First Report Indicates Others Also Hit By Gunfire

Congressman Shot In Guyana

GEORGETOWN, Guyana (UPI) — A California congressman on a mission to check reports that Americans are being held prisoner at a jungle religious commune was shot and perhaps killed along with some journalists and others in his party in a landing strip ambush, police said.

Georgetown police quoted police in Port Kaituma, about 150 miles northwest of the capital, as saying "about 20 people" were killed in the attack at the local airport near the commune run by the San Francisco-based People's Temple.

In Washington, the State Department said one of the two pilots involved said Rep. Leo Ryan, D.-Calif, some journalists accompanying him and other members of his party of about 25 had been hit by gunfire. But a State Department spokesman said he could not say whether any had been killed.

"We have an eyewitness report of Ryan being hit by gunfire and some members of an NBC crew and others being hit," the spokesman said.

"This report comes from the pilot of the second plane, which took off. The first plane was damaged so badly it couldn't take off. There's a further report that a member of the People's Temple, an American, in Georgetown, murdered her children and killed herself."

Ryan arrived Nov. 14 in the tiny South American country formerly known as British Guyana and went to the commune with a party of about 25 people, including several U.S. Embassy staffers, two personal aides and eight American journalists — several journalists, including a four-member NBC News camera crew.

Ryan was reportedly escorting some Americans from the religious settlement who had decided to return to the United States.

Suddenly one of the party pulled a pistol and opened fire as they boarded two light planes, the pilot said, the State Department said. Then a tractor-trailer pulled up near the planes and gunmen in the trailer opened fire.

The State Department quoted the pilot who flew away as saying that Ryan, "several" U.S. Embassy staffers, two of Ryan's personal aides and eight

Friday Still Opposes Program Mergers

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (UPI) — University of North Carolina President William C. Friday says he still opposes insitutional and program mergers to speed desegregation of the UNC system's 16 campuses.

"It has been my view, and I hold to it, that we should maintain all our institutions for the forseeable future simply because as of now North Carolina isn't educating enough of its college-age youth. We aren't even meeting the national norm," he said in an interview Friday.

The Department of Health Education and Welfare has ordered the system to investigate the feasibility of program mergers in geographically close institutions.

Friday said, however, he believes other approaches would be better to desegregate such schools.

Friday said intensive recruiting and counseling efforts to boost the number of minority students on any given campus would be one such approach. He said minority enrollment has increased 30 percent over last year at UNC-Chapel Hill and 40 percent over last year at North Carolina State University in Raleigh.

Another approach would be to establish new degree programs to attract students of all races to traditionally black schools, Friday said. He also mentioned increased scholarship assistance to minority students.

UNC officials are now conducting a study of duplicated programs in lhe unviersity system, scheduled to be presented to the Board of Governors planning committee Dec. 1.

Last May, HEW approved UNC's desegregation plan, but required as part of the agreement that the system submit a study of duplicated programs on campuses in the same geographic area.

The UNC study will cover degree programs in the Piedmont Triad (Winston-Salem State University, A&T State University in Greensboro, and UNC-Greensboro), and the Research Triangle (North Carolina Central in Durham, UNCChapel Hill and NCSU in Raleigh). The study will also look at engineering programs at NCSU, A&T, and UNC-Charlotte.

If the studies do not result in recommendations for large changes such as an institutional merger, HEW and the university may be heading for the courts again, sources say.

Will Not Force Refugees To Open Sea

PORT KLANG, Malaysia (AP) — Malaysian officials said Saturday they will not force a rusty freighter jammed with 2,500 Vietnamese refugees out to sea, and instead will allow the refugees to be taken to France, Canada and possibly the United States and other countries.

About 40 Malaysian security officers boarded the crowded freighter, which has been anchored for 10 days, to fingerprint and document the refugees, most of whom are ethnic Chinese who fled southern Vietnam.

ECU AFROTC Honors Dr. John D. Messick

The Air Force Reserve Officers Training Corps (AFROTC) unit at East Carolina University honored its founder, Dr. John D. Messick, on the 30th anniversary of the unit Saturday.

Dr. Messick, former president of East Carolina College, went to the Pentagon to obtain an AFROTC detachment in 1948. His original plans had been to get a Navy detachment, but one was not available at the time. In 1950 he was ordered by the Pentagon to close down the unit, but kept it going by working through political channels.

During the ceremony, held in front of Joyner Library on the ECU campus, current ECU professor of aerospace studies Lt. Col. Carl E. Tadlock, welcomed returning AFROTC alumni from 1950-54. Millie McGrath, Greenville City Councilwoman, representing Mayor Percy Cox, read a proclamation declaring the day Air Force ROTC Day. ECU Chancellor Thomas Brewer, Col. Tadlock and Dr. Messick were presented with copies of the proclamation. Dr. Messick was also presented with an AFROTC commendation medallion for his outstanding service to ROTC at ECU.

Marriage Tips From Old-Timers

By PETER J. BOYER
Associated Press Writer

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — If ever there has been a brain trust for happy marriage, this figured to be it — gathered in a bright recreation room of a senior citizens home were 50 couples, each celebrating 60 years or more of marriage.

With more than one in four marriages ending in divorce, one in three in California, this roomful of determined brides and grooms seemed promising; surely the key to matrimonial bliss lay in their collective experience.

Some of the wisdom collected at Friday's "60 Years of Wedded Bliss" party:

"Don't get along with your wife — fight a lot. Argue with one another all along." — Earl Broski, 86, married 65 years.

"Don't listen to him. You have to give and take, give and take...and sometimes turn a deaf ear." — Mrs. Earl Broski, 87, married 65 years.

"Understanding and hard work. Trouble with today's kids is, they have too much. There's nothing meaningful to work for. You have to work hard and, of course, give and take." — Mrs. Glenn Crawford, married 60 years.

"If we'd gotten married today, we'd never make it. You gotta have a lotta dough." — Glenn Crawford, married 60 years.

"Compatibility and having a good family. Couples should make sure they're compatible before they get married: You've got to be compatible." — Harry Davidorff, married 61 years.

"Give and take, give and take ... and it helps to send him off to war." — Mrs. Harry Davidorff, married 61 years.

And so, as a violin quartet played "The Anniversary Waltz," these 100 tenacious husbands and wives, gathered together by Holiday Villa East retirement home, drank champagne and ruminated over their 3,000 years of collective matrimony.

It was an amazing, heartening sight, living defiance of man's fabled inability to keep a promise.

"65 YEARS OF WEDDED BLISS — Earl Broski, 86, and his wife of 65 years, Mrs. Elsie Broski, 87, smile during a party attended by 50 couples, all of whom have been married 60 years or more, in Santa Monica, Calif., Friday. Mrs. Broski said that the key to their long lasting relationship was not listening to her husband. (AP Laserphoto)

Vows Peace And Order

By ROBIN STAFFORD

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Iran's soldier-premier, Gen. Gholam Reza Azhari, Saturday vowed to restore peace and order so that a successor government could hold free elections in a calm atmosphere.

Azhari, 61, respelendent in his bemedaled and gold braided full-dress uniform, introduced his government of generals and civilians to a special meeting of parliament before a forthcoming vote of confidence, possibly Monday.

Reports reaching the capital told of more killings and rioting on Friday, the Moslem sabbath.

Troops and anti-shah demonstrators clashed in the holy city of Mashad, northeast Iran, leaving three demonstrators dead and two wounded.

Casualty reports were still awaited from clashes in the west Iranian town of Hamedan and Kermanshah, the site of constant violence since October.

All elementary schools in Mashad, in Khorassan province, usually open on Saturday, remained shut for what a religious spokesman said was a two-week strike to protest the sabbath shootings.

Children up to age 12, however, went back to their classes in Tehran, which remained quiet.

Azhari, who took office only 12 days ago in a bid to halt the riots, told members of parliament, "The basic aim of this interim government is to re-establish peace and order so that the government that succeeds this one can work in a calm atmosphere towards holding free elections."

A spokesman for the nation's power generating personnel said Saturday that they planned to strike "between Sunday and Tuesday" in an attempt to halt state-controlled radio and television news broadcasts.

Newspapers have been on strike for two weeks and refused to resume publication after martial law officers reminded them editions could be seized and reporters

Eaton Contributes $26,471

Eaton Corp. here announced that a contribution of $26,471 has been made to the Pitt County United Way campaign for 1978.

Joe Tripp, United Way executive director, said that the Eaton gift pushes the county fund drive over the three-quarter mark in moving towards the overall campaign goal of $312,269.12

Eaton representatives reported that the 1978 contribution from the Greenville employees and the corporate donation represents a 24 percent increase over the 1977 pledge of $18,928.78.

The average gift for the 90 percent who participated in this year drive was $75.20, it was noted, an increase of 22 percent over last year's pledge.

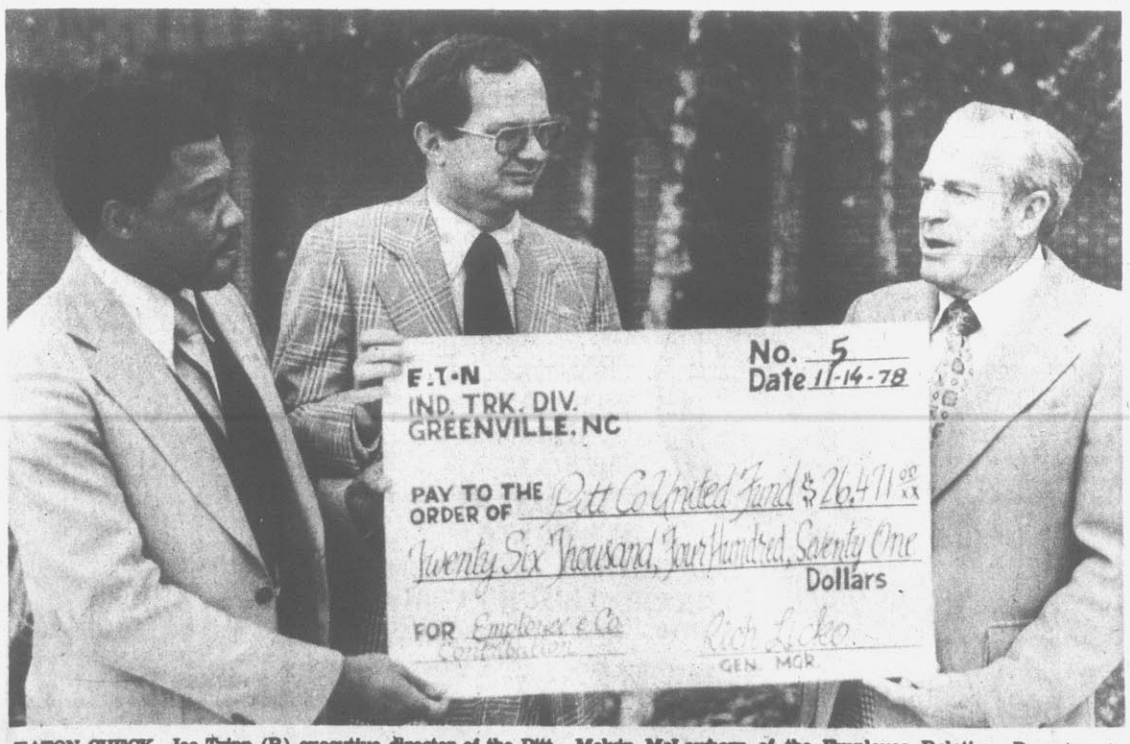

For the second year in succession, the second shift Assembly Department received a plaque from the company for 100 percent Fair Share participation.

Tom Wilbourne, senior industrial engineer at Eaton, served as the 1978 United Way chairman for the Greenville plant and was assisted by Melvin McLawhorn, a representative of the Employee Relations Department.

Wilbourne said the success of the Eaton campaign was a "direct result of the departmental solicitors who received pledges from their fellow employees."

The 1978 campaign, he added, included tours to ADAP, the Real Crisis Center, and the Boys' Club, three of the agencies served by the United Way. Wilbourne said that he used the United Way slogan to kick-off the Eaton campaign by advising all employees to remember, "Thanks to you it works...for all of us."

Rich Licko, local plant manager, expressed his appreciation to all of the employees who made the drive a success. He emphasized the fact that the 1978 pledge represented a 284 percent increase over the 1976 contribution resulting from the "continued growth of Eaton Corp. in the Greenville community."

Building permits totaling $2,423,503 were issued in Greenville during August, according to figures released by John C. Brooks, North Carolina Labor Commissioner.

Brooks said the Greenville total was part of an overall $65,014,590 in building permits issued during the month by 38 cities in the state of more than 10,000 population.

For the first eight months of the year, building permit totals in Greenville amounted to $29,220,902, the commissioner reported.

Brooks reported a total of 213 permits were issued for multi-family dwelling units in August, including 26 units in Greenville. Total cost of the 213 units authorized was $3,771,792.

Brooks noted that the overall state permit total for August was up 9.4 percent from the $59,445,593 reported for last August, but was down 25.5 percent from the July figure.

Permit totals for August and for the first eight months in several neighboring cities included: Elizabeth City, $335,600, $3,375,215; Goldsboro, $1,283,987, $7,671,715; Jacksonville, $511,876, $7,733,401; Kinston, $899,527, $6,150,652; New Bern, $485,273, $6,897,697; Roanoke Rapids, $594,738, $3,905,928; Rocky Mount, $968,865, $15,673,379; and Wilson, $2,443,152, $11,681,757.

Program Will Cost More

By KEITH MILLS
Reflector Staff Writer

Director Charles Horne of the Greenville Utilities Commission (GUC) said this past week that the proposed water, sewer and electric bond program, if adopted by the city council and approved by the voters, would in fact require an increase in water and sewer rates, but not electric rates.

In a recent article, Horne was paraphrased as saying that no rate increases are anticipated to accompany the bond issue which totals a proposed $24 million.

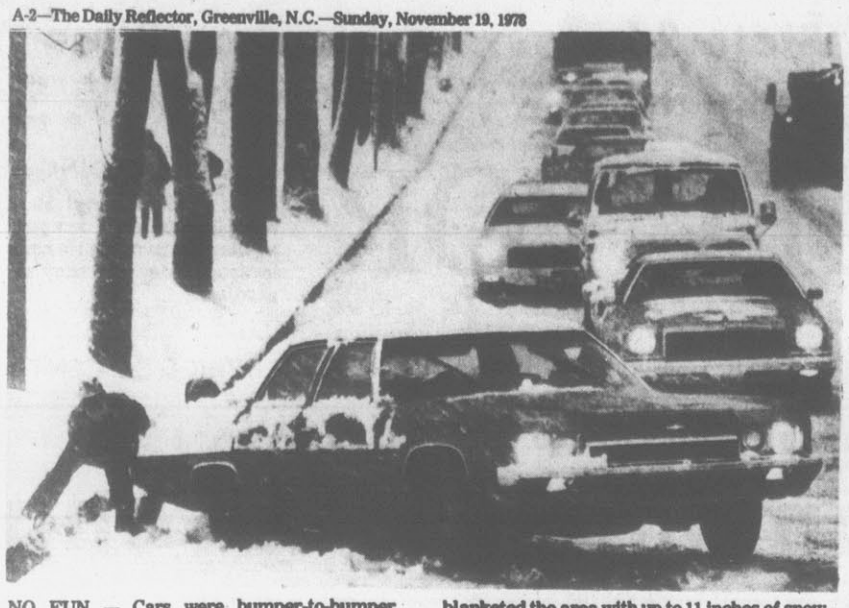

"I wish it were true," he said, "but we will have to increase sewer rates by an average of somewhere between $1 and $1.25 per month. The federal government tells us not only how to build a plant, but also how to charge for it."

The plant that the director referred to is a new sewerage treatment plant to be built on the north side of the river in accordance with the 201 Facilities Plan.

The largest increase would occur in water rates, most of which would be funded locally. "Water rates have to go up 20-30 per cent per 100 cubic feet, which would reflect a $2-$3 per month increase in customers' bills." GUC is proposing the construction of a new 12 million gallons per day water treatment plant.

No increase in electric rates would be necessary to complete work outlined in the proposed bond program.

The cost components of the $24 million program, which would be voted on separately, include: electric, $5 million; sewer, $5 million; and water, $14 million.

NO FUN — Cars were bumper-to-bumper behind the stuck car on St. Paul's Third Street Friday morning as a heavy snowstorm blanketed the area with up to 11 inches of snow. Rush-hour traffic slowed to a crawl. (AP Laserphoto)

Midwestern Snowstorm

A blinding snowstorm whistled across the upper Midwest Saturday, burying some communities under more than a foot of snow and causing scattered power blackouts.

The storm, the first of the season to turn its full fury on northern Wisconsin and upper Michigan, dumped 15 inches of snow in northeastern Wisconsin.

Savage winds downed power lines and knocked out electricity in much of Vilas County, in extreme northeastern Wisconsin near the Michigan border. Snow plows were kept off the roads by savage winds that whipped snow into blinding clouds.

Winds gusted to 50 mph across northern Wisconsin and Michigan's Upper Peninsula, piling snow into road-clogging drifts.

Wind-downed power lines left more than 150 customers without electricity in Michigan's Eaton County.

Nearly a foot of snow stacked up on portions of Michigan's Upper Peninsula Friday and Saturday.

Heavy rain fell to the south of the storm, making travel difficult.

Wet and slippery roads were blamed for one traffic death and numerous accidents in Michigan.

The heavy snow, which moved into the area Friday, cut visibility in the woods near Ironwood, Mich., where searchers had been looking for 76-year-old Bruno Maki, a deer hunter missing since Thursday night. But Maki was found alive and well Friday, truding through six inches of snow.

A gale warning was posted for eastern Lake Superior and storm warnings were in effect for Lake Huron and Lake Erie as the storm pushed eastward.

Strong winds, gusting to 45 mph, toppled an 80-foot high decorative wall at a new, $20 million convention center in Buffalo, N.Y., early Saturday. No injuries were reported. Authorities said the wall, a facade, was built of styrofoam and plasterboard.

Biting cold, intensified by strong wind and snow, settled over the Rockies, pushing temperatures well below the zero mark.

The mercury plunged to 8 below zero at Cut Bank, Mont., and to 5 below at Great Falls, Mont.

Venus Bound

By LLOYD G. CARTER

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (UPI) — Ground controllers guiding Pioneer Venus 2 toward Venus are prepared to release three more instrument probes tonight in a critical manuever leading to a Dec. 9 descent into the veiled planet's thick, hot blanket of gases.

The spacecraft's first instrument package, dubbed the sounder probe, was successfully cut loose Wednesday.

After Sunday night's operation, the United States will have six separate craft en route to Venus, counting the Pioneer Venus 1 spacecraft scheduled to swing into orbit around the planet on Dec. 4.

Pioneer Venus 1, launched May 20, will send daily reports on the atmosphere of Venus as well as pictures and radar maps of the surface topography and should operate for up to a year in orbit around Venus.

Pioneer Venus 2 was launched Aug. 7.

In addition, two Soviet spacecraft are heading toward Venus. They are scheduled to land gently on the planet later in December.

Scientists are monitoring the Pioneer mission's progress at the NASA installation in this San Francisco Peninsula community.

Project manager Gary Thorley said the Wednesday release "went just as expected. We're delighted and we hope to do as well tonight" when the three other probes, called the day, night and north probes, are launched.

Radio commands from the tracking station in Canberra, Australia, will release the final three probes 7 million miles and 20 days from Venus.

Mission controllers will know within 4½ minutes after the probes are released whether they are on course into the Venusian atmosphere. They are programmed to impact 6,000 miles apart after radioing back top to bottom atmospheric measurements.

The four probes, loaded with instruments to gather information on the mysterious weather patterns of Venus, will descend to the planet in different locations to study any possible variations in the atmospheric temperature, density, pressure and composition.

The probes have heat shields to help them withstand the 900 degree Fahrenheit heat of the atmosphere, its corrosive gases and "air" pressure 100 times as great as Earth's. They are not designed to survive impact but scientists say there is some possibility they may return data from the surface.

Pioneer Venus 2, called the transporter bus, will follow the probes into the atmosphere on Dec. 9

Ryan Shot ...

American journalists were hit in the attack.

The pilot said the first pistol shots apparently were a signal for attack by the group of armed men on the truck.

"It was very heavy firing. It damaged the plane. Everyboy scattered, they got the hell out of the area," the State Department spokesman said, still quoting reports from the pilot.

"While this happened, apparently one of the planes was still in good enough condition to fly. That plane managed to take off with five air crew members aboard and one passenger who never left the plane," he said.

Ryan was checking reports that some of the 1,100 Americans at the People's Temple were being kept in "a jail" in Jonestown, named after the self-styled Rev. Jim Jones of San Francisco.

Nine or 10 of the religious converts had decided to return with Ryan to Georgetown and then to the United States. The entire party of about 25 people was boarding the planes at the time of the attack.

Ryan said on Friday before departing for the jungle mission that the purpose of his trip was to determine "whether or not Jonestown is a jail" — a charge made by parents who say their children are not allowed to come and go as they please after they join the sect.

After first refusing to see Ryan and threatening to have police arrest him as a tresspasser if he dared enter Jonestown, the sect Thursday night relented and said he could visit.

A Family Suicide

By MASASHI KIRAMITSU

TOKYO (UPI) — A provincial lawmaker and his son, anguished over millions in business debts, strangled seven members of their family then set themselves on fire in a three-generation murder-suicide pact, police reported Saturday.

Police said they found the nine bodies in and around a rented microbus on a river bed in Shizuoka province, about 150 miles west of Tokyo. Seven females were strangled inside the bus, including the legislator's 6-year-old granddaughter.

The two men, Heikichi Ogihara and his son, Hiroshi, soaked themselves with gasoline and set themselves on fire.

Police said Ogihara, 56, an oil and rice dealer in Sano city in Tochigi province, apparently chose to die with his family after his business went bankrupt earlier this month with debts amounting to about $2.6 million.

They said the two men apparently gave the women and children sleeping pills, then strangled them to death inside the bus. Hiroshi, 31, and his father then locked the doors of the vehicle and killed themselves.

Ohigara mailed a note containing his will to the mayor of Yoshida, a town in Shizuoka province.

"I apologize for causing you trouble," the note read. "We nine, including my granddaughters, will kill ourselves because our business had failed."

Police said he enclosed $578 in cash to cover part of the cost of body "disposal," police said.

The letter said Ogihara's three daughters "asked to die with us, though I tried to persuade them to reconsider."

Ogihara and his family had been missing since they left their homes in Sano Thursday, police said.

The females found dead in the bus were identified as Heikichi's wife, Hiroshi's wife and daughter, Heikichi's elder married daughter and her eldest daughter and Heikichi's third and fourth daughters.

According to police investigation, Ogihara ran up much of his debt when he tried to enlarge his business in 1974.

He began as a rice dealer then expanded into gasoline with annual sales of $2 million in 1975.

Ogihara was elected to the Tochigi provincial assembly in 1975 after serving three consecutive terms as a deputy to the Sano Municipal Assembly since 1961.

arrested at any time.

Some 8,400 radio and television staff workers also have been on strike, but programs continued with a skeleton staff.

If the state broadcasting system is knocked out, Iran will be completely without any source of information except for foreign broadcasts.

Despite the riots and threatened new strikes, American oil experts said production in the vital oil fields Saturday reached 3.7 million barrels and was increasing.

Reynolds Grant For Nature Conservancy

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (UPI) — The Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation of Winston-Salem has given the North Carolina Nature Conservancy a $175,000 grant toward the preservation of Bluff Mountain and its development as a nature preserve.

The mountain, eight miles northwest of Jefferson in Ashe County, presents a rare opportunity for land conservation and environmental education, said a spokesman for the conservancy. The grant was the largest ever by the foundation to a private conservation group.

The 720-acre site, said conservancy director Tom Massengale, contains nearly 1,000 species of native plants, including some of the rarest wildflowers in southern Appalachia. Thirty-one of the flowers are classified as endangeared or threatened. One lichen species appears there and nowhere else on earth, conservancy officials said.

The conservancy said it is trying to raise $440,000 by the end of the year to buy the property and set up educational and stewardship programs.

Ecumenical Service Set

The annual Thanksgiving Ecumencial Service, sponsored by the Greenville Ministerial Association, will be held Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at St. Peter's Catholic Church, 2700 E. 4th St.

Each year the Thanksgiving Eve service moves to a different church of the community, according to Rev. J. Paul Byron, president of the Ministerial Association. This year, St. Peter's and St. Gabriel's combine as host churches.

Featured on the interfaith program will be the combined choirs of the two churches, as well as the Religious Folk Group. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. Ken Hammond, pastor of Cedar Grove Baptist Church and program director at Mendenhall Student Center on the East Carolina University campus.

An offering of letters will be presented, seeking legislation that will provide greater self-reliance for poor countries and their people. This is the goal of the Bread-For-The-World organization this year, for which half the offering taken at the Ecumenical Thanksgiving Service will be desingated. The other half will be used to start a local Fuel Fund for the needy during the coming winter.

Ministers of many of the local churches will take part in the service, and there will be refreshments served afterwards in the church hall. The public is invited.

November Proclaimed Epilepsy Month

November has been proclaimed as Epilepsy Month in Greenville by Mayor Percy Cox.

In his proclamation, Cox said that "the citizens of our state need to be informed of the plight of the two million Americans who suffer from epilepsy."

He asserted, "the person with epilepsy has the basic human right to be accepted in society without the added burden of discrimination in society, unfair employment practices, and superstitious and uninformed attitudes."

According to the mayor, "the educational program of the Epilepsy Association of North Carolina, in cooperation with the Epilepsy Foundation of America, seeks to increase the general understanding of the disorder, develop concern for those who must live with these problems, and eliminate the ignorance that has surrounded epilepsy for too many years."

Injured In Accident

Two persons were injured Friday when a truck collided with two cars east of Farmville.

According to Trooper W. A. Basnight, a truck driven by Linwood Gordy Cook, of Durham, was headed east on highway 264 when the vehicle started weaving across the highway.

The truck, according to the trooper ran off the right side of the road and crossed the center line and first struck a car driven by Debroah Warren Harris, of Greenville. The truck then collided with another vehicle, driven by Alanson G. Titterton, of Normal, Ill. Ms. Harris and Titterton were transported to Pitt Memorial Hospital where they were treated for minor injuries and released.

A passenger in the Harris vehicle was reportedly not injured.

Trooper Basnight said Cook was charged with driving under the influence and driving while his license was revoked.

Damage was placed at $1,500 to the Harris vehicle and a total loss to the Titterton 1978 model car.

Investigation into the 8:27 a.m. wreck is continuing.

Area Hearings Slated On U.S. 264 Improvements

U.S. 264 ALTERNATES ... will be discussed at hearings in Saratoga, Tuesday night, and at Greenville, Wednesday night. The four-lane project is set to begin at the N.C. 58 intersection just East of Wilson, and terminate either at the present U.S. 264 by-pass at Frog Level, near Greenville, or at a new location near Pitt Memorial Hospital. Alternates include adding two lanes to the present route (solid black line, designated 'B'), or relocating the highway on a new corridor (broken black lines, designated C,D,E,F,G,H,I and J). Alternate 'A' would be to take, "no action" on improving the Wilson-to-Greenville roadway.

The Department of Transportation will hold two public hearings on proposed improvements to U.S. 264 between Greenville and Wilson. The first is scheduled for Tuesday night at Saratoga, with the second scheduled Wednesday night at Greenville.

The Saratoga hearing will be held at the high school, while the Greenville hearing will be held at the Wellcome Middle School. Both sessions will begin at 7:30 p.m.

The U.S. 264 improvements call for a four-lane divided highway, either by dualizing the existing roadway, or constructing a highway in a new location.

The existing route is approximately 29.7 miles long. Alternates, which would relocate the highway along a new corridor, vary in length from 28 miles to 30.2 miles.

The proposed alternates — included in a draft environmental impact statement — will be explained at the hearings which will then be opened to questions, statements and comments.

Additional material may be submitted for a period of 10 days from the date of the hearing to George E. Wells, manager of Highway Design, N.C Department of Transportation, Division of Highways, P. O. Box 25201, Raleigh, N.C. 27611.

Aerial maps, showing the proposed alternates and copies of the draft environmental impact statement are available for review and copying at the DOT division office in Greenville, and at the Farmville Town Hall.

Copies of the draft environmental impact statement, which includes maps of the proposed alternates, are also available at the public libraries in Greenville and Farmville, and at the East Carolina University library's reserve book room.

As proposed, the four-laning of U.S. 264, whether accomplished by widening the present route or locating the four-lane road on a new corridor, will extend from the intersection of N.C. 58 East of Wilson, to connect with the present U.S. 264 by-pass at Frog Level near Greenville, or to a connection at a new location near Pitt Memorial Hospital.

The location of the U.S. 264 corridor will be chosen and the final environmental impact statement will be approved following the hearings.

Adding two lanes to the present roadway would mean driveway connections would be maintained and intersections would be maintained at-grade.

Two full-length new location alternatives would provide a high-type four-lane highway with grade separations at cross roads and allow access only at interchanges.

In addition to the two full-length new corridor alternatives, six combinations of portions of the new location proposals have been compared in the draft study to investigate other feasible full-length new location possibilities.

Right-of-way acquisition is scheduled to begin on the project in fiscal 1980-1981, while construction is set for fiscal 1982.

The 128-page draft statement includes 60 maps and/or aerial photographs outlining the various alternatives, and a half-dozen tables.

Cost estimates for the project range from $25.4 to $59 million.

Coastal Plain Development Awards Presented Thursday

Burroughs Wellcome Company, the village of Simpson, and the Pitt County Home Economics agency were among award winners named at the 16th annual meeting and awards banquet of the Coastal Plain Development Association held Thursday night at the Greenville Moose Lodge.

Cited for its achievements that strongly backs education, culture and charitable organizations, Burroughs Wellcome was one of 12 recipients of the association's Industry Recognition Award.

Other industrial award winners were: Tri-County Telephone Membership Corporation, Belhaven; National Spinning Co., Washington; Blue Bell, Inc., Windsor; Phoenix Trimming Co., and Anaconda Wire and Cable Co., both Tarboro; Hoerner Waldorf Div. of Champion International, Roanoke Rapids; Parker Brothers, Ahoskie; Carolina Aluminum Co., Winton; Weyerhaeuser Co., Plymouth; Whitley Lumber Co., Williamston; and Georgia Pacific Co., Conway.

In the community award categories, the village of Simpson took second place in the rural-large division of community development. White Oak in Wilson County won first award in this division, and Barnabas in Martin County placed third.

Other community awards went to: Small towns and villages — first place, Greenwood Heights, Edgecombe County, and second place, Belhaven, Beaufort County.

— Rural-Small communities: Swift Creek, Nash County, and second place, Dunbar, Edgecombe County.

Award winners in anti-litter and beautification are: Village-small town category, Lucama, Wilson County, first place; and Belhaven, second place.

Rural-small category: New Hope, Wilson County, first place; Leggett, Edgecombe County, second place; and Dunbar, Edgecombe County, third place.

Rural-large category: Only one winning place was awarded, to Old Sparta in Edgecombe County.

The Publicity Committee of the Pitt County Home Economics agency received an award for the publication of a booklet, "Welcome To Pitt County." The booklet, given to people in the Coastal Plain Development Association, is designed to familiarize people with the ten-county area.

The Home Economics Award given to the Clothing Committee of the Nash County Home Economics agency was for their work is providing clothes to patients at Cherry Hospital.

In his brief remarks, guest speaker Dr. Thomas Brewer, Chancellor of East Carolina University, noted that more than 3,000 of the students at ECU come from the 10 counties represented in the association.

Citing the association's effort for community involvement and achievement, Dr. Brewer commented, "When good people want a better community, they can get it."

Outgoing president Lloyd Tippett presided at the meeting, and Mrs. Sylvia Wheless, chairman of the Community Development Division, made presentation of community awards. Industrial Relations Awards were presented by Jim McBrayer.

Projects Sharp Drop In New Black Teachers

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A state study that projects a sharp drop in the number of new black teachers if tougher certification standards go into effect has drawn mixed reaction from members of a state Board of Education advisory committee.

The committee tentatively has approved a proposal to gradually increase the minimum scores college graduates must make on the National Teachers Exam to earn a North Carolina certificate to teach.

But two of the eight committee members said in interviews that they will oppose the increase because of the potential adverse effects of proposed higher scores.

A state Department of Public Instruction study released last week showed that only 23 percent of the blacks who took the NTE between 1974 and 1978 would have scored high enough to meet the proposed higher cut-off point that would go into effect in 1982.

By contrast, 80 percent of the whites tested in the same period would have scored high enough to pass.

Committee member Norman C. Johnson, chairman of North Carolina Central University School of Education in Durham, said he could not support higher NTE scores.

He said that the proposed higher scores were based on an invalid study of how much college graduates learn and retain.

Committee member Jeannie Lucas, Durham City School System director, said, "I couldn't go on record supporting anything that would hurt minorities that much."

Lucy Ellen Gwyn, with the North Carolina Association of Educators, a committee member, said the projected 23 percent black success rate with the higher scores came as "a shock." But she reserved judgment on how she would vote on the proposed plan.

State law currently requires teachers to score 950 out of a possible 1,800 points to pass the two-part exam.

Another Victim

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An unidentified man has been found stabbed to death in the Skid Row area of Los Angeles, but police say they are uncertain whether he is the ninth victim of the so-called "Skid Row Stabber."

Mickey Mouse Now 50

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mickey Mouse was 50 years old Saturday.

Walt Disney, Mickey is returning to New York, where he made his debut.

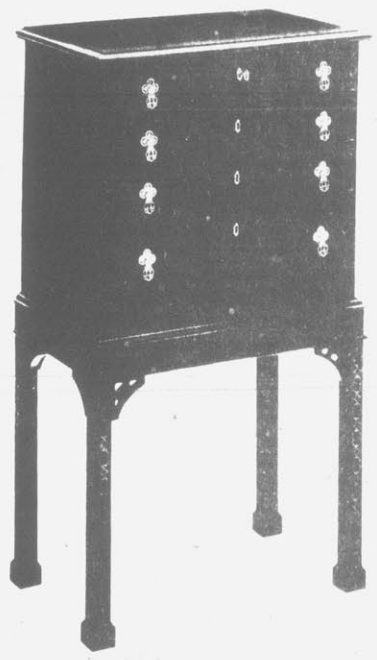

It was 50 years ago that Mickey made his film debut in the cartoon "Steamboat Willie" at the Colony Theater in New York. In the years that followed, he became the world's most famous mouse and figurehead of an entertainment empire built by Disney.

In honor of the anniversary, Disney officials sent the "Mickey Mouse Special" railroad train on a cross-country trip. The train stopped in Washington Friday and Mickey was honored at a White House party.

Pleased By Highway Intersect

Over in Rocky Mount leaders who are interested industrial development are justly pleased with the fact that two interstate-standard highways will intersect just west of their city.

I-95, which is currently being completed, furnishes a north-south super highway and U. S. 64 construction is progressing toward Rocky Mount. The highway will be fully controlled access with no grade crossings.

Leaders in Rocky Mount are citing the potential of this superior highway situation and they are looking at the possibilities that the north-south and east-west super highways could create a developmental situation similar to the Research Triangle Park in the Piedmont.

We can see the possibilities and we are all for Rocky Mount reaping industrial development from their superior highway situation. Something similar can be forseen at Wilson where I-95 intersects U. S. 264, which has also been upgraded to interstate standards — up to Wilson.

Both these cities and their counties can receive huge benefits from this far sighted highway planning, and that is excellent. What helps their areas should be a help to other counties and cities in the eastern area.

That brings us the the U. S. 264 situation for which planning is now underway to the east of Wilson. There are several plans on the board including one which would utilize the present right-of-way with only the addition of another paved lane. It is clear that such a design wouldn't benefit anybody much in the Pitt County area.

If we are to have the kind of highway that we need then the logical step should be taken to extend U. S. 264 as fully controlled access from Wilson on into Pitt County and to the Greenville area.

Everything about good highway planning calls for such a highway through Pitt County. If we here in Pitt County allow ourselves to be squeezed out in the fight for an adequate east-west highway, we will deserve the stifling of economic development which is certain to follow.

Hopefully, Bigger Each Passing Year

The First Annual Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival and Tobacco Farmers Show concluded last week, and from all indications the event was successful.

Those who planned, sponsored and participated in the event deserve much credit for making it informational and at the same time, enjoyable.

We hope it will stay around and become a bigger and better festival every year.

THIS AFTERNOON

A Nat'l Shopping Center

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — If you wear it, sit on it, smoke it, use it to make cloth, or build it with brick ... chances are it was made in North Carolina.

Those old jokes about Tobacco Road are finished. Now it's "Main Street, USA" as North Carolina continues to gain national prominence for her workmanship in producing consumer goods.

The furniture market — a 150-mile shopping center across the central Piedmont — is a dazzling illustration. Business is now booming beyond $2.1 billion per year and worldwide buyers scour the factory showrooms for goods.

North Carolina leads the nation in textiles ($10 billion); tobacco products ($4 billion); chemicals ($3 billion); and furniture. We are also first in textile machinery and clay brick products.

All that is not to say the farm is dwindling in importance. The state ranks fourth in the nation in numbers of farms, and leads in tobacco production.

Much of the goods grown or made here are shipped overseas. Nearly a billion dollars in agricultural goods are exported each year, and shipments of manufactured products are beyond the $26 billion point.

Here We Come

That survey of business executives nationally, asking them where they would expand or build new facilities continues to spotlight North Carolina.

This year, Nation's Business magazine found this state still Number One in the Southeast; second only to California as the most desirable location anywhere in the nation.

This has prompted state officials at the Department of Commerce to push into high gear a selling campaign capitalizing on this attraction.

A two-page spread in the Wall Street Journal catches the eye with a banner headline reading: "Californa ... Here We Come."

Who Benefits

Many governmental programs are launched for the benefit of those who can't help themselves. They develop into bureaucracies serving the people who run them and make a living from the enterprise, serving less the individuals who initially prompted the establishment than those who operate it.

Thus, a recent comment by Tony Mulvihill, executive director of United Health Services of North Carolina, has wider impact than just the alcoholic treatment program to which he refers when he says:

"The publicly funded treatment system is often described as a game played between the clients and the public, including of course our frustrated people on the interior line.

"As we understand it, the clients generally get what they ostensibly want — attention to their physical pain, food, shelter, respite from their grim world, and sometimes clothing, money, and other worldly goods.

"Their reciprocation is in the form of what the system needs.

"They become not sober, but a number on a computer, thus doing their share to justify a $22 million system."

It makes you wonder how many mentally ill, retarded, handicapped, poverty stricken or otherwise needy people are numbers on a computer helping justify ever bigger budgets and larger staffs in local, state and federal agencies.

Sunday Morning Notes

The November meeting of the City Council on Thursday, Nov. 9, was sort of historic.

It moved Mayor Percy Cox to comment, "We've had a lot of dedicated council members, but we have one tonight who goes beyond the call of duty."

He was referring to Council member Judy Greene who was present for the November meeting, as she had been for the regular October meeting.

That in itself wasn't so unusual. What made it an occasion was the fact that Mrs. Greene had given birth to a baby boy, Joseph Walston, in the intervening time between council meetings.

In fact, the baby was born on Nov. 4, just five days before the November council session.

Council member Greene made it to the meeting, regardless — and so did the new baby who was held by Mrs. Greene's husband, Bruce, for a short stay at the session.

It was the second child for the Greenes.

We said the occasion was historic — and it was. As far as anybody can remember, this was the first time that a member of the City Council has given birth to a child. Maybe young Joseph Walston should be made an honorary member of the City Council.

———

People react in two ways to petitions. Either they are highly suspicious and won't sign anything; or they are very receptive and will sign virtually anything that is put in front of them.

There's one petition that just about everybody is showing a willingness to sign. It's the one protesting increasing utility rates as a part of "Operation Overcharge."

The petition drive is being sponsored locally by the Area Chamber of Commerce and it is reported that the number of signatures is far exceeding original goals.

In this time of high energy costs, concern is something that everyone who pays a light bill shares.

As we said, most everyone is willing to sign. This particular project is to protest Virginia Electric and Power Co. rates, and that utility serves northeastern North Carolina down to and including Greenville.

But Barbara Wood of the Chamber office reports in scanning the petitions she found one signee who listed a home address of Charlotte.

Now for protesting Vepco's rates, that is pulling power.

Design Is Now Hailed

By EDITH M. LEDERER

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — The ill-starred American architect who designed Australia's capital city and was vilified in Parliament as a "Yankee bounder" died 41 years ago without seeing his visionary plan turned into one of the largest and most modern planned cities in the world.

Walter Burley Griffin wasn't even invited to the official opening of Canxerra in 1927, and he remained almost forgotten. But in the past decade he has become a kind of folk hero commemorated in a lake, a stamp, a motel, a travel agency and several restaurants.

Two other American architects — Robert T. Crane III and H. Mather Lippincott Jr. of Philadelphia — have won a competition for a Griffin memorial on Mount Ainsley, where his design can be viewed from the highest point in Canberra.

When 35-year-old Griffin won an international competition in 1913 to plan the new Australian capital, Canberra was sheep grazing country which boasted a family church, a few pioneers and no trees.

Today, more than 200,000 residents drive around concentric circles and radiating roads reminiscent of Washington, past spacious landscaped parks and across man-made Lake Burley Griffin, which the architect had designed as the centerpiece of the city but which wasn't built until 25 years after his death.

Canberra is one of Australia's top tourist attractions and there are many jokes about the visitor who got lost on one of Griffin's circular drives and still hasn't found his way out of town. As poet Les A. Murray wrote, the circles are there to test "whether he shall go home, or settle."

Griffin was born in Maywood, Ill. In 1876, he graduated from the University of Illinois, and he

The Hair Affair

(Greensboro Daily News)

Within the administration committee of the House of Representatives there is a subcommittee on services. It is an unsung group, long-suffering and hard-working. But let the record show that these diligent congressmen deserve better.

While other representatives clamor for glory while debating the budget or the national defense, the services subcommittee men are hard at work keeping an eye on the pencil tray and counting the razors in the House barber shop.

Indeed, the House Beauty Shoppe is the arena of their finest hour, an enterprise for which the subcommittee has demonstrated admirable concern lately. Hence the following letter to House employees from subcommittee chairman Ed Jones, D-Tenn.

"I am happy to report the success of the first month of 'specials' offered by the House Beauty Shoppe (in August). The subcommittee on services maintains oversight of this operation and in conjunction with the management of the Shoppe will offer another month of price reductions in September."

For those of you who view the inner workings of the federal government as an unending set of variations on the color gray, continue reading and see your illusion shattered.

As his letter goes on to say, Rep. Jones was announcing Disco Days in the House Beauty Shoppe for the month of September. Yes, Mr. Travolta Goes to Washington. Disco Dolls and Disco Dudes, as the representative's letter dubs the denizens of Capitol Hill, were officially enticed with discount Disco Perms, Disco Shampoos and Disco Color Highlights.

And for all those who bought Disco manicures or pedicures, there was a free Disco Decal for a fingernail!

What a relief to know that even as the republic withers under the apathetic stare of the citizenry, our lawmakers are taking care to stoke a boogie beat on Capitol Hill. And who knows, perhaps Disco Democracy is what we've needed all along.

THE INSIDE REPORT

The Cuba-Based MIG-23

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union is surreptitiously arming Cuba with MIG-23 aircraft of the type now deployed in Europe for nuclear attack against NATO, a development casting a long shadow on President Carter's hope for Senate ratification next year of a strategic arms limitation (SALT) treaty.

In a top-secret memorandum informing President Carter of this on Oct. 23, Defense Secretary Harold Brown specifically raised ing Cuba with the high performance MIG-23 violates the "understandings" between President Kennedy and the Kremlin that ended the Cuba missile crisis in October 1962. Those understandings forced Moscow to remove ballistic missiles and other nuclear-armed weapons from Cuba, including the Badger bomber.

According to U.S. intelligence findings on which Brown based his memorandum to the president, the Cuba-based MIG-23 has the configuration of the nuclear-attack aircraft that comprises the Warsaw Pact's most advanced nuclear-delivery tactical strike force.

There was no suggestion in Brown's memorandum to Carter that the Cuba-based MIG-23s — believed now to number some 12 to 15 aircraft — have actually been fitted or "wired," in the technical phrase, for carrying a nuclear payload. What can be said is that the MIG-23 now in Cuba appears to be the same Model D or F long observed in the Warsaw's Pact's nuclear-delivery training exercises: an attack, not an air-defense, aircraft.

Top Carter administration officials, not concealing their shock at discovering the MIG-23 with its one-way 1,200-mile range based 90 miles off the Florida coast, are now hotly debating what to do and say about it. As Brown warned Carter in his memo, the totally unexpected Soviet move presents the president with a problem of "high political sensitivity."

To make the fact public poses this unpleasant choice: demand that Moscow immediately remove all MIG-23s, as the U.S. successfully demanded of the Soviet missiles and Badger bombers in 1962 when the strategic balance was overwhelmingly in Washington's favor; or try to explain it away as a mere upgrading or modernization of Cuba's air force, whose MIG-21s are now largely in the service of Cuba's African adventures.

If Carter chose the first option odds are prohibitive that Moscow would tell him to go jump in the lake, diplomatically or not, and probably make it stick. That

RELIGION FOR EXPORT

A pastor holding a communicants' class for boys and girls who wished to join the church once asked the question, "What are the duties of church membership?"

One of the girls raised her hand and said, "We should attend church regularly and make an effort to export its influence." This was not a complete answer to the question, of course, but it was certainly true as far as it went.

The United States has been doing a lot of exporting during its history. It has sent goods all over the world. American inventions have brought light to multitudes of human beings who sat in darkness. Missionaries have carried education, medical aid, and the gospel of Christ to countries where only ignorance and cruelty reigned before.

But we should never forget that the greatest export the United States or any other nation can make is the gospel of Christ, the moral character of its people, and the benefits which arise from these great realities.

Rates Cut By Major Insurers

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Some prices are coming down. Major insurers have already lowered their rates on individual life policies, and more cuts are likely by the first of the year.

Officials say the decline in premium rates reflects at least three factors:

—The increased return on company investments, particularly the yield on fixed-income securities.

—Greater efficiencies, particularly through use of electronic computers.

—Lower than anticipated death rates that might be attributed to medical progress, better personal health habits and safer driving.

An industry study of 90 companies shows that the average price of policies already has dropped from $15.60 in 1975 to $15.10 in 1976 and $14.30 in 1977. A sharper decline may have occurred over the past year.

Among the largest insurers, New England Mutual and John Hancock already have cut premium rates, and New England Mutual plans another cut Jan. 1. Metropolitan is "seriously looking into" the possibility.

Even if their own underwriting experience fails to warrant reductions, other companies miht for competitive reasons be forced into line with the lower rates, an industry source suggested.

The better mortality rates — or less than anticipated death rates — are most pronounced in the 30-year to 60-year age bracket, said Walter Bussewitz of the Washington-based National Council of Life Insurance.

He said the trend has been observed for 25 years or so, and that it has compelled the Society of Actuaries to embark on the production of new actuarial tables, a task he said takes considerable time.

In the interim, he said, some companies have decided to go ahead with lower premium charges, or in some instances improved dividends, based on their own rather than general actuarial experiences.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Statistical Bulletin shows the average longevity of the residential population reached a record high of 73 years in 1977, with both sexes sharing in the improvement.

The investment return for insurers has also been better than expected, one of the rare positive consequences of inflated interest rates. While moderation is expected, levels could remain relatively high.

How far the three trends — internal efficiencies, better mortality experience and high interest — continue is not totally guesswork. The investment returns to companies, for example, can be almost guaranteed.

But, as a spokesman for John Hancock observes, you can't expect medical advances to prolong life indefinitely.

Which is to say, unfortunately, that improvement in the allimportant mortality table isn't guaranteed.

To the Editor:

This is to correct the misinformation concerning the National Women's Conference in last Sunday's letter by Mary N. Pegg of Winston-Salem. The letter from Alic Wynne Gatsis of Rocky Mount is answered separately.

Five million dollars, less than five cents for each female person in the nation, was appropriated for the Conference, not five hundred million.

The National Plan of Action was not pre-packaged. Recommendations were made at each of the state meetings and incorporated with the fourteen recommendations presented in the publication "To Form a More Perfect Union". Each one was discussed, many in heated debate, changes were proposed, many based on action taken at separate caucauses, and each of the 26 planks was adopted only after a majority vote.

Mrs. Pegg does not document her figures concerning the delegates but, assuming they are correct, they show a favorable trend. If 23 percent of the delegates had annual incomes of less than $7,000, that is remarkable. Usually, people from this group have jobs that preclude their being able to take time off. Often they are unable to delegate home responsibilities so they can become involved in volunteer activities.

The 14 percent from the higher income bracket was not disproportionate. They too, should have been represented.

The most significant trend indicated by Mrs. Pegg's statistics is that the majority of the delegates was from the broad middle group which bears the most oppressive tax burden and which is most concerned to have tax money equitably distributed.

We congratulate Mrs. Pegg on her recent election to the North Carolina House of Representatives, one of three Republican women to win seats. We hope she appreciates those women and men who fought for her equal right to vote and hold office.

Tennala A. Gross

To the Editor:

Pitt County Association of Classroom Teachers members will be celebrating American Education Week, November 12-18 in varying ways in each school. In addition, we wish to congratulate Pitt Countians on having three very fine assets in the county schools. One is a body of children who are becoming increasingly mature and responsible students. They are becoming more concerned for their own educations, more conscientous in their work and more sensitive to the needs of their families. Another is a cadre of very fine personnel in the twenty schools carrying on the work of educating children. Last year's test results indicate that teachers are doing well to maintain near-average scores despite adverse conditions. Third, there are many excellent educational programs in the schools: the parent volunteer program, the summer library program, screening of students so as to better meet their needs, planning time (in some schools) which teachers use to plan, review and evaluate their curriculum, methods and techniques of teaching. These are in addition to the basic subject areas of curriculum — "the three R's".

The Association believes that Pitt Countians are concerned that the schools continually upgrade the quality of education provided. The Association members share that concern.

Safire's New Lexicon Is Labor Of Pure Love

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Half the fun of writing, as every writer knows, lies in the little excursions and sidetrips that a writer takes through the language. We go picknicking on idioms and we snack on colloquial phrases. And now, this Christmas, we have a whole new smorgasbord spread before us: a third edition of Safire.

Those who live the political game were delighted ten years ago when William Safire brought forth "The New Language of Politics." It was a splendid collection of words and phrases drawn from our political experience, and it provided a scholarly — and sometimes mock scholarly — account of how we got to the jargon beloved by politicians and pundits alike. A second edition followed in 1972, and this week Random House gives us Safire III.

The lexicon now runs to 450 words covering 1,600 terms. It is a labor of pure love. As Safire himself notes, he himself has progressed since the first edition from "flack" to "ghost" to "thumbsucker", which is to say, he began his career as a public relations man, became a speechwriter under President Nixon, and now bedevils the liberal establishment as a conservative columnist for The New York Times.

Safire follows in a great tradition. Like such essayists as Samuel Johnson, Ambrose Bierce and H.L. Mencken, he is enchanted by language. He makes no pretensions, of course, to the kind of serious scholarship that Johnson brought to his monumental dictionary or Mencken brought to "The American Language". Safire's touch is lighter; his purpose is equally to instruct and to amuse. His work is definitive; it is also fun.

In an introduction to the new edition, Safire speaks admiringly of the Watergate era as a Golden Age of Political Coinage. In a period of only two years, our political language was enriched by: big enchilada, enemies list, hardball, plumbers, Saturday night massacre, smoking gun and stonewalling. Watergate gave us the unforgettable image of someone left "twisting slowly, slowly in the wind."

After that point in time the doldroms set in. Jerry Ford left behind nothing but a WIN button. Mr. Carter's principal contribution, thus far, is the "three-martini lunch" as a symbol for tax reform, and Mr. Carter actually hooked that one from George McGovern. The Carter administration also has given us a political usage for "born again", spinning off "Bourne again" when the White House doctor got in trouble. Safire's impression probably is accurate, that Mr. Carter "seems not to be trying" to coin catchwords in the way that Roosevelt gave us the New Deal and John Kennedy the New Frontier.

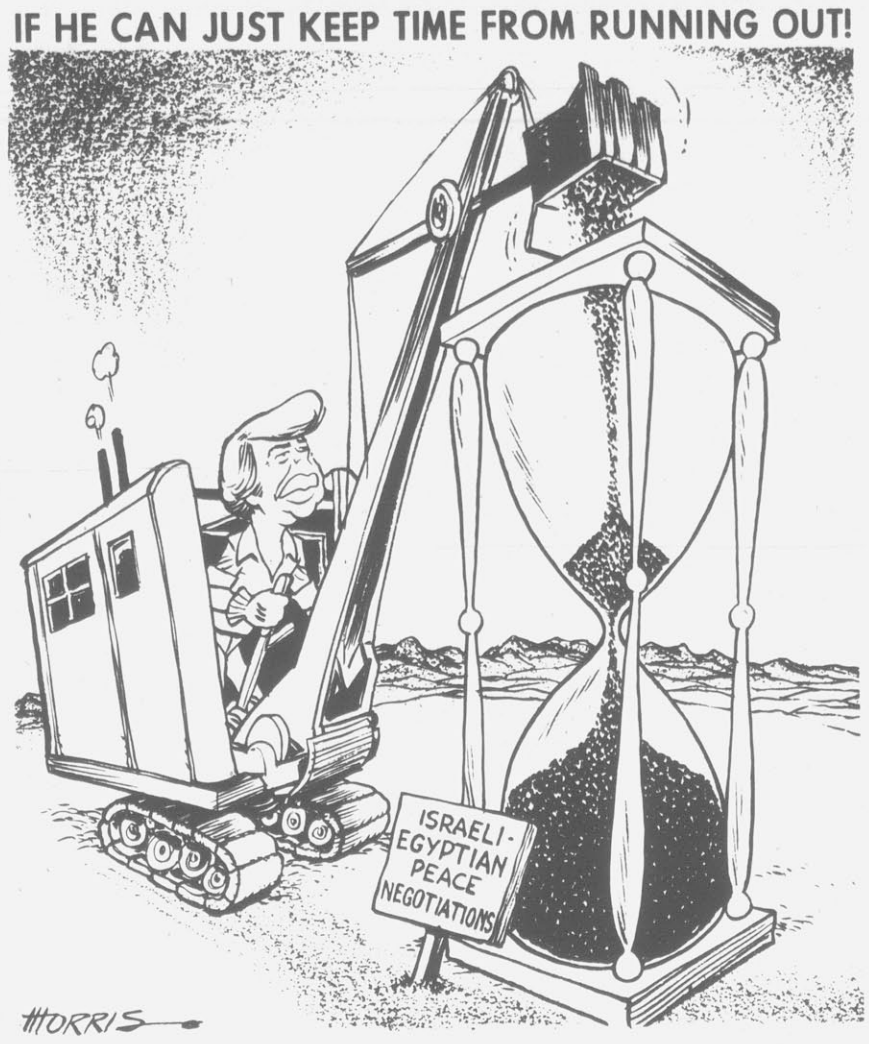

A question constantly asked of a pundit on the lecture trail is, What do you mean by "conservative"? Safire III provides the best brief definition I have found. A conservative is "a defender of the status quo who, when change becomes necessary in tested institutions or practices, prefers that it come slowly, and in moderation." A contemporary liberal, by contrast, is "one who believes in more government action to meet individual needs." The wickedest definition, of course, came from Heywood Broun: "A liberal is a man who leaves the room when a fight begins."

Safire has rewritten large chunks of his second edition and has corrected some minor errors. The "little ladies in tennis shoes" of Safire II are now properly the little old ladies in tennis shoes. The rock-ribbed "troglodyte" has found a place on the lunatic fringe. The political litmus test has taken on new colorations in the Panama Canal and Humphrey-Hawkins.

In the fashion of every editor and lexicographer, Safire has made some magisterial decisions. His dictionary offers nothing on "Deep Throat". He gives no entry at all to my own political party, the Whig Party. Safire has ruthlessly discarded one of his own formations, presumably on the grounds that "blowsoft" has not demonstrably caught on. It is a splended word, and deserves a place.

In some future edition, perhaps he will consider a marvelous back-formation devised 25 years ago by Wilbur Griggs, a venerable court clerk in Richmond, Va. Scoffing at a political opponent, the old gentleman sneered that nobody was for him except the newspapers "and a few disgrunts." It is a great noun. You'll find a thousand of them in Safire III.

Hybrid Wild Rice Study Excites Biologist

By GAIL MICHAELS

SAN MARCOS, Tex. — Dr. Bill Emery, professor of biology at Southwest Texas State University, San Marcos, is working on a research project that is as exciting to him as participating in the Olympics would be to an athlete. He breeds wild rice, hoping that one day a selection from his hybrids will help feed the world's increasing population.

Emery is especially interested in Texas wild rice, called by scientist Zizania texana. It is a plant with exceptionally high nutritional value, he says. Its protein-building amino acids make it 10 times as nutritious as corn, twice as good as the best wheat, and better than any other variety of wild rice, he explains.

The only place that this rice grew when Emery entered the picture was the spring-fed San Marcos River. When he moved to San Marcos River. When he moved to San Marcos in 1957, he began to observe the rice, which looks somewhat like Johnson grass growing underwater.

During the next 10 years, the population of wild rice declined rapidly. In 1967, Emery wrote an article warning his fellow scientist that rice was in danger of becoming extinct. He listed threats by pollution, river plowing, plant collecting, and vegetation cutting.

Later, when the rice covered less than a quarter-acre in the river, he discovered another problem. Nutria, 10 to 25-pound rodents which had been put into the river to eat water hyacinths and keep the stream clear of other vegation, were feasting on Zizania texana.

One of Emery's colleagues remembers the cry of anguish that went up when Emery, who was watching the river to see what was happening to the rice, saw a mother nutria and her brood swimming through the area.

Afraid that some catastrophic event—like oil being dumped into the river — might wipe the rice out entirely, Emery increased his efforts to get the rice to grow outside its native habitat. In 1970, he succeeded in relocating some plants at the university aquatic station, which has a constant-temperature artesian well. In 1974, he found an even better place at a sluiceway near the station.

He noticed changes in the plant's growing habits. In the river, the rice was always submerged and remained vegatation. In the new sites, it grew above water, flowered, and produced seeds.

Seeds put Emery in a better position to experiment because he could raise his own plants. His next move was to see if he could get the rice to grow in spring-fed sites in other parts of Texas. He has been partially successful at New Braunfels, Del Rio, and Saledo.

With Texas wild rice temporarily safe from extinction, Emery is working with other scientists on crossing it with other species. Besides being highly nutritional, the Texas species is perennial, and it is resistant to disease.

Other species have their strong points. For example, Northern wild rice, which grows in Canada, Minnesota and Wisconsin, is non-shattering and can be harvested by combine. It also germinates at 33 degrees and has a growing season of 30 days or slightly longer.

According to Emery, this means that the tundra in Alaska, Canada and other places may some day produce nutritious food for people who otherwise might go hungry. Already, he points out, wild rice grows in places not hospitable to corn, wheat, and other crops—for example, streams, marshes, swamps, and along coastal bays.

He has been doing his research with little publicity. His students find it exciting, he says, and so do the organizations he talks to about wild rice. He has been supported in this project by Southwest Texas State University. But other state and federal agencies that he has approached for support have not given financial backing.

Emery believes that when the need for food becomes a crisis, the interest of these agencies may change. He points out that, "We spend vast amounts of money to save the endangered whooping crane, which we'll never eat, but not a cent on the endangered Texas wild rice, which could become the salvation of countless thousands of undernourished and starving people.

"It's a challenge like climbing the highest mountain...or winning an Olympic medal," he says. "We all want to leave a contribution to makind as we pass through the world. Mine may be a piece of research."

Just Staying At Home Is Anything But Routine

My husband used to believe that women who didn't work outside the home were protected.

"I know you work hard, honey, but it's not the same," he'd say. "You just don't have any conception of what it's like out there: the constant stress and pressure, the fear of humiliation, the isolation, the manipulation, the dull routine."

Now, I'll have to admit that staying home with a two-year-old is anything but routine. The two-year-old has a diabolically inventive mind. So I can expect anything in the course of a normal day from having red nail polish dripped all over the green bedroom carpet to having my favorite earrings flushed down the toilet, to having my kitchen cabinets painted with Crisco.

But as for the rest of the stuff, it was he who didn't have any conception of what it is like. Take isolation for example. Isolation is going for two weeks without talking to anyone taller than a doorknob.

And pressure. Pressure is having to come up with acceptable anwers to questions like "Why is that a tree?"

And for that matter humiliation. What is more humiliating than having to apologize to the dentist after your kid bites him? Or to the pediatrician after...your kid wets him? Or to the man next to you on the bus after he sits down on guess who's chewing gum?

And then there's manipulation. Manipulation is when your two-year-old drops an Oreo cookie into the public swimming pool where it diffuses over the entire surface in 36 seconds flat—and the nine-year-old next to you promises not to tell who did it if you'll pay him two dollars.

Of course, I explained all this to Phillip, but it never really sank in until I had to attend a weekend meeting and he got to keep Meg all by himself for two days.

When I walked in the door Sunday night, there were toys scattered everywhere, Meg was in her bedroom screaming at the top of her lungs, and Phillip was sitting on his haunches in the middle of the living room trying to scrub up the results of a toileting accident.

I just grinned. "How did it go, dear?"

"Well, you know that paper I have due tomorrow? She just underlined it with blue crayon."

"If that's all that happened, you're lucky."

He looked close to tears. "It's not. When I got up this morning, I found her in the middle of the kitchen floor."

"So?"

"She was feeding ice cream to her teddy bears. That was an hour before she decided to climb up her dresser drawers and pull the vaporizer down on top of her. Then yesterday there was the toothpaste."

"I don't think I want to hear this..."

"She squirted it into my underwear drawer."

"And you still feel housewives are protected?"

"No!"

"More like courageous, huh?"

"No, that's not exactly how I'd describe it either."

I was puzzled. "Just how would you describe us?"

"More like foolhardy."

would bring an instant crisis in detente and put the new SALT agreement in jeopardy.

But to accept the presence of the MIG-23 in Cuba, knowing its apparent capability for being fitted with nuclear-delivery, would violate the doctrine laid down by John F. Kennedy during the Cuba missile crisis and by the Nixon-Kissinger strategists in 1970.

In that year, Richard Nixon and his then-national security adviser Henry Kissinger delivered what amounted to an ultimatum against Soviet-Cuban construction of submarine pens at Cienfuegos capable of servicing nuclear-missile submarines. That ultimatum was based squarely on the Kennedy doctrine: any nuclear-capable weapon — whether it was actually fitted with nuclear armaments or not — was ipso facto intolerable in Fidel Castro's Cuba. The submarine pens were not built.

It is doubtful that even a signed Cuban "pledge" that its new MIG-23s would never be equipped for nuclear delivery would do much to solve Carter's political problem in the Senate when the new SALT agreement comes up for debate next year. With the U.S. Southland exposed to attack within the MIG-23's nonstop, 1,200-mile range, the SALT debate might well turn into an antiSoviet free-for-all.

Indeed, long-headed analysts here are hard put to explain the surreptitious deployment of the MIG-23 in terms other than Soviet muscle-flexing, mixed with deterrence. It would seem to provide Moscow with a powerful option to be brandished when and if necessary as a counter to American policy anywhere in the world considered hostile by the Soviet Union.

U.S. defense officials say that the MIG-23 model now in Cuba has never before been delivered to a Soviet ally. After the Arab-Israeli war in October 1973, Syria received the air-defense version of the MIG-23 — essentially a fighter plane not equipped for tactical strikes against ground targets. The difference is similar to that between the U.S. F-4 and the F-5E: the F-4 has been denied to Taiwan because it could attack the Chinese mainland; the F-5E, a plane designed purely for defense, is being supplied instead.

That the Soviets have chosen this critical moment in off-again, on-again detente to threaten the U.S. in its own back yard is a vicious irony for Jimmy Carter. Unless he can conjure up a justifiable explanation for the MIG-23s where none appears today, his hopes for SALTII nay turn to dust.

joined the Chicago office of architectural pioneer Frank Lloyd Wright at the turn of the century. He worked there as an unpaid employee until 1905, when he left to set up his own office.

Practicing in Chicago, Griffin built a reputation for designing beautiful houses with modern innovations in the Frank Lloyd Wright manner. In 1912, he entered an international competition to design the Australian capital and the following year his plan was chosen over 136 others to win the $3,500 first prize.

There was widespread opposition to Griffin's innovative design, which he once described as "a work of art" unlike any other city in the world. One group of politicians tried to scrap it and substitute a strictly utilitarian and unimaginative plan of their own.

Griffin was invited to come to Australia for consultations about the proposed capital and accepted an offer to become director of Federal Capital Design and Construction, with authority to build Canberra according to his own plan. Unfortunately, this never happened.

Griffin technically was in charge of the project but the government officials he had to deal with were the same people who had tried to sabotage his plan. Contour maps were supplied at the wrong scale, Plans were conveniently lost in the mail and Griffin was denounced in Parliament by Home Affairs Minister William Archibald as "A Yankee bounder" who wasted his time on "grand theorizing, moonshine and dreaming."

Strong Belief Washington Wastes Money

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — Much of the criticism of federal spending is directed not at the validity or purposes of these outlays, but at what is perceived to be the waste of taxpayer money.

In fact, the public judgment is that as much as half (48 cents) of every tax dollar that goes to the federal government in Washington is wasted. This is a median average of all responses in a recently completed nationwide Gallup Poll.

The closer government is to the people, the less critical they are. For example, when the cross-section of adults was asked how many cents of each tax dollar received by the government of their state is wasted, the median average response is 32 cents. And in the case of one's local government, the comparable figure is 25 cents.

Of particular interest is the fact that for all three levels of government, the figures cited by Democrats are nearly identical to those offered by Republicans.

Following are the questions and national results:

"Of every tax dollar that goes to the federal government in Washington, D.C., how many cents of each dollar would you say are waste"

Cents Wasted Of Tax Dollars To Washington

	Median average
National	48¢
Democrats	49
Republicans	48
Independents	48

"And how many cents of each tax dollar that goes to the government of this state would you say are wasted?"

Cents Wasted Of Tax Dollar To State Government?

	Median average
National	32¢
Democrats	33
Republicans	31
Independents	31

"And how many cents of each tax dollar that goes to your local government would you say are wasted?"

Cents Wasted Of Tax Dollar To Local Government?

	Median average

Democrats	24
Republicans	25
Independents	25

More Dissatisfaction

In light of the public's views on the waste of tax dollars, it is not surprising that Americans are highly critical of federal spending per se.

In a survey reported this summer, an overwhelming 75 percent of the public said the federal government spends too much money. Just 5 percent said federal outlays were too small and 11 percent felt spending was at about the right level.

As with views on tax dollar wastage, criticism of government spending did not fall evenly on all levels of government. A 53 percent majority felt spending by their state government was too high. And in the case of local government only 38 percent held the same view.

That same survey also showed that by a seven-to-one margin (81 to 11 percent), the public favored amending the Constitution to require balancing the federal budget each year.

The results reported today are based on personal interviews with 1,543 adults, 18 and older, taken in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period Oct. 27-30.

QUESTIONS ABOUT ANCIENT BONES — Cardinal Guiseppe Siri, archbishop of Genoa holds the ornate reliquary holding what according to tradition are the bones of St. John the Baptist, patron saint of Genoa. The recent discovery at the monastery of St. Makarios near Cairo of bones attributed to John the Baptist calls into question the Genoa bones said to have been collected at Mira in Asia Minor by crusaders around the year 1100. Wants A-Bomb Test Data

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Nevada atom bomb tests 15-20 years ago showered most of Utah with radioactive fallout and Gov. Scott Matheson is going to Washington this week to try to find out if that's why parts of the state have abnormally high cancer rates.

Matheson will demand to see all government files on the health effects of the A-bomb tests on American citizens in Utah and other states that received low-level doses of radiation from the 87 open-air tests made in the Nevada desert between 1951 and 1962.

Advocates $10 Billion For Navy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress should allocate $10 billion annually for naval expansion to counter the Soviet Union's increasing seapower, a group of American defense experts recommended in a study released Saturday.

The experts warned the Soviet navy is now able to blockade the eastern Mediterranean and disrupt global western oil and trade sea lanes.

They urged Congress to develop long term objectives for the U.S. Navy and merchant marine.

Travel Time For Congress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Freed of congressional sessions and election campaign demands, members of Congress are roaming the world these days, mostly on tax-funded official business.

Their objectives range from the Brazilian coastal resort of Salvador for the Atlantic Conference, to Tokyo, where congressmen accompanied by staff aides and wives — about 100 persons in all — are attending an "interparliamentary symposium."

When a member of Congress travels, however, it is often hard to learn who, what, when, where and why.

Waiting For The Snow

Ski enthusiasts are already bombarding North Carolina ski resorts with requests for reservations, while employees at the resorts are literally praying for a cold winter.

"We're counting on the man upstairs," said Joan East of Appalachian Ski Mountain in Blowing Rock. That's about all the resorts can do, except cross their fingers and hope for a favorable winter forecast from the National Weather Service later this month.

Despite the uncertainty of the weather, most of the resorts are predicting record-breaking seasons.

New System For Stolen Equipment

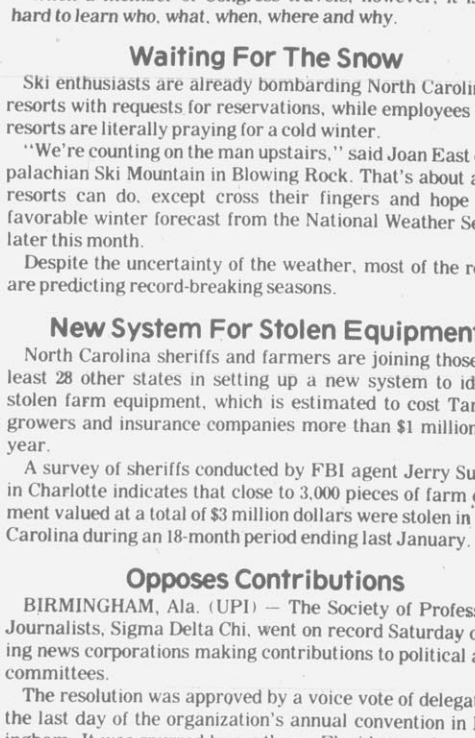

North Carolina sheriffs and farmers are joining those in at least 28 other states in setting up a new system to identify stolen farm equipment, which is estimated to cost Tar Heel growers and insurance companies more than $1 million each year.

A survey of sheriffs conducted by FBI agent Jerry Sullivan in Charlotte indicates that close to 3,000 pieces of farm equipment valued at a total of $3 million dollars were stolen in North Carolina during an 18-month period ending last January.

Opposes Contributions

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — The Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi, went on record Saturday opposing news corporations making contributions to political action committees.

The resolution was approved by a voice vote of delegates on the last day of the organization's annual convention in Birmingham. It was spurred by southern Florida members of the society disturbed by political contributions from newspapers in opposition to a campaign to legalize casinos in Florida this year.

Mother Bemoans Conviction

HAMMOND, Ind. (AP) — "How could America do this to my son!" screamed William Kampiles' Greek-born mother as she rushed to his side, weeping uncontrollably after his conviction as a spy against the United States.

The 23-year-old Kampiles wept, too, hugging his mother before being led from the courthouse by federal marshals. His lifelong dream of being a CIA agent had ended.

Shoe Bandit Suspect Arrested

SEATTLE (AP) — Police arrested a 28-year-old man on suspicion he may be the elusive shoe bandit after they discovered a large, green bag containing 65 women's shoes in his apartment.

Police spokesman Lee Libby said Friday that the man, not yet identified, lived within half a block of most of the reported incidents. "Indications are pretty strong that he is (the shoe bandit)," Libby said.

The so-called shoe bandit knocks young women down, yanks one of their shoes off and flees.

Police Lt. Robert Holter said there had been five reports of such shoe thefts since June 9. None of the women was seriously injured.

Youths May Have PCB Poisoning

GLENS FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — State health officials say it will take until Tuesday to determine if four Town of Moreau youths have come down with PCB poisoning.

Town officials meanwhile made plans to pay for the temporary containment of a sparsely wooded area where the highly toxic polychlorinated biphenyls were dumped by a private hauler under contract to the General Electric Co.

The children, who accompanied the officials to a Friday meeting with state environmental officials, came down with the apparent PCB-related rashes after playing near the site.

Mondale Avoided Key Issue

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Vice President Walter Mondale praised the Appalachian Regional Commission Friday as a unique approach to administering federal programs, but failed to address a key topic of concern of conference delegates — that federal funding for Appalachian regional programs will suffer from tax cuts.

Mondale, addressing about 300 persons attending the commission's conference on child development, also repeated President Carter's vow to stop inflation. He said that if unchecked, inflation could destroy the commission's programs.

"If we don't lick inflation, it will destroy all that we've talked about here," Mondale told the gathering of governors, state officials and child care specialists.

Claims Chavis Being Silenced

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — James Ferguson, a Charlotte lawyer who represented the Wilmington 10, said Friday that state officials are trying to silence the group's leader, the Rev. Ben Chavis.

Chavis enrolled two months ago in the Duke University Divinity School through a study-release program that stipulates that he is not permitted to speak with reporters, according to Stewart Shadbolt, spokesman for the state Department of Corrections in Raleigh.

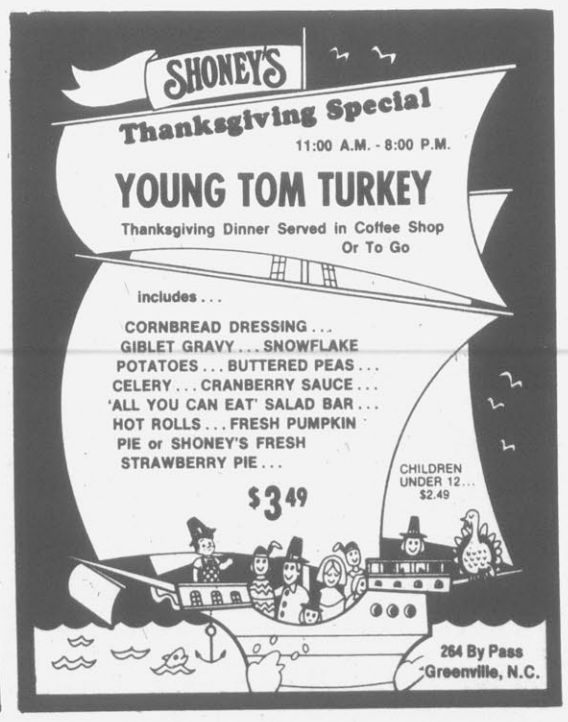

In a telephone interview, Ferguson said, "By refusing to permit Chavis to speak with the press, they (state officials) are simply trying to draw attention away from the case."

Shadbolt said, however, that Chavis signed a contract and agreed to the terms.

Glenn On Coded Data

MOSCOW (UPI) — Former astronaut Sen. John Glenn says Soviet insistence on sending coded data from its outer space tests prevents adequate monitoring and could prevent completion of a new SALT treaty.

Glenn, part of a Senate delegation that toured the Soviet Union for a week, told his colleagues the coding of telementry data from space goes to the very heart of verifying compliance in any new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty.

Abuse Of Power Against Dr. King

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former FBI official says the FBI's ten-year campaign against Dr. Martin Luther King was unethical and an abuse of power. But he denies it contributed to King's assassination.

Charles D. Brennan also acknowledged to the House Assassinations Committee Friday that top FBI officials gave almost no thought to investigating the possibility of conspiracy after King's April 4, 1968, murder in Memphis.

Chairman Louis Stokes, DOhio, and Rep. Floyd J. Fiphian, D-Ind., asked Brennan if he thought the late J. Edgar Hoover's denunciation of King and the FBI's dissemination of allegations about King might have created a climate that led someone to kill the civil rights leader.

"You don't see, even now, that you might have so poisoned the atmosphere ... that could cause somebody, not the FBI but somebody, to pull the trigger?" asked Fiphian.

Brennan said it is almost impossible to determine all the things that motivate an assassin but that he has never heard a suggestion that the FBI harrassment of King led directly to his murder.

At the time of King's assassination, Brennan had for two years been chief of the internal security section that conducted the campaign against King.

Brennan refused to accept Stokes' characterization that the FBI effort to discredit King as a civil rights leader was "illegal, immoral and unconstitutional."

"It was unethical," Brennan said, adding later: "It was an abuse of power."

Brennan said he still believes the initial FBI investigation, approved by the late Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy to determine whether King was falling under communist influence, was justified.

"Where the whole thing got off the track, really, was when it got into Dr. King's personal life," he said.

Brennan said the investigation was justified because FBI officials were afraid communists might be able to influence King away from non-violence and turn his thousands of followers instead to black militancy.

The Justice Department, in a report released last year, said the communist investigation was justified but that the FBI turned from that to a five-year campaign trying to discredit King after it concluded in 1963 he was not being influenced by communists.

Earlier Friday, a former Atlanta FBI agent, Arthur Murtaugh, said the agency conducted a vendetta against King and then botched its investigation of his assassination by not looking into the possibility of conspiracy.

Murtaugh said the same FBI intelligence agents who had conducted the operation against King conducted the assassination investigation.

"It just defies reason to say that the same people who have engaged in a ten-year vendetta against Dr. King should investigate his murder," added Murtaugh, who twice broke down in tears during his testimonv.

Elections Timetable Essential To Peace

On the eve of the first anniversary of President Anwar Sadat's trip to Jerusalem, Egypt's Vice President said Saturday any Middle East agreement without a timetable for elections in the West Bank and Gaza "will never lead to peace."

Vice President Hosni Mubarak said that unless the Israeli Cabinet meeting today agrees to Cairo's insistance on such a timetable the situation in the Middle East peace talks "will be very difficult."

In a telephone interview with Israel's state-run radio's English language service, Mubarak said, "This is something very essential. If we don't put a timetable, that means that we are looking for a separate agreement, which will never lead to peace."

The talks have been stalled for the past two weeks because of Cairo's demand for elections of an administrative council in the West Bank and Gaza strip nine months after the signing of a peace treaty with Israel. The United States has proposed a one year period.

Politicians predict a stormy session when the Israel Cabinet meets under Prime Minister Menachem Begin Sunday to debate the timetable issue.

In his interview with Israeli radio, Mubarak, who recently carried a message from Sadat to President Carter in Washington, said the Egyptian demand for the establishement of administrative councils in the occupied West Bank and Gaza within nine months is reasonable.

"We could build pyramids before the nine months end," Mubarak said. "But I think the negotiations should finish before that and election should take place. This is a very important, very, very important issue and you Israelis should realize this point.

"Are you looking for peace, genuine peace, or not — that is the question," he said. "If you are looking for genuine peae everything could be finished according to the timetable, the negotiations and everything. There is no problem.

Mubarak said the Egyptians have insisted all along on linking a peace treaty and a timetable for West Bank and Gaza autonomy.

"If only an agreement on Sinai could lead to peace, we wouldn't have hesitated to sign an agreement one year ago," the Egyptian vice president said. "But only just withdrawal from Sinai will never lead to peace."

To Meet With Castro

MIAMI (UPI) — Cuban exiles from around the hemisphere — including Bay of Pigs veterans — are flying to Havana to meet with Fidel Castro Monday for negotiations over the release of more Cuban political prisoners.

A 10-member contingent left from Miami Friday and another departed from Jamaica Saturday. The Miami group included banker Bernardo Benes, who held secret talks with Cuban officials for months before the first group of political prisoners was released last month.

A spokesman at Cuba's Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Washington said the Cuban government has invited 53 people to participate in the discussions.

The primary issue to be discussed will be the release of several thousand Cuban political prisoners and their families.

Castro said in September he would allow political prisoners and their families held on the island — some for 20 years — to emigrate to the U.S., and he has released two groups so far.

Participating in the discussions will be Bay of Pigs veterans Jose Napoleon Villaboa and Miguel Gonzalez Pando, and Rosa Rivas, the mother of a man who spent 18 years in Cuban jails.

PARTICIPATING IN...the Boy's Club Invitational Gamesroom Tournament at the Pitt County Boy's Club Saturday were (left to right): Leonard Moretz, gamesroom supervisor for the Pitt County Boy's Club; Lawrence Freeman of the Brigade Boy's Club in Wilmington; Terrance Cherry of the Pitt County Boy's Club; Brian Alford of the Boy's Clubs of Wake County; and Ed French, program director of the Pitt County Boy's Club. Ninety boys from the three Boy's Club participated in the tournament which consisted of five events, checkers, billiards, bumper pool, ping-pong and foosball. The Pitt County Boy's Club won the team trophy for accumulating the most points during the competition. (Reflector photo by Lynn Caverly)

RAIN FELL

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — An inch of rain fell on Western North Carolina Friday, bringing some relief from a drought that has plagued the moutains for several months and an end to a ban on outdoor burning.

RIGHT ON THE NOSE — President Carter, perhaps in an attempt to make sure both his domestic and foreign policies are up to snuff, got himself into remarkable similar positions with two of his guests this week; Mickey Mouse, at top; and King Hassan of Morocco. (AP Laserphoto)

Unusual Research Center Charts Life In America

EDITOR'S NOTE — Drawing a statistical picture of the opinions, economic ups and downs, and general feeling of well-being of Americans is the task of an unusual university research center.

By GUY DARST
Associated Press Writer

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Did you know:

—Men kill more time on the job than women?

—The part of the country you live in makes little difference in how happy you are?

—The biggest single reason for falling into poverty or climbing out of it is a change in the composition of the family.

These observations come from an unusual team surveying the social terrain, part of the Institute for Social Research at the university of Michigan.

For 32 years, social scientists at the institute's Survey Research Center have been marking the lines of what we think, what we do, how we feel — in a sense, who we are.

The center is best known for its monthly polls of consumer sentiment, with results — such as October's finding that consumer pessimism has not been deeper since 1974-75 — published quarterly.

Other organizations take polls, watch the economy, study election returns. But the depth of the center's staff, its links with a major university, freedom from commercial or governmental restraints, and ability to burrow into a subject for years make it unique.

The Census Bureau, for example, cannot ask people how much they goof off at work, but the center can ask, and did.

In a study of how people spend their time, it had 376 workers keep a minute-by-minute diary of four different days. Among the findings: women on the average spent only half the time on the job "relaxing," that men did.

Angus Campbell, a psychologist and former director of the center, has been working for years on ways to measure what has come to be called the "quality of life."

Instead of counting books in the library and symphony concerts per capita, he asks about happiness and satisfaction. They are not the same: "Happiness does not have a judgmental quality to it. A new widow may be satisfied with her life but extremely unhappy. A young man starting a career may be happy but not satisfied."

He snorts at the symphony counters. A Nebraska study ranked eight states "A" on such objective measurements, with seven of them in the West. All the lowest-ranked states were in the south.

Campbell's 1971 study — whose 1,881 participants were too few to permit a state-bystate breakdown — showed little difference in personal satisfaction between the south, the central states, the east and the west.

He's now analyzing a 1976 repeat of the 1971 study. Studies extending over years, repeat studies and reanalyses are typical of the center's in-depth work.

One study was begun 10 years ago to find out more than census data can tell about who gets ahead and who falls behind in the economic race, and why.

It's the Panel Study on Income Dynamics, more familiarly known around the center as "the 5,000 families" after the number that started out in it. Although half the original families have dropped out, 6,200 families are involved now. New families formed by children of the original participants are included.

One conclusion, stated by Duncan recently, surprised many people: "Poverty is a function of family composition change. A large number of people leaving home are going to be poor."

Tracking the consumer's anticipations of the about-faces of fortune is the best-known part of the center, the Economic Behavior Program, whose pollsters have just plumbed consumer sentiment for the 100th time since 1953.

Many businesses and government agencies pore over the center's consumer attitude survey like ancient priests examining the entrails of a chicken, hoping for a clue to coming boom or bust.

Others say the survey doesn't predict much that isn't already happening.

Director Richard T. Curtain thinks the survey is best for predicting recessions. He says it's foretold the last three.

"The more surveys I do, the more I'm impressed by two things: how much consumers know, and how many factors they consider," Curtain says.

"In the 1950s, we'd ask about the economy and get answers like 'the cost of living is too high' or 'there aren't any jobs.' Nowadays, people are likely to talk about monetary policy — more people are talking about the mechanisms behind the economy."

The consumer is no financial wizard, though. "We find consumers farrying credit life insurance on all their loans. That's stupid."

He concludes with what might be the center's motto, if it had one: "We're supposed to study them, not preach to them."

Bribery Is Hard To End

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Arrests, trials, letters to the editor and official exhortations haven't eliminated the bribe, the tip or the store clerk's box of candy from Czechoslovak socialism.

The latest payments shoved indignantly into public view include cash, brandy and a 154-pound pig. And officialdom says things have gotten seriously out of hand.

"These criminal acts have been committed more than once by entire groups of workers, including economic functionaries," Slovakia's party paper, Pravda, thundered in a shotgun attack on bribery, "parasitism" and other offenses.

The youth daily, Smena, cited 17 cases of bribery, of which nine involved drivers' attempts to bribe traffic policemen, two people trying to buy back their driver's licenses and one trying to buy off a prosecutor in a case involving relatives.

Payments offered included the pig, one and a half liters of brandy, and cash offerings of up to 8,000 crowns — more than twice the average monthly pay of a Czech industrial worker.

Other cases included efforts to get apartments in housing short Czechoslovakia, efforts to beat the crowds at the doctor's office and one try to buy a state bank loan.

PIANIST GARY TOWLEN . . . artist-in-residence for North Carolina National Bank, is shown explaining piano techniques to school children. Towlen will be in Greenville Nov. 27-30, performing in Pitt County and Greenville schools and also in a free recital at the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall at 8:15 p.m. on Nov. 30.

North Carolina National Bank (NCNB) artist-in-residence, pianist Gary Towlen, will be making appearances in Greenville and Pitt County schools and will also give a recital at Fletcher Recital Hall on the ECU campus during the four-day period Nov. 27-30.

The young pianist, native of Long Island, New York, made his debut at Carnegie Recital Hall at the early age of 12 and has since received critical acclaim by critics in the U.S., England, Spain, Ireland, France, Denmark, Sweden, Switzerland The Netherlands, and other countries.

Earlier this year, Towlen signed a one-year contract with NCNB to perform as a traveling artist-in-residence to perform and talk about music in schools throughout North Carolina.

A few years ago, Towlen reached a decision to abandon the rigors of the concert stage and to approach music in a more intimate, informal manner — where he could talk to people about music, share details which shaped composers' music.

This decision led naturally to the idea of going into work involving unsophisticated listeners. As a result of this decision, he has served as artist-in-resident in Wisconsin, Indiana, Florida, Long Island and Texas, before signing on with NCNB as that firm's artist-in-resident for North Carolina.

Towlen's first appearance will be in Winterville at the A. G. Cox School. There he will give two performances, one at 9 a.m., the second at 10 a.m. At one o'clock that afternoon, he will conduct an informal seminar for a piano class at East Carolina University.

Tuesday will be given over to a practice session for Towlen's public concert to be held on Thursday.

On Wednesday, Towlen will give recitals to students in Greenville City Schools. His scheduled in the city schools will be published at a later date.

On Thursday, Nov. 30, the public will have an opportunity to hear Towlen perform. At 8:15 p.m. on that date he will be in a recital at the A. J. Fletcher Music Center Recital Hall.

The public is invited, however, advance reservations (free tickets) are required. Jim Hicks, of NCNB, says these can be had at the NCNB Main Office, corner of First and Greene Streets during regular bank hours.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Joe Robert Stines

Every culture is unique, every one the result of its individual history. Yet every nation, every race has at its roots a primitive culture so basic, so devoid of the individualization of our modern cultures that we must all recognize our beginnings in them. Where must we go to find our roots? We must turn to the folktales in order to understand the universality of the ancient conflict between age and youth, the old ways and the new.

Sheppard Memorial Library has traditionally maintained a strong folklore collection in the Children's Library. Recent additions to this collection include the following:

BEHIND THE BACK OF THE MOUNTAIN retold by Verna Aardema (Dial Press, 1973) is a collection of Black folktales from Southern Africa. These stories come from the Hottentot, Zulu, Bantu, Bushman, Thonga, and Tshindao languages. The reader of these stories will meet flying maidens, halfmen, beautiful princesses, and a witch. Also a beast so long that when it's winter at his southern end, at his northern end it is still early harvest. These stories are of tricks and counter tricks, captures and escapes, foolish trades, and impossible tasks. Leo and Diane Dillon's striking drawings reflect all the fantasy and drama of the African imagination.

THE FIRE ON THE MOUNTAIN (Holt, 1950) by Harold Courlander and Wolf Leslau is a collection of Ethiopian stories. The folk literature of Ethiopia represents a cross current of cultures of the Middle East, Africa, and the West. Some of these tales have counterparts in Moslem-Africa, Arabia, and India; others bear a resemblance to stories known in Central and Western Europe. Many, however, bear the mark of strictly local invention, and virtually all of them have been so colored by the life and custom of the Ethiopian people that they have a flavor of their own.

PEOPLE FROM THE SKY; AINU TALES FROM NORTHERN JAPAN told by Frances Carpenter (doubleday, 1972) views ancient customs, legends, and magic through the eyes of Old Ekashi, a remarkable storyteller. This book is a worthy companion to Francis Carpenter's highly acclaimed TALES OF A CHINESE GRANDMOTHER (Tuttle, 1972).

THE MAGIC ORANGE TREE AND OTHER HAITIAN FOLKTALES compiled by Diane Wolkstein (Knopf, 1978) is a collection of tales gathered in Haiti by a noted storyteller. These stories have local color, humor, flavorful dialogue, and a pervasive awareness of magic in daily life. Although the stories were collected as heard, only a skilled storyteller could transcribe them with such fidelity to the oral tradition. Each tale is prefaced by Wolkstein's notes on the circumstances in which the story was told, and a section at the close of the book gives musical notation for songs used within the stories. This book is most useful for reading aloud to a younger audience.

The folktale offers to children an intuitive and direct way of knowledge, a simple beauty capable of being perceived immediately, arousing in their souls a vibration which will endure all their lives.

Larry Jones Restores Chinese Screen At The Art Center

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

A fine hand-embroidered screen made in China in the late 19th or early 20th century has been restored in a voluntary gesture of service to the Greenville Art Center.

Larry Jones, owner and manager of Gallery Piano and Organ Studio, Inc. at Greenville Square, recently offered his knowledge of restoration. "When I saw the deteriorating condition of the screen," Jones commented, "I knew it was a matter of immediate action to keep it from being damaged beyond repair."

At the time he offered his services, Jones was informed that there are no funds in the center's budget to provide for restoration. Nevertheless, he took the job on and also paid for the materials — primarily a plexiglass covering for the screen, which amounted to about $100.

"This is certainly a beautiful gesture on the part of a concerned young person," Edith Walker, director of the Greenville Art Center commented. "It is so very good to have the screen restored and to know that it has been saved from further deterioration."

The four-panel folding screen, a familiar object dividing the office at the center from the gallery area during receptions, is a gift from the late Emil A. Winkler, world traveler who lived in Greenville at the time of his death several years ago.

Winkler, who spent a number of years living in China as an agent for the Hamburg-American Steamship lines, told this writer shortly before his death that the screen was a prime example of an art object used for practical purposes — to divide a space in the office in Shanghai in which he worked.

Depicted across the face of the screen is a flowering branch, with blossoms in subtle shades of whites, ivories, rosy pinks and beiges. To the right, white cranes fly westward. Background material on which the design is embroidered is a black cloth, and the frame is black lacquered wood.

The screen, a cloisonne vase containing a tree with small flowers of jade and other carved petals, and several other items were given to the Greenville Art Center by Winkler in memory of his wife and daughter.

Discovery by Jones that no funds exist in the operating and art purchase budget for restoration and other "pressing needs relative to maintaining a collection," has led him to volunteer to head an effort "to collect funds for emergency use. This would be a fund to be used solely for unexpected expenses such as reframing, repairing old frames, or anything of that nature that comes up from time to time."

"Such a fund would be a godsend to us," Mrs. Walker commented, "as we do often have needs of this nature and the existing budgets do not provide for the unexpected."

Jones, a native of Mt. Olive, is a 1966 graduate of the School of Art, East Carolina University, with a major in sculpture.

Jones invites anyone interested in any type of assistance, financial or volunteering their labor or time to contact him at 756-5002 Monday through Saturday between 10 a.m. and 8 p.m.

A beauty salon in Sarnia, Ontario, also serves as a miniature art gallery for local artists. Owner Evy Tate, an artist herself, said there were 32 paintings on the wall to help artists gain recognition through selling their work.

Greenville Boys Choir Thanksgiving Concert Today

REHEARSING . . . Members of the Greenville Boys Choir are shown being rehearsed by the choir's director, Tom Hawley (left) as they prepared earlier this week for today's concert. The concert, free to the public, will begin at 5 p.m. at First Christian Church, Greenville Boulevard. (Reflector Photo By Keith Mills)

A concert of music, "A Service of Praise and Thanksgiving," is being presented free of charge to the public by the Greenville Boys Choir at 5 p.m. today in the First Christian Church (located on Greenville Boulevard next to Kroger's).

In this, their first major concert of the 1978-79 season, the young boys will be dressed in new robes designed by Dorothy Guiffre after an 11th century German Noble coat.

Tom Hawley, director of the Boys Choir, will be directing this concert, and Marshall Foster will accompany.

For the program, they will sing: Sleeth's "Praise the Lord;" "Sing Thanksgiving" by Ohanian; Bach's "Now Let All the Earth Adore Thee;" Mueller's "The Lord's My Shepard;" and another Sleeth composition, "God of Great and God of Small."

Scripture readings to accompany the music will be read by choir members Jonathan Fischer, Richard Haselrig, Gabriel Barnes, David Liles, and Chris Guiffree.

In addition to these five, other members of the choir are: Erik Hofheinz, Tad Castellow, Barry Holmes, Dewey Dunn, Reggie Barrow, Bryan Entzminger, Kirk Smiley, Gregg Vacek, Wilbert Brown, Bruce Rogers, John Ward, III, Cam Evans, Duncan Shaw, Patrick Carrol, Sean Farley, Gavin Sundwall, Paul Sullivan, James Powers, Maruice Woodard, Gil Gardner, Raymond King, Victor Barnes, Sean Cokes, Chip Hessenflow, Kevin Frost, and Jeff Stutt.

During the current season, the Greenville Boys Choir will be making appearances at various civic clubs and also has an engagement to sing at the Greenville Utilities Christmas party.

Two Specials Air On UNC-TV This Week

CHAPEL HILL — Among the UNC-Television Network (PBS) broadcasts this week of special interest are an opera and a report on the Ku Klux Klan, both on Channel 25, Greenville.

At 8 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 21, the Metropolitan Opera will televise live from the Met a new, all-English production of Semtana's comic masterpiece opera, "The Bartered Bride." The broadcast begins at 8 p.m.

Principal roles will be sung by Teresa Stratas, Nicolai Gedda, Jon Vickers, and Martti Talvela, with James Levine conducting.

At 10 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 22, a 60-minute documentary, "The New Klan," will be broadcast.

The film takes an intimate look at the organization— from its origins to revelations of today's activities.

Members of the media-conscious California Klan has allowed the filming of their initiation ceremony, with pictures of them wearing "White Power" T-shirts and armed with shotguns. They are members of the "New Klan" whose spokesman is David Duke, a young, handsome and articulate leader.

Included in the documentary film is a sequence in which Klan members plan to seal the 1200 mile Mexican-American border.

THE FAMOUS 'SPINNING QUARTET' — from von Flotow's opera, 'Martha,' reveals the delightful woes of two young ladies of the court disguised as farm girls, hired by two bachelor farmers who discover the household skills of the ladies are less than satisfactory. The opera will be given a single performance in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall at 8 p.m. tonight. Tickets, at $3, will be available at the door prior to performance.

'Art On Paper' Show Opens

REACHING FOR A MEMORY — by Sheila Bocock of Greensboro is one of 150 works by 147 American artists that will appear in the 14th annual Art on Paper Show at Weatherspoon Art Gallery, UNC-Greensboro. The show opens Sunday, Nov. 19 and remains on view until Dec. 17.

GREENSBORO — "Art on Paper," the best-known and the biggest attention getter of annual shows at the Weatherspoon Art Gallery on the UNC-Greensboro campus, goes on view on Sunday, Nov. 19 for a month's run until Dec. 17.

Featured in the show will be art by 19th and 20th century American artists. One of the focal points this year is a revived interest in collages.

"All of the Art on Paper shows have highlighted the current trends in the art world, but this year we have several pieces that go back to the late 19th and early 20th centuries," said James Tucker, Weatherspoon Curator. "This show is one of the most historically significant ones we've had."

Among artists represented in this show are 13 North Carolina artists as well as 22 faculty members of the UNC-G's Department of Art.

As in the past 13 annual shows, the Dillard Paper Company is the sponsor. Earlier this year, Dillard provided $15,000. Previously, Dillard has made available $162,000 for expenses and for purchase of art for Weatherspoon's "Art on Paper" collection. It has now become one of the nation's top collections of one-of-a-kind 20th century artworks executed on paper.

The show opens with a public reception, from 2 to 6 p.m. on Nov. 19. Regular gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday-Friday, and 2-6 p.m. weekends. The gallery is closed on Mondays.

Colleges May Be Developing Computer Criminals

By EVANS WITT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — College students given large leeway in fiddling with computers may be learning the basics of computer crime, some experts say.

"We are creating new generations of computer criminals in our universities and colleges today because we are encouraging them to compromise computers and teaching them it's a game," says Donn Parker, the leading expert on computer crime who works out of SRI International in Menlo Park, Calif. For example:

—At universities in New York City and in Los Angeles, students altered their grades by defeating the security measures on universities' computer systems, where the scores were kept. In these two cases, the changes were detected, but there may be many other incidents may have gone unnoticed.

—At the University of Wisconsin at Madison, three students face criminal charges because they used a professor's computer time to make computer printouts of Snoopy and other non-academic subjects.

—During a student protest in the early 70s at Stanford University, students knowledgeable about computers effectively shut down the school's computer center by submitting "phantom jobs" that kept anyone else from using the system.

—At most university computer centers across the country, late at night students gather around computer terminals, playing hour after hour of "Space War" or other computer games.

Parker's dim view of computer games and his suggestion that professorial tolerance of computer "pranks" by students may lead some into more serious temptations is hotly contested by other academics.

"It's just not true to infer that universities are encouraging abuse and training computer criminals," says John W. Hamblen, chairmun of the computer science department at the University of Missouri at Rolla.

"I don't think we're a bunch of crooks," says Jerry Engle, associate professor at Old Dominion University in Norfolk, Va.

Games like computer space war or computer chess are often encouraged to familiarize students with computer terminals and commands and give them a picture of the machines' potential.

But the games turn serious when students start to probe security measures designed to protect personal information stored in computers, look for weaknesses in its operations or play the games with the computer bill going against a professor's research project.

"There's a feeling that anything you can get hold of — the programs, the computer time — belongs to you" says Susan Nycum, a San Francisco attorney and expert on computer abuse. "There's no feeling that these things belong to someone else, that they have value."

And some students, she notes, don't see much difference between playing computer games or other, less innocent forms of intrusion, like forcing the system to fail. "The feeling is if I get inventive and find out how to crash the system, that's fine too, although it may cause serious problems for others," she says.

Many managers, Mrs. Nycum says, don't seek sanctions against students they find abusing the system.

"Instead of calling this activity to the attention of authorities,' she says, a computer center manager may hire the student.

Engle and Hamblen disagree.

"Sure, students will look for ways to crash ths system," Engle says. "Buh it's usually a constructive thing. They share their knowledge of what's wrong with the system and may even suggest a fix."

Hamblen stresses that the problems students cause by fiddling with computers are mostly accidental.

The difficulty has spilled over into Congress. A bill introduced by Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., would make computer crime and abuse federal offenses. But the language is so broad that playing "space war" or using the computer to draw a Snoopy cartoon could draw a 15-year jail term and a $50,000 fine.

Pirates Explode Against Marshall

Pirate QB Leander Green reverses his field after losing his jersey

Await Word On Possible Bowl Bid

By WOODY PEEL
Reflector Sports Editor

Anthony Collins scored three touchdowns, while Leander Green passed for two, as East Carolina University roared to a 45-0 victory over Marshall University last night.

The win closed out the regular season for the Pirates on an 8-3 mark, while Marshall ends up at 1-10, losing their last ten in a row after opening with a win over Toledo.

East Carolina will now wait at least until sometime today to find out whether they will be playing again. There are reports that the Pirates are one of several teams being considered for the Independence Bowl in Shreveport, La., on December 17, against Louisiana Tech.

Collins scored on runs of 22 and 53 yards, and pulled in a 59-yard flea-flicker pass from Green for his third score. Green also threw a 57-yard touchdown strike to Billy Ray Washington, while scoring once himself of a three-yard run. Freshman Roy Wiley got his first career TD on a two-yard run to close out the scoring and kicker Bill Lamm booted six extra points and a 35-yard field goal.

Marshall never threatened in the game, and crossed the mid-field stripe only twice, once when it drove from its own 30 after a kickoff to the ECU 47, and the other time when the Herd recovered a fumble on the Pirate 49. But after that, they were intercepted, leaving their best threat 47 yards away from the end zone.

East Carolina rushed for 284 yards, while Green, who hit four of seven passes, hit for 131 through the air, giving the Bucs 415 yards in total offense.

Marshall got only 119 yards of total offense.

"I'm well pleased with our football team," Coach Pat Dye said in the dressing room. "They came out and played well under the circumstances in which the game was played," he said in reference to Marshall coach Frank Ellwood's announced firing earlier in the week.

"It was the seniors last game and they have meant a lot to us. I am disappointed that Eddie Hicks was unable to play. He bruised his thigh in practice this week." Hicks ran the ball only once, early in the game, slipping down for a five-yard loss when he tried to make a cut. Hicks was left just six yards short of fourth place and 50 short of third on the all-time rushing list.

"I thought Green had a super night," Dye continued. "I think we're a pretty good football team now. I would like to go to a bowl mighty bad. I know we can play with some people. This may be the best team we've had. I'm sure it is the best defensive team."

For a while it looked like the Pirates might be suffering from some problems about facing a weak opponent in the final game, as the Bucs failed to get anything going on their first two attempts.

Green, in overthrowing Washington on the Pirates' first offensive play, just missed a touchdown then, as the receiver was well-boyond the last defensive man.

But a strong hit on Marshall quarterback Danny Wright by Gerald Hall forced a fumble at

Wolfpack Downs Duke, Accepts For Tangerine

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Coach Bo Rein, whose North Carolina State team accepted a Tangerine Bowl bid opposite Pittsburgh immediately after its 24-10 Atlantic Coast Conference win over Duke Saturday, said prolific running back Ted Brown should be 100 percent healthy for the post-season game in Orlando, Fla.

"Ted is getting better and he should be close to healthy next week (against ACC foe Virginia)," Rein said. "If not, you'll see a 100 percent Ted Brown in the Tangerine Bowl."

Pittsburgh gained the berth opposite the Wolfpack with its 35-17 over Army. North Carolina State was victorious 24-14 in last year's Peach Bowl, and theh Panthers whipped Clemson 34-3 in the Gator Bowl.

Rein praised Duke quarterback Mike Dunn, who completed 21 of 39 pass attempts for 236 yards and one touchdown.

"Mike Dunn is a great, great competitor," Rein said. "I'm proud of our defense for holding them to 10 points."

Rein also praised his defense for its goal-line stance in the third period, shutting down Duke on the Wolfpack 1-yard line. Rein said if the Blue Devils had scored, "it would have been a donnybrook."

Nathan Ritter added three field goals of more than 30 yards each to help N.C. State to the win, but Duke managed to snap a string of three straight games without a touchdown.

In pre-game ceremonies, Brown was honored by the retirement of his jersey. The only other Wolfpack jersey to have ever been retired was that of Roman Gabriel, the former Los Angeles Rams' and Philadelphia Eagles' quarterback, who lead N.C. State from 1959-1961.

N.C. State fullback Billy Ray Vickers ran for a third-quarter touchdown and quarterback Scott Smith ran around the right side for a two-point conversion for the Wolfpack's other scores.

Duke's only scores came in the second period on a 13-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Mike Dunn to split end Cedric Jones and a final period 20-yard field goal by Scott McKinney.

On N.C. State's first possession, Smith engineered a 72yard drive in 16 plays with Brown plunging over from the 1-yard line. Ritter booted the extra point.Smith methodically lead the Wolfpack on the drive, using Vickers for yardage as the Duke defense keyed on Brown.

The Blue Devils fell to 4-6 on the season and 2-3 in the ACC and still must play conference opponent North Carolina next week.

On Duke's first possession, the offense was stymied by a fired-up State defense and was forced to punt. State could only manage 5 yards in its next series and punted, but Duke fumbled the catch and lineback Rick Etheridge recovered for the Wolfpack.

In the second quarter, Brown counted out a number of short yardage plays to set up Ritter's first field goal of the game, a 32 yarder and cushioned N.C. State's lead to 10-0.

Duke tailback Mike Addesa fumbled on the 34 and it was recovered by N.C. State's strong safety Mike Nall. N.C. State marched 46 yards in 11 plays and set up Ritter's next field goal, a 36 yarder.

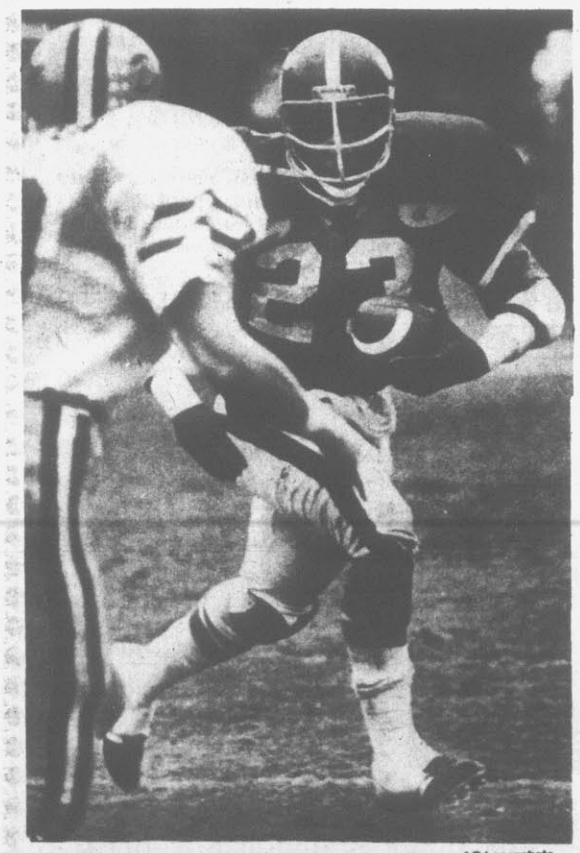

With 1:23 left in the first half, Dunn hit Jones with a 13-yard scoring pass and McKinney was good on the PAT.

N.C. State's John Isley took over as quarterback and led a 42-yard drive in the waning seconds of the second period, and Ritter kicked his third field goal, a 32 yarder to make it 167 at the half.

Tigers Top Terrapins To Claim Championship

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Steve Fuller's touchdown pass plays of 87 and 62 yards twice rallied Clemson from seven-point third quarter deficits and the 12th-ranked Tigers beat 11th-ranked Maryland 28-24 Saturday on Lester Brown's 5-yard fourth period run.

The victory gave Clemson a 9-1 record and its first Atlantic Coast Conference championship since 1967 with a 6-0 record. Maryland finished the regular season with a 9-2 mark, including 5-1 in the ACC.

The Terps, who took a 21-14 lead on Steve Atkins' 98-yard scoring run in the third quarter, had a chance to win in the closing minutes. But the Terps stalled after reaching the Clemson seven and had to settle for a 35-yard field goal by Ed Loncar with 1:56 remaining.

Clemson, which trailed 14-7 at halftime, tied the score when Fuller hit split end Jerry Butler on the Maryland 35 and he ran the remaining distance for an 87 yard score.

After the TD run by Atkins, who gained 197 yards on 28 carries, Clemson came right back to score on its next possession. Flanker Dwight Clark took a third down pass from Fuller on the Maryland 40 and ran unmolested for a 62-yard score.

The Tigers drove 70 yards in 10 plays for the winning touchdown. Brown, who carried only once in the third quarter, gained 34 yards on five carries. The touchdown was his 14th of the season.

Fuller scored Clemson's only touchdown of the first half, reaching across the goal line on fourth down after the Tigers had started the series at the Maryland two.

Maryland scored on a 3-yard run by Alvin Maddox and took a 14-7 lead when Neal Olkewicz blocked a punt by Clemson's David Sims and Mike Carney recovered in the end zone with 22 seconds left.

Fuller, Clemson's all-time leading passer, had completed only three of nine attempts before connecting on the 87-yarder to Butler with 5:03 left in the third quarter.

On their next possession, after falling behind 21-14, the Tigers again struck quickly as Fuller completed two more passes. He finished with 216 yards while completing eight of 17.

Butler caught five passes, giving him 52 for the season, and gained 140 yards. The senior split end has caught passes in 34 consecutive games.

On Maryland's final drive, Atkins twice earned first downs on short plunges. Tim O'Hare then completed an 11-yard pass to the Clemson 36 and a 25-yard pass interference call gave Maryland a first down at the 10 with 4:01 left.

After Atkins lost two yards and O'Hare rushed to the Clemson seven, linebacker Bubba Brown tackled Dean Richards at the 18 as he attempted to throw an option pass. Loncar then kicked the field goal.

Clemson ended a six-game losing streak against Maryland, which failed in its bid to win the ACC championship for the fourth time in five years.

Pirates Set To Open Cage Season

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Saturday night, East Carolina University's Pirates open the 1978-79 basketball season.

And about the only thing that is certain now is that Oliver Mack will be in the starting lineup.

Coach Larry Gillman, who enters his second year at the helm, hasn't decided on the rest of the starting lineup, but notes that the Bucs are much more versatile than they were last season.

And, too, the once loquacious Gillman is hiding his light under a bushel this year, speaking in low tones about the prospects for the coming year.

"We have a much better attitude than we did last year," Gillman said. "This comes from more experience. Even our junior college transfers and our freshmen are catching on.

"And we realize how hard it is to win. Our schedule is tougher than it's ever been before. But at the same time, we feel we'll be tougher, too."

Gillman said a lot will depend on how the new players blend with the old. "We won't get a true indication of the team's ability in the first game, I know. We'll have to play a while to see what we really can do."

The coach said that the team is on schedule in working into its game what he wants offensively and defensively. "We're not executing as well as I expect us to a month from now, but that's to be expected. And we've got a situation where we can have people doing a lot of different things. For instance, (Oliver) Mack could play the point for us, in certain situations."

Gillman said that normally George Maynor or Walter Moseley would handle the point. "Moseley has improved a lot in the off season. (Clarence) Miles can play either guard or forward for us and looks real good on the board. (Herb) Krusen will see some action at guard. We have two or three people we can use at center, and (Herb) Gray will be able to play better at the small forward position than the power forward.

"And we're very fortunate to have a player like Mack. It's hard to believe, but he's actually improved offensively. He's taking on the leadership role, and his defense has come a long way."

While Gillman still isn't sure of his starters, he has a field to pick from this year.

At the center, any one of three could draw the starting role. Greg Cornelius, who along with Mack are the only seniors on the team, returns, but is getting pressure from 6-8 Frank Hobson and 6-11 Al Tyson. "Hobson actually could start for us at either forward or center. Greg has more experience, and Al has shown flashes of brillance, but as a freshman won't be as consistant. All three of them are playing hard, and I'm happy with that."

Gillman said the power forward spot is not so much of a question mark as a hesitation for him. "Hobson could be here for a while, if he's not in the post. Then, later in the month, David Underwood will be eligible. We could also play Tyson, Cornelius or Gray here."

Gray more than likely, will be at the small forward position, however. "Herb Krusen is back at this position, but Gray will give us more board power if he sustains a mental awareness here. Krusen is not as strong on the boards' but he is a great shooter. Hobson could also play here, too, and Miles will be a factor too. It's nice to have this kind of flexibility."

Mack will dominate the big guard position, but Krusen, Miles, Maynor and freshman Mark McLaurin could all see action here, too.

Mack, Mosley and Maynor head the list of characters at the point position. "We really don't want to play Mack here much. We don't want him to have to do everything. Maynor is making a good transition from junior college, and Moseley is improved from last year."

Gillman said there have been no real surprises as yet. "We kind of knew what to expect. We just want to get the most out of everyone."

As to disappointments, Gillman said there have been none of those either.

"I don't know how much the freshmen will play to start out with. We're going to play them as much as we can to get them ready and see how they respond."

And the players are ready to go. "We're tired of seeing our own faces against us," Gillman said. "We're ready to play someone in a different jersey. And we want to win. It's a lot more fun winning."

The Pirates get their first chance Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in Minges when they entertain UNC-Asheville in the season opener.

Gamecocks Rout Wake Forest

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Fullback George Rogers rushed for 237 yards, scored two touchdowns and set up two more scores with long runs to lead South Carolina to a 37-14 victory over Wake Forest in a nonconference college football game Saturday.

Rogers gained 147 yards in the first half as South Carolina, 5-4-1, built up a 23-14 lead. The Gamecocks threatened to break the game open after taking a 17-0 lead.

The loss was Wake Forest's 10th in a row after a seasonopening victory.

Rogers gained most of the yardage on South Carolina's first drive, which ended with the sophomore running back going over from one yard out with 10 minutes elapsed.

A little over five minutes later, South Carolina took possession after penalties and a stingy Gamecock defense caused one of several Wake Forest drives to fizzle. Rogers burst off left guard for a 72-yard touchdown on the first play from scrimmage.

On the first play of South Carolina's next possession, Rogers nearly broke away for a third touchdown, gaining 30 yards to the Wake Forest 39. Nine plays later Britt Parrish kicked a 22-yard field goal to give South Carolina a 17-0 lead.

Wake Forest closed the gap to 17-8, driving 63 yards in six plays before fullback Stan Rolark scored on a four-yard pass from quarterback David Webber. Tight end Michael Mullen ran for a two-point conversin.

Fumbles by quarterback Garry Harper and tailback Spencer Clark on South Carolina's next two possessions set up Wake Forest field goals of 28 yards by Frank Harnisch and 51 yards by Steve Schonert.

South Carolina padded its lead to 30-14 when Harper scored on a 10-yard keeper midway into the third quarter. The touchdown was set up by a 33-yard reverse by flanker Zion McKinney, who had nearly scored on a 35-yard reverse late in the first half.

Ferguson Shines

ATLANTA (AP) — Vagas Ferguson rambled for a school record 255 yards and scored one touchdown as 10th-ranked Notre Dame pounded Georgia Tech 38-21 Saturday for its eighth consecutive victory.

Joe Montana, who scored one touchdown and passed for two others, also edged his way into the Fighting Irish record book by completing 10 straight passes in the game.

The game was delayed for about five minutes when fans behind the Notre Dame bench began throwing objects at the players, and Coach Dan Devine took his squad to the center of the field while order was restored.

Ferguson, a 192-pound junior, got the Irish victory under way on the second play of the game when he raced 68 yards to the Tech 6, setting up a field goal.

Ferguson got his yardage on 30 carries, breaking his own single-game record of 219 yards set earlier this year. It lifted his season total to 1,160, breaking the Notre Dame record of 1,058 set two years ago by Al Hunter.

Nebraska Stunned

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Runningback James Wilder scored four touchdowns to set a Missouri record and lead the Tigers to a 35-31 upset victory over second-ranked and Orange Bowl bound Nebraska Saturday.

Wilder sealed the Huskers' fate, and at least dimmed NU's hopes for a national championship, when he barged four yards to score with 3:42 remaining in the game to cap a 74-yard Tiger drive that was highlighted by a 33-yard pass from Phil Bradley to Kellen Winslow.

The Tiger triumph also took the luster off the performance of Nebraska I-back Rick Berns who scored two touchdowns and rushed for 255 yards, to become the University of Nebraska's all-time leading ground gainer. The 255 yards surpassed by one yard the single game rushing record set by I.M. Hipp against Indiana in 1977.

Buckeyes Get Win

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Second-half touchdown runs of 3 yards by Art Schlichter and 46 yards by tailback Ricky Johnson rallied Ohio State to a 21-18 Big Ten victory over stubborn Indiana Saturday.

The Hoosiers, on a 1-yard touchdown run by Mike Harkrader and a 30-yard field goal by David Freud led 10-7 until late in the third quarter.

Schlichter, a freshman, then led the comeback starting the first drive after a 60-yard Hoosier punt. The Buckeyes, aided by an Indiana face-mask penalty, held the ball for 20 plays, all on the ground with Schlicter scoring the go-ahead touchdown with just three minutes left in the third quarter.

Michigan In Romp

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Rick Leach threw two touchdown passes and Russell Davis rushed for 127 yards Saturday as 7th-ranked Michigan rolled to a 24-6 Big Ten football victory over 15th-ranked Purdue.

Purdue, which was bidding for its first solo Big Ten championship since 1929, suffered a serious setback when quarterback Mark Herrmann went out with an injury in the first quarter and did not return.

Michigan led 10-0 at that point and easily handled freshman quarterback Chuck Oliver the remainder of the game to raise its record to 6-1 in the conference and 9-1 overall.

Purdue, which had owned a half-game lead, fell to 5-1 in the league and 7-2-1 overall with one game remaining.

MSU Upsets LSU

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Quarterback Dave Marler fired two touchdown passes and tailback James Jones rushed for 162 yards as the Mississippi State Bulldogs upset 17th-ranked Louisiana State 16-14 Saturday, but the Tigers retained hopes for a bid to the Liberty Bowl.

Liberty Bowl representatives in the stadium reportedly were considering the Tigers, now 6-3, for their game whether LSU won or lost the Southeastern Conference match.

Marler hit first-half touchdown passes of 20 yards to Mardye McDole and 18 yards to Jones as the Bulldogs, now 6-4, sought to keep alive thier own hopes for an invitatin to the Peach or Hall of Fame bowls.

Georgia Is Tied

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Eighth-ranked Georgia, shredded for a school record 250-yard rushing effort by Auburn's Joe Cribbs, settled for a 22-22 tie Saturday by kicking an extra point with 5:18 remaining, leaving the Southeastern Conference Sugar Bowl berth undecided for two more weeks.

Willie McClendon's 1-yard plunge brought Georgia within a point and Rex Robinson booted the conversion as Coach Vince Dooley disdained a two-point attempt.

The outcome left Georgia, 81-1 overall, with a 5-0-1 SEC record. Third-ranked Alabama, 5-0 in the conference and idle Saturday, can represent the SEC in the Sugar Bowl by defeating Auburn on Dec. 2.

Cribbs gained his 250 yards on 34 carries and scored on runs of 60 and 2 yards. Quarterback Charlie Trotman, benched for awhile in the second period, scored on a 60-yard run in the third quarter and threw a 44-yard pass to Mark Robins that set up Cribbs' second touchdown.

Lawrence Tops 2,000 In Tar Heel Victory

By GLENN STEPHENS
Associated Press Writer

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolihna running back Amos Lawrence made a believer out of coach Dick Bestwick of Virginia Saturday as he sparked the Tar Heels to a 38-20 win over the Cavaliers.

"Amos Lawrence is the best running back I have ever seen," Bestwick said. "He's better than (Tony) Dorsett — all of them. He's the best...just super."

Lawrence, a fleet 180-pound sophomore, ran 25 times for 131 yards and a touchdown, and is off to the best start ever by an Atlantic Coast Conference back.

The performance brought his career rushing total to 2,087 yards. Only two other ACC players have ever surpassed the 2,000-yard mark by their sophomore seasons — James McDougald of Wake Forest with 2,005 yards and Ted Brown of North Carolina State with 2,001.

But Lawrence was not a oneman show for the Tar Heels as freshman quarterbakc Chuck Sharpe came off he bench to replace junior starter Matt Kupec in the second period and scored on a pair of seven-yard runs and threw one touchdown pass. Sharpe completed 6 of 11 passes for 82 yards and ran 9 times for 100 yards.

"Sharpe played very well," coach Dick Crum of North Carolina said. "I don't know who our starter next week will be until we see the films."

The victory gave North Carolina a record 4-6 on the seaon and 2-3 in the conference, and Crum said he still feels the Tar Heels have a long way to go.

The Cavaliers fell to 2-7 and 0-5.

North Carolina got its first touchdown less than five minutes into the game after Ricky Barden intercepted a pass and returned it 33 yards to the Viginia 18. After a 15-yard penalty Kupec passed down the middle to Jim Rouse, who tipped the ball into the air and into the hands of Wayne Tucker in the end zone for a 27-yard scoring play.

Freshman quarterback Todd Kirtley then came off the bench for Virgina an marched tha Cavs 65 yards in 13 plays for a touchdwon after halfback Ken Mack fumbled and Mike Brancati recovered for the Cavaliers. Kirtley completed four passes on the drive, and fullback Dan Hottowe went the final yard, but Russ Henderson's conversion attemt failed, and Virginia trailed 7-6.

Sparpe then took over for the Tar Heels and engineered a pair of touchdown drives during a period of 1:09.

The first score followed a 30-yard punt by Henderson to the Virgina 40. Sharpe found tight end Bob Loomis open in the end zone from 17 yards away for the score.

McEnroe, Gullikson Reach Title Match

WEMBLEY, England (AP) — American tennis stars John McEnroe and Tim Gullikson, who played each other in last Monday's final of the Stockholm Open, Saturday qualified for the finals of a $175,000 Grand Prix Tenis Tournament here.

McEnroe defeated countryman Dick Stockton 6-4, 6-3, and Gullikson received a walkover when his 35-year-old semi-final opponent, Arthur Ashe, was forced to retire from the tournament with a neck injury.

Ashe injured his neck Friday when he hit his head on the top of a doorway when walking into a sportscasters box before his quarter-final match with Stan Smith. After that match his neck locked, and despite three hours of physiotherapy Saturday Ashe decided he was in too much pain to play the 27-year-old Gullkson.

"I cannot move my neck to the left at all," he said. "I am disappointed for the crowd and for myself, because I was on the brink of qualifying for the Masters.

McEnroe beat Gullikson 6-2, 6-3 in Stockholm and Gullikson had been hoping for a revenge meeting all week.

On his way to the final, Gullikson, the right-handed playing twin, has defeated top-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis and sixth-seeded Sandy Mayer.

Sunday's final will be played over five sets and will be worth $36,400 to the winner.

The tourney is sponsored by Benson & Hedges.

"I'm real pleased with the way our kids swam today," commented East Carolina coach Ray Scharf. "I'm real proud of the way they hung in there 'till the very end. We swam a real good meet considering the competition and how early in the season it is."

Penn State In Sugar; SEC Now Tied

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Top-ranked Penn State ended the suspense Saturday, accepting a bid to the Sugar Bowl to face the Southeastern Conference champion.

The Nittany Lions, idle Saturday, announced their decision shortly after Orange Bowlbound Nebraska, the nation's No. 2 team, was upset by Missouri 35-31.

Eighth-ranked Georgia, meanwhile, threw the SEC race in a tangle by tying Auburn 22-22. The deadlock was accomplished on a 1-yard touchdown plunge by Willie McClendon with 5:18 left to play and an extra point placement by Rex Robinson as Bulldog Coach Vince Dooley disdained a 2-point conversion attempt which might have meant victory.

"I felt it was the right decision because I thought we had time to hold them and then get in position for Robinson to kick a field goal," said Dooley.

The tie leaves the SEC title undecided until Dec. 2 when Auburn, which got 250 yards and two touchdowns from Joe Cribbs, plays No. 3 Alabama, which was idle Saturday. If Alabama wins that game, the Crimson Tide draws the Sugar Bowl bid. If Auburn wins, Georgia gets the conference title and the Sugar Bowl invitation.

Nebraska, hoping for a national championship showdown against Penn State, lost that chance when Missouri's James Wilder scored four touchdowns, the last one from 4 yards out with 3:42 remaining in the game.

The Cornhusker loss came despite a school record 255 yards and two TDs by Rick Berns, who became the school's all-time rushing leader.

Unranked Missouri's payoff for that upset will be a trip to the Liberty Bowl to face No. 17 Louisiana State, which lost to Mississippi State 16-14.

Meanwhile, Oklahoma, which lost to Nebraska 17-14 last week and dropped to No. 4, walloped Oklahoma State 62-7 as Billy Sims exploded for 209 yards and four touchdowns. Then the Sooners accepted an invitation to the Orange Bowl for a rematch with Nebraska.

Sims pushed his season rushing yardage to 1,762 yards, breaking the Big Eight singleseason rushing record of 1,680 yards set last year by Oklahoma State's Terry Miller.

Southern California will be the host team in the Rose Bowl after defeating UCLA 17-10 Saturday to clinch the Pacific-10 championship. Charles White ran for 145 yards, pushing his career total to 3,739, breaking the USC school record of 3,724 held by Anthony Davis.

The No. 5 Trojans won't know who they play in the Pasadena game until next Saturday when Michigan and Ohio State meet for the Big Ten championship.

Purdue, ranked 15th and bidding for its first Big Ten title since 1929, let the conference lead slip away Saturday, dropping a 24-6 decision to No. 7 Michigan as Rick Leach hurled two touchdown passes and Russell Davis rushed for 127 yards.

That left the Big Ten race in a three-way tie and, with Michigan State eliminated by its probation status, the trip to Pasadena will be decided in next week's game between the Wolverines and OSU. The No. 19 Buckeyes topped stubborn Indiana 21-18 Saturday on second-half touchdown runs of 3 yards by Art Schlichter and 46 yards by Ricky Johnson.

The loss to Michigan left Purdue at 7-2-1 and its consolation will be a trip to the Peach Bowl.

Offense, Defense Shine In Shutout

the 22, and Willie Holley recovered the ball there.

It took only two plays from there for the Bucs to score. After no gain on the first play, Collins took an option pitch at the right corner from Green, perfectly timed, and raced down the sidelines for the 22-yard score, with 3:40 left in the quarter. Lamm's first PAT made it 7-0.

The Pirates struck again on their next possession, after forcing a punt. They took over at their own 42, but were thrown back five yards by an illegal procedure penalty. Green was then sacked for a seven-yard loss, but made 11 yards back on the next play. Then, from the 41, Green made a quick pitch Collins, who handed off to split end Terry Gallaher, who handed the ball back to Green on the flea-flicker. Collins, who had continued on downfield, was wide open and took in the pass to go the 59-yard distance with 1:05 left, making it 14-0.

Again, the Pirates came back on their next possession to score again. The Bucs got the ball at the Marshall 29 after an interception by Fred Chavis, playing his first game since getting injured against Richmond. In seven plays, the Pirates moved to the three, and Green took the ball down the line to the left, cut in and scored to run it to 21-0 with 12:11 left

After failing to move the ball on their next possession the Bucs got it back at their own 43 after another punt. It took just one play this time, as Green hit Washington wide-open over the middle, and he easily went the final yards to the end zone, completing the 57-yard play with 5:44 left in the half. That made it 28-0.

Marshall's best effort came after that, as they moved from the 30 to the 48, where on fourth and one, they attempted a run off punt formation, but fell short of the first down by a yard, at the 47.

Wiley got a yard up the middle on the first play for the Pirates, then Collins again got loose, taking an option around the right side from Green, and battled his way past several would-be tacklers to break away and go 53 yards for the score.

That raised it to 35-0 with 1:24 left in the half.

East Carolina, after receiving the opening kickff, marched for its lone field goal. The big play in the drive was a 34-yard run by Theodore Sutton from the ECU 44 to the Marshall 22. Wiley added ten more, but the drive stalled at the 18, and Allen kicked his 35-yard field goal with 11:01 left. That ran it to 38-0.

Again, the Pirates came back on their next possesion to close out the scoring, with the second unit in the game. The drive took 12 plays and covered 73 yards. The Bucs were helped along by a 15-yard personal foul penalty against the Herd, along with a 19-yard run by Wiley, down to the two. He went over from there on the next play, and it was 45-0 with 3:56 left in the third period.

The Bucs had another chance later in the game when Gerald Hall returned a punt 42 yards to the Marshall 22, but a fumble cost them the ball a few plays later.

Hall had earlier had a 50-yard return, to the Marshall 14, but he lost the ball when he was tackled, turning it over.

Collins ended up with 90 yards on just five carries to be the top ground-gainer for the Pirates. Wiley finished with 64, while Sutton had 59 and Green rushed for 33.

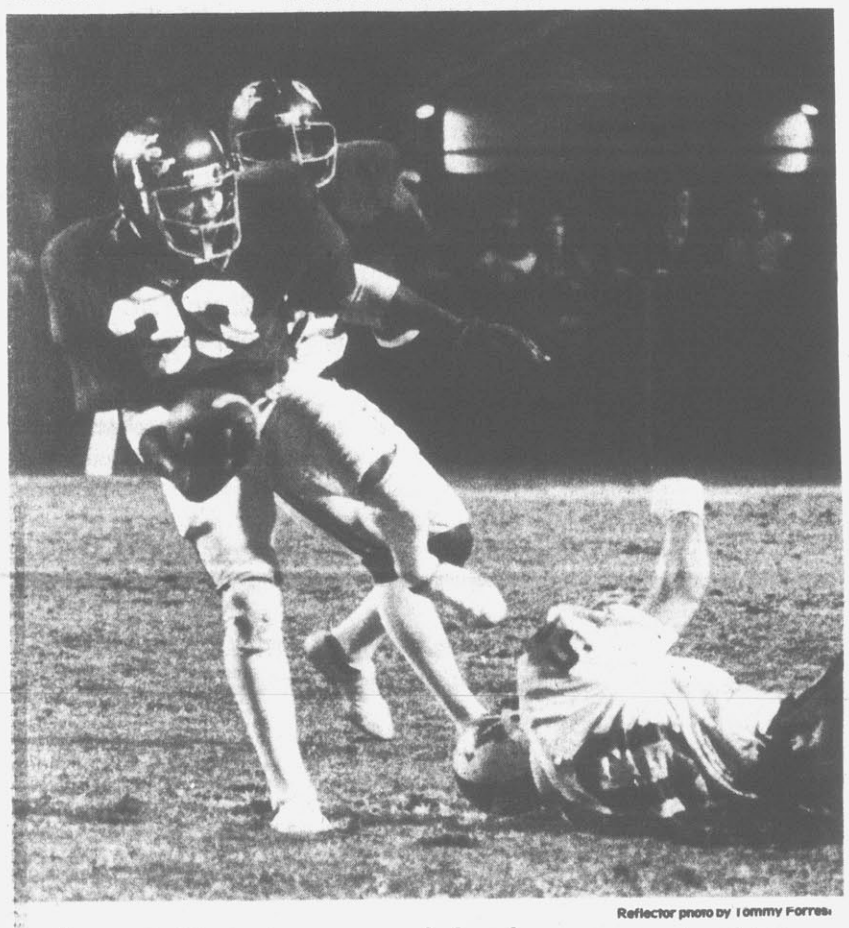

Word on the Independence Bowl's choice was expected sometime this afternoon, and apparently is the lone chance for the Pirates, who had been close to getting into a bowl for five of the past six years, but each time they have come up without an invitation.

They hope to break that jinx this time at the well.

Tornadoes Win Title

The Tornadoes defeated the Hot Shots 2-0 yesterday to capture the championship of the Greenville Recretion Department soccer program.

David Lee got an assist from Scott Carawan to put the Tornadoes in front with a first-quarter goal, while Josh Hickman scored for the winners in the final frame on an assist from Lee.

Lewis Robbins, Stuart Pittman, Steve Iaboni and Hickman were the defensive standouts for the Tornadoes. Jim Benedict, Marty Measamer, Catherine Land, Camille Cox and Robbie Erhman played well for the Hot Shots.

Blue Devils Get Nod

Duke's Blue Devils are the nation's No. 1 college basketball team in The Associated Press preseason poll for 1978-1979.

Last year's runners-up to the Kentucky Wildcats in the NCAA finals, the Blue Devils made it to the top of the poll Saturday on the strength of 38 first-peece ballots and 918 points.

The Atlantic Coast Conference power established a formidable lead over UCLA, the No. 2 team with 764 points. The Bruins were given eight first-place ballots by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

The defending national-champions Wildcats lost four of their top six players and were dropped to No. 11 by the voters, picking up no first-place ballots and a total of 199 points.

Notre Dame, one of the Final Four in last year's championship round in St. Louis, will start the season ranked third. The Irish collected one ballot for No. 1 and 685 points.

Louisville and Kansas, the only other team to collect a first-place vote, followed in the voting. Louisville landed the No. 4 spot with 492 points while Kansas gained the No. 5 position with 429 points.

Texas, winner of last year's National Invitation Tournament, gained the No. 6 ranking with 390 points, followed by two Big Ten teams, Michigan State and Michigan. Michigan State was accorded 348 points for No. 7 while Michigan was close behind in No. 8 with 342.

Syracuse, with 243 points, and Indiana, 210, finished out the Top Ten.

After Kentucky, the remainder of the Top Twenty included, No. 12 North Carolina State; No. 13 Southern Cal; No. 14 LSU; No. 15 Rutgers; No. 16 North Carolina; No. 17 San Francisco; No. 18 Marquette; No. 19 Alabama and No. 20 Nevada-Las Vegas.

Arkansas, the other member of last season's Final Four which lost stars Ron Brewer and Marvin Delph, was given honorable mention in the voting.

Nicklaus Holds Four-Stroke Margin

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, saying "it was a very diffucult day to play golf and I didn't play that well," shot a 2-over-par 74 Saturday but still held a 4-stroke lead after three rounds of the $253,000 Australia Open Golf Championship.

Playing in strong winds, Nicklaus notched one birdie on a faultless front nine. But he then bogeyed the 11th, 16th and 18th holes, coming home for his 74 that, with a 73 and a course-record 66 Friday, gave a 213 total.

The wind wasn't Nicklaus' only problem. He had a sore back and Thursday night he injured a shoulder plyaing tennis.

Second at 217 were Ben Crenshaw and another U.S. pro, Bruce Lietzke. Crenshaw matched Nicklaus' 74 Saturdey while Lietzke fired a 70, the lowest round of the day.

"I haven't been hitting the ball well all week, but the birdie on 14 that made me even-par for the day gave me confidence," said Lietzke."

Lietzke also birdied the 15th and 17th holes and missed a four-foot putt for a birdie on No. 16.

Tom Kite was alone in third after shoting a 77 for 221, 1 stroke ahead of Australian Graham Marsh, who shot a 76 for 222.

Tied at 223 were Greg Norman and Ed Sneed after shooting 76s. There were six golfers bunched at 224. One of them ws American Bob Byman, who was in second place after rounds of 72-71 before soaring to an 81.

Defending champion David Graham of Australia shot a 79 and was in a group at 225.

Jaguars Stampede Dark Horses, 32-0

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

FARMVILLE — Two years of pent-up frustration burst forth in the first half Friday night as Farmville Central avenged two straight losses at the hands of Clinton by routing the Dark Horses 32-0 in the eastern semifinals of the state 3-A football playoffs.

The game marked the third time in three years the two teams have met in the playoffs. Clinton won the first two, nipping the Jags in overtime in 1976 and rolling over them 41-21 last year.

Quarterback Donald Freeman and running back Donald Reid paced the charged-up Farmville offense as the Jaguars rolled to a 26-0 halftime margin. Freeman, playing perhaps his best game of the season, ran for touchdowns of two and four yards, and teamed up with flanker James Tyson on a 31-yard scoring toss. He was responsible for all 158 yards of Farmville's passing attack, connecting on 10 of 19.

Reid went over the 100-yard rushing mark for the second straight playoff game, picking up 128 yards on 20 carries. He scored on a four-yard run and kicked a conversion. David Dunn scored the winners' other TD from two yards away and also added a conversion kick.

The game wasn't the best of the season for the Jaguars, but it was a mighty satisfying victory, according to Farmville coach Gene Brewer. "Of course, we didn't want to lose to them a third time," Brewer said, adding, "We'd mentioned (the two losses) a couple of times during the week."

It was one of the best defensive performances for the powerful Farmville team. The Jaguars held the Dark Horses to 166 yards, while gaining 302 themselves. It was the fifth shutout of the season for Farmville.

Clinton coach Bobby Robinson had nothing but praise for the Jaguars' performance. "It's unusual when you find a team that runs the ball and throws the ball as well as they do in high school."

He said Farmville was a difficult team to defense because "you can't set for the run or the pass. They mix it up real well. They've got a heck of a football team. I don't think anybody's going to beat them."

In many ways, Friday night's game paralleled last week's 56-12 Farmville win over Tarboro. Both games were played under sloppy conditions and both were virtually over at halftime.

As in the Tarboro game, Clinton mistakes helped the Jaguars build an insurmountable lead by intermission.

The contest started out looking like a defensive battle with each team being stopped on its initial possession. The Jaguars got things going the second time they got the ball, however, driving 85 yards for their first touchdown.

The running of Reid and Freeman, who ran more in the game than in previous outings, picked up a first down for the Jags and Freeman hit Billy McLawhorn with a square-out pass for 13 yards to put the ball at the Jaguar 43.

The Farmville quarterback then sent Jeff Tyson on a fly pattern and hit him with a 37-yard pass. Four plays later, Freeman went over himself on an option play from the two and Dunn kicked the PAT.

The Farmville defense, led by the two Reids, Ronald and Donald, stopped the Dark Horses with one first down after the kickoff and the Jags took over at their own 24 following the punt.

Donald Reid went off right tackle on the option for 18 yards and then went up the middle on a trap play for 15 more. Freeman kept the ball on an option for 11 yards down to the Clinton 25, and after a clipping penalty moved the ball back, he hit James Tyson with a 31-yard scoring strike. Tyson ran a post pattern and Freeman laid a perfect spiral between two defenders for a 13-0 lead.

On the first play after the kickoff, Kelly Stanley took a pitch for the Dark Horses and heaved an option pass downfield for Michael Lindsay. But Calvin Horne stepped in front of it to intercept for Farmville at the Jaguar 45.

The Jags were held, but Kenny Poole fumbled Phillip Gordon's punt and Wesley Locust recovered at the Clinton 14 for Farmville. Dunn went over from the two with 2:33 left in the half.

Three plays later, the Jaguars had the ball again as Jeff Tyson intercepted a Derrick Smith pass at the Farmville 40 and returned it 40 yards to the Dark Horse 20. Clinton coach Bobby Robinson argued for a pass inteference call on the play and was slapped with an unsportsmanlike conduct penalty when he heaved a yardline marker onto the field.

That put the ball at the 10, and Freeman went over from the four with 33 seconds remaining in the half. Donald Reid kicked the PAT for a 26-0 lead.

The Jaguars' final score came on their first possession of the second half. They went 66 yards in six plays, keyed by a 22-yard run by Donald Reid and a 35-yard pass from Freeman to James Tyson. Donald Reid went the final four yards around left end to round ou the Farmville scoring.

The Jaguars relaxed a little on offense after that. "It's kind of hard to keep going after them when you're ahead by 32 points," Brewer said after the game.

Even the defense let up a bit, allowing the Dark Horses to drive into Farmville territory for the first time in the game. They got down to the 20, but were pushed back by a personal foul call.

Clinton also crossed midfield on the next-to-last play of the game when Smith scooped up a Jaguar fumble and returned it 14 yards to the 32. Quarterback Robbie Lucas threw an incomplete pass as the clock ran out.

The Jaguars, now 11-1 for the season, will travel to face undefeated Burlington Williams in the Eastern finals this week. Williams defeated previously-unbeaten Hillsborough Orange 43-12 Friday night.

Sparky Lyle Goes To Bat For Ex-Manager

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — When you divide up the World Champion New York Yankees of 1977 and 1978, you can put departed relief ace Sparky Lyle squarely in the corner of departed manager Billy Martin.

"Billy was the type of guy who instilled winning into the club," said Lyle, who was traded to Texas in a 10-player deal a week ago.

"Without him, I don't think the club could have turned out as great as it did. Billy was condemned for managing the way he played. He was always controversial, but when he was a manager, he had moved to the other side of the fence. It was all right when he was a player, but not for a manager."

Martin piloted the Yankees to the World Championship in 1977 in a tumultuous season in which, by his own count, he almost was fired five times. One of those near-misses came in mid-season when he nearly came to blows in the Yankee dugout with Reggie Jackson. Lyle remembered Martin's close call.

"At that time I said, if he gets fired over an incident with a player, then let that player be the manager. They call Reggie Jackson Mr. Autumn, but I don't think that makes a whole year."

Martin got into hot water again in 1978 and finally resigned in July with Bob Lemon taking the club over and directing a dramatic comeback that led to another World Championship.

"Once this club got rolling, I think anybody could have managed it and won," said Lyle. "We started winning before Billy left."

Less than a week after Martin's tearful departure, owner George Steinbrenner brought the fiery manager back on Old Timers Day, announcing he would return as Yankee pilot in 1980. Lyle, however, doesn't expect that to happen.

"They did that to quiet the people down," said Lyle. "They were hoping we would win the pennant and the Series again. People have a tendency to forget a little, especially after we won. I don't think he'll be there in '80."

Celtics Run, Present Cowens With First Victory By 120-118

By The Associated Press

It was like old times again for the Boston Celtics.

The Celtics, noted for their racehorse offense in past years but slow out of the blocks this season, reverted to their old style Friday night — in Dave Cowens' first game as playercoach — and held off the Denver Nuggets 120-118.

"I guess, as they say, nothing comes easy," Cowens said philosophically after Denver's David Thompson missed a desperation shot at the final buzzer.

"In the end, good old 'D (defense)' won it for us," added Cowens, who replaced Tom Sanders as coach earlier in the week. "We worked well as a team and the coaching also worked like a team. We were all psyched up. I got a lot of help from (assistant coaches) K.C. (Jones) and Bob (MacKinnon)."

The Celtics, running in their accustomed fashion, built a 20-point lead late in the third period, then had to withstand a furious Denver rally before gaining only their third victory in 13 games this seasson.

In other National Basketball Association games Friday night, the Washington Bullets routed the New Jersey Nets 143-94, the Philadelphia 76ers edged the Phoenix Suns 95-94, the Seattle SuperSonics downed the Indiana Pacers 126-115, the Chicago Bulls beat the Golden State Warriors 100-89 and the Los Angeles Lakers won their 12th straight game, 121-109 over the New Orleans Jazz.

Cowens' fiery play — he contributed 17 points and 12 rebounds before fouling out in the final minute — helped the Celtics break a six-game losing streak and hand the slumping, injury riddled Nuggets their fourth consecutive setback.

Billy Knight led the Celtics with 24 points, Chris Ford scored 22, Nate Archibald had 18 and JoJo White tallied 15. Thompson paced Denver with 33 points and reserve Robert Smith collected 19 — 12 in the final period.

Bullets 143, Nets 94

Washington's defending NBA champions, with Elvin Hayes hitting 22 of his 30 points in the first two periods, raced to a commanding 70-40 halftime lead and coasted to victory over the outclassed Nets.

"I've just been very confident the last six or seven games," said Hayes, who hit 15 of his 20 field goal attempts, helping the Bullets compile a remarkable 59 percent shooting average.

Mitch Kupchak added 21 points for Washington while Wes Unseld had 10 points, 14 rebounds and seven assists, including six on long outlet passes leading to breakaway layups in the first half.

Eddie Jordan was high for New Jersey with 19 points.

76ers 95, Suns 94

The 76ers, leaders of the Atlantic Division, boosted their record to 12-2 with the help of Doug Collins' 24 points, including two decisive free throws with four seconds reamining. During one stretch — in the closing minutes of the second period and the opening minutes of the third quarter — the 76ers reeled off 17 straight points in going from a 52-46 deficit to a 63-52 lead.

Paul Westphal topped Phoenix with 25 points.

Sonics 126, Pacers 115

The Sonics, leading the Pacific Division, also with a 12-2 record, handed Indiana its 24th consecutive loss on the West Coast since the Pacers joined the NBA in 1976.

Fred Brown and Lonnie Shelton each scored 25 points for Seattle while Tom LaGarde had 24. Ricky Sobers collected 25 points for the Pacers, who have lost five in a row.

Lakers 121, Jazz 109

The Lakers, unbeaten since a shaky 1-4 start this season, led virtually all the way against New Orleans.

'Trotter Geese Ausbie'

Geese Takes Center Post

The Harlem Globetrotters make their annual appearance at Minges Coliseum on Tuesday night at 7:30 p.m.

And perhaps the biggest question on the minds of everyone is: "What are the 'Trotters going to be like without Meadlowlark Lemon?"

Lemon, who reigned for 23 years as the kingpin of the clown antics of the team, requested to be released from his contract earlier in the year, and the Globetrotters granted his request.

But, according to Globetrotter representative Hallie Bryant, the successor to Meadowlark will soon have them rolling in the aisles just the same.

Hubert "Geese" Aubsie, a 6-5, 182-pounder from Crescent, Okla., has moved into the center position left vacent, and is doing an outstanding job of filling his predecessor's shoes.

"Geese is doing the job just like Meadowlark did," Bryant said. "He knows the routines, and that was what brought the laughs anyway. He has a great personality, and folks are soon going to be talking as much about Geese as they did about Meadowlark."

Aubsie starred in basketball, baseball, tennis and track at Douglas High School in Oklahoma, and still holds several Oklahoma basketball scoring records. He was offered a baseball contract by the St. Louis Cardinals, but choose to stick with basketball, attending Philander Smith College in Little Rock, Arkansas, where he was the nation's third leading scorer his senior year, behind Elgin Baylor and Oscar Robertson.

"Geese can do the job," Bryant said. "Before Meadowlark took over, people grew up with Goose Tatum in the middle for the 'Trotters, and they felt that no one would ever be able to take his place. But the act was just as good with Meadowlark in there.

"And it's going to be just the same with Geese. Now, another whole new generation is going to grow up with Geese as it hero."

Baltimore, Cleveland Turned Things Around

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Remember the start of the National Football League season when the Baltimore Colts lost their first two games by whopping scores of 38-0 to Dallas and 42-0 to Miami? Well, forget it, because Baltimore certainly has.

Everybody was getting ready to throw a benefit for the sad sack Colts after those two early debacles and a 1-4 start. But the club has turned things around, winning three of its last four games including decisions over a couple of first place teams, Denver and Washington.

Ironically, Baltimore's Sunday opponents, the Cleveland Browns started the season in the opposite direction from the Colts. The Browns won three straight before going into a tailspin that has left them staggering under the burden of six losses in the last eight games.

So the two clubs go into Sunday's game with identical 5-6 records but Baltimore feels pretty good about its mark while Cleveland is kind of depressed about the same numbers.

Elsewhere Sunday, Cincinnati plays at Pittsburgh, New England visits the New York Jets, Seattle goes to Kansas City, Atlanta is at Chicago, San Francisco hosts Los Angeles, Dallas is at home to New Orleans, Philadelphia visits the New York Giants, St. Louis is at Washington, Buffalo plays at Tampa Bay, Oakland is at home for Detroit, Green Bay plays at Denver and San Diego travels to Minnesota.

In the Monday night game, Miami plays at Houston.

The Colts got well in a hurry last week, beating Washington in the Monday night game and then coming back with short preparation to knock off Seattle, as well.

Baltimore quarterback Bert Jones, still favoring a bad shoulder, completed 12 of 17 passes for 128 yards. Ten of the completions were to running back Don McCauley, accounting for 88 yards of Jones' air game.

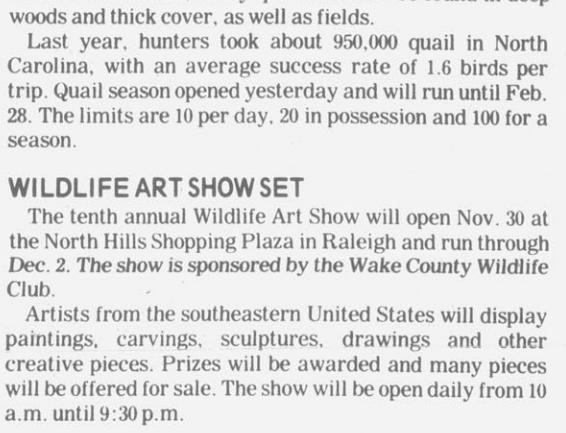

Sunday's Baltimore-Cleveland contest means little in the NFL playoff picture but there are several other games that are vital to teams who hope to keep on playing after the 16-game regular season is over.

The Green Bay-Denver game matches two teams, each tied for their division lead. Green Bay is deadlocked with Minnesota for first place in the NFC Central at 7-4 and defending AFC champion Denver is tied with Oakland for the West lead, also at 7-4.

Dallas, one game back of Washington in the NFC East, is getting set for a Thanksgiving Day showdown with the Redskins but first must deal with New Orleans while the 'Skins play St. Louis.

New England, tied with Miami for first in the AFC East, plays the in-and-out Jets, who'll welcome back quarterback Richard Todd, out for seven games with a cracked collarbone. The Dolphins don't play until Monday night against Houston.

In the fourth game of the 1929 World Series between the Philadelphia Athletics and the Cubs, George Burns of the A's made two outs in one inning as his team rallied for 10 runs.

QUAIL HUNTERS SHOULD have a good season this year, according to the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission, due to favorable conditions during the spring and summer for nesting and raising young birds.

"Quail hunting should be good in eastern North Carolina this year, and fair in the Piedmont and west," according to Grady Barnes, assistant chief of the Commission's game division. "This is about the same situation as we had last year."

Barnes said the state had an average spring and summer, which is good for nesting and raising young birds. "If you have an exceptionally hot, dry spring and summer, you get poor nesting success. If you have a lot of cold, damp weather in the spring, many of the young will die of exposure."

Quail seem to have changed their eating habits, much like rabbits, which were discusssed in this column last week. Like rabbits, many quail can now be found in deep woods and thick cover, as well as fields.

Last year, hunters took about 950,000 quail in North Carolina, with an average success rate of 1.6 birds per trip. Quail season opened yesterday and will run until Feb. 28. The limits are 10 per day, 20 in possession and 100 for a season.

WILDLIFE ART SHOW SET

The tenth annual Wildlife Art Show will open Nov. 30 at the North Hills Shopping Plaza in Raleigh and run through Dec. 2. The show is sponsored by the Wake County Wildlife Club.

Artists from the southeastern United States will display paintings, carvings, sculptures, drawings and other creative pieces. Prizes will be awarded and many pieces will be offered for sale. The show will be open daily from 10 a.m. until 9:30 p.m.

Hunting Safety

There is an average of 22 to 35 hunting accidents per year in North Carolina, and nearly all of them are preventable, according to the Wildlife Resources Commission.

"The two main causes of hunting accidents in North Carolina are shooting at unknown objects and self-inflicted wounds caused by falls," according to C. J. Overton, assistant chief of the Commission's division of enforcement and director of the Hunter Safety Program. "Almost all of the accidents falling within these two categories could easily be prevented."

A hunter should never shoot until he is sure of his target, Overton said. When carrying a gun, always be aware of where the muzzle is pointed, so if a fall does occur and the gun goes off, it won't hit anybody.

The third-leading category of accidents occur while taking loaded firearms out of a vehicle. Carrying loaded firearms in a vehicle is legal in North Carolina, but is not a good practice.

Last year there were 24 hunting accidents in the state. Of those 24, 11 occurred while deer hunting, five occurred dove hunting, three while rabbit hunting, two squirrel hunting and one duck hunting.

Dove and deer hunting are especially dangerous because of the large number of hunters in the field at one time.

Alcohol is also a problem, said Overton. "We don't have any cold, hard figures available, but a large percentage of people involved in hunting accidents have been drinking."

Dr. Stan Riggs On Project Exploring Aussie Phosphate Deposits

BIG ONE FELLED — John Rowe, who's almost a six-footer, stands inside the hollow stump of a huge old cypress recently felled just north of the Tar River along Green Street. Rowe's estimate is that the tree measured nearly 12 feet across at the base. Rowe, from the town of Currie near Wilmington, operates a right-of-way clearing firm and has been clearing the area parallel to Tar River where utility power lines run. "We've had to cut several fine trees," he commented, "including some really big old oaks. (Reflector photo by Jerry Raynor)

ECU News Bureau

Studies by a team of world scientists including an East Carolina University geologist, Dr. Stan Riggs, one of the U.S. representatives, may prove to be of significant, long-range importance in solving food supply problems for Asia's millions.

The geologic team is studying known phosphate deposits in the remote outback region of Australia where field work was conducted as part of an international workshop in August. Subsequently, the scientists will attempt to trace and assess the few known phosphate deposits which occur in a broad band across Thailand, India, Pakistan, China, Mongolia and eastern (Asiatic) Russia.

Riggs, who participated in the Australian outback field work and formal seminar sessions on Magnetic Island in Australia's Great Barrier Reef, says a major objective is to establish the geologic potential for new deposits for phosphate throughout the vast, poorly known regions of Asia.

"This project is concerned basically with the origin and distribution in time and space of one of the world's most important, non-renewable resources—phosphate—which is a basic ingredient for agricultural fertilizer," Riggs says.

Emphasis is on Asian phosphates since this is a portion of the world which has some of the world's largest populations and population growth rates, Riggs said.

"Thus there is an exponentially increasing need and dependence upon high-intensity fertilizer agriculture to feed the masses," he said.

Asian countries which will be included in the coming studies have roughly one half of the world's population and at present have almost no known phosphate resources.

Riggs began his research on the genesis of phosphorite sediments in 1962 and since has done extensive work throughout the southeastern U.S., Mexico, south America, Africa and Australia. His expertise in phosphate geology led to his appointment as a member of the U.S. Working Group on Phosphates by the International Union of Geological Sciences earlier this year.

The study project, entitled "The Proterozoic and Cambrian Phosphorites in Australia and Asia" is being sponsored jointly by the International Geological Correlation Program and UNESCO. Dr. Riggs' participation is being funded by grants from the National Science Foundation and the East Carolina University Research Council.

The rocks being investigated were deposited in ancient shallow seas during the Proterozoic and Cambrian periods of geologic times; that is between one billion and 500 million years ago. During this time, Australia, India and Asia were located much closer to each other, in a different position on the Earth's surface than they now occur, and large portions were below sea level receiving marine deposits including phosphates.

"One of the key aspects in discovering new phosphate deposits lies in our ability to reconstruct the complex geologic history of this extensive and ancient rock sequence," Riggs says.

Participants in the international project in addition to the seven member U.S. working group include similar working groups from India, Malaysia, Thailand, Pakistan, China, Russia, France, England, South Africa, New Zealand and Australia. The next sessions of the project are scheduled in New Delhi, India, in 1979.

'Picked By God' To Buy House

PRESTONSBURG, Ky. (AP) — "I don't know why God picked two little people in eastern Kentucky to help someone else, but he did," said Linda Ranier, who with her husband bought a $195,000 house for the president of a Christian television network in Charlotte, N.C.

Mrs. Ranier, 37, and her husband, Harry, 41, operate coal, real estate and stock car businesses here.

She said they had been avid viewers for two years of The PTL Club, a two-hour daily talk show hosted by Jim Bakker and aired on 265 stations in the U.S. and abroad.

Mrs. Ranier said she and her husband met Bakker and his wife, Tammy, only two months ago, "but we know what they stand for and we believe in what they do."

The Bakkers "are the simplest little couple you would ever want to meet. And no one seemed to care for them," Mrs. Ranier said.

The Bakkers had been house-hunting, "so they knew what was available in Charlotte," Mrs. Ranier said. "All four of us went out to look one night, saw it and liked it. So we bought it for them."

She described it as a 10-year-old house in Fox Croft, "the most gorgeous section of Charlotte."

Ranier, 41, said he did not want publicity, but was not surprised when a reporter called.

"People don't understand religious organizations," he said. "They're always trying to find weak places in them. But they won't find anything wrong with what we did. It really isn't anything big. We know why we did it and we're happy we did."

Bakker said earlier this week he and his wife would live in the house rent-free, but did not receive title to it. The Bakkers currently own a $79,000 house on Lake Wylie in South Carolina, south of Charlotte.

"They want to provide a home for me," he said. "That's in their heart. We asked the people to give the money to the college. They said they would help the college later on, but they want to do this. They're extremely wealthy people. They like to help ministers."

He was referring to a $100 million construction project in South Carolina that is to offer curricula for kindergarten through college. The project includes condominiums, a resort and camping area.

A PTL statement last summer said it was receiving $1.5 million a week in donations at one point, but that donations had fallen drastically in recent months and the network was $6 million in debt on its construction project.

PTL two weeks ago missed its $250,000 payroll for the first time in its five-year history.

When Nudity Pays Off

URBANA, Ill. (AP) — Men at the University of Illinois who sleep in the nude have little to fear, but those who slumber in their underwear had better be on the alert.

Someone wandering around the campus likes to cut the underwear off sleeping male undergraduates.

University police are investigating four such nocturnal assaults, and Police Chief Paul Dollins said, "It's bizarre behavior."

Housing Director Sammy Rebecca admitted that he worries there may be a dark psychological side to the "underwear bandit," but he isn't ruling out a prank.

PTL DECISION

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Officials of the PTL religious television network said Friday that the network will stop banking at North Carolina National Bank because the bank refuses to pay PTL for pledges charged to credit cards.

Pollution, Insects, Nature Taking Toll Of Masterpieces

By DENNIS REDMONT
Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) — Bugs, pollution, moisture, excessive heat and cold are bringing gradual decay to most of the world's great masterpieces, and museums are doing little to prevent it, art experts warn.

At a conference here this week, museum curators and directors cited these examples:

—Energy blackouts and brownouts during fuel crises have cracked and split dozens of Renaissance paintings.

—Bronze disease, or corrosion by salts, are gnawing away at thousands of archeological objects throughout Mediterranean countries whose art conservation budgets cannot cover protection.

—Even masterpieces in the pope's private apartments had to be removed recently after detection of flaking because of central heating.

"People tend to think works of art are eternal but ... the unpleasant truth is that many are falling to pieces. I would say this is the case of 90 percent of the art works around the world," said Dr. Bernard Feilden, director of the Romebased International Center for the Preservation and Restoration of Cultural Property.

The organization, founded by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization nearly 20 years ago, has 61 member countries. It sponsored the week-long conference on climate control, which brought together for the first time architects and other museum experts.

"In the past, all the limelight has been on thefts and vandalism, but there has been little talk about climate control, which inflicts much more damage on a global, far-ranging basis," said Garry Thomson, scientific adviser to London's National Gallery and author of the first exhaustive study of the subject.

Among the problems: Dry air causes painted wood panels to warp. Woodscreens and sculpture split. Parchment and other fibers become brittle and crack.

"The scourge of 20th center has been central heating," noted Simon Levie, director general of Amsterdam's famous Rijksmuseum, the only museum in Europe with fully air-conditioned quarters. High costs have deterred the Louvre in Paris, Madrid's Prado, Leningrad's Hermitage and the Vatican Museum from having total climate control.

Humidity also can cause oil paintings to buckle. Sensitive glass can crack. Even visitors' coats bring the outside environment indoors.

Dr. Robert Matthai, charman of the American Association of Museums Energy Committee, said at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, 5,000 daily visitors add up to a ton of moisture to the building's interior.

Matthai, who works at New York's Museum of Natural History, said climate will "bedevil" museums for years. "In the case of energy crises, hospitals don't get cut off but museums do, and art works suffer," he said.

Architects were criticized at the meeting, Matthai said, "because every building since 1970 was built without energy in mind." In many cases, architects built spectacular structures without a thought to daylight variations or vibrations from traffic.

He said this was changing and predicted that in 50 years, more and more museum pieces will be encased in bubbles or buffered cases.

Showcase paintings such as the Mona Lisa will travel more easily due to technological advances in humidity control. Those at the meeting told of protection provided by zeoli or silica gel which shie paintings from changing e vironments.

Other suggestions include u of disinfectant doormats avoid bacteria dragged in visitors' shoes; elimination carpeting which cause stat electricity; moving stor sculpture inside.

But costly mistakes oft occur. A few years ago, perfectly preserved 3,000-yea old wooden barge 100 feet lon only one of a kind, wa discovered in Egypt. A speci museum was constructe around the boat near Cairo, b the boat crumbled to pieces du to the change in climate.

Some curators, especiall from Mediterranean countri with a pleasant climate, favo little protection to some a works so the wood and canva gets used to temperature ar humidity variations.

"It is incredible that so mar treasures in Italian churche have been preserved so we through the thick and thin weather and war," remarke Giovanni Schicchilone, curat of Italy's Abruzzi region. "Ho some of them have kept so we has just baffled us. The on explanation I have for som cases is that what kept them fair shape was a lot of prayer."

One Way To Get Started

CHICAGO (AP) — "I Wanna Be Discovered" say the two painted characters on the the huge billboard that overlooks busy Lake Shore Drive.

The characters are the work of 31-year-old Susan Collins who wants to be a syndicated cartoonist. To let the world know it, she has spent $7,000 to advertise her cartoon strip idea for two months on a rented billboard.

The billboard, 21 feet high and 66 feet long, is across from Soldier Field, home of the Chicago Bears.

The sign features Ms. Collins' two cartoon characters — a divorcee and a bachelor neighbor — who would star in her proposed cartoon strip called "Once Removed."

"Cartooning is a powerful medium and something I really want to get involved in," said Ms. Collins, a divorcee herself. "But there is fierce competition in the profession. The only feedback I've had so far (about her sign) is from the news media. No one has inquired about syndicating it, and that is what I'm after. Getting an agent aroused is tough, but the public is starting to talk about the sign now."

artist, Ms. Collins said she had to take out loans to rent the billboard from Triangle Sign Co. Any inquiries about the cartoon must go through the company since Ms. Collins has no identification or phone number on the sign.

"If anyone is really interested, he will find out who is behind it," says Ms. Collins.

She has a six-week backlog of her cartoon strip. Her characters don't have names because she feels people find it easier to identify with characters if they aren't named.

Ms. Collins says she has been an avid follower of cartoons and newspaper funnies since she was a little girl and explains that her strip is about "two basic people communicating with each other — their ways of thinking; their thoughts of the day based on news events or experiences; their complaints, their philosophies, and their way of coping with them.

"There is a funny side to everything, and I try to make the end of each strip leave the reader with a smile," said Ms. Collins, who said she started drawing her cartoons two years ago after getting divorced. "I needed an outlet for my feelings and this seemed to be it."

Sioux Indians Plan First Tribal TV Station

By ERIC NEWHOUSE
Associated Press Writer

PINE RIDGE, S.D. (AP) — The Oglala Sioux are taking to the airwaves — they hope. In the works is the first Indian owned and operated television station, aimed at the 14,000 residents of the nation's secondlargest Indian reservation.

The tribal council plans news in the tribe's native tongue, Lakota, and programs like "As Long as the Grass Shall Grow," modeled after "Sesame Street." It proposes "Unkita Oyate," a series about the Indian people, and programs on alcohol and drug abuse.

"Last week, we became the first Indian tribe in the United States to apply for a license to operate a television station on an Indian reservation," said Tim Giago Jr., a spokesman for the Oglala Sioux.

"We told the Federal Communications Commission that we had been ignored because of our vast size and our isolation," he said. "And they assured us that we were in the right place at the right time."

Nationally, a television station and a cable TV operation are owned and operated by blacks. But the Pine Ridge station would be the first for Indians.

The Pine Ridge Indian Reservation, some two million acres of rolling South Dakota prairie between the Badlands National Park and Nebraska, is home to about 14,000 Oglala Sioux.

"Lack of communication is one of the greatest problems on the reservation," Giago said. "And television is almost our sole source of entertainment and information, particularly during the winter.

"So we decided to go for the whole ball of wax, an Indian television station," he said.

Two Rapid City television stations — one an ABC affiliate, the other an NBC station — now broadcast to the reservation.

Last month, the tribal council voted unanimously to form the Oglala Sioux Broadcasting Co. After meeting with FCC attorneys in Washington, the corporation filed a petition this week for a station on the reservation.

In an interview Friday, Giago said the project would be funded by a $1.5 million loan from a Nebraska bank with a repayment guarantee by the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

The proposed station would broadcast from a 1,000-foot tower about 25 miles northeast of Wounded Knee, the site of the massacre of some 300 Indians in 1890 which was taken over by militant Indians five years ago. The station's signal would carry about 60 miles.

Giago said he plans to begin training reporters and on-camera personnel next month to produce an hour-long local newscast each night, half in English and half in Lakota. And the tribe is negotiating with CBS for a network affiliation.

The tribal council hopes to have the station on the air by next September.

All Wet About 'Bird-In-Hand'

A BIT OF A FLAP IN THE BRONX — Keeper Bob Eddington finds himself all wet, right foreground, as he attempts to get a bird in the hand during annual roundup of pelicans on one of the ponds in the Bronx Zoo. Farm Is Dedicated To Using The Old Ways

By WILLIAM O'BRIEN

ACCOKEEK, Md. (UPI) — The agricultural heritage of colonial America — tilling and planting done by hand, crops raised without insecticides — is being preserved on a 280-acre farm in Southern Maryland.

The National Colonial Farm, in Piscataway National Park, is a "living" museum showcasing the agricultural techniques of the 1700s.

Staple crops, including corn and tobacco, are raised without insecticides. The tilling and planting is done by hand. Strict attention is paid livestock tending to assure it is done in the same manner a Chesapeake Bay area colonist would have.

But the Accokeek Foundation, a private concern which operates the farm in cooperation with the National Park Service, is looking forward as well as backward in terms of experimentation.

For example, the farm's operators hope current research can be applied to such modern problems as crop blight, a disease that nearly wiped out American chestnut trees more than 50 years ago.

During the past decade, farm administrators have been nurturing a grove of chestnut trees, whichswere used by colonists for fences and houses. This year, for the first time, the grove produced a substantial harvest of nuts without insecticides.

Dr. David Percy, assistant director of the farm, said that by experimentally irradiating chestnut seeds, scientists hope to produce the right combination of genetic characteristics to make the chestnut tree blight resistant.

"In all of our research, we are looking 10 to 15 years into the future," Percy explained.

The research extends to such valuable annual crops as corn, tobacco and soybeans, as well as grass. The farm leases a 14acre plot to the Scott Grass Seed Co., which develops and tests hundreds of different strains of grass used in parks and lawns.

The primary feature of the farm, however, is its faithful adherence to middle-class colonial life along the nearby Potomac River.

Situated across the river from historic Mount Vernon, the Colonial Farm consists of a group of gray, weather-beaten wood buildings that typify the period.

The board-and-batten main farmhouse is protected from sun and rain by rough hewn shingles. Nearby is an outhouse, the kind colonists referred to as "the necessary."

Not far from the house is a herb garden, a source of spices and home remedies during the colonial period.

Clare Moran, a farm administrative assistant, points out that some herbs, such as foxglove, were even used to treat heart disease. "They treated everything that we wouldn't dream of trying now — any kind of disease."

The farm also contains a kitchen garden with a variety of vegetables including potatoes, radishes, okra, egg plant and various types of beans.

"We try not to plant anything that is not colonial," said Mrs. Moran. "For instance, we don't grow tomatoes because they were considered poisonous by the colonists."

Mrs. Moran noted that experimentation is carried on even in the garden.

For example, it is believed that the potato bug can be staved off by planting horseradishes nearby. "It seems to work, but we'll have to try it out for another year," she said.

Now as in colonial times, livestock is an integral part of the farm. Cattle, pigs and barnyard fowl are bred for the same characteristics valued in colonial times.

Mrs. Moran said Red Devon cattle were prevalent in Southern Maryland during the colonial period. "They were an all-purpose breed," she said. "They could be trained as oxen as well as furnish meat and milk."

Horned Dorset sheep, which have the peculiar ability to give birth at various times of the year, were also raised, she said, and the pigs were a cross between domestic swine and the indigenous wild hog variety.

The farm, which also serves as a tourist attraction, is supported by an Accokeek Foundation endowment, as well as other grants and contributions. However, this year foundation officials expect to receive a $300,000 allotment out of the Department of Interior appropriations funding.

Each year, in the spring and fall, the farm conducts sales of its goods and reenacts colonial life, complete with authentic costumes, for tourists.

Teams Studying Bird Migration

SWARTHMORE, Pa. (AP) — The odyssey of migrating birds has long fascinated earthbound observers, but beyond the fact that millions of birds go south for the winter, little has been learned.

What routes birds take, how fast and how high they fly and why some birds complete the trip and others don't, have been some of Mother Nature's greatest mysteries.

But a team of scientists and trackers headed by a Swarthmore College husband-and-wife team have unlocked some of the secrets of the migrating flocks.

Findings by the team, led by the Timothy Williamses, were published recently in Scientific American and the ornithological journal, American Birds.

Their observations show that:

—More than 100 million birds, most of them rather small, make the annual southerly flight from eastern North America.

—The migration occurs in waves, apparently triggered by favorable flight conditions accompanying the northwesterly winds of a cold front. The birds begin their flights every few days, using the winds to help them reach Bermuda from the U.S. shoreline in about 18 hours.

—The birds travel two main routes, one following the coast to Florida and turning southeast through the Caribbean, the other taking birds from points between Nova Scotia and Virginia southeast to the Sargasso Sea, where the prevailing winds shift to the northeast and aid the birds' flight to the Caribbean.

The scientists said few birds landed at Bermuda. Most continue, at a slower pace, on a 48-hour flight to Antigua in the West Indies. Some travel on 18 more hours to South America.

Some birds fly as high as 20,000 feet, where the temperature is about 32 degrees and the air contains only half the oxygen at sea level. Most birds have lungs in which the blood flow is opposite that of the incoming air, enabling them to extract oxygen more efficiently than most other animals.

The birds fly at speeds averaging between 20 and 40 mph. Total time for their 2,000-mile transoceanic flight averages 86 hours, according to the team's observations.

The 2,000-mile nonstop flight is believed to be the longest in both time and distance for small birds. While radar does not allow identification of species, the Williams couple said the majority likely were such shorebirds as warblers, plovers and sandpipers.

The degree of exertion required for the journey is unmatched by any other vertebrate, the researchers noted.

The age-old question of navigation still has not been answered. The Williamses said current experimental research indicated the birds could establish and maintain a compass heading using the stars, the sun or the earth's magnetic field, although thousands were blown off course by storms and lost in the Atlantic.

Retriever Now An Aqua Dog

MODESTO, Calif. (AP) — Queen of the Sierra, a labrador retriever, likes to retrieve things not from bushes but from water.

The dog, belonging to Dave Meek, dives head first to the bottom of her master's 10-feetdeep swimming pool to fetch a swim fin or scuba mask.

Meek said Sierra, who is 9 months old, took her first big plunge about five months ago when a fin landed in the pool and she dived three feet to retrieve it in the shallow end. She progressed to the deep end and dives deeper yet at a lake, he said.

Peru Has A Gold Rush

GOLD RUSH — Miners use sluice box to separate gold from gravel on banks of the Madre de Dios River in Peru. Thousands of gold hunters flocked to the area after a woodcutter first spotted the glitter of gold flakes two years ago. (AP Laserphoto)

By KERNAN TURNER
Associated Press Writer

MADRE DE DIOS RIVER, Peru (AP) —Miners are sifting the sand and gravel of this meandering, brown river in the Amazon jungle in what government officials liken to a 20th century version of the California and Alaska gold rushes.

The government bank, Banco Minero, which buys the gold, reports the region's production has increased from 64 troy ounces in 1971 to a projected 38,581 this year — worth $7.8 million at current prices.

"This is gold fever. It's Alaska and California, but here and now," a bank spokesman who asked anonymity said in Lima. "A young man only needs a sleeping bag and courage to enter the jungle for a month to learn the ropes and then stake out his own claim."

Though the gold is being found far from the international exchanges, the rush to the Amazon is one result of the sky-high prices which gold commands these days — $202 in London on Thursday, for example.

Meanwhile, the Peruvian currency, the sol, has been taking a beating far worse than even the shaky dollar. For example, one dollar bought 45 soles in 1975 — and 187 today. Such instability enhances the lure of the jungle, where a miner is paid his own country's currency at a rate pegged to the dollar price of gold on the international market.

Small operators have panned gold on river beaches for years, barely eking out a living. But a boom began two years ago when a woodcutter saw the glitter of tiny gold flakes exposed by a fallen tree's roots.

It revealed that ancient riverbeds abandoned by the jungle rivers were rich in gold-bearing gravel, a source never before tapped.

Today, the bank estimates Peru's southeastern jungle deposits at 2 billion cubic meters of gravel containing an average of .4 grams of gold per cubic meter — $5.2 billion worth at Thursday's prices.

The Madre de Dios, wider than the Hudson or the Columbia and as crooked as the Mississippi, and other rivers wash the gold into the jungle from the Andean mountains to the west. The government Minero Peru mining company estimates there is a potential 2 billion grams of gold there worth $13 billion, more than Peru's foreign debt.

In hopes of increasing gold reserves to help pay the $8.27 billion foreign debt, the government has exonerated miners from all taxes if at least 75 percent of their production is from the jungles, and the military regime lets miners import scarce mining equipment duty free.

Even with the simple equipment available, the mining ministry says nearly 1,000 claims of from 2.5 to 2,500 acres have been staked out since May. About 15,000 men have come to an area near the Brazilian and Bolivian borders 540 air miles and 1,044 road miles east of Lima.

The population has doubled in two years to one person a square mile.

Banco Minero engineers estimate a man can work 1.5 to 3 cubic meters a day, with registered mines yielding between 1 to 1.5 grams a cubic meter — from $6.50 to nearly $30 worth of gold a day. That compares with a legal minimum wage in the region of less than $38 a month.

Terci Tamayo, head of the bank branch in Puerto Maldonado, said a medium-sized operator with eight men, each producing three grams of gold a day, could make nearly $700 a month profit.

"But we're looking for bigger investors," Tamayo said. "The law is an invitation to all to come to Peru and look for gold."

He said bank studies show a $113,000 investment in an operation with a small dredge and five or six men could produce more than $5,000 worth of gold a day. Larger dredges, costing between $3 million and $5 million, could produce about $32,500 worth.

But the dream is not reality. The miners don't have dredges and rely on muscles and primitive sluice boxes to wash the flakes from gravel.

Their operations line the Madre de Dios and tributaries such as the Inambari and the Tambopata. In the jungle, men dig to old river beds — hot, dirty work amid a gravel beach about an hour's canoe trip upriver from Puerto Maldonado. He's taken gold from the river for 19 years.

"I make a living," he said, wiping sweat from his eyes. "But I haven't saved anything yet."

He grabbed a shovelful of gravel and walked to the river. Working the shovel blade, he soon produced tiny flakes glittering in the dark sand. It takes 3,000 to 4,000 flakes to make a gram of gold.

Upriver, where the Inambari joins the Madre de Dios, the Amarakaire Indian tribe works an old riverbed a half-hour walk into the jungle.

Miners say Chief Lucio Tarzan, who is shirtless and barefoot, recently used tribesmen with bows and arrows to convince intruders to leave. Members of the tribe also say some 60 men produce 4 to 6 grams each day — one of the richest deposits in the area.

The miners sell the gold at Puerto Laberinto or Puerto Maldonado, two riverside towns with branch offices of the Banco Minero.

Puerto Laberinto is a dirt street from a primitive sawmill to the canoe dock — a brawling Saturday night watering hole until the government outlawed sales of alcoholic beverages in the mining zone.

Puerto Maldonado, a twohour drive downstream, is a boom town. The population has doubled in two years to 15,000, 90 percent in mining, and there is jet airline service, satellite telephone and television service, electricity and a water tank for 48,000 people. There are small hotels, a taxi, thousands of small Japanese motorcycles.

Juan Neuenschwander, a 40-year resident of Swiss-German descent, says there are riches for a few, but the rest barely make a living.

Governors Say More Exports Needed

By CHARLES CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

BUFORD, Ga. (AP) — The United States needs to export more goods and governors can make it happen, a committee of governors meeting at a north Georgia resort has decided.

The executive committee of the National Governors' Association voted Friday to establish a new standing committee on international trade to help governors who want to encourage exports from their states.

"The governors can open doors, and promote exports, in ways the United States just can't do," Gov. Reubin Askew of Florida said.

In recent years, many states have opened overseas offices and many governors have campaigned aggressively to open international markets for their home state products.

"We must all work hard to correct the misbelief that exports are only of peripheral importance to our economy's stable growth," Gov. George Busbee of Georgia, chairman of the new committee, said in a statement.

"National pride and survival demand that our export trade be substantially increased."

If restrictions on businesses that want to increase exports were removed, Busbee said, the nation's balance of payments could be improved.

After the meeting the governors on the executive committee changed roles, becoming the faculty for the association's seminar on state government for governors-elect.

Organizers expected 10 or 11 newly elected governors to attend sessions today and Sunday on such topics as organizing and operating the governor's office, managing the executive branch and press relations.

All sessions are closed to reporters.

Several of the veteran governors were graduates of the association's two previous seminars in 1974 and 1976, and were enthusiastic about the opportunity the sessions offered.

"Becoming a governor and running a governor's office is very different from anything else," said Gov. George Ariyoshi of Hawaii, who attended the 1974 seminar in Snow Bird, Utah. "There was a chance for us to talk with those who had gone through that experience."

"It's a real good opportunity," said Richard Riley, governor-elect of South Carolina. "I want to be ready on Jan. 10 not only to have an inauguration but also have my complete staff in order."

But Riley's attitude apparently did not extend to all 20 of the nation's newly elected governors, about half of whom stayed home.

Held Open House

E. F. Craven Co. held an open house and heavy equipment display Friday at its Memorial Drive facilities.

Hershel Williams, Greenville branch manager for the company, said that the event was held mainly for eastern North Carolina visitors who have heavy equipment interests.

Williams reported Friday that from 450 to 500 persons were expected to visit the firm here during the 11 a.m. until 7 p.m. open house period.

In addition to the equipment display, visitors saw the company's new service facilities, designed to handle service and repair needs of heavy construction equipment.

E. F. Craven Co., with home offices in Greensboro, began operations in 1900 and is one of the oldest construction equipment dealers in the nation, Williams said.

The firm, which operates branches in Greenville, Charlotte and Asheville, handles some 25 to 30 lines of construction equipment, it was pointed out. The Greenville facilities opened in 1956.

CHINA VISIT — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland states to reporters Friday in Washington that the People's Republic of China, which has been buying large amounts of U.S. wheat and corn this year, probably will continue as a major customer of American farmers. Bergland has just returned from a 10-day visit to China. (AP Laserphoto)

Plant To Be Closed

PITTSBURGH (AP) — H.J. Heinz Co. said Friday it would close a Henderson, N.C., pickle and relish processing factory next April 1.

The decision to close the factory was based in part on "lack of anticipated growth of the pickle and relish business," said David W. Sculley, vice president in charge of the pickle and new development divisions at Heinz U.S.A., a division of H.J. Heinz.

Sculley said the Henderson factory, acquired in 1969, has been operating below capacity for the past few years.

The factory employs about 275 persons. The company said in a statement it would "do everything possible" to assist employees in finding new jobs.

Home Is Target For Humorous Column

Editor's Note: Betty Hodges is women's editor for "The Durham Morning Herald." The feature on Mrs. Michaels was printed in Durham Sunday, Nov. 5.)

Gail Michaels is a slim, blonde young mother and housewife who chaffs at housework and regularly runs out of answers for her three-year-old daughter's questions.

The only difference between her and other Durham housewives, she insists, is that maybe she has a knack for "putting on paper what other people see as ordinary everyday incidents".

She could add "humorously" to the "putting on paper" but she doesn't, except to interject, "I think people without a sense of humor are at a disadavantage in coping with everyday life."

Mrs. Michaels, who lives with her husband Phillip and daugher Meg in a rented house on North Wilbon Street, has been putting her everyday life on paper for over four years in a humor column the Herald has introduced to its readers.

From the time the column started appearing regularly in "The Daily Reflector," Greenville, while she was living in that eastern North Carolina town she's been getting fan mail from readers who say she helps them to see the humorous side of their own, similar predicaments.

"They say they recognize themselves," she says. "And one mother told me she wished she'd had a column like mine when her children were smaller because it would have helped her cope."

A psychology graduate of the University of North Carolina, Mrs. Michaels is fully aware of the home as a prime target for humor "because most people can identify with the things that go on there."

Although she sees herself as writing for young marrieds, she says she gets lots of mail from grandparents who are reliving their own child-rearing experiences through the time they spend with their grandchildren.

And as a master's degree candidate in English laboring over the last chapter of a thesis on playwright Tom Stoppard, the 28-year-old has a good view of where her writing fits into the scheme of things.

She says another Herald columnist, Erma Bombeck, has always been a tremendous influence, as has North Carolina's own humorous essayist, William Snow Ethridge.

She traces her predilection for writing only as far back as her school teaching days five years ago when she started writing little individual books about her disadvantaged pupils to help them improve their self-image. She says as she wrote she suddenly realized she enjoyed writing more than teaching.

Her own childhood in Roswell, Ga., as one of two daughters of a school superintendent and a guidance counselor, was a happy, if "nondescript" one, she says. But she was as shy a child as she insists she is a woman.

Maybe that's why, she guesses, she read "a tremendous amount" of "the stock children's things": "Anne of Green Gables," "Five Little Peppers," "Miss Minerva," Nancy Drew, "The Secret Garden" and "A Little Princess."

She went to a private high school in Atlanta that gave college credits, so she was able to finish Carolina in three years, Phi Beta Kappa at that.

While she was at UNC, she met Phillip on campus, graduating and getting married in the same year—1971.

While he worked as a planner for Pitt County, she taught school until they decided to "chuck it all" in 1973 and spent several months travelling, backpacking and biking through England and Europe.

Maybe the little books she'd done for the children sparked it, but she found herself keeping a diary and getting more and more interested in writing.

That's why when they returned to Greenville she got a job in the advertising department of "The Daily Reflector" and wrote features for the women's page.

She joined a local writer's group and started taking the little humorous essays which became her column to meetings for the criticism she thinks was invaluable.

Pretty soon she gave up the advertising department job and enrolled in graduate school at East Carolina University, screwing up her courage at the same time to take a handful of sample columns to Reflector managing editor Alvin Taylor.

When he said, "I'll take 'em," she says, she was too inexperienced to be surprised. Her work has been running every Sunday on the editorial page ever since.

By the time she'd had all her class work completed and was well into her thesis, her husband decided he'd like to leave his duties as tax supervisor for Pitt County and go to graduate school himself to prepare for a career as a small business management consultant. When he was accepted at the School of Business at Chapel Hill, they came to Durham to find a place to live and Mrs. Michaels' ability to see the humorous side of what happened to her was severely tested.

"In 30 days' time our bicycles were stolen, our only car had a series of flats when I was driving it, my dryer broke down and we had a terrible time finding housing."

She thinks the fact that she was able to "work it out" in her columns helped her keep things in balance.

Mrs. Michaels says she writes primarily during the weekday afternoons when Meg is in kindergarten. Mornings she spends, "doing as little housework as possible," all the while keeping in mind her favorite Tallulah Bankhead quote: "The thing I hate about housework is you do it and six months later you have to do it all over again."

Once Meg is in bed at night, she sits down with her thesis "if I'm still coherent."

She says that like most writers she procrastinates and daydreams but in the end tackles the job at hand "because I know I've got just a limited amount of time every day to do it in."

Though she writes curled up on the study sofa using big yellow legal pads, she always composes her column at the typewriter on a desk her husband built for her.

She says she's grateful both to Meg and even the hated housework for giving her material for the column. "I think it would be awful hard to make it up. You can't just create out of vacuum: this kind of writing has to be rooted in reality."

Asked about her plans, she stops and puzzles. "It sounds odd but I don't really think about it too much. I do know we want at least one more child and I want to continue my writing career, not go to a 9-to-5 job."

Then she laughs. "I guess what I'm really looking forward to is the day Phillip gets through at Carolina and we can finally taste steak again instead of eggs three or four times a week and tuna noodle surprise the rest of the time."

But even then she doesn't see herself getting a maid to take over some of the housework. It might dry up her source of material.

Then she smiles, "But I think it would be fun to find out!"

Joint Custody Of Children Urged To Minimize Trauma

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — While divorce is painful to all concerned, its impact on the children involved would be less severe if parents had joint custody, contend Mel Roman and William Haddad, who have done extensive research on the subject.

"Divorce as currently constituted seems to be hurting every member of the family, unnecessacily crippling and scarring young children," says Roman, a psychology professor at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine and director of family studies at the Bronx Municipal Hospital Center.

He and Haddad, former associate director of the Peace Corps and now a political editor and columnist, are themselves divorced non-custodial fathers. They have written a book, "The Disposable Parent," which advocates joint custody rather than the traditional arrangement in which, they note, 90 percent of wives in contested cases are awarded sole custody.

"The assumption of most people is that divorce is the death or end of the family when, in fact, it's the reorganization of the family," the softspoken, bearded Roman said in an interview.

The authors, in addition to interviewing couples with joint custody, looked at studies of fathers with varying degrees of custody and visitation arrangements.

"The studies show that the greater the involvement — such as phone calls and visitations — of the non-custodial parent, the better the child's adjustment," Roman says. "As a generalization, it seemed that the children in joint custody situations were thriving and had much less of post-divorce struggles and difficulties than we see in children with conventional arrangements."

When the mother is awarded sole custody, Roman points out, the father becomes an ex-parent and, because of not participating in the life of his child, "drops out," stops visiting, reneges on support payments.

"Everybody is under considerable stress," he says. "Children experience the effect of losing a loving, caring parent. The mother is imprisoned by the child or children, feels oppressed, has no personal 'space'."

Working against a woman's decision to opt for joint custody, the psychologist says, is the social pressure women are under about "being a good mother, totally absorbed in the children." And if the woman was not the one who wanted a divorce, she often seeks revenge through holding on to the children.

The divorce decree doesn't settle the conflict, Roman says.

"Women use children and men use money as leverage. He sends the check three days late — and so he can't see the kids that week. People come back to court over and over again to resolve those issues, so the conflict level of the family is continuous and injurious."

In their study Roman and Haddad found the most common working pattern for joint custody was a week at the home of the mother and a week at the home of the father. In other cases, the children lived in each household half a week, or stayed with their mother during the week and with their father on weekends and vacations.

"Most have a geographic constraint built into the agreement to make sure the mother and father are close enough to keep the kids in the same school system and with the same friends," Roman explains.

Objections have been raised, he says, to the "yo-yo effect" of moving the kids back and forth, but he insists that children do not feel that's a terrible hardship.

"Whatever dislocation and inconvenience is involved for parents and children, it's much better to have two actively involved parents," he adds.

Roman, 51, lost custody of a young daughter 22 years ago and Haddad, 48, lost custody of three daughters four years ago.

"There was very little change in the courts' attitude during that time. But there's a major trend now toward men fighting and getting custody," says Roman, adding that he thinks joint custody is preferable to sole custody by either parent.

He sees the ideal situation as flexible according to the needs of the child, with both mother and father having parental responsibility — a term he prefers to custody — and the child having free access to both.

"I don't expect it to happen overnight but parents need to know they have this new option and it's workable if they put some effort into it," he says.

'Art: First Encounters' Shows Ability

By MICHAEL MATROS
N. C. Museum of Art

RALEIGH — The N. C. Museum of Art and Dorothea Dix Hospital are out to demonstrate that the mentally retarded population represents much more than a social liability. They have a lot to offer and the special exhibition of their art works "Art: First Encounters" provides evidence of the creative and self-expressive capabilities of this special segment of the population.

This show marks the culmination of the museum program that began when several Dix patients toured the museum. The Dix residents were delighted by what they saw. Their museum staff guide asked if they would like to see more art from slides and reproductions and then try their hands at it.

That's how it got started. Museum staff member Linda Hyatt, with the assistance of volunteer interns, loaded up supplies and slides once a week and took them to the hospital where a group of patients participated in a formal or "learning" session, grasping basic visual arts concepts.

They then entered into workshop sessions where they were free to express themselves with the materials provided.

For this audience there was no "right" or "wrong" way to approach paper, crayons, glue, clay and wood. The results of their spontaneity are lively, often crude but convincing works.

The patients were not the only ones to benefit from their work. Dix personnel learned more about the people they instructed while viewing their performance in these art classes. The museum education staff gained enough information from this art awareness pilot program for the adult mentally retarded to want to share it with others who deal with this audience.

"Art: First Encounters" is one of the first exhibitions of the work of the adult mentally retarded to be held in a major American art museum. The show is displayed in the Mary Duke Biddle Gallery for the Blind. It will open to the public on Nov. 2 and will be on view until Dec. 3.

A brochure is available upon request. Groups wanting guided tours may make reservations by contacting the msueum's Education Dept. at 733-7568 during weekday hours (10 a.m. - 5 p.m.).

Miss McCombs Weds Saturday

MRS. JOHN ELDRIDGE WILLIAMS JR.

The Memorial Baptist Church of Greenville was the scene of the 3 p.m. Saturday wedding ceremony of Melinda Pearl McCombs of Greenville and John Eldridge Williams Jr. of Greenville. The Rev. E. T. Vinson performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Sterling McCombs of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of John Eldridge Williams and Mrs. Janet Tucker, both of Norfolk, Va.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal length gown of silkened organza over peau de soie designed with a sabrina neckline outlined in re-embroidered scalloped lace, beaded with pearls. The fitted empire bodice was overlaid in French chantilly lace, with the waistline encircled with beaded re-embroidered scalloped lace. Matching lace trimmed the full bishop sleeves and bordered the redingote chantilly lace skirt, which featured a pleated panel centering the front of the gown. The attached chapel length train was made of French chantilly lace and edged in re-embroidered lace. The bride wore a walking length veil of silk illusion edged in rosepoint chantilly lace medallions beaded with pearls. She carried a full cascade of white miniature carnations, yellow roses, baby's breath and greenery tied with white lace and satin ribbons.

The church was decorated with traditional green and white, flanked with candelabra and palms. A profile prie-dieu was enhanced with white lace satin bows and greenery. After the ceremony, the bridal couple presented the mothers with red roses from the prie-dieu.

Matron of honor was Mrs. William S. Clayton of Greenville, sister of the bride. Maid of honor was Carol Jean McCombs of Greenville, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Miss Carolyn Mills of Kinston, Mrs. Ray Williford of Raleigh and Mrs. Kenneth Wooten of Bethel.

The attendants wore formal length slip style gowns of silesta knit, designed with full circular skirts in khaki. The empire bodices featured overlay flounces of mink knit. The gowns were complemented with mink knit capes gathered at the neckline with ruffled khaki fabric. They carried bouquets of yellow miniature carnations, bronze daisies, and yellow snowflake pom pons tied with matching ribbons. The honor attendants wore yellow miniature carnations in their hair.

The father of the bridegroom served as his son's best man. Ushers included William Sterling Clayton of Greenville, brother-in-law of the bride, Randy E. Batts and Malcolm Beard, both of Greenville, and Ron Linville of Winston-Salem.

Joseph E. Goodwin of Greenville, organist, and Stephen E. Reel of Greenville, soloist, presented the wedding music. Reel sang "More" and "The Lord's Prayer." Mrs. E. T. Vinson directed the wedding.

The mother of the bride wore a bronze qiana gown with a white orchid corsage. The bridegroom's mother selected a mint green knit gown with a white orchid corsage. The bride's grandmothers wore gowns of sandalwood and green knit with orchid corsages. The grandmother of the bridegroom chose a blue knit gown with a orchid corsage.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall after the ceremony. The bridal table was covered with a white chantilly lace cloth centered with an arrangement of fall flowers and accented by a four-branch silver candelabra, flanked by two three-branched candelabra. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. C. Eugene Prescott. The four-tier wedding cake was served by Mrs. L. L. Everett and punch was poured by Mrs. David Nichols. Miss Annette Nobles presided at the register, which was flanked by greenery and a candelabra. Miss Sandi Roberts, Miss Gina-Jon Prescott and Mrs. Dave Kramer assisted in serving. Good-byes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Sidney L. Roberson.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside in Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of Rose High School and East Carolina University with a degree in early childhood. She is employed as a migrant teacher with the Pitt County School System. The bridegroom is a graduate of Lake Taylor High School, Norfolk, Va. and East Carolina University with a degree in health and physical education. He is employed as a health and physical education teacher with the Pitt County School System.

The bridegroom's family entertained the wedding party and guests at an after-rehearsal dinner at the Three Steers Restaurant.

MISS TERESA KAYE BRANCH. . .is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carlton R. Branch of Winterville, who announce her engagement to Talmadge Dawson Page Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Talmade D. Page Sr. of Greenville. The wedding will take place Dec. 31.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

The First Lady of Candidness has done it again.

Betty Ford has done for facelifts what the YWCA did for belly-dancing. She has given it respectability.

But, as I was telling my friend, Mayva, the other day, "What's so bad about wrinkles? My goodness, they're beautiful! They give you character and depth."

"I couldn't agree more," said Mayva. "Wrinkles are the jewels awarded survivors."

"That's beautiful, Mayva," I said, "but be fair! We're lucky. We haven't aged like our friends. I mean some of them look like an unpaved road."

"Don't I know it," said Mayva. "Florence uses that cream to erase bags under her eyes. The other day she erased her entire face."

"Oh Mayva," I laughed, wiping tears from my eyes, "I wouldn't believe we'd spent so many years together, you look so young. Sometimes, I forget about your neck."

"What about my neck?" asked Mayva, sobering up.

"You've said yourself every time you look into a mirror it reminds you to defrost the chicken."

"I never said that! At least I don't have laugh lines that I can plant winter wheat in."

"I'm not laughing," I said evenly.

"I can never tell," she said cooly.

"Mayva, at least my whole body isn't suffering from erosion."

"EROSION! I never thought I'd hear that from a woman who wore ponytails until she was 35 just to pull back the extra skin around her face."

"I never did that!" I said defensively.

"You tied your hair back so tight that every time you opened your mouth, your eyes blinked."

"You always told me my face was interesting," I said.

"I said the same thing about the Pyramids."

We sat in silence. Finally, I said, "Face it, Mayva, we've got a lot of fat that doesn't fit anymore."

"I know," she said. "It seems like one morning I got up and during the night everything had fallen. I looked like someone slammed a door while I was baking."

"I'd consider taking a tuck here and there," I said.

"I know, I'd like to look like anyone's sister just once before I go. Incidentally, what happened to 'wrinkles are beautiful and create character and depth? The jewels that are awarded survivors'?"

"That's before we got them. Incidentally, I wonder what Betty Ford did with what she didn't want?"

Engagement Announced

PARK BUILT FOR HANDICAPPED

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Every piece of equipment is geared to the needs of the handicapped in the new city park here specifically designed for handicapped children.

The picnic tables, sandboxes, and waterboxes for youngsters who like to play in water, are elevated for wheelchairs, as are the water fountains. The park contains only slopes, no steps, and the swings are propelled by hands rather than feet.

A special feature of the park, built on city land and sponsored by a council of 11 area Lions clubs, is a merry-go-round where children are strapped in, wheelchairs and alp.

Phillips-Welch Vows Solemnized Saturday

Miss Kathryn Jeane Welch and Charles Tapscott Phillips were married Saturday in a high noon ceremony at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Gordon Conklin, who performed the ceremony of the bride's parents 25 years ago.

Daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Jack H. Welch of Greenville, the bride was given in marriage by her father. Her honor attendant was her sister, Mrs. Jackie Welch Marsh of Atlantic Beach. Bridesmaids included Marty Welch, sister of the bride, Cindy Goes, Judy Wilkerson Beaman and Vickie Phelps, all of Greenville, Cindy Besselieu Kilpatrick of Monck's Corner, S. C., and Nancy Cleetwood of Fayetteville.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dean Phillips of Myrtle Beach, S.C. His father served as best man. Ushers were Mike Phillips, brother of the bridegroom of Myrtle Beach, Robert Welch, brother of the bride, Jeff Beaman, John Calhoun, all of Greenville, Ken Holt, R.E. Phillips, both of Charlotte, and Leslie Sealy of York, S.C. Jeffrey Beaman of Greenville was ring bearer.

A preludial program of music was provided alternately by a brass ensemble, and Dr. and Mrs. Charles Bath playing violin and piano, with Dan Holland, Diaconal minister of Jarvis Memorial as baritone soloist, and Mickey Terry played the organ.

Together the brass, strings and organ performed "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desire", followed by the chiming of the hour. As the couple proceeded to the altar to exchange their vows, Holland sang "Starting Here, Starting Now." Following the prayer after the giving of rings, Holland sang "The Wedding Prayer" and after the exchange of vows, he sang "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride wore a gown of ivory peau de chine with a frosting of Guipure lace etched on the bodice. The long, fitted sleeves were of lace and a band of lace accented the natural fitted waist. The lace was repeated on the skirt in circular bands dipping into the semi-cathedral train. The fabirc was cut away behind the lace for a traditional look.

For her veil, the bride chose a cathedral veil designed and handmade by Coplons of Charlotte. The headpiece was satin with matching lace from the dress. The veil was scalloped to the floor and edged with a circular band of lace repeating the bands around the train of the dress. Lace appliques framed the head and shoulders, with lace flowers scattered along the sides and across the bottom.

She carried a bouquet of orchids with yellow throats, white roses, baby's breath and lily-of-the-valley.

The honor attendants wore floor length dresses of french blue, with long fitted sleeves and scoop neck. They carried bouquets of white orchids, yellow roses, greenery and baby's breath.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride. Bouquets of fall flowers filled the house and yard, and white wedding bells and bows marked the entrances to the driveway.

The table was covered with an heirloom ivory lace cloth and adorned with twin bouquets of white orchids, white roses and baby's breath.

The bride is a 1978 graduate of East Carolina University School of Art with a BFA degree in interior design. The couple will make their home in South Carolina.

Prior to the wedding ceremony, the bridegroom's parents entertained with a champagne breakfast for the bridal couple and their families.

Following the rehearsal on Friday evening, the couple was honored with a pounding and dance at the Greenville Country Club. Hosted by friends and relatives of the bridal couple, a cotton weighing scale was set up at the door, and guests were greeted and "weighed-in" as each brought a pound of something to help start the honorees on their new life. Music was provided by a combo whose members were friends of the couple.

Views On Kids Reported

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Loss of freedom was the most often mentioned disadvantage of having children, while most frequently listed advantages in a University of Michigan survey were "love and affection and the feeling of being a family," "stimulation and fun," "expansion of self" and "having someone to carry on after you have gone."

The findings were reported by Lois Hoffman and Jean Manis, researchers with Survey Research Center, a unit of the U-M Institute for Social Research. They interviewed more than 1,500 married women between the ages of 15 and 39 and the husbands of about a third of the women.

LSD For Runners Is Technique

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — When a cardiologist at the University of Utah recommends LSD for people who want to get in good physical condition, he isn't talking about an illegal drug.

At the university's College of Medicine, those initials are an abbreviation for Long Slow Distance — running long distances at a comfortable rate instead of sprinting short distances.

In Health Sciences Report, beginners are advised to start running three to four days a week instead of daily. Those who cannot begin by runnin are advised to alternate walking with running short distances.

Count on a 12-ounce can of corn (vacuum pack) yielding about 1½ cups — enough for 3 or 4 servings.

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

Veteran newspaper woman Sarah McClendon of Washington, D. C., was keynote speaker last Sunday at a meeting of North Carolina Press Women.

When asked how she started in Washington, D. C., she explained she had volunteered and served as a WAC during World War II and went to work there through the WACs. "After I got started in my work, I loved it; however, it was lonely and I decided to get married. My marriage didn't work out but I did have a lovely child.

"In 1944 I went to Capitol Hill nine days after giving birth to my daughter — I couldn't open the doors, but would go in after someone else," said Ms. McLendon.

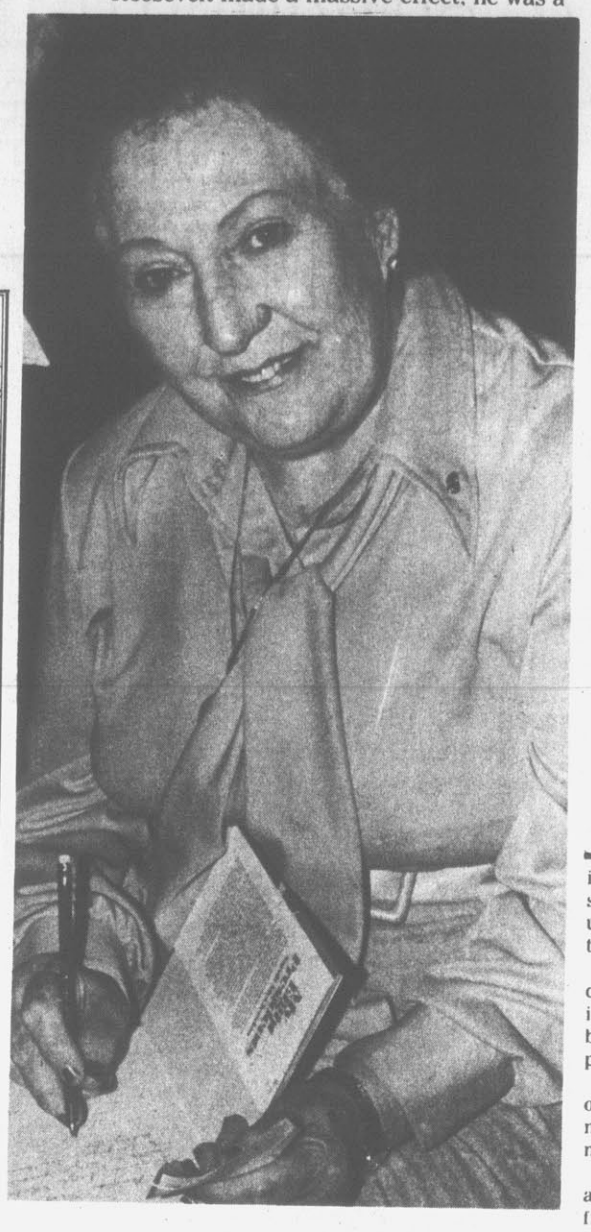

"People, today, are interested in learning everything they can about their government. Across the country, I am suggesting that womens' clubs take a government agency and find out everything they can about it — what they are doing, why, duties, functions. You, and I, as people can change the government.

"...as communicators, we are not doing our job as well as we should. Reporters are at the mercy of the man in the office," she continued.

Covering the news and happenings in and around Capitol Hill since 1944, Ms. McClendon is the author of "My Eight Presidents."

Her thumbnail sketches of the eight presidents was:

— "Roosevelt made a massive effect, he was a big, big man and a real dictator.

— "Truman was a fine man — he set up the state of Israel. I think he was an honest man, however there was a lot of scandal during his time. Things went on that were very dishonest.

— "Eisenhower did't know a thing about government when he went to Washington, but he read and learned.

— "Delightful, charming and merry describes Kennedy and I liked him a lot. He was a man in a hurry — he started a lot of programs he didn't finish. I didn't know what went on with him during the day, let alone in his bedroom at night.

— "Johnson was insecure and loved power. We had our ups and downs. He manipulated the press as did the Kennedys.

— "At the first White House reception after Nixon was elected, he called me over and said 'McClendon, I will take your questions' and he did. He cleaned out the VA Hospitals for a few years, but they need it again.

— "Ford was very warmhearted, kind and a nice guy. During one outside function during bitter cold weather, he pulled off his gloves and gave them to a girl, he was that kind of nice guy. However, he did put things off until tomorrow.

— "I had great hopes for Carter, he's a very stubborn man. When you see Plains, Ga., you wonder how anything good came out of there. Jimmy Carter is no fool, he's organized and knows what will be going on the next day at 4:30 the afternoon before. I think Rosalynn Carter is weak, she's not strong like Eleanor Roosevelt. I thought anyone who would go into New Hampshire in the cold and snow to campaign for her husband would be strong. I'm disappointed in her."

When asked about a certain article printed in "Playboy," Ms. McClendon replied, "When I was in Playboy, I had my clothes on; I just had an article printed in the magazine."

Ms. McClendon is a Catholic, a member of the DAR and is registered as a Democrat in the District of Columbia. "At one time when asked if I were a Democrat or Republican? I said I am a reporter."

Rules In World Of Fashion

NEW YORK (UPI) — There will be those who scoff at the notion of a book that tells them how to dress. For what, they will ask. I've been dressing myself for years.

That may be the best reason of all to buy "Dressing Right," the new book by men's fashion writer Charles Hix (St. Martin's Press, $17.50).

It is not that the book contains any behind-the-runways revelations about the world of fashion, or that it sets down any inviolable rules.

But it does provide two services for the man of the '70s:

First, it assures him that he need not dress like a mannequin in a boutique window to be "fashionable."

Second, it tells him in blunt, man-to-man terms that, like it or not, the way he appears in public is counted for or against him.

This is not quite the same message John Malloy preached in "Dress for Success." Malloy suggested that one way to move up the ladder of life is to dress the part.

Hix disagrees. "Trying to dress to someone else's image is fraught with peril. It's not based on the future or the present. It's based on the past."

He writes, "Redefining some of our attitudes about fashion might change our minds about making clothes work for us."

Hix is no stranger to skeptical audiences. "Looking Good," his first book about grooming habits, was met with uncertainty by bookstores and loud harrumphs in the locker room. Then women started buying the book for their men and sales took off. "Looking Good" quickly became the bible for men who admitted that, yes, they did want to make a nice appearance.

"I have always been someone who hates hard and fast rules, so I didn't want to decree from the pulpit about clothes," Hix said in an interview.

"It's my notion that the reason men dress badly is that they're afraid of fashion. I think most men make big mistakes about the way they dress, but if it doesn't bother them, so what? This book is aimed at the guy who wants to change the way he looks."

Gift Of Beef Very Welcome In Japan

NEW YORK (AP) — Here's the perfect American souvenir for friends and relatives in Japan: four pounds of frozen beef, federally inspected, packed in dry ice, and ready for Japanese quarantine officers.

In Tokyo, a pound of medium quality beef costs about $12, and top grade Kobe beef is about $50 a pound, so buying a bit in America for the folks back home makes a lot of sense.

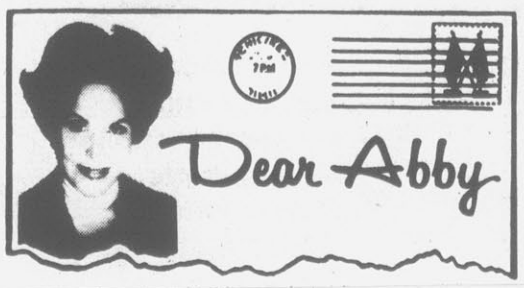

But, as one Japanese travel agent here pointed out, you can't just kill a cow in your backyard and take it to Japan. Some enterprising Japanese have made it nearly as simple, though.

Travelers on their way to Japan from here via Japan Air Lines need only give the beef service desk at any New York JAL office a call the day before departure. Eight slices of U.S. choice strip loin beef will be waiting for them with their luggage at Narita International Airport in Japan. The four-pound package is about $30.

JAL has been carrying about 500 beef packages a month in the only service of its kind here. Three companies in Los Angeles and one in San Francisco sell airline passengers similar packages.

The business is promotional for Japan Air Lines, but profitable for Japanera Co. Inc.

Sunday Saints

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am studying for the ministry. My father (now deceased) was also a minister.

Some years ago my father read a letter from the pulpit that he had clipped from your column. I was a very young boy then, but I recall that it made a big impression on me.

It had to do with a 13-year-old boy who didn't want to go to church with a bunch of hypocrites.

Can you find it and run it again? Thank you.

DAILY READER

DEAR READER: Is this it?

DEAR ABBY: I am a 13-year-old, and my parents force me to go to church every Sunday.

I hate going to church because I see people there who I know are drunkards, gossips, liars and cheats, and they are right there every Sunday saying their prayers and singing the hymns. I don't have any respect for hypocrites and our church is full of them, my own parents included.

I am only 13, so maybe my opinion doesn't count, but I don't see any sense in my going to church with a bunch of hypocrites.

ONLY A BOY

DEAR ONLY: Christ became a man at 13, and you are not too young to become a man either. One goes to church to learn about the Bible and the word of the Lord, although God dwells in one's heart, and it's not necessary to go to church to communicate with Him. And as for the hypocrites you see in church—what better place is there for them to be?

A church is not a museum for saints. It's a hospital for sinners.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a telephone operator for a rather large and busy company. We have two nice young fellows who do a good job. But they could do better if their wives would quit calling them at work so much.

I can understand emergency calls, but these wives call up to say, "We got a letter from your mother—should I read it to you?" Or, "Guess what the baby said today?"

Abby, I know both these wives and I wouldn't hurt their feelings for the world, and I certainly wouldn't say anything to their husbands, and if you print this, they may get the hint. Besides, it's not fair to call a person at work to just gab about nothing on company time.

VERMONT READER

DEAR READER: Your point is well taken. And may I add that when a man comes home from work and asks his wife, "What's new?" it gives them something to talk about.

DEAR ABBY: When a lady comes to your table at a restaurant and is offered a chair but refuses, saying she is going to stay only a minute, then stands there talking, how long should a gentlman remain standing?

R.R.R. IN S.F.

DEAR R.R.R.: Two minutes. If she's still standing and talking, sit down. She's no lady.

If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for all Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

'House' Is Mousetrap

YORK, Maine (AP) — After four years of tinkering, Daniel E. Davis thinks he has invented a better mousetrap; now he hopes the world will beat a path to his door.

Davis calls his trap the Mouse House, and his wooden experimental models look like the kind of dwelling a mouse might choose to call its home. But those that enter get zapped with 108 lethal volts of electricity.

"Within two seconds, he's unconscious, and he doesn't feel a thing," says Davis, a 60-year-old consultant for the Occupation Safety and Health Administration.

The first step is to bait the trap with food — peanut butter with nutmeg is a mouse favorite, says Davis. Then, using a pencil to demonstrate, he shows how a plate slams shut when the bait is touched, trapping the rodent while it gets hit with an electrical charge for 45 seconds. The plate opens again and the mouse drops into a drawer in the bottom of the box, which is large enough to accommodate up to six mice.

Davis says the trap re-sets itself, so that if another mouse is prowling the area, it too can enter the house, without ever knowing that the body of a fellow rodent is inside.

"The mice never see their buddy's dead body. They don't know whether their buddy has gone away on a trip or w'at," he explained.

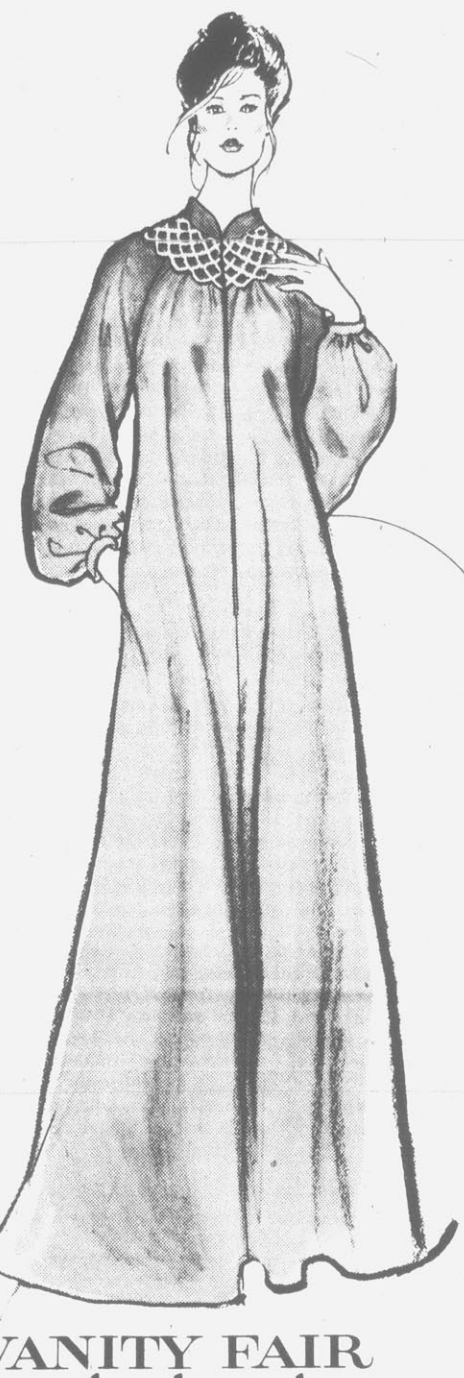

Davis says the cost of his traps now runs to about $90, putting them out of reach for most homeowners. Davis said a likely market would be among food processing firms, as well as equipment leasing firms, which could make the traps available to the public.

Davis said the Mouse House was his first invention. He said he had begun the project four years ago after noticing, while working for OSHA, how many businesses have problems with rodents.

Our Gifted Children Have Handicap To Overcome

By KENNETH R. CLARK
United Press International

Ask the average 4-year-old boy what he wants to be when he grows up and you'll hear all about firemen, policemen and astronauts.

Scott Mintzer put it this way: "I want to be a football coach but I think I ought to be a doctor because it's better for society."

Scott was being screened for special classes for talented and gifted children, funded by the Astor Foundation in the New York borough of Brooklyn, when that answer emerged. He made it, joining hundreds of other children nationwide in programs designed — often in the teeth of societal hostility — to bring his 140-plus IQ to the fruition of its theoretical genius level.

And what is the Astor program, under which increasing numbers of New York children are receiving that special touch required by intellects so often branded "egghead" and "bookworm" by their peers in public schools?

Seven-year-old Peter Furci explained.

"This isn't a regular school," he said. "This is called the Astor program. Vincent Astor, the founder of the Astor program, created this program for 'specially talented and gifted kids. Now, we can figure out very hard things, but they're easy to us because we're 'specially gifted."

Asked if he likes being "'specially gifted," Peter replied, "Yes, it gives me a sense of responsibility."

Such articulation from a 7year-old is not calculated to enchant many parents whose own "normal" children are struggling with the banalities of "Dick and Jane" — and therein lies a bulwark of resistance to the sort of special schooling in which the minds of Scott and Peter are being developed.

In the eyes of their teachers and parents, Scott and Peter qualify for genius. In the eyes of federal educational funding agencies, they qualify as "handicapped children." In the eyes of many — including some public school teachers psychologically threatened by their brilliance — they qualify for little more than an envy-tinged sneer and the title "smart aleck."

In a sense, they are both geniuses and handicapped, a seeming anomaly that points up what frequently has been the waste of a nation's most vital resource — the awesome brainpower of some of its young. Though special educational programs for such children date back at least as far as 1910, many of them still are being sacrificed to an inborn American suspicion of "elitism" in a country in which all citizens theoretically are "equal."

"In terms of the fact that schools in most cases don't offer them what they need, they are handicapped," said Lynn Mueller, a special education teacher who works with emotionally and neurologically handicapped children in Eatontown, N.J., but who also is certified as a teacher of the gifted. "In normal circles, these children are handicapped, if only because they have no one on their own level to talk to — to interract with.

"If they're not being stimulated and challenged, then it's the educational system that's handicapping them."

In 1972, when Dr. Virginia Z. Ehrlich, director of gifted child studies for the New York City Board of Education, approached the board with an offer of private funding for the gifted from the Astor Foundation, she received a chilly reception.

"They don't need it," the board ruled. "They can take care of themselves. We have to think of all the others."

"School districts were discontinuing classes for the gifted or they would not admit to having them when asked," she wrote. "The fact was, that administrators were hesitant, to put it very mildly, to touch any program that would focus attention on this achieving population. We came to think of the word 'gifted' as a dirty word — not to be mentioned in enlightened educational circles."

The last session of Congress followed suit — appropriating $1 billion for education of the physically handicapped, but only $5 million for the gifted, under the "handicapped" bill.

Donald Kaplan, director of pupil services in the Brooklyn district where the vigorous Astor program now is underway, offered a political explanation for the disparity.

"The public hasn't demanded it," he said of the lack of funds for educating the gifted. "I've spoken to legislator after legislator and they all say 'we don't have thousands of letters from parents of gifted children.' In this country, people make demands and the demands are dealt with. There just isn't any nationwide lobby for gifted children. But it's a false democracy to treat unequal things equally."

District Superintendent Harvey Garner — a driving force in special education for the gifted, which finally is burgeoning throughout New York — pinpoints public resistance even more succinctly to plain old-fashioned envy.

"Gifted programs are unpopular with the general population," he said. "Why? They're 'elitist.' Now what are they really saying to us, these parents? They're really saying, 'I feel inferior because my kid isn't a gifted kid. Therefore this is elitist and there's no place for elitism in a democratic society.

"But putting a gifted child in an ordinary classroom is no different than taking a child with retarded mental development and trying to educate him in a regular classroom. It's not possible."

Despite anti-elitist resistance, in New York and to one degree or another in 29 other states where gifted programs are underway, classrooms for potential Beethovens and Einsteins are anything but ordinary, and time-worn myths that depict the gifted as freaks teetering on the brink of insanity are falling.

In Medford, Ore., special programs for the gifted range from full-time classrooms — as with New York's Astor program — to enrichment programs added to regular class time, and a picture of allaround superiority among qualifying children is beginning to emerge.

"One of our goals is to start dispelling the myths about gifted children," said program coordinator Brenda Vines. "One of those myths is that they are frail, scrawny klutzes who are always reading a book. Actually, gifted children generally are physically superior as well, and are interested in a variety of things."

In Phoenix, Ariz., 1,384 students out of a school population of 25,000 are in one of three programs for gifted children, but only 15 are in a "closed classroom" for what program consultant Bobbie Shoob calls "the profoundly gifted."

Again, money is the problem — 30 more children could be added to the closed classroom if funds were available.

Mrs. Shoob says children in that category, those with IQs of 140 and above, generally fall into one of two categories — those who lean toward math and those who prefer language and reading.

"But they are all vitally interested in the future and the past," she said. "They talk and read a lot of history and science and think that by reading about the past they'll be able to do something with the future."

In Sacramento, Calif., 175 gifted children — out of a classroom population of 48,000 — are served in special programs at Pope Avenue school.

What would happen to that 175 were they relegated to regular classrooms?

"They end up often relating to adults or to kids that are quite a bit older than they are," said Principal Ray Simpson. "There's another thing that can happen — kids can turn down production so they don't seem different. It is for this reason that the rapid learning program — putting the gifted together — was developed. It is one of a handful of such programs in the state of California."

He said the program is funded by district and state money, with none from the federal government.

Money is not the only problem administrators of education for the gifted share. Universally, they are frustrated talent scouts seeking to fill the one gap all of them can see in their classrooms — the gap left by too few girls and too few children of ethnic minorities.

"We find a significant fall in the number of girls identified as gifted around the middle school years," said Mrs. Vines. "That is the age at which girls begin to absorb the traditional idea that they should be cute and not smart — ESPECIALLY IN MATH AND SCIENCE."

"We have more boys than girls," said Mrs. Shoob. "We had to really strive to find the girls. They don't take a leadership role the way boys do."

Sometimes, the parents themselves are the obstacle.

"There are first-generation ethnic groups that would deny their children are bright, just to ensure conformity — or because of the old wives' tales that bright children go crazy or are neurotic," said Kaplan. "The two biggest natural resources of the country are minorities and females."

The American obstacles to finding the gifted, locating the money to educate them and overcoming societal hostility to their special status is not shared by other nations.

As Kaplan put it, "other countries realize that there's a connection between educating the most able and national survival."

All-time Olympic gymnastics champion Nadia Comaneci was discovered in Romania under a state program in which all children, at the age of 2, are subjected to an intense talent screening — including their ability to walk a balance beam.

Some years ago, the Shah of Iran sought American expertise in ferreting out the brightest of his country's school children on grounds that "25 years from now we won't have any oil and we'll have to rely on the brains of our people as our natural resource."

Last summer, China — in a sharp departure from the egalitarian policies of Mao Tsetung — launched a program of special training for students based, not on their political background as before, but on their brain power.

The New York Times reported the innovation, called a search for "men of talent" to help China become a modern industrial power by the year 2000.

Big Money In Bowl Bids, As Well As Prestige

By PEGGY WALSH
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Orange or Sugar? Liberty or Peach? This time of year rabid football fans and players in the Southeast have little else on their minds except who'll get what bid from which bowl.

But aside from the prestige attached to attending one of these televised extravaganzas, the cities that host them and the teams that are chosen to play have something else on their minds: Money.

Although most schools agree that the main reason they accept bowl bids is recognition and the chance to give their outstanding players nationally or regionally televised exposure, the financial side of football mania enters into the decision.

For some schools, a bid from a prestigious bowl means big money. But, for others, the financial side has little impact.

"The main thing about bowl games is do your players want to go," said Joel Eaves, athletic director at the University of Georgia.

"Our feeling is that we think you should not lose money," Eaves said in a telephone interview from his Athens, Ga., office. "But three times out of the 10 we've been in bowls, we have not come out even."

Whether a school the size of Georgia, which Eaves said usually takes between 500 and 600 persons to a bowl, ends up with a profit, depends on the bowl.

The most lucrative in the Southeast are the Orange Bowl in Miami and the Sugar Bowl in New Orleans.

This year's Orange Bowl will gross just under $3 million, with 75 percent of that going to the participating schools under National Collegiate Athletic Association regulations, said Ed Goss, an Orange Bowl spokesman.

"Each school gets approximately $1 million," said Goss. "It will exceed a million dollars this year."

Participants in the Sugar Bowl can expect between $950,000 and $1 million apiece to cover expenses and to share with other conference members.

Some of the less established bowls, like the Tangerine Bowl in Orlando, Fla. and the Hall of Fame Classic Bowl in Birmingham expect to pay each team in the neighborhood of $200,000 this year.

The Peach Bowl in Atlanta, which is being televised nationally this year, expects a per-team take of between $260,000 and $300,000. The Liberty Bowl in Memphis, Tenn., is expected to pay each team about $350,000.

Whether the team is a perennial bowl-goer like Alabama or a less likely candidate such as Vanderbilt, all football conference members benefit from the success of their colleagues.

Under Southeastern Conference rules, the 75 percent of the gross income is divided between each participating school. Then, of the 37.5 percent, the participating SEC school receives $30 per air mile one way for travel expenses; the SEC office receives 20 percent of the remainder; the participating school receives $175,000 plus 5 percent of the excess of $500,000 in gross receipts, and then the remaining amount is divided equally among the 10 SEC schools.

Last year, according to the SEC, that formula produced $54,000 for non-participating SEC schools.

But most schools say they don't count on bowl income, both for the obvious reason that they can't count on having a contending team and because the cost of attending a bowl sometimes exceeds the income.

"You can't rely on it to be a stable part of your budget because you spend a lot, because you take a large number of people," said Eaves.

"All we put into our budget is the estimated amount we would get after the conference got the money and split it up," he said. "We don't plan on anything like we're going and we're going to get X number of dollars."

At the University of Alabama, which has been to more bowl games than any other SEC school, the financial aspect of bowl games is given little consideration.

"We probably make no more, and sometimes less, than (SEC) teams that didn't go to a bowl," said sports information director Kirk McNair. 'By the time we pay all our expenses, like taking the band and other university personnel, we spend more than that $175,000.

"But we get something out of it. If we didn't go we wouldn't get anything. We play for the prestige, the recognition and the ranking," he said.

But at Georgia Tech, an independent which recently joined the Atlantic Coast Conference, the finances of bowl bids are more important. Tech won't be a competing member of the ACC until July 1979, so any bowl earnings this year would not have to be shared with other members of a conference.

"If you are fortunate enough to have a good year and get invited to a good bowl, it's obvious that has a important impact on your budget," said Jim Schultz, sports information director.

The cities that host the bowls, however, usually come up winners, no matter what the size or receipts of a bowl.

In Dade County, Fla., economic studies estimate the value of the Orange Bowl Festival at $50 million. The Peach Bowl in Atlanta and the Gator Bowl in Jacksonville, Fla., each generated about $9 million last year. And the Sugar Bowl generated about $7.2 million.

The 25 percent of the gross bowl intake remaining after the participating schools receive their 75 percent is used differently by each bowl.

All of the bowls are non-profit. The Peach Bowl, the Tangerine Bowl and the Orange Bowl all donate their income after expenses to charity. Some others, like the Liberty and Gator bowls, make only enough to cover stadium rental and staff expenses.

American Finds Peace As A Monk

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer

PA PONG MONASTERY, Thailand (AP) — Stephen Saslav, head-shaven, a gaunt white frame in orange robes, sits statue-still on the floor of the prayer hall near the two dangling skeletons and a baby fetus preserved in formaldehyde.

Four in the morning and the candlelight flickers over the gilt images of the Lord Buddha. Saslav's eyes close.

More than seven years ago he had headed to Asia, leaving behind college, parents and fun weekends in his native New York City. Passing through Thailand Saslav thought he would sample the austerity of a Buddhist monastery "for six months, seven at most."

Seven years later he is under indefinite vows to abstain from sex, alcohol and possessing all but a few personal items. Having been ordained monk Santa Citto in this remote forest monastery, he has joined an increasing number of foreigners, chiefly North Americans, Western Europeans and Australians, who have come to the land of 25,000 temples and 220,000 monks seeking the Buddhist way to peace and wisdom.

Set off from the main roads and towns in Thailand's most underdeveloped region, Pa Pong Monastery encompasses 160 acres of tropical forest inhabited by wild birds, deer and squirrels. The monks live singly in simple wooden huts perched on stilts and reached by narrow footpaths through the trees. There is no electricity, no tap water and no sounds but those from the forest.

Nuns living nearby perform a number of the daily tasks, including cooking, leaving the monks free for meditation, study or meeting with visitors who come for guidance and sometimes camp out for a few days on the floor of the prayer hall free of charge.

Buddhist monkhood is a radical change of lifestyle for the foreigners, most of them from comfortable, middle class backgrounds in fast-moving societies.

"The loss of freedom to do what one wants is sometimes difficult," Saslav says. So is coping with sexual longings, which are countered by trying to understand the kaleidoscope of images a lovely woman arouses or meditating on death, a reality the monks are reminded of by skeletons and the fetus in the prayer hall.

Four-thirty in the morning and Saslav doesn't hear the rain falling on the roof of the prayer hall except as a kind of pleasant background music. He nudges his mind to concentrate on his breathing: the air entering through the nostrils and the rhythmic rise and fall of the diaphragm.

Saslav, eyes still closed, fixes the mind on various parts of his body. The world slows down to the now, without past or future, and the mind turns to probe itself.

Cards Help Needy

NEW YORK (AP) — A way to send holiday greetings to friends, relatives and business associates while at the same time helping needy families over the globe is offered by CARE, the international aid and development agency.

"By sending CARE cards this year, you will help the poorest of the poor around the world not just to survive, but also to work toward self-support," said Frank L. Goffio, executive director.

Names and addresses with a contribution for each, should be sent to CARE, Dept. HOL, Box 570, New York, N.Y. 10016, or to any regional office. Goffio said the cards, notifying recipients that the sender had made a contribution to the organization in his or her honor, would be sent to you promptly. Or, if you wish, the cards will be sent directly to the persons being honored.

Goffio gave examples of what the donations could accomplish: $5 serves 100 children a daily bowl of nourishing hot cereal for an entire school week; $10 gives 2,000 children a glass of fortified milk; $15 provides a full week's training for a student nurse; $25 furnishes basic agricultural tools to a subsistence farm family.

The Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival

Country comedian Jerry Clower performs at Farmer Warehouse.

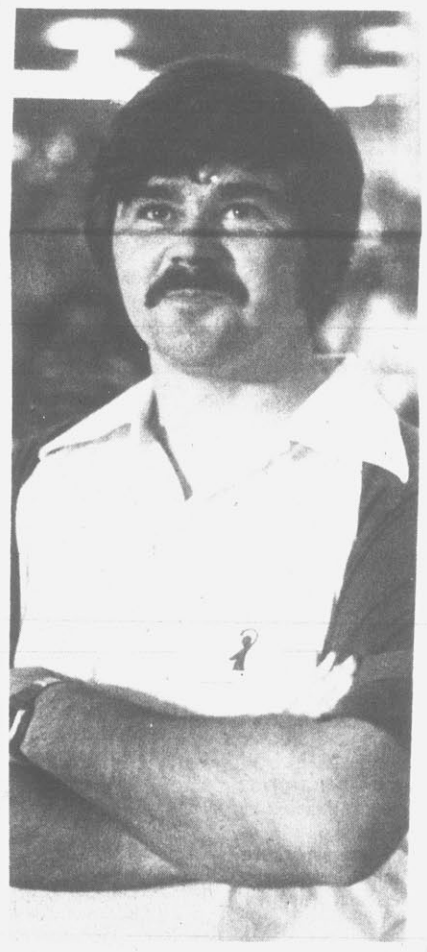

Competing in the tobacco tying contest from left are Alton Gardner, Fronie Forrest, Richard C. Bradley (second place winner), James Burns and Bob 'Slim Short' Allen (winner).

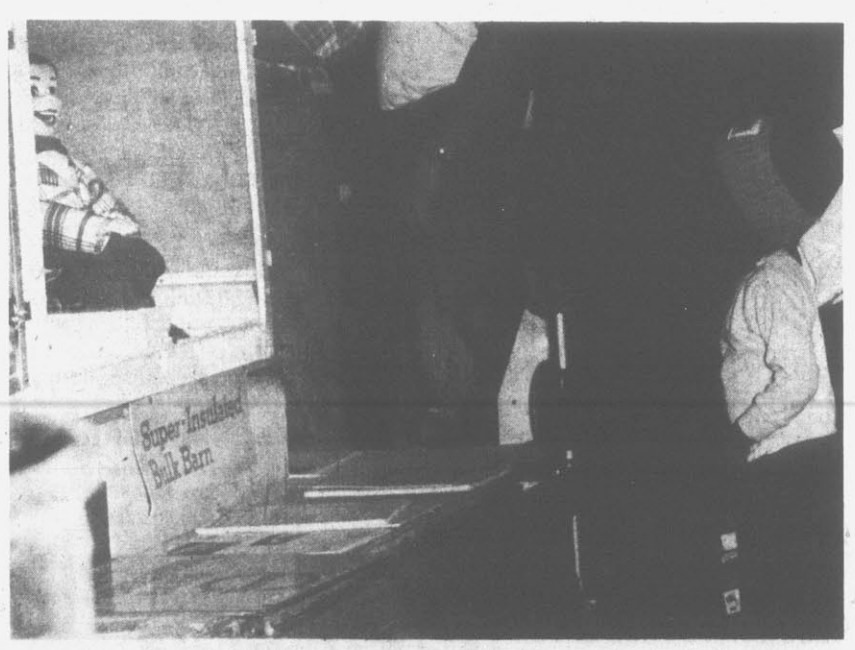

Free tobacco products were distributed at the R.J. Reynolds display booth by ladies of the community for the Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

Photos by Stuart Savage and Keith Mills

Bob 'Slim Short' Allen spits 8 feet 7 inches, and Danny Baysden of Richlands waits his turn. Baysden won the tobacco spitting contest with a distance of 19 feet 2 inches.

This little boy was attracted by Herman the talking dummy on behalf of the 'third generation bulk curing barn'.

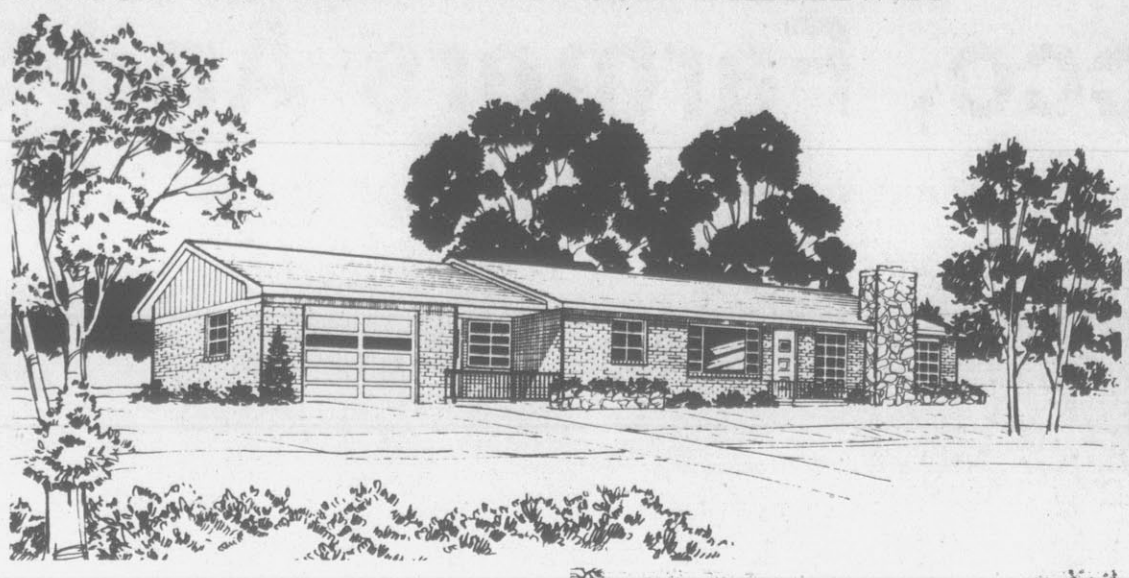

A sizeable crowd was on hand for the Tuesday performance of comedian Jerry Clower.

EXTRA ROOM PROVIDED BY ENCLOSED BREEZEWAY

By Jerry Bishop

First Floor — 1,686 Sq. Ft., Breezeway — 229 Sq. Ft.
Garage — 448 Sq. Ft.

Storage is complete on a single level in the plan for the remarkably convenient "Dunbar." The step-saving features of the one-level home are combined with luxury items to create a masterful brick home, which fits well into any landscaped lot.

Completely enclosed and comfortably heated, the long breezeway in this brick-encased ranch style opens to kitchen and provides an ideal play area or family room. The breezeway is reached also from an outside porch or a back stoop and has an entrance into the garage.

The front entrance is more at the center of the "Dunbar", and flows into a hallway which directs traffic to three areas of the home. The living room is designed so no cross traffic is necessary, and its 23 foot span is highlighted by a stone fireplace.

The master bedroom lies to the rear of the living room and has its own private bath and special linen closet. Four other closets are provided in the hall immediately adjacent to the bedroom and the bedroom itself. A fifth closet serves as a coat closet.

Just off the entry hallway to the rear of the home is the second complete bath. Two bedrooms also lie to the rear of the "Dunbar," each with massive closet.

A formal dining room lies to the left of the entry hall, with entry either from that hall or the long hall directing traffic to the kitchen and bedroom areas. A third entry is provided through the kitchen.

The kitchen, designed in a U-shape, creates an efficient work area and has extra space built in for the washer and dryer. The location of the kitchen is perhaps its greatest asset, with the enclosed breezeway to one side and the dining room to the other. Also, directly to the rear of the kitchen is a half bath and storage space housing the hot water heater and furnace.

Additional storage space is provided at the rear of the garage.

The assets of this home are not entirely within it, but on the exterior as well. The brick-encased ranch home is easy to maintain, of course never needing painting. The stone chimney adds a touch of distinction and vertical siding under the eaves can be painted any color as an accent.

Thus, the free-flowing design of the one-floor ranch home, the "Dunbar," creates convenience with beauty, efficiency with luxury, and excellent living space at a reasonable cost.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

How much does the rise in interest rates on home mortgages affect the sale of houses? Authoritative opinions range from "greatly" through "considerably" to "not very much."

The truth is that, from a personal standpoint, the answer is embodied in the reply to another question: How badly do I need a house?

If you have been transferred by your company to a different area, you will be in the market for a house whether the interest rate is 9 percent or 10 percent or 11 percent.

Ditto if you cannot get a suitable job where you live but can somewhere else. Ditto if your family has outgrown its present residence and needs larger living quarters. Ditto if the size of your family has shrunk and a smaller house is required.

Ditto if your income has risen sharply and you feel the need to live in a more expensive neighborhood. And ditto if the rate of inflation has sliced a piece off your fixed income and you must live in a less costly house with smaller monthly payments.

While these conditions seem to cover nearly everyone who moves, they actually don't. Hundreds of thousands of families who don't fit into any of these categories normally change residences for one reason or another. They include those who feel their present neighborhoods are deteriorating, those whose maintenance costs are increasing every year because their houses are suffering the ailments of old age and those who feel the urge to move every six or seven years even when there is no particular reason to do so.

When interest rates on mortgages go up or mortgage loans are hard to obtain (the two are not necessarily the same), these hundreds of thousands of families often withdraw from the home-purchasing market. Some of them sit tight, waiting for a more opportune time to make a move. Many, especially those in older houses and including those who need larger living quarters, decide that it is wiser to spend $8,000$-10,000 on remodeling projects than buying other houses. That is why the home remodeling business is having its biggest boom year in a long time.

Thus, houses don't sell as well on the average in days of high interest rates on home mortgages, as now. But where people need houses, the interest charges seem to have no effect. Banks, savings and loan associations and other lending institutions continue to have large backlogs of loan applications in certain areas of California and Texas and other places where burgeoning industries have created huge demands for more housing.

Still another reason why some persons are not deterred from buying homes regardless of the interest increases is that property has become an inflation hedge.

Once there was a theory that stocks were the best investment in periods of inflation because they rose as the rate of inflation went up. Today, the reverse is generally true. The stock market is scared of inflation these days. Houses, on the other hand, have increased in price along with the steady rise in inflation. In fact, they are tied together so tightly that it is difficult to determine which is following the other or, in fact, whether they aren't actually one.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I recently moved into a house which has light cedar shingles on the outside. I did not want them finished with anything, but now have decided they should be covered with a wood preservative. However, I like the light color of the shingles and want to keep them that way. Is there any wood preservative which will retain the original color of the shingles?

A. — Any kind of finish, even if it is called "clear," will darken the wood slightly. The shingles may even darken more over a long period of time. Even if you did not put any preservative on the shingles, they would change color over the years, usually to some shade of gray or tan.

Q. — Last year we had an underground sprinkling system installed around our house, since we have quite a large amount of grass that must be taken care of. It works fine, but a leak developed this year. I believe the pipe used is polyethylene. Is there some special way to repair this or is it done the same as with a plastic hose?

A. — The repair is basically the same as with a plastic hose. Find the leaky area, cut it out with a sharp knife, making straight cuts on either side of it. Go to a hardware store, lumber yard or building-supply establishment, taking along the piece of pipe that you have cut out. This will enable the dealer to determine the kind of plastic pipe installed around your house, because different types must be repaired in slightly different ways. Generally, though, the repair is similar to that made on a plastic hose, calling for the use of one or more couplings.

Q. — A few months ago you had an article about the correct way to apply lacquer with a brush. I did not save the clipping, but used lacquer recently. The finish came out very bad. It was all wrinkled. Can you tell me what I might have done wrong?

A. — While it is difficult to be certain, there are two possibilities. One is that you may have made the mistake of applying the lacquer over a painted surface, in which case the lacquer would have acted as a kind of paint remover and caused the paint to wrinkle. The other is that you brushed out the lacquer, which must be applied quickly and then not gone over again. In either case, try rubbing the wrinkled finish with lacquer thinner to smooth it out. But be careful. Lacquer thinner is flammable and volatile and must be used where there is plenty of ventilation and no exposed flame, such as a pilot light.

(The techniques of using varnish, lacquer, shellac, stain, bleach, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 35 cents and a long, STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

Textiles Adopt Natural Trend

ELAINE Q. BARROW
AP Newsfeatures

Bedspreads and draperies of damask and raw silk, lush brocades and cut velvets woven on hand looms are typical of Italian imports reflecting what the textile trade believes is a trend to natural fibers: cotton, wool and silk.

Forty exhibitors recently crossed the Atlantic for a New York City trade showing called Texitalia Casa '78. In addition to ornate bedspreads and draperies, they presented creations in upholstery fabrics, household linens, carpets, wall-to-wall floor coverings and wall coverings — at prices mediumhigh to high.

"In home furnishings today, the fashion emphasis is on natural fibers," says Italian Trade Commissioner Lucio Caputo. "But synthetics are also used because of practicality and the easy care features they add to such products as table linens, bed linens, curtains and draperies."

Household linens have become "a fashion area," Caputo says. "The trend is for natural colors in linen — soft, suffused beiges. There is also an emphasis on the romantic Victorian prints of the 1800s in tiny patterns."

Wool blankets were shown by the Italian group for the first time in the United States. Previously, they were produced chiefly for domestic consumption.

The blankets featured natural stripes in alpaca or cashmere, and pastel plaids and stripes in wool. The accent was on warm shades of earthy tones from natural to brown.

In draperies and other decorating fabrics, silk, linen and cotton fibers dominated, but acrylics and polyesters also were used.

Imaginative weaves abounded. A flame stitch was popular for upholstery fabrics as were small boucles in tiny patterns and natural colors. Appliques on both smooth-finished and embroidered fabrics indicated still another trend. Overall, there was an increase in jacquards, brocades, damask and velvet.

This was evident in the collection by Lisio of Florence. Many of the patterns for upholstery fabrics, bedspreads and draperies were styled after ancient designs and paintings and applied to "lampas," an elaborately embellished fabric woven with a double warp.

One called "Ornato" comes from an antique ceramic vase of Hispano-Arabic inspiration in the 15th century. A brocade, "Bisanzio" design, was copied from a fabric of the 7th century used for wrapping relics in the "Sancta Sanctorum" of St. John Lateran, Rome, and depicts the allegoric haloed rooster of earlier Christian times. Still another design reproduces the detail of the garment of Flora in Botticelli's painting, "Primavera."

Another firm divided its collection between patterns and textures taken from ancient documents and those following contemporary concepts.

The shift in fiber preference is borne out by recent export figures. In a 1977 expansion of U. S. imports of Italian textile goods, Caputo says cotton figured prominently, representing over $22 million, and silk imports rose to $15 million, doubling the 1974 volume.

At the exhibit of Seteria Bianchi, Louis Minella drew out some silk samples and said, "These silks are from one of the last silk mills in Italy. We do a large business in silk goods to Japan which, in the old days, used to be one of the largest producers.

"What's happening in Italy is the same thing that happened in Japan. The sons and daughters of farmers are now going into factories and working on television sets and other hard goods."

Minella said, "Silk was previously used for vestments for the clergy. We even used to furnish silk for Bishop (Fulton J.) Sheen's mantello when he was on television. But that was before the so-called church reformation.

"Now," he sighed, "it's polyester; now they all have to look poor."

Minella says his firm supplies fabrics for the vestments worn by the pope.

"The pope's robes are made of heavy satin, moire for the inauguration — moire like this," he said, fingering a sample. "Only heavier and pure white."

Minella said that prior to the election of a pope, the tailor, Gambarelli — not knowing who will be elected — must make garments in three sizes. After the sudden death of Pope John Paul I, the tailor rushed his staff around the clock for three days to complete three new vestments for the election of the next Pope.

With mild understatement, Minella said, "That's the first time that has happened."

Stamp Items Available

Postmaster H. Lloyd Mills reminded holiday shoppers Thursday that the Greenville Post Office has available several stamp collecting items that are suitable for Christmas gifts.

Mills said that the post office has the latest edition of "Stamps and Stories," the popular U. S. Postal Service guide to stamp collecting, as well as the 1978 Mint Set, which contains all 28 commemorative and special stamps issued during the year.

The 240-page "Stamps and Stories" book is priced at $3.50.

The 1978 Mint Set, priced at $4.50, is the latest in a series of annual sets of commemorative and special stamps released by the post office each year prior to Christmas.

In addition to these two items, the post office also has a number of topical stamp collecting kits available for beginning collectors.

Each of the $2 kits include a small 20-page album, mounting hinges, insert sheets for additional stamps and a 32-page booklet, "The ABC's of Stamp Collecting."

N.C. State Univ. Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. My tomato plants were mulched this year with pine straw on a two-inch thickness of newspapers. Can all of this be disked into the soil, or should the mulch be removed first? (R.P., Knightdale)

A. Two inches of newspapers is a thick layer of mulch for easy decomposition. Also, pine straw decomposes slowly. But I would still try to work this mulch into the soil instead of removing it. Disk it two or three times and keep the area moist. Next year you might want to use less newspaper. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Q. I have two camellias — a sasanqua and a japonica— on the north side of my house. Each year they die down to the ground. Should I move them to another location? (M.E., Ramseur)

A. Yes, I would. Transplant them anytime before February to another partially shaded location. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. I recently purchased a house that is built on an eroded hillside. The topsoil is gone and the subsoil is hard, red clay. What kind of trees can I grow on such a site? (H.H., Asheboro)

A. Pines generally do better on a poor site, which apparently you have, than hardwoods. Your success with trees is going to depend to a large extent on the physical properties of the subsoil which you described. If it is tight, plastic-light soil, no tree — not even a pine — is going to grow well. If the subsoil is semi-loose or crumbly, then you may have success with hardwoods. One way to determine the tightness of the soil is to dig a hole and fill it with water. If the water drains out fairly rapidly, then tree roots should be able to penetrate the soil. If the water stays, you've got a tight soil that needs to be improved before trees will grow well. (Leon Harkins, extension forest resources)

Gas-Sniffers Run Big Risk

CHICAGO (UPI) — Gasoline sniffers run a risk of serious illness from lead poisoning.

Three cases of lead poisoning among individuals who sought a "high" from sniffing gasoline fumes are reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Dr. Richard O. Robinson of the University of Kentucky Medical Center, Lexington, reports two cases of organic lead poisoning due to habitual gasoline sniffing. A 14-year-old boy died, and a 15-year-old girl recovered from serious illness.

Drs. Knight S. Hansen and Frank R. Sharp of the University of California, San Francisco, report the case of a 27-year-old man who was seriously ill from lead in the fumes of inhaled gasoline.

Hot Tubs Become The Newest California Symbol

By RICHARD M. TOSCHES

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — If the skyrocketing popularity of hot tubs continues, the redwood barrels filled with hot water may take their place beside the avocado and nude beaches as California trademarks.

Of the estimated 50,000 circular soaking tubs in existence nationwide, about 48,000 are in California — most in the southern part of the state.

Most construction sources estimate the total six years ago at about 100. Even by last year, fewer than 1,000 had been sold. The boom began this year and the tubs have become common among executives.

"I think they're fabulous," said Martin Shadwick from his Beverly Hills home. "I've had mine for two years and I don't know how I ever did without it.

"People say hot tubs will become popular in other places but there's no way. I just can't picture them going over big in Iowa."

Lloyd Kurtz, owner of The Barrel Works in Los Angeles, said his small company will net $2.5 million this year from production and installation of the tubs.

It takes less than two hours to build a tub with seven-foot circumference. Another hour is needed to assemble a tub at home and one or two hours to add wooden decks around it. Kurtz said the average cost is $2,000, with some going as high as $5,000.

"This rise in demand will continue to a point, then level off," Kurtz said. "But it won't stop as long as people keep moving and buying houses. Many people buy homes here and add a hot tub before they move in."

The tubs are built of redwood, which has been known to last 150 years under water with very little deterioration, Kurtz said. Other woods begin to split and fall apart after 10 or 15 years of constant use.

The Los Angeles area has 22 manufacturers and distributors. All report brisk business and a waiting list in most cases.

The birthplace of the hot tub is generally regarded as the northern California wine-producing areas — Sonoma, Modesto and Napa counties — where old wine tubs were cut in half and used to soak in. Abundant natural hot springs provided the water. Jet pumps agitate the water in current tubs.

Kurtz said people in other parts of the country are just not familiar enough with the devices to make them successful.

"The average Easterner would probably ask, 'What the hell is it?'" said Kurtz, who was born and reared in New Jersey. "It was a fad that turned into something legitimate here. People in California are more water-oriented. They live near the ocean and can use it year-round."

He said he hopes to introduce the tubs to the East on a large scale in a few years.

"If I had my choice I'd be in Vermont right now," he said. "At Killington or Stowe or some other ski resort. Those people would appreciate hot tubs more than we do. It's great for after skiing. The cold-to-hot sensation is just fantastic."

Kurtz said he'd like to sell his business, which he estimates is worth $250,000, and move to a farm in Massachusetts. "I'd start the business all over again there," he said.

Gary Hankins, 33, a stockbroker who lives in the exclusive Bel Air district, said his day just wouldn't be complete without a few minutes in his $5,000 tub.

"I engage in a lot of sports," Hankins said, "and I find that one of the most relaxing things I can do afterwards is to sit in the hot tub. I think it has a tremendous amount of therapeutic value. I can think of nothing better than a glass of wine and a soak in the hot tub at the end of a day.

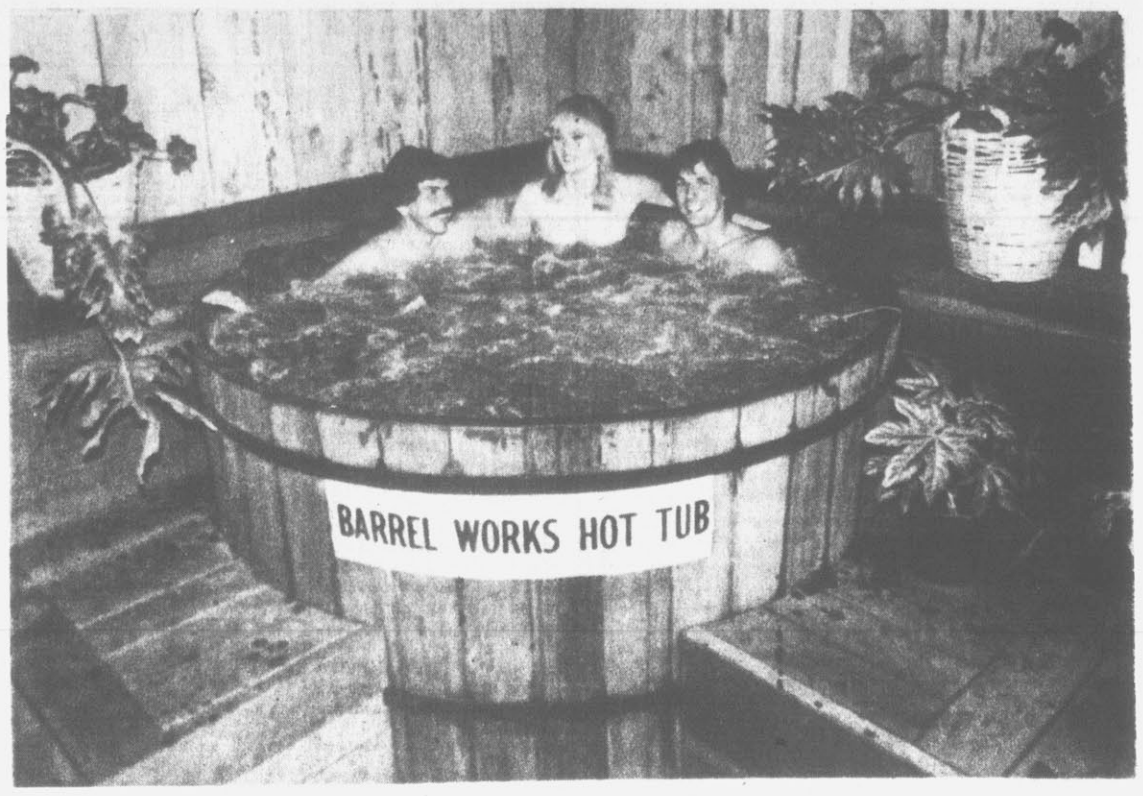

"It also brings back the communal spirit that we have overlooked in this country for the past decade or so. It serves as a gathering point where you can enjoy company and share thoughts."

Young Offenders Like Island Life

CRAB CAY, The Bahamas (AP) — People boated to this isolated speck of land have an average of seven felony charges against them, but this is no Devil's Island. In fact, they sometimes cry when forced to leave.

Crab Cay, 10 acres of land tucked away in the Berry Islands, 145 miles east-southeast of Miami, is the site of a rehabilitation center for teenagers that stresses cooperation instead of punishment, independence instead of confinement.

"These are repeat offenders when they get here," said Patrick McCourt, a spokesman for the Deerfield Beach-based Florida Ocean Sciences Institute, which runs the program. "They're delinquent kids; they're not Harvard candidates."

Although there is no electricity here — flashlights must be carried to the outhouse at night to scare away the scorpions — the teen-agers seem to like it.

Dave, a 17-year-old, was assigned by a judge to the program earlier this year — "when I was wild and foolish" — after being charged with selling marijuana to undercover police officers. Now, said Dave, not only has the program changed him, it has also changed the way he is treated by hometown police officers.

"They used to check me out and harass me," he said. "Now, when they see me, they smile and say 'Hi, Dave.'"

The program, supported in part by public funds, includes schooling and job-training, primarily in marine-related fields. Reading is stressed.

Most of the training comes at the institute's Florida headquarters, where students earn points that can be accumulated until they qualify for a trip to Crab Cay.

The teen-agers also learn about scuba diving, water safety, first aid and dangerous marine life.

"The whole idea is to teach them responsibility, and there is no better way to do it than diving," one instructor said.

You are right! If you have never worked a civilian overseas assignment, you should have the opportunity to check it out before you ship out. That's why we have prepared an audio/visual program that brings the sights and sounds of Iran to you. You'll see typical living quarters, work sites, recreational facilities and important details such as the local shopping facilities.

If you have strong civilian or military maintenance or manufacturing experience in any of the areas listed below... plus experience or the ability to train others in an On-The-Job Training program, there may be an opportunity with BHI in Iran for you.

- HELICOPTER/AIRCRAFT MECHANICS - with at least five years recent Aircraft Maintenance experience.
- TECHNICAL INSPECTORS - with five years Helicopter or Aircraft Inspection experience. NDI inspectors also needed.
- DYNAMIC COMPONENT MECHANICS - five years experience maintaining Helicopter Powertrain and Rotor Systems.
- GSE MECHANICS - five years experience maintaining Aircraft Ground Support Equipment.

We offer outstanding overseas premium income program including paid foreign tax credit, housing allowance, relocation and household goods storage, and many paid benefits...with an additional bonus to individuals who can work at remote sites on a no-children basis. . . . "one of the hottest franchise deals going"

Wall Street Journal

We are the fastest growing company in a nine billion dollar industry with operations across the United States and Canada. Our business is all cash with no receivables or perishables—and virtually no inventory—a proven hedge against inflation. Unusually high pre-tax return on investment, with immediate cash flow and long term capital gains potential. We provide a complete turn-key operation—from site selection to hiring and training staff—and then support our Licensees with essential services on a continuing basis. Since only 8 to 10 hours weekly supervision is necessary, many of our Licensees retain their present employment.

Our Licensees must submit impeccable references—both business and character. A total investment of about $80,000 per location is required. Some financing is available for qualified individuals.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022.
We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

We, the people! people! people!

FOR DONALD W. MANN, President, Negative Population Growth, Inc.

Has the fear of overpopulation passed? —V.P., Odessa, Texas

● The population explosion, the most destructive force the world has ever known, is alive and well. Reports of its demise have been grossly exaggerated. If we date its birth from the beginning of the Industrial Revolution some 200 years ago, it is most likely in robust and vigorous middle age, with old age and decrepitude 100 years or more in the future. With more than 4.2 billion people now, the world is already dangerously overpopulated. World population is still growing at about two percent a year, a rate about 1,000-times greater than the rate of population growth for 99.99 percent of human history. At the present rate of increase, the world will add another billion in the next 11 years. Doubling time remains about 35 years, so that by the year 2013, population will exceed eight billion.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Were my ears playing me tricks? I heard a report that there are thousands of mice, yes mice, in the Senate Office Building! —D.P., Albany, N.Y.

● Our research led us to Senator William Proxmire, who confirmed the report. "There are more mice than men in the new Senate Office Building, and in this country, as you know, numbers count. Mice have disabled a committee computer. They have chewed through telephone lines and put phones out of commission. Like most rodents, they don't attack people. But they are furtive, fast and interrupt all kinds of conferences unexpectedly, frightening males and females alike." He feels the problem, which began with an odd mouse here and there, could have been arrested had the holes through which the mice invade the building been plugged with steel wool. He feels cats should have been brought in, too.

A cat-and-mouse game for Senators.

FOR RICHARD HATCH, star of ABC-TV's Battlestar Galactica

It's whispered that you won't let anyone into your house. Why? —O.N., Gary, Ind.

● Because it's a mess. I happen to like a clean house, but it never seems to be in the shape I want. I just don't have the time to keep everything straight — or pick up. Everything piles up; my home is a disaster area. I need help — someone to keep me neat and tidy, starting off with throwing out newspapers that are two or three months old.

FOR SUSAN CLARK, actress

Is it true that the last people who ate at your house for Thanksgiving got food poisoning? —K.S., La Crosse, Wis.

● It's possible. I guess you must be referring to the dinner two years ago. I cleaned the kitchen floor and waxed it so that it shone like a mirror. When I took the turkey out of the oven, I slipped. Everything went down on the floor. I managed to lift the bird and put it on the plate but forgot to scrape the wax off. I'm sure it wasn't very healthy!

FOR PHYLLIS DILLER, comedienne

I bet you're really a terrific cook, and all those crazy stories you tell are just part of your act. True? —W.P., Anniston, Ala.

● During WW II, as a young housewife, I invited a serviceman to Thanksgiving dinner. When we took the first bite of the pumpkin pie, we all realized I had forgotten the sugar. It tasted exactly like a piece of corrugated box. Fortunately, it didn't affect the outcome of the war. P.S. The serviceman had his Christmas dinner in the mess hall.

FOR ALICE COOPER, rock star

Now that you've reached 30, don't you think you're too over the hill to stay in rock, and why do you keep changing your style of music? —Jeff Dorner, Kalamazoo, Mich.

● It's funny — and also sad — to be considered old at 30. Since I stopped drinking, I feel as though I'm 20 and sing much better than I ever have before. I wouldn't say I keep changing my direction in music. It may seem that way because I put out three ballads in a row.

FOR PAUL DOOLEY, star of A Wedding

What made you take up acting so late in life? What have you been doing until now? —Jane Muldoone, Ventura, Calif.

● Acting! After two years in the Navy, I worked with other "unknowns" on the "mountain circuit." (Carol Burnett, Leonard Bernstein, Neil "Doc" Simon, Arte Johnson). Had it not been for Mrs. Robert Altman (wife of the director of A Wedding) seeing me in an off-Broadway play, I'd still be plodding along.

FOR KATHERINE HELMOND, star of Soap

Does it bother you that some churchmen frown on your role in Soap? —K.N., Lynchburg, Va.

● I was more surprised than worried. The show is crazy and dizzy and immoral, true, and I was surprised because a strong condemnation came without any of the condemners having seen it. I come from a very spiritual family and consider myself very moral. Seems to me that's not setting a good example — to prejudge or convict without a trial. It does not encourage people to make up their own minds.

PRO AND CON

Is Television Responsible for a Lack of Interest in Reading?

PRO Ernest L. Boyer, U.S. Commissioner of Education

There's no question that too many families spend too much time hypnotized by glowing boxes in darkened rooms. Today young children watch television 4,000 to 5,000 hours before they even go to school. They soak up messages and stare at pictures without formulating messages of their own — without extending their own vocabulary or developing the capacity for coherent thought. Parents and children need to read more, to talk more and to learn not to flick their minds off when they flick their TV sets on. I'm convinced the schools, family and television can form a new partnership. What's needed is a vocal public unwilling to settle for mediocrity.

CON Kenneth B. Hoyt, Director of Career Education, Dept. of H.E.W.

It is too simplistic to place the entire blame on television, although this is likely one of several factors involved. In addition to television, there are many other forces in American life, including both technological advances and a great increase in the variety of ways open to us for use of leisure time, that have caused too many people to downplay both the need and the desirability to read. There is a great need now to empasize reading throughout all of education, the immense advantages and benefits reading can bring to the individual's total lifestyle. We have overplayed excuses for not reading and failed to adequately emphasize the benefits of reading.

PLAYING TO BEAT THE BAND

Scotty Gilmore

It's a cardinal rule at ABC to make certain the camera catches the dotting of the "i" when Ohio State unravels its famous script Ohio.

By Jim Benagh

When the University of Michigan's powerful, fast-stepping football team (ranked among the top 10 for nine straight years.) plays a home game, it must share lead billing with another powerful, fast-stepping group — the Michigan Marching Band.

It has happened many a time that a follower of a heated football rivalry — say, Michigan versus Ohio State — will react after coming up on the short end of the football score with, "Well, at least our band was better than theirs."

College football and marching bands have gone hand-in-hand for about a half-century: ties have never been closer.

At Michigan, for instance, band director George Cavender said "You could go on either practice field and shut your eyes and not know which one you were at."

When Cavender goes to work, he puts on a Michigan baseball cap and climbs a 20-foot tower to oversee his charges. His face becomes as stern as a coach's on a busted play, and his criticisms are sharp and deep. He's got a 220-person band to coordinate, and time is precious.

Cavender's workouts are just as demanding as the football team's, and it's not unusual to see his bandspeople out jogging to get in shape for the 200-steps-a-minute marches that will take place once the band is put together. Cavender put it bluntly, "Both the football coach and the band director put their abilities on public display every Saturday. No other professors have to do that."

Cavender's opposite at Ohio State, Dr. Paul Droste, wouldn't argue with that.

"The football team and the band are the two hardest working groups on the Ohio State campus."

Whether it is at Michigan, Ohio State or any of hundreds of other campuses with marching bands, there seems to be no shortage of potential band members.

Texas, as well as most schools, gives a couple hours educational credit for the band participation, but Michigan's Cavender is the first to admit that his bandspeople don't enroll in "Ensemble 348" for the grades.

For the band members, there is the glory of performing in the big stadiums and being part of a dedicated team.

Ohio State football coach Woody Hayes knows he can count on the band's enthusiasm to rev up his team, and there's no question that the band can rev up the home crowd come game time.

Last year's Michigan drum major, psychology student Jeff Wilkins, said the militaristic nature of bands cannot but help gear up fans.

The psychological effect on the crowd has not always been channeled in the right direction unfortunately, and Michigan and Ohio State are among several schools that have had their share of some ugly incidents.

Bandspeople have been pelted with snowballs, wine bottles, eggs and other debris. Bus windows have been broken and band formulations invaded by fans.

But that is the work of outsiders.

The musicians themselves are only out to beat the band, so to speak, if the visiting team brings its band along.

Actually, college bands don't travel that often, due to the expense, except to major games such as Army-Navy, bowl games, etc. More often than not, a marching band will find itself competing against its own standards.

For all the work that goes into synchronizing the marching music, there is precious little time to display the final product. Bands are usually allotted 16 of the 20 halftime minutes, which means only eight minutes if there is a visiting band. If the game is televised as part of the ABC-TV package, only 3½ to eight minutes goes on the network. NBC and CBS have been more generous with bowl game shows, but then again, not the full halftime.

But that doesn't stop bandspeople from trying to stretch the length.

"In all the years I've been with sports," said Chuck Howard, ABC's Vice-President-Sports, "I've never seen a group with a greater lobby than the band people. We get more feedback from them than anyone in college football."

But for all the planning and work that goes into show planning by the colleges, the themes are ofen similar. Last fall, it was an unending succession of Star Wars themes. This year, a Saturday Night Fever overkill is expected.

There is still room for variety and range, however. Texas has had such Country Western singers as Charlie Pride and Willie Nelson in their bandshows. Others, from the late Gene Krupa to current jazzman Maynard Ferguson, have played with college marching bands over the past few decades.

And just the very style of bands differs.

There are the massive bands ranging from 250 to 330 in the Southwest Conference — Texas's affiliation — but that same league has Southern Methodist University's brass-and-saxaphone jazz band that is only a third of the size. Furthermore, Texas's showband is definitely different in style from Texas A&M's taut military style band. Other bands may vary as much from the Grambling Tiger Band that has been featured with all its fast swaying shoulder movements to the hijinks of Ivy Leaguers, such as Princeton's.

Among the better known bands, modesty is no virture. Ohio State began labeling itself "The Best Damn Band in The Land" in the 1930s. Purdue calls itself "The All-American Band" and has a drum the size of Texas's and a majorette, carefully selected and well publicized, called "The Golden Girl." Alabama named itself "The Million Dollar Band."

Yet marching bands, including the best, have shied away from outright competition to determine who is the best.

"The concept of college bands is not to compete but to entertain," said Michigan's George Cavender. "There used to be a time when there were only a couple of good bands."

But he said trying to compare his woodwind and brass musicians with Ohio State's all-brass band is "like asking you to choose a Chevrolet over a Ford."

Michigan's Cavender and Ohio State's Droste, in fact, have been known to trade information, and Droste specifically credited Cavender with giving him some advice that made Ohio State's halftime show at the 1977 Orange Bowl an entertainment knockout.

After that Orange Bowl performance, Droste said, "Our kids knew how super we did. They came off the field shaking hands, patting each other on the back and that stuff."

Which sounds like a successful football team all over again. FW

NBC

Dick Clark with "players" Bob Hope and Danny Kaye on NBC's Live Wednesda

By David Grunwald

America's perpetual teenager turns 49 this month. Yes, television's Dorian Gray, Dick Clark of the carefully blown dry hair and the toothpaste commercial smile, the host of ABC's long-running American Bandstand, the man who made rock-n-roll respectable.

But after all those years of introducing the Frankie Avalons and Bobby Rydells of the world, it turns out in his heart of hearts that he has always wanted to front his very own variety show.

This season he has finally been given his chance by NBC. Every Wednesday night at 8:00 p.m. (E.S.T.) it's Dick Clark's Live Wednesday direct from bucolic Burbank, one of the few new shows that has a chance of avoiding the ax and lasting the year.

Not that he has real doubts, this dream is too much a part of him to let it die. "I've always wanted to do it," he says. "It's been my personal fantasy for years."

"We have misnamed the variety show area since Carol Burnett arrived on the scene," he says. "Probably she is on equal par with Lucille Ball, a unique one-of-a-kind talent. Being a success every-one said, 'Oh, that's a variety show.'"

And Dick Clark has no intention of imitating Carol Burnett, leaving that role to Mary Tyler Moore. But then he's not a comedian or a singer or an actor. His real talents lie elsewhere, in his willingness to work endless hours, his business savvy, his eye for the main chance.

With his pleasant baritone and smooth features, the Mt. Vernon, N.Y., native has hosted Bandstand ever since it went on the air for a four-week trial run on ABC in the summer of 1957 and became an instant teenage rage. Then 27, his hair sleekly pressed down and parted on the right, he looked like the president of the local Jaycees dressed in a suit. The Syracuse graduate brought rock-n-roll in from the cold, assuaging parental doubts about the dangers of this music on t morals and ears of their children.

His on-air duties as host of Li Wednesday, Bandstand, ABC's weekd $20,000 Pyramid game show, and three-hour weekly syndicated radio sh is just the tip of the iceberg. In addition personal appearances, a night club ro n-roll revue, lectures, concert and fi production, the ever busy Clark — third wife Kari is also his executive ass tant — is involved in developing sit-co and game shows, and producing num ous specials including an upcomi three-hour Presley retrospective.

His enthusiasm for Live Wednesday palpable, he literally glowed when t Los Angeles Rams Embraceable Ewes their form-fitting costumes did locomotive spell-out to introduce him the premiere. After all, it's his chance put his various talents together for the fi time — Clark the host, Clark the prom er, Clark the producer — and see if he c become the Ed Sullivan of the Me Ge eration. "The assignment here is to find potpourri of goodies that will appeal people of all ages."

He says the new show is timely "b cause it's a restructuring of an idea tha so basically perfect for television th we've forgotten about it." What sets apart from past live shows, he conten is the integration of contemporary ele tronic technology, miniature video ca eras, satellite transmissions, turning t whole world into a live studio: Clar Wide World of Electronic Vaudeville.

So on comes Suzanne Somers in slinky dress, Barry Manilow warblin from the Philadelphia Spectrum. D Severinson being hit in the face by Chu Barry's hard-bopping guitar, a stuntma doing back flips on a trampoline suspen ed below a helicopter hovering over t Ventura Freeway.

Three years ago ABC did have a s open, only Howard Cosell got the n and Saturday Night Live With Howa Cosell quickly faded from the tube.

Was it really miscasting? Or more a longer viable form?

Dick Clark is finding out.

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

How do you feel about your name?
Does it fit your image of yourself?
Is an unusual name an asset or a liability?
What does your signature say about you?

THE GAME OF THE NAME

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. An unusual name is more likely to be an asset than a liability.
2. The way a person writes his name tells a lot about the way he feels about himself.
3. Habitual nonuse of one's first name (using only the bare initials) indicates narcissistic tendencies — the person is so "in love with himself" that he doesn't want to share his given name with anybody.
4. A married woman's success in finding a job is likely to be affected by the way she styles her name.
5. It tells something about one's personality if one dislikes his family name.
6. The more forgetful you are of a person's name, the better the odds are that you have subconsciously classified him as a "forgettable person."

ANSWERS

1. True. Contrary to what has been previously assumed to be the case, studies at Guilford College (N.C.) have yielded findings strongly suggesting that an unusual name can be a very definite asset. This was the test: two thousand adults named were randomly selected from The Social Register, cited as "the best guide to the membership of the national upper class." All names that occurred only once in the 2,000 were defined as unusual. There were 218 (roughly 11 percent). Listing in Who's Who was used as a measure of achievement. (It lists "the best known men and women in all lines of useful and reputable achievement.") Findings: A disproportionately high number of persons from The Social Register who were represented in Who's Who were from the unusual-name group.

2. True. Investigations at Laurentian University (Canada) showed "a significant positive relationship between size of signature and self-esteem." And another similar study has also shown "that there is a relationship between how large someone signs his name and how that person feels about himself." This does not mean that people of outstanding talent and ability may not have a small-sized signature but suggests that they are modest about their accomplishments and don't realize the full extent of their potential.

3. False. A Guilford College (N.C.) study indicates that the exact opposite is likely to be true, with such individuals not giving themselves the credit due them and tending to feel insecure even when such a feeling is unwarranted.

4. True. A Cornell University study reports "a relationship between the way a married woman chooses to style her name on an application to an employment agency and her success in finding a job. In the sample studied, those who used their own first names (Mrs. Mary Smith, for example) were more likely to have found employment than those who identified themselves by their husbands' first names (Mrs. John Smith)." This explanation is offered: if a married woman saw herself as a person independent of her husband, she probably presented herself in the employment interview in such a way that she was more likely to be hired than the woman who viewed herself in a more dependent light.

5. True. Psychiatrist Joseph C. Solomon sums up the findings of his study of family identity in a monograph. "Emotional stability is equated with a good family identity, and the family identity can be determined by one's attitude to his or her surname. This, it is pointed out, can be proved in a simple fashion by merely asking people about their names. 'What does it mean to you to be a Smith — or Jones or whatever?'" Married women also were questioned about their married names. Results: without exception, the normal or nearly normal subjects (earlier appraised) evidenced strong family identities. ("I am proud to be a Smith.") Subjects with neurotic tendencies, however, who were asked the identical questions, made completely opposite responses. Invariably, there were disturbances in their family identity. Sample replies were, "I hate being a Barton. I feel like an Adams." "When I'm called by my last name I feel like my father — this is not a pleasant feeling." These findings match other investigations.

6. True. Studies at George Peabody College (Tenn.) have shown that the more promptly you recall a person's name, the better you esteem him and the more pleasure his company gives you. On the other hand, if you find yourself saying to an acquaintance, "I remember your face, but I've forgotten your name," the chances are that you'd just as soon forget his face, too. Our memory is related to both conscious and unconscious processes, and the promptness with which we can recall the name of an acquaintance often tips us off as to how we regard him before we are completely aware of our feelings. AMERICA'S GREATEST COOKS WHIP UP THE ULTIMATE THANKSGIVING DINNER

Join us in Thanksgiving bounty with the choice selections of our renowned cooks. See The Ultimate Thanksgiving Menu for exact description.

By Marilyn Hansen

We were wondering one afternoon in late September just what food would tempt our FAMILY WEEKLY readers this Thanksgiving. After several starts and stops, we did come up with an idea: The Ultimate Thanksgiving Dinner.

And so we asked James Beard, noted cookbook author; cooking-school teacher Julia Child, renowned for her TV series, The French Chef, and for her many cookbooks; George Lang, restaurant planner and cookbook author par excellence; and Marilyn Hansen, FAMILY WEEKLY's own food editor and cookbook editor, to bring their favorite dishes and compose the Ultimate Thanksgiving Dinner.

Needless to say, the celebration feast turned out beautifully. The individual personality of each person is evident in each dish, lovingly prepared and presented. We invite you to share their creativity and wide food knowledge at your own table this Thanksgiving.

May we present The Ultimate Thanksgiving Dinner?

George Lang is the man behind the George Lang Corporation — the man who "invents" restaurants.

He put together the entire Market concept at the Citicorp Center in New York City. The Market has eight international restaurants and a great gourmet food-shopping center.

Two individual showplaces there are personally, unmistakably George Lang: Hungaria, the Hungarian restaurant inspired by his homeland, and Small Pleasures, a fancy pastry and coffeeshop.

For our story in FAMILY WEEKLY, George Lang presents several recipes from Hungaria in the Citicorp, one from Café des Artistes, the restaurant of his own expression on New York's West Side, and a showpiece dish from his latest baby, the fabulous La Folie, also in New York.

Reflecting upon Thanksgiving, George Lang says, "It is a time to look backward and forward. To be aware of what has happened to you and why it's happened. And, above all, a personal Thanksgiving for life."

Walnut Pâté des Artistes
Charcuterie Platter: Hungaria*
Mousse of Chicken Liver à la Chef's Playtime
Gallantine La Folie*
Chilled Chablis

recipe not included

MOUSSE OF CHICKEN LIVER A LA CHEF'S PLAYTIME

- 1 cup finely chopped onions
- ¾ cup lard
- 3½ lbs. chicken livers
- ½ tablespoon marjoram
- Plenty of black pepper
- 1 tablespoon thyme leaves
- 1 oz. brandy
- 1 lb. butter
- 12 hard-boiled eggs, peeled
- Salt
- Thick tomato slices
- Hard-boiled egg whites
- Romaine lettuce leaves
- Parsley

1. In a skillet, sauté the onions in lard until golden. Add the chicken livers and cook, stirring, until just seared, but do not cook them too long or over too high heat lest they harden and will be tough.

2. Add herbs and pepper and cook, stirring, until all the moisture has evaporated. Midway in the cooking, add the brandy.

3. Push the livers through a fine blade of a meat chopper along with the eggs and the pan juices. Beat in the butter and mix until smooth. Readjust the seasoning. Chill.

4. For one serving, spread a tomato slice thickly with the prepared mousse and stuff hollow of white of egg with more mousse. Set in the center of the tomato and top with a second rounded top or tail slice of tomato. Tilt it in order to give the impression of a mushroom.

5. Using a paper cone, make butter dots on top to simulate mushroom markings. Garnish with lettuce and parsley.

Makes 15 appetizer servings
The recipe is from the Hungaria Restaurant.

WALNUT PATE des ARTISTES

- 4½ lbs. fat back
- ⅔ cup chopped garlic
- 1 scant tablespoon thyme
- 4 cups roughly crushed walnuts, vacuum-packed or fresh
- ⅓ cup or more salt
- ¼ cup black pepper, fresh ground
- 2 tablespoons MSG (optional)
- 2¼ to 2½ cups Chablis wine

1. Push livers, onion and shallots through the fine blade of the meat grinder.

2. Change to the coarse blade and push through the pork butts and fat back. Add the remaining ingredients and blend thoroughly.

3. Pack into bake-oven pate molds.

4. Place 3 or 4 bay leaves on top. Cover each prepared mold with foil. Bake in a slow oven for 2 to 2½ hours in a bain marie (water bath). ½ hour before fully cooked, remove the foil and allow the top to brown.

James Beard

I recently asked James Beard about his childhood Thanksgivings.

"I grew up in a family where relatives were ignored. Thanksgiving was a pleasant time with friends, especially friends who were alone, if you know what I mean. It was a relief from the yoke of family. It was a day of giving and, in time, this personal way of Thanksgiving became our own family tradition."

When he talked about Thanksgiving dinners, Jim confided, "I've always had a passion for pumpkin pie," and was happy to share that choice pie recipe with us. About his turkey dinner, he said, "I prefer to garnish a roast turkey with great simplicity; watercress is fine, in deference to the carver. And I like to carve on a wooden platter with a well-sharpened carving set.

"A favorite vegetable with turkey I like to serve is a puree of parsnips with a good amount of butter and Madeira."

James Beard has written 20 cookbooks, many of them classics in their field.

Strips of fresh or salt pork or bacon rind
4 tablespoons flour
¼ cup cognac or Madeira (optional)

Stuffing

½ cup butter
1 cup finely chopped shallots or finely cut green onions
1½ tablespoons dried tarragon or 3 tablespoons fresh tarragon, finely cut
1 tablespoon salt or to taste
1½ teaspoons freshly ground pepper
½ cup pine nuts
Additional melted butter, if needed
10 to 12 cups fine fresh bread crumbs

Much of this fashion of roasting a turkey came from my family. I have changed and embellished it a bit, and the final recipe is the one I use for Thanksgiving or other traditional holidays.

1. Make the stuffing first. Melt the butter in a heavy skillet — a 12-inch one, if possible. Add the shallots or green onions and the tarragon and allow to cook until the shallots are just wilted.

2. Add the salt, pepper, pine nuts and then the additional butter as needed — I should say another ½ to 1 cup butter, depending on the amount the onion has absorbed. Finally add the crumbs and toss well.

3. Taste the mixture and add more of any of the ingredients, if required. A clove or two of garlic may also be added to the mixture.

4. Remove the neck from the bird if not already done and put it into a 2-qt. saucepan with the liver, heart, gizzard, and the onion, parsley, 2 teaspoons salt and the thyme.

5. Add the water; bring to a boil and boil 5 minutes, after which, reduce the heat and simmer, covered, 1 hour. Drain and reserve for the sauce. If you like, chop the gizzard, heart and liver and add to the sauce.

6. Rub the inside of the turkey with the lemon and dry with paper towels. Fill the body cavity and neck cavity with stuffing, but not too tightly.

7. Truss the turkey with a trussing needle, by hand, tying the piece of neck skin to the back of the turkey or by sewing with a needle and twine.

8. Close the vent of the bird and either secure with skewers and twine or sew it up. Tie the legs together firmly and then tie them to the tail of the bird.

9. Massage the turkey well with softened butter, and then salt and pepper it.

10. Line a rack with strips of fresh or salt pork or with the rind of bacon, which you can sometimes buy from your butcher when he cuts down a whole slab. Set the rack in a fairly shallow roasting pan and place the turkey, breast-side down, on the rack.

11. Roast 1 hour at 350°F. Remove the pan from the oven, turn the turkey on one side and rub with softened butter.

12. Return the turkey to the oven and roast another hour. Remove the pan, turn the turkey on its other side and rub with butter.

13. Roast for another hour, turn the turkey on its back and rub the breast with butter.

14. Return to the oven and continue roasting till the turkey tests done. Remove from the oven and place on a hot platter. Allow it to rest 15 minutes if it is to be served hot. If served tepid, let it cool gently at room temperature. Remove all the twine and skewers.

15. For the sauce, remove all the fat from the roasting pan, except 4 tablespoons. Over medium heat, add the flour to the pan and blend thoroughly, scraping to loosen bits of caramelized dripping.

16. If there are any juices, add those (skimmed of fat) as well. Gradually stir in 2 cups or more of the turkey broth and cook, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens. Correct the seasonings.

17. Add the chopped giblets if you like, and cognac or Madeira; simmer about 4 or 5 minutes. Serve with the turkey and stuffing.

Note: If you prefer variety in the stuffing, stuff the neck cavity with a mixture of 1 lb. ground pork, 1 lb. ground veal, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ cup finely chopped shallot, 1 egg, 1 cup bread crumbs and ¼ cup cognac.

What have over 3 million people discovered about the mysterious powers of this magnetic necklace?

This necklace is no ordinary necklace. The necklace pictured on this page is the authentic, internationally famous TDK EPAULE™ magnetic necklace.

It is one of the most unique works of original jewelry ever created. It contains at least nine magnets. For their size they are unbelievably powerful. In fact, since it was first introduced in Japan just 2 short years ago, over 3 million people have purchased it, worn it, and value its effects. Currently over 100,000 necklaces per month are being sold, and it would not be stretching a point to say that it is the most popular necklace in all of history. Its appeal is universal. It is worn by men and women, young and old.

As more and more people experience the powers of this mysterious necklace, word has begun to spread around the world. Articles about its vast popular acceptance have appeared in leading American newspapers.

Now it is being offered for sale in this country by TDK. You can wear this magnetic necklace and experience its powers for a full 30 days—without any financial risk at all.

JAPANESE GOVERNMENT CERTIFIED

The Government of Japan has certified and approved these necklaces to be sold throughout Japan. There are over 30,000 drug stores now selling EPAULE™ in Japan alone. Now, stores throughout the world are offering this exact same necklace being offered to you.

SPACE AGE TECHNOLOGY

These elegant, cylindrical magnets are really super powerful in spite of their small size. They are made of Rare Earth Cobalt (REC) and their perpetual magnetic field is actually well over 16 times more powerful than the force fields of traditional magnets and were developed for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration of the U.S. Government (NASA) for use in space flights. For the technically minded, their magnetic power rating is 16 Mega Gauss Oersted, providing a magnetic field around each capsule of 1300 gauss, making EPAULE™ the most powerful magnetic necklace commercially available.

$500 MILLION DOLLAR COMPANY

TDK, founded over 40 years ago, is one of the world's leading manufacturers of magnetic and electronic products. You perhaps know them by the "TDK" brand magnetic tapes sold in the U.S. and throughout the world, which are valued for their high quality.

DISCOVER WHAT EPAULE™ CAN ADD TO YOUR LIFE

Man has known about the strange power of magnetism for thousands of years. Yet only since TDK developed the EPAULE™ magnetic necklace has the personal use of magnetic power become popular. As noted earlier, over 3 million people have already experienced the powers of this magnetic necklace in their lives.

NOW IT IS YOUR TURN

What will magnetism accomplish for you? Well, there are on record the actual experiences of thousands of satisfied owners of EPAULE™. Yet to tell you about them would only be relating the experiences of others to you on a second-hand basis. And, since the true nature of magnetism is still a mystery, we'd rather let you discover, for yourself, how the mysteries of the magnetic force embodied in this authentic TDK EPAULE™ magnetic necklace can affect your life.

30 DAY MONEY BACK GUARANTEE

We will send it to you to use and wear for a full 30 days. We know you'll love its simple unisex elegance. It's plated with genuine 14K gold or sparkling white rhodium. Your choice to wear 24 hours a day.

If for any reason you're not completely satisfied with EPAULE,™ just return it within 30 days and we'll rush you a full, unquestioned refund of the purchase price. Note: Not for use with pacemakers.

The low price in Japan for EPAULE™ is being maintained for the U.S. introduction ...only $27.95 to $32.95, depending on necklace length and number of magnets. They are not available at retail.

Julia Child

This fall, Julia Child returns to public television with a new show, Julia and Company, a whole new series of 13 half-hour programs.

Julia also has written a companion cookbook, Julia and Company (Alfred A. Knopf publishers, $15.00 hardcover, $8.95 paperback), which contains all the great dishes she cooks for company on the new television series.

The Stuffed Pumpkin, Le Potiron Tout Rond, Julia brought to the Thanksgiving dinner is an unusual recipe.

She said that "In traditional Chinese cooking, they also do a stuffed winter melon. It is a very natural thing to do, so attractive.

"Buy the pumpkin early and keep it cool, not cold. It is fun to serve either as a soup or vegetable. A green vegetable, perhaps broccoli, cooked with peeled branches in lots of boiling water would be the right accompaniment."

Marilyn Hansen

As I sit down to write an interview with myself, I wonder what the readers would like to know about me.

The one thing that marked the year for me was that I was asked to edit a FAMILY WEEKLY cookbook in honor of our 25th anniversary.

Cooking By The Calendar (Times Books, N.Y., $10.95) is its title, and it reflects how we live around the year. The recipes are from FAMILY WEEKLY, some new and some old.

In my family, we celebrate Thanksgiving on an alternating basis; one year my sister is hostess, the next year I am. We invite others, especially those with no relatives nearby.

The hostess prepares the turkey, and we are all assigned to bring the varied dishes, from my mother's marshmallow sweet potatoes, to succotash and the assortment of green apple, mince-apple and pumpkin pies.

It is a warm happy day, and we give thanks for our lives, our families and for friends whose lives relate to and enrich our own, the freedom to be and the freedom to become.

THE ARTIST. Basil Ede, of Sussex, England, has been called "the outstanding wild bird portraitist of his generation, and perhaps of his century." He is widely regarded as Europe's most distinguished bird artist. Indeed, the authority of his style and the distinction of his work have profoundly influenced the way birds are portrayed by artists throughout the world.

After notable exhibitions in London and other major European cities, Basil Ede was honored by a one-man show at the Smithsonian Institution's National Collection of Fine Arts in Washington, D.C. This was followed, during recent years, by important exhibitions at New York's famous Kennedy Galleries.

His paintings have been commissioned by the National Audubon Society and the World Wildlife Fund, among others. And he is represented in many prominent public and private collections, including the Smithsonian Institution and the collection of HRH Prince Philip, Duke of Edinburgh.

Now, at the height of his career, Basil Ede has created his first works of art in fine porcelain—Game Birds of the World. A series of twelve collector's plates portraying the beauty and grace of game birds in precise, authentic detail and with his own inimitable flair for color and composition.

Each of these twelve plates is, in itself, a masterful work of art. Together, they form an incomparable collection that will be a proud acquisition for every subscriber . . . a focus for conversation and admiration when displayed in the home.

THE GAME BIRD PLATES. The plates will be crafted in France, by the world-renowned firm of Haviland of Limoges. The exceptional translucence and whiteness of Limoges porcelain are ideally suited to bring out the subtle colors of Basil Ede's art.

And the plates will be large in size—9 inches in diameter—to provide full scope for his finely detailed portrayals of game birds in their natural habitat.

The jewel-like quality Ede brings to the birds' plumage . . . the delicate hues of each bird's protective coloration . . . the wonderfully natural colors of its environment . . . all will be captured exactly.

Franklin Porcelain has devoted more than two years to meticulous preparation for the issuance of these plates, and every detail

Common Snipe
Red Legged Partridge

Common Quail
Red Grouse

Woodcock
Chinese Ring-Necked Pheasant

will be of the highest quality. For example, each plate will be hand-decorated with a border of pure 24 karat gold, perfectly proportioned both to the size of the plate and to the scale of Basil Ede's art. And each plate will incorporate as many as sixteen separate ceramic colors. Only through such perfection of detail could the standards of Basil Ede and of Franklin Porcelain be satisfied.

Ede's very beautiful and marvelously accurate works of art—created especially for this issue and available only on these fine porcelain plates—make this a collection that will be enjoyed and prized by all who love the beauty of birds, of art, and of porcelain.

And, as the first works in porcelain by Europe's leading painter of birds, this is a collection clearly destined to have lasting importance.

THE LIMITS OF EDITION. The Game Birds of the World porcelain plate collection will be produced only once and in strictly limited edition. The plates will be crafted exclusively for individual subscribers. And the limit of one collection of Game Bird Plates per subscriber will be enforced without exception.

Thus, the total number of sets to be issued will be forever limited to the exact number of original subscriptions entered during a rather brief offering period, plus one set for Basil Ede and one for the archives of Franklin Porcelain.

Since the plates will not be sold separately and will not be made available for original sale through dealers, the original subscribers and the artist will be the only people in the entire world who can acquire this collection. In the future, any dealer who may wish to offer these plates to a client, or any collector who may wish to acquire these plates at that time, can only hope to obtain them from one of the original subscribers.

ADVANCE SUBSCRIPTION DEADLINE: NOVEMBER 30, 1978. The collection will be issued to subscribers at the convenient rate of one plate every other month. The original issue price of just $55 per plate will include specially written reference material and special display stands for all twelve plates in the collection. And a Certificate of Authenticity will accompany each collection.

To enter your subscription, mail the application at right by the advance subscription deadline of November 30, 1978. A final announcement will be made in January, and the subscription rolls will then be closed forever.

There is no need to send any payment now. But the Advance Subscription Application must be postmarked by November 30th to be accepted.

STEPPARENTS ARE PEOPLE, TOO

The Cinderella stepmother syndrome persists, but there are ways to get rid of it.

Photos by Walt Disney Productions

More stepparents are like Cinderella's stepmother than like TV's Florence Henderson.

By Suzy Kalter

Remember Dick, Jane and Spot? Well, things have changed for them. Mom and Dad were divorced some years ago and Dick, Jane and Spot went to live with their mother. Now they only see Dad every other weekend, at Christmas, Easter and for two weeks during the summer.

Then Mom remarried a few years ago, and Dad moved in with Sue and her two little girls from a previous marriage.

Dick, Jane and Spot have now acquired two sets of parents and two different places to call home. And life just isn't as easy as it used to be.

In fact, life isn't as easy as it used to be for every American family touched by divorce, including this country's 25 million stepparents who are now bringing up, trying to survive with another's children or part-time parenting. Six million of those stepparents are instant parents. They have never had children of their own and have suddenly found themselves thrown into a parental role for which they are totally unprepared. Their resulting confusion: a little like Cinderella meets Willy Wonka.

Suzy Kalter is author of Instant Parent: A Guide for Stepparents, Part-Time Parents and Grandparents.

"Most stepparents, especially instant stepparents, don't start out wicked," explains Dr. Irene Goldenburg, head of children's psychiatric services at UCLA and an expert on steprelations. Somewhere, somehow, something goes wrong and turns the stepparents from anxious to please to just plain anxious to "wicked." Is the blissful relationship on Eight is Enough fictitious and unrealistic in a world of child support, alimony and custody fights?

"TV shows like The Brady Bunch and Eight is Enough do stepparents a terrible disservice," says Dr. Goldenburg. "They're all so sweet and good that no one knows how hard being a stepparent really is. When they get the real-life version, they become much more easily frustrated because their lives are nothing like what they saw on the tube."

The facts, according to Doctor Goldenburg, are simple and terrifying: more stepparents are like Cinderella's stepmom than like Florence Henderson, and more stepchildren cause uneasiness and unrest than laughs before the commercial break. But need it be that way?

Not according to famed anthropologist Margaret Mead, who has noted that the problem with divorce in this country and its difficulties for the family stems from the misguided theory that a child should only have two parents and that those two parents are solely responsible for the upbringing of their children. Mead feels that if child care were a group responsibility the center of the child's world would not be pulled apart.

Yet society is reluctant to accept more than one set of parents per child. Even the old-fashioned extended family, in which grandma, grandpa, aunts, uncles and cousins figured into the equation of upbringing, has diminished in strength and popularity. People have been moving away from their central families since World War II and taking responsibility for their children with them to suburbs and new towns across the country, reachable only by long-distance phone calls or costly plane tickets.

When a divorce ensues, not only is there no immediate family to help out with child-raising, but there is no tradition of extraparental care. And when the family is recombined, through the remarriage of its previous partners, there is not acceptance of the new members of the family — the stepparents.

If stepparents had a real place in the family, there would be much less of a problem, family therapists agree, and the old ideas would slip into disuse. Dr. Lucille Duberman, a New Jersey psychologist, bears out this opinion in her study of 88 reconstituted families who showed much greater acceptance and happier relationships for stepparents in custodial situations.

It follows that stepparents who feel like they belong are happy and less inclined toward the frustrations that can label one as "wicked." When the natural parent is dead, or disappears, and the stepparent actually becomes a replacement parent, the family has an even greater chance for success, suggests Duberman's study. But when there are two mothers and two fathers, especially in the same city, and the stepparents have no place to belong and no duties to perform, the situation is less than harmonious.

If the four parents could all consider themselves a team of coparents and would work together to produce a happy well-adjusted child as a group effort, the stepfamily would work as an old-fashioned extended family, say many family therapists. Coparenting has often been successful among divorced couples who share custody of their children and arrange for separate-but-equal child-raising duties. This system gives fathers more than a bill-paying role in their children's lives and gives some relief to Mom who will find that being the single head of a household is a difficult enough task.

But can coparenting work among four adults? "There's no reason why it can't," says Dr. Paul Fox, a Beverly Hills psychiatrist and family therapist who believes that the ex-spouses can point the way to the failures of steprelations in the combined family. When the custodial parent, who is usually the mother, gives permission — through words or actions — for the children to accept the stepparent into the family, the children are more likely to share their lives with an additional parent. This is particularly important in the case of the noncustodial stepmother. The natural mother needs to have her children form some kind of bond with her new spouse, but she may have entirely different feelings about the same children having a meaningful relationship with their stepmother, a woman she probably considers a rival and maybe a threat to her happiness. And therein lies the biggest problem for stephood.

Stepfathers usually become custodial, so they immediately take a place in their new families and create a role for themselves. But stepmothers are part-time parents, only to be dealt with on alternate weekends or on rare occasions and are easily shunted off beyond the perimeters of the family circle. It's easy for the children to ignore or insult a stepmother and almost as easy for a stepmother to turn resentful or bitter.

If all members of the new family stood back and took a look at their situation before becoming helplessly involved in rivalry, stepparents just might have a better chance to adjust to family life in a new type of family, and old stereotypes could be discarded.

—The natural parents need to accept the fact that the stepparents must have some role in their stepchildren's lives.

—The stepparents must realize that they can never replace a natural parent, even in cases of death or abandonment.

—Each member of the family should realize that the non-custodial stepmother is the most vulnerable.

—The ex-spouses must be certain they have no unfinished business that will carry over into their new relationship with each other.

—The four adults should keep open the lines of communication. Messages should not be sent through children. Information can't be withheld when pertinent.

—The four new family members should realize that this is a difficult situation for which there are few traditions. It will take time, understanding and a lot of hard work. It won't be like it is on TV. But they may still find a happy ending. FW

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

Quips & Quotes

WHILE THE IRON IS HOT

When ironing, what did women do
Till TV came along?
The housewife merely thought her thoughts
And felt her arm grow strong.

But now soap operas are on,
And games for winning money,
And as she irons she sighs at sad
And smiles and laughs at funny.

The shirts and sheets are not so smooth,
The chance to scorch is scary,
But with her eyes upon the screen
The ironing's secondary.

Incredible "Crash-Loss" Breakthrough Reported in Leading American Magazines Works So Fast You Can Actually Measure the Difference In Your Waistline In Just 24 to 48 Hours!

Yes, LOSE up to 6 POUNDS the first 48 HOURS — LOSE up to 12 POUNDS the first 7 days — LOSE up to 4, 5, even 7 POUNDS MORE the next 7 days — and continue to burn away as much as 7 to 9 pounds more fat every 2 weeks thereafter, (if you still need it) . . . until you've finally lost 50 — 70 — 100 pounds OR MORE . . . without fasting, without constant willpower, without constant pangs of hunger or a single moment of body-racking exercise!

Recommended by the U.S. Government's very own doctors to members of Congress who want to lose weight fast . . . Hailed as the weight-loss "breakthrough of the century" by leading medical journals . . . here at last is the most effective NO-DRUG program for FAST — INSTANT — PERMANENT LIFETIME WEIGHT-LOSS ever made available to the public without a prescription!

WORKS SO FAST THE FIRST WEEK ALONE YOU LOSE AS MUCH AS 1½ TO 2 POUNDS OF BOTH FLUID AND FAT EVERY 24 HOURS!

Direct from the pages of medical journals and leading American magazines come reports of an incredible "fat burning" breakthrough by medical researchers at one of Boston's foremost medical schools! Reports of a new "crash-loss" program (featuring a remarkable natural substance) that safely yet surely steps up FAT-BURNING METABOLISM . . . forces your system to ATTACK bulging pockets of fat . . . and starts to shrink and burn that fat in just a matter of hours!

Yes, from one of New England's leading medical centers comes the new SUPER FAT-BURNER way to turn up your "inner furnace" . . . unlock those clinging pockets of fat . . . break them down SO FAST . . . you burn off excess bulge at the unbelievable rate of up to 6 POUNDS of both fluid and fat GONE the very first weekend alone!

Think of it! You actually burn away more fat each 24 hours than if you ran 12 to 14 miles a day! Lose more inches each week than if you did 300 sit-ups each morning and 300 push-ups each night! Actually LOSE as much as A FULL SIZE THE FIRST 7 DAYS . . . and from 3 to 5 inches off your waistline the very first month!

That's right! Weight-loss results and inches-off wonders that absolutely stagger the imagination. Just look:

U.S. ARMY OFFICERS LOSE WEIGHT 3 TIMES FASTER THAN EVER BEFORE!

Case History #1: When medical researchers in Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Los Angeles first tested this new hi-amino concept on a scientific weight-loss program . . . they reported astonishing results of as much as 12 POUNDS LOST IN JUST THE FIRST 7 DAYS! — 16 to 18 pounds gone by the end of week number two — and most mind-boggling of all — U.S. Army Officers actually losing weight 3 times faster than ever before! As much as 50 POUNDS GONE, like that!

WAISTLINES SHRINK UP TO 3 INCHES IN 7 DAYS — A FULL 5 INCHES SMALLER IN A SINGLE MONTH!

Case History #2: When first rumors of this medical breakthrough leaked out to professional actors, actresses and celebrities . . . they immediately rushed to the offices of America's leading weight-loss specialists to get their hands on this "magic compound"; and no wonder! Because the first week alone they carved away as much as 2 pounds a day . . . 13 pounds a week . . . were forced to take in their belts 3 notches smaller in just 10 days!

DOCTORS REPORT: AVERAGE LOSS — 57 POUNDS!

Case History #3: But most significant of all . . . when universities, hospitals and medical schools, (such as New York's Leading Medical School and Cleveland's largest hospital) tested this newly discovered "crash-loss" program on patients who all their lives had been hopelessly overweight . . . they reported astonishing losses of as much as 2 pounds a day at the start . . . 20 to 30 pounds a month . . . as much as 70 pounds lost over a single summer season! — by simply stepping up their fat-burning metabolism and burning, melting, oxidizing 50, 70, 100 pounds of hard-set fat . . . FASTER, SURER than they had ever dreamed possible!

WORKS LIKE "POWDERED HEAT" — MAKES YOUR INNER FURNACE BREAK DOWN BODY FAT!

What is this wondrous new development that helps safely stimulate fat-burning metabolism and shrink your body's fat cells the moment it starts working in your system? It is a totally new concept in the war against fat. An ANTI-FAT WEAPON unlike anything you've ever seen, or tried in your life. A FAT-BURNING aid that helps you convert body fat to body fuel AUTOMATICALLY . . . and EVAPORATE excess pounds and inches starting the very first day!

Think of it! A medically proven formula that is such an effective reducing aid . . . that when combined with the food you eat on this "crash-loss" program . . . burns off as much fat each 24 hours as if you jogged up to 14 miles a day . . . or played 3 hours of tennis in the most brutal heat!

The name of this wondrous amino formula is "THERA-SLIM-100" and here is precisely how you use it to win the body and figure of your dreams as you:

LOSE UP TO 4 TO 6 INCHES OFF YOUR WAISTLINE

LOSE UP TO 2 TO 5 INCHES OFF YOUR HIPS

LOSE UP TO 3 INCHES OFF YOUR THIGHS

LOSE UP TO 4 INCHES OFF YOUR BUTTOCKS

LOSE UP TO 4 INCHES OFF YOUR STOMACH

and as we've said before, starting not in weeks, but in mere days.

HELPS YOUR BODY CONVERT STORED UP FAT TO BURNED UP ENERGY! At this very moment — having read this far — you are but one short step away from LIFETIME IMMUNITY TO FAT! Now comes your FINAL GIANT STEP into a whole new world of LIFETIME SLIMNESS.

Of course, there is one thing you must keep in mind. With the "THERA-SLIM-100" way to LIFETIME SLIMNESS you cannot gorge yourself on all sorts of fattening foods, candies and desserts. Not that you'd ever want to, because with "THERA-SLIM-100" — due to your new, stepped up metabolism — besides enormous weight-loss you also experience a loss of hunger. Which makes it one of the easiest ways to lose weight fast. Now here's how simple it is:

STEP #1 — YOU EAT

In addition to the wide and tasty selection of food you enjoy morning and night, (all scientifically programmed to help maintain a high-level of FAT BURN-OFF) . . .

STEP #2 — YOU TAKE "THERA-SLIM-100" hi amino compound.

Once a day you take "THERA-SLIM-100" in a glass of water (just like refreshing fruit juice). This hi-amino intake helps keep the fat-burning chain-reaction going ALL 24 HOURS OF THE DAY — NON STOP!

STEP #3 — YOU HAVE AUTOMATICALLY STEPPED UP YOUR FAT-BURNING METABOLISM — SO YOU AUTOMATICALLY BURN OFF EXCESS WEIGHT!

In virtually no time at all, you make your inner furnace accelerate fat burn-off. Safely, gently, yet surely you cause a gradual change in your fat-burning metabolism as you "rev-up" that inner furnace.

The result: Your body begins to eliminate stored-up fat and fluid at a rate so incredibly fast, the very first weekend alone YOU DRAIN AWAY AS MUCH AS 5 OR 6 POUNDS!

In short, with the "THERA-SLIM-100" weight-loss program, you force your body to automatically convert body fat to body fuel . . . automatically shrink fatty cells . . . drain off excess flab . . . flush it right out of your system ONCE AND FOR ALL!

Never before has medical science offered you a surer, faster, more effective weight-loss method, (short of total fasting) than this super fat-burning breakthrough developed at one of Boston's Leading Medical Schools.

THE FACTS ARE IN! THE RESEARCH IS DONE! THE INCREDIBLE WEIGHT-SLASHING RESULTS HAVE BEEN PROVEN BEYOND A SHADOW OF A DOUBT BY MEDICAL SCHOOLS — HOSPITALS — DOCTORS — AND SCORES AND SCORES OF OVERWEIGHT PATIENTS! NOW THE FINAL STEP IS UP TO YOU!

REMEMBER: You must see dramatic results in just 24 hours — results you can measure with both your scale and your tape measure . . . you must lose:

up to 6 lbs. the first 48 hours up to 12 lbs. the first 7 days up to 7 lbs. more the next 7 days or it costs you nothing! Simply return within 10 days for full refund (except postage and handling, of course). Act now!

WHAT IN THE WORLD

Talking Turkey

Professor E.G. Buss works with a lot of turkeys. Before any of his colleagues at Penn State get their feathers rumpled, we should explain. As a professor of poultry science, Buss sometimes has as many as 1,000 of the birds under his care.

It was chance rather than choice that led Buss down the path to the hen house. If it hadn't been for a poultry judging competition he won back in his home state of Kansas, Buss says he "would have gone into plants."

Although Buss' own work is concerned with the study of gene action, he has a more than passing acquaintance with the species. Buss refuses even to comment on the popular concept that turkeys are "dumb." But he volunteers that they are sociable animals, and over the years he's even met a few turkeys whose qualities stand out in his mind.

Surely Buss doesn't eat his feathered friends' relatives for Thanksgiving dinner — or does he? "My cliche answer is that I eat them by way of getting revenge, so I enjoy them," he says. "But seriously," he continues, "I've always enjoyed the taste of turkey and my work has never had a thing to do with my appetite."

After-Hours Patients

Patients who call their doctors after hours do have something on their mind — their problems are more likely to be emotional than physical says a new survey reported in Medical World News. After studying thousands of after hours calls made to the University of North Carolina's Family Practice Center, Dr. Peter Curtis says that many concern emotional disorders or arguments.

To help physicans handle these sorts of problems the university has begun a training program. "Doctors must learn to pick up clues," Dr. Curtis says. "If a doctor deals only with the complaint and not with what's underneath, he'll end up with a dissatisfied patient."

Weather as Weapon

There's a potential weapon that packs more power than an arsenal of nuclear explosives. And it's available to any country on earth. It's the weather. If you're tempted to dismiss this as simply sci-fi stuff don't — it may already have happened says Francis K. Davis, the meteorologist who is Dean of Drexel Univ.'s College of Science.

Davis, whose analysis of meteorological conditions in the English Channel led to the choice of dates for the invasion of Europe during World War II, hastens to point out that weather can be manipulated for beneficial purposes such as preventing crop damage from hail. But the same silver iodide that can give desperately needed rain to a drought-stricken area can also be used to unleash killer floods. And Davis says there is some evidence that hurricane paths can be shifted slightly.

Has weather already been used as a weapon? Davis points to a 1974 Department of Defense report acknowledging that $21.6 million was spent from 1967-72 in a program to produce rain over trails and transportation lines in Laos, North Vietnam, South Vietnam and Cambodia.

Failing Marriages

Domestic conflict can eventually spell "F" for married students. Many of the students' academic problems can be traced to tensions at home observes Dr. Carol K. Flesher, a Univ. of Florida counseling psychologist.

Free time provokes many of the conflicts, says Flesher, because frequently one partner (usually the wife) is working to help put the spouse through school. "Often the wife may be involved in a low-paying clerical job and perceives her husband as being involved in a stimulating, challenging field of study," she says. "Since her schedule is quite rigid, her only opportunity for socializing is after work and weekends — usually just at the time when her student-husband is settling down to study."

Once there's trouble at home it's likely to spread to the classroom. "If there is a lot of tension and stress in the marriage it places an added burden on the student in addition to the academic pressures he faces," Dr. Flesher explains. "And the student can't affort to slack off in the classroom to resolve his marital problems so the trouble gets worse."

Winter Jogging Tips

Neither rain nor sleet nor snow should prevent the dedicated jogger from making his or her appointed rounds during the winter months ahead says Dr. Charles Gudas, Director of the Orthopedic Foot Clinic at the Univ. of Chicago Medical Center. Here are a few of Dr. Gudas' winter jogging tips:

Stay warm but don't restrict circulation by wearing too many bulky clothes. Dr. Gudas recommends a thin layer of absorbent clothing next to the skin, then a sweat suit and, finally, an outer jacket to break the wind. Be sure to wear a hat.

Check the tip of your nose periodically for numbness (the first sign of frostbite). Wear light-weight gloves or mittens to prevent perspiration from evaporating and chilling the fingers and wool socks to keep feet warm even if wet.

Change footwear to prevent falls. Switch to a specially built running shoe with rubber cleats or a waffle-type sole for increased traction over snow and slush.

Avoid colds by not lingering outside after running and changing clothes immediately once inside.

Quick Takes

Love of the Lord and love of a good romance are tops in the eyes of American bookworms says a new study by the American Library Association (ALA). Religious books and romantic fiction tied for the number one spot in the ALA's survey of reader preferences. No matter what their taste, the ALA says that about one of every three Americans read at least a book a month.

What you don't know won't hurt you appears to be the conclusion of a recent study reported in the New England Journal of Medicine. Canadian researchers discovered an 80% increase in absenteeism from work in patients told they had hypertension. But absenteeism didn't increase if the patients complied with a treatment program. The researchers' conclusions? Eliminate shopping-mall-type mass screenings and alert patients to their condition only in settings where adequate therapy can be assured.

If Smokey the Bear wasn't enough, the Federal government has a new animal ally in its war against forest fires — goats. The goats were used in a two-year experiment to keep wildland firebreaks east of San Diego clear by chewing up brush, and the Forest Service says the program was such a crunching success that it's tripling the size of the herd.

'Greatest Heroes Of The Bible' To Air

FAVORITE BIBLE STORIES — NBC-TV becomes the first network to officially recognize National Bible Week (Nov. 19-25) when it presents its epic, four-part miniseries "Greatest Heroes of the Bible," Sunday-Wednesday, Nov. 19-22. Some of the greatest stories ever told include (clockwise from upper left): "Noah and the Ark," "David and Goliath," "Samson and Delilah," "Daniel in the Lions' Den," and "Joshua and the Battle of Jericho."

In some of the greatest stories ever told, Lew Ayres, Robert Culp, John Carradine and John Marley headline a large and distinguished cast for NBC-TV's four-part mini-series, "Greatest Heroes of the Bible," to be presented during National Bible Week on consecutive nights, Nov. 19 through Nov. 22; Sunday (8:30-11 p.m.), Monday (9-11 p.m.), Tuesday and Wednesday (8-10 p.m. both nights).

NBC's adaptation of these stories marks the first time a network has recognized National Bible Week (Nov 20-26).

The fist presentation Sunday "David and Goliath," starring Roger Kerns as David, the young shepherd boy who startled his Isrealite brothers and King Saul (Jeff Corey) when he volunteers to confront the dreaded warrior-giant, Goliath (Ted Cassidy), the champion of the opposing Philistine Army.

"Samson and Delilah" is the second presentation Sunday, and John Beck stars as the storied Hebrew strongman Samson, endowed by God with fearsome strength to protect his people from their Philistine overlords.

Beginning Sunday and concluding Monday is "Noah and the Deluge."

Robert Culp stars in the title role of Monday's "Joshua and the Battle of Jericho" as God's chosen leader of the Isrealites in their new and dangerous Promised Land.

"Moses," starring John Marley as the revered Hebrew lawgiver, begins Monday and concludes Tuesday.

Tom Hallick stars as Solomon, the handsome, intelligent son of King David (John Carradine) and Bathsheba (Carol Lawrence), in "The Judgement of Solomon," airing Tuesday.

Wednesday's presentations are "Daniel and the Lions' Den" with David Birney starring as the Hebrew Daniel, and "Joseph and His Brothers."

Mickey Celebrates 50th

On Nov. 18, 1928, at New York's Colony Theatre, Mickey Mouse sprang to life and soon became perhaps the world's best-known personality.

Fifty years later, the mouse that roared will celebrate his golden anniversary with an extravaganza, "Mickey's 50," airing Nov. 19 (7 to 8:30 p.m.), on NBC-TV's "Wonderful World of Color."

In keeping with this exciting milestone, Mickey Mouse granted this writer an interview:

Q: Tell me, Mickey, how did you first get involved in the movies?

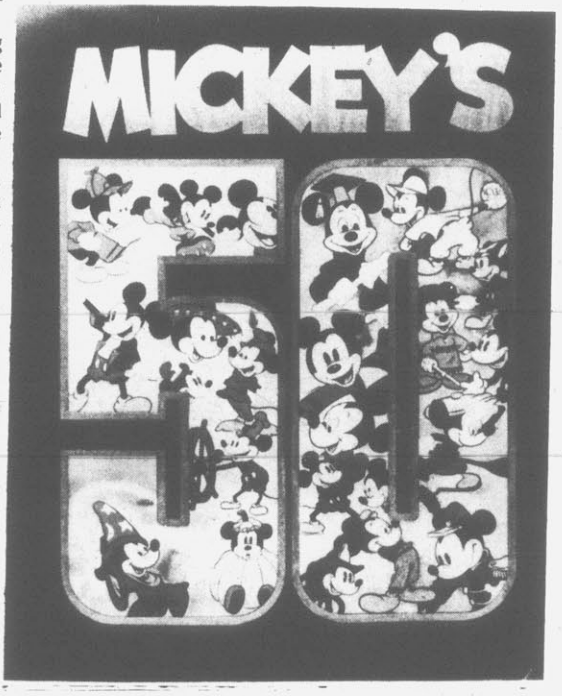

Mickey: It all started back in 1928 in a railroad coach. Walt Disney was returning to Hollywood from New York, where his first cartoon character . . . some rabbit . . . had been taken away from him by his financial backers. We shared the same seat on the train. Having heard that Mr. Disney was good to his pet mice as a boy, I volunteered my services as a cartoon character. After we got to Hollywood, Mr. Disney made a few sketches of me and gave me a screen test. I guest he liked what he saw, and my career was launched!

Q: What was your first movie?

Mickey: My professional debut came in "Steamboat Willie," the first talkie cartoon.

Q: Is it true that you have starred in more than 100 cartoon shorts?

Mickey: It was 118 cartoon shorts altogether, and I enjoyed everyone of them. Being a mouse, I could have been typecast into some pretty cheesy parts. But Walt gave me a variety of roles. I guess the only part I haven't played is a mouse!

On Nov. 18, 1928, Mickey Mouse sprang to life and became the world's best-known personality. The mouse that roared will celebrate his golden anniversary with a 90-minute NBC-TV extravaganza, "Mickey's 50," airing Sunday, Nov. 19 on "The Wonderful World of Disney."

A 'Pearl' Of A Role

Few television stars are getting a more varied selection of roles these days than Dennis Weaver. In the past year, Weaver has played an anthropologist, a lawyer, a detective and a U.S. Army colonel.

The most complex of these roles, he says, is that of Col. Jason Forrest, which he plays in "Pearl," the motion picture concluding Sunday, Nov. 19 (9 to 11 p.m.), on ABC-TV.

Weaver said, "I'm playing a small man who is always No. 6 when he wanted to be No. 5, and it gnaws at him. It is a different kind of role and a real departure for me. That's why I wanted to do it."

The film is set during the Dec. 7, 1941, bombing of Pearl Harbor and the days immediately preceding and following the Japanese attack on the American naval base, but Weaver underscored the theme of the motion picture, saying "It is not a story of army or navy strategy. It is not a story of military life. Rather, it is a story about people and how they react to the events that happen to them and the circumstances in which they find themselves."

Stirling Silliphant, writer and co-executive producer of "Pearl," described what happens to Weaver's character. "The sudden, devastating attack brings to a climax the long-smouldering resentments that have turned his marriage (his wife is played by Angie Dickinson) into a battleground as lethal as the bombs falling aroung them."

Weaver said. "The colonel's relationship with his wife is totally different from the way he is in his office. He loves her but does not understand her. He is jealous of his aide, played by Robert Wagner, a captain and a wealthy southern lawyer in civilian life.

Mandrell Is Impressed

Country singer Barbara Mandrell is a seasoned professional who regularly sells out arenas that seat 5,000 or so people. She's not even 30 years old yet; she played her first professional engagement when she was 11, in Las Vegas, and when she was 13, she toured with Johnny Cash. Because she started out in show business at such an early age, there isn't too much that awes her. No one impresses her to the point where she's distracted from her work.

That was true until she taped "Lucy Comes to Nashville," a program featuring comedy as well as some of the best musicians Nashville has to offer. Lucille Ball stars in the special, airing Sunday, Nov. 19 (9 to 10 p.m.), on CBS-TV, and Barbara Mandrell is one of the guest stars.

And then Barbara had a somewhat curious analogy to make: "The only other person I can think of who had that type of effect on me is (astronaut) Eugene Cernan. Here was a man who could walk on the moon; anyone can sing. I have sort of the same kind of feeling for Lucy."

While Barbara may be famous for her singing (Lucy describes her on the show as "one of the great belters in the business"), she plays a number of musical instruments as well. That talent came in handy as Barbara and Lucy teamed up for a highly unusual saxophone duet.

"I've seen her play the saxophone on the old Lucy show," Barbara said. "She's hysterical." Barbara's only worry was that she would break up in laughter during the routine and ruin it. But she doesn't. She manages to hold her own and show the correct degree of contempt for Lucy's dreadful musicianship.

That expression of contempt must have been particularly difficult for Barbara, who says her feelings for Lucy go "beyond respect. I find myself preoccupied with watching her when I'm supposed to be working."

Anthony Quinn on 'America Alive!'

Academy Award-winning actor Anthony Quinn will co-star with Jack Linkletter on NBC-TV's "America Alive!" Monday and Tuesday, Nov. 20 and 21 (12-noon to 1 p.m.).

Pressure Is On Norm

New Chicago Bulls coach Larry Costello is putting pressure on Norm Van Lier to run the offense. "No way he won't fit into my kind of offense," says Costello. "Running is his game, but we need him to shoot and score. If he doesn't, we'll get somebody else to do it." Norm was Chicago's seventh-leading scorer last season, averaging 7.3 ppg.

A two-part segment of "The Amazing Spider Man" is being filmed entirely in Hong Kong.

Bobby Vinton's Sound

Talk about pop music in the '60s and many fans will recall the decade, especially the latter half, as a "Big Band" era of sorts — The Beatles, The Rolling Stones, The Jefferson Airplane and others. They were not big in the number of instruments, necessarily, but big, thanks to electronic amplification, in sound.

As a solo artist, Bobby Vinton sold 30 million records in the years 1962 to 1973. According to Billboard, he had more No. 1 singles in that decade than any other male singer.

The twist is that Vinton began his professional career as the leader of a big band — that is, a traditional "big band" — at the age of 15.

Vinton headlines his first network music-variety special, "Boby Vinton's Rock 'n Rollers," with guest stars Penny Marshall, Erik Estrada, Stockard Channing, Fabian, Eve Arden and Gale Gordon, on Monday, Nov. 20 (8 to 9 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

Vinton grew up in Canonsburg, Pa., near Pittsburgh. His father, Stan, was a prominent bandleader in the Pennsylvania-Ohio area.

'Backstairs' Expanded

The NBC mini-series, "Backstairs at the White House," has been expanded and will be telecast over four consecutive nights in Jan.

Erik Estrada (left), of "CHiPs," Bobby Vinton (center), and singer Fabian pay tribute to the '50s, on "Bobby Vinton's Rock 'n Rollers," Monday, Nov. 20 (8-9 p.m.) on CBS-TV. Other guests include Penny Marshall and Stockard Channing.

Jackson's Ringing Speech

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, noted black leader, appears as himself on "Lou Grant," Monday, Nov. 20 (10 to 11 p.m.) on CBS-TV. He speaks at a high school honors ceremony that figures in the story of a troubled ghetto school. Unusual for a television dramatic show, the producers asked Mr. Jackson to speak extemporaneously instead of from lines in a script. Mr. Jackson is head of People United to Save Humanity (PUSH), an effort to improve the achievement level of minority students in various communities across the land. His remarks follow:

"Today, we have the distinct privilege to share with you in this honors ceremony, and there are some basic principles that we need to establish very early. One of them is that learning is a personal thing. You really must want to learn.

"You must say to yourself, as a student, 'I can learn, it is possible. I ought to learn, it is the moral thing to do. It is possible, it is imperative that I learn.' A teacher ought to say 'I can teach, I ought to teach, I must teach.'

"And thus we start with a very attitudinal premise, and we often say that it is not your aptitude but your attitude that determines your altitude, with a little intestional fortitude.

"We must live with the consequences of our decisions. If we spend three hours a night in front of a TV being entertained rather than three hours a night trying to learn how to read, write and think, we will live with the consequences of that decision.

"If we become weak and superficial — and use pill power and cop out rather than will power and cope with it — we will live with the consequences of that decision. If we become isolated from the real world rather than insulated from it because we are tough on the inside, it's nothing but a choice.

"So repeat this after me: '"If my mind can conceive it, If my heart can believe it, I know I can achieve it! Because I am somebody! I am Somebody! Respect me! Protect Me! Never neglect me! I am Somebody! Down with dope! Up with hope! My mind is a pearl! I can learn anything in the world! Nobody will save us, from us, for us, but us! I CAN learn . . . It is possible. I OUGHT to learn . . . It is moral. I MUST learns It is imperative. Right on!'"

Gorshin Is Back

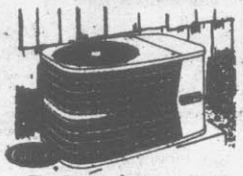

Frank Gorshin, master impersonator of Burt Lancaster, Kirk Douglas and others, has a tough enough time reminding the public that he can also sing and act without fretting over always being cast as the heavy in the black hat.

'Bartered Bride' Airs

The Metropolitan Opera's new, all-English production of Bedrich Smetana's comic masterpiece, "The Bartered Bride" will be televised on "Live From The Met" Tuesday, Nov. 21 (8 p.m.), on PBS.

Singing principal roles in the telecast will be the soprano Teresa Stratas as Marenka, the tenor Nicolai Gedda as Jenik, the tenor Jon Vickers as Vasek and the bass Martti Talvela as Kecal. James Levine, Music Director of the Metropolitan Opera, will conduct.

Smetana's "The Bartered Bride" returns to the Metropolitan Opera's repertoire after more than 35 years, a span of time hardly commensurate with the continued popularity of the Czech comic opera. For the occasion, the Metropolitan commissioned Tony Harrison, the distinguished British poet and translator, to provide a new English text of the opera.

"The Bartered Bride," which takes place during a spring festival of drinking and dancing in a small village in Bohemia in the middle of the last century, is a comic tale of faithful love overcoming all obstacles. Marenka, the lovely daughter of the farmer Krusina and his wife Ludmila, is in love with the stalwart young Jenik, a stranger of shadowry background. But Marenka's father is in debt, and to satisfy his obligation he has contracted to marry off his daughter to Vasek, the bumbling, stammering son of the wealthy landowner Tobias Micha. Kecal, the jabbering braggart of a village marriage broker, presses the marriage between Marenka and the tongue-tied Vasek so he can earn his sizable commission. He seemingly buys off the good-natured Jenik, who agrees to "barter" Marenka for 300 crowns. But Jenik sets one condition, and in so doing cleverly outwits the pompous Kecal, wins Marenka and successfully reasserts his rightful claim to a farm, land and money.

Despite the lightness and good humor of the plot, "The Bartered Bride" is not a naive folk operetta full of "patter songs" and "merry peasantry." Rather, it portrays a slice of real village life and is "a drama full of truthful observations" or rural society.

Deaconate Program Examined

John Fairfax is a 57-year-old black cabdriver in Washington, D.C. He is also a Deacon in the Catholic Church, chosen because "he is the kind of man you can depend on." The story of Deacon Fairfax and the permanent Deaconate program will be examined on a rebroadcast of "Reflective Men of Christian Service," on "Look Up and Live," Sunday, Nov. 19 (10:30 to 11 a.m.), on CBS-TV.

The Deaconate program was one of many innovations instituted under Vatican II in an attempt to find new styles of leadership, with an emphasis on men who have "displayed solidarity with the people," in the words of the Rev. Robert M. Kearns, SSJ, Director of Training for the Josephite Pastoral Center in Washington.

'Immigrants'

"The Immigrants," based on the best-selling novel by Howard Fast, will be presented as a four-hour television movie this week.

Starring as Dan Lavetta, the young fisherman who becomes a shipping magnate, is Stephen Macht, and Sharon Gless plays the part of Dan's wife, the aristocratic Jean Seldon Lavetta, who changes from a eager and loving young bride to a calculating and shrewd manipulator of a business empire.

Playing Dan's wise and faithful mistress, May Ling, will be Aimee Eccles, and guest stars include Richard Anderson, Ina Belin, Kevin Dobson, Rody McDowall, Pernell Roberts, John Saxon, Susan Strasberg and Barry Sullivan.

The drama is the story of Joseph and Anna Lavetta, Italian immigrants who brave a voyage across the Atlantic to seek a better life in a new world — America. They cross the country in a crude boxcar where Anna gives birth to their son, Dan.

The family settles in San Francisco where Anna and Joseph are killed in the catastrophic earthquake. Dan, a fisherman following in his father's footsteps, acquires one boat after another and eventually becomes a shipping magnate. He marries the patrician Jean Seldon but as their love grows cold, he is drawn to May Ling, the daughter of his bookkeeper, Feng Wo.

Chained to the work ethic, Dan loses May Ling who wants a father for their illegitimate child after almost fourteen years of an illicit relationship. It is not until Dan loses his fortune and is humbled by breadlines and working as a fisherman again that he examines his values and realizes what is really important to him.

Macht, one of the hottest male leads in film and television, will soon be seen in Arthur Hiller's feature, "Nightwing." He also starred as Max Schmeling i the TV movie "Ring of Passion," an Israeli soldier in "Raid on Entebbe," and flyer Paul Mantz in "Amelia Earhart."

Sharon Gless has starred in three television series, "Switch," "Marcus Welby, M.D." and "Faraday and Son." She has also starred in several television movies, including "The Islander."

Miller To Pen Drama

Arthur Miller has been commissioned by ABC-TV to script "Playing for Time," planned as a two-hour drama.

The drama is about an all-women's group in an Auschwitz concentration camp in Nazi Germany during World War II.

Martin Gets Special

Steve Martin focuses his zany, satirical sense of humor on a couple of dozen subjects, from nude beaches to rodeos, in his first television special, "Steve Martin: A Wild and Crazy Guy" — featuring special appearances by Milton Berle, George Burns, Johnny Cash, Bob Hope and Strother Martin — Wednesday, Nov. 22 (10 to 11 p.m), on NBC-TV.

Berle, Burns, Cash and Hope are seen in brief segments, each trying to give Martin pointers on comedy, stage fright, and his first TV special.

Martin opens the show as a test pattern, settles into a state of frenzy and panic, does a concert bit, fantasizes about a beautiful blonde in the audience, and tries to get out of a paternity suit.

He next finds himself buying a car from a private party which creates some peculair problems. Then, assuming his French love god character, he pontificates about his subject of expertise, women.

Other highights include segments in which Martin seeks to prove, with mock-seriousness, that he is a comedian with a social conscience, and tackles such weighty issues as the environment (dumps), special interest groups (beaches), parenthood and roadside littering.

There are cameo bits with unlikely characters calling on well-known individuals, and some off-beat treatments of football, tennis skiing and camping.

Martin does a routine about restaurant parking lots and the kind of variety show he might have done, but didn't do. He recalls an old girlfriend, and his old ridin' and ropin' days on the rodeo circuit (joined by Strother Martin).

He concludes his special by taking viewers into his private life to answer the question people have been asking: "Are you really a wild and crazy guy?"

Martin, a 32-year-old bachelor Newsweek called "the hottest comedian in America," is also enjoying success in the recording field.

COMEDY CHARACTER — Steve Martin makes some unexpected house calls in a segment of his first television special, "Steve Martin: A Wild and Crazy Guy," to be presented on NBC-TV Wednesday, Nov. 22 (10 to 11 p.m.).

Scheme Disclosed

"All the arts are important to us," declared Lenin in 1918, "but the most important is the cinema." Little did Comrade Lenin know at the time that his new government was about to be "stung" by an enterprising Italian film agent with a most unusual scheme, "Thank You Comrades," a factual comedy-drama recounting an extraordinary event in the early days of the Soviet cinema, airs on "Great Performances," Wednesday, Nov. 22 (9 to 10 p.m.), on PBS.

In the desperate circumstances of 1918, with the Russian Revolution struggling against internal opposition and the threat of invasion, the Soviet leaders were anxious to build a new film industry from the wreckage of the old.

It's Thanksgiving Day . . . prison inmates prepare the stage, the warden gives his last minute approval and the largest concert ever given in a New York State penitentiary is recorded in "Sing Sing Thanksgiving" airing Thursday, Nov. 23 (9 p.m.), on PBS. The special features B.B. King, The Voices of East Harlem, Joan Baez and her sister, Mimi Farina, and comedian Jimmy Walker.

Song selections include "Run, Shaker Life" and "To Be Young, Gifted and Black" by the voices of East Harlem, "I Got Some Help I Don't Need" and "How Blue Can You Get" by B.B. King, and "George Jackson" and "I Shall Be Released" by Joan Baez.

"Sing Sing Thanksgiving" had its roots in the efforts of film makers David Hoffman and Henry Wiland to teach movie production to the inmates. It was a tough challenge but as Hoffman and Wiland put it, "Twelve inmates stuck with us through a difficult and occasionally dangerous year. We suggested a Thanksgiving Day Concert, organized and film by us and run from the inside by the inmates."

The Department of Corrections agreed to the concert which would create an event the prisoners badly needed. According to Hoffman things were far from copacetic. "We couldn't get the necessary equipment, there was administrative apprehension and inmate suspicion. Until two days before the concert we weren't sure if the warden would allow it, or the inmates would come."

But it all fell together and the special, taped in 1972, ultimately presents more than musical entertainment; it also offers a sensitive portrait of prison life revealed through interviews, poetry raps by inmates, and a Sing Sing drama troupe doing a highly charged, almost mimed version of justice as seen through the prisoners' eyes.

Pike's Peek

HOLLYWOOD — ROBIN WILLIAMS has said 'no' to every TV variety show and feature film offer thus far presented to his agent, but he's said 'yes' to working for five days at a San Francisco nightclub without a salary. It's Robin's way of saying thanks to the club's owner, DAVID ALLEN for pre-stardom work. Meanwhile, Robin and his wife of four months, dancer VALERIE BELARDI, are house-hunting now that "MORK & MINDY" has assured their future.

BERT REYNOLDS will be spending more and more time in his much-loved Florida during the coming years. Not only is he opening a dinner-theatre where he and girlfriend SALLY FIELD will perform together and he'll also direct some plays, Burt's planning on returning to Florida State University to gain the nine credits he needs for his Bachelor's Degree in Fine Arts.

It's understood that LIZA MINELLI and half-sister LORNA LUFT were more than a bit upset because they weren't invited to the premiere of the movie, "THE WIZ!"

Little-known fact about JACLYN SMITH and DENNIS COLE's wedding day. It just happens that it was also KATE JACKSON's birthday. That had nohing to do with Kate being on hand when the couple exchanged their I do's. She was there because she and Jackie are very close these days. As for CHERYL LADD, the reason she wasn't on hand is because she wasn't invited!

Speaking of CHERYL, though, she and her husband, DAVID LADD, are devoting a lot of their spare time on behalf of the Abused Children's Society. Cheryl is very verbal about her outrage with adults who abuse their offspring and she and David are making personal appearances. volunteering time, and monetarily subsidizing the Society.

JOSH LOGAN of daytime's "DAYS OF OUR LIVES" captured his share of headlines recently with his torrid romance with song-writer CAROL CONNERS. Carol wrote the score for "ROCKY" and was DAVID JANSSEN's favorite lady for a while. At any rate, Josh and Carol are no longer a twosome, but LINDA THOMPSON, the late ELVIS PRESLEY's long-time love, and Josh now are!

BRIANNE LEARY of "CHiPs" really got excited when the talent coordinator of a game show called and asked Brianne if she'd appear as a celebrity guest. No, it wasn't the game show circuit, it's because several years ago she was a contestant on "MATCH GAME" and won quite a few dollars.

Scuttlebutt has it that LYNDA CARTER plans to have a baby and put her career aside for awhile.

Jules Verne's Idea

According to many literary historians, Jules Verne gave birth to the science-fiction story in 1864.

An animated special. "Journey to the Center of the Earth," based on this groundbreaking novel about a wonderous adventure in an underground world, will be rebroadcast on "Famous Classic Tales, " Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 23 (12-noon to 1 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

Science fiction arose out of a tradition as old as literature itself — the wonder story. However, rather than resorting to pure fantasy, Jules Verne started a new genre by basing his imaginative tales on what were then plausible scientific theories.

One of Verne's chief aims was to impart scientific knowledge through the medium of a good adventure tale. a century ago, knowledge was far less widespread than it is today. Popular education was still in its infancy and readable scientific books and articles for the average layman practically were unknown.

At that time, a debate raged in academic circles over what the center of the earth was really like. Some held, as we now know, that the earth's core was an immensely hot region of molten rock. Others, however, believed that the earth was hollow.

Couple Turn To Crime

The hallowed American penchant for living beyond one's means and keeping up at least a surface impression of upward mobility — at any cost — comes in for an amiable ribbing in "Fun With Dick and Jane," a comedy drama airing as "The ABC Friday Night Movie," Nov. 24 (9 to 11 p.m), on ABC-TV.

George Segal and Jane Fonda star as Dick and Jane, a high-paid aerospace engineer and his lady-of leisure spouse, whose efforts to keep up with the Jonses are shattered by Segal's sudden, irreversable unemployment.

Reduced to stalking the unemployment lines — dressed in a designer suit — or suffering through a qualifying interview for the food stamp program — while sipping champagne and munching on prime ribs — Dick and Jane stumble onto an absurd but practical solution: they become hold-up people, setting the stage for some absurdly amusing complications.

A victim of post-space boom cutbacks, Dick has no sooner let Jane know about their plight than the legions of landscape artists, swimming pool builders and other status-makers to whom they've long been in debt begin repossessing their creature comforts. More upset at being embarrassed in front of the neighbors than by the prospect of poverty itself, they do make some feeble, legitimate attempts to stay on their feet.

Dick's pride is increasingly battered as he battles with the red tape of unemployment under the tutelage of a charming Chicano who teaches him how to chisel. Jane quickly secures a short-lived job as a model, only to destroy a society luncheon in slapstick fashion.

Then, as fate would have it, Jane is taken hostage in an abortive finance company hold-up and manages to cram a few thousand dollars into her purse in the ensuing melee.

Deciding that crime may be their best-paying prospect, the couple set out on a madcap series of holdups, initially unsuccessful, but eventually profitable enough to pay off their debts and consider starting their ritzy life anew.

Q: Plese give me some personal information on Jim Davis (Jock Ewing on "Dallas"). G. HILL, RICHMOND, VA.

A: The silver-haired actor, now in his 60s, may not have been much of a performer when young, but he has developed into one of Hollywood's best and busiest characters. To date, his credits include more than 150 motion pictures and over 300 TV shows. Crime Fighters

Known throughout the neighborhood by their nicknames — Batman and Robin — two young policemen find their wild exploits lead them into conflict with the criminal world and even with their own department, in "Super Cops," to be rebroadcast as "The CBS Late Movie" Friday, Nov. 24 (11:30 p.m.).

Ron Leibman and David Selby star as officers Greenberg and Hantz, respectively. Also starring in the film — which is based on a true story — is Dan Frazer.

Greenberg and Hantz start out normally on their own. In their off-duty hours, they occupy themselves by working against drug traffic as plainclothesmen. Encountering hatred among the criminal element, they also discover hostility for their outrageous methods in their own department.

The two men find themselves with a good lead on drug information. Alone — without the backing of their forces — the rookie cops try to take a dangerous syndicate.

Learned To Leave Series

Michael Learned will leave "The Waltons" several weeks before filming of the series final segment of the season.

The show's writers will ease her out of the script was a victim of tuberculosis.

O. Henry's Classic To Air-ABC

"The Ransom of Red Chief," O. Henry's classic story of a small boy who cheerfully proves to two inept kidnappers that crime doesn't pay but criminals do, will be rebroadcast on the "ABC Weekend Specials," Saturday, Nov. 25 (12-noon to 12:30 p.m.).

Strother Martin and Jack Elam are starred as a team of drifters who meet more than their match when they snatch an energetic boy and demand a ransom that will provide them a stake to get to California.

The kidnapping is simple enough, but their hard times turn harder still when the boy, showing absolutely no desire to be ransomed and eager to assume a new identity as a fearless Indian chief, proves to be just a little bit smarter and a whole lot toughter than his hapless captors. Billy and Sam (Martin and Elam) quickly learn what any boy's father could have told them: when it comes to defying covention and pursuing adventure, two grown men by no means equal one small boy.

Partick J. Peterson is also starred as the imiginative lad who sees himself as the conquering Red Chief. His father is played by William Mims.

Jack Elam (l) and Strother Martin (r) portray a couple of old cowboys determined to get their stake of kidnapping the son of a rich town official. However, they find themselves with their hands full with little "Red Chief" (Patrick J. Petersen, center), a hard-to-handle tyke nobody wants back in "The Ransom of Red Chief," an "ABC Weekend Specials" presentation, on Saturday, Nov. 25 (12-12:30 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Southern Cal Is Fired Up

One team began the season as defending national champions, while the other felt they had an excellent chance reaching the NCAA top this year. But the defending NCAA Kingpins, the Notre Dame Fighting Irish, have already lost two games and the challenger, Southern Cal, has been upset once.

But these two teams put their records aside whenever they clash, and this year's traditional battle shouldn't be an exception.

The Fighting Irish take on the Trojans of Southern Cal in the Los Angeles Stadium in the ABC-TV's "NCAA Football," Saturday, Nov. 25 (12:30 a.m.).

Notre Dame lost their first two games of the 1978 season, dropping both of them at home. In the 3-0 opening shocker against the Missouri Tigers, the quarterback situation was unclear, but senior Joe Montana returned as a starter in the Michigan game the following week.

Unfortunately, the Irish had problems containing Rick Leach and company, as Leach passed around and through the ND defenders to give his team a 28-14 victory over previously undefeated Navy, 27-7. In that contest, running back Jerome Heavens proved what a valuable asset he is to the club, rushing for over 200 yards and scoring twice.

On the other hand, Southern Cal took their first four games, including a huge victory over Alabama, who was ranked number one in the polls at the time. After knocking down powerful Michigan State the following Saturday, it was the Trojans who were entertaining thoughts of a natural crown.

But the bubble burst of Arizona State, where the ASU club knocked off the Trojans 20-7.

Southern Cal has also come back, and they still have an outside shot for national honors.

Last year in South Bend, the Irish crushed the Trojans on their way to the NCAA crown, and you can bet the Los Angeles school will be fired up for this big rematch.

The Teen Scene

JOHN TRAVOLTA finally made everybody understand why he's bought two airplanes this year when he received the news that he'd qualified for his private pilot's license. It came at a good time. Now he'll be able to fly himself between Hollywood and the 14-acre avocado ranch he just bought in Santa Barbara, Calif., a two-hour's drive by car. The ranch cost John a reported $1.5 million.

An added note on JOHN, he's not spending all his time playing the young millionaire. In preparation for his next movie, "AN AMERICAN GIGOLO," he's learning to speak Swedish and French, while at the same time completing three more segments of "Welcome Back, Kotter."

MARK HAMILL, meanwhile, is taking instruction in Kendo, Japanese martial arts with (wooden) swords, as he prepares for the start of filming "THE EMPIRE STRIKES BACK", or as it's better known, "STARS WARS II." The movie begins production in Norway next March.

DEBBY BOONE and daddy PAT are said to be in considerable conflict about Debby's new look. Debby's gone disco with frizzed hair, tight, pegged-leg jeans, boots, scarves and daring blouses, and the elder Boone isn't at all pleased. Debby insists it's the new her!

Still steady as they go, it seems is DIRK BENEDICT and MARIE OSMOND. Marie's now made a couple of trips to the "BATTLESTAR GALACTICA" set and the two munched together in Beverly Hills on one of Dirk's rare days off.

John 'Wild And Crazy' Riggins

John Riggins is one of the unique characters in the NFL, known for doing all sorts of crazy things just to get attention.

Several years ago, when the powerful running back was with the New York Jets, he decided to acquired an outlandish Mohawk haircut for no apparent reason. He showed up on national television with the cut, saying it made him feel "meaner."

Riggins and the rest of the Washington Redskins will have to get meaner if they expect to upend the resurgent St. Louis Cardinals Sunday, Nov. 19. The game will be televised by CBS (1 p.m.).

For sheer ability, few in the entire league can match Riggins' overall playing prowess. He is powerfully built at 6-2 and 230 lbs., and runs like a slim halfback. At the University of Kansas, he broke all of Gayle Sayers' records with 2,706 career yerds, including 1,131 as a senior.

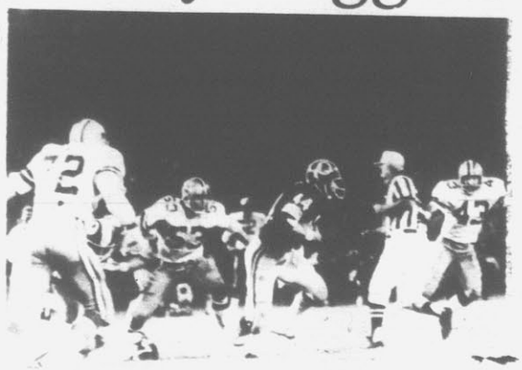

He was a three-time All-Big Eight selection and All-American as a senior. John never missed a game or a practice at the school, and showed why he is so dangerous in the open field by setting the state 100-yard dash mark in high school in Kansas with a 9-8.

But his "wild and crazy" reputation at New York got the talented runner in all kinds of unpleasant hear. After Joe Namath failed to come back to his former brilliance with the Jets, John decided to test his wares in the free agent market.

After the 1975 season, the Jets did not go after their prize runner with a checkbook, so George Allen, supplied with a generous allowance by the Redskins front office, bought Riggins at a high price.

And the 'Skins weren't disappointed. In his first year wearing a burgundy uniform, Riggins rambled for 572 yards and contributed even more effectively in the blocking category.

This season has been a banner one for the Kansas native.

Powerful John Riggins is a triple-threat for the Washington Redskins. He can run, catch passes and block with equal effectiveness. The Skins entertain the resurgent St. Louis Cardinals on CBS-TV, Sunday, Nov. 19 (1 p.m.).

'Shoot-Out'

Both teams started the season like gang busters, yet have cooled a bit since. But going into the Thanksgiving extravaganza, the Washington Redskins and Dallas Cowboys are ready to resume one of the most heated rivalries in all professional sports.

While you're munching on that last piece of turkey, you can also enjoy the Cowboy-Redskin clash by watching it on CBS-TV (3:30 p.m.). Earlier this season, the 'Skins captured a memorable 9-5 victory over the Cowboys, and the team is looking for sweet revenge in Texas Stadium.

One of those who will be after the 'Skins will be Cliff Harris, who was victimized by serveral Joe Theismann passes in the last encounter.

Harris is acclaimed by many experts as the top free safety in the NFL, not so much because he's an extremely aggressive football player — which he is — or because he's considered one of the game's smartest defensive backs — which he is. Rather, because of his year-in, year-out consistency.

For example, the three-time All Pro led the Cowboys in total tackles two years ago with 118 and was second on the team in interceptions with three. Last year he was second on the team in tackles with 117 and led the club in interceptions with five.

"He always makes as many tackles as any player on our team," says Tom Landry, the coach who understates Harris when he adds, "He's also a very aggressive player."

Leads By Example

The Miami Dolphins' leading tackler and pulverizer, linebacker Steve Towle, has All-Pro ambitions and, if he continues to play as he has so far this year, there is little doubt that he will find himself a memeber of this prestigious group. His quick explosiveness is apparent in goal-line short-yardage defenses, and he has an impressive number of tackles.

Towle expects to further enhance his chances of making the All- Pro lineup when the Dolpins play the Houston Oilers Nov. 20, on ABC's "Monday Night Football" (9 p.m.).

Towle set a mark of 164 tackles as a rookie and had a record 217 wallops in 1976 — 15.5 tackles per game. In the Dolphins' shut-out of the New York Jets that year, Towle jarred loose three fumbles and recovered another.

After collecting 138 tackles (75 initial hits) last season, he was slowed down by injuries — bruised ribs and a twisted right knee in the 10th game of the Dolphins' schedule — but he lined up for the AFC East showdown with Baltimore, only to suffer a right shoulder separation after an 18-yard fumble return.

DON'T RAKE LEAVES. SNAPPERIZE THEM.

Why waste time raking leaves when the Snapperizer can do the job faster, easier and better? The Snapperizer is an easy-to-install accessory that turns the Snapper V-Series mower into a leaf pulverizer and outdoor vacuum. The Snapperizer pulverizes leaves so that the grass catcher can hold twice as much. And when you've finished, you'll not only have a beautifully vacuumed lawn, you'll also have a fine mulch to use in your flower and shrubbery beds. Ask us for a free demonstration.

Those Good Ol' Days

Dick Clark salutes the biggest stars of the years 1955-65, toasts the city of Philadelphia — home of "America Bandstand" — and is roasted by his own guest stars, in "Dick Clark's Good Ol' Days Part II," airing Saturday, Nov. 25 (9 to 11 p.m.), on NBC-TV.

The special is a sequel to the highly popular "Dick Clark's Good Ol' Days: From Bobby Sox to Bikinis," telecast in Oct., 1977.

Frankie Avalon and Annette Funicello are co-hosts of the musical spectacular, which takes place on the beach at Malibu; at a fabulous Hollywood party; and on location at Pop Singer's drugstore in Philadelphia, hangout for many of the "American Bandstand" regulars during the formative years of rock and roll.

Noted psychologist and TV personality, Dr. Joyce Brothers, has an explanation that perhaps explains why people enjoy looking back at the 'good ole' days.'

"We look back at the good old days for the security we need in these tense times," she says. "It's like going over our baby pictures — to assure us we have roots and an identity."

TURN ON THE "PERSONALITY" — Dick Clark (left) and co-hosts Annette Funicello and Frankie Avalon include the 1959 song hit, "Personality," in a medley of hit songs from the years 1955-65 in one segment of "Dick Clark's Good Ol' Days — Part II," a special to be presented Saturday, Nov. 25 (9-11 p.m.).
