Carter Defends Decision To Keep Strong Military

By WESTLEY G. PIPPERT

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — President Carter, answering criticism among his party's rank and file, said Saturday he had "no apology to make at all" for maintaining a strong military and would continue to do so as long as he was president.

Many delegates to the party's midterm convention used Carter's attendance at several workshops and meetings to express their dissatisfaction with his onomic policies and his reported plans to cut some social programs while increasing the military budget.

Carter opened the three-day convention Friday with a speech outlining his administration's successes and then met with delegates Saturday morning.

Before returning to Washington, Carter paid an unannounced visit to the Lorraine Motel, where Martin Luther King was killed, and placed a wreath on the door of King's room.

At a workshop on inflation, Carter, his chief inflation fighter Alfred Kahn and his chief economist Charles Schultze, were barraged with pointed questions and statements from delegates who clearly were upset with his economic policies.

Carter mostly sat and listened to statements from the audience, which was basically friendly despite its expressed dissatisfaction. But a question about his military budget seemed to raise his ire.

Carter promised to balance military needs against social needs, and he said, "I hope every weapon we purchase will eventually rust."

But, "The No. 1 responsibility of any president is to ensure the safety of our country," Carter said.

The United States must compete with the Soviet Union, which spends more of its national resources on defense than the United States and which "does not have a commitment to to a better life for their people based on freedom," he said.

"I do not have any apology to make at all for maintaining a strong defense," he said. "As long as I am in the White House I will keep a strong defense."

At a workshop on arms control, Sen. John Culver, D-Iowa, complained that warehouse ... that's exactly ICBM missile, tanks ... that of dollars of overkill," and "if we're unable to cap the insanity of proliferation, the probability that mankind will destroy itself drastically increases. It will be impossible to avoid a nuclear holocaust."

Carter replied that while he and Culver agree on almost everything, "to insinuate, to say we might be wrong in spending money to build weapons that rust away in a warehouse ...that's exactly what we want to happen. We build weapons for peace.

"I hope that when we build the Trident submarine, the ICBM missile, tanks ...that they're never used. I hope they're never used."

$4.3 Billion Grant Errors

By WILLIAM COTTERELL

MEMPHIS Tenn. (UPI) — Sen Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., reorganization advisors told Democratic delegates Saturday the administration feels a strong political need to demonstrate to angry taxpayers that domestic programs are still worth their cost.

"It's taken for granted in this party that most federal regulation is rooted in private failure to act, starting with child labor and going up through the job-safety standards of today," said Enviromental Protection Adminstrator Doug Costle, a member of the president's Regulatory Council.

"The greatest threat to these principles is losing them through a morass of our own red tape," he added.

In a panel discussion on reorganization at the midterm National Democratic Conference, federal budget director Jim McIntyre said Carter found $4.3 billion in federal grant errors that had been spotted by auditors but not retrieved by administrators. He said the Office of Management and Budget is "trying to make it important to federal managers to follow up" on audits attacking waste in grants to states.

Tuition Raise Authorized

DURHAM, N.C. Duke University trustees Saturday authorized the administration to raise tuition by up to $400 for the 1979-80 academic year.

The action could mean Duke students, except for those at the Medical Center, will be paying up to $4,230 in tuition next year, an increase of about 11 percent.

The current tuition is $3,830, itself a 9.7 percent increase over the previous year.

John A. Forlines Jr., chairman of the business and financial committee, said the tuition increase would be subject to budget considerations and would have to conform with President Carter's wage and price guidelines.

Issues Slow Down Plea

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina traffic deaths have been far above average during the last two weeks, and the state's top law enforcement officer issued a plea Friday for motorists to slow down.

Crime Control and Public Safety Secretary Phil Carlton said excessive speed and alcohol were to blame for the fatal accidents during the last two weeks.

Carlton said the Highway Patrol is doing as much as it can to enforce the 55 mile an hour speeding law, but it is up to the public to make the law work.

Twenty persons died during the Thanksgiving holiday, and last weekend 24 more persons were killed on the state's highways. That compares to an average weekend toll of seven to 10.

Charges Troop Massing

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (UPI) — Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere charged Saturday that Uganda was once again massing troops along their common border, where the two nations fought a war last month.

Nyerere said that Ugandan President Idi Amin may have ordered the troop concentrations because he may fear that Tanzania was preparing to attack or he might be preparing a second invasion of Tanzania.

Israel Prepared To Sign Treaty

Prime Minister Menachem Begin said Saturday Israel is prepared to sign a Middle East treaty at any time and accused Egypt of putting obstacles in the way to peace.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, heading for the Middle East, said he would be willing to turn his trip into a diplomatic shuttle if it would help to bring about an agreement between Israel and Egypt.

Begin, in Oslo, Norway, to receive the Nobel Peace Prize, which he won jointly with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, said he thought future peace moves were up to Egypt.

"As far as I am concerned, we were prepared (to sign a treaty) last week and we will be prepared next week also. ...From our point of view, there is no difficulty," he told a Norwegian television interviewer.

The 65-year old Begin said even if an agreement is not reached by the Dec. 17 deadline specified in the Camp David accords, "we will continue our efforts to achieve one at a later date."

Vance, currently in London, is scheduled to fly to Cairo Sunday and travel to Jerusalem Tuesday in an effort to break the deadlock in the negotiations.

Diplomats in Washington said Vance was prepared to extend the negotiating period one month beyond the Dec. 17 date. As a last resort, the diplomats said, the United States would be prepared to propose another Camp David-style summit.

Begin suggested Sadat wants to change the meaning of the Camp David accords.

"We signed an agreement," he said. "Agreements are to be kept. We want to keep it completely, fully."

Foreigners Trying To Flee From Iran

By SYLVANA FOA

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Army troops opened fire on anti-shah demonstrators in two cities Saturday, killing 29 persons on the eve of Moslem holy days. The shah ordered tanks into Tehran streets and the airport closed, creating near panic among thousands of foreigners trying to flee Iran.

Troops fired on demonstrators in the western Iranian city of Tabriz, killing at least 19 and wounding scores of others, Moslem clergymen said. In the holy city of Qom, five demonstrators and three soldiers were killed in another clash.

In a separate incident in Tabriz, an army officer was killed by a soldier, who himself was shot dead by another member of the army.

The clashes came on the eve of the Tasoua and Ashura holy days today and tomorrow which end the 10-day Moslem Moharram period of mourning with public self-flogging rites that commemorate the assassination in 680 A.D. of Mohammad's grandson, Iman Hussain, founder of the Shiite sect.

In a move to placate the faithful, the government relaxed the martial law curfew by two hours to allow mourners to remain on the streets until 11 p.m. The announcement said the relaxed curfew would be in effect for three days beginning Saturday night.

However, in a major show of force, tanks rolled across the city, a fleet of Huey helicopters buzzed rooftops, and reinforced soldiers, looking miserable in a cold drizzling rain, took up positions along major streets.

The capital seemed almost deserted Saturday and all shops were tightly shuttered. There were no reports of clashes.

Thousands of frightened foreigners, many weeping, jammed fog-bound Tehran airport in a desperate scramble to flee the country before the expected eruption of new violence today and tomorrow.

Dozens of flights were diverted to Kuwait, Bahrain and Damascus but as the fog lifted they began flying in to evacuate the foreigners.

However, airlines said there were too few seats for those who wanted to leave and it was certain many would be left behind.

No reason was given for the airport's closure — from 10 a.m. (1:30 a.m. EST) today until 8 a.m. Tuesday (11:30 p.m. Monday EST). But speculation centered around the security problems the government expects to face during the next two days.

This morning, more than 1 million people are expected to pour out onto the capital's streets for a "peace march" organized by the political and religious opponents of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

The shah, succumbing to reported pressure from U.S. Ambassador William Sullivan, relaxed martial law to legalize the march and thus decrease the possibility of bloody battles between troops and demonstrators.

But the army warned it would promptly open fire if the procession across town to the Blue Mosque "loses its peaceful and religious character."

The government banned motorbikes and small vans from the streets which they said might be used to distribute arms to demonstrators.

In an interview at his home at the foot of snow-capped mountains north of Tehran, the shah's most powerful political opponent in Iran, Karim Sanjabi, told UPI his followers would maintain absolute calm among those joining the procession.

"From us there will be no provocation, no vandalism," he said. "If there is bloodshed it will be the army that provokes it."

Sanjabi was evasive when asked if the purpose of the march was to topple the shah's 38-year reign.

"People from Tehran, from small villages, from all over Iran have been showing in a very clear fashion what they want," said the 73-year-old Sanjabi, only this week released from a month in prison.

"I can only say that the government must respond to the demands of the people — and to know those demands you have only to go out on the street and listen to their khants," he said.

The mass exodus of foreigners — predominately Americans, Germans, Italians, Japanese and Koreans — turned the Mehrabad air terminal into a sea of humanity crowded among piles of luggage, empty soft drnk bottles and baby strollers.

In Washington, the State Department said there was "no conscious effort by Iranian authorities" to keep U.S. nationals in Iran, but noted that it often takes several days for resident aliens in Iran to get exit visas.

A department spokeswoman added, "With the present holidays and work stoppages, the problem of obtaining exit permits has been exascerbated. Our embassy is actively assisting our citizens in dealing with this problem."

Will Comply

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Duke University President Terry Sanford has written President Carter a letter saying North Carolina's 38 private colleges will comply with federal inflation guidelines by holding salary increases under seven percent.

Sanford wrote the letter, dated Dec. 6, as chairman of the North Carolina Association of Independent Collges and Universities.

"Despite the fact that proposed salaries in colleges and universities have not kept pace with the consumer price index, we recognize the need for restraint and agree that compensation paid to faculty and staff in our member schools in general should not exceed seven percent," the letter read.

Greenville's Wheelchair Team Excited About Their Games

by REBECCA BUFFALOE
Reflector Staff Writer

Want to attend an exciting sports event, filled with enthusiastic competition and fast-paced activity?

Go to Elm Street Gym Dec. 16 at 7 p.m. to see one of the Greenville Steelwheels' game against the Palmetto Spinners from South Carolina.

Steelwheels, you say. . . isn't that a football team from Pittsburgh?

The Steelwheels are Greenville's own wheelchair basketball team, whose first-year hustle has earned them a 3-6 conference record against teams with five or more years of experience.

The team is comprised of six young men from the eastern are of North Carolina, whose lower leg disabilities prevent them from playing stand up sports.

The idea of an area wheelchair team started last spring when Richard Hudson, a disabled East Carolina University student, approached Bill Twine, Greenville Parks and Recreation Special Populations director about the matter.

"Someone had asked the Parks and Recreation Department before about having a wheelchair team, but we just couldn't get enough participants," said Twine. "I explained the situation to Richard, who worked out at the hospital rehabilitation center. He said he could get the guys."

Hours of practice followed, with as many as 12 young men coming every Wednesday night to Elm Street to practice. The next move was to collect $300 to join the National Wheelchair Basketball Association (NWBA).

The Steelwheels then played a set of exhibition games against groups such as the Big WOOW disc jockeys and the Belhaven Fire Department to sharpen their techniques.

The team also played three games with the Capital City Hustlers from Raleigh, another wheelchair team, to gain experience in non-conference play.

Then the "for keeps" games began, with the Steelwheels getting beat, but edging up on the points with each passing game. Their first win was against Virginia Beach, winning by rather handy scores. (Editor's note: The Steelwheels played Virginia Beach Dec. 9 after this story was written.)

With their confidence up, the Steelwheels went to Winston-Salem Dec. 2, splitting a two-game decision with the Smokers, gaining another win.

Special lightweight sports wheelchairs were a boost for the team in its win against Winston-Salem, with money for the chairs donated by various people in the Greenville community.

"A street chair is for comfort, with wheels that adapt to different situations," explained Bill Twine: "These sports chairs have special wheels and are made of metal alloys that make them lighter. No sides and a low back make them speedier, but you wouldn't want to be in them all day."

Sponsors such as Faye Cayton (the team's very own "good fairy"), Durwood Harris, Union Carbide, Carolina Dairies, Pepsi Cola, Burroughs Wellcome, Lions Club, Booger Scales, the Daily Reflector, L. H. Moore, Gaylord Inc., and Reynolds May make possible the chairs, uniforms, transportation fees and officials. The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department also aids in some of the transportation, as well as scheduling time for the team at Elm Street.

However, the one thing the Steelwheels need the most is people, audience participation . . . and cheerleaders.

"It doesn't take many people to make noise in Elm Street," said Richard Hudson. Other team members agree with Hudson that the Steelwheels are exciting to watch.

"I think we're the best first year team that's come in the conference," said James Breeze, a student at ECU. "This will be my fifth year of playing wheelchair basketball."

"Every one of our games have been close, except one," said Breeze, dubbed "Hot Dog" by the team. "The games just haven't gone our way."

Tim Harris of Black Jack, who's a sophomore at D. H. Conley, says, "We're a real good first year team and we're improving."

Wheelchair basketball differs only from the regular sport in that players are allowed five seconds in the lane instead of three, and more than two turns of the wheel constitutes traveling.

Players are ranked by classes: those who are disabled from the T-9 vertabrae and up are classed as "one," those with T-9 vertabrae disabilities and below are "two," and those with lower leg disabilities are classed as "three."

It takes a lot of cooperation in wheelchair basketball as in any sport, with determination and hustle bringing in the winning scores.

Team members consist of Hudson, James Breeze, Tim Harris, Elbert Allen, Theron Moye and John Britt. Others have played on the Steelwheel team, but have dropped from the roster for various reasons.

The make up of the team changes with time, but Twine, who serves as the team's business manager and representative for the NWBA

Four Dead In School Bus Wreck

ROBY, Texas (AP) — The windows of the yellow school bus were shattered, its body ripped in two. School papers, books and basketball uniforms littered the ground, and the smell of gasoline hung heavy in the air.

A piece of paper, soaked with blood, lay nearby.

"Merry Christmas," it read.

At the intersection of U.S. 180 and a farm road near this West Texas town, four students died and 20 persons were injured — six critically — when a truck smashed into their school bus.

More might have died Friday in the falling snow and 20-degree cold whipped by the wind to a chill factor of 10 below zero without the aid of workers from a nearby cotton gin.

They brought burlap bagging, draping the students until ambulances arrived to ferry the injured — most members of the boys' and girls' basketball teams at McCaulley High School — to five local hospitals.

"If that gin hadn't come through with that cotton bagging, a lot more of these kids might have died," said state Department of Public Safety officer Don Ranneseld.

The bus was headed for a tournament at nearby Hermleigh from McCaulley when the students heard their principal yell "Look out!"

"Then I was lying on the ground near the front of the bus," said Wandell Williams, 15, a freshman who suffered a leg injury.

The bus was driven by school superintendent Edd Farmer. He and principal Doyle Bell double as coaches for the basketball teams.

Both men were injured, Bell critically. Also on the bus was Farmer's 10-year-old daughter, who was treated for cuts and bruises and released from a hospital.

Ranneseld said the truck, driven by William Dixson of Snyder, Texas, ran a flashing light and rammed the bus from the right front side. Dixson, employed by Cardinal Survey Co. of Odessa, was also critically injured.

Name Addition

The article on page three of Friday's edition of "The Daily Reflector" titled "Arrested For Having Pistol" failed to print the first name of the student arrested. Police records show John Thomas Collier, 267 Jones Dormitory, was the person arrested for possesion of a .45 caliber pistol, and possession of dexidrine and valium.

MASONIC NOTICE

There will be a regular meeting of the Greenville York Rite Bodies Monday, Dec. 11 at 7:30 p.m. Dinner will be served at 6:30 p.m. There will be election and installation of officers.

Institution Fire Kills 15

By JACK ELLIOTT

ELLISVILLE, Miss. (UPI) — Fifteen women at a south Mississippi mental institution, most of them bedridden, died Saturday, in a smoke-spewing fire that cut off electricity to their dormitory, leaving them to choke in the darkness. Sixteen others were injured.

When it was over, a blackened Christmas tree stood at the far end of the dormitory and holiday decorations were scattered about.

Dr. Paul Cotten, chief administrator at the institution, said electricity went out about the time the fire was discovered shortly before 2 a.m., forcing rescuers to use flashlights in their search for patients in the two-story building.

"We were really groping around in the dark," said Danny Shows, a personnel officer. "We found where some of the people had gotten on the floor and were crawling around."

"I've never seen anything like it and I've been in law enforcement 25 years," Jones County Sheriff George Chancellor said.

"We just kept hauling the bodies out and trying to get the ones who were still alive," a local fire official said.

The building was not equipped with fire or smoke alarms, officials said.

Funeral Plans

By MATHIS CHAZANOV

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Former Prime Minister Golda Meir, who will be buried in a simple ceremony Tuesday, fought bravely for 15 years against a cancer that finally killed her painlessly, her doctors said Saturday.

The body of Mrs. Meir, who died Friday at 80, will lie in state at the Knesset (parliament) building beginning Sunday. She will be buried at the Mount Herzl Cemetery, Israel's Arlington.

The cabinet drew up the funeral arrangements at a special hour-long session Saturday held without Prime Minister Menachem Begin, who was in Oslo to receive his share of the 1978 Nobel Peace Prize.

Begin, 65, in an interview on Israel's state-run radio and television from the Norwegian capital, said Mrs. Meir "set historic rights in our annals. Her memory will be etched on our people's memory for all generations to come."

Mrs. Meir, in a tersely written will, stipulated a simple ceremony without eulogies and Cabinet Secretary Arye Naor said her wishes would be respected. She will be placed alongside Levi Eshkol, Israel's third prime minister, whom she succeeded in 1969.

Mrs. Meir also requested that no memorials be erected in her name.

She left no burial instructions and her family let the government make funeral plans. She is survived by a son, a daughter, five grandchildren and a sister, Clara Stern of Bridgeport, Conn.

Naor said the U.S. delegation to the funeral would be headed by Mrs. Lillian Carter, the president's mother. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and his predecessor, Henry A. Kissinger, also will attend.

At Hadassah Hospital, where Mrs. Meir died, her physicians told reporters the former prime minister died painlessly of lymphoma, after having lapsing into a coma.

"She suffered no pain and died peacefully," said Dr. Aharon Polliack, a hematologist. He said she was active until Wednesday when "there was an alteration in the state of consciousness — sleepiness, stupor, semi-consciousness.

Seeks Suspect

WICHITA, Kan. (UPI) — The bullet-riddled bodies of bandleader Norman Lee and two other people were found Friday at Lee's country home. Authorities in several states sought a former band member as a suspect in the slayings.

The bodies of Lee, 57, his wife Pat, 47, and Bob King, 55, Lee's publicist and caretaker, were found Friday afternoon inside the house, surrounded by 12 acres of secluded property northeast of Wichita. The three had been dead about 40 hours.

Former Agent Claims Fraud, Corruption In FBI

By GREGORY GORDON
DAVID E. ANDERSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The FBI has engaged in a systematic "cover-up" of the extent of its illegal break-ins, its use of thousands of phony informant files and a number of instances of fraud and corruption within the bureau, a retired agent charges.

The Justice Department has been investigating for more than six months a broad range of 25 allegations by the former agent, including his charges that a few FBI agents pocketed money intended for their fictitious informants, sources said.

The agent, who asked that his name be withheld, outlined his charges and gave his version of the inner workings of the FBI over the last three decades in four hours of tape-recorded interviews with UPI.

Among his major allegations:

—Pressure from superiors stirred FBI agents for years to invent thousands of fake informants, and agents sometimes kept for themselves cash allotted for the informants. The massive phony files also were used at budget time to deceive Congress into believing the FBI had a heavier caseload than it really had.

—Attorney General Griffin Bell may be willing to sacrifice $48 million in taxpayers' money to the Socialist Workers Party in a civil suit because he wants to avoid revealing the bureau's phony informant system and its infiltration of the SWP's highest offices.

(The Justice Department has said it may default in the lawsuit, rather than yield to a federal judge's order that it release the names of 18 SWP informants. It said to do so would threaten the bureau's ability to insure informants' confidentiality in the future.)

8the bureau committed upwards of 20,000 illegal break-ins or "bag jobs" in the last three decades at the offices and homes of political activists. The FBI has told Congress it knew of 238 break-ins of targets considered national security threats and of "numerous others" against three other types of targets.

UPI correspondents independently verified the identity of the agent who worked for the FBI for nearly 30 years. It was learned the Justice Department's Office of Professional Responsibility has been investigating his allegations, some of them involving potential criminal wrongdoing, since April.

Citing recent reforms by the agency, the agent said:

"Bag jobs are not going on now. The COINTEL (the bureau's word for its domestic disruption and counter intelligence efforts during the 1960s) is not going on. But now, everyone is lying about it ... just to save themselves" and the bureau's image."

He said the "cover-up" of the bureau's activities appeared to extend to the recent investigation of FBI break-ins used in a hunt for fugitive members of the radical Weather Underground in the early 1970s.

The agent, who was assigned to offices in several large cities over the years, said two FBI officials approached him in June 1977, suggesting that if he was called before a grand jury, he deny having a role in those break-ins.

The retired agent said he also overheard the head of an FBI field office discuss on the telephone with a superior at headquarters in Washington the possibility of "getting all of the agents together to tell the same story."

FBI Director William Webster, culminating a 2½-year investigation of the unauthorized break-ins, wiretaps and mail-openings, fired two FBI agents last week and disciplined four others.

He exonerated 59 agents who he concluded were acting on orders from above. Former FBI Director L. Patrick Gray and two of his aides face a January trial on charges they approved the surveillance.

Webster said a second internal investigation is under way into charges the FBI withheld information from Congress and the general accounting office about the Weatherman breakins.

The retired agent said of the Justice Department's earlier disclosure of the 238 break-ins: "I did more bag jobs than that myself."

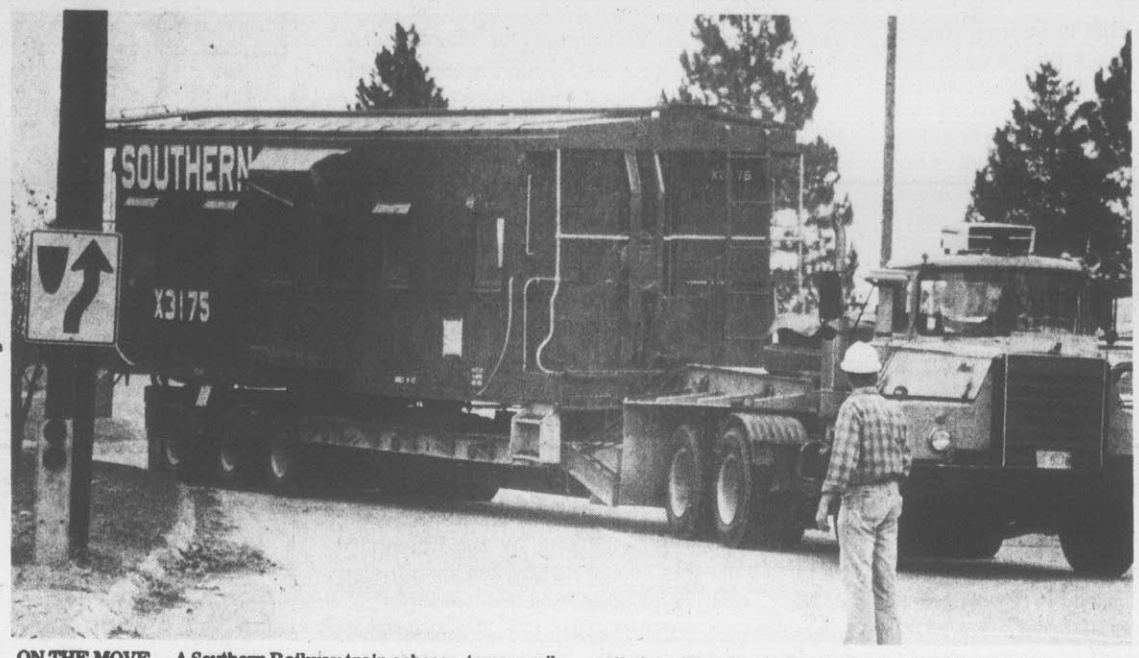

"Bag jobs" were considered a routine investigative technique. "You bag whatever you have to bag," he said.

The agent also charged:

—Several top officials of a field office and dozens of agents accepted gifts ranging from $400 watches to clock radios from a figure linked to organized crime in 1973, following an investigation of the kidnap-murder of the mobster's daughter.

—In 1975, bureau officials disclosed that 63 percent of agents were taking their government cars home at night for their personal use, but did not discourage the practice because they felt "agents deserved a little more than what they were getting."

May Encourage Consumer Boycotts

WASHINGTON (AP) — For its next step in attempts to put a lid on inflation, the Carter Administration may encourage consumer boycotts against businesses that ignore the president's price guidelines, his top inflation official says.

Alfred Kahn, Carter's chief inflation adviser, disclosed Friday the possibility of federally encouraged consumer boycotts. He said consumers would be within their rights in "demanding an explanation" from businesses which increase prices.

Female Pilot Files Suit

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A woman helicopter pilot at Fort Bragg has filed suit against the Army claiming she has been deprived of her right to equal training and equivalent duty assignments given male pilots of her rank.

First Lt. Daphne M. Pratt, a member of the 18th Aviation Company, 1st Corps Support Company, also oontends in the suit that fitness reports written by Maj. Bobby Graham were prejudicial. In addition to Graham, Secretary of the Army Clifford Alexander and highranking officers at Fort Bragg are named in the lawsuit.Pratt filed suit in Cumberland County Superior Court asking $110,000 payment for damages and seeking a permanent injunction to prevent the Army from using any policy, practice or custom that would deny her equal treatment.

PTL Wants Millions More

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The president of the PTL evangelical televisioon network has written to 700,000 supporters pleading for money to help the network pay its bills.

Jim Bakker said PTL has been served with liens and lawsuits, and asked for a financial "miracle by Christmas." Because of the suits, Bakker said an "outside source," probably an "unbeliever" could be appointed to manage the Charlotte-based network.

The plea comes in spite of hugh financial support for the network in recent weeks, including a one-day record last week exceeding $1 million.

Bakker has said PTL owes $6 million immediately and has a total indebtedness of nearly $13 million dollars.

Avows Will Not Close Down

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Spokesmen for Christian churches and schools said Friday they will not close down their Christian day-care centers, even if the state tries to make them.

"I'll break the padlock if they put it on my church door," said the Rev. Daniel Carr of Winston-Salem. "I don't fear Russian soldiers. I fear my fellow citizens acting like Russians."

Hire More To Expand Probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fifty new investigators, auditors and lawyers have been hired to expand the internal probe of the scandal-scarred General Services Administration, GSA Administrator Jay Solomon says.

Solomon said the primary task of the new personnel will be "to uncover the abuses that have occurred in GSA and set up a system of controls to prevent them from reoccurring."

GSA spokesman Peter Hickman said today that the new personnel were hired over the past few weeks and another 100 investigators and auditors are expected to be hired in the near future. Hickman said there was no figure on how much the additional personnel will cost.

Justice Department and GSA investigators have been probing widespread corruption at the government's housekeeping agency. The corruption is estimated to cost the government as much as $100 million a year.

Ontarians are searching for their roots in record numbers, according to the office of the registrar-general in Sault Ste. Marie. Genealogy searches increased by 46 percent in the past fiscal year.

thinks the Steelwheels will have no problems in finding new players.

Both Hudson and Twine stress that one does not have to be confined in a wheelchair to play with the Steelwheels.

As long as a person can obtain a doctor's note stating that he has lower leg disabilities that prevent him from playing stand-up sports, he is eligible for membership. Those who are also post-polio may be eligible. Women are also eligible to play, as long as they meet the requirement.

The sport allows those such as Hudson, a former football player, to keep participating in team athletics. It also allows those who have never participated in sports events to compete against other athletes.

"We try to fight that 'freak show' label," emphasized Twine. "If people think these guys are a bunch of invalids in wheelchairs, they need to come to a game."

Redevelopment Meeting Monday

The Redevelopment Commission will hold its regular December meeting on Monday at 7:30 p.m. at its new central offices, 1103 Broad Street, in Newtown.

Credit Goes To The Growers

Tobacco is under constant attack, and there are those who speculate that it won't stay around.

It has been here for centuries, however, and despite concerted campaigns of recent years tobacco is still a thriving industry.

The best opinion now seems to be that, though the ways we use tobacco may change, the lucrative farming operation will remain for the forseeable future.

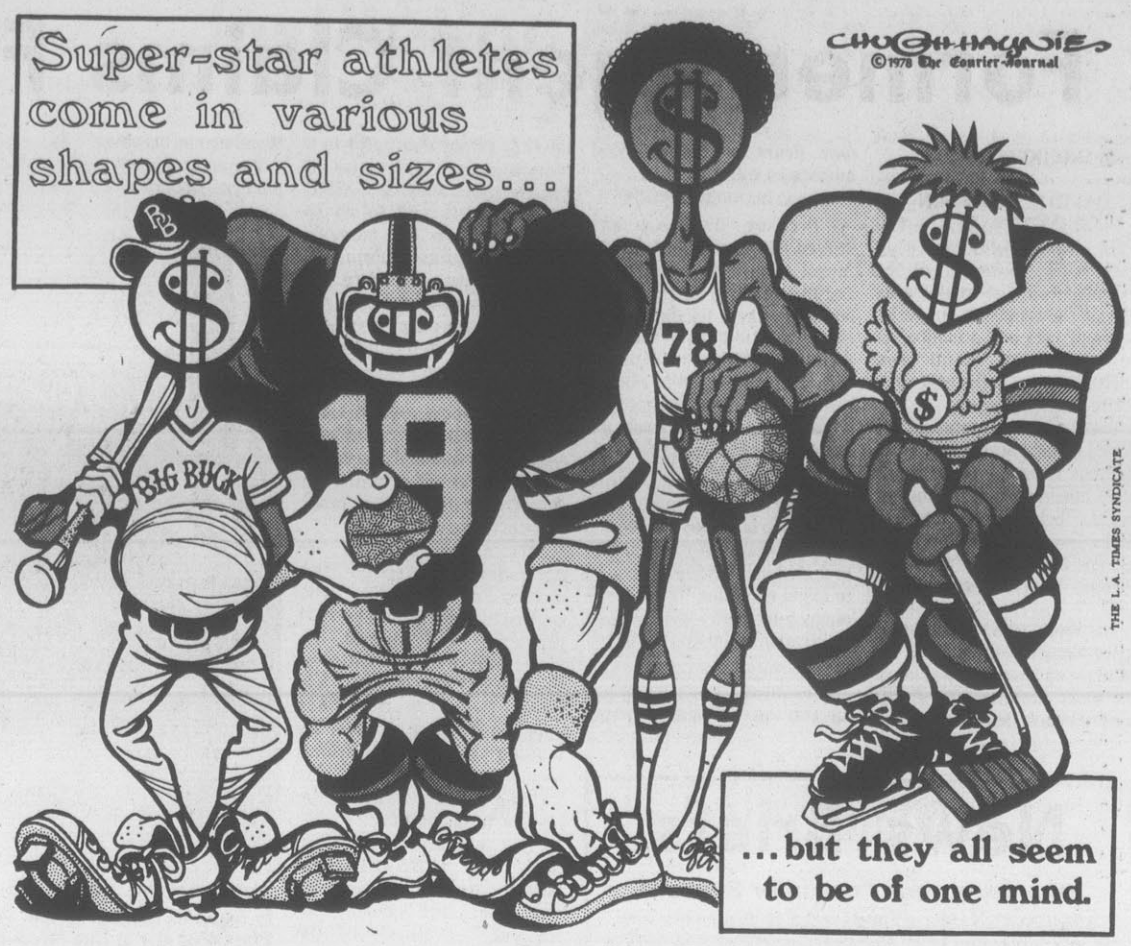

Much of the success of tobacco must be credited to the farmers themselves. They have backed the price support program which has kept the market from being flooded with tobacco. Equally important, the growers have worked very hard at producing quality crops which has made American grown tobacco desirable on the world market.

And who knows what the future holds for tobacco marketing? Every few years farmers produce an outstanding crop, which the buyers duly note by paying high prices.

Once the crop is purchased, however, it is simply used in the mass production of cigarettes and the ultimate purchaser of the cigarettes doesn't even know that he is obtaining a vintage tobacco.

Tobacco marketing may someday call for labeling of vintage year tobacco on cigarettes, cigars and other tobacco products. Like fine wine the year of production could make the product quite valuable.

If that should happen, the price that tobacco producers receive for producing a really outstanding crop could soar. And all that could benefit American tobacco where emphasis has had to be placed on quality because of increasing production costs.

Student Efforts Paid Big Dividends

Student power is exerted in different ways now than was the case in the 1960s.

Vice Chancellor Robert Holt told the board of trustees last week that November was the best month ever for fund raising by the university. Some $35,385 was raised during the month compared with $4,776 for the same month in 1977.

He attributed the increase to the student phoning efforts.

THIS AFTERNOON

New Government Jargon

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — As a study commission of the General Assembly probed various potential adjustments in the state's Community College system the other day, an official was called upon to respond on a particular point.

A research specialist had pointed out a differential in tuition and fees charged in North Carolina compared to neighboring states.

"I haven't had a chance to massage those statistics as yet," responded Charles R. Holloman, veteran state employee and vice president in charge of the program as a new president is sought.

Such a graphic expression! "Massage those statistics." Holloman clearly meant what most close observers of governmental language will recognize — that statistics can be arranged and re-arranged; added to or subtracted from; maneuvered into shape to reflect whatever point the "massager" seeks to show.

New Talk

The comment called to mind that in the past several days those who listen carefully to what governmental experts are saying have been hearing perhaps a birth of a new dimension in the English language.

Suffering taunts and jibes — even outright demands and laws, on occasion — from the public, bureaucrats of late have seemed to be making a concerted effort to clean up their jargon.

Seldom do such ridiculed terms as "prioritized," "finalized", "parameters", or a host of other jargon terms crop up these days.

Gov. Jim Hunt went so far as to warn his people that reports should be written in such fasion as to be understandable to his hometown folks: the Rock Ridge directive, it has become known.

Constantly, now, reports and other governmental documents contain the admonition to explain things in plain language; legislatures are demanding laws and insurance policies written in clear English.

All of which leaves the dedicated bureaucrat sometimes at a loss. How, he must wonder, can you replace that popular jargon?

BILL NOBLITT

Even Hunt

But at a weekly press converence, even Gov. Hunt whose insistence on plain talk is widely known fell to the charm of governmental creativity in language.

Discussing a collection of competing and complex matters involved in a particular issue, he observed that the "over-arching" concern, however, was another special concern; obviously worthy of more attention than the others.

Reporter, Too

Even a reporter present felt then compelled to originate a term, or two. Referring to the governor's plans for the budget, would it suggest cutbacks or eliminations to achieve economies?

Will you recommend "lobotomizing" some programs? the writer wondered. "Lobotomizing", he was forced to explain, means cutting the brains out so that the body withers and dies.

Some listeners thought that particular person had said "bottomizing" some programs, thus were created at one instance two related new terms.

Deep Banana

Then, in Atlanta, Alfred E. Kahn, chairman of the President's Council on Wage and Price Stability, felt it essential to explain to the governors gathered for a Southern Growth Policies Board meeting that he had suffered considerable White House grief for warning that a "deep recession" might result from failure to conquer inflation. Don't use that word, he was told.

Henceforth, warned Kahn, he would no longer suggest that recession lurks nearby. But if something is not done about inflation and shortly, "we are going into a deep banana in this country", Kahn stated.

Sunday Morning Notes

There can be no doubt that the Christmas shopping season is at hand.

Stores are decorated and parking lots are filled. Shoppers make their way down crowded aisles to search through heavily stocked store shelves, for toys for the children and just the right gift for auntie.

Some folks get their shopping done early, however.

A friend said she asked her beautician the classic question, "Have you finished your Christmas shopping?"

"Sure have," she answered. And then added, "I've already gone back to make three exchanges."

Christmas lists are being made up all over the place.

ECU football coach Pat Dye wants a big crowd and a big win at the Independence Bowl in Shrevevport, La. —not to mention several speedy backs in the current recruiting campaign.

ECU Athletic Director Bill Cain will be happy with ever larger paying crowds, some network television appearances and some larger guarantees for ECU basketball and football meets.

Mayor Percy Cox and County Commissioners Chairman R. L. Martin are definitely hoping there won't be any Proposition 13s in their Christmas stockings.

Utilities Director Charles Horne, would like to find $25 million for water and pollution control plants under the Christmas tree.

ECU School of Medicine Dean William Laupus already has his $25 million which he wants to see transformed into the new Medical School building.

And practically everybody in Pitt County is asking Santa for a limited access, fully controlled access, freeway U. S. 264 — or whatever it should be called — to make the trip to Raleigh and west safe and comfortable. (Send Santa's letters in care of N. C. Department of Transportation.)

A Blue Yule Is No Fun

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK
AP Newsfeatures Writer

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — 'Tis the season to be jolly, but for many people all the fa la la la la is fake. For them, Christmas is a time of disappointment, anxiety or even depression.

They think everyone else finds warmth and love in the season; or their efforts to make dreams come true fizzle, or they are thrust back into unhappy family settings.

—A successful businessman makes the rounds at Christmas parties and is repeatedly praised for his attainment. But he is miserable because he considers himself a failure. The holiday festivities bring that long festering belief into the open.

—A woman drags her family into the snow to hunt for a Christmas tree, the outing to be topped by carols and chestnuts around the fire. It takes too long and it's cold. Her husband resents missing the football game. The kids whine the whole way and hate the chestnuts. My family ruined my Christmas, she tells her psychologist.

In most cases, the holidays only amplify existing problems, psychologists say. Well-adjusted people manage the season okay.

At the University of Rochester Medical Center, Dr. Rita Underberg, associate professor of psychiatry, says 80 percent of her patients — parents already having trouble with their children — find their situations worse at Christmas.

Among her acquaintances outside of work, "I hear more about disappointments than I hear about pleasure at Christmas." And the season brings a big increase in the number of students coming in anxious, angry, needing to talk about going home.

"It's a fairly common phenomenon for people with serious emotional problems — those requiring treatment — which is 10 to 20 percent of the population," says Dr. Werner Mendel, a professor of psychiatry at the University of Southern California.

"Christmas is merchandized as a holiday of love and togetherness of the family. These people feel more alienated. They think everybody is at home, warm and loving, around the

THE INSIDE REPORT

The Five Days Of Peking

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

PEKING — Five days of impassioned speeches and demonstrations in the streets of Peking have been replaced by mere wall posters, but left behind is toleration of democratic impulses that could profoundly change Communist China.

Although these may not have been five days that shook China, the effects are indelible. The unexpected demonstrations, unwittingly contributed to by this column, were muted by the regime's quiet go-slow signal. But at no time was overt disapproval sounded by the party apparatus.

The ambitious modernization program of Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping depends on those very students and workers who demonstrated for democracy last week to challenge the dead hand of the vast bureaucracy. For their part, the demonstrators don't want to provoke a comeback by the hard-liners being purged by Teng. Thus, that the demonstrators and Teng need each other is the best hope for cautious liberalization in China.

Teng's desire to solidify control over the bureaucracy unintentionally triggered the drama here. Wall posters began appearing Nov. 19, denouncing Teng's enemies and the harsh repression of the April 5, 1976, Tien An Men square demonstration (repression including the purge of Teng himself). But by Nov. 22, the posters had vaulted beyond Teng:s original purpose, demanding democratic elections and criticizing Mao Tsetung.

The five days of Peking really began Saturday, Nov. 25, the day after we arrived in this wintry capital. Western journalists and diplomats, at the Hsi Tan wall for their daily reading of posters, were amazed to have Chinese approach them and engage in political discussion — the first time since the Communist takeover in 1949. A stunned diplomat from the U.S. liaison office was asked how to criticize the nation's leaders without being traitorous. Many wanted to discuss the mechanics of parliamentary democracy. Some called Hsi Tan "our Hyde Park."

When we visited there the next night, Nov. 26 — with John Fraser, correspondent for the Toronto Globe and Mail — Hsi Tan was a sight to behold: while icy winds blew the dust of grassless Peking in their faces, hundreds of Chinese elbowed each other for a position to read posters; hundreds more huddled in small groups to debate politics.

Other Editors Say Sock It To 'em

(The Raleigh Times)

This Christmas shopping season the more self-conscious among us almost hesitate to pick up a piece of merchandise to see if we really like it.

That's because we know how many suspicious eyes are on us from electronic gadgets, one-way glass, curved mirrors and plainclothes police and security types as well as from regular salespeople. Today, not just merchants and clerks but everyone is increasingly aware of the rising plague of shoplifting.

This epidemic of moral disease robs us all in higher prices to cover not only the astonishingly high cost of stolen goods— probably at least $1 million a year in Wake — but also the cost of all those security people and devices. Prices are bad enough without that.

So, since other ways of discouraging shoplifting seem not to be working, the courts should be cracking down as hard as they can, even on first offenders, to prevent light-fingeredness becoming a habit. So far, locally, they aren't doing that.

A first offense of unlawful concealment — the appropriate charge for those who conceal goods but haven't taken them outside the store — usually brings in Wake courts only suspended sentences and probation instead of the permitted $100 fine, six month term, or both.

Not only that, it's also local prosecutor's practice to try second-offense shoplifters as though they were first offenders, presumably because it would take staff time to assemble the evidence on the many repeaters that would subject them to the second-offense penalties of up to two years. Judge Pretlow Winborne defends the leniency because "we get so bloody many of them."

Well, as long as the penalty for the shoplifter is so little, the judges aren't likely to get fewer of them. If Wake District Attorney Randolph Riley really, as quoted, feels second offenders need tougher treatment, he should tell his staff to try them as second offenders.

And district court judges should certainly feel no hesitation in starting to slap $100 fines on shoplifters the first time they're caught. Such treatment may not stop the professionals but it is bound to deter some young amateurs from turning pro.

ETERNAL LIFE

What is the meaning of the term eternal life? On its face it would appear to refer to the duration of life. Eternal life means life which goes on forever.

But there are two other elements of equal importance. The first is the quality of this life. It is a heavenly type of life as contrasted with an earthly. It is a life which loves goodness and abhors evil. It is a life which depends upon God with childlike simplicity and

The second important aspect of eternal life is that it begins here and now. Heaven and hell start on earth — they are only consummated in the world beyond. Most of the people who will go to heaven are there now — that is, living the heavenly life in the midst of daily events.

Conversely, those who here and now have made a hell of their lives have already set their feet in that eternal direction. Fortunately they can change — and this is a missionary responsibility for all Christians.

Many Resist Retiring At 65

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — As more and more people seemed to reach their mid-60s in fair if not vigorously good health, pressures began to build against mandatory retirement before age 70.

Many workers, it was said, were at the peak of their powers. The country needed their contributions. Their companies, which had spend thousands of dollars training them, required their services.

In a personal sense, it was sometimes argued that workers needed the employment, since Social Security and retirement benefits often were inadeuate to maintain the individual in the accustomed lifestyle.

Other reasons were offered also, one of the strongest being the notion that a large percentage of workers resented being sent out to pasture when they could be gainfully, happily employed in their careers.

And so with much to-do a law was passed, effective Jan. 1, 1979, prohibiting companies employing 20 or more workers from mandating retirement before age 70. The geriatric generation had won its point.

Fears soon arose about the law's impact on companies. It would slow the younger worker's ascent up the corporate ladder; it would force companies to employ workers whose productivity was falling.

But now it seems that all the commotion and concern might have been pointless.

The Conference Board queried 41 personnel officers of major companies to determine what the impact would be. The response: Almost none.

"Most of the surveyed executives believe that relatively few of their 65-year-old employees will want to continue working, even when the new law takes effect," it reported.

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

An article recently published in this paper told of efforts of the Greenville Board of Education to maintain racial balance per a 1970 court order. I submit that court-ordered desegregation is a perversion of the power of judicial review.

Article I of the Constitution vests all policy-making authority in Congress (the legislative body). The power of judicial review enables the Supreme Court to void legislative or executive action deemed not in compliance with the Constitution. The Court has no constitutional authority to make policy on its own. If the Supreme Court or any lower court engages in judicial lawmaking, the delicate system of checks and balances is shattered.

In these days of "affirmative action" and other race-conscious federal programs, it is refreshing to read the words of black economist Thomas Sowell: "What affirmative action has done is to destroy the legitimacy of what has already been achieved, by making all black achievements look like questionable accomplishments, or even outright gifts." Anne Wortham, a black doctoral candidate in Sociology at Boston College, has this observation: "There can be no greater insult than to free a man, then tell him that according to the statistical profile of his racial group and interpretations of his cultural heritage, he will not be allowed to exercise that freedom in his own way, but must be spared the risks of competition, treated 'preferentially,' and doomed never to know whether he could have advanced alone."

If all people are created equal, then let there be no preferentially-treated classes of people before the law. Let the courts refrain from judicial lawmaking. Let freedom ring!

Lyle Barlow

To the editor:

Today, in this world of confusion, trouble, anxiety and stress — while trying to keep up with the fast pace of living, sometimes we just don't stop and think of those who are working so diligently for our safety and protection. We, the citizens of Pitt County are among the most fortunate. Gratefulness, honor and credit should be given to the dedicated leader of this somewhat questionable environment — Sheriff Ralph L. Tyson.

He, for the past 21 years, has been a most dedicated leader, law enforcement officer and peacemaker. He has taught all the officers under his command to do their utmost to bring peace and harmony among the people of our county. Each one of those officers, I'm sure, looks up to him with respect and admiration.

If you have ever entered into the Pitt County or city jails, or any jails in our 50 United States, you will immediately realize, without a doubt, that the atmosphere, kindness and consideration given to each person as an individual in our jails is far more than one could expect. Our jails are an exception, compared with all the others.

Sheriff Tyson is, without a doubt, one of the most qualified and dedicated law enforcement officers that has ever walked upon the face of this earth. I can truthfully say that if any law enforcement officer's name is entered into the hall of fame, then Ralph Tyson's should be at the top.

He has deep respect for all people. He does not discriminate, holds no prejudice nor shows any partiality toward any person or group. He is a good listener with a keen ear and a deep insight into one's problems.

So all citizens of Pitt County should feel proud to have such an outstanding man in our midst. We all should take our hats off and say a sincere heartfelt thank you for a job being well done.

AS I RECALL IT

Five Were Brady's Tribunal Of Last Resort

By NOEL YANCEY

(Noel Yancey has just retired after 39 years of covering state government for the Associated Press. In this column, he retells some of the big stories he recalls after covering 12 governors and 13 sessions of the General Assembly.)

Clyde R. Hoey was one of the most colorful North Carolina governors. With a swallow-tail coat, long hair and an eternal flower on his lapel, he was an orator who loved to hold forth on the glories of the "Great State of North Carolina." He enjoyed pausing in his office routine to walk down Fayetteville Street of a morning to get a Coca Cola at Brantley's drug store, shaking hands with every passerby.

Back in November, 1937, Hoey had a problem—a life and death question. He had to decide whether to permit the execution of a black man who was under a death sentence for slashing the throat of a white man whose brother was a prominent Iredell County politician.

Political caution dictated that Hoey let Brady Lawrence, 22, die in the gas chamber for killing Clyde Ervin. Iredell Sheriff John W. Moore, Register of Deeds Lester F. Ervin—brother of the deceased—the 12 jurors who decided the case—and many others urged that the death penalty be carried out.

But Hoey was troubled about the case. He was not certain that premeditation has been established beyond a reasonable doubt. In addition, Judge Thomas J. Shaw of Greensboro who presided over the trial recommended that Lawrence's sentence be commuted to life imprisonment. Other Iredell residents said the killing was not premeditated and that the penalty should not be death.

In his delemma, Hoey hit on a unique solution that would get him off the political hook and would satisfy those who wanted to soften justice with mercy. The governor decided to let the newsmen who covered his office regularly decide the fate of Brady Lawrence.

"Boys," Hoey told the five newsmen who assembled in his office one afternoon. "I have a death row case to decide, a hard case. I want you to hear it and I want you to tell me what to do about it."

For more than an hour, Hoey, a noted trial lawyer, reviewed the case of Brady Lawrence and the killing of Clyde Ervin that had occurred at a Negro school commencement on the night of May 30, 1936. Ervin was the only white among a crowd of several hundred blacks.

With public sentiment demanding speedy action, officers arrested Lawrence and brought him to trial before Judge Shaw a week later. He was quickly convicted and sentenced to die in the gas chamber.

At the trial only four blacks admitted seeing the killing. They testified they were trying to take Ervin home when Lawrence without apparent provocation, stabbed Ervin in the throat and walked away.

The only defense testimony was offered by Lawrence in his own defense. He told the court that Ervin was drinking and sharing his liquor with several blacks at the commencement. He swore that Ervin demanded that he go fetch him a black woman and that he refused. He said Ervin then rushed at him with a whiskey bottle and "I cut him."

Hoey read the newsmen a letter Judge Shaw had written him shortly before his death. "The killing occurred at night at a public gathering of colored people. Only three or four colored men out of all present testified at the trial. Their testimony tended to show murder in the first degree."

"The defendant alone testified in his defense. There may have been some character witnesses in his favor. His evidence tended to show self defense. The evidence was that the deceased, a white man, was drunk, that he had been at this place for a long time that night before the killing.

"...I don't know if there had been any intimidation of witnesses, but I am impressed by the silence of the other colored people at the gathering. The deceased had no business at this place that night. I may be doing wrong for I am acting not on evidence but more upon the lack of it, but I recommend that his sentence be commuted to life imprisonment."

As he summed up the case, Hoey posed this question, "Was the murder premeditated or not? Frankly, I have been studying the case for several months and still haven't been able to reach a definite conclusion."

"These are the facts," he added. "Your decision will be final. What would you do if you were in my place?"

The governor's question was followed by a period of quiet. One reporter who had covered many criminal cases puffed deeply on a corncob pipe. One sat with his eyes closed and held his head in his hands. Another lit a cigarette. Four had watched the struggles of men dying in the gas chamber. The fifth had not witnessed its horrors.

Although he did not know it, the five newsmen had become Brady Lawrence's tribunal of last resort. The state Supreme Court had dismissed his appeal and now his fate rested in the hands of the five reporters.

One after the other, the five spoke until their vote was unanimous—for commutation.

A day or so later, Paroles Commissioner Edwin Gill (later state treasurer for many years) announced the governor's order commuting the sentence to life imprisonment. Brady Lawrence's life had been spared.

Later, Lawrence was paroled to work as a general handyman at the home of a Raleigh merchant Alfred Williams. He worked for Williams until his death about 15 years later.

"I do not think I ever came in contact with a more honest or sincere person. He was a fine character," Williams said recently.

The five newsmen who decided the case were: W.T. Bost of the Greensboro Daily News, Frank B. Gilbreth of the Associated Press, Dave Warner of United Press International and Jack Riley and Carl G. Thompson of the News and Observer of Raleigh.

Alvah Duke Fights For Great Swamp's Survival

Raised beside its wildlife-filled woodlands and amber water, Duke protects the swamp as he would his home. While progress nibbles at the outer edges of the Great Dismal, Duke watches the digging of drainage ditches and fights hard to maintain the crucial elevated water table. He is eloquent in his descriptions of the destruction: "Monstrous bulldozers have invaded the quiet places of the Dismal, thrusting their steel blades into the mellow soil, tearing at its gentle bosom, carving out a web of veinous ditches that run through the very heartland of the region."

The thin, agile man has testified before Congressional committees and says, "I listened to their lamentations and their resolutions, and then I came back home.

"Law," he mutters. "Some of it doesn't make much sense."

Preserving Eden on earth. That makes sense to Alvah Duke.

Writing books and drawing historical maps. That makes sense.

"I wrote stories for magazines back in the '30s," he says. "They were always about the swamp. My wonderful wife, Helen, my editor and best friend, always had a tenderness in her heart for all of God's innocent creatures in the swamp."

Now, as he lugs the gas can aboard his tour boat and competently eases into the shimmering sassafrass canal, he introduces the Great Dismal to more of her numerous visitors.

"Behold the majestic cypress lifting its arms towards the faraway heavens." He points out the black and white zebra butterflies, a rare treasure of the swamp. The land itself is a unique peat formation.

"The Great Dismal is not a swamp. It is not a disease-ridden slough that traps surface water, holding it captive in its muddy paws until the water becomes stagnant, polluted and poisonous.

"The Great Dismal is a world unto itself formed of organic deposits rising upwards from the bosom of the good earth.

"It is a natural phenomenon in an unnatural setting, the highest elevation on the last of the Virginia coastal terraces, from whence the landfall drops beneath the restless ocean.

The boat glides out of the forest tunnel and silently crosses wide Lake Drummond, "the liquid heart of the Great Dismal Swamp."

A hazy blue dreaminess reigns. "It's like seeing two worlds here," Duke says. "You can see trees pointing up to the sky and down to the earth, but the water is so clear you can't tell where the shoreline is.

"The water's been called 'miracle water.' It's always fresh and sterile. Legend has it that early settlers used it as a tonic, and sailors drank it to prevent disease."

Of course, Duke never fails to tell each visitor about the vulnerability of the swamp. "There are federal agencies that are working to

Some Are Deprived Of Helping Around House

Meg just loves to help around the house, and I let her. Each time she does, I age fifteen years and my furniture ages twenty, but I read somewhere that allowing small children to assume responsibility makes them feel important.

I wanted Meg to feel important so the first thing I let her do was to make her own bed. She usually put on the spread inside out and left the covers bunched beneath it as if she were hiding a corpse, but she was so pleased with herself that I didn't have the heart to intervene.

That was before she decided that she was ready to conquer new territories. I only wish I had known about this decision when I left a topless blender of Italian salad dressing in order to answer the phone. By the time I got back, my entire kitchen had developed an allergy to garlic.

Meg sported the same rash. I grabbed for the blender just as she pushed speed 14. "Hi, Mommy," she said. "I'm helping you cook."

After that I made a rule that all help must take place under my supervision. I thought this was only fair. Meg thought it was vicious and senseless. She couldn't understand why she could not pitch the glasses in the sink after she cleared the table. Or why I screamed when she tried to dust my lead crystal ashtray, which she was holding with two fingers 18 inches from the top of the glass coffee table.

I tried to give her a little leeway, but the reaction was always the same. For instance, one day I let her mop the floor. She mopped the same spot for 30 minutes. The water was ankle-deep, and I could feel the corners of the tiles curling up around my feet.

"I think the floor's clean enough, honey," I said. "Let's throw out the water."

"But I need to mop," she insisted.

"No, now we need to do something else."

"You won't let me mop, you won't let me mop, you won't let me mop" she sobbed.

I silenced her by sticking a bottle of Windex in her hand. She used it on the sliding glass door. An entire bottle. She cleaned an area the size of an Excedrin.

"I want some more," she said.

"We don't have anymore. We'll have to find something else to do."

"You won't give me more, you won't give me more, you won't give me more," she sobbed.

This time I found a refuge in the vacuum cleaner. Together we vacuumed an entire hallway in two hours. We might still have been there if it hadn't been time for nursery school.

"I don't want to go," she screamed.

It took me ten minutes to wrestle the vacuum cleaner from her grasp, and we were late for school. All her classmates were already seated in their circle.

"Oh, I'm so glad to see you," her teacher said. "We've just been talking about what we do at home to help. What do you you do, Meg?"

Meg wrinkled her nose, rolled her eyes and heaved a tremendous sigh. "My Mommy never lets me do nothin!"

Once foreigners were spotted, we were quickly surrounded.

When Fraser told them this column might be interviewing Teng the next morning, a roar went up. Some 800 to 1,000 Chinese now turned the conversation into a political event. Questions and comments were written and passed up for us to relay to Teng. One asked for a reevaluation of Mao's Cultural Revolution; another requested a televised trial of the radical "Gang of Four" headed by Mao's widow. We repeated a few such comments near the end of our interview with Teng the next day, and Fraser relayed the replies to the Hsi Tan crowd that night. They went into an uproar when they heard Teng had defended the wall posters (though disagreeing with anti-Mao criticism). Close to 10,000 then marched two long blocks to Tien An Men square for a rally lasting into the night.

The front page story on our interview in the People's Daily the next day stressed Teng's support of Mao and call for stability, but that did not prevent two more exuberant nights of demonstrating and speeches in the huge square where one speaker (not 200 yards from an idealized color poster of Josef Stalin) declared China had adopted "Stalinist fascism." Similar rallies spread to Shanghai and Nanking.

After five days, the regime put out the word by internal radio: cool it; stop the rallies and be careful about saying things you can't prove — especially criticism of Chairman Mao; instead, discuss these things in your factory and school units.

Although one new poster defended the demonstrations, the orders were followed. Thousands still gathered daily at Hsi Tan, but the high excitement was gone. However, there is no evidence of any order to end contacts with foreigners. In answer to our repeated questions, well-placed Chinese officials refused to criticize either the demonstrations or the part in them by Western newsmen; instead, they praised political involvement as conducive to China's "four modernizations."

The demonstrators so praised are young, mostly students but many workers. While better informed than most Chinese (several discussed Voice of America broadcasts), they are unlike the Russian dissidents — within the national mainstream. Contrary to disinformation dispensed by Soviet correspondents here, the demonstrators are not anti-regime; Teng is their man.

The regime's call for election of workshop leaders and other cadres to shape up the bureaucracy built demand for democracy on top. While now selecting plant superintendints, said one poster put up during the demonstrations, "we have no say about the people who run the country." For that sentiment to surface in China after a generation of developing Socialist Man under the world's tightest thought-control system is nothing less than a tribute to the human spirit.

Christmas tree, and they are out in the cold with their nose pressed against the window pane."

For others there is disappointment that began in childhood. It results from the discrepancy between their picture postcard vision of Chistmas and what actually happens.

"There's a certain depression built into the holidays," Dr. Mendel says. "We've had to give up infantile fantasies about Santa Claus. If you want a present, you have to go out and buy it."

The trouble can begin as early as Thanksgiving when commercial hype sets in, and lasts until New Year's Day. Dr. Charles Rotman, a psychologist at Babson College in Wellesley, Mass., notes New Year's is for review and resolution and is tough for an unhappy person.

"It's like the Scrooge story. He has to take into account what he's done over the year to his employees and to himself."

Christmas "brings together people who have for some reason avoided being together," Dr. Underberg says. "It brings back past problems and generates new ones."

The Washington Amendment Moves Slowly

BY JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Quite suddenly we have a revival of interest in the proposed constitutional amendment to give two senators and at least one representative to the City of Washington, D.C. Conservatives staged a major rain dance against the plan last weekend. Liberals went to Memphis, hustling support at the Democrats' convention.

Virtually all the states will have an opportunity to consider the amendment at their legislative sessions next year. At the moment, the weather forecast hovers between chill winds and a killing frost. The resolution cleared the Senate and went out to the states on August 22. New Jersey ratified on September 11. Ohio apparently ratified on December 1, but its lower house then voted to reconsider its vote later this month. California and Pennsylvania, which proponents had counted in the bag, have looked briefly at the proposition and decided to have a second look when they get around to it.

That is the crop so far, and a poor crop it is. Compared to the Equal Rights Amendment of 1972, which shot off like the Tokyo express and attracted 30 ratifications in its first year, the Washington, D.C., amendment is a slow freight. It seems highly unlikely that the proposition can win approval in 38 states before the resolution expires of its own terms in 1985.

Fine with me. The theory behind this resolution is altogether admirable: Every citizen is entitled to representation in the Congress. But in this proposition, the principle is misplaced. The roughly 700,000 residents of the District of Columbia are not entitled to the kind of relief this amendment would give them. Their legitimate needs can be met in another way.

This is how the amendment goes:

Section 1 says that for purposes of representation in the Congress, for election of presidents, and for ratification of future constitutional amendments, the District of Columbia "shall be treated as though it were a state."

Section 2 says: "The exercise of the rights and powers conferred under this article shall be by the people of the District constituting the seat of government, and as shall be provided by the Congress."

Section 3 repeals the present Twenty-Third Amendment, which gives the District three presidential electors.

Section 4 fixes a seven-year deadline from the date of submission.

If the amendment served only to give the District voting representation in the House, little opposition might have arisen. But when the proponents insisted upon the whole hog, they invitied the very trouble they now are encountering. Conservatives are understandably appalled at the prospect of adding two ultra-liberal Democrats to a Senate of 100 members.

Perhaps this is putting politics above principle, but so be it. This would not be the first time politics and statehood got entangled. Proponents have injected elements of racism into their campaign for ratification: Pro-amendment equals pro-black, and vice versa. But race has nothing to do with it. The certain prospect, if the amendment is ratified, is for two senators who will faithfully represent the one industry we have in our town, which is government, which is to say, the bureaucracy and the welfare state.

There are other objections. This half-baked scheme would treat the city "as though it were a state" for certain purposes, but Congress would retain power "to exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever" involving the District. If Washington should get two senators, would they have the same privileges of other senators? Presumably so. Well, then, would Senators Jane Fonda and Julian Bond be able to name U.S. district judges of their own choosing? Let those who know anything at all of the lackluster federal judges of Washington think that one over for a while.

The rational answer is retrocession. A small area of downtown Washington could be carved out, containing the principal government buildings. The remaining 55 square miles, more or less, could be given back to Maryland, whence they came. This would satisfy every valid demand of the proponents without violence to our federal structure. My hope is that most of the state legislatures will see it that way.

Castro Wants To Send Thousands More

HAVANA, Cuba (UPI) — President Fidel Castro, saying Cuban-American relations are in "pretty bad shape," Saturday challenged the Carter administration to grant immediate asylum to thousands of former Cuban political prisoners.

Castro applauded the U.S. decision to receive every month about 400 of the 3,600 political prisoners now in Cuban jails who will begin to regain their freedom later this month, but he said this should apply to former prisoners as well.

"The United States has a moral responsibility toward the people it pushed into carrying out anti-revolutionary activities," Castro said during a lengthy pre-dawn news conference in a crowded auditorium in the palace of the revolution.

Castro met with reporters after a nine-hour meeting with 112 representatives of the large Cuban exile community during which he formally agreed to begin releasing a total of 3,600 political prisoners later this month.

The agreement, which Castro stressed was an internal Cuban matter and not a question of relations between Cuba and the United States, calls for the reunification of Cuban families.

The agreements had been reached in principle during a first meeting in Havana Nov. 20-21. Since then, U.S. Attorney General Griffin Bell has said the United States was willing to accept about 400 political prisoners monthly — but only those who are still in jail and will be released soon, not political prisoners freed before last Aug. 1.

"I don't understand that attitude," Castro said. "The United States can not evade the responsibility it has towards those former prisoners.

"I just don't see why Carter, with all his talk about human rights, couldn't have done more than this small gesture."

Castro said the list of the first 400 prisoners to be freed will be made public in about one week.

He waved a copy of the list in front of reporters and said only about 120 of the prisoners want to leave the island. He suggested that the rest of the U.S. quota be filled with former political prisoners who do want to leave.

Daughter Testifies In Johnson Case

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Betty Lou Johnson's eight-year-old daughter testified Friday that she had seen her father, prominent Raleigh pediatrician Dr. Archie T. Johnson Jr., threaten her mother with a gun.

Julie Johnson was one of several witnesses who said they had either seen Mrs. Johnson abused, seen bruises on her or heard screams coming from the Johnson's Raleigh home.

Miss Johnson was adefense witness in Wake County Superior Court where her mother is being tried on a first-degree murder charge in the death of Johnson. The girl corroborated testimony by her mother that Johnson had beaten Mrs. Johnson and pointed a gun at her.

Black Group Support N.C. Stand

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A spokesman for the nation's black college presidents said Friday his group supports North Carolina in opposing the push by federal officials to speed up desegregation by rearranging existing programs in the state's colleges and universities.

"We need to leave programs in place at state institutions," Charles "A" Lyons Jr., chancellor of Fayetteville State University, told a meeting of the University of North Carolina Board of Governors in Chapel Hill.

Lyons has been president for five years of the National Association for Equal Opportunity in Higher Education, a group composed of the presidents of the nation's 105 traditionally black public and private colleges.

preserve the Great Dismal now," he says, but adds, "The war's not over till the last battle's won." Most recent of the dangers is a proposal to dump silt from Hampton Roads harbor on a site that borders the swamp. It pains Duke to see that "today, the Great Dismal Swamp lies mortally wounded, its arterial channels severed and exposed. The uninhibited freedom of this animal kingdom is fading. Its perimeter is shrinking, pushing the wildlife back, back, back as the grasping hand of man claims all the deep swamp for its own."

"Here in the land so wild and free, I felt the touch of Infinity. And the story of Eden man once heard, echoed through the mist in the song of a bird."

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C. (AP) — A Wake Forest University professor who made an intensive study of the evidence in the 1968 slaying of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., says the House Assassinations Committee spent more than $1 million in arriving at the same conclusions he reached with an outlay of $504.92.

Bynum Shaw, lecturer in journalism, undertook to gather all of the available information on the assassination in the fall of 1971 as an assignment from Esquire magazine.

He says his findings suggested that James Earl Ray was the assassin and that he acted alone, with minimal outside help. Shaw adds that his expenses on research for the story carried in 1972 by the magazine amounted to $504.92.

Shaw said in an interview that before the House committee began its investigation more than a year ago he was asked by a staff member to supply any leads he might like to see pursued.

"I flagged the committee away from some assassination 'nuts' whose testimony would not have been worth plane fare," Shaw said. "And I also suggested that J. B. Stoner, who had been Ray's attorney, be subpoenaed.

"Stoner told me that he had been offered $25,000 by 'an FBI undercover agent' to have King killed. He insisted to me and he tried to prove to Washington that Dr. King was the victim of an FBI plot.

"Neither to me nor to the committee did he offer any credible evidence."

Shaw said that the other suggestion he made to the committee was that Jerry Ray, James's brother, be required to account for all of his time during the period leading up to April 4, 1968 — the day King was shot.

Recently, Jerry Ray was called before the House committee and told that he was suspected of complicity in the assassination.

New Light On Booms

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two Mitre Corp., researchers have raised new questions about the mysterious booms that rattled windows up and down the East Coast last winter.

A Defense Department study last March attributed the booms to supersonic aircraft. It said the sonic booms were directed more than 100 miles away from their sources by peculiar weather conditions.

But Dr. Gordon MacDonald and Sandra Claflin-Chalton, who studied more of the phenomena between December 1977-1978 and last June, counted 594 separate events and said 181 could not be related to any known aircraft operation.

"The number of unexplained events, the locations of reports of events, the timing of events and abundant historical accounts of simiar events all indicate a natural origin," they said in a recently published report of their study.

MacDonald, a geophysicist on leave from Dartmouth University, and Ms. Claflin-Chalton suggested that some of the booms may have been associated with movements in Earth's crust.

They noted that an explosive noise was heard seconds before a small earthquake along the Ramapo Fault in northern New Jersey and southern New York last June. And they eaid the great 1886 Charleston, S.C., earthquake was preceded by booming noises.

"With currently available evidence we cannot go much beyond this conclusion other than to point out that the identification of the source of the natural booms could have far-reaching consequences in such disparate areas as atmospheric physics, earthquakes prediction and energy resources estimation," the report said.

Summary Of Jonestown Tape Published

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Rev. Jim Jones exhorted his 900 Peoples Temple followers to commit suicide and told them: "I tried to give you a good life" but "we have been so betrayed."

A summary of the tape recording made while Jones spoke for the last time to the group in jungle compound at Jonestown on the evening of Nov. 18 was published Saturday by the Washington Post.

"I tried to give you a good life," Jones told his followers as they gathered to die.

"There's no way we can survive" because "we have been so betrayed," Jones said.

"In spite of all I tried to do our people who are alive have made our lives impossible."

The Washington Post said it had obtained from law enforcement sources a detailed summary of the "death tape" found by a State Department representative beside the thronelike chair where Jones presided over the mass murder-suicide of his followers.

The newspaper said the transcript indicates Jones had "considerable difficulty" persuading all his followers to join him in death. It suggested that when Jones chanted "mother, mother, mother," as previously reported, he was scolding his wife Marceline for arguing with him about the mass suicides.

The tape is punctuated by shouted arguments from members of the settlement, the newspaper said. One woman said she did not mind dying if her son could live.

The New York Times reported that U.S. sources said the tape recorded the sounds of gunshots and children crying. Jones can be heard instructing mothers to shoot syringes of cynanide-laced Flavor-Aid deep into their children's throats.

The Times said the Guyanese government has charged U.S. authorities did not provide it with a copy of the tape by U.S. authorities until more than three weeks after the mass suicide-murder.

It has called on the United States to make the tape public.

A spokesman for the FBI refused to comment. "This tape may be evidence," he said.

"We're not going to get into a big discussion on this."

The Post report said the tape records support for Jones as well as dissent to the suicide.

"Dad," someone can be heard to shout, "has brought us this far. My vote is to go with Dad." Many followers called Jones "Dad."

The tape of the jungle commune's final minutes was only one among hundreds found at Jonestown.

"Everything he (Jones) said practically was put on tape unless he said no, and the only time he said no was when something was really insignificant," Michael Carter, a 20year-old former Jonestown radio operator, told The New York Times.

Another Sticker On The Way?

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — If the General Assembly accepts a study commission's recommendation, motorists will have to display another sticker on their cars.

The commission recommended Friday that legislators approve a bill requiring motorists to display by 1980 stickers which will show the motorists have paid property taxes on their vehicles.

Motorits who don't have a sticker could be stopped by police and could face a $500 fine and six months in jail.

Part Of Law Ruled Unconstitutional

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A superior court judge ruled Friday that part of the state's new mixed-drink law is unconstitutional, but he did not suggest ways the state ABC board could change the law.

"What they do about changing it is their business," Judge William T. Grist said, after ruling that a 30-day waiting period for membership at establishments seeking liquor licenses as privated clubs is "unreasonable and discriminatory."

Dollar Sign Is A Factor In Saving Lives

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — How much is a life worth in an age when it's you can save it with modern medical technology but at prohibitive expense?

The debate is heating up in Britain, where the state-run National Health Service, funded mainly from general taxes, faces this question: can it continue to afford the best?

New drugs and new surgery, brain scanners and body scanners, heart monitors, cancer therapy neutron treatment, kidney-washing machines and transplant operations, all represent remarkable advances in diagnosing and treating illness.

But the cost is something else. The British Medical Journal, written by and for medical men, said that replacing a heart valve costs $3,500. A body scanner, which enables doctors to look inside a body without surgery, costs $585,000.

Debate centers on the body scanner because it was introduced into medicine before its value was assessed, unlike the clinically and cost-effective brain scanner, developed earlier. Hospitals which couldn't afford body scanners accepted them from charities which raised the cash and stirred public agitation for the machines.

Pat Seed, a journalist in Lancashire, was awarded the British Empire Medal last April for raising $2.34 million to equip the cancer center in Manchester with a body scanner its linked computer, a building to house it and the cash to run it for 10 years.

Mrs. Seed went through five weeks of diagnosis, including two weeks of exploratory surgery, to discover she has terminal cancer. Then she read in a magazine that a body scanner could have diagnosed it in 20 minutes. And if her disease had been discovered and treated earlier, she might have gotten therapy that could have saved her.

Mrs. Seed knew the scanner would not help her. But she said "I have enjoyed a very happy marriage and home life and I wanted other men and women to have the chance of having longer with their families."

The Department of Health says three Britons in 10 will get cancer at some time in their lives and two of three will die from it. But the department advised health authorities to hold off from buying body scanners while it awaited an assessment of their effectiveness.

The Lancet, another medical weekly, says there's a danger that diagnostic advances will run ahead of society's ability to treat illness. And it noted staggering costs in selling and running scanners and fees charged for treatments in the United States.

Brain and body scanners are British inventions which have been developed by companies elsewhere. Electric and Musical Industries of Britain sold 54 percent of the about 1,000 scanners operating in the United States at the end of last June. A recent study found that the firm accounts for nearly half the 2,000 scanners installed or on order worldwide, bringing in valuable export revenue — an anomaly when home sales are likely to be "very limited."

The study, prepared by Barbara Stocking and Stuart L. Morrison of Sussex University, concludes that "evidence about the scanner's effect on the outcome of the patient's condition is as yet very limited and hardly overwhelming."

In the United States, CT scanners also have become a symbol of costly medical technology and testing that can escalate the cost of health care, particularly if overused.

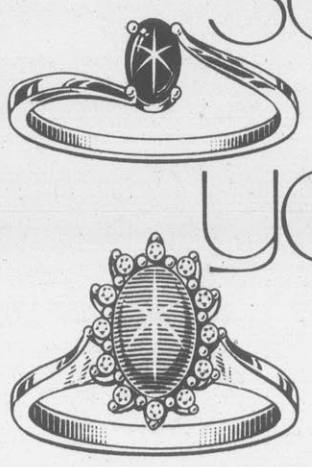

The Office of Technology Assessment, Congress' scientific advisory agency reported in a study released this summer that scanners are going into widespread use without good medical evidence that benefits justify cost. The report said no federal agency has adequate authority to control expensive new medical technology and that the government would have to develop new regulations and cost-control measures if it didn't want similar situations in the future.

Critics of the proliferation of CT scanners, such as the Health Research Group associated with Ralph Nader, have asked the government to put a moratorium on hospitals buying scanners. Critics say there should be a hold on acquiring new CT scanners until further study shows whether the machines save money in the long run. More also needs to be known, they say, about the scanners' effect on patients, like whether using the machines results in better treatment or improved survival, they say.

Sir Andrew Watt Kay, chief scientist of Scotland's health department, says in a foreword: "It is not difficult to foresee that some technologies in the future will be so costly in relation to benefits that society will be forced to renounce them."

But the Christie Hospital and Holt Radium Institute in Manchester, which is getting the scanner raised by Mrs. Seed's campaign, calculates the equipment will pay for itself in two years by saving inpatient and exploratory surgery costs of $1.5 million a year.

News Briefs

Hints At Reconciliation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Top Peking officials hinted at eventual reconciliation with Taiwan in recent conversations with two visiting U.S. congressmen.

In recent months, deputy premiers Teng Hsiao-ping and Li Hsien-nien have told official American visitors privately that Peking cooperated with the Chinese Nationalists against Japanese invaders in the 1930s and in World War Two. China could cooperate again, they indicated, the visitors said.

Proposes Out Of Court Settlement

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Gov. James A. Rhodes and 27 National Guardsmen, defendants in the Kent State civil trial, have proposed a $600,000 out-of-court settlement, United Press International has learned.

Lawyers for both sides refused to comment on the reported settlement offer.

The trial, stemming from the shootings of 13 students at the university during an antiwar demonstration on May 4, 1970, is now in progress in U.S. District Court in Cleveland.

Leadership Shakeup Indicated

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Conflicting reports Saturday indicated a major shakeup in the leadership of Angola with one report indicating President Agostinho Neto would be replaced by a guerrilla general and the lesser post of prime minister abolished.

A radio report from the Angolan capital of Luanda, monitored in Johannesburg, said Neto would be replaced but the Angolan news agency, in a dispatch monitored in Lisbon, indicated Neto would remain as a figurehead president in a new Angolan leadership.

Begin In Norway

OSLO, Norway (UPI) — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin Saturday remained in Sabbath seclusion while waiting to collect his share of the Nobel Peace Prize, which many Norwegians say he does not deserve.

Public opinion polls published Saturday showed broad disagreement with the decision of the Nobel Committee giving the prize jointly to Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat for their contribution to a yet to be signed Middle East peace agreement.

Begin will personally collect his share of the $163,000 prize Sunday at Akerhus Castle. But Sadat stayed home and sent his advisor, Sayed Marei, to collect the prize.

Campaign Accounts In The Red

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Expense reports filed by both Sen. Jesse A. Helms, R-N.C., and Democrat John R. Ingram show that the war chests of both men are in the red.

Helms' report showed his $7.3 million campaign was in the red by about $110,000 — despite the fact that it was the best-financed campaign in North Carolina history and is believed to have been the most expensive campaign in the history of the U.S. Senate.

Ingram's campaign had $33,126.82 in outstanding debts. The campaign for the state insurance commissioner raised $253,806.

Elated Over Venus Probe Data

By LLOYD G. CARTER

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (UPI) — Four robot titanium probes hit Venus Saturday after radioing back detailed information about the planet's puzzling atmosphere. One probe surprised scientists and worked 68 minutes on the scalding surface.

The American mini-labs sliced into the upper fringe of the thick Venusian atmosphere at 25,000 miles an hour and then took nearly an hour to fall 125 miles to the surface, impacting at estimated 22 mph.

They were not designed to survive the impact but one of the four probes continued to transmit data after landing. NASA scientists said earlier that because of the probes' design, no "really important" information would be gained from the surface.

"The scientists are just elated," NASA spokesman Larry King said from mission control at the Ames Research Center. "They are getting excellent, beautiful data. It's the accumulation of a lot of years of hard work."

The main Pioneer-Venus 2 spacecraft that carried the little probes during most of their four-month, 220-million mile journey from Earth, followed the probes into the upper atmosphere an hour and a half later. The transporter examined the top of the atmosphere before burning up from the heat of atmospheric friction.

The multi-probe mission was the most intense study yet of the thick carbon dioxide-rich atmosphere of Venus. Its atmosphere at the surface is 100 times thicker than Earth's and the surface is hotter than 900 degrees F.

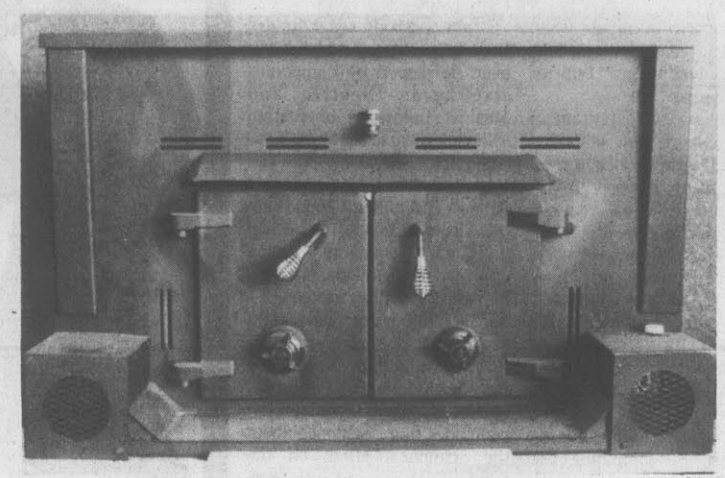

The four top-to-bottom probes had been aimed so they would enter the Venusian atmosphere 6,000 miles apart to simultaneously study both the northern and southern hemispheres of Venus, on the day and night sides of the planet.

The probes began the day's operations when their radio transmitters turned on automatically, one after another, starting at 1:24 p.m. EST.

Book By Sir Walter Given To RIHA

MANTEO — While imprisoned in the Tower Of London, Sir Walter Raleigh spent 13 years writing "The History of the World." The book, first published in London in 1614, gained widespread popular and critical acclaim, and in 73 years, went through 11 editions, more than almost any other book of its time.

Recently, a first edition of Raleigh's history was bought at auction in New York, for approximately $2,000. Mr. and Mrs. Earl Slick of Winston-Salem were successful bidders for the book which they have given to the Roanoke Island HistoricalAssociation (RIHA), producers of Paul Green's renowned outdoor drama, "The Lost Colony."

In folio size (14 by 24 inches and three inches thick), with eight folding maps, it is bound in half-skin and was printed by William Stansby for the publisher, Walter Bure.

William S. Powell, historian for RIHA, states the book "is relatively rare. There were seven known first editions in 1926, and since then several more have surfaced. The collection at the library at UNC -Chapel Hill has five copies.

Raleigh's name does not appear on the frontispiece because he was in disfavor with King James I, who ordered the Archbishop of Canterbury to suppress sale of the book.

James believed he could detect his own features in the portrait of Ninus, the effeminate successor of Queen Semiramis. He also complained that Raleigh spoke irrevertly of King Henry VIII.

The book, according to Dr. Powell was "written as literature and folklore. It begins with God and the creation and ends with Alexander the Great in 130 B. C."

Dr. H. G. Jones, curator of the N. C. Collection at UNC-Chapel Hill notes that since "Raleigh was an important person, his imprisonment in the Tower was like a house arrest in a big hotel. He had access to visitors every day."

Raleigh was scheduled for execution on Dec. 11, 1603, but the sentence was reprieved. From then until 1616, the year he was beheaded, he kept the company of his wife, son and servants. The beheading came two years after his "The History of the World ' was published.

Celebrating 75th Anniversary Of First Flight

KILL DEVIL HILLS REVISITED . . . Recently, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration restaged the steps of Orville and Wilbur Wright in their turn-of-the century experiments in powered flight at Kill Devil Hills near Kitty Hawk. This photograph, of a scene from the NASA film production, captures the barren nature of the Outer Banks area which provided the proper elements for the discovery of powered flight in 1903. (Photo by J. Foster Scott, DCTB)

KITTY HAWK — The 75th anniversary of the Wright brothers' historic 1903 flight will be commemorated all week beginning tomorrow and continuing through Sunday, Dec. 17 with special events scheduled for the 17th.

Each day from Monday through Saturday, the public will have an opportunity to view educational presentations at Wright Brother National Memorial Visitor Center.

The presentations are sponsored by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) and the National Park Services (NPS).

Presentation hours Monday through Friday are at 10 a.m., 11:30 a.m., 2 p.m. and 3:30 p.m. The presentations on Saturday will be at 10 and 11:30 a.m.

At 3 p.m. Saturday, a special presentation on the history of Orville and Wilbur Wright by Charles H. Gibbs-Smith and Paul Garber will be made at the Center. N. C. Secretary of Transportation Thomas W. Bradshaw and a NPS representative will be on hand.

Sunday, Dec. 17 will be marked by a number of highlight activities observing the 75th anniversary. These are:

— 9:30 a. m. — The ceremony honoring the first flight officially opens, with Lorimer Midgett, past president of the First Flight Society, presiding. Music will be provided by Northeastern, Currituck, and Manteo High School bands.

— 10 a.m. — Presentation of colors by Air Force ROTC group from the Chesapeake, Va., school system and singing of the national anthem by Sally Dyal of "The Lost Colony" choir.

Welcomes will be extended by Thomas B. Gray, Dare County Board of Commissioners; William A. Harris, Superintendent, Cape Hatteras National Seashore; and Thomas W. Bradshaw.

Members of the Wright family and distinguished guests will be recognized, and Ira J. Hutchinson, Deputy Director National Parks Service and Brock Adams, Secretary of Transportation will make remarks.

U.S. Attorney General Griffin B. Bell will be the keynote speaker.

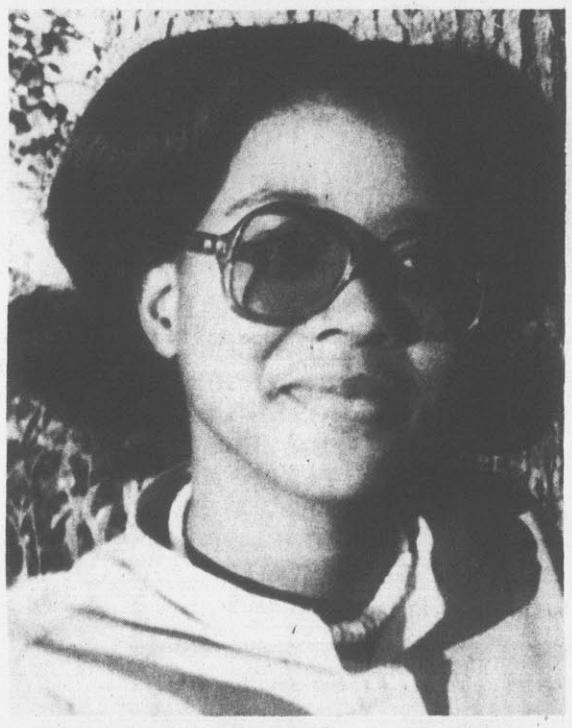

— 10:30 — "Quest for Flight," Ken Kellet's recreation of the first flight in a reproduction of the Wright Flyer. At the completion of the enactment of the first flight, there will be a U. S. Air Force Flyover of SR-71 Surveillance Aircraft. This will be followed by presentation of memorial wreaths and rededication of the memorial boulder to the Wright Brothers by John Alison, Director, National Aeronautics Association.

— 11 a.m. — Flyover by Virginia Air National Guard, with an aerial demonstration using four F-105 aircraft.

In addition to the ceremonies listed above, there will be a feature film, "The Winds of Kitty Hawk" shown at 8 p.m. Dec. 17 over NBC-TV. The film stars Michael Moriarty as Wilbur and David Huffman as Orville Wright.

The public is invited to all the functions during the week and on Sunday, Dec. 17. There is no admission charged.

Three Shows Exhibited At ECU's Gray Gallery

A WORK BY JOHN WILL . . . now on view in the Gray Gallery on the ECU campus

A PAINTING . . . by Wayne Johnson

LOW VASE . . . with hearts and flowers, by David Nichols, is one of about 65 works of art in glass by ten artists.

A collection of contemporary glass by ten North Carolina based artists — most of them living in western North Carolina; "Anexpatroit," a one-man exhibit of the art of John Will; and the thesis show of ECU artist Wayne Johnson comprise the current offering at Gray Gallery on the East Carolina University campus.

Entitled "North Carolina Glass '78," the some five dozen examples were selected and assembled by members of the Art Department, Western Carolina University, Cullowhee. The ECU showing follows its initial exhibition at WCU, and from here will go to Georgia and Tennessee.

Artists in glassmaking chosen for the exhibition are: William Bernstein, Jak Brewer, Dale Brownscombe, Fritz Dreisbach, Gilbert C. Johnson, Robert Levin, Harvey K. Littleton, David Nichols, John Nygren, and Mark Peiser.

A majority of the pieces being shown are vases in a variety of shapes and forms, and much of it is made in the blown glass technique. Traditional concepts of form and decoration are plentiful in this collection, which also has representative items of unadorned pieces and glass sculpture.

Artist John Will, currently an Assistant Professor at the University of Calgary and in summers a teacher at the Nova Scotia College of Art and Design in Halifax, has engravings, color litographs, etchings, and intaglio prints in his show.

Scenes based in Canada and the U.S. are included, and are drawn from work accomplished since 1967.

Wayne Johnson's thesis show, based loosely on the theme of human organs, is a collection of about two dozen acrylic paintings with the subject matter as a basis for stylized and semi-abstracted designs.

Aaron Karp, the gallery's director, has announced that during the holiday season, the Gray Gallery will not be open to the public on weekends. Weekend schedules will resume in January at a date to be announced.

The three shows currently at the gallery will be on view until Jan. 16.

Receives Music Award

ECU News Bureau

Dr. Charles Stevens, assistant dean of the School of Music, East Carolina University, has been presented the annual Orpheus Award of ECU's Zeta Psi chapter of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia music fraternity.

The award is given to individuals who have made "significant and lasting contribution" to music in America. The presentation was made at the chapter's recent annual banquet.

Stevens holds advanced degrees from ECU and UNC-Chapel Hill. He has been a member of the ECU keyboard and theory faculties for 18 years, and previously taught in the Washington, N. C. school system.

Dr. Steven's research field has been the music of 18th century Moravian composers, and from 1972 to 1976 he served as province governor for the fraternity. The province includes seven chapters on North Carolina campuses, with an eighth chapter soon to be installed at Winston-Salem State University.

Specials

"The Living Sands of Namib," a one-hour television National Geographic Special, airs on UNC-TV, Channel 25, Greenville at 8 p.m. tonight.

The film examines a desert along the coast of southwestern Africa and reveals an exotic array of animal and plant life, some of it found nowhere else.

An array of talent — pianist Claudio Arrau, actress Lauren Bacall, composer Aaron Copland, mezzo-soprano Rosalind Elias, conductor Lukas Foss, bassist Donald Gramm, author Lillian Hellman, violinist Yehudi Menuhi and composer William Schuman are among those who will be seen at 9 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 14 on UNC-TV in the 60th birthday celebration of Leonard Bernstein.

They will join Bernstein, cellist Mstislav Rostropovich and the National Symphony Orchestra in a program that includes music by Stravinsky and Beethoven, with the major portion of the program devoted to compositions by Bernstein himself.

Music Students Elected

ECU News Bureau

Two students in the East Carolina University School of Music have been elected officers in the student section of the N. C. Music Educators Association.

William Robinson is newly elected president; and Lynn Beyar is recording secretary. Both are juniors at ECU.

Each was selected from representatives from all N. C. student chapters and will serve a one-year term.

Robinson is studying clarinet. He is also a part-time magician and has performed in shows in Greenville and Tidewater Virginia areas.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Willie Mae Gibbs

Prior to Jerry Ford's nomination as Vice President, Betty Ford was unknown to most Americans. Today she is one of the most admired women of our time — a true American heroine. In the pages of THE TIMES OF MY LIFE, readers will discover why there is so much admiration for her. Her story — frank, lively, and often moving — progresses from the tree-shaded streets of Grand Rapids, Michigan, to the White House. It is not a political story. Rather, it is a personal story about her close family, a sunny childhood, a wonderful girlhood, and a brief career (and enduring passion for) the dance. Then came a short and unhappy first marriage; and when it ended, she met Gerald Ford and went to Washington where for twenty years she juggled the many obligations of a congressional wife and motherhood to three sons and a daughter. They were good years, but not easy ones. Stress in her life led to one bad period during which she sought professional help. For the most part, life on Crown View Drive was satisfying and predictable. And then came the spotlight. Gerald Ford became Vice President, and eight months later he was President of the United States. The news cameras were focused on the Ford family and nothing has ever been the same. Betty Ford was a reluctant first lady but she came to love and relish what she could accomplish in that role. She was outspoken in support of public issues she believed in — and in her opinions on controversial personal matters as well. She talks vividly about what life is like for the family inside the White House. We see her face private crises with courage. The grace, candor and lack of pretension demonstrated by her as First Lady, and now in her private life, is the basis for the growing admiration and affection that Americans feel for her' Those who read THE TIMES OF MY LIFE will be moved and exhilarated by Betty Ford's personal, and from time to time, amusing account of her life.

In MOMMIE DEAREST Christina Crawford, the daughter of Joan Crawford, reveals the terrible secret she has lived with until her mother's death. The first of four children adopted by Joan Crawford, Christina was showered with love during her infancy and presented to the world as the perfect child of a famous film star. She now indicates that when she was no longer a baby and the reporters and fans had departed, that she grew up facing the reality of child abuse and of alcoholism, and sometimes a nightmare of sheer terror. Her relationship with her mother was that of a child trying to stay alive and a ruthless, cunning, lonely woman who knew every trick of survival. Despite their relationship Christina loved Joan and searched for her mother's love in return throughout the years they shared. Her story is not written out of hatred for her mother, for she had forgiven her long before her death. Instead, her book was written for all those people who have had to hide the truth because they were afraid or because they thought no one would believe them. MOMMIE DEAREST offers hope to those who know what it's like to grow up with a parent like Joan — hope that it is possible to live through a terrifying personal struggle and create a productive life out of chaos.

Harry Winston

NEW YORK (AP) — Harry Winston, the largest independent gem merchant in the world and donor of the Hope Diamond to the Smithsonian Institution's Hall of Gems and Minerals in 1958, died Friday at the age of 82.

Senior Show

Soon Jerng Kim, a senior in the School of Art, East Carolina University, currently has a show of her work on view in the gallery of the ECU Baptist Student Center, E. 10th Street.

Included in the exhibition are oil and acrylic paintings, a print, a piece of sculpture and chalk drawings.

The show will be on view through Dec. 15. The public is invited to see it during regular hours of the Center.

Air Safety Crusader Believes Air Travel Safest

WORTHINGTON, Ohio (AP) — From a cluttered office over a carry-out pizza shop in this Columbus suburb, John B. Galipault operates one of the nation's most energetic air-safety organizations.

Galipault, a former Ohio University aviation teacher, has been crusading as an aviationsafety watchdog for six years and is not above complaining to insurance underwriters and pressuring legislators and bureaucrats.

His Aviation Safety Institute has compiled a file of 29,000 reports of flight hazards in North America and Europe.

"It's amazing that we get through any given day without any fatalities," he said. "I know the danger is there. I see it. It's reality."

Yet, Galipault says, he still thinks air travel is the safest means of transportation.

The institute receives calls from people afraid to talk to authorities. The federal government adopted an anonymous-tip program based on Galipault's success.

Institute files show reports of 11 instances last year in which airplanes had near misses near Columbus and another case in Elyria.

Galipault, who estimates there are 3,000 near misses every year between large airliners and business jets or smaller planes, has been among those seeking a warning system to alert pilots when they are on a collision course with another aircraft.

Calls for such a system have increased since the mid-air crash over San Diego on Sept. 25, the worst air disaster in U.S. history.

Failure to implement a warning system for mid-air collisions has been a setback to Galipault. But he also boasts of success.

When his institute could not convince a West Coast company that it should do something to eliminate explosive fumes from the process of fueling its jetliners in a hangar, Galipault contacted the company's insurance underwriters. The prospect of higher premiums brought about a response that a half-inch file of correspondence had failed to generate.

Galipault has appeared on national television warning of dangers to travelers flying in unmapped air space. Twelve percent of the nation's flying space was once uncharted because it was above areas reserved for military use. Galipault helped to win the identification of such air space.

The non-profit, tax-exempt foundation pays no salary to Galipault. At one time, its checking account balance was down to $6.24.

Hatters Waltz Past Pirates, 107-82

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

DELAND, Fla. — East Carolina's basketball team completed a disappointing showing in the Hatter Classic here last night by losing to host team Stetson, 107-82 in the tournament's consolation game.

Much like Friday night's 102-79 loss to Indiana State in the event's opening game, the Pirates fell way behind early and were forced to try to make up a big deficit for three-quarters of the game.

The Hatters outscored ECU 16-2 over a four-minute period midway through the first half to break open the game, and the Bucs never seriously threatened after that.

Pirate coach Larry Gillman blamed what he called his squad's "first halfitis" on the team's grueling four-game road trip. "We've got a young team and four games on the road is difficult for any veteran team. We'd like to come out and play aggressively, but we're just too beat after the four games."

The Pirates began the road trip last Saturday night at William & Mary, and they played Tennessee in Knoxville last Tuesday before traveling to Deland for the Hatter Classic.

Stetson, paced by the deadly outside shooting of guard Dirk Ewing, a transfer from N.C. State, and forward Greg Guye, built a 23-point lead at halftime, 51-28.

For the Bucs, it was another night of frustration as they connected on 42.4 per cent of their shots, 36.8 per cent in the first half, and were outrebounded 63-46. Stetson was 51.2 per cent from the field.

Early in the game, the unorganized Pirates gave the sparce crowd in Edmunds Center a lesson on how not to play organized basketball. They mishandled the ball, played nearly non-existant defense from a 2-3 zone, constantly fouled the smaller Hatters, and showed no interest in trying to fight for a rebound.

The Hatters, on the other hand, while not an extremely talented five, displayed well-coached discipline. They were patient in attacking the ECU zone, made good passes, got nearly all the defensive rebounding by gaining good position and seldom took a bad shot.

"They were more mentally ready to play a consolation game than us," Gillman said. "Stetson was prepared to play the game, and did what they had to to win. We played a real good basketball team (Friday) night and (last) night Stetson handled the consolation game better than we did."

But Stetson coach Glenn Wilkes said he was worried about how his team would react to last night's game. The Hatters blew an 18-point lead to Cleveland State, which met ISU in the championship game last night, to lose, 64-61, in the opening round.

"We were concerned very much (Friday) night after blowing a lead like we did that we wouldn't be mentally ready to play." The Hatters had no worries against the lackluster Pirates, as it turned out.

Guye and Ewing each had 24 points, most from long range. Guye was 9-16 from the field, while Ewing was 11-18. "Ewing and Guye can shoot the lights out of the basket," Wilkes commented. He said his team does well against the type of zone ECU played.

Pirate guard Oliver Mack, while leading his team with 18 points, had another disappointing performance, Gillman said. "We're taking Mack to the hospital when we get back to Greenville for some blood tests." Gillman believes his all-American has mononucleosis because his endurance has been poor of late.

Wilkes complemented Mack on his performance in the tournament. "Mack is an excellent player. We tried to deny the ball from him as much as possible and the guys did a good job of defensing him. But he played team basketball—he does not take bad shots."

Despite the final score, Gillman saw some things that pleased him. "I like to look at the good things. (Clarence) Miles is a good player and (Al) Tyson should be good." Miles provided much of the Pirate spark in the second half as the freshman forward shot well and worked hard on the boards. He tied Mack with 18 points.

Centers Greg Cornelius and Al Tyson both broke into double figures with 12 and 10 points, respectively, while guard George Maynor also had 10 points.

Burly forward Wilbur Montgomery led both teams in rebounding with 13. Tyson had 10 for the Pirates.

Mack was the lone Pirate selected to the All-Tournament team. Others named a five-man committee were Carl Nicks, Indiana State guard; Dirk Ewing, Stetson guard; Greg Guye, Stetson forward; Franklin Edwards, Cleveland State guard; with Larry Bird of Indiana State selected as the Most Valuable Player. Bird scored 69 points in two games, tops in the tournament. He was also the leading rebounder with 24.

ECU fell to 2-4 on the season with last night's loss, four straight losses after a pair of opening wins at home. The Bucs return home Tuesday night to host Lynchburg in a 7:30 ballgame.

Vikings Tremble At Lions' Roar, 45-14

By LARRY PALADINO
AP Sports Writer

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Gary Danielson threw a Detroit record five touchdown passes Saturday, three to Leonard Thompson, as the Lions shocked the Minnesota Vikings 45-14 in the National Football League.

The Lions' point total was their largest since 1967 and it was the most points given up by the Vikings this season. The loss blunted Minnesota's bid to capture its 10th division title in 11 years.

The Vikings entered the game tied with Green Bay for first place in the National Conference's Central Division. The Vikings fell to 8-6-1, while Detroit raised its record to 6-9.

Danielson completed 26 of 33 passes for 352 yards. The five touchdown passes broke the team record of four held by six others, the last being Earl Morall in 1963.

Danielson, who threw five interceptions in a loss a week ago to St. Louis, threw two scoring passes each in the first and second quarters to give Detroit a 28-7 halftime lead.

The first came on a screen pass to Horace King at the line of scrimmage. The fullback broke three tackles, cut in and ran 34 yards for the touchdown at 8:42.

King also caught a 5-yard TD pass from Danielson in the fourth quarter when the Lions put the victory away. The score was followed moments later when rookie cornerback Luther Bradley intercepted a Fran Tarkenton pass and returned it 76 yards for a touchdown.

Wide receiver Thompson's touchdown catches were 5 yards in the first quarter, and 17 and 45 in the second period.

The victory was the Lions' third in the past 22 games against Minnesota.

The Vikings' touchdowns came on a 1-yard plunge in the second quarter by Robert Miller and a 35-yard pass from Tarkenton to rookie wide receiver Kevin Miller in the third period. It was the first touchdown of Kevin Miller's NFL career.

The Vikings' worst previous setback this season was 34-17 to Los Angeles.

Detroit drove 80 yards in 11 plays for its first touchdown. A key play was a 15-yard run by Danielson, followed by an 8yard run by linebacker Tony Daykin on a fake punt on fourth down. The snap, instead of going to punter Tom Skladany, went to apparent blocking back Daykin and he rumbled to the 34.

Danielson was forced to call a time out on the second touchdown drive when the clock ran down to one second. On the next play, Danielson hit Thompson in the right front corner of the end zone.

It looked like the Vikings would get back into the nationally televised game, as Minnesota marched 80 yards in 14 plays, climaxed by Robert Miller's score.

But Detroit struck quickly with Danielson's next two TD passes to Thompson, the second on the first play after linebacker Charlie Weaver intercepted a Tarkenton pass.

Whitney Paces State Victory

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Forward Hawkeye Whitney scored 27 points to lead eighth-ranked North Carolina State to a 108-83 victory over Campbell College in Reynolds Coliseum Saturday night.

Whitney paced a balanced Wolfpack attack which broke away from Campbell midway through the second half when it reeled off 12 points to give the Pack a 74-61 lead. After that, N.C. State coasted to a victory that improved its record to 6-1.

Wolfpack point guard Clyde Austin scored 22, forward Tiny Pinder collected 18 and Donnie Perkins added 17 points.

The Fighting Camels, which dropped to 2-5 for the season, were led by guard Darrell Mauldin's 24 points. Forward Ron Curtis scored 15 in the second half and finished with 16 points.

Whitney scored 22 of his points in the first half while the Wolfpack fought its way to a 52-43 advantage. But in the second half it was the excellent shooting of Pinder, Austin and Perkins which enabled N.C. State to fashion its lopsided victory.

Temple Owls Topple Deacs

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Temple's Neal Robinson had 22 points to lead four teammates in double figures Saturday night, as the Owls took their fourth straight victory, 86-79, over the Wake Forest Deacons in a non-conference college basketball game.

Robinson and teammate Walt Montfort combined for 18 points in the second half as the Owls staved off two Wake Forest rallies, one about midway in the half that took the Deacons to within two points, and another in the last minute of the game when the Deacons closed to within four points.

Wake Forest, 2-3, was led by freshman center Jim Johnstone, who tallied 23 points and pulled down eight rebounds.

Temple fell behind early in the first half and Wake Forest led by six points after four minutes of play. But the Owls rallied behind the outside shooting of forward Bruce Harrold, who scored 14 points for the game and had 10 in the first half, to take a 47-43 halftime lead.

Montfort finished with 16 points, and Wake Forest's Alvis Rogers had 12.

Temple shot 62 percent from the floor, while Wake Forest shot only 45.5 percent.

North Carolina Has It Easy With Dolphins

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Mike O'Koren scored 18 points and reserve forward Al Wood added 14 to pace 14th-ranked North Carolina to an 85-56 victory over Jacksonville.

Despite North Carolina's high total, O'Koren and Wood were the only Tar Heels in double figures as North Carolina's reserves turned in an a strong scoring performance.

Paul DeVito led Jacksonville with 14 while center James Ray had 11. Ray, who had seven first-half points, fouled out with 8:53 left to take much of the Dolphins' inside scoring punch away.

North Carolia outscored Jacksonville 18-8 in the last five minutes of the first half to put the game out of reach. Until that point, the Tar Heels were sluggish offensively, while the Dolphins stayed close with a strong rebounding performance.

The contest was the last tuneup for the Tar Heels before next Saturday's matchup with 4th-ranked Michigan State and gave Tar Heel Coach Dean Smith a chance to see all but one of his players in action. Twelve North Carolina players scored.

Bucs Qualify For NCAA Meet

COLUMBIA, S.C. — East Carolina University swimmers, participating in the South Carolina Invitational, qualified one individual and two freestyle relay teams for the NCAA nationals with times they turned in during the two-day meet which wound up Saturday night.

John Tudor qualified for the nationals in the 200-yard freestyle, swimming home in a varsity record of 1:39.24. Ted Nieman, in the same event, missed national qualifying standards by four-tenths of a second, finishing in 1:39.67.

The 800-yard relay team of Nieman, Tudor, Bill Fehling and Jack Clower qualified for nationals with a time of 6:46.16, and the same group, in the 400-yard relay, qualified in 3:04.89.

Tudor also broke varsity records in three events, the 100 freestyle in 43.81, just three-tenths of a second off the NCAA standards; the 100 backstroke in 54.36, and the 100 butterfly in 51.5.

The latter was also eclipsed by Clower, who set a new varsity mark of 51.27. Clower also set new marks for the school in the 200 butterfly, 1:55.56, and the 200 individual medley, 1:55.54.

Doug Nieman, brother of Ted, set two new freshman marks, swimming the 200 breaststroke in 2:15.07 and the 400 IM in 4:15.65.

"Two thirds of the times we had were best times," Coach Ray Scharf said.

ECU Women Roll Past Greensboro, 100-55

GREENSBORO — East Carolina University's women's basketball team topped the century mark for the second straight time yesterday in romping to a 100-55 victory over UNC-Greensboro.

The Pirates, who placed five women in double figures, had little trouble with the Spartans, gaining an early lead and steadily building on it.

"I'm really pleased with the way the girls played," Coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "It was an important game for us. It was our last conference game before January, and we wanted to win it very badly so we would be 3-1 in the league."

Led by Rosie Thompson and Marcia Girven, the Pirates moved away in the early minutes and finally built up a 20 point lead by halftime, making it 43-23.

In the second half, they continued to hold sway, moving out to a 50-point lead near the midpoint of the half, and they held that the rest of the way. "We were up by at least 50 most of the final part of the half," Andruzzi said. "And that was even though we were going to the bench readily. We were still able to sustain the lead until the closing minute when they finally cut it under 50."

Andruzzi said one of the Pirate aims in the game was to work on its man-to-man defense. "We went with it the entire game, and I think we did a real good job with it. We put a lot of pressure on them. We haven't been able to do it in our last four games, but we were able to today."

Andruzzi called the win a true team effort. "We were converting on the fast break well. I know that we have a good offensive team, after hitting 100 for two games in a row. Now we just need to get our defense as strong and we'll be in good shape. Our defense was sharp today."

East Carolina held a 39-31 rebounding edge in the game, as Thompson had 14 and Girven had 12. The Lady Pirates hit on 56.3 per cent of their shots, while Greensboro made 41.7 per cent.

Thompson hit 27 points, while Girven had 22, her best night. Gale Kerbaugh added 16, Lynn Emerson, 14, and Lydia Rountree, 10.

The Pirates return home on Monday to play host to the University of South Carolina at 7 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

Steelers Ride Snowy Colts To 35-13 Win

By GARY MIHOCES

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Terry Bradshaw, passing with precision on a frigid, snow-covered field, threw for three touchdowns to lead the Pittsburgh Steelers to a 35-13 victory over the Baltimore Colts Saturday in a National Football League game.

Amid temperatures in the mid 20s, both sides slipped and shivered as the Steelers raised their record to 13-2, insuring them the homefield if they make it to the American Conference title game.

The Colts fell to 5-10 as their white uniforms blended with the playing field, kept covered by a half-inch of snow in a light, but incessant downfall.

Bradshaw, who hit 11 of 19 passes for 243 yards, threw a 31-yard touchdown pass to John Stallworth, a 12-yarder to Randy Grossman and a 29-yarder to Jim Smith.

The Steelers, who clinched the AFC-Central title the week before in Houston, led 21-7 at halftime with the help of two short touchdown runs by Franco Harris.

Baltimore cut the margin to 21-13 early in the third quarter when linebacker Derrel Luce returned a Bradshaw fumble 44 yards for a touchdown.

But an ensuing 57-yard kickoff return by Larry Anderson set up the first of Bradshaw's two second-half touchdown passes.

In the first quarter, Pittsburgh drove 55 yards for a touchdown that came on Bradshaw's 31-pass to Stallworth, sidelined the second half due to a stomach virus.

Late in the first quarter, Bradshaw hit Lynn Swann on a 62-yard pass play, which set up a 3-yard touchdown by Harris on the opening play of the second quarter.

Later in the second quarter, Colts quarterback Bill Troup lost a fumble that was recovered by Pittsburgh at the Baltimore 2-yard line, from where Harris scored his second touchdown.

Luce's fumble-return touchdown in the third quarter came after Bradshaw muffed a handoff to Harris. The extra-point kick by Toni Linhart fell wide to the left.

Anderson's kickoff return set up Bradshaw's 12-yard touchdown pass to tight end Grossman, his first touchdown reception this season. Bradshaw's touchdown pass to Smith early in the final quarter was Smith's first touchdown in two pro seasons.

Television Plans Set; Plane Trip Scheduled

Final plans for the telecasting of the 1978 Independence Bowl game between East Carolina University and Southland Conference champion Louisiana Tech have been announced by WITN-TV, Channel 7, Washington.

The telecast will be live from Shreveport, La., starting at 2:30 p.m. Saturday.

The Pirates gained the bid to the game following an 8-3 season, which saw the Bucs win seven of their last eight games, including the final four in a row.

Louisiana Tech completed a 6-4 season and won the Southland Conference for the second straight year in a row. Last year, they defeated the University of Louisville in the Independence Bowl, 24-14, following an 8-1-2 season.

W.R. Roberson Jr., chairman and chief executive officer of North Carolina Television, Inc., said that producing a live television broadcast is a first for WITN-TV, as was its highlight coverage of all 11 ECU games during the past year.

Two other stations will be on the network in North Carolina, WRAL-TV, Channel 5, in Raleigh, and WGHP-TV in High Point, Channel 8.

Dick Jones, WITN-TV sports director, and his assistant Ken Strayhorn will be the announcers for the game.

The East Carolina University Alumni Association is sponsoring a trip to the bowl game, leaving Raleigh-Durham Airport Friday and returning on Sunday.

The package includes round-trip air transportation from Raleigh-Durham to Shreveport; two night accomodations at the Hilton Inn; a Friday evening buffet, a Saturday morning brunch, baggage handling, transportation between airport and hotel, transportation between the game and hotel and return.

Price of the trip is $289.00 per person, based on double occupancy of rooms.

January, Despite Problems, Holds Lead

By CHARLES GREEN
AP Sports Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Don January of Dallas bogeyed four holes Saturday in the third round of the $210,000 Mexico Cup Golf Tournament to barely hang on to a 3-stroke lead over scrambling David Graham of Australia.

January shot a 1-under-par 71 on the 7,238-yard Club de Golf Mexico course while Graham turned in a 3-under 69. January went 13-under par for 54 holes at 203. Graham had a 206, 10under par.

January tied the course record with a 64 Friday to take a 5-stroke lead over Graham, whose 66 had led the opening round. But the lanky Texan had trouble on the back nine on a cool, windy day although he had turned in a 2-under-par 34 on the first nine. Bob Byman of Boulder, Colo., shot a blazing 66 for a 54-hole score of 208 that tied him with Bobby Watkins of Richmond, Va., 8 strokes back of the leader.

Graham finished with a spectacular 60-foot putt for a birdie on 18, one of 30 putts he used.

"I didn't play the par 5s all that well, but I drove the ball well and I had a couple of lucky breaks," Graham said.

"I made a scrambling par on 14 that might have been a big factor. I I was six or eight inches off the green and made the putt for par when I was staring at the bogey," he said.

January moved 16-under par after five birdies and only one bogey through 112 holes. But he bogeyed the 13th, 15th, and 17th while Graham was picking up his birdies on the 11th, 13th, and 18th.

"That was the longest putt I've hit in a long time," Graham said of his 60-footer. It looked like I just made a Garo Yepremian field goal."

The Australian, who now lives in Del Ray Beach, Fla., sunk a 10-foot putt on the second hole for a birdie, a six-footer on No. 7, a 10-footer on No. 11th and a putt from 12 feet on No. 13. He missed putts of six feet on both eight and 12 for his only bogeys.

His 18th hole was truly spectacular. His drive on the 326-yard, par-4 hole stopped behind a tree in the left rough. He hit a curling one-iron to the top edge of the green, then rolled the twisting putt slightly downhill into the cup.

Tauneyiki Nakaji of Japan shot a 69 for 209. Juan "Chi Chi" Rodriguez of Puerto Rico and Leonard Thompson of Bay Hill, Fla., were tied at 210, 6under par.

Panthers Glide Past Greene

SNOW HILL — North Pitt rolled to a 60-37 victory over Greene Central last night in an Eastern Carolina Conference game.

Greene Central won the junior varsity game, 53-40, and the girls' game, 28-27.

In the girls' contest, both teams pushed through six points in the first period and each added four in the second for a 10-10 tie at intermission.

Greene Central, however, pushed ahead in the third period, taking an 18-14 lead at the end of the frame. North Pitt rallied, however, and pulled to within one at 28-27 with Kim Sharpe hit a shot with two seconds left. She missed however, on a free throw that could have tied the game.

Carolyn Best had 12 points to pace the Pant-HERS, and was the game's lone player in double figures.

The win was the first in five games for Greene Central, while North Pitt is also now 1-4.

In the boys' game, the two stayed close for a period, which ended with North Pitt up, 14-12. The Panthers pulled away in the second quarter, 17-6, and held a 31-18 halftime lead.

The North Pitt five continued to pull away in the third period, building their lead to 40-23. They outhit Greene Central, 20-14, in the final period to win going away.

Reginald Knight led North Pitt with 16 points, while Mickey Hines added 14. No one hit double figures for the Rams.

North Pitt is now 3-2, while the Rams are 0-5.

Conley came back on the court and closed the gap, outhitting the Redskins, 18-14, but still was down by three, 44-41. Roanoke outhit the Vikes in the final quarter, however, 23-19, to hold on for the win.

Chris Morning led Roanoke with 21, while Edward Ward added 18 and Ronnie Highsmith had 12. Mitchell Moore and Larry White each had 12 to pace Conley, while Sammy Tucker and Shawn Little each had 11 and Daryl Thompson had 10.

South Carolina Gets 27-12 Shrine Victory

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Carnie Norris of Spartanburg, S.C., scored two touchdowns and engineered drives that led South Carolina to defeat North Carolina 27-12 in the 42nd annual high school all-star Shrine Bowl football game Saturday.

The victory gave South Carolina a 20-18-4 edge in the series and its third win in the last four bowls.

The scoring didn't begin until the second quarter when South Carolina got on the board with a three-yard run by Norris and an extra-point kick by Jerry Rye of Taylors, S.C.

The South turned a fumble by North Carolina quarterback Rod Elkins into seven points one play later when Norris again took the ball over and Rye added the extra point.

Two 15-yard penalties against South Carolina aided the North's drive which put them on the scoreboard for the first time. Kelvin Bryant of Tarboro scored on a 37-yard run but the extra point failed.

North Carolina was stopped just short of scoring once more before the half when a 40-yard drive ended at the four-yard line with the score 14-6 for South Carolina.

South Carolina opened up the scoring in the second half with a Rye field goal. North Carolina came right back with a 45-yard kickoff return by Bryant. Eight plays later, Elkins fired a 22-yard pass to Lloyd Black of Sanford. But the ball slipped through Black's hands and was retrieved by Mike Lewis of Rocky Mount who scored to put the tally at 17-12.

South Carolina scored twice in the final quarter — once on a 32-yard field goal by Rye and finally on a pass interception.

After the South put the final field goal on the board, North Carolina mounted a drive that could have tied the game 20-20. But an Elkins pass was intercepted at the South Carolina 15 by Michael Verner of Moncks Corner, S.C.

The final touchdown came on a 10-yard pass from Tim Childers of Gaffney, S.C. to Norris Brown of Laurens, S.C.

Norris was named the outstanding running back of the game. He added 102 rushing yards to his high school career total of 5,000. North Carolina's Douglas Smith of Bayboro was named the outstanding lineman of the game.

South Carolina head coach James Edward Foster of Spartanburg-Boiling Springs High School, said the key to his team's victory was that the members "played tremendously as a team.

"On Wednesday we really started to come together. We were shaky up to that point. I think the hospital meant more to them than anything I've ever seen."

The proceeds from the game, which attracted about 18,000 spectators, went to the Shriners' Hospital for Crippled Children in Greenville, S.C. The Shriners have raised a total of $1,400,000 for the hospital, including the proceeds from Saturday's game.

Pinch-running specialists Allen Lewis and Herb Washington got into 12 World Series games for the Oakland A's without ever putting on a fielder's glove.

Elon Gains NAIA Finals

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Mitch Rippey scored two field goals and an extra point and Bobby Hedrick scored the only touchdown of the game as the Fighting Christians of Elon College defeated Grand Valley St. of Michigan 13-7 in the semifinals of the NAIA Division I football championship Saturday.

The win boosts Elon, sixth nationally in the division, into the finals in McAllen, Texas, Dec. 16 against Angelo State, who defeated Colorado in the semifinals Saturday.

Much of Saturday's game was played in driving rin and neither team got on the scoreboard until the last five seconds of the first half when Rippey kicked a 27-yard field goal.

The rest of the scoring was done in the fourth quarter.

Elon's Bobby Hedrick scored on a two-yard run. Rippey kicked the extra point to put the Fighting Christian ahead 10-0. Seven minutes later, Rippey again scored on a 30-yard field goal.

The Lakers, No. 7 nationally in the division, mounted a rally during the last five minutes. With 2:44 left, quarterback Dave Quinley hit on 10-yard pass to Bob Rubick. Roger McCoy kicked the extra point to put the score 10-7.

Dr. Fager ran a mile in 1:321-5 at Arlington Park in 1968 to set a world record for that distance.

Bird Lifts Indiana State Over Bucs

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

Bird totally dominated every phase of play Friday night, while playing less than three-quarters of the game, as the Sycamores destroyed the Pirates, 102-79, in the first game of the Hatter Classic.

Bird, a 6-9 forward, generally considered the best player in college basketball this season, scored 32 points for ISU, 26 in the first half, pulled down nine rebounds, dished out three assists and had four steals before Sycamore coach Bill Hodges mercifully removed him from the lineup with over 11 minutes left in the game. He hit 15 of 21 shots.

Indiana State all but ended the game in the first half as the Sycamores took the lead early and built it to 26 points over the hapless Pirates at halftime, 57-31.

Leading the way was Bird, of course, who played in a different league than the other nine players on the court, despite the presence of all-American guard Oliver Mack.

To put it simply, Bird was awesome. He scored from all over the court, 25-foot jumpers to slam dunks. His defense was much better than average. Even when he didn't block a shot, his mere presence on the court seemed to affect the shooting of the star-struck Pirates.

Hodges said Bird, a senior, is his team's leader in every sense of the word. "Larry is very intelligent about the game of basketball. He runs things on the court voacliy. And I don't even have to had bed check, he makes sure everyone is in bed."

Hodges said the Sycamores' execution on offense was excellent, while the team's defense was good, too. "We have execllent perimeter shooting, and we have been shooting poorly. We played pretty darn good defensively and really hit the basket."

Hodges said the Pirates are a better team than their performance against his team would indicate. "East Carolina is a better ball club than that. I think we just might have broken their concentration a little bit. Larry might have broken it when he hit those jumpers." Bird was deadly from the corner early in the game.

The Sycamores came out in a full-court man-to-man press that began to wear down the Bucs after ISU started to build a lead.

"I think we got the momentum our way with our press and kept it our way," Hodges concluded.

Pirate coach Larry Gillman was in a somber mood after the game. "I don't think that we played very well," he understated quietly. "They (ISU) played with a lot more intensity and did more of the things that they wanted to. We didn't do anything we wanted to."

Gillman said his squad did display some intensity early in the game as the teams battled on even terms for the first eight minutes. "We had some intensity up to the point when (Clarence) Miles got his third foul and us behind, 17-15."

Indiana State, with 12 points from Bird, outscored the Pirates, 15-6, over the next few minutes to break the game open. They steadily built their lead and the Pirates' play got worse.

Mack, who finished with 15 points, got into foul trouble early in the game and picked up his fourth before intermission. "I think he's got mononucleosis," Gillman said. "We're going to check it out at the doctor. It's been affecting him for at least two games."

Gillman pointed out that Mack started each half well, getting half of his points in the first two minutes of each half, but then seemed to "run out of gas." He fouled out with 7:35 left in the game.

He wasn't the only ECU player to experience foul trouble in the game. Miles, George Maynor and Frank Hobson all fouled out before it was over.

"We kind of fell into their hands because we didn't execute the things we wanted to do," Gillman said. "Bird is probably the best player in the country in moving without the ball. We did a pretty good job of denying him the ball the first half, but they usually passed it around and got it to him."

The Pirates, 2-3, after the game played hosting Stetson in the tournament's consolation game last night. The Vikings defeated Stetson, 64-61, in the other first-round game Friday.

Shelton Comes Off Bench To Lead Sonics Past Atlanta Hawks

By ALEX SACHARE

"We've got a strong bench to depend on," says Seattle Coach Lenny Wilkens. And the strongest member of that bench, Lonnie Shelton, came through as a starter for the Sonics Friday night.

Shelton, elevated to the starting lineup because of the injury to center Tom LaGarde, sank two free throws with 1:15 to play and then blocked a closein shot by Atlanta's John Drew as the Sonics posted a 107-106 National Basketball Association victory over the Hawks.

LaGarde underwent surgery earlier this week to repair torn ligaments in his right knee. Wilkens moved Jack Sikma from forward to center to replace LaGarde and gave the starting power forward job to Shelton, who came to Seattle from New York this summer as part of the compensation package for Marvin Webster.

In other NBA games Friday, the Houston Rockets edged the New Orleans Jazz 110-106, the New Jersey Nets beat the Washington Bullets 108-100, the Chicago Bulls trimmed the Portland Trail Blazers 100-99, the San Antonio Spurs defeated the Golden State Warriors 123-105, the Phoenix Suns beat the Boston Celtics 123-104, the Indiana Pacers downed the Detroit Pistons 114-107 and the Los Angeles Lakers defeated Milwaukee Bucks 101-85.

Rockets 110, Jazz 106

Moses Malone scored 23 points and grabbed 22 rebounds for Houston. Malone, who leads the NBA in rebounding this season, won his personal duel with last year's rebounding champion, Truck Robinson, as the Jazz' forward had just 12 rebounds although he scored 26 points.

Nets 108, Bullets 100

John Williamson scored 17 of his season-high 40 points in the second quarter as the Nets built a 60-44 halftime edge which Washington could never erase.

Bulls 100, Blazers 99

Artis Gilmore scored 27 points as Chicago won its fourth in a row. But it was rookie Reggie Theus who sealed the victory with 11 points in the fourth quarter, including two free throws with seven seconds left.

Suns 124, Celtics 104

Phoenix outscored Boston 12-1 to climb into a 60-60 halftime tie and then pulled away in the second half. Former Celtic Paul Westphal scored 30 points as the Suns snapped Boston's four-game winning streak.

Pacers 114, Pistons 107

Rookie Rick Robey had 23 points and 14 rebounds for Indiana, which outscored Detroit 42-19 from the foul line. Detroit's M.L. Carr led all scorers with 30 points.

Spurs 123, Warriors 105

George Gervin scored 36 points and Larry Kenon added 29 as the Spurs, hitting nearly 60 percent of its shots, beat Golden State to even its record at 12-12.

Lakers 101, Bucks 85

Los Angeles led 48-41 at halftime and broke the game open by outscoring Milwaukee 22-4 in the first seven minutes of the third quarter. Kareem AbdulJabbar led the Lakers with 23 points and Norm Nixon added 21.

Carew Stalls Giant Offer

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Major League baseball finally has reached the stage where the inmates are threatening to take over the asylum.

The 26 clubs met here in their annual winter meeting and in a week managed just 12 deals involving 31 players.

In reality there were just three major transactions, one a trade that is hanging in the balance, and the other the circus atmosphere signing of free agent Pete Rose by the Philadelphia Phillies.

The deal still pending was the trade by the Minnesota Twins of seven-time American League batting champion Rod Carew to the San Francisco Giants for three players.

Carew held up what would have been the biggest interleague swap of all Friday, telling the Giants their $3.5 million package was fine, but he just wasn't sure he wanted to play and live in the Bay Area.

"I would have liked to have been able to do something," Carew said, "but it was such a short time and I didn't want to do something that I would regret." Carew and Giants owner Bob Lurie had only until midnight Friday to complete the deal before the inter-league trading deadline.

Carew said the money was not the issue. "You have to think about the area, the organization and type of team," Carew said. "There just wan't enough time."

Cleveland Indians President Gabe Paul — who made the other big trade, an exchange with the Texas Rangers of third basemen, Buddy Bell for Toby Harrah — expressed frustration in making a deal in the free agent era.

"The general manager of a reasonably successful team has to be smarter than in the past when almost anyone could make a trade," Paul said. "Now, he must worry about the 10-and-5 clause, deferred payments, no trade clauses, length and cost of contracts.

"In the past, the players had no voice in things and it was easy."

Ten-and-5 means a player who has 10 years in the majors, the last five with the same team, can veto a trade.

Still another baseball executive said it was strange that you had to ask about a player's salary and length of contract before considering his value as a player.

Carew holds the whip hand in any deal the Twins make for him, although he could wind up biting off his nose to spite his face.

The 33-year-old Carew can play out his option next year and take a chance in the free agent market. He'd have to work for about $190,000, what the Twins paid him last year. So, if you value the Giants' package at $700,000 a year, that's more than a half million dollar loss to Carew.

Two Leaders Can't Look Back

By The Associated Press

The Denver Broncos and New England Patriots are just one victory away from divisional championships — and neither can afford the luxury of looking ahead to that final weekend in the National Football League season.

The Broncos, gunning for their second straight Amsrican Conference West crown, can clinch it Sunday by defeating the visiting Kansas City Chiefs. The Patriots, who haven't won a division title in 15 years, can lock up the AFC East by beating the visiting Buffalo Bills.

If the Broncos, six-point favorites, and the Patriots, favored by 11½, let Sunday's games get away from them, they may find themselves in the uncomfortable position of fighting for their lives when the 16th and final regular-season weekend rolls around.

The Broncos, 9-5, close the regular season next Saturday against the Pittsburgh Steelers, already the AFC Central champion and the winningest team in the league this year. The Patriots, 10-4, have the honor of playing the season's final Monday night game, Dec. 18 in Miami against the Dolphins, their only contender for the AFC East title.

This Sunday's other games are Washington at Atlanta, Dallas at Philadelphia, the New York Jets at Cleveland, St. Louis at the New York Giants, Green Bay at Chicago, Houston at New Orleans, Oakland at Miami, Tampa Bay at San Francisco and Seattle at San Diego. On Monday night it's Cincinnati at Los Angeles.

Today, Baltimore was at Pittsburgh and Minnesota visited Detroit.

The Broncos beat Kansas City and the Patriots beat Buffalo in their first meetings of the season, but in both cases the victories were anything but easy. The Chiefs dragged Denver into overtime before succumbing 23-17 while the Bills gave New England all it could handle before losing 14-10 on the second of Horace Ivory's two touchdown runs.

Denver leads the AFC West by one game, with Oakland and Seattle tied for second at 8-6. If the Broncos fall back and wind up the season tied with the Raiders or Seahawks — or both — they'll still win the division, having beaten both Oakland and Seattle twice.

New England, too, could finish the season deadlocked with Miami and still win the division by virtue of its better record against AFC East opponents (62 to the Dolphins' 5-3).

In the National Conference, the Redskins and Falcons are each 8-6 and vying for a wild card. The loser of Sunday's game in Atlanta will be out of contention for it. Philadelphia, too, is at 8-6 and in the thick of the scramble.

Two Swimmers Are Barred

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Two North Carolina swimmers were among five reported barred last week from international travel for two years by the Amateur Athletic Union.

The sanctions against Beth Harrell of North Carolina State and Gina Layton of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill came after alleged curfew violations and possible drug violations during a training session in Colorado in Augist. The violations are against the union's disciplinary code.

The ban does not affect the swimmers' eligibility for Olympic or Pan-Am competition, their coaches said.

Neither Miss Harrell or Miss Layton could be reached for comment, but their respective coaches confirmed the action.

"Both of these girls are outstanding athletes," said Don Easterling, head swimming coach at N.C. State. "They didn't do anything all that bad. They were made examples of."

Easterling said it was his understanding that Miss Harrell violated a curfew but that he had not received a full report from the AAU.

Frank Comfort, head swimming coach at UNC, said Miss Layton "got involved in something she shouldn't have been involved in."

However, Comfort expressed confidence in Miss Layton and said she has been a "model citizen" since enrolling in the university this fall.

It was reported today that three other swimmers were also barred from international meets for two years, but the names could not be immediately confirmed. The New York Times reported that Marc Foreman of Tennessee, Steve Tallman of Washington and Jan Ujevich of Pittsburgh were the others barred.

In addition, Tracy Caulkins, winner of five gold medals in the 1978 world championships, was among 13 teenage girls who were barred from international meets for three months because of a curfew violation. The violation reportedly took place at a meet in Austin, Texas.

The AAU confirmed the action against Miss Caulkins but declined to confirm the names of the five who were more severely punished.

Duran In Easy Win

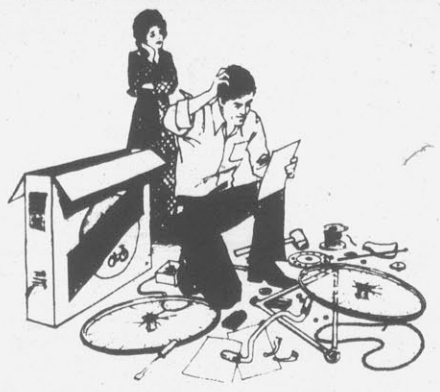

NEW YORK (AP) — "I was taking it easy," said Roberto Duran. That remark would have left the Madison Square Garden crowd of 16,826 in open-mouthed amazement.

That's how many turned out Friday night to watch the lightweight champion from Panama fight for the first time since April 27 in a 10-round overweight match against welterweight Monroe Brooks.

What they saw was a devastating performance.

Kinston Takes Second From Rampants

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

KINSTON — If the home court advantage is worth ten points, then maybe Rose High School can feel it showed some improvement Friday night when it bowed to Kinston's Vikings, 74-55.

Earlier in the week, on the Rose court, the Rampants fell before Kinston by a 70-56 margin. The loss in Kinston was only five-points worse.

Nevertheless, it was recorded as the third straight defeat after a initial victory for the Rampants.

Perhaps the biggest key to the game was the hot shooting of the Vikings throughout the game, coupled with a solid rebounding edge in the second half.

Kinston hit on 33 of 63 shots from the floor, a solid 52.4 per cent. Rose, meanwhile, made good on just 25 of 64, a chilly 39.1.

The Rampants, who held a 25-18 rebounding margin at the half, trailed by only eight points, 29-21. But in the second half, they seldom got a second shot, while the Vikes enjoyed that luxury. Kinston outrebounded the Rampants, 23-15, in the second half.

"I think we played pretty good at times in the first half," Rose Coach Jim Brewington said. "Turnovers hurt us in the first half, and rebounding in the second.

"Kinston, of course, has a real good team. I just hope when we leave these games and get into our own conference, we'll be a better team for it. I don't think we'll see the same type of ball."

Brewington commented that the Rampants were unable to stop Sherman Johnson in the second half. Held to just four points in the first half, he exploded for 18 in the second to pace the Viking win.

"We tried something in the first half that held them pretty well in check, but they adjusted at halftime and it didn't work any more," Brewington said.

The coach said that Tyrone Tucker played his best game, and that Donald House and Wallace Brown also played outstandingly. "We're not getting the scoring we expected from (Ronnie) Chapman and (Derwin) Clemons, either." Dennis Ross, who led the scoring in the first game against Kinston, got only one free throw in the game. "It just looked like they were determined not to let him score tonight," Brewington said. "Everytime he got the ball, he was under a pressure defense."

Rose, as in the first game, got the opening basket, but that was the only time they led. This time however, Kinston was unable to run off the next ten points, getting only eight in a row before Rose scored again. Drue Head tied it up for the Vikes after Chapman's initial basket, and Jeff Sargeant put the Vikings into the lead for good at 4-2.

Kinston, after building an 8-2 lead, held the six-point margin the rest of the quarter, leading 14-8 at the horn.

Two quick baskets off a drive by Chapman and a steal by Clemons cut the lead to 14-12 early in the second quarter, but the Vikes pulled away again, as Rose was hampered by six turnovers in the period. After taking a 19-15 lead, Kinston got six straight points to up its margin to 10, and then to as much as 12 at 29-17. Rose came back, however, to score the final two baskets and cut the lead to 29-21 at intermission.

But as the second half opened, the Rampants went scoreless the first three minutes, while Kinston pushed through 12 in a row, including six by Delbert Bryant. That ran the lead out to 41-21, and after one Rose basket, jumpers by Johnson upped it to 22, 45-23, the largest spread.

Rose cut it back to 11 before the period ended, at 48-37, but then fell back to trail 52-37 as the quarter ended. Rose never came closer than 15 in the final quarter.

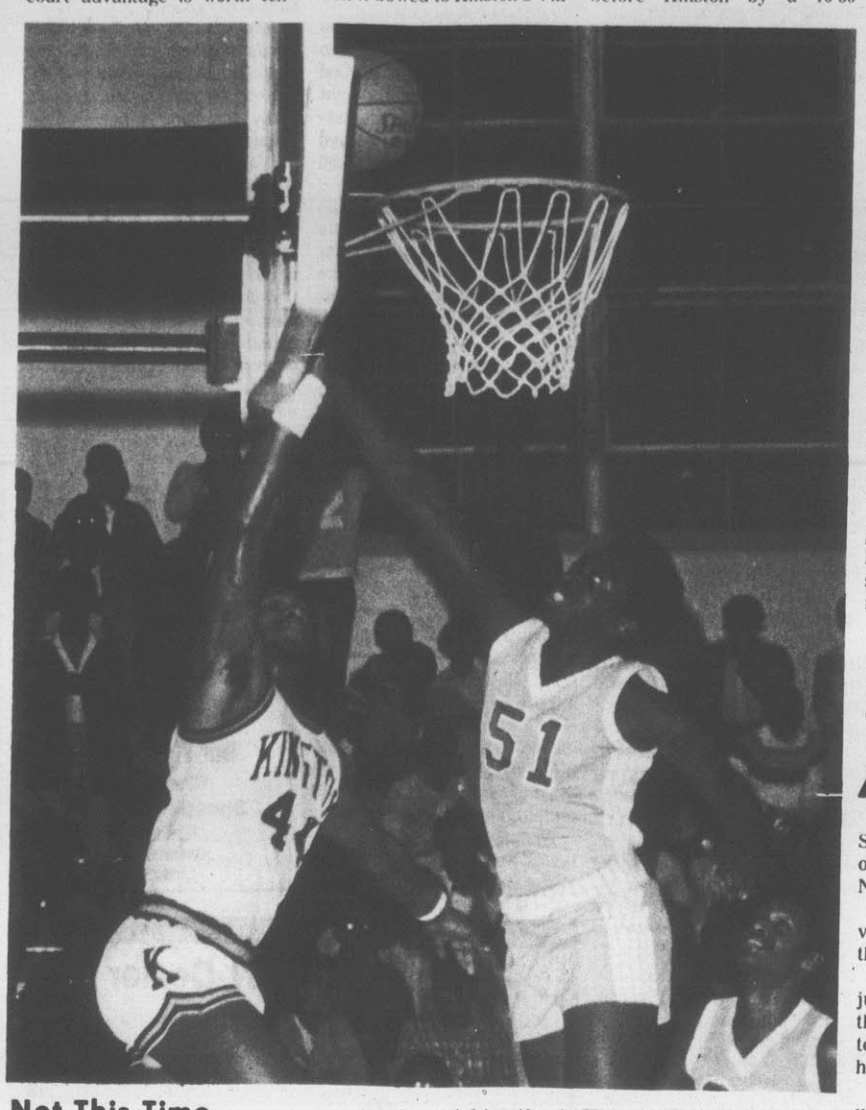

In addition to Johnson's 22 points, Bryant had 14 and Head had 12 for Kinston. House led Rose with 16, while Brown added 14.

Roanoke Drills Ahoskie, 57-44

AHOSKIE — Roanoke High School gained a 57-44 victory over Ahoskie last night in the Northeastern Conference.

Roanoke also won the junior varsity contest, 43-34, and took the girls' game, 49-26.

In the girls' contest, Roanoke jumped away to a 15-7 lead in the first period. Ahoskie rallied to cut the lead to 21-17 at the half, however.

Roanoke put the game away with a 21-4 margin in the third period, making it 42-24. They closed out with a 7-5 margin in the final period.

The Roanoke boys moved out early, taking a 10-4 lead after one period. They increased that with a 15-11 margin in the second quarter, taking a 25-15 lead into intermission.

The third period saw the Redskins continue to pull away, 17-8, taking a 42-23 lead. Ahoskie made a comeback in the final period, 21-15, but it was too late.

Chris Morning, Edward Ward and Jasper Martin each had 10 points to lead Roanoke, while Ransome had 15 for Ahoskie.

Washington Powers Past Tigers, 51-28

WILLIAMSTON — Washington High School, the top-ranked 3-A team in the state, broke open a slow-down game by the Williamston Tigers Friday night to take a 51-28 victory.

Washington pushed out to a slim 11-8 lead after the first period of the game, but could make little headway in the second quarter. By halftime, the score had climbed to only 18-13.

But in the third period, the Pam Pack finally began to move, outscoring the Tigers, 19-4, to roll up a 37-17 margin. The Pam Pack outhit Williamston, 14-11, in the last quarter.

Dominique Wilkins led Washington with 21 points, while Shawn Williams added 16. Jimmy Barnes led Williamston with 10.

In the girls' game, Williamston jumped off to an 11-7 lead in the first period. Washington stuck with them in the second, which ended with Williamston still ahead, 21-17.

The Tigerettes added a pair of points to the lead in the third, 35-29, and outhit Washington in the last quarter, 12-9.

JoAnna Lilley and Jan Rogerson each hit 16 points to lead Williamston, while Lynn Hodges and Brenda Minns had 10 each for Washington.

Williamston travels to Roanoke Rapids on Tuesday.

Farmville Central Goes Past Chargers To Remain Unbeaten

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central's tenth-ranked Jaguars remained unbeaten Friday night as they downed Ayden-Grifton, 60-48. It was the fourth straight win of the year for the Jaguars.

Earlier, Ayden-Grifton swept two games, taking the junior varsity, 47-46, and the girls' game, 40-34.

Farmville's boys edged out into a five-point lead by the end of the first period, 18-13. They padded that with a 14-11 margin in the second frame, taking a comfortable 32-24 lead into the dressing room.

In the third frame, however, Ayden- Grifton managed a come-back, outhitting the Jaguars, 14-10. That cut the lead to 42-38. But the Jaguars came back in the final period, outhitting the Chargers, 18-10, to stay on the unbeaten list.

Calvin Horne and Donald Reid each had 14 points, while Donald Freeman added 12 and Jeff Tyson had 10 for the Jaguars. Ayden-Grifton was led by David Jackson and Melton Cannon with 11 each, while Shelton McCarter added 10.

In the girls' game, Ayden-Grifton inched ahead, 8-7, after the first period, but couldn't stay ahead. The close first half ended in a deadlock, 14-14.

It continued close through the third period, with the Chargers again holding a slim lead, 27-26, as the last quarter opened. But in that period, the Chargers outhit the Lady Jags, 13-8, to pull off the win.

Lady Pirates Tankers Thin But Are Scrappy

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

While the East Carolina women's swimming team may lack in numbers, Coach Ray Scharf feels they make up for a lot of it with grit and determination.

"We've had three dual meets so far, and we're 2-1," he said. The lone loss came last Wednesday to North Carolina. The women also claimed the NCAIAW meet a week ago, but that was tempered by the absence of the ACC teams from action.

"Last year, we had nine swimmers, and this year, we only have seven," Scharf said. "The women train with the men, and many of them find that they cannot make this of committment. The work is too tough for many of them.

"But those who have stayed are showing continued improvement. Most of them have already topped their best times from the end of last year," Scharf added.

"It will come, it only takes time...and money. Right now, we have the time, but we lack the money, and I guess that will eventually come too under Title IX. But still, I'm very pleased with the effort we've gotten so far from the women."

The biggest problem, naturally, is a lack of depth. "With just seven swimmers, we'd have a tough time winning a good meet even if all seven were top caliber people."

None of the women are on grant at this time. The lone student who was on grant chose to drop off the team this year, Scharf said.

Sharon Burns is one of the juniors, and Scharf calls her basically a freestyler. "She went 57 (seconds) in the 100 freestyle against Carolina, and that's a second better than her best time last year, so you can see she's coming along."

Karen Davidson is one of the freshman. She swims in freestyle and butterfly. "She actually could swim most strokes pretty well. She needs experience, but will be good for us. She's already close to the varsity records in the 200 freestyle and the butterfly, and she's already broken the 400 individual medley record."

Paige Langston, a freshman, also lacks experience, but "is a hard worker who is progressing well." Her best strokes are freestyle and breaststroke.

Andree Lennon, the lone sophomore, is also a hard worker, who is best in the freestyle. "She's thinking of transfering, however," Scharf said.

Julie Malcolm, the other freshman, "has done a real good job so far for us." She's broken the 50, 100 and 200 breaststroke varsity records already, and also does well in freestyle.

Cindy Sailer, a junior, broke the 50 free and 50 butterfly records against Carolina, and is an extremely good sprinter, according to Scharf. "She's a good leader and a good athlete."

The other junior, Lucy Weckerling, is basically a backstroker. "She's already doing her best times, and is coming along well."

"Scharf said that overall, he has to be extremely pleased with the women's program.

"It's a start. Once we get some money for the program, we have the potential to build a good program. It just takes time."

An Easy Shot

Rose High School's Donald House leaps high for an easy lay-in against Kinston High School Friday night as teammate John Sheppard (51) and an unidentified Viking play watch. It was one of few easy ones for the Rampants, however, who fell for the third straight time, bowing to the Vikes, 74-55. (Reflector Photo)

Panthers Upset Southwest

BETHEL — North Pitt's Panthers pulled off a 58-44 upset victory over sixth-ranked Southwest Edgecombe Friday night, handing the Cougars their first loss of the year.

Earlier, North Pitt had taken a 55-44 win in the junior varsity game, and a 50-46 win in the girls' contest.

The Panthers came out and edged into a 12-9 lead in the first period and steadily pulled away from their newest Eastern Carolina Conference rival. After a 15-10 second period margin, the Panthers enjoyed a 27-19 halftime lead.

North Pitt really poured it on in the third period, allowing Southwest only four points, while scoring 15 of their own to boost the lead to 42-23. The Cougars rallied in the final period, 21-16, but it wasn't enough.

Reginald Knight led North Pitt with 21 points, while Neal Carr had 11 and Greg Langley had 10. Farmer was the lone Cougar in double figures with 11.

In the girls' game, North Pitt ripped off a 14-2 lead in the first period and cruised in, despite a couple of comebacks by Southwest. North Pitt held to the lead, 25-18 at the end of the half.

The Pant-HERS built their lead to 38-30, in the third period, then held off a 16-12 rally by the Cougars in the final period.

Carolyn Best hit 28 for North Pitt, while Jenkins had 28 and McNeil had 10 for Southwest.

North Pitt, now 2-2 (boys) and 1-3 (girls) was to play at Greene Central on Saturday night, then visit Rose on Tuesday.

Late Basket Allows Aycock To Nip Rams

PIKEVILLE — A three-point play in the closing seconds of the game Friday night enabled Charles B. Aycock High School to slip past Greene Central, 49-47.

It was the second straight game that the Rams had lost in the closing seasons.

Greene Central won the junior varsity game, 62-45, but was also defeated in the girls' game, 51-42.

In the boys' game, Greene Central edged out into a 12-10 lead after one period of play. The Rams were able to extend their lead with a 12-7 margin in the second frame, and led at intermission, 24-17.

Aycock put on a rally in the third period, however, outhitting the Rams, 16-10, to cut the lead to 34-33. The two teams swapped the lead down to the wire, with the score being tied finally at 46-46. But Thomas hit a basket for Aycock with three seconds left and then added a free throw for the victory.

Whitley led the Falcons with 12 points, while James Best had 16 and J ay Ham had 10 for Greene Central.

In the girls' game, Aycock took an early lead and held a 14-8 margin at the end of the first period, holding on to pace the way, 25-18, at halftime.

Greene Central cut one off that in the third period to trail, 34-28, but a 17-14 margin in the final period by Aycock sewed up the win.

Cartwright Rallies Dons

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

You can't keep a good man down ...especially if he's a good, big man like Billy Cartwright of the San Francisco Dons.

Held to seven points in the first half by Stanford Friday night, San Francisco's sevenfooter made up for it with 22 second-half points that led the nation's 17th-ranked team to an 87-77 decision over the Cardinals.

Five of Catrwright's second-half shots were board-rattling dunks that brought the San Francisco crowd to its feet.

Cartwright's performance overshadowed a fine night by Stanford's brilliant freshman forward Brian Welch, who hit 14 of 18 shots for 28 points.

San Francisco was the only ranked team to see action Friday night, but there were several tournaments played.

In Provo, Utah, Purdue defeated Santa Clara 71-62 and Brigham Young stopped St. Joseph's of Philadelphia 90-71 in the opening of the Cougar Classic. Indiana State beat East Carolina 64-61 and Cleveland State beat Stetson 64-61 in the Hatter Classic in Deland, Fla.

North Carolina-Charlotte took Hofstra 91-73 and George Washington University topped Texas-El Paso 81-71 in the first round of the First Union Invitational in Charlotte, N.C.

Cornell stopped the University of Rochester 67-58 and Colgate defeated Catholic University 81-71 in the Big Red Classic at Ithaca, N.Y.

Southern University trimmed McNeese State 91-86 in doule overtime and Southwestern Louisiana hammered Pepperdine 119-90 in the Bayou Classic in Lafayette, La. In the Citrus Invitational in Lakeland, Fla., Florida Southern defeated St. Peter's 87-81 and Mercer whipped Western Carolina 83-71.

Joe Barry Carroll tossed in 17 points and grabbed 10 rebounds to lead Purdue past Santa Clara. Brigham Young walloped St. Joseph's as Danny Ainge scored 20 points and Fred Roberts 19.

Larry Bird scored 32 points to pace Indiana State past East Carolina. Frank Edwards contributed 31 points and Andre Battle hit two free throws in the closing seconds to ice Cleveland State's victory over Stetson.

North Carolina-Charlotte defeated Hofstra as Chad Kinch scored 21 points and grabbed six rebounds. Brian Magid's 19 points led George Washington over Texas-El Paso. Cornell beat Rochester behind Mike Davis' 26 points and Colgate stopped Catholic as Dave Hargett scored 24 points and Mike Ferrara added 19.

Women's Golfing

Several Brook Valley Country Club women were among winners in the East Carolina Ladies Golf Association play held at Brook Valley this week.

In the championship flight, Barbara Walker took second low gross, while Maxine Hawley was second low gross in the first flight. Mary Bruton won second low gross in the second flight, with Evelyn Ward winning second low net. Ruth Billica was the low gross winner in the fourth flight.

Dunk Is Too Much

NEWTON, N. C. (AP) — When Al Young slam dunks a basketball, it stays dunked. In fact, it even stayed the game Friday night between Hickory and Newton-Conover high schools.

The game was suspended with 5:56 remaining as Young, 6-1 Hickory guard, slam-dunked so hard it tore the net loose and shattered the glass backboard. Hickory was leading 67-55 at the time.

Play had to be suspended for lack of a spare board. When the game resumes, Newton-Conover will be at the line shooting a technical. It seems the whistle had blown before Young executed his powerful dunk.

Young, who had led game scoring with 20 points, apparently did not hear the whistle for a walking violation and it's illegal to dunk after it is blown.

Bullets Hold Off Chocowinity

CHOCOWINITY — Jamesville High School withstood a comeback by Chocowinity in the final period Friday night to take a 61-60 victory over their hosts.

Earlier, Chocowinity had won both the junior varsity, 53-50, and girls' games, 52-37.

Jamesville jumped out to an early lead, building up a 17-11 first period margin. They outhit Chocowinity, 15-9 in the second quarter and took a 32-20 lead into the dressing room.

The Bullets continued to pull away in the early minutes of the third period, but Chocowinity started a comeback, cutting the lead to 45-35 at the end of the quarter. In the final period, with Bullet starters Tommy DiNardo, Keith Modlin and James Armond sent to the bench with fouls, despite playing a zone defense, the Bullets lost control.

Chocowinity scored 25 points, nine of them on foul shots as they made 17 trips to the line in the period, while the Bullets had 15. But Jamesville never lost the lead, hanging on for the win.

DiNardo led Jamesville with 19, while Trent Ange had 18 and Alan Frazier canned 17. Roy Daniels led Chocowinity with 29, while Randy Smaw had 17.

In the girls' game, Chocowinity edged ahead at the end of the first period, 13-10, and led the rest of the way. They held a 31-21 halftime lead and stretched that to 41-27 at the end of the third quarter.

Scholars To Study In China

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thirteen scholars, selected from 150 applicants, will be the first group from the United States going to China for extended periods of advanced training and research.

The Committee on Scholarly Communication with the People's Republic of China said Friday the 13 scholars are to start their studies early next year. The Chinese still must approve the selections. Fifty more U.S. scholars are expected to go to China in September 1979, and 500 Chinese will be placed in U.S. scholarly institutions by the same time.

Supports UN Refugee Conference

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter Administration is strongly supporting a United Nations conference on refugees, saying more nations should make room for those fleeing Indochina.

The U.N conference is expected to draw representatives from 30 countries Monday and Tuesday in Geneva. State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said Friday the United States hopes one result will be greater acceptance of refugees who are stranded at sea as well as others fleeing Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia. Nearly 50,000 Indochinese refugees are eligible for entry into the United States through next April 30.

KINSTON— Richard H. Duncan, a native of Greenville, has taken up his duties as head of the Drafting and Design Department at Lenoir Community College, according to Guy Peterson, associate dean of vocational-technical education. He succeeds Howard Hickerson who resigned in the summer.

Duncan earned his bachelor of mechanical engineering degree from N.C. State University and did graduate work there and at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Duncan is a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and of the Society of Manufacturing Engineers. He and his wife Louise are Presbyterians. They reside at 1005 East Rock Spring Road in Greenville. They have two sons in college — David, a senior at East Carolina University and Don, a freshman at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

HST Approved Nevada Test Site

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Documents released this week indicate President Harry Truman approved the testing of nuclear devices on the Nevada desert despite concerns about possible effects of radiation on persons living downwind, the Deseret News reported Friday.

It also reported that an area of North Carolina was rejected as a test site. In a copyright article, the Salt Lake City newspaper said it had obtained previously classified minutes of Atomic Energy Commission meetings in late 1950 and National Security Council memoranda.

It said the documents indicated that Truman, pressured by the Chinese entry into the Korean War, had approved use of the Nevada site just 34 days after the NSC ordered the AEC to make a site selection study and recommendations.

The first atomic test took place at the Las Vegas-Tonopah bombing andgunnery range Jan. 27, 1951, following Truman's approval of the site on Dec. 18, 1950. The site was approved before an Army Corps of Engineers survey of the site was completed and without specific study of radiological safety factors, the Deseret News said.

Residents of some southwestern Utah and northern Arizona communities have contended that fallout from the tests brought on a higher than normal number of cancer cases in the area. 4

The newspaper said that on Nov. 14, 1950, the NSC ordered that a secure test site be found within the continental United States, on grounds that should the Soviet Union follow China's entry into the war, the United States might be denied access to its two existing test sites at Eniwetok in the Pacific and Amchitka in the Aleutian Islands.

The AEC recommended the Nevada site to Truman on Dec. 12, although AEC officials noted that safety of civilian populations was only "adequate" for the area, while other factors were judged good or excellent, the Deseret News said.

It said the only safety report cited in the NSC papers was a report made Aug. 1, 1950, before the Nevada location was considered.

In choosing that site, the AEC rejected four others, including Dugway Proving Grounds, Utah; AlamogordoWhite Sands guided missile range in New Mexico; the Fallon-Eureka area in Nevada; and the Pamlico Sound-Camp LeJeune area in North Carolina.

The newspaper said safety was considered chiefly in terms of population bensity. It quoted the AEC Dec. 12 report as saying, "A comparison of total populations in a base area site plus a 90-degree fallout sector to a radius 125 miles downwind from site, shows the Las Vegas site as involving the fewest people."

Dugway was eliminated because it was upwind from Salt Lake City, the largest population area of the sites studied, the Deseret News said.

It quoted the recommendation as saying, "Not only must high safety factors be established in fact, but the acceptance of these factors by the general public must be insured by judicious handling of the public information program."

Questions of radiological contamination "may be answered satisfactorily as test knowledge increases through experiments ... but they are not satisfactorily answered at present," the report said.

However, the Deseret News said that in a Jan. 11, 1951, public announcement by the AEC, the agency said "radiological safety and security conditions incident to the type of tests to be undertaken have been carefully reviewed by authorities in the fields involved."

Between January 1951 and June 1953, 31 tests were conducted at the site.

Too Many Santas Ruin The Act

ST. PAUL, Minn. (UPI) — Dressing up in a Santa Claus suit at holiday time may seem like a great idea to Uncle Herbie, but it's fraught with possible disappointment for the children, a University of Minnesota expert says.

Extension life specialist Ronald Pitzer says more about Santa should be left to youngsters' imagination.

Pitzer has noted a trend among parents of younger children to project Santa in a story-telling, symbolic kind of way. They try not to deceive their children by introducing them to a multitude of short, tall, skinny, fat Santas. They allow the children to discover gradually that Santa isn't real. How widespread this trend is, Pitzer doesn't know.

Most of his ideas about conveying the Christmas spirit hearken back to his childhood in Ohio.

"Christmas was delicious to me as a child," he said in an interview. He would like to see it that way for children everywhere.

"Don't promote it. Don't take kids to see him in department stores. Make no efforts along those lines. Instead, try to convey a spirit of loving and giving and sharing."

Children can hold reality and fantasy in varying degrees, he said, and they should have the opportunity to stretch their imaginations with ideas of Santa. He said they generally begin questioning some aspects of Santa's existence at about six years, but frequently hold on to their basic notion of him for a time after that.

Questions such as "How can he get down that chimney?" or "What are we going to do? We don't have a chimney," he said, are indicators the child is considering the possibility of not believing in Santa. He should be allowed to discover disbelief at his own pace, Pitzer added.

He thinks it is unfortunate to portray Santa as an avenger who won't bring gifts if the child is bad. He said the Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer story also is unfortunate because it indicates the reindeer was loved only because it was able to make a magnificent achievement, and would have remained an outsider if the opportunity had not come.

"We need to fight commercialism at Christmas and involve our children in giving gifts," he said. "We ought to make of Christmas what we want of it, rather than let outside influences wreck it for us."

He said adults who go into an orgy of buying, wrapping and partying can give children wrong ideas about Christmas — that it's not the joyous time it really should be.

He also said adults allow television to play too central a role in a child's life. They must counter its message, particularly at Christmas, with introduction of their own family values, he said.

Pitzer, a Quaker, said parents need to relate Christmas to their religious beliefs and let children know that it is a time to celebrate the birth of Christ, and a time of love.

He, his wife and their two sons, 12 and 16, have put together their own Christmas book, full of stories, poems and carols collected over the years. At holiday time the book is brought out and family members share something that has meaning for each of them.

Both sons believed in Santa, Pitzer said. When the oldest learned the jolly gift-giver wasn't real, he was ready for it, the father said, and enjoyed that Christmas especially — because the void caused by losing the myth of Santa was filled by the boy's being part of it.

Economist Eyes Eating Habits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Age and gender have a lot to do with food preferences and eating habits, according to studies by U.S. Department of Agriculture economist Corinne LeBovit.

"At about age 10, kids begin to eat more like adults," the economist says. "They stick with breads and cereals but add more vegetables and meat to their diets. Nevertheless, they still like large amounts of candy until about age 20.

Women eat less beef, pork, bread and milk as they grow older but more fruit and cereals. They're not eating any more grain products than they have in the past, perhaps in part because of the think-thin trend of recent years.

Awarded A Scholarship

GREENSBORO — Michael David Hinsley of Greenville has been awarded a Robbins Scholarship to attend the University of North Carolina at Greensboro for the 1978-79 school year.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray E. Hinsley of 104 Avalon Lane, Greenville, Hinsley is a freshman at UNC-G and a graduate of J. H. Rose High School.

Hinsley is one of 18 Robbins scholars this year at UNC-G. Recipients were selected on the basis of scholastic ability, leadership, interest in fellow students, desire to obtain an education, and financial need.

The scholarships are named in honor of Bessie Holmes Robbins and George B. Robbins and range in value from $200 to $800.

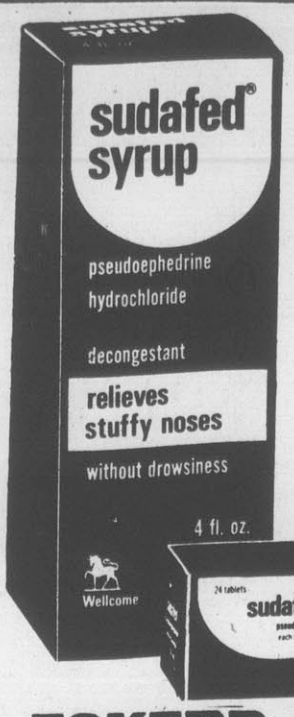

The scholarships were established at the University in 1975 through a bequest of $135,548 made by the late Mr. Robbins of Graham.

A Cavity-Free Life Possible

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (UPI) — It is entirely possible to go through life without cavities or toothaches, say staff researchers for a dental products manufacturer.

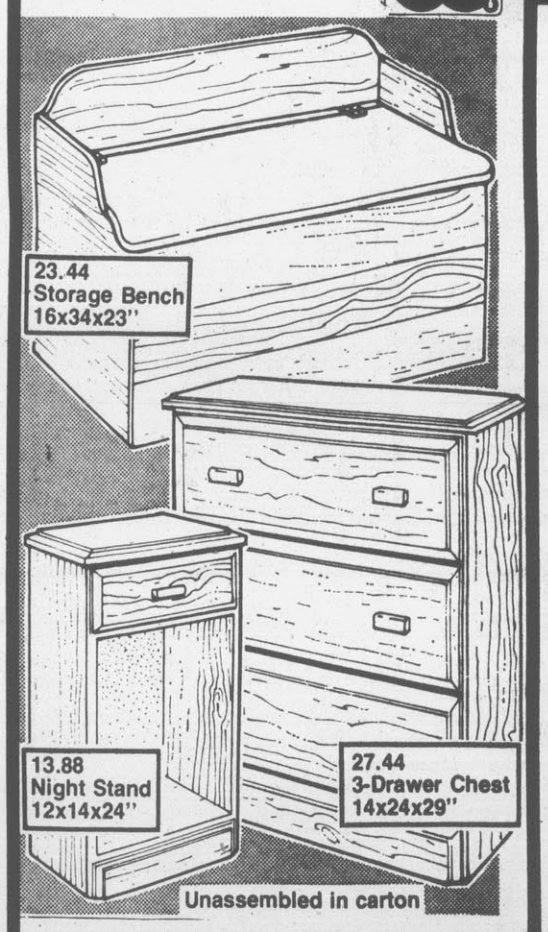

To prevent dental disease from developing, they recommend children be taught basic rules as soon as they have adequate dexterity, certainly by age six.

Until then, they say, parents should clean babies' gums with gauze twice a day to reduce bacteria formation on their gums before their teeth appear.

Hosted Workshop

Pitt Technical Institute hosted a Human Resources Development (HRD) Workshop Thursday, December 1, for HRD coordinators and staff from 11 community colleges and technical institues.

The workshop was designed as round-table discussions regarding mutual concerns at all institutions. Dr. E. B. Bright, PTI Dean of Instruction, welcomed the participants to Pitt Tech and the workshop.

The HRD programs are designed to prepare students for obtaining and maintaining employment by preparing for the High School Equivalency Exam (when needed), developing self-knowledge and introducing them to the world of work.

Eligible applicants must be 18 years of age and officially withdrawn from public schools. The unemployed, underemployed and economically disadvantaged persons are eligible to apply.

The economically disadvanted may receive a weekly stipend funded through CETA while they are enrolled. The HRD program is unique in its funding in that the next year's allotment is determined by an earnback formula. This earnback is determined through three, six and 12-month employment follow-ups. Earnback credit is also realized where the HRD graduate enrolls in further training. There are usually several students from each cycle that enroll in their respective institutions.

Attending the workshop from Pitt County were Ms. Terry Shank, coordinator; Ms. Hazel Barrow, academic instructor; and A. J. Tyson, orientation and motivation instructor.

Childbirth Films

The Greenville Childbirth Educators will present three films, "Nan's Class," "Bonding Birth Experience," and "Labor of Love," Thursday, Dec. 14, 7:30 p.m., in the conference room at Pitt Memorial Hospital. Admission is free and the public is invited to attend.

'Have A Nostalgic Christmas' This Year

YES, EMILY. . .the doll is lovable, even if it happens to be a Chritmas tree ornament. You won't convince this young lady to admire such things from the distance of a tree, however. Emily, age two, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Durwood Laughinghouse of Pantego.

Picture a tree covered with all kinds of old-fashioned ornaments, such as dolls with honest-to-goodness painted porcelain faces, like those dating from the 1800's — the kind you've seen in antique shops. Smell the scent of cloves. Touch small candles—real ones—which will be used (unlighted) with little tiny white lights.

Also new on the scene will be circus-related decorations.

But many of the old favorites will be back, too. Lynda Harrington, who owns and operates a wholesale-retail nursery and decorating center with her husband, has to be up to date on new market offerings to use on the scores of trees which she decorates for display each year.

This year, as always, she says there will be plentiful "Williamsburg" decorations, such as fruit, especially apples, as well as other colonial offerings, in the traditional blues and burgandies with a new color: Ash rose, "which is beautiful with burgandy."

Wood ornaments continue to be popular. New versions will include characters from "Alice in Wonderland," "The Nutcracker Suite," "Wizard of Oz," nursery rhymes, Dickens' stories, and the traditional Raggedy Ann and Andy.

Felt and yarn ornaments, which can be made at home, are another favorite reappearing from previous years.

Angel ornaments of every description also will be popular this year, as will stained glass ornaments, Santa and his following, and items of gold, Mrs. Harrington says.

Silver tree trims will not be as popular as they used to be, though silver will be used in m mirror ornaments with the contemporary look. Thses will go well with blues.

The glittery look, accomplished through the use of sequin and crystal ornaments, also is making an appearance on the decorations market.

Following a trend which was popular last year, bows will be in heavy use, both as accent pieces on the ends of branches and as the tree top decoration. If the bow is used at the top, it should be very big and full. Sometimes, appropriate trims can be applied to the long streamers for special effects.

Other trends for accent pieces (which are used to "tie" together the assorted ornaments, garlands and lights and to give the tree a finished look) are birds, apples and flowers—all kinds—from dried to silk, as long as they are small. The accent pieces are placed on the tips of the tree branches and should be used consistently.

"Garlands are still important, though there will be a lot of trees this year without them," Mrs. Harrington says. Some people prefer to have their ornaments dominate a teee, though a garland can gracefully fill in bare spots.

Many individuals make a habit of collecting a particular item, such as angels or mice or wooden figures, adding to the collection each year as new versions are manufactured. This type of planning leads not only to fun, and nostalgia, but lends a unifying effect to the overall appearance of a tree.

And speaking of trees, Mrs. Harrington offers some practical advice on their selection, if you are in the market for a "real" one. Since all trees are cut about the same time (in mid-November), buy early to take advantage of the best selection. Cut the stem at an angle and keep outdoors in a bucket of water where it is cool until you are ready to decorate.

Before taking the tree inside the house, cut off the bottom inch of the tree because the sap will have descended to this point. Inside, water the tree at least every two days. If you are using one of the commercial tree preservatives, check the water daily.

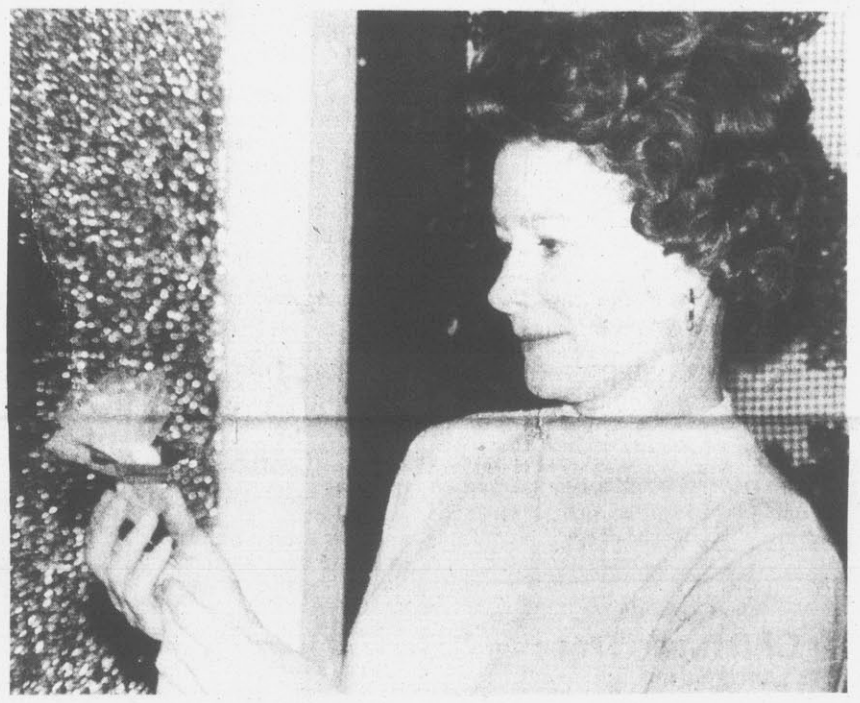

If you prefer a living tree, one which you will plant later on, buy one which will live in this area. Pines are suitable for most Southern regions, for example.

Whatever kind of tree you use, make it as nostalgic as you like. This is the year for it.

TINY SILK FLOWERS. . .are being used in a variety of ways. Here, they highlight a velvet bow. Silk and dried flowers also are being used as accent pieces on the tips of the tree branches.

SMELL THE SCENT OF CLOVES . . .on the tree this year. Mrs. Cletas Jackson Jr. considers the new use for an old item, carefully gathered in net and tied with small ribbons.

Urges More Caution In Using Amphetamines

By Selby Bateman
UNC-G News Bureau
(First of Two Articles

GREENSBORO — Six-year-old Jimmy starts each school day with a good breakfast, a hug from mom and dad, and a dose of what is commonly called 'speed' — amphetamines.

The daily drug dose, administered by his parents, started shortly after Jimmy reached the first grade. At that time, the excitability, impulsiveness, and overactivity that Jimmy had been exhibiting at home seemed to intensify during the school day.

He couldn't stay in his seat, he would speak out of turn in an overly loud voice, and he simply couldn't concentrate on what the class was studying.

Finally, after consultations among his parents, teacher, school psychologist, and pediatrician, Jimmy began taking a prescribed quantity of amphetamines every day. The effects were startling: Jimmy paid attention, stayed in his seat, stopped shouting, and actually seemed to concentrate on what was happening in class.

For the first time in several years, Jimmy's parents felt a sense of optimism about their son's behavior. And his teacher heaved a sigh of relief as her classroom returned to normal.

But that's not the end of the story.

Although Jimmy and thousands of other so-called hyperactive children across the nation are given those stimulant drugs under medical supervision, some researchers today fear that such therapy may be potentially damaging and, in some cases, unnecessary.

"These stimulant drugs have the effect of speeding up the heart rate, increasing sweat gland activity, and stimulating brain waves," said Dr. Lynne Y. Koester, an assistant professor of child development at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

"This raises the whole question of how long the children are on the drug and the amounts they are given. And often these children are diagnosed as soon as they hit the public schools," she added.

Dr. Koester, a researcher who has also worked with and taught pre-school, third, seventh, and eighth grade children, is among those researchers who are concerned over this widespread use of stimulant drugs to control hyperactive children. She has presented professional papers before the American Psychological Association on such subjects as psychophysiological characteristics of first graders; sex similarities in children's activity, attention, and arousal; and related research topics.

The specter of so many children being given stimulant drugs on a daily basis, often from age six all the way to 10 or 11 years of age, is an unsettling one for researchers such as Dr. Koester.

"In terms of the potential negative side effects there are very few studies and this is one reason I feel we need to be more cautious about the widespread use of the drugs," she commented. "There are all kinds of laws prohibiting the use of amphetamines by adults. It seems to be a double standard."

In some cases, especially where a child has been incorrectly labeled hyperactive, the drug therapy may be an unnecessary solution, she said.

"And I'm afraid that sometimes parents and teachers see this as the only way they can cope with the child's behavior problems so they may encourage the drug's use more than is actually necessary," cautioned Dr. Koester.

"In seeking alternatives, I think we need to look at whether we can provide the stimulation these children need through the environments that they are in rather than through drugs."

Hyperactivity has become a commonly used label applied to many children who exhibit a wide range of behavior problems such as excitability, distractibility, impulsiveness, and overactivity, noted Dr. Koester. And many times, that behavior is first noticed or becomes more noticeable in the school environment, she added.

For years it was assumed that hyperactive children were driven internally, little dynamos of undirected energy sparked by an overactive internal system.

"But what has fairly recently been determined is that the opposite is, in fact, true," Said Dr. Koester. "These children are actually under-aroused internally. They are slower in their physiological processes and they are not as responsive to incoming stimuli."

The result, she pointed out, is

FOR THOUSANDS. . .of hyperactive children, each day can be a frustrating, confusing and often lonely experience. Dr. Lynne Koester, an assistant professor of child development at UNC-G, is one researcher who feels that widespread amphetamine therapy is not only a poor solution, but also only one of several possible approaches to the problem.

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

Old dolls, newer dolls, big dolls and smaller, plain and fancy — more than 100 of them — are being displayed in the exhibit entitled "Dolls," which opened to the public Tuesday at the N. C. Museum of History, Raleigh.

The dolls, dating from the Revolution to contemporary times, are from the museum's collection. Many of the dolls are German bisque, according to Betty Tyson, museum registrar, but the exhibit includes dolls from France and America as well, reflecting the three countries of major doll production through the years. Many of the dolls on display were donated by Mrs. Charles I. Simons of Columbia, S. C., from her collection.

The exhibit includes dolls of wood, wax over composition, papier mache, glazed china, bisque, hard plastic, celluloid and cloth (rag). One of the especially interesting dolls and perhaps the oldest is a 1775 rag doll owned by Anna Caswell, daughter of Revolutionary Governor Richard Caswell.

The dolls have been refurbished by museum volunteers during the last three years, Ms. Tyson said. She explained that few of the dolls arrived in perfect condition; but many are still in their original state. Some need restringing, others needed new wigs or a crack mended. One or two needed eyes replaced, she added.

"I don't want visitors to think we've altered or completely restored the dolls," she said. "That's not what a museum is about. The volunteers have simply refurbished — adding what was needed."

A very feminine doll with molded black hair carries an intriguing background. She was supposed to have been brought through the Confederate blockade during the Civil War for Christmas 1864. The papier mache doll, wearing a beige net and pink taffeta dress with pink sash, began her journey in England and from there sailed to Nassau and Wilmington. This doll wasn't the first to be carried from Europe via ship. Doll history indicates that as early as the 14th century fashion dolls wearing the latest Parisian costumes were sent from France to England for the English nobility to choose new clothes. When the fashionable ladies had ordered the latest in haute couture from the authentic miniatures, the dolls were passed on to the little girls of the palaces and mansions.

The exhibit will be on view through May and admission is free. Museum hours are Tuesday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sunday from 1-6 p.m.

Mulled Cider

Any easy way to please holiday guests and warm Christmas carolers is with mulled cider, say NCSU Agricultural Extenion specialists.

In a pot, heat one gallon cider, three bays leaves, 18 whole cloves and three sticks of cinnamon to a simmer, but do not boil.

Strain the heated punch into a bowl and serve.

an attempt by the child to compensate for this deficit.

"Everyone has this compensating mechanism," she stressed. "But hyperactive children have to seek external stimulation to bring themselves up to a normal level of operation. My conclusion is that their behavior is just an outward manifestation of a physiological deficit. This ties in very logically to the use of stimulant drugs ... which provide the child artificially with a mechanism for compensating."

Although stimulants were first discovered to change the behavior patterns of hyperactive children in the 1930s, it wasn't until the 1960s that the use of amphetamines was started on a widespread basis, she pointed out.

"People began to realize how effective it could be and it then became the magical antidote for hyperactive children," she said.

But, Dr. Koester, who is currently studying the physiological origins of hyperactivity in infants, feels that researchers need to examine more closely both the short and long term effects of such drug therapy.

"We are seeing currently not so much an increase in the numbers of children who are hyperactive, but an increase awareness of the problem," she said. "There is more publicity about it and I think the danger here is that the term gets used very loosely."

(In the second and concluding part of this series, Dr. Koester will discuss guidelines for parents and teachers working with children labeled as hyperactive.)

Salt to taste

In a large saucepan gently cook the onion in the butter until yellowed; stir in the ginger and cloves. Add the rice, lentils and salt; stir thoroughly but gently so as not to break the lentils. Serve at once or reheat over boiling water or in microwave oven. Makes 6 servings.

NOTE: To cook the lentils, bring them to a boil with 2½ cups water; boil gently, covered, until they are tender but not mushy and the water is almost all absorbed — about 30 minutes.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

When will I ever learn that many of the theories of child raising can be injurious to your mental health?

The latest one that will drive you to the ledge is, "Discuss your child's punishment with him." Maybe if you're dealing with a member of the American Bar Association, justice could be served, but face it, children are concerned with only one goal — saving their own skins.

I said to one of my kids the other day, "I want to talk to you."

"I vote 'NO!' " he said.

"How can you vote 'no' when I haven't even told you what the problem is?"

"I can tell by the look in your eye."

"Let us deal with some hypothetical facts first," I said. "Suppose you had a 17-year-old boy who wanted to borrow the car for an evening and when he returned it, there was mud all over the tires and fenders, onion rings in the upholstery and the gas gauge was on E?"

"What color is the car?"

"What difference does that make?"

"Mud shows up on a darker car to be much more than it is on a lighter car."

"Then you don't feel the borrower should wash the car or vacuum the onion rings out of the car?"

"You are assuming that the onion rings were put there by the borrower. The age of the rings would have to be checked to see if they were old or new."

"And what about the empty gas tank?"

"I think it is reasonable to assume that if it were after midnight, the borrower would not have the opportunity to fill the tank as most stations close at 11."

"I don't think the borrower would have filled the tank even if he had the money."

"Then you are saying that the borrower is indeed underfinanced and should have an increase in allowance if he is to support a borrowed car in the manner to which the lender is accustomed?"

"Go to your room and stay there the rest of the evening."

"You sure showed him," said my husband. "He's stuck up there in that dreary bedroom with a color TV set, a telephone, soft bed, stereo, and two desserts and you're down here with all the dirty dishes to do."

I'm tough. But I'm fair.

Date Ignored Her Stop Sign

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I went on a blind date with this fellow who was recommended by a friend. He was very nice-looking and his manners were good, but you can't tell anything these days by looking. Well, he took me to a drive-in movie and he was just too fast for me, so I asked him to take me home after the movie. He had other ideas and headed for a country road.

When he stopped at a stop sign, I jumped out of the car. He didn't even try to stop me. He just drove off and left me. I was about 20 miles from home, and I didn't have any money so I thumbed a ride with a truck driver who was nice enough to take me to my door.

When I got home my father was raving mad. He said I took a terrible chance thumbing a ride home with a stranger. Yet I couldn't have walked all that way, and I wanted to get away from the guy. Was I wrong?

MAGGIE IN MESQUITE, TEXAS

DEAR MAGGIE: No girl should leave the house without enough money to make a telephone call. If you haven't a parent to call in case you need transportation, call a friend or relative. Or call the police department! Young ladies should not thumb rides with strangers, neither should they be walking alone at night. Play safe. ALWAYS carry enough money for transportation home.

DEAR ABBY: I do not drive an automobile, and all my friends know it. Now, Abby, it stands to reason that I have to depend on my friends for transportation to club meetings, church doings, and other social events. So why must I telephone my friends and have to beg a ride?

Since they are well aware that I attend all the things they do, wouldn't it be much more gracious if they were to call me and offer a ride? When I call and ask them for a ride they are always courteous, but I really would appreciate it if I didn't have to call and beg.

DOESN'T DRIVE IN OMAHA

DEAR DOESN'T: Most people (even the most gracious) are too preoccupied with their own business to guess who needs transportation. Don't be so sensitive. If you need a ride, call someone you think is going and ask for a lift.

If you are prompt, pleasant and don't inconvenience the driver by taking him out of his way, you'll always be a welcome rider. (P.S. Have you ever shown your appreciation to those who have consistently chauffeured you by giving them a small gift?)

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, DEC. 10, 1978

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day to follow your true philosophy, especially in relation to the little details of every-day living. The use of diplomacy can produce the right results when dealing with others now.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Make sure that the interests you are currently working on are of a practical nature. Show more devotion to family members.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Conditions around you are not exactly to your liking, so make an effort to improve them. Discuss the future with friends.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have many personal chores to do and today is a good time to handle them. Make plans for the days ahead.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Know what it is that will please your friends the most and take steps to make them happy. Be sure to maintain good health.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Do some philanthropic work that will give you pleasure and prestige. Avoid one who is diametrically opposed to your ideas.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study the philosophy of life you are living and make sure it is right for you. Make constructive plans for the new week.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Take time to study agreements you have made with others and know how best to handle them. Be more optimistic about the future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Check your surroundings and make plans for improvement. Handle an outside affair now instead of procrastinating about it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You are now able to come to the right solution concerning a problem you've had in the past. Express happiness.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You may find that amusement you are planning more expensive than you think, so avoid it. Be more practical.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't do anything that could disturb the harmony in the home. Study every phase of a new plan you have in mind.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You can now rely on your hunches which are accurate at this time. Follow the advice of trusted friends. Plan for the days ahead.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be a most practical person and should be given the best education you can afford for best results. Teach early that principles are most important, otherwise your progeny could employ efforts in wrong directions.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, DEC. 11, 1978

GENERAL TENDENCIES: So long as you do nothing of a sudden or drastic nature financially you can get into devising a detailed course of action where you can add to your efficiency and operative skill in all.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Study your financial position and know how best to improve it. Get advice from experts who have good judgment and are practical.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Plan your time better so that you can accomplish more, deal more intelligently with others. The social is not good in the evening, but fine during day hours. Avoid one who annoys you.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Plan how to gain your true aims, since many situations arise privately that can be helpful to you. A close tie confides in you, so do not violate such a trust.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Get business matters handled well during the day and then gain personal goals in the evening. Steer clear of one who could cause you trouble.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Handling civic affairs well gains you the favor of higher-ups. Begin week properly by handling difficult career affairs that you usually avoid.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Good day to expand where career activities are concerned. Wait another day before completing the details connected with a trip you have in mind. Update your wardrobe.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study your obligations well and schedule activities so you do not waste time. Give more attention to loved ones. Don't lose your temper.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Come to a better understanding with partners and show you appreciate their alliance. Study agreements and be sure of what you have contracted with others.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Take care of the work ahead of you efficiently, but be careful of details. A co-worker is helpful in the morning but not so later. Take in your stride and carry through carefully.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You want to entertain, but don't overspend. Put a talent to work and get good advice from kin. Avoid one who can be detrimental to your best interests.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Take care that some talk at home with family does not turn into a big fracas. Do whatever will please kin and keep the peace, harmony.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't procrastinate any longer about letters that must go out. Be careful of your purse while out shopping. Avoid one who could give you trouble.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be very capable at whatever has to do with finances, property, other possessions, so be sure to provide with an adequate education to make the most of such abilities. Teach early to listen to the views of others.

Seattle Area Tries Protect Farms From 'Sprawl'

By LARRY ROBERTS

KENT, Wash. (UPI) — Cipriano Primero has a weather-beaten roadside vegetable stand, a sometimes stall in Seattle's Pike Place Farmers' Market and six acres that he fears he is getting too old to farm.

"I'm 74. I'm getting old. Maybe in a few years I'll be dead," said Primero, a short, stocky man of Filipino descent who looked pretty healthy. He moved deliberately down his rows of cauliflower and stooped to slip a rubber band around the leaves of a drooping plant.

"I've got four daughters. They are not interested in farms. I have no one to give the farm to. The people from the county come out here and ask if I'd sell it to a developer. What else can I do? I'd sell."

That was bad news for officials from King County. It was an answer they got from many of the area's remaining small dairy, berry and vegetable farmers, who are facing high property taxes and increasing pressure to sell to housing and industrial developers.

In response, the county has put together an ambitious proposal to preserve what is left of the area's agricultural land. The plan calls for a $35 million county bond issue to allow the purchase of development rights of up to 11,000 acres of farmland.

The idea was set back November 7, when it appeared on the ballot but failed by a cat's whisker to collect enough votes. Under state law, a bond issue must receive a 60 percent yes vote to pass. Only 58.8 percent of the voters approved the proposition, which was presented with the campaign slogan, "Give Peas a Chance."

Undaunted county officials immediately began making plans to put the measure on the ballot again, perhaps as early as February.

"I think that with the vote we got, with such a large majority in favor of this, we've got to make sure we save farmland in King County," said county councilman Mike Lowry.

The only similar farmland preservation program in the nation is in operation in Suffolk County on Long Island, New York. But the King County plan — because it involves a bond issue — is the first to require voter approval.

Under the plan, farmland would be assessed at two levels: its value as agricultural land and its value to a potential developer.

Farmers who agree to participate in the voluntary program would receive a check for the difference from the county and in exchange would give up the right in perpetuity to use the land for anything but farming.

For example, a vegetable farmer with 20 acres might have his land declared to be worth $1,000 an acre for farming but $11,000 an acre if sold for a housing project. In that case, his development rights could be sold for $200,000.

King County, which includes Seattle, is the most urban county in the state. But it also produces 10 percent of Washington's milk products, thousands of tons of berries and dozens of varieties of vegetables produced mostly on family farms and sold in local stores, open air markets and roadside stands.

In 1945, there were 165,000 acres of agricultural land in the county. It is down to about 55,000 acres today and still falling. A few years ago, county officials began to worry that all of the farms soon would disappear unless something was done to stop the decline.

Some people wondered why the county didn't just write off small farms near densely populated areas and leave the growing to the big agricultural operations in Eastern Washington.

"Over 70 percent of all the agricultural land in the western states is in urban counties," County Executive John Spellman said. "You can't just sit back and rely on the rural counties."

Spellman said that among other advantages local farms keep down food costs.

"The presence of local agriculture saves householders hundreds of thousands of dollars every year, in terms of the lower prices of local produce," he said.

"The farms provide open space, productive open space that doesn't cost the taxpayers anything to maintain. And agriculture is still part of a diverse economy here. It is a $55 million a year business that provides full-time jobs for 6,800 people and thousands of part-time jobs."

County planners made a study of how the farms disappeared and decided that traditional methods of zoning and planning were not protecting open space from the spread of the cities. They decided that the purchase of development rights would be the only effective method. "You have to get control of the deed," one planner said.

A county survey shows about 60 percent of the farmers favor the program and would participate if the price was right. But others, like Cipriano Primero, have their questions.

Primero began farming in the Green River Valley near Kent soon after he emigrated from the Phillipines in 1927. High property taxes and a good offer persuaded him five years ago to sell his old farm to a warehouse company and move a few miles down the road.

Now he asks himself if it would pay to sell his development rights to the county.

"Suppose I fall and break my leg?" Primero asked. "I can't work anymore. I have to find another farmer to sell my land to. What if I can't find one? Then I'm stuck. I don't like that. That's not so good."

He kicked the toe of his worn boot under the topsoil. "This is good dirt. It's real nice dirt. You plant anything, she'll grow.

"I like to see the land worked. I've worked it all my life. It's fine, it's good to save the land. But the farmers are getting old and who can you find to work it?"

The county contends there are plenty of would-be farmers who would be happy to buy farms like Primero's if they could afford it.

"There are people waiting in the wings to buy that land right now," said Tom Ryan, head of the county's Office of Agriculture. "Under this program, the land costs would be appreciably lower for someone trying to get into farming."

Opposition to Proposition 1 so far has been very low key, with the Seattle-King County Board of Realtors the only major group on record against it.

The realtors say the proposal does not make clear how much development rights actually would cost, puts limits on the use of private lands and could result in a haphazard, checkerboard pattern of farms, homes and industry.

"We're not against open spaces but we feel there are better ways than using taxpayers' money to buy development rights," realtor spokeswoman Marty Linne said.

Ms. Linne said it was not clear which farmers would participate and how that would affect surrounding development.

"For instance, if you've ever been around a dairy farm you'd know you just can't have a housing development next to it," she said. "Mainly because of the smell, to be perfectly frank."

Despite its potential drawbacks, the plan is supported by many farmers who say that the proceeds from the sale of development rights would help them stay in business.

"I think it's a pretty good program," said Dan Smith, president of the 200-acre Smith Brothers Dairy Farms in Kent. "It would help me plan for the future. Things wouldn't be so up in the air.

"My nighbor just sold his land for $10,000 an acre," Smith said. "I want to get the most I can out of my land. I'd just as soon sell to the county, but if the proposition fails and someone offered me that much money, he'd have it tomorrow."

Latin Quarter Exercise In Nostalgia

By GLENNE CURRIE
UPI Lively Arts Editor

BOSTON (UPI) — The showgirls at New York's Latin Quarter nightclub represented a quarter century of sexism rampant.

The club was born in 1942, when the pin-up girl was man's ideal of American womanhood, flourished in the postwar years when woman was a sex goddess, and died in 1967 as the feminist movement shouldered it aside.

Now, as an exercise in nostalgia which will delight some and madden others, a selection of the lavish — and often brief — costumes for which the Latin Quarter was famous is on display at the Boston Center for the Arts, through Jan. 15.

The exhibition, titillatingly titled "Woman as Fantasy," and billed as "the world's first exhibition of cabaret costumes as art," includes 87 original costumes, hats, blow-ups of the club, and 54 drawings by Erte, the Russo-French nobleman who was the most famous of the Latin Quarter designers.

The impression that develops as you tour the 26,000-squarefoot exhibition — housed in the grand old domed Cyclorama Building — is less of sex exploitation than of admirable design and craftsmanship. And no wonder: some of the costumes cost $1,000 or more, many of them made in Paris of the finest materials to Erte's designs.

The Latin Quarter was owned by Sonja and E.M. Loew of Boston, and the floor shows were handled for many years by the late Lou Walters, father of TV's Barbara Walters.

When the club closed, Loew had all the stored costumes packed in wicker baskets and trucked to Boston's red-light "Combat Zone" for storage. That's where they were found by the Arts Center: costumes, hats, designs, all crammed atop each other, many torn and broken, all filthy dirty.

When the Loews gave permission for an exhibition to benefit the non-profit Arts Center, Diana Vreeland and Stella Blum of the Costume Institute of New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art were consulted for advice. They were so interested in the concept that they agreed to join the honorary committee for the exhibition, along with such local notables as Boston Mayor and Mrs. Kevin White and Massachusetts Gov. and Mrs. Michael S. Dukakis.

The actual cleaning and restoration of the costumes was undertaken by local couturier Helen Friedman. The black mannequins were donated or lent by Boston department stores; the lighting equipment was donated, as was $10,000 worth of lumber, to help the Center stay within its $75,000 budget.

Erte (an acronym from the French pronunciation of his initials as Baron Romain de Tirtoff), now 86, flew in from Paris to attend the Nov. 14 opening. Others attending the opening included Barbara Walters, Latin Quarter headliners Milton Berle and Ray Bolger, actress Arlene Dahl — who worked as a dancer at the club — and British ballet star Anthony Dowell, an Erte fan.

The Boston Center for the Arts was founded in 1970 to provide studio and performing space for professional artists and cultural groups.

It is located on a three-acre urban renewal site eight blocks from the mid-town Boston Public Garden and already houses 32 arts organizations, including the Boston Ballet, and more than 70 individual artists.

The Center recently signed a 62-year, $1-a-year lease with the city for the site, and is undertaking a $4.2 million renovation program for the various buildings. These include the 3,500-seat National Theater, an old vaudeville palace where Eddie Cantor, Bolger and Sammy Davis Jr. played.

Tend Their Land In Battle Garb

Their owners have fled to the safety of Salisbury to await the outcome of an ever-expanding guerrilla war or have joined the growing exodus of whites leaving this embattled nation in record numbers.

For those who have elected to stay, life offers a bleak, dangerous and sometimes murderous routine.

Farmers tend their land often in full battledress. They ride around the countryside in queer, beetle-shaped "mine-protected" vehicles, often in convoy. At night, they retreat apprehensively into their fortress-style homes surrounded by chainlink security fences, floodlights, sandbagged bunkers, claymore mines and an arsenal of weapons which even the youngest in the family can handle expertly.

Their lifeline is the agri-alert, a radio link between farmers, police and army. In quieter times, it can offer a titillating tidbit of where everyone is and "who is with whom" in this closeknit society. But it also is often the first warning of another guerrilla attack.

In effect, the insurgents have become uncrowned kings of large swathes of the border area which, in happier times, was a favorite vacation spot for Salisbury residents and a prolific producer of coffee, timber and tobacco.

Many of the 10,000 guerrillas already operating inside Rhodesia infiltrated through the Burma, Cashel and Honda valleys in this border region.

There are an additional 20,000 guerrillas in camps several miles from here inside Mozambique. They are expected to head this way soon.

Michael Bosworth-Brown is a slim blond English-born farmer who, at 37, looks 25. He has been farming here for a decade and means to stay. His wife, Liz, became a Rhodesian citizen only a few days before a visitor recently called on them. They have six children.

"I think those who are quitting have already left," Michael said. "We are going to stick it out here and all of our friends are."

Guns lie scattered around the pleasant thatch farmhouse only a few hundred yards from the border, propped against the dining table, near the doors and in the bedrooms.

Liz recently arrived from England but has adapted quickly to the dangerous frontier life she has been thrust into. One of her first tasks was to learn to shoot. She "quite enjoyed it" and is now adept with everything from a pistol to an automatic rifle.

The Bosworth-Brown's farm is undoubtedly an infiltration route for the guerrillas but thus far they have been among the lucky ones. There has only been one incident when guerrillas tried to burn Brian's coffee and could have easily shot him when he intervened, but they walked quietly back across the border.

"Perhaps we have become a little complacent after that," he said. "Sometimes we even forget to put the anti-grenade screens on the farm windows at night."

It is difficult to understand this complacency. Only a few miles away stands Elim mission which has become a symbol to all white Rhodesians about the fate which may await them.

A rusting barbed wire fence marks the official border between the Bosworth-Browns' farm and Mozambique. In happier times Michael used to chat with soldiers of the newly independent government, Frelimo, but now the earth on the Mozambique side is deliberately scorched and empty. Nothing moves. The guerrillas infiltrate only at night to avoid Rhodesian helicopters and bombers.

A strong sun swept across the deep green lawn in front of the farmhouse. The water of a nearby swimming pool sparkled in the summer haze. Michael carved guests huge chunks of Rhodesian beef and poured French wine, a souvenir of a rare trip to South Africa.

"Life is tough here with the terrs (terrorists)," he said. "But we don't really want for much here physically. The only thing we really can't get is good Scotch."

However, more than 200 farmers out of some 750 in the border area have quit. In the major market town of Umtali the white population has shrunk from around 10,000 to 8,500 and more are leaving.

Bill Hibbert was the town's tourist and publicity director. He has little to do these days.

"We older folk must stay," he said. "We really have little option and it may turn out okay. But the younger people: yes, they are leaving. Who can blame them?"

Along the valley from the Bosworth-Browns high in the Vumba hills overlooking a spectacular panorama of coffee plantations and forests of gum and Msasa plantations, Hughes Motteux has his home, literally just around the corner from the Elim mission.

Motteux, a Belgian, was run out of the Congo and his farm there when that country achieved independence in 1960. His wife has aready moved out of their present house with their three children.

The walls are bare of photographs and the rooms of furniture.

The strident sound of the agri-alert booms through the empty house announcing a "shoot" for all the farmers in the area. Geese, perhaps the best of all warning systems, cackle outside near the security fence.

Hughes has a platoon of African security guards in yellow and black uniforms and floppy caps who delight in presenting arms with their ancient rifles to a visitor — bizarre ceremony in the depths of the bush. Hughes and his chief white security man, Des Swan, are typical of the farmers here in their contempt for their enemy.

"Those chaps are not very brave except when they are drunk or on grass but they are high all the time," Hughes said.

"I'm quite keen on a bloodbath here," Des added. "Let's have a final thrash, kill all the kaffirs (blacks) and start again." He says later, unconvincingly, he was only joking.

Still, it is the guerillas who are roaming the hills and the farmers who often appear the prisoners.

Thais Require Solvency Proof

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Foreign visitors to Thailand will have to prove their solvency before entry.

The government has passed a law requiring immigration officials to seek proof that tourists have at least $250 in negotiable tokens such as travelers checks or internationally-recognized cash.

Officials said the law was passed because too many travelers have been marooned because of lack of funds, and Thai authorities had to literally bail them out or support them until embassies from their home countries could repatriate them.

'At Home' In One Of The Wonders Of The World

VERSAILLES, France (UPI) — On the night of June 26 a bomb went off in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Van der Kemp. Since the house is huge they were unaware of the blast until police awakened them.

Their house is the chateau of Versailles, one of the wonders of the world. Van der Kemp is curator of the chateau and Mrs. Van der Kemp is an American who lives in a 17th century French palace that took 36,000 workers 50 years to build.

Breton nationalists claimed responsibility for the bombing. It ripped holes in parquet floors, reduced period furniture to splinters, demolished valuable paintings in the Napoleonic galleries.

Five months later, sitting calmly in his own apartment in one wing of the chateau some minutes' walk from the explosion, the French curator disclosed that renovation of the bomb damage is proceeding and should be finished in two years, paid half by contributions from the French people and half by the government.

"I had worked on those rooms a long time and they were in perfect condition before the bomb," said Van der Kemp, who is descended from an old New York Dutch family on his father's side. "They were destroyed."

"We have raised almost $400,000 and we need about double that. We received contributions in 10 and 20 franc notes from all over France after we had a 'Save Versailles' appeal on radio and television and in the schools.

"I did not ask for money from abroad. This was a French bombing, a French affair, the French should pay for it."

Damaged draperies and wall coverings are being re-made, furniture repaired or reproduced, floors and walls rebuilt.

Restorers are working on a gigantic painting, bigger than the floor of Van der Kemp's living room, that was blown to bits. All the pieces, from the size of a hand to that of a fingernail, were recovered and assembled like a puzzle. They are being reglued on canvas, a two-year project.

The restored bombed rooms will reopen in 1980. That same year Van der Kemp plans to unveil 22 new chandeliers given by a wealthy French family to the famed Hall of Mirrors and another suite of rooms being decorated, thanks to another French donor. That will be Van der Kemp's final gesture for the chateau before his retirement after 10 years as assistant curator and 25 years as chief curator.

Another achievement was publication last spring of the grandest of 15 books Van der Kemp has written on the chateau built by Louis XIV, its gardens and two adjunct chateaus, Le Petit Trianon and Le Grand Trianon.

The new book, "Chateau of Versailles," has been translated into English and was published in November in Britain, the United States and Japan. The Van der Kemps began publicizing it in New York, Texas and California early in December.

Van der Kemp and his American wife live in what at the time of Louis XVI and Queen Marie Antoinette was the royal army officers' mess in the southeast corner of the courtyard in front of the gigantic chateau with its 33 acres of roofs.

Their 21-room apartment has three small salons, a dining room and bedrooms furnished with the couple's English and French antiques, fine jade and porcelain objects collected by Mrs. Van der Kemp's father, the late Frederick Harris of Washington. Harris was a rear admiral in the U.S. navy and benefactor of the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Mrs. Van der Kemp, tall, willowy and elegant in a green Chanel suit, said she takes life in the famed palace with ease, even though some tourists wander into their apartment, thinking it is part of the chateau open to the public.

"One day I came home and found a group of tourists in my living room," she said.

The floors of the apartment, burned by revolutionary soldiers in the 18th century, were repaired with leftovers from the main part of the chateau when those were replaced because of wear and tear by millions of tourists.

The Van der Kemps added sumptuous cloth covering on the walls and statuary found in the chateau basement under layers of coal.

"I also will leave behind a lot of bathrooms when we move to a Paris apartment in 1980," she said. "I installed seven. Also interphones. I run this house on interphones that go even to the attic, garage and two kitchens. But they did not allow me to put in an elevator."

Mrs. Van der Kemp, a former columnist for the Washington Star, is president of the Versailles Foundation in the United States. John D. Rockefeller started the American custom of contributing to the chateau after World War I partly because Benjamin Franklin came to Versailles to seek help for the American Revolution.

"Americans have given a lot but the French really give plenty to Versailles," Mrs. Van der Kemp said. "Nobody just talks about it, and they get no tax deductions, either."

Mrs. Van der Kemp also keeps busy entertaining honored visitors and donors at the chateau and being entertained in Paris' social life. On one living room table are autographed photos of some of her visitors: Queen Elizabeth of Britain, the late U.S. President John F. Kennedy, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, among others.

"For a girl born in the Brooklyn Navy Yard it's been a long way up the ladder and I made it to the top," she said.

More Clout For Women

NEW YORK (UPI) — Women exercise an increasing amount of clout in making key auotmobile decisions, particularly women who drive mainly for their own use.

A new study by the Newspaper Advertising Bureau, Inc. upsets preconceptions of automobile sales strategies aimed mainly at men. The study showed 51 percent of all women in the ages 18 through 64 have cars mainly for their own use,.

Using a sample of 806 such women, the research showed 40 percent initiated the decision to buy the car. But among women working full time, the proportion jumped to 53 percent.

Thirty percent of the wives said they made the initial buying decision alone and another 35 per cent decided jointly with their husbands.

Thirty percent of the wives also said they chose the make alone and 35 percent did so jointly with their husbands.

In choosing a dealer, 21 percent of the married women acted alone and another 34 percent participated in the decision.

In nearly four out of ten cases, the woman paid for the car. Twenty-four percent of the wives paid for the car by themselves and 29 percent jointly with their husbands.

Asked what main things they would look for in choosing a car for personal use, they ranked economy, gas mileage, comfort and convenience and styling and appearance, in that order.

TOURISM FOR SIBERIA

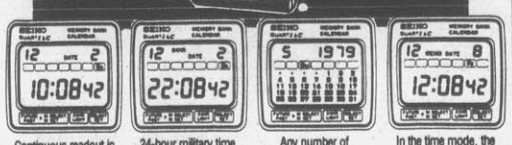

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union is making a major effort to open Siberia to tourism. The Tass news agency says that by 1985 there will be almost 7,500 beds available in Siberia and the Far East in Hotels and holiday camps.

'Operation Able' Finds Work For The Elderly; Uphill Effort

By ED LION

CHICAGO (UPI) — Bookkeeper Esther Dobrick retired twice, but each time went back to work.

"I just couldn't stay retired," said the 74-year-old woman, shaking her head and frowning. "I want to be useful. I can't just sit and do nothing."

Now she keeps busy handling five separate accounts.

Millions of elderly persons in the United States share Miss Dobrick's feelings, says Shirley Brussell, 57, executive director of Ability Based on Long Experience.

This organizational network, informally known as Operation ABLE, helps about 20 independent non-profit Chicago-area employment agencies for people 45 and older.

One government official estimated there are at least 100 non-profit employment agencies for seniors in the country, Mrs. Brussell said, and efforts are underway to establish a coordinating organization similar to ABLE on a nationwide scale.

"The older worker has a wealth of skills," she said in an interview. "Some want to go back to work to supplement their finances and others have a profound psychological need to be part of the mainstream. It can be a combination of the two.

"People work all their lives thinking (retirement is) a Valhalla, and unless they have outside interests when retirement comes, they have nothing to do."

ABLE maintains a job hotline with participating agencies. It arranges task forces to assess the job market for older persons. It also seeks to destroy the "myths and misconceptions of ageism," said Mrs. Brussell.

"Studies show that older workers are efficient," she said.

She said they do not have high absenteeism and low productivity rates, as many employers claim.

"Some may take more time to learn a particular thing, but once learned they do fine. And they are loyal and dependable since they really want the job and aren't as interested in getting up the ladder."

Many jobs for elderly workers are part-time. For full-time positions, ABLE uses a concept called job sharing — splitting one such job between two persons.

ABLE-affiliated agencies are all non-profit referral services with private and government funding. Many are staffed largely with elderly people.

As an example, the South Suburban Council on Aging even runs its own temporary employment service, Project Reentry.

"It's a work pool," said director Peg Donohue. "These people are skilled and dependable. Why shouldn't they work?"

The pool consists of about 100 persons 55 years of age and up. They can fill positions for accountants, switchboard operators, receptionists, clerical workers — "just about anything," said Mrs. Donohue. "We have a woman who is 83 and can type 100 words a minute — like a machine."

Companies needing temporary workers pay Reentry the workers' salaries, plus a 25 percent add-on charge for expenses. Mrs. Donohue said that is considerably lower than other temporary service charges.

Workers are drawn from the labor pool and paid through the agency, she said.

In Reentry's one and a half years of operation, she said, about 20 temporaries have parlayed their posts into regular jobs. In any given week, Reentry makes between three to 11 placements.

But it is still an uphill battle because many employers are "still caught up in the myths of aging," Mrs. Donohue added.

Mrs. Brussell believes older workers are becoming an endangered species, despite legislation taking effect next year to raise the mandatory retirement age for most workers from 65 to 70. She said this is partly due to employers' reluctance to hire holder workers and to better pensions.

While more than 20 percent of the population falls in the older worker category — 45 or older as defined by the federal government — they make up only three percent of the work force, she said.

"Once retired they find it difficult if not impossible to find other jobs and are faced with financial difficulties due to the inflationary spiral," she said.

Mrs. Brussell cited a 1974 Harris poll that found 31 percent of persons 65 or over — 4.4 million persons — would work if jobs were available.

Mrs. Brussell said she doesn't want older workers to be given special consideration — "just a fair shake based on their qualifications."

Mixed Up On Street Numbers

SAN MARCOS, Calif. (AP) — Three hundred and twenty-one families here will be notified that they do not live where they thought they did.

Someone at City Hall apparently got things a bit messed up when assigning street numbers to new homes. Some homes were given odd numbers when they should have been assigned even numbers and even when they should have been odd.

Bill Gilland, director of the city's Department of Building and Safety, said nobody knew how widespread the problem was until about a year ago when the person who usually assigns house numbers was on vacation and he handled the chore himself.

"I suppose you could laugh over this," he said. "We have asked ourselves, 'Boy, how stupid could we be'?"

And the person who committed the foul-up? "I don't want to give you his name, but he knows who he is," Gilland said.

Sick Trees To Receive Drug

DETROIT (AP) — Thousands of sick fruit trees in Michigan will be getting a dose of a miracle drug usually used to clear up bacterial infections in people.

Acting at the request of the Michigan Department of Agriculture, the federal Environmental Protection Agency authorized emergency use of Terramycin, an antibiotic.

As many as 24,000 peach and cherry trees infected with a malady called "X disease" will receive injections of the drug.

"X disease," so named because its cause puzzled siientists for many years, is produced by a micro-organism similar to bacteria which attack animals. The sickness stunts trees, halts fruit production and kills them within three to five years.

"It's a rarity when a compound used in human medicine is useful on plants also, but this is the case with 'X disease'," said Alan Jones, a Michigan State University plant pathologist who has pioneered research on treatment of the tree malady.

Free Public Library Today Endangered Species

By JAMES V. HEALION

SALISBURY, Conn. (UPI) — Caleb Bingham was a bookish sort but he sounded a battle cry of freedom when he founded the nation's first free public library in this New England village 175 years ago.

Townspeople went him one better in 1810 when they voted an outlay of $100 for books and thus the library became the first tax-supported library in the United States. It was an institution which was to be duplicated in almost every community of any size within a century.

Today the free public library is a species endangered by budget cuts and runaway inflation. With Proposition 13-type measures proliferating, some of the first heads to roll are those of the libraries, considered "luxuries" by many politicans. A committee has been formed to combat the sweep.

According to Whitney North Seymour Jr., of the New York-based National Citizens Committee to Save Our Public Libraries, only 20 per cent of public libraries' money comes from state and federal tax money. Local government still carries 80 percent of the load.

"The result has been inevitable: many cities, towns and counties are cutting back on public library funds and libraries themselves are being forced to cut back on staff, hours and book purchases — just when they should be doing the reverse," the committee said.

The problem is so serious that the White House has scheduled a conference on library and information services next year. Rural libraries, which play a key role in community life, are the hardest hit. Some 297 counties in 19 states, including Washington, Virginia, Kentucky, Mississippi and Iowa, now have no library service at all. Most cities have had to cut staff, salaries, hours of service and purchases of books and periodicals.

Detroit's financial situation precludes the city library system from getting a cent of city funds next year. All of Chicago's bookmobiles are in storage because there are no funds to staff them. Tax support for the Utica, N.Y., library was slashed 50 percent, so that it no longer qualifies for state aid.

Brooklyn Public Library in New York dismissed 48 workers last July and reduced service at 25 branches because of a cut of $1 million in its funding this year. Budget cutbacks in Providence, R. I., forced a wage freeze and dismissal of nine staff members. The Santa Clara County libraries in California have reduced hours, slashed salaries and reduced magazine subscriptions by 40 per cent.

The National Citizens Committee wants the federal and state governments to take up more of the financial slack. They, the committee claims, are part of the tradition kept alive by libraries.

Free access to information keeps America a democracy, and no one knows that better than journalist-author-historian Harrison Salisbury, who recalled a different picture from his days in the Soviet Union.

"There the book is still in chains," said Salisbury, speaking at Salisbury's Scoville Memorial Library during a recent 175th anniversary celebration for its ancestor, the Bingham Library for Youth.

The Soviet equivalent of a card catalogue is a whole series of catalogues. "At the end there will be enormous categories of books, which you cannot get. Names, ages, whole categories of human life. Without a free library you have a society in chains," said Salisbury.

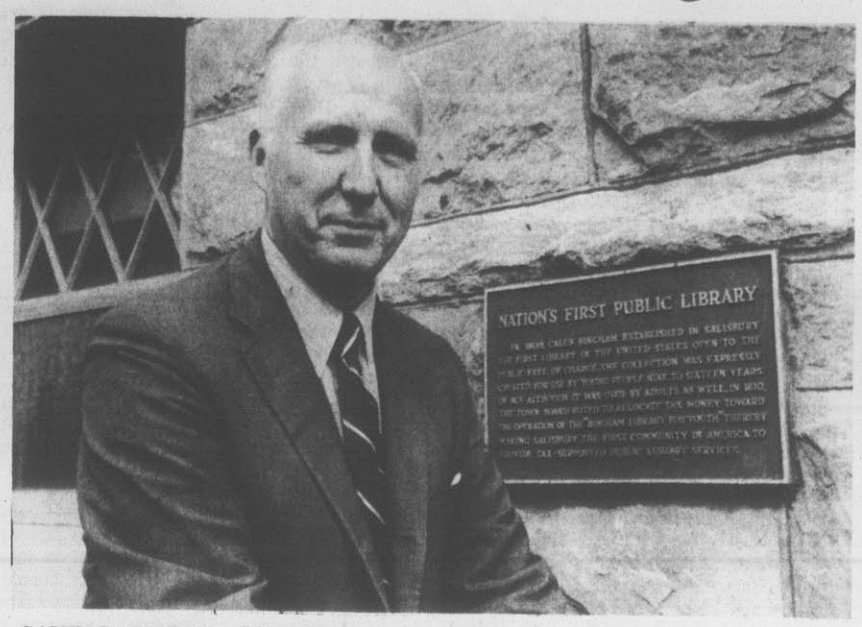

The town of Salisbury had a private library, open to members only, as early as 1771. But Bingham, a Salisbury native, prominent Boston bookseller and educator, had unwillingly led a bookless youth and didn't want youngsters in his home town to do the same.

In 1803, he contributed 150 volumes from his own shelves. They included "Sermons to Young Persons," by the Rev. Philip Dodderidge, 1793; "Natural History of the Bible," Thaddeus Harris, 1793; and "Address to a Young Lady on Her Entrance Into the Polite World," printed in 1796.

Bingham, who was first librarian of the Boston Library Society in 1792, specified the volumes were "for the sole use of the children of Salisbury, from nine to sixteen years of age." The volumes were kept in an obliging minister's house.

In 1810, the town fathers voted money to add to the collection, setting the public library trend in motion. By 1841, the collection numbered almost 500 books. The concept of tax-supported libraries had by then spread to other New England towns.

In 1833, the citizens of Peterborough, N.H., had voted to spend part of the town's school funds to establish a public library to be run by the grocer-postmaster. The Peterborough Library has been operating continuously ever since.

So has the library system's tax structure. It has not changed, even though libraries have changed from repositories of books to outlets for the information explosion.

Thus library supporters launched a campaign to persuade lawmakers to increase library appropriations enough to trigger a funding formula set up by an extension of the Library Services and Construction Act Title I. President Carter signed the five-year extension into law last year.

The law provides that when appropriations for Title I exceed $60 million, a portion of the excess is expressly reserved for major urban resource libraries in cities with more than 100,000 inhabitants. In October, Congress appropriated $62.5 million for the current fiscal year, marking the first time special financial aid has been given city libraries.

Congress has also authorized $150 million of federal aid to public libraries for the 1980 fiscal year, but actual appropriations must still be voted upon.

Bed Jacket Sweater-Look

NEW YORK (UPI) — The latest word on sweaters is shorty, says the December issue of a magazine for teenagers.

Short sweaters are an outgrowth of '30s bed jackets, says Seventeen magazine. They will be mixed, matched and layered: short, multi-textured vests will be worn over cardigans and lacy-knit pullovers under bed jacket sweaters.

Boucle sweaters and matching vests will also be made in short versions and mohair blends will be worn over short boucle boleros and camisoles.

Have Roles In Road Mobility

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cars and buses are the only form of inter-city transportation for some 15,000 cities in the United States, making the nation's roads responsible for most of the personal mobility Americans enjoy.

According to The Road Information Program, highway vehicles accounted for 87 percent of all inter-city travel last year, compared with 13 percent for air, rail and water traffic combined.

'The Beautiful People' Caught In Cocaine Craze

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The party swings. Beautiful people, some as famous as their host, flash toothpaste-ad smiles and drop the names of their latest films.

The clink of ice in glasses melts to a murmur of anticipation. The host, gold chains flashing around a razor-blade necklace, demurely serves up the evening's special treat on an elegant silver tray.

A powerful narcotic inhaled or "snorted" through the nose, cocaine is the most popular drug of abuse in America today, authorities say. And nowhere is it more chic than in the moneyed movie and music colonies of Los Angeles where this champagne-priced drug is easily affordable.

At $100 a gram, coke is one of the most expensive drugs on the street — about the same price as heroin but more readily available and socially acceptable. People who might not use another drug are willing to pay dearly for cocaine because it's not physically addictive and the cocaine "high" is not easily detected by others.

However, psychological dependence can develop, and the lining of the user's nose can be seriously damaged.

"I was engaged to a record producer a few months ago, and it seemed like he always had a cold," says a wealthy Beverly Hills woman. "It didn't dawn on me until months later that he was heavily into coke."

Celebrity cocaine arrests form an odd "Who's Who." Among those arrested for investigation of possessing cocaine have been actresses Linda Blair, Gail Fisher, Anjelica Huston, Louise Lasser, former child star Tommy Rettig, Rolling Stones guitarist Keith Richard and country singer Waylon Jennings.

"The whole town of Hollywood is coked out of its head," actor Robert Blake has said.

"It's a status thing," says Deputy District Attorney John Watson, who has prosecuted Hollywood cocaine cases. "Rock stars, people in the entertainment industry, give it a great deal of prestige."

Cocaine's status appeal is enhanced by expensive paraphernalia. A tiny golden or silver coke spoon, barely the size of a fingernail, is one gadget used to insert cocaine into the nose.

Some users prefer a narrow straw for inhaling. The elite use silver straws, of course. Razor blades are used to chop cocaine into the finest powder possible.

Drug-watchers say today's coke craze is reminiscent of the fad which swept show business 50 years ago, as in the song Cole Porter worte: "I get no kick from cocaine...." In those days, actors on the West Coast and jazz musicians in the East discovered cocaine could help them perform. In 1978, there are whispers that cocaine is affecting Hollywood's business decisions and creative performances.

"I've dealt with two recording executives who are constantly coked up," says a show business insider. "They feel it makes them talk better, function better."

In her autobiography, actress Elizabeth Ashley says: "Now everyone knows, even though they don't dare say so, that cocaine can get you up to do a show. It may not be the best thing for you, but it's far from the worst. And it works. Especially if you're sick and down."

Today's cocaine craze isn't limited to performers. Authorities say glamorous Hollywood coke use is prompting increasing interest among the young and affluent everywhere. Jerry Jensen, West Coast Regional Director of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, he feels heavy coke use by stars sets a bad example.

"Everyone knows someone using cocaine who seems just fine — usually someone they look up to — and they don't believe there's anything wrong with it," says Jensen. "They are idols, and there's no secret some of them are users."

First extracted from the Coca plant in 1880, cocaine smuggled from South America is now available in every major metropolitan area in the nation. "Ten years ago, the only place you'd find cocaine would be at a heroin peddler's place," recalls Capt. Billy Sanderson, chief of the Los Angeles Police Department's Administrative Narcotics Division. "Now, cocaine is everywhere. Drugs have left the ghetto and gone into the suburbs."

Police Sgt. Ted Oglesby, who lectures about drugs, says cocaine has become so fashionable "it's like wearing jeans and boots."

What is this high-priced "high" that so enchants the upper classes?

"Cocaine," says a DEA pamphlet, "is the strongest stimulant of natural origin."

"Cocaine," says a former user, "is the sex drug. I always used it as an aphrodisiac."

Those who sniff cocaine at parties say the drug, absorbed through the mucous membrane lining of the nose, produces euphoria and a sense of well-being. It elevates the pulse and blood pressure, and, as a result, users say, "It makes you dance faster, talk faster."

But behind the laughter and dancing feet there's a darker side.

Cocaine can cause nervousness, irritability and paranoia. A heavy user may have hallucinations that bugs are crawling under his skin. Some have torn themselves bloody trying to extract the bugs.

Because cocaine is inhaled, heavy users can suffer serious nasal damage. In some cases, holes have been burned through the septum which separates the two nostrils.

Says a plastic surgeon who has reconstructed some. "There's not an awful lot that can be done for them."

Until recently, even the experts believed coke was a nonlethal drug. However, in a recent study, the National Institute on Drug Abuse concluded that "accidental deaths due to cocaine, while uncommon, do occur."

NIDA said it found two deaths attributed to snorting. In most documented cases, death came from injecting cocaine intravenously.

Between June 1977 and July 1978, the U.S. Customs Service reported 86 seizures of cocaine at Los Angeles International Airport — a haul of 311.5 pounds worth $78,000,000. Los Angeles is a major port of entry for cocaine smuggled into the United States.

The city's police department, which oversees domestic flights, reports that seizures so far this year are up 142 per cent.

But authorities concede they stop only a fraction of the cocaine being smuggled every day to a growing market. With the drug selling for nearly $3,000 an ounce, it is a multi-million-dollar business.

Smugglers have included mothers with babies, grandmothers, doctors, and a relative of the president of Peru. They smuggle the powdery white drug in everything from false bottom suitcases to hollowed-out water skis.

"For an investment of $10,000 and an airplane ticket, you can buy a kilo of cocaine in South America, bring it back here, cut it and sell it for $2 million," says the DEA's Jensen.

Coke smuggling with its enormous profits is definitely a growing industry. And Sgt. Oglesby gloomily predicts the cocaine craze will continue to soar unless users admit the drug creates psychological dependence close to addiction.

"I've seen so many people who are really hung up on coke," he says. "When they're not doing coke they're in bad shape."

Maybe, he says hopefully, the coke craze will be replaced by a health craze with joggers and health food advocates taking over.

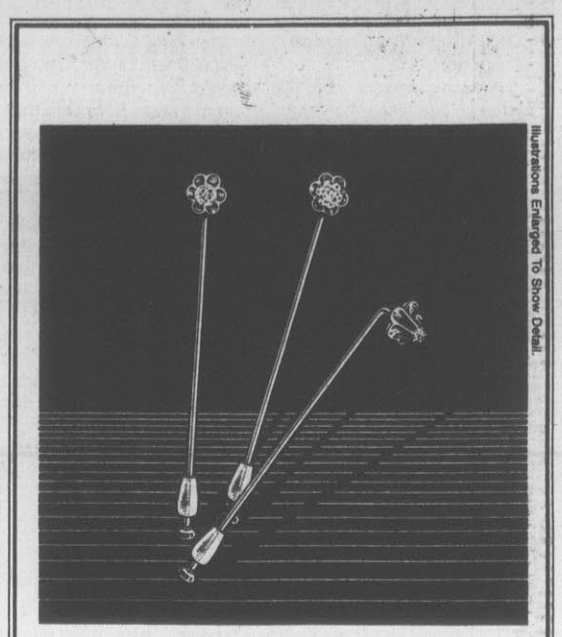

"The only way to stop cocaine or any drug," says Sgt Ogelsby. "will be when it's not cool anymore to be loaded."

Wine Exports Seeing Increase

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Shipments of California wine to market for the first three quarters of 1978 totaled 219.3 million gallons, an increase of 4.5 percent over the same period last year.

John De Luca, president of Wine Institute, says the largest single category increase was in table wine. Over 150 million gallons were shipped, a gain of 12 percent over the first nine months of 1977.

Sparkling wine was also ahead, with 11.3 million gallons shipped, a gain of 6.8 percent. Other categories were down: appetizer and dessert wines, at 26.2 million gallons, dipped 7.1 percent; vermouth and other special flavored wines registered 31.5 million gallons, down 14.6 percent.

Energy Conservation Practiced In Pitt Schools

According to George Laws, energy control officer for Pitt County Schools, the county school system saved over $6,000 in electricity during the first month of the school year.

This cost avoidance figure reflects the energy conservation and energy waste reduction efforts being made by Pitt County principals, teachers and students, with a 16.2 percent reduction in the use of electricity in September over last year.

Laws, who was hired by the county in December of last year, began his work with an initial on-site inspection of the 20-campus system to see patterns of energy abuse, some of which were readily visible.

Laws noted that the four high schools were having the worst problems with energy use.

"It is not primarily personnel, but building problems that aid in the energy abuse," Laws said. All high schools are heated and cooled with electricity.

After conducting the survey, Laws drew up an energy use policy for heating and air conditioning for all schools, which was tentatively approved by the county board of education in the spring of 1978.

An audit of all the available energy bills from July 1977-78 was conducted to target energy problems within the schools. Carl Heath, county maintainance supervisor, had kept a record of all the oil bills, which aided Laws in his audit.

"I try to work with the schools, not against them," said Laws, who stresses a "normal use," not "sacrificial" program in the schools.

"Some may have to sacrifice style for comfort," noted Laws. "Even though use is down, cost is rising, which puts us in a cost avoidance situation."

Laws, an industrial technology graduate from East Carolina University, has had to do a lot of learning on his own about energy conservation.

"It's an education for sure," commented Laws on his work. "It's interesting to be a teacher and a student at the same time. I've learned to be very humble."

Part of Laws' job is to make reports to the schools and the board of education on the energy program.

"I look at gallons and kilowatts and try to convert them into dollars, which is hard to do," explained Laws. "I have to assume the bills are honest and use them as indicators."

An important part of the energy control program is the formation of individual school energy conservation committees to carry out energy surveillance.

"We're not mandating these committees, just encouraging them," Laws stated. "They will be a main vehicle in carrying out the program."

The initial energy conservation committee was formed last December at Bethel Elementary School under the guidance of Mrs. Rachel Welborn, an occupations exploration teacher.

"We had never explored meter reading in our class and said, 'why not?'," explained Mrs. Welborn, whose classes have "on-hands" experience in many professions. " After we explored meter reading, we decided to form the committee."

The committee, which consists of homeroom representatives from grades 3-8 with grades K-2 represented by the fourth grade members, meets every two weeks to dispel apathy about energy use within the school.

"Every seventh and eighth grader drew pictures on how to save energy and Ronnie Ebron, a seventh grader, won the contest for drawing the school energy symbol," said Mrs. Welborn.

Children serve as monitors, reminding teachers to be more energy conscious, patterning themselves after one motto, "Conserve today or we'll be in the dark tomorrow." This monitoring has become vigilant, as George Laws relates a story at Bethel:

"I was talking one day with Roscoe Locke, assistant principal at Bethel, in the school gymnasium when a student came up and asked, 'Why are the lights on?'"

"Locke explained that a class would be in the next few minutes and the student walked away, satisfied," Laws said, laughing.

The A. G. Cox School Student Government has formed its own energy conservation committee, headed by Mrs. Janice Hardee, faculty adviser.

The five-person commmittee, consisting of members Tracy Dibbell, Jeff Cowan, Sophia Gurganus, Regan Spain and Gail Evans, is formulating plans for a poster competition involving all science students at the Winterville school, with prizes to be awarded to the winners.

The committee also has put up posters around the school to remind students to conserve energy. One poster shows the energy use for the school last year as to the present time.

All of the students on the committee wanted to join because of their interest in the school's welfare and as Sophia Gurganus said, "If we don't conserve energy today, there won't be any for us tomorrow."

Regan Spain pointed out that if the school can save on its energy bills, extra money could go toward learning materials.

Other committee plans include obtaining light switch reminders and constant checks on room thermometers for the desired 68 degree room temperature.

Ayden Middle School has also formed an energy committee, with plans to be formulated as the school year progresses.

Laws is proud of the work the schools have shown toward relieving the energy problem, but stresses that effort must be maintained to obtain results.

"Even though we're showing initial improvements, we still have a long way to go," Laws said. "We must remind people that school energy is not free."

Little Town Is A Loafer's Paradise

LOAFERS GLORY, N. C. — There are four wooden chairs in Fred Garland's general store in this mountain community and a whittling bench outside.

Years ago a slightly mad wife was searching for her husband. Some neighbors told her he was down at the general store.

She said the store was nothing but a loafer's glory.

The name stuck.

It's still not there, but Loafers Glory is just two hoots, one holler, and an axle greasin' from the mountain town of Bakersville. Bakersville lies in the shadows of Roan Mountain.

The mountain has been called the world's largest natural garden of purple rhododendron. The Rhododendron Festival here in June is one of the state's top events.

"You know," said Garland, "people used to hang around the general store more. But your old general store is fast becoming a thing of the past."

Garland was born in Loafers Glory, but left when he was 10 years old. He returned some 23 years ago and opened the store.

"This area has been called Loafers Glory for at least 100 years," he said. "You see people taking pictures of the sign any day of the year with the exception of the cold days in winter. Every now and then someone will steal the sign."

There are some 125 people in Loafers Glory.

Garland spent three years in the Pacific during the war and swore he would get back to thse mountains. It took him longer than he expected as he worked in South Carolina for eight years.

"Sooner or later I think everybody who is born in the North Carolina mountains has to come back home. I don't know how to explain it. It just appears that way."

The old store that generated the name of Loafers Glory stood some 50 yards from Garland's store. It was swept away by a flood in 1901.

Garland laments that whittlers aren't as plentiful as they used to be. "Knives are quite expensive now. But we sell one every now and then. Too, people have more to do, and television takes a lot of their time."

Loafers Glory has several other shops — a florist, a beauty shop, drive-in restaurant, to name a few.

"I told somebody the other day that maybe Loafers Glory was getting too big," Garland said with a smile.

While the boys don't gather too much to whittle, they still tell stories about the old days, talk about politics, the weather, and you name it. More than likely an old-timer will talk about the "big flood" or you will hear a tale about a certain bear hunt or a political candidate's visit to Loafers Glory.

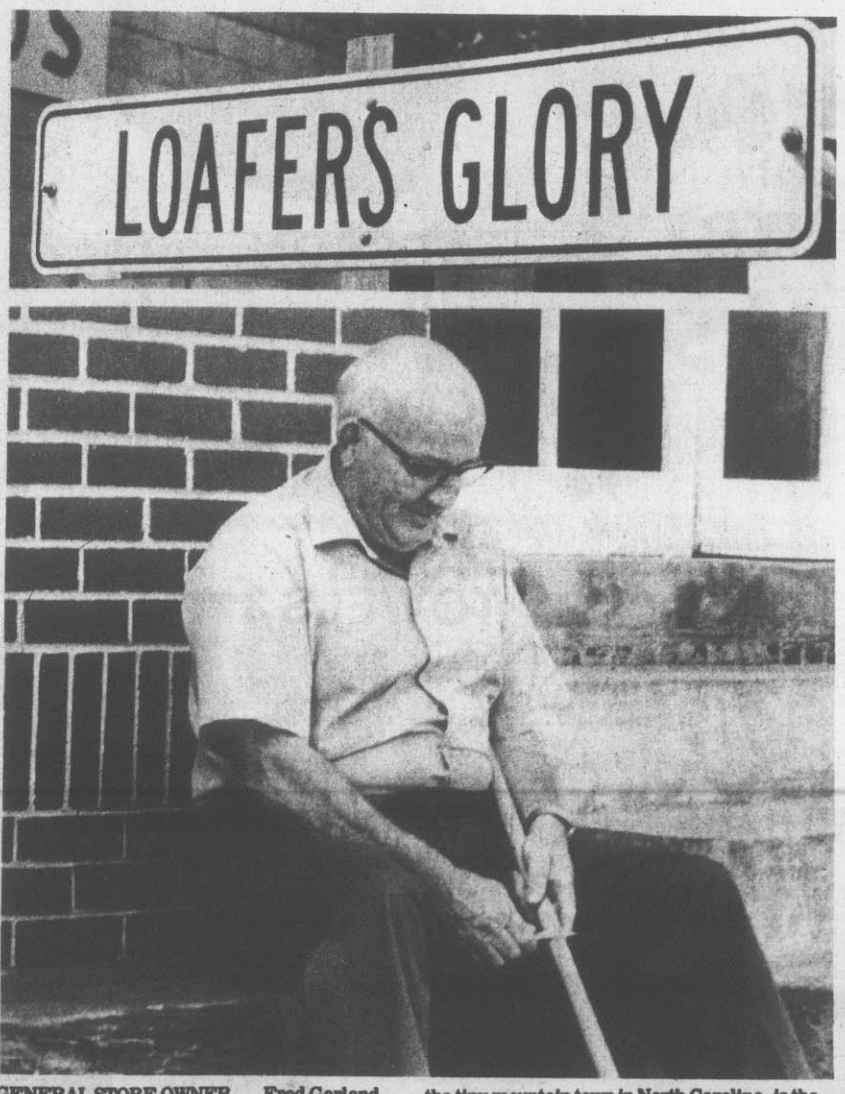

Or perhaps they'll tell you the story about Roan Mountain and its rhododendron. In the days when Catawba Indians inhabited the area, three bloody battles were fought on the mountaintop. Afterwards, according to legend, the flowers became crimson, and the Indians believed these roan-colored flowers were nourished by the blood of the slain warriors.

Garland says he can't recall any of the tall tales. "I don't remember anything specifically, but some of the people who have been here longer than I have can really tell some stories," he declared.

If you are ever in the area, drop by Loafers Glory and chat with Garland. He's a genial and jovial man, who would be more than happy to talk with you.

And, who knows? There might be a couple of husbands down at the store just loafing. Bet they'll tell some tall tales too. One might even be whittling.

Christmas Music Record Selections

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER
United Press International

Christmas comes but once a year with music pleasant to the ear.

This year's selection of Christmas recordings produces just about everything that is needed for the Yuletide. There also are some albums that are not seasonal but appeal to children.

A good starter would be "The Holly and the Ivy" by the Gabrieli Brass, with Martin Starkie, narrator (Deutsche Grammophon 2535 311-10). This is a reissue of an album made 10 years ago when members of the chorus, "The Gentle Power of Song," were in their early 20s. The music ranges from traditional carols, such as "Hark! The Herald Angels Sing" and "Silent Night," to seldom-heard carols such as "The Gloucester Wassail" and "The Sussex Carol."

The sheer beauty of young voices makes "Christmas with The Vienna Choir Boys and Hermann Prey" (RCA ARL12939) an album that should grow on the listener. Only a few of the songs are familiar — "O Tannenbaum" and "Silent Night," for instance. But the boy singers introduce an element of crispness and freshness to each of the tunes. And Prey's rich baritone gives extra flavor.

"The Roger Whittaker Christmas Album" (RCA ANL1-2933) presents the internationally known singer in a good assortment. Most of the music is either composed or arranged by Whittaker, Eric Robertson and Greg Adams. Whittaker's compositions include "Christmas Is Here Again," "Momma Mary," and "Hallelujah It's Christmas." He also offers his own arrangement of Brahms' "Lullabye." This is a worthwhile album because Whittaker's voice is relaxed and somewhat reminiscent of Perry Como in the mid-1950s.

And don't overlook "Elvis Sings for Children and Grownups Too!" (RCA CPL1-2901). There are 11 songs, previously issued in Presley albums, that have been pulled together for this edition. The oldest tunes are those Elvis made with the Jordonaires — "Teddy Bear," "Old Shep," "Five Sleepyheads" and "Puppet on a String." Other songs are "Wooden Heart," "Angel," "Old MacDonald," "How Would You Like to Be," "Cotton Candy Land," "Big Boots" and "Have a Happy."

Since the songs were sung by Elvis, nothing more needs be said.

Life Support Squad Inaugurated Today

Text By Carol Tyer

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FALKLAND — Service by the first life support squad in the state, possibly in the nation, is being inaugurated here today.

The Falkland Life Support Squad has been in the making since May, 1977, and has been undertaken only after extensive training and fund-raising by community residents themselves. It is considered a pilot program in the life support concept by the North Carolina Office of Emergency Services, according to Cay Cross, Office of Emergency Services Area Supervisor.

A life support squad member is certified and equipped to give emergency care to an ill or injured person until an emergency vehicle can be obtained to transport the person to a hospital or other medical facility.

"Most of our members live only three to five minutes away from the people we will serve," Edith Edwards, a member of the squad said. "Rescue squads that might service this area may be as much as 15 to 20 minutes away, depending on the time of day and other circumstances. All of us know this area and most of the people in it and how to get to a specific person's home or place of work quickly.

"The person on duty at any given time is to be in radio contact with a rescue squad so he or she can call for transportation of the patient. Depending on the situation and the location of the patient, we'll call on Farmville, Greenville, Fountain, Bethel and maybe even Pinetops for transportation".

"The essential difference between a life support squad and a volunteer rescue squad is that the life support group does not have an emergency vehicle," said Al Miner, Region Q coordinator of emergency services. Thus, it costs about $5,500 to fully outfit a life support squad and possibly $30,000 to $35,000 to outfit a new rescue squad.

"The Farmville Rescue Squad is our pilot squad," Mrs. Edwards said. "We voted to look to them as our pilot if they would agree and they did. Much of our training has been done under the Farmville group's expert supervision and plans are to continue to train with them at least one evening a month."

Every member of the Falkland squad took the 102-hour Emergency Medical Technician's course and all who will deal directly with patients have successfully passed the stringent written and practical tests that come at the end of this course. "James Wagstaff of the Greenville Rescue Squad really went the second and the third and the fourth mile training us, even to the point of conducting all the EMT sessions out here in our community," Mrs. Edwards said. "He is an excellent teacher."

The squad hopes to start another EMT course for others in the community who might wish to be involved in January.

Fund raising was done last year with a barbecued chicken sale and later a brunswick stew sale. This fall the group went door-to-door asking for financial support. "We have been very much assured through the generous financial support the Falkland community has given us that a life support squad is wanted and needed here," Mrs. Edwards said.

The group is affiliated with the Falkland Volunteer Fire Department and holds its third-Tuesday business meetings in the fire station.

Present members of the squad are Ellen Peaden, captain; Edith Edwards, first lieutenant and delegate to the Pitt County Association of Rescue Squads; Ruel Tyer, second lieutenant and training officer; Cindy Garris, secretary-treasurer; Gene Peaden, chaplain; Luther Hedgepeth, delegate to Pitt County Association of Rescue Squads; Alice Mae Baker; Ed Cobb; Mike Cobb; Edna Corbett; Carolyn Crisp; Charles Crisp; Barbara Harrell; Horace Lawrence; Annette Mayo, Barbara Waters and Waylon Whitley.

Inflation Guidelines: How Much Said Too Much?

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once upon a time, Hershey bars cost a nickel and unless the Presidents of the United States happened to be eating one, he didn't think much about them.

Things change!

Today these candies have become a small symbol of the nation's struggle with inflation, the subject of questioning at a presidential news conference.

It all seemed simple enough at the time. President Carter had recommended standards to limit price and wage increases, and the Hershey Foods Co. raised the price of chocolate bars from 20 cents to a quarter.

Carter's rules were aimed at limiting price increases, and the candy was going up 25 percent. So a reporter wanted to know if the increase, as it appeared, broke the rules.

The size of the candy bar increased, you see. So if you consider the increase in size, the price rise came to 9.4 percent, not 25 percent.

Hershey reported that it increased the price of all its products 13.75 percent in each of the past two years. Carter's rules seek to limit increases to half a percentage point less than the average of those years or to 9.5 percent, whichever is less. The figure under the twoyear average would be 13.25 percent, so the 9.5 percent would apply.

So the chocolate bar hike of 9.4 percent fits within the rules.

But that's just one case and the inflation-fighting standards being developed by the Council on Wage and Price Stability have to apply to thousands of situations.

When Carter announced his anti-inflation program Oct. 24, administration officials talked about limiting price boosts next year to approximately 5.75 percent. The administration expects that figure to be achieved if its standards are followed.

The rules aren't final yet and some questions have to be resolved by top government officials or the president himself. But let's have a look at how things stand right now:

Just as brakes cause your auto to slow, the government wants its standards to slow increases in prices of goods and services.

So the basic rule is that price rises in the fiscal year which started Oct. 1 must be below half a percentage point less than the average price increase of 1976 and 1977.

That means firms that raised their prices more in those years will be allowed larger increases. For example, if a company raised prices 8 percent in 1976 and 12 percent in 1977, the average is 10 percent. Its limit would be 9.5 percent, also the maximum increase allowed. If your average was 15 percent, 9.5 is still the limit.

On the other hand a firm which raised prices 3 percent in 1976 and 5 percent in 1977 would have an average of 4 percent and new increases would be limited to 3.5 percent under the rules.

This average applies across all product lines.

To understand what this means, let's assume a company makes half of its money from turbine generators and half from hairpins. It could increase the price of generators 19 percent, leave the price of hairpins the same, and still comply with the rules.

And there is a special provision for firms which cannot meet this rule, such as companies which didn't raise prices at all in 1976 or 1977 and so don't have anything to decelerate from.

Also, some companies may face uncontrollable cost increases because of things like crop shortages which are not their fault.

So under certain conditions, some firms will be allowed to follow the "profit margin standard." Under that plan, firms could figure out the profit they made in the last three years, average the best two of those years and use that average as a limit.

For example if a firm had profits of 4 percent, 3 percent and 5 percent they would take the 4 and 5, average them and have a 4.5 percent profit limit.

This policy is still under consideration, however, with decisions being made on tightening it up. It is intended only for firms facing severe hardship, not those just uncomfortable with the standards.

Turning to wages, the standard simply states that the increase can't be more than 7 percent a year, including the cost of fringe benefits.

But the rule divides employees into three groups — collective bargaining units; non-union, non-supervisory people; and supervisors. The 7 percent limit is the average for all three. Thus one group could get more than 7 percent and the others less and the average could still meet the rule.

But there is a problem here. There have been big increases in the cost of some fringe benefits such as health insurance and pensions. So the government is considering exempting these cost increases that don't result in increased benefits.

That means if a company has to pay more for its medical plan, that increase doesn't count in the 7 percent limit. But if benefits are increased, those increased costs would count.

A final decision on this hasn't been made yet either and it may also go to the president.

And if your union signs a contract for longer than a year, the rules allow higher benefits for one year if they are balanced by lower ones in another year. For example, a three-year contract with an 8 percent hike the first year, 7 percent the second and 6 percent the third would meet the rule. Contracts signed before Oct. 24 are exempt.

All Depend On Fiber Glass

TOLEDO, OHIO (AP) — Air pollution control filters, printed circuit boards, aircraft flooring and stadium roofs all have one thing in common — fiber glass fabric.

Sales of the fabric may total 239.5 million linear yards in 1979, which would be a 6.7 percent increase over this year's levels, according to a forecast by Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp.

A shrinking decorative fabrics market was blamed on a decline in shipments from 232.2 million linear yards in 1977 to 224.4 million in 1978.

Iowan Views China Farm Drive

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — Chinese farmers have leaped almost overnight into modern agricultural ways but they may have missed benefits of some intermediate steps, a retired Iowa researcher says.

Ray Baker, who headed Pioneer Hybrid International's research department until he retired in 1971, traveled in parts of China and Mongolia for three weeks last summer and compared Chinese corn cultivation with techniques used in Iowa.

"They have jumped from water buffalo to a modern tractor or jumped from the old fashioned corn varieties to the most modern type of corn research, such as cloning," Baker said. "They may be doing things pretty much like they did 50 years ago in the field but on their research they are attempting to clone corn — the most modern method we know of.

"I think they probably are making a mistake. They should do more in between because it might be quite a little while before they see the progress from the cloning research."

"I would say they are much closer to us in cloning than in hybridization. But it's still very experimental in both countries."

Baker toured a 3,000-acre communal farm about 20 miles from Peking where 14,000 persons live and about half work in the fields.

"I would say they raise reasonably good corn," Baker said. "For their lack of commercial fertilizer it looked very good.

"I saw more corn than I did wheat, rice and soybeans put together, in that particular area. It was tall, well-grown and had a good height to it. But it was quite variable in height.

"Compared to our corn it obviously was not hybrid. It was a variety or hybrid mixture so it would not compare with the hybrid corn."

Baker said use of commercial fertilizer would increase China's per-acre yield.

"They use mostly organic fertilizer. On the average, there is only about seven pounds of nitrogen fertilizer available per acre. In this country we use about 100 pounds per acre.

"They could get another bushel per acre for an extra three pounds of nitrogen fertilizer. That would step up their yield to around 30 bushels per acre."

Until recently, Baker said, the Chinese government did not encourage research.

"Researchers had to go out and work in the field and corn breeders did not have much opportunity to do good research. Now they're developing lots of technology, including corn breeding.

"It is no longer required that a college professor spend half his time working as a farm hand. He can spend all or most of his time researching."

Baker, a research specialist at Pioneer for 43 years, said the Chinese "want to start with the very most modern techniques so they can catch up as quickly as possible."

A large work force is a major factor, Baker said, in determining the type of techniques used in farming.

"The big problem in China is they have a lot of people they have to give a job to keep busy. It probably would not be practical for them to rapidly mechanize things as we do.

"About the only machine used is a 15-horsepower roto tiller that is their standard tractor to prepare the seed bed.

"Farmers over there have pretty good living conditions. They have quite comfortable homes, although not pretentious as we know them. They are paid the equivalent of about $200 a year."

Chinese farmers are allowed to retire on a pension at 55 — women at 50. Workers are paid by the commune, which is a basic government division. The commune can set its own production standards and if they exceed those norms the community gets a bonus.

Some farmers are allowed to own their homes and 7 percent of the land is divided among farm peasants so they can raise crops for their own consumption or profit.

"They grow much better crops on that than on the main land because they give it special loving care," Baker said.

Newspapers In Soviet Scarce

By SETH MYDANS

MOSCOW (AP) — The latest shortage in the Soviet Union is newspapers, with people complaining they cannot subscribe to their favorite publications and officials chiding them for trying to read too much.

When subscription lists for 1979 to the country's 8,000 nationwide and local newspapers and 6,862 magazines and journals opened recently, long lines formed early that morning at local post offices where subscriptions were taken.

Already it's too late to subscribe to such favorites as Soviet Sport, Literary Gazette, the colorful morning and evening Moscow papers or almost anything besides the government newspaper Izvestia and the Communist Party daily, Pravda.

The popular magazines Health, Youth, Working Woman, Behind the Wheel, Young Technician and all the magazines of literature are out of the question.

In this nation of 250 million people, the paper with the largest circulation is Pravda, with a nationwide printing of 11 million. The two women's magazines sell just 2 million copies together. The leading youth newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda (or Young Communist Truth) prints 10 million copies a day and receives complaints from outlying regions that it is unobtainable.

The recent interview in the trade union newspaper Trud said it was impossible to increase press runs because of a nationwide paper shortage and suggested that for the national good, people cut down on personal subscriptions and order newspapers "by collectives."

In the interiew, Leonid D. Barashenkov, head of the Communications Ministry's Department of Print Distribution, worried that "some people try to subscribe to more magazines than they can read; they often do this out of habit."

According to official statistics, the average Soviet family subscribes to four newspapers and magazines.

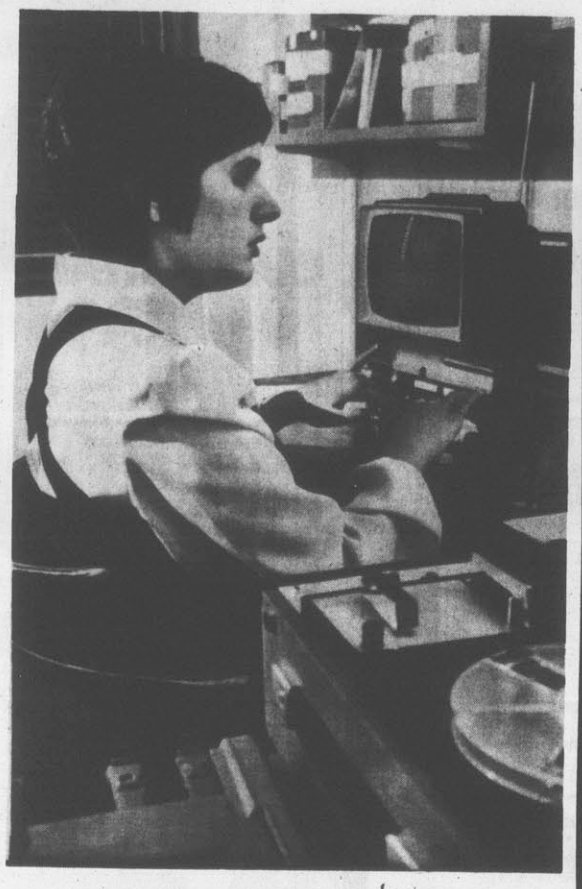

Instead, Barashenkov urged, "People should subscribe by apartment buildings or by workplaces, and pass publications from hand to hand."

Or they can buy them at the nation's 35,000 kiosks, or read them in libraries, clubs and the so-called "red corners" set up for propaganda in factories, schools, barracks and office buildings.

Pravda costs 5 cents an issue, or about $11 a year. Such publications as Communist, Farm Life, the Atheist or Ukrainian Pravda cost $8.40.

In the Soviet Union, where all publications are owned by the state, where there is almost no advertising to bring in funds, and where prices are kept artificially low despite the demand, newspapers and magazines are big money-losers.

The short supplies of paper have been allocated elsewhere, so no matter how many people line up for subscriptions to the popular journal, Foreign Literature, circulation will not rise above the fixed 618,000.

Plan Year-Long Weather Study

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — A one-year global weather experiment involving scientists from scores of nations starts in December to determine the limits of weather forecasting.

The study will also investigate the reasons for changes in climate.

Scientists will use ships, balloons, earth satellites, ocean buoys and high-speed computers in their study of the atmosphere over the land and sea areas of the earth.

Information collected during the weather experiment will help international planning in such fields as agriculture, forestry, water use and environmental protection.

The study is sponsored by the World Meteorological Organization, a United Nations agency.

Storied Spy School Is Leaving Lebanon

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON

LONDON (AP) — Britain is pulling a storied "school for spies" out of the olive groves of Lebanon where gunmen stalk — so ending another relic of empire.

"You could say the violence in the country is making its operation somewhat difficut," a Foreign Office spokesman said of the closing down of the Middle East Center for Arabic Studies, to give it its formal title, after 33 eventful years in the Mideast.

MECAS, which is tranferring to the Foreign Office Language center in London, was branded a British "school for spies" by the late Lebanese leftist leader Kamal Jumblatt, who wanted it closed way back in the early 1960s.

It was where Soviet agents Kim Philby and George Blake mixed with British, American, Commonwealth and Japanese diplomats and businessmen, studied Arabic and Mideastern politics and got acquainted with future local policymakers.

Philby, a Beirut-based journalist who ultimately fled to Moscow when his real role was established, never was an enrolled MECAS student. But he showed up at countless MECAS seminars, parties and receptions. Blake, another British diplomat-turned-spy, was at the center as a trainee.

The Foreign Office first set up MECAS in Jerusalem when Palestine was a British-run mandated territory in 1945. The aim was to train British diplomats in the Arabic language, politics and culture. Then, with the establishment of Israeli statehood in 1948, MECAS was moved to Jordan. Two years later it was relocated on the hillside village of Chemlane, near Beirut, in a setting of terraced olive groves.

Graduates from MECAS include a number of leading British ambassadors who have served with distinction in key Arab capitals. They have won for themselves a reputation for being Arab-oriented and their influence over Britain's Mideastern policies has always been strong, even though those policies have not helped much to preserve Britain's longtime dominance, among Western powers, in the region.

MECAS in its heyday used to have more than 60 enrolled students, a mix of army men, diplomats, businessmen and trusted foreigners including Americans, Japanese and old (meaning white) Commonwealth specialists.

NATURAL STONE, LIGHT CREATE INVITING OUTDOOR AND INDOOR LIFE

By Jerry Bishop

Diamond-light windows, a glowing wood-burning fireplace, and annexed sun deck combine to fashion a living-dining room that sparkles with personality.

The foyer in the Ardan is the separating area for the lower and upper levels of this spacious contemporary home. On the upper level a living room flows into a dining area and onto a sun deck, designed for an easy traffic flow and expanded use of natural light for casual living. Nearby is a U-shaped kitchen, complete with breakfast nook and counter to invite quiet snacks or quick meals. A full bath with double vanity opens onto the hallway and two bedrooms are tucked into the front area of this level. To the rear is the master bedroom, with its own bath and double closets. In addition a linen closet is located in the hall and each of the other bedrooms of course have large closets.

On the lower level of the Ardan, a 21 by 27 foot recreation room is provided. This area is, in essence, free space, to be used by each family to suit its own particular tastes. It can go from ping-pong room to game room to hobby room to conversation corner, or it could provide a sleeping-living area for the boys of the family, or for the girls of the family. The possibilities are really quite limitless.

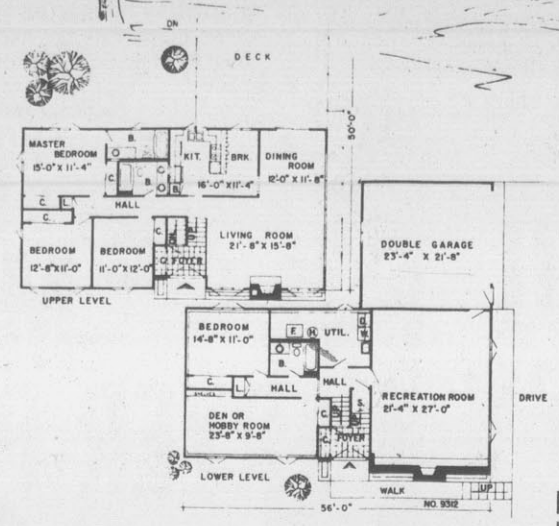

Also on this lower level is a fourth bedroom, a den or hobby room, a separate bath and a utility room. Roomy closets and a linen closet round out the storage.

Each room in the Ardan is designed with lovely windows, with a feeling of air and light and space. And each room is placed into an area of rooms that complement each other.

For example, look at the lower level plan and let your imagination wander. With a few changes, the utility areas could become a kitchen and the whole lower level could be a separate apartment — either for income persons or for a relative. Maybe your son is ready for college. While he can't afford to live on his own, you think having a separate living area would be a valuable experience for him. Give him an apartment in the basement which later can be used by you in a variety of ways.

Or, if your teenagers like to entertain and the noise gets to be too much, consider using the bedroom and den on the lower level as bedrooms for the teenagers, and let the recreation room be their territory for entertaining. That leaves you an entire three bedroom second level for more quiet living.

In addition to the variety of possibilities for styles of living in the "Ardan," the exterior of the home is inviting and relaxing, with natural wood and stone elements combining with glass to provide true lucury with a sense of what is real — elements of nature.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

This must be written in a hurry because it is about the transmission of sound in a house — and engineers in the sound-absorption field are continually conducting tests and making one discovery after another.

Therefore, no matter what you read here and anywhere else, if you plan to have a house built and are concerned about the passage of sound, investigate the latest systems for its control right up to the moment construction starts.

While methods for handling sound are changing, one fact has remained firm throughout the years. It is easier to control the noise inside a house or within a room than it is to keep it out. That's partly because there are many outside noises about which you can do nothing and which, fortunately, are not always persistent. Mostly, though, it's because inside sounds come from you, your family and the things around you and will yield to proper treatment.

Sound waves become what we consider noise when they bounce off walls, ceilings and anything that is non-absorbent. (That's why your voice sounds so powerful in a shower stall.) When the waves strike soft, non-absorbent materials, some of the sounds are muffled. In a room with many of these materials — such as drapes, carpets and upholstered furniture — the sounds are not distracting or annoying. The quieting effects are even more noticeable when there are certain types of sound-absorbent ceilings and walls.

If there are noises in a room above, the acoustical tiles on your ceilings will keep out some of them. But those noises will be more effectively muted if the room upstairs has a thick carpet on the floor. From 15 to 30 percent of the sound will be absorbed and not heard downstairs, depending on the newness, thickness and makeup of the carpeting. If there are other sound-absorbing items in the same room, the sound reverberations will be kept to a minimum.

As for outside noises, you can do something about them, but only to a degree. Air-conditioned houses are easier to keep quiet because the windows are always closed. Double-glass windows, thick rows of shrubs and trees also are effective in keeping out noise.

Thinking about building a house? Consider spending something extra to install walls especially built to absorb sound. There are many ways to do this, so ask your architect or builder to tell you about them, being sure his knowledge is up-to-date. One methods calls for filling the cavities between studs with insulation. Another more effective, is to have the walls built with staggered sets of studs so that wall surfaces are not in direct contact with each other. There also are special materials for use between walls and as walls when sound absorption is important.

(Thirty-five house problems are discussed in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck N.J. 07666.)

GARDEN CLINIC

N.C. State University Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. What are the best conditions that I can give my Christmas poinsettia during the holidays? (W.W., Ahoskie)

A. Place it in the sunniest location in the house. Daily temperatures between 60 and 70 degrees and night temperatures of not less than 50 degrees should help your poinsettia to retain its beauty for four or five weeks. Water when the soil looks and feels dry. Soak the roots thoroughly and discard all excess water. (Kim Powell, extension horticulturist)

Q. I didn't do a good job of applying nitrogen to my fescue lawn last September. It now has dark green streaks and light yellow streaks. Is it too late to apply more nitrogen? (H.W., Reidsville)

A. No. You can apply light amounts — up to one pound of actual nitrogen per 1,000 square feet — of nitrogen in December or even January. The fescue will take this nitrogen up anytime the temperature is above 32 degrees. Even though the top will not grow much, it will turn green and the roots will continue their development. (Carl Blake, extension agronomist)

Q. I have just purchased some land near Bakersville and would like to know if this is a suitable area for growing pecans. The elevation is between 2,500 and 3,000 feet. Pecans are really high priced this year. (N.S., Charlotte)

A. No. North Carolina's record in pecan production is not too good. We rank last among the 11 states that produce this nut. If we have a suitable production area, it is south and east of Raleigh. (Mel Kolbe, extension horticulturist)

Q. Please give me some suggestions for selecting and maintaining a fresh Christmas tree. (H.E., Oxford)

A. Shake or bounce the tree several times before you buy it. If it is fresh, the needles will remain firmly attached. Cut off the butt end of the tree several inches above the original cut. Keep it in water throughout the holidays. A fairly large tree may drink a quart of water daily. Here's another tip on Christmas trees. Consider both your space and decorations before buying. Heavy ornaments require strong, stiff branches. (Kim Powell, extension horticulturist)

Suggested Mini-Tree

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — To keep the old tradition of a Christmas tree in today's often limited space, a group of major growers of indoor foliage in Florida suggests using the Norfolk Island pine to pack a lot of holiday spirit into a small space.

"The Norfolk Island pine is the modern Yule tree," says Bob Scully of the Florida Foliage Producers. "This miniature tropical evergreen captures all of the grace and charm of the traditional tree and brings a festive touch to mantelpieces or serves as an attractive holiday centerpiece."

The tiny trees, many of which are only 18 inches to 3 feet tall, are well suited to small apartments where large trees would not fit, he points out.

Popularized in Victorian times, the pine originated on Norfolk Island, Australia, and today thrives in the sub-tropical climate of Florida, where 44 percent of all indoor foliage plants sold in the United States are grown.

Norfolk Island pines will bring enjoyment long after Christmas, Scully points out, since the pine in its pot fits in among other household foliage and with careful handling will remain green and healthy throughout the year.

Makers Offer Varied Furniture

By ELAINE BARROW
AP Newsfeatures

Has consumerism gained a stronger voice in home furnishings?

More than ever before, manufacturers seem to be reacting to accommodate a wider spectrum of personal tastes.

At the recent Southern Furniture Market in High Point, N.C., the trend could be defined as something for everyone.

Living room and bedroom furniture encompass a choice from 18th Century and Victorian to Traditional and Contemporary.

One exhibitor presented a blending of historical design with the best of today to avoid "faddish" styles and to provide furniture to weather a wide range of taste fluctuations.

Darrell Ferguson, vice president and general manager of Drexel Heritage, says "Classic styling adapted to modern-day needs for smaller scaling and multi-functionality almost assures timeless quality for home furnishings."

An example is a go-with-any-style cocktail table which duplicates the lines of an 18th Century court piece with a beveled glass top and detailed walnut base. Another highlight was an unabashed copy of a Louis XV arm chair.

The firm's upholstery fabrics, however, drew a less rigid distinction between traditional and contemporary patterns. Dramatic contrasts are achieved with creams, corals, grayed greens and gold — with red considered the dominant color.

Emphasis on upholstery fabrics was noted by still another firm. Counting on colors, patterns and textures to set the "mood" in a room, the selection ranges in color from shrimp and celadon green to pewter and electric blue, in florals, stripes and small-patterned French prints. Textures include smooth silks, nubby weaves and leather.

Newest is the suede leather.

"Suede leather is a natural for furniture styling, just as it has been for fashion appearel," says Jack Krayer, president of Montgomery. "It is sophisticated and elegant, yet it also can be casual. And it is extremely durable."

But, he added, "The intrinsic shape of an upholstered piece whill always be the most important part of a buying decision."

So far it would be only speculative to judge how many buying decisions also will be affected by the increasing number of big-name designers — such as Angelo Donghia, John Mascheroni and Ristomatti Rati — moving into the retail market.

At the same time, many manufacturers are relying on the identity of their brand names and adding items to appeal to space economy and other conveniences.

Creating a "total environment" bedroom was the concern of Richard A. Singer, president of Namaco, who says "People spend at least one-third of their lives in their bedroom, yet there's been very little personalized decorating."

His company offers sectional pieces featuring multiple configurations for sleeping as well as seating, headboards with a variety of built-ins and a group of ready-to-assemble modular wall-system units.

Nine new "styled for today beds" are presented, he said, "providing a spectrum of choice dedicated to the proposition that all bedrooms are not equal."

Among 13 British exhibitors, 18th Century, Victorian and Traditional styles prevailed. Reporductions of Chippendale, Hepplewhite and Sheraton were exhibited by several, but a few brought out new living room wall units and bedroom storage units in a contemporary vein.

Chesterfield suites, settees and arm chairs were shown by two firms specializing in leather. Frames were of beech wood and the cowhide was antiqued by hand, buttoned and pleated.

The Southern Market also presented innovations in water beds by American firms. One offered as optional equipment a "baffle" intended to calm the wave action so that two people can sleep in the same bed without the movement of one disturbing the other.

Another offered the option of a heating system which fits into the unit to keep the sleepers warm.

Here's the Answer

Q. — I am getting old and have to admit that I don't make changes very easily. I have always maintained that painting with a roller is never as good as painting with a brush, but after seeing a job with a roller recently I have decided to use one when I paint my living room in a few weeks. Is there anything particular I should know about using a roller that will help me get a good result?

A. — If you haven't bought a roller yet, tell the hardware dealer what you plan to use it for and he will select the proper type of cover. As for using the roller, follow certain fundamentals and you are certain to like the finished job. When loading the roller in the paint tray, remove the excess by rolling it over the higher and drier surface of the tray. Roll back and forth with only the lightest pressure, moving slowly and letting the roller do the work. Use an edging roller or trim brush to paint the edges of the walls and ceiling before using the full roller. Move from a dry area into a wet one, blending the laps slightly. On a wall, roll upward with even strokes at first; you can vary the direction after that, but make the first strokes upward. And don't spin the roller at the end of a stroke or you'll get sprayed.

Q. — I have to remove some resilient floor tiles. I know this can be done by heating the tiles or by chipping them out after applying dry ice to them. Frankly, I am a bit afraid to try either method, because I know extra care must be exerted. Is there any other way these tiles can be lifted from the floor?

A. — Yes, but it requires a lot of elbow grease. Buy or rent a tile scraper, which consists of a blade on a long handle, a kind of giant putty knife. Insert the scraper blade between the seams of two adjoining tiles and force it downward and slightly sideways until one of the tiles is loosened a bit. From then on it's a case of scraping off the tiles and cement as you might scrape peeling paint from the side of a house. It's not a good idea to use this method in the unlikely possibility the tiles are cemented to a wood subfloor.

Q. — What kind of cement must be used to install asphalt tiles on a smooth concrete floor? I have some cement left over from a vinyl tile floor I put down a couple of years ago. Can that be used?

A. — Not likely. Asphalt tiles generally require a tar-like adhesive that differs from the cement used for vinyl tiles. The store where you purchase the tiles will give you the proper adhesive, but be sure to state that the installation is on concrete.

(The techniques of putting down resilient floor tiles are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Installing Floor Tiles," available by ending 35 cents and a long, STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743.)

New Generator For The Home

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — New gasoline-powered home standby generators can produce enough power during brownouts, blackouts or other energy shortages to run a home's heating system, a refrigerator and a limited number of lights and electrical appliances.

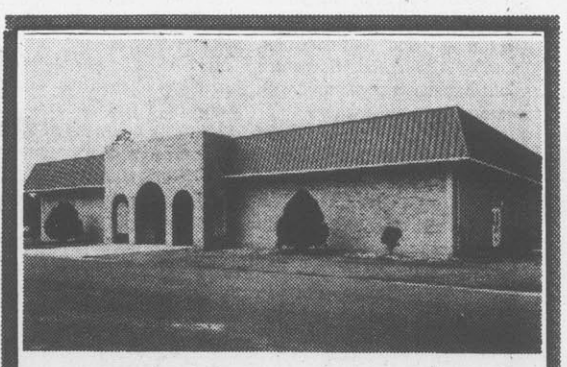

One self-contained unit that costs about $2,000 installed must be prewired into a home's electrical system by a licensed electrician.

Friend Of Wolf Fights Against Extinction

By BOB INGLE
Associated Press Writer

GARDINER, Wash. (AP) — Civilization pushed the buffalo wolf to virtual extinction in the wild. Now it threatens the existence of a band of those that remain, some of whom have had to move once already.

Survivors of the otherwise extinct subspecies that once roamed the plains preying on the American bison are gathered here on the Olympic Peninsula under the loving, watchful eye of Jack Lynch.

Their ancestors ran into trouble when the bison were killed off and they turned to cattle for food. The buffalo wolves then went the way of their namesake as the traps and poison and bounty hunters took their toll.

A few were saved by Dr. E. H. McCleery of Pennsylvania. Their descendants and about six other subspecies live here in the Pacific Wolf Preserve.

The 40-acre preserve sits high on a hillside overlooking beautiful Discovery Bay. The surrounding area is a good location for a condominium or a tract housing project.

Some developers are already making plans and that would require sewage and water lines — and higher tax levies. Lynch said if it came he couldn't afford it.

Lynch said as a first defense he was taking the offense — trying to get fellow land-owners to oppose the sewage and water.

Lynch and his wolves have seen hard times before. In 1977, years of plans went down the drain when private foundation money promised for a 400-acre preserve was lost. Also gone was $30,000 out-of-pocket expenses.

He bounced back with the Adopt-A-Wolf program to help pay for the animals' food. Under it people donate $20 a month to the Dr. E. H. McCleery Lobo Wolf Foundation, the non-profit organization that finances the preserve.

Those who adopt a wolf get to see it without paying the $2 admission fee — and many do come from all over the United States.

Lynch said the people who had adopted about two-thirds of the 150 wolves honored their pledges. He said the $20 took care of about half a wolf's food for a month. Farmers donate animals that die of natural causes and law officers give Lynch traffic-killed deer.

As for the developers, ironically, the wolf man is no stranger to advancing civilization, having been a leader of the charge.

"I was in urban renewal in Milwaukee. We rebuilt it. I put in every bridge between Milwaukee and Chicago on Highway 41. We put a chunk of highway through some of the nicest parts of the country."

That made Lynch a wealthy man. He thought he was happy with life and his cars, houses, airplane, investments and savings until 1960, when he visited the then 94-year-old Dr. McCleery in Kane, Pa. There he saw his first wolf.

"How beautiful," he recalled, an emotional choking in his voice even after 18 years. "They had magnificent winter coats and they looked you straight in the eye with an honest inquisitiveness... they walked with a kind of dignity that we always feel man should have."

As he walks along the huge enclosures he and a friend from Pennsylvania built by hand, he speaks to the animals — calling them by name.

Wolves have had a bad press for years, he says, noting it was a wolf that blew down the Three Little Pigs' homes and a wolf that did in Little Red Riding Hood's grandma. Then there are the cliches, such as keeping the wolf from the door. Spiderman is a hero. Wolfman is something to be feared.

Lynch knows the Adopt-AWolf program can't go on forever. "Eventually, people will feel they have met their responsibility to us." He sold his holdings when he decided to give up his job for the wolves. He says his money has been invested in the animals.

Lynch hopes to get a grant from some of the foundations or trusts, then get a few thousand acres of land fence -and move half his wolves there so they would be back in the wild again.

Lynch also wants to set up a laboratory and a dormitory on his property so students can study the animals. Some schools already have exchange programs, where a student spends a quarter with Lynch and his wife, Marjorie.

More Men In Nursing Roles

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (UPI) — The notion that nurses are necessarily young females is dying slowly but steadily on two campuses of Rutgers University.

At the College of Nursing at the State University's Newark campus, men make up five percent of the 603 nursing students; at the Department of Nursing at the Camden College of Arts and Sciences, 8.5 percent of 237 nursing majors are men.

"While this number may seem insignificant, only two percent of the nurses in the nation are male," says Dr. Alice C. Boehret, chairwoman of the nursing department at Camden.

The male students tend to be older than the general student body and choose the field because of the job opportunities, she said.

Friend Salutes Fellow Writer

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — "If I don't make it," a seriously ill James Jones told friend and fellow writer Willie Morris, "you are going to have to help me out."

Jones didn't make it. He died in 1977, agonizingly close to finishing "Whistle," the novel he had thought about and worked on for more than 30 years and which he had felt would be the capstone of his artistic career.

WILLIE MORRIS

"He was struggling against death to finish that book," says Morris in his soft Southern accent. "He only missed by about 3½ chapters."

Close friends and neighbors, they lived a few miles from each other on New York's Long Island. Morris says Jones "loved to read from his own work, so I became very familiar with 'Whistle.'"

Using notes he had taken as he sat by Jones' hospital bed and listened to the novelist "as he sketched in considerable detail the remaining chapters" as well as tapes Jones had made, Morris finished "Whistle" for his friend, who had died at 55 of a heart condition.

"It was a personal and professional obligation," says Morris. "I didn't try to write the book the way he would have. I laid out his intentions very factually and with no tendency to dramatize. No self-respecting writer would intrude on another writer's sensibility in that regard."

Morris, who now tells of his relationship with Jones and his family as well as of Jones' life in "James Jones: A Friendship," says he has no doubt Jones' work will be remembered.

"I think just on the basis of this war fiction — 'From Here to Eternity,' 'The Thin Red Line,' and 'Whistle' — that posterity is going to regard these books with enormous respect. I don't think it is too farfetched to say that many years from now people are going to be reading Jones' fiction of World War II to see what it really was like for human beings during those years.

Morris, an amiable 43-yearold, is a native of Yazoo City, Miss., currently living at Bridgehampton, N.Y., but "I consider myself to be a Southerner."

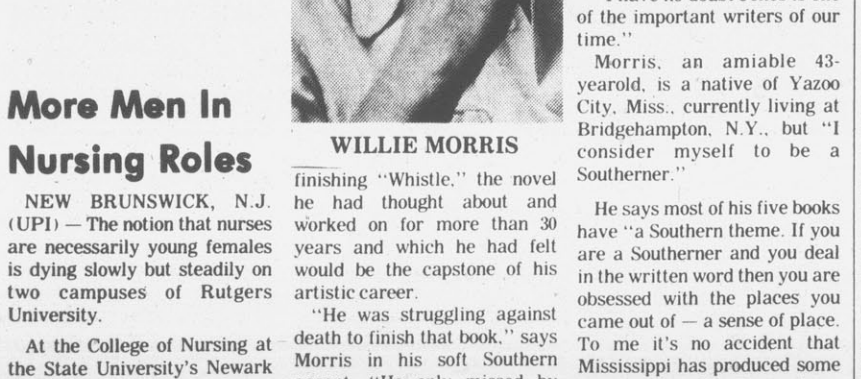

He says most of his five books have "a Southern theme. If you are a Southerner and you deal in the written word then you are obsessed with the places you came out of — a sense of place. To me it's no accident that Mississippi has produced some of the great literature of our country. Remember, we had a fellow named William Faulkner?

"I've never really left the South," Morris says with a smile. "I came to New York City in 1963 to work for Harper's magazine. I was there for about 10 years, about four of them as editor-in-chief."

"I give lectures, I write books, I do occasional magazine pieces in likely and unlikely places," Morris says, "and I'm making it."

The Metropolitan Museum of Art

FOR DIANA VREELAND, Special Consultant to the Costume Institute of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York City

What do you consider to be the most important fashion development since the War? — T.B., Albany, N.Y.

● Perhaps it was the bikini. It came out of World War II via the Mediterranean and was probably the first publicly worn garment to reveal every line of the body, encouraging more people to develop the strong life lines that men and women today consider the way they want to look, both in the water and in the street. Although the clothes in the late 40s were quite rigid, the New Look had taken over; the time had come when strong, well-formed bodies became essential. This gave rise to the clothes of today, clothes with no rigidity at all, which, in many cases, are covering bodies that would never have been so strong and graceful were it not for the original inspiration of the bikini.

Freddie Mercury

John Deacon

Roger Taylor

Brian May

Christopher Hopper/Elektra Records

FOR THE ASK EDITOR

I couldn't believe my ears when I heard that the English rock group, Queen, had recorded its latest album in the nude. Did it? — B.E., Winona, Minn.

● What really happened was that the group sponsored a nude bicycle race at London's Wimbledon Stadium, in which 55 ladies of assorted shapes and sizes competed. Queen thought that would be a marvelous way to promote its new single (Freddie Mercury's "Bicycle Race" and Brian May's "Fat Bottomed Girls"). The picture on one side of the disc sleeve shows one of those ladies riding a bike, wearing an "airbrushed" bikini. Right after that, at Freddie's birthday party, group members continued "X-rated" activities by jumping in a pool in their fineries, where they proceeded to disrobe, swim, then emerge naked. Another eccentricity: the group travels with a pool table.

FOR SAM SNEAD, golfer

People say that your love of money exceeds your love of golf. True? — E.N., Joliet, Ill.

● Jokers enjoy ribbing me about my willingness to hop anywhere a golf dollar shows its head. Today I'm involved with golf schools and clinics and endorsements and such. All this means I work 16 hours a day, mostly, thank the Lord, with a golf club in my hands — which is what keeps the old hillbilly young.

FOR CHERYL LADD, star of ABC-TV's Charlie's Angels

● You've got to be kidding. Where did you hear that one? Fact is, Jordan is named after a character in the film The Great Gatsby, in which my father-in-law (the late Alan Ladd) appeared in 1949. Alan and I fell in love with the name and decided that's what we'd call our child.

FOR VALERIE BERTINELLI, star of CBS-TV's One Day at a Time

Do you think you'd have turned to acting had your parents not pushed you into it? — E.P., Biloxi, Miss.

● They never pushed me into it. What they did was send me to drama school. They were worried because I was so shy and introverted, and they felt acting might cure me of all that. I never wanted to be an actress, and those first lessons were agonizing. But then I grew to enjoy it.

FOR SONNY GROSSO, author of Point Blank

● I have always thought in many ways that the Internal Affairs Divisions (they investigate policy brutality and behavior) often seem to assume that every cop is guilty until proven innocent. They routinely align themselves with the criminal. In the old days, they would align themselves with the cop.

FOR LAWRENCE E. TAYLOR, Coordinator of Public Information, Smithsonian Institution

What is in the survival kit that belonged to Charles Lindbergh? — Louise Voorhees, West Trenton, N.J.

● This historic canvas kit bag contains a ball of string, fishing line and a hook, needle, hacksaw blade, inflatable flotation cushion, three flares, three cans of "K"-ration chocolate and a matchbox, with the matches still inside. The items are in good condition because the bag was kept for almost 50 years by Lindbergh's friend, aeronautics engineer Kenneth Lane.

FOR OLIVE OSMOND, mother of Donny and Marie

I was surprised to hear that your family never leaves the house on Monday nights. Why? — W.N., Kankakee, Ill.

● That's partially true. We're Mormons, and Monday night is Family Night with all Mormons. The practice started when our Church recommended that no official meetings should be scheduled then because they felt one day should be set apart for family members to spend together. But it doesn't matter where they go as long as they go together.

PRO AND CON

Should There Be A Federally Legislated Ceiling On Hospital Costs?

PRO Sen. Gaylord Nelson (D-Wis.), member of two Senate subcommittees on health

The hospital industry helped defeat my cost-containment bill this year, but we won't give up this critical fight. Medical costs have almost tripled in the United States since 1970. At least 40 percent of the national medical bill now goes for hospital costs, which have risen twice as fast as most prices. Whether the bills are paid by the Government through Medicare/Medicaid or by private insurance, the money comes straight out of wage earners' pockets. The hospital industry knows it can cut excess spending without sacrificing quality care. Hospital cost-containment legislation will simply guarantee that hospitals stay within the cost-cutting guidelines set by hospitals themselves in 1977.

CON Larry Martin, assoc. gen. director, Massachusetts General Hospital

A legislative ceiling on hospital costs would be disruptive to the delivery of health care on a comparable basis throughout the country. By definition, a ceiling means a restriction of expenditures with an eventual reduction of services or quality of the existing services. Even this could be accepted if that is the will of the public, but a legislative ceiling does not consider the relative position of the provider (i.e., efficient, lean operation vs. inefficient, extravagant operation) when such a program is initiated. In addition, none of the proposed cost-containment ceilings adequately addresses the difference in providers with respect to size, teaching function, emergency facilities and salary costs.

CRAZYLEGS!

Who has the best moves on a football field? Well, folks, it's not Tony Dorsett.

By Suzy Kalter

Pity the football widows of America, those ignored women who suffer in silence while husbands and loved ones remain riveted to television sets on Saturdays, Sundays, Mondays and sometimes even Thursdays each week. Until this year, the more or less estranged wives thought they were losing their men to an oblate spheroid. Now they've discovered that all that bounces is not pigskin as the NFL cheerleaders bring a new dimension to football-viewing.

The Dallas Cowboys' Cheerleaders (formerly The Dallas Cowgirls), it appears, take the blame and the fame as the first cheerleading team to make national news and to be the inspiration for the other teams. Exposed to 12 million people at last year's Superbowl game, the Dallas girls have since been labeled the 36 most beautiful girls in Texas and have even starred in their own television special. They are the original from which all the copies have been made.

The Cowboys' Cheerleaders were introduced back in 1972 when the Cowboys' general manager, Tex Schramm, rounded up eight girls from a local dance studio to appear at home games as a more sophisticated version of the virginal cheerleaders formerly associated with football and fall. While there were 250 candidates for the squad in 1976, over one thousand women tried out this past spring for one of 36 positions, 32 starters and four back-up reserves (in case the girls catch cold?).

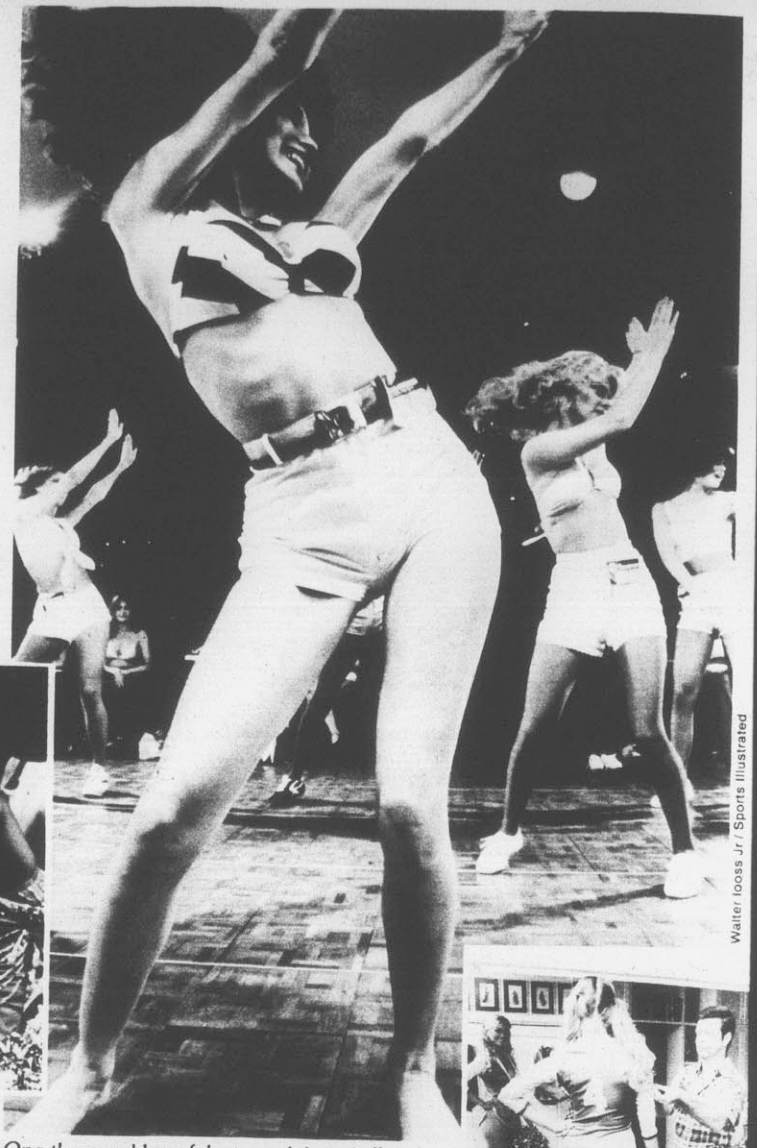

And girls are what we're talking about. Three gay men were banned from tryouts for the Los Angeles Rams team — they threatened a discrimination suit but were barred nonetheless — and one older lady has joined the team in an official unofficial manner. She is 200-pounder, 58-year-old five-footer Phyllis Wagner, who auditioned with more then 800 other hopefuls not in bikini but in a large "Every Inch a Woman" T-shirt, stretched-out black leotard and baggy tights. "I fit the eligibility standards" says Ms. Wagner, a former WAC, "I have everything in the right places. I may have a little more of it than the other girls, but who cares?"

Just what the girls have, which Phyllis has a bit more of, does matter to the fans — and the team managers. Both the Redskins cheerleaders and the Rams cheerleaders have been severely criticized for revealing a bit too much. While the diamond cut-out midriff and navel on the Redskinettes brought cheers and whistles from the admiring crowd, the home office was not pleased. The L.A. girls had trouble staying within the confines of their one-shoulder skating skirts with the circle cut out over the cleavage, and more than one girl was ruled offsides. The result: the blue-beaded costumes were junked and a new set commissioned.

Walter Iooss Jr / Sports Illustrated

"I might have started something rotten here," admits Pete Menefee, 35, the designer chosen to redress the Rams Cheerleaders. "I did the Pony Express outfits, and they were really glitzed up. People have forgotten that these are cheerleaders and not showgirls." When the Broncos and station KETV, their sponsors, came to Menefee in the summer of 1977, they specifically asked for him to create Las Vegas-style outfits with a Western motif. Menefee was the perfect candidate for the job. An associate of Bob Mackie's and a Hollywood costumer, he also has designed thousands of costumes for the MGM Grand's showgirl extravaganza, Hello Hollywood, Hello. He gave the Broncos exactly what they wanted: two sets of outfits, one for warm weather and one for cold, replete with mirrors, spangles, beads and fringe. The cost alone for the outfits was more than $1,000 per girl.

Then the domino effect saw almost every other team trying to outdo the Pony Express with their own interpretations of what Cher might wear if she were an NFL cheerleader.

Except the Rams. Already burned by the bad press they received with their first set of duds, the Rams asked Menefee to do something "tasteful, fresh, young and wholesome." His original idea was a sequin-encrusted football jersey in blue and gold, complete with name and number of each girl in paillettes. The expense of the hand beading would have made the jerseys cost out at about $1,200 a piece, way over the Rams' budget, so Menefee adapted his design to a satin spandex jersey with a few hand-punched mirrors. But no bust pads. Menefee had to sew pads into the Pony Express winter outfits because they were so heavily insulated for cold weather that some of the girls' finer features needed finessing.

"I haven't got a whole lot up top," confides Elizabeth Caleca, 33-25-35, but when I wear a push-up bra under my little uniform, why, I'm a different woman." Caleca didn't need the push-up bra when she posed for Playboy "with a beige chiffon dress that kept coming off." She was among the four San Diego Chargettes (now defunct) asked to pose for Playboy, but the only one who appeared nude. Consequently, she and the entire team were dismissed.

Designer Pete Menefee fits Dee Kaye's shiny spandex jersey.

Similarly, 22 year-old Andrea Mann was let go by the Baltimore Colts for posing nude in the same lay-out. At least Ms. Mann wasn't fired from her job with the U.S. Postal Service. Members of the Pony Express were asked to sign contracts limiting their public appearances and restricting personal use of the team name for profit. Pam Stockhaus, manager of the 32-woman squad, has announced that any girl whose picture turns up in Playboy will be asked to leave.

All this controversy has only made the girls more popular with the fans, who have found their personal need for sex and violence now fulfilled in the space of a few hours' viewing time. It won't go unnoticed. You can soon expect your children, who used to want to grow up to be doctors, firemen and Charlie's Angels, to now have a new goal in life — they'll want to be NFL cheerleaders. You can bet your bottom fringe on it. FW

Suzy Kalter is an L.A.-based writer for People magazine and was too tall to be a cheerleader.

IF THE DOCTOR TELLS YOU "IT'S ALL IN YOUR HEAD," THERE'S A GOOD CHANCE HE'S WRONG

By Dodi Schultz

A 20-year-old bank teller complains of uncontrollable tremors occurring the morning after he's gone disco-dancing and spent the night with his girfriend. Diagnosis: fears of sexual inadequacy.

A 28-year-old man is brought to a hospital emergency room in a bizarre state: he is confused, babbling irrationally. Diagnosis: acute schizophrenia.

A prelaw student, the son of a well-known attorney, reports increasingly severe nausea and headaches; questioned, he admits that he selected his field of study only under parental pressure. Diagnosis: stress reflecting suppressed hostility.

A young woman tells her internist of repeated attacks of palpitations, nervousness and sweating that take place on social occasions and disappear the next morning. Diagnosis: severe anxiety.

A 40-year-old salesman confides to his family doctor that his sexual performance has been slipping. Diagnosis: unresolved emotional conflicts suggesting the need for extensive psychotherapy.

A middle-aged man describes to his physician intermittent episodes of pounding heart, chest pains and blurred vision. Heart problems, hypoglycemia, peptic ulcer and a dozen other possibilities are ruled out. Diagnosis: neurosis.

Every one of these people is real. Every one was given a full physical examination and an exhaustive battery of diagnostic tests before the diagnosis was reached. Every single one of those diagnoses was wrong.

The teller turned out to be afflicted with a form of epilepsy, easily controlled by regular medication. The "schizophrenic" had experienced a hypersensitive reaction to a medication prescribed for nausea. The lawyer's son was found to have a brain tumor — fortunately, fully operable. The young woman's "nervous" attacks, manifestations of the "Chinese restaurant syndrome," ceased when she learned to shun foods laden with monosodium glutamate. Special tests of the victim of "impotence" revealed dysfunction caused by nerve degeneration associated with longstanding diabetes, and his problem was solved by a new surgical technique using silicone implants. The sixth patient's "neurosis" was actually chronic cervical syndrome — an irritation of nerve roots in the upper spine, from an old football injury; it responded well to traction and muscle relaxants.

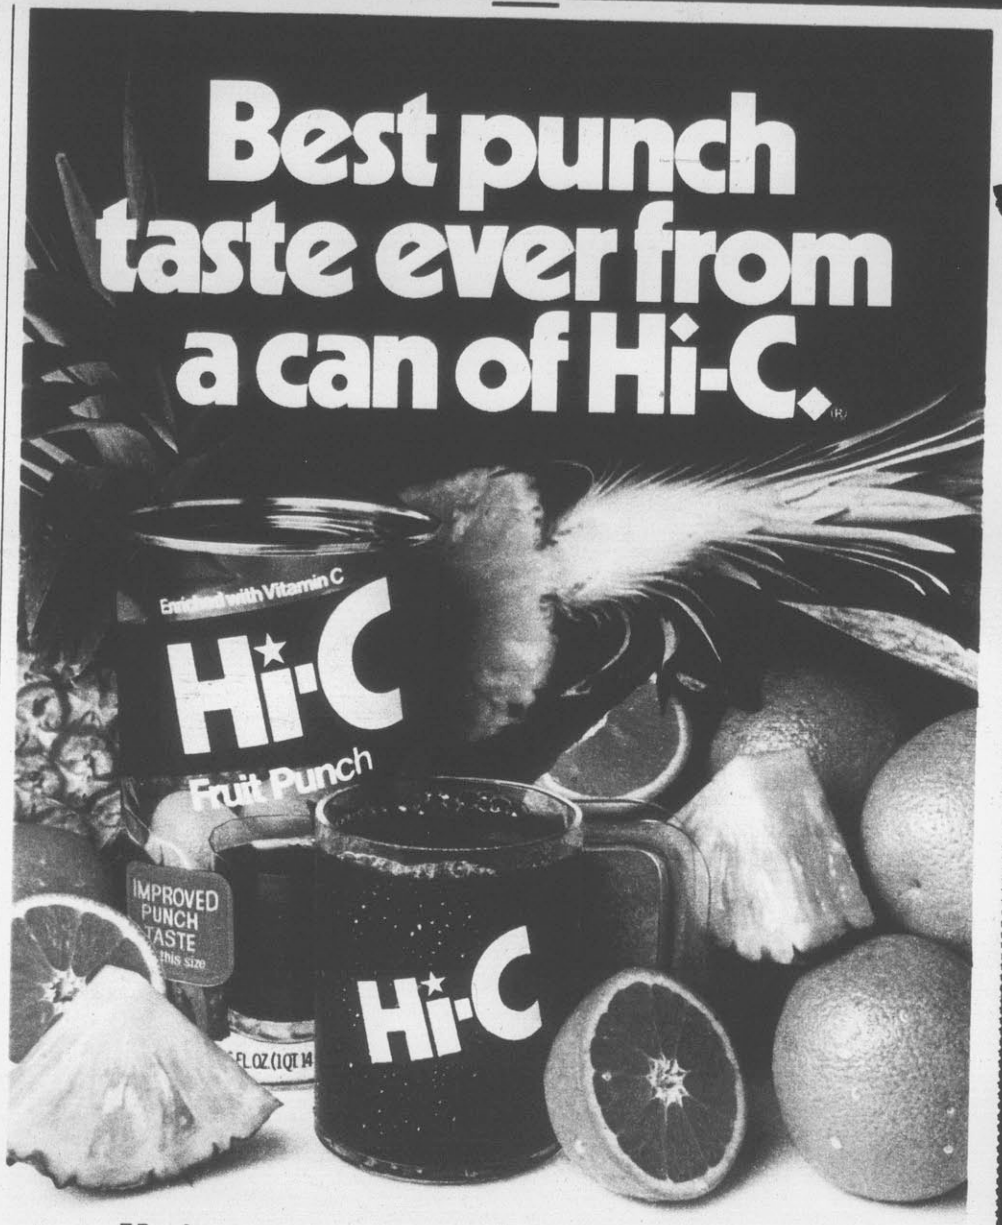

Only in the past couple of years has medicine begun to realize: (a) the fact that our emotions can trigger physical symptoms doesn't exclude the possibility of physical explanations for such symptoms and (b) that a clearcut physical cause can't be found doesn't mean the problem is necessarily all in the patient's head.

Part of the difficulty has arisen from doctors' understandable — and usually correct — assumption that, as one psychologist with whom we spoke put it, "common is common, and rare is rare."

Medical advances are now beginning to reveal more and more physical culprits behind problems doctors have been wont to pigeonhole as psychosomatic. But sleep-laboratory techniques, which can gauge the involuntary nighttime erections that all men normally experience, can now separate the physiological from the psychological. Further, more and more physical causes have now been documented, including side effects of many common medications. Probably the most widespread is diabetes, which can often cause the nerve deterioration that was behind the salesman's problem. All in all, experts now estimate that well over half of such ills stem from physical causes.

Word of these diagnostic pitfalls is filtering out slowly but surely to physicians, and fewer doctors now are likely to rush to an "all in your head" conclusion. But it's very much in the public interest for patients to be aware of them, as well — since such an erroneous assumption can lead to inappropriate (and sometimes expensive) treatment that won't really help — or to no treatment at all. CHUCK SCARBOROUGH IS HARDLY A YOUNG TED BAXTER

Westchester Rockland Newspapers

Family portrait: Chuck with wife Linda and their son Chad, 20 months

By Pam Lambert

If Chuck Scarborough didn't exist, NBC's publicity department probably would have invented him. And perhaps it did. On the leading-man face of it, Scarborough is too good to be true: blond, good-looking and so clean-cut that the worst personal vice he can think of is not jogging. "I can't believe I'm this clean; I'm so boring," he jokes.

But there's a lot more to Scarborough than meets the eye. At the ripe old age of 35, the Emmy award-winning anchorman has taught electronics in the Air Force, been an engineer for ITT, earned a commercial pilot's license — and has just written a briskly selling thriller, Stryker. And in his future is another novel and, he hopes, "the final step up" to becoming a regular network anchor.

As befits a celebrity earning over $200,000 a year, Scarborough, his wife Linda, and their 20-month-old son Chad, live in a Westchester house he once described as "looming arrogantly over the attics of our square-boxed neighbors in all its Frank Lloyd Wrightian, cantilevered, decked, glassed splendor."

The house on the hill is a long way from WLOX-TV in Biloxi, Mississippi, the station where Scarborough began his broadcasting career. "I couldn't get hired on cable television today with the skills I had then," Scarborough says. "At that point the station had no news department, and we were doing simulated news, rip-and-read wire stuff."

After a stint at another Mississippi station, Scarborough was on his way to the big leagues. Next stop was Atlanta, where he won six Associated Press awards in two years, then Boston, before joining NBC in New York.

Scarborough says he found the transition to anchorman very alluring. "There are all kinds of benefits that accrue to people who are on television," says Scarborough. "I'm sure even Frank Perdue has groupies.

"Not that I needed a herd of groupies," Scarborough laughs, "but you get better seats in restaurants, all of the accoutrements of 'celebrity status' no matter what you are — put a monkey on TV enough and he'd get the same treatment... It's attractive and you begin, by virtue of the system, to have more influence over the entire news operation."

Although he jokes about groupies, Scarborough, unlike the character in his book, is no "media stud." His looks have prompted NBC staffers to paste suggestive newspaper personal ads on his office door, but friends and associates agree that he is a devoted family man.

However, it was indirectly courtesy of his television career that Scarborough met his wife, a former airline stewardess. As he tells it, Scarborough was covering an Atlanta bank robbery when he asked a female reporter from a rival station for a date. The reporter politely declined — but said she had a roommate Scarborough might be interested in. "I guess we have some sticky-fingered citizen to thank for our meeting," he says.

Scarborough says that he doesn't mind tarnishing his "Mr. Clean" image with Stryker, whose sex-and-violence scenes "delve into areas all-American good guys are supposed to stay out of."

"You have to remember, though, that I spent much of my television career as a street reporter and have seen most of the vile acts there are," Scarborough says. "When I was in Boston, there was a series of hitchhike murders in which young women were picked up by this fiend who worked his will on them and left them stabbed. I was on the scene just after one of the victims had been found. Some of these things still haunt me."

Scarborough's book, which has prompted inquiries from a few studios, has also earned him new-found respect from those who view all anchormen as graduates of the Ted Baxter, blow-dry school of journalism. "I don't really know what my image is," Scarborough says, "but I would hope it's not one of a superificial guy prattling on about events."

While Scarborough is concerned about his image, his contentment is not dependent on what anyone else thinks. He is satisfied with the hand life has dealt him. "One of the spinoff benefits of a television career is that you can live your fantasies," Scarborough says. "I wanted to fly a jet fighter so I did a story on the Blue Angels. Television provides perfect access for all one's Walter Mitty dreams; you don't have to sit back and just fantasize about them." FW

Observations

Making haste slowly. Automobile gasoline efficiency ratings continue to inch upward in their climb toward the 1985 goal of an average 27.5 miles a gallon. According to the Environmental Protection Agency's preliminary report on 1979 models, their average efficiency is 19.9 miles a gallon, compared with a projected final average of 19.6 mpg for 1978 models. The EPA has abandoned its previous "city" and "highway" mileage estimates in favor of a single "estimated miles per gallon" figure. If you're in the market for a new car, look for the 1979 Gas Mileage Guide in the showroom; regulations require new car dealers to "prominently display" the guide, and make copies available to prospective buyers.

Giant step. Continuing energy-conservation success of another sort is being achieved by Mobil's seven U.S. refineries. Last year, they combined to save an estimated six million barrels of crude oil equivalent—enough to heat 350,000 homes for a year. Since 1972, energy consumption at the refineries has been trimmed by 18.8 percent, a saving of 22 million barrels of oil equivalent.

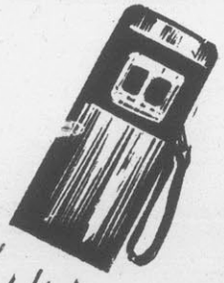

"Boy, are we saving gas! I've got the motor turned off!"

Labels at the pump. The Federal Trade Commission has proposed regulations which, when adopted, will result in the uniform posting of gasoline octane ratings in all the nation's service stations by April. The regulations are expected to replace similar Department of Energy rules. They require service station operators to label all gasoline pumps to show the fuel's minimum octane rating—a measure of its ability to prevent annoying and potentially damaging engine knock. The higher a gasoline's octane number, the greater its antiknock property.

Numbers game. Lead additives increase gasoline octane values, helping to prevent knocking. But most automobiles built since the 1975 model year are designed to burn only lead-free fuel, and many of them, especially as they get older, require higher octane than the unleaded regular gasoline specified by auto manufacturers. As a result, many new car owners report poorer performance, and lower gas mileage.

Supergas. Good news for owners of cars with octane "blahs" is the introduction by Mobil of a high-octane grade of unleaded gasoline. Mobil Super Unleaded is specifically formulated to provide better engine performance and eliminate engine knock in a greater percentage of cars. Octane rating of the new fuel is targeted high enough to meet the needs of most users of leaded premium gasoline, as well as new car owners. Mobil Super Unleaded was introduced east of the Rockies late this summer.

I believe in discipline,
I believe in rules.
And this applies,

LITTLE EMILY

"I'm looking for a gift for my mother — something she can exchange immediately."

PEOPLE QUIZ/By John E. Gibson

YOU ARE WHAT YOU BUY

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Your loyalty to given brands of products is likely to depend on whether you're an introvert or an extravert.

2. If you enjoy shopping at home by mail and telephone, that reveals interesting things about your personality.

3. How much a wife's purchases are influenced by advertisements depends on how much money her husband makes.

4. The extent to which you consider the environmental impact of your purchases — whether or not you are ecology-minded — provides a clue to how old you are and your income bracket.

ANSWERS

1. True. Research at the London Graduate School of Business Studies has shown that personality is definitely related to "repeat purchase behavior," that persons who are the most brand loyal tend to be introverts, and that extraverts are more fickle in their shopping behavior. Tests also showed brand-loyal subjects to be the most emotionally stable.

2. True. Psychographic studies of a representative sample of over 300 female heads of households, evaluated at the University of Wisconsin, showed that a proneness to shop at home by mail or telephone was found to go hand in hand with "general and specific self-confidence...and a sense of personal worth." A University of Georgia in-depth study of catalogue-buying behavior showed that "catalogue buyers tend to be younger, more venturesome and to express greater self-confidence."

3. True. Studies conducted by investigators from the University of Illinois and Kennedy-King College show that the less a wife's husband makes, the closer attention she pays to advertisements (on the alert for bargains) and the more they affect her buying decisions.

4. True. University of Arkansas studies have shown that younger shoppers have stronger attitudes towards ecology and that their buying habits and motivation show up in five product categories: low-lead gasoline, soft drinks in returnable bottles, low-phosphate detergents, paper meat trays and frozen vegetables. Also, "Families with higher incomes were found to be more active in considering the environmental impact of their purchases then lower-income families."

5. True. University of Colorado studies of consumer psychology reveal that in many cases the decision to purchase something is made because the product is compatible with either a person's self-image or his ideal self-image. It was found, however, that in many cases purchase of a product involves strong personality conflicts as well as feelings of guilt and a lessening of self-esteem: "I buy suntan lotion because I'm vain, but I wish I weren't. I buy TV dinners because I can't cook, but I wish I could, etc." FW

Postmasters of America Announces

OFFICIAL GOLD ON SILVER PROOFS OF AMERICA'S GREATEST STAMPS

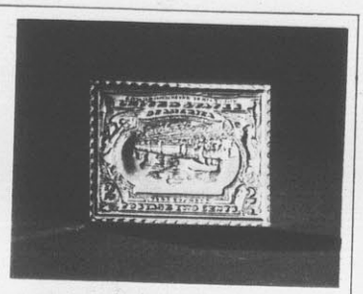

The 90¢ Abraham Lincoln Stamp, is the rarest and most valuable stamp featuring the portrait of Abraham Lincoln. Released in 1869, it is one of at least 18 different U.S. stamps showing the Great Emancipator.

The 4¢ 'Fleet of Columbus' Blue Error, issued in 1893, was printed in bright rather than pastel blue. It is known to exist in only one unused pane of 50 stamps, plus some individual used specimens.

The 5¢ Alexandria Postmasters' Provisional is one of America's exceptionally rare stamps. Until 1907 only six copies of this stamp were known, all printed on buff paper. One blue specimen was later discovered.

The 20¢ 'St. Louis Bear' Postmasters' Provisional was available briefly in 1846 before the first regular issue of U.S. stamps. This 20¢ stamp (like the 5¢ and 10¢ denominations) is now rare and avidly sought by collectors.

The 10¢ George Washington Stamp, released on July 1, 1847—with the 5¢ Benjamin Franklin—comprised the first general issue of the U.S. post office. It is regarded as a key acquisition for important collections.

The Pan-American Exposition 2¢ 'Fast Express' Invert, illustrated actual size (above) and enlarged to show fine detail, is a celebrated rarity. Only a few sheets were printed with the invert error.

Are You Really In Love?

Is it really love or just the right chemistry that has you seeing stars whenever the two of you are together? You'd know the answer if you read his book, How to Know If You're Really in Love, says author Dr. Charlie Shedd. And Shedd says he knows whereof he speaks — the Georgia Presbyterian minister and father of 5 has been happily married for 39 years.

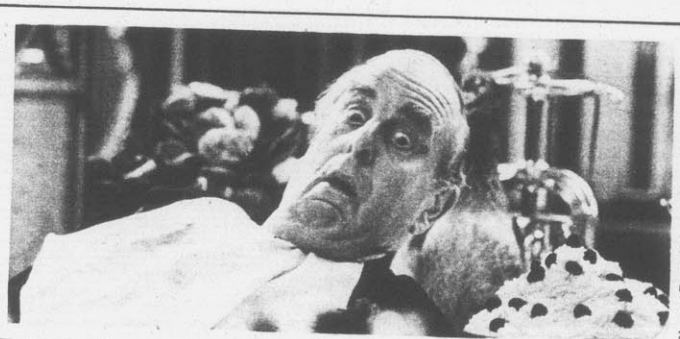

Shedd's book offers a series of tests (which couples can take separately, then compare answers) designed to measure 10 qualities including unselfishness, openness and faith, which he feels are crucial to a successful marriage. But, surprisingly, Shedd says that, outside of faith, he thinks fun is the key element in making a marriage work. "Life's hardly worth living unless it's fun," says Shedd. "Many married couples just go through the motions; life is to be enjoyed."

Shedd does have one caution, though. "One mistake I see too many couples making," he says, "is that they're enjoying each other's bodies but not each other's souls. I tell them, 'Just because you're a good make doesn't make you a good bet for marriage.'"

Sports. Professional football players are shrinking, reports the NFL. Despite the popular impression that today's players are brawnier than ever, the NFL says the average pro today is shorter and lighter than his counterpart 10 years ago. On opening day this season, the tallest teams were the Cleveland Browns and Seattle Seahawks, while St. Louis was the shortest. The heaviest club was Cincinnati and the lightest, Atlanta. Does all of this have any effect on the team's performance? You'll have to work out your own statistics.

Fashion. Halston, the world-famous American designer whose originals regularly clothe the likes of Liz and Liza, was recently the recipient of an American original himself — a pair of full-beaded Indian moccasins courtesy of the Girl Scouts. The Scouts wanted to show their appreciation of Halston's gift to them; he designed the new Girl Scout adult uniform, which was worn by many members of the audience at the moccasin presentation. Now, Halston, what does the well-dressed man wear with his moccasins?

Television. Those who like an old-fashioned Christmas story may want to tune in to next Sunday's Hallmark Hall of Fame presentation, Stubby Pringle's Christmas. The special, to be shown from 7-8 Eastern time on NBC, features Beau Bridges as a young cowboy who turns Santa Claus during one very special evening. Julie Harris also stars.

Good Enough To Eat

If you think that fine china, crystal goblets and other amenities make for an ideal dining setting you're perfectly right — the atmosphere is good enough to prompt overweight individuals to eat much more than they would otherwise.

In fact, studies at St. Luke's Hospital in New York City indicate that obese people will eat more than twice as much food if the atmospheric conditions are just right (normal-weight people keep their food intake fairly consistent). The reason, says researcher Dr. Sami Hashim, is that overweight individuals' eating behavior appears to be influenced more by external stimuli than by internal cues.

But before you switch to paper plates, Dr. Hashim advises looking on the bright side: learned responses that trigger eating can be unlearned. Dr. Hashim recommends behavior modification in which the dieter keeps a detailed record of food intake in order to become more aware of one's eating patterns. And if you discover candlelight and soft music turn your appetite on, don't say we didn't warn you.

Negative Thinking Spells Academic Failure

Low self-esteem, not low I.Q., may often be at the root of academic failure in college, say Drexel Univ. researchers. After conducting an experimental "emotional education" class to help collegians in severe academic difficulty, the researchers say that a student's attitude towards himself may actually drive him to act in ways that guarantee failure.

"Most of these students are preoccupied with maintaining their fragile self-esteem," says class instructor Joel F. Reissman, an adjunct professor of psychology. "They are unable to study effectively whenever there is even a very small threat to their self-esteem."

For students with low self-esteem, Reissman says, even mild hurdles in schoolwork can create serious anxiety. He says, "Since these students tend to 'act out' to avoid anxiety, they will avoid studying, cut classes and frequently enter class late with unfortunate but predictable results."

Perry Como Celebrates Christmas

John Wayne and Diana Canova share the holiday spirit in "Perry Como's Early American Christmas," a Yuletide special filmed in Colonial Williamsburg, Va., on Wednesday, Dec. 13 (9-10 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Celebrating Christmas and Easter with Perry Como has become a television tradition, and this holiday season he ventures to Colonial Williamsburg for an early American Yuletide greeting Wednesday, Dec. 13 (9 p.m.), on ABC-TV.

According to Stephen Pouliot, who produced the special for executive producer Bob Banner, "Colonial Williamsburg is a wonderful location for a Christmas show. Everything is so authentic — the costumes, the architecture, the style of living — it is truly a living monument to America's past. The people, the artisans and craftsmen of Colonial Williamsburg contribute a great deal to the atmosphere of old English and early America traditions."

One thing that surprised everyone was the absence of Christmas trees. "In early Virginia," explains Bob Banner, "it was the custom to decorate with greens and fresh fruit. Christmas trees were not introduced until 1842 by a German professor at William and Mary College. Even gift-giving, except for children, was not common. Santa Claus had not yet been heard from. As a result," Banner continued, "Christmas was probably just that much more a time of love and warmth."

"I believe this is the best Christmas show we've ever done," says Como. "We've tried to do a typical show about what we feel Christmas really is. Christmas means just one thing to me — the birth of the Christ child. We don't try to improve on Christmas. How can you?" he asked.

Those Gorgeous Gals!

Those unforgettable, irresistible, irreplaceable Rockettes, the world-famous precision dance troupe, are now, as always, the main live attraction at The Radio City Music Hall.

As Gregory Peck puts it: "Where else would you find 30 lovely Rockettes roaming around the house?" when the girls are introduced on "Rockette: A Holiday Tribute to the Radio City Music Hall," starring Ann-Margret and hosted by Peck, airing Thursday, Dec. 14 (9 to 11 p.m.), on NBC-TV.

Originally called The 16 American Rockets, when Russell Markert created the precision dance team in St. Louis in the 20's, their name was changed to The Roxyettes when they first appeared at New York's Roxy Theatre, then in the 30's they became The Rockettes of the Music Hall.

There are actually 39 Rockettes though 30 dance as one on the stage of the Music Hall, since nine are always on vacation. And, "How Do You Get To Be a Rockette?" As sung by Ann-Margret, "You must be five foot or taller, You must be five foot nine or smaller, And even if you've passed that test, You know you've only just begun, For they demand a million things of you, Before the audition is done . . ."

Dance versatility is the name of the game. A Rockette must be able to perform everything from the Charleston, the Drag, and soft shoe to cartwheels, splits and, above all, high kicks.

Ann-Margret, whose nightclub act includes precision dancing with eight boys, had never worked in that medium with girls. "They were wonderful to me," she said, "and so helpful. I really enyoyed being part of the Rockette chorus line."

As for The Rockettes, they discovered that Ann-Margret is an absolute delight, onstage and off. "Naturally, we were anxious about working with a superstar like Ann-Margret," said Barbara Ann Cittaiino, "but she is so easy, so down-to-earth that we felt she was one of us right away."

ROCKETTE: A HOLIDAY TRIBUTE TO THE RADIO CITY MUSIC HALL starring Ann-Margret premieres Thursday, Dec. 14 (9-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV. Gregory Peck is host of this spectacular.

Stars Take Risks On 'Circus'

More than two dozen of the most popular stars of television, stage, motion picture and sports temporarily set aside their nomal careers to risk life and limb as daring circus performers on the all-new "3rd Annual Circus of the Stars," to be broadcast Sunday, Dec. 10 (9 to 11 p.m), on CBS-TV.

Lauren Bacall, Sammy Davis, Jerry Lewis, Anthony Newley and Bernadette Peters will be ringmasters for the extravaganza.

On the program as has been the custom in previous editions of "Circus of the Stars," the stars themselves actually perform dangerous feats in cages with wild animals, on the highwire, on the flying trapeze, and as human targets.

With minimum rehearsal and preparation time, Cathy Lee Crosby and former Olympic star and television actor Bob Seagren perform on a 50-foot swinging arm of steel, the "Wheel of Destiny" without nets, ropes or any other safety devices; Tony Lo Bianco will put three wild animals — a tiger, a leopard and a panther — all natural enemies, through their paces in act never before seen on television; Marty Allen works with four elephants; Lee Meriwether walks on the tightrope; ex-heavyweight champion Ken Norton dives from a 40-foot high tower into a flaming tank of water, and the late Scott Newman will jump a car to a fiery climax.

Besides acts involving danger and skill, the circus has its comedic moments which include noted actor Martin Sheen and his "drunken horse," Betty White and her baby elephant, Jamie Farr and Mike Farrell of "M*A*S*H" recreating a classic clown rountine, and Sammy Davis with Fred the Cockatoo.

Among the other stars who will be peforming are Dirk Blocker, Charlie Callas, Charo, Gary Collins, Jamie Lee Curtis, Altovise Davis, Buddy Hacket, Lassie, Mary Ann Mobley, David Nelson, Valerie Perrine and Michelle Phillips.

The Gathering Encores

The traditional coming-together of Christmas provides a broken family with one last chance to rediscover the love they have misplaced — but never lost — in "The Gathering," a dream by Oscar-winner James Poe, encoring Sunday, Dec. 10 (9 to 11 p.m.), on ABC-TV.

Edward Asner stars as a successful businessman making an 11th hour effort to pull together the family he shattered by allowing them to become second to his work. Maureen Stapleton, one of the American theatre's most distinguished actresses, is the drama's special guest star as Asner's wife, a woman who lost her husband to his drive for success.

It is Christmas in New England, and Adam Thornton (Asner) knows that this Christmas — his 58th — will be his last. His doctor's report has given a number to his days, and the crusty industrialist is determined to make one last effort at bringing together the family he left years ago.

The family is his wife, Kate (Miss Stapleton); their daughter Julie (Rebecca Balding), who now has children of her own; their son Tom (Lawrence Pressman), a cynical young man who is as stubborn as his father; their daughter Peggy (Gail Strickland), a successful career woman in her own right, and son Bud (Craig Harrison), an expatriate who fled to Canada during the Vietnam War.

Calls go out to the family — the family Adam hardly knows anymore — for a reunion at Christmas, and slowly they arrive at their childhood home to reclaim the love they have missed more than they dare admit.

Young Randal Kleiser directed the powerful film and, at his suggestion, it was filmed in Chagrin Falls, Ohio, where he had spent many holidays as a child.

"It's still a lovely unspoiled small town," said Kleiser, "that looks as if it should be somewhere in New England."

The traditional coming-together at Christmas reunites Edward Asner and Maureen Stapleton and the rest of his family when he learns that this Christmas will be his last in "The Gathering," an Emmy-winning "ABC Theatre," drama which has an encore showing Sunday, Dec. 10 (9-11 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Disturbing Facts

The dramatic increase in the smoking of marijuana by American teen-agers and the drastic effect it has on their lives will be the subject of an NBC News Special Report to be telecast Sunday, Dec. 10 (10 to 11 p.m.), on NBC-TV.

Correspondent Edwin Newman will be the on-camera reporter.

Robert Rogers, the program's producer, said: "We will focus on the children of middle-class America, who in ever-increasing numbers smoke marijuana before, during and after school. In fact, many of these young lives revolve around staying 'stoned.'"

Interviewed on the program will be a 12-year-old boy from Jacksonville, Fla., who says he began smoking when he was eight and talks about how this affected his life in and out of school. Also interviewed will be a 16-year-old from just outside Atlanta who proudly admits to smoking up to 30 'joints' a week and sometimes much more.

Rogers said: "We found that many of the kids have become habitual marijuana users, not just because they consider it fun, but because they think it's the first totally harmless drug.

"However, in this program, we have been able to document through actual case histories the real effect of heavy marijuana use on a youngster's attitudes and academic performance.

"We also have come up with some basic scientific data on marijuana which is bound to raise some eyebrows."

To show how American children obtain this illegal substance, NBC News will report on the marijuana plantations in Columbia which furnish between 75-80 percent of the pot consumed in this country. Robert Ebey, a major figure in marijuana smuggling, describes the virtual air shuttle between Columbia and the United States.

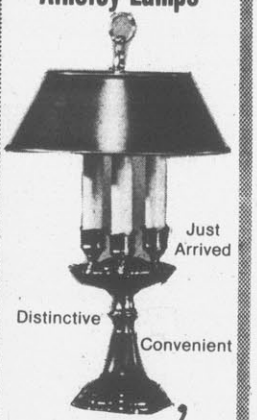

"While our policy makers have debated the legal complexities of whether an adult should have the right to smoke a 'joint' instead of drinking a martini, our children have rendered that debate obsolete" Rogers concluded.

'Douglas' Builds

Early audience figures confirmed that the move of "The Mike Douglas Show" from Philadelphia (Penn.) to Hollywood has significantly improved the show's standings.

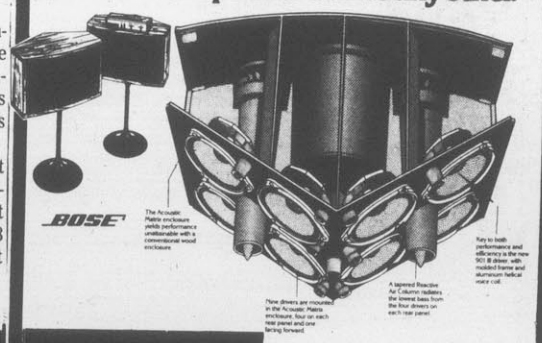

Nielsen reports for the first few weeks of the Los Angeles-based show indicated that Douglas's share had increased 33 percent over the same period last year.

Long-Distance Duet

Shirley Booth, the beloved stage and screen actress who delighted millions as the motherly maid in the television series, "Hazel," made her first venture into the world of animation in "The Year Without a Santa Claus."Ms. Booth brought her vocal talents to the roles of narrator and Mrs. Claus in the enchanting tale presented in animagic.

The program, which also features the voices of Mickey Rooney, Dick Shawn and George S. Irving, will be rebroadcast Monday, Dec. 11 (8 to 9 p.m.), on ABC-TV. It tells the story of a time when Santa Claus wanted a vacation because he felt weary and unwanted.

Ms. Booth was marveling at the miracles of the electronic age in an interview soon after taping the special. "Do you know," she asked, "that I have not ever met Mr. Rooney, but yet in the show I end up singing a song with him? He was in Chicago somewhere and I was in New York, but we do a duet in the show."

Ms. Booth was incredulous, but Jules Bass, who co-produced and co-directed the animation film along with Arthur Rankin, Jr., offered a simple explanation. According to him, Ms. Booth sang "The Year Without a Santa Claus" in their New York studios where it was recorded on a 16 track. It was then shipped to Chicago were Mr. Rooney's voice (as Santa Claus) was added. Later the Wee Winter Singers, the choir, contributed their part on another tape which was combined with Mr. and Mrs. Claus' duet.

A Reunion Of Sorts

"A Woman Called Moses," airing in two parts Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 11 and 12 (9 to 11 p.m. on NBC-TV), is a kind of reunion for stars Cicely Tyson and Robert Hooks and writer Lonne Elder III.

Tyson heads the cast in the title role of Harriet Tubman, the 'Moses' of American slaves who helped many people escape over the Mason-Dixon line. Hooks is William Still, head of an anti-slavery society. Elder wrote the screenplay based on the Marcy Heidish novel.

Elder met Tyson in the late 50's. "We were both in a kind of community of show business people in New York. We all just knew each other and kept up with each other's careers," said Elder. "We were all struggling."

Robert Hooks was also in that New York community of show biz people. He and Elder met when both were actors in the original Broadway production of "A Raisin in the Sun."

Tyson and Hooks first met in the New York play "The Blacks." "Bobby came to see the show," said Tyson, "and I was a member of the cast. I remember first laying eyes on him from atop a stairway. I can even remember everything he was wearing. Later, he joined the cast."

Hooks and Tyson also worked together in the play "Tiger Tiger Burning Bright" and the television movie "Just an Old Sweet Song." Hooks and Elder were linked together again at the Negro Ensemble Company in New York. Hooks was director of the NEC and the company's most acclaimed production was the Elder play "Ceremonies in Dark Old Men."

REUNION"A Woman Called Moses," which airs in two parts Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 11-12 (9-11 p.m. on NBC-TV) is a reunion of sorts for stars Cicely Tyson, writer Lonne Elder III (inset) and Robert Hooks. Tyson stars as Harriet Tubman, who helped many American slaves escape. Elder wrote the screenplay and Hooks co-stars. They all worked together years ago on the New York stage.

Recognize Her

Actress K.T. Stevens may be one of the most unrecognizable faces in daytime television — at least for the past couple of years — and for good reason.

For as long as she has portrayed wealthy Vanessa Prentiss on the popular daytime series, "The Young and the Restless" (since May, 1976), her face has been covered with a veil. Some time back, her character's face was badly burned in a fire on the series, which is presented weekdays (12-noon to 12:30 p.m.) on CBS.

All is much better for character Vanessa — and actress K.T., for that matter — because recently, after series of reconstructive facial operations in the story, Vanessa's veil was lifted and Miss Stevens showed her lovely face.

Before her 'unveiling,' however, Miss Stevens, daughter of the late Hollywood director Sam Wood, traveled from California (where her series is produced) to New York to visit her son, Christian Marlowe. Marlowe began his acting within the past year as Andy Marriott Jr. on "Love of Life," another daytime series. (Marlowe's father, by the way, is actor Hugh Marlowe, currently featured on the series "Another World.")

When Miss Stevens was in New York, she traveled relatively unrecognized — thanks to the veil. Back in California, since the "unveiling," she's been approached often about her character, Vanessa.

Back in New York near Central Park, as she began a ride with her son in a hanson cab, a young woman, obviously a daytime series fan, knew Chris' character and then approached Miss Stevens with a puzzled look as though she should know her, too.

Raymond Burr Stars

Raymond Burr stars as Frank Jordan, an attorney who, with the help of three young assistants, proves the innocence of a wrongly imprisoned woman, in "The Jordan Chance," a new motion picture-for-television to air on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies," Dec. 12 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Special guest stars are Stella Stevens and George DiCenzo, with guest stars John McIntire, Peter Haskell, Maria-Elena Cordero and Gerald McRaney.

Earlier in his life, Frank Jordan spent seven years behind bars for a crime he did not commit. There, he studied law. Now, years later, an eminently successful criminal lawyer, he has created a foundation dedicated to helping those wrongly accused and unjustly convicted — giving them the "Jordan Chance."

Elena Delgado (Cordero), a young officer worker in the small agricultural town of Playa Del Rio, has been convicted of the murder of her former boyfriend. After a personal interview, Jordan agrees to reopen Elena's case. Jordan and his assistants begin untangling the web of circumstantial evidence that sent Elena to prison.

As they dig deeper, they hit a stone wall; no one is willing to talk to them. Worse, the powerful people in town including the sheriff, are openly hostile toward Jordan's interest in a case they thought was closed and sealed.

Raymond Burr is known around the world as a result of his highly successful television series, "Perry Mason" and "Ironside." For his work in those series, Burr won two Emmy Awards and was nominated three more times. Included in his more than 90 films credits are such classics as "Rear Window" and "A Place in the Sun."

Ted Shackelford co-starred in the recent highly acclaimed motion picture-for-television, "The Defection of Simas Kudirka," and has guest starred on such series as "The New Adventures of Wonder Woman," "The Fitzpatricks" and "Big Hawaii."

James Canning had a lead role in the film, "The Boys in Company C," and has guest starred on a number of television series.

Raymond Burr stars as a lawyer, once wrongfully imprisoned, who devotes his career to finding people in similar circumstances in "The Jordan Chance," a new motion picture-for-television, to be broadcast as "The Tuesday Night Movie," Dec. 12 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

The Key Factors

Mathematical precision and split-second timing went into the execution of the crash sequences of "Smash-Up on Interstate 5," encoring as "The Tuesday Movie of the Week," Dec. 12 (11:30 p.m.), on ABC-TV.

Starring in the film, which depicts events in the preceding 48 hours in the lives of people involved in a 39-car accident on a freeway at the close of a holiday weekend, are Robert Conrad, Buddy Ebsen, Harriet Nelson, Vera Miles, David Groh, Scott Jacoby and Sue Lyon.

Heidi Returns

"The New Adventures of Heidi," an NBC World Premiere movie featuring Johanna Spryi's classic characters in a contemporary setting and a musical background, will be colorcast on "NBC Wednesday Night at the Movies," Dec. 13 (8 to 10 p.m).

The movie, based on the characters created by Spryi in her novel "Heidi," features 10 original musical numbers by Buz Kohan.

Heidi is living an idyllic life in the Swiss Alps with her grandfather, who is going blind but doesn't want to worry her by revealing the truth. He tells her she must go to live with her hated cousins because he has a chance for a good job in the city.

Katy Kurtzman stars as Heidi, and winning the title role is the latest in a series of recent events that have put the 13-year-old's career into high gear.

Katy was born in Washington, D.C. When she was still a baby, she moved to Florida with her family. She took dance lessons at 4, lessons in drama at 5 and was appearing in commercials at 7 (she's done 25 to date).

Her acting career began to bloom a year-and-a-half ago after a guest appearance as Anna, a stuttering little girl on "Little House on the Prairie."

She has appeared in two Disney films, "Child of Glass" and "Donovan's Kid." She also had a role in the television movie "When Every Day Was the Fourth of July" and appeared in the miniseries "The Awakening Land."

Burl Ives, who protrays Heidi's lovable Grandfather Beck, has had a rich and varied career as a star of TV, stage, screen and radio and as an author. Years ago he was one of the world's most popular folk singers.

He has appeared on hundreds of TV shows and had his own series, "O.K. Crackerby" (1965). He also starred as lawyer Walter Nichols in "The Bold Ones."

Books he has written are "The Wayfaring Stranger" and "Tales of America."

Sean Marshall co-stars as Heidi's friend, Peter, and Sherrie Wills plays Elizabeth, a girl she befriends who has run away from boarding school. John Gavin portrays Elizabeth's father and Marlyn Mason is his secretary.

The movie was filmed on location in Snowmass, Colo.

'Bizarre' Started

Principal photography has begun on two half-hour pilot episodes of ABC-TV's new comedy series "Bizarre."

CLASSIC STORY UPDATED-Katy Kurtzman stars with Burl Ives in "The New Adventures of Heidi," a contemporary musical version of Johanna Spyri's beloved story about a young girl and her grandfather living in the Swiss Alps, which airs as the "Wednesday Night Movie," Dec. 13 (p.m.) on NBC-TV.

'Circle Of Children'

Jane Alexander re-creates the role of Mary McCracken, a woman deeply committed to teaching emotionally disturbed children, in "Lovey: A Circle of Children, Part II," to be presented Wednesday, Dec. 13 (9 to 11 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

Also starring in the dramatic special are Kris McKeon as Hannah, and Jeff Lynas, Guy Costley and Drew Buettow as the rest of Mary's students, and Ronny Cox as Cal.

Miss Alexander stars as Mary, who, in "A Circle of Children" was an affluent surburban housewife who found personal fulfillment as a volunteer in a special school. When the drama begins, Mary is a full-time teacher at that same school, torn between her own needs and the demanding needs of her students.

Mary's college-age daughter, Elizabeth (Karen Allen), realizes her mother has sublimated her own needs into those of her students. Mary, herself, begins to realize that she feels safest in the classroom, and perhaps does not enough time in the adult world. But the children's problems are so pressing and so serious that Mary's primary interest remains with them. She must get Brian ready to enter regular school in the fall, encourage Rufus to continue his enormous progress, teach Jamie to communicate more; and she must deal with her newest addition, a severly disturbed little girl named Hannah, or, as she's nicknamed by Mary, Lovey.

Hannah is Mary's most difficult student, and her problems are a real test of Mary's abilities. But Mary's devotion to and love for the little girl produce remarkable results.

Ronny Cox stars as Cal, an understanding man who falls in love with Mary and tries to teach her that she deserves, and can have, a more balanced life.

Jane Alexander stars as a woman who teaches disturbed children, and Ronny Cox stars as the man who wants her to expand her life to include him, too, in the dramatic special, "Lovey: A Circle of Children, Part Two," to be presented Wednesday, Dec. 13 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Museum Inspires Program

The Smithsonian Institution's unmatched collection of aircraft and spacecraft in the National Air and Space Museum in Washington, D.C. serves as the inspiration for "A Place of Dreams," a special illustrating man's persistent fascination with what was once a dream — flight. Hosted by Cliff Robertson, "A Place of Dreams" will be broadcast Wednesday, Dec. 13 (8 p.m.) on PBS.

The program utilizes vintage photographs, early newsfilm of flight's pioneers, displays from the National Air and Space Museum's many exhibit halls, and a close-up examination of the museum's collection of aircraft and spacecraft to provide a history of modern flight and a celebration of the museum itself. Now considered the most popular museum in the world, the two and one-half year old National Air and Space Museum will shortly welcome its 25-millionth visitor.

Robertson, himself a pilot and aircraft owner in addition to being an actor and director, describes the National Air and Space Museum as "a building to celebrate human flight almost as spacious as the sky itself." He cites the spirit and accomplishments of the people who "wouldn't give up, despite danger, hostile places, hostile critics and repeated failure."

"A Place of Dreams" features an interview with Paul Garber, Historian Emeritus of the museum, who recalls seeing Orville Wright fly in 1909.

Henning Finds Magic

"Every culture from earliest history had its magicians," said master illusionist Doug Henning, who will take viewers on a magical journey through time in his upcoming fourth NBC-TV holiday special, "Doug Henning's World of Magic," to be color-cast live Thursday, Dec. 14 (8 to 9 p.m.), on NBC-TV.

"Two of the oldest sources of magic were Egypt and China," said Henning. "Even the famous 'Indian' rope trick came from China. One of my favorite illusions that helped make my reputation is that of the Chinese linking rings, which I did on my second special."

Henning indicated that magic was used in different ways and for different purposes by various cultures.

"In ancient Egypt magic was used by the priesthood to impress the masses and gain power over them," he said.

"It was actually a matter of life and death beacause it was used to initiate the people into the mysteries of the beyond."

Magic developed later in China.

"There it was used to illustrate legends and was combined with music and dance," said Henning. "Magicians in China were court magicians."

"It was performed by troubadours solely for the entertainment and upliftment of the townspeople," said Henning. "It was taken out of the court of royalty and the priesthood and taken into the streets."

Henning indicated that the earliest accounts of recorded magic date back more than 2,000 B.C. to Egypt.

"There are hieroglyphics showing a magician performing the cups and balls illusion and also a 'decapitation' illusion, where he takes off the head of a fowl and puts it back on."

Whatever the differences in time or space, there is one thing that can be said for all magic, according to Henning.

Pike's Peek

HOLLYWOOD — FARRAH FAWCETT MAJORS continues to beat the odds. Traditionally, any actress — or actor, for that matter — who personally poses for pictures that appear in any men's magazines, i.e., Playboy, is all but banished from regular television roles. Networks have been frightened of the morality attitude of the public. Well, despite Farrah's appearance in Playboy, all three networks have contracts they'd like the actress to sign for TV films.

LYNN TOPPING, the new 'Chris' on daytime's "THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS," admits that she quite acting not too many years ago and was preparing to leave it a second time just before capturing her current role. What changed her mind most recently? She became a reborn Christian.

There's a rumor that if MARY TYLER MOORE'S new series doesn't make it in the Neilsen ratings, she'll revert to specials, one of which would find her staging a reunion with her Mary Richards role and Ms. Richard's Minneapolis friends, TED BAXTER, LOU GRANT, MURRAY SLAUGHTER and others.

PAUL NEWMAN may not have seen as much of his only son, SCOTT, as he would have liked, but there was always a very special bond between them. Scott, of course, died recently from an accidental overdose of tranqualizers and liquor. He was Paul's son from his first marriage and, because of that, the two were not with each other as much as both would have preferred. But Scott was always close to his dad emotionally. Regularly, Paul wore a tattered scarf around his neck that Scott had given him many years ago.

No sooner did MAREN JENSEN of "BATTLESTAR: GALACTICA" return from New York after posing for the cover of Cosmopolitan than she was paged back to Gotham for a cover shot for Esquire.

As noted previously in this space, ANSON WILLIAMS and LORRIE MAHAFFEY tied the knot at a private cermony near Santa Barbara, Calif., escaping as they'd planned all the fanfare of Hollywood photographers, etc.

It'll be a very special Christmas for KATE JACKSON. During her brief hiatus from "CHARLIE'S ANGELS," she'll fly to Oregon to meet her mother-in-law, STELLA STEVENS, for the first time.

Despite reports to the contrary, there are no problems in the HENRY and STACEY WINKLER marrige, and that comes from both of them. In fact, don't be shocked if the couple has an offspring of their own in the coming year.

Lots Of Lefties

Girl's Courageous Fight

A teenage girl who fights courageously to live fully after a crushing accident is buoyed by the extraordinary love and understanding of her family in "Long Journey Back," an inspiring story based on actual events, making its world premiere as "The ABC Friday Night Movie," Dec. 15 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Mike Connors, Cloris Leachman, Stephanie Zimbalist and Katy Kurtzman star in the powerful drama.

Connors, in an important departure from past roles, plays Vic Casella, devoted husband and father who is nearly destroyed by his inability to help his daughters or his wife in their hour of crisis.

After the accident and following long harrowing months of rehabilitation, Celia's indomitable spirit helps her to overcome her handicaps as she and her family ultimately find the will to reshape their lives.

The sequence in which Celia learns to walk and talk again was filmed at the Rancho Los Amigos Rehabilitation Center 30 miles outside Los Angeles. Stephanie Zimbalist went there ahead of the shooting date and spent a day talking to a number of people, including doctors, specially trained therapists and many handicapped patients.

"Working there and talking to so many patients gave me an entirely different attitude," Stephanie says. "I used to be afraid of people like that, but not anymore. They are all so wonderful, it certainly makes you think twice about the multitude of little things that we all let bother us," she said.

Comeback Trail

Remember when lean, tanned, and handsome Troy Donahue wooed the likes of Sandra Dee and Sharon Huegeny in films and television in the 1960s?

Now 42, Donahue remembers all that with a smile, but an even brighter smile crosses his face when he talks about the prospects in store for him on the comeback trail in the 1970s.

Donahue, who's been making occasional guest appearances on TV in the last year, has a role he can really sink his teeth into in "Dying Declaration," a special two-hour segment of "The Eddie Capra Mysteries," starring Vincent Baggetta, Friday, Dec. 15 (9 to 11 p.m), on NBC-TV.

"I play a really slimy guy who can be nice and sweet with some finesse," he said. "He's a bad guy but that's good for me because it disassociates me from a goody-two-shoes. I feel I'm capable of playing a wide variety of roles. I can be a leading man and I can be a villian."

But it took a seven-year absence from Hollywood and acting to prove to himself and to Hollywood casting directors that that's what his future is.

Reflecting back to his roles in the beach-type movies of the 60s, he said. "They couldn't see me except as a goody-two-shoes, so I became disenchanted with the business and maybe the business with me. But I wanted to come back a little older and with a fresh star."

What happened to Donahue in the intervening years was what happened to America in the middle to late 1960s. He changed and sees a parallel in the social, political and moral climate of the country with the change that took place in him.

He went to Vietnam twice on his own — not with a USO tour. When he returned to New York in 1969, he let his hair grow and became a radical of sorts.

He also married and divorced, lived in South France and South America, grew a moustache, then a beard, and got a lot out of his system.

To maintain his "acting muscles," Donahue accepted parts in foreign movies and did a short stint in a daytime series, "Secret Storm."

Michele Will Tell

Q: I would like some information about Ty Hardin . . . the name of the TV show he was in, what he's doing now, and how old he is. MRS. B. DAVIS, LEXINGTON, N.C.

A: The TV series was "Bronco" (1959-'60). Hardin hasn't faced the cameras since '71 and lives in Los Boliches, Spain, where he operates a chain of laundromats and a bar. Now 48, Hardin is single — several times married and divorced.

A: Leibman is a native New Yorker who became interested in drama when he was a college student. His wife is Linda Lavin, star of "Alice," and the couple met when both were appearing in a play (1968). Write to him c-o "Kaz," CBS-TV, 7800 Beverly Blvd., Hollywood, Calif. 90036.

Q: I would like to know more about Crystal Gayle. Where is she living now and will she be on TV anytime soon. F.F., BRIDGEWATER, VA.

A: Crystal was born Brenda Webb and is Loretta Lynn's youngest sister. She lives in Nashville with her husband, Bill Gotzimos, and — because of her heavy schedule of concerts and night club dates — her appearances on TV are limited. Incidentally, it was Loretta who suggested she change her name so people wouldn't confuse her with another singer, Brenda Lee.

Q: I enjoy "Mork and Mindy" and would like to know more about Robin Williams ('Mork'). D. BLANTON, WALLINS CREEK, KY.

A: 'M & M' was prompted by "My Favorite Orkan," an episode of "Happy Days" in which Robin guest starred. He is a very popular stand-up comic who 'packs 'em in' clubs around the Los Angeles area. Robin, born in Scotland, grew up in San Francisco and married a dancer, Valerie Velardi, last summer.

Q: I recently saw a commercial advertising Visual Aids for the blind on Channel 13 (Florence). I would like to know more about this. B. MAREKA, LUMBERTON, N.C.

A: I suggest that you write to WBTW (P.O. Box 630, Florence, S.C. 29501) for the name and address of the company.

Q: Who played Flint McCullough on "Wagon Train?" S.J., WILMINGTOM, N.C.

A: Robert Horton, who virtually disappeared from TV when he walked away from the hit show in 1962. He hit the 'comeback trail' in '76 with a guest starring role on "Police Woman."

LEIF GARRETT left the hospital just in time to get a belated start on his first U.S. concert tour. Leif was stricken with viral pneumonia and was taken to the hospital as a precaution so he could at least do most of his scheduled tour.

JEFF CONAWAY makes no secret over his affection for RONA NEWTON-JOHN, but — interestingly enough — he was never a big fan of OLIVIA'S before he met Rona.

Friends of DAVID SOUL who might be contemplating something special for him for Christmas might take notice of LYNNE MARTA's advice: no guitars. David has bought himself so many guitars over the years that the garage at his and Lynne's home is almost so crowded that there's no room for their cars. Besides, David's bought himself four new guitars this year! David's almost like a stamp collector. Evertime a new guitar comes out he has to have at least one.

Scuttlebutt has it that GARY BURGHOFF would really prefer to make this his last season on "M*A*S*H," If that's the case, a certain very foxy young actor who has a big following may very well be Gary's replacement if the series is picked up for one more season. Can't name names because of a promise, but it'd certainly alter the audience following of the show, like to a much younger one!

There's also talk that the BAY CITY ROLLERS are being considered for a summer replacement show. Word has it that the Rollers would do four shows that would follow the four KRISTY and JIMMY McNICHOL are considering doing.

Doug Buffone—A Real Winner

He's been with the Chicago Bears a long time — 12 years, to be exact. He's seen some pretty lean years. Eight of his campaigns have been with losing teams, two more when the squad finished with a .500 record. But no one was prouder of his young teammates last season when the Bears finally scratched and clawed their way into the NFC playoffs.

Now Doug Buffone, battle-hardened veteran of all those campaigns, can join his team in playing the spoiler against the playoff-hopeful Washington Redskins Saturday, Dec. 16, when the two NFC squads clash (1 p.m. on CBS-TV).

Buffone played outside linebacker for 142 consecutive games before the amazing string was snapped in 1976 with an ankle injury. That sort of longevity is almost unheard of in modern-day football, especially at the demanding linebacker position.

Only two Bears, Bobby Joe Green (161) and Bill George (159) have played in more games than the Louisville grad. One of the reasons for Buffone's long success lies in his ability to read plays quickly.

As he explains, "I seem to get a jump on the ball, because I know where the play is going. I depend on my instincts and try to force the play outside, where our pursuit can get the ball carrier. If he breaks outside and gets away with it, it could be all over."

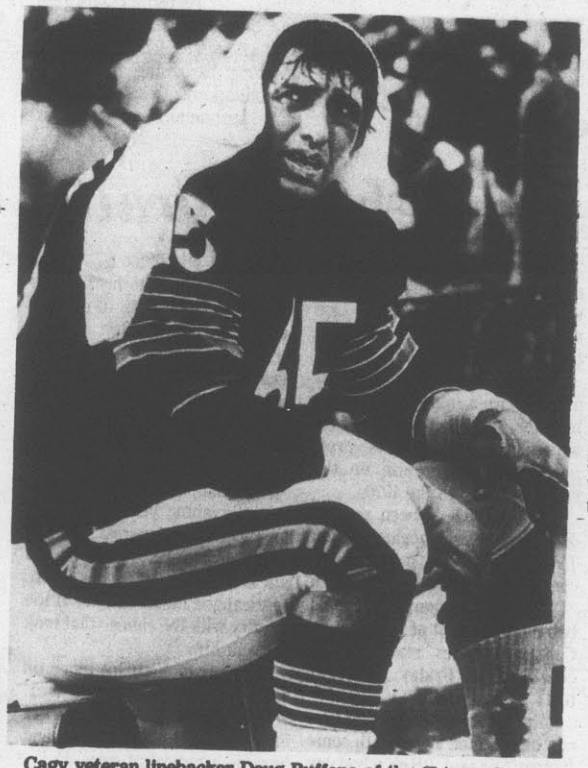

Doug also studies his opponents and tries to establish patterns of their movements. He claims that after he learns a ball carrier's patterns, he can accurately predict what he will do in a given situation.

"You develop an instinct for what these ball players do — you know what they do best. They're not going to change because once aguy starts playing football, he slips into the same habits. He blocks a certain way and goes out for a pass a certain way."

He also believes that total concentration is his key to success, and he feels that desire plays a very large part in a person's degree of success.

"Desire is the catalyst that puts the others together," he says. "A lot of times it looks like you can't catch the runner, but if you really have that desire within yourself — that you want to get that runner — you'll find a way to get to him. It might mean tackling on the off-side of the field, or the willingness to play when you're injured, or when you're losing and getting your brains beat in."

Doug Buffone may not have played on many winning teams with the Chicago Bears, but the way he plays every game, you have to consider him a winner.

Cagy veteran linebacker Doug Buffone of the Chicago Bears takes a rare breather. The 12-year veteran will join the Bears for a big clash with the Washington Redskins Saturday, Dec. 16 at 1 p.m. on CBS-TV.

Air-Tight Defense

Whether it is Mean Joe Green sacking a quarterback or J.T. Thomas picking off another one of his classic interceptions, the Pittsburgh defense has more than earned their title of "The Steel Curtain."

To be honest, it's more like a brick wall than a curtain. Ask any of this season's Steeler foes who may still be nursing bumps and bruises administered by the frightening gang.

The Steelers meet a team who has almost as fiercesome a defense: namely, the Denver Broncos. The two AFC heavyweights get together for a battle Saturday, Dec. 16 (4 p.m. on NBC-TV).

The Pittsburgh defenders haven't surrended a touchdown in the first quarter of ANY game this year. And Denver is the only club to have given up less points 12 weeks into the season.

The Broncos have also surrendered one less touchdown, having had 14 touchdowns scored on its famed Orange Crush defense. The Steelers' defense is also second in the AFC with 31 sacks and has already surpassed last year's team total.

Several years ago, the Pittsburgh club couldn't seem to put a winning season together. Finally, names like L.C. Greenwood, Jack Ham, Jack Lambert and others began to arrive on the scene in the early 1970's, thanks to some excellent draft picks by the Steeler front office.

In 1972, the defense really came to life, only giving up 175 total points. The club made it all the way to the AFC finals, losing out to a veteran Miami Dolphin squad. Then came another super 10-4 season in 1973, but the Oakland Raiders crushed the Steel Wall 33-14 in the AFC final.

Offensive Stars Must Produce

After a blazing start, the Washington Redskins suddenly face the prospect of not making the NFC playoffs for the second year in a row. Most of the responsibility for the negative turnabout has to be attributed to a lackluster offense which has become easy prey for opposing defenses. In a loss a few weeks ago to the St. Louis Cardinals, the Skins garnered a total of 20 yards rushing, and didn't fare much better through the air.

If the Washington club is to land one of those prized berths in the playoffs, then offensive stars like John McDaniel will have to lift their burgandy pants off the ground and come alive.

So the team acquired two untested but promising young prospects, Ricky Thompson and McDaniel. Thompson was grabbed from the Baltimore Colts, who felt the third-year man was expendable after Roger Carr returned triumphantly from off-season surgery.

And the Cincinnati Bengals gave away McDaniel after also losing defensive back Lemar Parrish and defensive end Coy Bacon to the Skins via the free agent draft. Both have enjoyed excellent seasons, sharing a half-dozen touchdown passes between them.

The Lincoln University graduate is exceptionally fast, and runs some of the most beautiful pass routes this side of the Potomac. Although he only caught ten passes for 106 yards as a substitute for the Bengals last season, John still holds a club record with nine pass receptions for 210 yards against the Oakland Raiders in 1976.

But he only caught one touchdown pass in four years with the Cincinnati club, a feat he surpassed in the second game this season with the Skins. He holds all the pass-catching records at his alma mater, and doubles as a superb special team player.

John McDaniel gets ready to catch another touchdown for the Redskins. McDaniel and the Skins need an offensive resurgence if they expect to get into the NFC playoffs. A key matchup against the Atlanta Falcons, Sunday, Dec. 10 at 1 p.m. on CBS-TV, could clear up the playoff picture considerably.

Ken Brings Spark

That's how everyone who watches football in the NFL views the Cincinnati Bengal quarterback, Ken Anderson. But a long losing streak can even unravel the coolest among us.

The Bengals, who got off to a miserable start, have suddenly come alive, thanks to the return of Anderson. The Augustana University grad injured his shoulder in a pre-season game, and wasn't even available until the season was well under way.

But the much-maligned Bengal team faces one of its stiffest challenges of the season when they travel into the sunshine of Los Angeles to meet the playoff-bound Los Angeles Rams on ABC-TV's "Monday, Night Football," Dec. 11 (9 p.m.).

After trading away some of its prized veterans,the Cincinnati club is suddenly very green, but Anderson is just the type to direct such a team down the path to victory.

Is Ken really like most portray him? Even more so, if you can believe that. He shys away from the spotlight so visible to someone of his stature and feels many people make pro football players into something almost godlike.

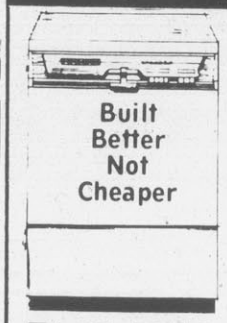

"People are always trying to make pro football players into something special, but we're not," he says with typical calmness. "We take out the garbage and go to the grocery store just like everybody else. We like to putter around in the yard and chat with the neighbors. We just happen to work on weekends, travel a little more than most people, and get a longer vacation."

But even the seven-year veteran can't dispute statistics, which indicate that he is indeed something special. In fact, his passing completion percentage of almost 57 percent makes him the most accurate passer in the history of the league.

Love And Friendship

Children and Christmas trees are a natural pairing at Yuletide, but a little girl particularly in need of a merry Christmas is treated to one by a very unique pine tree, on "The Tiny Tree," an animated special to be rebroadcast Saturday, Dec. 16 (8:30 to 9 p.m), on CBS-TV.

As Squire Badger, the narrator of the tale says, "The Tiny Tree" is about "love and sharing, not just at Christmas but all the year round." The tree of the title is a small whispering pine standing in a meadow by an abandoned farmhouse. One spring, a lonely little girl, prevented by an accident from running and playing with other children, moves with her family into the farmhouse.

All the animals of the neighboring forest and the small pine tree befriend the girl as they relish the joys of the seasons together. Then winter comes. It is just before Christmas and a big snowstowm has isolated the farm from town, where the little girl's Christmas presents are waiting. For the animals, it means a difficult time finding food. Together, the child and her forest friends, especially the tree, find a way to make their holiday a joyous one.

Johnny Marks, who has been called "Mr. Christmas of the Music World," wrote the music and lyrics for the special. Marks' most famous Christmas classic is the ever popular "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer." More than 115 million recordings of this perennial holiday favorite have been sold. Another of his well-known modern Christmas songs, "I Heard the Bells on Christmas Day," is sung by Buddy Ebsen in "The Tiny Tree."

Although the song was already an established favorite, Marks says that it was a natural song for Ebsen, as Squire Badger, to sing as he busily decorates for Christmas.

One previously unpublished song that also seemed a natural was "Minuet for a Clarinet,"a spritely tune about the different instruments in the orchestra. On "The Tiny Tree," it is sung by the animals of the forest on a summer night as they entertain the lonely little girl.

Besides Ebsen, the special features the voice of Roberta Flack, who sings two of the principal tunes, "To Love and Be Loved," the theme song, and "When Autumn Comes."

Frosty Says 'I Do'

The indomitable Frosty the Snowman takes a bride and gains a new friend in "Frosty's Winter Wonderland," an animated Christmas special featuring the voices of Andy Griffith, Shelley Winters, Dennis Day, Jackie Vernon and Paul Frees, airing Wednesday, Dec. 13 (8 to 8:30 p.m.), on ABC-TV.

Narrated and sung by Griffith, "Frosty's Winter Wonderland" is the story of how true love overcomes all adversity when — to alleviate Frosty's loneliness — the youngsters who made Frosty (Vernon) last winter, create a Mrs. Frosty (Winters) to be his companion during the long cold nights and during the summer, when Frosty must return to the North Pole to avoid melting.

Our Story: EARL CNUTE HOWLS WITH RAGE AT HIS UNWELCOME BEDFELLOW. THEN HE REMEMBERS THAT HE HAS BETROTHED HIS DAUGHTER GRACE TO A FAR MORE DISGUSTING ONE.....

.....AND THAT ONE IS KING HROTHGAR. HE AND HIS FOLLOWERS HAVE TAKEN OVER CNUTE'S CASTLE FOR A PROLONGED NUPTIAL CELEBRATION, OR UNTIL THE MEAD CASKS RUN DRY.

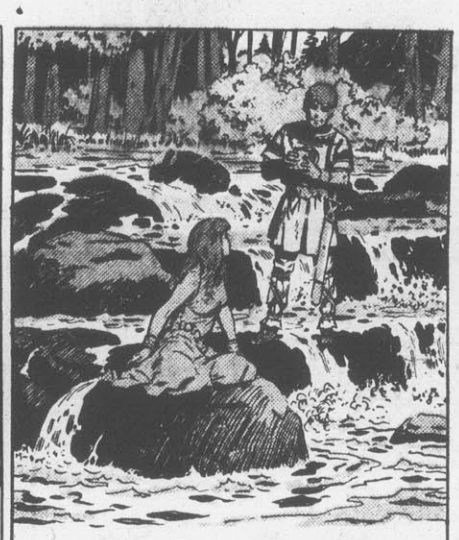

ARN TAKES GRACE TO HIS QUIET LITTLE CAMP IN THE MOUNTAINS AWAY FROM THE HORRID ORGY. "I WILL NOT SHAVE MY BEARD UNTIL YOU ARE FREE OF OLD KING HROTHGAR!" VOWS ARN SERIOUSLY. "BETTER GROW ONE FIRST!" LAUGHS GRACE MERRILY.

BUT GRACE SERVES HER HUSBAND-TO-BE AS IS THE CUSTOM AND HE IS PLEASED AT HER SUBMISSIVENESS, EVEN IF HIS ALE TASTES SALTY AND HIS PLATE CONTAINS MORE GRISTLE AND BONE THAN MEAT.

EACH MORNING GRACE SLIPS AWAY TO JOIN ARN AT HIS CAMP. "I'LL WAGER OLD HROTHGAR WILL NOT BETROTH HIS DAUGHTER SIGRID TO A BEAST LIKE HIMSELF!"

"HIS DAUGHTER! DID YOU SAY HIS DAUGHTER?" CRIES ARN, "MAYBE WE CAN CHANGE HIS MIND."

2183

"HAVE YOU A PLAN?" ASKS GRACE. "NO," ANSWERS ARN, "BUT I'LL MAKE ONE UP ON MY WAY TO HIS KINGDOM IN HROTHLAND."
