

Carter Hoping Override Meany 'Veto'

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Carter administration is hoping it can rally labor support for voluntary wage and price guidelines despite opposition from the AFL-CIO's George Meany, who has called for mandatory inflation controls instead.

The administration's chief inflation-fighter also says it may take at least a year for the program to lower the inflation rate, now above 8 percent a year.

Meany, the 84-year-old president of the 14 million-member AFL-CIO, unloaded his wrath at the Carter guideline program Tuesday, saying it would require a greater sacrifice on the part of workers than businessmen. He urged Carter to call a special session of Congress to enact wage and price controls.

"The plan his advisers have devised is unfair and inequitable and the end result of their ill-considered proposals could well be another recession," Meany said in a statement adopted by the federation's executive council, which includes 33 union presidents.

"We now believe the time has come for mandatory, legislated economic controls," he told reporters. It was his first public comment on the voluntary guidelines program Carter announced last week.

In a key development today, the administration announced a series of measures designed to halt the long slide in the value of the U.S. dollar overseas.

The steps include an unprecedented one percentage point increase, to a record 9.5 percent, in the rate that the Federal Reserve Board charges member banks for loans. The new rate is expected to prompt a climb in interest rates throughout the economy, including those for loans taken by consumers.

But the president said the actions are necessary "to correct the excessive decline in the dollar which has recently occurred."

In economic developments Tuesday:

—The Agriculture Department said farm prices rose one percent in October, the second consecutive large monthly increase, which means a another probable jump in wholesale prices. The Labor Department is scheduled to issue its report on September wholesale prices Thursday.

—Carter appointed Douglas Costle, head of the Environmental Protection Agency, to also head a new Regulatory Council to supervise efforts to coordinate government regulations to make them more efficient and less costly to business.

—The Dow Jones industrial average closed below the 800 level for the first time in nearly six months as the average of 30 industrial stocks lost 19.4 points to close at 792.45.

—The dollar finally stood firm against several major European currencies, including the German mark, after a series of sharp declines. But it fell to a new low against the Japanese yen.

—Concern on Wall Street that interest rates will continue to rise even higher appeared confirmed when the Treasury Department reported interest rates on a new issue of 3½-year notes rose to 9.36 percent, the highest ever.

Administration officials quickly dismissed Meany's call for a special session of Congress to enact controls and said they have had good indications of support from other labor leaders and from rank-and-file union membership.

"We have reason to believe individual unions will cooperate provided we can demonstrate the program is fair," said Alfred Kahn, chairman of the administration's Council on Wage and Price Stability and Carter's chief inflation adviser.

Indicating a feeling — or a hope — that Meany may not call the tune on the labor attitude toward the plan, Kahn said he thinks "leaders of unions who actually do the bargaining" on new contracts will support the plan.

Although he is president of the AFL-CIO, Meany does not get involved in actual bargaining by the individual unions that make up the organization, although the members of its executive council do.

Kahn said the program already has important support from the two largest non-AFL-CIO unions, the United Auto Workers and the Teamsters Union.

But administration leaders were nevertheless distressed at the opposition expressed by Meany, since it certainly will hinder if not prevent success of the program.

In a statement, Labor Secretary Ray Marshall criticized Meany and the AFL-CIO leadership "for waiting less than a week before condemning the program, obviously without a fair test."

Marshall observed that Meany did not urge individual union leaders to reject the 7 percent wage guideline.

Of Meany's appeal to Carter to call a special session of Congress to enact controls, Kahn told a news conference, "I am as certain as I can be that he is not going to convene Congress now and ask for a mandatory program."

Call Meeting

A special call meeting of the City Council has been scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the first floor conference room at city hall.

The Council will consider a resolution correcting the date of adoption of the bond order authorizing $1.9 million Public Works facility bonds from Aug. 24 to Sept. 7.

Greenville Chosen To Develop Model Energy Program

The city of Greenville has been selected by the U.S. Department of Energy to develop a model community energy management program — one of 17 cities in the nation to be chosen to participate in the two-year, $4-million program.

Mayor Percy Cox announced today that Greenville will receive a $130,000 federal grant and will contribute to program costs through the provision of local funds which have been made available for energy conservation activities of the Greenville Utilities Commission.

"No increase in the existing city budget will be required to provide the local share of funds for the program," Cox said. The two-year program will be administered by the Office of Energy Conservation and Management, a department of the Greenville Utilities Commission.

The mayor also explained that Greenville's request to take part in the Comprehensive Community Energy Management (CCEM) Program was one of 116 applications received by the department of energy from cities throughout the United States, including five North Carolina municipalities. "Considering the keen competition which we faced, I feel that we are indeed honored to have been chosen to be part of the CCEM Program," he said. "We have the opportunity to develop a comprehensive plan of community-wide involvement in energy planning and management at the local government level which could serve as a model for other cities."

He also said that Greenville, a city of about 35,000 residents, will be committed to the development of a Comprehensive Community Energy Management Action Plan during the next two years.

"The first step in the program will involve the creation of a City Council-appointed Community Energy Management Commission," the Mayor said. "The Commission will consist of 12 members who will review the work of nine operating energy subcommittees and will pass along recommendations on energy policy matters to the City Council."

He emphasized the point that "extensive community involvement in planning for Greenville's current and future energy needs is essential to the success of our efforts to make energy policy formulation and implementation at the local level truly effective."

"One of the major tasks we will be required by the department of energy to complete is a detailed energy audit of the entire community," he said. "We must determine for a base year how much energy was consumed, how consumed it, the forms in which it was used and the purposes for which it was consumed." Cox said the detailed energy audit represents one of the more complex of the six tasks that will be carried out by each of the 17 cities participating in the CCEM Program.

"We will be coordinating our work on the project closely with the North Carolina Energy Division," he added. "The work we will be doing in Greenville represents a step toward achieving the goals set forth in the State Energy Conservation Plan."

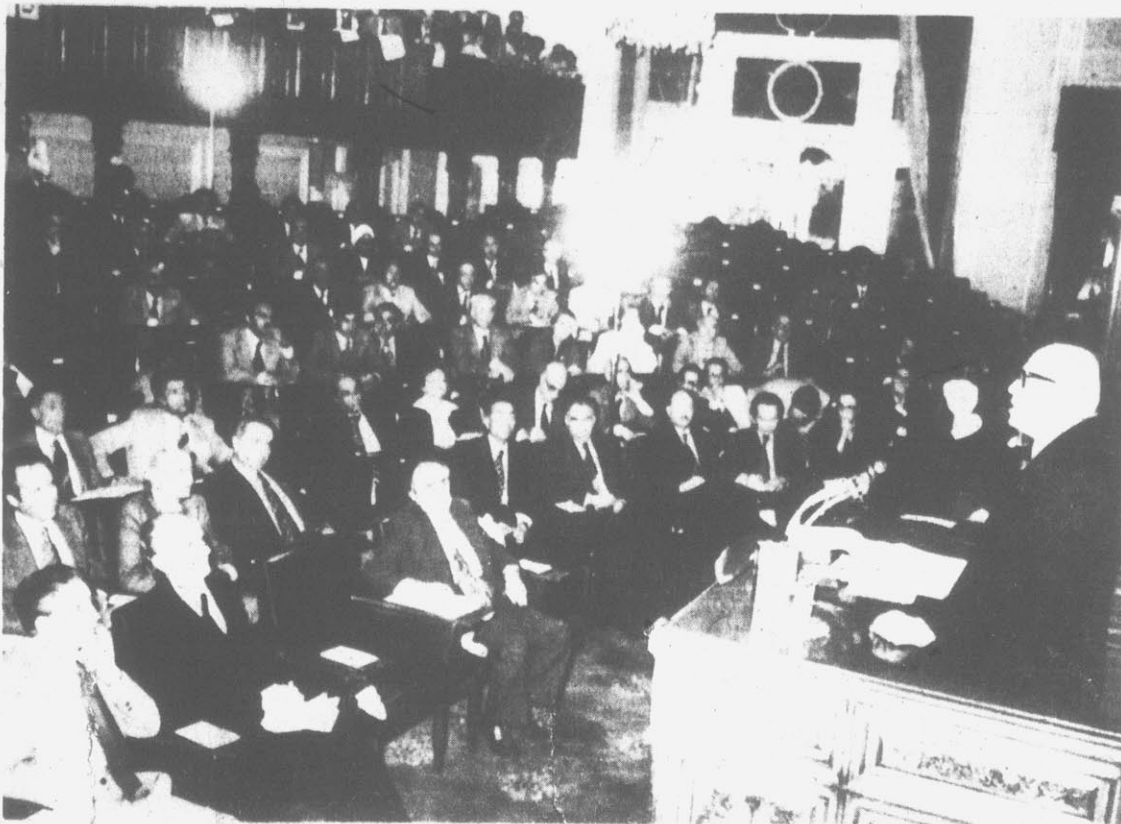

Chief Reports A Quiet Night

Chief Glenn Cannon said this morning that Halloween related disturbance calls handled by Greenville Police were at a minimum last night.

Cannon said several instances of egg and rock-throwing were reported as were one or two calls regarding the shooting of fireworks.

No arrests were made, according to Cannon, who noted the downtown area was relatively free of crowds, although there was a large amount of vehicular traffic.

Some Return To Jobs In Iran's Refinery Walkout

By PARVIZ RAEIN
Associated Press Writer

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Oil refinery workers began trickling back to work at Abadan on the Persian Gulf today but remained on strike at other centers. Other walkouts stopped most flights in and out of Tehran's airport and left homes without butane gas for cooking and heating.

The strike by refinery workers, who demand more money, an end to martial law and other political concessions, threatens to slice this riot and strike-torn nation's oil exports by 40 percent at a daily cost of $60 million. The Abadan refinery, the world's largest, employs 17,000 people. The number returning and the reason were not announced.

A strike by airport workers at Tehran's airport forced cancellation of most flights today. Government officials said the strikers, who walked off the job Tuesday, want an end to martial law, release of political prisoners and demand Iran's currency, the rial, be cut loose from the dollar.

First District Hopeful Outlines His Position

by REBECCA BUFFALO

James M. (Jim) Newcomb, incumbent Sen. Walter B. Jones' opponent in the First Congressional District race, says it's time "for American people to stand up for their state and nation."

The 70-year-old Williamson resident promises to use the full force of the congressional office to weed out inefficiency.

"Like most senior citizens, I don't want to pass on debts and bad attitudes to those behind me," stated Newcomb, father of 10 children and grandfather to 18 grandchildren, "most of who are determined to send Grandpa to Washington."

Newcomb, born in Rocky Mount, attended Rocky Mount and Wilson County schools, graduating from Gardner High School. He has also taken several correspondence classes in such fields as electrical engineering, tree surgery and book-keeping and accounting.

J.M. NEWCOMB

Newcomb served in the Coast Guard in the Lighthouse Service, working as a lighthouse keeper at Cove Point, Cape Charles and Cape Lookout.

After working with the lighthouse service, Newcomb turned to direct selling for 13 years. One of his jobs was canvassing Raleigh homes, which he says "let me meet people."

Newcomb then built a fire equipment business and helped start several volunteer fire departments. He has been in Williamson for the past 15 years.

Newcomb served on the Board of Elections for the Bear Grass township and in 1974, ran against Susie Sharp in the Chief Justice race in North Carolina.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore a floor length gown with a chapel train of organza and imported Venise lace. The fitted bodice featured a Victorian neckline with an illusion yoke outlined with Venise lace and organza full lantern sleeves trimmed with lace. Imported Venise lace motifs were applied on the bodice and the flared skirt. An organza flounce edged the hemline of the gown.

The bride wore a face frame design headpiece of organza and Venise lace etched with seed pearls. The tiered veil of illusion was applied with Venise lace motifs.

Joy Thomas of Farmville was matron of honor and the maid of honor was Julie Morgan, also of Farmville. They wore blue polyester organza gowns with a ruffled front and back with bow trim and capelet sleeves. The flared skirt had a flounce. The bridesmaids' gowns were identical in peach color.

The grandmother of the bride, Mrs. Henry Owens, wore a blue-gray suit and the grandmother of the bridegroom, Mrs. Mattie Tyson, wore a lavender gown. All wore carnation corsages.

For a coastal wedding trip, the bride changed into a melon dress with a vest and wore her mother's corsage.

The couple will be living in Walstonburg.

The bride is a graduate of Greene Central High School and is employed by March 1. Her husband attended Farmville High School and is employed by Western Auto.

Gladys Oakley directed the wedding.

Love Doesn't Respond To Logic

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Being an avid reader of your column, I have noted many different kinds of problems, but the one that has always puzzled me is the problem of the single woman in love with a married man.

She thinks if only he would divorce his wife, they would get married and live happily ever after!

Why doesn't that foolish woman realize that if the man does ditch his wife and marry her, she has no assurance that he will not repeat his unfaithfulness and dump her for someone else?

I think if those "other women" who are drooling over another woman's husband would take this into consideration, quite a few would take up their lines and go fishing in a clearer stream.

What is your opinion?

BOGART, GA.

DEAR BOGART: Love is a "mental disease." It doesn't respond to logic. A woman in love reasons that the timing was unfortunate, and she can succeed in a marriage where her predecessor has failed. Occasionally she's right.

DEAR ABBY: Tell SYLVIA IN GREENWICH, who's looking for a chastity belt, not to be stupid.

The use of the chastity belt caused much suffering among women in medieval times.

The constant chafing of the metal against the legs caused blisters, scars and gangrenous infections. Not to mention the weight of the belt, which caused chronic backaches and serious spinal deformities.

Hopefully, we've come a long way since then. But, Abby, what would happen if the husband lost the key?

CONCERNED FEMINIST

DEAR CONCERNED: Don't worry. There's always a Yale man around when you need him.

DEAR ABBY: I know exactly what SYLVIA is going through. She's the wife who's trying to find a chastity belt so she can put her husband's suspicions to rest.

I've been married for 14 years to a wonderful man whose only fault was his unreasonable jealousy. He loved me dearly, and although I've always been a true and faithful wife, he never trusted me out of his sight.

The daily accusations, denials and fighting were destroying our marriage, so together we designed something on the order of a chastity belt.

It's a tight-fitting rubber panty girdle over which I wear an old-fashioned type corset which laces up the back. My husband laces me into it every morning, tying the lace in a hard knot at the top where I can't reach it, let alone undo it. Over that I wear a snug-fitting wide leather belt which also fastens in the back with a small padlock like those used on suitcases. My husband carries the only key.

Every day he comes home at noon to help me in the bathroom.

This may sound like a humiliating solution, and I'm certainly not advocating it for all wives, but it saved our marriage.

HAPPY IN JULIAN, CALIF.

DEAR HAPPY: If you're happy in this kind of wedlock, more power to you.

DEAR ABBY: We at Anvil Arms do custom work in metal. We make swords and military items for museums and personal collections. Having made armor for the National Park Service for living history programs, the chastity belt should be no problem at all.

Of course, it would require some redesigning, since the chastity belt was notoriously uncomfortable for the wearer. We would also need the exact measurements to provide a proper fit.

May I add, Abby, after a hard day in the shop, I look forward to your column in the Salisbury Post, as it adds a little fun and a great deal of insight into human problems.

J. LUTHER SOWERS, SALISBURY, N.C.

DEAR ABBY: A friend of mine who makes gold jewelry told me he recently made a 14-karat gold chastity belt for the wife of a rich Arab in Beverly Hills. A month later this same Arab phoned and ordered NINE more.

J.R.

DEAR ABBY: I own a specialty sheet metal fabrication shop and can make a fine chastity belt with stainless steel that will not rust, tarnish or chip.

Three styles are available: snuggy, regular and bikini. Locking devices can be lock, padlock or combination. Items can be monogrammed at no additional cost.

It can be made on a time and material basis, and the only requirement is that the lady come to Indianapolis for fittings.

The official said that the volume of offerings Tuesday consisted of mostly leaf, lugs and primings with non descript and damaged tobacco showing an increase in volume as the end of the marketing season approached.

The market sold 789,301 pounds yesterday for $1,008,140, an average of $127.73 per hundred pounds. For the season Farmville warehouses have sold 33,199,325 pounds for $45,892,607, an average of $138.23 per hundred pounds compared with $115.48 last year for the same number of selling days.

The IRS said Tuesday that many of those persons who had set up their own retirement

Bond Vote Set For Fountain

FOUNTAIN — Fountain voters face a water and sewer bond election in next week's election.

The proposed bond issue would allow the Town of Fountain to finance improvements in the water system and waste water treatment facilities.

The waste water treatment facilities, constructed in 1936, cannot meet the required health standards set by the Federal government.

If approved, the referendum will enable Fountain to put together a financial package to include grants from the Coastal Plains Regional Commission, the Environmental Protection Agency, the Farmers' Home Administration, and the N.C. Clean Water Bond issue, which will reduce the town's share of the project cost.

Taking the grants into consideration, Fountain residents will have to fund only $185,000 toward the $817,800 sewer project, and $213,000 of the $332,000 water project.

If the referendum is approved, ed, the taste, odor and rust problems that have existed in the town's water supply will be eliminated due to the new treatment facilities, and the use of water purifying units now in use can be discontinued.

Approval of the bond issue will also enhance the town's potential for industrial development.

Bond Issue Vote Next Week

Among the ballots Greenville voters will receive next Tuesday is one which would provide for authorization to issue $1.9 million in Public Works facilities bonds.

If the bonds are approved by the voters the funds will be used to construct a new Public Works complex. It will include offices, assembly hall, storage rooms, painting and repair bays, parking areas for equipment and storage areas.

The new facility would replace the old Public Works garage and shops which are located on W. Third Street. The present area is limited in space and there is virtually no room for expansion.

The Daily Reflector favors the approval of the $1.9 million in bonds for a new Public Works facility.

Public Works has been in its present location for the past 45 years and we don't have to point out how much growth there has been locally during those years.

Now there are large numbers of sanitation vehicles and street maintenance equipment coming and going from the Public Works garages each day. It is only logical to recognize that a location chosen 45 years ago is now out of date for a medium sized city.

Like any business, a municipality has to keep up in providing adequate facilities for its operations. The time has come to construct new Public Works facilities and, like stockholders in a corporation, the taxpayers should invest in the future.

World And Wall Street Prove Nervous

Not only is the world nervous about the U. S. dollar so, too is Wall Street.

The stock market sunk last week, with the fall climaxing in heavy selling Tuesday.

It is an indication that investors have grave doubts about current efforts to stem inflation.

If we want to restore international faith in the dollar and domestic investor confidence, inflation will have to be brought under control.

The Logical Next Step

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — If you're going to test students, then why not test teachers? With that logic behind them, those in favor of far-reaching steps to improve teacher competency in North Carolina are beginning to have some impact.

The evidence is becoming clear that once the current flap over high school competency tests dies down, the next will be heard from teachers discovering that, in one way or another, they are going to find themselves judged on merit. The majority of them will be rewarded for performance; the weak, incompetent minority will be hard hit.

But traditionally the teachers have stood together for equal treatment for all regardless of competency and merit has been one of the most bitterly fought ideas on the education front.

Nonetheless, judging teacher competency is the undertone on several seemingly unrelated study groups presently at work. Further, top education advisors to Gov. Jim Hunt admit privately that this is the foundation on which a number of reform efforts in the public schools will eventually rest.

Steps Underway

An internal study by the University of North Carolina is producing change at teacher training institutions, with courses dropped, new ones added, and beefed-up counseling and testing of students.

A joint resolution between the University Board of Governors and the State Board of Education proposes stringent entrance testing, counseling, and other study and work procedures to weed out the unfit among wouldbe teachers. So far, that approach has been publicly identified as designed for incoming teachers alone. What of those with tenure who aren't performing? That is in the backs of many minds.

Some members of the State Board of Education are talking among themselves and commenting privately on the parallel between testing students to weed out failures and the need to do the same with teachers. Growing public attention to test results and to measures to end the social promotion habits of recent years will eventually produce more notice of teacher achievement along with pupil achievement.

Several study commissions of the General Assembly or of the State Board of Education are dealing with public school finance, teacher training and certification, salaries. Each has over the months come to the brink of the matter of teacher competency and oversupply, and absence of any means of judging a teacher once tenure is gained. Each time that area is broached, the door is hastily slammed. But behind the scenes, the talk goes on and the concern is open.

BILL NOBLITT

Invariably in government, such fragmented talks and exercises to explore and skirt around extremely hot issues precede development of firm proposals, debate and action.

Meanwhile, another equally controversial idea is awaiting public argument: do present strict laws on classroom size only hinder education while not providing the needed individual attention which students need?

The evidence is mounting that class size has little to do with student performance in some subjects, and smaller classes are not necessarily producing the desired individual attention for pupils which had been hoped for.

Class Size

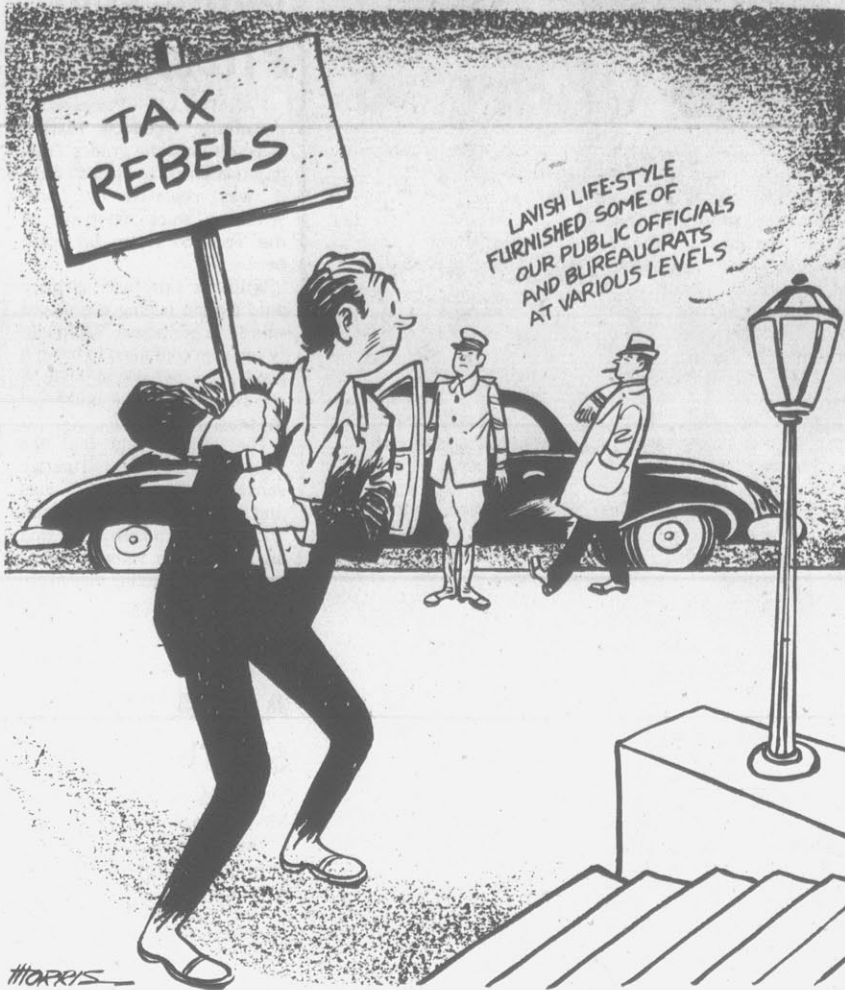

Teachers continually push for reduced class size, and while most of the annual legislative package from the North Carolina Association of Educators always puts top emphasis on salary, the educational goal second to that is reduced classroom loads.

The state has a law which restricts total class size in elementary school and sets teacher-pupil ratios in junior and senior high schools. The purpose is two-fold: more individual attention for students, and more work or preparation time for teachers.

The same goals could be accomplished, perhaps better, through a system which assigns a certain number of teachers to a school depending on pupil population, then allowing flexibility in use of them, some of Hunt's advisors are convinced.

Thus, a teacher in a lecture class, or where films are often used, or otherwise instruction in programs where non-student involvement is the rule, could take a large class. This would provide additional teachers for those subjects where close individual contact is important.

A LITTLE ITEM THEY MIGHT THINK ABOUT!

A Political Commercial

By ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON — Have you ever wondered how a political television commercial is made? Probably not, but I'm going to tell you anyway.

"Okay, everybody quiet on the set. Where's Sen. Nobody? All right, this commercial will show what a great family man you are.

Put on this cardigan sweater and sit in that stuffed chair by the fireplace... Lady, you'll have to get out of here, I'm shooting a commercial."

"I'm the senator's wife."

"Oh yeh, well, we'll need you in this one. You can stay. Let's see, why don't we sit you next to the senator, looking at him with adoring eyes?"

"I've never done any acting before."

"Well, just pretend you're sitting next to Robert Redford or Paul Newman."

"Should I say anything to him in the commercial?"

"What do you want to say?"

"I just want to ask when I'll see him again. This is the

Other Editors Say Manipulated?

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

Is it true that most of the nation's meat prices are set by a handful of big packers and market reporting services?

The report of secret findings of a federal investigation noted that widespread criticism of the way meat prices are set is based on the system's reliance on voluntary price reporting by packers, which "does not produce an accurate picture of the market."

The report found that prevailing wholesale beef prices are set daily on the basis of a relatively small percentage of actual transactions by some of the nation's largest packing plants.

While the year-long inquiry by the Agriculture Dept. has not turned up any violations of federal law, officials say a search for possible violations is continuing.

Earlier this month a congressional committee concluded after its own study that the so-called Yellow Sheet — the largest of the reporting services — is potentially subject to manipulation by industry giants at the expense of farmers, small businesses and consumers.

The House Small Business Committee also said that up to 90 percent of all beef carcasses were sold on the basis of prices suggested by the reporting services.

The federal investigation studied the July 1977 transactions of 36 major unnamed packing plants in five market areas.

It found that in those areas the wholesale prices paid by six of 12 supermarket chains surveyed were based solely on the quotations of the National Provisioner Inc. of Chicago, publisher of the Yellow Sheet.

The other six chains in five metropolitan areas bought an average of 75 percent of their meat on the basis of the Yellow Sheet prices, according to the study.

The important thing here is that the prices paid by such large buyers are felt like a tidal wave through the meat industry because of the size of their purchases.

If there is price-setting or manipulation of the meat market, then the federal government has the responsibility to rectify the matter.

Inflation is already eating away at the consumer's pocket-book. Artificially-induced upping of prices is not only harmful; it is wrong.

The government traditionally frowns on monopolistic practices or other actions that lead to price setting of this nature. Competition should determine prices in a free market.

"Well, fake it! Now where are the kids?"

"I could only get two out of the four. Marsha and Larry wouldn't come."

"Why not?"

"Marsha's mad at her father, and Larry ran away from home two weeks ago."

"All right, we'll have to make do with two of the four. Put the kids on the rug at their Daddy's feet. Each kid could hug a leg."

"Children, the man wants you to sit at Daddy's feet and hug him."

"Which one's our Daddy?"

"The man sitting in the large chair wearing the cardigan sweater."

"If we hug him will he hurt us?"

"No, children. This is for a TV commercial. He won't get mad at all."

"Quiet on the set. Where's the dog? I thought we were going to have the senator's pet dog in this commercial."

"Our dog ran away with Larry."

Await Apathy Impact

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — If pollsters and political scientists are correct, the mood of America this political year is so apathetic some races could end in a scoreless tie.

But a massive show of indifference won't discourage politicians from drawing some outrageous conclusions from the results of next Tuesday's voting.

For example, if the Republicans pick up 30 or more House seats and two or three Senate seats, GOP National Chairman Bill Brock will proclaim that the voters have repudiated the record of the 95th Congress and particularly its rejection of the Kemp-Roth tax cut bill.

If the Democrats pick up no more than 30 House seats and break even in the Senate, Democratic National Chairman John C. White will proclaim that under the leadership of President Carter, the Democrats held to a minimum the losses normally suffered by the party in power in non-presidential election years.

If the Democrats pick up a seat or two in the Senate, Jimmy Carter's grin will grow a few inches wider even though some of his most difficult moments the last two years came from trying to deal with the Democratic majority in Congress.

The ritual of party leaders reacting to election results always has them looking for silver linings no matter how dark the clouds.

More interesting and outrageous this year should be the efforts to link the 1978 returns to prospects for 1980.

Howard H. Baker Jr., is running for re-election to the Senate from Tennessee and few people doubt he'll win easily. Baker also is running for the 1980 Republican presidential nomination.

If Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California is re-elected easily, what will that portend for 1980? Will Brown challenge Carter for the Democratic presidential nomination? If Brown wins, his decision on 1980 is likely to depend more on how President Carter is doing than on the California vote next week.

And then there are all those campaigners abroad in the nation whose names are on no

THE INSIDE REPORT

The Carter-Begin Clash

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Israel's display of anger at President Carter directly results from top-secret American replies to questions by King Hussein of Jordan about the future of Jewish settlements on the West Bank.

These answers, published here for the first time, hint that President Carter expects Israeli inhabitants of the settlements to start clearing out of Arab territory at the end of the five-year transitional period. During that period, Israel, Jordan, Egypt and the Palestinians are pledged to restore "the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people," consistent with Israeli security.

In answer to the king's question about "the status" of Israeli settlers — "Will there be any (settlements) after the end" of the five-year transition, he asked — the U.S. replied as follows:

"Whatever number that might remain beyond the transitional period...would presumably be agreed to in the negotiations concerning the final status of the West Bank and Gaza."

Those words infuriated the Israeli government, and particularly Prime Minister Menachem Begin, when the secret U.S. answers to Hussein were shown to the Israeli government on Oct. 19 and discussed with Begin by Assistant Secretary of State Harold Saunders the next day. To demonstrate Israel's defiance of President Carter for implying to Hussein and the Palestinians that the settlements will become vestigial remnants, Begin went public with his long-nourished plan to "thicken" the settlements.

Mr. Carter's response was equally angry. He took Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's draft of a presidential protest letter to be sent to Begin "and doubled it in spades" before cabling it to Begin.

Thus the settlements question, on which Mr. Carter feels he has been betrayed more than once by Begin, returned to haunt his Mideast peace hopes. Equally forbidding is this suspicion known to be held by the president: that Begin's settlements offensive stemmed less from demands by his hard-line Likud coalition than from his strategy to throw up barricades to prevent King Hussein and the Palestinians from joining the peace talks.

Begin's fury at the U.S. answers to King Hussein's 14 questions about the Camp David agreement go beyond the settlements issue. For example, Hussein asked: "What is the U.S. position" on whether the self-governing authority to be created on the West Bank includes East Jerusalem "both in terms of territory and people?"

"The U.S. will support proposals," said the U.S. response, "that would permit Arab inhabitants of East Jerusalem who are not

UNANSWERED PRAYER?

In religious writings we often encounter the words, "unanswered prayer." In fact, these words occur in one of the best beloved of our hymns. Yet actually there is no such thing.

We often think that for a prayer to be answered, it must be answered in the way we want it to be and at the time we designate. The universe would indeed be in chaos if this were the case. It would mean that every individual has the right, as it were, to push the buttons and pull the levers which run the universe and thus cause everything to occur according to our present whims.

This is not the way prayer operates. Prayer gives God an opportunity to do for us what needs to be done. God's answer to prayer may be no or yes, or wait. The greatest calamity that could come to us would be to have all our desires granted by our Heavenly Father.

But the life of prayer leads us into the very heart of God and causes us to see His will. Thereby we grow.

Says Money Cheap In America

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — After 10 increases this year from a low of 7 1/2 percent the prime rate is now more than 10 percent, but "money is indeed cheap in the United States," says Henry Kaufman.

Ten percent is cheap? Why, 30 years ago it was only 2 percent. And the highest prime in modern times was 12 percent. Does this fellow Kaufman know of what he speaks?

He certainly does. When Henry Kaufman talks about interest rates everyone listens. Kaufman, partner in the Salomon Brothers securities firm, is an authority. Sometimes he is called the authority.

Money is so cheap, he believes, that despite rising rates we haven't seen anything yet. And he so informed the annual convention of the American Bankers Association in Honolulu last week.

"Credit markets are about to experience the most dramatic increase in interest rates since the cyclical rise began in late 1976," he told the bankers.

That's saying a lot, because the prime rate, the lowest rate offered to a bank's best corporate customers, was only 6 1/4 percent back in December 1976. It already has risen sharply. Now, says Kaufman, the rise might quicken.

So why does he say money is cheap at more than 10 percent?

For one thing, because a lot of it is being borrowed.

These corporate and individual borrowers haven't departed their senses, according to Kaufman. They know the after-tax rate is much lower than published rate.

The real cost of money, Kaufman said, is the difference between the inflation and interest rates. In Germany, for example, some loans cost 6 1/2 percent, inflation is 2 1/2 percent, and the real money cost is 4 percent.

It doesn't take an involved calculation, therefore, to determine that in the United States, where the inflation and lending rates nearly match each other, the cost of a home mortgage, for example, is low.

Consider, he asks, the financial benefits since 1973 of purchasing and financing the average price new home. In 1973 it sold at about $37,000, but by this September the price had climbed to $65,000.

Assuming a person in the 30 percent tax bracket bought a home in January 1973, he or she would have received a one-year net benefit of $1,100, or an 11.1 percent return on equity after taxes, said Kaufman.

For the person who bought at the beginning of this year, the net benefit after taxes and interest payments was $3,800 — or 21.3 percent through September.

Why? Primarily because the prices of homes rose faster than the after-tax cost of borrowed money, according to Kaufman.

So, Kaufman states, money really isn't expensive yet, despite those high interest rates, but it will become so.

Eventually, he forecasts, those interest rates are going to rise high enough to really hurt. Only then apparently will borrowing be discouraged. But by then, it seems, discouragement might be general.

Carolina Beach Board Members Are Charged

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Charges of financial conflict of interest were leveled against two former and two current members of the Carolina Beach Town Board Tuesday.

Eighty two warrants were drawn after a probe by the State Bureau of Investigation. The charges derive from allegations that the public officers did business with their own firms.

One of those charged is a minister who spearheaded the drive for a probe of corruption allegations. The Rev. Tom McKay, elected as a reform candidate to the town board last November, was served with two of the warrants Tuesday morning. He was not available for comment.

He was charged with conflict of interest in dealings between the board and a printing company owned by members of his family. His trial is scheduled for Nov. 10 in district court in Wilmington.

The remainder of the warrants were issued against Ralph Whitley, a current board member, and J.C. and Ernest Bame, brothers who were defeated in re-election bids last November. They will be served later this week.

The Bames could not be reached for comment. Whitley reportedly heard of the warrants from a television news show and said, "If you live at Carolina Beach, you don't know what to expect anymore." He had no further comment.

Town records indicate that more than $13,000 worth of business was done between the town government and firms owned by the three men.

On Monday a New Hanover County grand jury handed down four indictments against Sheila Davis, a former Carolina Beach town manager and now a Democratic candidate for the state House of Representatives.

Mrs. Davis was charged with 19 separate incidents of fraud, embezzlement, false pretense and failure to carry out official duties while Carolina Beach official.

In a statement issued Tuesday, Mrs. Davis denied any wrongdoing and said she would not withdraw from her race for the state House seat. She appeared voluntarily before a Wilmington magistrate

Tuesday and was released on her recognizance.

Israeli citizens" to vote in the election leading to selfrule. Further, these Jerusalem Palestinians could share "in the work of the self-governing authority itself."

There is nothing startling in this statement of American policy on occupied East Jerusalem. Ever since the 1967 war, the U.S. has denied Israel's legal power to absorb East Jerusalem. The U.S. has never recognized Jerusalem as Israel's capital.

But the political impact of the U.S. answers to Hussein is linked in Begin's mind to Israel's magnanimous agreement to withdraw from all its settlements in the Egyptian Sinai. To Israel, the clear intent of the answers to Hussein is to encourage Arab hopes that the West Bank settlements are also doomed.

Israel's counterattack raised the threat of delay in the negotiations for a peace treaty between Israel and Egypt, despite the coincidence of a Nobel peace prize for both Begin and President Anwar Sadat. Beyond that, the Carter Begin shootout risks future U.S. retaliation against Israel, which is seeking billions of dollars from the shrinking U.S. budget.

"Begin is slapping Carter in the face with one hand and reaching for Carter's wallet with the other," one administration official said privately. He predicted the aroused president might cut "a cool billion" from the bill Israel is now preparing for the U.S. to finance the Israeli-Egyptian treaty.

Such passions will cool. What will not change is Mr. Carter's Camp David pledge to be a "full partner" in the peace game. That was Hussein's first question. The U.S. replied that it would use its "full influence" to get a West Bank settlement and that "President Carter will continue to take an active personal part in the negotiations."

If Israel really is trying to scuttle the West Bank talks and get a separate peace with Egypt, as the White House suspects, those words brought no comfort to Prime Minister Begin.

Ronald Reagan has been in 26 states and George Bush in more than 40. Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, although not up for reelection this year, is maintaining a similar schedule.

All three want the Republican nomination and have been spending a lot of time in New Hampshire, the state with the first primary.

So have John Connally, the former Democratic governor of Texas who's now a Republican, Rep. Jack Kemp, the Republican former football quarterback turned tax-cutter, and Rep. Philip Crane of Illinois, the conservative who is the only announced candidate for the GOP presidential nomination.

That's only a partial list of ambitious Republicans who are spending this fall on the road collecting — they hope — political chits exchangeable for convention votes in 1980.

ADVICE FOR ANWAR —
"Be relaxed. Talk to them" is the advice Jehan Sadat said she gave her husband Egyptian President Anwar Sadat before he made his historic trip to Israel in 1977. That was the key to the diplomatic breakthrough, she says. (AP Laserphoto)

Wildfires Strike Dry Southland

By The Associated Press
The driest fall in years has left much of the South an easy victim to wildfires — which are striking by the hundreds each day.

There is no rain in sight for at least a week according to National Weather Service forecasts.

Georgia suffered more than 1,500 fires in October; Alabama 1,500, and South Carolina 625, fire officials said.

Parts of Alabama is under an emergency no-burn order, officials said.

There were 97 fires in Alabama which burned 3,000 acres Monday. Across the Southeastern district, ranging from Virginia to Texas, 397 blazes destroyed 6,022 acres, according to Russ Daley of the U.S. Forest Service office in Atlanta.

Crews from Georgia and Tennessee are assisting Alabama firefighters who have been "strained to the limit," said Frank Sego of the Alabama Forestry Commission.

Eleven counties were placed under the no-burn order, and "I wouldn't be surprised if the entire state were placed under a no-burn order if no rain falls this weekend," Sego said.

Georgia's most serious fire, a 300-acre blaze at the edge of a huge resort-home development in the northern mountains, was controlled Tuesday, said Ray Shirley of the state Forestry Commission.

Quick action by firefighters has kept blazes to an average of 2.5 acres, he said. He called it the driest fall in a decade.

Tennessee firefighters battled 40 blazes Sunday and 40 more Monday, said Max Young, state forester.

"Actually, we're in pretty good shape," he said, adding he did not know the figures for Tuesday.

"Traditionally, Halloween night is a little worse than usual," he said.

Most of the fires have been in the southeast part of the state.

Eight forest fires burned in western North Carolina Tuesday, said District Forester Tom Wynne.

"We've been pretty much at it since Sunday two weeks ago," he said, "and there isn't any relief in sight."

Only Florida, which the National Weather Service said has received moderate rain, reported no fire problems.

Otherwise, parts of north Georgia got only .02 inch in October, while western North Carolina got three-tenths of an inch, according to the weather service.

Two Holidays In City Schools

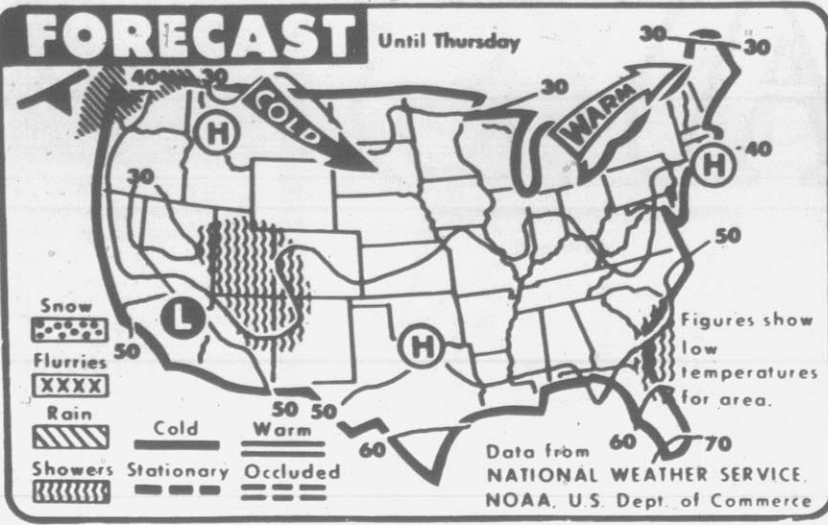

Superintendent of Greenville City Schools Glenn Cox has announced that there will be two student holidays/teacher work days this week — on Thursday and Friday, Nov. 2 and 3. The holiday applies to all grades, kindergarten through 12.

Friday will also be a day of teacher participation in the District 15 NCAE meeting to be held in Williamston.

Cox also announces that he and four members of the school board will be attending the annual convention of the N. C. School Board Association being held in Winston-Salem.

Stronger Arthritis Drug Going On Market Today

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Cool weather is expected for most of the nation in the forecast period Wednesday until Thursday morning. Mild weather is forecast for most of the East.

By The Associated Press
Tropical storm Kendra, which has continued to weaken as it moved up the coast, was little more than a low pressure center this morning and winds have dropped considerably along the North Carolina coast. Around daybreak, the low pressure center was located about 600 miles east of South Carolina's Myrtle Beach. It was moving northeast at about 15 miles per hour.

Over $1,600 Entries For Photo Contest

WINSTON-SALEM — Over 1,600 entries from more than 500 North Carolina photographers and artists have been received for the N. C. Photography Competition sponsored by R. J. Reynolds Industries, Inc.

With the entry phase of the competition ended, the next phase will be the announcement of winners, to be made in late November. All entries will be acknowledged by R. J. Reynolds.

Photographers and artists across the state were eligible to enter up to three works each. Judges will be selecting works for purchase awards and permanent display in R. J. Reynolds' corporate art collection.

In addition to purchases, three overall merit awards will be given — first place, $1,500; second place, $1,000; and third place, $500.

The entries were collected during October by five participating galleries — William Hayes Ackland Memorial Art Center, Chapel Hill; the Asheville Art Museum, Asheville; the Greenville Art Center, Greenville; the Mint Museum, Charlotte; and the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art (SECCA), Winston-Salem.

The five museums handling the entries report strong interest in photography as an art form and in the RJR competition.

A typical comment is that made by Mary Alice Young, director of the Asheville Art Museum. "I feel photography is a fine art form, and that it's been that way for some time now," Ms. Young said.

Three nationally known photographers are serving as jurors — James Alinder, executive director, Friends of Photography, Carmel, California; Robert Doherty, director, Eastman International Museum of Photography, Rochester, New York; and John Szarkowsky, director of photography, Museum of Modern Art, New York.

With lowering winds, the small craft advisory for the coast and sounds was discontinued this morning.

A weak cold front will be passing through North Carolina but its only effect will be patchy cloudiness. Fair weather is expected to continue through Sunday.

Temperatures cooled to the 40s over much of the state during the night, although dropping to the 30s in the mountains and northern Piedmont. It was expected to warm up today to the 60s, with some 50s in the mountains. Thursday will be mostly fair and cooler.

NEW YORK (AP) — A new drug goes on the market today that may allow the nation's 25 million arthritis sufferers to put away their aspirin bottles and find new pain relief with fewer side effects.

The drug is sulindac, and its developers tout it as a substitute for aspirin, still the drug most widely used to fight the nation's most common crippling.

A major feature of sulindac, which is available only by prescription, is that it would only have to be taken twice a day, not three or four times a day as with aspirin and most other drugs.

The developers of sulindac also say it is a unique anti-arthritis medicine because it doesn't start working until after its absorption by the digestive system, thus reducing stomach upset and chances of ulcers.

Dr. Herbert Diamond, one of 200 researchers who helped in sulindac's 12-year development, says it is "the only non-steroid, anti-inflammatory drug approved for all five major types of arthritis."

Diamond is professor of medicine at the State University of New York Downstate Medical Center here. He and Dr. John Calabro, director of rheumatology at City Hospital in Worcester, Mass., said sulindac will be useful for patients who have trouble taking aspirin.

The two said studies showed that 19.4 percent of patients developed stomach pain from prolonged use of aspirin, compared to 10.2 percent from sulindac.

Aspirin acts against the disease both as a pain killer and as one of the most effective drugs for reducing swelling in the joints.

Diamond said aspirin, sulindac and all other non-steroids are believed to work against arthritis by blocking the production of substances known as prostaglandins.

Although their precise action is not well understood, they regulate inflammation, fever, blood clotting and the mucus lining of the stomach, among other functions.

The most common form of arthritis is osteoarthritis, also known as the disease of aging, which affects 16 million Americans. Rheumatoid arthritis is the most severe form, disabling more than half of its 6½ million U.S. victims.

The Food and Drug Administration also has approved sulindac for other forms of arthritis, such as ankylosing spondylitis, a spinal paralysis that affects young men; bursitis of the shoulder, a condition common among baseball pitchers and football quarterbacks; and gout. The inventor of sulindac, Merck Sharp & Dome Division of Merck & Co., Rahway, N.J., will market the drug under the trade name Clinoril.

When you graduated from high school, did you know what your career would be?

Vote for Pitt Community College and increase the opportunities for our citizens.

Most students graduating from high school are faced with a big choice. Four years at a university. Or, two years learning a trade. That's why we need to add college parallel courses to Pitt Tech's technical and vocational offerings. To fill the educational gaps in Pitt County. And, to give our young people an opportunity to look at vocational, technical and general college while making a choice.

College parallel courses can strengthen our technical and vocational programs.

Over half the students who enter college parallel programs end up graduating from vocational and technical programs. So, adding a college parallel program can attract students that need additional time and training before making a choice. When you're young, it's hard to decide what you want to do for the rest of your life. We want to offer the opportunity for learning a trade or continuing on to college.

Give Pitt County students the opportunity for a choice.

Support Pitt Community College. The college option can attract students to make our technical and vocational training even stronger. Existing classrooms can be used more fully. And the revenue from the state will more than offset the cost to Pitt County. So, give Pitt County students a choice for the future. Add a great new program to our Technical Institute.

Look at the opportunity. Vote for Pitt Community College.

Paid for by the Friends of Pitt Community College.

Handed Two Life Terms

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A 22-year-old Wake Forest man was sentenced to two consecutive life terms Tuesday for the murder of a West Virginia school teacher last August.

Before he was sentenced, Michael Reyes Llamas said he was deeply sorry about the death of Jerry Romine of Point Pleasant, W. Va.

"I hadn't intended to harm anybody," he said. "Words don't describe how sorry I am. I know the crimes are serious. I just hope the court has mercy on me."

Llamas was sentenced by Wake Superior Court Judge Robert L. Farmer after a jury recommended that he be given a life term instead of the death penalty. Llamas had pleaded guilty to Romine's murder.

Romine was shot after he and two companions, Roger Bumgarner and Richard J. Pickens, also of Point Pleasant, were ambushed in northern Wake County Aug. 19. A 17-year-old woman who participated in the incident was sentenced Tuesday to 10 years to life for her part in the ambush.

Terry Ann Hamm of Wake Forest pleaded guilty to one count of armed robbery in connection with Romine's death. Nine other felony charges against her were dropped in exchange for her testimony against Bland Julius Hill at his trial last week.

LONELY GATE — This gate is 6 feet high, chained and padlocked...and alone. But without a fence, what good does it do? "It more or less discourages people", says an official at the Kansas City Municipal Airport. The City erected the gate long ago to keep the curious from driving here to watch planes land. Now the curious go to the new airport, and the dirt road has been overgrown with weeds. (AP Laserphoto)

Building Is Run By Sister Hilda

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — When Franklin University bought the Sisters of Notre Dame's high school building, the boiler engineer, building superintendent, and maintenance staff remained under a contract with Franklin.

All of those duties belong to a woman — a nun-of-all-trades. Sister Hilda Riesenbergh has been caring for the building for her order for the past three years.

Not many of Franklin's professional staff and probably none of the students realize that one woman performs the monumental task of keeping the building clean and its systems in perfect working condition. Those who do know are almost incredulous.

Sister Hilda, slim and simply dressed, is taken aback by the attitude toward her. She is modest and unassuming: "I really like to work. And I have a feeling for buildings," she explained.

"They all are different. It takes about a year to really know a building. They do have quirks."

University officials respect her expertise and confidently leave management of the building in her hands.

"There's heat, that's all I know," said Fred Bunte, president of the university.

If something goes wrong in the plumbing or other systems, she sends for someone and she shows them where the problem is. Then Franklin is billed for the service.

Sister Hilda's occupation is not what one would usually expect from a nun of the teaching order of the Sisters of Notre Dame but she perceives a special need for the job.

"I volunteered for it because it seemed important to me for the buildings to be well kept. I think a well-maintained building and classrooms are good for learning."

For 10 years before coming to Columbus, she cared for a much larger school building owned by her order in Cincinnati, where she had a hand in construction work. "We converted a 90-year-old convent into a school, lowering ceilings and taking down walls."

Her day starts at 5:30 a.m. when, accompanied by an armed guard from the university, she leaves the convent to unlock the school next door and adjust the three boilers to bring heat up to daytime temperature.

She tests the water for minerals to determine whether the chloride is too low or if sulfite is too high. She cleans classrooms when they are not in use. On weekends when the building is empty she has help from a university student with such chores as cleaning the gymnasium floors.

She couldn't be happier with the arrangement — doing work she believes in, staying on in the convent community that has become a familiar home and adding her salary to the convent funds.

Rizzo Campaigns For Next Year

By LEE LINDER
Associated Press Writer
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Frank Rizzo's name is not on the ballot but he is campaigning hard to make sure it will be next year.

The controversial and embattled mayor wants voters to change the city charter by wiping out the present two-term limit. This would allow mayors to be elected for as long as the people want them.

Rizzo, nearing the end of his second term, has concentrated his campaign in the city's white neighborhoods and at one point bluntly urged supporters to "vote white" to counter his heavy black opposition. He later changed his pitch to "vote Rizzo" as a way to push the charter change question on next Tuesday's ballot.

The 58-year-old mayor, a Democrat who made his name here as a tough police commissioner, tells voters Philadelphia would be in trouble if he had to leave City Hall.

"I am the difference. I know what to do and how to do it," he declares on daily visits to working-class neighborhoods. "I've been trained to make decisions and how to lead. I don't do everything right. Even God didn't do everything right — he selected a guy who betrayed him."

A locally commissioned Gallup Poll shows charter change losing by a 3-1 margin, which the former police commissioner charges is "a deliberate attempt ... to sway the election."

The mayor, in his daily swipes at what he calls the prejudiced press, urges people to switch from the television channel that paid for the Gallup poll to the city's two other commercial stations.

In denouncing Gallup's poll, he said, "When the election is over he'll go out of business, no one would hire him again."

Rizzo supporters claim their own polls show the charter change passing.

One poll, allegedly taken by a California organization, shows "yes" on the charter has a slight edge. But the pollster they quoted said the figures Rizzo relied on were non-existent and never came from his firm.

And Rizzo said Monday that a poll taken by his workers showed the referendum passing by 48 percent to 28 percent, with 24 percent undecided.

That poll, while featuring a large sampling — 78,000 persons interviewed between September and Oct. 26 — reportedly did not feature the scientific weighting designed to give an accurate cross section of public opinion.

"I will not be able to appear on next year's ballot if charter reform loses, and we all know the alternatives spell disaster for Philadelphia," Rizzo said in a letter mailed to voters in predominantly white neighborhoods. "I need your support more than ever (in) the most important campaign in my life."

His personal appearances also skirt those areas in Pennsylvania's biggest city where blacks, who comprise nearly 40 percent of the population, are concentrated — and Rizzo shrugs this off by contending he goes where his strength is. The emotional issue of changing the 27-year-old charter overshadows everything else on the ballot, including the fight for a new governor of Pennsylvania, to replace Democrat Milton Shapp who also isn't eligible to seek a third term under state law.

It resulted in a record 204,849 new registered voters, making more than one million eligible.

The city's Republican Party, out of power since 1950, has taken no official position on the charter but last week it adopted a resolution censuring Rizzo for "bringing the city to its knees — economically, politically and psychologically."

Both major party gubernatorial candidates oppose the charter change. Republican Richard Thornburgh denounced "racially divisive and inflammatory statements," and Democrat Peter Flaherty said he was against "anyone using racial tactics which would polarize or divide blacks against whites."

Rizzo's reply is: "I'm no racist. The black man has done better under me than all of the liberal mayors before me. I'm more liberal than most of the fakers when it comes to human rights."

Lately Rizzo has been campaigning with another embattled politician, Rep. Joshua Eilberg, D-Pa., who has been indicted on charges of receiving compensation for helping a Philadelphia hospital get federal funds.

"The news media is trying to make it appear that I'm supporting someone who broke the law," Rizzo says. "Well, Josh Eilberg is no criminal unless he is proven guilty by a jury of his peers."

He also criticizes the federal government for indicting Eilberg just before the election. "They have no stake in the community and they are trying to dictate what's best," he says.

The mayor says the present city charter denies voters the right to choose, arguing that "almost every other major city in this country trusts the people to pick their mayor without any such limit."

Rizzo's opponents contend such a restriction doesn't hurt the president of the United States and insist eight years is time and power enough for anyone.

Everywhere he goes Rizzo boasts how his administration has made Philadelphia succeed where other cities in America are failing. And also how he got the job because he was a tough cop.

In 1968, after the assassination of Martin Luther King, many cities had riots and violence, but not Philadelphia, Rizzo points out.

"Why?" he asks. "Because I was around. If that makes me a bully, so be it."

See Core City's Population Drop

CHICAGO (AP) — A study by a trio of college professors predicts Chicago's six-county metropolitan population will jump from 7 million to 8 million in the next 20 years, especially in minority groups, but added that the core city's census during the same period will drop.

Professors Kenneth Hinz and Donald Bogue of the University of Chicago and Pierre de Vise of the University of Illinois-Chicago Circle said by the year 2000, blacks will make up 47 percent of the city's population, compared with 43 percent in 1970. They said there also will be a dramatic rise in the Spanish-speaking population. However, Chicago's census, which showed 3.3 million population in 1970, is expected to drop to 2.7 million in 2000, the study said.

Warn Of Retaliation In Soviet

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans in Moscow could face Soviet retaliation for the U.S. conviction and sentencing of two Russians for espionage,

Carter administration officials say.
Standing in the way of such retaliation, the officials said Tuesday, is the Soviets' desire to conclude a strategic arms limitation treaty. A Soviet act of reprisal could make it politically more difficult for the Carter administration to conclude negotiations and persuade the Senate to approve a treaty.

The Soviets, the officials said, have indicated privately to the administration they will not link the SALT talks to the espionage case or Monday's convictions.

But the officials, who asked not to be named, said they fear the Soviets might arrest actual American spies in the Soviet Union or manufacture cases against innocent Americans, try them, and sentence them to long terms in jail.

A federal judge in New Jersey sentenced the two former United Nations employees,
Valdik Enger and Rudolf Chernyayev, to 50 years in prison each. They were freed at the request of the administration, pending appeals.

One State Department official said Judge Frederick Lacey
"didn't make it any easier for us" when he said he imposed the sentence in hopes it would prevent the Soviets from "doing what one of their leaders once said they would do — bury us."

Now the administration is trying to come up with the next American move.

The president has the power to send the two back to the Soviet Union, a course the Soviets have demanded in public statements. They cite their decision this summer to suspend the sentence of American businessman Francis Crawford, whom they convicted of currency violations. Crawford was allowed to return to the United States.

But administration officials say they lean toward allowing the legal process to continue.

The convictions still might be reversed on appeal.

Judge Lacey denied defense contentions that Chernyayev and Enger were victims of entrapment by the FBI, which had a Naval officer leave a note on a Soviet vessel offering to sell defense secrets. An appeals court might rule differently, one official said.

Another possibility is a trade, with the two Soviets being exchanged for someone in Soviet custody, perhaps dissidents Alexander Ginsburg and Anatoly Shcharansky.

Marmon Car Builder Claimed Links To Carolina

By DR. H. G. JONES
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)—The first 500-mile International sweepstakes held at Indianapolis Speedway was won in 1911 by a Marmon Wasp with an average speed of 74.61 miles per hour.

Twenty years later Howard C. Marmon won the American Society of Automotive Engineers medal for outstanding automotive design—the Marm Sixteen. Only a year afterward, however, the great Depression spelled doom to the famous motor car manufacturing company.

Oldtimers remember the prestigious motor cars bearing his name, and North Carolinians should remember the man who designed them, for he and his wife were familiar residents of the northwestern part of the state for a quarter of a century.

A descendant of earlier North Carolinians, Howard Marmon was born in Richmond, Ind., in 1876. He attended Earlham College and received a degree in mechanical engineering from the University of California.

The young engineer was employed by his father's flour mill manufacturing plant, and with the tools available he built his first automobile in 1903. The Marmon motor car was an instant success—especially popular among racing drivers.

By 1910, Marmon cars were entered in 93 races, winning 25 first places, 24 second prizes, and 13 third place finishes. Then came the great victory at Indianapolis.

The Marmon was the talk of the motor world, and its builder was elected president of the American Society of Automotive Engineers in 1913. Among his other inventions was the duplex downdraft manifold, widely used in building straight eights.

During World War I, Marmon served as a lieutenant colonel in the Army Air Corps. He built McCook Field at Dayton, Ohio, and served as its first commanding officer. Marmon also was the chief developer of the Liberty airplane motor.

At the end of the war, Marmon decided to move to North Carolina, home of his ancestors. He was not a stranger to the state, for as a teen-ager with precarious health, he had spent many months recuperating at the Cloudland Hotel, which was anchored to Roan Mountain in Mitchell County to keep it from blowing away.

"Perfect exemption from hay fever" was the hotel's boast.

Marmon and his wife, Martha Foster Marmon, bought the site of an old hotel and country club at Pineola, restored several structures, built a 60-acre lake, and named the showplace "Hemlock Hedges."

There they spent much of their time. Marmon, of course, continued his engineering experiments, among them the first commercially practical 16-cylinder car. It achieved a continuous speed of 70 miles per hour, a record not broken until 1953.

In 1932, though, with the country in the depths of the Depression, the Marmon motor car became a relic of the past.

Shortly before, Howard Marmon had developed a straight-eight radically changed from previous models.

It never reached the assembly line, and the only experimental model for years was kept at Pineola. It later was placed in the automotive museum in Milwaukee, Wis.

Following the failure of his automobile business, Marmon became more active in affairs of Avery and Mitchell counties. He helped found Kaolin Inc., which provided employment for many residents of the area.

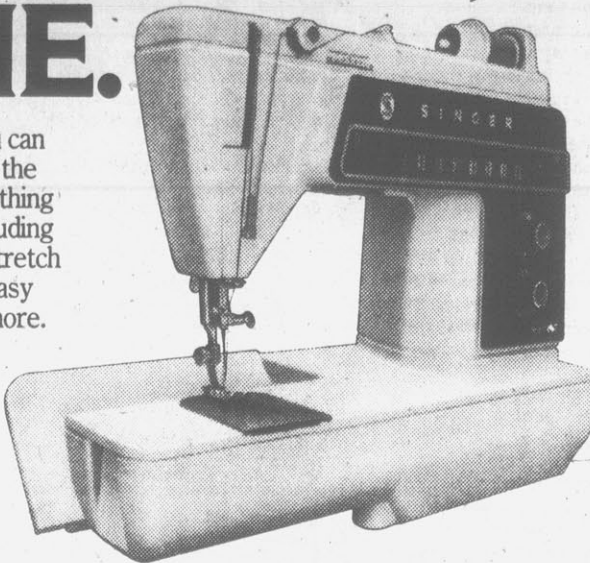

An advocate of forest conservation, Marmon founded Anthony Lake Nursery of Pineola, at the time one of the largest evergreen nurseries in the east. He also developed a fish hatchery and later gave it to the state.

He and his wife were patrons of the Presbyterian Church at Pineola. Marmon died in 1943 and his wife died in 1959. Both were buried in Indianapolis. The few Marmon automobiles still in existence are prized possessions of collectors.

Breath Or Body Odor May Be Of Diagnostic Value

CHICAGO (UPI) — Scientists say doctors some day may be able to check for diseases by analyzing the breath or body odor of patients, and mechanical noses may issue people security clearances based on sniffing inspection.

"There are really some important implications to odor research," says Frank Jarke, a chemist at the Odor Sciences Center at Chicago's IIT Research Institute, an affiliate of the Illinois Institute of Technology. "It's an innovative area with enormous potential."

The seven-scientist center does odor research for companies and the government. It uses a 15-woman sniffing panel for testing.

Jarke said the panel consists of housewives partly because they can conveniently get together but also because the companies whose products they test want to know how the average person reacts to scents.

Two scientists are currently taking breath charts of 100 patients — diabetics, people who are likely to get diabetes because of their parents' genes and a control group.

"Most doctors say that sick people with metabolic disorders give off different types of breath than healthy people," Jarke said. "If something is wrong inside it may be manifested in the breath. Then we would have a new diagnostic tool to catch disease and possibly a new early warning device."

The patients' breath is charted with a chromatograph, which breaks down the breath vapors into their component chemicals.

Jarke said the scientists are trying to determine if diabetics show different chemical patterns in their breath than healthy people. He said doctors have noted that the breath of diabetics during comatose attacks is heavy with acetone, a chemical that smells like nail polish.

He said the research may eventually lead to a breathalyzer device, similar to those used to check for drunken drivers, to screen patients for diabetes.

He said a host of other diseases and even the aging process may some day be monitored by charting the change in a patient's breath or body odor.

Jarke said some prototype devices for registering dynamite vapors have been developed and the center is conducting research aimed at improving mechanical dynamite sniffing. Successful mechanical detectors would be more efficient than bomb-sniffing dogs because the animals must be trained every month and may not be as sensitive to vapors, he said.

Because every person's body odor is a "unique signature, like a fingerprint," it may even be possible for a sensing device to check for a person's true identity using body odor, Jarke said.

"It would be a boon to protect nuclear reactors or other locations with security problems. It's a possibility for the future."

During the Vietnam War, Jarke said, the center worked with the U.S. government on developing a special sensor to detect body odor of Viet Cong hiding in jungle forests.

Body odor readings were taken in a laboratory while subjects lay in a tube that captured their smell. The project was never completed because the jungle background smells strongly masked body odors, Jarke said.

Another center project is investigating how ventilation can be reduced in buildings without making rooms too smelly. If the energy used for ventilating residential buildings could be cut by 25 percent, the equivalent of about 1.5 million barrels of oil a day could be conserved nationwide, he said.

For the center's product-testing to trace sources of odor pollution, the panel uses a special sniffing-post device to take whiffs of odors and measure their intensities and the thresholds after which they can no longer be smelled. The panel's work helps manufacturers make more pleasant-smelling products and counteract odor pollution.

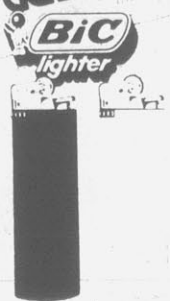

"There are only about five special labs like ours in the country," Jarke said. "And it's an important field. After all, people should have the right to live a happy and odorless life if they want."

How Tar Heel Representatives, Senators Voted

By Roll Call Report
WASHINGTON — Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the final days of the 95th Congress.

HOUSE
KOREAGATE — Voted, 219 for and 170 against, to impose a mild rather than harsh penalty on Rep. Edward Roybal, D-Calif., for infractions such as lying to the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct about his receipt of $1,000 from South Korean influence-buyer Tongson Park. With this vote, the House decided Roybal should be reprimanded (the mildest possible punishment) instead of censured (the harshest) for violating the House ethics code. The ethics committee recommended censuring Roybal after charging him with failing to report the $1,000 as a campaign contribution, converting the money to personal use, and lying four times in testimony to the committee.

Rep. Phillip Burton, D-Calif., a supporter of the mild penalty, said Roybal is a man of "complete honor, complete integrity and complete conviction of commitment to the public interest, and I am going to plant my flag on the side of Ed Roybal...."

Rep. Floyd Spence, D-S.C., who favored the harsh penalty, said: "The public has a right to expect that when a Member of Congress testifies under oath about his own conduct, he will tell the truth. This institution will be brought into more serious disrepute if we do not as an institution express our strong disapproval."

Members voting "yea" wanted a mild rather than harsh penalty for Roybal.

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L. H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Charles Rose, D-7, and Lamar Budger, D-11, voted "yea."

Reps. Stephen Neal, D-5, Richardson Preyer, D-6, W. G. Hefner, D-8, James Martin, R-9, and James Broyhill, R-10, voted "nay."

PAYING CRIME VICTIMS — Rejected, 184 for and 199 against, the conference report on a bill (HR 7010) providing cash payments to innocent victims of crime. The bill authorized the federal government to join states in reimbursing out-of-pocket expenses and loss-of-work expenses resulting from the crime. The maximum claim which the federal government would help to pay was $35,000; the federal share could not exceed 25 per cent, or $8,750. The bill authorized $120 million over three years.

Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., a supporter, said that "this is simply an effort at balance and to do something for the victim when we do so much for the criminal."

Rep. Charles Wiggins, R-Calif., an opponent, said: "I predict with great confidence that this will become the food stamp program of the Department of Justice, that it will become the snail darter that brings the (department) to a standstill."

Members voting "yea" favored passing the bill to compensate crime victims.

Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner and Gudger voted "yea."

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Martin and Broyhill voted "nay."

ABORTION — Refused, 188 for and 216 against, to soften its position on abortions in order to agree with the Senate. The House thus insisted on its tougher language, permitting Medicaid abortions only when the mother's life is threatened. Despite the impasse this vote produced, the two chambers later agreed on continuing the abortion language they approved in 1977 after five months in disagreement.

The upshot is that, under existing law, a poor woman can get Medicaid funding of her abortion only if (a) her life is endangered, or (b) two doctors certify the abortion as "medically necessary," or (3) the pregnancy resulted from rape or incest that was promptly reported to officials.

Members voting "nay" favored the strictest possible restrictions on federally funded abortion.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Gudger voted "yea."

Preyer did not vote.

SENATE

HUMPHREY-HAWKINS — Passed, 70 for and 19 against, the Humphrey-Hawkins bill. Later signed into law, the bill (HR 50) requires the executive branch and Federal Reserve Board to annually announce plans to cut unemployment. It sets goals of cutting the jobless rate to four per cent by 1983 and the inflation rate to three per cent by then. It is a skeleton of the original Humphrey-Hawkins proposal, a "full-employment" bill that required the federal government to be the "employer of last resort" and contained no inflation goals that might clash with employment goals.

Sen. Spark Matsunaga, D-Hawaii, a supporter, said the bill directs the federal government "to use all the practical means, including anti-inflation devices, to promote full employment; production and purchasing power."

Sen. Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., an opponent, said that while "no one wants to vote against something called the Full Employment and Balanced Growth Act of 1978," he would do so because it "could very well be this country's first step toward centralized economic planning."

Senators voting "yea" favored the bill.

Sen. Robert Morgan, D, voted "yea."

Sen. Jesse Helms, R, voted "nay."

HUMPHREY-HAWKINS — Rejected, 41 for and 45 against, an amendment to eliminate Humphrey-Hawkins bill (see vote above) language setting 1983 as the target year for cutting the inflation rate to three per cent within five years, and said that any government program to do so would so straitjacket the economy as to cause recession and higher unemployment.

Opponents said the goals of cutting employment and inflation need not clash. Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., added: "This bill must say clearly to working Americans that if we have jobs for all people, we had better make certain the wages they earn are worth something."

Senators voting "yea" wanted to de-emphasize the inflation section of Humphrey-Hawkins. Morgan voted "yea." Helms voted "nay."

Introducing The Max Account. A way to maximize your interest on money in the bank.

"BEFORE MAX, I'D ALWAYS KEPT MY MONEY IN THE SAVINGS & LOAN"

"NO CHARGE PER CHECK, NO TRANSFER FEES. MAX KEEPS IT SIMPLE"

Until now, you've had several ways of handling money. You could keep it in a checking account, where it does nothing for you until you need it. You could keep it in a savings account at a bank or Savings & Loan, then switch it over to checking when your balance was running low. Or you could keep it here and there, in various accounts rather than consolidated in one place.

Now these cumbersome ways of handling money are obsolete. With the new Max Account at NCNB, you can earn interest on every dollar you put in the bank. Here's how it works:

- 1) You open an NCNB Savings Account and an NCNB Checking Account. (If you have either or both, we can easily convert you to Max.)
- 2) You authorize us to make automatic transfers from Savings to Checking whenever it's needed. (No phone calls, no coming by the bank—Max works automatically.)

- 3) You deposit only to Savings. The automatic transfers take care of the money you need in Checking.
- 4) In the meantime, you've got the maximum possible amount of money working, earning 5% a year in Regular Savings, until it's needed in your Checking Account.

Now, many banks have a plan like Max. But consider the costs: "Transfer Fees," "Per-Check Charges," and others.

As you can see by the chart, with Max, there's just one simple charge per month.

Most plans have a minimum balance, and you're charged if you dip below the minimum, even one day of the month.

But the charge for Max is based on your average monthly savings balance. So you don't have to worry about your balance every day.

The Max Account.

The more you can keep in savings, the less you pay.

Keep This Average In Savings.	"Transfer fee"	"Per-Check Charges"	You pay only this monthly charge:
$2500 or more	None	None	No Charge
$2000 - $2499	None	None	$1
$1500 - $1999	None	None	$2
$1000 - $1499	None	None	$3
$500 - $999	None	None	$4
Under $499	None	None	$5

The monthly service charge for Max is based on the preceding month's average Savings Account balance.

If you can keep an average of $2500 or more every month in Savings, you can get Max at no charge.

Plus DeLuxe Banking, which many people call "The Best Bank Account in North Carolina." It includes all the services most people use, either at no charge or at special rates.

So, wherever you keep your money now, whatever amount you have, get the details on The Max Account and DeLuxe Banking soon.

They're the kind of services that you would expect when a bank wants to be the best bank in the neighborhood.

Child's Death Is Ruled Accident

DANBURY, N.C. (AP) — The death of a 10-year-old girl in a fall at Hanging Rock State Park Saturday has been officially ruled an accident.

She was one of about seven or eight boys and girls from the First Seventh Day Adventist Church who were on an outing, according to Pastor Milton Pruitt.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rallied in heavy trading today, responding enthusiastically to the dramatic rescue plan for the dollar announced by the government this morning.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had been falling sharply as the market closed Tuesday, turned around and soared 12.56 to 805.01 in the first half hour today.

The early tally of New York Stock Exchange issues showed gainers outnumbering losers by more than a 2-1 spread.

Before the market opened the Federal Reserve Board disclosed a series of steps designed to shore up the depressed dollar in foreign exchange — including an unprecedented increase in the discount rate by a full percentage point, to 9 1/2 percent.

Such a jump in the discount rate, which is the charge the Fed sets on loans to its member commercial banks, appeared likely to exert strong upward pressure on other interest rates.

But many Wall Streeters take the view that such a short term jolt is necessary medicine to treat the basic problems of inflation in this country and lack of confidence in the dollar overseas.

The dollar rallied sharply today as foreign exchange traders responded to the news. And bond prices, which are especially sensitive to changes in the inflation outlook, also surged upward.

The brokerage firm of Bache Halsey Stuart Shields Inc. issued a statement asserting: "All the difficult choices that had to be made have been made. The administration and the Fed have bitten the bullet."

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 19.40 points to 792.45, its lowest close since it finished at 775.21 last April 13.

In the last half of October the average took a 104.62-point beating over the course of 12 trading days.

Declines outnumbered advances by more than a 2-1 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume came to 42.88 million shares against 59.48 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index dropped .98 to 51.67.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 1.98 at 136.75.

Battling In Tanzania

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — Invading Ugandan forces and Tanzanian defenders were locked in heavy fighting today near the Ugandan border, the government said. Eight of 16 Americans in northern Tanzania were reported safe and the American Embassy continued its efforts to locate the others.

A Tanzanian government source said the fighting was concentrated around the crossroads town of Kyaka, about 20 miles south of the border with Uganda along the western shore of Lake Victoria. Kyaka is about 700 miles northwest of Dar es Salaam, capital of this East African nation.

A government statement said the Ugandans, supported by tanks and heavy artillery, invaded through the Minziro, Kakunyu and Mutukula areas Monday, advanced as far as Kyaka.

SCLC Trying Prevent Tests

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — The Southern Christian Leadership Conference was to try again this morning in its attempt to get a temporary restraining order to stop the high school competency test from being administered today and Thursday.

The SCLC failed in its attempt to stop the test Tuesday when a federal judge was unavailable to hear the case. Judge Franklin T. Dupree Jr., in whose jurisdiction the case falls, was expected to take up the matter early today.

If the order is granted, Edwin M. Speas Jr., special deputy state attorney general, said the state would appeal it.

The SCLC filed suit in federal district court here Tuesday asking for the order.

The suit asks for an injunction barring the state from giving the test until after a full court hearing on the merits of the issue, according to Golden Frinks, national field director for the SCLC.

The suit was filed on his behalf by New Bern attorney John Harmon. After it was filed in New Bern, it was forwarded to Raleigh and Edgecombe County.

The suit was filed in the name of a black Edgecombe County High School student but is a class action, according to Frinks.

The two-part exam is to be given for the first time to the state's 86,000 high school juniors and will test the students' minimum skills in math and reading. Students will be required to pass the test to receive a diploma in 1980.

Frinks said the suit is supported by leaders of the N.C. Coalition for Quality Education, a group of test critics based in Durham and Greensboro. A threat to file suit by the state NAACP was withdrawn two weeks ago.

North Pitt's William Knight

Knight Keys N. Pitt Success

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

Senior William Knight has been one of the North Pitt players most responsible for leading the Panthers to their most successful football season ever, according to coach Pat Smith.

Knight, who goes both ways, is a leader on both offense and defense. From his cornerback spot on defense, he has intercepted four passes and returned eight punts for 155 yards and one touchdown.

On offense, Knight has amassed 580 yards in 125 carries this season and has caught nine passes. He has scored a total of eight TD's this season, including one kickoff return.

"He's the most aggravating player I've ever coached," joked Smith. "He's always late. You've heard of these guys who are the first to practice and the last to leave? Well, William's the last to get there and the last to leave."

Smith said Knight has "done a good job gaining yardage this year with no more of the linemen than we have."

Knight's running and defensive efforts have led the Panthers to a 5-4 record going into the final game of the season this Friday night against D. H. Conley. Win or lose, it will be the best season in the school's history, but the Panthers hoping for a win to finish above .500.

"It's been a great year this year," according to Knight. "We've been winning for once."

Knight said the Panthers lost some spirit when they were defeated by Ayden-Grifton in the fifth week of the season after compiling four straight victories. Since that game, the team has won only one of four.

But the Panthers are working hard for a win in the closing game of the year, according to Knight. "We want to get better than .500 this year." A win against the Vikings will close out a successful season.

Knight credited a switch in defenses with some of the team's success. "No one expected us to win this many games, but we switched defenses at the beginning of the season. Really, the players didn't think it was going to work, but it turned out to be in our favor. The defense has really helped us this year."

Knight has hopes of playing college football after graduation, but at 5-11, 170 he may be hampered by his size. So far, all he has received from colleges is feeler cards.

"It looks like his size has hurt him," Smith said. "Flanker or defensive back would probably be his best position in college. Of course, don't many teams recruit defensive backs."

Last week, Farmville Central copped a third straight trip to the state 3-A playoffs by defeating North Pitt 41-0. This week, the Jaguars will be gunning for their third consecutive Eastern Carolina Conference championship, along with their third straight undefeated season in league play, as they host North Lenoir in the final week of play.

The team's domination of the ECC over these years has been devastatingly complete. It has had the top offense in the league, and only on rare occasions has another team even come close to winning a game against Farmville Central. This season, only three conference opponents even scored against the Jags in their first six games with Southern Nash's 13 points being the most given up. The Jaguars have scored over 40 points in each of those six games.

But at the same time you marvel at the feats of Farmville

Central, you must feel a small amount of pity for Ayden-Grifton. The poor Chargers have been the bridesmaids for the past two years, losing only to Farmville, but always finishing second.

With one game left on the schedule, Ayden-Grifton still has a mathematical chance to catch the Jags, but the odds are overwhelmingly against it. Most likely, they will end up with the same record as the past two years, 6-1.

In this week's season finales, Farmville hosts North Lenoir, D. H. Conley is at North Pitt and Ayden-Grifton travels to C. B. Aycock.

Last week's games saw the Jaguars rolling over the Panthers and Ayden-Grifton blanking Conley, 19-0.

Ayden-Grifton

Charger coach Dixon Sauls said he thought his team played well in the win over Conley, despite coming off a big loss to Farmville Central two weeks ago.

"Coming off a big loss, I felt like we had a little letdown going into the ballgame. Between that and the officials showing up late, we got off to a slow start. Billy Holland was injured on the first play and that hampered our offense."

Despite all those factors, Sauls said the Charger defense performed well by shutting out the Vikings and holding them to under 100 total yards. Sauls praised the defensive performances of Donnie Jackson, who recovered a fumble, and Tim Odham, who blocked a punt.

Offensively, the Charger line performed well, particularly in the second half, Sauls said. He gave individual accolades to linemen Corky Teachey, Ron Cox, Ken Branch, Johnny Stocks and Jolly Dail.

Of this week's C. B. Aycock game, Sauls said, "They pose probably the most difficult problem we've had in terms of defense all year because of their numerous alignments on offense. They have a lot of motion and send out a lot of receivers. They are a very difficult team to defense."

Sauls said his team is seeking to finish the season on a strong note, however, and take second place once again.

Farmville Central

"We played about average; nothing spectacular," Jaguar coach Gene Brewer said of his team's 41-0 win over North Pitt.

The team's offense did a pretty good job of moving the ball, Brewer said, and the defense shut off the Panther run and pass pretty well.

On offense, Brewer said backs Donald Reid, Roger Joyner and David Dunn ran well, while linemen Ronald Reid and Phillip Gordon, along with receivers Billy McLawhorn and Allen Moore, played a good game.

Brewer praised the effort of his entire defensive line, especially Ronald Reid and Phillip Gordon.

This week's foe, North Lenoir, is "the type that always has big, strong football players," Brewer said. "They always have the potential of being tough anytime they play. Sometimes they play well, and sometimes they don't."

The Jaguars will have the incentive of another ECC title and undefeated conference season.

North Pitt

The Panthers are in position to have their first winning season ever, if they can get past D. H. Conley this week. North Pitt is currently 5-4 overall with their final game coming up.

"We're trying to make everybody feel like this is the biggest game we've ever had," coach Pat Smith said. "It's our first chance for a winning season, and it could mean a tie for fourth place in the conference."

The Conley game is always a big one for North Pitt, regardless of records, Smith said, but this encounter is especially important. "We're going in with the thought that it will give us a winning season," Smith said.

The Panther coach had little to say about last week's game with Farmville Central, however. "There's not a whole lot you can say — we just got beat by a much better football team. They were better in all aspects of the game."

Smith said he was especially impressed with the Jags' kick coverage, which kept the Panthers in a hole all night, and the passing of quarterback Donald Freeman.

Tackle Tim Corey was the only Panther to draw individual praise from Smith. "I can't single anybody out because (Farmville) was just so much better."

D. H. Conley

The Vikings' lack of offense in the Ayden-Grifton game was due partially to some absences in the team's offensive line, coach Chuck Dunn said.

"We weren't able to do much on offense. We had right many people out and had a lot of inexperienced people playing in the line. They weren't able to pick up a lot of the defensive stunts that Ayden-Grifton came prepared with."

Dunn added, "Defensively, we played pretty well for most of the game, except for one drive at the beginning of the second half. That was the only time we had a consistent lack of defensive effort."

Two defensive players, safety Chris McDaniel and linebacker Peter Carmon, were the only ones mentioned for their play against the Chargers.

This week's game, at North Pitt, is always a tough one for the Vikings, Dunn said. "North Pitt is always tough over there, and they're going for a winning season, so they've got a lot of incentive."

The Vikings also have the incentive of ending the year on a winning note, Dunn said, "so it's going to be a tough ballgame, but it should be a good one."

Network Signs Coach McGuire

NEW YORK (AP) — If NBC is smart, it will give Al McGuire a television show in prime time. His personality, humor and insights almost seem wasted on Sunday afternoons.

McGuire, the longtime miracle worker and basketball coach at Marquette University, is controversial, funny and sensitive. He could be the star of a variety show, regaling audiences with spicy jokes and anecdotes.

The perfect format would be McGuire standing behind a bar, dispensing drinks and wisecracks to all comers. In another life — before he became a highly successful coach and crack TV color man — McGuire was a bartender at the family's joint in Rockaway Beach, N.Y.

NBC previewed the Al McGuire Show Tuesday, holding a news conference at a posh midtown restaurant to announce McGuire's multiyear contract as commentator for the network's college basketball broadcasts.

The fancy bash was worlds away from the sweaty bar in Rockaway, but McGuire was still vintage McGuire.

"I want to thank NBC for letting me be me," said McGuire of his critically acclaimed stint last year as NBC's color commentator. "I thought there would be a lot of hanky-panky but they didn't hold me back."

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Organizers of the 1980 Winter Olympics say they are running out of money and are seeking a loan of as much as $10 million to deal with anticipated cash flow problems.

But they said Tuesday they are getting their multimillion dollar cost overruns and other financial problems under control and expect to have a balanced budget in time for the February 1980 Games.

"We're implementing proper management practices... It's no longer Dreamsville," said Peter Spurney, a new $100,000-a-year administrator hired to solve the problems plaguing preparations for the Olympics.

Spurney said he expected the cash shortages to be only temporary, and to disappear as soon as fundraising efforts for the Olympics pick up and more federal money is appropriated to cover construction cost overruns.

But he acknowledged that as early as next month, the Lake Placid Olympic Organizing Committee may not have the money on hand to meet its

Guidry Awarded Cy Young Trophy

NEW YORK (AP) — Ron Guidry, whose 25-3 record produced the best American League winning percentage since 1934, today became the fourth New York Yankee to win the Cy Young Award.

The 28-year-old left-hander won all 28 first-place votes to become the fourth unanimous winner.

Guidry started the season with a 13-game winning streak. He finished with 25 triumphs — 15 of them after losses by his team — on the way to the top winning percentage, .893, in the AL in 44 years and the best percentage ever for a 20-game winner.

His earned run average of 1.74 also was an uncontested league high, while his 248 strikeouts in 273.3 innings were second to the 260 recorded by California's Nolan Ryan.

"It was a great season — a season a lot of pitchers dream about," said Guidry, the bandy-legged left-hander whose scrawny frame belies the speed of his fastball. "I don't think it's fully hit yet. I haven't had time to sit down and reflect on what I've been through. "Maybe it will hit me one morning in the duck blind, when I'm hunting," said the native of Lafayette, La., where hunting fills his winter months.

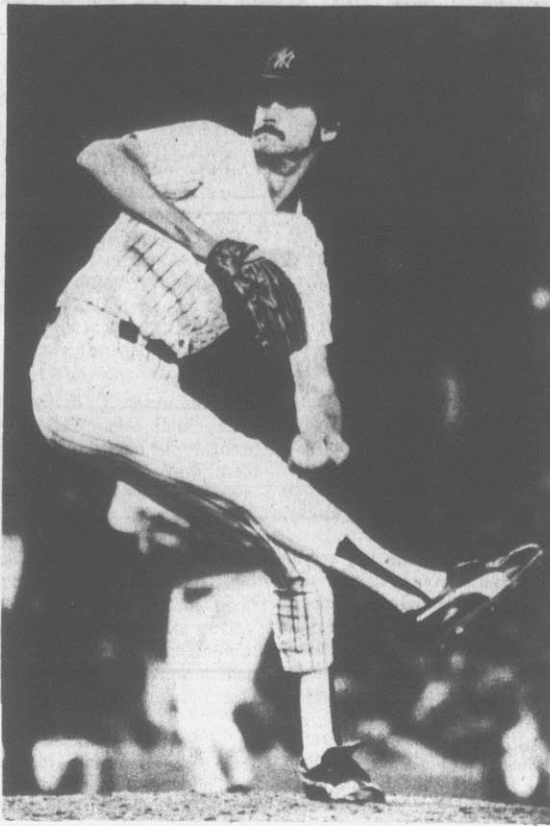

The shock may hit him harder than most AL batters did this year. Guidry surrendered just 187 hits in helping New York to its second consecutive World Championship. Mixing a magical potion of sliders with his smoking fastball, he walked just 72 batters in his 35 starts.

The special committee of the Baseball Writers Association of America made Guidry the first unanimous winner since 1968, when Denny McLain of the American League Detroit Tigers and Bob Gibson of the National League St. Louis Cardinals won all the first-place votes.

Mike Caldwell of the Milwaukee Brewers was second this year, collecting 25 second-place votes and one third, Jim Palmer of the Baltimore Orioles, a three-time Cy Young winner, was third with 11 thirdplace votes and one for secondplace).

It was the second consecutive AL Cy Young for a Yankee pitcher. Relief ace Sparky Lyle, the forgotten man in New York's miracle comeback of 1978, won the prize in 1977.

This year's voting came as little surprise, but last week, when Guidry received two awards here in as many days, he was reluctant to consider the award his until official announcement was made.

Meriweather Stars In New Orleans Win

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

With a non-stop scoring machine like Pete Maravich in the backcourt and a rebounding terror like Truck Robinson up front, it doesn't leave much room for stalling roles on the New Orleans Jazz. But Joe C. Meriweather had his chance to grab the spotlight Tuesday.

Meriweather grabbed 20 rebounds, blocked nine shots and hit 14 points to pace the Jazz to a 97-92 National Basketball Association victory over Chicago. His performance somewhat at least equaled Robinson's 28-point, 17-rebound evening and 18 points for Maravich.

"Joe Meriweather was a superman tonight," said Bulls Coach Larry Costello. "He looked like Bill Russell, a real flyswatter. Any time we tried to penetrate, he'd knock it back at us."

Meriweather also shut off Artis Gilmore, holding the Chicago center without a shot in the third quarter and to just six points in the second half.

"Joe C. was tremendous tonight," said Jazz Coach Elgin Baylor. "He rebounded very well, did a good job on Gilmore and was blocking everything."

Elsewhere in the NBA, Golden State outlasted San Antonio 139-138 in overtime; Phoenix beat New York 120-108; Milwaukee edged Kansas City 114-112; Indiana was a 119-114 victor over Cleveland; Atlanta topped Washington 110-108; Los Angeles mauled Denver 134-107 and Portland held off Detroit 112-96.

Warriors 139, Spurs 138
John Lucas had 29 points and 14 assists and scored Golden State's final four points in a wide-open game. Lucas had tied the contest at 125 with 29 seconds left in regulation, forcing the overtime.

George Gervin had 34 points for San Antonio.

"Lucas is playing as well as any guard in the NBA right now," said the Spurs' Allan Bristow, who defended the slick Lucas for part of the game.

Suns 120, Knicks 106
Phoenix easily outclassed the Knicks in the second half after leading by just two points at halftime. New York was playing without scoring star Bob McAdoo, who has a back injury, and rookie guard Mike Richardson, out with a leg problem. The Suns made do without center Alvan Adams in the second half after he injured his ankle.

Paul Westphal had 35 points to pace the Suns to their seventh victory in 10 games, the best start in the franchise's history.

Bucks 114, Kings 112
Milwaukee broke a four-game losing streak behind Brian Winters' 27 points and Marques Johnson's 23.

But Bucks Coach Don Nelson said recently acquired guard Norm Van Lier "played super. We wouldn't have won the game without him."

Nelson wasn't pleased with the difficulty of the win.

"We've struggled too hard," he said. "It should never be this hard at home."

Pacers 119, Cavaliers 114
Johnny Davis' 27 points, including 11 in the final quarter; 24 points by Ricky Sobers and 21 from Alex English led the Pacers over Cleveland.

Terry Furlow had 25 for the Cavs, who lost their fourth straight.

Hawks 110, Bullets 106
Jack Givens sank a jump shot with 17 seconds to go to boost the scrappy Hawks past the defending league champions. Eddie Johnson contributed 23 points to the Atlanta offense.

"We're a young team and we play in a lot of peaks and valleys," said Atlanta Coach Hubie Brown. "Tonight we just had our peaks at the right time."

"It was a good win for us, beating the champs in their own gym," said Johnson.

Lakers 134, Nuggets 107
Adrian Dantley scored 22 points, Jamaal Wilkes and Lou Hudson each added 20 and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar had 18 points and 17 rebounds to lead Los Angeles.

George McGinnis was the game's high scorer with 25.

Blazers 112, Pistons 96
Lionel Hollins exploded for 13 pints in the final 8:53 to spring the Blazers from a tight contest. He finished as the high man for Portland with 19 points, leading four double figure scorers.

Bob Lanier paced the slumping Pistons with 33 points.

Stadium Bus

ECU News Bureau

A free shuttle bus system will be put into operation by East Carolina University on Saturday evening, Nov. 4, to transport fans to and from Ficklen Stadium for the football game between ECU and Appalachian State.

University officials hope that hundreds of fans who would otherwise drive to the stadium area will use the shuttle buses and thereby relieve parking and traffic problems around Ficklen.

The bus service will begin at 5 p.m. Saturday from the parking area around the Willis Building at Reade and First Streets. Buses will run at intervals of 15 minutes prior to the 7 p.m. Kickoff. After the game, buses will leave the stadium at 10 minute intervals returning fans to the same Read and First Street location.

ECU officials said the bus service is being inaugurated with the hope that a substantial number of fans who would otherwise drive or ride in private cars to the stadium will use the bus service. The Willis Building location is easily accessible and cars may be parked there easily and left until after the game. This service will be particularly valuable during inclement weather when much of the stadium parking is closed to protect intramural grounds, ECU officials said.

Area fans are encouraged to use the free shuttle bus service for the remaining three football games at Ficklen Stadium on November 4, November 11 November 18, officials said. Large crowds are expected at each of these games. The game on November 11, against William and Mary, is an afternoon game which will be a highlight of ECU Homecoming.

49'ers Fire Pete McCulley

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Another head coach, Pete McCulley, is out and San Francisco 49ers management apparently is solidly behind Joe Thomas, the man who does the firing.

"I sure am," team owner Edward DeBartolo Jr. said Tuesday when asked if he is happy with Thomas, general manager of the National Football League team that stands 1-8 this season.

"He's going to make this club a winner, and he's already gotten us some excellent material. It's just a matter of time. I know that," the owner added after announcing Tuesday the firing of McCulley and the appointment of an offensive assistant, Fred O'Connor, as interim coach for the rest of the season.

"We'll find out what kind of coach Fred is now," said Thomas after the third coaching change — starting with the dismissal of Monte Clark — since he began running the team last year for new owner DeBartolo.

O'Connor, 39, has never before been a head coach in the NFL. He was a quarterback at East Stroudsburg, Pa., State and held assistant coaching jobs at Maryland, Southern Mississippi and Villanova before joining the staff of the Chicago Bears, where he was offensive backfield coach the last two seasons.

Duke Downs Lady Pirates

Duke University's women's tennis team gained an 8-1 victory over East Carolina University yesterday.

The lone ECU victory came in the number two singles when Debbie Spinazzola took a 6-0, 6-0 victory over Cathy Haggarty.

East Carolina is now 1-3 in the fall season, and closes out action on Monday, hosting the University of North Carolina.

ASU Offense Tough; Defense A Question

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

There seems to be little doubt that Appalachian State University has one of the nation's most powerful offenses. What remains a question mark on the Mountaineer team is its defense, which has been both good and bad.

Going into last week's 35-34 loss to East Tennessee State, the Mountaineers were ranked seventh in the country in total offense, grinding out 438.9 yards a game. They were fourth in scoring with a 32.3 point average.

"They have a great offense," ECU assistant coach Wayne Hall said. "The thing that makes them so tough to defense is that they throw as well as they run the ball."

Hall lists wide receivers Rick Beasley and Chris Patterson as excellent receivers. "Beasley ranks among the top receivers in the country, and Patterson is not that far behind him, and really is the better athlete. He's a great punt return specialist.

Scouting Report

too, and as an example of what he's capable of, he ran a 60-yard reverse for a touchdown last week."

Leading the way, of course, is quarterback Steve Brown, an outstanding thrower who reads the defense well. "Eddie Estes is a good strong runner at fullback, and Scott McConnell is a real good halfback, and one of the top scorers in the country, too."

Hall said that while the offensive line is not real big, it has excellent quickness. "They do a real good job with their blocking scheme in cutting folks off.

"What really makes them go is that their passing game is so complimentary to their running game. If you stack up to stop their running game, they pass and make you drop back to open up the running game. Their offense really does a heck of a job."

But while the Mountaineers are doing so well offensively, they have had their troubles defensively, giving up 241 points in eight games.

"They haven't been consistent," ECU aide Henry Trevathan said. "They've done a real good job against some teams, but a very poor job against others." UT-Chattanooga and Furman together, ran off over 120 points in a two-week span against the Mounties. "But they've held four teams to 14 or less points, and Richmond got only 19 against them," Trevathan

YOU CAN BUY A CHEAPER MOPED, BUT YOU'LL PAY FOR IT.

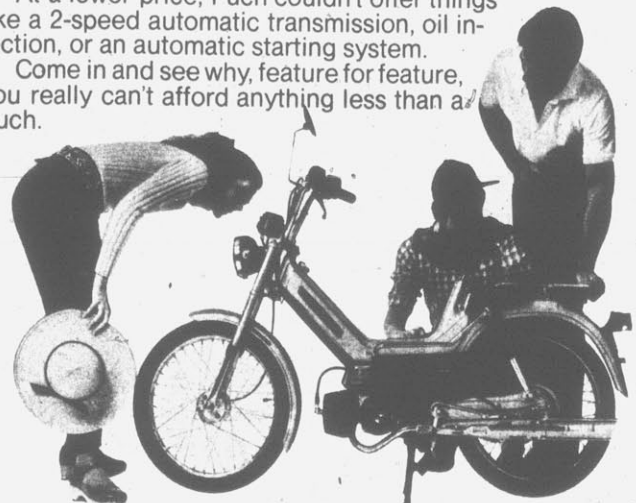

If some mopeds cost less than a Puch, it's simply because they're lesser mopeds.

They don't have the hill-hungry hi-torque engine that most Puchs have.

They aren't designed as thoughtfully, or constructed as carefully, as Austrian-built Puchs are.

At a lower price, Puch couldn't offer things like a 2-speed automatic transmission, oil injection, or an automatic starting system.

Come in and see why, feature for feature, you really can't afford anything less than a Puch.

The Stars gained a 3-2 win over the previously unbeaten Tornados.

The Stars got their first goal in the first period with Mike Coop scoring on an assist from Clay Young.

In the third period, both teams scored. Matt Coop scored with an assist from Mike Coop for the Stars, but the Tornados matches that with Lewis Robin scoring in a corner kick.

Both again scored in the final period. Eric Jarman set up the goal by dribbling through three defenders, then passed to Mike Coop, who scored. David Lee got the other Tornado goal.

Atlanta Falcon placekicker Tim Mazzetti raises his arms to signal another good field goal as he kicked five Monday night in Atlanta to defeat the Los Angeles Rams, 15-7. Sharpe Picked Top Rookie GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — For the second time in the last three weeks, North Carolina freshman quarterback Chuck Sharpe has been chosen Atlantic Coast Conference rookie of the week.

Sharpe led the Tar Heel offense Saturday as it faced a South Carolina team which was unbeaten at home. The six-foot, 185-pound Burlington native completed 11 of 17 passes for 149 yards and three touchdowns in leading North Carolina to a 24-22 victory over the Gamecocks.

Sharpe, in his first year at the helm of the North Carolina offense, proved he could come through in the clutch as he steered the Tar Heels through 10 of 15 third-down conversions.

The Tar Heel quarterback had previously been cited as rookie of the week when he led North Carolina to a 34-29 triumph over Wake Forest.

The selections are made by a committee of the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association.

Bartender Now Kicker

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Tim Mazzetti, who kicked five field goals for Atlanta as the Falcons upset the Los Angeles Rams Monday night, was a Philadelphia bartender until he got his big break in the National Football League.

Mazzetti said he made about $50-a-night working at Smokey Joe's, a saloon near the University of Pennsylvania, where he studied finance at the prestigious Wharton School.

"I had to make a living," he explained in an interview Tuesday. "I had frequented Smokey Joe's quite a bit in college ... I had been the bouncer there, did a little bartending there, and after I got cut by the Eagles I got a full-time job there, which I needed rather badly at the time."

Mazzetti lasted long enough with the Philadelphia Eagles to play in two exhibition games, but he was bumped for the team's kicking job by Nick Mike-Mayer.

Ironically, Mike-Mayer had been beaten out in Atlanta last year by Fred Steinfort, who went sour this season, enabling Mazzetti to try out for the Falcons.

Working the night shift at the bar enabled Mazzetti to practice in the daytime and travel to various NFL cities for free agent tryouts.

He said the Eagles decided to go with Mike-Mayer after the veteran had kicked a 47-yard field goal against Atlanta in the preseason.

"I had done okay in kickoffs and made all my extra points, but I never had the opportunity to try a field goal," Mazzetti said. "I couldn't blame coach (Dick) Vermeil, though. He had to go with the veteran who'd done it before. But he gave me enough exposure to get the job here."

Mazzetti's next tryout was with the Dallas Cowboys, but he said he was beaten out by Raphael Septien, a veteran. "I did better in field goals," Mazzetti explained. "But his kickoffs were really great."

Atlanta called Mazzetti Oct. 9. And he found himself competing with a third veteran, Pitt's Carson Long.

But this time Mazzetti was signed.

"Coach (Leeman) Bennett felt I was in a bit better groove, which I felt, too," said Mazzetti. A week later he booted two conversions as Atlanta defeated Detroit. The next week he missed his first NFL field goal attempt but made two more, including a game-winning 29-yarder as the Falcons defeated San Francisco.

Then came the nationally televised game Monday night. He kicked five straight from 21, 37, 30, 26 and 87 yards.

"I was nervous as hell ... but under control," he recalled. "I knew what I was doing."

Mazzetti, still a few credits shy for a degree, said he has toyed with the idea of becoming a stockbroker. But right now he'll concentrate on football.

"Football will be good for a while," he said. "It will give me time to think about what I'd like to do with my life."

Scouting Report . . .

pointed out. "They are capable of doing the job," he added.

The most impressive people on defense have been three up-front men, freshman nose guard Chuck Gordon, and tackles Willie Stricklin and Steve Rice.

"The best in the secondary is strong safety Mike Pritchett," Trevathan added, "and the rest of them are all veterans."

"We really don't know what their problem on defense has been," he added. "They try hard, and they have made good stops. They've just had breakdowns."

The Pirates and Mounties meet Saturday at 7 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium.

Washington Subway Belongs To Computer Age

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Traffic choked Washington's broad avenues and a pedestrian had "such moments as heart disease and brainstorms are made of." So, asked the Washington Post, why not a subway system for Washington? The date was Dec. 5, 1909. Nearly seven decades later — on March 27, 1976 — the capital got its first five miles of a subway, a modern sophisticated system, but also one in which 14 percent of the computerized fare collection equipment is out of service at one time. And it won't have a completed system until at least 1984, 11 years behind schedule and $4.3

billion above original cost estimates. In short, Washington did not heed the advice of Superintendent Richard Sylvester of the Metropolitan Police, who warned in 1909 that a subway "should not be put off until the 11th hour."

But the 11th hour was fine for Debbie Stutz, a 20-year-old secretary for the Federal Election Commission. The Metro was extended toward her Alexandria, Va., home in July 1977. She had taken a half-hour bus ride into town; a combined bus-subway trip gets her to Washington 10 minutes faster.

While she's crossing the Washington-Virginia border, other riders are coming from the Maryland suburbs and still more are moving within the city. Twenty-three miles of the planned 101-mile system are operating and 210,000 people ride the trains each weekday. Ms. Stutz and fellow commuters speed under the Potomac River at 73 mph. "Your ears pop going through the tunnel," she said. "You look around and see everyone swallowing at the same time."

Above ground, the partially built system is not yet reducing rush-hour traffic, but District of Columbia officials say congestion is not getting worse. A survey this year estimated that 32.6 percent of subway riders would otherwise travel by automobile or cab. Metro is a computer-age subway, and its sophisticated equipment is responsible for most of its problems.

San Francisco's BART has gotten most of the bad notices. But Washington's system has had troubles too; failures of computerized fare equipment are rattling the nerves of riders. When Ms. Stutz enters the subway at a station next to the Pentagon, she buys a farecard — if the farecard machine is working. To get on the platform, she inserts the card into a special gate — provided the gate is working.

"Some days you wake up and you're not in a terrific mood," Ms. Stutz said. "You can't get your card into the turnstile and you miss your train. You feel like going back to bed."

Francis Francois, a transit authority board member, said the unreliability of the fare-collecting equipment has reached a crisis stage. "We are clearly losing riders and revenues," he commented.

At the same time, transit officials gladly cite the subway's benefits. Crowds of workers zip from one part of town to another during lunch hour, shopping and finding new restaurants. Wives meet husbands in town for lunch, often for the first time in years.

A $2 subway ride takes a family of four tourists from the Capitol to Arlington Cemetery in off-peak hours. A taxi ride is $3 to $4.

Metro, the nation's seventh major subway system, is almost free of violent crime, with only two robberies using force this year.

"I'm not afraid on the subway," Ms. Stutz said. "I've seen the TV monitors. If someone would approach me, I know (subway officials) are watching."

Graffiti, which plague other systems, are not an art form here. The subway designers didn't make it easy; platforms have no pillars and do not touch station walls. Graffiti are treated like a spreading fungus, quickly washed away.

When finished, Metro will cost $6.8 billion, give or take $100 million. This compares to the $1.4 billion cost of the 75-mile BART opened in September 1972 to serve the San Francisco area.

If the full Washington system had been finished on schedule in 1973, the cost would have been $2.5 billion, transit officials said. But with inflation, labor disputes, minority hiring practices, design and environmental problems, the earliest completion date now is 1984.

Like other systems, this underground-surface transit operation must survive with local government subsidies. Fares cover only half the cost of a ride. But ridership has met or exceeded expectations for the areas being served.

Based on rush-hour rides, fares range from 40 cents to $1.05. An off-peak or Saturday ride costs 50 cents. A Sunday schedule is planned next year, a welcome development for Washington Redskin fans who could ride directly to Robert F. Kennedy Stadium. Trains recently carried 7,500 people to a Monday night football game, and subway officials say there's room for many more.

Now that the system is showing Washington its potential, those who put up with jackhammers and ripped-up streets can decide if the subway was worth the noise and aggravation. Jack Neslage, owner of an art gallery and frame shop near the Dupont Circle stop, is pleased.

Neslage has seen a resurgence of business in his area of art galleries, small shops and outdoor cafes. When the subway carried its first Saturday passengers Sept. 30 — the same day service was extended from 8 p.m. to midnight — he tripled his normal business.

The same day, a restaurant at a major department store reported selling 245 pizzas. The previous Saturday it sold 120.

great tasting coffee doesn't have to be bitter.

Natural chicory is the reason. You see, most coffees are made from coffee beans alone and can sometimes taste bitter. But Luzianne is different, in a better way. Luzianne takes the finest coffee beans and blends them with just the right amount of natural chicory, coffee's natural flavor partner. Chicory helps unlock more of coffee's rich, full-bodied flavor and remove the "bitters."

Stamps In The News

AP Newsfeatures
By SYD KRONISH

Since its founding in 1819, Singapore has been a multi-racial and multi-religious society. As immigrants came to its shores, churches and cathedrals were built as well as mosques and Hindu temples. Many of these edifices remain today as monuments of Singapore's past.

Four new stamps have been issued by Singapore featuring these national monuments — an Armenian church, Hajjah Fatimah mosque, Sri Mariamman temple and the Thian Hock Keng temple.

The first adhesive depicts the Armenian church completed in 1835. It is the oldest Christian church in Singapore. Today there are very few Armenians remaining in Singapore, thus the declaration of the church as a national monument seen on the stamp.

The second shows Hajjah Fatimah mosque, built in 1845 and beautified by a single prominent minaret but influenced by the architecture and spire of St. Andrew's Church.

The third illustrates the Sri Mariamman temple, the oldest Hindu house of worship still in use in Singapore. Since 1827 the temple has been refaced and redecorated. The last renovation took place in 1972.

The fourth stamp pictures the Thian Hock Keng, the oldest Chinese temple in Singapore. The present temple building has had very few changes since it was built in 1839.

Each of the stamps is a 10-cent denomination and thin rectangular shape. A souvenir sheet of the same designs also was issued.

The indicia of the aerogramme features a stylized blue "USA" and "22 cent" on a white background. In the lower left corner of the aerogramme is the inscription "Aerogramme Via Airmail Par Avion."

Orders for first-day cancellations should be addressed to: Aerogramme, Postmaster, St. Petersburg, Fla. 33733. The cost is 22 cents per aerogramme, and your orders must be postmarked no later than Nov. 3. Do not send cash or postage stamps for payment.

To eliminate the requirement for Postal Service personnel to apply the return addresses, you are asked to send either self-addressed envelopes of a 5-address labels with your orders.

Pakistan has issued three new stamps showing different roses as a tribute to the 14th anniversary of the "Retion for Development, agreement by Pakistan, Irnd Turkey for closer economic, technical and cultural collaboration. According to the director general of the Pakistan Post Office in Karachi, each stamp bears a specimen of the common garden rose grown in each of the three cooperating countries.

Revival Series Begins Nov. 5

The Rev. Moore is an evangelist of the Pentecostal Holiness Church and has written a number of books relating to eschatology and prophecy.

Special music will be featured nightly with special emphasis on youth in the morning service Sunday, Nov. 12. Services will not be held Saturday, Nov. 11. The public is invited to attend, according to Pastor Maurice Phelps.

Candidate Claims Desperation Tactics

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Saying his opponent is "ashamed of the Republican Party and is engaging in desperation tactics by appearing with prominent Democrats today," Democratic senatorial candidate John Ingram kept up his attack on Sen. Jesse Helms.

"In the final weeks of this campaign," Ingram told about 110 party faithful at a Democratic rally here Tuesday night, "you're beginning to hear all kinds of allegations in desperation because, in my judgement, the more the $6-million man attacks my record in the insurance commissioner's office, the further down the hole he's going because he knows he's in trouble."

Ingram told the rally that Helms has "hidden from the issues" because he has not appeared with Ingram.

The incumbent senator is also shying away from the GOP,

Ingram said. "He's ashamed of the Republican Party — the Republican Party that couldn't even get 50 people out here to see (Kansas Sen.) Bob Dole the other night. He won't associate himself with any other Republican candidates," Ingram declared.

Prior to the rally, as he flew to Fayetteville on a chartered plane, Ingram was quizzed by reporters about Helms' scheduled appearance today with two Democrats — Gov. Jim Hunt and Sen. Robert Morgan — to announce a new agreement between the state and federal Housing Administration.

"I think you better talk to Hunt about it," Ingram said at first. After a brief pause he added, "It's just a desperate move because he (Helms) knows I'm going to win."

Helms also said on Tuesday that he believed Hunt would support him if he were a Democrat.

Ingram said Hunt had promised his full support to the Ingram campaign and he did not take Helms' remarks seriously.

Ingram spent the day campaigning in High Point, Greensboro, and Fayetteville. Aside from the remarks about Helms' Republican loyalties and Helms' appearance with Hunt and Morgan today, Ingram stuck to his frequent speech, reciting his accomplishments as insurance commissioner and assailing Helms as a tool of big-moneyed special interests.

"Our $6-million Republican opponent stands with the big money, gas and oil interests, big money insurance industry and big money out-of-state lobbyists," Ingram said at a Greensboro news conference.

"He has become part of the 'system' which has ripped off the people of this state for millions and millions of dollars."

Ingram was scheduled to speak to students at N.C. A&T University in Greensboro but only 21 persons — about half of them A&T students — showed up for the noon session in a 1,000 seat auditorium.

Ingram went on with his speech anyway but he referred to the small turnout by saying, "Perhaps the noon hour is not the best for scheduling this kind of thing."

Anthony Hines, organizer of the appearance, blamed the low turnout on scheduling problems and a lack of student interest.

Ingram tried to shrug it off by saying, "The best laid plans of mice and men come to naught."

Four Accidents Here Tuesday

An estimated $2,200 property damage resulted from a series of four traffic mishaps investigated yesterday by Greenville Police.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from an 11:12 a.m. mishap at the intersection of Memorial and Arlington Drive involving cars driven by Kenneth M. Jermons of 305 Millbrook St., and Calvin D. Griffin of 1066 Fairfax Ave.

Damage was estimated by police at $400 to the Jermons car and $600 to the Griffin vehicle who charged Griffin with having improper brakes.

An estimated $250 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 9:15 p.m. collision at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Farmville Boulevard.

Drivers involved in the mishap were identified as Billy Joe Riggs of Homestead Trailer Pk., and Bobby Chisolm of Route 1, Hardeeville, S.C. by investigators who charged Chisolm with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety.

An 8:09 a.m. collision at the intersection of 14th and Charles Streets involved cars driven by Nathaniel Oliver VanNortwick III of 1700 Canterbury Rd. and Walter Connors Eagles of 4102 East 14th St.

Damage was estimated at $175 to each of the two cars.

Cars driven by Susie Hassell Sutton of Route 4, Greenville, and Mary Helen Whitehurst of 1712 Forest Hills Dr. collided about 4:35 p.m. on Charles Street, 20 feet North of the 12th Street intersection, causing an estimated $600 damage to the Sutton car and $250 damage to the Whitehurst auto.

Chase Accident Causes Blackout

TAYLORSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — This town of 2,500 was without power today after a speeding car and the sheriff's patrol car that was chasing it toppled three telephone poles, including the one that carries the town's main transformer.

Johnny Carlton Keever, 18, was being treated today at Alexander County Hospital.

Exactly how the 6 a.m. incident began wasn't immediately known, but Keever was being chased through downtown Taylorsville when his car collided with the deputy's and both cars skidded into the poles.

Duke Power Co. officials said they expected to restore power at about 9:30 a.m.

Solicitation Requests OK'd

City Manager Ed Wyatt announced the approval of four requests to conduct solicitations in Greenville.

Approved were requests submitted by: Gamma Sigma Sigma service sorority for permission to conduct a sidewalk solicitation on Nov. 3 and 4 to raise funds for United Cerebral Palsy; the Pitt County Alumni Chapter of North Carolina A & T State University for permission to conduct a merchant solicitation from Nov. 8-Dec. 3; Greenville Girl Scouts for permission to sell Girl Scout calendars door-to-door from Nov. 14-Dec. 14; and by the Seventh Day Adventist Church for permission to conduct a merchant solicitation on Oct. 27 and 28, Nov. 3 and 4, and Nov. 17 and 18 to raise funds for world wide mission.

Marketbasket Survey Shows Bills Are Still Rising

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

With the Thanksgiving holiday barely three weeks away, consumers are finding little to be thankful for at the supermarket. An Associated Press marketbasket survey shows grocery bills went up again during October, rising more than 1½ percent.

One-third of the items checked by the AP cost more at the start of November than they did a month earlier and increases outnumbered decreases by more than two-to-one.

The AP drew up a random list of 15 commonly purchased food and non-food items, checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973 and has rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month. One item, chocolate chip cookies, was dropped from the list at the end of November 1977 because the manufacturer discontinued the package size used in the survey.

The latest survey showed that the marketbasket bill increased last month at the checklist store in eight cities, rising an average of 3.4 percent. The bill decreased at the checklist store in four cities, down an average of 1.3 percent, and was unchanged at the survey store in the 13th city.

On an overall basis, the marketbasket bill at the checklist stores rose 1.7 percent during October. That compared with a 1.1 percent boost in September and a 1.2 percent decline in August.

Comparing today's prices with those at the start of the year, the AP found the marketbasket bill increased at the checklist store in every city; the overall rise was 8.4 percent.

Most of the increases followed rises at the farm and wholesale levels. Only two items — orange juice and eggs — decreased in more cities than they increased in, and most of the price drops for orange juice came because of special sales.

No attempt was made to weight the AP survey results according to population density or in terms of what percent of a family's actual grocery outlay each item represents. The AP did not attempt to compare actual prices from city to city. The only comparisons were made in terms of percentages of increase or decrease.

The items on the AP checklist were: chopped chuck, center cut pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter, Grade-A medium white eggs, creamy peanut butter, laundry detergent, fabric softener, tomato sauce, milk, frankfurters and granulated sugar. The cities checked were: Albuquerque, N.M., Atlanta, Ga., Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Detroit, Los Angeles, Miami, New York, Philadelphia, Providence, Salt Lake City and Seattle.

Telephone Merger

TARBORO — The North Carolina portion of United Telephone Company of the Carolinas merged with Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co. today.

Both CT and T, with headquarters in Tarboro, and UTCC-NC, are members of the United Telephone System, whose parent company, United Telecommunications Inc., is located in Kansas City, Mo.

The 14 UTCC-NC exchanges involved in the merger include: Kernersville, Gibsonville, Fuquay-Varina, Angier, Siler City, Pittsboro, Bonlee, Goldston, Robbins, Carthage, Wispersing Pines, Vass, Pinehurst and Southern Pines.

The merger will add 56,000 telephones to the more than 772,000 served by Carolina Telephone. Before the merger, CT and T served 38 Eastern North Carolina counties. The merged company will serve customers in 47 counties through 128 exchanges.

The merger, designed to improve efficiency and service, was announced in May 1977.

4-H Program, Tour Is To Extend Three Days

"Economics In Action" is the name given to a program involving 37 Pitt and Martin County high school students in a program/tour extending over three days — today, tomorrow and Friday.

The three day event, one of the largest ever held locally with 4-H Club members participating, got underway this morning with registration at Martin Community College.

Among today's highlight activities are a tour of Weyerhaeuser plant, of the Town and Country Store in Williamston, and Wachovia Bank and Trust Company.

Speakers today include John Boykin, executive vice president of the Williamston Chamber of Commerce; Robert Dahle, extension economist, N. C. State University; and Melvin Bowen, a Williamston attorney.

Thursday's program begins in Martin County, and at noon the location will be changed to Pitt County.

Tours again figure prominently in the day's schedule, with ones slated for Biggs Funeral Home in Williamston, and in Robersonville, the Blue Ridge Shoe Company and Carolina Peanut Company.

Beginning at 1:15 Thursday afternoon the 37 4-H'ers will tour Eaton plant and television station WNCT. A pig picking followed by a program of entertainment will be held in conjunction with a tour of Worthington's Farms at Ballards Cross Roads, beginning at 6 p.m.

Friday, the final day of activities, features a tour of Sunshine Garden Center at 8:30, a 10 a.m. tour of Monk Tobacco Company in Farmville, and afternoon tours of Martin Marietta Rock Quarry and Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

"Economics In Action" is designed to show 4-H Club members a look at diversified commercial activities in the two county area.

The program has been a joint one, involving Martin County 4-H leader Stan Dixon and Pitt County 4-H leaders Mrs. Jean Johnson and Mrs. Dale Panaro.

Persons on the Steering Committee are Ed Walker and Mrs. Pat Burnette of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce, John Boykin of the Williamston Chamber of Commerce, and Robert Ussey of N.C. State University, Raleigh.

Funding for the three-day tour has been provided by the students, with assistance from the Pitt County 4-H Club through funds received from United Way.

Agency Is Still Far From Its Christmas Goal

Although some donations for the Christmas project for foster children have been received, officials with the Pitt County Department of Social Services said today that the agency is still a long way from its goal of providing Christmas gifts for some 160 children.

Linda Shoffner, Foster Care worker for the department said today that the agency will need at least $3,000 in donations and no shopping can be done until workers have the money to do so.

Mrs. Shoffner said donations can be sent to the Pitt County Department of Social Services, Foster Care Christmas Project, P. O. Drawer 1546, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

She noted that persons who would rather shop for a child may contact Peggy Chandler or Linda Wilder at 758-2167.

Boy, Age 6, Is A Welder

YOUNG WELDER — Six-year-old Donny Kranz has made about 45 hammers in his dad's repair shop, and wants to be a welder. (AP Laser-photo)

By CHUCK HAUCK
The Marshall Independent
HENDRICKS, Minn. (AP) — A welder's torch hisses and a fireball cascades off a small workbench where an elfin figure — his blond curls tucked under a large welder's helmet — is busy making a hammer.

The scene is not Santa's workshop, but Bob's Repair in Hendricks. The confident elf is Donny Kranz, the proprietor's son.

The boy, an up-and-coming welder, is 6 years old. He's been around the shop since he was 2.

"He's got his own bench and his own welder," said Bob Kranz, Donny's father. "He does a pretty good job, too. If he keeps with it, someday he'll really be good at it."

Donny is known around town for his hammers. He cuts metal on a bandsaw, welds two pieces together, grinds the rough spots smooth and then spray paints the works. His dad supervises.

The result is a serviceable and popular tool. The going rate for a Donny Kranz hammer is 50 cents, and he's sold about 50 of them, his parents say.

He's also made a drum, cymbals and a teepee. "He wanted a drum, so he made one for himself," said his mother, Arlene Kranz.

Donny started kindergarten this year. But after school and dinner, he's back in the shop, she said.

The boy is shy around strangers — except when talk turns to business.

"What do you want to be when you grow up, Donny?" a recent visitor asked as the young entrepreneur turned out his fifth hammer of the day.

"A welder."

"Do you like welding?" "Uh-huh," he said, setting the hammer down and holding out an upturned palm. "That's 50 cents."

"He's quite a businessman," the visitor observed, reaching for coins.

"He even sold me one the other day," said Kranz, chuckling. "Made me pay for it, too."

The Kranz children are accustomed to work. Donny's 11-year-old sister, Tammy, has helped her mother run a cafe for the past two years. One of Donny's first projects was welding a latch on the cafe stove.

He also used his welding skills to create what may be the only modified tricycle in the county.

He welded a weight box to the front, lowered the seat and welded on a speed shift lever and throttle controls.

"It's a hot rod now," he says, proudly. "It really works, too."

Handicaps For Millions

By United Press International

The 1970 census included a question that asked Americans for the first time if they had disabilities. The results indicate 40 million do.

But many respondents are believed not to have disclosed handicaps to the census taker and because of that, among other reasons, no one knows the actual number of handicapped people in the United States.

Survey numbers vary depending on whether the "handicap" is self-determined or one judged by others. Benefit programs tailor their own definitions of handicapped using such factors as severity, longevity and ability to work.

Heart disease, cancer, diabetes, epilepsy and emotional illness are considered handicaps in some surveys, not in others.

One group, The National Arts and the Handicapped Information Service, has derived statistics from a range of sources. It gives this breakdown of Americans with handicaps, with some people in more than one category:

- 11.7 million physically disabled, of which 500,000 are in wheelchairs and 3 million use aids in walking. This group also includes the elderly whose mobility is impaired, amputees, and those with chronic illness such as cardiovascular disorders, arthritis and cerebral palsy;

- 12.5 million temporarily injured with broken limbs, back injuries, severe burns and the like;

- 2.4 million deaf and another 11 million with hearing impairments;

- 1.3 million blind and 8.2 million visually impaired;

- 6.8 million mentally disabled, including the retarded, brain damaged, severely emotionally disturbed, severely learning disabled;

- 1.7 million homebound with chronic health disorders and diseases; and

- 2.1 million in institutions.

Eliminating overlaps, the National Arts and the Handicapped Information Service estimates there are 50 million handicapped Americans.

Goggles Worn By Lab Kittens

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Steven Cool's laboratory kittens wear goggles.

Dr. Cool, an associate professor of physiological optics at the University of Houston College of Optometry, is conducting experiments which he hopes will help physicians overcome visual disorders in human infants.

Infants' visual stimuli during their first months of life, Cool says, affect their general intelligence, motor development and binocularly, the brain's ability to receive information from both eyes.

Among many unresolved questions, he says, is how an infant's brain takes what it sees and turns it into meaningful information. Physicians already know that what animals see during their first few months can permanently affect their vision.

When kittens are a month old, Cool equips them with goggles which block out the use of one eye. The kittens stay in goggles for about four months. He has found that even though the patched eye still functions, the animal is blind in that eye after the goggles are removed.

Sound Wire Played Role In History

By MARC WILSON
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — In 1938, William Corsin thought he sounded pretty good in the shower, good enough to be an opera star. All he wanted was a way to hear himself sing. So he turned to his cousin, Marvin Camras.

The result was the first "talking wire" — what we now know as the tape recorder.

The family had known cousin Marvin was a genius since he built a flashlight from scratch at age 4 and a radio transmitter from a Model T coil at 7. At 22, he built the forerunner of the modern tape recorder, a gadget that played back his whistled tune, "Yankee Doodle."

His new way to store and reproduce sound would revolutionize the radio and movie industries and help launch television and rock music.

It would aid development of sonar and mislead the Germans on D-Day.

It would provide the "smoking gun" to topple President Nixon.

And 40 years later, it would make inventor Camras a millionaire but leave him bitter about "people who handle money."

In 1888, he recalls, Oberland Smith proposed that a lot of little magnets could record sound, but Smith's efforts to develop a sound recorder were ignored until Camras was approached by Corsin.

"I took some old piano wire, rummaged around and found some old transformers thrown out by Western Electric and bought a motor from a flea market. I worked in my cousin's father's auto body shop for maybe a couple of months," he says.

Then Camras set up the equipment in the basement of his parents' home, turned it on and whistled "Yankee Doodle." He rewound the piano wire and started the machine. There he was, whistling "Yankee Doodle."

"I was quite surprised," Camras says. "In fact, I'm still a bit surprised it worked."

Then a sophomore electrical engineering student at the Armour Institute, Camras took his invention to his professors, then to the Armour Research Foundation, a new consulting service.

The foundation — now the Illinois Institute of Technology Research Institute — patented the invention and hired Camras when he graduated. It was his first job and he's still there as a senior scientific adviser.

"By 1940 we had developed some pretty good units, but the armed forces were the only ones who could get one — it was all top secret," Camras says. "We used it to help train pilots and to help develop sonar for submarines."

But the big, ultra-secret project involved D-Day, the Allied invasion of Normandy.

"We recorded battle sounds and developed equipment to amplify it by thousands of watts," Camras said. "The recordings were placed where the invasion wasn't to take place, where the Germans, through planted false information, thought the Allies would land."

"As to whether it worked, 'I presume it did,' Camras said. 'We invaded successfully didn't we?'"

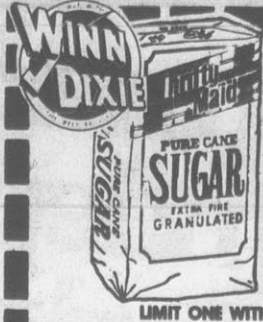

The war ended and the public learned of Camras' work. Headlines read: "Marvels of the Talking Wire." "Put Interview on Tiny Wire." "Wire Sound Recorder To Be Shown To Public." and most prophetically: "Wire Recorder Has Big Future In Peacetime."

"Camras has created or developed 500 inventions that have been patented. ITRI holds each of the patents and has issued licenses. L.J. Lorenz, assistant to the director of ITRI, concedes Camras' earnings 'probably are minuscule when you consider the magnitude of his inventions. But he's still a millionaire.'"

"It's normal procedure for employees of research companies to sign agreements that assign any invention they come up with to the company," he adds.

"Camras' current project is a low-cost, lightweight video-tape recorder. In a few years, he expects to have a 10-pound version for about $200. The most popular unit today weighs 40 pounds and costs about $800."

"Inventions are funny," Camras says. "Something you think is going to have a great impact gets no attention, goes nowhere. Some little thing that doesn't seem to mean much has a great impact."

Could Build Own Coffin

LOS ANGELES (AP) — How many people get a chance to build their own coffins?

Dale Zamzow wants to give more people that opportunity. So he has written an instruction booklet explaining how to design and build your own coffin.

"Caskets normally cost anywhere from $100 to $5,000," he said in a telephone interview. "But if you take my booklet, and add the cost of the materials, you can build one for around $50."

Zamzow, 45, estimates he has sold 200 sets of instructions through magazine and newspaper advertising in the past few months. He has the sneaking suspicion, however, that some people bought the booklets, which sell for $2.45 apiece, and sent them to friends as jokes.

But the systems analyst from San Jose is not kidding. In fact, he emphasizes the importance of planning ahead.

"It's so simple to make a coffin that I made the instructions sound complicated," he said.

For example, Zamzow points out, the booklet says to pick up part 714 and attach it to part 715, using item 12 and item 13.

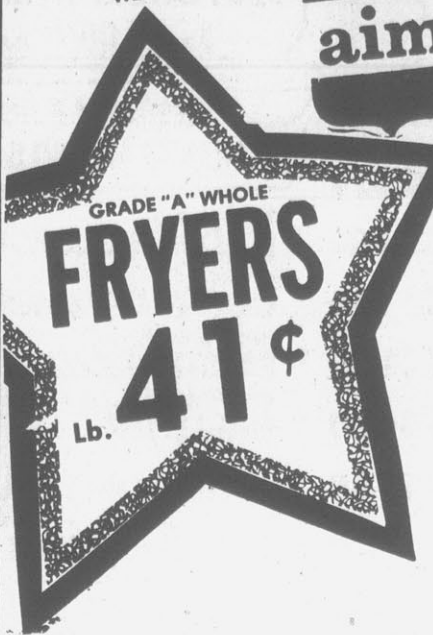

"Actually, that means to nail two pieces of wood together with a hammer," he explains. Zamzow recommends stained plywood as the most practicable material for people with simple coffin tastes, but says those with a more expensive flair can make one with gold leaf and diamonds on it.

He also issues a warning about the size of the coffin.

A Touch Of Jazz In The Early Hours

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If you like live jazz, you usually can partake of it only in smoke-filled clubs well after sundown. But there is an alternative just after dawn — NBC's "Today" show.

Thursday's effort, for example, features jazz violinist Stephan Grappelli. On Nov. 17, Buddy Morrow's big band will squeeze in the studio for a salute to the late Tommy Dorsey.

Other jazz guests this year have included trumpeter Maynard Ferguson, vibist Lionel Hampton, the new Dave Brubeck group, ragtime's Eubie Blake and guitarists George Benson and Bucky Pizzarelli.

One March show even had a piano quartet of some fairly decent keyboarders — Teddy Wilson, Marian McPartland, Ellis Larkins and Tommy Flanagan.

All this jazz isn't just because "Today" host Tom Brokaw, in his days anchoring at KNBC here, often was sighted after his 11 p.m. newscast taking the sounds at Donte's, a top jazz club here.

At least that's what jazz buff and non-musician Brokaw claimed in an interview from the "Today" emporium in New York.

"No, actually the program has had pretty good relationships over the years with the world of jazz," he says. "It also meshes with my own interests, so it works out pretty well."

His dawn hours mean he can't enjoy late-hours jazz on week-days now. So he often gets word on who's good from pianist Jimmy Rowles, a pal from the LA days and an occasional "Today" guest.

But both Brokaw and executive producer Paul Friedman give the lion's share of credit for securing good jazz acts to a "Today" staffer, Doug Sinsel, who also happens to be a jazz saxophonist.

Friedman also notes that "Today" music segments — twice a week on the average — aren't all jazz. Classical cats, like French horn virtuoso Barry Tuckwell and conductor Zubin Mehta have appeared.

And such country artists as Chet Atkins (who did a guitar duet on the show with Les Paul) and singers Ronnie Milsap and Dolly Parton also have checked in.

And so have the Mormon Tabernacle Choir (on tape), a three-day salute to Irving Berlin and visitors from Broadway musicals.

But the emphasis is on jazz.

And it's rare you'll sight a rock act. Friedman says the last one, Patti Smith, gave an example of punk rock that made viewers grumble by the gross.

But the non-rock look of "Today" isn't because those in charge prefer jazz, says Brokaw, adding that he likes rock, too.

"No, it's probably the hour of the ("Today") morning as much as anything else," he says. "We've talked to a number of them (rock stars) on the show."

"But the fact of the matter is, the music's a little jarring at that hour of the morning... I think sometimes rather than hearing it, we're better off talking to the people who make it."

Mask Eased Monotony

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Standing in line to buy license stickers at the state Highways and Public Transportation office can be a bore, unless it's Halloween and you're sharing the line with a gorilla.

Underneath the gorilla mask was Tommy Trotter, a service station employee, who also wore the mask at his station, surprising motorists as he pumped gasoline.

"Everybody who was standing in line out there cracked up," said Kathy Harsey, a department employee. "It was really funny."

She said he stood at the counter for several minutes "until I could get myself together" and wait on him.

"It sure took the monotony out of standing in line," said a woman who was waiting to renew her license tags.

Asked why he wore it, Trotter, replied, "I don't know. It's just Halloween."

SUSAN FORD showed she had a yen for show business by belting out a television commercial for Subaru cars in Washington, says her director of Gerald Ford's 21-year-old daughter. (AP Laserphoto)

Pupils To Study Hypertension

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sixth graders in 10 Virginia schools will study hypertension — high blood pressure — in an experimental program this year, according to the Health Insurance Institute.

An eight-day curriculum on the subject was developed in an attempt to deal with disease prevention at an early age and encourage self-responsibility for health care, explains Dr. Keith Howell, assistant professor of health education at the University of Virginia.

He says sixth graders were selected because studies show that children at this age are more likely than younger children to follow instructions and benefit from the course.

King Henry VIII of England married his first wife, Katherine of Aragon, in 1509.

Same Old Story, ABC Leads Nielsen Ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — It was that same old story, ABC with a tight grip on first place in the networks' ratings competition. With the World Series on NBC out of the way, ABC was back in first place for the week ending Oct. 29, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. show, with the four top-rated programs and six of the first 10.

At the top was "Three's Company," with a rating of 30.1, followed by "Laverne and Shirley," "Happy Days" and "Taxi." Nielsen says the rating for "Three's Company" means that of all the homes in the country with TV, 30.1 percent saw at least part of the show.

CBS escaped last place in the ratings for the first time this season with three programs in the Top 10, including No. 6 "60 Minutes."

NBC's top show for the week was "Little House on the Prairie," No. 5 in the ratings.

ABC's rating for the week was 20.3, followed by CBS at 18.7 and NBC at 17.1. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 20.3 percent of the homes in the country were tuned to ABC.

NBC won the ratings competition the two previous weeks with World Series baseball, after ABC had dominated the first month. ABC got a push in its return to the top from a couple of sports programs — the Monday night pro football game between Pittsburgh and Houston and a special Thursday NFL game between Dallas and Minnesota.

The Monday night game was No. 8 in the ratings, the Thursday night contest 15th.

NBC's last-place finish was the result, at least in part, of a bad showing at the bottom of the ratings. NBC's "Dick Clark's Live Wednesday" was No. 55, followed by "Rhoda" on CBS and four other NBC shows, "Sword of Justice," "Who's Watching the Kids" and "Walt Disney Presents."

Here are the week's Top 10 programs:

"Three's Company," with a rating of 30.1 representing 22.4 million homes, "Laverne and Shirley," 28.8 or 21.5 million, "Happy Days," 27.8 or 20.7 million, and "Taxi," 26.5 or 19.7 million, all ABC; "Little House on the Prairie," 25.2 or 18.8 million, NBC; "60 Minutes," 24.9 or 18.6 million, and Wednesday Movie "Grass Is Always Greener over the Septic Tank," 23.4 or 17.4 million, both CBS; "NFL Monday Night Football," 23.1 or 17.2 million, ABC, and "Battlestar Galactica," ABC, and "M-A-S-H," CBS, 22.9 or 17.6 million, tie.

 Opening lead: Five of ♣.

Proper management of entries is one of the keys to successful declarer play. South failed to appreciate that on this hand and squandered one of dummy's entries prematurely, which cost him his slam.

Observe South's choice of opening bid. His hand is too strong for four hearts, which is a preemptive measure. With an ace and a king outside the trump suit, one heart is the correct opening bid. When South showed a strong trick-taking hand, North invited slam by raising, in the process denying a side-suit control outside of clubs. South was delighted to accept in view of his second-round spade control and total control of diamonds.

Since the king of spades was virtually marked in the South hand, West wisely refrained from leading the ace. Instead, he tried to set up a trick in diamonds. Declarer won the ace, drew trumps in two rounds, cashed the ace and king of clubs, shuffling a spade on the second high club, and ruffed a club.

When the queen of clubs failed to come down in three rounds, declarer realized he was in trouble. He got back to dummy with a trump and led a spade to his king, but West had the ace — no surprise — and declarer lost two spade tricks.

Declarer was in too great a hurry to draw trumps. Dummy's hearts were needed as entries to set up and cash the club suit.

After winning the ace of diamonds, declarer should immediately lead a club to the king and ruff a club high. Next, he cashes the king and ace of hearts, drawing the outstanding trumps and leaving himself in dummy to ruff another club to set up the suit.

Now declarer can get back to dummy with the nine of hearts, cash the ace of clubs to fell the queen, and discard all his spades on dummy's good clubs. Instead of going down one, declarer ends up making an overtrick.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

7-Year-Old Calls FBI

SEATTLE (AP) — Home alone and upset at missing her school bus, 7-year-old Mary Hurley didn't know where else to turn, so she picked up the telephone and dialed the FBI.

However, the federal gears ground too slowly to help Mary in time: she got a tardy slip and now has to explain two long-distance phone calls to Seattle to her parents.

Mary, a second-grader at Vancouver's Glenwood Elementary School, reached FBI switchboard operator Gail Petersen at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday.

"She was really upset and wanted to get to school," said Ms. Peterson.

Ms. Peterson told Mary to call the school, but Mary got only a busy signal and dialed the FBI right back. Ms. Peterson tried the school herself. She also got a busy signal.

Mary said her mother was at work in Portland and her father was away at Lake Oswego, Ore.

So Ms. Peterson tried dialing one of Mary's neighbors. No luck.

Her next call went to the Clark County sheriff's office.

The dispatcher there sent a car to Mary's home and found a neighbor who agreed to take her to school. Mary arrived at 10 a.m. — about an hour late.

Pumpkin Patch Is Plundered

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — It was a case to boggle the imagination of even the greatest sleuth: the Great Pumpkin — all 165 pounds of it — was missing, and on Halloween yet.

Children in the southeast Portland neighborhood of Erroll Heights who raised the pumpkin from seed were in tears.

It was discovered missing from its prominent place in the pumpkin patch early Tuesday.

The description: very dark orange, a long, curled stem, 6 feet in diameter, with the initials K.E.F. carved on its base.

Police said they would keep an eye out.

TURTLE CROSSING — Murvin Jacob, a caring citizen who didn't want to see any more turtles run over by vehicles on the road above, shows where a new cement ramp was built by Topeka, Kansas employees who donated the labor and materials. The turtles used to cross under the road using the culvert but a street-widening project blocked that avenue when they couldn't get over a retaining wall added during the construction. Real Problem For Investors

Interstate Securities Corporation

Notwithstanding the attempts by Congress and the President to control inflation, it seems to be a condition that the American public will have to deal with for some time to come. The symptoms are familiar to all of us: rising prices, loss of purchasing power, frantic attempts by businesses to control increasing expenses.

Inflation presents a particularly critical problem for investors. They face the decision of what to invest in to preserve capital and income from the effects of constant rosin of purchasing power. The key is investment return and how to maximize it. There are several investment vehicles which provide high income yields. Long-term bonds have rates of 9 percent or more; short-term bonds, 8 percent or more; savings accounts up to 8 percent; deferred annuities, up to 9 percent. These yields are very attractive, but there is little possibility for capital appreciation. When the fixed-income investment matures, the purchasing power of the principal amount could be vastly decreased, if inflation continues at its present rate.

Common stocks yield substantially lower than the above-mentioned fixed-income investments, about 4.5 percent on average. But they provide two advantages not available to fixed-income investors: capital appreciation and dividend growth. The major common stock averages have not shown stocks to be a good hedge against inflation over the last ten years. However, there are individual stocks which have performed very well in this environment and provide excellent defense against inflation. The criteria to be used in selecting these stocks should be growth and dividend increases.

The growth criteria can be used to find less well-known companies which have established excellent records of growth over the years. The demand for these companies products should be stable and have potential for growth. Management should be innovative and involved in planning for the future. Eventually, the growth records and potential of these companies will be recognized in the marketplace and be reflected in the price of the stock.

Another criteria which can be used to choose stocks for defense against inflation is the potential for dividend increases. Any number of companies have excellent records in this respect. Many of these increases have kept up with the inflation rate.

In summary, it is possible for the investor to hedge against inflation if he or she is willing to carefully select common stocks for this purpose while keeping the growth and dividend criteria in mind.

SOLDIERS vs. TRASH

PARIS (AP) — France called in soldiers today to clear huge piles of trash left on the sidewalks of Paris by the strike of sanitation men, the government said.
