

Hundreds Of Sect Apparently Shared In Mass Poisoning

By MARTIN MERZER

Associated Press Writer
GEORGETOWN, Guyana (AP) — Between 300 and 400 bodies — men, women and children who reportedly lined up for doses of poison brewed in a tub — have been found at the jungle camp of a California sect whose members ambushed and killed five Americans, including California Congressman Leo J. Ryan, Guyana's information minister said today.

Shirley Field-Ridley said the whereabouts of the remaining 500 to 700 Americans at the camp was not known, but they apparently fled into the surrounding jungle, in the northwest corner of this South American nation.

Well-known American lawyer Mark Lane, who was at the People's Temple camp just before the mass deaths occurred, told The Associated Press here today that suicide was discussed at a community meeting and he was later informed by two sect members, "We are all going to die now."

"They were smiling...they looked genuinely happy," Lane said.

It was not clear whether the mass deaths occurred at about the same time or some time after the Saturday ambush of Ryan and his group, which had gone to the camp to investigate reports of alleged large-scale abuse of sect members.

Ryan's party was trying to escort some disenchanted members from the camp when it was attacked at a nearby airstrip.

Adherents of the People's Temple, whose founder, the Rev. Jim Jones, established the agricultural commune last year, reportedly had long planned mass suicide if they felt their sect was threatened.

The hundreds of bodies were found by Guyanese troops who raided the camp Sunday. Miss Field-Ridley said some had gunshot wounds but most showed no signs of violence.

"A witness said that people in the area were having mass suicide," she said at a news conference. "He said the poison was being administered to them, that they were lining up for it." It was not known what kind of poison, reportedly brewed in a tub, was used.

She said the military was trying to identify the bodies, some of which were found in homes and some in open areas of the camp, called Jonestown.

The information minister also denied reports that up to nine persons had been arrested in connection with the ambush of Ryan's party.

Only one suspect — identified as Larry Layton, an American about 32 years old — has been taken into custody, she said. Neither the charge against him nor his hometown was known.

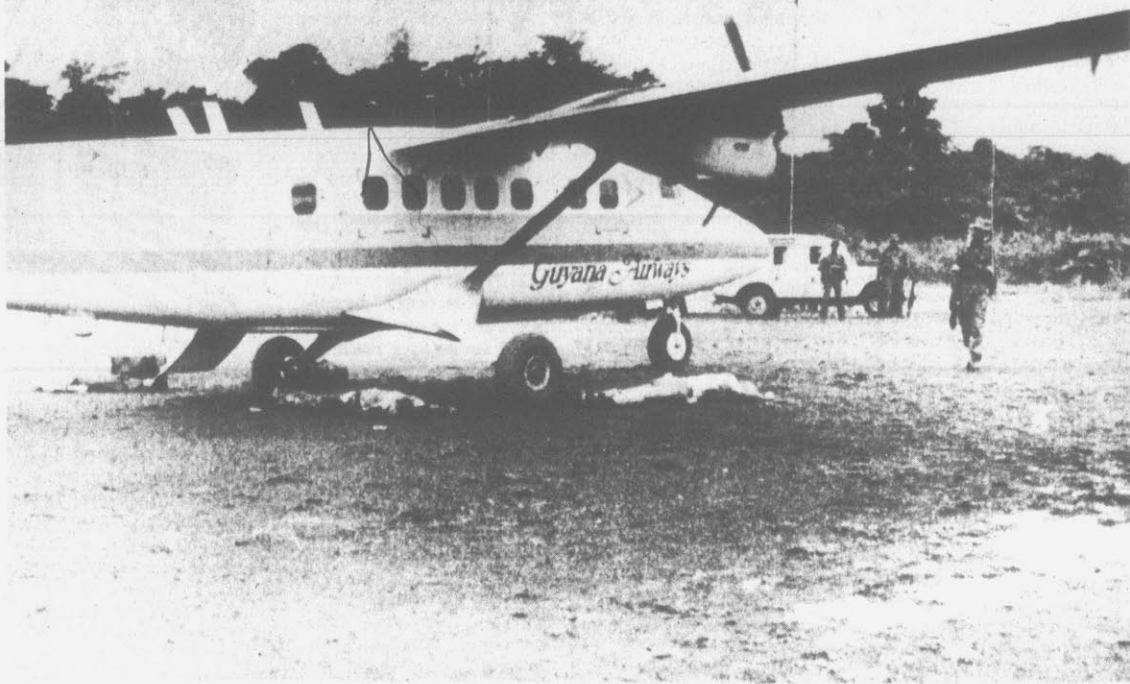

Ryan, accompanied by aides, reporters, and relatives of some sect members, came to this former British colony on the northeastern shoulder of South America last week to investigate reports of large-scale abuses of members of the religious group.

The congressman, 53, was killed by a shotgun blast as he attempted to take several disenchanted members of the sect back to Georgetown by plane.

A knife-wielding assailant had attempted to stab Ryan earlier while the congressman was visiting Jonestown. Two members of Ryan's group disarmed the attacker, and Ryan was not injured.

The dead include three newsmen and one of the settlement's defectors. Ten persons were wounded, three seriously, and the husband of one of the wounded had a stroke. The U.S. Embassy said they were all Americans.

Survivors of the attack said a band of black and white members of the People's Temple opened fire with automatic weapons and shotguns as Ryan and his party were boarding planes at the Port Kaituma airstrip, eight miles south of Jonestown and 150 miles northwest of Georgetown.

In San Francisco, a People's Temple spokesman who identified himself as Archie James denied members of the sect did the airport killings.

The dead were Ryan, reporter Don Harris, 42, and cameraman Robert Brown.

Federal Pay Begin Advises 'No' Overhaul To Pact Timetable

By BROOKS JACKSON

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is convinced that federal employees are overpaid and has ordered plans for an overhaul of the pay system, presidential aides say.

Half a dozen administration officials who asked not to be named said they are drafting several "pay reform" proposals for possible submission to Congress in January.

Ideas under discussion would:

—Cut in half future pay raises for blue-collar workers until their pay levels equal rates outside government which specialists say now average 8 percent below federal levels.

—Change the formula the government uses to calculate yearly raises for white-collar workers, resulting in lesser increases by taking account increases by taking account of such factors as the government's relatively generous fringe benefits.

—Pay typists, secretaries and other clerical and technical workers according to local prevailing wage rates, which in many areas are well below the government's nationwide pay scale.

Officials estimated the blue-collar pay proposal alone would save taxpayers—and cost workers—an estimated $500 million a year when fully effective. No estimates were available for the other suggestions.

The proposals could result in pay increases for some federal employees. Experienced lawyers, for example, tend to earn far less in government than their counterparts in private practice.

Securing congressional approval for a pay overhaul would be difficult, administration officials concede. A year ago "pay reform" was dropped from Carter's "civil service reform" package on grounds that it would make the package too controversial.

Several aides also worry that proceeding with "pay reform" could demoralize the rank-and-file workers on whom Carter depends to deliver this promised governmental efficiencies.

And pressing ahead with the proposals would almost certainly mean Carter would risk losing the political support of the American Federation of Government Employees, which backed his 1976 presidential campaign.

Opposition from the AFGE, the largest federal union, would be the chief obstacle to a pay revision. The union's president, Kenneth Blaylock, was almost defeated for re-election this year because he supported Carter's personnel proposals, which were repudiated by his union's governing body.

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin says he'll recommend that his Cabinet reject Egypt's demand for a timetable for solving the Palestinian problem but will ask it to reaffirm its willingness to sign a peace treaty with Egypt.

The Cabinet adjourned its regular weekly meeting Sunday without taking a decision on the Egyptian demand. It was to reconvene Tuesday to continue discussions of the stalled Egyptian-Israeli negotiations in Washington.

The Sunday meeting came on the anniversary of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's historic visit to Jerusalem last year, which opened the way to the current negotiations. Palestinian guerrillas, who have been sharply critical of Sadat's solo peace drive, marked the date with a barrage of bombs aimed at Israeli targets.

One bomb exploded in a crowded bus traveling through the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River, killing four persons and wounding 37. Belgians, Canadians, Swedes and Britons were among the casualties, but there were no Americans.

A second bomb injured two Israelis in the Tel Aviv suburb of Jaffa. A third, found at a busy Jerusalem intersection, was disarmed.

Begin, calling Egypt's demand for a timetable "unacceptable," told a meeting of his Herut Party Central Committee he was ready to sign the treaty as it stood before Egypt made its latest demand last week.

"We will never agree to timetables," Begin said.

Fined On Bribery Charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Westinghouse Electric Corp. pleaded guilty to charges stemming from giving $323,000 in bribes to a former deputy premier of Egypt, and was fined $300,000 under a plea bargaining agreement questioned by the judge in the case.

U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker said the "court had serious reservations" whether an initial plea bargaining agreement that concealed the identity of the bribe recipient "promotes the ends of justice."

Parker said that even with full disclosure, "some may have reservations today whether this promotes the ends of justice."

Westinghouse admitted that company officials paid the bribes to Ahmed Sultan Ismail, a former deputy premier of Egypt, in return for award of $30 million in power plant contracts to Westinghouse.

Last month, the government proposed a $300,000 fine for Westinghouse under an agreement that would conceal both Ismail's name and that Egypt was the country involved in the deal.

Specifically, the company pleaded guilty to 30 counts of filing false statements with the government that concealed the bribes.

Government lawyers said today the secrecy was intended to protect the Mideast peace negotiations under way in Washington between Egypt and Israel.

Parker initially threw the case out of court because of the secrecy agreement.

The Mushroom Clouds Now Bringing Suits

By VERN ANDERSON

Associated Press Writer
CEDAR CITY, Utah (AP) — Folks here used to get up early to watch the brilliant pre-dawn flashes and enormous mushroom clouds 100 miles away. Twenty years later, Blaine Johnson counts 11 people dead of cancer within 200 yards of his house.

Two neighbors have leukemia now, just like five of the 11 who died in the past 10 years in this staystation of 8,500 between Salt Lake City and Las Vegas. Just like Johnson's daughter, who died of leukemia in 1965, three years after the United States stopped above-ground nuclear testing at a barren site upwind and across the state line in Nevada.

The American Cancer Society said the national annual leukemia death rate is 6 per 100,000.

"Everyone thought it was the nearest thing to watch the blast just before dawn, watch the cloud form and then drift by," said John Rogers of nearby St. George. His mother died of cancer in 1956.

"We actually believed that the federal government would not involve itself in anything that would jeopardize the public health," added fellow townsman Ronald Garner, whose daughter died of cancer in 1966.

Curiosity may have resulted in catastrophe for many.

Like LeOra Hafen of St. George, widowed 13 years ago when her rancher husband died of cancer. Leukemia had taken a 15-year-old daughter in 1956, and cancer has since claimed her mother and a brother-in-law.

One of Mrs. Hafen's friends, Arizona rancher Max Brinkerhoff, died of leukemia last February. The illness had previously claimed three of his childhood pals.

An informal telephone survey in three small southwest Utah towns — Parowan, Paragonah, and Summit, combined population less than 2,000 — turned up 157 cancer deaths, survivors said last week.

"They became, in effect, civilian soldier-victims of the Cold War," said attorney McArthur Wright, who represents surviving families in a developing legal fight for damages.

Rep. Diggs Sentenced

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Charles Diggs, D-Mich., was sentenced today to a maximum of three years in prison for his conviction on charges of mail fraud and making false statements.

U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch ordered Diggs imprisoned for up to three years on each of the 29 counts on which he was convicted. But the sentences are to run concurrently.

In appealing for leniency, Diggs told the judge his conviction "has been a very devastating experience. I know that the conviction has been a very painful experience for me personally and professionally."

The congressman stood impassively as the judge stated his sentence and then avoided reporters when he left the courtroom.

The prosecution had demanded that Diggs be given some form of incarceration for his offense. Attorney John Kotelly argued that Diggs' conduct "does not call for leniency, does not call for a period of probation, but calls for a period of incarceration."

He described Diggs' crimes as "stealing money from the citizens of the United States."

But Diggs' attorneys maintained that his re-election to Congress earlier this month, despite his conviction, was reason enough to grant him a suspended sentence or probation.

Diggs had said previously he would appeal his conviction in the $66,000 scheme.

Sees Security For U.S. In Mexico Oil Industry

By LeROY POPE
UPI Business Writer
NEW YORK (UPI) — Mexico's huge new oil deposits have changed the world's energy picture so drastically that President Carter should reverse his present energy policy, according to one top petroleum researcher.

Dr. Irwin M. Stelzer says the emergence of Mexico as a potential major oil exporter brings into question the assumptions underlying the administration's energy policy.

"The persistent adherence to a view of energy resource exhaustion and scarcity, which was wrong from the beginning, now becomes dangerously removed from reality," said Stelzer, president of National Economic Research Associates, a New York-based economic consulting firm specializing in energy.

Stelzer says the United States, Mexico and Canada need to pursue a cooperative, coordinated development of energy on a continental basis.

He says the United States won't need synthetic fuels and huge imports of liquefied gas if more friendly policies toward Mexico are pursued that will win us a large share of the Mexican oil and gas.

It is more sensible, he said, to buy oil and gas, even at fairly stiff prices, from a natural trading partner such as Mexico "than to run bilateral trade deficits with countries that bank most of their foreign exchange earnings and thus create fundamental instabilities in the international monetary system."

Stelzer said there is little reason now to doubt that Mexico's newly discovered petroleum reserves, kept largely secret by the Mexican government for five years, may equal or surpass those of Saudi Arabia.

The oil finds in the states of Chiapas and Tabasco on the Isthmus of Tehuantepec and the newer offshore discoveries under the Gulf of Campeche, according to Stelzer, are so rich that the wildcat drilling success rate has been an astounding 82 percent. He says this contrasts with rates of 16 to 27 percent in the United States.

At first, the Mexicans were inclined to believe the offshore discoveries under the Gulf of Campeche were a continuation of the Reforma field on the Isthmus of Tehuantepec but further drilling revealed that the offshore field is separate. It is believed now, Stelzer said, "that the combined offshore and onshore (fields) may be part of a giant ancient barrier reef that encircled in former geologic times, what is now the Yucatan Peninsula."

Indeed, this is one of the most reef-strewn areas of sea in the western hemisphere and it has been a graveyard for ships since the days of the Spanish conquistadores.

Stelzer said the geologic conditions resemble those in the United States and the U.S. areas of the Gulf of Mexico, therefore the oil, which is high quality and low-sulfur, is relatively easy and cheap to bring to the surface. He said the Mexicans conceivably could ultimately produce nearly 10 million barrels of petroleum a day but they have no desire or reason to waste their oil and gas so extravagantly.

Much more realistic, he says, are forecasts of a production of 3.25 to 3.9 million barrels a day by 1985. Production was running at 650,000 barrels a day in February, 1977, and the Mexican state oil company, has set a public goal of 1.5 million barrels a day by 1982.

Even recent Energy Department analyses give the impression the U.S. government has all but ignored the possibility it may have a second Saudi Arabia on its doorstep. But Energy Department officials say that is an incorrect impression.

"The Mexican government was very good at keeping this confidential until September," one official said. "Now they're talking about what they have. The Mexicans kept the lid on the figures, underplayed them, for domestic political reasons. We knew what their estimates were, but we didn't publish them. It's wrong to say it's been ignored."

Oil industry officials suggest there may be a second reason, besides courtesy to a neighboring government, for the Energy Department's low profile on Mexican oil. They say the United States apparently doesn't want to become heavily reliant on oil from Mexico because it might lead to a political conflict between energy needs and social problems such as illegal immigration in the West and Southwest.

But U.S. oil companies may not be free from ulterior motives when talking about Mexican oil. Mexico was the first nation to fully nationalize its oil fields, in 1938, and has refused all efforts by the U.S. oil industry to cash in on the new discoveries.

"They (the Mexicans) will always do it on their own," said one senior Energy Department official. "They'll be bringing in U.S. consultants and buying U.S. equipment, but they'll never let the U.S. companies in again — or never in our lifetimes, at least."

In any case, the United States is already Mexico's best oil customer.

In 1977, the first year Mexico had much oil to export, the United States imported an average 170,000 barrels a day, 17 percent of Mexico's production of almost 1 million barrels a day.

Energy Department officials estimate Mexico's production will climb to between 4 and 5 million barrels a day by 1985, and they say the United States is likely to buy most of it.

Stelzer's explanation of the Mexican reticence is more sympathetic.

In the first place, he said, the Mexicans did not make the discoveries all at once but very gradually. Secondly, no international oil companies were involved. The big oil companies were thrown out of Mexico in 1938 by President Lázaro Cárdenas, who accused them of having been rapacious, of having wastefully overproduced and damaged the underground oil bearing formations, and of treating Mexican labor oppressively.

In addition, Stelzer said, the administration of former President Luis Echeverría "was dominated by hostility toward the United States." He apparently feared that, with the real value of the big Mexican deposits being confirmed during a period of near hysteria in the United States over the Arab oil embargo, the Nixon-Ford administration might do almost anything to get access to the Mexican reserves, Stelzer said.

President Jose Lopez-Portillo is following a quite different policy, he said.

The United States presently is getting 83 percent of what oil Mexico is exporting. But Lopez-Portillo has no intention of being dependent on the U.S. market or expanding production just to meet the demanding desires of U.S. oil companies and consumers.

Instead, Mexico is building deepwater terminals at Salina Cruz on the Pacific and Pajaritos on the Gulf of Mexico to handle tankers up to 250,000 tons so she can export her oil anywhere in the world.

There still is another reason why the Mexican discoveries remained under wraps so long.

Stelzer said. "For 15 years, until 1973, all petroleum prices were frozen in Mexico," he said. "The effect of this freeze was to deny the state oil company the necessary financial resources for any significant expansion in exploration and development. Tempting as the early indications (of the new discoveries) were, there was simply no way of increasing the pace of followup work and seeking foreign aid from any source was politically unthinkable."

Stelzer said that, surprisingly, both the United States government and Exxon and other big oil companies appeared to have deliberately played down the impact of the big Mexican discoveries.

He also faulted the world's press for showing a lack of enterprise in ferreting out the facts. He implies that these failures caused the United States to adopt a completely erroneous energy policy.

Stelzer said Mexico is showing a cooperative policy and wants to export reasonable amounts of oil and gas in order to get money to improve its agriculture and further industrialize the country, because it has unemployment rates in some areas reaching above 50 percent and a 3.2 percent annual population growth, one of the highest in the world.

The most significant feature of Mexico's changed attitude is its willingness to export crude oil. For a long time, it would only export refined products.

The controversy with the United States over imports of Mexican gas is different.

American oil companies and utilities are willing to pay the $2.60 a thousand feet the Mexicans want for their gas but the Carter administration won't permit it because it is more than Canada is getting for her gas exports to the U.S. and the Mexican price could be a complication in the fight over domestic gas price regulation.

Finally, Stelzer said, Mexico still distrusts the United States because of the persistent memory of her big losses in the war in the last century, of the U.S. incursions into her territory in this century (President Wilson's massive 1916 retaliation for a border raid by Pancho Villa's rebel army) and "the continuing failure of the United States to live up to its treaty obligations concerning (water from) the Colorado River" on which so many Mexican farmers depend.

Lame Duck Sheriff Is Now Absentee Sheriff

By JAN CARROLL
Associated Press Writer
INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Don Gilman, who became a lame duck, sheriff when he lost an election, is now an absentee sheriff, stretching his long arm of the law, 1,800 miles from his new home in Phoenix, Ariz., to his office here in Marion County.

Folks who call the department are told the sheriff is "out of town." Occasionally, the wealthy sheriff commutes to the Indiana capital to check on things personally.

Marion County has 1 million residents, but apparently no law requiring Gilman — who said he would "get even" after his Democratic primary loss last spring — to live where he works.

Gilman was defeated by Jim Wells, despite a $20,000 campaign the sheriff financed himself. The Democrats had declined to nominate him for the post he assumed in March 1977 when Sheriff Lawrence Broderick died in an automobile accident.

Gilman put much of the blame for his defeat on the city media, which he claimed were too critical of his performance.

"The first 14 months in office were work," Gilman said after the primary. "The next eight months will be fun and I am going to enjoy it."

He fired his press officer, saying "I'm going to taunt the hell out of the press. Don't bother to call me no more...I will taunt the press for fun."

He imposed a gag rule, forbidding his deputies to talk with reporters, but dropped it two weeks later on the order of a superior court judge. He demoted and transferred dozens of deputies, including some who were personal friends of Wells.

One of the deputies, Lt. Larry Jones, was transferred from day to overnight duty and demoted to sergeant. Jones filed a $200,000 suit against Gilman, seeking back pay and restoration of rank, saying he was demoted because of a "political association and friendship with Jim Wells."

The suit is still pending.

Shortly after the primary election, Gilman moved his family to Arizona, saying there had been repeated threats on his life.

In Gilman's absence, "the department is kind of running itself," one deputy said.

But it has been a stormy absence.

Gilman angered Democratic Party officials by refusing to turn over $3,400 in political contributions collected by his office. He then endorsed the Republican nominee for sheriff, Lee Eads, who had endorsed the Democratic candidate four years earlier.

Wells defeated Eads by 33,000 votes in an otherwise Republican sweep of county offices.

At Gunpoint

A Ward Street resident held an intruder at gunpoint early Saturday morning until police arrived and charged the youth with first degree burglary, Chief Glenn Cannon reported this morning.

Cannon said James Lester Cox of 802 Ward St. told investigators he was awakened by the sound of a screen tearing about 3:58 a.m. He got out of bed, went to the living room, saw someone crawling through a window, turned on the light, and held the intruder at bay with a .30 caliber rifle until he called police.

The chief said Howard Kennedy, 18 of 412A Davis St. was charged with first degree burglary in connection with the incident.

DEAR PAT: Why — oh, why — are yarn skeins no longer standardized in weight? I recently purchased four skeins of knitting worsted type yarn thinking they were the usual four-ounce size. To my dismay, when I got home with them, I discovered they were three and a half ounce skeins.

So, instead of having 16 ounces of yarn, I had only 14 ounces — not quite enough to make my favorite sweater pattern. I had to hurry back to the store for another skein while they still had the same dye lot.

I have learned my lesson and will carefully notice the weight when purchasing yarns in the future. If you will mention this in your column, you can alert knitters and crocheters to this change in packaging. — MONA R., Kansas City.

You're right, Mona. Anyone purchasing yarn should be sure to note the weight listed on the skeins as many have changed in recent months. It used to be that knitting worsted weight yarns came in four-ounce skeins, sports weight yarn was packaged in two-ounce skeins and finer yarns such as baby yarn was in one-ounce skeins.

While this is still true with many brands, you can no longer rely on this uniformity of size. Due to increased manufacturing costs, some companies have reduced the amount of yarn in a skein, while others have retained the same sizes but have increased the cost.

At this point, I might mention that yarns have definitely not increased in cost as much as most consumer goods. More than ever before, the knitter and crocheter can save money making their own sweaters, afghans and the like.

Until recent years, only imported yarns were measured in grams instead of ounces. Now, however, some American brands are measured this way. These usually give the weight both ways.

Here are some approximate comparisons which you might wish to clip and save. A 100-gram ball or skein of yarn is roughly the same as three and a half ounces, while a 50-gram skein is approximately one and three-quarter ounces. 28 grams is approximately the same as one ounce.

When the weight of a skein is

reduced, there is obviously less yardage in that skein and this is what affects the number of skeins you will need. The finer the yarn is, the more yardage there will be per unit of weight so it is difficult to give specific guidelines.

In very general terms, however, in a bulky yarn there will be about 30 yards more in a four ounce skein than in a 100-gram skein. In medium weight yarns such as knitting worsted you will have approximately 35 more yards in the four ounce size. In finer sports weight yarn, which is more often packaged in two-ounce or in 50 gram skeins the difference is about 20 yards per skein.

Some patterns give you the specific number of ounces required to make an item, while others simply give the number of skeins or balls needed. If you are buying the smaller sized skeins and are in doubt, I would recommend that you purchase an additional skein or two to be on the safe side.

The worst that can happen then is that you will have more leftover yarn than usual. Every month or two in this column, I will give you some tips for using up leftover yarns. I would like to hear from any readers who have found useful or novel ways to use leftovers.

Today's Weather: Heartwarming!

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: As Thanksgiving draws near, I am mindful of my many blessings. Among them is the privilege of writing this column. Almost daily I receive at least half a dozen heart-warmers. Today I want to share one with you:

DEAR ABBY: Our problem daughter, not quite 17, ran away from home 14 months ago. She had been giving us a rough time for about a year—skipping school, staying out late, and lying to us constantly. After a noisy scene, she stormed out of the house with only the clothes on her back. We didn't have a clue as to where she went.

Only a parent who has lived through this kind of nightmare can realize what we went through. After a year of heartaches and sleepless nights, we were told by the police to give up and assume she was dead. But parents never give up. We continued to search and hope and pray that she'd return to us one day.

Well, our prayers were answered when, out of the blue, we received a telephone call from someone who said he was a volunteer with Operation Peace of Mind in Houston. (We live in Michigan.) We were told that our daughter had read of the toll-free number in the DEAR ABBY column and she wanted to let us know that she was well and happy in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. The volunteer said our daughter would call them again on the following morning in case we had a message for her.

We told them we would welcome a collect call from her. Sure enough, she called us the next day! She sounded wonderful and said she was working and going to night school to finish her education. Our story has an ending. Our daughter is coming to spend Thanksgiving with us!

Abby, will you please publish that toll-free number again so other runaway kids can establish communications with their families? Our daughter said that she had seen your column with the number posted near telephones where runaways hung out.

We will never be able to thank you enough for giving us the happiest Thanksgiving we've ever had!

GRATEFUL IN MICHIGAN

DEAR GRATEFUL: With pleasure. Runaways, call this toll-free number: 800-231-6946.

An operator will take your call and telephone your parents anywhere in the United States with a message from you. There will be no lecturing or recriminations. Your call will not be traced. And only one question will be asked: "Do you need anything?" If you do, you will be told where you can get it, free. I repeat, no attempt will be made to contact you or bring you back home—regardless of your age.

If you are a runaway, I beg you to forget the past and send a message to your parents now. They will sleep better tonight and so will you. And you will all have the best Thanksgiving you've had in years. God bless you.

ABBY

P.S. Operation Peace of Mind was established five years ago by a handful of public-spirited volunteers with the support of the governor of Texas. To date they have placed approximately 240,000 calls from runaways, assuring their families that they are okay. Beautiful!

A reception was held at the campground following the ceremony.

TOMATO PRESERVES
An old-fashioned recipe.

2½ pounds fully ripe tomatoes, skinned and quartered
3 cups sugar
1 cup light corn syrup
¼ teaspoon salt
1 unpeeled lemon, thinly sliced and seeded

In a bowl stir together well the tomatoes, sugar, corn syrup and salt; cover and refrigerate about 12 hours. Drain thoroughly in a colander to separate the tomatoes and liquid. Strain liquid to remove seeds. In a 5-quart saucepot over moderate heat bring the liquid to a boil; boil, stirring often, until mixture sheets from a spoon — about 10 minutes. Add the tomatoes and the lemon. Bring to a boil again, then cook gently, stirring constantly, about 20 minutes. Let stand off heat about 30 minutes for lemon and tomatoes to plump, then return to heat and cook rapidly, stirring constantly, until tomatoes look translucent and the syrup is thick — about 10 minutes. Ladle into clean, hot jars, leaving ½-inch headspace. Seal according to jar manufacturer's directions. Process in a boiling-water bath for 10 minutes. Makes four 1-pint jars.

Among Best Despite Inflation

All Eastern Belt tobacco markets have closed now and, even accounting for inflation, this has to rank as the best tobacco year in history.

There was some weakening in prices at the end of the selling season, which indicated that demand had been satisfied. Still Stabilization's take was relatively low and there were record price averages for the year.

The Farmville market closed on Nov. 9 after 57 selling days. It had sold 35,294,257 pounds of tobacco for $48,512,813 to average $137.45. That compared with an average of $115.48 last year. Only 3.5 percent of gross sales went to Stabilization.

Greenville's market closed on Nov. 14. The market had sold 56,136,500 pounds of tobacco for $74,173,463 to average $132.14. Last year the market averaged $116.91. Some 4.63 percent of the Greenville sales went to Stabilization under the government price support program.

Thanks to a combination of good weather conditions at critical times in the crop growing cycle, and careful attention to their crops by tobacco farmers, a better than average quality was achieved this year.

For most of the season the buying companies showed a willingness to pay good prices for quality tobacco, and the result is a pretty good economic year for area farmers.

The Customers Are Very Dissatisfied

Wednesday sponsors of the Operation Overcharge petition campaign will be taking the signatures to the governor in Raleigh.

The petition protests rising rates for Virginia Electric and Power customers and thousands in the area have signed.

The message is clear that electric customers in Northeastern North Carolina feel they are being overcharged for electricity in relation to other power company areas.

We hope the governor will accept the petitions with the intention of taking every action possible in this matter.

Carter Veto Hits Hard

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Sometimes it is difficult to see a relation between high-level international trade negotiations. Presidential tariff plans, and everyday living in North Carolina.

Not so with the veto by President Jimmy Carter just a few days ago of Congressional action which would have maintained present import restrictions on textiles.

North Carolina will feel the repercussions of that veto in a lot of homes, communities, and in the State Capitol say top state officials.

Commerce Secretary D.M. Faircloth in a last-minute appeal to President Carter to sign the proposal pointed out that the N.C. Textile Manufacturers Association figures 45,000 jobs have already been lost to imported fabrics and apparel. "I am concerned that further reductions in the trade agreements would cost as many as 71,000 more jobs in North Carolina alone," Faircloth said.

Lost Jobs

Those are figures which are speculative as to future impact.

William Adams, executive vice president of Cannon Mills, came up with some current figures which he reported at a recent meeting of the textiles association: plant closings and lost growth have already cost this nation 400,000 textile and apparel jobs, he said.

"What does this mean in North Carolina? It means that we should have 22,000 more people in textile manufacturing ... and 23,000 more employed in apparel manufacturing than we have today. That's 45,000 lost job opportunities," Adams reported.

Even Gov. Jim Hunt joined in urging President Carter to sign the tariff measure, warning of job losses and attendant impact on other North Carolina businesses (furniture, chemicals) and on taxes and capital for investment.

The proposal passed by Congress embraced measures put forth by Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina and Rep. James T. Broyhill of North Carolina. The general effect would have been to maintain import restrictions at present levels in the face of plans by the Carter Administration to

Competition

A study group headed by Charles A. McLendon, executive vice president of Burlington Industries, points to North Carolina's heavy concentration in textiles and related industries to conclude that given the ripple effect, 164,000 less North Carolinians will have jobs under the current tariff structure (by 1985); and with a 50 percent tariff reduction, 262,000 jobs will be lost.

William Adams of Cannon Mills, a member of the import committee, paints this graphic picture of a typical foreign textile producer: no spending for pollution controls, cotton dust or noise abatement; no safety, health, unemployment or toxic substance control; money is borrowed from the World Bank at low rates; and wages are low.

"In short, he is manufacturing products under conditions that would be illegal in this country, and we are having to compete with him," Adams reported.

reduce the tariffs at trade talks now underway in Geneva.

Continued loss of textile jobs to foreign countries will have a devastating effect on small communities across the nation, but especially in North Carolina, Broyhill believes. This state has seen textile employment drop by nearly 13,000 in the last year, and "the blame can be laid on the results of imports produced by more than 100 countries ... at wages ranging as low as one-eleventh of what we pay our own peo-

CAPITOL LETTER

Ambitions In N.C. GOP

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Despite indications they may be facing Democratic incumbents, a flock of potential Republican candidates have begun maneuvering toward the 1980 gubernatorial and Senate campaigns.

Some of the possibilities are quietly pushing their own names; others are having it pushed for them. But leaders in North Carolina's Republican Party say all will be measuring the climate for the GOP nationally during the next six to eight months, and hoping for a stumble by Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt.

For governor, frequently heard names of possible candidates include George Little, former natural resources secretary under Gov. Jim Holshouser; T. Avery Nye, former labor commissioner; Jack Lee, the state GOP chairman and former mayor of Fayetteville; and even Holshouser.

Another is state Sen. Cass Ballenger, R-Catawba, who scheduled a meeting this week with still another possibility, Charlotte Mayor Ken Harris, to discuss their plans.

"We're too small a party to go knocking into each other in a primary," the jovial Ballenger explained last week.

U.S. Rep. Jim Martin of Davidson, who has just won a fourth term from the 9th District, and Rep. James Broyhill of Lenoir, who has represented the 11th District since 1962, have also been mentioned. But party insiders say if either chooses to gamble his safe seat, it will likely be Martin, and for the U.S. Senate.

"Broyhill will not, I'm sure. He's established himself in the House. He's of more value to the party and the country there, and it's not like him to risk it," one active GOP leader said in an interview, asking not to be named.

"Martin's tough enough an individual to go for higher office," another said privately. "He's got a good organization, and he can raise money."

Former state Sen. Hamilton Horton of Winston

Salem entered the 1974 U.S. Senate race but quickly withdrew, a casualty of the then-raging war between moderate and conservative factions of the North Carolina GOP. His loss in a race for Congress this year may have ended his hopes for a statewide office.

Holshouser is a special case. No governor in this century has sought a second term after leaving office. He is also mentioned as a possible candidate for Senate and for congress from the formerly-Republican 8th district, but Holshouser was not considered widely popular when he left office in 1976, and could decide he prefers practicing law in Southern Pines.

But for all the candidates, GOP insiders are hoping to avoid a primary. Holshouser won after a tough primary in 1972, but Dave Flaherty was crushed by Hunt after a tough runoff in 1976.

Having just re-elected Jesse Helms as a Republican

PRAYERS IN FAIR WEATHER

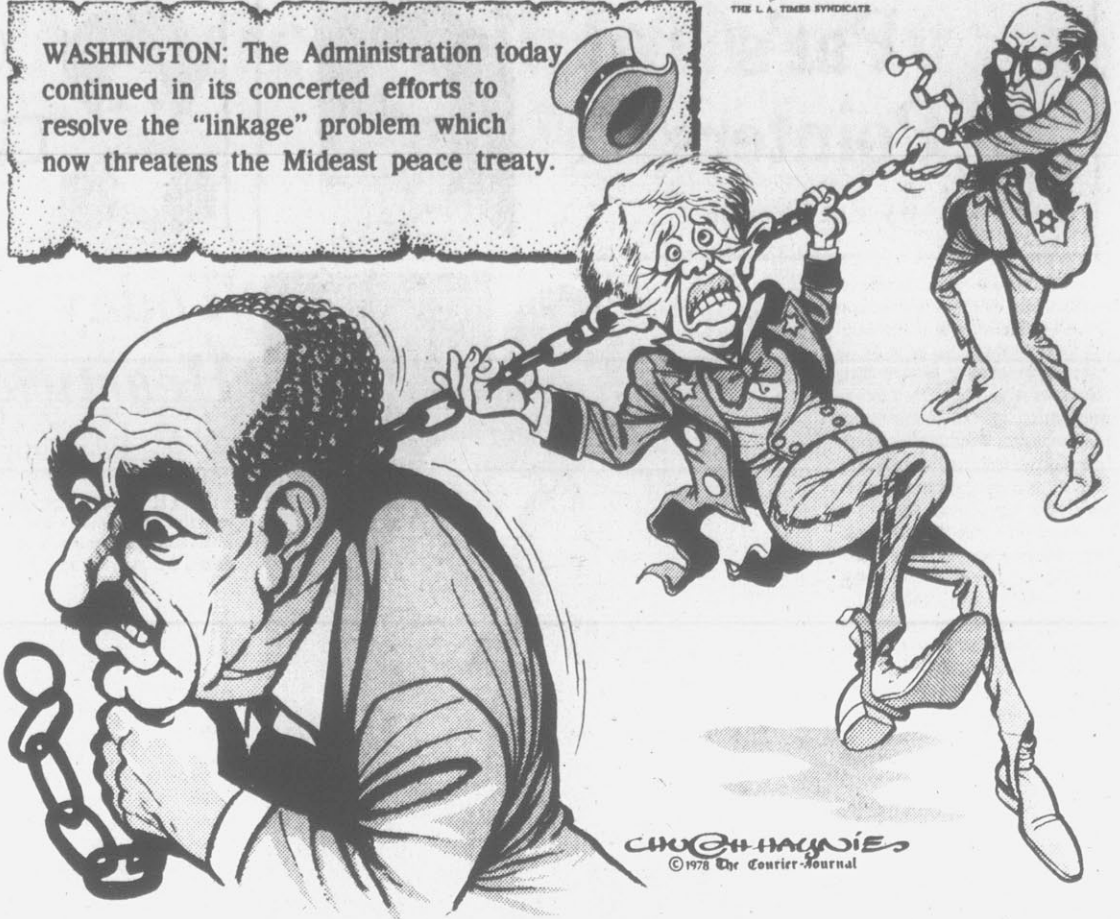

A certain seaman, over one hundred years ago, was notorious for his profanity — and this was quite a distinction in the profession he followed. One night, during a severe storm, he deserted his station on deck and the captain found him in the forecastle earnestly saying his prayers. Snatching him to his feet, the captain said angrily, "Say your prayers in fair weather!"

Many years later the captain attended a revival service in New York led by an evangelist who was making quite a sensation. The captain was amazed to find out that this evangelist was the sailor he had gruffly recalled to duty long before. Upon meeting the captain, the evangelist said that it was the words "Say your prayers in fair weather" which started him on the road to conversion.

Too many people get down on their knees only when the storm breaks. Fair weather is the time when the wise Christian prepares himself for the day when the winds blow and the flood descends.

Give Bill A Big Hand

WASHINGTON — I've been flogging a new book lately. I have crossed paths with Teddy White, Betty Ford, Irving Wallace, Peter Townsend, Arthur Schlesinger Jr., Robert Kennedy Jr., William F. Buckley Jr., James Michener, Erma Bombeck, Barbara Tuchman and Ann Landers.

What we are all doing is going on television to try to let people know our work is in the bookstore. Most of us have pride and would never stoop to flattery except when it comes to pushing our own book. Then all bets are off, and we do anything the promotion department says we must do to get people into the bookstores.

There is no pleasure in this sort of work, nor is there any escape. We either do it, or we are told our books will rot on the shelves. Whenever I have a few moments to think about this, I wonder if William Shakespeare, had he been living today, would be out on the circuit to promote his works. If he were, it would go something like this:

"Well, Bill, I see you have a new book consisting of all your plays and sonnets. Could you give us a brief capsule of what they're all about?"

"Love, tragedy, comedy. The foibles of kings and princes; fools, knaves and villains too many to mention."

"Right. What do you think of the weather in California?"

"Alas, the air is foul and tastes of grime."

"So, what's going on between you and Jackie Onassis?"

ART BUCHWALD

"We've hardly met, though she did ask me to write a book for her."

"How much money do you make, Bill?"

"A reasonable sum, though most of it, as you know, goes for taxes."

"How do you feel about abortion?"

"I'm sorry. I'm not clear as to what that has to do with my book."

"Nothing really, Bill, except that we have an abortion advocate coming on after you, and I thought you might like to take the anti-abortion point of view."

"Aren't we going to talk about my book?"

"Later, Bill, later. First, I'm curious about your working habits. You've turned out quite a bit of stuff here. Rumor has it that Francis Bacon writes most of it for you."

"That's a lie. I don't know Bacon and I am sick of people asking me if he writes my material."

"Okay. As a writer how do you think you stack up against Harold Robbins and Allen Drury?"

"I have no idea."

"Has Norman Mailer ever threatened to punch you in the nose?"

"No."

"What about Gore Vidal?"

"I say, can we talk about the book?"

"First, we have to go to a commercial. Then we have a new comedian, a singer from Las Vegas, and the belly

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the Editor:

This is to correct the misinformation concerning the National Women's Conference presented by Alic Wynne Gatsis of Rocky Mount in your November 12 edition. The letter from Mary N. Pegg of Winston-Salem is answered separately.

The plank in the National Plan of Action on reproductive freedom seeks to keep federal, state and local governments from dictating individual reproductive choices. It does not call for federally financed abortions for all. It does speak against practices which exclude childbirth, pregnancy-related care, and abortion from publically or privately financed medical services.

The plank on child care calls for voluntary child-care facilities with low-cost, ability-to-pay fee schedules. Woman who must support small children must hold jobs or be on welfare. The most practical solution is to offer affordable care for the children so the mothers can hold jobs.

The plank on sexual preference seeks to extend the rights set forth in the Constitution to include all citizens regardless of sexual or affectional preference.

Mrs. Gatsis' statement that $75 billion would be needed to implement the Plan of Action has no basis of fact. Neither do her statements that the vast majority of American women were ignored or that there was flagrant abuse of tax money. The law was explicit in how the funds were to be handled and gave guidelines for reaching women from all strata of society.

The Official Report to the President, Congress and the People of the United States is available in public libraries as is the Congressional Record with its report of the non-official ad hoc hearings. Mrs. Gatsis said that a group of women went to Washington to testify at an Ad Hoc Hearing against the conferences. This indicates exactly why the hearings were held—not to "hear" but to speak against.

Home-heating oil which cost about 51 cents a gallon a year ago, has risen to an average 53 cents a gallon and as high as 55 cents in some parts of the nation.

"It's terrible," said E.P. Larsen, owner of a small fuel-oil dealership in Rensselaer County in upstate New York. "We've had five price increases since August, and I've heard that the bid companies just increased prices again, so we can probably expect another increase." Larsen said his price has risen from 49 cents per gallon to 54 cents since August.

In Milwaukee area, the average oil price is 49 cents a gallon, up 3 cents in the past couple of months.

The problem started a year ago. The second very cold winter in as many years forced refineries to step up production of distillate oil — used primarily for home heating purposes — at the expense of gasoline production.

This left gasoline supplies at slightly lower-than-normal levels for the summer months, when the situation was complicated by an unexpected

Earned Community's Goodwill

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — When a company lowers its prices, especially a bank, it is bound to earn the community's good will. Pittsburgh's Mellon Bank did it, and conceivably might have started a national trend.

Mellon did not offer a general cut in prices, but it did sharply modify the formula used in calculating the cost of loans to small businesses, which it feels are unduly hurt by current conditions.

Under the formula, a small business' loan charges, ordinarily based on the prime rate plus one, two or three percentages points, will begin instead from a base 1 1/4 points below prime.

At announcement time, Mellon's prime rate was 10 1/4 percent, meaning a small business might pay 11 1/4 percent to 13 1/4 percent. The new formula dropped the base to 9 1/4, making the charge 10 1/2 percent to 12 1/2 percent.

Immediately following the Nov. 14 announcement the telephone began ringing, as other banks throughout the country sought to learn the premise and procedures of Mellon's move.

A couple of days later Craig Ford, executive vice president for the metropolitan region, was still explaining the move. It was 6:30 p.m., hardly a banker's hour, but no rarer an event than the price cut.

"The premise is very simple," he said. "Our office managers in conversations with small business people, those with less than $1.5 million of assets, found they were being hurt severely. The damage to them, he said, was twofold: Not only from the rapid increase in interest rates but from the absolute level of those rates. And they needed help.

"A company of this size has no financing alternative," said Ford. "There's no commercial paper market for them. And they aren't well enough known to shop around."

The high, fast rising rates come at a critical time for small concerns: many are forced to warehouse large inventories for the Christmas season. For some, Christmas is the make or break season.

Were they able to collect cash for their sales the problem would not be so great. But modern merchandising emphasizes deferred payments, through credit cards or "buy now, pay after Christmas" plans.

"This we thought would cause a major crunch for these people," said Ford. They were, he said, among the most loyal of Mellon's customers, "good, long-term customers who don't shop around."

Some of them have been coming to Mellon for so many years, said Ford, "you come to have a close personal involvement with them." The relationship, he said, is not "deal by deal." It continues.

Will it cost Mellon? "No question, in the short run," said Ford at first, but then he amended the answer. "We're not losing money," he said, but the lower base rate, he pointed out, would cut into profit.

The long-term gains are obvious, of course, in the cementing of business relationships. And, Ford concedes, "it might help us when we visit other customers."

Four Young People Are Killed In $500 Holdup

By HANK LOWENKRON
Associated Press Writer
INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — "For $500 they took four lives from a group of kids who were trying hard to be good, decent human beings," said the mother of one of four restaurant workers found dead the day after they disappeared in a robbery.

Caroline Friedt's 20-year-old daughter, Jane — who was assistant manager of the Speedway Burger Chef — and three teen-age co-workers were found dead Sunday in woods south of Indianapolis.

Police said they have no leads or suspects in the case and none of the families of the employees was contacted about the disappearance.

State police Trooper Chuck Hibbert said the bodies were discovered by a private citizen on the man's property in Johnson County.

Local news accounts said the four had been shot, although police would not confirm that. The bodies were taken to the county hospital for autopsies.

Police identified the other three victims as Ruth Shelton, 17, and Daniel Davis and Mark Flemmonds, both 16.

The four had been missing since a robbery early Saturday as they were cleaning up. The restaurant had closed at 11 p.m. Friday.

Police said an off-duty employee informed them the restaurant was deserted at 1 a.m. Saturday and the back door had been left open, although the workers weren't scheduled to leave until 2 a.m.

Authorities speculated the robbers forced the four workers to leave the store in Miss Friedt's white Vega, which was discovered abandoned about a mile away in a residential neighborhood near police headquarters at 4:30 a.m. Saturday.

Police said they found two empty currency bags next to the open safe, but manager

Robert Gilyeat said a check of cash register tapes showed no more than $500 was taken.

Gilyeat said the workers were "reliable," an observation echoed by Mrs. Friedt about her daughter.

"She always wore a smile," said Mrs. Friedt. "Everyone who knew her always talked about how she smiled."

"She fought hard to get her promotion. She always talked about young boys she trained who received promotions ahead of her. Then, the management realized what a good worker she was and made her an assistant manager," she continued.

"She was interested in moving up in the chain's corporate structure," she added, and then lashed out at the person or persons responsible for the four deaths:

"I hope that when they get caught they put them away where they can't hurt anyone else. They had no right to ruin four young lives."

State police and Speedway police are investigating the case. The FBI entered the investigation Sunday before the bodies were discovered, but later turned it back over to local authorities.

"We're comparing notes right now," said Detective Sgt. Leon Griffith of the state police. "We really don't know much about the crime except that we have four bodies."

Holiday Luncheon Plans Finalized

Eighty members of the Town and Country Senior Citizens Club met Thursday to finalize plans for the Christmas Luncheon to be held Dec. 14 at the American Legion Building.

President Sarah Ashton reminded members to make reservations with her by Dec. 5.

President Ashton told members that 46 persons are registered to attend the performance of "The Nutcracker" in Raleigh Dec. 17. The bus will leave 1005 Lawrence St. at 9 a.m.

Officers were elected for the new year and will be installed at the January meeting. There will not be a meeting Dec. 7.

Letters of thanks were read from Greenville Mayor Percy Cox for the group's support of the Public Works bond issue and the Pitt County Department of Social Services for the donation to the Foster Children's Christmas Fund.

Congratulations were expressed to the Rev. and Mrs. Henry Lotquist on the celebration of their 50th wedding anniversary.

Dr. Lawrence Brewster introduced Dr. Vila Rosenfeld of the School of Home Economics, East Carolina University, Miss Linda Tingle, an ECU Home Economics graduate student, gave a talk on the importance of good nutrition.

Didn't Know Gun Loaded

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C. (AP) — A 15-year-old Chicago boy, in Winston-Salem to attend a football game in which his brother played, is dead of a bullet wound after showing off a pistol he didn't know was loaded.

A spokesman at Forsyth Memorial Hospital said Kevin Foley, shot in the forehead with a .38 caliber pistol about 7:45 p.m. Saturday, died Sunday night shortly before midnight.

Police said the boy and a friend, Mark Elliott, were in Winston-Salem with the victim's father, a Chicago construction worker, to watch young Dan Foley play in one of four Sertoma Bowl games at Groves Stadium.

Elliott, 14, told officers he and Kevin Foley had been drinking beer and watching television at their motel when Foley opened a suitcase and pulled out a pistol. "He told me he had gotten the pistol in Chicago. He didn't know it was loaded," Elliott said.

He said Foley "had the pistol pointed at his head and said, 'watch, I'm going to kill myself.' He was just kidding though. Then it went off."

Frances Dixon, Dr. and Mrs. Earl Roseveare, Nora Hunnings, Blanche Jarvis and Reppie Buck.

The Christmas Luncheon Committee is as follows: Grace Hill, Ruth Harris, Mr. and Mrs. James Ward, Sadie Worthington, Sallie Reagan, Lee Williams, Repsy Baker, Mary Rollinette, Effie Hathaway, Francis Dixon, Sarah Capwell, Helen Snyder, Ethel Dillon, Ruby Parkenson, Nora Hunnings and Sarah Ashton.

'Best Entry'

An entry submitted by the Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors in the National Association of Realtors annual Make America Better contest was selected as best entry by a small board in the community projects category.

Zack Bacon, president of the North Carolina Association of Realtors, accepted a plaque recently on behalf of the local board at a luncheon held during the 71st annual convention of the national association in Honolulu.

Tom Grant Jr., president of the national association, made the plaque presentation to Bacon.

The objective of the Make America Better program, it was pointed out, is to encourage Realtors to initiate and implement projects to improve the quality of life in their communities.

senator would seemingly make the state party stronger. Yet Helms ran with little party identification, has not fully soothed the wounds left by his supporters' 1976 convention fight with the moderates, and won by fewer votes — 100,000 — than he had hoped.

"He didn't have any coattails at all," acknowledged Lee.

Entering the Senate race against Democrat Robert Morgan, who continues to insist he will seek a second term, may be easier for a candidate than running for governor. While the national climate may undoubtedly affect both races, Republicans think the economy may make a senator more vulnerable than a governor. And although Hunt is uncommitted on a second term, he is expected to run.

"The real key is the Democratic primary — will (Lt. Gov.) Jimmy Green or (Attorney General) Rufus Edmisten challenge Jim Hunt," Little said in an interview. "And can their party get it back together after a tough primary, if there is one?"

"If Jim Hunt is unopposed (for the nomination), I think it's going to be tough. But a divisive primary could elect a Republican."

Because Hunt is thought to have maintained his popularity and his effective political organization, some of the possible candidates, such as Little and Ballenger, acknowledge 1980 may be too soon for them. Most on the list are young enough to wait until 1984.

"What we need is someone who is willing to throw themselves into the breach and can also raise some money," one said. "And then we'll hope like hell somebody in Washington screws up before the election."

"Could you just hold it up so the viewers could see it?"

"Sure, Bill, but can we hold off until we talk to a lady who raises pet alligators in the bathroom?"

"Are you sure you want me to sit here?"

"Of course we do. You're kind of a celebrity. Not as big as Mel Torme, the singer, or Phyllis Diller, but I'm sure you can make a contribution to the show. Do you know how to make spaghetti?"

"I don't believe so."

"Leon Spinks is coming on the show and he's going to make spaghetti for us. It's a gas. Okay. Just move over there on the sofa, and don't say anything until one of the floor directors give you a nod. Ladies and Gentlemen, let's have a big hand for Bill Shakespeare, author of, of — oh, well, anyhow a lot of good plays and poems which will make a perfect gift for someone in the hospital."

increase in gasoline consumption as Americans went on a driving binge.

"We're victims of this beautiful weather," said Herb Hugo, editor of Platt's Oilgram, an industry newsletter.

"We had exceptionally heavy demands for gasoline all summer, and then when the weather stayed so good into the fall, the demand kept right up," said Gerald Everett, executive director of the Northwest Petroleum Association in St. Paul, Minn.

"The continued demand, along with the fact that the inventories were already a little low from the high demand all summer, all added up to this crunch," Everett said.

The crunch has caused some oil companies to have trouble meeting demand in New England, the Midwest and on the West Coast. Shell, for example, is cutting supplies to stations in the Northeast, and inventories are especially tight in California, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST—Snow is expected in the forecast period, Monday until Tuesday morning, for the northern Plains, Great Lakes and part of the upper midwest. Rain is forecast from the eastern Plains through the Midwest to the northern Appalachians. Cold weather is forecast for most areas. The Southeast is expected to be warm. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press

The second cold front in three days has moved through North Carolina, bringing assurance that temperatures for Thanksgiving week will be nearer normal levels for late November.

Low readings this morning reflected the cooler weather as Asheville dropped to 38 degrees, and Greensboro and Raleigh to 39. Other lows around the state generally were in the 40s.

High cloudiness is associated with the cold front, but moisture is lacking for rainfall. But by Tuesday, as northeast winds help increase moisture, low clouds will cover most of the state except the coast. Small craft advisories were in effect today for the coast and also for sound waters behind the state's barrier islands. Winds were expected to be northeast 15 to 25 knots and gusty.

Temperatures Sunday were noticeably cooler than those of Saturday and a steady northeast breeze made it seem even cooler. Afternoon temperatures were in the upper 50s and 60s except in the northwest mountains where the 50s were the rule.

Wilmington, which frequently comes up with the warmest reading, shared Sunday's high of 68 with Cape Hatteras. Asheville had a high of 62, Raleigh 60 and Greensboro 58.

Tuesday's high readings are expected to be in the 50s with possibly some 60s along the coast. Lows tonight will be in the 30s west and 40s east.

Scout Earns Eagle Award

Garret Young, 17, was presented the Eagle Scout award Sunday during ceremonies at Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church.

GARRET YOUNG

Young is a member of Troop 205, sponsored by Memorial Baptist Church. He has been a member of the troop since the age of 12.

The new Eagle Scout, a junior at Rose High School, chose for his Eagle project the tutoring of mathematic students at Rose High.

He has served as senior patrol leader for Troop 205, headed by C. P. Shaw, scoutmaster, and E. L. Yancey, assistant scout master, since the age of 12.

Young resides with his parents, Dr. and Mrs. P. B. Young III, at 107 Kenilworth Road in Greenville.

Lice and mange are perennial, sometimes constant, problems in too many swine herds. Warm weather reduces the severity of these external parasites, especially mange. Consequently, many producers discontinue control activities during the summer. Nothing more is done until the infestations become severe again. This usually occurs in the middle of winter when temperatures are so low that many producers avoid spraying. Unfortunately, the alternative of dusting is not effective against mange.

Swine producers should use the milder days of late fall to thoroughly treat the herd for external parasites. This should prevent the late winter problems of heavy external parasite infestation and inclement weather for treatment.

Hog lice and mange can be controlled at the same time, provided a chemical effective against both is used. Lindane and malathion sprays and dips are suggested against mange and these will also eliminate lice. When spraying or dipping, be sure the entire animal is thoroughly covered, paying special attention to the inside of ears and scabby areas. When spraying, use a minimum of 100 p.s.i. pressure. Repeat the treatment in seven days.

Regardless of the chemical used, be absolutely certain that all instructions on use and handling of the chemical are followed. Watch for restrictions and precautions.

For example, pigs less than three months old should not be treated with lindane. Pigs less than a year old should not be treated with malathion spray. Lindane should also not be used within 30 days of slaughter.

A thorough and effective treatment program will eliminate lice and mange mites, but efforts may be wasted if an infected animal is introduced into the herd. Carefully inspect boars and other breeding stock for parasites, or better yet, treat them before putting them into contact with the herd.

Large populations of hog lice and mites develop on poorly fed animals that are kept in unsanitary pens and houses. Thorough cleaning and disinfecting of facilities is a must for lice and mange control.

Old Ship To Join 'Reef'

MANTEO, N.C. (UPI)—The World War II Liberty Ship "Dionysus" will be sunk at the end of the month to join another Liberty Ship and a pile of old tires in an artificial reef near Oregon Inlet, Secretary of Natural Resources and Community Development Howard N. Lee said Saturday.

Lee said the 441-foot ship will be sunk Nov. 29 after a ceremony at a sports fishing centersouth of Manteo.

The reef is about 2.5 miles offshore five miles south of Oregon Inlet.

At the ceremony, federal, state and local officials and fishermen will help dedicate a saltwater fishing display that will feature the propeller from the vessel. The solid bronze propeller is 16 feet in diameter and weighs 25,000 pounds.

The "Dionysus" will be the fourth Liberty ship sunk off North Carolina's coast since 1974 as part of the state's artificial reef program. At Oregon Inlet, the "Dionysus" will join the "Zane Grey" on the bottom. Eventually Oregon Inlet Reef will cover 30 acres, the majority of which will be tires.

The reef near Oregon Inlet is one of 10 artificial reefs on the coast installed to help the state's saltwater fishing industry by attracting fish to the reef.

"We hope this ceremony and sinking will dramatize the importance of the artificial reefs and North Carolina saltwater fishermen to the state's economy," Lee said. "We estimate there are over one half million saltwater fishermen in North Carolina and that they contribute about $100 million to the economy each year."

The Liberty Ship was donated to the state by the U.S. Maritime Administration, and Kelly Springfield Tire of Fayetteville has donated over 400,000 tires for the various reefs. Dare County and the State Marine Fisheries Division will cooperate on the construction of the reef.

The Marine Corps will position explosives to sink the ship, and the Coast Guard will set up a safety zone around the vessel to keep back small boats.

Kucinich Back To His Chores

CLEVELAND (AP)—Cleveland Mayor Dennis Kucinich returns to his office today, facing big problems that have cropped up during his five-week absence to recuperate from an ulcer attack.

Since Kucinich left office on Oct. 14, the president and five other members of the city council have been indicted on bribery charges, and more financial problems have been heaped on the city.

One of the chores the 32-year-old mayor will have to deal with is trying to persuade local banks to refinance $15.5 million in city notes to avoid default.

LBJ Thought Of Publishing

AUSTIN, Texas (AP)—Lyndon Johnson was thinking about retiring from politics and becoming a newspaper publisher just before the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Johnson's desires were revealed in a series of interviews with Johnson's friends and former aides by Austin AmericanStatesman reporters.

Horace Busby, a former newspaperman and longtime Johnson friend, recalled that the then-vice president had spoken to him on Nov. 8, 1963, about buying a newspaper—apparently the American Statesman or the Houston Chronicle.

Slain Newsmen Earned Awards

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The three newsmen killed with Congressman Leo J. Ryan in an ambush in Guyana had received numerous awards for their reporting and photography.

Don Harris, 41, an investigative reporter for NBC television in Los Angeles, came here from Dallas in 1973 to work for the local NBC affiliate as a reporter and co-anchor for the weekend news.

While in Dallas, Harris was honored by the Texas Associated Press Broadcaster's Association in 1973 for exposes of inadequate airport security and scandalous emergency hospital admissions practices. He was working for station WFAA at the time.

He also won a local Emmy for his reporting during riots in Washington, D.C., following the murder of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

U.S. Attorney General Ramsey Clark subpoenaed 22,000 feet of film he had taken during the riot, claiming it contained incriminating information. Harris at first turned over outtakes to his news director at station WTOG, but he quickly got them back and dumped them in the Potomac River.

Harris later said he destroyed the film because much of it was obtained on the promise that it would never be used against the subjects in court.

Harris grew up in the south Georgia town of Vidalia. He was known as Darwin Humphrey then, but took the name Don Harris because it was easier to say on the air and easier for people to remember, said his uncle, Dr. A.J. Morris.

Harris lived in Woodland Hills with his wife and three children.

Vatican Mum On Closed Meeting

VATICAN CITY (AP)—The Vatican isn't saying what dissident Archbishop Marcel Lefebvre and Pope John Paul II discussed during a tightly guarded meeting during the weekend.

Vatican spokesman the Rev. Romeo Panciroli said Sunday only that the two met Saturday under heavy security, which the 72-year-old French archbishop requested.

Lefebvre leads a worldwide conservative movement that has brought the Roman Catholic Church close to a schism recently.

Unveiling '2nd Look' At Carter Tax Obligation

FOR THE MAN WHO HAS EVERYTHING — The Security Pill, conceived by Au Placer, Inc. of Fort Worth, Texas, is a unique, one-of-a-kind executive play toy. It is a hollow core pill of half clear and half amber lucite with natural 22 karat gold dust from Coal Creek Mine in Alaska, inside. It is designed to give the owner some security against inflation and the declining dollar. The pill comes in a soft leather pouch, much like the one prospectors of yesteryear carried. (AP Laserphoto)

Hydroponic Farm Yields Crop In N.C.

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — It is an unusual setup. Out of liquid and from the heat supplied by friction of textile machinery come tomatoes. They are the product of Green-Tex, the first large-scale hydroponic farm in North Carolina.

Susan Bumberger and her four co-workers at Green-Tex Inc. have been very successful with the concept, growing two crops a year and producing about 150,000 pounds of tomatoes.

The greenhouses cover about one-half acre of the Regal Manufacturing Co. roof in Hickory's Viewmont section. Regal makes covered elastic yarn.

"In the process, the machines give off heat due to friction," said Ms. Bumberger, 24. "We just duct the heat to the greenhouses."

The plants grow hydroponically, in a liquid solution instead of soil. Five greenhouses are on the roof with the tomato plants supported by twine tied to a frame. The plants' roots grow in shallow plastic troughs.

A liquid mixture of water, nitrogen and fertilizer runs through the trough and supplies the plants with everything they need. The mixture runs in 10-minute stretches, with five minutes in between for the roots to dry.

The type of tomato Ms. Bumberger is growing is different from the one folks in North Carolina are used to getting in the winter. Unlike the tomatoes they will compete with, which come from Florida or California and are bred with thick skins and picked green so they can travel long distances, her's are the every-day garden variety, and vine-ripened.

By CHARLES CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA AP — A White House-requested second look at President Carter's local tax obligation is ready to be unveiled on Tuesday, the chief Sumter County, Ga., tax assessor says.

The reappraisal was sparked by a news report that Carter's federal income tax returns listed improvements to the Carter family peanut warehouse as an investment at a far higher price than the same improvements were valued on the local tax rolls.

"I think when you see the information to be made public you'll see that everything has worked out to the local tax board's satisfaction, and, I think, to the public's," Russell Thomas Jr., chairman of the county board of tax assessors, said in a telephone interview.

Thomas said the board's action on the Carter property at a meeting two weeks ago is being kept confidential until the owners have a chance to appeal. The deadline for appeals is today, he said.

Atlanta attorney Charles Kirbo, who is handling the president's financial interests in a blind trust, said he was not familiar with the reassessment, but he was sure it would not be appealed.

"There won't be an appeal," Kirbo said. "I know the president said to them to do what they wanted and that would be the end of it."

ABC News reported last month that Carter's 1975 and 1976 income taxes claimed investment tax credits for improvements including a peanut sheller, a structure to house the sheller, a bin and an elevator to lift peanuts into a storage building — based on an investment of about $1 million.

The same improvements were valued at less than $500,000 on the county tax digest. The ABC report said Carters' Warehouse Inc. would have paid $8,000 more in local property taxes under the higher figures, and the president would have paid $36,000 more in federal income taxes if he has used the lower values.

The White House said it could not explain the apparent discrepancy. Robert Lipschutz, the president's counsel, asked state and local officials to check their figures. The Internal Revenue Service had audited Carter's income tax returns for those years and had not challenged the $1 million figure for the investments.

Thomas said Ronnie Greer, the chief county tax appraiser, conducted a thorough study of the land and facilities at the Carter family warehouse, one of several similar peanut operations in Sumter County.

"Ronnie Greer made a very detailed appraisal and verified his figures with the vendors and suppliers of the equipment and came up with a figure I think anyone would be satisfied with," Thomas said.

The reappraisal process included an examination of county records of property pledged as collateral for any loans, Thomas said.

Carters' Warehouse borrowed money from the National Bank of Georgia to finance the improvements. Billy Carter said in an interview last month. He said the loan has been repaid.

Billy Carter, who managed the business while his brother was campaigning for the presidency, said he was questioned about the loans by a federal grand jury in Atlanta investigating the banking practices of then-NBG head Bert Lance, who later served as President Carter's budget director.

The New York Times reported Sunday that a $1 million loan to the Carter peanut business from NBG was not fully secured by collateral. The Times said bank regulatory officials characterized such a procedure as improper but not illegal.

Georgia Revenue Commissioner Bill Strickland said Sunday the state inquiry into the assessments is complete.

He said White House officials should decide whether to release the results of his department's study.

Migrating Back To N. Carolina

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Blacks are now settling in the South, reversing a migration trend that is nearly a century old. And in Forsyth County, in-migration by blacks is five times higher than by whites.

Their reasons for coming are varied. Some are coming back after trying to find a better way of life up north and finding disappointment instead.

Most of the recent arrivals said they chose the South for the same reasons whites did — less crime, more open space, cleaner air, lower taxes and a more easy going lifestyle.

As recently as the last decade, nearly 9 percent of Forsyth County's black residents moved away, most to the North.

And while some blacks are still heading north, many are coming south. Projections by the N.C. Department of Administration show that the black population in Forsyth County will increase by 10 percent between 1970 and 1980.

years ago, he thought the North was a place full of glamour and opportunity for blacks. But he says it turned out to be just the opposite.

"I got to Washington and saw the government buildings and they were beautiful," he said. "Then I found my dorm and it was in the ghetto."

It took Irene Hiliary 40 years to get back to Forsyth County. She moved from Kernesville to White Plains, N.Y. as a young woman, married and settled in the North.

"I'm almost 82 years old," Mrs. Hiliary said last week from her home in Kernesville. "I decided it was time to come home."

About 65 percent of the blacks moving here are under 35. Many of them who were interviewed said they are coming because jobs are available. Job opportunities create a new type of mobility for blacks based on an element of choice, they said. Older blacks recall they migrated north out of desperation, not preference.

Stamps In The News

By SYD KRONISH

Don't go into a tizzy when you hear that the U.S. is issuing a new $2 stamp. The rates have not increased that much this year.

The new $2 regular postage stamp in the Americana series will be issued in New York City on Nov. 16 with first-day ceremonies taking place during the annual National Postage Stamp Show of the American Stamp Dealers Association at the New York Coliseum.

Stamps in the Americana series are replacing stamps in the Prominent American Series. The USPS says it expects to complete the Americana series with additional stamps in 1979.

The vignette of the new stamp features a kerosene lamp manufactured shortly after the Civil War. The inscription "America's Light Will Shine Over All The Land" complements the lighting-device theme of the stamp.

The designer of the stamp, James Schleyer, used a kerosene table lamp owned by his grandmother as the subject for his work. Schleyer also designed the 16-cent Lighthouse stamp.

Here are the procedures for ordering first-day cancellations:

If you prefer to purchase your own stamps at your local post office and affix them to your own envelope, address them to "First Day Cancellations, Postmaster, New York, N.Y. 10001." The return address should be placed on the right side of the envelope at least 1/4 of an inch from the bottom. No remittance is required. Orders must be postmarked no later than Dec. 1.

Should you wish the old method of having the USPS affix the stamps, then you must enclose a money order for $2 (no cash) with your request to:

"Lamp Stamp, Postmaster, New York, N.Y. 10001" prior to Dec. 1.

Scott's 1979 Standard Catalogue, Vol. IV, Countries P-Z (Panama to Zambesia) is the biggest — with the most price changes — in the history of this philatelic work. The record total of 46,317 price alterations compares with 31,743 for the 1978 volume. About 1,200 new issues help to enlarge it.

Most of the new prices are increases of 15 percent to 50 percent higher in some 19th-century classics of popular European countries. There are some decreases, however, —

San Marino, Vatican and Italian Colonies as well as recent stamps of newer countries.

According to the new catalogue, Russia leads the parade with 4,547 changes, mostly upward. Spain follows with 3,710 and Switzerland with 3,450.

The Vol. IV catalogue is available at your local dealer for $16.

An indication of how stamp prices have increased recently came at an auction in London of British stamps last month where purchasers paid double and triple the catalogue prices. For example, a block of four 1913 unused 1-pound dull blue-green stamps realized about $25,000, nearly double the expected amount, and an unused 1840 Plate 5-Penny Black sold for $8,000 with the estimate at $3,500.

Here's a tip for new collectors. When your stamps get stuck either back-to-back or back-to-face, do not attempt to pull them apart. You will ruin the stamps. An old trick is to take a flat cork and float it in a pan of hot water with the stamps on the dry top of the cork. The steam will loose them enough to pull the stamps apart without causing damage, if done carefully. You can use this same method to remove paper from the backs of stamps, especially if you think the colors will be soluble in water.

NEW YORK (AP) — Drawing strength from the improving dollar, the stock market advanced across a broad front in moderate trading today.

There were more than three times as many gaining issues as losers by midday on the New York Stock Exchange. Big Board volume came to 10.11 million shares in the first two hours of trading, compared with 10.6 million in the same period Friday.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up 7.02 points to 804.75 and the NYSE composite index of all listed stocks gained .44 to 52.98.

Analysts said the dollar's continued recovery against major world currencies appeared to have helped boosted the market. The dollar hit its highest level against the Japanese yen since July in early Tokyo trading and showed moderate improvement in later European trading.

Fish Kill In Swananoa River

ASHEVILLE, N. C. (AP) — Wildlife officials reported that some 6,000 rough fish were found dead Sunday in the Swananoa River and one of its tributaries, Bee Tree Creek.

Water samples were sent to Raleigh for laboratory tests by the environmental management division, according to a spokesman for the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

The spokesman also said it was believed that the cause of the fish kill was known, as well as its source, but he declined to elaborate pending the laboratory tests.

It was the third recent fish kill in the Asheville area, the spokesman noted, recalling two kills about two months ago on the French Broad River. About 27,000 catfish were involved in those kills.

Catfish also were involved in the latest kill, the spokesman said.

Mass Suicide...

18, who was trying to escape from Jonestown. Her home address was not known.

A White House statement said President Carter was saddened by Ryan's death. "It was his drive to get information at first hand that led to his tragic death," the statement said.

Lane and a lawyer colleague, Charles Garry, went to the camp to act as counselors during the visit by Ryan. Lane has frequently taken on controversial cases and is currently representing convicted Martin Luther King assassin James Earl Ray.

Lane said he and Garry were barred from Saturday's mass meeting, then were put under guard and finally were allowed to flee into the jungle as they heard screams and other sounds of confusion from the settlement. They eventually made their way to a town and later to this capital city, 150 miles southeast of the camp.

One survivor, NBC field producer Robert Flick, said the killers fired 50 to 75 shots at Ryan's group as the planes were being loaded.

"People were being wounded and falling to the ground. As they fell, people with shotguns would walk over and at pointblank range shoot the victim in the head," Flick said in an account broadcast by NBC. "That was how Ryan and Harris died."

According to Flick there were eight to 12 gunmen, both black and white.

The government flew troops to Port Kaituma Sunday, and Flick said they arrested nine suspects. A Guyanese government spokesman in New York, Jack Gelinas, said one of those arrested was an American named Larry John Leyton. His home address was not known.

San Francisco Chronicle reporter Ron Javers, recounting the attack, in which he was wounded in the arm, said cameraman Brown "kept filming even as the attackers advanced on him with their guns."

"I saw Brown go down. Then I saw one of the attackers stick a shotgun right into Brown's face, inches away, if that. Brown's brain was blown out of his head."

Although wounded, Javers dodged gunfire and ran into the marshy swamp beside the air field. He and other survivors later returned to the plane.

"Leo Ryan was on his back ... lying in the mud ... his face had been shot off," Javers said.

The reporter and other terrified survivors took refuge overnight with Guyanese in the village of Port Kaituma.

Police and soldiers arrived at daybreak and a Guyanese military plane ferried the survivors back to Georgetown. A U.S. Air Force C-141 took them to Puerto Rico and to Andrews Air Force Base in Washington.

The bodies remained at Port Kaituma. State Department spokesman Tom Reston said they were to be brought to Georgetown where autopsies would be performed to comply with Guyanese law in cases involving homicide.

Will Sue In PCB Move

LITTLE VALLEY, N.Y. (AP) — Robert J. Burns, who faces state and federal charges that he dumped toxic PCBs on North Carolina's highways, has notified Catauga County he intends to sue it for removing PCBs he had stored in a warehouse in Allegany.

The notice of claim filed Friday on behalf of Burns said the president of Transformer Sales Co. intends to seek $1 million in damages but did not specify the exact nature of the suit.

Burns, 49, and his two sons, Timothy, 23, and Randall, 20, face seven-count North Carolina indictments charging they dumped the toxic heat-retardant chemical along roadways in Halifax County, N.C.

The three also face eight charges by the U.S. attorney's office in Raleigh, N.C., that they violated the toxic substances act by dumping PCBs in 10 North Carolina counties.

Burns has denied that he or his firm dumped the material and has said he can account for all the PCBs that he contracted with a Raleigh firm to remove.

Among the places Burns said he had the material stored was the Transformer Sales warehouse in Allegany, from which about 2,000 gallons of PCB laced oil were removed by the county in August on the order of the Board of Health.

Rampants To Build Around Backcourt Men

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

While Rose High School's Rampants don't open the season for another week, they'll get their first hint on how things will be Wednesday night at Ayden-Gritton High School.

The Rampants are scheduled to scrimmage the Chargers at 7 p.m. in the A-G gym. A coaches' clinic will be held at 6:30 p.m., and a $1 admission will be charged.

The official opening will come next Tuesday, when Rose travels to North Pitt, and the home opener isn't until December 8, when Kinston invades the Rose gym.

Coach Jim Brewington, opening his third year at the helm, can count only two lettermen returning from last year's team, Ronnie Chapman and Derwin Clemons, and no starters.

"I hope we're going to be able to compete," Brewington said. "I know that December is going to be a rough time for us, while we adjust to five new players in starting roles."

"But I think we have three real good guards to build our game around, and that we can get some good help up front. We're taller overall than we've been in a long time," he added.

"And the kids have a winning attitude. I think a lot of our people are going to be surprising, and that we can put it all together by the end of December," Brewington said.

Tyrone Tucker and John Sheppard are the tallest of the Rampants at 6-5, while Cliff Kilpatrick and Donald House are both 6-4. "We don't have a really big man, but we do have good height all around. And I really think that we'll be improved in our rebounding. Sheppard, who is just a sophomore, really has a lot of potential for us. He could be one of the best around when he gets some experience."

Clemons seems to be the top shooter so far, but Brewington looks for plenty of help from Calvin Whichard, Chapman, and Dennis Ross. Ross' play will depend a lot on how he comes along after missing all last year with an injury.

"I feel better going into this year because of the desire of the kids," the coach said. "A lot of them went to basketball camps and worked over the summer on their games. In fact, I've decided to carry 15 players this year, where I have only carried 12 in the past."

Brewington said the defensive skills of the Rampants were a little behind at this point due to the late start the team got. "We didn't start practice until the end of football season, about a week behind, really," he said.

Tucker, Kilpatrick and Sheppard will be the top candidates for the center position, while Kilpatrick, House, Ross and Anthony Gorham will all see action in the forward slots.

Chapman, Clemons, Whichard, Wallace Brown and Jamie Adams all figure to see a lot of play in the guard positions.

Brewington figures that the conference race will probably be a dog-fight throughout the year. "Rocky Mount has several starters returning and they had an unbeaten junior varsity team, so I look to them to be the favorites again."

"But the rest of us should all be in there fighting for second place. And I believe the conference again has a second place spot in the State Playoffs again this year, so finishing second is important."

"Northern Nash and Bertie both will be pretty good, and I think we have a chance to be good too. I really don't know what's going to happen in Wilson County with the two new schools and everyone moving around, but Harvey Ward (now at Fike) has never had bad teams. I really look for a real tough race."

How quickly the Rampants come around will tell the tale.

"We have a rough opening schedule, with Kinston, Washington and North Pitt, so we'll get plenty of tough competition. I hope that that is going to get us into top shape for the conference race when we start in January," Brewington said.

Officials of the Independence Bowl in Shreveport, La. were expected to announce today that East Carolina University will face Southland Conference champion Louisiana Tech in the Dec. 16 game at the Louisiana State Fairgrounds.

"The Daily Reflector" learned from unofficial sources that East Carolina will be extended an invitation for the third annual Independence Bowl. The Associated Press quoted Pirate Club spokesman Jane Moore as saying the school received word Sunday of the bowl committee's selection of ECU.

No official announcement was made by the school this morning. However, Athletic Director Bill Cain, contacted Sunday evening, said, "I'd have to say that things look good for us. They (the Independence Bowl committee) will announce their choice sometime Monday afternoon, and we really expect it to be us."

The Pirates compiled an 8-3 record this season, completing the year with a 45-0 victory over Marshall in Ficklen Stadium Saturday night.

East Carolina will be making its first bowl trip since 1965, when the Bucs rolled to a 31-0 victory over Maine in the Tangerine Bowl, winning the Eastern championship of the "small college" ranks in the NCAA.

That bowl victory marked the third straight for East Carolina during the Clarence Stasavich era. The previous year, the Pirates had also played in the Tangerine, beating Massachusetts, 14-13. In 1963, they beat Northeastern in the Eastern Bowl in Allentown, Pa., 27-6.

The Pirates made two other bowl appearances during the early '50s while still a member of the NAIA, losing to Clarion State, 13-6, in the Lions Bowl in 1952 and to Morris-Harvey, 12-0 in the Elks Bowl in 1953.

The success in getting the bowl bid marks the first time in the past seven years that the Bucs have made it into post-season play. In six of the last seven seasons, including the 1978 year, the Pirates have felt that they had teams worthy of going to bowls.

Twice under former coach Sonny Randle, in 1972 and 1973, the Pirates posted 9-2 records, but were denied a bowl bid. Then, the last three years under Pat Dye, when the Bucs posted two 8-3 years and one 9-2 season, supporters felt that the Pirates should have been extended a bid.

Last year, it seemed an almost certainty that East Carolina would receive a bid to the Peach Bowl had it won its final game over William & Mary. But the Indians turned the tables on the Pirates, winning, 21-17, and again ECU stayed home.

But this year, the Pirates, after losing two of their first three, won seven of their last eight, including their last four in a row, and that left the Independence people impressed.

East Carolina played two members of the Southland Conference during the year, beating both. They downed Texas-Arlington in Greenville, 23-17, and topped Southwest Louisiana in Lafayette, La., 38-9.

Louisiana Tech, which also met the two schools in conference play, downed Texas-Arlington, 28-21, but were upset by Southwest, 24-6.

Louisiana Tech closed out the season with a 6-4 record Saturday night, bowing to Northeast Louisiana, 18-0.

Blue Devils Holding Double-Edged Razor

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The No. 1 ranking in college basketball can be like holding a double-edged sword - one slip and you cut yourself. Duke Coach Bill Foster is painfully aware of that position.

"I'm really proud," says the coach of the nation's top-ranked team, "but on the other hand, everyone will be shooting for this year. That No. 1 ranking will give a lot of teams incentive to beat us this season."

Foster's Blue Devils find themselves in precisely the same spot that Kentucky was in last season. The Wildcats were ranked No. 1 at the start of the year and had to prove themselves from the beginning. They did - with some difficulty - before winning the NCAA championship by beating this same Duke team in the finals.

"We have no room for slipping," said Foster. "So it's not going to be easy, especially with the schedule we play this year. I think, like any other team, we'll be all right if we stay away from injuries."

"But, honestly, our schedule is so tough that we can't afford

The close of the 1978 football season Saturday night in Ficklen Stadium had to be a satisfying one for the Pirates of East Carolina.

Now, word is expected today on whether the season will be extended for one more game.

Officials of the Independence Bowl in Shreveport, La., are expected to announce this afternoon their choice to face hosting Louisiana Tech in the post-season game.

That choice will be East Carolina, according to reports reaching us.

Unofficially, there are supposed to be about three or four teams involved in the final selection process. A Shreveport source told us that the final field had been cut by some teams losing Saturday night, and others accepting bids to play in other bowl games.

East Carolina and Tulsa appeared to be the favorites for the bid, before, the Pirates became the top choice.

And a bid to ECU will certainly be accepted. The Pirates are bowl-hungry, and have been for some time.

Twice during the Sonny Randle era, the Pirates fielded teams that were "bowlable," and four of Pat Dye's five teams have been of the same caliber.

Dye, after watching the romp over Marshall Saturday night, said he felt that the Pirates, now, are the best team he's had here.

The Independence Bowl could be a start for the Pirates to something even better in the future. Getting in is the tough job.

A victory by East Carolina in the game could bring it further attention, and a follow-up season next year could lead to another bid to a "bigger" game.

Once on the bowl ladder, the going is much less tougher. Getting on if the difficult job. Then, it's just a matter of staying there for a few years to establish a knotch.

The East Carolina team has a lot to offer a bowl. It has one of the best defenses in the country, and of late, has put up one of the better offenses, too. People like Zack Valentine, Mike Brewington, Gerald Hall, and Tommy Summer on defense, with Leander Green, Eddie Hicks, Terry Gallaher and Anthony Collins.

Probably the biggest problem the Pirate fans will have is getting there. It's an 1,100 mile trip, but about 95 per cent of it is interstate highway for those who drive.

There will be those who will travel by air, and perhaps, as was done for the last ECU bowl trips, to Orlando, Fla., a charter train can be arranged.

At any rate, by the time the ink is dried on this paper, the bowl bid will be out.

Then it will be official that the Pirates are bowl-bound.

Allison Wins Times

ONTARIO, Calif. (AP) — Bob Allison enjoyed his best season in Grand National stock car racing in 1978 since 1972, with five major victories, including the prestigious Daytona 500 and Sunday's season-ender here, the Los Angeles Times 500.

Allison finished second in the season point standings and was in the top five in U.S. Auto Club stock car events for the year with several victories. Yet Allison's showing could have been even more exceptional if it hadn't been for pesky Cale Yarborough.

Yarborough, who marched to an unprecedented third straight Winston Cup national championship, scored 10 victories, a couple of them at the expense of Allison.

The Clock Is NFL Equalizer

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

The great equalizer for all National Football League teams is the game clock. It is emotionless and uncompromising, a friend one moment, an enemy the next.

It often spells the difference between victory and defeat and in four games Sunday, the outcome rested on its steady tick-tock as the seconds ebbed away.

For the New York Giants, the clock seemed to be tolling victory as they ran it out, protecting a 17-12 lead over Philadelphia. Suddenly, with just 20 ticks left, Joe Pisarcik fumbled and Herman Edwards scooped the ball up and ran 26 yards for Philadelphia's winning touchdown in a 19-17 victory.

The New York Jets had raced the clock as they rushed downfield in the final two minutes, positioning the ball for a Pat Leahy field goal that could have turned their game against New England. With 31 seconds left, Leahy lined up for a 33-yard kick. But it hooked wide left, saving the Patriots' 19-17 victory.

For the Kansas City Chiefs, the clock wasn't as vital as the position of the ball. There were just 15 seconds left when KC, trailing 13-10 against Seattle, lined up at the 1-yard line. Only a miracle could save the Seahawks, it seemed. A miracle or a fumble. Tony Green supplied the latter and the Chiefs came up losers again.

Eagles 19, Giants 17

New York thought it had this one in the bag when Odis McKinney's interception halted a final Philadelphia drive with 1:23 to play. But then Pisarcik's turnover on a handoff that would have killed the clock reversed the outcome.

Patriots 19, Jets 17

David Posey's 24-yard field goal with 2:30 to play gave New England the lead against New York. Then the Jets rolled downfield, racing the clock, hoping for a winning field goal. When Leahy missed, he fell to his hands and knees in anger.

Seahawks 13, Chiefs 10

Kansas City Coach Marv Levy defended the wide pitch play which Reed fumbled at the Seattle goal line, sealing the Seahawks' victory. Two Efron Herrera field goals of 30 and 18 yards were decisive for Seattle.

Rams 31, 49ers 28

Pat Haden softened San Francisco up with three straight passes to Ron Jessie which chewed up 41 yards and set up Corral's winning field goal. The 49ers had tied the score in the final period on an 89-yard kickoff return by Dave Williams and Paul Hofer's third TD run of the game.

Cards 27, Redskins 17

St. Louis scored its fourth straight victory after losing its first eight games. Jim Hart flipped two TD passes and Willard Harrell returned a punt 70 yards for another score.

Cowboys 27, Saints 7

Tony Dorsett rushed for 152 yards, pushing his season's total past the 1,000-yard plateau as Dallas set the stage for their Thanksgiving Day showdown with Washington by moving into a first place tie with the Redskins.

Raiders 29, Lions 17

Mark van Eeghen scored three TDs, two on 1-yard runs and the third on a fumble recovery in the end zone, as Oakland hung onto its share of the AFC West lead. Van Eeghen rushed for 98 yards in the game and scored the go-ahead TD when he fell on wide receiver Cliff Branch's fumble in the end zone.

Broncos 16, Packers 3

Denver kept pace with Oakland by beating Green Bay. Ron Lytle rushed for 110 yards and one TD and Craig Morton's 14-yard pitch to Haven Moses supplied the other touchdown for the Broncos.

Chargers 13, Vikings 7

Dan Fouts' 10-yard TD pass to rookie John Jefferson proved decisive as San Diego ended Minnesota's four-game winning streak.

Fouts stumbled as he took the snap on the scoring play. "I figured if I could get up without trouble we could still salvage something," said Fouts. And he did, pulling out the TD and the victory with it.

Steelers 7, Bengals 6

Rocky Bleier scored the game's lone TD on a 1-yard plunge as Pittsburgh survived four interceptions to edge Cincinnati.

The Bengals, 1-11 for the year, allowed the Steelers only 154 net yards but could not overcome Bleier's TD.

Browns 45, Colts 24

Brian Sipe passed for 309 yards and four touchdowns, three of them to Calvin Hill, as Cleveland routed Baltimore.

Blue Devils...

to play any game with one of our starters out. Usually, there are a few games during the season when you can get away with less than your full complement of players. Not this year, though.

Foster, in part, is responsible for one of Duke's toughest schedules in recent history. Building up the Duke basketball program in the past four years, it has been part of Foster's philosophy to play a stronger schedule.

By reaching the NCAA finals last season, Duke hit one of the high points in the "school's" basketball history after years of desultory play. The Blue Devils had — and still have — one of the youngest teams in the country, with only one senior guard Jim Spanakel in the starting lineup.

This is a good-shooting, intelligent group that now combines experience with youthful vibrancy. The Atlantic Coast Conference power developed faster than expected last year, and the Blue Devils' only major weakness this season could be frontcourt depth.

Foster gives his team top grades in his preseason assessment.

"We're about where we want to be at this point," he said. "I'm very pleased. Everyone's shooting well, and we've looked very good in our exhibition games."

Duke was made the nation's No. 1 team in The Associated Press preseason poll released Sunday, collecting 38 first place ballots and 918 points. UCLA was a distant second in the voting by the nation's sports writers and broadcasters with 764 points. The Bruins collected eight first-place ballots from the voters.

The voters dropped defending national champion Kentucky to No. 11, obviously on the basis of the Wildcats losing four of their top six players.

Notre Dame, one of the Final Four in last year's championship round in St. Louis, was accorded the No. 3 position on the basis of 685 points. The Fighting Irish received one ballot for No. 1.

Louisville and Kansas, the only other team to collect a first-place vote, followed in the voting. Louisville landed the No. 4 spot with 492 points while Kansas gained No. 5 with 429.

Texas, winner of last year's National Invitation Tournament, was placed in the No. 6 position with 390 points. Michigan State was given 348 points for No. 7 while Big Ten colleague Michigan was close behind in No. 8 with 342.

Syracuse, with 243 points, and Indiana, 210, finished out the Top Ten.

Sooners, Huskers Meet Again In Orange Bowl

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

It was a little more than a week ago that Nebraska upended Oklahoma, and turned the post-season bowl picture into chaos, but it seems like only yesterday.

And on Jan. 2, it will again seem like only yesterday that Nebraska played Oklahoma because on New Year's night in the Orange Bowl, in one of the most unexpected developments of this or any other college football season, they'll do it once more with feeling — Nebraska vs. Oklahoma.

"The way things are going, who knows what will happen. A lot of things happened today that I didn't believe would happen," Coach Joe Paterno said Saturday after his No. 1-rated Penn State team canceled its reservations to Miami and accepted a bid to the Sugar Bowl.

Two weeks ago, Paterno and Penn State were No. 2 and hoping for a crack at Oklahoma, then the nation's No. 1 team, in the Orange Bowl. Nebraska took care of that pipe dream and last week, Paterno, the new No. 1, said he hoped to meet runnerup Nebraska in Miami.

But when invitation time rolled around Saturday, Nebraska had been beaten by Missouri's upset Kings 35-31 and Penn State was pointed toward New Orleans — for sure — to meet third-ranked Alabama, maybe.

"I don't know about the bowls; it's an unusual situation," said Georgia Coach Vince Dooley, who helped make it such by going for a once-point conversion with 5:18 left to play and thereby settled for a 22-22 tie with Auburn when a victory would have put the eighth-ranked Bulldogs in the Sugar Bowl as the Southeastern Conference's representative.

Although several spots are still up in the air, there is only one real opening in the 15 major bowls — Louisiana Tech's opponent in the Independence Bowl. This is the lineup:

Sugar Bowl: Penn State vs. Alabama, if the Crimson Tide beats Auburn on Dec. 2 or Georgia if they don't. Orange Bowl: Nebraska vs. Oklahoma, maybe.

Rose Bowl: Southern California vs. next week's Michigan-Ohio State winner.

Cotton Bowl: Houston, if the Cougars beat either Texas Tech or Rice, vs. Notre Dame.

Gator Bowl: Clemson vs. the Michigan Ohio State loser. Fiesta Bowl: Arkansas vs. UCLA. Liberty Bowl: Missouri vs. Louisiana State. Sun Bowl: Texas vs. Maryland. Astro Bluebonnet Bowl: Stanford vs. Georgia or Alabama, although Bear Bryant says he wants to stay home if Bama doesn't beat Auburn.

Peach Bowl: Purdue vs. Georgia Tech. Tangerine Bowl: Pitt vs. North Carolina State. Hall of Fame Bowl: Iowa State vs. Texas A&M. Holiday Bowl: Brigham Young vs. Navy. Garden State Bowl: Rutgers vs. Arizona State. Independence Bowl: Louisiana Tech vs. ???.

Penn State, Alabama and sixth-ranked Houston had the weekend off. But fourth-ranked Oklahoma destroyed

Oklahoma State 62-7 as Billy Sims, rushed for 209 yards, scored four times and set a Big Eight single-season mark of 1,762 yards. The Sooners accumulated 692 yards in total offense, 629 of them on the ground.

James Wilder keyed Missouri's upset of Nebraska with a school-record four touchdowns on runs of 9, 1, 4, and 7 yards, the last with 3:42 remaining. That offset a 255-yard performance by Rick Berns, who set Nebraska game and career rushing records, scored twice and said he would "gladly trade everything I got today for one more touchdown."

Fifth-ranked Southern California nailed down the Pacific 10 crown and a trip to the Rose Bowl by defeating No. 15 UCLA 17-10. Paul McDonald threw touchdown passes of 36 yards to Calvin Sweeney and 10 to Kevin Williams while Charles White rushed for 145 yards and dethroned Anthony Davis as the league's career rushing kind with 3,739 yards.

Rick Leach passed 11 yards to Ralph Clayton and 10 to Doug Marsh for touchdowns as seventh-ranked Michigan eliminated No. 15 Purdue from the Rose Bowl picture 24-6.

Georgia withstood an Auburn record 250-yard rushing effort by Joe Cribbs, including touchdown runs of 60 and 2 yards, but could do no better than tie when Dooley ordered a safety-first conversion kick following Willie McClendon's second 1-yard touchdown plunge.

"I felt it was the right decision," Dooley said, "because we had time to hold them and kick a field goal. Looking back, it would have been better to go for two. It was the wrong decision and I apologized to the team for it."

No. 9 ranked Texas crushed TCU 41-0 as Johnnie Johnson returned an interception 47 booted field goals of 41, 34 and 48 yards. Vagas Ferguson broke his own school record of 219 yards set two weeks earlier by galloping for 255 in 10th ranked Notre Dame's 38-21 trouncing of No. 20 Georgia Tech.

Clemson, No. 12, overtook No. 11 Maryland 28-24 on Lester Brown's 5-yard run in the final period and Ron Calcagni scored three times to lead No. 13 Arkansas over Texas A&M 26-7.

Michigan State, No. 16, piled up 601 yards in smashing Northwestern 52-3. The Spartans are on probation and ineligible for a bowl but can tie the Michigan-Ohio State winner for Big Ten honors by beating Iowa next week.

James Jones rushed for 162 yards and Dave Marler passed for two scores as Mississippi State upset No. 17 LSU 16-14. Jeff Delaney's 99-yard fumble return triggered No. 18 Pitt's 35-17 triumph over Army, and Ricky Johnson's 46-yard run sealed No. 19 Ohio State's 21-18 come-from-behind victory over Indiana.

Population Boom Said Stabilizing

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The world's population growth rate, exploding since Adam and Eve, declined in the last decade and experts now predict the population will stabilize earlier than they expected.

This is the first time in history that the growth rate declined, experts say.

A new Census Bureau report on world population, released Sunday, shows the growth rate declined from 2.0 percent in 1966 to 1.9 in 1976.

At the same time, the world's estimated population increased from 3.5 billion in 1967 to 4.3 billion in 1977, the report says.

A zero population growth rate will be reached between the years 2020 and 2025, experts say, instead of a decade later, as had been anticipated.

Samuel Baum, the bureau's top expert on international demography, said the changes are small but very significant.

"These things change slowly," he said in an interview.

"Until the last 10 years, the growth rate had been going steadily up, and it had been predicted to continue going up through the 1970s and 1980s.

"This is the beginning of a trend, and it's happening a decade earlier than expected."

Population growth rates have declined in specific areas throughout history, particularly during wartime or in a natural disaster or disease epidemic. But experts say the new figures show the growth rate has declined in almost all areas of the world.

"We do not expect a reversal," Baum said.

A spokesman for the United Nations Fund for Population Activities, Tarzie Vittachi, said of the new data: "This is the first time since Adam that there has been an overall across-the-board decline."

But Rodney Shaw, president of the Population Institute in Washington, said that while the new figures are encouraging, the population is still increasing at an alarming rate.

"There is the same kind of joy in this as in hearing that a 90-foot tidal wave rolling onto a crowded beach had dropped to 85 feet," he said. "It still means disaster unless there is a faster decline than now exists."

Experts say the birth rates in less developed countries have been declining since 1950, but the death rates have been declining faster. The net result was an increase in population. But since the late 1960s, the birth rates have been declining faster than the death rates, so the growth rates have dropped.

Dollar Sees Fresh Gains

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose sharply today on foreign money markets. A dealer in Switzerland said he couldn't account for the rise but "just everybody seems to want to buy."

The jump began in Tokyo, where the dollar rose nearly four yen to its highest point since July. It closed at 196.60 yen, up from 192.875 at the close of trading Friday.

These were midmorning rates in major European markets:

Frankfurt — 1.9380 marks, up from 1.9192 at the close of trading Friday.

Zurich — 1.7640 Swiss francs, up from 1.7105.

Paris — 4.4475 French francs, up from 4.3775.

Amsterdam — 2.1015 guilders, up from 2.0805.

Milan — 853.50 lire, up from 847.35.

London — The British pound sold for $1.9270, down from $1.9330.

In Zurich, gold was quoted at $197.875 an ounce, down from Friday's closing rate of $198.125. In London, Europe's other major bullion market, the early price was $197.50, down from $198.875, but at the mid-morning fixing the five major dealers set the rate at $199.15.

Plan Transit System For Disabled

By BRIAN MOTTATZ
SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — Betty Myhre predicts the nation's municipal mass transit systems will go "belly up" if forced on their own by the federal government to become fully accessible to the handicapped and disabled.

Such a move would cost untold millions of dollars for new-style buses, or retrofits of existing fleets with wider doors and wheelchair lifts.

But Mrs. Myhre contends the problem is not one of accessibility, but rather mobility and her unique program offers a much less costly solution.

Mrs. Myhre holds the title of director of transportation for the Spokane YMCA. In that capacity, she oversees operation of a fleet of 24 specially equipped vans that augment the Spokane Transit System by providing mobility to the more than 59,000 residents of the metropolitan Spokane area who are unable to use regular city buses.

She is also a critic of the Department of Transportation's proposed regulations requiring the nation's transit systems to be accessible to all citizens.

"Every mass transit system will go belly up — they can't afford it," she says emphatically. "It's a one kind of answer for the whole country and they can't do it. But the program I have could work anywhere."

The nerve center for Mrs.
Myhre's "mini" transit system is tucked away in a windowless room of the YMCA building.
Large blackboards on the walls list the up-to-the-minute status of each van. In one corner, a dispatcher thumbs through schedules, informing various drivers where to make their next pickups.

Out on the streets, the YM-CA's mustard-colored vans move about the city and its suburbs, picking up and dropping off handicapped and disabled riders at a rate of 10,000 per month on a strictly demand basis.

"We're allowing people to enter the mainstream again, rather than being isolated," says Mrs. Myhre of her state-licensed program.

"We do not limit anyone to a trip purpose or number of trips.
We do not charge a fare.
Anyone who can't use the Spokane Transit System, we plug them into ours."

Some 79 public and non-profit agencies of all sizes and description participate in the program. Some of them have donated vans to the motorpool, while others pay a minimal charge for each rider transported as part of their individual programs.

By booking in advance, the YMCA operates each van to near capacity, thus keeping costs low. The program operates at a cost of about $2 a ride, compared to more than $12 a ride for a similar program in Atlanta and $35 in Evanston, Ill.

Mrs. Myhre is hopeful the Department of Transportation will eventually modify its proposed regulations because even if the nation's transit systems are modified at great cost, most handicapped would still be unable to use public transportation.

"Most of my people could not get on a bus without assistance," says Mrs. Myhre. "About 97 percent of the people I transport are wheelchair dependents."

Avoid Painting Over Wallpaper

NEW YORK (UPI) — Before you paint a wall that has been papered, remove the paper first. Painting over wallpaper can loosen the paper, and color in some papers tend to bleed through.

For easy wallpaper removal, score it in a criss-cross pattern with a sharp knife. Then sponge soak it with hot water or a commercial wallpaper removing solution or a rented steamer to loosen the paper. If more than one layer of paper needs removing, a steamer is particularly helpful, says the Soap and Detergent Association.

After the paper is peeled off, and cracks and holes repaired and sanded, the wall should be washed with detergent or soap suds and rinsed to remove any remaining dirt or paste residue.

Formally Charge Murder Plot

MINEHEAD, England (AP) — Former Liberal Party leader Jeremy Thorpe was formally charged today in court with plotting to murder male model Norman Scott. Scott claims he and the British politician were lovers.

Visitors and reporters packed the tiny red-brick court house of this small western resort town as three magistrates began hearing the prosecution's case against Thorpe and three other men to decide if it is strong enough to put before a jury.

Thorpe, 49, led the Liberals for nine years and to their biggest election success since World War II. He was forced to resign after the scandal broke in May 1976.

The politician is the only one charged formally with incitement to murder. He and the three others are also charged with conspiring to murder Scott. Each one of the charges carries a maximum jail term of 10 years.

"Scott was a continuing danger to his (Thorpe's) reputation and career, a danger of which Mr. Thorpe was constantly reminded by Scott pestering him for help and talking of the relationship to others," said prosecutor Peter Taylor.

The prosecutor said Thorpe urged his friend, co-defendant David Holmes, 48, to kill Scott, 37. The attorney said this action led to the recruitment of an airline pilot named Andrew Gino Newton, who was to kill Scott for a promised fee of about $19,500.

The attorney said Newton drove Scott to the Devon moors in October 1975 and there produced a gun. He said Newton shot a dog Scott had brought along, but failed to shoot Scott. Newton was subsequently arrested and convicted in March 1976 of possessing a firearm with intent to endanger life, the attorney said.

The prosecutor said that after Newton was released from prison last year he was paid half the promised fee by one of the accused, carpet warehouse owner John Le Mesurier, 45.

Thorpe's friend Holmes knew Le Mesurier and through him met another of the accused, gambling machine dealer George Deakin, 35, whom the prosecutor said recruited Newton for the killing.

The committal hearing is expected to last two or three weeks.

Holmes, a wealthy banker and financial consultant who was deputy treasurer of the small, middle-of-the-road Liberal Party; night-club owner George Deakin, 35, and John Le Mesurier, 45, part owner of a carpet warehouse, are charged with conspiring with Thorpe.

All four have been free on bail of $10,000 each since they were charged on Aug. 4. They do not have to plead guilty or innocent or give evidence during this hearing, but their attorneys are expected to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses.

The proceedings are being held in Minehead, a sleepy town of 8,000 people in southwest England, because the alleged conspiracy was hatched in the neighborhood.

Thorpe was leader of the Liberals from 1967 until May 10, 1976, when he was pressured into resigning after the first allegations of the Scott scandal began to emerge.

He led the Liberals to their biggest electoral success since World War II in the general election of Feb. 28, 1974, when they won 14 of the 635 seats in the House of Commons.

Holmes was a friend of Thorpe at Oxford University, was best man at his first wedding in 1968 and is godfather to his son Rupert.

Thorpe has repeatedly denied that he had a homosexual relationship with Scott, who will be among at least 10 prosecution witnesses at the committal proceedings. Another will be Peter Bessell, 57, a former Liberal member of Commons who now lives in Oceanside, Calif. He was flown to England last week to testify after being promised immunity from prosecution.

An oddity of the committal proceedings is that Britons likely will be told next to nothing of what is said in the Minehead courtroom while the rest of the world can be fully informed. To prevent potential jurors from becoming prejudiced, only names, addresses and a brief outline of charges in such proceedings can be published in Britain while they are going on unless at least one of the accused requests the restriction be lifted. The law does not apply to news media outside Britain.

Steelmaking Is More Complex

By WILLIAM P. MOORE
ECORSE, Mich. (UPI) — Steelmaking, one of civilization's most basic industries, has come a long way from the blacksmith's shop.

The shaping of molten steel has become a technologically sophisticated process, far different from the crude methods employed by colonial Americans forming tools and horseshoes.

National Steel Corp.'s Great Lakes Division, a major supplier to the nation's automotive industry, boasts a $60 million continuous slab caster in its suburban Detroit plant.

The 8-story-high caster, capable of turning out 100,000 tons per month of the widest steel slabs in common production, is no simple machine.

Starting from the top, a massive ladle of red hot molten steel is poured into a tundish, a sort of holding tank which can regulate the flow of the molten stream into the continuous caster's 76 feet of water-cooled rollers.

The steel runs downhill through the rollers which begin to cool the metal and form it into flat slabs.

The slabs, still red hot, emerge from the rollers at ground level at a rate of 45 inches, or 5½ tons, per minute.

The continuous slab, 104 inches wide and 9½ inches thick, is then cut by a hot torch into 30-foot segments, which are lowered into tanks and cooled to 180 degrees Fahrenheit.

Then they are processed further to meet client specifications, or transferred to storage and inspection areas.

The procedure is not only faster, but more efficient.

"We are all convinced at this point that it is the only way to make steel," explained an enthusiastic Robert D. McBride, Great Lakes Division president.

He said the continuous caster requires an estimated 2½ million BTUs less energy per ton, and makes better use of the 25 persons, many of them women, assigned to each 8-hour shift. McBride estimates 20 percent more tonnage is turned out per man hour.

Costs were further cut by installing the state-of-the-art machine in a vintage 1930s open hearth building at the Ecorse facility, with only minor modifications.

Howard Love, firm president, shared McBride's enthusiasm.

"The levels we are producing today are really extraordinary six months after we've brought it on line," he said.

And as one hard-hatted worker said to George A. Stinson, chairman of the second largest domestic steelmaker, on the day the caster was first brought into production:

"Mr. Stinson, this just goes to show what you can buy these days for $60 million."

Suggest Japanese Can Provide Tips On Crime

By KAZUO MIKAMI
NEW YORK (UPI) — There are proportionately 10 times the number murders in the United States as there are in Japan, 13 times the number of rapes, 208 times the robberies. Why?

David H. Bayley, a University of Denver professor who is a staff consultant to the National Commission on the Prevention of Violence, was one of several experts who sought to answer the question at a recent meeting of Japanese and U.S. police officials here.

While Americans tend to get their backs up when confronted by authority, the Japanese are more likely, as the adage goes, to "bend like a willow." Or, as Bayley put it, "In Japan, the criminal justice system is efficient because the people obey and respect law and authority."

Bayley cited key statistics. Last year, the FBI reported the violent crime rate in the United States was 466.6 per 100,000 inhabitants, up from 160.9 in 1960. In Japan, it was 65.7, down from 188.8 in 1960, according to Japan's National Police Agency.

"The most remarkable aspect is the close relationship between the Japanese police and the general citizenry," said

Patrick V. Murphy, president of the Police Foundation, a non-profit body with headquarters in Washington.

"The Japanese seem to respect the police, to call on them frequently for assistance, and to aid them in preventing crime and investigating the incidents which do occur."

By contrast, Americans are generally unwilling to cooperate with the police, Murphy said. He cited three studies which, he said, demonstrate there must be better police-citizen cooperation in the U.S. if the police are to accomplish their mission.

— A National Victimization Survey showed three out of four U.S. crimes are not even reported to the police.

— A response time study in Kansas City concluded that, no matter how fast police respond to a crime report, delays in calling them generally make immediate apprehension of a suspect impossible.

— A Rand Corp. study of the investigative process found that when cases are solved, it is most often because a citizen tells the police who did it.

Murphy had some ideas on how U.S. police might make use of Japanese police methods.

Japanese police, he said, are deployed to fixed, small geographic areas. They have a small "patch" to be responsible for and a specific group of people to serve.

"Though each American officer has ten times more area to cover than a Japanese counterpart," he said, "there is no reason why fixed posts, manned by officers on foot, cannot serve densely populated urban areas with high levels of crime."

Japanese police officers are required to survey their community periodically, contacting each home, noting who lives there, learning neighborhood problems, and giving advice on self-protection measures.

"An early (Police) Foundation experiment in San Diego," Murphy noted, "found that training patrol officers to prepare written reports describing their beats, the people who live there, the problems they face and the steps which they plan to take as police officers to address those problems, gave them a greater awareness of their beats and a greater appreciation of the importance of community interaction."

Japanese police use neighborhood groups and citizen organizations as major forces in crime prevention. Half a million homes in Tokyo serve as distribution centers for crime prevention literature.

"Though much attention is being given to citizen-based programs in the United States," Murphy said, "the police often look upon them with suspicion, fearing that they represent vigilante-ism on the one hand or fleeting interest which will evaporate without accomplishing anything on the other."

Murphy said he isn't sure whether U.S. police can be brought to foster such urban community efforts. But he suggested it would be worthwhile to find out.

Two Named To 'Yieldmasters'

Ernest Hooks of Winterville and Robert Gary Stocks of Greenville were recently named members of the DeKalb Yieldmasters Club for producing some of the top Pitt County corn yields.

Paul McKown of Virginia Beach, Va., DeKalb district sales manager, announced Hooks and Stocks as members.

Yields were mechanically harvested without gleaning from a measured acre or more, computed to No. 2 corn and calculated on a 15.5 percent moisture basis in the presence of impartial witnesses.

Math Contest Slated May 24

Junior and senior high school students in Pitt County will have the opportunity to participate in the first annual North Carolina High School Mathematics Contest May 24.

The mathematics division of the Department of Public Instruction and the North Carolina Council of Teachers of Mathematics are jointly sponsoring the contest.

The state contest is being planned around nine regional contests that will be held across the state during the 1978-79 school year. These contests will culminate in the state competition.

East Carolina University will be used as one of the test sites, with John Daniels serving as regional chairperson.

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠ J72 ♥ 854 ♦ K952 ♠ Q84
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass 1 ♦ Dbl. Pass
1 ♦ Pass 2 ♦ Pass

What action do you take?
A.—Partner's bid is not forcing, but it is the nearest thing to it. He has made a takeout double and then jumped in his own suit despite the fact that you have promised very little. While we are not here to contend that you have a good hand, you do have a smattering of values and you should give partner a chance. We suggest you show your club stopper by bidding two no trump.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠ AK7 ♥ 95 ♦ 872 ♠ QJ983
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 2 ♦ Pass
2 ♥ Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—Two spades. There are those who might claim that your trump support is too good for a mere preference. We are not among them. Bear in mind that you have already shown your ace-king of spades in the values you hold for your two-over-one response of two clubs. While it is pleasant to have those cards in partner's suit, they still represent values you have already shown, and a simple preference does your hand full justice.

Q.3—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠ 1063 ♥ 976 ♦ AJ872 ♠ K5
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♦ 2 ♥ ?
What action do you take?

A.—Only two alternatives suggest themselves—a raise to two spades or a pass. One thing is certain: you do not have the values for a bid of three diamonds, which would create a forcing-to-game situation. It is a close decision, but we feel that you have just too much to pass. Our choice is a raise to two spades.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠ 1076 ♥ A8 ♦ Q72 ♠ KJ1065
The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
1 ♥ Pass 2 ♥ 2 ♦
Pass ?
What action do you take?

A.—To bid freely at the two-level, vulnerable, partner must have a reasonably good hand and strong suit. You have fair values, and game is definitely a possibility. The obvious way to tell partner of this is to raise to three spades. Take a demerit if you choose to bid three clubs—that is not forcing, so partner might pass. And even if he does rebid three spades, you won't know what to do.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠ KJ92 ♥ Q8542 ♦ A107 ♠ A
The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
1 ♥ Pass Pass 1 ♦
Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—You know partner does not have much—he elected to balance with a simple overall rather than make a takeout double. Nevertheless, your hand is worth 17 points in support of spades, so we would venture four spades. A jump to three spades would be putting too much strain on partner.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠ 74 ♥ K1082 ♦ J103 ♠ KJ85
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 1 NT Pass
2 ♥ Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—It is a close decision, and we would not blame you much if you decided to pass. However, your hand is worth 10 points at a heart contract, so we feel it is just strong enough for a raise to three hearts—game cannot be ruled out altogether.

Q.7—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠ A52 ♥ Q93 ♦ A10874 ♠ K6
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ 1 ♠ 2 ♥ 2 ♠
Pass Pass 4 ♥ Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—Your hand has improved dramatically in value. Despite the fact that you showed a minimum opening bid by passing at your second turn, partner chose a jump rebid. A mere preference now won't do justice to your holding—every card is working and your king of clubs and queen of hearts should be promoted in value. You should either cue-bid four spades or jump to five hearts, and we have a slight preference for the former since partner might have a doubleton spade and be afraid of slam because of that.

Q.8—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠ KQ8742 ♥ AK73 ♦ Q6 ♠ 8
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 2 ♠ Pass
2 ♠ Pass 3 ♦ Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—Now is the time to introduce your second major—not because you expect to find support in partner's hand (the bidding to this point makes that unlikely), but to enable him to clarify his holding. If partner now bids three spades, we would choose to play in a suit and would consider a forward-going move. If partner were to bid three no trump, we would pass, secure in the knowledge that it must play better from his side.

'Star Trek' Is One TV Series Ignoring Death

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Star Trek" must be the only television series that died and went to heaven.

Old series are supposed to die a quiet death. Yet, nine years after NBC canceled "Star Trek," the space adventure is stronger than it ever was during its three years on the network.

It's almost impossible to avoid "Star Trek" on the tube. The original 79 episodes air on 160 American stations and in 51 foreign countries. "Star Trek" merchandise is a hot item, and up to 10,000 people rush to "Trekkie" conventions. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration named its space shuttle after the Starship Enterprise. The special effects model of the Enterprise is on display at the Smithsonian Institution.

Now comes the $20 million "Star Trek" movie, in production with the original cast from the TV series. It costs more more than all 79 episodes.

William Shatner, who plays Capt. James Kirk, says, "I think we will have a first class movie. It's so far ahead of the series. It's a galactic jump."

Leonard Nimoy, in his Vulcan makeup, says, "Mr. Spock is essentially the same person, but with different postures and attitudes because of the passage of time. So rather than hide the fact, we try to use it."

A visit to the "Star Trek" set is like stepping into a science fiction Disneyland. Special passes are required for the guarded set — One man was convicted recently of stealing his plans and selling copies for $75 each.

For the movie, the Enterprise has been remodeled. The new ship makes the TV version look like a Crackerjack prize. The bridge is completely computerized, and display screens show special tapes and films from NASA and other scientific agencies.

"They never showed Earth in the 23rd century on the series. The script has a sequence

Bobby Vinton Is Entitled To Better Material For Special

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Leave us say right now singer Bobby Vinton is an appealing entertainer and a man of warmth and good will, even though he did once cut an awful tune called "Blue Velvet."

Alas, tonight he's got a CBS special "Bobby Vinton's Rock 'n' Rollers," that may do what I tried to do in the 1950s — forever end the three-chord rock 'n' roll tunes that so befuddled the 1950s.

His guests are Penny "Laverne and Shirley" Marshall, who has been on every known special this season; Erik Estrada of "Chips"; Stockard Channing of "Grease"; and Fabian of "Way, Way Back."

Also participating are Eve Arden and Gale Gordon, skilled troupers best known from the old "Our Miss Brooks" series and wasted here in skits limper than a seersucker suit in a Louisiana summer.

The show's opening features roller skating, which I guess accounts for the "Roller" in the show's title. Guys in sequined black pants roll about with the girls. It is quite gaudy.

The music has a mambo beat, but then this is not the Age of Logic.

Estrada checks in to hang around a 1953 Ford, sing about being a wanderer and warn no girl is gonna tie him down. He also exposes his sternum, causing young girls in the audience to scream.

I don't know why they carry on so, there is nothing on the sternum... not even a heart-shaped tattoo or the simple legend, "Please leave three quarts." But they do scream.

There's also a spoof of beach-blanket movies with a preview of "The Beast of Bikini Beach." The beast proves to be a giant oyster. Were I his attorney I'd advise him to clam up if asked about this skit.

Vinton does a fair turn in reprising "There, I've Said It Again." Then comes Fabian, who has eschewed the old greasy for the new dry look. He warbles about "takin' some chick to the picture show."

He comes dangerously close several times to being on key, a threat also posed earlier by Estrada. Only Vinton and Miss Channing — surprising, she's not bad — actually manage the feat.

If you stay alert, you'll also see a skit in which everyone crowds into a fallout shelter, the star, the co-stars, a basketball player, some pompom girls and even a pregnant cat.

It is pretty dim stuff and Vinton deserves better material. He also should stop dealing with pop music's past and have a go at current material because he's got the ability to do it.

I think Gordon sounds the only right note when, playing an old malt shop proprietor in one sketch, he fumes: "I hate rock and roll. I'm going to the dentist where I can enjoy myself."

We end on an upbeat note: The Public Broadcasting Service is rerunning "Affair in the Air" on public TV next Sunday. Made by WHA-TV, Madison, Wis., it's a brilliant study of flying and fliers.

If you love aviation, "Affair" is must-see viewing. As is customary, check local listings to see when it's on in your town. If it isn't, call up the local public TV station and demand to know why.

N.C. Symphony Patrons At Ball

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Patrons of the North Carolina Symphony donated their finest Saturday night for the $100-percouple annual North Carolina Symphony Ball, one of the orchestra's major fund-raising events.

But if it turns out like it did last year, the symphony will spend more money putting on the ball than it makes from it.

Symphony officials say the most they've ever raised from a ball in its 17-year-history was $10,000. Some years the expenses connected with the ball are greater than the net amount raised for the symphony.

Last year, for example, the expenses totaled $12,000, according to Jim Van Laan, director of public relations for the symphony. That ball netted about $5,000 for the symphony.

The expenses for Saturday night's party have not been calculated yet. For the $100 ticket, a couple got a buffet dinner featuring roast prime rib and wine, and dancing under flowers flown in from California.

Even if the expenses do exceed the donations, the ball will not be considered a failure. It is not supposed to be the money maker. One ball committee member said it just kicks off the donating.

"The point is the charity begins after the ball ends," he said. "This event just brings together some of the symphony's biggest supporters. It's later they will make the real donations that are so important."

The amount raised by the ball is a small percentage of the symphony's budget, which this year will total between $2.1 and $2.2 million. Its largest source of funding is from the General Assembly, which appropriated $978,000 to the orchestra this year. Other sources of income are ticket sales, contributions and fundraising projects.

Sees Bigamy As Likely Answer

NEW YORK (AP) — Twice-divorced actor Jon Voight says "if you're going to have marriage, you might as well have bigamy."

"Then anybody can marry anybody they fall in love with and people won't get hurt because divorce today is supposed to mean the end of love, which is ridiculous," Voight, 40, said in the current issue of Ladies Home Journal.

He added that he still loved one of his former wives, model Marcheline Bertrand, whom he calls "a terrific lady, and a great mommy." Miss Bertrand has custody of two children born while she was married to Voight, known for his movie roles in "Midnight Cowboy" and "Coming Home."

Updating Boys Town Statue

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — "He's not heavy. Father, he's m'brother..."

Throughout the years, the words have become firmly linked with Boys Town.

Until recently, the message the words conveyed was depicted in stone outside the Boys Town visitor center here. A statue showed a boy carrying his little brother piggyback.

The work, created in about 1948 by Ira Correll, was fashioned from soft stone, vulnerable to the elements. This year it was taken inside and a new bronze sculpture offering a modernized version of the two boys was created by Enzo Plazzotta, an Italian artist.

Five castings have been made. They will be placed at various Boys Town-related places, including Boys Town centers in Stanford University in Palo Alto, Calif., and Catholic University in Washington, D.C.

Chavez Ready For New Fight

By ROGER GILLOTT
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cesar Chavez, whose United Farm Workers fought for more than a decade to unionize California's lush fields, says the union is ready to move into other states and other fights.

"We still feel we are a movement, not just a union," said the UFW leader. "But we're reevaluating...changing our priorities. We can't live in the late '70s with concepts from the mid-'60s."

In the 9½ months since ending a worldwide boycott of California lettuce, table grapes and wines, the union has grown to an estimated 100,000 members. Computerized its headquarters, founded a school to train its staff and made major gains in establishing centralized health and pension plans — a breakthrough for migrants who seldom have the same employer for more than a few months.

"We are finishing our work in California," Chavez's chief aide, Marc Grossman, said in a telephone interview from the UFW headquarters at a converted tuberculosis sanitarium in the Tehachapi Mountains 120 miles north of here in Kern County. "Then — maybe sooner than people think — we will be able to concentrate on other states where we are needed."

The union is now active in Arizona, Florida, Texas and Washington state. But those efforts are minor compared to the push in California, where the union three years ago was able to secure passage of the Agricultural Labor Relations Act. That act, which followed more than a decade of turmoil in the fields, for the first time brought rule of law and the ballot box into the struggle between agricultural unions and growers.

Since no other state has a law similar to the ALRA, Grossman said, "It will be a long and difficult struggle elsewhere. We realize we may have to repeat the California experience of strikes, boycotts and public education. But we will go, anyway."

The union's leaders hope to repeat the success they've had in California, where the UFW has won more than 76 percent of its union representation elections — far higher than the 46 percent average for other unions in the nation.

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

With the arrival of "Photography Annual 1979" comes the realization that 1978 is on its way out, that it's time to work on our personal photographic holiday cards and finish up this year's vacation albums, negative files and pictures.

That must all be tidied up before starting afresh on the clean, blank pages of the New Year.

With that good resolution to placate consciences, the chores can be put aside long enough to browse through the 17 portfolios in the Annual gathered by the editors of Popular Photography for the Ziff-Davis publication.

The issue spans a diverse range of viewpoints, from a six-year study of carnival personalities to a spiritual conception of the female form, and from the pick of the year's press pictures to the bizarre trend in color pictures.

Editorial director Arthur Goldsmith, who worked on his first Photography Annual in 1952, compared it with the latest publication.

"How much photography has changed!" he said. "...and how little things have changed!"

In 1952, photography was influenced strongly by pictorialists, photographers who went in for "art for art's sake," beautiful pictures that followed the rules of good paintings. The annual featured mostly strong individual pictures.

In 1978, photography is influenced greatly by a different kind of "art for art's sake" photography, much of it originating from contemporary academic teachers with emphasis on abstract expressionism and schools of minimalists and conceptualists. Their work is said to be fresh, different and innovative. Now only portfolios are shown, no individual pictures.

Personally speaking, perhaps I'm a bit old-fashioned.

Much of the new expressionism leaves me bewildered and searching for a hidden message. The subject matter often seems pointless and insignificant, the cropping is cruel in the way heads, limbs and bodies are cut off at the edges and finally, why they are printed is another mystery.

There's some of it in "Photography Annual 1979," but fortunately it's at a minimum. I find no pleasure, message, or significance in a view of a cropped-off propane tank with leaf shadows, or of a woman's back with her head cut off and cropped at the waist to show only protruding shoulder blades.

Now listen to the photographer's explanation when photographing such subjects: "Somewhere en route from the real to the surreal, a mindless, wordless state takes over that connects me to my creative center, and the photographic medium becomes a vehicle for intuitive response, allowing insight past the surface of things."

I looked again at the round, spotted blob (propane tank) and the shoulder blades and I fail to see the insight or the intuitive response. But it must be my failure as a viewer, not hers. After all, she did get them published.

I did respond, however, to Randal Levenson, who has been photographing carnivals for the past six years. He became friends with the sideshow people and photographed them with respect and dignity. When not working in carnivals, he taught the fine art of platinum printing at seminars in Harvard, McGill University, the University of Toronto and other schools.

Levenson is an example of many photographers pursuing documentary work aided by grants from corporations and institutions in the hope that their efforts eventually will be published as a book.

Mary Lloyd Estrin is a photographer with a personal commitment, but without a grant.

She spent two years photographing people in her home town of Lake Forest, a Chicago suburb. She started the project for a photography course while a student at the Illinois Institute of Technology. Now living in California, she is finishing the documentary project for publication this coming spring by the New York Graphic Society. Her people in their home surroundings are believable, authentic and neighborly as we visit with them visually.

Another portfolio that brought a pleasurable response was by Harold Feinstein, who photographs nature subjects in his Vermont summer home and who teaches workshops when he returns to his New York City studio loft. His studies of plants were made while lying on his back and holding the objects against the sky to get a beautiful backlit effect.

Still another enjoyable highlight of the Annual is the portfolio of British faces by Jurgen Schadeberg, a London-based photojournalist and teacher. All of them are full-face portraits in which the head is isolated by a black cloth so that nothing else shows. The results make a fascinating composite portrait of the people in a small English village from babies to adults.

For "Best of the U.S. Press," the editors have selected a dozen prize-winning pictures from the most important photojournalism competition held annually by the National Press Photographers Association and the University of Missouri School of Jour-

MOSCOW (UPI) — Ten quiet people are creating a headache for U.S. and Soviet authorities in Moscow.

They don't do much of anything. Mostly they sit, hands between their knees, and talk in undertones in a cramped, dark basement flat in the U.S. embassy. They read the Bible and pray. Occasionally they go for short walks in the embassy courtyard.

But already they have come to the attention of President Carter. They are squatters. Seven have been in the embassy since June 27 when they rushed past two Soviet militiamen guarding the gates.

More than four months later they still refuse to budge until they are given permission to emigrate to the United States.

The other three, a 34-year-old Armenian woman and her two young sons, joined them Aug. 10.

Among the foreign community and the few Russians in the know, the 10 are referred to as "the Pentecostalsists," but only the first seven actually belong to that fundamentalist religious sect.

"We said when we first came to the embassy that we will not leave until the Soviet government gives us permission to go to the United States," Pyotr Vashchenko, the only adult male and the group's leader said in an interview. "After more than a quarter of a year, we have not changed our minds. The Pentecostalsists said there are two main reasons why they want to leave the Soviet Union: freedom to practice their faith and their refusal to bear arms."

There are an estimated 400,000 Pentecostalsists in the Soviet Union. They periodically complain because Soviet law forbids the religious education of children. The refusal of military service has meant prison and labor camp sentences.

Vashchenko has a 20-year-old son, Alexander, serving time now. "We aren't necessary to the Soviet government, so why don't they let us go?" Vashchenko says.

The Pentecostalsists practice a religion brought to this country in 1918 by a Russian-born American emissary, Efrem Yoronoyev.

Known as Charismatics in the West, they base their faith on Chapter Two of the New Testament Book of the Acts of the Apostles, which describes the first encounter with the Holy Spirit during Pentecost.

"And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them. And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance."

Pentecostal initiation ceremonies still include "speaking in tongues." The Armenian woman, Elisa Ovsepyan, has less complex reasons for wanting to emigrate — she wants to join her 80-year-old mother, Rosa Ovsepyan, in Los Angeles.

and 38-year-old sister, Azatouhie Moskovyan, in Los Angeles.

Mrs. Ovsepyan's 5-year-old son Ashtot, cued by his mother, approaches a visiting reporter and says timidly, "Please help me. I want to see my grandmother."

The Pentecostalsists include Vashchenko, his 49-year-old wife Avgusta, and daughters Lidia, 27, Liubov, 26, and Lilia, 21.

The other two are Maria Chmykhalova, 56, a family friend, and her 17-year-old son Timofei.

They made the long train journey to Moscow from the Siberian mining town of Chernogorsk when it became clear that the Soviet authorities would not accept their application to emigrate. They have a formal invitation from other Pentecostalsists in the United States and first filed in 1975.

With them the Vashchenkos also brought their 17-year-old son, Ioan, but he failed to make it past the Soviet militiamen guarding the embassy gate. He was dragged away, beaten and escorted back to Chernogorsk, where his parents have heard no word from him, according to his mother.

The 10 squatters began their vigil on the yellow plastic couches of the embassy's consular lobby, quietly talking, reading embassy magazines, watching people come and go and praying at night.

But on Aug. 28, they moved to a one-room basement flat normally reserved for arriving diplomats and their families. "It gets them out from under the public eye," one diplomat said.

The embassy claims the squatters are only harming their own cause by refusing to move, since U.S. officials believe the Soviet government will not bend to such pressure but only harden its opposition to their demands.

American officials are also worried that the squatters could set a dangerous precedent, raising nightmare visions of U.S. embassies here and elsewhere in Eastern Europe turning into refugee transit camps for protesters.

Each day American consular officers try to persuade the squatters to leave. Ambassador Malcolm Toon has visited them to express official American concern over their protest.

But, anxious to safeguard its image of protector of human rights, the U.S. government has also said it will not force them to leave. Some embassy personnel take turns bringing them food.

Asked at a Washington news conference about a rumored move to eject the squatters, President Carter said, "We have provided them a place to stay, we provided them a room to live in, even though this is not a residence with normal quarters for them... I have not directed the embassy to discharge them from the embassy, no."

The embassy says anyone can speak to them in the courtyard and will make the arrangements.

Visits to their apartment, though, are banned for what the embassy calls "reasons of their own security and peace of mind."

In fact the ban appears to be an extension of the operation of "getting them out from under the public eye," and there are fewer and fewer visitors as the squatters' protest drags on.

One reporter who, unaware of the ban, went to visit the squatters in their flat saw that the 10 people of mixed age and sex are living in a warm but poorly lit room of about 15 feet by 20 feet.

There was a large refrigerator, a sink, a wardrobe and a stove, but there were only two beds.

"We take turns sleeping on the floor," said Mrs. Ovsepyan, who is still wearing the dark yellow, flowery dress she had when she moved into the embassy.

"But we have no complaints about the room, the food or about anything. We're better off here than out there and we're staying until we can go to the United States."

And so the squatters stay, until they die if necessary they say, and they show no sign of losing heart.

But since the move to the basement flat, they have complained that the embassy is trying to isolate them and they have smuggled out letters to the United States saying that only an American Lutheran minister, interpreter and two consular officials can have access to them.

Their Problem

The Skipper Is A Woman

CLEARWATER BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Men do the most fishing, but women catch the most fish, says Rosalie Mulder.

And it has nothing to do with skill, she says. It's because the women — and children too — follow instructions better.

Mrs. Mulder is the skipper of a charter fishing boat. For the past seven years she has been taking groups out into Gulf waters on daily fishing excursions.

"In my peak years when the fish were running, I made 300 trips," Mrs. Mulder says. "Today you have a lot of private boats that have just as good equipment as charter boats do."

"Five years ago, you could catch a decent amount of fish. Ten years ago, you didn't have to worry at all. But today, fishing is getting very hard and you have to keep up with the latest equipment to stop right over where they are."

She captains a 40-foot twin-engine craft equipped with sophisticated gear including a depth recorder and fish finder, and a scope that scans the waters below and flashes back pictures to show what fish are beneath the vessel.

She fishes the offshore waters between Cedar Key and Sarasota, taking groups of six on a full day excursion for $225 or a half day for $150.

The divorced mother of four grown children had been a secretary for years when she decided she wanted to get away from the business world.

She had always liked fishing. "I went fishing every available moment, even in the middle of the night. I became fanatical. It was my thing," she says.

She was on an outing with friends when a charter boat crew caught her attention. She left a note for the skipper, Ernie Berger, asking for a job and was hired a few days later. Mrs. Mulder started out as Berger's first mate and 18 months later began studying to get her own charter license.

She found the business was fiercely competitive. But it's worth it, she says. "Your mind rests when you are out there. There really is nothing any better for you. It's wonderful therapy."

Richard Darnell Davis, Watauga Avenue, driving under the influence, reckless driving, voluntary dismissal.

Ronald Joseph Mills, Courtney Square, trespass, prayer for judgment continued upon payment of cost.

Lee Becton, Lakeview Terrace, driving under the influence 2nd offense, 90 days jail suspended on payment of $200 and cost; driving while license revoked, 90 days jail suspended on payment of $200 and cost.

Consider The Gift Of Yule Ornaments

HANCOCK, N.H. (UPI) — A small red brick factory with 35 employees is helping change the way millions of Americans trim their Christmas trees.

The change being pushed by Mill Falls Studio is from 15 cent a piece shiny colored glass balls to $4.50 a piece give-aways gift balls bearing designs ranging from Currier & Ives scenes to Bing Crosby's face in a Santa Claus hat.

Production manager Ken Salter says the ornament industry estimates 50 to 60 million people, or one American in four, have bought such ornaments in the past few years.

"It's not a piece of junk, it's a beautiful thing in a beautiful box, and every year you hang it on the tree and think of the person who gave it to you," he said.

Mill Falls and its parent companies whipped out 2.5 million decorated balls this year, including 150,000 copies of a "limited edition" ornament in frosty white with a picture of Bing Crosby in his "White Christmas" character.

The Bing Crosby ornament, mounted under a glass dome, sells for $10, with part of the proceeds going to the Crosby charitable foundation. It's the first of what Mill Falls founder Judy Peterson plans as an annual series of limited edition collectors' ornaments.

Mrs. Peterson got into the ornament business as a spin-off of her husband's production of pressure-sensitive labels, the ones that stick without licking. The technology used to print such labels was adapted to printing plastic bands which are placed over a plain glass or styrofoam ornament, then heatshrunk to fit.

The shrinking is tricky — the least little imperfection and the ball breaks, the band bubbles, or it goes on crooked. Salter credits much of the firm's financial success to his production line device which guarantees the bands will go on straight every time.

The printing is tricky, too. A computer has to "pre-distort" the design, so that it looks wrong when the flat band is printed, but it's in proportion when the band is heat-shrunk and the top and bottom become smaller than the middle.

"We originally went into the ornament business because it's an extension of the printing process," Mrs. Peterson said. The company made ornaments for fund-raising groups like the disabled American Veterans, then began production for commercial firms.

Mrs. Peterson set up Mill Falls studio and began producing her own designer ornaments this year because she was unhappy printing balls for other companies, some with famous names, which she felt weren't being creative enough.

"Christmas is so commercialized. We're taking the ornament to present some of the art and culture of today," she said. "We're using something which is a tradition itself to convey Christmas past and Christmas present."

Pinching Penny Tips

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pinching pennies on your food budget takes many forms.

If you know the economics of tea and coffee, for example, you know an 8-ounce jar of instant or freeze-dried coffee yields 120 six-ounce cups of beverage — or as much as two pounds of fresh roasted coffee; and tea bags and instant teas may cost half again or twice as much as loose tea leaves in terms of brewed beverage.

These tips are from the Washington-based Food Marketing Institute, whose 900 member companies operate about 24,000 stores nationwide. Many of those stores currently offer free brochures with these and additional tips on saving money at supermarkets.

For example: —Ground beef stretched with soy protein usually is cheaper if supermarkets blend it than if you do, because they buy in wholesale quantities.

—Pancake and waffle mixes and many frosting, cake and pudding mixes are often less expensive than homemade; but most canned and frozen entrees or dinners cost more than made-from-scratch.

—Adding your own fruit to dry cereal for babies costs less than premixed varieties.

—But babies up to 18 months usually need the extra iron of infant cereals. So, don't switch your child to regular cereal without first checking with his or her pediatrician.

SPASSPURN LONDON (AP) — John Nunn, secretary of the British Spas Association, has turned down advice from the British Tourist Authority on how to revive ailing "healing waters" resorts.

The authority suggested the resorts install casinos and encourage nude sunbathing.

'Vantage. I just won't compromise on taste.'

"I'm willing to make some concessions, but taste isn't one of them. Even though I've heard the tar stories, I still want a cigarette with good taste."

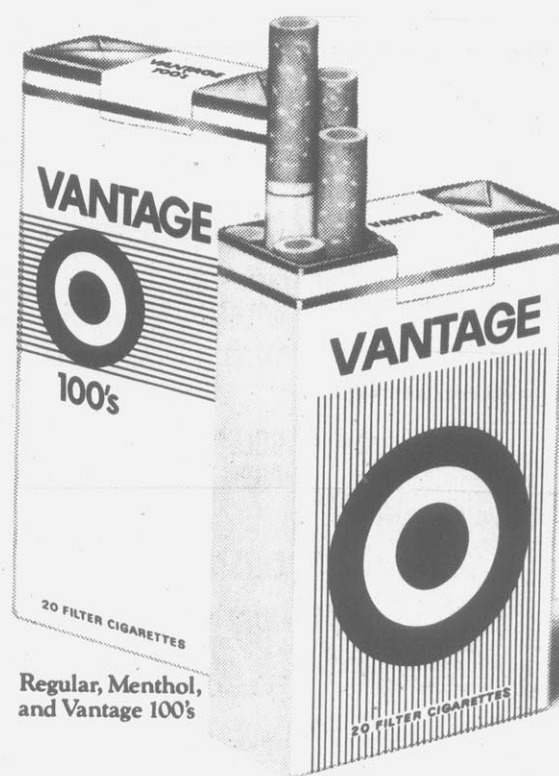

"That's why I'm glad I switched to Vantage."

"With Vantage, I get the taste I smoked for in the first place. And that wasn't easy to find in a low tar."

"For me, Vantage is the best tasting low tar cigarette there is."
