Carter To Attend 4-Nation Summit In The Caribbean

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter will attend a four-nation summit meeting next month on the Caribbean island of Guadalupe to discuss arms limitations and other issues, it was announced today. Carter said the Jan. 5-6 meeting on the French island, called by French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, will be "a somewhat social affair, but we'll also be discussing issues and meeting privately to discuss questions that affect us all."

time," he said. The four leaders plan to meet in extraordinary privacy, each accompanied by only one assistant. Carter is taking his national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski. No communique is planned, and White House press secretary Jody Powell said it was uncertain whether a press plane would be allowed to accompany Carter, as is usual on foreign and domestic trips. "Negotiations are under way," Powell said. The president met with the same three leaders at an economic summit in Bonn last July. The leaders of Canada, Italy and Japan also attended that session but were not invited to the Guadalupe meeting. Carter said the decision to hold the January meeting was made in Bonn. "We wanted to meet in an unstructured way," he said, recalling that similar, private sessions held in Germany last summer were very helpful. Carter's predecessor, President Gerald R. Ford, attended an economic summit meeting held on Martinique, the other major French island in the Caribbean, in December 1974.

Wholesale Prices Leaped 0.8 Percent In November

By MICHAEL DOAN Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) - Wholesale prices leaped by 0.8 percent in November as the cost of gasoline, tires and alcoholic beverages posted big increases while the advance of food prices slowed, the Labor Department said today.

Food prices rose by 0.6 percent, a much slower rate than in previous months, because of declines in prices of meat, fruit and rice. The 0.8 percent wholesale price increase, if it continued all year, means an annual rate of about 10 percent, which is about the average this year for the cost of living. The November rise followed consecutive increases of 0.9 percent in September and October. The wholesale price figures are important because they usually influence retail price changes within a few months. The November report covered the first full month since President Carter announced his anti-inflation program Oct. 24. However, the administration says it may take six months for results of the program to be reflected in prices. While food prices were easing, the wholesale price of gasoline rose 1.6 percent in November and was 5.7 percent higher than in August. Prices of kerosene, fuel oil and other petroleum products also rose sharply, an indication these costs probably will be passed along to consumers by winter. On Wednesday, Alfred Kahn, chairman of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, acknowledged there is "tension between the inflation problem" and spiraling energy costs, but he said prices may have to rise to assure adequate fuel supplies. The Labor Department report showed that food price increases were not as big at the early stages of processing as in the past three months. That might mean slower price increases in months to come. Food prices actually declined by 0.3 percent at the middleman's level and rose by 1.3 percent at the farm level, the smallest increase in three months. The department said prices declined for beef, veal and fresh fruit and increases were smaller for pork. Prices of fresh and dried vegetables, chicken, eggs and sugar were higher. Elsewhere, prices were higher for passenger cars, silverware, tires and tubes and alcoholic beverages. Prices also increased rapidly for sanitary health products and prescription and over-the-counter drugs. Capital equipment, which is used by businesses and farms to increase production, rose a sharp 1 percent in price. The Producer Price Index for Finished Goods, the main measure of wholesale prices, stood at 200.6. That meant the average wholesale product that cost $100 in the base period of 1967 cost $200.60 last month. The problem of rising energy costs has put the fight against inflation in a conflict with the need for more fuel. At a congressional hearing

Wednesday, Kahn said: "In the long run, I believe the government has to let the price of energy go up." He said the longer U.S. petroleum prices are held artificially low, the sharper will be the increase when controls are lifted. "There is no way I can resolve that dilemma, I can't find a panacea," he said. As support for his position - outlined before the congressional Joint Economic Committee - Kahn said he thinks government regulations are to blame for spot shortages of high-octane unleaded gasoline. But Kahn questioned the reality of the shortage and said he is asking for a federal study to clarify the question. Shell Oil Co. and AMOCO both are reporting shortages of that variety of gasoline, but neither company blames government regulations for the shortages and claims they are short-term. Shell says its shortage is the result of refinery problems and AMOCO says its shortage has arisen from trying to make up the Shell shortfall.

Both firms report adequate supplies of regular, premium and low-octane unleaded gasoline. In other inflation news, the Carter administration is claiming support from hundreds of cities for the voluntary guidelines as it continues its campaign against legislators and municipal officials who already have or still may vote themselves big pay boosts. The National League of Cities said 1,170 mayors, city managers and other officials signed letters promising "restraint in their tax and spending policies" to help stop inflation. The officials also said they would try to avoid giving contracts to companies violating Carter's voluntary standards. The administration has made its biggest anti-inflation attack this week on two state legislatures which voted themselves pay increases. Administration officials also sent telegrams to every legislature in the country asking them to hold down increases. Kahn said that increases approved by the Ohio and Illinois legislatures were outrageous and irresponsible. He appealed to members of the public to put pressure on lawmakers to keep increases down.

New Set Of By-Laws Voted At ECU Board Of Trustees' Meeting

By STUART SAVAGE Reflector Staff Writer

A new set of by-laws was adopted by the East Carolina University Board of Trustees at their meeting here yesterday afternoon - the first revision of the regulations since before the university joined other State schools in the University of North Carolina system under the Board of Governors. Major provisions of the new by-laws provide that no officer of the board may serve for more than four years in succession; establish a number of standing committees; provide for an executive committee composed of the board's chairman, vice-chairman, secretary, and two at-large members appointed by the chairman; and provides that coaches for the school's athletic teams be hired by the board after receiving recommendations from the Chancellor.

Dr. Thomas Brewer, Chancellor of East Carolina, reported to the board that the school's Athletic Council and Faculty Athletic Committee - one advising the Athletic Director and one advising the Chancellor - will be consolidated, creating a University Athletic Committee as an advisory committee to the Chancellor.

Brewer said the new body would include four appointments by the Chancellor, four appointments by the Faculty Senate, and three ex-officio members, the Student Government Association vice-president, the president of the Alumni Association, and the Pirate Club president.

The chairman of the new committee, according to Brewer, will be a faculty member who will serve as the school's National Collegiate Athletic Association representative.

Brewer indicated that the new athletic advisory group will report to the Chancellor, who in turn will report to the Trustees' standing committee on athletics.

In a report to the board, Brewer announced that Mrs. Doris Lamm, an administrative officer in the Chancellor's office, will become an administrative (Continued on page 10)

By CHARLIE SHERROD Staff Sergeant William N. Cherry, a Greenville man who was a young soldier at Schoefield Barracks in Hawaii on the fateful day of December 7, 1941, is hanging up his combat boots for the last time this December, 37 years after surviving the sneak attack by the Japanese on Hawaii.

When Cherry arrived in the island paradise in August of 1940, he had just finished a hurried training period. His arrival was part of the defense policy designed to counteract the powerful Japanese land and air forces that had the capability to strike strategic positions in the vital Central Pacific area.

"We were digging up one of the prettiest places on earth," Cherry recalls in telling how he and members of the 19th Infantry Company worked at fortifying the islands with barbed wire and trenches. To break the monotony of the hard work involved, Cherry said "we filled our free hours with contact sports. Our football team

I would like to inquire if there is a Fuller Brush representative in this area. E. B.

Hotline has checked on this several times over the years. The last time we checked there appeared to be none. If there is a representative in the Pitt-Martin-Greene area now, we'll be glad to report it in a future column.

HOTLINE FEEDBACK

"FANTASTICALLY WELL!"

The woodcutting for the needy held Saturday by Volunteer Greenville and the Greenville Jaycees went "fantastically well!", according to Nancy Harrington of Volunteer Greenville. An appeal for participation in this fourth annual event was published in the Hotline column last week.

"Everyone - about 20 Jaycees and about 15 others from the community - were out there at 8 o'clock and we'd delivered a load of wood to each of the 18 households on our list by 1 o'clock," Mrs. Harrington said. She praised the efforts of the Jaycees, head by Chet Emerson and Pres Keeton, woodcutting project chairmen, and of all the participants, many of whom brought trucks and other equipment.

"We all worked hard, but I believe we all felt promptly repaid," Mrs. Harrington went on, "by the grateful expressions of those to whom we took the wood. Several of the recipients said they just wouldn't have had any fuel without our gifts."

Bank Robbed

BATH, N.C. (AP) - A branch bank was robbed in this Beaufort County town today by two armed men, authorities said.

The Highway Patrol said an office of the Southern Bank and Trust Co. was held up by one man armed with a sawed-off shotgun and another carrying a small-caliber pistol.

Bank employees told police the two men left in a tan-and-black car, heading east on North Carolina 92. They said the car had a Belhaven city license plate.

There were no injuries. The amount of money taken has been tentatively reported as about $3,800.

EXCUSE ME, MA'AM, BUT THERE'S ONLY 14 MORE SHOPPING DAYS 'TIL CHRISTMAS!

For Some Women, It's 3-Purses

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

American handbag manufacturers and importers assume some women make up to three changes of purse a day. So the semi-annual spring fashions preview of the National Handbag Association in New York City emphasized four types: large multi-compartment purses for daytime use, medium-sized bags to carry when jogging, going to ballet or exercise classes or other fitness-oriented activities, tiny bags for evening wear and a series of zippered bags that expand from handbag to suitcase size, depending on the user's needs.

The little disco bag with long adjustable across-the-body straps is still a very strong trend, says association director Edward S. Levy.

But some of the newest and prettiest could leave a wearer black and blue, hitting against her hip as she dances. They are made of brightly painted wood.

Extra long straps are also showing up on daytime bags roomy enough for a working woman or a traveler toting her passport and other paraphernalia. By hanging the bag securely across her body, a wearer's hands are free to carry luggage, shopping bags and the like.

Lots of texture is evident in bags for day through evening: wicker, fishnet, quilting, woven straw and suede, to name a few.

"Macrame still is holding its own," Levy added.

Canvas, linen and duck are still important, sometimes plain, sometimes embroidered.

Totes are still strong, in a wide variety of shapes, sizes and patterns because, Levy said, women still carry both a purse and a tote by day.

Some shoe manufacturers are going into the handbag business, not with matched sets but with purses whose trim and sometimes color coordinates with shoes.

Andrew Geller showed plasticized cork bags with leather trim coordinated with cork-heeled leather shoes. David Evins and Caressa shoes also are in the bag business.

Among mass market shoemakers, Hush Puppies showed neat little suede bags coordinated with sandals and spectator sports footwear, including an envelope clutch with a convertible gold-colored over-arm strap.

Francine Ziff, a New York

resident buyer, said clutch bags are way up front now. "Last June, you couldn't sell them. Now everybody wants them. Discos and clutches took over out of the blue. It's like somebody pushing a button."

Miss Ziff is with a buying office that serves mostly moderately priced specialty chains in the Midwest and the Rocky Mountain West. Leather bags are still very much in evidence, but the prices are out of sight and still rising. "You'll have to be prepared to pay the price," Levy said, "because the government won't prevent the export of hides." He blamed supply and demand for the increases.

For any woman who is prepared to pay, one importer showed a reverse snobbism purse: a leather-lined plastic multi-compartmented envelope with convertible shoulder strap and a retail price of about $125.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Give me a home where the buffalo roam, where the deer and the antelope play, and... I'll show you my living room.

Sometimes, when I hallucinate, I recall what this house looked like when we saw the "model home." The carpet was celery green, the sofa was tan, there were glass tables dotting the room, shimmering. A tall tree grew in the corner, a copy of Forbes was on the coffee table, and a ceramic cat snoozed by the fireplace.

I looked around our living room last week. The carpet was a 9 x 12 kitty litter shag, the sofa looked like bucket seats, every table was laden with books, jackets, socks, the planter held a terminal piece of greenery and five flip tops, and bodies in various forms were draped over every available chair.

"This place is a dump!" I announced.

"It's not a dump," said one of the kids. "It looks lived in."

"You call this living? I'm ashamed to have anyone drop in. An insurance man came by the other night and looked at a rocker in front of the TV set and said, 'Oh, I see you're a collector of antiques. I saw one like this at an auction a few weeks ago. They wanted $800 for it. That should make you feel good. It was made in 1850. How old is yours?' I told him two months."

"You exaggerate," said my daughter. "I don't think this room looks so bad."

"Then how come the dog comes in to bury bones? Let all within the sound of my voice hear me well. Beginning today, there are going to be some new ground rules:

"First, feet must remain on the floor at all times.

"All books and personal items must be taken to the bedroom and deposited on the desk.

"No food or beverages or bare feet allowed. (I saw this once at Disneyland.)

MARINATED VEGETABLES
An Italian-style hors d'oeuvre that we find is always a big success.

- 1/2 cup water
- 1/2 cup olive oil
- 1-3rd cup cider vinegar
- 1 medium onion, minced
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 2 cups thinly sliced pared carrots
- 3 medium or large green peppers, seeded and cut into 1-inch squares
- 1 pound mushrooms (whole if small, halved if medium, quartered if large)
- 5-ounce jar roasted sweet red peppers, drained and cut in strips

In a large saucepan bring to a gentle boil the water, oil, vinegar, onion, garlic, salt, pepper, carrots and green peppers; cover and simmer for 5 minutes; add the mushrooms and basil and simmer, covered, for 3 minutes. Cool. Stir in the red peppers. Chill to allow flavors to blend, but bring to room temperature before serving on small plates with cocktail forks. Makes 1 1/4 to 1 1/2 quarts.

"No rearranging furniture. The management likes it this way."

"FAA regulations state that all luggage must fit under a seat and that the aisles must be cleared at all times."

For the last couple of days the living room has had all the personality of a recovery room... no candy wrappers, no empty cans, no notebooks, sweaters or shoes in the middle of the floor. In fact, no people.

Then I realized everyone was gathered in one of the bedrooms. I opened the door and it looked like a spring tornado.

I closed it softly. It was like spraying the house for cockroaches. Unless you do the whole house, you might as well forget it.

Culinary Books Are Bargains

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Four excellent culinary books have been published recently, at affordable prices, in glossy soft cover.

One is a reprint of an expensive hardcover edition, the others are new offerings.

"La Technique" by Jacques Pepin (Pocket Books, $8.95) is the reprint. Pepin's impeccable background, ranging from former chef to three French presidents to chef at two of the world's most famous restaurants, makes his book worth studying. These days he gives demonstration-lectures all over the United States.

Cooks who attend them, and other culinary students, will find "La Technique" covers 150 basic cooking procedures and has hundreds of step-by-step photographic illustrations of them. Classic French recipes are included.

"Julia Child & Company" by Julia Child (Knopf, $8.95) is new, issued to coincide with the author's current TV program. The book, in large format with color photographs, is devoted to menus for various occasions (from a holiday lunch to a buffet for a crowd) plus accompanying recipes. This time around, Julia—famous for her books and TV programs on French cooking—has drawn inspiration from other countries.

Should She Spring For Autumn Love?

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 22 and my boss is 55. What started out as friendly business lunches has gradually turned into steady dating.

Last week, out of the blue, he proposed marriage, saying I was the girl he's been waiting for all his life.

He's wonderful, charming, considerate, generous and easy to get along with. And he's wealthy. The trouble is that I am not passionately in love with him. Also, I have the feeling that he is more in love with my youth than he is with me.

Is there any way I can turn him down gently and keep the path open for a platonic friendship? Do you think I'm being overly romantic for wanting to be passionately in love with the man I marry? And am I foolish for not grabbing him?

WANTS LOVE

DEAR WANTS: Whether you can keep him as a friend after you turn him down will depend on him. If he does continue to date you, however, you may think of him as a friend, but you can bet he'll be in there pitching hard trying to get you to change your mind.

No, I don't think you're "overly romantic" for wanting to be "passionately in love" with the man you marry. If the chemistry is wrong, it's wrong. And that's what I'd tell him.

DEAR ABBY: My husband of 32 years and father of our four children told me in no uncertain terms that he wanted me to lose weight—or else. We made a deal. He said if I would get down to my normal weight, he would quit drinking.

Over the years he has gambled, drunk to excess and used street language. He has been unfaithful many times, too—always coming to me with a confession afterward so I would be sure to know what a lady-killer he was. Each time I forgave him.

Well, I went on a diet, and now I'm nearly down to the weight I was when we were married, but he hasn't stopped drinking. I told him no more sex until he stops drinking, so he says he will find a "broad" (his term) who will give him sex whenever he wants it, and he'll drink as much as he wants to and there's no way I can stop him.

Was I wrong to give him that ultimatum when his promise meant nothing? Our sex life was the best thing about our marriage and I still love him.

FOOL

DEAR FOOL: Yes. Withholding sex from him as a punishment is indeed foolish. Not only do you deprive yourself when you deprive him, but you provide him with a perfect excuse for going elsewhere.

One Reservation To A Trend

North Carolinians should share a certain modest satisfaction in the trend reported by the Census Bureau: a movement of industry to the South (a fact recognized here for several years) and a sort of "migration" of the poor following the shift in job opportunities to the Southland.

heading our way. We like the idea; with one small reservation: that the newcomers do not bring with them the conditions that are held responsible for creating an unhealthy business climate in those areas they are leaving behind.

Spending Cutbacks Assure Protests

Reportedly the administration will be recommending 1980 budget cuts which would drop support of federally subsidized housing by approximately a third.

already drawn protests from urban, poor and housing industry representatives. If we are to move toward a balanced federal budget—with the benefit of reducing inflation—cuts will have to be made somewhere. Reducing spending in any area is certain to bring protests.

THIS AFTERNOON

Created Own Problems

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Since the beginning of the Sunbelt versus Snowbelt debate, Yankee guns have been leveled at the South for raiding the Federal treasury and rising economically at the expense of the rest of the nation.

Snobbish
A review of Harrington's comments to a meeting of the National League of Cities in Boston reveal these insights into economic and political life in the Northeast:

— Power resides in the hands of people "quite content simply to keep up a standard of living...passed on to them as a family heirloom from the 17th Century Pilgrims."

— State and local governments are in the hands of a "coterie of uninspired and uninspiring middle managers."

— Business and government remain suspiciously at arms length, with events "shaped more by accident of 18th Century geography than by any deliberate or rational program."

— Top brains and well educated people are leaving New England, creating "not only a flow of funds to the Sunbelt (but) a flow of talent."

In short, Harrington sees a loss of Yankee ingenuity, imagination and enthusiasm being bested by a Southern aggressiveness, willingness to work, and ability to "move and shake, to take risks and to think big." Smug in their superiority complex, Yankees continue to look down on the South. "You don't eat quality of life, you don't keep the cold out with it, and you don't wear it," Harrington argues.

BILL NOBLITT

North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt agrees that the South has been more aggressive. "We had a long way to go, and we still have a long way to go. When you are hungry, you work harder."

The key differences Hunt sees between North Carolina and the Northeast are a spirit of cooperation between public and private sectors of the economy, the work ethic which boosts productivity, and the commitment of government to aid economic growth through public services such as roads, water-sewer lines, and attitudes.

Anti-Business
"They (in the Northeast) have an attitude that is anti-business; the workers do... and the governments do. They could learn some things by coming to see us in the South," the governor commented.

Some would say that the absence of unionism in North Carolina plays a major role in keeping wages low and allowing companies to boost productivity by exploiting the labor force.

Not so, Hunt responds. The subject of unionism as it comes up in discussions with industrial prospects has to do with the freedom of the companies to run their own plants without outside interference. Wages are not a major factor since the pay in this state is growing toward parity with those in the Northeast.

As for productivity, he finds it a result of Tar Heels who take pride in doing a good job and earning their pay.

So with communities, government, and workers welcoming them with enthusiasm, it is little wonder that some firms choose to flee the cold atmosphere of the Northeast — and that has very little to do with weather.

Mixes Kicks, Bible

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — There's a rumor in this town, which never has been short of them, that after every Redskins football game, half the team goes off with sub quarterback Billy Kilmer to anesthetize their aches and bruises at the Fox and Hounds, while the other half goes to Bible-study class with kicker Mark Moseley.

Like most rumors you hear around the Capitol this one ain't necessarily so, but it's not so very far from wrong either. At least the praying part is part true. Only Moseley and his burly Bible scholars don't huddle over the Scriptures right after the game.

Their "huddle group" — meets every Wednesday morning at 9 a.m. at a different player's house in the Virginia and Maryland suburbs.

Essentially it's an informal prayer meeting and rap session, where if you were to drop in you'd find the likes of safety Ken Houston, running back Tony Green and wide receivers Danny Buggs and Ricky Thompson talking over personal, family and (rarely) team problems.

"God plays a very important part in their lives," says Moseley, a very earnest young man who has led the Skins in scoring the past five years with his golden toe. He modestly attributes his success to the time he has spent on his knees talking to God.

One Blow For Privacy

WASHINGTON — It took more than two-and-a-half years, but in its closing hours the Congress at last got around to overturning the Supreme Court's decision in what is known as the Miller case. As a result, the checks you write are now your own. The cause of personal privacy has won a significant round.

every adult in the country. The new law protects every person who has a checking or savings account, who borrows money from a bank or credit union, or who uses a consumer credit card. When President Carter signed the Bank Control Act of 1978, all the records of these institutions suddenly were wrapped up in the Fourth Amendment.

To go back a little: It had never occurred to most of us, before the Supreme Court's decision in April 1976, that our personal checks were not our personal property. In our innocence, we assumed that records of our car payments or mortgage payments were confidential records, obviously covered by the "papers and effects" that the Constitution secures against unreasonable searches and seizures.

Other Editors Say Hardly Noticeable

(Washington Daily News)
In Charlotte, Chapel Hill, and other places now serving mixed alcoholic drinks, the difference now we suspect is hardly noticeable from what it was before the coming of mixed drinks.

After all, we did not change overnight from a "dry" society to a "wet" society. That is far from the case. All really that has changed is the method. There is a difference as to whom is mixing the drinks. Before, generally speaking, the one imbibing his alcoholic beverage mixed with water or whatever he wished. Now in Charlotte and Chapel Hill the mixing and the serving are done by someone else. And then the price is bound to be somewhat higher.

Insofar as what alcoholic beverages do to any individual, the impact will be the same. We have no statistics which indicate one way or the other as to which method leads the individual to consume more.

We listen to arguments on both sides, and we suspect it is a matter of individual determination and not any automatic thing.

If one goes into a restaurant where mixed drinks are being served, whereas just a week or so ago he could enter this same restaurant and engage in "brown bagging", we see such a little bit of overall difference.

Before, he was brought ice, glasses, ginger ale, water, soda or whatever mixing element he wished, and he did his own thing with all of it. Now he merely orders the drink of his choice, probably pays more than he did a week ago, and whatever charge he gets is about the same as before.

However, if we are wrong, and there does appear to be a big difference, we shall be able to detect that difference in North Carolina rather quickly. We shall be able to watch what happens in Charlotte, Chapel Hill, Hillsborough, and some several other communities. Their story will be valuable one way or the other as in 1979 more and more counties or cities and towns decide to vote on the issue.

One way or the other, proponents and opponents will be pointing toward some area or story and they will be saying "see, I... told you so". And those words could be heard often in the days before us.

Then along came a Georgia moonshiner by the name of Mitchell Miller. It appears that federal revenue men got onto his distilling operation through a certain rented van truck. Unknown to Miller, the officers located his bank and gained access to microfilm copies of Miller's canceled checks. Among the checks was a check to the truck rental company. At Miller's trial the microfilm copy was introduced in evidence. Following conviction, Miller appealed on the grounds that the evidence had been illegally obtained in violation of the Fourth Amendment.

The case went to the Supreme Court, where Justice Lewis F. Powell, Jr., said some surprising things. Contrary to popular assumption, bank records are not "a man's private papers." Mitchell neither owned nor possessed the microfilm copies. These were "business records of the bank." A check, said Mr. Justice Powell, is not a "confidential communication, but a negotiable instrument." By a vote of 7-2, the conviction was affirmed. (U.S. v. Miller, 425 U.S. 435.)

Well, the decision itself has now been reversed. Thanks to a bipartisan group of representatives and senators, including both liberals and conservatives, we now have Title XI of the Bank Control Act. The key (Continued on page 5)

40 Years Ago Today

December 7, 1938
Speaking as a staunch defender of democratic ideals, Governor Clyde R. Hoey last night declared "We should not become discouraged about the future of the United States, but should stand as crusaders for democracy in America."

Governor Hoey's address was featured in the opening session of the Seaboard Medical Association of Virginia and North Carolina of which Dr. W. I. Wooten of Greenville is president.

Dr. P. P. McCain, Superintendent of the North Carolina Sanatorium, who also spoke to the enthusiastic audience assembled in the local high school auditorium, praised Pitt County when he revealed that "this county has the most active anti-tuberculosis association in North Carolina."

LECTURER AT LARGE

Prof. Ford Repeats Self

By RON BARKER
Associated Press Writer
PROVO, Utah (AP) — The professor flies from campus to campus in a chartered jet surrounded by bodyguards and his personal staff. He is treated better than a college president, and gives the same lectures over and over.

coming late to classes this week at Brigham Young University; most students were in their seats before he arrived, and latecomers had to watch on closed-circuit television.

With Secret Service agents flanking the podium, the professor needn't have worried about classroom discipline.

Ford was his own visual aid. His classroom demeanor was unmarred except for one incident in which his clip-on microphone cord nearly knocked a glass of water off the lectern.

"I nearly cracked up," said a first-year law student later. But there wasn't a sound from students until Ford picked up his commentary where he left off.

Bill Orton, a third-year law student from Portland, Ore., observed it has been a long time since Ford practiced law, but he said the former president's appearance was valuable because it gave insight to the workings of government and to those who write the laws.

When a student asked Ford a lengthy, involved question, the former president quipped, "I haven't kept abreast of that case as well as you obviously have..." That brought laughter and applause.

"You can tell he's a politician," said one student afterward. "He's a quick thinker."

Ford said he's never been asked a question yet he couldn't answer.

James Schuman, who worked in the White House press office before joining several Ford administration employees at the institute in 1977, said the classes are intended to "further understanding of public policy."

They also provide Ford with public exposure while he decides whether to run for the presidency in 1980. He is frequently asked if he has made up his mind.

At political gatherings, Ford said, he is a politician. But on campus, the ex-president sees himself as an educator.

"Only when there is a news conference are those barriers crossed," Ford said, explaining that he has sometimes been questioned by the press on college campuses.

His pattern is to briefly address a college class — usually in political science, law or economics — leaving the rest of the hour for questions from students.

The questions usually relate to politics, specifically his views on the Carter administration and his experience with Richard Nixon. He tries to avoid criticism of Nixon, but doesn't hold back his views on Carter, especially on the Democratic president's economic policies, even when the question comes from a student.

"He blew it," Ford said of Carter during a class in political science. "If they had followed the policies we started, inflation would be around 4 percent instead of

Strength For Today

IMMORTALITY OF THE SOUL

In a poll conducted recently it was found that more than two-thirds of the people in this country are confident that they will go to heaven when they die.

Regardless of whether this confidence is justified or not, it certainly indicates that most people have some sort of connection regarding the immortality of the soul. There is a pervasive belief that somehow, somewhere, this enterprise of living we have begun here on earth continues after death.

But the devout Christian not only believes passively in immortality; he does something about it. To him it is not only a reality; it is a privilege. He must be worthy of this future. Hence it serves as a buttress and inspiration for his moral life. He is already taking part, so to speak, in eternity.

All of those Christians today who believe in immortality might well conduct a re-evaluation of their lives in the light of this great revelation.

A Lift For Recycling Industry

by JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — After getting hardly a scrap of help for years, the recycling industry won from Congress this year an added 10 percent tax credit for the purchase of equipment. "A major event," it said.

Few people will be impressed by the announcement, because few people avoid the stereotypical view of recycling, which is to say they think of it as the trash or waste or scrap industry.

But times are changing. Anti-inflation measures are patriotic, conservation and environmentalism are in. Energy-saving is a survival strategy. Helping to balance foreign payments is all-American.

Recycled metals often cost less than newly mined ore to process. Recycling limits the depletion of raw materials. It saves energy in the manufacturing process. It lessens the need for raw materials imports.

It took this combination of problems for recycling to gain the respectability it thinks it deserves. Even now, the primary industries enjoy depletion allowances and better capital gains benefits.

But, says M.J. Mighdoll, a spokesman for the recyclers, the additional 10 percent tax credit for the purchase of recycling equipment — bringing the total to 20 percent — is "a major step in the right direction."

Obviously, says Mighdoll, executive vice president of the National Association of Recycling Industries, Congress had the good sense to realize that recycling's energy conservation attributes are impressive.

By his calculations, the use of recycled lead and zinc, instead of primary ore, cuts 63 percent from the energy needed to process. The saving for paper may be 70; for copper 87; aluminum, up to 96 percent.

The cash savings are perhaps less well documented, but the fact that recycled materials offer competition, and an option, to raw materials, whose prices generally are rising fast, has the authority of logic.

The environmental argument is evident to anyone who views the unsightly and costly litter of cans in recreational areas. Still, they have value, in manufacture and in land-use as well.

Alert to opportunities, as any underdog would be, the association relates how it costs more than $35 to collect a ton of waste in urban areas and more than $10 to process and place it in a landfill.

By recycling, it continues, these costs can be cut; but perhaps far more important in these days of Proposition 13 is that recycling "offers the prospect of land revenues, not taxes."

An effective argument perhaps, but it has taken time and a change of attitudes and priorities for this $15 billion-a-year industry (based on sales) to get its points across. It has long felt a stigma.

Even now, says Mighdoll, the industry has a long way to go before it achieves parity with the primary industries, whose materials benefit from the lopsided tax structure.

section says that "no government authority may have access to or obtain copies of, or the information contained in the financial records of any customer from a financial institution" unless certain precisely defined steps are taken.

Hereafter the Feds will have to get a subpoena or a search warrant before they start prying into your financial records. If the Internal Revenue Service, for example, wants to look at your bank deposits, the IRS must advise you of an administrative subpoena and give you ten days in which to take the matter to court. To be sure, the court may approve the subpoena, but at least you will know that some investigation is afoot.

Such investigations in the past have not been rare or unusual events. During the course of House denate in October, Ned Pattison of New York disclosed that a major bank may get as many as 200 inquiries a day from law enforcement or regulatory agencies. To the trained eye, the requested records amount to an open book. Given a batch of canceled checks, deposit slips and credit card purchases, a good investigator can put together a personal profile of sometimes embarrassing accuracy.

The new law will not unduly handicap law enforcement agencies engaged in specific criminal investigations. They will be put to the trouble of obtaining search warrants, but if they can establish probable cause, this should prove no great obstacle. The act will provide most welcome protection against the fishing expeditions of federal regulatory agencies searching for evidence to use in civil proceedings.

At a time when government exerts an ever larger role in our lives, and Big Brother seems to get bigger all the time, it's gratifying to record a victory by the people against their governmental masters. We don't win many, but we do win a few.

Good Job Outlook For 1985 Special Fields

ATLANTA (AP) — Business administration and computer science students graduating in 1985 will find a sellers' market for their skills, and an educational study predicts the demand for those skills will be about twice as high as the supply.

The report, released Wednesday by the Southern Regional Education Board, said health field graduates also have good job prospects, but the outlook for education, liberal arts, law, social work and communication graduates appears gloomy. Social science and humanities majors were advised by the Moseley doesn't bless himself or call for special prayers in the huddle before he booms one off between the uprights, the way they did in those old Pat O'Brien movies, but the two miracles he got off at over 50 yards this season did seem to have had some heavenly controls working for them.

Washington gave him a chance as a free agent in 1974 and he has led them in scoring ever since. The past two seasons he led the league in field goals and in 1976 he led the conference in scoring.

Off field, Moseley spends a lot of time being "a witness for Christ," climbing into pulpits to preach a service or telling youth groups how to "get their heads together." Next to booming off the big one, nothing sets more butterflies to quivering in his stomach, "I'm always nervous before a microphone," he admits. "Like kicking, there's no way to lick that tension."

Moseley doesn't worry about converting those Redskins who opt for booze rather than the Bible as a confidence restorer. "I take a drink now and then with them, because we're all good buddies, but I'm not one of those who feels he needs it to have a good time. I just get high in life. Feel better next day, too."

Half Work Day In County's Schools

by REBECCA BUFFALO
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Education granted a half day teacher work day Friday, Dec. 8, for Pitt County teachers.

Mrs. Sharon Clayton, a teacher at Bethel Elementary School, represented concerned teachers as she spoke to the board.

"We have not had a teacher work day since Sept. 7," Clayton stated. "Many teachers have had to attend work shops and parent meetings."

"We don't want to be unreasonable, but we need this half day," Clayton continued. "We don't have time at home at this time of year to do our non-teaching work."

Children in county schools will be dismissed Friday at 12 noon. The dismissal will not affect the school calendar.

Board members noted that the request was valid and voted to honor the teachers' request.

Superintendent of Pitt County Schools Ott Alford stated that he was not in opposition with the matter, pointing out the unusual situation of deletion of teacher workdays to regulate the calendar when school opening was delayed this year.

Approximately 30 teachers came to the board meeting Tuesday concerning the matter.

decade, the report said. While many graduates will have problems finding work in their fields, about 20 percent will be unable to find any job traditionally held by a college graduate, the report said.

And that 20 percent of Southern graduates will have to seek work in sales and clerical jobs or as blue collar, service or farm workers.

"In just 20 years, the proportion of college-educated workers in the United States has doubled," the report said. "As a higher percentage of the total population attends college, a wider dispersion in achievement levels is reflected by college graduates."

"As the composition of the pool of college graduates changes, it is natural that the definition of what constitutes a 'suitable' job for a college graduate could also change and encompass an ever-widening scope of occupations."

Herman Melville, author of "Moby Dick," died in 1891.

double what it was 20 months ago."

Ford speaks highly of the current college generation. "This generation is a great generation, a generation that is strongly oriented to principles, which respects authority and which is making headway for themselves and this country," he said in one lecture here.

Although the former president said he thoroughly enjoys his tour of college campuses, which will continue through 1979, he doesn't want to teach full-time, "at least not for longer than a semester."

He said he feels he can make more of a contribution on a broader scale — but he's still not saying whether he will again seek the presidency.

Bakke Case Guidelines

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The effects of the U.S. Supreme Court decision in the Bakke reverse discrimination case have resulted in action at the University of North Carolina Law School, according to Dean Robert Byrd.

Byrd said the law school has revised its admission policies to conform with the decision that an applicant's race cannot be the decisive factor in any admissions process.

The law school's new policy, which was adopted last month, establishes a two-part process that avoids an identifiable racial quota system.

Byrd said it reserves about 25 percent of the places in each starting class for applicants who do not meet a minimum qualifying score based on grades and law school admissions tests.

The new policy does not delete race and ethnic origin as factors for admittance. However, Byrd said "unique work or service experience" and "demonstrated compassion" will also be included among seven other criteria.

The subjective criteria makes race only one element in the school's admission decision, Byrd said.

He said the new policy was adopted "in the light of the Bakke decision, and not because we thought we were doing anything unconstitutional under the old policy."

The law school is facing a reverse discrimination case in U.S. District Court. Patricia Bostick of Raleigh and Steve Rader of Charlotte, both of whom are white, have charged they were denied admission to the law school because of their race.

Avers Grads Lack Basics

NEW YORK (AP) — Admiral Hyman Rickover says the success of America's democratic system rests on the success of its educational system — and the educational system is failing.

"If we allow increasing numbers of our citizens to remain shackled by ignorance and superstition, dependent upon the opinions of others, and fearful of disagreeable facts, then the democratic freedom of our nation will be jeopardized," Rickover said Wednesday during a speech to the Foreign Policy Association.

During the quarter-century that he has headed the Navy's Nuclear Propulsion Program, Rickover said he has interviewed more than 12,000 top graduates from 150 colleges and universities.

"In case after case, not only in engineering, mathematics, and science, but in history, foreign language, economics and other fields, I find students who have excellent academic records, but are unable to discuss even the fundamentals of their disciplines. From what I see, the basic knowledge shown by recent graduates is much less than that shown by those I interviewed 15 years ago," he said.

'Educated' By Traffic Cop

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — A city police officer hit on a novel way to educate a teacher who made an illegal left turn on the way to school.

The unnamed educator was ordered to write 100 lines: "I won't turn that illegal left again."

The completed work was mailed to the city with the following letter:

"Here are the 100 lines you asked me to write out in lieu of getting a $10 ticket for turning that illegal left. ... My colleagues here at school insisted I write the lines and send them. ... They agreed the punishment was both humorous and humane.

"Incidentally, I haventound a new route for getting to school. It's five minutes longer but definitely more legal."

Police Supt. Al Emzies said he did not know either the teacher or policeman but the punishment appeared to work.

Mexican DC-6 Crash Killed 7 Aboard

By ELLEN HADDOW
Associated Press Writer

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — A Mexican air force DC-6 which exploded in a "red ball of fire" and crashed into a dike on the Missouri River, killing all seven persons aboard, had spent three days under repair and was leaking oil shortly before takeoff, airport witnesses said.

The bodies of five men and two women, identified as crew members, were recovered from the burned wreckage, acting Douglas County Coroner James Keenan said.

Witnesses said the four-engine plane exploded about 50 feet above the ground, slammed into the dike, flipped over and landed in flames just after taking off from Eppley Airfield about 5:25 p.m. Wednesday.

Mike Steiner, an employee of a commercial charter company, said the plane did not appear to be in trouble when he "heard a loud boom and saw a huge red ball of fire."

Lt. Col. Sanchez Ortiz of Mexico City said he spoke with members of the crew by telephone Monday and they told him cold weather had caused condensation in the engines. He said workmen apparently had been unable to dry the engines out.

An airport employee, who was not further identified, told reporters the crew worked for several hours Wednesday before they could get the engines started. He said oil was leaking from at least one engine.

Omaha Public Safety Director Bill McDonnell confirmed the crew made a last-minute repair on one engine before the craft took off for San Antonio, Texas.

Snow, ice and temperatures hovering near zero hampered efforts by firefighters to extinguish the burning aircraft until three hours after the crash.

Ortiz, a Mexican air force spokesman, identified the dead as Capt. Luis Jauregui Ramos, Lt. Samuel Pedroza Cardenas, Sgt. Luis Barbarosa, Sgt. Sergio Ojeda, Sgt. Luis Domingos and flight attendants Esther Romo Soto and Blanca Silva.

Ortiz said the seven were members of the Mexican air force, which had flown the plane to Nebraska for a government-owned agricultural company, Compania Agricola Mexicana.

He said the government would dispatch a plane to Omaha Thursday to carry the bodies back to Mexico City.

The four-engine aircraft, once used as a press plane for Mexico's president, arrived in Omaha last Thursday, bringing about 45 members of a Mexican agricultural delegation for a tour of irrigation manufacturing plants.

Most of the delegates returned home last weekend after three members were arrested in a prostitution-related incident at the Omaha Hilton Hotel. The plane's mechanical troubles forced the delegates to return to Mexico by a commercial flight, the airport employee said.

It was the worst plane crash in Omaha since 17 persons were killed at the airport in 1944.

Ingram To Seek Repeal Of Law

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — When the 1979 General Assembly meets next month, Insurance Commissioner John Ingram is expected to battle for repeal of a 1977 law that stripped much of his authority in vetoing insurance rate increases.

Before the law was enacted, Ingram could deny requests by the insurance industry for premium hikes. However, under a key provision of the bill, the industry is permitted to put into effect rate increases over the commissioner's veto pending court appeal.

Ingram's numerous denials of rate increases prompted the insurance industry to complain

Staley New Coordinator

John David Staley of Greenville has been named Planning Coordinator for Fire-related Services with the N. C. State Fire Commission.

Staley, 27, will be responsible for developing a comprehensive statewide master plan for fire prevention and control which will serve as a policy guide for coordinating state fire protection services.

After identifying strengths, weaknesses and duplications of functions within state agencies delivering fire protection and control services, Staley will present policy alternatives. North Carolina is one of four states which have received master planning grants to study feasibility of planning for fire protection at the state level. Efforts in this state will help form a base for other states considering statewide master plans for fire services.

Staley served for three years as a community development specialist for the ECU Regional Development Institute. A McLean, Va. native, he is a 1973 graduate of East Carolina University, with a B. A. in urban and regional planning.

Stern Stand In Strike Violence

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Federal authorities took a tough stance in Ohio as violence associated with a 27-day-old strike by dissident steel haulers flared in three states.

"Starting today, we are making the federal presence known," James Williams, U.S. Attorney for northern Ohio, said Wednesday. "The FBI and others are giving high priority to the matter."

The Pittsburgh-based Fraternal Association of Steel Haulers has been on strike since Nov. 11, demanding higher rates, simpler regulations and the right to bargain for independent steel haulers, including some now represented by the Teamsters union.

FASH Chairman William Hill insists his group is not behind the violence which has punctuated the strike.

FBI special agent Stanley Czarnecki announced Wednesday that federal charges had been filed against four FASH members arrested in Ohio's Columbiana County.

The arrests followed a shooting in which tires and the radiator of a steel truck were damaged. An affidavit alleged the four violated a federal law against damaging a motor vehicle operated in interstate commerce with reckless disregard for the safety of human life.

Cleveland police said three Ohio men identified as FASH members were charged with possession of criminal tools and disorderly conduct for allegedly tossing rocks at a steel truck.

Pennsylvania state police, meanwhile, charged nine men with criminal conspiracy, carrying prohibited weapons or possessing firearms without licenses after a caravan of about 30 cars was stopped near the New Stanton interchange of the Pennsylvania Turnpike in connection with rock throwing, and shooting incidents.

A Review

Marathon '33 Fits The Times

"Marathon '33," now at stage at McGinnis Auditorium, East Carolina University, comes at an appropriate time — when millions of Americans are jittery about the woes of inflation and the fate of the national economy.

June Havoc's play is a chilling reminder of what could happen again, a specter of the Great Depression years that still has the power to cast a pall of doubt and fear.

In that capacity, "Marathon '33" is an effective vehicle in conveying the message of the chaos mass poverty can create, the degradation that individuals must sometimes suffer in order to survive. The message is particularly pointed in relation to young people struggling to equate youthful dreams of achievement with the stark necessity to compromise their dreams.

The big problem with "Marathon '33" is not its message, but in the basic structure of Havoc's play. What could be told in a taut one-act play or perhaps two short two acts is stretched into an overly long repetition of the same events and situations. Eventually, the relentlessness becomes grim.

Balancing this major drawback are several factors in the Playhouse production that redee the play from its faults. Foremost is Edgar Loessin's masterful touch in keeping the large cast in concerted action — there's often 40 or more on the stage at one time. Edward Haynes' set depicting a cavernous, dingy building interior is just right, as is the use Marla Jurglanis makes of authentic clothes of the early '30's.

Another plus is the excellent selection of music, much of it composed and arranged by Marshall Swing. Young and old viewers alike will enjoy hearing old favorites such as "When You're Smiling," "Three O'Clock in the Morning," "Smoke Gets In Your Eyes," and "Stardust." There's a marvelous solo bit (not nearly long enough) of someone playing "Have You Ever Been Lonely?" on the piano. (Perhaps Henry Wooten, pianist in the Marshall's Musical Marvels?)

What really makes "Marathon '33" come to life is Steve Williford's performance in the lead male role of Patsy, a champion in the Marathon craze that swept the nation for a brief time in the depression years. His role, admittedly, is by a long stretch the best written in the play, and he brings to it a fine empathy, in turn employing whimsy, pathos, sometimes a touch of the brag-gart.

And Williford has strong support. In the lead female role, Sally Clodfelter as June capably overcomes some rather inane dialogue and makes the most of every chance to shine given her. Marathon competitors, Clifford R. Pyron and B. Lynn Hicks as Al and Flo Marciano; Butch White and Jan Kleinert as Bozo and Helen Bazoo are excellent. Thomas B. Kastenbaum in a key role as Mr. Dankle consistently projects the image of a circus barker type endowed with a blustery concern for the young strugglers; and in Debra Zumbach, as Eve Adamanski, the Playhouse has one of the most stunningly beautiful women ever to grace campus theater — and she's also a fine actress.

Not all is grim and hopeless in "Marathon '33." There are enough glimmers of hope, of the eternal doggedness of youth determined to overcome whatever obstacles lie in their path to satisfy viewers who expect at least a trace of a rainbow or a silver lining among the dark clouds.

Several beautiful touches of comic relief — a young man trying to retrieve a piece of knitting and a ball of wool from his sleeping partner without letting her drop to the floor; a "stout" Butch White performing a ballet to "The Skater's Waltz;" and a rousing (all too brief) Charleston are most welcome elements interludes.

"Marathon '33" has three more performances to go, tonight, tomorrow night and Saturday night. Curtain time is 8:15 p.m.

Spaniards Approve New Democratic Constitution

By EMILIO MOYA
Associated Press Writer
MADRID, Spain (AP) —

Some 60 percent of Spain's eligible voters approved their first democratic constitution in 42 years but about a third abstained, almost complete returns showed today.

Unofficial sources blamed rising terrorism, unemployment and inflation for the unexpected lack of interest Wednesday in supporting the new constitution.

With 96 percent of the votes tabulated, the national election center said 87.8 percent of the voters approved the constitution, 7.9 percent voted "no" and 3.5 percent left blank ballots.

About two per cent of the votes were voided, the election center said. The turnout, as determined with almost all the votes in, was 67.6 percent of the nation's 26 million voters.

This compared to the 75-80 percent predicted by the government and 78 percent two years ago when Spaniards overwhelmingly endorsed their first democratic reforms after the long rule of rightist dictator Gen. Francisco Franco.

The widespread abstention indicated that rightist groups, which got only 10 percent of the seats in parliamentary elections 18 months ago, had been successful in convincing some of the voters that the constitution was too leftist.

However, the heaviest abstention was in the violence-torn Basque region, where some polling stations reportedly had only a few dozen voters show up because of threats of reprisal from Basque guerrillas.

The separatists had urged a boycott of the referendum because the constitution granted the northern Basque country, as well as 12 other ethnic areas, only limited autonomy.

Some voters in the Basque region hid their faces from photographers, apparently fearing reprisals from the Basque guerrilla group ETA, which assassinated three policemen Tuesday.

Policemen in bulletproof vests held submachine guns at the ready at the funeral of one of the officers in the Basque capital of San Sebastian, but there were no incidents there or elsewhere.

Socialists in other parts of northern Spain got police to take Franco's picture off walls in polling places, saying they could intimidate voters.

Francisco's widow also voted. So did Dolores Ibarruri, the Pasionara of the 1936-39 Spanish Civil War who delivered fiery speeches against Franco and returned from exile in Russia after the dictator died three years ago.

King Juan Carlos was heavily guarded as he and his wife, Greek-born Queen Sofia, voted early in the capital. Centrist Premier Adolfo Suarez, the king's architect for reform, also voted early.

The new constitution — passed by Suarez's Center Party as well as the socialists, communists and conservatives in Spain's first freely-elected Parliament, automatically throws out Franco's laws.

The charter, Spain's eighth since 1812, separates church and state, guarantees human and political rights, abolishes the death penalty, and opens the way to legal divorce in this predominantly Catholic country.

It also gives Parliament the power to name premiers but declares Spain a parliamentary monarchy with the king remaining as head of state and the armed forces.

ECU Trustees...

officer in the Financial Aid office January 1.

Mrs. Lamm, according to Brewer, will take, "desperately needed administrative talent to that office."

Brewer pointed out that Mrs. Lamm has 26 years service with the University, and 10-years with Dr. Jenkins (as administrative assistant) and this Board.

Brewer also noted that Dr. Clinton Prewett, who from 1952 to 1957 served as Dean of Students and who for 17 years was Chairman of the Psychology Department, has been appointed assistant to the Chancellor for special assignments. "He will contribute much to our work at the university," Brewer commented.

Dr. John Howell, vice-chancellor for Academic Affairs reported to the board that Ph.D. programs in anatomy, bio-chemistry, micro-biology, pharmacology and physiology have been reviewed by the necessary outside groups, "endorsed" by them, and will possibly be approved, "in the early spring by the Board of Governors."

Preliminary, "very positive reports," according to Dr. Ed Monroe, vice-chancellor for Health Affairs, were received for various disciplines within the School of Allied Health and Social Professions during accreditation visits this fall.

Monroe told Trustees that ECU's program in medical technology received a "commendation as part of its report."

He also told board members that a "positive," preliminary report was received from a site visit team from the Liaison Committee on Medical Education following its visit to the School of Medicine. Monroe added that, "we anticipate no problems," in accreditation for the school, adding that he expects East Carolina will be able to enroll 40 medical students in the fall. Thirty-six students began their studies this year, the second year the four-year medical school has been in operation.

Monroe noted that bids for the medical school building complex are scheduled to be opened December 13. He also told trustees that a first-year resident, Dr. Edward Kiteas, a graduate of the Medical College of Virginia, recently won the North Carolina Chess Championship, pointing out that people associated with the School of Medicine do have other interests.

Vice-chancellor for Administration and Planning, Dr. Robert Holt reported that the school's new computer has been installed and is undergoing tests. "We should be able to release the old computer by the end of January," Holt explained.

He also told trustees that the month of November, "has been the best month of fund raising in the history of the university."

Holt said $4,776 was raised in November 1977, as compared with $35,385 this November. He said much of the money has resulted from a Phone-A-Thon being conducted by students.

The housing occupancy rate for dormitories, Holt told trustees, was 97 per cent on December 1, and anticipated to be about 93 per cent during the Spring.

He also reported that ECU is one of 150 school in the nation included in a comprehensive study of how financial assistance programs are being handled. He said the purpose of the study is, "to see how efficient federal programs are."

In other business yesterday, Trustees adopted a resolution acknowledging, "with great appreciation," the service of Mrs. Lamm, "in providing administrative assistance to the Board for over 10 years," and, "gratitude for her 26 years of diligent performance for the university, including her excellent contributions to the Offices of Admissions and Registration, Dean of the University, and since July 1, 1968, the Office of the Chancellor."

The board also adopted a resolution expressing its, "deep appreciation," to Pirate football coach Pat Dye, his staff and players, for the successful season and, "an invitation to play in the Independence Bowl."

Another resolution adopted yesterday expressed the board's, "deepest sympathy," to Dr. Susan McDaniel, wife of Dr. James S. McDaniel, professor and Chairman of the University's Department of Biology, who died November 26.

"The productive and meaningful life of Dr. McDaniel serves as a sterling example of the professional and moral standards sought by East Carolina University," the resolution concluded.

Dr. Susan McDaniel is associate vice-chancellor for Academic Affairs at East Carolina.

Might Soften Veterans' Stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department has suggested it may soften its stand in favor of veterans preference for government jobs. The stand has generated strong criticism from women's groups.

After Attorney General Griffin B. Bell met with a group of women's group representatives Wednesday, the Justice Department issued a statement indicating it may amend a legal brief filed Monday with the Supreme Court supporting the policy of giving veterans preference although the practice may be detrimental to women. A Justice Department official said there was no chance the department would withdraw its legal document entirely.

Coordinates Seminars For Hospital Workers

ECU News Bureau

Therese Lawler, of the East Carolina University School of Nursing faculty, and director of nursing education for the Eastern Area Health Education Center, is coordinating a series of seminar programs for eastern N.C. hospital employees.

The series, "Management Development for Hospital Teams," involves approximately 50 administrators and supervisors from Onslow County Hospital, Lenoir County Memorial Hospital, Carteret County General Hospital, Washington County Hospital, Chowan County Hospital and Pitt Memorial Hospital

Rehabilitation Center.

Sessions, which began Dec. 13 and will run through March 14, 1979, are scheduled for Kinston, Greenville, Edenton and Jacksonville.

Instructional staff includes Ms. Lawler and Anthony Keith Jackson, president of A.K. Jackson & Associates, Inc., Hickory, and Frank Bradham, director of allied health education for the Eastern Area Health Education Center.

Names and titles of participating hospital personnel follow:

PITT COUNTY—Rehabilitation Center, Pitt Memorial Hospital; James Maira, chief physical therapist; Grace Vines, social work services; Donna Clark, chief occupational therapist; Rozanne Faulkner, department manager-recreation services;

Five Appeared On Program

ECU News Bureau

Five East Carolina University delegates appeared on the program at the recent annual conference of the N. C. College Personnel Association in Southern Pines.

Rebecca Eure Martin, administrator/counselor in ECU's Tyler Residence Hall, discussed publicity in a session on "Sharing Ideas in Residence Programming and Development."

Four students who currently hold advisorships in ECU dormitories gave presentations in a workshop entitled "Effective Communication in Dealing with Residence Hall Situations."

They were Louis Brown of Enka, Alex Cunningham of Winston-Salem, Vickie Sugg of Pinetops and Sarah York of Statesville.

Faculty Member Was Honored

ECU News Bureau

Lauretta Lewis of the East Carolina University Department of Social Work and Correctional Services was honored at the fourth annual conference of the N. C. chapter of the Association of Black Social Workers in Charlotte.

Ms. Lewis was awarded the chapter's certificate of appreciation for outstanding service.

An assistant professor at ECU, Ms. Lewis is an alumna of the University of Tennessee-Nashville, where she also received the Master of Science in Social Work degree.

Christmas Party

A candy cane hunt, a special appearance by Santa Claus and the lighting of the city Christmas tree will all be part of Greenville's Christmas party Dec. 17.

The party, arranged by the Pitt County Young Republican Club in cooperation with the City of Greenville, will be held at the Elm Street Gymnasium from 3-5 p.m.

Party planners are inviting all pre-school and early elementary school children to decorate the official Christmas tree with decorations to be made at the party. During the celebration, participants will sing Christmas carols and Santa Claus will visit. The tree will be lit at sundown.

The public is invited. Party planners urge participants to bring canned goods and clothing for charity.

Immigrants Promised 'Pain' Will Go

By ED LION
CHICAGO (UPI) — "You cannot understand how hard it is for us," Clementine Khait said, a sorrowful expression lining her face. "Our situation is very difficult. We have nothing."

"Just six months from now it will be better," replied Margaret Drake knowingly. "The pain will be gone like it wasn't there."

"When they have $5,000 in the bank, they'll feel better," her husband, Ismael, added with a wink.

Mrs. Khait and her husband Ekhiel are middle-aged Russian-Jewish immigrants from Leningrad. They have been in the United States with their two teen-aged children for three months.

The Drakes, originally from the Ukraine, have been in the United States for three years. Both couples are part of a growing wave of Soviet-Jews making their way to the United States in search of religious and social freedoms they say are denied them in the Soviet Union.

Jewish agency social workers believe the upsurge of Jewish emigration from the Soviet Union is a result of growing international pressure on the Kremlin. They cite the ahlsinki accords, a congressional measure linking trade to Soviet emigration policies toward Jews and protests by American Jews as some of the factors.

Soviet Jews allowed to emigrate are given exit visas only to Israel. But about half are choosing the United States and to a lesser degree other countries instead.

Russian-Jews often wait several months at immigration centers in Rome or Vienna for visas to the United States, officials said. Since 1971 some 30,000 Russian-Jews have settled in the United States, compared to virtually "nil" in the 60s, they said.

And since 1973 up to 2,000 have come to the Chicago area, a major location for resettlement. About 600 are expected this year alone, officials said.

In June the U.S. government granted special "parole" visas for 12,000 Soviet Jews to immigrate through May.

"It can be called a mass exodus," said Stanley Swig of the Jewish Community Centers of Chicago.

But at first immigrants find their new life a wrenching experience, Swig said, and they must come to grips with many problems.

"It may take nine months to a year to help a family get relocated," he said.

A network of Jewish agencies funded largely through contributions and membership dues help the immigrants make the transition. The agencies try to financially sustain immigrants for up to their first year in the United States and help them find jobs, housing and learn English. In Chicago, agency workers said, it takes about $1,500 to settle an immigrant.

"They give us a pension which allows us to live, have an apartment and food," Khait, 47, said in halting English. Khait is a physician, but must pass a certifying examination to practice medicine in the United States.

"It's hard," he said. "It's been 25 years since I graduated from medical school and to remember (medicine from an academic standpoint) is very difficult. And especially in English."

His wife, 46, was a chemical engineer in Leningrad and is searching for a job.

"I think about finding a job when I sleep," she said.

She said Russian authorities hindered her career because of her Jewish background and is hoping for a better future for her children.

"It's very difficult, the new notions, new culture," Khait said, as he and his wife mentioned such things as high rents and a teachers strike that kept their 17-year-old son out of school.

But the Drakes said with time the hardships will diminish.

"With every family it's hard at the start," said Drake, 47. "But here there's more freedom — we can talk, be Jews."

Drake, an economist in the Soviet Union and now a factory worker, said he spent five years in a camp in Soviet Asia for preaching Zionism. It took him two years to get an exit visa for his family and he spent a year without working for fear his job would jeopardize his emigration status.

Drake settled in the United States with his wife and two children because his wife felt Israel was too insecure, he said.

"We had a very difficult life in the Soviet Union. My children can learn Judaism here," he said turning to his 9-year-old daughter for help in translating.

"I cannot express what I think," he laughed. "But if I meet with you in two years then

Many new immigrants settle in Chicago's Rogers Park neighborhood. There the local Jewish community center runs English classes for newcomers and conducts programs to acquaint them with such things as the city's public transit system or how to fill out income tax returns and get life insurance coverage. FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, DEC. 7, 1978

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good day for expressing new ideas. You would be wise to get busy arranging your shopping activities for the coming holidays. Be very careful about making commitments you can't keep.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Know what your true aims are and do your best to gain them. Listen to what an adviser says, but use your own judgment.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You have excellent ideas for advancement and should put them in operation without delay. Take needed health treatments.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Handle any business at hand and then allow time to engage in favorite hobby. Study new ways to have added income.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Keep your eyes open for new opportunities to advance in your career. Be sure to improve your appearance.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) By changing your attitude and vision now, you can make the future much brighter for yourself. Be more considerate of loved one.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Your hunches are right at this time, so be sure to follow them. Look to new avenues of expression that can add to your income.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make sure you cooperate more with a dynamic associate and have greater mutual success. Be careful of strangers.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Try a new method in handling your work and you become more efficient and gain more benefits. Think constructively.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Use extra care in handling an important business matter in the morning. Don't let others impose on your good nature.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Plan to have conditions at home more functional so you can have greater happiness there in the future.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be more cooperative with associates and have more meaningful relationships. Plan the future wisely.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Find the right way to add to present abundance. You have to exercise much care in motion to avoid possible accident.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will know how to improve antiquated ideas, property and the like, so be sure to provide with a good education that will bring the maximum amount of success. Teach to finish one task before going on to another.

Christmas Parade At Grifton Set Dec. 10

GRIFTON — The Grifton Jaycettes are working with interested persons in preparing for the Grifton Christmas Parade, to be held Sunday, Dec. 10, at 3 p. m.

This is the second year the parade has been in operation since an eight-year gap. The change to a Sunday date makes it easier for more people to participate, according to Jaycette Sandra McLawhorn.

Four commercial floats will be featured in the parade, sponsored by the Grifton Shad Festival, Piggly Wiggly, H & H Drug Co., First Federal Bank, Saleeby Insurance and Realty, Grifton Plumbing and Heating and the Grifton Chamber of Commerce. This is the first year the commercial floats have been used.

Other floats will be featured by the Ayden Boy and Girl Scouts and the Key Club and Keywanettes.

Bands from Ayden-Grifton High School, Frink Junior High, Kinston, West Craven High School and North Lenoir High School will participate.

The Winterville Proclaimers of the Winterville Free Will Baptist Church, Tammy's

School of Dance, Albertson Fire-ettes, Grifton Boy and Girl Scouts, Contentnea Boy Scouts, and the Shad, Collard and Grifton Fire Queens will all be on view during the parade.

Old cars, horses, clowns from Clown Alley and a little Ronald McDonald will round out the day's activities.

A special visit will be made by the little old man in red, Santa Claus. The public is invited to come to Grifton Sunday, says Grifton Jaycette president, Joan Gaddy.

Asks Boost In Contribution

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has told Secretary of State Cyrus Vance to boost the U.S. contribution to the United Nations' fund to help Indochinese refugees by $5 million. The move announced Wednesday brings the United States' contribution so far this year to $135 million, according to a State Department official who did not want to be identified.

Honor Presiding Prelate Sunday

Bishop W. L. Phillips, presiding prelate of the Northeast Conference, "A" Division, will be honored Sunday, Dec. 10, 5:45 p. m., at Waterside Free Will Baptist Church in Greene County, one and a half miles south of Ballards Crossroads.

Bishop Phillips is a native of Pitt County and resides in the Emory Woods subdivision west of Greenville.

Bishop Phillips serves as pastor at Waterside, English Chapel, Rock Springs and St. Paul F. W. B. Churches.

Officials of the United American General Free Will Baptist Churches and annual and local auxiliaries will join together in honoring Bishop Phillips.

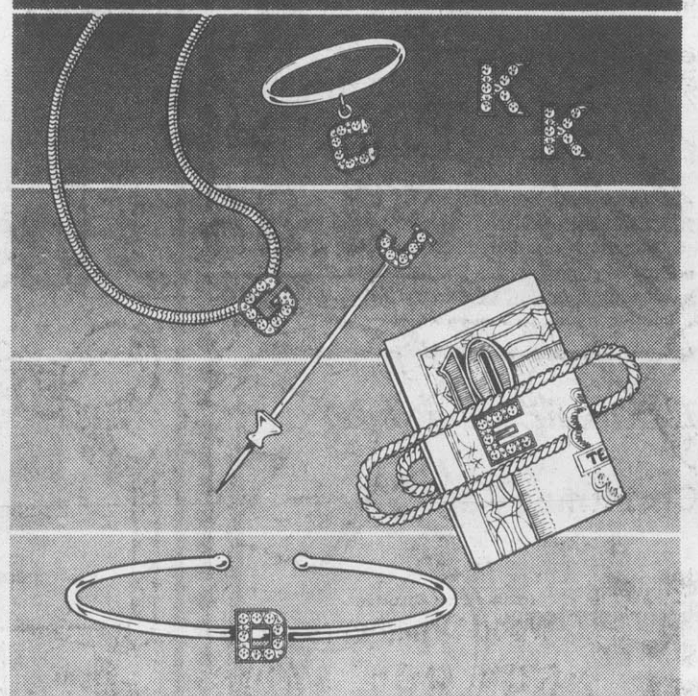

He is married to the former Jennie Gay. They have 12 children.

The Annual Conference Gospel Choir and the General Conference Ushers will accompany second Vice Bishop Robert Gorham, who will deliver the sermon. The public is invited to attend.

Gave Example For Dictators

By JULIUS B. HUMI
FLORENCE, Italy (UPI) — This month, 484 years ago, a fiery, fanatical friar became history's first "reforming" dictator, setting some of the patterns followed in our own time by Adolf Hitler and other despots.

On Nov. 29, 1494, a French army led by King Charles VIII left Florence after a sojourn of only seven days, leaving Girolamo Savonarola, a 42-year-old Dominican friar, the ruler of a city-state which in the preceding decades had made possible the revival of humanist learning, appreciation of art and the joy of life we now call the Renaissance.

Like Hitler and Benito Mussolini of Italy centuries later, Savonarola had used his awesome oratorical abilities to spellbind his followers. Like them he organized a private army. He set another precedent for later dictators when his youthful followers burned manuscripts, pictures and books termed "impure" on a night of folly commemorated as "The Burning of the Vanities" in 1497.

Another of his innovations, copied only too recently, was a corps of boys and girls who patrolled the city searching out "vanities" and willing to inform even on their own mothers and fathers.

And he may have shaken the world because of unrequited love. Savonarola was born in 1452 in the wealthy north Italian duchy of Ferrara where his father was the court doctor. With thick lips and a large hooked nose, he was an ugly young man and he was firmly rejected by the daughter of the rich Florentine family of Strozzi when he asked for her hand.

Severe and withdrawn thereafter, he forsook the study of medicine when he was 23 and joined a Dominican monastery. His first assignment was to lecture in theological philosophy in the convent of San Marco in Florence and the girl who not only turned him down but laughed at him with her friends must have been much in his mind when he arrived there in 1481.

In one of his first sermons to a mainly amused and skeptical congregation he thundered: "I have come to deliver this city from the devil which abounds here, and return it to the rule of Christ."

Despite the initial reaction, the fame of his fiery oratory spread and eventually began to worry the bankers who had made Florence into one of the most beautiful and richest of the cities of the known world. They tried to bribe him with donations and personal gifts but he had no use for money or luxuries since he lived in self-imposed austerity in a bare cell (still preserved as it was in his lifetime), flagellating himself daily "to punish the temptation of my flesh."

He inveighed against the wealth of the Florentines and especially the sensuality of the women, immortalized in the great paintings of the day. "Ye women who glory in your ornaments, your hair, your fine hands, I tell you you are all ugly with sin," he cried.

His rejection of worldly goods made him popular with the poor who regarded him as a saint and approved of his call for a sharing of riches. Ever greater crowds came to his sermons. The convent could not contain the thousands and he moved to Florence Cathedral, then the largest church in Italy, and to this day the third largest in the world.

Control of the city's affairs began to slip from the hands of Piero Medici, who had succeeded his father, Lorenzo the Magnificent, one of the most glorious figures of the Renaissance, into the hands of the friar of San Marco. Savonarola's prophecies became ever more apocalyptic. From the altar of Florence Cathedral he had begun a series of denunciations not only of Florence's ruling families but of the Papacy itself, then embodied in the Spanish Borgia, Pope Alexander VI.

His sermons, a contemporary document relates, created "terror and alarms, cries and lamentations. Everyone went about the city bewildered, speechless and half dead."

Piero Medici lost the last remnants of the respect of his subjects in 1494 when he succumbed to the threats of the French army, which had occupied Tuscany on its way to reclaim Naples, and secretly fled the city, hastened on his way by the friar's outbursts.

Savonarola helped persuade the French king to depart with his army after only seven days and to forgo the traditional pillage. With both the Medici and the French ruler, he became virtual ruler of Florence, the first monk ever to govern a secular state.

He proclaimed Christ King of Florence and, increasingly fanatical, claimed he was "conversing with God" in his cell and relaying His words when he preached in the cathedral. He forbade gambling, closed the public houses, banned the prostitutes, imposed fines for swearing and prohibited the wearing of female ornaments. He had the magnificent statuary and paintings adorning the churches and palaces — humanist teaching glorified the beauty of the body as well as that of the mind — removed on the ground that looking at them was sacrilege.

During the carnival of 1497 Savonarola's "soldiers," singing and marching behind a carving of Christ, built a 60-foot-high pile of "vanities" on Piazza della Signoria, and burned precious manuscripts and paintings. Some of them were brought to the scene by the great artist Sandro Botticelli who had fallen under the friar's spell.

With Florence subdued, its once fun-loving populace "walking like in a trance," Savonarola now turned directly against the pope. "Thou hast become a shameless harlot in thy lust," he cried. Alexander was not anxious for a showdown. He tried to placate the mutinous friar with the red cap of a cardinal but in the end he had to use the ultimate weapon, excommunication. Savonarola promptly issued his own excommunication against the pope.

Alexander then countered with a series of interdicts against Florence itself. Savonarola had already lost any hope of support from the wealthy patrons of the city and from their places of exile the great families encouraged anti-Savonarola parties with the support of the pope. More and more citizens began to defy the friar and his iron grip slackened.

His downfall started when he refused to accept a challenge by the rival Franciscans to prove his divinity by walking through fire. He allowed one of his disciples to act on his behalf. A sudden downpour probably saved the man's life but it stopped the spectacle and infuriated the crowd which had turned out in anticipation of a miracle.

On Palm Sunday 1498, a mob sacked the convent and arrested Savonarola. He was tried by the same city council whose power he had usurped. Tortured, he confessed he had fabricated his claims to have conversed with God. He later recanted but more torture was applied and he confessed again. The pope wanted him tried by an ecclesiastical court. Florence refused and condemned him to death.

On May 23, 1498, with two Dominicans who had remained loyal, he was led, barefoot in sack cloth, to the Piazza Signoria where only a year earlier he had burned the vanities of the Florentines. In the shadow of the magnificent fortress-palace, which to this

Earns Eagle Scout Badge

BOBBY HOPKINS

Bobby Hopkins, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Hopkins of Greenville, received his Eagle Scout badge Tuesday in a ceremony held at the Moose Lodge.

Bobby is a sophomore at J. H. Rose High School and a member of troop 362. His father is the scoutmaster of the troop.

Having been involved in scouts for five years, Bobby improved the landscaping at St. Peter's Catholic Church as his Eagle Scout project this past summer.

Seminar For Hairdressers

WILLIAMSTON — The Division of Continuing Education, Martin Community College, and the National Hairdresser and Cosmetologist Association of North Carolina will co-sponsor a seminar on Monday, Dec. 11, for all licensed hairdressers in northeastern North Carolina.

This is the first of several such seminars to be held for advanced cosmetology inservice training in the area, and continuing education units will be provided each participant.

The seminar begins at 8:30 and continues until 4:30. Robert Melton, member of the N. C. Hair Fashion Committee, will demonstrate techniques in cutting, styling, and make up.

The event is open only to licensed hairdressers. A $5 registration fee is being charged.

Economics Study

The Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce and Anne Creech of the Pitt County Community Schools Program will launch the first presentation of a program, "Economics for Young Americans," at G. R. Whitfield School, Grimesland, during Dec. 4-15.

Eighth graders at Whitfield will study such matters as "Money Matters," "Business Means Business About Ecology," and "Profits at Work" during the first week of study.

During the week of Dec. 11-15, speakers from the Greenville area business and professional world will address students on topics reviewed the previous week.

Speakers will include Jim McIntyre of McIntyre and Gerry, Inc., Bill Gidewell of First State Bank, Jim Hecker of Empire Brushes and Dean Painter of Pitt Technical Institute.

All materials and speakers for the program are sponsored by the area Chamber of Commerce through the Community Schools Program.

Approve New Bids On Recreation Site

WILLIAMSTON — After hearing protracted arguments for and against the possibility of purchasing the Police Park as a recreational site, members of the Williamston Town Board a Monday approved a motion to again let bids for the new recreation site. Action on the new site has been stalled due to the fact that earlier bids had been higher than expected.

Jim Horton, chairman of the Williamston Recreation Committee, explained that his opinion is that purchase of the Police Park would be a "bad move." Horton mentioned the poor condition of the building on the site and the high costs of renovation as the basis for his objections to considering the site.

He added that use of HUD money to purchase the site would also hamper development of the proposed new recreational site being considered.

Recreation Director Ed Beach indicated he feels purchase of the Police Park might be justified; and Town Administrative Assistant John Boykin expressed a belief that HUD funds could possibly be used if certain procedures were followed.

In the decision to put out bids again on the new project, the board members also opted to pursue information about the possible purchase of the Police Park in order to give the town an overall idea of what options are available.

At $2 Per Name, She Adopts 12

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Linda Sano's hobby is names, which she figures is reason enough to get her changed to Linda Elizabeth Zeamygk Xylona Opaline Zerdali Drusilla Holly Clare Sakura Kim Sano.

"What the heck, I might as well have an even dozen," said Ms. Sano after filing for the name change in Hennepin District Court.

Ms. Sano said she had considered taking one name for every letter of the alphabet, but figures they would be too hard to remember. Even 12 names aren't easy.

"I've been rehearsing," she said. "I wrote it up and taped it over the fireplace and I've been memorizing it for months and months."

By acting as her own lawyer, she hopes to hold the cost of the legal name change to $24. At $2 per name, that's a bargain.

In 1970, Gamal Abdel Nasser, president of Egypt and hero of the Arab world, died of a heart attack at age 52.

Five Traffic Mishaps Reported Here Tuesday

An estimated $5,625 property damage resulted from a series of five traffic collisions here yesterday — one involving three school buses carrying some 85 students.

Greenville Police reported none of the 85 students aboard the three buses, which collided about 4 p.m. on 14th Street, 50 feet East of the Evans Street intersection, were injured.

Officers identified the drivers of the buses as Theenie Elizabeth Barnes of 1914A Kennedy Cir., Charles Daise Jr. of 1916B Norcott Cir., and Edward Ken Harrington of Highland Park trailer park.

Investigators, who charged both Daise and Harrington with following too close, set damage at $200 to the bus driven by Miss Barnes, $700 to the vehicle driven by Daise, and $1,200 to the bus operated by Harrington.

Police reported a car driven by Jeffery Ray Erexson of Durham, collided with a parked car owned by Patricia Diane Cox of 1601 East First St. about

6:38 p.m. on First Street, 275 feet East of the Elm Street intersection, causing an estimated $875 damage to the Erexson vehicle and $950 damage to the Cox car.

An 8:14 a.m. mishap at the intersection of Chestnut Street and Paris Avenue resulted in an estimated $500 damage to a car driven by Anthony York Gray of Route 5, Greenville and $200 damage to a vehicle driven by Edward Earl Gray of 1400 Chestnut St., according to investigators.

Darden Dr. collided about 8:50 a.m. on Memorial Drive, just South of the Fifth Street intersection.

Police estimated damage from the collision at $250 to the Stator car and $150 to the Jacobs vehicle.

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are expected for the period until Friday from the central Gulf to the Northeast. Snow is due for the Great Lakes and northern New England as well as west Texas and New Mexico. Warm weather is predicted for the Gulf and most of the southern Atlantic states. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

A storm system over Arkansas and western Tennessee and the high pressure ridge which gave North Carolina its sunny skies Wednesday will produce southerly winds across the state for the next couple of days, but at the same time some unsettled weather is on the way, too.

Warming temperatures can be expected but there also will be an increase in humidity. Clouds were moving into the mountains today and will be east of the mountains tonight. Some scattered showers were expected late today in the mountains and they will be spreading tonight and Friday east of the mountains.

Temperatures ranged up into the 60s over most of the state Wednesday and were expected to do so again today. Asheville had the warmest reading, a 67. Lows this morning again were nippy, ranging mostly in the 30s.

Asheville and Rocky Mount shared a low of 28 degrees, while Greensboro had a low of 31, followed by Raleigh's 32.

SOLICITATION OKAYED

City Manager Ed Wyatt announced the approval of a request by the Greenville Seventh-Day Adventist Church for permission to conduct a door-to-door and sidewalk solicitation on Dec. 9.

Wyatt said the request was submitted by Ms. Vonnie L. Straughan.

Took Appeal To The Boss

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — His mother said "no," but Rep. Charles Wilson wouldn't listen, so she went over his head to Speaker of the House Thomas "Tip" O'Neill to bring her errand son into line.

Wilson, a Texas Democrat who had been threatened by terrorists on a trip to Nicaragua, said he was still planning a personal visit to Mexico. However, his mother, Mrs. Charles Wilson of Trinity, insisted he shouldn't go, and called O'Neill to back her up.

"I've been on the phone for 30 minutes with your mother and you're not going to Mexico," Wilson quoted O'Neill as saying.

"What you have to understand," O'Neill told Wilson, "is that your mother is holding me personally responsible for your well-being. I've got enough to worry about without that."

For good measure, O'Neill added, "You do want to be reappointed to the Appropriations Committee, don't you?"

Wilson said he agreed not to go to Mexico.

"I figured I had better give in," Wilson said. "She's a strong-willed woman. She'd probably have called President Carter next."

Hare Krishna Is Sunday Topic

day dominates the square, the three were given absolution by the papal legate and hanged. Their bodies were then burned while citizens, who had only a few weeks earlier been under his sway, hurled abuse at the corpses.

The bodies were thrown into the River Arno.

Today thousands of tourists walk over the marble plaque in the square which marks his place of death. Unfortunately his methods did not die with him — much to the cost of the 20th Century.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced slightly today, taking new evidence of continuing inflationary pressures in stride.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 1.21 at 823.11.

Gainers held a 6-5 lead over losers in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Before the market opened, the Labor Department reported that producer prices of finished goods rose 0.8 percent in November. The seasonally adjusted figure works out to an annual rate of 9.6 percent.

The figure was regarded as something of a disappointment by analysts who had been looking for a more significant easing in the producer-price index, which measures the trend of inflation at the next-to-last point in the distribution chain before goods are priced for retail sale.

The NYSE's composite index rose .09 to 54.60. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .23 at 152.17.

Volume on the Big Board dropped off to 8.72 million shares by noontime, against 15.07 million at the same point Wednesday.

Eleven Victims Feared

By MARK CRANE
Associated Press Writer
NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A fire raged through a three-story frame tenement early today, and officials said at least 11 persons were missing and feared dead after the roof collapsed.

City fire director John Caufield said 18 other occupants escaped, including one man who jumped from a second-story window.

A search for the missing was delayed until a demolition crew arrived shortly after 8 a.m.

"From the volume of fire and smoke, anyone inside is already dead. We'll take this building apart piece by piece looking for the bodies," Caufield said.

Residents on the upper floors were "cut off from any avenue of escape," Caufield said.

The origin of the blaze was under investigation because of its size and intensity when firemen arrived, the official said.

Witnesses gave authorities a description of a man they said ran from the building after the fire started.

"You couldn't tell a lot because we couldn't make much of an investigation because of the danger of the walls collapsing," Caufield said.

Caufield said firefighters arrived shortly after the 12:44 a.m. alarm to find the fire "fully involved on all floors."

The men could not get beyond the building's front hall, he said.

Arrested For Bank Holdup
KANNAPOLIS, N.C. (AP) — A 50-year-old Kannapolis man was arrested today and charged with the holdup of a bank in Charlotte last weekend.

The FBI said John Josey was apprehended without incident at Kannapolis this morning by FBI agents and officers of the Rowan County Sheriff's Office.

He was accused of holding up an office of the Security Bank and Trust Co. in Charlotte last Saturday. Authorities refused to say how much money was taken in the robbery.

Josey, who was scheduled to appear before a U.S. Magistrate in Charlotte later today, was the only suspect sought in the case.

figured that combat would bring the football season to an abrupt halt."

Cherry added "We had worked hard preparing for an attack, but the men never really expected one."

One of the things Cherry remembers vividly happened the night before the attack on Pearl Harbor. "Some buddies and I tried to bust up a fight. Those heroes got us rounded by the MPs, but once they realized that we were trying to stop the ruckus, they let us go. By that time it was early Sunday morning, and we all were ready to get some sleep and enjoy a peaceful Sunday morning."

William Cherry and his buddies did not have a peaceful morning that Sunday, Dec. 7.

"The Japanese Zeroes began strafing Schoefield around seven in the morning and there was chaos. I remember one soldier seeing the 'Rising Sun' on the side of a Japanese plane and thought it was maneuvers. He couldn't believe the Japanese were for real. They were pulling maneuvers all right," Cherry added, "they were blowing the hell out of us!"

Reacting to the surprise attack, Cherry said "we grabbed machine guns and climbed a narrow catwalk to the top of our barracks. There we set up and began firing, hoping to drop a few of the Japanese planes. Our guns weren't very effective, it all happened so fast."

Everyone is familiar with the heavy losses American forces sustained that day, in both lives and material. The Navy's Pacific fleet was moored at the docks or anchored in the harbor, and many of the ships were sunk or knocked out of action. Around Schoefield, planes on the ground were destroyed, and barracks were bombed and burned.

"We never got scared during the attack," Cherry recalls, "because things were happening so fast. But that night when we began to pull out from Schoefield, fear could be seen in our faces. No one slept that night."

'Sack It To 'Em' Gang Has Paced Louisiana Tech Defense

(Editor's Note: This is the second of three stories especially prepared for "The Daily Reflector" in an exchange program with the "Ruston Daily Leader. The third and final one will appear next week.)

Ruston (La.) Daily Leader

RUSTON, La. — Keith Thibodeaux considers himself very fortunate.

As the starting quarterback for Louisiana Tech University, he doesn't have to run against the team's "Sack It To 'Em" defense.

"A good defense makes for a good offense," says the junior signal-caller, "and we've got one of the best defenses around. I know one thing, I wouldn't want to play against them every day."

The "Sack It To 'Em" defense has gained plenty of respect once again this season.

Ranked among the national leaders last year, the Techsters finished no lower than second place in all four defensive categories of the Southland Conference.

That defense, indeed, was a vital factor in the Bulldogs' march to a second consecutive league title and berth in the third annual Independence Bowl against East Carolina University on December 16.

On the way to a 6-4-0 record, the Bulldogs:

- 1—Allowed 15.1 points per game;
- 2—158.4 rushing yards per game;
- 3—106.2 passing yards per game;
- 4—264.6 total yards per game.

Four members of the defense have been chosen to the first unit of the 1978 All-Southland Conference team, two others were second squad selections, and a Techster shares the co-"Most Valuable Player" on defense award.

"Maxie Lambright (Tech's head coach) was expecting his best defensive team ever this year," said Arkansas State boss Bill Davidson earlier this season. "and he certainly hasn't been disappointed."

"You can always bet that Lech will be tough on offense. That hasn't changed much over the years. But they're also very tough on defense. We saw their defense in the spring and we were very impressed."

What's impressive about the "Sack It to 'em" defense is, well, the sacks.

The Bulldogs have totalled 123 sacks for a total of 705 minus yards. Five players have 12 or more sacks.

The overall defensive leader is Jimmy Blackshire, a 6-2, 227-pound junior linebacker who paces the way in total tackles with 115 and has 13 sacks for a minus 103 yards.

He's a first-unit all-conference member for the second consecutive year.

The sacks' pacesetter is Ardis McCann, a 5-8, 215-pound senior nose guard who is co-MVP on defense for the SLC. He's recorded 31 sacks for a minus 203 yards and has 105 tackles.

Sophomore end Johnny Robinson (6-2, 225) and 6-0, 185-pound junior safety Jean Dornier are other first-team all-league representatives, while 6-2, 226-pound tackle Ronnie Paggett and 6-0, 187-pound cornerback Lavon James were selected to the second unit.

Paggett, a first-team all-conference player a year ago, is number three in tackles for the Techsters with 103 and has 16 sacks for a minus 102 yards.

Safety Bill Schneider, a senior from Ruston who intercepted two passes in a season-ending 18-0 loss to rival Northeast Louisiana, has 84 tackles and Robinson has 70 stops and 19 sacks (minus 105 yards).

Defensive end-linebacker Tony Tademy, only a sophomore, has been among the consistent young performers in the conference with his 61 tackles and eight sacks and two fumble recoveries.

Linebacker Rick Reggio, a sophomore who is only 5-8, 185-pounds, ranks eighth in team tackles with 48 and also has 12 sacks for a minus 70 yards.

Dornier tied for third place with five for 119 yards and a touchdown and James was sixth in interceptions, with four among SLC players.

Robinson has also recovered five fumbles and James has deflected 12 passes.

"We've been doing a great deal of blitzing throughout the season," said line coach Pat Collins, "but I believe most of our success has been due to having exceptional athletes.

"We've got good athletes who are getting to the football and making things happen. We've gained a lot of confidence since the start of the season."

At the start of the season, the Tech defense faced a lot of pressure. The 1977 squad had dominated final statistics in the conference and had ranked number one for overall defense in the nation at one time.

"We've come a long way since that first game against Tennessee-Chattanooga," said Collins. "We had the physical talent, but we lacked the experience at the ends and at linebacker.

"We've been gaining confidence every weekend this season."

Collins, who coached such future professional players as end Fred Dean of the San Diego Chargers, believes that this year's defense may be better than the '77 edition.

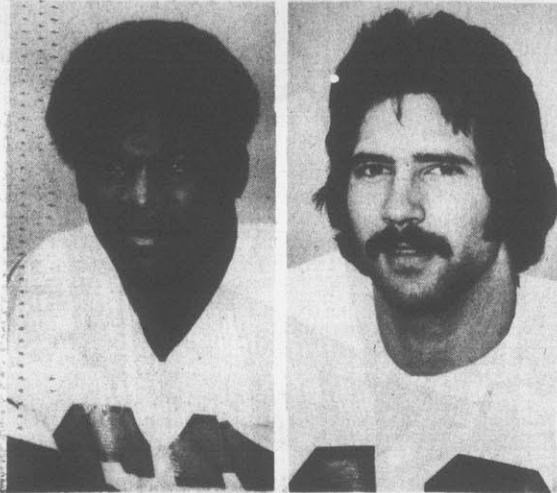

"We've played better defense overall," he said, "because our secondary play has been better. And another reason is the caliber of competition we've played. We've played some outstanding teams."

He mentions, in particular, Ball State.

"Since that game (fifth of the season), we've really improved. The players came out of that game with the attitude that it was an entirely new season. We've been improving ever since."

Tech whipped Ball State, which had won 13 consecutive games, by 17-7, and used the momentum to go on and win another league crown.

"We've grown into an outstanding defense," added Collins. The Bulldogs hope to keep growing at the Independence Bowl on December 16.

Jaguars Jump Onto AP Poll

By AL CARSON
The Durham Sun

The Falcons of Durham Jordan have narrowed the margin between second and first place in The Associated Press North Carolina high school basketball poll for 3-A teams.

Jordan is only 11 points behind No. 1 Washington, and earned two first-place votes this week after an 82-62 win over 4-A Northern Durham and a 90-60 victory over Jordan Matthews of Siler City.

"I still think it's a little early," said Falcon coach Johnny Avery, when told of his team's move upward. "We haven't had a good test, but we should get one Friday (against Hillsborough)."

Avery did admit that his team is way ahead of what he expected in preseason. "I was so impressed with our defense," he said. "It was terrific against Jordan Matthews."

While Durham Jordan moved up, Shelby Crest (1-2) moved out of the top ten 3-A teams, being replaced by Farmville Central. Farmville is off to a 30 start.

In the 4-A poll, Durham Hillside jumped past Greensboro Grimsley into second place behind Gastonia Ashbrook. The Hornets of Hillside upped their mark to 3-0 with an 81-73 win at Raleigh Broughton Tuesday.

Two teams, Northern Durham and Raleigh Enloe, dropped out of the 4-A ranking this week. They were replaced by Goldsboro (3-0) and Hickory (3-0).

Ashbrook received 13 of a possible 14 first place votes in the 4-A balloting, with McDowell County (4-9) getting the other top vote. Ashbrook has

North Carolina Gains Revenge For Loss; Nips Bucs By One

CHAPEL HILL — A difference of four-hundredths of a second meant the difference for East Carolina last night as the University of Tar Heels slipped past the Pirates, 57-56, in a dual meet.

The victory avenged a 61-52 win the Tar Heels suffered last season against the Pirates. At the same time, the UNC women swam to a 100 to 28 victory over the Lady Pirates. Nine meet records were set during the evening. Of the meet records, five were set by the Pirates and four by the Heels.

"This was an outstanding meet," ECU Coach Ray Scharf said. "Our guys swam their best times in most cases, and really performed better than we did in beating Carolina last year. But they just had too much depth for us. We won nine of the 12 events, but it wasn't enough."

Perhaps the deciding mark came early in the meet, in the 200-yard freestyle. East Carolina's John Tudor won the event, but the battle for second was what decided it. Carolina finished second and third, nosing out ECU's Joe Kuschy, who finished fourth. The third place time of 1:45.04, while Kuschy came in an eyelash behind, with a time of 1:45.08. That point would have made the Pirates a winner. The East Carolina men will travel to South Carolina this weekend for the South Carolina Invitational, while the women are idle until Saturday, December 16, when they join the men in hosting Old Dominion.

Pell Named As ACC Coach

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Former Clemson Coach Charley Pell has been named the Atlantic Coast Conference coach of the year for the second year in a row.

Pell, who was named Monday as the new head coach at the University of Florida, garnered 91 of 112 votes in balloting by members of the Atlantic Coast Conference Sports Writers Association.

Jerry Claiborne of Maryland was a distance second with 16 votes. His Terps lost the ACC title to Clemson in a 28-24 thriller.

Pell was head coach at Clemson for two seasons and in each won the ACC honor easily. A year ago the Tigers posted a 83-1 record and went to the Gator Bowl, their first post-season invitation since 1959. Ten Clemson players were chosen this year for the All-ACC football team.

In seven seasons as a head coach, Pell's teams have won 51 games and lost 17. Six of those defeats came in his first year as coach at Jacksonville (Ala.) State.

Pell played guard under Paul "Bear" Bryant at Alabama on the national championship team of 1961 when he was a junior. He spent a year at Alabama as a graduate assistant and then went to Kentucky as an assistant for four seasons.

He was named head coach at Jacksonville in 1969 and in five seasons there compiled a 33-131 record and twice was chosen Alabama coach of the year.

Pell left Jacksonville after the 1973 season to become an assistant at Virginia Tech. In 1976 he was brought to Clemson to head the defense under Red Parker.

presents America's most buttoned-up button-down.
Arrow Dover
As usual, Arrow (America's most buttoned-up shirt company) has taken a basic concept and made it better. They started with a natural blend of cotton and polyester, added exact sleeve and neck sizes, semi-tapering, and a seven button front. Result? One of the most fashionable, most comfortable shirts ever designed.
If you're looking to look very buttoned-up, come see us for a wide selection of Arrow button-downs.

Football: Title IX Reprieve

By TOM SEPPY
AP Sports Writer
 WASHINGTON (AP) — Colleges with major football teams — now under federal orders to divide most men's sports revenue with women's athletic programs — appear headed for a reprieve.

Schools with expensive men's basketball programs may also get special treatment.

The Carter administration issued proposed new guidelines Wednesday aimed at clarifying current regulations barring sex discrimination in intercollegiate athletics.

But some interested parties said special exceptions in the new guidelines make them unclear, and one critic, Lynda Weston of the Project on Equal Education Responsibility, said, "It looks like they blew a hole right down the middle of the law."

Joseph A. Califano Jr., the secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, told a news conference the proposed guidelines are to ensure that colleges provide women an equal opportunity in athletics, but he said they also take into account economic realities facing schools.

The guidelines are issued under Title IX, adopted six years ago to bar sex discrimination in educational institutions receiving federal aid.

Califano will accept comment for 60 days before deciding whether to put the proposals into effect in time for the 1979 school year.

The guidelines require that expenditures on men's and women's athletics be proportional to the number of men and women participating. But not always.

The standard of "substantially equal per capita expenditures" can be sidestepped if a school can demonstrate that spending differences are based on what Califano called "non-discriminatory factors such as the cost of a sport...the equipment required or the scope of competition."

"The interpretation recognizes that intercollegiate football, in particular, is unique among sports at some institutions because of the size of its teams, the support staffs and facilities it requires and the volume of revenue it generates," said Califano.

The guidelines also suggest that basketball, when involving competition at the national level, may also deserve special treatment.

David Tadel, director of the U.S. Office for Civil Rights, said informal calculations on the guidelines — including the exceptions — show they "will require...immediate increases of anywhere from $60,000 to $200,000" for women's programs. "A lot of that is in terms of scholarships or adding another coach."

The University of Georgia's athletic director, Joel Eaves, said strict compliance with the current "per capita expenditures" provision would require his school to find nearly $1 million a year more for women's athletics unless men's programs were cut.

Women Not Pleased With HEW Decision

By The Associated Press
 The announcement by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare that the same amount of money per capita must be spent on women's sports as on men's sports has brought strong negative reaction from several factions of the collegiate sports world.

The decision exempting football from the regulations was accepted gladly by most schools, however.

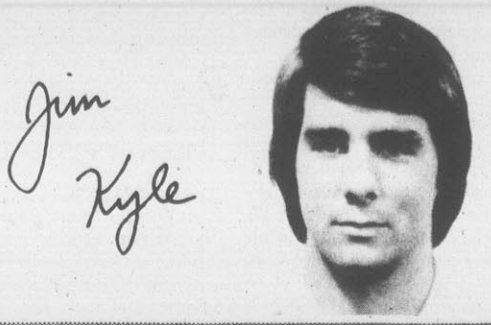

special consideration given football, said: "Now we have a chance maybe to meet the guidelines without destroying intercollegiate athletics."

Thompson, chairman of the men's athletic council at Texas, was relieved that football was exempted but felt that the smaller sports would suffer. "There might be the temptation to cut them out," he said of the less-popular, non-revenue producing sports. "The guidelines could cause a lot of trouble there."

"The HEW interpretations have been confusing in the past," said Ron Perry, athletic director at Holy Cross. "Now they're trying to make them easier to understand. I like the idea of guidelines."

Amy Dahl, assistant athletic director for the University of Oklahoma, was happy with the HEW announcement.

"As a woman, I am excited," Dahl said. "It is good that HEW has carried through and is finishing what they started years ago."

(Editor's Note: Jim Kyle is on assignment in Florida. His column is written by Woody Peele today.)

There is something about going to Williamsburg, Va., that leaves me a little jealous when we come back to Greenville.

Every time I walk into William & Mary Hall, where the Indians play basketball, I want to figure out some way to bundle up the building and take it back to North Carolina with me.

The building is almost ideal for Greenville, and East Carolina University. There are so many uses that can be made for it.

In past trips to Williamsburg, we have seen the auditorium portion of the building used for various events. One year, a church group was holding a convention in it. Another year, there was another meeting going on.

This year, a wrestling tournament was being held. And on Friday night, student movies were shown there.

While not looking like it on the outside, the building is a physical education facility. Surrounding the main gym are a number of offices and facilities for such sports as handball, wrestling, gymnastics, and the like.

The center portion includes the basketball and track facility. The auditorium seats just under 9,000 for basketball, and additional seating could be brought in to bring it to around 10,000.

The basketball floor is tartan, with the rest of the floor a rubberized compound. Facilities for indoor track surround the basketball court, including a four-lane oval track, and a six-lane straightaway.

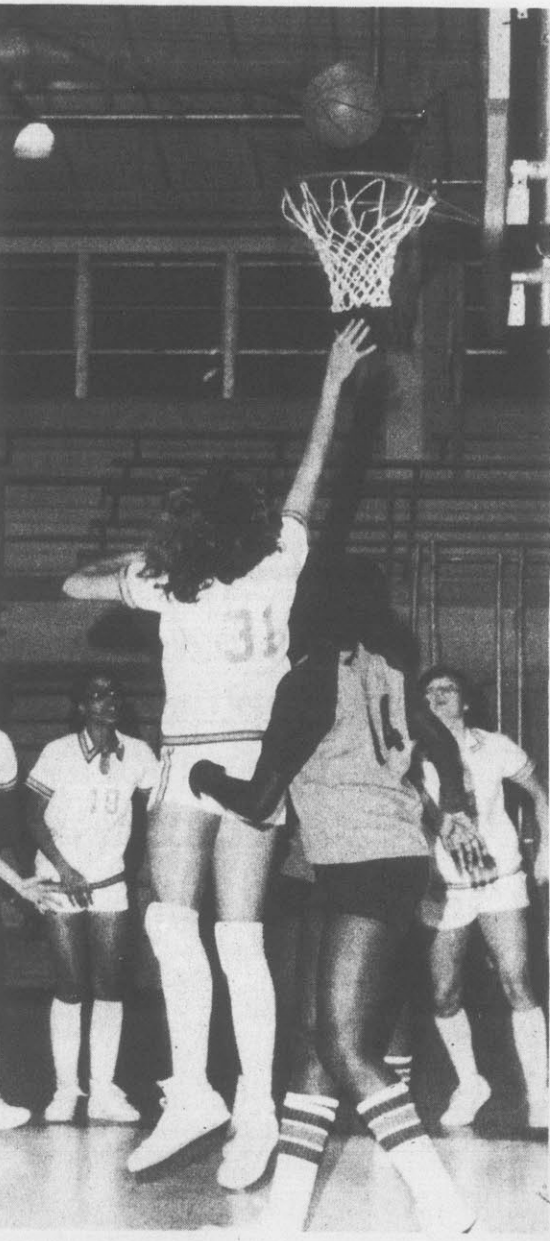

Seating is left out of one end of the building, where entry doors provide access for bringing in large items, trucks, etc. A stage can also be erected at that end. In the upper reaches at the opposite end, a booth for motion picture projection or spotlight operation is located.

Overall, it would be an ideal setup for East Carolina. Not only could all of the indoor sports at East Carolina use it, both men's and women's basketball, wrestling, track, and gymnastics, but it could also be used for concerts, conventions, meetings, and the like.

Greenville and East Carolina need such a building. It has been talked of for many years. We have written about it for many years, also.

New chancellor Thomas Brewer has recognized the need for such a facility, also.

Perhaps the time is ripe...this time.

Farmville Central, Despite Late Start, Aims For The Title

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer
Farmville Central's defending Eastern Carolina Conference tournament champion wrestling team is running behind at this point due to the Jaguars' long football season, but coach Linwood Woodard said he hopes things will come around by the middle of the season.

"We're very behind in conditioning and technique because of football," Woodard stated. "But, we've got some kids working real hard, and by the tournament, we should be in good shape."

The strength of the team, like last season, is in the middle weights, from 119 to 155. "We're hurting in the lower and upper weights," Woodard said. "But in the middle, we should be able to compete fairly well. That's where our experience and our stronger wrestlers are."

Senior Jeff Ebron, who finished second in the conference last year, wrestles at 119. He has been hurt in practice time by football, but has a tremendous knowledge of the sport, which should help him in early matches. Backing him are freshmen Rusty Cotton and Willie Davis.

Another conference runner-up from last season, junior David Newton, gets the nod at 126. "He seems to be a little quicker and stronger this year," Woodard commented. "I hope he will be a conference champion this season." A trio of freshmen give support at 126, Bobby Barnes, Robert Barnes and Lee Lanier.

Elmer Ebron, a senior, is starting for the first time at 132. He gained a lot of experience in exhibition matches last season. Robert Barnes and William Dixon, both freshmen, back him up.

Sophomore Roger Joyner is at 153. He started last year, and is in a little better shape this year. Raymond May, a freshman, is his backup.

Two experienced wrestlers are at 145, senior Dennis Brown and junior Mike King. Brown had a good season last year, and should do even better this year. He looked extremely good in the team's preseason scrimmage.

King is one of the best wrestlers on the team technique-wise, but has had trouble finding a weight class. He could also wrestle at 155. Also at 145 are freshmen Dennis Wiggins and Tony Tyson.

Ronnie Shackelford will be the starter at 155. He's a first-year junior, who has real good strength, but needs experience.

In the lower weights, Tommy King, a sophomore, gets the nod at 98. He was a starter last year, but is also getting a late start.

Freshman Byron White starts at 105. He doesn't have any experience, but has a knowledge of wrestling since his older brother was a wrestler.

In the early part of the season, the Jaguars will have to forfeit at 112, but three freshmen could stake a claim on that spot before the year is out. They are Brady Nichols, Tony Barnes and Ronnie Harris.

In the upper weights, first-year senior Kenneth Harris is at 167. He only weighs 156, but is strong and quick enough to wrestle at 167, Woodard said.

Sophomore Johnny Grimsley is at 185. He was a conference champion last season and is a hard worker. Freshmen Clifton Harrington is behind him.

First-year senior Phillip Gordon is at 195. Gordon is very intelligent, Woodard said, and should do well despite inexperience. "He's very behind, but he's going to be able to pick it up." We'll use him sparingly at first."

Sophomore Ronnie Locust returns at heavyweight. He showed great improvement over last season, and this year will have someone to work out with, freshman Virgil Jordan. Jordan may be able to push Locust later in the year, Woodard said.

Despite a number of losses, D. H. Conley should be favored to win the ECC title this year, Woodard said. The Vikings "always come up with somebody, and they have an excellent coach."

Woodard said Southern Nash and North Pitt have everyone returning and should be strong. The conference should be balanced this season.

"We hope that by the middle of the season, we can get competitive and challenge them," Woodard said.

Louisville Nips Michigan By 86-84

By KEN RAPPOPOR
AP Sports Writer
When the game got down to the crucial stage, the Michigan Wolverines knew they had to keep their eyes on Darrell Griffith. But unfortunately for them, they couldn't get their hands on him.

Louisville's splendid junior guard was an elusive bird on the wing in the last two minutes and 40 seconds, scoring five important points to help the seventh-ranked Cardinals beat the sixth-ranked Wolverines 86-84 in a battle of college basketball titans Wednesday night.

"It was a hell of a game, exactly what we thought it would be," acknowledged Michigan's assistant coach Bill Frieder, subbing for the fast-breaking Johnny Orr, who left in a hurry after the bitter struggle at Louisville's Freedom Hall.

The score was tied at 79 when Griffith took matters into his own hands. He put the Cardinals ahead for good with a 22-foot jumper at the 2:40 mark and with 1:30 left, he stole a Michigan pass, dribbled the length of the court and hit a six-footer to give Louisville an insurmountable 85-79 lead. Griffith then scored his 25th point of the night on a foul shot with 16 seconds remaining.

In other games involving ranked teams, No. 3 Notre Dame bombed Northwestern 101-57; No. 8 North Carolina State trimmed Davidson 97-77; No. 11 Southern Cal edged Stanford 57-55; No. 16 Marquette whipped Bowling Green 72-57 and 20th-ranked Georgetown turned back Indiana 60-54.

Kelly Tripucka and Rich Branning scored 15 points apiece to pace Notre Dame over Northwestern. The Irish scored the game's first five points and were never caught by the Wildcats in an error-filled game that produced 49 turnovers.

Clyde Austin scored 20 points and Charles "Hawkeye" Whitney had 18 to lead North Carolina State's conquest of Davidson. The Wolfpack scored the game's first eight points and jumped out to an insurmountable 56-29 lead at the half.

Gene Jones' two free throws with 10 seconds to play led Southern Cal over Stanford in the Pacific-10 opener for both schools. Stanford's Darryle Morgan had tied the game at 55 only 25 seconds earlier with two foul shots.

Bernard Toone's 22 points led Marquette over Bowling Green. The Warriors, unbeaten in three starts, shot 59 percent from the floor.

Steve Martin scored 12 of his 16 points during a five-minute span of the second half and combined with Eric Floyd to lead Georgetown over Indiana. Floyd led the Hoyas' scoring with 21 points.

Elsewhere, Billy Williams scored 17 points to lead Clemson over South Carolina 70-65; Jim Elenz's two foul shots near the end paced St. Bonaventure over Villanova 76-74; Sidney Moncrief scored 25 points and grabbed 16 rebounds to lead Arkansas over West Texas State 84-54; Alan Taylor's 25 points led Brigham Young past Utah State 99-80; Lowes Moore's 17 points triggered West Virginia over Marshall 79-73 and Pat Cummings scored 27 points to lead Cincinnati over Miami of Ohio 70-59.

Also, Wake Forest tripped East Tennessee State 93-78 as Frank Johnson scored 24 points; Penn blasted Tulane 76-59 as Tim Smith and Bobby Willis combined for 36; Ernie Cobb's 25 points paced Boston College over Providence 83-65; Howard McNeil hit four free throws late in the game to help seal Seton Hall's 67-65 decision over Princeton; Derrick Mayes' free throw with four seconds left helped Illinois State beat Southern Illinois 89-86; Alfred Barney and Tim Thomas each scored 24 points to lead Austin Peay to a 98-78 victory over Arkansas-Little Rock.

Mrs. Johnson Says She Prayed After Shooting

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Republican National Committee member Betty Lou Johnson, who said she shot her husband in self defense, told a Wake County Superior Court jury, Wednesday that she prayed on her knees immediately after the slaying.

Mrs. Johnson said she shot her husband, prominent pediatrician Dr. Archie Johnson, after he beat her and threatened to kill her and their three children. She is charged with first-degree murder for the killing, which took place July 10th at the estranged couple's home in Raleigh.

Open in tears, Mrs. Johnson said a heated argument broke out over conditions of a permanent separation.

Mrs. Johnson, 38, said a neighbor, the Rev. Douglas E. Reper, came to the house after the shooting and "asked me if there was something he could do."

"Let's pray," she testified.

"And did you?" asked defense attorney Allen A. Bailey of Charlotte.

"Yes," she replied. "On our knees in the front yard."

Johnson, 41, was shot three times with a .32-caliber pistol. He suffered wounds in the forehead, chest and groin. Mrs. Johnson has entered a plea of innocent.

The trial was to continue today.

On the night of July 10, Mrs. Johnson said her husband demanded that they reach an agreement on a permanent separation. They had been separated for about a month.

Singles Club Sponsors Dance

The Greenville Singles Club is sponsoring a Christmas dinner dance Saturday, Dec. 9.

There will be a buffet dinner at 7:30 p.m., with a dance following at 8:30 p.m. Members who bring a covered dish item will be admitted free. All other members and guests will be charged a fee.

The monthly bridge night will be held Dec. 21, with the location to be announced at a later time. A holiday dance will be held Dec. 30.

To attend Singles Club functions or to become a member, one must be at least 21 years old and single. Guests are welcome. For more information, call Bill Lincoln, 746-3314, J. C. Pennucci, 752-1421, or Preston Haddock, 746-3840.

"Archie said we had to come to some agreement about the separation," she told the jury. "We were seated at the kitchen table. I told Archie I was pleased that he had brought up the separation. I had been trying to get him to discuss some permanent settlement for a long time."

She said the discussion snagged on her insistence that a written document spell out the arrangements. "But he said to forget it. He wouldn't put anything in writing."

Mrs. Johnson said her husband was drinking bourbon during the discussion. After he declared that his family only wanted money from him, she testified. "I told him I wasn't going to discuss it any more, that it was obvious we couldn't reach an agreement."

She said he vowed to kill her, her children and her father. Upon hearing the threat, Mrs. Johnson said, she got a gun from a closet and shot her husband as he tried to grab her.

Nation's Timekeepers Have Turned To Satellite System

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Punctuality is the politeness of kings," according to Louis XVIII, but there are few kings left and being on time has progressed from politeness to necessity.

For as much as Americans depend on electricity for the niceties and necessities of daily life, the utilities depend on accurate time measurements to keep things operating efficiently.

And the spring-or weight-driven clocks of Louis' era, for all their beauty and intricacy, differed from today's quartz and atomic timepieces almost as much as the barnstormer's Curtis Jenny differs from the supersonic Concorde jetliner.

Faced with power shortages at periods of peak demand, many of the nation's utilities have interconnected their systems so they can share electricity to avoid blackouts or brownouts.

But complex switching of massive amounts of power demands exact synchronization, something that can only be achieved with accurate time information over a large geographical area.

This is being supplied by satellite, with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration relaying time signals produced by the nation's timekeepers — the National Bureau of Standards.

Bureau scientists have developed highly accurate quartz clocks which receive a signal from the satellites and continually reset themselves according to this signal.

The clocks are now being manufactured commercially and can be obtained for about $3,500, presumably by persons in need of extremely accurate time.

The satellite signal is generated by atomic clocks located at a ground station in Wallops Island, Va.

These clocks, which measure time by the vibration of atoms, can be accurate to within one second in 3,000 years.

Besides helping utilities to cooperate and coordinate their operations, accurate time signals help trace problems and keep the electricity flowing at the proper rate.

In the event of a blackout, for example, dozens of circuit breakers can be tripped almost simultaneously as a power surge moves through the system.

But if a utility company's recording instruments are equipped with a means of recording the exact time, a sequence of events can be established, the fault can be traced back to its point of origination and the problem can be fixed.

The satellite system can also be used by utilities to maintain accurate frequency standards for their electricity.

They want to maintain 60 cycles per second on alternating current because many machines and instruments — such as electric clocks and phonograph turntables — depend on this frequency to operate properly.

The satellite system went into action experimentally about a year ago to assist in meteorological studies, but has since become established as a time standard.

Since 1923 the Bureau of Standards had been broadcasting time and frequency standards on special radio stations but these waves were bounced off the upper atmosphere. Since the ionosphere isn't always at the same height, the distance traveled by the signals varied and there would be a difference in when the signal arrived at one place and when it was received at another.

With the satellites permanently in orbit, the distance traveled by the time signal is always the same and, therefore, more accurate.

Seek Rebuttal To New York Times' Article

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The leader of the Wilmington 10 was reported today to be seeking space in The New York Times to reply to a recent article that said there might be reason to doubt supporters of the group who contend that the 10 are innocent.

"We have requested from The New York Times the opportunity to write a rebuttal in the earliest possible edition, and negotiators are still working out the details," reporters were told Wednesday by Irv Joyner, a Raleigh attorney retained by the Wilmington 10's leader, the Rev. Ben Chavis.

An article in Sunday's New York Times magazine, citing a three-month investigation, concluded that "the innocence of the Wilmington 10 is far from clear-cut."

The article quoted an unidentified source as saying Chavis ordered the 1971 firebombing of a Wilmington grocery store, although Chavis was not present at the blaze which was one of a series of incidents during a period of racial disturbances in the coastal city.

The source, a black Wilmington man who agreed to the interview on condition his name not be used, gave The Times an account purporting to relate activities of Chavis and other key figures in the incidents, with details that did not come out in the group's 1972 trial, according to the article.

The 10 include nine black men convicted of conspiracy and unlawful burning in the firebombing of the store, and one white woman who was convicted of being an accessory before the fact in the same incident.

Broaden Scope On Smugglers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mexico and the United States have announced renewed efforts to block heroin smuggling over the border.

The nations said representatives from Mexico have joined the United States-Mexico Consultative Commission on Narcotics. And at a news conference Wednesday, Rep. Lester L. Wolff, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, said his recent visit to Mexico showed the opium poppy eradication program there has had an impact in the United States.

"where the number of overdose deaths has declined by over 50 percent and the purity of street heroin has been reduced."

Subpoena Issued In SGA Inquiry

WASHINGTON (AP) — The records of a Maryland firm have been subpoenaed by federal investigators looking into allegations that the General Services Administration overpaid a computer company more than $300,000, according to sources.

The sources who asked to remain anonymous said Wednesday the Justice Department's task force probing allegations of wrongdoing in the SGA obtained the subpoena for records of the Icarus Corp. of Rockville, Md., a subcontractor for Computer Sciences Corp., which was awarded a $100 million contract to provide government agencies with computer services. Jim Furlong, a Computer Sciences spokesman at the company's headquarters in El Segundo, Calif., denied any payoffs were made.

Waltons Relive Pearl Harbor

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's said TV has gotten so low they've hired midget programmers to make the producers feel at home. But not all is lost. CBS' "The Waltons" still is with us.

This gentle Virginia hill-country clan, whose series first was set in the Depression era, has been on for seven years.

Each year, its stories reflect not only family changes, such as Grandpa Walton's death or John-Boy's departure to journalism, but also changes in American history up to the approach of World War Two.

Tonight, on the 37th anniversary of Japan's attack on Pearl Harbor, it has a superb episode about how the Waltons and their neighbors learned of and reacted to the news that plunged America into war.

It's a sad show. Two of the cast have loved ones at Pearl Harbor.

One is Mary Ellen (Judy Norton-Taylor), now married and mother of a baby boy, John Curtis. Her husband, an Army doctor, is stationed in Hawaii.

The other, a black neighbor lady (Lynn Hamilton), has a son aboard the battleship Arizona at Pearl Harbor.

In a good, tightly sketched series of vignettes, scriptwriter Paul Savage opens the show on a peaceful Sunday morning, Dec. 7, 1941, the day Franklin D. Roosevelt was to say "will live in infamy."

For the Waltons, it starts as a quiet day of church, family dinner and relaxation in the backwoods of Virginia. Mary Ellen, planning to join her husband by Christmas, is happily packing.

One of the Walton boys is off at a civil defense drill, halfheartedly pouring sand on a woodpile marked "Fire." Another is off on a date with a dense blonde girl who drives a red convertible.

His mother (Michael Learned), who fears the lass appears "suggestive," is spirited off by her husband (Ralph Waite) to the woods to cut a Christmas tree for Mary Ellen.

And Grandma Walton (Ellen Corby, still a fine actress even though her speech was impaired by a stroke a year ago) is settling down by the radio to listen to her favorite Sunday concert program.

She's the first to get the news of the Pearl Harbor attack, news that arrives in different, well-depicted ways to members of the family. It unites the clan as never before.

And in particularly effective scenes, Mary Ellen proves the strongest Walton, keeping her fears muted except when she's alone with her memories of courtship, marriage and the birth of her son.

An excellent show, this one, and you should see it if only to be assured not all of today's television is wretched. It won't be as long as it offers series like "The Waltons."

Waltons Wednesday in Los Angeles. Learned, who has played Olivia Walton, the mother, for seven years, has resigned from the show. Her last performance filmed yesterday will air on January 18. (AP Laserphoto)

South had to exhibit excellent technique in selecting the best line to bring home his grand slam. See if you can equal his skill.

North could have made a jump shift in hearts at his first turn, but decided to keep the bidding low since he might need room for exploration. At his next turn North tried to elicit heart support from his partner, but South could not oblige. After discovering via Blackwood that his side held all the aces, North reckoned that there should be a good play for a grand slam if either major suit could be brought home.

West led the nine of diamonds, and declarer could count nine fast winners. To make the grand slam, it would seem that he would have to take a finesse in one of the majors. Can South improve his odds?

Declarer can, if he wishes, cash a high heart honor and then finesse, but this is not the proper way to tackle the suit. Even if the finesse succeeds, the suit will not run if West started with four to the queen. So take a point if you decided against that.

Move up in the standings if you elected to cash the ace and king of one major and then finesse in the other. But does it make any difference which major ace-king you cash?

You are an honor student if you decided to first cash the ace-king of hearts, for by doing so you have given yourself an extra chance. If the queen of hearts does not drop, you can then turn your attention to spades. Cash the king of spades to guard against the possibility of a singleton queen, then finesse.

Why is this superior? If you cash the ace and king of spades first, you no longer have the option of guarding against the singleton queen of hearts offside—the percentage play is to take two immediate finesses. But that is not true if you try hearts first, for you can still pick up a singleton queen of spades, or four to the queen in the East hand.

This is a delicate point, but that is what makes for expert technique. As an undeserved reward, you will still make your grand slam if you cashed two high spades and then one high heart.

'60 Minutes' Fell To Fourth

NEW YORK (AP) — The week was hardly one of distinction for the TV news-magazine, though a fourth-place finish for "60 Minutes" would, under normal circumstances, be quite satisfying to CBS.

But for "60 Minutes," it was a fall from first to fourth after a 10-year climb to the top that climaxed the week before. ABC's "20/20," in one of its sporadic appearances, was ranked No. 48 for the week ending Dec. 3, and the premiere installment of NBC's "Weekend" as a weekly, prime-time program, was 65th — dead last.

ABC had the week's three top-rated shows, including No. 1 "Laverne and Shirley," figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. showed. "Laverne and Shirley" was fifth the week before, behind "60 Minutes" and two other CBS programs, "All in the Family" and "Alice."

Indeed, the shakeup at the top had little effect on the networks' ratings race, with ABC No. 1 as it has been all but twice this season.

ABC's rating was 19.7, followed by CBS at 19.5 and NBC at 18.7. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 19.7 percent of the homes in the country were tuned to ABC.

ABC's "Happy Days" and "Three's Company" trailed their Tuesday night companion in the ratings, followed by NBC's best, "Little House on the Prairie," in a tie with "60 Minutes" and two other shows. "Alice," meanwhile, dipped to No. 9, and "All in the Family" was 13th. The two

Indira Gandhi Regaining Power

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi now heads the largest opposition party in India and can become opposition leader in the lower house of Parliament if she chooses.

Mrs. Gandhi was unanimously elected chairman Wednesday of the "Indira Congress" party she formed last January after bolting the original Congress Party. She ran unopposed.

Her party controls 75 seats in the 544-seat lower house, far fewer than the 304 of Prime Minister Morarji Desai's ruling Janata Party but more than the 66 seats held by the old Congress Party.

The former prime minister, who lost her government and her own seat in the March 1977 general election, returned to Parliament last month after victory in a special election in Chikmagalur, southern India.

Floating In Closed Tank Fights Stress, Tension

By DEBORAH FRAZIER
DENVER (UPI) — A silent, pitch-dark tank of warm salt water is a refuge from tension for exasperated executives, harried housewives and overworked students.

Stress-ridden persons of all ages float on temperate water inside a playhouse-sized box that shuts out light, sound and most other physical stimuli. The normal float time is an hour.

"Some people fall asleep, others report work on problem solving," said tank entrepreneur Gary Higgins. "Some say they don't remember ever thinking so clearly. Fantastic and wonderful are the words we hear most."

The tanks are an offshoot of Dr. John Lilly's work for the Pentagon during World War II on sensory deprivation. In the early 1960s, Lilly expanded his findings on the effects of isolation at the National Institute for Mental Health.

Lilly currently is involved in dolphin-human communication and the tanks have become a business for others.

Independently owned and operated tank operations have opened throughout Colorado.

Arizona, Texas, Chicago, New Mexico and Indiana have one each.

Higgins has equipped a motor home with a tank and plans to visit 24 cities nationwide to start still more.

A tank is a four-foot high, eight-foot long plastic-lined wooden box. The bottom 12 inches holds 220 gallons of water heated to the average body surface temperature of 93.5 degrees.

About 540 pounds of solar-dried sea salt or epsom salts are dissolved in the water. The super-saturated solution is designed to make bodies buoyant. The water is constantly filtered to remove hair, body oil and skin. Floaters undress and shower before entering the tank.

Lilly found humans are bombarded by more than 400 million sensory inputs each second. He created tanks on the theory that the brain functions more effectively when sensory stimuli are absent.

Wealthy admirers of Lilly built tanks in their homes, but exploration of the commercial possibilities is new.

Higgins said several firms offer individual units with philosophies ranging from religious to psychological.

"I'm not interested in selling an ideology," said Higgins. "I am interested in selling a service where the bottom line is relaxation."

He and three partners opened the Denver Tank Works in January as a storefront operation with six units and before-and-after-float rooms to ease the transition back to the stimulus-filled world.

Clients pay $6 per hour. Higgins said he and his partners gross about $5,000 a month from about 20-25 floaters a day. Overhead ranges from $1,800 to $3,000, depending on advertising costs.

Higgins' firm and the Colorado Tank Works manufacture the units for $1,600 each and offer franchises. He predicts floating will become as widespread an antidote to stress as alcohol and drugs.

"Stress is the single biggest problem in the U.S. It's the human version of a circuit overload. It's a mind state that everyone has and it creates most of the other health problems like heart attacks, drug dependence and alcoholism.

"People need other ways of dealing with stress, like getting away from the environment that produces it. That's what the tanks provide — a nearly stimulus-free environment," said Higgins.

The thought of spending an hour or more in a pitch black, soundless container of warm salt water is unattractive to some.

"They think they will freak out, but no one has yet. And almost everyone stays in for the full hour. They can get out at any time by lifting the door, so it is quite different from sensory deprivation" which is involuntary," he said.

Neurologically, a float slows brain activity by removing most of the physical stimuli and diminishing the processing load, he said. As a result, the brain concentrates on thoughts or relaxes as it would in sleep patterns.

"The more capable of relaxing you are, the deeper level of relaxation you reach. A one-hour experience seems to last only 10 or 15 minutes. Some people say the feeling of relaxation lasts several days," he said.

Higgins said doctors have told heart attack prone businessmen to float; drug counselors have encouraged addicts to use tanks during withdrawal; students troop in after a night of studying and psychiatrists use tanks to treat anxiety.

The most difficult hurdle for new tank businesses, Higgins added, is explaining tanks to agencies that issue permits.

"They tend to classify by what they know — saunas, therapeutic baths, massages. We are none of those. We originally were turned down for a plumbing permit because we didn't fit an existing classification," he said.

"It's a $6 vacation, available to everyone who wants to escape the stresses of their environment without driving to the mountains. Tanks are an idea whose time is now."

Store Provides Alternatives

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — If you happen to be shopping for a windmill, one of Canada's most unusual stores will sell you one for $3,685.

Wind power is just one of the items for sale at Western Canada's first alternative energy store.

It opened in September, but already there's a constant stream of customers into the elegantly decorated store stocked with everything from wood stoves and solar panels to organic toilets and water turbines.

The Solace Energy Center's store is operated by a company of the same name, established 18 months ago by three friends who decided to pool their talents and interest in alternative energy.

The three, in their 20s or early 30s, met at the University of British Columbia.

The company president is architect Bob Isaac-Renton, with Ed Martin and Vic Enns as partners. They are interested in development of the Third World as well as in alternative energy.

higher than for non-renewable energy such as oil and gas. The alternative systems will pay for themselves over a period of years.

Wandering through the store is like a visit to an international alternative energy bazaar.

The windmill is from Australia; the wood-burning stoves from Norway, Taiwan, Ireland, France and the United States; the organic toilets, which turn human wastes into compost, from Sweden; and the water turbine Pelton wheel is made here.

In the field of solar energy, the store has everything from solar panels to the black paint used on solar collectors.

"We have tried to get a range of prices and equipment," said Isaac-Renton. "We're working on a package unit for domestic hot water that can be fitted onto any existing house."

The store has dozens of books about alternative energy and even sells solar-kit toys for children.

"We hope that eventually we can use the business as a jumping-off point to take our expertise to the Third World," said Martin in a recent interview.

"We are also concerned about the depletion of non-renewable resources so we want to offer a practical form of alternative energy to the average person in Canada.

"We want to make people aware how they are polluting the environment by using nonrenewable resources."

Martin said the trio had spent a year researching alternative energy products before deciding what items to stock in their store.

"We compare laboratory tests for all the products we consider selling so that everything has been lab tested," he said. "We want to be in business for a long time."

Isaac-Renton and engineer Enns will also design alternative energy systems and installations for customers.

They are convinced that, although the initial outlay for alternative energy may be

CONSTRUCTION SITE — After 16 years of talks with the Russians about building a new U.S. Embassy, this bare construction site is all there is to show for it. (UPI Photo)

A New U.S. Embassy Is Just Talked

By DOUGLAS STANGLIN MOSCOW (UPI) — When the Americans and the Russians first sat down to talk about building a new U.S. embassy in Moscow, John Kennedy was in the White House, Nikita Khrushchev was in the Kremlin, coffee was selling for 10 cents a cup.

Kennedy, Khrushchev and cheap coffee are gone but, after 16 years of talk about a new embassy, the only thing both sides have to show for it is a huge hole in the ground about ready to fill up with snow.

Even if the final contract can be locked up in December, it will still be spring before work can get underway.

By then, the chronically small pool of construction labor will be further drained as the Soviets work to complete the buildings for the 1980 Olympics.

The American embassy has been housed since 1952 in a cramped, 10-story yellow-stucco building built in the late 1940s as a Soviet apartment house.

The top floors were gutted last year by fire, aggravating already crowded conditions.

An embassy employees union recently complained that parts of the building remain a firetrap. And one of the two main elevators leaks when it rains.

But building a new embassy in Moscow is not simply a matter of taking bids from contractors, selecting one and breaking ground.

Its a full-blown diplomatic event.

Actually, the two sides are negotiating the building of two embassies simultaneously — the U.S. embassy in Moscow and a new Soviet embassy in Washington.

In a typical diplomatic maneuver, both sides have agreed that each must start work at the same time and neither is to move in until both buildings are finished.

Since work on the Soviet embassy in Washington will be done by American workers and a U.S. construction company, that clause is particularly important.

Soviet construction projects are notoriously slow by American standards and there was the fear that the Soviet embassy would rise overnight on the Washington skyline while the Moscow project might drag on for months.

The clause also eliminates the chance of a work slowdown by one side for purely political reasons.

The major hangup in getting underway in Moscow is completing the final language in a construction contract and negotiating the price.

"It has to be a marriage between both sides to get this thing built," said Gene Ballard, project director for the Moscow embassy.

The biggest obstacle is the fundamental differences in the two economic systems, with the American side running into the worst complications.

In Washington, the Soviet side had only to deal with a private contractor — "a snap," said Ballard.

But in Moscow, since everything is owned and run by the state, the Americans found themselves dealing not with a private company eager to start work but rather a government — with all the bureaucratic red tape that entails.

"The system is rigid," said one member of the American negotiating team. "No single person has the negotiating latitude to make a decision."

Much time has been spent on an item-by-item discussion with the Soviets over the kind of materials to use.

Ballard said each side had to determine whether they would use American ceramic tiles or perhaps Soviet plumbing fixtures or American-made bricks.

The process has been time consuming and, in the end, almost everything will be shipped in from the West.

"Almost everything but concrete and steel," he said. "It's a big logistics problem." The embassy also had to negotiate rights to warehouse space and a storage site for supplies.

Ballard said the embassy complex will take about four years to finish — a year longer than it would take if built in the United States.

The bulk of the work will be done by 800 to 1,500 Soviet workers, plus 50 American specialists, but will be built under American supervision.

"We plan to build a building according to American quality and American standards," Ballard said.

Since Soviet workers are not familiar with some American materials, the U.S. side will set up training classes to teach them how to work with conduit pipe and copper tubing.

The $100-million project is more than just an embassy. It is an embassy complex covering 10.5 acres and includes housing, an olympic-size pool, a bowling alley, gymnasium, handball court and sauna.

A major concern during the early stages of construction will be security to avoid as much as possible the likelihood that bugs will be built into the embassy.

The U.S. embassy will have complete control over the site and the selection of Soviet workers. Each worker will be required to have an identification tag and the embassy may reject anyone it doesn't want.

In addition, a special Seabees security team will guard the construction site and electronic surveillance will sweep the area 24 hours a day.

The Soviet workers will build the foundation and shell of the building, while American and West European workers will do the finishing work.

Ballard said he has no idea when the project will get underway, but that there is "serious concern" in Washington over the slow pace.

Malcolm Toon, the current U.S. ambassador to Moscow, was in on the early negotiations in the mid-60's when he was first secretary. Since then, he has done a stint in Israel and returned as top man in the embassy.

Gov. Wallace Now Happy Segregation Days Gone

By SCOTT SHEPARD
Associated Press Writer
MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — As he prepares to leave the office from which he once cried, "Segregation forever," Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace says he now feels it is best that segregation is gone, like the Old South from which it sprang.

In an exclusive interview with The Associated Press, Wallace discussed a wide range of topics, but dwelled at length on the 1960s civil rights struggle, in which he played the antagonist's role.

Wallace burst onto the national political scene in 1963 when, in his inaugural address as Alabama's newly elected governor, he cried: "Segregation now! Segregation tomorrow! Segregation forever."

Six months later, he stood in the school house door to block two black students from entering the University of Alabama.

He parlayed that defiance of a federal desegregation order into an unprecedented three terms as governor and into four tumultuous presidential campaigns that, prior to 1976, were rallying points for Dixie-styled conservatism. In little more than a month, though, Wallace will leave public office, probably never to return. He leaves with battle scars and a sense that he played a large part in steering the South back into the mainstream of national politics.

But as he readies himself for private life, the governor obviously is concerned about how history will view him and the policy of segregation that he once espoused.

"In all my political career," he told the AP, "no speech or book can be brought forward in which I ever made light of black people or made fun of them or cast them in an inferior rank among whites.

"Of course, I stood for segregation at that time, and if you call that offensive to blacks, then, of course."

But, he adds, "Segregation is over. And it's better that it is over. And there's no need to go back to it or try to talk about it because it's never coming back."

At one time, though, Wallace fought hard against desegregation attempts by the federal government.

"But it wasn't a fight against the blacks," he insists. "It was just the government we were fighting. We lost those battles, and we adjusted and went ahead. We're now looking ahead instead of behind."

Asked whether desegregation would have occurred in the South without federal court intervention, Wallace replies, "I think it would have come about eventually, yes."

Then he adds, "But I will admit and can understand now that the things that the federal government forced upon us, such as doing away with segregated eating places and riding in buses and so forth, has turned out for the best."

He says he "opposed such as that in those days because it was an infringement upon private enterprise and an infringement upon property rights.

"All those things are over now, though. It will be best if things are never back the way they were in the old days. It's better like it is now. And it makes the black people of this state feel that they have a part of the action and that they are a part of this state and they are."

Did he, like many Southern whites, undergo an education process that eventually led them to rid themselves of their segregationist views? "Yes," says Wallace. "I think so."

He regrets the violence that occurred during the civil rights struggle, particularly the deaths of four black girls who died in the bombing of Birmingham's Sixteenth Street Baptist Church.

"That was an unfortunate episode and one that I abhorred," he says. "And the statement that I made right after it happened is whoever was responsible ought to burn the bottom out of the electric chair and I meant it and still do mean it."

The death of Viola Liuzzo, a Michigan housewife who was shot to death while ferrying marchers back to Selma after the 1965 voting rights act, was "horrible," says Wallace, adding, "Violence never is the way to solve any problem."

He felt that way then, and he feels that way now that he is paralyzed from the waist down, the use of his legs lost when a would-be assassin fired five bullets into his body in 1972.

"That was the 'shooting,'" as he refers to it. And it is the point that divides his life so completely.

Before the assassination attempt, he stood a chance of becoming president, he thinks. After that, there was no chance.

The experience has not, however, left Wallace bitter. "I don't feel bitter at all," he explains. "I feel what we did has accomplished something and has been worth something. If I didn't feel that way I would be very sad, knowing the shape I'm in now and the price I paid."

What kind of shape is he in? "I'm in good physical condition, with the exception of the paralysis," he says. "I have no organic problem at all."

As for the mental and emotional consequences of "the shooting," Wallace says, "I have weathered and conquered this matter, although I sometimes wonder why it was me."

"I always visualized the possibility of being killed in a campaign because I've been in many scrapes. But I never foresaw or thought about being a paraplegic. I always thought once I was shot, that would be the end of it. But the end didn't come, only paralysis."

He acknowledges that he "might have wished the end had come" as he lay in an intensive care unit "when I was suffering so I could hardly stand it."

But, he adds, "I do not feel that I have a chip on my shoulder. I am happy to be alive. God was good to me to let me live. By all rights I should be dead."

It is his paralysis that also caused him to abort a race for the U.S. Senate this year, a race he insists he "could have won."

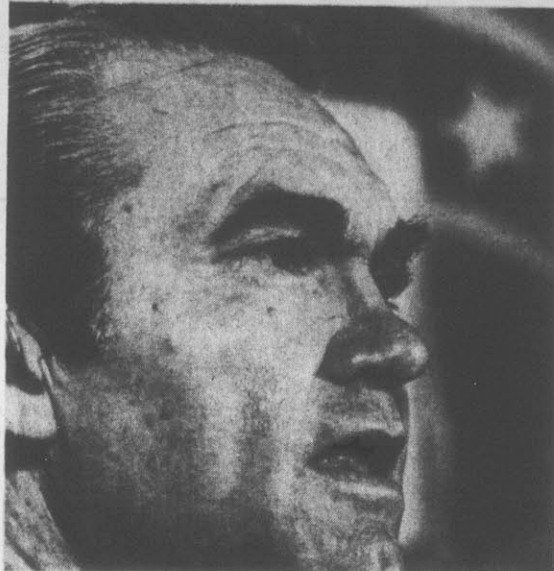

"I decided after a long thought about the matter that to live in Washington...paralyzed was something that mentally I didn't know I could take, especially living alone," he says.

Wallace, who was divorced earlier this year, says "there is nothing so bad about living alone." But he explains, that "living alone, paralyzed is a different thing."

While refusing to discuss his divorce or rumors that he plans to marry again, calling such matters "personal and private," he does say he likes "to be alone at times, but I would rather be living with someone..."

Insisting he lacks a "sense of history," Wallace nevertheless says he hopes history will view his career as having vindicated the South and "destroyed the myth that a Southerner could not seriously run for president."

Blacks Attack Hiring Policies

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Two black members of the state Board of Education said Wednesday the state's community college system has an "embarrassing" record in hiring blacks.

However, two white members were quick to defend the hiring practices of the 57-campus system, saying the schools had made "substantial progress" in recent years.

The comments were made during a report on minority hiring in the community college system to the board's Community College Committee, which met in Raleigh Wednesday.

"I do not believe the kind of progress has been made that would have been made if a little bit of flexibility (in hiring practices) had been shown," said black board member Prezell R. Robinson, president of St. Augustine's College, a predominantly black school in Raleigh.

C.R. Edwards, pastor of First Baptist Church in Fayetteville, agreed.

The report said blacks have made few gains in recent years in getting seats on boards of trustees of the community colleges and technical institutes. It said there were modest increases in the number of blacks teaching and administering the schools.

The report also stated: —There has never been a black president in the 57 campuses.

—Blacks held only four of the 105 "professional" jobs in the state Department of Community Colleges in Raleigh.

—The percentage of black faculty members in the system rose from 6.1 percent in 1976 to 6.8 percent in 1978.

The board agreed to consider the matter further when it meets in January.

Quit After Trainees Died

FORT JACKSON, S.C. (AP) — At least two of the recruits in the training class of Pvs. Wayne Krassow and Lester Watts say they left the Army after the trainees' deaths at the end of their first day of basic training.

Linda Patrick of Columbus, Ga. and Waymon Logan were among 17 former Army trainees who testified Wednesday in the court-martial of Sgt. Willie Alexander.

Alexander is the second drill instructor to be tried in the deaths of Krassow, of Cygnet, Ohio, and Watts of York, S.C. Both were 18.

Last week, Sgt. 1st Class Lawrence Chapman was found guilty of negligent homicide and other charges in the death of Krassow. He was acquitted of all charges in Watt's death.

Miss Patrick said she saw Krassow's eyes roll backwards in his head after he collapsed during physical training.

"I was upset. I felt very sorry him. I felt if this is what I have to go through, I don't want to be here," she said. Miss Patrick is now a teacher.

Logan said that he dropped out of the Army after the deaths because he felt, "it was not right the way people were treated."

In his testimony, Pvt. Dwayne Handy, said he saw Alexander order two recruits to drag Krassow down a street by his heels and said he saw that happen. Handy also said he saw Alexander stick ammonia capsules in Krassow's nose after the recruit collapsed.

Big Question: Take Children From Bad Parents?

By ELLEN L. SLOTT
 United Press International
 Dianne Devanna, at age 11, had a lot to look forward to—high school, perhaps college and a career or raising a family. But she never got the chance. Police say she was beaten to death by her father and stepmother.

 A rare case?
 Hardly. Although the number of children subjected to incompetent or abusive parents in the United States is difficult to determine authorities believe it is overwhelming. They cite an annual figure of 1.8 million children receiving aid in cases involving problems with parents.

 Although society cringes at the mere thought of parents abusing or neglecting their children, it usually stops short of taking the children away. Succinctly put, it ignores them.

 Consequently, thousands of children languish in homes where they are ill-treated because the parent refuses to relinquish "ownership" and because authorities shy away from the awesome responsibility of making them do so.

In nearly every state, laws are very loose, accurate role models are scarce, and society generally is restive when faced with terminating parental rights.

Dianne Devanna returned home in August to Braintree, Mass. after two years of living in foster homes and institutions. Every day for two weeks prior to her death, she was beaten for such acts as spilling the salt or not doing the dishes quickly enough.

The beatings increased to one an hour on the last day of her life. Her father, claiming she had fallen down the stairs, took her to a local hospital where she was pronounced dead of a blow to the head. A blood clot had lodged in her brain.

The following day Dianne's father and stepmother were charged with murder.
 Her case is not isolated. Frank Ferro of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, cited the 1.8 million cases in which children received help from public service agencies due to problems with their parents.

"A total of about 270,000 of those children were actually abused and about 126,000 were just neglected," he said. "another 54,000 were abandoned, 54,000 were ill-cared for in one way or another, and some 90,000 had parents with emotional problems.

"It's a problem we cannot put aside," he said.
 Child welfare is gradually becoming a priority as some federal and state governments, judges and adoptive and foster parents begin to try to resolve the issue of severing children from their natural parents.

"Child welfare suffers under the bad feelings that everyone seems to have about welfare. It's misunderstood," said Laurie Flynn, president of the North American Council on Adoptable Children and mother to 12 children, including five adopted and one foster.

"It's also because kids don't vote," she added. "It is very easy to overlook them. They're hidden away inside families and inside case records."

In many cases a parent will refuse to legally free his or her child for adoption even though the parent has no desire or intention of caring for him.

"There's a strong feeling in our society that the most awful thing you can do is give away your child," Mrs. Flynn said. "There's a really strong bias that it's wrong even if it's the most loving thing to do. People are really reluctant to throw in the towel and say, 'I'm a flop.'"

"Some of these parents are so useful themselves they can't see the needs of their children," said Esther Gotschall, of the Children's Aid Society of Pennsylvania. "This is really the only thing they have of their own. They aren't going to give it up."

Nationally, the government has played a passive role, leaving scattershot laws up to individual states which subsequently place the ultimate decision with their Juvenile Court judges.

Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano recently named a Model Adoption Legislation and Procedures Panel, of which Mrs. Flynn is a member, to draft a federal act to free children for permanent placement.

 "In all probability, the law will include provisions for the termination of parental rights," Ferro said. "But any such law would not be mandatory. It would only provide states with a guideline for treating the problem."

The lack of a federal law has hindered the passage of legislation in the states, many of which have very ambiguous statutes that provide no set standards for making a judicial decision.
 Usually the termination proceedings are initiated by the social worker, who first must try to locate the child's natural parents, even if, for example, the father has had no contact with the family for years. The final decision rests with the judge, who may choose instead to put the child in foster care while social agencies try to rehabilitate the parent.

If the judge elects to terminate parental rights, the parent can appeal the decision up to the Supreme Court. Otherwise, the termination is permanent.

Besides the lack of good, strong regulations, there are other stumbling blocks in seeking a termination against a parent, said Mary Jane Fales of the Child Welfare League of America in New York.

"First of all, what is the meaning of incompetence?" she said. "Some agencies will literally snatch a child out of a home while another agency will not even consider it in the same circumstances. One social worker may find a home filthy by her standards and say, 'This parent is incompetent,' while another may find the home dirty but see that the parents show a lot of love and care."

Also, many social workers are not trained in the legal proceedings and some judges will refuse to terminate parental rights no matter how much evidence supports it.

"Judges have a great deal of freedom and every judge interprets the law differently," she said.
 In every state, except Massachusetts, a parent must be proven unfit before a child can be taken out of the home, Ms. Fales said. In Massachusetts, the emphasis is based on the child's needs as opposed to the parent's fitness.

Although at the present time Massachusetts has only vague guidelines, the murder of the Devanne child and two other recent deaths of victims of parental abuse have forced legislative hearings on the methods of handling such cases.

"We're not running around trying to catch people who spank their kids," said John McManus, director of social service of the Massachusetts Welfare Department. He said the concern was with more serious cases starting, for example, "if they've given them a slap that sends the kid across the room..."

In Missouri, a court order is required to remove a child, said Dolly Hodges, a social service supervisor.
 "If there is physical abuse, nine times out of 10 there's no problem, especially if the children have any kind of bruises or if small children have been left alone for any period of time with no one to care for them."

Oregon has stricter guidelines recommended by a special project at Portland State University's Regional Research Institute for Human Services.
 Institute director Arthur C. Emlen said the project developed model rules for social workers to follow in filing for termination. However, it stresses that all other possibilities, such as rehabilitation, be exhausted first.

Virginia's termination law is so specialized it has been able to reduce the number of children in foster care from 12,000 to 10,000 by increasing its number of parental terminations.

In Maryland, Curtis Decker, head of "HELP," a statefunded project to counter child abuse, said a problem in making a case against the parent of an abused child is that "the only witness is generally the child and I've seen them bruised and battered, yet they won't testify."

A bill recently died in Pennsylvania's House of Representatives that would have established guidelines for terminating rights in that state.

The strongest opposition to the bill came from the Welfare Rights Organization, based in Philadelphia where most foster children are black and case workers are white. The organization successfully challenged whether white agencies should be allowed to set standards for black families by determining when a parent is unfit.

Pennsylvania, along with Washington, Nebraska and New Jersey, is moving toward adopting the Model Act to Free Children for Permanent Placement drafted by Sanford Katz, professor at Boston College School of Law.

Katz said the model law takes over after the child has been removed from his home and placed with foster parents. It requires a full court hearing to determine if the natural parents committed any specific acts or omissions such as abandonment, abuse, violence against the child, neglect, complete disregard of parental responsibility or emotional neglect.

"But the very critical decision is whether or not to remove the child in the first instance," Mrs. Flynn said. "The minute you do it the deterioration and separation begins and if it goes on for any period of time, the parents and child no longer have a meaningful relationship. The termination of parental rights is almost anti-climatic for these kids."

"A good strong statute would put some emphasis on that these families need services and early state that you can't let a child drift in foster care for a couple of years while you try to decide," she added.

HEW's latest figures show in excess of 500,000 children are living outside their natural homes, either in foster care or institutions. The figure, which some welfare agencies believe is actually much higher, does not include those children already freed from their parents' custody and legally adopted.

"We have more kids now in foster care probably as a function of the whole societal problem," Mrs. Flynn said. "We have just seen increasing disintegration of families. Parents are feeling more incapable of handling problems."

Some of these parents, cognizant of their shortcomings, temporarily give their children up by placing them in foster care. In other cases, the social worker or local police might forcibly take a child away if the parent has been abusive. But that first step does not mean the parents' rights are terminated.

Ideally, while the child is in foster care, the parent should be undergoing rehabilitation by city agencies or the social welfare group. Then, perhaps, in time he or she can take the child home again.

But in many cases, the child is left drifting about in foster care, ignored by social agencies and by his natural parents, whose only contact might be an occasional birthday card or Christmas visit. The effect can be devastating to a child.

Well-defined, rigid laws would not allow a child to float

Bad Parents...

 about foster care but would give him a permanent plan.
 "A lot of children — some 50 percent — often remain in substitute care indefinitely," Ms. Fales said. "They are never returned home. The parents are never helped. As few as 30 percent of the children in foster care ever have any meaningful relations with their biological family."
 "We are particularly concerned that those children taken out of their parents' home not remain in foster care forever — that deadlines and plans be offered," she added.

Mrs. Gotschall acknowledged some children get lost in foster care but with others, "their relationship with their natural parents is such that they really can't take on adoptive parents. Adoption would never work out. They'd feel so guilty that they're rejecting their own parents."

To safeguard against a foster child being ignored, most states recommend — though few have actually implemented it — an independent foster care review system.

"We have no way of accounting for the children," Mrs. Flynn said. "We have no way of accounting for what happens to them."

In states that have foster care review, such as New Jersey, New York and South Carolina, authorities have found thousands of children languishing in foster care and have returned them to their families or put them up for adoption, Mrs. Flynn said.

Displeased with the lack of forster care review, a group of Juvenile Court judges organized four years ago to find a solution.

 Headed by Kent County Juvenile Court Judge John P. Steketee of Grand Rapids, Mich., the National Council of Juvenile and Family Court Judges set up a pilot program requiring periodic review of all children under foster care.
