Brewer Installed As ECU Chancellor

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Thomas Bowman Brewer took the oath of office as Chancellor of East Carolina University at 11:45 a.m. Saturday, and pledged to pursue a "path of excellence," for the school.

Brewer, the seventh administrative head in East Carolina's 71-year history, was formerly installed in academic ceremonies on the North Lawn that included a procession of more than 600 dignitaries in academic regalia representing other colleges and universities, learned societies, the faculty and administration of the university, the ECU Board of Trustees, and student leaders and scholars.

A Fort Worth, Texas native, Brewer became chancellor of East Carolina in July after serving six years at Texas Christian University as vice-chancellor and dean of the university.

After North Carolina Supreme Court Chief Justice Susie Sharp administered the oath of office, Brewer said, "in this administration we shall try to remain faithful to our original charge and covenant that was etched in 1907. The seal of our university carries the inscription, 'To Serve' and neither power nor principality will be permitted to tarnish this inscription."

East Carolina, Brewer said, "has always been close to its people, and its people have always been close to it. Our people historically have been in close harmony with the ideology of workingmen with respect to education," and, "I am sure the voters who supported the bond issue for the establishment of East Carolina in 1907 would have agreed with the resolution passed at a general meeting of mechanics and workingmen held in New York City in 1829. The resolution reads: Resolved, that next to ife and liberty, we consider education the greatest blessing bestowed upon mankind.'"

Saying North Carolina has long had people with vision and understanding with regard to education, the new chancellor pointed to the fact that a school fund was created in 1825 and an elementary school system started in 1839. "Perhaps more noteworthy," he continued, is the fact that the state's first constitution in 1776 provided for the creation of a state university.

"No other state can say this, and historians give high grades to the leadership responsible for this original step in education.

"But even historians like myself cannot be satisfied with a preoccupation about our past in educational matters. A new urgency presses upon us.

"In many respects our schools have ably discharged their responsibilities. We probably have the largest pool of highly qualified students who seek admission to graduate or professional schools than at any time in our history," Brewer said.

"One might think that there should be rejoicing throughout the land that our schools and their graduates have deported themselves so nobly.

"But such is not the case. Our disappointments in education center around our failures to provide, in point of truth, an education for all American youth, not just the exceptionally able. Considered in this light, we all have heavy responsibilities ahead of us."

Brewer continued, "I have often stated that we shall pursue the path of excellence at East Carolina and I repeat this pledge now. But we want to do this with realism, and part of this realism is not to panic . . . education has always been a re-cycling movement inall cultures and all civilizations.

The chancellor then said a special message on education to Congress by President John Kennedy in 1961, "has relevance to me as I begin service in the chancellorship at East Carolina."

Kennedy said, "'I have tried

Egyptian Delegates To Continue Negotiations

President Carter said Saturday he had persuaded Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to keep Egypt's peace negotiators in Washington to continue negotiations with Israel.

A State Department spokesman said Sadat "received an urgent message from President Carter" and also had 'received a full report from General Kamal Hassan Ali" on the status of the negotiations.

"In view of these developments, it has been decided that Ministers Ali and (Butros) Ghali will not go to Cairo for consultations at present," State Department spokesman George Sherman said. "The Egyptian delegation will stay in close touch with the Secretary of State."

The abrupt switch in plans for the Egyptian delegation to return to Cairo for consultations followed a lengthy meeting between the Egyptian negotiators and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance Friday night.

Israel's peace negotiators said there were still "many difficulties" to overcome in the Washington talks and expressed the hope that both the United States and Egypt "will realize our problems at home."

In Cairo, an official spokesman said Sadat met with Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil Saturday and then left it up to Ali, "to decide whether it would be necessary for him to return home for consultations or to send one of his delegation members instead or not to send anyone at all."

Carter, stumping in the rain in Buffalo, N.Y., on behalf of New York Gov. Hugh Carey, told a rally, "We're moving toward peace in the Middle East."

"It's slow, tedious and it's not sure," Carter said. "We've had trouble in recent hours with the Israeli settlement issue on the West Bank. The Egyptians have decided to withdraw their negotiators."

"I contacted President Sadat last night and said 'leave your negotiators in Washington,'" Carter said. "'I'll do what my friend Jimmy Carter asks me to,'" Carter quoted Sadat as saying.

Cairo radio reported that the Egyptian negotiators had decided to remain following new instructions from Cairo.

Official Egyptian spokesman Mansour Hassan said Egypt had "no sense of a major crisis" in the negotiations despite the cloud cast on them by the Israeli cabinet decision to expand Jewish settlements in the occupied Jordan West Bank and the Gaza strip.

The initial Egyptian ecision to recall its negotiators came after the Israeli decision to expand its West Bank settlements and was interpreted in diplomatic circles as a sign of Egyptian displeasure.

However, the official Egyptian spokesman, Mansour Hassan, told reporters, "We don't feel a sense of major crisis, but we believe there are certain points that have to be clarified."

Earlier, Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan had minimzed the Egyptian decision to recall its negotiators.

"It is their privilege to go home for consultations," Dayan said in an interview with the state-run Israeli television before the Egyptian decision to stay. "There will be a temporary respite and we will wait for them to come back just as they waited for us."

"The Egyptian amendments (to the U.S. draft peace treaty) contain things that are difficult for us as they may find the amendments we are seeking difficult for them," Dayan said.

"There is no way but for the two sides to make concessions and reach an accord," Dayan said. "Gaps cannot be bridged without concessions and despite the tough amendments sought by the two parties, I believe agreement is possible."

Israel's Defense Minister Ezer Weizman, also speaking before the surprise Egyptian move, said he hoped both Cairo and Washington "will realize our problems at home — they don't now — and we will be able in the near future to continue the talks as before."

Israeli sources in Tel Aviv said at the time that the Israeli decision to expand the West Bank settlements had been announced to soften hard-line criticism of the draft treaty which the cabinet approved.

"I estimate and hope we shall overcome the difficulties," Weizman said. "The two countries desire peace so much, and have made such huge progress, that I can't believe that everything will collapse."

Soviet Trawler Rescued Plane Crash Survivors

HONOLULU (UPI) — Ten survivors of the crash of a U.S. Navy surveillance plane were headed towards the Soviet Union Saturday aboard a Russian trawler.

The survivors and five others crashed in icy North Pacific waters in a P-3 Orion less than 300 miles from Siberia. Bodies of three were recovered by the trawler MVS Senyavina and two others were still missing.

U.S. and Soviet aircraft continued to circle the area in hope of spotting the missing men. The U.S. Coast Guard cutter Jarvis also was en route Saturday but was delayed by rough seas.

The P-3 was a four-engine turboprop loaded with equipment to track Soviet ships and eavesdrop on Soviet military communications. The plane was ditched Thursday because of electrical and hydraulic failure 230 miles southwest of Attu Island at the end of the Aleutian island chain.

Shortly afterwards, the U.S. Embassy in Moscow sought Soviet help. The survivors were picked up after 12 hours on life rafts in 45-degree water, and their condition was not known.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said President Carter was briefed on the situation and that Secretary of State Cyrus Vance sent a cable of appreciation to the Soviets. The plane, deployed in the Aleutians at Adak, was under the control of the 3rd Fleet Command in Hawaii. In Honolulu the Navy denied the P-3 had passed over Soviet territorial waters.

The dead were identified as AW-3 James D. Brooner, 23, Creswell, Ore.; AWAN Richard M. Garca, 20, San Jose, Calif., and AWAN Randall P. Rodriguez, 19, Denver, Colo.

The known survivors were identified as Lt. J.G. John G. Ball Sr., 31, Pasadena, Calif.; Lt. J.G. Edward N. Caylor, 26, Clyde, N.C.; Lt. J.G. Bruce E. Forshay, 24, Boulder, Colo.; Ens. John J. Ingram Avoided Taxes Through House Swap

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Democratic Senate candidate John Ingram Friday said he avoided paying some taxes two years ago by swapping a home in Cary for one in Asheboro.

Ingram, during a television interview taped Friday for broadcast Saturday evening over WRAL-TV, acknowledged he arranged the exchange to avoid taxes. He said it is a common and legal practice.

Asked after the taping if the deal was specifically to avoid capital gains taxes, Ingram said "yes."

The Charlotte Observer reported Saturday it checked several tax experts and the experts pronounced the transaction legal but questionable and unusual.

A tax lawyer for the state Justice Department, George Boylan, said he had "never heard of such a deal and while it may be OK, it smells." He was given the details of the trade but was not told Ingram was involved.

Two More Of Wilmington 10 Free

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Two members of the Wilmington 10 who were released from prison Friday called for support of Ben Chavis, the group's leader and the only member still behind bars.

"We leave yet another brother behind us," said Connie L. Tindall after his release. "I trust that those who have supported us will continue to do so until such time as we can clear our names of the charges held against us."

Tindall, 38, and Marvin Eugene Patrick, 26, left the New Hanover County prison unit about 9 a.m. Friday and were met by friends and family. They will live with their parents while on parole and say they plan to work for a local contractor.

Must Pass Competency Test

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — This year's high school seniors who fail to graduate, will have to pass the North Carolina competency test in order to graduate with a diploma next year, a state education official says.

The attorney general's office has ruled that such pupils are considered members of the class of 1980, the first to be required to pass the competency test in math and reading, said John Bolton, a consultant with the state Department of Public Instruction.

This year's seniors cannot take the test this year, however, even if school officials feel they will be failed. However, they are eligible for remedial aid.

Du Pont Contributes $48,206 To Pitt County United Way

KINSTON — A check in the amount of $48,206.10 has been presented to the Pitt County United Way by employees of the Du Pont facility here.

Jerry Fulford, Pitt campaign chairman, accepted the employee contribution here this week from representatives of the plant's United Way team.

Du Pont campaign co-chairmen, Tom Mallison and Grant Warner, reported that the $48,206.10 designated for Pitt County was part of the overall contribution and pledge total of $148,965 raised by company employees for the annual program.

According to the co-chairmen, the Du Pont campaign contributes funds to Lenoir, Pitt, Craven and Wake Counties each year through the employee participation. Each contributor designates the county he or she wishes to support, it was explained.

This year, there were 37 contributors in the $200-plus group from Pitt County, they noted, and a total of 123 employees contributing or pledging $200 or more in the overall campaign.

On hand for the check presentation at Du Pont were Mallison and Warner, as well as Pitt County campaign chairman for Du Pont, Bob Moore, and Hazel Smith, a member of the Pitt United Way committee at the plant.

The campaign goal for the Pitt United Way for 1978-79 has been set at $312,269.12, according to Joe Tripp, executive director.

Claims Big Business Won Most Shots

By MICHAEL J. CONLON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress dealt consumers both victories and defeats this session but big business called the shots in almost every case, Ralph Nader's lobbyists said Saturday.

"Consumers in 1978 won only when they sought rform that neither antagonized big business nor aroused anti-bureaucracy fanatics nor unified Congress' conservative party," said Mark Green, director of Congress Watch, which is operated by Nader's Public Citizen Inc.

Congress was not simply anti-consumer, Green said, it was "more a corporate Congress" dominated by an "iron triangle" of big business money, anti-government sentiment and Republican unity.

"Corporate advocates have ridden the crest of the anti-government wave that broke over Congress this year," Green said. "From Proposition 13 to the Kemp-Roth (tax-cutting) bill to the calls for legislative veto, the polemical force behind this sentiment cannot be doubted."

Congress, he concluded, is like a fish swarm, darting in the same direction at the slightest disturbance. "This year," he said, "Proposition 13 surely made a bigger splash than consumer groups."

Green made the comments as part of his group's annual voting index — a rating system based on how members voted on 40 key issues involving consumer protection, government reform, energy, tax reform and waste-subsidies.

Highest score — 98 percent — went to Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, and Reps. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., and Robert Drinan, D-Mass. The rating means they voted "right" 98 percent of the time.

Other high Senate scores went to Edward Kennedy, D-Mass. (93 percent); Paul Sarbanes, D-Md. (90 percent) and Dick Clark, D-Iowa (88 percent). The worst Senate score, 10 percent, went to Milton Young, R-N.D.

The worst House score, 3 percent, went to Arlan Strangeeland, R-Minn.

Green said the cumulative data "indicate an inching toward the center by both parties. House northern Democrats slipped from 78 percent 'right' votes in 1976 to 63 percent in 1978. Senate northern Democrats fell from 73 percent to 64 percent.

"Yet," he added, "southern Democrats in the Senate rose from 26 percent to 35 percent — as did Senate Republicans, 27 percent to 30 percent, and House Republicans, 20 percent to 23 percent.

Puppies Ghost

"THE GHOST FROM PUPPIES PAST" strikes in Greenville.

A city vehicle was vandalized early Friday when someone let the air out of three of its tires while it was parked at 216-A Stancil Drive.

According to a police report, Peggy Carter, driver of the vehicle, discovered three flat tires when she went out to go to work.

The tires were not cut and city maintenance was called to the scene to fill the tires with air.

Besides the obvious evidence, a note was left on the truck's windshield that read: "THE GHOST OF PUPPIES PAST."

Local police have no suspects at this time.

In other activities, Butler Wendell Lewis of 104 Barnies Lane Trailer Park was charged early Saturday with driving under the influence after his car collided with three parked cars at Brown-Wood Pontiac at Broad and Fourteenth streets.

However, Lewis registered a .09 percent on the breathalyzer test and was released on the grounds of "no probable cause." Lewis told investigating officers that he fell asleep at the wheel.

Damages were estimated at $325 to the Lewis car, $4,450 to the other three vehicles and $20 to a city sign and post.

The Nobel Peace Prize For Sadat, Begin

First From Mideast

By ERIK WOLD
Associated Press Writer

OSLO, Norway (AP) — The awarding of the 1978 Nobel Peace Prize to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel won wide praise in the West, but was condemned by Palestinians and Arabs.

A Palestinian spokesman denounced Friday's decision as "against the concept of peace and justice."

President Carter's role in working with Sadat and Begin was noted by the Norwegian Nobel committee. He was not considered for a share in the prize because he was "proposed too late, namely after the Feb. 1 deadline," said Aase Lionaes, chairwoman of the committee.

Carter said the decision of the five-member committee "has ratified a decision already made by millions around the world. The work you have done so far must not be left uncompleted."

Sadat, 59, and Begin, 65, are the first from the Mideast to win the 77-year-old prize.

The award comes at a time when Egyptian and Israeli negotiators face new obstacles in their drive to conclude a peace treaty and end 30 years of hostilities. Face-to-face talks in Washington are suspended while the three countries consider Egyptian and Israeli reservations to a U.S.-proposed draft treaty. Top Egyptian negotiators are back in Cairo to confer with Sadat.

The Nobel committee said the award was to honor past actions and to "encourage further efforts to work out practical solutions which can give reality to those hopes of a lasting peace as they have been kindled by the agreements."

The award honors 11 months of a peace initiative started by Sadat's visit to Israel last November. The citation said the trip breached a "psychological wall" that had separated the two countries since the birth of Israel as a modern nation in 1948.

The peace initiative is strongly opposed by most Arab nations. In Damascus, Syria, a Palistine Liberation Organization spokesman said the award was made "while Begin is still an aggressor against Palestinian land and rights and while Sadat is Begin's partner."

In New York, Hasan A. Abdel Rahman, deputy U.N. observer for the PLO, said it was "against the concept of peace and justice" for Begin to get the award. He did not comment on Sadat.

Israel and Egypt worked out a framework for a treaty at a summit meeting called by Carter at Camp David, Md., last month.

Aides to Begin said the prime minister would not violate the Jewish Sabbath by commenting publicly on the prize, but Israeli Radio said he was "extremely excited."

Sadat also had no immediate comment but Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil said Sadat was "honored by the prize, and such an honor has not been diminished by sharing it with any other leader."

The medals and the equivalent of $172,000, at today's exchange rates, will be presented in Oslo Dec. 10. The amount came to $165,000 a few weeks ago when the other prizes were awarded, but since then, the Swedish kronor has increased in value.

Recruiting For Major Shuffle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Griffin Bell and presidential adviser Charles Kirbo are engaged in high-level recruiting for President Carter in preparation for a major administration shuffle, the Atlanta Journal-Constitution reported Sunday.

"I am not at liberty to tell you about it," the newspaper quoted Kirbo as saying in a telephone interview last week. "Yes, it is for sub-Cabinet positions, but I just can't go into it."

The newspaper said White House sources acknowledged the recruiting is in preparation for a shuffle in the uppermiddle level of the administration anticipated after the Nov. 7 election.

The newspaper said the shuffle apparently reflects a major shift in Carter's approach to governing. Carter had announced immediately after his election in 1976 that he would rely on his Cabinet secretaries to do their own departmental staffing.

In a December 1976 interview with the newspaper, Kirbo said, "I think he's going to appoint what he thinks are good men to the Cabinet and rely on them to get control of their agencies. He's going to give them a lot of rope. If they don't perform, he's going to change them."

Carter's aides, however, have complained that Carter's own officials have thwarted the implementation of the president's policies, the newspaper said.

High-level officials have repeatedly testified to congressional committees and made public pronouncements that countered administration positions, the newspaper said.

Kirbo and Bell performed somewhat similar recruiting roles for Carter in 1976. Bell was primarily responsible for drafting the list of questions to be answered by possible vice presidential candidates, and Kirbo did the actual interviewing.

Kirbo advised Carter on the full spectrum of Cabinet appointments, whil Bell said he only felt qualified to evaluate those in legal areas, the newspaper said.

Seeking Flim-Flam Transients

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — State and federal officials are looking for four transients who posed as legitimate businessmen and fleeced merchants and banks in Burlington and Greensboro out of thousands of dollars.

Officers said they were unsure how many banks and merchants were taken in by the four men, traveling in pairs in two fancy cars.

"This is one of the biggest cases of this type I've seen in a good while," said a Burlington detective. He said he knew of two banks that lost a total of about $10,000.

"They're still calling in and reporting stuff. I can't tell you how many banks have been involved. There's no telling how many were involved and still don't know it," he said.

Increase In Full Fare Costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most full-fare airline tickets will cost a few dollars more next month as a result of a 3.2 percent base fare increase authorized by the Civil Aeronautics Board.

The new rates authorized Friday go into effect Nov. 10 for most major airlines and a few days later for others.

The CAB decided that a 3.2 percent increase in the base rates was justified even though the airlines had asked for only a 2.5 percent increase. Most major airlines participated in the request.

Nicaraguan Mediation Resumes

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Mediated talks between President Anastasio Somoza and representatives of a coalition of opposition groups are underway again after a week's recess.

Talks resumed Friday, with the opposition demanding that Somoza step aside and let members of his party negotiate for him in political settlement talks. Somoza said he wanted the people of Nicaragua to study the opposition demand for one week.

Negotiators for the Broad Opposition Front, an alliance of 15 political parties and unions, want Somoza to resign, end his family's 41-year rule, and turn over power to a three-man junta and "governing council." Somoza has vowed to remain in office until his six-year term expires in 1981.

Must Set Up Avoidance Systems

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The Air Line Pilots Association says Congress must move now to set up collision avoidance systems at major airports, saying the urgency of the need was demonstrated by the deaths of 144 persons here in the nation's worst aviation disaster.

Capt. Raymond C. Gerber, the pilot association's U.S. director, told a congressional hearing Friday that the Federal Aviation Adminstration has postponed action on a collision avoidance system, holding out for the "ultimate utopian solution."

He said development of such a system was recommended in late 1969 by an FAA study group and the National Transportation Safety Board.

N C Due More Natural Gas

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The state should have a bigger supply of natural gas this winter, but an attorney representing the state in negotiations with a pipeline supplier says even more is needed.

Transcontinental Gas Pipeline Co. (Transco) and its customers proposed a settlement Friday giving North Carolina 10 percent more gas next year than provided for in an earlier plan, said Morton Simons, a Washington attorney representing the state in negotiations with the pipeline company.

Coupled with an increase in Transco's overall supply, the aggreement would give North Carolina more than 20 percent more gas than it has received in the past 12 months.

Longest Trial Ends

CADILLAC, Mich. (AP) — The longest trial in Michigan's history has come to an end with the dismissal of all claims in a $250,000 lawsuit against the firms blamed for one of the worst agricultural disasters in U.S. history.

Wexford County Circuit Judge William Peterson, in issuing a 155-page opinion based on more than 14 months of testimony, ruled Friday that the chemical PBB is not harmful in small quantities.

Peterson dismissed a suit filed by Roy and Marilyn Tacoma, of Falmouth, Mich., who had to shoot 115 of their dairy cattle in July 1976 because, they said, the animals had become worthless as a result of PBB contamination.

Peterson ordered the Tacomas to pay all court costs, which one lawyer estimated ran to $10,000 a day.

Will Not Release Report

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Superior Court judge said Friday his 1976 order stands and a three-year-old investigation into an alleged political slush fund operated by Southern Bell Telephone Co. will not be released.

Superior Court Judge James H. Pou Bailey said an order he issued in January 1976 that bars Justice Department officials from publically discussing investigation reports remains in effect.

But Bailey said he would consider rescinding the order if asked to do so and if the investigation is complete. Justice Department officials could not be reached Friday for comment on the status of the investigation.

Navy Ship Robbed

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Two masked bandits clubbed a Navy paymaster, stole his keys and the combination to the safe of the top-secret submarine tender USS Dixon. Missing is a $207,000 payroll, and authorities say it looks like an inside job.

"It certainly looks at this time like an inside job," Lt. Doug Rein, public affairs officer for the submarine base at Ballast Point on San Diego Bay, said Friday.

Ensign Brian John Bogart told FBI and Navy investigators that two men wearing rubber masks and surgical gloves and armed with pistols and nightsticks broke into his quarters Thursday night.

They wanted his keys and the combination to the safe aboard the Dixon, which contained payroll money scheduled to be doled out Monday.

When he refused, Bogart told authorities the two men beat him up and he lost consciousness. When he awoke, he told authorities, his keys, the combination to the safe, and one of the masked men were gone.

Bogart, 23, was reported in stable condition with severe head injuries at Balboa Naval Hospital. The FBI said agents were unable to question him extensively because he had been sedated.

Asks For Durham Referendum

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Saying almost 90 percent of its members want it to work for mixed drinks in Durham, the board of directors of the city's Chamber of Commerce voted Friday to ask the Durham County Commissioners to schedule a county-wide vote on the issue.

The county is sandwiched between Orange and Wake counties. Orange County voters approved mixed drink sales recently, and Wake voters will go to the polls Jan. 12. Chamber board members said they want the Durham vote to be the same day as Wake's.

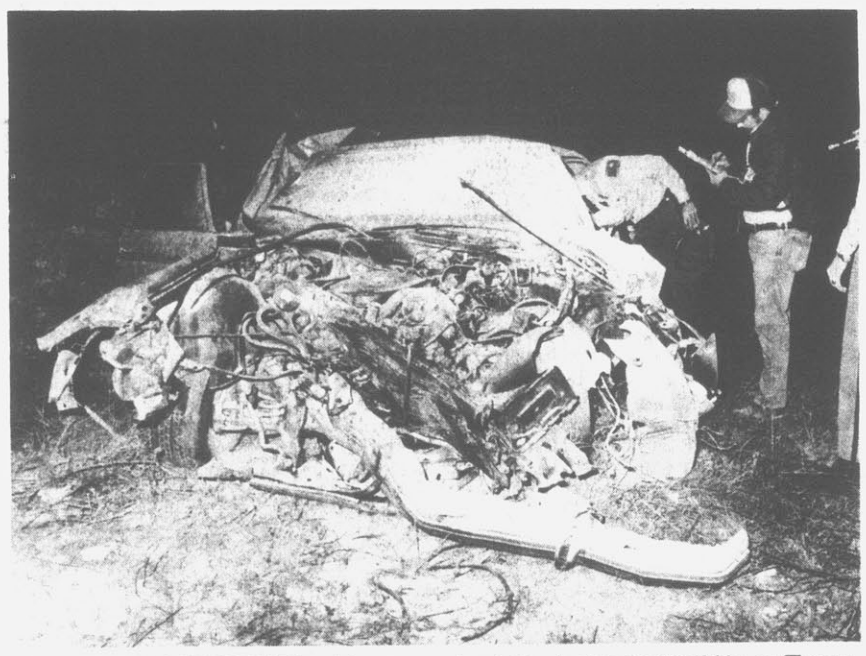

Campaign Underway In Asheville

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The vote in Asheville on liquorby-the-drink is more than two months away, but both wet and dry forces have started campaigning. And the city's mayor and vice mayor are on opposite sides.

Just three days after opponents of mixed drinks declared their campaign strategy, Mayor Roy. M. Trantham and four former mayors said they had joined forces to work for liquor by the drink. The referendum is set for Jan. 16.

Both sides say they will wage a campaign to inform and educate the public.

One For The Over-Forty Crowd

Gaylord Perry, Williamston native who still makes his home there, has been a source of pride for Eastern North Carolina over many years.

Gaylord made it big in major league baseball and had been honored with the Cy Young award in the American League.

This year, the 21-game winner won the award a second time, with the most recent one coming in the National League. He was the first pitcher ever to win the award in both leagues and folks around these parts who have followed his career are as proud of him as they can be.

Now 40 years old, he became the oldest pitcher ever to win the award.

For most 40s and over the prime exercise is leaning over to tune the television set in order to watch Gaylord pitch, and there is the Williamston wonder still taking his turn regularly and getting out batters half his age. What's more, he is not even thinking about retirement, and talks of winning 20 games for some years in the future.

When informed of the award, Gaylord commented, "This is great. I have decided to dedicate this Cy Young award to the people 40 and over."

A nice gesture; here's hoping just a few of us can live up to the physical standards Gaylord Perry has set.

Didn't Turn Back Clock? Back To Bed

Good morning.

If you turned your clock back an hour last night and arose at the usual time you got an extra hour's sleep.

If you didn't roll the clock back and it's your normal hour to get up, you can go back to bed. You've got an extra hour's sleep coming.

If all that's confusing, remember that this is the weekend most of the nation returns to Eastern Standard Time. Starting today it will be lighter earlier in the morning and darkness will come sooner in the evening.

Want To Visit Nature?

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — A mathematically inclined state parks expert has come up with an astonishing figure: North Carolin has one and one-half inches of trail for each citizen.

And almost all of that (86 percent) is located in the mountains where 17 percent of the people live.

Thus, if you want to hike, ride horseback, canoe, operate a dirtbike or pedal a bicycle on a public trail, you're almost out of luck.

The North Carolina Trails Committee, however, is hearing completion of a plan for the State Trails System which will provide a mountains-to-the-sea trail across North Carolina, with other trails branching off to parks and scenic areas.

The first step will be an 80-mile trail over the next five years at a cost of just over a million dollars, for buying the land, and some $650,000 for signs and camping sites along the route.

The first State Recreation Trail was designated in May: the Lumber River Canoe Trail in Scotland County. The second was designated in September: the French Broad River CAnoe Trail in Transylvania, Buncombe and Henderson Counties. Both were local government projects.

There are some 2,500 miles of public trail in North Carolina, mostly in national parks and forests in the west.

Another "State"

Wilkes County has officially adopted a county seal with the label "Great State of Wilkes", which prompted mention in this column of that, plus comment on some other counties which have used that title.

It turns out there is still another: the "State of Robeson" was an affectionate title long applied to that county when it was believed to be the state's largest in land area.

"The phrase still is heard occasionally — most often in reference to the past and politics. It is a nostalgic term linked with the land and the people, and times when local government was more like home rule, relatively independent of state and federal assistance and supervision", commented The Robesonian, newspaper published in Lumberton.

BILL NOBLITT

Wilkes may need the official designation, the editorial chided, to help reconstruct its "moonshine capital" image.

Unofficially, the "State of Robeson" designates a "big old county with fertile fields and a multiracial population, a productive past and a progressive future, an identity all its own and still very much a part of the state ..." the newspaper stated.

Day Care

A recent column on the cost of day care in North Carolina pointed out that public facilities must meed federal regulations and threfore cost twice as much as private ones, concluding that a recommendation is being considered at the state level to raise the standards for private operations to the federal level — costing everybody more.

"We did recommend just the opposite," an official protested.

The recommendation is to lower the standards for private day care operations qualifying for federal funds to Double A. All are now operating at Single A. So, they would not have to be raised as high as they might have been had more stringent federal standards been called for.

The end result? Still higher standards for the private day care operations, regardless of how the words are turned.

Sunday Morning Notes

Dr. John H. Horne , dean of admissions at ECU, has done a lot of traveling around North Carolina . . . and he has found many strange names for places in our state.

He presented the program to the Greenville Lions Club recently and passed around this little story based on North Carolina community names:

Joe and Ela Wood decided that they needed to know more about North Carolina. They decided that if they were to take the trip, Whynot visit their friends Abner, Mollie, Lizzie, Otto, Ruth and Stella.

Thus, instead of depending upon Luck and Askin a lot of questions, the put their Faith and Trust in the state Index of towns listed on the state map. In order to do Justice to each other they decided to establish a Cycle of turns at driving. In planning the trip they decided that thrift was a necessity as they could not be Hasty and leave Gap(s) in their plans. Joe had to buy a new Suit and Ela [illegible] a new Bandana and they went to several stores before the could Pick(s) the item to satisfy them.

As they examined the map they were very Alert to some of the names of towns and geographical features. Joe hee-Haw(ed) as he read of the Scaly animals such as Lizzard Lick and the frogs at Frog Level and Frogsboro as they tried to catch the insects at Bughill. Abner was the last friend they planned to visit and he lived at Loafers Glory. However, they knew that if they visited him they would have to go by his sister Gay'(s) and she lived in an Old Trap of a House at Old Hundred just an Acre away. They took their dog, Spot, and cat, Toast, with them. As they approached Bakersville the trip plan advised them to turn left on Possum Trot Road and continue until they came to the intersection with Dish Rag Road, Loafers Glory would be just two Miles(ville) to the Southwest.

And we might add that after all that traveling around North Carolina Ela Wood became star struck and yearned for an acting career.

She dragged Joe to Hollywood by way of California . . . never leaving our own Pitt County.

The editor of "The Chapel Hill Newspaper" wrote last week of bad mannered people who go to football games and should be put in sections together.

The types were spotted at Kenan Stadium but they are familiar to all of us who go to football games.

There are those who leave the game early if their team is behind . . . those who make frequent trips to the rest rooms or the concession stands, and the female who walks up and down the aisle as if looking

Other Editors Say
Unsound Reasoning

(The Durham Sun)

As long as there are persons in leadership roles with lack of vision who take the paranoid approach to problems being shown by some of the opponents to competency testing in the public schools, young people at all educational levels will be the losers.

A case in point involves statements made by some of these leaders prior to the Tuesday night discussion by the State Board of Education to determine passing scores for the tests.

Nelson Johnson, co-chairman of the Durham-based North Carolina Coalition for Quality Education, called competency testing "a scheme by the industrial barons of North Carolina" to see that lower-wage employees would be readily available.

Johnson is chasing paper tigers. It is unthinkable that our educational leaders on the highest level would plot with industry to deny any person the right to seek the highest possible level of competency.

Co-chairman Paul Bermazohn called the testing a denial of a student's right to education. How Bermanzohn can equate competency testing with the student's right to education strains the imagination. Tests of every kind have been a part of the educatinal process forever, and the purpose of any test is to determine the competency of a student. Would Bermanzohn eliminate all testing in the schools?

The Rev. Leon White, director of the Commission for Racial Justice of the United Church of Christ, said that failure to pass the tests "will unduly mark a young person for the rest of his or her life as a failure, an incompetent."

Does White think that a diploma can make up for a lack of ability to read or write? Does he think a diploma, high school, college or any other kind, assures anyone of a good job — regardless of that person's job performance? If so, White needs a lot more experience in dealing with the real world.

The basic purpose of education is and always has been to teach people to think. Many of the leaders in the anti-competency testing controversy obviously missed the boat.

Exotic Beef Cattle

By SUSAN STOLER
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The American beef business is going "exotic."

Joining the Texas Longhorns, the whitefaced Herefords and the black Angus typically found on Southwestern ranchlands are several European breeds — "exotics," they are called.

The foreign influx comes as ranchers are looking for new ways to provide the most beef at the lowest cost. Breeding experts are encouraged with the early results.

"It's had a major impact on domestic beef cattle breeding," says Tom Cartwright, a cattle breeding specialist at Texas A&M University.

They carry lyrical French names like Maine-Anjou and Limousin; and Italian names like Chianina, Marchigiana and Romanola. Another exotic breed is Simmental, from the Simmen Valley of Switzerland.

They follow earlier breeds brought across the oceans to America, including the hump-backed Brahman from India, white Charolais from France and the British breeds that kicked off large-scale American beef production — Angus, Hereford and shorthorn.

Cattlemen long ago discovered that the offspring of domestic cattle crossed with other breeds grew more efficiently and had other desirable characteristics. The desired traits are known as hybrid vigor.

Commercial cattle operations, for example, might cross an exotic breed known for size, fast growth and lean meat with one known for smooth muscle, mothering ability and carcass quality.

In the early 1970s, domestic breeders developed interest in the European breeds but were hampered by quarantines on imports. The long, expensive process of importing a single animal takes up to three years and possibly $2,000 per animal.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Strom vs. White House

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Old Strom Thurmond, high on the White House hit list, is running way ahead of Jimmy Carter's handpicked candidate in a vivid demonstration of the limits of presidential political power.

President Carter's political lieutenants have bracketed Sens. Thurmond, Jesse Helms of North Carolina and John Tower of Texas as Republicans of the "radical right" who must make way for the New South. Promising all kinds of aid, the White House enlisted one of the New South's brightest faces: Harvard educated Charles (Pug) Ravenel, who came home to South Carolina from Wall Street four years ago to win the gubernatorial nomination only to be ruled off the ballot because of residency requirements.

If the trend holds, the exercise of presidential power will have failed. Thurmond, first elected to the Senate as a Democrat in a write-in 24 years ago, has used the homely old technique of constituency service to counter ideology, charisma and the White House.

The president's motives in pushing Ravenel against Thurmond were a little clouded, centering on his private commitment to Richard Riley, his South Carolina campaign manager, for governor in 1978. That meant pushing Ravenel into the Senate race against Thurmond so Riley could run for governor.

The presidential effort included an ardent pep talk to Ravenel from Vice President Walter Mondale in the White House last year and a pledge that Hamilton Jordan, chief presidential aide, would provide uncommon assistance. Jordan was the star attraction at two Ravenel fund-raisers, one in Manhattan, one here. The president and his mother have both campaigned for Ravenel.

So Ravenel bowed to White House importuning, tackling one of the South's most indestructible political forces. Thurmond won his first election here as Edgefield County superintendent of education in 1929 — six years before the 43-year-old Ravenel was born. By conventional standards, he ought to be ripe for plucking on grounds of age and the evolution of the South from the race wars when Thurmond was the loudest states' rights leader and an avowed segregationist.

But Thurmond has neutralized both issues. With a 33-year-old wife and four children under 8, he seems immune to the "senility issue." As for race, Thurmond has moved with the times, building a formidable bridge to the black community. He could double his 1972 black vote of 8 percent.

That bridge has been partly constructed by Tom Moss, Thurmond's black political ace, and partly by clever constituency service. Watching Thurmond campaign last week, we saw many constituents on that bridge.

"Why will I vote for Thur-

POINT OF NO RETURN

All planes on overseas flights reach a point of no return. The planes of course start out with enough fuel to reach their destination. Up to this point in the flight the planes can always turn back if something goes wrong. But past that point the fuel supply will not be sufficient to get them back, and they must keep on toward their destination regardless of conditions on board.

All through life we face points of no return. Opportunity passes, and we can never again retrieve it. We make some great mistake, and although most mistakes can be rectified, there are some that cannot because the harm is done, or an injured person is dead, or the power to rectify the mistake has departed.

We should always be conscious that in moral situations there is a point of no return — no return to honor, purity, or good reputation. The forgiveness of sin is always possible, but in every moral disaster there are some things which can never again be restored.

Carter Standards Not Harsh

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — All Americans must make sacrifices, President Carter said Tuesday night, but some people will say he is doing whatever he can to avoid the sacrifices that austerity implies.

He shuns mandatory controls. He continues to abide a huge and inflationary budget deficit. He seems inclined to sign a tax cut. He tried soft pursuasion before reluctantly accepting firm standards.

And the standards, on reflection, are likely to be considered less than harsh by both business and labor. They are in fact designed to continue inflation, although with a gradual lessening in severity.

While the president referred to sacrifices, and said "We must face a time of national austerity," his new wage-price standards give him away. He seeks a less painful remedy. Recession as a remedy is out.

Critics, however, feel that despite his policy of tolerating moderate inflation as the price of avoiding recession, the president might get both. And that he might also be forced into mandatory controls.

Economists generally foresee higher prices and lowered output in 1979, disagreeing mainly in degree. Inflation forecasts range from 6 percent to 9 percent, and output changes from below zero to plus 3.5 percent.

All such forecasts were made before the president's request for limitations of 7 percent on wages and 5.75 percent on prices, which he said could reduce inflation to 6 percent or 6.5 percent next year.

However, over the past year or more the administration has been notably more optimistic than nongovernment economists. It expected the 1978 inflation rate to be just over 6 percent. It may exceed 8 percent.

Throughout the inflation siege, individuals have tried various survival tactics, few of them successful. Pay raises, for example, were exceeded by higher prices, and real income therefore declined.

Others went deeply into debt, not just for luxuries but for basics too. Obligations to repay installment credit now take between 15 percent and 16 percent of disposable personal income, a record.

The president's call for sacrifices, therefore, may have served merely to validate what many Americans already know is necessary, and which already they have been practicing for many months.

Business and financial leaders especially, but consumer and voter groups too, have been telling Washington that sacrifice began there, and that federal spending, a primary cause of inflation, had to be cut.

The president has recognized that demand, promising to cut the fiscal 1979 deficit to $40 billion, but even in advance of his address many economists maintain it isn't enough, and blame it for inflation.

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

This country is a republic, not a democracy. There is no such thing as a "democratic republic." A democracy is the will of the people expressed by whatever means; it is characterized by discontent, agitation, impulse, and demagogism. The republic, when strictly adhered to, results in liberty, reason, justice, and statemanship.

Article I of the Constitution specifically states, "All legislative Powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Seante and House of Representatives." When Congress delegates legislative authority to an administrative agency, Congress betrays its constituents. The people are no longer represented; they are managed by appointed bureaucrats.

We the people must elect Senators and Representatives who will not create more agencies (such as a Department of Education or a Consumer Products Safety Commission) to plan and govern large sectors of our lives. These agencies combine legislative, executive, and judicial powers; they make the rules, police the community to make sure the rules are obeyed, and sit in judgment to determine noncompliance with the rules.

In his book, "Our Republic," Harry Atwood writes, "All variations from a strict and literal adherence to the plan and form of government provided by the Constitution have been dangerous experiments to this country and mischievous in their influence upon the world, and every evil from which we suffer governmentally today can be traced directly to a departure from the Constitution." The United States is not a democracy. It is our republic.

Lyle Barlow

To the editor:

Issues confronting the Afro-American family were discussed this past weekend at the Willis Building at ECU. Sponsored by Greenville's Chapter of the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, the North Carolina Humanities Committee and the School of Home Economics at ECU, this symposium addressed and highlighted many of the unique problems which affect the structure of the Afro-American family.

Although many problems beset the Afro-American family, this unit in the universal family of man still exists. The one ingredient recognized as the tool by which the Afro-American family exists and through which this family will continue to exist is individual responsibility. This vehicle can be the power by which the A-A family matures in all spectrums of American society.

Each person in this minority must categorically grasp — whether learned in the home, taught at school, preached in the church or established in the community — the tangible skills, the intangible values and the dogged determination to, at minimum, cope adequately with our present American systems and hopefully, at maximum, to live to improve or to maintain the background from which that individual comes.

Unlike 1878 after Reconstruction had been aborted, the A-A family genuinely finds itself struggling to live out the true meaning of life for which all mankind strives. As in 1878, this segment of American society must constantly encounter the many forms of subtle institutional racism. The symposium certainly illustrates that, regardless of the inconsistencies in this life, it is incumbent upon and imperative for every A-A to produce effectively for himself in every walk of life. As one speaker pointed out by quoting the Rev. Jesse Jackson: "NOBODY WILL SAVE US FOR US BUT US."

The Liberties Of The People Are Now Secure

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

SCRABBLE, Va. — J. Taliaferro Spelvin, a countryman from Rappahannock County, Va., spent 48 hours on Capitol Hill a couple of weeks ago, observing the final spasms of the 95th Congress. He emerged from the hospital yesterday, still shaken by the experience, and came by the farm to tell me about it.

"It's still a blur,", said J.T., "but at least the general outlines are clear. We did get a tax bill and we did get an energy bill; but as for the rest it's hard to say. I spent most of my time in the Senate, where the lunacy level is one-fourth of the level encountered in the House, and I have some notes on what happened there."

The Senate began its session at 9 o'clock on the morning of Saturday the 14th. My friend Spelvin reached at random into his satchel and produced some papers labeled "5 A.M. Sunday." He flipped the pages. Mr. Gravel, a senator from Alaska was trying to sell a bill of goods to Mr. Abourezk, a senator from South Dakota. Mr. Gravel offered him $30 million for a project on the Missouri River, with $240 million more if he went along, but Mr. Abourezk wasn't buying. There went the Missouri River.

"They were naming buildings for people both dead and alive," said J.T. "One building for the late C. Bascom Slemp of Big Stone Gap, Va., and one for George Mahon of Texas. Senator Gravel got back on his feet, trying to sell a boat harbor in Spencer County, Ind. Senator Bayh offered Senator Abourezk the Indiana Dunes, but it was no sale again.

"I closed my eyes for a minute, and the next thing I knew Senator Proxmire, the skinflint penny-pincher from Wisconsin, was asking that a gold medal be given to Mrs. Robert Kennedy. Everybody thought that was a fine idea. Mr. Durkin, a senator from New Hampshire, liked the idea so much that he hung an amendment on the Proxmire gold medal bill to protect the retail property and casualty insurance industry from competition from bank holding companies. It all passed on a voice vote."

At something after 6 o'clock that Sunday morning, according to J.T.'s almost indecipherable notes, the Senate was coping with tax revenues on Guam. They were naming buildings for Congressmen Joe Waggoner and John Flynt. The sun had come up. A delegation was authorized to a Parliamentary Conference in Japan.

They paused for prayer: "Take our weary bodies and tired minds," said the chaplain, "and renew them by the bracing and fortifying power of the Holy Spirit." Some of the senators, said J.T., had already been braced and fortified by other spirits. The morning wore on. They named a building for Congressman Paul G. Rogers of Florida. Senator Chaffee of Rhode Island had a plaintive question: Could we name some buildings after Republicans?

Senator Muskie of Maine arose to say that just the day before, a building in Maine had indeed been named for a Republican, Frederick G. Payne. Senator Chafee subsided. They appointed Senator Hathaway, also of Maine, to go to Portugal next month. Senator Gravel tried to sell Senator Proxmire the Corps of Engineers. Senator Proxmire fled for the hills. They took a break for lunch.

After lunch, they worked on child nutrition and the Consumer Product Safety Act. They took time out for what are known as "encomiums and benisons," including an encomium for Susan Alvarado, the fine assistant to Senator Stevens of Alaska. The majority leader praised her as a "blue grass lover," and Senator Stevens said maybe it would look better in the Record if they just called her a blue grass fan, and Senator Byrd said that anyone who is a blue grass fan is a friend of his.

J.T.'s hands were beginning to tremble. It appeared that he had trotted over to the House side from time to time and had returned with notes on office buildings named for Leslie C. Arends and William L. Springer. He also observed that Congressman Ashley of Ohio had neatly extracted from the Kennedy gold medal bill the bank holding company language that Senator Durkin had inserted. Most of the rest of his notes began with, "reserving the right to object."

The House quit at 6:46 o'clock that Sunday afternoon, the Senate at 7:17. My friend J.T., utterly exhausted, staggered off to Culpeper Memorial Hospital for a rest. "They have gone until January," he cried to the startled nurse, "and the liberties of the people are now secure!"

Dawn Shafer Shares In Community's Language

By GAIL MICHAELS

WHITETOP, Va. — Dawn Shafer is a nurse practitioner, in simple terms that means she has completed training beyond the norm for nurses, enabling her to work on her own in the field. She is under supervision of a physician, but she is permitted to do many things on her own initiative that a nurse in a hospital would not be permitted to do. In a sense, she is an extension of and complement to the medical doctor in this mountain community.

Today I am accompanying her to see her work firsthand. We begin at the whitetop Medical Clinic where Dawn conducts a "well baby" clinic one morning a week. This is a time set aside for small children to get physical exams, immunizations, and things of that nature.

After a brief meeting with the staff of the clinic, we're on our way to her first home visit for the day, to see Elizabeth Hoosier, who has been treated recently by a doctor but is still feeling kind of poorly. As we drive up the rutted road to Mrs. Hoosier's home, Dawn tells me that she has put 55,000 miles on her car in less than two years.

In the 20 minutes that we are in the home, Dawn checks blood pressure, talks to Mrs. Hoosier's daughter about the elderly lady's condition, discusses a vitamin, and asks that they contact the clinic about other tests. She also takes time to chat with Mrs. Hoosier, and that, perhaps, has as much value as the medication.

The next stop is the home of Lilliard Trivett, to visit his mother, Elizabeth Miller, who is approaching her hundredth year. Mrs. Miller was herself a midwife, so this visit seems almost a return for the service that she gave the people of the area for so long. Here, I notice again a quality I have seen in Dawn before — the ability to talk to an elderly person as a person, and not as "old folks". There is no condescension, none of that pernicious use of the word "we" so often adopted by attendants in nursing homes — just straight talk.

From there we go to Mt. Rogers School where Dawn holds sick call. She is greeted in the hall with enthusiasm and hugs from the smaller children. Strep is going through the school, so several children have throat cultures taken.

As we leave, Dawn chats for a moment with Pam Wheeler, the home economics teacher. She helps Pam with a twelfth grade family living class, which includes discussions of the reproductive system ... something, she says with a rueful laugh, which might better have been taught in the eleventh grade, since several of the girls in this class are pregnant.

From the school, we go to the home of Albert Hash, the musician and instrument maker, to visit his mother, Della Reedy. Mrs. Reedy has been bedridden for about nine years, but in spite of that and her advanced age, her mind is sharp. Dawn visits periodically to wash her hair. Strictly speaking, this isn't medical treatment, but it is therapy just the same.

As we go from house to house, I realize that Dawn doesn't just visit people; she puts them to work taking care of themselves. Many of the physical problems she deals with can't be cured — there's no remedy for old age, for instance. She directs attention to the simple things we all tend to overlook: diet, exercise and the like. Also, Dawn is not even faintly embarrassed by the subject of death. Most of us, when faced with the impending death of a loved one, simply change the subject: "Hush, Aunt Ida, don't talk like that; you're not going to die." There's no strength, no support in that stance, Dawn believes. Better to face it squarely, to level with the person, to give them a chance to deal with the ultimate reality of life. Most of the elderly people she visits have already endured a fair amount of hardship in their lives. They don't want to be treated patronizingly now.

One reason Dawn's patients can discuss their fears and illnesses so openly with her is that she is a member of their community.

Organizing Anything Is Defying Natural Laws

Phillip is a compulsive organizer. In any situation where there's the slightest potential for disorder, he steps in to organize. Unfortunately, his definition of the word is not mine...or anyone else's for that matter. In one instance it can simply mean "clear the floor" and in another instance "alphabetize". In fact, there's only one comprehensive synonym I can think of that captures his idea of organization...and that's "chaos."

Take, for example, the time he decided to reorganize my kitchen. For some reason it irked him to think my mixing bowl was on one side of the kitchen while my mixer was in the vanity of the downstairs bathroom. So while I was sick one weekend, he moved everything around to suit his own idea of order. And I have to admit that his system did make sense. All the bowls were in one cabinet. All the plastic containers were stacked neatly in another.

There was, however, a problem. He ran out of space three-fourths of the way through, so he left the blender, the percolator, six trays, the popcorn popper, and the electric fry pan in the middle of the kitchen floor.

Then there was the last time we moved. He got tired of looking at all the boxes so he organized them. I found the towels two months later under the living room sofa.

But his behavior around the house is nothing compared to his behavior around cars. There is no such thing in our family as parking the car and walking together to our destination. Instead, Phillip has to figure out the most efficient routes for the three of us...separately.

His most recent route analysis occurred last week at the state fair. We took Meg and another couple, and we had to park somewhere near Zebulon. But it didn't really bother us. It was a beautiful fall day, and we all enjoyed the walk and the company.

All except Phillip, that is. He must have spent the entire six hours we were there worrying about it, because when we decided to leave, he immediately outlined an alternative route for everyone except himself.

"I'll get the car, and you go out this gate, walk three blocks and meet me at the intersection where we made the last turn," he said.

"Please don't do this to me," I begged. "There's too much potential for a foul-up. What if you get to this intersection before us—if we can even remember which one it is?

"Trust me."

I ignored that. "Your route doesn't sound like it's any shorter, honey, and it would be a whole lot easier if we just all walked together..."

"I know what I'm talking about," he said.

Fifteen minutes later we straggled up to the intersection. The entire walk had been uphill over gravel. One leg had broken off the umbrella stroller, and I was in the process of giving my feet last rites when Phillip pulled our Toyota up to the intersection, stopped it on a green light in front of 50 furious motorists, and waited for us to scramble wildly in.

Phillip looked innocently at me and Meg gasping for air in the front, then at our friends, both of whom were over six feet tall, balancing the stroller on their knees. "What happened to you?" he said. "I've already been through this intersection three times."

mond?" a black Methodist clergyman from McCormick, S.C., said. "My boy got burned real bad 11 years ago and Sen. Thurmond had him carried to a hospital in Cincinnati. It saved his life." That special plane belonged to the U.S. Air Force, a constituent service not available to every senator but well within the gift of Thurmond, who has been on the Senate Armed Services Committee for 19 years.

Voters of both races flock to Thurmond, who has helped a surprising number during his 49 years of elective office. To one woman he said: "How many children does Gladys have now? You haven't forgotten I offered her oldest an appointment to the military academy." In a random chat with four law students at the University of South Carolina law school, where Thurmond was about to speak, we found three former "interns" in Thurmond's Senate office.

That may explain the findings by Thurmond's pollster Arthur Finkelstein: a favorable rating of 72 percent (more than twice Ravenel's); an almost 2-to-1 edge over Ravenel on who would better handle economic, environmental and education issues; a better than 10-to-1 negative response to the question whether Thurmond is "a racist."

Against such polling data, any Democrat might find Thurmond a tough nut to crack. Ravenel, though feisty, articulate and highly attractive, carries an extra political burden from his conduct after being removed from the ballot in 1974. He refused to bless any other Democrat for the job (telling us it would have been "hypocritical" in view of his anti-establishment campaign). In the end, he grudgingly said he would vote for his defeated Democratic primary opponent; a Republican was elected, and Ravenel was blamed.

Now he needs the Democratic establishment, but it is treating him as cavalierly as he treated it.

Lacking both the establishment's help and the excitement of his 1974 upstart bid, Ravenel must pray for some sudden slip by Thurmond showing mental confusion due to age, legitimizing the "senility issue." That is beyond the power of the White House to bestow, no matter how badly it wants to get rid of old Strom.

grain shipments and cattlemen fell on hard times.

"As feed lots developed, it was found that Charolais overshadowed Herefords and Angus in ability to grow," Cartwright said.

"They're leaner and gain on the average with less feed," Higginbotham said.

The success stories don't mean that either the perfect beef animal has been found or that established breeds will disappear from the range.

Each breed has its place, says Darrell McDonald of the Texas Agriculture Department. Herefords, for which a Texas town was named, still outnumber other breeds.

One-Party Domination Of Congress Continuing

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — With the latest Gallup Poll findings showing the Democrats with a 56-to-44 percent advantage in the national popular vote for the House of Representatives, the quarter-century domination of Congress by the Democratic party appears almost certain to continue after the November election.

Actually, the GOP has had control of Congress only four years since 1932. The extent to which the U.S. has become a one party government is best illustrated by this example: if the U.S. were a parliamentary democracy such as Great Britain, a Republican would have occupied the White House only four of these 36 years.

In view of the one-party domination of the legislative branch of government, political observers are speculating as to the causes for the GOP's failure to gain greater representation in Congress.

1978 Should Be Strong GOP Year

Although the GOP is currently trailing the Democratic party by a wide margin in the national popular vote for the House, this year should, in theory, be one of substantial gains for the GOP, and for these three reasons:

(1) President Jimmy Carter received a sharp popularity boost following the Camp David summit meeting, but his average popularity rating for the 20 months he has been in office is lower than that of most of his predecessors over a comparable period of time in office. In previous election years a low presidential rating has usually been accompanied by substantial congressional gains by the "out party."

(2) The "pocketbook" issue traditionally has been one that leads to more than normal gains by the party out of power in years when the nation's economic future is uncertain. Since the early years of the New Deal, Republicans have stood for cuts in government spending. But, unfortunately for the GOP, as many voters think the Democrats are likely to reduce government spending as the Republicans.

Nor do Republicans score on the tax issue, currently a GOP campaign issue, since many Americans credit the Democrats as better able to hold down taxes.

(3) And finally — and what must be the greatest paradox of American politics — while the number of people who identify themselves with the Republican party has steadily declined in recent years, the number who identify themselves as conservatives (right-of-center) as opposed to liberals (left-of-center) has shown a steady increase.

The following table shows how the percentage of Americans identifying themselves as Republicans has declined while that of those who call themselves conservatives has, at the same time, increased:

Percentage Of Americans Calling Themselves:

	Republicans	Conservatives
1978	20%	52%
1953	37	32

This question was asked to determine the nationwide vote for the House of Representatives:

"If the elections for Congress were being held today, which political party would you like to see win in this congressional district, the Democratic party or the Republican party?" (Those who were undecided were asked: "As of today, do you lean more to the Democratic party or to the Republican party?")

Here are the latest figures:

Nationwide Vote For The House Of Representatives

Democratic	48%
Republican	37
Other	5
Undecided	10

And here is the two-way split of the vote with the vote for other candidates and the undecided portion allocated:

Democratic	56%
Republican	44

The results reported today are based on personal interviews with 3,128 voting age adults (18 and older) in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the periods Sept. 15-18 and Sept. 22-25.

Formal Installation Ceremony...

to make the whole tone and thrust of this office and this administration one that will demand a higher standard of excellence from every individual...'

"But excellence today means that we must go beyond the narrow historical parameters of good traditional schooling," Brewer charged. "Not only must we perform needed service functions in our community, teach insightfully and resourcefully, and foster a spirit of inquiry; we must also concern ourselves with the process, nature, and goals of human fulfillment.

"In the ultimate realm, we must concern ourselves with the problems and opportunities associated with authentic personhood. As Martin Luther King worded it: 'We must work unceasingly to lift this nation that we love to a higher destiny, to a new plateau of compassion, to a more noble expression of humanness.'"

Brewer concluded by saying, "I pledge faithfully to attend to the duties of the chancellorship of East Carolina University. I ask all who will to join hands with us as we strive to create a university worthly of our heritage and consonant with our responsibilities. I ask that we together begin our journey toward full personhood for all those whom our influence touches.

"If we can do this," Brewer said, "we can act with the spirit of one who is to lie down to pleasant dreams, for each of us can rest well, knowing that those who meet our students can say, in Shakespeare's words; 'there stands a man'"

He said that Brewer, selected as chancellor following a year-long national search, is, "ideally suited by experience and temperiment," for the post, and emphasized that Dr. Brewer, "will have my wholehearted support and good will."

Speakers bringing traditional greetings to the new chancellor included Gov. Jim Hunt, ECU Student Government Association president Tommy Joe Payne, ECU faculty chairman Henry C. Ferrell Jr., ECU Alumni Association president Jerry W. Powell, the university's Board of Trustees chairman Troy W. Pate, and UNC Board of Governors chairman William A. Johnson as well as Texas Christian University Divinity School Dean Josh Sugg.

Sugg said Brewer, "will spend himself on your behalf . . . his concern is for excellence. Tom's push is for quality. The word integrity describes him best."

The keynote speaker at the installation was Dr. Jack W. Peltason, former chancellor of the University of Illinois and now president of the American Council on Education.

Peltason described the ceremonies as, "both a high moment in the career of our colleague Tom Brewer and the opening of a new chapter in the book of East Carolina University."

Peltason said in a larger sense, "we also celebrate one of the deepest veins in the continuity of our culture. Our ceremonies signal change, but the educational and institutional values which constitute the environment of that change are rooted in the whole history of free people."

The speaker noted that, "good brokers and entrepreneurs our presidents and chancellors must be, but their real influence on the lives of men and women relates to the things of the mind, to a compassionate understanding of the human condition, and to a capacity to reach — and induce others to reach — for the greater good.

"I would next argue that . . . we are obligated to undertake with Tom Brewer a bit of tough-minded evaluation of our academic institutions and their values. Here lies the context of the chancellorship and the focal point of Chancellor Brewer's allegiances to East Carolina and to you.

The fundamental characteristics of a university are, "so familiar to us that we sometimes underate their significance," Peltason noted. "Partly on this account I should like to stress a few of them.

"First, we are at pains not to restrict access to this system — by law, tradition or custom — to any economic group, race, religion, or particular segment of our society.

"Secondly," he continued, "so long as we remain ever watchful I believe we are entitled to profound satisfaction that our higher education system is independent, in the broadest and best sense.

"As a public institution, this university is, of course particularly accountable to the society which sustains it. I need hardly remind you, however, that the society recognizes that East Carolina must enjoy a considerable measure of independence from immediate political accountability if it is to function as a true center of learning.

Peltason said, "third, our higher educational system is an almost immeasurably rich legacy. Those who fashioned this system built it for a time when we, as well as they, will have been long gone. Our generation should never forget how critical a link we are in the continuity of the culture.

"Our colleges and universities provide both the continuity which helps glue society together and the ordered framework within which change can be constructively molded."

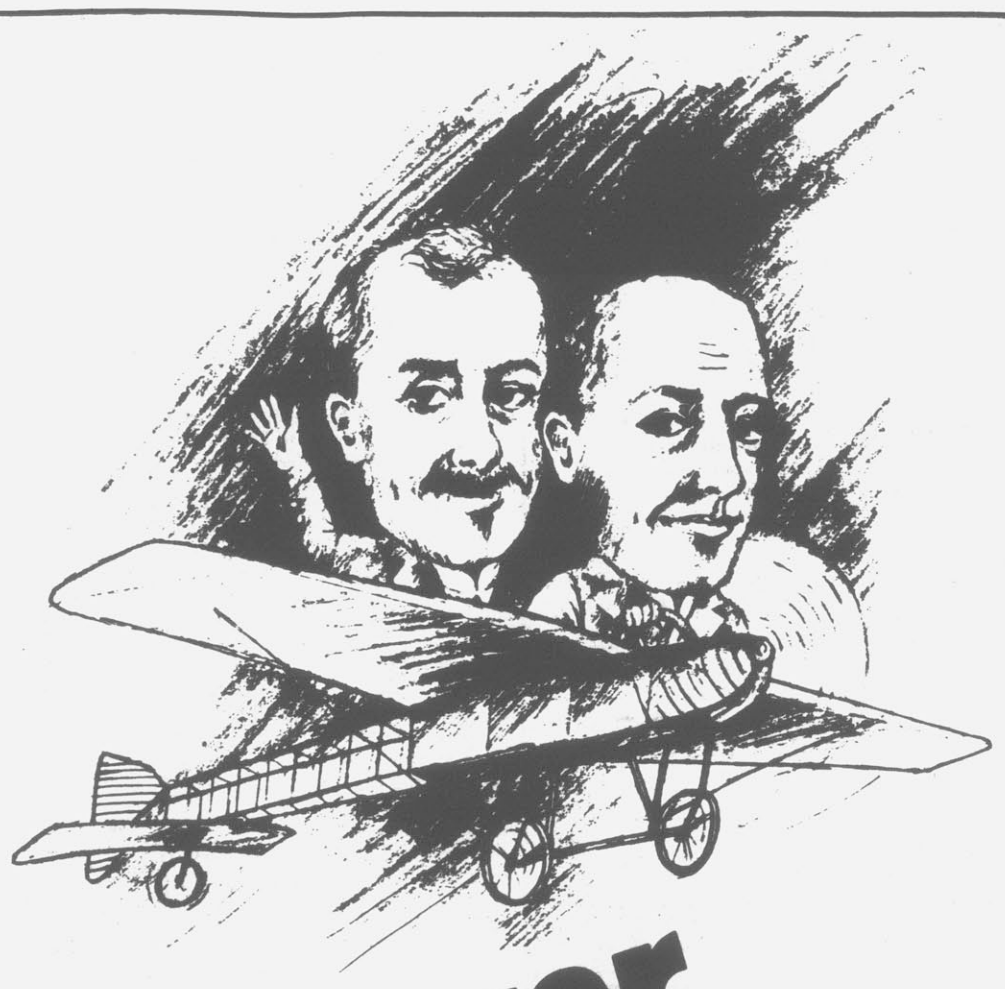

Peltason called this a, "double responsibility — as the vessel of continuity and the vehicle of ordered change", which from time to time, "is more than ordinarily tested."

Predicting coming changes such as education for all age groups, and in such matters as faculty tenure, intercollegiate athletics and, "even in the concept of the presidency itself," Peltason continued by saying he would be suprised if three decades from now there has been, "essential change in fundamental values the university has long entertained, or essential change in its search for truth or in its cultivation of the human mind and heart.

"I believe there are few more exciting places for a modern chief executive to be than on a college or university campus, or more exacting," he said.

"Our understanding and support will be important," to Brewer", long after the ceremony of this day is behind us," Peltason emphasized. "I ask that all of us labor along with him in behalf of those high ideals which have made our system and this university great.

"I am sure that they will be the chart for his course. In the measure of their light Tom Brewer will succeed, and we shall be able to uphold his strong right arm."

Open House Held Friday For New Joyner Wing

By KEITH MILLS
Reflector Staff Writer

In lieu of a formal dedicatory service, the staff of J.Y. Joyner Library (on the ECU campus) held an open house Friday to acquaint the public with the new West Wing and the library's total facilities.

The affair was also held in conjunction with ECU Chancellor Dr. Thomas Brewer's inauguration Saturday.

Dr. Eugene Brunelle, library director, told a gathering of students, faculty, guests and representatives of Friends of East Carolina University Library that what they would see during their visit is a "contemporary academic library at a significant and critical stage of its growth."

Brunelle said the primary constant feature of an academic library today is growth.

"We must grow or die, and our success will be determined largely by the extent to which we are able to adapt to a changing environment," he said.

"A library must be a developing institution," he added; "at the very least it is a continuing institution, the product of many hands and many years.

"Our growth in size, the accretion of floor space and staff, is only one kind of growth. I believe we are also growing qualitatively like the university: even though this is sometimes harder to see and harder to measure, it is probably more important and will be the dominant and characteristic side of our future growth."

Dr. Quincy Mumford, a native of Pitt County who dedicated the new Joyner Library in 1955, and served as Librarian of Congress from 1954-74, was the guest speaker.

In his remarks, Dr. Mumford expressed pessimism over elementary and high school education, saying, "I have been appalled by the reports of high school students being promoted from grade to grade and eventually to graduation with not even a rudimentary knowledge of the subjects which they have supposedly covered."

The speaker said secondary education seems to be in a "disastrous state."

"Parents are blaming teachers and teachers are blaming parents. Probably both are partly to blame," he said, "but I think the greatest blame is the state of our society.

"How can an earnest and capable teacher successfully teach when there is no motivation for learning and no order in the classroom?" He asked. "Obviously she or he cannot.

"As a result, figures show that students are being graduated who cannot even read or write. This deplorable situation has been going on for sometime but seems to have become worse in recent years."

Following the ceremonies, refreshments were served and guests were provided with a tour of the library's facilities. Chancellor Brewer, who came late due to an air flight from Raleigh, arrived in time for punch and conversation.

Hill Sentenced To Three Life Terms

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The mother of a West Virginia schoolteacher wept after a Wake County Superior Court jury decided that the man convicted of killing her son would not be sentenced to die.

Bland Julius Hill Jr., 19, of Youngsville, was given three consecutive life prison terms Friday for murdering Jerry Romine, 32, of Point Pleasant, W. Va. and robbing and kidnapping Romine's two companions.

"His life was no better than my son's," said Murl Romine, the victim's mother, of Hill. "If they the jurors had put their sons in my son's place it would have been different."

The same jury found Hill guilty Thursday. It deliberated two hours and 40 minutes Friday before deciding Hill should not be sentenced to die in the state's gas chamber.

Romine was shot Aug. 19 at a secluded farmhouse in northern Wake County after he and two companions, Richard J. Pickens and Roger Bumgarner, both of Point Pleasant, stopped on their way to Nags Head to help a woman who appeared to be in distress.

Pickens and Bumgarner testified at the trial that two armed and masked men came out of the bushes, robbed them and forced them into the trunk of Bumgarner's car.

Terry Ann Hamm, 17, of Wake Forest, testified that she acted as the decoy.

Both she and co-defendant Michael Reyes Llamas, 22, also of Wake Forest, testified that Hill forced Romine to drive to the farmhouse, ordered him out of the car and shot him at close range after he begged for his life.

Hill, who remained impassive and aloof throughout the week-long trial, smiled briefly when he learned that he would not be sent to the gas chamber. His mother cried after the verdict.

Wants Hearing On Talmadge

ATLANTA (UPI) — The Senate Ethics Committee will be asked to call for a full Senate hearing on charges Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., converted Senate funds for his own use, the Atlanta Journal-Constitution reported Saturday. The newspaper said the committee staff will recommend next week that the investigation be expanded to determine if Talmadge kept a secret bank account to launder illegally obtained Senate funds and campaign contributions.

Talmadge has been locked in a bitter verbal war with his former chief aide, Daniel Minchew, who claims the senator ordered him to establish the bank account to deposit unreported campaign donations for his own use. Talmadge vehemently denies the charge.

An international agreement banning poison gas and germ warfare was signed in 1925.

Compared To $254,000 For Ingram

Helms' Campaign Funds Stand At $6.7 Million

RALEIGH N.C. (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms' campaign warchest stands at $6.7 million, but his Democratic opponent, John Ingram has raised only $254,000, or less than 5 percent of Helms' total, campaign finance reports show.

And in the 23 days covered by the reports, Helms raised more than twice what Ingram has raised during his entire campaign.

Ingram's campaign is also slightly in the red, the report shows.

Ingram's report was filed with the Federal Election Commission Friday, and Helms planned to mail his report to the commission Saturday.

Ingram has consistently accused Helms of trying to buy the election. He calls Helms the "$6 million man."

Helms campaign is believed to be the most expensive U.S. Senate campaign ever in the country.

Of the latest expenditures, $140,000 was listed as spent for television time for Helms political advertisements. Ingram's reports show he has spent about $28,000 for broadcast advertisements, about two-thirds of that on television.

Ingram's report does not include funds spent by the state Democratic Party on the general election campaign. A summary issued by the party shows it has spent about $16,000 during the latest reporting period.

The report covers the period from Oct. 1 to Oct. 23.

During that period, the reports show, Ingram raised $53,788 and spent $72,667. He began the period with $32,332 on hand.

Helms raisesd $562,995 aand spent $572,245.

The reports also show that Ingram's campaign has debts of $14,851 and $13,454 in hand, giving the campaign a slight deficit.

Most of Helms' money has been raised through a direct mail campaign run by Richard A. Vigurie of Virginia. Much of the money has come from outof-state contributors.

Doubts About New N.C. Seafood Parks

ARAPAHOE, N.C. (AP) — Howard N. Lee, secretary of the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, said Friday he has doubts about proposals by the state Commerce Department for development of new seafood industrial parks in North Carolina.

Lee said he is "not that enthusiastic" about new centers similar to a $4 million project to be built at Wanchese in Dare County. The state is planning to provide harbor facilities and lease adjacent land to private seafood companies at the site in Wanchese.

"I personally would not push for more until we see how Wanchese works," Lee said. He said the project in Dare County will cost several times more than originally estimated.

Robert L. Baker, director of the seafood development office of the Commerce Department, said in Raleigh that he would not respond to Lee's comments until he can discuss the matter with him. However, he maintained his support for the program.

"The program is an excellent idea," Barker said. "We are taking resources in Eastern North Carolina and processing them within the state, which would create additional employment opportunities."

Barker said he believes feasibility studies for state-assisted seafood processing centers in central and southern coastal areas will result in the recommendation that more seafood industrial parks be developed.

But Lee said he believes the seafood industry would be better served by improving ways for fishermen to bring seafood products to shore rather than creating additional processing capacity.

'Hungry Cell' Serum

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Greensboro drug company claimed Friday that it has developed a "hungry cell" serum that consumes nicotine and tars from tobacco and could result in a safe cigarette, The Greensboro Daily News reported.

During a news conference at the Guynatol Pharmaceutical Corp. office, Muhammad Nubee, vice president, was vague about the serum's development and declined to say where the research and testing of the substance took place, the newspaper said. He also said a patent has not been obtained but the serum "is protected."

The newspaper reported that Nubee said the serum has not been submitted to the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for approval but that approval would be sought before the serum is marketed.

The serum "completely changes the structure of the nicotine, and it does not sacrifice the taste of the cigarette," Nubee told the paper.

Previous attempts to make cigarettes safer by eliminating nicotine and tars have affected taste, Nubee said.

Although he declined to discuss specifics about the serum's use, Nubee said it can be mixed with tobacco in cigarettes or included in filters. He said it could be prepared in liquid, freeze-dried or powdered form.

Manchurian Raises Tigers

By C.C. MINICLIER
For The Associated Press

HARBIN, Manchuria (AP) — This city is the Chicago of northeastern China. It is also the home of the Manchurian Tiger.

Chang Hsueh-Chen, director of the Harbin Zoo, estimates there may be only 100 of the tigers left in Manchuria, and an unknown number in Russia and North Korea.

Which is why the work of Mrs. Chao Kuei-Lau is so important. She has raised 65 of the rare tiger cubs in 20 years, and reports an 85 percent survival rate for cubs born in the Harbin zoo.

Manchurian tiger cubs need lots of nourishment and tender loving care, Mrs. Chao says.

The quiet, gentle woman had never seen a tiger cub until the first two were born at the Harbin Zoo of a wild tigress in 1959.

The mother had no milk for her cubs, so Mrs. Chao took up bottle feeding. At first, it was difficult to find the right formula of milk and water, augmented by fish oil, to provide proper nourishment without giving them constipation.

But she smiles as she remembers how the cubs loved to snuggle in her arms. After they grew up, they joined a Chinese circus for four years and then returned to the zoo.

Cubs born at the zoo are nursed by their mothers for the first 100 days and then weaned on small pieces of meat, so the mother will be ready to breed again the following year.

Unlike pandas, Manchurian tigers are enthusiastic breeders. The female comes into heat several times each year, between January and April.

Chang says the animals, which reach the weight of 660 pounds and live 25 years, can't take the heat of southern China — a hot and humid as New Orleans in summer. But they thrive on the cold winters of northern China, which is why this rail center and industrial city has inherited breeding duties for the species.

One of the six adults at the Harbin Zoo is expecting a cub or two in the next month.

The tigers are fed 22 pounds of fresh mutton or beef each winter day at the zoo, a little less in summer. It is a rich diet in a land where the average citizen is considered fortunate if he has pork twice a week.

But it is an indication of how the People's Republic of China regards the Manchurian tiger whose native woodlands have been encroached upon by man.

In the wild, the tigers prey upon all manner of creatures, and as Chang points out, "where there are tigers there are no wolves."

Held Business Women Workshop

Leadership qualities and employee motivation, and authority/responsibility relationship were major topics discussed at the "Workshop for Women in Business" Thursday, sponsored by the Membership Services Committee of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce.

Geneva Hagedorn, an assistant professor at the University of Tennessee, and Douglas Kruger of East Carolina University were the guest speakers at the workshop.

Hagedorn discussed specific qualities which are necessary for leaders. She also discussed good management practices and relationships which management should have with employees.

She explained that one very important part of management is knowing as much as possible about employees.

"It is a good idea to know what extra activities your employees are involved in so that you may use them as resources in that area if you need them. Some large firms are using computer employee inventories which list the capabilities and activities of each employee. This can be helpful in filling positions from employees within the firm," she said.

"Potential for Success," "Coping With Stress," and "Expanded Horizons" were other topics which Hagedorn discussed.

Skillful delegation of authority and responsibility was discussed by Kruger.

Kruger said that it is necessary to carefully evaluate responsibilities which are delegated. He also said that granting of the correct amount of authority to the right employee is important.

"The Communications Hassle," a topic concerning how to get your point across was presented by Kruger.

According to David Nichols, chairman of the membership services committee, an estimated 120 business women representing all areas of business were present for the workshop which included a fashion show.

Nancy Middleton served as commentator for the fashion show and discussed the importance of dressing to fit the business. Models and clothing were provided by several local clothing stores.

Local retailers also provided music and office equipment for the workshop displays.

Bond Sales

Sales of Series E and H Savings Bonds in Pitt County during the third quarter of 1978 were $157,524, according to R. W. Howard, county volunteer chairman.

Howard said that January through September sales amounted to $561,470 or some 62.8 percent of the county's goal for the year of $894,250.

Sales of E and H Bonds in North Carolina for the first nine months of the year totaled $92,269,244, it was announced, which was 11.1 percent higher than in 1977 and the best for the period since 1945. The nine-month figure represents 75.3 percent of the state's dollar goal of $122,500,000.

Nationally, bond sales amounted to $6.15 billion for the first nine months of 1978.

Workshop Held On Education

A workshop for parents and professionals on "Parent Participation in Education for the Exceptional Child" was held Wednesday.

The workshop was sponsored by the N. C. Advocacy Council, the Mental Health Association in Pitt County and the School of Allied Health and Social Professions of ECU.

Lynn Whitley of the Advocacy Council and Charles Mitchell of the Mental Health Association welcomed the group.

The program was introduced by Dr. Malene Irons of the Developmental Evaluation Clinic. She told of her view of the current situation for the developmentally disabled. An overview of the laws pertaining to education of the handicapped was presented by Roger Manus of the Developmental Disabilities Training Institute, UNC-CH.

Toni James, also of DDTI, presented information on the development of and parent participation in individualized education plans.

Due process was discussed by Manus.

All Singes, director of the N. C. Advocacy Council, commented on how community advocacy can be useful.

During her remarks, Dr. Irons said she fears the funds to implement the laws may be available too quickly, leading to the belief that the money will be the solution to the problem. Rather, she said, what is required is a lot of energy expended and caring.

Some important issues discussed included the concept of mainstreaming, which involves placing students in the "least restrictive environment." This setting encourages optimal personal growth and academic achievement for each child. According to Toni James, placing a child with special needs in a regular school program without essential support and individualization is not good.

Singer closed the program by suggesting that the goal is real equality. It will be realized, he said, when all children are educated equally to reach their potential without parents who have special interest having to push for this equality.

Showroom Approach For Farmville 's CBD

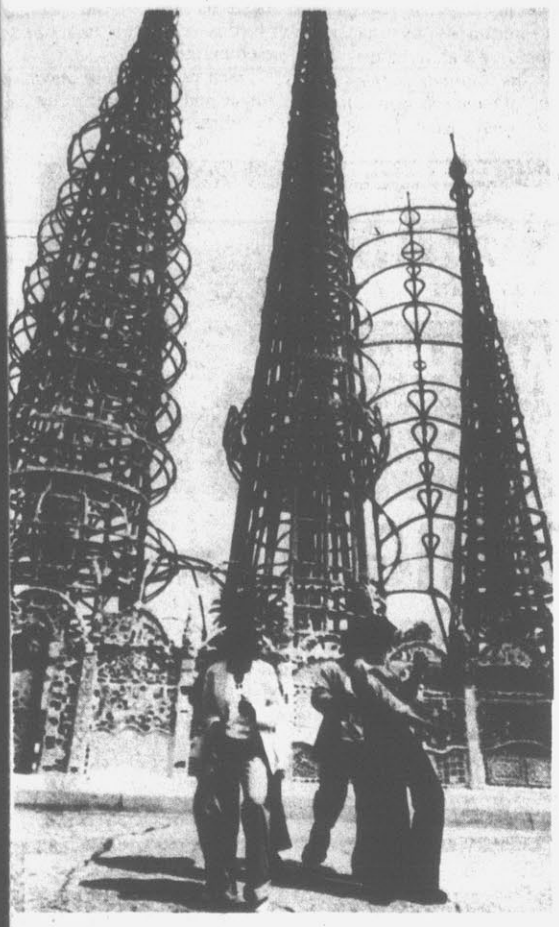

FARMVILLE — An architectural firm working on the Town of Farmville's historic inventory of the central business district will use a "showroom" approach to its work during next week.

A team from Environmental Perspectives, a Charlotte firm with experience in historic preservation, will set up shop at 106 E. Wilson Street between the Farmville Economic Council and Congressman Walter Jones' office, to work on facade renderings for downtown buildings in the study area.

Downtown property owners, merchants and the general public are invited to drop by this temporary workshop to observe the work being done and ask questions about specific building treatments. When completed, the drawings will be available to individual property owners at moderate prices.

This project is an element of the downtown revitalization effort and is partially supported by a grant from the N. C. Dept. of Archives and History. As envisioned by the town board, voluntary restorations of building facades would be undertaken by property owners to complement the town-and state-financed improvements to streets, sidewalks, utilities, lighting, and landscaping in the downtown area.

The historic preservation effort will include a survey and inventory of the historic characteristics of buildings in the downtown area, production of a guidelines handbook to assist owners in improvement of their buildings, and production of facade renderings to further assist in preservation efrorts.

WATTS TOWERS FALLING DOWN — Children play in the street in front of Watts Towers in southeastern Los Angeles recently. The sculptures, built in 1931 by Simon Rodia, an Italian immigrant, resemble petrified Christmas trees whose ornaments are of broken bottles, dishes, tiles and seashells in concrete and chickenwire branches. Rain, earthquakes and rumblings of trains have caused the sculptures to crack and pieces to fall down. (AP Laserphoto)

Solid Gold Buddha

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Five and a half tons of solid gold cast into a Buddha image sits in public in Bangkok's Wat (temple) Trimit.

In addition to being an awesome amount of pure gold in one public place, the Buddha has a mysterious origin.

Apparently cast at least 700 years ago, its worth was only discovered by the abbot of Wat Trimit when a crane lifting the Buddha dropped it and its plaster cover cracked and flaked away during a rainstorm.

Authorities believe it was covered in plaster to protect it from Burmese invaders several centuries ago.

Betty Jenkins Is Scholarship Winner

Betty Jenkins, 18, a freshman at East Carolina University, has been named the second recipient of the Clarence Stasavich Memorial Scholarship, sponsored by the Greenville Jaycees.

Miss Jenkins, daughter of Mrs. Virginia Jenkins, 602 "G" W. 14th St., will receive $300 for this coming year, with the money divided between the two semesters.

According to Jerry Creech, Greenville Jaycee president, candidates are selected from those graduates from J. H. Rose High School who are freshman at ECU who plan to pursue their degree at the university.

"They are selected by the ECU Scholarships, Fellowships and Financial Aid Committee," Creech continued.

Miss Jenkins served as a marshal and Student Government Association member while at J. H. Rose. She is taking general college courses and is interested in pursuing an allied health career.

A Review

The Blounts Of Pitt County

Blounts of Pitt County, North Carolina. By Sylvester C. Green. Published by the Pitt County Historical Society, 1978. Distributed by the Book Barn, 117 E. Fifth Street, Greenville, N. C., 27834. 147 pp. $5.95 ($6.95 by mail).

The inspiration for this book came from Marvin K. Blount, Senior, of Greenville. He gave editor Sylvester C. Green a file of "miscellaneous clippings, papers, letters, notes, et cetera, dealing with the Blounts, his family, his antecedents: altogether a fascinating collection of memorabilia," and engaged him to "familiarize himself with these files . . .and then begin the writing of a narrative of the findings." The result is a slim volume that will be of great interest to any lover of genealogy and to any student of the history of eastern North Carolina.

The Blount name has been associated importantly with this area since 1664. Over the generations, the Blounts have been a family of merchants, agriculturists, and jurists. Always prominent, they figure consistently in the history of the area's development — and in the historical novels of Inglis Fletcher written about the region, too. They remain a thriving family today. To trace their mercantile activities in Pitt County from the colonial beginnings to the family's multiple business interests of the present would be a way to chart the developing population and needs of the county, which the Blounts have always served.

Bascially, the book Sylvester C. Green has developed is a genealogical resource book. It gives names, dates, and places for the generations of the family back into its beginnings in medieval England. It does not generally flesh out the family names so they become living people for the reader. The general reader will find that a pity, since some of them were evidently fascinating figures, and their revealing writings and papers do exist in the State Archives at Raleigh, in Duke University Library, and elsewhere. One early Blount, for instance, was the first man ever to face impeachment in the United States Senate. The still-existing impassioned defense of his conduct written by his brother would be of high human interest for the reader. But it is not quoted.

The general reader can enjoy the portraits of Blount family members and illustrations of various early Blount residences that are included in this handsomely printed volume. He may also be amused at some uncorrected typographical errors that pop up. The most noticeable of them is on page 31, where reference is made to an early Blount forebear mentioned in Shakespeare's play "Henry IV." Due to an uncorrected typo, the play's title is given as "Heavy IV."

The practiced genealogical searcher will observe that Green has based his book largely on existing published material and the research of others. Where these guides have not given a clear indication of Blount descent, Green lets the problem stand. He refers to difficulties any genealogist will understand and appreciate — the existence of conflicting evidence about family relationships in different records, of the loss of essential early records such as happened when Pitt County's courthouse burned in 1858. He does not try to overcome the difficulties. One exception is in the uncertain line of descent from the colonial Blounts to those of today, where he does argue his own hypothesis convincingly. There is an agreeable modesty in the way Green describes what he has done, and what remains: "He admits," he writes of himself, "the need for further research and hopes somewhere along the way in the years ahead this manuscript will inspire others to research the interesting family . . ."

The book probably will make any genealogy buff want to get to work filling in the blanks of the family history, by looking into some obvious sources of information Green does not mention having checked. For instance, the federal census records contain much family information. Land deed records will clarify family relationships in some cases. Family letters and papers are valuable too. Right here in Greenville, the Manuscript Collection at East Carolina University has acquired recently the William Blount Rodman Papers. Rodman was a Blount family connection, and all kinds of information may be there in his voluminous papers, which begin in the 18th century.

One serious disservice to genealogists is done by this book. That is its inadequate index to names. The index is said to be "selective," with no basis for selection indicated. Not all references to Blount family members are indexed. Many names of family connections are not in the index at all. Any genealogist will know that just one obscure linking name can be the vital clue to establishing family descent and connections. The index should be made complete, if the book is to have real reference value. Since the Pitt County Historical Society is to be the beneficiary of all sales of the book, perhaps some member will volunteer for the task.

Notwithstanding such cavils, Blounts of Pitt County, North Carolina is an attention-holding book, that makes a good start toward proper appreciation of the part Blounts have played in North Carolina history. As Sylvester C. Green himself writes, it is "important and interesting, not for the writing, but for the content, and it should prove intriguing reading for any one interested in the important place one family held in the development of the County and State since 1664, and continues to hold."

'Shoo Shoo Baby' And Flying Jacket

DOVER, DEL. — The Air orce Reserve unit here now an boogie to authentic "Shoo hoo Baby" records. Now it's oking for an old World War flying jacket to match the ood.

Nationwide publicity last eek about the unit's need for pies of the Andrews Sisters' 40s hit produced a flurry of hone calls offering relief.

"I have in my possession us far, I think, five copies of the sheet music and four copies of the 78 and one album that a gal in Kansas City sent express," information officer Wesley Bell said Tuesday. "We'll use everything we get."

Bell's other request, for the old flying jacket, is designed to complete a display of "Shoo Shoo Baby," a B-17 bomber that is being restored at Dover Air Force Base for the Air Force Museum in Ohio. It is believed to be one of only two B- 17s still in existence out of 8,000 used in World War II.

Bell had tried getting the rare record from several radio stations and record collectors without any luck.

It came out in 1943 or 1944(*), he said, shortly before the "Shoo Shoo Baby" bomber went into service in Europe with the 401st Bomb Squadron.

Bell said a flying jacket is "worth a little more than the record, but we thought somebody out there might have one that they would be willing to donate to the museum."

(*)"Shoo Shoo Baby" entered the top ten ranks of "The Hit Parade" on Dec. 4, 1943 and remained on the list for 17 weeks, attaining the No. 1 spot on two weeks.

Book News

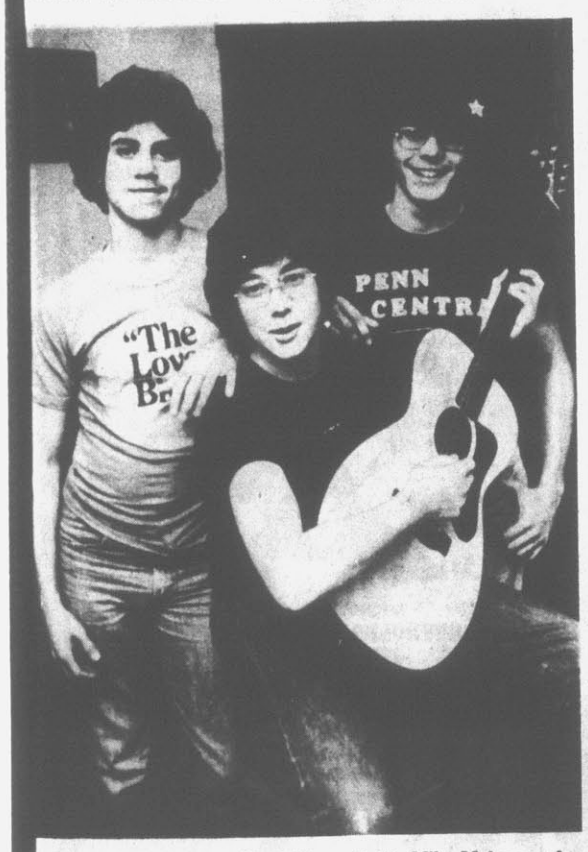

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Julie Hicks

Anthony Burgess has written a new biography called ERNEST HEMINGWAY AND HIS WORLD a book concerning a man who held world-wide fame but whose character remained a mystery. The image that Hemingway himself purported—that of a primitive strong man—does not exactly fit with the dedicated sensitive writer that he was. As a perceptive literary critic, Burgess pinpoints Hemingway's contribution to modern literature as the creation of a new style. Although Hemingway lived most of his life outside the United States and most of his books have foreign settings, he was without a doubt an American writer for his basic philosophy of life was formulated during his youth in Illinois and Michigan. In addition, Burgess sees a direct correlation between the events of Hemingway's life and the themes of his numerous writings. Anyone who reads this short, well-illustrated biography will want to go on to read or reread Hemingway's many works.

A LOVE IN SHADOW is an absorbing biography of Anna Roosevelt and a touching account of her marriage to John Boettiger as told by their son. With exceptional honesty and sens'''ity, the grandson of Franklin D. Roosevelt recaptures his parents' lives including his mother's adoration of FDR, the complex interplay of public and private life, and the tragedy of his father's suicide. The book serves a two-fold purpose: while Boettiger delves into his own background in order to come to grips with it, he gives us a clearer picture of the Roosevelt family. As one reviewer has said, A LOVE IN SHADOW is the "first memoir by a descendant of FDR written entirely without malice."

THE DIONNE YEARS: A THIRITIES MELODRAMA by Pierre Berton is the story of the miraculous birth of quintuplets to a young farmer and his wife from Ontario. It was the first recorded birth of quints who lived more than a few hours or days. Indeed, they survived to adulthood contributing to their era and being influenced by it. Theirs is a tragic tale of separation from their parents and family and of exhibition to the world. Throughout the book, Berton includes eyewitnesses accounts of instances which occurred during this period by those closest to the five girls. He also analyzes the fame and fortune heaped upon Allan Roy Dafoe, the doctor who attended at the birth and who took charge of their upbringing. The lives of the Dionne quintuplets are followed to the present, and we are given a glimpse of the three surviving as they are today. Indeed, a study of the 1930's would not be complete without a comparable one of the Dionne quintuplets and vice versa.

Greenville Chorus Fund Drive Set

The Greenville Community Chorus will begin a local fundraising drive under the auspices of the Woman's Club of Greenville during the month of November.

A goal of $1,000 has been set for the drive to meet the need for operating expenses for the current 1978-79 season.

The chorus has received a grant of $500 from the Grass Roots Arts Program of the N. C. Arts Council, but this will cover only about one-third of the projected expenses for the season.

The first concert of the season will be on November 28 and will feature well known choral works of a general as well as seasonal nature. The annual spring concert will feature one of the major works from the choral repetoire, Mendelssohn's "Elijah," with special guest conductor Dr. Clyde Hiss.

The chorus has shown continual growth since its beginning in 1970 and now has an enrollment of more than 60.

Among primary activities of the chorus is providing programs and mini-concerts at no charge to civic clubs and other civic related programs.

Anyone interested in making a pledge of support or a contribution may do so by writing to The Greenville Community Chorus, P. O. Box 1357, or by calling 752-6195.

Top French Sculptor Says Sculpture Is Dead

By RAFALELA SEPPALA

ROQUEFORT LES-PINS, France (UPI) — Cesar Baldaccini, perhaps France's greatest living sculptor, says sculpture is dying out, artists have to spend too much time hawking their wares, and the French are being squeezed out of the rich U.S. market.

Cesar, as he is popularly known, seemed reluctant to discuss his own works, which range from bronze reproductions of his thumb blown up 40 times to pressed "compressions" of rags and cigar boxes or drools of colorful plastic.

Instead the artist, wearing a cotton toga reminiscent of his Roman namesake and leaning back in an elaborate wicker chair in the soft sunshine of southern France, talked about what sculpture is and what it is not.

"My sculpture is the product of a purely physical process brought about in part by the influence of international cultural life," he said. He added gloomily:

"Sculpture is practically dead. There are few great sculptors left in the world today. Sculpture has too often been confused with objects and sculpture has nothing to do with objects and materials. (The late Alexander) Calder, whom I knew very well, for instance, was not a sculptor. He was a great artist but what we call his sculptures were actually his experiments with the problems of space. He was more of an engineer and a hobbyist than a sculptor.

"A sculpture exists only to the extent to which it reflects the personality of the artist."

Cesar, speaking in the thick accents of the Marseille working-class neighborhood where he was born 57 years ago, seemed somewhat bitter about the workings of the international art world.

His greatest wish is to get a major show in the United States, which he calls the most important artistic center today.

"But unfortunately the American art market is virtually closed for us French artists," he said. He blamed oversupply and U.S. cultural chauvinism.

"The United States is now promoting its own artists on such a grand scale we can't even hope to be competitive," said Cesar.

"I attended an international sculpture exhibition in Toronto a couple of years ago," Cesar said. "The exhibition claimed to be truly international but I saw that 60 percent of the artists showing there were American, 30 percent were Canadian, and another 10 percent were British. That doesn't leave much room for us non-Anglo-Saxons."

Although he has exhibited his work at such prestigious temples of modern art as the Guggenheim Museum in New York, the Georges Pompidou Center in Paris, the Tate Gallery in London and most recently at the Picasso Museum in Antibes on the French Riviera, which is currently presenting a full-scale retrospective of his art, he has never been sponsored by any of the big name galleries that are behind so many of the world's great contemporary artists.

"I am the one who sells my work, no one else," said Cesar.

"Of course I would prefer to be with a great gallery like the Maeght gallery or the Marlboro gallery which, because of their reputation, would lead people to take me more seriously.

"The true big stars today are the galleries like Maeght, Leo Castelli and Knoedler. Their names are better known than those of the artists they represent and now it is more the artist that serves to promote the galleries than vice versa."

Honored More Overseas

By GORDON BOCK

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ted Curson says most music listeners in the United States wouldn't know him if he was "on a Christmas tree."

In Finland, the Philadelphia-born jazz trumpeter is a legend in his own time, having won the country's coveted Pori Award, which has been handed out only 14 times in its 420-year history.

"It's been given out mostly to kings and queens," Curson said in a recent interview. "I'm the first black person and the first musician to win it. It brought me to tears."

Back in the U.S., where the 43-year-old musician lives with his wife in Jersey City, N.J., the award means a lot less. Many record-buyers still don't know Curson's name and his quartet is sometimes shunted to clubs where listeners fail to appreciate their artistry.

Part of the problem is his own identity crisis, admits the man who has worked with such jazz greats as John Coltrane, Charles Mingus, Archie Shepp, Cecil Taylor and McCoy Tyner.

"It's hard for people to get Ted Curson and the face together," he said, flashing a broad smile. "The thing now is to establish an identity. Obviously, I must not know how I look."

Curson's driving passion for ice cream — "any flavor," especially of the Haagen Dazs brand — has made it difficult even for fans to keep track of how he looks.

"I can't swear off that stuff, I'm a pushover for ice cream," he sighed. "Of course I have a weight problem. Luckily, I've turned into a real jogging buff." These days, Curson weighs about 190 pounds and looks trimmer than the 235 pounds he weighed a few months back.

Even so, Curson looks like a giant when he puts down his regular trumpet and turns to the tiny piccolo trumpet — won in a bet with a maker of the instrument in 1959. Ted recalls that Walter Sears told him, "If you can play jazz on this, it's yours." He could and it was.

Most jazz artists have evil words for record companies. Curson is blunter than most. "If the record makes it, they take all the credit," he said. "If the record doesn't make it, they give you all the discredit."

He added, "If you want to play in your basement, that's cool. If you want to play for peole, you have to play ball with a record company."

Curson said the record companies he's been with "have really raped me. They've obviously sold records. But where did they sell them?"

It could have been very different. In 1956, Curson had a chance to sign with the prestigious Roulette Records label. Trumpeter Miles Davis introduced his protege to a Roulette executive at Birdland, then a top Manhattan jazz club.

"But it was real dark in Birdland," Curson recalled. "I asked the guy if I could take the contract home to read it. I came back the next day and the guy was dead. Somebody shot him in the bar in a fight after I had left."

Count Basie and Maynard Ferguson were luckier — or they could read in the dark. They signed their contracts with Roulette and went on to become jazz superstars.

No such blessings for Curson. Instead, life for him has often been a series of gigs in clubs where he says "you wouldn't dare to go to the toilet" and a string of albums that "have sold like Edsels," in the words of one critic.

Curson jokingly concludes there sometimes appears to be "two possibilities" in jazz. "You can become very famous or you can drop dad."

"I used to have a drummer who said, 'Ted, we should all drop dead and once we become famous we should come back ...'"

The winning grin didn't leave his face. It never does.

$1.8 Million For CART Art Program

GARDEN OF DELIGHTS — A small indoor garden provides a peaceful setting for a display of statuary and wall hangings, part of Pompeii AD79, an exhibition of art and artifacts unearthed from the ruins of the ancient Roman cities of Pompeii and Herculaneum. The cities were quicky and deeply buried with volcanic ash and pumice during eruption of Mt. Vesuvius in AD79. The exhibition shown here is mounted in a show at the Art Institute of Chicago. ATLANTA — An arts program slated to stimulate major growth in the arts on a community level in ten southern states is slated to begin in November this year.

The $1.8 million project known as CART (Community Artist Residency Training), is receiving its primary funding from the Ford Foundation and the National Endowment for the Arts, with support from the Soutern Arts Federation and state art agencies of the participating states.

Richard Clark, president of Affiliate Artists Inc. of Atlanta, provided details on the three year program. Plans are to train volunteers from 36 selected communities in the first year and to reach a total of 162 communities in the Southeast by 1981.

"Many small American communities would like to enrich the cultural life of their citizens, but they often lack the expertise in organizing and running a successful arts program," stated Richard G. Sheldon, Acting Director of the Division of Arts and Humanties for the Ford Foundation.

The ten states involves are North and South Carolina, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee, and Virginia.

These ten states in 1975 formed the Southern Arts Federation, which acts as a regional center for sharing arts resources and finding solutions for common art problems.

Special recognition was also given to Claire Lengerfelser of Clement Dorm, ECU, for her submission.

The next meeting of the guild will be on Nov. 7 at the Greenville Recreation Crafts Center, corner of Fourth and Green Streets. Anyone interested in fibers or fiber arts is welcome.

Contemporary artists such as Tom Wesselman, Robert Rauschenburg, Andy Warhol, Roy Lichtenstein and Jasper Johns are among artists whose work is being exhibited — works that through imitation or reference point to masters such as Velazquez, Vermeer, and Rembrandt.

"The theme of the exhibition is fascinating, it's not a gimmick," said Moussa Domit, director of the museum.

The main body of the show is on the fourth floor, but visitors will get a sampling upon entering the museum— the lobby is the site of a mixed-media work by Red Grooms, a sprawling environmental work depicting New York's Chase Manhattan Plaza, complete with buildings, people and outdoor sculpture, constructed mostly of soft materials.

The show will run through Nov. 26. Museum hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tues.-Sat. and 2-6 p.m. on Sunday. Admission is free.

Hold That Tiger? State Can't Do It...33-10

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Lester Brown ran for 117 yards and two touchdowns and Rx Varn returned a pass interception 94 yards for another score Saturday to spark 20th ranked Clemson to a 33-10 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over North Carolina State.

The Tigers' rugged defense kept the N.C. State attack bottled up most of the afternoon as scouts from the Gator, Liberty, Peach, Tangerine and Hall of Fame bowls watched the regionally televised game.

Lester Brown, a 175-pound junior tallied on runs of one yard in the second period and 11 yards in the third quarter. With Clemson leading 23-3 in the final period, Varn picked off a pass by Wolfpack quarterback Scott Smith at the Clemson six and raced 94 yards down the right sideline to score.

The victory raised Clemson's record to 6-1 overall and 3-0 in the ACC — leaving the Tigers a half game behind Maryland, which is 4-0 in the conference. The Wolfpack is 5-2 overall and 2-2 in the ACC.

Clemson dominated the first half, allowing the Wolfpack only one first down in the opening period.

The Tigers scored on their first possession marching from their 47 to the N.C. State 10 before bogging down. Obed Ariri hit a 27-yard field goal to make the score 3-0 less than five minutes into the game.

Clemson threatened two more times in the first quarter but N.C. State's Ronnie Lee intercepted a pass by quarterback Steve Fuller at the Wolfpack 34 and Ray Harris blocked a 45-yard field goal attempt by Ariri.

The Tigers then put together a 65-yard drive for the game's first touchdown. Fuller completed passes of 10 yards to Dwight Clark and 15 yards to Jerry Butler before Lester Brown broke a 24-yard gainer to the one, then dived over for the score.

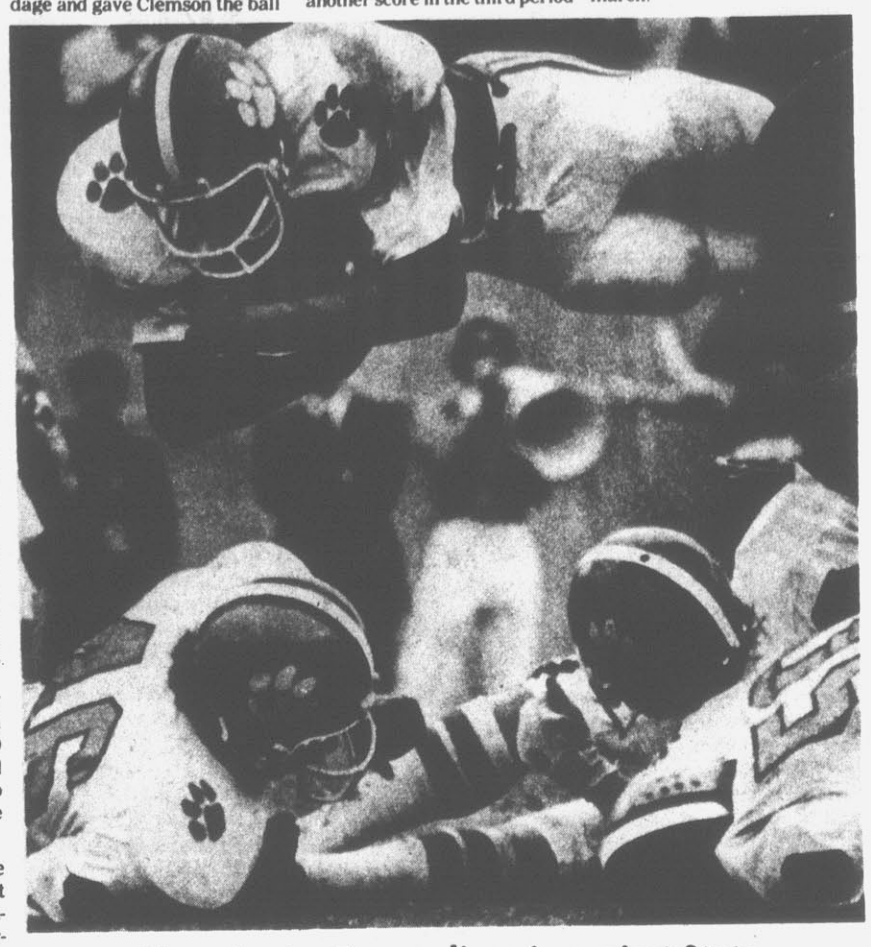

Running back Ted Brown of N.C. State, the NCAA's sixth all time rusher, was held to only 70 yards on 21 carries.

N.C. State took advantage of a fumble by Lester Brown at the Clemson 16 midway the second period. The Wolfpack had a first down at the two, but the Tiger defense stiffened and Nathan Ritter booted a 19-yard field goal to make the score 10-3.

The Wolfpack gambled on a fourth-and-five play at the Clemson 44 late in the half. But a pass by punter John Isley failed to pick up enough yardage and gave Clemson the ball at its own 42. Fuller passed 24 yards to Butler at the five and spotted him open in the end zone from two yards away to give Clemson a 16-3 lead at the intermission.

The Tigers drove 64 yards for another score in the third period with Lester Brown going the final 11 yards around left end. N.C. State got its only touchdown with five seconds remaining when reserve halfback Wayne McLean dived one yard to cap a 73-yard march.

Navy Guns Boom As Surprising Midshipmen Race Past Panthers

By DON CRONIN
UPI Sports Writer

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (UPI) — Navy, sparked by the nation's leading defensive unit, held Pittsburgh without a first down on the ground until the third quarter and stymied the Panthers twice near the goal line to defeat the 15th-ranked Panthers, 21-11, for their seventh straight triumph.

The 18th-ranked Midshipmen pleased a stadium-record crowd of 32,909 as Phil McConkey recovered a fumble for one touchdown, Bob Leszczynski passed 4 yards to Curt Gainer for another and fullback Larry Klawinski smashed over from the 3 for the third.

The Panthers scored on Mark schubert's 28-yard field goal in the second quarter and Fred Jacobs' 3-yard run with 6:41 to play.

Navy forced Pittsburgh sophomore quarterback Rick Trocano to the air 51 times and then sent its tough defensive line after him.

The Middies, led by A.B. Miller, Steve Chambers, Terry Huxel and John Merrill, sacked Trocano seven times for 65 yards. Trocan completed 25 of 51 passes for 275 yards.

Navy capitalized on a 27-yard punt by Pitt's Joe Gasparovic and moved 48 yards in eight plays with Klawinski going the final 3.

A third-down defensive holding call against the Panthers when Dave DiCiccio tackled a Navy blocker kept the drive alive.

Chambers recovered a Trocano fumble at the Pitt 31 and five plays later, Leszczynski passed to Gainer. Bob Tata's third conversion made it 21-3 with 3:15 left in the third quarter.

Jacobs' scoring run was set up by Trocano's 25-yard pass to tight end Steve Gaustad for a first down at the Navy 3. Jacobs scored on third down.

Navy moved to its first touchdown on the first possession of the second quarter. Leszczynksi passed 16 yards to Mike Chapon and 11 yards to Mike Sherlock for a first down at the Pitt 7. Shelock, who picked up 14 yards in the 68-yard drive, rammed the final 7 yards but fumbled at the goal line. McConkey recovered the ball in the end zone with 12:35 left in the half.

Georgia Tech Rallies To Win

ATLANTA (AP) — Eddie Lee Ivery scored two second-half touchdowns, the last with less than six minutes remaining, sparking Georgia Tech to a 17-13 regionally televised comeback victory over the Florida Gators Saturday.

Ivery's 4-yard run with 5:23 remaining was the winning score as Tech rolled to its sixth consecutive victory since losing its first two games of the season.

Ivery also scored on a 1-yard run in the third quarter, capping a 97-yard drive that started when Florida failed on a fourth-and-inches situation at the Tech 3.

Heels Score Early, Hold Off SC Rally

By ED ROWLAND
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Freshman North Carolina quarterback Chuck Sharpe threw three touchdown passes in the first half, two of them to senior tight end Bob Loomis, as the Tar Heels built an early lead and held on through a furious South Carolina comeback to defeat the Gamecocks, 24-22, in a non-conference football game Saturday.

Sharpe connected with a wide-open Loomis on an eight-yard pass early in the second quarter to cap an 84-yard drive and then threw the tight end another scoring pass from the one with less than a minute to play in the period.

The youngster from Burlington, N.C., threw a 10-yard touchdown pass to halfback Doug Paschal in the middle of the opening period, ending a 63yard march.

South Carolina, trailing 24-6 in the fourth quarter, brought in Skip Ramsey at quarterback and he promptly threw two long touchdown passes to pull the Gamecocks within sight of a victory.

Ramsey hit flanker Tim Gillespie on a 52-yard pass play and threw 49 yards to split end Horace Smith for another score. Ramsey also threw twopoint conversion passes to tight end Willie Scott and flanker Zion McKinney in the closing drive.

South Carolina got on the scoreboard in the first quarter after North Carolina fumbled a punt. Sophomore quarterback Garry Harper threw eight yards to Scott for the six points but a fumble on the extra-point kick kept the Gamecocks from tying the score.

The victory gave North Carolina a 3-4 record and dropped South Carolina to 4-3-1.

Jeff Hayes' 24-yard field goal for the Tar Heels in the opening moments of the final quarter proved to be the margin of victory. He missed a 32-yard try late in the third period.

Amos Lawrence, the North Carolina star running back who has had problems most of the season, had a 155-yard day on 29 carries.

Sharpe was the team standout, however, with 11 of 17 passes completed for 149 yards. His counterparts for the Gamecocks, Ramsey and Harper, had less success. Three of Harper's passes were intercepted and he hit only four of 14. Ramsey was a spectacular five for five in the quarter he played.

Atkins Sparks Terps By Duke

By BILL WELCH

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Maryland's Steve Atkins ran for three touchdowns and Ed Loncar added a pair of field goals as the fifth-ranked Terrapins easily defeated Duke, 27-0, in an Atlantic Coast Conference game Saturday.

Atkins, a senior tailback, scored on runs of one, one, and three yards as the Terps jumped ahead 20-0 in the first half and held off the Blue Devils in the second. Loncar's kicks were from 26 and 47 yards out.

The win extended Maryland's undefeated string to eight and left them 4-0 in the ACC. Duke fell to 3-4 overall and 1-2 in the league.

Maryland took advantage of good field positions and frequent Duke blunders, as the Blue Devils gave up three fumbles and two pass interceptions. Each of the Maryland scores came on short drives, the longest covering only 31 yards.

Atkins scored his third touchdown with 5:01 remaining in the third quarter, five plays after Terp linebacker Neal Olkewicz recovered a fumble by Greg Rhett at the Duke 31.

Duke, playing without injured quarterback Mike Dunn, got inside the Maryland 15 twice, but was unable to score. The Blue Devils got as far as the Terp nine late in the fourth quarter before quarterback Stanley Driskell was dropped for a 15 yard loss and Duke gave up the ball.

Atkins carried 24 times for 74 yards to lead the Terps in rushing while quarterback Tim O'Hare completed eight of 18 passes for 106 yards with one interception.

For Duke, Ned Gonet carried eight times for 31 yards while Driskell completed 22 of 39 passes for 212 yards with two interceptions.

Loncar scored first for Maryland midway through the first quarter after Maryland's John Baldante recovered a Driskell fumble at the Duke 15.

Maryland's Lloyd Burrus returned a punt 56 yards to the Duke 18, setting up Atkins' first touchdown three minutes later.

Driskell fumbled a second time at his own 26 and it was recovered by Maryland's Ed Gall. O'Hare completed a 23 yards pass to Dean Richards setting up Atkins' second touchdown.

Loncar added his second field goal from 47 yards with 34 seconds remaining in the second half, after Burrus intercepted a Driskell pass at the Duke 49.

Duke got as far as the Maryland 13 in the second quarter but failed on fourth and long on a faked field goal attempt.

Cribbs Paces Auburn Past Deacons, 21-7

By SCOTT SHEPARD
Associated Press Writer

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Running back Joe Cribbs scored three touchdowns to lead Auburn to a 21-7 college football victory over Wake Forest here Saturday.

Cribbs' three scoring runs raised his season total to 12 touchdowns, tying the school record set in 1970-71 by Terry Beasley.

Cribbs, a junior running back, scored his first touchdown Saturday on a one-yard run as the second quarter began with Auburn trailing Wake Forest 7-0.

The run capped a 63-yard drive during which Cribbs carried the ball on seven of nine plays.

Then with time running out in the first half, Cribbs crashed over from the 10-yard line to give the Tigers a 14-7 halftime lead.

The touchdown that gave Cribbs a share of Auburn's season scoring record came as the third quarter drew to a close. In that drive, which covered 69 yards, Cribbs ran six of the eight plays and completed a 41-yard pass to split end Rusty Byrd to put the ball on the Wake Forest 26-yard line.

Wake Forest's only touchdown was scored before five minutes had elapsed in the first quarter of Auburn's homecoming game. It came on a four-yard plunge by halfback James McDougald.

In the first quarter, it looked like Cribbs would be the goat of the game. He fumbled Wake Forest's first punt and the Deacons recovered it on their own 47-yard line.

Wake quarterback David Webber responded immediately with a 25-yard pass to Eddie Wright. Two plays later McDougald went around left end for 18 yards. He followed that with a five-yard run and his four yard scoring lunge.

But after that, Aubur took complete control of the game, as Cribbs repeatedly slashed through the line for yardage and quarterback Charlie Trotman pinpointed passes to Tiger receivers.

In the 63-yard drive that tied the score, Cribbs carried for 44 yards. In the third quarter touchdown drive, he picked up 24 yards on the ground.

The second quarter go-ahead touchdown was set up by Trotman, who completed four consecutive passes before handing off to Cribbs for the score. The longest pass of the drive was a 25-yard aerial to Byrd.

The Auburn defense buckled down in the second half, shutting off the Wake Forest passing and running game. The Deacons were held to 43 yards rushing and 168 yards in the air.

Rutledge Leads Tide To Victory

By HOYT HARWELL

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Jeff Rutledge passed for 160 yards and two touchdowns and Keith Pugh caught five passes for 148 yards to lead No. 3 Alabama over out-classed Virginia Tech 35-0 in college football Saturday.

Rutledge hit Pugh on a 45-yard scoring toss to make it 14-0 in the second period and threw one into Bruce Bolton's hands from 27 yards out in the final period to make it 28-0.

Rutledge hit on seven of nine passes and Steadman Shealy was good on four of five for 73 yards.

Four of Pugh's catches were spectacular receptions that overcame tight coverage by VPI defenders.

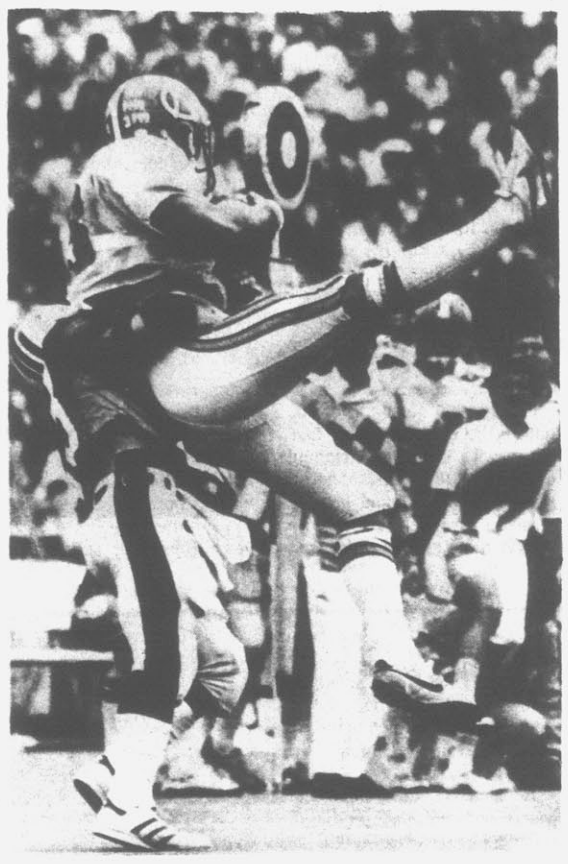

The victory gave Alabama a 7-1 record going into its Southeastern Conference game against Mississippi State at Birmingham on Saturday.

VPI, now 3-5, is at home to Kentucky.

VPI threatened seriously three times. One ended in an unsuccessful field goal attempt in the first quarter. In the third period, David Lamie hit Ellis Savage with a 42-yard pass and then Lamie ran 26 yards to the Alabama four. But after a series of penalties and bad plays Alabama took over at the 13.

However, one play later, Chris Albrittain recovered a fumble at the Alabama 11. But Allen Crumbley stopped that threat with an interception.

VPI moved to the eight against Alabama's substitutes in the last minute, but could not score.

Nebraska Guns Down Cowboys

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Billy Todd kicked three field goals and quarterback Tom Sorley ran for one touchdown and passed for another Saturday to lead fourth ranked Nebraska to a 22-14 Big Eight conference football victory over the stubborn Cowboys from Oklahoma State.

It marked the sixteenth time in 17 years that NU's Cornhuskers defeated the Cowboys, but Oklahoma State was in the fray from start to finish. The Cowboys stayed within striking distance until Scott Burk overthrew a wide-open Mel Campbell with 1:11 left in the game.

The Cowboys scored first on Ed Smith's 13-yard run. That drive began at the OSU 20 after the Cowboys recovered Husker I.M. Hipp's fumble.

Another Hipp fumble forced the Huskers to settle for a 23-yard Todd field goal early in the second quarter. Minutes earlier, NU's Frank Lockett had returned a kick 83-yards for an apparent score but his effort was nullified when he stepped out of bounds.

A blocked punt set NU up on the 48 and Sorley scored from the one minutes later. The drive survived an Andra Franklin fumble that was recovered by Husker guard Barney Cotton.

BOONE, N.C. (UPI) — Linebacker Charles Stein returned a fumble 87 yards for one score Saturday and quarterback Mark Hutsell threw for two more touchdowns, one in the game's final seconds, to give East Tennessee State a 35-34 win over Appalachian State.

Hutsell hit running back Jimmy Dyke with a 3-yard touchdown pass with just 47 seconds to play and East Tennessee trailing 34-28. Eddy Tless added the extra point.

East Tennessee, now 3-5, opened with a 2-yard scoring dash by running back Johnny McFall. The Mountaineers, 5-3, countered with an 8-yard touchdown by running back Scott McConnell. Kicker David Abernathy booted the added point.

East Tennessee's other touchdown came on a 3-yard run by Ron Boyd.

Appalachian State tallied on another McConnel run, a 12yarder, Steve Brown's runs of 2 and 1 yards, and a 58-yard burst by Michael Peterson.

After ending the first period tied at 7-all, Appalachian State moved to a 21-14 halftime advantage and led 28-21 in the third period. But East Tennessee came back with two touchdowns to only one for Appalachian State in the final period and Abernathy was unable to convert, giving East Tennessee it's winning margin.

Indians Fall, 33-21

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Nathan Poole ran for 186 yards and two touchdowns and Louisville's big-play defense did the rest as the Cardinals posted a 33-21 win over William & Mary in college football Saturday.

Poole, who raised his season rushing total to 975 yards, scored on runs of 1 and 75 yards to help Louisville to its sixth win in eight games. William & Mary, losing its second straight game, slipped to 4-3-1.

Louisville settled the game in the first half by charging to a 26-0 lead. William & Mary contributed mightily to its own downfall by having two punts blocked and a pass intercepted.

Louisville went ahead 10-0 on a Matt Mager field goal from 40 yards and Poole's first TD run after a 16-yard drive. Billy Perrin set up the touchdown when he intercepted a Tom Rozantz pass and returned it 16 yards.

The Cardinals added a safety when Jeff Henry blocked a punt by William & Mary's Chris Garraty out of the end zone.

Two minutes later, Ray Peyton blocked another Garraty punt. Perrin scooped up the ball and dashed 19 yards for a touchdown. It was the second such touchdown of the season for Perrin, a lineman, and the fifth of his college career.

Marshall Bows, 42-12

By STRAT DOUTHAT
Associated Press Writer

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — Quarterback David Henderson passed for three touchdowns here Saturday as Furman whipped Marshall 42-12 in a Southern Conference football game and handed the Herd its seventh straight defeat.

A junior from Atlanta, Ga., Henderson repeatedly threatened the Marshall secondary. He finished the afternoon with 15 completions in 20 attempts, good for 276 yards. At one stage, he completed 12 in a row — a Furman record.

The victory was the Paladins' fifth against three losses with a 2-1 conference mark.

Marshall, which fell to 1-7 on the season, and 0-5 in the conference, was in the game only for the first four minutes.

The Thundering Herd stopped Furman's first drive, and took over on its 33. Marshall then drove to the Furman 29, where on the first down, tailback Tim Campbell smashed into the line and fumbled.

Furman recovered and drove for the toucdown, with tailback Mark Stowers scoring from the five. The long play on the drive was a 24-yard pass from Henderson to split end Greg Laetch.

Hendrson then passed for touchdowns on Furman's next three possessions.

He hit tight end Brette Simmons with an 18-varder on the first play of the second quarter. The next two scoring bombs went to Laetch and covered 13 and 14 yards respectively.

Keith Potter kicked all four conversions and Furman held a 28-0 lead at the half.

Marshall got on the socreboard at 9:23 in the third quarter when quarterback Danny Wright sneaked over from the one. Wright, who ran 141 yards on 17 carries, turned in a 76-yard run on the previous drive, which stalled on Furman's 14.

Marshall scored once more, on a 29-yard pass from Wright to Todd Ellwood. The Paladins also scored twice in the second half, both on short runs.

McLendon Shakes Off Pressure With A 67

PENSACOLA, Fla. (UPI) — Mac McLendon, pressured by course record rounds by two relative newcomers to the PGA tour, fired a 5-under-par 67 Saturday — his third straight sub-par round — to lead by three strokes after the third round of the $125,000 Pensacola Open.

McLendon, now 17-under-par (65-67-67 — 199), acknowledged that he was nervous at the start of the day's round and played conservatively on the front nine — especially after learning that mark McCumber, 27, of Jacksonville, Fla., had gone ahead by one stroke. McLendon played even par for the first nine.

But the tour veteran, who plays out of Pell City, Ala., rallied on the back nine, notching five birdies, including 25-foot putts on the par-5 11th and the par-4 14th and a chip-in from 35 feet on the par-3 17th.

McCumber and Wayne Levi, 25, who plays out of Tampa, Fla., both established competitive course records of 64 on the 7,133-yard Perdido Bay Country Club Course. Levi's score enabled him to lay sole claim to second place with a 14-underpar 202.

McCumber had seven birdies, an eagle on the par-5 sixth hole and one bogey. Levi shot four birdies and two eagles, both on par-5 holes.

"You have got to give guys like Levi and McCumber credit," McLendon said after his round. "It shows the way our tour's growing. Young kids like them come out and shoot great golf. My hat's off to them. I just hope tey all tie for second."

McLendon started out badly, hooking his tee shot on the first hole, putting it behind a tree on the third, bogeying the fourth and putting the ball under a tree on the No. 5.

"But if there ever was a turnaround," said McLendon, "it was on the fifth. I pitched a difficult shot over a bunker from about 60 feet and it landed three or four feet from the hole and I parred that hole. It went off just right."

Pusey Bombs Keydets For Western Carolina

By BILL BASKERVILL
Associated Press Writer

LEXINGTON, Va. (AP) — Western Carolina's Catamounts used a pair of scoring bombs from quarterback Mike Pusey to flanker Gerald Harp and five pass interceptions, one for a touchdown, for a 41-12 Southern Conference football romp Saturday over Virginia Military's Keydets.

The victory upped the Catamounts' overall mark to 53 and their conference record to 3-0, while VMI fell to 3-5 and 1-3.

Pusey connected with Harp on scoring plays of 94 and 41 yards. The two touchdown receptions gave Harp, a 5-foot-8, 151-pound sophomore, nine for the year, breaking the previous school record of seven. The 94-yard play also was a Western Carolina mark.

Thomas Dunn, who picked off two passes, returned one interception 48 yards for a touchdown. Lee McCall also had two interceptions for Western Carolina and Willie Carpenter picked off another pass.

Carl Witzke connected on field goals of 34 and 27 yards and backup quarterback Dee Walsh teamed with split end Dwayne Norman for a 51-yard scoring bomb for the Catamounts' final score late in the final period — long after the game had been decided.

Harp finished with six receptions for 169 yards, while Pusey threw for 200 yards on just 8 completions in 24 attempts. Robert Brown's 1-yard scoring run, the Catamounts' first touchdown, accounted for Western Carolina's other points.

Craig Jones booted field goals of 35 and 32 yards for VMI, and G. J. Walley ran 3 yards with a blocked punt late in the final period for the Keydets' only touchdown.

The Catamounts took the lead for good when they went 95 yards on their first possession with Brown slashing over with 5:53 left in the first period.

Jones' two field goals cut the margin to 7-6 with 7:06 left before the half, but Pusey's 41-yarder to Harp with 1:35 remaining before intermission put the Catamounts up by 14-6.

The 94-yarder from Pusey to Harp with 4:17 left in the third quarter and Witzke's first field goal with 1:14 remaining put the game on ice for the Catamounts.

Penn State Rips West Virginia

By ALAN ROBINSON
AP Sports Writer

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Second-ranked Penn State, stunned by two West Virginia touchdowns in the first four minutes of the game, came charging back behind quarterback Chuck Fusina and running back Matt Suhey to defeat the Mountaineers for the 20th straight season, 49-21 Saturday.

Fusina ran for one touchdown and threw to Scott Fitzkee for another, while Suhey scored on two short-range runs as the Nittany Lions — who haven't lost to West Virginia since 1955 — rolled to their eighth consecutive victory.

Penn State now holds a 36—7 lifetime edge in its series against the Mountaineers, who have managed only a 1958 tie in the last 23 years against the Lions.

Falling to 1-7, West Virginia surged to a 14-0 lead with just 3:51 gone in the game, as Rich Duggan caught an 11-yard pass from Dutch Hoffman and freshman Dane Conwell scored on a 13-yard run following an interception thrown by Fusina. But the Lions came alive when Joe Lally blocked a punt by West Virginia's Curt Carion to set up Suhey's one-yard run late in the first quarter, and Penn State went on to score the next 42 points.

Matt Guman, a reserve running back, lifted the Lions to a 14-14 tie when he returned a Carion punt 85 yards for a touchdown with just 20 second left in the first quarter. Fusina, who completed nine of 13 passes for 161 yards, then scored himself on a one-yard run midway through the second quarter to give the Lions the lead for keeps at 21-14.

New Coach A Winner

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Quarterback Mike Mosely threw a 52-yard scoring pass to Gerald Carter on Texas A&M's first offensive play Saturday as A&M broke a touchdown drought and defeated Rice, 38-21.

The Southwest Conference victory was an impressive debut for former assistant Tom Wilson, who signed a 3½-year contract after Emory Bellard unexpectedly resigned Tuesday.

Bellard had a 48-27 record in 6½ seasons, but quit in fear because he said he had learned he would be ousted at the end of the season.

Rampants Shut Down Fike, Win 9-0

Off Around The Corner

Rose High School's Rampants proved to be their own worst enemy at Homecoming Friday night, but they still managed to pull out a 9-0 victory over Wilson Fike High School.

Rose managed only two scores in the game, a 34-yard field goal in the first quarter by Ted King, and a three-yard touchdown run by Calvin Whichard in the final period.

Between the two scores, the Rampants took themselves out of chance after chance with penalties and fumbles. And at the same time, they gave the Golden Demons several opportunities, but the Fike offense was unable to get anything together.

It wasn't until late in the third period that Wilson managed a first down, and they ended the game with only 42 yards in total offense, including 25 rushing and 17 passing.

Rose meanwhile, had two runners who piled up more yards than did Fike. Whichard led the way with 87 yards on 10 carries, a healthy 8.7 yards a lug, and Todd Tyson with 69 yards in 17 carries.

"We moved the ball very well," Coach Dave Bumgarner said afterwards. "But we hurt ourselves with our own mistakes. Calvin (Whichard) had an outstanding game, and Tyson ran well for us too. We got good defensive play again. We made it look a lot closer than it was."

Rose finished the game with 270 total yards, all on the ground as the Rampants failed to complete a pass.

On second down from the 33, Shank kept the ball on the option around the left side and scampered 30 yards to the Fike 37 before he was pushed out of bounds. On third down from the 31, Robert Morehead took a quick pitch around the left side, adding ten more yards and giving Rose a first down on the 21. But on third and five, the Rampants suffered an illegial proceedure penalty, and picked up only four of it back. King then came in and kicked the 34-yard field goal giving Rose a 3-0 lead with 8:04 left in the period

The Demons got good field position later in the period when Rose, on its next possession, failed to pick up a first down on fourth and one at its own 45.

But Fike made only six yards in three plays and kicked it away with just seconds left in the period.

Rose again gave Wilson good field position when it fumbled at the 40, but again, the Demons were unable to get a first down and had to punt.

From the 20, Rose moved the ball to the Fike 41 in just four plays with Whichard ripping off 16 and 18 yards to get it started. But a holding penalty pushed them back to their own 40, and they failed to get a first down after that.

Late in the half, Wilson got another break, and good field position, when Joey Mattheis, back to pass, was hit in the arm just as he started to throw, and the ball bounced up and landed in the arms of Demon Greg Nelson at the Rose 20.

Rose pushed them back four yards in three plays, and a 42-yard field goal attempt by Ricky Matthews was short. Safety Will Barrett tried to pick the ball up at the five, but bobbled it, and a Wilson player, trying to recover, knocked in into the end zone for a touchback.

Another Rose fumble, at the 34 gave Wilson another chance early in the second half, but again the Rampant defense refused to give up anything.

Late in the quarter, helped along by a clipping penalty on a punt while the ball was still in the air, Wilson got a first down at the Rose 44. Quarterback Jeff Williams pulled a quarterback reverse to pick up a first down at the 30, but again Rose held. It took a fine defensive play by William Frizzell, however, to do it, as Frizzell leaped high to knock away a pass intended for Donnie Coley at the goal line.

The Rampants then marched 71 yards for their only touchdown. Tyson picked up six yards, then added 12 more. Wilson was tagged for 15 more yards on a penalty, putting the ball on the Demon 38. Whichard, with ten yards, got a first down at the 20, and he added 17 more to the eight after Rose was hit with a five-yard penalty. After Tyson and Shank had hit once each for five yards, Whichard took the ball over left tackle, cut back, bounced off a tackler at the two and made it into the end zone for the score. King's kick was off-target, making it 9-0 with 9:12 left.

Neither team offered any threat after that, as time finally ran out.

The victory evened the Rose Division I record at 2-2, while Fike fell to 1-3. The Rampants are now 4-4-1 overall, and close out the season next Friday in Elizabeth City against Northeastern.

Bertie High School defeated Northeastern 13-7, Friday night clinching second place and the number two playoff berth for the league. Rose can still tie Bertie for second if it wins Friday and the Falcons lose. Bertie would still get the playoff berth since it beat Rose.

Marv Levy Wishes Houston Had Not Pulled Off Steeler Upset

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

If Marv Levy, coach of the Kansas City Chiefs, had his way, Pittsburgh never would have lost to Houston last Monday night.

Until being kayoed by the Oilers, the Steelers had won seven consecutive National Football League games and with his Chiefs on deck Sunday, Levy would have liked to see Pittsburgh still perfect.

That's because few teams stay perfect for a full season and Levy felt the law of averages would have been working in his corner if the Steelers still had not lost.

"I guess it would be better for us if Pittsburgh was coming into the game unbeaten," he said. "I don't think any team in this league can go undefeated...win week after week without some kind of letdown."

Minnesota started the NFL's ninth weekend of action, defeating Dallas 21-10.

Kansas City will attack the Steelers on the ground. The Chiefs' Wing-T offense has generated the NFL's No.1 rushing offense with an average of 192.3 yards per game. Tony Reed leads the Kansas City runners with 583 yards in 107 carries.

"We always try to run the ball first," explained Levy. "It's my belief that you win in this league by eliminating as many mistakes on offense as you can. And you eliminate mistakes — on second down and long and third down and long — by running with the football."

When it comes to passing the football, the Seattle Seahawks own the league's most impressive numbers.

The Seahawks, with Jim Zorn at the controls, have completed 61.3 percent of their passes and are averaging 217.4 yards per game through the air. They also carry a respectable 4-4 record into Sunday's game against Denver, matching the .500 mark of their expansion partners, the Tampa Bay Bucanneers.

At the season's midway point, with eight games to go for all teams except Minnesota and Dallas, both of whom have seven left, there are some interesting statistics which indicate that the rule changes adopted last winter to juice up NFL attacks apparently have worked.

Scoring is up by 160 points compared to the eight-week figure of a year ago, with 21 more touchdowns scored in 1978 than there were in 1977. The major TD increase has come in passing, with 14 more scored this year than last.

Of the first 113 games played this year, home teams have won 62 and lost 51, with 53 of those games decided by seven or less points.

Wilson Given Aggie Contract

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Tom Wilson won't have to live under a cloud of "having to win 'em all" for the rest of this season in order to win the head coaching job at Texas A&M.

Wilson, named "interim coach" Wednesday after the stunning resignation of Emory Bellard as athletic director and head football coach, was officially announced Friday as Bellard's successor. His contract runs through 1981.

Jarvis Miller, president of Texas A&M, said Wilson gained the unanimous endorsement of the university's faculty-staff-student Athletic Council, with concurrence by the board of regents.

"We could have spent weeks, or even months" searching for the right man to become Texas A&M football coach, Miller said, and all the while have the school's overall program in a state of limbo.

"Once you have identified the person who is right for the job, the administrative process can be accomplished quickly, and that has been the case," the A&M president said.

Wilson, 34, is a former allSouthwest Conference quarterback at Texas Tech and still holds the school's career passing record. He completed 241 of 413 passes for 2,932 yards from 1963 to 1965, many of them to all-America teammate Donny Anderson.

Wilson had been offensive coordinator at Texas A&M since January 1975. Before that, he was quarterback coach at Texas Tech for nine years.

Ferguson Leads Irish To Win

By JOE MOOSHIL
AP Sports Writer

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Vagas Ferguson bolted for two touchdowns and Charles Male booted field goals of 47 and 37 yards Saturday to lead Notre Dame to a 20-0 college football victory over Miami, Fla.

The triumph was the fifth straight for the Irish since they opened the season with two losses, while Miami suffered its fourth loss against three victories.

Ferguson's 4-yard touchdown run after Notre Dame recovered a Hurricane fumble in the second quarter was the only score in a defense-dominated first half.

Male booted his 47-yard field goal early in the third quarter and Ferguson's second touchdown, a 3-yard jaunt, gave the Irish a 17-0 lead late in the third period and capped a 62-yard march in 11 plays.

Male added his 37-yard field goal early in the fourth quarter and the Irish controlled the game with their tough defense and the running of Ferguson and Jerome Heavens.

Miami was limited to four first downs in the first half and only one in the first quarter, which came on a pass interference penalty.

The Irish had a chance to pad their lead late in the first half when they moved from their own 16-yard line to the Miami 13 on a drive highlighted by Joe Montana's 42-yard pass to Kris Haines. But Montana passed on the next play and Rick Valerio intercepted on the 2-yard line.

Oh Rips Reds, 7-6

TOKYO (AP) — All-time home run king Sadaharu Oh ripped a two-run shot off Tom Seaver as the Yomiuri Giants rallied for a 7-6 victory over Cincinnati in the opening game Saturday of the Reds' Japan tour.

Oh, who has a career total of 805 homers, started his team's comeback with the blast off Seaver in the fourth inning after George Foster's two-run homer and a solo home run by Champ Summers had given the Reds a 3-0 lead.

The Reds regained the lead 6-4 with three runs in the sixth on a rally keyed by Johnny Bench's double and RBI-singles by Ron Oester and Seaver.

EC Women Win Event

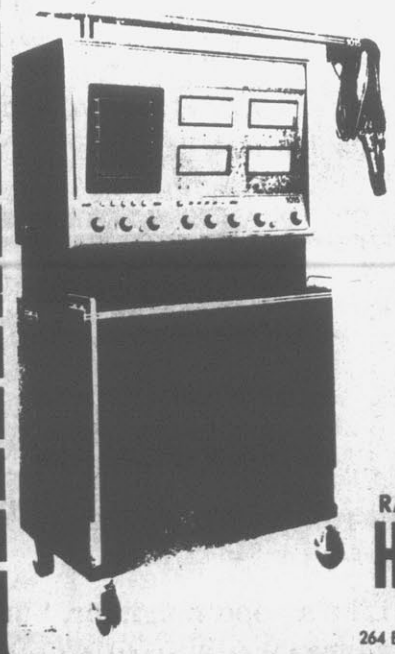

East Carolina raced through its own invitational volleyball tournament Saturday, claiming the team title with a straight games, 15-9, 15-4, win over Louisburg College.

The Pirates, now 20-10 against senior college competition, had won all ten of its games in the six-team pool play to enter the single elimination phase as the top seed. East Carolina topped Longwood, 11-15, 15-10, 15-1 to reach the final. Concord bested Longwood for third place, 8-15, 15-11, 15-10.

Pirates Becky Beauchamp and LaVonda Duncan paced the all-tournament team, which also included Loretta Holden and Sharon Perry of Louisburg, Linda Eagle of Longwood and Jean Zeltman of Concord.

Jaguars Clinch Playoff Berth, 41-0

BETHEL — Farmville Central clinched its third straight State 3-A playoff berth Friday night with a 41-0 romp past North Pitt.

The win also assured the Jaguars of no worse than a tie for the Eastern Carolina Conference title, also their third straight.

Behind the rushing of Donald Reid, Farmville scored twice in each of the first three periods of the game. Reid scored one touchdown and added four extra points, while Roger Joyner and David Dunn each scored twice.

Joyner got the scoring started in the first period when he plunged over from the one yard line and Reid added the PAT for a 7-0 lead.

Reid then got his own touchdown, this time on a 36-yard run. His PAT kick was off-target, however, leaving the Jaguars in a 13-0 lead after the first quarter. Reid finished up with 114 yards in ten carries.

Dunn got his first score to start the second period. He scored on an 11-yard run, and Reid added the PAT, moving the score to 20-0. Joyner came back later in the period with his second touchdown on a ten-yard run, and Reid's kick boosted the score to 27-0 at halftime.

Jeff Tyson scored first in the third period on an 18-yard pass from Donald Freeman. Reid again added the PAT for a 34-0 margin. The final touchdown came on a six-yard run by Dunn, who also booted the PAT.

Farmville ended up with 299 yards in total offense, while holding the Panthers to just 30. North Pitt never was able to mount a threat against the Jaguars.

Farmville closes out the regular season next Friday, hosting North Lenoir. The Jaguars will be going for their fourth straight shutout in the game.

North Pitt closes the year by hosting D.H. Conley. North Pitt is now 5-4 overall and 2-4 in conference play. Farmville is 8-1 overall and 6-0 in the ECC.

Greene Trips Hawks By 14-8

WHEAT SWAMP — Greene Central scored in the second and fourth quarters, then held off a comeback by North Lenoir in the second half to gain a 14-8 victory Friday night.

The win was the fourth in nine starts for the Rams, o moved their Eastern Carolina Conference record to 3-3. North Lenoir fell off to 3-6 overall and 1-5 in conference competition.

Greene Central scored on its only two threats. The first touchdown came in the second period when Harold Smith went into the end zone on a seven-yard scamper. Jim Fulghum kicked the PAT for a 7-0 lead.

After stopping North Lenoir on downs close to the ten yard line in the third period, Greene Central came back to score what proved to be the winner in the fourth quarter. Greg Holmes broke away on a 22-yard run to get the touchdown, with Fulghum again kicking.

North Lenoir finally broke the ice on a three-yard plunge by Johnny Wiggins, and Dennis Turnage converted on the two point try to close it to 14-8. But the Hawks didn't get another chance.

Roanoke Nips Southwest, 14-6

ROCKY MOUNT — A flat Roanoke Redskin team had to rally in the second half to pull out a 14-6 victory over weak Southwest Edgecombe Friday night as the 'Skins wound up Eastern Plains Conference play.

It marked the final EPC game for the Redskins, as the league will fold following final games next week. The Redskins then join the 3-A Northeastern Conference.

Roanoke came back in the third period to score the tieing touchdown. Anthony Latham scored it on a 33-yard pass from Glenn Cargile. Cargile then tossed to Sutton Edmondson for the two-point conversion, giving the Redskins an 8-6 lead.

The Redskins came back with another score in the final period, as Cargile broke away on a 19 yard run.

Williamston Rallies To Defeat Plymouth Eleven By 21-13 Score

PLYMOUTH — Winless Plymouth came up with two first period touchdowns, and kept Williamston on the ropes until late in the game when the Tigers scored for a third time to put the game away, 21-13.

Led by Guy Waters, who rushed for 171 yards, Plymouth pushed over two early touchdowns to put the Tigers in a hole, 13-0. Waters scored the two, going in from 1 yard out on the first, then scoring on a 59-yard run not long afterwards. Brady Pinner kicked the PAT after the first, but missed on the second.

Williamston came back with one touchdown in each of the first two periods to take the lead at the half, however, 14-13. Larry Williams got the first score on a two-yard run and Keith Clark scored the second, from a yard out. Victor Thomas' kicks were both successful.

In the early minutes of the third period, Plymouth marched to the three yard line of the Tigers, but failed to punch the ball across, losing it on downs.

On its next series, Plymouth lost a touchdown on a clip, and then Chuck Rogerson intercepted a fourth and goal pass in the end zone.

With 4:42 left in the game, quarterback Clark picked up a vital fourth-and-two at the Plymouth 47 to get a first down, and two plays later, Chris Peele broke a 34-yard scoring run to put the game away. Thomas' kick made it 21-13.

Peele led the Williamston offense with 133 yards rushing, while Williams had 81 and Butch Griffin added 65.

Firebirds Take Title

Southern Nash High School captured the Eastern Carolina Conference cross-country championship, downing D.H. Conley.

Second place went to Stanley Dunston of Southern in 16:52, followed by teammates Eugene Austin in 17:00 and Mickey Bissette in 17:05. Conley's Joe Greene finished fifth in 17:08.

In the second five were Mike Bryant of Southern in 17:11; Milton Alston of Southern in 17:18, Shawn Carson of Conley in 17:35; Alan Stone of Southern in 17:45; and Dexter High of Southern in 17:58.

Other Conley finishers included Bobby Cannon, 11th in 18:03; Mike Joyner, 12th in 18:21; Shawn Little, 14th in 18:48; Daryl Thompson, 15th in 18:49; Melvin Baker, 23rd in 23:20; and Lawrence Green, 24th in 23:24.

Chargers Top Conley By 19-0

HOLLYWOOD — Ayden-Grifton High School insured itself of no worse than a second-place finish in the Eastern Carolina Conference Friday night with a 19-0 victory over D.H. Conley.

The Vikings were unable to mount any kind of offensive effort in the game, threatening only once, late in the game.

Ayden-Grifton got on the scoreboard early, when the Vikings fumbled deep in their own territory. David Smith plunged over from the one-yard line and Shelton McCarter kicked the PAT for a 7-0 lead.

It stayed that way the rest of the half, with Ayden-Grifton scoring twice more in the second half. Smith again did the honors, scoring in the third period on a five-yard run.

The other score was a six-yard run by Donnie Jackson in the final quarter.

Ayden-Grifton is now 5-1 in league play and 5-4 overall. Conley drops to 2-4 in the ECC and is 3-6 overall. The Chargers close out at C.B. Aycock Friday, while Conley travels to North Pitt.

UCLA Holds Off Arizona Rally To Stay Unbeaten In Pac-Ten

AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It looked like a long night for Arizona at halftime, but afterwards the Wildcats were wishing that it had, indeed, been a little longer.

Tenth-ranked UCLA looked like No. 1 in rolling to a 24-0 halftime advantage over its visitors before 41,077 at the Coliseum Friday night, and a rout appeared in the making. The Bruins rolled up 297 yards in total offense to the Wildcats' 114 in the first 30 minutes.

Arizona turned things around after the intermission, scoring a pair of touchdowns and holding UCLA scoreless while gaining 235 yards to the Bruins' 128. But it wasn't enough.

The end result was a 24-14 victory for the Bruins, enabling them to remain unbeaten in Pacific-10 Conference play. But the underdog Wildcats made an impression.

"Arizona impressed me," said UCLA Coach Terry Donahue. "They are a very physical team and their running backs and quarterback were outstanding.

"In the first half, I think we played our most outstanding football of the season," added Donahue. "In the second half, however, we lost our edge emotionally."

It took the Bruins only 3:26 to take a lead they held the rest of the way. After receiving the opening kickoff, UCLA moved 74 yards in 10 plays. James Owens capped the drive with a 3-yard touchdown run.

UCLA, 5-0 in Pac-10 play and 7-1 overall, made it 14-0 early in the second quarter on a 44yard dash by Freeman McNeil, climaxing a 91-yard, 10-play drive.

The Bruins added to their lead with a pair of scores late in the second quarter. Quarterback Rick Bashore tallied on an 8-yard run with 2:52 left before halftime shortly after Wildcat quarterback Jim Krohn fumbled and Jerry Robinson recovered deep in Arizona territory.

Peter Boermeester kicked a 46-yard field goal on the final play of the first half to complete the Bruins' scoring.

It was quiet until early in the fourth quarter when Arizona lost a fumble at the UCLA 8yard line. But Krohn engineered a pair of touchdown drives after that, scoring himself on an 8-yard run and hitting Ron Beyer with a 21-yard scoring pass.

"I was pleased with the second half effort and the intensity was there," said Arizona Coach Tony Mason, whose team is 1-2 in conference play and 3-4 overall. "In the first half we were rusty but UCLA was good.

"We can't leave the ball on the ground (fumble), not against a good football team," continued Mason. "They are a fine team, a class team.

"We couldn't get field position. Without field position we couldn't throw the way we would have wanted."

The Bruins rushed for 363 yards. Theotis Brown led the way with 115 yards on 21 attempts. McNeil added 104 yards on 15 carries.

Bashore completed six of nine passes for 62 yards. He went to the air just once in the second half, throwing an incompletion. The UCLA quarterback also rushed for 75 yards on 14 tries.

Finley Again Trying To Sell Oakland A's

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Charles O. Finley said Friday night a lease for the prospective new owners of the Oakland A's baseball franchise is the only potential obstacle to his sale of the club.

But he's not sure a lease agreement can be reached.

Finley tried to sell the team earlier this year to Denveroilman Marvin Davis but his lease at the Oakland Coliseum, which has nine years to run, blocked the sale and transfer of the club to Denver.

Finley hopes the Coliseum board will let him out of his lease this time and grant the prospective owners the lease they are seeking.

Oakland furniture dealer Ed Bercovich said Friday his group has agreed to buy the team from Finley and keep it in Oakland.

"The Coliseum last year wanted $3 million and the National League put up $1 million, the American League put up $1 million and Charlie Finley put up $1 million. Then they (the board) wanted the San Francisco Giants to play half their games in Oakland and they (the Giants) agreed to do that," Finley said.

"Then the Coliseum at the last minute tried to take the concession and parking revenue away from the San Francisco Giants and at that time the San Francisco Giants told the Oakland Coliseum board to go fly a kite."

Finley said the prospective owners have asked the board for a nine-year lease which they would be able to get out of if the A's fail to draw one million fans in each the second and third years. If the A's drew that many, the prospective owners would have to keep the team in Oakland for the life of the lease, Finley said.

"They (board members) have been yelling they want local ownership so local ownership has appeared on the scene and we have agreed on a price.

"The monkey is again on the Coliseum's back. They blew the last one. Let's see if they blow this one. They wouldn't surprise me if they did."

Finley said he and Bercovich agreed to the deal about 10 days ago in Finley's Chicago apartment.

A reliable source said the sale price is about $12 million. The source also said the purchasing group is made up of six to eight Bay Area people, including Al Davis, the managing general partner of the Oakland Raiders of the National Football League.

With the Giants playing across San Francisco Bay, the A's have had trouble attracting fans.

"I certainly can't make it go financially in Oakland and maybe the answer is local ownership," said Finley, a Chicago insurance man.

Wolfpack Club Gets Tax Break

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Wolfpack Club, which helps support the athletic program at N.C. State University, won't have to pay $42,000 in property taxes to Wake County and the City of Raleigh on a former motel it owns where athletes live, the state attorney general's office has ruled..

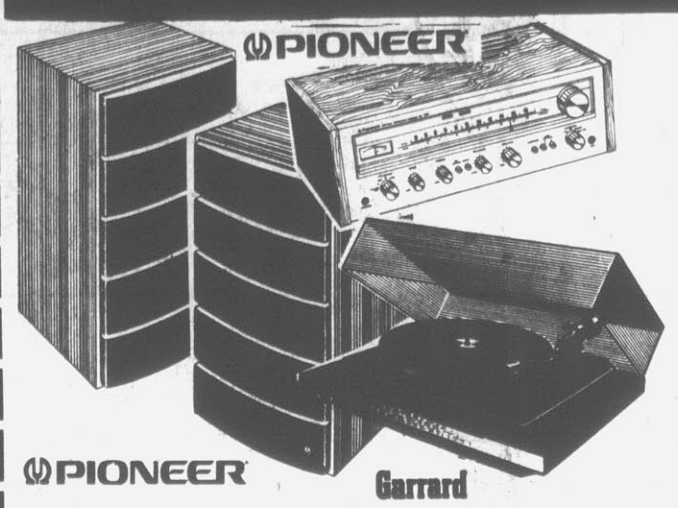

The attorney general's office said in an opinion released Friday that the Wolfpack Club claimed the College Inn "is being used in its tax-exempt activity of providing scholarship support to student athletes. After examining its clarifying information in the light of the applicable statute, we agree."

But an attorney general's ruling is not binding, and it's up the Wake County commissioners to decide whether they still want to seek payment of the taxes.The opinion reversed a March 31 opinion by Assistant Attorney General Myron C. Banks that the Wolfpack Club would have to pay the $42,000 in city and county taxes and penalties. County tax attorney Joseph B. Bilisoly requested a second ruling after the Wolfpack Club formally protested.

In the inn, the club houses 285 men and women athletes who are attending N.C. State on athletic scholarships.

The attorney general's opinion said that the Wolfpack Club is rendering almost $700,000 a year in assistance to student athletes, including $363,424 in food, $226,882 in tuition and fees, $14,071 in dormitory rent and $15,539 in books and supplies.

Bullets Suffer During Coast Trip

AP Sports Writer

Motta's Bullets were embarrassed by the Golden State Warriors 102-83 Friday night, their third loss on a West Coast road swing that ends Sunday night in Los Angeles.

The National Basketball Association game was one of two games being nationally televised, although once the outcome was determined — and it was determined early, Golden State going up by as many as 24 points in the first quarter — CBS switched almost exclusively to the Seattle-Milwaukee game.

That one went down to the wire, the Sonics winning 80-79 on Lonnie Shelton's free throw with 48 seconds to play. Seattle is now 7-0, the NBA's only unbeaten team.

In other games Friday night, the Phoenix Suns beat the Chicago Bulls 115-110 in overtime, the Indiana Pacers defeated the Denver Nuggets 112-99, the Los Angeles Lakers topped the San Diego Clippers 113-110, the Detroit Pistons edged the Kansas City Kings 107-102 and the New Jersey Nets beat Cleveland Cavaliers 123-108.

"We were a little flat against Portland, we were very flat against Seattle," said Motta, referring to Washington's losses earlier this week by scores of 104-102 and 121-92, respectively. "I thought tonight we would kick their butt but we were flat again. Two in a row is about 1½ too many, and the players know that."

The Warriors took it right to the defending NBA champions, running off the game's first 12 points and building a 34-12 lead by the end of the first quarter. The catalyst was John Lucas, who quarterbacked the running game and led the cheers after each basket.

Sonics 80, Bucks 79

Shelton, scoreless until the fourth quarter, tied the game at 79 with a short jumper with 1:21 to play, then made one of two free throws for the winning point. Milwaukee had two chances to go ahead, but couldn't score either time.

The Bucks' Marques Johnson had 32 points and 14 rebounds, while Fred Brown led the Sonics with 20 points and Jack Sikma added 19 points and 13 rebounds.

Suns 115, Bulls 110, OT

Phoenix came from behind twice to beat the Bulls. The Suns were trailing 101-94 with 11:52 to go in regulation but drew even at 113-113 on Paul Westphal's 15-footer with five seconds left. Artis Gilmore scored the first five points of the overtime for Chicago, but the Pacers went ahead 111-110 on Westphal's driving layup. Baskets by Walter Davis and Westphal sealed the verdict.

Westphal scored 38 points and Davis 37.

Pacers 112, Nuggets 99

Ricky Sobers scored 21 points and backcourtmate Johnny Davis had 20 points and 11 assists as the Pacers upset Denver before a crowd of 12,469, the largest of the season at Indianapolis. Former Pacer George McGinnis had 20 points and 16 rebounds for Denver.

Lakers 113, Clippers 101

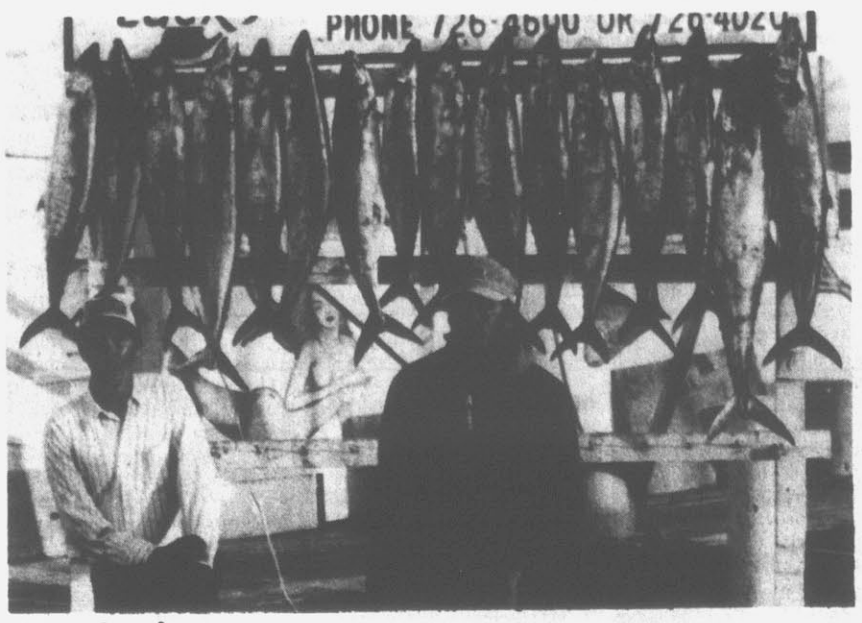

Los Angeles, leading 96-95, reeled off 15 straight points late in the second half to pull away from stubborn San Diego. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the Lakers and Lloyd Free of the Clippers scored 26 points apiece.

Pistons 107, Kings 102

Baskets by M.L. Carr and Rickey Green in the final 30 seconds clinched the victory for Detroit, which was without Coach Dick Vitale, who was sitting out a one-day suspension for his actions in a game earlier this week. Bob Lanier led the Pistons with 24 points.

Nets 123, Cavaliers 108

Reserve guards Winford Boynes and Eddie Jordan sparked a 22-8 burst in the last 6:40 of the first half that put New Jersey ahead to stay as the Nets won their third in a row. Bernard King scored 34 points for New Jersey and John Williamson had 28.

King Catch

Billy Stokes, right, of Ayden, Clifton J. Moss, left, of Winterville, and Corey Stokes of Ayden (not pictured) had a field day off Morehead City recently when they boated 15 king mackerel. They were fishing on Corey's boat and the kings weighed from 12 to 29 pounds. They used float rigs to catch the fish, which totaled 250 pounds.

Hard-Shell Liberals Dismayed

AP Newsfeatures Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Joseph L. Rauh Jr., founding father of the Americans for Democratic Action and a man often described as Washington's quintessential liberal, gets chewed out a lot these days by his friends on Capitol Hill.

"I keep running into these guys who ask me why the ADA gave them such a high rating," Rauh says. "They tell me how they have to go into rural areas and they take a lot of heat for it. I just tell them that its their own votes that decide their rating."

Which brings us to Max Baucus, a Democratic congressman from Montana with high marks from the ADA. He's running for the Senate against a conservative Republican named Larry Williams.

Williams keeps calling Baucus a liberal. Baucus keeps saying he's a moderate. He also keeps saying he's running in the tradition of Mike Mansfield and the late Lee Metcalf. "Lee Metcalf," says Joe Rauh, "was practically a radical."

But politicians are creatures of conventional wisdom, and the conventional wisdom this year is that the electorate has turned rightward. Recent polls have found that nearly half the American electorate classifies itself as right of center compared to less than a third that says it's on the left.

Beyond the polls, there seems to be evidence the public is tired of government spending on social programs, of crime, of inflation, of sexual and social innovations accelerated in the turbulent '60s. The approval of California's tax-cutting Proposition 13 is the most dramatic example, but there is also the rush by states to reinstitute the death penalty, the movements against abortion, gay rights, the Panama Canal treaties and the Equal Rights Amendment.

The trend is also supported by unexpected conservative primary victories over Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts, Sen. Clifford Case and Rep. Donald Fraser, seeking Hubert Humphrey's Senate seat in Minnesota. In Congress, it's exemplified by the Congressional defeats of labor law revision and the consumer protection agency and by the bandwagon effect of Proposition 13 that led to cuts in appropriation bills.

Where does that leave the liberals, the ones who are still willing to proclaim themselves? Confused, dismayed, sometimes angry, sometimes defiant. They agonize at cocktail parties, in print — The New Republic recently ran an essay entitled "The Right Menace," by Irving Howe — and other liberal periodicals and editorial pages are filled with a variety of laments, including numerous mea culpas by liberals bemoaning their own failures.

But there are optimists too. While intellectuals like Howe grieve over the dominance of "the tawdry cult of the first person singular," old-line political activists like Joe Rauh insist that liberalism isn't dead, not even sleeping. Others note that Congress is still well populated with liberals — whatever they may be calling themselves — and point to polls showing Sen. Edward Kennedy, a liberal by any definition, as one of the nation's most popular politicians.

What is clear is that there are changes taking place in politics. Whether they signal the end of liberalism is another question.

—Voter apathy — low turnouts that allow single-issue groups to control primaries. "There's no issue that people get really excited about these days," says Sam Brown, an antiwar leader of the '60s who now heads ACTION, which combines the Peace Corps and Vista.

—Increased activism by conservative political organizations, like Richard Viguerie's direct mail campaign, which has raised millions for right-wing candidates. Conservatives acknowledge they borrowed the techniques from liberal political organizers, who were successful in the 1972 McGovern campaign and the anti-war movement of the '60s.

—Other liberal reforms like those that created primaries and allowed direct popular votes on issues — like Proposition 13. "You can't buy the typical big election, but you can buy a primary when the turnout is so low," says James MacGregor Burns, the Williams College political scientist and author. "Primary elections are a great threat to liberalism in this country. They're a great aid to conservatives."

—Newer liberal reforms, like the election of Congressional committee chairmen. Many liberals now think that has resulted in a chaotic Congress where members ignore the national interest for petty, local concerns and where the leadership lacks power. "Too frequently we got hung up on process and forgot substance," says Brown.

But beyond such ironies in the political process, liberals also seem to have lost the faith in human nature that has been such an integral part of the liberal creed. "In the ideal Democratic society," says one liberal congressman, "the people should be able to participate regularly in decisions. But that just doesn't work, they aren't interested, and even when they are, most of them just don't understand the complexities."

Jerry Wurf, president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees Union, puts it this way: "It's a kind of tragedy. When I was a young man, everyone was for the poor and disenfranchised. Now everybody's for the upper middle class."

"Liberalism," says Joe Rauh, "is a belief in the dignity of the individual, which includes some form of economic equality, civil rights and civil liberties sufficient to protect the individual. How that's done, whether by the government or private enterprise, is basically unimportant."

Few liberals — few conservatives, for that matter — would deny those principles. But one of the problems of liberalism these days is that aside from unrelenting stalwarts like Joe Rauh, there's frequent dispute about who or what a liberal is.

In 1976, for example, Rep. Morris Udall, the candidate of the liberals, campaigned for president as a "progressive." Sen. Henry Jackson, scorned by many liberals for his hawkish views on defense, called himself a liberal.

Another self-proclaimed liberal is Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y. He held jobs in the Nixon and Ford administrations, which some liberals think cause enough to exclude him from their ranks. Moynihan is being talked up for the presidency by some of the same people who support Jackson — and who are angered because Jimmy Carter has appointed to posts in his administration many of the people George McGovern — the "ultra-liberal" — might have appointed had he been elected in 1972.

One of them is Sam Brown, who scorns the liberal label. "The '60s were anti-liberal," Brown says. "A lot of people on the left would identify Vietnam as the liberals' response to the massive retaliation doctrine of the '50s."

Liberals were worried and conservatives cheered by the national mood even before Proposition 13, but that political thunderbolt on June 6 shook the liberals further. Most are appalled at the provisions that cut property tax revenues by approximately $7 billion and appeared to provide the biggest breaks for businesses and utilities. But many have some positive things to say about the "tax rebellion."

"Proposition 13 was a response to the very real unfairness of the present tax system," says Rauh. "It's not tax reform and it's a terrible way to go about changing the system, but it tells you that people want to change the tax system."

When you ask liberals about tax reform, they all talk about making income taxes — state and federal — truly progressive and making business pay what they see as a greater share. But even the most fervent advocates of progressive income taxes despair at times over the public response.

Sam Brown, former state treasurer in Colorado, recalls the attempt there to repeal the sales tax on food — "a regressive tax that hits most at poor and middle income people" — and replace it with higher corporate taxes. The proposal was defeated in a referendum.

And James MacGregor Burns, active in Massachusetts politics, points to the fusillade of public opposition that greets efforts to substitute a progressive income tax for the state's flat five percent across-theboard levy.

But even as they lament their defeats, they see silver linings. Thus the comment of a New York liberal activist about the victory of conservative businessman Robert Short over Rep. Fraser in the Minnesota primary for the Senate.

"Short spent $1 million," says a New York liberal activist. "Fraser had all the single interest groups against him — the gun lobby, the anti-abortionists, the people who wanted motorboats in the lake area. And yet he only lost by a few thousand votes. If you look at it that way, it's not s." zher, acknowledging the bleak times, hopes they'll goad liberals into actOO ¾a——oxivOs. p'¾eybe this will get us to do something."

China Modernizing Railroads

By TERRY A. ANDERSON

TOKYO (AP) — The key to China's industrialization effort is its rail network, and Peking is mounting a crash effort to modernize the system, with Japanese help, according to Japan National Railway officials.

"The Chinese are in a big hurry," said Norio Tejima, director of JNR's International Department, in an interview. Tejima has visited China twice in the past year to talk with Chinese railroad officials.

"Increasing transportation is very basic (to the industrialization plan)," he said. "They have given it the highest priority."

Nearly 70 percent of China's freight traffic goes by rail, Tejima explained. Since China will pay for the industrialization, especially foreign plants and technology, with coal, oil and other raw materials, Peking must have some way to get those materials to the coast.

"For instance, they want to increase coal production by 400 percent," Tejima said. "To move that much coal, they will need much greater transport capacity.

"Chinese highways are very primitive. Chinese trucks are small — nearly all four or five tons. There's not enough canal or river transport. So they are concentrating on the railroads," the JNR official said.

Some officials and businessmen here hope that Japanese companies can land big contracts involving construction or supply of machinery or materials. But Tejima said Japanese help would be limited to supplying technology and training.

"There's very little chance of Japan taking part in direct construction," he said. "The Chinese plan to do that by themselves."

He said Chinese railway technology was already quite good, especially in bridge and roadway construction. The Chinese have been building 625 miles of railway per year since 1949, and now have an estimated 31,250 miles — 50 percent of it double-tracked. The United States has about 220,000 miles of rail lines, and Japan 13,125 miles.

Tejima said the Chinese railroads carried 1.5 billion tons of freight traffic a year now, plus about 950 million passengers.

"All the provincial capitals and some autonomous regions are linked by rail, and lines to Tibet and remaining rural areas are being constructed," Tejima said.

"The Chinese are placing the most emphasis now on electrification of their lines near Peking, and speeding up traffic," Tejima said.

"Their target is to increase the number of trains as much as possible and to introduce as much automation as they can."

He said Peking apparently wanted to boost speed by about 40 or 50 percent, from the present average of 35 miles per hour for freight trains and 45 miles per hour to passenger trains to as much as 70 mph for freight and 70 mph for passengers.

In addition, the Chinese will try to electrify their lines, automate marshaling yards, and computerize route and traffic control.

"They want to do all this soon," Tejima said.

"They're trying to move too fast," he added. "First, for large-scale modernization, you must train staff — difficult to do in a hurry. Also, for electrification of lines, you need power. There's not enough now and most Chinese homes only have one or two lights. While China has a lot of undeveloped water power, it takes time to build the infrastructure such as power plants and transmission lines.

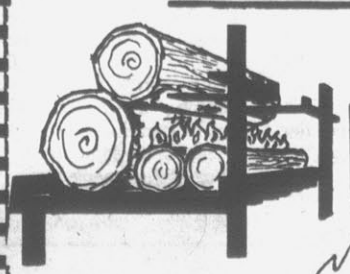

"We started electrifying our Tokaido main line (from Tokyo to Kobe) in 1951 and completed it in 1956. Then our Shinkansen (Bullet) line, the next stage in modernizing, was completed in 1964 — eight years later."

One of China's biggest problems in modernizing railroads is personnel, according to an official who toured the country.

This is where Japan will be able to help, according to Tejima. The most likely system will be to have key Chinese engineers and technicians come to Japan for training, then return to China to train other Chinese. In addition, JNR people will be sent to China to help there.

Black Gold And The Other Kind

By OTTO DOELLING
Associated Press Writer

JIDDA, Saudi Arabia (AP) — "How much is that one?"

The colorfully garbed wife of an African diplomat pointed to a heavy gold armband in a shop in Jidda's Badou Souk, the public market place.

The merchant brought it out and placed it on his scales, as though it were a piece of goat cheese, weighing its content and paying no attention to the quality of workmanship.

It would cost 1,600 riyals, about $507, the merchant said.

The woman left, saying she would look around for a better bargain.

But not everyone makes that decision. In fact, a gold rush is on in the Middle East on top of the oil boom, and it runs through teeming Arab and Persian markets — a hedge against the sinking value of the U.S. dollar, inflation and political uncertainty.

Buying gold is an old tradition in this part of the world, but with oil dollars flowing into all kinds of pockets now, it isn't just sheiks who are buying. Middle-class natives and foreigners working in the area are also in the market.

Much of the gold is being snapped up in the form of bracelets and heavy necklaces.

The Chase Manhattan Bank's biweekly newsletter, Mideast Markets, said recently that the region — particularly the oilrich states on the Persian Gulf — "has become one of the world's hottest markets for gold."

"At least 300 tons — or about one-fifth of the world market supply — found their way to the region last year," the newsletter said.

"Gold buying is nothing new to the Middle East," said an American economist in Jidda, one of the key markets. "It's been going on for thousands of years. The Bedouins didn't have banks, you know. Now, with much more money around, a lot more gold is being bought."

Little of the buying seems to be done by governments. But in recent months, with the continued decline on the U.S. dollar, brokers in the Gulf area have noted a change in attitude toward yellow gold on the part of Arab producers of black gold.

"Before they used to regard gold almost as a non-monetary asset, but now they are realizing that it is a real asset to hold," said a foreign adviser to the government of the United Arab Emirates.

The private purchasers are not only super-rich sheiks whose agents are busily buying in Zurich, London, Hong Kong, New York and Bahrain as a hedge against the weakening dollar.

They also are Western technicians and foreign laborers who have flocked to the region to catch shares of the oil boom. There are about two million foreign workers in Gulf oil states.

"What with no booze, no night clubs or movies, there's not a hell of a lot you can spend money on around here," the economist in Jidda said explaining how the gold fever has gripped foreigners in this strict Moslem area.

While the buyers of bracelets and necklaces come with thick wallets, the more well-heeled Saudi merchants have been going across to the island emirate of Bahrain with suitcases stuffed with riyals, according to a gold merchant in Manama, the emirate's capital.

The merchant said some individual sales have run to as much as 220 pounds of gold worth more than $700,000.

"Everywhere, gold buying is a hedge against a lack of confidence," said a Western diplomat in Riyadh, the Saudi capital. "In Iran, there is apprehension about the country's political stability. Elsewhere the concern is inflation and the falling dollar."

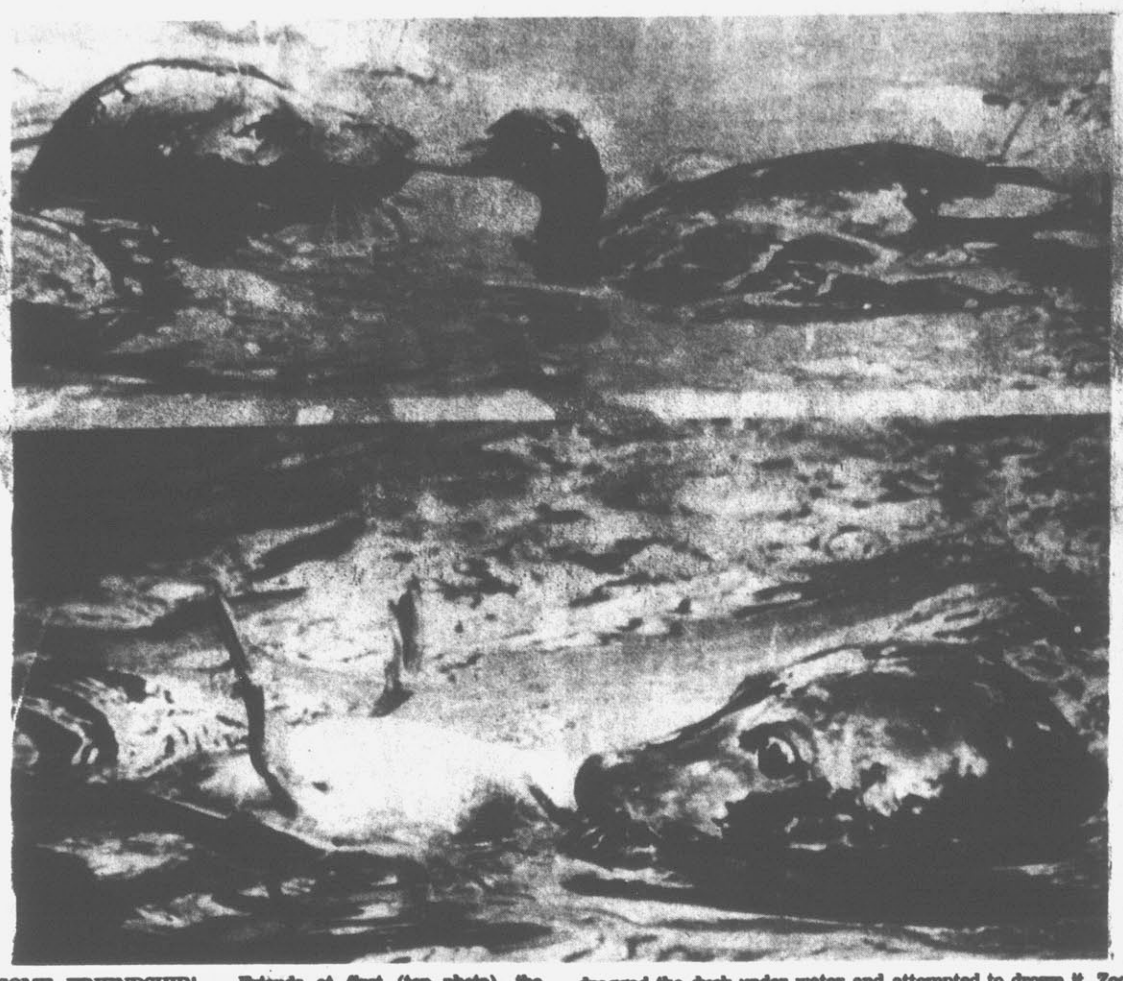

Last year, purchasers in Iran led the way, buying 72 metric tons of gold, a marked increase from the 6.5 tons recorded in 1973 before the five-fold hike in the price of crude oil.

Saudi Arabia, with a population about a sixth of Iran's 34 million, ranked second with purchases of 45 tons in 1977. Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Bahrain and Jordan also have become active markets.

In Jidda's sprawling public market, jewelry shops and stalls are drawing Filipino maintenance workers, Pakistani clerks, South Korean construction workers, day laborers from Yemen and Egypt, American oil men and the colorfully garbed wives of African diplomats — all buying gold jewelry off the scales.

The price is relatively cheap, averaging about 23 Saudi riyals or $6.98 a gram. This works out to $217.70 an ounce, compared with a recent price of $228 in London, a major gold-trading center.

Because of the weight system used, prices can run 40 to 50 percent cheaper than for comparable pieces of jewelry sold in Western Europe or the United States, veteran shoppers here say.

SOME FRIENDSHIP! — Friends at first (top photo), the amicable relationship between a duck and a seal at Vancouver's Stanly Park zoo degenerated quickly when the seal dragged the duck under water and attempted to drown it. Zoo officials came to the duck's rescue. (CP Laserphoto)

Kmart CORNER OF GREENVILLE AND ARLINGTON BOULEVARDS

CAMERA Angles

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

I could not attend Photokina 78 in Cologne, Germany, recently but had my own private eye, ewrs timmense instances that make ai the newest offerings and hear the latest news.

The succinct personal report from my proxy, Norman Lipton, executive manager of the Photographic Manufacturers and Distributors Association.

Two variable focus enlarging lenses from Burleigh Brooks: a 70-80mm (f-4.5 at short end, f5.6 at long end) covering 24x36mm to 6x7cm negatives; and 105-150mm (f-4.5 to f-5.6) covering 6x7cm to 4x5-inch negatives. Both lenses with Leica screw-thread mounts.

A 35mm SLR camera with an exposure rate of 9.5 frames-per second. The Nikon F2H camera's rapid operation, achieved with an innovative half-mirror, is called "Titan," because its wearing parts are reinforced with Titanium alloy.

The Flash Fujica Auto Focus 35mm camera, with a "beam sensor" to facilitate auto focus operation in the dark or in dimly lit situations. It incorporates a memory system which permits autofocus setting on any position in the picture area by depressing the release halfway before composing the scene in the viewfinder.

Among new items from familiar companies:

Two new professional camera systems from Polaroid, the 600 and 600 SE, which use peel apart film material, in addition to its Sonar Auto focus instant cameras.

Four solid state exposure meters from Vivitar in addition to new lenses, electronic flash units and a new enlarger.

The first enlarging system with electronic color scanner and exposure light mixer by Philips of Holland, to be imported in the United States by Hindaphoto.

The Ilfobrom Galerie, a new deluxe fiber-based paper with deep rich blacks and wide exposure latitude. Also from Ilford: HP5 in 400 ASA rollfilm; and Cibachrome PS "brilliant" and RC "pearl" professional color print materials from Cibachrome P-3 chemistry, a new self-masking process for improved color renditions with slightly less over-all contrast.

The first series of Bosch-Bauer 35mm still cameras: the RX reflex system with eight interchangeable lenses and four electronic flash units.

The Sekonic View-Spot L-438 exposure meter, from Copal with a 3-to-10 degree viewing angle based on a silicon blue cell for faster, more sensitive reading.

And from Hanimex, from their new plant in Jackson, Mich.: a motorized dual-8 Sound Editor-Viewer for all 8mm movie film formats; five new zoom lenses in all popular SLR lens mounts; and the VXL 110 camera, a vertical format pocket version, with f-1.9 lens for available light photography with 400 ASA film and shutter programmed to 1-800th sec. and down to f-16.

In trend-setting areas, there were surprises and advances.

Surprise: No new instant photography systems were introduced by Fuji (reported to have one ready), Agfa-Gevaert (ditto) and Hanimex (which had promised twice in last year). Explanation by Jack Hannes of Hanimex: It would be suicidal for any company to be caught between the Kodak and Polaroid battle lines without a radically improved system over what they are doing now.

Advances: The video cassette and video recording fields. Giant Hall 12 was crammed with VCR and VTR hardware and with companies providing services in converting movie film to video tape, many from the U.S. exhibiting at Photokina for the first time.

Also, the "ultraminiature 35mm" or more compact fullframe 35mm range-finder cameras. Most ingenious: the Olympus XA, labeled the "clam-shell" because its front cover closes over the rangefinder and lens. It features full automation, aperture priority from 1 second to 1-500th, 35mm f-2.8 lens, LED battery check, 100 or 400 ASA automation without manual override, and flash module accessory.

General observations: With the U.S. dollar sagging, prices in Germany were extremely high. Single admission tickets to Photokina were DM 30 or about $15.46 but it didn't prevent determined amateurs from jamming the halls, making the aisles impenetrable on Saturday, Sunday and even Monday.

A helpful pamphlet was distributed to visitors pinpointing 25 specific locations of historic importance in the City of Cologne which would make good shooting for camera fans.

Pets' Problems Are Blamed On Owners

But the 77-year-old Schutte says it's people who have problems, not their pets.

"People try talking to a dog," Schutte said in a recent interview. "The dog doesn't understand. They beat him, and then when he is fully grown he'll turn and attack them. Then they think the dog is a problem."

Schutte, who is training dogs for the Summit County sheriff's bomb squad, doesn't have a degree in psychology or anything else — in fact, he says he doesn't have a high school diploma. But he says extensive reading has helped him understand something about what makes dogs tick.

For instance, when he gets a complaint concerning a dog who "does his business in the corner every night while the family is sleeping," he finds that the problem can probably be traced to feeding habits.

"I ask the people, 'What time do you feed the dog?' They reply they feed him about 6 p.m. Well, it takes about eight hours for his food to move through his system, so he has got to go at 2 a.m. But they don't get up until 7 a.m. So that's the problem."

Schutte recommends delaying feeding until shortly before bedtime. He advises taking a dog for a short morning walk before the morning feeding and then letting the pet outside again about 15 minutes later.

Schutte said he became interested in dog training about 40 years ago when he began having problems with a Boston terrier named Buggs.

"I tried to find the answers from the so-called experts, but nobody knew anything," he recalled.

So he started reading texts and wound up running a training school.

Schutte still reads every night before going to bed. He says his studies have helped him to "tolerate both people and dogs better."

Young Photographer Prefers Old-Fashioned Way

With his horse and wagon, he travels from community to community practicing the art of tintype photography, an occupation that hasn't been practiced since the early part of the century.

"I do the photography of 100 years ago," Coffer said recently at a stop in Randolph County. "I travel and live like a travelling photographer would have 100 years ago."

Coffer, 26, has been on the road about two months, a journey that has taken him from Lancaster, Pa. through the mountains of Virginia and to the North Carolina piedmont. He hopes to make it to his native Florida before wintersets in.

The wagon he travels in doubles as a home and darkroom. And his horse is aptly named Brownie, although Coffer said the horse was not named after the famous Kodak camera.

Coffer said he began his career as an underwater photographer, later worked in a portrait studio and ran his own business. But when he came across an old Kodak 8-by-10 camera at an antique sale one day, he began researching the methods of tintype photography and considered making his trip.

"I thought about it for a couple of years. I wanted to do something the old way," he said.

Tintype photography was patented in 1856. It involves reproducing an image directly onto a tin plate and results in a brownish photograph made of tin.

Tintype died off when the more modern methods of using film and enlarging onto paper were perfected.

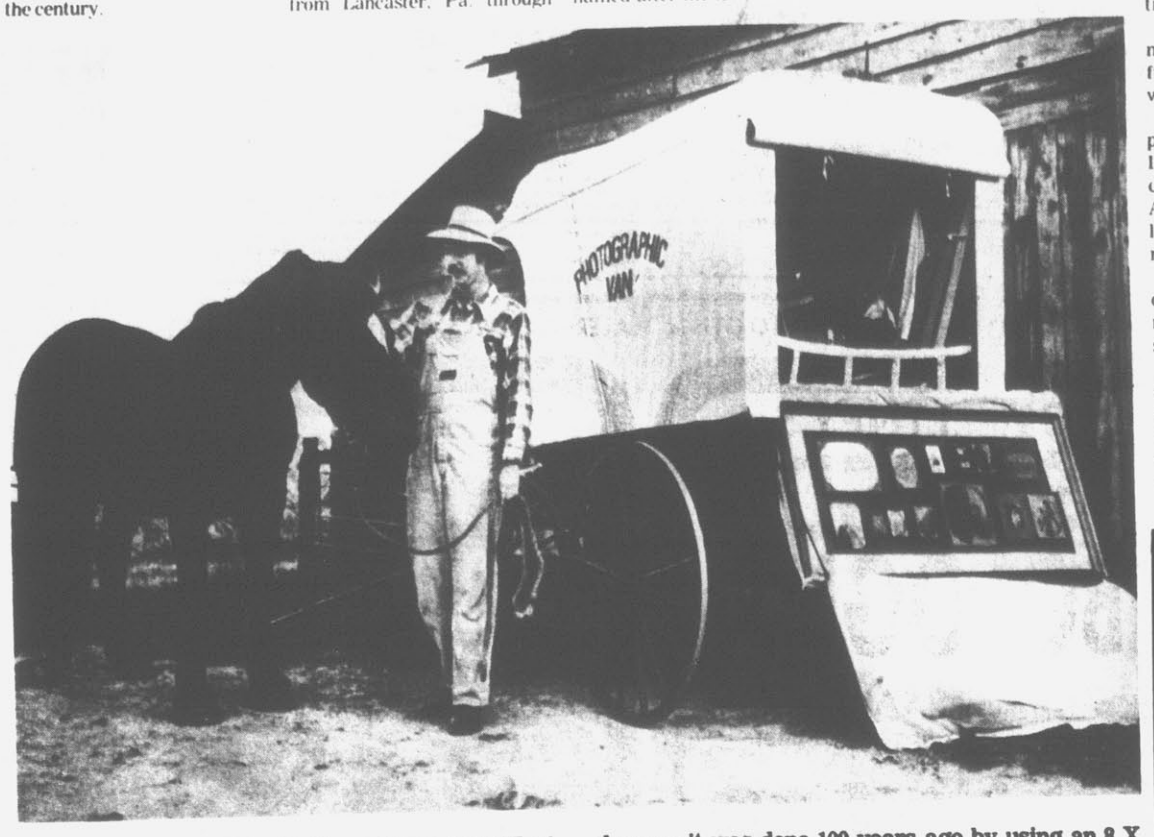

After careful research and planning, Coffer travelled to Lancaster, heart of Amish country. There he lived with the Amish and studied the way they live without modern machinery.

"They helped me learn how to drive a horse and wagon, which really wasn't that hard," he said.

Coffer's eight-foot wagon also serves as his darkroom. The inside is painted black. He keeps a few of the old-style clothes worn 100 years ago for costumes for customers.

He averages about 15 miles a day and usually camps out at night.

And much of the rest of his life is old fashioned, too. He writes letters with a quill pen, shaves in the morning with a straight razor and carries a pocket watch.

Sergeant Has Collected 50,000 Baseball Cards

ZARAGOZA AIR BASE, Spain (AP) — Who knows that Marv Throneberry hit 16 home runs in '62 for the Mets, or that Chuck Essengine pinch-hit two home runs in the '59 World Series for the Dodgers?

Who cares?

A man who works at the dental clinic at Zaragoza Air Base in northern Spain cares. He's Sgt. Frank Donati, 25, of Manville, N.J., and he's a baseballcard collector.

"I got started young," he says. "Every day, on the way home from school, I took my dime allowance and bought two packs of gum. I saved the cards inside and gave the gum to my sister.

"Then, when I had ended up with five Mickey Mantles, I would trade them for a Dick Groat or Ted Williams — or someone else that was hard to find. It took me most of the baseball season to get Dick Groat in 1964. I ended up trading 10 Yankees and about 14 other players before I finally got him."

But disaster befell the young baseball card collector, he recalled.

"By 1968, I had about 40,000 baseball cards saved up — give or take a thousand. My grandmother used to come down to New Jersey to help us spring clean. I was at school, a sophomore in high school — and she decided I was too old to be collecting baseball cards.

"She threw them out. At 15, this was the saddest moment of my young life. It was just as the 1968 sets were coming out, too."

It was someone else's grandmother who gave him his second start.

"I was at a flea market in 1974 and another grandmother had discarded a box of 5,000 baseball cards that ended up there," he relates. "I was looking through them, got interested, and bought them for $25."

Donati's collection is back up to 50,000 cards and "I trade about $500 worth of cards each year, and I spent about $900 last year on this hobby. You can really get carried away."

Being in Spain, he adds, makes trading difficult, but Donati does a lot of business through hobby magazines. And he stays abreast of the latest sets out, as well as with the vintage-card market.

"For example, a 1910 Philadelphia A's Eddie Plank goes for about $800 nowadays. They broke the printing plate when running them off and quit printing rather than make another plate," says Donati, whose own most expensive card is a 1954 Ted Williams he says is worth $125.

"In 1974, it was rumored that the San Diego Padres would be moving to Washington, D.C. A company printed them up as the Washington Nationals. I've got that set plus the correct set that came out later. The Padres are still in San Diego.

"In 1910, the T-206 set had Honus Wagner included in a cigarette pack set. He ordered his cards pulled out because he didn't want kids thinking they should use tobacco. There are only 14 known cards today. One recently sold for more than $3,700. I don't have one of those yet, but I'm still looking."

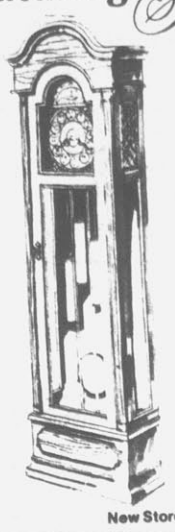

He does have some unusual cards, though. On a slip-up by the Leaf Gum Company in 1960, he says, Brook Lawrence's picture ended up on a Jim Grant card. The correction was printed in smaller quantities and is now worth about $25. He has both cards.

Donati has tobacco cards from 1910, gum cards from 1933 to the present, dog food sets from 1954, Pepsi Cola sets from 1963 to 1966 and McDonald's sets from 1974, beer from 1970 to 1974 "and I just picked up the 1977 Burger Chef and Pepsi Cola sets."

"The thing I like about this hobby," he says, "is that I can sit back some day and think 'I remember seeing Willie Davis hit two triples against the Phillies in '61. I thought he was the greatest player that ever lived until 1966 when he made three errors in the same inning in the world series. It cost the Dodgers the game against the Orioles.' Coins and stamps just don't do that to me."

Military At Home In Fla.

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

Sailors, airmen and military hardware seem out of place in the typical image of Florida's subtropical attractions — sunshine and oranges. But the state depends mightily on the military to fill its treasury and many residents' pocketbooks.

Since World War II, Florida has become a military bastion. Its 11 major military installations and 19 smaller ones bring $3.1 billion into the state in payroll and defense contracts each year.

Only California, Texas and Virginia receive a larger annual military payroll than Florida's $2 billion. And Florida is the third most popular place of residence for those retiring from the armed forces.

Rep. Robert L. F. Sikes, a Democrat with 38 years in Washington, is given most of the credit for bringing home the bacon through several decades.

All but one or two of Florida's military installations date from his election to the House in 1940. Sikes is a retired Army Reserve major general.

In comparison to the $3.1 billion federal military budget, tourism produced an estimated $11 billion in 1977, taking into account the so-called "multiplier effect" by which dollars entering an economy generate additional expenditures.

Retail sales of Florida agriculture products totaled $10 billion in 1977, and building permits amounted to $5.2 billion.

The armed forces provide jobs for some 115,000, including active duty and civilian personnel on military bases. That's more than the number employed in the hotel and motel industry. And military retirees total 105,000. Their pay in fiscal 1977 amounted to more than that of active duty personnel.

U.S. Rep Lou Frey, whose central Florida district is home for many retired vets, estimates that more than 15 percent of the state's total income is in federal transfer payments, including Social Security and veterans' pensions.

Many retirees hold jobs in state or local government or industry. Their number steadily grows as military people take their last active duty assignment in Florida so they can retire here.

Florida ranks seventh in military acreage, behind California's 4.1 million acres, Arizona's 3.8 million, Nevada's 3.3 million, New Mexico's 2.9 million, Alaska's 2.5 million and Utah's 1.9 million.

Sikes, Frey and Jacksonville's Charles Bennett, another congressman influential in the military, foresee no major difficulties for Florida as a result of the Carter administration's defense cutbacks.

Only one base, Key West Naval Air Station, is on the current Defense Department list of possible closings for economic reasons. That has people in the colorful writers' and artists' community worried. By some estimates the Navy represents one-fourth of the town's economy.

Although the 72-year-old Sikes is retiring after 19 terms and Frey resigned to make an unsuccessful bid for the Republican nomination for governor, they believe Florida has too much going for it to suffer greatly in the near future.

72-Year-Old Keeps Jogging, Swimming

By PETER CAWLEY
Associated Press Writer

NORWALK, Conn. (AP) — At 72, Henry Francis has two ailments he feels he brought on himself. He developed strained ligaments and heel spurs while jogging three miles a day.

Though he prefers running, and last May ran the roughly six-mile Heart Association marathon in less than one hour, Francis has in the past few years added swimming to his regimen because he feels it is safe.

"If I don't jog four or five times a week or swim four or five times a week, something's missing in my life," he said.

Francis was "discovered" by the state Health Department at the Heart Association race and he became a symbol for "Lifestyle Awareness Month."

Reference to healthy people like Francis is part of a fitness campaign by the Health Department, the American Cancer Society, the American Heart Association, Connecticut Blue Cross & Blue Shield, and the Connecticut Lung Association.

"I'm not a fanatic or anything along that line," Francis said. "If people ask me what I do to keep fit, I'll tell them, but I'm not an evangelist."

He has never considered himself a competitor or athlete. He says health is "not a way of life," and takes at most an hour out of a day filled with reading, volunteer driving for the Red Cross, jobs around the house and church work.

Outdoor activities including backpacking and whitewater canoeing have always attracted him, and he still goes to Switzerland every few years to ski, noting that it's even cheaper for senior citizens.

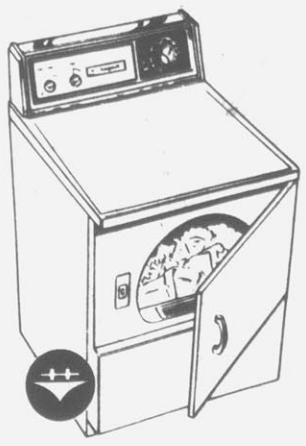

He said fitness had become an active concern for him as an executive with Blue Cross & Blue Shield, when his New York City office was crowded with booklets on health.

"I had these manuals and medical dictionaries and various books on the subject," he said, referring to a process of self-education.

Francis started running when he came out of the Air Force weighing 30 pounds more than the 150 pounds he now carries on a 5-foot, 11-inch frame.

Jeanne's Still Keepin' 'Em Laughin'

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — "If in 1955, before you were born," Jeanne Swanner Robertson told Future Homemakers of America from throughout eastern North Carolina gathered here Monday afternoon, "I'd thought to write a letter to Dear Abby, it might have gone something like this: 'I am a 13-year-old girl in the seventh grade. I weigh 160 pounds and wear a size 11B shoe. Barefooted and with my hair mashed down, I am six feet, two inches tall. Abby, do you think I could ever be in the Miss America contest?'

"And Abby probably would have answered," the former Miss North Carolina said, ' "Dear High Pockets, Forget it!' "

"But I did get to the Miss America contest," she said, "And I hold the distinction of being the tallest girl ever to compete. I also am the tallest girl ever to lose. I came in 49th in the talent competition — I played my ukulele and sang original songs. The only girl who placed lower did a comb and tissue paper rendition. I also was named "Miss Congeniality," which means absolutely nothing."

Jeanne Swanner Robertson, 35, is the wife of Jerry Robertson, a bottled gas dealer in Graham, her hometown, and mother of Beaver, a tall 12-year-old. She's recently launched full-time into a career which utilizes her ukulele and her southern drawl and her experience as a six foot-two Miss America contender — humorous public speaking for conventions and other public gatherings.

Asked if being Miss North Carolina was a positive experience for her, she answered, "Yes, it was. North Carolina is one of only four states in the nation — or was in the early sixties — that requires state beauty pageant winners to drop out of school for a year and make public appearances and visits. I was between my sophomore and junior years at Auburn University in Alabama. I'll always value that year of working for the North Carolina Jaycees, traveling all over this state meeting people, much more than anything I gained in school. I learned there are a lot of good people doing a lot of different things and that all of them are worthwhile. It was great!"

Jeanne said she graduated from Auburn "without honors" in 1967 and spent nine years, some in Alabama, some in North Carolina, teaching health and physical education. During this time she was divorced and returned to North Carolina where she "remet" her former fiance, Robertson, who'd never married, but had gotten his Ph. D. from Duke and pursued a career in public education. "We were married within a year after we started seeing each other again," she said. "I didn't dare let him get away a second time. A good six-foot-six man is hard to find."

Jeanne fills speaking engagements throughout the United States and Canada, though most, she said, are in the eastern half of the U. S. because "my fee plus expenses" is usually prohibitive for those further away. Her husband and son often accompany her.

For those engagements she fills alone, she usually flies and spends only a few hours before and after her 30- or 45-minute talks. "My first priority is my family," she said, "so I don't allow a lot of extra time for sightseeing or socializing unless Jerry and Beaver are along. I even sent my agent in Atlanta a Duke basketball schedule, so I'll have no engagements that will interfere with our family hobby, which is following Duke basketball. Jerry played for Duke, so he loves the team, and it's the biggest thing in Beaver's life right now."

She allots herself 10 out-of-town speaking engagements a month, so the rest of her time is free for being wife and mother, she said.

"My husband's a wise man and my best critic," she said. "He challenges me to put at least one new idea or joke into every speech I make. This keeps me fresh, though very often something new bombs. I never use anything except material he or I have written ourselves. This eliminates the possibility of hearing your joke used by the next speaker on the program.

"I tape most of my speeches, so I can analyze later, usually with Jerry's help, why one thing went over and another didn't. Usually it's something dumb, like leaving out a key line.

"The Burlington area senior citizens groups are very kind about letting me try out new material on them, too. They'll tell me very kindly, but honestly, when some speech or part of a speech just won't go over."

Asked if she doesn't spoof beauty pageants a lot, she said, "I spoof anything and everything that people take too seriously. I think beauty pageants are wonderful for most girls involved, but once in a while a girl is ruined by winning or even being asked to enter. That same girl would have been ruined by being homecoming queen or making honor roll, though. She's just taking herself too seriously."

"I like what I'm doing," she said, "because hopefully as people laugh with me at myself, they see their lives will be better if they laugh at themselves, too. I hope among all the Southernese and the off-key singing and the silly stories, I convey that message."

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I love a houseful of plants as well as the next person, but frankly I am sick and tired of people telling me how easy it is to maintain an indoor jungle.

Oh sure, there are a few plants that thrive on neglect and take root on my kitchen tile, but generally plants take a lot of care. I must have 15 or 20 plant books that divide species into "Easy to Grow" and "Takes a Little Extra Care."

Today, I'd like to list in this column "Plants that Will Never Grow." (Please clip and save.)

The Nephrolepis (Boston Fern) grows only in the pages of Better Homes and Gardens and Sunset magazines. To my knowledge, it has never prospered without a camera lens trained on it.

There is no way you can water them in hanging baskets without killing your carpet and tile. It was just an amusing idea.

The species is so demanding that many women are looking for options. A friend of mine said she would not have a Boston Fern this year, but would have a baby. She explained, "I'm getting too old for ferns."

The Euphorbia pulcherrima (Christmas poinsettia) would take another miracle out of the East to keep it alive after Christmas Day.

Once you follow explicit instructions to set it in a cool, dark room until spring in a dormant stage, it slips off into a sleep of death and you're stuck with a stupid pot of dirt and a dead twig in the closet for six months. (Poinsettias have been known to die on a church altar attended by four priests and three bishops.)

Euphorbia grandicornis (cowhorn cactus) are born dead. I have never known of a person who had the courage to pull the support systems on a cactus and say, "Throw it out! It's gone!"

Saintpaulia (African violets). I had one that lived for three weeks once only because it had the perfect blend of light and humidity. If I had just been able to keep the oven door ajar, flick the light on the toaster 20 minutes out of every hour, keep the vaporizer going and the earth from revolving on its axis, I felt I could have sustained life.

I do not want all of you gardeners who have had success with these flowers to write. It is depressing and I wouldn't believe you anyway.

Face it. When my Maranta leuconceur kerchoveana (Prayer Plant) thumbed its nose at me . . . I knew it was all over.

MISS DENISE LOUISE BROADBELT. . .is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Edwin Broadbelt of Florence, S. C., who announce her engagement to Martin Knute Johnson, son of Mr. Donald K. Johnson of Fairfax, Va. The wedding will take place Dec. 16.

Announce Plans For Second Flower Show

At the October meeting of the Lynndale Garden Club, it was announced the club will stage its second annual flower show. The show will be held April 5 and 6 at the Greenville Art Center.

This year's show will be a Standard Flower Show with a horticulture division. Members of the Planning Committee are Mrs. Ramona Hutton and Mrs. Greenville Banks, co-chairmen, Mrs. Tommie Little, staging, Mrs. Jon Tingelstad, artistic, and Mrs Charles Broome, public relations.

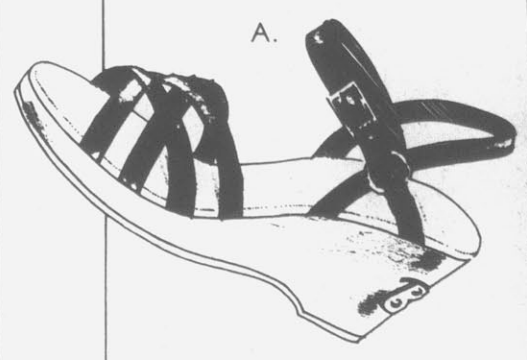

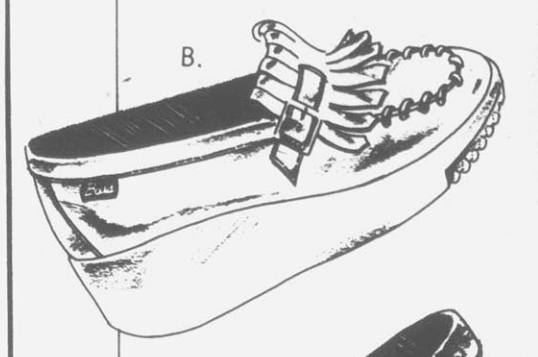

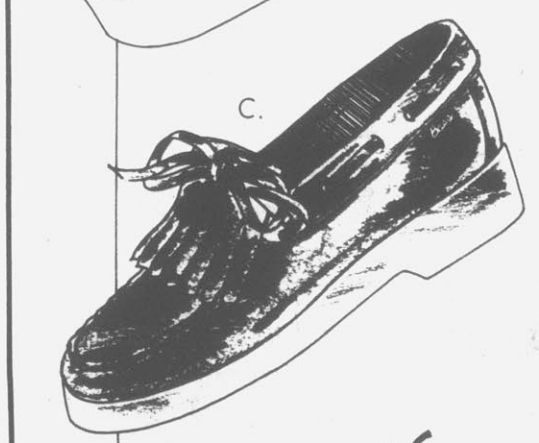

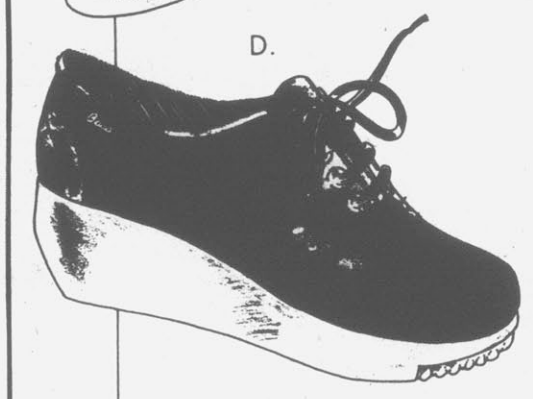

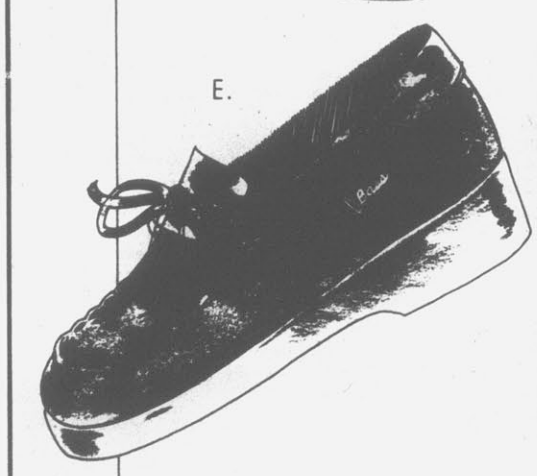

The club will sponsor a children's Halloween supper Tuesday from 5-6 p.m. in front of Mr. and Mrs. James Lane's home, 209 Chowan Rd. The supper is open to all children living in Lynndale who have made prior reservations.

A highlight of the recent State Fair was the Beef Cookout contest sponsored by the North Carolina Cowbelles with the Department of Agriculture cooperating.

Eleven finalists set up their cooking equipment, lighted fires and prepared a favorite beef recipe which had been previously entered in the contest.

Paula Frye, Raleigh, came in first with "Turboned Spice Beef," Matthew Casey, Clayton, won second with "Swift Creek Burgers" and Jerry Cox, Belhaven, third with "Meal on a Plank."

For a copy of the recipes, send a long self-addressed, stamped envelope to Beef Contest Recipes, Box 25756, Raleigh, 27611.

Carolina Concepts, Inc., Raleigh, has announced plans to produce a four-day Christmas show Nov. 16-19 at the Raleigh Civic Center.

The show "A Carolina Christmas" will feature over 100 commercial and crafts exhibitors from throughout the southeastern U. S. Throughout the four days will be choirs from area schools, soloists, fashion shows, cooking demonstrations and strolling costumed characters right out of the pages of Charles Dickens. On Sunday, a special performance by the N. C. Symphony Brass Quintet will be given.

A highlight of the show will be the Holiday Marketplace where Moravian sugar cakes and cookies, exotic carvings, scrimshaw jewelry, furniture and handmade violins will be available. Hours will be 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Thursday through Saturday and 12 noon to 6 p.m. Sunday.

Mother Has A $4,000 Question

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: We are the parents of six children, 6 through 18. We have told all our children that if they are interested in furthering their education after school, we will give them each $1,000 a year toward their education.

Our eldest son is a freshman in college. He works part-time and summers to help pay for his education, and he also takes advantage of our $1,000. (I have to brag a bit—he made a grade point of 4.0 his first semester.)

Our problem is our second child, a daughter. She will graduate from high school next June. Despite years of counseling, lots of love and our best efforts, she is a rebel. She's been in all kinds of trouble from shoplifting to drugs and alcohol. She says as soon as she turns 18, she's splitting and wants no part of college.

My husband thinks that when she leaves we should give her the $4,000 we would have given her for a college education so that in years to come she can't say, "You never gave me the same chance you gave the others."

I strongly disagree. We have already spent a lot money on her that we didn't spend on the others. Besides, I think giving her money would do her more harm than good.

We would appreciate the opinion of an outsider.

MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I agree with you. To give your rebellious daughter money before she's able to handle it might do her more harm than good. Your children are being offered $1,000 a year toward a college education—not to spend as they wish.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 12-year-old boy with an 8-year-old brother, named David, who is a rat-fink.

David wore my Boy Scout hat and took my brand new bugle outside and blew it last Saturday while I was at the dentist's.

When I found out about it I gave him a little shove and he fell against the fence and got a little tiny cut on his head, and maybe two drops of blood came out.

He ran in the house screaming, and my mother grounded me for a whole week.

She didn't say one word to David about wearing my hat and blowing my bugle. Was this fair? How can I make my mother realize that every time something happens it is not always my fault because I am older and should know better? (HER words.) Thank you.

SHELDON

DEAR SHELDON: Tell your mother what you have told me (or show her this item) and ask for her comment. Meanwhile, as a Boy Scout you are pledged to be "kind, truthful and obedient." If you are, you'll win in the end, and the "fink" may follow your example and become a Boy Scout, too.

DEAR ABBY: While saying a good-night prayer with my 4-year-old grandchild, when we came to the part, "If I should die before I wake," she stopped abruptly, and with a very frightened expression on her little face, she asked, "Nana, do you think I WILL die before I wake?"

I tried to comfort her by saying I was sure she wouldn't. Then I set about to revise that prayer to give it a more positive and less frightening approach.

I enclose it for publication on the chance that some of your readers might want to use it.

"Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray You, Lord, my soul to keep.
Please keep me safe 'til I wake
To love and serve You, for Your sake."

BETTY E., BELLEVUE, WASH.

Pat's Pointers Begins Monday

If you find yourself stitched into the middle of a sock heel or lost in a needlepoint maze, "Pat's Pointers" may be just what you need. The weekly column will appear in "The Daily Reflector" woman's page beginning Monday.

It's Written by Pat Trexler of Myrtle Beach, S. C., who got hooked on needlecraft while raising and clothing her four children. She learned the basics by knitting scarves for World War II soldiers during her school days, later mastering the fine points on her own.

Not only does she offer a variety of tips on knitting and crocheting in her column, she's also helped pave the way for the needlepoint boom which she describes as "the fastest growing of the needle arts."

Since she and her husband own a travel agency, she travels frequently and explores needlecraft traditions and trends in other countries. She has written numerous pamphlets and a book "Knit Knacks."

Ms. Trexler was winner on the American Neeldepoint Guild's Mary Martin award in 1975 and was elected president of the guild in 1976 and is presently serving on its board of directors.

GARDEN CLINIC

N.C. State Univ. Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. I've been told not to eat collards until after frost. Is this true? (B.D., Greensboro)

A. Definitely not! Collards are one of our most nutritious vegetables. Enjoy them anytime. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Q. I am growing a few sweet potatoes in my garden for the first time this year. What is the best way to harvest, cure and store them? (H.S., Manchester)

A. Sweet potatoes do not mature in the true sense of the word; therefore, harvest them when they reach the size you like best. They are very delicate. Handle them carefully to avoid skinning and bruising. Cure them immediately after harvest by keeping them at 85 degrees and about 90 percent humidity for four to seven days. After curing, store them at 55 degrees and never below 50 degrees. (George Wilson, extension horticulturist)

Q. Advise me of the do's and don'ts for Johnsongrass control. (W.M., Newton)

A. Johnsongrass requires a double-barrel attack. You've got to get rid of the rhizomes, the large, fleshy, root-like stems which sprout each spring. You've also got to get rid of the new plants which come from seed each spring. Your best bet for fighting Johnsongrass at this time of year is tillage. Disc or plow the infested land to cut the rhizomes into small pieces. Repeat this practice every six weeks during the winter if possible. By plowing the rhizomes to the soil surface, hopefully they will either dry out or freeze. Next spring go to work on the new Johnsongrass that will grow from seed. Along with tillage, you can use the herbicide Treflan in areas to be planted in peas, beans, okra, peppers, tomatoes and several other crops. Sutan can be used where corn will be grown. Read the label on these herbicides carefully and use only on the crops listed. If you still have Johnsongrass on into the summer, you've got one weapon left — the herbicide Roundup. Roundup works on the rhizomes. It can be applied anytime after the plant has headed out and still has vigorous green blades. As with other chemicals, follow label directions on roundup to the letter. (W.M. Lewis, extension agronomist)

Help make college affordable to the youngest in a family of six.

Vote for Pitt Community College and lower the cost of higher education.

Everyone deserves a chance to continue their education. But, with the rising costs of tuition, fees and general living expenses, money becomes an important factor. And, when one family has several people to send through college, the cost can prevent many students with potential from continuing their educations. That's why you should support Pitt Community College on election day. Attending a college transfer program at Pitt will cost the student approximately $137 per year in tuition and required fees. Compare that to the average cost of $540 for tuition and required fees per year at a public senior institution. Four students can attend Pitt Community College for less than the cost of one student at a senior institution.

The State and the student will both save.

Funding for technical and vocational programs, and college parallel programs are completely separate; thus, our technical programs will not be affected. College parallel programs at community colleges cost the state much less per student than those at senior institutions. For example, the average state cost per student at community colleges last year was $1,062. At four-year schools, the average cost was $2,444. So, students will save money at Pitt Community College. And the state will save too.

Supporting Pitt Community College is not merely a financial decision. It's important to offer total educational opportunities for our citizens. Please give Pitt Community College your vote on election day.

Log Cabin Dream Is Slow In Arriving

By BOB WIELAND
Associated Press Writer

TRAWICK, Texas (AP) — Their log cabin is growing slowly; they do the dishes once a week and cook over an open fire.

They are modern-day pioneers — a young couple who moved to the woods but work in town; sought self-sufficiency but learned it takes a lot of help from others to live with nature.

It's the American dream with a rustic flavor, and Jim and Anna Lemon are headed into their third harsh east Texas winter on their 8½ acres in this tiny community about 150 miles southeast of Dallas.

They share their temporary canvas teepee with two German shepherds and a cat, tend two gardens and raise chickens, pigs and rabbits.

The Lemons paid $500 an acre — with a six-year note — for their land two years ago, borrowing another $600 to get started on the cabin.

They wanted to get away from civilization — "They made my garden into a parking lot, and zoned my front yard for townhouses," recalls Jim — but found they needed other people.

"I came out here to increase my self-sufficiency," Jim said, "but find myself depending more on other people. We have friends come out to help us build the cabin, and a local man helps me slaughter the pigs. He pays half the feed and gets one of the pigs."

And they still leave their land to make a living, as social workers for a girls' home a 30minute commute away in Laneville. It's a drive that offers snow and ice in winter as the temperature hovers around freezing, and hot red dust in summer.

Jim, 31, who once studied to be a doctor, and Anna, 27, who trained her voice for the opera, grew up in Fort Worth, the children of doctors.

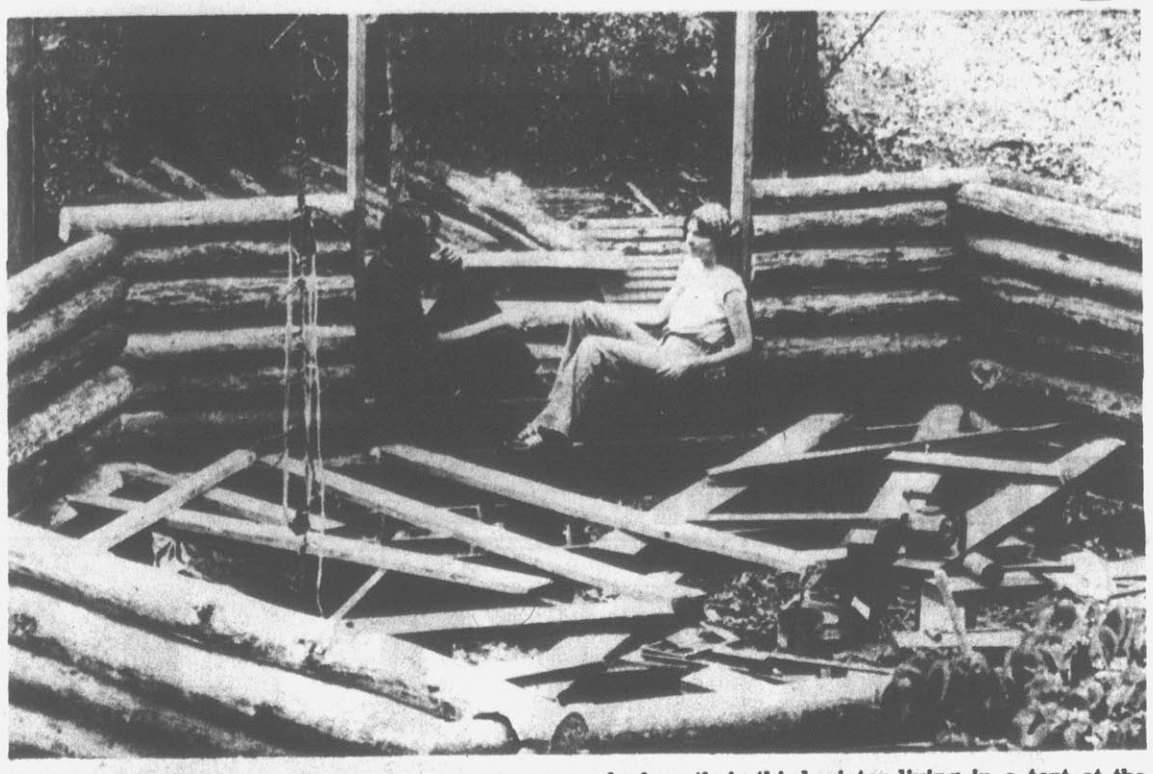

That wasn't the best training for life in the woods, but the Lemons are learning.

Meals, for example, are cooked over an open fire.

"I can even bake pies," Anna said as she barbecued chicken and rabbit on a blackened grill.

Part of their food comes from the animals they raise, and Anna admits that can be a problem. "It's hard to get attached to a chicken, but a bunny is furry, and warm and soft," she said.

"Everything is harder here. We wash the dishes once a week,because it's a two-hour production to heat enough water," Anna said. "Last winter, I asked myself: 'This isn't fun — what am I doing here?' but then it was spring, and it was all right again."

MODERN PIONEERS — Jim and Anna Lemon sit in the door framing of a cabin they are building among the primeval pines of East Texas. The couple face their third winter living in a tent at the building site with a long way to go before the cabin is complete. (AP Laserphoto)

Taking A Dim View Of Those Sure-Cure Ads

By TIM PETTIT
Associated Press Writer

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Advertisements that promise to erase scars or melt off fat sound tempting to the vain. But the Pennsylvania Medical Society says the "sure cures" should be swallowed with a large dose of skepticism.

"The claims, on their face, are misleading," said Dr. Stephen Barrett, a member of the society's Committee on Quackery, which surveyed mail-order health-product advertisements in 500 national magazines.

"Just about every advertisement was questionable or we were doubtful whether they were accurate," said Barrett, an Allentown psychiatrist who has given his committee's findings to the U.S. Postal Service.

Barrett said no miracle offer could perform such feats as erasing scars and wrinkles, safely cause sustained weightloss of a pound a day, prevent or cure hair loss or selectively reduce one part of the body.

The surveyors say they based their findings on earlier laboratory tests and their professional medical experience. Asked if each advertised product were tested, Barrett said:

"That would've been impossible and it's not necessary. For example, here's one that says one high-potency tablet will make your body feel years younger. It would take about 30 years and $100,000 to do a controlled study of that, but the fact is there is no combination of nutrients to make you feel years younger.

"Another ad says you can lose 10 pounds in 10 days. To do that, you'd have to burn 3,500 calories a day more than you eat, and most people don't eat that many calories. So even total starvation would not result in the loss of a pound of fat a day," he added.

"Some of the claims are so far-fetched about the degree of loss, it's beyond the belief of a professionally-trained person ..."he said.

The Postal Service says it acts against medical mail fraud, but faces one serious problem.

"We don't receive many consumer complaints, due to the fct that these are vanity-type products and people aren't about to complain about things of that type," said George Head, manager of the fraud branch of the Postal Service.

"So we monitor publications, make test purchases and test the products ourselves," Head said. Laboratories and universities do much of the tesing, he said.

Old Plaint Of Lawyer Competence Raised Anew

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — "The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers." — Shakespeare in Henry VI, written in 1501.

"We are over-lawyered and under-represented." — Jimmy Carter, May 4, 1978.

Both sentiments, history and national opinion polls tell us, played to appreciative audiences. For centuries, it seems, people have loved to hate lawyers.

Nevertheless, law in the United States is a growth industry. Swollen law schools produce 30,000 new degree-holders each year. And while competition for legal work is fierce, the number of lawyers has climbed to an estimated 470,000.

Criticism has kept pace, appearing to have reached a new high this year.

Lawyers not only are doing too little to improve the nation's quality of justice but often are guilty of thwarting justice, he asserted in a Los Angeles speech.

"I am worried about a legal system in which expensive talent on both sides produces interminable delay," Carter said. "Justice should not be forced to obey the timetables of those who seek to avoid it."

His comments were applauded by some editorial writers and others and panned by the legal establishment. The "controversy" soon faded.

While Carter seemed to be saying that lawyers should put their competence to better use, Burger questions the very existence of that competence.

Testifying before a legal services commission in London last year, Burger estimated that one-half of all U.S. trial lawyers are unqualified to represent their clients.

Although only one in 10 lawyers ever sees courtroom duty, Burger's comments rankled a group of lawyers from Illinois enough to spark a proposal that the American Bar Association rebuke him.

A definitive answer may be impossible.

Confronting his critics at the ABA convention last February, some of whom offered their own percentage guesses of incompetents among trial lawyers, Burger said more should be done to correct incompetence no matter what its extent. His concern has since expanded to cover all lawyers, not just those who do trial work.

Last May, Burger called for an experimental revamping of law school curricula to provide on-the-job training.

Three months later, he noted with evident satisfaction a pair of surveys.

One survey was conducted for the ABA Journal by a public opinion research firm. It showed that 41 percent of all lawyers polled agreed with Burger's estimate of the scope of incompetence.

Fifty-one percent disagreed, but a majority — 61 percent — favored some kind of specialty certification for those lawyers who go to court to represent a client.

The second survey, conducted by the Law School Admission Council of Princeton, N.J., polled 1,600 lawyers who had graduated from six law schools over a 15-year span.

Most said their legal training had not been adequate in one or more areas.

The ABA quickly appointed a task force to study "Lawyer Competency — the Role of the Law Schools."

Burger's August speech, however, didn't mention a recently released American Bar Foundation survey of 1,422 trial judges in which 87 percent of all lawyers appearing before them were rated as competent.

Thirty-two percent of the state and federal judges responding said the quality of trial advocacy had shown noticeable improvement during their years on the bench; only 19 percent said there had been a noticeable deterioration.

"Inadequate preparation was identified as the most prevalent form of incompetence," says Dorothy Linder Maddi, an ABF researcher in Chicago who headed the survey project.

Ms. Maddi says she considers the use of disciplinary measures superior to courtroom certification as a weapon against incompetence, because they would focus on the incompetent minority.

Stanford University law professor Anthony Amsterdam disagrees with both Burger and Ms. Maddi.

"I don't think it's useful to talk about percentages when discussing lawyer competency," he said. "It depends on one's standards for competency."

Although agreeing with Burger's demand for more emphasis on clinical training and continuing education for lawyers, Amsterdam said, "There already is a move in the direction of greater courtroom and professional preparedness."

At the University of Florida's law school, students have one term of intense concentration on trial advocacy by serving as interns in the offices of prosecutors and public defenders in three cities.

The number of similar programs among the nation's 167 ABA-accredited law schools appears to be growing.

Gene Cavin of Austin, Texas, president of the National Association of Continuing Legal Education Administrators, says that the lawyer competence issue is merely "a diversion that keeps us from focusing on the real problem — the system."

To ask a lawyer to provide quality service while battling an unworkable legal system is like asking a plumber to work without tools, he says.

Writes Comic Side To Taxes

COWAN, Tenn. (AP) — Inflation, high taxes and big government are the villains in a new play, "The Gimmies," which recently made its debut on the stage of the Appletree Dinner Theater.

Appletree managing director Tupper Saussy, who wrote "The Gimmies," sees the play as a "new kind of American Declaration of Independence."

"The play," he said in a telephone interview, "takes place in a miniature America, where love, ambition, achievement and life itself are thwarted at every turn by officials selling licenses, officers collecting fines, judges issuing prison sentences and taxmen auditing and harassing amidst voices muttering 'gimmie, gimmie, gimmie.'"

The America in Saussy's play is a place "where citizens dutifully bend to government's outlandish demands because federal propaganda has made them ignorant of their rights," he said.

The Appletree is in a vintage 1896 brick church given up for a new building by its Presbyterian congregation in 1964. Saussy bought it in November 1977, and turned it into a dinner theater seating 76 persons who, for $10, can enjoy a play and a meal prepared by a French chef.

Saussy gave up an advertising job in Nashville in 1968 to get into music and theater. He founded a rock group, the Neon Philharmonic, in Nashville in 1969, and is a song writer for Acuff Rose of Nashville.

"Gimmies" is Saussy's fourth play. His first, called "War Minister," is occasionally produced by theater groups around the country. The others are "Friend of the Family," a drama, and "Hot Springs," a bedroom farce which debuted at Appletree.

Appletree's audiences come mostly from such cities as Chattanooga, Nashville and Huntsville, Ala. He said that of Cowan's population of 1,800 persons about 36 actively supported the theater. It offers a new show about every five weeks, running each one about 20 nights, Wednesday through Sunday.

Though he sees "Gimmies" as a serious protest — perhaps the first on the American stage — against inflation, the play is a comedy.

"First, I want audiences to laugh and be entertained by 'The Gimmies'," Saussy said.

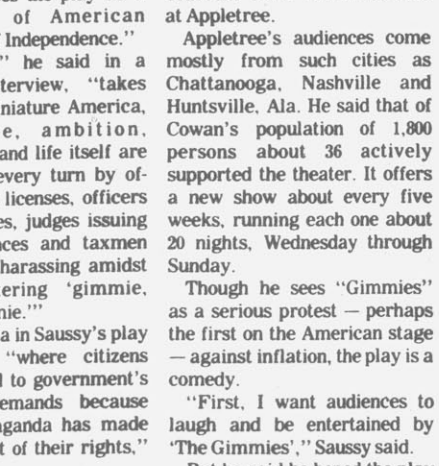

But he said he hoped the play would give his audiences "an arsenal of legal rights with which to defend themselves against unconstitutional government."

"Not only the tax system, but taxes themselves are unconstitutional," Saussy said.

Hurricane Experienced By A Young Man

Editor's Note

Recently Mrs. Mavis Wright brought in to the Reflector Office an article she found in a box purchased at an antique auction.

The manuscript was dated Aug. 28, 1918 and told of a 16-year-old boy's experience during a vacation week interrupted by a harrowing storm at Nags Head. The name on the manuscript was Darius White Jr.

The name was recognized by a Reflector reporter as that of a deceased Farmville resident. Darius White, Jr. and his wife operated the Western Auto Store in Farmville until their deaths in 1973.

A check with Pitt County Register of Deeds Elvira Allred turned up White's death certificate which confirmed that he was 16 at the time of the storm and, in fact, that the date on the manuscript was his 17th birthday. From the certificate we obtained the name of a sister, Mrs. S. G. Etheridge of Elizabeth City .

A telephone call to Mrs. Etheridge confirmed that we had the right Darius White. Mrs. Ethridge and Miss Nettie White, both Darius's sisters, now live together in Elizabeth City. They said their brother spoke of that exciting trip to Nags Head many times, but they never knew he wrote about it nor that he was such a capable writer. They said they'd be pleased for their late brother's article to be published.

. . . "There were also plenty of pretty girls down there so I spent a very happy week . . . We were about to jump over when we spied about a dozen large black snakes . . . I saw people up on the sand hills, praying and crying, while blood was being cut out of their skin by the sharp sand..."

My Vacation At Nags Head, North Carolina
By Darius White, Jr.

It was the first of August when my vacation came, and only a week. I could not decide where to go at first as I wanted to go most everywhere. But the day before I was to start I finally decided to spend my week at Nags Head, North Carolina, the city by the sea. I planned and got all my belongings together and was ready to start the next morning, bright and early.

I got up about six thirty Sunday morning, and was one of the first to get aboard the steamer 'Vansciver.' I got with one of my old friends, who was going down for the week, and we had a very pleasant trip down, as the weather was fine.

We made good time and landed about twelve o'clock. We first went over to LeRoy's Cottage, where we engaged a room for both. That was the best to be done during a busy season. There were forty six at LeRoy's Cottage and I was one of them.

After dinner we boys went for a walk over the sand hills to the ocean, which is about a mile. The bathing was going on strong and everybody was having a big time. We did not go in as it already was getting late, and were also very tired by the long boat trip of about forty miles from Elizabeth City, North Carolina. About four thirty we started for home across the hills and when we got there we were ready for a nice large supper which we got.

That night was a very dark one, and we had nothing to do or nowhere to go, so we both piled in on the hay. We got some badly needed rest, and were feeling fine the next morning.

I woke up early Monday morning thinking I had to go down and open up my store, but soon found myself at Nags Head, with nothing to do, so off to dreamland I went. I woke up again about eight fifteen and rushed myself to get dressed and down stairs by eight o'clock, which was impossible. I got my breakfast anyway as I was not the only one who over slept themself. About ten thirty I went fishing with a friend down at the 'Rocks,' and caught thirty four large ones. I hauled in the largest one, about twenty inches long. I went bare footed as every one does down there, and came back as red as fire from sun burnt. We got plenty of fish and oysters to eat, so I did not worry about eating.

There were also plenty of pretty girls down there so I spent a very happy week, so far. My friend left Wednesday so I had a whole bed to myself.

Thursday I went to the Life Saving Station which is about three miles down the coast. I walked down over the hills and came back down the coast. It was a good walk and when I got back I rolled in and had a good night's rest.

Saturday came and was a very windy day. The wind blew all the day and the steamer could hardly land that evening, as the waves were rolling partly over the pier. A crowd came down and so we had plenty of company. We could hardly walk down the pier as the wind was so strong. There was a large crowd who intended to return Sunday afternoon.

When I went to bed that night the tide was rising fast and the wind was blowing a gale. I was awakened about one o'clock the next morning by the slamming of my door, so I got up and nailed it closed. It was raining too, so with all the blowing and the noise, I could not sleep at all.

The next morning I got up at seven thirty and went down stairs and the first thing I heard was the walk to our cottage had already been washed away, and all the small gas boats that were anchored and tied along the main wharf the night before, had also been washed adrift.

By this time the waves were breaking over the porch floor, and the whole house was rolling from side to side. I went and got my breakfast to be sure that I got it, as I thought we were going to have some trouble.

When I finished breakfast I went and put on my bathing suit, because even then I would have to swim to get to land, as the cottage was built over the water.

By eight thirty the waves were breaking over the top of the porch, mountain high. The men had managed to save one row-boat and they were busy carrying the women and children to the shore.

In twenty more minutes the porch on one side had fallen in and was carried to shore by the giant waves and the wind. Our landlady told us all to put our clothes in our trunks and suitcases, and put them on the beds. She also asked two other boys and myself to go and lock and bolt all the doors and windows. We did and were about to jump over when we spied about a dozen large black snakes. They had come across the sound out of the marsh. I had found while locking the doors, a life preserver which I kept handy, as I was no excellent swimmer. The other boys jumped before I did for they were good swimmers, but I had to go sooner or later. Just before I went over I saw our kitchen and chicken house fall over, and about thirty pretty chickens go under. Each wave brought piling and timber, seven or eight feet high . So I put on the life preserver, the only thing that save my life, and jumped.

No one could swim or make any headway in this storm. You could only drift and let the waves finally wash you to shore. The water was covered with small houses, and sides of houses were floating everywhere.

While I was drifting about with a dozen or more dead chickens around me, a post struck me on the back of the head, sending me under and cutting a small gash.

The next thing I knew, a man had me by the arm and was pulling me to shallow water so I could reach the bottom. After all of that I thought I was safe once more, but I stepped into some quick-sand and went up to my knees. With the aid of a stick and pole I managed to get out. The waves were still raving and rising, and coming in like thunder bolts.

While I was going down the edge of the water to a cottage where the rest of our folks were, I saw people up on the sand hills, praying and crying, while blood was being cut out of their skin by the sharp sand. The wind was too much for me as I was in a bathing suit, so I ran along the water's edge, at the foot of the hills.

It was now about twelve o'clock and we had a little dinner, which was very much appreciated by all. Later in the day the Life Saving Crew of the Nags Head Life Saving Station came to our rescue. They could do no more good than to carry back with them a wagon load of old women and children. The wires between there and Virginia Beach, Virgina, were down so we could send no messages for help.

About four thirty in the afternoon the wind and rain ceased for the first time since the day before. The tide had come up to the foot of the largest sand hills, and over the tops of the smaller ones, meeting the waters of the ocean. That was the highest it had ever been seen there.

About five o'clock we came out of the house and went to look over the wreckage and ruins. Along the shore the next day after the tide had gone back out, we found drowned chickens and cats by the basket full. Beds, trunks, furniture and clothes were found and claimed. The porches on all the cottages were gone and one of the finest cottages itself was even gone, nothing but the piling left. Some were turned over on the side, and some were moved hundreds of feet.

I got the only row-boat and rowed out to the main building, the only thing that was left of our cottage. I found one whole side of it gone . That afternoon I found one of my shoes about a quarter of a mile down the shore. I lost several things, but was satisfied to get out as good as I did. Some of the people were spending the summer down there, and lost all there jewelry and clothes, and some even had to come up on the boat in their bathing suits. It was a pitiful sight. The man who saved me also received a cut on his leg and several other bruises. Another man, a doctor, got hurt a little as he was boarding the row-boat in a high gale. But lucky, none was severely injured.

I came up Tuesday and would have come on the first boat Monday, but I hated to leave the place in such bad condition, so I stayed over and helped what I could. I found a coat with a gold watch in the pocket, and many other things of value.

The old dancing hall was covered with clothes as that was the place where everything that was found was carried, and anyone who had lost anything could go there and pick it out, if it was there.

I came up in my bathing suit as what clothes I had saved were all wet and I could not wear them. The boat was so crowded that the captain was afraid when he landed, as everyone rushed to one side, nearly turning the boat over.

I said when I stepped on Elizabeth City land once more, I would never go back to that place again, but I think I will go again next summer, for I would not have missed a storm like that for anything, as long as I got through o'kay.

ROOM TO LIVE PRIME OBJECTIVE OF DESIGN

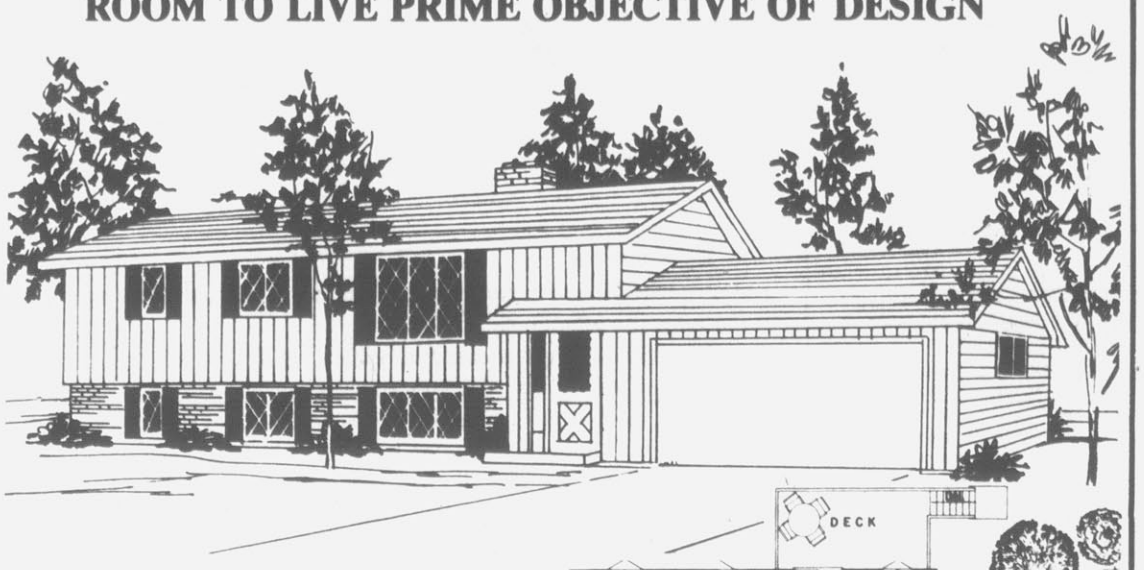

By Jerry Bishop

Four bedrooms plus a den and a 40 foot recreation room supply much of the "living" room in this appealing, split foyer design. Enriched on the exterior by variegated brick and diamond light windows, the "Chandler" takes advantage of its size to exude a warmth and welcome.

Upstairs from the tiled foyer, you enter the living room, with its wood-burning fireplace and ample closet space. Envisioned as the scene of quiet relaxation, the living room adjoins a formal dining room with sliding glass doors to the elevated wooden deck. The nearness of the deck to the kitchen suggests casual open air dining, as well as sunbathing in privacy.

The upper level also houses three of the bedrooms and two full baths, as well as two hall closets.

Large enough to enjoy a pool table and accommodate a large group of people, the recreation room of the "Chandler" occupies over half of the lower level. It is bordered by a laundry-utility room with an outside entrance, a bedroom and a den, all separated by their own hallway. The downstairs den and bedroom, should they not be needed as sleeping space, might be transformed into rooms for children to study, play or watch television. Should you need the sleeping space, however, both rooms are equipped with large closets and are close to a full downstairs bath and linen closet. The 23-foot double garage allows convenient, uncrowded storage of bicycles and toys and features an entrance to the rear yard.

When anyone asks me whether a proposed remodeling job on his house will be a good investment, I tell him to forget the whole thing if that is the primary purpose of the project.

Yes, remodeling can prove to be a good investment. But that should be, at most, only a secondary consideration. A house should be remodeled to gain extra space, to improve the present living quarters or to provide a practical solution to a problem. The improvements may add eye appeal as well as habitable space.

As for investment possibilities, much depends on what is being done. And even that is often unpredictable.

Generally, a remodeled kitchen, for instance, will make a house sell faster. It is difficult to tell, however, how much it adds to the sales price.

The other side of the coin is that, if it takes much less time to sell a house because of its spanking new kitchen, doesn't that have a definite dollar value?

If you have ever sold a house at long last after it has been on the market for many months or even a year, you know what the long wait cost you in one way or another, most especially in a lowered sales price. And think how many times the failure to sell within a reasonable length of time has interfered with the purchase of other houses.

An attic that has been finished also is an asset at sales time, since it provides a couple of extra bedrooms or a den or a recreational room—places that prospective buyers often want. Therefore, if your house has a finished attic, it is likely to sell sooner than one which hasn't, all other things being equal.

The principal reason why a major remodeling project doesn't bring a 100 percent financial return when the house is sold is that it may have taken the home out of the neighborhood price range. Assume the houses in the area sell between $50,000 and $75,000 and that your particular residence has a market price between the low and the high; let's say $64,000. If you spend $30,000 for improvements, you are not likely to get $94,000 for the house, but you will probably be able to get $75,000. Should the houses in the neighborhood appreciate to raise the range from $75,000 to $100,000, you might get $100,000, part of which will be due to the changes you have made and part to inflation.

What all this means is that people don't want to pay more for a house than the top of the neighborhood price range, assuming we are discussing houses in general and not those in areas where there is a shortage caused by burgeoning industry. This is so because a neighborhood to buyers than the houses themselves. A family will accept less house in a so-called "good" neighborhood in preference to an extra good house in a rundown or otherwise undesirable section, even though the prices are equal.

Should you then remodel your house even though you eventually might get back only 30 percent or less of what you spent?

By all means—if the project fills a need. How can a price be placed on the satisfactions of day-to-day living?

Industrial Decor: Home Trend

By ELAINE Q. BARROW
AP Newsfeatures

In an era when technology is assumed to conflict with esthetics, some homemakers are discovering new appeal in furnishings originally intended for industrial and commercial settings.

They are hanging enameled, factory dome lights over the dining table. Others are installing in their living room a book-shelf tier of hook-together metal sections like those of a warehouse, using a draftsman's swinging boom lamp for reading areas, making a "linen closet" of a metal storage cabinet produced for locker rooms.

They have replaced bathroom fixtures with the more workable hospital faucets and carpeted bedrooms with cocoa mat more commonly seen on diving boards. Even beds and benches become "custom" made by the owner's screwing together lengths of pipe.

This swing to nuts-and-bolts furnishings is called High-Tech, a play on the words high style and technology.

There is also an appreciation of functional durability. If an item was engineered for nofrills efficiency in a factory or a restaurant, why not apply it to your own convenience?

Although admittedly out of context, a machine part or other industrial item introduced into an otherwise conventional home setting can be surprisingly compatible. A discarded auto bumper bought from a junk yard was polished and fastened to a living room wall where it serves inoffensively as a shelf for plants. It will neither rust nor tarnish.

A gray enamel steel shop table, illuminated by a draftsman's lamp, serves a New York City resident for both dining and work amid a room decor both simple and elegant.

Rolling tables, often metal ones made for hospitals, are being put to work as stands for television sets and for bedroom cosmetics stands. In one home, a full-length operating table is being wheeled among party guests as a mobile bar cart.

At the opposite extreme, wooden pallet bases used for lashing together cargo on loading docks have found their way into homes as low-slung coffee tables.

High-Tech is explained as a concept that began with architects. The term was used to describe buildings with a technological look. An example is the Centre Georges Pompidou in Paris, a cultural center critics have likened to an oil refinery.

For a residence, High-Tech would be applied to one that might be constructed with open-web joists, corrugated aluminum siding, interior staircases of prefabricated steel members and tubular railings — components more commonly used for factories, warehouses and public edifices.

For interior design, a parallel trend is detailed by a book, "High-Tech, The Industrial Style and Source Book for the Home," by Joan Kron and Suzanne Slesin.

Explaining why functional objects are being viewed with "new appreciation," the authors say many of the industrial products are well designed, readily available and, in some cases, cost less than items earmarked for the general consumer.

Special Fertilizer To Repair Havoc Done In Strip-Mining

By MARCIA STEPANEK

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — Only a few scattered buildings remain at the ghost town of Palzo on the northern edge of the Shawnee National Forest in southern Illinois, once the site of rich coal deposits.

The area "is just another victim of the barrage of strip mining," a state Enviromental Protection Agency spokesman said. "It is land so abused that no one can live there anymore. Nothing can grow."

More than 50,000 acres of Illinois land resemble a war zone, scarred and barren testament to the activity of strip miners in recent decades. Restoration of the land has long been a point of bitter contention among state politicians, coal company chieftans and environmentalists.

Now, Chicago-based Bionomics Research Corp. has developed a soil innoculent to transform the spoils of strip mining back into healthy, pollution-free cropland — at less than the cost of sludge and commercial nitrogen fertilizers.

With assistance from two soil researchers from Southern Illinois University, BRC began experiments this year with a new fertilizer called 628-plus, a liquid substance that contains high concentrations of tiny living organisms and 16 minerals essential to healthy soil.

Unlike sludge and short-lived nitrogen fertilizers, BRC executive Yale Wilson said, 628-plus need be applied only once or twice. Because it contains natural organic substances, the fertilizer triggers a natural soil cycle that renews itself as the land is revitalized, he said.

And unlike nitrogen NPK fertilizers, he said, 628-plus decreases the Ph levels of abused soil back to natural levels.

Tests have shown it increases soil respiration, micro-fungal, bacterial and algal soil activity and the chlorophyll content of plants — and accommodates larger life forms, such as earthworms, that are important to healthy soil.

"This product is cost-competitive, about $97 per acre, but can be applied only once or twice and by air, which is important out West," Wilson said. "This stuff won't seep into the water table or run off into streams. It's a perfectly harmless and natural product; there is no synthetic chemical composition in 628-plus.

"Included in 628-plus are 16 known trace elements that are essential to plant health. Microbes exude certain enzymes that dissolve the mineral and make it available to plant roots.

"Also, certain algae will convert air and nitrogen into ammonia, which helps plants grow. Earthworms and ants won't go into places where the synthetic nutrients go because they can't live there and have nothing to feed on. So by introducing this soil innoculent, it helps to re-establish the natural ecology of things."

Wilson said results of experimentation with soybeans and wheat grass — confirmed at SIU and an independent farm lab in Memphis, Tenn. — have interested numerous coal companies throughout the Midwest, pressed by the Land Reclamation Act of 1977 to restore strip-mined acres to their original contours and vegetation.

"Coal companies are interested because of cost," Wilson said. "Initial reclamation usually costs $1,500 to $4,000 per acre, in which you get no return from the land. Eight percent of that is re-vegetation and fertilization. Synthetic nitrogen tends to put indigenous organisms into dormancy.

"The significance of our product is that it takes abused soil otherwise made sterile and reintroduces micro-organisms that release the bound-up nutrients, reactivate the dormant micro-organisms and returns the soil to a fertile and humic state.

"Environmentalists are happy, coal firms are happy and politicians see this as a means for a more rapid and thorough compliance with state and federal reclamation laws."

Wilson said the firm began experimenting with the substance because Illinois has the largest reported coal reserves in the country. Montana is next.

"The development of the substance is not a magic thing," Wilson said. "It just reconstructs the necessary components needed for healthy soil through natural processes.

The Woodland Hills Mobile Home Estates reports that analysis of a sample taken September 12, 1978 showed a coliform bacteria concentration above the maximum level listed in the United States Environmental Protection Agency's National Interim Primary Drinking Water Regulations. A sample taken September 20, 1978 showed no coliform bacteria concentration.

Although there is no routine laboratory procedure for determining the presence of specific disease producing bacteria in drinking water, coliform bacteria which is normally found in intestinal track of man or other warm blooded animals can be readily detected. Therefore the presence of this non-disease producing bacteria is used to indicate that some contamination has occurred.

The Woodland Hills Mobile Home Estates water system was flushed recently and repeat samples show the water to be free of coliform bacteria.

Quinn Cummings Is Fashion Minded

Most young girls today uniformly dress in jeans and teeshirts, but Quinn Cummings is the exception. She not only likes pretty clothes — she loves them.

Quinn, who stars as Annie in "Family," seen Thursdays on ABC-TV (10 to 11 p.m.), thinks she might make fashion her career, perhaps as a fashion coordinator or designer. She recently entered four sketches in a department store design contest and each day eagerly awaits the mailman for the contest results. Quinn says she's glad high-fashion looks finally are available in little-girl sizes. For the record, she is a perfect size 10-slim.

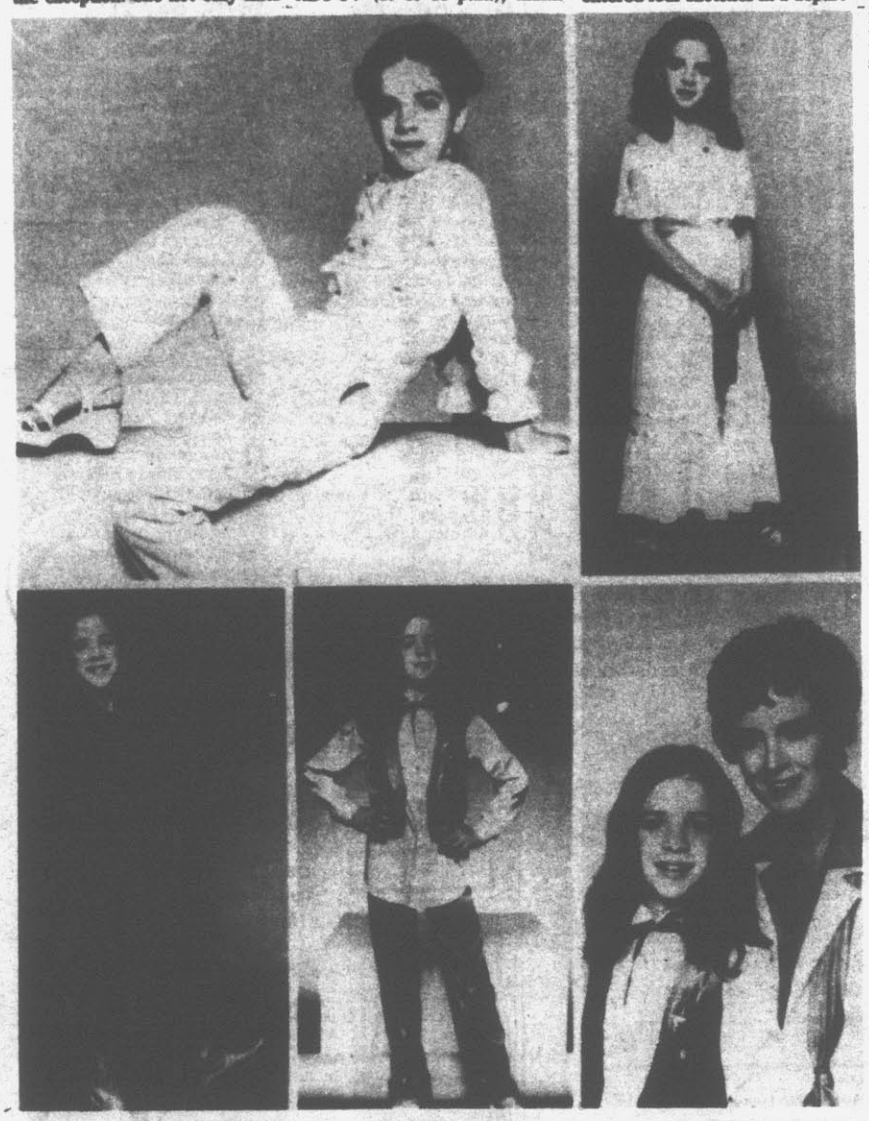

This clothes-conscious young lady also likes to experiment with different hair-styles and accessories but her fashion taste tends toward a classic, tailored, non-frilly look.

Quinn's wardrobe is more extensive than many girls her age because of the number of personal appearances she makes throughout the country. In fact, her evening dresses may outnumber her jeans. Her newest is an ecru ankle-length dress with an off-the shoulders neckline which she bought to wear to this year's Emmy Awards. She also owns a dressy white tuxedo.

Recently, when she rode an elephant in the opening parade for a circus, her outfit consisted of a brown satin vest, soft tunic shirt, and fashionable-slim pants.

For daytime appearances this fall, Quinn might wear a rusty-red challis-like vested two-piece dress and boots. She also has the coordinated corduroy slacks for cool weather. For more casual events, she has several coordinated blue denim jeans and vests outfits. One is trimmed in pink suede and another has brown leather stars inset in the vest and rear pocket. Boots complete the trendy cowboy look.

Quinn is an avid reader of fashion magazines and "will pour through each issue from cover to cover until she practically has it memorized," according to her mother, who's responsible for purchasing her daughter's wardrobe — guided by Quinn's fashion-wise advice, of course.

Quinn Cummings, who has joined the cast of "Family" on ABC-TV this season, is a clothes-conscious young lady who believes in high fashion for little girls. Her shopping is done with the counsel of mother, Jan Cummings (lower right).

Kelly Hosts Special

"Cinderella at the Palace," two-hour musical special hosted by Gene Kelly which highlights performances, both on-and-back stage in Las Vegas by stars Paul Anka, Ann-Margret, Sammy Davis, Tom Jones, Frank Sinatra and Andy Williams, will be broadcast Thursday, Nov. 2 (9 to 11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Guest stars include Merv Griffin, Jimmie Walker, Don Knotts, Rip Taylor, Elaine Joyce and Jackie Gayle.

A talented young Las Vegas singer, Marlene Ricci, plays the title role of an unknown performer who gets the dream-come-true, chance-of-a-lifetime opportunity to "open the act" for some of Las Vegas' top headliners.

In other comedy sequences, Knotts and Elaine Joyce appear as a Las Vegas honeymoon couple whose passion is divided between the honeymoon suite and the casino. Walker shows a girlfriend there's more than one way to strike it rich in Las Vegas.

Kelly, asked to explain the secret of his long and fantastically successful career, once said, "I think I have a gift for making a dance number a joyous event."

Kelly reached a memorable milestone in his career when he starred in and did the choreography for "An American in Paris," which earned the Best Picture "Oscar" in 1951. At the same time the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences" presented him with a special award "in appreciation of his versatility as an actor, singer, director and dancer; specficially, for his brilliant achievements in the art of choreography on film."

"I always wished for more straight roles, but I never really cut it on the screen — except when I was dancing," he notes somewhat ruefully.

Shortridge Is Back In School

It's more than a bit ironic that Stephen Shortridge should be back in the classroom as Beau on "Welcome Back, Kotter" (Saturdays, 8 to 8:30 p.m., ABC-TV).

After all, he's literally grown up in a classroom.

"My father is the principal of a junior high school and my mom is a first grade teacher in another school," Stephen says with a grin during his lunch break from the TV series.

"Not surprisingly, scholastics was a big topic in my home," he adds.

Home has been Southern California since Stephen's parents moved from Iowa when he was five. Yet, acting has only been an important part of his life in the past three years.

"I spent two years in junior college and then a year at Idaho State on a scholarship after I was named an All-American water polo player, but my major was art," the personable actor explains. "Fine arts was my interest from high school, but after my first year in Idaho I developed an interest in modeling.

"Well, I wasn't really too fond of modeling and then someone said, 'You ought to try acting'."

What Stephen found himself doing was TV commercials and magazine advertisements, which eventually took him to New York.

"I did very well with that but suddenly I felt a void in my life in that regard, and I wanted to fill that void. After awhile I reached the point where I admitted that I did want to act, and risk failure."

New Stars In Drama

There will be a new group of stars in the critically acclaimed cast of "Centennial" when the epic drama, based on James A. Michener's best seller, returns after a two-week absence with a two-hour segment on NBC-TV's "The Big Event," Sunday, Oct. 29 (8 p.m.).

Chad Everett, Timothy Dalton, Donald Pleasence, Gregory Harrison, Cristina Raines and Stephanie Zimbalist arrive on the scene in "The Wagon and the Elephant," the third segment of the 26-hour drama.

Everett stars as Capt. Mexwell Mercy (he later becomes a major), who accompanies a party of greenhorns on a covered wagon trek West.

Harrison joins the cast as Levi Zendt, the high-spirited youngest son of a pious Pennsylvania Mennonite family which frowns on his humor and joy of life. When he is falsley accused of making advances of a flirting young woman, the sect turns against him. He rebels by fleeing with Elly Zahm (Zimbalist), a plain but loving young woman from a local orphanage whom he soon marries.

Heading West toward their dream of a new life in Oregon, they meet Oliver Seccombe (Dalton), a vibrant young Englishman; Captain Mercy, an officer who has a special reason to be sympathetic to Indian complaints; and Sam Purchas (Pleasence), a scarred, bitter and murderous old mountain man who is hired as their guide.

IN 'CENTENNIAL' — Chad Everett and Karen Carlson portray Major Maxwell Mercy and Mrs. Lisette Pasquinel Mercy in "The Wagon and the Elephant" segment of "Centennial," on NBC-TV's "The Big Event," Sunday, Oct. 29 (8-10 p.m.). Mercy heads West on the Oregon trail and subsequently is involved with keeping the peace in the area of Colorado where the fictional community of "Centennial" evolves.

'Crash' Amazing Story

The incredible drama of a jetliner's smashup in the Florida Everglades that couldn't happen — but did — and the rescue of 73 passengers who couldn't survive — but did — is the story of "Crash," airing as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," Oct. 29 (9 to 11 p.m.).

William Shatner and Eddie Albert head the all-star cast in the drama of the giant L-1011, the safest and most advanced plane ever built, which plunged into the swamps of the Everglades on the night of Dec. 29, 1972, en route from New York to Florida.

Reports of the tragic accident called it a million-to-one combination of three unrelated factors, the most ironic being the failure of a thirty-cent light bulb.

Robert Reed, starring as psychologist David McKay, a specialist in tracking down runaways, seeks a mentally disturbed teenager who has run away to San Francisco to become a call girl, in "No Prince For My Cinderella," on "The NBC Late Movie," Sunday, Oct. 29 (11:30 p.m.).

McKay receives a call from Burt Williams (James Olson), an old friend from his police days. Williams tells of the disturbed behavior of his daughter, Cathy (Terri Nunn), who has disappeared after leaving a strange message — written in lipstick — on her bedroom mirror.

McKay, in checking the girl's background, discovers a pattern indicating schizophrenic behavior and a dual personality. Cathy has run away to San Francisco with known prostitute Carolyn Roberts (Cecilia Hart), and has assumed the identity of "Barbara Hess."

McKay efforts to find the girl lead him from a muscle beach in Venice, Calif., to a hotel room in San Francisco where Cathy-Barbara believes him to be a customer.

The drama was filmed in San Francisco, and the famed city's usually blase citizens stood quietly by as cameras rolled. But when the director yelled "cut!," they descended on Robert Reed for autographs, calling him Mike Brady, the character he limned so successfully during the years of "The Brady Bunch."

'Puff' Airs Monday

"Puff the Magic Dragon," a musical half-hour animated special based upon Peter Yarrow's classic hit song and made famous by Peter, Paul and Mary, wherein a young boy acquires from a magic dragon the courage to face growing up, will be presented Monday, Oct. 30 (8:30 to 9 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

"Puff," popular in the 1960's, tells the story of little Jackie Draper, his friend, Puff, and their trip to Honah Lee, Puff's magical homeland. The animated special is an interpretation of the song and it explains how Puff helps a frightened little boy to face the trials and tribulations of growing up.

Jackie Draper is a silent, withdrawn child and the doctors his worried parents have called hold little hope for him. But once they leave, balefully shaking their heads, Puff magically appears and tells Jackie, "I've come to help you help yourself."

With Puff's constant help and encouragement, Jackie learns how to face new situations and solve difficult problems without retreating back into his silent shell. Jackie has blossomed and Puff is proud of him, but Puff knows the most difficult part is yet to come.

A frightened Jackie looks to his new-found friend Puff, the magic dragon, to see him through the troubled times, in the new animated musical special, "Puff the Magic Dragon," Monday, Oct. 30 (8:30-9 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Soft-Hearted

He's a little guy who gets knocked around from all sides — from the meaning of becoming a baseball hero to his belief in Christmas trees.

He's Charlie Brown. The most soft-hearted of Charles M. Schulz's cartoon characters, he believes "in all this world there is nothing more upsetting than the clobbering of a cherished belief."

Because Charlie Brown is the way he is, he's not out to shatter Linus' belief in the Great Pumpkin when the blanket-toting member of the Peanuts family awaits the appearance of the legendary Halloween visitor, in "It's the Great Pumpking, Charlie Brown," animated special to be rebroadcast Monday, Oct. 30 (8 to 8:30 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Charlie's comprehension of his pal's devotion to this rather uncommon tradition of shivering in the "most sincere" pumpkin patch, while awaiting the elusive vision to appear with "toys for all the good children of the world," is not shared by other Peanuts.

Linus' sister Lucy is furious with her brother's stupid behavior. She feels the October madness will reflect on the rest of the family.

Snoopy thinks the whole pumpkin idea is a scream — although the braggart beagle sees nothing funny in his own flights of fantasy as a World War I ace who flies atop his doghouse.

Although Charlie sees no more logic in Linus' belief in a Great Pumpkin than do the other Peanuts, he, for one, doesn't laugh at the little guy. As his creator Schulz says, "what one believes in ceases to be imaginary."

Poor Charlie Brown is the Charlie Brownest of all the Peanuts. To top things off, when he tries to console Linus by admitting that he's done some "stupid" things, too, Linus gets mad at him for his choice of words.

Eerie Supernatural Tale

Richard Crenna and Yvette Mimieux star in the chilling tale of a suburban family whose lives are unknowingly threatened by their seemingly innocent puppy — a dog actually imbued with the spirit of the devil — in "Devil Dog: The Hound of Hell," airing on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies," Oct. 31 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Victor Jory also appears in the mystery-drama as a South American shaman who helps a desperate Mike Barry (Crenna) try to release his family from the unnatural influence the dog holds on the family.

When the Barrys' beloved pet is mysteriously run over by an automobile, the children, Bonnie and Charlie (Kim Richards and Ike Eisenmann) are heartbroken. But then a stranger offers them an adorable puppy. "Lucky," as the dog is named, charms everyone, but what the Barrys don't know is that the stranger is really a member of a devil-worshipping cult and that the evil dog was placed in the household deliberately.

A series of unexplained and seemingly unrelated tragedies strikes the neighborhood and Mike notices that his children and his wife, Betty (Mimieux), are becoming distant and somehow changed. Mike now fears Lucky and intuitively realizes that the dog is in some way responsible.

Discounting all possible rational solutions, Mike is driven to consult a believer in the occult and through her, Mike is led to South America to visit the only man who can help him — the shaman who can teach Mike how to resist the evil spirits and save his family.

Richard Crenna found the location, Encino, Calif., for the filming of 'Devil Dog' much to his liking. Aside from being a very comfortable place to work, the suburban home was only five minutes from Crenna's own home.

'Count Dracula'

"It is the eve of St. George's Day. Do you not know that tonight, when the clock strikes midnight, all the evil things in the world will have full sway?" Early in Bram Stoker's "Dracula," the scene is set for the unholy happenings which makes this the greatest horror story in all literature.

The sinister Count who, according to legend, has been among the undead for the last 500 years, returns for a special three-hour encore presentation on "Great Performances." The special airs Tuesday, Oct. 31 (9:30 p.m.), on PBS.

Set in 1890 in England and Transylvania, "Dracula" concerns the timeless battle between the forces of good and evil. The tale begins as young lawyer Jonathan Harker leaves London for the mountains of Transylvania and Castle Dracula. On St. George's Eve, Harker meets the infamous Count, whose prisoner he becomes. The young hero begins to notice strange and terrifying signs; absent during the day, the Count never eats or drinks. Most shocking of all, he has no image in the mirror. Harker eventually escapes, but not before he sees the Count and his three brides lying in their coffins, neither dead nor alive.

Meanwhile, back in England, strange things have begun to happen. Harker's fiancee, Mina, finds her sister in a graveyard at night, with a tall, cloaked figure leaning over her; Count Dracula is in England. Professor Van Helsing — a renowned expert on vampires — is called in to help. But Van Helsing's medications and transfusions, his garlic and crucifix, come too late to save Mina's sister; and Mina herself begins showing the same signs of illness as her sister. The final battle between good and evil pits Van Helsing and Harker against the king of the undead, and climaxes with a return to the castle in Transylvania.

Kristy McNichol Stars

Kristy McNichol stars as a troubled Jewish youngster whose search for friendship and understanding results in a major crisis when she meets a young German prisoner of war interred near her Deep South hometown, in "Summer of My German Soldier." The two-hour World Premiere drama will inaugurate the "NBC Theater" series Monday, Oct. 30 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Esther Rolle (of "Good Times") and Bruce Davison also star, with Michael Constantine and Barbara Barrie, in the World War II-era drama.

McNichol portrays Patty Bergen, daughter of the only Jewish couple in a sleepy southern town in 1944 who has endured an uneasy relationship with her father (Constantine); he seems preoccupied with his precocious younger daughter, Sharon (Robyn Elaine Lively).

When German POWs are brought into the area, and show up one day at the Bergen store to purchase hats, Patty meets Anton (Davison), an articulate young man who speaks fluent English. Later, Anton flees his work camp and Patty attempts to convince him of the futility of his escape plan. When she fails, she allows him to hide in an abandoned loft she has claimed as her private hideaway.

Soon, however, pressure from FBI agents conducting a thorough search of the town forces Anton to flee.

The fact-based drama, inspired by a Betty Greene novel, has been recommanded for viewing by the National Education Association.

The NEA said: "'Summer of My German Soldier' reflects another example of how war — the result of failure by adults to reason together — can place artificial barriers of hostility between young people. The is an important, historically significant story that re-emphasizes how youngsters usually grow up with no natural enemies."

A STORY OF CARING — Bruce Davison stars as a German World War II POW who meets and befriends a Jewish girl (Kristy McNichol) living in a small Southern town, in "Summer of My German Soldier," the premiere presentation of "NBC Theater" Monday, Oct. 30 (9-11 p.m.).

'Plane' Hard Work

There are those slammed-down-to-earth times in performers' lives when they are "swamped" with tough physical work as they take a "crash" course in realism. They stars of "Crash" ("The ABC Sunday Night Movie," Oct. 29, 9 to 11 p.m.) found out this was a motion picture with no easy landings.

Illusion and special effects created the stark realism of the giant plane's smash-up. Many of the sequences were filmed in the Everglades and some on a Hollywood back lot. Parts of a plane lay scattered near a small lake. Plants indigenous to the Everglades were added and the lake was turned into a swamp. The whole effect was so realistic that the only thing that looked make-believe was the very real moon that hung low in the sky.

'Gator' Stars Reynolds

Burt Reynolds stars as rebel moonshiner Gator McClusky, in "Gator," a fast-paced action adventure film with Lauren Hutton, Jack Weston, Jerry Reed and Alice Ghostley, to be rebroadcast as "The CBS Wednesday Night Movie" (9 to 11:15 p.m.).

In this sequel to the motion picture "White Lightning," Gator is a non-conformist with a sardonic sense of humor; a moonshiner who operates a still in a remote southern swamp. A Department of Justice agent (Weston) calls upon Gator to help him out. They need to collect enough evidence to convict ruthless and corrupt political boss Bama McCall (Reed), who controls the entire county, with the mayor and the police department under his direct influence.

With the help of a persistent television reporter (Hutton), who promptly falls in love with the cool, courageous Gator, plus the support of a gutsy social crusader (Ghostley), Gator manages to get the needed evidence — but not before the political boss makes a number of attempts on his life.

Burt Reynolds stars as a moonshiner who challenges the power of a corrupt political boss with the help of a beautiful television reporter, portrayed by Lauren Hutton, in "Gator," to be rebroadcast on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movie," Nov. 1 (9-11:15 p.m.).

Verdi's 'MacBeth'—PBS

"Macbeth," Guiseppe Verdi's operatic version of Shakespeare's immortal tale of intrigue, deception and murder, will be broadcast as a "Great Performances Special" Wednesday, Nov. 1 (9:30 p.m.), on PBS.

"Macbeth" unfolds in a nightmarish world, where good and evil are inexplicably reversed. In an atmosphere of witchcraft and barbarism, Macbeth and his Lady thrive, cold-blooded in their desire to ascend the Scottish throne. Goaded into action by his ruthless wife, Macbeth murders those who stand in his path. Yet at the opera's end, their dreams shatter, destroying both themselves and the violent world they created.

The production stars Norman Bailey and mezzo soprano Patricia Johnson in the leading roles. Bass Nicolai Ghiaurov sings the role of Banquo, and young American tenor Neil Shicoff is Macduff. Robin Stapleton conducts the London Philharmonic Orchestra, joined by the Ambrosian Opera Chorus.

Verdi's "Macbeth," with a libretto after Shakespeare by Francesco Maria Piave, is sung in Italian. This production, the first in-studio opera recorded by BBC-TV in stereo, was directed by Brian Large. His staging is both visually startling and broodingly surreal, with the characters moving through a world of black and white, gray and silver. Large's sets are triangulated and bold, suggesting rather than realistically recreating the bleak climate of Scotland. It is this background that amplifies Macbeth's murderous ways and mirrors the tortured lives of the Thane and his consort.

Although controversy still rages over Large's interpretation — an amalgam of two versions of the opera which Verdi wrote 18 years apart — the London Sunday Times hailed "Macbeth" as a "landmark in televised opera." Large puts several scenes "onstage" for the first time, including Duncan's mother, the laying out of the slain king, and Macbeth's coronatioon.

David Cassidy Returns

Former teen sensation David Cassidy returns to series television starring as Officer Dan Shay in "David Cassidy — Man Undercover," premiering Thursday, Nov. 2 (10 to 11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

In the premiere episode — "Running the Hill" — Shay, a rookie cop who pursues criminals undercover, suspects a hard-nosed lieutenant (guest star Joe Santos) is trying to use him to infiltrate a gang of speed-crazy teen-age bank robbers to eventually set the youths up to be snuffed out in a police shootout.

Lieutenant Mitchell (Santos) is frustrated over attempts to foil three young supermarket bandits on a lethal robbery spree who disappear into hillside streets in their stolen souped-up cars. Mitchell assigns Shay to pose as a fast-car fiend. Relying on his vast expertise in modified racers, Shay submerges himself into a sub-culture that likes life in the fast-lane and gets its thrills defying a tortuous stretch of hairpin turns along a mountainous road.

Comedy To Air

Actors Dan Resin, Renee Lippin and Michael Vale guest in fast-paced comedy sketches in new season episodes during the week of Oct. 30 — Nov. 3 on "Captain Kangaroo," presented weekdays (8 to 9 a.m.) on CBS-TV.

Dan Resin, as Maurice the Great Artist, discovers the talents of Willy and Wally Monday. The Captain starts Week "E" of picturepages, and also reads "The Red Horse and the Bluebird." On Captain Nemo, Chris becomes a snake charmer.

Pike's Peek

HOLLYWOOD — CRAIG HUEBING, who has portrayed Dr. Peter Taylor on ABC's "GENERAL HOSPITAL" for about a decade, secretly married actress DAVIE DAVIDSON last month. They were married in a private ceremony attended by only a handful of close friends and honeymooned in the state of Washington where they spent a week fishing. It's Craig's third marriage. Oh, yes, on that fishing honeymoon, Davie caught the biggest fish!

ERIK ESTRADA and LARRY WILCOX are being kept so busy with weekend commitments and a grueling weekday work schedule they're begging off from any media interviews. In fact, both guys became so fatigued that they were victims of a virus, and production had to be shut down for a week while they stayed home in bed.

CBS' cancellation of MARY TYLER MOORE'S new variety show was made reluctantly, but the only alternative timeslot the network could have made available would have been at 8 p.m. on Tuesday night where "PAPER CHASE" is showing so miserably. But then, for CBS and NBC that's considered the "death" time period in that no one has been able to compete against "HAPPY DAYS." No doubt, Mary's ratings would have been worse, so it made more sense to axe the show and return in January with a new format.

LYNN TOPPING is the name of the actress who is now in the role of Chris on "THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS." For viewers of that show of course, that's the role TRISH STEWART created and made such a favorite during her five years with the serial. It's also the role that was written out of the show when Trish departed, and it's one she was offered again when it was decided to bring it back. Obviously, Trish declined.

Speaking of bringing a daytime role back, the same has been done on "DAYS OF OUR LIVES" with the return of Brooke, the role created by ADRIENNE LaRUSSA a couple of years ago. This time it's actress EILEEN BARNETT in the role.

Interesting tidbit. When PHYLLIS GEORGE decided to leave her sports reporting spot with CBS, more than 200 women were auditioned for her replacement, including actress JO ANN PFLUG. Jo Ann now co-stars on "OPERATION PETTICOAT," but she came close to spending her weekends in New York and her weekdays on the road interviewing athletes. In fact, she finished second!

James Coburn Stars

James Coburn stars as Dr. Carey, a medic with a brutal bedside manner who wants some answers fast before somebody else gets killed, in "The Carey Treatment," mystery drama to be rebroadcast as "The CBS Late Night Movie," Thursday, Nov. 2 (11:30 p.m.). Jennifer O'Neill and Pat Hingle co-star.

Carey, a Boston Pathologist, finds himself caught up in the murder of the daughter of the hospital's most prominent physician. Carey's oldest friend is charged with the death, caused by an illegal operation. Confident of his friend's innocence, Carey decides to do his own investigating. He gets results by threatening and pushing his way to the truth.

Liz Loved Engagement

The Hallmark Hall of Fame production of James Prideaux's "Return Engagment" was the first full-length television drama Elizabeth Taylor has done in Hollywood and she was delighted with the experience.

"I had a marvelous time; I've been asked to do another show for Hallmark and I'm really looking forward to it."

In a 1973 interview, Miss Taylor said, "What I'd like to do is slide into character parts. I like parts that aren't too easy for me, that aren't too close to me, because then it's acting and you have to do more than read through it."

Emily Loomis, the character she plays in "Return Engagment," is a character part and she finds her not as vulnerable as the glamour girls she's used to playing. "They were much more vulnerable people," she says. "Except Emily really is, as we find out in the end, a vulnerable person. But she's lived behind a facade and exhibited such capability and independence for so many years that it's a shock to her when she finds out that she really does need people. The part is quite different from everything I've done in every aspect. There are differences in the makeup, the hair, the way I dress, the walk, my voice — everything. Emily doesn't try and seduce anything."

Of Bottoms, she said: "As an actor he is totally professional; he knows exactly what he is doing and yet is pliable and responsive to any suggestions the director might make. From my point of view, as an actress, he is a very giving and spontaneous person. He has a surface of gaiety with an underlying current of intensity. When we do a scene together we are really looking, listening and talking to each other."

As for Hardy, she said: "He's done everything from Broadway to Burbank. And I had heard that he is a very sensitive, warm human being, which indeed he is. I absolutely adore him. We think very much alike and he's what I refer to as a hinting director. He doesn't clobber you with ideas. He sort of tells you where he wants you to go and then either indicates that he wants a little more or a little less.

"He doesn't treat actors like the public, he treats them like creative people and lets them go off and do their own thing, which I think is a marvelous quality in a director."

Fred McCarren, Bess Armstrong and Desi Arnaz Jr. (l to r) find a bench in Central Park to be a safe and sane hiding place from the rigors and exhausting demands of "having a good time" in Manhattan's swinging singles bars in "How to Pick Up Girls," a fast-paced comedy of life on the prowl, making its world premiere on "The ABC Friday Night Movie," Nov. 3 (9-11 p.m.).

Michele Will Tell

Q: What happened to the "Stoney Burke" series starring Jack Lord, and when was the series last seen on TV? C.T., GREENVILLE, N.C.

A: "Stoney Burke" aired on ABC 1962-63, then went into syndication. Incidentally, this was Lord's first series, although he had guest starred on several shows prior to 'Stoney.'

Q: Please give me some information about the actors who portray Ed Bauer and Rita Templeton on "Guiding Light." ANN WILLIAMS, CHARLOTTE C.H., VA.

A: They are Mart Hulswit and Lenore Kasdorf. Mart, who is multi-lingual, has been with the series since 1969, and has a long list of movie credits and guest-starring roles in other series. He's very family-oriented and spends a great deal of time with his wife and their two young daughters. 'Light' is Lenore's first series (she joined the cast in '75), and she gathered acting experience in L.A.-based nighttime series (a guest role on "Starsky & Hutch" led her to an audition for the part of Rita). Lenore is married to actor Phil Peters.

Q: Is Gail Ferrell of "The Lawrence Welk Show" married? M.I.H., BLADENBORO, N.C.

A: Yes. Gail is married to Rick Mallory, the son of two of Welk's closest friends. They met when Rick made the travel arrangements for the show's jaunt to Hawaii in 1972.

Q: What is the name of the book NBC's "The Awakening Land" was taken from? D. REXODE, MONTERREY, VA.

A: "The Awakening Land" was based on the Pulitzer Prize-winning novel of the same name by Conrad Richter. The publication is a combination of three novelettes — "The Trees," "The Fields," and "The Town."

Q: Can you give me the address of "Sesame Street"? A.D., WILMINGTON, N.C.

A: The show's address is: Children's Television Workshop, One Lincoln Plaza, New York, New York 10023.

Q: I wish you would send me the address for "CHiPs." I do not like their new music. It is too disco. TARA BLEVINS, WAYNESVILLE, VA.

A: Like it or not, Tara, that disco beat is here to stay . . . until something better comes along, anyway. Send your letter to NBC-TV, 3000 W. Alameda Ave., Burbank, Calif. 91505.

'Little Lulu' Comes To TV—ABC

Little Lulu, no Janie-come-lately to the demand for fair play, has been battling Tubby and the boys for the right to visit their clubhouse in cartoons and comic books for two generations now.

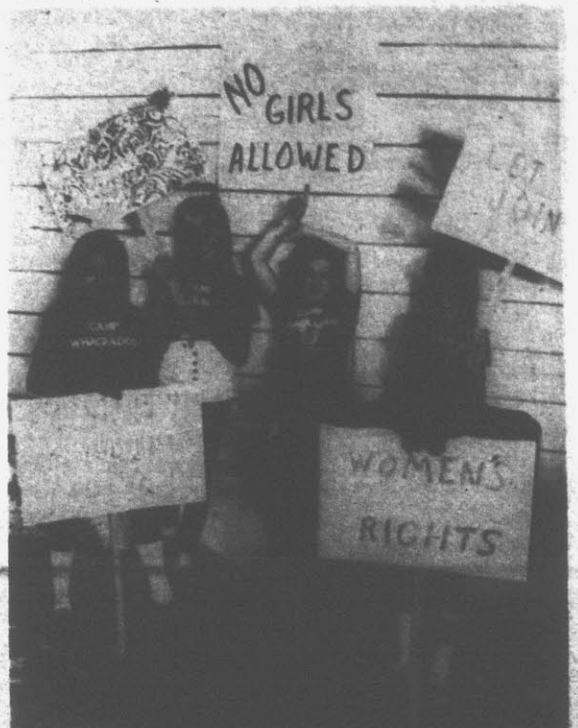

Her battle for 'equality' crosses over to television when "Little Lulu" airs as the "ABC Weekend Specials" presentation Saturday, Nov. 4 (12-noon to 12:30 p.m.).

Little Lulu decides the girls must prove they're not the weaker sex when she discovers that Tubby and his gang are adamantly enforcing the "no girls allowed" rule at their clubhouse.

Incensed by the archaic rules that keep them separate and unequal, the girls, under Lulu's firm direction, are picketing for the right to play on the baseball team. The boys, secure in the knowledge that the girls will soon be going off to a girls' summer camp, aren't too worried. The boys, however, have not reckoned with Lulu's cunning. Why not, says she, crash the boys' camp and beat them at their own game?

Starring are Laurie Hendler as Lulu, Kevin King Cooper as Tubby, Annrae Walterhouse as Gloria and Robbie Rist as Iggy. Guest starring are Tim Reid and Beverly Archer.

Also in the cast are Lulu Baxter as Annie, Bill Jacoby as Alvin, Toy Newkirk as Diane, Nickey Manfredi as Eddie, Nita DiGiampaolo as Maria, Eddie Singleton as Willie, Laura Fanning as Alvin's Mom, Evelyn Bell as Tubby's Mom, Michelle Brown as Henreitta Chamberlain and Norm Honath as the bus driver.

The signs of the times, they are 'a changin' as Little Lulu and her friends parade in protest against the "no Girls Allowed" policy of the boys' baseball team in "Little Lulu," a live-action adventure of the classic cartoon and comic book character airing on "ABC Weekend Specials" series, Saturday, Nov. 4 (12-12:30 p.m.).

Mammoth Undertaking

The network will make available television pictures and sound of the events at Lake Placid to all the nations in the world which have contracted with the Organizing Committee. In addition there will be 'Americanized coverage' of the games, focusing more on U.S. athletes, for the domestic TV audience.

To illustrate how this will work, ABC Sports' Jim Spence gives an example: "If we're covering the men's downhill and an American racer falls in the middle of his run, and there's an Italian racer coming down the course next, based on our responsibility as Coordinating Broadcaster, we must cover the Italian racer for international audiences. We also would want to stay with the fallen American racer for our U.S. audience. So in order to have unilateral capabilities we have to have our own mobile unit assigned to follow the American and at the same time have separate cameras assigned to cover the Italian racer."

To achieve this monumental coverage, ABC Sports will have, according to Spence, a total staff of approximately 800 people working at Lake Placid, including 450 engineering and technical personnel, 150 production personnel and 200 support personnel.

The Teen Scene

The four-week run of "LUCAN" could not only determine the fate of that show and its star, KEVIN BROPHY, but also the fate of "THE HARDY BOYS." ABC is going to be taking a long, close look at the "Lucan" ratings and if they're good, it might find itself replacing SHAUN and PARKER come January.

By the way, SHAUN has made it a point, through the Hollywood tradepaper, THE HOLLYWOOD REPORTER, is squelching the rumors about his alleged upcoming marriage to actress-model ANN PENNINGTON. True, they are dating, and true they are fond of one another, but no, marriage is not even a topic they've discussed.

KRISTY McNICHOL may never forget the month of October in 1978. Besides "FAMILY", of course, she follows-up her co-starring role with LINDA LAVIN in the TV movie "LIKE MOM, LIKE ME," by co-starring with ESTHER ROLLE in "SUMMER OF MY GERMAN SOLDIER" that airs on NBC the 30th of this month. Meanwhile, JANE FONDA is busy looking for a script that will feature her with Kristy!

An added note on SHAUN, his fourth album, "THAT WAS ROCK AND ROLL-SHAUN CASSIDY LIVE," will be released during the upcoming Christmas holidays.

JOEY TRAVOLTA makes his motion picture debut in the film, "SUNNYSIDE," which will be in the theaters sometime next summer.

Honors Sinatra

Frank Sinatra, "King of America's Great Song Stylists," is saluted this week by Lawrence Welk and his Musical Family in a gala musical parade of Sinatra's greatest recording-hit songs, to air Saturday, Nov. 4.

Tunes featured include "Young at Heart," a jazz version of "Old Man River," and "All the Way," featuring the band, "Got You Under My Skin" (Henry Cuesta), "This Love of Mine" (Tom Netherton), and "Chicago!" (Bobby Burgess and Cissy King).

Bert Hopes To See Action Soon

It has already been a disheartening season for Bert Jones and the Baltimore Colts. Picked by many to finish at the top of the AFC heap for the third consecutive year, the Colts have seen their hopes fade like a cold Maryland winter sun.

The reasons for the Baltimore fold began on an ominous summer day in July, when owner Robert Irsay, after a controversial series of arguments with All-Pro running back Lydell Mitchell, was forced to deal the valuable property to the San Diego Chargers for Joe Washington.

But the Colts' problems really mushroomed during the final pre-season game against Detroit, when quarterback Jones fell hard on his shoulder and separated it. With the injury, he probably also separated his team from any hopes of repeating as AFC East champions.

Jones is the root at the teeth of the Baltimore attack, and his deadly-accurate passes have helped many Colt fans forget the legendary Johnny Unitas. In fact, the way Bert leads the team downfield on last-minute drives, many probably think they are seeing a reincarnation of old number 19.

Bert is the son of former Cleveland Brown great, Dub Jones, and he spent a lot of hours as a child in the Browns' training camp watching his dad. But he was never force-fed a diet of football by Dub.

"I used to warm up the veteran quarterbacks before practice, but I could see what the rookies were going through, too," Bert explains. "My dad was very understanding about their situation and he took time to explain what was happening anytime I asked."

The Baltimore Colts hope their prize quarterback Bert Jones will be back in action when the Colts travel to Miami to challenge the archrival Dolphins on NBC's game of the week, Sunday, Oct. 29 at 4 p.m.

Who Cares For Anonymity?

It's not easy to be recognized when you're playing in what is probably the most talent-laden defensive backfield in the NFL, but Jake Scott's doesn't mind.

Scott is playing in his ninth season for the high-flying Redskins, who have gotten off to their fastest start in years. Scott and the Skins face another challenge when they play the San Francisco 49ers Sunday, Oct. 29 (1 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

The Redskins remember the Georgia graduate well. In Super Bowl VII, Scott, then with the Miami Dolphins, picked off an errant Billy Kilmer pass in the end zone and ran it back 55 yards to stop a crucial Washington drive.

A couple of seasons later, he found himself with Coach George Allen's "Over the Hill" Gang, and he immediately fit into the conservative game plan of the Redskin mentor with his sure tackling and penchant for picking off opposing passes at the most opportune times.

"He caught a kitten that was falling from a balcony, but fell himself. His head was severly cut and he had a broken collarbone, but he got up, still clutching the kitten and walked away."

But Jake is also somewhat of a rogue and got intense enjoyment out of betting on dog races or hunting while with the Dolphins. He eventually landed in Don Shula's doghouse and on the trading block.

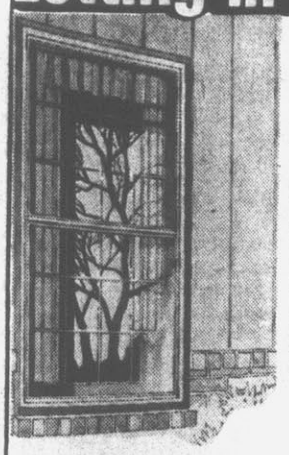

He has an amazing ability to play while injured. In the longest game ever played (the '71 playoff contest against the Kansas City Chiefs), Scott played 80 minutes with a broken hand. All he did was intercept a Kansas City pass on the last play of the first overtime, keeping the Dolphins in a game they eventually won.

He dismisses injuries, stating that "everyone in the game plays hurt. If an athlete doesn't face the prospect of getting hurt, he'd just as well get out of football."

A Complicated Road

For Bert Rosario (Hector Ramirez on "Sword of Justice"), the road from Puerto Rico to Hollywood was a tortuous one — but he might never have started if it weren't for a schoolteacher named Zelman.

Now co-starring as star Dack Rambo's wise-cracking Latin sidekick on the NBC series seen Saturdays (10 to 11 p.m.). Rosario's family moved from Puerto Rico to New York City when he was 2 years old — causing the usual cultural problems for non-English speaking immigrants.

"It's difficult for a Puerto Rican who comes to the United States," said Rosario. "We were citizens at birth, yet we didn't speak the language, so we're caught in the middle."

Hence, Rosario grew up as a shy, introverted student — until he met the aforementioned Mr. Zelman.

"Mr. Zelman was my sixth grade teacher," he said. "He chose me to deliver the valedictory speech in class, then pushed me into memorizing it. I loved delivering it, and experienced a sense of power. I mean, all those people applauding you!"

Thus inspired, Rosario later joined the theatre and glee clubs, but encountered resistance from his conservative parents, who pressured him to be an engineer. He obliged them for a while, but could not tolerate the technical grind. His solution was to drop out and join the Army.

"A real smart thing to do, right?" he said, smiling. "I wanted to be somebody."

What he became was a chaplain's assistant in Vietnam at the height of the war.

"I was mostly a field altar boy," he said. "But I grew up in Vietnam, got a sense of myself and discovered a brand new world outside New York. The war was the turning point in my life."

Rosario moved to Los Angeles in 1968 to pursue an acting career. There he married, graduated from college, toiled in a fast-food restaurant and, most important, was granted a Fellowship to study acting at the University of Minnesota.

A second trip to Los Angeles two years ago finally put Bert Rosario on television — as a junkie on "Baretta."

Chapter Four Airs

McKeag (Richard Chamberlain) and Clay Basket (Barbara Cerrera) are so concerned about trader Levin Zendt's (Gregory Harrison) grief at the loss of his wife that they send their daughter, Lucinda (Cristina Raines), to heal his sorrow, in Chapter Four of "Centennial," based on James A. Michener's best-selling novel, on NBC-TV's "The Big Event" Saturday, Nov. 4 (9 to 11 p.m.).

This segment, "For as Long as the Waters Flow," also stars Chad Everett as Major Mercy and Alex Karras as Brumbaugh.

Zendt appears to care for the bright, tender Lucinda, but announces that he can't marry her until she is both baptized and educated. When the girl is sent to St. Louis for schooling, she meets Lt. John McIntosh (Mark Harmon), a young officer recovering from wounds received at the hands of Lucinda's half-brothers, Jake and Mike Pasquinel (Stephen McHattie and Kario Salem).

When McIntosh proposes marriage, Lucinda is forced to choose between the two men she has learned to love.

Zendt and McKeag become deeply involved in the efforts of Major Maxwell Mercy (Everett) to prevent warfare between the angry Indians — who are losing their land and life style — and the thousands of white settlers moving across their territory.

● Woodburn, the Governor's House, is said to be haunted by four ghosts: a little girl in a gingham dress, a man who drinks from wine decanters, a Confederate soldier hanged from a tree in the yard and an elderly dinner guest. Dover schoolchildren used to run past the old house in fear. Nowadays, it's their favorite stop on Halloween. That the 1790-era house was a station on the Underground Railroad probably accounts for the alleged soldier's "presence." In the mid-60's, the State purchased and renovated the house, and the first governor to occupy it said someone — maybe a ghost — "borrowed" some wine every so often. As for the other two ghosts in the mansion — who knows what they're up to?

It's scary time again.

Bettmann Archive

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

What's the origin of Halloween? How about a brief history?—P.W., Savannah, Ga.

● On November 1, 609, Pope Boniface IV dedicated Rome's Pantheon to all the saints, unknown martyrs and our Lady with a sacred ceremony and a feast. In time, this date became known as All Saints Day. Seventh-century Celts associated the festival with death and the passing of the autumn sun. Legend has it they lit sacred fires in an attempt to persuade the sun to stay (bonfires are still with us today). In medieval England, they called it All Hallows Day — Oct. 31, the night before becoming Hallows Eve, or Halloween. Bobbing for apples, so popular with children, dates back to the Middle Ages. If bonfires and fortune-telling dominate Halloween in the Old World it's trick-or-treating that can be traced back to devils and goblins who allegedly amused themselves by swapping a trick for a treat.

FOR KAREN GRASSLE, star of NBC TV's Little House On The Prairie

Do you really antagonize everyone you meet because you're so blunt and outspoken?—T.M., Danbury, Ct.

●Not everyone. Just some. Casual acquaintances would call me restrained and ladylike; close friends and family, frank and outspoken. Sometimes, I'm afraid, I'm too frank. In my childhood my parents encouraged me to be myself, be honest. If they told a story and it deviated a hair's breadth from the way it happened, I'd call them on it.

FOR GREGORY PECK, star of The Boys From Brazil

How could you accept the evil role of Dr. Josef Mengele, "Angel of Death" of Auschwitz?—L.P., Salem, Ore.

● I accepted the part for two reasons. Not long ago, a group of young Germans challenged The Diary of Anne Frank, written by a young girl who, with her family, hid from Nazis in occupied Holland during WWII. The youths claimed it was propaganda. I want to keep Anne's memory alive. And the part, although evil, is a spectacularly bravura one.

FOR KEN NORTON, fighter

How much of what Muhammad Ali says and does is hype? When he called you and Larry Holmes "ugly," was it good-natured teasing or an attention getter?—G.B., Grand Junction, Colo.

● Most of what Ali says and does is hype. He called Holmes and Leon Spinks "ugly," not me. Ali would never be foolish enough to call me "ugly." He has called me "XXX-rated" and "Mandingo," but he knows I'm the only heavyweight around who's prettier than he is.

FOR LEE GRANT, costar of Damien: Omen Part II

Is it true that you dabble as a psychic in your spare time?—T.U., Galveston, Texas

● No. Just because I was born on Halloween doesn't mean I'm loaded with ESP, overly receptive or supersensitive. In fact, I'm just the reverse. I'm not aware of anything until it's shoved right under my nose. I used to love Halloween as a child. All over town kids dressed up in funny clothes, bobbing for apples, having parties. Imagine! I thought my birthday was the reason why everyone was celebrating!

FOR TONI TENNILLE, recording star

Are you self-conscious about your height? Was it ever a drawback?—H.H., Gary, Ind.

● I love being tall — now. At 11, it was a drawback. All the boys were shorter than I. I thought I'd spend the rest of my life towering over everyone. At 16, when the boys caught up with me, I started to enjoy my height. The only time I wanted to be short was when I still dreamed of becoming a ballet dancer. Interesting thing is I'm very short from the waist up — all my height is in my legs.

FOR PHIL DONAHUE, talk-show host

● Politicians make the worst guests because they're in the full-time business of trying to impress people. They very seldom say, 'I don't know.' Instead, they give long answers proving they don't know. I miss former Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, now ambassador to Japan. He used an economy of words, and when he finished, you knew exactly where he stood.

PRO AND CON

Should Lobbyists' Activities Be Subject To Full Disclosure?

PRO R. Michael Cole, director, legislative activities, Common Cause

Yes. As the role of Government has expanded in recent years, the number of organized interest groups seeking to influence Government decisions through paid lobbyists has skyrocketed, and their impact has vastly increased. We believe the public and members of Congress should be able to know which organizations are seeking to influence which Government decisions, who their paid lobbyists are, who their big contributors are and how much they spend on lobbying. The existing Federal lobbying law is so loophole-riddled that many active lobbyists don't fall within this coverage. Lobbyists have operated in secrecy for too long — it's time to subject them to reasonable disclosure.

CON Fred J. Krebs, attorney, lobbying expert, U.S. Chamber of Commerce

No. It constitutes a dangerous precedent that would undermine the Constitutional protection of the rights of individuals and organizations to make their views known to each other and their elected officials. By requiring detailed and extensive reporting of legitimate First Amendment activities, including efforts to urge others to express their views, the proposal contains the potential to chill First Amendment freedoms of speech, association and the right to petition the Government. An unusual coalition, embracing such diverse groups as our organization, the Sierra Club, the ACLU and the National Rifle Association, strenuously opposes the proposal, recognizing that it is a threat to free political activity.

WILL CBS MAKE MARLENE RICCI A STAR? (THEY MADE ME AN EXTRA)

By Rona Jaffe

I am in Las Vegas, at Caesar's Palace, where a big CBS-TV musical variety special called Cinderella at the Palace is being taped for airing early in November. Ordinarily a TV special takes three days to shoot, but this will take three months working around the schedules of the many stars: Paul Anka, Ann-Margret, Sammy Davis, Tom Jones, Frank Sinatra and Andy Williams, all of whom have to be taped live as they appear on stage, plus act in special scenes in the script. There will also be Merv Griffin, Jimmie Walker, Don Knotts, Rip Taylor, Elaine Joyce and Jackie Gayle, with Gene Kelly as host. Cinderella is a tiny, big-eyed, 24-year-old, comparatively unknown named Marlene Ricci, who was discovered singing with a group in a Las Vegas lounge. She is incredibly calm.

"Do you think this special will make you a star?" someone asks.

"You don't become a star because of the company you're in," she interrupts with a little laugh.

Las Vegas is a legend, a dream of overlush opulence that never would have come into being if it hadn't been for gambling and air-conditioning. A small city set in the middle of a vast desert; a fabled Oz. Outside it is 115 degrees. The swimming pool is filled with tourists on rubber rafts eagerly courting heat prostration. People are even playing tennis. Somehow the grass is bright green. But inside the casinos it is always night. There are no clocks, there is no guilt. The action goes on 24 hours a day. Tourists in shorts, who have probably been saving up all year for this vacation, stand glassy-eyed in front of the slot machines; without even waiting to see if they've hit the jackpot their fingers are already fumbling for another silver dollar to feed in. It's not the playing that counts, it's the losing.

My room is red and purple velvet, with marble statues. But some of the tourists who are gambling here sleep in their cars. It costs $25 for a ticket to one of the shows, and you don't even get dinner the way you used to in the old days. Dinner for two with wine and tips at The Palace Court can easily amount to $100. I see an empty plastic food container on the floor of the elevator.

An Arab father and son were here, and the hotel put a $100,000 limit on each of them per night for gambling money. In four days they lost $700,000. A woman put three dollars into the big slot machine and won $100,000. I wonder whether she had the sense to take it home.

At lunch, some of the production assistants are discussing the significance of gambling. Half say gambling represents power, half say it represents sex. None of them say it represents money.

The taping of a television special, like the filming of a movie, involves endless waiting. Lights and cameras have to be set up, then changed for different angles. The floor of the small casino that has been taken over today for a sketch is covered with cables. Downstairs, in the Circus Maximus, they are auditioning extras to play tourists, while the real tourists watch spellbound, a few coming forward to get autographs from Don Knotts.

"You'll see."

They make me an extra. A ham at heart, I am so excited. I will get $58 for pretending to play blackjack, wearing my own clothes. The comedy sketch will involve Don Knotts, sitting here patiently in pajamas and makeup, and Elaine Joyce, who is in the ladies' room putting on a wedding dress.

"People think of me as so skinny," Knotts says, "but every time I make a picture I put on 15 pounds. There's nothing to do but wait and eat."

I sit with the extras at a blackjack table and wait while the actors run through the sketch several times for camera angles. The "croupier" is reading a book under the table. At last...Action! We play blackjack with fake chips.

We play again and then wait for more technical adjustments. Wait and play, wait and play, for four hours. A man at my table has fallen asleep, and we have to poke him when the camera starts. A makeup man dusts shiny faces.

"We get $120 if we work the whole day," the woman next to me whispers, "because we have to change clothes. Did you bring your evening dress?"

When I say no, she offers to lend me one of hers. I decline. The chair is becoming very uncomfortable.

After the lunch break the extras come back in their evening clothes for a minute as background for Tom Jones and Marlene Ricci, and then for the rest of the afternoon they sit off-camera, the women like wilting flowers in their chiffon dresses, patiently stupified. Tom Jones sings sexily at his cue card, gazes sexily into the camera. Marlene Ricci looks appreciatively at where he will later be edited to be. Like most stars, Tom Jones is nothing special to look at until he begins performing, and then an intimate magnetism comes out. At six o'clock the exhausted extras come back for their minute in the background. Now I know why they don't use real tourists.

That night, I see Paul Anka's closing show at Caesar's Palace. He has already

The Nativity Scene

Behold the Glad Tidings Anew!

- HANDCARVED IN BETHLEHEM
- 12-PIECE SET

The Perfect Gift of Love for Christmas!

When I was asked to write this advertisement for The Nativity Scene—I was first joyful, and then suddenly felt a tremendous burden. How to say it—how to write it truthfully because of my own inner feelings of the preciousness of its divine meaning. Then, the words came to me—"Don't sell it. Simply tell it." May I share with you just how this "telling" came to be. Whenever I write about a product, I like to actually touch the item—feel it an receive an inner feeling as to its worth. I look at it. Study it. If there is a fragrance, I close my eyes and inhale "what it says." I try to "hear" what it says to me, and then write what it means to me. If there is truth for me, then perhaps the truth of it will reach others . . . just like me. And, so it was, and is, with this Christmas Story.

I placed the small figures as my heart directed. My first impression was that the pieces, all actually hand-carved in Bethlehem, seemed almost crude, almost childlike in appearance. And then, the thought came to me. Was not the Christmas Story just that . . . a crude beginning. A humble beginning. A simple story told in a simple way. Was it not written: "And a little child shall lead them." Then, the beauty of this set began to show through.

I liked very much the purity of the olive wood from which the figures are made. There seemed to be a subtle, faint fragrance, somehow familiar, yet elusively remote. Again came a thought. Was not, after all, the purity of the young maiden's heart the reason that God chose Mary to bring forth the Son of God into the world. Do not our own hearts have to become pure enough, simple enough, for Him to be born in our own hearts? Did she not question in her mind and heart until the Angel announced within, that "The Holy Spirit will come upon you . . . the Holy One born of you, shall be called the Son of God."

Did not Joseph question, until the Angel of the Lord appeared to him in a dream and say, "O, Joseph, son of David, do not be afraid to take your wife Mary, because he that is to be born of her is of the Holy Spirit. She will give birth to a son, and you will call his name Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins." Are not our sins, the fears, doubts, wrong thinking—all the things we all share in common and inwardly desire to overcome for true peace of mind. And, then, to grow into a life as He said: to "Love one another as I have loved you." A Resurrected Life. All different and yet all the same. All forgiving. All overcoming. All understanding. And out of complexity—simplicity of oneness.

Again the thought came. Is not each set carved by hand—symbolizing the Sameness, yet the Divine individuality of the Birth of a Loving Spirit that takes place within. The animals that attended His Birth. Do they not represent the lower humble beginnings within us that through His Eternal vigilance lead us into the light of pure love. The simple sweet birth that took place within a hidden cave. Does it not depict the Birth of His Spirit that takes place within our own "stable of consciousness."

And the three wise men with their gifts of gold, frankincense and myrrh. Are they not representative of the spiritual gifts of fulfillment given through the Christ Child.

And, the unnamed figure placed within the set of The Holy Scene. Does it not represent all who seek Him within—in every time, in every age.

Did not Jesus live by example. He healed. He spoke words of kindness. He loved. He simply said, "My Kingdom is not of this world." Did He not merely mean that the inner life of purification into perfection was the way. He did not say one has to be of a particular color, height, weight, sex or sect. His simple message was one of Peace. "The Kingdom of God is within you."

The more I "lived" with the Nativity Scene, the more it grew in meaning for me. The more it seemed to live. If my story rings true for you, then you, too, will treasure this truly inspiring 12-piece set. It's a magnificent miniature that bespeaks the Spiritual Story of The Holy Babe in Love, Wisdom and Understanding.

It makes sense that the figures, from 1½" to 4", reflect an almost childlike simplicity, yet boldly strong in detailed workmanship. This lovely representation of The Nativity Scene comes with its own Certificate of Authenticity that it is individually handmade in Bethlehem. What a fine way to give the Gift of Love to those whom you love. A gift that lives on . . . for it is enduring.

been filmed for the special. The enormous audience sits at long communal tables, although some lucky groups have been jammed into booths. Across from me sit two sweet-faced women with Southern accents and bifocals: they have even seen every show in Vegas and are having a wonderful time. Paul Anka comes running out and shakes what seems like every hand in the audience. "Isn't he cute!" my table partners say.

Now a screen comes down onstage and Anka shows home movies. He announces that his wife has just had their fifth child. Suddenly my table partner is emboldened. "What is it?" she calls out loudly. "What is it?"

"A girl," Anka says. "I have all girls."

The next night, I manage to get a seat for Tom Jones' opening. The show has been sold out since early morning for the first two nights. The Cinderella at the Palace production has spent all day scrounging the 20 tickets it needs for its technical people who have to see the show because the next night they are going to film it for the special. The real show will be, in effect, the dress rehearsal for the next real show.

"Taping a special like this is mainly a question of logistics," Tom McDermott, the executive producer, tells me. "We have to move all those people around. How do we get 20 seats? We have to bump people. And tomorrow night we have to take seats out so we can get our cameras in. So we then have to bump even more people."

There will be five cameras, one of which will be mobile. Monitors will be scattered around backstage so the production staff can see how everything will look on television. A maze of cables leads through the kitchen out to an alley, to a truck the size of a railroad boxcar, which houses the main technical equipment. Inside is a complete control room, five monitors and Bob Henry, the director. It is his disembodied voice I have heard during certain scenes, requesting retakes, but I had no idea it was coming from out in the desert.

Tom Jones runs onto the stage and begins his act, kissing several girls in the audience who run to the stage. A lot of touching, handshaking, kissing going on in these shows. Is this why so many people want to see them?

"Sinatra never touches anybody," McDermott says.

The next day there is taping of bits and pieces of the music that will appear in the special over the opening shots. A chic young woman and an amiable young man have been present at everything, even this. I find out they are from the network: she is Programming and he is Practices. What is that?

"I'm the censor," he says.

"What did you have to censor in this show?" I ask.

"Well, they mentioned Caesar's Palace 15 times and I made them cut it down to nine times."

That night is the taping of the Tom Jones show. Out of an entire show that is taped, perhaps only one or two songs will remain in the final TV special. I watch from backstage. On the monitor I see one of the shots of Tom Jones in front of the audience, then I look out and see him, his white shirt transparent with perspiration, a row of blinding spotlights above him, the vast audience invisible in the blackness out there beyond the stage. The scene suddenly takes on an eerie quality, almost frightening. How hard these performers work, and how alone they are, is not apparent when you are sitting in the audience, bathed in love, listening to squeals. The intimacy you feel is a magic trick, as mysterious as making a tiger disappear and return as a pussycat.

On television you will see this magic because you are backstage as well as in front. You don't hear the jokes that fall flat, or have to pay $25. And you don't have to participate in the endless technical drudgery, the interminable waiting, the "logistics."

On the other hand, you don't get kissed, either. FW

Observations

Big brother. Don't look now, but there are a lot more federal agencies interested in how you live and work today than at any time in the past. At last count, more than 80 agencies were regulating one or another sector of private activity in this country. The bureaucratic octopus is growing by leaps and bounds. Between 1950 and last year, for example, the number of federal, state, and local civilian employees jumped 140 percent. The federal payroll alone skyrocketed from $7 billion to a whopping $46.7 billion during that time. And if you add state and local agencies, the total civilian employee payroll costs the average family about $2,800 a year.

Heavy reading. Given the soaring birthrate for federal regulatory agencies, it's no surprise that the number of federal regulations has also spurted upward. Most of them are enshrined in the Code of Federal Regulation, an encyclopedic publication whose pages now number 73,000, and which sometimes adds as many as 5,000 new pages in a single year.

"If we can create three more agencies before we recess, it will be a new record!"

Socializing. A healthy portion of the government's increased interest in our lives is in the form of "social regulation," which, according to authors William Lilley III and James C. Miller III, "affects the conditions under which goods and services are produced and the physical characteristics of products that are manufactured." In their book The New "Social Regulation," Lilley and Miller note that federal controls in the past focused on economic regulation—"markets, rates, and the obligation to serve." Between 1970 and 1975, however, the number of major economic regulatory agencies in Washington increased by 25 percent, while social regulation agencies grew by 42 percent. And the pendulum is still swinging.

Net loss. The net effect of this massive outpouring of federal constraints is often confusion, conflict and regulatory excess. In the energy business, for example, conflicting and sometimes retroactive regulations have all but crippled the development of nuclear energy, because of government restrictions and delays, orders for new nuclear power plants dropped from 44 in 1973 to three in 1977. And power companies across the nation will apparently be required by government regulation to install the same costly pollution control equipment in all new coal-burning generating stations, even though plants burning low-sulfur western coal won't need the equipment.

Bottom line. The loss of jobs caused by unbuilt plants and slowed economic growth resulting from the morass of federal government restraints are visible effects of all this regulation. But there's an invisible effect as well, touching the lives of every American every day—the higher cost of products and service brought about by too much government regulation. Dr. Murray Weidenbaum of Washington University estimates this "hidden tax" costs every American family of four as much as $2,000 a year.

SELF-HELP PAYS OFF — ASK WAYNE DYER

His formula for Pulling Your Own Strings: Accept yourself, take risks, be "selfish," make choices, do something to make things happen.

By Pam Lambert

Who is Wayne Dyer, and why is he getting rich giving people advice he admits they most certainly could have thought of themselves?

The first part of the question is easy. If the name "Dyer" doesn't conjure up an image of a tanned, balding man with blue eyes smiling over a blond mustache, you obviously haven't glanced in a bookstore window during the past year. If you had, you couldn't help but notice Dyer's face beatifically beaming from the paperback edition of his self-help blockbuster, Your Erroneous Zones.

Erroneous Zones was number one on the New York Times best-seller list for more than a year. Now, two years after the original publication date, the paperback is still on the lists as Dyer's second book, Pulling Your Own Strings, climbs towards the top of the charts. More than 20 million people have read Erroneous Zones, and the book has been translated into 21 languages.

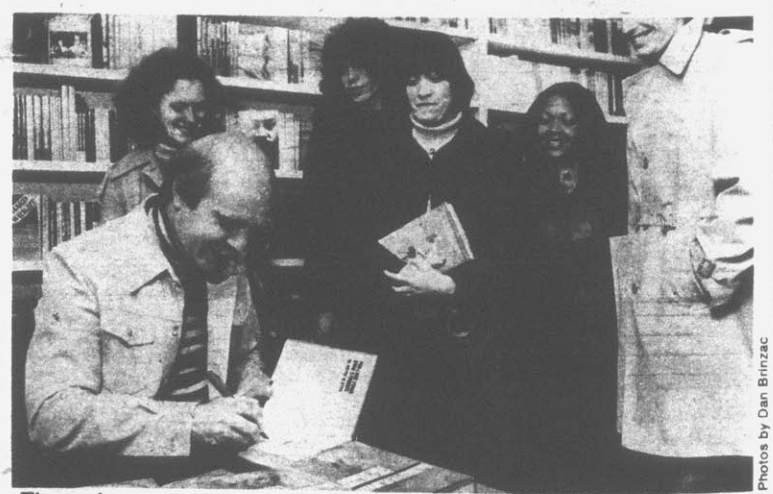

The book has made Dr. Dyer a millionaire. But just a little more than two years ago, he was an associate professor of counseling at St. John's University (N.Y.) with a book his publicist couldn't even get reviewed because of the glut of self-help works already on the market. Then, by pulling a few strings of their own, his publishers were finally able to get Dyer booked on a television talk show in his native Detroit, and his luck began to change. Word got around that Dyer was a dynamic talk-show guest, and his invitations — and book sales — began to snowball. He gave an incredible 1,500 interviews within a year.

At 38, Dyer has suffered through his last Northeastern winter and moved to a condominium in Ft. Lauderdale. Now, instead of counseling patients or teaching, Dyer is on the road 200 days a year, giving lectures in such far-flung places as Hawaii, Austria, Puerto Rico and Acapulco. "I'm no longer a private therapist," Dyer says; "I now do therapy on TV."

So much for the author. But what about his book's popularity? Well, for starters, Dyer insures the largest possible audience by addressing himself to problems that almost everyone has. With regard to his second book, Dyer observes, "Being manipulated is a problem no one escapes. Everywhere you go people are telling you what you can and can't do." Do you eat a steak in a restaurant that isn't cooked the way you like because you're afraid to speak up? Sit silently fuming when your doctor keeps you waiting for an hour? If so, you're a victim — and a potential reader of Dyer's Pulling Your Own Strings.

Whether Dyer's subject is how to avoid being victimized or, as in the first book, how to rid yourself of such "erroneous zones" as guilt, self-rejection and fear, his message is the same: you are in control of — and have the power to change — your own life. He is a Norman Vincent Peale without the religion. Says Diane O'Connor, the publicity director at his paperback publisher, "Most therapists and self-help books take you back over the past and just dig you in deeper. Wayne says, start from where you are now, accept yourself, and you can be anything you want to be. He gives people a strong sense of being in control."

During a recent visit to New York, Dyer discussed his work and its success while his second wife, Susan, an elfin woman with a smile to match her husband's, was about to go shopping. Dyer explained that Susan has remained based in Long Island because she prefers her job as a teacher and counselor of the deaf to

Dyer is his own best salesman.

"following me around and being the wife of a celebrity." Another person Dyer misses during his travels is his 11-year-old daughter, Tracy Lynn, who spends most of the year with her mother in Michigan.

How much does Dyer think people can learn from reading his books? After all, if self-help books produced as much change as they promise, people would need to read only one. Dyer says that he believes a book can be a catalyst for change, but adds, "I don't tell people just to think positively and wait for their problems to disappear. I tell them that they have to make choices and do something to make things happen for themselves."

A key message Dyer's books convey is how to be selfish — in a positive sense. "The word 'selfish' is interesting," Dyer says. "Most people equate it with being inconsiderate, but what it really means is being in favor of yourself. If you call that inconsiderate, you're actually choosing victim status."

Once you've decided to be your own person, the trick is getting others to treat you that way. Often this takes a process of re-education, according to Dyer, because family, friends and co-workers have gotten used to treating you the way you've taught them.

But, he says, you can change if you're sufficiently motivated. The first step is to learn how to say no — and not back down. In cases where words don't seem to work, Dyer emphasizes the importance of letting your behavior do the talking. "If your son is supposed to empty the garbage and doesn't, remind him once," Dyer says. "If he ignores you, give him a deadline. If he ignores the deadline, calmly empty the garbage on his bed. This will do more to teach him that you mean business than all the nagging that has got you nothing but upset."

By now, you may be thinking that the cure sounds worse than the complaint — a common response, according to Dyer. But, he says, "You must take risks. You can't go through life expecting to get new things for yourself by playing it safe."

Is this the message Dyer delivers in his lectures? "No," he says, "I try never to talk about the books. I don't believe in the hard sell. The most effective way of selling books is to present yourself as the kind of person others would like to be around and can identify with."

As an example of Dyer's ability to sell himself, Donna Gould, who worked with him for over a year promoting the book, tells the story of how she and the author were eating one day in a New York City coffee shop. "The waitress came over, and Wayne asked her how her day had been. When she said rotten, Wayne said, 'That's why you need this book' and pulled out a copy of Erroneous Zones. He made a sale right there."

To hear Gould and others talk, the secret of Wayne Dyer's success is — Wayne Dyer. He is — as he tries to be — his own best salesman. After playfully tossing a few salted peanuts at an interviewer to signal his restlessness, Dyer said, "I'm doing what I've always wanted to do — and I made it happen."

ROGER STAUBACH, EVERYBODY'S 'MR. CLEAN,' SPURS DALLAS TOWARD ANOTHER SUPER BOWL

Mickey Palmer/F.O.S.

By Mark Goodman

Those nimble games on the grid have appeared to be in the hands of two distinct and seemingly irreconcilable schools of quarterbacks. First, there are the Bad Actors, the gorgeous rakehells who will cavort on Saturday night and even Sunday morning, then go out on the field that afternoon with their red-rimmed eyes and rubber-band arms, breathe unholy fire into the faces of rival linemen and gun their secondaries into unconditional surrender. They bear legendary names — Bobby Layne, Sonny Jergensen, Joe Namath — and they have left large imprints on playing fields and bars the length and breadth of the National Football League.

Then there are the Divinity Students, the clean-cut, Jack Armstrong-type young men who go to bed at 11:00 p.m. on Saturday night with their own wives, attend Mass or chapel on Sunday morning, then go out on the field that afternoon with limpid eyes and rubber-band arms, breathe holy fire in the faces of rival linemen and smite the foe in the secondary in the name of the Lord. They are men like Bart Starr, Fran Tarkenton — and, of course, Roger Staubach, 36, the brilliant choreographer of the complex Dallas Cowboy offense, who sometimes seems as if he were God's personal ambassador to the National Football League.

On the field, Staubach is a competitor of messianic devotion. Between a year of special preparation for the Naval Academy and four years of active service (he is one of only two players in the NFL — the other being Rocky Bleier of the Pittsburgh Steelers — to have served in Vietnam), Roger Staubach defied the tradition of Academy grads by opting for a career in pro football. And he was to make his bid at the most demanding position for the most complicated team in the NFL. That was in 1969. Two years later, he achieved the highest rating ever for an NFL quarterback as he led the Cowboys to their first Super Bowl victory, 24-3, over Miami. Last season he carried a revamped Cowboy club (only 12 holdovers from the '71 team) to its decisive 27-10 triumph over Denver in Super Bowl XII at New Orleans. This year, Staubach, now one of the card-carrying Grand Old Men of the league, opened the 1978 season with four touchdown passes against Baltimore (38-0) on ABC-TV's first Monday night game, followed up the next Sunday with two more TD tosses as Dallas whipped the Giants 34-24.

Asked after the Baltimore game whether there were a better quarterback in the league, Coach Tom Landry replied, "I don't know where he is. Roger not only throws the ball well, he has great command of the job." It is that very command presence that makes Staubach stand out even among such vaunted team leaders as Oakland's Ken Stabler or Minnesota's Tarkenton. At 6'3", 200 lbs., Staubach is the ideal size for an NFL quarterback; not only does he have an arm like a 6" gun, he still has the speed and agility to run to distraction any opponent who spreads its defense too wide and too deep against him. And he has that certain stamp of a winner on him, difficult to define, perhaps, but unmistakable in those who possess it.

The curious thing is that Staubach is just reaching his peak at 36. One simple reason, he says, is that he didn't start until 27. "In the first place," he says from his pleasant family home in the Dallas suburb of Richardson, "four years in the Navy meant four years of not taking all that punishment. Believe me, that makes a difference. And I suppose the way I live is somewhat of a factor. I've gotten into the habit of working out year round — on the weights for upper body strength, playing a lot of basketball. Also, at 36 you can function very well in pro football — at least at my position. Quarterbacking is as much a matter of experience as anything. I still make mistakes, but they don't come as often as they used to."

There is no question, though, that Staubach's "square" life off the field contributes handsomely to his longevity. As the old roustabout Sonny Jurgensen once put it: "Roger Staubach can play till he's 40 because he doesn't know what a hangover feels like." Roger will have an occasional beer with the boys, and he is careful neither to criticize nor proselytize. "Everyone's off-the-field activities vary," he says. "All good quarterbacks are fierce competitors on the field. And few people understand how hard they have to work behind the scenes. Mental toughness is one thing all quarterbacks share, regardless of how they conduct their lives. That and concentration. I have got to concentrate on football nonstop during the season, give it first priority full time. Fortunately, my family understands."

That family consists of his wife, the former Marianne Hoobler, who Roger has known since the first grade in Cincinnati, and five splendid children (four girls and a boy, ages 12 to 1). Roger dotes on them with the kind of lavish affection a carefully disciplined man can only show at home. When I flew with the Cowboys from their training camp near Los Angeles back to Dallas last summer, the most conspicious figure in the Dallas airport was Roger Staubach with one child perched on his shoulders and a cluster of young Staubachs around him, like a sketch for a Dickens' novel.

Off-season, Staubach is a successful real-estate developer in Dallas. But religion and his social work come first. He works tirelessly for the Paul Anderson Youth Home for troubled juveniles founded by his friend, former Olympic weightlifter Paul Anderson; he is also active for the American Diabetes Association and, especially, in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

Above all, he is a devout Catholic who once chided fellow midshipmen at Annapolis for cutting up in chapel and once answered a congratulatory comment after a game with, "It won't help me get to heaven any faster, will it?" Now, Staubach says, "I feel very comfortable with my religion, and I know I couldn't be happy without it, but I'm not about to go around telling everyone to believe as I do, to pray as I do. It's simplistic, maybe, but I believe in being good. It makes other people feel good, and I feel good when they do."

In fact, deeply religious people can often make the workday sinner feel a bit uncomfortable, but that is not the Staubach style. His religious convictions were bred into him early, and he carries them as effortlessly as his lightweight quarterback's shoulder pads. The only son of a Cincinnati salesman, he grew up studious, devout, well-mannered to a fault. At Purcell High, a big-league Catholic high school that also produced the late Tyrone Power, Roger won nine letters and was president of the student council. College scouts plied him with fancy offers, but he was attracted by the dedication to country inherent in the Annapolis program and applied for an appointment. He had to spend a year at New Mexico Military Academy to prepare himself for the Academy, but he has never regretted the decision.

During his sophomore year he ran and passed Annapolis — after a sleepless night — to a 34-14 victory over West Point. The following year he became only the third college junior in history to win the Heisman Trophy as the outstanding college football player in the country (there has since been a fourth — Archie Griffin of Ohio State and currently with the Cincinnai Bengals). It was inevitable that the Middies began calling Staubach "Jolly" Roger, a nickname he reinforced with his dormitory high jinks.

His football career was considered at an end when he went on active duty; Academy stars have a habit of fading away after a four-year hitch. But the Cowboys, the most astute judges of talent in pro football, at least thought enough of Staubach to draft him on the tenth round that year, and hope for the future. "The four years seemed like an eternity," he recalls, "but I stayed in shape and played at Pensacola. Then, the year before I got out, I took two-weeks' leave to go to the Cowboy camp and did well." Well enough, anyway, to convince Tom Landry and his staff that Staubach could sail smoothly in the pros.

The players themselves needed a bit more convincing. Staubach's religious activities and ramrod Annapolis bearing made more than a few rough-and-tumble ballplayers a trifle chary. So Lee Roy Jordan, the linebacker and team leader, and a few other well-chosen rakehells took Roger out for beers one night and decided they could live with him. For his part, Staubach has, increasingly over the years, shown flashes of wit and a tendency to reject his goody-two-football-shoes image when it seemed to close in on him too stringently.

To be sure, he appeared at the 1972 Campus Crusade for Christ with Billy Graham. But he has demonstrated another side to his personality. He admits, to this day, that he would prefer to call his own plays rather than have them shuttled in by Tom Landry. So, when he accepted the Columbus (Ohio) Touchdown Club's Player of the Year Award a few seasons back, he told the audience "I don't know what to say. I'm waiting for Coach Landry to send somebody in with a statement." He even grew a beard once and, when asked why he shaved it off replied: "I had to. Kids were coming up and asking if I was a kicker." Then there was the famous on-camera interview with Phyllis George when Roger, piqued finally by the ongoing contrast between his image and Joe Namath's, startled Phyllis and everyone else by saying, "I like sex as well as Joe Namath. I just like it with one person — my wife."

Now Roger has settled comfortably into the role of the veteran leader of a young, aggressive team. "Football is more of a team sport and team effort than any other, and good people can make you look good. Frankly, I'd like the chance to compete with the other quarterbacks in the league on an equal footing, like match-racing, but under the circumstances that's impossible."

And his future? Even given the violence and volatility of NFL football, it looks bright. Staubach, at 36, really does look like a quarterback of 31 on the field. "At this stage," he says, "I'm just playing year to year. The new season is awfully long (16 games), and I'll have to see how I feel at the end of each year. Medically, it does get harder to heal each year. Still, all things being equal, I think I can play a few more seasons."

Certainly his teammates hope he can; no one, not even the Cowboys, can afford to lose a team leader (and a meal ticket) like "Jolly" Roger. Says the team's other leader, giant defensive end Harvey Martin, "Whatever else I get out of professional football, I will be able to say that I had the pleasure of knowing Roger Staubach." FW

Can your child read these words?

Your child will learn how to read these and more than 300 other words after working with the very first record of The Sound Way to Easy Reading.

Try out this Phonics Course FREE FOR TWO WEEKS with your child in your own home — without risking a penny. Mail the coupon below.

If your child is a poor reader, if he has not been able to keep up with his class in school—here is a way that you can help him. Many parents have seen their poor readers gain up to a full year's grade in reading skill in just six weeks with the Sound Way to Easy Reading.

As soon as your child starts playing the records and using the charts of The Sound Way to Easy Reading you will know why it works so well. It takes the mystery out of learning to read because it teaches your child by the phonics method (the method by which most parents learned to read years ago).

Teaches with records

With this course your child discovers that letters have sounds. When he starts sounding out the letters he hears himself saying the word. He's reading!

The records drill him in the sounds of the 26 letters of the alphabet and their blends. By the time he completes the first record (about two weeks for the average child) he can read 300 words. After finishing all four records he has been taught 123 basic phonics sounds.

Once he knows these sounds he can read up to 85% of the words in the English language. It works for children of all ages—in the earliest grades and even in high school. Its records tell your child exactly what to do, so he can teach himself without any help from you.

Tested and Proved

In a pilot study by university psychologists, children gained up to a full year's grade in oral reading skill after only 30 lessons with The Sound Way to Easy Reading.

A semester-long study involving 214 pupils in four Chicago schools proved that the classes given The Sound Way to Easy Reading showed marked improvement in reading and spelling over the control groups.

Don't think it's all your child's fault if he hasn't learned to read. Many of our brightest children are not able to grasp some of the current methods taught in most schools today. Many educators insist that at least 40% of our children must have formal training in phonics—that they will never master reading without it!

These unbreakable records and self-quizzing cards can help your child gain a full year's grade in reading in just a few weeks.

Help Your Child Now

So don't wait for your poor reader to reach high school before coming to his aid. By starting your child on The Sound Way to Easy Reading now, you can change his entire attitude toward school—turn his sense of failure into the joy of success. Try it free for two weeks. THE LOVE CANAL, A LANDFILL OF HELL, THAT'S A CESSPOOL OF DEATH AND DISEASE.

By David Pollak and Mike Brown

For Karen Schroeder, the Love Canal was a living nightmare. It was a cruel irony that it was called Love, and it had long ceased to be a canal.

"I just wanted to get out, to get away from that dreadful place," Karen says. And she has. New York State has given her an apartment, but the nightmare lingers. "I want to get so far away that I'll never hear of that place again."

"That place" was a cesspool of pungent rainwater tainted blue and beige. The nightmare: her daughter suffered from a long list of serious birth defects. Her parents, three doors away, were breathing toxic fumes one scientist calculated contained seven compounds at levels thousands of times above acceptable government standards.

"It was like living in hell," Karen says. "We had no backyard. A pool just popped out of the ground. The trees died. We had a redwood fence in the back, and the posts were eaten away by chemicals."

Love Canal is actually an abandoned landfill in the southeastern section of the City of Niagara Falls, near the Niagara River some seven miles upstream from The Falls.

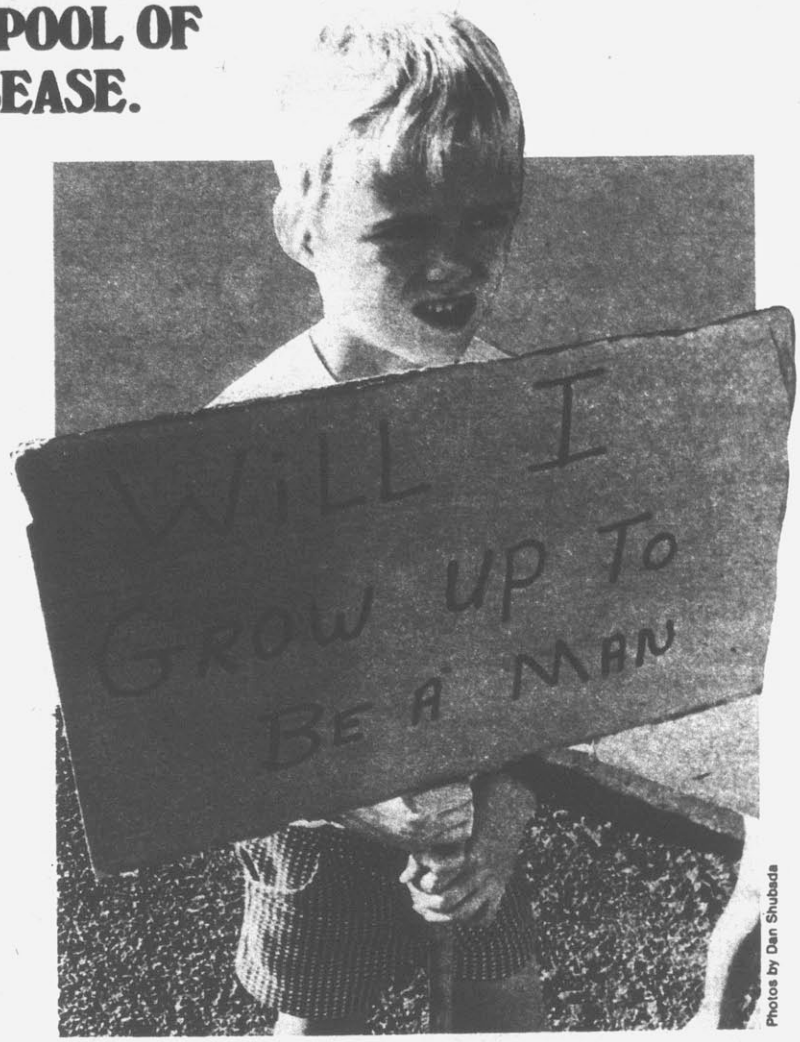

The Schroeders, one of some 230 families who bought homes adjacent to or immediately across the street from the landfill site, had to cope with the more than 80 toxic substances — 11 suspected as carcinogens — that had begun to seep out of the dump, onto their property and into their lives.

Karen and her husband Timothy were most concerned with their 9-year-old daughter, Sheri. The child had been born with a cleft palate, a double row of bottom teeth, a deformed exterior ear, irregular heartbeat, speech impairment, slight retardation and an enlarged liver. Timothy and Karen never attributed the problems to the landfill until scientists informed them that chemicals buried behind their backyard could cause a wide range of illnesses.

A state "medical detective" concluded after a preliminary survey that there was a high rate of birth defects among neighborhood children as well as a high incidence of liver ailments and miscarriages among their parents.

Pregnant women like Linda Fortino, a dark-haired mother of two, were among the first to be advised to leave the area by state officials. "I'm seven-months pregnant and three months ago I began to bleed," Linda says.

Other residents reported what they considered high rates of hearing loss, hair loss, skin disorders, heart problems and respiratory ailments.

Rosalee Janese remembers, while spending a warm day in 1976 cleaning out her swimming pool, black sludge oozing from the drain. In sopping it up, the ooze came in contact with her hands and feet. Soon, pimples and sores appeared all over her body; the diagnosis: lupus — a disease characterized by skin lesions.

As if health worries weren't enough, life savings may be tied up in now-worthless property. And although families closest to Love Canal are to receive assistance — currently a state task force is concluding the purchase of more than 200 homes — residents nearby aren't sure how they will be treated.

Roots of the problem go back nearly a century when a local entrepreneur, William Love, attempted to excavate a canal from the upper section of the Niagara River to Lake Ontario but soon abandoned it for financial reasons. For many decades, children swam in the canal during the summers and skated during the winters.

In 1953 the site was sold for $1 to the local board of education with a deed provision disclaiming responsibility for future problems the wastes might create. But it was not until the 1970's that the problems became acute.

City Hall records show that as early as 1964 officials knew of problems — mostly strong industrial smells — connected with the dump, but no one seemed to realize how serious the situation was.

State Health Commissioner Robert Whalen made his first of many trips to the Love Canal in April 1978, and within days ordered the Niagara County health commissioner to have the worst parts of the canal capped with clay, surface leach removed and a fence built around it.

Two months later Whalen ordered a state medical team to scour the area for canal-related health problems. Within weeks, the team reported an extremely high rate of miscarriages, birth deformities and liver problems.

On August 2, 1978, Whalen urged the relocation of pregnant women and young children. That not all families were simply evacuated, plus the idea of splitting up families, triggered a storm of protest.

The protest had an impact. Gov. Hugh Carey, U.S. Rep. John LaFalce and U.S. Sens. Jacob Javits and Daniel Patrick Moynihan, succeeded in arranging for both State and Federal Governments to send in aid for moving families most affected by the Love Canal seepage.

The rapid-fire pace soon bogged down. Initial plans to start remedial work, channeling the seeping chemicals through drainage tiles, faced delay after delay as residents had difficulty finding suitable housing elsewhere, and those remaining on streets in the general canal area complained that their safety was not being considered in the plan.

Before long, it became clear government leaders could not treat the Love Canal as an isolated problem. Could the Love Canal merely be the first in a series of catastrophic hangovers from an era of no regulations?

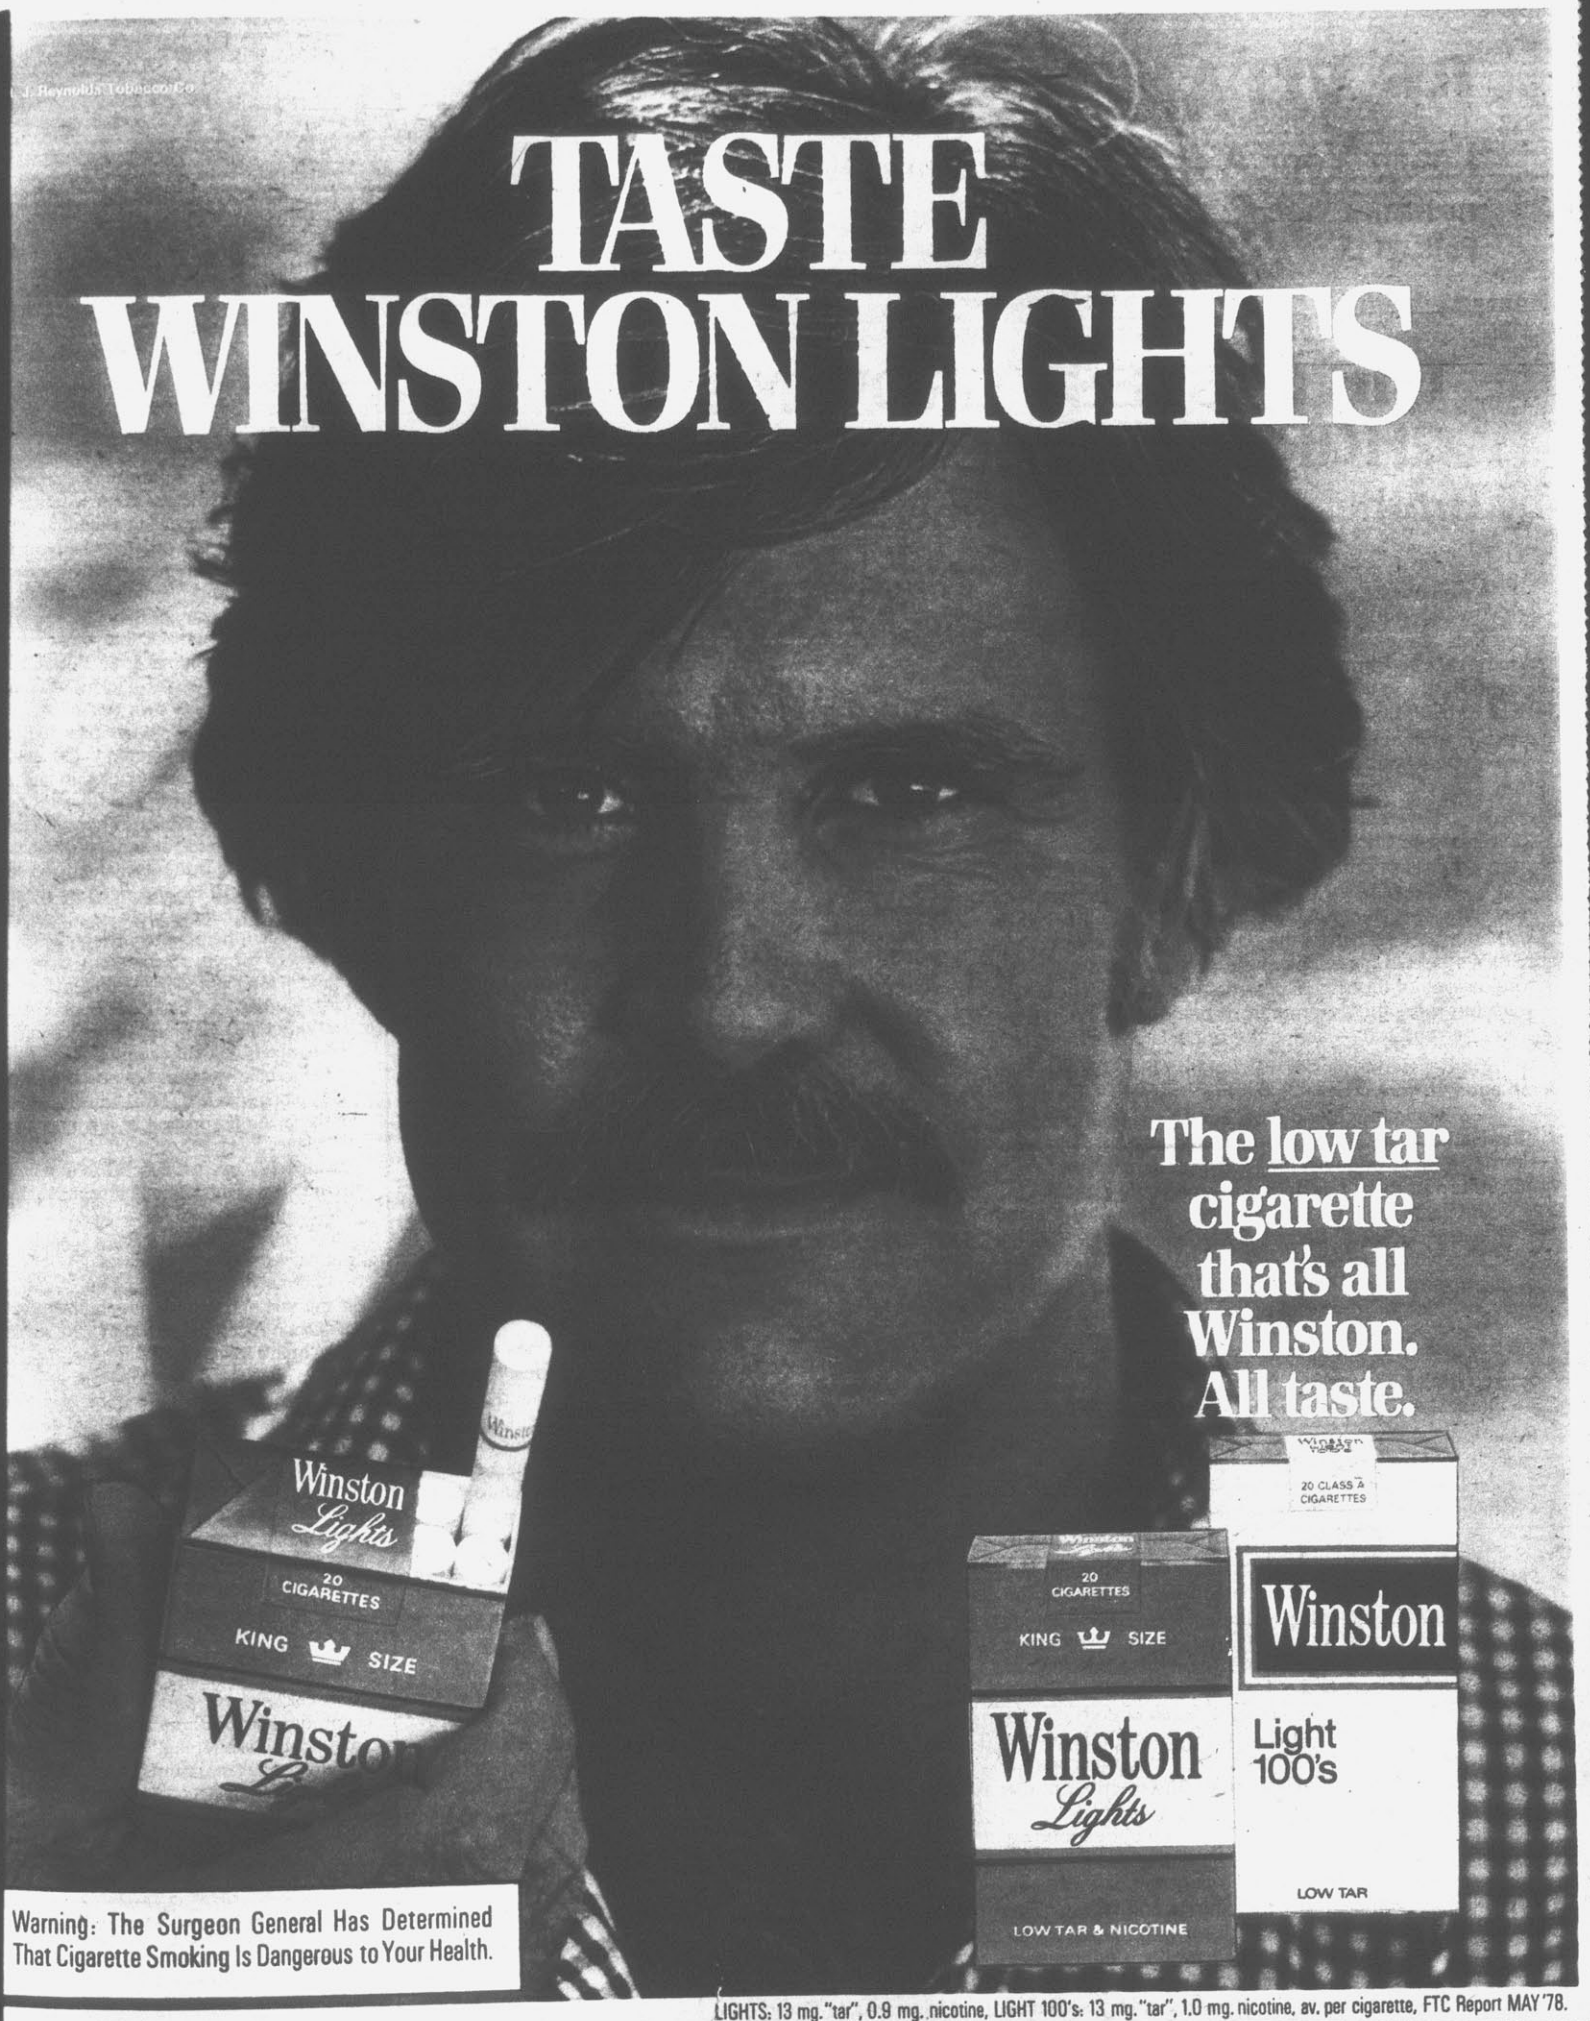

The Niagara Falls situation has focused worldwide attention on land pollution, and reporters from news organizations based as far away as Moscow and London have gone to the community to observe the situation. What the journalists have seen are basements with strange sludge seeping through cinderblock walls and trees near the site with leaves that have blackened.

But mostly they see the worried, depressed people who have had to contend with the trauma of past industrial mistakes and, they ask, how many more Love Canals and their tragedies will develop before we finally come to grips with the Frankenstein monster the new technology has created to terrorize us and degrade our quality of life? FW

BE VITAMIN SMART

Learn Your A.B.C.'s...D.E. and K

By Irwin J. Polk, M.D.

The alphabet of vitamins falls into two groups, those that dissolve in fats and those that do not. The fat-soluble vitamins are vitamins A, E, D and K; the water-soluble ones are B's and C. Most vitamins come directly from foods, so a well-balanced diet should not require the use of added vitamins in the form of pills. But since many people do not eat a well-balanced diet containing all the proper foods in adequate amounts, many doctors recommend vitamin supplements. Since vitamins are important for growth, many obstetricians recommend vitamin tablets for pregnant women, as do pediatricians for growing children.

A vitamin is an organic chemical that is needed in small amounts in the body to promote growth and maintain life. Minerals are not vitamins because they are not organic chemicals. A chemical that is a vitamin for one species of animal may not be for another. For example, most forms of animal life manufacture their own vitamin C. Humans, monkeys and guinea pigs do not. For them, foods rich in vitamin C are essential.

Vitamins have many uses in the body. They are required for good health, normal growth and reproduction. They play a role in turning food into energy, in maintaining healthy tissues and normal functioning of both digestive tract and nervous system. In most cases, vitamins work as part of an enzyme system helping to metabolize food for energy or growth. Sometimes vitamins are found in food in a slightly different form from the way they can be used. Such chemicals are called pro-vitamins; those changed by the body into useful vitamins.

Fat-soluble vitamins are absorbed into the body along with fats. Thus any disease which prevents the absorption of fats may cause a deficiency of the fat-soluble vitamins. Vitamin A was the first fat-soluble vitamin found. It was first noted in animal fat, but later found in vegetables — yellow and green leafy ones. Vitamin A is needed for normal vision, especially at night. It helps in the normal development of the surface cells of the skin and mucus membranes. So lack of vitamin A can cause rough, dry, scaly skin and chronic infection of the nose, throat and sinuses, loss of senses of taste and smell, chronic or recurring infections of the lungs with coughing. In addition, it may disturb the mucus membranes of the digestive tract, causing diarrhea . In children, a lack of vitamin A can affect bone growth.

Vitamin D is the other important fat-soluble vitamin. It is also found in animal-fat foods, but in very small amounts. There are several D pro-vitamins, chemicals found in foods which may be changed into vitamin D by the body. This change takes place in the skin when it is exposed to sunlight.

Vitamin D is needed for the body to absorb calcium and phosphorous. Since calcium hardens the bones, lack of vitamin D may cause softening of the bones. In children, the disease is called rickets; in adults, osteomalacia. However, in adults it does not seem to be directly related to a vitamin-D deficiency. Vitamins E and K are also fat-soluble. Both are readily available in

by Brother Keith E. L'Hommedieu D.D.

It's quite safe to say that of all the organized religious sects on the current scene, one church in particular stands above all in its unique approach to religion. The Universal Life Church is the only organized church in the world with no traditional religious doctrine. In the words of Kirby J. Hensley, founder, "The ULC only believes in what is right, and that all people have the right to determine what beliefs are right for them, as long as they do not interfere with the rights of others."

Reverend Hensley is the leader of the worldwide Universal Life Church with a membership now exceeding 7 million ordained ministers of all religious beliefs. Reverend Hensley started the church in his garage by ordaining ministers for $1.00 by mail. During the 1960's, he traveled all across the country appearing at college rallies held in his honor where he would perform mass ordinations of thousands of people at a time. These new ministers were then exempt from being inducted into the armed forces during the undeclared Vietnam war.

In 1966 Reverend Hensley was fighting the establishment on another front. The I.R.S. tried to claim the ULC wasn't a legal church and proceeded to impound the ten thousand dollars in the church bank account. The feisty Hensley filed suit against the I.R.S. in federal district court for return of the funds and to permanently establish the ULC as a legal tax exempt entity. On March 1, 1974 Judge James F. Battin ruled against the I.R.S. in his decision which stated, "Neither this court or any branch of this government will consider the merits or fallacies of a religion. Nor will the court praise or condemn a religion. Were the court to do so, it would impinge upon the guarantees of the First Amendment." The judge then ordered the I.R.S. to return the impounded money and to grant the Universal Life Church its tax exempt status.

Reverend Hensley has stated that he believes a church is people and not just a fancy building. He also believes in total freedom and equality for all people. The ULC will ordain anyone without regard to religious beliefs, race, nationality, sex or age.

The ULC's success formula is both effective and unquestionably legal. After a person has become an ordained minister, he or she can join with two other people and form their own Universal Life Church. These three people then make up the board of directors consisting of a Pastor, a Secretary and a Treasurer. The ULC will then grant the group the use of its legal church charter complete with both federal and state tax exempt numbers. The newly formed church may then open a bank account in the church's name. Any member of the church can legally donate up to 50% of his or her outside income to the church and take a corresponding tax deduction. The church in turn can pay the complete housing cost of its minister including rent or mortgage payment, insurance, taxes, furnishings and repairs. The church can also provide the minister with full use of an automobile as well as pay for travel and educational expenses. None of these expenses are reported as income to the I.R.S. Recently a whole town in Hardenburg, New York became Universal Life ministers and turned their homes into religious retreats and monasteries thereby relieving themselves of property taxes, at least until the state tries to figure out what to do.

Churches enjoy certain other tax benefits over the common man on the street. For instance, a church can legally buy and sell real estate or stocks and bonds completely tax free. It can receive tax free income from bank deposits or mortgages. Many churches own large publishing, recording, or other related businesses like hospitals, clinics and schools without paying any income tax.

A church can sponsor any kind of fund raising event such as a concert, play or even bingo. Churches are also exempt from paying inheritance taxes. When the pastor of the church dies, the board of directors simply appoints a new pastor and the church goes on.

Reverend Hensley has stated that he personally doesn't believe in the tax exempt status of churches. However, if the government is going to give a free ride to Billy Graham and the Pope, then why not let everybody participate in these blessings. Furthermore, he backs up his words by offering to defend in court any of his churches against an attack by a government agency.

Since the church was founded in 1962, it has attracted members who are movie and TV personalities, businessmen, government officials, lawyers, and doctors as well as all types of regular working people. During the last 15 years the Universal Life Church has blossomed into a full blown grass roots populace movement. Reverend Hensley is ordaining ten thousand ministers a week and predicts that the church will have over 20,000,000 members by the 1980's. In addition, requests for interviews and TV appearances continue to pour in.

Anyone who is a member of the ULC will tell you that the ULC is destined to change the world. By unifying mankind into a brotherhood of freedom orientated individuals, each respecting the other's right to live life as they see fit, the Universal Life Church hopes to put an end to all wars. Reverend Hensley admits that this is a pretty monumental task to accomplish, but he also points out that he is already well on the way to reaching his goal. Reverend Hensley invites anyone wishing to become a ULC minister to send a $5.00 tax deductible donation for the cause, to the Universal Life Church Monastery, P.O. Box 669 (FWE), Aptos, CA., 95003.

most diets, so deficiency is not a problem. Vitamin K is needed for blood-clotting. The purpose of vitamin E is less clear, but it seems to protect cells against destruction, perhaps by preventing oxidation of essential body chemicals. Vitamin E is plentiful in wheat germ, and along with vitamin K, in vegetable oils, as well as green leafy vegetables.

Fat-soluble vitamins can be overused. Since they are stored in the body, taking too many fat-soluble vitamins may cause trouble. An overdose of vitamin A can bring on loss of appetite, unusual skin color, hair loss, skin itch, headache and bone pain. As for vitamin D, it can bring on loss of appetite, nausea, weight loss, constipation and increase in frequency of urination in adults. In infants, vitamin-D poisoning can dangerously increase the amount of calcium in their blood. When it comes to vitamin K, an overdose is less likely and for vitamin E, the effects are unknown so far.

The B-vitamins and vitamin C are water soluble. B-vitamins are usually grouped together because they have the same sources and related functions. They are all found in liver and other organ meats, in grains, green leafy vegetables, beans and peanuts. Yeast is a very good source of B-vitamins. Because a diet lacking in one of these chemicals is usually poor in the others, it is unusual to find symptoms pinpointing the deficiency of just one of the B-vitamins. Alcoholics are prone to multiple B-vitamin deficiencies since their intake of alcohol, a carbohydrate, supplies no B-vitamins at all.

B-vitamin deficiencies can plague the nervous system. Anything can go wrong, beginning with headaches, burning eyes, tiredness, muscle weakness and ending with partial paralysis and psychosis. Relief of such problems after treatment with B-vitamins has been so successful in patients lacking them that a whole school of medical care has developed around "megavitamin therapy." Mega dosages of vitamins are being used to treat mental and emotional problems.

Vitamin C, plentiful in citrus fruits, has been the center of argument among doctors for a decade. Some feel that large doses of vitamin C, as much as 1,000 milligrams a day, is helpful in preventing colds. Other doctors see no proof of this. But large doses of vitamin C are rarely harmful and seem to have caught on with the general public.

Overall, vitamins taken in modest doses are safe. They are certainly helpful to people who lack them. They may even be useful for those who don't. FW

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

Do highly feminine women tend to be overly heavy? Is intelligence a factor in weight problems?

WHY SO MANY PEOPLE ARE OVERWEIGHT

Margie Frem

TRUE OR FALSE

1. There are special reasons why many chronically overweight people fail repeatedly to lose unwanted pounds.

2. Whether you have trouble with your weight or not is likely to depend on whether you're inner-directed (self-motivated) or outer-directed (influenced more by others and what you see or hear).

3. The higher your IQ the less trouble you're likely to have in maintaining a desirable weight.

4. Women who are lacking in femininity have the biggest weight problems.

5. People who are appreciably overweight react quite differently to anxiety than persons of proper weight.

ANSWERS

1. True. A University of Texas study concludes that people with weight problems simply think differently from others and don't like change. Chronically overweight subjects, compared to those of normal weight, "were found to be much more resistant to changing a strongly held attitude when confronted with a persuasive argument against their position...and that situations which require abandoning established behavior and developing new responses put heavyweight subjects at a particular disadvantage."

2. True. University of Toronto (Canada) studies reveal that the behavior of the excessively overweight is externally controlled to a much greater extent than is the case with normal-weight persons. That they are more readily influenced by things outside themselves — as opposed to motivations springing from within — is further evidenced by studies at Brigham Young University, which show overweight subjects score higher on a scale of hypnotic susceptibility (suggestion). That is why the sight of someone consuming a rich dessert exerts more influence on their behavior than their resolve not to be tempted by it.

3. True. A study of 554 men and women conducted at Czechoslovakia's Endocrinological Institute, where ability to cope with weight problems was compared with scores on standard intelligence tests, found that people who did well on IQ tests tended to be much more successful in coping with their weight problem — especially the women.

4. False. The reverse has been found true. A Harvard Medical School study cites findings that women who have the greatest difficulty with weight problems average consistently higher femininity scores on personality tests. Additionally, both women and men who are overweight tend to be "passive and lack aggressiveness and self-assertiveness."

5. True. A University of Minnesota study evaluating comprehensive research concludes that the appetite of normal-weight persons tends to diminish under conditions of high anxiety. The opposite is true of people who are considerably overweight. It was found that the latter "ate significantly more food under high-anxiety than under low-anxiety conditions, whereas normal-weight subjects ate more in a low-anxiety condition." FW

JOBMANSHIP

Don't Put Down Your Co-workers To Build Yourself Up

If he could listen to himself in action, he might realize that much of his conversation consists of making other people feel small. This would probably astonish Joe because he never thinks about how others feel about themselves. Joe's only concern is how he looks to them. To make himself appear important, he's fallen into some annoying habits. If you come to him with a new idea, he dismisses it as insignificant or unworkable while he launches into an account of a great idea he's developed. He interrupts constantly. After he's prevented you from making your point clear, he hammers home his own point. Then he insults your intelligence by frequently asking you, "Do you get it?"

Another of his favorite ploys is keeping you waiting while he finishes something "important" or cutting you off during interoffice phone calls with, "Gotta go. Lots to do," implying that you don't.

Management consultant Gerald Suste sums up the situation: "Though Joe makes a habit of the 'I'm big, you're little' attitude, most people slip into it accidentally from time to time. Keeping Joe in mind when we're tempted to inflate our job image can be a valuable help in maintaining pleasant relations with co-workers."

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

YARD ARM

Some have a garden,
But we have a yard.
My muscles should harden,
The work is so hard.

Some have a gardener,
Comes once a week,
But I am our yardener,
Somewhat antique.

This, friends, a cinch is,
And what I'd prefer:
If thirty-six inches
My yard only were.

—Richard Armour

The two friends were kaffeeklatsching and one asked the other idly, "I thought your son was going to be a tree surgeon. What made him change his mind?"

"Well," replied the other, finishing a lukewarm sip, "he wanted to, but he can't stand the sight of sap." —Rose Sands

Have you noticed how few monarchies there are left in the world? For those of you who don't remember, they were Mom-and-Pop governments. —Robert Orben

OLD SAYINGS NEVER DIE

My brother was married to a blonde named Kate and a brunette named Edith — at the same time. After he was found guilty of bigamy, the judge remarked sternly, "You can't have your Kate and Edith, too." —Al Batt

WHAT IN THE WORLD

Restaurant Roulette

Don't eat up everything you read on restaurant menus. District of Columbia Environmental Health Administration investigators who studied 141 area restaurants found that all of the shrimp advertised on menus as fresh had actually been frozen, for example. And more than 70% of the fruit salads billed as fresh had commercially packed and preserved ingredients. Three-quarters of the restaurants served "baked" ham that wasn't baked, and the same percentage called domestic blue cheese "Roquefort." More than half of the restaurants upgraded ground or chopped beef on their menus.

If you're in doubt about the food in a particular dish, ask your waiter before ordering. If you think an inferior product has been substituted, talk to the manager or report it to your local agency responsible for overseeing restaurant operations.

Women Beware

Women may be their own worst competition reluctantly concludes one female researcher. After conducting experiments on the cooperation-competition levels of men and women, Dr. Margaret Munro, a Univ. of Fla. researcher, says that competition between women was more intense than it was between the two sexes. And she says that her study helps to explain the well-publicized bickering among factions of the women's movement.

Munro says that the "personally disappointing" results of her research probably stem from the different ways boys and girls are raised.

"The conditioning process that taught us to compete with other women has screwed us up," she adds.

Keri Keating

Ant-icipation

Dr. Burton Weiss spends his days trying to communicate with ants. He is not crazy. Dr. Weiss, an assoc. prof. of psychology at Philadelphia's Drexel Univ., who admits to being ant-ranced since childhood, says that he is studying the sounds ants make in the hope of understanding their language system — and eventually preventing costly crop destruction by communicating with the insects.

Weiss is not working with your ordinary picnic-variety pest but with a colony of ants especially imported from Panama. The ants communicate, Weiss says, by making high-pitched sounds in much the same way as crickets do to signal danger and other situations. Says Weiss of his colony, which now boasts over a million inhabitants, "Most people think studying ants is just a waste of time, that they're just a nuisance. But once they come here and look at the colony they're fascinated; it's a little city with an alien life form."

When A Child Needs Psychological Help

How can you tell whether a child needs psychological help? It's not a simple question, but there are certain warning signs parents can look for, suggests Dr. Ellen V. Piers, Director of Penn State's Psychology Clinic.

"If your child appears to have a mental or emotional problem, take him first to your pediatrician," says Dr. Piers, who observes that many apparent behavior problems have physical causes. For instance, a child who is frequently disobedient may simply not be hearing well.

Dr. Piers cautions parents not to jump to conclusions as many behavioral problems in young children are temporary. But she says that there are indications that may signal a more serious problem. These signs are problems the child doesn't outgrow: behavior that is extreme, sudden changes in behavior and the existence of several worrisome behavioral traits.

Children who are aggressive and disruptive are most likely to be referred for help than ultraquiet children who may be bottling up their problems, says Dr. Piers. She cautions that extremely active or passive behavior may not really be a problem but simply a reflection of the child's temperament. "The key question," cautions Dr. Piers, "is whether the child is seemingly happy."

Quick Takes

Overweight Americans are wasting tremendous amounts of precious energy concludes a study reported in Science magazine. Researchers says that the energy required to supply the extra food calories to maintain the 2.3 billion pounds of excess avoirdupois the American public is carrying around is enough to run 900,000 average U.S. autos for a year — or to supply the annual residential electricial demands of Boston, Chicago, San Francisco and Washington, D.C. Who says shaping up doesn't pay?

What's the difference between teachers in top schools and their colleagues in less illustrious insitutions? Not surprisingly, teachers in higher-achieving schools show a better mastery of their subject and seem better able to anticipate potential problems reports a study by the Del. Dept. of Public Instruction. But the study also reveals that the teachers in better schools spend more time teaching — 80% of their time compared to 68% for teachers in the other schools. Teachers in the lower-achieving schools says that almost ⅓ of their day is eaten up by managerial duties.

Americans are running an astronomical amount each year — equivalent to 90 times the distance to the sun and back Science Digest magazine finds. For more down-to-earth types, that translates to 17 billion miles a year.
