Middle East Peace Talks Are Resumed

By The Associated Press

Face-to-face Israeli-Egyptian peace talks have resumed in Washington after a lapse of more than a week and an Israeli spokesman says there is "no crisis" in the negotiations.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin conferred with his Cabinet in Jerusalem today about the Washington talks, and the five-hour meeting ended with a decision to form two Cabinet committees to study economic questions and conflicting Egyptian and Israeli claims for compensation for oil extracted from the Sinai Peninsula during Israel's 11-year occupation.

Direct negotiations resumed Sunday night with a two-hour session between the heads of the two delegations at a downtown Washington hotel. Diplomatic sources in Washington described the meeting as "businesslike," but there was no immediate word on whether any headway was made toward resolving a treaty text.

Again acting as middleman, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance summoned the Israeli delegation to the State Department today for further talks. American and Israeli legal experts also met this morning to discuss treaty language.

In the session Sunday, Lt. Gen. Kamal Hassan Ali, the Egyptian defense minister, and Boutros Ghali, the acting foreign minister, called on Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Defense Minister Ezer Weizman in their suite. Israeli officials said the Egyptians requested the meeting.

In Jerusalem, Israeli Cabinet Secretary Arie Naor said of the talks: "As far as I understand there is no crisis at all. The negotiations go on and all of us are hopeful."

The talks had seemed to be in limbo over the weekend as the State Department analyzed the positions of the two sides. Vance met separately with both delegations Saturday.

Face-to-face negotiations were suspended 10 days ago after the delegations agreed tentatively on a U.S.-sponsored draft treaty. Both sides later returned with what U.S. sources said were proposals for "far-reaching changes" in the draft.

Further negotiations were then delayed last week because of a U.S.-Israeli dispute over Israel's declaration that it intends to expand Israeli settlements in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River.

Driver Barely Escaped

ATTACKED BY BULLDOZER — Dinana Huddleston, 24, of Oklahoma City, escaped serious injury when a driverless runaway bulldozer roared from a darkened field onto a northwest Oklahoma City street, crushing the woman's auto. The driver told police the incident occurred about 7:30 p.m. Sunday when one of two bulldozers, both apparently set in motion by vandals at a nearby construction site, headed for her car. The second bulldozer bogged down when its shovel snagged in the ground before getting to the roadway. (AP Laserphoto)

Arab Summit Aimed At Scuttling Peace Effort

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Arab foreign ministers opened a meeting here today to prepare an agenda for a summit conference aimed at scuttling the Camp David agreements.

The meeting is attended by 19 of the 22 members of the Arab League, with Lebanon and North Yemen expected to arrive later. Egypt, a pariah among Arabs for its dealings with Israel, is absent.

Radical states are expected to denounce President Anwar Sadat of Egypt for Egypt's unilateral peace attempt with Israel. But the conservative Arab bloc, led by oil-rich Saudi Arabia, is expected to advise moderation.

Saudi Arabian Foreign Minister Prince Saud el Faisal said Saturday the object should be to bolster Arab unity, not to isolate Egypt.

The meeting was preceded by a reconciliation of Iraq and Syria, marking the end of a 10-year feud. They forged a political and military alliance to oppose the Camp David agreements, strengthening the hardline group that denounces Sadat as a traitor.

But observers doubt whether this grouping, which joins Iraq, Syria, Libya, Algeria, South Yemen and the Palestine Liberation Organization, can persuade the conservatives to help overthrow Sadat.

Last month Iraq proposed establishment of a $9 billion fund by the oil-rich Arab states to finance a campaign against the Camp David accords. Iraq said part of the fund could be used to lure Egypt away from dealing with Israel.

The Camp David accords call on Jordan to play a role in the future administration of the West Bank of the River Jordan.

Jordan and Saudi Arabia have refused to endorse the accords, stating they are inadequate for a comprehensive Mideast peace. Both have refrained from denouncing Sadat, co-winner with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin of this year's Nobel Peace Prize.

Observers believe the hardline approach is also bound to be opposed by Sudan and Morocco, the Arab states closest to Sadat.

MIG-23 Fighters To Cuba

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time, Russia reportedly has given Cuba advanced high-speed MiG-23 jet fighters.

The acquisition of MiG-23s substantially upgrades Cuba's air defense force, which until now has been equipped chiefly with less sophisticated MiG-21s and other, older MiGs.

Some types of the MiG-23 "Flogger" are believed by U.S. intelligence officials to be capable of firing tactical nuclear weapons as well as conventional arms on ground-attack missions. It could not be learned whether the new jets sent to Cuba are designed for ground attack as well as for air-to-air combat.

Intelligence sources, who declined to be named, said an estimated 18 to 20 MiG-23s arrived in Cuba earlier this month aboard a Soviet freighter. That many planes would comprise about a squadron.

The aircraft were shipped disassembled in crates and it was not until they were observed flying that U.S. intelligence identified them as MiG-23s.

Earlier this year, Defense Secretary Harold Brown listed the MiG-23 among several newer types of Soviet warplanes which he told Congress "have substantially better ranges and payloads than their predecessors."

NEAR-SLAVERY

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Some 2.24 million Indians work illegally as bonded laborers trying to work off debts under conditions little better than slavery, says a government-sponsored report.

Unrest Grows

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — The flow of natural gas through a pipeline to the Soviet Union was interrupted when hundreds of workers at a major refinery walked out demanding higher wages and the release of political prisoners, the government said today.

The line supplies the neighboring Soviets with about 30 billion cubic feet of gas annually, officials said. Saturday's walkout, combined with a strike by about 400,000 teachers, means about half the country's public employees are on strike for higher pay and more political freedom.

Thousands of other government employees have ended their strikes on government assurances that their demands would be met.

On Sunday, thousands of antigovernment protesters clashed with police in 37 cities around Iran and authorities said at least eight were killed when police fired into crowds.

Tanks and heavy vehicles rolled to Tehran University Sunday where more than 10,000 persons gathered to demand resignation of the government of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

The government said the demonstrations were spawned by communist dissidents receiving instructions from abroad.

But many of the protests are led by the Moslem Shiite sect, angry about the shah's Western-type reforms that give more freedom to women and redistribute church lands among peasants.

Most Iranians, including the shah, are Shiite Moslems.

The protesters also want the shah to abolish SAVAK, his secret police force. The government said 34 SAVAK officers were discharged Sunday, but it did not elaborate.

More than 1,000 persons have been killed in protests against the reforms this year.

Dollar Tumbling To New Lows; Gold Prices Zoom

LONDON (AP) — The sagging dollar tumbled to new lows and the price of gold skyrocketed in early trading on Europe's money markets today amid continued concern over American economic troubles.

The price of gold jumped nearly $7 an ounce in Europe's main bullion markets, Zurich and London, as speculators sought their traditional sanctuary against monetary uncertainty in the precious metal.

Dealers said the renewed pressure on the dollar began in Tokyo and spread to Europe.

The dollar, which closed in Tokyo Friday at 179.625 yen, set three new lows today — an opening of 178.50 yen, a trading level of 178.30 and a closing 178.475.

$18,000 Bottle Of Wine 'Worth Every Cent' Vows Restaurateur

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — With tears in his eyes, John Grisanti turned to the 30 guests at his $1,500-a-plate dinner and said the $18,000 he paid for a bottle of wine was "worth every cent."

The wine, acquired from a collection in the cellar of Mrs. James DeRothschild of London, was a 114-year-old Chateau Lafite that Grisanti bought at an Atlanta auction in May.

"It's worth every penny," the bearded restaurant owner said after sipping the Bordeaux wine from a giant glass. "It's not like any other wine. It's soft. I expected a wood taste."

Grisanti, 49, served the wine at an elegant banquet to benefit St. Jude Children's Research Hospital. Founded by comedian Danny Thomas, the hospital treats catastrophic childhood diseases.

Wine authority J. Michael Broadbent of Christie's in London decanted the brown-wrapped container of wine. Until Grisanti tasted the wine, there was doubt about what the years had done to it.

Broadbent said before the banquet he feared the wine might have turned to vinegar.

"I'm quite concerned...The cork is really not in the best of shape," Broadbent said. He said a bad cork could allow air to spoil the wine.

The bottle of wine sat alone on a table as the guests sipped champagne and nibbled on caviar and smoked salmon before the banquet began. The menu, printed in French, listed such fare as venison and pheasant, with a different wine for each course.

Broadbent approached the jerooam — about four-fifths of a gallon — of Chateau Lafite while the guests were finishing their venison. A hush fell over the room.

"The first thing is to get the cork out," he said. "It's crumbly."

The sight of the liquid running through the clear siphon gave wine buffs among the guests their first clue the wine would be drinkable.

"It's got a good color," Broadbent said. "The nose is good," he said, swirling the wine in its glass and sniffing it.

Calling Grisanti from his place, Broadbent offered him the first taste.

"Michael, that's your glass," said the host, rejecting the wine glass Broadbent was holding.

"I've brought my own special glass for this," he said, producing a wine glass that looked as if it could hold a half pint.

Grisanti took a tentative sip, broke into a triumphant grin and said, "It's worth every cent...I can't believe how good this is."

Offshore Lease Sale Is Helms Brushes Question Aside Getting Less Attention

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—The government's first offshore lease sale under new federal guidelines doesn't have oil companies standing in line to get a chance at the 89 tracts.

"Interest is not high," said Harold Sieverding, assistant manager at the Interior Department's Bureau of Land Management office here.

"Actually, we have no way of knowing this for certain. But normally, in the days before a hot sale I get so many telephone calls from oil people I can hardly get away from my desk. There's been nothing like that this time."

This could be because the tracts to be offered for lease Tuesday include six sites within 25 miles of the most expensive dry holes in the history of offshore oil.

But in all, sealed bids will be accepted for tracts that are in widely scattered areas of the Gulf of Mexico — off the shores of Mississippi, Alabama and Florida.

That's the notorious "MAFLA" area of the Gulf which has drained off a ton of oil company dollars thus far, with little to show for it except some splendid tax writeoffs.

Also, this is the first offshore lease sale held under sliding scale royalty provisions set by the new Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act amendments signed into law Sept. 18.

A buyer must plunk down some cash plus agree to pay a royalty of 16 and two-thirds percent on production up to $13.2 million per quarter. On income above that level, the royalty rate begins sliding up.

It can go as high as 65 percent.

The U.S. Geological Survey estimated the area contains up to 140 million barrels of oil, and 160 trillion cubic feet of natural gas. But no one really knows until the holes are drilled.

Glowing forecasts about the Mafila have not raised the hackles on the back of an oilman's neck since the first Mafila lease sale in New Orleans in 1973. It brought them swarming in, eager to buy into apparently oil-rich virgin territory.

The result sounded like one of those grand old Florida land swindles — record prices, with buyers finding their underwater acreage to be worthless.

Oil companies paid the federal government $1.49 billion for 87 tracts. The hottest bidding was for tracts lying on the eastern flank of an underwater formation known as the Destin Dome.

The dome is shaped somewhat like a huge football 45 miles long and 28 miles wide, half buried in the seabottom, roughly 40 miles southwest of Panama City, Fla. It bulges upward from the Gulf floor under about 250 feet of water.

Formations like that often mean rich oil fields somewhere below.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Republican Sen. Jesse Helms, faced with increasing questions about his presidential aspirations, now says he isn't interested and lists at least eight conservatives he could support for president in 1980.

Helms, seeking re-election to a second term against Democrat John Ingram, has been the subject of increasing speculation that he might try for the Republican presidential nomination, or be available for the vice presidential spot on the ticket.

Helms was quizzed repeatedly on his plans while campaigning last week, and was introduced by a supporter at a Robeson County rally as a possible presidential candidate.

But, says Helms, "I have no interest in it."

"If I were convinced nobody else (among conservatives) could run and I could do it best, then I'd give it a second thought," Helms said while discussing the presidency aboard his campaign plane last week. "But I know better than that. There are others who can do better."

Helms, who supported Ronald Reagan for president in 1976, said he had made no private or public commitments to any candidate for 1980, and could support either Reagan, former President Ford or announced candidate Rep. Philip Crane, R-Ill.

But Helms said he also thought five other lesser-known congressional Republicans could have his support, naming Orin Hatch of Utah, Harrison "Jack" Schmidt of New Mexico, Dick Lugar of Indiana, Steve Sims of Idaho and Jack Kemp of New York.

Helms said he had no more interest in the vice presidency, but did not completely rule it out. "It's the difference between absolutely no and probably, probably, probably not," he said.

His answer was a bit different from one he gave a week earlier. "I don't want to preclude anything. The real point is, I haven't been elected to the Senate yet," he said then.

Much of the speculation has been based on his success in computerized national direct mail solicitations, which have raised $6.2 million so far and may reach $7 million by election day. "I imagine there would be some candidates salivating over that list," Helms said. "They're great Americans."

Helms' answer on the presidency has not been widely interpreted as final, however.

If you run for the U.S. Senate and lose, what do you do next?

Helms, who was editorial spokesman for WRAL television in Raleigh for years before going to the Senate, told The Associated Press he would like to go back to the station if he isn't returned to Washington.

Helms became a familiar face in eastern North Carolina by reading his conservative editorials for Capitol Broadcasting Co., a base he built on to become the state's first Republican senator in modern history in 1972.

Helms said he had no agreement with the station management to return if he is not elected. Helms owns stock amounting to less than one percent of Capitol Broadcasting, and is on the board of directors.

Ingram, should he lose to Helms, has two more years remaining in his second term as state Commissioner of Insurance.

Held Talks On Bikeway Plans Share His Winnings

The Citizens Bikeway Committee, meeting this past week, discussed the bikeway proposal for the abandoned railway spur near W. Rock Springs Road.

The committee agreed that chairman Jim Hix would draft a letter to the residents of the area and to the property owners and invite them to the next meeting of the committee on Nov. 28. Several bikeway corridors will be discussed at the meeting, as well as plans for a bikeway where the abandoned spur is located.

Following a report from Charles Vincent, superintendent of recreation, concerning the present bicycle registration fee of $1, the committee unanimously adopted a motion to request the city manager to instruct the tax office to no longer charge for bicycle registration and for the city to absorb any administration costs of registration.

Committee members agreed that free, permanent bicycle registration will increase the number of bicycle registrations and will allow registration to take place at various locations in the city.

Hix shared with the committee the Police Department's bike accident-fatality-theft report.

The committee voted to distribute "Bicycle Buying Guides" to any business that sells bicycle and also include registration information on the pamphlet.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — James Schelich, who was blinded and lost 75 percent of his hearing in the Korean war, indicates that part of the $275,000 slot-machine jackpot he won will be going to the local charitable organizations "that have become very important to me."

Schelich, whose injuries occurred during an accidental explosion 26 years ago, lives in a nursing home in Washington, Mo. It was his fourth trip to Las Vegas and he had been playing about an hour and 45 minutes Sunday morning when he hit the jackpot — the world's largest slot-machine payoff.

"I have no special plans for it," Schelich said. "It'll go to people who need it."

Described by a traveling companion as a deeply religious and patriotic man, Schelich, 48, said, "There's going to be an awful lot of people that are going to get an awful lot of good out of this."

"First of all, I'll have to see what Uncle Sam is going to do with me about income taxes. I have no regrets about paying my fair share."

Asked what he would do with the rest of the money, he said he plans to work "closely with all the local charitable organizations that have become very important to me."

"When I needed prayers, an awful lot of people prayed for me," said Schelich. "I've never forgotten that."

Schelich hit the jackpot using silver dollars on a progressive jackpot machine, known as the "Pot of Gold" at the Flamingo Hilton.

Henri Lewin, senior vice president of Hilton Hotel Corp., presented Schelich with a check for $275,000. The previous record jackpot was $250,000, won at the Las Vegas Hilton last July by Laura O'Neil of Miami.

Barron Hilton, president of the hotel firm, congratulated the winner by telephone and invited him to be a guest for a week's vacation for two at the Hilton Hawaiian Village.

Schelich said he had never before gone home from Las Vegas as a winner. "I'll come back out again ... you bet," he vowed.

Nerves Cracking Over Silence Of Kidnapper

By PATRICK ARNOLD
Associated Press Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A wealthy couple, their nerves shredded by days of silence from their 6-year-old son's kidnapper, added a tearful plea to a $50,000 reward offer for the boy's safe return.

"We beg you, please don't hurt him, we haven't seen him in so many days," Marilyn Sayegh, the child's mother, sobbed Sunday as she stood in front of her rambling, two-story home in a fashionable neighborhood about a mile west of the Las Vegas Strip.

"Please don't hurt him and we'll do anything," she pleaded.

"Please just let him come home. He's so little..."

Cary Sayegh disappeared from the playground of Albert Einstein Hebrew School last Wednesday about noon. The family since has received only one telephone call from his abductor, said FBI spokesman Bill Jansen.

The call came about three hours after the child disappeared. The kidnapper demanded $500,000 and said instructions on how the money was to be delivered would follow in a call at "midday Friday," Jansen said.

"As of this time, no additional telephone calls have been received and the boy is still missing," he said.

Cary's father, Sol Sayegh, the owner of a large carpet firm, was unshaven and looked haggard as he stood silently beside his pale, sobbing wife.

Sayegh, 33, along with two other men, faces trial in federal court for allegedly attempting to bribe the chairman of the Nevada Gaming Commission in an effort to have a new type of coin-operated gaming device approved for use in the state's casinos.

Jansen said the family had offered a $50,000 reward for information leading to Cary's safe return.

The news media learned of the kidnap shortly after it occurred, but voluntarily withheld publication of the story at the FBI's request. The family decided to break their silence after hearing no more from the abductor, Jansen said.

Faculty Member At Meetings

ECU News Bureau

Dr. Wayne Ayers of the East Carolina University chemistry faculty attended a health profession advisors meeting in New Orleans and a National Science Foundation short course in Athens, Ga., this week.

He was a delegate to the annual meeting of the National Association of Advisors for Health Professions, which met in conjunction with the American Association of Medical Colleges in New Orleans Oct. 23-25.

Dr. Ayers represented ECU at the meeting of advisors of Alpha Epsilon Delta, national honor society in pre-medicine and pre-dentistry.

On Oct. 26-27, he was at the University of Georgia in Athens, as an invited participant in a Chautauqua short course, "Industrial Organic Chemistry and College Chemistry Teaching," which was sponsored by the National Science Foundation.

He declined to say whether the caller was a man or woman, and added that the parents "have not talked to the boy. All we can tell you is there has been only one telephone call."

Jansen refused comment on whether the FBI had a suspect, but said he believed the case was "the most intensive investigation that has ever been conducted in Las Vegas."

Fred McGowan, a juvenile division detective of the Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department, said Cary is about 4-foot-2, weighs 60 pounds and has dark brown hair and brown eyes.

The Sayeghs also have a 13-year-old son and a 9-year-old daughter.

DEAR PAT: Since I enjoy using so many of your ideas, I thought I would return the favor and share with you two patterns I recently found. Both are quick and easy to knit and make delightful tree ornaments or package decorations.

A pipe cleaner, size 5 knitting needles and a few yards each of red and white sports yarn are all you need to make clever candy canes.

With the red yarn, cast on nine stitches. For the first row, decrease at the beginning of the row by knitting two stitches together; knit across to the last stitch and increase one in that stitch. For the second row, purl all stitches.

These two rows are repeated throughout, alternating four rows of red stripes with four rows of white. Work in this manner until you have five red stripes and four white stripes.

Bind off, sew together the long edges to form a tube and insert the pipe cleaner in the tube. Bend the top over to form the curve of the candy cane.

sports weight yarn and size 5 needles. Cast on ten stitches. For the first row, purl one, knit eight, purl one. On row two, knit one, purl eight, knit one.

Row three is worked as follows: purl one, slip the next four stitches to a cable holder and hold in back of work; knit the next four stitches from needle, then knit the four stitches from the cable holder; purl the last stitch.

Rows four, six and eight are a repeat of row two, while the fifth and seventh rows are a repeat of row one. Repeat these eight rows until five cable twists have been made.

Bind off and sew long edges together. Form a circle by sewing the beginning end to the bound-off end. Trim with a tiny red bow and colored sequins.

Here's hoping that your readers will enjoy making these items. — MARY LOU B., Clarendon Hills, Ill.

Many thanks, Mary Lou, for your timely contribution. One of the nice things about little items such as these is that you can use any of your odds and ends of yarn. With different weights of yarn, your little ornaments may be a different size, but who is to know the difference?

Also to use up leftover yarn, trim your Christmas packages with yarn instead of ribbon, making tassels and pompons instead of bows. This is particularly good for packages which are to be mailed as the yarn doesn't crush as readily as ribbon.

Dr. Williams Gives Program

Where There's Smoke There's Controversy

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I read that the voters in California now have another controversial proposition that is causing a heated battle. It's Proposition 5, having to do with smoking. If passed, exactly what will it DO—and NOT do? I do not live in California, but there's been talk of initiating the same kind of legislation in my state.

LIKES TO SMOKE

DEAR LIKES: If passed, Proposition 5 will: Recognize both the right to smoke and the right to breathe clean air.

Establish non-smoking and smoking sections in restaurants.

Guarantee non-smokers smoke-free places of employment while providing smoking areas for employees who smoke.

Create smoke-free hospital rooms unless a smoking room is requested.

It will not: Prohibit or restrict the sale of tobacco products.

Regulate smoking outdoors.

Restrict smoking in designated smoking sections indoors.

Affect smoking in private places.

Cost the taxpayers money. Instead, it will save tax dollars.

Be carved in granite, since the Initiative allows the legislature to amend it with a mere majority vote.

DEAR ABBY: Our son and daughter-in-law have a son (a college senior) who announced that he plans to marry the girl with whom he has gone for a long time.

It seems that our son and his wife feel that this girl is not right for their son, so they suggested that the young couple live together for a year while he is in graduate school, hoping the love affair won't survive beyond that time.

This doesn't seem like the right solution to us. What do you think?

PERPLEXED

DEAR PERPLEXED: Although your son and daughter-in-law prefer to have their son live with the girl rather than marry her, the final decision will be made by the young couple, and not by either the parents or the grandparents. (Or me.)

DEAR ABBY: What in the world do they put on this newspaper that causes an instant hay fever attack? Two minutes after I start reading my newspaper my eyes begin to water, my nose itches and I start to sneeze! In five minutes I'm weeping.

Has anyone else ever complained about this?

HOWARDE.

DEAR HOWARDE: Much in today's world news would make anybody cry. As for your itching schnozz, maybe you have no nose for news. (P.S. An allergist might be more helpful.)

DEAR ABBY: I have never seen this subject in your column, but I think it's worth mentioning.

I am constantly baffled as to why so few people, male or female, lower the toilet lid after use. Many men show a shocking lack of consideration for others by failing to lower the SEAT—but failing to lower the lid is equally offensive in my view.

I notice that even women who maintain immaculate homes are as guilty as those who lead a more casual lifestyle. I've never been able to understand this.

It would be difficult to consider a toilet a thing of beauty, but with raised lid or seat, the total esthetics of the room are lost if indeed they ever existed.

Have you noticed similar behavior? Or do you agree that the lid is to be used for purposes other than a back rest? JIM IN PANAMA CITY, FLA.

DEAR JIM: Personally, I don't care whether the lid is up or down. However, the seat is quite another matter.

Diamond Implants Are Latest Fashion

By JO-ANNE BYRNE

ST. PAUL, Minn. (UPI) —

The eternal quest for beauty and adornment has zeroed in on some Minnesota beauty salons where the latest fad is diamond implants in your fingernails.

Long beautifully shaped and polished nails enhance today's fashions, and a bit of sparkle on those nails adds an extra dimension.

It's not too difficult to achieve the sparkly look, even if your nails are short and grubby. In that case you have to begin with false nails and let your own grow out beneath them.

A diamond implant costs $10 at the Rocco Altobelli salons in St. Paul and Edina, if you bring your own diamond from any leftover jewelry you're not using. Otherwise, you can buy a three-point diamond for $30 from Altobelli and pay the $10 for the implant.

After Sue McLevish did five implants recently at the St. Paul salon, the telephone began "ringing like crazy" for appointments.

The process involves first roughening the nail's surface slightly so a layer of acrylic will adhere to the nail. The acrylic, which comes in powder form, is the same used to apply false nails.

A generous portion of acrylic is applied to the nail with a thick brush and spread around. Then the diamond is pressed close to the base of the nail and more acrylic is applied over the nail and the diamond.

After the fingernail dries, a buffing disc and emery board are used to file the acrylic off the diamond and smooth the rest of the nail.

No other gem can be used for the implant because other stones are too soft.

The whole process takes about 10 minutes and can last from a month to 10 weeks. Customers claim the diamond fingernails remain in good shape after an afternoon of tennis or a round of dish washing.

As the fingernail grows, the area of new growth must be filled in with acrylic. This can be done in the salon or at home with a do-it-yourself kit you can purchase.

Most women have the diamonds implanted on the right hand, Ms. McLevish said, since an engagement ring is traditionally worn on the left hand and the implant will achieve "a balanced twinkle" on both hands.

While glittering nails are big in the Midwest, Ms. McLevish said 14-karat gold fingernails are the popular item in California. But at the price of gold, she said, she doesn't expect any demand in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area.

Besides, as the old story goes, it isn't gold, it's diamonds that are a girl's best friend.

A Third Bridge To Bogue Banks

A third bridge to Bogue Banks has been approved in the long range planning of the Department of Transportation.

The island is currently served by the Atlantic Beach bridge and a newer bridge at Emerald Isle.

During the peak summer months, however, traffic is almost hopelessly snarled in making its way to and from the island.

There is no question that the third bridge is badly needed. Unfortunately, while it is in the long range plan, the actual construction of the bridge is still many years away.

Hopefully planning time for the bridge will be shortened and its actual construction will be expedited.

The need for it is going to become more crucial as the summer traffic increases.

Turkeys Go With Thanksgiving Day

As if the falling dollar and inflation aren't enough for Americans to worry about the Agriculture Department reports that we face a turkey shortage with Thanksgiving approaching.

The USDA sees a "light", or less than adequate supply of turkeys on hand.

Millions of us never think of turkey most of the year, but come Thanksgiving the uniquely American tradition calls for that uniquely American bird on the dinner table.

Beef and pork will be in adequate supply and if the turkeys run out, we can turn to steaks and pork chops... but it won't be the same on Thanksgiving Day.

Next 'Front' In Tax War

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — With the much-heralded Taxpayer's Revolt gaining stride, the people who pay government's bills are learning that they can bring politicians and bureaucrats to heel.

So far the attention has riveted on taxes, and in the backwash from California's Proposition 13 limits on government's dollars, government officials are scurrying to find ways to promise relief to taxpayers.

There are even some hopeful signs that the federal government is getting the message, although success so far has been limited to local and state levels.

Much concern is now being voiced about overall federal spending, and especially deficit spending — running deeper and deeper into debt.

As some of these battles are won by the taxpaying middle-class, it will become increasingly clear, however, that concentrating on the tax dollars will not bring the ultimate reforms which are essential.

Cut Government

"In fact, it's the bureaucrats who need attention — not the revenues which supports them."

snorts one high-level budget expert in the administration of Gov. Jim Hunt.

You can cut the dollars coming in and being spent, but the bureaucrats with all day every day to scheme up ways to keep their empires and powers intact will continue to prosper, this specialist believes.

Looking at the situation from the inside, and up close, this individual talks "off the record" about some of the more effective steps which are even now being debated and studied at high levels of North Carolina's government to bring about more effective control over both spending and governmental actions.

"For remember this: far more than just plain spending or debt, it is bureaucratic growth and governmental over-regulation which is the bottom cause of inflation and our economic woes," this expert warns.

When taxpayers discover that strict limits on governmental income doesn't resolve the dilemma, the next target will become "oppressive over-regulation and expanding bureaucracies," our contact feels.

Already under study is some potential for controlling both the growth in numbers of state employees to keep that sector more in line with new jobs created in the private sector of the economy. Another possibility is pegging growth in government's income to growth in the private sector which is now being outstripped in both jobs and revenues.

BILL NOBLITT

Even more nettlesome, however, are the multiplying, often contradictory and conflicting, and ever more far-reaching regulation of private business by government at local, state, and federal levels.

"This is adding phenomenally to the everyday cost of doing business. And that cost, of course, is passed right along to the public," he pointed out.

Regulatory costs swing two ways: they add to the cost of doing private business; and result in higher taxes to support the enforcement machinery and inspection forces.

At Home

Such regulations hit taxpayers right where they live, by way of illustration. Complying with zoning, subdivision, utilities, conservation, safety, health, employment and a host of other inspections and regulations is easily adding from $5,000 to $7,000 to the already out-of-sight cost of new homes.

There seem to be no exceptions: from dime stores to supermarkets; apartments to high-rise office buildings, hospitals to schools to the farm... governmental inspectors quoting regulations are adding to the cost of living far beyond the taxes which go to support the activities.

Day care centers under government rules cost twice as much; hospitals under government regulation cost more and serve less; nursing a nursing home may face up to 100 different inspections in a year; businesses small and large spend untold amounts and unfigured manhours hosting inspection teams, filling out reports, and complying with regulations.

"Here is where the action will be in coming years," says one North Carolina official in a position to know.

Rearranging The Week

WASHINGTON — The saying that one can't play God doesn't hold true for television networks. They are playing God every week, at least it seems like that when you read about the fight for television ratings. In the B.S. (Before Silverman) days, the networks used to move shows around if they weren't working. But as the competition got tougher and the stakes higher, they began to move around nights.

Now that we're into mid-season, all the networks are starting to move their nights around to see if they can come up with better Nielsen numbers.

This is what is going on. There is a large boardroom. At one end are charts of all the shows on each network schedule and the nights they appear on the air. They're hung on hooks so they can be moved around.

Zellerbach, the network's Vice-President-in-Charge of Darkness, says, "All right, let's face it. Monday didn't work. Let's move Monday night to Thursday."

Trembling, the program director, says, "Wait.

Thursday is starting to look strong. If we put Monday night in there we could lose our momentum."

Pitdown, the Vice President for Sales, says, "Where would YOU put Monday night?"

"Friday," Trembling says. "I wanted to put Monday night on Friday from the start, but you guys fought me and said Monday night should be slotted on Monday."

"That was at the beginning of the season," Zellerbach says. "We had to give it a try on the night we had it originally scheduled for."

Ringading, the network's affiliate man, says, "Suppose the stations go along with you putting Monday night on Friday. Where do you intend to put Friday?"

"On Monday?" Trembling says.

"It won't work," Zellerbach says. "We're not doing any better on Friday than we are on Monday. If we're going to move Monday further down the week we have to move up something stronger in its place."

"What's wrong with Wednesday?" Pitdown wants to know.

"Not Wednesday!" Trembling shouts. "Wednesday is our strongest night. If we put it on Monday we could lose not only Wednesday but Tuesday as well."

Ringading says, "I'm not so sure. If we could start off the week with Wednesday, we could pick up points for Tuesday as well as Monday."

Other Editors Say Rainbow Guide

(Richmond Times Dispatch)

We remarked the other day on the exclusion of presidential aide Hamilton Jordan from the "Green Book", the vaunted guide to who's in and, by extrapolation, who's out on the Washington cocktail circuit. Further reflection on the portentous effects of such an undertaking as publisher Jean Murray's leaves us with this thought: Somebody ought to put together an explicit guide to all the movers and shakers in the nation's capital — a sort of Bookshelf Washington, handsomely bound in color-coded cardboard.

Just for starters:

For flaming liberals, a roseate orange.

For diehard conservatives, battheship gray.

For middle-of-the-roads, Tarmac-black bisected by a totted line.

For the Georgia mafia, peach.

For those behind bars, or on their way there, white with black stripes.

For those who cloak themselves in the royal robes of extravagance at public expense, purple.

For those who keep the federal budget awash in red ink, scarlet (a mighty tone, rivaling in thickness the D.C. directory).

For congressional cowards who on controversial issues prefer voice to rollcall votes, yellow.

For congressional members who switch votes at the last minute in order to get home early, leopardskin.

For those so long in ironclad incumbencies as to be in danger of corrosion, rust.

For congressional horses of different colors at different times, chameleon-skin.

We don't envy the poor soul to whom would fall the task of indexing and cross-referencing this rainbow guide to our capital citizens; but then, discovering who's who in Washington has always been a lot easier than finding out what's what.

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — In the corporate suite where the facade is neat, controlled and subtly proper, a conspiracy might be hatching that could erupt in a palace revolt that topples the chief.

It's happening more often than before. Since 1975, presidents of major corporations have been ousted at an increasing rate, and more than half of them were undone by disgruntled subordinates.

"This sort of thing didn't exist in the 1960s," says Professor Eugene Jennings, psychologist and confidential adviser to chief executives. There were "kitchen debates," but seldom revolts, he maintains.

In the kitchen debate, top-tier executives discuss the chief executive's weaknesses and discretely leak to the board of directors the word that he no longer has their respect, support and confidence.

This is usually bad news for the chief, and often it can undermine his effectiveness, but he can still assert his leadership by effectively managing other members of his executive corps and the directors too.

By contrast, in an open palace revolt sides are chosen and the revolting side makes a demand upon the board: "He goes or we go."

Jennings, who teaches management at Michigan State University and is the author of numerous studies of corporate life, attributes the rising incidence of revolt to several peculiarities of today's business world.

"In the 1950s there was a greater respect for authority and an unwritten law among boards that no palace revolt should be successful. Almost all boards were made up of business people," he said.

"Boards are different today. They are comprised not only of business people but outsiders from various walks of life. Boards today are not as much believers in the old ethic."

They meet more often too. In the 1960s, when directors met perhaps six times a year, there was little opportunity for an executive to inform discretely on his boss. He simply didn't have the personal contact.

Today, there is far more interaction between board and executive. Boards meet more often, and there are many more committees, often made up of both outside directors and inside executives.

Cynics Struck Early

By WALTER R. MEARS

AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) —

Presidents do not customarily ask the American people not to make fun of their programs.

After all, solemn pronouncements from the White House are supposed to be taken seriously.

But President Carter's anti-inflation program was drawing cynical reviews even before he announced it, and unless he can make people believe it will work, it won't.

Besides, it doesn't take a very long look back to recall an inflation control plan that did more for the routines of standup comedians than for the cost of living. That would be Gerald R. Ford's WIN program, which sprouted in lapel buttons four autumns ago and was virtually forgotten by wintertime.

Carter's sort-of-voluntary price and wage guidelines are not as vulnerable to satire as was the Ford effort to Whip Inflation Now.

But there is widespread skepticism about the Carter program, and that led the president to appeal that his proposals be given a chance to work.

"If tomorrow, or next week, or next month you ridicule them, ignore them, pick them apart before they have a chance to work, you will have reduced their chance of succeeding," he said.

Actually, there was much more to the Ford program than lapel buttons, and some of the tools he tried to use against inflation are similar to the ones Carter is using now.

Ford didn't institute wage and price guidelines, but he ordered monitoring of wages and prices by the government.

He sought to curb federal spending, cut back on government regulation and promote competition in private enterprise. Those are features of the Carter plan.

While Carter said he will countenance no new tax cuts until inflation is in check, Ford sought an ill-timed 5 percent income surtax. The economy was sagging anyhow, and within two months of his 1974 inflation message, he acknowledged that "we are in a recession."

Inflation subsided, but unemployment soared. The WIN button proved adaptable. "Now, personally, I don't care whether WIN spells 'Whip Inflation Now' or 'Work is Needed,'" Ford said.

Stripped of slogans, lapel buttons and Madison Avenue gimmicks, the Ford plan was an attempt to mobilize public opinion in the effort to control inflation.

That's part of the Carter program, too. He asked the people to use their influence to help make his plan work. "Business and labor must know that you will not tolerate irresponsible price and wage increases," Carter said. "If you want government officials to cut inflation, you have to make sure that they hear your voice."

Similarities are understandable. "We have been living in an inflationary economy for 13 years," writes Herbert Stein, who served as chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers under Republican presidents. "The government is repeatedly surprised by the strength of inflation, and each time it is surprised it has to think through

THE INSIDE REPORT

Where Tax Revolt Ends

By ROWLAND EVANS

and ROBERT NOVAK

ENCINO, Calif. — Among the economically beleaguered apartment dwellers of the San Fernando Valley, the tax revolt that roared approval of Proposition 13 last June and triggered a national movement rages on unabated — but without the slightest gain for Republicans.

Our interviews with 79 registered, probable voters in Los Angeles County Precinct No. 1057, conducted with Pat Caddell's Cambridge Survey Research, revealed taxation and inflation as their principal concerns. Happy with the results of Proposition 13 (slashing California property taxes), they now want to cut federal income and Social Security taxes.

What's more, they are most unhappy with President Carter's handling of these economic problems and do not consider Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. the truest proponent of Proposition 13. That leads to this paradox: their overwhelming support for the reelection of both Brown and, in 1980, Mr. Carter.

The answer is yet another failure of Republican politics. These 79 voters are overwhelmingly Democratic and, a rarity today, avowedly liberal. While they should be ready for capture on the tax-inflation issue, Republicans have not reached them. Thus, tax revolt ends on economic questions, failing to penetrate the political realm.

Precinct No. 1057 is not the affluent stereotype of Southern California. Its $16,700 median income would be lower were it not for a fringe of high-price homes. Most voters here live in modest apartments (preponderantly rental with some condominiums). A combination of retired persons and young families, they voted about 5 percent Democratic than the California total in 1974 and 1976 but precisely reflected the statewide vote for Proposition 13 last spring: 64 percent.

Our interviews (helped by experienced polltakers Phyllis Barish and Lyn Phelps) indicated quiet desperation, slightly alleviated by Proposition 13. "I felt I had to get money from somewhere," said a married 55-year-old clerical worker in explaining her vote for property tax cuts. Her position was echoed 37 to 24 in favor of Proposition 13 by those interviewed who actually voted in that referendum. The reason given was invariably high taxes, not dissatisfaction with the quality of government. The opponents, all renters rather than apartment owners, voted no not because of desire for government services but because they feared they would not benefit through lower rents.

Nor are there many second thoughts. While most of these voters have detected no decline in government services, they feel by a 2-to-1 margin there will be cutbacks next year. Nevertheless, only one of 37 pro-tax revolters professed a change of heart (a retired woman who complained that her rent had gone down but not far enough).

It might then be considered fatal that Jerry Brown has failed to convince Precinct No. 1057 that (Continued on page 5)

GOOD NEWS William Tyndale, in his Prologue to the New Testament, published in 1525, had this to say about the Christian gospel: "Eugelio (gospel) is a greke (Greek) word, and signifyth good, mery, glad, and joyfull tydings, that maketh a mannes hert glad, and maketh hym daunce and leepe for joye."

The Christian gospel is indeed good news, yet so often the church has departed from this conception. Jesus sent forth his disciples to be witnesses testifying to the good news that God had provided forgiveness for men's sins.

The spirit of God does something to the inner life of the believer. When he decides to take the risk of trusting what the Bible says, and trusting it in spite of the fact that many things in the Bible cannot be proven as scientific matters can, then a change in his inner life takes place. "If any man is in Christ, he is a new creature; the old things are passed away; behold they are become new." (II Cor. 5:17)

Strength For Today

that the style of business management has changed. Most deposed presidents Jennings studied were vulnerable on the issue of effective leadership, he believes. One demonstrable weakness Jennings found is a "tendency to patronize disgruntled people." Rather than improve their own abilities and become more formidable, the chiefs "tried to sedate the disgruntled."

Another weakness: a reluctance to fire those opposing them. And when they did fire someone, they had the remarkable bad luck or poor judgment to fire those the board considered very competent.

A third weakness observed in deposed executives is "getting the feeling they are invincible or at least indispensable."

Helms, Ingram Respond To Queries On Key Issues

By The Associated Press

Q. As the country's energy policy is developed during the next session of Congress, what should be its main points? Will you support higher gasoline taxes to reduce consumption, and what role should solar energy have?

Helms: If this country is going to maintain a healthy and expanding economy, we must expand our overall supply of energy. Conservation alone, important as it is, will not provide the vital industrial growth that future generations will depend upon for jobs, security and a better life.

Congress has already laid to rest the proposal to increase gasoline taxes. I cannot support such a tax because it will hit hardest at the people who can least afford it. I will continue to support the use of tax incentives to encourage the development of solar and other new energy sources.

Ingram: Congress must dedicate the resources of this nation to develop alternate sources of energy, just as John Kennedy dedicated the United States to put a man on the moon. Until this goal is reached, Congress must work to reduce this nation's dependence on foreign oil and immediately stop price rip-offs by the monopolistic oil and gas companies.

I do not presently see a need for higher gasoline taxes. Solar energy must be developed to its greatest potential.

Q. Do you favor increased reliance on nuclear power?

Ingram: I support development of any alternate source of energy, provided that at the same time adequate safeguards are developed for its use. I am the only candidate who advocated energy fusion. The process of energy fusion relies on the heavy elements of sea water, which is as limitless as the sun itself.

Helms: Yes. There undoubtedly will be increased reliance on nuclear power in the future, particularly in North Carolina.

Q. Will you support legislation forcing divestiture of holdings by the major oil companies?

Helms: Senator Morgan and I have not favored horizontal or vertical divestiture proposals. This is primarily because of the realization that our energy needs can best be met by encouraging all types of energy production. We should rely on the free enterprise system to increase production and develop dependable new sources of energy for future generations.

Ingram: Monopolistic price fixing by the oil and gas industry as it relates to monopolistic control over other energy resources must be stopped. I will introduce legislation to stop price-fixing monopolies and give the small businessman and producer the opportunity to compete within the free enterprise system.

Q. What can be done to control rising health care costs. Do you support one of the national health insurance plans?

Ingram: I will introduce a bill that will guarantee the people of this nation health care coverage through the free enterprise system from the insurance company and agent of their choice, without fear of unfair cancellations. We must overcome the insurance special interests in Congress to reduce health care costs without creating a bureaucratic octopus.

Helms: Socialization of health care would do little to increase competition. Government is already a large part of the problem. The Kennedy proposal would increase health care costs to over $248 billion by 1980. Other proposals are little better.

The point is this: if we can get inflation under control, then the cost of health care will come down. In the meantime, we must bear in mind that the elderly, and citizens on fixed incomes, must have protection from catastrophic illnesses. As of now, nobody has a magical solution for that problem.

Q. What can government, and you as a senator, do about inflation? Do you support wage and price controls, either voluntary or mandatory?

Helms: The real cause of inflation is big government — big government and deficit spending. Last April, President Carter said that "the only time I could agree to wage and price controls is in a national emergency." I agree. I think that controls should be on government, not on people.

Ingram: Curbing inflation is many-pronged. Some components are: strengthening our anti-trust laws to stop price-fixing monopolies; developing alternate sources of energy to curb light bills and other expenses; balancing the budget to wipe out deficit spending.

At the present time, I do not believe that mandatory wage and price controls are necessary.

Q. Both candidates have said they favor budget cuts. Do you think President Carter is moving properly to balance the budget, and where would you cut the federal budget?

Ingram: I believe we can balance the budget by reducing federal spending by 3 percent a year for the next three to four years. I favor the cruise missile system, which is the best defensive weapon for America. It will keep America first in defense. This system is also more economical and will save taxpayers $20 million to $30 million.

The defense budget is less than the Health, Education and Welfare budget, which can be substantially cut by breaking up this monster bureaucracy by making education a separate department.

Helms: If we are to stop inflation, the fact is not so much where the cuts must come, but that they must be made. If the president would instruct each agency to come up with a 10 percent across-the-board cut in operating costs, we would have more efficiency, better service and a good start towards balancing the budget and stopping inflation. That applies to defense operations as well, but we must not forget that defense spending, in constant dollars, has already been cut 23 percent over the past 10 years, while social and economic spending has increased by 100 percent.

Q. As a senator, would you recommend to North Carolina tobacco farmers that some should diversify into other crops?

Helms: It amazes me that so many people don't realize that North Carolina farmers are already diversified to a tremendous extent...The point (HEW Secretary) Califano and his HEW bureaucrats don't seem to understand is that the gross return a farmer can get from an acre of tobacco can easily be $2,000. But the gross return from an acre of corn is often less than $200. North Carolina tobacco growers can't give up their allotments and remain farmers.

Ingram: No. Tobacco is vital to the economy of North Carolina farmers, tobacco factory workers, and to our balance of trade payments. Unlike my Republican opponent, I would have voted for the farm bill, which provided necessary research funds for the Oxford tobacco research station. Development through research is recommended over diversification.

Q. Is the current federal tax structure fair, and if not, how would you correct it? Who should benefit from any changes?

Ingram: I favor a tax cut for Americans connected with cuts in federal spending with priority for balancing the federal budget. I believe that our current tax structure is a disgrace. It favors the super-rich and monopolistic corporations over the working middle income Americans, who are bearing more than their fair share of the tax burden.

I would not have supported the Kemp-Roth bill, because it did not provide for equal cuts in federal spending.

Helms: The current system is not fair. Taxes are too high. There is one group that is particularly hit by our tax system, and that is the American worker. It is the productive sector of our economy who should benefit most from tax reductions.

I supported a version of the Kemp-Roth tax cut proposal when it was adopted by the Senate on Oct. 9...A reduction in tax rates has actually reduced federal deficits every time it has been tried.

Q. What is an acceptable rate of unemployment? Should the federal government ensure that everyone who wants a job has one?

Helms: I have never particularly liked the term "acceptable rate of unemployment." The only successful way to create jobs for the unemployed is for the federal government to stop taxing and harassing the small businesses of America so heavily-handedly. Gigantic federal programs, which are nothing more than temporary makework schemes, just worsen inflation.

Ingram: There is no acceptable rate of unemployment. Every person has the right to gainful employment. A sound budget and a sound energy policy is the long term guarantee of jobs for all Americans through the free enterprise system. The federal government can best provide jobs by fighting inflation. I believe that through tax incentives we can encourage private enterprise to hire the able-bodied unemployed.

Q. Should the U.S. sell arms or aircraft to Middle East countries?

Ingram: Only when necessary should arms be supplied to these nations to prevent them from becoming dependent on the Soviet Union and to preserve a balance for peace negotiations. I would hope that as we move toward world peace, arms sales can be reduced and ultimately eliminated.

Helms: Further weapons sales to Egypt and Israel, as well as to the Saudis, are contemplated by the president at the request of leaders of those countries. Hopefully these moderate individuals will prevail upon the rejectionists in the Arab world to lay down their arms and work toward a lasting peace.

I do not feel that the United States should promote the rejectionists by selling them arms. The arms that we are selling to our friends in the Middle East support peace there. It would be foolish to support the enemies of peace, so to answer your question, I do not believe we should sell arms or aircraft to the enemies of peace.

Q. The latest Strategic Arms Limitation agreement appears nearly ready. From what you know of it now, will you support President Carter's effort to have the treaty ratified?

Helms: In spite of the SALT I agreement, the Soviet arsenal is now superior to that of the United States, according to most experts. If Soviet military growth continues under SALT II as it has under SALT I, then I cannot favor such a treaty. In order to be sure that any treaty works, we must be able to verify accurately that the Soviets are complying with the agreement.

Ingram: I will never vote for any measure that will jeopardize the national security of America. These negotiations should proceed with caution anticipating the long struggle America has had with the Soviet Union to guarantee that they honor their agreements.

Q. Do you support normalized relations with China?

Ingram: If the Chinese do not insist on an end to our relations with Taiwan, I hope we normalize relations with China. The U.S. must be careful that there are no strings attached to our recognition of China.

Helms: The indications are slight, if non-existent, that Peking will allow us to have diplomatic relations with communist China and free China at the same time. The Carter administration is presently trying to convince communist China not to invade Taiwan if we withdraw diplomatic recognition. Whatever the merits of a closer relationship with Red China, they certainly do not outweigh the moral bankruptcy of delivering 16 million free people over to communism.

Proper soil fumigation is a must for an abundant supply of strong, healthy tobacco plants next spring. Fall fumigation of tobacco plant beds will more likely result in a higher quality job than if delayed into the winter months.

During October, November and early December, there are usually extended periods of good weather ideal for fumigating tobacco plant beds. A lot of plant bed problems can be avoided this year by treating in the fall. There is little justification for waiting until winter and the risk of fumigating when soil or weather conditions are not right or delaying fumigation and seeding beyond the desired period.

Methyl bromide, the chemical used for fumigating plant beds, does an excellent job of controlling most weeds, grasses and certain diseases, including nematodes. Methyl bromide, applied as a liquid, changes to a gas under proper conditions. However, methyl bromide applied under unfavorable conditions can result in complete and partial failures.

Favorable soil temperature range for best results from 50-60 degrees Fahrenheit, preferably 60 degrees, at application. If the temperature is too low at application, the liquid methyl bromide will not convert to a gas quickly enough to provide sufficient high concentrations at one time for good weed control. Do not treat if the soil temperature is below 45 degrees Fahrenheit at the five inch level.

The soil moisture condition should be about right for plowing when methyl bromide is applied. If the soil is too wet, the gas cannot penetrate the water-filled air spaces between soil particles to give good weed control. On the other hand, if the soil is too dry, methyl bromide cannot react with weed seed to kill it. "Dry running" the bed mixes warm and cold soil, distributes soil moisture, and leaves bed in better seeding tilth.

For soil temperatures above 60 degrees, leave the treated soil covered for at least 48 hours to insure maximum fumigant diffusion. For soil temperatures below 60 degrees, extend the exposure period three or four days for best results.

Another factor that influences through fumigation is the location of the plant bed in an area without heavy populations of weed seed that methyl bromide does not effectively kill. Clovers, especially white clover, lespedeza, and ironweed are among the weeds resistant to methyl bromide.

Proper soil fumigation is the first requirement for a good supply of strong, healthy tobacco transplants next spring. Avoid plant bed problems this year by treating in the fall.

his somersault from anti to pro on the tax revolt was 100 percent pure. By more than 3-to-1, our voters gave his Republican opponent, State Atty. Gen. Evellie Younger, better Proposition 13 marks than Brown. Yet those with an opinion favored Brown over Younger 56 to 13.

A 20-year-old housewife-secretary complained "the homeowner has too much to bear. She liked Younger's tax stand but opted for Brown: 'He's a better man. He seems honest.' Similarly, a 46-year-old actor told us: 'Outside of being a little wishy-washy on Prop. 13, Brown is right in there working for us.'"

On the federal level, these liberal Democrats declared support of the Kemp-Roth 30 percent tax cut by over 4-to-1 and backed suspension of Social Security payroll tax hikes by 3-to-1. Besides favoring these Carter-opposed steps, they overwhelmingly disapproved the president's handling of inflation and taxes (as well as national defense and the Russians); only Mr. Carter's Middle East record got an OK.

Yet, they gave him a 53-to-17 edge over Californian Ronald Reagan for president in 1980 (with 7 not voting and 2 undecided). "Carter just hasn't done anything right about inflation," snapped a 44-year-old mechanical engineer, who wants federal income tax cuts and considers taxation-inflation the nation's biggest issue. His choice for president in 1978: Jimmy Carter.

In short, no Republican has convinced these sun-drenched but hard-pressed Californians that he would do better than President Carter. Nor has Gov. Brown's Republican foe presented himself as their economic savior. From the cramped apartment pens of the San Fernando Valley comes a signal that the Grand Old Party has lost its opportunity for 1978 and capturing it in 1980 will be all the more difficult.

"Do we have to?"

Pitdown says, "Well, we can't leave it where it is," Trembling says, "I think Saturday should be on Thursday."

Zellerbach says, "Do you think our Thursday night audience can wait until Saturday to see it?"

"Yes," says Trembling, "because if we move Saturday to Thursday the other two networks will be forced to counter-program us with their Saturday shows. Once they panic, we'll move Thursday back to its original place and sweep the evening."

"Okay. That should take care of the week."

Trembling says, "You forgot Sunday night."

"I must be getting groggy. What are we going to do about Sunday?"

Zellerbach says, "Why can't we leave Sunday where it is?"

Ringading replies, "Because we'll confuse the audiences. We can't move the entire week around and leave Sunday alone."

Trembling says, "He's right. Maybe we could sneak Sunday in on Tuesday, except for the football games."

Pitdown says, "Why can't we move the football games, too?"

Zellerbach says, "Who do you think we are — God?"

'Little Richard' Is Born Again

Planning File Suit To Bar Competency Test

EDENTON, N.C. (AP) — The Southern Christian Leadership Conference plans to file suit Tuesday for an injunction to stop the competency test which is to be given to students Wednesday and Thursday.

Golden Frinks of the SCLC said in an interview from Edenton Sunday night that the tests are "racially biased" and will "crucify black, poor white and Indian students."

The SCLC, Frinks said, will also hold a statewide prayer vigil Tuesday for "the victims of the tests — the students."

He said the suit will be filed in federal district court in Raleigh. The tests, Frinks said, may violate desegregation rulings handed down by the courts in the past.

"We will go to the U.S. Supreme Court if we have to," Frinks said, "to stop the test until it has been totally revised."

The test will be given for the first time this week to the state's 89,500 high school juniors. Students will have to pass the test before they can receive a diploma.

Educators in other states who have been administering competency tests to their students for several years don't feel as strongly as Frinks about North Carolina's competency testing program. But on the whole, they don't like it.

Students in Denver, Colo. have been taking a competency test for 18 years. But in Colorado, the test is given to ninth graders. Students in Colorado must also pass the competency test before they can graduate with a high school diploma.

In Oregon, there is no rigid competency testing program. The state bypasses the three "R's" and concentrates on skills. To get a high school diploma, students may be required to change a flat tire, or ride a machine simulating a bucking horse, or show that they can cook. Oregon has different testing programs for its 185 high schools.

School officials in Oregon and Colorado have criticized North Carolina's testing program and said it won't work.

"I hope your program works in North Carolina," said Ed West, principal of Parkross High School in Portland, Ore. "I'm just glad we don't have a program like yours."

All the officials said the 11th grade was too late to start competency tests.

"By the ninth grade, you should have problems identified and remediated," said Denver testing director Allan Hosler. "You have to make it clear that this is no big deal at the end of the high school — it's not a punishment or a hurdle."

Pete Taylor, assistant superintendent of Tigard schools near Portland, said his district is moving toward certifying required skills as early as elementary school.

"Those big, cumulative tests are a big problem," Taylor said. "You have to consider a student's rapid rate of forgetting. Who walks around with all that stuff in their head? Not intelligent people. They remember what they need, and make room for other things."

DALLAS (AP) — It happens to him all the time now. Folks are introduced to Little Richard, they start to shake hands and miss a beat.

"Who?" they ask of the tall man in a rust-colored suit. "Naw."

"Hi," he says, shifting his Bible and extending his hand. "God bless you."

It throws them. Where, they ask, is the glistening, nappy pompadour, the eyeliner, the silver cape that became the trademark of the 1950s pianopounding rock 'n' roller?

Gone for three years now, he says. Gone, since he discovered Christ and went on the road to "spread His beautiful word."

As if to show he's sincere, Richard wryly admits the pompadour wasn't even his to begin with.

"I didn't grow it. I just went to the store and bought it," he hooted, his pencil-thin moustache disappearing behind the split of his mouth.

The story of Richard's midlife turnabout (he's 45) is not unique. With no big hits since the late 1950s, he spent the 1960s and early 1970s on the road pumping out his old hits, "Tootie Fruitie," "Long Tall Sally," "Lucille," "Jenny Jenny" and "Good Golly Miss Molly."

But the price of trying to stay near the top came high for Richard Penniman, the third of 12 children.

"I was using dope, marijuana, angel dust, cocaine and heroin with pills and drinking," he said. "All I wanted to do was have orgies, get high and sing all my old hits."

Then, within the span of a year, three friends and a younger brother died suddenly. He turned to God.

But people, especially here in this stronghold of religious conservatism, remain skeptical. A few still remember Richard's "conversion" more than 20 years ago when, after a harrowing flight over Australia, he "made a deal with God." The story became more notorious when he tossed a fistful of rings off a ferry to prove his sincerity to a band member.

"I took my eyes off Jesus," he explains of the earlier, temporary conversion. "I was really young then. It wasn't the message, it was me. God has really done something for me. This is the truth."

"Rock 'n' roll doesn't glorify God. You can't drink out of God's cup and the devil's cup at the same time," he says. "I was one of the pioneers of that music, one of the builders. I know what the blocks are made of because I built them."

At age seven, he was singing on the streets of his native Macon, Ga., for coins. At 14, he was the lead singer in his church choir. He won a talent contest in 1951, quickly signed a record contract, cut two records and just as quickly, dropped from sight.

"People aren't skeptical of me because I'm not charging money for God. I go for Jesus."

"Obey God rather than man. That's Acts 5:29," he intoned, thumping through the pages. "Let's make sure that text is right. I can't be quoting the wrong text."

Accidents Mar City's Weekend

Several injuries and nearly $10,000 in damages resulted from a series of traffic accidents investigated over the weekend by Greenville Police.

Heaviest damage occurred in a 12:25 a.m. wreck on W. 14th Street at Broad Street involving a vehicle driven by Butler Wendell Lewis of Greenville and three display vehicles at Brown-Wood Inc. car lot.

Officers, who indicated that Lewis reported falling asleep at the wheel, estimated damages at $4,500 to the display vehicles and $350 to the Lewis vehicle.

Lynwood David Owens Jr. of 2704 Jackson Drive was charged with a safe movement violation following investigation of a 7:50 p.m. wreck Friday on Dickinson Avenue near Raleigh Avenue.

Police said that the accident involved vehicles driven by Owens and Ruth Bateman Lewis of 601 Juanita Drive. No injuries were reported while damages were set at $1,800 to the Lewis car and $1,500 to the vehicle driven by Owens.

An 8:55 a.m. wreck Friday on Greenville Boulevard near Eastbrook Drive resulted in damages of $1,000 to a car driven by Ian McLeod McKeithen of Riverbluff Apartments and $500 to a vehicle operated by Milo Nelson of P.O. Box 223, Simpson.

A three vehicle wreck Friday on Greenville Boulevard near Belvedere Drive resulted in a charge of following too closely being levied against Samuel Carroll Porter of Rt. 1, Four Oaks.

Investigating officers, who said that two persons were injured in the 12:30 p.m. mishap, reported that vehicles driven by Porter, Deborah Tucker

Jones of 3102 Tucker Drive, and Larry Mitchell Osborne of 206 Greenwood Drive were involved.

Damages were set at $1,000 to the Porter vehicle, $600 to the Jones car and $200 to the car driven by Osborne.

Celester Murchison of Rt. 8, Greenville was charged with hit and run following investigation of an accident Saturday around 4:30 a.m. on Vance Street near Imperial. Officers said that Murchison is charged with leaving the scene after his vehicle allegedly struck a parked car owned by James Milton Barrett Sr. at 520 Vance Street.

Damages were set at $300 to the Barrett vehicle and $250 to the Murchison car.

No injuries were reported and no charges preferred following investigation of a 2:35 p.m. wreck Saturday on Greenville Boulevard some 700 feet west of Charles Boulevard.

According to police, the wreck involved vehicles driven by Gladys Smith Teel of 124 Howard Circle, and Sandra Harrington Wright of P.O. Box 641, Bethel. Damages were set at $300 to the Teel car and $600 to the Wright vehicle.

A three-vehicle accident Friday at 5:07 p.m. at Greenville Boulevard and Bismark Street involved vehicles operated by Jimmy Cale Williams of 601 E. Church Street, Farmville, Donna Gay Powell of Shady Knoll Trailer Park, Greenville, and Evelyn Smith Wilkins of 601 Park Avenue, Ayden.

Officers, who preferred no charges, said that damages were estimated at $400 to the Williams vehicle, $500 to the Powell car, and $200 to the Wilkins vehicle.

Ronald Buck of Rt. 2, Ayden was injured Friday when the truck he was operating struck an open man hole at the corner of Pitt and Howell Streets, causing him to be thrown from the vehicle, police reported.

According to investigating officers, the vehicle owned by the US Postal Service left the street and collided with a house owned by Clennie Burnett Jr. at 1623 Pitt Street. Damage to the truck in the 11:35 a.m. accident was $500 and the house and a fence sustained damages estimated at $100.

Two persons reported injuries following an 8:08 a.m. wreck Friday on Elm Street near Fourth Street. Police reported that the accident involved cars operated by Emma Jean Vanderford of P.O. Box 67, Robersonville and Goldie Haddock Kirk of 116 N. Eastern Street, as well as a parked vehicle owned by Martin Joseph Kilcoyne at 404 S. Elm Street.

Vanderford and a passenger in the Kirk vehicle reported injuries, according to police, who set damages at $400 each to the Vanderford and Kirk vehicles and $150 to the parked car.

Vanderford was charged with a safe movement violation, police reported.

Ten Die In N.C. Traffic

Nine persons have died so far in North Carolina traffic accidents over the weekend, according to the state Highway Patrol.

The fatalities pushed the state's highway death toll for the year to 1,162, compared with 1,204 during the same period last year.

Darrell Shelton Prevette, 21, of North Wilkesboro, was killed Sunday when the car he was driving left N.C. 115 in Iredell County 18 miles west of Statesville, hit a driveway culvert and overturned several times.

Robert Jones, 62, of Raleigh was killed Sunday on a rural paved road 8½ miles south of Raleigh when a car struck him as he was walking in the roadway with his back to traffic.

Adrian Allen Pierce, 16 months old, of Tabor City, was killed Sunday at an intersection of two rural roads in Columbus County 11 miles east of Tabor City. The patrol said a car pulled out in front of the vehicle in which Adrian was a passenger.

Daniel Morris Casey, 30, of Smithfield, was killed Saturday in Johnson County on a rural road 810 of a mile south of Pine Level when the car he was driving ran off the road and overturned several times.

Lindsey Eugene Scott, 28, of Gold Hill, was killed Saturday night in Cabarrus County when his car was struck by another vehicle at an intersection.

Marvin Lee Sawyer, 17, of Elizabeth City, was killed early Sunday morning when a car in which he was a passenger ran off the road and overturned several times.

Two-year-old Kelvin Ray Hunt of Maxton was killed Friday evening when he was hit by a car on a rural road near Pembroke.

Randy Blake Neill, 17, of Cherryville, was killed Friday night when a car ran off a rural road near his home and hit a tree.

Bobby Wayne Moore, 39, of Sanford, was killed Friday in a collision on U.S. 421 three miles south of Sanford.

Third World Is Encountering Dwindling Firewood Supply

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP)—A dwindling supply of firewood is colliding with an increasing demand for it in Third World nations, and the World Forestry Congress meeting here predicts no immediate relief for what it calls "the poor man's energy crisis."

Struggling nations liken their plight to the industrial world's oil shortages. But in this case it's not a matter of keeping cars running or lights burning, but of staying warm and cooking food.

Edward Saouma, director-general of the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization, said 1.5 billion people depend on wood for cooking, heating and hot water. He said some must travel as far as 60 miles for firewood and conserve it by eating only one cooked meal a day.

"The use of fossil fuels is far too costly for the poor. Future alternatives such as solar energy... will not be available for many years to come. Shortages of fuelwood are already severe in many countries and are going to get worse," he said.

Wood accounts for 90 percent of the fuel used in developing countries, he said. Demands are expected to rise by 50 percent by 1994 as populations grow.

The FAO offered these examples of the problem:

—Indonesia is expected to import 10 tons of the 32 million tons of firewood and charcoal it will use this year.

—In Nepal and Haiti the wood shortage makes some families switch to foods that can be eaten without cooking.

—In areas of firewood scarcity some families substitute animal dung for fuel, but in doing so give up fertilizer to grow food. An estimated 400 million tons of potential fertilizer was burned in Africa and Asia last year, lowering the yield of farm lands that were already marginal in some cases.

Saouma said as wood supplies vanish, villagers must travel farther for fuel, often cutting shrubs and other vegetation, causing erosion and other long-range agricultural problems.

The conference was told more and more labor is diverted to supplying firewood. In parts of Tanzania, in east Africa, it is estimated that 250-300 mandays are needed to fill the annual firewood requirements of a single household.

J.E. "Mike" Arnold, the FAO's chief forestry planner, said wood accounts for nearly three-fifths of all energy in Africa, more than two-fifths in the Far East (excluding China), one-fifth in Latin America and 14 percent in the Near East. The shortage was virtually unrecognized four years ago although some countries took action earlier, he said, adding developing nations should follow the lead of South Korea, India and China and their successful fuelwood-growing programs, establishing "social" or firewood forests.

Area Scouts Join In Advance-O-Ree

More than 160 Boy Scouts and scouting leaders from across Pitt County participated in an Advance-O-Ree held this weekend at the Bonner Scouting Reservation near Chocowinity.

The district event, coordinated by Advance-O-Ree Chief, Dr. F. Milam Johnson of Greenville, was designed to stimulate scouting interest in a variety of fields through work on specific merit badge and skill award instruction. Some 40 volunteer counselors from Pitt County offered morning and afternoon instruction sessions in 12 skill awards and 28 merit badge fields.

The Advance-O-Ree officially opened with the traditional flag raising and opening ceremony Friday. Saturday was devoted to merit badge and skill award instruction during the day. Saturday night activities were highlighted by an all-camp campfire, coordinated by district scouting executive, Richard L. Kelley.

Among the competitive events planned by competitions chief J. I. Morgan III was a camp-wide scavenger hunt in which participants were given lists of basic scouting and camping implements to find.

A flag ceremony, followed by a closing worship service, led by the Rev. Gordon Conklin of the Oakmont Baptist Church of Greenville, was held Sunday.

Members of the Advance-O-Ree headquarters staff included the following: William Whiteford, registration; Bill Plueddemann, skill award instruction; George Attmore, judges; Harvey L. Joyner, cracker barrel; Hugh Benson, security; Jack Farrior, food; Wayne Banks, facilities assignment.

Librarians At Conference

ECU News Bureau

Four librarians from East Carolina University's Joyner Library attended the recent Governor's Conference on Library and Information Services in Raleigh.

They were Artemis Kares, Mary Williams, Elizabeth Smith and Katherine King.

Keynote speaker was author Isaac Asimov, whose topic was "Citizens Participation and Support for Libraries." Also appearing on the program were Raleigh Mayor Isabella Cannon, Gov. James Hunt, State Librarian David McKay and North Carolina's 1977-78 Teacher of the Year, Ruth Watkins.

Recommendations from the North Carolina conference will be delivered to the White House Conference on Libraries, set for early next year.

Store Entered And Robbed

Greenville Police are investigating a break-in that was reported Saturday morning at the Super Dollar variety store at 400 S. Memorial Drive.

Police Chief Glenn Cannon reported that a stereo valued at from $75 to $100 and some $800 in money was reported taken in the incident.

Chief Cannon, who noted that the break-in apparently took place sometime after midnight Friday, said that entrance was gained through an air vent in the roof of the store.

No damage was reported to the facility, it was pointed out.

Trick-Or-Treat For The Needy

The Greenville Seventh-day Adventist Church School will sponsor a "trick or treat for the needy" Tuesday from 6-8 p.m.

The boys and girls will be collecting canned goods instead of candy to be used to help needy persons in the area.

Correction

The $10.3 million figure quoted in the Friday article concerning Pitt Tech-Community College status as being Gov. Hunt's request for reduction in higher education was in error.

Gov. Hunt has asked for a $10.3 million reduction in community college funding, not higher education.

Nursery Plans For Halloween

The Mini-Skool day nursery announced a variety of Halloween activities for Tuesday evening from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m.

The activities, open to children up to five years of age, include safe indoor trick or treating for the youngsters as well as a UNICEF carnival in the kindergarten room featuring the bean bag toss, fishing booth, cookie walk and other events.

A PTA bake sale has been scheduled in addition to the Halloween activities with proceeds going for new Skool equipment, a spokesman said.

The public has been invited to participate in the Halloween events.

Hogs

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — The overall trend on the North Carolina hog market today was mostly steady. NEW YORK (AP) — A new wave of selling sent the stock market into another steep decline today, continuing one of the severest drops in modern Wall Street history.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial, which had fallen 91.04 points in the last two weeks, plummeted another 16.20 in the first two hours today to 789.85.

Trading was heavy, with volume on the New York Stock Exchange totaling 27.75 million shares by noon, against 13.61 million at noon Friday. Declines overwhelmed advances by a 25-1 margin among Big Board-listed issues.

Analysts said the market was being dragged down by general worries over the health of the economy as well as by concerns over inflation, rising interest rates and the weak dollar.

They also noted forced selling by investors who had bought stock earlier using margin, or loans from brokers, as the value of the shares they used as collateral on the loans dropped below minimum limits.

When this market decline began, margin debt was at a record level. The last monthly report from the NYSE showed $12.4 billion in loans outstanding among 990,000 investor accounts.

Charles Jensen at Merkin & Co. said traders frightened by the $100 billion-plus decline in the market value of stocks over the last two weeks were selling today.

"The news of the dollar sinking again in Europe didn't help," he said, "but one of these days the dollar is going to stop going down. Right now there's just a lot of fear concentrated at one point."

Among actively traded issues at midday were General Motors, down 1 1/2% at 60 1/2; Citicorp, down 1 1/2% at 24 1/2; Eastman Kodak, off 1 1/2% at 56; Holiday Inns, off 1 1/2% at 16 1/2; and Pan Am, down 1 1/2% to 61 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index fell 1.30 to 51.22, and the American Stock Exchange market value index dropped 6.68 to 134.63.

Police Clue To A Human Fly

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) — A human fly remains at large, but Missoula police at least have its wings as a clue.

A bartender told authorities early Sunday he was assaulted by the large fly. John Collins said he evicted a man in the insect costume from his bar, but the fly — apparently angry over being shoed away — returned and swatted Collins as he mixed a drink.

Police found the wings on a nearby corner, and weren't sure how their suspect got away.

Owl Fouled Up Changing Time

SANDUSKY, Mich. (AP) — If the switch from daylight-saving time to Eastern Standard Time confused you, consider the plight of people in this Michigan town and one poor owl.

Detroit Edison officials say the owl flew into steel wiring in a main transmitter around 5:30 a.m. Sunday, knocking out power to the village of 2,100 for about two hours.

Sunday morning, people who didn't set their clocks back an hour before retiring Saturday night likely did some head-scratching to figure out just what time it really was.

There's been no word on the owl's condition, or whether anybody gives a hoot.

THAT BEAUTIFUL LEVERAGE

One of the great advantages in real estate investment is that wonderful word called leverage. It means using someone else's money to vastly increase your profit potential.

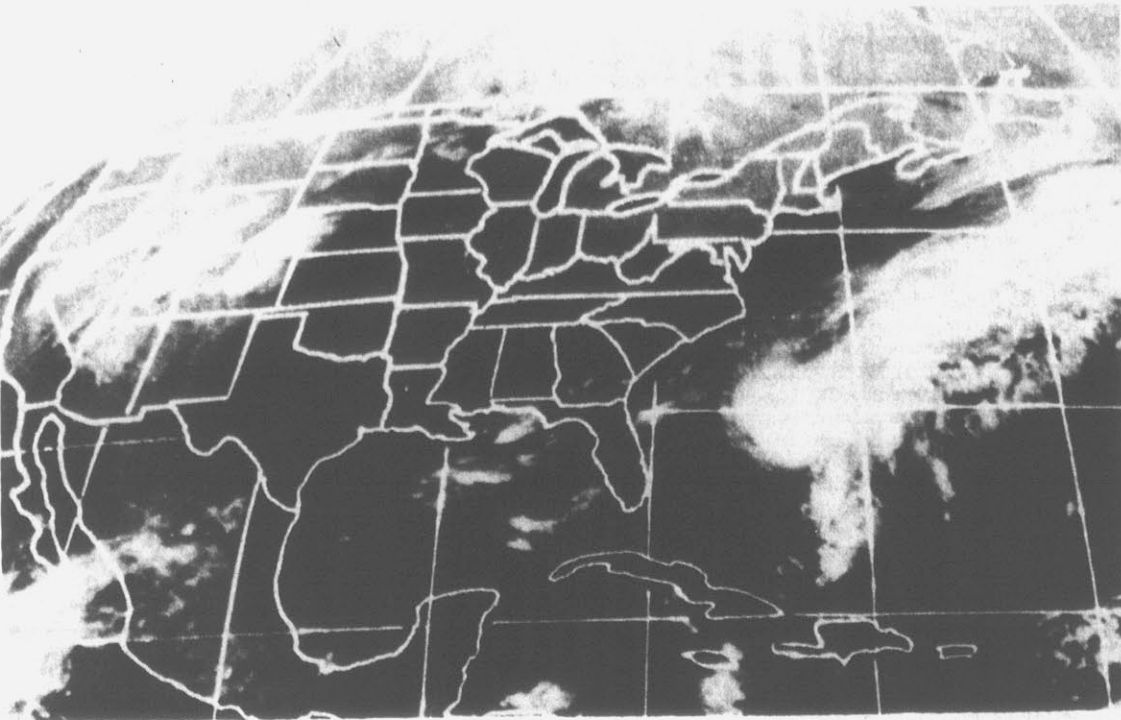

Real estate has traditionally been very good security for loans. This means that real estate can be acquired with a smaller percentage of cash outlay than most other investments.

Leverage arises because ALL of the income and ALL of the appreciation in property value belongs to the property holder regardless of the amount of the loan.

To illustrate, assume a $100,000 property was purchased for only $10,000 cash and a $90,000 mortgage loan. Five years later, the same property is sold for $150,000 (a 50% gain in value). After paying off the $90,000 mortgage, the investor would realize, not a 50% gain, but rather a 500% gain on his actual cash investment because he only invested $10,000 not $100,000 for the property.

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please phone or drop in at BLOUNT & BALL REALTY CO. 201 E. Arlington Blvd., Greenville, Phone: 756-3000. We're here to help!

MC HENRY, Ill. (AP) — A school bus overturned about five miles south of here this morning, injuring 30 children, officials said.

A spokesman at Mc Henry Hospital said 10 of the children, examined before they reached the hospital, were thought to be in critical condition.

The Mc Henry County sheriff's office said the bus overturned on a curve on River Road south of town.

Condell Memorial Hospital was alerted to receive five of the least seriously hurt, and six more were taken to Memorial Hospital in Woodstock. A spokesman at Memorial said their patients were not thought to be seriously hurt.

Mc Henry Elementary School District officials said the bus was on its way to Edgebrook and Landmark schools, midway through its run for the morning.

Justice Aided By Fast Fist

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A masked gunman who tried to hold up a tavern didn't have to wait out the long legal process for his punishment. A 235-pound rugby player gave it to him on the spot.

Authorities said the gunman entered Eagan's Bar in Kansas City Friday night and pointed a .38-caliber pistol at the head of 30-year-old Ray Ritchie, a 6-footer who plays rugby for the Kansas City Blues.

Instead of being intimidated, Ritchie put his fist into the gunman's jaw. Bar patrons said they had to intervene to save the assailant.

James Valiant, 36, of Columbia was charged with a string of crimes including assault with intent to kill. His bond was set at $10,000.

Indira Makes Comeback Bid

By GENE KRAMER
Associated Press Writer

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A backwater district in southern India is getting a taste of rough-and-tumble, big-city politics as Indira Gandhi makes her strongest bid for a political comeback since she was toppled as prime minister 18 months ago.

Never have the plantation workers of Chikmagalur district, 1,100 miles south of here, been courted by so many national politicians and media people.

Name-calling and rumors of planned violence and massive drugings are spicing up the campaign for the Nov. 5 parliamentary by-election in which Mrs. Gandhi, 60, started out as the leading candidate.

Mrs. Gandhi's successor, Prime Minister Morarji Desai, has stayed out of the campaign, but leaders of his Janata Party are determined to defeat the former prime minister in what had been regarded as a safe district for her. Now, it looks close.

It is her first personal bid for election since the Janatas swept her Congress Party from power and she lost her own seat in Parliament in March, 1977.

Traveling through the coffee and tea plantations, Mrs. Gandhi addresses an average of 20 rallies a day.

She defends her 11-year administration and her harsh 1975-77 emergency, during which many freedoms were suspended and thousands were jailed as political prisoners, as necessary to restore democracy. She talks scornfully of Desai's government as the lackey of multinational corporations and Western governments, unable to maintain peace.

Indian Parliament members need not reside in their own districts, and Mrs. Gandhi is far from the Hindi-speaking belt of her native northern India. She speaks in English, and local backers translate her remarks into Kannada, the local language.

Her Janata Party opponent, former Karnataka State Chief Minister Veerendra Patil, 54, portrays her as an outsider who thinks she can hoodwink the simple local people.

Brief Detention Left Scars On Striking Teacher

By MARK SULLIVAN
Associated Press Writer
MILFORD, Conn. (AP) — Jim Santo told his three young children he was going to camp — the kind of story many parents come up with to explain to a child something that just can't be explained.

Santo did, in fact, go to camp. He spent six days at the National Guard's Camp Hartell, with some 260 other Bridgeport teachers jailed last month for ignoring a back-to-work order during a 19-day strike.

It was the largest mass jailing of striking teachers in American history but only one episode in a widely fought labor battle of the 1970s.

The National Education Association says there have been 130 teacher strikes in 21 states this fall. Last year, there were 152, and in 1975-76, 203. And, says an NEA spokeswoman in Washington, "What we are seeing more of than ever is increased jailings of teachers."

What is it like for a teacher who has always led a law-abiding life? What pushed him to it? How did his life change?

The strike left Santo with a rocky family budget, a temporarily alienated 3-year-old — and a sense of accomplishment.

Santo is a math teacher at the Blackham Middle School in Bridgeport. He is not a union officer, but if court appeals fail, he faces personal fines of $2,100 — $350 for each day he defied the order.

He thinks the NEA and its Connecticut branch will help pay any fines, but Santo says the salary he lost was "devastating."

"We won't starve, but we're hurting," he said. "I called all my creditors. They were very accommodating — accommodating, but I still have to pay."

And his family paid another price, especially 3-year-old

Rebecca. "She wasn't affectionate," said Santo. "She wouldn't sit on my lap. Cold, surprised, I don't know what."

He and his wife, Veronica, had told Rebecca and sons Aaron, 5, and Matthew, almost 2, that Daddy "was at camp." Santo said that each day he phoned, Rebecca asked if that was the day he would come home. When he did, it took a couple of weeks for her to warm up to him.

But Santo said the issues were important to him, and to the 22,500-pupil school system — whose heart, he feels, is teachers "in the pits," not administrators downtown; whose chronic ill, he feels, is a lack of equipment, supplies and specialists; whose operations, he feels, are "totally political."

Santo believes the strike showed school and city officials that teachers won't be second-class citizens, and gave teachers "the feeling that we were able to stand up to the board of education."

"They run a school system that I can't believe survives," he said.

For years teachers, PTAs and others have complained about crowded classrooms in decaying school buildings without adequate gyms and libraries. Teachers say they must buy their own paper and crayons.

Santo doesn't live in Bridgeport, and his son doesn't attend school there. In his kitchen in suburban Milford, Santo displayed a brochure from Aaron's school — half the size of Blackham, but with twice the specialists in music, physical education, guidance, and athletics.

All the frustrations, he said, crystallized for him in September. "I think that happened for a lot of teachers," he said. "They just got sick and tired of taking garbage from the board."

And, of course, there was salary. But Santo says the 13.5 percent wage increase over two years won't make up for the pay he lost. Under the new contract, the average Bridgeport teacher makes $15,800 a year, up from just under $15,000, school officials say.

"I wanted more; I can't survive on what I get now," Santo said. He teaches night school and his wife teaches adult classes part time.

Santo admits the possibility that the NEA stressed militancy this year for reasons that were not Bridgeport's alone — nationwide resistance to tax increases, for example, or organizational battles with the American Federation of Teachers.

"We were very possibly used by the CEA (Connecticut Education Association) and the NEA," he said, but then added: "We were used only to the extent we allowed ourselves to be used." He said the leadership could not have stampeded the teachers. And when it was over, he said, the strike had drawn the teachers together — "like family... a good feeling."

The teachers also emerged with some bitter feelings, he said — feelings toward the board. "We'll go by the word of the contract now. There's going to be a lot of animosity," Santo said.

One thing Santo says he did not find is disrespect from students — "no flagrant abuse" of his authority, no "jailbird" catcalls.

And his initial fears about going to jail, he said, didn't last.

"What broke my nervousness was the ridiculousness of the whole thing. You walk into court where there are 60 or 70 people who wouldn't hurt a fly who are willing to go to jail. You didn't feel alone."

The "jail" he went to was no maximum-security prison, but Santo rejects Bridgeport Mayor John Mandanici's label of "country club."

Camp Hartell is a World War II-vintage installation 70 miles north of Bridgeport, enclosed by wire fence, with two-story wooden barracks that the Guard rarely uses. Santo said teachers could not go beyond certain areas of the camp, had to report to bunks for checks several times a day, had only limited recreation. "You get 116 guys and six heads — five of them working — that's no country club," he said.

But Santo thinks the strike was worthwhile. "I'm proud to be a classroom teacher," he said. "We're the ones who stood up."

And there was, he laughs, even fame of a sort. A recent question on the "Jeopardy" game show dealt with the Bridgeport strike.

"When you make it to 'Jeopardy,' you know you're in," he said. "Now maybe we'll make 'Hollywood Squares'."

Competing For School

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Raleigh community leaders planned to make their pitch today for locating the North Carolina School of Science and Mathematics here.

Local leaders feel the school would become part of a web of scientific education and research if it comes to Raleigh. The web now links N.C. State University, Wake County schools, state government and the high technology industries of Raleigh and Research Triangle Park.

Officials of the Raleigh Chamber of Commerce, which is coordinating efforts to attract the school, were to present a slide show at a meeting with the site selection committee this morning.

Raleigh is one of seven communities vying for the residential high school, which is scheduled to open in the fall of 1980. The others include Burlington, Charlotte, Durham, Gastonia, Morganton and Wadesboro.

The site selection committee will visit all the communities and will recommend the site for the new school to the school's yet-to-be-named board of trustees. The trustees will make the final decision.

Raleigh's proposal contains 16 full-page color photographs and includes statements of support from 15 area science-oriented industries and research centers, along with the Raleigh City Council, the Wake County Board of Commissioners, Wake County School Board and the chamber.

The Raleigh proposal recommends that Rex Hospital be used to house the school but does not indicate how the hospital should be acquired. Rex will move to new facilities in 1980, and its board of trustees has announced that the old hospital is for sale.

Kenneth A. Kirby Jr., the chamber official coordinating the project, said more details will be presented today. The cost of the elaborate proposal would run "into the thousands of dollars," Kirby said.

DRINKING PROBLEM
JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Truck driver Ponn Meyer is under treatment here for an unusual drinking problem. Meyer, 23, has cut his daily intake of his favorite beverage — water — to about 26 quarts a day during the hospital treatment.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, OCT. 31, 1978

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Daytime finds you with some unusual conditions to face. If you handle them sensibly and intelligently, you make rapid headway toward some original or progressive goals. Evening becomes steadily more adverse and you would be wise to get a good night's rest.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You can handle responsibilities well and be more successful, but use care and caution in the evening. Try to please loved ones more and be happier.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Come to a meeting of minds with your partners and accomplish a good deal. Avoid individuals who keep you from gaining your desires, aims.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Put new life into the work you are engaged in and derive greater benefits from it. A fellow worker sees you from a different angle now and can be more cooperative.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Try a different kind of amusement today that will elevate your spirits, bring you more happiness. A special thought for a loved one is wise.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Study well the situation at home and don't irk anyone there. Once your business affairs are settled, do some entertaining at home. Think along more current lines and accept the best of these.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get the information you need which has not been forthcoming in the past and then use it wisely. You get pleasant news, but don't answer the letter under any circumstances until tomorrow.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Spend your money wisely and get fine results therefrom. Be more economical in the evening, though. Start a new savings account and gain more benefits.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Don't give in to the temptation to do bizarre things or you could get into big trouble. Start working on some unexplored talent and relieve tensions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Something turns up that upsets your routines, but not for long. Be firm as to your own principles and make no radical changes, despite temptation to do so.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A good friend shows you how to economize, so listen carefully to suggestions given you. Don't get emotional about a friend's worries or they become your own. Lend a helping hand where most needed.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) A public matter could cause you worry but alertness is wise and later all is okay again. Don't criticize a higher-up or you get into trouble.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A new situation arises that will be to your benefit, so be prepared for it. You have an opportunity to take a trip and this will bring good results.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will successfully combine the best of the past with the best of the current for a fine career, so be sure to give a good combined course of education for good theoretical purposes, and add psychology to the curriculum. Don't be too forceful with your progeny. Give advantages but not big luxuries which could spoil the incentive here.

Singer Has Big Chance In National TV Debut

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — I am sitting at lunch, watching the chives on my cottage cheese scamper about, when a publicity kit touting a CBS show arrives. It quotes Sally, a Las Vegas waitress, as saying:

"It's the kind of thing that makes me have faith in tomorrow...when I see that someone is giving a newcomer a real chance for the big time, it sorta gladdens my heart."

All this is because a young singer, Marlene Ricci, 23, is making her national TV debut next Thursday — as the star of a two-hour CBS music special, "Cinderella at the Palace."

(I've not seen it, but doubt it's a dud. It comes from the firm of Gary Smith and Dwight Hemion, whose music specials always have taste, class, wit and don't appear on TV often enough.) True, the supporting players for Ms. Ricci's TV debut are heavyweights: Frank Sinatra, Gene Kelly, Ann-Margret, Paul Anka and Tom Jones.

But it still is a good deal for the star, who resembles actress Brenda Vaccaro and only has been warbling professionally six years. She broke in during her senior year of high school, she says.

That was with a rock group, "Things To Come," back home in Buffalo, N.Y. After a year with them, she decamped to travel the nation singing with another group, "Fancy Colors."

During a gig near Detroit, she continued, she met a guitarist-bandleader Jim Burgett, a regular on the Reno-Lake Tahoe-Las Vegas nightclub circuit. She joined his band on said circuit.

"It's the old cliché — he taught me everything I know," laughed the vocalist, who has a pleasant, bubbly personality.

Whilst singing in Tahoe, she said, Jilly Rizzo, the New York innkeeper and long-time pal of Frank Sinatra, caught her act and seemed to like her work (and now, with Burgett, manages her, she says).

A year after that meeting, he helped her audition at a top Las Vegas hotel, which led to two weeks' work there and an opportunity of a lifetime, she said in a phone interview from Las Vegas.

Seems Gary Smith and Bob Henry, the latter the producer-director of Thursday's show, "happened to be here taping Mr. Sinatra's part for use show" at another top hotel while she was working, she said.

"They'd already started the taping and didn't have a Cinderella girl yet," she added. She conceded this put them in a bind, as you cannot do a Cinderella story without the main event.

She said the two men, who'd been holding auditions, were urged by someone — the press kit says comic Jackie Gayle — to go across the street and see her show. They did.

There ensued an audition in Los Angeles a week later, she said, then a final tryout three weeks later against two other Cinderella prospects. She won. Instead of a glass slipper she got a two-hour show on CBS.

HIS ANGEL NOW — Jaclyn Smith, the lone remaining unmarried star of television's "Charlie's Angels" smiles with her new husband, actor Dennis Cole, after their marriage Sunday in New York at the Marble Collegiate

Church in Manhattan. They were married by Dr. Arthur Callandro in a seven-minute ceremony in front of about 25 people. It is the second marriage for both. (AP Laserphoto)

Newman In Supporting Role

FLOWERY BRANCH, Ga. (AP) — Actor Paul Newman was relegated to a supporting role in a C Production class auto race, one of 22 weekend races at Road Atlanta.

The screen star, listed as P.L. Newman of Westport, Conn., started third Sunday but dropped to fifth midway through the 18-lap race around a 2½-mile track. By the finish, he was in second place, 12½ seconds behind winner Frank Leary of Santa Clara, Calif.

Both Newman and Leary drove Datsun 280Zs.

INJURED — John Barbata, drummer with the rock group Jefferson Starship, was seriously injured Saturday when his car hit a tree near Fort Bragg, Calif. A passenger in the car was killed, authorities said. (AP Laserphoto) formance Sunday night — his first Boardwalk concert in more than a decade — was for a local hospital and some 15,000 persons gathered at the huge Convention Hall to hear him.

Sinatra Sings In Benefit Show

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The best seats went for $500, but the singer requested 1,000 tickets be priced at $5 apiece for the city's policemen and firefighters.

The singer: Francis Albert Sinatra, son of a Hoboken, N.J., firefighter.

TOGETHER AGAIN — Troy Donahue and Connie Stevens, who co-starred in 1969 thru 1983 in the TV series "Fantasy Island" are reunited for the first time since then as they appear in an episode of the ABC-TV series "Fantasy Island". GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN
AND OMAR SHARIF
© 1978 by Chicago Tribune

Q.1—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦K4 ♥98652 ♦KQJ83 ♣6

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass 1 ♦ 1 ♣ Pass

What action do you take?

A.—Bid two spades. You would dearly love to hear partner bid a red suit, but your hand is not strong enough for a cue-bid of two clubs, and two diamonds is equally unappealing—partner might pass with diamond shortness for fear of a misfit. Since you have enough to respond, the only alternative is to raise spades on your doubleton honor. This should be safe, for partner rates to have a good suit for his vulnerable overall.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦83 ♥5 ♦KJ87632 ♣1094

Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?

A.—Pass. If you could be sure that partner would allow you to show your diamonds at a low level, we would accept a one no trump response. Unfortunately, it is all too likely that partner might either jump in hearts or pass one no trump, with unhappy consequences. The safest way to handle your weak hand is to stay out of the auction altogether despite the seven-card suit.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦A6 ♥AJ1054 ♦QJ7 ♣AJ3

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ Pass 2 ♦ Pass
3 NT Pass 4 NT Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Partner's bid is not Blackwood, but a quantitative raise in no trump, requesting you to bid slam if you are maximum for your jump in no trump. Although you have 17 prime points and a good five-card suit, you should decline partner's invitation. You could have had as many as 19 points for your jump to three no trump, so, in fact, you are at the very bottom of the range for your bid.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦K10743 ♥A10652 ♦8 ♣A4

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♣ Pass 2 ♦ Pass
2 ♥ Pass 2 NT Pass

What action do you take?

A.—Bid three hearts. While you have only 11 HCP and partner has about the same, your hand rates to play much better in a suit contract than at no trump. Indeed, if partner has a fit for one of your suits (the almost surely has three-card support for one of them) you might be able to make game because of your distributional assets. However, partner will have to bid it. Your task now is to show that you have a minimum distributional hand.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦AKJ87 ♥AJ6 ♦J96 ♣82

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
3 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—This is not a question of whether you have a game or not, but of whether there is a slam. You might convey your intentions to partner by jumping to five hearts, which would deny the ability to cue-bid a minor suit. However, we suggest you first rebid three spades, to highlight your good five-card suit, followed by five hearts at your next turn. This approach will give partner a very accurate picture of your hand—and is needed to make a slam.

Q.6—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦KQ4 ♥854 ♦A93 ♣10972

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 1 NT Pass
3 ♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Partner's bid is not Blackwood, but a quantitative raise in no trump, requesting you to bid slam if you are maximum for your jump in no trump. Although you have 17 prime points and a good five-card suit, you should decline partner's invitation. You could have had as many as 19 points for your jump to three no trump, so, in fact, you are at the very bottom of the range for your bid.

Nobody Knows If Earl Lucan Is Now Dead Or Alive

By JANEY CAWLEY
LONDON (UPI) — His title was Seventh Earl of Lucan but fellow gamblers called the dashing figure in the white dinner jacket "Lucky" Lucan for his skill at winning thousands of dollars with a turn of the card.

He was a well-known figure around London — wealthy enough to eschew working in favor of full time gambling, had enough to once have been considered for the role of James Bond, an avid sportsman and aristocrat whose great great grandfather ordered the charge of the Light Brigade.

On the night of Nov. 7, 1974, that all came to an end. Sandra Rivett, an attractive red-haired divorcee who worked as a nanny for his three young children was clubbed to death with a lead pipe in his estranged wife's home.

Police say it was Lucan's last and most desperate gamble — and one that he lost on a chance case of mistaken identity, killing the wrong woman and losing everything — possibly including his own life.

His supporters say he was framed by a spiteful wife. Lucan was charged with murder — the first time in 200 years that a peer of the realm was so accused. But it was a charge in absentia because Richard John Bingham, the Seventh Earl of Lucan and hereditary member of the House of Lords, has not been seen since that night.

The "Case of the Vanishing Earl" began on a dank, drizzling, cold Thursday evening typical of London in November.

Lucan and his wife had been separated for just over two years at that time. He had married the former Veronica Duncan, daughter of an army major and from a middle-class background, in 1963 after a six-month courtship.

They had three children: Frances, born in 1964, Camilla born in 1970 and George, the only son and heir, born in 1967. The family settled into an expensive, multi-storied Georgian home in Belgravia, a swank residential area in the heart of central London.

Lucan, who had inherited 250,000 pounds ($500,000) along with his title on the death of his father, had given up the innocuous banking job he had occupied himself with for several years to become a fulltime patron of the Mayfair gambling clubs.

His favorite haunt was the Clermont Club in Berkeley Square. There, according to friends, he followed a regular routine: he would arrive around noon for drinks with friends and lunch, always smoked salmon and lamb cutlets.

After backgammon and more drinks later in the day he would go home briefly to change, then dine again at the Clermont — or another fancy club — before settling in for an evening of high stakes gambling at poker, roulette or chemin de fer.

One evening a fellow patron watched Lucan pass by on his way to the cashier's desk with 30,000 pounds ($60,000) worth of chips. "There goes Lucky Lucan," he said and the name stuck.

Lucan doted on his three children but as the family grew, his marriage began to crumble and dissolve to bitterness.

Lucan moved out of the Belgravia house and took a bachelor apartment a quarter mile away in Pimlico, so he could be close to the children.

Coinciding with the breakup of his marriage — and the added expense of now maintaining two expensive homes — Lucan was hit by a stock market crash and began to suffer substantial losses at the gaming tables.

The man once renowned for his ice-cool nerve now became a chain smoker and heavy drinker of vodka.

At one point, friends said he would pace at night on the sidewalk outside his wife's home, staring at the darkened windows where his children slept.

After a series of back and forth custody sessions, Lady Lucan finally had the children made wards of the court. His once glamorous and envied life became still more unhappy.

On the night of Nov. 7, Lucan called the Clermont Club and made a reservation for dinner for four at 10:30. Police later said this dinner with friends was to be his alibi, but were puzzled by the fact he reserved for four when, in fact, he would have made the fifth had he joined them as planned.

On the same night Lady Lucan and Sandra Rivett, who had been working for the family only a couple weeks, were watching television in an upstairs room of the Lucan home.

Mrs. Rivett, 29, usually took Thursday night off but this particular Thursday she decided at the last minute to stay home. In later testimony, Lucan's daughter said her father had questioned her about the nanny's day off only the week before the murder.

During a commercial break, Mrs. Rivett volunteered to go to the downstairs kitchen to make tea.

The stairs were dimly lit and Mrs. Rivett and Lady Lucan were about the same size and build. As the nanny approached the bottom of the stairs, a man jumped at her from the shadows and clubbed her again and again on the head with a length of lead pipe wrapped in tape.

The intruder stuffed her bloodied corpse into an old canvas mail bag that had been lying on the floor and then apparently tried to clean up some of the blood stains and spattered the floor and walls.

When Mrs. Rivett hadn't appeared in 20 minutes, Lady Lucan started downstairs herself to see what had happened.

There, she later testified, she saw her husband dragging the nanny's body across floor in the canvas bag. She said he then jumped her, hit her with the same piece of pipe, struck his fingers down her throat and tried to strangle her with a chain around her neck.

She broke free, they stopped grappling and went upstairs together. He went to get a towel for her face and, she said, she used the momentary lapse to run for help.

Sobbing and disheveled, Lady Lucan burst into a nearby pub, the Plumbers Arm, screaming, "He's killed my nanny and he's tried to kill me too. Please help me. My children are in the house."

As Lucan's defenders were later to point out, she didn't say who "he" was.

Lady Lucan was treated at a hospital for seven scalp wounds, cuts inside her mouth and shock.

Lord Lucan sped to the home of an old friend, Ian Maxwell-Scott, in Sussex. There, he wrote two letters to his brother-in-law. The first concerned financial matters and his children's schooling. The other gave his version of what had happened.

Lucan said he had been standing on the sidewalk outside his wife's home when he spotted — through the venetian blind in a basement window — an intruder struggling with Lady Lucan. He said he let himself in, raced downstairs and broke up the fight. The intruder escaped.

Now, he said, he feared his wife would accuse him of hiring the murderer.

"She will say it was all my doing," he wrote. Veronica has demonstrated her hatred for me in the past and would do anything to see me accused. I will lie doggo awhile."

He left his friend's home and drove off into the night. The next morning his car was found abandoned at Newhaven, near Brighton, on London's south coast. The earl was not seen — or at least positively identified — again.

Many of his acquaintances — and a number of police officials — believe he committed suicide as "the honorable thing to do."

"If he was guilty of those crimes, it was the only thing he'd do," said one friend.

Others, noting he was a professional gambler, suggested he would assess the odds and take a chance at keeping his freedom.

There are two daily channel crossings between Newhaven and France and it would have been relatively easy for Lucan to make his way to the continent.

No body was found despite intensive searches of the coast, cliffs and caves around Newhaven by police using sophisticated detection equipment.

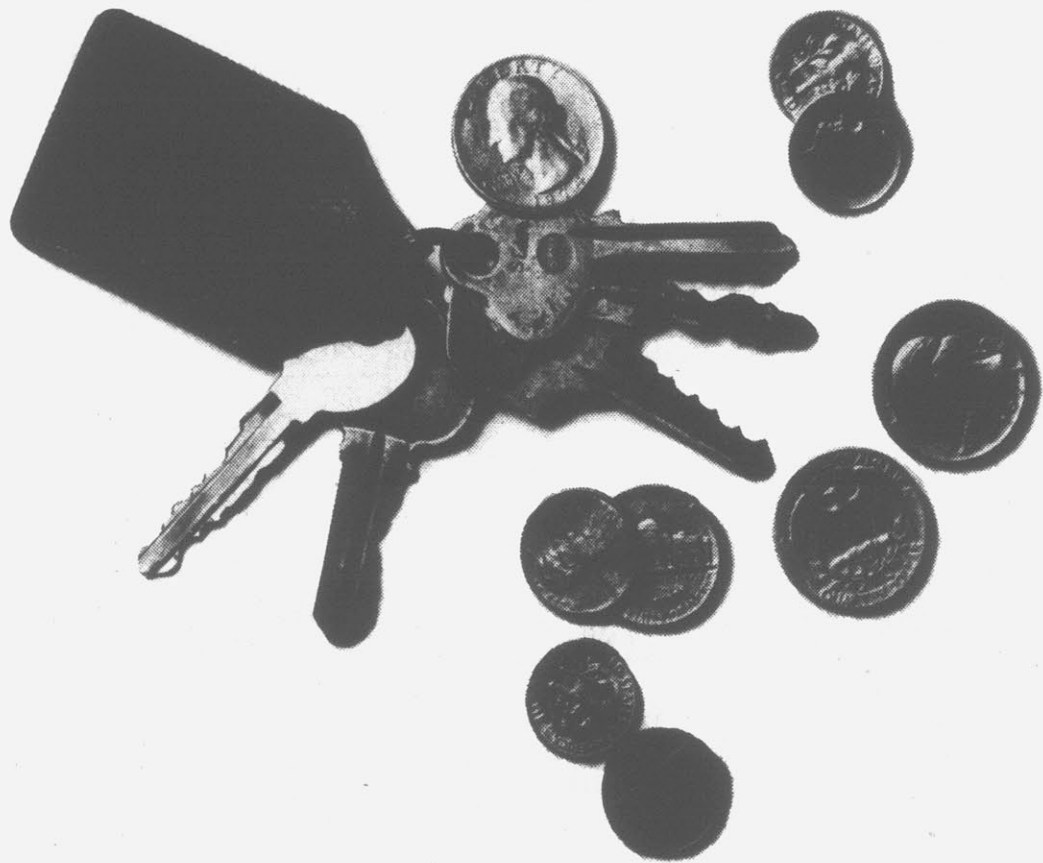

Scotland Yard called in Interpol, putting police in 119 countries on the alert, and the story was splashed over the front pages of newspapers around the world.

Within four weeks after his disappearance, 74 "sightings" were reported. Hundreds more have come in since then, from places as widespread as Johannesburg, San Francisco, Brazil and Iron Curtain countries. None has proven to be him.

Five days after the murder, a warrant was issued for Lucan's arrest on charges of murder and attempted murder.

At the inquest his wife testified it was Lord Lucan who had tried to kill her. She said there had been no other man in the house.

EXCEPT FOR THE CHANGE IN YOUR POCKET, YOU CAN NOW PUT ALMOST EVERY PENNY YOU OWN TO WORK.

It's a well-known fact that you can't write a check on your savings account. And you can't earn interest on your checking account. So unless you're willing to switch funds constantly back and forth, how can you earn interest on all your money?

Well, now there's a way. BB&T's Customer's Choice® Transfer Service.

It's a new service that will let you put just about every penny you own to work.

HERE'S HOW IT WORKS.

When you open a Customer's Choice Transfer Savings Account, we'll automatically tie it in to your BB&T checking account. Like all regular BB&T savings, you'll earn 5% interest from the day of deposit to the day of withdrawal, compounded quarterly. But here's the interest-earning difference.

Now you can make all your deposits into your Transfer Savings Account. Then whenever it's needed to cover your checks, we'll automatically transfer the money in $100 multiples into your checking account. This means you'll keep earning interest on every cent in your savings right up to the day it's transferred.

And since no checking account service charge is required with your new Customer's Choice Transfer Account, the cost to you is just a $3 per month maintenance fee—plus $.25 for every day a transfer is made. If you keep a balance of $2,000 or more in your Transfer Savings Account at all times, no maintenance fee will be charged.

Naturally, the higher your savings balance, the more this service will mean to you. Not only will you be earning interest you could not have earned before, but with a high average balance, your earnings can easily exceed your service fee. And just imagine the additional convenience to you if all your savings and loan or credit union funds were placed within this one easy-to-manage account.

CUSTOMER'S CHOICE MEANS JUST WHAT IT SAYS.

For those who don't wish to maintain a high average balance, our new service lives up to its name by offering you another choice. This optional plan, designed as protection against accidental overdrafts, works just like the first plan. All you pay is $1 for every day a transfer is made, plus your regular checking service charge. So with money in your Transfer Savings, there's no more worry about "bouncing" checks—or paying an overdraft fee.

The only way to decide whether or not Customer's Choice Transfer Service is right for you is to come to your nearest BB&T office and discuss it with us. If it does make sense, we'll get you on the road to earning new interest right away.

We think it's time you got the most out of every penny you own. Don't you?

CUSTOMER'S CHOICE TRANSFER SERVICE.
A NEW WAY TO POCKET MORE INTEREST.

X-Rays Invaluable In Mummy Studies

SEATTLE (AP)—King Tut's dentist says dental X-rays of the ancient Egyptian boy-king are helping modern scientists decide who his parents weren't.

Weren't?

"Most Egyptologists cannot agree on the dates and successions of the New Kingdom kings and queens," Dr. James Harris said recently. "But, working backward from our data, we can say with some certainty, at least, who probably wasn't related to someone else."

Harris, a University of Michigan orthodontics expert, is part of a research team which X-rayed Tut and thousands of other Egyptian mummies, trying to find family similarities.

Mouth and facial X-rays, plus other data fed into computers show similarities in skeletal structures which help the scientists trace family lines.

Amenhotep IV, for example, also known as Akhenaton, had a "rather bizarre" facial structure which indicates he probably couldn't have been Tut's father, Harris says.

There is no similarity between Tut and Amenhotep III, either, but Tutmosis IV, or at least his X-rays, "look a great deal like Tut."

Harris assigns the blame for some of the familial confusion to 21st-dynasty priests, who collected numerous mummies after they had been sacked and pilfered by grave robbers, and rewrapped and re-labeled them.

Most pharaohs, and even commoners, ate abrasive diets that wore their teeth down flat, and probably suffered little or no decay.

WE'LL NEVER UNDERSTAND WHY THE MAJORITY OF THE CLUB VOTED FOR A COSTUME PARTY...

AND THEN THE MAJORITY OF THE MEMBERS DON'T COME IN A COSTUME!

PUBLIC NOTICE
The Woodland Hills Mobile Home Estates reports that analysis of a sample taken September 12, 1978, shows coliform bacteria concentration above the maximum level listed in the United States Environmental Protection Agency's National Interim Primary Drinking Water Regulations. A sample taken September 20, 1978, showed no coliform bacteria concentration. There is no routine laboratory procedure for determining the presence of specific disease producing bacteria in drinking water, coliform bacteria which is normally present in the fecal tract of man or other warm blooded animals can be readily detected. Therefore the presence of this non-disease producing bacteria is used to indicate that some contamination has occurred.
The Woodland Hills Mobile Home Estates water system was flushed recently and repeat samples show the water to be free of coliform bacteria.
