

Military Government In Iran As Mobs Run Wild

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iran's chief of staff, Gen. Gholam Reza Azhari, was appointed prime minister today to form the first military government in 25 years and prop up the riot-torn rule of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi.

Jaafar Sharif-Emami, a civilian, resigned as prime minister Sunday night as mobs pillaged and burned sections of Tehran. Rioters also were reported to have broken again into the compound housing the British Embassy's employees and the fire-damaged chancery.

Tanks and troops ringed key sites in Tehran, martial law authorities banned four of five morning newspapers and the government radio repeatedly broadcast martial law regulations warning any gathering of more than three persons will be "smashed by force."

Iran's last military government held sway in 1953 when Gen. Fazlullah Zahedi took over following the overthrow of Mohammed Mossadegh.

In an impassioned 10-minute radio address to the nation today, the shah pledged that "unlawful actions, cruelty and corruption are things of the past and will soon be removed at any cost." He explained his decision to appoint Azhari by saying:

"The killings and chaos in many parts of the country reached such a stage as to endanger the country's independence. The deplorable events of Sunday which set the capital on fire caused the resignation of the government. In order to prevent further unrest and killings, and in order to establish law and order I tried my best to establish a coalition government but it did not work. Therefore, I was compelled to appoint a temporary military government."

The shah's decision also was believed a last-ditch attempt to preserve the monarchy. The rioters who rampaged through Tehran over the weekend had shouted, "Death to the shah," the imperial ruler who has run Iran for 37 years.

Azhari, a 61-year-old, fourstar general, has been chief of staff of Iran's armed forces since 1971. He graduated from Iran's war college and then went through several military courses in the United States. He is known as a top military administrator, is said to be extremely honest, has no business ties and is a devout Moslem.

Sharif-Emami, 69, was appointed prime minister on Aug. 27 with hopes that his close ties to Moslem leaders could end the bloodshed that has taken more than 1,000 lives since January. The shah also is Moslem as are 90 percent of the country's 34 million citizens.

TROUBLED LAND — Mobs shouting "Death to the Shah" rampaged through the streets of Tehran Sunday as a coalition of opposition forces demanded abdication of the ruler. Meanwhile, Iran's economy reeled under the impact of strikes in the oil industry by refinery and fuel workers, by Iranian airlines and by the telecommunications industry. (AP Laserphoto)

Candidates, Questions Up To Pitt Voters Tuesday

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer
Pitt County voters will mark their choices on a variety of issues when they visit the polls for Tuesday's general election balloting.

In addition to selecting the candidates of their choice in several races, area citizens will also vote on the question of converting Pitt Technical Institute to a community college and Greenville citizens will participate in a special Public Works bond referendum.

Ballots that will be handed to local and area poll visitors tomorrow include: U.S. Senator, with incumbent Republican Jesse Helms facing Democrat John Ingram; First District Congressional seat pitting Democratic incumbent Walter B. Jones and GOP challenger James M. Newcomb; District Attorney where Eli Bloom is unopposed; Sixth District State Senator where incumbents Vernon E. White and Julian R. Allsbrook are opposed by GOP candidate George Alton Grayel; Eighth District State Representatives with H. Horton Rountree and Sam D. Washington facing opposition offered by Darl L. Fowler; and

Board of Supervisors of the Pitt Soil and Water Conservation District with candidates Ralph C. Tucker and Robert G. Little seeking the two available seats.

Fountain voters will be given a ballot regarding the approval or disapproval of bond orders authorizing $213,000 to pay capital costs of water system improvements for the town and also $185,000 to pay capital costs of sanitary sewer improvements within the corporate limits.

Court and Court of Appeals) with only Democrat Richard C. Erwin facing GOP opposition offered by Joe N. Cagle; State Judicial officers (Superior Court) with only 18th Judicial District candidate Edward K. Washington facing opposition offered by Darl L. Fowler; and

Board of Supervisors of the Pitt Soil and Water Conservation District with candidates Ralph C. Tucker and Robert G. Little seeking the two available seats.

In Greenville, the matter of approval or disapproval of the bond order authorizing $1.9 million Public Works facility bonds will be decided. Approval of the matter will authorize the construction through bond financing of a new Public Works facility and authorize the acquisition of land and rights of way. An affirmative vote on the issue will also authorize the levy of taxes in an amount sufficient to pay the principal of and the interest on the bonds.

The polls will open tomorrow at 6:30 a.m. and close at 7:30 p.m.

Pitt County poll officials are reminded to call "The Daily Reflector" Tuesday night after votes are counted. "The Daily Reflector" will tabulate returns (Superior Court) with only 18th Judicial District candidate Edward K. Washington facing opposition offered by Darl L. Fowler; and

Reject Nuclear Plant

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Austrian voters have narrowly rejected a $650 million nuclear plant, this nation's first, and dealt a stunning political defeat to Chancellor Bruno Kreisky and his Socialist Party.

At a news conference today, Kreisky accepted personal responsibility for the defeat but declined to say whether he would resign, as he had hinted before Sunday's nuclear-power referendum. Some political observers speculated the government chief would offer his resignation at a meeting with party leaders later today but they would overwhelmingly reject it.

"Chancellor Kreisky is much more urgently needed by the Republic of Austria than is Zwentendorf (the nuclear plant)," said Vienna's Mayor Leopold Gratz.

WHERE'S MY PLANTS?

I first ordered a medicine plant and some other plants from Spring Hill Nurseries on March 17, 1978. My total order came to $6.79, including shipping and handling. I received a memo from them dated April 19 stating that my order was on the way. After writing them again in May, I received a letter saying that my order had been shipped. On October 2, I wrote again, asking for a refund or my plants. I received a letter dated Oct. 11, stating that my order would arrive in order for planting time. Can you help me? L. T.

Hotline called the Spring Hill Nurseries and talked with the customer relations department, explaining that you would like the plants or your money refunded. Customer Relations apologized for the inconvenience, saying that the order must have been lost in transit. You should receive your money within a few days, Customer Relations said.

Farmville Grant

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Congressman Walter B. Jones today announced the approval by the Department of Housing and Urban Development of a $273,000 grant to the town of Farmville.

Jones said that the funds are to be used for the rehabilitation of sub-standard housing, housing code enforcement, and the clearance of dilapidated housing, as well as relocation assistance.

The congressman pointed out that the funds are designed to improve the standard of living of low and middle income residents.

62-Car Pileup

CHARLESTON, Tenn. (AP) — A 62-car accident on Interstate 75 in which 46 persons were injured was caused by a heavy fog that blanketed parts of southeastern Tennessee, police say.

No one was killed in the series of collisions, the first of which was reported about 9:15 a.m. EST Sunday.

Eleven of the injured were hospitalized, while the rest were treated and released, police said.

Sam Garrett, a Tennessee Highway Patrol dispatcher, said all available ambulances in Bradley and McMinn counties were called to the scene of the chain-reaction accidents which forced the closing of I-75 for more than three hours while emergency crews untangled the wreckage. The heavy fog also hampered rescue and clean-up operations, he said.

As many as a dozen wreckers were dispatched to help clear what actually were two pileups — one each on the north and south-bound lanes of I-75, Garrett said.

Authorities rerouted traffic onto secondary roads while the damaged cars — piled up in what troopers described as "five separate clusters" — were removed from the roadway.

County Bd. OKs NCNB Contract

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
Pitt County Commissioners this morning awarded contracts to North Carolina National Bank for the county's business in 1979, and approved low bids totaling $12,500 for a tractor and backhoe to Eastern Tractor in Greenville.

Commissioners voted to continue using NCNB for county accounts after County Manager Reginald Gray told the board NCNB was the low bidder, although compared with a bid submitted by Planters National Bank, "it is one of the closest bids I've ever seen."

Services offered by the two banks in comparison to the bid specifications were almost identical, Gray said. He noted, however, that NCNB offered several services in addition to the specifications of the bid that Planters Bank did not mention, including a preferred interest rate on loans for county employees who qualify.

Gray told the board that having banks bid for county business — a practice started several years ago — results in a savings of $35,000 to $40,000 a year.

The board awarded a contract for a tractor and backhoe to Eastern Tractor, which submitted a low bid of $13,500. Other bidders included Ayden Tractor ($12,570) and Hendrix-Barnhill Equipment Co. ($13,407). Waller Tractor Co. submitted a bid but it was determined the bid did not meet specifications.

Ayden Mayor Ross Persinger appeared at the session and urged Commissioners to "intervene...if you all could," with the Pitt County Board of Education in their decision to construct a new middle school to serve the Ayden-Grifton area.

Persinger told commissioners, "the people would like for you to consider their wishes," and maintain schools in both Ayden and Grifton, rather than build a new facility to serve both areas.

Greenville attorney Milton Williamson urged commissioners to provide more space for the Sheriff's Department and hinted that the county tax offices should be moved from the Court House along with other county departments and agencies to provide additional space for the Sheriff and the court system.

Williamson said additional court facilities are needed and suggested that the tax offices could be moved along with other offices — such as the county managers office, data processing, and the Board of Education — that will occupy the new county office facility in the old hospital building now being renovated.

The board agreed to study the possibility of covering a large ditch at Pitt Memorial Hospital after Ralph Hall, director of the physical plant told commissioners that the project to tile and cover the ditch would cost an estimated $39,000.

If the ditch were covered, it would provide an additional two acres of land between two employee parking lots that could be used for a heliport, additional parking, or building construction.

Helms Visits Pitt And Urges Citizens To Vote

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer
Saying that he planned "no last minute bombs" in his re-election campaign, U.S. Senator Jesse Helms expressed his thanks here today for the "immense, enthusiastic support" he has received in the Pitt County area.

Appearing at the airport as part of a final day of campaign stumping across North Carolina, the Republican senator said that he was gratified at the support the polls indicate for him but he noted that his campaign could suffer if supporters are overconfident.

"It all depends on who turns out," he said in commenting on a report that he has a growing lead on Democratic challenger John Ingram. "That's why I'm urging people to go to the polls."

Helms, who earlier today visited Wilmington on a campaign stint that will conclude with a 4 p.m. press conference in Asheville, observed that "the only polls that count are the ones on election day."

Reminded that the reference, a "mud and money campaign," has been applied to the senate race, the incumbent disagreed with the assessment, contending that he has "thrown no mud" and has addressed himself to "every conceivable issue."

Commenting on his campaign finances, which have reportedly topped $6 million, Helms said that he viewed the fact that some 275,000 citizens, including approximately 100,000 in North Carolina, have contributed to his campaign as a "pretty good referendum."

Helms said that he was not going to get into name calling on the last day of his campaign and he added that he would not answer charges from the Ingram camp "unless they are specific."

Questioned by news reporters on speculation that has surfaced recently about his future political ambitions, the senator suggested that comments placing him as a possible vice presidential candidate are merely

"think pieces." He added, "I love the U.S. Senate and that's where I want to be."

Helms said that he was flying from Greenville to Raleigh for a news conference, followed by stops in Greensboro and Charlotte before concluding his campaign activities in Asheville.

Most Of 3,000 May Leave

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of Cuba's diplomatic mission here says most of the approximately 3,000 political prisoners in Cuba will be eligible for emigration to the United States under a new amnesty policy. Ramon Sanchez Parodi said Saturday that the time has come for a rapprochement between Cuba and the hundreds of thousands of Cubans living in the United States and elsewhere.

DEAR ABBY: It's 2 o'clock in the morning and I've torn up three letters to you, but I'm mailing this one because I need help.

Over a year ago I met the finest man I've ever known. We became the best of friends. I don't know how it happened, but I fell in love with him, which is outrageous because he is happily married.

At first I tried to laugh it off. Then I tried avoiding him, but we work for the same company and I see him every day. I'm single, and I tried dating several men, but my mind was always on him. I'm not a 17-year-old school girl. I'm old enough to know better. I'm known as a very intelligent, rational person. I'm often called the "Dear Abby" of the office because everyone comes to me for advice.

I have no one to talk to. If this man knew how I felt, he'd be shocked. And his wife would never believe it. She's a dear friend of mine. I never could come between a man and his wife. I wasn't raised that way, but I love him, Abby, and my only solution is to leave town.

I've lived here for years and I love my job and my friends. I don't want to leave. I know this sounds like a soap opera, but it's true. Please help me.

PHIL McNELLIS: DETROIT

DEAR ABBY: I would like your opinion of an incident: After not having spoken to me in almost three years, my sister recently sent me a copy of an insurance policy she took out before she took an airplane trip, naming ME as the beneficiary.

Do you think she's trying to tell me something?
COOS BAY, ORE.

DEAR BAY: Yes. She still lacks the courage to start talking to you, but in the event of her death, she'd like her money to talk for her. In other words, she's not as mad at you as she used to be.

Fires Claim Thousands Of Acres Of Dry Woodland In Southeast

By

The Associated Press
Thousands of acres of woodlands were destroyed by uncontrolled fires in the Southeastern states during the weekend. And, although some rain was predicted around the area, weather officials say it may not be heavy enough to end the fire danger.

The National Weather Service said early today that some rain is expected in north Alabama tonight, and north Georgia faces "a small threat of rain" by Tuesday.

However, officials said, the moisture is not expected to be sufficient to relieve conditions, brought on by the late fall drought.

In North Carolina, weather officials said the state has its "best chance in quite a while" for general rain, possibly in the mountains late today and spreading across the state by Tuesday.

Louisiana weather officials were predicting about an inch of rain — enough, they said to thousands of acres of alleviate a fire hazard termed

"moderately dangerous."

Tennessee also was predicting some showers and scattered thundershowers late today and early Tuesday.

Meanwhile, public health officials in Birmingham, Ala., warned those with heart and lung problems, as well as the elderly, to remain indoors. The entire state remains under a ban on trash burning.

National Guardsmen, as well as firefighters from Georgia, Tennessee and North Carolina, were pressed into service to combat fires. Damage in Alabama has been estimated at more than $2 million in the state. Jackson County in north Alabama is hard hit by blazes, and a North Carolina crew, skilled in fighting mountain fires, arrived Sunday to help firefighters there.

The Jackson County sheriff's office said a fire threatened several houses in the Estillfork community Sunday, but no injuries were reported.

In Georgia, 169 separate fires burned 312 acres Sunday, said Ray Shirley, director of the state Forestry Commission. He said 200 fires destroyed 680 acres on Saturday. Shirley said the total since Oct. 14 is 26,032 fires destroying 7,084 acres.

Shirley said state rangers reported 17 fires they believed were started by hunters Sunday. But he said the forestry commission won't recommend a ban on deer hunting in the state. "If we did that, we'd have more trouble than we have now," he said. "We think it's better to go right ahead, there's a lot of people who are real careful."

In South Carolina, Forestry Commission spokesman Paul Carson said that 678 fires have destroyed 1,395 acres of woodland during the last week. Carson said the number of fires this year is "far above" last year. He said there has been no government-imposed ban on outside burning, although state residents have been "urged to postpone outside burning until we get a good rain."

A spokesman for the Tennessee Valley Authority, Louis Gwin, said the valley has received less than half the normal rainfall in September and October. In some portions of western North Carolina and north Georgia, rainfall this year is 13 to 17 inches below normal, he said.

The most severely damaged section of North Carolina is the National Nantahala Forest near Asheville, where at least 200 acres were destroyed. North Carolina is experiencing its driest fall since 1938.

The Forest Service has called in firefighters from Virginia to help combat the blazes.

Because of different weather conditions, Florida officials report the state has no fire problem. Ed Sweeny, chief of the state's fire control bureau, said up to 15 small fires a day were being reported, compared to more than 100 a day during the heavy spring season.

"We've offered Alabama and Georgia assistance if they need it," he said.

Help make college affordable to the youngest in a family of six.

Vote for Pitt Community College and lower the cost of higher education.

Everyone deserves a chance to continue their education. But, with the rising costs of tuition, fees and general living expenses, money becomes an important factor. And, when one family has several people to send through college, the cost can prevent many students with potential from continuing their educations. That's why you should support Pitt Community College on election day. Attending a college transfer program at Pitt will cost the student approximately $137 per year in tuition and required fees. Compare that to the average cost of $540 for tuition and required fees per year at a public senior institution. Four students can attend Pitt Community College for less than the cost of one student at a senior institution.

The State and the student will both save.

Funding for technical and vocational programs, and college parallel programs are completely separate; thus, our technical programs will not be affected. College parallel programs at community colleges cost the state much less per student than those at senior institutions. For example, the average state cost per student at community colleges last year was $1,062. At four-year schools, the average cost was $2,444. So, students will save money at Pitt Community College. And the state will save too. Supporting Pitt Community College is not merely a financial decision. It's important to offer total educational opportunities for our citizens. Please give Pitt Community College your vote on election day.

Look at the opportunity.
Vote for Pitt Community College.

DEAR PAT: After knitting for many years, I have just recently learned to crochet and love it. The very first thing I was taught by a friend was how to make a "granny" square.

I took this original granny square and kept working, round and round, on it with all my leftover yarns until I had one gigantic king size granny square afghan that fits on my king size bed. If I do say so, it is beautiful!

In the event any of your readers are interested here are the details. I used a size J crochet hook and four ply knitting worsted weight yarns—all machine washable.

Start your granny square with any color you like and just keep going, making two round with one color before changing to another. My colors happen to be browns, golds, yellows, oranges, greens, peaches, off white and beige.

In the beginning of the square, only small amounts of each color are used. As it grows in size, you will find that it will take close to a full skein to each color. I would say that I used approximately 100 ounces of mostly leftovers.

Mine measures approximately 86 inches square. It is ever so warm—we won't even need our electric blanket this winter, so it will be a real energy saver. — Carol G., Arvada, Colo.

Thanks, Carol, for sharing your very interesting beginner's project with us. To duplicate Carol's king size afghan, you need only learn how to make a chain stitch, a slip stitch and a double crochet stitch—all very simple.

There are many variations of the granny square, but there are directions for one of the most common ones. It starts with a circle made by chaining six stitches and joining by making a slip stitch in the first chain.

Round 1: Chain 3, make two double crochets in the ring (or circle), then chain 3. Make 3 double crochets in ring, chain 3. Repeat the steps between asterisks twice more, then join with a slip stitch in top of starting chain.

Round 2: Slip stitch in next 2 double crochets, slip stitch in next space, chain 3, in same space make 2 double crochets, chain 3 for corner, make 3 double crochets in same space. Chain 1, in next space make 3 double crochets, chain 3, make 3 double crochets. Repeat steps between asterisks twice

Cobb-Moore Vows Solemnized Sunday

FOUNTAIN — The Fountain Baptist Church here was the scene of the wedding ceremony Sunday afternoon at four o'clock of Lanie Marie Moore and Michael Everett Cobb.

The Rev. John Allen performed the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. John Moore Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. Everett Cobb, all of Rt. 1, Fountain.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of white organza over peau de soie designed with a high neckline encircled in a lattice designed imported Venise lace. The sheer scooped yoke was outlined in matching lace and the gown featured full bishop sleeves trimmed in the Venise lace. The full skirt and attached chapel length train were encircled with a deep ruffle flounce bordered in Venise lace. She wore a formal length illusion mantilla edged in Venise lace.

Carol Cobb of Fountain, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, was matron attendant and wore a formal length gown in spice designed with an empire waist with ties and long sleeves. She carried a single long-stemmed rose.

Bridesmaids included Ruthie Turner, sister of the bride, and Betty Cobb, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, both of Fountain, Pat Letchworth, sister of the bridegroom, and Teresa Letchworth, niece of the bridegroom, both of Crisp. They were dressed like the honor attendant.

Billy Carol Cobb of Fountain, niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl and wore a tiered dress of complementing colors on a cream background. The dress had a high neckline trimmed in lace which also trimmed the tiers. She carried a natural basket of bronze and yellow daisies.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man while Larry and Billy Cobbs, brothers of the bridegroom, and Ricky Crocker, nephew of the bridegroom, all of Fountain, and Bill Bridges were ushers.

After a wedding trip to the coast, the couple will live in Pinetops.

MRS. CARL CAMERON PARKER

Miss Craft, Mr. Parker Wed Sunday

FARMVILLE — The marriage of Wanda Lou Craft and Carl Cameron Parker took place Sunday afternoon at 3:30 in the Farmville Church of God. The Rev. Nelson Fulford, uncle of the bride, performed the ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Wesley E. Craft of Farmville, and Mr. and Mrs. Cameron Parker of Rt. 1, Farmville.

Susan Beaman of Farmville, vocalist, and Susan Thompson of Clemson, S. C., pianist, presented a program of wedding music prior to the double ring ceremony.

The church was decorated with palm greenery, brass candelabra, kneeling bench and satin bows marked honor pews.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown with an underskirt of peau de soie overlaid with alencon lace. The lace bodice was accented with beads over the shoulder, forming a V-front. The gown was styled with a high neckline, empire waist and pointed tapered sleeves closed with covered buttons. Rows of vertical lace trimmed the sleeves and the chapel length skirt featured a ruffled hemline.

Her Queen Anne headpiece was covered in alencon lace attached to a chapel length veil bordered with lace and highlighted by a shoulder length veil.

Rachel Nelson of Greenville, aunt of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids included Nancy Cale, sister of the bridegroom, and Sheila Curry, both of Farmville. They were attired in formal gowns of cranberry wine fashioned with elasticized waistlines gathered into three ruffled tiers accented with cream lace which matched the lace bordering the collar. They carried nosegays of carnations tipped in cranberry wine and baby's breath. They wore matching flowers in their hair.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Tony Cobb and Bud Cale, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, both of Farmville, Carl Massey of Snow Hill, cousin of the bride, and Mike Buck of Greenville, cousin of the bride.

The mother of the bride wore a two-piece ensemble of dusty rose and the mother of the bridegroom selected an ensemble of pastel pink and tan. Both wore corsages of white carnations.

For a wedding trip, the bride changed into a dress ensemble of wheat colors and wore a corsage lifted from her bouquet.

The couple will live in Farmville.

The bride graduated from Farmville Central and is employed at the Pitt County Court House. The bridegroom graduated from Greene Central and is self-employed.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Shirley directed the wedding. The couple's parents entertained at a cake cutting Saturday evening.

The Debate Is Over, Now Vote

Tomorrow Pitt Countians, along with all North Carolina citizens, have the opportunity to go to the polls to decide several political races and issues. Statewide, voters will be choosing between incumbent Republican senator Jesse Helms and Democratic challenger John Ingram for a six year term in the U. S. Senate. In the first congressional district incumbent Democrat Walter Jones is challenged by GOP candidate J. M. Newcomb. There is also a Republican challenger in the state senate race and several judgeships to be decided. Locally, Pitt County voters will be deciding whether Pitt Technical Institute will become a community college. Greenville voters will decide on a bond issue for new public works facilities. Fountain will have utilities bond elections. We want to urge everyone who is registered to take time to visit the polls and cast the ballots. The issues have been debated now and, as is proper in a Democratic society, the voters will make the ultimate decisions tomorrow.

First, Let Us Test Carter Program

AFL-CIO President George Meany, who has been at odds with the administration before, now feels that Carter should call a special session of Congress to invoke wage and price controls. Thankfully the president has refused the suggestion.

Strong measures are necessary to bring inflation under control and some decisive actions have been taken by the administration. Before we shackle our society with more government control, let's at least determine if recent government actions will work.

Hunting Rules Confusing

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — What a Tar Heel hunter may legally do in one particular place can land him in jail if he crosses a river, a county line, or even a highway.

An almost undecipherable conglomeration of game laws has grown up over the years in this state governing when you can hunt, what you can hunt, how you can hunt it, and even what kind of weapon, cage, or trap you can use.

From time to time efforts have been made to iron out the wrinkles, but with no success. Members of the General Assembly under pressure from special interest groups back home created the local laws, and have shown a reluctance to change them.

A comprehensive rewrite of the law to provide statewide uniformity couldn't even make it out of committee in the 1977 session of the General Assembly.

A Conservation Law Study Committee with seven members did result, however, given this Herculean task:

Harmonize

To examine wildlife conservation laws and attempt to consolidate and modernize them while "harmonizing" the conflicting interests of the various persons concerned with them.

A report is to be handed to members of the 1979 General Assembly by early February. The committee chaired by former newsman Woodrow Price is holding a series of public hearings to ready itself for the report-writing assignment.

The bottom of the problem is simply that outdoorsmen can't find sense nor order in the mass of conflicting, contradictory local laws which over a period of 45 years have come to make up the game regulations.

As a lawyer told the committee at a recent hearing: "There's nothing I dislike more than pulling down books I have paid a hundred dollars for and find that some pamphlet is needed to know what the law is."

The year 1973 in the General Assembly was a good example of the volume of local wildlife bills argued and either passed or rejected. There were various and conflicting forms of prohibition against hunting from highways. They apply countywide in Chatham, Durham, Johnston, Orange and Stokes; in part of the county of Chowan, Lenoir and Richmond; put to a vote in Bertie. Rules on Center-fire rifle on highways or privately owned land applied in Gates and Hertford; hunting from highways adjoining post land is prohibited in Bladen unless you get permission from the owner; and in Anson, Durham, Orange, Person and Richmond any law officer — not just the game warden — can enforce the laws.

BILL NOBLITT

You can't use a motorboat to transport contraband game in Bertie, Halifax, Martin or Northampton on designated waters (the Roanoke River).

Who Knows?

Does that mean you can transport contraband game on other rivers? Not in Cumberland, where it is illegal on any river.

Steel traps can be used only on your own land in New Hanover; on your own or on leased land in Cleveland, Polk and Rutherford; and only if bigger than a Number Two in Brunswick. You can hunt with dogs in Beaufort, but you can't catch deer with dogs in Johnston, or use a center-fire rifle in Chatham. In Greene, if you use tree stands at least eight feet high you can use dogs or rifles on deer; otherwise, no. In Greene, though, you can't hunt fox during deer season.

Proposals that failed including fox trapping in Mecklenburg, restrictions on hunting raccoon with dogs in Avery, Burke, Caldwell and Wilkes; and a measure to place Pender under general statewide hunting laws.

Most hunters at the hearings say they want uniform, enforceable laws statewide, understandable and fair. Chairman Price says the committee will hear from all parties including legislators before putting their proposals down on paper for consideration.

"There, now! 'Fore long you'll be as sound as a dol-l...uh...that is, you'll feel better."

To the Editor:

An ad has appeared in this paper charging that the proposed growth of Pitt Tech into a Community College would cause duplication and waste. These charges are unquestionably false.

The truth is simple. North Carolina taxpayers would save. Pitt Community College would save North Carolina over $1,000 per year for every year a student attends it rather than a senior university. The initial cost for starting new programs at Pitt Community College would be more than repaid to the state.

Moreover, Pitt Tech's existing programs will be strengthened since half of those initially enrolling in college transfer programs eventually enroll in a technical or vocational program. In addition, money may not be transferred from technical or vocational programs to college transfer, but excess money in the college transfer program may be diverted to technical or vocational programs.

What's more, Pitt Community College's new programs would not compete with any new admissions policies at ECU. One simple fact clarifies this: the $400 per year difference in tuition and fees enables those of average or low incomes to receive two years of college credit they can afford and a degree for that credit which ECU cannot offer.

The truth is simple. A community college in Pitt County would provide an affordable education not now available and save North Carolina citizens money.

To the Editor:

On September 12, 1978, at our regular monthly meeting, the Greenville—Pitt County Board of Realtors voted to support the bond referendum to be held on November 7 for the proposed new public works facility.

Those of us in the real estate profession have seen the steady and rapid growth of Greenville over the past few years. We see this growth each and every day. The present public works site and facilities were selected over 45 years ago. Even a newcomer is surely aware that our needs have changed drastically in this time.

We feel that continuing garbage pick up, street maintenance, mechanically ready fire and police vehicles, properly maintained city buses, street signs, etc., are all necessary to the continued orderly growth and well-being of all the citizenry of Greenville. We are proud of our fine community and what it has to offer the people it serves. Let's update this very vital facility so we can continue to praise Greenville as a great place to live, work and raise a family.

Taking Risks Is Part Of Game

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst DALLAS (AP) — Robert S. Strauss, the President's special inflation counselor, had just listened to a newsman say that Washington's combined save-the-dollar and anti-inflation program perhaps risked recession.

He bristled. "Some people will say damn near anything," he snapped. "There is a risk," he said, and his irritation served to demonstrate it. "But the upside is 10 times the downside. You have to take risk."

The White House-Federal Reserve plan, he said, was "total, balanced, comprehensive." If it was risky also, he seemed to say, well so be it. "We need to do positive things," he said. Nevertheless, the newsman was merely expressing a new thought that suddenly had been introduced into the convention of savings and loan associations here last week: the probability of recession.

In most previous recessions, housing led the downturn. This time the home lenders had felt secure against the warnings because they had plenty of money to lend. But with interest rates bound to go even higher, they wondered who could afford to borrow, even for a home.

"I think we're beginning to see the top in the amount of interest that home buyers are willing to pay," said Kenneth Thygeson, chief economist of the U.S. League of Savings Associations, who were in convention.

Strauss, a Texan whose chief job is special representative for trade negotiations, an ambassadorial rank, has a background in business, law and politics. He clearly accentuates the positive.

While interest rates will be driven up by Washington's action, he told the home lenders, they might peak sooner than they might have. That, he indicated, was good news for everyone.

"I am a low interest man," he said, "but I think we needed this jolt."

The jolt, he suggested, was necessary in order to restore belief in the dollar, to cut the legs of inflation, to reduce what some feel has been extravagant borrowing.

While economists here feel most savings and loan associations will renew the certificates at higher rates, in keeping with the general rise in money costs, some lenders might decide prices are too high.

The dollar spent on housing, for example, multiplies itself. A newly purchased home usually leads to money spent on furniture, appliances, decorative items, even fertilizer for the lawn.

China Looks West

By BARRY SCHWEID

Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — Teng Hsiao-ping, the Chinese vice premier, gave a Western-style news conference the other day in Tokyo.

It was his first ever. And he made some news.

Teng believes China eventually will have normal relations with the United States, but only after the Taiwan issue is settled on China's terms.

China is not pressing the United States.

Since breaking military and diplomatic ties with Taiwan isn't all that popular among the American people, there could be a long delay.

China is in no hurry. But President Carter is getting a lot of advice to "play the China card" — to move closer to Peking as a way of balancing the power of the Soviet Union.

Trade between the United States and China could reach $1 billion or more this year, a new high. Cultural and other contacts have increased. China offers a tempting source of oil.

There is a basis for a mutually beneficial relationship.

But normalizing relations with Peking would help make the Republic of China a non-nation.

The United States is one of only 23 countries that recognize Nationalist China. Only 12, including the Vatican, maintain embassies at Taipei.

Despite all the increasing isolation, the little island country has made itself the world's 22nd largest trading nation and the 12th largest trading partner of the United States.

Presumably that trade could continue with a break in U.S. relations, but the 17 million people on Taiwan could suffer a sense of isolation devastating to their morale.

In making up his mind, Carter is dealing with a fast-changing Asia.

China's influence is growing. Teng's visit to Tokyo, for-

THE INSIDE REPORT

Carter's New Confidence

By ROWLAND EVANS

and ROBERT NOVAK

EN ROUTE WITH CARTER — A hint that Jimmy Carter's self-confidence is now approaching spill-over levels after dangerous depletion last summer came in a presidential bull session in the VIP cabin of Air Force One returning from an all-day campaign swing.

Usually when Mr. Carter boards the presidential plane, he quickly takes refuge in his private quarters. Not so on the night of Oct. 28. Buoyed by good crowds and his own above-normal rhetoric, the president felt the urge for company and political gossip with Democratic national chairman John White, political aide Tim Kraft and others.

The uncommon act of shooting a little bull with the boys on the long way home — uncommon for Jimmy Carter — was a subtle signal that Mr. Carter now feels he has weathered a period of grave danger to his presidency. Ten weeks ago Dr. George Gallup's national poll found only 36 percent crediting the president with "strong leadership qualities."

Whether this new confidence is a false dawn, or represents what one aide calls the president's "feeling that he finally has his hands on the levers," time will tell. But in these final days of the 1978 election campaign, Mr. Carter exudes an image of presidentiality not visible in the darker days of summer.

He brushed aside worried liberal Democrats in Massachusetts who did not want their hostility for Edward J. King, the conservative Democratic candidate for governor, to be tainted by a presidential blessing for King. Mr. Carter wisely insisted that the Democratic tent is broad enough for a King or two. His decision was more than vindicated in City Hall Square in the town of Lynn, when one of the most exuberant crowds of the campaign season gave him louder, longer applause than it gave Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

Likewise, that same evening he passed up an easy chance to milk a partisan dinner crowd in Portland's Stevens Street Armory. Stopped three times by applause during his opening six sentences, he shocked his political aides by saying: "I want to talk soberly and frankly tonight. I don't care whether you applaud. I didn't come up here to waste my time."

There followed a long, extemporaneous talk on the "compassion" of the Democratic party, more sermon than stump talk, centering on the uphill reelection campaign of Sen. William Hathaway. Hathaway is a likely loser on Nov. 7 to Republican Rep. William Cohen. The rhetoric, echoing Mr. Carter's early presidential campaign themes of 1975 and 1976, was stripped of applause lines but the packed crowd clearly accepted the switch of mood from stump to pulpit. "He's really cooking tonight," one oft-caustic White House aide muttered.

Here was a benchmark for the restoration of Mr. Carter, a return to the old political evangelism with enough self-confidence, as one party operative told us, "to bring the crowd down from exuberance instead of building it up even higher, and make them like it."

A similar confidence has been on display recently inside the Oval Office. Three days before his Oct. 24 anti-inflation speech, the president rebuked his economic advisers for letting him publicly promise quick inflation relief from his proposed wage-price guidelines while these same advisers were privately warning that quick relief was impossible.

Demanding the "truth" on

Strength For Today

GOD'S LOVE IS PERSONAL

The Bible assures us that God does not think about human beings in general terms. There are no "masses" in the sight of the Infinite. "He calleth His own sheep by name." "The very hairs of your head are all numbered."

In our earth-bound way of looking at things, we frequently cannot see the personal soul in the crowd. We are blinded by the bigness of things. We do not see the trees for the woods, the individual sheep for the flock, nor the tiny blade of grass because of the field. But with God it is different. We never need fear that our way is overlooked because He has other concerns.

There is not a detail in our lives so minute that He is not conscious of it, no enterprise so small that He does not gather it under His loving care. He knows the perils of the road we follow. He knows where the precipice is — and the green pasture. When the personal quality of God's love is at the forefront of our thoughts, it gives confidence and peace.

Report No Blue Mold In '78 For N.C. Crop

No blue mold disease was reported on any flue-cured tobacco farm in North Carolina this year, the first time the fungus hasn't struck the state in 48 years.

Overall, however, the 19 diseases that attack tobacco reduced the value of the 1978 flue-cured crop in the state by $42.4 million, according to estimates by Furney A. Todd, a plant pathologist and Philip Morris extension specialist at North Carolina State University.

"Disease losses fell slightly, from 4.07 percent last year to 4.02 percent in 1978, but the dollar loss was $8.8 million greater this year because of the increased value of the crop," Todd said.

Mosaic, a virus problem and one of the oldest tobacco ills, caused estimated losses of nearly $8.7 million or 0.82 percent of crop value, making it the most expensive loss for tobacco farmers this season.

Black Shank proved to be the number two disease this year in terms of crop loss, according to Todd. The disease caused losses totaling $7.9 million or 0.75 percent.

Todd said that nematode losses continue to decline but still remain a major threat. The pests reduced crop value by 0.64 percent and cost growers almost $6.8 million.

Todd said that major factors in reducing nematode losses have been high participation in "R-9-P," an after-harvest stalk and root destruction program; use of resistant varieties, amounting to about 38 percent of the crop this year; and chemical soil treatment, used on 88 percent of this year's tobacco cropland.

Todd pointed out that Greenville wilt losses were almost double this year over 1977. Statewide losses amounted to 0.52 percent of crop value or about $5.5 million.

"Preliminary studies suggest the high loss was due to excessive rainfall during land preparation, at transplanting and in mid-season, accompanied by root injury by water and perhaps by some late plowing," Todd commented.

Losses to barn rot, a curing disease, rose slightly and reached $2.1 million, partly due to rains during the early harvest season.

"The value of the flue-cured crop, more than $1 billion this year, emphasizes the need for growers to select and use the correct combination of control methods to increase the chance for a healthy and uniform crop even when weather conditions favor disease organisms," Todd said.

malizing a treaty of friendship with Japan, revives the kinship between the two countries. It also closes the book on memories of the bloody Japanese occupation of the 1930s.

The main feature of the treaty is an "anti-hegemony" clause that is sure to be read in Moscow as being aimed at the Soviet Union.

The new regime in Peking is clearly more Western-oriented than China in the last days of Chairman Mao. But it is probably even more hostile to the Soviet Union than its predecessor.

If the United States decides to upgrade its relations with China it risks some rocky days in dealing with Moscow.

And even as China seals its friendship with Japan, tensions are high along the border with Vietnam.

The Foreign Ministry in Peking has charged Vietnam with a series of armed intrusions into China's Kwangsi and Yunnan provinces.

Should Carter establish diplomatic relations with Hanoi he runs the risk of offending China.

Bowman Is New Ass'n President

ECU News Bureau
Michael Bowman, assistant director of the East Carolina University Department of Personnel, is the new president of the N.C. Higher Education Personnel Association.

He was elected at the recent annual fall NCHEPA meeting in Boone. The event drew 40 representatives from public and private campuses in North Carolina, all of whom hold professional personnel-related staff positions.

ECU was also represented at the meeting by Dr. David Stevens, director of the ECU Office of Equal Opportunity Programs, and Richard Farris, assistant personnel director.

The meeting featured an address by Frank Mensel, executive director of the national College and University Personnel Association.

Other newly-elected officers are Roy S. Jones, assistant director of personnel services at Appalachian State University, vice president for programs; William Calloway, director of staff personnel at NC State University, vice-president for publicity; and William L. Clement, personnel director of Fayetteville State University, secretary-treasurer.

Bowman joined the ECU staff in 1973, after previously serving as a personnel officer for the Duke University Medical Center and the N.C. Department of Community Colleges.

He is an alumnus of Campbell College.

Dodd To Speak At Raleigh Meet

RALEIGH — Dr. Kenneth Dodd from the Office of Endangered Species in Washington will be featured at the North Carolina Herpetological Society meeting Nov. 11 at the Museum of Natural History here.

Dr. Dodd, a specialist in reptiles and amphibians, will discuss the federal endangered species program and how it affects North Carolina.

A second part of the program will include a workshop on reptiles, amphibians and the law. Spokesmen from the enforcement divisions of the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the state Wildlife Resources Commission will explain the enforcement of the Endangered Species Act in the state.

Other speakers will include Richard Franz, Florida State Museum, who will discuss his five-year study on snakes and Alvin Braswell, curator of lower vertebrates, North Carolina State Museum, who will talk on making collections.

The meeting will begin at 9 a.m. The public is invited to attend.

okay. But you shouldn't try it unless you've spoken to your parents during the last week, or they'll start wondering why you're spending their money to call your girlfriend when you haven't spoken to them."

"Mr. Nolan has made a very important point. Don't charge a call to your parents when you call your boyfriend or girlfriend, unless you've called them first. It is usually better to make the call to your friend just after you've spoken to your parents, while they're still in a good mood."

"Professor, I have this boyfriend and my parents don't like him, so they won't let me charge my calls to him on their phone. What should I do?"

"Charge it to your boyfriend's parents' phone. The telephone company doesn't care who pays for the call."

"I have this rotten sister, Professor, and whenever I call collect, and my parents aren't there, she refuses to take the call. What can I do about it?"

"How old is she?"

"Eleven."

"Tell her you'll report her to the telephone company."

"Professor, my parents are very old-fashioned, and don't believe in collect telephone calls. They think because I'm in college I should write them letters."

"What is the question, Ms. Gordon?"

"What's a letter?"

"It's an archaic form of communication where one sits down with a pen and writes what has happened on a sheet of paper. The paper is then placed in something called an envelope, addressed to the receiver and accompanied by a 15-cent postage stamp. While it is one way of keeping in touch, it does have a disadvantage."

"What's that, Professor?"

"You can't send it collect."

what the new program might achieve, and how long it might take. Mr. Carter ordered up a carefully-hedged speech that had as many caveats in it as promises of quick relief. "The defensive quality in Carter is down," one White House aide told us. "He's acting more like he used to and he is not constantly agonizing about what he ought to be doing from one minute to the next."

The 1978 campaign trail, which short months ago looked forbidding for a president few candidates wanted anywhere near them, is where the confidence shows up most. Testing his themes for 1980, Mr. Carter justifiably glories in his role as Middle East peacemaker and reminds his audiences that "not one drop of blood" has been shed by U.S. servicemen since he got elected.

In fact, Jimmy Carter may not have changed any votes at all in his extensive campaigning this fall among an electorate that is singularly disinterested in politics and which has turned ominously sour on government at all levels and the politicians who run it. But he may have done something more important for Jimmy Carter: proved to himself that, for now at least, he has restored his presidency.

Pitt County farmers who are or have been concerned about nematodes have a chance to get even with the pests. Mobil Chemical Company and the Pitt County Extension Office are working together to encourage all farmers in Pitt County to take nematode samples this Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Nov. 6, 7, and 8.

Nematode samples will be processed free of charge in Pitt County these three days, courtesy of Mobil Chemical Company. The company will pay all costs involved in getting samples, so all the farmer has to do is to obtain the necessary containers and take a proper sample.

After the sample is taken from the field, it can be turned in to one of the participating fertilizer or agricultural chemical dealers throughout the county. If possible, the samples can be turned in at the county extension office.

Taking a nematode sample is easy. A five acre field can be sampled and samples placed in one box. Each sample should contain about one quart of soil. As dry as this late summer has been, the top two inches of soil should be discarded and the sample should be taken from seven to eight inches deep.

One point to remember is that nematodes do not occur in uniform patterns across a field. Proper sampling will detect these areas. Soil cores should be taken in a zig-zag pattern across a field. Avoid eroded or poorly drained areas while sampling.

Nematode samples are best taken with a soil test coring tube. However, a spade, shovel or trowel will do as good a job if a core of soil is taken, as much as near the surface.

Nematodes are very small roundworms that are quite perishable if kept too hot or frozen for too long. They should be kept in a quart plastic bag to prevent excessive drying. By placing them in a refrigerator, they can be maintained for several days.

After the results have been mailed back, a dinner meeting will be held to discuss the results and nematodes in general. If a farmer participates in the sample drive, he may attend the county-wide discussion supper during the first week in December.

Represents Pitt In Farm Bureau Event

Ralph C. Tucker Jr., a young tobacco farmer from Greenville, will represent the Pitt County Farm Bureau in a district "discussion meet" competition at the Farm Bureau Building, 402 Greenville Blvd., Greenville this Thursday.

The district includes 12 counties from across the eastern part of the state.

The competition is open to young farmers and their wives who are participants in the Farm Bureau's Young Farmer and Rancher Program, which is an integral part of the Bureau structure at the county, state and national levels. Young farm people between the ages of 18-30 are eligible to participate in the program.

The following topics will be discussed in an informal manner, led by a moderator: "Policy Development — What It Means and How to Make It Work," "Who Should Own and Control the Land," "What Can the Farmer and Rancher Do to Have More Input in Domestic and International Marketing, Processing and Transportation of His Product," and "What Should the Farm Bureau's Role Be in Energy Research and Development."

The winner of the district meet will participate in the state semi-finals and finals at the North Carolina Farm Bureau convention, Dec. 3-6, in Asheville. The winner of the state contest will compete in the national meet at the American Farm Bureau's annual convention in Miami Beach in January.

Death Falls

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Two American mountaineers fell to their deaths after climbing the 23,755-foot Duna Giri peak in the central Himalayas, a spokesman for the Indian Mountaineering Federation said Thursday.

The Americans, identified as Karl Ketron, 22, of Knoxville, Tenn., and Guy Bradford Shaver, 26, of Asheville, N.C., were reported missing Oct. 19 after reaching the summit of Duna Giri. The spokesman said that a rucksack belonging to one of the men was found on the edge of a crevasse.

"We assume they must have fallen in," the spokesman said.

He said the search party looked for the men for four more days but could find no other trace of them.

Ketron and Shaver were part of a six member expedition.

By SYLVANA FOA
VIENNA, Austria (UPI) — Not many Austrian finders are keepers and less than half the losers are weepers. Thanks to the finderlohn.

An Austrian institution since 1867, the finderlohn is a finder's fee or reward — set by law at 10 percent of the value of the lost object.

The enticement to honesty works. Next to the Chinese, the Austrians are probably the most diligent "returners" in the world.

Carrying an odd array of women's purses, animals, umbrellas and spare tires, Austria's good citizens stream daily into the lost and found warehouse behind the Vienna Opera hall.

"Austrians are an extremely honest people," said Josef Eckel, director of Vienna's Lost and Found Bureau.

Eckel said more than 30,000 items found in the capital are turned into his office annually.

An inventory of one recent 90 days' finds includes: 1,534 keys, 775 umbrellas, 372 wallets, 254 wristwatches, 220 pairs of gloves, 180 pairs of eyeglasses, 168 screwdrivers, 153 women's handbags and 76 bicycles.

Plus 60 boxes of facial tissues, 72 record albums, 19 suitcases full of clothes, 17 footballs, six knapsacks, five pistols and three baby carriages.

"The baby carriages were empty," said Eckel with obvious relief.

In the past three months,

Eckel said, the department had also received 152 dogs, 43 cats, 24 tropical birds, 17 homing pigeons, five rabbits, two crows, a duck, a buzzard, a weasel, a squirrel, a falcon and a heron.

Eckel said he didn't consider a lost heron so unusual.

"You wouldn't believe," he added, "the number of pairs of dentures people lose."

A tour of unclaimed objects demonstrated that many people are confused over what a valid find exactly is.

"Austrians are as thrifty as they are honest," said vice director Robert Fellner, leading the way through stacks of worn out but carefully tagged brooms and blown TV tubes. "They don't like to see anything go to waste."

One finder turned in a brown paper bag containing $70,000 worth of various currencies.

"The money was claimed by a Polish citizen who, unlike many other people, was only too happy to pay the finderlohn," said Eckel. "We did think it was a bit curious about the paper bag, but if you can describe your property to our satisfaction we don't ask questions."

Eckel estimated that a loser in Austria has better than a 50 percent chance of regaining his property.

"Unfortunately, only a third of the valuable items turned in are ever claimed," Eckel said. "We think many of the unclaimed things belong to tourists who don't know this office exists or don't think they have a chance of getting their property back so don't bother coming here to check."

Fellner cited the recent cases of two tourists who did take the trouble to visit his office.

"One Dutch woman lost her purse with two diamond rings and a pair of earrings inside worth 300,000 shillings ($20,500)," he said. "They were right here waiting for her when she walked in."

"A Thai lady got back a ruby bracelet," he added. "I'm sure it was worth 30,000 shillings ($2,000), but it was appraised at only 18,000 ($1,250), so she was lucky and paid a low finderlohn."

After a year, unclaimed items are returned to the finder who holds them for two years more before they become completely his.

Bankruptcy Rate Declines Again

CHICAGO (AP) — Bankruptcy petitions declined again in the fiscal year ended June 30, according to the Commerce Clearing House.

The agency said the total of 202,951 case filings for the year marked a 5 percent drop from the 214,399 recorded the previous year. The all-time high was the 254,484 recorded in 1975.

California topped the state by state listing for the latest fiscal year, with 36,330 cases pending, New York, Illinois, Ohio and Alabama followed in that order, the clearing house said.

Six Reasons Why You Should Support and Vote For Pitt Community College.

A vote for Pitt Community College means you'll be adding another educational opportunity to one of the best technical schools in the state. Community college status for Pitt Tech does not change the technical and vocational programs. It merely adds a college parallel program to our existing institute. And, it increases the educational opportunities for Pitt County residents. Here are just some of the reasons that Pitt Community College will be important to you:

1. Pitt Community College will offer Pitt County citizens an opportunity to attend two years of general college at one-third to one-fourth the cost of a four-year college.

Many people can't afford a four-year college. Costs are continually rising. And, if there are many children in a family, the burden of a four-year college is often too great. But, Pitt Community College can offer the first two years of college to people who can't afford, can't gain admission, or just don't want to attend a four-year school. The average tuition and required fees for a student attending a senior college for one year will be around $540. Pitt Community College will offer these same students an opportunity to attend two years of college for only $137 a year for tuition and required fees.

2. Changing to Pitt Community College will actually help our technical and vocational programs.

Pitt Tech, along with all other technical institutions and community colleges have an "open door" admission policy. Over half the students who enroll in our college transfer program will transfer to a vocational and/or technical program. That's because many students want the opportunity to establish their educational goals before studying for a particular job. We presently lose these students to community colleges in other counties. With a Pitt Community College, we can help keep our students in Pitt County. Since over half of these students will transfer to our technical and vocational programs as proven by other schools who have converted, the technical and vocational programs at our school will be greatly enhanced. The fact is, we'll be able to attract more students to our technical and vocational programs.

3. The classrooms are already available.

The classroom space needed to begin a community college program is available today. Most classrooms are free after 2:00 in the afternoon. So, no additional classroom construction will be needed to initiate the community college program. Also, this program will not compete with the technical schools for shop and lab space. Adding this additional opportunity just makes better use of the space we presently have.

4. College parallel students will have the opportunity to take technical and vocational courses.

Many students are graduated from four-year institutions without clear-cut career goals. But, with a college parallel program added to our technical programs, students can see how they fit in different fields. He or she can have the opportunity to gain practical experience in many fields. From business to masonry. They won't be "locked" into an educational program before they learn what to expect when they get out of school. This makes education more meaningful. And, the final outcome is a well-rounded student who is ready for the "real world."

5. Filling the "gap" in Pitt County's educational system will give our residents more educational options.

Today, many Pitt County residents are traveling to other cities for community college education. Cities like Kinston, Williamston, Goldsboro, and New Bern. With Pitt Community College, these students won't have to commute as far to school. Pitt Community College can fill the "gap" in our educational system. We'll be able to offer Pitt County residents all the educational opportunities right here at home, from public schools, to technical education, professional education, college parallel, to full university education at ECU. Allowing these students to stay home and finish their studies will mean they'll be more likely to live here when they're finished with school. With Pitt Community College, we'll be able to keep the talent that can help Pitt County grow in the future. No student will have to leave home for the education he or she is looking for.

6. Instead of costing the taxpayers of Pitt County, the Community College will actually generate funds.

Pitt County will have to allocate some funds for the Community College. There's no question about that. But, the returns to Pitt County will be substantial. The county will only need to appropriate approximately $130 per student. We estimate that to be $13,000 for the coming year. The state will support the school with over $100,000 in state funds that would normally go to community colleges in other counties. And, these state funds will go toward paying additional instructors who will spend their money here at home. Plus, the additional students that will attend the community college will also spend money that can help our economy. The financial backing is small compared to the opportunity for Pitt County.

Your vote can mean an educational opportunity for present and future Pitt County Citizens.

We want to make sure that all Pitt County residents have every opportunity for higher education. Whether it be in a technical or vocational program, a two-year general college program, or a four-year education at our university. And, the best way to give them this opportunity is to give them the opportunity right here at home. A college parallel program is needed at our technical school. Your vote can help establish this program.

Look at the opportunity. Vote for Pitt Community College.

How's The Weather?

FORECAST Until Tuesday

Figures show low temperatures for area.

Data from NATIONAL WEATHER SERVICE, NOAA, U.S. Dept. of Commerce

WEATHER FORECAST — Sunny, mild weather is expected for most of the nation in the forecast period Monday until Tuesday morning. Showers and rain are forecast from southern Texas to the eastern Gulf. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Another mild day was in store for North Carolina today, much like Sunday, when temperatures climbed into the 70s over most of the state. Only the higher mountains and immediate coast stayed in the 60s. Asheville and Hickory were among the warmest spots with a high of 78 degrees. Charlotte and Raleigh followed with 77 degrees. Cape Hatteras remained cool with 66 degrees. Much needed rain fell over the eastern half of the state Saturday and the forecast calls for general rain Tuesday over the western half of the state where dry woodlands are in bad need of wetting down to diminish or erase the fire threat. Under clear skies during the night, temperatures cooled generally to the low 40s. Asheville was the coldest reporting point with 32 degrees. Temperatures generally will be cooler Tuesday as rain spreads across the state behind a new cold front that will be moving to the coast.

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
ASHEVILLE, N. C. (AP) — Democratic senatorial candidate John Ingram said today he agrees with a strongly worded statement released by his campaign director accusing the campaign of Republican Sen. Jesse Helms of "outright lies."

"I said he misrepresented and it amounted to falsehoods," Ingram said at the first of a series of airport news conferences which will conclude his campaign. Asked about campaign manager Charlie Webb's statement Sunday night that he was asking for an investigation of rumors that some voters had been offered money to stay away from the polls, Ingram referred all questions to Webb who was accompanying the candidate.

When Webb first talked with The Associated Press about the vote buying rumors Sunday night, he said there was no documented evidence or affidavits to support them.

But at Ingram's news conference in Charlotte today, Webb said there was an affidavit from a voter in Clay County "who said they had been offered $40 to vote straight Republican." Webb would not identify the voter.

He said he was aware of the affidavit Sunday night, "but I failed to mention it." Webb also said it was an assistant U.S. attorney in Washington, not the state attorney general's office, that has been contacted about a possible investigation.

A campaign aide had said it was attorney general's office when the aide first released information about the rumors Sunday night.

Ingram was joined on his cross-state trip by his wife and four children, Gov. Jim Hunt, and state Democratic Party chairman Betty McCain.

In Asheville, Hunt praised Ingram's record as state insurance commissioner and said, "I want to commend John for running an excellent campaign."

Ingram planned other news conferences today in Charlotte, Greensboro, Raleigh, Washington and Wilmington. Meanwhile, Helms scheduled a similar string of airport news conferences but his began in Wilmington and finished in Asheville.

After a week of extensive traveling and speaking which he admitted left him tired, Ingram stepped up his campaign against Helms during the weekend.

At Democratic rallies Saturday in Haw River and Raleigh, Ingram called on Helms to disclose the source of $300,000 which was part of the senator's nearly $7 million election effort.

That $300,000 was listed in Helms' most recent financial support and was collected by political fund raisers, Ingram said. Because of a "loophole" in federal law, funds from professional money men do not have to be itemized by amount and source, Ingram contended.

Ingram and campaign manager Charlie Webb, who accompanied the candidate Saturday, emphasized that they were not implying anything illegal had been done but they wanted "full disclosure of each contribution and each expenditure."

Commenting on Ingram's remarks, Tom Ellis, Helms' campaign manager, said, "I resent it. When we began our campaign two years ago we hired the accounting firm of Ernst and Ernst in order to make doubly sure that every dime collected and every dime spent would be properly accounted for. This has been done."

"On two occasions, and whenever requested, we have made available to the public all of our records of receipts and expenditures. John Ingram knows this. He is deliberately trying to mislead, at the very least, the public in a last minute desperation effort."

"This has become the hallmark of his campaign and the way he has conducted his insurance department."

Referring to his contributions of about $200,000 compared with Helms' nearly $7 million, Ingram reminded his supporters that the $300,000 "is almost twice as much as we've raised."

Ingram's theme Saturday was reform of campaign financing laws. He tied in the $300,000 matter with a call for a limit on the amount of money a candidate could spend on an election and a call for a Congressional investigation of corporate political action committees.

Ingram said he has gotten no money through professional fund raisers and if his campaign has any unitemized contributions, "We'll make ours public, too."

Asked about his call for a spending limit, Ingram said he had no specific amount in mind.

"But something has got to be done about the spending of millions and millions and millions of dollars, trying to buy an election," he declared.

Ingram toured neighborhoods and shopping centers in Greensboro and Winston-Salem Saturday and hit the two Democratic rallies Saturday night.

The pace slackened considerably on Sunday, with the only appearance being an afternoon reception in Asheville, Ingram's hometown.

Aside from the campaign financing issues, Ingram stuck to his standard campaign during the weekend by listing his accomplishments as state insurance commissioner and criticizing Helms.

He accused Helms Sunday of using "dilettante misrepresentation" in the campaign.

In an informal speech to supporters at Democratic headquarters in Asheville, Ingram recounted events of last week involving Helms and Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt. Helms said in an interview that he believed Hunt would support him if he, too, were a Democrat. Helms also joined Hunt at a news conference regarding a new federal program and Helms managed to get a chance to speak.

The situation was enough to prompt Hunt into strongly stating his support of Ingram. "Whether or not he (Helms) intentionally tried to deceive the people of this state with those misrepresentations will be up to the determination of the people of North Carolina," Ingram said.

Stringing together his criticism of Helms' Senate votes, contributions from "special interests" and bulging campaign coffers, Ingram said: "If there ever was a man that stood against the farmers and veterans...stood with the special interest insurance industry...stood against the older people...it's the six-million-dollar man."

N.Y. Times, The Daily News Back In Business

By TOM CRANE
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The Daily News, greeting readers with the front-page headline "HELLO THERE, REMEMBER US?" and The New York Times, looking as though it had never been away, hit the streets today for the first time in 89 days.

Presses at the two morning dailies began to roll after the last of an array of unions' approved contract agreements, and the first copies were on newsstands by 3 a.m.

The News, which put out a relatively large edition of 176 pages, said it printed its normal press run of 2 million copies, the largest circulation in the country.

The Times, with a circulation of almost 900,000, is the third largest in the country after the News and the Los Angeles Times. Its front page looked much like any other day's, with stories on Tuesday's election, riots in Iran, border clashes between China and Vietnam — and the end of the newspaper strike, which at one time also involved the afternoon New York Post.

The Times — which boasts of covering "All the News That's Fit to Print" — published a nine-page summary of the big events it missed: the brief reign of Pope John Paul I, the election of Pope John Paul II, the Camp David accord and the Yankees' World Series baseball triumph.

The stereotypes were the first of four unions to ratify new contracts Sunday.

Pressmen, paperhandlers and machinists followed with quick approval of three-year pacts. The Newspaper Guild unit at The Times, which began a strike Saturday, followed suit early today.

All the new contracts call for pay increases of $68 a week over the duration of the contracts.

The strike began Aug. 9, when the publishers posted new work rules for the press rooms. The rules were designed to cut press room jobs by attrition to enable the city papers to compete with suburban dailies vying for much of the same readership and advertising revenue.

The pressmen objected to the cuts and walked out, closing down the Times, the News and the Post and idling 10,000 workers in 11 unions.

The Post pulled out of joint negotiations in the eighth week of the strike, worked out "metoo" agreements with its unions and resumed publication Oct. 5.

Ten of the 11 newspaper unions had been without contracts at the three newspapers since March 30.

The strike caused losses of more than $100 million in advertising revenue and allowed suburban newspapers to further encroach on the market. Surveys showed that most businesses did not suffer, although it remains to be seen whether the strike will cause any lasting damage to the newspapers.

The pressmen union's new contract guarantees work for all 1,508 members until 1984, while at the same time allowing publishers to reduce manning to levels commensurate with those of pressrooms of competitors in the suburbs.

Ali 'Warns' Vote - Or Else

GREENVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Politicians often warn voters that if they don't go to the polls they won't change the status quo. But Muhammad Ali warned people that he'd change the shape of their face if they didn't vote.

"If you don't go to the polls, we'll bust you in the nose," Ali told crowds Sunday when he and singer-actor Kris Kristofferson barnstormed the Mississippi Delta to promote the independent candidacy of Fayette Mayor Charles Evers for the U.S. Senate.

Evers is running against Democrat Maurice Dantin and Republican Thad Cochran to succeed Sen. James O. Eastland, the retiring Democratic incumbent.

Ali and Kristofferson are starring in a movie being made in Natchez.

Tobacco Contests Scheduled Nov. 14

The Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival is sponsoring a Tobacco Spitting Contest and a Tobacco Tying Contest (cured leaves) on Tuesday, Nov. 14, beginning at 2:30 p.m., at the Farmers Tobacco Warehouse in Greenville. The festival is being held in conjunction with the Tobacco Farmers Show.

The Tobacco Spitting Contest will be judged on distance and accuracy. The entry fee is $2 per person and anyone is eligible to participate. Gaylord Perry, pitcher for the San Diego Padres, will be one of the contestants. Festival sponsors are encouraging contestants to compete to break the tobacco spitting world record.

The Tobacco Tying Contest will be judged on speed and quality. The tying of flue-cured leaf for market has become almost a lost art. The use of loose leaf, untied leaf was introduced to flue-cured tobacco marketing in the mid-to late 1960's.

For more information concerning the contests, contact the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival, 752-4101.

No Let-Up By Octogenarian

By MARCIA STEPANEK
ELGIN, Ill. (UPI) — The old man walked down the street pushing his wheelchair in front of him.

"Something to lean on," he said. "Get tired, have something to sit in. Meet a friend, sit and chat. Meet a kid, do a trick."

The black hand-lettered sign reading "ELMER GYLLECK, Architect" near the old cement steps leading to his basement workshop began fading long ago. But the magic one encounters inside upon meeting the spry 81-year-old is very much alive.

Gylleck is surrounded by such things as antique maps and charts, punching bags, stained glass from one of Elgin's two original churches and thousands of photographs. He has more stories to tell and theories about things than anyone has time to hear.

Give him a ping-pong ball and he'll make it disappear.

Ask about the dozens of photographs on the walls and he'll show you boxes where he's holding twice as many more.

Ask him about children and he'll dust off his vaudeville dummy, "Twinkletoes." He performed with it as a ventriloquist on local television several years ago.

"Children still come to my door to watch me do this. It's much better for them than cutting out paper dolls and watching television."

Ask about his town and he'll recite a list and show you photographs of Elgin's first settlers. He'll unveil his 1-100th scale model of Elgin as it looked in 1855, complete with outhouses. "You can't forget those," he said.

Ask about keeping fit and he'll offer you a cure for arthritis and hit a punching bag in time with a John Philip Sousa record pulled from a nearby shelf.

"It's a lost art, this punching," he repeated until the march was over. "Even Muhammed Ali doesn't do it like I do."

Asked for an example of his architectural expertise, he said he designed his workshop. He also displayed a book with at least 200 copies of miniaturized blueprints he had printed in a family homes column during the 1950s.

He claims to have so many hobbies "if you took something away, I'd just get something else going to take its place."

"I used to be a figure skater, too, until I got arthritis. But as long as my hands are working, I can do just about everything else."

Gylleck has spent his life in Elgin, an industrial city of 56,000 population northwest of Chicago. His parents, Swedish buttermakers, settled there in 1892.

In his youth, he was a professional ventriloquist and a magician. He attended the Armour Institute and the Bozar Institute of Design in Chicago, but went off to World War I and never graduated.

After the war, he set up his own architectural firm. He is an honorary member of the Chicago Historical Society and a member of the Elgin Historical Society.

Idi Amin Has 'Number 34'

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — President Idi Amin has named number 34 Kagera River, Uganda Radio has reported.

Number 34 is a boy and 34 is the total number of children officially fathered by Amin.

And he was named Kagera River in honor of the current war with neighboring Tanzania, according to the broadcast monitored here Sunday.

The radio said the name was chosen because the baby was born to Amin's senior wife, Madina, during Uganada's annexation of a strip of Tanzanian land between the Kagera River and the Ugandan border last week.

No Comfort By Graham

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham says he has no advice for PTL President Jim Bakker in Bakker's efforts to solve PTL's financial problems.

Speaking before his 60th birthday tribute here Saturday, Graham quipped, "We're in such great need ourselves, I was thinking of asking them (PTL) for help."

Graham said inflation and an expanded crusade schedule may cause some financial problems for his 28-year-old ministry, but he says his organization won't go into debt.

He said he was not alarmed by PTL's financial woes, including their $13 million dollar debt and the inability to meet their $250,000 bi-weekly payroll last week.

"Any organization as new as PTL is bound to have some growing pains," he said.

His ministry, Graham said, took in $27.7 million in 1977 — the highest income ever for the organization — but he said costs have increased 25 percent and mailing expenses are up nearly $1 million.

Anwar Sadat United A Number Of Ex-Enemies

By GEORGE A. KRIMSKY
Associated Press Writer

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Summit conferences often produce impressions of togetherness, but the Baghdad conference witnessed once-bitter enemies acting like long lost friends. They have Anwar Sadat to thank.

The Egyptian president provided the cement for the new togetherness by frustrating and angering his one-time comrades, agreeing to make peace with Israel, the enemy of the Arabs for 30 years. And he hardened it by refusing to renege under stiff Arab League pressure.

Yasser Arafat, whose Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas traded bullets all over Europe with Iraqi agents just two months ago, says a new era of friendship has begun.

Jordan's King Hussein, whose Bedouin army killed 20,000 guerrillas in a bloody civil war seven years ago, held reconciliation talks with the PLO during this summit, concluded Sunday.

Presidents Ahmed Hassan el Bakr of Iraq and Hafez Assad of Syria, whose governments blamed each other for a two-year spate of sabotage and assassinations, have signed a cooperation treaty.

The new camaraderie produced some interesting scenes. The cemetery of the Iraq royal family, assassinated in a 1958 revolution, was cleaned up and strewn with flowers before the summit. The slain Iraq king was Hussein's cousin.

Syrian and Iraq security guards joked and swapped tales outside the presidential palace while summit leaders were is the highest ever, our expenses are also higher than we've ever known," Graham said.

But Graham said he won't let financial problems cripple his organization. "We will not go into debt," he said.

"This year has been one of the heaviest of the entire ministry, and next year will be equally heavy," Graham said. "We have more invitations abroad than any previous year."

meeting inside. Last August, at other meetings, these men occupied themselves by taking sledge hammers to each others' embassy cars in Baghdad and Damascus.

The prevailing opinion here is that if the Arabs patch up their internal feuds, they can mount a credible front against Israel even without Egypt, their major confrontation state. Attempts at unity have been tried many times before, always in times of crisis, but inevitably dissolved into new bickering.

But the optimists here believe that unity has a better chance now. "We have never been confronted with a situation like this before, where an Arab state has chosen to betray its colleagues and join forces with the enemy," said a PLO official. "Our only chance to redress this wrong is to stick together," he added.

Other observers believe it is premature to regard these new friendships as anything more than summit euphoria, reinforced by mutual desperation. "Eventually, the Arabs will break up into factions again because of self-interest and suspicion," speculated a Middle East analyst from London.

One of the truths of the Mideast conflict over the past three decades is that Arabs have killed far more of their own than they have of the Zionist enemy.

Despite the new relationships, the Arab camp remains divided into three main blocs: those sympathetic to the Egyptian-Israeli peace plan, those opposed to aspects of it but willing to see what happens, and those firmly opposed to it.

Those favoring the proposed Community College say this won't cost anything.

Those favoring the proposed Community College say the present PTI technical and vocational programs won't be affected.

Those favoring the proposed Community College claim a major educational need is not being met.

NOT SO! It will increase our county and state taxes. The only other choice is to use money earmarked for the public schools. That is, take money away from the schools to support the Community College. New programs and duplication are not free!

NOT SO! The proposed Community College will clearly use space and divert teaching and staff resources — and money — from other programs.

Again, NOT SO! We are privileged to have a major public university in Pitt County. E.C.U. is an ongoing $100 million investment in a wide range of educational programs available to all of the people. It offers special programs which the proposed Community College would only duplicate. These special E.C.U. programs have the same entrance requirements as those proposed for a Community College.

Don't risk wasting money needed for our public schools.

Don't duplicate existing college programs.

Don't weaken our valuable technical and vocational programs.

Cowboys Fall To Miami

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

What's wrong with the Dallas Cowboys?

The defending Super Bowl champions looked anything but super Sunday as they bowed to the Miami Dolphins 23-16.

"I'm perplexed," said Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach. "We've maintained a pretty consistent pattern of middle of the road football, a level of mediocrity."

The Cowboys' record after 10 weeks of the National Football League season is a decidedly unspectacular 6-4. They trail Washington by 1½ games in the National Conference's East Division, and the Redskins can stretch that to two full games with a victory over Baltimore in tonight's nationally televised game.

Miami's Bob Griese picked apart Dallas' flex defense, completing 12 of 18 passes for 185 yards and setting up 1-yard scoring runs by Norm Bulaich and Delvin Williams. The Cowboys contributed to their own downfall by committing five turnovers, two of which led to first-period touchdowns by Miami.

"We started out like we did against the Vikings, very flatfooted," Dallas Coach Tom Landry said, thinking back to Dallas' 21-10 loss to Minnesota 10 days ago. "We are way behind in turnovers. That's the thing that keeps plaguing us."

Meanwhile, Denver, the team

Dallas beat in Super Bowl XII, didn't look very super, either. The New York Jets reeled off 24 straight points to upset the Broncos 31-28, dropping Denver's record to 6-4.

Elsewhere, the Oakland Raiders beat the Kansas City Chiefs 20-10, the Minnesota Vikings defeated the Detroit Lions 17-7, the Los Angeles Rams edged the Tampa Bay Buccaneers 26-23, the Philadelphia Eagles surprised the Green Bay Packers 10-3, the Atlanta Falcons topped the San Francisco 49ers 21-10, the Pittsburgh Steelers beat the New Orleans Saints 20-14, the Houston Oilers trimmed the Cleveland Browns 14-10, the New England Patriots got by the Buffalo Bills 14-10, the San Diego Chargers downed the Cincinnati Bengals 22-13, the Seattle Seahawks edged the Chicago Bears 31-29 and the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the New York Giants 20-10.

Jets 31, Broncos 28
The Jets rallied from a 28-7 deficit to stun Denver, winning on a 75-yard bomb from Matt Robinson to fleet wide receiver Wesley Walker with 5:45 to play.

Raiders 20, Chiefs 10
Oakland snapped a two-game losing streak and climbed into a tie with Denver for first place in the AFC West as Ken Stabler shook off three interceptions and three sacks and directed the Raiders on two fourth-quarter scoring drives.

Vikings 17, Lions 7

Minnesota quarterback Fran Tarkenton lost three caps on his teeth and needed 12 stitches on his lip after being clobbered by Detroit's Dave Purefoy, but returned to start the second half. The victory put Minnesota, 6-4, within one game of first-place Green Bay, 7-3, in the NFC Central.

Rams 26, Buccaneers 23

Check Of Cards Proves Allison Dixie Winner

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — Donnie Allison doesn't have an odometer in his race car, which sometimes makes it hard to prove his mileage on certain business trips he takes each Sunday. But Allison has a pretty good idea when he has gone 500 miles in a race, even if officials or other drivers don't agree with him.

Allison knew he went all 500 miles Sunday in the $185,000 Dixie 500 here, and he knew he traveled the distance faster than the 39 other drivers who were trying.

Although it took more than three hours after the race to confirm it, officials finally proclaimed Allison a two-car length victor over Richard Petty.

Petty, who beat Dave Marcis by one foot, believed he'd won and that Allison was barely a lap behind him.

In the end it was two mistakes made by the two women scoring his car in the race that proved Allison's confusing victory.

Both of Allison's scorecards showed he lost the race to Petty. Allison knew he hadn't. He ordered a painstaking lap-by-lap recheck of each of his 328 laps on both scorecards.

On one, officials found a number of mistakes — made by a rookie scorer.

"At one point that scorer missed three laps," explained Earl Sappenfield, the chief scorer. "There were also two other missed laps on the card."

A close examination of the other scorecard, kept by Allison's veteran team scorer, also picked up a missed lap.

Fortunately, it was a lap the rookie scorer had caught — although she had missed one lap herself only two laps earlier. By cross-checking in that manner, Allison's victory was proven. But if the two scorers had coincidentally fouled up on the same lap, as sometimes happens, there would have been little chance Allison could have successfully argued his case.

Even as it was, officials changed their minds at one point and gave the victory to Petty, before finding the tricky error and correcting it in Allison's favor.

Allison said it seems things like that happen to him a lot. It shouldn't surprise him. He doesn't run all the races, and he doesn't have a bunch of regular scorers like Petty or Cale Yarborough. There are at least four veterans scoring Petty on each race. Allison usually has to scrape to find two.

Few races end in scoring controversies like the Dixie 500

did. It was a difficult race to score, made even more difficult by a five-car crash in front of the scoring stand with only 12 miles to go.

In the early stages, Yarborough and Buddy Baker took turns at making the race a runaway. But Yarborough lost seven laps while an oil leak was repaired and Baker's engine blew 30 miles from the finish — another of his patented last-minute losses.

Petty and Marcis, who had driven with abandon all day just to stay close to the leaders, each saw a golden chance to end a long victory drought when Baker retired.

Petty seemed to have the edge as the two prepared for a three-lap dash to the checkered flag after the race's last caution period.

Unbeknownst to them, Allison had evened things up with them, and when he passed them, it was for the lead.

"As far as Donnie was concerned I didn't even give him a thought," Petty said.

"Who the heck was even thinking of Donnie? I wasn't," Marcis said.

"I don't know when I was more sure I won a race," Petty groaned. "I don't guess you can argue with the cards though."

Evert: We'll Be Back

LONDON (AP) — "I still think we are the better team, and we will be back next year," said Chris Evert after the United States women's tennis squad had lost the Wightman Cup to Britain.

"Tracy Austin and Pam Shriver still have their Wightman Cup futures ahead of them. When they get more experienced and finally establish themselves, they are going to put America on top."

Tracy, 15, and Pam, 16, played gallantly but failed as Britain completed a 4-3 victory over the United States in the Royal Albert Hall Saturday night. Both were making their Wightman Cup debuts.

They played five matches between them during the threeday competition but won only one — a doubles in which Tracy partnered with Billie Jean King.

King, 34-year-old player-coach to the team, insisted on staying outside the singles so the youngsters could play. And Joanne Russell, a doubles specialist, was also left out with the same object.

Tracy, the bouncy little baseliner, was still cheerful after the United States had lost the cup.

"I don't think I played that badly," she said. "Certainly against Virginia Wade I had my chances."

East Carolina University put on its best display of offense for the season Saturday night in their 33-8 win over Appalachian State. And the score probably could have been a lot worse, had not the Pirates made a few mistakes that took them out of scoring situations.

One touchdown was voided by a penalty, and the Bucs settled for a field goal that time. Another time, a fumble cost them a chance for a score, inside the five-yard line.

Some of the edge was taken off the game when ASU's star quarterback Steve Brown was unable to play because of a bruised knee. How much difference his presence would have made can only be conjectured.

Without him, for sure, the ASU offense could do little against the Pirates. Their only real threat of the night was their touchdown drive. Aside from that, ASU did little.

Gerald Hall continued to show his great value in the punt return game, returning four kicks for 66 yards. That gave him a total of 27 returns for 362 yards, breaking both school records. The old mark of 26 was held jointly by Hall (last year) and Jack Patterson (1971); and 302 yards, set last year by Hall.

And Eddie Hicks had one of his better nights in the Pirate purple, racing for 114 yards and three touchdowns. He also added a two-point conversion for a total of 20 points. That moved him to a career total of 140 points, fifth best among Pirates. One more touchdown will tie him with number four scorer, Kenny Strayhorn, who had 146.

The Pirates will face a tough task this weekend, as they entertain William & Mary, a team that has given Pat Dye-coached ECU teams fits over the past few years.

Rose High Future

Rose High School's Rampants finished the year with a losing 4-5-1 record, and they were 2-3 in the league.

Yet most observers in Division I areas felt that Rose probably was the second best team in the league. And they lost only to champ Rocky Mount by two in the final minutes of play.

Rose's defense did an outstanding job this season, holding opponents to an amazing 668 yards on the ground in ten games. They allowed 718 more through the air.

That might be compared with Rose's rushing total of 1,655, and the Rampant offense was the weak link in the game.

Coach Dave Bumgarner has a lot to look forward to next year, since only five regulars will be lost next year. Joining a large number of experienced juniors will be the sophomores from the 9-1 junior varsity team, and a host to new sophomores up from a 5-1 junior high team.

So, without a doubt, the future is bright for the Rampants.

Brown On TV

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State running back Ted Brown is scheduled to appear on NBC's Today Show Tuesday.

Brown, who earlier this season became the sixth major college rusher in NCAA history to rush for more than 4,000 yards in a career, will appear on the 7 a.m. segment of the two-hour news show.

Brown crossed the 1,000-yard rushing mark for the third straight season in Saturday's 22-13 win over South Carolina. He is also scheduled to attend the Metropolitan Football Writers Association luncheon Tuesday. He will meet with New York area media representatives in Giant Stadium.

NFL Roundup

Rookie Frank Corral's fourth field goal of the game, a 27-yarder with three seconds remaining, gave Los Angeles its victory. The Bucs had tied the score with just 47 seconds left, Johnny McKay catching a 23-yard pass from Mike Rae.

Eagles 10, Packers 3
Philadelphia capitalized on a fumbled snap by punter David Beverly on a second-quarter punt play for the only touchdown in its victory over Green Bay.

Falcons 21, 49ers 10
Steve Bartkowski ran for one touchdown and threw a 37-yard scoring pass to Wallace Francis as Atlanta spoiled the head coaching debut of the 49ers' Fred O'Connor, who replaced the fired Pete McCulley.

Steelers 20, Saints 14

Pittsburgh raised its record to 9-1 on a 24-yard touchdown pass from Terry Bradshaw to Rocky Bleier with 1:51 left in the game. It was the first regular-season TD reception for Bleier in his 10 NFL years.

Oilers 14, Browns 10

Dan Pastorini hooked up with Mike Barber on a 72-yard touchdown bomb and Rob Carpenter scored on a 2-yard run, but it was the Houston defense that was most responsible for the Oilers' victory over Cleveland. Browns quarterback Brian Sipe was sacked seven times.

Patriots 14, Bills 10

New England, using a double tight end offense to control the ball in the second half, got past Buffalo on the running of Horace Ivory, who carried 16 times for 128 yards and two touchdowns.

Chargers 22, Bengals 13

San Diego's Mike Fuller picked off two Cincinnati passes, running one of them back for a touchdown, as the Bengals' record dropped to 1-9, tied with San Francisco for worst in the NFL.

Seahawks 31, Bears 29

Surprising Seattle handed Chicago its seventh straight loss as Jim Zorn threw touchdown passes of 26 and 31 yards and Sherman Smith ran for two touchdowns, one of which he set up with a 67-yard run, the longest in the franchise's three-year history.

Cards 20, Giants 10

St. Louis did all its scoring in the first half en route to its second victory after an 0-8 start. Fullback Jim Otis rushed for two touchdowns and 78 yards and became St. Louis all-time rushing leader with 3,664 yards.

Lucas Returns From Hand Injury

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Some people tip-toe into the water; Maurice Lucas dives right in.

Lucas, who has been sidelined since September with a broken bone in his right hand, played his first game of the National Basketball Association season Sunday night. Instead of breaking in slowly, Lucas played 37 minutes and scored 30 points to lead the Portland Trail Blazers to a 111-96 victory over the New York Knicks.

"That's more than I expected to play and my body's tellin' me," said Lucas, who played with the second and third fingers of his right hand taped together.

In the only other NBA game Sunday, the Los Angeles Lakers beat the Cleveland Cavaliers 117-107.

Lucas got more playing time than expected because starting center Tom Owens got in early foul trouble, getting whistled for the fourth time midway through the second period.

The 6-foot-9 power forward showed no sign of his long layoff, scoring from all over the floor, rebounding well and handing out assists. He scored 17 of his points in the fourth quarter.

Lucas' return to action means the Blazers will be able to use rookie Mychal Thompson more in the middle. "Our success depends on how well he (Thompson) plays in the center," said Lucas.

Thompson had another good game, scoring 21 points and grabbing 12 rebounds.

Lakers 117, Cavaliers 107

Los Angeles hit 57.1 percent of its shots to beat Cleveland as Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Adrian Dantley scored 26 points apiece and Norm Nixon added 25 points, seven assists and three steals.

"I'm pleased with the way we're playing but I'll be more pleased if we play like this out on the road," said Lakers Coach Jerry West, whose team is now 6-0 at home but 0-4 on the road.

Kilmer, Jones Should Start

BALTIMORE (AP) — Quarterbacks Billy Kilmer and Bert Jones, who have spent most of the National Football League season on the bench, are expected to start in Monday night's game between the Washington Redskins and the Baltimore Colts.

The Redskins were rated four-point favorites for the nationally televised contest before a sellout crowd of more than 60,000 in Memorial Stadium.

The 39-year-old Kilmer had thrown only two passes before getting his first start of the season last week against San Francisco. He responded by completing 12 of 23 passes for 185 yards and two touchdowns in a 38-20 victory.

That gave the Redskins a 7-2 record and moved them one game ahead of the defending Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys in the NFC East.

Dallas lost to Miami on Sunday, dropping their record to 6-4.

Kilmer, who replaced Joe Theismann, has the respect of Baltimore Coach Ted Marchibroda — the former offensive coordinator for the Redskins.

1968 Demonstrators Would Do It Again

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Ten years and three weeks after the two American sprinters shocked the Olympic Games with a black-gloved, clinched fist salute from the victory stand in Mexico City, Tommie Smith and John Carlos have blended into society — more resentful than resented.

Given the same circumstances and the same stage, Smith and Carlos insist they would do it again. But it is a page in history that has been turned and consigned to the past. The world moves on.

The world moves on for Tommie Smith, 33, parent, school teacher, administrator — an intelligent, sensitive man who chose the role of educator to that of a professional football player.

The world moves on for Carlos, also 33, father of three, embittered for a while, temporarily a drifter but now dedicated to helping underprivileged kids in the Los Angeles area.

"What we did was not derogatory — it was like a bean shooter compared to a shotgun measured by other events of the time," says Smith. "I am not sorry it happened. I am at peace with myself."

"It's been tough — I was ostracized," says Carlos, a more militant and outspoken man. "I was run out of track. I never got a fair chance in pro football. Now I hope to organize a national youth league — to help underprivileged, mixed-up kids everywhere."

On Oct. 16, 1968, Smith, from Lamoore, Calif., won the Olympic 200-meter race in 19.8

seconds, world record time, with Carlos finishing third.

When the two rangy sprinters took the podium to accept their gold and bronze medals, they wore black scarves around their necks and a black glove on one hand.

As the American flag was raised to the strains of "The Star Spangled Banner," they fixed their eyes on the ground. After the medals had been hung around their necks, each raised the black-gloved fist in a defiant salute.

Gasps of surprise rolled through the huge stadium crowd. The U.S. Olympic Committee, after a few hours of deliberations, issued a public apology, deploring what it called the "discourtesy" shown by the athletes. Two days later, pressed by militant President Avery Brundage of the International Olympic Committee, the USOC suspended Smith and Carlos and ordered them to leave the city.

Smith joined the Cincinnati Bengals of the American Football League in July, 1969, and stayed with them 2½ years. In 1972, he was named assistant athletic director and head track and field coach at Oberlin College in Ohio where he remained until this year when he took a similar post at Santa Monica Junior College.

Carlos came home to continue his track career at San Jose State. He signed but never played football with the Philadelphia Eagles.

He worked at odd jobs for as little as $60 a week before landing an aide's post with a Los Angeles city councilman. Lately he has been working with playground kids in the Los Angeles area and pushing for a John Carlos Youth League.

Levi, Mann Team Up For Disney Victory

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — A five-year pro who had never won a tour event and a mini-tour player completing his first season on the PGA circuit are the new National Team Golf champions.

Wayne Levi, 25, and Bob Mann, 26, won the title Sunday on Disney World's treacherous Magnolia Course to withstand a challenge by the brothers Wadkins, Lanny and Bob.

Levi, a Tampa, Fla., resident who plays out of Herkimer, N.Y., dumped in more than 90 percent of the 34 birdies the duo picked up over the four days to give them a three-stroke victory with a 254 total score. They played Sunday's final round in 9-under-par 63, as did the Wadkins brothers.

But their $20,000 split of the $40,000 first prize was "absolutely secondary" to getting their qualifying exemptions from each and every PGA event they enter in 1979, said the 5-foot-9, 165-pound Levi through an ear-to-ear smile.

"They beat a hell of a good effort. We got a bunch of birdies and didn't make a bogey all week and they beat us by three shots," Bob Wadkins, the younger of the brothers, said about Levi and Mann.

In third place, far off the pace at 27-under-par 261, were Keith Fergus and Phil Hancock, FRESNO, Calif. (UPI) — A few days of rain, seemingly timed by a sinister force, can spell the difference between prosperity and poverty for raisin growers.

That fact was brought home with sickening impact this year. Unseasonal rains hit California's fertile San Joaquin Valley for four days at the end of the Labor Day weekend, catching raisin growers with their fruit down.

"That's the worst time of all," said raisin grower Seth Atamian. "Once the fruit is on the ground to dry it is fully exposed and at the mercy of the elements and the rain was devastating."

Devastating is not strong enough a word in the eyes of many of California's raisin growers. They lost all they had in those four days of rain.

While no concrete figures are yet available, most experts believe the rains wiped out between 60 percent and 70 percent of this year's expected crop.

"We originally projected a crop of more than 210,000 tons but since most of the raisins were on the ground drying when the rains hit there weren't many left and now we're expecting only between 50,000 and 70,000 tons," said Kalem Barserian, manager of the Raisin Bargaining Association.

More raisins are grown in California than anywhere else in the United States and when the California crop is severely damaged it affects the entire industry, worldwide.

While most packers said they had sufficient raisins in their warehouse to get through the Christmas season, when raisins are most in demand for baking purposes, the outlook for 1979 was grim.

"Raisins could be so expensive next year that bakeries will cut way back to the point that they'll almost stop using them," said a spokesman for one of the major packing companies.

Retail store shelf prices for raisins also were expected to reflect the small crop, with some experts predicting the price of a 15-ounce box of raisins will more than double the current $1.09 price.

"The consumer may find himself paying up to $2.50 a box by early next year," said one packer.

Those predictions were given some credence when the major packers agreed to pay a record $1,600 a ton for what raisins could be salvaged after the heavy rains. That was nearly double the price packers paid last year for the bumper crop of some 218,000 tons.

"We are paying the highest price ever for the raisins this year," the packer spokesman said, "and that means we'll have to get the highest price ever when we sell them."

Crop insurance, which many but by no means all growers purchased before they started growing this year's crop, will be the only thing that keeps many of them from going bankrupt.

The crop insurance is based on a price of $325 per ton and probably will pay most of the farmers' costs of growing the crop but will not provide for any profit.

Last year growers got $840 for each ton of raisins they grew and $325 isn't what they had counted on. The last time raisins sold for a little as $325 a ton was during the 1971-72 season.

"When a crop is practically wiped out, it not only hurts the grower but the entire industry," said Barserian. "We've spent millions advertising raisins and getting the baking industry to use more and more of them plus expanding foreign markets and now we won't be able to supply those markets next year. This means they'll cut way back on the use of raisins and we'll have to start over later getting them to use them again."

Two years ago a similar disaster occurred when rains swept through Central California in late September and early October, wiping out about 50 percent of the crop.

"We were just getting back to the point where raisin usage was on the rise again and then this happens," said Barserian. "Now there won't be enough raisins to meet the demand so usage will drop off again."

Packers indicated they had about 20,000 tons carryover from the 1977 crop to get through the Christmas season.

"There'll be the usual amount of raisins in the Christmas fruit cakes and cookies," a packers spokesman said, "but after the first of the year you probably won't find many raisins in baked goods and when you do they'll be very expensive."

While the rains devastated this year's crop, there were still a few small raisin growers who will make small fortunes.

The working man with a few acres of raisin grapes planted for extra income on his property who could afford to take a few days off and keep his children home from school during the rains will find himself with more money than he expected.

"The little guy who has a bunch of kids he can send into the fields to pick up a few acres of drying raisins and then replace on new trays when the rains stopped and the ground died is the one who will make all the money," said Barserian. "He pays nothing for labor and saves almost his entire crop and then sells it for $1,600 a ton."

But for most growers it is just written off as another very bad year and they take their insurance money and try again next year.

The rains don't harm the grape vines which will produce another crop next year and if the days of August, September and early October bring the usual sunshine and hot weather, next year's crop will be a good one and the growers will show a nice profit.

"Raisin growing always has been and always will be an iffy industry," Barserian said. "When it's good, it's usually very good, but when it's bad it can be disastrous."

Despite technological advances in almost every phase of American life, there has been no better way found, at least on a large scale basis, to dry grapes into raisins than to pick them out in the sun on paper trays between the rows in the vineyards.

There are dehydrators which can dry some of the grapes, especially when they have been rained on, but they are not economically feasible on a large scale.

Agricultural researchers at Fresno State University are working to develop a chemical spray to make drying grapes more resistant to water, but it is still in the research stage and not ready for mass use.

When the weather conditions are right, the paper trays on the ground work well as the grapes are dried by the scorching sun during the usually hot late summer and early fall days.

Even the damage to the drying grapes from the rain can be compensated for if the hot, dry weather returns to the area quickly, but the ground beneath the trays usually remains saturated with water and prevents proper drying.

"If we had some way to move large quantities of grape trays from wet to dry ground after the rains it would be a different story," said grower Atamian.

The timing of the rains plays an important part in determining how much damage they do.

In 1976 it rained longer and harder on the drying raisins, but the rains came a month later and many of the trays had already been rolled up for the final days of drying. This meant most of the raisins were nearly ready to be sent to the packers so the damage was less severe.

"When the rains hit as early as they did this year, it's worse than in 1976," said Barserian. "Mold sets in and many of the raisins that were saved had to be sold to the distilleries at a cut rate to be used in wines and liquor."

When the mold gets to a certain point there is nothing to do but plow the rotting raisins back into the ground and take the insurance money, if the grower had the foresight to purchase crop insurance.

"Most of the growers will remember 1978 for a long time to come because of the potential money that was lost," said Barserian. "But most of those who don't go bankrupt will just salvage what they can and start over next year, hoping and in some cases praying that mother nature does not decide to do it again."

Over half of the students entering our general college program will graduate from our vocational and technical programs.

Over half of the students who enter college parallel programs at community colleges end up transferring to vocational and technical programs. That's because most students are unsure of what they want to do when they enter school. So, many Pitt County residents travel to community colleges outside the county. Because a community college offers both college transfer and technical education. That gives these students a chance to make up their minds before jumping into a vocation.

Making Pitt Tech a community college actually helps our vocational and technical programs.
The only difference between a technical institute and a community college is that a community college can offer college parallel courses in addition to technical and vocational programs. Our technical programs will be strengthened. In fact, our technical and vocational programs will benefit from the calibre of students transferring in from the college parallel program. More students stay. More students learn trades. More students have more opportunities.

Look at the opportunity. Vote for Pitt Community College on November 7th.

Mood Of Indifference Marks Eve Of Election Day

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 1978 election campaign entered its final day with signs that the mood of America was marked by an indifference unlikely to produce dramatic change in the Democratic Party's control of Congress and most state governments.

Despite get-out-the-vote campaigns, a low turnout was expected Tuesday.

If historic patterns hold, the Republicans, as the party out of power in Washington, should pick up seats in Congress. The most optimistic forecasts of GOP gains, however, leave the party far short of ending Democratic control of the House and Senate.

As the year of Proposition 13, of tax protests and demands for cuts in government budgets, it would seem like a difficult election for incumbents. Yet the governors of several of the nation's largest states now appear headed for re-election.

Whether Republicans or Democrats, candidates emphasized pocketbook issues — inflation, taxes and government spending — and polls show most Americans see little difference in how the two parties deal with the economy.

In an Associated Press-NBC News poll, 48 percent of those responding said their lives will be neither better nor worse no matter who wins the election.

An uncertain factor this year was the heavy flow of money from special interest groups, many of them concerned with a single issue such as the Panama Canal treaties or federal abortion aid.

Federal Election Commission statistics show political action committees not affiliated with specific candidates or parties contributed $18.7 million to congressional candidates.

A total of 155.5 million Americans are eligible to vote on Tuesday, but most forecasts are that under 40 percent will go to the polls. The figure might be as low as 33 percent. In the 1974 mid-term election, 36 percent of the eligible voters went to the polls.

Those who do vote will decide the following:

—The entire makeup of the House of Representatives in the 96th Congress, a total of 435 seats. When the 95th Congress adjourned last month there were 285 Democrats, 146 Republicans and four vacant seats.

—Contests for one-third of the Senate. With 35 seats to be filled this year, two Democrats are unopposed. Of the contested seats, 17 are held by Republicans and 16 by Democrats. In the 95th Congress, Democrats controlled the Senate by a margin of 62 to 38.

—The governors of 36 states, 26 of whom are Democrats, nine Republicans and one an independent. Overall, there are 37 Democratic governors and 12 Republicans.

—Legislatures in 45 states. The Republican National Committee committed $1 million to a campaign to elect GOP candidates to state legislatures. Democrats control both branches of the legislature in 36 states to the Republicans' five.

—Variations on California's tax-cutting Proposition 13 in 16 states. Proposals to cut or limit taxes and spending are on the ballot in Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Hawaii, Idaho, Illinois, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota and Texas.

—Other measures on state ballots dealing with issues ranging from a ban on the union shop in Missouri, barring smoking in most public places in California and allowing people in Oregon to buy false teeth without going through a dentist.

President Carter, who sent his absentee ballot to Georgia last week, campaigned for Democrats in 19 states over seven weeks. The president's principal theme was "Stick with me. Stick with my programs and we will be successful."

Interviewed on the ABC television-radio program "Issues and Answers," Sunday, both Democratic Party Chairman John C. White and Republican Chairman Bill

Brock predicted the GOP will gain House seats.

Brock forecast a gain of 15 to 20 seats, while White said he'd be happy if the Democrats lost no more than 33.

In Senate contests, it looked like either party could end up gaining a seat or two.

Sen. J. Bennett Johnston of Louisiana was assured a second term when he received more than 50 percent of the vote in the state's open primary in September. And Howell Heflin is unopposed in his bid to succeed the retiring Sen. John Sparkman, D-Ala.

Eight incumbent senators — four Democrats and four Republicans — are in very close contests.

The Democrats are Floyd Haskell of Colorado, William Hathaway of Maine, Jennings

Randolph of West Virginia and Wendell Anderson of Minnesota. The Republicans are Charles Percy of Illinois, Robert Griffin of Michigan, John Tower of Texas and Edward W. Brooke of Massachusetts.

There are Senate races in 13 states in which no incumbent is running. Democrats hope to pick up seats in Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, New Jersey and Virginia. The best Republican hopes are in South Dakota, Mississippi, Montana and Minnesota, where voters will fill two Senate seats.

Among the gubernatorial races, Democrat Edmund G. Brown Jr. appears headed for election to a second term in California and a boost to his presidential ambitions whether in 1980 or later.

Republican Gov. James Thompson of Illinois, another governor with presidential ambitions, also is expected to win a second term by a comfortable margin.

In New York, however, Gov. Hugh Carey, a Democrat, is in a much tougher re-election fight against Republican Perry Duryea.

The ONLY Democratic Candidate for the U.S. Senate is

VOTE DEMOCRATIC

Paid for by Pitt County Democratic Executive Committee, Pat Higgins, Treasurer.

Poll Shows Helms Leads

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A poll conducted last week shows that Democrat John Ingram's senate campaign has lost ground and he is now trailing Republican Sen. Jesse Helms by 18.3 percent.

But both Ingram and Helms say the only poll that counts is the election on Tuesday.

The poll was taken by North Carolina Opinion Research Inc. for the News and Observer of Raleigh. It shows Helms with 49.5 percent of the vote to Ingram's 31.2 percent.

Of the voters polled, 12.9 percent said they were undecided, 4.4 percent refused to say how they would vote and 2 percent said they would go to the polls but would not vote in the Senate race.

A similar News and Observer poll conducted a month ago showed Helms with 45.1 percent of the vote, Ingram with 37.8 percent, 12 percent undecided, 4.5 percent refusing to say how they would vote and 0.6 percent saying they would not vote in the Senate race.

The latest poll was based on telephone interviews with a scientifically selected sampling of 874 registered voters who said they planned to vote Tuesday.

Helms said Saturday night that he was "highly gratified with the results of the poll. But at the same time, I must again point out that the only poll that counts is the one next Tuesday."

Ingram commented, "The only poll that counts is the one on Nov. 7."

The poll indicated that Helms' support is widespread across the state, that Ingram's attacks on Helms' $6.7 million campaign chest have not had a great impact on voters and that voters hold mixed views on Ingram's record as state insurance commissioner.

It's a new service that will let you put just about every penny you own to work.

HERE'S HOW IT WORKS.

When you open a Customer's Choice Transfer Savings Account, we'll automatically tie it in to your BB&T checking account. Like all regular BB&T savings, you'll earn 5% interest from the day of deposit to the day of withdrawal, compounded quarterly. But here's the interest-earning difference.

Now you can make all your deposits into your Transfer Savings Account. Then whenever it's needed to cover your checks, we'll automatically transfer the money in $100 multiples into your checking account. This means you'll keep earning interest on every cent in your savings right up to the day it's transferred.

And since no checking account service charge is required with your new Customer's Choice Transfer Account, the cost to you is just a $3 per month maintenance fee — plus $.25 for every day a transfer is made. If you keep a balance of $2,000 or more in your Transfer Savings Account at all times, no maintenance fee will be charged.

Naturally, the higher your savings balance, the more this service will mean to you. Not only will you be earning interest you could not have earned before, but with a high average balance, your earnings can easily exceed your service fee. And just imagine the additional convenience to you if all your savings and loan or credit union funds were placed within this one easy-to-manage account.

CUSTOMER'S CHOICE MEANS JUST WHAT IT SAYS.

For those who don't wish to maintain a high average balance, our new service lives up to its name by offering you another choice. This optional plan, designed as protection against accidental overdrafts, works just like the first plan. All you pay is $1 for every day a transfer is made, plus your regular checking service charge. So with money in your Transfer Savings, there's no more worry about "bouncing" checks — or paying an overdraft fee.

The only way to decide whether or not Customer's Choice Transfer Service is right for you is to come to your nearest BB&T office and discuss it with us. If it does make sense, we'll get you on the road to earning new interest right away.

We think it's time you got the most out of every penny you own. Don't you?

CUSTOMER'S CHOICE TRANSFER SERVICE. A NEW WAY TO POCKET MORE INTEREST.

In Some States, Taxpayers' Revolt Seen Fading

FANCY FOOTWORK — A pretty lady shows off thirteen different types of pre-molded soles for shoes. Pre-molded rubber-like soles will account for one-half of all soles produced in the United States in ten years, reports Emhart Corporation, a leading world designer of unit soles. (AP Laserphoto)

BY DONALD H. MAY

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The taxpayers' revolt in a number of states seems to be running out of gas.

A nationwide UPI survey shows groups interested in preserving public schools, social services and local government jobs have mounted a spirited defense against the taxpayers' revolt, casting Tuesday's referendums in doubt.

In Colorado, for example, a proposed constitutional amendment to limit state and local spending to the amount consumer prices rise appeared to have overwhelming support a few weeks ago. Now observers say it could be in trouble.

A recent television commercial shows a hand holding an antique revolver while an announcer describes the amendment. The gun rotates slowly until the muzzle is pointing at the viewer. It fires.

"Amendment 2 is aimed at you," intones a voice.

Opponents, including church leaders and school boards, expect to spend about $100,000 on their campaign. Catholic Bishop George Evans in Denver says, "Our elderly, our poor, our undereducated and our ethnic minorities will be those most likely to suffer if it is passed."

Supporters say they are spending about $60,000. Says coauthor Jack Orr, a Golden rancher, "We all must live on a budget. It's time the bureaucracy was compelled to do the same."

The Colorado amendment may not be typical because its critics include Howard Jarvis and some other leaders of the tax revolt. They say its spending limits may not actually reduce taxes.

In Idaho, an initiative patterned after Jarvis' Proposition 13, which California voters approved last June, also appeared to have overwhelming support a short time ago. Now it is considered too close to call.

It would limit property taxes to 1 percent of current value, compared with the current average of 1.7 percent.

Don Chance, president of the Idaho State Property Owners

Association, camped for six days in a pup tent on the statehouse steps. A leading opponent, Don Rottle, director of the Idaho Education Association, says the proposal would cripple education.

In Arkansas, a different kind of proposal, to eliminate state sales taxes on food and medicine, had considerable early support. Now it, too, is considered too close to call. The state education association says it would block efforts to pull Arkansas out of 49th place in education spending in the nation.

One of two proposals on the ballot in Oregon, Measure 6, is patterned after Proposition 13 and would limit property taxes to 1.5 percent of value.

Jarvis and his California co-author, Paul Gann, have stumped for it. A competing proposal, Measure 11, drafted by the state legislature, would pay half a homeowner's property taxes up to $1,500 from state funds. Both issues appear close.

Michigan also has several propositions.

Proposal J is similar to Proposition 13 and would cut property taxes in half. It is given a 50-50 chance.

Michigan's Proposal E would prohibit state spending and taxation from growing faster than citizens' total personal income. Polls indicate it will be approved.

Proposal H in Michigan, which appears to have more voters against than for, would end use of property taxes for schools and give students a state check with which to attend private or public schools of their choice.

Jarvis has stumped for Proposition J. But State Commerce Director Kleith Molin says "you are slashing funds your city needs to run the fire department, and money the county needs to run the sheriff's department, and the money that supports the schools where you send your children for an education."

In Nevada another proposal similar to Proposition 13 — calling for cutting property taxes more than half — is expected to pass easily. But it would have to be presented to state voters again in 1980 to take effect. Meantime, the legislature is expected to pass a plan of its own.

Illinois voters are expected to approve an advisory referendum asking voters if they want a constitutional amendment to impose ceilings on taxes and spending. It would not be binding.

In all, some 16 states have propositions which would in some way limit or express sentiment for limiting taxes or spending — or both. Others will consider different kinds of tax proposals. Others have similar issues on local ballots.

A state-by-state rundown:

Alabama — Limit increases in county property taxes to 20 percent annually. Expected to pass.

Arizona — Limit state spending to 7 percent of total personal income. Expected to pass.

Arkansas — Eliminate sales tax on food and medicine. Too close to call.

Colorado — Limit state and local spending to rise in consumer prices. Too close to call.

Hawaii — Limit state spending based on growth of state's economy and rebate excess revenues. Too close to call.

Idaho — Limit property taxes to 1 percent. Could be close.

Illinois — Advisory referendum on limiting taxes and spending. Expected to pass.

Massachusetts — Referendum on whether voters favor limit on state and local spending. Question 1, to allow different kinds of property to be assessed differently. Both too close to call.

Michigan — Proposal J to cut property taxes in half given 5-50 chance. Proposal E to prohibit state spending and taxation from growing faster than total personal income has favorable polls. Proposal H to end property tax support of schools and give vouchers to attend school of choice appears to face uphill battle.

Missouri — Authority to roll back property tax rates if reassessment causes windfalls.

Nebraska — Limit increases in state and local spending to 5 percent yearly. Uncertain.

Nevada — One percent limit on property taxes. Expected to pass but would have to go before voters again in 1980.

North Dakota — Reduce personal and corporate income taxes. Exempt residents earning less than $3,000 annually from state income tax.

Proponents say will pass easily. Oregon — Measure 6, like Proposition 13, would limit property taxes to 1.5 percent of value. Measure 11 would pay half a homeowner's property tax up to $1,500. Both too close to call.

South Dakota — Require two-thirds vote of both houses to raise taxes. Little opposition, good chance of passage.

Texas — Reduce property taxes and spending, increase homestead exemptions, lower taxes on elderly, reduce farm and timberland taxes and tie spending to increases in economic growth.

Now Suspect Missing Cabin Cruiser Hijacked

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A 24-foot cabin cruiser that disappeared earlier this month off Topsail Island may have been hijacked, according to U.S. Coast Guard investigators.

Lt. R.C. Wigger, a Coast Guard investigator in Wilmington, said the disappearance of the Buddy II Oct. 14 on a fishing trip on a calm day has raised suspicions. Wigger said investigators became suspicious when only a fishing box from the boat was found floating about 25 miles from Wrightsville Beach during a week-long search.

Wigger said it was also unusual that the Buddy II made no radio contact with other vessels or land bases on the day of its disappearance.

"If the boat has sunk," Wigger said, "you would expect to find bodies or debris such as life jackets. If the boat sank as a result of an explosion there would be debris."

Wigger and Michael Grimes, a special agent for the Drug Enforcement Administration, both said it was strange that no radio messages were received from the Buddy II on Oct. 14.

On the day the boat disappeared, Buddy II owner and captain Baron R. Howard, 58, of Charlotte, had made arrangements to follow a 32-foot boat captained by his friend, M.T. Rambeaut of Spring Lake.

But two members of Howard's party were late and Rambeaut left Topsail Inlet without Howard, expecting him to follow later.

"But I didn't hear a word from him all day," said Rambeaut. "I couldn't understand why he didn't break radio silence."

"I called him on my radio three times, but I never could get him to answer. The first time I called him, I guess it was 8:30 or 9 a.m."

Rambeaut said Howard was a skilled seaman.

Grimes said several boats have been hijacked in the Florida area, many by drug smugglers. But Grimes said there have been no reports of smuggling off the North Carolina coast.

Wigger discounted the possibility of shark attacks on the boat's passengers. "We don't have many big sharks off our coast," Wigger said. "We have some small sharks, but I feel that we would have found some of the bodies. Usually bodies from a boat sinking wash ashore eventually."

Besides Howard, the party on the Buddy II included J.H. Wilson Jr., 60, of Raleigh; and Isaiah Akins, 55, James Curtis Buford, 47, John D. Colvin Jr., 48, and Thomas Gureton Jr., 37, all of Charlotte.

New Drug Aids Ulcer Treatment

I have been taking Tagamet on and off for about five months. Am I overdoing it? Is there a limit to how long I should be taking this new drug? — Mr. B.G., N.Y.

Dear Mr. G.:

For my readers' information, Tagamet is an excellent new drug which has virtually revolutionized the treatment and control of stomach and duodenal ulcers. In a complicated way, the drug blocks the production of hydrochloric acid which is one of the chief factors in the cause and the persistence of stomach ulcers.

Your letter intrigues me particularly because it is such gross evidence of the deficiencies of communication between patients and their doctors. Your doctor wisely prescribed this drug. Certainly, he would not expect you to take it "on and off for five months" without again evaluating its advantages in your particular case.

It makes me wonder whether a doctor did, indeed, prescribe the drug or whether you are taking it on the advice of a solicitous friend. No drug is ever prescribed by a doctor for an indefinite period, without supervision.

About six months ago, I discovered a completely bare spot on my head. It is not a case of receding hairline, but a round spot about an inch above and behind my ear. It is not scabby or crusty, like psoriasis, but simply bare and smooth. Does this indicate a lack of circulation? Can I do anything to stimulate new growth of hair? — Mrs. E.K., Mass.

Dear Mrs. K.:

The partial, or complete, loss of hair is known as "alopecia." A particular type of localized loss of hair is known as "alopecia areata." This describes the sudden loss of hair, in a small localized area, in people who have no apparent skin disorder.

Almost invariably, with time and patience, the regrowth of hair begins and continues until the entire spot returns to normal. The topical application of medicines usually is not effective. For a while, cortisone was tried in these cases, in an effort to produce a more rapid regrowth of hair. Its value is questionable. In fact, the absorption of the cortisone from the scalp area may even be dangerous.

A patient of mine who had recurring episodes of "alopecia areata" once told me that he was most successful in stimulating hair growth by applying diluted iodine around the edges of the bald surface. It's worth a try. Be sure that it is diluted because concentrated iodine can burn the tender skin surface.

A special drug, triamcinolone, is sometimes injected into the bald area to help in the regrowth of hair.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH... Care must be taken when young children have their temperatures taken rectally. A sudden shift of the child can break the thermometer.

1780 Ban Will Take Effect

LONDON (AP) — Because New Year's Eve falls on a Sunday this year, Britons will have to do their holiday dancing in private.

The Sunday Observance Act of 1780 prohibits dancing after midnight Saturday nights in premises where admission is charged.

When you graduated from high school, did you know what your career would be?

Vote for Pitt Community College and increase the opportunities for our citizens.

Most students graduating from high school are faced with a big choice. Four years at a university. Or, two years learning a trade. That's why we need to add college parallel courses to Pitt Tech's technical and vocational offerings. To fill the educational gaps in Pitt County. And, to give our young people an opportunity to look at vocational, technical and general college while making a choice.

College parallel courses can strengthen our technical and vocational programs. Over half the students who enter college parallel programs end up graduating from vocational and technical programs. So, adding a college parallel program can attract students that need additional time and training before making a choice. When you're young, it's hard to decide what you want to do for the rest of your life. We want to offer the opportunity for learning a trade or continuing on to college.

Give Pitt County students the opportunity for a choice.

Support Pitt Community College. The college option can attract students to make our technical and vocational training even stronger. Existing classrooms can be used more fully. And the revenue from the state will more than offset the cost to Pitt County. So, give Pitt County students a choice for the future. Add a great new program to our Technical Institute.

Look at the opportunity. Vote for Pitt Community College.

'Rainbow' Has Its Moments That Bowl Over A TV Viewer

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ever see a show where certain performances bowl you over even though not all the movie does? You may get that feeling with "Rainbow," a two-hour film NBC is airing tonight. It's a dramatization, with music, of the early life and career of the late Judy Garland. Even if you're not registered with the Garland cult, two major talents in the film make it most-viewing.

One is Andrea McArdle as Miss Garland from age 10 through 17. The other is Michael Parks, cast as her musical tutor and closest adult friend in her days as a young apprentice star at MGM.

About the film: Don't expect it to be a flashy, lurid tale of twisted childhood, evil parents, strong drugs or, in short, a catalogue of youthful grief that spawned the agony of her adult years.

If anything, John McGreevey's adaptation of "Rainbow," a Garland book by Christopher Finch, is almost too low-key and subdued. It emphasizes her talent, not her miseries, rumored or actual.

It's a good idea. But dramatic impact seems a bit lacking in this tale of a show-biz legend who started as a tot singing "Jingle Bells" and hit stardom at 17 as Dorothy in "The Wizard of Oz."

With Piper Laurie and Don Murray as her parents, Ethel and Frank Gumm, you see her in vaudeville as the youngest of the three singing Gumm sisters. Mom both books the act and playing piano in it.

Interestingly, the mother isn't done as the classic, pushy stage parent. She's always thinking of their career, but both she and Pop appear as basically decent folks who care for their kids.

There are excursions into parental discord, a discreet depiction of extra-marital affairs and the temporary breakup of the family as Mrs. Gumm takes her youngest daughter to Hollywood.

Also re-told: How George Jessell got the Gumm to change their name, Judy's childhood friendships with Mickey Rooney and Jackie Cooper (the latter directed this film) and how MGM chief Louis B. Mayer happened to put her under contract and on the yellow brick road to fame.

Familiar stuff, this, also her growing moments of a studio child, as what Mayer calls "a valuable property" whose career put her under pressure no child should face.

Alas, despite Cooper's sensitive direction, the film mostly seems to shadow-box, to hint at the girl's problems rather than hit them head-on.

But no way can one fault the gentle, yet powerful scenes of Miss McArdle and Parks together, as student and teacher, scared child and compassionate adult, in an unreal soundstage world.

If they gave Emmys for every great moment in a TV film, these two each would need a pickup truck to tote their statues home.

And Miss McArdle's singing, backed by first-rate arrangements, is as consistently brilliant as was that of the lady she's playing. Yes, of course, she closes the show with "Over the Rainbow."

But she doesn't mimic Judy Garland. She honors her memory.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Until midafternoon there are some annoying aspects in effect and you would be wise to observe closely what is happening about without getting involved. Later conditions break in your favor.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Your associates are not in a favorable mood now because they have their own affairs to take care of. Think constructively.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You can gain advancement now by precisely following the orders of higher-ups. Make sure you handle a credit matter wisely.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You are overly anxious to engage in a new interest but take care of present duties first. Handle your money wisely.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You seem to be bogged down with work, so take a little time out to relax and you can then do your duties efficiently.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A civic affair could be annoying but you are capable of handling it well. Take no risks with your reputation at this time.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get busy on that work you have promised to do, even if it seems difficult, and it will soon be behind you. Take needed health treatment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Handle routine duties early in the day and then plan for the recreation you need. Avoid one who is jealous of you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Do not jeopardize your good name by some hasty and unwise action today. Make sure to keep your side of an agreement.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be sure you deal only with congenials during day since conditions are tense. Don't lose your temper with anyone.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Take care of personal problems in the morning and don't involve others. Come to a better understanding with loved one.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You may want to renege on some promises you have made, but carry through and you will gain benefits.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) An unhappy condition early in the day clears itself up by evening. Try to serve those who are less fortunate than yourself.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be able to solve problems that will have others stymied, so direct education along trouble-solving professions for best results. Give religious and ethical training so that your progeny will get along better with others.

PUBLIC NOTICE

APPLICATION FOR 401 CERTIFICATION

North Carolina
Pitt and Craven Counties
TAKE NOTICE that the Pitt County Drainage District No. 3, P. O. Box 5834, Greenville, North Carolina 27834, has made application to the North Carolina Division of Environmental Management for certification that the discharge of excavated material into wetland areas of the Swift Creek watershed will not violate applicable water quality standards.

01 PUBLIC NOTICES

The Pitt County Drainage District proposes to perform maintenance excavation of drainage canals and creek channels in the Swift Creek watershed near the town of Ayden. The project will result in the excavation of approximately 150 miles of laterals and approximately 35 miles on the main channels of Swift Creek, Fork Swamp, Indian Wells Swamp and Clayroot Swamps. The proposed work on the lateral channels will be primarily through cropland or open land. Lateral channel bottom widths are to be a maximum of 22 feet. A total of approximately 1,165,500 cubic yards of material is to be excavated by dragline from the lateral channels, with the excavated material spread sloping away from the channel. One to two feet of material is to be excavated from the main channels to provide needed depth to assist outfalls for lateral drains. Approximately 250,000 cubic yards of material will be removed and placed along the channel banks. All mains and laterals included in the proposed work have been previously modified to some extent. When completed, the drainage system will have the capacity to remove runoff from storms up to the one-half year, 24 hours frequency. Forty two sediment traps are to be excavated in the main channel system to a depth of two feet, 200 feet long and approximately two times the width of the channel. Fifteen of the traps will be permanent and 27 will be temporary. Their combined volume of storage is approximately 300,000 cubic feet. The traps will be periodically reestablished with the captured sediment removed from the channels and placed along channel banks.

The purpose of the work is to provide drainage and flood protection for approximately 21,253 acres of cropland and pasture.

Additional information concerning this project may be reviewed at the Office of Environmental Operations Section, Division of Environmental Management, 512

'Vantage. I just won't compromise on taste.'

"I'm willing to make some concessions, but taste isn't one of them. Even though I've heard the tar stories, I still want a cigarette with good taste."

"That's why I'm glad I switched to Vantage."

"With Vantage, I get the taste I smoked for in the first place. And that wasn't easy to find in a low tar."

"For me, Vantage is the best tasting low tar cigarette there is."
