Shah Quietly Departs Iran

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer
TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Shah Mohammad Reza
Pahlavi left Iran today for Egypt and the United States, touching off jubilant celebrations throughout Tehran.

"The shah is gone forever!" people chanted as millions poured into the streets, showering each other with candies and rose water, cheering and shouting with joy.

Motorists honked their horns and jumped from their cars and hugged each other.

The 59-year-old Iranian monarch arrived later in Aswan, Egypt, where he was greeted at the airport by President Anwar Sadat.

Egypt's Middle East News Agency reported. The two then drove to a hotel on an island in the Nile River.

The shah is expected to leave for the United States Wednesday.

In a statement to Iran's official Pars news agency, the shah said he was going "on vacation because I am feeling tired." He left his royal powers with a Regency Council and appealed to the Iranian people to preserve the monarchy during his absence.

The shah said the length of his stay abroad would depend on his "physical condition."
But many believe the vacation will turn into permanent exile and the end of the dynasty his soldier-father founded 54 years ago.

"I hope the government will be able to make amends for the past and also succeed in laying the foundation for the future," said the shah.
"This work needs a long period of cooperation and patriotism in its utmost meaning. Our economy must start rolling again and we must have better planning for the future."

Ayatollah Khomeini, the Shiite Moslem religious leader who is the shah's most influential opponent, congratulated the "heroic people of Iran" on the shah's departure and said it was "the first step toward ending the Pahlavi dynasty."

Khomeini, an exile in France, said he would return to Iran "at the first proper time" and would name his own "provisional government" to supplant Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar and the new government appointed by the shah.

The lower house of the Majlis, the Iranian Parliament, confirmed Bakhtiar and his cabinet today by a vote of 149-43 with 13 abstentions. The Senate gave it a vote of confidence Monday.

The shah had been scheduled to hold a news conference at the airport before his departure and was expected to say something about his plans. But foreign reporters were told on their arrival at the airport that the departure had been delayed at least until Wednesday and the news conference was postponed.

The reporters were sent back to the city, and shortly after the palace sources reported the ruler and his wife had left the country.

TRAILER BURNED

The mobile home of Shirley Butts Hines and Tommy Butts, brother and sister, was destroyed by fire recently.

The trailer was located in Evans Mobile Home Park between Greenville and Winterville. All the belongings of both residents were destroyed. They are searching for a place to live and are in need of household goods and clothing.

Tommy wears size 30 waist pants and 15-15 and a half shirt. Shirley wears 12-14 sized clothing. For more information one may call the home of their

Attack China Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional opponents of President Carter's China policy are opening a scat-tershot attack that threatens to delay the confirmation of Leonard Woodcock as ambassador to Peking and to disrupt the legislative schedule of Senate leaders.

Within a few hours of the 96th Congress' opening Monday, there was a flurry of proposals dealing with relations between the United States and Taiwan.

Opponents of Carter's decision to recognize mainland China at the expense of full diplomatic and military ties with Taiwan are expected to concentrate on three separate issues:

—The ambassadorial nomination of former United Auto Workers President Leonard Woodcock, announced Monday.

—A collection of legislative proposals to establish an American Institute in Taiwan to handle official dealings with that country.

—A move, led by Sen.
Harry Byrd, to force Senate floor debate on the administration's China policy before Carter wants the discussion.

The Board of County Commissioners yesterday instructed the Pitt County and Greenville City school systems to come up with a plan to merge the two units by October 1, and said a proposed $9 million bond issue for school capital improvements should be part of the merger plan.

In September 1977, the Board of Commissioners asked the two boards of education to develop and implement a plan to merge the two systems into a single administrative unit. At that time, commissioners said the plan should be completed so that if any legislative action was required, it could come before the 1979 General Assembly.

As a result of that action,
the two school boards requested the North Carolina Department of Public In-struction's Division of School Planning to conduct a comprehensive survey of the two units. But the two boards asked that the survey team not make any recommendations regarding the question of merger.

Although the 210-page survey report was received five months ago, Commissioners had not been told of any progress being made toward a merger, so the board asked the chairmen of the two school boards and the superintendents to meet with them yesterday to report on their progress.

"We believe this to be proper," Commission chairman R. L. "Bob" Martin said yesterday of the proposed merger. He added, "not having heard anything from you, it's a pretty good indication you don't have much interest in it."

County school superintendent Ott Alford, who in the past has indicated support for a merger, explained that board chairman Mark Owens, an attorney, was appearing in a case in Federal Court and was unable to attend the 5:15 p.m. session.

"I can't speak personally for the board," Alford said, adding that officially, "there is no position on the matter."
The county board, he noted, has done nothing about a merger. Alford added that he had proposed merging the two systems as early as 1964.

Mrs. Terry Shank, chairman of the city board, said the survey did not address everything that needed to be studied. She added that she had discussed, with Owens, forming a joint committee to work on a plan.

A joint committee, she continued, would be the "most feasible way," and suggested that an "objective consultant," to be hired to aid the committee.

Alford, who mirrored Mrs.
Shank's thought that any merger plan should be voted on by the people, said two

Review Plan For Merger

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The topic of merger of the Greenville City and Pitt County School systems will now proceed at an accelerated pace, with a deadline of October 1, 1979 for a definite plan from the two school boards directed by the County Commissioners.

City Board chairman Mrs.
Terry Shank reported to the board at its January action meeting Monday night that she and two other board members had attended a 5:15 p.m. Monday meeting with County Commissioners, along with members of the Pitt County Board of Education, and County Commissioners had requested "a merger plan be submitted by October first this year."

Mrs. Shank added that at an early date she and county board chairman Mark Owens would meet and sketch out guidelines for forming a joint committee with members from both board to begin work on a merger plan.

"Commissioners also indicated that an outside specialist in formulating a merger plan will be employed to assist the committee,"
Mrs. Shank added.

Superintendent Glenn Cox observed that for any plan formulated, the law permits County Commissioners to call for a public referendum or not call for one.

During discussions joined by board members and interested persons present, the question of whether a study would enumerate both advantages and disadvantages of the proposed merger would be reflected.

Mrs. Shank said "I feel sure it will be up to the committee and consultants to decide the best way to go in writing a merger plan. I feel certain any merger plan would reflect all facets of information."

"As I see it," she added,
"the basic assignment is to establish plans for a new system that would handle the two units."

Mentioning that first things come first, member Donovan Phillips said "right now, the immediate requirement is just to come up with a plan.

and we can go from there."

Board member Mrs. Nancy Middleton asked how it is that the County Commissioners can mandate a merger proposal and study, to which Cox replied "the commissioners, as the funding authority, have the legal right to take a look at any way that saving of funds can be effected, and looking at a merger proposal falls within this legal right."

One observer, Mrs. Mary Williams, president of the Wahl-Coates School PTA, observed that "on an issue as touchy as merging, someone needs to get concrete evidence as to what the public wants. Most of us have no idea of what it involves, and we'd like to see evidence from both boards on what a merger can and cannot do.
It's important to see how the public feels about this issue."

Mrs. Shank responded by saying "I am sure the guidelines to be drawn up will include opportunities for public input."

Mixed Reaction To Hunt's Proposals

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —
Gov. Jim Hunt was treated with pomp and reverence as he revealed his budget recommendations to the joint session of the General Assembly Monday night. But afterward, his proposals received mixed reviews from legislative leaders, including Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green.

Hunt handed the legislators a budget proposal containing a $40 million tax cut that increases the personal exemptions for state income tax purposes and contains a rebate for 1980 ranging from $10 to $25, if sufficient excess funds are available.

The tax cut proposal drew a more favorable response than the rebate idea did.

"The rebate I think is folly," said Rep. Howard Coble, R-Guilford. Coble introduced a bill last week calling for a repeal of the salary increase legislators received this year.

"I'm not going to debate the idea of a tax rebate," Green said. "I said all along I didn't think it'd be enough to be meaningful and we ought to move in the direction of a permanent cut. I still do."

"Ten dollars is not meaningful to a vast majority of people," Green said.

Green has said that a permanent tax cut should be closer to $100 million rather than $40 million. He said Monday that perhaps any excess money should be used the boost the tax cut rather than provide a rebate.

House Speaker Carl
Stewart, D-Gaston, said the $40 million tax cut was an amount the state could "comfortably afford."

But he said he had heard few North Carolinians speak favorably of a tax rebate. "I doubt it has much attraction to the average North

Carolinian," he said.
"That's the best thing," Rep. Horton Rountree, D-
Pitt. House speaker pro tem, said of the exemption proposal. But he did not like the rebate.

Rep. Parks Helms, D-

Mecklenburg, said the exemption was the best approach to providing tax relief for North Carolinians.

"We ought to give primary consideration to permanent tax relief," Helms said. "In my view, the rebate will still have a tough time."

Smith Appointed Board Chairman

Eddie Smith Jr. has been elected chairman of the board of managers of Planters National Bank in Greenville, according to W.
Douglas Starr, city executive.

Smith is president of Grady-White Boats Inc. of Greenville and vice president of National Industries and National Wholesale Co. of Lexington.

A graduate of the University of North Carolina, the new chairman currently serves as president of the university's Educational Foundation at Chapel Hill.

He has served on PNB's local board of managers since 1972 and is also chairman of the board of the Boat Manufacturer's Association.

Smith, a Rotarian, is area chairman of Ducks Unlimited, past member of the Pitt-Greenville Airport Authority, and past member of the board of Pace Academy.

He is married to the former Jo Allison Clary and they have one son.

In addition to Smith,

members of the Planters local board are Dr. James H.
Bearden, H. T. Chapin, Dr.
Andrew A. Best, Dr. Harry R.
Billica, Charles P. Gaskins,
Max Ray Joyner, L. E. Tur-

Link Good School Attendance To Exemption From Exams

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

A proposal for a new policy at Rose High that ties good attendance in with exemption from semester exams was given approval by members of the Greenville Board of Education at the Monday night meeting.

The proposal, presented to the board by Rose High principal Howard Hurt, in essence rewards students maintaining a good attendance record with exemptions from exams. Seniors will still be exempted on the basis of achieving A's, regardless of the number of absences during a semester.

The criteria established for grades 10, 11, and 12 based on the dual factors of permitted absences and grades based on full semester periods are:

— Seniors — Four days absence and semester average of B; three days absence and semester average of C; two days absence and semester average of D.

— Juniors and sophomores — Four days absence and semester average of A; three days absence and semester average of B; two days absence and semester average of C; and one day absence and semester average of D.

Hurt indicated that "I am an exam oriented person, but I am convinced this plan will significantly cut absences at Rose." He explained that under the current method of keeping record of absences, the record is based on home room attendance records, and that under his proposed plan, an accurate record will be kept on attendance for all classes.

Answering questions about the obvious penalties this plan will impose on students who have absences due to illness, Hurt said it was unfortunate, but that overall he is convinced the plan will do much to bolster steady, all-day attendance.

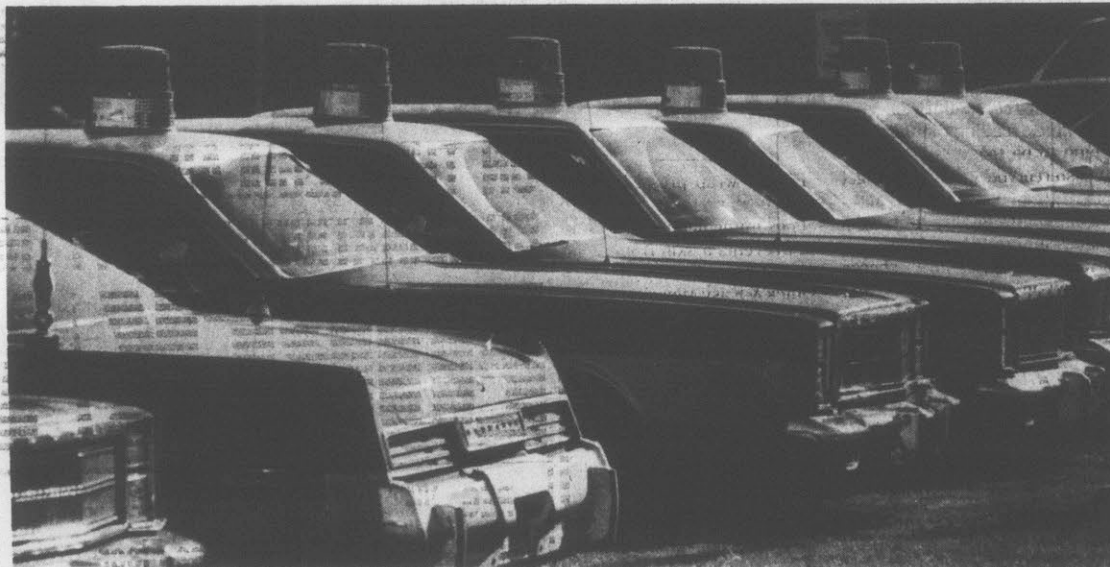

The proposal, according to Hurt, has the approval of "about 85 or 90 per cent of teachers, and the approval of the Student Government Association."

Additionally, any student who qualifies for the exemption can,

if he or she wishes, take exams.

At this time, exams are given only at the end of the school year. Plans are for the coming school year to give exams at the end of the two full semesters. Also, juniors meeting the exempt criteria must still take one exam prior to graduation in 1980; and sophomores meeting the exempted must take five exams prior to 1981.

Hurt asked, and the board approved the plan applicable to the semester ending at the end of this school year in June. At that time, the board will evaluate the overall attendance record and make another decision on whether to drop or reinstate the trial attendance-exempt plan.

Fifth Guilty Plea In Drug Smuggling

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Decatur, Ga., attorney Monday became the fifth of 16 defendants to plead guilty in Wayne Superior Court to heroin conspiracy charges.

Wilbur Cleo Fuller, 32, who was indicted last March, pleaded guilty to conspiracy to possess with intent to sell and deliver heroin and to being an accessory before the fact.

Judge Forrest Ferrell of Hickory delayed sentencing.

Authorities have said Fuller handled legal work for Leslie "Ike" Atkinson, a convicted heroin smuggler who is also facing heroin conspiracy charges in Wayne County.

Three jurors have been selected for the trial of most of the remaining defendants. Atkinson and seven of his relatives comprise the group. The remaining defendants are not included in the current trial.

Selection of jurors for the trial was interrupted Friday because of a death in the family of one of the defense lawyers. Prosecutors and defense attorneys held a series of meetings on Monday.

The jury is being selected from a panel of 500 prospects from Nash County. Ferrell ordered the special panel brought in from Nash County after denying motions by the defense to move the trial from Wayne County.

Atkinson's daughter, Leslie Sharon Atkinson Arrington, 27, and former attorney John

McConnell of Raleigh are among other defendants who have already pleaded guilty.

Mrs. Arrington, who is serving a 15-year federal prison term on heroin charges, was given a two-year concurrent sentence, but McConnell has not been sentenced. Mrs. Arrington was accused of carrying messages to her father in a federal prison and helping with the operation of the multimillion-dollar drug ring.

Atkinson is serving a 44-year sentence in federal prison for heroin smuggling. His daughter's husband, Michael Otis Arrington, one of the defendants in the current case, also is serving a sentence in a federal penitentiary.

CHICAGO (AP) — With new snowfall predicted for today, the Midwest struggled to cope with hip-deep snow that threatened to disrupt fuel and food supplies.

The storm-related death toll climbed to at least 53.

A Kansas road crew plowing snow Monday in rural Stafford County uncovered a car in a ditch containing the bodies of two men who apparently had frozen to death.

A 44-year-old Columbus, Ohio, man was found 12 feet from the front door of his home on Monday. Police said he apparently slipped on ice, couldn't get up, and died of exposure.

In the hard-hit Chicago area, where up to 4 inches of snow fell atop the 20.3 inches that arrived over the weekend, authorities counted 17 deaths linked to the city's worst storm since 1967.

There have been 18 reported deaths in Illinois, 15 in Wisconsin, seven in Kansas, four each in Missouri and Iowa, three in Michigan and one in Ohio and one in Nebraska.

Officials in Milwaukee, where 5 inches of snow fell Monday, urged Gov. Lee Dreyfus to seek a federal disaster declaration for the city — now under 30 inches of snow, the most it has seen in 67 years.

Thousands of travelers spent another night in Chicago hotels because O'Hare International Airport — which closed for only the sixth time in its history on Saturday — was limited to one runway. A second runway was expected to reopen today.

Commuters — there are 2.25 million in Chicago — hitchhiked or faced two-hour delays due to icy elevated tracks and stalled buses.

The National Weather Service warned there would be at least 4 more inches of snow to contend with today in a new snow-shower expected to hit the nation's second-largest city.

And Fred Ostby, deputy director of the National Weather Service in Kansas City, Kan., said a "storm system in the West may hit Missouri and Kansas later in the week."

Ostby said it would be Wednesday or Thursday before he could predict the storm's path and intensity. He said it could pack more wallop than the wintry blast that hit over the weekend.

Illinois Gov. James Thompson declared a state of emergency in 22 counties Monday, and then left for a family vacation in Florida. The governors of Iowa and Kansas also declared emergencies.

The price of snow removal and emergency work in Illinois was set at $3.4 million by Monday, and rising, Thompson said.

Meanwhile, 2 to 3 inches of snow fell in the Sacramento Valley and the San Francisco area of California Monday, and avalanche warnings were issued in the eastern Sierras.

The rain was accompanied by lightning, an unusual occurrence in northern California, and more than 17,000 customers lost power when it struck transformers in Oakland.

National Guard troops using helicopters delivered hay to starving cattle in Iowa and similar rescue attempts were planned today in Missouri, where temperatures remained near -15 degrees.

Kansas farmers worried that some cattle already were dead — frozen under drifts of 10 feet or more. And experts warned that the high price of keeping animals alive would push up costs.

"It takes an awful lot of feed just to keep cattle warm," said Scott County agricultural agent Al Maddux in western Kansas. "It's going to make feed costs go sky high."

In Illinois at least 100 dairy farmers reported thousands of gallons of fresh milk spoiled over the weekend because they were unable to get it to market.

Elsewhere, about 300 tractor-trailer rigs — some loaded with perishables like peaches and pears — were stalled at truck stops along Interstate 80 in Iowa. Fuel supplies were low in some areas.

The diesel engine semis require about two gallons of fuel every hour just to idle, and drivers said they feared they wouldn't be able to restart them if they stalled.

Iowa Gov. Robert Ray issued an emergency proclamation allowing fuel tank carriers to haul an extra 1,000 gallons of fuel oil or propane to overcome delivery delays caused by up to 28 inches of snow cover.

In some areas of the Midwest, delivery trucks did not arrive before home fuel supplies ran out for some rural residents.

In Clay County, Mo., a Civil Defense helicopter rescued a family of three from a home north of Kansas City after its furnace broke down and they were stopped from leaving by clogged roads.

In Davenport, Iowa, people on snowmachines delivered fuel oil to families that had run out.

And in New Liberty, Iowa, troops rescued three members of a family who burned corn cobs over the weekend to heat their home. The temperature in one bedroom dipped to 10 degrees, they said.

Greenville Student Is A Morehead Finalist

Brantley Tiltman Jolly Jr., son of Mrs. Myree D. Hayes, 2009 S. Elm St., Greenville, has been named as one of six finalists from District One in competition for the 1979 Morehead Awards.

Jolly, a student at J. H. Rose High School, will appear for interviews with the foundation's Central Selection Committee in Chapel Hill Feb. 24-27.

The finalists for the district were selected from 24 nominees from 19 counties in District One during a District Selection Committee meeting in Williamston.

District One finalists are Debbie Lynne Jordan of Edenton; Jo Anna Lilley of Williamston; Charles Jihun Chung of Rocky Mount; William Golden Simpson Jr. of Columbia; and Enid Rose Neptune of Plymouth.

Two alternates were selected from District One. Wendy Gail Weisner of Roanoke Rapids was named first alternate, with Carolyn Louise Fellowes of Elizabeth City as second alternate.

There are ten Morehead

Districts in the state. The awards provide an all-expense paid undergraduate education at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, with awards valued at approximately $12,000 for each recipient.

Selection of the finalists is based on academic achievement, and potential evidence of leadership and service, character and physical vigor. The announcement of the finalists was made by Mehane Pritchett, executive director of the John Motley Morehead Foundation.

Easter Seal Drive Is Underway Over County

The Easter Seal Society Neighbor-to-Neighbor campaign is underway in Pitt County.

According to Linda Walend, local N-to-N chairperson, telephone volunteers are calling Pitt County residents in an effort to place kits throughout the area.

"We're asking Pitt Countians to accept kits for particular street areas. The kits will be mailed out Feb. 26 directly to those persons agreeing to accept. Each person then passes the self-explanatory kit to a neighbor, who takes it to another, and so on until it is returned to the street captain. The street captain then takes the kit to any branch of Wachovia Bank," explained Ms. Walend.

"In the N-to-N project, one person does not knock on everyone's door and ask for a contribution," she pointed out. "Instead, each neighbor may take time to read the information on Easter Seal services and decide if the family would like to support the program."

The Easter Seal Society operates a large number of services for handicapped children and adults in the state. Funds raised in Pitt County area used to maintain an equipment loan program, pay for speech, physical and occupational therapy, braces, medical appliances, and transportation; run an information, referral and follow-up systems; and sponsor local recreation programs. Two residential camps are maintained: Camp Easter-in-the-Pines near Southern Pines for the physically handicapped, and Camp Sertoma in Stokes County for the mentally handicapped.

Employment Survey Set

Local representatives of the Bureau of the Census will conduct an employment survey in the Greenville area this week, according to Joseph R. Norwood, Director of the Bureau's Regional Office in Charlotte.

The survey is conducted for the U.S. Department of Labor in a scientifically designed sample of approximately 70,000 households throughout the nation.

Information supplied by people participating in the survey is kept strictly confidential by law and the results are used only to compile statistical totals.

Mrs. Janet P. Conway of Greenville and Mrs. Emily D. Bowen of Havelock will serve as interviewers in the area.

March Of Dimes Leaders Honored

RALEIGH — Mrs. James B. Hunt Jr. was hostess at a reception Thursday morning at the Executive Mansion here to thank 80 Mothers' March chairmen and key March of Dimes leaders from across the state.

The guest speaker was Mrs. Patricia Loggins, regional volunteer advisor. The National Foundation-March of Dimes, from Dalton, Ga. She emphasized the mission of the March of Dimes organization today is the prevention of birth defects. Mrs.

Hunt reminded the delegates the Governor has placed voluntarism as a priority item during his administration and she commended the delegates for their interest in the prevention of birth defects.

In addition to Mrs. Hunt and Mrs. Loggins, the receiving line included Robert E. Wilkinson, regional director, the National Foundation-March of Dimes, Atlanta, Ga.; State Poster Child Meredith Craig and her mother, Mrs. Douglas Craig of Kinston. Mrs. Frank C. Moffett, president, North Carolina Federation of Women's Clubs, Charlotte. Mrs. Nellie Jones, Raleigh. Jayettes March of Dimes projects chairman, Mrs. Jeanie Renegar, Wilmington, and Mrs. Sharon Carter, Winston-Salem, volunteer advisors for the March of Dimes.

Others assisting were Mrs. Peggy Earp, Selma. Mrs. Mary Ellen Rivenbark, Raleigh. Mrs. Sandy Bear, Fayetteville, and Miss Betty Baker, Raleigh. Attending from the Junior Woman's Club of Greenville were Mrs. Sandy Griffin, Mrs. Frank Lawrence, chairman of the Home Life Department, and Mrs. Joe Gray, president of the club.

For the 1978 campaign, the Junior Woman's Club raised $1,100. The Mothers' March for this year will be conducted by the newly organized Juniorette Club of J. H. Rose High School assisted the Junior Woman's Club.

Short Course Scheduled To Begin Jan. 24

A short course will be offered to persons in the building industry and to other individuals interested in home construction.

Meetings will be held at the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office here Wednesdays at 7 p.m. beginning Jan. 24 through Feb. 28, excluding Feb. 14.

The various sessions will be conducted by representatives from North Carolina State University, American Hardboard Association, National Particleboard Association, National Paint and Coatings Association, Southern Forest Products Association and American Plywood Association.

Sponsors for the short course are N. C. Agricultural Extension Service-Pitt County Extension Office, Carolina Lumber and Building Material Dealers Association, N. C. Home Builders Association and Greenville Home Builders Association.

Attendance certificates provided by the N. C. Home Builders Association will be awarded to persons attending four of the five sessions.

Job Counselor Urges Women Plan Career

By CAROL DEEGAN
NEW YORK (AP) — Most women probably spend more time making such a minor decision as where to rent an apartment than they do thinking about their careers, says job-counseling specialist Linda Kline.

"Most of us, as women, sort of fall into our work. We don't really sit down and decide very consciously what it is we would like to do, how we would like to go about getting there, and what the things are that we have to do to get into the various kinds of jobs, or even how to prepare ourselves," she said.

Ms. Kline, 38, is president of a corporate consulting and executive search company here specializing in the search for, counseling and placement of women and minorities.

She says women now constitute 40 percent of the U.S. work force, a 50 percent increase in the past 20 years. Yet less than 2 percent of all women who work earn $10,000 or more a year. And only about 1 percent earn $25,000 or more a year.

One reason for low incomes is that many women work in "clerical" or "factory-type" jobs. But, Ms. Kline says, there are now opportunities for women who are educated and who are looking for real careers to go into corporations and get positions where they can grow into management-level jobs.

"Let's face it, most men who are working and have worked for years do not become presidents of their corporations or vice presidents. Most of us reach sort of middle management levels. But until a few years ago even the middle levels have been closed to women. So things have changed very much for the positive in that direction," said Ms. Kline, who heads Maximus Consulting Inc. and Maxima Ltd.

Ms. Kline says if a woman wants to compete in business, she has to have the right kind of academic background. So, if a woman with a liberal arts degree wants to get involved in business, it's a good idea for her to earn a master's degree in business, or at least to take some business courses.

"You have to be, at least to start with, a specialist in something. It isn't really good to be a generalist and to be a jack-of-all trades," she said.

"Also, if you are in a position that you consider dead-end and you don't think you're going to be promoted where you are, get out."

"If you're loyal to the company but you do not feel that your company has a particular loyalty to you, and they view you in one way and you feel it's going to be too hard to change the stereotype image, then get out."

"There are lots of other companies around."

Ms. Kline says if you choose to stay in your company and try to get promoted, then always dress one level up.

"Are you dressing like a secretary?" she said. "Nothing wrong with that if you like being a secretary and want to stay one. But if you have an idea that you have management capabilities and supervisory strengths, but everybody views you as a secretary, look at how the other people dress, the men as well as the women, and change the way you look so that people will deal with you more as a peer rather than someone who is subordinate to them."

Ms. Kline says it's also a good idea for a woman to pick someone in her company as a role model or a mentor — someone who is interested in helping her advance her career because she makes that person look good.

"You seek out someone in power — who may not be your boss, it may be a totally different department — someone whom you would like to emulate, you would like to learn from, and find out if that person is willing to 'sponsor' you. 'Will they teach you what you need to know to get out of your department into something else? Do they view you as someone who has the potential to go far in the company and also work with them and help them look good?'"

"This is very important," Ms. Kline said. "Women tend to wait to be picked. We sit there and we wait, we wait for someone to say, 'Darling, you have done a great job, here is the gold star on your forehead.' That does not happen."

Ms. Kline has a 12-year background in the consulting field. She is a member of the Board of Directors of the New York Association of Women Business Owners. She made her remarks at a seminar for working women sponsored by the Clairol Loving Care Scholarship Program and the Business and Professional Women's Foundation.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

With so many women juggling a home and a career these days, my attention was drawn to a book by Shirley Conran called "Superwoman" in which she advised women on how to avoid housework.

Her ideas made a lot of sense, like: Don't keep pets. Don't polish floors. Use quilts or sleeping bags instead of making beds. Don't buy anything that needs ironing.

Don't dry dishes. Roast in foil. Line shelves with self-adhesive paper and pour a capful of liquid detergent in your bathtub before turning on the water so you don't have to scour it.

It's only when she suggested,

"Squash toilet rolls so that the center becomes oval. That way the paper doesn't roll off so fast," that she lost me.

WHAT KIND OF ANIMAL DO YOU THINK I AM, SHIRLEY?

Oh, I've done a lot of cutting corners in my time. I was the first woman in my block to have black towels, the first to save on my food bills by taking the light out of the refrigerator, and I hold the record for having sent the same zucchini cookies in a school lunch for a year and a half, but squashing toilet tissue rolls is going too far!

You're talking to a woman who experiences absolute rage every time she goes into a public restroom and has to do battle with the towel machine. You know what I'm talking about.

There's the "Little Teaser" model . . . the machine where you punch a button and crank it on the side and about two inches of paper comes out before it locks and you have to repeat the entire process. By the time you get enough paper out to dry off, the water has dripped down your elbow and onto your clothes.

There's the "Firmly Packed" model, where the machine is NEVER without paper. All you have to do is wedge your finger inside, get a piece of it caught on your fingernail and pull it out . . . a piece at a time.

And let us not forget the "Hanging Salute to Germ Tapestry." This is the linen towel that pulls from a machine. In thirty years of using the public facilities, I have yet to see a new one. I believe they come out of the package and get put into the machine with only four inches of clean towel left — all of it next to the machine's end. The rest looks like it spent the night on the floor of the Rams' locker room.

I implore you, Shirley, to reexamine your priorities. We could cut somewhere else. Make let-tovers ahead! Rent children! Move a lot! But when you tamper with functional needs . . . you're asking for war.

Save limp, cooked greens. They'll keep reheated meat rare. Line a baking pan with the vegetables, placed sliced meat on top, then cover with more greens. Warm in a slow oven. (From Family Circle's "Quick & Easy Meals")

Feuding Families Take Notice

By Abigail Van Buren

1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Whenever I've seen a letter in your column about a family feud, I've wanted to write and tell you about my own experience, but never got around to it. Today I'm getting it off my chest with the hope that some feuding families will patch up their foolish quarrels.

When I was in my teens, my parents and an aunt and uncle got into an argument about some petty thing that got so blown out of proportion they quit speaking to each other. My cousins and I still associated with each other, but we didn't go into each other's houses because of our feuding parents.

Things went on that way until one morning our phone rang at 7. It was my aunt calling to tell us that her son had been killed in Vietnam. My folks went over there immediately and, of course, the feud was forgotten.

I hope other families who are feuding will open their eyes and put their petty grievances aside before it takes tragedy to bring them together.

JULIE

DEAR ABBY: I was divorced at 57, after 30 years. I lost my husband to his secretary, who was 25.

I soon found out that men my age prefer women half my age. I didn't want to settle for a sick old man.

I joined the weird world of wandering widows, and made the best of it.

I got a job and decided to be good to myself, instead of waiting on a man who'd never appreciate it.

I still weigh 130, have beautiful clothes, do what I want to do, eat when I'm hungry, sleep when I'm tired, and have had some exotic vacations!

I have never been happier! And as for my ex-husband—who needs him?

H. IN BENSENVILLE, ILL.

DEAR H.: That 25-year-old girl he married.

DEAR ABBY: My wife, Bess, is a registered nurse. She worked until our children came along, but quit to be a full-time mother. The kids are all out of school, and Bess went back to part-time nursing because she enjoys it. I have a good income and it's not necessary for her to work at all.

My mother recently suffered a serious stroke. She divorced my father when I was four, and devoted her life to raising me. She made many sacrifices to send me to the best schools, etc. Mother is in the hospital now, but when she is well enough, I want her to make her home with us. No way will I put her in a nursing home.

I told Bess this and she said, "Fine, but you had better plan on getting someone in to take care of her because I am going back to work full-time."

I was shocked. My wife, a registered nurse, would rather care for strangers than stay at home and nurse my mother! She knows I never could repay my mother for all she's done for me. What do you make of this?

MIXED EMOTIONS

DEAR MIXED: Your wife obviously does not share your deep feeling of obligation insofar as your mother is concerned. Hire a nurse to take care of your mother and take good care of yourself.

Weak Link In Our Structure

It's hardly surprising that 11th graders from poor, rural areas failed the competency test in greater numbers than their more affluent school mates.

The group represents the hard core poverty population that must somehow find a way to do better in our society.

The figures could be even worse for 17-year-olds if the test were given to every one of that age. It is sad but true that many young people have already dropped out of school by the time their age group reaches the 11th grade. These school dropouts would certainly have a very high failure rate on the competency test. That, however, is not reflected, since they are not around to take the test.

America is built on success stories of individuals climbing out of the poverty group to achieve great success. Once it was done solely through hard work and the stories of corporate presidents who never finished high school were well known.

Now the climb to success is likely to be achieved through education, and success for those who come from poverty backgrounds won't always mean heading a giant corporation. Learning to be a good brick layer or cement finisher can provide much personal satisfaction and financial remuneration.

Those with poor economic and academic backgrounds will require special training and evaluation to identify their interests. It won't be easy but the contribution these people can make to society should make the effort well worth it

Torn Between The Desires And Needs

The General Assembly got underway Wednesday and the first week, as usual, was largely ceremonial and organizational.

There are some knotty problems ahead for the Legislature, and the most prominent one is money.

The Legislature is going to be torn between many needs of the state and the desire to decrease taxes. It's going to take much wisdom to handle the available revenues in the best interest of our citizens.

THIS AFTERNOON

Evaluating Test Results

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — No dramatic, overnight response to the Competency Test scores can be expected in North Carolina, but there do seem to be a number of adjustments which will result.

The scores made by eleventh graders were surprisingly high — 90 percent passed the reading segment; 85 percent passed the math, statewide. But enough students failed to cause alarm. As James J. Gallagher, chairman of the test commission describes it: that is still an epidemic.

The scores were so different from those on the test trial run that some are prompted to wonder if the test has been simplified to the point of being too easy. One measure would be to compare the results to scores made elsewhere in the nation, but that is impossible because the test was tailored to North Carolina requirements and has no counterpart elsewhere.

A deeper look at the results, however, produces evidence of problems which are not necessarily reflected in that overall average:

Race Factor

Black males did the worst, with 71 percent passing reading and 65 percent passing math. Black females did nearly as badly, with 79 percent passing reading, and 68 percent passing math. White females scored highest at 97 percent passing reading, and 94 percent passing math.

Those figures indicate, say the experts, that the test did what it was supposed to do: pinpoint serious reading and math problems which would give students trouble at a "minimum survival level" such as reading the want ads, looking up a telephone number or balancing a checkbook.

The next step in analysis goes to family education and income information. While direct links have not been established, it is clear to even a casual observer that black families necessarily fall in the lower socio-economic categories. Thus when 68 percent fail reading and 60 percent fail math among students whose parents have less than an eighth grade education, the conclusion is obvious. For those whose parents went beyond high school, the pass rate was 98 percent and 96 percent.

BILL NOBLITT

The home environment, then is demonstrably critical to the student. The simplistic suggestion has been made that getting the parents of these children involved in their schooling represents an important step at resolving the problem.

In reality, these are the parents who are hardest to get involved; they have difficulty reading, don't necessarily equate success in life with education, and if they do care at all, are least likely to know how to go about helping their children effectively.

Parents

One member of the test commission, Durham County School Supt. Frank Yeager, suggests that "parental education as a means of remediation for the student" could be one positive approach.

The competency test is designed for eleventh graders, and is required for a diploma. It must be viewed, however, in tandem with the all-student testing in lower grades so that a more complete portrait emerges.

At this early stage, it is certain that some public school change can be expected, though none of it sweeping; teachers will be encouraged to concentrate more on basic skills: students doing poorly will be caught earlier by the tests in grades 2-3-6-9, and help given. In time, the tests and remedial efforts will identify successful techniques, and those that don't work. School curricula will likely be adjusted, with more emphasis on basic math resulting, and a major push for parental and volunteer involvement will get underway.

Unthinkable Is Thought

WASHINGTON — As recently as three or four years ago, repeal of the Davis-Bacon Act would have been regarded on Capitol Hill as quite simply unthinkable. Today the idea is widely thought. It is an idea whose hour should have come a long time ago.

Persons who deal in construction projects that are financed wholly or in part from federal funds need no introduction to Davis-Bacon. The act benefits the building trades; it escalates construction costs; and it drives local public officials to apoplexy or beyond.

The 1931 law was the joint contrivance of Senator James John Davis of Pennsylvania and Congressman Robert Low Bacon of New York. They were both Republicans, but there the similarities stopped. Bacon was Boston born, Harvard Law, a New York banker. Davis emigrated from Wales to Pittsburgh in 1881, went to work as a puddler in a steel mill as an 11-year-old boy, and mov-

Vanessa Parker

To the editor:

The first six words of Handel's "Messiah" are recorded in Isaiah 40:1, "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God."

Monday, Jan. 15 was the 50th birthday observance of the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Like the prophet Isaiah, Dr. King promulgated the gospel of Jesus Christ during his life and his vision, his hope and his legacy represent the cause for which we celebrate annually.

Dr. King provided hope for the masses whose spirit had been broken and whose zest for self-improvement had been eroded. His Christian example and virtues instilled faith for thousands who searched for meaning and direction for their lives. In the face of racial bigotry, FBI opposition and surveillance and defiance for his own people, Dr. King steadfastly prepared an avenue down which truth, justice and righteousness could freely pass in order that poor, battered souls could be fed. And from Isaiah 40:4 and 5, Dr. King bellowed: "Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low; and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain; and the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it."

In our present existence of inflationary spiral domestically and daily political uncertainty abroad, it is uplifting and heart-warming to know we have the assurance about which Dr. King preached, toiled and lived: Jesus Christ lives!

John W. May Jr.

ed up so brilliantly in the Iron, Steel & Tin Workers Union that Harding named him secretary of labor in 1921. Coolidge and Hoover reappointed him, and Davis went to the Senate in 1930.

At the time Davis and Bacon put their heads together, their idea made sense. In a recent draft report, the General Accounting Office provided this background:

"The act was a child of the worst depression ever experienced by the nation, when construction — about $3 billion a majority government-financed — was at a low point involving only about 800,000 workers. Competition was great for contracts and for jobs — especially government construction. There were no minimum wage laws, no unemployment compensation programs or other laws to protect the wages of workers."

It was in that context that the Davis-Bacon Act was passed. The law says that in the construction of all federally aided projects above $2,000, prevailing local wages must be paid. The secretary of labor is authorized to determine such prevailing wages.

The act originally was intended to prevent itinerant contractors from hiring cheap labor from outside a project area. The law has not served that purpose for years. Instead, as administered by the Labor Department, the act has provided a gravy train for the construction unions and a pain in the pocketbook for taxpayers. This is because the Labor Department regularly has closed its eyes to actual "prevailing wages," and has adopted union scales instead.

For a specific example: The little town of Dickson, Tenn., 65 miles west of Nashville, wanted to add a room to its local water plant.

Private Clubs Appeal

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Several nightclubs that were rejected for liquor-by-the-drink licenses will go before the state ABC Board this week to argue for permission to serve drinks.

ABC officials were in Charlotte today to begin the hearings, which will deal mostly with one aspect of the liquor law.

If a nightclub does not serve enough food to meet the requirements for classification as a restaurant, the only way for that club to seek a liquor-by-the-drink permit is as a private club. And state law requires private clubs to enforce a 30-day waiting period for membership.

Many places that are classified as private clubs for brown-bagging permits sell relatively cheap "instant memberships" at the door.

Lawyers representing local nightclubs say they will argue that since their clients were classified as private clubs under brown bagging laws, they should retain that classification for mixed drinks.

"Basically, we'll be trying to present evidence that these places have operated with brown bagging without any problems or conflicts," said Mike Carr, an attorney whose firm is representing five nightclubs.

"We don't think it should be any different for mixed drinks."

The hearings stem from a suit filed last November by several club owners after their applications for mixed-drink licenses were rejected. The owners contended the 30-day waiting period was discriminatory because veterans' clubs were exempt.

Mecklenburg County Superior Court Judge William T. Grist ruled Dec. 8 that the original 30-day waiting period clause was "unreasonable and discriminatory" because veterans' clubs were exempt. The state ABC Board subsequently said those clubs must enforce the waiting period, and the law stayed on the books.

Grist also ordered that hearings be held for nightclubs that had been rejected for liquor licenses.

Carr said ABC agents are expected to testify at the hearings

A city sanitary truck skidded on the snow and into a post bearing the fire alarm box at Five Points about 8 a.m. today.

The impact knocked the box loose and tripped the lever, sounding the alarm.

Fire Chief George Gardner warned all persons banking fires to be unusually careful during the cold weather.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Harold Brown Speaks

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Without apparent success so far, Secretary of Defense Harold Brown has privately warned President Carter of "disastrous consequences" if he pursues his present course of abandoning the nation's land-based intercontinental ballistic missile (ICBM) capability.

Brown's warning echoes the position that Carter's defense critics have been derided for: if the Soviets "are structuring" their forces to fight an extended nuclear war and know that the U.S. is not, there is deep trouble ahead.

The blunt warning, so out of character for the low-keyed Brown as to be passionate, was provoked by Jimmy Carter himself. Meeting with senior officials on the defense budget last Sept. 29, the president asked: "Why do we need the Triad?" In other words, why can't the U.S. dispense with land-based ICBMs, and rely on the other two legs of the Triad — manned bombers and missile-firing submarines?

Over a month elapsed before Brown completed an answer for the president's eyes. Brown's "top secret" memorandum of Dec. 1 contained this chilling message:

"The effect of the U.S. giving up, under successful Soviet pressure, a military capability of considerable value which the Soviet Union retains would, in my view, have disastrous consequences both internationally and domestically."

While State Department policymakers flatly disagree, even Brown himself does not talk that way in public. Nuclear physicist Brown is a private man, a cool scientist who avoids cold war rhetoric. Unlike predecessors Melvin Laird and James Schlesinger, Brown has shunned the Cassandra role of pointing to the Soviet menace. He has, in the process, become one of Carter's favorite cabinet members.

Yet, there is no sign of presidential response to Brown's warning. Nothing in writing from Carter has been received at the Pentagon. The gloomy consensus there is that he is determined, for arms control's sake, to reject the Defense Department's proposals to preserve the land-based ICBM and the Triad.

Specifically at issue is whether the president will approve a mobile-basing system on land for the new MX missile to replace the fixed-base Minuteman, which is becoming vulnerable to Soviet attack. But mobile basing is viewed by arms controllers as destabilizing on grounds it would force Moscow to respond (while also violating the new SALT II arms control treaty). Consequently, presidential science adviser Frank Press and other White House aides want to base the MX aboard aircraft.

Carter leans this way, an inclination signalled by him, while still president-elect on Jan. 12, 1977, when he suggested reducing the U.S. arsenal to 200-250 ICBMs.

THE DOOR

"What is behind that door?" a wealthy man was asked by a visitor to his spacious home. "I don't know," the man replied. "I have never opened it. Some people have said there is a great treasure behind it. Others have warned me of unpleasant experiences if I try to pass through it. And a few have insisted there is nothing behind it but empty, useless space. I've lived here for thirty years without opening it, and I suppose I never will."

The man was not crazy. The door he was asked about was no mere door in his house, but the door in his life which led to religion.

We would laugh at a man who lived beside a door leading into a room of spacious beauty, but never opened it. We ought to pity those people who have never tried to open the door to life's greatest source of spiritual power, of love and understanding, of happiness, joy, and peace.

System Discourages Savings

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — In the United States, it has been observed, debt is encouraged but saving isn't. Interest on debt gives a person income tax deductions. But interest earned, every penny of it, means tax payments.

Critics of the system observe further that this is a strange state of affairs, considering that people are head over heels in debt, that inflation rages, and that low savings threaten capital expansion.

The U.S. League of Savings Associations, which has a vested interest in both credit and savings since it represents the thrift institutions, which use savings to finance housing, decided to study the matter.

After examining the policies of more than 30 nations, it concluded: "From an anti-inflation point of view, the United States is the only country studied that has no incentive to encourage long-term savings."

Carroll Melton, who authored the study (Housing Finance and Home Ownership: Public Policy Initiatives in Selected Countries), was especially intrigued by some countries' contract savings plans. And any person saving for a home down payment will understand his fascination.

In Britain, for example, the "Save-As-You-Earn Plan" encourages depositors to save regularly for five years an amount of from one pound to 20 pounds a month. (About $2 to $40.)

"At the end of five years," said Melton, a (government) bonus equal to 14 months' savings is added to the account. And if the funds are left on deposit an additional two years, the bonus is doubled.

There's another bonus too: The saver pays no taxes on the interest.

Perhaps Britain, whose economic expansion almost stagnated in double-digit inflation, and where home ownership is beyond the hope of many more families than in the United States, is a poor model.

Consider then the situation in West Germany, whose sturdy economy has relatively little inflation. It's contract savings plan for would-be homebuyers permits them to earn an effective 21 percent on savings.

Or in Austria, where the owner may deduct each year the principal repayment, a device that encourages a family to stay in a house rather than buying another and moving.

The League's study, done for its foreign affiliate, the International Union of Building Societies and Savings Associations, understandably focuses on housing, it's primary investment. But it has ramifications.

Melton asks us to consider U.S. policy that permits $100 of stock dividends to be free of income taxes, while taxing every dollar of interest earned on savings. Is it just and reasonable? He thinks not.

Those securities investments, he observes, generally add little or nothing to the capital stock of the country. Original issues of stock do; but thereafter, most stock purchases merely transfer ownership.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST—Snow is expected in the forecast period until Wednesday morning, from the Midwest and Great Lakes to the Northeast. Rain is forecast for the central Appalachians, part of the Midwest and for the northern Pacific coast. Showers and snow are due in the Southwest. Warmer weather is expected in the Southeast but very cold weather confronts the central areas. (AP Laserphoto)

An area of high pressure that brought sunny but chilly weather to North Carolina Monday was drifting off the coast this morning, and as a result winds were turning to a more southerly direction.

This was expected to warm temperatures to near normal levels across the state today. Highs were expected to range from the 40s in the mountains to the 50s in the southeast.

Highs Monday held generally in the low 40s with Greensboro getting no warmer than 39. Lows this morning were mostly in the 20s.

A weak cold front is approaching from the northwest and this may trigger a few snow flurries in the mountains tonight, and a few showers mainly in the northwest quadrant of the state Wednesday.

Martin Is New Ass'n President

Evans-Novak . . .

Nearly two years in office did not change his mindset. That was shown at the Sept. 29 meeting, when Carter again questioned the need for the ICBM.

The Dec. 1 response, personally written by Brown, after its warning of "disaster" discussed why a land-based missile is needed. Brown insisted on retaliatory capability "come what may, in the face of new and unexpected Soviet developments." He further stressed the need "to maintain some capability after an initial (nuclear) exchange—perhaps for days, or weeks, or even a few months."

This notion of a nuclear war that would not be completed in one apocalyptic spasm has been rejected by arms control advocates rampant in the administration. It also has been publicly rejected by Harold Brown, who returned to this position in the Dec. 1 memo: "I should note that I doubt that a strategic war of this kind is at all likely, or that it could be fought without rapid escalation to an unlimited spasm." Then, however, Brown tells his president what arms controllers will not admit: "But there are many indications that the Soviets are structuring the forces to fight such a war. Their plans and exercises point the same way. If they think they have such a capability, and we both know that the U.S. does not, adverse military consequences are possible, and adverse political consequences very likely."

While Brown's memo has been safeguarded as though it were a secret weapon, there is no mystery about the Air Force's position. Its chief of staff, Gen. Lew Allen, champions a mobile land-basing system in a Dec. 29 letter to the House Armed Services Committee which was cleared by Brown without a word changed.

Here is a weapons decision where the president cannot claim support by the military or where his apologists cannot plead lack of outside advice. In this case, Carter needs no warnings about unilateral concessions under Soviet pressure from Scoop Jackson, Paul Nitze or Mel Laird. What they would say is duplicated by his trusted secretary of defense, who seems to be going unheeded.

Robert Martin was elected president of the Mental Health Area Board Association of Eastern North Carolina at a meeting of the group in Greenville.

The purpose of the Association is to support, encourage and share information among board members as well as to provide information affecting mental health and the delivery of such services to area boards, legislators and the public.

"The Association serves as an advocacy group for mental health, mental retardation and substance abuse services," said Martin.

Any area board member of a participating area mental health board within the Eastern Region Division of Mental Health-Mental Retardation Services may become an active member and all area directors of participating programs may be non-voting, ex officio members, according to Dr. Stephen Creech, Pitt County Area Director.

Ms. Leolia Dixon, Ms. Josephine Reeves and the Rev. James Bailey, in addition to Martin, represented the county area Mental Health Board at the meeting. Tony Sanders, Center Business Manager, assisted with arrangements.

Federal aid was involved. Without taking a local survey to determine actual prevailing wage rates, the Labor Department ordered the Dickson contractor to pay the Nashville union scale. A bulldozer operator, accustomed to $4.75 an hour, got $10.70. As a consequence, the new room cost $44,000, about double the projected cost.

This kind of thing goes on all the time. In its December draft report, the General Accounting Office said flatly that Davis-Bacon "is no longer needed and should be repealed." Workers have many protections today that they did not have in 1931. The act is administered haphazardly. In roughly one-half the cases, no local survey of actual wages is made. The GAO made a ballpark guess at the unnecessary added costs of Davis-Bacon: $715 million every year.

Even the New York Times, which ordinarily rings its chimes for any plausible waste of public funds, has joined in the cry for repeal of Davis-Bacon. Senator Orrin Hatch of Utah, a rising star in Republican leadership, has promised to introduce a bill toward that end.

If a repeal bill makes it to the floor, President Carter will have a problem on his hands. He could not support repeal without severing the last frail link that ties him to organized labor; but he could not defend the status quo without undermining his efforts toward austerity in public spending. The public interest says repeal. In the long haul, Mr. Carter's political interests say the same thing.

Nixon Invited To White House

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—Richard M. Nixon is going to the White House, for the first time since his resignation, to have dinner later this month with President Carter and China's Teng Hsiao-ping.

Nixon, whose 1972 outreach to China ended 22 years of estrangement between the two nations, was invited by Carter, who built on Nixon's initiative by establishing full diplomatic relations with Peking.

"He was invited and he has accepted," said Mary Hoyt, press secretary to first lady Rosalynn Carter. Nixon aides in California confirmed the acceptance. "It seemed the appropriate thing to do," a White House official said of the invitation. The official, who asked not to be named, said Nixon was invited "because of his role in opening up the process of normalization."

Nixon has not been in the Executive Mansion since he resigned under the blistering heat of Watergate Aug. 9, 1974.

Teng, China's vice premier, is scheduled to begin a week's tour of the United States Jan. 29 with a White House visit. The state dinner is that night.

Gerald Ford, who also made a presidential trip to China, was invited, too, but he expects to be out of the country on a trip to the Middle East that began Monday night.

It was not known whether Nixon will fly to Washington on a government plane. Mrs. Nixon will not come along.

Nixon has been in the capital only twice since he resigned. He was here briefly a year ago for Hubert Humphrey's funeral and again last month for a meeting of the Tuesday Group, a club of former White House co-workers.

Like all former presidents in recent years, Nixon has received periodic administration foreign policy reports. His major interest has been with China, a country he revisited in 1976 as a private citizen.

In 1972, after his dramatic first trip to China, Nixon toasted that nation's leaders and spoke of "the years ahead to build a bridge across 16,000 miles and 22 years of hostility which had divided us in the past."

He declared: "We have been here a week. This was the week that changed the world."

Teng is scheduled to visit Atlanta, Houston and Seattle after a three-day stay in Washington. He expects to be in the United States for a little over a week.

Horse Management Seminars Slated

The Greenville Saddle Club and the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service are sponsoring a series of Horse Management Seminars. The seminars will be held on Thursday nights from 7:30-9:30 p.m. for eight consecutive weeks beginning Thursday, Jan. 25. All seminars will be held at the Agricultural Extension office, 203 W. Third St., Greenville.

Topics, speakers and dates for the seminars are as follows:

All Cub Scout leaders are invited to attend the session.

Voting Day In Asheville

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP)—Voters in Asheville go to the polls today to decide on a liquor-by-the-drink referendum, and both sides say a large turnout will be the key to victory.

The city is the 12th area in North Carolina to hold a referendum since the General Assembly approved a local-option liquor-by-the-drink law last June. Nine have approved the measure, most recently Wake, Durham, Onslow and New Hanover counties.

Good weather today could bring as many as 55 percent of the city's 26,000 eligible voters to the polls, observers say. Both the proponents and opponents are providing rides to the polls.

The National Weather Service forecasts partly cloudy skies with temperatures in the 40s today with a 20 percent chance of precipitation.

Former Mayor Richard Wood Jr., a coordinator for the Asheville Citizens for Mixed Beverages, said he expects the election to be very close.

Vice Mayor Bill B. Horton, chairman of the Concerned Citizens for a Better Asheville, a group opposing the sale of mixed drinks, predicted victory by a large margin.

Horton said he believes the outcome of the liquor votes in other areas will not affect voters in Asheville.

"Asheville is a pretty independent-thinking community of people," he said. "We don't gauge our lifestyle by what others do."

Nearby Black Mountain turned down mixed drink sales in a referendum last fall. The other area to reject a liquor-by-the-drink referendum was Dare County.

Other areas that have approved mixed drink sales are Mecklenburg and Orange counties and Sanford, Southern Pines and Louisburg.

that they bought membership cards at the clubs and no waiting period was in effect.

Carr said if his clients get liquor-by-the-drink licenses, they will abide by the 30-day waiting period as long as it remains in effect.

"They'll have to do it. But we really don't think that's fair—hotels and restaurants don't have to abide by it," Carr said. "But until some judge decides its unconstitutional, they're stuck with it."

Gave Program On Services

Mrs. Sandra Jones, Reimbursement Officer at the Pitt County Mental Health Center, presented a program about Center services to the Book Exchange Club Thursday.

A slide presentation about the facility, staff and program areas was shared with the group.

The Book Exchange Club of Bethel plans to donate books to the Children's Services area of the Center.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market pulled back a bit today, encountering some selling pressure after the rally of the past 10 sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 3.90 to 844.77 in the first two hours today.

Losers held a 7-5 lead over gainers in the over-all tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the market's direction was set by sellers who decided to cash in on the rise in stock prices since the first of the year.

With eight advances in the first 10 sessions of 1979, the Dow showed a net gain of more than 45 points through Monday's close.

Brokers said the market also might have been unsettled by evidence of further credit-tightening by the Federal Reserve in recent days. Hopes for a let-up in the rise of interest rates have been cited as one factor in the market's recent strength.

Du Pont was down 2 1/2 at 141 1/2 in active trading. The stock soared 11 1/2 points Monday when the company announced plans for a 3-for-1 stock split, reported sharply higher fourth quarter earnings and raised its dividend.

McGraw-Hill rose 1 1/2 to 33 1/2. American Express said it would proceed with a $34-a-share offer for the company, despite McGraw-Hill's vehement opposition to the takeover bid.

The NYSE's composite index dropped 17 to 56.14. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .32 at 160.81.

Volume on the Big Board reached 14.38 million shares by noon, up from 11.70 million at the same point Monday.

Stored Here In Trucks

MARIJUANA HAUL — Drug authorities have reportedly stored in Pitt County an estimated 14 tons of marijuana that was seized Commissioners...

main "holdbacks" to any merger are, "philosophical differences that now exist," between the two school units, and the fact that the "city is under a mandate to bus for racial balance," while, "the county is not under such a mandate."

Commissioner Charles Gaskins commented, "a plan could answer these questions." He added that the Board of Commissioners are interested in making things better. "We wouldn't want it if it made things worse."

Commissioner Ed Warren then made the motion to have the two boards appoint a committee to develop a merger plan by October 1, and to pay for a consultant to work with the committee in developing a plan.

After expressing the thought that any plan for merger should include plans to meet the capital needs of the schools, the board adopted a resolution tying a $9 million bond issue for school capital improvement to the merger plan.

Commissioners, for more than two years, have suggested that the boards of education request a bond referendum in order to provide funds for school construction. The board has repeatedly told school officials that the county is not able to provide needed facilities on a pay-as-you-go basis through current appropriations.

Until recently, the school boards have been unable to agree on the amount of bond funds that would be needed.

Last week, after commissioners said they would ask school officials to meet with them to report on progress toward merger, and a bond vote, both the city and county boards agreed on the $9 million figure.

"Our request to you was draw up some plans for merger," Martin told the school representatives. "What we do we'd like to do together," he emphasized.

In other business yesterday, commissioners appropriated $5,750 for the purchase of two hydraulic bailers for use in paper recycling operations at the East Carolina Sheltered Workshop, and appropriated $4,800 for contractual services of a county engineer.

Charles Holliday, former city engineer for the City of Greenville, has been hired on a contractual basis 2 1/2 days per week to provide engineering services to the county.

Holliday retired from his city post December 31 after 23 years service. However, he was retained by the city as a consultant one day a week.

Commissioners also gave final approval for the issuing of $3.6 million in revenue bonds through the Pitt County Industrial Facilities and Pollution Control Financing Authority, for the McGraw-

Edison Co. to be used to fund a plant here.

McGraw-Edison announced last October the acquisition of a 55,083 square foot building just North of Greenville, and said production of nickel-cadmium storage batteries would be phased into production here gradually throughout 1979.

McGraw-Edison is a major producer of electrical products used in industrial power systems, and for commercial and consumer applications.

Nickel-cadmium storage batteries, according to the firm, are used as a standby power source for electric rapid transit cars.

McGraw-Edison also manufactures major appliances such as washers and dryers, as well as built-in kitchen appliances, microwave ovens, and portable appliances such as toasters, broilers, fans, heaters and a variety of power and garden tools.

The board yesterday also agreed to seek legislative authority to make appointments to the Pitt County ABC Board.

At present, appointments to the ABC Board are made jointly by Commissioners, the Board of Health, and the Pitt County Board of Education.

Commissioners are seeking the change because of the difficulty in obtaining a quorum to make the appointments.

County Manager Reginald Gray reported to the board that engineers are currently working on separating the proposed county-wide water system into three phases.

Gray said the county would be able to secure more grant money for the proposed project if the plan was divided into three phases.

Commissioners also approved the sale of surplus items, such as air conditioning units and typewriters, at the old Department of Social Services office building on Johnston Street, and approved the sale of the Johnston Street property, "at a convenient date."

Funeral Services For Entire Family

MIDWAY, N.C. (AP) — Funeral services were scheduled today for Gerald and Barbara Yokeley and their two children, who apparently were shot to death early Sunday morning by Mrs. Yokeley.

The four were found dead at the couple's home, Davidson County authorities said. Mrs. Yokeley apparently shot her husband and two children, daughter Michael, 5, and son Will, 3, before taking her own life.

The Rev. Harvey Koonts Jr., a family friend who married the couple and baptized their children, said he received a call from Mrs. Yokeley about 5 a.m. Sunday. He said when he picked up the phone and heard Mrs. Yokeley's voice, he knew something was wrong.

"She said, 'Rev. Harvey, this is Barbara.' She always identified herself when she called," Koonts said. "I said, 'Barbara, what in the world are you doing calling me at this hour?'"

"And she said, 'I've just shot and killed Gerald and little Will.' I said, 'Barbara, what are you talking about?'"

"She said, 'That's what I've done, and I'm going to kill Michael and myself,'" Koonts said. Koonts said when she hung up, he tried to call her back but got no answer. Koonts said he then called Yokeley's father, who lived across the road from his son, and the Davidson County Sheriff's Department.

Sheriff Paul McCrary said Mrs. Yokeley left a suicide note, but he declined to reveal the contents. He said no motive was given in the note and that his department has been unable to find any reason for the killings.

Friends and neighbors described the Yokeleys as a hard-working couple who worked to build a successful dairy farm. They were chosen by the Cooperatives Council of North Carolina last year as the outstanding young farm family.

Yokeley, 28, was a graduate of North Carolina State University. Mrs. Yokeley, 26, attended Campbell College and Wake Forest University.

Yokeley was an avid hunter and both he and his wife had instructed classes in gun-handling by the county Farm Bureau.

McCrary said the Yokeley family was shot with a gun from Yokeley's gun collection.

Susan Nobles, representing the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce, reported on actions that body has taken relative to proposed merger. She cited the interest of the chamber Chamber "in having something done about a plan for merger." At this time, Ms. Nobles stated, "the Chamber supports the idea of not having a public referendum on merger, however, I think they may reconsider their stand on the referendum after the development of the school boards committee plan."

She also asked the board if it would be willing to accept an invitation to appear before the Chamber to discuss the merger plan.

Approval on consolidating portions of the Greenville and Pitt County extended school programs to provide for a joint evening program at Agnes Fullilove School was given by members of the Greenville School Board at its Monday night meeting.

The concept, previously discussed, has now been approved by both school boards. With the way cleared for moving ahead, city program director Johannes Bleicher and county director Irene Hanniffer will prepare an outline for a specific program.

Consolidation, according to statements made by Bleicher and Hanniffer, will substantially extend opportunities for students in both systems in receiving financial assistance, job opportunities, and academic training.

Total budget for the two programs is $454,000 — with the county receiving $224,000 in federal assistance through CETA funds. Funding for the city program totals $230,300 — with $37,000 from local funds; $35,300 from federal funds; and $158,000 from state funds.

Hanniffer explained that strict controls are applied for students, who are youths in the age group 16-19. "There are three distinct components applicable to students," she reported. "A student must be financially disadvantaged and capable of holding a job, he or she must receive academic schooling and counseling, and are not allowed to enroll in the program unless they have a job."

Bleicher reported that the basic concepts of the city and county programs "are not different, the major difference is in the funding process required. For example, only 18 Greenville students are now involved in training at this time that is funded by CETA funds."

"In effect," he said, "the consolidation of programs offer a broader program for those in need of it whether they are from the city or county."

Board member Mrs. Nancy Middleton, citing what she feels "is quite a lot of funding for relatively few students," and saying "I feel we need to look carefully at local funds in view of heavy federal funding," abstained from voting on the motion.

Two budget amendments were approved. Amendment No. 1 to State Public School fund represents an addition of $478,076.17 to that fund. Mrs. Naomi Edwards, bookkeeper for the school, explained this does not represent "additional money." It is rather actual allocations from the state above projections made at budget time last year. She said future projections would be more in line with actual allocations following the first year the new system has been in effect.

The second budget amendment, Budget Amendment No. 5 to the Current Expense Fund, is for an increase of $6,071.33 for funds for a one-half period representing funds from East Carolina Carolina University for student teachers, plus funds for the autistic program.

In other action, the school board:

— Approved a reduction from 20 cents to 10 cents as the fee for reduced lunches. The reduction is mandated by state passage of a federally directed reduction.

— Approved blood collections from donors at Rose High School requested by Dick Carney, Administrator of Tar River Sub Center of Tidewater Regional Red Cross Blood Program. State legislation now permits blood donation from persons 17 or older without the consent of parents. Rose High principal Howard Hurt agreed to let the blood donor program be conducted at Rose.

— Approved the addition of names to the teacher substitute list.

— Heard a report from Superintendent Glenn Cox that the Department of Public Instruction has informed that the Greenville School system is one of five in the state to be chosen for a national survey of practices in relationships between teachers and parents in handicapped programs in the schools.

— Approved submission of the annual request for federal funds to reimburse the schools for students who are dependents of active military personnel and civilians working in federal agencies such as the Voice of America.

— Reviewed a number of proposed policy statements applicable to the missions, objectives and operation of the school board, and — Heard a report from Rose High Counselor Mrs. Rosalind Britt that reaction from students who failed the competency tests and reaction from their parents were "most encouraging." Mrs. Britt said without exception those who failed are determined to pass the tests in May, and that remedial work is being stepped up to give students all possible assistance.

Pace Wins 9th In Row

NEW BERN — Pace Academy won its ninth straight game last night, rallying in the final period to take a 61-47 win over St. Paul's.

Pace came up with a 31-12 scoring margin in the final period to pull out the victory. Fred Pollard led Pace with 27 points, while David Davenport had 20 and Crowell Pope had 10.

In the fifth and sixth grade game, St. Paul's downed Pace, 16-13. Lee Allen led Pace with six points.

Aycock Girls Are Defeated

E.B. Aycock Junior High School's girls bowed again yesterday, falling to Nash Central, 39-28.

Paula Evans led Nash with 18 points, while A. Beale added 14. Frances Barnhill led Aycock with eight points.

Aycock, now 0-4, plays host to Bertie on Thursday.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. — Delta Brogden, who became the killer against East Carolina last year when the Pirates traveled to meet Tennessee-Chattanooga, did it again last night.

The Moccasin guard came off the bench to pop in six straight shots in the first half to spark a pullaway, and the Mocs went on to record a 91-67 victory over the weary Pirates.

"I'll bet he doesn't score two points a game against everyone else," ECU Coach Larry Gillman said. "But against us, in Chattanooga, he goes wild."

The Pirates, who fell behind early, then put on their only point spurt of the night to take a 16-15 lead, fell behind again after that, and the hot-shooting Mocs steadily pulled away from the Bucs.

"What can you do against a team that shoots 71 per cent?" Gillman asked. The Moccasins poured in 20 of 28 shots in the first half to help spark a 49-35 edge at the half.

The Pirates, who shot 50 per cent in the first half, cooled off in the second and made only 12 of 32 shots while UT-C was again hot, hitting an even 50 per cent.

The Pirates were also knocked down on the boards, getting beaten, 46-34. Dan Moore led the Mocs with ten rebounds, while Darryl Yarbrough had nine.

"We didn't come out flat," Gillman said. "We played pretty good for the first ten minutes." But then, the Pirates, who had made a 12-hour bus trip Saturday night following their game with Virginia Commonwealth to get to Chattanooga, began to tire out.

(Herb) Krusen collected his third foul then, and we had to bench him, and then (Greg) Cornelius got his second, and this hurt us. We had a depth problem that we were not able to overcome."

Frank Hobson, a sometime starter for the Pirates, missed the game due to the death of his father on Friday, and Al Tyson did not make the trip. "I don't know what the story on Tyson is," Gillman said. "He wasn't there when we got ready to leave."

Despite this, Gillman felt the Pirates had the chance to get back into the game, but missed on several key layups. One of these turned into a six-point turnaround.

That came in the final minute of the first half, when the Pirates trailed by ten, and missed on a driving layup and a chance to cut the lead to eight.

Instead, the Mocs got the ball on the rebound, took it down court, and Moore hit on a jumper. While the ball was in the air, Kyle Powers was hit with a foul, sending Keith Parker to the line with a one-and-one, and he made both. That turned it around to a 47-33 lead, the biggest lead the Mocs enjoyed in the half.

"I still think we can play good basketball," Gillman said. "But I have to give Chattanooga credit. They were very aggressive, and I think Moore and (Norm) Anchrum had their best games of the year."

"I just hope we play better when we get back to Greenville."

After rallying from a 15-10 deficit to take a 16-15 lead, the Pirates fell behind again, as the Mocs scored eight in a row for a 23-16 margin.

And from there on out, it was a steady pullaway for the Mocs. East Carolina was unable to put two baskets together at any other time in the half, and got only as many as three points at one time.

In the second half, UTC came out and scored the first seven points, and after another Pirate basket, added six more for a 62-37 lead with 14:30 left.

Knights In

Fifth Win

Greenville Christian Academy had little trouble in putting together its fifth straight victory of the year last night, rolling past Goldsboro Christian, 67-35.

The Knights quickly jumped into the lead, taking a 16-a margin at the end of the first period. They continued to extend their lead, building the margin to 34-17 at halftime.

Greenville added to its lead the third period, running the margin to 52-31. They polished off Goldsboro, 15-4, in the first quarter.

Steve Tyburski led Greenville with 17 points, while Ben Hardock added 11, and Jeff Harrell and Marshall Crumpler each had ten. Brad Barfield Goldsboro with 16.

Now 5-0, the Knights play to Bethel Academy tonight to Butler Academy tonight.

The Greenville junior vars took a 33-24 win in its game.

Teams Same, Names Different

MIAMI (AP) — Different isn't necessarily better, as the Dallas Cowboys or the Pittsburgh Steelers will find out on Sunday in Super Bowl XIII.

The names of the teams here today and three years ago are the same, but half the names on the rosters of the National Football League's conference champions are different.

No one can say yet whether the Steelers, who won Super Bowl X, will be as strong with John Stallworth at wide receiver in place of Frank Lewis, with Steve Furness at right defensive tackle instead of Ernie Holmes, with Randy Grossman at tight end in place of Larry Brown, etc.

Nor can anyone say whether the Cowboys, beaten 21-17 in that title game, will have the edge this time with Tony Hill at wide receiver in place of Golden Richards, Tony Dorsett at running back instead of Preston Pearson, Bob Breunig at middle linebacker in place of Lee Roy Jordan, etc.

In all, the Cowboys and Steelers each have replaced 22 of the 45 men who collided in the Orange Bowl on Jan. 18, 1976.

"You have to be really lucky to be able to replace players when they retire or get injured with other players who can step in and do as good a job," said Coach Chuck Noll of the Steelers. "We've been lucky."

To wit: "Stallworth is a full-time receiver, while Lewis was only in on certain situations. Frank was faster, but John has the hands."

"Furness isn't as strong as Ernie Holmes was, but he's got the speed Ernie didn't have, so Steve is almost as intimidating in his own way."

"Randy Grossman is more of a pass-catching tight end than Larry Brown was. Larry (shifted to offensive tackle when Pittsburgh got Bennie Cunningham) was more of a pass-blocker."

Among the other Steelers changes are Mike Webster in place of Ray Mansfield at center, Ray Pinney for Gordon Gravelle at right tackle, Robin Cole in place of Andy Russell at linebacker and Craig Colquhoun as the punter instead of Bobby Walden.

Some of the other Cowboys who weren't on hand three years ago are Pat Donovan in place of Ralph Neely at left guard, Thomas Henderson in place of Dave Edwards at linebacker, Benny Barnes in place of Mark Washington at cornerback and Danny White as the punter instead of Mitch Hoopes. The Cowboys' other kicker, Rafael Septien, is also a newcomer, succeeding Toni Fritsch.

Dorsett, of course, is one of the showcase names — and Gil Brandt, the master builder of the Cowboys knows it. "It demoralizes you in a hurry to play against a man who makes 70-yard runs," said Dallas' personnel director. "Preston was a big-play man for us in passing situations, but Tony is a rare talent."

When Hill arrived on the Dallas scene, Richards was dealt away. He now plays for Chicago. "Richards was traded only because (Dallas Coach) Tom Landry didn't feel it was fair for a five-year starter to be benched for a slightly better man," Brandt said.

"Lee Roy had a great career with the Cowboys — but we've led the league in rushing defense the two years Bob Breunig has been a starter."

"Dave Edwards was probably past his peak. We replaced him with a Pro Bowl player who has superior speed, range and strength."

If there is any one spot on either team where a change is obvious, it is Pittsburgh's quarterbacking position, where Terry Bradshaw, long criticized for what many believed was uninspired leadership, has matured to be an almost awesome field general.

"He is the biggest difference in this club," said Noll. "He takes command out there now."

NFL Coaches Give Nod To Pittsburgh

MIAMI (AP) — Although they would not advise anyone to take their predictions to the bank — or the bookie — the consensus of National Football League coaches is that the Pittsburgh Steelers will dethrone the Dallas Cowboys in this week's Super Bowl.

A Miami News poll of 23 coaches yielded 17 votes for Pittsburgh and six for the Cowboys. The Super Bowl coaches didn't vote, embattled New England Coach Chuck Fairbanks wasn't available and the New York Giants and Oakland Raiders don't have coaches right now.

"The worst handicappers in the world are pro coaches," said Cleveland Browns Coach Sam Rutigliano. "The writers, people with a little knowledge, are the ones who can do that. We deal too much with the fact — and it's blinding."

"If you have any smarts, you'll bet the opposite of what I say," said Redskins Coach Jack Pardee.

Most predicted a close game but said quarterback Terry Bradshaw, enjoying his finest season, will make the difference.

"It hurts a little to pull for someone who's not from Texas," said Houston Oilers Coach Bum Phillips, whose team was devastated by the Steelers two weeks ago. "But Bradshaw's having a heck of a year and I think his scrambling around, throwing the ball to Lynn Swann, will be the difference."

"Pittsburgh will win. Right now Bradshaw's having such a super year and they've got the great defense," Buffalo Bills Coach Chuck Knox said. "I think it's going to be a close game, but I think Pittsburgh will be able to run the ball on Dallas."

"I'm going with Pittsburgh," said Red Miller, whose Denver Broncos lost to Dallas in last year's Super Bowl. "I think the emotion and the way Pittsburgh's been playing this year, coupled with the outstanding year that Bradshaw's been having, will be the difference."

Other coaches who predicted a Steeler victory were Los Angeles Rams Coach Ray Malavasi, Detroit Lions Coach Monte Clark, San Diego Chargers Coach Don Coryell, Jack Palera of the Seattle Seahawks, Miami Dolphins Coach Don Shula, Cincinnati Bengals Coach Homer Rice, Kansas City Chiefs Coach Marv Levy, San Francisco Coach Bill Walsh, Tampa Bay Coach John McKay, New York Jets Coach Walt Michaels, Rutigliano, Baltimore Colts Coach Ted Marchibroda, Atlanta Falcons Coach Leeman Bennett and Pardee.

The six coaches who predicted Dallas were Minnesota's Bud Grant, Green Bay's Bart Starr, Bud Wilkinson of St. Louis, Neill Armstrong of Chicago, Dick Nolan of New Orleans and Dick Vermeil of Philadelphia.

Cavs Take Delaware

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Coach Terry Holland says he doesn't really feel Virginia's Cavaliers, in the last tuneup before Wednesday night's basketball battle with Virginia Tech, "played well defensively, but we got a good effort from everybody."

That effort was enough to give the Cavaliers, 94, a 99-81 triumph Monday night over Delaware. Virginia will take a three-game winning streak into Wednesday night's Richmond encounter with the Gobblers.

Sophomores Lee Raker and Jeff Lamp were the big guns as usual in the Virginia triumph, in which Holland said "I thought we played well offensively."

Raker, hitting 12 of 20 floor shots, scored 20 of his 28 points in the first half as the Cavaliers built a 55-38 lead. Lamp, who hit 12 of 17 and also had five assists, scored 16 of his points after intermission.

Garland Jefferson came off the bench to score 15 points for the Cavaliers, who shot 64 percent against Delaware's zone defense in the first half and 63.9 percent for the game. Peter Mullenberg had 19 points for Delaware, which fell to 2-10.

Stetson Halts Furman Win Streak At Eleven

By The Associated Press

A 91-85 loss to Stetson Monday night halted Furman's 11-game winning streak and gave the Paladins their second loss of the season.

And Furman will be on the line again Saturday when it meets The Citadel, which is only a half a game behind in Southern Conference play after breezing by Western Carolina 78-54 Monday night.

In other games involving Southern Conference teams Monday, Appalachian State beat South Carolina-Spartanburg 71-64, Tennessee-Chattanooga waltzed by East Carolina 91-67, Marshall handed Davidson its 11th straight defeat 85-74 and East Tennessee State upset South Carolina 72-68.

In the Stetson-Furman game, sophomore forward Wilbur Montgomery netted 23 points and a game-high 11 rebounds. Forward Greg Guye and guard Dirk Ewing each had 19.

The Paladins, 12-2, got their best scoring from forward Al Daniel with 24 points and center Jonathan Moore with 20. Each also had eight rebounds.

Stetson took a 10-point lead to the locker room at the half and fought off two Furman threats in the second half. The Paladins got within three with 6:30 to go, but that was as close as they came.

The Citadel played host to Western Carolina's Catamounts, but they weren't very gracious about it. The Bulldogs, now 3-0 in the conference and 9-2 overall, built up a 22-point lead at halftime. Western Carolina fell to 1-2 in the league and 6-6 overall.

Leading scorer was Tom Slawson with 17. Raymond Person topped the Catamounts with 16.

In Boone, N.C., Appalachian

State overcame a 10-point halftime deficit with the help of Renaldo Lawrence's scoring and Mel Hubbard's rebounding. Lawrence got 24 points and Hubbard grabbed 15 rebounds in the victory over S. Carolina-Spartanburg. High scorer for Spartanburg was Oscar Mooney with 19.

Appalachian stands 10-4 for the season and 4-2 in the conference, while the Rifles dropped to 5-0 for the season.

Tennessee-Chattanooga did the choo-choo over visiting East Carolina as Norm Anchrum scored 21 points. The Mocs, now 8-4 overall, also got 17 points and 10 rebounds from Dan Moore.

High scorer for East Carolina, 6-8, was Oliver Mack with 13. He also grabbed seven rebounds.

The Mocs shot 60 percent from the field compared to East Carolina's 42 percent.

The victory over Davidson snapped Marshall's five-game losing streak. Davidson coach Eddie Biedenbach said that when star John Gerdy fouled out with 8:02 remaining, it killed the team's chances for a win.

Marshall, 6-9 for the year and 1-3 in the league, got 54 points from George Washington and Bunny Gibson combined. Washington, a freshman, got 29 of them.

Jamie Hall led Davidson with 24 points. Gerdy scored 20, or almost seven points below his season scoring average.

In Columbia, S.C., East Tennessee brought independent South Carolina some bad news — another loss.

It was the fourth straight victory for the Buccaneers, who lifted their record to 9-7. The Gamecocks fell to 7-5.

Elect Officers

The Brook Valley Ladies Golf Association held its first meeting of the year recently to elect new officers.

Lida Hayes Freuler was chosen president by the group, while Janet McGlohon was elected vice president and Martha Alcorn secretary.

Lottie King was voted treasurer, while Ann Meeks was chosen Ladies' Day chairman and Dorothy Woolees and Dee Riddett publicity chairmen.

All members and prospective members are invited to attend the group's next luncheon meeting, Feb. 1 at the club, beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Carew Talks With Angels

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — After snubbing San Francisco, Rod Carew and his agent are negotiating with the California Angels this week. But the ever-present New York Yankees are still waiting their turn to court the seven-time batting champion.

"The Twins and the Giants agreed on everything, but Rod didn't want to go to San Francisco," said Carew's agent, Jerry Simon.

San Francisco withdrew its offer to the Twins when Carew didn't give them an answer by Monday. But Giants owner Bob Lurie left the door open.

"I haven't given up hopes totally and we may ask Calvin Griffith for another chance to talk with him," Lurie said Monday night.

On Sunday, Carew insisted he hadn't ruled out signing with the Giants but he also said he preferred to stay in the American League, where he is familiar with the pitchers and the stadiums.

A trade to an American League team could be made any time, whereas the Twins couldn't swap the 33-year-old Carew to a National League club until Feb. 15 when the inter-league trading period opens.

Carew could not be reached at his suburban Minneapolis home Monday night, but his wife, Martlynn, said: "Nothing has changed. He's still thinking."

When asked if he knew the Giants had withdrawn their offer, Carew's wife said, "Oh, yes."

The Angels have five days left to talk with Carew. California General Manager Buzzie Bavasi is reportedly ready to offer Carew $4million over five years, but the Twins say they haven't received a reasonable offer from the Angels yet.

Minnesota said any trade must include outfielder Ken Landreaux. Other names being mentioned are pitcher Paul Hartzell and infielders Richard Thon and Dave Chalk.

New York has permission to talk with Carew beginning Saturday if no deal with California can be worked out.

New York reportedly will offer Minnesota first baseman Chris Chambliss, second baseman Brian Doyle, outfielder Juan Beniquez and cash.

The Twins feel those three players from the World Champion Yankees could make them a contender. They also believe Carew, who has longed to play in the World Series, would also be happy in New York.

Carew also said Sunday he has no objections to going to New York if a contract agreement can be reached. Money would probably not be a problem for the Yankees, however.

Hall of Fame manager Joe McCarthy never played big league baseball.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle:

CRYPTOQUIP

1-16

LKVIOR-VI SKH BKRL TBO HSBDDZ-
DFA HK HOOF-TAOWL

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — OUR INDIAN BRAVES USE NO BRAVADO.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: R equals D

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, JAN. 17, 1979

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You could be too tied down to do a satisfactory performance on a new project, so make sure you don't become involved in new interests. Impress others with your talents.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You have promised to handle some important matters for others, so make sure you don't disappoint them. Be logical.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Once your work is done today, engage in recreational activities that you enjoy. Think more optimistically about the future.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) The situation at home now is not as you would like it, so take steps to establish more harmony there. Make a fine impression on others.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Dig up all the information you can that will make life easier in your regular routines. Strive for happiness.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Get right estimates for any repair work you have to do and don't be taken in by some possible profiteer. Attend the social tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Give added attention to personal affairs so you can have greater success in that realm of your activities. Improve your appearance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Handle all those accumulated duties and get them out of the way for more important things ahead. Show devotion to mate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) If you are not sure about your personal aims, sit down and clarify them. A friend can assist you to gain some aim in the evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You have been concentrating on inside matters too much of late so focus your attention on outside affairs today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You want to engage in new projects now, but it is better to study them thoroughly first. Take needed health treatments.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) If you use modern methods, you can perform your duties more efficiently. Make better arrangements for the future.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Talk over with associates whatever new ideas you have and cement better relations with them. Take more interest in community affairs.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will do very well at whatever has to do with communications, writing, handling written material, etc. Give a good education to make the most of these potentials, and then there could be fame in this chart.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Junior Crafts Sessions Set

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will begin a new session of junior crafts for 10-14 year olds beginning Wednesday, Jan. 17.

The class will meet from 7-9 p.m. in the Recreation and Parks Administrative Building, Cedar Lane.

The session will last for seven weeks, with a cost of $7 per person. Crafts will include simple weaving, popsicle stick items and many others. Interested persons are urged to attend the first class session to register for the course.

For more information, call 752-4137, extension 263.

East was marked with the ace of diamonds, and that offered declarer the opportunity for a loser-on-loser play which would guarantee the contract. But first, the spade suit had to be eliminated from his hand.

Declarer cashed the ace of spades and ruffed a spade high. He drew trumps in two rounds and ruffed another spade, setting the stage for the throw-in.

The jack of diamonds was led from dummy, and when East produced the ace, declarer did not ruff. Instead, he discarded a club.

East was now on lead with a choice of losing. Alternatives. If he returned a club, it would be into dummy's ace-queen, and declarer would not lose a club trick. If he led a spade, declarer would stuff his remaining club loser while ruffing in dummy. Either way, the contract was safe.

Most bridge instructors don't go far enough in their lesson courses. They teach their students how to take a finesse. Equally important, but not given equal time, is impressing on them how to avoid a finesse. Consider this hand.

North had a difficult first response. The hand was too strong for a jump to four hearts, and a raise to three hearts would not give partner any idea of his distributional strength. So North compromised by temporizing with two clubs, then jumped in hearts at his next turn. South, who had the minimum allowed by the law, passed with alacrity.

West led the king of diamonds and, in response to his partner's signal, continued with the queen and nine. Declarer ruffed the third round and paused to take stock. It seemed that the fate of the contract hinged on the club finesse. However, declarer realized from the play to the first three tricks that this 50-50 proposition was quite unnecessary.

S&L Leaders Cool To Proposed Checking Plan

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Legislation that would allow savings and loan association customers to write "checks" on their savings accounts has been proposed by the state savings and loan administrator.

But state S&L leaders said they were not enthusiastic about the proposal.

William L. Cole, the administrator, said the accounts would be called negotiable order of withdrawal, or NOW, accounts. Ten other states allow such accounts, he said.

The NOW plan is the other side of the coin that came up last year when banks were given authority to offer a plan that amounts to letting customers have interest-bearing checking accounts.

To counteract the banking plan, the federal government proposed to allow S&Ls to offer plans that are similar to NOW accounts but that have limitations on how the checks could be used. The federal plan has not gone into effect.

Cole's proposal would apply only to the 156 state-chartered S&Ls, which are state regulated. Another 44 S&Ls in the state are regulated by the federal government.

Cole has recommended to Gov. Jim Hunt that the NOW proposal be submitted to the General Assembly for approval.

Asked if the NOW accounts would bear interest, Cole said that would have to be determined later but added that nothing in his proposal prevents interest being paid.

One S&L president, Ralph H. Hodges Jr. of Seaboard Savings and Loan Association in Washington, said the accounts would force S&Ls to operate as banks. He said the proposal would force costly new personnel and bookkeeping requirements on the S&Ls.

"The really big boys have the staffing and expertise to go into what amounts to the checking business," Hodges said. "The small S&Ls are going to find it difficult."

Hodges is also chairman of the N.C. Savings and Loan League.

F. Guy Walker, president of Raleigh Federal Savings and Loan Association, said NOW accounts would blur the distinction between banks and S&Ls, reducing the associations' role as home mortgage lenders. But Walker said he viewed their introduction as inevitable because of support for NOW accounts at the national level.

On the bankers' side, Harry Gaton, executive director of the N.C. Bankers Association, said that any NOW proposal should be accompanied by changes to eliminate the competitive advantage S&Ls have in interest rates. Under federal law, the savings associations are allowed to offer 1/4 percent higher interest on savings accounts than banks are.

Medicaid Pact Sees One Bid

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Department of Administration officials say they have received only one bid for North Carolina's lucrative Medicaid contract.

Two companies, each of which holds a separate part of the contract now, filed a joint bid to handle the state's $365 million-a-year program.

The contract is worth an estimated $20 million to the winning bidder, officials said.

The officials had expected nine companies to bid for the work, but when bidding ended Monday, officials had only one joint bid from Electronic Data Systems Federal Corp. of Texas and The Computer Company of Richmond.

Under the four-year contract's terms, the winning bidder will be responsible for processing Medicaid claims forms from doctors, hospitals, pharmacies and others who provide health care to Medicaid patients.

The Medicaid program uses federal, state and local money to pay for some health care costs of low-income people. It has been estimated that more than 10,000 claims are processed daily in North Carolina.

Jack Savage, assistant contractual services administrator for the Administration Department said the state received notice from some companies that they were not going to bid. "We will be contacting those companies to ascertain why they did not offer a proposal," Savage said.

Currently, three companies handled Medicaid claims processing for the state. Electronic

Simpson Seeks Sum For HUD

SIMPSON — The Town of Simpson, has submitted a pre-application to the Department of Housing and Urban Development for a single purpose grant totaling $251,000 from Community Development funds, according to John Crew, Community Development Director in Simpson.

Crew pointed out that the proposed funds, if granted by HUD, will go toward housing rehabilitation, demolition and relocation. He noted that several towns in the state, as well as in the nation, will be making pre-applications for funding. The deadline for submitting pre-applications is Jan. 22.

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer
BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Forces loyal to the ousted Cambodian government recaptured Kompong Som, the country's only deepwater port, informed sources reported today. But they said Vietnamese warplanes flew the heaviest strikes of the three-week-old war, and it was not known who held the port now.

Thai intelligence officials and other reliable sources said Kompong Som, 135 miles southeast of Phnom Penh, was retaken Monday after stiff fighting. Then the Vietnamese air force went into action, and the situation today was unclear, the sources said.

The sources also reported naval fighting around several islands in the Kompong Som area and a Vietnamese attack on the largest of them, Kong Island, where holdouts from the former government were reported setting up a base for guerrilla resistance.

It was not known whether the Vietnamese and their Cambodian rebel allies seized Kong Island or others in the area.

Western sources in Bangkok said earlier that the Cambodian gulfboat navy was helping remnants of the ousted government establish a headquarters or supply base on the southwest islands and that some of the 20,000 Chinese advisers and technicians who had been reported advising the old regime were in the area.

Officials of the former government have also been reported taking refuge in the Cardamom and Elephant mountains of southwest Cambodia to carry on guerrilla resistance to the new pro-Vietnamese government which took over Phnom Penh on Jan. 7.

A radio station believed to be in China went on the air today to speak for the ousted government. Calling itself the Voice of Democratic Kampuchea (Cambodia), it broadcast on the same frequency as Radio Peking's Cambodian-language station, and its broadcasts were very similar in style to those from Phnom Penh before the Vietnamese victory.

Troops loyal to the ousted government were reported still fighting to retain control of a provincial capital in northwest Cambodia and harassing the Vietnamese invaders and their Cambodian allies at numerous other scattered points.

Western sources said Pursat, 100 miles northwest of Phnom Penh on the main highway to the Thai border, had not fallen to the Vietnamese invaders and the rebel Cambodian movement Hanoi sponsored.

Fighting was also reported continuing around Battambang, northwest Cambodia's chief city, near Sisophon, 30 miles east of the Thai border; at Nimit, 13 miles from the frontier, and around Kompong Som, the country's only deep-water port.

Informed Western sources said Svay Rieng Province on the Vietnamese border and parts of northeastern Cambodia, the areas of the first Vietnamese penetration on Christmas Day, were still not secured for the new government.

Military analysts in Bangkok said Cambodian army holdouts were fighting a "beehive" guerrilla war — scattering under Vietnamese pressure, regrouping and then counter-attacking. Few soldiers were reported fleeing across the Thai border, and the analysts said they were beginning to believe the former government's claim that it would "fight to the end."

They said the Vietnamese army's three-week, 300-mile drive across Cambodia was so rapid that a number of its tanks got too far ahead of the infantry, and the Cambodian army destroyed them.

Western sources said the Cambodian gulfboat navy was helping the ousted government establish a headquarters or supply base on islands off the southwest coast and some of the 20,000 Chinese officers and technicians who had been reported advising the regime were reported in the area.

Officials of the former government have been reported taking refuge on the island of Kong, in the Gulf of Thailand, and in the Cardamom and Elephant mountains of southwest Cambodia to carry on guerrilla resistance to the new pro-Vietnamese government which took over Phnom Penh on Jan. 7.

The ousted regime suffered an expected defeat Monday at U.N. headquarters in New York when the Soviet Union vetoed a Security Council resolution denouncing the Vietnamese invasion.

The vote was 13-2, with the Soviets and Czechoslovakia opposing the resolution. Soviet Ambassador Oleg A. Troyanovsky claimed the former government "collapsed under the force of a true people's uprising" and not by the efforts of the Vietnamese. He said the more China defended the ousted government, "the more it associated itself with (the regime's) crimes and barbarism."

Pregnancy Effects Confirmed

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer
HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — New evidence indicates the negative effects of smoking continue even if women quit before pregnancy, says a major new study.

Data released Monday for the U.S. Collaborative Perinatal Project, which examined more than 50,000 pregnancies at 12 hospital centers, confirmed previous studies showing smoking during pregnancy increases disorders that kill the unborn and the newborn.

But Dr. Richard L. Naeye of Pennsylvania State University told the American Heart Association's annual science writers' forum said he was particularly disturbed by the first data to indicate past smoking had an effect on later pregnancy.

He said placenta praevia and the presence of abnormally large areas of dead tissue on the placenta were more common for smoking mothers and were related to past smoking, measured as cigarettes per year over a period of time.

Placenta praevia is a condition in which the placenta is attached abnormally low in the womb, leading to dangerous complications during labor and birth.

Naeye said no one knows how long the effects of smoking continue after a woman quits, but he advised women contemplating pregnancy to give up smoking as early as possible before conception.

Previous studies linked sudden infant death syndrome — also called crib death — to smoking during pregnancy. But Naeye said this study is the first to show smoking as an independent risk factor of the condition, a problem of unknown origin which kills one of every 400 children born in the United States.

While smoking is not the greatest risk factor in crib death — premature birth and respiratory and prenatal infection are others — it alone increases the risk of crib death by 52 percent, Naeye said.

Among the adverse effects that the study confirmed increase because of smoking during pregnancy are spontaneous abortions, stillbirths, and premature births.

Bureau Hunts Census-Takers

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Job orders have been sent out to the state's Employment Security Commission. And, said Dennis VanLangen, the census coordinator at the bureau's Charlotte office, there are going to be several hundred openings in the state.

VanLangen added that the usual political patronage will not play a part in the hiring process.

The bureau is looking for people to comb the state's cities and countryside to assemble a list of current addresses that will be used in mailing out census questionnaires next year.

The pay comes out to about $3.60 an hour. The census takers must use their own cars, for which they will be reimbursed 17 cents a mile.

VanLangen said the takers must be at least 18 years old and have either a high school diploma or an equivalent amount of work experience. They will also have to take a written qualifying test, to be given next month.

Counting noses will make some money for several hundred people in the state with the 1980 census just a year away.

And to talk to Lois Jenny, the census takers can count on taking home some memories as well as some money.

Take the time Mrs. Jenny stumbled onto a moonshine still in rural Wake County while taking the 1970 census. Or the time she interviewed the "caretaker" at what she later learned was a gambling house.

Fortunately, she said, folks weren't too upset about her discoveries. "People in general have a very good feeling for the census bureau," said Mrs. Jenny, who is now a Raleigh real estate broker.

They didn't even mind that she's a Yankee. "They said, 'That's all right, as long as you aren't a reverend,'" she said.

With the next 10-year nose count only a year away, the U.S. Department of Commerce's Bureau of the Census is looking for a new crew of census takers, whom the department calls "enumerators."

Probe Attempt Store Break-In

Pitt County deputies are investigating an attempted breaking and entering that was discovered early Monday morning at a rural store.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that glass in a window at Amie's General Store, located at Helen's Crossroads, was broken in the apparent break-in attempt but entrance to the store was not gained.

The sheriff said that damage to the business was estimated at $20.

The incident was reported at 6:45 a.m., he added.
