Middle East Peace Still Balked By Controversy

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Middle East peace talks remained deadlocked over the Palestinian issue today despite a concerted U.S. effort to keep a partially completed treaty between Egypt and Israel from unraveling.

Palestinians Sunday failed to bring a quick end to the impasse.

And there were indications other provisions of the historic agreement that had seemed nailed down were becoming embroiled in the controversy that was focused principally on whether the treaty should be tied to future negotiations over the Palestinians.

This raised the possibility that the agreement could unravel further if compromises were not struck soon on the Palestinians and on details of Israel's transfer of Sinai oil fields to Egyptian control.

But Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, after a late Sunday session with Begin at Kennedy Airport in New York, refused to abandon hope of completing the accord, which only a week ago appeared within grasp.

"I believe that peace can be achieved between the parties," he said. "I believe that they both sincerely want peace, that people of both their nations want peace.

"That being the case," Vance said, "I believe that peace can be achieved."

A tired Begin, standing at Vance's side in an airport lounge crammed with reporters and television cameras, spoke almost inaudibly. He said that "problems" remained but that Israel still hopes for a settlement.

On the Palestinian issue, Begin reiterated Israel's commitment to negotiate with Egypt on the disposition of the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza district — but apart from the current treaty negotiations.

"There was never any doubt," he said, that Israel will follow through on its commitment. Israel has promised full autonomy to the 1.1 million Palestinians living in the territories.

But he refused, in responding to reporters' questions, to accept any "linkage" between the treaty and the second round of negotiations or to agree that the commitment should appear in the treaty itself.

"It has not yet been decided," Begin said.

Vance told reporters the talks would continue in Washington. But U.S. officials said no talks involving Vance were scheduled today.

Sadat, through his negotiators, introduced demands last Thursday that the treaty package contain specific commitments — including a timetable — from Israel for setting up a Palestinian authority to govern the West Bank and Gaza.

After long sessions with Israeli negotiators over the weekend — the one Saturday night lasted past midnight — Vance presented a compromise proposal to Begin. While the details were not disclosed, it was known to be language intended for the treaty's preamble.

Upgrading Of CD OK'd By Carter

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, worried about the Soviet Union's growing civil defense capability, has approved plans to vastly upgrade U.S. efforts, aiming to save as many as 140 million Americans in the event of nuclear war.

American civil defense officials estimate that only 90 million of the country's 220 million citizens would now survive a nuclear attack.

The new plan would hope to save between one-half and two-thirds of all Americans through massive evacuation of metropolitan areas if nuclear war was threatened.

"The Soviet Union has had this capability for some time. We are without plans and therefore could suffer catastrophic damage," said Bardyl Tirana, U.S. Civil Defense director and one of the major proponents of the new program.

Officials estimated the cost of the improved program — which must win congressional approval — at $2 billion over five years. The United States now spends about $90 million annually on civil defense.

Carter gave his approval to the proposal, contained in a secret White House document, on Sept. 29. Tirana confirmed late reports showed that the Soviets had begun their own evacuation.

Defense Department officials argued that in a crisis situation, the Soviet Union might be dissuaded from attacking the United States by the knowledge that a majority of Americans could survive a first strike.

They said if the Russians began to evacuate their cities now, the United States would be put at a severe disadvantage because of its virtually nonexistent evacuation plans.

Separation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's son Chip and his wife Caron have separated after five years of marriage, the first lady's office announced today.

Mary Hoyt, press secretary to Rosalynn Carter, issued a statement saying Caron and the couple's young son, James Earl IV, will move back to Georgia.

Chip will remain at the White House and continue to work for the Democratic National Committee.

There was no word as to whether a divorce is planned.

The announcement of the separation came amid rumors that the marriage was in trouble. In August 1977, Chip moved back to Plains, Ga., alone to work at the family peanut warehouse. Caron joined him later, and they both returned to live at the White House earlier this year.

Launch Border Attack

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — Tanzania says its army launched a major attack this weekend to drive out President Idi Amin's invaders, but Uganda claims the Tanzanian troops failed in their initial attempt to cross the rain-swollen Kagera River.

The Tanzanian statement gave no details of the offensive aimed at destroying the enemy forces" but said fighting was continuing.

Uganda's Radio Kampala said the attackers attempted to cross the twisting 50-yard-wide river under cover of a massive artillery barrage but were swept away "to be eaten by the fish."

Neither side issued casualty reports, and there was no independent confirmation of the fighting.

Between 2,000 and 3,000 Ugandan troops armed with Soviet weapons rolled south across the Tanzanian border to the Kagera River two weeks ago and took up positions along the natural barrier, which Amin has declared as the new border. The Ugandans, backed by tanks and artillery, blew up the Taka Bridge across the river.

The Ugandans annexed about 700 square miles of marshy land on the west coast of Lake Victoria. Amin said this was in reprisal for a Tanzanian attack on Uganda last month.

Iran Oilfield Production Inches Up Despite Strike

By PHILIP DOPOULOS
Associated Press Writer
TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Production at Iran's strikebound oil fields inched upward today as a handful of workers joined foreign experts and military technicians in working the wells of the world's second largest oil exporting nation.

The official Iranian news agency said most of Iran's 37,000 oil workers defied a military government order to end their two-week-old strike, but the few who did return helped boost production to 2.7 million barrels a day.

Oil workers struck Oct. 31 for higher pay and in support of a swelling wave of opposition to Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi's regime by conservative Moslem religious leaders demanding reversal of the ruler's westernization program and leftist demanding democratic reforms to replace his authoritarian rule.

The Pars news agency said 20 persons were killed in weekend demonstrations against the shah's government.

The state oil company said 600,000 barrels would go for domestic consumption and the other 2.1 million would be pumped into tankers already waiting at the Persian Gulf terminal in southern Iran.

While the oil strike continued, workers in Tehran failed to heed a call for a one-day general strike to demonstrate opposition to the shah. The government apparently discouraged would-be strikers by putting large numbers of troops on the streets.

However, in one instance police had to escort 200 American communications technicians away from a crowd of angry Iranians at the telecommunications center in Tehran. The Americans work for Bell Laboratories, which has a $16 billion contract to upgrade Iran's communications systems. There was no immediate word of what prompted the confrontation.

Despite threats of dismissal and arrest, only a handful of oil workers complied with an order from the National Iranian Oil Co., the government monopoly, to return to work by 7 a.m. Sunday.

Iranian oil officials believed more strikers would go back to work in a day or two. But some foreign personnel were doubtful.

The shah authorized a 22.5 percent pay increase last week, but the workers demanded release of all political prisoners, an end to martial law and the expulsion of foreigners from the oil industry.

About 2,000 foreign employees and 400 Iranian army and naval technicians were at work in the industry, preventing a total shutdown.

Los Angeles Skid Row Counts Two More Slain

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The bodies of two stabbing victims were found early today in the city's Skid Row district, in what authorities said were the seventh and eighth such slayings in the area in less than a month.

Homicide Capt. Walter Stephenson said the seventh victim, whose body was found shortly after midnight, had been stabbed several times in the upper torso, in a manner similar to six previous stabbings, all of which have occurred since Oct. 23.

The body was found in a parking lot on East Fifth Street, across the street from Central Division Police Headquarters, in the downtown area inhabited largely by transients, many of whom sleep in doorways and use newspapers for blankets.

The eighth man was found in an alley two blocks away a few hours later. Authorities declined to describe his stab wounds.

Neither man was immediately identified.

At the scene of the eighth killing, a ragged band of transients clustered near the end of the alley as the dead man was loaded into a coroner's wagon.

"What is it, another killing down here?" asked one old man wearing a tattered coat.

"We can't discount that all the stabbings might be related," Lt. John Dempsey, head of Central Division's detective bureau, said earlier.

A Skid Row task force of police investigators immediately began searching the area for witnesses or clues about the killer.

The current spate of killings is the second grisly series of Skid Row deaths in four years. Vaughn Orrin Greenwood is serving a life prison term for the 1974-75 Skid Row slasher murders of several transients.

Dempsey said the recent killings differ from the "slasher" murders, in which the victim's throats were cut ear-to-ear and the wounds went through to the spinal cord.

Claim John The Baptist Dug Up

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Archeologists and monks have unearthed a coffin which they claim contains the remains of John the Baptist, the newspaper Al Ahram reported.

The report said the coffin was discovered in a cave in the grounds of the Bishop Maqar Monastery at Wadi Natroun, 60 miles northeast of Cairo. Al Ahram said the remains were moved in the 5th century from Palestine to Alexandria and were moved to the monastery in the 11th century.

Cocaine Haul

A 30-year-old Wrightsville Beach man found Friday that a church parking lot is no place to have cocaine, after officers arrested him on charges of possession and sale of cocaine.

Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon said Larry Bruce Moss was arrested about 1:05 p.m. by Greenville officers, with the assistance of agents of the State Bureau of Investigation and Drug Enforcement Administration agents.

The arrest took place in the parking lot of Holy Trinity United Methodist Church at 1400 Red Banks Road, according to Cannon, who noted that a pound of cocaine valued at $70,000, was confiscated, along with Moss' 1972 model car.

Moss was placed under $100,000 bond pending a hearing of the case in court.

The Friday arrest was the second major drug arrest in as many days.

Three pounds of cocaine and 12 pounds of marijuana were seized at a Dickinson Avenue home Thursday and one man was charged in connection with that incident.

FTC Says Used Car Dealers Sell A Lot Of Lemons

JOKE BACKFIRED — A phoney wedding, held as a joke by Art Holback, of Keene, N.Y., backfired when fellow construction workers who had shelled out for a bachelor party and an $85 rollbar for Holback's jeep had a crane lift the vehicle atop a dead elm tree in front of the Elm Tree Inn in Keene. Holback's friends had shown up at the inn to find the bartender, Pete, dressed in a wedding gown. The inkeeper's great dane, Duke, is seen reclining under the tree. (AP Laserphoto)

Army Apology For 'Buzzing'

SUMMERTOWN, Tenn. (AP) — The Army could have dodged any flak it took about its helicopters dropping low over a Tennessee commune with an apology, a spokesman for The Farm says.

The Army did apologize, but too late.

Residents of the 1,100-member commune near Summertown say about six Cobra gunships swooped down on them three weeks ago. They said the roar of the helicopters shook houses and frightened residents.

"The Army maintains the gunships — on their way to Eglin Air Force Base in Florida for combat training — were merely trying to dodge low-level clouds and bad weather."

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Used car salesmen sell so many "lemons" that the government should require them to tell buyers about defects, a Federal Trade Commission staff report said today.

The 564-page report, summarizing five years of investigation and hearings, said the sale of unsound cars is "a major consumer abuse ... affecting the basic safety or utility of the most expensive item many consumers will ever buy."

Typically, used cars are sold with an oral promise to make any necessary repairs after the sale, but with a written disclaimer that the sales are "as is," the FTC staff said.

Later a salesman often refuses to make repairs and the customer suffers "insurmountable difficulties in proving the oral promises," the report said.

The staff proposed that used car dealers be required to inspect the cars they sell and to disclose what they find in forms posted on vehicle windows. A car's brakes, steering, engine and transmission would be described in writing as "OK" or "Not OK."

For those items marked "Not OK," a written estimate of repair costs would be required.

The rule would not mean the defects would have to be repaired, only that they be disclosed in writing. One goal of the proposed regulation would be easing the task of consumers trying to prove they had been lied to.

The staff also proposed that dealers be required to state whether a car's odometer had been set back.

The proposed regulation, which requires the approval of the five-member commission before it could take effect, would not apply to sales by private individuals.

Industry associations opposed the proposal, as they did at earlier staff hearings into used car sales.

Robert P. Mallon, president of the National Automotive Dealers Association, said used car prices would jump an average $200 under the regulation.

He said the inspection requirement "will drive costs up for dealers, which will be passed along to buyers."

He also charged the FTC will exceed its authority if it approves the proposal. This subject may be the basis for a future challenge in court by the NADA, which represents 21,000 new-car dealers, most of which also sell used cars.

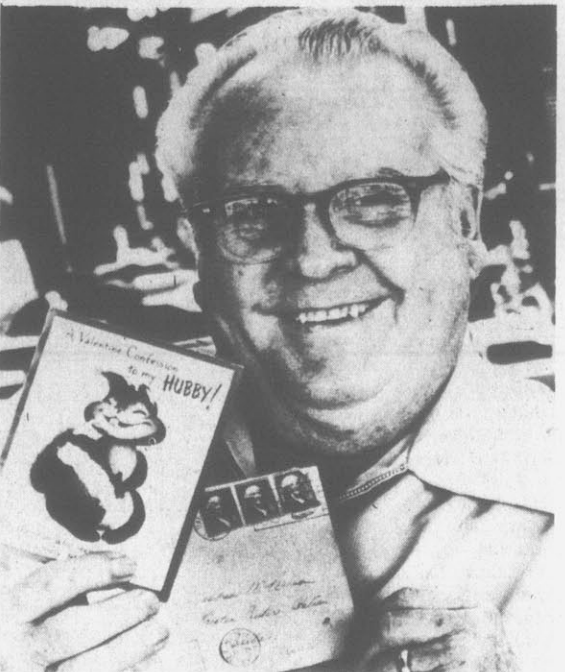

In Raleigh, N. C., Dan Ray, executive director of the National Independent Automobile Dealers Association, commented: "What we have before us in the form of a complicated and extensive disclosure sticker for used vehicles is a costly and punitive restriction that the overwhelming, vast majority of Americans have not called for and would not support if they were aware of it."

"Our contact with the public, explaining this added inflationary burden to their future purchases, has resulted in thousands upon thousands of protests in the form of petitions that we intend to share with the president, the members of Congress, and the Federal Trade Commission."

Issuing a formal statement for the association, which claims some 8,000 used car dealers as members, Ray quoted the organization president, Marvin Ivy of San Antonio, Tex., as saying, "We feel this to be a serious and unnecessary intrusion into America's economy at the worst imaginable time in view of the public sector being called up to help with our worsening inflation."

"The consumer should not be burdened with another significant add-on cost without substantial demonstrable need. If we ever needed a productive economy, it is now. Additionally, there is no logic to business people from our crippling and even possibly economic process at the very eliminating many small time we need them most."

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER — Woodrow W. Wilson of Dallas, Texas, holds a valentine his wife mailed 22 years ago which was just delivered last week. The postage on the envelope was three cents, five times less than it is today. Wilson said the post office found the envelope behind a piece of equipment and forwarded it to him. (AP Laserphoto)

'Up In Arms' On VEPCO Rates

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Virginia Electric & Power Co.'s rates in its North Carolina service area, which includes 22 northeastern counties, have residents and industry up in arms.

"The mood of the people in the 22-county area is one of deep concern and anger," said state Sen. Melvin R. Daniels Jr., D-Elizabeth City. "Some of the things people are talking about are very alarming."

Veeco's rates are 23 percent higher than those of Carolina Power & Light Co. and 36 percent higher than Duke Power Co., according to the Public Staff of the state Utilities Commission.

The North Carolina commission awarded Veeco a 17.8 percent rate increase on Sept. 1.

On Sept. 30, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission allowed Veeco to increase its wholesale rates by 20 percent for the power it sells to municipal systems and rural cooperatives. Veeco's wholesale rates are higher than those of the other companies.

Five chambers of commerce in Veeco's North Carolina service area are circulating a petition protesting the rates and hope to get more than their goal of 25,000 signatures. The petition will be given to Gov. Jim Hunt, the utilities commission and the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

Meanwhile, the Public Staff is investigating the reasons for Veeco's higher rates. It should complete its report in a month to six weeks, according to Hugh A. Wells, the staff's executive director.

Veeco customers are planning to ask the federal regulatory agency for a similar investigation, Daniels said. And there is some talk among the people near the edge of Veeco's service of switching to CP&L.

"Many of us, as legislators, are frustrated because we don't know why (the disparity in rates exists)," Daniels said. "Peoples are pushing for legislative change, perhaps along the lines of allowing no more than an annual rate review or the concept of equal rates statewide."

Sunday Schools Re-Awakened

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Attendance at Sunday schools is making a comeback in North Carolina, according to church officials.

Since the mid-1960s, attendance has been falling off. But Robert C. Stewart, director of the Baptist State Convention's Sunday school department, said, "The trend seems to be bottoming out."

"I do believe there is a reawakening, a renewed interest in Sunday school. It will probably be another year or two before the statistics reflect this, but there are some trends developing," Stewart said.

Knit a season-spanning shawl in the fascinating "Tile Stitch" made simply with knit stitches and yarnover... no purling needed. Twelve ounces of sports weight yarn will allow you to make this glamorous shawl a full 80 inches long.

To obtain directions for knitting the Tile Pattern Shawl, send your request for Leaflet No. PK-875 with 60 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, The Daily Reflector, P. O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, SC 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. K-875, containing two colors of Red Heart Sports Yarn and the instruction leaflet by sending your check or money order for $8.00 to Pat Trexler at the same address. Price includes shipping charges. Please indicate your choice of the following color combinations: Cocoa Brown with Eggshell, Dark Blue with White or Dark Green with White.

DEAR PAT: I recently ordered one of your leaflets and found in it an abbreviation that really has me stumped. I asked several other knitters and none could help me. What in the world does "wyif, sl 1" mean? — PUZZLED, MADISON, WIS.

DEAR PUZZLED: Most of my leaflets are written without abbreviations and those which do use the abbreviations usually have an explanation of each one. In Leaflet 7554, which you ordered, this explanation of abbreviations was somehow omitted.

The abbreviation which you mention means that you are to bring the yarn to the front of your work before slipping a stitch. The literal translation is, "with yarn in front, slip, one stitch."

WITH 12 OUNCES... of yarn and a little time, you can make this 80-inch shawl.

Whenever slip stitches are a part of a pattern stitch, you are usually advised to have the yarn in front or in back of your work while slipping the stitch. ("wyif" means that the yarn is held in back.)

If, in any pattern, you are told to slip a stitch with no instructions as to whether the yarn is held in back or in front, then keep the yarn in the position it was in for the last stitch worked before the slipped stitch. In other words, if you knit the last stitch, the yarn will remain in back; if you purl the last stitch, the yarn will remain in front.

Some times you will be told to slip a stitch purlwise or as if to purl. This simply means that you insert the needle into the next stitch on the left needle as if you were going to purl the stitch. You do not purl it, however, but simply pass it from the left to the right needle.

On the other hand, if you are told to slip the stitch knitwise, you will insert the tip of the right needle into the next stitch on the left needle and pass it from one needle to the other. As a general rule, if you are not advised how to slip a stitch, you should slip it purlwise.

One exception to this rule comes in making the decrease in which you slip one stitch, knit one stitch, then pass the slipped stitch off the needle over the knitted stitch. When doing this, the effect is better if you slip the stitch knitwise.

The abbreviation for the above decrease, by the way, usually reads, "sl 1, k 1, pss0" — an abbreviation which often confuses the inexperienced knitter.

If you are attempting a pattern stitch with a large number of abbreviations you can make life easier for yourself by writing out each row of the pattern stitch on a small file card, spelling out all abbreviations.

Paper clip these file cards together, in numerical order. Then, when you finish row one, move that card to the back of the stack. The card for row two will then be on top. This will also enable you to easily keep track of the rows.

Use a marking pen in a dark color, make the letters big and bold and you will find it a snap to work almost any pattern stitch.

Happy Knitting! Because of the large volume of mail she receives, Pat is unable to answer your letters personally. However, she welcomes all questions and hints, and will use those of general interest in the column whenever possible.

Children Not Included On Invitation

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I recently received an invitation to the wedding of my cousin, who lives 500 miles from us.

There was no indication on the invitation that our children were not included. (Usually, when they don't want children they put "NO CHILDREN" on the invitation.)

Well, I went out and spent a small fortune outfitting my kids for the wedding—and then found out they weren't wanted!

Perhaps I should mention that they are not babies, and are pretty well-behaved.

Don't you think the invitation should have indicated "No children"?

HURT IN VA.

DEAR HURT: Not necessarily. The invitation was addressed to you and your husband. Had they wanted your children, their names would have appeared on the invitation along with yours.

DEAR ABBY: My name is Sandy (short for San Diego) and I became acquainted with your column while being paper-trained.

I can't read or write because I'm only 3, and besides, I'm a mongrel dog. Someone bought me from the Humane Society for $12.72. (That's the donation, plus the state sales tax.)

When you said, "I don't care WHERE I'm entertained, as long as a dog doesn't come and sit on my lap," I was shocked!

I love people and want to help my family entertain guests, so I jump into their laps, look into their eyes and wag my tail. Almost everyone likes me.

My friend, Rover, said we should run you out of the Canine Corps, but I stuck up for you and said you are a nice lady who does much good for many people.

Can't you find a spot in your heart for me, too? I love you.

HURT IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR HURT: I love you, too. And please be assured that I do have a spot in my heart for you. But not on my lap. Especially when I'm all dressed up in a beige lace dress and your paws are all sticky from a freshly tarred driveway.

DEAR READERS: I mourn with millions the loss of the late and beloved Pope John Paul I. His humility was inspirational, as is evidenced by these words he wrote seven years ago:

"Some bishops resemble eagles who glide majestically at high levels. Others are nightingales who sing the praises of the Lord in a marvelous way. Others are poor wrens on the lowest bough of the ecclesiastical tree who only chirp, seeking to offer some small thought regarding the great themes. I belong to the final category."

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. Please enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Club Members Have Musical Program Friday

The Arts Department of the Greenville Woman's Club met Friday afternoon. A musical program was presented by the Geneva Pollard Vocal Music Scholarship recipient Susan Owens.

She presented several selections in French and German and was accompanied by Ben Leaptrout.

Mrs. Roseveare shared thoughts on art from the "Member News" of the N. C. Art Society. Mrs. George Clapp reported on the October benefit bridge. It was announced Mrs. Sylvester Green's oil painting has been framed and placed in the club.

Mrs. Roseveare expressed appreciation to the Woman's Club for sending $200 to the N. C. Museum of Art Campaign Fund honoring the Roseveares for services rendered to the club. Mrs. Harry Hastings made the presentation at the International Affairs dinner meeting.

Ed Walker Gives Program

The Patient Circle of The Kings Daughters and Sons held its meeting Wednesday afternoon in the Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church's ladies parlor.

Ed Walker told of his work with the Greenville Area meeting.

The NCFWC Arts Festival contest rules have been distributed to the schools and club women were told of the contests open to them.

Mrs. Clapp, Mrs. George Fleming and Mrs. J. Paul Davenport Jr. were hostesses.

The Arts Department will meet at the home of Mrs. Ernest Holt Dec. 8 at 3 p.m.

Chamber of Commerce. He was introduced by Mrs. Clara Moye Shackell.

Cancelled postage stamps and Campbell soup labels were collected and members were urged to continue to save these items in addition to used eyeglasses and old jewelry. Plans for Christmas cheer were made.

The Dec. 13 meeting will be a covered-dish luncheon at the home of Mrs. Delphia Corbett. Miss Mary Wells, president, conducted the meeting.

Mrs. Cora Powell and Miss Wells served refreshments.

Top Individual Cheesecakes With Tart Red Cherry Topping

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Individual cherry-topped cheesecakes have been with us for a while because cheesecake is favorite party fare and the cupcake size is convenient to serve.

But trust my friend Rose to add her own touch to the usual recipe. She makes her cherry cheesecake cups with four different flavors. First come chocolate-cookie crumbs, next the cheesecake, then a sour-cream mixture and finally a tart, red cherry topping. When their baking cups are removed, Rose's cheesecakes show their pretty layers.

ROSE'S CHERRY CHEESECAKE CUPS
Sour Cream Topping, see below

10 fudge-chip cookies (from a 5½-ounce bag) crushed until powdered and packed down (¾ cup)

1 large egg

8-ounce tub whipped cream cheese

1-3rd cup sugar

2 teaspoons lemon juice

½ teaspoon vanilla

Cherry Topping, see below

Make the Sour Cream Topping and the Cherry Topping.

Use a 12-cup muffin pan — each cup 2½ inches across the top and 1 inch deep. In each muffin-pan cup put a fluted baking cup (paper or foil), each 1½ inches deep. Pat 1 tablespoon of the cookie crumbs over the bottom of each baking cup.

In the small bowl of an electric mixer at medium speed, thoroughly beat together the egg, cream cheese, sugar, lemon juice and vanilla — about 4 minutes. Spoon 2 tablespoons of the mixture into each baking cup. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until slightly puffed and firm on top and a cake tester inserted in the center comes out almost clean — about 10 minutes. Remove from oven, but leave oven on at 375 degrees. Spread 2 tablespoons of the chilled Sour Cream Topping over each hot cheesecake cup. Bake until the topping is set — 4 to 5 minutes. Let stand until cold. Remove from pans, but not from baking cups.

Make the Cherry Topping. At once spoon a generous amount of it over each cheesecake cup. (Refrigerate the remainder of the Cherry Topping to heat and

Welcome To Tobacco Festival

The first Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival, held in conjunction with the Tobacco Farmer Show, is underway here this week.

The week is highlighted by distribution of $2 bills by local banks, a golf tournament today, various contests during the week and entertainment.

On Wednesday there will be an agriculture commissioners banquet for the five-state tobacco producing area. The Tobacco Farmer Show will be underway Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at Farmers Warehouse on N. Greene Street.

It is a festive occasion for our area and it is particularly appropriate in our county which is heavily involved in the production of tobacco.

Tobacco means much to the local economy, and it is also meaningful to the entire state's economy since 67 percent of all flue-cured tobacco is grown in North Carolina.

There will be thousands of visitors to Greenville and Pitt County this week as we place emphasis on a farm crop which is important to all of us.

We extend a hearty Pitt County welcome to all of them.

Norman Rockwell's Work Will Endure

Artist Norman Rockwell, who gained fame with his "Saturday Evening Post" covers, died at his home in Massachusetts last week.

Rockwell's work depicted Americans at work and at home through hard times and wars. Perhaps his most famous were the paintings illustrating the Four Freedoms, inspired by a Franklin D. Roosevelt speech to Congress.

Rockwell's work was out of step with developments in the world of art during his time. His efforts have been described by some critics as "corny", and possibly a more kindly word would be "homespun".

More than any other artist of his time, however, his paintings captured the spirit of America and the works will no doubt endure as a meaningful chronicle of our times.

THIS AFTERNOON

Muddled By Guidelines

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — President Jimmy Carter's salary guidelines as a key part of his anti-inflation program will have a major impact on North Carolina's 1979 legislative session.

The seven percent ceiling means bad news for state employees and teachers, even though organizations of both appear to be pushing for only a six percent pay hike.

The big question is whether that ceiling applies only to the annual across-the-board salary increase approved by the General Assembly, or to all increases, including fringe benefits.

It is certain that North Carolina will abide by the President's wishes in this matter.

To do so will mean that the legislative pay raise will have to be considerably more complicated than in the past, with some flexibility built into it to take into account other salary increases normally awarded about two-thirds of all state employees.

More Raises
On average, a state employee will get a longevity pay increase and possibly a merit raise as well. Changes in pay scale classification will also push salaries up. The net result is an annual increase of four percent or better even without the General Assembly voting an across-the-board hike for all employees. Teachers also get raises for longevity in the same range.

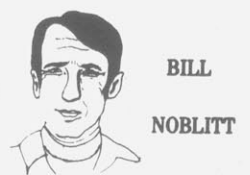

Then there are fringe benefits. This year, the push is on for a dental insurance plan to go with the free medical and hospitalization insurance coverage enjoyed by all state employees. The health plan, also, typically costs more each year.

So when the General Assembly approves a six-percent pay hike, the majority of state workers actually get from 10 to 12 percent.

To hold the line below President Carter's suggested ceiling will mean an across-the-board pay hike in the neighborhood of three or four percent, allowing those other built-in raises to carry the figure on upward.

But what about those employees who this particular year don't get a merit or longevity raise? Must a formula be worked out so they would get the full six or seven percent? If so, wouldn't that create an uproar from those whose merit pay raises are effectively negated by such a move, and could complain that their merit raises no longer mean anything because even those who didn't get a merit reward got just as much money?

BILL NOBLITT

Further complicating matters is the question of fringe benefits. Obviously a dental program would be a big ticket item. The push is on for increased payment for travel expenses and motel and restaurant costs when attending meetings and seminars.

Pay Plan
Also, teachers are pressing a major change in the basic pay plan itself which — in addition to across-the-board and longevity hikes — would move all of them higher on the formula for another effective increase.

All of this activity makes suspect the figures generally used for public consumption on what a pay raise for teachers and state employees costs the taxpayers.

You commonly hear the figure $18 million for each percentage point in across-the-board raises. Actually, when fringe benefits, Social Security, larger contributions to retirement plans and all the other costs are factored in, a one percent pay hike costs close to $21 million.

Thus a six percent hike would not cost the $100 million total commonly used by politicians, but $126 million. Then the other raises add $84 million for a grand total of $210 million.

If legislators, falling back on President Carter's call for restraint can trim the across-the-board raise, the savings, likewise, will mount just as rapidly.

Cheap Fares Are People

WASHINGTON — The airlines are trying to make it up to people who have to pay more for flying in coach than those who fly on special rates.

A barrage of newspaper, magazine and TV commercials are now informing us that the airlines really "revere" their "full-fare" passengers, and are making sure they get treated better than those on discount fares.

For one thing, the people who pay full coach fare will be seated in the middle of the plane just behind those in first class. The discount passengers will be placed in the rear of the craft where no one can see them.

Coach passengers will have their own check-in lines and presumably first crack at the plane's free magazines.

The reason for the sudden decision to advertise the advantages of full fare, as opposed to discount, is that the airlines have had a backlash from businessmen who travel all the time and feel they're being taken for a ride. No one likes to sit next to a person who has paid 30 to 40 percent less to go to the same place and arrive at the same time.

I believe the airlines will have to do more than just seat the discount people in the back of the plane to placate the people who pay full fare. Stronger measures must be taken.

I foresee in the not too distant future that, after the coach passenger has been seated in the middle of the plane, the discount passengers will be loaded on board in leg irons. They will be driven to the back of the aircraft by a giant black-bearded man who is stripped to the waist and cracking a long whip.

ART BUCHWALD

Once in the back, they will be shoved down on wooden slats and chained to the bulkhead. The man with the beard will be their steward. He will walk up and down the aisle shouting, "All right, you scurvy. There will be absolute silence in this section of the plane. Anyone who opens his mouth will get a taste of the whip on his worthless tourist back."

"Now this is the drill. Because we are flying over water part of the time, pay attention to these safety precautions. In case of the unlikely event of an emergency, a saw will be lowered from above you so that you can file off your leg irons and the chains on your wrists. There are emergency exits in the front of the plane. They may not be used until you pay a surcharge of $40."

"Once we are in the air we will be serving a delicious meal to passengers up front, consisting of vichyssoise, roast duckling with orange sauce, wild rice with raisins, and a Chateau Mouton Rothschild, 1969. As for you riffraff back here, we will pass around this wooden bucket of watery gruel, which the trusty will put in your slop bowls."

"Each passenger will be offered a choice of coffee, tea or milk. If he doesn't guess the right one, he will be hung by his thumbs from

Mixed Views Found

By EVANS WITT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The traditional wisdom about American voters is that they are older, more conservative, more Republican and richer than the public generally.

It seems that this saying — like many others — has a grain of truth, but not much more than that.

Those millions of Americans who cast their votes Tuesday in the congressional elections are more conservative on some issues than the public at large, but not on others.

Gay rights, for example. The voters oppose fair housing and employment laws for homosexuals by a 47-40 margin. The Associated Press-NBC News election day poll found. But the public generally favors such laws by 51-40, an AP-NBC News telephone poll just before the election shows.

And take the Panama Canal treaties, which opponents said would be a major issue in the elections. Half of the voters disapprove of the treaties and only 37 percent approve. But the public at large splits 45-47 on the treaties, according to the telephone poll of 1,600 adults.

In Illinois, Democrat Alex Seith tried to make Republican Sen. Charles Percy's vote for the treaties an issue in the campaign. It didn't make a difference — 60 percent of those who approve of the treaties voted for Percy and so did 60 percent of those who oppose them. Percy won his battle for re-election.

The conservative inclination is also evident in the voters' view of what Congress should tackle first next year. Support for cuts in federal spending jumped from 16 percent to 24 percent among voters. And priority treatment for enactment of a national health insurance plan dropped from 13 percent to 4 percent among those casting their ballots.

Those who actually voted this year are a bit older and wealthier than the public generally.

IMPACT FROM VOTING

Feeling The Budget-Cuts

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Tax and spending restrictions approved in last week's elections will not put any more money in most people's pockets, but they will force state and local governments to start trimming budgets almost immediately.

"They're going to have a given pie and now they're going to have to develop priorities within that pie," said Don Pilcher of the National Conference of State Legislatures.

Winnie Austermann, another conference economist, agreed. "I have a feeling that probably the most significant trends you're going to see are legislatures grappling with efficiency measures," she said.

Proposals cutting taxes, changing the way they are collected or limiting spending passed Tuesday in 12 states: Alabama, Arizona, Hawaii, Idaho, Illinois, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, Nevada, North Dakota, South Dakota and Texas.

Idaho's measure was the strongest. The constitutional amendment approved by voters limits property taxes to 1 percent of market value.

It was virtually a copy of California's Proposition 13.

Estimates of the loss in revenue to cities, counties and school districts range from $50 million to $125 million, depending on who is doing the predicting. "It looks like Idaho is going to be hit very hard, very quickly," said Pilcher.

California used a $5-billion plus state surplus to help blunt the impact of Proposition 13. Idaho, where per-capita property tax collections already are about a third below the national average, can't do that.

"They're constitutionally prohibited from having a surplus so they don't have any extra money to bail out the local governments," Ms. Austermann explained.

No one is sure when cuts will come. The amendment itself talks about the tax year beginning Oct. 1. That wording was copied from California. But Idaho's tax year begins on Jan. 1 and the Legislature that meets next year will have to amend the measure to make it conform to Idaho practices. It could make the measure effective retroactively to Jan. 1, 1979, or delay it until Jan. 1, 1980.

Public officials already have been looking at budgets with an eye to cutting. Some legislators say they expect state contributions to school financing will have to increase to make up for lost local money, meaning a possible boost in state income or sales taxes.

Savings on individual property tax bills will vary from city to city. The Associated Taxpayers of Idaho estimated earlier this year that the average property tax rate was about 1.7 percent of market value. On a $35,000 home, cutting the rate from 1.7 percent to 1 percent would mean cutting the annual tax bill from $595 to $350.

THE VANTAGE POINT

The higher we go in an airplane, the smaller everything on earth appears. The railroad train, the automobile traffic moving along the highways, appear as nothing but mere moving dots. Cities are irregular spots in a vast pageant of field, stream and forest.

People of firm religious faith are always able to look at trouble, disappointment, and pain in somewhat the same way that we see the terrain below from an airplane. All these things are smaller, and not so important. Moreover, religious people can see interrelationships between the good times and the bad times which escape some people who are right next to them.

Rebellious people know, of course, that troubles are very real, and are not in fact distant miniatures seen from a plane below. But religion imparts a new way of viewing them. Jesus expressed it well when he said, "In the world yet shall have tribulations, but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world."

Leasing Farmland Grows

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Leasing land as an alternative to owning has become more common in the farm-belt, partly because of rising acreage prices and the increased amount of capital needed to operate large tracts.

Some of the lands that this year produced the biggest corn crop ever are owned by outsiders — investors from the city, from surrounding communities, and perhaps even from West Germany, France or elsewhere.

"It's about impossible for a young guy out of agricultural school to farm unless he was born fortuitously or marries fortuitously," says Lee Schuster, himself a farmer of 2,700 acres in Northwest

Missouri.

Schuster is also executive vice president of Oppenheimer Industries, Inc., which buys, sells and manages farms, and which through its various services provides a conduit for capital to nourish farming.

Farm investments return 3 percent to 5 percent a year, a yield hardly competitive with other mediums. But there's fairly steady appreciation of land values, and security — the land will always be there.

A question sometimes arises over whether the farmer, who leases from investors (as well as probably owning land himself), is therefore a mere tenant. Correlatively, is rural life somehow being undermined? Schuster dismisses the notions. "I think we're going to find it isn't an all or nothing situation, in which the farmer isn't completely tenant or owner," he comments.

More likely, he indicates, the leasing of land indicates a successful farmer's expansion. "As he increases his management skills he will use his own land ownership as a base." And then lease more.

The lessor — the individual, family or company that leases out its land for a fee — also benefits, according to Schuster. It helps to retain local ownership when families might otherwise be forced to sell.

Schuster cites the retired farmer with 160 acres which he desires his children to have. To divide would make little sense. To sell would be to cease ownership. But leasing it out keeps the land in the family.

Schuster Farm, near St. Joseph, Mo., illustrates the extent of the farmer-investor alliance. It is home to the Lee Schuster family, but they don't own all of it. They share ownership with others.

They lease land between the airport runways from the City of St. Joseph. They lease from "the extremely competent" resident manager of Schuster Farm. And from a Philadelphia animal pharmaceutical executive.

Other farmers might wease their land from foreigners, perhaps in deals arranged by Oppenheimer. While interest is growing among foreigners, Schuster believes they constitute a very small percent of the market.

A constitutional amendment approved in Alabama is designed not to lower tax bills, but to make sure they do not rise sharply. The proposal, which lowers assessment rates for almost all property, was designed to offset the impact of a court-ordered reappraisal. Gov. George C. Wallace said that without the amendment, the tax bill for the owner of a $32,000 home in Huntsville, Ala., would have risen from $142 to $245 a year because of the reappraisal. With the amendment, the bill will rise only $8.

Budget ceilings approved in Arizona, Hawaii, Michigan and Texas will mean new looks at old programs, but cuts depend on current levels of state spending.

In Arizona, for example, a newly approved constitutional amendment — Prop. 101 — prohibits the Legislature from appropriating tax revenues in excess of 7 percent of total personal income as determined by a three-member Economic Estimates Commission. Estimates of current spending range from 5 percent to 9 percent of personal income, but no one will know for sure until the commission issues its report.

Sherman Hazeltine, president emeritus of the First National Bank of Arizona and chairman of the Prop. 101 Committee, said the spending limit "should create a new professional atmosphere for all those involved in preparing government budgets...And for the first time, there will be some real discipline in setting priorities."

Like Prop. 101, the Agriculture Commissioners Of Five States To Be Hosted

The Agriculture Commissioners of the five southern flue-cured tobacco growing states will be honored at a Commissioners' Luncheon sponsored by the First Annual Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival Wednesday, 1 p.m., at the Greenville Country Club, according to Ed Warren, chairman of the luncheon.

The purpose of the luncheon is to honor the agriculture commissioners and the Young Farmers Clubs of the five southern flue-cured tobacco growing states, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida.

The five agriculture commissioners attending the luncheon are as follows: James A. Graham, North Carolina; S. Mason Carbaugh, Virginia; G. Bryan Patrick Jr., South Carolina; Thomas Irvin, Georgia; and Doyle Conner, Florida.

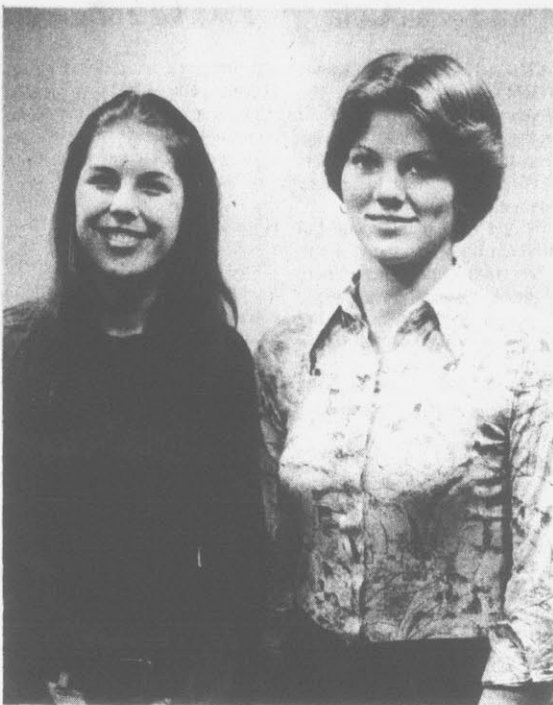

Speakers for the luncheon are as follows: Horace Kornegay, The Tobacco Institute; Billy Yeargin, Tobacco Growers' Information Committee; Fred Bond, Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corporation; and Hugh Kiger, of the Leaf Tobacco Exporters Association and Tobacco Association of the United States. Following the luncheon, a tobacco leaf contest will be judged. Each of the Agriculture Commissioners will present three of the top quality choice leaves of tobacco grown in their home states. The Commissioner with the winning leaves will receive a scholarship for the university of his choice in his state. The grower of the leaves will also receive an award.

The registration fee for the luncheon is $6 per person. Anyone who is interested in attending the luncheon may call the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival Office at 752-4101 for reservation information.

Say Abuses Still There

NEW YORK (AP) — The federal government has failed to correct abuses in its leasing of public and Indian lands in the West for coal production, says a report by the Council on Economic Priorities.

Although coal production on federal lands has tripled since 1973, coal was produced last year on only 67 of the 474 federal leases and "lease speculation is rampant," according to the report by the non-profit research organization.

"Only 14 percent of all federal leases and a minuscule .7 percent of state leases are now in production. Thus enormous coal expansion in the West could easily be supported without additional leasing," the report said.

About 31 percent of the land leased by the federal government is controlled by five companies, the report said, and the Peabody Coal Co. controls more than one-third of all leases on Indian lands.

"Oil companies in general play a dominant role in Western leasing," the report added. "The Exxon Corp. is the largest holder of state, federal and Indian leases in the West."

The non-profit research organization, whose 1974 report called the coal-leasing situation "pitiful," said in its current report that "attempts to correct the historical travesties of the Federal leasing program have been ineffectual." It said that state leasing programs also are "grossly maladministered."

The council said that the Department of the Interior is working on a new leasing program, but urged that the department "focus on a coal development program for the substantial acreage already under lease."

Two Rose High School seniors, members of the school's Distributive Education of America Club, were recent trophy winners in a district meeting.

Becky Tripp and Marsha Warren received achievement trophies at the District I Conference held at Currituck High School in Barco. Students from 13 schools competed in various Distributive Education fields.

Ms. Tripp placed first in the public speaking category for her speech, "My Responsibility in the Free Enterprise System." She is the daughter of Mrs. Cathy Adams and works during afternoons at Hollowell's Drug Store No. 1 on Dickinson Avenue. This is the third year Ms. Tripp has been active in Distributive Education.

Ms. Warren, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Jack Warren, works afternoons and Saturdays at Brody's in downtown Greenville, and is in her first year with the program. She placed third in the Job Interview Competition category.

In addition to these two, three other students from Rose and Cecil Heath, a teacher at Rose and advisor for Distributive Education students, attended the Currituck Conference.

Neighborhood Clean-Up Week

The Higgs Neighborhood Association Beautification Committee is sponsoring a clean-up week Nov. 12-18.

Residents are requested to participate by cutting grass, trimming shrubs, picking up trash and raking leaves, as well as anything that will improve the neighborhood's appearance.

The next project will be Christmas door decorations with a meeting to be held tonight, 7:30 p.m., at Agnes Fullilove School.

Found Heavy Drinking Among Air Controllers

By KEVIN MCKEAN
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Air traffic controllers who took part in a recent study were found to be twice as likely as other Americans to be "heavy drinkers" off the job, but there was no evidence their drinking affected air safety.

Dr. Robert Rose, former head of psychosomatic medicine at Boston University and now chief of psychiatry at the University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston, said there was no evidence the controllers drank on the job or that their after-hours social drinking harmed air safety.

He said if a man was not up to par, for whatever reason, he was shunted out of sensitive jobs.

Researchers at Boston University School of Medicine were awarded a $2.8 million Federal Aviation Administration grant to study the health of 416 volunteers at eight FAA centers in the Northeast. The study took 5½ years to complete.

The study said more than half the controllers were heavy drinkers, compared to about one-third of white males of similar income and education. All of the volunteers were men and 99 percent were white.

But Rose said the 7.5 percent rate of "alcohol abuse" was about comparable to the national average.

The study did not say what combination of frequency and quantity of alcohol consumption it used to define the terms "heavy drinkers" and "alcohol abuse," but a separate table showed that more than 40 percent of the controllers said they drank the equivalent of 15 ounces of grain alcohol a week, mostly in whiskey and beer.

Rose said that drinking to relieve the tension of a high-pressure job does not necessarily make people into alcoholics.

"Some people in alcohol research feel that if you drink too much, you're going to become an alcoholic — that it's an inexorable process downhill," Rose said.

"Our data suggest that the people who are drinking too much at one time are not always going to have that problem nine months down the pike."

"We feel alcohol at times does function as a coping device — albeit at a price," he said.

Rose, Dr. C. David Jenkins, Dr. Michael Hurst and their colleagues spent more than 13,000 man-hours gathering data at the FAA centers.

Young Tobacco Farmer Wins District Meet

Ralph C. Tucker Jr., a young tobacco farmer of Greenville, was declared the winner in a Farm Bureau district "discussion meet" competition held Thursday in Greenville.

Tucker represented the Pitt County Farm Bureau in the meet. As district winner, he will participate in the state semifinals and finals during the North Carolina Farm Bureau convention Dec. 3-6 in Asheville.

The winner of the state competition will be entered in the national competition at the American Farm Bureau convention in Miami, Fla. in January.

The discussion meet is an activity of the Farm Bureau's Young Farmer and Rancher Program, an integral part of the Bureau structure at the county, state and national levels.

While about half the adult population is 18 to 34, only 31 percent of the voters were. Those between 35 and 64 made up 56 percent of the voters versus about 46 percent of all adults.

Americans with family incomes under $15,000 a year make up 42 percent of the adults. Those at that income level made up a slightly lower 38 percent of the voters.

And the kicker is that the voters this year are just about as Democratic — and just about as Republican — and split just about the same way along the liberal-conservative spectrum as the public generally. The figures on party identification among voters were almost exactly the same as among all adults.

If anything, the percent of voters calling themselves conservatives was slightly lower than among the public at large.

And, for what it's worth, voters are less satisfied with their lives than all Americans. Fifty-six percent of the public are very satisfied with life, but only 37 percent of the voters are.

How's The Weather?

FORECAST

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is expected in the forecast period into Tuesday morning, from eastern Oklahoma to the Midwest and for North Dakota and Minnesota. Mild weather is forecast for the Gulf coast and East, but cool to cold weather is expected for the rest of the country. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press

High pressure centered over New England is building across North Carolina and this high will control the weather across the state for the next couple of days. Meanwhile, a cold front lies along the North Carolina-South Carolina border.

Cloudiness was increasing across the state today and skies will be mostly cloudy tonight and Tuesday. High temperatures today were expected to warm to the 60s while lows tonight will range from the mid 30s to around 40 in the mountains and to the mid 50s along the Outer Banks.

Small craft advisories were in effect for the coast today for the ocean side as well as the sounds with a forecast of northeast winds of 15 to 25 mph. A chance of showers also will prevail along the coast Tuesday.

After some morning cloudiness and fog, mainly in the east, partly sunny to sunny skies prevailed across the state Sunday. Afternoon temperatures ranged from the mid 60s to the mid 70s. Warmest temperatures occurred in the west where sunshine was more abundant. Warmest locations included Hickory with 75 followed by Charlotte and Asheville with 74.

Low readings this morning were mostly in the 40s and low 50s.

Auto Repair Services Source Of Complaint

By LOUISE COOK

Associated Press Writer

Americans spend nearly $50 billion a year to repair and maintain their cars and many of them complain that they aren't getting their money's worth.

Just over 30 percent of all the complaints received by the federal Office of Consumer Affairs in the first eight months of 1978 related to automobiles. Many of the complaints concerned high prices for new cars, but many also dealt with the frustrations and problems of getting old ones fixed.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration has estimated that up to $20 billion is wasted annually on poor, needless or fraudulent repairs.

Industry officials argue that fraud is involved in only a small percentage of cases, but they concede that, rightly or wrongly, consumers are concerned about the quality of auto repairs.

In most areas, auto mechanics need not be licensed to practice. Repair shops do not have to register or meet any type of government standard. Certification and testing programs generally are voluntary rather than mandatory.

How can you avoid problems? Start by reading the owner's manual that comes with your car, advises Donald A. Randall, a spokesman for the Automotive Service Council, Inc., a trade association representing about 5,000 of the nation's 240,000 auto repair shops. Randall said that the growth of self-service gasoline operations have made preventive maintenance more important than ever.

Don't wait until you need a mechanic to find a repair shop. "Make the selection before you break down and are captive of the nearest garage," Randall said.

Among the things to keep in mind when comparing garages are the facility's reputation, convenience and appearance. Does the place look reasonably clean? Are there parts lying all over the floor? Does the shop have power tools and a lift to raise the car off the floor?

Ask if the shop gives written estimates. In some states, estimates are required by law; in others they are voluntary. Mandatory or voluntary, the estimate will help you avoid what Randall explained is known in the business as the "sundown surprise" — the big and unexpected bill you're handed when you go to pick up your car.

Check to see if the repair shop is a member of the Automotive Service Council which sets standards for its members and runs an informal complaint-handling service. Look for the emblem of the National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence. The institute, set up six years ago by the U.S. auto manufacturers and dealers, runs a voluntary testing and certification program.

Note: Be careful about refusing payment if you are not satisfied. Most states have what is known as a "mechanic's lien law." If you refuse to pay your bill, even if it is outrageous, the shop can keep your car.

Mental Health Meet Set

The Pitt County Area Mental Health Board will meet Wednesday, Nov. 15, at the Center. Dr. Stephen Creech, area director, will report on the Area Directors' meeting which was held earlier in Goldsboro.

Committee reports will be made by Ray Rogers, William McDonald, John Mewborn, Dr. Malene Irons, and Robert Martin. According to Board Chairman James Bailey, among agenda items will be budget revisions, consideration of annual awards, contributions reports and a reimbursement report.

A video tape interview with Robert R. Ratcliffe, medical director of the Center, regarding decriminalization of public drunkenness will be shared with the board in addition to a progress report by Dr. Creech.

N.C. Politicians Look To 1980

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — With the 1978 election barely behind him, North Carolina's politicians are already thinking ahead to 1980.

Political observers say they expect to see several moves in that election, including:

—Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., seeking re-election to the U.S. Senate.

—State Attorney General

Rufus Edmisten seeking a second full term.

—Thad Eure running for re-election as secretary of state if his health continues to be good. His opponent will probably be George Breece of Fayetteville, who ran against Eure in 1976.

Tar Heel political experts say they expect the lieutenant governor's race to be a crowded affair as usual, especially if Green decides not to run for re-election. House Speaker Carl Steward, for one, has announced that he won't run for the legislature again and said he is likely to seek the lieutenant-governor's seat.

In the governor's race, Hunt has refused to commit himself to running for re-election, but people close to Hunt say he will run again. He was the sponsor of a constitutional amendment allowing governors to succeed themselves.

Green has been Hunt's most frequently mentioned opponent.

A campaign between the two men would almost certainly be bitter.

A rift between the two goes back at least to the days when Green was House speaker and Hunt lieutenant governor, and it was evident in the 1977 session. One political observer said Hunt will run for governor, "even if he doesn't want to. He's painted himself into a corner."

Morgan has already said he will seek re-election to the Senate. Those mentioned as prospective opponents include Edmisten and state Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, who was defeated Tuesday by Republican Sen. Jesse Helms for a U.S. Senate seat.

Edmisten's political adviser, Deputy Attorney General Charlie Smith, has said Edmisten is comfortable in his present job, and odds are he won't run against Morgan or Hunt. But Smith said Edmisten has made no definite decisions.

Eure will be 80 in 1980, but has said he will run for secretary of state again if his health is still good. Breece, who gave Eure a tough race in 1976, has spread the word that he will run again against Eure.

Couldn't Read Or Compute — An Easy Mark To Everyone

CHICAGO (AP) — McKinley Wright was an easy mark. The 82-year-old couldn't read or reckon; his bills, price tags and even the change in his pocket were a mystery, and his money seemed to disappear.

He got a $150 telephone bill although he never made a call — he couldn't read the numbers on the dial. And when he cashed his Social Security check a big stack of $1 bills seemed like a fair amount — he couldn't tell a $1 from a $10.

Then several months ago a homemakers assistant began calling on the former janitor at the housing project where he lives on Chicago's South Side, helping him to clean up the small, cluttered apartment.

She discovered a $150 telephone bill — a bill Wright couldn't read. The calls, Wright said when she explained the bill, were made by a burglar while he was hospitalized.

She found Wright couldn't read or write, and knew nothing of numbers. So she made flash cards, and they went to work.

"Everybody was taking advantage of Mr. Wright," the homemakers assistant, Annette Barrett, told Chicago Tribune columnist Anne Keegan.

"They'd give him the money (from his Social Security check) in a big stack of $1 bills so it would look like a lot of money. ... So that's where his money was going," she said.

As the weeks passed, Wright learned to read a few words and to recognize the numbers from 1 through 100. And he learned how to write his name — skills he passed up to work in the fields as a boy.

Staffers At Conference

ECU News Bureau

Management and technical staff members of the East Carolina University Computing Center attended computer-related conferences and completed formal training recently in the operation of the new Burroughs B6800 computer system to be installed at ECU later this year.

William Little, operations manager, and Cedric Jones, operations supervisor, participated in training conducted by the Burroughs Corp. at its Detroit, Mich. headquarters.

Daniel Griffin, manager of systems and programming, and Mathew Crovitz, systems programmer, represented ECU at the fall meeting of the Cooperating Users of Burroughs Equipment (CUBE) in Washington, D.C.

Richard Lennon, Computing Center director, attended the fall session of the UNC System Computing Center Directors Conference at Elizabeth City.

The spring conference will be hosted by ECU.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — News of the third increase this month in the bank prime lending rate sent the stock market into a broad decline today.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 8.15 at 798.94.

Losers outpaced gainers by more than a 2-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

A handful of banks in Chicago and Philadelphia raised their prime rates this morning from 10 1/2 to 11 percent, continuing the sharp rise in recent months in the basic charge on blue chip loans.

The rise of open-market money rates has made a prime rate of 11 1/2 percent by yearend a virtual certainty, he said.

General Motors lost 1 to 55 1/2 in active trading, touching a new low for the year. Last week GM paid a reduced yearend dividend.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks slipped .46 to 52.26. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell .29 to 143.10.

Volume on the Big Board continued to set a sluggish pace, totaling 8.23 million shares by noon against 7.46 million at the same point Friday.

Low Back Pain Studies Talked

ECU News Bureau
The use of traction to treat the loss of flexibility which accompanies low back pain was discussed by an East Carolina University physical therapy graduate at the recent meeting of the N.C. Physical Therapy Association in Raleigh.

Charles Thomas White Jr., reported on the influence of lumbar traction upon low back flexibility, a subject he researched during his senior year, at the gathering of approximately 175 physical therapists. He is a 1978 alumnus of ECU.
White made special studies of the treatment of low back pain by lumbar traction, and since loss of flexibility commonly accompanies low back problems, he developed a project designed to study the relation of lumbar traction upon flexibility of the lower back.

Safety Standards Ordered For Lead

By OWEN ULLMANN
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department today announced stringent new standards aimed at protecting 835,000 workers exposed to lead, a highly toxic substance that can be fatal if ingested.

The new standard, which sharply reduces worker exposure to lead, drew an immediate attack from the lead battery industry and is likely to trigger complaints from President Carter's inflation fighters.

The Labor Department's Occupational Safety and Health Administration announced that its standard would limit workers' lead exposure to 50 micrograms per cubic meter of air, averaged over eight hours.

The final standard compares with an initial standard of 100 micrograms proposed by OSHA three years ago. The current standard limits lead exposure to 200 micrograms.

OSHA estimates that 100,000 workers are exposed to lead levels in excess of 50 micrograms.

When inhaled or ingested, lead or lead compounds can cause severe damage to the kidneys, central nervous system and the brain. In some cases, it can be fatal.

The new standard, which takes effect Feb. 1, also includes a novel "medical removal" provision that requires employers to remove workers from lead-exposure areas levels when lead in the workers' blood exceeds prescribed limits. Employers also must guarantee that workers will not suffer any loss of pay during their removal.

The standard gives companies between eight and 10 years, depending on the industry, to develop "engineering controls" — such as special ventilation equipment — to meet the final standard.

Charles R. Hockenberry, spokesman for the Battery Council International, said most firms in the industry could not meet the cost for implementing the standard and stay in business.

The tough standard is certain to stir up another battle between federal regulators and President Carter's anti-inflation team, which earlier branded a weaker lead regulation as unnecessarily costly.

The government's inflation monitoring agency, the Council on Wage and Price Stability, had no immediate comment on the new standard.

Selected For Goldsboro Event

John Anema, vocational rehabilitation counselor at Pitt County Mental Health Center, has been selected to attend a group processing workshop Wednesday through Friday in Goldsboro, according to W. E. Dail, regional education specialist of the Division of Vocational Rehabilitation Services.

The training workshop will involve rationale for training in group processes, values and elements of effective discussions, building communication skills and decision making in groups.

Now serving an internship with Anema at PCMH is Rhonda Edwards, a graduate student in Rehabilitation Counseling at East Carolina University.

Routine Trespass Case Is International Affair

BUFFALO, Minn. (AP) — It seems such a simple case — 19 people standing trial on trespassing charges. But the Soviet Union's interest in a folksinger has made it an international affair.

The Soviets call folksinger Dean Reed a freedom fighter. And the Soviet news agency Tass is covering the trial — saying Reed's only offense was his "active struggle" for political prisoners in the United States.

To most Minnesotans, he's just one of 19 people being tried in Wright County court here in an Oct. 29 protest against a 427-mile power line stretching from North Dakota to Minnesota.

Te power line has prompted many protests — from farmers who say their property rights are being violated, and from environmentalists. Construction on the line has been completed, although it won't begin carrying electricity until next spring.

But it's Reed, not the power line, that concerns the Soviets, in what appears to be a counterattack on President Carter's human rights campaign.

Several major Russian artists telegraphed Carter to protest Reed's arrest, Tass reported Saturday. The White House says it hasn't received the telegram, and would have no comment.

The telegram, Tass reported, said: "Together with all people of good will, we express our indignation over the act of arbitrariness against Dean Reed. We hope, Mr. President, that you will use your influence to achieve the release of the courageous fighter for human rights."

And the Soviet youth newspaper, Komsomolskay Pravda, printed Reed's photograph, accompanied by a story headlined: "He sang for us."

Reed, 40, first became popular in the Soviet Union after he moved to East Germany in the 1960s and began appearing in various Soviet cities. He now lives in Studio City, Calif.

Saying he came to Minnesota to help farmers fight for their rights, Reed agrees with the Soviets' claim that he is a political prisoner.

"I consider myself a political prisoner ... I am not here because of trespassing. I accuse the large corporations and power companies of one large trespass," he says.

Defense attorney Kenneth Tilson maintains the demonstrators had a legal right to be at the power line terminal site.

Reed and 11 of the demonstrators refused to post $300 bail each and went on a hunger strike after their arrests. They were released when the trial began last week. Conviction on the charge carries a maximum penalty of 90 days in jail and a $500 fine.

Some power line protesters are happy with the attention.

Alice Tripp, a farmer's wife from Belgrade, Minn., who has been a leader in the power line protest for more than two years, said:

"I think he had a friend in the group. He was moved enough to join it ... It's not his movement, but we're glad to have him along."

A GREAT TAX SHELTER
Investing in real estate is one of the great tax shelters available to persons, especially in high tax brackets. What is a tax shelter? Basically, it's an investment that allows you to keep some money that you've earned, rather than give it to Uncle Sam in the form of income taxes.
Real Estate investors of income property are allowed a depreciation allowance which has the same effect on your income tax as exemptions for your dependents. It comes right off the top. For example, a brick office building is "expected" to last 40 years. If you bought it for $100,000, you could deduct $2,500 per year. By using "accelerated depreciation", you can deduct more during the early years and less in the later years.
Also, there are many other tax deductions, such as interest on the mortgage, and taxes which can be very sizable. Above all, remember that these come off the gross income, and your tax rate is based on what's left after deductions. The lower the net, the lower the rate.
If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please phone or drop in at BLOUNT & BALL REALTY CO., 201 E. Arlington Blvd., Greenville, Phone: 756-3000. We're here to help!

Cowboys Finally Regain Top Form

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writers

The Dallas Cowboys have returned to Super Bowl form — but whether they've done it in time to return to the Super Bowl is another matter.

"It was the best we've played all year, but we've got to keep playing like this or we won't make the playoffs," Coach Tom Landry said Sunday after Tony Dorsett, Robert Newhouse, Roger Staubach and Billy Joe DuPree teamed up to mangle the Green Bay Packers 42-14.

Dorsett, in the doghouse in recent weeks, rushed for 149 yards and two touchdowns (covering 9 and 33 yards). Newhouse ran for 101 yards and two more touchdowns (14 and 3 yards) and Staubach passed to DuPree for another two scores (8 and 18 yards).

In the rest of the National Football League, it was Los Angeles 10, Pittsburgh 7, Houston 26, New England 23, San Diego 29, Kansas City 23 in overtime; Miami 25, Buffalo 24; Minnesota 17, Chicago 14; Atlanta 20, New Orleans 17; Baltimore 17, Seattle 14; Philadelphia 17, New York Jets 9; Detroit 34, Tampa Bay 23; St. Louis 16, San Francisco 10; Denver 19, Cleveland 7, and Washington 16, New York Giants 13 in overtime.

Dallas, 7-4, still trails Washington by one game in the National Conference East. The Packers, also 7-4, are tied with Minnesota for first in the NFC Central.

The Cowboys had lost to Minnesota and Miami the last two games, looking lackluster and sometimes downright incompetent. But they put everything together against Green Bay — to the dismay of Packer Coach Bart Starr.

"You saw a team play like a Super Bowl team," he said of the Cowboys. "They're a magnificent team."

"Just a day at the office," said Dorsett but Green Bay quarterback David Whitehurst, who completed just three of 16 passes for 31 yards before being hurt, saw things differently. "We just stunk it up out there," he muttered.

Rams 10, Steelers 7

Pat Haden, harrassed most of the night by Pittsburgh's defense and aware that his wife, Cindy, was in the hospital about to give birth to their first child beat the pressure with less than 5½ minutes to play, whipping a game-winning 10-yard scoring pass to Willie Miller.

Oilers 26, Patriots 23

With 2:29 left to play, Houston quarterback Dan Pastorini hit Richard Caster with a 10-yard touchdown pass to complete a Houston comeback. Earlier, Rob Carpenter scored for the Oilers on two short runs and Earl Campbell ran in once.

Chargers 29, Chiefs 23

San Diego's Dan Fouts looked at the clock — the wrong one, as it turned out — then calmly pitched a 14-yard TD pass to John Jefferson as time ran out in overtime to beat the Chiefs.

Dolphins 25, Bills 24

Delvin Williams of Miami rushed for 144 yards, including TD passes of 25 and 26 yards, en route to surpassing the 1,000-yard mark and remaining the league's leading ground-gainer. The victory was the Dolphins' 18th in a row over Buffalo.

Vikings 17, Bears 14

Chuck Foreman scored twice on 1 yard dives — giving him 73 TDs for his career to tie Bill Brown's Viking record — and Fred McNeill blocked Bob Thomas' 39-yard field goal attempt in the fourth quarter to hand the Bears their eighth straight loss.

Falcons 20, Saints 17

Atlanta's Steve Bartkowski launched a "prayer" pass — and his prayers were answered when Wallace Francis tipped the ball to teammate Alfred Jackson, who ran the final 10 yards to complete a 57-yard TD pass play with 10 seconds left.

Colts 17, Seahawks 14

Bert Jones heaved a 12-yard TD pass to Glenn Doughty in the first period and Ron Lee scored on a 14-yard run in the final period in the Colts' victory.

Eagles 17, Jets 9

Harold Carmichael caught TD passes of 18 and 6 yards from Ron Jaworski and blocked the point-after on New York's only TD to lead the Eagles past the Jets.

Lions 34, Bucs 23

Horace King sprinted 75 yards for a TD and Gary Danielson teamed with David Hill on scoring strikes of 2 and 14 yards in the Lions' victory over Tampa Bay.

Cardinals 16, 49ers 10

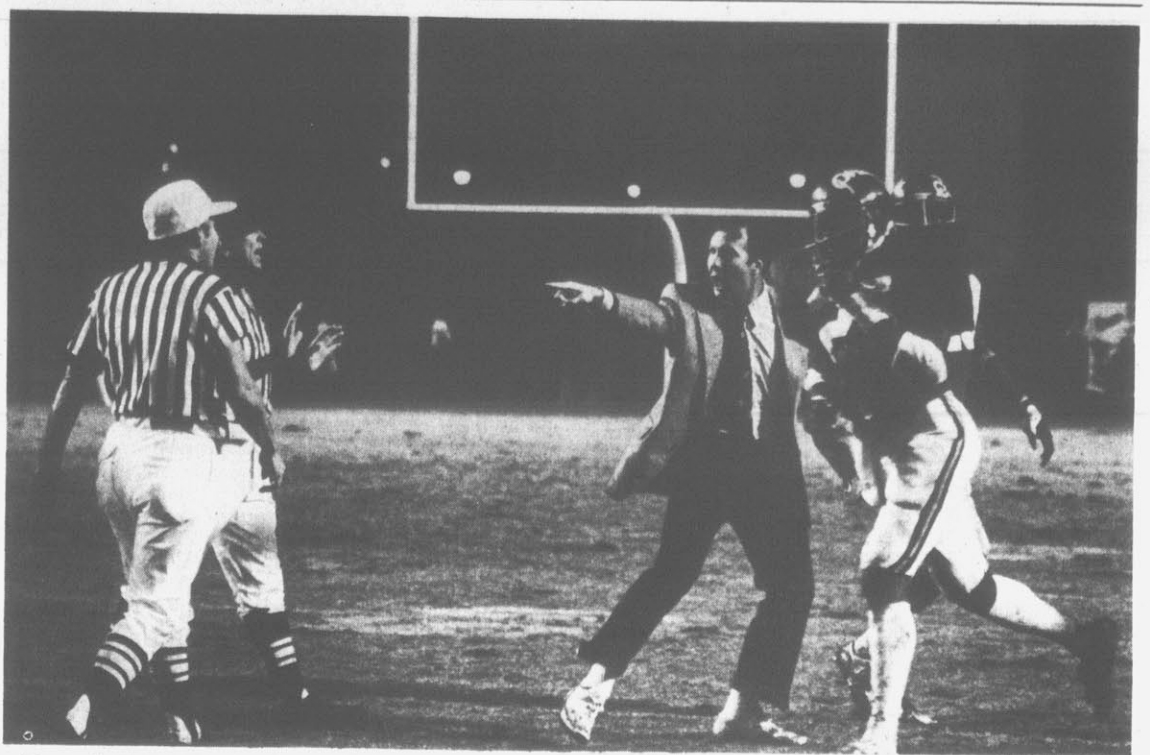

Jim Hart passed 15 yards to Al Chandler and 5 yards to Pat Tilley for a pair of St. Louis TDs, while San Francisco quarterback Scott Bull was victimized by his own teammates' miscues.

Broncos 19, Browns 7

Craig Morton's 25-yard TD pass to Riley Odoms and Jim Turner's pair of field goals helped Denver beat the Browns and take a half-game lead over Oakland in the AFC West, pending the Raiders' game with Cincinnati tonight.

Redskins 16, Giants 13

Mark Moseley's third field goal, a 35-yarder with 8:32 gone in overtime, carried the Redskins past the Giants. Moseley, who also kicked field goals of 47 and 33 yards, missed a 35-yard attempt about 3½ minutes before hitting the winner.

Dye Argues

East Carolina coach Pat Dye argues with officials that running back Eddie Hicks should be allowed to reenter Saturday night's game with William & Mary. Hicks, who had torn his jersey on the previous play, was allowed back in the game as Dye won his argument that ECU had called time out. (Hicks is behind Sam Harrell, no. 25) Leander Green threw a touchdown pass to Billy Ray Washington on the next play. (Reflector photo)

Terps, Tigers Meet In ACC Showdown

By The Associated Press

The Atlantic Coast Conference was 0-and-1 against outsiders Saturday, but a pair of league battles set up a title showdown this week between Maryland and Clemson.

No. 2 Penn State, likely to be No. 1 this week, withstood a Wolfpack scare to beat N.C. State 19-10 Saturday in the only non-conference match.

Elsewhere, 13th-ranked Maryland improved its record to 9-1 by struggling to a 17-7 win over lowly Virginia. 15th-ranked Clemson managed a 13-9 win in the fourth quarter over stubborn North Carolina, and Duke downed Wake Forest 3-0. Newcomer Georgia Tech beat Air Force 42-21.

For N.C. State Coach Bo Rein, there was little consolation and no moral victory in coming close to ending the longest winning streak in major college football, now 18.

"We feel as bad as we do anytime we lose," said Rein. "We got a good, hard effort, but this was no moral victory. We lost, and we lost because we didn't move the ball on offense, we didn't tackle well enough on defense and we made a couple of key mistakes in the kicking game."

Penn St. 19, N.C. State 10

N.C. State held a 7-3 halftime lead on a late, 2-yard touchdown by Ted Brown, but fell victim to four Matt Bahr field goals and a 43-yard punt return for a touchdown by Matt Suhey.

Brown was held to 71 yards rushing on 22 carries, 60 yards below his average. "We did a great job against him today, about as well as you can play Ted Brown," Nittany Lion Coach Joe Paterno said.

Clemson 13, N. Carolina 9

Clemson needed a four-quarter touchdown by Lester Brown to salvage a win over troubled North Carolina, but Tiger Coach Charlie Pell insisted there was no letdown because of the upcoming Maryland game.

"Give North Carolina credit. They came at us both offensively and defensively," said Pell. "No, we weren't looking ahead to next week. North Carolina has too many good people to do anything like that. They just played a solid football game."

The Tar Heels led 9-6 in the fourth quarter before Clemson, with a major bowl bid on the line, moved 80 yards for the final, 1-yard touchdown plunge by Brown.

"We played a good football game today," said North Carolina Coach Dick Crum. "It's tough when you have to play that well and lose." North Carolina, now 3-6, meets Virginia Saturday. Clemson improved its record to 8-1 for Saturday's showdown with Maryland.

Maryland 17, Virginia 7

After a drubbing by Penn

State last week, Maryland Coach Jerry Claiborne had hoped for a little better against Virginia, 2-7.

"If we play against Clemson like we did today, we're in trouble," Claiborne said. "We have to get ready for Clemson. We have talked for five weeks about getting better. We have to do it now."

Virginia took an early lead when Sean McCall took the opening kickoff 85 yards to the Maryland 15, setting up a touchdown by Dan Holtowe. But the Terps improved their record to 9-1 with a field goal and a pair of Alvin Maddox touchdowns.

"It's too bad the effort that our players put out today was rewarded with a 17-7 defeat," Virginia Coach Dick Bestwick said. "Nice thing about it, a lot of those players you saw out there will be back two or three years."

Duke 3, Wake Forest 0

Duke got back on the winning track after four straight losses, while Wake Forest fell to 1-9. Duke improved its record to 4-5.

"You may say the score was 3-0, but it was a great victory," Duke Coach Mike McGee said. McGee said he would have a meeting Monday with the four players he suspended prior to the Wake game.

Coaches See Tight Race

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Atlantic Coast Conference basketball coaches are predicting one of the tightest ACC races ever this season, but national runner-up Duke is an overwhelming favorite to win the title.

The Blue Devils, who won the ACC tournament and went to the finals of the NCAA playoffs before losing 94-88 to Kentucky last spring, were the choice of 107 of 110 sportswriters and broadcasters Sunday at an ACC basketball preview.

Second-place in the poll went to N.C. State, which lost to Texas in the finals of last season's National Invitation Tournament. The Wolfpack got two first-place votes and the other went to North Carolina, which finished atop the regular-season standings last season.

"Every year I come up here and say it looks like it will be a seven-way tie for first place," Virginia Coach Terry Holland said, adding that this year is no different with "super competition from top to bottom."

Coach Dean Smith of North Carolina agreed, adding, "I think all seven teams should be ranked (nationally) but they won't be because we all play each other." With Duke returning 11 of 12 players from a team that went 27-7 overall and 8-4 in the conference, Coach Bill Foster said he is pleased with the enthusiasm shown by the Blue Devils and with their high ranking in several pre-season national polls.

"Our aim was to try to improve our rebounding so that we would be on the national scene — either individually or as a team," Foster said. "On defense we will be trying to create more turnovers and will want to use a lot more changing defenses."

Foster and N.C. State's Norm Sloan both said their teams may suffer because of unusually tough non-conference schedules this season. Duke has games against Western Kentucky, Southern Methodist, Southern Cal, Marquette and Louisville while the Wolfpack opens Nov. 24 against Texas A&M in the Alaska Shootout — which also features Indiana and Louisville — and later plays Penn State and Notre Dame.

Among those returning for Duke are 6-10 center Mike Gminski and 6-5 guard Jim Spanarkle from the all-ACC team, and standout forward Eugene Banks.

Sloan said the Wolfpack — 21-10 and 7-5 last year — should be stronger at every position. He said 6-11 sophomore Craig Watts is running ahead of 7-2 senior Glenn Sudhop at center and that forward Charles "Hawkeye" Whitney should be helped by the loss of 35 pounds during the summer.

"I'm not predicting anything for us except that we will be better than we were last year," Sloan said. "But everybody else expects to be better...the conference winner will be the team that can best handle adversity."

North Carolina, 23-8 overall and 9-3 in the ACC, must find a replacement for point guard Phil Ford, the Tar Heels' all-time leading scorer and last year's ACC player of the year.

Smith said North Carolina will have better depth than they had last year and should be a good-shooting team but their weak points will be rebounding and defense.

Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell said there appears to be more enthusiasm and greater harmony among the Terp players this year. But he acknowledged he has no all-ACC players from last season and he said he couldn't predict how the season will turn out.

Coach Bill Foster of Clemson said he expects 10 or 11 players to see a significant amount of action and that means that the Tigers will be relying on several freshmen for much of the year. He said he wouldn't be surprised to see Clemson lose a few games early in the season but that he expects the Tigers to pick up strength as the year goes along.

Holland said Virginia will be hurt by the loss of center Mark Ivoroni but that the Cavaliers have more experienced players than he's ever had before. "I think really we are going to be a better basketball team than we were last year," he said.

Wake Forest must replace its two top men — forward Rod Griffin, the ACC's leading scorer and rebounder a year ago, and high jumping Leroy McDonald. Coach Carl Tacy said one of the keys to Wake's season will be the play of 6-11 senior center Larry Harrison, who is still recovering from a knee operation last spring.

Clemson Is Last

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Being ranked last on the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball totem pole isn't necessarily all bad, Clemson Coach Bill Foster feels.

"We're looking forward to the year," Foster said the league's Operation Basketball at Greensboro Sunday. He said his team is young but enthusiastic and sometimes inconsistent. But he's looking forward to the challenge of a schedule when — it things go right — a post-season game might be a reward.

For the first time in three years, the Tigers aren't on probation. The National Collegiate Athletic Association slapped a penalty on the school for recruiting violations before Foster arrived and kept it from going to any playoffs.

Not that the team would have gone anyway. Still, "late in the season, (being off probation) might be a psychological advantage," Foster said.

Clemson, 15-12 overall last year and 3-9 in the ACC, opens play Nov. 24 at home against Catholic. In addition to the league competition the Tigers have two games each with intrastate rivals South Carolina, Furman and The Citadel.

Brown, Kent State and Manhattan are in the IPTAY Tournament Dec. 1-2 at Clemson.

Foster said his starting five shapes up this way: 6-9 junior John Campbell at center, 6-2 senior Derrick Johnson and 6-3 junior Billy Williams at guard, 6-9 sophomore Larry Nance at one forward, and either senior Marvin Dickerson or sophomore Keith Walker at the other forward. Dickerson is 6-6 and Walker is 6-5.

TAKES NO CHANCE

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Johnny Barefield, rookie linebacker for the St. Louis Cardinals, majored in fashion design at Texas A&I.

The flamboyant Barefield, who likes to call himself "Dr. Doom," has a pair of white ostrich boots and he wears a quarter in one ear because he considers himself one of the Wonders of the World.

However, during a 1978 NFL game in his rookie season, Barefield removed the quarter. There was an electric storm in the area and he didn't wish to attract any lightning bolts.

East Carolina University's prospects for a bowl game, if they exist at all, probably got a boost Saturday when the Pirates gained a 20-3 victory over William & Mary.

The Pirates performed well in holding the Indians to only 11 yards through the air and just 128 on the ground, well within their nationally ranked averages. At the same time, on a sloppy turf that caused some problems, the Bucs were able to put more than 300 yards on offense on the board.

A number of times, Buc ball carriers were able to get through holes, only to slip and fall on the turf. The same thing was true on a number of occasions when they were trying to cut the corner and turn upfield for yardage.

Coach Pat Dye felt, in the immediate evaluation of the game, that the Pirates played their best game of the season in the contest.

Now, they have one more shot at trying to impress someone into giving the Pirates the chance that they've waited for so long.

Whether they will get the opportunity to go to a bowl may be in doubt. But the Pirates do have a chance to end the year with a good finish against the Marshall Thundering Herd on Saturday.

That game will also be a Homecoming of sort for the sports information director of Marshall.

John Evenson is the current SID at the Huntington school. Evenson served here at East Carolina in the same position about five years ago.

Many people will also pause to remember the last time Marshall visited East Carolina. That was back in 1970, and the return home resulted in the tragic crash that wiped out the entire team.

In all probability, a number of people will have that tragedy on their minds. We know we will. It was a night we do not care to have to relive.

Whether or not some memorial will be observed at this year's game is not certain. We have also heard a report that Marshall will again be here in 1980, the tenth anniversary of the crash, and that a suitable memorial will then be held. Some recognition is in order, at any rate.

Jaguars On The Prowl

Farmville Central's victory over Tarboro didn't surprise us so much in its outcome as it did in the margin the Jaguars clobbered the Vikings.

Probably no one in North Carolina would have ventured to guess that Farmville would roll up 56 points against the talented Tarboro eleven, let alone hold them to 12 points.

The game, for several weeks, had been billed as the game to "decide the state title."

Nevertheless, three more weeks of competition remain before a state champion can be crowned, and it would be fatal for the Jaguars to think that they have it made.

It is quite doubtful that they will not be prepared for this week's opponent, Clinton. For the past two years, Farmville has visited Clinton, and on both occasions, the Jaguars were beaten.

Nearly everyone on this year's team made last year's trip, and remembers it well. Coach Gene Brewer will have little difficulty in getting the Jags ready to play Friday night in front of the hometown fans.

But should Farmville win then, there will be the danger of a letdown for the third weekend of play. That perhaps will be the most important game, since Farmville would be coming off an emotional victory.

The Jaguars must guard against overconfidence should they win Friday night. Too many teams that were picked to win early never made it to the victor's circle when the champions were crowned.

Swimmers In Wilmington Meet

WILMINGTON — The Greenville Swim Club brought home a total of 43 ribbons from the annual Wilmington Autumn "B" meet held Saturday.

Some 33 swimmers from the local club participated in the event, with ribbons going to the top eight finishers in each category. Team totals were not kept.

TIGER SYSTEM

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit Tigers are on the way back in the American League, and they have done it with a squad of youngsters, most of whom have graduated from their farm system.

"With the enormous sums baseball has been throwing at free agents and veterans," Manager Ralph Houk explained, "I think the only sensible way to go today is with your farm system."

Bobby Richardson of the Yankees, not noted for his batting power, drove in six runs in one game of the 1960 World Series against Pittsburgh, setting a record.

Things DO Get Worse

Just when it looks like things can't get any worse for the Boston Celtics, things get worse.

The Celtics looked bad in losing to the New York Knicks 111-98 Saturday night, but at least that was on the road. Sunday night they returned to the Boston Garden and bowed to the Detroit Pistons 128-123 for their sixth loss in a row and 10th in the last 11 games.

"This was obviously our worst game of the year," said Celtics Coach Tom Sanders. "We had 17 turnovers in the first half and then followed that up with crucial mistakes down the stretch. It's simply a matter of concentration. We showed a total lack of poise."

Boston's 2-12 record is the second worst in the National Basketball Association. It's the worst start in the history of the franchise.

In other NBA games Sunday night, the Los Angeles Lakers routed the Indiana Pacers 134-106, the Phoenix Suns beat the New Orleans Jazz 128-122 and the Portland Trail Blazers defeated the Cleveland Cavaliers 98-91.

Rookie John Long scored 24 points to lead Detroit, which was without its captain and center, Bob Lanier, who injured his left knee in Philadelphia Saturday night.

Lakers 134, Pacers 106

Los Angeles won its ninth in a row, racing into an 80-50 halftime lead and coasting home behind 22 points and 13 rebounds by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. Seven players scored in double figures for the Lakers, who are now 8-0 on their home court.

The Lakers made 19 of their first 24 field goal tries and finished with a .556 shooting percentage, while outrebounding Indiana 72-51.

Suns 128, Jazz 122

Alvan Adams, who had been on the injured list because of a sprained ankle, returned to action and scored 33 points to lead Phoenix over New Orleans. He scored 14 in the Suns' 38-point fourth quarter.

New Orleans' Truck Robinson led all scorers with 34 points.

Blazers 98, Cavaliers 91

Cleveland ended a gruelling seven-game road trip with its 10th loss in the last 11 games after a 4-0 start. Maurice Lucas was the big force for the Trail Blazers with 26 points and 15 rebounds, including five points in a row after Cleveland had trimmed a 21-point lead to five with 3:53 to play.

Penn State Students Await Top 10 College Football Poll

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — They started first semester final exams at Penn State today, but the mark the 30,000 students are looking for comes tomorrow.

Penn State beat North Carolina State 19-10 Saturday and Oklahoma lost to Nebraska 17-14.

Will those who vote in the Top 10 college football poll now boost second-ranked Penn State over first-rated Oklahoma? Are the Nittany Lions going to be No. 1 for the first time in their long football history?

Coach Joe Paterno, who in his 13 years as head coach of the Lions has failed to reach the top despite previous unbeaten streaks of 3 and 15 games, says he will believe it when it happens.

Penn State now is 10-0 and has won 18 straight over the past two seasons, longest current major college football winning streak. The Lions are off

Saturday and close out the 1978 season Nov. 24 on national television against Pittsburgh.

But before the Pitt game, Paterno and his squad have to make a big decision. Bowl invitations will go out at 6 p.m.

Nov. 18. Penn State has to decide where it wants to go and who it wants to play.

The decision is fraught with problems.

"There are so many factors," said Paterno after four field goals by Matt Bahr and a 43-yard late final period touchdown punt return by Matt Suhey enabled the Lions to beat 18-point underdog North Carolina State.

"It depends on which team is No. 2," Paterno said, assuming that his team would become No. 1. "Hopefully we can play No. 2 and in a bowl the kids want to go to. We haven't had a chance to talk about it yet."

Browner: Bengals Playing On Pride

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Bengals rookie standout Ross Browner offers a word of warning for the playoff-minded Oakland Raiders.

"There's nothing at stake for us but our pride," Browner said as the Bengals, 1-9, take aim at denting Oakland's longtime Monday night football mastery.

Browner, the Bengals' No. 1 draft pick, sees the game as a chance for a new beginning.

"We can start rebuilding around this game. We know we have a good team," Browner said. "We're not going to be out of the picture very long."

Already upset by Seattle and San Diego this month, the Raiders, 6-4, need a victory to remain in a first place tie with Denver in the American Football Conference Western Division.

Oakland, one of the decade's most dominant pro football teams, has compiled a 10-1-1 record since 1970 while appearing in Monday night national television games.

The Raiders have been installed as seven-point favorites in the 9 p.m. EST National Football League contest.

Oakland holds a 7-3 edge in the rivalry, winning five of the last six meetings, including a 31-28 playoff triumph in 1975.

The Bengals, who manhandled Houston two weeks ago for their only victory of the year, are coming off an embarrassing 23-12 loss to San Diego.

Bucs Finish In 2nd Place

MEISENHEIMER — East Carolina won six of 10 events, but finished second in the Pfeiffer Relays swimming meet for women last Saturday.

The Lady Pirates compiled 104 points, while host Pfeiffer had 124. Lucy Weckerling swam on four of the six winning teams for ECU, while Paige Langston, Cindy Sailer, Sharon Burns and Julie Malcolm swam on three winners each.

Critics Say Volunteer Army Failing To Meet Need

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Although the Pentagon calls it a success, defense officials concede there are some serious problems with America's volunteer Army. And some critics question whether the force can respond adequately in quality and numbers in time of war.

But as America's experiment without the draft nears its seventh year, Pentagon leaders are increasingly irritated with criticisms from those who, they say, do not give the volunteer concept a chance.

In addition to critics on Capitol Hill, however, the attack is from within the Army. The greatest concerns are over the shrinking Army reserve, claims of a decline in quality of recruits, and the prospect of more problems to come as the number of military-age males drops.

"They're always talking about a quick war," says one infantry colonel who asked to remain anonymous. "Well, it better be a quick war and we'd better win it because we won't have anything left."

Gen. Bernard Rogers, Army chief of staff, has complained of a "drastic shortage" in the reserves. But he and other defense planners insist the active force is adequate and today's soldier is as good or better than the draftee.

"Basically the active duty volunteer force has been a success...I think it's a good system. I think it does work," Assistant Defense Secretary John White said in an interview.

Army Secretary Clifford Alexander in a recent speech characterized the Army's critics as "armchair quarterbacks" who unfairly have declared "open season" on the American soldier.

When the volunteer concept was introduced in the Nixon years, the Pentagon's generals, especially those in the Army, were highly skeptical and preferred retaining the draft.

And controversy has been with the volunteer Army since the end of the draft in 1972. But now some critics, including congressmen, are suggesting a possible return to the draft — which White claims "isn't politically feasible" except in a national emergency.

"My first solution to the problem is for the military...to acknowledge that there is a problem. They're not being candid," said Rep. Robin Beard, R-Tenn., a staunch critic of the volunteer force.

Beard, a former Marine and a member of the House Armed Services Committee, commissioned a report that concludes that the quality of today's soldier is poor, his training inferior and that the Army "as an effective fighting force is in serious trouble." It said 60 days after mobilization the Army would be short a half million men.

Pentagon officials contend the critics are exaggerating the Army's defects and do not offer realistic alternatives. "One of the things you have to do is ask the question, 'Relative to what?' What is the alternative that is the solution to the problem," says White.

From a 1.5 million-member force during the Vietnam War in 1968, the Army dropped to 811,000 in 1972 and to about 772,000 today.

Although acknowledging critical shortages in some specialties such as doctors, the Army has kept near its authorized strength. However, that authorization level has steadily been reduced by Congress.

While the numbers have gone down, the costs have gone up with the volunteer force costing an average of $3 billion a year more than its draft-era counterpart. The Pentagon argues that 80 percent of added costs are from pay increases that would have been given anyway and that a return to the draft would save only $500 million a year.

The volunteer concept was planned to work with a strong reserve backup. But the National Guard and Army Reserve are more than 130,000 men short of the desired strength of 660,000. A backup pool is in worse shape with 154,000 men, far short of the desired 820,000.

"It would take 30 weeks from mobilization to draft, train and deploy replacements," the Army estimates. Acknowledging the problem, the Army has begun a $25 million reserve enlistment bonus program and for the first time has turned to full-time reserve recruiters.

The Pentagon last week ordered all armed forces to study cutting minimum enlistments to improve the quality of volunteers. This could involve a return to the two-year minimum, upped to three years because of a problem with turnover and the expense of training.

Pentagon officials, however, dispute that today's soldier is inferior to the draftee. One of every four soldiers, they note, is a high school graduate, and the absentee rate, drug abuse cases and judicial and nonjudicial penalties have been dramatically reduced.

The critics argue that the Army too often has become a last resort for youths. "They never...told us they are presently downgrading all of the training manuals, downgrading the reading level from 11th grade to 8th grade and putting them out as comic books," said Beard, who adds 30 percent of recruits cannot read beyond a 5th grade level.

But White, admitting some problems with literacy, insists: "The soldiers we have today are good people; they want to do a good job."

Recruiting is expected to get tougher with the number of 18-year-old males dropping 15 percent by 1985. The Army hopes to compensate by hiring more civilians, lowering the dropout rate — now 40 percent before the end of first enlistment — and stepping up recruiting. They also hope to increase the number of female soldiers from 6 to 12 percent by 1983 and say women are "full and equal partners on the Army team."

But recruiters already have been criticized for "over promising," and a new draft is unlikely. Congress has rejected a move to again register men and add $3 million yearly to upgrade Selective Service.

"We couldn't get that amount of money for that modest purpose," says White. "So I just don't see the political mood for change."

N.C. Traffic Killed Seven

The state Highway Patrol says seven persons have been killed so far in North Carolina traffic accidents over the weekend.

The fatalities pushed the state's yearly highway death toll to 1,229, compared with 1,251 during the same period last year.

The patrol said Essie Davis, 44, of High Falls was killed Sunday when a car ran off a rural road seven miles east of Robbins in Moore County, came back and hit the car in which she was a passenger.

Tommy Max Robinson Jr., 3, of North Wilkesboro died Sunday when he fell out of the right front seat of a vehicle on N.C. 268 two miles east of North Wilkesboro in Wilkes County.

Smith Holt Piland, 17, of Charlotte was killed early Sunday in Cabarrus County when his car ran off the road and overturned.

Richard Odell Baker, 39, of Kannapolis, died Saturday when his car ran off N.C. 152 3½ miles west of Rockwell in Rowan County, hit a culvert, overturned and burned.

Veronica Pate, 7, of Fremont, was killed Saturday afternoon when she ran into the path of an oncoming vehicle.

William Cameron Edwards, 24, of Garner, was killed Friday night near Raleigh in a two-car collision at a rural intersection.

Brad Eugene Gregory, 27, of Bessemer City, was killed Saturday morning on a rural Gaston County road when his car ran off the road, struck a ditch and overturned several times.

Suggest Explosion Of Star Killed Dinosaurs

By AL ROSSITER JR.
UPI Science Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The extinction of the dinosaur 65 million years ago may have resulted from environmental changes brought about by the explosion of a star, scientists suggested Saturday.

The theory is a new twist to an idea debated, and then discounted in the 1960's, suggesting Earth may have passed through the radioactive remains of a supernova — a large star that exploded and left an expanding cloud of turbulent gases.

Astronomers believe supernova remnants are the sources of galactic cosmic rays that constantly bombard Earth's upper atmosphere.

It was originally suggested that, if Earth passed through a supernova remnant, the cosmic rays might have been strong enough to kill many forms of life on Earth.

Dr. George Reid of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said estimates from geologic evidence indicate perhaps 75 percent of all species — including thousands of other animal types besides dinosaurs — became extinct at roughly the same time.

"It was a very big wipe out," he said in a telephone interview from his office at NOAA's Aeronomy Laboratory at Boulder, Colo. "It affected almost everything."

Reid said, however, that direct radiation from supernova remains would not account for the wholesale extinction. Even if the cosmic ray barrage were increased 1,000 fold, not enough would penetrate Earth's atmosphere to be so lethal.

But Reid, Dr. John McAfee of the NOAA Aeronomy Lab and Dr. Paul Crutzen of the National Center for Atmospheric Research suggest the cosmic rays could have the same impact by working a different way.

When cosmic rays hit the atmosphere, they release nitrogen atoms that react with oxygen and produce nitrogen oxide compounds.

These are efficient destroyers of ozone, the form of oxygen 10 to 30 miles high that screens out much of the sun's harmful ultraviolet radiation.

Based on today's understanding of atmospheric chemistry, the three scientists calculated that a thousand-fold increase in cosmic radiation would reduce the total ozone by 89 percent. Nitrogen dioxide would be 130 times more abundant.

Their report, released Saturday by NOAA, said such decreases in ozone would allow 10 times more ultraviolet radiation to reach Earth's surface.

The nitrogen dioxide would filter out much of the blue and green parts of visible light, with this overall chain reaction effect: A significant drop in global surface temperature, drastic reductions in atmospheric water vapor and, finally, widespread drought.

In addition, the scientists said reduction in light reaching earth would cut photosynthesis, the process by which green plants manufacture their food from carbon dioxide and water.

Bowling Closed Special Olympics

The 1978 Greenville Special Olympics Fall Games came to a close Friday with the bowling competition held at Hillcrest Lanes.

Seventy-five Special Olympians from Greenville and Pitt County schools, the Eastern Carolina Sheltered Workshop and the Adult Developmental Activities Program participated in the bowling event.

Other activities during the week consisted of the run, dribble and shoot competition held Wednesday and Thursday. The basketball competition took place with the Eastern Carolina Sheltered Workshop taking first place. C. Over 250 special athletes participated in this past week's games. Of those participating about 25 will attend the North Carolina Special Olympics Fall Games in Henderson Dec. 8-9.

Winners in the bowling competition were:

— Six-7 years old — Michael Taft.

— Eight-9 — Magale Crandall, James Carmon, Lindbergh Hardy, Derrell Jones.

— Ten-11 — Jeffrey Harris, Marsha Ward, Dulcie Paige, Paulette Edwards, David Lancaster, Renard Paige, David Carr.

— Twelve-13 — George Langley.

— Fourteen-15 — Bunice Allison, Chris Close.

— Seventeen-19 — Wesley Upton, Cheryl Mayo.

— Twenty and over — Jessie Flemming, Charles McAndrews, Morgan Fambrough.

— High Scorers — George Langley, 102; Jessie Fleming, 101.

Hypnosis: A Tool of Therapy

The subject of hypnosis recently came up in one of our college courses. Is the science of hypnosis a recognized one and is it respected in today's psychotherapy? — Miss N.D., Ohio.

Dear Miss D.: About 20 years ago the American Medical Association carefully evaluated the whole spectrum of hypnosis and came to the conclusion that it is a valuable addition to psychotherapy. Highly trained specialists in psychology employ this remarkable form of treatment as an addition to, rather than as a replacement for, other forms of therapy.

Unfortunately, some people in show business or those who play parlor games without any training in psychology have made stage performances out of the phenomenon of hypnosis. This is a hazardous game.

In New York City, the Morton Prince Clinic for Hypnotism and the Institute for Research in Hypnotism have established themselves nationally for their scientific contribution to modern-day hypnosis. Dr. Milton V. Kline, director of these centers, said, "Hypnosis is recognized as a very significant and useful tool in the control of intractable pain, in insomnia, for some forms of headache, for weight reduction, and for breaking the cigarette habit."

Hypnosis also plays a significant role in uncovering some of the basic sources of neurotic behavior.

I was impressed by a column you wrote about the hidden dangers in one's home.

I read it and instead of doing something about it, promptly forgot it. About six months ago, I slipped on a vinyl floor while trying out a pair of new shoes. My broken wrist is a constant reminder that the house isn't always safe. — Mr. C.L.W., N.C.

Dear Mr. W.:

It is always sad to learn that an accident of any severity happened in the home. For, normally, one has the feeling that one is surrounded therein with security.

I have always felt that an excellent health precaution is a careful survey of all potential household hazards. When was the last time most people looked at their home's wiring? The frayed areas may stay for years before causing a flash fire. Scatter rugs, slippery surfaces, extension cords, slippery bathtubs, inadequate handrails along the stairs to the cellar are only a few of the many household hazards that can be found if one really looks.

One of my readers said that he, his wife, and three young children play a game every six months. This takes about an hour twice a year. Everyone enthusiastically tries to uncover a potential trap that was not visible to the others. What an excellent investment in safety is such a simple exercise!

By the way, in a national survey it was dumbfounding to find how few kitchens had a good fire extinguisher. Does yours?

Would Require Black Studies

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Students from 19 North Carolina universities say they will push to make black studies a mandatory part of all college curriculums.

"White students are not going to take the black studies courses on their own, so we should require them. It's the only way they are going to learn about the students they are going to be teaching," said Dr. Herman Norman, professor of Afro-American and African Studies at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte.

Bruce Horton, president of the N.C. Black Student Coalition, said Saturday that the coalition will join efforts by the N.C. Conference on Black Studies to make black studies courses mandatory for black and white students.

"We want a strong black studies program as a required part of every curriculum because everybody will have to deal with black people, and these courses will help," Horton said.

Some professors have called black studies programs unnecessary. Hundreds of colleges have dropped their programs, leaving 250 remaining in the country, according to Norman.

Legislation will be introduced in the 1979 General Assembly to require black studies courses in all university curriculums, Norman said. He urged coalition members to seek the support of their state legislators.

"Many white teachers go to white institutions where the majority of students are white, and when they graduate, they move into white neighborhoods," Norman said.

"The first time they face black students is when they get a job teaching," he added.

'Alternative' Is A Born Loser

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
MOUNT HOLLY, N.J. (AP) — If you had voted for a loser in all 10 general elections since 1960, would you be dismayed? Shoot. Mahalchik has not just voted for a loser, he's been a loser, in all 10.

Correction: Nine. He missed

A BORN LOSER — John Mahalchik sits in a junked Navy blimp, and can look back on losing nine of the last 10 elections in which he has been a candidate for public office. He did not compete in 1970; he was in jail. (AP Laserphoto)

No Smokeout In North Carolina

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's state cancer division is the only one in the country not actively encouraging the American Cancer Society's program which asks smokers in communities across the nation to kick the habit Thursday — at least for a day.

Nor is the state division actively involved in the national society's campaign to cut smoking, control tobacco advertising and limit tar and nicotine content in cigarettes.

"The North Carolina division has not and does not endorse any action against or criticism of any product manufactured in North Carolina, or anywhere else for that matter," said G.E. McDowell, past president of the state cancer society.

The society set its positions on such campaigns in 1964 and the board has stuck to it, he said.

The president of the national society, Dr. Wayne Rundles, lives in Durham and is a professor of medicine at Duke Medical School.

The state stance distresses him, he said.

"The position in North Carolina has been one of caution," he said. "They favor the objectives but they kind of ignored the program. Our North Carolina division goofed on it."

Tobacco is the state's biggest agricultural product. The state's farmers harvested an estimated 834 million pounds of the leaf this year, bringing in more than $1 billion. More than 35,000 workers are employed by North Carolina's tobacco companies, which include giant R.J. Reynolds, Liggett & Meyers and American tobacco companies.

Even in Kentucky, which is second only to North Carolina in tobacco production — local cancer society units have been encouraged to promote the nosmoking day.

Only two local cancer units in North Carolina have ordered promotional material on the smokeout campaign, officials say. Both plan modest efforts.

Tax Collector Saved The Day

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A tax collector with a soft heart saved the wedding day for a Portland couple.

Bruce Lawson, supervisor of the county tax division, unlocked the Multnomah County Courthouse Saturday so the wedding of Tracey Snyder and Roy Moore could go off as planned.

The bride-to-be tried to pick up the license Friday, but found the doors locked — it was the Veterans Day holiday.

"She didn't even think about Friday being the Veterans Day holiday," said Moore. "I can't blame her though. With all the preparations, it just slipped her mind."

Moore's mother called Portland's morning newspaper, The Oregonian, after failing to reach county officials. A reporter found Lawson.

"I'd prefer that none of this gets in the newspapers," Lawson told the reporter. "We do this sometimes for people in emergency situations but we don't want to make a practice of it."

losing one election, in 1970, but it wasn't Mahalchik's fault. He was in jail and couldn't run.

He has lost races for the presidency and the Senate. On Tuesday, he lost his ninth election, running for the House. He got 1,135 votes out of 118,318 cast, but he is not dismayed.

"I am the alternative," Mahalchik orated. "Better to vote for me than for the pre-picked people the two-party system puts up. I am for the people. The royal blood of peasants — I mean royal — flows in my veins. I will bow to no tyrant."

If the name Mahalchik is unfamiliar, then you are a stranger to the stretch of Route 206 that passes "Mahalchik's Fabulous Fifty Acres" just north of Mount Holly.

His residence, a teepee, stands next to his white locomotive in front of his seven dirigible hulls alongside his fleet of rusting Army trucks near his airplane carcasses behind his billboard showing the faces of Richard Nixon and Henry Kissinger on the bodies of big red rats. Mahalchik is not one for understatement.

"I once had 141 signs out front," Mahalchik said. "Not many are left. They destroyed most of them when they burned down my house."

Mahalchik's signs tell some of the things he is against.

He is against the two-party system, of course, and the court system, and taxation. He is against politicians. "They are so crooked that when they die they should screw them into the ground."

He's rather down on communists. A sign recommends: "Drag 'em from their rat holes, hang 'em, stab 'em, burn 'em, bomb 'em, gas, choke, strangle, drown, shoot, but kill 'em all."

Has Mahalchik mellowed? Some think, at 60, he has. After all, he didn't bother to make a single speech during the campaign.

Then he got into a row with some people who wanted to buy up his Fabulous Fifty Acres and he wound up before a judge.

The judge asked if Mahalchik was contemptuous of his court. Mahalchik said damn right. The judge tossed him in the cooler. While languishing there, Mahalchik's house burned.

"Next thing they did was pull out some zoning law that said I couldn't rebuild my house or live in a trailer, a bus, anything I had. Is that America? Is that freedom?"

"I checked. The law didn't mention a teepee, so I live in a teepee. Not by choice. I'm not some kind of kook."

Mahalchik trades in horses now. A few chickens peck around the teepee and provide fresh eggs for sale.

Mainly, though, he remains Mahalchik, just Mahalchik, the name emblazoned on his teepee and on his fading signs. Mahalchik, one of the angriest of the angry men.

Does he have a full name? "Yes. Remember it. I am John Valjean Mahalchik. The royal blood of peasants..."

They Still Owe That 32 Cents

EAST PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — It was a case of the tax assessor's office going that extra step.

Robert and Mildred Sears owed 32 cents tax on their 1975 car. But instead of being dunned for the entire amount, they got a bill for the first of two 16-cent installments.

"I said they must be crazy," said Mrs. Sears, recalling her reaction when the bill arrived.

Mrs. Sears and her husband decided to withhold payment, hoping the city will add the 32 cents to next year's bill.

The second 16-cent installment is due in March.

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠Q8 ♥AQ6 ♦A93 ♠J10754

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♦ Pass 2 NT Pass

3 ♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—North surely has a six-card suit and an unbalanced hand. You have already described a balanced hand of 13-15 points, so rebidding three no trump simply repeats this message. Your lack of spades is sufficient support on this auction, so raise to four spades.

Q.2—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠KQJ2 ♥AK98 ♦KQ105

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—No matter what you do you cannot possibly express the power of this hand via a jump shift. Since slam depends almost solely on the number of aces partner holds, we would take the direct approach by jumping to four no trump. Depending on the number of aces partner shows, you should bid five, six or seven hearts.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠KJ ♥AKQJ72 ♦4 ♠AJ95

Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with three diamonds. What action do you take?

A.—Jump to four hearts. You don't need much from partner to make a game, and even if he has a hopeless hand for you, you shouldn't get hurt. Your solid trump holding makes it unlikely that you will be doubled. An overall of three hearts doesn't do your hand justice, and a double would leave you awkwardly placed if partner were to bid four spades.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠QJ6 ♥Q95 ♦K982 ♦1073

The bidding has proceeded:

West North East South

1 ♦ Dble. Pass 1 ♦

Pass 1 NT Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—Bid three no trumps. By first doubling and then rebidding one no trump, partner has shown a hand too strong for a one no trump overall, i.e., 19 points or better. Your 8 points give your side a combined holding of at least 27 points.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠7 ♥KQ87632 ♦K994 ♦6

Partner opens the bidding with two no trump. What do you bid now?

A.—Again, you are only interested in how many aces partner holds. However, you cannot ask for aces with four no trump—that would be a quantitative raise in no trump and not Blackwood. You must use the Gerber Convention. Jump to four clubs, and then bid an appropriate number of hearts depending on how many aces partner shows. If partner shows four aces and a king (you can check on kings by bidding five clubs), bid seven no trump so that you can get credit for honors.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠105 ♥Q983 ♦K82 ♦A1054

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♦ Pass 1 NT Pass

What action do you take?

A.—What started off as an indifferent hand has become very good in the light of partner's rebid. You have a maximum no trump response and a fine fit for partner's second suit. A raise to four hearts does not do your hand justice. You should first cue-bid four clubs. That can't get you into trouble—if partner raises clubs, thinking you have a long suit, you can always correct to hearts.

Q.7—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠KJ6 ♥KQ92 ♦AQ65 ♦83

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♥ Pass 1 NT Pass

What action do you take?

A.—The first thing to do is to determine whether your side has any chance for game. You have 15 points and partner has, at most, 9. Therefore, it's unlikely that any game is in the offing, so your only concern should be to play the best part score. With a balanced hand and no five-card suit, no trump should be as good a spot as any. Pass.

Q.8—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠J8762 ♥95 ♦KQ953 ♦7

The bidding has proceeded:

West North East South

1 ♥ Dble. Pass 1 ♦

Pass 1 NT Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—You know partner has a strong hand, but you don't want to play in no trump with your unbalanced hand unless partner insists. Since game possibilities exist, a mere rebid of two diamonds earns a demerit—you would do that with a distribution bust. Our vote goes to three diamonds. Partner won't expect much more from you since you bid only one spade at your first turn.

Brenda Lee Eyes Return To Stardom

By MARK SCHWED

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — It's not going to be easy for Brenda Lee to get her career rolling full-swing again even though she has sold 85 million records in her 31 years as an entertainer, but she's going to give it a shot.

Music publications labeled her as the "Most Programmed Female Vocalist" for five consecutive years during the early 60s and her hits are being played on contemporary, easy listening and country stations even now.

"Everybody thinks I'm 80," says the little redhead who has belted out such standards as "I'm Sorry," "Fool No. 1," and "All Alone Am I."

"I hate the people who say, 'Oh, are you making a comeback?' I guess I am in a certain sense, because there's a new audience out there that doesn't know Brenda Lee."

Although Miss Lee has not had a blockbuster hit in years, she says she's not hurting financially and not discouraged.

"As far as being on the road and being able to say where I wanted to play and to demand what money I wanted, I've never had any problem," she says. "I'm not working near as much as I did because I have a family and other priorities."

But everything is not as peachy as the Georgia-born country girl makes it out to be. For the first time in 22 years, Miss Lee is not under contract with a record label.

"It's just right now I'm not with one," Miss Lee says. "I'm not worried about it. It's just a big change for me and maybe that's good."

Miss Lee's hits made her one of the most well-known female vocalists in America 20 years ago, but now she may be more remembered overseas. She can sing in Japanese, French, Spanish, German and Italian and speaks several languages. Miss Lee says she owes much of her post-high school education to her travels.

"I did finish high school and took a year of correspondence in college, which means nothing," Miss Lee says. "I would have been a pediatric surgeon."

But instead of completing her college studies, Miss Lee chose singing as her life's work and used a lot of the money she earned to put her family through school.

"I haven't slacked off because I have a lot of people who depend on me. My younger

Recreate On Stage The Radio Classics Of Past

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The shows are radio classics of yesteryear, right down to sound effects and original commercials. They're even performed twice a night — the sister will graduate in December, then I'm done," she says in a light country twang. "I've sent my brother and sisters through college already."

Will Miss Lee ever retire? "It's awfully hard to set a date," she says. "I would hope that in five to 10 years I wouldn't work a lot."

"I'd like to go back to school," Miss Lee says. "If I did I'd probably take business administration because I'm so dumb where that's concerned. I read every day of ladies' husbands dying and they don't know where they are financially and I'd be one of those ladies."

He said about 75 folks usually attend each show, where they see actors emoting at three ancient RCA microphones when the equally ancient "On the Air" sign on the tiny stage lights up.

All the scripts are originals, transcribed from tapes of 5,000 network radio productions compiled over the years by Roger Rittner, director of the neveraired radio programs.

"We also try to do sound effects live, as close to the original as possible," D'Auria says. "Of course, it's a bit hard now to find sound effects props, so we build them as we need them."

To complete the re-creation, he adds, everyone on stage dresses in the fashions of the 1930s and 1940s when radio was king.

Ironically, the producer, a native of Scarsdale, N.Y., never heard the first-time broadcasts of the shows he now helps to bring back. He's only 26 and wasn't around when they were.

"But my wife thinks I'm a

But you'll never hear them broadcast.

It's the "Variety Arts Radio Theater," whose 10-member troupe this month began recreating on stage such goodies from network radio's heyday as "The Shadow," "Lights Out" and Ed Wynn's "Fire Chief."

It goes on here Tuesdays in the Tin Pan Alley Room of the non-profit Variety Arts Theater, an emporium founded last year by magician Milt Larsen to preserve the best of the past in variety entertainment.

"Some of the shows are pretty funny, but the old commercials get the biggest laughs," says Joey D'Auria, producer of and actor in the radio shows at the members-only theater.

"Did you know, for example, 'The Shadow' is brought to you by the Blue Coal Company, America's favorite an-thracite?"

New Chemical Said To Assist Timber Crops

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Forestry leaders say a new chemical on the horizon could be of great value to small woodland owners who want to improve their timber crop.

The chemical has shown the potential for controlling hardwood trees, which are undesirable in stands of pine trees without harming the pines.

The chemical is awaiting approval from the Environmental Protection Agency before it can be marketed. It is a member of the triazine family of herbicides, which have been regarded in the past as safe.

Extension forestry specialists at North Carolina State University and county agricultural extension agents are currently testing the chemical under an experimental label at 42 locations in 38 counties.

"Results so far indicate that this may be the tool that we have been looking for in helping small woodland owners to reforest and manage their land," said Rick Hamilton, forestry specialist in charge of the tests.

Hamilton said the chemical is effective, easy to apply and indications are that it will be inexpensive and environmentally safe.

Application is made in the form of "gridballs," which are pellets the size of mothballs. The gridballs are dropped at intervals of about six feet throughout the area in which undesirable hardwoods are growing.

The chemical penetrates the soil where it is taken up by the tree roots. Hardwoods succumb to the chemical because it interferes with their photosynthesis process. Pine escapes injury unless large amounts are used. About one pound of active ingredient per acre is sufficient.

North Carolina has about 7 million acres of privately owned woodland on which essentially no improved forestry practices are conducted, said Hamilton.

"The owners of this land cut the timber, and then forget about it until there is more timber to cut. As a result, private woodland owners get about half the returns per acre as the big pulp and paper companies.

"We feel that this is a big economic loss to the state," Hamilton continued, "especially in view of the fact that our wood fiber needs are expected to double over the next 25 years."

Research and experience have shown that pines are more profitable than hardwoods on 75 percent of the state's forestland. Yet, pines often have difficulty competing with hardwoods, and that's where the new chemical comes in.

01 PUBLIC NOTICES

STATEMENT OF THE RESULTS OF THE SPECIAL BOND REFERENDUM HELD IN THE CITY OF GREENVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA, ON NOVEMBER 7, 1978, UPON THE QUESTION OF APPROVING $1,000,000 PUBLIC WORKS FACILITIES BONDS.

At a special bond referendum held in the City of Greenville on November 7, 1978, 11,460 voters were registered and qualified to vote.

At said referendum 3,775 voters were cast for the order adopted on September 7, 1978, authorizing not exceeding $1,000,000 Public Works Facilities Bonds of the City of Greenville, North Carolina, for the purpose of providing funds, with any other available funds, for constructing a building to house the public works department of said City, including offices, an assembly hall, storage rooms, vehicular parking and repair bays, open parking bays for automobiles and equipment and open storage areas, and the acquisition of necessary land and rights of way, and authorizing the levy of taxes in an amount sufficient to pay the principal of and the interest on said bonds, and 2,384 votes were cast against said order, and a majority of the qualified voters of said City voted in favor of the approval of said order, said order was thereby approved and is in force and effect.

Any action or proceeding challenging the regularity or validity of this bond referendum must be begun within 30 days after November 13, 1978.
