

Massive N.C. Anti-Crime Report Issued

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A massive anti-crime report given Gov. Jim Hunt by his administration's top law enforcement official recommends enacting a new outlaw statute, allowing citizens to legally shoot and kill certain fugitives designated as dangerous by the courts.

A new outlaw statute, replacing an 1866 law struck down as unconstitutional, was one of a wide range of recommendations drawn up by the Governor's Crime Commission and J. Phil Carlton, Hunt's departing secretary of crime control and public safety.

The detailed, 562-page report released today also recommends the General Assembly enact a non-partisan merit system of selecting trial judges, a fixed-sentencing act, tougher drug laws and minimum prison terms for second offense convictions of prostitution and breaking and entering.

It also proposes a number of new traffic laws, bringing motorized bicycles, mopeds, under motor vehicle laws and outlawing electronic radar detectors, such as Fuzzbusters.

The report, called "A Crime Control Agenda for North Carolina," contains Carlton's final recommendation for the administration's legislative effort to repeal the outlaw statute in 1975, and said he might tell Hunt he disagreed with some of the report.

"I didn't prepare it and I'll have to study it closely to see what I agree with and what I don't," he said in an interview. "There may be some things I disagree with in detail and there may be some I disagree with in philosophy."

The outlaw statute was struck down as unconstitutional by a three-judge federal panel in 1976. It allowed courts to declare a fugitive an outlaw, permitting any citizen to capture, arrest or, if the fugitive flees, kill him.

Carlton's report said the law was struck down on procedural questions and that a constitutional version could be written.

"We believe it to be essential to protect the public against those fugitives from justice who are successful in evading law enforcement authorities and creating fear in the minds of our citizens," the report said.

The study recommends stepped up enforcement of state drug laws, and asks that the General Assembly double over the next three years the amount of money spent on narcotic law enforcement.

It recommends laws making it a felony to steal or possess blank doctors' prescription forms and for anyone over 18 years old to sell drugs to anyone 18 or under. It would require a doctor's prescription to buy a hypodermic needle.

The report concludes that North Carolina laws on white collar crime and cigarette smuggling are adequate, but recommends more "accountant officers" with expertise to spot business crime.

Rank 11th In Murders

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Despite a five-year decrease in violent crimes, North Carolina has the 11th highest murder rate in the nation, a study released today says.

The number of murders decreased 2 percent in 1977 over the previous year, to 572, while total violent offenses dropped 2.6 percent from 1973 to 1977, the report said.

Aggravated assault cases rose 4.9 percent in 1977, leaving North Carolina the ninth highest aggravated assault rate in the nation.

The statistics are contained in a report sent to Gov. Jim Hunt by his Crime Control Commission and J. Phil Carlton, secretary of crime control and public safety. The report was released today.

Most murders, 70 percent, involved family or friends in 1977, and 8.7 percent occurred as another felony was being committed, such as rape or robbery.

And, the study found, the murder rate was sometimes higher in rural areas than in cities.

For example in Swain County, with a population of 10,400, the murder rate based on a 100,000 population was 28.8. In Mecklenburg County, population 376,500, the rate per 100,000 was 14.6.

"This is to say that the risk of being murdered in Swain County is twice as high as it is in Mecklenburg County," the study said.

Among the other findings:

Reported serious crimes in North Carolina increased by 41.3 percent, to 209,460, from 1973 to 1977. There were 4,084 crime victims for every 100,000 residents of the state in 1977.

Reported rapes increased 11.8 percent over 1976, while robberies dropped 12.3 percent.

North Carolina ranked 17th in the nation in 1977 in the amount of money spent for law enforcement.

It cost the state $7,698.62 to house each prison inmate in 1976, well below the national average of nearly $10,500.

Fuel Rationing

Increasing Chaos In Iran

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) —

Troops fired automatic weapons in the air to rout mobs of anti-shah demonstrators marching toward the U.S. Embassy today but the protesters regrouped and went on rampages in other areas. At the same time, a crippling oil strike forced the government to impose fuel rationing.

Heavy bursts of gunfire shook the downtown area, and pedestrians fled for shelter in office buildings. On one street, some 500 protesters set fire to heaps of tires, blocking traffic and enveloping a yellow Fiat in flames.

Demonstrators said the car had been full of agents of SAVAK, Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's dreaded secret police, who began shooting at the crowd. But the demonstrators said the agents escaped before the car was set ablaze.

The protesters first gathered at the headquarters of the National Iranian Oil Co., then moved toward the nearby American Embassy. Witnesses said the mob dispersed when the soldiers fired into the air, only to form again when the shooting stopped and storm on.

The protests swirled as antishah technical workers struck Iran Air, forcing the national carrier to cancel all 27 flights from Tehran. Antishah strikes also were drying up imports of consumer goods and sent Iran's oil production to such critical levels that the government ordered fuel rationing.

The rationing order was announced by Abdullah Entezam, chairman of the National Iranian Oil Co., who warned the move "might not be enough if the present general strike is continued." He appealed to Moslem leaders who urged the oil workers to walk off the job "to perform your duties and recommend that the strikers end their strike."

Sources said Entezam had agreed to meet any salary demand the workers made, but the strikers said the stoppage would continue until the shah abdicates.

'Good Chance' For New Negotiations

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat said today there is a "very good chance" of peace negotiations with Israel resuming soon but that Egypt had not yet received an invitation.

Sadat's statement to reporters followed a declaration today by Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin that he was prepared to hold "clarification talks" on two issues standing in the way of a treaty.

After a two-hour meeting with members of his ruling party, Sadat said "it appears, especially after what has been declared by U.S. President Carter, that there is a very good chance for a new round of negotiations, but until this moment Premier (Mustafa) Khalil didn't receive any invitation." Sadat said after a two-hour meeting with members of his ruling party.

Carter, who predicted on Christmas eve that a Middle East peace treaty eventually would be signed, has given support to Egyptian proposals for breaking the deadlocked treaty talks.

The Egyptian leader postponed a trip to the upper Egyptian city of Aswan, prompting speculation that arrangements were under way to resume a new round of talks in the coming weeks.

But Sadat said he cancelled the trip for domestic reasons and that it had nothing to do with the peace process. Sadat said he was remaining in Cairo to work out final details of a plan to decentralize the government on Jan. 1.

Asked if intensive, behind-the-scenes arrangements were being made for a new negotiation forum with the help of the United States, Sadat said "not yet" and that such speculation was premature.

SHARP CURVE — WHY?

There is a sharp curve in Highway 264 over on the other side of Wilson about a mile or so from the new section of Interstate 95. I can't find anyone who knows why the state would build a new limited access road that way. C. C.

Les Haislip, Assistant Division Engineer with the N. C. Department of Transportation, provided the answer, which he says has been asked of him often. He said he understands, though this section of road is not in this division, of course, that the reason for the seemingly nonsensical curve is that it is part of a future interchange and was built this way to save future work and expense.

Find More Bodies Under Home Of Killer Suspect

By HOWARD ULMAN
Associated Press Writer

DES PLAINES, Ill. (AP) — A muddy, foul-smelling crawl space beneath the home of a man suspected of killing 32 youths is "like a battle scene in there with all the trenches dug. You're working right in the graves."

Dr. Robert Stein, Cook County medical examiner said Tuesday night that in his 20 years as a forensic pathologist he has never come upon a more horrifying case.

"Before this is all over with, this could be one of the most heinous crimes of the century," said Stein, who has been crawling on his stomach underneath the house.

The skeletal remains of four full bodies and parts of a fifth were found in the crawl space Tuesday, bringing to eight the total found there since the search began Friday. A ninth body was found under a concrete garage floor last week. The search was to continue today.

John Wayne Gacy Jr., 36, a construction contractor who once served a prison term in Iowa for sodomy, reportedly told investigators he had sex with and then killed 32 boys and young men, burying 26 at his home and throwing six in the Des Plaines River.

He is being held without bond on a murder charge and is scheduled to appear in court Friday.

Gacy, who was twice divorced, had lived in the house for six years, the last two alone.

Stein said he is not close to identifying any of the victims and some may never be identified. "The teeth are excellent but we still have to have the dental reports to match them," he said.

Edmund Dobbs, chief of Cook County Sheriff's Police, said that "based on my information they're all young boys."

L. Joseph Kozenczak, who is heading the investigation for Des Plaines police, said Frank Landig, 19, of Chicago, whose body was found Nov. 12 in the Des Plaines River southwest of Joliet, may have been one of Gacy's victims.

Kozenczak said Landig's naked body was found with bikini underwear stuffed in his mouth. He added that bodies found at Gacy's home also had underwear or cloth in their mouth when found.

"Here's a straightforward case, isn't it, for capital punishment, the electric chair," said Stein. "I'm a physician, hence I'm against the taking of any life, but here is a classic example for the electric chair."

"He claims, what, 32 bodies? I bet you money you're going to find that many."

Dobbs said about 20 men worked inside Gacy's home Tuesday. Some tore out flooring and dug through the crawl space. Technicians spread buckets of mud on the ground behind the home, looking for remains.

Stein said the excavation would proceed slowly because workers risk becoming sick from breathing methane, hydrogen sulfide and other gases released during the decomposition of human flesh.

Algeria Leader Is Dead

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — Algerian President Houari Boumediene, a fiery pillar of Third World radicalism, died today. Algerian state radio announced. The 53-year-old president suffered from a rare blood disease and had lain in a coma for 40 days.

PRES. BOUMEDIENNE

Boumediene had been kept alive at Algiers' Mustafa Hospital by life-support systems tended by top physicians from the United States, Europe, Cuba and the Soviet Union. The broadcast said he died at 3:55 a.m. (10:55 p.m. Tuesday EST.)

"The nation is mourning," said the Algerian announcer. "His state of health was abruptly aggravated during the last night."

The Guy's "Test" Was $3,000 Lesson

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am in love with a man I've been dating for three years. Three months ago he asked to borrow $3,000 to complete a business deal. He said he'd pay me back in 30 days.

I gave him the $3,000 and didn't want to insult him by asking for an IOU.

Five weeks passed without a mention of the money, so I asked him how his deal was coming. He said it fell through, but that he had used the $3,000 to repay another debt. He said he would repay me as soon as he sold a piece of property he owned.

A month later I brought up the matter of the money again and he said the property didn't bring as much as he thought it would, but he'd try to give me half of what he owed me as soon as possible.

Abby, I mentioned the money again last evening and he said he didn't really need it in the first place; he was only testing me to see if I'd give it to him!

Now I'm confused, angry and disappointed. The $3,000 won't break me, but I'm not richer either. I'm not the type to take legal steps to get my money. What do you make of this whole episode?

MIXED EMOTIONS

DEAR MIXED: The gentlemen appears to be a flake. Be prepared to write off the $3,000 as tuition in the school of experience. And never lend money without a proper IOU. (P.S. If you're still in love with him, I suggest you keep your heartstrings and your purse strings separate.)

DEAR ABBY: A friend of mine just got her nose re-done. Abby, there wasn't anything wrong with it, but she thought it was too big. That was last year. Now she wants to have her breasts enlarged!

What do you think of people who get themselves done over? I think it's phony, selfish and egotistical.

M. FROM KANSAS

DEAR M.: You are entitled to your opinion, and so is your friend. Anything people do about their appearance that will make them feel better about themselves is all right with me. Now, what's YOUR problem?

DEAR ABBY: Please tell SICK OF THE SAME DRESS whose co-worker wears the same dress for two weeks straight that's she's lucky she doesn't work with my husband.

He wears the same pair of trousers every day until they wear out.

He says it's too much trouble to take the things out of his pockets every night!

GIVEN UP ON HIM

DEAR GIVEN UP: Your husband is slackadassical.

Removing Wax Stains

If you have to remove wax stains from upholstered furniture, you'll find prompt action is the key.

However, don't be in such a rush that you forget to pre-test the fabric for color bleeding and shrinkage. To find out if a home dry cleaning solution is safe, try it out on a hidden area other than a seam. Be sure to follow product directions.

And for a sure test, allow the dry cleaning solution to set on the fabric from one to two hours. Should the fabric bleed or shrink, get professional advice and assistance.

Now to treat wax stains on safe fabrics, rub the spill with an ice cube that's been wrapped in a waterproof material. Then carefully scrape off excess wax with a dull knife.

If possible, place the stained fabric between several layers of tissue or paper towels and press with a warm iron. If this is not possible, put several layers of paper on top of the stain and press with a warm iron.

To remove any remaining stain, sponge the area lightly with a dry cleaning solution. If colored stain still remains, sponge with alcohol or hot water. But do be careful not to soak the fabric.

In fact, after each treatment, blot upholstery fabric as dry as possible and allow area to dry quickly.

Gravy stains

Scrape off excess gravy with a dull table knife. Soak the item in cold water or a cool enzyme pre-soak. Work detergent into the stain and then rinse. Treat any grease stain by sponging with trichloroethane. Let the item air dry and then launder it, using a bleach appropriate for the fabric.

Pine resins

These stains may be impossible to remove. Work on the stain before it has a chance to dry. Sponge it with trichloroethane (spot remover). Let the area dry, then work detergent into the stain. Rinse thoroughly.

the auction. Before playing to the second trick, you should count your winners—eight hearts and the ace of spades. You can collect a tenth trick either by setting up a long spade or by finding East with the ace of clubs. You must plan the play carefully to explore both possibilities.

Obviously, your first choice should be to test the spades. However, there is a danger that if you concede a spade trick, East might win and shift to clubs, placing you in danger of losing two club tricks before the spades can be developed. Is there a way to ensure that East does not win the second spade? Yes! Instead of ruffing the ace of diamonds, discard your spade loser.

This loser-on-loser play works wonders. Assume that West shifts to a trump. Win in your hand with an honor, lead a spade to the ace and ruff a spade—with an honor! You will need all your low trumps as entries to the dummy. Overtake the seven of trumps with the nine and ruff another spade high. Cross to a trump in dummy and ruff a third spade with a trump honor, and now dummy's last spade is high.

You still have a low trump with which to reach the table, and the fifth spade will provide you with a club discard. In all, you lose two diamond tricks and a club, and earn everyone's admiration.

Here's an opportunity to test your skill at handling the dummy. Cover the East-West hands with your thumbs and then decide how you play four hearts after West leads the king of diamonds and continues with the ace.

Once partner could not open the bidding, you do well to give up all thoughts of slam and simply bid what you think you can make. On this hand that proves most fortuitous, for as the cards lie, your opponents can make a small slam in either minor, yet neither can safely enter

High Hopes For Farm Exports

The United States' recognition of communist China will obviously have major effects on U. S. world trade.

And the question has to arise as to how that trade will affect North Carolina and Eastern North Carolina in particular.

Well, China was once a major customer for United States grown tobacco and when the nationalists were driven from the mainland the market was suddenly cut off. The loss probably had much to do with major reorganizations of the independent tobacco companies in the United States.

Many tobacco marketing experts have expressed doubts that the United States can now make inroads into the state controlled China market. Nevertheless China is a big user of tobacco and the prospects are enticing. As always it will depend on how good a selling job the industry does.

China will have need for other products from United States farms. Corn, soybeans and wheat will likely be products which China will want. There could also be a market there for our poultry and pork production.

Farmers might find encouragement from the government to develop the China market for their products, since we are looking to the purchase of oil from the Chinese. Exporting farm products could offset some of the costs of purchasing oil.

American farmers are almost exclusive in the world in that they seem able always to produce more than our country can consume. With other parts of the world crying for agricultural products the export opportunities seem to be bright. China has the largest population on earth and constantly faces the problem of how to feed its millions. It should be an ideal market for U.S. farm production.

Should Back Up Reasonable Response

Gov. Jim Hunt says he has told President Carter and HEW Secretary Joseph Califano that North Carolina "absolutely will not" merge any of its programs among the University of North Carolina's 16 campuses.

The governor's comments were in response to HEW's continued pressure for further concessions on the state's higher education desegregation program.

The governor's response is reasonable and something that we should be able to stand on. North Carolina has done more than should be expected in developing its higher education desegregation plans.

Aging Should Be Better

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — There are important gains in knowledge being made about people growing old.

But little is being done to pull that knowledge together, spread the word, and put it into practice.

The school of medicine at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill would like to fill that vacuum with a Geriatrics program which Dr. William J. Cromartie feels would make this state "The world center for research and training in the field of geriatrics, if we care to go in that direction."

The state already has the foundation: a network of Area Health Education Centers in which aging clinics can gain further knowledge and apply research: superior medical schools and facilities; universities and the Research Triangle Park; and Veterans Administration facilities in which an aging population is concentrated.

Conclusions

Dr. Cromartie and several of his colleagues at the School of Medicine have created a Committee on Aging to explore the potential and suggest the proper course. A report on that work is now in the hands of members of the General Assembly Commission on Aging, and the spadework underway to seek funding and authority from the 1979 General Assembly session to proceed.

The university committee compiled a "Policy Statement on Health and Medical Care Programs for the Elderly" which pinpoints the proposed activities — teaching, research, clinical services, and interaction between the School of Medicine and public or private agencies concerned with services to the elderly.

Teaching and research would be the priority phases. "The expanding body of knowledge about the biology, psychology, and sociology of aging permits the formulation of improved programs of health care for the elderly. To assure that all older citizens receive the benefits to be derived from the translation of this increased knowledge into services for the aged will require a coordinated statewide program..." the university committee feels.

The specialists consider major advances in understanding cell structures and the aging process in its infancy. "The possibility of understanding the nature of the aging process, and with this understanding of controlling to a considerable degree the process is considered by many investigators to be among the greatest challenges facing society," the committee report says.

"It is more efficient to prevent functional dependency as long as possible so that the individual may live at home, than to provide institutional care for preventable problems.

"The School believes that it can serve as a valuable partner... and that major advances would be made which would benefit all citizens of North Carolina."

The first step will be an effort to secure from the General Assembly about $125,000 the first year and $228,000 the second to hire the experts and put them into the Geriatrics program.

Over the years, a total of between $2 and $4 million annual operating money and about $20 million for building, laboratories and clinics would be needed to underwrite the program. Other funding sources, including federal, would match each of those state dollars with two additional dollars.

Can Do

"There is reason to believe that such a goal can be reached through a well-balanced program of research, education, and

Everyone In The Act

WASHINGTON — Everyone is mad at the OPEC nations for raising the price of oil by 14 1/2 percent. They also seem to be madder at the Arab countries than the other members of OPEC. My theory on this is that every time the photographers take photos of the oil ministers, the Arab ones stand out because they are dressed in their bur-nooses, while the other OPEC representatives fade into the background in their English-tailored suits.

I, for one, think the OPEC people made a serious mistake in raising the price of their oil. The reason they gave was that the dollar had been so weakened by inflation that they were losing money. What they didn't say was one of the major reasons for the dollar sagging was the price they put on their oil in the first place.

Since the OPEC nations have accumulated most of the dollars in the world, it would have been in their interests to CUT the price of oil by 14 1/2 percent rather than raise it. This would have sent the value of the dollar to new heights, and wrecked the Japanese yen, the German mark, and the Sri Lankan rupee.

ART BUCHWALD

Other Editors Say OPEC Wonderland

Greensboro Daily News

The OPEC oil-producing nations agree on very little, except when it comes to gouging the rest of the world with ever-higher oil prices. True to form, OPEC voted to increase the price of a barrel of crude oil by a whopping 14.5 per cent in 1979 — that over the gentle protests of moderates such as Saudi Arabia and strife-torn Iran.

What is astonishing about the increase is that the OPEC countries appear oblivious to their bitter experience with earlier dramatic oil price increases. By quadrupling the price of their oil after the 1973 Mideast war, OPEC members — who supply over 30 per cent of the world's petroleum — reaped enormous windfall profits.

But they also helped fuel unprecedented world-wide inflation by driving up the cost of petroleum-dependent goods from synthetic fibers to home heating oil. That inflation, in turn, bid up the price of exported goods OPEC members purchased with their petrodollars.

Now that the OPEC members find their own fat oil-based surpluses shrinking in the face of inflation — from $65 billion in 1974 to only $15 billion today — their knee-jerk response has been to hoist prices again.

A few months ago, OPEC's disruptive ambitions would have been scoffed at. A world-wide glut of oil, brought on by new discoveries of oil in places like Alaska and the gradual shifting away from dependency on oil in many countries, had depressed prices and undermined some of OPEC's clout.

But a voluntary cutback of production in Saudi Arabia, which accounts for one-third of OPEC's total output, followed by the oil-field strikes in Iran, have made the surplus suddenly evaporate. The OPEC countries, in other words, are looking for quick profits now that industrialized nations have increased their short-term thirst for OPEC oil.

No wonder, then, that the Carter administration, among other Western governments, has denounced OPEC's plan. Perhaps when the OPEC countries realize the impact of their action, they will cap this outlandish price hike to conform with economic reality.

The new price raise just cooked up in Abu Dhabi will not solve the dollar problem, but exacerbate it, and in a year the OPEC countries will be complaining again how their dollars are being blown away by the winds of inflation.

I wish I could only blame OPEC and the Arabs in OPEC for all our problems. But I just talked to an economist who said the cost of fuel, while it starts with the OPEC countries, goes through many stages.

"When the cost of crude oil is raised," he told me, "everyone gets in the act. Let's say that the OPEC chaps add three cents to the price of a gallon in Abu Dhabi.

"The 'seven sister' oil companies at the Petroleum Club in Houston say to each other, 'Hey, since the OPEC ministers have raised the price three cents, this is a good chance for us to raise it two cents more. The consumer will blame the Arabs and we'll be let off scot-free.'

"So now we have five cents added to the gallon. But the people who transport oil in

THE INSIDE REPORT

The Tax Revolt Is Alive

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Unless there is an awakening to reality at the White House, President Carter is in danger of being bowled over for the second straight year by the unexpected advent of the tax revolt.

With the adjournment of Congress and end of the election campaign, the president and his advisers wrote off tax cut fever as an aberration happily departed. In fact, lawmakers returning here Jan. 15 will have tax-reduction schemes in their hands and hearts' with the prospect of full-scale anti-tax rebellion if a recession is around the corner.

Inexperience might explain Carter's loss of control in the 1978 tax fight. But there is no excuse for being hit from the blind side so soon again.

While the president and his men congratulate themselves on the demise of what they consider the tax-cut hysteria, they actually face two threats as the new Congress convenes:

Threat No. 1: Carter's "wage insurance" scheme may well be converted inside the House Ways and Means Committee into a tax "indexing." That is, the president's limited tax relief compensation for inflation to workers whose unions forgo inflationary wage increases — would turn into general tax relief for everybody.

That is nothing more or less than a general tax reduction.

This proposal is privately pushed by Republican members of Ways and Means, but surely will pick

Avers Neutrality A Keystone

By JOHN CUNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Racial segregation and discrimination are "surely contrary to American ideals and to everything a university stands for," said Robert Sproull, president of the University of Rochester.

"I find them very disagreeable, unfair, intolerable," he said in a discussion of the apartheid policy of South Africa. "All of us," he continued, "can justly feel moral indignation."

But Sproull, in the name of his university, has taken a stand on South Africa that might displease some defenders of human rights.

Sproull believes a university, as an institution, risks damaging its principles when it is used as "a direct instrument of change," no matter that the people who make up that institution favor the change.

He draws an important distinction. He feels that what might be commendable for individuals and voluntary associations, in opposing apartheid, for example, can compromise the intellectual integrity and freedom of a university.

And so, unlike some of his campus brethren, Sproull argues that universities should avoid using their investment portfolios to reward or penalize American corporations that do business with South Africa.

When advocates of one goal or another try to use the university as a direct instrument of change, "we risk damaging the principle that the university must value above all others, its neutrality," he said.

Without neutrality, he insists, "there cannot be academic freedom; and without academic freedom the university would not be worth preserving."

Neutrality isn't a posture taken; it is a keystone.

But neutrality, he fears, is mistaken for indifference rather than for duty or obligation. What some consider to be indifference is, in his view, the fulfillment of the university's moral mandate.

The faculty are free, individually and collectively, to decide what to teach and how to teach it. Students are free to speak their minds. And only, says Sproull, because the university is neutral.

"If the university as an institution took an official position, that act would in effect censure scholars who disagreed," he states.

Unlike some institutions, therefore, Rochester declines to use its huge investment portfolio to reward or punish companies dealing with South Africa, although some of the student body sought such a move.

Apart from the logic and morality of neutrality, Sproull believes that difficulties would be formidable and maybe impossible in mobilizing university support of a particular course of action.

Who would decide the "right" thing to do? Who would choose the "correct" position that would make other viewpoints "wrong?"

Please don't forget, he asks us, how German universities of the 1930s sacrificed their freedom after being corrupted by politics. For those who still advocate direct university action, he asks this:

"If we did our institutional utmost to end apartheid in South Africa, could we then move effectively to give freedom to intellectuals and dissidents in the Soviet Union, or to insure the independence and safety of Israel? Would not one campaign vitiate the next?"

Strength For Today

THE NATURE OF RETRIBUTION

Retribution is not something arbitrarily imposed upon an individual who sins. Rather it is something which is built into the universe and operates automatically. If we do evil, evil will eventually overcome us, unless we repent and make restitution.

A very old man tells about how, when starting out in life, he persuaded some boyhood friends to join him in a business venture. Later, he conspired with a large corporation and sold out his friends for a well-paying job with the corporation.

Here he prospered, and eventually accumulated a fortune of several million dollars. But then, the cold hand of retribution was laid on his shoulder. A new group of businessmen came into control of the corporation and manipulated things so that eventually, at an advanced age, he lost his entire fortune.

Today, forgotten by nearly everyone, he lives in a little shack with the shades drawn, and seldom ventures out of doors.

Weber Case Chills

By OWEN ULLMANN
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The case of Brian Weber has employers walking a tightrope over how to correct racial and sex imbalance on the job. So, a federal agency has thrown up a safety net in hopes of keeping affirmative action alive.

Weber is a white factory worker in Louisiana who sued his employer after being rejected from a craft training program that reserved half its places for minorities. A federal appeals court, ruling in Weber's favor, held that racial quotas or similar "affirmative actions" are illegal without proof of admission of past discrimination by a company.

The case, which is pending before the Supreme Court, creates in the mind of some employers a "damned if I do, damned I don't" situation.

If they initiate job preference plans to head off discrimination suits by minority workers, they may become vulnerable to "reverse discrimination" suits by white workers. But if they first admit past job bias to head off a Weber-type suit, they are inviting minorities to sue for damages.

Because of this dilemma, some employers may decide to do nothing until the Supreme Court issues a definitive ruling on the matter, which may be a long time away.

That's what worries the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, which fears that 15 years of progress in eliminating job discrimination may come to a halt because of the uncertainty.

Most large companies already have affirmative action programs, largely because they are required as a condition of doing business with the U.S. government. What concerns the commission are the millions of small businesses that may spurn affirmative action.

To counteract the "chilling effect" of cases like Weber's, the EEOC has issued guidelines designed to encourage employers to adopt voluntary affirmative action plans.

Essentially, the guidelines are an opinion by EEOC legal

The smokehouse on the farm of A. P. Cayto, Rt. 4, Greenville, was practically cleaned out by a robber or robbers last night.

Eleven hams, 10 shoulders, six heads, four sides and a quantity of backbone were taken early last night. Officers are continuing their investigation but so far no definite clues have been uncovered.

No session of county court was held today. Judge Dink James having previously announced that a recess would be observed today.

The tribunal's docket is in good shape, having been cleared up during the past two weeks.

It was decided not to hold any court this Tuesday because many of the lawyers would be out of the city.

tax reduction bill in 1978 to the president's later dismay, when it was passed intact by the House. Actually, the Social Security tax suspension is only one of several administration-opposed "anti-inflation" proposals being drafted by Jones (lower minimum wage for youth, suspension of revenue sharing to the states, a spartan welfare reform). But it is the one with widest support.

Moreover, scores of congressmen will return to Washington carrying variations of the Nunn bill in their briefcases. The proposal by Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia, to cut federal income tax rates annually if there is an annual reduction in spending, had majority support in both houses but died in the session-end maneuvering. Its attempted resurrection in the face of White House hostility is assured.

Finally, behind all this lies the specter of recession. Should unemployment push up toward 7 percent in 1979, as widely forecast, there will be a major congressional push for a quick tax cut to stimulate the economy. It is one certainty of life on Capitol Hill.

Yet, with the conspicuous exception of Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, the consensus within the Carter administration is that Congress will react to recession with the discredited old medicine of public works spending. "The tax revolt is just as dead as Kemp-Roth," one administration policymaker told us.

In post-mortems of the past year, administration officials actually suggest the president should have vetoed the tax cut and gone to the public for

Russians Test A New Radar

WASHINGTON (AP) — Russia has successfully tested a new radar and missile system that could pose a serious threat to low-flying American bombers and fighters invading Soviet air space, Pentagon officials say.

The Pentagon's research chief said Tuesday a Soviet MiG-25-type fighter has made at least one successful "look down-shoot down" attack, destroying a target drone the size of a small fighter plane. The system could be operational in the early 1980s, he said.

The official, Dr. William Perry, told a briefing that when the new system is in use, it will have "significant implications" for the ability of U.S. fighters and bombers to survive. These planes are believed capable of eluding the radar systems

Russia currently uses by flying close to the ground.

Perry said the significance of the look down-shoot down radar is its ability to distinguish targets such as low-flying aircraft from "ground clutter," which confuses existing radar systems.

As a result, a plane flying at a low altitude is more susceptible to being hit by an enemy missile.

But he added that the United States has the option of trying to counter the threat posed by the new radar by developing advanced jamming techniques or new "deception techniques" for its planes.

experts. They state that employers will not be violating the law if they analyze their employment practices, have "a reasonable basis" for concluding that affirmative action is appropriate and take "reasonable" corrective actions. These actions may include quotas and timetables for giving women and minorities increased job opportunities.

The guidelines provide a way for a company to recognize—and correct — imbalances on the job without having to admit to discriminatory practices.

But, retorts a company, what about the risk of costly damages it may have to pay if it loses a reverse discrimination suit to disgruntled white males passed up for promotion?

The EEOC acknowledges that its guidelines can't stop a company from being sued. Nor can it guarantee that af-

Bank Robber Netted $1

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — What started out as a classic bank robbery has turned into an unsuccessful $1 steal.

Police here say a would-be robber walked up to a drive-in window Tuesday.

And he said to the teller sitting behind bullet-proof glass in his best movie bank robber voice. "This is a holdup. I want your money. I have a gun, or I'll shoot you."

The teller told him she'd have to ask the bank manager for more cash, but gave the robber a buck as a sign of good faith.

He waited, and being a polite robber, told the one car behind him to move ahead. In the car was Raymond Gottlieb, a member of the bank's Board of Directors.

He declined the courtesy, unaware that a robbery was in progress. But he got himself a front-row view of events.

Meanwhile, the bank manager had called the police. They arrived, searched the suspect and found no gun.

He was still clutching the one-dollar bill.

Later, Lawrence White, 20, was charged with robbery. He was being held Tuesday night in lieu of $1,000 bond.

tankers, railroad cars and trucks accidentally run into each other in a diner outside of Chicago and say, "Did you see what they did in Abu Dhabi? Upped the price of fuel three cents." And someone else says, "And the folks in Houston met their three cents and raised them two. I say we should add another cent on for transportation. If we don't do it now we may never get a chance until the next OPEC meeting."

"So now we're talking about a six-cent raise," my economist friend continued. "The refiners add another cent for unleaded, and the oil company sales departments add a cent for good luck."

"The advertising departments tell management they're going to need another two cents a gallon to sponsor more good shows on public television, so the people who have to pay an additional 10 cents a gallon will think nice things about oil companies."

"Then what you're saying is, the only thing we can hope to get out of the OPEC meeting in Abu Dhabi is another TV series like 'Upstairs, Downstairs?'"

"You got it."

"Is there any hope that the price of oil will ever go down?"

"Only if they discover a lot of it off the coast of New Jersey."

"That would be awful."

"Why do you say that?"

"Well, it's one thing to kiss the hem of an Arab's bur-noose in Saudi Arabia—but it's another to kiss one worn by a person who comes from New Jersey."

No Budget Cuts If SALT II Signed

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Military officials say anyone expecting a U.S.-Soviet nuclear arms agreement to halt the drive for advanced weapons or lead to defense budget cuts is in for a disappointment. "We will have to increase the present spending rate to keep essential equivalence even with a SALT II treaty," said Defense Secretary Harold Brown.

Gen. David Jones, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, made it clear recently that the nation's top military leaders will support a SALT agreement only if "we can proceed with the programs necessary to allow essential equivalence."

By "essential equivalence," Brown and Jones mean that the U.S. nuclear striking force must be kept in approximate balance with that of the Soviet Union — not only in numbers but in effectiveness.

Only in this way, they believe, can the United States remain certain that the Russians will be deterred from launching a surprise knockout blow in the future.

While Brown indicated defense spending would have to increase under SALT II, he says spending would have to rise even more — by perhaps $2 billion a year — in the absence of a new agreement.

"Without a SALT treaty, they probably would do more and we would probably do more," Brown said, referring to the action-reaction aspect of the arms race. Advocates of a SALT II treaty hope it will temper that spiral.

Pressure on President Carter from liberal interests not to cut social programs from the new federal budget in favor of defense has been countered by pressure from conservatives to increase defense outlays in view of Soviet weapons growth.

Since a SALT treaty would face a severe test in the Senate, where a two-thirds vote is required for ratification, analysts say Carter cannot risk alienating conservative senators on the defense budget issue. According to present indications, Carter will follow through on his public pledge to increase defense spending by about 3 percent beyond inflation in the budget he sends to Congress next month. Defense spending in the proposed budget is expected to total about $123 billion in fiscal 1980.

That would represent a victory for Brown and the Joint Chiefs over opposing forces in the Office of Management and Budget and other agencies which have fought to curb military spending in favor of domestic programs.

Periodic Review Of Portfolios Advised

INTERSTATE SECURITIES CORP.

Many investors postpone reviewing their portfolios until year-end to take advantage of tax changes. Tax considerations could be more important than ever this year, but there are other reasons for a periodic review of your holdings. Your investment objectives may have changed, and near and intermediate term market prospects are a major element to consider as well.

Every portfolio should be reviewed at least once a year because of a constantly changing investment environment. You may require a higher level of income because of retirement, or you may be able to assume a greater degree of risk now because of changing personal factors. Some of your holdings may no longer be appropriate for your objectives.

Each individual issue should be evaluated for suitability. Fundamentals may have changed for the worst at a particular company and the stock may no longer be expected to do well. The industries represented in your holdings should be studied for their probable attraction in a changing economy.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average and the Standard and Poor's 500 peaked out late in 1976, and subsequently rallied to set new highs. Around 785, the Dow average is about 5 percent lower than at year end 1977. Most of the largest and widely held companies performed in a similar manner and are lower than a year ago.

The AMEX and NASDAQ indexes, on the other hand, reached new highs in the spring and summer of 1978. Even after the sharp sell-off in October, most of these stocks are higher than at year-end 1977.

Faced with rising interest rates, a probable decline in corporate profits and the likelihood of a recession next year, these market averages are likely to decline early in 1979. Profits and losses should be established and your portfolio more defensively invested.

The Revenue Act of 1978 includes a number of changes relevant to investors, and the timing of these changes differs. The holding period has been changed, the amount of loss allowed to offset ordinary income has been increased, and the capital gains tax has been changed. The complexity of the law makes it necessary for investors to consult an accountant or tax expert in order to maximize their after-tax returns.

Changing tax laws may make it convenient to review your holdings at the end of the year.

Contaminated By Radiation

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Radiation, probably emanating from an isotope deposited during the last ice age, forced two nursing homes to stop using their wells for drinking water, health officials say.

The Briarcliff Healthcare Facility in Johnston and Allen's Nursing Home in South Kingston began hauling municipal water in tank trucks after the radiation was discovered in October. John V. Hagopian, chief of the state Division of Water Supply, said Friday the radiation is emitted by radium 226 and exceeds federal safety limits. However, risks to patients exposed to the radiation are negligible, he said. Well water is still used for baths, officials said.

Smaller Papers During Strike

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Cleveland Press has reduced the size of its afternoon editions in an effort to stretch its newsprint supplies while a strike by paper mill workers, now in its fifth month, continues.

The newspaper said Tuesday that its usual four or more news sections had been reduced to three and that the reduction would continue until supplies return to normal.

N.C. Work Force Grew During Year

By NAOMI KAUFMAN
Associated Press Writer

Unemployment declined, the labor force grew and industrial development reached record levels in 1978, but many North Carolina workers still found their paychecks less than those of workers in other states.

Through the first 10 months of the year, the unemployment rate in the state was about 4.1 percent, down from the 1977 average of 5.9 percent. The work force during the same 10 months was up by about 50,000 to almost 2.7 million. The total workforce in 1977 averaged 2.62 million persons.

But while manufacturing wages increased by about 10 percent, the average hourly wage for production workers in North Carolina was $4.56 an hour in September. The national average was $6.28 an hour in September, or about 38 percent higher.

"We're still on the bottom (in wage)," said Dave Garrison, assistant director of the Bureau of Research for the Employment Security Commission.

Garrison said the comparatively low wages are largely due to the composition of the labor force. Despite state officials' often-successful efforts to attract high-paying jobs to the state, about one-third of the labor force works in the furniture, textile and apparel industries, which traditionally pay lower wages.

Textile workers got an average wage of $4.37 an hour in September while cigarette manufacturing workers averaged $7.49 an hour in September, and pulp and paper workers averaged $7.43.

"It will take a heck of a lot of industrial development to overcome that low wage," Garrison said.

Even when high-paying industries come into the state, they often find that they can't find enough skilled workers here, said Charles Jeffress, assistant commissioner of labor.

"Generally, the most skilled workers, and therefore the highest paid, are recruited elsewhere," Jeffress said. Labor Commissioner John Brooks recently estimated that about 20,000 potentially high-paying jobs would be available to North Carolinians if industries could find the workers.

Gary Pearce, press secretary to Gov. Jim Hunt, said Hunt is concerned about the low wage scale but feels industrial development in the works will improve the wage situation.

Industrial development continued to increase. Larry D. Cohick, state director of economic development, said he expected industrial investment to reach $2 billion in 1978, or more than a half billion dollars more than last year's figure.

Through November, 154 companies announced new plants for North Carolina and another 209 announced expansion of existing plants. The projects added almost 27,000 new jobs during the year.

The increase in construction jobs was the largest. Garrison said construction employment was up 6.8 percent from September 1977 to September 1978. Manufacturing jobs increased by only 1.8 percent during that period, government jobs increased by 3.9 percent and service jobs increased by 5.1 percent.

Layoff Notices For Cleveland

CLEVELAND (AP) — Police officers received their notices and firefighters get them today — 1,325 layoff slips that could bring this city's money problems home to hundreds.

Safety Director James Barrett distributed notices late Tuesday to 875 of the city's 1,187-member police force. He said 450 firefighters on the 1,002-member force would get the message today.

"It's like saying 'Happy New Year, here's your layoff,'" said Officer Edward Pischel, a 16-year police veteran who was discharged while 23 of the 40 men on his shift were let go.

"It's incredible the politicians would let this happen," he said.

Cleveland is in default on $15.5 million of short-term notes owed to banks and its own treasury. Mayor Dennis Kucinich says he will discharge 2,000 employees Jan. 2 if the city still is in default.

Kucinich called a special meeting of the City Council Tuesday to seek approval for a plan to pledge city payroll tax receipts and municipal property as loan collateral, but 17 members — including President George Forbes — boycotted it and there was not a quorum.

"There is no morale right now," said officer Jerry Kraiger. "Some of the men have mortgages of up to $300 a month. They've got to have food, electricity, gas, car payments. ... It makes you sick at heart."

Withholding Women's Names

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Jaycee chapter hopes to avoid the wrath of the national organization by withholding names of women it has accepted for membership, chapter president John Johnson says.

The club's national office has notified its estimated 80 U.S. chapters with women members that local groups could be expelled at the January meeting of the national board of directors for violating an all-male membership rule. "We have not submitted the names of our women to the national membership and we don't intend to," said Johnson. He says the tactic will allow the Atlanta group to retain its charter while the status of women members is decided in court.

The club, sponsored by the Mathematical Association of America and the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics, was founded in 1957 at the University of Oklahoma.

Cars Collided At Intersection

An estimated $500 damage resulted to each of two vehicles involved in an 8 a.m. collision yesterday at the intersection of Ninth and Washington Streets.

Police identified the drivers of the vehicles as Jerry Marcus Grimsley of Winterville, and Lillian Hickom Smith of Route 1, Winterville.

Some Claim Too Much Fowl Served

RALEIGH, N. C. (AP) — Some inmates of Central Prison have complained that too much of the food they are being served is "fowl" — not the quality, but the quantity of chicken and products incorporating chicken.

Nineteen inmates have filed a grievance with the N. C. Inmate Grievance Commission, saying things are going too far when, on top of the chicken they get, the bologna and wieners incorporate chicken.

Inmate Gene Safrit complained. "The kitchen stewards have almost cut off our supply of pork. We've been getting chicken wieners and chicken bologna for six months."

Safrit says so much chicken is making him sick. He said he believes prison officials are showing preferential treatment for inmates whose religion prevents them from eating pork.

Not so, said S. D. Stewart, the officer in charge. "I have nothing to do with the type of products the state buys. I serve whatever is shipped. The reason for the chicken bologna and franks is purely economical — being that poultry products are much cheaper than beef and pork products," said Stewart.

He added that the nutrition value of chicken products is the same or better since they contain less animal fat.

Safrit says the matter has become serious to him. "Last night," he wrote, "I had a very traumatic experience. I dreamed I was a chicken and this farmer was trying to catch me and eat me. When I woke up I had chicken feathers all over my bed."

He went on to say the feathers had come from his pillow.

Fred G. Morrison Jr., executive director of the grievance commission, says the matter will be taken up at the group's next meeting Jan. 5.

'Holiday Joy' Aboard Plane

RALEIGH, N. C. (AP) — A well-dressed Philadelphia man aboard an Eastern Airlines Flight from Raleigh to New York decided Christmas Day that he would spread a little holiday joy for his fellow passengers.

So while the plane was somewhere over New Jersey, the unidentified man began taking off his clothes. When he was naked, he took his seat. But his efforts were not fully appreciated.

"The flight attendant was pretty unnerved when she came and told me," said Capt. Donald C. Bennett, pilot of the flight, in a telephone interview Tuesday from his home in Laconia, N.H. "Some of the passengers took offense; some thought it was a riot," he said.

After a word from the second officer, the man went to the restroom and dressed. The entire incident lasted less than five minutes, Bennett said.

The man was moved to another seat after he dressed so he wouldn't further offend those who didn't appreciate his holiday spirit, Bennett said.

Meanwhile Bennett had radioed LaGuardia Airport in New York City he had a naked man on board. An Eastern official and three New York Port Authority policemen were waiting when the plane landed.

"I asked him if he did this all the time," said Allen M. Taylor, an Eastern shift coordinator, in a telephone interview Tuesday.

Arrest 6th For Holdup

CAMP LEJEUNE, N. C. (AP) — A sixth suspect was arrested today in the holdup of a pharmacy at a hospital last week at Camp Lejeune.

Authorities said Pfc. Thomas Hill was taken into custody when he returned to the base following a leave. Hill, 21, of Florence, Wis., was charged with conspiracy to commit armed robbery and being an accessory after the holdup.

Four Marines and a sailor were arrested Friday in connection with the holdup of the pharmacy at the Naval Regional Medical Center Thursday night. Authorities said drugs with a street value estimated at $100,000 were taken from the pharmacy.

The other suspects were identified as hospital technician Mark Baxa of Columbus, Neb.; Lance Cpl. Jeffrey Verra of Schenectady, N.Y.; Pfc. Clyde N. Harcrow of Colorado Springs, Colo.; Staff Sgt. Charles A. Kunz of San Francisco; and Pvt. James Hartell of Antioch, Ill.

The five suspects arrested last week appeared before a military magistrate Tuesday and were ordered to remain in custody. They must be tried within 90 days.

Maj. John Woggon, public affairs officer, said some of the drugs taken in the holdup were found near a trailer park where the suspects lived.

Conversation Gems Provided

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pressed for conversation at holiday get-togethers? Really pressed? Try these items from the Agriculture Department's annual book of statistics:

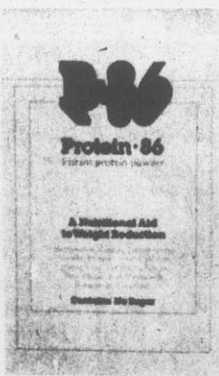

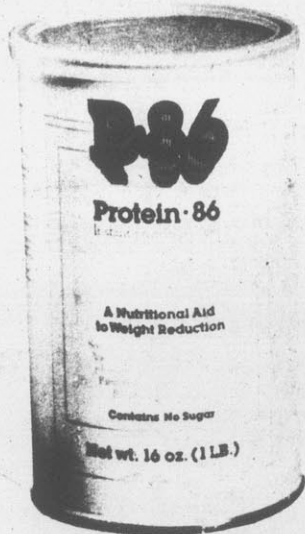

There were about 4,318,000 colonies of honey bees in the United States in 1977. About 12,447,000 cases of sauerkraut were turned out. Oregon produced 11,400 tons of filberts, a cracking good crop compared to only 6,950 in 1976. And the price of milk sold by dairy farmers in the Black Hills of South Dakota averaged $9.58 per hundred pounds. The statistical yearbook is available for $6 from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

Time To Build New-Type Car

By HOWARD BENEDICT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Time is running out on the internal combustion engine and a joint government-industry effort like that which sent men to the moon may be necessary to develop the automobile of the future, says Transportation Secretary Brock Adams.

And because of the deteriorating world petroleum situation, a replacement for conventional auto engines must be found within the next decade, Adams said in an interview.

"The motor vehicle is the prime mover of our society, and our mobility and much of our economy depend on a fragile alliance with the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries," he said. "The recent OPEC price rise and events in Iran reinforce my belief that we must have a new type of propulsion unit.

"The government is going to have to be involved very heavily in the basic and advanced research because the automotive companies say they just do not have the resources or the inclination to get into it," he said.

It ought to be a cooperative effort, the secretary said, noting the automakers have 30,000 engineers and the Departments of Transportation and Energy together have invested $100 million in research on experimental vehicles.

"I don't want to get into a situation where we have a set of government engineers independently developing some great new thing, and then having the auto makers who have to commercialize it calling it the dumbest thing they ever heard of," Adams said.

"It's the same kind of thing we did when we said, 'okay, we'll put a man on the moon,'" he said. "We used a lot of different resources in the government and industry."

In a speech earlier this month in Detroit, Adams challenged the industry to "re-invent the car" in the next few years and invited auto company officials and engineers to a "summit" in Washington to hasten development of an energy-stretching, safe and people-pleasing autos.

Subsequently, Henry Ford, chairman of the Ford Motor Company, invited Adams to Detroit to inspect Ford's research labs and to discuss the technology involved, along with such things as "the reaction of consumers to smaller, lighter cars, the capital requirements of the technical task ahead and the over-all effects of what we do on employment levels and the general well-being of the economy."

Adams scolded U.S. automakers for being "imitators" instead of "innovators" and noted that the Transportation Department had to go abroad to buy the technology of a gasoline-efficient auto. "It's a Volkswagen Rabbit with a super-charged diesel. It gets 50 miles to the gallon and has full crash protection," he said. "It's a good automobile."

mission considered but rejected turning the Highway Patrol into a state police force.

Some of the recommendations, such as merit selection and fixed sentencing, were previously endorsed by Hunt.

The merit selection system for judges, rejected by the legislature last year, would set up a nominating panel and require that trial judges be selected by the governor from the panel's suggestions. Each would later face a "retention" election, without opposition, allowing voters within the judicial district to keep or reject the judge.

Noting wide disparities in sentencing, the commission recommended a measure defeated in the 1977 General Assembly that would classify crimes and establish fixed sentences to fit them. To vary, a judge would have to document mitigating or aggravating circumstances.

Other recommendations would:

—Remove minor traffic offenses to an administrative hearing agency, rather than district court.

—Make it illegal to have an open beer or wine container in the passenger area of a car.

—Set a two-year minimum sentence for second offense breaking and entering and one year for second offense prostitution convictions.

—Make a uniform 2 a.m. time for ending sale of beer and wine.

—Increase shoplifting penalties.

—Set a minimum salary for law enforcement officers of $8,400.

—Require motorists to honk their horn when passing.

Lower Farm Quota In '79

Pitt County peanut farmers will receive about a five percent lower farm poundage quota for the 1979 crop than last year, according to W. F. Tyson, chairperson of the county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee.

Tyson said that the national poundage quota would be reduced from 1,680,000 short tons for 1978 to 1,596,000 short tons for 1979. The national acreage allotment would be unchanged at 1,613,000 acres.

"Under the peanut price support program, farms are assigned both an acreage allotment and a poundage quota, and only peanuts grown on allotted acreage are eligible for price support," said Tyson.

Peanuts grown on allotted acres and within the farm's poundage quota are considered "quota" peanuts. At a lower price support rate are "additional" peanuts grown on allotted acres but in excess of the farm's quota.

Loan rates for both quota and additional peanuts will be announced no later than Feb. 15. For 1978, quota peanuts were supported at $420 per ton and additional peanuts at $250 per short ton.

Under current legislation, the minimum national acreage allotment is fixed, but the minimum national poundage quota is scheduled to be reduced each year through 1981.

Expatriates Sticking It Out

By ROBERT MUSEL
LONDON (UPI) — When the dollar plunged in early October and American expatriates on fixed incomes ironically claimed they would soon have to save up for a hamburger, there were many who saw the decline of American currency in the terms of the end of an era.

No more budding Hemingways in Paris garrets, no more young Americans spending a romantic and practically costless year in Vienna or Rome before returning home to earn a living. Inflation and taxes and the stunning loss of confidence in the dollar had put an end to all that.

So they said, and the cries of businessmen and others, empty wallets flapping like the jaws of a bloodhound, joined in the chorus of: we'll have to go back.

As the year draws to its close a UPI survey of major European cities shows that although there has been a certain amount of belt-tightening and a reluctant concentration on the necessities rather than the former luxuries of life in Europe very few Americans are, in fact, leaving because of the anemic dollar.

In Britain, for example, the U.S. Embassy says it appears Americans are actually arriving to take up residence. The American Embassy in Paris says it is "likely" the number of nationals in France is declining but there is no hard evidence to support this belief.

It should be true. Added to the fact that the London Hilton charges $1.20 for coffee and the famous Viennese coffee houses $1.40 and a luxury class hotel room is around $100 a night nearly everywhere — these examples can be multiplied in every field — the threat of double taxation hangs heavy over the heads of Americans.

Starting Jan. 1, 1979, most Americans abroad will lose their overseas tax exemption. They will pay approximately the same tax they would pay if they were living in the United States. At the same time they will have to pay the income tax of the country of residence. In cases where there is a bilateral taxation agreement such as the Anglo-American tax treaty there is a formula that is supposed to protect against double taxation.

But the workings of such agreements thus far has engendered some skepticism about their ability to cushion the tax blow. If the dual taxation agreements don't, the double tax threat is far more apt to drive Americans home than the higher cost of living in the dips of the fluctuating dollar. What bemuses many Americans is why the United States, alone among the major countries of the world, taxes its citizens wherever they are even though they are not using any of its domestic services and are paying taxes in the countries in which they are living.

Taxes and finances have wiped out the weather as conversational gambits among Americans. Everybody seems to have his own tale of woe except those who work for big multinational firms which tend to have tax equalization programs. In France Boeing, IBM and many other American headquartered firms make up all or most of what an employee loses in taxes and cost of living through working abroad.

In Germany where it costs Americans 18 to 19 percent more to live this year than last Herbert Cring, 37, of Jacksonville, Fla., a European sales manager for National Panasonic, said he would probably leave if he was subjected to double taxation. The weak dollar — it buys 1.91 marks against 4 marks 10 years ago — has created a curious anomaly, he said: profits go up while the value of his salary goes down.

A journalist in Brussels whose previous posting was Moscow said:

"When we were in the Soviet Union we used to look at catalogues and dream of all the lovely things we would buy when we got back to the West. Now we're here and we are still looking because we can't afford them."

Brussels, fourth most expensive city in the world on some lists, was bad enough when the dollar was strong, said UPI's Margaret Gordy, but at the present rate of exchange it costs $7 to get a dress cleaned, $12 to resole shoes, $3 for a small lamb chop, $3 for a small sandwich and a cup of coffee.

$75 for a decent pair of ladies shoes.

Still there are plenty of Americans around, as there are in Rome where the situation is compounded by inflation which jumped the cost of living 12 percent this year (against a 20 percent rise last year). Edward Moss, a supervisor for a U.S. electronics firm, stated a frequent theme when he said he was more worried about the changes in the tax laws than about the dollar or inflation.

Vienna and Lisbon used to be — to those in Europe 20 years ago — among the cheapest of the great tourist cities. The Austrian capital is now alleged to be one of the most expensive though the impact is cushioned for canny tourists because there is still much that can be seen and enjoyed for small sums. It's the residents who suffer. American housewife Irene lo Bello, said she was getting used to living on a budget. In 1971 the dollar was worth 26 schillings — it's now 14. That makes a gallon of gasoline $2.

"We can't afford too many cuts of our favorite meat," she said. Filet mignon is well over $10 a kilo (2.2 lbs) and eggs are now more than $1 a dozen."

The dollar has lost less in Greece than in most places but even in that favorite retirement haven for Greek-Americans in former days there is considerable discontent. Americans are hurt two ways — the dollar dropped four percent of its value last year but the drachma lost 15 percent against hard currencies thus inflating the cost of imported items like deodorant (over $1) and cornflakes ($2 a regular box).

Rea Ginnis, 79, who retired to Athens more than 25 years ago to live on pensions, said: "It was more than enough when we first came here. Now what I get hardly suffices for food. I have to spend from our savings for doctors bills and other essentials. If I don't die soon enough I'll have to sell our home to survive."

Nevertheless its hard to find an American who is actually determined to go home purely because of the current situation. The embassy in Paris said that in all of 1978 only one American renounced his passport — and with it his double taxation dilemma.

Delinquents Punished By Canoe Trip

By SHARON RUTENBERG
YULEE, Fla. (UPI) — James, 17, was accused in a delinquency petition with assault and battery. Clifford, 15, was charged with attempted grand larceny for stealing an airplane.

Their punishment — Canoe down the Suwanee River for 23 days.

The sentences were part of a program worked out between the state of Florida and Outward Bound, a non-profit organization that helps people realize their individual potential through stress situations.

Instead of spending up to six months in a state correctional institution, Florida juvenile delinquents can be selected to join Project STEP (Short Term Elective Program), a part of Outward Bound's adaptive program. Standard international courses include mountain climbing and shooting the rapids.

Project STEP tries to build self-confidence in juvenile delinquents — to make them winners instead of losers. Nearly all participants concede the biggest attraction to STEP is that it's short.

"I accomplished a lot more in 23 days than I would have in four-to six months in the state school," James said. "Plus, I have an opportunity to make something out of myself, to get out of being committed and trying it again."

"In the state school, I was always in a state of depression. It's not to help you. It does a lot of psychological damage. You see what the real criminals are. I totally disagree that it's rehabilitative because it's just like prison life."

"When I heard about STEP, I wanted to jump on it, anything to get out."

STEP began four years ago when Florida hired Outward Bound and received a federal grant from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

STEP has gone "way above" the state's expectations and saves money, said Jack Porter, Youth Services Program Supervisor for the Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services.

Only one of four juveniles completing STEP returns to a state school, he said, compared to a less than 50 percent success rate at state schools.

Each year, Outward Bound instructors visit state schools and select 216 male juveniles who want to join STEP. The first girls went last summer.

In groups of 10 with two instructors, the juveniles canoe from one coast of Florida to the other. The course starts at the base site in Yulee, located in the state's northeast corner near the Atlantic Ocean, and ends at the Gulf of Mexico.

Most of the juveniles are "streetwise," lower-class high school dropouts. Their most common crime is burglary.

Project Director Leonard McCook said they lack an appropriate role model at home and have "no vehicle to prove their manhood, so they do it in delinquent ways."

Outward Bound tries to break that pattern of social failure.

A typical STEP day starts at 7 a.m. The participants run a few miles, swim, make breakfast, load gear, canoe 10 miles, eat lunch, canoe 10 to 15 more miles, build a fire and fix dinner.

Before they go to sleep about 9 p.m., they hold a group meeting — one of the most important parts of the course.

If two boys had a fight during the day, or one stole food, everyone discusses the problem around the campfire. The meetings often end with the two boys shaking hands and taking a walk together.

"At the state school, you do the least little thing wrong and they'll lock you up," said Timothy, 16. "They put you in an adjustment unit for about seven days. At STEP, they just have a group meeting and talk about it."

The juvenile participants agreed the STEP course has changed them. Some changes were small — learning how to cook on an open campfire and to pitch a tent, proper canoe strokes and respecting nature.

"I got a lot out of appreciating nature," James said. "Like I'll think twice before I'll throw a piece of paper on the ground."

But the most important changes came from within — what the juveniles discovered about themselves.

"I learned one of the problems I have is my mouth," said Michael, 15. "The guys out here are teaching me that sometimes I shouldn't say things I say."

"I've changed a lot, some ways I don't even know yet, but I'll probably realize them pretty soon when I go home."

For Chuck, 18, STEP changed his future.

In state school, he said, "they're always fighting. Then when you get out, all you want to do is get out there and rebel. STEP is 100 percent better than the state school and not just because it's shorter, either."

"It just makes you think. It makes you realize that one day you're going to have to face your responsibilities, to go out there and try to get on the right foot toward becoming a man."

"It just makes you realize that when you get out there, you're going to have to work everyday. It just makes you where you don't want to go back. Because it's a lucky break that you got put in here and you might never run into a lucky break like this again."

As a follow-up program to the course, the Outward Bound staff visits the juveniles in their homes and helps them make plans to go back to school, find a job, and get along better with their parents.

Course Director Chris Watts said there's a "big change" in the juveniles after completing STEP, but it's "difficult to assess how much change is permanent. They might not change, but the month's experience will go with them forever. They will always have it."

STEP staff members and state officials hope the project will keep the youths from getting in trouble again. But even if it doesn't, they said participants at least gain a more positive self-worth.

"You're dealing with immature individuals who might fall back into what they were," instructor Leon Allen said. "A lot will probably end up going back out of their own ignorance."

It might make a change in their life, it might not. You just have to take a chance. If no one takes a chance on you, you never know what might happen to you."

Perhaps, Project Step was best summed up by James who put it this way:

"The best thing is I can say I paddled the whole Suwanee River. I can say that for years, until I die. I can look at a map and feel a sense of accomplishment and self-esteem. It makes you feel good about yourself."

Before they go to sleep about 9 p.m., they hold a group meeting — one of the most important parts of the course.

If two boys had a fight during the day, or one stole food, everyone discusses the problem around the campfire. The meetings often end with the two boys shaking hands and taking a walk together.

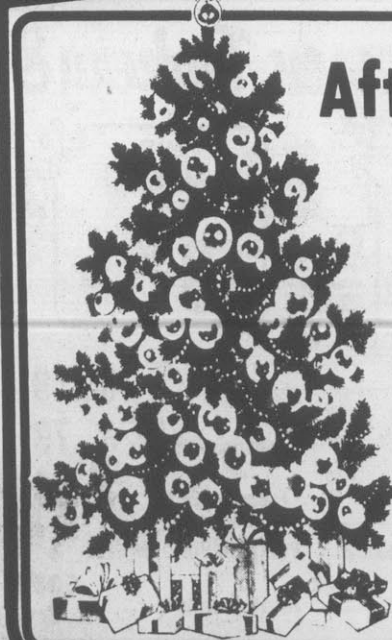

"At the state school, you do the least little thing wrong and they'll lock you up," said Timothy, 16. "They put you in an adjustment unit for about seven days. At STEP, they just have a group meeting and talk about it."

The juvenile participants agreed the STEP course has changed them. Some changes were small — learning how to cook on an open campfire and to pitch a tent, proper canoe strokes and respecting nature.

"I got a lot out of appreciating nature," James said. "Like I'll think twice before I'll throw a piece of paper on the ground."

But the most important

Full-Fledged Hero Treatment For Dog Of The Year

By FRED T. FERGUSON
NEW YORK (UPI) — Sometimes newsmen get the feeling the reporting field is a dog's life.

Never did that seem more apparent than when the editor declared, "this is just your kind of story."

It was a dog interview. So, with great reluctance and wounded ego, but wooed by the promise, "at least you'll get a good dinner," the reporter set forth to get the story of Chester, "Dog Hero of the Year."

Upon arriving, the guests were pried with stiff drinks, hot and cold hors d'oeuvres and a view of Brooklyn from the restaurant atop the World Trade Center. But where was the dog?

Chester, for whom the affair was held, was kept secluded pending a grand entrance befitting a hero. Detained with him, by a resolute young public relations woman, was Kenny Homme, 6, who Chester (call him Chessie) saved last May from a torrential stream.

Kenny's parents, Linda and Gary Homme, were the center of attention, recounting how Mrs. Homme noticed Kenny missing, heard his cries for help and found he had slipped into the frigid stream near their home in Livingston, Mont.

Chessie, Chesapeake Bay retriever that he is, had bounded in after him. Kenny had grabbed Chessie's short rust-colored hair, thus enabling the boy to stay afloat, although he kept losing his grip.

With the frantic mother unable to reach her son, he was carried by the current into a culvert under a nearby road. Chessie followed. Minutes later out came Chessie, swimming gallantly, a soggy, tearful Kenny riding his back to shore.

Unfortunately, Chessie has had nothing but bad luck ever since. Mrs. Homme spoke for him:

"First, he got hit by a truck.

"Then he cut an artery in his foot when he went to get a drink of water in the creek.

"And he was attacked by a swarm of brown hornets.

"Then he was bitten in the nose by a rattlesnake.

"And just recently he was run over by a Chevy Blazer. But he sank into soft dirt."

She explained he survived without serious injury both the encounter with the truck and the one with the rec vehicle although "he was awful sore afterwards."

The foot cut, stings and snake bite were another matter.

"He's had more shots than I can count," Mrs. Homme said. "I wish we were getting his veterinarian bills paid instead of a year's supply of dogfood."

But now there was all the excitement of the trip to New York and a suite at the Plaza Hotel.

The world has read of the exploits of Eloise at the Plaza Hotel. Now comes the tale of Chessie at the same Plaza.

"He took the flight in his stride. He'd flown once before," said Gary Homme (pronounce it ho-me). "As a matter of fact, he's taken everything calmly. What it is, he's just plain blase about things."

"He just strides right through that lobby like he's done it all his life. In our suite, he kind of checked everything out and just settled down on that nice deep carpet. He's an outside dog, you know. We don't let him in the house. But there's no trouble here. He's trained."

There was just one thing. No city dog, Chessie doesn't relate fireplugs and the like to trees. And he's darn sure pavement isn't grass.

So they took Chessie across the street to Central Park ("We've been given four pooper scoopers since we got here," Linda said.) And that was fine. Except, of course, Chessie is a retriever. Gary takes him grouse and pheasant hunting back home. And there was that pond with those ducks.

"Had an awful time trying to convince him those ducks weren't for retrieving. "Personally," said Gary, "I don't think this city is any place for a dog."

Up rushed a public relations woman. She whispered in Gary's ear.

"Acting up is he?" said Geary in a fatherly tone. He took the reporter in tow and went to remonstrate, not with Chessie, but with Kenny, who was getting bored waiting in that other room.

Chessie was delighted to see him, too. There was the feeling Chessie felt like Kenny. He pranced around seeking a bit of attention as father told son, "I know you're only 6, but this is a time you've got to act real grown-up." Dog and boy seemed to understand. They settled right down.

Then came the big awards banquet celebrating Chessie, the 25th dog to win the hero citation. There were steak and wine and speech-making about what a wonderful symbol of the American family the Hommes and Chessie are.

On cue, Kenny and Chessie paraded in to receive the $1,000 savings bond that goes with the (Ken-L Ration) dogfood and the (Quaker oats Co.) gold medal. The medal was placed on a ribbon around Chessie's neck.

When a score of people rushed up to pet him, Chessie lay down, put his head on his paws, closed his eyes, and bore that too. "Like I say," said Gary, "he's just plain blase about things."

We understand Chessie got home okay and returned to being a country dog, although he was dumped unceremoniously in the middle of the Chicago airport baggage area when the bottom fell out of his travel kennel.

But before he left, Chessie was posed for a photographer, his paws on the reporter's lap, to illustrate his being interviewed. In the picture, it looked as if he were having his say. What he did, was yawn a lot.

What this reporter concluded: When it gets to being a dog's life, do like Chessie. Yawn a lot.

Boeing Has Toehold In Waterborne Jetfoil Field

By MICHAEL FLYNN
SEATTLE (UPI) — The Boeing Co. has parlayed its aircraft-design expertise and one of Alexander Graham Bell's lesser known inventions into a toehold on a projected $2 billion transportation concept.

But it is possible the man best known for his invention of the telephone might not recognize his five-ton foil of 60 years ago in Boeing's 110-ton water-borne jet.

The craft is known as the jetfoil, a sleek vessel which rides up out of the water on twin foils at speeds of up to 50 miles an hour, carrying up to 300 passengers in airliner-like comfort.

Its move from a futuristic transportation idea to a promising program for which the firm now forecasts sales of up to 200 or more worldwide over the next decade has been almost unnoticed in a year of surging success for Boeing jetliner sales.

The jetfoil carries a passenger load similar to that of an airliner in a style which bears a striking similarity to the feel of flying, complete with cabin attendants and the voice of the pilot advising passengers of takeoff and landing.

The first jetfoil was put into operation between Hong Kong and Macao in 1975, followed by a short-lived inter-island run in Hawaii.

Boeing initially encountered skepticism from governments and firms who viewed the foil as a futuristically exotic but questionably feasible transportation mode, partly because of its $9 million price tag.

"We had trouble initially getting acceptance," said Pete Dakan, Boeing spokesman for the jetfoil project. "But once people rode the vessel and saw what it could do, they became convinced there was a market for it."

The U.S. Navy has contracted for five of a larger version of the jetfoil as Patrol-Hydrofoil-Missile ships, with the first to be delivered in February of 1981.

And the Royal Navy will take delivery in December of 1979 on a diesel-powered prototype for use on fisheries patrol in the North Sea.

Boeing has now put jetfoils into commercial operation on four continents and has begun computing sales potential.

"We figure there's a potential for 200 or more jetfoils over the next 15 years," Dakan said.

Five of them are now operating in Hong Kong and another in the Sea of Japan. P&O Lines has been operating a Boeing-loaned jetfoil on daily runs between London and Zeebrugge, Belgium, and another is operating between the Venezuelan mainland and Margarita Island.

Boeing has yet to crack the transportation markets in North America but Dakan said the firm has had discussions in New York City and Florida, as well as with provincial officials in Vancouver, B.C.

A jetfoil operated on a trial basis this summer between Seattle and Victoria, B.C., for the Washington State Ferry System and a recommendation is expected to be made to the next legislature on whether to go ahead with purchase of two jetfoils for the state ferry fleet.

"A lot of interest has been created in the jetfoil because of its speed and its ability to provide a smooth ride in rough waters in areas like the North Sea," Dakan said.

The jetfoil is the result of two decades of engineering work by the aerospace firm, which brought its expertise in the design of jetliners into play with the vessel.

The craft is powered by two 3,780-horsepower gas-turbine engines which pump 48,000 gallons of water a minute through the vessel's jet system.

When the jetfoil reaches "flying" speed, it rides up out of the water on fore and aft foils which give the appearance the vessel is slicing through the water on stilts.

An automatic control system on the flight deck reads the action of the waves and automatically adjusts the flaps to ride evenly at speeds up to 45 knots in waves of up to 15 feet.

The original jetfoil and the newer 100 version, which is a considerably lighter-weight jetfoil, are passenger-only vessels.

But Boeing has completed studies on a larger version capable of carrying vehicles.

"The bigger boat is technically feasible, but we haven't yet determined it would be economically feasible," Dakan said.

But now nearly 30 years later, he's taken dead aim at his original goal.

Bailey recently completed his first work of fiction, "Secrets," a novel about a veteran criminal lawyer who finds himself in need of an attorney to defend him against a charge of murder.

Bailey previously had written three non-fiction books, two of them dealing with famous cases he has tried, and one with flying, which has been an integral part of his life. The first was "The Defense Never Rests," which rose to No. 2 on best-seller lists.

At the age of 16, Bailey's aim in life was to be a fiction writer. He entered Harvard with the intention of preparing himself for a newspaper career as a preliminary to writing fiction.

Then two circumstances changed his life plan. He read a book by the late famed attorney, Lloyd Paul Stryker, which aroused in him a burning interest in the law. And he joined the Navy as a fighter pilot, serving as legal officer in scores of courts martial although he had yet to study law.

Returning to Harvard, Bailey switched to the pursuit of a legal career, earning his degree at Boston University in 1960.

He sprang to national attention in 1966 by winning a new trial for Dr. Sam Sheppard and gaining an acquittal on retrial in the murder of Sheppard's wife, for which the Cleveland osteopath had spent 10 years in prison.

Bailey went on to a series of sensational criminal trials, some of which he won and some he lost. There were the cases of the Boston Strangler, Dr. Carl Coppolino, and Capt. Ernest Medina, veteran of My Lai. Recently, Bailey was the lawyer for Patty Hearst, the kidnapped newspaper heiress.

In his novel, many events in Bailey's career as a defense attorney are woven into a fictional background. A young investigative lawyer, Daniel Shaw, is modeled in many ways after the author.

Other characters are patterned after noted trial lawyers Edward Bennett Williams, of Washington, and James St. Clair, of Boston.

"I wrote a fictional tale, mainly to entertain people," Bailey explained. "I really did enjoy it. It didn't often become drudgery. Story-telling is fun for me."

"The book is, I think, a pretty authentic picture of a real murder trial where a lot of people have personal interests at stake — how all these things interfere with the process of justice."

Bailey, now 45, said he already had begun work on the book when the news reached publisher Sol Stein, who suggested he would like to publish it in a renewal of their earlier partnership.

Bailey said he agreed and Stein then gave him 45 days to complete the novel, because "I don't function unless I'm under pressure."

Bailey said it actually took him 60 days to complete the manuscript in a first and final draft.

"Secrets" is published by Stein & Day.

Once Wet, Keep A Camera Wet

NEW YORK (UPI) — A traveler who drops his camera accidentally in a lake, river or stream should put it immediately in a sealed plastic bag filled with clean water, according to photography experts at Kodak.

"Keeping it wet will guard against rust until the camera can be serviced," they say. Servicing, of course, should follow as quickly as possible. If the camera falls into muddy or salt water, or a chlorinated pool, the camera should be rinsed in fresh water before it is put into a bag.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed lower today, pausing after a week-long rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 3.81 to 810.20 in the first half hour.

Losers took a slight lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange listed issues.

The market had put together a spirited rally in the last five sessions following International Business Machines' announcement that it planned a landmark 4-for-1 stock split.

But analysts noted that such pervasive worries as rising interest rates and inflation remained basically unchanged.

And some investors worried about these problems evidently took the recent rise of stock prices as an opportune time to do some selling.

Today's early volume leaders included Boeing, down 3/4 at 74; Pan American World Airways, unchanged at 7 1/2, and Xerox, off 1/4 at 55.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average gained 7.54 to 816.01, extending its rise since early last week to 28.50 points.

Advances outnumbered declines by a 3-2 spread on the NYSE.

Big Board volume came to 21.47 million shares against 23.79 million the day before.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index was up .58 at 54.35.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index added .68 to 151.53.

Arrested For Purse-Snatching

A 16-year-old Washington youth has been arrested on common law robbery charges in connection with a December 5 purse snatching incident at Pitt Plaza shopping center in which a 67-year-old woman was injured.

Chief Glenn Cannon said today that Ralph Clifton Boyette of Washington was jailed here Friday under a $2,500 bond in connection with the case.

The chief said Boyette allegedly pushed Mrs. Eva Estelle Hathaway of Route 6, Greenville, to the ground when he attempted to take her pocketbook. She suffered a broken leg, broken hip, several broken ribs, and abrasions to her head.

The handbag contained about $37 in cash, Cannon noted.

State Facing A Blood Shortage

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state is facing a blood shortage and needs at least 200 pints donated each day during the holiday season, according to officials of the North Carolina chapter of the American Red Cross.

Donations may be made at blood centers in Durham, Raleigh, Wilmington and Charlotte during the next week. Each center hopes to collect at least 50 pints a day.

Blood supplies are short this year during the holidays because not enough companies and businesses, whose employees donate blood regularly, scheduled visits to the Red Cross facilities before the holiday season, officials said.

game with Clemson. Head coach Woody Hayes brings his own high school officials to scrutinize practices in an effort to cut down on penalties. (AP Laserphoto)

Ohio State Utilizes Practice Officials

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Coach Woody Hayes brought his own officials along to the Ohio State Buckeyes' Gator Bowl football game against Clemson.

Of course, the men in the striped shirts that came with the Buckeyes won't officiate Friday night's game. They are Ohio high school officials and are working Ohio State practice sessions.

Hayes said it is something he has done before and it helps cut down on game penalties by reminding the players in practice sessions what they can't do.

"We are as healthy now as we've been all year," Hayes said after what he termed a light practice session Tuesday.

While he called it light, it was tough enough to bring injury to reserve linebacker Greg James, a little-used sophomore. With a bruised right shoulder, James may not be available if needed Friday.

"Heavy practices are over," Hayes said. "We'll have a light practice again Wednesday. I don't think you can hammer, hammer and get in shape. If you do, you'll leave your game right out there on the practice field."

Greene Means Business

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Mean Joe means business as the Pittsburgh Steelers prepare for Saturday's playoff game here with the Denver Broncos.

That's not to say defensive tackle Joe Greene wasn't aroused two weeks ago in Denver when Pittsburgh beat the Broncos 21-17 in a regular-season game that meant nothing in the standings.

Pittsburgh had a 21-0 lead at halftime and Greene was supposed to spend the rest of the game on the bench. But he rushed onto the field for the last goal line play — without being sent in by the coaches — and he helped deny Denver's bid for a touchdown.

"We were aware of what was on the line," Greene said this week as he looked back on that game. "It was individual pride, team pride and statistics. That can go a long way — but it's not dollars and cents."

The cash is on the line in Saturday's first round of the American Football Conference playoffs.

Each player on both teams gets $5,000, and the winners advance to the AFC title game, where each makes $9,000 with a chance at the $18,000 winner's check in the Super Bowl.

Well aware of those figures, Greene dismisses the notion that Pittsburgh might take Denver lightly because the Steelers dominated the Broncos before quarterback Terry Bradshaw went to the bench in that last game.

"In the playoffs, all things that happened before are in the past," said Greene. "Anything that's not Xs and Os don't matter. It's like they don't exist. Anybody who's going on any other assumption is in the wrong business."

In the last game in Denver, Broncos quarterback Craig Morton hit three of nine passes in the first half for 46 yards, and Norris Weese led Denver's second-half comeback.

But Greene expects to see Morton start Saturday.

"Morton's No. 1 for them," said Greene. "I'm not taking anything away from Weese, but there wasn't any pressure on him. That game was already lost when he came in there."

Last season, Morton helped the Broncos to a first-round playoff victory over Pittsburgh in Denver.

No Break For Cagers

This is the Christmas week break at colleges across the country — and that means that everyone gets a break except the basketball teams.

Starting with top-ranked Duke, just about everyone will be some place in one of the most frantic periods of the college basketball season.

The Blue Devils will play Friday night in the Holiday Festival Tournament in New York, which also features Ohio State, Rutgers and St. John's.

Before that tourney opens, a basketful of others will start fast-breaking across the nation today, starting with such golden oldies as the Far West Classic at Portland, the Big Eight Holiday Tournament at Kansas City and the Rainbow Classic at Honolulu.

Indiana will face Washington and Oregon plays Wyoming in the Far West opener. Kansas, the nation's No. 18 team, meets Iowa State and Colorado plays Oklahoma State in the start of the Big Eight tourney. The Rainbow Classic opens with a doubleheader matching Tennessee against Utah and Arizona State against Harvard.

Other tourneys opening today Oklahoma City; the Senior Bowl at Mobile, Ala., and the Poinsetta Classic at Greenville, N.C.

The first round of the Sun Carnival tourney at El Paso, Tex., involving eighth-ranked Michigan, will be played Thursday night. The Wolverines will take on Texas Tech, while Clemson meets Texas El Paso.

Illinois, the nation's No. 6 team, plays Western Michigan and Alaska-Anchorage takes on College of the Ozarks in the first round of the Glacier Bowl tourney at Anchorage Thursday night. In the Louisville Holiday tournament, it's No. 10 Louisville meeting Wisconsin and Mississippi State against Oral Roberts.

The Vermont Classic features No. 12 Texas A&M against Air Force, and No. 4 Michigan State will be featured in the completion of the first round of the Far West Classic.

On Friday night, fifth-ranked North Carolina will see tournament action, playing a first-round game in the Rochester (N.Y.) Classic against Dartmouth.

In action Tuesday night, the Gator Bowl tourney in Jacksonville, Fla., got a jump on the rest of the country. In the first round, Malcolm Cesare scored 22 points to lead Florida over Massachusetts 89-65 and Jacksonville beat Pitt 74-72 as Dwayne Smith and Paul DeVito combined for 35.

Elsewhere, John Stroud scored 41 points to lead Mississippi over Memphis State 92-89; Mike Helms collected 19 to power Wake Forest over North Carolina-Asheville 91-70; Cliff Robinson scored 22 points and grabbed nine rebounds to lead Southern Cal over California 59-54 and Johnny High and Mike Gray combined for 37 points to pace Nevada-Reno over San Jose State 75-57.

Illinois Jumps To Sixth Place

The University of Illinois might have won only two games in the past week, but those two victories over other ranked teams propelled the Fighting Illini from 15th to sixth place in the weekly Associated Press college basketball poll.

Illinois, now 9-0, became only the second team other than Kentucky to win the Kentucky Invitational Tournament more than once. Illinois defeated Syracuse 64-61 in the opening game and then breezed past Texas A&M 71-57 for the title.

The tournament, which featured four ranked teams, was one of the major causes of shuffling in the poll of a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Duke remained on top, receiving 46 of 50 first place votes, good for 996 points. Notre Dame held second place with 952 points, grabbing the other first place votes, and UCLA, an easy homecourt winner over Fordham and Boston College, held third with 878. Both Duke and Notre Dame were idle last week.

Michigan State, with 753 points, and North Carolina, with 744, both advanced one spot in the standings to fourth and fifth place, respectively. The two teams had more in common than just their poll improvement over the past week. Both teams played only one game during the week and they both defeated Cincinnati by the same three point margin.

Rounding out the top 10 were Illinois with 675 points; undefeated Louisiana State, 659; Michigan, 598; North Carolina State, 568; and Louisville with 510 points.

Indiana State was the leader of the second ten. The Sycamores, 8-0, received 365 points.

Following Indiana State were Texas A&M, Kentucky, Nevada-Las Vegas, Georgetown, Marquette, Long Beach-St. Kansas, Syracuse and Arkansas.

Long Beach State and Arkansas both made their first appearance in the Top Twenty, replacing Texas and Southern California.

Sideline TV A Little Much?

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

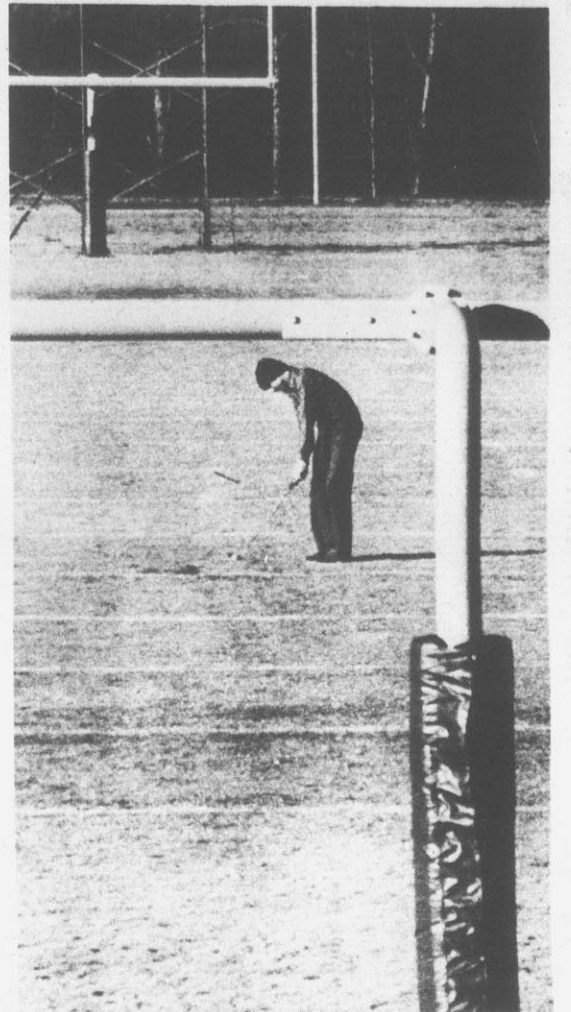

Television's one-eyed monster has a tenacious curiosity and ears bigger than its orbit. So what was it doing on the sidelines at the Fiesta Bowl in Tempe, Ariz., on Christmas Day when UCLA and Arkansas played to a useless 10-10 tie?

With the live captive audience of millions looking and listening, there was this UCLA Coach Terry Donahue just as the Bruins intercepted an Arkansas pass.

Suddenly whistles blew and flags started dropping. The turnover was nullified by a penalty against UCLA.

Bucks Thrash Pistons By 59 Points

Detroit's coach, Dick Vitale, sat calmly and controlled his temper as he watched the Milwaukee Bucks humiliate his Pistons 143-84. But inside he was burning, and after the game it all came out.

"This was a disgrace to basketball," he said following Tuesday night's 59-point shellacking, which was just four points shy of the most lopsided result in the history of the National Basketball Association. Los Angeles beat Golden State 162-99 on March 19, 1972.

"There were little kids out there tonight who would have played NBA basketball for a dollar," said Vitale, his voice rising in anger and frustration. "Too many guys in this league don't want to play. They play on past credentials. It's a disgrace."

In other NBA games, the Houston Rockets beat the Kansas City Kings 109-102, the San Antonio Spurs defeated the Atlanta Hawks 124-111, the Washington Bullets edged the Indiana Pacers 108-104, the Phoenix Suns trimmed the Denver Nuggets 106-102, the New Orleans Jazz nipped the Los Angeles Lakers 125-123 and the San Diego Clippers beat the Chicago Bulls 115-109.

Rockets 109, Kings 102
Moses Malone overpowered Kansas City with 32 points and 26 rebounds, the seventh straight game in which Malone has had at least 20 rebounds. He leads the NBA in that category with 16.6 per game.

Houston led 76-74 after three quarters but pulled away as Malone scored 14 points and grabbed seven rebounds in the final period.

Spurs 124, Hawks 111
San Antonio tied a club record with its eighth straight victory, pulling away from Atlanta with 12 points in a row during the second half, six of them by Larry Kenon.

Bullets 108, Pacers 104
Wes Unseld, who missed the last three games with a rib injury, hit on 11 of 17 shots, scored a season-high 26 points and grabbed 15 rebounds for Washington, which opened an 11-point lead in the final period and held on for its 17th victory in the last 21 games.

Suns 106, Nuggets 102
Walter Davis scored 31 points, including 15 in the fourth quarter and nine in the final two minutes, as Phoenix beat Denver. Davis tied the score at 98-98 with a layup and then hit a three-point play for a 101-98 advantage with 1:30 remaining.

Jazz 125, Lakers 123
Truck Robinson's three-point play with 20 seconds remaining lifted New Orleans over Los Angeles. Robinson finished with 31 points while Kareem Abdul Jabbar scored a season-high 35 for the Lakers.

Clippers 115, Bulls 109
Lloyd Free posted 11 of his 36 points in the fourth quarter to lead San Diego past Chicago, which had erased a 16-point deficit to take the lead in the fourth quarter only to falter in the final five minutes.

Falcons Face Talented Dallas Squad

SUWANEE, Ga. (AP) — The Atlanta Falcons will have a lot of Dallas flavor if not the Texas-size talent when they play the Cowboys in the second round of National Football League playoffs Saturday.

"I wouldn't concede that we don't have a chance, but player for player they are a better football team than us," Falcons Coach Leeman Bennett said

Tuesday at his weekly news conference.

"They've got an awful lot of talent but we have beaten teams with better talent than us before. We'll just wait and see," he said.

For Falcons General Manager Eddie LeBaron, the game will be a match with his former boss, Dallas Coach Tom Landry. LeBaron quarterbacked the Cowboys in thei early years.

"I do not have a special burning desire to come back to Texas and have my team beat Tom, anymore than I would like to beat any other team," LeBaron said.

"Our overall philosophy is based on the Cowboys' program, and why not? They are the best. I just want to show that we have come a ways," he said.

The Falcons made the playoffs this year for the first time in their 13-year history, then pulled off their fifth miracle finish of the season by edging the Philadelphia Eagles 14-13 Sunday in the first round.

Philadelphia's Mike Michel failed on a 33-yard field goal attempt with 13 seconds remaining after the Falcons had taken the lead on a 31-yard touchdown pass with 1:39 left.

Atlanta, 9-7 in the regular season, also won four games by identical scores of 20-17 — all within the final 10 seconds.

Bennett said he won't change anything for Dallas, adding that the miracle finishes actually were not part of Atlanta's game plans and the Cowboys would not be looking for one.

Landry Can Laugh Now

DALLAS (AP) — Tom Landry can laugh and joke now during the pressure-cooker of the National Football League playoffs.

Before the Cowboys captured their first NFL title in the early 1970s this was not always the case. But, the Dallas Cowboys coach says, experience relieves a lot of playoff tension.

For example, before his weekly news conference Tuesday, Landry said: "I hope you had as nice and as busy a Christmas as I did. I'd like to take this opportunity to wish everyone a Happy New Year. Now, I'll open it up for questions."

One question zeroed in on the Cowboys' playoff experience. Dallas has been in more NFL playoff games (22) than any other team. Of course, Landry has been the coach for each one. His record 13-9.

"Experience is important," said Landry. "Experience pays off in pressure circumstances. It helps you from getting carried away. It's to your advantage."

Someone asked Landry how he felt about playoff games.

"I'm a little more relaxed myself in playoff games," he answered with a smile.

This will be a busy week for Landry. Besides preparing for Saturday's National Conference semifinal playoff game against Atlanta, Landry will be inducted into the Texas Sports Hall of Fame Friday.

Landry was a former star at the University of Texas and for the New York Giants in the NFL.

"It's nice for something like this to happen to you while you're still young enough to enjoy it," Landry said of the honor.

Turning his attention back to the Falcons, Landry said something was amiss with the Cowboys being 14-point favorites.

"Something is wrong because anytime you play in the playoffs you will have a tight football game in most cases," said Landry. "It takes something unusual for the game to get out of hand."

Landry said possible overconfidence by the NFC Eastern Division champions "worries you."

He said Atlanta shows a "lot of enthusiasm. Their morale has to be high for them to win those close games like they have. They have shown they are capable of pulling out those tight games."

Crackle, sizzle, pop. Out of the young coach's mouth spontaneously came an epithet unfit for tender ears — especially on a quiet Christmas afternoon. The words are most often found on the walls of public latrines.

Oops! Certainly, Donahue was embarrassed, but he was caught off guard. He felt sorry afterward, but it was too late.

Across the field on the Arkansas side there was Lou Holtz, the Razorbacks' feisty coach, with an electronic device stuck to his chest.

"Sixty, wide to the left," he mumbled to one of his clefted messengers relaying plays from the bench to the huddle.

Up high in the press box, NBC announcer Curt Gowdy thumbed quickly through some pages.

"It's going to an option play to his left," Gowdy explained hurriedly. By that time, the Arkansas quarterback had already thrown an errant pass.

"One sixty-five, deep," said Holtz to one of his messengers.

Gowdy rummaged through his papers.

"I can't find this one," he said frantically.

"That's okay, just wait for the next one," said his press box companion, John Brodie.

The bizarre sequence of these events raises the vital question: What should be the extent of electronic intrusion in big time sports?

Wake Forest Defeats UNC-A

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Wake Forest basketball coach Carl Tacy said he was satisfied with the Deacons' 91-70 win Tuesday night over the University of North Carolina at Asheville.

But since time for solid Atlantic Coast Conference play is drawing near, he said he wasn't entirely satisfied with the Deacons' efforts.

"We had too many fouls, our transition game is still a little bit of a problem and the defense effort was not what I had hoped for," he said. "We played a lot of people, and with one day's practice it's about what we could expect."

Freshman Mike Helms scored a game-high 19 points to lead the Deacons, 5-4, to the win over N. Carolina-Asheville. Four of his teammates scored in double figures to assist in the effort that was unaided by leading Deacon scorer Alvis Rogers. Rogers was benched by Tacy for returning late from Christmas vacation.

Helms scored 11 of his career-high total in the second half to put the Deacons ahead by as many as 22 points at times. Also scoring in double figures for the Deacons were freshman Guy Morgan and senior Larry Harrison with 11 points each and junior David Morris and sophomore Wilbert Singleton with 10 each.

The Bulldogs, 1-8, were led by Charleston Miles and George Gilbert with 14 points each.

Wake shot only 43 percent from the field but took advantage of 33 Asheville turnovers, giving up the ball only 12 times themselves. The Bulldogs shot 32 percent from the floor.

"We just forgot our offensive patterns," said coach Bob Hartman. "We were lucky to only get beat by 21 points. I was very disappointed with our play."

Patriots Host Oilers

By DICK BRAUDE
AP Sports Writer

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — The New England Patriots hope they haven't drawn a joker from the wild card ranks. No doubt about it, the National Football League team would rather be playing Denver here Sunday instead of sizzling hot Houston in the American Conference semifinals. "The Oilers are much tougher to defense than Denver," Patriots defensive captain Steve Nelson, the star linebacker, said Tuesday. The Patriots, AFC East champions, would have played the Broncos if Miami had beaten Houston last weekend. Instead, the Oilers — with NFL rushing champion Earl Campbell and quarterback Dan Pastorini — are coming to town. Houston, a wild card entry in the playoffs, was in Foxboro earlier this year. The Patriots took a 23-0 lead, then lost 26-23 on Nov. 12. In that game, the Oilers' ball control offense, led by rookie sensation Campbell, kept New England's defense on the field for about two-thirds of the second half. As if the Patriots don't have enough worries, there's still the residue of last week's turmoil — with Coach Chuck Fairbanks an apparent lame duck as he plots a future move to new coaching chores at the University of Colorado. Fairbanks was suspended by the team for accepting the post, then reinstated by owner William H. Sullivan Jr. when the coach told Colorado he was temporarily unavailable. Fairbanks also was unavailable to reporters Tuesday simply because, a team spokesman said, "of the press of time." Several Patriots players, however, looked ahead to the playoff matchup. "I don't think we'll have any problems playing our best game of the season," said quarterback Steve Grogan. "The playoffs mean too much to all of us not to play our best." Linebacker Steve Zabel said New England's challenge is to stop Campbell on first down situations in which the bruiser has piled up several hundred yards. But the Patriots also must adjust to the prospect of fake handoffs to Campbell, with Pastorini tossing play-action passes that burned the Dolphins in the opening round of the playoffs. "The first down is critical," said Zabel. "And we have to pressure Pastorini. We'll find out if he's really hurt." The Houston quarterback with the injured ribs plays in a special flak jacket undershirt that apparently protects him against everything, from speeding bullets to 275-pound defenders. The game Sunday ends a two-week Patriots layoff. Their last outing was the regular season wrap-up, a 23-3 loss in Miami hours after Sullivan kicked Fairbanks out of the Patriots' locker room.

Reading Labels A Money-Saver

CHICAGO (AP) — Ammonium lauryl sulfate. Sounds a little ominous, but you come into contact with it every day or so, and recognizing it is one of the keys to becoming a smart shopper in the self-care market, according to a money-management expert.

"Ammonium lauryl sulfate is a common ingredient among shampoos," explains Shari Bryant, consumer-affairs advisor to Helene Curtis. "It's simply a detergent, not the dish-washing kind, but the kind that gets hair clean. And, every shampoo has some detergent in it."

Mrs. Bryant points out that just by studying ingredients on a product's label, a consumer can get a bottle of shampoo for about a dollar that contains practically the same ingredients as another that costs about three dollars.

The consumer-affairs advisor is busy instructing budget-conscious buyers across the country on how to get the most for their money from personal-care products.

"Anyone can look like a million without spending a fortune," she says, "and in these inflationary times, budgeting is a priority for most families."

Reading labels and reviewing product ingredients are the best ways to start on the road to smart shopping, advises Mrs. Bryant.

"You don't need to know what the ingredient means. It's just a matter of looking at the ingredient list on several products and comparing the similarity of the elements," she notes. "After looking at several product labels, you'll know when the contents are alike."

In addition to providing ingredients, the entire product label can enlighten a consumer, she points out. It says what the product is and what it does, gives instructions on how to use its contents for maximum benefit and always lists the manufacturer's name and location.

Among Mrs. Bryant's other tips for smart shopping in the self-care market are:

- Establish a basic "stock" of items for all personal-care needs. Less money will be spent if you stick to the list.
- Double up on product uses. Buy an all-purpose lotion instead of one each for hands, face and body.
- Know what products work for you. In the case of shampoos, know whether your hair is dry, normal or oily and buy the product which suits it.
- Become a unit-pricing expert. Divide the number of ounces into the product price. This will tell you which product is more economical to use.
- Know when a bargain is a bargain. Compute the unit price to be sure the large economy size is truly more economical. If it's a first-time buy, try the smaller size first to see if the product works well.
- If a product has not performed well, write the manufacturer's Customer Service Department. Tell them what the problem is and send along the label or product for documentation.

Worm Riches Not Achieved

NEW YORK (AP) — A group of earthworm cultivators had their hopes for quick riches ployed under when they found that promised profits could not be achieved. But the state attorney general says the total $100,000 in investments will be refunded.

Because profits of more than 300 percent never materialized as promised, investors will get back the money they sank into the earthworm-growing kits and guaranteed buy-back agreements of the Northern Homegrowers Worm Exchange of Shrub Oak, N.Y., said Attorney General Louis Lefkowitz.

Experts Argue Can U.S. Achieve Energy Program

By LeROY POPE
UPI Business Writer
NEW YORK (UPI) — One scholar suggests that it will take a revolution of some kind to enable the United States to establish a workable national energy program.

Others cannot agree whether there is a problem for a program to solve. Which is just one of the problems, according to Prof. Leon N. Lindberg of the University of Wisconsin.

Writing in "Executive," the magazine of Cornell's graduate business school, Lindberg says the public debate over energy policy is stalemated. He sees no way to break the stalemate under present circumstances.

Lindberg doesn't advocate overthrow of the government or resort to socialism, but he sounds as if he is advocating revolutionary changes when he says, "An alternative policy cannot build upon established centers of power in the private economy or the public bureaucrats." Agreement, he said, is needed among too many contending parties.

Professor Lindberg implies rather strongly that at present the federal and state governments are too weak to formulate and establish an energy policy. By contrast, he cites the relative success in dealing with the energy crisis of such centralized states as Sweden, Japan and France.

He says the weaknesses in American government that are almost insurmountable obstacles to achieving a national energy policy include "our fragmented decision making process, frequent elections, separation of powers, checks and balances, little party discipline and a myriad of relatively autonomous legislative committees."

Professor Lindberg finds other obstacles in American society to breaking the stalemate. One obstacle he calls "the trajectory of past policies and institutional arrangements." As a result of these, he says the oil companies and government officials share a common outlook and common stake in policy privilege and, in consequence, they will stall on creating alternative sources of energy "until scarcities assure higher profits and sunk costs have been recovered." He said this means they will oppose an energy program based on conservation and solar energy because that possesses an implicit threat to the energy industry's long-range plan for conversion to a coal-based economy.

Another obstacle to consensus, he said, is "the ideological ambivalence we Americans have about the proper role of the state in the economy."

The nature of the stalemate perceived by Professor Lindberg is described starkly in other articles in the same edition of the Cornell magazine. Prof. Robert C. Lind of Cornell says many economists still claim there is no energy crisis and there will be none "unless the federal government creates one by imposing price and other regulations."

But Professor Lind disagrees and says a national energy policy is badly needed but that so far "we have not been able to define the crisis."

The most graphic example of looking at the energy policy dilemma from opposite ends of the telescope is revealed in articles by John G. Winger, energy economist for New York's Chase Manhattan Bank, and Jesse Calhoun, president of the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association.

Winger contends that the big cause of the energy crisis is the low profits of the oil companies and Calhoun contends the profits are too high. Both agree that the solution is vastly increased production but their views of how this can be brought about are diametrically opposed.

Winger says the problem began in the 1950s when huge new supplies of natural gas began invading traditional oil markets aided by "unenlightened regulation" that kept the wellhead price of gas well below replacement costs. "By replacement costs he apparently means the cost of finding and developing new gas supplies."

He said this slashed average annual net income growth of the major oil companies from 1957 to 1972 to 4 percent and caused a prolonged lag in capital formation and consequent underinvestment by the oil companies, leading inevitably to the crisis of 1973, even though that crisis actually was precipitated by the Arab-Israeli War.

"For years," he said, "gas accounted for as much as 85 percent of the growth of the energy market but gas didn't bring in nearly as much revenue as increased oil sales would have."

Then, after the discovery of oil in Africa in the 1960s, Winger says, a vicious cycle of price competition set in in the European markets and heavy taxes were imposed by European governments. Both of these trends further inhibited needed capital formation.

Lind, whose bank has monitored the financial performance of the oil industry since 1936, says the industry probably would have found sufficient new petroleum reserves to keep up with demand if capital formation had been adequate. "Conceivably," he says, "the United States might have remained self-sufficient with respect to both oil and natural gas."

Winger argued that in spite of the much bigger profits the oil companies reported after 1972, the companies still lack the financial resources to make an adequate search for new reserves. He said "most governments still fail to acknowledge the financial realities of an adequate petroleum supply and continue to inhibit the process of capital formation. Government attitudes, instead, reflect, in part, the mistaken belief that much energy use is frivolous and wasteful. Consequently, officials fail to recognize essential needs and focus their attention on conservation rather than expansion of supply."

Winger put the capital needs of the free world oil industry between now and 1985 at $1.4 trillion.

Union leader Calhoun, on the other hand, saw the problem almost entirely in terms of major oil company monopoly and dwelt on the windfall profits following the Arab oil crisis. But since his union is composed of tanker crew members he devoted much attention to the profits and tax savings he said the major oil companies achieve by owning or controlling the world's tanker fleets — "their control of tankers enables them to work wonders." He said the tanker operation was "virtually a tax-free endeavor."

As Calhoun saw it, the companies, particularly, "the seven sisters," had succeeded before the Arab embargo in establishing a cartel to dominate free world production, haulage and marketing of oil, dictate terms to the governments of producing countries and amass enormous profits by keeping oil prices low but stable.

Calhoun found that the Arab embargo that drove the global oil price up from $5 to $17 a barrel actually solidified the relationship between the companies and the producing country governments, increasing profits for both. And he said a concurrent shift from a royalty to a tax method of paying the producing countries gave the oil companies new U.S. tax credits.

Calhoun also charged that the Arab embargo encouraged the U.S. oil companies to move to monopolize other sources of energy as he claims they have monopolized oil.

But after agreeing with Winger that new oil reserves must be developed, Calhoun took the tack of the Mexicans. He said the global oil companies must not be allowed to get their fingers significantly into newly found reserves because that simply would increase the degree of monopoly at the expense of consumers everywhere. Instead, he says the U.S. government should give direct help to the developing countries in exploring for oil on their own.

Energy Secretary James Schlesinger said in another article that the United States cannot frame an energy policy without facing up to the oil price problem.

'Uncounted Millions' In Ranks Of The Bureaucracy

BY DONALD LAMBRO
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite official government statistics that place its civilian work force at nearly 2.9 million people, the number of people who are paid with federal funds actually is more than seven million.

A United Press International survey found that the government's count of the civilian work force ignores millions of people inside and outside of government whose salaries are paid directly or indirectly through federal tax revenues.

Not only are hundreds of thousands of workers employed by government-created agencies and programs excluded from the Civil Service Commission's monthly statistics, but so are millions of "outside" workers who labor fulltime and part-time for the government under a variety of contracts and grants.

"The pressure is to keep the number as low as possible," said one top commission official. He admitted that many government workers "fall into a gray area" that is not counted.

A Senate Appropriations Committee staffer put it more bluntly: "The government payroll really includes millions more than the government says it does. It (the commission's) is not an honest figure."

No one in the government actually knows the number of workers who are supported in whole or in part with federal funds.

If anything, the seven million figure, compiled by surveying about a dozen agencies at random, is on the low side.

When military personnel is added, the overall number approaches the 10 million mark.

While outside consultants, university researchers, contractors and others are not legally federal employees, many do in fact work fulltime on government jobs, sometimes even administering government programs. Major consulting firms such as the Urban Institute earn the bulk of their income from federal contracts.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare employs about 145,000 people inside its agencies. But on the outside, HEW money pays the salaries of 980,000 other people in state and local governments, universities, research institutions and private contractors.

The Defense Department, which employs a military force of 2.6 million, also provides work for another 2 million people through research and development, procurement and construction contracts.

There also is a multitude of quasi-government agencies and government-created "corporations" whose workers are not officially considered federal employees even though they work fulltime in government-created programs and are paid with federal funds.

UPI found that hundreds of thousands of workers in this category are not counted by the Civil Service Commission because of the non-government definition Congress has applied to their programs.

An example is the Legal Services Corporation whose corps of 4,795 attorneys and 241 administrative backup personnel was established by Congress in the 1960s to provide free legal services to the poor.

The agency's employees are not counted by the government — even though funds for all salaries come from the U.S. Treasury. Officials say it was created by Congress as an independent "corporation" and thus is not part of the executive branch of government.

The Community Services Administration, the anti-poverty agency created under President Johnson, provides operating funds for some 900 state and local community action agencies around the country which employ 38,000 people in addition to another 6,000 in various other programs.

None are considered federal employees even though CSA grants to these agencies pay their salaries.

Another so-called quasi-government agency is the 20,000 employee National Rail Passenger Corporation which runs Amtrak along with another 6,500 workers on other rail lines. All of them remain uncounted even though Uncle Sam pays the bulk of their salaries.

The government-created Consolidated Rail Corporation known as Conrail, which took over six bankrupt railroad lines, was created to someday become an independent corporation with the help of nearly $2 billion in federal loans.

These loans, needed to cover Conrail's substantial annual deficit, help in part to pay the salaries of the corporation's 93,000 employees.

Similarly, the 330 employees of the U.S. Railway Association, which was created to monitor Conrail and act as its banker, are not considered government employees. Their salaries, are supplied by the Treasury.

An examination of the more than 1.1 million people — greater than the United States Army — whose salaries are paid in whole or in part by HEW reveals the extent to which federal "employment" has been substantially hidden from public view.

According to Secretary Joseph Califano, HEW employs "84,600 in state government, 572,700 in local government, 87,700 people in universities, 33,400 people in nonprofit research institutions, 113,900 employees in private contractors, and 88,900 in other areas."

During a Senate Appropriations subcommittee hearing at which Califano presented his figures, a surprised Chairman Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., blurted out, "This is the best public service job program I have ever heard of. That is more than we give them for public service jobs."

Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., adding HEW's counted 145,000 employees to Califano's figures, exclaimed, "My God, we are over 1 million."

One example of HEW employment through private contractors would be the Medicare program under which HEW pays Blue Cross and Blue Shield and other health care groups to administer the program. The department says that 26,537 employees of these groups were paid with HEW funds.

The Commerce Department's Office of Minority Business Enterprise lists only 207 employees. It does not count approximately 2,500 persons employed by 250 self-help, business counseling organizations whose salaries it finances.

The Army Corps of Engineers, which has 36,000 civilian employees, spends billions of dollars annually to carry out maintenance and construction work on rivers and harbors, irrigation and flood control projects, and other facilities.

Corps officials say they have no idea how many workers these firms employ with federal contract funds but hat it must be "thousands and thousands."

The Labor Department officially lists 22,377 in its employ, but through the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) the department is paying the salaries of 750,000 state and local government employees under the public service jobs program.

In addition, Labor finances paychecks for 77,000 state employees who work in Employment Service and Unemployment Service offices around the country. "They come under the state government," said a government expert, "but their paychecks are 100 percent paid for by federal funds."

The National Science Foundation, whose annual budget is nearly $1 billion, estimates that between 65,000 and 70,000 people are employed either fulltime or part-time under 19,230 NSF contracts, grants and awards.

The salaries for principal NSF grantees, professors, scientists, and others may be for just a few summer months or longer, but when figured on a yearly basis some are being paid at an annual rate of $45,000 or more.

TREASURE HUNT—Polish experts look for usable brickwork while restoring a half-timbered house in Bonn, West Germany. Polish restorers became world leaders in the field by rebuilding beautiful old cities in their country and abroad.

Polish Restorers Share Skills In German Cities

By ROON LEWAL
BONN, West Germany (AP) — Polish restorers who became world leaders by rebuilding beautiful old cities leveled by Nazi Germans are now sharing their skill with their former enemies to save architectural treasures in this country.

"The Poles have the most experience in this field in Europe today," says 40-year-old Rumualde Latzke, head of a West German firm that subcontracts Polish experts to restore German architectural treasures.

"The way they rebuilt the old quarters of cities like Warsaw and Gdansk should be an example to the West. They have learned what to preserve and how to blend new and old architecture," he said.

Polish expertise was won the hard way. A total of more than 6,000 historical monuments were destroyed in Poland during the wartime German occupation, an era that still bedevils bilateral relations with bitter Polish memories of Nazi brutality.

At the end of the war, Nazi troops methodically carried out orders to raze Warsaw to the ground and left the city's historic quarter a featureless expanse of rubble.

Communist authorities launched a national drive to restore Poland's cultural heritage. Warsaw's old center, whose original buildings dated as far back as the 13th century, was faithfully reconstructed as early as 1953.

Millions of Poles at home and abroad contributed money to pay for building a $30-million complete replica of Warsaw's 17th-century royal castle, a famous city landmark blown to bits by the Nazis.

In Warsaw alone, 700 architectural treasures rose anew from the ruins as similar work went ahead in the historic centers of Gdansk, Wroclaw, Poznan, Szczecin, Opole, Nysa and several dozen smaller towns.

When Latzke founded his Duesseldorf-based Arkade Restoration Company two years ago, he could find few German craftsmen commanding the specialized techniques required for the job.

So he used contacts obtained while studying at a state restoration school in Poland to borrow trained Polish experts.

"There are no such schools in West Germany, so we are using the Poles to train our own people as they carry out the job. It's going to take us at least five years to build up a corps of German experts," he said.

Latzke's firm employs teams of up to half a dozen restorers for each contract. The teams are made up of German apprentices working with four or five Polish craftsmen under their own foreman, farmed out by the Polish state on a sub-contract basis.

The borrowed experts earn welcome Western currency for Poland. But Latzke said this was not the main motive for their work in West Germany.

"It's a Polish contribution to international cooperation agreed on during the International Historical Monuments Year in 1976," he said.

In the southern Bonn suburb of Bad Godesberg, Leszek Garniek of the State Workshop for Historical Monuments of Wroclaw heads a four-man Polish team which is transferring a timber-frame, 17th-century farmhouse lock, stock and barrel to a new location.

The Schwan House, named after the family occupying it since it was built in 1627, has been declared a historical monument because it is a rare example of rural Frankish architecture once typical of the region.

City fathers are paying $270,000 for its relocation to a nearby city park, thus making way for a new road.

Garniek's team carefully took the house apart over a period of four weeks. Hundreds of beams and other components, each carefully numbered, were transferred to a workshop so that each part could be treated for decay or replaced if too badly damaged to preserve.

Garniek hopes that by next July hereditary owner Anna Schwan will be able to move back into her house — unchanged in its new location except for improved plumbing and much-needed repairs.

A major project that will keep Polish restorers busy for the next six years is the interior renovation of Hinnenburg Castle at Brakel, near Paderborn in northeastern West Germany, an aristocratic seat partially dating back to the 12th century.

"This year we're restoring the rococo ceiling and repairing molding work in the dining hall. We'll move on next year to the so-called White Room, the most beautiful rococo hall in Westphalia," said Latzke. "It's very painstaking work restoring all the stucco and gilded moldings."

Odds Against Young Doctors

RYE, N.Y. (UPI) — One out of every six young doctors who marry in medical school will end up in the divorce courts within 10 years of graduation, according to Medical-Mrs., the magazine for doctors' wives.

According to an article in a recent issue of the publication, many young doctors' wives get what they call a "P.H.T. degree" (Putting Hubby Through), only to find that "medical school changes husbands and destroys relationships."

"Neither husband nor wife is prepared for the tremendous demands on his time and emotions," says Dr. Myra Hatterer, a psychiatrist with Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Statistically the most likely time for young doctor divorces is at the peak of career achievement, between the ages of 35 and 44.

New Railroad Weather Alert

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's railroads are using a new severe-weather warning system this winter in hopes of keeping freight cars running in spite of storms, the Association of American Railroads says.
 The industry group says 100 large railroads in 29 northern states will receive storm and snow information as well as notes on frozen switches and terminal delays from AAR which will be helped by the Interstate Commerce Commission and the National Weather Service. The information should help railroads and shippers avoid routing and scheduling that would steer cars into severe weather, AAR says.

Taped Evidence Of Mistreated Political Inmates

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Posing as a priest, ABC News correspondent William Sherman smuggled cameras and a tape recorder into a maximum security prison in the Philippines to document evidence of mistreatment of political prisoners.

More than a dozen of the 110 prisoners Sherman saw told of torture by electric shock, water and beating. "The agents electrocuted me," one inmate declared. "They applied lighted cigarettes to my toenails and my breasts," said another.

Sherman, producer Tom Bywaters and the ABC crew also visited Chile and Iran in quest of similar data, and their report is the focus of "ABC News Closeup: The Politics of Torture," to be broadcast at 10 p.m. EST tonight.

The hour-long documentary contrasts President Carter's often-stated commitment to human rights with the administration's continued support of what ABC describes as dictatorial or suppressive regimes.

Jimmy Carter is the first president since John F. Kennedy to press for human rights throughout the world, ABC's John Martin, the host correspondent, declares, but the administration's actions in that area have been inconsistent and conflicting.

The program cites, specifically, "aid to a dictator," the Philippines' President Marcos; congressional pressure on Chile's government with few positive results, and Carter's continued public support of the Shah of Iran, whose country, ABC says, has perhaps the worst record of the three in protecting human rights.

Carter has, indeed, raised the world's consciousness regarding human rights, Martin says, but the government's policies continue to be moderated by political and other concerns.

The "ABC News Closeup" avoids exploration of the internal conditions that led to suppression of human rights in the three countries. An interview with Carter was sought in connection with the news special, Martin says, but the president declined. In his place, key government officials are asked about continued aid to the three countries despite

Carter's declaration in January 1977. "Our commitment to human rights must be absolute."

Of U.S. aid to the Philippines totaling $133 million this year, Warren Christopher, a deputy secretary of state, tells ABC News. "It is very important to the security, not only of those islands but of the other countries in the Far East, and so we have to keep in balance, keep in harmony, our commitment to human rights but also our security commitment."

"Iran is the clearest example of the Carter administration putting politics ahead of human rights," Martin says, and Carter, at one point, is shown saying the shah "has moved aggressively to establish democratic principles." The fact is, ABC says, Iranian oil is important to both the United States and Israel, and the country maintains a strategic position on the Persian Gulf, which also is significant.

Network Radio Trend Is Up, Say Officials

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — There was a time, says the man who runs CBS' radio network, that the once mighty medium would tread softly in the presence of big brother television.

"We had developed a kind of inferiority complex toward television," says Richard M. Brescia, vice president of CBS' radio division. "and we tended to be a little timid about experimenting with radio."

CBS broke the ice, so to speak, about five years ago with the "CBS Mystery Theater," "and that," says Brescia, "was really coming full circle to the good old days."

The same network announced recently the premiere Feb. 5 of "Sears Radio Theater," a series of hour-long plays to be broadcast nightly to CBS stations.

Indeed, something is happening in network radio. Both NBC and ABC announced this fall restructuring of their radio networks, and though the details are technical and hardly of interest here, the implications are noteworthy.

Fred Silverman, NBC's president, said formation of the NBC Radio Group "emphasizes NBC's long-term commitment to radio and our determination to become the leader in broadcasting."

And Edward F. McLaughlin, vice president of the ABC Radio Network, said of the reorganization at ABC, "These moves reflect the tremendous growth of network radio in recent years and our expectation that this trend will continue."

"I'd call it a rebirth or revitalization," says CBS' Brescia, "that's been going on for four or five years. And the nice thing about it is that radio continues to show this great vitality."

Produce A Scuppernong Dry Wine, Champagne

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) Most think of scuppernong wine, people think of sweet when they Traditionally scuppernong wine

"Traditionally scuppernong wines have been produced to be sweet wines," said state marketing specialist Jim Warren. But they can be made as dry or sweet as you like, he said.

The local fruit that produces this wine is round and brown and about the size of a large marble, according to Warren. It doesn't have the usual oval grape shape. It has a slipskin meaning that the pulpy center of the grape, which is filled with seeds, pops free of the skin when you bite it.

Wine Cellars, Inc., the first winery in the state since Prohibition, is turning the sweet to dry, and according to one connoisseur, even the most discriminating should be impressed.

The Edenton business is planning to increase its production by a third this year, upping its output from 30,000 gallons last year to 40,000 this year. It will be bottling more selections under the Deertield label, including a North Carolina burgandy and dry red and white table wines.

But a winery in Edenton is changing all that by turning out dry scuppernong wine and even putting a scuppernong champagne on the shelves.
