Bakhtiar Asked To Form New Government

Shah Will Leave Iran

By LEON DANIEL

TEHRAN (UPI) — Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi will leave Iran "in a convenient time" for medical treatment and relaxation, the official PARS news agency announced Sunday morning.

Opposition leader Shahpour Bakhtiar has been assigned by the shah to form a new government, replacing Gen. Gholam Reza Azhari, the agency said.

The agency did not say when the shah would leave the country or what his destination would be.

The announcment came after Iran suffered the bloodiest day of violence Saturday in eight consecutive days of anti-shah violence.

The PARS news agency also said Iran's parliament would meet in a joint session "to give the go-ahead to Dr. Bakhtiar," but did not say when the session would take place.

The announcement said Bakhtiar told the agency Saturday in an exclusive interview:

"His imperial majesty the shahanshah has expressed his desire to go abroad for a while for the purpose of medical treatments and relaxation in a convenient time."

Bakhtiar confirmed that he accepted the request to form the new government and said, "I submitted myself to his imperial majesty's desires."

Bakhtiar said he would push ahead with his efforts to form a new civilian government but announce it only after he had received the approval of the parliament.

The PARS interview with Bakhtiar gave no indication of the likely composition of his cabinet.

Bakhtiar, 63, a French-educated lawyer, bitterly attacked Karim Sanjabi, hardline leader of the National Front opposition, which expelled Bakhtiar earlier Saturday in a move sources said was designed to isolate him and deny the shah any chances of accommodation with the politicians.

There was no immediate reaction from the country's politicians to the announcement of Bakhtiar's moves.

But the expulsion of the prime minister-designate from the National Front threw Iran into new turmoil, with the military-controlled Radio Iran announcing postponement of an earlier parliament session called for Sunday.

There was no immediate official explanation for the postponement of the earlier session, which further confused the political situation on a day of national mourning called by the shah's No. 1 religious enemy to honor those killed by Iranian troops this year.

However, an Iranian editor, mostafa Jaferi, who contacted Bakhtiar by telephone quoted him as saying the joint session was postponed at his request. He said Bakhtiar had asked the shah for more time. Bakhtiar dismissed his expulsion from the National Front as "trouble-making by envious people."

"There are some people who just don't want others to succeed, but I have not lost hope and expect to come up with something by the end of this week," Bakhtiar told the editor.

Political observers said this tougher army approach showed that the army wanted to emphasize its role in the nation's affairs and could conceivably lead to a military takeover that would keep the shah on the Peacock Throne.

The mounting turmoil, the political uncertainty and the growth of anti-American feeling triggered another mass exodus by American, British and Dutch oil workers and their dependents over the weekend. Athens dispatches said "hundreds" would arrive there from Iran during the New Year's weekend. Most of the shah's family flew to the United States Friday although Empress Farah was reported still at the Royal Palace.

The National Front, the largest political party in Iran, is violently opposed to the shah and has called for his abdication. It had been expected to frown on Bakhtiar's efforts to form a civilian government but expulsion from the party was a harsher move than anyone had expected.

"As it has been reported that Mr. Shahpour Bakhtiar, by disregarding organization discipline, has accepted to form a government, the National Front has declared it cannot agree to any combination of governments with the present illegal regime," the party said.

The statement said formation of a government by Bakhtiar "is in no way compatible with the organizational ideals and aims of the Front and therefore he is dismissed as a member of the National Front."

Expulsion isolated Bakhtiar politically and threw the entire issue of a new civilian government into jeopardy. Political observers said the military might not want to entrust the government to a politician with no following and that this also raised the possibility of a military takeover instead of democratization.

While the streets of Tehran reverberated to the sound of gunfire, the shah met during the day with parliamentary leaders to discuss his plans for transition under which he agreed to leave the country temporarily while Bakhtiar formed a government in hopes of halting Iran's chaotic plunge toward anarchy.

The day of national mourning was called by the shah's implacable foe, religious leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, from his exile in Paris. It was the worst day of violence in more than a week, with heavy anti-American overtones, posing another threat to peaceful transition of power.

Western diplomats expressed fears that even the temporary departure of the shah could not halt the plunge toward anarchy and the threat of civil war. Troops appeared increasingly willing to fire on the rampaging mobs shouting "Death to the shah," "Victory is near" and "Down with American supporters of tyranny!"

Some of the worst fighting was reported from the eastern Iranian city of Mashad, considered holy by the Shiite Moslems who lead the opposition to the shah. Witnesses said an army tank roared into a crowd of several hundred thousands demonstrators, crushing six of them to death — the second such incident this week.

Demonstrators in Tehran barricaded key intersections by building bonfires. Soldiers, firing as they ran, chased the demonstrators into side streets. Troops on trucks and Jeeps in some instances appeared to fire

PRICE OF PROTEST — Grief at losing a brother in rioting of the past few days is too much for this Iranian, who breaks down and weeps over the shrouded body of the young anti-Shah militant during the funeral at Tehran's Behesht-Zahra Cemetery. Assassination Probable Conspiracy

By DANIEL F. GILMORE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the dramatic end to a two-year investigation, the House Assassinations Committee concluded Saturday President John F. Kennedy "was probably assassinated as a result of a conspiracy," the panel said.

But the committee went on to say it "is unable to identify the other gunman or the extent of the conspiracy" in the assassination of Kennedy 15 years ago in Dallas.

No foreign powers or U.S. agencies were involved in the possible conspiracies in the Kennedy and King cases, the report said.

But the Justice Department, FBI, CIA, Secret Service and Warren Commission were castigated for laxness, ineptitude and inefficiency in protecting Kennedy, investigating his murder and not pursuing the possibility of conspiracy.

The committee's conclusions were contained in a 17-page report from committee Chairman Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, to Edmond L. Henshaw Jr., clerk of the House.

"The committee believes, on the basis of the evidence available to it, that President John F. Kennedy was probably assassinated as a result of a conspiracy," the panel said.

The panel, reporting the findings of its $5 million investigation, also said the "circumstantial evidence available" indicated a conspiracy in the assassination of Martin Luther King Jr. in Memphis on April 4, 1968.

The committee asked the Justice Department to review and analyze the panel's conclusions to see "whether further official investigation is warranted in either case."

The stunning Kennedy conclusion, based on scientific information only made available to the committee in recent weeks, contradicted the Warren Commission's 1964 report that Lee Harvey Oswald was solely responsible.

Henshaw will now have the responsibility of editing an overall report, expected to be of encyclopaedic size with trancripts and documentation.

The committee, which goes out of business when the current session of Congress ends Jan. 3, 1978, gave no names of anyone involved in possible conspiracies in the Kennedy and King assassinations.

It said, as did the Warren Report, that Oswald fired three shots on Nov. 22, 1963 from a sixth floor "sniper's nest" in the Texas School Book Depository Building.

The first shot missed. The second and third killed the president and wounded Texas Gov. John Connally.

The trigger-man for the fourth shot, which scientific evidence said was fired from behind a picket fence on a grassy knoll in Dallas' Dealey Plaza, is unknown.

In the King case, the panel found that James Earl Ray fired one rifle shot killing the civil rights leader. No one else was named as a possible co-conspirator.

But the committee has revealed evidence that two St. Louis businessmen of dubious reputation, both now dead, reportedly offered a bounty of $50,000 in late 1963 or early 1964 to anyone who would murder King.

No evidence has been produced so far that the bounty was ever paid or that Ray got any part of it.

There have also been suspicions about the possible roles played by Ray's brothers.

The report was written in terse language with short paragraphs and no footnotes or extraneous comment.

Of the Kennedy assassination — which from the beginning had raised haunting doubts in the minds of millions — it noted:

—Kennedy was struck by two rifle shots fired from behind; the bullets came from a sixth floor window of the book depository building.

—Oswald owned the rifle used to fire the shots and was present on the sixth floor of the building. Oswald's other actions "tend to support the conclusion that he assassinated President Kennedy."

—But "scientific acoustical evidence establishes a high probability that two gunmen fired at President John F. Kennedy."

The committee said it failed to find "on the basis of evidence available" any involvement by the Soviet Union, Cuba, anti-Fidel Castro groups, organized crime, the Secret Service, FBI or CIA in the Kennedy killing.

But, the report said, available evidence "does not preclude the possibility that individual members" of anti-Castro Cuban groups or organized crime may have been involved in the assassination.

The committee was critical of federal agencies and to a lesser extent the Warren Commission, but there was some praise, or mitigating words as well.

The report said "the Secret Service was deficient in the performance of its duties" in protecting the president.

It said the Secret Service had information in connection with Kennedy's trip, "that was not properly analyzed, investigated or used." It said agents in the motorcade "were inadequately prepared to protect the president from a sniper."

However, the report said the responsibilty of the Secret Service to investigate the murder "was terminated" when the FBI took over.

It said the Justice Department "failed to exercise initiative in supervising and directing the investigation by the FBI."

'Routine Operations'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Navy Saturday dispatched an aircraft carrier and five support vessels to the South China Sea on what it called "routine operations," the Department of Defense said.

The spokesman said the vessels included a guided missile cruiser, two guided missile destroyers and a conventional destroyer. The task group was supported by the USS Mispillion, a tanker and oiler.

"A U.S. Navy task group consisting of the USS Constellation, the USS Leahy, the USS Hoel, the USS Decatur, and the USS Kincaid has left Subic Bay in the Philippines and is proceeding into the South China Sea on routine operations," the Pentagon spokesman said.

The Pentagon declined to comment on the extent of operations, or if the task force would proceed to the Arabian Sea and join other vessels operating southeast of crisistorn Iran.

The mounting turmoil in Iran and the growth of anti-American feeling forced a mass exodus by American, British and Dutch oil workers and their families during the weekend.

The Defense Department on Friday said a seven-vessel Middle East Task Force operating in the area south of the Persian Gulf was carrying out only routine naval maneuevers.

Ramar Still Shy

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Zoo officials are hopeful Ramar, a 350-pound male gorilla, soon will learn swinging means more than traveling from tree to tree.

But so far Ramar's love exploits with Haloko and Samantha, the zoo's two 11-year-old females who have shared his cage for four months, can best be described as reluctant.

"Two months ago we became a little more encouraged," Jeanne Segal, the zoo's public relations director, said Friday. "He was making some gestures. But the following month he didn't."

With his arrival in April, zoo officials installed Haloko and Samantha in adjoining cages hoping they'd charm him.

After Ramar became accustomed to seeing the females, the zoo moved them into his cage. But still the hoped-for liaison did not occur.

"He was terrified when we first introduced him to them," said Ms. Segal. "And the females took advantage of this.

"They would run across the cage and give him a slap. He would retire to the corner and suck his thumb. Then he started to take interest and enjoy the play and now he seems to welcome it."

A native of Angola, West Africa, Ramar was discovered by an animal trainer when he was one year old and weighed only 22 pounds.

For the next four years, he played nightspots from Miami to Las Vegas, pedaling a tricycle and doing handstands atop a 10-foot pole.

When Ramar reached 200 pounds, he was considered too big for the act and was sold for $6,000 to the North Carolina Zoo.

The world's lowland gorillas, like Ramar, are on the endangered list and it is hoped their species can be preserved through reproduction at institutions such as the Philadelphia Zoo.

Runners From Many States To Be In Marathon

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Herb Lee says he feels a little like a marathoner himself as he attempts to keep pace with the correspondence from long distance runners who plan to take part in the North Carolina Marathon Championship to be held in Bethel Saturday, Jan. 13.

Twenty to 25 applications and inquiries have been coming in daily for several weeks says Lee, who is associated with both the co-hosts of the marathon (26.2-mile road race). He is a vice president of Home Savings and Loan Association here and is a member of the Coastal Carolina Track Club. As of Thursday, there were 537 official entries, he said, with many others promised by phone or letter. Lee said he believe the limit, which is 1,000 participants, will be reached.

The Bethel Marathon, as the N. C. Championship is commonly known, has been held in this northern Pitt County town for the past four years, but this is the first one that has been advertised nationally. Ads were placed in "Runner's World," "Runners' Times," and "Foot Notes," the publication of the Road Runners Club of America, of which the Coastal Carolina Track Club is an affiliate.

Local motels have been booking reservations for weeks, many made by Lee on behalf of his correspondents. The Greenville Chamber of Commerce is holding a "hospitality room" for the runners the night before at the Holiday Inn here.

The Bethel event was started by Clem Williams, an officer of the North Carolina Amateur Athletics Union and a member of the Coastal Carolina group, and he continues to direct the arrangements for the road race which is from Bethel to Oak City and back. This is a qualifying race for the famed Boston Marathon, held in April.

Applications have been received by Lee and Dr. Bob Morrison, the Coastal Carolina Track Club president, who is assisting him with correspondence, from as far away as Ottawa, Canada; El Paso, Tex. and Lincoln, Nebr. All of the New England and Middle Atlantic states are well-represented, Lee said. At one time Virginia was leading in the number of applicants from any one state, but North Carolina has pulled ahead this week.

Ten runners from the Naval Academy are registered, as are two Navy rear admirals. The whole track team of Liberty Baptist College in Virginia is to be here, as are numerous members of the Tidewater Striders from the Virginia Beach area, the Carolina Godiva Running Club of the Chapel Hill area, the Wilmington Roadrunners, the Baltimore Roadrunners, the District of Columbia Roadrunners, and the Twin-City Track Club of the Winston-Salem area.

Lee said the oldest registrant so far is 62; the youngest, 11. A mother and son "team," 41 and 17, from Salisbury is registered. About 25 women are booked so far.

Several executives from the Xerox Corporation, the Price Waterhouse accounting firm, and First National City Bank of New York are to be here. Ten persons from the Department of the Interior will be running. And the list broadens and gets more interesting every day, Lee said.

Every participant who finishes will receive a certificate stating his or her time. Those breaking three hours will qualify for the Boston Marathon. The first three finishers overall will receive medals and prizes and age- group firsts and seconds will be given.

Spectators for the race will be welcomed, Lee said.

Refusal Continues

By United Press International

The Hong Kong and Philippine governments Saturday maintained their refusal to allow more than 5,000 Vietnamese refugees on two small freighters anchored off Hong Kong and Manila to come ashore, even temporarily.

A refugee spokesman accused the Hong Kong government of blocking efforts by other countries to open their doors to the 2,700 Vietnamese crammed aboard the 2,795-ton Huey Fong which arrived Christmas Eve.

"People are trying to extend their hands to us from around the world and the government won't allow them," the spokesman said in a radio telephone conversation.

He said the West German government offered to accept 250 refugees aboard the freighter which anchored just outside colonial waters watched by a convoy of naval patrol boats.

The Hong Kong government has insisted the skipper, whom the refugees hold captive, continue to Kaohsiung, Taiwan, which it said was their original destination.

"That's very kind of the West Germans," said a government spokesman in telephone interview. "But they should pick these people up in Kaohsiung, not here."

Probable Conspiracy...

It praised the FBI for "adequately" investigating Oswald before the assassination and conducting "a thorough and professional investigation" of him after the slaying.

"failed to investigate adequately the possibility of a conspiracy" and "was deficient in its sharing of information with other agencies and departments."

It accused the Central Intelligence Agency of being "deficient in its collection and sharing of information both prior to and subsequent to the assassination."

The committee said the Warren Commission "performed with varying degrees of competency in the fulfillment of its duties."

It said the commission conducted "a thorough and professional investigation into the responsibility of Oswald," but "failed to investigate adequately the possibility of a conspiracy."

On the King murder, the committee found:

—Ray, who is serving a 99-year sentence at Brushy Mountain State Prison in Tennessee, purchased the rifle used to shoot King and dropped it at the scene of the slaying.

—Ray's attempts to blame the slaying on a mystery man named Raoul "are not worthy of belief."

—"On the basis of the circumstantial evidence available to it that there is a likelihood that James Earl Ray assassinated Dr. King as a result of a conspiracy."

No names were given.

But it went on to say "no private organizations or individuals" were involved in the King murder — a possible oblique reference to allegations of a conspiracy involving Ray's brothers, James and Jerry.

"No federal, state or local government agency was involved in the assassination," the report said.

Accusations have been voiced over the years that the FBI, because of its years-long harassment of King, was somehow involved in his death.

The committee said the Justice Department and the FBI "performed with varying degrees of competence and legality in the fulfillment of their duties" in investigating the King assassination.

But it said the Justice Department "failed to supervise adequately" what the FBI's Domestic Intelligence Division was doing for years.

The report said the FBI's campaign against King "grossly abused and exceeded its legal authority and failed to consider the possibility that actions threatening bodily harm to Dr. King might be encouraged by the program."

The Justice Department and the FBI, according to the report, "performed a thorough investigation" into Ray's responsibility for the murder, "but failed to investigate adequately the possibility of a conspiracy."

It said the FBI "manifested a lack of concern for constitutional rights in the manner in which it conducted parts of the investigation."

The report contained six, single-space, legal pad-size pages of recommendations. In summary, the committee asked for legislation:

—Making the assassination of a chief of state "of any country, or his political equivalent," a federal offense.

—To revise the federal homicide law, "paying special attention to assassinations" and "the related offenses of conspiracy, assault and kidnapping."

—Extending the protection of federal law to "persons who occupy high judicial and executive positions, including justices of the Supreme Court and cabinet officers."

—Specifying the penalty that should be meted out for homocide and related offenses, "including the applicability and the constitionality of the death penalty."

—Authorizing rewards for the apprehension of persons committing such crimes.

—Providing trusts to hold for the benefit of victims, their families or the general treasury "the profits realized from books, movie rights, or public appearances by the perpetrator of the crime."

Military Takeover Feared In Shah's Absence...

at will as they moved through the streets of the capital. Witnesses reported at least half a dozen deaths.

Witnesses reported "heavy shooting" around the accounting department of the strike-bound Iran Air national airline where demonstrators pulled down portraits of the shah from the walls and set them on fire.

In the northwestern city of Tabriz near the Turkish border a mob attacked the U.S. Consulate and defending Iranian soldiers fired from inside the building.

Michael Metrinko, the U.S. Consul there, was quoted as saying there were no deaths or injuries. Ayatollah Sayed Mohammed Qazi, the most powerful Moslem leader in northwest Iran, said 10 persons were killed in front of the building.

He said another four persons were killed in a demonstration near the Turkish Consulate in Tabriz. Witnesses said demonstrators there burned government offices and more than 50 places of business.

Thousands of demonstrators at Mashad, near the Soviet and Afghan borders, burned the Iran-America Society Cultural Center, a cooperative department store operated by the army and a movie theater.

Scores were wounded in Mashad when two army Jeeps and soldiers riding a tank opened fire on the demonstrators and several soldiers fraternizing with them, witnesses said.

Soldiers riding four tanks and four armored personnel carriers were mobbed by people when they approached the marchers, reports said.

The demonstrators, who called soldiers their brothers and blew kisses at them, clambered on top of the vehicles. At that point, the soldiers put down their weapons, which were handed over to clergymen allegedly for "safe custody," witnesses said.

The fraternizing soldiers and demonstrators were challenged by a task force of a tank and two Jeeps which came upon them firing automatic weapons.

"Many were wounded, there were people bleeding, limping and crouching all over the place," said one clerygman who was present when the shooting broke out. Opposition sources in Tehran said 32 were killed at Mashad.

Witnesses said that in west Tehran a mob attacked the home of a SAVAK (secret police) officer, who with his wife opened fire on the attackers. They said the officer was killed when run over by a car and the mob sacked his house, carrying off a weapons cache.

Production in the strikebound southern oilfields plummeted to 250,000 barrels Saturday, barely one fourth of what Iran needs just to supply its domestic needs during this winter period of peak consumption. Normal daily production is nearly 6 million barrels.

(Khomeini, in a message from Paris Saturday to the Iranian people, said he had authorized striking Iranian oil workers to resume production to cover Iran's own needs. He also said that if he achieved the downfall of the shah he would put an end to the operations of multinational Western firms operating in Iran.)

Sadat Insists On Linkage

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — President Anwar Sadat said Saturday Egypt's demand that any peace treaty with Israel be linked to a Palestinian settlement is "a matter of principle" without which there can be no agreement.

He said it was the only major hurdle blocking the conclusion of a treaty and appeared confident it could be overcome.

"All the differences (with Israel) are nonsense except for linkage which is a matter of principle and we will not sign a treaty without it," Sadat told 200 visiting Egyptian scholars studying abroad.

Coldest In 100 Years

By DOUGLAS STANGLIN

MOSCOW (UPI) — Moscow recorded its coldest year-end weather in 100 years Saturday and the weather bureau predicted an all-time record low for winter was just around the corner.

The Moscow regional weather bureau said temperatures fell to minus 33 fahrenheit during the early hours Saturday — two degrees colder than the mark set in 1915. It was the coldest Dec. 30 since the bureau began keeping records 100 years ago.

The weather bureau forecast overnight temperatures Sunday as low as minus 49. The all-time record low for a Moscow winter is minus 44.

Although many Muscovites were staying home to prepare for weekend New Years celebrations the cold weather played havoc with those dependent on an automobile.

Stranded foreigners with little else to do kept an unofficial chart of their beleaguered friends, and swore that as temperatures dropped the American cars sputtered out first, followed by German brands, Swedish makes and then the Russian-made Zhiguli.

Penny Gold Mine

GRAHAM, N.C. (UPI) — It's only a penny, but it could be a gold mine for disabled war veteran Richard McMillen.

The penny carries a 1943 date and, if it's authentic, could be worth thousands more than its face value.

Right now the coin is in a bank safety deposit box, but McMillen plans to offer it for sale at an auction in January.

In 1943, the U.S. Mint did not officially produce any copper pennies because of shortages of the metal caused by World War II needs. Pennies were made of steel, but many coin collectors and dealers believe a few copper ones were made.

McMillen's son, Bobby, said his father got the penny in October, when he bought some candy at a Graham convenience store and received the penny in his change. Ironically, the clerk at the store was another of McMillen's sons, Charles.

Bobby McMillen said the coin was examined by three coin dealers in Alamance County and his father got "oral authentication" from the U.S. Mint, which also examined it.

"They won't put it in writing," he said, but the penny is genuine.

While McMillen said a similar penny was sold for $113,000, a Greensboro coin dealer said the highest price he knows of is $40,000 for one of the rare coins.

The dealer, James Jackson, also said the U.S. Mint doesn't admit ever making any copper pennies that year and there are eight different ways that other pennies have been converted to 1942 coins.

Any copper penny from that year must be authenticated for weight, gravity and even x-rayed, he said.

News Briefs

To Begin Second Century

CHICAGO (UPI) — Adomas Varnas will usher in his second century of life New Years Day.

The grizzled Lithuanian immigrant was born Jan. 1, 1879 in the railroad town of Joniskis, population 2,000, in what is now the Soviet Union.

Varnas has lived through two world wars, the short-lived independence of his native Lithuania, several occupations of his homeland, nearly a year in jail for nationalist activities and several years in a displaced persons camp before he settled in Chicago.

"Life just swirls around you," said Varnas, pulling at his white goatee. "It's so enormous."

Vietnam Accuses Cambodia

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam has accused neighboring Cambodia of shelling its territory and sending raiders into three provinces of southern Vietnam.

The Vietnam news agency report today also denied a Cambodian claim made Friday that Vietnam suffered 1,000 casualties in land and air raids inside Cambodia.

"Phnom Penh's slander is aimed at smokescreening its military activities along Vietnam's southwestern border," the agency said.

Vietnam and Cambodia have engaged in sporadic border fighting over conflicting territorial claims since shortly after the 1975 Communist victories in the two countries.

Food Supply Short In Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — The annual preNew Year's food-buying rush hit Moscow stores unusually hard this year leaving staples such as meat, butter and potatoes in short supply.

Talks with a number of Muscovites and visits to stores around town show that meat has all but vanished, butter is being rationed, and potatoes — the inexpensive staple of the Russian diet — have disappeared from many government stores.

Russians say some items have in recent years been withdrawn from stores before big holidays because of the influx of shoppers from outlying villages where food is even more scarce.

Hess Taken To Hospital

BERLIN (UPI) — Rudolf Hess, 84-year-old former deputy of Adolf Hitler, has been transferred from the four-power Spandau prison where he is serving a life term for war crimes to a British military hospital for treatment of a circulatory ailment, a British spokesman disclosed Saturday.

He said Hess, the last surviving major Nazi war criminal and now the only occupant of the prison built for 660 inmates, was taken to the nearby hospital in the British sector of Berlin Friday after he complained of trouble with his vision.

Snail Darter Transplant Successful

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Tennessee Valley Authority says 26 third-generation offspring of the snail darter, the three-inch fish blocking completion of a $119 million dam, are now swimming in the Holston River.

Three years ago, TVA biologist transplanted 710 from the Little Tennessee River, home of the Tellico Dam, to the Hiwassee. Since the, the darter has had three successful spawning seasons and its Hiwassee River population is now estimated at 2,400.

TVA says the 26 plopped Friday in the Holston came from those in the Hiwassee.

The transplant comes nine days before a public hearing in Knoxville for supporters of the snail darter, an endangered species, and the Tellico Dam, an almost extinct project.

Babysitter Problem

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — The star of Virginia's court-ordered campaign to recruit women state troopers has been fired for "insubordination" after refusing a short notice, out-of-town assignment she claims gave her no chance to find a babysitter.

The state's first woman trooper, Cheryl Petska, was notified at 4 p.m. Friday that she would be dismissed at midnight for "insubordination" — her refusal to accept a two-week tour of duty in the strike-troubled Virginia coalfields.

Mrs. Petska, 31, claims she was given only 48-hours notice of the assignment and couldn't accept it because she was unable to find a babysitter for her two daughters, Tracy 10, and Shannon, 5.

Foul Play

ROCKY MOUNT, Va. (AP) — Two men whose charred bodies were found Wednesday in a burned-out car in Franklin County were murdered and then set afire, an autopsy has shown.

One of the two was identified Friday as Robert Alexander Newbill, 20, the nephew of Franklin County School Board member Jack Newbill.

The identity of the other victim was expected to be confirmed today from dental records.

Investigators are almost certain, however, that the second man was a 23-year-old native of Bristol, Tenn., but they have asked his name be witheld pending positive identification.

Sheriff W. Q. Overton said the autopsy revealed the cause of death "was definitely foul play," but the authorities would not disclose exactly how the young men were killed.

Investigators had suspected murder from the moment the bodies were found.

Musket Fire To Greet New Year

CHERRYVILLE, N.C. (UPI) — In a tradition dating back to the early 1800s, Cherryville residents will welcome in the New Year with musket fire.

The musketeers, many using antique guns loaded with black powder and stuffed with tissue paper, go from house to house, extending New Year's greetings.

"Oh, daughters of righteousness, we will rise,

And warm our eyes and bless our hearts,

It takes about 18 hours for the 100 men to make their rounds, stopping along the way for traditional meals. Some point their muskets north, a tradition that has lingered since the Civil War.

"It's just a great time," said Howell Stroup, one of the leaders of the shooters. "I don't think you'd see as many old and young people joined together for so much fun anywhere else with no generation gap. It's a chance for us men to be boys again and a chance for the boys to be men."

Lawrence Beam, 65, said he's worn out five muskets since he started shooting when he was 5 "and I'll continue as long as I can pull a trigger."

Court Upholds Barring Judge-Elect Peoples

By GARY SEASE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Supreme Court has upheld a recommendation that Superior Court Judge-elect Linwood T. Peoples be barred from office and stripped of his eligbility for judicial retirement benefits.

Peoples, a former District Court judge, easily won the May 2 Democratic primary for the 9th Judicial District seat being vacated by the retiring Judge Hamilton H. Hobgood. He was elected without Republican opposition in November.

"I'm mad as hell," Peoples said from his Henderson law office in describing his reaction to the high court's decision. He said he intends to appeal to the federal courts.

There was no immediate action by the North Carolina Bar Association, nor a decision on who would take his Superior Court judgeship.

After considering the evidence against Peoples, for which he was acquitted in criminal proceedings, the justices said "it appears beyond a reasonable doubt that Judge Peoples has repeatedly been guilty of misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice."

Peoples was accused of keeping money given to him outside of court to dispose of traffic cases, handling other cases out of court and ordering court employees to place 49 cases in a special personal file during his tenure as a District Court judge.

Several Accidents Occurred Friday

Several accidents occurred on the streets of Greenville Friday.

Donna R. Briley of Clarendon, Ark., was charged with a safe movement violation at 11 a.m. after her car collided with a vehicle operated by Johnnie David French of 2506 Madison Cir.

According to the police report, the French car was traveling north on N. Greene St. when the Briley vehicle, moving south, attempted to turn onto Mumford Road and struck the other car.

Damages were estimated at $500 to the French car and $700 to the Briley vehicle.

At 1:51 p.m., no charges were filed when a car operated by Willie Mills of Grimesland hit the open door of a car parked on W. Fifth St. The parked car is owned by Raymond Brewington of 1828 Battle St.

Damages were estimated at $500 to the Mills car and $800 to the Brewington vehicle.

Price Boost

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. is boosting the suggested retail price of most 1979 cars an average of $85, or 1.2 percent.

The increase takes effect Tuesday and does not affect cars already ordered or on dealer parking lots. Prices on the Omni and Horizon were not increased.

Two motorists who spotted a burning car in the median of Memorial Drive near the Pitt Greenville Airport were involved in an accident.

Lillian Boyd Wooten of Greenville Rt. 6 told investigating officers that she noticed the burning car and pulled into the emergency lane to render assistance. At that time, a car being driven by Mabel Inez Nimmo of 8440 Atherton Drive reportedly veered to avoid the burning car and collided with the Wooten vehicle.

A unit of the Greenville Fire Dept. was also at the scene to extinquish the fire which began under the hood of a car driven by Ms. Harding Bates Slade of Williamston.

Damages were estimated at $1,000 to the Nimmo car, $400 to the Wooten vehicle and $2,000 to the Slade car.

At 7:05 p.m. cars operated by Patricia Ann Cannon of Greenville and Larry Lee Spalding of 31-A Stratford Arm Apts. collided at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Greenville Blvd. No charges were preferred.

WISHES ALL OF OUR CUSTOMERS A VERY HAPPY AND PROSPEROUS NEW YEAR!

A Better-Than Average Year

The year 1978 draws to a close, and it has been a good year for our area.

It was the year when Leo Jenkins retired as chancellor of East Carolina University—something that all of us knew would come some day, but an event for which we were still not ready.

A new chancellor, Dr. Thomas Brewer, was officially installed, however, and a new era dawned for ECU.

It was also the year when the people of Pitt County had at least the promise of something that every forward looking individual recognizes as essential to our future development — an east-west Wilson-Farmville-Greenville freeway.

People of our area worried about the national and international developments. Oil product prices continued to escalate and, with that, inflation was a constant problem to all of us.

The year 1979 had its problems for our area and our nation, but then so does every year. On the whole the area prospered and showed progress. We met our problems and perhaps matured a little in the process. It was a better-than-average year for most of us, and our progress was due largely to the people of the area striving and working for better things.

"Nor will I ever be a figurehead! I remain the master of my ship . . . holding it together!"

Must Keep Trying Establish Peace

As the year ends the prospects for total peace in the Middle East are not bright.

Egypt and Israel seemed to have reached an impasse in their peace talks, although there is still hope for a peace settlement.

Iran is wracked by violence which threatens to bring down the shaw and the situation in Lebanon is far from settled.

A peaceful stability may never be achieved in that area of the world . . . but we must keep trying. The things that happen there will ultimately affect all of us.

Views Change With Time

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — It's simply amazing, said Gov. Jim Hunt to former Gov. Jim Holshouser the other day: after two years of sitting in the governor's chair, he grows daily more aware of how smart, how courageous, how dedicated his predecessor was.

With such praise setting the tone, Holshouser and a large number of leaders from his administration gathered recently to receive first copies of "Addresses and Public Papers..."

The historic volume collecting the major letters, reports and speeches is compiled for each governor.

Hunt took the occasion to remind listeners of several of the major accomplishments of the Holshouser administration — first of which was being the first Republican governor in more than 70 years in North Carolina.

Make It Work

"Clearly, as shown in these papers, Gov. Holshouser spent his time making government work better, and in getting government to do more for people in their communities. These are two of the greatest responsibilities we have as public leaders, and the real test of our effectiveness is whether we have left things better in some way," Hunt commented.

Among the Holshouser accomplishments were:

—Reorganization of state government from more than departments, agencies, and boards to 19 overall departments;

—Staging the Bicentennial celebration;

—Saving the New River, an action which brought nationwide praise and caused Holshouser to say, "This is one of the three or four most satisfying and memorable" things he did;

—Expansion of kindergartens in public schools statewide;

—Expansion of rural health centers and use of physician assistants;

— Budget trimming action

BILL NOBLITT

when the recession pressed budget plans;

—Pushing the Coastal Area Management Act to legislative endorsement.

Hard Work

Gov. Hunt also mentioned how much ard work the governor faces. He carries home an armload of reports and books, and a briefcase filled with papers almost nightly.

The youngest Hunt daughter wondered why, and was told that it was simply because there was more to do in a day than could be handled at the office, so he had to bring homework to the Manson.

"Well, Daddy", she wondered, "Couldn't you just ask them to put you in a slower group?"

Coastal Storms

"Storms, People and Property in Coastal North Carolina" is the title of a new publication just issued by the University of North Carolina Sea Grant program (Box 5001, Raleigh, N.C. 27650)

Historical and meteorological information on the state's major coastal storms of the past along with information on survival, safety, and how to storm-proof your houses are included. There is no charge for the booklet.

Sunday Morning Notes

The year is 1948.

Pitt County's is still largely a tobacco economy and farmers still struggle each year to meet expenses.

In Greenville, there is much slum housing, with the worst of it in an area north of Second Street and extending right down to the river bank.

There is an East Carolina Teachers College with a couple of thousand students. It is organized totally by departments with no schools and little graduate level work.

There is no Memorial Drive or Eastern bypass bridge across the Tar, no Reade Circle or Charles Boulevard. There is no Greenville Boulevard, nor any shopping centers along it.

The hospital is on Johnston Street, although the move will soon be made to a new facility west of the city.

It is a segregated society with dual school systems for whites and blacks. County students are educated in 13 high schools, some of which include only a hundred or so students.

It is New Year's Eve and a young boy sits on the river bank and pondors all he is ashamed of about his community. He kicks a stump and a gnome leaps out.

Well one thing leads to another and the gnome offers the boy a series of wishes, but only if they benefit others.

The boy thinks.

"I wish that all these old houses would disappear and be replaced by a landscaped park and modern buildings."

"So be it," answers the gnome.

"I wish for an up-to-date street system in Greenville, good industries and jobs so that my friends and neighbors may prosper."

"It is yours," answers the gnome.

"And I wish that ECTC might become a great university, with a wide variety of career opportunities for its students . . . and you might even throw in a nationally competitive sports program."

"You may have it," says the gnome.

"I wish for segregation to disappear and for every citizen to progress as far as he is capable . . . and a modern school system."

"The wheels are turning," said the gnome.

"I wish for wonderous new products, like radios with pictures, autos with air conditioning and something that does the dishes in the homes."

"Granted," says the gnome.

"I wish for the farmers for tobacco that sells at $1.50 per pound.

"Easily done," answer the gnome.

The final wish the boy decided to whisper in the gnome's ear. The request brought a startled look, but the gnome said nothing and

Other Editors Say A Broken Record

(Washington Daily News)

People hardly enjoy listening to a broken record or to a tune played over and over on a one-stringed instrument.

Today in North Carolina we seem to have a feeling that when it comes to this continuing issue of whiskey by the drink we are emulating both the broken record and the one-stringed instrument.

What we are saying is this: Somehow people of North Carolina have been looking at, talking about, and actually thinking in terms of church people being against the issue of whiskey by the drink, while business people, looking at the economic side, are in favor of whiskey by the drink.

In a sense the statement above is partly true. But a part truth can be extremely dangerous, and in this case it is extremely unfair. First of all, all to often when we look at so-called "church people" on the one hand and "business people" on the other hand we are looking at the very same group.

Church people can be and are often business people, and business people can be and often are good church people. So in our thinking, if we try to debate an issue in terms of placing our citizenry into church and business groups, have we not in a real sense done a grave injustice to some good people on occasion?

It so happens in many instances that some churchmen are in favor of whiskey by the drink, while some businessmen are against whiskey by the drink. But to attach such a label to one who loves his church or to one who demonstrates fine business acumen is both misleading and unfair.

We hear the legislature criticized on the one hand for its position in calling the referendum on the issue, while on the other hand we hear it praised. But somehow it does not cross our minds to label the human beings as "churchmen" or "anti-churchmen" or "businessmen" or "anti-businessmen." And yet, it would appear that when we try to discuss this whiskey by the drink issue in certain terms, we are tending to look upon businessmen as anti-churchmen and upon churchmen as anti-businessmen.

If we take thm all and put them together in one group of human beings, we shall find very quickly that practically all of them are church goers, that all of them have strong religious beliefs, and that they also have fine business instincts.

It is time to change that broken record or time to add some more strings to that one-stringed instrument.

She'll Defuse Bombs

By AL LANIER
Associated Press Writer

BEAUFORT, S.C. (AP) — At 24, Marcia Shaffer already has helped sink two sizable ships. Now she's ready to tackle nuclear warheads, conventional bombs and any other high explosives that come her way.

The 5-foot-3 brunette, a Marine Corps second lieutenant, is not asking for trouble. But when dud grenades, recalcitrant rockets and other ornery ordnance fail to go off, she's qualified to step into the breach and defuse them.

A mistake could mean death. Lt. Shaffer is aware of that possibility, but doesn't dwell on it.

"It's not really dangerous, especially in peace time," she said. "You work with experienced people who have done this sort of thing many times."

Lt. Shaffer is in charge of seven men in the Explosive Ordnance Demolition (EOD) team at the Beaufort Marine Air Station. Their routine job is disposing of dud practice bombs and defusing defective hand grenades on the range at the nearby Parris Island Marine Recruit Depot.

Duds, she says, seem to run in lots.

"Sometimes it seems like every day there's a dud. Then you might go for weeks without one."

Less routine was the sinking of two World War II Liberty ships for underwater fishing reefs. She helped send one to the bottom off Nags Head, N.C., in late November. Also working on that sinking was the only other woman Marine in EOD, 2nd Lt. Beth Salcemanca, stationed at Camp Lejeune, N.C.

On Dec. 19, Lt. Shaffer was in charge of the EOD team that sank another 10,000-tonner off Hilton Head Island for the South Carolina Department of Wildlife and Marine Resources. Twenty-four simultaneous charges, involving more than 250 pounds of plastic explosives, blew holes in the hull that sent the old vessel gently to the bottom in seven minutes.

THE INSIDE REPORT

An Old Political Slander

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — During the recent election campaign, two senior members of President Carter's political family purveyed malicious and untrue gossip to newsmen about a leading Republican — a despicable practice becoming commonplace in backstairs politics.

The slander was transmitted by one of Carter's hard-boiled aides (whose name cannot be revealed) and, more surprisingly, by gentlemanly John White, the Democratic national chairman. Both dredged up an old calumny that Rep. Jack Kemp of New York had engaged in homosexual activity.

Submerged in the political sewers since 1967, this bit of ugly gossip never had credibility. For many months, we have delayed disclosure of the whispering role played by Carter's operatives until we could report that there was no truth in what they whispered. Now, after tracking down sources of impeccable veracity, we can report exactly that.

Since political slanders are often impossible to disprove, they are passed on verbally for years, though seldom printed. With the rise of the "gay" political movement and its antihomosexual reaction, unsubstantiated charges of homosexuality have multiplied. They played a subterranean part in a half dozen statewide races during the past campaign.

It was in this climate that national chairman White, normally a politician of civility and decency, was discussing the then-rampant Kemp-Roth tax-reduction bill with a reporter. White told the surprised newsman the bill was burdened with political problems, one of them being Kemp's record of homosexuality.

At about the same time, the White House aide was informally discussing Republican presidential prospects with another reporter when Kemp's name came up. The Carter man said there was no need to worry about him; Kemp is a "queer." This reporter also was astounded.

When we checked the story with White, he seemed genuinely apologetic; he said he had had the rumor from another newsman and was merely passing on what he had heard. The White House aide, informed later by the reporter that there was apparently no substance to the story, asked the reporter to forget about it and to be certain not to disclose his identity.

Although it was news to both reporters, this garbage dates all the way back to Ronald Reagan's first year as governor of California. When two of Reagan's aides suddenly resigned; published reports charged that they were involved in a homosexual ring with other politicians. Syndicated columnist Drew Pearson wrote that an "athlete" was among them. Rumors spread that he was Jack Kemp, then a star quarterback for the Buffalo Bills serving as off-season aide to Reagan.

Kemp considered bringing suit against Pearson but was advised not to, because his name had not been mentioned. Since then, the story has repeatedly surfaced, causing reporters to

FOOTPRINTS OF GOD

The word "miracle" in Chinese is expressed by two characters which mean "the footprints of God".

There are many people in the world who do not believe in miracles. But one reason for their disbelief is that miracles are now so common. The world has become miracle-hardened.

In this connection we might ponder the fact that every human being is physically the result of the coming together of two cells too minute to be seen by the naked eye, and that each of these cells contain all of the hereditary characteristics of all the ancestors who have gone before. You might respond to this point by saying that this is just the working out of natural law. But what is natural law? Natural law is only the pattern of God's activities in the physical world.

When something happens which is beyond our power to explain, we may see, if we look closely enough, the footprints of God.

Economists Risk Reputations

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Are you happier to see 1978 end than you are to see 1979 begin?

Many economists are, but everyone knows that while members of that dismal art are seldom content with the present, they are often grim about the future.

For them, 1978 was a better year than anticipated. Inflation worsened but unemployment fell; consumer debt rose but it kept sales high; the federal deficit remained but with promise of shrinking.

But next year — that's another story. The year 1979, the economic forecasters say, will be the year of recession. Unemployment will rise; prices will too; and output will slow. Or so they predict.

And that puts at risk the reputations of economists, or a good many of them. They have erected their platform, they have shouted their views, they have demanded recognition. Now they must accept the consequences.

As matters now stand, there are few strong signals of an upcoming recession. Consumers seem undeterred by high prices, borrowers by soaring interest rates, and producers by forecasts of a downturn.

The fourth-quarter downturn, widely forecast, simply did not occur, and you needn't wait for the official figures to say so. And prospects of a sharp downturn coming in the first quarter of 1979 are remote.

Citibank's economic letter put it most succinctly, asking "Recession: where's the smoking gun?" There is none. And neither is there an economic corpse lying about. The economic body is alive if not well.

Why are so many forecasters proclaiming the onset of recession? For many reasons, the most common of them being that rising prices and interest rates inevitably cut into buying. But so far, they haven't.

The question now becomes, "When will high interest and high prices first discourage and then make impossible a continuation of purchases?" And that, it seems, has become a mere guessing contest.

Some forecasters, those who guessed the downturn would come in the first quarter of 1979, now seem to be far out on thin ice, on their knees, praying for a sudden economic cold wave.

Should the economic weather remain mild for still another couple of months, the would-be prophets might survive, but certainly with their reputations blemished by the scars of frostbite.

But maybe they won't get off so lightly. That is, Americans might not forget, a factor that almost every forecaster depends upon. The forget factor could play a large role in 1979.

Should Americans not forget — and should there be merely a slowdown rather than a recession — then a few forecasters might be hung in effigy from the platforms from which they now shout "recession's coming."

The Loyalty To Tobacco

By HAROLD SUGG
(The Roanoke (Va.) Times)

The tobacco farmers of Virginia and southward are being made to feel like pariahs, or worse, by the anti-tobacco campaign. They can remember it differently, as does J.C. Perry, of Georgia:

"I couldn't have made a living without my tobacco. Oh, I might have existed; but I wouldn't have fixed my house up, or sent six of my 10 children to college. I want to credit tobacco with that, and I'm telling the truth when I say it.

"Believe it or not, when I was growing up, if a child was wormy, our doctor put him on chewing tobacco! I don't know whether it helped or not, but that skinny, wobbly-kneed kid would go to fattening up. And now he's most likely a healthy, grown man, and still chewing."

Farmer Perry's comment is part of a rich photo documentary of the tobacco growing culture by Pamela Barefoot, Mules and Memories (John F. Blair, publisher, Winston-Salem, N.C., $17.95.) Ms. Barefoot left a good job in Richmond to chronicle and photograph (in color) a centuries-old culture which will move to Brazil and Rhodesia if the anti-tobacco fanatics and marijuana addicts have their way.

The mule was once indispensable to the tobacco grower, as he (she? it?) was to almost all Southern farmers. Burt Kornegay, who wrote the chapter on mules to go with the Barefoot photographs, says:

"It was not uncommon for a mule to live twenty-five years. That mule would become like a member of the farmer's family. The farmer had to feed his mule in the morning before he ate breakfast, and feed it again at night before he took off his boots and stretched his aching toes to the fire. When the mule got sick there was doctoring to do. When either the mule or the farmer woke up in a bad mood, a fight was sure to follow before bedtime came around. And, whether he liked it or not, that mule's hind end was the farmer's primary scenery for a considerable portion of each day.

"When the tractor came along in the late 1940s, it seemed like the world had suddenly changed — many farmers felt for the worse."

It does not seem important to the tobacco-haters that tobacco financed the colonial economy and remains a basic part of the Virginia and North Carolina economy today. Perhaps the argument is not relevant. The moonshine still was once a part of the economy of many Southern counties or areas, and if one should be wiped out, so, perhaps, should the other.

Still, the contumely heaped upon tobacco does seem a bit rough on a class of people, most of them churchgoers, who have endured the nematode, the cutworm, erratic weather and the ups-and-downs of prices in order to rear and educate children and put a little away. Are the tobacco farmers of Franklin, Henry, Pittsylvania and other counties really such devils?

The anti-tobacco campaign has certainly had some virtues: For one thing it has forced the tobacco-smoker to use some manners where formerly he showed none. Before the big campaign, the crumbum was the person who would smoke a cigar at the dining table; now, the cigarette smoker without consideration for others puts himself in the same classification.

But, whether he should be utterly impoverished, or forced to hand over his livelihood to foreign farmers, is at least debatable. Does it really take scientific effort to prove what everybody always knew: that cigarettes are not good for you? One virtue overlooked is that the cigarette-smoker guarantees to himself and to society that he will not exceed the biblical quota of three score and 10 years. He thus reduces the cost of Social Security and Medicare.

He might forego the rugged honesty in the title, "old man", and become the euphemistic "senior citizen", but he will not become a gray panther. He will not form a lobby to increase the benefits to the elderly but decrease the tax liabilities of the same. Something can be said for him.

The big panjandrum of the anti-tobacco crusade is Joseph Califano, secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, and he would benefit by looking at the Barefoot-Kornegay book. The tobacco farmer, and user, need present no apologies until Mr. Califano et al. come up with a replacement for the six billion dollars now provided in taxes, via tobacco, to federal, state and local governments.

But if no apology is due, a personal explanation is. I was reared in Greenville, N.C., and my daddy was in the tobacco business. Tobacco money fed, clothed and educated me. I believe in respecting your ancestors and in loyalty to your childhood friends back home. I do not smoke because I like it but because it is my patriotic duty!

question Kemp. After his denials and the lack of any factual substantiation, the inquiring reporters ended up writing nothing. While lacking substantiation, newsmen also lacked evidence of disproof. Therefore, the story took on a life of its own in gutter communications, finally leading to involvement by Jimmy Carter's political agents.

This was intolerable to writer Jude Wanniski, a close Kemp adviser who wants him to run for president. Against Kemp's wishes, Wanniski decided to expose the canard to full public view and end the rumors once and for all. His opportunity came when New York Times reporter Martin Tolchin began preparing an article about Kemp for Esquire. When they met for lunch, Wanniski raised the matter himself.

Inserted in the middle of Tolchin's article in the Oct. 24 Esquire is this quotation from Kemp: "There is absolutely not a shred of evidence. There is nothing, and there was nothing," Tolchin concludes: "Everyone who has looked into the case has come to the same conclusion." Wanniski feels this has indeed ended the matter, but in fact an element of ambiguity remains. The rumor has continued its poisonous, underground life.

After considerable checking, we can now report that the rumor comes as close to being disprovable as any personal slander ever is. For example, contrary to one recurrent part of the rumor, there never was any police file on Kemp; he was not investigated.

One principal in the 1967 case whom we tracked down with some difficulty to his new job and life said he never had known or been told of any illicit association between Kemp and those who resigned under a cloud. Indeed, the sole source of the rumor that has haunted Kemp's career for 11 years is the fact that he travelled, on an official basis, several times with one of the Reagan aides who later resigned. That, and nothing more, is the "case" against Kemp.

As I Recall It...

Reminder Of Progress In Few, Short Years

By NOEL YANCEY

(Noel Yancey retired recently after 39 years of covering state government for the Associated Press. In this column, he retells some of the big stories he recalls after covering 12 governors and 13 sessions of the General Assembly.)

The story of Mack Ingram serves as a reminder of the tremendous progress that has been made in race relations in a relatively few years. It was only 25 years ago that Ingram, a poor, black tobacco farmer and father of nine was tried and convicted in North Carolina of assaulting a 17-year-old white girl because he leered at her while driving past her in an automobile.

Before the conviction of the 44-year-old black man was reversed by the state Supreme Court, it had attracted international attention and was used by communist propagandists. A London newspaper sent a reporter to cover one of Ingram's trials in Caswell County.

The "leering case" began on the morning of June 4, 1951 when Willie Jean Boswell was walking down a country road in Caswell County. She was heading for a nearby field to join her father, two brothers and grandfather in cultivating tobacco.

She testified that while she was walking, Ingram drove by at about five miles per hour. "He came on up the road real slow and kept watching me, and when he got about straight across from where I was he had his head out of the window leering at me a curious look."

She said that as she passed through some woods she heard his car stop. She said she was frightened and began to run. She came out of the woods and said she saw Ingram walking rather fast across a field 65 or 70 feet from her. She said he stopped at some plum bushes watching her. She went on to the field where her father, brothers and grandfather were working. She was crying.

She testified that "it looked like he was trying to cut me off" when she saw him walking fast across the field. Ingram testified he had stopped to ask her father if he could borrow his trailer.

Ingram was first tried in Caswell Recorder's Court, convicted and sentenced to two years in prison. He appealed to Caswell Superior Court. The first time he was tried there were four blacks on the jury, and two of them held out for an acquittal. So a mistrial was ordered. When the case was retried a year later the jury was all white This time he was convicted and Judge Frank M. Armstrong sentenced Ingram to six months in prison but suspended the prison term on condition that Ingram remain of good behavior for five years. He appealed to the state Supreme Court.

In reversing the conviction, the high court said Armstrong should have dismissed the case without submitting it to the jury.

Chief Justice W.A. Devin, who wrote the opinion for the court, said the evidence was insufficient to support a charge of assault.

"It cannot be said that a pedestrian may be assaulted by a look however frightening from a person riding in an automobile some distance away," Devin wrote.

"It may have been that the defendant had a sinister purpose for stopping his automobile and walking or running the 95 steps across the field. Certainly, his stated purpose for doing so was rather lame. He may have looked with lustful eyes when he watched her walking along the road, but there was an absence of any overt act constituting an offer or attempt to do injury to the person of the witness.

"We cannot convict him of a criminal offense solely for what may have been in his mind. Human law does not reach that far."

Facing South

Learned From The Porch-People

COLUMBUS, Ga. — Now and then, in early evening of a summer night or when the bus stops at the corner or sunlight falls on a faded carpet, I go home to Georgia, carried by memories of my childhood on Fourth Avenue.

There in a dusty brown frame house, tall as the pecan tree at the back, and too big for the small lot, we were together for a while, my grandmother and her older unmarried sister, my mother and father, my sister and I, and a host of aunts and uncles and cousins.

On summer nights after we all finished at the table, brushed off the crumbs, covered the bread with a clean white cloth, and turned off the lights, we moved together to the porch. And there we saw the world as it came to us from all sides, from the traffic of strangers on the avenue, to the neighbors taking their walks, to the young black boys spilling out of the alley with a new "homemade" cart or game.

The porch people were mostly women, strong, stern, domineering women, who made children stand up straight and take their elbows off the table. In the shadows was the legacy of my great-grandfather, who built the house and left it to his daughters. A Pennsylvania Quaker, he had followed the carriage trade south, to stay, to marry, to grow old and die. His books and his blueprints and his crazy inventions (a way to unroll toilet paper so as not to waste a square) were about the house, and I studied a picture of him, seated, his hand on a slender cane, and all the women in the picture turned towards him. I often listened for his voice, and I heard it in the voice of his oldest daughter, my great-aunt Edna. Though she was nearly blind and wore a dark eyeshade, she saw everything, our faults, our needs. "Not git, but get, get, get," she admonished us. "You must learn to speak." And we learned.

On summer mornings I was sent out to sweep the walk, and I would bring the broom across and across my family's name printed in the cement: JESSOP. It had a magic, my name given me from my great-grandfather, the old man with the slender cane towards whom the women turned. And in the light hum of traffic on the avenue going to Atlanta, for the hour was early, I began to listen for another sound, for the voice of the vegetable seller as she came from a long way off. When I heard her high, clear calling, I put down my broom on the porch and stood out on the walk, watching. She made her way slowly down the street, stopping at houses, until she came to ours. She looked at me without speaking and set her straw basket on the stoop. Then I scampered to look inside, seeing the hard, shining butterbeans, the black-eyed peas, the tin cup. We did not speak, but we were comfortable together. After awhile, I went inside and called my Aunt Edna, and it took her a long time to make her way to the porch. I don't know what they said to one another, but the peas were scooped up into my Aunt Edna's pan; the exchange of money was made. And the women carefully folded her white handkerchief again, put it on her head, and lifted, without effort, it seemed, the basket to her head. Then she swayed down the sidewalk until her vioce was gone: "Peas, beans."

I have grown up. I live hundreds of miles and 30 years away. Nothing is the same, except on a summer night I think I hear our voices, or sometimes the cry of the vegetable seller. This year I went back to Fourth Avenue. The house is gone and junk cars rust in a weedy lot. I find the pecan tree, looking smaller, a diminished thing. And as I leave, something stops me. There in the sidewalk my great-grandfathers's name: JESSOP.

Some Resolutions Are Not Meant To Be Kept

By GAIL MICHAELS

This year I compiled my list of New Year's Resolutions two weeks early so that I could get in a few days' practice. My resolutions covered every facet of my life. For instance, I resolved to improve my housecleaning. I plan to mop my kitchen floor at least once every two months.

And I resolved to improve my mind. I promised myself that I would read less of the soft stuff and more honest-to-goodness literature like "Anna Karenina" and "Love Story".

Tops on my list was improving my child-rearing practices. I resolved to stop yelling at Meg. Now, I knew that this wouldn't be easy, so I decided that I would stop yelling for an hour more each day. That way I could build up to an entire day by New Year's.

I have never endured such hardship. By the third day my mouth had frozen into a permanent smile. Actually, it looked more like an upended grimace, and it hurt. By the fifth day, I had sprained my toe while kicking the pine tree beside our front door. By the eighth day I had clawed most of the skin off my palms, and the bloodvessels in my temples had swelled out to meet my ears.

"There must be some method of dealing with kids calmly without suffering brain damage," I told my friend Emma, "but I haven't found it yet."

Not that I thought she'd understand. This woman works full time, has two bright, well-behaved preschoolers, and keeps her house like a feature in "Southern Living". When she says, "Excuse the mess," she means that she hasn't washed out the coffee cup from which she was drinking ten minutes earlier.

She is well-dressed, pretty and she remains calm in all emergency situations from 105 degree temperatures to the unexpected dinner guests which her husband is always bringing home.

Of course, she's not perfect. One Saturday morning I walked in on her at 9:30, and she was still wearing her robe. And a diamond necklace. And her beds were made. The only time my beds were ever made on Saturday was last winter when the heat was off and I didn't want to sleep on frozen sheets.

In short, if she weren't so nice I'd despise her. As it is, I'm just envious as all get out. And I knew darned well that if anyone had discovered the key to child-rearing without pain, she had

But there she was, shaking her head as if she knew exactly what I was talking about.

"Yes," she said, "I always hated it when my mother screamed at me, and now I sound more like a fishwife every day."

I had to to shake my head a few times before I could manage to talk again. "You mean you actually yell at your kids?!"

"Sure. All the time"

Abrogating Treaty Historic Role Of Congress

BY JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — On May 18, 1978, six months before President Carter made his announcement on relations with China, Sen. Barry Goldwater published a monograph in which he anticipated precisely what the president would attempt to do. Goldwater's essay is must reading now.

The Arizona Republican foresaw that Mr. Carter would undertake to abrogate our 1954 treaty with Taiwan on his own presidential say-so. The Goldwater monograph, published under auspices of the Heritage Foundation, convincingly demolishes Mr. Carter's bold bid to arrogate a treaty-breaking power to himself alone.

Yes, it appears, presidents occasionally have announced the abrogation of treaties — but only under circumstances that do not apply in the matter of Taiwan. In the past 50 years' nine such terminations have been undertaken by the White House. Two of the announcements were withdrawn. The remaining seven involved instances in which a treaty had been patently breached, or changed circumstances made implementation no longer possible, or new law had intervened.

Goldwater cites chapter and verse. By way of example, Roosevelt in 1939 announced our withdrawal from the London Naval Treaty of 1936. The reason was self-evident: Europe was in a state of war and the treaty had canceled itself.

At about the same time, Roosevelt notified Japan of our intent to terminate the Commercial Treaty of 1911. Again, the circumstances were compelling. We were bound under a later Nine Power Agreement to respect the territorial integrity of China.

In 1962, President Kennedy proclaimed termination of a 1902 commercial convention with Cuba, but his action provides no precedent for Mr. Carter and Taiwan. Kennedy had clear authority for his action under three separate acts of Congress.

From the very beginning of the Republic, dating back to John Adams' day, abrogation of a formal treaty has required congressional sanction. The rule is consistent with the entire structure of constitutional government. A president cannot make a treaty by himself; he has to have the consent of the Senate. It follows inexorably from this requirement that a president cannot unmake a treaty by himself, either. He has to have the consent of the Senate — or, as the precedents demonstrate, the consent of the Congress as a whole.

It is supposed that a president, by his own dictatorial fiat, could repeal a statute? Could a president, for example, simply announce one morning that he had abolished the income tax, or sold off a national park, or rewritten the laws on the licensing of drugs? Plainly not. But treaties stand equally with the Constitution itself and the acts of Congress as the supreme law of the land.

Other presidents have understood this. In 1855, President Pierce wanted to suspend a commercial treaty with Denmark. He first asked and received the consent of the Senate' In 1874, President Grant proposed to suspend a treaty of commerce and navigation with Belgium. He got his permission from the Senate. Two years later, Grant was concerned about a treaty of extradition with Great Britain. "It is for the wisdom of Congress to determine whether the article...is to be any longer regarded as obligatory on the Government of the United States."

Goldwater cites other precedents involving Presidents Hayes, McKinley, Taft, Wilson and Harding. He concludes flatly that "no president acting alone can abrogate, or give notice of the intention to abrogate, our existing treaties with the government of Taiwan." If the 1954 treaty is to be abandoned, it can only be done with "the approval of two-thirds of the Senate or a majority of both houses of Congress."

In Goldwater's view, "any president who would seek to thwart this constitutional mandate runs the risk of impeachment." Now, the House is not at all likely to impeach Jimmy Carter on the matter of Taiwan, but neither can the president be permitted to get away with this usurpation of power. In some fashion, the president's hand must be called and the role of the Senate must be regained.

A New Chancellor, Progress In Industries, Personal Tragedies Among Top Events

1978 An Eventful Year In Greenville

Text By Tom Baines

Much to the delight of Pitt County residents who remember 1977 as the year of the deep-freeze winter, the weather did not dominate the news headlines of 1978.

In contrast to 1977, when everything seemed to be affected by either bone-chilling cold or 100 degree summer days and extreme dryness, the past 12 months had a more "normal" weather pattern for our area and left room in the newspaper for other stories.

And while there may have been a shortage of snow pictures for the front page, the Pitt County area produced its usual share of top news stories that again touched many lives.

NEW CHANCELLOR

East Carolina University underwent a change in leadership during 1978 as Dr. Thomas B. Brewer was named chancellor, succeeding Dr. Leo Jenkins who retired July 1 after an association with the school that began in 1947. Jenkins, who accepted a position as "special advisor to the governor on economic growth and balanced development" following his retirement, was honored on June 27 as Greenville and Pitt County observed "Leo W. Jenkins Day." His native state of New Jersey also honored him with a day proclaimed in his name.

Brewer, chosen after a year-long search conducted by a selection committee of the University of North Carolina Board of Governors, came to Greenville from Texas Christian University where he served as vice chancellor and dean of the university.

Formal installation of Brewer as ECU chancellor took place in October in ceremonies marked by pomp and both traditional and symbolic flourishes. Over 600 dignitaries in academic regalia formed the installation procession and Gov. Jim Hunt headed the platform party.

STADIUM EXPANSION

One of the major stories of the year involved the expansion work underway at ECU's Ficklen Stadium. Few construction projects in the county attracted as much attention and area residents kept a close eye on the expansion work and press facility project as the summer months progressed.

The enlarged 35,000 seat stadium was declared ready for the Pirate's opening football game with Western Carolina on Sept. 2. A record crowd of over 31,000 was on hand for the season opener as East Carolina edged Western Carolina 14-6. Fans also got their first look at a new scoreboard installed at the stadium and press representatives covered the early fall tilt in sparkling new quarters atop the south stands.

Despite disappointing losses early in the season to Atlantic Coast Conference foes North Carolina State and the University of North Carolina, the Pirates went on to record a fine 8-3 season and earn a bid to the Independence Bowl in Shreveport, La.

The Pirates did not waste their first post-season bowl opportunity in 15 years as they crushed Louisiana Tech, 35-13, on Dec. 16 in the third annual bowl game. East Carolina supporters in this area watched the impressive Pirate showing on television and then welcomed the team and coaching staff home with a victory parade.

The successful bowl trip capped a football season that saw five ECU team members earn berths on the Associated Press 1978 All-South Independent football team. Named were Zack Valentine, Gerald Hall, Wayne Inman, Eddie Hicks and Mike Brewington, while Pirate head coach Pat Dye received support in balloting for the Southern Independent Coach of the Year.

OTHER SPORTS

With sports playing key roles in the major news happenings of the year, East Carolina's basketball program continued to struggle and although retiring chancellor, Dr. Leo Jenkins announced that coach Larry Gillman would be retained as cage mentor, Gillman's job appeared less safe as the new 1978 season began.

In July, ECU officials would not comment on reports that the school's basketball program was under investigation by the National Collegiate Athletic Association. Informed sources said that the investigation involved recruitment practices.

Early in the year, ECU Athletic Director Bill Cain announced that the school would remain in the upper bracket of the NCAA's football division with a Division 1-A designation. There had been some concern as to ECU's first division status.

In June, formal hearings began at the university to hear the alleged grievances of five ECU students against the school's athletic department. The five students charged sex discrimination in the school's athletic policies.

In late August, the students who filed the Title IX grievance complaint accepted a package proposed by new chancellor, Dr. Thomas Brewer. The package included improvements in budget allocations for women's athletics and other provisions.

CITY GOVERNMENT

The city governing body had a controversial year, beginning in February with the disclosure that an annexation plan, involving land north of the Tar River known as the Industrial Park, was being studied. Word of the annexation study touched off a wave of opposition from industrial leaders and the City Council was criticized for not making the study known to the general public.

The Council voted to set a public hearing on the annexation issue for March 21 and several meetings were held in the area, involving business leaders, industrial representatives, Chamber of Commerce officials and city governing personnel.

In voting to place the controversial annexation issue on the agenda for the Council's regular March 9 meeting, Percy Cox recommended that the board back off from its consideration of the annexation of the industrial area. At the March meeting, the Council gave unanimous approval to a motion to dispense with the public hearing scheduled on the issue and to table the matter with the understanding that it not be brought up again "as long as this Council sits as a body."

Key city personnel were involved in the news in 1978 and all of the events were not pleasant. City Manager Jim Caldwell was arrested in late March and charged on a public drunk count. Several days later, the Council asked for and received Caldwell's resignation as city manager.

The Council unanimously endorsed the appointment of veteran city engineer, Charlie Holliday, as interim city manager and the likeable official served in a dual capacity for the city until a new city manager was selected in June. Ed Wyatt, Morganton city manager, was named to the Greenville post on June 5 and assumed his duties early in July. Wyatt was selected from a field of some 100 candidates for the city manager's job.

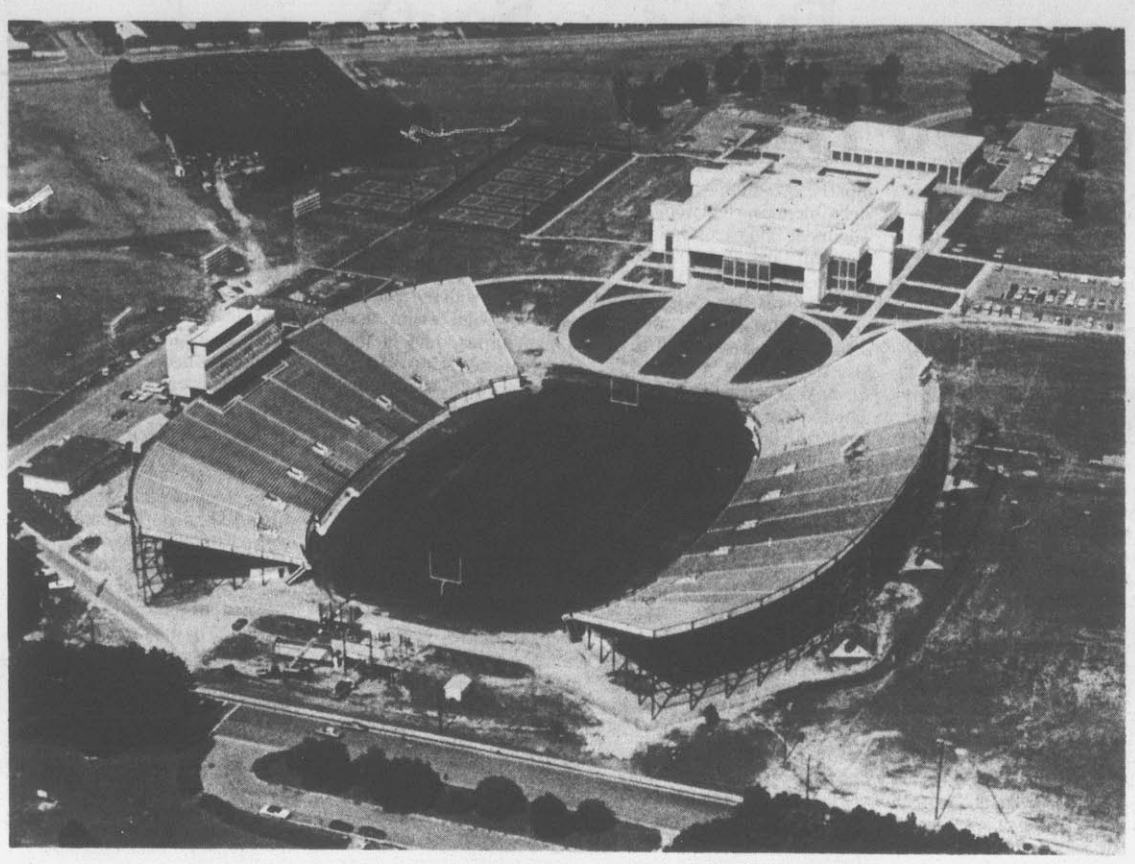
Caldwell was not the only key official to leave the city as John Schofield, city planner, resigned from his position in May "under protest." Schofield, who contested the resignation, later agreed to a "voluntary" resignation after acting city manager Holliday revoked previous personnel action involving Schofield.

Holliday and Fire Chief Ray Smith both decided to retire from their posts after distinguished careers with the city. Holliday, the city's first professional engineer, served over 23 years while Smith recorded some 50 years with the fire service. Both men tendered their resignations effective Dec. 31.

The retirements prompted other key promotions with the city. Ron Sewell was named acting city engineer and Jenness S. Allen, who had served as acting fire chief for some six months, was named chief of the Greenville Fire Department. Both appointments are effective Jan. 1.

In addition, Capt. Paul Jewett announced his retirement from the Greenville Police Department after 26 years tenure, effective Dec. 31. Lt. A. G. Whitaker was named to replace Jewett as captain in charge of uniformed personnel.

In other key personnel changes during the year, Joe Laney was designated as Community Development Task Force director; Bobby Roberson named director of planning for the city; Ben Shivar transferred to the position of Community Development coordinator; and Skip Browder designated as senior planner.



FICKLEN STADIUM . . . with a seating capacity of 35,000 is shown in this aerial view following the completion of expansion work this past summer. The new press facility on the south side of the stadium was also completed as part of the expansion project. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

TRIALS

Aage A. Justesen, who was charged in the 1977 machine gun murder of local supermarket operator Henry Bunton, was sentenced to 30-40 years in prison after entering a guilty plea in court here.

An East Carolina University accounting professor, J. Marshall Colcord, was sentenced to five years in prison and ordered to pay restitution after entering a plea of guilty to maliciously injuring G. V. Howell in an explosion and fire on May 17. Colcord was charged with dropping two gasoline-filled containers at Howell's feet in the May incident that resulted in Howell receiving burns and his business, Tarheel Truck Rentals on Airport Road, sustaining heavy fire damage.

Area officials investigated a bizarre case here that began with the January shooting death of Rodney Edwards and the arrest of his wife, Jean Edwards of 2609 Crocket Drive, on murder charges. Mrs. Edwards, who was released on bail, disappeared on the night of Feb. 9 and her body was found on Feb. 20 in a rural pond. Authorities, who had received a report of a prowler fitting the description of Mrs. Edwards in the Brook Valley area, theorized that the woman fled when she saw police vehicles and fell in the pond.

264 IMPROVEMENTS

Just as 1977 had ended with local efforts for major four-lane improvements to US 264 from Wilson to Greenville, the new year saw renewed progress in the 264 corridor issue. In January, proposed improvements to US 264 from Wilson to Greenville and from Greenville to Washington received the endorsement of the State Board of Transportation. Later in the year, possible locations for the four-lane corridor were presented at an informational session held in Farmville.

In April, Board of Transportation officials reported that efforts were being made to step up the design, right-of-way acquisition and construction of the link between Greenville and Washington. The route possibilities for 264 were discussed at a May 25 meeting here involving local officials and transportation representatives.

In June, the County Commissioners adopted a resolution citing the Farmville community's desire to have the present five-lane section of US 264 at Farmville included as part of the Wilson to Greenville improvement link. The county board later rescinded their resolution calling for utilization of the Farmville segment.

Hearings were held late in the year by the Board of Transportation to gain area input into the 264 proposal. At issue as the year ended were proposals to construct a new, controlled-access corridor or utilize the present roadway for expansion.

The Highway 264 Association was active in the effort to secure the controlled access route. Washington businessman James Hackney III was elected president of the organization.

ELECTIONS

Although 1978 received the "off-year election" designation, several key ballots faced area voters during the year. In May, primary voters chose four women out of six seats on the city's first elected school board. Elected in the initial balloting were Nancy Middleton, Terry Shank, Sue Zadeits and Lena Brown, along with Dr. Jon Tinglestad and Edward Carter. The City Council filled the remaining three seats on the board by appointing incumbent Miles Frost and newcomers Jack Wall and Donovan Phillips.

Only Terry Shank and Carter were successful among the school board incumbent seeking election as three other members failed in their bids to retain their seats.

In other primary results, Sam Bundy and Horton Rountree were returned to their seats in the state legislature and Ralph Tyson was reelected sheriff. Luther Hodges carried Pitt County in the U.S. Senate primary but faced a statewide runoff with challenger John Ingram. In the runoff election, Ingram defeated Hodges but lost to incumbent Republican Senator Jesse Helms in the Nov. 7 general election.

The Nov. 7 voting was also significant as Pitt voters endorsed the matter of converting Pitt Technical Institute to a community college. Greenville voters approved a $1.9 million Public Works Facility bond proposal.

State Senators Vernon White of Winterville and Julian Allsbrook of Halifax County also received the support of Pitt County voters.

FIRES

Unfortunately, fires played a significant role in the news of Pitt County during the year as several residents lost their lives and property losses were extensive.

Firemen from Pitt and Edgecombe Counties battled a Jan. 1 blaze that destroyed New Hope Christian Academy at Conetoe. A Jan. 30 fire at a mobile home claimed the life of Mrs. Emma Cannon Powell and an explosion at Rick's Relics shop in Ayden killed the owner, Rick Swain of Kinston. Ernest Moore Sr., a 26-year veteran of the Farmville Fire Department who retired in 1974, died on Dec. 20 in a fire at his home.

Other fires fought during the year included incidents at Whitley's House Station, real estate firm, on Charles Street Extension; The Candlewick Inn on Stantonsburg Road, destroyed in a March 1 blaze; paper recyling, processing and storage facility at Eastern Carolina Sheltered Workshop; second floor fire at the Leo W. Jenkins School of Art Building at ECU; Suburban Propane business on Greenville Boulevard; concession and storage facility at ECU's Harrington Field;

Gasoline truck fire at Falkland Elementary School where disaster was averted when firemen controlled the blaze in the front driveway of the school; and at a farm near Ayden where fire damaged or destroyed nine bulk barns.

Several homes, including a number of mobile structures, were also lost during the year in Greenville and Pitt County.

WEATHER

The weather, while not dominating the news picture in 1978, still had its influence on the comfort and convenience of Pitt citizens.

Snow was scarce during the year with only light amounts falling on separate occasions in January, February and March. A Feb. 21 snowfall that measured 1.75 inches represented the county's largest accumulation.

Strong winds played a larger role in the weather news as several stormy incidents resulted in power outages and structural damage. Winds gusting up to 85 miles per hour on Jan. 26 caused damages to local store windows and also overturned several mobile homes in the county. A plane at the Pitt-Greenville Airport was overturned in the storm.

Heavy rains hit the Pitt County area in April and problems resulted when road washouts occurred. The Tar River rose to problem heights and telephone problems were experienced in the county as a result of the rain storm. The river level continued upward in May and reached the 17.6 foot level on May 4 after several days of heavy rains. The 17.6 foot level was some 5.6 feet over the 13-foot flood stage.

The high water in the area took the life of a Brooklyn, N.Y. man near Grimesland. Harrison Hatcher, 30, drowned when he stepped from his truck onto a water-covered section of the highway and fell into a roadside ditch.

The precipitation picture changed as the summer progressed and in June, a much-needed rainfall helped alleviate dry farm situations in the county. Scattered power outages resulted from heavy thunderstorms in the area on July 24.

DEATHS

Traffic accidents claimed the lives of eight persons during the year in the county. The 1978 fatality county compared with ten recorded in 1977.

Air tragedies also saddended the community during the year. Prominent Greenville couple, Edwin E. (Ed) Rawl and his wife, Josie, were killed in February when the single-engine plane Rawl was piloting crashed near North Myrtle Beach, S.C.

William H. (Bill) Pruden, 59, former Pitt assistant agricultural extension agent, died in April in the crash of a small plane near Edenton.

Other 1978 deaths included: Dr. M. B. Massey, 80, retired dentist; Milo Smith, 80, owner of Smith Electric Co.; John C. Proctor, 72, CPA; H. L. Lewis, 60, Clerk of Superior Court; J. H. Mobley, 71, retired vocation agriculture teacher in Winterville schools;

Mrs. Sally Phillips Smith, 100, former school teacher in Pitt, Martin and Nash Counties; Kenneth Donnalley, 61, ECU accounting professor; Henry Harrell, 79, retired attorney; S. Lindsay Wilkerson, 70, partner in Wilkerson Funeral Home; John G. Clark Sr., 86, former owner-operator of Clark Oil Co. and chairman of Pitt Democratic Party from 1943 to 1961; Garlan Bailey, 58, professor in the extension division at ECU; John W. Ormond, retired principal of South Ayden High School; Larry Averette, owner of Larry's Shoe Store; and James S. McDaniel, 45, chairman of the ECU Biology Department;

NEW FACILITIES

Several new facilities were occupied during the year and construction began on others.

Construction progressed on the Carolina East Mall on the Kinston Highway and also on the new Rivergate Center on Tenth Street Extension.

The new Greenville Middle School was occupied during February and the Recreation and Parks Department's new administrative offices officially opened in March at the joint Library-Recreation Center near Eastern Elementary. The eastern branch of the city library system later moved into the facility.

Facilities housing the Eastern Area Health Education Center and Eastern Carolina Family Practice Center were officially opened at the ECU Medical School in June.

Pitt County Commissioners approved the awarding of contracts to the low bidders on July 3 for the renovation of the old hospital building as a county office facility.

Regional Storage and Transport Co. began construction on a 96,000 square foot commercial warehouse and distribution center on Industrial Boulevard.

Ajax Magnethermic Corp. of Warren, Ohio announced plans to acquire the existing 45,808 square foot facility formerly owned by Sonoco Products Co. in Winterville for the production of steel induction furnaces.

In September, the new Pitt County Fairgrounds at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Rams Horn Road was utilized for the first time.

McGraw-Edison Co., which manufactures a variety of electrical products, announced that it was acquiring a 55,083 square foot building in the Industrial Park area here for the production of nickel-cadmium batteries.

The new Hopkins Park housing development off Evans Street was occupied late in the year. The 111-unit development was named in honor of the late Nelson Hopkins.

Construction work on the Chicod Creek Watershed Project began in October, some seven years after the landmark case entered federal court.

In Farmville, Electrical Utilities Co. announced that it had selected the town as the site for a new 12,000 square foot manufacturing facility that will be used to produce electrical components for appliances.

The county also lost an industry when the Valor Division of United States Industries notified its employees that the Farmville plant would be closed. From 100 to 150 employees were affected by the closing.

TOBACCO MARKETS

The Greenville Tobacco Market opened for its 88th season on Aug. 1 while the Farmville Market began its 74th season of auctions. Both markets closed in November with Greenville recording a season average of $132.14 per hundred pounds and Farmville posting a $137.45 season figure. Both averages represented records for the respective markets.

REPEATED AS CHAMPIONS

Greenville's Rescue Squad captured the world championship in the heavy duty rescue category of the 31st annual Conference of the International Rescue and First Aid Association, held in Houston, Texas. The local team won for the third time and the second consecutive year. Several weeks later, the rescue squad took first place in heavy duty rescue and second place in first aid competition at the 22nd annual Conference of the North Carolina Association of Rescue Squads, held in Fayetteville.

NEW SCHOOL FACILITY

On Nov. 14, the Pitt County Board of Education voted in favor of a new facility for the Ayden Grammar School. The board had previously taken a stance favoring a consolidated school for Ayden and Grifton middle students. The previous stand touched off a three-year period of stress between parents and the school board.

ACCREDITATION

The Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce received accreditation in November from the board of directors of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

APPOINTMENTS-PROMOTIONS

Several key appointments, awards and promotions were made during the year. They included: Jerry Powell as executive vice president for First State Bank; Don Brady presented Jaycees' Distinguished Service Award; Harry Hastings named to Greenville board of directors of Wachovia Bank and Trust Co.; Ed Warren named to serve as vice chairman of the N.C. Community Development Council;

W. M. "Booger" Scales honored as the city's "Outstanding Citizen of the Year" by the Chamber of Commerce; E. R. "Pete" Carraway named chairman of the State Personnel Division; R. Eugene Taylor appointed city executive for North Carolina National Bank here; J. Larkin Little named executive vice president and managing officer of Home Savings and Loan Association;

Leroy James named county extension chairman; Harry Leslie installed at chairman of Pitt Memorial Hospital board of trustees; Jerry Creech elected president of Greenville Jaycees and Pat Messick as president of Jaycettes; Don Parrott named president of Pitt County United Way; Jim Sutton elected Housing Authority chairman;

Mrs. Helen Pope named president of Downtown Greenville Association; Charlie Holliday presented life membership in the American Public Works Association; J. E. Potter named principal at North Pitt High School; Mrs. Judith Budacz named principal at Falkland Elementary School; the Rev. Jim Bailey named chairman of the Pitt County Area Mental Health Board; Mrs. Dorothy Wooles elected chairman of the Recreation and Parks Commission; Mrs. Janie Manning named principal at Bethel Elementary School; Howard Hurt named principal at Rose High School; John B. Smith named principal at Elmhurst Elementary School;

METER REMOVAL

A recommendation by the Downtown Greenville Association to the Parking Authority that over 400 parking meters in the city's downtown district be removed was endorsed by the Authority. The City Council later concurred in the move and directed the removal of all but 79 of the 619 meters in the downtown section. The Council set a one-year trial period on the meter removal with a review planned at the end of the year.

FOUNDATION FORMED

The Greenville Foundation was formed in July with Dr. Herbert Hadley as chairman. The foundation will be receptive to tax deductible contributions for various trust funds which can be used for community activities.

News Briefs

Ervin Wants Son Recommended

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sam J. Ervin Jr., former North Carolina senator, has asked at least eight of nine North Carolina Democratic congressmen to urge Sen. Robert B. Morgan, D-N.C., to recommend Ervin's son for a federal judgeship.

Spokesmen for the congressmen said all eight complied with the retired senator's request on behalf of his son, Superior Court Judge Sam J. Ervin III.

However, a source close to Morgan told a Raleigh newspaper that it was unlikely that Morgan would be influenced by the congressmen's replies. Ervin and Morgan have never been politically close.

May Ask For New Formula

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's private colleges may ask the General Assmebly to adopt a new funding formula that would give them more state aid.

If they do, they would be asking the General Assembly to ignore the recommendations of a legislative study committee on private aid. The committee Thursday recommended against any formula that would give private schools a percentage of the amount spent on students at state-supported schools.

Delaying Power Plants Construction

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Despite the fact that constructiondelays could cost electricity consumers more money than completing nuclear plants before they are needed, Carolina Power and Light Co. announced Friday it has delayed indefinitely plans to build two large nuclear power plants.

CP&L board chairman Shearon Harris said the delays could end up costing the customer more. But the company is responding to the state Utilities Commission power need forecast that predicts a drop in power requirements in the next decade.

Bible Reading

CLAREMONT, N.C. (AP) — Members of St. Mark's Lutheran Church planned to read the entire Bible this week — in an 89-hour sitting.

The marathon began Tuesday at 7 p.m. and ended at noon today. One hundred sixty readers took turns sitting at a lectern in the church's chancel, reading for shifts of 30 to 60 minutes.

"This year we put great emphasis on reading the Bible every day," said the Rev. Stanley Stiver, pastor of the church. "I thought this would be a good climax for a Bible-reading year."

Took Souvenirs From Jonestown

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Some of the Fort Bragg soldiers involved in the removal of more than 900 suicide victims from the People's Temple in Jonestown, Guyana, last month apparently took home souvenirs from the nightmarish operation.

But an Army official said nothing of any monetary value was removed from the death camp.

The souvenirs were described as "the kind of thing a typical soldier might pick up off the ground as a momeneto."

Approval On Beach Vehicle Plan

BUXTON, N.C. (AP) — The modification of a plan restricting the use of off-road vehicles along the beaches in Cape Hatteras National Seashore has apparently met with the approval of the major critic of the plan, the Outer Banks Preservation Association.

The National Park Service's original plan proposed closing 37 miles of the 73-mile beach permanently to off-road vehicles. But after a series of hearings, the park service revised the plan to leave the entire oceanfront open unless the protection of wildlife or the narrowing of the beach by high tides warrants temporary closure.

Convict Helped In Rescue

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — The state of Oregon wants Kim Edward Campbell back behind bars although one officer says the escaped convict risked his life to rescue dozens of plane crash survivors.

Campbell, 27, was being returned to Oregon State Penitentiary aboard the United Airlines DC8 jetliner which crashed into a Portland suburban area Thursday night, killing 10 persons and injuring 69.

Seated, unhandcuffed, near the rear of the plane with corrections officer Roger Seed, Campbell volunteered to help other passengers out an emergency exit.

"In my estimation, Campbell risked his life to help these people," Seed said. "He could have been the first person off the plane."

Seed said he and Campbell were asked by a stewardess shortly before the crash to help at the emergency door. With Seed outside, Campbell stayed inside the plane and lifted people to the ground eight feet below.

Refused Moroccan Delegation

ALGIERS, Algeria (UPI) — Algerian officials Saturday confirmed Moroccan reports that Algeria had refused to allow a Morrocan delegation to attend the funeral of Algerian President Houari Boumedienne. The refusal further strained relations between the two Arab states.

Moroccan authorities in Rabat disclosed earlier that Algiers had told King Hassan's government any Moroccan delegation at Boumedienne's funeral was not welcome.

Family Murdered

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — Black insurgents murdered a white family of four on their farm in the Rhodesian midlands, the military command said Saturday.

The attackers then set fire to the farmhouse, a communique said.

It identified the victims as Denis Hutchinson, 32, his 28-year-old wife Diana and their two children, Barry, 5, and Vaughn, 2. A military spokesman said Mrs. Hutchinson was in her eighth month of pregnancy.

Thirty years later all that the boy on the river bank had asked had come to pass. There was major industry, ECU with a medical school, a major football stadium. The downtown slums were gone and in their place were a beautiful park and modern buildings. Legal segregation was gone and, if things were not perfect, they were certainly better.

The final wish? The boy wrote it down and, if it has not yet come to pass, perhaps it will in the New Year.

It was for peace, understanding, and compassion among all our citizens.

Special Guard Ordered For Americans In Taiwan

By TED CHAN

TAIPEI, Taiwan (UPI) — Security chiefs canceled New Year's holidays for police Saturday and ordered a special guard on American homes and offices to prevent violence as the United States and the Republic of China end diplomatic relations after 65 years Monday.

Without fanfare, U.S. Embassy officials will lower the Stars and Stripes for the last time at dusk Sunday.

The United States formally breaks ties with Taiwan and establishes relations with China at a minute past Sunday midnight EST (1:01 p.m. Monday local time).

The embassy nameplate and sign also will be removed from the two-story brick building that has been allowed to deteriorate as Washington inched toward recognizing Peking.

"It will be a sad monment Sunday, but what can be done? Any ceremony would be out of place," said one Taipei resident who witnessed the hysterical anti-American sentiment of the past week toward a team of U.S. negotiators.

Young protestors broke windows of the Americans' cars and pelted the limousines with oranges, tomatos and eggs.

The negotiators left Friday having failed to negotiate a new relationship between the two sides. The United States wants future contacts to be on an unofficial basis but Taiwan insists they be governmental.

To ensure no demonstrations will occur Monday, the Taiwan Garrison Command, which oversees internal security, announced a series of measures to maintain peace.

Police forces throughout the island were instructed to cancel their holidays and strengthen their protection of national utilities and foreigners, especially Americans.

No large gatherings of any kind will be allowed. Even the annual celebration of the founding of the Republic of China was cancelled at the City Hall.

Nationalist Chinese Ambassador to the United States James Shen, is expected to arrive in Taipei from Washington before noon Sunday and U.S. Ambassador Leonard Unger is scheduled to leave Jan. 18.

American Fashions, Entertainment Popular With Cuba's Youth

By JOHN VIRTUE

HAVANA (UPI) — Two decades after the Cuban revolution, things American are popular again among Cuba's youth.

The interests range from music to movies to clothing fashions.

Relaxation of travel restrictions in the last several years has brought Cubans increasingly in touch with American and other foreign visitors and has given them access to foreign goods, albeit illegally.

There's an underground music industry which produces cassettes of U.S. and other foreign songs. The cassettes sell for $12 to $18.

The Cubans usually tape American songs from U.S. stations which boom in clearly at night. The most prized possession is a combination radio-cassette recorder.

Young people approach tourists outside the five luxury hotels and try to talk them into buying cassettes, radios or tape recorders at the diplo-stores in the hotels where only foreigners are allowed to make purchases. The catch is the tourist could end up holding a bunch of pesos he can't exchange for hard currency when he leaves.

"If there's an American movie showing, there'll be a big line outside," said 17-year-old Rodrigo. "But if there's a Russian movie, nobody will go."

American movies currently being shown in Havana include "Jaws," "Hello Dolly," "Day of the Dolphin" and "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof."

American movies are a source and inspiration for fads among the young.

"If someone in an American movie wears a wrist band, the next day you'll see scores of kids in Havana who have made them and are wearing them," one adult said.

Blue jeans and T-shirts — especially ones with lettering in English — are the height of fashion. Ramon's girl friend paid $120 for a pair of American jeans for him, while a T-shirt can run upwards of $60.

Such items are bought on the black market or from tourists since clothing is rationed in Cuba — a man is entitled to one new pair of pants and one shirt a year — and foreign fashions would be unavailable anyway. Black market goods are mainly channeled through foreign sailors.

Long hair is in among the youths, but beards are not. The bearded one in Cuba is president Fidel Castro.

Capitalism isn't dead and buried yet in Cuba.

The Cuban government is now experimenting with a profit sharing plan aimed at increasing sales and improving service. Trials are being conducted at several restaurants, cafeterias and ice cream parlors, as well as at some shops and plants.

The government sets a sales or production quota and lets the staff share any benefits if the quota is surpassed. So far, the plan, called "vinculation," has been popular among workers.

"If I work hard, I can increase my income by 50 percent," said Mercedes, a waitress at one of the city's more popular restaurants. "I'm all in favor of the plan."

Mercedes, like most waitresses and waiters, earns about $137 a month. She can't count on tips to augment her income since tipping is forbidden, although many foreigners and Cubans do anyway.

Private ownership is allowed in several areas, including transportation. The owners of pre-1959 taxis were allowed to keep and operate them privately, although the number is shrinking through attrition and the drivers realize very little profit because of the scarcity and high cost of parts for their aging cars.

Open attendance at church is dropping in Cuba, but many Catholics participate in clandestine weddings and baptisms and practice their religion at home.

Less than 1 percent of Cuba's 9 million inhabitants goes to church regularly, according to church sources.

Although freedom of worship is guaranteed in the constitution, no one with a religious affiliation can become a member of the Communist party. But even some high members of president Fidel Castro's government are said to be secret worshippers.

"Many people worship at home or go to a church outside their parish where they're not known," said one priest.

He said many Catholics fear they will lose their jobs if they're seen in church and, although this may not be so, it "keeps the people out of the church."

There are 234 priests in Cuba, slightly more than half of them Cuban. Before the 1959 revolution, there were 900 priests.

One seminary still operates in Cuba and turns out six to 10 priests a year.

THE TENNESSEANS — A quartet of performers, will share the stage with Marty Robbins, Billy "Crash" Craddock, Gene Watson, and Nancy Rowe in Country Spotlight No. 30, sponsored by the Kinston Police Dept. The date is Saturday, Jan. 13, and the place is the Lenoir Community College Gym, Kinston. Two shows will be given, one at 6, the second at 9:30 p.m. Tickets will be available in advance from Bob's TV, Ayden and Greenville.

Coleman, Johnson Recital

Pianist Donna Coleman and guest clarinetist Edward Johnson will present a recital on Wednesday, Jan. 10 at 8:15 p.m. in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall, East Carolina University.

The artists will perform Brahms' "Viola Concerto," Opus 120, Numbers 1 and 2. These sonatas were written for clarinet and piano originally, but were later used for viola. Coleman and Johnson recently presented this recital at Yale University.

The two musicians have performed together numerous times after meeting at the Eastman School of Music and performing in the Eastman Musica Nova Ensemble.

Ms. Coleman joined the ECU faculty as a lecturer this past fall.

Edward Johnson, who has appeared in concert extensively in The Netherlands, will perform clarinet solos and conduct a workshop on Thurs., Jan. 11 for students of the ECU School of Music.

The Jan. 10 recital is free and the public is invited to attend.

Appropriate Books — A Confused Issue

By BARBARA RIEGELHAUPT
Associated Press Writer

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — When school opened this year, Nancy Mitchell packed away dozens of books accumulated over the years as supplemental reading for her literature students.

The paperbacks, which had been used in her 10th and 11th grade courses for nearly 10 years, suddenly were banned. They were not on the list of 270 books deemed appropriate for English classes in the Anaheim Unified School District.

Anaheim is one of a growing number of communities to ban books from classrooms. More incidents of removing or censoring books occurred nationally in the past school year than at any other time in at least 25 years, according to Judith F. Krug, director of the American Library Association's (ALA) Office for Intellectual Freedom.

Among the 300 reported incidents, the books considered inappropriate included "The Amercian Heritage Dictionary" (too many four-letter words), "The Catcher in the Rye," "Black Boy" and the works of Richard Brautigan, including his well known "Trout Fishing in America."

The Anaheim case is unusual because teachers are touted as designers of the program, which strives to return to the basics of grammar. In most communities, banning stems from parental complaints to the school board and teachers aren't consulted.

But Anaheim teachers believed they were merely providing examples of appropriate books and not creating a restricted list. The limitations were imposed later by the board, they claim.

Says Mrs. Mitchell: "Most of the teachers who participated in the revision of the curriculum did not realize those books not on the new lists would not be available for supplemental reading."

But James Bonnell, president of the Anaheim Board of Education, said the teachers apparently misunderstood.

"The only effort to restrict comes from the content of basic grammar classes," he said. "If they teach grammar properly, they will have no need for further books. Nor will they have time for them."

Board member Jo Ann Barnett, who believes the board majority specifically meant to limit reading material, noted that two board members also sat on the board that openly tried to ban about 15 books from the district in 1971. When confronted with community pressure then, the board backed off.

Across the country, there is no uniform objection to the materials being banned from classrooms. Some are considered inappropriate because they contain obscene language or reference to drugs or premarital sex. In other cases, the authors themselves have come under fire — sometimes for being homosexual, sometimes Communist.

"What they did in Anaheim is a little broader than is common," said Dorothy Massie of the National Education Association. "But it's not at all uncommon for school boards to bow to community pressure to take some books out of the library or make modifications in the program."

Norma Gabler, a Longview, Texas, woman recognized nationally as one of the chief advocates of book-banning, criticizes the move away from the wholesome books once read in school.

"The whole philosophy of education has changed," she said. "The aim is no longer to teach fact, skills and knowledge. The aim is to change the thinking and values of children."

An example of the kind of protest raised by Mrs. Gabler occurred last summer in the South when textbook critics challenged a book that showed women in careers outside the home.

"The idea expressed was that most women in this country are in the home — where they should be — and if they're to be portrayed accurately, that is what has to be shown," said Mrs. Krug of the ALA.

Mrs. Gabler believes the new contents — including material on "liberated" women — has accompanied a change of teaching technique in which new ideas are not only presented but also advocated.

"The aim is to change the social values of the child and any time you do that, you're going to step on people's toes," she said.

The teachers admit that subject matter has changed.

"Sure, we're dealing with some pretty adult matters in school," said Anaheim's Mrs. Mitchell, a 51-year-old mother of five. "But then, I can't remember anyone in my high school class having an abortion."

It may be difficult for teachers to decide how to handle sensitive topics, like premarital sex. Many parents and board of education members consider it their problem, too.

"It's all a matter of what you're going to fill the time with," said Mrs. Gabler. "Parents are spending more money on education than ever before and they have less to show for it. Whenever you choose materials with offensive language and no academic value, I think parents have a right to complain."

Critics Not Flattering

MONTREAL (AP) Margaret Trudeau made her film debut to mixed reviews in "Guardian Angel" this week and is preparing to take a stab at literature this spring with an autobiography.

One film critic, Dave Chenoweth of the Montreal Gazette, said the Franco-Canadian production, was "an insipid comedy burlesque that might have made a good vehicle for the Three Stooges — if those zanies had been that desperate."

In the film, Mrs. Trudeau plays a beautiful woman on holiday in the French Riviera.

In her autobiography, "Beyond Reason," Mrs. Trudeau, 29, reportedly reveals the story of her ill-fated romance with Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau. The couple was separated in June 1977.

Kremen's Precise Collages Praised

By BEVERLY WOLTER
Duke University News Service

DURHAM — Irwin Kremen is a psychologist and a Duke University faculty member. He is also an artist who will have a one-man show of collages Jan. 26-March 25 at the National Collection of Fine Arts of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D. C.

Kremen is a man who is at the same time shy and assertive, reserved and positive. He compares himself to a chambered nautilus when writing about his development into a dual career of assistant professor specializing in personality theory at Duke and an artist accorded a rare one-man show by a national museum.

He had his first show this past fall at the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art in Winston-Salem.

One gallery director jokingly has referred to Kremen as a "closet artist," and for good reason.

For 12 years the introspective Kremen, who dresses informally in denims on and off campus, has worked quietly at home on his collages, first in a crowded basement area, now in a well-equipped studio in his backyard.

Few people had seen his collages until they went on exhibit in Winston-Salem.

There they attracted from museum directors and critics such comments as "classic," "beautiful and jewellike," and "consistent and displaying a solid, mature concept."

Kremen's own comment was that "people that one might expect not to like modern work come away enthusiastic, some apparently deeply moved.

"I think it's the coherence, the order wrested from the chaos of the parts, that appeals," he added.

Kremen's abstract collages, made of paper, are small. The largest is nine by twelve inches, the smallest less than three by three inches. The juxtaposition of colors, textures, sizes of the paper, and the letters, numbers and fragments of words or phrases that appear on the paper compose the artistic content of the paper.

His collage papers come from kiosks, billboards, walls and posts, mostly in Italy, France, and England. When he is collecting, he strides along the street, Army surplus knife in hand or in pocket, looking for bits of weathered paper that attract him for their color or texture.

Quickly he cuts off what he wants and stows it in a bag or briefcase. No one has ever interfered with him, he said.

Of his papers he has written, "I hunt out unduplicable papers, experienced papers, papers that have been in sun, in rain, in dust, in snows, covered with the dirt of the city. Yet as I look at them, their flaky surfaces, their weathered colors, I realize their exquisite potential, and gather them in."

By way of illustration he opened a briefcase containing some of his papers, pawed through them, and paused to look lovingly at a scrap of red.

He is meticulous in assembling his collages — not for him the gluing done by most collagists.

"I dislike certain after-effects of gluing," he said. "There is a loss of the articulation of edges, the papers get a pasted-down look. Also, edges pasted under a surface come in time to buckle that surface."

Kremen gets around the problems by hinging the pieces, one to another, with tiny bits of Japanese rice paper and dots of a conservatorially approved adhesive in such a way that the pieces support each other yet are "unconstrained by any other piece. They hang together easily, not as the battlefield of stresses that gluing together produces," Kremen said.

"It's a new technique, so far as I know," he added.

"Getting a speck of adhesive under a flaky bit of paper can be most exasperating unless one has an applicator thin enough to keep the adhesive from spreading where it's not wanted," Kremen has written.

"I've used many different things for that purpose in the past — pins, pared-down tooth picks, dental probes, fine spatulas, but none was thin enough for me.

"Then one day, in the laboratory of a colleague — that's a nice thing about a university situation, you have so many possibilities available — I noticed some microelectrodes that are used for delicate neurosurgical procedures, and I saw that they would provide my solution."

The thinness of the microelectrodes can be varied. Kremen has an assortment of them and uses them along with a binocular magnifier worn on his head.

Early Interest

Kremen's interest in art started long before 1966.

Before he went to Harvard for his graduate work, he studied writing at Black Mountain College, an experimental college that existed in North Carolina during the 30's and 40's. Based on the Bauhaus tradition in Germany, the institution was one where the arts flourished.

Kremen haunted galleries and museums while working in New York. On trips abroad he added to this store of artistic knowledge by visits to the scenes of the arts of old — from caves to mighty cathedrals.

Words also continue to have a fascination for Kremen. He likes to play with idea and word, and it shows in the titles he gives his collages. The titles have meaning for him, but do not have anything to do with the content of the collage.

Besides collages, he has turned his attention recently to another artistic problem — the creation of a prototype for an air-tight picture frame.

So far, the prototype is too cumbersome, but Kremen's eyes gleam as he contemplates the possibilities of redesigning to get exactly what he wants just as he has with his bits of scrounged paper.

World Of Fantasy In Art By Schizophrenic

By C.G. McDANIEL
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — The strange, fascinating world of a schizophrenic confined to a Swiss mental hospital may be seen in an exhibition at the Museum of Contemporary Art in Chicago.

It consists of 126 black-and-white and colored drawings done by Adolf Wolfli, who was born into a disturbed family in Bern, Switzerland, in 1864 and spent the last 35 years of his life, until his death in 1930, in an asylum.

The exhibit was first seen at the Busch-Reisinger Museum in Cambridge, Mass., and will go to the Des Moines Art Center and the Grey Gallery in New York after closing in Chicago early in 1979.

After Wolfli's alcoholic father deserted the family and his mother died, the 8-year-old Wolfli was placed by the state as a child laborer on a Bern farm.

Wolfli lived on the fringes of society and worked at menial jobs until he was arrested for a third time for child molestation and was declared violently schizophrenic.

Although untrained as an artist, Wolfli began to draw when a guard gave him a pencil and some newsprint following one of his violent outbursts. At that time he had been in the institution for five years.

He then began to produce prodigious quantities of drawings of scenes he recalled or invented.

The pages were covered from edge to edge with intricately detailed pictures in which he used his private picture vocabulary, repeating various images over and over, along with nonsense words, tales of adventure, musicalcompositions and financial ledgers.

He continued to experience periods of violence alternating with more peaceful episodes, but drawing is said to have soothed him unfailingly throughout his incarceration.

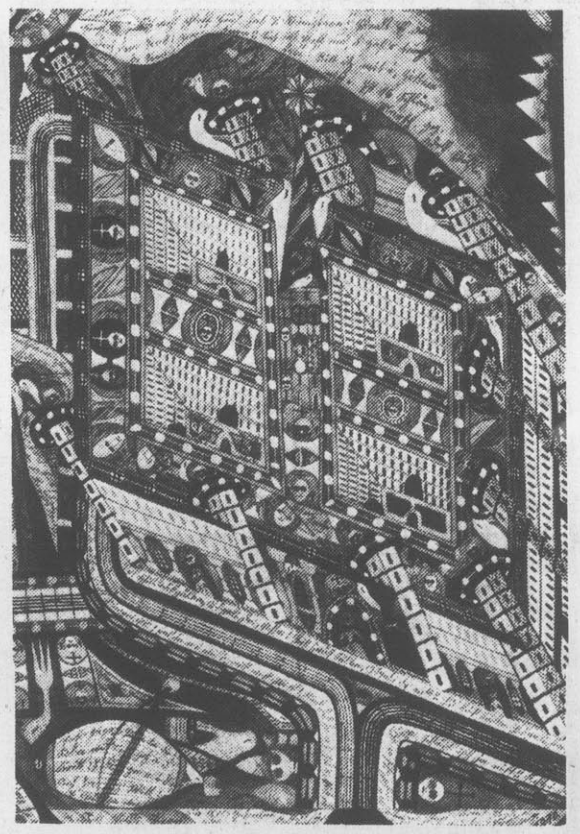
One section of the exhibition consists of pictures from his narrative, "From the Cradle to the Grave," an imaginary autobiography in which Wolfli, as an 8-year-old character, travels to strange lands where he witnesses battles, catastrophes and accidents and meets up with talking vegetables, fruits and flowers.

His fantasy world is continued in "Geographical Notebooks" in which he used "music pictures" resembling musical scores.

In 1916, Wolfli became "St. Adolf II" and the work from this period includes a drawing called "St. Mary the Christ-Child: That is, with my Humble Self, St. Adolf II." The holy pair and himself are strangely masked.

Children, unjaded by "reality," are more likely to appreciate and understand the work of this mad artist than skeptical adults. It is a remarkable exhibition and it provides a glimpse at the strange but unified world of ahschizohrenic.

Much of the work could pass for that of untrained so-called primitive artists of India, the South Pacific or American Indian nations. It is colorful and sometimes has the appearance of an exquisitely detailed piece of embroidery.



ASYLUM ART . . . "Mental Asylum Bandhain," 1910, is among the works of Adolf Wolfli (1864-1930) in an exhibition at Chicago's Museum of Contemporary Art. The Swiss artist was a schizophrenic confined to a mental hospital for the last 35 years of his life.

Realism In Research

By GENE SCHROEDER
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Journalist-author Grace Halsell's globe-trotting career as a reporter has led her through an astonishing series of adventures few other journalists, men or women, can match.

"Amazing Grace," as friends have dubbed her, has:

—Worked as a speech-writer in the White House.

—Shared crowded quarters with a Chinese family of 19 on a fishing junk in Hong Kong.

—Lived in a dirt-floor hogan among the Navajos and passed as an Indian among whites.

—Traveled 2,000 miles down the Amazon on a tugboat.

—Lived in a remote Ecuadorian village in the rugged Andes mountains, searching for the secrets of long life from the centenarians in the "Sacred Valley."

Her journalistic credits also include coverage of Vietnam, Korea and post-World War II Europe. She has also lived and worked in Berlin, London, Tokyo and Peru, to name a few places.

"I've always tried to do more than just surface reporting," said Miss Halsell, 55, in an interview during a brief stop in New York. "I like to get to know the people I'm writing about, and you can't do that just standing around the fringes."

Miss Halsell landed her high-paying White House job when President Lyndon B. Johnson spotted her at a press conference and invited her to drop by for a chat about their mutual home state, Texas.

"We talked for one whole Saturday," recalled the attractive, 5-foot-2 writer. "During this time he asked such blunt questions as how old I was and whether I was married or in love.

"I wasn't offended by his questions. They were typical LBJ. Later, I learned that talking helped him relax. During the interview, the president offered me the White House job."

It was an exciting adventure, different from anything she had done before. But she soon decided to devote full time to writing books, and resigned.

Since then, Miss Halsell has raised her total to 10, including the best-seller, "Soul Sister," about her adventures in Harlem and Mississippi.

Miss Halsell's latest book, "The Illegals," is based on her experiences living with a Mexican family and passing as a "wetback."

The book tells how she swam across the Rio Grande three times, despite the possibility of being shot by U.S. border guards.

She also tells of crawling through the sewershof Tijuana into San Diego with a group of Mexicans who repeatedly risk their lives in a search for jobs to support their poverty-stricken families back home.

And she joined the workers in the field in the back-breaking task of picking tomatoes and onions, sharing their miserable accommodations in migrant camps.

Miss Halsell said she had decided to become a writer because she wanted to learn more about the people of the world, even though the decision meant the breakup of her four-year marriage.

"I feel that as much as any human being, I am 'free.' I am more free than most anyone — man or woman — I know," she said in her soft drawl. "I have traveled the world, worked for a president, written my books.

"Yet I want this freedom only to give myself to something I consider greater than myself.

"My ultimate goal is a sharing, and the ultimate sharing is, for me at least, in a man-woman relationship. I have not gone the traditional stay-at-home housewife route."

Too many women, she said, opt for security.

"Life is rich," she continued. "Life for me involves danger, being willing to lose your life. But this in no way nullifies my desire to share my thoughts and my emotions — and have him share his with me."

Does she have a message for young women?

"If I have one," Mass Halsell replied, "it's — yes, you can.

"You can be your unique self, your own, self-fulfilling independent self — and still be a loved and loving person."

Weatherspoon Art Calendar

GREENSBORO — Weatherspoon Art Gallery will open its second semester schedule Jan. 14 with five separate exhibits ranging from prints by New York artist Alex Katz and 18th century Italian engraver Giovanni Piranesi to a sampling of mail art.

The Katz and Piranesi works will be on view Jan. 14 through Feb. 14 in the gallery. Katz placed several of his prints on permanent loan to Weatherspoon in 1977. The Piranesi prints are from the household collection of Chinqua-Penn Plantation House, Reidsville. The selection of mail art will continue through Feb. 11.

The gallery, located on the UNC-Greensboro campus, is open to the public from 10-5 Tuesday through Friday and 2-6 p.m. on weekends.

Also opening on Jan. 14 will be a selection of gifts and new acquisitions which have been added to the gallery's permanent collection, to be up through Mar. 18. The spring semester thesis exhibition by students will be exhibited Jan. 14-28.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Louise Perry

Sheppard Library now has available for the first time, a collection of books in various foreign languages. The books were made available through an Interlibrary Loan from Cumberland County Public Library, and they encompass both fiction and nonfiction. These books should be of interest not only to Pitt County residents from other countries, but also to those readers interested in learning a new language and experiencing a different culture.

The Chinese collection is composed of newspapers as well as books, all written in Chinese. There is a fascinating book on American movie stars and a fully illustrated volume of Chinese interior decoration. There are books on travel in China, Chinese art, and Chinese cookery. The collection also includes several novels and an English grammar book. For the reader of Italian, there are two nonfiction accounts of the Mafia, a book on the facts and legends surrounding cowboys, and a beautiful work on the best places to ski in Italy. Also included are a history of Jerusalem, books on cooking and decorating, and several biographies, short story anthologies, and novels.

The collection of German books boasts a book of PEANUTS cartoons, and several German comic books. There are also some beautiful "coffee table" books on the sea and the mountains of Germany, and on German art. The biographies comprise ones on Lilli Palmer, Willy Brandt, and Golda Meir, and in addition, there are novels, and a cookbook for the education and entertainment of the German reader. Books in Spanish also include biographies, novels, and cookbooks, but there are as well some translations of newer American books such as THE HITE REPORT, RICH MAN POOR MAN, ALIVE and THE ULTRA SECRET. There are works on tennis, bridge, and chess, and some exciting accounts of travel, exploration and adventure. Also available are paperbacks written in Hindi, and a selection of novels, travel, and cookery books all written in Czech.

These foreign language books are available for loan to any area resident. Books in other languages may be requested by calling or coming by the library.

Stamps

By SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

Sections of stained glass windows of the Frauenkirche (Church of Our Lady) in Munich, are the basic designs of the 1978 Christmas stamps of the Federal Republic of Germany and West Berlin.

Also issued by West Germany are a set of three stamps in the Impressionist Painting series, five in the "Industry and Technology" series and five in the "Castles" series.

The Christmas adhesives are semi-postals with the surcharges going to the benefit of the Federal Working Association of Free Welfare Work in that country, according to the World Wide Philatelic Agency.

Each Christmas stamp is designed in block form depicting the window and the section used for the actual stamp. The blocks bear the imprint in German "Happy Christmas To All." Above the motif is the inscription 1978 Christmas Stamp. The 30-pfennig plus 15 is for West Berlin and the 50-pf plus 25 is for West Germany.

Mexico City Is Scene Of Aztecs Digs

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Looking for the skull of an Aztec sacrifice victim? An ancient garbage dump? Or an Aztec rain god or moon goddess? Come to the Great Temple dig in downtown Mexico City.

It was the chance discovery of a 500-year-old stone depicting the Aztec moon goddess near the city's main square that launched the search for the ruins of an Aztec temple, soon to become a major archaeological zone.

Since electric company workmen digging across the street from Mexico City's cathedral unearthed a huge, round monolith carved with the image of the Aztec moon goddess Coyolxauhqui, archaeologists have uncovered 70 percent of the ruins of the Aztecs' Great Temple, built to honor both the Aztec god of war, Huitzilopochtli, and god of rain, Tlaloc.

"We have found many other valuable archaeological pieces," said archaeologist Eduardo Matos Moctezuma, general coordinator of the dig.

Among them:

— Hundreds of pre-Hispanic figurines and pots.

— A large green stone carved with what is thought to be another image of the moon goddess (a sister of the war god in Aztec mythology), which now rests in a humidity-controlled case at the site.

— Pottery and carvings from other areas of Mexico, believed to be tribute paid to the Aztecs by tribes in the Pacific coast state of Guerrero and the state of Veracruz, on the Gulf of Mexico.

— And, of course, the eight-ton monolith of pinkish rock depicting the moon goodess, which once rested at the foot of the pyramid, destroyed by the Spaniards when they conquered the Aztec capital of Tenochtitlan in 1521.

The Aztecs began to build the temple in 1325, when they first settled in the valley of Mexico, Matos Moctezuma said.

The structure was 100 feet high, with 120 steps leading up to two temples on its crest, one the province of the war god, the other, of the rain god.

Prisoners of war were sacrificed in both temples. All the buildings in the vast ceremonial center were leveled by Spanish conquerors, who used the stones to build the cathedral, the National Palace and other buildings that now stand in Mexico City's Zocalo.

In the ancient garbage dump, bones, fragments of pottery and burned material dating from the time of the Aztecs, along with bones of sheep eaten by the Spaniards, and fragments of colonial dishware, have been found, Matos Moctezuma said. He said the dig will be finished in another year.

The Public Works Ministry has announced plans to build a large, open-air archaeological museum lined with gardens after the excavation is completed. And there are plans for valuable artifacts to be displayed in a museum across the street from the site, Matos Moctezuma said.

Corpses of 28 Young Men Discovered To Date

Gacy Described As Strange, Complex

By DAVID SMOTHERS
UPI Senior Editor

CHICAGO (UPI) — The people who knew John Wayne Gacy best sensed there was something strange about him.

But they didn't do anything about it, largely because they still liked the man.

They did not know, it appears, just how strange he was.

This week, police in muddy gloves, burrowing with trowels, garden tools and their fingers, searched in foul-smelling trenches under Gacy's home for evidence of death.

They have found 27 bodies in a week of digging under the garage and in the nauseous crawlway beneath Gacy's home. Another body found in the Des Plaines River has been linked to Gacy, bringing the count to 28.

That could make Gacy, 36, an overweight, likable free-lance building contractor, the most heinous single-handed mass killer in recent U.S. history.

Authorities kept up the digging — likened to an archeological expedition — and say they expect to find more bodies. Some expect a total of 32 from the house and the river.

The nice guy who lived in the brick-facade, L-shaped house at 8213 W. Summerdale is charged with one murder and suspected of dozens more. The evidence for the accusation is the skeletons of adolescent boys and young men being dug up daily from beneath his home.

The leather thongs were put on him after he reportedly tried to strangle himself the day before Christmas Eve. Yet he has provided police with a crude "death map" — a chart showing where 27 bodies were buried.

Most people who were close to John Gacy, even his two ex-wives, speak of him as a nice man — generous, jovial, energetic, thoughtful.

But some of them knew or suspected his flaw. And some, apparently, chose to ignore it.

Ed Grexa may have been Gacy's best friend. He lived next door to him for seven years in suburban Norwood Park Township.

"Well, we knew something was going on," he said. "When you see young kids hanging around the house at all hours, until all hours, you've got to think something.

"His wife, Carol, so much as told me. I was over helping to fix their washer. I was just joking around, you know, and I said, 'You've been married quite a while now. When are there going to be some kids?' She said, 'Well, to do that, you've got to sleep together. John doesn't. John likes his boys.'"

Grexa installs marble for a living. He has raised six children, including a son who worked for Gacy and was propositioned by him, as were many of Gacy's young employees.

Grexa sat at his kitchen table, drinking coffee while the sheriff's police dug away in Gacy's crawlway 50 feet away and a patient crowd stood in the snow outside, waiting for something to happen. Grexa's voice was dispassionate and he smiled a lot as he talked of his neighbor.

"He was a nice guy," Grexa said. "He was a good, warm neighbor. Helping all the time. Having parties for as many as 400 people on his driveway and his front lawn.

"He certainly didn't act as if there was anything wrong with him. He was terribly interested in politics. He wanted to be road commissioner of the township. He wanted that very much."

Grexa's wife, Lillie, said, "I feel this is all a bad dream and I'm going to wake up. When I do the John Gacy I used to know will be inviting Ed and me over to have a drink in his house."

John Wayne Gacy was all of that and more. (It appears he was not named after the manly actor known as Duke. Gacy's father was also named John Wayne and his son is actually a "junior.")

Gacy was a successful businessman, an aspiring politician, a Democratic precinct captain. He was the kind of man who would paint his face, put on a clown's outfit, and make a genial fool of himself at children's parties.

He was a lavish party giver, entertaining hundreds in an evening in his cramped lot just a few feet from the Chicago city limits.

He tried to be the first man on the block to get his Christmas decorations up. They are there now — strings of lights under the eaves of the one-story house while the digging goes on below.

He is also the man, police believe, who lured boys and men to the house on Summerdale with promises of jobs, liquor, drugs and, sometimes, or often, outright offers of money in return for sex.

He raped some, it is speculated, first drugging them with chloroform. Others may have been too drunk or too high on marijuana (which was found in his home) or amphetamines to know quite what was happening. Others may have known quite well most of what they were getting into.

Then, often, it is believed, Gacy killed.

Investigators have been sparing of details on how it was done. But they indicate, perhaps because the initially garrulous Gacy told them, that he would get behind his victims, throw a rope around their necks, and keep the pressure on until it was over.

Then the victims would be buried with the rest under the crawlway, often with bikini underwear stuffed in their mouths, their earthen graves covered with lime to quicken decomposition. Or, if there was no time for that, their bodies would be hustled off in Gacy's car and dumped in the Des Plaines River.

"He'd take off at all hours of the night," Grexa said. "You'd hear him shooting off at 2 o'clock and charging back at 3. He made noise at all hours of the night. Said he couldn't sleep."

Tony Antonucci, 19, was one of those to get away from Gacy. He had to pull a Houdini act to do it.

He said Gacy came to his home late one night with a bottle of wine and some stag films. Gacy, an amateur magician, said he wanted to show Tony "a trick." He handcuffed him and began to undress him.

But one of the cuffs was not fully locked, Antonucci said. He got a hand free, knocked Gacy down and put the other cuff on him.

Antonucci, a high school wrestler, said Gacy told him, "You're the first one to get the cuffs off."

Gacy had a sentimental side in such matters, it appears.

Police say he liked to keep a memento from every person he put in the crawlway or the river — a class ring, a billfold, whatever. It was a bad habit from his standpoint. The keepsakes were still there when police began working over his house early this month.

He might still be nursing his collection, police say, were it not for a youth named Robert Piest and a tough cop named Lt. Joseph Kozencazk. The first is presumed to be in the Des Plaines River. The second is credited with cracking the case.

At 11:30 on the night of Dec. 11, Elizabeth Piest telephoned the Des Plaines police. She said she had gone to Nisson's Pharmacy in the Chicago suburb to pick up her son, who worked there part time.

Robert asked her to wait a minute while he ducked outside to talk to a man about a summer job. He did not come back. The pharmacy owner told Mrs. Piest her son had probably gone to talk to a man who had done some remodeling around the place. A man named Gacy.

The report landed on the desk of Kozenczak, Des Plaines' chief of criminal investigations. It was a little special to him. His own son was the same age as Piest, 15. They went to the same high school. Kozenczak ordered a special effort on this case.

On Dec. 13, he got a search warrant for Gacy's home. Investigators found a receipt for a roll of film from Nisson's. It turned out the receipt belonged to Piest's girl friend.

Piest's body, it is believed, was in Gacy's attic at the time of the discovery.

On Dec. 14, the Des Plaines police got another search warrant. Officers said they could smell what was in and under the place. They haunted the house, and Gacy, until Dec. 21, when they arrested him. By that time they had found three bodies.

Strangely, Gacy is charged wih killing none of these. He is charged with the murder of Robert Piest, whose body has not yet been found. Gacy, police say, says he threw it in the river.

Gacy used to boast to the Grexas that he had been everything from a master chef to a carpenter. A lot of that was true.

He was the pride and chaplain of the Waterloo, Iowa, Jaycees, a convicted sodomist and an ex-convict.

After graduating from Chicago's Carl Schurz High School and attending business school, Gacy went to Springfield, Ill., and took a job as a shoe salesman. He married in 1964 and, two years later, moved to Waterloo to manage a string of fast-food restaurants owned by his father-in-law.

He fathered two children by his first wife.

He was elected chaplain and vice president of the Waterloo Jaycees. He wanted dearly to become president, friends recall.

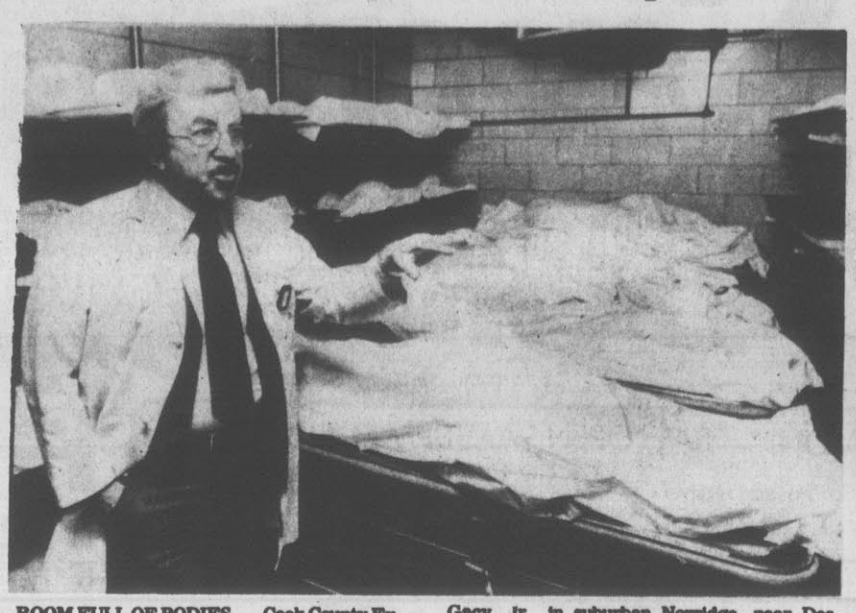
Then he was arrested on a charge of sodomy with an adoloscent male. He pleaded guilty, was sentenced to 10 years at the Anamosa Reformatory, and served about three years before he was paroled. He was known for steering clear of the jailhouse homosexuals. His wife divorced him.

The next stop was back to the Chicago area. He got in touch with a high school girl friend, now Mrs. Carol Lofgren, who was just coming off a divorce and trying to take care of two children. They married.

It only lasted about two years. Carol discovered her husband had a vicious temper and was given to throwing furniture about their home. She also indicates she got a fair idea his sexual preferance. That marriage ended in 1976 and Gacy followed his own pursuits.

This weekend, middle-age couples stand outside Gacy's home at night, wondering if their missing sons are in there. The lights blaze inside, where almost all the floor boards have been ripped out to make room for the grave searchers. Television reporters stand shivering on the lawn next door, talking importantly into cameras.

And there is a Gacy family — a frightened family, out of sight. Two sisters and a mother. They do not wish their names known. The father is dead.



ROOM FULL OF BODIES . . . Cook County Examiner Dr. Robert Stein stands in a room at the County Morgue in Chicago that contains the remains of persons that were found buried in the crawl space beneath the home of John Wayne Gacy, Jr., in suburban Norridge, near Des Plaines, northwest of Chicago. A total of 28 corpses have been found, 27 under the house and garage and one in the Des Plaines River. (AP Laserphoto)

Connecticut Stop East Carolina , 80-68

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — Reserve John Delagrange sparked the University of Connecticut to a ten-point first half lead, and Corny Thompson, one of the country's top freshmen, took over at the half to lead the Huskies to an 80-68 victory in the finals of the Connecticut Mutual Tournament last night.

Thompson, held to just four points in the first half, came on in the second to score 17 as he led the Huskies out to as much as a 17-point lead before leaving the game in the closing minute.

Delagrange, a 6-8 senior who missed almost all of the previous season, came off the bench to lead a first half pullaway.

Connecticut led only 21-18 when Delegrange started his scoring, and by the time he finished his 11-point first half duties, the Huskies had built up a 38-26 lead, which dropped to 38-28 before the horn.

Thompson hit eight of the first 16 points in the second half as the Huskies ran their margin out to 15, 54-39, and were never in danger after that.

Thompson, for his efforts in the tournament, was named the Most Valuable Player of the event, and led the All-Tournament team. Joining him were teammate Mike McKay, ECU's Mack, Tulsa's Billy Keys, and Manhattan's Mike Bruno. Each team was automatically assured of at least one choice on the team.

"I'm disappointed, of course," ECU Coach Larry Gillman said afterwards. "We really thought that we could win the tournament. It was a hard-fought game, and we made some mistakes that cost us.

"Connecticut worked the boards well, and we never got our inside game going against them, except for what (David) Underwood did.

"They did a good job in doubling up on Mack. They had a good game plan and executed it well."

Mack was cut off, after scoring 31 points in the first round of the tournament. The Huskies held him to just 12 points as he had one of his worst nights shooting since donning purple and gold, hitting just four of 14 shots from the field.

Overall, the Pirates were icy, putting through only 37.1 per cent of their shots, while UConn was hitting 49.2 per cent. Underwood, making eight of 14 shots, was the lone Pirate to hit 50 per cent or better.

The Pirates did have a good night at the line, making 16 of 18, but the Huskies matched that with 16 of 20.

The Huskies, led by Thompson with 14 and Mike McKay with 10, dominated the boards, 43-37, including a 24-16 margin in the second half.

The Pirates led only once in the game, taking a brief 8-6 lead after about five minutes of play. Thompson scored the first basket for the Huskies, but Greg Cornelius tied it up for the Pirates.

Bob Dulin returned the Huskies to the lead, and hit a second basket for a 6-2 lead before Clarence Miles hit a jumper with just under 16 minutes showing.

Cornelius added two free throws to tie it up, and George Maynor hit a jumper for an 8-6 lead.

But Thompson scored again to tie it up, and a baseline jumper by McKay returned the Huskies to the lead, 10-8, and the Pirates never caught up again.

Randall LaVigne added a basket, and McKay hit again for a 14-8 lead. Later Jim Sullivan made a three-pointer to run the lead to seven, 19-12.

The Pirates fought back to cut the lead to three, the last time at 21-18 before Delagrange took WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Alvis Rogers and Frank Johnson combined for 41 points Saturday night to lead Wake Forest to an 88-59 win over Fairleigh Dickinson University in college basketball action.

Wake Forest shot a sizzling 91 percent from the free throw line and coupled that with a 63 percent average from the floor. Fairleigh Dickinson, meanwhile, shot a cold 39 percent from the field.

Rogers led all scorers with 24 points. He was backed up by Johnson, who added 17 points, and Mike Helms, who chipped in 10.

Fairleigh Dickinson was paced by Dan McLaughlin's 23 points.

The Deacons led by only eight points at intermission, 39-31, but steadily added to that margin in the second half even as Coach Carl Tacy freely substituted.

St. John's Drills Duke

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Wayne Mckoy and Frank Gilroy led an inspired second-half rally as St. John's staggered top-ranked Duke 69-66 in the consolation game of the 27th ECAC Holiday Festival basketball tournament Saturday night.

It was the second loss in as many nights for the Blue Devils, who dropped a first-round game at Madison Square Garden 90-84 in overtime Friday night to Ohio State, which met Rutgers for the championship.

Duke's stunning upset loss was similar to its loss Friday night, when the Blue Devils had built up a big lead in the second half, only to lose it to the onrushing Buckeyes.

This time, Duke led by as many as 19 points, 42-23 at the start of the second half, before the underdog Redmen turned things around.

Shortly after Duke had built up its mountainous lead, St. John's outscored the Atlantic Coast Conference powerhouse 16-2 as Mckoy contributed 8 points to the rally. That narrowed the margin to 46-39 with 12:17 left in the game.

The Redmen then outscored Duke 18-7 to move into a 57-53 lead with six minutes left. In one hot stretch, Gilroy, cheered on by the thundering near-capacity crowd at the Garden, scored 10 straight points for St. John's to pull the Redmen into a 61-58 lead at the 3:56 mark.

Reggie Carter delivered the killing shots for St. John's with four free throws in the last 25 seconds as the partisan crowd rose to its feet.

Duke, which had a 14-point lead against Ohio State Friday night, led by 15 at the half Saturday night, 38-23, thanks to 13 points apiece from Jim Spanarkel and Mike Gminski.

Spanarkel had 22 and Gminski finished with 21 for Duke, now 6-2.

Mckoy and Gilroy each scored 20 for St. John's, now 7-4, while Gordon Thomas contributed all of his 10 points in St. John's second-half rally.

Danny White Rallies Dallas Past Falcons

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

DALLAS (AP) — Reserve quarterback Danny White came off the bench to spell injured Roger Staubach and masterminded the hard-pressed Dallas Cowboys to a 27-20, come-from-behind National Conference playoff victory Saturday over the amazing Atlanta Falcons.

Staubach was knocked cold and suffered a slight concussion on a late tackle by Falcon linebacker Robert Pennywell late in the first half with the wild card Falcons leading 20-13.

White, who had set up Dallas' only first half touchdown on a fake punt, passed 2 yards to tight end Jackie Smith to tie the score 20-all in the third quarter. It was the first touchdown catch of the year for Smith, a former St. Louis Cardinal.

White then directed the Cowboys 30 yards after a poor Falcon punt for the game-winning touchdown with 9:46 left in the game. Scott Laidlaw, who had scored earlier on a 13-yard run, punched the ball in from less than two inches away from the goal.

A big defensive play by Cowboy cornerback Benny Barnes turned back a Falcon bid to tie the score with 3:09 left in the game. On fourth-and-one from the Cowboy 32, George Franklin was stopped cold by Barnes, and the Falcons' last-gasp bid for a miracle ended.

A heavy Cowboy rush forced Falcon punter John James to shank the ball only 10 yards before it went out of bounds to put Dallas in position for the game-clinching touchdown.

Pennywell was flagged for a personal foul after Tony Dorsett ran 10 yards. Laidlaw then ran 14 yards to set up the winning touchdown.

Atlanta, which had won six of its 10 victories in the last two minutes, played with poise in the first half while Dallas lost four fumbles.

After a 34-yard field goal by Rafael Septien, strange things began to happen in Texas Stadium.

An unsportsmanlike conduct penalty on Cliff Harris gave Atlanta life on a 78-yard drive climaxed by Bubba Bean's 14-yard touchdown run.

White's fake punt, which he ran 12 yards on fourth-and-10, set up Laidlaw's first touchdown run.

Butch Johnson fumbled away a punt, and Atlanta tied the score 10-10 on Tim Mazzetti's 42-yard field goal.

A 48-yard field goal by Septien gave Dallas the lead again at 13-10.

Falcon quarterback Steve Bartkowski flipped a 17-yard touchdown pass to Wallace Francis and Mazzetti hit a 22-yard field goal to give the Falcons, who were 14-point underdogs, a shocking seven-point halftime lead.

Harris killed any Falcon hopes of a miracle comeback by intercepting a Bartkowski pass with 29 seconds to play at the Atlanta 24.

The Cowboy Doomsday Defense, which was plundered by Atlanta runners in the first half, dominated the second half when it counted.

Dallas intercepted three Bartkowski passes and sacked the Atlanta third-year quarterback five times.

White completed 10 of 20 passes for 127 yards and had one intercepted.

The tough Atlanta defense permitted 1,000-yard rusher Tony Dorsett only 65 yards on 14 carries, while Bean gained 72 yards and Haskell Stanback of the Falcons gained 62.

Staubach completed seven of 17 passes for 105 yards before he was knocked out of the bruising game.

It was the first visit to the National Football League playoffs for the Falcons, who advanced by defeating Philadelphia last week.

But the Dallas defense held and the Cowboys charged 54 yards in seven plays for the tying score.

The key plays in the drive included a 24-yard pass to tight end Billy Joe DuPree and a 15-yard screen pass to the ever-present Laidlaw.

Lady Pirates Slip By Ohio State, 81-80

East Carolina came from behind Saturday against prennial Big Ten power Ohio State for an 81-80 victory in women's basketball in Minges Coliseum.

The Pirates, now 5-4, trailed 76-75 with 2:30 to play prior to baskets by Lynne Emerson and Rosie Thompson. The Buckeyes drew within a point at 79-78 with a basket by Frani Washington with 1:25 to play.

Thompson scored with 51 seconds remaining to provide the winning points for the Pirates. The state's leading scorer and rebounder, she finished the game with 22 points and nine rebounds, including 14 of 19 from the free throw line.

Pirate point guard Lydia Rountree along with Buckeye Kim Jordan and Washington shared game scoring honors with 24 points each. The game's top rebounders were ECU's Marcia Girven and OSU's Jordan, each with 10.

"This is definitely one of the best Christmas presents I ever received and a great way to wind up the year. This is without a doubt the best performance of the season," stated Pirate Coach Cathy Andruzzi. "The girls played a nationally ranked team one night and then came back the next day, hustling, to defeat another nationally ranked team."

The lead changed hands 17 times during the game. East Carolina led by as much as three several times with the final time coming at 81-78 with 51 seconds remaining in the game. The visitors held the lead by as much as eight four different occasions. The final time that came was at 59-51 with 12:16 left.

The Pirates had three players in double figures as Gale Kerbaugh added 12 points. Buckey Laurie Pritle added a dozen to her team's effort. She led all players in assists with six.

Both teams shot well from the field. The Pirates hit 50.8 per cent from the floor while the Buckeyes connected on 47.8 per cent of their attempts. The taller visitors held a significant 46-29 advantage in rebounding but committed 19 turnovers.

"Lydia played 40 minutes of non-stop defense and offense. She controlled our offense with good penetrations and didn't give their guards one inch of breathing room," Andruzzi said.

"Emerson and Girven were outstanding on defense and helped a lot on the boards."

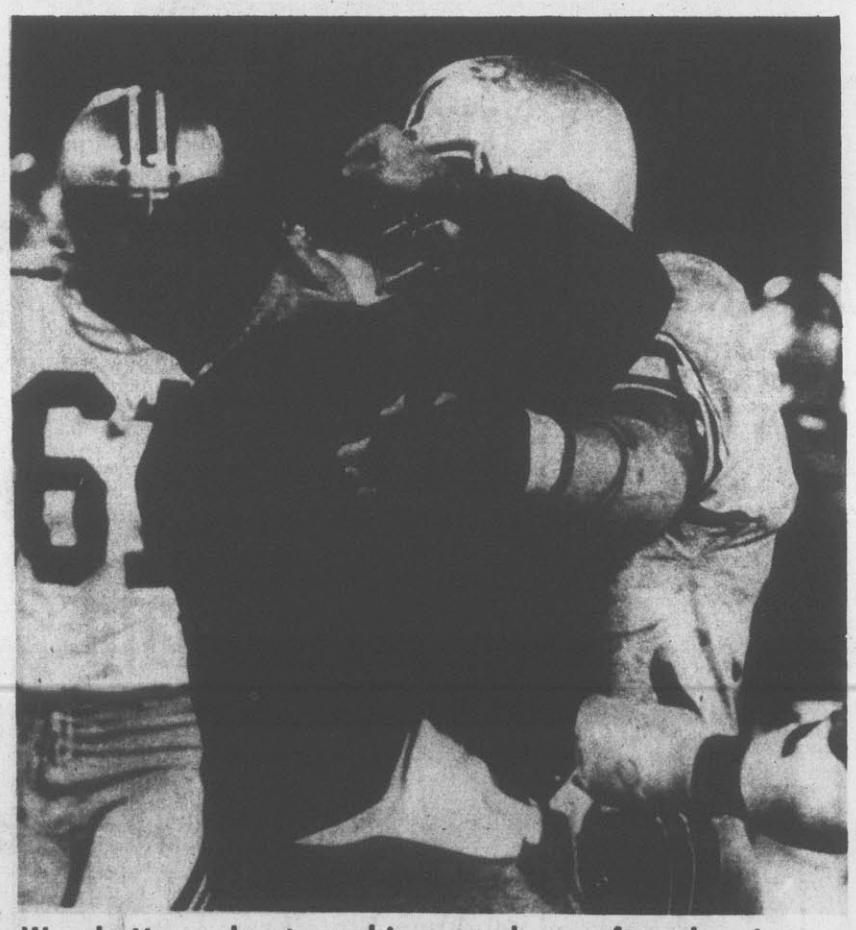
Blow Last Straw For Woody Hayes



Woody Hayes beats on his own player after slugging Clemson intercepter in Gator Bowl

By GEORGE STRODE
AP Sports Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Legendary Woody Hayes was fired Saturday, ending his reign of 28 years as head football coach at Ohio State University after losing his temper and slugging a Clemson player in the closing moments of Friday night's Gator Bowl game.

Lou Holtz, a former assistant at Ohio State and currently head coach at Arkansas, is a leading candidate to replace Hayes, The Associated Press learned. According to NBC-TV sources, Holtz will be named to the job within a few days.

Holtz, who has expressed an interest in the Ohio State job before, will coach the West team in next week's Hula Bowl game and was en route to Honolulu when word came Saturday that Hayes had been fired.

In a telephone interview from Honolulu, Holtz told Little Rock television station KARK that he has no plans to resign. "I plan to stay at the University of Arkansas for as long as the people want me to," he said.

Clemson beat the Buckeyes 17-15 in the Gator Bowl at Jacksonville, Fla., with the victory sealed by middle guard Charlie Bauman's interception with two minutes left to play. When Bauman was forced out of bounds at the Ohio State sidelines, Hayes grabbed the player and swung at him.

A few hours later, Ohio State Athletic Director Hugh Hindman, who played for Hayes at Miami of Ohio one season and coached under him with the Buckeyes for seven years, notified his old boss that he was being relieved of his duties.

In a terse statments, Hindman said, "It was the toughest decision I ever will have to make."

Hindman and Harold Enarson, the school's president, had reached their decision shortly after Hayes' outburst against Bauman, whose interception killed the Buckeyes' hopes of victory.

Hindman said Hayes' actions against Bauman led directly to his firing. He said no decisions had been reached before the game, Hayes' fourth loss in his past five bowls. Enarson had watched the game from the stands while Hindman viewed it from the press box.

"We both felt the same way afterwards," said the athletic director. "But I still have great admiration for him."

Hindman said he went to Hayes' motel room and notified the coach about 8 a.m. EST, moments before the Ohio State coaches and players flew home.

Upon his arrival here, Hayes refused to talk to the media and was whisked away in a police cruiser.

The Ohio State athletic director refused to say what Hayes' reaction was. "I don't want to dig into anything," said Hindman during a brief news conference announcing the dismissal.

Two of Hayes' players, All-America linebacker Tom Cousineau and defensive end Kelton Dansler, also heading for the Hula Bowl game, both said they were not surprised at the firing of their coach.

"The only way was to fire him," said Cousineau. "He never would resign. It's a disappointment to me that a great career, a coaching legend, has to end on a note like this."

Cousineau said, "He was so multi-faceted. He could change so much. He was very loyal and very concerned about his players. He was a father image."

"I figured it could happen if we lost this game," said Dansler, an All-Big Ten Conference performer. "I knew there could be some shake-ups."

The 65-year-old Hayes has skirmished with the news media during his 36 coaching seasons. But Friday night's incident marked the first time he had punched a player from an opposing team.

"Coach Hayes grabbed him (Bauman) around the helmet and hit the player three times around his face," said an Ohio State athletic official who asked not to be identified.

Hayes became a legend by spending all of his career coaching within the borders of his native Ohio.

His 238 career victories rank him fourth on the all-time college football coaching list. Only Amos Alonzo Stagg, Glenn "Pop" Warner and Paul "Bear" Bryant are ahead of him in victories. Hayes ranks second to Bryant's 283 triumphs among active coaches.

He launched his college coaching by guiding his alma mater, Denison University, to a three-year record of 19-6-0. In two seasons at Miami, he was 14-3-0.

Then Hayes assumed control at Ohio State in 1951. The school was noted as a graveyard for coaches at the time. In the decade before Hayes' arrival, Ohio State had employed Paul Brown, Carroll Widdowes,

Firing Shocks Most Coaches

By The Associated Press

The decision by Ohio State to dismiss Woody Hayes after the legendary coach slugged a Clemson player in Friday night's 17-15 Gator Bowl loss, left the college football community in a state of shock Saturday.

In a prepared statement, Big Ten Conference Commissioner Wayne Duke said he had consulted twice during the night with Hugh Hindman, director of athletics of Ohio State.

"It is not my intent to comment on the text of these conversations, except to say that on the second occasion, at approximately 6:30 this morning, Hindman advised me that coach Hayes had been relieved of his coaching duties and that this information had been released to the press," Duke said.

"Prior to my initial conversation with Hindman, at approximately 12:15 a.m. following my return from the Big Ten Club Dinner for Champions, and after viewing reruns of the incident, I consulted with Dr. C.D. Henry, assistant commissioner of the Big Ten who attended the Gator Bowl game in Jacksonville.

"Additionally, I telephoned Atlantic Coast commissioner Robert C. James last night in Jacksonville to express my regrets and apologies for the incident and requested he convey these expressions to the educational and athletic administrators of Clemson University, as well as to the Clemson coaches and players. The same expression of regret and apology was also telephoned last night to George Olson, executive director of the Gator Bowl Association."

Duke said Hayes' firing was "very regrettable, the termination of a great, great career in my opinion."

He declined to comment further beyond his prepared statement.

Clemson Coach Danny Ford said, "I'm very sorry it happened, and that Clemson was involved. The only thing I want and expect is an apology from Ohio State to my team."

"He was a victim of his own emotion," said Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne, whose team plays Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl Monday night. "I think what happened last night is unfortunate. College football is supposed to be something more than win at all costs.

"People want to win. If you lose, you feel like somebody died pretty close to you for a while."

Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer said he was sorry that Hayes swung at Clemson linebacker Charlie Bauman after an interception with two minutes remaining in the game.

Asked if he could imagine himself hitting a player, Switzer said, "I don't react that way. I can't see myself doing that. But we haven't coached for 40 years."

Osborne added, "Barry and I are still too smart to hit a guy with shoulder pads and a helmet on."

Coach Bo Schembechler of Michigan, in Pasadena, Calif., for the Rose Bowl game against Southern California, expressed sorrow for Hayes.

"I'm saddened by it," he said. "I hate to see something like that happen. None of us who have been closely associated to him as a player or coach wanted to see it happen this way. I would hope you people (the press) look on the great things he's done as a coach, not dwell on his indiscretion."

"I think you ought to all take into consideration the enormous pressure of coaching football today," Schembechler continued. "Sometimes you do some things that if you have second thoughts, you wouldn't do. I'm not condoning what happened, just saying there's enormous pressure."

John Robinson of Southern Cal said, "I would think little of those who would gloat over it. Tragedies happen to all of us in our lives. When you decide to judge anyone, you've got to measure the good he's done in his life with the bad. People judging a situation like that can become very cruel. I know this man has done a lot of great things."

Don Canham, Michigan's athletic director, said, "I think we all feel the same all over the country. It's the passing of an era. I hate to see it happen that way. People who know him are damn sad about it. I guess it's an argument for retirement at 65. That's bad for the coaching profession. I think Ohio State handled it properly. It's the first time I've ever heard of a coach hitting an opposing player in any sport."

Pittsburgh Bucks Broncos By 33-10

By GARY MIHOCES
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Terry Bradshaw hit 16 of 29 passes for 272 yards and a pair of fourth-quarter scoring bombs, leading the Pittsburgh Steelers to a 33-10 victory over the Denver Broncos Saturday in the American Football Conference semifinal playoffs.

Bradshaw's potent display, which included 10 receptions by wide receiver John Stallworth, combined with 105 yards rushing and two touchdowns by Franco Harris, boosted Pittsburgh into the Jan. 7 AFC title game.

The Steelers will host Sunday's Houston-New England winner.

The AFC-West champion Broncos, who booted Pittsburgh from the playoffs a year ago, took a 3-0 lead with 5:50 left in the opening quarter on a 37-yard field goal by Jim Turner.

But with Steelers' fans waving their yellow "Terrible Towels" in packed Three Rivers Stadium, Pittsburgh took command with the kind of offensive power that gave the Steelers the best regular-season record in the National Football League, 14-2.

Harris, typically primed for the playoffs, dove 1 yard for a touchdown with 2:33 left in the first quarter, putting Pittsburgh ahead to stay 7-3. He added an 18-yard touchdown sweep early in the second quarter.

Craig Morton, Denver's ineffective starting quarterback, was relieved in the second quarter by Norris Weese, who directed a touchdown drive that closed the gap to 19-10 by halftime.

After a scoreless third quarter, Bradshaw put the game away on a 45-yard touchdown pass to Stallworth, who made a leaping catch at the end of the end zone, and one series later, Bradshaw found Lynn Swann at the goal line on a 38-yard touchdown toss.

In the first half, Harris rushed for 57 yards on 14 carries, while Bradshaw hit 10 of 18 passes for 120 yards. His 22-yard pass play to Stallworth early in the second quarter set up Harris' sweep for a touchdown.

Stallworth's 10 receptions were a record for the NFL playoffs. The mark excludes the AFC and NFC championship games and the Super Bowl.

Stallworth's receptions netted 156 yards.

Weese got the Broncos moving on their first drive of the third quarter.

He opened with a 24-yard pass completion to tight end Riley Odoms and later added a 10-yard run after winding up with the ball on a flea-flicker play.

The march stalled at the Steelers' 14-yard line, and Jim Turner's 29-yard field goal attempt was blocked by Steelers' defensive tackle Joe Greene.

"The block was a big point in the game," said Denver Coach Red Miller. "I thought we could still come back. That made a big difference."

In the last quarter, Bradshaw led a 71-yard drive that ended with his 45-yard scoring toss to Stallworth.

The ensuing kickoff was fumbled by Denver's Rick Upchurch and recovered at the Broncos' 29-yard line by reserve Pittsburgh linebacker Dennis Winston.

A-G Girls; GC Take Titles

KINSTON — Greene Central's boys and Ayden-Grifton's girls claimed the championships in the Tri-County Holiday Classic held at Lenoir Community College.

The tournament wound up Friday with the championship games. Consolations were played on Thursday night.

Ayden-Grifton's girls took a 34-32 win over North Lenoir, while Greene Central also bested North Lenoir, 57-52.

In the girls' game, North Lenoir slipped out into a 10-6 lead after one period, and held to the lead with an 18-12 margin at the half.

Ayden-Grifton turned things around in the third period, however, outscoring the Lady Hawks, 14-6, to take a 26-24 lead. Both teams pushed through eight points in the final period, with Ayden-Grifton maintaining its lead throughout the period.

Marie Lewis led the A-G scoring with 12 points, while Cynthia Sherrod paced North Lenoir with 13.

In the boys' game, both teams matched points throughout the first period, which ended in a 16-16 tie. Greene Central then managed a one-point edge, 26-25, at intermission.

In the third period, the Rams were able to gain a little breathing room, moving into a 44-38 lead. North Lenoir out hit the Rams, 14-13, in the final period, but couldn't rally enough.

Calvin Super led the Rams with 20 points, while James Best added 18 and Gralyn Edwards had 13. Amos Pearcill had 19 to lead North Lenoir, with Johnny Wiggins adding 12 and Dexter Rouse, 10.

A-G's Aretha Cannon was named the tournament's Most Valuable Player among the girls, while Lewis joined her on the all-tournament team. Sara Taylor was selected from Greene Central.

Best was named the boys' MVP, with Edwards and Super also making the all-tournament team, along with Mike Hardy of Ayden-Grifton.

Need Grants May Have Votes At NCAA Meet

By DOUG TUCKER
AP Sports Writer

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association will elect a new president and secretary-treasurer, attempt to sort out the confusing Title IX guidelines and vote on 132 legislative proposals during its 73rd convention in San Francisco next week.

Athletic administrators will consider legislation that touches upon virtually every aspect of collegiate athletics, including enforcement, membership classification, recruiting and financial aid.

The most bitterly debated issue may be the Big 10 Conference's third attempt to limit scholarships in all sports other than football and basketball to tuition, fees and aid based on "need."

Broadly speaking, this means the assistance a school can grant an athlete will vary according to the financial condition of his family.

"This is going to be a real gut check," said one athletic official. "It may pass."

Another proposal certain to stir the emotions is one that would, in effect, outlaw exclusive athletic dormitories such as Oklahoma's football facility and the new basketball palace at Kentucky.

Expected to pass, this rule submitted by the NCAA Council would put special housing under the prohibited "extra benefits" category and force schools to open the facilities to non-athletes.

"The intent is to keep the construction of these dorms from escalating," said an NCAA official.

On the controversial subject of enforcement, delegates will vote on the longest single amendment in NCAA history, a 29-page proposal submitted by the University of Denver that would revamp the present enforcement program. Most observers expect this to be quickly discarded.

But serious attention will be given to six enforcement amendments sponsored by the NCAA Council. One of the most significant would halt the Committee on Infractions from being involved in investigations.

The College Football Association, the 60-odd major football powers minus the Big 10 and Pac-10, is hopeful of ramming through six key proposals the group voted to sponsor at its convention last June.

These include toughening academic standards for high school recruits, changing the maximum number of football coaches, rescinding the freshman redshirt rule and eliminating the disputed three-visit rule.

The restructuring of Division I football institutions, the hottest item at last year's convention, again will be at issue. For 10 years, the NCAA has tried unsuccessfully to separate the major football programs from the lesser ones.

Last year's plan backfired with the passage of the "Ivy League Amendment," which specified that any school which sponsors 12 sports could qualify for the newly created Division 1-A.

Tar Heels Rip Niagara

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Al Wood scored 32 points, shooting 14 of 21 from the field, to lead fifth-ranked North Carolina to a 121-69 romp over Niagara in the championship game of the Rochester University Basketball Classic Saturday night.

In the consolation game, Larry Lawrence scored 18 of his game-high 20 points in the second half, and sank the game-winning shot at the buzzer, to bring Dartmouth from a 12-point deficit to a 54-53 victory over Seton Hall.

Wood, who scored 20 points in North Carolina's win Friday over Dartmouth, was named most valuable player of the tournament. His 24 first-half points helped the Tar Heels pull away early to an easy victory.

North Carolina took a 23-8 lead with 13:30 left in the first half, and Niagara could only come as close as nine points. North Carolina opened it up to a 58-35 halftime margin with Wood scoring 10 of his points in the last 2½ minutes of the half.

Mike O'Koren had 22 points for North Carolina and was named to the all-tournament team, along with Niagara's Garry Jordan, high scorer for the Purple Eagles with 22 points.

In the consolation game, Seton Hall led 47-35 with 14:30 left in the game, but Lawrence hit three field goals along with one for guard Dan Panaggio to bring Dartmouth within four at the midway point in the half.

Lawrence scored the next seven Dartmouth points, but Seton Hall maintained a three-point lead with 52 seconds remaining. Dartmouth's Dave Broll cut the lead to one with a 20-footer with 37 seconds left.

Seton Hall's Dan Callandrillo had a chance to sew up the game from the foul line with 19 seconds left but missed. Dartmouth took the ball upcourt, and Lawrence hit from 8 feet to the left of the lane as the final buzzer sounded. The high scorer for Seton Hall was Howard MCNeil, with 17.

Last Straw...

Paul Bixler and Wes Fesler as its head coaches.

Hayes was to change the image dramatically, coaching for the longest tenure of anyone at Ohio State. A workaholic and masterful recruiter, he surrounded himself with able assistants and brought in some of the premier playing talent in the nation. It resulted in a 205-61-10 record, two national championships and 13 Big 10 titles or co-titles. He took 11 Buckeyes' squads to bowls including the last seven years in a row. Hayes' Bowl record was 5-6.

Hayes' last opportunitiy to win a national title was foiled when UCLA upset the Buckeyes 23-10 in the 1976 Rose Bowl and cost them the championship. Afterward, Hayes refused to talk to the media. But upon arrival in Columbus he said at the airport, "What else is there to say? We were out-coached, we were out-played and we got beat.

That was the last real opportunity Hayes had for a third national title, the one honor he wanted before leaving college coaching.

The native of Clifton, Ohio, once a versatile offensive lineman for Denison, was twice national Coach of the Year and the runner-up for that honor twice.

But in the end it was not the opposition — Hayes lost four of his last five bowls and went 7-4-1 in his final season — that did him in. He destroyed himself with his own, uncontrollable temper, the final chapter of his explosiveness coming before 72,011 in the Gator Bowl and millions more watching on national television.

command hitting nine straight points. Finally, he connected on a jumper for a 38-26 lead, and only a Maynor steal in the closing seconds of the half allowed the Pirates to trail by no more than ten, 38-28.

Thompson took over in the second half, and led the way as the Huskies pulled away again, this time to take a 17-point margin. McKay raised it to 14 at 48-34, and Thompson ran it to 50-35, a 15-point spread with nearly 13 minutes to go.

Thompson finished with 21 points, while McKay added 18 and Delagrange had 14.

The win left Connecticut with a 7-2 record, while the Pirates fell off to 4-6.

East Carolina will travel on to New Rochelle, N.Y., where the Pirates will face Iona and Jeff Ruland on Tuesday for an 8 p.m. game that will wind up the current road trip.

TAR HEEL HUNTERS should have good goose hunting throughout the second half of the split waterfowl season, according to biologists from the N. C. Wildlife Resources Commission.

"Goose hunting should be good this year," said George Smith, assistant chief of the Commission's Game Division. "The population of snow and Canada geese is healthy; and with cold weather up north, plenty should be pushed down into North Carolina."

The number of geese wintering in this state has increased steadily over the past five years, with the exception of last year, according to Smith. Last year, the number of geese wintering in N. C. was off by about 10 per cent. Biologists feel this was due to heavy mortality on the breeding grounds caused by bad weather and a high kill in some northern states. Smith feels that the population of geese is healthy, and that North Carolina will continue to host large flocks in coming winters.

"In 1972, mid-winter aerial surveys showed 36,400 Canada geese and 38,000 snow geese wintering in North Carolina," said Smith. "Last year, those same counts showed 55,500 Canada geese and 51,300 snow geese wintering here."

Part of the increase is due to a healthy, growing goose population. Some biologists estimate that the Canada goose population in the Atlantic Flyway has almost doubled in the last 10 years. Changes in land-use patterns have left more feed in fields, and farms have grown larger. Consequently, with more feed available, goose populations have increased.

The second half of the season on Canada geese opened on Dec. 6 and runs through Jan. 20. The season on snow and blue geese opened on Nov. 13 and also runs through Jan. 20. There is a daily bag limit of two Canada geese and two snow and blue geese. No more than four Canada geese and four snow and blue geese may be held in possession.

Neuse River Waterdogs Found

N. C. Wildlife Resources Commission fisheries biologists recently located the threatened Neuse River waterdog in an area where they had never been documented before. The discovery occurred on a fish sampling expedition in the upper reaches of the Trent River.

"Needless to say, we were very surprised to find the waterdogs," said Jimmy Davis, supervisor of the expedition. "At first I suspected the habitat where we found them was unique because we found so many, but now I believe they were there for breeding purposes."

Neuse River waterdogs are listed as being of "special concern" in North Carolina and are found only in the Neuse and Tar River systems. They are a true salamander, but are called "mudpuppy" in the South. According to literature, Indians thought these animals could bark and that's how they got their name.

Davis said the waterdogs were located on the Trent River in the Comfort area; and as far as he knows, this was the first time they have been found in the Trent. More than 30 of the animals were found and some were sent to the State Museum of Natural History.

"I firmly believe that, under normal water conditions, we wouldn't have found them. Extremely low water levels with 'no flow' conditions contributed to our find," Davis related.

Davis said very few people have seen the salamanders because they are mostly active at night. They feed on fishes, fish eggs, crayfish, aquatic insects, mollusks and other water life. The waterdogs are a rusty brown in color with four toes on each foot. They are strongly spotted with dark brown or bluish-black spots. A distinguishing characteristic is external gills.

According to Davis, the size of the gills reflects water conditions. Large gills indicate foul or warm water and small gills indicate cool, highly-oxygenated water. "This external gill characteristic has probably contributed to their decline because they are very susceptible to pollution," Davis said.

The rare find also might mean the salamanders are not in immediate danger of being a threatened species. However, Davis said this is conjecture on his part and added that there's no doubt their numbers have declined.

Davis thinks the future of these animals, as well as other aquatic species, is dark because of pollution and siltation. "The principal threat to waterdogs is the drainage of swamp lands and increased activities of man. These small animals are continuing to lose breeding grounds. One of the things that makes this country great is its wide variety of wildlife and we should never be content to give up on any species," Davis added.

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — East Carolina University built up an early 17-point lead over Manhattan, then hung on to claim a 74-71 win over the Jaspers Friday night in the first round of the Connecticut Mutual Classic in New Haven.

The Pirates won their way into the finals, where they will face hosting Connecticut, which beat Tulsa, 89-68, in the second game.

The contest was sparked by the return to form of Oliver Mack, who poured in 31 points in leading the Pirate effort. It also marked the first game played by transfer David Underwood, who performed well in scoring 14 points off the bench.

"This was our first road win, and I'm glad we'll be playing in the finals," Coach Larry Gillman said afterwards.

"Tonight we really wanted to win and it was very timely. This is the third tournament we've been in since I've been at East Carolina, and this is the first time we've won a tournament game, so it was great to win."

Manhattan was somewhat handicapped by the loss of its leading scorer to an ankle injury earlier in the season. Jo Jo Walters, averaging 25.6 points a game, did not even make the trip with the Jaspers.

"Manhattan always has a very gutty team. They never had a bad basketball team," Gillman added that he felt the Jaspers made up for losing Walters quite well.

The Pirates shook off the Jaspers near the midway mark in the first half, moving from a 12-12 tie with about 12 and a half minutes to go out to a 17-point bulge, 42-25 with 3:20 showing.

But Manhattan fought back, and the game became in doubt until Mack hit two baskets inside the final minute to move the Pirates out by six points, 74-68, before a three-point play at the horn closed the gap to three again.

"I thought we played extremely well in the first 13 or 14 minutes," Gillman said. "The story of the game was Oliver Mack. I think that is what you will see from him the rest of the year, and that will get us over the hump."

In contrast, losing coach Nrian Mahoney felt that the Jaspers didn't play well in the first half, but did in the second. "We've got to learn to play two halves," he said. "We've lost our last five games by a total of 18 points."

The Jaspers now stand 2-8 on the year, while the Pirates have climbed to 4-5.

East Carolina shot well in the game, hitting 52 per cent from the floor, while Manhattan made good on 46.3 per cent of its shots.

One of the big factors in the Manhattan comeback was the rebounding in the second half. The Pirates ended up with a 35-33 margin in loose balls, but Manhattan held an 18-10 edge in rebounding in the second half.

East Carolina went over five minutes before scoring from the floor, as the first four ECU points came at the line. After moving out to a 3-0 lead, the Pirates saw Manhattan come back to score six straight for a 6-3 margin.

The Pirates finally scored on a rebound shot by George Maynor, and Mack hit his first points to tie the score at 8-8. Mack and Maynor both hit again to put the Pirates back up, 12-10 with about 13 minutes left.

After Manhattan tied it up once more, Mack hit two more in a row, and the Pirates held a 16-12 lead, and were never caught again.

Over the next few minutes the Pirates steadily pulled away from the Jaspers, finally building a 42-25 lead on two free throws by Frank Hobson with 3:20 left. The two teams exchanged free throws once more, 44-27, before the Pirates went cold and didn't score again in the final 2:55 of the half.

Manhattan took advantage of that to storm back and cut the lead to 44-34 at halftime.

Their comeback continued in the second half, as they slowly nibbled away at the lead, cutting it to seven on several occasions, although the Pirates would move back out by more than ten.

With 2:37 left, the Pirates held a 69-61 lead, but a free throw by Karl Leuchau and two by Brinton Huggins cut the lead to five. After Mack missed a free-throw, Hector Baez scored on a drive, cutting the lead to 69-66. Maynor then missed at the line, but a 17-footer by the Jaspers fell off, and the Pirates got the ball to Mack who put it through off a drive with about 50 seconds to go, making it 71-66. Luechau scored a jumper, but Maynor hit from the line with 22 seconds left, and Mack added a stuff off a fast break with about five seconds left, for a 74-68 lead. Leuchau scored a three-pointer at the horn to cut it to the final three-point margin.

Besides Mack's 31 and Underwood's 14, Maynor added 13, Baez led Manhattan with 17, while Leuchau had 16 and Mike Bruno had 11.

Manhattan was to face Tulsa Saturday in the consolation game.

RESTRICTIVE RULES

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The injured basketball star, Bill Walton, doesn't think much of the college basketball rules. Walton was the 1977-78 MVP of the NBA while playing for the Portland Trail Blazers.

"The college rules restrict good players," Walton said. "The zone defenses hamper the good players. In college, the team with the best players doesn't always win."

Meeting Postponed

The Greenville Sports Club will not meet on Tuesday, as normally scheduled.

The meeting has been postponed until Wednesday, January 10, when University of South Carolina basketball coach Frank McGuire will be the speaker.

The meetings are held at the Ramada Inn with luncheon at 12 noon and the speaker at 12:30 p.m.

Upcoming speakers include new UNC Charlotte athletic director Clyde Walker on January 16, and new Duke University head football coach Red Wilson on February 6.

Montclair Rallies To Slip Past Lady Bucs

Nationally ranked Montclair State overcame a 29-point performance by East Carolina's Rosie Thompson to outlast the Pirates, 74-71, Friday night in Minges Coliseum.

The Squaws, third in the National Women's Tournament last winter, were forced to the limit by the Pirates, who led 67-65 with 3:53 to play. The visitors jumped to a 71-67 advantage with 2:03 to play and held on to boost their record to 4-3.

"It would have been a great Christmas present," East Carolina Coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "The score indicates how close this game really was. We are very proud of our girls tonight. They played one of the finest games we could expect. They knew what they had to do and they did it...almost perfectly. The stats show how well we played and how far we've come."

"Rose was off a bit and yet played a super game," she added. Thompson was 9-11 from the line and had nine rebounds to go with her 29 points.

"If Marcia Girven keeps on improving and getting stronger the way she has, we are going to be tough inside," added Andruzzi. The sophomore forward collected 14 rebounds and 19 points.

"It was Lydia Rountree's best game of the year at point guard. It was her ball handling and pressure defense that kept us going tonight."

The Pirates, with an aggressive man-to-man defense trailed 38-37 at the half against the taller Squaws, but despite gaining the lead several times in the second half could not maintain the advantage. Faulty free throw shooting betrayed the Pirates, who connected only on 13 of 22 attempts.

The Pirates shot 40.1 per cent from the floor as compared to 50 per cent for the Squaws.

Fans React

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Reaction to today's firing of Ohio State University football Coach Woody Hayes was swift — and predictable — in this city which dotes on the doings of the Buckeyes.

"A lot of people were upset," said John Bothe, sports reporter for WBNS radio, which broadcast a call-in show on reaction to the firing.

"A lot of people said he was completely right in punching out that guy," Bothe said of the scores of calls.

"But most are saying what he did was a disgrace to the university, that he should have retired a long time ago."

Hayes was dismissed after slugging a Clemson player during Friday night's 17-15 Ohio State loss to the Tigers in the Gator Bowl at Jacksonville, Fla.

Bothe said callers in general said they liked Hayes and what he did for Ohio State football, but that it was time for a change.

Knicks Top Kings

By ALEX SACHARE

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Cleamons and Bob McAdoo led a fourth-quarter New York surge that carried the Knicks to their third consecutive National Basketball Association victory, a 112-108 decision over the Kansas City Kings Saturday.

Cleamons scored 12 of his season-high 18 points in the final period, including the go-ahead basket that made it 95-94 with 5½ minutes to play, and two free throws that clinched the victory with eight seconds left.

MaAdoo, who again opened the game on the bench in Coach Red Holzman's revamped lineup, topped the Knicks with 29 points. He scored 11 in the fourth quarter, nine from the free throw line.

It was the fourth game in five days for the Kings and their second in 17 hours.

Clemson Wins Gator; Hayes Brawls

By F.T. MacFEELY
Associated Press Writer

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) The heroics of quarterback Steve Fuller keyed Clemson's 17-15 Gator Bowl victory, but postgame talk centered on the antics of Ohio State Coach Woody Hayes.

Several Clemson players said the fiery 66-year-old coach slugged nose guard Charlie Bauman as he was chased out of bounds after making a game-saving interception with about two minutes left.

Hayes wasn't available to give his version of the incident, which sent players from both sides swarming across the field. He sent defensive coordinator George Hill to meet the press.

Officials cleared the field after several minutes and assessed Ohio State a 15-yard penalty when Hayes charged onto the field waving his arms wildly and shouting.

But the game was decided by then. Bauman killed the comeback effort led by freshman quarterback Art Schlichter, who had taken the Buckeyes within field goal range at the Clemson 24.

Bauman's interception spoiled an otherwise brilliant performance by Schlichter. The freshman completed 16 of 20 passes for 205 yards and gained 70 yards rushing — including two touchdowns.

Fuller's mix of passes and scrambling runs led Clemson to a 17-9 lead after three quarters. He ran for 38 yards, completed 9 of 20 passes for 123 yards, and scored Clemson's first touchdown on a 4-yard run in the second quarter as the seventh-ranked Tigers capped an 11-1 season.

Linebacker Randy Scott joked, "Hey, this makes us No. 1 if Alabama beats Penn State. Doesn't it?".

Schlichter took Ohio State 88 yards to a touchdown with 8:11 left in the game, but he was stopped when he tried to run for the game-tying two-point conversion.

Placekickers Obed Ariri, who kicked a 47-yard field goal for Clemson, and Bob Atha, who had a 27-yarder for Ohio State, traded first-half field goals. An extra point kick by Vlade Janakievski after Ohio State's first touchdown was blocked by end Steve Gibbs.

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

The Philadelphia 76ers are riding a four-game winning streak that has kept them atop the National Basketball Asssociation's Atlantic Division, and Julius Erving is noticing some differences.

"The way we're playing now," Erving said, "we should be hard to overhaul. We're staying together."

One year ago, the Sixers were supposed to be the best team money could buy, but they never got it together.

"This was a satisfying game for us," Erving said after the 76ers downed Atlanta 113-107 Friday night. "Everybody gave a good effort. Everybody got involved."

Elsewhere in the NBA, Kansas City downed New Jersey 137-126, San Diego got by Detroit 111-107, Houston edged Milwaukee 106-103, Chicago defeated Denver 123-117, Los Angeles whipped Portland 18-95, Seattle clobbered Phoenix 119-9 and Golden State beat New Orleans 118-106.

Kings 137, Nets 126

Kansas City got more than half its offense from three players — Otis Birdsong, Bill Robinzine and Scott Wedman. Birdsong had a game-high 28 points, Robinzine 2 and Wedman 21 — accounting for 71 points among them. John Williamson scored 30 points for the Nets, who lost their fourth game in a row.

Clippers 111, Pistons 107

One of Philadelphia's castoffs — the ballhawking Free — scored 35 points as San Diego built a 22-point first-half lead and then had to rally in the final quarter to bet Detroit.

San Diego came back to tie the score 105-105 with 1:14 left, and Free scored 4 points to put San Diego ahead for good.

Rockets 106, Bucks 103

Mike Newlin's layup and free throw with two seconds left provided Houston with its final victory margin over Milwaukee, which led by 13 points midway in the fourth period.

Moses Malone scored 20 points for the Rockets, and Brian Winters led Milwaukee with 27.

Bulls 123, Nuggets 117

Chicago scored 10 straight points — all by Reggie Theus and Artis Gilmore — to crack open a tight game and give the Bulls their second victory over Denver in as many nights.

Mickey Johnson led the Bulls with 33 points. George McGinnis led Denver with 27 points, and Bobby Wilkerson added a season-high 26.

Lakers 118, Blazers 95

Los Angeles ended a 10-game losing streak, and led by 30 points, 112-82, with seven minutes left. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar led Los Angeles with 24 points, and Tom Owens paced Portland with 17.

Sonics 119, Suns 92

Dennis Johnson and John Johnson teamed up on a 10-point Seattle run that erased a 1-point Phoenix lead and enabled the Supersonics to retake the Pacific Division lead by one-half game over the Suns.

Dennis Johnson had 26 points, 17 in the second half, and John Johnson added 21. Reserve Mike Bratz led the Suns with 15 points.

Warriors 118, Jazz 106

Phil Smith scored 27 points, 14 of them in the third period, and Robert Parish added 26 to pace Golden State. Smith helped lead the Warriors to an 87-67 lead with 2:31 left in the third quarter.

Leonard Robinson led New Orleans with 38 points.

Ohio State Rallies From 17 Down To Hand Duke First Defeat

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The Ohio State Buckeyes took a while to get their act together. Then it was curtains for the Duke Blue Devils.

Down by 17 points to the nation's top-ranked college basketball team as late as six minutes into the second half, Ohio State staged a spectacular comeback to beat mighty Duke 90-84 in an overtime thriller in the Holiday Festival Tournament Friday night.

"We might have been nervous in the first half, but we sure settled down after that," said Ohio State Coach Eldon Miller. "College basketball is a game of spurts — and we just spurted at the right time."

Ohio State's shocking upset preceded Rutgers' 72-61 beating of St. John's in the second game and set up an unlikely pairing in tonight's championship game at Madison Square Garden. Duke, quite naturally, was favored to win the title but now will play in the consolation game against the Redmen.

"It's going to be hard getting up for the finals after beating Duke," said Kelvin Ransey, Ohio State's high scorer Friday night with 26 points. "There's a natural letdown."

The second game was not nearly as exciting as the first. Rutgers and St. John's were close only until James Bailey took charge for the Scarlet Knights midway through the second half.

Elsewhere, Gregory Kelser scored 19 points as fourth-ranked Michigan State took a 65-57 victory over Oregon State in the semifinals of the Far West Classic in Portland, Ore. The Spartans will play in tonight's championship game against Indiana, a 68-60 victor over Oregon behind Mike Woodson's 36 points in the other semifinal game.

Fifth-ranked North Carolina was one of the winners in the Rochester (N.Y.) Classic, beating Dartmouth 86-67 as Al Wood scored 20 points. Gary Jordan's 34 points and 22 rebounds led Niagara to an 83-73 double-overtime victory over Seton Hall in the night's other game.

Ray White's 24 points led Mississippi State to an 80-73 decision over 10th-ranked Louisville in the finals of the Holiday Classic in Louisville, Ky.

Earl Evans scored 29 points and pulled down 10 rebounds to lead 14th-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas to a 103-73 victory over Loyola of Los Angeles and send the Runnin' Rebels into the finals of the Las Vegas Holiday Classic. The Rebels will face Temple, which earlier beat Baylor 81-70 as Bruce Harrold scored 19 points.

Sam Worthen scored 18 points to pace 16th-ranked Marquette to an 84-67 decision over North Texas State in the semifinals of the Milwaukee Classic. North Carolina-Charlotte won the other game, beating St. Bonaventure 74-61 as Chad Kinch scored 29 points.

Texas A&M, the nation's No. 12 team, defeated Air Force 73-66 and Vermont stopped Cornell 74-67 in the opening round of the Vermont Classic at Burlington.

Darnell Valentine scored 25 points to pace 18th-ranked Kansas over Oklahoma 86-75 and Colorado beat Nebraska 74-61 behind Emmett Lewis' 31 points in the semifinals of the Big Eight Tournament in Kansas City, Mo.

In other action, Alabama beat Virginia 71-69 in the finals of the Sugar Bowl Tournament in New Orleans. American University won the Tangerine Bowl tourney, beating Central Florida 85-83.

Georgia Tech upset Brigham Young 83-81 and Minnesota stopped Houston 80-67 in the semifinals of the Pillsbury Classic in Bloomington, Minn.; New Mexico State beat Santa Clara 93-86 and Weber State trimmed Oklahoma City 89-74 in the All-College tourney in Oklahoma City.

Idaho State beat Miami of Ohio 82-76 and New Mexico topped Davison 92-77 in the opening round of the Lobo Invitational in Albuquerque, N.M.; Iowa beat Penn 87-84 and Stanford edged San Diego State 85-84 in the Cabrillo Classic in San Diego; Evansville beat Arkansas State 52-50 and Central Michigan beat Navy 78-70 in the opening of the Evansville Holiday Tournament.

Purdue beat Arizona State 92-87 in overtime and in the semifinals of the Rainbow Classic in Honolulu. Iona topped Northeastern University 103-88 and St. Mary's of California whipped the University of Baltimore 72-57 in the Manufacturer's Hanover Classic in New Rochelle, N.Y.

Lafayette beat Buffalo 81-49 and Drexel stopped Florida Southern 78-66 in the Lafayette Invitational; Portland beat Cal State-Fullerton 101-85 and Montana tripped La Salle 91-78 in the KOA Classic in Billings, Mont., and Villanova defeated Toledo 55-50 and Bowling Green beat St. Louis 86-76 in the Toledo Glass City Classic.

In other action, No. 7 LSU beat Colgate 100-73; No. 9 North Carolina State whipped Penn State 80-58 and 19th-ranked Syracuse stopped Illinois State 82-72.

Emotion Plays A Large Role

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

The emotion of pro football gets a severe test on two fronts Sunday when the National Football League playoffs continue with a pair of games.

Houston, wild card winner in the American Football Conference, faces New England, the AFC East Division champion, in a game that could be the professional coaching farewell for the Patriots' Chuck Fairbanks.

In Saturday's playoff games, Atlanta played at Dallas in the NFC and Denver visited Pittsburgh in the AFC.

Fairbanks was missing in action during the Patriots' final regular season game, suspended by New England after accepting the head coaching job at the University of Colorado. He later returned to the club, agreeing to stay through the playoffs in what is essentially a lame duck role.

Vikes Third In Tourney

MOREHEAD CITY — D.H. Conley's wrestling Vikings finishing third in the West Carteret Invitational Tournament, despite sending six men to the finals.

"We just didn't do a good job in the finals," Coach Mike Waller said. "Maybe I did a poor job of motivating them. I just don't know."

Conley only took eight wrestlers to the tournament, and one of them failed to make weight. Of the remaining seven, the Vikings took only one first place, five seconds, and one fourth.

Cape Fear took first place overall with 143½ points, while West Carteret was second with 140½. Conley finished third with 113½, followed by White Oak with 98½. Washington was fifth with 79, followed by Durham Jordan with 55, Camp Lejeune with 26 and East Carteret with 24½.

Greg Toler lost, 4-3, to Alfred of Cape Fear, in the finals of the 98-pound class, while Donald Hardy lost to Washington's Brown, 8-5, in the 119-pound finals.

Alexander Crandall took fourth place at 126.

Conley returns to action on January 10, playing host to North Pitt.

Virginia, Duke Only Losers In ACC

By The Associated Press

Top-ranked Duke was 30 seconds away from an unblemished record Friday night until Ohio State center Kelvin Ransey scored a field goal, deadlocking at 76-76 the opening round of the Holiday Festival Basketball Tournament in New York.

The Buckeyes, no longer intimidated by Duke, reeled off 10 straight points in overtime and went on to clinch the game 90-84.

"We were oblivious to the scoreboard," said Ohio State Coach Eldon Miller. "Maybe we were nervous in the first half about playing the nation's No. 1 team or playing in Madison Square Garden because we were apparently pressing. But we've been in pressure situations before and come back."

Other games involving Atlantic Coast Conference teams ended on a happier note as fifth-ranked North Carolina easily disposed of Dartmouth 86-67 in the first round of the Rochester University Tournament.

Ninth-ranked N.C. State whipped Penn State 80-58, Maryland turned back St. Joseph's of Philadelphia 62-56 in overtime in the first round of the Terps' Maryland Invitational Tournament and Clemson defeated Texas Tech 58-57 for the Sun Bowl championship.

Virginia, however, fell to Alabama 71-69 in the nightcap of the Sugar Bowl Tournament.

Duke, suffering its first loss in seven starts, led by as many as 17 points in the second half before the Buckeyes, now 5-3, mounted a rally behind Ransey. Herb Williams, who scored 23 points, got 17 of those points in the second half.

But the Blue Devils appeared to have the game under control at the outset of the final period as Jim Spanarkel's 30 points helped Duke to a 55-38 lead with 14 minutes remaining in regulation.

NORTH CAROLINA 86, DARTMOUTH 67

North Carolina cruised to its seventh win in eight starts with Al Wood scoring 12 of his 20 points in the first four minutes of the second half. Wood's scoring keyed a Tar Heel spurt of 17 points as North Carolina jumped out front 49-26 with 16 minutes left to play.

Dartmouth managed to cut the deficit to 13 points midway through the final period, but Pete Budko scored a field goal and Wood hit a field goal and a free throw to extend the North Carolina margin to 60-42.

N.C. STATE 80, PENN STATE 58

N.C. State Coach Norm Sloan said the win over Penn State was especially gratifying because it followed a loss to Maryland last week.

"A loss lies there in the pit of your stomach and you're anxious to play again," Sloan said. "We've been working awfully hard and maybe it showed."

Charles "Hawkeye" Whitney scored 20 points in leading the Wolfpack to the win over the Nittany Lions, who were paced by Mike Edelman's 11 points.

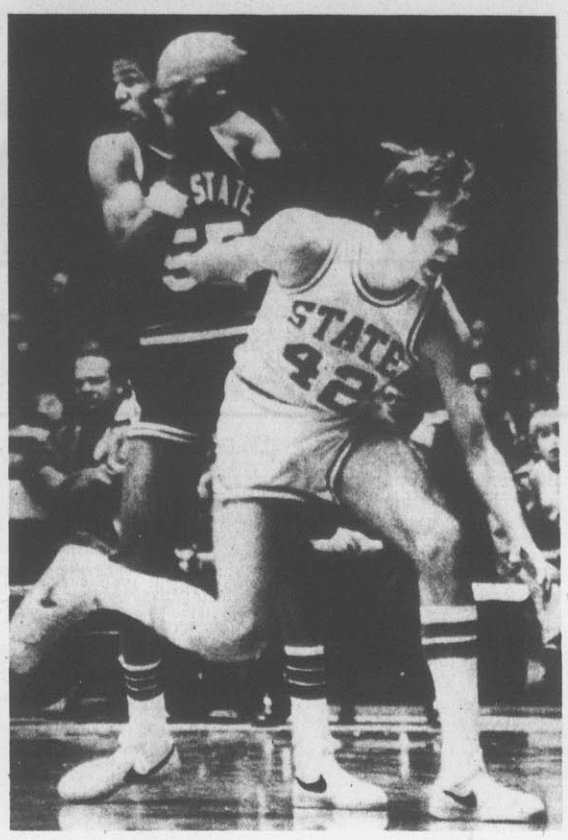
MARYLAND 62, ST. JOSEPH'S 56

In another game that was forced into overtime, Maryland's Albert King scored on a shot at the buzzer and fired in 27 points to pace the Terps to their eighth win in 10 starts.

St. Joseph's, which fell to 5-4, rallied from a 48-42 deficit in the final 3:44 of regulation time and took a 52-48 lead after substitute guard Jeffery Clark sank six consecutive field goals in bonus situations.



Attempted Theft

But Ernie Graham went to work for Maryland to enable King to tie the game 52-52 at the end of regulation.

ALABAMA 71, VIRGINIA 69

Reggie King scored 18 points and got a clutch last-minute steal to lead the Crimson Tide to a narrow win over Virgina in the Sugar Bowl Tournament.

The Cavaliers got a 40-point scoring effort from Jeff Lamp, the ACC's leading individual scorer. Lamp scored 13 points in the first eight minutes of the second half and tied the score at 47-47 before Alabama moved ahead.

Lamp was named named the tournament's most valuable player.

CLEMSON 58, TEXAS TECH 57

A 30-foot jumper by Derrick Johnson in the final four seconds of the game gave Clemson the one-point victory over Texas Tech and the Sun Bowl championship. It was a come-from-behind victory since Johnson's winning shot came 50 seconds after a Joe Baxter jumper put Tech ahead at 57-56.

The Red Raiders stormed to a 40-28 halftime lead and sported a 53-44 lead with seven minutes remaining before a jump shot by Bill Ross and a field goal and two free throws by Larry Nance closed the gap to 53-50 at the four-minute mark.

Nance led Clemson with 16 points while Billy Williams added 10.

Opening Play Turned Into Big One As Gray Takes 29-24 Win

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — The big play in Friday's 41st annual Blue Gray Football Classic wasn't a touchdown pass or a long run. It was a surprise kick that came on the first play of the game.

Gray kicker Russ Henderson of Virginia caught the Blue team and 13,000 fans off guard when he booted an onside kick to open the game, bouncing it into the hands of a teammate, Tim Tucker of Troy State University.

Just over two minutes later, the South all-stars had a 7-0 lead and were on their way to a 28-24 triumph over the North all-stars in the 41st annual charity classic.

"I've never heard of an onside kick on the opening kickoff," said Gray associate coach Vince Gibson of Louisville. "But the Blue-Gray game is supposed to be fun, wide-open and unpredictable and we thought we might surprise the Blue."

Gibson said the onside kick "fired up our kids," enabling the Gray team to race to a 21-0 lead before the Blue squad began making a comeback.

But once the Northern stars got untracked, they pounded the Gray team with 24 unanswered points to take the lead in the fourth quarter before the South staged its own comeback to score the winning touchdown.

Blue quarterback Ed Smith of Michigan State won the game's most valuable player award by sparking his teammates as they fought to overcome the huge initial advantage built by the Southern stars.

Smith hit John Spagnola of Yale with a 12-yard scoring pass in the second quarter to cut the Gray lead to 21-7 at the half. And for the game, the Michigan State standout was the leading passer, hitting 12 of 19 attempts for 129 yards and only one interception.

On the Gray side of the field, quarterback Mike Dunn of Duke scored one touchdown and passed for another. And it was Dunn's 43-yard pass to Chris Hill of Kentucky in the fourth quarter that set up Hill's one-yard plunge for the winning touchdon.

"It was an exciting, well played game," said Blue coach Joe Yukica of Dartmouth. "The onside kick at the beginning really hurt us. I was happy though with the way we fought back, after being down 21-0, to take the lead 24-21. After they regained the lead, we had another drive going before we were stopped by a fumble."

Besides the onside kick, Gibson said gave much of the credit for the South victory to his team's defense. "I though the difference in the game was the South's defensive line stopping the run all day," he said.

The Blue team totaled only 32 yards on the ground for the game, primarily because of the efforts of Tucker, who had 13 tackles, and Don Smith of Miami and Stoney Parker of Southern Miss, who each finished with seven individual tackles.

East Carolina's Gerald Hall played most of the game at the free safety position for the winning Gray team, and also was one of the deep men on punts, but never got the opportunity to run back a kick.

Roanoke Wins Its Tourney

ROBERSONVILLE — Hosting Roanoke captured the championship in the boys' division of the Roanoke Holiday Tournament Friday night, downing Jamesville, 66-50.

Williamston took the girls' championship, 68-38, while Williamston topped Bear Grass, 65-48 for the boys' consolation.

Roanoke jumped out into a 17-14 lead in the first period of its game, and never lost the team. They shut off the Bullets in the second period, 18-45, and rolled up a 35-19 margin by the end of the half.

In the third period, the Redskins continued to pull away, building its lead to 54-34. Jamesville had a modest 16-12 comeback in the final period.

Jasper Martin led Roanoke with 20 points, while Edward Ward added 18. Tommy DiNardo had 21 and Trent Ange had 14 for Jamesville.

Rock n' Roll Palace Farewell

By DAVID N. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Winterland, the ice rink turned rock 'n' roll palace, is closing, going out in style with an allnight New Year's Eve Grateful Dead concert designed to bring tears to the eyes of aging rock fans everywhere.

San Francisco's last link to the turbulent music of the rebellious 1960s has fallen victim to the stardom it helped bring that decade's musical rebels.

"If we just kept selling tickets, at first I thought we could sell maybe 300,000 tickets," said rock impresario Bill Graham, promoter of the Grateful Dead show. "Now, as crazy as it sounds, I would venture to say we could sell half a million tickets."

Unfortunately for those who would pay the $30 price to be at the farewell fling — which will include catered breakfast at dawn — the building holds only 5,400, tiny by current rock concert standards.

The lucky handful got their tickets in a giant, citywide lottery. The unlucky must be content to watch the local public television station which will broadcast the event live after midnight.

"The only other way we could have done it was by mail and we didn't have two months to do that," Graham said in explaining the method in the distribution madness. "And besides, what would we have done with 100,000 pieces of mail?"

It's been 12 years since Graham put on his first show at Winterland, a block-long white hulk in the middle of the city's predominantly black Fillmore district.

Then, as now, the place was nothing to look at. The outside badly needs paint, the inside is dark and dank. There are horribly uncomfortable seats along the sides and balcony for those not standing or sitting on the floor of the old home of the Ice Follies.

But, oh, if the walls could talk. For they heard the music which greeted America. Janis Joplin. Jimi Hendrix. Jim Morrison. Jefferson Airplane. Moby Grape. The Grateful Dead.

In its heyday, Winterland was a larger companion to the fabled Fillmore West, two blocks away. Acts would play Fillmore during the week and Winterland on weekends because it was so much bigger.

The Fillmore closed in 1971 but Graham kept Winterland going as his last outpost in the city, even though it now was thought of as a small hall, a fact which finally led to its demise.

"Closing the facility is something we have put off for a long time," Graham said. "There have been problems in the neighborhood. If I lived across the street from Winterland, it would bother me to hear 5,000 people coming out of a Dead show. But even if the problems didn't exist, the economics of the building just don't allow it anymore.

"In the '60s and early '70s, certain cities — San Francisco was one — built special relationships with certain acts which played the smaller halls. As the years passed, those places closed for the same reason Winterland is closing — major groups could make a lot more money playing in arenas many times larger and didn't want to support them.

"The Fillmore and Winterland lasted a little longer than the others, maybe because we are more mad than others to try to convince people to come in here. But it got to a point you can only ask so much. You have to accept reality."

Graham kept renewing his lease on Winterland in part as a showcase for the Dead, a band whose fans — called Dead Heads — are so loyal "they come underwater, from Utah, backwards, to stand in line to see them play."

A normal Dead concert is often the stuff of which legends are made, but this final pagean to the hall figures to be something special, even outdoing a concert by The Band and friends at Winterland in 1976 — which was made into the movie "The Last Waltz."

For starters, the $30 ticket price may make it the most expensive, non-benefit rock concert ever. John Belushi and Dan Ackroyd of Saturday Night Live, as The Blue Brothers, are on the bill, along with New Riders of the Purple Sage. The Dead begin playing at midnight and run on until who knows when, with breakfast to follow.

Graham, who says he doesn't know what will happen to the building now, doesn't see anyone duplicating the Winterland's atmosphere.

"The event isn't social now," rock's most successful promoter says wistfully. "You will get the entertainment and the good feeling, but you are not really going to get the oneness carried out of the room like in the '60s.

"People will say 'Wasn't that a great show?' but they are not saying, 'We all want to end the war, we all want to purify our streets and to get honest government.' That doesn't exist anymore. We are all too busy with survival."

A Welcome Note Of Cheer As 1978 Draws To A Close

'79 Auto Tags Going On Sale January 1st

Motor vehicle validation stickers and license plates will go on sale in Greenville and Farmville Monday.

The two license agents in the county are Mrs. Anna Garris at Home and Auto Supply, 718 Dickinson Ave., Greenville and Mrs. Don Johnson at Johnson's Locksmith, 113 E. Wilson St., Farmville. The Johnson business has moved from Main Street to the Wilson St. address earlier this year.

Renewal cards for obtaining 1979 stickers and/or plates were mailed Dec. 18. Anyone who has not received a renewal card due him or her should notify the Division of Motor Vehicles in Raleigh by mail at 1100 New Bern Ave. or by phone, 733-3025.

Mrs. Garris and Mrs. Johnson will have applications at their offices, also.

Elbert L. Peters Jr., Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, said, "It will take from 10 days to two weeks to get a card and new plates or stickers must be displayed by midnight, Feb. 15."

Newcomers to North Carolina or those buying a car for the first time should make application for a license plate at the nearest local agency.

With the exception of some special classifications, 1979 auto licenses will be renewed with a validation sticker to be affixed to the upper right-hand corner of the current plate, over the 1978 sticker. Care should be taken to place the sticker exactly as instructed to prevent accidental removal.

Any newly acquired vehicle will be issued a plate and sticker, unless a plate is to be transferred.

The Greenville agency's hours are 8:30 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturdays.

The Farmville agency's hours are from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. Monday through Saturday.

Mrs. Garris said she strongly concurs with the advice of the state Motor Vehicle's slogan' "Get Yours Early." The rush time, she said, the time when there's a long line is the last week before the Feb. 15 deadline.

Solar Specialist To Speak Jan. 4

Donald R. Bowden, president of Solar Unlimited, Inc. of Huntsville, Ala., will speak at a coffee talk Thursday, Jan. 4, from 7:30-8:30 a.m. at the Holiday Inn Restaurant.

Co-sponsored by the Membership Services Committee of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce and the Solar Shop of Greenville, the talk will concern "Basic Information and Economics of Solar Heating and Cooling."

Bowden is the former manager of NASA's Solar Heating and Cooling Program. The program is to develop solar heating and cooling equipment for residential and commercial buildings in support of the ERDA National Solar Heating and Cooling Project.

During his position as manager, Bowden established a new project office, helped write the National Solar Heating and Cooling Program Plan in Washington, D. C. and initiated action that resulted in the award of contracts to over 70 companies to develop and demonstrate solar heating and cooling equipment.

Awards for outstanding leadership and managment excellence presented to Bowden in previous positions include: the NASA Distinguished Service medal for Bowden's leadership in the resolution of the Skylab solar array panel problems, and two Director's Commendation Awards.

According to David Nichols, Membership Services Committee chairman, persons may register to attend the coffee talk by contacting the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce Office, 752-4101.

A One-Man Anti-Litter Crusader

By STEVE NICHOL

FORTRESS ISLAND, Israeli-Occupied Sinai (AP) — Every day at 5 a.m. Avinoam Zube arrives here aboard one of his motorboats to become a oneman anti-litter force.

"I've sent letters to the government's archeological department but they can't do anything," said Zube, 49. "What can they do, post 10 or 25 policemen here?"

With the enthusiasm one might imagine the Crusaders had, defending it 800 years ago, Zube searches Fortress Island for tourist litter, picking up strewn papers, broken bottles and empty cigarette packs.

Zube, known to Bedouins and tourists as "Jackson," earns nothing for his efforts. He is a nature and archeology buff who tries to maintain cleanliness among the ruins of this historical island located 7 miles south of the Red Sea port of Eilat in the Gulf of Aqaba.

From sunrise to sundown Jackson runs a small business on the Sinai beach, giving tourists a 330-yard boat ride to and from the island for 20 Israeli pounds, approximately one U.S. dollar.

Some of the island's visitors come on day-cruises from Eilat to scuba dive, snorkel, sunbathe or stare across the deep blue waters of the Red Sea toward the red, rocky mountains of Jordan and Saudi Arabia.

The fortress, on an island 330 yards long and 160 yards wide, encompasses a mosque, an engraved cross and many rooms probably once used as barracks. Its tall granite walls, numerous crevices and lookout points provided strategic advantages in times of battle.

The crusaders used the island in the early part of the 12th century as a base from which they attacked Arab ships in the Red Sea. But in 1170, they lost the island to Saladin, the Moslem warrior and sultan of Egypt.

Other island conquerors included the Mamelukes, onetime slaves of Egypt who rose to rule that country and much of Asia Minor, and the Ottoman Empire.

Israel has ruled the island since the June 1967 war when it captured Egypt's Sinai Peninsula. Israel also controlled Fortress Island following the 1956 Sinai war, but after seven months' occupation it withdrew its Sinai forces and the island was returned to Egypt.

Jackson, born in Jerusalem, moved to Eilat in 1954 to take advantage of the hot Negev Desert climate for his injured right hand. Not long after his Eilat arrival he decided to see Fortress Island, even though it was then in enemy territory.

"I took the long road, through the mountains, to avoid being seen from the Egyptian lookout tower," says Jackson, whose bandanna and rugged, unshaven face give him the look of a pirate.

He liked what he saw from a distance and when Israel captured Sinai in 1956 Jackson rowed Eilat tourists to and from here.

But with Israel's withdrawal, Jackson did not visit the island until 1966 when twice he took the "long road," this time sneaking to the beach and swimming here.

After the 1967 war, Jackson returned to the island, claiming to be the first Israeli civilian in Sinai. Living alone in a straw beach house with Bedouins as his neighbors, Jackson rowed what few customers he had.

"When I came here there was no road. You could only come here by driving along the beach with four-wheel-drive cars or jeeps. It's been only a couple of years that there has been an asphalt road," Jackson recalls.

The initial trickle of visitors grew and after a few years of transporting Fortress Island tourists, Jackson saved enough money to buy his first motorboat. His business has continued to grow and today he has four motorboats, hired help and a restaurant with 10 tables.

County Schools Open Tuesday

The schools have been closed since Wednesday, Dec. 20, in observation of the Christmas and New Year's holidays.

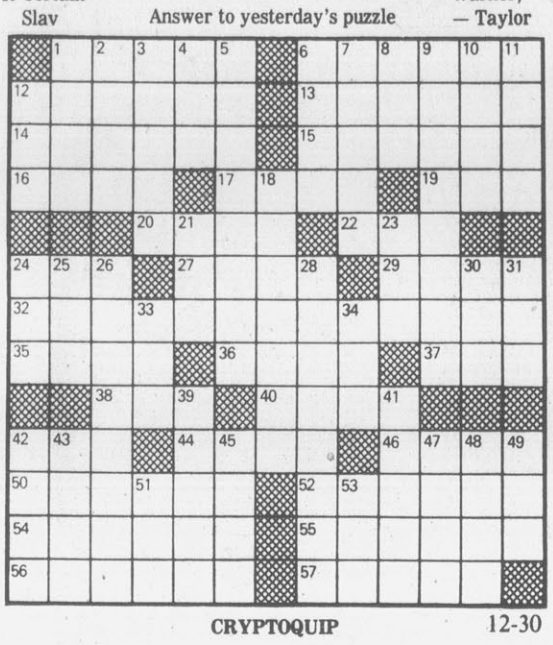
Answer to yesterday's puzzle



CRYPTOQUIP 12-30

V Y Z W C V L S C K N V Y S L A H J L L Z Y W A J L R R K D R R L K C N D C H D D C

Today's Cryptoquip clue: Z equals P

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

North Carolina 1978 News Highlights

By GLENN STEPHENS
Associated Press Writer

The General Assembly's dramatic turn-around and decision to enact a local-option liquor-by-the-drink bill is the overwhelming choice among editors in North Carolina as the state's top news story in 1978.

Ranked second behind liquor by the drink by editors and broadcasters participating in a poll by The Associated Press was the dumping of toxic PCBs along about 200 miles of North Carolina highways.

All but four of 20 participants in the poll selected approval of the mixed-drink bill as the leading story of the year. The state House first rejected the local-option measure, then reversed itself and narrowly approved the measure, which had been approved by the Senate in 1977.

Two first-place votes went to the PCB spills, one went to local approval of mixed-drink sales in several areas and the other went to state Insurance Commissioner John Ingram's upset victory over former Charlotte banker Luther Hodges Jr. in the Democratic U.S. Senate primary.

Gov. Jim Hunt's decision to reduce the sentences of the Wilmington 10, and his announcement on a statewide television network, was the No. 3 story in the poll, with the University of North Carolina's long-running feud with the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare over desegregation of the state's 16 university campuses placing fourth.

Ingram's defeat of Hodges was picked fifth and the confrontation between church-operated schools and the state over regulation of Christian schools was sixth. Sen. Jesse Helms' successful $7 million re-election campaign against Ingram was the No. 7 choice.

The birth of Siamese twins to a Wake County couple and the subsequent death of the infants despite efforts by doctors at the Duke Medical Center to save them placed eighth in the poll, with the No. 9 position going to approval of mixed-drink sales by voters in Mecklenburg and Orange counties and the towns of Sanford, Louisburg and Southern Pines. The General Assembly's approval of a state budget including funds for construction of a veterinary school and legislative office building was 10th.

Participants in the poll voted on the basis of 10 points for first place, nine for second, eight for third, etc.

Liquor by the drink got 168 points, PCBs 151, Hunt's Wilmington 10 decision 109, the UNC-HEW squabble 99 and the Ingram-Hodges race 84. The Christian schools dispute got 76 points, Helms' victory 72, the Siamese twins 62, local approval of mixed-drink sales 41 and the state budget 35.

Others stories and the number of votes they received were Southern Bell Telephone Co.'s guilty plea to a charge involving operation of an illegal political fund the acquittal of former Bell executive John Ryan on embezzlement charges, 34; the Justice Department's intervention into the Wilmington 10 case on the side of the defendants, 32; the slaying of Dr. Archie T. Johnson Jr. of Raleigh and the acquittal of his wife, Betty Lou, on a first-degree murder charge, 30; the explosion of a homemade bomb in a Cary lawyer's office, killing two people, 22.

Also, the extradition of Joan Little from New York to Raleigh, 19; President Carter's visits to Wilson and Asheville, 14; the conviction of Velma Barfield on a murder charge stemming from the arsenic poisoning of her fiance and Hunt's proposal of a state income tax rebate, 13 each; the PTL television network's financial difficulties and pleas for contributions, 10; the murder trial of Daniel Webster, who asked for the death penalty and committed suicide in prison after being sentenced to the gas chamber, 9; an oil explosion and fire that briefly threatened the town of Hertford, 6; and a drought that created hazardous condition in the western part of the state, 1.

Community Center Of Grifton Opens Tuesday

GRIFTON — Grifton's Community Center will open Tuesday, Jan. 2, according to center director Etta Harrell.

"The Friendship Club," as it is temporarily called, will be open each weekday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. as a social and information and referral center for senior citizens in the Grifton area.

The center will serve as a contact point between senior citizens, the Town of Grifton, the Council on Aging and service agencies in Pitt County.

The center is located near the Grifton Historical Museum, in Room II of the Civic Center, Creekshore Dr. The phone number is 524-5072.

An open house will be held Sunday, Jan. 7, from 2-4 p.m. Grifton Mayor Dave Bosley will cut the ribbon, officially opening the center. Jeff McAllister, director of Pitt County's Council on Aging, will be the featured speaker.

Mrs. Harrell is employed by the Town of Grifton. Her salary will be paid by the Pitt County Senior Community Service Project, a federal grant administered by the Council on Aging with ten percent matching funds appropriated by the Pitt County Commissioners.

The Grifton Center is the first activity in Pitt County designed solely to serve the senior citizens in a small county community.

PTI Class Meets Set

All persons are urged to attend the first class meeting of their selected courses. For more information about these classes, call the PTI office of Continuing Education, 756-3130, extensions 238 or 266.

Act Quickly In Eye Injuries

NEW YORK (UPI) — What should you do when your child is hit in the eye with a ball?

Alfonse A. Cinotti, M.D., president of the American Association of Ophthalmology, advises taking him or her to the nearest hospital emergency room immediately.

"Don't put anything on or in the eye unless there is profuse bleeding," Cinotti says. "Then cover the injured eye with a sterile pad and proceed to the emergency room. Never use any kind of ointment on an eye injury."

Inflation Worst, Employment Best During 1978

By KRISTIN GOFF
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Economic developments in 1978 left their mark on all of us during the year, in nickels and dimes more for grocery items and gasoline; in more jobs from expanding businesses and, for a few, fortunes won and lost in roller-coaster rides of the stock market, the dollar and the price of gold.

Inflation was at its worst in four years but employment was at its best. And the combination of high prices and more people working produced some surprising developments.

INFLATION: In the broadest sense, it cost about $1.08 to buy at the end of the year what a dollar could buy in January. Inflation was the culprit, and it hit with a surprising vengeance.

The 8 to 9 percent increase in consumer prices in 1978 was the worst price performance in four years and prompted the Carter administration to impose a wage and price program designed to bring inflation down next year. To do that, he issued voluntary guidelines designed in general to limit wages increases to 7 percent and average price increases to 5.75 percent.

INTEREST RATES: In another move to fight inflation, the Federal Reserve, which oversees the banking industry, put the squeeze on the nation's money supply to cool demand for credit and cash. The prime rate, a basic corporate loan rate that is watched as an indicator of general rate trends, rose to a near-record 11¾ percent at the end of the year from 7¾ percent Jan. 1.

HOUSING: The average price of a new home rose almost $7,000 over the year and the cost of a mortgage reached its highest level since the 1974-75 recession.

On a national average, the mortgage rate was close to 10 percent at year's end, up from 9.15 percent in January. The cost of a new home rose from $58,000 in January to almost $65,000 at the end of the year, according to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Despite that, about 2 million new homes were built and 4 million more existing homes were resold to new owners.

ENERGY: Prices of gasoline and home heating oil rose, particularly near the end of the year when unusually high demand caused shortages of some products. The price of gasoline, about 62 cents a gallon at the beginning of the year, rose to about 68 cents a gallon by year's end. The price of heating oil also rose, from 50 cents a gallon to 55 cents.

And further price increases are on the way. The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' decision to raise crude oil prices 14.5 percent by the end of 1979 will push gasoline price up by at least 4 cents a gallon; changes in pricing regulations desired by the Energy Department could double that increase.

JOBS: Employment provided one of the economic bright spots in 1978. The unemployment rate of less 6 percent near the end of the year was down from 6.4 percent at the end of last year and represents a four-year low in joblessness. That was accomplished at the same time more than 3 million additional workers were absorbed through new jobs, swelling the nation's workforce to close to 100 million people.

DOLLAR: The fall of the dollar on international currency markets was part of the inflation picture that had farreaching impacts on the domestic economy. While people traveling abroad felt the effects most directly, it also meant price increases for imported products. For instance, an imported Japanese Toyota, which cost $3,048 a year ago, now costs about $3,748 — 23 percent more. And domestic producers of all types of products were under less pressure to keep their prices low when competition from imports increased.

GOLD: Investments in gold, which had been fairly rare in the United States, increased in 1978 as the price of the precious metal skyrocketed in see-saw fashion with the sinking dollar. At its highest, the price of gold hit $245.25 an ounce on the London market Oct. 30. It had been trading at around $176 an ounce last January. In the last trading day of this year, gold was back below its record levels, closing in London at $225.62 an ounce.

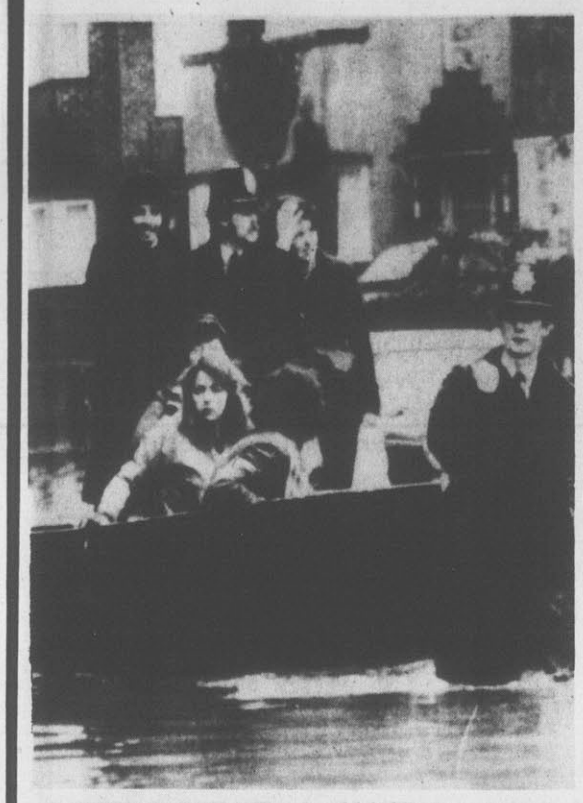
The most popular type of gold coin, the one-ounce South African krugerrand, sold a record 6 million worldwide in 1978, and it is estimated that about half of them, worth roughly $500 million, went to U.S. buyers.

STOCK MARKET: The stock market had a roller-coaster year that in the end showed only a modest change reflected in its most popular average.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks closed out 1978 at 805.01, a 3.15 percent drop from 831.17 on the last trading day of 1977.

But stocks were battered again in a steep two-week slide that Wall Streeters came to call the October Massacre. Investors lost a total of more than $100 billion before stocks began their slow climb back.

MERGERS: The relatively cheap value of stocks and the high cost of starting up new businesses combined to keep corporate takeovers popular. National Airlines, one of the key airlines to Florida and the South, became a prime target. At year's end National had merger bids from Pan American World Airways, Eastern Airlines and Texas International Airlines. All were seeking government approval to proceed with competing takeover plans.



FLOODING IN ENGLAND — Local inhabitants are rescued from their homes in York, England Friday as floods swept through over five hundred homes. There is flooding in villages across northern England. Rivers have burst their banks and dozens of major roads are impassable, police report. (AP Laserphoto)

RETURNS TO TAIWAN — Taiwanese Ambassador James Shen, right, says good-by to supporters and friends Friday night at Dulles Airport as he prepares to depart the United States for Taiwan. Shen ended a seven-year stay here, saying he was sad but not bitter over the U.S. decision to turn its back on the once-proud alliance between the two countries. (AP Laserphoto)

3 Bond Issues For Ayden Voters

by REBECCA BUFFALOE
Reflector Staff Writer

AYDEN — Ayden citizens will go to the polls Tuesday, Jan. 9, to vote on three separate bond referendums totaling $2,494,893.

Information concerning the electric, water and sewer bonds has been presented in several informational meetings through the Ayden Town Board of Commissioners.

The Ayden Chamber of Commerce has sponsored the distribution of leaflets explaining the need for each bond.

Voting will be held at the Ayden Community Building, monitored by the Ayden Municipal Board of Elections. All registered voters living within the corporate limits of the town will be eligible to vote, with no special registration required for the referendum.

However, those who have not previously registered for a town election will not be able to vote. Deadline for registration was Dec. 8.

ELECTRIC BOND REFERENDUM

The electric bond, which totals $1,565,000, will cover three essential items to allow the Town of Ayden to purchase wholesale electric power from Carolina Power and Light Company instead of the Greenville Utilities Commmission.

The town has purchased power from the GUC for many years, with electricity coming from a single point of delivery from the north side of town and one substation.

With the growth of the town and the demand for larger blocks of electricity, the existing system has been strained.

Also, the cost of purchasing wholesale electricity from the GUC, which in turn purchases its electricity from the Virginia Electric Power Company, has risen.

In June, 1977, the Ayden Town Board of Commissioners began to investigate the probability of having wholesale electricity from Carolina Power and Light.

After two separate studies conducted by the engineering firm of L. E. Wooten and Company, Raleigh completed in September, 1977 and August, 1978, a letter of intent was exchanged between the town and Carolina Power and Light, with the company agreeing to provide services contingent upon the passage of the bond issue Jan. 9.

Three basic items will have to be constructed in order for the Town to receive wholesale power from Carolina Power and Light.

Six miles of transmission line, estimated at $370, 000, a new 20 megawatt substation valued at about $570,000 and new distribution lines estimated at $275,000 will be needed to carry out the proposed project. Some $350,000 has been allotted for miscellaneous purposes, such as right of way, engineering fees and capitalized interest.

According to Mike Finney, Ayden Utilities Director, transmission lines will come from the south side of Grifton, hooking up with a 115 KV transmission line from Carolina Power and Light.

Lines will come down the Highway 11 bypass seven miles, ending at property behind the USI Plant, property which the Town already has an option to buy.

The substation, located on this property, will span four acres and will be totally town-owned.

If the bond referendum passes, work will begin immediately, with first signs of construction hopefully in March. The switchover date to Carolina Power and Light will be sometime in 1980, with the town serviced by the GUC until that point.

"The Greenville Utilities Commission is not hindering us," said Finney. "We've always had a good working relationship. We've helped each other at times and they've given us their blessings, so to speak."

Two benefits will come from the passage of the bond referendum and the proposed switchover to Carolina Power and Light. First, the town will be fully represented at the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission in all requests for wholesale rate increases which might be made by Carolina Power and Light.

Since Ayden has been purchasing power from the GUC, the Commission simply informs Ayden when VEPCO changes the electric rates.

Also, in a few years, Ayden will hopefully be able to receive its share of the franchise tax received from the sale of electricity from its system, instead of the amount going to the City of Greenville as it now does.

The town should expect to receive a reduction of approximately six percent in its base rate charged to retail customers if supplied electricity by Carolina Power and Light.

No tax increase will be needed to retire the bonds, according to city officials. Electric revenues will pay off the debt.

Application has also been made with the Farmers Home Administration to purchase the bonds at a five percent interest rate if the bond issue is successful.

It has been proposed that only one additional employee will be needed by the town to be trained in transmission work. No other equipment has been anticipated except than the normal replacement of the existing equipment.

No other bonds will be sold except those needed to provide capital during project development and to pay the total cost.

If the referendum does not pass, the town will continue to receive power from the GUC, with the town providing an estimated $150,000 toward the relocation and upgrading of a new substation.

The town would still have no voice in rate charges and would not be able to receive its share of the electric franchise tax.

"Although this is probably the biggest step the Ayden Utilities Commission has ever taken, things of this nature have been done before," Finney pointed out. "It's probably the first utility bond that has ever been voted on in Ayden."

Southern Railway Budget Increase

LINWOOD, N.C. (AP) — Southern Railway is predicting a record 13 percent increase in its 1979 budget over the $253 million budgeted for capital expenditures in 1978.

L. Stanley Crane, Southern Railway's president, said increased earnings will enable the company to boost its capital expenditures by $32 million to $285 million.

Crane said the capital spending program for 1979 will raise to more than $1 million the total spent by Southern for new plants and equipment during the five-year period from 1975 to 1979.

He said Southern's net income for 1978 is expected to exceed the record earnings of more than $107 million reported in 1977.

Southern's 1978 earnings, which will be released in January, will be based on previously reported earnings of $96.6 million for the first nine months and strong improvement in traffic and revenues in the fourth quarter.

Equipment purchases for the railroad will total $201.2 million, including $186 million in previously unannounced car and locomotive orders for 1979 deliveries.

Budgeted improvements to fixed plants and facilities total $83.8 million. Major items include the anticipated June completion of the Linwood Yard in Davidson County at an estimated cost of $48 million.

THE HISTORIC WILMINGTON . . . walking tour begins with a presentation at Thalian Hall.

A GUIDE ON THE TOUR. . .Mrs. Libby Lea is pictured in the Burgwin-Wright House. (Travel and Tourism Division photos)

Architectural Styles Featured On Tour

WILMINGTON — "Sometimes I just close my eyes and turn back the clock to old Wilmington," says Mrs. Libby Lea.

Mrs. Lea is a guide on the Historic Wilmington Walking Tour. Designed to be walked easily in two to four hours, the tour takes in five buildings representing various architectural styles and uses. Many such tours allow only outside looking, but the Wilmington tour has the doors open and the guides ready.

The Greater Wilmington Chamber of Commerce implemented the Walking Tour after a study conducted jointly with the Historic Wilmington Foundation.

The tour is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday year round. Tickets may be purchased at Thalian Hall for $5 and $1 for students. Children under six are admitted free, and special group rates are available.

Wilmington native and famous NBC commentator David Brinkley narrates a slide presentation about Wilmington and the tour at Thalian Hall.

Conclusion of the tour is at the Governor Dudley Mansion. Tour maps are available at Thalian Hall, and each stop is marked by a distinctive sailing ship logo.

Mrs. Lea, 25, grew up in Wilmington and at nearby Orton Plantation.

"I was brought up around old things, and I worked in an antique shop," said Mrs. Lea. "You know, it would surprise you at the number of young people who are interested in old things."

"It's funny also, but the minute people walk through the door, they begin asking questions about this room or that room, and that's the purpose of the tour," said Mrs. Lea, who is a guide at the Burgwin-Wright House.

She loves to work with children, and her enthusiasm for their interest is obvious.

"There is no question that I love my work," said Mrs. Lea. "I feel that if I can pass on some history, it is all worthwhile."

One of her favorite stories is about a group of children who came from Charlotte.

"That makes for a long day," Mrs. Lea related. "When they got ready to leave, they couldn't find one little boy. We searched everywhere for him, and finally found him upstairs, fast asleep on one of the beds."

"I remember one day for another reason," she continued. "We had people coming out of the wall. I think the final count was 250."

She admits at first her husband wasn't completely sold on the history idea. But with a twinkle in her eye, she added, "I won him over, and now he is a history buff."

Mrs. Lea is all for the restorations going in and around Wilmington.

"We must save these old things," she stated. "They are part of our heritage."

Most of her work is in the Burgwin-Wright House, but she has taken special groups around on the whole tour.

Properties featured on the walking tour are:

— Thalian Hall: A classic 19th century American community theatre. The Hall opened in 1858 and such people as "Buffalo Bill" Cody, Otis Skinner, Tyrone Power, Lionel Barrymore and Lillian Russell have taken curtain calls here. The theatre was carefully restored in the early 1970's by the Thalian Hall Commission.

— Burgwin-Wright House: An example of a colonial gentleman's town residence, built in 1771 by John Burgwin, treasurer of the Colony of Carolina. The house was occupied in 1781 by British Lord Cornwallis before his defeat at Yorktown. It was restored by the National Society of Colonial Dames and serves as its state headquarters.

— Zebulon Latimer House: Built by a wealthy dry goods merchant in 1852, in the ornate Italianate revival style of architecture. The property was restored by the Lower Cape Fear Historical Society and serves as its headquarters.

— St. John's Art Gallery: Built in 1804 as the home of St. John's Lodge No. 1, the first Masonic Lodge in the state. After the Lodge moved its headquarters, the building was used as a resence. During World War Two, it was a popular restuarant. Owned and operated by St. John's Art Gallery, Inc., the building is now the home of continuing exhibits by painters, sculptors and graphic artists.

— Governor Dudley Mansion: Built around 1825, and the residence of the first elected governor of North Carolina. The Georgian mansion has been host to many great people, including Daniel Webster, and in 1909, President William H. Taft. The building is now headquarters of the Historic Wilmington Foundation.

The Greater Wilmington Chamber of Commerce has also developed a motor tour which shows more of the area.

Maybe Mrs. Lea doesn't have to close her eyes to see and imagine old Wilmington.

Many people are working to make old Wilmington a historic reality.

Family Converts Farm Products Into Crafts

By JIMMY TART
Extension 4-H — Youth Editor
North Carolina State University

LEXINGTON — Name a craft and chances are the Roland Couches of Rt. 2, Lexington, have already made it.

The three Couch children and their parents have made baskets, cornshuck dolls and flowers, wooden articles, leather goods, mosaics, woven items, cardboard reliefs, bookrocks, paintings, clay sculptures, papier mache' figures and wreaths.

Most items are sold at a Flea Market in Thomasville or given away as gifts. However, the family loaded its van with 100 hand-made fern stands and sold them on a seven-day, five-state, mountains-to-the-coast vacation during the summer.

In fact, the family's fern stand business grew so much that it was curtailed. Operating in an assembly line, the Couches made 1,490 fern stands at home in five days.

Now, most fern stands are made in a Thomasville woodwork shop of which Mr. Couch is co-owner.

One might think that Mr. and Mrs. Couch had craft making in mind when they moved with their twin daughters from Kernersville into a log-house in the Silver Valley Community 15 years ago. Now, Jill and Jan are 17-years-old, and brother Stephen is 12 years of age.

At first, Mrs. Couch was amazed at the cones, nuts, pods and berries found on the 40-acre farm and her first project was a 27-inch wreath.

Since then, she has made hundreds of items and she shares her knowledge and expertise by volunteering to teach crafts to school children, 4-H members and Extension Homemakers, according to Davidson County agents of the N.C. Agricultural Extension Service.

The Couches make many crafts from products found on the farm. Honeysuckle, cornshucks, wood, field clay, slate, pine cones, nuts, forked sticks, dry grass and broken glass are converted into crafts.

The children's interest has been sparked by participation in the 4-H crafts project. All three youngsters have used their artistic talents to win the State Dairy Poster Contest. Jill has won state honors with a demonstration on making clay flowers. Jan's demonstration on making a cardboard relief won state runner-up honors.

Jill's pencil sketch of a young girl was displayed in the State Capitol last summer as the school superintendents' Choice Art Award. Her drawing of the Robert E. Lee Coat of Arms hangs in the N.C. United Daughters of the Confederacy Headquarters in Raleigh.

Jill and Jan have won 29 4-H County Champion Awards, and with Stephen, they have captured 114 blue ribbons, many for their accomplishments in the 4-H crafts project.

The youngsters exhibit their crafts at county 4-H achievement events, the Davidson County Fair, Dixie Classic Fair, and the State Fair. The awards serve as incentives to work harder.

However, the awards aren't the only reasons the youngsters give for their motivation. They use their skills to make gifts for elderly neighbors and rest home patients.

Working through the Schnauzers' 4-H Club in which Mr. and Mrs. Couch serve as leaders, the Couch children and the other seven club members decorate cupcakes and make valentines and Christmas decorations.

The club's 4-H exhibit on sharing time and skills with others won a first-place award and $70 at the Davidson County Fair in mid-September and was entered in the Dixie Classic Fair in Winston-Salem last month.

The 4-H'ers made five figures, using sticks for the frames, stuffed newspapers for the bodies and papier mache' for the heads and hands.

The cash award went into the 4-H Club's treasury to finance future projects and activities.

Couple Exchanges Vows On Saturday Afternoon

ROCKINGHAM — The marriage of Elizabeth Gale Bartlette and Alfred Brinkley Beasley, both of Greenville, was solemnized in the Episcopal Church of the Messiah here Saturday at four o'clock in the afternoon.

The Rev. Roland Whitmire performed the double ring ceremony. A program of wedding music was presented by organist Miss Mary Lewis and soloist Mrs. Edward Schnell, who sang "O Perfect Love and "The Lord's Prayer."

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Roy Edward Bartlette of Rockingham, and Col. and Mrs. Joseph H. Beasley of West Point, N. Y.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride is a graduate of Sandhills Community College and East Carolina University. She teaches at Eastern Elementary School, Greenville. The bridegroom is a graduate of East Carolina University.

The honor attendant was Mrs. Donald Adams of Fayetteville. She carried white poinsettias and was dressed in rasberry silk qiana. The flowing lines of the full skirted, long sleeved dress was highlighted by an inset of white lace at the neckline.

Bridesmaids included Mrs. Randy Warren of Greenville and Mrs. Ray Revels of Rock Hill, S. C. Honorary bridesmaids included Mrs. Fernando Puente of Greenville, S. C., Mrs. Frank Roofe III of Memphis, Tenn., and Miss Mary Grace Queen of Rockingham.

The attendants were dressed like the honor attendant.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man and ushers included Melvin Toler and Randy Warren, both of Greenville, Byron Beasley of West Point, N. Y., brother of the bridegroom, and Roy Edward Bartlette Jr., brother of the bride of Rockingham.

Arrangements of white snapdragons, gypsophilia and fern were placed on the candlelighted altar. Poinsettias and magnolia leaves were used elsewhere in the chancel of the church.

A reception followed in the church parish hall which was decorated with poinsettias and greenery.

Mr. and Mrs. John Pittman and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Harris assisted in receiving. Mrs. Calhoun Pruitt cut the wedding cake and punch was poured by Mrs. O. C. Shedd and Mrs. G. Graham Inman.

Following a wedding trip to Charleston, S. C., the couple will live in Greenville.

An after-rehearsal dinner was held at the home of Mrs. G. Graham Inman Friday. Assisting were Mrs. Edward Schnell, Mrs. Parley Hallman, Roy Bartlette Jr. and Mrs. Joseph Beasley.

On Tuesday, friends of Miss Bartlette entertained at the home of Mrs. Martha Reynolds assisted by Miss Camille Moss as hostess.

Couple Weds Saturday Evening

David Russell Bengtsson and Nancy Caroll Andresen were wed Saturday at 6:00 p. m. in St. James United Methodist Church here by the Rev. Dewey Tyson.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. K. Andresen of Greenville and her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Uno M. Bengtsson of Pinellas Park, Fla. She is a graduate of Converse College and has master's degrees from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and Tulane University. He is a graduate of the U. S. Merchant Marine Academy and is employed by the Energy Transportation Corporation. They will live at in New Orleans, La.

The bride was attended by Ann Horne of New Orleans and Ross Andresen, her sister-in-law, of Raleigh; the bridegroom by Albert Toth of St. Petersburg, Fla. Kroghie Andresen, the bride's brother, of Raleigh ushered and the bride's father gave her in marriage.

Frozen vegetables will taste fresher if a pinch of sugar is added to the water while they're cooking. (From Family Circle's "Quick & Easy Meals")

Miss Palma, Mr. Cayton Wed Saturday

RALEIGH — Miss Vada Ann Palma and John Melvin Cayton were united in marriage Saturday in the St. Mary's Chapel, St. Mary's College campus. The double ring ceremony was held at 11:00 a.m. and officiated by the Rev. Stephen Harris.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Louis Palma of Raleigh. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Cayton of Greenville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a a formal length gown of ivory chiffon and ivory taffeta designed with a high Victorian split neckline overlaid in scalloped chantilly lace. The empire bodice was enhanced by a sheer yoke of imported English net centered with a row of pearl buttons and outlined with a deep bertha collar of chiffon edged in chantilly lace. Matching ruffled lace edged the cuffs of the bishop sleeves. The full chiffon skirt was accentuated with a deep flounce at the hemline topped by a row of chantilly lace. The bride's headpiece was of ivory baby's breath.

Mrs. Virginia Roberts of Morehead City, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a gown of crimson velvet accentuated at the neck and wrists by ivory antique lace. She carried a nosegay of ivory and crimson poinsettias.

Organist Fredrick Wilburn provided the nuptial music.

A reception was held in the Raleigh Woman's Club. Guests were greeted by Edward Davis of Raleigh. Christmas hues of red and green dominated the decor. Mrs. Anna Wooten Hawkins presided at the guest register. Mrs. Julian Mann served and cut the weddingcake. Mrs. Anne Riesenburger of Columbus, Ga., poured the punch.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside in Greenville.

The bride attended Southwood Preparatory School and graduated from Campbell College with a degree in education. She is a resource math teacher at J. H. Rose High School. The bridegroom is a graduate of East Carolina University where he received his master's degree in counseling. He is employed as coordinator of tutorial services at Pitt Technical Institute.

The garden area of the show, designed by the Bell Design Group of Raleigh, will feature 22 gardens surrounding a mill pond and mill house. Filled with daffodils, tulips, iris and vivid perennials, the individual garden areas will be varied.

For example, there will be a suburban garden sponsored by Volkswagen of America, an herb garden, furnished by the North Carolina Botanical Garden' a mountain scene with hardwood trees, wildflowers and wildlife, created by the U. S. Forestry Service, and a garden filled with colorful summer flowers by "Southern Living" magazine.

Students from several colleges and universities will again participate in the show. Clemson University will show an ocean side garden featuring salt tolerant plants and North Carolina State University will feature a garden for the blind and handicapped. Sandhills Community College will provide a graden suited for a hilly yard and Forsythe Technical Institute will make one of the gardens depicted in "Southern Living" magazine come alive.

The orchid pavilion, created by the Piedmont-Carolinas Orchid Society, will be expanded this year and the Decor Pavilion will have a different look. In addition to the gardens and pavilions, the show will include the Gardener's Marketplace packed with everything for the avid green thumber. The crafts people will be back again with dozens of unique items for sale and Shopper's Row will feature scores of minishops with accessories. The latest in yard equipment and outdoor furniture and an expanded travel section will round out the show.

Show hours are 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Mondays through Saturday and noon to 6 p.m. Sundays. For more information write the Southern Living Shows, 1945 Randolph Rd., Charlotte, 28207.

Couple Speaks Vows In High Noon Ceremony

NORBECK, Md. — In a high noon ceremony performed Saturday in St. Patrick's Church, Tama Jaclyn Flaherty became the bride of James Elwyn Todd Jr. Monsignor George Ellis conducted the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Dr. and Mrs. Edward Flaherty of Rockville, Md., and Mr. and Mrs. James Elwyn Todd of Kinston.

A program of wedding music was rendered by Joan Kathryn Flaherty, sister of the bride, organist, and vocalists, Ann Collins and Michael Bogdan.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her maid of honor was Mara Flaherty of Rockville, Md., sister of the bride. Bridesmaids included Sharon and Sheila Flaherty, Petra Barber and Gail Phillips, all of Rockville, Md., Ann Brown Cherry of Kinston, Mary Campbell and Susan Jessup, both of Raleigh, Kathy Hunt Taylor of Oxford, Ellen Blackwell of Chapel Hill, Jean Trevethan Johnston of Burlington, and Janice Moore Carroll of Athens, Ga.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included Jesse Todd, Jeff Minges, Jay Cherry, Mike Russell and Mike Beasley, all of Kinston, Radford Garrett, Ronald and Donald Taylor, all of Greenville, Bill Harper of Atlantic Beach, John Hunt of Oxford Edward Flaherty Jr. of Washington, D. C., Joe and Sean Flaherty, both of Rockville, Md.

The bride was dressed in a gown of qiana jersey fashioned with a long train. Venise lace and seed pearls adorned the bodice and sleeves. Her chapel length veil was highlighted by Venise lace, edged in seed pearls and she carried orchids and roses.

The couple will live in Kinston after a wedding trip to Saint Croix, Virgin Islands.

The bride and bridegroom are graduates of East Carolina University. She was formerly employed by the State Bureau of Investigation, Raleigh, and the bridegroom is associated with Austin Carolina Tobacco Co.

The parents of the bridegroom entertained guests Friday at a dinner at the Bethesda Country Club.

Women Need Time For Selves

By CAROL DEEGAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Shirley Conran says too many women today are trying to live up to "idiotically unrealistic" standards set by television commercials, magazines, mothers-in-law and "lying friends."

Every woman should set her own standards, Mrs. Conran says, because no woman can be perfect and do everything just right and, therefore, she shouldn't even try.

"Interwoman competition can be as cruel, as grueling, and as unnecessary as any of the competition in the traditional male rat race," she said.

Mrs. Conran also believes that women should devote more time to themselves.

"It took me years to acquire the discipline, control and iron will that was necessary in order to stop doing things for other people and start doing things for myself. At first I told myself that I didn't have the time. But then I figured even if you work a regulation 40-hour week and sleep eight hours a day, you still have 72 hours a week left over in which to do something stimulating and rewarding, or at least just something," she said.

Mrs. Conran was 23 years old when she married Terence Conran, the British designer. When her marriage collapsed eight years later, she was left with two young children and a parttime job with a newspaper in London, England.

Since her divorce, Mrs. Conran has held various journalistic positions with several London publications. Her book, "Superwoman," a how-to and how-not-to book on housework, was on the London best seller list for 44 weeks, and has recently been published in this country.

Mrs. Conran says the title of her book is ironic because no one woman can accomplish all the work that a traditional housewife is supposed to do.

"A Superwoman isn't a woman who can do anything, but a woman who avoids doing too much," she said. "She knows her limitations and sticks happily with them. She realizes that life is untidy and so are the children in it."

Mrs. Conran's motto is: "Life is too short to stuff a mushroom." She also believes that a home is one never-ending cleaning job that nobody notices unless you don't do it.

"If you want to devote your life to housework, I think it's a very unworthy aim. I mean, God didn't put you on this earth to scrub floors. And I think, as Betty Friedan said, if God had intended you to stay in the kitchen all the time, he would have given you a million hands," she said.

But Mrs. Conran also recognizes that there will always be housework for someone to do.

"What I've tried to do in my life is minimize it. Even those ladies sitting out there saying they like to do housework can't complain about that," she said.

Mrs. Conran has a farmhouse in France, which she takes care of without any outside help. A woman comes in for two hours a week to help her with cleaning her home in London. But that two hours a week is all the time that is spent on housecleaning.

"Everybody should have help in the home," Mrs. Conran said, "and generally the help in the home should be given by the people who make the work, the people who are living in the home. I think it's very important for a woman to realize that she isnt a battalion of soldiers, she's the field marshal, and the whole family is the battalion of soldiers."

Mrs. Conran's book offers tips on everything from supermarket survival to non-spring housecleaning to setting up household or business budgets and eliminating home hazards.

For example, she suggests doing housework in a bikini, "because there's less of you to get dirty." But she admits "this is probably not the universally popular method."

Mrs. Conran's tips can save money, energy and time. She even suggests what to do with all the time that is saved. Things like making yourself more beautiful, enjoying some physical activity, preparing for a new career or helping somebody who needs help.

"Remember," Mrs. Conran says, "the point of housework is to keep the place functioning efficiently as a cheerful background for living — so live. Decide on something positive, or simply pleasurable, to do for yourself with the time you have. Otherwise, life just slithers away."

("Superwoman" is published by Crown.)

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

There's supposedly an old family recipe for throwing a successful party.

Mix together equal parts of brilliant, stimulating guests, good food and drink. Toss in a piano in key and blend into a bare room void of chairs. Mix for about five hours. Yield: A fantastic evening.

I'm not good at parties, no matter how closely they follow the recipe. I hit for a chair, preferably within arm's length of the chips, and dip and eat myself into a coma.

For me a good party depends on who I meet. I have my own guidelines of what constitutes a perfect evening.

It's a good night for me when I meet another mother whose children are rotten. Deliver me from the woman who sits around all night telling me her son used his paper route money to send her to the Greek Islands, her daughter is happily married with three wonderful children and is running for Governor, and her "baby" was born with capped teeth, makes his bed every morning and doesn't want to drive until he is 35.

It's a great party for me when I sit next to a woman who has been on a diet for three weeks and has lost two pounds in her neck and one pound in her bust. The rest of the measurements remain the same. I don't want to hear from the woman who comes in wearing an Industrial Strength bra and tells me how being endowed makes you look fat.

My evening is made when the woman who comes in wearing a dress like mine — and she's pregnant — spills marinated herring down the front of it and must go home early.

It's a grand night for me when anyone asks for my recipe for anything.

It's a great evening when I don't encounter a woman who wears wet lipstick that stays wet, is trying to gain weight; is into white wine, loves football and wants to know who that "interesting older man is" and it's my husband.

Coming home the other night my husband said, "Did you have a good time?".

"I had a wonderful time," I said. "Louise is unfulfilled as a mother. Brenda doesn't have her screens out yet. Ann is naming ABC Sports in an alienation suit. Helen told her son they couldn't afford $2,000 at the orthodontist and he would have to develop a pleasant personality, and just as that lecherous Fred asked Mary to dance, her sitter called to tell her Kathy was throwing up."

Now that's a party!

Engagement Announced

Col. and Mrs. A. W. Talbert of Apex announce the engagement of their daughter, Katherine Crowell, to Cecil Howard Phillips, son of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin C. Phillips of Mount Airy. A Jan. 20 wedding is planned.

Insurance Women Hold Meet

The Pitt County Association of Insurance Women held its meeting Wednesday at the Ramada Inn. President Audry Stillwell conducted the business session.

Welfare Chairman Evelyn Stroud reported several members visited with her at the Caswell Center where refreshments and gifts were taken for the child sponsored by the group. She also reported groceries and gifts were taken to the family in Pitt County for Christmas.

Education Chairman Dallas Campbell reported there is to be a one-day workshop in Raleigh Jan. 19. Joyce Mills requested members get pictures of their children to her to use in the scrapbook. Changes in national by-laws will be discussed at the next meeting as announced by Chairman Sophia Sumner.

Bosses night is being planned for February. All committee chairmen were requested to have their reports for the time period from Jan. 1 to Dec. 31, 1978' to the president by Jan. 10. A mini-flood insurance workshop on the regular program will be held at next month's meeting. Greenville is now in the National Flood Regular Program. The January board meeting will be held at Mosley Brothers office.

Live The New Year One Day At A Time

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Last New Year's Eve you published a set of New Year's resolutions. I cut it out and taped it to my bathroom mirror where I could read it every morning. I can truthfully say that I am a much better person today because I've tried to live by those rules.

Please run that column again for those who may have missed it. I hope it will do for others what it has done for me.

In case you're wondering, I'm no teenager. I'm a 34-year-old father of three.

HIGH ON LIFE IN HAMILTON, O.

DEAR HIGH: Don't thank me. The credit belongs to Overeaters Anonymous—an organization of caring, confessed compulsive eaters who have regained their self-esteem by losing weight, feeling better, looking better and helping others to do the same.

Their credo:

—Just for today I will try to live through this day only, and not set far-reaching goals to try to overcome all my problems at once. I know I can do something for 12 hours that would appall me if I felt that I had to keep it up for a lifetime.

—Just for today I will try to be happy. Abraham Lincoln said, "Most folks are about as happy as they make up their minds to be." He was right. I will not dwell on thoughts that depress me. I will chase them out of my mind and replace them with happy thoughts.

—Just for today I will adjust myself to what is. I will face reality. I will try to change those things which I can change and accept those things I cannot change.

—Just for today I will try to improve my mind. I will not be a mental loafer. I will force myself to read something that requires effort, thought and concentration.

—Just for today I will exercise my soul in three ways: I will do a good deed for somebody—without letting him know it. (If he or she finds out I did it, it won't count.) I will do at least two things that I know I should do, but have been putting off. I will not show anyone that my feelings are hurt; they may be hurt, but today I will not show it.

—Just for today I will be agreeable. I will look as well as I can, dress becomingly, talk softly, act courteously, and speak ill of no one. Just for today I'll not try to improve anybody except myself.

—Just for today I will have a program. I may not follow it exactly, but I will have it, thereby saving myself from two pests: hurry and indecision.

—Just for today I will have a quiet half hour to relax alone. During this time I will reflect on my behavior and will try to get a better perspective on my life.

—Just for today I will be unafraid. I will gather the courage to do what is right and take the responsibility for my own actions. I will expect nothing from the world, but I will realize that as I give to the world, the world will give to me.

It makes sense, doesn't it? And so does their program. It's free. For information about this wonderful organization, write to P.O. Box 6190, Torrance, Calif. 90504.

P.S. Have a happy, healthy New Year. And pray for peace!

LOVE, ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to that woman whose husband let the pet cockatoo fly loose in the house was the pits! If the husband refused to clean up after the bird, you should have told her to do it. But to facetiously suggest that she leave the window open, buy a cat, or let you know if she wants a good recipe for stewed cockatoo on toast showed an insensitivity that was unlike you, Abby.

Don't you realize that some people have absolutely no sense of humor and might take you seriously?

Please revise your answer, or I'll tell Doris Day on you.

BIRD LOVER IN AURORA

DEAR BIRD LOVER: Consider it revised. I've eaten a lot of crow in my day, but I swear I've never tasted stewed cockatoo. I was only kidding, but I should not have been so flip about a subject as serious as life—even when it's for the birds.

A better suggestion would have been to simply return the bird to the pet shop.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet; "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Linda Jo Warren Weds Jeffrey N. Haislip

Linda Jo Warren of Rt. 1, Stokes and Jeffrey Nelson Haislip of Oak City were united in marriage in the Oak Grove Church of Christ in Robersonville Saturday at 2:30 p. m., with Harold Turner officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay R. Warren of Rt. 1, Stokes. She is a graduate of Martin Academy and is now attending East Carolina University.

The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Haislip Jr. of Oak City, is a graduate of Oak City High School and has attended N. C. State University.

The father of the bride gave her in marriage during the double ring ceremony. The bride wore a formal-length gown of white wilkened organza over white peau de soie designed with a Queen Anne neckline outlined in white silk floral daisy venise lace. The fitted empire bodice was overlaid in the matching lace and encircled the waistline. The long fitted sleeves featured appliques of floral lace with double ruffled cuffs edged in miniature silk lace. The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel train repeated the lace-trimmed double flounce at the hemline topped by a row of miniature daisy lace. She wore a fingertip veil of illusion trimmed in miniature lace held in place by a caplet overlaid in matching lace and featuring appliques of lace scattered over the veil.

MRS. JEFFREY NELSON HAISLIP

The bride's only attendant was her sister, Mrs. Troy Godwin of Cofield. She wore a formal-length gown of honey trilobal designed with an open neckline featuring miniature rolled shoulder straps, fitted gathered empire bodice and full circular skirt. The sleeveless gown was complemented by a jacket styled with crystal pleating at the high and Bertha collar and repeated at the peplum gathered waistline. The long bishop sleeves also featured the crystal pleating at the cuffs. She carried a colonial basket of mixed flowers.

The ring bearer was Bryant Crisp, nephew of the bride, of Oak City. Ushers were Bryan Hyman, Scott Hyman and Scott Smith, all of Oak City.

Mrs. Ron Crisp of Stokes was organist and Scott Hemingway sang and accompanied himself with a guitar.

The mother of the bride wore a formal-length pink gown and her flowers were white daisies, as were those of the bridegroom's mother, who wore a blue formal-length gown. The grandmother of the bride, Mrs. Lena B. Allen, and the grandmother of the bridegroom, Mrs. Claude D. Nelson, had white carnation corsages.

Mrs. Alton Johnson of Rt. 1, Stokes directed the wedding.

After a wedding trip to the mountains, the couple will live in Bethel.

The reception, held in the fellowship hall of the church had the following participating: Mr. and Mrs. Melvin O. Crisp Jr., Mrs. John G. Cherry Sr., June Ellen Haislip and Mrs. Madeline Hudson.

The after-rehearsal party, held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Bowers, was given by the Bowers, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Roberson of Durham, and Mr. and Mrs. James D. Walters of Greenville, all aunts and uncles of the bridegroom.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day and evening to let your spirits soar for you can find added zip and zest in the air this last day of the old year. Have a good time, and be with good friends and make new ones. Be happy.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Making plans for activities in the new year ahead is wise and make resolutions you can keep. Be with congenials and avoid those who could give you trouble.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Good day to confer with the influential and make fine plans for the future. Make this a happy new year by seeing people you know, showing fine camaraderie.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Good day to raise the level of your consciousness to greater heights and then celebrate the incoming new year. Listen to what individuals of different backgrounds from your own have to say. Get good ideas.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Handle pressing responsibilities early and then see the New Year in with closest ties. Know what mate expects of you in the future. Avoid anything that could injure your health.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Know which associates you want to have in your scheme of things for the New Year and confer with them. Some civic affair crops up that is good for you.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Find new methods that will help to make your work more efficient and profitable. Improve relationship with co-workers.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) The evening can be particularly enjoyable. Make sure mate takes precedence over others. Spend only wisely and well.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Home and family should be first on the agenda today. Plan to have more harmony there. Study a new project while you have the time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Ideal day to contact as many friends and allies as you can and have meaningful conversations. Don't neglect correspondence.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Plan time to see how to handle monetary matters more wisely in the coming year. Be sure to cut down on unnecessary spending.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Planning the future wisely, especially where personal matters are concerned, is important right now. Be with an interesting group and see the New Year in happily.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Good day to be with persons you admire and respect and get good advice, suggestions from them. Hit on a plan for the future that will make your life brighter.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, JAN. 1, 1979

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A very good day to stick to the tried and true, and act in a sensible manner. Make some New Year Resolutions and refrain from anything that could start you off on the wrong foot.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Study your work well and know where to make changes that will bring you better results in the new year. Express happiness.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Take your time in making decisions today and be sure they are right. Do nothing to jeopardize your present standing.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Begin the new year on the right note by seeking the company of persons who can help elevate your consciousness.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Being wise is the keynote today and tonight. Attend to special duties and impress others with your ability.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Good day to be out where you can enjoy yourself and start the new year on a happy note. Show others you have poise.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Try to stay in protective surroundings today and avoid possible accident. Plan how to handle a new responsibility wisely.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Accept invitations extended to you now and have a good time with congenials. Use good judgment in all that you do or say.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Study the right methods of handling obligations in the future so you can be more efficient. Your intuition is very accurate now.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't permit a possible annoyance from another disturb the harmony you enjoy with family members.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Begin the new year right by planning to have greater abundance in the future. Engage only in worthwhile activities today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Concentrating on personal affairs is wise since little or nothing can be accomplished in the business world today.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) It is wise to confer with a trusted adviser before making plans for a new venture that appeals to you. Don't take unnecessary risks.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will easily understand matters of great scope and will have the ability to make them successful. One here who will take pride in doing an excellent job. Be sure to give good moral training early in life.

Class Of 1925 Is Close Group

Sixteen members of the class attended the reunion.

"After 53 years, lots of us are incapacitated or have already gone over the great divide and got their diploma," said Robert Fielder, who arranges the annual event. He said the reunions would continue until three class members were left.

"That year, the three will have a bottle of champagne, light candles and read the class roster," he said. "Then the champagne bottle will be put in the trophy case at the high school (in memory of the class.)"

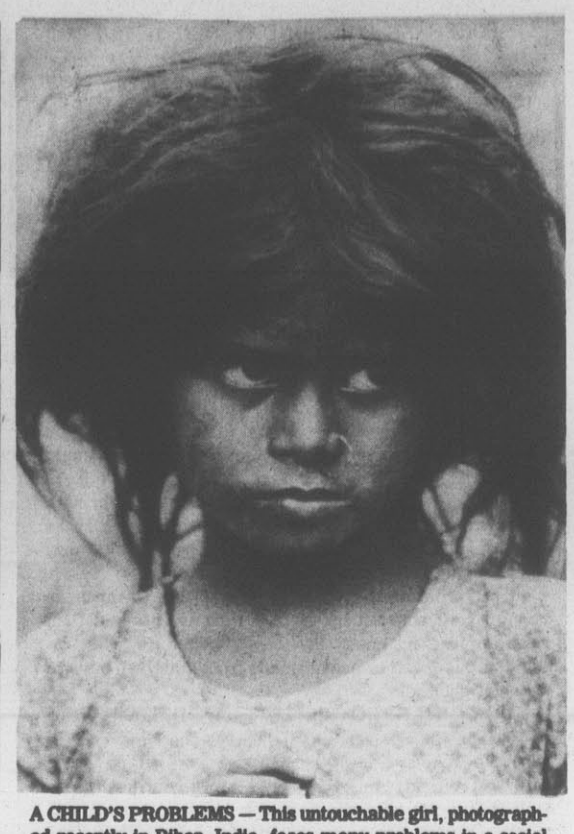
'Children Of God'

CHILDREN OF GOD — These children are Harijans, meaning "children of God" as they were called by Indian leader Mohandas Gandhi. Gandhi first began fighting for the rights of untouchables 50 years ago. Although untouchability has been outlawed, the tradition persists in large areas of India. (AP Laserphoto)

AN "UNTOUCHABLE" — An "untouchable" looks over his shoulder in Bihar, a victim of 3,500 years tradition. In some areas of India, if an untouchable casts his shadow on an upper caste Indian, he must wash himself in the Ganges river because the untouchable polluted him. (AP Laserphoto)

A WAY OF LIFE — An untouchable child eats from a bowl in Bihar, India. Untouchables were damned 3,500 years ago when Aryan invaders decreed that the lowliest workers in India would forever be outcasts. Today, the struggle of untouchables goes far beyond the quest for food as the battle for human rights has brought increasing violence in India. (AP Laserphoto)



A CHILD'S PROBLEMS — This untouchable girl, photographed recently in Bihar, India, faces many problems in a social system which is still traditionally segregated although outlawed by the Indian constitution. Many untouchable children are not permitted to go to school in many of the rural areas of India. Changes have been made in the major Indian cities where untouchable children are educated with upper classes. (AP Laserphoto)

Opening Those Closed Doors

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (UPI) — A major handicap in the search for oil and minerals has been the essential, massive equipment that is difficult to transport and use in inaccessible terrain. A new portable, battery-powered geophysical data collection system called Opseis 5500 has been developed by Applied Automation. Weighing less than 40 pounds, the units can be carried on a man's back to search unexplored regions to discover new oil, gas and mineral riches.

Also Anniversary Year For The Teddy Bear

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Discarding more dire happenings, it has certainly been an eventful year.

It was the 75th anniversary of the Wright brothers' first flight and the World Series. The Space Age was 31 years old. The Academy Awards and Mickey Mouse were 50. Popeye neared 60, Monopoly was past 40, and Playboy turned 25.

Considering the things that have occupied Americans in their passage through life, it seems remiss not to mention one more.

Teddy Bear is 75.

For generations of children left in the dark, he was the guardian who kept watch while they slept.

He didn't weep or wet. He never said a word. But he soaked up tears and hid small faces from so many small embarrassments.

Probably no creature in history did so much by doing so little. He was true blue. He served by only standing and waiting.

His face changed some over the years, but not his honey-color, not really his shoe-button nose and eyes. Funny that he was named for President Teddy Roosevelt.

Back in 1902, the president had gone to Mississippi to settle a boundary dispute. Business settled, he went on a hunting trip. He was very big on hunting. He wanted to bag a bear, a trophy.

But when a lean and lame bear was run down by the hunting party's dogs, the President balked. He would not allow it to be shot or tortured. When the story got back to Washington, a newspaper cartoonist named Charles Berryman portrayed the president sparing the bear in the Washington Post with the caption, "Drawing the line," which referred both to the act of mercy and to the president's refusal to go along with white supremacists in Mississippi.

That led to all sorts of postcards, toys, books, buttons portraying the Roosevelt Bear.

But singularly, Morris Michtom, a Russian Jewish immigrant who owned a candy store in Brooklyn, N.Y., designed a toy bear for his store window. Two of them, in fact. His wife did the sewing, stuffing them with excelsior and stitching the mouths with thread.

The day Michtom set the 2½-foot bears in his window, someone offered to buy them. That gave Michtom another idea. He sent a bear to the President and asked permission to call it a Teddy Bear.

Presidents had fewer constituents then, and no SALT talks or Mideast crises. Roosvelt didn't have to worry about oil or inflation, and Cuba was well in hand.

So he answered Michtom in his personal hand. "I doubt if my name will mean much in the bear business, but you may use it if you wish," he wrote, and he signed it T.R.

The original correspondence and the original bears have disappeared. But Michtom, selling the bears for $1.50 each, built an empire called the Ideal Toy Corp. When he died in 1938, it was a multimillion dollar business. He was producing over 100,000 Teddy Bears a year.

Today, Ideal produces all kinds things. And it also produces the Teddy Bear, 2 pounds of fluff and dreams.

You see, the Teddy Bear is not so much what it is as what children for 75 years have given it. Bedroom companion, loyal friend, it has given a child its undivided attention, listened to stern lectures, bounced off walls during small rages, heard the apologies, forgiven.

It has over the years become frayed and soiled, lost an eye or a nose. But it never lost its faith. Because neither President nor seamstress, neither toy maker nor toy store gave it that.

A child did.

Variety, Youth, Potential In Our New Governors

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK
UPI Senior Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Until recently, the national political status of governors was something like Mr. Dooley's description of the vice presidency: "You can't be sent to jail for it, but it's kind of a disgrace."

For years, the federal establishment was regarded as the cutting edge of problem solving in American government. Washington was the fount for the ideas and the leadership to deal with both foreign and domestic problems and Congress was where presidential candidates came from.

State government was pictured as unwilling or unable to deal with much more than highways, schools, courts and prisons. With few exceptions, governors were regarded as local politicians devoid of either the clout or vision to operate on a national stage.

Jimmy Carter changed that perception in 1976 when he became the first governor since Franklin D. Roosevelt to win the presidency. The 14th governor since Thomas Jefferson to occupy the White House, Carter's success has forced the president-makers in both political parties to look to the statehouses as well as the Capitol Hill in seeking national leadership.

Twenty new governors were elected in 1978. It is no great leap of prophecy to predict that some of them, along with some of the 16 governors who won reelection and the 14 whose terms did not expire this year, will be important figures in the presidential picture in the next decade.

At least two of the governors who were elected to second terms last month already are considered prime prospects for 1980. Neither Democrat Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California nor Republican James Thompson of Illinois have admitted they are going to run for president, but no one would be surprised to see either in the primaries.

The new crop of governors, which includes 19 freshmen and one "retread" governor, provides a more varied picture than usual. While some are the usual stereotype — middle-aged lawyers who worked their way through legislative and party ranks to achieve their state's top elective post — there are some interesting exceptions:

— Lee Dreyfus, the Republican governor-elect of Wisconsin, is a speech professor and college administrator who knocked off the GOP establishment choice for the job and then ousted the incumbent Democrat. In this day of "cool" candidates who play to the television set, the portly Dreyfus donned a red vest and bumped around the state in an old school bus giving the opposition old-fashioned political hell.

— Bill Clinton, a Democrat, will be the nation's youngest governor when he takes over in Arkansas, is a 32-year-old Rhodes scholar and a graduate of two eastern colleges. He says he had "Potomac fever" when he was younger but now doesn't care all that much about going to Washington. Hilary Rodham, his wife, also is a lawyer and probably the only first lady of a state to retain her maiden name.

— Fob James, George Wallace's Democratic successor, is the inventor of the plastic dumbbell, which helped him earn a fortune in the sporting goods business. Before that, he was an All-American football player at Auburn, a Canadian professional player and a Republican fundraiser.

— Hugh Gallen, the upset conquerer of New Hampshire Republican Meldrim Thomson is a automobile dealer, a former minor league baseball pitcher and a one-time roadbuilder with the Civilian Conservation Corps. In a turnabout of the usual pattern, he is an Oregonian who went east to make his fortune.

— Bill Clements, to be the first Republican governor of Texas in 105 years, is a former oil field worker who built biggest drilling company in the world. He also was the deputy Secretary of Defense for four years but never has held elective office. During the campaign he plopped a rubber chicken down in front of his opponent at a banquet.

— Harry Hughes is experienced in government — he served in the Maryland legislature and headed the state Transportation department — but made his mark by refusing to go along with politics as usual. He quit the transportation post when he started getting political pressure on Baltimore subway contract awards. He went on to upset the acting governor in the Democratic primary.

— Victor Atiyeh, Oregon's Republican governor-elect, also has extensive experience in state government and politics — 20 years in the legislature and a previous run against Democratic Gov. Bob Straub. What sets him apart is the distinction of being the first governor of Syrian extraction and almost surely the first owner of an oriental rug business to head a state.

Clinton is the youngest man in the group; Clements, at 61, the oldest. There are four new governors in their 30's, six in their 40's. The average age of the group is just under 48 years.

Six of the new governors never have held elective office before, although most have served in some government post. The newcomers to campaigning are Democrats Edward King of Massachusetts and James of Alabama and Republicans Richard Thornburgh of Pennsylvania, Lamar Alexander of Tennesee, Clements of Texas and Dreyfus of Wisconsin.

Both Democrat John W. Carlin of Kansas and Republican Albert Quie of Minnesota list themselves as dairy farmers, while Democrat Bruce King of New Mexico, who is returning to a second term in the governorship he occupied from 1971 through 1974, and Democrat Robert Graham of Florida are cattle ranchers.

But the law, as is so often the case among elected officials, is the predominant occupation among the new governors. And, with law enforcement continuing as a key element of politics, it probably is not surprising that four of them are moving up from state attorney general.

Republicans Robert List of Nevada and William Janklow of South Dakota and Democrats Joseph Brennan of Maine and Clinton of Arkansas all were the chief law enforcement officers of their states.

Pennsylvania's Thornburgh held a post near the top in the Justice Department, assistant attorney general in charge of the criminal division and is a former U.S. attorney for Western Pennsylvania.

Other lawyers among the freshman governors include Charles Thone of Nebraska, who was both a deputy attorney general and deputy secretary of state; Graham of Florida, a graduate of Harvard law school; Democrat Dick Riley of South Carolina, who also served 14 years in the state senate; and Tennessee's Alexander, a corporate lawyer who once served as a White House aide.

Two of the new governors are leaving Congress to serve in their state capitals.

Quie of Minnesota has served 20 years in the House, moving to key positions on both the Education and Labor and the Agriculture committees. He also was one of the key men in the revolt of the Republican "Young Turks" against GOP Leader Charles Halleck that began Gerald Ford on his march to the presidency.

Nebraska's Thone also has extensive service on Capitol Hill, working for some years as an aide to Sen. Roman Hruska and then winning four terms as a member of the House.

Aside from New Mexico's King, who is the only former governor in the new class, Democrat George Nigh of Oklahoma was the highest ranking state officer to step up to the governorship. Nigh was lieutenant governor of Oklahoma for 16 years after eight years as a state legislator.

Massachusetts' King also held a high visibility state post — executive director of the Massachusetts Port Authority. King was the only candidate who was able to defeat his own party's elected incumbent governor (Michael Dukakis) in a primary and then overcome the inevitable party split to win the general election.

(Maryland's Hughes beat acting Gov. Blair Lee III if the Democratic primary, but Lee was the lieutenant governor who was serving in an acting capacity in place of Marvin Mandel, who was suspended after conviction on corruption charges.)

However, the new crop of governors did knock off an unusually high number of incumbents seeking re-election. Carlin beat Republican Robert Bennett in Kansas; Gallen knocked off Republican Meldrim Thomson in New Hampshire; Atiyeh beat Democrat Bob Straub in Oregon; Quie beat Minnesota Democrat Rudy Perpich; and Dreyfus whipped Democrat Martin Schreiber in Wisconsin (Perpich and Schreiber also were lieutenant governors who inherited the top job.)

Of the 20 new governors, 11 are Democrats and nine Republicans. However, with retirements and primary defeats, the net result of the elections were to increase the number of Republican governors from 12 to 18, the GOP's high point since 1973.

The election also gave the Republicans control of five of the seven largest states in the nation. The Democrats held on to California and New York, but the Republicans captured Pennsylvania and Texas and held on to Illinois and Ohio.

Subsequent Inventory Turned Up Stocks Of Mind-Control Drugs

By RICHARD T. PIENCIAK
Associated Press Writer

GEORGETOWN, Guyana (AP) — The People Temple commune at Jonestown was stocked with thousands of doses of dangerous drugs, smuggled into Guyana. Two Jonestown survivors said at least some of the drugs were used to brainwash or control would-be defectors.

A list of the drug inventory found in Jonestown, obtained by The Associated Press and the San Francisco Examiner, shows large supplies of depressants and downers. Survivors and law enforcement officials here said at least some of these were used to control the behavior of persons viewed as dangerous by the Rev. Jim Jones.

Included in the drug warehouse were Quaaludes, Demerol, Valium, morphine and 11,000 doses of a drug, Thorazine, used to calm manic depressnives and others with extreme mental problems.

Checks with medical officials and medical journals produced a profile of a drug supply that promotes suicidal tendencies, can cause hallucinations, blurred vision, confusion, speech disturbances, involuntary movements, and emotional highs and lows.

Because there are no records, it is impossible to say how frequently or extensively the drugs were used.

Various visitors to Jonestown have reported indications that these drugs were used liberally — perhaps forcefully on children and others — in the hours-long ritual in which more than 900 persons went to their deaths from drinking a cyanide-laced punch.

The drug inventory, partial because the work of compiling it has not been completed, was made by brand name. It showed that the majority of the drugs were manufactured by US. firms. They were smuggled into Guyana by the Peoples Temple to avert this country's strict importation regulations on pharmaceuticals, officials said.

During a joint investigation by The AP and the Examiner into how drugs got into Jonestown, drug industry officials in Guyana said only minute amounts came through official channels here. Drugs bought for use in Guyana must be registered with and cleared through a government agency, and none of the drugs found in Jonestown were, these officials said.

Checks with some of the U.S. firms that manufactured the drugs found at Jonestown brought denials of any involvement. Many said they have policies against that kind of foreign sale.

Dr. Joyce H. Lowinson, a psychiatrist and member of President Carter's Strategy Council on Drug Abuse Prevention, said the list indicated "there were a lot of psychotic patients, or they (Peoples Temple) were using them to control people."

Dale Parks, a nursing supervisor at Jonestown who is a trained therapist for respiratory ailments, said he knew some of the drugs were used to control would-be defectors in the commune's "extended care unit." But he professed shock at the extenre, saying, "Oh my God, I don't believe it."

Parks fled Jonestown on Nov. 18 with Rep. Leo Ryan, a California Democrat. A short time later, Ryan, three American newsmen and Parks' mother were slain at a remote airstrip.

"Those are absolutely hard line, hard core drugs," Parks said when read a partial inventory from Jonestown.

"There's no way that many people were receiving treatment," he said in reference to the amount of drugs found in Jonestown. "I know they were using things to keep people under control, but not like this."

According to Parks, the control sessions took place in the extended care unit, eight beds separate from the regular medical facilities.

"If a person wanted to leave Jonestown or if there was a breach of rules, one was taken to the extended care unit," he said. "It was a rehabilitation place, where one would be reintegrated back into the community. The people were given drugs to keep them under control."

After a few days or weeks, the patients lost their desire to leave and no further behavioral problems were anticipated, Parks said. Asked about the use of drugs for brainwashing, he said, "It is a reasonable assumption that such went on in the exended care unit." Others familiar with Jonestown had previously described brainwashing techniques carried out in the extended care unit.

Another former Jonestown resident, who refused to let his name be used, said, "People who wanted to leave were fed drugs like Thorazine so they would come to their senses."

Many of the Jonestown drugs are habit forming, according to medical journals. Several mandated that antidotes used to negate an adverse reaction be in stock, but none was noted on the list. Medical officials said it would be normal practice to note the antidote near the first drug for quick reference.

Some of the drugs were especially dangerous, like Demerol. Therapeutic doses of it have precipitated unpredictable, severe and occasionally fatal reactions, according to medical journals.

Many of the drugs were not to be used on children; many were not to be used on the elderly. The fact there were large numbers of both those groups at Jonestown point out even further the overstocking of these sensitive and potentially destructive items, medical officials said.

Drug after drug, sometimes in large enough supply to give each of the nearly 1,000 residents of Jonestown 22 doses, were designed to provide relief from pain or anxiety, according to a medical journal.

Tactile Map For Blind

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Three-dimensional relief maps are being developed for blind students at Syracuse University.

Tactile maps — sheets of plastic molded with raised landmarks — are becoming tools to help the visually impaired find their way between and inside buildings.

Steve Schroeder, coordinator for barrier-free design at Syracuse University's office of facilities administration, is designing 20 tactile maps of the campus. The process, he says, is not as easy as it might seem.

"We find that concepts blind people have are very different from the spatial concepts of the sighted," he notes. "For instance, we know a corridor has two sides, a floor and a ceiling. The blind person traveling down a corridor is familiar only with the wall next to him and the floor beneath his feet. He has no conception of a ceiling above and a wall on the opposite side."

Schroeder is working with blind students to gauge the effectiveness of various map designs. When the project is completed, the maps will be posted in high-traffic areas of major campus buildings. Small handheld versions of the 3-D maps are also planned.

Petro-Powers Find Mixed Blessing In Oil Boom

By OTTO DOELLING
Associated Press Writer

JIDDA, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Five years after they imposed an embargo on Israel's Western supporters, Arab petro-powers have found the resulting oil boom to be a mixed blessing.

Arab oil states have been converted into gigantic construction sites in their technological dash toward the 20th Century.

Picturesque old coral and mud-brick buildings with harem windows and crenelated roofs are being bulldozed to make way for faceless boom towns of glass, steel and concrete.

"It's been like the gold rush and World War II combined," said an American diplomat in Jidda, Saudi Arabia's commercial center on the Red Sea.

Since the quadrupling of oil prices in 1973, the earnings of the 13-state Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) have skyrocketed from $22.5 billion to $130 billion a year, with the Arabs collecting about two-thirds of the total.

The unprecedented oil wealth has enabled well-connected enterpreneurs in the free-enterprise Arab states on the Persian Gulf to rake off vast fortunes to finance jets and palatial villas at home and abroad.

But the petro-bonanza also is seeping down to those whose families once depended for a livelihood on camel driving, goatherding, pearl diving and dhow sailing.

Their modest Toyotas and Datsuns compete on jammed new boulevrds with the Cadillacs and Rolls Royces of the sheiks. Libya and Kuwait, where the bedouins once relied on camel transport, now boast one car for every three inhabitants.

In Saudi Arabia, which abounds with rags-to-riches land deals, about the lowest paid native is the traffic cop earning the equivalent of about $600 a month.

Conservative states, not to be outdone by the socialist members of the petroleum cartel, have become tax-free welfare havens where public services from health care to costly desalted water are part of the commonwealth. In Kuwait, even local telephone calls are free. Billions are being invested to construct schools, hospitals and housing.

While the royal rulers of Arab Gulf states attempt to build on old feudal structures, Libya is using its petro-billions to create a "new socialist society ...where profit and money disappear." While the money is still at hand, Libya is investing $25 billion in a five-year industrialization drive to provide new refineries and steel, petrochemical and electrification plants.

Iraq, one of the reputed sites of the Garden of Eden, is pushing a $10-billion agricultural program with model farms, animal husbandry and cattlebreeding centers. The socialist state is also building up gas and petrochemical industries.

In socialist Algeria, by contrast, more than 70 percent of the working population still is tied to agriculture. As a result of an all-out industrialization drive, very little of the oil wealth has reached the rural population. But the government hopes the average income will rise from $375 in 1970 to $625 by 1980.

A decade ago, some of the poorer sheikdoms making up what has since become the United Arab Emirates (U.A.E.) survived on gold smuggling and selling passports and eye-catching postage stamps.

Now, the seven-state U.A.E. federation and Kuwait rank as the richest countries in the world with per capita incomes averaging more than $15,000 a year.

Neighboring Saudi Arabia is averaging about $6,000 annually per capita, Libya about $2000, and Iraq $1,150.

The tiny island emirate of Bahrain, the first Arab Gulf state to discover oil and the first likely to run dry, has mushroomed into the biggest banking center between Western Europe and Singapore. Its 37 offshore banking units have combined assets of $20 billion.

But whatever the quantitative gains, the boom is extracting its price where the Muezzin's keening call to prayer once marked the lazy passage of time.

At its outset, the boom brought with it staggering inflation, crippling congestion at harbors and airports, and costly miscalculations in planning.

"It used to be a pleasure to go walking through the old town of Jidda," a Briton remarked. "Now it's horrible. There is so much traffic and the crowd surrounding the soulk (market) spills over into the streets."

At the height of the boom, a Saudi newspaper complained that "certain Western customs have been adopted in this country. The most dangerous of which are irresponsibility and carelessness."

The high cost of motorization is registered by twisted wrecks littering the sides of highways linking Jidda with Mecca and Abu Dhabi with Dubai.

"For a while there, you could go into a supermarket and spend the equivalent of $800 for three shopping baskets of food," an American economist said of Saudi Arabia's inflation. He estimated it at 70 percent two years ago. It's now down to 18 percent.

In the tiny sheikdom of Sharjah, part of the U.A.E. blocks of unifinshed or empty apartments and offices bear witness to reckless overdevelopment that has led to a construction slump.

But the early boom fever has been doused.

Belatedly, the U.A.E. is drafting legislation to coordinate projects. It already has five operating airports, two only a half hour's drive apart. Three more were on the drawing boards when retrenchment set in.

With the flair of Texas oilmen, The Saudis are investing $4.5 billion for a super airport at Jidda. Planned to cover 41 square miles, it will be nearly twice the size of Manhattan. "It's the new pyramids," an American diplomat says.

Yet the Saudis are also looking ahead a hundred years when the oil will run out, and are investing in roads, hospitals and communications.

Said one American oilman there: "The sky is the limit euphoria has been replaced by cool, clear business thinking."

Hopeful News in Medicine

Happy news for sufferers of glaucoma. A new drug, timolol, is causing quite a stir in hospitals in France, Germany, and now in the United States. The new drug seems to have distinct advantages over pilocarpine, the most widely used drug at present.

Glaucoma is a disease in which the fluid pressure builds up within the eye. Unless this is recognized early and treated intensively, sight can be seriously affected. It is for this reason that every complete eye examination must include the simple, but definitive, test to determine the possible existence of glaucoma. An instrument, the tonometer, readily registers any increase in pressure.

The new drug for treating glaucoma, timolol, is considered a major advance in the control of glaucoma. In a large series of cases, when timolol was used, none of the side effects commonly associated with glaucoma drugs were present. New studies are in active progress to further implement the safety and efficacy of the drug. It is hoped that timolol may eventually regulate the high fluid pressure in the eye so that the progression of the condition may be interrupted.

As with most such exciting new discoveries, not all people with glaucoma are the ideal candidates for the use of this drug. The choice and the duration of its use depends, of course, on the discriminating judgment of the eye specialist.

Two items have come to my attention. These may be of special significance to people who are partially or totally confined to wheelchairs.

First, an exceptionally lightweight chair for indoor and outdoor use is now being modeled after one that originated in Great Britain. Because it weighs so much less than the conventional chairs, is can be transported and stored far more easily. When the wheels and the footrests have been removed, the total weight is about 15 pounds. These parts are easily removed, without tools, making storage in the car less cumbersome.

Information about this chair can be obtained from Ortho-Kinetic, Inc. in Waukesha, Wis.

The second item is a portable oxygen tank that can easily be attached to the back of a wheelchair if supplemental oxygen supply is needed during transportation. No alteration of the chair and no unusual tools are needed to attach the portable tank to the frame of the chair. Information about this "Porta-Tank" can be obtained from the Baumann Manufacturing Company, in Cincinnati, Ohio.

I am always impressed by the newer devices that are constantly being made and improved upon to ease the burden of those courageous people who are confined to wheelchairs.

Man Named 'A' Leads The Rest

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Who hasn't ever had an urge to be at the top or the bottom of the telephone directory?

In the San Francisco telephone directory, a man named "A" leads all the rest.

"A" is actually the professional name of Bob Smith, a 27-year-old silversmith who sets up samples of his handiwork on the street. He chose the name "A," he said, "just to be the first in the phone book."

The directory ends with Vladimir Zzzzzzabakov, but his number was disconnected. Just above him is Zwill Zzzzstra. He is actually Gilbert Freitas, a retired police inspector who writes mystery novels. He lists the Zzzzstra name in the directory in the hope that a girl he met 30 years ago in Shanghai, named Zola, will see it and be prompted to call.

A Pacific Telephone official said the company had no policy governing the efforts of those who aim for the top or the bottom of the list.

"If a person says his name is Zzyx, how is a service representative going to argue?" he asked.

Revive An Old Tradition Of Making Own Cheeses

WYOMING, Minn. (UPI) — Yvonne Broadbent worked in town and her husband, Carroll, milked the cows until two years ago. Then they revived a European tradition of making cheese together on the farm.

"I'll start pumping the milk over, hon," Broadbent said to his wife, who was leaning over a stainless steel tub capable of holding 3,200 pounds of milk and checking the temperature. "If it comes too fast, just holler."

Broadbent, 43, begins his day at 5:30 a.m., milking 80 Holstein cows with the help of a hired hand. They milk the cows again at night and the night's milk is stored in a holding tank.

Mrs. Broadbent, 34, starts making the cheese in the big tank before 8 a.m. and then returns to the house to get son, Kevn, 7, off to school.

"I have to squeeze in meals and naps, too, for our daughter, Michelle," she said.

Michelle, 3, nibbles on the cheese and draws with crayons in the cheese house while her mother stirs the cheese curds in the tank.

"I worked in the Twin Cities until we had children," Mrs. Broadbent said. "Now I can work at home."

Making cheese on the farm is rare in the United States, Broadbent said.

Four other dairy farms in Minnesota make a similar product called Minnesota Farmstead Cheese. All got started two years ago with the help of the University of Minnesota.

Broadbent said the milk is heated to 80 degrees and a culture is added. At 86 degrees, a rennet or a coagulant is mixed with the milk and allowed to get firm.

"There is a tremendous amount of hand labor involved in a small cheese making operation," he said.

The Broadbents fill 5 and 10-pound plastic containers to form the cheese. The fresh cheese is kept in the molds until late in the afternoon and placed in a brine for 1½ to 3 days.

The cheese then is given a yellow or red plastic covering to keep it fresh and stored on shelves where it is turned frequently during the aging.

The Broadbents don't make cheese every day. On weekends they store the milk in tanks and sell it directly to a dairy.

Broadbent started farming in 1953, right out of high school. His grandfather was born on the farm on the fringe of the Twin Cities metropolitan area.

"I wanted to expand the farm," he said, "but at current land prices I couldn't buy much land for $50,000.

"I've invested $50,000, maybe $51,000 in this building and cheese making equipment. It's a way to add income to the farm."

Edmund A. Zotolla, university extension food microbiologist, said cheeses made on the farm are "a specialty" that helps improve dairy farm profits.

Zotolla said farm-made cheese is not intended to compete with low-priced, factory-made cheeses in Wisconsin, the No. 1 domestic producer. Instead, it competes with imported cheeses.

"Our Minnesota Gouda is as good as — if not better than — the Dutch cheese," Zotolla said. "We knew that cheese consumption was up, so we figured there was a market for high quality, higher-priced cheese."

Broadbent said he would like to sell more cheese at the farm — "the markup is better" — but most is sold through a broker, with the bulk going to the East and West coasts. Cheese is sold at the farm for $2.10 a pound.

The secret of cheese making on the farm is a culture developed by the university, he said. A small can of culture costs $7.50, he said, but "without it we couldn't make uniform cheese."

Still Practices Making Icons

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The icons of Rosette Mociornitza are created with all the religious attention to detail, craftsmanship and tradition that 11th-century monks lavished on the spiritual works of art.

Mrs. Mociornitza speculates that she is one of a handful of people able to create icons because few have an opportunity to learn the 1,000-year-old art.

Mrs. Mociornitza learned the ancient art 25 years ago in her native Romania while restoring damaged icons in churches and monasteries.

Her work has been exhibited by galleries in Rome, Paris, Munich and Amsterdam.

She directs the first Byzantine Museum of North America, which she established in Montreal in 1975.

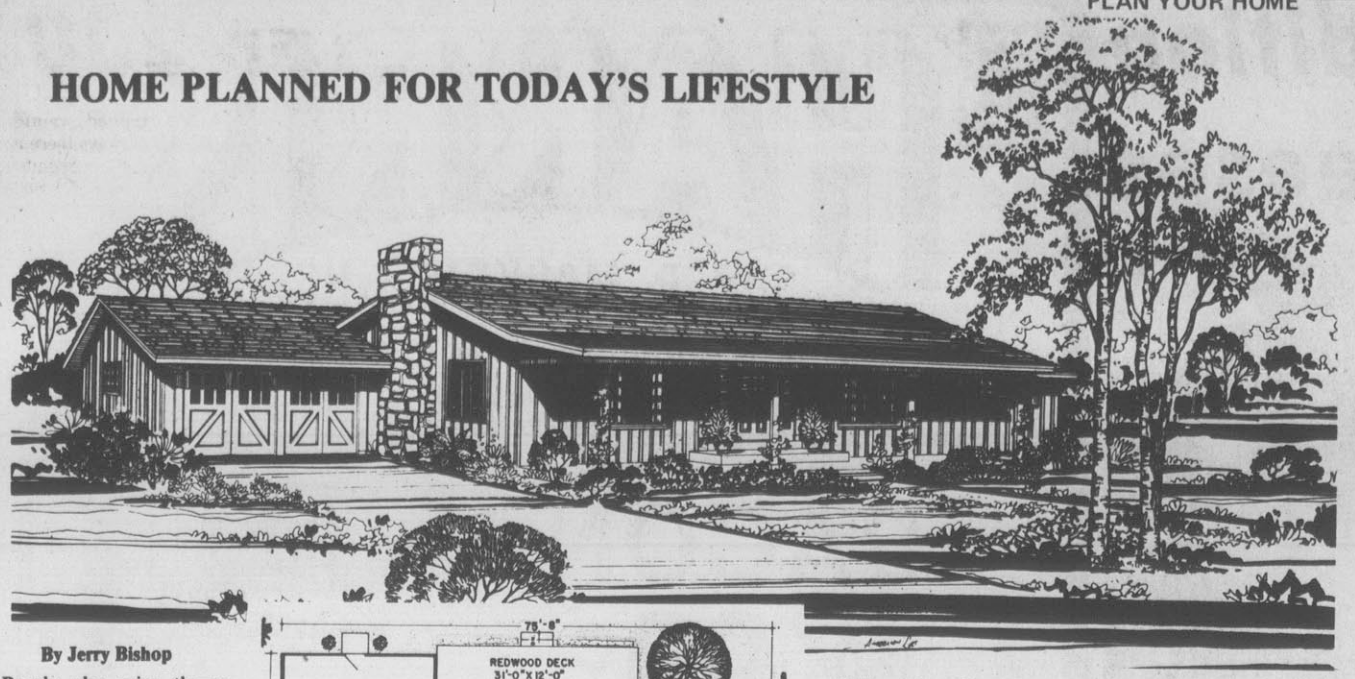
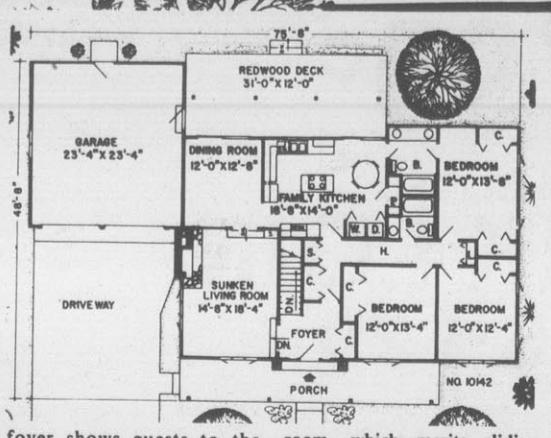
HOME PLANNED FOR TODAY'S LIFESTYLE





By Jerry Bishop

People who enjoy the relaxed informality of today's lifestyle will appreciate the Springview, a three bedroom, two bath ranch style plan.

The design offers a charming facade, open family kitchen, and immense redwood deck, set within reach of all living areas. Both adults and children will be satisfied with the floor plan, which arranges for adults-only living and dining room to balance the spacious informal areas.

Edged by a barn-inspired attached garage, the exterior shows a refreshing traditional approach. Small-paned windows are used abundantly, and a stone chimney adds visual warmth.

For seclusion and strongly defined space, the sunken living room is unbeatable. This one nestles a wood-burning fireplace in one corner and adjoins a large formal dining room, which merits sliding glass doors to the deck.

The family kitchen measures 18 by 14 to create an excellent group activity area. A center work island promotes efficiency, a pantry supplies food storage space, and a mini-laundry center is housed in a corner. For family meals, a dining area is outlined.

A hallway to the right of the foyer leads to the sleeping quarters which take in three bedrooms and plenty of closets. Particularly useful is the second full bath, accessible from either master bedroom or kitchen. A double garage is shown, and the full basement adds another 1,705 sq. ft. of potential space.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Some suggestions from readers:

"For years I had the problem of my children tracking mud all over the house after they had played outside. My husband told me about the upside down brushes they have at golf courses for the golfers to remove the mud from their spiked shoes. I had him buy one of them (he had to go to a wholesale sporting-goods store) and attach it to the front porch outside the door. Now everyone rubs the bottoms of his shoes on it before entering the house — and no more mud problem. If the regular golf brushes are not available, an ordinary scrubbing brush, attached upside down, would probably do just as well."

"It is sometimes difficult to get the dirt from the bottom of a flower vase. A simple solution is to mix equal parts of water and vinegar and let it remain in the vase overnight. A thorough rinsing the next day will clean the entire inside of the vase. Of course, be sure to remove the flowers from the vase before giving it the treatment, as I am not certain what the vinegar would do to the flowers."

"I once read in your column that re-silvering a mirror is not a job for the amateur because of the strong chemicals that must be used. I agree with you, but have some advice if there are only small scratches that must be repaired. If you put aluminum foil in the area behind the scratches, they will be less conspicuous and in some cases almost invisible."

"Once a can of oil paint has been opened and part of it used, the remainder gets a skin-like covering on it after a period of time no matter how tightly you have closed the can. I find that one way to prevent the formation of this skin is to pour a few drops of turpentine into the can just before you close it, seal the cover as best you can, then store the paint upside down."

"An electrician came to our house to put in a new outlet and gave us an excellent tip which I would like to pass along to your readers. He turned on one of the lamps, then took a cloth out of his bag. He turned off the light, then wiped the bulb quickly with the cloth. He showed me how much dust had come off the rag, then pointed out that the dust was cutting the light by about 25 percent. After he left, I went around the house doing the same thing to every bulb. Believe it or not, the difference was amazing. So, if you want to have more light in your house, do what I did and be pleasantly surprised. If a single bulb gives off more light, you may turn on fewer bulbs and save money."

"Years ago, when I had to put in a new pane of glass, I painted the putty a few days later to match the window frame. A neighbor showed me how to mix a little paint with the putty before applying it. I tried it recently and it worked! It saved me the trouble of painting."

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I have to finish my attic within the next couple of months. I would like to use gypsum board, but I didn't do too well with it a few years ago because of trouble with the painting. Are prepainted sheets of gypsum board available?

A. — You can get gypsum board with any kind of finish you want, although the painting of it should not pose any particular problem. If your lumber yard or building supply dealer does not stock gypsum board with special finishes, he can get it for you. Should you wish to see the various types of finishes, including those that simulate wall paneling, check your phone book to find a dealer with a larger inventory.

Q. — What type of baseboard molding would you recommend to harmonize with speckled vinyl tiles I intend to put down in my kitchen? Would light or dark wood molding be better?

A. — Why not try to get a vinyl molding? The dealer who sells the tiles usually has the proper harmonizing baseboard molding.

Q. — I want to put some electrical outlets in my house. I have had some experience with electricity and am sure I can handle the job. The problem is whether there are laws against doing this kind of work without an electrician's license.

A. — Most restrictions of this kind are regulated by local ordinances. Therefore, check with local authorities. An educated guess is that you will not be allowed to handle the project. However, there are some communities which will permit you to make the installation but require a final inspection by one of their electrical inspectors.

Q. — One of the floors in our house is painted. I would like to remove the paint, but don't like the idea of using a paint remover for such a large area. I have a belt sander. Will that take off the paint?

A. — Yes, but it would be a tough, long task. You will be better off to rent a floor sander. Tell the dealer to give you the proper paper for the removal of paint. Be sure to remove all furniture from the room, and take down drapes, curtains, etc. Sanding the floor with a large machine is also quite a job, but not as difficult as using a belt sander.

Q. — The concrete floor in our basement is starting to get a very fine layer of dust on it. I vacuumed the floor and it was clean for a few weeks, but it is getting dusty again. How can I correct this condition?

A. — Vacuum again. Then apply a coat of water glass or some other concrete sealer. Do you intend to paint the concrete now or at some later time? If so, read the label of the sealer to see whether it can be painted.

Q. — I clean all paint brushes right after using them and usually have no problems with them, but recently I cleaned a brush I had used to apply shellac and got nothing but a sticky mess. I had bought the brush especially for shellac and didn't use it for anything else, so I can't see what went wrong. What is your advice?

A. — It sounds very much as though you cleaned the brush with turpentine, which is fine for paint but not for shellac. The solvent for shellac is denatured alcohol, which must also be used for cleaning the brush. You are right in keeping that brush only for shellac.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 35 cents PLUS a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Water Faucet Hazards Argued

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Consumer Product Safety Commission is investigating carbon filters for water faucets to determine if they are hazardous.

A California man says they are, but manufacturers strongly dispute his allegations.

The filters are used to remove objectionable tastes from home drinking water, tastes usually caused by chlorine added to remove substances that are harmful to health.

The issue before the CPSC is whether filters containing only carbon provide a breeding ground for possibly harmful bacteria when water sets in them for a period of time, particularly overnight.

Dr. Robert Austin of Pasadena, Calif., petitioned the CPSC earlier this year to ban all carbon water filters that do not include an anti-bacterial agent.

Austin's petition contends research has shown a "high microorganism content is likely when using an unprotected carbon filter. The unprotected carbon filter is particularly dangerous after an overnight period. The stagnant water, when first drawn, can have dangerous concentrations of bacteria."

He also quotes a 1975 Environmental Protection Agency paper that says carbon filters marketed as "purifiers" for what is already essentially pure water is "grossly misleading to the consumer. Such devices actually trap the few bacteria that may be present in treated tap water, causing them to accumulate, grow and concentrate.

"From a microbiological standpoint, these are actually potentially more detrimental than beneficial to human health, and present a potential health hazard which would not exist if they were not used,' the EPA report says.

Austin's allegations prompted a response from the Water Quality Association, a Lombard, Ill.-based group of 1,200 manufacturers and distributors of water improvement equipment.

In a lengthy paper filed with the commission, the association says the dangers of bacteria have been exaggerated. The paper says:

"While bacteria can multiply in a water filter, it (the filter) cannot be considered as the cause of bacteria contamination in water. Neither the filter material nor its components will contribute nutrients that support bacterial growth. Thus, in almost 60 years of use, filters have never been shown to constitute a health problem."

The association says all water contains bacteria; microorganisms are present on and in the human body, including the mouth, in abundance; bacteria can multiply even in highly purified water; and most bacteria are harmless.

"There is no valid evidence that any health problem is caused or aggravated by the presence of saprophytic bacteria in drinking water," the group concluded.

The association says bacterial growth can occur in filters, just as it can anywhere water comes into contact with a surface — in in pipes, faucets, valves and aerators.

"If a water supply has been properly disinfected to render it microbiologically safe, that water, flowing through the pipes or through a filter cannot become microbiologically unsafe even thogh the number of indigenous, innocuous organisms may become higher," the association response said.

The CPSC is reviewing the arguments before making a recommendation to the agency's five commissioners.

Painting Requires A Good Applicator

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — "There is no such thing as a good paint job with a bad brush or applicator," says Jack Island, a paint applicator marketing manager.

Island says a poorly selected or maintained painting tool causes poor spreading, and uneven coating action transmits streaks, marks and stains to the paint.

An applicator should be matched to both the type of paint and the surface to be covered, Island says.

In choosing a tool, he advises:

— Look for brushes with thick bristles that taper gradually to the tip to keep their shape under pressure, that are flexible enough to bend easily without spreading and have thin tips for better paint pickup and holding power.

— Rollers should have a cage-type frame for better tension control and easier cleaning. Handgrips should be comfortable, with all parts made of solvent-resistant material.

— Paint gliders and other special flat applicators should have removable pads for easy cleaning and quick color changing. Use a glider with a trim guide in tight spots and along edges. Extension handles should be lightweight and lock firmly and easily into place.

— A paint bucket or tray should accommodate most sizes of brushes and rollers, be sturdy, solvent-resistant and built so it does not easily tip over.

— Natural hog bristle brushes are superior for oil-base paints; polyester filament brushes work well with all types of paints, shellacs and lacquers; and nylon filament brushes should be used for water-base paints.

— For roller covers, use one quarter inch nap for smooth surfaces, such as plaster and sheet rock; one half inch nap for medium surfaces, such as texture plaster and rough wood; and three quarter inch nap for rough surfaces such as concrete block, stucco and brick.

SMALL CD SHARE

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's defense budget for fiscal 1980 will contain $110 million for civil defense spending, up by $13 million from the 1979 budget, administration sources say.

GARDEN CLINIC

N.C. State University Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. What are the size particles in which pine bark mulch is usually available? (H.E., Carrboro)

A. The largest size and the most expensive is referred to as nuggets or chunks. They are used as a "top dressing" or as a decorative material. The next smallest size is called chips or mini-chips. The smallest size is classified as a soil conditioner or shreds. This material consists of fine pieces of bark and the cambium layer of trees. The National Bark Producers Association has done much to standardize bark quality in recent years. Look for the NBPA label on the bagged bark which you purchased. (Dick Allison, extension forestry specialist)

Q. Should plants be watered in the winter? (W.S., Greensboro)

A. Yes, especially if they are newly set plants. Just because the sky is overcast and the temperature is low doesn't mean that plants can't dry out. A cold, dry wind removes moisture from both the soil and plant tissue. When in doubt about watering, scrape a few inches of topsoil from around your plants. If the soil is dry, water. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. What is your opinion of the black walnut as a shade tree? I've seen it advertised as a fast growing tree that will provide quick shade. (Mrs. W.C., Harrisburg)

A. The black walnut is better as an orchard tree or timber tree than it is as a shade tree. It is quick growing. One-year-old seedlings are often five to six feet high. But black walnut is late to leaf out in the spring and early to shed its leaves in the fall. Its roots are toxic to many shrubs. Root rots and stem cankers are a problem. Grass is difficult to grow beneath them. The nuts make a mess in the yard. (Bill Huxster, extension forestry specialist)

Color TV Set Sales Soaring

NEW YORK (UPI) — The annual sale of color television sets in America has soared 100,000 percent in the 25 years since they were put on the market. In 1954, the first year of production, some 5,000 color sets were sold, according to the pioneer manufacturer RCA. By the end of 1978, the industry expects a record 10 million sets will have been purchased. With inflation sending just about everything else soaring, color TV sets have defied the trend, says RCA. The initial cost of such sets in 1954 was about $1,000; today the average price approximates half that.

'SQUASHED'

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Brothers Hugh and John Ritz have harvested a squash weighing an estimated 350 pounds.

It took four men to load it on a truck for the trip from their East Canton garden to their home in Canton.

Old Murals To Be Preserved

DALLAS (AP) — Two Peter Hurd murals will be left behind when the Postal Service moves out of the Old Terminal annex here after 41 years, but their future will not be in jeopardy.

The federal government's house-keeping agency, the General Services Administration, has first option on the building and plans to protect the paintings.

Gerry Carter And Friends Prepare For Year 2000

By RICHARD BLYSTONE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Good thing it's still 21 years to the second millenium, because the folks at WACY 2,000 have a big job ahead of them "making the world fit to celebrate" by then.

"Of course it can be done, and you can help," says projects director Gerry Carter. Optimism permeates his headquarters in the Dickensian quarter of Clerkenwell like Old Spice in a fraternity bathroom.

WACY 2000 is the World Association for the Celebration of the Year 2000 (cable address: HOPEFUL, LONDON), "the un-disaster movement, the opposite of the doom watch."

In its first 15 years WACY — pronounced way-see, not wacky, please — has recruited 215 towns around the world, from Alva, Okla., to Wynyard, Tasmania, into a tree-planting program to make the world a better place.

Now for the Crystal Jubilee, Carter has proclaimed a "Seven-Year Creative Action Programme" to be followed by a 15-year "Countdown to the Millenium."

The former involves seven groups, including the Floating Islands Action Group and the World Innovation Network (WIN), as well as the Friends of Cleopatra's Needle, which is known to have at least two members.

Asking a question of Carter is like chasing a hummingbird in a truck. He flashes from concept to concept — the origin of the pyramids, space stations, Victorian railway guides. Maybe by 2,000 they will have invented somebody who can listen as fast as Carter can talk.

"We're expanding the movement from towns to individuals, personal responsibility, seven thousand seeds of a Sequoia tree weigh one single ounce and yet you can be responsible for the biggest living thing in the world ...

"Instead of trees you could plant a celebration fountain, there's a model over there, shaped like millstones — millstones for milestones — you toss a coin in and the water shoots higher, it looks nice and at the end the coins can be used for some community project to celebrate the millenium ..."

It emerges that besides the 215 towns — "some of them seem to have forgotten they're members" — WACY has about two dozen hard-core members around the world including Carter; World President Jose H. Jasso Alvarez from the municipal government of Guadalajara, Mexico; Horace Bright, the perpetual motion inventor from Waltham Forest; and founder John Goodman, a children's party entertainer turned printer.

It began, Goodman recalls, in 1963, the year of the Cuban Crisis. He was watching television, "another play about an atomic disaster. And I thought, well, this is all very entertaining and all that but continually harping on doom has to be both unrealistic and unhealthy.

"I thought then and still feel that we've got to look at the worst possibilities But why not do something ahead on the pleasant side to be ready in case disaster doesn't strike?

"I thought of a slogan — 'A Stable and Prosperous World by Year 2,000' — and I tried getting to the top people at that time. I wrote Khrushchev, MacMillan, Kennedy but I didn't get any replies from them so I thought I'd lower my sights a little."

As a sloganeer Goodman might rank somewhat short of the Pravda editorial board, but his choice of the world's small towns was dead on. There were thousands upon thousands out there ignored by the big cities and the big politicos.

"The small towns need to become a force in the world," says Goodman. "They've got a lot in common in the things that really matter — roads and keeping the schools going. They haven't got time for silly things like threatening each other with destruction."

Over 10 years, spending on the average something more than $10 a week of his own money, Goodman mailed 40,000 letters to mayors around the world.

The message: "Membership Free If You Plant A Tree." The trees would be a substitute, he explained, for the rockets everywhere pointing at the sky.

Some replied cautiously: "Provided always there are no costs involved in membership the council of the Shire of Cloncurry, New South Wales, is prepared to join the Association." But Watrous Saskatchewan, pledged to plant 2,000 trees a year.

Towns in 28 countries eventually found their way onto WACY's membership rolls, more or less loosely.

"It was never my idea to tell others what to do, just to float the idea and let them debate it," said Goodman "It's up to the towns now to take up the thing and spend the thousands and millions on it. I'm not spending much of my own money on it nowadays; maybe 50 pence (a little over $1) a week, though Gerry is spending more than he can afford."

Art Proefrock Cleans Up The Chemical Spills

By BILL DENSMORE
Associated Press Writer

VIRDEN, Ill. (AP) — The rails grow cold and brittle during winter. They buckle under the heat of summer. Freights derail.

Cargoes spill, or explode. Lethal cargoes sometimes kill.

When trains derail, railroads most often turn to Hulcher Emergency Services here for help. When the wreck is especially dangerous — when the debris is deadly — railroads ask for Art Proefrock and his special team.

Just as Red Adair is known worldwide as the killer of oil well fires, Proefrock and Hulcher Emergency Services are considered the best way to restore a railroad after derailments.

It is a growing industry for Hulcher, a 350-employee operation with 19 offices east of the Rockies. The Federal Railway Administration says there were 8,073 reported train derailments in 1977, and Hulcher's toll-free hot line rang 1,800 times.

Most often, a Hulcher crew was dispatched within the the company's self-imposed one-hour deadline.

"If they're in the business of derailments, I'd say they're in a growing business, unfortunately," says Michael W. Delaney, spokesman for the Association of American Railroads in Washington, D.C.

Says founder M. L. Hulcher, a Virden-born former farmer and cable layer: "There's no place here for pansies."

The sign over his desk reads, "The impossible is something we have never done — yet."

Proefrock, 55, a chain-smoking former military chemical warfare and radiation specialist, was at Waverly, Tenn., in February after a derailed tank car carrying propane gas exploded, killing 16 persons, among them the town's police and fire chiefs.

The nightmare of flames and flying metal melted signs like candy, sliced through a water main, demolished 14 homes and businesses and injured another 45 persons.

When Proefrock and his five-man team got there 16 hours later, another full propane tank car remained to be emptied and moved.

Striding through smoldering ruins, Proefrock tapped the car to sound out its structural integrity. He installed pressure gauges, and looked carefully for any gashes or bulges in the scorched steel skin.

Later, he crawled atop the bomb-like tanker and attached pumps, which transferred the propane to another car.

A few days later, eight persons died in a derailment in Youngstown, Fla., when a chlorine tanker leaked half its toxic contents,spreading fumes across a highway. Again, Proefrock was called.

He and his men dug a pit and filled it with sodium hydroxide from another car. Then, they tipped the chlorine car's contents into the pit. The chlorine reacted with the other chemical to form two harmless things, salt and water.

The tough calls come for Proefrock about once a week, and railroads that want him — 67 are under contract with Hulcher in all — pay extra for his services. Hulcher teams say they have never had a fatality.

Hulcher's fee varies with the difficulty of the wreck. How much does he charge? He won't say for competitive reasons.

Proefrock and Hulcher must be ready to contend with at least 10,000 hazardous substances shipped by rail. Each year, the railroad association says, a million carloads of dangerous materials are shipped.

Hulcher's array of anti-derailment weapons includes pumps, hoses, gauges, testers of various kinds, ractors, slings, special tools, a fleet of 70 flat-bed truck loaded with special rigs, plus three aircraft.

"Everybody's got to do his thing," Proefrock says. "I'm sure people would say that Red Adair is crazy, too. I guess you feel you have a purpose in life, and this is mine."

Security Tip For Travel

Mountford, who led Scotland Yard's "Flying Squad" against organized crime in London for 25 years, now heads a team of 155 special agents employed by the American Express Co. around the world to safeguard traveler's checks.

In addition to that basic injunction about carrying traveler's checks — not cash — on journeys, Mountford has some more offbeat tips.

For men:

—Divide your valuables between your two jacket pockets or your two front trouser pockets. "Put nothing in your hip pocket except trash, stuff you can afford to lose," he says.

—Carry your valuables with you in a small plastic bag. "The bag can be worn under your clothes, strapped around the neck from a chain long enough to hang just below your trouser tops."

Women, says Mountford, "are by nature more cautious than men. They have to be to survive. Men just lose things because they are not attached to them."

He recommends that women avoid purse snatchers by walking away from the street edge of sidewalks, carry handbags with the flaps toward their bodies and carry only necessities so overloaded bags don't gape open.

Once the traveler has safeguarded his person from pickpockets, Mountford has still more hints about safety in hotel rooms.

"Use the hotel safe to store valuables, even if it's only for one night," he said. "That puts the onus on the hotel to safeguard your property."

"That will stop any door being opened short of kicking it down."

Designed First Postal Stamp

NEW YORK (UPI) — Great Britain's Sir Rowland Hill conceived and designed the first postage stamp, known as the "Penny Black," portraying an exquisite profile of then young Queen Victoria in 1840. Since then, according to Alain de Cadenet, here on a good will tour for the British Post Office, the portrait or profile of a monarch has served to identify the nation's stamps except in the case of special commemoratives.

Leishman Not Household Name

Lathrop Leishman (as in LEASH-man) may not be a household word but just about everyone talks about the projects closest to his heart, especially on New Year's Day.

The projects? The Pasadena Tournament of Roses and The Rose Bowl Game.

This New Year's, people will not only hear about him they'll also see him, because Leishman — who has served the two events for nearly half a century — has been honored by being named Grand Marshal of the festival. He will ride in the 90th Pasadena Tournament of Roses Parade, to be telecast by CBS and NBC (11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.), and he will be among the guests of honor at the 65th Rose Bowl football game.

Bob Barker and Phyllis George will be hosting CBS-TV's parade coverage, and Michael Landon, Kelly Lange and Bryant Gumble will be taking care of the hosting duties for NBC-TV.

To date, there have been 77 grand marshals of the Tournament of Roses Parade. Over the years we have grown accustomed to seeing famous grand marshals, such as, in recent years, Gerald Ford, Roy Rogers and Dale Evans, Henry Aaron, Charles Schulz and John Wayne.

Grand marshals didn't become a part of the Tournament of Roses until 1902, the 13th year of the parade. But it wasn't until 1933 that someone who could legitimately be called a celebrity became grand marshal. That was Mary Pickford, "America's Sweetheart,' who rode in stately splendor through the streets of Pasadena in a coach drawn by four white horses with harnesses of pink satin.

The first Rose Parade, in 1890, was headed by Dr. Francis Rowland, a member of Pasadena's Valley Hunt Club, the forerunner of the Tournament of Roses Association.

Since then, from the world of show business, these have included Shirley Temple (1939) — who, incidentally, was chosen by Leishman the year he was president — Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy (1940), Bob Hope (1947 and '69), Walt Disney (1966), Kate Smith (1967) and others.

Four former presidents have served as grand marshal, and there have also been military heroes, as well as sports heroes.

Lauren Tewes, of "The Love Boat," and Erik Estrada, of "CHiPs," are the co-hosts for the musical celebration welcoming in the New Year in "New Year's Rockin' Eve, '79" on Sunday, Dec. 31 (11:30 p.m.-1 a.m.) on ABC-TV.

Doc In, Superwoman Out

In "The Incredible Journey of Doctor Meg Laurel," Lindsay Wagner ("The Bionic Woman") is knocked to the floor by a bulky mountain man, dragged down a dusty road by a team of frightened mules, stands by helplessly as her baggage filled with vials of medicine rolls down a steep mountainside, cringes in fear when a resentful Appalachian blasts a hole in her cabin wall with his shotgun, and bleeds when she's put under the knife by a black-country "healer."

Miss Wagner, in the title role of "The Incredible Journey of Doctor Meg Laurel," a new motion picture-for-television airing on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies," calls upon human powers and relies on common sense in her uphill fight to bring modern (1920's) medicine to the mountain people of Appalachia.

Miss Wagner says she enjoys this marked departure from her image as television's "super woman." "I certainly don't want to be known only as 'The Bionic Woman,'" she said.

Her role in the film is a well-calculated appearance for the actress, who has mapped out her career with the same meticulous care that a choreographer outlines a dance. From the time she was a child, she knew just how she was going to become an actress, albeit a plan that has required many difficult decisions and minor adjustments.

Miss Wagner started at 13 with dancing lessons which segued to acting classes in Los Angeles, her home town. Her first career decision came soon afterwards when she was seen by talent scouts in a production and was offered the lead in a television series. She decided that she needed more experience, so she turned it down and became a fashion model instead.

Lindsay Wagner portrays a respected Boston physician, who decides to return to her roots to set up practice, on "The Incredible Journey of Doctor Meg Laurel," a new three-hour motion picture-for-television to be presented on "The Tuesday Night Movie," Jan. 2 (8-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Wisequacking Duck Professor

Wisequacking duck professor Ludwig Von Drake hosts an animated holiday special spotlighting the legends of Paul Bunyon, Windwagon Smith and Mudville's storied ballplaying Casey, on NBC-TV's "The Wonderful World of Disney," Sunday, Dec. 31 (7 to 8 p.m.).

Assisted by Herman, the Bottle Beetle, Von Drake embellishes the legends with songs, maxims and speedy costume changes. He even swallows an Irish dialect pill to narrate the tale of Casey, Mudville's infamous ballplayer.

"Casey Strikes Again" depicts what happens to the ballplayer after he strikes out in a notorious championship game. Depressed for months afterwards, Casey's mood brightens upon learning he will soon be a father. He is disappointed once again, however, when his wife presents him with a daughter.

In the following years, Casey becomes the father of nine daughters and resigns himself to the fact that a son will never redeem him in baseball annals. Realizing that his girls have inherited his baseball prowess, Casey organizes them into a team that joins a female baseball league. Almost immediately, the Caseyettes begin a winning streak.

In the last inning of the league's championship game, Casey loses faith in his daughters when the visiting team takes the lead. Disguising himself as one of the players, he advances to the plate and begins to repeat his infamous act when daughter Patsy slips behind him and strikes a homer.

"The Saga of Windwagon Smith" relates the story of a sailor-turned-landlubber who constructed a huge Conestoga-type wagon which flew over the old Oregon and Santa Fe trails by means of massive sails. Smith makes his legend in an adventure with a beautiful stowaway and a dreaded Kansas twister.

Dirk Benedick's Role

Dirk Benedict has found his role as Lieutenant Starbuck aboard ABC-TV's "Battlestar Galactica" one of the easiest and most fulfilling of his career, simply because the character is a lot like himself!

"It's his nature and the fact that a large part of him is still a kid," Dirk says enthusiastically during a luncheon break from filming at Universal Studios, "which is wonderful and a very exciting thing for me about this series. He is very close, in some ways, to my own nature.

"He is a person of action, almost impulsive, which gets him into trouble at the outset, but he's able to turn that potentially situation around. He's a bit of an anti-hero in this regard, and he's outside the immediate family aboard the space craft so he can do what he wants. It's just that sometimes his decisions aren't quite perfect.

"I mean," Dirk adds with a grin, "he's the kind of guy that if, as an actor, things weren't going right for him in Hollywood, he'd venture off some place else. His friends would say to him, 'Starbuck, what are you doing? You can't leave town.' But he'd go and he'd call from Kansas City and say 'Gee, you won't believe it!'

"In a way it's an unconscious behavior," Dirk adds. "I'm more disciplined, and I have a more definite dream of what I want, but as an actor you have to be able to adapt and change. There's always a new challenge."

Indeed, Dirk has pursued a lot of challenges since he left his hometown of White Sulphur Springs, Montana and enrolled at Whitman College in Walla Walla, Wash. In fact, that's how he became an actor.

"Fortunately, I had a father who — even though he died when I was young — told me, 'You don't have to be a success, be a failure. Be whatever you want to be, and don't let anyone tell you that you have to do anything for money. Security makes people happy, so do what you want to do.'

New Year's Eve

If you want to celebrate New Year's Eve and yet not leave home, take heart. You can, by merely turning on your television set, because some of our top entertainers will be welcoming in 1979 with music and merriment. PBS is featuring a gala celebration with the Boston Pops and guest artist Jose Greco; CBS will televise the action at New York's prestigious Waldorf-Astoria when Guy Lombardo's Royal Canadians play their 50th New Year's Eve broadcast; and ABC airs a special musical welcome to 1979 featuring major stars of the contemporary music scene.

Lauren Tewes of "Love Boat" and "CHiPs" star Erik Estrada are the co-hosts of ABC's "New Year's Rockin' Eve, '79" (11:30 p.m. to 1 a.m.). There will be a special appearance by Barry Manilow, and others performing are Chuck Mangione, the Village People, Tanya Tucker and Rick James.

As midnight approaches, Dick Clark, the program's executive producer, will be seen in a special live sequence from New York's Time Square where he will count down the final seconds to the birth of the new year, viewing the "dropping of the ball" — the sequence of lights — descending from the Allied Chemical Building tower.

The New Year receives its welcome from Manilow who performs "It's Just Another New Year's Eve" in a special sequence from The Spectrum in Philadelphia.

Country and western star Tanya Tucker offers her rock 'n' roll dynamite with "Not Fade Away," by Buddy Holly, and later "I'm the Singer, You're the Song" and "Lover, Goodbye."

The dynamic Rick James sings "Mary Jane" and "You and I."

Of course, if you're not up to all the hoop-la and festivities coming your way, NBC has a bit quieter fare, "Travels With My Aunt" (beginning at 11:30 p.m.), a delightful movie starring Maggie Smith.

Classics

The holiday football bowls annuallly stage a vigorous, sometimes vicious battle for the top teams they can grab, and this season has been no exception.

The PAC 10 champion always takes on the Big Ten kingpin in the Rose Bowl, which was the original game of its kind, and the results consistently seem to turn out in favor of the PAC 10 teams. Most of the time, they feature a more wide-open attack than their more conservative, ground-oriented counterparts from the Midwest. And, like clockwork, the PAC 10 usually pulls off what the experts continue to call "upsets."

Interest Writer

Loring Mandel, as a writer more interested in character than category, doesn't find it at all odd that a man should have written "Breaking Up," the frank drama of a woman's adjustment to her inpending divorce (after 15 years of marriage) which will rebroadcast as an "ABC Theatre" presentation Monday, Jan. 1 (9 to 11 p.m.).

"I really believe that what's been happening with women in the past five or six years is infinitely more interesting that what's been happening with men, in terms of the kind of changes that have been going on in our lives and the ways we're perceived by others," he explains. "Women today are far more interesting dramatically than men."

Not that men are ignored or caricatured in Mandel's script for "Breaking Up," which stars Lee Remick and Granville Van Dusen as the troubled couple. Tom, the "antihero" who leaves his wife for reasons that are impossible for her to comprehend, but that are no less real — and painful — to him, is not presented as a wretch who heartlessly deserts his family, nor as a faceless figure of villainy. He is just a human being dealing with a change of life he does not fully understand himself.

"I don't feel there's any point in writing absolute villains or absolute heroes, because I don't believe they exist in life," Mandel says. "I don't know anyone who thinks of himself as a villain; everybody tends to go through life doing what they think best, no matter how insensitive it seems to others. It's the writer's job to see things as the character does, and it's very hard for any character to see himself as villainous."

Mandel is aware that the shattered marriage in "Breaking Up" may be a little atypical in that the separated couple try to overcome their anger and come to reasonable terms: "I know that a great many such break-ups end in such bitterness that a continuing relationship becomes impossible," he admits, "but I think it's worth working for."

Ironically, because of the greater number of divorces today, Mandel thinks that particular problem — the unmendable smashing of bridges between people — may be lessening: "There used to be far greater stress on people to keep un unhappy marriage together when divorce had a greater social opprobrium; their relationship was more likely to be totally poisoned by the time they decided to end it, and that poison tended to prevent the children from really maintaining decent relationships with the parent they didn't live with. I'm not a socialogist, but my guess is that this is less true now."

Sooners Look Revenge

The unofficial color of the 1979 Orange Bowl is red, and one of the teams won't just be wearing the color — they'll be seeing it too. The Oklahoma Sooners, who may have lost any chance for a shot at the NCAA Championship with a loss this season to the Nebraska Cornhuskers, get an unusual chance for revenge Monday, Jan. 1, when the two Big 8 powers collide in the annual Orange Bowl game (8 p.m. on NBC-TV).

One of the Huskers who will try to relive that memorable victory that still warms the heart of every Husker fan is I.M. Hipp, who has broken nearly every record held by running backs at this school.

But the Orange Bowl has become familiar terrain for coach Barry Switzer's Sooners, who will be making their third appearance in the last four years in the Miami classic. Nebraska, too, has been a frequent visitor to the Miami game, chalking up consecutive Orange Bowl triumphs in 1971, '72 and '73.

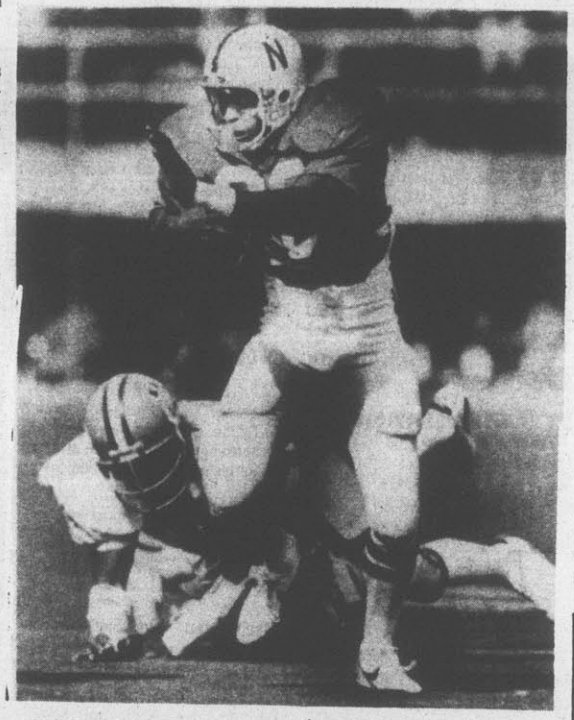
For Oklahoma, the only blemish on an otherwise perfect season (10-1) was their Nov. 12 clash with the Cornhuskers in cold, windy Lincoln, Neb. Fulfilling quarterback Thomas Lott's prophecy that the only way they (Okla.) could lose was if they beat themselves, the Sooners lost six fumbles, including the final crushing miscue only three yards from the Nebraska goal with 3:27 left in the game. They were left to look on hopelessly as the Huskers ran out the clock for a 17-14 win and a share of the Big 8 Championship.

One week later, the Sooners were earning a share of that seemingly secure Nebraska title as they drubbed intra-state rival Oklahoma State 62-7, while the Huskers were being upset by Missouri 35-31. Nebraska finished the regular season with a 9-2 mark.

That Sooners-Huskers matchup did not accurately indicate the offensive fire-power of both clubs. Both dominate team stats for total offense and rushing. Leading the way for Nebraska, the nation's total leader in total offense, is I-back Rick Bearns, whose 255-yard effort in a losing cause versus Missouri set a Nebraska single-game rushing record and gave him 2,605 career rushing yards, also a team record.

Oklahoma has the most productive rushing attack in the nation and ranks just behind Nebraska in total offense, thanks in great part to junior Billy Sims. The Heisman Trophy winner shattered the Big 8 single-season rushing record with his 209-yard performance versus Oklahoma State that gave him 1,762 yards for the season.

Both teams may attack a lot more this time through the air. The cold weather in Lincoln limited the effectiveness of Thomas Lott of the Sooners and Tom Sorley of Nebraska. Both sport fine arms.



I.M. Hipp dodges around a would-be tackler enroute to another long gain. The Nebraska Cornhuskers running back will join his teammates when they challenge their long-time rivals in the Big Eight, the Oklahoma Sooners in the Orange Bowl Monday, Jan. 1 at 8 p.m. on NBC-TV.

Loves A Parade

William Conrad loves parades, from the sound of the very first drum roll signaling the pageantry to commence, to the very end, when the distant sounds of marching bands and the crowds forming their own procession in the streets are all that remains of the pomp and splendor.

It was a feeling he had as a boy in Oklahoma. It is a feeling that sustains to this day, and the reason, he says, he will host, for the fifth consecutive year, the "Cotton Bowl Festival Parade," which will be broadcast live from Dallas, Texas, on Monday, Jan. 1 (10 to 11:30 a.m.), on CBS-TV.

"I'm a sucker for parades," he says unabashedly. "Always have been. Always will be. As a matter of fact, there are two public events that I love more than any others — parades and circuses."

Not only does he have a special affection for parades, Conrad — who has been parade master of ceremonies on the Network's "All-American Thanksgiving Day Parade" for the last six years — says he loves hosting them, too. "Thanksgiving Day, Christmas Day and New Year's Day are family days. I enjoy the feeling that I am reaching people I like and who, I feel, like me."

Newman, Rollin Co-Host

Edwin Newman and Betty Rollin co-host "The American Family — An Endangered Species?," the three-hour prime-time NBC News special to be telecast Tuesday, Jan. 2 (beginning at 8 p.m.).

The program will focus on American family life through a series of family portraits — intimate film essays representing many of the changes in our society that constitute a revolution in family living. Interspersed with these close-ups will be opinions by noted experts on the trends and variations now taking place which are affecting the family lifestyles of millions of Americans.

Those who will comment on these family portraits and the transformations the families are experiencing are Jerome Kagan, Professor of Human Development at Harvard University; Alvin F. Poussaint, Associate Professor of Psychiatry at Harvard Medical School; Kenneth Keniston, Andrew Mellon Professor of Human Development at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Amitai Etzioni, Professor of Sociology at Columbia University; and writer Jane Howard, author of "Families" and teacher at the State University of New York at Albany.

Talk show host Phil Donahue will host one of the segments of the program, in which celebrities and public figures offer lively and outspoken commentary on the different types of family lifestyles now evident in this country. Excerpts from some of the statements follow:

Erma Bombeck, writer and columnist: "I think I have heard that the American family is an endangered species every two weeks for about the last ten years. I think my husband starts the rumor just to cheer me up."

Mort Sahl, satirist: "We've been liberated from family responsibility by the liberals. They were the ones that laughed at Norman Rockwell. The question is what are they replacing him with?

Loretta Lynn, country singer: "Well, if you love together you can live together. If you don't love together you don't live together — very long."

Dialect Doctor

The "Henry Higgins" of Hollywood is Robert Easton, the dialect doctor. All of his patients are actors or actressess and have the same affliction, a speech difficulty. It isn't a speech impediment but a dialect deficiency which affects them, and Easton knows the cure.

It was for this reason that he was called upon to practice his expertise on the cast of "The Incredible Journey of Doctor Meg Laurel," airing Jan. 2 (8 to 11 p.m.), on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies." Lindsay Wagner stars in the story of a woman who gives up her medical career in Boston to care for the mountain people of the Appalachians of Virginia.

Easton had to coach 23 actors in the idiosyncracies of the dialect for that particular part of the country. It was the largest number of performers he had ever taught the same dialect to in a single show.

"The most difficult part," recalls Easton, "was not in teaching the dialect but maintaining a balance among the 23 actors so that none exaggerated one aspect of the dialect more than the other."

He had long discussions with the writers of the film and was given carte blanche to change the work to fit the pattern of the region's dialect. "But I never changed the thrust of the script," he points out. "I only tightened the nuts and bolts." Additionally, Easton was on the set every day of filming, listening carefully on earphones to every word spoken on the show.

James Woods, playing the Sin Eater in the drama, was delighted. He said he knew nothing of the dialect, which Easton assured him was the best approach to learning. "I like to be accurate," Woods explained. "Unfortunately, many of the dialects we hear from the screen are cliche accents which are completely inaccurate."

Filming Begun

Production has begun on "Dummy," the true-life account of a black deaf-mute accused of and brought to trial for the murder of a prostitute in Chicago, and the trusting relationship that develops between him and his also-deaf attorney.

Paul Sorvino and LeVar Burton star in the adaption of Ernest Tidyman's non-fiction book about the events leading up to and including the precedent-setting trial. Also starring are Rose Gregorio, Brian Dennehy and Gregg Henry.

"Dummy" explores the binding relationship of trust that evolves between the accused and his court-appointed attorney, as well as exposing the inhumanities that confront a deaf and dumb man accused of a crime. As a result of his severe handicap, the defendent is determined incompetent by the law to stand trial since he could neither be informed of the charges made against him, nor could he testify to his innocence because of his inability to communicate by reading, writing, lip reading or sign reading.

Twenty-year-old deaf-mute Donald Lang (Burton) is connected with the murder of a black prostitute by circumstantial evidence. Unable to defend himself or afford his own attorney, the court appoints Lowell Myers (Sorvino) to represent him. Myers has been deaf himself since childbirth, but because he received the special education this handicap requires, Myers can and does articulate Lang's isolation and frustration during the five years it took him to get a trial for his client, while struggling against his own failing ability to speak.

The drama is being filmed in and around Chicago, where the real action and trial proceedings took place.

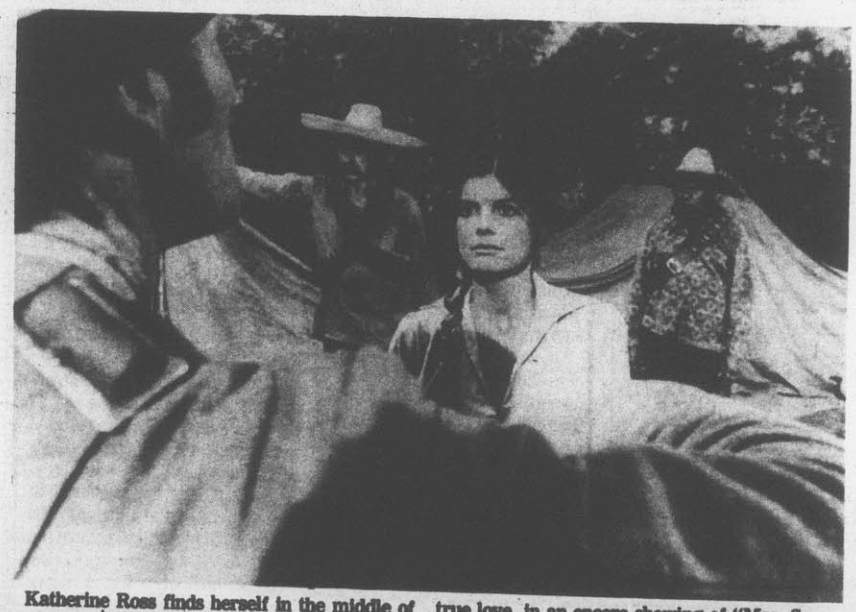
'Carson's Best'

Lola Falana tells how much energy she puts into her work, David Steinberg talks about his early performing days in Canada, author Erica Jong explains that some of her writing is autobiographical, and the Mummenschanz group performs impressive pantomime, on "The Best of Carson" on NBC-TV's "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson," Tuesday, Jan. 9.

'Mrs. Sundance' Is Back

Katharine Ross, who co-starred in the hit motion picture, "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid," appears again as the notorious Etta Place in "Mrs. Sundance Rides Again" airing as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," Dec. 31 (9 to 11 p.m.).

The suspenseful action film picks up the adventures of the beautiful fugitive when she is left alone and desperate following the deaths of Sundance and Cassidy. On the run from Charlie Siringo, she seeks help from the revolutionary, Pancho Villa.



Katherine Ross finds herself in the middle of the Mexican Revolution when she stars once again as Etta Place, the Sundance Kid's one true love, in an encore showing of "Mrs. Sundance Rides Again," on "The Sunday Night Movie," Dec. 31 (9-11 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

'Giraffe' In Production

Production has begun in Nairobi, Kenya, on "Giraffe," a television film based on Jock Leslie-Melville's book, "Raising Daisy Rothschild," and starring Susan Anspach and Simon Ward.

Actors Reflect Roles

Andrea Marcovicci sat on the beach, looking out to a misty sea as she talked of her love of singing and how music makes her feel free.

David Dukes and Andrea Marcovicci star as two vibrant, carefree, fun-loving young people about to be married when their lives are turned upside down after he is paralyzed in a surfing accident in "Some Kind of Miracle," poignant, powerful dramatic new motion picture-for-television airing Wednesday, Jan. 3 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

David Dukes was in a wheelchair, parked against the stone wall of a county rehabilitation center, speaking about how he was treated by people who thought he was handicapped.

The contrasting settings on different days were a fitting background for the moods of the television film in which they star, "Some Kind of Miracle," a drama of how love is tested, to be presented on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movies," Jan. 3 (9 to 11 p.m).

Dukes and Miss Marcovicci portray an engaged couple whose lives are changed in an instant when he is paralyzed in a surfing accident. Their joyous outing at the beach turns into a struggle for recovery, physical and emotional, from the shock of his spinal injury.

Jones Makes Acting Debut

Comedy, adventure and intrigue mark the acting debut of singer Tom Jones, who plays a charming rogue with criminal plans in "Pleasure Cove," an NBC World Premiere movie about guests and staff as a posh island resort, on "NBC Wednesday Night at the Movies," Jan. 3 (9 to 11 p.m.). Constance Forslund stars as a conscientious staff member who unwittingly finds romance.

Harry Guardino, Joan Hackett, Shelley Fabares, Ron Masak, Barbara Luna and Wes Parker guest star.

Hoping for adventure and a new challenge, Kim Parker (Forslund) ingeniously talks herself into the job of assistant manager at Pleasure Cove, an island where everyone's dreams are fulfilled. She promptly meets and is romanced by charming Englishman Raymond Gordon (Jones), whose cover as a vacationing guest belies his criminal plans with co-horts Gale Tyler and muscleman Donald (Luna and Parker). Believing Kim is an undercover cop who is wise to their plans, Gale and Donald attempt to discourage Raymond's romantic intentions toward Kim.

Cast Changes

On the daytime series "As the World Turns," Heather Cunningham has left her role of Dee Stewart while Richie Allan (Arnie the bartender) and Robin Graves (Ginny) have been written out of the script. Suzanne Davidson is returning, at least periodically, as Betsy Stewart. Twelve-year-old Rachel Kelly appeared as a hospital patient during the show's annual Christmas festivities, and Max Brown left the series when Kevin Thompson was killed off.

Meanwhile, new guests arrive at Pleasure Cove hoping for romantic fulfillment — spinster Helen Perlmutter (Fabaras), anxious to strike up a relationship with another guest, a bumbling Casanova named Joe (Masak); and estranged couple Martha and Bert Harrison (Hackett and Guardino), who arrive with their respective new lovers for a long-awaited romantic tryst. However, a mix-up in room reservations transforms the twosomes into a feuding foursome in the hotel's lavish dream cottage, resulting in a madcap marital battle.

Dream Comes True

As a youngster growing up in Canada, Robert Ito had just one dream of what he wanted to become as an adult.

Today, he's living that childhood dream.

No, that fantasy wasn't to be an actor or an entertainer, it was to be a doctor, and as Sam Fujiyama on NBC's "Quincy" (Thursday's 9 to 10 p.m.) he's very close to portraying what he once wanted to be.

"My mother used to say, 'Be a pediatrician or an entertainer, one or the other.' Medicine was my first choice and when I was still living in Montreal — right after I got out of high school — I worked in Children's Memorial Hospital as an orderly and I really enjoyed it. I used to entertain the kids."

However, not coming from an extremely wealthy family, it was not feasible for Bob to pursue his medical interests in college, so he began doing what he was born with, a gift to sing and dance and entertain.

The eldest of George and Terry Ito's three children, Bob was born in Vancouver but moved to Montreal with his family when they were released from a government-imposed detention center during World War II.

"I used to sing when I was a kid," Bob explains, "and when I was just five, I was doing a little radio in Vancouver. I also used to compete in music festivals. After the war though, I didn't have time to pursue that because I was busy working and helping out my family, 7" the soft-spoken, personable actor added.

When the time came for him to choose a career, however, he realized he'd never become a physician. "I said, 'I can still tap and sing. Maybe I could do something like that!' So, I did by sneaking into road houses in Montreal and doing a little singing and dancing."

Eventually, Bob was introduced to ballet and was studying ballet when he auditioned for the National Ballet of Canada. He was selected as a member of the group where he stayed for 10 years.

Pike's Peek

BY CHARLIE PIKE
PFA Writer

HOLLYWOOD — It's that time of the New Year again, when everyone — including an ample number of TV's favorites — look ahead to 1979 and resolve to not do what they did do in 1978.

DICK VAN PATTEN: "I resolve to play more tennis but not take it so seriously, even when I play my 21-year-old son, VINCENT, and lose to him, as always."

GARY SANDY: "My New Year's resolution is to make 'W.K.R.P.' the hit series everyone said it was going to be last fall."

MICHAEL LANDON: "I resolve to quite losing the outlines for the scripts I write, which is something I've done frequently and in some of the most unique places!"

DIRK BENEDICT: "I resolve to keeping my singing confined to the shower, despite the temptation to do a duet with MARIE(OSMOND)."

BILL BIXBY: "I resolve to take better care of the wardrobe I'm given to wear on 'HULK.' Shirts are expensive!"

ERIK ESTRADA: "My resolution is to get LARRY on the dance floor this year, just to see if a guy who is so good on horseback can disco, too!"

GAVIN MacLEOD: "I resolve to take my wife, PATTI, on a relaxing, away-from-it-all vacation . . . where there's no water!"

BONNIE FRANKLIN: "I resolve to go to a good movie and not cry at the end. I always cry, no matter if a movie's got a sad or happy ending!"

CONNIE SELLECCA: "My resolution is to take advantage of my vacation and with my husband, HOWARD, travel and see some of this country . . . by car. I've seen the insides of airplanes enough to last me a lifetime!"

JOYCE DeWITT: "I resolve to organize my time better and to go the entire year without forgetting to pay one of my bills at the last minute because I'm so unorganized that I forget it."

PHYLLIS DAVIS: "I resolve to move my checking account to a bank with a drive-up window so I don't end up with two or three of my 'VEGA$' checks in my purse at one time. I hate standing in lines.

JAMES MacARTHUR: "I resolve to visit 'FANTASY ISLAND.' When you live in Hawaii, that's about the only place you can go that has more to offer."

Paramedics Promoted

Co-stars Kevin Tighe and Randolph Mantooth return as Los Angeles paramedics Roy DeSoto and John Gage — now promoted to captains — in "Greatest Rescues of 'Emergency!'," a two-hour special presentation in which the two men recall, via flashbacks, their most exciting and often death-defying rescue operations, Sunday, Dec. 31 (8 to 10 p.m), on NBC-TV.

Following the formal promotion ceremonies, Gage and DeSota relive the most memorble highlights of their careers, some humorous, some fightening and all action — packed. In one, they rescue a man trapped in a car beneath the waters of the Pacific. In another, they thwart a suicide attempt from a perilous perch atop a crane tower. They save a window washer precariously trapped on the side of a Los Angeles skyscraper and rescue children and airline passengers following a crash landing into rows of parked cars and a school bus.

'Peanuts' Celebration

"Happy Birthday, Charlie Brown," co-hosted by "Peanuts" creator Charles M. Schulz and Phyllis George, a celebration in live-action and animation that will mark the start of the 30th year of the adventures of the muddle-headed little almost-hero and his "Peanuts" cartoon clan, will be broadcast Friday, Jan. 5 (8 to 9 p.m), on CBS-TV.

The special also marks the start of the 15th year on televison for Charlie Brown, Schulz and the "Peanuts" family, and presents highlights of that remarkable career in reprises of past animated adventures, scenes from feature motion pictures, musical numbers from stage plays and new animation especially created for he birthday show. Miss George interviews Schulz on the grounds of his Santa Rosa (Calif.) studio complex and they reminisce about Charlie Brown's beginnings and adventures and discuss future projects of the "Peanuts."

A highlight of the program will be the introduction for the first time on-camera of some of the youngsters who have portrayed the voices behind the animated characters on "Charlie Brown" television special. They include, in addition to the current voice cast, Sally Dryer and Peter Robbins, who spoke for Lucy and Charlie Brown in the original television productions. The other children, members of the seventh cast since the animated specials began in 1965, are Daniel Anderson, Annalisa Bortoli, Casey Carlson, Ronald Hendrix, Michelle Muller, Laticia Ortiz, Laura Planting and Arrin Skelley.

Schulz began his now world-famous cartoon strip as a weekly feature called "L'il Folks" in the St. Paul (Minn.) Pioneer Press. Although it was dropped within a year by that newspaper, it was picked up by United Features, which still distributes the daily strip, called "Peanuts." Since then, Schulz has become the center of a phenomenon that is now a "Peanuts" empire, populated by cartoon characters and encompassing not only the newspaper strip and television specials, but motion pictures, stage plays, books, toys, jewelry, greeting cards, tee shirts — literally everything from lunch pails to furniture.

Stars Participate

Outstanding performers from all facets of the show businesss world demonstrate the talents which have made them so popular, in a dazzling two-hour entertainment special, the "3rd Annual People's Command Performance," to be presented Friday, Jan. 5 (9 to 11 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

Popular comedian, actor and producer Alan King is the host for the gala presentation which was taped in Hollywood, Calif., Las Vegas, Nev., Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and New York City.

Among the many highlights of the special are performances representing a variety of musical styles, from Ms. Horne singing opera, to Clark singing and pickin' country, to Stewart performing rock, and singers Murray and Mandrell singing their lastest hits.

There will also be a medley of songs from the Broadway and motion picture hit, "West Side Story," choreographed by Walter Painter, who was once a dancer in the production's national company.

"It was that experience that made me want to be a choreographer," Painter says. "And it was always my dream to choreograph my version of 'West Side Story'."

He says that choreographing the medley for 'Command Performance' was a "thrill as well as a challenge. After dancing under the direction of the original director-choreographer Jerome Robbins —it was also a labor of love. I still know all the original steps."

Future challenges for Painter include the desire to direct a ballet he's written with music from a popular rock group.

Explaining his philosophy of the dance, Painter said, "My main interest is to see that a dance is executed in the way it was conceived. I care about the movement and the dancers. Right now, as far as my work is concerned, that's my main purpose in life."

Another Presley Film

"To Elvis, With Love," an adaptation of the novel by Lena Canada, will air as a television movie on CBS. It is the true story of Presley's correspondence with a terminally ill 8-year-old girl, who died clutching all his letters to her breast.

Michele Will Tell

A: Duffy grew up in Washington State and was one of 12 students who participated in a special 4-year theatre and drama program at the University of Wash. He had guest roles in TV's "The Last of Lincoln" and "Switch" before being signed to star as Mark Harris in the "Man From Atlantis" series. Duffy and his wife, Carlyn, and their 4-year-old son — Padriac Terence — live in Tarzana Ca., when not on location with the series.

Q: I would like to know how old Jeb Adams is and where to write to him. M. FLOWERS, HARTSVILLE, S.C.

A: Jeb Adams was born April 10, 1961. His mother is former actress Carol Nugent and his father, the late movie and TV star, Nick Adams. Write to him c-o The Screen Actors' Guild, 7750 Sunset Blvd., Hollywood, Ca. 90046.

Q: What happened to "James at 16"? Where do I write NBC? 'DISAPPOINTED,' FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: James grew up, the ratings went down, and the show was cancelled. NBC-TV's address is 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10020.

Q: Who are the actors playing Steve Carlson and Gail Ramsey on "General Hospital"? C. SHORT, GAFFNEY, S.C.

A: Gary Lansing and Susan Moore, who were married recently. This is the second trip to the altar for both Gary and Susan, who are saying "This time it's going to be forever."

Q: Could you please give me some personal information about NBC News Correspondent Jessica Savitch? D. DALLAS, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

Q: Is Bob Barker married? Does he have any children? Where can I write to him? S.W. FALT, VALDESE, N.C.

A: Barker, one of TV's most successful emcee-game show hosts, has been married to attractive Dorothy Jo since the mid-40's, and the couple lives in Los Angeles. They have no children. Write to him c-o "The Price Is Right," 7800 Beverly Blvd., Hollywood, Ca. 90036.

Looks At Driver Education

For many teen-agers, "getting wheels" is a passport to freedom. But last year this passport meant death for some 4,000 persons killed in crashes involving 16 and 17-year-olds. According to some estimates, more than half of these deaths could have been avoided if states did not issue licenses to youngsters who passed driver education courses. Co-editor Christopher Glenn takes a look at driver education — whether or not it creates safe drivers and justifies early licensing — on the next edition of "30 Minutes," Saturday, Jan. 6 (1:30 to 2 p.m), on CBS-TV.

The assumption that driver education will create safe drivers is challenged by Dr. William Haddon, Director of the Institute for Highway Safety. He says studies indicate that while driver education has no effect on a teen-ager's ability to handle a car, it does encourage many 16 and 17-year-olds to get licenses before they're apparently mature enough to handle the responsibilities. According to Haddon, the 2,000 fatalities caused by 16 and 17-year olds each year are directly linked to driver immaturity or the willingness to take excessive risks.

In Nashville, Tennessee, Glenn observes a typical high school driver education course that includes a driving track and several $40,000 driving-simulating machines. He also talks with students, some of whom have mixed opinions on the value of driver education.

In the second story on "30 Minutes," co-editor Betsy Aaron reports on "Teen-Age Runaways." Every year, one million teen-agers run away from home. While most of them return within a week, at least 100,000 do not. Why do kids run away, and when they do, is there anybody out there to help them, are two questions Aaron asks.

One source of help for teens on the run is the National Runaway Switchboard. Operators on this nationwide, toll-free hot line take calls from youngsters and relay messages to their parents. If a runaway won't or isn't ready to return home, the Switchboard will refer the teen-ager to one of 6,000 places where they can go for help.

At two of these places, Crisis Home in suburban Chicago, and Bridge Family Center in Atlanta, co-editor Betsy Aaron talks with counselors and listens as runaways discuss their reasons for leaving home.

CBS News Correspondents Christopher Glenn and Betsy Aaron (seated) are co-editors of "30 Minutes" the television magazine with reports of interest to young viewers presented on CBS-TV, three out of four Saturdays each month (1:30-2 p.m.), while Attorney Patricia McGuire (standing) is the series' legal expert, providing legal guidance on the "Who's Right?" segment of the broadcast.

Bear On Rampage

A beautiful forest ranger and a mother protecting her child are among the victims as an 18-foot, 2,000-pound bear goes crazy in "Killer Grizzly," an action thriller making its television premiere as "The ABC Friday Night Movie," Jan. 5 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Christopher George, Andrew Prine, Richard Jaeckel, Joan McCall and Vicki Johnson are among the stars of the outdoor adventure, which was shot on location in the mountains near Clayton, Ga. No artifical animals were used; a trained — but untamed — grizzly bear from the Olympia Game Farm in Sequin, Wash., was used throughout the film.

Searching the forest for food, a grizzly bear is drawn by the scent of two teenage girls. This initial attack sets the bear off on a deadly rampage as he roams the woods in search of further human prey, staying always one step ahead of the Park Ranger in command of the area (Christopher George).

The Teen Scene

KRISTY McNICHOL, who graces the cover of the current issue of SASSY magazine, says it was a lot of fun having make-up applied and a wardrobe selected that made her look older than her years for the magazine layout, but she still likes jeans and T-shirts and no make-up.

JOHN TRAVOLTA has filmed the last segment of "WELCOME BACK, KOTTER" he'll appear in, but it wasn't easy. Besides filming it the week after his mother's death, John had to say good-bye to a group of people who have become his very good friends, and those tears in John's eyes when he left the set for the last time weren't make-believe.

ANDY GIBB has reportedly changed his mind and has agreed to make a guest-starring appearance in a TV movie-of-the-week sometime next season. The exact movie hasn't been chosen because it'll be especially written for the singer.

It's becoming less and less of a secret that MARIE OSMOND would like to find 'Mr. Right' (if she hasn't in the person of DIRK BENEDICT) in 1979 and devote at least part of her time to being a housewife.

Apparently it's true that there's a growing rivalry between SCOTT BAIO and his cousin, JIMMY BAIO. Indeed, look for Jimmy to capture a lot of headlines in the coming year.

RON HOWARD will take advantage of his "HAPPY DAYS" vacation to write and produce still another movie, and he's hoping that his good friend HENRY WINKLER will be available to star in it. No, Ron would not have a role in the film.

Robbers Find Surprises

A boy on the run from an orphange, an elderly woman who shoplifts health food, two hyperactive foreign missionaries with a passion for baseball and a puppy called "Puddles" — for a very good reason — make life even more complicated for two amateur bank robbers seeking a hideout in "If I'm Lost, How Come I Found You?," airing on "ABC Weekend Specials," in two parts on consecutive Saturdays, Jan. 6 and Jan. 13 (12-noon to 12:30 p.m., both days).

When 12-year-old Quacky Quackenbush runs away from an orphanage to his Aunt Maggie's rooming house (she is in jail for shoplifting), he is taken captive by Jerry and Clem, two bank robbers looking for a quiet hideout.

Watch Suheys In Sugar Bowl

When Alabama lines up on defense for Monday's Sugar Bowl, they will have to face a Suhey. Then, when the Tide's offense takes the field, they, too, will be facing a Suhey.

No, he doesn't play two-platoon football. There are actually two Suheys — brothers, who star on the Number One-ranked Nitanny Lion football team for Penn State. Matt is a junior running back, while brother and captain Paul is a senior linebacker. Both are outstanding performers, and the entire Suhey family has a great tradition in the annals of Penn State football.

The Nitanny Lions have one more game to win if they expect to land the NCAA Championship crown — they must get by the powerful Alabama Crimson Tide in the Sugar Bowl Classic, played Monday, Jan. 1 (2 p.m. on ABC—TV).

Matt Suhey led the team in rushing in 1977 with 638 yards. He paced the balanced State attack again this past season, gaining 720 yards and catching 10 passes. He also scored seven times on the ground and once through the air. "He has everything it takes to be an All-American," coach Joe Paterno said about his super back. "That includes size, strength, quickness, blocking ability, a knack for making people miss and the ability to catch the football. He is simply a great back."

And brother Paul is another in the long line of Paterno linbackers who seem to sprout from trees: "Paul has outstanding leadership qualities," the coach said. "He played well last year, and he has improved in the speed and quickness category. He is a good, solid player."

But the Suhey chain of great Penn State gridiron players didn't start with the present pair. Brother Larry was a fullback on the 1975 and 1976 teams.

Their father, Steve, earned All-America honors as a guard on the 1947 squad and maternal grandfather, Bob Higgins, was an All-America end and captain of the Lions in 1919. He also coached at the school from 1930 until 1948.

Rose Bowl Classic

Neither Charles White nor Rick Leach grabbed the Heisman Trophy, but you can't convince their teammates that they aren't the most valuable players in the NCAA. But both still have a chance to redeem themselves along with their squads, and — with a little luck — one of the teams may even emerge as an NCAA champion.

The USC Trojans, with their super runner Charles White, and Michigan — featuring the triple-threat quarterback Rick Leach — tackle one another once again in the Annual Rose Bowl, oldest of all post-season classics, live from Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 1.

This is the 28th consecutive year that NBC will broadcast the Granddaddy of all bowls (beginning at 4:30 p.m.). On hand — along with a capacity Rose Bowl crowd of over 104,000 fans — to call the play will be Curt Gowdy and John Brodie.

"White should be an All-American," USC coach John Robinson said about his tailback before the season. "He's earned the right now to be classed in the great tradition of USC tailbacks (like Anthony David. O.J. Simpson and Mike Garrett). He's a threat to break a long run every time he touches the ball."

But Robinson could add that one reason why some consider White the most versatile runner in the legendary history of the school is due to his penchant to also churn out yardage within the guard and tackle positions. He has the capacity to turn a three-yard gain into a long gainer, and whenever the Trojans need that extra yardage, they turn to White.

Clint Eastwood Stars

After failing on two occasions to scale the awesome Eiger mountain in Switzerland, a retired hit man is called upon to return to the slopes to track down an agent implicated in the theft of secret United States documents, in "The Eiger Sanction," a suspense drama to be rebroadcast on "The NBC Saturday Night at the Movies" Jan. 6 (9 to 11:30 p.m.).

Clint Eastwood (director of the film) stars with Academy Award winner George Kennedy (Best Supporting Actor, "Cool Hand Luke" — 1967), Vonetta McGee and the late Jack Cassidy.

Jonathan Hemlock (Eastwood) has settled into the quiet pursuits of collecting rare art treasures and teaching a college course in art history when he is lured to Zurich hoping to obtain a prized Pissaro.

Upon arrival, he finds himself in the midst of a shootout with one of two men who have slain an agent and obtained a microfilm copy of the United States government's germ warfare plans.

After overwhelming the man, Hemlock returns to the United States only to learn that Dragon (Thayer David), head of a secret agency responsible for assassinations, has arranged another trip to Europe. When Hemlock confronts Dragon, the bureaucrat convinces him to return to Switzerland and seek out the second man — on the very mountainside he has failed to master on two previous occasions.

The majestic Alpine settings cue some superbly photographed climbs which, along with some earlier stunts in Arizona's Monument Valley, are the visual highpoints of the film. Eastwood also reportedly did all his own climbing without benefit of a stuntman.

George Kennedy plays Ben Bowman, Hemlock's close friend, and the film's love interest is provided by Vonetta McGee, cast as Jemima Brown, a sassy-mouthed, beatiful black CIA courier, who initially double-crosses Hemlock. Cassidy is featured as Miles Mellough, the treacherous ex-buddy who is left stranded in the wilderness.

Eastwood, who demonstrated such unexpected resources behind the camera in his maiden stab at directing ("Play Misty For Me"), still shows a firm pictorial sense, and the crisp action and atmosphere of 'Misty' is strongly in evidence in "The Eiger Sanction."

Fran Tarkenton

In a distinctly athletic atmosphere, coach John Belushi leads host Fran Tarkenton and repertory stars Dan Aykroyd, Jane Curtin, Garrett Morris, Bill Murray, Laraine Newman and Gilda Radner to a comic victory on the Jan. 6th telecast of "NBC's Saturday Night Live" (11:45 p.m. to 1:15 a.m.).

Musical segments feature Leo Sayer, Donnie Harper and The Voices of Tomorrow, and half-time entertainment by the White Plains Marching Band. Sayer performs "When I Need You" and "You Make Me Feel Like Dancing."

Tarkenton teams with Morrie for a discussion on black quarterbacks in professional football, becomes a spokesman for a cereal product, and tries to score a completed pass with wide receiver Alice (Newman).

Other highlights: Weekend Update with Curtain; Amy Carter (Newman) goes to school with overly protective secret service agents (Murray and Aykroyd), a film by Gary Weis; and a commerical parody of a product called French Liquid Perfume.

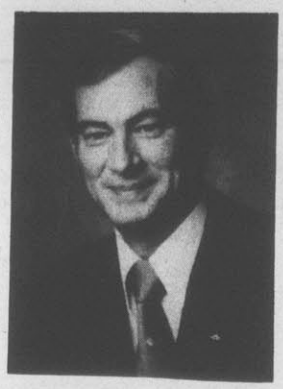
CHAMBER OF COMMERCE
CHAMBER OF COMMERCE OF THE UNITED STATES

Supplement To The Daily Reflector, December 31, 1978

Message From The President



Charles Burnette, President
Bank of North Carolina, N.A.

Dear Chamber Members,

I would like to thank all of our volunteers, members and the staff of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce for working together during 1978 to make the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce a successful chamber.

With your involvement and cooperation, the chamber has grown and become involved in total community development.

Our chamber has been very busy this year and it has been a profitable year for the chamber. Over 800 businesses, professionals and individuals have combined their expertise and efforts to actively pursue total community development.

Through our members and volunteers' efforts our total community of Greenville and Pitt County profit. Our chamber of commerce is actively working to improve our community not only for our members, but for all of the citizens of our area.

Some of the activities which the Chamber has been involved in this year include the following: conducting a feasibility study of the proposed industrial annexation of Greenville; observing and becoming involved in the state, local and national legislative issues; accreditatation; planning and promoting over 20 grand openings and ribbon cuttings for new businesses in the Greenville area; collecting over 14,000 citizens' signatures for Operation Overcharge to protest VEPCO's increasing electric rates; continuing to promote the completion of Hwy 264 from Raleigh to the coast; and the Coffee Talk with Dr. Tom Brewer.

All of these have been well planned community involvement programs. And, that is the key, community involvement. Our members have shown excellent attendance at not only regular committee meetings but also all chamber activities. Our volunteers have truly taken their time and talents and loaned them to our chamber to develop better programs for the Greenville - Pitt County area.

All of our vice presidents, committee chairmen, committee members, and board of directors members have worked diligently this year to direct our program of work. I am happy to report that we have completed our 1978 Program of Work. Special thanks and congratulations for a job well done are in order for these persons.

During 1978 our chamber members have built a foundation for future better programs to improve our community development. Thanks again for a job well done.

Sincerely,
Charles Burnette

A Look At Chamber

WHAT IS IT?

The Chamber is an action agency of over 800 members. It is a voluntary organization of individuals, professionals and businesses who band together to advance the commercial, financial, industrial and civic interests of a county. It is a civic clearinghouse, a public relations counselor, a legislative representative at the local, state and national levels of government, an information bureau and a research and promotion medium.

WHO RUNS IT?

The organization is run by a Board of Directors, elected by the Chamber's members. The Board, serving without pay, sets the policies for the Chamber. The administrative head of the Chamber is the President. He is paid as is the staff working with him.

WHAT DOES IT DO?

The variety of a Chamber's activities is virtually unlimited, depending on county needs and the desire and ability of the Chamber to meet those needs. Its overall mission of total community development is determined by its program . . . its goals, called a Program of Work.

HOW DOES IT WORK?

Action groups — may be called councils, task forces or committees — are the backbone of a Chamber. They are the units that accomplish the organization's goals and objectives. The needs of the county and policies of the Chamber determine the kinds and number of these action groups.

WHO PAYS FOR IT?

Financed on a voluntary basis, a Chamber's expenses are apportioned among its members, consisting of firms and individuals. Chamber membership is an investment in the present and future of the individual's and the county's welfare. The Chamber activities are not funded by any branch of government.

WHO ARE ITS MEMBERS?

Any firm or individual sharing a common interest in county improvement is eligible for membership.

Chamber Receives Accreditation

The Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce has been accredited by the Chamber of the United States. The official announcement was made in December by Shearon Harris, Chairman of the Board of the National Chamber. Mr. Harris is Chairman of the Board of Carolina Power and Light Company.

There are currently 889 applicants in the U.S. with 378 now accredited chambers.

The accrediting program was instituted by the National Chamber to recognize effective organizational performance. It is a voluntary program developed to provide a method by which local Chambers of Commerce may make a self study and analysis. The organization prepares and submits an evaluation report for initial accreditation and every five years for reaccreditation.

The original accreditation as well as reaccreditation follows a review of the organization's application by the Accrediting Board which is appointed by the Chairman of the Board of the National Chamber. Each member of the group serves on the National Chamber's Board of Directors.

The accreditation program has a four-fold purpose: (1) Defines standards of planning and performance in Chamber of Commerce work and to show how these standards can be reached and maintained; (2) Measure achievement; (3) Give recognition and encouragement to organizations and staff members who met basic standards of operation and performance and who are contributing in a meaningful and effective way to the good of the community and the country; (4) To upgrade and improve voluntary organizations of business and professional people.

The Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce was sited as an organization meeting standards of performance, planning, programming, and conducting a well-balanced and productive program of work.

- Surveyed the needs for air service in the area.
- Surveyed the citizens to determine blind corners and correct them.

Transportation Committee Promotes Hwy. 264 Expansion

Members of the Transportation Committee have met many times with representatives of the N.C. Department of Transportation to discuss U.S. 264. The committee developed two resolutions and presented them to Secretary of Transportation, Tom Bradshaw, at the Kinston U.S. 264 public hearing in support of a western loop around Greenville and the construction of a four laned, fully controlled, limited access highway connecting Raleigh with the eastern coast of North Carolina.

At the Nov. 29 U.S. 264 public hearing held in Greenville, twenty-two speakers were in favor of a fully controlled access highway. Most of the speakers represented the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce.

According to an article in THE DAILY REFLECTOR, comments by Charles Burnette, Bank of North Carolina, N.A., president of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce, and a number of Chamber members, "climaxed the hearing."

Speaking for the Chamber at the meeting were the following: Lyman Ormond, Ormond Wholesale Co., Inc.; Jack Richardson, Director of Pitt Memorial Hospital; Dr. Thomas Brewer, Chancellor of East Carolina University; Charles Vincent, Howard, Vincent, & Duffus; Greenville Mayor Percy Cox; Greenville Councilwoman, Mildred McGrath; Greenville Banks, Belk Tyler Co.; Dr. William Laupus, Dean of the ECU Medical School; Ed Wyatt, City Manager; Jesse Harris, Local Human Relations Director; Bill Speight, Pitt County Attorney; Dr. Jim Carter, GACC Board of Directors; and Art Galya, Procter & Gamble.

According to David Womack, Chairman of the Transportation Committee, the committee will continue to work with the State Department of Transportation to expedite plans for the completion of Hwy 264.

McDowell Speaks At Law Enforcement Banquet

Dr. Charles McDowell, professor and chairman of the Administration of Justice Department of Guilford College was the guest speaker at the Law Enforcement Appreciation Banquet held at the Greenville Country Club September 21.

The Dinner, sponsored by the Law Enforcement Committee of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce was held to allow Chamber members an opportunity to show their appreciation for the services rendered by all of the law enforcement officers in the Greenville-Pitt County area. Approximately 240 chamber members and law enforcement officers attended.

Dr. McDowell has over 25 years of experience in the field of law enforcement including instructional experience in the area of police science. He has also published numerous articles about law enforcement skills and casework.

Dr. McDowell discussed the stressful job of law enforcement officers. He noted that the number one killer of law enforcement officers is not killers but stress. He also discussed the many varied duties of law enforcement officers.

Tom Parrish, chairman of the Law Enforcement Committee read the Officers' Code of Ethics as each officer received a copy of the code.

According to Ian Smith, chairman of the Law Enforcement Appreciation Dinner, the dinner is one way to improve the relationships between the citizens of Greenville with the officers.

First Tobacco Festival A Success

Agri-business leaders, tobacco farmers, governmental leaders and the citizens of Pitt County are responsible for the success of the first Annual Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival, according to Kelly Barnhill, Chairman of the Board of Directors for the festival.

"Participation of the agri-business community and the area citizens helped to make the first festival a great success," Barnhill said.

"We look forward to a bigger and better festival next year and in the years to come. In planning for the festival in the future we will have our mistakes ironed out and be able to promote flue-cured tobacco and the farming industry in a great manner in Pitt County," Barnhill added.

Activities during the Nov. 12-18 festival included a tobacco spitting contest, golf tournament, decoration contest, tobacco bucks sales, tobacco tying contest, poster contest, essay contest, Agriculture Commissioners Luncheon, Best Tobacco Leaf Contest, and Tobacco Festival Dance. Many of the activities were held in conjunction with the Tobacco Farmer Show.

According to Beverley Reid, Secretary of the festival, the participation and cooperation of all of the persons who assisted in planning and directing the festival was greatly appreciated and rewarding.

Special thanks go to Lamar Dean Outdoor Advertising for providing billboard signs which greeted the thousands of visitors to Greenville during the festival.

Plans for the 1979 Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival are beginning to be formulated. Anyone interested in helping with the festival should contact the chamber office.

Tobacco Festival billboards such as this one welcomed the more than 70,000 visitors to the Greenville Area during the festival. The billboard was provided as a promotion for the festival by Lamar-Dean, Nagales Outdoor Advertising.

Chamber Members Discuss Industrial Development

Several members of the Industrial Development Team of the Chamber met with the N.C. Department of Commerce officials in Raleigh March 20 to discuss attracting more industries and businesses to the Pitt County area.

Bryan Smith, chief officer of Industrial Development for the Department of Commerce, told the group that Greenville has a good labor market and a good quality of life that industry is interested in.

Reese Hart, director of the Pitt County Development Commission, said that industries considering locating in the Pitt County area should be attracted by the two new waste water systems developed in the county and the expansion of Highway 264.

Department of Commerce staff members present at the meeting were as follows: Roger Critcher, field office representative; Everett Knight, Environmental Management; Bob Brinkley, Support Services; Jim Arrstead, Administrative Services and Smith.

Tourism, Convention Brochures Available

As a part of its plan to interest tourists and convention groups in coming to the Greenville area, the Tourism and Convention Committee has developed a new brochure that is now available through the Chamber Office.

The brochure depicts the Greenville area as being the focal point of eastern North Carolina, a good place to meet, and convenient to many nearby points of interest.

The brochures are being distributed through the Welcome Centers, motels, travel agencies, chambers of commerce and other agencies.

Merchants Conduct Shoplifting Program

The Merchants Committee sponsored several meetings in 1978 with Pitt County law enforcement officers, Greenville City law enforcement officers, assistant district attorneys and local business representatives to discuss the STEM program.

STEM, Shoplifting Takes Everyone's Money, is an awareness program which teaches the facts and fallacies of shoplifiting. The Greenville Area Merchants Committee has agreed to conduct an area wide campaign to deter shoplifting in the area especially prior to Christmas.

Merchants Committee Co-Chairman, John Shannonhouse distributed STEM posters to the city and county schools for display. Radio and television advertisements were also aired during the Christmas season to help deter shoplifters.

Membership Team Sponsors Two Successful Blitz Campaigns

The Membership Committee of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce recruited a total of 148 members during two one day membership blitz campaigns in 1978.

The committee exceeded its goal to recruit new members during its Spring Membership Blitz May 10 when 97 new members were recruited. According to Larkin Little, Home Savings & Loan, chairman of the Membership Committee the group's goal was to recruit 78 new members for the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce.

During the blitz campaigns, the volunteer sales team members called on prospective members, issued information about the chamber of commerce, and then took them to the chamber office where they met the staff and toured the building.

The top three salesmen during the Spring Membership Blitz Campaign were Larkin Little, Don Collier, and Anne Duffus, Duffus Realty. John Grier, Grier Rental Agency, received the low salesman award, a Chamber Pot.

The top salesman award was presented to Anne Duffus during the Fall Membership Blitz Campaign. Gary Gasperini, Financial Underwriters, received the second prize for sales and Jerry Carson, Home Savings & Loan received the low salesman award, the Chamber Pot.

Participating in the one day blitz campaigns were the following: Mavis Butts, Mavis Butts Realty; Andy Warren, Wachovia Bank & Trust; Peggy Christopher, NCNB; Alan Pittman, Creative Wall Coverings; Mike Aldridge, Aldridge & Southerland; Bill Fleming, Northwestern Life Insurance Co; Brenda Abbott, Bank of North Carolina, N.A.; David Lee, Planters National Bank & Trust Co.; Bet Alford, D.G. Nichols Agency; Richard Cox, C.P.A.; Sue Creech, First Federal Savings & Loan Association; Bill Mitchum, Branch Banking & Trust Co.; Pam Kachmer, First State Bank; and Connally Branch, Clark-Branch Realtors, Inc.

Dr. Brewer Speaks At Coffee Talk

East Carolina University Chancellor Dr. Thomas Brewer outlined future plans for the university at a Coffee Talk September 12, sponsored by the Membership Services Committee of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce.

David Nichols, D.G. Nichols Agency, Chairman of the Membership Services Committee said that the committee was pleased to allow the new chancellor to meet chamber members and to speak about the future of the university. The Membership Services Committee of the chamber sponsors several Coffee Talks annually to allow special guests to speak to Chamber members in an informal atmosphere.

Chamber Purchases Building Site

The Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce purchased a site located on the corner of N.C. Highway 43 and Red Banks Road in January according to Jeannette Cox (The Jeannette Cox Agency), Chairman of the 1977 Chamber Facilities Task Force. On Dec. 30, 1977, the Chamber held a sign-raising dedication on the site of the proposed new Chamber building.

According to Chairman Cox, the Facilities Task Force began looking for a suitable site in January 1977 and investigated some 35 prospective locations before purchasing the property.

The 1.3 acre corner site will allow the needed room for expansion as the Chamber continues to grow to meet the needs of business, professional and agricultural leaders in the area.

The Chamber has been renting office space since it began in Greenville in 1938. Now the membership can take great pride in the fact they are on the way to having a home of their own.

Serving on the Facilities Task Force with Cox were David Womack (Womack Electronics), Larkin Little (Home Savings and Loan), Charles Burnette (Bank of North Carolina, N.A.), Bud Wheless (Wheless Real Estate) and Ollie Harrington (Ollie Harrington Real Estate).

According to Bud Wheless, 1978 Facility Task Force Chairman, chamber members visited the chamber of commerce offices in Greenville, S.C., and Monroe and Salisbury, N.C. in April to observe building styles in preparation of planning the new Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce Office.

After studying the design of several offices, the Facilities Task Force will make recommendations to the Executive Committee of the chamber. Construction of the new office will hopefully begin in 1979.

Chamber Members Meet Congressional Representatives

Senator Robert Morgan and Representative Walter B. Jones discussed national health insurance, natural gas pricing, CETA, and welfare reform legislation with 21 members of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce at a reception in Washington, D.C. Tuesday, Spetember 19.

"The National Health Insurance bill is Senator Kennedy's bill. Senator Kennedy has been working on it a long time and in one form or another we will probably have national health insurance in the future," Senator Morgan said.

Senator Morgan encouraged the chamber members to get involved with the legislative process, to contact their representatives, and to become more aware of the political process of the representatives' campaigns.

Both Senator Morgan and Congressman Jones encouraged the chamber members to become more aware of the funding of state and local governments.

"Our country has a $50 billion deficit, and it continues to grow," Senator Morgan said.

"I suggest that you go to your local government and state government and find out exactly how much federal funding is involved in their budgets, and then ask them to discontinue asking for any more federally funded projects," Morgan said.

A reception was held by the chamber members for Senator Jesse Helms, Senator Morgan, and Congressman Jones and their staff members. Senator Helms was unable to attend due to his convalescence of back surgery.

According to Howard Wilson, Chairman of the Chamber's one day bus trip to Washington, and Dr. David White, Co-Chairman of the Congressional Action Committee of chamber, the one day business trip was beneficial because of the improved contacts with our representatives.

Those who attended the bus trip are as follows: Bob Adams (East Carolina Medical Foundation); Janice Buck, (Buck Supply Co., Inc.); Charles Burnette, (Bank of North Carolina); Trish Byrum, (D.G. Nichols Agency); Bill Cozart, (Planters National Bank & Trust Co. of Ayden); John Dickens, Art Galya, (Procter & Gamble); Gary Gasperini, (Financial Underwriters); Bruce Greene, (Investors Title Insurance Co.); Betty Lawf, (Vermont American); A.D. McArthur, Jr., (A.C. Monk & Co. Inc.); Carl Peoples (Holiday Inn); Gene Taylor (NCNB); Allen Wagner, (John's Wholesale Flowers); Dr. David White (East Carolina Eye Clinic, Ltd.); John Williams (First Union National Bank); Howard Wilson, Leroy Cherry, (Cherry Oaks, Inc.); Bryant Kittrell, (D.G. Nichols Agency); Susan Nobles, and Ed Walker.

Chamber Studied Annexation Issues

The State and Local Affairs Committee of the Chamber was assigned the task of finding facts and researching questions concerning the proposed industrial annexation. According to Mack Howard, Vice President of the Public and Governmental Affairs Division of the Chamber, the committee studied the proposed annexation and researched possible alternatives for producing the needed additional revenues for the City of Greenville.

Howard Dawkins, chairman of the State and Local Affairs Committee, selected four subcommittee chairmen to work with four issues related to the proposed annexation.

Mark Tipton served as the chairman of the Alternatives to Annexation Sub-committee. Members of the subcommittee were Mack Howard, Steve Evans, Howard Wilson, Charles Thompson, Tommy Bunting, and Ted Johnston.

Kurt Fickling and Charles Thompson served as co-chairmen of the Long Range Plans Sub-Committee. Members of the subcommittee were: Jeannette Cox, H.L. Ormond, Louis Clark, W.H. Watson, Roy Hardee, J.L. Hines, and Billy Clifton.

Brayom Anderson was the chairman of the subcommittee which studied the advantages and disadvantages of annexation. Members of the subcommittee were Jerry Powell, Tommy Edwards, Jim Barwick, Roger Taylor, Lester Brown, Harry Hastings, Waverly Phelps, Bill Fowler, and Jim Cheatham.

Each of the sub-committees submitted roports to the Executive Committee of the Chamber. The Executive Committee of the Chamber prepared a printed report which included the results of the sub-committees' reports. The printed report with a list of recommendations was presented to each member of the Greenville City Council.

In March the City Council voted to not annex the Industrial Park Area at the present time. Since that time, the council has allowed the Planning Department to study the feasibility of annexing several residential areas.

1979 Chamber Outlook

The year of 1979 will be a year of great progress and challenge for the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce. Our Chamber has come a long way. The past two years have been building years which have made our organization well respected as a positive organization working toward total community development.

The following Program of Work was designed by one hundred and fifteen chamber members and community leaders at our Out of Town Planning Conference at Myrtle Beach Oct. 13-15.

Our Program of Work will demand much time and diligent work of our leaders and volunteer workers. Your support and involvement is required to accomplish this program in 1979.

Some of the projects listed which are of great community concern include continued promotion of the completion of Hwy 264, promoting better airport systems in our area; promoting Greenville as a regional shopping center; continuing to promote economics and the free enterprise system in the local schools; continued observance and involvement of governmental issues on the local, state and national levels; continuing to work with businesses and industries and working to attract new businesses and industries which are compatible with our area; continuing to improve our relationship with ECU; and continuing to work toward promoting the construction of a facility large enough to attract entertainment and meetings in eastern North Carolina.

Our Program of Work has been well designed to allow the chamber to continue to promote the Greenville Area. We now need your input, ideas, and manpower to make it work.

We can do it in '79 if we work together for our community.

Sincerely,
Jerry W. Powell,
Chairman of the Board

Structure, By-Laws Changes Approved By Chamber Board

The Board of Directors of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce adopted several changes in the by-laws and the structure of the chamber at its September, 1978 meeting.

The new structural changes which will become effective January 1, 1979 include several title changes. Jerry W. Powell, First State Bank, President-Elect of the Chamber will become the Chairman of the Board of the Chamber. This volunteer leadership title had previously been president. Edward Walker, Executive Vice President of the Chamber will become president of the Greenville Area Chamber. Walker is the chief paid leader of the chamber.

Other title changes include division volunteer leaders' titles from vice-presidents to vice-chairmen. The vice-chairmen for 1979 are as follows: Dr. Jon Tinglestad, ECU Medical School, Vice-Chairman of Community Development; Doug Starr, Planters National Bank & Trust, Vice-Chairman of Economic and Industrial Development; Ray Rogers, Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., Vice-Chairman of Organization and Membership; and Robert Griffin, Procter & Gamble, Vice-Chairman of Public and Governmental Affairs.

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

by HAL FOSTER

Our Story: ARN ENTERS THE DISMAL TAVERN AND ORDERS ALE. THERE CAN BE NO DOUBT THAT THE YOUNG MAID WHO GAVE HIM DIRECTIONS IS PRINCESS SIGRID.

A GRIMY RUFFIAN STAGGERS UP TO ARN'S TABLE. "WE DON'T LIKE STRANGERS FOOLING WITH OUR WOMEN," HE GROWLS, DRAWING A KNIFE.

ARN PUTS UP HIS SWORD AND PULLS OUT HIS KNIFE. "SORRY TO FRIGHTEN YOU," HE GRINS, "JUST PRACTICING SOME OF THE TRICKS SIR GAWAIN TEACHES HIS SQUIRES. QUAINT, AREN'T THEY?" THEN HE ORDERS THE TANKARDS FILLED.

AND HE LISTENS TO THE TIPSY BULLIES EXTOLLING THE BRUTALITIES OF KING HROTHGAR. ONLY ONE THING IS SACRED TO THEM: SIGRID, HIS DAUGHTER.
