to the hospital, but it shouldn't keep "Grandpa" from going to Washington.

NBC spokesman Ken Kantor said Albertson, star of the new TV series "Grandpa Goes To Washington," was hospitalized Tuesday with what doctors described as stomach congestion.

Kantor said the 68-year-old actor would be sidelined from taping the show for two weeks.

Tentacles Of Ticketron Service Reach Europe

By GLENNE CURRIE
UPI Lively Arts Editor
NEW YORK (UPI)—In nine years, Ticketron has become a major force in the entertainment business.

Ticketron's computerized ticket service is available at about 1,000 terminals throughout the country, mostly in department stores and shopping centers.

It handles 5 million tickets a week for the Pennsylvania lottery, and 900,000 visitors a year to the Hearst Castle at San Simeon, Calif. It will handle an estimated 1.3 million entrance tickets to the King Tut exhibition at the Metropolitan Museum of Art Dec. 20-April 15.

It sells tickets to rock shows, Broadway theaters, sports events, campsites.

It is helping the Shubert Theater organization set up its own computer system to handle 250,000 ticket sales a week, and is exploring the possibilities of selling tickets to London theaters via its U.S. and Canadian outlets. (In Canada, its subsidiary is Ticket Reservations Systems of Canada, Ltd., based in Montreal.)

It already is leasing self-contained computer systems to colleges, stadiums and sports clubs, at $35,000 a year. A dozen of these so-called "Stand Alone" Ticketron 2000 systems are operational, including Penn State University, the Los Angeles Forum, the Meadowlands Sports Complex in New Jersey, the baseball Dodgers, the football Alouettes.

It is reserving campsite facilities, and looking at parking lot and commutation systems.

Ticketron is a $30 million-a-year operation with enormous possibilities. It has several competitors, but it is the largest of the computer ticket sales organizations.

Ticketron was founded nine years ago, using computers supplied by Control Data Corp. When the original company ran into economic troubles, Control Data took over in 1973 with William J. Schmitt, then an NBC vice president, as president of Ticketron.

"The main trouble was getting the public to accept the service," Schmitt said in a recent interview in his Avenue of The Americas office.

"When Ticketron started, 70 percent of the business was rock shows, and young kids started getting into the habit of buying at Ticketron. They still represent 45 per cent of our customers. But these kids had been brought up with computers. They are the ones buying Broadway tickets as they get older. And they are the ones on the campsites.

"We had problems with Broadway shows. While the kids would use Ticketron for rock shows, their parents—who make up most of the Broadway audience—still would go to the box office."

Many of them still do, but Ticketron and its competitors are catching on gradually.

Ticketron adds a service charge of 70 cents to $1 per seat for Broadway shows. (Non-computerized ticket brokers charge $1.50.) But more and more people are finding it convenient to buy seats in a department store—using the store credit card if they wish.

The heart of Ticketron is in two computer storage systems, one on the West Coast and one in New Jersey. Each individual terminal has full access to all seats assigned to Ticketron and placed in the computer memory. The customer is offered all available seats and knows exactly where he will be sitting before he pays for the tickets. Once the tickets have been sold, they are blocked out in the computer.

Ticketron sales still are about 40 percent rock concerts, 32 percent sports, 20 percent family shows like the circus and ice extravaganzas, and the remainder Broadway and the like.

"We are heavy from Montreal to Norfolk, Va., to Philadelphia and in the Midwest and California," Schmitt said. "Elsewhere there is a lack of density."

"We have four criteria for moving into a new area: population density, number of facilities, rock promoters, sports attractions."

"We have two people in Europe checking out possibilities there for the 2000 series. Every pro soccer team is a natural. We may operate in places like London."

Broadway has been investigating ticket computerization for 15 years. Now a pilot scheme is being set up by the Shubert organization, using a second generation Ticketron 2000 system, for its 21 theaters in New York and elsewhere.

It is intended to go into operation next April, permitting credit card phone purchases via a toll-free 800 number, at box office prices.

Schmitt underlined the size of the Ticketron operation by pointing out that its sales terminal in Macy's alone can sell more tickets for an attraction at Madison Square Garden than the Garden box office itself.

Radio Network Adding Another Drama Series

By JAY SHARBUTT
 AP Television Writer
 LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rumors that network radio drama is dead proved a bit exaggerated when the "CBS Radio Mystery Theater" began nearly five years ago. Now, another new ear series will be heard from.

It's the "Sears Radio Theater," a one-hour, Monday-through-Friday collection of Westerns, other adventures, romances, Gothic horror tales and comedies. It'll start Feb. 5 on the CBS Radio network.

Its installment as a nightly feature is being announced today by Sam Cook Digges, president of that network, at its annual affiliates convention being held this year in Phoenix, Ariz.

Unlike "Mystery," made in New York and hosted by actor E.G. Marshall, the new work comes from Hollywood. Various stars will host it each night. Vincent Price and Andy Griffith are already signed up.

CBS says work on the show has begun here. The man in charge is Elliot Lewis, a veteran radio actor and producer.

Young folks haven't heard of him, but he was heard in radio's heyday as — to cite one character — Frankie Remley. Phil Harris' wisecracking guitarist on a variety series called "The Fitch Bandwagon."

He also emoted on the old "I Love a Mystery" series, starred on a high-seas thriller called "Scarlet Queen" and coproduced CBS' famed "Suspense" series during World War II.

The network's "Mystery Theater," which celebrates its fifth year on the air next January, currently is heard on 230 stations, most of them CBS affiliates, the network says.

"We've been talking about it with Sears for a long period of time, and it just seemed the time was right for us," he added.

He said the new series will offer 26 weeks of first-run shows, then 26 weeks of repeats and cost several million dollars a year to make.

It'll feature a specific type of program each night, such as a romance tale on Mondays, a Western on Tuesdays, and so on.

Save for a comedy night on the new show, both CBS series basically are works of drama. Digges was asked when, if ever, a comedy-variety series — perhaps like the late Fred Allen's show — will be revived for modern network radio.

Find No Slander

By Folksinger

BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — Folksinger Arlo Guthrie says he feels "pretty good" about being found innocent of slander.

The verdict was returned Tuesday in a federal court suit brought by Clayton Fuller, who claimed Guthrie ruined his reputation as a concert promoter by telling the audience at a 1976 concert in Burlington that "everybody here is being ripped off."

Guthrie walked out during intermission in a dispute over payment. He gave two free concerts in Burlington the next day.

Spencer Knapp, Guthrie's lawyer, argued that the singer's statements could not have destroyed the promoter's reputation because "Fuller's reputation is beyond repair."

U.S. Copyright Law Is Often Violated By The Music- Users

By JOSEPH GAMPARDELLO

NEW YORK (UPI) — Hundreds of colleges, clubs and fraternal and veterans organizations across the country are breaking a federal law everytime they use music for a dance, concert or other public performance.

They could be fined anywhere from $250 to $10,000 for each violation, which means each song.

The violations stem from the fact that the groups, under the 1976 Copyright Act that took effect in January, must purchase a license, which guarantees composers royalties for their work.

But despite the violations, the organizations need not worry that their next social will be raided by a bunch of gun-toting G-Men.

"We're not looking to trap anybody," said Ed Cramer, president of Broadcast Music Inc., one of three organizations named in the new law as having a right to issue licenses on behalf of copyright owners.

Cramer, a copyright lawyer, discussed the new law in an interview. He described how it effects groups that were previously exempt under the old copyright, which dated from 1909.

BMI, like its competitor, the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers (ASCAP), is in business to protect and collect royalties for artists. BMI, represents about 50,000 artists, among them such contemporary music writers as Barry Manilow, the Bee Gees, Neil Sedaka and Paul Anka.

Under the 1909 law, Cramer noted, there were two 28-year terms during which the work was protected. "Under the new law, it exists for the life of the author and 50 years after his death," he said.

Most musical royalties — 85 percent — come from the broadcasting industry, "which pay us so much a year based on their advertising revenue," Cramer said, noting that there was no difference from the old law.

The major changes, he said, involved the way the law related to juke boxes and socialized non-profit public performances, which were exempt between 1909 and

January 1.

For juke boxes, the owners have to obtain an $8-a-year license from the government. But, said Cramer, of the estimated 500,000 juke boxes in the country, "three out of four are not licensed" even though royalties from each box "amounts to peanuts for the individual song writer."

But, what he called "a significant inequity" under the old law was that non-profit institutions — colleges, private clubs, church groups, veterans and fraternal organizations — did not have to pay royalties for music they used.

"Every supplier of goods and services to non-profit organizations got paid. The telephone company, the electric company, the musicians. They (composers) should not be forced to subsidize music for non profit purposes," Cramer said.

After all, he noted, most composers are not as commercially successful as the Bee Gees and the Paul Ankas, and depend on their royalties for a living.

"There are composers out there whose works are not going to be in the top 40, whose principal exposure is in the non profit area. And it is these people who need it the most who will benefit from the law," Cramer said.

The type of composer he was talking about was one — like BMI's 17 Pulitzer prize winners — whose works are used by "colleges, universities, city symphony orchestras and so forth."

BMI has reached an arrangement through a national college organization by which each school pays 5 1/2 cents for each full-time student to "cover all music dues — including college radio stations — except for special concerts," Cramer said. But, he said, many colleges have not come through.

As to the clubs, organizations and other non-profit groups,

Cramer said their licenses would primarily depend on how much they budget for music each year.

"A group using minimal music would probably only have to pay about $2 a week," he said. "We are trying to convince these people that not only as a matter of law they have to pay, but that morally they should be paying because they're using somebody's product. Next time you hear a song ask: How does a composer get paid?"

Entry-killing plays are not too difficult to envision when the hand you are trying to neutralize is the dummy, where all the cards are on view. But if the closed hand is a threat, it takes exceptional foresight to come up with the right countermeasures. Watch East's tour de force performance on this hand.

There was nothing remarkable about the auction. Both players had their bids, and we wager that the contract would be made more often than not.

West made his natural lead of the king of hearts, which did not bother declarer for the moment. Since the jack in dummy was now a certain stopper, declarer took the ace and went after the clubs by leading low to the king. East took time to study the situation.

He had one advantage over declarer — he knew that the diamonds were not breaking. However, the club suit posed a threat. If declarer held five or six clubs headed by the queen-ten-nine, the contract was unbeatable. But if West held the ten of clubs, there was some hope for the defense.

How Tar Heel Congressmen And Senators Voted

By Roll Call Report
WASHINGTON—Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Sept. 14 through Sept. 20.

HOUSE
ETHICS BILL—Rejected, 97 for and 290 against, an amendment to remove limit on House members' outside income, which is scheduled to take effect in January. The amendment was proposed to a bill (HR 13850) establishing a federal ethics code that requires financial disclosure by high officials of all three branches. A final vote on the bill was delayed at least one week.

Under the limit, a House member's "earned" supplemental income cannot exceed 15 per cent of his congressional pay. At today's House salary of $57,500, the maximum outside figure is $8,625. Earned income is a salary, fee or honorarium. Excluded from the limit is "unearned income" such as interest, stock and bond dividends and income from a family business to which the member devotes little time.

Rep. James Quillen, R-Tenn., the sponsor, said: "I for one deeply resent the suggestion that earned income is unethical and needs to be restricted. Good people are leaving other good people will not want to seek membership in this body. The country will suffer for it."

Rep. Charles Bennett, D-Fla., said "we have priced ourselves out of the mainstream concept of representation...out salaries are too high, very much too high."

Members voting "yea" wanted to remove the limit on House members' outside income.

Rep. Walter Jones, D-1, voted "yea."

Reps. L. H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Richardson Preyer, D-6, Charles Rose, D-7, W. G. Hefner, D-8, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10, and Lamar Gudger, D-11, voted "nay."

Reps. Ike Andrews, D-4, and Stephen Neal, D-5, did not vote.

'REVOLVING DOOR'—Re-

jected, 112 for and 259 against, an amendment to allow unrestricted contact between former high-ranking executive branch officials and the government agency they formerly worked for. It sought to kill language in the new ethics code (HR 13850; see above vote) prohibiting such "revolving door" contact for one year after the official has left his or her federal job.

Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Tex., a supporter, said it is extremely important that we get high-class people in the agencies. If we are going to get (them), we are going to have to permit them to proceed from that agency to a practice in which they can be useful and effective."

Rep. George Danielson, D-Calif., an opponent of the amendment, called the one-year prohibition "a very wholesome, very realistic restriction on conflict of interest."

Members voting "yea" favored removing the restriction on contact between former executive branch employees and their old agency.

Rose, Martin and Broyhill voted "yea."

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Preyer, Hefner and Gudger voted "nay."

Neal did not vote.

AIRPLANE NOISE—Passed, 272 for and 123 against, a bill to cut aircraft noise, chiefly by helping domestic and foreign airlines pay for replacing older, noisier planes with newer, quieter ones. The necessary money would be raised by diverting a portion of passenger and freight taxes and other airline taxes to carriers flying in the U.S. Estimates are that domestic carriers could receive $3 billion for noise abatement, and foreign carriers up to $1 billion. The taxation plan would last until late 1983. Airlines have until 1985 to comply with federal noise standards. The bill (HR 8729) was sent to the Senate.

Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., a supporter, said: "Two-thirds of the estimated $8 billion cost for complying with the governmental mandate will be at airline expense with the other one-third being paid by a noise pollution tax on passengers and shippers.

The general taxpayer will pay nothing."

Rep. Charles Vanik, D-Ohio, an opponent, questioned the bill's constitutionality and impact on the balance-of-payments deficit. "I do not think that the American taxpayers would particularly appreciate this type of foreign aid program in which American tax money is used to retrofit the fleets of foreign nationals," he said.

Members voting "yea" favored the taxation plan to help airlines meet federal noise standards.

Preyer, Rose and Martin voted "yea."

"yea."

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Hefner, Broyhill and Gudger voted "nay."

SENATE

PUBLIC BROADCASTING—Rejected, 20 for and 63 against, an amendment to bring about more frequent congressional review of Corporation for Public Broadcasting (CPB) budget requests. The amendment was proposed to a bill that authorizes funding for public radio and television stations and seeks technological advances (such as clearer television reception) to enlarge the public broadcasting audience. The bill (HR 12605) was passed and sent to conference with the House.

At issue here was the system of multi-year appropriations set up years ago to insulate public broadcasting from congressional pressure on program content. Existing law authorizes CPB funding through fiscal 1980. HR 12605 extends the authorization three additional years, to a total of five years. The amendment was an attempt to kill the extension.

Sen. Robert Griffin, R-Mich, sponsor of the amendment, said: "The courts have ruled that Congress has an oversight responsibility with respect to public broadcasting...We abdicate this responsibility if we do not exercise that oversight authority" at more frequent intervals than required by HR 12605.

Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., an opponent, said: "What we are trying to do is give stability to public broadcasters... We have never been able to guarantee absolute political independence. That is what we are going under this five-year proposal."

Senators voting "nay" favored less frequent congressional review of the public broadcasting budget.

Sen. Robert Morgan, D, voted "nay."

Sen. Jesse Helms, R, did not vote.

PUBLIC BROADCASTING—Rejected, 33 for and 48 against, an amendment to HR 12605 (see vote above) setting a ceiling on salaries of executives of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting (CPB), National Public Radio and the Public Broadcasting Service. The ceiling would be the same as applies to Cabinet secretaries—$66,000 annually. The CPB president reportedly earned $70,000.

Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, the sponsor, said: "I think it is fair to say that the American people are not interested in paying public broadcasting executives exorbitantly high salaries."

Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., an opponent, said the Corporation for Public Broadcasting "is a private entity, without political influence, and let us try to treat it as such. If we start legislating salary limitations, we treat it as a governmental entity."

Senators voting "yea" wanted Congress to cap public broadcasting salaries.

Morgan voted "yea."

Helms did not vote.

NATURAL GAS—Refused, 39 for and 59 against, to kill the natural gas pricing bill by sending it back to a House-Senate conference committee. The vote removed the major obstacle to enactment of the measure this year. The bill (HR 5289), a part of the Administration's national energy plan, was headed toward a final Senate vote and consideration in the House.

It would remove federal price controls on natural gas in 1985, increase supplies to regions that have suffered gas shortages in recent years, lessen U.S. dependence on foreign energy and greatly raise residential and industrial rates.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, sponsor of the motion to send the bill back to committee, said: "The only argument that has been made for it is that it is the only bill in town. It is a C-minus bill" that hits hardest at residential users.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., an opponent of the motion and supporter of the bill, said: "An energy policy that will help us to reduce our dependence on foreign oil and on imports of foreign gas should generate international support for the dollar."

Senators voting "yea" favored sending the natural gas bill back to committee, with instructions that a temporary, skeletal gas bill be returned to the floor.

Morgan voted "nay."
Helms did not vote.

More Unweds Use Abortion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most unmarried women who become pregnant don't have their baby, according to the Health Insurance Institute.

Data from the year 1976, the latest figures available, show that among unmarried women there were 16 legal abortions for every 10 live births.

But among married women there was less than one abortion for every 10 live births.

The statistics were supplied by the U.S. Center for Disease Control.

Textilers Seek Import Curbs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The American textile and apparel industry has been hard hit by unemployment because "imports have increased their share of the U. S. market by 50 percent in just the past decade," according to the American Textile Manufacturers Institute.

In testimony recently before the Senate Subcommittee on International Trade, industry representatives reported that the unemployment rate averaged 7.6 percent in textiles and 10 percent in apparel in 1977 compared with the 6.7 percent rate for all manufacturing industries in the U.S.

The ATMI testimony came in support of legislation intended to supply safeguards for the textile and apparel industry which is the largest manufacturing employer of labor in America, providing jobs for some 2.5 million workers nationally.

PAY THE COSTS
JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Trout fishermen pay the operational costs of Missouri's trout program with daily tags and yearly stamps, according to the state Conservation Commission.

Proposition 10 In Alaska: Land For The People

By ROBERT C. MILLER
ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) — Dr. Michael Francis Beirne, pathologist, conservative Republican and unsuccessful candidate for lieutenant governor of Alaska, wants to give away 30 million acres of land Nov. 7.

His creation, Proposition 10 on the general election ballot, would give Alaskans varying acreage based on the length of their residence.

Beirne's Homestead Initiative follows the trail blazed in California by Howard Jarvis and Proposition 13.

Beirne, too, offered it to the Alaska Legislature and watched it suffocate in the quicksands of legislative committees. He then circulated petitions which were enthusiastically endorsed, forcing the issue before the voters.

Beirne, like Jarvis, blamed "over-government" and capitol bureaucracy for the delay in making public lands available to private owners. Also, Alaska's Gov. Jay Hammond is as opposed to 10 as California's Edmund G. Brown Jr. was to 13, and, like 13, the pollsters predict 10 will pass by a large majority.

Beirne struck a responsive chord when he proposed that every Alaskan 18 years or older be given acreage in proportion to the time he has lived here. Three years of residency would qualify for 40 acres, five would be worth 80 acres and a decade in the 49th state entitled those sourdoughs to 160 acres.

When granted statehood, Alaska was given the right to select 104 million acres from the 375 million federally owned lands comprising the state. But the delays and federal land freezes have slowed the transfer much to the frustration of the land-hungry Alaskans.

"The cheapest thing in Alaska should be land," said Beirne, "but it's the most expensive. Farming up here has all but disappeared as farmers are selling their land to real estate developers for fantastic prices. The state government is merely the trustee of these lands; it is only holding the acreage and managing it for us. Now we want it back."

Beirne says cheap land will not only help Alaska agriculture, but will also make for a "happy and industrious people."

Hammond refuses to endorse Proposition 10, but the man who defeated him in his bid for re-nomination in the August primary, former Interior Secretary Walter Hickel, is all for it.

"Sure there are lots of things wrong with the Beirne initiative," Hickel said, "but the people are entitled to land. There are those who say it will bring chaos. Well, if free people bring chaos, then it's government's chaos. There will probably be adjudication and some legislation needed but we'll clean it up. The idea of getting land to the people is paramount. That's what we're all up here for."

Hammond calls the Beirne initiative "a bummer" and presents statistics showing he has turned more state land over to private owners than all his predecessors combined.

"It's a phony issue to this extent," Hammond explained. "There are going to be mass conveyances of land, far more than all the lands that have been conveyed since Statehood whether I or someone else is governor. But the Beirne thing is loaded with inequities and legal frailties."

"To begin with it is totally unconstitutional. Second, when the word gets out in the lower 48 that land is available in Alaska, we'll have a land rush that will make the Oklahoma rush look like a Sunday school picnic."

Beirne, who got into the state Legislature via a Hammond appointment and was later elected, describes Hammond's administration as a "rat's nest of socialism."

"All the lands in the original 13 colonies were in private ownership," Beirne said, "and each new state was supposed to come into the state with the same privileges as the original

13. "But not here in Alaska. Here the state is holding title to the land, they don't want to give it to the people."

Hickel points out that one third of 1 percent of Alaska is in individual hands.

"We have 375 million acres of land in Alaska," he said, "and less than a million of it is in private hands. Think of any other state where they only had 1 percent! What in the name of God could be wrong if 10 percent were in private hands; the 13 colonies had 100 percent."

Beirne is not disturbed at the prospect of a mass immigration of people from the lower 48 seeking free land.

"Why not?" he asks. "Let them come. We've been trying to get people up here ever since statehood. My initiative will stimulate the Alaska economy even more than the trans-Alaska pipeline."

"Land in Alaska today is selling for as much as $10,000 an acre. It just doesn't make any sense, particularly when you can buy better land in my birth state, Pennsylvania, for $500 an acre. Why should land cost more than a dollar an acre up on the Yukon?"

Under the terms of Proposition 10, the acreage would be given to residents absolutely free. The only requirement would be proof of residency. Unlike previous homestead acts, nobody has to live on the land or develop it to get ownership.

Former Republican attorney general Edgar Boyko said the popularity of the Beirne initiative stems from Alaska's failure to obtain land.

"The people up here have been given only lip service to their demands for land," Boyko said. "The politicians in Juneau have agreed that more lands should be made available to Alaskans, and they've told us how wonderful the old fashioned homestead laws were; yet they've fought both ideas consistently and thwarted every move to convert them to reality."

"Juneau seems to think private ownership is the ultimate lock-up of the land, while many of us feel private ownership of the land is the ultimate freedom, not the ultimate lock-up."

Lots Of Sweat In Organic Food

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — Experts on agricultural herbicides and pesticides generally agree that without such chemicals the United States would not be able to produce an abundant harvest each year.

But they say organic farmers usually are good farmers who must depend on their sweat and know-how to survive.

Dr. Alex Martin, extension weed specialist for the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, said organic farmers use "basic, sound farming principles. It's how they handle the ground, how they till it. Chemicals may be beside the point."

Lloyd Bell, who directs the plant industry division of the Nebraska Agriculture Department, said "when you start talking about thousands of acres, and the amount of time it would take to rotate and plow under crops" farmers of large spreads would have a harder time growing organically.

"With 2,000 acres of soybeans, for instance, you'll have to minimize the weed problem later in the crop year," Bell said. "You can't use up valuable time continually working his soybeans. To increase his yield, he may use chemicals to contain weed problems."

However, he added, "Chemicals aren't going to increase yields if a farmer doesn't follow the instructions on the label."

Bell said the government promotes certain organic farming methods, such as controlling pests with other insects. Such methods take time — as much as 7 to 10 years in some experiments — "and farmers don't have the time to wait," he said.

"My feeling is without chemical pesticides, herbicides and the whole bit, we would never be able to produce the world's supply of food we now do," said Don Carpino, technical service representative for the FMC Corp., which markets agricultural pesticides.

"Organic farming may be all right for the backyard farmer who can readily see what problems he has in one plot. And from an environmental standpoint, the various chemicals have been tested time and time again. It's been shown most herbicides generally dissipate in a couple months and pose no real hazard to the environment."

INTRODUCING ALL-AMERICAN SAVINGS. FINALLY, HIGH INTEREST FOR EVEN ONE DOLLAR.

Having to save up $500 or $1000 just to open a savings account is crazy. It's unfair. It's practically un-American.

So at Planters we're introducing a concept that could revolutionize American savings.

All-American Savings.
With the minimum deposit at a real, honest-to-goodness minimum $1, it makes high interest truly affordable to all Americans. What's more, it lets you add any amount. Anytime.

It's what you'd expect from Planters. After all, we're the bank that still knows the value of a dollar.

Brock's GOP Crusade: Rewinning Black Votes

By CLAY F. RICHARDS
UPI Political Writer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — GOP Chairman Bill Brock was challenged recently to call an upset: a longshot Republican candidate who might dump an entrenched Democrat. Brock picked Arthur Fletcher, a candidate for mayor of Washington, D.C.

That would indeed be an upset. Democrats outnumber Republicans 8-1 in the nation's capital, and Fletcher was a high ranking official of the Nixon administration, which made few friends in the District.

The selection also was significant because Fletcher is black, and blacks are very important to the Republican National Committee this election year.

As the party of Abraham Lincoln, the GOP had solid black support from Emancipation to the New Deal. But Franklin Roosevelt led the blacks into the Democratic Party, and no Republican leader has been able to bring them back.

Brock wants to be the chairman to do so. The RNC this year has allocated a quarter of a million dollars to recruiting black candidates like Fletcher to run under the Republican banner. Black leaders like Jesse Jackson and Benjamin Hooks have been invited to speak at Republican National Committee meetings and the RNC met recently in Detroit to establish an "urban presence."

Brock says the program is going well.

"I'm excited," he said in an interview. "I think we're going to elect a lot of new blacks to public office this year."

Democratic National Chairman John White shows no fear of the Republican bid to break his party's black voting strength. He dismisses the GOP program as "media hocus-pocus."

"Bill Brock is doing things he ought to be doing," White said. "But until Republican officeholders start responding positively to black issues, things like the Humphrey-Hawkins bill, and until there are black officers of the party and more black members of the Republican National Committee it won't make any difference."

"John White is a day late and a dollar short," Brock counters. "We not only have elected black officials, we have men like Aris Allen — the first black GOP state chairman in the history of Maryland."

"It is the Republican Party that is being responsive to black issues — the District of Columbia voting rights (a constitutional amendment giving Washington two senators and a congressman) would not have passed without the active support of the GOP," he said.

The GOP's $250,000 effort began with the hiring of two black consultants from Georgia — John McNeill and Bob Wright. They have spent the year criss-crossing the country recruiting candidates and helping them campaign.

They aren't aiming big — they have no black Republican contenders for Senate or governor, except Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., who was on the political scene long before the new program.

They have six or seven black candidates for the House and a handful running for statewide office, including Allen, a former legislator who is running for lieutenant governor in Maryland.

The biggest recruiting success has been on the lower levels. There are more than 100 black Republican candidates for legislatures in states east of the Mississippi — the states with the heaviest black population — and a handful in the West.

Some are former Democrats, like state Senate candidate Billie Brooks in Florida. Most are bucking heavy odds in Democratic districts, like Fletcher, congressional candidate Ben Andrews in Hartford, Conn., and sanitary district board candidate Delores Foster in Chicago.

"We didn't come in with any illusions that it would be an easy job and the whole process is slow but ongoing," Wright said in an interview. "We've been successful in terms of having a good slate of candidates out there."

"We are still dealing with an entrenched Democratic vote in the black community," he said. "But we are offering the technical skills, the expertise to make it a viable race for black Republicans."

He pointed to a recent national poll that showed the number of blacks who identified with the Democratic party had slipped from 80 percent to 66 percent in the past two years.

While the number that identified with the Republican Party remained at just eight percent, Wright said he was encouraged with the growing pool of black independents which the GOP can woo.

"You are going to see more blacks in the structure of the Republican Party — at all levels, but building in the grassroots level," he said. "More importantly you are not going to just see black can-

Cavern Owner Likes Challenge

NATURAL BRIDGE, Va. (AP) — "I just like caverns. It's a challenge. It's not like going out and building an apartment house," says H.B. Long, sitting a few feet from the entrance to the fourth underground cavern complex he has owned.

From March 1977 until recently, Long and his workers bored a 550-foot, 8-foot by 8-foot tunnel down to the Buck Hill Caverns, cleaned out clay and chipped passageways between rooms, then installed lights.

He renamed it Caverns of Natural Bridge and opened it to the public. He is hoping enough visitors will stop by to make his $900,000 investment worthwhile.

Long has been interested in caverns since he worked as a guide as a teenager. In 1945, he bought Skyline Caverns, located there, and he has also developed caverns in New Market and Harpers Ferry.

RUBBER GLASS?

NOTTINGHAM, England (AP) — A couple of thieves gave up their attempt to raid a jeweler's shop here when their hammer bounced off the safetyglass window.

didates in the GOP, but you're going to see a higher caliber — you're looking at young faces, enlightened black leadership.

Wright says he has also seen a shift in the attitude of the white power structure of the Republican Party.

"Two years ago when we came in here there was no interest," he said. "Now there is new interest (in black Republicans) all across the country and this attitudinal change is a victory in itself."

"The responsiveness on the part of the senators and congressmen to the Black Republican Council on legislation is another dramatic shift," he said.

"When you sit down after election day there are some things you can measure in numbers (of winners) and some things you can measure only in intangibles," he said.

Among the intangibles: "You can pick up the telephone and call any major Republican presidential contender and he'll echo that broadening the base of the party is good, and he will support Brock in his efforts."

In January Ronald Reagan said: "The time has come for Republicans to say to black voters: 'Look, we offer principles that black Americans can and do support.'"

There is no stereotype of a black Republican candidate. They range from housewives to successful businessmen; from conservative to moderate.

Often they have been active in a community organization, or own a successful small business. The Wright-McNeil team comes in and convinces them that the next logical step up the ladder is to run for office this year.

Fletcher, Bill Brock's long shot, probably has better credentials than many of the black candidates, but in many ways he is typical of the black GOP contenders.

He joined the Republican Party in 1948, ran for lieutenant governor of the State of Washington and lost, was appointed deputy secretary of labor by Richard Nixon, and ran unsuccessfully for Republican national chairman in 1976.

He probably will lose again this year.

Nine percent of the registered voters in Washington are Republicans. George McGovern beat Nixon in Washington 8-1 in 1972 when the Democrat was losing everywhere else except Massachusetts. Fletcher, 52, knows his chances of winning as a black Republican are minimal, but he's never given thought to changing parties.

"I joined the Republican Party in Kansas because Kansas was a one party state, and I always felt that government was an instrument we as black people had to get involved in," he said. "The only way to participate was as a Republican."

"After you build roots in a party you don't get up and change — look what it did for John Lindsay and John Connally," he said. "And the men I started out with in 1948 and 1950 were in control of local, state, federal government 10 or 20 years later. When I came to Washington I knew them by their first names."

Even when the Republicans nominated Barry Goldwater to run for President in 1964, Fletcher stayed in the party.

"Nelson Rockefeller was still governor of New York," he said. "I went to the state of Washington and worked for another great Republican, Dan Evans."

Fletcher became Evans' urban affairs adviser in 1964 and four years later ran for lieutenant governor and lost by 50,000 votes, or two percent.

Working in the Nixon administration represented the realization of all Fletcher wanted to accomplish in life.

"In 1937 I went to hear Mary McLeod Bethune," the prominent black educator, Fletcher said. "She said sitting out there in this audience is a man who would advise a president of the United States. I didn't think then it would be me, but she planted the seed."

By the time Nixon and Ford left office, "I'd reached my goal in life, and I was too young to retire."

He said he ran for RNC chairman because he thought a number of the members didn't realize "there were plenty of black Republicans in our own backyard who can talk about more than civil rights and food stamps."

After a better showing (a third place finish) than anyone thought possible, he was beaten by Brock, and now prays the chairman's "sincere outreach effort."

"But I believe in results and performance," he said of the GOP program. "The only way we'll know is after election day."

Easing The Dread Of Hemophilia

By KEN FRANCKLING
PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — For years many males suffering from hemophilia, the hereditary blood disorder known as bleeder's disease, stayed home and shut themselves off from everyday activities.

The constant fear that slight injuries or physical or emotional stress could cause bleeding within their bodies kept them from attending school or seeking jobs. Physical damage was often paralleled by emotional and social problems.

Now, recent medical advances and a wave of comprehensive treatment programs for hemophiliacs is growing across the country, and unlocking the doors.

"Hemophilia used to be such a dismal disease. It was almost a death within life. Now with the concerns of society, and medical advances, we can make these kids almost normal again," said Dr. Peter Smith, director of the hemophilia program at Rhode Island Hospital.

The genetic blood disease strikes males but is transmitted by females. Spontaneous hemorrhaging is caused by an abnormally low level of clotting "factor" in their blood. Those with severe hemophilia often bleed into their joints, which can cause crippling.

In the past, bleeding episodes meant frantic trips to the hospital at any hour, and sometimes long waits. Treatment delays can cause permanent damage to joints, muscles and nerves.

Rhode Island is one of about 21 states which have developed comprehensive treatment programs for hemophiliacs. Classes teach entire families more about the disease and how to cope with it.

Patients, or parents in the cases of youngsters, are taught to administer doses of the factor as needed.

Besides home care, the program includes specially trained dentists, bone specialists, social workers and a physical therapist who helps rehabilitate the muscles of patients with joint problems.

The Rhode Island effort now serves about 40 hemophiliacs. It started in January after the legislature provided a $50,000 grant to set up the program.

The Rhode Island Hemophilia Foundation donated materials and helped locate its victims. Rhode Island Blue Cross agreed to finance the screening, medical exams, lab studies and home care of member patients on a pilot basis.

The major breakthrough allowing home care was development of a new form of clotting factor — a freeze-dried blood extract that is injected into the bloodstream after being mixed with sterile water. Twenty years ago, whole blood had to be given by transfusion.

Under the new program, patients are taught to recognize the "tingling feeling" that is an early warning of hemorrhaging. On hospital visits, patients exercise on the grounds and in the swimming pool. The greatest improvement is seen in youngsters.

"We encourage normal activities including physical education but no contact sports," said Smith, a pediatrician who specializes in diseases of the blood.

Mrs. Frances Barbato of Burrillville says her two hemophiliac sons, Ronald Lindsey, 20, and Andrew, 7, "are trying things now that they wouldn't dare before."

Both boys are two years behind their normal grade levels in school because of time lost to treatments. Now in the home care program, both plan to attend school full time this fall.

Ronald was hospitalized 50 times before the program started. He hasn't been admitted for treatment since January, plays softball and landed a summer job.

"I can go out now without worrying and do more than sit at home and watch TV," he said.

Comprehensive hemophiliac care also holds promise as a way to curb overall health costs — which can reach into the tens of thousands of dollars annually per patient — and benefit society.

"Early treatment now means less long-term damage, less crippling," Smith said. "We are already seeing a dramatic drop in the need for hospitalization at a cost of $150 per day."

"It has really revitalized the lives of the people affected by hemophilia."

Some Seek Early Entry Into College

GREAT BARRINGTON, Mass. (AP) — When Andrew Beaman became bored with high school at the age of 16, he dropped out. But he didn't get a job or hang around street corners. He went to college.

Beaman, of Jackson, Mich., is like hundreds of students who enter college after their sophomore year of high school instead of waiting until they finish their senior year. Last year, over 1 million students took Advanced Placement Examinations for college entry.

But unlike a growing number of young students who have gone on to college without completing their high school years, Beaman went to a four-year college designed specifically for this type of student: Simon's Rock Early College.

"Only 10 percent of our students have completed high school before entering," said Dr. Samuel H. Magill, president of the small liberal arts college in Great Barrington, Mass. "Students who come here are usually good solid 'B' or better students in high school. Like Beaman, most are inquisitive and eager to accelerate the educational process. That's why they want to begin college early."

"I was feeling stifled," recalls Beaman. "I was at a large school and the classes were too big. It just wasn't academically challenging. I wanted to get into an area that would be stimulating and to meet interesting people."

Beaman's complaints are similar to those of other students, Magill says. "Some bright children feel out of sync with their classmates and their schools' curricula. Others are good 'A' and 'B' students who just find classes are too large and stultifying."

At Simon's Rock the classes are small, usually numbering four to 12 students and sometimes as few as three. All the classes are seminars.

There appears to be mounting evidence that high school students are seeking alternatives to the lock-step educational process that requires four years of high school and four years of college, educators agree.

"It is no surprise that students are looking for alternatives," Dr. Janet Lieberman of LaGuardia Community College in New York City recently told educators attending the annual meeting of the American Association of Higher Education.

Quoting a Carnegie Foundation study, she said, "The report found that 30 percent or more of the academic content of the senior year in high school is repeated in the freshman year in college."

While national statistics are meager, the Annual Freshman Survey conducted by the American Council of Education at the University of California at Los Angeles offers some indication.

Of the freshmen from 374 colleges and universities surveyed last year, 0.6 percent did not graduate with their high school class, but took state exams to receive a high school equivalency diploma, while 0.4 percent never completed high school. Slightly over 0.2 percent were 16 years old or younger.

Simon's Rock is the only accredited independent college in the country designed specifically to reduce the combined high school and college educational process from eight years to six, but it is not the only school that accepts early-entry students.

Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore has a special program for gifted math students, some of whom are as young as 12. Tufts University in Boston and Matteo Ricci College at the University of Seattle are among post-secondary schools that admit students without high school degrees.

"Parents might wonder if entry into college without a high school diploma will hurt future opportunities for their children," Magill said. "For students like Andrew Beaman the answer is apparently not."

Beaman graduated with a bachelor's degree from Simon's Rock in June and, at the age of 19, is now enrolled in the University of Michigan Law School. Many of his fellow graduates have gone on to graduate studies at schools such as Harvard and Yale.

"For them, the accelerated college program has led to an early start in their professional careers," Magill added.

Less Salt, Fat, Sugar Content

CHICAGO (AP) — U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Robert A. Bergland says the salt, fat and sugar content in foods prepared by the government for public schools has been reduced greatly in the past year. Bergland told a group of Chicago public school administrators on Monday that studies showing the effects of diets on the functioning of the brain and overall health of a child caused the Agriculture Department to revamp its menus.

ADOPTION TRICK DIXON SPRINGS, Ill. (UPI) — Some ewes at the Dixon Springs Agricultural Center spend several days in the "head-lock" pen in the interest of orphaned lambs. Normally ewes will not willingly adopt the orphans. But in the headlock for several days, the ewe can neither see nor smell the orphan and eventually accepts the orphan as well as her own for nursing.
