

Arctic Cold Front Is Moving Eastward

By The Associated Press

An Arctic cold front that brought sub-zero temperatures, snow and death to the nation's mid-section moved east today, ending a rainy January thaw in the Northeast.

The front turned balmy temperatures to an icy blast, with the temperature in New York City plummeting to 31 degrees early today from 57 degrees at 6 p.m. Tuesday.

Snow was reported from Michigan through the Ohio Valley, in eastern Tennessee and the northern Rockies.

A heavy snow warning was issued for northwestern Pennsylvania, and winter storm warnings were posted in New York state and Vermont.

Travelers' advisories were in effect for New York, Vermont and Pennsylvania, western Massachusetts, northwestern Connecticut, and New Jersey, and from North Carolina to Ohio.

In Kentucky, icy roads caused at least one death. State police said James McBride of Louisville died when his car skidded on icy Interstate 64 near Midway, Ky.

Barton Clark, 8, of Dallas died Tuesday when he touched a live electrical wire that neighbors said snapped two days earlier under a heavy coat of ice.

William Aston, vice president of Dallas Power and Light, said the dangling wire had not been repaired because of the huge number of repair calls since the weekend ice storm.

Hospital emergency rooms in Dallas were crowded with victims of cold weather and icy conditions Tuesday, with one hospital reporting 22 persons brought in with broken bones after slipping on ice.

Growers in the Rio Grande Valley of Texas held an all-night vigil as freezing temperatures threatened the area's $40 million citrus crop.

But in Florida, the citrus crop was reported safe despite temperatures in the 30s in the growing regions. Growers said winds would prevent frost damage in the central Florida groves.

"We don't worry unless the temperature goes down to 27 degrees for four hours or more," said a spokesman for Florida Mutual, a Lakeland-based growers' organization.

A few snow flurries were also reported at the inauguration of Gov. Bob Graham in Tallahassee Tuesday.

Southern Florida also felt the chill - the temperature was 52 degrees in Miami at midnight Tuesday. 64 degrees in Key West. Early morning temperatures in Key West have been in the 70s for weeks.

While residents of Worcester, Mass., enjoyed a spring-like day Tuesday with a record high temperature of 57 and in Baltimore it was a balmy 64, the thermometer dropped as much as 8 degrees below existing records in parts of Texas and the Mississippi Valley. Frigid weather continued in Minnesota, where Tuesday's high temperature reached only 2 degrees above zero in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area.

The January thaw and rain washed out skiing in Massachusetts. "It's just grass now," Robert Watroba of Jug End Resort in the western Berkshires said Tuesday.

Bumped "DEMONSTRATION" - An unidentified Iranian demonstrator bounces off the hood of a Los Angeles County Sheriff's car Tuesday in Beverly Hills during demonstrations by Iranians outside the home of the sister of the Shah of Iran. Hundreds of demonstrators stormed the home's gate, starting brush fires. Examination of the frames of film taken before this demonstrator landed on hood of police car shows that the windshield was shattered before the impact. (AP Laserphoto)

Parliament Approves Shah's Choice Of Premier

By THOMAS KENT Associated Press Writer

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) - Iran moved another step toward the return of civilian government today, and the prospective prime minister said Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi has agreed to name a regency council and leave the country for a rest.

Both houses of Parliament recommended that the shah appoint Shahpour Bakhtiar, the 62-year-old opposition politician whom the embattled ruler asked last week to try to form a government that might be able to end the nationwide crisis threatening his throne.

The vote in the Senate was unanimous, but a spokesman said several members of the Majlis, the lower house, spoke and voted against Bakhtiar. Informed sources said the dissident deputies were offended by his statement in a TV speech Monday that Iran had been suffering from corrupt government for 25 years.

Bakhtiar was expected to announce his cabinet lineup on Thursday.

The parliamentary formalities were set in motion after Bakhtiar, former deputy chief of the anti-shah National Front, informed the 59-year-old monarch he had lined up a cabinet to replace the two-month-old military government headed by Gen. Gholam-Reza Azhari, the army commander.

Bakhtiar told a French TV interviewer Tuesday that the shah has "agreed to take a trip abroad, to take a rest and to name a regency council" to exercise the royal powers. But he did not say when the shah would leave.

The shah won Bakhtiar away from other opposition leaders demanding his abdication by agreeing to give up much of his power, although how much has not been announced. Meanwhile, the other political and religious leaders of the nationwide opposition to the monarch continue to demand his ouster and denounce Bakhtiar as a traitor to their movement.

The state radio reported antishah demonstrations today in seven cities, including a march by 1,000 children in Hajikurd, northwest of Tehran. It also said a 16-year-old boy blew himself up with a homemade bomb in the riot-torn holy city of Mashhad, and that rioters there burned down a policeman's house during the night and killed him.

However, progress was reported toward a deal to get striking oil workers to produce enough for domestic needs. Sources said a package being worked out includes release of some prisoners, the return of homes seized from striking oil workers, back pay covering the duration of the 3 1/2-month-old stoppage and a commitment to cut off oil exports to Israel and South Africa for their support of the shah.

The exodus of foreigners from the country continued, and a backlog built up by several days of strikes at the Tehran airport was clearing up.

Hundreds left by scheduled, charter and government planes Tuesday after the military took over operations at the airport. Two 75-seat Canadian air force transports arrived from Turkey to begin taking out Canadians and some other foreigners.

Commercial airlines said they expected to carry out limited service. But El Al, the Israeli airline, canceled its daily round-trip flight today, saying ground service was inadequate. A spokesman said the flight would be resumed as soon as all necessary services are available.

About 4,200 Americans are trying to leave Iran out of a total 35,000, and U.S. Air Force jets flew 295 American military dependents out of Iran on Tuesday, officials in Washington said.

Pentagon spokesman Thomas Lambert said families of contractors and other Americans could leave on military transports. He said no special military flights have been scheduled but that C-5 and C-141 transports have been carrying dependents out after unloading cargo.

Chief Sworn

Jenness S. Allen, acting fire chief for the past six months, took the oath of office yesterday as chief of the Greenville Fire Department.

Allen was appointed chief of the department, effective January 1, by City Manager Ed Wyatt on December 13, the day after Chief Ray Smith announced his retirement effective December 31. Smith, who suffered a heart attack in June, had been on sick leave since that time. He had been chief of the department for the past 10 years.

Allen was employed by the department in April 1952, and was named assistant chief of the department in August 1968.

He served as acting chief of the department for four months in 1976, and was again named acting chief when Smith was hospitalized in June.

Big Oil Refinery In N.C. Indicated

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - A major oil refinery planned for Brunswick County will, if needed permits are obtained, make North Carolina more attractive to new industry, Gov. Jim Hunt said today.

Hunt said the refinery's location along North Carolina's coast was contingent upon all necessary state and federal permits being obtained by the Brunswick Energy Corp.

"I think it will be a real big plus for the economy of North Carolina," Hunt said at a news conference. "I think it will make North Carolina a far more attractive place for new industry."

Hunt made the comments before traveling to Bolivia in Brunswick County where he was scheduled to formally announce the refinery.

"It's going to be contingent on them getting the permits and all the environmental questions answered," Hunt press secretary Gary Pearce said of the refinery. "The company understands that. We understand that."

The corporation is a group of companies, including Crown Petroleum Corp. of Baltimore, Md., that are interested in the refinery, according to an unidentified official.

The group has obtained an option on a tract of land for the refinery site, the official said.

State officials, representatives of state and federal licensing agencies and company spokesmen met Tuesday with coastal area residents and environmentalists to hear their concerns about the project, and give the company a chance to answer questions, the official said.

The company must meet environmental and pollution standards, and obtain necessary permits before going ahead with the $350-$450 million project.

Newest Housing Development Is Almost Filled

By TOM BAINES Reflector Staff Writer

The new 111-unit Hopkins Park housing development was almost fully occupied at the end of December with only four of the units remaining to be rented, Housing Authority commissioners learned last night.

Sallye Streeter, the Authority's director of tenant affairs, said that the housing staff had filled 107 of the new apartments by Dec. 31 after only a month of occupancy activities.

Mrs. Streeter reported that 84 of the units were rented by black families while 23 units were occupied by white tenants. She added that, as of Tuesday night, only one unit remained vacant.

The tenant affairs official noted that she was unable to obtain a true rent average picture for Hopkins Park since most of the residents did not pay rent for a full month.

All units were filled in NC 22-1 (Meadowbrook) and rent for December averaged $70.65, she said. One vacancy existed in NC 22-2 (Kearney Park) with rent averaging $82.41. Mrs. Streeter reported one vacancy in NC 22-3 (Moyewood) and a rent average of $87.08, while the NC 22-4 (Moyewood) development recorded an average of $83.85 with one occupancy.

Three vacancies existed in the NC 22-6 (Newtown) area with rent averaging $78.25.

Commissioners accepted a bid of $47,000 submitted by Dr. Cyril Khanyile for the purchase of the house formerly occupied for offices by the Authority and Redevelopment Commission staffs at 316 Roundtree Drive. The bid acceptance was subject to Khanyile securing mortgage financing arrangements for the facility.

The Authority's executive director, Joe Laney, said that Khanyile's bid met all of the requirements and a five percent bid deposit of $2,350 accompanied the purchase offer.

Khanyile, a black general practitioner, came to Greenville recently from California, it was noted, and currently works at Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Laney reported no progress in the search for a bond buyer for the proposed Section Eight mid-rise housing project for the elderly here. He said that he will continue to work with Interstate Securities on the matter and also pursue another bond buyer possibility.

In a final item, commissioners approved a change in the bylaws noting the Authority's new office quarters and meeting site at 1103 Broad Street.

Scofflaws Can Afford Smile

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Parking ticket scofflaws are smiling in San Francisco: the city can't tow away illegally parked cars because its new towing contractor reportedly has only two tow trucks, both unlicensed.

Police Sgt. Edgar Eimil said no cars will be towed for illegal parking "until further notice."

San Francisco Car Service Inc., due to take over the city's towing service Jan. 1, told the city Friday that it had neither the necessary trucks nor lots for towed vehicles.

The firm had agreed to provide 35 tow trucks and a corps of uniformed drivers. But a source in the city attorney's office who asked not to be identified said the firm has two trucks - both unlicensed.

Car Service Inc. was awarded the contract by City Purchaser Joseph Gavin, who said the firm had a good credit rating and experience.

Holiday Traffic Took 355 Lives

By The Associated Press Traffic accidents killed 355 persons over the long New Year's weekend.

The National Safety Council had estimated before the holiday began at 6 p.m. Friday that between 350 and 430 motorists might be killed.

Last year there were 314 highway deaths during the three-day New Year's weekend. The worst such holiday on record was in 1965 when there were 564 deaths.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Numa Jay Kirkman of Rt. 1, Merritt. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Edwards of Merritt.

A program of nuptial music was presented by David Williams of Florence, pianist, and Ms. Diane Smith of New Bern, vocalist, who sang "Devoted To You" and "The Wedding Prayer."

The bride, given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, wore a gown of white qiana over peau de soie designed with an open neckline with high collar overlaid with silk Venice lace. The fitted empire bodice was enhanced by a sheer yoke of English net embroidered in silk motifs and hand sewn pearls and sequins. The yoke was outlined in silk Venice lace that also encircled the waistline. The long fitted sleeves were accented at the cuffs with the sheer English net panels beaded with pearls and sequins, edged in lace. The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel length train repeated the edging of the silk Venice lace at the hemline.

She wore a walking length veil of silk illusion edged in Venice lace to complement her gown, held in place by a caplet overlaid in matching lace beaded with pearls. Panels of floral Venice lace appliques extended down each side of the veil. The bride carried a cascade of white roses, blue stephanotis with tied with blue and white ribbons.

Miss Janice Sawyer of Greenville was the honor attendant and bridesmaids included Miss Judy Johnston of Oriental, Mrs. Edward R. Mayo of New Bern, and Mrs. Ronald Manning of Greenville. They wore floor length gowns of light blue qiana featuring empire waistlines and a matching waist length jacket accented in navy blue velvet at the yoke and cuffs. They carried nosegays of white silk roses with cascading blue and white ribbons.

Miss Deidra Arthur of Oriental was flower girl and wore a pale blue qiana dress accented with blue velvet and carried a wicker

Mrs. James E. Mayo of Alliance directed the wedding. Following the ceremony, the bride's parents entertained at a reception in the church fellowship hall.

Mrs. Charles Wayne Edwards of New Bern, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, presided at the bride's book which was placed on a table arranged with a single

The refreshment table was covered with an English lace cloth and centered with an arrangement of wedding bells flanked by lighted hurricane lamps. Mrs. John Toler of Alliance served the three-tiered wedding cake and punch was served by Mrs. Ralph Ensley of Alliance. Assisting in serving were Mrs. Sam Jones Spencer Sr. of Florence and Mrs. Roy Batson of Merritt.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will live in Merritt. For traveling, the bride changed into a brown three-piece suit of corduroy and wore her mother's corsage.

His Bedtime Blues: She's Booked Solid

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: After 22 years of marriage, I find I might as well be living alone. I'm 46 and my wife is 45.

We raised two fine children who are grown and gone, and now we have very little to talk about. My biggest problem is the way my wife shuts me out. She loves to read, and for the past three or four years she has been taking a book to bed with her every night. This is all the company she seems to want or need.

I realize that no marriage can maintain the level of passion that produces rockets and Roman candles indefinitely, but I feel cheated.

Any advice? Sign me...

LONESOME IN NEW CASTLE

DEAR LONESOME: Since your wife loves to read, do her (and yourself) a favor and get "The Ann Landers Encyclopedia." It contains a wealth of valuable information on a wide variety of common problems. But the piece titled "What Marriage is All About", by Dr. Eugene Kennedy, is well worth the price of the book, and should be required reading for both you and your wife. Trust me.

DEAR ABBY: Hello again. I'm the Manhattan attorney who wrote to you some time ago regarding an individual's right to keep unsolicited goods without paying for same.

Another letter in your column on a legal matter prompts a word of advice: it was Mrs. M.'s idea to photograph each of her valuable items and, on the back of each picture, write the name of the person to whom she wished to bequeath it. Her idea is totally without value; personal property may be given after one's death only by a legal document called a last will and testament. Please inform your readers that Mrs. M.'s plan will not work. Respectfully,

GEORGE PINSLEY

DEAR GEORGE: Thanks for the valuable legal advice which I'll pass on to my readers. (P.S. If I'm sued for practicing law without a license, will you represent me?)

DEAR ABBY: When my husband courted me I was secretly flattered because he was terribly jealous. I thought it was proof of his love. Now that we've been married for a year, I'd give anything if he weren't so jealous.

He is jealous of every man I mention, look at, or even pass on the street. He accuses me of winking at them and giving them encouragement. He's even accused me of meeting men on my lunch hour, and says he "knows" I've been with a lover if I get home 15 minutes late.

No one is safe from his filthy accusations. (Even the boy who delivers the newspaper!) He keeps after me to "confess" things and there is nothing to confess! I will gladly go to the police station and take a lie detector test—anything to prove my innocence once and for all. Help me!

INNOCENT

DEAR INNOCENT: Your husband is the one who needs the help. Constant accusations without basis are symptomatic of a sick mind. Get the man to a doctor!

CONFIDENTIAL TO "NEEDS HELP IN HOLLYWOOD": Maybe he's saving your raincoat for a rainy day. Ask him to please return it on account of that's why YOU bought it. If that fails, make a trip to his apartment and pick it up.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement. Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to "The Daily Reflector" one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Young Tobacco Grower In Pamlico Is Honored

by WOODY UPCHURCH
North Carolina State University
GRANTSBORO — Pamlico County, with its lowland grain and potato fields, isn't the most likely place to find some of North Carolina's best tobacco farmers, but they're here.

Scott Whitford is one. The 29-year-old North Carolina State University graduate is combining agricultural school learning with on-the-job training to grow some of the best selling flue-cured leaf sold anywhere in North Carolina.

In one series of sales last summer, Whitford, who grows 35 acres of tobacco in a 585-acre farming partnership with his brother, Dalton, saw 41 out of 51 piles of upstalk leaf bid off at the premium price of $1.60 a pound.

"We were very pleased with these sales," said Scott, "but we feel we earned every penny we got for the tobacco."

"We put a little extra work into it and I think we were awarded for it," Whitford added.

The Whitfords, who felt they had detected a buying trend toward higher prices for clean, uniform leaf, decided to do some extra cleaning and grading with their '78 crop.

"I feel we improved our price up to 20 cents a pound for some of the tobacco by grading and cleaning it up," Scott noted. "It was particularly noticeable on some of the lower stalk leaves."

Shaking out the sand and pulling out off-colored leaves before sheeting the tobacco for market required more time and labor expense, but Whitford was satisfied with the return on the investment.

Scott is an Outstanding Young Tobacco Grower Award winner in the flue-cured and burley beltwide recognition program sponsored by Phillip Morris U.

S. A. and conducted in North Carolina by the state Agricultural Extension Service.

Whitford will receive a $250 cash award and a trip to Phillip Morris tobacco headquarters in Richmond, Va. in February where he will be honored along with others from North Carolina and other producing states.

One of the innovations Scott Whitford has brought to the farm is computerized record keeping. He became familiar with the state Agricultural Extension Service electronics farm records program while a student at NCSU.

On the encouragement of Pamlico County Extension Chairman J. L. Rea Jr., Whitford subscribed to the program when he returned to the farm in 1974. It has been one of the best moves he has made.

"It has helped us a lot to be able to have monthly summaries of where we stand with the budgets for each crop," Whitford pointed out. "Before, we were using records for tax purposes only. Now we use them to make management decisions."

The records have underscored what the farmers already knew — tobacco is the most reliable profit maker on the farm, although it accounts for only about 40 percent of the total income. The rest is from 550 acres of corn and soybeans.

It's largely on the strength of what the records have told them that Scott and Dalton have made the decision to continue to expand their tobacco acreage, although it will require a large investment in mechanization equipment and quota lease costs.

"Soybeans, grown for seed, have been a good crop but the records show that corn is more variable," said Whitford. "We're not going to give up on corn, but we will continue to look at it each year and be somewhat guided in our planting decisions by what our enterprise records show us."

In a growing area where desirable tobacco soils are limited and potential yields are well below some of the major producing counties, the Whitfords attempt to make up in quality what they lack in volume.

"We don't make 2,000 pounds an acre every year," said Scott. "Sometimes it's down around 1,600 pounds, depending on the season."

"But we know we can make a profit even at these yield levels by keeping the tobacco clean in the field and cleaning it after curing," Whitford continued.

According to the computerized records from last year, it would take from 15 to 20 acres of soybeans to replace the income brought in from one acre of tobacco at the Whitfords' farm.

Group Plans Liquor Suit

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Christian Action League plans to announce Friday a suit challenging the constitutionality of the state's new liquor-by-the-drink law, a spokesman for the group said.

The League has hired David Wagner, a Winston-Salem lawyer, to prepare the suit.

"I was retained for that purpose, but I've got to see exactly what provisions of the statute we would challenge," Wagner said Tuesday. "We're studying it and we will know sometime in the next few days what our position is on it."

John E. Jones, a spokesman for "Concerned Citizens for a Better Asheville," said the suit would be announced at the Calvary Baptist Church in Winston-Salem Friday.

Buncombe County, which includes Asheville, and Winston-Salem are among several areas holding referendums on mixed drink sales during the next few months.

The Christian Action League has helped lead the fight against legalized mixed drink sales in the state. The League led an unsuccessful lobbying effort against the liquor-by-the-drink law that was enacted by the General Assembly last year.

Doubts Bolstered By Report

The Kennedy assassination investigation was carried out under the guidance of the U. S. Supreme Court chief justice back in 1964.

It was concluded that Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone in killing the president as he rode in a motorcade in Dallas.

Yet, through all the intervening years doubts have remained about the final conclusions.

That the nation's best investigators and finest legal minds could have been wrong is hardly believable. Nevertheless here 15 years later a House Assassinations Committee, after extensive hearings, has concluded that there was a probable conspiracy in the death of President Kennedy.

The hearings convinced the respected congressman L. Richardson Preyer of North Carolina, who as chairman of the committee, issued the statement which set forth the conclusions.

The committee delved into Oswald's relationships with Cubans and others prior to the assassination, and suspected a connection, although most of the information was known previously.

Also of considerable interest to the committee was the possibility of shots from a grassy knoll at Dallas, and an analysis of loud reports from an open police microphone at the time of the shooting.

As always the mystery and doubts swirl about the assassination of the president. The prime one may be, why weren't these leads followed up at the time of the original investigation — possibly the most extensive criminal investigation ever carried out in our nation?

The House committee suspects a conspiracy—we must recognize that the evidence is far from conclusive—but even now the search should go on for the truth. If a conspiracy was possible then, it is possible now and if we are to deal with it as a society the best way to do so is with all the facts at hand.

No Little Green Men Came

With the New Year was sure to come reports of unidentified flying object sightings.

This year there was a difference, however, when a New Zealand television news crew filmed a UFO. Not only that but the Royal New Zealand

Air Force tracked the thing on radar.

As always, though, the UFO went its own way with no contact and no little green men.

Maybe it was another world's way of saying Happy New Year to Earth creatures.

County Mapping Advance

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Growing public interest and financial support from the General Assembly is moving North Carolina well along on a county-by-county mapping project conducted by the Soil Conservation Service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Four counties will be completed in 1979, to join the 20 previously surveyed, keeping the agency on track for completion of all 100 by 1990. Washington, Jones, Buncombe, and Madison projects will be finished this year.

As the work ends in those counties, priority will be given to McDowell, Person and Gaston counties. Soil Scientist Hubert Byrd said the projects on the priority list may be expanded: "The Person County survey may also include neighboring Caswell County, and the Gaston work may include Lincoln."

Soil surveys preliminary to the mapping are already underway in 30 additional counties, including Caldwell, Ashe, Cabarrus, Stanley, Davidson, Rockingham, Hoke, Cumberland, Harnett, Johnston, Nash, Sampson, Bladen, Columbus, Beaufort, Martin, Craven, Carteret, Brunswick, Wilson, Hertford, Bertie, Pamlico, Perquimans, Chowan and Currituck.

Close Study

To prepare the modern soil survey, soil scientists literally cover every piece of ground in the area. They use augers to obtain samples of soil beneath the surface, and sometimes must dig large pits to study the soil in detail.

In North Carolina's survey, the normal survey area is one or more entire counties at a time. Occasionally special purpose surveys may be made, as when a certain tract of land is being evaluated for an industrial park or housing development.

Once the entire county is scientifically mapped, the survey is published in book form, with detailed maps superimposed on aerial photographs. The book also has interpretations that explain the symbols and legends found on the detailed maps.

Originally soil surveys were used mainly by farmers to determine the best land use for their farmland. A soil survey could pinpoint land for particular crops, pasture, woodland, and even lakes or farm ponds.

But in recent years, soil surveys have literally "gone to town" and are used extensively by planners, developers, tax appraisers, recreation planners and health department people.

The survey maps contain such a wealth of information: small streams, hills, rock outcroppings, buildings and such in closeup detail to the degree that it is simple to determine if septic tanks will work or whether a shopping center or other large development can fit onto the land.

The 20 counties already have soil survey maps completed and in book form are Alleghany, Watauga, Transylvania, Catawba, Iredell, Yadkin, Forsyth, Guilford, Alamance, Orange, Durham, Wake, Scotland, Robeson, Duplin, Lenoir, Wayne, New Hanover, Pitt and Pasquotank.

Appreciated

The minute detail and elaborate information contained in the maps are widely appreciated. One enthusiastic local planner has told Soil Conservation Service officials that "with this, you can read the land like a book."

In each county, local governments have matched that endorsement with money to help speed up the work. In addition, the 1977 General Assembly appropriated $200,000 a year for a two-year period to help move the statewide survey along. A dozen soil scientists, paid from state funds, are now working on the North Carolina survey.

"With this type of support", says Byrd, "the entire state will be completed by 1990. The local financial support has made this possible."

The total number of acres mapped last year were 1.6 million, bringing the total to date to 13.6 million.

WHAT STARTED OUT TO BE A PICNIC ---

A Gift Suits Needs

By Hugh A. Mulligan
AP Special Correspondent

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP)— Promise her anything, but give her a basin wrench.

It's what she wanted for Christmas, so I gave it to her. "Gift wrap it, will you?" I instructed the kid down at the hardware store.

He looked at me like I had just stepped off Battlestar Galactica. He was temporary Christmas help and for a minute there I could sense he hesitated between calling the manager and going across the street to the Town Hall to see if the patrol car was in the driveway. Or maybe getting the health officer.

Instead, being one of those know-it-all college kids in frizzy hair and tortoiseshell bifocals, he resorted to sarcasm.

"And the pesticide, you want me to gift wrap that too?"

"No," I put him in his place, which was back in the fertilizer section. "I'll eat that here. But let me have a gift card. I want to put my wife's name on it."

"The pesticide?"

"No, the basin wrench." I guess they're still talking about me down at the hardware store as that nut case who came in and had a basin wrench gift wrapped for his wife for Christmas. Too bad I didn't take it next door to the jewelers to have it engraved. People today are so lacking in imagination.

What else should I have done? Or, as Cyrus Vance tells the National Security Council before boarding the diplomatic shuttle: Let's explore the alternatives.

From way back in October, there was none. She had her heart set on a basin wrench. You see the adult education program in our town offers everything from conversational Russian and Restoration drama to belly dancing and Japanese flower arranging. My wife took plumbing.

She was the only woman in the class, but she hung in there. Or should I say, took the plunge? She said she was sick

Greatest Year Ahead

WASHINGTON — Ebenezer Tanklips was pleased with himself. As chief economist for the Bilgewater Corporation he had just handed in his projection for the year 1979. It was a masterful job, he thought to himself, as he returned from lunch. His report indicated a continual high inflation rate, more attacks on the dollar, a drop in the GNP, and what he considered his masterpiece — a prediction of a full-scale recession. Not only was Tanklips hoping to be congratulated by the powers upstairs, but he secretly thought that it would help him win the Nobel Prize for Economics.

When he walked into his office his secretary said, "The chairman of the board wants to see you."

Tanklips smirked. They had just read his report on the 86th floor and probably wanted him to verbalize it for them.

He entered the chairman's office and noticed his report on B.J.'s desk.

"You wanted to see me B.J.?" Tanklips said.

"Yes," the chairman replied. "I just read your projections for 1979. You're fired!"

"Fired?" Tanklips said, "but why?"

ART BUCHWALD

"You're predicting a recession. The board had a meeting and decided we had to cut back. You are the first one to go."

"But I could be wrong," Tanklips said. "Maybe there won't be a recession. It's possible we could have a banner year. Let me go back and check my figures again."

The chairman said, "You did a great job, Tanklips. Your predictions concerning the prime rate, when fed into the federal deficit, not to mention the debit side of our balance of payments, when orchestrated with the price of oil, confirm what we've been fearing for some time. The boom is over and the sluggishness is starting to set in. As you so ably state here on Page 45, it's time to retrench, get rid of the deadwood, and dig in for the long pull until the economy turns around."

"Did I say that?" Tanklips cried. "I must have been crazy. B.J., think how many times I've been wrong in the past. If you had followed my advice in 1976 the company would be a cooked goose now. Let me see that report. Of course! I see my mistake right here on Page 23. I forgot to project that the price of coffee would go down by three cents a pound."

"We don't sell coffee," the chairman said.

Other Editors Say Outlaw Statute

(Goldboro News-Argus)

With the time that has gone into its preparation there must be much to praise in Governor Hunt's new law and order package. Some of these points will be discussed in detail after there has been an opportunity to study them.

But one suggestion — reviving the "outlaw" statute — should be approached with utmost caution.

While the conduct of Joan Little before and following her murder charge and trial has not qualified her for an All-American Girl award, hers is a classic case arguing against the outlaw statute.

As will be recalled, Miss Little was declared an outlaw immediately after it was discovered that the Beaufort County jailer had been stabbed to death and that she was missing from her cell.

This meant that Miss Little could have been shot on sight by anyone identifying her.

But later the details of the jailer's slaying gradually became known. The man obviously had been engaged in some sexual experience with the prisoner at the time he was stabbed with an ice pick.

A jury subsequently found Joan Little not guilty on the murder charge.

And it was on the basis of this charge that she had been declared an outlaw and was fair game for anyone.

Arguments against the outlaw designation also include the possibility of mistaken identity. The person making that mistake and killing an innocent victim no doubt would be responsible for the error — but that would be small consolation to the deceased.

If an outlaw statute is revived at all, then surely it should be limited only to escapees who have already been convicted of the worst possible crimes and who represent a real threat to the public.

The General Assembly should weigh carefully the potential harm of such legislation against what little it might accomplish.

40 Years Ago Today

January 3, 1939

After a Christmas recess of two weeks, students and faculty of East Carolina Teachers College returned to the campus yesterday and this morning for registration today.

Dormitories and dining halls were opened yesterday for the returning hundreds who had scattered for the holidays.

Registration was moving at top speed this morning, the number enrolled having passed the 500 mark when the work was halted at noon for lunch.

City Engineer H. L. Rivers said today approximately $100,000 of the paving program which had been under way in Greenville for the past several months was practically completed.

When the program was first started it was difficult to get enough signed petitions, but later on and when the money began running low, petitions were on file for more work than could be done with the money available.

THE INSIDE REPORT

New Texas Star Shines

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

AUSTIN, Texas — In a cramped, rented office on the 10th floor of a downtown Austin building, the first Republican governor of Texas since Civil War Reconstruction is beginning his attempt not only to transform the face of this state's politics but also to change the national picture. Gov.-elect William Clements — compact, combative oil multi-millionaire — in long hours at the transition office is providing a foretaste of life at the state capitol after his inauguration Jan. 16: cajoling and haranguing politicians to back his program of reduced taxes and slimmed-down government. His aim is no less audacious or improbable than his startling announcement for governor a year ago. The Texas governorship is constitutionally one of the nation's weakest, purposely made so after the Civil War to pit legislative power against the Northern carpetbaggers. Adding to structural inferiority, Clements is a Republican interloper facing an overwhelmingly Democratic legislature controlling the levers of power. The stakes are immense. Clements' performance will determine whether his narrow upset in November was an aberration or whether banking, insurance and other Texas business interests will now abandon the state Democratic party. It incidentally will decide whether Clements, a former deputy secretary of defense, actually becomes the national Republican mover and shaker he wants to be.

Specifically, Clements is dead serious about enacting a program based on his campaign promises: a $1 billion tax cut spread over two years; elimination of 25,000 out of 165,000 state jobs over four years; a constitutional amendment providing for legislation by ballot initiatives.

The thrust of his program imperils entrenched prerogatives of the legislature. Although the tax cut is alluring to many legislators (including House speaker Billy Clayton), it has a determined Democratic critic in Lt. Gov. William Hobby. Holding an office that constitutionally rivals the governor's in power, ex-Houston newspaper executive Hobby in six years as lieutenant governor has gained a reputation as a leading and respected student of state government.

Hobby has noted that nobody even reads a governor's budget, a reflection of

Portsmouth Refinery Fought

By J. LEE CARRIER
Associated Press Writer

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — An Interior Department official says Portsmouth is "one of the worst locations in the United States for a refinery," but an official of the proposed $360 million project says the department's opposition was expected.

Under Secretary of the Interior James A. Joseph told a news conference in Portsmouth Tuesday that consideration of environmental factors alone dictate rejection of a permit for the proposed facility.

"Situating as it is near the mouth of the Chesapeake Bay, this area is in position to help or irreversibly damage an estuary upon which marine life all up and down the Atlantic Coast depends heavily," Joseph said.

The refinery proposed by Hampton Roads Energy Co.

would be built on the Elizabeth river and would have a capacity to process 175,000 to 250,000 barrels of Middle East oil daily.

Favored by the Department of Energy and the city of Portsmouth, the refinery has drawn bitter opposition from environmental groups, which say oil spills would devastate oyster beds in the area.

Robert Porterfield, vice president of Hampton Roads Energy Co., said Interior would recommend "disapproval of any permit on any estuary where there is even a remote possibility of any damage."

"They feel they have a congressional mandate to do this," Porterfield said. "This doesn't change our plans one bit. We will just have to wait now until the matter goes to the secretaries."

The Interior Department's announcement came in response to a recommendation by Lt. Gen. John W. Morris, chief of the Army Corps of Engineers, that a dredging permit for the refinery be approved. The permit is one of the last major obstacles to construction of the facility.

Because Corps of Engineers and Interior officials can't agree, the issue will go to Army Secretary Clifford Alexander and Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus. Alexander has the final authority at that level.

Joseph said Andrus will back fully the position of Interior's Fish and Wildlife Division and that the answer probably will depend on Alexander. Joseph said he expects Alexander to reject the refinery.

Joseph also said similar issues in the future could be helped if government would "take the initiative in helping industry find locations for refineries and power plants and other energy stations which would best serve the interests of all involved."

Porterfield said he was opposed to Joseph's suggestion.

"The federal government would soon start pre-determining where you could build and that would usurp state powers. It should be up to the states and localities to decide what kind of industry they want, not the federal government," Porterfield said.

Jo Ann Berkely, vice chairman of Citizens Against the Refinery's Effects, said the Interior Department recommendation was encouraging. But she said it wasn't clear whether the Innovention would give her group grounds against the refinery in any future legal proceedings.

Strength For Today

MEANING OF 'HOLY'

The Sabbath is a holy day. The Bible is a holy book. The Church is holy. What is the meaning of this word "holy"? A thing is holy if it belongs in a special way to God. Also, a thing is holy if it is in the world but set apart to be devoted to God's use. The Bible is holy because in it we can learn more about God than from any other source. The Sabbath is a day set aside for worship, good works, and all those relationships which draw us nearer to God.

Therefore, it is a holy day — one which belongs in a special way to God.

The Church is holy because it is separated from the world's selfish interests. It is the institution by which God makes known in effective fashion His will for man. It does not stand apart from the world disdainfully, but dedicates itself to everything in the world which will advance the spiritual kingdom which Christ came to advance.

The chairman said, "I'm sorry it's too late. You predicted that, in order to resolve the inflation dilemma, we would have to live with an eight percent unemployment rate. This company is willing to live with it, as long as you are."

"But," said Tanklips, "I wasn't including myself in that unemployment rate. I was including everybody else. Economists never make themselves a part of the unemployment factor."

"Why not?" the chairman asked.

"Because it would be a conflict of interest. We have to stay out of the unemployment projections or our figures would be tainted by self-interest. B.J., please don't fire me."

"I'm sorry, Tanklips, but your report speaks for itself. We're going to have to play hardball in 1979."

"Let me look at that a moment," Tanklips said, grabbing the report off the desk. "My God, I put a decimal point in the wrong place! And I forgot to carry the two over when I added up seven, four and nine. This changes everything. We can't cut back in '79! It's going to be our tisanship. Millionaire rancher Tobin Armstrong of Armstrong, Tex. (husband of Anne Armstrong, former ambassador to London). Was on the telephone to non-liberal Democrats within minutes of his appointment as Clements' unpaid talent scout. Clements, who formally became a Republican in 1973, has told the Reaganite state Republican executive committee he plans to name Democrats, independents' blacks, browns and women to his administration. Moreover, Clements will be the first governor of Texas since John B. Connally a decade ago who is articulate and dynamic. While lacking statutory power to cut the state payroll, he intends to use his 4,000 state appointments over the next four years to that end. For department heads who balk, he poses the ordeal of a state audit. On tax and spending questions, Clements seen the people as his biggest allies. Regarding Hobby's opposition, Clements told us, "He's on the wrong side of these issues" — a view privately shared by some of the lieutenant governor's worried friends. "Bill will end up flexible on this," Clements forecast. A replica of California's Proposition 13 debate is in store. Hobby sees a surplus of only $900 million, with taxcutters required to slash highway and school funds; Clements sees a $1.2 billion surplus, after his $1 billion tax cut. As for nobody reading the governor's budget, Clements balled his hands into fists and told us: "They may not read it now or next month. But before we are through, they are going to read it."

The impact of this new star in Texas will be felt in Washington. President Carter could not have carried Texas in 1976 without all-out support from a Democratic governor, and will therefore be hard pressed to repeat in 1980. But beyond this obvious problem, Bill Clements seems to have taken on the political destruction of Jimmy Carter as his holy mission ("I am dedicated to the proposition that Mr. Carter is bad for Texas").

As governor-elect, Clements has blasted Carter's China policy and other national security stands as "inimical to the people of Texas," adding to us: "And I damn sure am going to keep talking about it." Clearly, the president has a vital interest in the outcome of the absorbing political drama about to unfold in this city.

Duplication Of Street-Names Argued At Hearing

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
FARMVILLE — A public hearing was held during the Town Commissioners' meeting here last night on whether duplication of street names should be ended by an act of the Commissioners.
A petition was brought by residents of Davis Circle asking that their street's name not be changed. Former Postmaster H. B. Humphrey expressed the opinion that a change now would be more confusing than helpful, based on his post office experience. Commissioner Farrow pointed out, however, that the reason for the change was not convenience, but the need for clarity when rescue, fire or law enforcement help is summoned. The final vote on the matter, though, was that only Bynum Street, which is "inactive" anyway would be changed at the present time. Other streets in question were May Street, May Court and May Boulevard;

Davis Drive and Davis Circle; Thorne Drive and Thorne Street, one of which is outside the town limits; and Bynum Drive.
It was decided that the changes in police scheduling tentatively approved at the December meeting would be delayed until a new chief is hired. Ron Cooper resigned, effective Dec. 22, as police chief.
Study of Town Engineer Jack McDavid's estimates on realignment of Belcher Street was deferred till a Friday 1 p. m.

meeting, when bid awards for water and sewer facilities for Electrical Utilities Company and lighting for the new softball field also will be made.
Town Administrator Patrick Thomas said he understands a meeting is to be held between owners of property adjacent to Mandarin Drive and a state highway representative. Additional right of way is needed so DOT can construct an access road to Electric Utilities Company, an industry expected to open here soon.

Funds were appropriated for landscaping in the Downtown revitalization area. These include $12,102 for masonry, $5,620 for plantings, $2,942 for metals and carpentry; $14,205 for town-bought and / or installed equipment; $5,000 architect's fee and $1,743, five percent contingency.
Landscape architect Jeffrey McLean told the group he has had difficulty coming up with a firm or firms to cast cast-iron trash receptacles and a medallion that was hopefully to be used in the areas. He will continue to work on the matter, he said.

Bids for water and sewer lines for Electric Utilities Company are due this Thursday. Costs are expected to be about $30,800 for a 10-inch water line and $33,500 or thereabouts for an eight-inch sewer.
$10,670 was appropriated for extension of the CETA beautification grant project through March. The source of revenue is a state grant.

After some discussion, the Commissioners approved with a three-two vote to award a contract for gasoline for town use to R. E. Deans, the low bidder. Deans proposes to furnish gasoline as requested in the specifications at the following prices: leaded .4965 plus .1325 tax or 629 a gallon; unleaded .5265 plus .1325 tax or 659 a gallon. Service is promised within 30 days, the proposed site being the corner of Belcher Street and May Boulevard and daily visual oversight being from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m.

The other bidder was Speight Service Center, which offered to sell to the town at five cents discount off pump list price, which at this time would be .669 per gallon for leaded and .699 per gallon for unleaded.
Commissioners W. R. Duke and John T. Walston voted against accepting the low bid. Duke said he believes tire service, which can be supplied by Speight and not by Deans, should be considered.

Commissioner Jack Farrow then proposed, and other commissioners agreed, that the town administrator prepare to take bids for tire buying and servicing in a separate package for a year's period. Previously Thomas said, tires have been bought at the best local price as needed.

$3,468 was appropriated to pay the off-street parking leases for the balance of the fiscal year 1979. The town has had to take over this obligation from merchants who did not follow through. Work is still being done on the proposed formation of a special tax district to recoup this revenue, it was noted.

Commissioner David Stowe was appointed representative to the Mid-East Commission. Thomas commented that he believes representation practices on the commission "leave something to be desired." He said he believes towns in this area should question the system which now seems self-perpetuating. The problem of minority representation, he said, can be handled by simply using minority members of local boards.

The board approved the Fire Department re-election of H. P. Norman as chief.

The planning board was cut to nine members with the appointment or reappointment of Robert May, Jim Craft, Bert Warren and W. R. Duke Jr. The commissioners recommended that the planning board set up attendance requirements to be brought back before the board.

College Of Their Choice

ATLANTA (AP) — Despite increased opportunity at formerly all-white colleges, a majority of black students still get their degrees from predominantly black institutions, according to a study by the Southern Regional Education Board.

The study said 63 percent of all black college graduates are the products of historically black schools.

But the study showed that the South led the rest of the nation in the 1970s in the number of black college graduates.

Blacks now make up 15.1 percent of the 2.8 million students in Southern schools and have earned 11.4 percent of all the bachelor's degrees awarded in the South, the SREB said.

Nationally, blacks account for 9.3 percent of the college enrollments and 6.4 percent of those getting bachelor's degrees.

"There is no other way to explain the increase in black enrollment than access," said James Mingle, the SREB research associate who prepared the study. But he said the increased availability of financial aid also accounted for the gains in black enrollment.

According to the study, black students are concentrating on the field of education, no matter where they attend school.

Nearly one in every three blacks in the survey who received bachelor's degrees was majoring in education, compared with one in every five whites. At the master's and doctoral degree levels, three of every four degrees awarded to blacks were in education.

"This is reflective of the singularity of employment for blacks in the past," Mingle said. "We have studies projecting that there will be more graduates in that area (education) than there will be openings."

Financial Aid Workshop Set

A financial aid workshop for seniors of North Pitt High School, who plan to continue their education, and their parents will be held in the school library at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 4.

Financial aid officials from East Carolina University will present the program and be available for questions.

The Littlest Known Peanut Often Unrecognized

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — When in 1969 the United States sent a manned spacecraft to within 10 miles of the moon, the Apollo 10 mother ship was named after a comic-strip character named Charlie Brown and its lunar module after Charlie's dog Snoopy.

CHARLES SCHULZ

Nobody raised objections. Charlie Brown and Snoopy, the winsome heroes of Peanuts, were an American institution.

And this week they celebrate the beginning of their comic strip's 30th year with a CBS special anniversary show.

There has never been quite so extraordinary a group as the cast of Peanuts — Charlie Brown, the eternal loser; Linus, who spouts theology while cuddling his security blanket; Lucy, Linus' crabby sister whom one reviewer enthusiastically described as a "bitch goddess," and Snoopy, the most sophisticated of hounds, who recently replaced the Van Gogh in his palatial dog house with an Andrew Wyeth.

But perhaps the most interesting and least known of the Peanuts characters is its creator Charles Schulz, whose views on life are often bleak and who bases Peanuts on the premise that failure is funnier than success.

Schulz's earliest memories are of the great comic strips of his childhood, and of his ambition to become a cartoonist. His only formal training was a correspondence course through a local drawing school, supplemented by years of practice and experimentation.

The result is Peanuts, which in its every detail reflects some facet of Schulz's own personality and life. Like Charlie Brown's, his father was a barber and Schulz once owned a rather eccentric dog.

And when you talk to Schulz it doesn't take long to realize that he is Charlie Brown, older and grayer of course, but still the bemused, worried kid on the block.

Like his little hero, Schulz is a rather shy, thoughtful man who has obviously spent much of his life thinking, thinking about life and its problems.

"I know what it is to have to spend days, evenings and weekends by myself," he says, "and I also know how uncomfortable anxiety can be. I worry about almost all there is in life to worry about, and because I worry, Charlie Brown has to worry."

The Peanuts are far more than a collection of precocious kids and fantastic animals. They are ourselves, grappling with the daily complexities of life in a world that is never quite reliable and where triumph, as the Peanuts would say, is as elusive as catching snowflakes on your tongue.

Over the past 30 years — in which the strip has grown from a circulation of eight American newspapers to one of 1,750 worldwide, with a daily following of 90 million readers — the Peanuts have struggled with the changing realities and values of American life, changing as we have, but like most of us never quite sure of what it is all about.

"Charlie Brown suffers, because he is a caricature of the ordinary person," Schulz explains. "Most of us are much more acquainted with losing than we are with winning. Winning is great but it isn't funny. While one person is a happy winner, there may be a hundred losers using funny stories to console themselves."

At the heart of Schulz's art is his ability to gently catch our charms and follies so aptly that we can only laugh at ourselves.

Peanuts is above all an American creation — and one reason it is now published in 24 foreign countries and has been the subject of an exhibition at the Louvre is that it is read as an expression of the American character.

The cast's self-conscious preoccupation and doubt, their values and attitudes are those of the modern American. But much of their appeal rests on a deeply sentimental attachment to the idyllic childhood of the small American town and the values of a seemingly happier past.

For 30 years Schulz has lived daily with the strip, which he admits rarely leaves his mind. Some of his ideas are flashes of inspiration, others are years in the making. "It's rather a mystery to me where some of the little phrases come from," he admits, "and why it is possible to think of 10 ideas in one day and not be able to think of a single one the next."

Schulz has enjoyed the long years he has spent with Peanuts but wonders sometimes if he shouldn't try something new.

"I never feel like I've made it. I still have to draw something funny tomorrow. It's the same burden you had when you were in school, and it's Sunday night and you have an English theme due in the morning," he says.

Schulz has one particular joy, attending performances of the much-produced musical "You're A Good Man Charlie Brown." Sitting unrecognized in the audience he savors what the cartoonist's art is all about — laughter.

And occasionally life imitates art. Once while charging something in a store the clerk, glancing at his credit card, asked if he was THE Charles Schulz. The delighted woman asked Schulz to draw her a picture of Snoopy, which she excitedly displayed to everyone in the store. Beaming, she then turned back to Schulz and said, "Oh, yes, Mr. Schulz, do you have any proof of identity?"

Evangelical Fervor Reaches Out To The Retarded

What You Eat Can Hurt You

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

The drugs you take for help can turn around and hurt unless you are careful about what you swallow and when.

Drugs interact with foods, beverages and other medicines and the results can cause illness and even death. Many drugs also have potentially serious side effects. Individual responses vary widely.

"There are people dying every day from adverse reactions to drugs," says Joseph Graedon, author of "The People's Pharmacy," a guide to medicines.

Ask questions about your prescriptions. "It's the doctor's responsibility to communicate with the patient about the treatment," Graedon says. But doctors don't always have enough time. And they may not know about your particular problems unless you tell them.

Have the doctor write down the brand and generic names of any drug prescribed. Find out if there are any restrictions on taking the medicine; some drugs, for example, cannot be taken with fruit juice. Inquire about side effects and let the doctor know if you are taking any other medicines, prescription or non-prescription.

Steven Strauss, author of "Your Prescription and You," warns against combining medicines without advice. "When certain drugs are taken together, they may produce certain effects that do not occur if the drugs are taken individually or at a different time."

Common foods also can cause serious problems with some drugs. "In general," the Food and Drug Administration says, "the presence of food in the stomach and intestines can influence a drug's effectiveness by slowing down or speeding up the time it takes the medicine to go through the gastrointestinal tract to the site in the body where it is needed."

"Food also contains natural and added chemicals that can react with certain drugs in ways that make the drugs virtually useless. Some reactions can be downright dangerous, triggering a medical crisis or, in rare instances, death."

The FDA says that it usually is unwise to take drugs with soda pop or with acid fruit or vegetable juices unless you check with your doctor first. These beverages can result in excess acidity that may cause some drugs to dissolve quickly in the stomach instead of in the intestines where they can readily be absorbed into the bloodstream.

Drugs not only interact with food, they also affect the way the body uses food. They can hasten excretion of certain nutrients, hinder absorption of other ones and interfere with the body's ability to convert nutrients into usable forms.

"Nutrient depletion of the body occurs gradually," the FDA says, "but for those taking drugs over long periods of time, these interactions can lead to deficiencies of certain vitamins and minerals."

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Several years ago when Eileen Ward asked a priest about First Communion for her little girl, she was told, "It isn't necessary. Mimi has Christ already." Mimi is retarded.

"I figured that I have Christ already, too," Mrs. Ward said, "but I still belong to a church. The clergy say it different ways. Some say, 'You have a blessing, a little saint,' and some say, 'You have a cross to bear.' But the idea for a long time has been, retarded people shouldn't be involved in the church."

No longer. The retarded are perhaps the latest group to be touched by the current evangelical fervor in the United States. The once-monthly Sunday School classes and services organized by Mrs. Ward and other parents of retarded children at Christ the King Church are proof.

The 40 students there are 4 to 45 years old, severely to mildly retarded, ambulatory and not, vocal and not, Methodists, Lutherans and Catholics. They come from loving homes and from Orient State Institute.

In four years, the Sunday school has had 12 first communions and five confirmations.

"What does God tell you, Paul?" Mrs. Ward asked a dark-haired 9-year-old who cannot talk. Paul pointed to his eye and hugged his heart, his sign for "I love you."

Michael, a pudgy little boy in a suit, can make the sign of the cross.

Lisa, a little blonde with Down's Syndrome, showed off a paper stick doll with yarn hair that she made in class. Their lesson that day was about the 10 lepers cured by Jesus.

"How many came back to say, 'Thank you, Jesus?'" Mrs. Ward asked.

"One," said Lisa's classmate, holding up her stick doll. With few books available and little previous experience teaching the retarded about God to go on, the parents have made up their own lessons.

To teach sharing and communion, Mrs. Ward baked tiny loaves of bread and halved them for the students to share. Helium-filled balloons helped in a lesson on the ascension of Christ from earth to heaven. "Even though the helium leaked and we had to tie 45 limping balloons to some trees," Mrs. Ward said.

She also remembers the massive cleaning that followed one Christmas. Figuring that only one child would get to carry a manger, the parents planned a creche ceremony that had each child carrying in a bit of straw.

Through body movements — bowing heads, standing and sitting, shared kisses and handshaking during services — even the most profoundly retarded can worship, the group has learned.

Inez, an elderly Orient State resident, who uses a cane and is difficult to understand, responded when the first notes of "This Little Light of Mine" sounded. With the others, she held up her index finger and pantomimed the words of the hymn.

"We don't teach dogma or theology," said Mrs. Ward. "Our main lesson is that everyone is unique and can do something special. God loves you, so love yourself. The main point is dignity."

"At Easter we didn't get into the blood and nailing to the cross, all the gory stuff," she said. "We taught the kids that Christ on the cross with his arms outstretched is saying, 'I love you this much.'"

Religious education for the retarded is overdue, says Mark Salter, a Columbus Diocese consultant on educating the mentally handicapped. "The church is just awakening to the need of the retarded," Salter says. "The fact is, they do good and bad. They can learn there is a right and wrong way like any other person and that it's not just OK to do whatever they want because they are retarded."

Parent-teachers in the class are working on a lesson about morality. "Our kids have feelings. They have desires, so they need this."

"Can the retarded comprehend religion?" one asks.

"What does religion teach? Kindness, openness and compassion. They don't have to comprehend it. They can live it."

ERA Campaigner Keeps Working For Daughter

By PAMELA J. HUEY
SIDNEY, Ill. (UPI) — Anne Follis, wiping the remains of lunch from her baby daughter's face, speaks with a determined voice.

"I do it for her," she said, nodding to the small, laughing child. "I put a pink rose in her room and I told her when I put it there, I am putting this pink rose for you, Megan, and that some day we're going to have the Equal Rights Amendment."

Mrs. Follis, national president of Housewives for ERA and wife of a Methodist minister, said she will work for ratification for the rest of her life, if necessary.

Ironically, Mrs. Follis offers the same argument to elicit support for ratification that Phyllis Schlafly, her famous counterpart from Alton, Ill., uses to oppose it — preservation of the family.

"My argument is it will strengthen the family," Mrs Follis said in an interview. "The family survives now in spite of the laws we have right now, not because of them."

But Mrs. Follis hasn't always felt that way.

"My first reaction was I felt very threatened by it — this was something for other women, it didn't really pertain to me. Of course, I really interpreted it the way a lot of homemakers do, that those radical women were telling me my work in the home was not worth anything."

She then began examining different state laws and found "how few legal rights homemakers have. For example, the husband is head and master with total control over all community property in Louisiana."

"You see the idea is we have to keep women down in order to protect the family. The minute women get freedom, the minute women get property rights people think it's going to destroy the family. There is this terrible fear, that unless the husband is elevated to the status of a god and given absolute power over the family, it's going to threaten and destroy the family."

Like most other supporters of the ERA, Mrs. Follis views her home state of Illinois as a major key to ratification.

The proposed amendment, which would ban discrimination on the basis of sex, has been ratified by 35 of the required 38 states. Congress this year voted to extend from March 22, 1979 to June 30, 1982 the federal deadline for approval.

Tentative plans to bring the issue up for another vote in the Illinois Legislature leave her hopeful, but not too optimistic. But even if ratification fails again, she said, supporters will be back next year.

"The whole point of it is it just is not going to go away," said the 31-year-old mother of three. "That is exactly the primary strategy — we are simply never going away. I feel very strongly if I have to do this for the rest of my life, I'll do it."

Mrs. Follis has given more than 100 speeches, made two appearances on the nationally syndicated Phil Donahue TV show and responded to questions on dozens of radio talk shows. She said being a homemaker helps her credibility with other housewives who are initially skeptical about ERA.

"I feel vehemently, the most important job in the world is homemaking," she said as her son, Ryan, 4, nudged for attention. "I feel very, very strongly that a homemaker, who nurtures and produces other human beings and gets them ready for the world, is doing the most important job in this country."

Housewives for ERA, which started as a state group in 1973, is active in about 15 states. Mrs. Follis became president last June after serving as state president since 1976.

A native of New Jersey, Mrs. Follis came to the Midwest when she married her husband, Dean, now pastor of a Methodist church about 10 miles southeast of Urbana. Initially, she said, he was skeptical of her concerns with women's issues.

However, she said, they both marched for the ERA last summer in Washington D.C. with other housewives and representatives of religious groups.

"He really supports me now. The march was the turning point."

That night, she said, they watched television and listened to the leader of the opposition forces — she won't refer to Mrs. Schlafly by name — call the marchers radicals and lesbians.

"He was so furious and I was too," said Mrs. Follis, who plays an active role in her church and is angered when opponents use religion and the Bible to support their arguments.

"I am a Christian and I do support the Equal Rights Amendment. I've been shocked at all the people I run into who think the two are mutually exclusive."

Working out of a small office in her home, Mrs. Follis has written a number of pamphlets on the ERA, including one on Christianity and the amendment. In that pamphlet she defines a liberated woman as one who has found peace with God.

"She has experienced, and she knows that she is of infinite value to her Creator," Mrs. Follis wrote.

She said the Bible tells husbands to love their wives and yet laws have given husbands almost total control over their wives.

"That is diametrically opposed to the principles in the Scriptures. You certainly can't legislate love but you can legislate fairness."

Mrs. Follis, who somewhat resembles actresses Debbie Reynolds or Sandra Dee, said she is hurt many times when verbally attacked by opponents who have called her everything from a lesbian to a prostitute to a communist.

"I've been told," she said, "by at least 100 people I couldn't possibly be a good mother."

Mrs. Follis has no plans past her presidency other than continued work for ratification.

What if the three-year extension runs out and the ERA is not ratified?

Then, she said, supporters will start back at the beginning with introduction of a new ERA proposal in Congress.

"Never, never would I allow a vocal minority to deny American women a place in the Constitution," she said.

"FOR HER" — Ann Follis, national president of Housewives for ERA, holds her daughter Megan. "I do it for her", says Mrs. Follis, who is determined to work for ratification of the amendment for the rest of her life, if necessary. (UPI Photo)

Financial Aid Offered To Hard-Up Bluebloods

By BROOKE W. KROEGER
LONDON (UPI) — Only in Britain, or somewhere the English have left their indelible mark, could a charity for the "new poor" like the Distressed Gentlefolks Aid Association be thriving in 1978.

Aging pauper nobility still need help. A young widow left destitute with three children in private school has to pay tuition. Some Scottish widows now on welfare like to vacation on the south coast of France.

"The DGAA is run by people who understand," says the charity's standard ad.

Plenty of others understand, too. Last year the association pulled in more than $3 million — well over half of that in legacies and special gifts.

Queen Mother Elizabeth is royal patron, the Duchess of Kent is president and Sir Anthony Swan, 65, is director. Sir Anthony has a bushy, graying mustache, wears wellcut three-piece suits and spent 30 years in Kenya with the British colonial service.

"We do get those who say, 'You're snobs, you're out of date, you should be helping everybody,'" he said.

"Well, that may be right but we're bound by our articles, which laid down firmly (in 1897) what we have to do. And there you are.

What she or anyone else qualifies for is modest grants ("never loans — our articles forbid it") to help pay the cost of home heating, television rental, clothing and shoes, holidays and convalescence, funerals, education and, in special cases, bank overdrafts.

A person no longer able to care for himself can go to a DGAA nursing home or residence where he gets private-style care for the price of his government allowances, less a $10 weekly stipend. The cost to private patients can run $400 a week or more.

"It's not that tea is poured from sterling service in our homes," Sir Anthony said. "It's that people with a similar outlook and interests are there together instead of an assortment of people glaring across the tea table at each other."

He said among those the charity has helped in recent years were "three countesses left absolutely nothing" and the 32-year-old wife of a "distinguished and prosperous officer" left penniless at his death.

"She had no idea what her situation was," he said. "And with three children in private school — we had to help her with the fees to get her started again."

His favorite fraud was the woman whose attorney and bank manager, as required by the DGAA, signed statements attesting to her poverty. She died without a will in a DGAA home where maids found $8,000 wadded up in her pillowcase.

He laughs about the trust fund the agency administers that provides money to Scottish widows for vacations in the south of France.

Although only Britons qualify for help, checks go out monthly to expatriates living in Italy, Spain, Majorca, the Canary Islands "and even a few old souls still left in India."

"If they'd come back from those climates now, the weather here would kill them," he said.

Foreigners, especially from India and Africa, often feel the agency out.

"One knows the letters by heart," Sir Anthony recited: "Dear Sir, I'm a poor man with 25 children..."

"And only yesterday a Nigerian wrote to say he was in trouble and could we please send him money for a motorbike."

Fastfoods Feed British Craving

By SHERIE WINSTON
LONDON (UPI) — The fastfood industry is taking over Britain — fast.

Five years ago an American in England searching for relief from steak and kidney pie had little chance to satisfy that hamburger craving except at a Wimpy Bar, the British chain named for Popeye's burger-loving comic strip pal.

Now hamburger joints are all over the place. Golden arches and posters proclaiming, "It takes two hands to handle a Whopper," are as common as red doubledecker buses.

The homegrown Wimpy chain first introduced hamburgers to London in 1954 with a menu that also offered "American fruit pie" and milkshakes called "whipsies." For decades nothing much happened.

Twenty years later McDonald's opened its first restaurant, and Burger King followed three years later in July, 1977. London now has 21 McDonald's and one Burger King. Wimpy's holds a huge lead with 306 in the city and another 301 throughout the United Kingdom.

By the end of the year, McDonald's plans to open five more restaurants and Wimpy's another 10. Burger King also has plans to expand.

"The opening of McDonald's has made hamburgers more popular," said Bernie Fisher, marketing director for Wimpy's. "Our profits have increased by 17 percent this year. We treat each other as good competition."

"There is a place for both to exist," said Michael Hayden,

Fastfoods Feed British Craving

marketing manager for the Big Mac.

Tourists in Britain "account only for a small proportion of our business," said Hayden. Both companies said tourist business is significant only in the heart of the city.

Americans resorting to their native food may find a few oddities in Britain's "beef-burger and chips," as some here call them. Ask for extra ketchup and you are told that none is served. What does come is something tasty but similar to Thousand Island dressing.

The hamburger invasion of Britain isn't confined to three chains. The Tennessee Pancake House, The Great American Disaster and the Hard Rock Cafe are restaurants with different gimmicks, but all specialize in American hamburgers.

"It is complementary to the United States," said Rudy Karrell, general manager of The Tennessee Pancake House, which has 16 branches and also serves hamburgers.

"The Hard Rock Cafe is patterned after a Midwestern roadside diner and we use a southern recipe for our hamburgers," said Prab Nallamilli, general manager of that establishment. It features baconburgers and bleu cheese dressing.

One pioneer of the hamburger invasion was The Great American Disaster, which opened 10 years ago. Managing Director Barry Judd said the owners thought the name would be catchy. There are now five branches throughout Great Britain.

Tobacco Meet Here Friday

L. Gaylon Ambrose, associate agricultural extension agent in Pitt County, reported that the 1979 tobacco production recommendations will be presented at a meeting here Friday at the Pitt County Farm Bureau Building.

Ambrose said that county extension personnel and N.C. State University tobacco extension specialists will present recommendations for the 1979 tobacco crop.

Topics will include plantbed production, fertilization, weed control, insect control and disease control, he added.

The meeting will be held from 2-4 p.m., Ambrose said.

"Oh, no!" Every one of my sports trophies had melted in the heat.

I watched our savings go up in flames.

The smoke wisped its way under the door and into the kitchen, curling itself into a plume around the sleeping cat. She woke abruptly and fled. A few minutes later, I suddenly realized what was happening.

"It's a fire," I yelled. "We've got a fire."

Fortunately, it was a small blaze and the damage was confined to one end of my den. After the firemen put out the flames, Helen and I picked our way through the rubble. The wood still steamed and hissed from the water.

I stopped, stunned. "Oh, no!" Every one of my sports trophies had warped and melted in the heat.

As I stood there, suffering incredible anguish, Helen plucked at my sleeve.

"Harry... what about the Savings Bonds? Weren't all the Bonds in your desk drawer?"

"Helen, how can you be so insensitive?"

The Savings Bonds we can replace. Look at my trophies!"

Which was true, of course. Even though our savings went up in flames, we didn't lose a cent. Bonds are guaranteed, even if they're destroyed.

I know Helen was really relieved about the Bonds. But I don't think she cared a hoot about my trophies. When I finally gave up and consigned the lumps of metal to the trash can, I could swear I saw her smiling.

Bonds are protected against fire, loss and theft. So if you lose a Bond, you don't lose your investment. Just write the Treasury Department, and replacement Bonds will be issued. (Recorded serial numbers speed replacement.)

La Costa Resort Center Shedding The Mob Image

By STEWART SLAVIN
CARLSBAD, Calif. (UPI)—I drove my old VW van to the entrance of the La Costa resort hotel and 2nd spa 30 miles north of San Diego expecting at any moment to be caught in some elaborate security network and told to get going.

After all, news reports told me that La Costa was the secret hangout for Hollywood stars, politicians, Teamsters Union officials and — according to an old report from unnamed federal authorities — “the West Coast watering hole for all sorts of hoods and gangsters.”

And this was the place where Richard Nixon broke his public silence for the first time since leaving the presidency by playing in a golf tournament in 1975.

It came as somewhat of a surprise, then, that I was able to enter the famed resort unchanged, driving past young men on horseback at the riding stable, a complex of 25 tennis courts and golf course, to the hotel lobby where I was cordially met by parking valets.

Interviews with La Costa employees, federal and local authorities, further shattered the secretive clock-and-dagger image of the resort.

Federal and local authorities are agreed on several points: La Costa is not a meeting place for the “mob,” there is nothing currently illegal about the $57 million in Teamster loans used to finance the resort and past links between its owners and organized crime are so old as to hold no further interest to federal authorities.

“There is no investigation into La Costa and there are no plans for any,” said John C. McGinley, assistant special agent in charge of the FBI’s San Diego office.

“We do receive information from time to time that someone we’re interested in is visiting La Costa,” he said. “But this is only sporadic. It’s no different than any other major resort.”

La Costa, which opened its doors in 1965, is a sprawling complex spread over 6,400 acres containing a hotel, spa, five restaurants, tennis courts, golf course, riding stable, 12 condominium projects and 1,000 homes priced up to half a million dollars. Teamsters president Frank Fitzsimmons owns one of the homes.

The four principal owners of La Costa are Morris “Mo” Dalitz, 80, Allard Roen, 58, Irwin Molasky and Merv Adelson, who operated the Desert Inn and Stardust hotels and casinos during the 1950s and early 60s.

Dalitz was described by the Kefauver crime committee in the 1950s as a gambler, racketeer and associate of organization crime figures. But in recent years has had no active involvement in organized crime, according to federal investigators.

Roen pleaded guilty in 1962 to charges involving a $5 million stock swindle in New York and was placed on two years probation and fined $10,000. But the U.S. attorney in charge of the case described Roen as an “innocent dupe” of the architects of the scheme.

Molasky and Adelson own the Lorimar production company in Hollywood which is responsible for “The Waltons” television series.

La Costa was financed through $57 million in loans from the Teamsters Union’s Central States, Southeast and Southwest Pension funds.

Since the opening of La Costa in midsummer of 1965, the resort has been mired in controversy, but the management denies there is anything amiss.

“It’s the cleanest operation in the world,” said Dr. Philip Smith, the resort’s resident physician. “You hear the whispers around here of gamblers and mobsters. I’ve never seen one and I’ve been here since we’ve started.

“I suppose I really ought to put a towel under my coat and make it look like I’m wearing a shoulder holster according to some of the people. Even my friends in San Diego think we’re loaded with mobsters and that Teamsters run the place.

“The Teamsters are just a bank that we borrow from. But we also borrow from the Michigan State Teachers Association. Hell, everybody knows that ‘Mo’ Dalitz and Joe Kenney ran rum together across Lake Erie. But how long do they want to keep bringing that up.”

“He’s the kindest, nicest guy I’ve ever known.”

McGinley of the San Diego FBI office said the Teamsters loans to La Costa have been hashed and re-hashed by the Internal Revenue Service and other agencies. “Maybe we missed the boat,” Mc Ginley said. “But it’s water under the bridge now.”

In any event, the atmosphere today exudes fun and luxury.

“La Costa is on the sun coast of Southern California, 40 minutes north of Mexico — 30 minutes north of San Diego — 90 minutes south of Los Angeles,” the colorful brochure beckons.

“La Costa is in a serene, sheltered valley surrounded by open country. Gentle rolling hills. Clear, clean blue sky. The Pacific immediately to the west.”

The tennis pro is Pancho Segura, mentor of Jimmy Connors, who charges $50 a lesson and spends his afternoons coaching teen-age tennis phenoms. The golf pro is Tommy Jacobs, longtime PGA player.

Zetta Castle, director of promotions, says you don’t have to be a millionaire or famous to stay at the resort.

“Because La Costa is so well known people have the idea it is a vastly expensive resort,” she said. “But it’s less expensive than any of the other well-known spas in the country. As far as the hotel goes, it’s less expensive than anything comparable in Palm Springs.”

The price tag is $250 a day per couple, plus tax, which includes everything from green fees and meals to facials and herbal wraps.

Davis, who came in with a friend a few weeks ago. She did the whole 40 minutes of exercises and wasn’t even short of breath.

“But we do have an occasional guy who can’t wait to get out. One fellow (Buddy Hackett) will come here and lose 30 pounds, but he’ll gain it back in three months.”

Smith’s clients average about 50 and are in the top 5 to 10 percent income brackets.

As for dieting, says Miss Castle, “we have a little trick. The dinner plate is made smaller but it looks like a regular plate in relationship to the food, which is prepared in smaller portions. And we serve it in four courses so it may take 45 minutes to eat the meal.”

A bagel, for example, is cut into 20 slices with the dieter receiving a single slice. The idea is to keep the daily intake between 300 and 1,000 calories.

“The guests are totally exposed,” she said. “As a result, they’re better prepared to exercise moderation when they return home. We tell them if you want a chocolate malt, have one, but drink only eight ounces instead of 16.”

Ward Hutton, director of both the men’s and women’s spas, says about 9,000 guests pass through his doors every month and each is treated individually.

You could find yourself playing water volleyball alongside actor William Holden or attorney Louis Nizer at any given time.

For myself, a 5-foot-10, 155-pound, 32-year-old reporter, Hutton prescribed the following regimen.

“I want you to have a little Roman pool outside, play water volleyball or have a yogi or calisthenic class, then I want you to have a little steam and then a facial,” Hutton advised. “You may want a pedicure and then I’d like to put you in an herb wrap. It contains 21 different oriental herbs and it serves as a nerve relaxant and release for toxins.” And so on.

American Determined To Remain In Lebanon

BY NORA BOUSTANY
BEIRUT (UPI)—On Aug. 28, 18-year-old Eric Yif set out from his parents’ home in the mountain village of Bsaba south of Beirut to visit a friend in nearby Ain Anoub. The American teen-ager has not been seen since.

Despite the disappearance of her son, Ellen Yif, a 47-year-old native of Illinois, is determined to stay in strife-torn Lebanon.

The past four years of fighting has reduced the number of U.S. citizens from 6,000 to 2,800, the American embassy says. The American Community School, which had 900 students in 1975, now has 175.

But those who stayed are determined to stick it out.

“How can we run away when our friends are in trouble?” Mrs. Yif asked. “Our personal tragedy does not change my attitude. There are people who are much worse off than we are.”

got a 21-gun salute,” he quipped.

Harik, who has two children, said he came to Beirut because he yearned for a more exciting life. “We wanted a change from the ideal Midwest, where nothing happened except the farm grew.”

One who is leaving soon is teacher Robert Usellis, 52, a New York native.

“We lived a privileged life here (before the war),” he said. “The kids enjoyed the beaches and I played golf at the Delhamiyeh country club. Now the beaches are swarming with refugees and our country club is no more.”

For banker Richard Gilgan, 38, of Greenwich, Conn., life in a “hardship post” isn’t all that bad. Sipping Turkish coffee at his plush seaside apartment on a sunny November morning, he said, “Our bank is in Lebanon to serve its customers here. We really need to stay.”

Gilgan manages the Lebanese branch of the First National Bank of Chicago. “We are living a decent life,” he said. “I do not feel I am in a position to leave professionally, and I don’t want to.”

“Last September we got a real scare when the Israelis (gunboats) came. We could see them hit a big chunk out of a nearby building. We spent part of that night in the garage for shelter.

“No, I don’t think it is over yet. The situation is potentially explosive and that’s how I am running the bank — taking precautions and keeping ahead of developments.”

For some of the young, the noise of shelling is not that unnerving. Local residents for years have used dynamite as an easy way to catch fish, and the sound of muffled booms from the waterfront has long been commonplace.

About 1,000 of the U.S. citizens still here are elderly Americans of Lebanese origin who came back to retire in their ancestral villages, hoping to stretch their Social Security checks.

The challenge of survival in Lebanon has intensified the attachment many American expatriates feel for this embattled east Mediterranean country.

“There is never a dull moment,” mused Donald Corsette, 41, from La Vale, Md., a sixth grade teacher at the American Community School.

Despite the recurrent shelling, sniping, power cuts, water shortages and other inconveniences of daily life, he says, “If I had to leave I would miss the excitement of not knowing what will happen the next day.”

Former U.S. Ambassador Richard Parker agreed. Assessing his recent 20-month stay in Lebanon, the veteran Middle East diplomat observed:

“It’s been challenging and difficult. There’s been a lot of tension and a lot of stress. After Lebanon, any other place is an anticlimax.”

Last July, when Syrian-Christian fighting escalated into major battles and heavy shelling, the U.S. embassy suggested that “American citizens who do not have any pressing business in Lebanon should leave at their earliest convenience.”

The low-key advisory stirred great controversy in the local press, which accused the United States of contributing to the country’s “destabilization.”

It had little noticeable effect on the American community.

“One cannot tell American citizens where to go,” sighed U.S. Consul Jim Budeit. “But some just don’t realize how dangerous it is in some areas.”

“Americans here have this vision that no matter how bad things get, Uncle Sam will come and rescue them at the last minute,” said one embassy official.

Anton Harik, a 38-year-old naturalized American of Lebanese origin from Iowa City, Iowa, arrived in Beirut Sept. 28 as a professor at the American University of Beirut’s school of business. The boom of Syrian shelling of Christian East Beirut could be heard all over the capital.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — continuing cold weather is expected in the forecast period until Thursday morning for most of the country. Milder weather is forecast for the Gulf coast.

Rain is due for much of the Pacific coast with snow over the central and northern Rockies. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
The coldest weather of the winter gripped North Carolina today as temperatures, riding on a cold front and frigid northwest winds, plunged to the lowest levels since winter a year ago.

Balmy readings in the 60s and 70s began yielding Tuesday to the approaching front and this morning low readings included: Asheville 4, Greensboro 7, Hickory 11, Charlotte 12, Raleigh 14, and Fayetteville 19.

Asheville's reading was a record low for the date.

Making it still colder were the winds, which were gusting at well over 30 miles an hour in places across the state. The wind chill factor dropped well below zero in several locations.

Some snow flurries dusted the northwest mountains this morning and snow tires or chains were advised in northern Caldwell, Watauga, Alleghany and northern Wilkes counties. Icey spots also were reported on highways in some other mountain counties.

High temperatures today were expected to range from the teens in the mountains to near 40 on the Outer Banks. It will be cold again tonight with lows from 5 in the mountains to 25 on the Outer Banks.

Thursday's temperatures may be slightly warmer, ranging from the 20s in the mountains to the 40s on the coast.

Selected For Senate Seat

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — Joseph E. Thomas, a member of the state Board of Transportation, apparently will fill the state Senate seat of the late D. Livingstone Stallings of New Bern.

Thomas, a supporter of Gov. Jim Hunt, was picked for the job Tuesday by a Democratic Party nominating committee and Hunt is expected to endorse the action.

Stallings, a member of the Senate since 1973, died at Duke Medical Center in Durham Dec. 20 of complications from brain surgery.

Thomas, 37, is president of Westminster Co. of Jacksonville. The firm is a subsidiary of the Weyerhaeuser Co.

He was nominated by a committee made up of two people from each of the district's three counties — Craven, Carteret and Pamlico. Other candidates were Grover Lancaster, a Craven County commissioner; Malcolm Fulcher, a member of the state House from Carteret County; Bobby D. Jolly, who lost to Stallings in the Democratic primary last year; and Joe Bright, a member of the House from Craven County.

Analysts said that gave added impetus to the rally in stock prices that began just before the close on Tuesday.

And the pace of trading, which had been extremely slow through most of Tuesday's session, picked up today.

Early gainers on the active list included Polaroid, up 1 1/4 at 54; Olin Corp., 3/4 higher at 20 1/4; General Electric, ahead 1/4 at 47 1/4, and Memorex, up 3/4 at 31.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average gained 6.41 to 811.42.

Advances outnumbered declines by more than a 2-1 spread on the NYSE.

Big Board volume came to just 18.34 million shares against 30.03 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index rose .31 to 53.93.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index jumped 1.47 to 152.03.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rose sharply today, continuing Tuesday's rally with a boost from a strong dollar in foreign exchange.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 6.49 to 817.91 in the first half hour.

Gainers took a 5-1 lead over losers in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The dollar registered some substantial gains against leading foreign currencies today.

Propose New N.C. Council

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The staff of the state sunset commission recommended Tuesday that a new N.C. Construction Council be created to replace licensing boards governing four types of contractors.

"We can find no argument for individual boards that enhances the public's protection. Just the reverse is true," the report, prepared by executive director Paul Jordan and his staff, says. "This piecemeal approach has left major voids in the protection of the public."

The report said protection for consumers was weakened by having separate boards covering general, electrical, plumbing and heating and refrigeration contractors. But the report maintained that some type of state licensing was needed.

The N.C. Construction Council would have licensing and enforcement authority for all contractors and would operate within the Department of Commerce. It would be financed with fees collected from contractors.

"The present statute for the licensing of general contractors is a facade in its protection of the public," the report said.

The report said there were loopholes in the law providing exemptions from regulation for projects costing less than $30,000 and for work done by the landowner himself — even if for use by someone else or by the general public.

The state Governmental Evaluations Commission, or sunset commission, will receive the report when it meets Monday in Raleigh. Representatives of each of the boards, as well as contractors, will be given time to speak to the commission.

The commission was established by the 1977 General Assembly to review more than 100 state regulatory and licensing boards. The current report is the second evaluation prepared by the commission's staff.

CETA Queries Said Resolved

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Officials of the State Department of Natural Resources and Community Development say problems involving the use of about $6.9 million in federal funds for job training programs in North Carolina have been resolved.

Auditors last month reviewed the use of about half the $14.8 million in Comprehensive Employment and Training Act programs that had been questioned earlier. They disallowed the use of about $78,500 by local officials, indicating localities would have to repay that amount.

Robert H. Chappell, director of administration for the state agency, said most of the questionable costs were due to book-keeping errors or poor record keeping in local programs.

Audits at the end of July of 764 local CETA programs administered by the state showed questionable use of almost $8 million between June 1974 and December 1975. That total reached about $14.8 million when audits of 384 programs in 1976 and 1977 were added to the list.

Chappell said his office has been working with local program directors to try to reduce common mistakes in book-keeping.

"I feel comfortable about going to sleep at night without having to worry about waking up to some nightmare about the jobs program," said Howard N. Lee, secretary of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

According to the Greenville Utilities Commission weather station, yesterday's high was 66 degrees, while the low for the day was recorded near midnight, at 34 degrees.

At 8 a.m. today, the temperature stood at 20 degrees.

Two inches of rain was recorded at the GUC weather station during the 24 hour period ending at midnight last night.

The Tar River stood at 6.4 feet at 8 a.m.

By mid-morning, the temperature had risen only three degrees, to a still-cold 23 degrees.

East Carolina Staggers Iona, 76-75

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. — Oliver Mack pushed through 18 second half points, but it was George Maynor that let East Carolina University pull off a stunning rally that beat Iona College last night, 76-75.

Down by as much as 15 points in the first half, as by 11 at the half, the Pirates fought back behind the scoring of Mack, who ended the game with 22 points.

Iona had several chances to put the game away, but star center Jeff Ruland missed on three late free throw attempts in the final minute, and also missed a desperation shot at the horn.

finally cutting it to just two at 53-51 with just under 14 minutes to go.

They had the chance then to tie it up, but missed, and Mike Palma sparked Iona to seven straight points that pulled the Gaels out to a 59-51 margin.

The Pirates cut it back to four after that on numerous occasions, but it wasn't until Maynor hit a jumper with 53 seconds left that the Bucs got back within two, 73-71.

Glenn Vickers hit one last basket for Iona with 40 seconds to go, but Mack came down to score a three-point play with 33 seconds remaining.

bound, and the Bucs quickly got it down court for Maynor's winning basket.

The victory, the fifth in 11 starts for the Pirates, was a sweet one for Pirate coach Larry Gillman, whose home town is close by. He called it his biggest win since coming to East Carolina.

"The kids played great," he said. "It was a great team effort. I wanted it bad, and they wanted it bad too."

Gillman noted that Iona was unbeaten Penn State in the Sugar Bowl, avenged last season's disappointing runnerup finish and was named college football's national champion for 1978 today by The Associated Press.

Ruland scored 15 points in the first half, hitting seven of seven from the floor, but he got only four points in the second, and just one field goal. "In the second half, we let him receive the ball, then doubled on him, forcing him to spin inside rather than going to the baseline. I don't think he likes to do that."

The coach praised the play of Walter Moseley, starting for the first time this year, along with that of regular starter Maynor. "(Greg) Cornelius did a heck of a job on the boards, and (Kyle) Powers played with a lot of guts out there.

"And (David) Underwood is going to be a great addition to the team, isn't he." Underwood, who fouled out with 5:18 left, scored 14 points in his third game of the year.

Mack, who got only four points in the first half, also got going in the second, when the Pirates took control of the game. "Our transition was better and we played with more poise," Gillman said. "That helped Mack to get loose."

The Pirates especially did a good job on the boards against the taller Gaels, ending up with a 31-30 advantage. Cornelius led the Pirates with 11, one more than Ruland managed.

"Underwood kept us in the game in the first half," Gillman said. "Then Mack took over in the second. He was unselfish in the first half, but we wanted him to go to the hoop more in the second."

Both teams played well in the first half, with Iona hitting 21 of 31 shots, 67.7 percent, and the Pirates making good on 14 of 26 for 53.8 percent.

In the second half, however, the Pirates got hotter, hitting 60.7 percent for a 57.4 percentage for the game. They were a perfect 14-14 from the line in the contest.

Iona cooled off to 30.7 percent in the second half, and ended up with 49.1 percent for the game.

The Pirates led only once before the final basket, at 4-2 on a basket by Underwood with two minutes gone. Iona then ran off six straight points for an 8-4 lead.

They steadily pulled away over the next six minutes to a 13-point edge, 25-12 before ECU cut it back to seven, 29-22 behind Underwood and Cornelius.

But another spurt by Iona ran it out to 15, 41-26 with 3:35 left in the half. The Pirates again fought back on four points each by Herb Krusen and Powers, cutting it to nine, although Ruland hit at the horn for a 47-36 lead.

Two quick baskets at the start of the second half ran it back to 15, 51-36, before the Pirates started their comeback, running off 11 straight points to cut the lead from 53-40 to 53-51 with 13:55 left. But after Powers missed a chance to put the Pirates into a tie, the Gaels pulled away again.

Former Wake Forest player Mike Palma hit six straight points, including a three pointer, to up the lead to 59-51, but the Bucs hung close, cutting it back to four, before Maynor finally trimmed it to two at 73-71 before the final rally.

Mack led the Pirate scoring with 22 points, while Underwood added 14 and both Cornelius and Moseley had ten each. Ruland led Iona with 19, while Palma had 13, Kevin Hamilton had 12, Vickers had 14 and Dave Brown had 11.

The win avenged a 96-74 defeat at Minges Coliseum last season by the Gaels.

East Carolina, now 5-6, returns home for its next outing, a visit from the University of South Carolina, set next Wednesday night.

Duke Rebounds Against Davidson

By JOHN NELSON AP Sports Writer
The Blue Devils of Duke aren't No. 1 in the college basketball poll anymore, but now they are playing like it again, two games too late.

Forward Gene Banks and center Mike Gminski provided the spark for Duke Tuesday night in a 77-59 victory over Davidson. It was a spark that was missing over the weekend when the Blue Devils lost on consecutive nights in the ECAC Holiday Festival to Ohio State and St. John's, N.Y., after squandering huge leads. Davidson, playing a slowdown game, trailed only 26-19 at the half. But with Banks and Gminski playing aggressive, tough basketball, Duke, now 7-2, padded the lead to as many as 24 points in the second half.

Now ranked fifth in The Associated Press poll, Duke played with a second-half intensity it did not show in the Holiday Festival in New York.

"In the second half, we didn't want to hold the ball and get them (Davidson) out of their zone," said Duke Coach Bill Foster. "We could have done that with a seven-point lead, but we wanted to keep the game going for 40 minutes and wanted to attack the basket better than we have in the last two games."

Banks scored 18 points and had seven rebounds and Gminski added 13 points and nine rebounds. Guard Jim Sparnkel had 15 points for Duke.

John Gerdy had 28 points to lead Davidson, which led much of the first half until the Blue Devils went on a 12-2 tear to take a 20-15 lead with 4:16 left before intermission.

"I thought our aggressiveness was much better," Foster said, pointing to Banks' and Gminski's domination of the boards. "I thought this was good experience for us. We made the adjustment to their slowdown without giving them easy shots."

In the only other games involving ranked teams Tuesday night, No. 8 North Carolina State defeated Appalachian State 58-50 and St. Joseph's Pa., upset No. 12 Georgetown 37-36.

N.C. State waged a see-saw battle with Appalachian State and the Wolfpack didn't take the lead for good until midway through the second half.

N.C. State, 9-2, hit nine of 10 foul shots, several each by Clyde Austin and Donnie Perkins, in the final 1:22 to salt the game away. Austin wound up with 15 points and Perkins had 14. Renaldo Lawrence led Appalachian State with 16 points.

St. Joseph's successfully employed a stall to edge Georgetown, now 9-2, which lost for the first time in 21 games at home. After a 20-20 tie at halftime, St. Joseph's took its biggest lead, 24-20, with 18 minutes left.

Ian Hubbard's layup with 57 seconds left provided the final margin of victory after St. Joseph's held the ball for more than three minutes. Norm Black led St. Joseph's with 12 points, while Craig Shelton of Georgetown led all scorers with 13 points.

Spartans Jump To Top Of Heap

By JIM O'CONNELL Associated Press Writer
Michigan State, winner of the Far West Classic, took advantage of losses by the top three teams in last week's poll to move into first place in The Associated Press weekly college basketball poll.

The Spartans, ranked fourth last week, defeated Washington State, Oregon State and Big Ten rival Indiana on the way to the Far West title. Those triumphs, coupled with two losses by Duke and one each by Notre Dame and UCLA, enabled Michigan State to collect 31 first-place votes and 969 points.

The top eight teams in this week's poll each received at least one first-place vote from the nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Notre Dame held on to second place, receiving seven first-place votes and 878 points despite its 81-76 loss to Kentucky.

Tide Wins AP Poll; Pirates Get Votes

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN AP Sports Writer
The Crimson Tide of Alabama, conquerors of previously unbeaten Penn State in the Sugar Bowl, avenged last season's disappointing runnerup finish and was named college football's national champion for 1978 today by The Associated Press.

In a tight three-way race with Southern California and Oklahoma, Alabama received 38 first-place votes and 1,317 of a possible 1,360 points from a nationwide panel of 68 sports writers and broadcasters.

Alabama defeated Penn State 14-7 Monday and thereby captured the national championship it thought it should have won a year ago when the Crimson Tide wound up behind Notre Dame in a controversial finish.

Southern Cal, which defeated Michigan 17-10 in the Rose Bowl, received 19 first-place votes and 1,285 points. Oklahoma received the remaining 11 first-place votes and 1,251 points following a 31-24 triumph over Nebraska in the Orange Bowl.

Alabama, Southern Cal and Oklahoma all trailed top-rated Penn State in the final regular-season poll. But the Nittany Lions slipped from first place to fourth with 1,168 points after

Sky-High Hawks Stop Jags

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

FARMVILLE — North Lenoir's board-crashing Hawks made the most of a Farmville Central cold spell in the fourth quarter to pull away from the Jaguars and hand them their first conference loss of the season 73-63.

Farmville controlled the action for much of the contest, leading by as much as nine points, but North Lenoir, paced by Johnny Wiggins, fought back to tie the game in the third quarter. It was nip-and-tuck from there until the Jaguars' shooting went frigid. The Hawks reeled off seven straight points and were never threatened after that.

"We made a gallant try, but it seemed like the ball just wouldn't fall," said Jaguar coach Mike Terrell, whose team fell to 8-3 overall and 5-1 in the Eastern Carolina Conference. Farmville went 1-11 during a 4½-minute span with many of those shots just rolling off the rim.

"We had several good shots inside that wouldn't fall when it was a two- and four-point ballgame."

In addition, the Jags had trouble rebounding against the high-flying Hawks, especially late in the game. "They beat us on the backboards when it counted," Terrell noted. "I thought that was the difference."

North Lenoir's tall front line of Amos Pearce, John Cratch and Johnny Wiggins controlled the boards for a 54-41 rebounding advantage and were especially stingy in the final six minutes when they allowed Farmville only five of 23 caroms, three of them coming after Hawk free throws.

Farmville center Earl Harris, about the only real challenge to the Hawk front line, fouled out with 2:03 left in the game and North Lenoir ahead 67-60.

Fouling was a problem all night for the Jaguars, who lost several players via that route.

North Lenoir got 25 points at the foul line, compared to just one for Farmville. The Jags didn't have a single one-and-one opportunity and got their lone point from the line with 41 seconds left when Calvin Horne hit the first end of a one-and-one.

North Lenoir ran out to an 11-4 lead early in the contest as Johnny Wiggins, who led all scorers with 31 points, scored five points in the first 2½ minutes.

The Jags then got tough in their man-to-man defense and began to take advantage of the Hawks' sloppy ballhandling. They forced a total of eight turnovers in the first quarter and came back to take a 16-14 lead at the end of the period.

Donald Reid canned a shot from the lane early in the second period that put his team up by nine, 24-15, but a Johnny Wiggins jumper from the right side that slipped through the net as time expired cut the Jaguar margin to 34-31 at intermission.

The Hawks lost little time in the third period and moved in front for the first time since the early going when Charles Wiggins made a follow shot with 3:31 remaining in the third. That made it 46-44 and North Lenoir never lost the lead again.

Farmville was able to keep things close, however, and Donald Reid's baseline jumper with 5:46 remaining in the game made it 60-58 North Lenoir.

But that was when Farmville's luck ran out. The Jags' shooting touch left them and they got few second chances as the Hawks' board work strengthened.

"I think Amos Pearce and Johnny Wiggins both are tremendous athletes. They just both came to life in the second half," Terrell said. "I think they played about as well as they can in the second half. They just took over. They're hard to stop."

Pearce was the only other

Hawk in double figures with 15 points. Horne paced the Jaguars with 19, while Donald Freeman and Donald Reid added 12 each. North Lenoir hit 42.9 per cent of its shots, while Farmville connected on 41.9 per cent.

Farmville also lost out in an exciting girls' battle, as North Lenoir held off the rallying Lady Jaguars for a 46-45 lead.

The Farmville girls came back twice in the game. They fell behind 17-6 in the first quarter, but cut the Lady Hawk lead to 23-15 at the half and got within three early in the third quarter.

North Lenoir stretched its margin back out to 13, but the Lady Jags chipped away at it and pulled to within two, 44-42, on a pair of foul shots by Courtney Lancaster with 1:52 left.

Mary Rhodes put the Lady Hawks back up by four with a 15-foot jumper at the 1:20 mark, but Pam Moye hit a hook shot and completed a three-point play with eight seconds left to close the margin to one.

Farmville Central then tried to call time out, but North Lenoir got the ball inbound and moved it down the court before the referees saw the signalling Lady Jags and the Hawks were able to run the clock out.

Rhodes had 12 points and Cynthia Cannon 10 for North Lenoir. Diana Gordon scored 14 for Farmville and Lancaster added 10.

Talk Surrounds AFC Title Game

PITTSBURGH (AP) — If talk counted instead of action, Sunday's American Football Conference title game between the Houston Oilers and the Pittsburgh Steelers might be in the second quarter by now.

As soon as the two teams advanced in the National Football League playoffs with weekend victory, the banter began about which one would win Sunday's game and travel to the Super Bowl.

"We're the better team," crows Oiler defensive end Elvin Bethea. "We're going to win. There's no doubt about it ... I'll guarantee it with a capital 'G,'" he says.

"If we play the type of ball we did against Denver, we can't be beat. It doesn't matter who we play," counters Steeler wide receiver John Stallworth.

"Nothing personal, but we're gonna whomp the heck out of them," predicts Oiler defensive end Jim Young.

"Our attitude is, 'We're not going to be denied,'" says Pittsburgh center Mike Webster.

"I feel we're a better team," repeats Oiler cornerback Willie Alexander.

"I think our only problem would be if we would stop ourselves," says Pittsburgh running back Franco Harris.

"We'll just slug it out with them and come out on top," says Earl Campbell, Harris' counterpart on the Houston team.

"War!" says Oiler Coach Bum Phillips. "We'll sever diplomatic relations with them. That's what you do when you declare war."

To Houston, playoff fever is something new. The Oilers climbed from the pits of the National Football League to just two steps from the top as they prepare for their first conference title game ever.

Rams Win 4th Straight

SNOW HILL — Greene Central took advantage of the foul line to pick up its fourth straight victory of the season last night, downing D.H. Conley, 49-41.

Earlier, the Conley girls gained a 37-25 win, while the Baby Vikings took a 51-48 victory.

After losing its first eight starts, the Rams have turned things around. "Five of those eight were by three or less," Coach Lewis Godwin said. "We're just getting the breaks now. We played well and lost earlier, now we're playing good and winning."

Greene Central inched into a 13-12 lead after the first period of the contest, then tacked two more points to that in the second frame for a 28-25 halftime edge.

Both teams cooled off in the third period, as the scored climbed to only 35-31. The Rams then outthit Conley down the stretch, 14-10, to wrap it up.

Grady Edwards and James Best both pushed through 12 points for the Rams, while Jerome Artis added 11. Larry White had 13 and Sammy Tucker had 12 for Conley.

In the girls' game, Conley had little trouble after the first period, which saw the Lady Rams take an 11-9 lead. But Conley came back to push ahead, 14-13 at the half.

In the third period, the Valkyries pulled away, moving out to a 26-17 lead. They polished off Greene Central, 11-8 in the final quarter.

Annie Hardy led Conley with 12, while Melody Ham had 11 for Greene Central.

The Rams are now 4-8 overall and 2-4 in Eastern Carolina Conference play, while the Lady Rams are 3-9 and 1-5.

Mattamuskeet came back to forge into a 47-45 lead after the third period, as the game continued to go right down to the wire. In the final seconds, Jesse Bullock hit a free throw to give the Bears a 67-66 lead, and in the final seconds Mattamuskeet scored on the front end of two

Refs Anger Cleveland's Fitch

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

It's hard to say which infuriated Bill Fitch more — the calls referee Earl Strom made or those he and his crew didn't make.

Fitch, coach of the Cleveland Cavaliers, was angered because Strom called three technical fouls against his club in Tuesday night's 116-113 National Basketball Association loss to the Milwaukee Bucks. He was also upset because Strom, one of the league's senior officials, didn't blow the whistle when Fitch felt he should have, particularly down the stretch.

"This is a million dollar business," said Fitch, "but if you keep sticking your head in the sand, you're not going to bring the game around. Maybe that's why there weren't 10,000 more people here tonight (The attendance at Richfield, Ohio, was 4,459) — maybe they're tired of seeing that."

"He (Strom) has fined me, my trainer, everybody on my ballclub and he hasn't worked a good game yet. All I can remember is handchecking and how they went to the (foul) line and we didn't."

Reminded that he can be fined for publicly criticizing officials, Fitch declared, "I don't give a damn. Why protect the guy just because he's got years in the league? Maybe we should put his name up in lights and say he blew one."

"I'm not emotionally involved," he added. "If I was, I'd be over there kicking his butt."

A jumper by guard Brian Winters with 1:04 remaining put the Bucks ahead, and baskets by John Gianelli and Marques Johnson kept them in front the rest of the way.

Suns 114, Knicks 102

Phoenix posted its 11th road victory, tops in the league, as Alvan Adams scored 28 points, grabbed 13 rebounds and handed out nine assists. Paul Westphal and Walter Davis added 20 points apiece as the Suns stopped New York's three-game winning streak.

Nuggets 99, Kings 97

Dan Issel won a jump ball with two seconds left and tipped it to Tom Boswell, who beat the buzzer with a layup for the winning margin as Denver defeated Kansas City and moved within three games of the first-place Kings in the Midwest Division. The Nuggets can cut further into Kansas City's lead tonight, when the teams go to Denver to complete their home-and-home series.

Bullets 109, Bulls 86

Washington raised its record to 25-12, best in the NBA, and moved one game ahead of Philadelphia in the Atlantic Division by coasting past Chicago. The Bullets jumped in front 21-7 and were never in trouble as Kevin Grevey led a balanced attack with 18 points.

Jazz 109, Lakers 105

Pete Maravich scored 27 points and Truck Robinson had 26 points and 24 rebounds as New Orleans beat Los Angeles before a crowd of 31,127 at the Superdome, 25,000 of them courtesy of a local shoe store. The Jazz trailed by 19 points in the second half before overtaking the Lakers, aided by 11 points from reserve guard Gail Goodrich in the fourth quarter.

Clippers 137, Pistons 119

Lloyd Free scored 33 points, his fifth consecutive 30-point game, to lead San Diego over Detroit, which lost its fifth in a row. Free, the NBA's second-leading scorer with a 27.8 average, had 21 first-half points as the Clippers rolled to a 71-51 advantage. The 137 points were a season high for the Clippers, who have won five of their last six starts.

Sonics 109, Blazers 106

Gus Williams scored 10 of his 25 points in the final five minutes, including two free throws with 15 seconds to go, as Seattle edged Portland. The Blazers led 97-89 with 6 1/2 minutes to go but could not hang on.

Malavasi Says Rams Will Kick Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — Los Angeles Coach Ray Malavasi thinks the Rams will kick the Dallas Cowboys again Sunday in the National Football Conference championship game.

In September before a regular season National Football League game, Malavasi predicted the Rams "will kick the Cowboys' butts."

They then did so 27-14 in Los Angeles Coliseum.

Malavasi said in a telephone hookup with writers Tuesday, "I'm very confident our team can do the same thing Sunday."

Asked specifically what advantages he felt the Rams enjoyed, Malavasi answered, "It is to our advantage to play on grass and on our home field. We don't play many games on AstroTurf."

Also, Malavasi said "it is a possibility" the Rams have the emotional edge over the defending Super Bowl champions. The Rams have never been to the Super Bowl, trying and failing each time in the NFC title playoffs.

Coach Tom Landry addressed himself to Malavasi's prediction with a wry smile: "Well, they did it once. But I think we will be there (the Coliseum)."

Pressed whether the Cowboys have trouble playing on natural grass, Landry said, "I don't play on it myself. You'll have to ask the players. I guess the only reason this has come up is because we lost at Los Angeles, Washington and Miami on grass. Those were good teams. We didn't lose to many lower echelon teams on grass."

The Cowboys beat Los Angeles 37-7 in 1975 on grass.

Landry got some good news from the doctors Tuesday — quarterback Roger Staubach has recovered from suffering a slight concussion in a 27-20 NFC playoff victory over Atlanta Saturday.

"I'm confident Roger will be OK once we start work — if we can find a place to work," said Landry.

"The doctors said Roger will be OK and I don't think he will have any trouble," said Landry.

Landry said films of the victory over the Falcons showed Falcon linebacker Robert Pennywell delivered to Staubach "was not a deliberate blow. It was a clean tackle. His helmet might have caught Roger in the chest but I don't believe it was intentional."

Landry had lashed out at Pennywell after the game, saying he was told Pennywell hit Staubach with an elbow and that National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle should investigate.

Rampant Swimmers' First Test Saturday

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School's swimmers open their season Saturday, when they play host to Chapel Hill.

Coach Billy Thorne, in his first year heading up the team, is hopeful that he'll have a better idea of what lies ahead for the Rampants and Rampettes.

"We got off to a late start," Thorne said. "It was Thanksgiving before we really got started, and we've spent most of the time on conditioning."

Thorne, a former East Carolina University swimmer, is handling the team for the first time, but is hopeful of having a good season, and a high finish in the state finals in March.

"We have several people that I think can place high. For instance, John and Kevin Richards could both place high in the backstroke and butterfly. Eric Downs could place in the freestyle, and Susan Tucker could do well in the backstroke, along with Liz Hookway in the freestyle."

But overall, Thorne feels he is "kind of blind" in going into the first meet. "Since we've worked so much on conditioning, I'm really going to have to let the kids tell me which events they belong in for Saturday's meet. Then, we'll see."

"Thorne feels that the boys' team should be strong this season, and could be even stronger next year. John Richards is the lone senior on the team, with the other 11 members all juniors and sophomores.

Clemons is listed as the top man in the 50 and 100 freestyle, while Downs paces the 200 and 500 freestyles. Scharf is the top breaststroker, with the Richards in the backstroke and butterfly.

"I'm still not sure who our swimmer will be in the individual medley, and our relay teams are not set yet either."

Among the girls, there is more uncertainty. Only Tucker, in the backstroke, and Hookway in the freestyle, appear set.

Tucker, Pat Moore, Jennifer Wooles and Hookway are senior members of the team, while Amy Lawler, Heather O'Neal are junior; and Suzanne Martinez, Crista Cuiksark, Leslie Wooles, Anne Richards, Patti Lucido, and Sheila Collier are sophomores.

"I really look for us to have some real good times by the time the year is over, and to be able to have several people place high in the state finals," Thorne said.

Tide Tops Final Poll...

Alabama ended their 19-game winning streak.

Michigan held onto fifth place with 989 points despite its loss in the Rose Bowl. Clemson moved up from seventh to sixth with 950 points for a 17-15 decision over Ohio State in the Gator Bowl. Notre Dame's defending national champions finished seventh this time with 914 points. The Fighting Irish jumped from 10th place by edging Houston 35-34 in the Cotton Bowl.

Nebraska, the only team to beat Oklahoma this season, dropped from sixth to eighth after bowing to the Sooners in the Orange Bowl rematch. The Cornhuskers received 865 points.

The Texas Longhorns, who lost out on the national championship a year ago when they lost to Notre Dame in the Cotton Bowl, climbed from 14th to ninth place with 706 points following a 42-0 rout of Maryland in the Sun Bowl.

Houston, ninth in the final regular-season poll, rounded out the Top Ten with 698 points.

Japanese-Americans Seek Redress For Detention

JOHN TATEISHI stands in front of a mural of Camp Manzanar where in early 1942 as a child he was taken with his family and held under armed guard. Today he is leading thousands of those Japanese-Americans who were rounded up after Pearl Harbor and seeking money damages for the years they spent in detention camps. (UPI Photo)

By JACK CHEEVERS
SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — In early 1942, John Tateishi was trucked to a windswept, barracks-lined camp called Manzanar, in California's Owens Valley, and held under armed guard for three years. He was 3½ years old.

Tateishi was among the 70,000 Americans of Japanese descent who were rounded up in the emotion-charged days after Pearl Harbor as "national security risks" and sent to remote "relocation centers" in California, Utah, Arizona and other states.

Today, the 39-year-old college English instructor is leading thousands of Japanese-American "evacuees" who are seeking money damages for the years they spent in wartime detention camps, often at the price of their homes, farms and small businesses.

"We were denied every constitutional guarantee you can think of when we were evacuated," said Tateishi. "The only basis for it was race. We happened to be Americans who weren't white."

Tateishi's National Committee for Redress plans to ask Congress to compensate former evacuees $25,000 apiece for years of what he characterizes as false imprisonment by a government that equated its citizens' race with potential enemy subversion.

Under the wartime Executive Order 9066, all Japanese Americans and unaturalized Japanese living on the West Coast — some 110,000 persons — were herded into camps with names like Topaz, Minidoka, Heart Mountain and Tule Lake throughout the West.

Many detainees spent several years in the isolated camps, sewing camouflage nets for military equipment, and volunteering for combat with the famed, all-Japanese 442nd Regimental Combat Team, which won more decorations per soldier than any other American unit in World War II.

While organizers say the $25,000 payments are of more symbolic value than anything else, they add that the money would be a real benefit to many first-generation Japanese, or "Issei," who were detained.

Uyeda said many once-imprisoned elderly Japanese Americans are now living at or below the federal poverty level because they lost virtually everything they couldn't carry with them when they were sent to the camps.

Uyeda compared the JACL redress campaign to a federal court judgment that gave $10,000 a piece to scores of demonstrators arrested in the 1971 anti-war "May Day" protests in Washington.

"Those people were jailed an average of one or two days, and they each got $10,000," he said. "The Japanese were locked up for three and four years apiece, so what we're asking for isn't all that much."

Large Tunnel Seeing Delays

By HARRY DUNPHY
LAKE SEVAN, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Workers tunneling under the Caucasian Mountains on a project to partially restore Armenia's largest lake have missed another deadline and won't complete their river diversion until 1979.

The lake, often called the "Pearl of Armenia" and the theme of many poems and songs in that language, has been depleted over the years because its waters have been used for hydroelectric power and irrigation, leaving a bathtub ring of stone and debris in some areas.

The workers are down to the last 650 yards of a 30-mile tunnel that will make the Arpa River flow north into the 487-square-mile lake instead of south toward the Iranian border.

electricity for industrial plants and towns that grew up around them.

By 1963, when the government decided to act to stabilize the lake, the surface had shrunk by 50 square miles, the weather in the area had changed and the tasty ishkan, a kind of trout found only in the lake, was in decline.

A 1,100-year-old monastery and a nearby church built on an island to serve as a fortress stood on a peninsula, the result of the receding waters.

Planners decided it would be impossible to restore the lake to its original condition because roads and tourist installations had been built. But in addition to drawing up the tunnel project, they did take steps to lessen the republic's need for the lake's waters to provide power.

An earthquake-resistant atomic power station near Yerevan went into operation in 1977 and provides 25 percent of the republic's needs. When the second stage is completed in 1979, it will develop 50 percent.

To get more water for irrigation, the government is building a number of lakes designed to catch the water from melting snow that has been lost to evaporation.

One of these reservoirs with a capacity of 250 million cubic yards of water is being built near the area where the Arpa is being diverted. It will replace the water that will be lost when the river flows through the tunnel into the lake.

Suspects 'Signal' Felt Before Quakes Strike

By AL ROSSITER JR.
UPI Science Editor
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Scientists for years have wondered why animals act so strangely just before an earthquake strikes. A German biochemist thinks he knows the answer.

Dr. Helmut Tributsch of the Max Planck Institute in Berlin suggests animals are sensing electrically charged aerosol particles produced by ground currents preceding an earthquake.

He said the proposed electrical phenomena may be similar to electrical charges in the atmosphere that precede major storms, and the animals may be sensing and reacting to a "phantom storm" just before an earthquake strikes.

Tributsch reported his hypothesis in the British scientific journal Nature, and editors of the famed magazine said "this is the most likely explanation so far" for the peculiar animal behavior that has been observed and reported for hundreds of years.

Tributsch reached his conclusion after investigating reports of peculiar behavior of animals in a village in Italy which was struck by the Friuli earthquake in May 1976.

His account:

"Deer formed flocks — in the late afternoon, a flock of 15 deer came down from the mountains and close to the village, crowding together with apparently no interest in grazing — an event never before seen in this area."

"Cats left the houses and the village; at the time of the quake no cat was apparently left in the village. They did not return until two days later. In three cases, cats dragged kittens outdoors and bedded them in green vegetation."

"Mice and rats left their hiding places; on one farm mice and rats were observed running around before the quake. People were annoyed and surprised as all their five cats were missing."

"Fowl refused to roost a few hours before the quake. People fleeing from their houses during the quake found their fowl already scattered in the garden."

"Cattle panicked in their barns. According to many reports, cattle showed clear signs of fear 15-20 minutes before the quake. The animals started to bellow, tear at their chains and paw their boxes."

"Dogs barked without apparent reason. This behavior started 20 minutes before the quake. Some people were guarding their property — suspecting intruders — just before the quake hit."

"Birds emitted calls at unusual times. One person heard a cuckoo, never normally heard at night..."

Tributsch said research in the past has showed that small positive ions can increase the production in humans of a power neuro-hormone, serotonin, which affects psychological functions.

He said it has been observed, for example, that certain weather situations which are characterized by high concentrations of positive ions also are accompanied by high serotonin production in people causing migraine headaches, nausea and irritability.

Tributsch said such charged particles may affect animals in the same way and, if released somehow by earthquake precursors, serve as a quake warning.

"My consideration of many very old and inexact observations to support the proposed hypothesis does not meet present-day scientific standards and might provoke criticism," he said. "I believe this is unjustified as long as corresponding modern investigations do not exist."

Students Own Judy's Shoes

GOSHEN, Ohio (AP) — Red shoes once owned by singer Judy Garland are a big hit with students at Goshen High School.

The students paid $375 to buy the shoes at an auction in Beverly Hills, Calif. Now they're writing the late singer's third husband, Sid Luft, who staged the sale, and her daughter, Liza Minnelli.

"Their interest in something of Garland's had, for them, more importance than just to hoard it in some private collection," said Eldon Thomas, head of the music department.

Students also plan an annual Judy Garland award, to go to a senior who plans a career in performing arts and who might "fill Judy Garland's shoes."

Neglect Of Pig Results In Fine

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) — A New Zealand woman has been fined $51 for wanton neglect of a pig.

The court was told the woman had left the pig tied in a sack in her backyard.

The pig was intended to be the feature of a barbecue, but was rescued by an inspector from the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

New X-Ray To Identify Child Abuse

By ROBERT MACKAY
CHICAGO (UPI) — An X-ray system has been developed that helps physicians diagnose cases of child abuse and halves radiation exposure to patients, a Missouri expert says.

Dr. Armand E. Brodeur, chief of radiology at Cardinal Glennon Memorial Hospital for Children in St. Louis, said he used the new system for six months and found cases of child abuse he would have missed using standard X-rays.

The new system consists of X-ray intensifying screens and high-speed film. Brodeur said it provides pictures with much greater detail than can be obtained using other X-ray screened systems.

In an interview, he said detailed X-rays are important in detecting child abuse.

"When child abuse is not overt or messy," he said, "diagnosis could mean the difference in whether the child is sent back to that environment — and 20 percent of abused children that are sent back will die."

Brodeur said a definite, automatic sign of child abuse is chipped or fractured bones in the knee area. They can only be caused by twisting and shaking babies, he said. Using the new system to study suspected child abuse cases, he said:

"The thing we found out is there are more fractures that we weren't able to see before. I would say we would probably be able to find 10 percent more cases of child abuse."

When chips or fractures are detected, he said, he telephones the appropriate physician, who then talks to the parents and calls social services people. The physician and social services then decide whether to ask a judge to immediately remove the child from the parents.

Brodeur said the new system also has halved the radiation exposure to patients and radiologists, thereby lessening the danger of possible genetic damage or disease. The film and system were developed by the 3M Company.

He estimated a girl treated for a hip disease at Glennon Hospital for five years would have received 60 percent less radiation if all her X-rays had been taken with the new system.

"I don't promote medical products, but I promote health through diagnosis," Brodeur said. "Anything that is going to give me more detail and less radiation is going to help me."

Brodeur said he deals with about two cases of child abuse a day. He does not dispute federal government figures showing one in every five children in the United States is abused.

"The single most common is the multiple injury," Brodeur said. "Bruises in inaccessible places, like behind the knee or in back of the ear."

"Dropping a baby is fairly common — dropping a baby in boiling hot water. Accidental cases of this type are obvious because there are splashing marks on the child's body. If it is a deliberate dropping, there are straight red lines on the body."

"Cigarette burns are also very common."

But child abuse cases that are "minimally suspicious," such as a baby with hairline fractures on the collarbone, "need the most attention," the doctor said.

Brodeur described the case of a baby boy brought to the hospital by his parents because he was limping. X-rays showed the child had a fracture of the leg bone in the shin area, a common ailment called Toddler's Fracture.

But Brodeur suspected possible child abuse and asked another doctor to call the parents.

The doctor called Brodeur back and said the parents sounded sincerely worried about the child's fracture and nothing seemed to be amiss. A night later, "the baby came back — DOA (dead on arrival)," Brodeur said.

The only way to curb child abuse, he said, is "to start teaching people about parenting" at an early age.

HAVE A MUTCHKIN
EDINBURG (AP) — A Scots pint used to be equivalent to almost three imperial pints. Modest drinkers asked for a mutchkin — a quarter of a Scots pint.

Until imperial measure became compulsory in Scotland in 1826, pints were drunk from a tappit heh, a pewter tankard with a top on it. A pint and two mutchkins were served in a hen and chickens.

Giant Tunnel To Stop Chicago's Sewage Backup

By ED LION
CHICAGO (UPI) — The speeding elevator drops deep beneath the nation's Second City to a world of pallid limestone walls illuminated by eerie mining lamps.

At the base of the shaft a 30-foot diameter tunnel curves out of sight in one direction and vanishes into the darkness in the other. Several miles down that darkness a huge mechanical mole "right out of a Jules Verne novel" gouges out tons of solid rock up to six times the hardness of concrete.

About 2,000 workers, using eight multi-million dollar mechanical moles, toil day and night under bustling Chicago and some of its suburbs to carve a 131-mile controversial tunnel system — with a price tag of $2.8 billion. The Environmental Protection Agency is paying 75 percent of the construction work.

Chicago's Deep Tunnel Project is being built to ease pollution and flooding from sewer overflow that wrecks havoc in 800,000 basements a year and threatens supplies of drinking water, including Lake Michigan. The system is designed to "bottle a rain-storm."

The treatment and sewer system for Chicago and a surrounding crescent of 52 suburbs is overtaxed. Backed-up untreated sewage is routed directly into waterways crisscrossing the area as a stopgap measure and in some cases sewage flows into home basements.

"The pollution now going into our waterways from the overflow is the equivalent of one million people doing it raw in the rivers everyday," said Hugh McMillan, general superintendent for the Metropolitan Sanitary District of Greater Chicago. "We think this (Deep Tunnel Project) is the best, most cost-efficient way to handle the problem. It's safe."

In some areas home flooding is so bad, flood insurance is virtually unobtainable.

"There are homes here that are flooded two, three, four feet of water," said suburban Skokie Mayor Albert Smith, a vocal supporter of the project. "And that can happen five times a year. It's really heart-breaking."

The project upon completion would involve the tunnel network and three surface reservoirs. Overflow would drop into the system via huge "drop shafts" connecting the sewer system and the "Deep Tunnels" far below. The added storage capacity would give treatment plants time to handle all sewage except in the worst storms of the last quarter century, officials said.

"Sure it's a massive project," District Board President Nicholas J. Melas said. "But it's a massive problem."

"Just go up on a bridge after the rain and look at all that crud, waste and excrement that flows through the heart of the city."

The Chicago and Calumet Rivers, after having their flows reversed early this century to prevent deadly pollution from spilling into Lake Michigan, now flow toward the Mississippi River. But in times of heavy rain, floodgates to Lake Michigan must be opened — on the average of once a year — to relieve the rivers' swelling. This spills sewer overflow into the lake.

The tunnel project, officials said, would allow gates to remain closed permanently and also cut wastes flowing toward the Mississippi, fulfilling requirements set up by 1972 federal clean water laws.

"We're following the mandate of the law," McMillan said. "If we don't show progress for improving our sewer outflow we could face a possible $10,000 a day fine for not complying."

District officials said the Chicago project could be a model for the rest of the nation. They said other potential sites include Boston, New York, Newark, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Columbus, Dayton, Louisville, Washington, D.C., Atlanta, Kansas City, Indianapolis, Cleveland, Detroit, Milwaukee, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Dallas, San Antonio, San Diego, Los Angeles, Oakland, San Francisco, Rochester, and Buffalo.

The moles, some weighing 700 tons, are so large they had to be brought underground in pieces and then assembled. Special power lines are rigged to them.

A mole with a 30-foot diameter head on one section of the tunnel pressed into the rock wall with three million pounds of thrust, powered by its 2,400 horsepower engines.

"This one has gone through 600 feet of wall in five days," said Jack Kennedy, assistant project manager for Kenny Construction, one of eight major contractors on the project.

The moles have huge revolving heads, studded with steel cutters, that slice the stone off the walls. The stone is then placed in flatbed railroad cars for transit to long conveyor belts that run to the surface.

"The moles are right out of a Jules Verne novel," said one engineer.

Boring records are being broken continuously in the project, which when completed might rank as the Eighth Engineering Wonder of the World. "It's awesome," marvelled Kennedy.

But back on the surface the project has met with a opposition from several quarters, including some environmental groups, and President Carter has been asked to halt the digging.

Opponents, including the environmentalist Sierra Club, fear the project may contaminate area underground water through seepage, not fulfill all goals set out for it and trigger a taxpayer backlash that possibly could deter other environmental projects.

And, one community filed a multi-million lawsuit, charging underground blasting for the project damaged homes.

Harry Weese, architect-engineer designer of the Washington, D.C. Metro, called the project "scandalously unnecessary" and suggested it be scrapped.

"They're doing it," he said.

"because they get federal money and they want the world's largest project — they're engineers."

Tunnels already dug could either be used for water mains or "they'd make good bomb shelters," he said with a laugh. "They're certainly big enough."

Stan Hallett, a Northwestern University urbanologist and a spokesman for an opposition coalition, said the project was "civic insanity" and, with millions of dollars worth of contracts at stake, it had taken on a momentum of its own.

"If a private corporation did this," he said, "it would be accused of consumer fraud."

"Projects like this make you think of the EPA as the Environmental Pork Barrel Administration. These things have a way of gaining momentum on their own."

Hallett claimed a significant number of EPA and district staff members have voiced concern about the project privately.

"We don't feel the question of contamination has been adequately dealt with," said David Comey of Citizens for a Better Environment. "I see this as a giant cowbird eating up other good environmental projects."

"The paradox is inescapable," said Peter Manikas of the Better Government Association, a civic watchdog group. "The nation's most expensive antipollution project threatens to pollute a major source of the Chicago area's drinking supply."

District spokesmen said, however, there is no danger of tunnel sewer water seepage.

"We've been aware of this concern since Day 1," said Frank Dalton, a district engineer. "And it's well in hand."

As a safeguard, special monitoring wells are being drilled that could be used to raise outside pressure on the tunnels by being loaded with water and thus prevent sewer water leakage. Some tunnel sections are being lined with concrete as a precaution.

Opponents contend enough alternatives haven't been explored. They have called for smaller, surface based methods to solve the sewer problem, such as green belts around the city and use of porous cement so rain-water won't flow into sewers and become dirty, adding to the processing load.

They also advocate such measures as reducing water usage by putting screens on faucets and rerouting street water and sewer overflow to yards or holding areas where it could be used.

"They say they want to bottle a rainstorm," Hallett said. "I say we should catch each raindrop where it falls — we should cutback on usage and use smaller technologies."

Deloris Foster, only Republican commissioner on the seven-member sanitary board, said opponents have raised important questions, but the board seems disposed toward "laughing them off."

While present work on the project should continue, she said, a serious review should be undertaken of these questions. Major construction on the project began in 1976, but funding for the second phase of the project is still uncertain.

The first phase — four tunnel systems totaling 110 miles that can operate independently — is expected to be completed in 1987. The first of the tunnel systems is due to go into operation by 1983.

District officials are confident the first phase will be completed, but whether all of the project will reach fruition is still a question. They said the proposed second phase will come under intense scrutiny before construction is started.

Despite all the conflicting views, people on both sides of the controversy agree the outcome of Chicago's Deep Tunnel Project could have an impact on the rest of the country.

"This is a problem affecting other communities too," said Commissioner Foster. "It's a national issue and controversy."

Creates School For Politicians

BY TELJISHIMIZU
TOKYO (UPI) — At age 84, when most men are well into retirement, multi-millionaire Konosuke Matsushita is dipping into his fortune and embarking on a new venture designed to infuse new blood into Japanese politics.

The founder of the company that produces Panasonic television sets and other electrical goods wants to set up a school for future politicians. And he is willing to spend $36.8 million from his personal fortune to do it.

Normally such an idea would get little attention in a country where politicians win seats in the Diet (Parliament) with the help of political parties and their supporters.

The ruling Liberal Democratic Party (LDP) is primarily made up of parliamentary members with long years in the government bureaucracy and those who have inherited a political power base from retired or deceased statesmen.

Opposition parties have captured seats in the two houses of the Diet with the support of either organized labor unions or religious organizations.

But because the idea of establishing a school for future politicians came from Matsushita, it is drawing considerable attention from many Japanese, including those in the existing political parties and political scientists.

Matsushita, whose formal education ended in the fourth grade, is highly respected for his success in turning the Matsushita Electrical Industries Co. from a small factory in Osaka city into one of the world's giant electronics corporations.

According to his plans, he will construct the projected "Matsushita Political and Economic School" and a boarding house in the seaside city of Chigasaki, southwest of Tokyo, next year and take in 30 young men.

They will be trained for five years and given an allowance while studying.

The school will be the first of its kind in Japan in more than 100 years.

Toward the end of Japan's 300 years of isolation in the mid-19th Century, a small town scholar in southern Japan had his own private institution of learning. Its students, low class "samurai" (warriors), later became top government leaders during the era when Emperor Hirohito's grandfather was on the throne.

Matsushita said he decided to set up the school for future politicians because "I have had doubt about postwar (Japanese) politics."

"The prosperity of the world began in Egypt," he said philosophically. "In the 21st Century Asia will be in prosperity. However, management of Japan has not been conducted on that premise. If no one is going to do it, then I am going to do it."

While showing interest in Matsushita's idea, a noted political commentator noted, "Those who get out of the school will not be able to carry out activities as politicians unless they hold seats either in the upper house or lower house."

"Graduates of the Matsushita school will not have a base for political activities just because they studied in the school."

Early Warning By Honeybees

NEW YORK (UPI) — Honeybees may provide early warning of environmental pollution, says entomologist Jerry J. Bromenshenk. They store chemicals accumulated during foraging and have been used to determine distribution and magnitude of a variety of contaminants.

Writing in the Archives of Internal Medicine, the University of Montana entomologist said pesticides, insecticides and herbicides have contributed to a slow but steady decline of honeybee colonies.

Because they are so sensitive to contaminants, Bromenshenk suggests honeybees could be used as early warning signals of pollution.

Brilliant defense does not necessarily consist of startling maneuvers. Quite often a simple play will have a devastating effect. Consider this hand, reported by former world champion Camillo Pabis Tici.

North-South bid aggressively to slam. South had one story to tell, and North confirmed his diamond support with his jump in hearts—it had to be a cue-bid since North had already shown at least ten cards in the black suits. South showed his spade feature and North tried for a grand slam with the Grand Slam Force. Since South did not have two of the top three diamond honors, he signed off in six diamonds.

West led his fourth-best heart and declarer ruffed in dummy. Since he would have an easy road to twelve tricks once trumps were out, declarer now led the queen of diamonds from the board.

Looking Back At The Turkeys

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Now that we're done with holiday cheer, parades and pigskin, well, almost, let's look back at television's turkeys of 1978.

Look no further than NBC's "Greatest Heroes of the Bible." This leaden concoction of hokum would try the patience of Job.

The Bible is rich with eloquence, poetry and passion. Its stories are succinct, often enigmatic, yet its people are filled with juice and fire.

The Israelites in this miseries were too lifeless to whip the Philistines but they'd certainly bore them to death. How sad to see so many fine actors running around in tutus, spouting wretched dialogue, coping with lackluster interpretation, and doing their hardest not to look foolish.

And, are you ready for this, NBC is ordering more of these tales.

The funniest unintentional special of the year was "The Pirate," a two-part movie CBS wrung from the Harold Robbins book. It proves once again if you want to put junk on the air you need to start with junk.

The preposterous plot might have been saved by skillful handling, but all they did was point out its flaws. The characters were ludicrous stereotypes, the performances wooden, the direction heavyhanded.

"Evening in Byzantium," from Operation Prime Time, was an exercise in chutzpah. Universal Television bought the Irwin Shaw book and apparently decided, "What does he know," and set out to "improve" the story.

If you thought "The Pirate" was preposterous — this one was so contorted even the Medici would be confused. The presence of a solid performer like Glenn Ford couldn't save this turkey.

NBC's "The Critical List" was the only two-part movie I've ever seen that switched horses in midstream. The first night was about malpractice, then overnight it was a new plot and virtually a new cast. I think the rider missed the horse and fell into the drink.

ABC's "Doctors Private Lives" was a sappy soap opera with pretensions of grandeur. It reached so high and fell so low.

The "You Can't Go Home Again" award goes to "Top Secret," an attempt to remake one-half of "I Spy." It was Bill Cosby minus Robert Culp, and Cosby deserves better. It looked like a travelogue with occasional spurts of action. Cosby easily outwitted an inept gang of terrorists who apparently were on loan from a comedy caper.

The "Bridge Too Far" award goes to "The Word." It ran for four nights and seemed like 40. I really hate to include the CBS miniseries because it was superbly done and the performances sparkled. But when you stretch a four-hour story to eight hours you have to expect it to drag. Hopefully when CBS reruns this it will be cut to its proper length.

Carter Starts New Year With Travel

By BROOKS JACKSON Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter, refreshed by his holiday vacation and much improved from a painful year-end bout with hemorrhoids, is starting a busy January schedule with a trip to the Caribbean for a four-nation summit conference.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said the president is meeting with staff members today in preparation for the conference with leaders from Britain, France and West Germany on the island of Guadeloupe Jan. 5 and 6. Carter will fly there Thursday and remain through Jan. 9.

The president plans to fly from Washington to Atlanta Jan. 14 to take part in ceremonies marking what would have been the 50th birthday of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. He'll return to Washington that same day, Powell said. Sometime the week of Jan. 15 Carter will deliver his State of the Union address to Congress. Powell said Tuesday the exact date has not been set, but he did say Carter intends to deliver the address in person. The president has completed virtually all work on an austere and already controversial federal budget which he will submit to Congress Jan. 22, Powell said.

Also, Carter has set up an informal "task force" of staff members from the White House and elsewhere in the administration to lay groundwork for the Jan. 29 summit meeting here with mainland China's Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping. For a time there was a possibility that Carter also would meet during January with Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev to sign a new agreement to limit strategic arms, but negotiations hit a snag last month and it isn't known whether the document will be ready to sign this month.

Powell said, "I don't know of any timetable" for completing the strategic arms limitation talks (SALT). The press secretary said Carter had returned from his Christmas and New Year's vacation feeling well. Carter canceled his Dec. 20 appointments and took to bed for a day because of a painful case of hemorrhoids. But now, Powell said, "he seems to be feeling very well." He said Carter had resumed jogging for exercise while at Camp David where he and Mrs. Carter spent several days in seclusion after going to Plains, Ga. for Christmas. Powell said Carter spent some of the holiday vacation reflecting on the coming year, and also said Carter probably will be taking on relatively fewer big and controversial projects during 1979 than in the first two years of his administration. "There probably will be a less wide variety," he said. But Powell added, "We're prepared for some very difficult times with the Congress" nonetheless. Carter expects opposition from various quarters as he attempts to hold down federal spending for social programs, increase military spending and gain Senate ratification of the expected strategic arms agreement, Powell said.

The two were being held under $25,000 bond each in Lee County jail Tuesday night.

Area Grates Replaced

The city's Public Works Department has replaced all of the storm sewer grates on the portion of Red Banks Road from 14th Street to Charles Street. Public Works director Mayo Allen reported that the grates which were replaced were parallel to the street and created a hazard for bicycle traffic. He added that the new grates should eliminate the hazard to bicyclists of tires being caught in the grate spaces.

Cigarette Firm Raises Prices

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) - Consumers will be paying between two and five cents more per pack of L&M and Decade cigarettes. Liggett and Meyers Tobacco Co. has notified its wholesale customers that the price of cigarettes will increase by 55 cents per 1,000 cigarettes. The increase will be reflected in the cost of cigarettes from stores and vending machines. The increase is in line with those announced last month by Phillip Morris Inc., the Lorillard Division of Lowes Corp. and American Tobacco Co. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. was the only major cigarette maker which had not announced an increase by Tuesday.
