In Event Of Attempted Ouster By Khomeini

Bakhtiar Warns Of Possible Army Coup

KHOMEINI RULES OUT MEETING — Surrounded by French gendarmes, journalists, and followers, the Ayatullah Ruhollah Khomeini, center, arrives for prayers in Neauphle-Le-Chateau, near Paris, Friday. Earlier in an interview on French television, the ayatullah declared that he does not intend to meet with Jalal Tehrani, head of the Regency Council in Iran. By RAYMOND WILKINSON

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Premier Shahpour Bakhtiar warned Saturday the army might stage a coup in Iran if exiled Moslem leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini tries to oust him. Tehran newspapers said former U.S. Attorney General Ramsey Clark would urge President Carter to drop support of Bahktiar.

Clark, attorney general under the late President Lyndon B. Johnson, met with opposition groups in Tehran and was to go on to Paris to see Khomeini, the shah's archenemy who led the revolt against the monarchy from exile.

Tehran newspapers quoted Clark as saying he would call on Carter to withdraw support from the Bakhtiar government — appointed by the shah before his departure — and establish contacts with Khomeini.

In Washington, the State Department issued a stern statement saying Clark had no official standing with the Carter administration and that his travels to Tehran and Paris and meetings with opposition groups were purely private on his own behalf and not on behalf of Carter or the U.S. government.

Carter on Wednesday appealed to Khomeini to give the Bakhtiar government a chance to succeed. However, the bearded, 78-year-old leader of Iran's Shiite Moslems rejected Carter's appeal and insisted the Bakhtair government was "illegal" since it was appointed by the shah before he fled Iran.

Khomeini, speaking from his Paris exile, said Saturday he would return to Iran "very soon" to establish an Islamic Republic.

The Iranian newspapers quoted Clark Saturday as saying he would take three recommendations back to Carter after his talks in Tehran and his expected meeting with Khomeini.

Clark said he would urge withdrawal of support from the Bakhtiar government because of its weak internal position, pressure on the army to take a "more moderate line" and an effort to establish official contacts with Khomeini.

Renewed fighting in the provinces between supporters and opponents of the ousted Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi killed 15 people Friday in anti-government demonstrations across Iran.

Since the monarch left the country Tuesday, probably for permanent exile in the United States, more than 60 people have died in scattered clashes.

The embattled Bakhtiar government also announced an additional 185 political prisoners were being released this weekend as part of a program to free all of several thousand political detainees.

--More Winter Weather--

By United Press International

Mountains of snow that clogged the Midwest since the Blizzard of '79 struck a week ago glistened under a fresh layer of ice Saturday and forecasters predicted new snow for the nation's blizzardbattered breadbasket.

Thunderstorms swept the South, spawning at least one tornado and raising the threat of flooding in some areas.

An ice storm slinking across the Midwest has been blamed for at least 10 deaths in auto and plane crashes. The Blizzard of '79 claimed 98 lives. Another potent storm is brewing. And winter is not quite a month old.

Chicago — buried under a record snowcover that has neared the three-foot mark — was bracing for another major storm Friday following a warning from the National Weather Service that "conditions are forming right now for another big storm over the weekend."

Ice and snow hit the Midwest Friday and early Saturday, glazing roads and halting travel, then pushed east to plague portions of Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina.

The ice storms in the Midwest left highways in worse condition than the heavy snows. Layers of ice downed power lines and caused scattered blackouts.

Snow and freezing rain also spread over portions of New England, buried in record snows earlier this week by the remnants of the Blizzard of '79.

Sentenced

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Convicted heroin smuggler Leslie "Ike" Atkinson was sentenced on Friday to 12 to 20 years in prison by a Superior Court judge who followed the recommendations of prosecutors.

The 53-year-old Atkinson is already serving a 44-year sentence in federal prison. His latest conviction was on two counts of conspiracy to distribute heroin.

Essell and Dallas Atkinson, two of Atkinson's brothers, were handed terms of seven to 10 years in prison.

A nephew, Phillip Wade Atkinson, received two to four years and two other nephews, Larry Drake Atkinson and Jimmy Atkinson, were each given two-year sentences.

Michael Otis Arrington, 27, Atkinson's son-in-law, pleaded guilty Friday to felonious conspiracy to possess heroin with intent to distribute. He was sentenced to 18 months in prison, to run concurrently with the 15-year sentence he is now serving on federal drug charges.

Ice And Fog Plagues North Carolina

By The Associated Press

Tree limbs glazed with a sheen of ice bowed in mute testimony to the second major winter storm to hit North Carolina in less than two weeks, and a flash flood watch in the mountains was in effect Saturday night.

Fog covered the state from the coastal plain through the Piedmont area as daytime temperatures combined with the moisture that made driving hazardous around much of the state.

In the Asheville area, as the Highway Patrol reported more than 100 accidents in a 12-hour period ending Saturday.

Power outages were reported around the state due to power lines snapping under the weight of ice. The areas affected included Charlotte, Greensboro, Rutherfordton, Lenoir and North Wilkesboro.

In the northwest corner of the state, the temperature was on the rise in the Boone area where the mercury touched 37 degrees by 5 p.m.

A warm front was slowly moving inland over North Carolina, pushing temperatures upward and prompting the widespread fog. Highs in the central part of North Carolina were expected to reach the low and mid 50s on Sunday.

The precipitation was forecast to end from west to east across the state Sunday after a cold front moved through. Skies were expected to partially clear in the west as North Carolinians get a taste of windy and colder conditions.

Temperatures along the coast rose into the low and mid 60s by late Saturday afternoon. Over the coastal plain and the Piedmont area, temperatures Saturday rose slowly into the 40s.

The ice storm was not as severe as the chilly, wet blast that swept the state Jan. 12. The freezing rain that fell over much of western and central North Carolina late Friday and Friday night ended for the most part Saturday morning.

Rainfall amounts since Friday have ranged from one and one-half to two and one-half inches in the west to less than one-tenth inch along the coast.

Likely To Feel Recession

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina will likely feel the effects of a national recession near the end of this year, a North Carolina State University economist told legislators Friday.

Economics professor John Lapp said latest indications are that a recession will come later than state budget analysts originally predicted and may last through 1980.

But Lapp, appearing before the Senate Committee on the Economy, told legislators the recession is not necessarily bad for the state. It may be needed, he said, to stop inflation.

"We will never slow down inflation unless we experience periods of less than strong growth," he said.

Lapp qualified his recession prediction by noting that it could come sooner, perhaps as early as this summer.

Timing of the anticipated recession is crucial to legislative budgetmakers, who want to provide a small tax cut next year but fear a full recession during the 1979-80 fiscal year could make that difficult.

But Lapp said even with a recession, personal income will continue to rise in North Carolina and the growth rate of state tax collections will be "certainly be in excess of 10 percent."

Marvin Dorman, assistant state budget officer, said in an interview that the growth rate discussed by Lapp would be good news for taxpayers. "A rebate comes after the 9 percent," he said, referring to Hunt's proposal for next year's budget.

Lapp said he expects North Carolina to suffer a recession at the same time the entire nation does. Unemployment is not likely to be as severe a problem in North Carolina as in the rest of the country, he said. The North Carolina jobless rate, he said, will be "well below the national rate."

Lapp warned legislators not to expect immediate benefits from following the president's anti-inflation guidelines.

"We cannot expect the economy, after a decade of inflation, to turn around overnight," he said.

Dorman said Hunt's budget proposal was based on projections last October and November, when a recession was expected to come this spring or summer. Dorman said earlier this week that the changing economic picture, with a likely delay in the business slowdown,

$200,000 CETA Grant To Improve Parks And Recreation Facilities

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

"These are a lot of projects we'll be able to do and it won't cost the city a penny. That's why we're so tickled about it," Greenville Parks and Recreation Department director Boyd Lee said Friday of a $200,000 grant the city has received under a Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) program.

"It's the same thing as the WPA (Works Progress Administration) program back in the 1930s," Lee explained. It's purpose, Lee said, "is to put 20 youths between 16 and 23 to work in a conservation setting."

Under the program, the CETA workers will handle long-term projects such as building parks and constructing facilities within parks (such as developing the recreation area North of the Tar River); have special rainy-day projects (doing renovation work at Guy Smith Stadium, for example); and conduct daily maintenance operations (painting gyms, erecting fences, cleaning up).

Lee termed the $200,000 grant for the first quarter of 1979 (January 1-March 31), "start up money." If things are going well, and officials are satisfied with the progress, Lee said the city will apply for a continuation grant to finance activities from March to September, "then hopefully, for an additional year," for a total of 21 months under the program.

The Parks and Recreation director noted that a project director, three foremen, and a counselor will be hired under the grant to direct activities of the youth.

The project director will receive an annual salary of about $12,000, while the foremen will receive about $10,000 per

Extra Funds For Pitt Expected

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

If items in the proposed State budget are approved by the North Carolina General Assembly, facilities in Pitt County stand to receive about $13 million during the next biennium, over and above their normal operating budgets.

Rep. Horton Rountree, speaker pro-tem of the House, outlined what agencies in the two counties could be expected to receive.

In Pitt, according to the lawmaker, East Carolina University would receive, "in excess of $5 million," for the School of Medicine, to expand student enrollment to 40.

He said too, that the university would receive $1.1 million for renovation and new construction at the Wahl-Coates building. Some $1.8 million has already been earmarked for the project, Rountree explained.

In addition to the $3.8 million already appropriated for construction of a new bed tower at Pitt Memorial Hospital, as part of the ECU medical school program, an additional $1.4 million would be added if the proposed budget is not changed.

Rountree added that about $33,000 is included in the proposed budget to fund energy conservation renovations at the Walter B. Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center.

Other big items in the proposed budget, according to Rountree, include $22 million for the School of Veterinary Medicine at N.C. State University, $7 million for the North Carolina State Zoo, and $3 million for the state math-science school.

The legislator noted that there has also been a bill introduced to establish a high school for the deaf in Wilson.

Officials, according to Rountree, are, "working on revisions to the medical science building" for the medical school at ECU to "see if they can get that in line."

Bids for construction of the facility, to be located near Pitt Memorial Hospital, were received in December and were some 18 per cent over the $25 million budget.

If negotiations to reduce the cost of the building are unsuccessful, and if the General Assembly appropriated additional funds, the project would have to be re-bid. Action by the Legislature would come after the deadline for accepting the current bids, Rountree suggested.

Local Firm Proposes Conversion To Federal Stock Association

C. B. Tugwell, president of First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Pitt County, reported that the board of directors unanimously adopted a proposed Plan of Conversion to convert the firm from a mutual association to a federal stock association.

Tugwell said that, "It is the desire of the association's board of directors to attract new capital to the association to increase its net worth, to increase the availability of funds for residential lending purposes and to provide greater resources for purposes of branching and the expansion of customer services."

The official reported that the proposed conversion will be accomplished under regulations promulgated by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board authorizing federally-insured savings and loan association to convert from mutual to stock form.

According to Tugwell, the conversion of First Federal is subject to the approval of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board in Washington, D.C.

The conversion, he added, is also subject to approval by a majority of the votes eligible to be cast by association members at a special meeting, at which the proposed conversion plan will be submitted for their approval. A proxy statement giving the full details of the Plan of Conversion will be sent to association members prior to the special meeting, Tugwell said.

The spokesman said that the normal business of First Federal in accepting savings and making mortgage loans will continue without interruption and that the firm, after conversion, will continue to offer its customer services to savings members, borrowers and the general public from the association's existing offices.

Tugwell further stated that no change will be made in the association's current policies, management or in the status of any savings account or certificate of deposit as a result of the conversion.

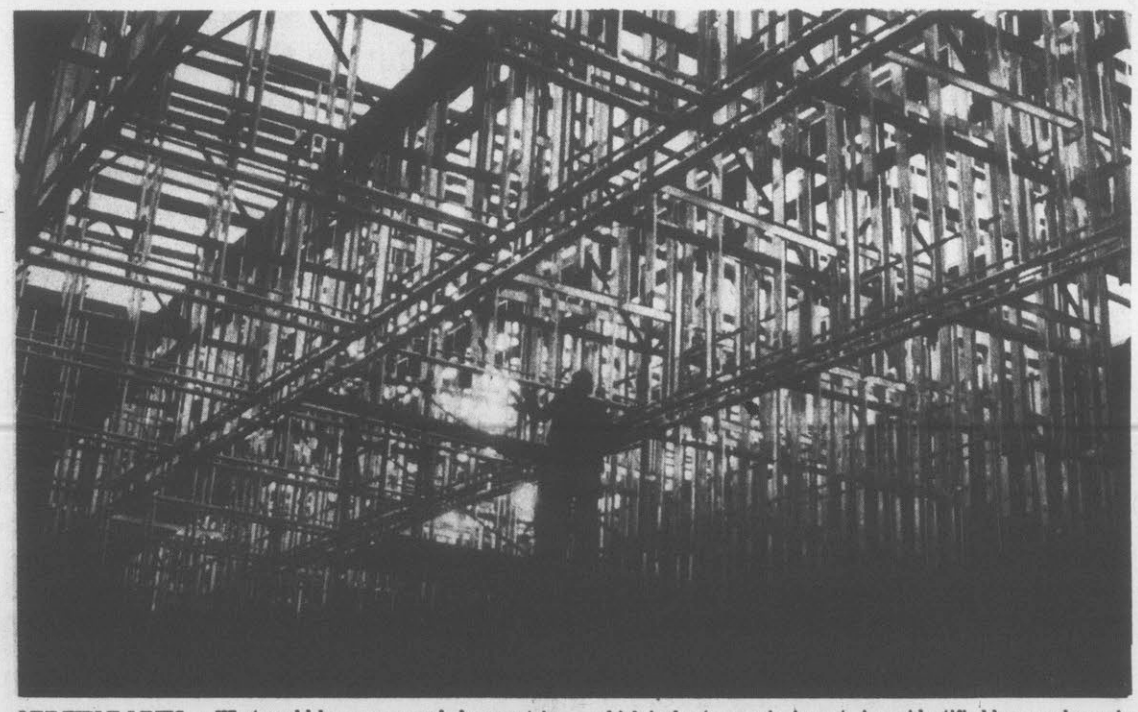

Savings accounts will continue to be insured by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. after the conversion, he said, noting that in addition, borrowers' loans will be unaffected by the conversion. The contractual terms of such loans will remain the same as they existed prior to the conversion, he explained.

Tugwell mentioned that members having deposits in First Federal as of Sept. 30, 1978 and other members will be issued non-transferable subscription rights to purchase capital stock in the converted association under the Plan of Conversion. The value of the stock offering and the number of shares to be issued will be determined by an independent appraisal of the association as required under the conversion plan, he said.

Information relating to the stock offering will be contained in the proxy statement sent to association members.

Woman Dies In Pitt Accident

FATALITY SCENE — An Ayden woman, identified by Trooper Fred Davis as Peggy Ann Shackleford Carmon of Rt. 1, Ayden, was killed Friday night. According to the Davis's report, the car Ms. Carmon was driving collided with another vehicle on N.C. 102 west of Ayden. The report alledges that the Carmon vehicle, heading east on 102, made an abrupt left turn as it approached the intersection of 102 and N.C. 903, into the path of a car driven by Marian David Bowen of Ayden. Injured in the mishap were Mrs. Bowen, a passenger in her car, Mrs. Lillie Bell Davis, and two passengers in the Carmon vehicle, James Earl and Brenda Denise Carmon. Members of the Ayden Rescue Squad and Ayden Fire Department responded to the call. Investigation of the accident is continuing. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

17 Dead, 4 Missing In Fire

By WALTER WISNIEWSKI

HOBOKEN, N.J. (UPI) — A fire ripped through a five-story tenement early Saturday, killing 17 people who were members of three families. Four other people were feared dead in the ice-covered ruins.

Firemen termed the blaze "definitely suspicious."

At least 21 other tenants were injured in the blaze, including three in critical condition at St. Mary Hospital, a block away from the tenement in a lower middle-class neighborhood near the Hudson River.

Capt. Ray Falco, chief arson investigator, called the blaze "definitely suspicious" but said no determination of arson could be made until bodies removed and the blackened debris searched.

Firefighters, their sooty uniforms crusted with ice, carried victims' bodies in platic bags to a waiting station wagon to be taken to a funeral home for identification.

"They were incinerated," said Deputy Fire Chief Raymond Sheehan. "We found bodies all over the floors. Limbs were missing." He said he recalled seeing what appeared to be the body of a mother huddled over one or two children.

"This was the second time I've seen a fire where poeple died. It was hell, said 17-year-old Louis Oyola, who awakened to his mother's screams about a fire next door.

"I went outside and I saw a woman hanging out the window of the second floor," he said. "She was holding her baby. And then she dropped the baby to the sidewalk." He said he believed the baby survived the fall.

Fire officials said the fire apparently started in a stairwell on the first floor shortly before 4 a.m. and moved rapidly through the building. All of the building's stairwells and the roof collapsed.

"The interior of the building is pancaked," Falco said.

Two passing police discovered the fire and turned in the first alarm. One of the men was injured slightly trying to enter the burning building.

Carmen Rivera, 32, and her 31-year-old husband, Jose, were the first people out of the building. Her husband's hands were bound with white bandages from cuts suffered while pulling his three children out of the window of their first floor apartment.

"We opened the front door, but the smoke and the fire was too heavy. So we took the children and we climbed out through a front window," she said in Spanish, with a neighbor acting as translator.

"When I came out, I could see flames and people were screaming. Everybody else was still inside. People were throwing themselves through the windows. People were jumping to the ground," Mrs. Rivera said.

Joseph Lecowitch, executive director of the Hudson County Chapter of the Red Cross, said he feared that three of the eight families living in the building were "wiped out."

The families were identified as the Drepauls family of nine, the Soto-Torrez' family of four, and the Rampersaud family of eight. Only 17 bodies, as yet unidentified, were found in the rubble. The four other family members were still missing.

Jury Returns Guilty Verdict On Former Official

SEVENTEEN DIE AS BUS AND LOCOMOTIVE COLLIDE — Crumpled bodies sprawl in the foreground, about 300 feet from the spot where an overloaded suburban bus and a solitary locomotive collided early Friday on the outskirts of the Mexican capital. Mexican Red Cross officials said 17 bus passengers were killed, and 35 others were injured. (AP Laserphoto)

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — Gerald Hill, former director of the Lumberton Housing Authority, was found guilty on six counts of misusing public funds Saturday night in Robeson County Superior Court.

The jury of 10 women and two men took 25 minutes to reach their verdict in the trial, which had taken six days. Hill sat quietly as the foreman read the jury's guilty verdict on three counts of corporate malfeasance and three counts of aiding and abetting false pre-nse.

Hill, 42, who is currently the executive director of the Beaufort, S.C. housing authority, was convicted out of charges stemming from three invoices W. Sammy Britt presented to the Housing Authority in late 1972 and early 1973.

Britt has pleaded guilty to submitting invoices on phony freight charges for the shipment of three loads of tile to the housing authority.

Hill was convicted of approving payment of $2,137 to Britt.

District Attorney Joe Freeman Britt sat rocking in his chair, his head nodding in agreement as each of the six guilty verdicts was read. Hill's family, which had sat behind him during the entire trial, was absent from the courtroom as the verdicts were read.

Earlier, District Attorney Joe Freeman had called Hill the "big fish" in a little ring of people defrauding the authority.

Hill's sentencing was postponed until the last of six cases stemming from an SBI probe of the housing authority is completed. In the last of the cases, John Fuller Sealey, owner of a Lumberton gas station, goes on trial Monday on false pretense charges.

To date the state has won three jury trials and received three guilty pleas in the housing authority cases. Shortly after the jury returned its verdict, Judge Robert Gavin denied defense motions for a new trial and for dismissal of all charges against Hill. The judge continued Hill's $25,000 bond pending sentencing.

Parking Dispute Sparks Shootout

By BARNEY LERTEN

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A 76-year-old apartment superintendent, enraged at his tenants for months, exploded over a parking dispute with barrages of gunfire, killing one tenant and seriously wounding three others before taking his own life Saturday.

Thomas E. Hufnagel, sniping with a shotgun and .38 caliber revolver from a second story window, peppered a residential street keeping an army of police at bay.

Police negotiator Chris Hatcher said Hufnagel had threatened to kill everybody in his apartment six months ago, including three of the victims, but no one paid much attention to the old man.

Friday evening, police said, a car parked on the sidewalk was the last straw.

Hufnagel, who was fastidious about the building's appearance, approached the driver, Joel Blackman, 30, an attorney, and his companion Mimi Rosenblatt, 28, a public relations worker, both tenants, with a gun. Hufnagel shot them both.

An off-duty police officer, Ken Katz, who was passing by, stopped and shouted to Hufnagel to surrender. The old man fired, and retreated into the building.

Miss Rosenblatt staggered into the apartment of Robert and Katherine Henry as another tenant, Mark Johnson, appeared. Hufnagel blasted Mrs. Henry in the abdomen and killed Johnson.

While Hufnagel fired into the street indiscriminately from a second story window, paramedics worked a floor below. They strapped the victims to boards and passed them through a window to waiting ambulances.

Ocasionally, floodlights picked up the barrel of Hufnagel's shotgun protruding from the window, and two hours after the first shots, no more came from the apartment. After five hours of silence, tear gas cannisters were fired. Then police broke down the door.

Hufnagel was dead on the couch, apparently of a self-inflicted pistol blast in the mouth.

Johnson, an unemployed vending machine serviceman, also was dead. It was his 24th birthday, and his mother, Dorothy, was present in his apartment, having flown in from Philadelphia for the occasion.

SNIPER VICTIM — An unidentified victim of Friday night's shooting incident near San Francisco's Golden Gate Park is attended by an officer. Police say at least four persons were shot, one of them fatally. (AP Laserphoto)

Inching Toward Nomination

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., says he's "inching toward a decision to run for the Republican presidential nomination" and will probably make up his mind in the next two months.

Dole held a news conference at the Kinston Airport Saturday and talked about his political plans. He was in Kinston to speak at the Jaycees Distinguished Service Award banquet.

Dole said if Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., decides to test his national political strength by running in the North Carolina primary in 1980, the decision would alter the plans of every other candidate to run in the primary.

New Charlotte Bus Contract

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Drivers and mechanics for Charlotte's city bus system ratified a new two-year contract Saturday, ending a 56-day strike that brought bus transportation to a halt.

The vote was 122 to 30 in favor of the agreement.

While no details of the contract were disclosed, reports published Friday said the 175 drivers and mechanics would receive a pay increase of $1.06 per hour over the two-year period. The top hourly wages would increase 51 cents in the first year to $6.39 and 55 cents in the second year to $6.94.

Strike Endangering Britain

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister James Callaghan Saturday called weekend cabinet sessions to discuss crippling industrial and public service strikes endangering Britain's food supplies, water and sewage, hospitals, ambulances and air and rail travel.

Two hundred women, angered at the wave of walkouts disrupting the daily lives of millions and forced 110,000 job layoffs so far, marched in heavy snow in Bury, 200 miles northwest of London, demanding "death" for militant union pickets.

The worst industrial crisis in Callaghan's five-year-old Labor administration centered on a nationwide strike of truckers, tying up the docks, food plants, animal feed and raw materials.

Cuba Deployments To Rhodesia

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Cuba is slowly deploying more troops to guerrilla sanctuaries near Rhodesia's border and is teaching Rhodesian rebels to fly MiG21 jets, government sources said Saturday.

The sources, who closely watch activities of 43,000 Cuban troops and advisers in Africa, believe only the reluctance of neighboring African nations has kept Cuba from taking a more direct role in fighting inside Rhodesia.

Black rebel forces are battling the white minority-led Rhodesian army for control of that breakaway British colony. The United States and Britain have been unable to arrange a peaceful transition to black majority rule.

Tanker Refloats Itself

NANTUCKET, Mass. (UPI) — The 630-foot British tanker Afghanistan — laden with 9.6 million gallons of gasoline — Saturday ran aground in Nantucket Shoals but refloated itself after nightfall and safely steamed out of shallow and treacherous waters.

The vessel had a crew of 46 and was en route to Boston from the Virgin Islands. She failed to negotiate the tricky waters about 19 miles off Nantucket Island and hit bottom about 2:10 p.m.

Minor Accidents

Several minor accidents occurred in Greenville on Friday, with no injuries reported, according to Police Dept. records.

A vehicle driven by Lester B. Blount, 302 W. 14th St. was allegedly struck by a vehicle driven by Lula M. Patrick, 1906 Sherwood Drive. Damages were estimated at $300 to the Patrick vehicle, and $100 to the Blount car. The accident occured on West 14th Street. No charges have been made.

A vehicle owned by Gloria M. Roach, 509 Sunset Drive, Ayden, sustained approximately $200 in damages during an apparent hit and run incident in the parking lot of Friday's Seafood Friday night.

Another instance of damages while parked occurred Friday night to a vehicle owned by Timothy E. Odham, 803 W. 8th St., Ayden. Damages are estimated at $275, and the incident occurred in a downtown Greenville parking lot.

A third instance of a similar incident was reported by Juanita Shaw of Rt. 1, Box 62, Tarboro in a parking lot off S. Memorial Drive, also on Friday night. Damages are estimated at $200.

Copters

A joint House and Senate panel looking into government and transporation spending faild to get all the answers it wanted on use of the two state helicopters owned by the Department of Administration. The panel asked department Secretary Joe Grimsley to come back next week with a full accounting of the 880 hours of helicopter use last year.

Grimsley said the helicopters were used by the governor, lieutenant governor, Highway Patrol and other law enforcement agencies. He said House Speaker Carl Stewart, D-Gaston, had access to the copters, too, but had never asked for them.

Paroles

The House overwhelmingly approved a measure that would allow the state Paroles Commission to rule on most inmate cases in subcommittees of two. The commission asked for the bill as a means to speed up paroles consideration.

The bill was passed by a 93-0 vote and sent to the Senate. Under the measure, the full five-member commission would have to rule in cases involving persons serving life sentences seeking parole or work release.

UNC

State Reps. Horton Rountree, D-Pitt, and Hartwell Campbell, D-Wilson, suggested in a committee meeting that the legislature should consider raising tuition for students in the University of North Carolina system. Campbell said later he was considering asking for a 10 percent increase.

UNC tuitions were last increased in 1977, when they went up 10 percent for North Carolina students and $100 for out-of-state students.

UNC President William Friday, appearing before the joint House and Senate appropriations panel on education, said he opposed the move. "I believe in the principle of low tuition," he said.

Airports

The House overwhelmingly approved a measure that would authorize the state to help local governments pay for maintenance of local airports.

Wreckers

year. The salary for the counselor, who will be on duty at night, and conduct extra-curricular activities for the workers, is about $8,000 a year.

The youth participating in the program will receive minimum wage — $116 per week.

Workers will be housed and fed in the rear section of the old Eppes High School gym, now being renovated at a cost of between $10,000 and $15,000 as part of the grant program. Workers, as a requirement of the residential camp program, will have to live with the rest of the camp, Lee explained. "They can't live at home."

As residents, they will pay $21 per week for their room and board — 75-cents per day room, and 75-cents per meal for their food, which will be catered.

In addition to the $20,000 of the initial grant going for supervisory salaries for the first quarter, and $27,000 going to the enrollees, some $30,000 to $35,000 will be spent on the purchase of equipment — possibly three trucks, hand tools, beds for the dormitory and other items. The remaining funds will be used to purchase maintenance supplies and building materials with which the CETA enrollees will work.

Lee noted that some 15 persons, including two females, have been hired for the project and are already on the job, although it will probably be about two weeks before the renovations at the Eppes gym for residential facilities are completed. There will be about six residents per room, Lee noted, when the residential facility is occupied.

He noted that the local project is the only CETA youth conservation residential camp program in North Carolina.

A Shortage Despite Resources

It has to be disturbing that a shortage of nurses is causing Pitt Memorial Hospital to turn away some patients.

When an overload occurs the hospital has postponed elective surgery to make room for emergency cases.

Chief of Staff Dr. William Bost said that a priority system has been worked out and no one has been turned away a second time.

Hospital Director Jack Richardson reported that a recruitment program is underway stretching as far away as a job fair in Canada. The hospital still has space that can be opened when enough nurses are available.

The shortage of nurses exists even though a major School of Nursing is located at East Carolina University, and Pitt Technical Institute has a nursing program which educates registered nurses.

It may be the nursing shortage is acute here because Pitt Memorial, operating in conjunction with the developing ECU School of Medicine, is expanding so rapidly.

It is, nevertheless, a problem that will have to be resolved as quickly as possible.

Plans are already being drawn and funding obtained for a new bed tower to be constructed at the hospital. This will require still more medical support personnel and additional nurses will be essential.

Sad To See Public Office Badly Used

The actions by Gov. Ray Blanton of Tennessee in granting clemency to large numbers of prisoners, many of them serving terms for murder, is shocking.

It led to Gov.-elect Lamar Alexander taking office three days early thus heading off more commutations.

It is sad, indeed that a gubernatorial power, backed up by a solemn oath of office could be so badly used.

Hopefully we will never see anything like it again.

Interstate Is Growth Key

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — State industry hunters who work with corporate decision-makers looking for new plant sites say that transportation is the critical factor.

Certainly a lot of other things are considered: livable communities, available and productive employees, reasonable tax and utility rates, good schools.

But all else being equal, most firms insist that the location be less than an hour away from an airport, and close to interstate highways.

Of course the interstate highways mean that property in rural areas once far removed from the city can be close enough to an urban area with its airport to qualify.

All of which prompted Gov. Jim Hunt recently to draw an interesting parallel in history.

"The coming of an interstate highway today is a lot like the coming of the railroad was in the past.....It can actually mean that much to the communities which are opened up," Gov. Hunt said.

New Project

An additional interstate like for North Carolina has been approved by federal transportation officials, and will move the state closer to that longtime dream of a mountain-to-coast expressway.

A 90-mile stretch from Benson to Wilmington will put the highway in reach of joining Interstate 40 and Interstate 85 as well as Interstate 95.

"It will be a tremendous boost for economic development", Hunt says of the $180 million expressway, "and it should contribute to even more good growth such as we had last year."

Record Growth

How good was last year? So good that Hunt is convinced that "no other state in the country has had that kind of increase."

Not only did the state's first billion-dollar year (1976) yield to a new record only two years later, but the proportion of new industrial investment compared to expansion of existing industry shifted strongly.

BILL NOBLITT

The $2 billion-plus in new investment tilted strongly toward new projects ($1.5 billion of the $2.02 billion) in 1978 as compared to years previously when up to two-thirds of the new investment was expansion of similar industries rather than new ones.

The Best

How good is the literature which North Carolina is using to lure expanded tourism?

A publication entitled "Travel Advisor" surveyed all 50 states and 123 foreigh countries to judge their tourism packages as to the best and most useful.

Canada ranked first in the world, with North Carolina second. But since Canada is a nation, that obviously means this state has the best state package.

It was described this way in the publication: "This state sends out an exceptionally well organized kit ... color brochures with very good color photography introduce you to the major North Carolina regions; the coast, the mountains, the piedmont. A Director of Accommodations provides a list of hotels and also such basic information as availability of baby sitters, facilities for the handicapped, kitchenettes, average rates, and which credit cards are accepted. Also ... tours you can take in a day .... map and guide to points of interest. Neat, simple travel information all in a file folder you can pack in your suitcase."

Sunday Morning Notes

Maybe train conductors — if they still have them — don't call out the stations on passenger trains these days but there was a time when they did.

In fact, there was a time when train travel was the way most folks made their long distance trips in the United States.

Joe Jenkins of "The Daily Reflector" advertising department recently found an old clipping in a family Bible. It had been saved because of the death of a child in the family in 1916.

For $17.85 you could travel to Philadelphia for the Association Advertising Clubs of the World.

Shriners could go to Buffalo for their meeting at a cost of $28.15, while the All South Christian Endeavor Convention could be reached in Atlanta for $13.95.

A trip to Nashville, Tenn for Peabody College Summer School would cost $20.95 and a vacation at Waynesville and Lake Junaluska cost $10.75, provided the return trip was made by a specified time.

If the west coast was your destination the fare from Goldsboro to Portland, Ore. was $94.95, and to San Francisco it was $92.79.

The intervening years since the fares cited in 1916 have seen the near demise of rail travel. It has given way to private autos, buses and the ever increasing air travel.

Rail travel is still with us, though in the form of the government sponsored Amtrak.

To New York the fare was advertised at $52. To Washington it was $28 and to Philadelphia it was $44.50. A Boston trip would cost $77; Montreal $93; Jacksonville, $49; Orlando, $66 and Miami $77.

Alas, today's train travelers will find only limited schedules and the trains travel only certain mainlines.

Service to cities like Goldsboro, Greenville and, in fact, all communities in the East had long ago been eliminated, with the exception of those along the Seaboard Coast Line New York to Florida tracks.

The passenger trains still run, however, and a train trip is something everyone should experience at least once in a lifetime.

Totaled Woman

(Greensboro Daily News)

Since last Friday when President Carter fired Bella Abzug from her job as co-chairman of his National Advisory Committee on Women, it has been suggested that the emperor has once again killed the messenger bearing bad news and that now, more than ever, Carter will have to prove his devotion to the cause of women's rights as penance for his action.

But the facts of the incident don't support such an interpretation. While it may be true Carter charged the committee to be "bold, outspoken, militant in our demands of him", as one member said, it is highly unlikely that Carter asked, much less demanded, that any member hector him with accusations of failing the women's movement in front of over 40 people.

And that is just what Ms. Abzug did last Friday. Whatever the merit of her charges, it was subsumed in the vitriol of her delivery. It was not a matter of being unladylike. It was a matter of rudeness, a rankling commodity in either sex.

Had she mounted her attack from a podium of her own, that would have been one thing. But it was entirely something else when she climbed into a pulpit provided by none other than the President and let him have what-for. That is known as biting the hand that feeds you.

Lastly, there is simply nothing to the charge that Jimmy Carter has alienated the women's movement by his firing of Bella Abzug. For this charge to come true, two fictions would have to stand as fact. First, we would have to pretend that there is total unity in a cause notable for its fragmented state. Second, we would have to believe that Bella Abzug is the most visible representative of the women's movement. Defeated in her own home town in election after election, she can hardly lay claim to such popularity.

It is lamentable that Jimmy Carter, who has done more for women through his appointments and programs than any of his predecessors, has been labeled a misogynist for his firings of Bella Abzug and former White House staffer Midge Costanza. This isn't to say that the Carter administration cannot accomplish more on women's issues. But to do so will require a spirit of compromise and political give-and-take — not the tiresome posturing of Bella Abzug.

Disease Crisis In War

By NAT GIBSON

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — The collapse of security combined with the assassination of doctors and veterinarians has created mounting fears that disease could become as lethal as bullets in this nation's war-torn countryside.

Measles, once kept at bay by innoculations, has started to claim a rising number of children's lives in the tribal trust land. Rabies and malaria cases also are on the increase, as well as the number of deaths from ailments and injuries that would not have been fatal with prompt medical treatment.

Even harder hit has been the tribesmen's economically and socially important cattle herds. Within the past year alone

40 Years Ago Today

January 21, 1939

The movement to secure 60 complete new uniforms for the Greenville High School band was well on the way to success today. 10 persons or firms having agreed to purchase one outfit each since yesterday's original list of 18 subscribers was announced.

A group of local businessmen started the movement and a committee was named yesterday to solicit individuals and firms, asking them to purchase one uniform. Eighteen uniforms were subscribed yesterday afternoon and and ten today.

Mayor M. K. Blount also gave encouragement to the plan to send the entire high school band to the World's Fair in New York on North Carolina Day in June.

The Mayor declared he felt certain some plan could be worked out to finance the proposal if the citizens of Greenville continued to show the enthusiasm they have exhibited in the purchase of uniforms.

THE INSIDE REPORT

White House Admits Error

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The implications for overall political strategy in President Carter's decision to sack Bella Abzug are suggested by this fact: Vice President Walter F. Mondale first learned of the decision, made hours earlier, as he left work that day.

Mondale has been the administration's principal exponent of accommodation with pressure groups within the Democratic party. Mrs. Abzug's appointment last June as co-chairman of a blue-ribbon women's advisory group was an accommodation to organized feminists. "The only voice here who disapproved of getting rid of Bella last week was the vice president," one White House insider told us.

Her dismissal was not merely the inescapable reaction to rudeness of the former congresswoman from Manhattan; it was recognition of accommodation's limits. It marked a way station on Jimmy Carter's path back to his successful, more instinctive political formula of 1976, when he did not worry about coalescing pressure groups but appealed to broad popular sentiment.

Rare in an administration not prone to admit error, there is universal crow-eating among Carter's senior staff that naming Abzug was a mistake in the first place. When she was finally fired last Friday (Jan. 12), press secretary Jody Powell immediately telephoned Rosalynn Carter, to say: "Mea culpa."

It was Powell and two other senior aides, Stuart Eizenstat and Anne Wexler, who last spring told the president and first lady — instinctively skeptical of Abzug — that her appointment was essential. Ms. Wexler's advice was partly shaped by threats from women's activist Gloria Steinem, Abzug's comrade in militancy, of dire retribution if she did not get the job.

But appeasement is never concluded in one installment. It soon became clear that Abzug would use her post to browbeat the president not just on women's questions but on vital national and defense policies, utilizing a technique perfected during a decade of intramural bloodletting within the Democratic party.

Abzug immediately challenged Sarah Weddington, the softspoken Texas feminist who is the president's fulltime aide for women's questions. In her inimitable manner, Abzug let the White House know the score: Bella is Carter's principal women's adviser, and Sarah had better stay out of her way.

Just before Thanksgiving, the Women's Advisory Committee rejected a 15-minute scheduled meeting with Carter on grounds it was too short. At the Democratic midterm conference in Memphis early in December, Abzug was perceived by the president's men as fighting Carter on the crucial budget resolution. No wonder, then, that several months ago there was private admission of error at the White House for signing on the uncontrollable Bella.

But there was no overt talk of correcting the error until Jan. 11 when the White House received the advisory committee's press release on the eve of its meeting with the president. Senior aides Powell, Hamilton Jordan and Gerald Rafshoon could scarcely believe their eyes when they read criticism of Carter's social priorities, his anti-inflation plan and the "proposed 10 percent increase" in defense spending. As might have been predicted by Abzug-watchers, she was turning a part-time commission on women's questions into a political platform to ridicule Carter's basic policies.

Strength For Today

IS THERE A HELL?

Some people profess to believe in heaven but not in hell. Such a distinction is neither logical nor scriptural. The gentle Jesus, whose ministry was the coming of heavenly love into the midst of human life, often talked about eternal punishment. And he spoke about it with as much authority as he spoke about the promises of heaven.

We have to face the fact that divine justice requires an eternal separation of the good from the evil. That separation above all constitutes the terrors of hell. To be separated from God and from righteous men — that is hell. To live in darkness— — that is hell. Both heaven and hell begin here on earth, but they are consumated in a great universal experience after death.

There is a great deal of comfort in the Bible but there is plenty of warning also. And we should avoid reading into the Bible only those things we want to find in it. Some of the other things may not be pleasant, but they are vital for our future.

Still Risks It All At Age 77

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Arnold Bernhard, builder of the nation's largest stock advisory firm, survivor of 47 years of economic boom and bust, esteemed by colleagues, admired by subscribers, still risks it all at age 77.

"I think the Dow Jones industrial average will be between 1500 and 2000 in the foreseeable future," said the patriarch, a precise gentleman who believes "foreseeable" may be as soon as 1982.

He voices no uncertainty. He bases his opinion, he says, on fundamental, quantitative analysis, rather than subjective criteria.

In fact, he hasn't wavered in his optimism since December 1974 at the University of California, Los Angeles when he first made his forecast.

Why is Bernhard, who is staking a reputation built since the Great Depression when he founded Arnold Bernhard & Co., so certain? Because 1500 to 2000 points on the Dow would be "normal," he says. Based on mathematical criteria developed by his Value Line Investment Survey, stock prices now are out of proportion, he adds.

Consider just one, the payout ratio, he suggests. The ratio of the Dow Jones average to earnings was just 43 percent in 1978, he said. Over a 50-year period, however, it is 59.5 percent.

Value Line relies almost totally on hard factors, such as price-earnings ratios, earnings growth and price momentum, in rating the relative attractiveness and safety of the 1,700 stocks it follows.

But a small judgmental factor also is worked into the regression analyses, as is an earnings "surprise factor," which weighs deviations in reported earnings from the expectations of analysts.

When the computer finishes its work, every one of the stocks has a relative rating — that is, against each other — that suggests future performance and safety. A rating of "1" is best and "5" worst.

Into the highest category go 100 stocks, the very best of the universe of 1,700. In group two are 300 more, followed by 900 in group three, 300 in four, and 100 in five, the lowest ranking.

Between 1965 and 1978, according to Value Line literature, stocks in category one showed a price appreciation of 1028 percent, excluding dividends, a growth many times that of the market's popular indices.

While Bernhard appears chagrined at what he feels has been little attention from the academic community, it isn't quite so. He speaks at universities. Scholars have evaluated his work.

Most important of the academic judgments is that of Dr. Fischer Black of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who holds to the widely accepted "random walk" theory of the "totally efficient" market."

In his thesis, the market is efficient because stock prices always reflect their true value. Over time, Black says, "attempts to pick stocks that do better than others are not successful."

But Black makes an exception. In a paper presented at a seminar some years ago, he conceded that "the Value Line ranking system appearrs to be one of the few exceptions."

Carter Tops His Rivals

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — With the 1980 presidential campaign unofficially underway, President Jimmy Carter has a comfortable lead among registered voters over two prominent likely challengers, Ronald Reagan and Gerald Ford.

The president leads his 1976 opponent, Ford, by a 53-39 percent margin with 3 percent citing other candidates and 5 percent as yet undecided. He enjoys an even bigger cushion over Reagan, 57-35 percent, with 2 percent voting for other candidates and 6 percent undecided.

If the votes of those who are undecided between the two men in each contest are allocated, Carter has a 57-43 percent edge over Ford and an even wider 61-39 percent lead over Reagan.

Although Ford outperforms Reagan against the president in these nationwide trial tests of political strength, Reagan is the top choice of Republicans for the GOP nomination. In a recently completed Gallup survey, Reagan was the first choice of 40 percent of party members for the nomination while 24 percent selected Ford. No other man on the list of 13 possible candidates received more than 10 percent of the Republican vote.

Carter continues to be the second choice of Democrats for their party's 1980 nomination behind Massachusetts Sen. Edward Kennedy.

Reagan Losing Ground

Ford not only runs a better race against Carter than Reagan, but he has also been able to maintain his share of the vote while Reagan has lost ground.

In a September survey, Ford trailed the president by a 57-43 percent margin — results that exactly match those recorded in the current survey. Reagan, on the other hand, behind Carter 55-45 percent in July, has now fallen behind by 61-39 percent.

Even at his current level, Reagan fares better against Carter than he did throughout the summer of 1976 when both men were contesting for their party nominations. While he ran behind Carter by a 60-40 percent split in May 1976, Reagan's share of the vote declined, just before the GOP convention narrowly selected Ford as its nominee, to a 68-32 percent deficit.

During the same interim (between late May and the GOP convention in August 1976) Ford also consistently trailed Carter with the margin ranging from 57-43 percent in May to 63-37 percent just before the convention.

Here is the question asked in the survey:

"Suppose the presidential election were being held today. If President Jimmy Carter were the Democratic candidate and Gerald Ford/Ronald Reagan were the Republican candidate, which would you like to see win?" Those who named another person or who were undecided were asked: "As of today, do you lean more to Carter, the Democrat, or to Ford/Reagan, the Republican?")

Carter Vs. Ford
(Based on registered voters)

	Carter	Ford	Other	Undecided
LATEST	53%	39%	3%	5
September	53	40	2	5
July	47	46	2	5
March-April	57	43	2	4

Carter Vs. Reagan
(Based on registered voters)

	Carter	Reagan	Other	Undecided
LATEST	57%	35%	2%	6%
July	52	43	1	4
March-April	51	45	1	3

The results reported today are based on personal interviews with 1,140 registered voters out of a total sample of 1,552 adults, 18 and older. Interviews were conducted in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period Dec. 8-11, 1978.

As I Recall It...

Not Always For The Black, Poor, Uneducated

By NOEL YANCEY

(Noel Yancey retired recently after 39 years of covering state government for the Associated Press. In this column he retells some of the big stories he recalls after covering 12 governors and 18 sessions of the General Assembly.)

Those opposing capital punishment argue that it is used almost exclusively against the black, the poor and the uneducated. The case of James R. Creech, a 37-year-old Johnston County farmer and businessman, may have been the exception that proves the rule. Creech was a wealthy man and he attended college for three years. Yet he was executed in the Central Prison gas chamber on Jan. 28, 1949 for the shotgun slaying of his estranged wife.

In fact, Creech may have received the death sentence rather than a prison term because he was wealthy. The battery of lawyers that defended Creech included former Gov. J. Melville Broughton. So, the prosecution was able to argue that here was a man of wealth and property who was attempting to buy his release.

Creech was placed on trial just 16 days after the slaying of Mattie Woodall Creech, his 28-year-old 100-pound wife, at the home of a neighbor where she was staying after leaving her husband 12 days before. Evidence was he shot his wife through a bedroom door, behing which she had sought safety. Witnesses said he then entered the room and "blew off the top of her head" with a second blast from the shotgun.

Creech's conviction was upheld by the state Supreme Court which divided 5-2 on its verdict. Associate Justices M.V. Barnhill and Sam J. Ervin, later a U.S. senator of Watergate fame, argued in a dissenting opinion that Creech should have had a new trial because of errors in the case.

At a clemency hearing held by Gov. W. Kerr Scott, Broughton, then a U.S. senator who had flown down from Washington and four other lawyers urged that Creech's life be spared because he was drunk at the time of the slaying.

"He drank right much whiskey," pleaded Rufus Creech, father of the defendant. "On this occasion, Governor, he had been drinking for some time. He was just not right when he was drinking. He was just awful. He did not know what he was doing." Two psychiatrists backed up the father's opinion.

The lawyers presented Scott a petition signed by 2,300 residents of Johnston County urging that Creech's life be spared.

Broughton argued that Creech should have been convicted of second degree murder which does not carry the death penalty. He also noted that the state Supreme Court admitted errors were made in Creech's trial.

"You've got here a case in which the court conceded there was errors...and undue haste...and on top of that," he told Scott, "you've got a divided court."

In no other capital case has any man, white or black, gone to his death in which the Supreme Court itself has said there were errors," Broughton argued.

Scott listened attentively to the arguments, but the record indicates he gave the well-to-do farmer and businessman no more consideration than the poorest citizen. He announced the next day he would not change the verdict of the courts.

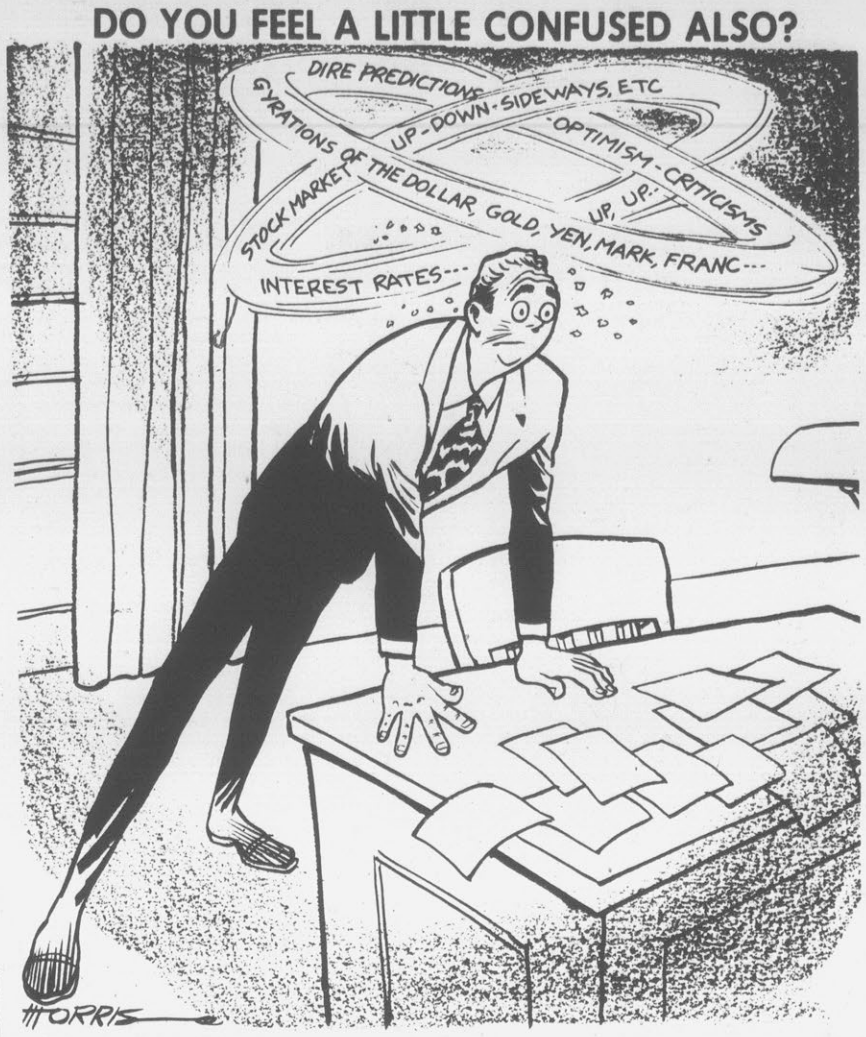

More than 1,000 persons gathered outside Central Prison on the rainy day on which Creech was executed.

Witnesses to the execution said that after the cyanide gas was turned on, Creech inhaled deeply four times and was pronounced dead 12 minutes later.

Creech's action in breathing deeply of the deadly fumes was in accordance with advice he had solicited from prison officials.

Several weeks after the Creech family claimed the body and laid it to rest in a Johnston County cemetery, a rumor sprang up and swept through the area. According to this rumor, Creech was not executed at all but was spirited out of the prison in his coffin and had fled to Mexico. However, it would be hard to convince the 30 persons who witnessed the execution or prison officials and employes that there was any truth in this story.

Makes Things Simply Because He Needs 'em

PINEVILLE, La. — Jimmy Hayes is an atavism, a throwback to an earlier time.

Had he been born sooner, the Pineville resident might have been a great inventor, a Bell or a Wright. But since many of today's inventions come from giant think-tanks and corporate research teams, Hayes is simply a lone builder, a creator.

Hayes is 51 and retired, but he doesn't loll around the house or play shuffleboard. Everyday he "goes to work" at his sawmill or machine shop. He sees a problem or conceives a project and sits down to think it out from start to finish. And then, using old parts and scrap material, he creates something.

Hayes likes the outdoors, and he enjoys running a homemade sawmill on his 20-acre homestead. So he combines his two loves by traveling the Louisiana swamps, searching for old cypress and other fallen hardwoods. But he found there were problems involved.

Normal six-wheel drive marsh buggies couldn't handle the deep water, and often bogged down if the mud got too deep and they weren't big enough to haul much wood. When Hayes dropped a 1942 Jeep engine into a 1927 Model T Roadster frame and modified the basic design, he came up with something that looks vaguely like an old pickup truck — but it has an extra set of wheels to make it a six-wheel-drive car-truck.

When he drives his swamp buggy across a soft patch of ground, Hayes leaves only two sets of tire tracks. "Wherever you point the front wheels, the back wheels follow, right in the same track. Folks didn't believe it could be done, but I sat down and thought it all out. I drew the wheels and made my circles and radiuses. I saw for myself it could be done, so I did it."

Hayes is an implusive inventor. "I'll be working on one thing and find I need a special tool or piece of equipment to finish the job. Then I have to move over and build that. So, one project may require me to make three or four different things," he notes.

A graduate of Bolton High School in Alexandria, Louisiana, Hayes admits rather modestly he got "extremely high marks in geometry and all the sciences, but I just couldn't barely pass English. I just screeched by there."

He's never had a course in physics, but understands and makes daily use of many of the applied sciences. "It's all math and as long as it's math, I don't seem to have any trouble figuring things out. Except for that computer stuff. I stopped my electrical work about the same time they started coming out with them."

But that doesn't stop him from showing a thing or two to the college-trained research staffs of major corporations.

"A doctor friend of mine, an eye doctor, came to me with a problem. He had this microscope he used for doing surgery and it was really sensitive. The way he worked he had to set it and then begin his operations. If he touched it while working or wanted to operate on a different part of the eye, he had to put down his intsruments to refocus and then pick them up again.

"So I took a couple of sewing maching pedals and hooked them to electric motors. I hooked the motors to some reduction gears and then hooked the whole thing up to the microscope. All the doctor had to do was step on the

The Status Quo Is Still A Better Alternative

I hear that some kids like to get back to the old home routine after a visit to their grandparents. Not Meg. She regards returning home as a personal tragedy equal to early bedtimes and English peas for dinner.

The major reason for this is that Meg holds the dubious distinction of being the only grandchild on both sides. There is absolutely no one with whom to share the lavish attention of four individuals suffering from empty nest syndrome. It's not quite as bad when we only have to contend with one set of grandparents at a time, but this past year Meg went directly from one set before Christmas to the other set after Christmas. And both sets behaved abominably.

It wasn't being ignored that I minded so much, even though I stood next to my own father for 20 minutes before he ever noticed me. Then he just gave me a peck on the cheek. The only times I could ever converse with him was after Meg was in bed.

It wasn't all the toys and gifts that I minded so much either, although with what Meg received, Phillip and I could open a toy store and live on the proceeds for at least six months. Most of the toys she got are still lying in mounds on her bedroom floor, and it gets dangerous after dark. Last night when I went in to check on her, I stepped on the bulb of a squeeze toy and was promptly attacked by Alvin the Aardvark.

It wasn't even being glared at every time I tried to discipline Meg that I minded, although after I sent Meg to her room, my mother didn't speak to me for the rest of the day. It was hard not to remind her that she once held the neighborhood record for the notches in her switch.

What I did mind was the way they encouraged Meg to regress a year and a half. I'm having trouble enough dealing with Meg at three. I don't even like to remember her at 18 months, and I certainly don't want to relive it. But I'm doing just that. Thanks to my mother, Meg can no longer feed herself anything but dessert. Her arm goes limp at the mere mention of anything green. Thanks to Phillip's father, she can no longer endure frustration of any kind. Every time I say 'no,' she expects Pop to appear and sneak what she wants to her anyway.

Thanks to my father she can no longer, go to bed without being rocked to sleep. And thanks to Phillip's mother, she can no longer entertain herself.

"I can't stand it," I told Phillip the other night. "It's been almost three weeks since we got home, and Meg still can't get through a meal without begging, 'Feed me.' She whines when she doesn't have my full attention, and she tags after me like a shadow. Something has got to be done!"

"Well, I see only two possible solutions," Phillip said. "One, we can get rid of our parents. Not a very feasible plan, I think you'll agree. Two, we can have another baby."

more than 350,000 cattle have died from tick-borne fevers formerly controlled by dipping. Others have been infected with the dread sleeping sickness by tse-tse flies that have crossed the border in the absence of spraying.

The primary victims of these afflictions have been Rhodesia's rural blacks. They are responding by fleeing in the thousands to towns and other sites of sanctuary.

Agriculture and medical officials blame the crisis on a deliberate guerrilla policy to erase white presence in the trust lands by killing missionaries, doctors and veterinarians.

"This is another way of disrupting the government by promoting the social and economic disintegration of the country," said Dr. Andy Norval, the nation's top tick expert. "It is pure biological war and far more effective than if Moscow had actually provided the terrorists with laboratory-bred bugs to throw around."

He described the destruction of the tick eradication dipping tanks as one of the most damaging aspects of the war. This is particularly true of the subsistence black herdsmen, many of whom have seen disease reduce their small, life-sustaining herds by half since the vets deserted the trust lands.

The evacuation only came after eight veterinarian workers were killed and 30 wounded. One was shot dead as he sat at a rural desk giving rabies shots. Several others died in ambushes.

"We can't get our workers to go into the countryside any more," said Jerry Davison, chief tse-tse control officer.

The church-run schools, hospitals and clinics have been equally affected. Since the war heated up, 37 missionaries and their families have been killed in addition to two International Red Cross workers whose ambulance was ambushed.

In the worst of these attacks, guerrillas bayoneted eight British missionaries and four children to death at the Elim Pentecostal mission near the Mozambique border.

As a result, the number of doctors in the countryside has slumped from 70 to 17, leaving 104 empty mission stations that used to provide medical care.

With only 50 rural hospitals and clinics remaining in a country larger than Britain and France put together, thousands of people must risk a ride into town for treatment, over roads subjected to mines and ambushes.

Carter's advisers compared notes that evening, some just then learning of Abzug's role in Memphis and her treatment of Weddington. They met again the next morning and recommended Abzug's dismissal. But her fate was not sealed until that afternoon when she assaulted Carter at the formal meeting.

Contrasting with the sense of emancipation for Carter and his senior staff, middle-level aides have been wringing hands over retaliation by angry feminists. Gloria Steinem appeared like an avenging angel to denounce the president, quickly followed by resignations of about half the advisory committee members. Mondale said nothing, but an aide noted: "The vice president is not inclined to confrontation."

Although Abzug claimed the resignations were spontaneous, several women who quit confided to the White House about pressure put on them and hinted at future service when the heat is off. Other women telephoned congratulations and offered themselves as replacements. Outside the cozy world of organized women's politics, there was little protest.

Indeed, sacking Bella Abzug may well help rather than hurt the equal rights amendment (ERA) and win, not lose, women's votes for Carter — a prospect noted within the White House. If so, the politics of accommodation was dealt a serious blow the day that Jimmy showed Bella to the door.

A Conservative View

Second Thoughts On HEW's Smoking Report

BY JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Last week's massive report on smoking and health provided us with a little demagoguery, some splendid public relations, and a mass of statistical goo, but the report failed to answer a couple of fundamental questions in science and philosophy.

First the demagoguery. In his foreword, Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano, Jr., says the report "demolishes" the charges of cigarette manufacturers that the scientific evidence in the first report of 15 years ago was sketchy and that no link between smoking and cancer was "proven." These claims, Califano continues, were empty then and they are "utterly vacuous now."

Fiddlesticks. Some of the statistics in that 1964 report were in fact flimsy. The word "link," in this context, is a weasel word that slips smoothly down the underground holes of meaning. What the manufacturers said is that no evidence was produced, flat-out, to prove that cigarette smoking, in and of itself, causes cancer of the lung. It was a precisely accurate statement.

Califano continues: "In truth, the attack upon the scientific and medical evidence about smoking is little more than an attack upon science itself... Like every attack upon science by vested interests, from Aristotle's day to Galileo's to our own, these attacks collapse of their own weight."

Pfui. Califano is here saying that anyone who dares to criticize a piece of his scientific research is a redneck, a barbarian and a yahoo. One of the most ballyhooed pieces of research in this whole field was the famous study of "smoking dogs." The study was so poorly done that the nation's two most prestigious medical journals rejected the manuscript. The study, incidentally, has not been replicated to this day.

As an exercise in public relations, however, Califano's foreword was beautiful. He had a couple of catchy phrases to grab the fleeting eye: "Women who smoke like men die like men who smoke." And, "smoking is truly slow- motion suicide." This is high-class copy in the ad man's world; it produced prime-time coverage on the networks and page-one spreads in the press. In this respect, a good job.

But if this tome, as such, was intended to educate and to persuade the 54 million persons who still smoke 615 billion cigarettes a year, the report adds up to an expensive flop. A more turbid, turgid document seldom has been presented for mass consumption. By way of random example, this is what the report serves up to the fellow who wants to quit:

"Smoking is a behavior — a highly complex act which is accompanied by certain cognitions and hedonic states and based on various biochemical and physiological processes... The impetus for using behavior modification techniques has been provided by the belief that research procedures which operationalize definitions, emphasize well-controlled empirical research, and are derived from concepts from the experimental laboratory will provide," et cetera, et cetera, et cetera.

Suppose we cut through the fog. Fifteen years of research, thousands of published studies, and millions of dollars in public and private funds have indeed established a relationship between smoking and certain serious diseases. The evidence is almost wholly statistical — it correlates death and illness on the one hand with the degree of smoking on the other — but the evidence is convincing.

But you will search this report in vain for an answer to the fundamental scientific question: What is the particular substance in a cigarette that causes the cancer or contributes to the heart disease? We simply do not know.

Neither is the key question of political philosophy fairly addressed or answered. In a presumably free society, what is the proper role of government in altering the habits of the people? After the people have been warned, and warned, and warned, further governmental efforts to modify their behavior may cease to prompt admiration and will begin to cause concern. Such efforts, indeed, may be dangerous to our political health.

Editor's Note: Mr. Kilpatrick, once a two-pack-a-day man, quit 18 months ago and hasn't touched the weed since.

40th Anniversary For The Greenville Jaycees

The Greenville Jaycees are celebrating their 40th anniversary as a service chapter with this year's observance of Jaycee Week.

While focusing the observance on 40 years of community service activities, the local chapter also joins in the celebration of the 58th anniversary of the U.S. Jaycees organization.

The wives of the Greenville Jaycees, organized as the Jaycettes, annually commemorate their chapter anniversary during Jaycee Week and this year celebrate 26 years of service and support of the Jaycee organization.

With emphasis on the 40th birthday observance, the chapter has invited the organization's charter president, Dave Mosier, to speak at the highlight of the Jaycee Week activities, the Distinguished Service Award banquet. The banquet, which also recognizes the Boss of the Year in the community, will be held Tuesday night, Jan. 23 at the Ramada Inn.

In addition to Mosier, who will speak on the history of the chapter and recall the chartering activities, other charter members of the 1939 club have also been invited to attend.

Jaycee Week will be officially launched on Monday with a 7 a.m. Prayer Breakfast at the Three Steers Restaurant. Mayor Percy Cox and other city and county officials have been issued invitations to attend the breakfast gathering.

In addition to the DSA and Bosses Night Banquet, where the club will recognize the young man judged as the outstanding citizen of the Greenville area during the year and also the boss of a Jaycee who has offered outstanding support of the Jaycee organization, the chapter will also step up its supportive role in several on-going projects.

One of the key projects involves the chapter's participation with the Tidewater Regional Red Cross blood program in an effort to raise $17,000 for the purchase of a Pheresis Machine, which is used in the treatment of several blood disorders such as leukemia and other types of cancer.

Until recently, the closest Pheresis machine was located in Norfolk, Va. The Tar River Blood Center here has borrowed a machine from the Norfolk Red Cross Blood Center until donations are sufficient to purchase a machine for local use.

The Jaycees here are working with other chapters in eastern North Carolina, as well as with civic clubs, individuals and businesses to raise the needed funds for the local purchase.

The Greenville chapter is also continuing its involvement in the statewide Jelly Sale in support of a drive to raise funds for a new burn treatment center in the state. The sale of jelly is an active project that is drawing participation from Jaycee chapters all over the state.

In addition to the Pheresis and burn center projects, the Jaycees in Greenville had a busy year with other service activities, including the East Carolina University scholarship program for a needy Rose High School graduate, muscular dystrophy fund drive, July 4th observance, Christmas Parade, woodcutting for the needy, the Boys' Home Christmas party, help for a needy family at Christmas, the Flynn Home Christmas party, involvement in the ongoing Cystic Fibrosis program, Red Ball project for the Fire Department, and assistance to the Greenville Rescue Squad.

Key projects that have been spearheaded by the Jaycees in the past included the construction of Guy Smith Stadium, involvement in the Greenville Airport project, Jaycee Park construction, support of the ECU Medical School effort, and support of the Boy's Club. The chapter also supported the ECU stadium expansion project.

The Jaycettes, who support and assist their husbands in community service activities, work primarily with crippled and handicapped citizens and with the pediatrics ward at the hospital. Each week, various members of the Jaycettes read to children at Pitt Memorial's pediatrics section.

Other projects that the Jaycettes have initiated and supported included: annual candy sale to raise money for community service work; support in the way of a donation towards the purchase of clothing for patients at Cherry Hospital; and Christmas donations to Cherry Hospital, Caswell Center and the ADAP program.

Mayo Allen Promoted, To Become Commandant

Captain Leon Wright, of the 514th National Guard MP Company, has announced the transfer of First Sergeant Mayo Allen from the 514th MPs Greenville, to a new assignment as Commandant of the Non-commissioned Officers School at Fort Bragg.

A board of officers appointed by the National Guard's Adjutant General selected 1Sgt Allen as Commandant, and he will be promoted to the rank of Command Sergeant Major (E-9). Upon taking his new position, 1Sgt Allen will end over a quarter of a century of service to the Greenville National Guard.

Mayo Allen

The NCO school at Fort Bragg trains North Carolina Air and Army National guard NCOS in leadership ability.

Allen has been in uniform for nearly 29 years with 13 of those years as a full-time technician. Other duties were with the state bi-racial committee and recruiting team. He has received several letters of commendation from commanding generals. The highlight of his career came in 1972 when he was presented the State Distinguished Service Award given by the Adjutant General and the Governor of North Carolina. Also during his long tenure with the Greenville Guard the unit has won the Eisenhower Award for outstanding achievement, and recently received the Connely Award for having the best cook section in North Carolina.

This new assignment will not affect Allen's civilian job with the City of Greenville, as the Public Works director.

His wife is the fomrer Evelyn Ellis of Macclesfield, and they have two children. The Allens reside at 1400 Ragsdale Road in Greenville.

pedals to move the barrel up or down."

And that's where the story gets interesting. The Pineville designer says the doctor took his "new" microscope to a seminar in Oklahoma where the manufacturer's representatives got a look at it.

"They called me and wanted me to build one for them. I told them I thought I could make a few improvements and they said they wanted a model so they can begin production next year. I promised them I'd build one, but now I'm not really that interested," he says. "Now that I've solved the basic problem, the thrill is gone. I don't really feel like doing it again."

"But Jimmy," I point out, "that could make you rich. Get a patent on that and you could make a million dollars."

"Son," he replies gently, "I don't do what I do for the money. I make things because I need them. Necessity drives me. If I could go to town and buy the things I need, I wouldn't have the fun of making them myself."

News Briefs

Studies Plane Wreckage

DETROIT (UPI) — Federal investigators studied the twisted, charred wreckage of a Lear jet Saturday at Detroit Metropolitan Airpot to learn why a wing tip fuel tank scraped the runway and exploded on landing, killing six men aboard.

Another crash occurred in Grand Rapids 10 minutes before the Lear jet crashed in Detroit Friday night, but investigators said the cause of the Grand Rapids crash was not so mysterious. The pilot of the ill-fated air taxi said ice was piling up on his wings as he tried to make an emergency landing.

Four died in that crash.

Among the victims in the Detroit crash were four top officials of Massey-Ferguson Inc., a major farm implements manufacturer. They were heading home from a corporate meeting in Iowa.

New Tennessee Governor

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Lamar Alexander, calling on Tennesseans to "go the extra mile to put the agony and anger behind us," was inaugurated Saturday as the state's 45th governor to end a chaotic week highlighted by the unprecedented ouster of his predecessor.

A crowd of 12,000 gathered on the rain-swept Legislative Plaza at the foot of Capitol Hill cheered as Alexander stood before black-robed Chief Justice Joe Henry of the State Supreme Court to take the oath of office for the second time in three days.

$121.8 Million TVA Budget

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — The administration will ask Congress Monday to appropriate $121.8 million for Tennessee Valley Authority operations in fiscal 1980 — more than $33 million under last year's appropriation.

However, a budget report to be submitted to Congress said the TVA expects to use existing congressional bonding authority to borrow $15 million for new capital investments.

The administration also intends to ask Congress to increase this bonding authority limit during fiscal 1980, the report said. The bonds are funded by future power production, a self-supporting TVA activity.

John Wayne Going Home

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — John Wayne, living up to his tough-guy screen image and "doing beautifully," is to go home in about a week to continue recuperating from a second serious bout with cancer.

Wayne underwent removal of his stomach Jan. 12 after a malignant tumor was found during a gall bladder operation. Doctors later said cancer was found in microscopic amounts in the lymph nodes near his stomach but there was no evidence it had spread.

Dr. Carmack Holmes, a cancer specialist at UCLA Medical Center and consultant to the surgical team that removed the 71-year-old actor's stomach, said there was "no clinical evidence" to indicate the cancer had spread.

The Anatomy Of A Fatal Plane Crash

Text By Stuart Savage

It was February 17, 1978, and the weather was overcast, with a 400 foot ceiling...a dark night with fog and haze, and a chilly 45 degrees outside.

The pilot of N17523, a single-engine five-seat Beech Bonanza had flown from Myrtle Beach, S. C. to Greenville, picked up his wife, and was returning to the resort's Grand Strand airport.

The pilot had been in contact with an air controller at Myrtle Beach Air Force Base and at 2007 (8:07 p.m.) acknowledged the controller's instructions to, "Maintain your present heading. Maintain your present heading. Let me know what it is."

"Roger," the pilot responded, "five two three (the last three digits of the aircraft identification number) is now on a heading of three three zero."

They were the last words anyone outside the airplane heard from Edwin E. Rawl Jr. The prominent Greenville businessman and his wife Josie were dead moments later.

No one can know exactly what occurred in the cockpit of Rawl's plane that night. But it is known that pilots can become dizzy — confused — disoriented, when flying under such conditions as Rawl faced.

In citing the probable cause of the fatal crash, the National Transportation Board said simply, the, "Pilot in command ... became spatially disoriented," when he, "continued VFR flight into adverse weather conditions...low ceiling, fog, weather considerably worse than had been forecast."

"The aircraft crashed about five miles northeast of Strand Airport in a wooded area adjacent to a large open field. A narrow swath of broken trees, about three feet wide, began at the edge of the open field and widened to about fifteen feet as the swath continued through the wooded area on a heading of 90 degrees and approximately 300 feet to the main wreckage. Part of the right wing tip was found embedded in the ground at the beginning of the swath of broken trees. The engine was found 240 feet beyond the main wreckage," the NTSB investigation report said.

The cockpit area was demolished, but investigators reported the examination of other sections of the aircraft revealed nothing to indicate the cause of the crash.

Rawl and his wife were returning to Myrtle Beach to attend a dinner for the opening of Sportsworld, a skating rink that Rawl had developed there.

After takeoff from Pitt-Greenville Airport, Rawl contacted the Washington Air Route Traffic Control Center at Leesburg, Va., reported he was enroute to Myrtle Beach, and climbing to 8,500 feet.

At 1853 hours (6:53 p.m.), he reported to Washington Center that the aircraft was level at 8,500 feet. Twenty-five minutes later, at 1918 hours, the pilot was granted permission to descend to 2,500 feet and advised to contact Myrtle Beach AFB Approach Control.

Rawl, according to the NTSB investigation, contacted Myrtle Beach Approach Control at 1920 hours and reported his position as 33 miles north, and requested radar following into Grand Strand.

The air controller, Senior Airman Michael Hennessy answered, "One seven five two three roger, Strand landing runway two three, estimated ceiling four hundred overcast, visibility two with fog and haze, wind zero six zero at five altimeter three zero one three."

"Did you say four hundred overcast?," Rawl asked.

"That's affirmative," Hennessy responded.

(Time 1921) Hennessy asked, "November five two three you still IFR (Instrument Flight Rules)?"

"No Sir," Rawl responded, "I'm in VFR and ah I'm, I'm in good shape out here where I am. I left Myrtle Beach about an hour and a half ago and it was five hundred scattered and ah I broke out of it at eight hundred feet ah and I could see ah, you know, all through it. I'd like to ease on down closer to you please and ah see if I could get in under it VFR."

"Ah, I can't let you in, I can only let you in special VFR," the controller replied.

(VFR, or Visual Flight Rules apply when a pilot can fly soley by visual reference. The minimum VFR conditions include a 1,000 foot ceiling and three miles visibility. Special VFR can be granted with one mile visibility. However, federal regulations require a pilot to fly clear of clouds in a control zone, in either case.

(Since June 22, 1972, federal air regulations have prohibited operation under special VFR in a control zone under the special weather minimums between sunset and sunrise, unless the pilot meets the requirements for instrument flight and the aircraft is equipped for IFR operations.

(Instrument Flight Rules allow a pilot to begin his approach when there is a half-mile visibility at the airport.

(Federal Aviation Administration officials point out that nothing a controller does gives a pilot authority to deviate from federal air regulations.)

"Special VFR suits me fine sir," Rawl responded.

"Ah, OK," the controller said.

Hennessy acknowledged that he had Rawl's aircraft on radar, then six minutes later, at 1928, advised , "One seven five two three hold clear of the control zone, expect one zero minute delay."

"Roger understand five two three," Rawl responded.

(Time 1929 hours) — Hennessy advised Rawl, "Five two three traffic (another aircraft) twelve o'clock (directly ahead) seven miles he's east bound. He's being vectored to ILS (instrument landing system) at two thousand one hundred, a Cessna one seventy two."

"Roger, understand," Rawl said, "I'm reporting twenty-five hundred and I am VFR and I should be above him."

"Roger," Hennessy said, then at 1931 hours reported other traffic in the area and Rawl said he understood.

Rawl was advised to remain clear of the control zone again at 1934 hours by Hennessy. Rawl responded, saying, "Roger understand," then asked, "Ah, which control zone sir?"

"The Strand control zone," Hennessy said. "That's the one you'r landing at, right?"

"That's affirmative," Rawl replied.

"Remain clear of the control zone, we have an aircraft inbound at this time," the controller advised.

"Roger," the pilot said, "I'm turning to a heading of ah...one two zero."

"We have got traffic twelve o'clock three miles eastbound correction westbound into the airport five two three," Hennessy noted.

Two minutes later, at 1937 hours, the controller advised, "one seven five two three cleared into the control zone ah standby..."

"And now one seven five two three ah you're cleared into the control zone from the east, east of the airport and ah maintain SVFR at or below two thousand five hundred."

"Roger, understand five two three heading for the control zone," Rawl responded.

The Myrtle Beach approach control then notified the Strand air traffic control tower, "five two three is east at this time he's level twenty five hundred feet he is getting out of the control zone we're going to start all over again," and the tower responded, "Okay who is going to be first."

Approach control then told the tower that "we're going to try," to get another aircraft in first. "If it changes I let you know."

A minute later approach control notified Strand tower, "One seven five two three is going to be first and he's a mile south of Calabash," and Hennessy told Rawl, "contact Strand Tower...Cessna one seven five two three contact Strand Tower...one seven five two three this is Myrtle Beach Approach. How do you hear me?"

"Myrtle Beach Approach Bonanza five two three, did you call me?" Rawl questioned.

"I certainly did, contact the Strand Tower " Hennessy advised.

"Are you talking to five two three?" the controller then asked the tower.

"Negative," the operator called.

"Okay, we sent him over," the controller responded.

"Strand Tower Beechcraft Bonanza November one seven five two three," Rawl called.

"Beechcraft Bonanza one seven five two three Strand Tower wind zero seven zero at four, not in sight, cleared to land runway two three," the tower replied.

Rawl acknowledged the tower, then requested to go back to approach control.

"Five two three is coming back to you for a minute," the tower advised approach control.

"Roger sir, would you vector me to the airport please sir?" Rawl requested.

(Time 1943 hours) — "Ah not at this time ah maintain clear of the control zone, we have another aircraft entering."

"Roger understand, five two three departing east," the pilot responded.

"You can expect about a one zero minute delay," Hennessy reported. "Don't turn east please, you'll be going right back through the control zone."

"Roger sir, we'll turn west."

"Thank you," the controller replied.

Talking to the Strand tower about another aircraft, the Myrtle Beach air controller said, "OK, what we're going to do is this four six three zero nine can't find the airport and what we would like to do, he's not IFR qualified and what we would like to do is circle him down over the airport till he sees it."

"Yeah, well what do you have, can you suggest anything?"

"No," the tower responded.

"All right we will try that and if he can't find it what you'll have to tell him is to go somewhere else," the controller said.

"Okay where is he now?"

"Okay he's a mile north."

"Okay and what's five two three going to do," the tower questioned.

"Five two three probably have to do the same thing."

"Okay so three zero nine will be first," the tower responded.

"Yeah as it stands right now," the controller noted.

"Yeah'."

"Do you know, well, can you tell me if he has asked for a special VFR clearance into the control zone?"

"No, he hasn't yet," the controller replied.

"Do you mind a suggestion...how about asking him or use the word clearance, ask him what type of clearance he's requesting."

"Okay."

"Explain to him the weather is below basic VFR in the control zone and then if he says well I'd like to have a special then you can bring him over head the airport cause we don't have anything."

"Okay."

"You can drive him right on in. If he sees the airport we can go from there."

"Okay."

"But if you use the word clearance maybe that will ring a bell," the tower suggested.

(Time 1948 hours) — "Okay. Five two three you've traffic two o'clock two miles westbound. It's a BE-fifty-two level at ah two thousand," Hennessy advised Rawl.

"Roger five two three," the pilot acknowledged. "Hey, what altitude did that other aircraft break out?"

"He said six hundred feet."

(Time 1958 hours) — "Five two three will get you in shortly," the controller advised Rawl, who responded, "Roger..."

(Time 2000 hours) — "One seven five two three is cleared into the Strand control zone from the northeast and ah maintain Special VFR condition at or below one thousand five hundred," Hennessy advised.

"Roger understand. Would you give me a distance from the airport please sir?"

"Say again," the controller requested.

"Could you give me my distance from the airport?"

"Affirmative, you're seven miles. It's in your eleven o'clock position seven miles."

"Seven, seven, thank you," Rawl remarked.

"Five two three contact Strand Radio..." Hennessy said.

(Time 2004 hours) — "Myrtle Beach Approach Control Beechcraft Bonanza November one seven five two three," Rawl called.

"One seven five two three Myrtle Approach, go ahead."

"Roger, I didn't understand the handoff to Myrtle Beach radio while ago when I was ah asking for vectors to the airport, over."

"Okay," Hennessy explained, "ah I gave you to radio because they are the operating facility right now at the airport. Um, do you still wish to land at Strand?"

"I'd like to very much sir."

"Okay, how's the fuel doing?"

"Oh, I've got four hours."

"Well, you might need it. Okay five two three, I'll tell you what. The airport right now, you'll never see it at twenty-five hundred feet."

"I'll never see what sir?"

"You won't see the airport, I don't think at twenty-five hundred feet."

"Oh, I know that sir," Rawl responded. "I was asking for vectors to the airport. I was going to slip right down under it, over."

(Time 2005 hours) — "Okay five two three, descend and maintain one thousand six hundred."

"Roger understand," Rawl said to the controller. "... thank you for the help."

Rawl acknowledged the heading, then Hennessy, at 2006 hours, asked, "Five two three, say your heading."

"(Garbled) three zero," Rawl responded.

Rawl again acknowledged the transmission, and Hennessy questioned, "Did you say you were heading three three zero?"

(Time 2007 hours) — "No sir, I was (garbled) heading three zero zero at the time you talked to me," Rawl said.

"Maintain your present heading. Maintain your present heading. Let me know what it is," Hennessy instructed.

"Roger, five two three is now on a heading of three three zero (garbled)."

"Hennessy then said, "Okay, turn left heading two two zero.

"Five two three you copy?

"One seven five two three Myrtle Beach Approach how do you hear me? One seven five two three Myrtle Beach Approach how do you hear me? Beechcraft one seven five two three Myrtle Beach Approach how do you hear me?"

(Time 2008 hours) — Hennessy asked, "Nine six yankee would you do me a favor and call one seven five two three, and see if you hear him?"

"One seven five two three...Myrtle Beach, Baron six nine yankee," the other aircraft pilot transmitted.

"Six nine yankee, go ahead."

"One seven five two three?" the pilot questioned.

"That's affirmative on this frequency call one seven five two three and see if ah he can hear you."

(Time 2009 hours) — "Ah roger, aircraft one seven five two three, Baron six nine yankee.

"Negative."

"Thank you," Hennessy responded.

(Time 2010 hours) — "November one seven five two three Myrtle Beach Approach, how do you hear me?

"November one seven five two three Myrtle Beach Approach how do you hear me?"

(Time 2012 hours) — "November one seven five two three Myrtle Beach Approach how do you hear?"

In a statement to investigators, Hennessy said after Rawl called for a landing at Grand Strand, "I issued the weather, identified N17523 on radar and told him to remain clear of the control zone and expect a ten minute delay.

"I observed N17523 continue inbound to the airport and enter the control zone, so I told him again to remain clear of the control zone."

"Approximately 10 minutes later I cleared N17523 to enter the control zone from the east...and contact Strand Tower.

"I observed N17523 overfly the airport and head westbound at 2,500 feet." Hennessy noted.

The controller said he again cleared the aircraft, into the control zone from the Northeast, at or below 1,500 feet, but, "N17523 did not appear to descend below 2,500 feet, passed over the airport, returned to my frequency and requested radar vectors to the airport."

It was then, according to Hennessy that the controller asked Rawl about his fuel, and if he still wanted to land at Grand Strand.

"I descended N17523 to 1,600 feet and assigned him a 270 degree heading which he acknowledged." But Hennessy said the aircraft, "appeared to remain at 2,500 feet and was heading Northeast.

"I asked N17523 his heading and his reply was garbled, but sounded like 030, so I turned him right . . . to head him back to the airport. N17523 acknowledged the heading," but, "still appeared to be heading Northeasterly, so I asked him what had been his heading."

Rawl, the controller said, "replied that he had been heading 300. I then..." instructed the pilot, "to maintain his present heading and advise me what it was.

Rawl, according to the controller, "did not acknowledge and his beacon code and radar target disappeared from the (radar) scope."

TSgt. J. W. Pierce, crew chief monitoring the approach control positions at Myrtle Beach at the time noted, "the last altitude readout that I observed was at 2,300 feet, just before the target disappeared...a few seconds," after Hennessy told Rawl to turn left...

Rawl, 53, held a private pilot certificate with rating in single and multi-engine airplanes. But even with 2,500 hours flying time, Rawl did not hold an instrument rating — a rating required by FAA regulations for pilots flying under conditions such as those he faced that night.

HEAO-1's Amazing Discoveries

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. astronomy satellite which died a little over a week ago discovered that the universe may one day stop expanding because it is enveloped in a cloud of gas and dust with a mass equal to a million billion suns.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said the total mass of the cloud might be sufficient to "close the universe — to preclude its expanding forever."

That discovery, NASA said, is just one of many remarkable achievements of the satellite, which quit transmitting Jan. 8 after 17 months of exploring a "whole world of bursting, exploding phenomena" in the hidden sky the eye cannot see.

It gathered knowledge, the agency reported, that "may bring fundamental changes in our concept of the universe."

When this High Energy Astronomy Observatory — HEAO-1 was launched in August, 1977, it had an expected lifetime of six months. But it continued to operate long after that, until its control gas finally gave out.

NASA said its instruments recorded gamma and cosmic rays and high energy X-rays emitted by some of the most intriguing mysteries in the universe — pulsars, quesars, exploding galaxies and black holes.

HEAO-1 very early began detecting large amounts of high energy X-ray background radiation emitted by hot gas in intergalactic space, gas that previously was not known to exist.

Scientists long have wondered whether the universe had enough mass so that ultimately it would stop expanding and perhaps begin gravitationally contracting.

NASA said the HEAO-1 gas cloud discovery might be the answer scientists have been seeking. But it added that millions of years could pass before the universe ceases to expand.

A SCALE MODEL — of the Model Home currently being built by vocational students of Rose High School is now on display in the lobby of First Federal Savings and Loan on Evans Mall. The model won first prize in the Pitt County Fair and second prize in the N. C. State Fair. The scale model shows the basic plan of this, the fifth house being constructed under The Live Project program. Sixteen students are participating in the construction. The model will be exhibited through Feb. 28 and the public is invited to view it.

Citation Made To Local Man

Bruce Beasley Jr., chairman of the Pitt County Development Commission, has been designated as an official "North Carolina Ambassador-at-Large" by Gov. Jim Hunt.

Beasley received the citation last week in ceremonies held in conjunction with the commission's annual Ladies Night program in Farmville.

The chairman was cited by Hunt for his personal activities and initiative on the commission's Industrial Development Trade Mission to the Minneapolis-St. Paul area during last August. As mission chairman, Beasley was praised for his contact work with the 16 visits made during the trip, and subsequent follow-up activities.

Beasley was also recognized for the input he has contributed on trade missions which have taken place by the N.C. Department of Commerce since August.

A Fountain resident, he has served two terms on the commission's board, and is presently beginning his second year as chairman.

On Acc's Dean List

To earn places on the Dean's List students must achieve at least a 3.20 (B-plus) grade average for the semester while carrying a minimum of 12 semester hours.

Local students named are:

FARMVILLE — Tedra H. Allen, Marvin J. Fuquay.

FOUNTAIN — Alice F. Langley.

GREENVILLE — Lille A. Darden, Linda R. Tucker, Debra E. Waller.

JAMESVILLE — Theresa McIntyre.

WALSTONBURG — Kathy F. Blizzard, Horace T. Hering.

WILLIAMSTON — Deborah K. Koesy.

WINTERVILLE — JoAnn Hines, Ronald L. Morton.

Adopt-A-Pet

The Pitt County Humane Society is seeking homes for three dogs this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Whitehurst gave away all the puppies pictured in last week's column, except one female. They may be reached at 752-6445.

Mr. and Mrs. Chuck Swift have two six-month-old labrador retriever-shepherds they need homes for. One's male; one female. One may call 758-0152, and if no answer, then 752-5467.

Anyone wishing to place animals for adoption may call Humane Society Pres. Jeanette Fiore, 758-0468.

Volunteer Greenville

Volunteer needs for Volunteer Greenville have been announced by coordinator, Mrs. Nancy Harrington. These are:

— Volunteers to tape books for the blind through the N. C. Library for the Blind and Physically Handicapped.

— Volunteers to provide occasional transportation.

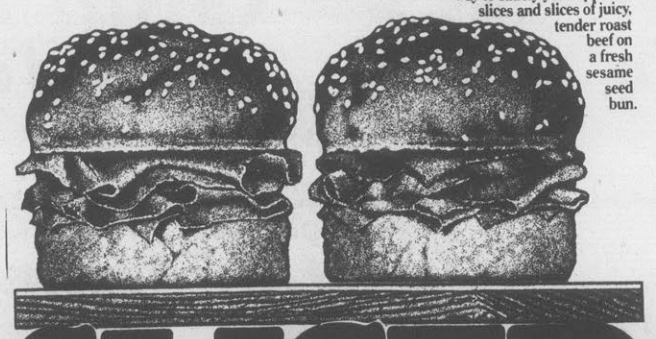

— Books on all subjects are needed by the Dept. of Corrections Pre-Release and Aftercare Center.

For information on these and other opportunities, call Mrs. Harrington at 752-4137, ext. 262 or visit the office at 2000 Cedar Lane.

ENGINEERING & LAND SURVEYING COMPANIES MERGE

Triangle Engineering & Surveying Inc. and Stroud Engineering and Land Surveying Co. Pa, are pleased to announce the merging of their firms. The company will do business as Triangle Engineering & Surverying Inc. with the home office located in Raleigh, N.C. The local office will be temporarily located at 301 S. Evans Street, Suite 201.

Extended School Program Students Learning While Earning

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

Eighteen students attending the Greenville Extended School Program at Agnes Fullilove School are now working as well as going to school.

Eight of this group — seven girls and one boy — are employed as teacher aides in three Greenville elementary schools. Another eight, all male students, are working as custodial personnel in schools. The remaining two have jobs as assistants in the nursery school maintained at Agnes Fullilove.

Tony Gray, counselor and instructor at Agnes Fullilove, spoke about the job program for the 18 students.

"Essentially," Gray remarked, "the students in the teacher aides slots are doing jobs similar to and with responsibilities much like those of aides hired and paid for by the state.

"There's no funds involved other than C.E.T.A. funds, and this of course represents a substantial savings of state and local funds."

Gray also commented that the teacher aides from Agnes Fullilove are monitored by teachers to whom they are assigned on the same basis that is used for other aides. Gray said that choosing eight as teacher aides from the 125 students enrolled in the Extended School Program entailed careful consideration from several viewpoints.

"Above all," he said, "we selected those we were convinced had something to offer children in the schools in which they were to be working. We also considered the factor of what the Agnes Fullilove students chosen would gain from the experience."

Fundamental experience being gained by students in the work program are that they have an opportunity to work and to be paid for it — at the minimum hourly wage —, and they receive high school credit for the work performed.

Gray indicated that close monitoring is maintained with teachers supervising the teacher aides. "We began the program in early November, and to date it is working very well, we've had no problems. Those selected were not sent right away to their jobs, but were first given training in job preparation classes so that we could be certain they were right for the job and would know what to expect when they went to work."

When asked about the ratio of seven girls to one boy selected for the teacher aides assignments, Gray said there was no bias involved, but that it simply equated to "the appropriate selection of the student to fit their needs, their inclinations for certain types of work. In other words," he added, "it was a case of practical application of all the factors involved."

The eight chosen for teacher aides, the schools to which they are assigned, and the supervising teachers are:

— Third Street School — Teacher's aides: Edna Nobles, Teresa Reese, Johnny Hardy, Shirley Williams, Patricia Bynum and Carolyn Perkins; teachers: Bedie Hester, Trilly Harris, May Austin, Jane Witort, Becky Groome, and Betty Credle.

— Sadie Saulter School — Martha White, teacher aide, and Lynn Ezzelle, teacher.

— Elmhurst School — Sandra Howard, teacher aide, and Betsy West, teacher.

The city extended program at this time is limiting job opportunities to openings within the city school system — in contrast to the county extended program, which places students in jobs in schools as well as in non-profit agencies.

"Hopefully, by mid-February, the planned date for putting into effect the coordinated Pitt County-Greenville Schools program for the Greenville and Pitt County Schools, the job opportunities for both groups will be considerably broadened," Gray pointed out.

The planned consolidation will also, Gray pointed out, have other advantages, such as "the reduction in duplication of two current programs, and the opportunity for staff members of both programs to work together cooperatively."

Community Ambassador Plans

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

Advance planning is the keynote this year to lay the groundwork for an early campaign to insure sufficient funds to send a Greenville youth abroad as the 1979 Greenville Community Ambassador.

At a committee meeting held last Tuesday night, plans were outlined and officers elected for the coming year. Dr. Richard Taft was elected chairman; Les Garner is co-chairman for fund raising; Laura Shivas, secretary; and Pam Enland, publicity chairman.

Commenting on the rewards — both for the student chosen and the community at large of this continuing youth ambassadorial program, Dr. Taft said this is a great opportunity for students in Greenville to have a chance to broaden their experience from an international point of view. The student ambassador sent by the city of Greenville will also represent the entire businesses, our family, our international level. Things are important to Greenville."

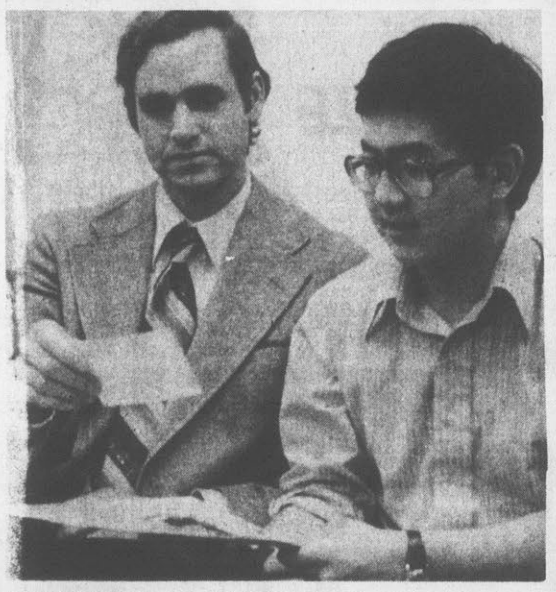

For 1979, a goal of $3,000 has been set for the fund raising drive. The drive is due to get underway at an early date. "Only one scholarship is planned for this year," Dr. Taft revealed. "It will cost about $1,450 to send the student ambassador abroad. The reason we have set our goal at $3,000 is to create reserve funds to apply to next year, when ambassador. Another reason we hope to collect this amount at an early date is to avoid a last minute crisis such as we have faced in some years in the past."

Applications for students to apply for the community ambassador scholarship went out to juniors on Friday. To be considered, they are to be returned by January 25, and on February 12, the committee will act to select and name the student chosen for Community Ambassador, 1979.

The current community ambassador, Jeen Kim, spent three weeks with a family in the Netherlands last summer. Since his return, he has made frequent appearances before area civic groups, church audiences, clubs and other organizations who have expressed an interest in having Kim talk to them about his impressions and his experiences.

This role, as well as the traditional ritual of taking a key to Greenville from the mayor to be presented to the equivalent official of the place visited abroad, are ones that have been and will continue to be part of the overall ambassador program.

Additionally, Kim will be in touch with the new ambassador to offer assistance and timely tips on many factors connected with travel, conduct, and the role of representing Greenville. (He is still available to any local group or agency that may wish to have him speak).

4th 'R' For Church Schools

By NAOMI KAUFMAN
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A fourth "r" joins reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic at some Protestant church-operated schools in North Carolina, and it stands for religion.

Leaders of a group of the Christian schools say the state is trying to trample on their religious freedom, and they are waging a series of court battle against state regulation.

More than half the estimated 120 private, fundamentalist Christian schools in the state have spent the past year in court defending what they regard as their freedom of religion. However, state officials view the situation differently, maintaining that they are trying to ensure that all schools in the state meet minimum educational requirements.

"The educational process is not compartmentalized into religious and secular components," said William B. Ball, one of the schools' attorneys. "The educational process in these schools is not separated from God."

Dr. David Bruton, chairman of the state Board of Education, counters that "the issue is about the state's right and duty to see that its citizens are educated."

North Carolina is apparently one of few states in the South to require all schools, both public and private, to be licensed. In Georgia, for example, private schools don't have to have licenses, said Clarence Lambert of the Georgia Department of Education.

"It's a weakness, something you need to work on," Lambert said. "But when you get in the General Assembly and start messing with the private schools, you really hit a wall."

Georgia has some fire requirements, but Lambert said that's about all. "They can use high school students for teachers, if they have a mind to pay for them," he said.

When 63 North Carolina schools last year refused to file annual reports with the state telling basic information such as length of the school day and year, curriculum and teacher qualifications, the state sued.

The case is on appeal to the N.C. Court of Appeals by the schools, which lost the first round in a lower court.

"There is no evidence that we would be in any way impeding their religious beliefs," said Andrew J. Vanore, senior deputy attorney general, of the reporting requirement. "... they simply object to filing reports, and that ain't good enough."

Vanore suggested that many of the schools refused to file the reports because their teachers are not state-certified.

The Rev. Daniel Carr of Winston-Salem, head of a group called Organized Christian Schools, said the schools want teachers who embody "Christian" beliefs and that many of the teachers are graduates of fundamentalist Christian colleges that are not accredited, either.

At some of the schools, prospective teachers are asked to prove that they are "born-again Christians" and are also asked about their attitudes toward liquor, tobacco, drugs, movies and "other worldly entertainment."

The state's interest goes beyond licensing, however. Three other suits are before the courts.

—The 63 North Carolina schools are challenging a state requirement that their 11th graders take competency tests in mathematics and reading. All high school juniors are required to pass the tests before they can receive high school diplomas, but leaders of the Christian schools contend that the state has no constitutional right to impose testing. State officials say the test results assure them that the students are getting at least a basic education.

—The state Department of Administration sued 11 church-run day-care centers for operating without licenses. The churches say the centers are religious operations. The state contends that the safety of children is at stake because the licensing requirements include fire and safety code compliance. The case is on appeal.

—The North Carolina Employment Security Commission late last year told church schools that they had to start paying unemployment insurance taxes on their employees. The churches sued, but the case was thrown out of a state court and may be moved to federal court. School attorneys say the employees work for the churches, and church employees have always been exempt.

A federal judge in South Carolina ruled Dec. 29 that Bob Jones University in Greenville did not have to pay unemployment taxes because the school is mainly a religious institution.

Tom Strickland, a former North Carolina state Senator and now an attorney for the schools as well as a registered legislative lobbyist for Carr's group, said, "It's a question of whether these school activities are ministries of the church. If they are, the government has no business being involved in them."

The fight has been extremely costly for the church schools. Carr estimated that they spent at least $120,000 last year, and the bills are sure to grow as appeals are heard.

But the South Carolina case and a case in Kentucky last year hearten the church-school leaders.

A Franklin County, Ky., circuit judge ruled last year that the state does not have a right to regulate private, church-related schools because the state's interest in setting minimum standards for operation does not outweigh the schools' First Amendment right to free exercise and expression of religion. The case is on appeal to the state Court of Appeals.

School leaders and attorneys also question why North Carolina makes demands on them

Eugene Fodor Will Perform Jan 30

A young violinist who has been called "the Mick Jagger of classical music" will be performing at East Carolina University on Tuesday, Jan.30.

Eugene Fodor, 27, will perform at 8 p.m. on that date in Hendrix Theater Mendenhall Student Center. Part of the 1978-79 Artists Series, Fodor's recital is sponsored by the Student Union Artists Series Committee.

When Fodor won one of the three top violin prizes at Moscow's Tchaikovsky International Competition in 1975, his was one of the most celebrated wins by an American since Van Cliburn's piano triumph 20 years ago. Fodor tied for second place with two Russians — but no first place prize was given that year, a circumstance that led many listeners to feel the no clear cut prize decision to be a political consideration.

Nevertheless, his performance was a rousing success, with the Russian audience demanding four encores. Since the Russian affair, Fedor has played at the White House, at numerous concerts in the U.S. and abroad, and as soloist with several symphony orchestras.

Fodor's performance trademarks are what he terms "the glitter, the conviction of your own style, the polish." He feels his technique was established by the time he was 15, but he's been working on the glitter since.

Tickets for Fodor's single Jan. 30 performance are now on sale at the Central Ticket Office in Mendenhall, or by calling 757-6611. They are priced at $5.00, either in advance or at the door.

VIOLINIST EUGENE FODOR . . . 27-year old winner of the 1975 Moscow Tchaikovsky International Competition, will perform at Mendenhall Student Center in Hendrix Theater at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 30. Tickets are now on sale at the Central Ticket Office.

Chamber Music Recital To Be Given Thursday

A Chamber Music Recital by members of the faculty of the School of Music, East Carolina University, will be given at 8:15 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 25 in the Recital Hall of the A. J. Fletcher Music Center.

Performers in the chamber group to play Thursday are David Hawkins, oboe; Paul Topper, violin; E. Robert Irwin, harpsichord; Daniel Mellado, cello; Rodney Schmidt, violin; Fairya Mellado, viola; and Janet Reeve, bass. Ms. Mellado is a non-faculty musician and Ms. Reeve is a student.

Compositions by three composers — Telemann, Rossini, and Mozart — will be performed. Music listed for the program are:

— "Sonata in A Major" by Rossini, with Schmidt, Fairya and Daniel Mellado, and Janet Reeve.

— Mozart's "Quartet in F for Oboe and Strings, K. 370," with Hawkins, Topper and the Mellados. The performance of the Mozart work will be preceded by a five-minute intermission.

There is no admission charged, and the public is invited. Seating will be on a first-to-arrive, first-seated basis.

Tardif At NCMA

RALEIGH — Paul Tardif, pianist and faculty member of the School of Music, East Carolina University, will present a program of 19th and 20th century French music at the North Carolina Museum of Art today.

Tardif's concert will begin at 4 p.m. in the Kress Galleries of the Museum, located at 107 E. Morgan Street.

Tardif has given concerts in Poland under the auspices of the U.S. State Department and has appeared in numerous concerts in Greenville and on the East Coast.

The concert is free and open to the public.

Dinner Theater Feb. 8-10

Another in a series of dinner theater at Mendenhall Student Center will be held on three evenings, Feb. 8-10.

Dinner will be served beginning at 6:30 p.m. and curtain time will be at 8 p.m. on each of the three days.

The theatrical attraction is a comedy of errors titled "Black Comedy," and is being directed by Dr. Marie Farr of the East Carolina University English Department.

Only 100 seats are available for each of the three performances. Tickets are now available at the Central Ticket Office in Mendenhall Student Center and are priced at $8.50 per person. All tickets must be purchased 36 hours in advance of the dinner-performance.

IN FACULTY RECITAL . . . Henry Doskey, pianist and faculty member of the School of Music, East Carolina University, will perform in a recital at Hendrix Theater, Mendenhall Student Center, at 8:15 p.m. tonight. The program is free, and the public is invited to attend. (ECU News Bureau Photo by Marianne Baines)

Student Recitals

Linda Hanson

Linda Lee Hanson, a student in the School of Music, East Carolina University, will give her senior violin recital at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Jan. 22 in the A. J. Fletcher Music Center Recital Hall.

Ms. Hanson will be accompanied by pianist Karen Hause in a recital encompassing three works — Mozart's "Violin Sonata in e minor;" Bach's "Unaccompanied Violin Sonata in E Major; " and Franck's "Violin Sonata in f minor."

There is no admission charge and the public is invited to attend.

Ben Leaptrott

East Carolina School of Music student Ben Leaptrott will give his junior piano recital at the A. J. Fletcher Music Center Recital Hall at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 23.

For his program, he will perform Bach's "Fantasie in c minor;" Beethoven's "Sonata in E flat Major; " two works by Brahms; two selections from Debussy's "Preludes, Book I;" and Ernst von Dohnanyi's "Capriccio in b minor."

The public is invited and there is no admission charged.

Mansion To Reopen

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Executive Mansion will reopen for public tours effective Feb. 1. The tour schedule is: Tuesday-Friday, 10 to 11:30 a.m. and 1:30 to 3 p.m. Appointments are necessary and are made by calling 733-3456.

Cale To Perform At Roxy

Shelter Records recording artist J. J. Cale will be in Greenville to perform in four shows on Friday and Saturday, Feb. 9 and 10 at Roxy Music Arts and Crafts Center, 629 Albemarle Street.

On those two dates, Cale will be appearing in shows at 7 p.m. and again at 10 p.m.

Ticket prices for this concert are $5 in advance and $6 at the door. Among Cale's hit songs are ones such as "Crazy Mama," "After Midnight," and his best known recent record, "Cocaine."

Also featured in these concerts in the opening act slot will be Don Schlitz of Durham, who has gained attention with his song, "The Gambler," which has been recorded by Charlie Tango, Hugh Moffitt, and Bobby Bare.

Kinston Show

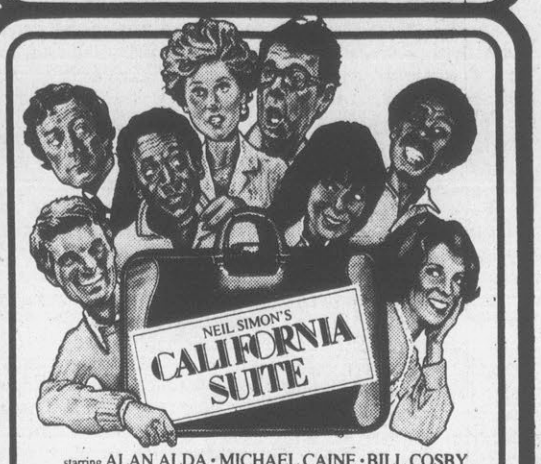

KINSTON — A collection of contemporary European prints, assembled by the North Carolina Museum of Art, will be on display in the Lenoir Community College Art Gallery through Jan. 25, according to Gerald Elliott, art instructor.

The 18 prints in the exhibit were donated to the Museum by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Benjamin of Greensboro and New Orleans, La.

Roxanne Reep Show At Art Center

The current show of paintings and sculpted metal which opened last Sunday at the Greenville Art Center reveals Roxanne Reep to be a young woman talented in creating with paint and metal.

Ms. Reep, of Nebo, is a graduate student of the School of Art, East Carolina University, working on the MFA Degree in Metal Design and Drawing.

At the Art Center, she is exhibiting more than a dozen works each in various metals and large paintings.

Her "sculpted metal" pieces are mostly jewelry, using techniques of forged silver, forged copper and brass, metal and plexiglass combined. In a couple of these pieces, she has incorporated decorative stones.

Based loosely on organic forms, the sculpted metal jewelry and accessories successfully blend elements of contemporary and traditional designs. Pendants, bracelet, a hairband, a leather and silver evening bag, and one or two creations with mirrors are among works Ms. Reep has chosen to exhibit.

The large paintings are strong, bold. Ones with darker colors are held in check so that blacks, browns and dark greens remain clear, crisply delineated without being murky.

In several examples, such as that shown in the accompanying photograph, the influence of Franz Kline can be detected. Ms. Reep, however, softens the stringency of abstract patterns with lightly painted in fragments of words, spots of color and in some instances with indicator lines and swirled areas of thinner washes contrasted against heavier areas.

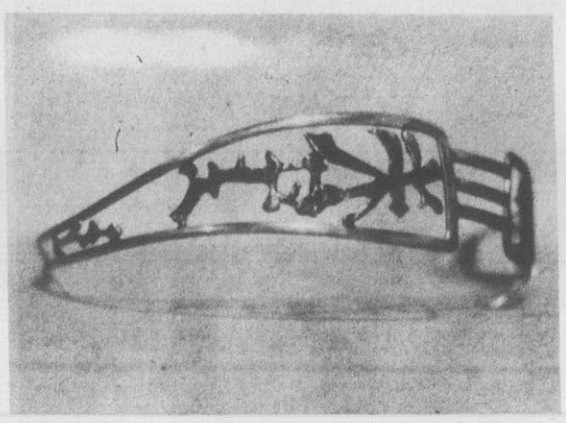

Two of the lighter hued paintings have definite architectural overtones that could be taken as a coming change of approach to her more usual style.

For an artist of her young years, Roxanne Reep has achieved an impressive array of awards and exhibitions. Among these have been a purchase award by Reynolds Industries for their World Headquarters Building collection; acceptance in the 40th Annual N. C. Artist Competition; five awards in Greenville Sidewalk Art Shows; and awards from museums and shows in Shelby, Kinston, Washington, Fayetteville and Lancaster, S. C.

Her work has been exhibited in several North Carolina locations, as well as in Georgia, New Jersey, and South Carolina.

Jerry Raynor

Faculty Show Reception

A reception for the inauguration of the School of Art, East Carolina University Annual Faculty Art Show will be held from 8 to 10 p.m. Friday, January in the Wellington B. Gray Memorial Gallery of the Leo Jenkins Fine Arts Center.

Refreshments will be served, and the public is invited to attend. The show will be up until Feb. 17.

Compositions To Be Published This Spring

DR. ALAN LEICHTLING . . . professor of music at East Carolina University, will have four new compositions published by Seesaw Music Corporation this spring. (ECU News Bureau Photo)

ECU News Bureau

Dr. Alan Leichtling, professor of music in the School of Music, East Carolina University, has four new compositions scheduled for publication by Seesaw Music Corporation, New York, this spring.

Two of the pieces have already been heard, in premiere performances in New York and Greenville. "Fantasy Piece-I, Opus 54 for Solo Bass Clarinet" was given its premiere performance at the Juilliard School by Howard Knopf in 1971 — though the new composition to be published is a completely revised version of the work.

The other three works were all written in 1978.

"Carolina Fanfares, Opus 75 for Three Trumpets" was written for the December 1978 Madrigal Dinners production at ECU and was first performed at that time.

"Fantasy Piece-IV, Opus 76 for Solo Alto Saxophone" was written for saxophonist James Forger of the ECU music faculty. Forger will give the piece its premiere performance during the spring semester.

The fourth composition to be published is "Fantasy Piece-III, Opus 74 for Solo English Horn."

Dr. Leichtling has published 41 compositions since 1969, which include a symphony, a piano sonata, two operas, two concertos, and a wide variety of music for solo instruments, voice, choral and chamber groups.

He earned his BM, MS and DMA in composition from the Juilliard School, and while there studied with Vincent Persichetti, Roger Sessions, Darius Milhaud and Charles Jones. He came to ECU in 1978 from Grinnell College.

Leichtling is the recipient of several prestigious awards — the BMI Award, Aspen Prize, Gretchaninoff Award (in 1969 and again in 1971), the Freschl Award, Edward Garrett McCollin Prize, and has twice been nominated for the Pulitzer Prize.

The composer has also been awarded grants from the National Endowment for the Arts, the Martha Baird Rockefeller Foundation, and the Ford Foundation.

Auditions Set For Major Outdoor Dramas

CHAPEL HILL — The Institute of Outdoor Drama will host auditions here March 17 for 15 major outdoor comapnies. The institute, under the auspices of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, serves as headquarters for all the outdoor companies in the nation.

Only 250 preregistered applicants will be allowed to perform at the audition. The registration deadline is March 5. Applicants must be 18 or older and have previous theater training or credits. No apprenticeships are available.

Openings are for actors, dancers, singers and technicians. All the positions are salaried and last the entire summer season. All companies are Equal Opportunity Employers.

Each actor will be placed in a group pf ten and will perform a one-minute memorized selection. Singers will present two prepared short numbers. No preparation is necessary for dancers, but they should be dressed in appropriate work clothes. A special screening will be held for technicians who are not performers.

Directors of eight North Carolina productions are scheduled to hold auditions here. They are: Joe Layton and Bob Knowles, "The Lost Colony," Manteo; Bill Hardy, "Unto These Hills," Cherokee; Ed Pilkington, "Horn in the West," Boone; as well as directors from "Blackbeard: Knight of the Black Flag," Bath; "The Liberty Cart," Kenansville; "Strike at the Wind!'," Pembroke; "The Sword of Peace Summer Celebration," Snow Camp; and "The Legend of Tom Dooley," a new outdoor drama in Wilkesboro.

Out of state directors scheduled to attend include: Ewel Cornett, "Hatfields and McCoys," and "Honey in the Rock," Beckley, W. Va.; Mike Walters, "The Legend of Daniel Boone," Harrodsburg, Ky.; David Davis, "The Lone Star," Galveston, Texas; W. L. Mundell, "Tecumseh!" Chillocothe, Ohio; and Charles Kray, "Trumpet in the Land," New Philadelphia, Ohio.

Also represented at the auditions will be "Oklahoma" and "Dust on Her Petticoats," Tulsa, Okla. and "Wilderness Road," Berea, Ky.

Information and registration forms may be obtained from the Auditions Director, Institute of Outdoor Drama, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, 202 Graham Memorial 052-A, Chapel Hill, N. C. 27514.

Writers To Meet Tuesday

The first meeting in 1979 of the Greenville Writers Club will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 23 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Raynor, 2106 Pendleton Street.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By June Parker

Several new books have recently been purchased for Sheppard Memorial Library which have captured much general interest. The first book is SECOND GENERATION by Howard Fast. In this second volume of a trilogy, which began with THE IMMIGRANTS, Fast traces further the activities of Dan Lavette and his family from the Depression to the close of World War II. Dan returns to big-time shipping with the coming of the war; however, the book focuses primarily upon his daughter, Barbara, whose scorn for her mother's social world leads to her total involvement with the troubled times which began with aid to striking dockworkers and continues in prewar Nazi Germany as she becomes a news correspondent. Fast is able to create this world with empathy and passion. This particular volume sums up the earlier adventures of the family for new readers, has a satisfying ending, but leaves spaces for adequate speculation as to the events of the concluding segment.

In THE SNOW LEOPARD by Peter Matthiessen. Matthiessen tells of his five-week trek with field biologist, George Schaller, through northwestern Nepal in the land of Inner Dolpo, the last vestige of pure Tibetan culture, which he made in order to observe the blue sheep and the snow leopard, the rarest and most beautiful of all the cats, which prey upon them; however, he was seeking much more. In a diary form, he records not only the arduous journey over the Himalayan mountains but also the contemplations of his past experiences with drugs, his involvement with Zen Buddhism, and the recent agonizing death of his wife. This trip for Matthiessen was an inner journey and a testing of himself. The book is a combination of anthropology, natural history, old-fashioned adventure, and introspection.

The last book THE COUP by John Updike is a story of modern Africa. By deposing the profiteering monarchist King Edumu, Colonel Ellellou sought to restore dignity and sovereignty to his small African nation of Kush. Colonel, then President Ellellou has four wives, a silver Mercedes, a poetic sensibility and a complete aversion to anything from the United States which he had developed during his four years at a small college in Wisconsin. However, the United States keeps creeping into his country and the subversion is the main body of the story. In bitterly funny crises, Ellellou tries to stop such U. S. interventions as the mountains of Corn Curls and Total sent to relieve a famine. Updike's touch is such and devastating as he illustrates American intrusion into other countries and other cultures, satirizes Henry Klipspringer, and devises ironic twists to harass and eventually remove Ellellou. This wickedly witty vision of the United States and the modern world is a telling satire as is the picture of the shift from village to suburban life-style in this African nation.

EMF Auditions Jan. 29

GREENSBORO — Auditions for North Carolina students for the six-week Eastern Music Festival for the summer of 1979 have been held in two North Carolina cities and will be held in Raleigh on Monday, January 29 in a final audition date. Previous auditions were in Charlotte and Winston-Salem.

Joseph Thayer, the Festival's Director of Admissions, will be in Raleigh to conduct auditions for interested students.

A total of 235 students will be selected to attend the 18th season of the Festival, to be held in Greensboro from June 23 through August 4.

Curriculum will be in four major areas of study — orchestral instruments, voice, piano, and compositon. A limited number of grants-in-aid are available.

For more detailed information, write or call the Festival Office at 712 Summit Ave., Greensboro, N. C., 27405, telephone 272-2177.

Weary Refugees Debark In Hong Kong

REFUGEES TO ISRAEL — A Vietnamese girl cries on the shoulder of a friend as she bids her good-bye before joining a group of other refugees from Vietnam taken off the overcrowded ship Tung An in Manila Bay, Friday, for resettlement in Israel. (AP Laserphoto)

Associated Press Writer

HONG KONG (AP) — Weary but smiling, 371 Vietnamese refugees from the rusty freighter Huey Fong touched land today after four weeks at anchor on Hong Kong's doorstep. They were quickly whisked off to a transit camp to await resettlement overseas.

The group was brought ashore in boats from the crowded 2,290-ton freighter, crammed with more than 3,300 persons who fled Vietnam.

During their four-week wait in international waters off Hong Kong, the "boat people" had begged for refuge from authorities of the British colony.

One of those finally landing today, a 15-year-old girl, collapsed from shock after coming ashore at a wharf in Kowloon, Hong Kong's twin city across the harbor. She was rushed to a hospital and a government spokesman said she was in fair condition.

The others, warmly clad against the cold weather, were helped into buses and taken to a former Royal Air Force base near Hong Kong's Kaitak Airport. The airbase was renovated recently under a contingency plan to house refugees.

On Friday, authorities decided to accept the boat people after several Western governments offered to take some refugees already in Hong Kong camps, thereby making room for Huey Fong passengers.

Reporters were not allowed to speak with the refugees as they disembarked today.

'Pardon Me, Ray'

By RICHARD LOWE
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — "Pardon Me, Ray," an uptempo country tune sparked by the pardoning ways of former Gov. Ray Blanton, is tops in Music City, U.S.A.

The song is sung by Nashville TV weatherman Brian Christie, who coined the title, wrote some of the lyrics and recorded it for Sound Factory Records.

Christie said he was upset when he heard Blanton had pardoned three convicts and commuted the sentences of 49 others, including double-murderer Roger Humphreys.

So, earlier this week he threw out a line — "Pardon Me, Ray" — in the newsroom of television station WNGE and immediately received lyric suggestions from station employees.

By the time he entered a recording studio Wednesday, the day Republican Lamar Alexander was sworn in as governor early to prevent Blanton from granting more pardons, at least 100 persons had contributed to the song. They included the musicians at the recording session who wrote the melody, he said.

"I was so mad at Blanton I just said, 'Why don't we write a song about him as a fun thing.'" Christie, 29, said in an interview Friday. "Musicians were calling us to get in on the recording session because they felt the same way about Blanton."

"Pardon me, Ray, are you the cat that signs the pardons?" the song begins. "Cause you're an old friend of mine, just put your name on the line.

"Double-murder and rape, that's all the jury put me in for. And I'm sure you'll agree, they took advantage of me."

Christie said 100,000 copies of the record have been shipped to stores and another 100,000 are on order from the distributor.

"The requests have been unbelievable," Christie said. "It's the most requested record in the state right now. One station had to ask people to stop calling in."

He said the record has been played on more than 160 radio stations, mostly in Tennesse, and has spread to stations in Kentucky, Alabama, Georgia, Missouri and Oklahoma.

Two former Blanton aides and a Tennessee highway patrolman were arrested Dec. 15 by the FBI and charged with extortion and conspiracy to sell clemencies, pardons and paroles.

Judge Requests Case Investigated

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Superior Court judge has asked Gov. Jim Hunt to investigate allegations that the state Highway Patrol harassed a Fort Bragg paratrooper before the soldier shot and killed his best friend last year.

Sgt. Roy Valentine, 22, pleaded guilty to the shotgun slaying last April of Randy Joe Thrower, 20, of Willow Springs, and the rape of Thrower's wife. He is serving a life sentence.

Valentine's sister, Candy Narron, contends the Highway Patrol harassed her brother because of a Pitt County burglary during which Valentine was reportedly on 24-hour guard duty at Fort Bragg, 110 miles from the site of the crime.

Ms. Narron said she believes the patrol's harassment of Valentine caused the deterioration of her brother's mental condition and led him to kill Thrower.

When Valentine was sentenced in October, allegations of police harassment were raised. But Superior Court Judge James H. Pou Bailey said he waited until he received written information about Valentine before requesting the investigation.

"I told the governor there appears to have been serious irregularities," Bailey said. "And there are allegations of a connection between the Pitt County matter and the killing.

"I have requested that the governor cause a full investigation of the charges against Valentine in Pitt County and the handling of those charges," Bailey said.

Valentine was arrested on March 11 and charged with breaking into the home of Highway Patrol Sgt. Claude S. Harrison in Ayden. Harrison's daughter, Lynne, was engaged to Valentine until they broke up in late 1977.

Charlotte Concerts

CHARLOTTE — Two late January attractions are scheduled by the Charlotte Symphony Orchestra. On Wednesday, Jan. 24, conductor Leo Driehuys will lead the orchestra in a performance of Carl Orff's "Carmina Burana," which features a 160-voice chorus and three soloists.

On Saturday, Jan. 27, the orchestra will perform with Benny Goodman. Both concerts are to be in Ovens Auditorium at 8:15.

Pitt Courthouse Is Nominated

RALEIGH — The Pitt County Courthouse, built in 1910, has been nomimated for inclusion in the National Register of Historic Places by Larry E. Tise, State Historic Preservation Officer.

KThe register is described as a national list of distinctive properties worthy of preservation because of their historical or other cultural value.

The Pitt County Courthouse is nominated as part of an innovative type of nomination to the National Register — a thematic nomination, in this case, entitled "Courthouses in North Carolina."

Thematic nominations include individual properties related through their common history — through being examples of a significant aspect of history or architecture, or as varied components of an important whole.

The Pitt County Courthouse is one of 57 in North Carolina included in the National Register nomination. The 57 represent ones ranging in date from the 1820s to the 1930s.

Approval of the nomination by the Department of the Interior usually takes about six months and will be announced through the state's congressional delegation.

that other states wouldn't. There is some indication that bills will be introduced in the General Assembly this year to exempt church schools from licensing and other requirements.

In South Carolina, a charter is required, but state officials say there are no licensing or accredidation requirements. There are also no requirements in Florida or Alabama, according to officials there.

In Florida, church-school students are also exempt from statewide testing mandated for public school students. Howard Friedman, a spokesman for the state Department of Education, said bills to bring the schools under state control have been unsuccessful in the legislature.

Watch Pounds and Inches Disappear!
Rexall PERMATHENE-12
TRIMS AWAY FAT

Yes, it's true — NOW lose pound, after pound, after pound depending on how overweight you are
- without crash diets
- without torturous exercise
- just read and follow important Permathene low calorie reducing plan booklet in every package

Continuous Action Attacks the Major Cause of Overweight—Overeating—The Major Cause of Fat Build-Up

Thanks to PERMATHENE-12's "miss-no-meals" eating program, not only do you eat better than ever before, but this once-a-day continuous action time-release capsule reducing plan actually helps your body Turn Food Into Burned Up Energy Instead Of Into Fat!

Here's what happens:

- Gnawing hunger pangs are suppressed, so it takes less food to satisfy you, meaning you restrict your calorie intake. And, the food you do eat turns into burned up energy instead of fat.
- Gentle diuretic action helps eliminate excess water and bloat.
- And, even though you may lose pound after pound, inch after inch, with the reduced calorie eating program in every package, you never need to miss a meal . . . never deny yourself sensible snacks or desserts . . . never for a moment starve yourself one iota!

- Remember . . . you must lose weight starting the very first day . . . see results the very first week . . . results you can measure on your scale and in the smaller trimmer size of your clothing . . . or money back.

*Not a crash diet—but the most satisfying fully balanced reduced calorie eating program you've ever seen. Read and follow label directions carefully.

Steelers Rated Slight Favorites

Terry Bradshaw

By JOE CARNICELLI
UPI Executive Sports Editor

MIAMI (UPI) — After a week of taunts, charges and countercharges, today's Super Bowl XIII game has emerged as a duel between the good guys and the bad guys.

That's not an evaluation of the talent of the AFC champion Pittsburgh Steelers or the NFC champion Dallas Cowboys but rather the result of accusals and denials of foul play and questionable tactics.

But all the talk ends at 4 p.m. EST today when the Steelers and Cowboys clash in the first rematch in Super Bowl history to determine the first threetime winner. The game will be telecast nationally to an estimated 85 million viewers and will be aired by satellite to Canada, South America, Europe and Japan.

The Cowboys, who lost to Pittsburgh 21-17 in Super Bowl X three years ago in the same Orange Bowl site as today's game, spent the week accusing the Steelers of questionable tactics in that game. The most outspoken were All-Pro safeties Cliff Harris and Charlie Waters and Coach Tom Landry.

"The refs didn't see a lot of things last time," said Harris. "I hope they don't choke again this time. Their defense played it close to the rules last time. The refs didn't call a lot of things that weren't even judgement calls. We play rough but we play within the rules. All I want the officials to do is call a good game."

"I think they (officials) choked last time," added Waters. "They were knocking down our receivers all day and nothing was called. I think the refs need to watch them more closely."

"I think," added Landry, "that we didn't expect them to be so intimidating in 1975. We didn't mind the rough play. The only thing we resented was that there wasn't a penalty called. Our receivers couldn't get downfield. We don't care if it's tough — we can play tough, too — just as long as they call the game."

Running back Rocky Bleier, one of the oldest of the Steelers in point of service, and Coach Chuck Noll denied the charges.

"We have a tough image," said Bleier. "A lot of images are involved in this game. We have always been a tough, hard-hitting team but I resent the implictions that we don't play within the rules. I guess this game will be pictured as the good guys against the bad guys.

"They have that wholesome image. My image of Dallas is squeaky clean. They have Roger Staubach who is Mister Straight at quarterback and he never says anything controversial and their uniforms are always bright and shiny. You also have the image of the city of Dallas — affluence, money.

"We have that bad guy image. We play rough, we wear black shirts, Pittsburgh has the image of being a tough city, although it really isn't. I guess Dallas is like the crisp, new $50 bill and we're just the old crumpled $10 bill."

"We don't try to get away with anything," said Noll. "We play hard and we abide by the rules. I don't know exactly what their statements were but as far as our football team is concerned, we play hard, we play rough but we play by the rules."

But images aside, the bad guys, the Steelers, have been installed as 3½ point favorites. Both teams have explosive offenses and solid defenses but Pittsburgh's edge is based mainly on superiority in the offensive line.

Pittsburgh finished the regular season with a 14-2 record, the best in the NFL, and advanced to the Super Bowl with impressive postseason victories over Denver and Houston in the playoffs. The key offensive performer has been quarterback Terry Bradshaw.

Bradshaw led the league with 28 touchdown passes and was oustanding in the playoffs. This season was the best of his nine-year pro career. His major weapons are receivers Lynn Swann and John Stallworth and fullback Franco Harris, who seems to make playoffs and Super Bowls his personal showcase much the same as the New York Yankees' Reggie Jackson seems to excel in baseball's post-season play.

Bradshaw is protected by an offensive line led by center Mike Webster, an All-Pro in just his third season as a starter and now acknowledged as the finest center in the NFL.

Pittsburgh's swarming "Steel Curtain" defense is dotted with All-Pros and perhaps the best is left linebacker Jack Ham. Ham has been overlooked in all the pregame verbal pyrotechnics by Thomas Henderson, Dallas' colorful and outspoken linebacker, but it is Ham who is perhaps the outstanding "big play" man in the game.

Two weeks ago against Houston in the AFC title game, Ham had two fumble recoveries, a sack and an interception to help throttle the Oilers' offense.

Dallas, 6-4 at one point of the season, won its last six games of the regular season and then defeated Atlanta and Los Angles in the playoffs to earn a shot at defending its Super Bowl title.

Staubach directs the Cowboy offense on the field and the key to the game will be how much pressure Pittsburgh's defense can put on him. Staubach led the league in passing statistics but he has had problems on his throwing hand. Staubach broke a finger in last year's Super Bowl victory over Denver and re-injured it late this year. It could be a problem today.

Staubach has three outstanding receivers in Drew Pearson, Tony Hill and Billy Joe DuPree and one of the NFL's top running backs in Tony Dorsett. Dorsett, the former Heisman Trophy winner from the University of Pittsburgh, finished second to Chicago's Walter Payton among NFC rushers with 1,325 yards.

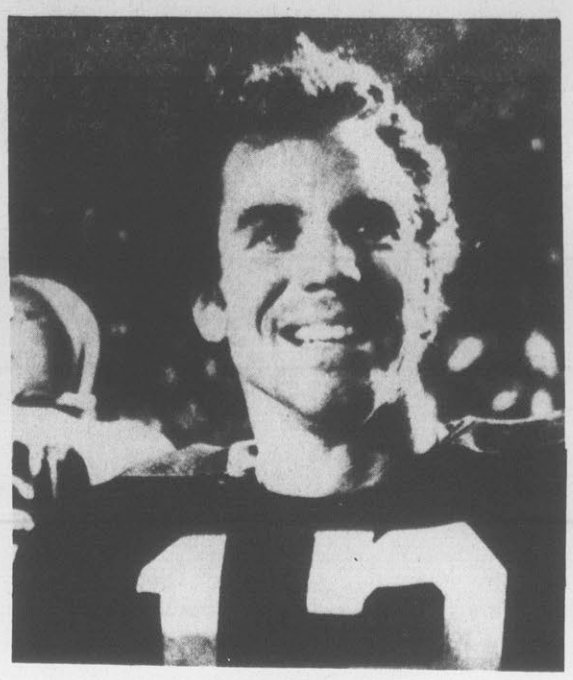

Dallas plays a unique "flex" defense and the defensive line, led by Randy White and Ed Jones, has been outstanding. The key men in the secondary are Harris and Waters and the question mark is cornerback Bennie Barnes. Barnes will cover Swann much of the game and it was Swann who helped bury Dallas in Super Bowl X with four receptions for a game record 161 yards.

A capacity crowd of almost 80,000 fans is expected to attend in the Orange Bowl and scalpers were getting as much as $250 for the $30 tickets.

The National Weather Service predicted a partly cloudy day with temperatures in the mid 70s and very little chance of rain. The Orange Bowl has a natural grass surface and both clubs have artificial surfaces at their home fields.

AFC clubs have won eight of the last 10 Super Bowls and Dallas is the only NFC team to break that AFC superiority. The Cowboys won Super Bowl VI and ended a five-year AFC streak last season.

Pittsburgh won the ninth and 10th Super Bowls.

Women Rally To Nail Mounties

BOONE — East Carolina's women's basketball team shook off Appalachian State at the half and romped to an 87-57 victory last night.

After more or less going through the motions in the first half, the Pirates attacked the Mountaineers in the second half with their usual verve and outscored them, 52-26 during the final 20 minutes.

"I've got to give Appalachian credit," ECU coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "They did a great job against us in the first half. They outrebounded us and we shoot poorly, hitting only 30 per cent of our shots.

"We weren't doing much on defense, either. And even though we moved out to a 13 point lead at one time, Appalachian came back and cut it to two just before the half." East Carolina led by only four, 35-31, at intermission.

"We were flat in the half, not moving, and not going to the boards. We were getting only one shot each time down the floor. It really could have gotten away from us."

But the Pirates came on in the second half after a dressing room dressing down and played their game, according to the coach.

"No one really did an outstanding job, it was just a good team effort," Andruzzi said.

The Pirates, in their comeback, outrebounded ASU in the second half and held a 60-45 overall margin in the game. They also shot better, improving their shooting percentage to 45 for the game. "We hit 70 per cent from the line, and that's an improvement for us too over recent games.

"We did get good help off the bench. April Ross and Patty Howell both came in to do good jobs on defense."

The Pirates were also hampered by the absence of Lillian Barnes, who was attending funeral services for her father, who died Wednesday. She is the second Pirate basketball player to lose her father in a week. Men's player Frank Hobson's father died last week..

"It made it rough on Lydia (Rountree) who had to go about all the way at the point," Andruzzi said. "She and Lillian usually spell each other, but Lydia had to go 36 minutes tonight, longer than usual."

Rosie Thompson led the Pirate scoring with 24 points, and pulled down 18 rebounds. Gale Kerbaugh, who kept the Pirates in the game in the first half, added 19 points, while Marcia Girven had 15 and Rountree had 12. Girven also collected 16 rebounds.

The Pirates, now 9-5 overall and 5-2 in state AIAW play, travel to Johnson City, Tenn., on Monday for a meeting with East Tennessee State before returning home for a three game home stand starting with Longwood on Saturday.

East Carolina—Thompson 9-6-24; Emerson 3-2-8; Kerbaugh 7-5-19; Girven 6-3-15; Rountree 4-4-12; Ross 2-0-4; Howell 1-1-3; Versprille 0-0-0; Insley 0-0-0; Young 1-0-2.
Appalachian State—Almond 5-2-12; McEntire 3-2-8; Horton 6-2-14; Hiltz 0-0-0; Higginbotham 2-2-6; Shuford 1-1-3; Foust 2-0-4; Loy 2-1-5; Ritchie 1-1-3; Wilmont 0-0-0; Larrimore 0-0-0.

Birdies Key Haas To Lead

PHOENIX (AP) — Jay Haas reeled off a string of three consecutive birdies on the way to a 6-under-par 65 that gave him a 1-stroke lead Saturday in the first round of the twice-delayed and now abbreviated Phoenix Open golf tournament.

"After two days off, I didn't know what to expect out there," said Haas, who last year won the San Diego Open as a tour sophomore.

Play was rained out both Thursday and Friday by a storm that caused flooding in the Phoenix area. With the start of the event delayed two days, officials decided to cut the tournament from the regulation 72 holes to 54. It will conclude, weather permitting, on Monday.

The purse also was reduced, from $250,000 to $187,500.

The storm, which produced almost two inches of rain, left the flat, 6,726-yard Phoenix Country Club course a soggy mess. It hasn't been mowed in almost a week. Pools and puddles of casual water dotted the fairways, but the greens, Haas said, were very good.

"I'm probably biased, though, after shooting a 65," he said.

The extremely wet conditions prompted officials to allow players to lift, clean and place balls in the fairways, thus placing a premium on accuracy off the tee.

"If you drive well, under these conditions, you can't help but score well," Haas said.

A single stroke behind him at 66 was a group composed of U.S. Open champion Andy North, Jerry Pate, long-hitting Lon Hinkle, Bruce Lietzke, veterans Jim Colbert and Butch Baird, and Andy Bean, the big, confident guy who predicted a couple of days ago he was "playing well enough to win a golf tournament right now."

At 67, four under par and only 2 off the lead with 36 holes to go, were Ben Crenshaw, Lanny Wadkins and Keith Fergus.

John Mahaffey, the PGA and World Cup champion and a winner last week in the Bob Hope Classic, headed another group at 68.

Defending title-holder Miller Barber was far back at 74. Johnny Miller, twice a winner here, had the same score.

Haas, who had a late starting time in the mild, sunny weather, said he felt "the afternoon players got the best of it today. We got a break. It was awful cold and wet when the morning starters were playing."

Al Wood's Jumper Pulls Heels Past Maryland In Heartstopper

By GORDON BEARD
AP Sports Writer

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — "I thought the ball was going in," Al Wood said of his 15-foot jumper with three seconds left which gave North Carolina a 54-53 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over Maryland Saturday.

"But every time I shoot, I think it's going in."

Wood, playing with 14 stitches in the middle and ring fingers on his left hand, was the hero for the injury-riddled Tar Heels, who played without starters Michael Koren and David Colescott.

"My hand hurt when I caught the ball," said Wood, "but it didn't affect my shooting."

The sophomore forward was injured Thursday night when he stumbled running up a flight of stairs and put his hand through a window. He wasn't named as a starter until he tested his injury in the pregame warm-ups.

"At the end," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith, "we were planning to take a shot with less than 10 seconds on the clock. We're extremely pleased to have won. We did have a psychological advantage being without O'Koren and Colescott. Maryland felt they had to win."

"If they are No. 2, we're not far behind," Coach Lefty Driesell said of 19th-ranked Maryland. "Tonight they were one point better, and I'm not sure they were that much."

The victory left North Carolina, playing without injured starters Mike O'Koren and David Colescott, in first place in the league with a 5-1 record while Maryland dropped to third place behind Virginia with a 3-2 record.

John Virgil sank one free throw for North Carolina with 1:34 left, and the Tar Heels got the ball back after he missed a second shot. Rich Yonakor then scored for North Carolina at 1:15 — the Tar Heels' first basket in almost five minutes.

After the basket by Wood, who played with three fingers on his left hand taped together because of a severe cut, Maryland tried a shot from the corner by Greg Manning as time expired and the ball bounced off the rim.

Ernest Graham scored 25 points to lead Maryland, now 12-5, and King had 14.

Maryland, which led by as many as nine points in the first half, committed 19 turnovers, including a bounce pass by Dutch Morley which went out of bounds with 54 seconds left and the Terps ahead 53-52.

North Carolina worked the ball calmly, passing up several chances to shoot, before Yonakor found Wood open in the right corner for the winning basket.

In addition to their injuries, the Tar Heels had the services of defensive specialist Dudley Bradley for only 19 minutes because of foul trouble. Maryland lost center Larry Gibson on fouls with 5:58 remaining when he fouled Wood and two free-throws by the forward tied it at 49-49.

Graham sank 10 of 14 shots, including seven-for-seven in the first half. The Terps seemed on the verge of breaking the game open as North Carolina shot only 41 percent. But the Tar Heels, who were outscored 16-4 during one stretch, were more aggressive and pulled to within 35-30 at halftime.

Lee Raker Paces Cavs Past Clemson, 61-54

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Sophomore Lee Raker scored eight of his career-high 29 points in a 16-2 run over the first 7½ minutes of the second half that propelled Virginia's Cavaliers to a 61-54 basketball victory Saturday over Clemson's Tigers.

Raker was 10 of 17 from the floor, 9 of 9 from the foul line, led all rebounders with eight and also had five steals as the Cavaliers upped their overall record to 11-5 with their fifth straight triumph in the regionally televised Atlantic Coast Conference game.

Virginia is 3-1 in the ACC, while Clemson — which has lost five of its last six starts — fell to 10-5 overall and 1-4 in the ACC.

The Tigers, who led much of the first half and were in front 28-27 at intermission, fell behind for good when the Cavaliers scored the first eight points of the second half.

During the 16-2 Virginia spree that put the game out of reach, Clemson turned the ball over eight times and got only three shots at the basket. The Tigers had 15 second-half turnovers.

Marvin Dickerson, who was 5 for 5 from the floor in the first half, finished with 18 points for Clemson. Larry Nance, Billy Williams and Derrick Johnson had 10 each.

"We were finally able to get the spurt," said Virginia Coach Terry Holland of the 16-2 run that broke the game open. "We kept pushing it at them. We got the good shots and made them."

The closest Clemson got after Virginia opened up the 43-30 lead was 50-44 on a basket by Nance inside with 6:43 left. But Raker hit two free throws, Mike Owens one and Bobby Stokes two more to push the Cavaliers back in front 56-44 with 4:12 remaining.

Virginia offset a 45.2 percent performance from the floor by hitting 23 of 29 at the foul line. Clemson shot 57 percent in the first half and 55 percent for the game but made just 4 of 7 free throws.

"It was a very good win for us. Clemson played excellent defense. They gave us trouble moving the ball," said Holland. Of the Tigers' defense, Holland said "they've got as solid a defensive team as we've seen all year."

Clemson Coach Bill Foster said Raker "is just a heckuva player. He's been doing that (scoring) to everybody. They have a fine shooting club. Nobody's got a pair of shooters like they do (Raker and Lamp)."

In the defensive first half, Virginia built an early 7-2 lead, but Clemson took the lead with an 8-2 spurt. The Tigers built their margin to as many as four pnts at 26-22 with 4:04 left in the half before the Cavaliers began their comeback.

Pirates Swim Past Richmond

Three double winners paced East Carolina to an easy 82-30 victory over Richmond Saturday afternoon in men's swimming.

John Tudor won the 50-yard freestyle in 21.79 seconds and returned to capture the 200-yard breaststroke in 2:14.39, while teammate Tom Bell won both the 1-meter and 3-meter diving competition and Ted Nieman captured the 200-yard individual medley in 1:57.66 and the 100-yard freestyle in 47.39.

Tudor also swam the backstroke leg in the medley to open the meet and set a 100-yard back school record with a 54.28 clocking. It bettered his own mark of 54.34 set earlier this year.

The Pirates, now 3-2, won the first 12 events before swimming exhibition in the final event. It was the first loss of the year for the Spiders, now 4-1.

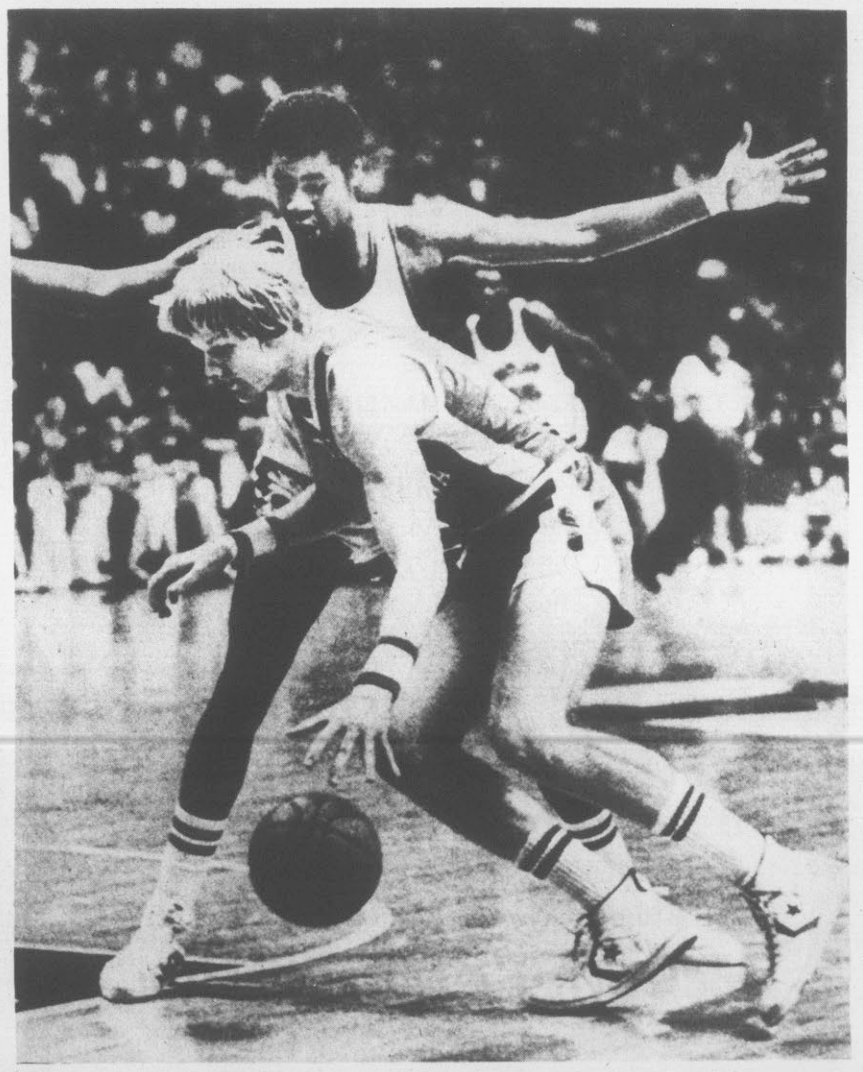

"We swam some people out of their events and had three key swimmers out of the line-up altogether," said Pirate coach Ray Scharf. "But this team is gaining confidence every time out now and the ones who swam picked up the pace and really came through."

In all, ten different Pirates swam to winning efforts in the meet. Bill Fehling won the 200-yard freestyle and anchored the winning medley relay where he was joined by Dan Newhaller, Joe Murtaugh and Tudor. Doug Brindley claimed the 1000 free, Doug Nieman the 500 free, Mark Lovette the 200 fly, and Scott Ross the 200 breaststroke.

The next meet for East Carolina will be at home on Saturday against UNC-Wilmington at 1 p.m. Both the men's and women's team will swim in that event.

Nehemiah Sets New World Mark In Hurdles Two Straight Nights

By BERT ROSENTHAL
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Renaldo Nehemiah, the brilliant University of Maryland sophomore, bolted to a world indoor best for the second consecutive night, winning the 55-meter hurdles in 6.88 seconds in the U.S. Inivtational Track and Field Meet Saturday night.

Villanova senior Don Paige bettered the American indoor record for 1,000 meters, winning in 2 minutes 20.3 seconds — one tenth of a second below the previous mark of 2.20.4 set by Tom van Ruden of the Pacific Coast Club in this meet in 1971. The world indoor best, however, is 2:19, set by Paul Heinz-Wellman of West Germany in 1976.

The 19-year-old Nehemiah, ranked No. 1 in the world, got off to a flying start and held the lead throughout in beating archrival Greg Foster of UCLA and the Muhammad Ali Track Club.

Friday night at Philadelphia, Nehehmaih and Foster, rated No. 2 in the world, had deadheated for first place in the 60-yard hurdles in 6.95 seconds, bettering Nehemiah's previous mark of 7.02 set earlier this year. Fifty-five meters is 5.35 inches longer than 60 yards, and therefore Nehemuah will get credit for the 60-yard indoor mark.

In this second meeting in two nights between the brilliant hurdlers, there was no question about the winner.

The quiet, soft-spoken Nehemiah from Scotch Plains, N.J., who contends that his technique still is far from perfect, was first out of the blocks after two false starts — one by Foster and the other by Kerry Bethel of the Philadelphia Pioneer Club. And no one came close to catching him.

Foster was the closest, finishing second in a distant 7.09 before tumbling as he crossed the finish line.

Afterwards, Nehemiah said he did not know how much faster he could go.

"I guess the perfect race is wherever I want it to go," he said. "Maybe if Greg had been right there tonight, the time would have been lower.

"I'm not satisfied with this time, but last night I was tied and I don't like to share world records."

"Last night, I was not really prepared mentally for the race," he added. "But tonight I was forced to get prepared. The closer I got to New York, the more hyped up I got. This is home for me — it's not New Jersey, but it's close enough."

Harvey Glance of Auburn, a 1976 Olympic relay gold medalist, won the 55-meter dash for the third consecutive year, edging indoor record holder Houston McTear of the Muhammad Ali Track Club in 6.17 seconds.

Brenda Morehead of Tennessee State University, the American outdoor record holder at 200 meters, won the women's 55-meter dash in 6.83 seconds. Pat Dunlap of the South Jersey Track Club and Maria Parsons of Morgan State, tied for second at 6.94.

West Germany's Gunther Lohre, who pole-vaulted 18-feet, ¼-inches last week in Europe for the best vault of the young season, won his specialty at 17-4¾, upsetting indoor record holder Mike Tulley of the Pacific Coast Club.

Tulley, the defending champion whose indoor best is 18-5¼, could not do any better than 17-0¾.

Rankins, Miller, Major Claim Wins For Bucs At Chapel Hill

CHAPEL HILL — Marvin Rankins and Bill Miller were the only winners for East Carolina's men Saturday as the Pirates fell to North Carolina and South Carolina in a three-team indoor track meet here Saturday. The Tar Heels claimed the win with 73 points to 33 for the Gamecocks and 28 for East Carolina.

In the women's meet, Virginia won with 67 points to 29 for North Carolina and 11 for the Pirates.

Rankins led teammate Valentino Robinson to the tape in the 60-yard high hurdles with a time of 7.4 seconds. Robinson was timed in 7.5 seconds to place second.

Miller claimed the only other win for the Pirates, completing the mile run in 4:14.9 to win by two seconds.

Roz Major was the only winner for the women's team, taking the long jump at 18-3¼, while teammate Maria Gudjohnsen was third at 17-10. Gudjohnsen was also second in the 60-yard dash in 7.4 seconds.

North Carolina captured nine of the 13 men's events with the two visitors dividing up the other four. The Cavaliers, entered only in the women's events, won six, with the Tar Heels taking three and East Carolina but one.

Rankins came back from the hurdles to also take fourth in the 60-yard dash in 6.5 seconds.

In other highlights, the Pirate mile relay team was second and high jumper Bill Parker cleared 7-1 to claim second. Freshman Warren Days long jumped 23-3, and the Pirate duo of Tony McCoy and Terry Perry placed third and fourth in the 600-yard run, both with 1:14.3 clocking.

State Downs Buc Matmen

N.C. State surged to the early lead and outwrestled East Carolina Saturday night, 30-14, for its second win of the year over the Pirates.

The Wolfpack, now 7-1, jumped to a 22-3 lead with the aid of a forfeit at 118 pounds, a superior decision by Mike Zito over David Jerose, 11-0, at 126 pounds, and a fall by former Pirate Paul Thorpe against Marvin James at 4:17 at 158 pounds.

James Ellison stopped another former East Carolina wrestler who had transfered to N.C. State, gaining a 3-0 decision over Mark Peters at 167 pounds.

Butch Revils worked arm bars and a body press for a fall at the 2:57 mark of the 177-pound class against Dave Erickson to bring the count to 22-12, but the Pirates could come no closer and watched their record slip to 0-4.

Jim Osborn started the East Carolina scoring with a surprise 10-5 decision over Steve Koob at 134-pounds, but it wasn't until Ellison won at 167 that the hosts could score again.

"It was a big win for Osborn," said Pirate coach Bill Hill. "Koob is an outstanding wrestler and Jim had never beaten him."

"If we could have turned some of the close bouts a little we could have made a little closer match of it tonight, but State is very strong."

Summary:

118: Jim Zenz (NCS) won by forfeit.
126: Mike Zito (NCS) decisioned David Jerose, 11-0.
134: Jim Osborn (EC) decisioned Steve Koob, 10-5.

Morgan Paces Deacs To Win

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Wake Forest freshman Guy Morgan exploded for a career-high 21 points, 14 above his average, as the Deacons thrashed the Rollins' Tars 100-79 Saturday in a non-conference basketball game.

Morgan, a 6-foot-8 forward, connected on all seven of his shots from the floor and seven of 10 free throws, leading four teammates in double figures. Frank Johnson and John Hendler each chipped in with 12 points for Wake Forest, now 9-7, and reserve forward Wilbert Singleton added 11.

The Tars, now 8-5, were paced by forward John Rich's 18 points, and Joel Fiser's 15.

Though Rollins never led, the Tars were within two points, 22-20, with 7:59 left in the first half. But the Deacons rattled off 23 points before the half ended to take a 45-29 lead and were never threatened in the second half.

Notre Dame Holds Off South Carolina, 82-73

By STEVE HERMAN
AP Sports Writer

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Kelly Tripucka scored 22 points and Tracy Jackson came off the bench with 21 Saturday as top-ranked Notre Dame turned back stubborn South Carolina 82-73 in a regionally televised college basketball game.

The Irish, now 11-1, held a 7-point lead at halftime after trailing by one in a close first period.

South Carolina's Zam Fredrick and Jim Strickland kept the Gamecocks within striking range early in the second half, but a 3-point play by Orlando Woolridge gave the Irish a 10-point lead with less than eight minutes to go.

South Carolina, falling to 7-6 for the season, came no closer than six points after Woolridge's 3-point play before a basket by Tripucka and two layups by Woolridge pushed the margin to 12 and the Irish coasted to victory.

Costly errors, which hurt the Gamecocks in the first half, again kept them from cutting into the Notre Dame lead in the closing minutes.

South Carolina was led by Fredrick with 20 points and Cedrick Hordges with 19.

Notre Dame jumped to a 10-0 lead and threatened to make a rout of the game as South Carolina was pressed into five early errors and did not even attempt a field goal for the first three minutes.

Fredrick's two free throws gave the Gamecocks their first points a minute later, and their first field goal was by Tom Wimbush nearly six minutes into the contest. From then on, though, South Carolina steadily closed the gap as only Jackson was hitting for the Irish.

Rampant Rally Carries Past Bertie

Two On The House

Donald House (45) of Rose High School leaps up for a shot under the nets after driving in on Bertie Friday night. Attempting to stop him are Clarence Hayes (31) and Robert Nichols (43) of the Falcons. Rose rallied to gain a 54-51 win in the game. (Reflector Photo)

After getting off to a horrible start at the beginning of the second half, Rose High School rallied to gain a 54-51 victory over Bertie Senior High Friday night.

The victory kept Rose in at least a share of second place in the Division I 4-A standings. The Rampants now stand 4-2 in conference play and 6-8 overall. Bertie fell to 3-3 and 6-8.

Earlier in the evening, the Rose High School girls rolled to a 55-32 win over hapless Bertie. Rose is now 3-3 in the league and 6-6 overall, while Bertie fell to 0-6 and 0-12.

Trailing by only a point at the half, 23-22, Rose came out and missed on its first six shots from the floor in the third period, and couldn't find a single rebound during the first five minutes when only one free throw would fall through the nets for them.

Meanwhile, Bertie worked on the baskets and the boards, and ripped through 12 points to run out to a 35-23 lead with three minutes left in the period.

But once Rose got back into the swing of things they put on a rally that culminated when they took the lead for good at 48-47 with 1:04 left in the game.

They hit on 13 of 23 shots during the final 11 minutes of play to pull off the rally.

"I just don't understand it. We lost our composure in the third period," Rose Coach Jim Brewington said. "I don't know what I've got to do in the locker room. It seems like every time, we get off to a poor start in the second half.

"But it's a tremendous win for us. It puts us into real good position going into Tuesday night's game with Northern Nash (the conference leader, loser of only one game this year)."

For the second straight night in a row, Wallace Brown was the hero for Rose coming off the bench. He poured in 17 points for the Rampants, the team high, with 13 of those coming in the second half rally.

"(Donald) House played well for us too," Brewington said. "He did a real good job in the second half both on the boards and scoring. And Tyrone Tucker came in and gave us some good help too. He's going to be a tremendous player once he gets some experience. (Derwin) Clemons had a bad night, but he played a good game defensively."

Despite the hot finish, the Rampants didn't shoot well overall, hitting just 41.8 per cent of their shots. But that was better than Bertie's 38.5 per centage. The Rampants held a 40-35 rebound edge.

The first period of the game saw the score go back and forth until the finalminute of play when Bertie moved out to a 12-8 margin. Rose tied it up in the second period, and gained a 16-14 lead on a breakaway dunk by House. John Sheppard added a shot from underneath for an 18-14 lead, but the Rampants failed to hold it.

While the Rampants were cold in the first five minutes of the third period, Bertie was hitting six of eight shots and getting the rebounds of all of the missed shots at either end. But after that stretch, the Rampants decided to get back into the game, and behind Brown and House, came back to cut the lead to 39-35 by the end of the period.

Near the midpoint of the final period, Bertie had inched back out by six, but Rose then came up with seven straight points, a basket by Tucker, a free throw by Brown, and a basket by House to start it off, and then a jumper by Brown with 3:20 left that put Rose into the lead again, 46-45.

Brown scored off a steal just after the inbounds play, and that padding gave Rose all it needed, as it finally moved out by five at 54-49 before Nichols heaved in a desperation 30-footer at the horn.

Besides Brown's 17, House added 15 for Rose. Nichols led Bertie with 24, while Julius Sessoms had 10.

The girls' game was over practically before anyone worked up a sweat. After Bertie got the opening basket, Rose came back to score 12 straight points and rolled up an 18-3 lead in the first period. The Rampettes cooled off in the second period, and Bertie cut it back to 21-9 by halftime, making all their second period points at the foul line.

"I think our defense did a whale of a job," Coach Robert Carraway said. "They got only one field goal the whole first half. This is what we've been working for.

"I think the problem in our scoring was that we got into foul trouble there in the second period and had to put our regulars on the bench. But once they got back in in the second half, we pulled away again."

Rose scored the first four points of the third period, and rolled out to a 39-18 lead before the frame ended. They eventually led by as much as 25 points in the final quarter.

Williamston Nips Jackets

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston High School slipped past Roanoke Rapids, 66-64, in an overtime game Friday night in the Northeastern Conference.

Williamston's girls held onto a share of first place in the league with a 58-35 win in their game, while Williamston's junior varsity took a 48-42 win.

Roanoke Rapids moved ahead early and built up a 20-11 lead in the first period of the boys' game. They matched the Tigers during most of the second quarter and took a 38-28 lead into the dressing rooms.

But in the third period, the Tigers began to rally, cutting the Yellow Jacket margin to 52-44 as the final quarter got underway. In that period, the Tigers outscored Roanoke Rapids, 18-10, and tied the game in the closing seconds to force an overtime, 62-62.

Jimmy Barnes led Williamston with 18, while Joe Peele had 13 and Harris had 10. Edwin Gregory led Roanoke Rapids with 26, while Chuck Maness had 20.

In the girls' game, Williamston had little trouble after going out to a 16-10 lead in the first period. They extended that to 31-19 at halftime and to 47-27 going into the last quarter. In that, Williamston held an 11-8 edge.

Jan Rogerson led Williamston with 24, while JoAnna Lilley had 15. Pam Andrews and Audrey Hockaday each had 10 for Roanoke Rapids.

Knights Take Seventh In Row

Greenville Christian Academy gained a 47-44 win over Faith Academy Friday night, running its record on the year to 7-0.

The action started slow in the varsity game, with Greenville gaining an 8-6 lead at the end. Faith came on strong in the second quarter, however, and pushed out into a 21-18 halftime lead.

The Knights came back to take charge in the third period, outscoring Faith, 18-8, to push into a 36-29 lead. Faith tried to rally once more, 15-11, but fell short.

Redskins Win, 40-38

ROBERSONVILLE — Chris Manning scored from underneath with five seconds left to lift Roanoke to a 40-38 victory over Edenton Friday night.

The score was tied at 38-each and Roanoke had the ball with 14 seconds showing. Manning got loose under the goal and scored to put the Redskins ahead.

Edward Ward paced the winners in the low-scoring game with 14 points, while Morning had 12. Steve Holley scored 14 for Edenton, and teammates Earthen Ward and Robert Cofield added 10 apiece.

In the girls' game, the Squaws rallied in the final period to take a 39-32 victory.

Roanoke led 9-8 at the end of the first period, but Edenton took an 18-14 halftime advantage. The Squaws tied the game at 28-28 going into the final period when they outscored their guests 11-4.

Coming Down

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

LITTLEFIELD — It was the first-place team against the last-place team, but for all but the final minute, the two battled on even terms.

It was only a flurry in the closing moments that allowed Eastern Carolina Conference-leading Farmville Central to pull away from cellar-dwelling Ayden-Grifton and escape the Charger gym with a 58-51 victory Friday night.

With just over three minutes left in the game, Ayden-Grifton had the ball and a 49-46 lead. But the Chargers missed their next three shots and Farmville Central grabbed each rebound and converted them into baskets to take a 52-49 margin with 1:52 left to play.

Donnie Jackson canned a follow shot to pull Ayden-Grifton back to within one point, but three consecutive turnovers, the first two, each followed by two points for the Jags, killed the Charger hopes of an upset.

It was a familiar refrain for Ayden-Grifton coach Bob Murphrey. His team, now 2-13 overall and 2-8 in the conference, has battled evenly in about half its games only to come out on the short end in the closing moments.

"It was the same old story for us," Murphrey sighed after the game. "We can't play the last two minutes of a ballgame. We can't play when it gets right down to the wire."

The Charger coach isn't exactly sure what the problem is, but it has been a costly one. "It must be leadership. We don't have the one guy that can get it done for us when it gets down to the wire. That's what it's all about—the last minute and a half to two minutes. It's easy to come close, but it's tough to win."

The game was nip-and-tuck for most of the way as the Chargers came out in a tough 1-2-2 zone defense that forced the Jaguars now 9-1 and 12-3, to take most of their shots from the outside.

In addition, Ayden-Grifton forced 12 first-half turnovers by the Jaguars and trailed by only two points, 26-24, at the half, despite a 16-2 rebounding deficit.

The lead changed hands four times in the third quarter, but Farmville Central was on top 41-38 going into the final period.

Ayden-Grifton tied the game at 45-45 with 4:45 left when Sheldon McCarter sank a technical free throw after the Jaguars were called for unsportsmanlike conduct.

Guard James Tyson, getting most of his points off of jumpers from the key, led all scorers with 16 points for Farmville. Donald Freeman added 10, also hitting from the outside.

"They play a very good zone," Jaguar coach Mike Terrell said. "It's the best zone we've seen all year.

"I knew Ayden-Grifton was capable of beating anybody in the league. They've got a good team, they've just had a lot of bad luck, like tonight. It was anybody's game, the ball just happened to bounce our way at the end."

Terrell said James Tyson's shots from the key, along with the rebounding of Earl Harris late in the game made the difference for his team. In addition, Freeman played an excellent defensive game, blocking several shots.

Terrell blamed his team's 19 turnovers on a trend of "tight" play that has developed on the Farmville squad recently. "Our guys are playing a little tight. They're not getting on track. It's something we've got to snap out of."

Terrell said the Jaguars' transition game was poor and the team was "a step behind" on defense.

"But it was a good win for us," the Jaguar coach concluded. "Ayden-Grifton gutted it the whole game and played well."

The Chargers were led in scoring by Mike Hardee and Milton Cannon with 14 and 11 points, respectively. "Mike Hardee and Milton Cannon gave us a good game on the boards and in scoring," Murphrey said. "We played well, we're just not a take-charge type team at the end of the ballgame."

Ayden-Grifton did come out with a victory in the girls' game, however, as the league-leading Chargerettes handily defeated the Lady Jaguars 60-46.

Ayden-Grifton jumped to an 18-11 lead in the first quarter and held a 29-20 advantage at the half. The Chargerettes upped that lead to 49-28 in the third quarter, but Farmville came battling back in the final period.

The Lady Jaguars cut the lead to under 10 points in the final frame, but Ayden-Grifton hit seven of 11 fourth-quarter free throws to stay ahead. The Chargerettes had 12 points at the line overall and the Lady Jags had 16. A total of 45 fouls were called in the game.

Mary Rowe scored 19 points to pace the winners with Irene Lewis adding 12 and Shanda Brock chipping in 10. Farmville was led by Pam Moye with 22.

Pirates 2nd In Tri-Meet

William & Mary used a strong team performance in the floor exercise to edge past East Carolina 115.6 to 106.3 in a women's gymnastics tri-meet Friday in Minges Coliseum. Furman was third with 77.2 points.

Cathy DeChaira of the Indians was the individual star of the meet, taking the individual first place on the uneven bars at 7.95, in vaulting at 8.25, and sharing the floor exercise crown with teammate Jan Holtsch at 8.05.

Carol Layton of the Pirates captured the balance beam competition with a 7.55 score, preventing the Indians from a clean sweep of all four events.

Holtsch actually won the all-around title with a 31.1 score, with DeChaira next at 31.05, followed by Susan McKnight of ECU at 27.7, Sherry McGill of Furman at 25.55 and Deb Heim of William & Mary at 25.15.

Behind DeChaira and Holtsch in the floor exercise, the winners placed Heim at 7.75 and Liz Mowatt-Larson at 7.7 for a 1-2-3-4 sweep. ECU's Elizabeth Jackson claimed the next spot with a 7.65 count.

"I'm encouraged about the rest of the year," said East Carolina coach Stevie Chepko. "When we get healthy, I think we can be a threat in the state. A score of 112 will qualify the team for the regionals, which is one of our goals.

"To come this close to that mark early, and in our current condition, is good. Elizabeth Jackson hit her vault well and she's coming back from an ankle sprain. Susan McKnight has only been cleared to work out for the last two days and got third in the all-around, which has to be regarded as a fine effort."

Jackson finished third in the vaulting at 7.9, the only non-William & Mary competitor in the top five in the event. Phyllis Nelson finished behind two Indians on the uneven bars at 6.45.

The Pirates, now 1-1, compete at Radford on Jan. 26, Longwood on Jan. 27 and host Madison at 1 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 20 in remaining events this month.

Pace, Martin Split Games

In the boys' game, Pace grabbed off a 62-50 win. Fred Pollard led Pace with 21, while David Davenport added 19. Ricky Simpson led Martin with 25 points.

Southwest Slips By North Pitt, 41-39

PINETOPS — Southwest Edgecombe gained a sweep of basketball games from North Pitt Friday night. Southwest won the boys' game, 41-39, took the girls by 45-33, and also won the junior varsity, 67-56.

In the girls' game, Southwest inched out into a 6-5 lead after one period. In the second quarter, they increased their lead to 20-14 by the horn.

Southwest continued to pull away in the third period, running its lead to 32-23. They finished off the Pant-HERS, 13-10, in the final quarter.

McNeil led Southwest with 10 and was the game's only scorer in double figures.

Southwest also edged ahead after one period, 10-8, in the boys' game. North Pitt stuck with them, however, and trailed by two at the half, 22-20.

In the third period, Southwest was able to pad its lead as the Panthers scored only four points. That made it 30-24. North Pitt rallied in the final quarter, and managed to take the lead several times before falling back again, to pull within one with eight seconds left, only to see Southwest score once more at the line in the closing seconds.

Hayes Makes First Talk

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — It was anything but what Columbus Chamber of Commerce officials had originally envisioned — a quiet little meeting with a football coach.

Woody Hayes, a legend fired after his 28th season as coach at Ohio State University, was speaking for the first time publicly since his infamous Gator Bowl punching incident.

Almost 1,200 had jammed into a downtown hotel's ballroom. The national media were there — from New York, Washington, Chicago, Detroit, Cincinnati, all of the national radio and television networks.

Cameras whirred Friday as Hayes strode to the podium to launch 35 minutes of off-the-cuff remarks, apologizing to his staff and the Columbus media for breaking his post-Gator Bowl silence with an Atlanta writer.

At first, Hayes was not going to back down for hitting Clemson noseguard Charlie Bauman at the Gator Bowl — a temper tantrum that cost Hayes his job.

"The incident down in Jacksonville was a matter of an instant," recalled Hayes. "It was my attitude not to apologize and I don't apologize for anything..."

Hayes did apologize to his staff, saying, "I feel very, very sorry for it for the wonderful people it has affected — my coaches, five of whom are without jobs through no problems of their own.

And later, Hayes said, "When I made up my mind to apologize, it was through the offices of men like Arch Griffin and Daryl Sanders (former players of his). There have been a steady stream of my former players in the last weeks (to his house)."

Hayes, a loyalist all of his stormy life, refuses to criticize the university for his swift dismissal. His firing by Hugh Hindman, Ohio State's athletic director, came just hours after the Gator Bowl.

His voice quivered with emotion when he again asked: "My attitude toward the university? I gave the university about everything I've had. I'm only bitter about losing that game we should have won. I'll never take it out on this university. It means too much to me."

Bullets Hold Onto 1st Place

JAMESVILLE — Jamesville High School gained a 59-52 win over Chocowinity Friday night to hold onto first place in the Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Conference.

Chocowinity's girls took a 56-40 win in their game, and also won the junior varsity game, 47-42.

In the girls' game, Chocowinity jumped ahead, 15-7, in the first period. They added to that in the second, taking a 34-20 halftime lead. That was cut back to 43-32 in the third quarter, but they polished off the Lady Bullets, 13-8, in the final quarter.

Green led Chocowinity with 20, while Joyce Manning had 13 and Jeanette Barber had 10 for Jamesville.

The Bullets edged further out in the third period, building their lead to 40-32. They allowed a Chocowinity comeback of 20-19 in the final quarter.

Tommy DiNardo led the Bullets with 25 points, while Trent Ange had 15 and James Armond had 12. Henry McCullen led Chocowinity with 20, with Randy Smaw adding 12.

Jamesville goes to Mattamuskeet on Friday.

Greene Central Downs Falcons

SNOW HILL — Greene Central rallied in the final quarter to gain a 60-54 victory over Charles B. Aycock High School Friday night.

Earlier in the evening, Aycock's girls downed Greene Central, 50-45, and the Falcon junior varsity topped the Ramlets, 51-47.

In the boys' varsity game, Greene Central streaked away to an 18-11 lead in the first period. But Aycock rallied in the second quarter, cutting the lead to 26-23 at halftime.

The Falcons continued to cut away at the lead in the third period, but were a point down as the quarter ended, 42-41. Greene Central then outhit them, 18-13, in the last stanza to claim the win.

Calvin Super led Greene Central with 16 points, while James Best had 14 and Jerome Artis had 10. Dave Thomas led Aycock with 13, while Jeff Best had 12 and Charles Artis had 10.

In the girls' game, Greene Central inched ahead, 10-9 after one period, then stretched that to 23-17 at the half.

Aycock rallied in the third period to cut the lead down to 37-33, then outscored the Lady Rams, 17-8, in the final period to win it.

Sandra McClenny led Aycock with 14 points, while Sherry Braswell had 12 and Deborah Proctor had 11. Melody Ham paced Greene Central with 17, with Iris Pridgen adding 16.

FISH KILL!

When a fishery biologist hears those words, he drops whatever he's doing to go investigate.

According to Bill Smith, assistant chief of the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission's Division of Inland Fisheries, "Fish kills are the number one priority of every biologist's agenda when they occur in public waters.

"When a fish kill is reported, it is essential to get to the site as soon as possible," said Smith. "It is especially important to move quickly if the fish kill is on a stream."

Smith explained that the dead fish and other evidence of the kill are quickly washed downstream. Thus, it is important that the investigation be carried out quickly to get an accurate assessment of the damage.

"The Wildlife Resources Commission's function in a fish kill investigation is to determine the extent of the loss to the fishery resource," he said. "We do not try to identify the cause of fish kills on public waters. This is the responsibility of the N.C. Department of Environmental Management (DEM)."

However, the Commission does play a role in the investigation.

"When our enforcement officers and biologists determine that a formal fish kill has occurred, we report it to the water quality people in the Department of Environmental Management." A "formal" fish kill is any kill involving the death of over 100 fish. The investigation determines the size of the kill and the numbers, sizes and species of fish that died.

The investigation of the cause of the kill and the decision to prosecute the responsible party or parties is made by the DEM, according to Smith.

EVEN THOUGH WATER quality in general may be a little better than in recent years, fish kills are still a major problem. Smith reports that Commission personnel investigated 57 formal kills between July of 1973 and June of 1978.

"The summer months are usually the worst for fish kills because high water temperatures and low water levels magnify whatever water quality problems exist in a stream or lake," Smith said. "A fish kill is often triggered when the stream level is lowered by closing a dam. The pollutants in the water are effectively concentrated when there is less water to dilute them."

Smith was asked how a fish kill can be detected when it is about to occur, or is underway.

"The first sign is fish appearing at the surface. They may not be floating belly-up, but often they will appear to be gasping for air." When this is observed, the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission or the N.C. DEM should be notified.

"To report a fish kill on public waters, call our toll free number in Raleigh, which is 1-800-662-7137," said Smith. "Or call the local wildlife enforcement officer or fishery bioligist. It is important to call as soon as signs of distress are noticed in a significant number of fish, or when a number of dead fish have been found. Be sure to give the location of the incident as accurately as possible."

Smith also pointed out that the DEM is now organized on a regional basis and is in a better position to send investigators quickly to the site of a reported kill. The central number in Raleigh is 919-733-5083.

Robey Finally Does The Job

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Rick Robey has something to prove.

The 6-foot-10 All-American from Kentucky was a big disappointment in the first half of his rookie pro season, even though he was handed a starting forward job by the Indiana Pacers. This week, Coach Bobby Leonard finally ran out of patience and traded Robey to Boston for ex-Pacer Billy Knight, saying Robey would never be more than an average player in the National Basketball Association.

Maybe Leonard spoke too soon. Robey scored 18 points, including the game-winning basket, and grabbed 13 rebounds Friday night, leading the Boston Celtics to a 103-102 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks.

In other NBA games Friday night, the Kansas City Kings edged the San Antonio Spurs 115-113, the Houston Rockets nipped the Los Angeles Lakers 122-121 in overtime, the Washington Bullets beat the Chicago Bulls 113-102, the New Orleans Jazz defeated the Portland Trail Blazers 107-101, the Denver Nuggets trimmed the Indiana Pacers 101-98 and the New York Knicks topped the Cleveland Cavaliers 105-101.

Milwaukee led 100-96 before a three-point play by Robey and two free throws by Cedric Maxwell put Boston in front. Milwaukee climbed back on top on a jumper from the corner by Marques Johnson with 35 seconds left, but after Maxwell missed a jumper, Robey charged in, grabbed the rebound and went up for the game-winning basket with 19 seconds left.

"It's a great feeling, just like back in Kentucky," Robey said, referring to last year's NCAA championship team. "It was just what I envisioned when I found out I was coming here. This team is entirely different from the way they play in Indiana..."

Kings 115, Spurs 113

Darnell Hillman hit two free throws in the final 40 seconds as Kansas City won a battle of division leaders to extend its winning streak to five games, longest of the season.

Rockets 122, Lakers 121, OT

Bullets 113, Bulls 102

Chicago erased a 15-point halftime deficit to move in front 83-82 with 9:31 to play, but Washington regained control for good on Mitch Kupchak's basket that made it 88-87 and drew away at the finish.

Jazz 107, Blazers 101

Pete Maravich scored 33 points and Rich Kelley grabbed 17 rebounds as New Orleans dealt Portland its sixth straight loss.

Nuggets 101, Pacers 98

Denver clinched its victory over Indiana with six free throws in the final 30 seconds, four of them by reserve guard Robert Smith.

Bears Beaten By Belhaven

BELHAVEN — Belhaven High School gained a pair of wins over Bear Grass High School Friday night. Belhaven took the boys' game, 72-68, and won the girls, 78-47.

Bear Grass managed a 60-59 win in the junior varsity contest.

In the girls' game, Belhaven ran out to an 18-10 lead in the first period and was never in trouble. They stretched their lead out to 43-20 at halftime, and to 60-27 by the end of the third period.

Martha Gibbs and Mary Satchell each had 12 poin

Mary Satchell led Belhaven with 13 points, while Martha Gibbs and Roslinda Spencer each has 12, Serina Freeman had 11 and Anette Smith had 10. Bear Grass was led by Stephanie Andrews with 18 and Joette Rogers with 14.

Belhaven's boys managed a slim 18-16 lead after one period, then edged away with a 22-15 margin in the second quarter to work up a 38-29 lead.

Bear Grass rallied in the third period, 25-18, and cut the lead back to 56-54, but Belhaven outhit them in the final quarter, 16-14, to hold on for the win.

James Freeman led Belhaven with 25 points, while Fred Harris had 13. Watson Rogers led the Bears with 26, while Jesse Bullock added 10.

Scarred Newark Feels Backlash Of Tax Revolt

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A decade ago, in the aftermath of one of the worst urban riots of the 1960s, Newark received a huge infusion of federal and state funds designed to keep decaying industrial cities from becoming ghost towns.

Now, in the aftermath of Proposition 13 in California and its spiritual heirs, Newark has become one of the first cities to feel the backlash from an election year that has convinced politicians people are fed up with government spending and taxes.

Newark is not a Cleveland; it is not a New York City; it is not in danger of bankruptcy or default. But it has or plans to lay off about 2,000 city employees — including 200 police and 150 teachers — and its leaders complain that that Newark's quality of life is declining.

"Proposition 13 was voted in California, but it's effect is being felt right here," says Hubert Williams, the city's police director.

What has happened is simple enough. Mayor Kenneth A. Gibson was depending on $10.8 million in anti-recession aid from the federal government. That would be 6 percent of the city budget. The only problem is that the money was part of a package that Congress didn't even vote on during the last session.

So Gibson decreed that 441 city employes had to go, and the Board of Education sent layoff notices to 1,700. Gibson has pleaded for more help from the federal government and the New Jersey Legislature, but major aid is unlikely.

However, the story is much more complex. It involves political maneuvering at all levels, and represents the completion of a 10-year cycle — cities in crisis, money goes in, jobs created, people hired; tax-cutting heat on and money stops and jobs abolished.

In 1970, urbanologists were repeating: "Wherever our cities are going, Newark will get there first." Financially, Newark's been beaten to the punch by New York and Cleveland; socially, it leads.

The city is a study in urban sociology. It was a city of immigrants. But by 1960, the Italians, Jews and Slavs had moved to the suburbs, and poor, undereducated blacks from the South moved in.

Unemployment was high, welfare rolls were crowded. Then came the riot, in July 1967, which left 26 people dead and large sections of the city looking like bombed-out Berlin after World War II.

Official heads turned to Newark; study commissions found numerous problems, and only one solution readily at hand — money, lots of it. The city got to the point that it was relying on $100 million a year from outside sources.

In 1970, Gibson became the city's first black mayor, defeating Hugh Addonizio, who was later jailed for seeking kickbacks from contractors doing city business.

Unemployment is officially estimated at 13 percent. But people who've never had jobs aren't officially reported, and there are plenty of those in Newark. The population has fallen from about 400,000 a decade ago to about 330,000. A 1976 study found that Newark is the poorest city in the nation compared to its suburbs.

The city's largest private employer, the Prudential Insurance Co., once had 13,000 employes; now they employ 4,000. Offices are vacant — one of the city's most attractive buildings on Broad Street is a quarter empty.

The only major construction in a decade has been public — the New Jersey College of Medicine and Dentistry, Rutgers University, the Newark Airport Expansion.

Add to that the political factor. The tax-cut era has not only cut $10.8 million in federal anti-recession aid, but it has taken from Newark control of its own money. There is a surplus in the city budget of $8.9 million, but it can't be used because a state law limits increases in municipal budgets to 5 percent.

Newark has asked the Legislature for an exemption, but its chances are questionable.

Carole Graves, president of the Newark Teacher's Union and head of a union coalition fighting the layoffs, says Gibson is using the lack of federal funds as an excuse to get rid of people he wanted to get rid of anyway.

But Bernard Moore, a senior Gibson aide, said: "A lot of the people that are going are the ones we'd like to keep. The young and enthusiastic ones will be out of work."

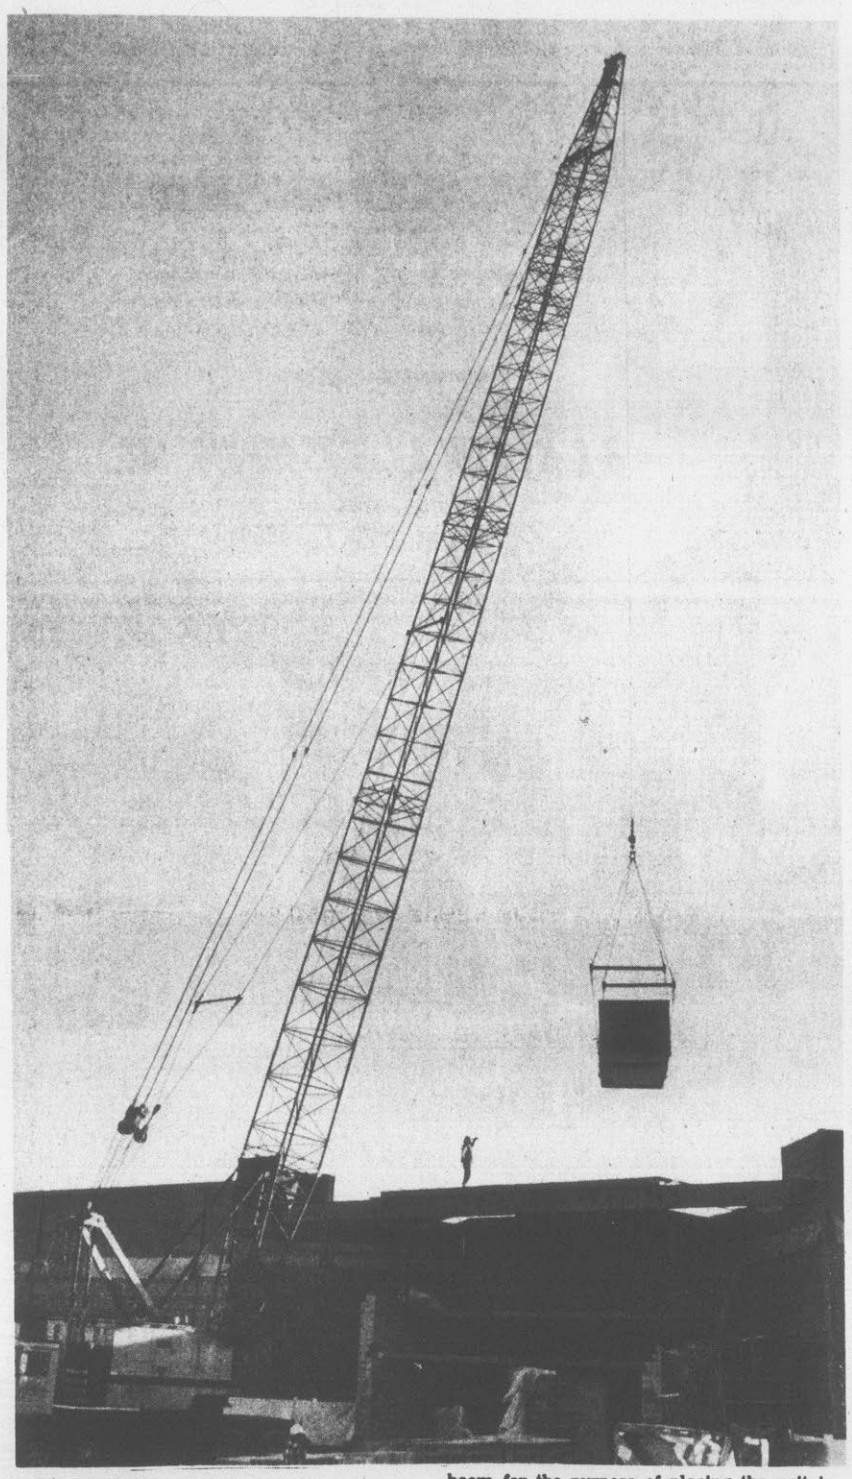

City officials also say they can convince both Congress and the Legislature to release the money Newark needs. "They have to do what's right," Moore says. "Politicians aren't elected to be popular and they're not elected to get re-elected. You run away from a problem and you create greater problems."

Don't Be a Sucker for Mail-Order 'Miracles'

Our medicine closet is filled with drugs that my wife buys from every mail-order ad and from every friend or acquaintance who recommends anything. When I showed this display to our family doctor he shook his head in disbelief. Why does the government allow these false claims to tempt the suckers? — Mr. S.L., Texas.

Dear Mr. L.:

The key word in your letter is "sucker." There are hundreds of thousands of gullible people who, like your wife, fall into the traps of those who thrive on the false hope created by their enticing "cure-alls."

Obviously, the people who manufacture and sell these "new miracle drugs" are able to attract enough "suckers" so that year in and year out millions of dollars are poured into their pockets.

In today's newspaper I noticed a full-column story which gave the unmistakable impression of a news report. Only in very small print was there the indication that it was not a scientific report, but rather a paid advertisement. The heading, in bold type of almost half an inch, proclaimed that a miraculous new pill was recently discovered that would give instant relief for innumerable ailments.

The story went on to extol the dramatic virtues of this new pill, ending, of course, with the name and address necessary for ordering.

I'm sure that most people reading that column did not notice the word "advertisement" lightly printed above the "news report." Rather they were impressed by the apparent authenticity of what seemed to be a scientific news report.

In addition to the claim that the "new pill" would do wonders for the body, it claimed also to do wonders for the nerves. And then followed a dozen or more ailments that this phenomenon of medicine could benefit.

I'm certain that thousands of people like your wife fall into these traps that are so carefully laid out for them.

Despite all the protective campaigns against such quackery and nostrums, they continue to flourish and to extract millions of dollars from those who are least able to afford it. Governmental agencies are constantly at work trying to protect all of us from fraudulent claims. Unless the American people wake up to the reality of such fraudulence, medicine cabinets all over the country will continue to bulge with worthless concoctions.

When will the public realize that when a new drug is scientifically supported, a sales pitch will not be necessary? It will be available to everyone through legitimate channels.

GARDEN CLINIC

N.C. State University Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. I have heard the term "winter protection" for shurbs. What does this mean? What specifically should I do to give my English boxwoods "winter protection?" (B.P., Blowing Rock)

A. You should protect your favorite shrubs in winter from four things: excessive sun or heat, especially when the ground is frozen in January and February; snow and ice, which can break or bend the limbs out of shape; heavy winds, which can damage the foliage; and freezing and thawing of the soil around small shrubs and groundcovers. This "heaving" of the soil can actually push shrubs out of the ground. As for boxwoods, in the Blownig Rock area they need to be protected from snow and ice. One way to do this is to wrap a wide band around the plants. The band could consist of cloth or tape. If your boxwoods are susceptible to heavy snow sliding off the roof, you should build a shelter over them. It's not necessary to close the sides of the shelter because you would not want to cut off light and air. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. My tomato plants were still loaded with green fruit when the first killing frost came in early December. Was there any way that I could have saved this fruit and ripened it? (S.w., Burgaw)

A. You could have harvested the larger fruits just prior to the predicted killing frost, wrapped them individually in newspaper, gently placed them in a basket and stored them in a basement or similar place. The ideal temperature for storing such tomatoes is 55 to 60 degrees. Fruits that were not bruised, diseased or cracked will often store for one to two months. Of course, you have to check them periodically and remove those that are ripe. (A.A. Banadyga, extension horticulturist)

Some Look For Added Privacy In Their Own Home

By ELAINE Q. BARROW
AP Newsfeatures

The much-quoted sentiment attributed to film star Greta Garbo, "I want to be alone," is shared by others.

A craving for a completely private and personal retreat is being fulfilled by such actresses as Jill Clayburgh, as well as by contemplative personalities such as Thomas G. Hinners, a New York designer.

Miss Clayburgh, star of "An Unmarried Woman," sought a place in her home that would be off-limits to everyone else, where she could withdraw in solitude. "Womb-like," she called it.

A far cry from the sumptuousness associated with Hollywood, the space she chose was a former maid's room, 8 by 9 feet. It was jammed with Jill's exercise equipment, sleds, and other paraphernalia.

Scanning it with an imaginative eye, she said, "One day it will look like some place in the South of France."

"Jill wanted a place within her home where she could close the door and be alone," says Dorothy Kalins, editor of Apartment Life Magazine, whose specialists drew the assignment.

"With too many doors, plumbing pipes and a view to be forgotten," Mrs. Kalins says, "it took some doing to create a get-away-from-it-all, magical hideaway."

The 8-by-9-foot space, the actress requested, should hold a daybed, desk, chair and shelves, as well as some way of dealing with the stuff already there.

Inside the room, the walls were covered with a tiny print fabric. A Directoire, polished-iron daybed heaped with pillows became the focal point. In one corner was placed a miniature, 19th-century Italian desk. Wall shelves held Jill's books and mementos.

Thomas Hinners, as an interior decorator, had the distinct advantage of being able to create a retreat, personally.

He softened the sharp confines of limited space by an artful placement of flowing fabrics. A valance and draperies mask most of the wall surface and, overhead, a tented ceiling of green chintz produces a billowing effect.

Green and orange of jewel-like intensity are used in Greeff fabrics for his valance and draperies, accented by black lacquer furniture. The bed is upholstered in an orange texture with orange-textured throw pillows. Lilies of an orange hue in bouquets, two feet in diameter, complete the mood.

Hinners says his object was to create a "very private environment, a place of tranquility. Also, this room can be done on a very limited budget."

When Oscar-winning screen star Richard Dreyfuss established a pied-a-terre in New York City, his decorating challenge included the problem of how to enjoy an enchanting view from his windows — he couldn't see it the moment he sat down. The solution: platforms.

His living room is long and rectangular, and the area beside the windows was elevated by nailing in a platform of ¾-inch plywood. Carpeted, it accommodates large, overstuffed furniture for a sitting view at the windows.

Dreyfuss' bedroom windows also dictated the addition of platform, constructed like an inverted box, on which his bed and a chair and table are placed. An oversized headboard on the bed serves as a room divider, creating a small office and study at the end of the room opposite the windows.

"For years, I only had a copy of the Bill of Rights tacked up," Dreyfuss says.

Mrs. Kalins put in, "When we met him, his living room was so empty that our voices echoed. After 10 years of living in hotel rooms, Richard had a pretty good idea of what he wanted."

In a scene from the film "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," Dreyfuss tossed trees, plants and hardened dirt into his living room.

PLAN YOUR HOME — The Elfencroft

Five Bedrooms Furnish Home

By Jerry Bishop

Generously supplied with bedrooms, baths, and balconies, the Elfencroft, a two story contemporary, provides a workable design for a large family.

On the exterior, the design is dominated by wood balconies and sliding glass doors, in contrast with horizontal siding. Inside, the emphasis is on space, and the floor plan calls for a 23-ft. master bedroom, a family room, living room, eat-in kitchen, and a total of seven balconies.

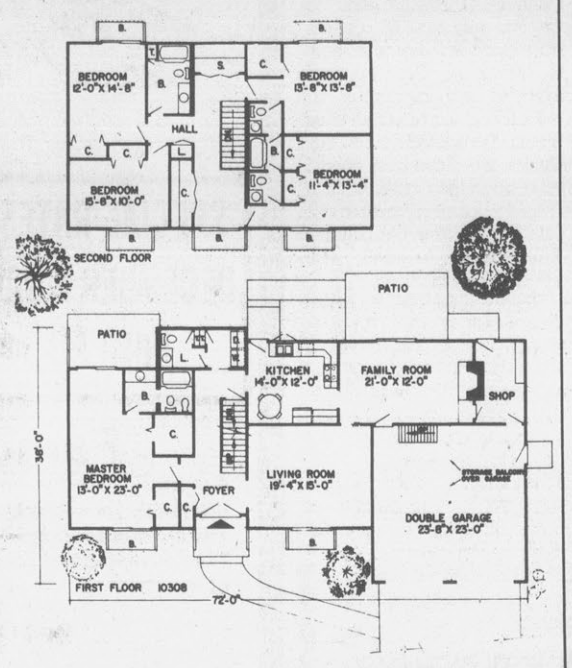

Guests enter a closeted foyer, with living room to their right. The living room shows a front-facing balcony, plus a folding door at rear that minimizes cross-traffic while allowing host or hostess access to the kitchen.

The kitchen is functional and boasts extras such as counter space adjoining the refrigerator, dining space, and an entry to the patio. At right, the 21-ft. family room enjoys a wood-burning fireplace and sliding glass doors to the patio.

Reached from garage or family room, a small shop with built-in workbench offers an ideal area for hobbies or woodworking, and the double garage shows a balcony for storage.

Completing the first level is the expansive master bedroom with nearly 300 sq. ft. of floor space. Besides the two large closets and private bath with dressing area, the master bedroom also merits two pairs of sliding glass doors, one to balcony and one to private patio.

Upstairs, each of the four bedrooms is furnished with sliding glass doors to its own balcony. Closets are generously sprinkled throughout the level, and two and one half baths are included.

Expects Fewer Homes Available

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — A large private insurer of home mortgages does not expect a crunch in consumer credit this year but predicts fewer homes may be available for sale.

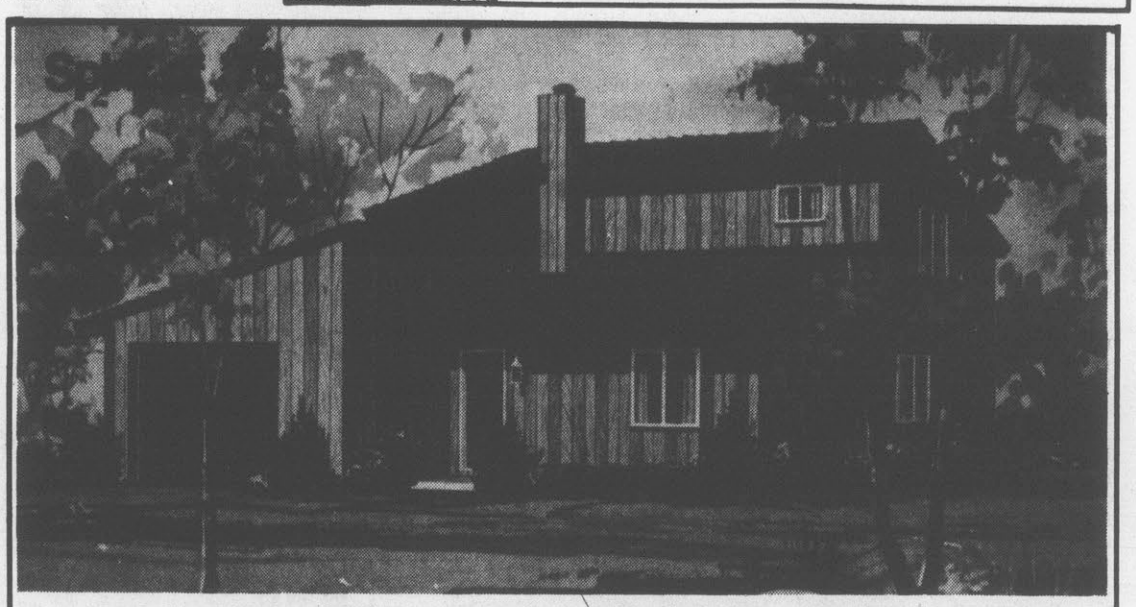

Max Karl, chairman of Mortgage Guaranty Insurance Corp., expects the 23-44-year-old age group to dominate the home buying market this year. He also expects non-traditional buyers, such as singles, non-related persons and widows to account for a growing number of them.

Karl credits this trend to a growing conviction on the part of Americans that a home is one of the best hedges against inflation.

The Homestead®... A good idea made better by Lowe's

Not a pre-fab . . . not a shell house. Each energy-efficient Homestead® is a complete materials package to build the home of the future-today on your lot from the foundation plate up. Construction labor costs not included. You furnish the land, labor, and foundation. We provide everything else from the inside out. And that includes not only the blueprints and building materials, but also paint, carpet, light fixtures, etc. The materials furnished will meet or exceed the minimum property standards of FHA. Any changes required to meet local or state building codes may alter the price accordingly. The materials are delivered to the home site as work progresses, so there's a minimum of waiting or wasted materials.

The Low-E® Homestead® has been specially designed to be the most energy-efficient home you can buy.
Our Low-E® homes can reduce energy use up to 65% over conventional homes! How? What we've done is combine all the existing energy-saving techniques with some innovative building methods. You get extra insulation . . . double-paned windows . . . extensive caulking . . . a super-energy-saving heat pump . . . light-colored heat-reflecting roof . . . and many other energy-saving components. With the price of energy and owning a home steadily rising, you really owe it to yourself to look into the Low-E® Homestead®!

Does that sound too good to be true? Well, believe it! We've utilized some innovative building techniques to really trim labor costs. And our homes require fewer board feet of lumber, which reduces construction costs even more. Even better than that—studies have shown that a Low-E® home is as structurally sound as a conventionally built one.

Interested? We've got a beautiful brochure to tell you the complete Homstead® story. Just drop this coupon in the mail and we'll send you a copy.

#6 LOWE'S

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

What's new on the market?

THE PRODUCT — a new do-it-yourself pipe insulation.

Manufacturer's claim — That this insulation serves the double purpose of helping some owners to reduce fuel bills and conserve energy in hot-water systems by cutting down heat loss through pipes and by preventing messy condensation on cold-water pipes during periods of high humidity...that the product is a flexible elastomeric thermal insulation supplied as flanged slit-tubing for fast and easy application...that the covering is snapped over the pipe and held in place with metal clamps that fit right over the flange to provide a tight fit...and that the insulation is available in three common home-piping sizes: ½-inch copper tubing, ¾-inch copper tubing and 1-inch copper tubing.

Manufacturer's claim — That this reclaimer is attached to the furnace flue, recovering waste heat and redistributing it to provide additional heating where needed...that it uses a thermostat to turn on a blower automatically when heat in the flue reaches a preset level and turns it off when the stack cools.. .that the flue gases heat incoming air in 52 heat-gathering tubes, diverting it to any area of the house via an optional duct-and-register attachment...and that the unit plugs into any 110-volt household outlet and can also be used for wood-burning stoves and free-standing fireplaces.

THE PRODUCT — A door-bottom weather seal.

Manufacturer's claim — that this item is designed to stop drafts, cold, heat and dust from moving underneath doors...that it is treated to repel water and won't soil floor surfaces.. .that it features a minimum drag across floors for less wear to surfaces, easy door movement and extra long life...that it has a patented sealing edge that combines polypropylene pile with an inner plastic fin for an effective seal on irregular surfaces, such as shag rugs...and that it is available in both brown and white to match light and dark colored doors.

Manufacturer's claim — That these strips can be used for heavy-duty repairs, such as sealing plumbing leaks in radiators, water heaters and piping...that it will repair masonry and fasten objects to a wall...that it can be applied under water, making it excellent for repairing swimming pools and boats...and that it forms such a strong bond that it can be drilled, sanded, filed and painted 12 hours after application.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1.50 to this paper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

Discos Cost Musicians Some Jobs

By GEOFF DORNAN
United Press International

John Travolta gave America "Saturday Night Fever," and the resulting disco phenomenon has given many of the nation's musicians a big headache.

Numerous small clubs which once used live bands have converted to disco since the fad swept across the nation a year ago. The effects on musicians vary widely in different areas, but all union officials agree it's not good.

"In any area where there are discos, musicians are losing work," said Victor Fuentealba, national president of the 300,000-member Musicians Union. "We're hoping it's just a passing fad, but although it varies from area to area, it has adversely affected our business in most areas."

Vince DiBari, vice president of the Los Angeles musician's local, said the number of musicians working clubs in his area is off 30 percent from a year ago and he blames disco.

"It would cost them $1,600 a week for a trio, but they can get some guy to come in and spin records for much less," DiBari said. "As much as I dislike it, it works when it's done right. They say they're making it."

DiBari said his objection is not with the full-scale, first class discos, but with the smaller clubs he said are taking advantage of the fad.

"Disco is nothing new. It began in Europe and it's been here for a number of years. That movie 'Saturday Night Fever' made it a fad.

"True disco is done with a lot of class, equipment and special effects. But what's happening down here is a lot of clubs just turning up the jukebox or hiring some guy to play records. They put up some neon and call themselves a disco.

"They're looking for the mostest with the leastest by playing records and calling it disco but, fortunately, most of those are taking a bath and dying."

Fuentealba said the union's main thrust to counter disco is trying to get clubs to combine live music and disco or use live bands that play disco music.

"We've noticed in some areas that more and more of the discos have brought back live music because there are so many discos that they have to do something different to meet the competition," he said. "New York is one place where I feel live music is starting to come back."

Many musicians in Southern California are wearing "MAD" buttons: "Musicians Against Disco." In addition, their cars sport bumper stickers bearing similar sentiments.

In Denver, the local picketed discos last year. But the local's president, Tasso Harris, said the picket lines were designed to protest "playing without paying" rather than to shut down the discos.

He said the heart of the problem is that musicians don't receive royalties when their music is used commercially. At present, he said radio stations, discos and jukebox operators pay only a minimal copyright fee to BMI or ASCAP, the two major distribution syndicates.

"We wanted to make people aware of the fact these people were parasites, making money off the sweat of musicians because of bad copyright laws."

Fuentealba said musicians will be back before Congress this coming session to ask creation of a performance fee, which would take some of the attractiveness away from converting to disco.

Record Sale Of Bonds In U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) — A record total of $369.8 million worth of Israel bonds and other securities were sold in the United States in 1978, says the Israel Bond Organization.

Its general chairman, Sam Rothberg, and president, Michael Arnon, say the amount was $38 million greater than in 1977, the largest gain of any non-war year, and was the fourth successive annual gain.

About $4.3 billion in bonds and other Israel securities have been sold since the start of the U.S. Israel bond drive in 1951 to help finance and advance economic development in Israel.

Where's Taii, The Hippo?

By SAM HARTZ

WASHINGTON (AP) — There was a note of urgency in the wire from the Indonesian capital: "Where's our pygmy hippo?"

But all turned out well. Bad weather in Frankfurt, Germany, had forced a one-week stopover on Taii's air trip from Washington's National Zoo to Djakarta last November.

Members of the National Zoo's much-traveled species have been sent to cities including Melbourne and Sydney in Australia; Antwerp in Belgium, Pretoria in South Africa, Basel in Switzerland, Accra in Ghana, Toronto in Canada, and Dallas, New York, Pittsburgh, Tampa, Fla., and Birmingham, Ala., in the United States.

Pygmy hippos aren't as pretty as some of the National Zoo's creatures — the pandas, for instance. They look like stunted regular hippos. But they're cute in their own way. And they're experts at opening their jaws to beg for contraband snacks from visitors.

They're also good at raising families in captivity.

Fifty-two have been born here since 1927. In recognition of that success, the zoo received a "sustained reproduction" award last October from the American Association of Zoological Parks and Aquariums.

Matriarch Matilda, well over 38, is undoubtedly the world's No. 1 pygmy hippo mother in captivity. Mother of 15, she bore her last baby, Iota, in 1965 when she was almost 30.

Early founders of the colony were Hannah and Billy. Billy was presented to President Coolidge in the 1920s by Harvey Firestone Jr. The present sire is Totota.

Naming has presented a problem. First came the Gumdrop series, Gumdrop I through Gumdrop XVIII. After that the Greek alphabet produced Alpha through Omega.

Now, thanks to the Liberian embassy, the zoo is starting on Gola, a Liberian language.

In residence now is Gun, ("No. 1" in Gola) and Tiei ("No. 2"). Taii ("No. 3") is in Djakarta. The next arrival will be named Tiina ("No. 4"). Alpha, Epsilon, Millie and Lynn also are here.

The hippos aren't featured stars at the Washington zoo. Exhibition space is limited so they have to take turns at being on public display, with its attendant reward of being able to beg the public for goodies.

"We've had to limit the aesthetics of the exhibit to accommodate the breeding program," said Mike Morgan, a zoo spokesman.

But that program is being wound down. The zoo has pretty well met the global pygmy hippopotamus demand and the zoo is turning to breeding snakes, which presents a greater challenge.

The Pop Rock Story

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — William Mitchell, known to some as the father of Pop Rocks, was really searching for an effervescent powdered beverage when he stumbled on his carbonated candy that goes snap, crackle and pop in the mouth.

As part of his continuing quest, Mitchell, a Lincoln Park, N.J., research chemist, said he whipped up a batch of sugar, flavoring and coloring, melted it down and infused it with carbon dioxide.

His hope was that when it cooled and crumbled he could put it into a glass, add water and produce a peppy soft drink comparable to the bottled variety.

The experimental potion turned out rather dismally. For that matter, a feasible formula for instant soda pop still eludes him.

But someone noticed that when a bit of the dry mixture was placed on the tongue, there was an effervescent effect, like tiny explosions. What happened was that saliva melted the candy, releasing little bubbles of gas.

That was more than 15 years ago, before Mitchell's wavy hair turned gray and some of his 14 grandchildren were born. At the time, nobody quite knew what to make of his concoction. Few suspected that millions of children would embrace it as a dynamite new taste thrill.

It is only now, after several years of test-marketing, that carbonated candy is being retailed nationwide under the brand name Pop Rocks.

The stuff, which looks like colored crystals, sells in most stores for 25 cents a packet. That figures out to better than $23 a pound.

Mitchell, who passed this way on a promotion tour, said the price reflects the high cost of specially designed pressurizing equipment needed to carbonate the candy. Even so, it apparently is less than the market would bear, at least while the novelty lasts.

During the tryout period in selected southern and western cities, there was a lively Pop Rocks black market in other areas, Mitchell said.

'The Paper Chase' Kept Alive By Network Faith In Quality

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It was an announcement all but lost in the networks' mid-season schedule-shuffling: CBS would keep "The Paper Chase" on the air, at least through the current season.

So what's the big deal? The show had plenty going for it — an intriguing story line, a brilliant cast and a top-drawer production team.

But CBS' decision was indeed unusual, for in eight weeks on the air "The Paper Chase" had shown little sign of life.

The program had averaged less than 20 percent of the audience in a tough Tuesday night time slot, and, in the last week of November, had attracted the smallest audience of any show broadcast.

"We knew when we put the show on the air it wouldn't start off as a house afire," says Robert A. Daly, the president of CBS Entertainment and the man responsible for keeping the program afloat. "We knew that it was the kind of thing the audience would have to find and sample.

"The pilot was sensational, and the series maintained that high quality," Daly says. "That's unusual, and we felt the program deserved a chance."

"The Paper Chase" was not the first program to survive a dismal start — current hits like "Happy Days" and, "Barney Miller" on ABC and CBS' own "M-A-S-H" and "All in the Family" caught on only after months, and even years, on the air.

But "The Paper Chase" decision offered, nonetheless, an interesting dissection of subjective thinking in TV programming.

John Houseman, who won an Oscar as Professor Charles W. Kingsfield Jr. in the motion picture about first-year law school students, had recreated the role for the TV series. And the film's producer, Robert C. Thompson, continued as executive producer for television.

"Houseman was instrumental in making the series a success in terms of quality," Daly says, "both as an actor and with his input during production.

"And the Hart character (student James T. Hart, played by James Stephens) was someone we felt people could relate to, a young kid fighting the odds.

"There are, essentially, two important factors involved in the success of a show, and one is the numbers," Daly says. "But I think the real question is whether the show is a good one or not.

"There is, of course, a certain level (in the ratings) that you can't live with, because at that point, it's a rejection.

"We certainly went into 'Paper Chase' knowing the competition," he says, "and we didn't expect to open with a 35 share." In fact, the program's share — percentage of the audience — was 19 the first week.

Daly says every new show is evaluated and re-evaluated at first. "An awful lot of time is spent on a new series. Everybody in the production department reads every script, and everybody concentrates in getting it off the ground."

"The Paper Chase," he says, got — and still gets — more than the usual attention.

"We have shut the show down when the script wasn't ready," he says. "Some programs, you'll shoot with 90 percent of the script, but with 'Paper Chase,' we can't afford to let that happen, even if it means pre-empting the show."

Keeping "The Paper Chase" on the prime-time schedule had to be a tough decision, but Daly and the people at CBS had gambled before.

"'Paper Chase' is like 'The Waltons,'" the CBS executive says. "We put it on seven years ago against 'The Flip Wilson Show,' which was not a good time slot, but we felt it was a high-quality show and should get a chance.

"The Waltons," like "The Paper Chase," was based on a successful full-length film, "The Homecoming." The show struggled after its premiere in 1972, but gradually eroded the "Flip Wilson" audience, and remains on the air today.

"We had the same feeling last year about 'Lou Grant,'" Daly says. "I remember the long conversations we had about that show. After the first five or six weeks, it began a gradual climb and really took off during the summer. Now, it's a hit series.

"'M-A-S-H' is another good example. It started off with 20-22-24 shares, and was nearly canceled a couple times. It caught on the following season.

"'All in the Family' struggled, too, and that is an interesting story. It built an audience during summer reruns, and by the next season, it had made the fastest turnaround of any show I know of."

Often, Daly says, a program simply needs work — the idea is sound and the cast is a good one, but the show lacks something. "We're very high on 'WKRP in Cincinnati,' which we took off a couple months ago, and we've decided to stick with it."

Business Notes

DESIGNATED CRS

Mavis Butts, owner of Mavis Butts Realty here, has been designated a Certified Residential Specialist (CRS) by the Realtors National Marketing Institute.

Designed specifically for Realtors and Realtor-associates, the CRS is a certification of skill, experience, and documented activity in the field of residential real estate, the Institute reported.

The Marketing Institute is an educational affiliate of the National Association of Realtors offering publications, training aids, audio-visuals and courses for the real estate professional.

DIVISION ACQUIRED

Scovill Manufacturing Co. announced the acquisition for approximately $55 million of the overseas and American facilities of Eaton Corporation's Lock & Hardware Division. U.S. division headquarters are located in Union County and European facilities in London.

The Security Products Group, as Scovill has designated the acquisition, sold in 1977 approximately $105 million worth of Yale locks, Norton door controls, and other builders hardware, it was noted. Eaton said in its 1977 annual report it had decided to divest this business because the security products did not match Eaton's long-term corporate objectives.

Malcolm Baldrige, chairman and chief executive officer of Scovill, said the U.S. administrative offices will remain in Union County. Scovill has a plant in Washington.

INCOME INCREASE

NCNB Corp. reported consolidated income, before securities transactions, of $34.299 million in 1978, compared to $23.643 million earned in 1977.

Thomas I. Storrs, chairman of the board, said the figures were equivalent to $2.02 per share, an increase of 44.3 percent from the $1.40 earned in 1977. Net income was $2 per share, he said, compared to $1.39 per share in 1977.

Consolidated income, before securities transactions, for the fourth quarter of 1978 was $9.238 million, compared to $6.784 million earned for the comparable period in 1977.

BW APPOINTMENTS

Burroughs Wellcome Co. announced several appointments at its Research Triangle Park headquarters.

The appointments included: Albert Eugene Bailey Jr. to head of system analysis, Computer Services Division; David C. Pressel to section head of the Planning and Documentation Section, Data Quality Control and Quality Assurance Department; Ms. Mary E. Fletcher to group leader I, Central Animal Facility;

Dr. Donald Deuel to head, Automation and Minicomputer, Computer Services Division; Dr. Gilles Cloutier to head, Neurology-Anesthesia Section, Department of Clinical Research; Daniel Heatherington to head, Services Section in the Medical Division; Dr. Gregory Perkins to head of the Respiratory Section, Department of Clinical Research; and Dr. Warren Stern to head, Psychiatry Section, Department of Clinical Research.

BUSINESS PURCHASED

William S. Corbitt Jr. has purchased Smith Electric Co. from the estate of the late Milo H. Smith. Corbitt has been associated with the company for 25 years. Smith Electric Co., which has been in operation since 1918, is the dealer for Westinghouse appliances and Hoover floor care equipment, specializing in sales and service.

INCOME UP

Planters National Bank reported income before securities transactions for the fourth quarter of 1978 of $902,806, an increase of 32.5 percent over the year earlier period.

PNB chairman and president James B. Powers said the figures amounted to 93 cents on a per share basis, a gain of 32.9 percent over the 1977 fourth quarter. Net income was $870,337 compared to $685,258 a year ago, or 89 cents per share versus 70 cents.

For the year ended Dec. 31, income before securities transactions reached $2,863,730, up 25.8 percent from 1977 earnings, Powers reported. Net income for the year totaled $2,806,305 or $2.87 per share compared to $2,276,883 or $2.33 per share for 1977.

PROMOTED TO VP

W. E. (Bill) Calloway, staff counsel of The National Bank of South Carolina, has been promoted to vice president with responsibility for the legal support of NBSC's branch and general office operations.

A Greenville native, Calloway was associated with Thomas and Thomas, attorneys, in Beaufort, S.C. prior to joining NBSC.

He is a graduate of The Citadel with a B.S. degree in business administration. He holds a J.D. degree from the University of South Carolina School of Law.

JOINS FIRM

Carolyn Ann Sutton has joined DP Associates of Greenville Inc. as a marketing representative and broker, it was announced by John Williams, vice president.

A Pitt County native, Miss Sutton has had experience in real estate management and sales, it was noted. In addition, she had experience in the Pitt County school system as a media specialist.

TO INSTALL MACHINES

North Carolina National Bank announced that it will install 45 advanced automatic teller machines throughout the state in mid-1979, replacing "NCNB 24" machines now located in 15 cities.

The bank reported that the new machines will be installed in 20 cities in the second quarter of 1979 with all 37 units now in use by NCNB scheduled for replacement. Eight new machines will be added in the high-volume areas.

The new units will have a number of improvements over existing machines, the bank noted, including the ability to dispense varying amounts of money instead of packets containing a pre-determined amount, as is now done.

DECLARED DIVIDEND

The board of directors of First Union Corp. declared the regular quarterly cash dividend of 23 cents a share, payable March 15 to shareholders of record Feb. 15.

First Union Corp. is a one-bank holding company, whose principal subsidiaries are First Union National Bank and Cameron-Brown Co. The bank has an office in Farmville.

PROCESSED?

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — South Africa at last is able to make Ementhaler cheese.

About five years ago, T.J. Britz started on the project, but since overseas makers of the cheese are loath to divulge their secrets, he wound up examining about 20,000 proprionic acid bacteria (essential to making the cheese) before he

Future's Promise Spurs Director Onward

GRIFTON — "Older people have so much to offer," says Etta Harrell, director of the Friendship Club, Grifton's center for those age 55 or older.

Since the Friendship Club opened Jan. 2 at the Grifton Community Center, more and more people are finding about the warmth and hospitality offered by the Club and Mrs. Harrell.

"I see new faces every day," says Etta of those who come to learn crafts, play card games, read, or just enjoy being with other people.

Grifton had been interested for many years in obtaining services for the elderly, according to Jeff McAllister, Director of Pitt County's Council on Aging.

There had been special interest in obtaining nutrition services such as those offered in Ayden and Farmville.

"Due to the small number of persons age 60 or older in Grifton, it was not feasible at this time to obtain nutrition services," said McAllister. "The community 'center serves as a good alternative."

The Council and Grifton worked together, with the Council providing funds for a director, so that Grifton could come closer to its dream.

Then the question arose — who would be director?

The selection finally settled on Mrs. Harrell, who moved to Grifton last March.

Moving wasn't easy for Mrs. Harrell, who had lived for many years in the Hertford County town of Winton. However, with the death of her husband, Paul, Mrs. Harrell's children, Bodie, Bobby and Paula, urged her to move to Grifton to live with them.

Settling in her own home on Charles St. with a kitty, "Nameless," Mrs. Harrell set about the task of meeting new folks and learning new interests by signing up for a class at the Grifton Community Center.

It wasn't long before Grifton citizens learned of Mrs. Harrell's interest in people. When Mayor Dave Bosley approached her about the job, Mrs. Harrell said, "I'll take it."

When Etta says she's "not afraid of the public," she means it. From working in the town tax office in Winton to serving for eight years as a kindergarden assistant, she's had plenty of experience in dealing with the public.

Organizations in Grifton such as the Women's Service League, the Lions Club, the Jaycees and the Jaycettes have matched Mrs. Harrell's enthusiasm for the Center by rounding up articles for the room at the Grifton Community Center that serves as the Club headquarters.

Mrs. Harrell did a little of her own calling in decorating the room with cheery curtains, rugs, and other small items that seem to spell "home" for its members.

There are magazines, newspapers, a television set, a radio, and other entertaining devices for those who don't participate in the crafts program.

Mrs. Hazel Bright has volunteered her time each Tuesday and Thursday to teach members such crafts as making burlap flowers and egg carton trees.

For those men who feel that such crafts are, well, "sissy," Mrs. Harrell points out that the Club offers such games as cards, dominoes, checkers, and bingo for their enjoyment.

Each morning, Mrs. Harrell tries to have a form of refreshment, usually coffee and cookies, for club members to enjoy. One member even brought a potato pie recently for others to enjoy.

However, Mrs. Harrell is quick to point out that the Club is not looking for its members to donate money or go to great expense, noting that often many elderly persons live on fixed incomes.

It's the promise of the future that spurs Mrs. Harrell further in the Club's interest.

"A man is making us a quilting frame, so hopefully many persons will come and join in the fun," she said. Also, there are hopes that a volunteer instructor can be found to teach wood carving to draw out men in the community.

"My philosophy is for folks to come and learn," says Mrs. Harrell. "I'll teach them what I know and they'll teach me. This is a place for making new friends and keeping old ones."

As time passes, both Mrs. Harrell and McAllister hope to have the Club as an information/referral center for Grifton senior citizens, who often cannot call Greenville for needed information because of the expense.

"In our charter, it says that one of our purposes is to be an advocate of the elderly," says McAllister. "What we want to do is make Grifton a satellite information and referral center, since Grifton is a long distance from Greenville."

One problem for the Club is transportation. With the cold weather, it is hard for many to get out and walk to the Club.

"People are so sprawled out," said Mayor Bosley. "Some elderly persons that are able to drive have offered their assistance in picking up other people."

So while the problems are being ironed out, Mrs. Harrell is making plans, one of which is a possible Meals on Wheels program for club members.

Visitors are invited to come observe at the club, which is open weekdays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

"Only those age 55 or older are eligible to join, but others can come by to observe what we're doing," said Mrs. Harrell.

"That's what I like about the name, "Friendship Club," says Mrs. Harrell. "It sounds so inviting."

Accent On Living

Wendy Ehlers' New Art Form Is Lint From Clothes Dryer

By Jules Loh

PLANDOME MANOR, N. Y. (AP) — Wendy Ward Ehlers is a lady with a glint of mischief in her eye and, she believes, the largest and rarest collection of its kind in all the world.

She collects laundry lint.

She also collects rusty nails and used teabags and dried up orange rinds and burnt waffles and other pretty things, but it is the lint from her dryer that fires the heart of this housewife-turned-artist.

"Lint is really nice stuff, don't you think?" she said. "I began stuffing it in paper bags because I thought it was a shame to throw it away, that something should be done with it."

Some titles of her works: "Booberry on Lint"; "Lint with Dried Red Peppers". Ehlers' Homage to Rothko's Homage to Matisse," in lint.

"Booberry," she explained with a straight face, "is breakfast cereal. It tastes ghastly. The children wouldn't eat it, but it is pretty. That work is part of my Serial Series on Cereal." Others in the series are "Trix of Lint" and "Puffed Wheat on Lint."

Wendy Ward Ehlers has done more than 250 such art works. Each is encased in plexiglass, which she cuts and fashions expertly, and each is a spoof of the precious world of art, artists and museums.

Like any serious artist she takes great pains with each piece. "You can't make fun of something unless you do it very well yourself. It took me a year to learn to work plexiglass."

Not long ago her county's Museum of Find Arts dared to have a showing. "From the Private Collection of Wendy Ward Ehlers."

As it happened, it appeared simultaneously with a showing of masterpieces from a famous foundation collection. "Couldn't have asked for a better setup." Art lovers, in angry letters and phone calls, treated her as though she had profaned a temple.

Collectors, you see, are the prime targets of her burlesque.

Some years back, when her five children were younger, the family custom was to spend a month each summer touring the country in a house trailer.

"It seemed that every museum we visited, every art gallery, was full of collections. Collections of spoons, butterflies, bubble gum cards. The absurdity of it struck me. Are we a people possessed by possessions?

"I thought to myself, ruefully, here I am at 40 and I haven't collected a single thing. Then I thought of my dryer lint."

Voila. A new art form.

Since, Mrs. Ehlers has expanded her palette to include other kitchen debris. Her "Teacups and Ushed Ehlers Teabags" is just that. Her "Pheasant Under Plexiglass" is a plate with a pheasant painted on it and decorated with feathers plucked by the artist.

Dryer lint, though, remains her forte.

"My project this year is to start a lint museum. I wrote to 60 celebrities asking for their lint. I guess they didn't take me seriously. Only seven responded."

One who did was Charles Addams, the cartoonist.

Jogging—'Something Totally For Myself'

By Bob Cavin
UNC-G News Bureau

GREENSBORO—Each morning for the past six years, Dr. Pearl Berlin has left her Jamestown home around 6 a.m. for a two-mile jog before getting ready for work.

The 53-year-old professor in the School of Health, Physical Education and Recreation (HPER) at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro calls her daily run "my mental relaxant."

Dr. Berlin, as well as many other women who began jogging for physical fitness, has found that the mental benefits derived from a daily exercise program of running to be equal to the physical benefits.

"Jogging is something I do totally for myself," she explained. "It keeps my mind clear and it helps me cope with the problems that pop up in everyday life.

"I'm not trying to make the Boston Marathon," she added. "I jog because I enjoy it and because it adds something to everyday of my life."

More women could discover the mental and physical benefits of jogging or any other exercise program if they would only take the time, according to Dr. Karen King, an assistant professor of HPER at UNC-G.

"Last year, I had my health class take a survey of 840 people to find out how many of them got at least 15 minutes of exercise a day," she said. "Over 80 percent of the people interviewed said they did not, and the reason most of them gave was that they just didn't have time.

"Job pressure has become the dominating thing in our lives," Dr. King pointed out. "But we need to take time for ourselves. Time to get away from the stress of everyday work. Time to just be alone. That's one of the things I like best about jogging—the time alone.

"When I started jogging last June, it was easy to say 'I don't have time to run today,' but now I take time because that 15 minutes is about the only time all day long I have totally to myself," commented Dr. King, 35, who runs an average of two miles a day, six days a week.

It's important to note that not all people who jog do it because they like it.

Take Jan Donahue, physical education instructor at UNC-G, for instance. She began running two miles a day on her 30th birthday last June. She admits that for her, "The only good thing about jogging is getting finished."

Why does she do it? "Jogging gives me a sense of well-being and personal satisfaction," she explained. "Everyone needs some form of exercise everyday and jogging is more convenient that most sports.

"Unlike swimming or team sports, you don't have special equipment beyond a good pair of running shoes, you don't have to make plans with someone else, and jogging doesn't take a lot of time to get good results," she explained.

Kaye Moody, 33, another instructor of HPER at UNC-G who runs between three to six miles five times a week, added that running can help women improve their self-image.

"On the whole, the average woman does not get much exercise," she said. "At one time, our lives depended on our bodies, but now most of us can't even walk to the neighborhood store.

"Running could help women improve their self-concept about their bodies and themselves as a person."

Unfortunately, many women who begin jogging in an effort lose weight give up in frustration when they not only don't lose weight from jogging, but they gain extra pounds.

"Running makes you hungry so you eat more," explained Dr. Berlin. "Jogging can be used to supplement a diet for weight-loss, but the only way to lose weight is to eat less. Jogging alone just won't do it.

"However, jogging is good for firming up flabby muscles and making you look trimmer. But as far as losing weight is concerned dieting is still the best way," she said.

As in most exercise programs, it's important to get off to a good start and that means a trip to the doctor, according to Dr. Berlin.

"Anyone who is beginning any new exercise program after being inactive for a long period of time should begin in a doctor's office," she recommended. "A doctor can give you a good idea of just how strenuous a workout you can stand.

"When starting out on a jogging program, I advocate a walk-run schedule," she said. "For instance, you might jog 50 paces and then walk 50. Gradually, you will be able to eliminate the walk altogether.

"The important thing is not to start off thinking you'll jog mile everyday, or that you'll lose 50 pounds, or that it will be easy," Dr. Berlin warned. "Jogging is hard work at first, but it does get easier as you get used to it."

Lung pain and fatigue are the two factors that cause most women novices to quit jogging before they ever really get started, according to Jane Nugent, a 32-year-old doctoral student in physical education at UNC-G who runs between 35-55 miles a week.

"Many women are just not as active as they should be and when they begin jogging their bodies are not prepared for the stress and strain of running a long distance," she pointed out.

"So they start out trying to run a mile, and a couple hundred yards down the road their lungs start burning and their legs start hurting," Miss Nugent said. "At that point, many just quit.

"If they would just stick it out and get over the initial shock of getting started, jogging could open a whole new world for them and eliminate a lot of the tension, stress and frustrations that build up from day to day," she added.

THE JOYS OF JOGGING. . .women who have taken up jogging on a regular basis say it is not only good exercise, but they add that running also provides mental relaxation and relief from stress. (UNC-G News Bureau photo by Bov Cavin)

The Tea and Topics Book Club held its January meeting at the home of Mrs. Arthur Fletcher. Joseph Johnson, manager of the Jewel Box, was speaker.

Speaking on diamonds, he told of their history, source, production and their varied uses. He showed a film and a display with liknesses of many famous diamonds.

Mrs. Gordon Fulp was welcomed as a guest and Mrs. C. H. Branton as a new member.

Mrs. Margaret Schiller will be hostess for the February meeting.

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

"Career Management: A New Horizon for Women" will be the theme of the 24th annual Spotlight on Women conference to be held here March 3-4.

The conference is sponsored by the N. C. Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc., in cooperation with the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill Extension Division. The conference is open to all interested persons.

Special guest speaker will be Alexis M. Herman, director of the women's bureau and deputy assistant secretary of the U. S. Department of Labor. She will give the banquet address Saturday evening.

Three general topics will be discussed at the meeting: career planning and entry, career advancement and financial planning.

Participants are encouraged to make reservations early, preferably no later than Feb. 15. Registration fee is $18, with an additional $8 for the banquet.

For more information, call Joan True, UNC-CH Extension Division, 204 Abernathy Hall 002A, Chapel Hill, 27514.

If you have a favorite chicken recipe that is a little special and a little different, enter it in the 1979 National Chicken Cooking Contest.

According to Ed Woodhouse, executive director of the N. C. Poultry Federation, the N. C. Chicken Cooking Contest will be held April 27 at the North Hills Shopping Mall, Raleigh. The North Carolina finalists selected from the entries submitted to the National Headquarters, Washington, D. C., will compete in the state cook-off for a chance to represent North Carolina at the national contest.

The deadline for entering is April 1. Mail recipe entries to: Chicken Contest, Box 28158, Central Staton, Washington, D. C. 20005. An entry form is not required, but name, address and phone number must be written on each recipe.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement. Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to "The Daily Reflector" one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

TEENS SHUN MINIS

NEW YORK (AP) — Fashion preferences among teen-age girls have changed drastically in the past five years, a recent Seventeen magazine survey shows.

In 1974, 44 percent of the teen girls polled opted for mini-skirts. Now more than two-thirds of those surveyed wear their skirts just below the knee; 14 percent like the midi, others like knee-length, and the mini has just about disappeared from the scene.

Economics, Management Course Offered

The series of review courses designed to prepare secretaries to take the Certified Professional Secretaries Exam in May will continue with a seven-week course in economics and management.

The class will begin at Pitt Technical Institute Jan. 23 and will continue through March 6, meeting on Tuesday nights from seven to 10 o'clock. The instructor for the course will be Elaine Garner, who is an instructor from Pitt Tech.

Although the deadline for secretaries to apply to take the exam has passed, it is still possible for students studying secretarial courses to apply for the test. The deadline is Feb. 1 for any student planning to graduate by Aug. 31 from a secretarial program. Information can be obtained from Betty Thompson.

The CPS courses are sponsored by the Greenville Chapter of the National Secretaries Association (International) but membership in the organization is not necessary to attend the classes. Registration is held the first night of class and the public is invited. Registration fee is $5 for the seven sessions.

Grass Roots Members Meet

The January meeting of the Grass Roots Garden Club was held at the home of Mrs. James Hecker.

Mrs. Jim Rayford, first vice president, conducted the business meeting and plans were formulated to have a program on dried flower arrangements in February.

Mrs. Juanita Elks gave a program on "Living With African Violets."

Mrs. Vera Harris of Richmond, Va., was a guest for the meeting.

Mrs. R. N. Merritt was cohostess.

NSA Meeting Is Scheduled

The Greenville Chapter of the National Secretaries Association (International) will hold its monthly meeting Monday at the Ramada Inn. Dinner will begin at 6:15 p.m. with the meeting following at seven o'clock.

Guest speaker will be Dick Carney, Blood Center administrator, who will discuss the pheresis machine.

Pound Of Prevention Program Pushed For ECU Students

By MARGARET BUNCH
ECU News Bureau

Thinking of a university as a town is a strange idea at first glance, but take a look at the numbers and it is easy to see that the idea is not so far fetched after all.

East Carolina University has a population of 12,000 students, approximately 2,000 faculty and staff members, a little over 376 acres of land and 60 buildings. That is a fair sized little country village. Like every small town, ECU has its own police force to protect and preserve people, buildings and land.

ECU's campus police are well trained, experienced, and far more interested in prevention than they are in investigation. Chief Francis Eddings has one officer who is so intensely interested in a prevention program that she is willing to give many more hours than are legally required of her to perpetuate the program. Sgt. Lynne Singleton has continued an idea started by another officer who is no longer with the force; she not only continued what was already begun, but has added to it and spent many hours presenting the program to students and personnel.

Singleton's presentation has been successful among female students, mostly because of the strong backing of Dean of Women, Carolyn Fulghum. Dean Fulghum believes that this is"...probably the most popular program that we have ever had. The kids have responded...mostly because something was needed. There has been no negative reaction. This type of program is being developed on many campuses simply as a precautionary measure."

The program that Lynne Singleton presents to the students in dorm sessions and meetings of other interested groups around the campus, deals mainly with the prevention of theft and assault. Theft is by far the more common crime on campuses.

She offers simple, common sense solutions to the problem, but these suggestions are welcome and many times new thoughts to the students because they are away from home for the first time and have never had to think about protecting property and person before. Most students have always been able to rely on parents for that kind of protection.

One of the simple rules, shown to the students in short movie presentations and slide programs, is to always lock doors, even if only going down the hall for a short time. And students are asked to always report strangers in the dorms.

The proliferation of cars equipped with expensive CB radios, stereo and FM systems has opened up another area where students must be careful to protect their property. The prevention program stresses that cars should always be parked in well lighted area and should always be locked.

In the informal talk and question and answer sessions that always go with the slide and movie presentations, Lynne particularly stresses alertness and an awareness of the people around as the greatest preventative to crime. She reiterates that people should not travel alone on foot at night but should always be with one other person or a group.

The program's popularity can be based on two things. Its common sense approach to a common problem and the refreshing enthusiasm of Lynne Singleton. Her youth, intelligence and obvious enjoyment of her job gives her good rapport with the students. Advertising the meeting time and place is the responsibility of each group and the students always respond by placing advertising around campus. The program has received good word-of-mouth advertising and sororities and fraternities as well as other campus based groups are beginning to request the presentation. As the different groups send in requests, Singleton changes the program to fit the situation that she is addressing. Warnings that are applicable in dorms, are not applicable in the more home-like atmosphere of the sorority or fraternity house.

Lynne Singleton is originally from Washington, N.C., but has received training and worked in several areas of North Carolina before coming to East Carolina. She received her Police Basic Training at The Guilford County Sheriff's Department and worked at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro prior to coming back to the east. She has taken part in several special training programs and has a total of 320 classrooms hours of police training.

FOUR-FLOUR BREAD

The special flours called for are available in health-food stores and some supermarkets.

2¼ to 2¾ cups all-purpose white flour
1½ cups fine rye flour
1 cup gluten flour
1 cup rice flour
2 teaspoons salt
1 package dry yeast
1½ cups milk
½ cup water
¼ cup honey
¼ cup butter

Stir together 2 cups of the white flour with the rye, gluten and rice flours. In the large bowl of an electric mixer, stir together 2 cups of this flour mixture with the salt and yeast. Heat milk, water, honey and butter unil very warm (about 120 degrees) — butter doesn't have to melt. Gradually stir the milk mixture into the flour mixture; with mixer at medium speed, beat for 2 minutes. Add ¾ cup of the flour mixture; at high speed, beat for 2 minutes. Stir in the remaining flour mixture plus enough additional white flour to make a stiff dough. Knead until smooth and elastic — about 10 minutes. Place in a greased bowl; cover tightly with saran; let rise in a warm (80 degrees) draft-free place until doubled — about 1 hour. Punch down dough. Divide in half and shape into 2 loaves. Place in two greased 9 by 5 by 3-inch loaf pans and let rise as before until doubled — about 1 hour. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven, on rack below center, for 30 minutes. Turn out and cool.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

There isn't one parent reading this column who is Sanforized. We all undergo a shrinking process the day our children reach the age of 12. Our brain diminishes, our vision is stunted, and we are virtually useless to society until the kid reaches the age of 20 or so.

As a parent who has just emerged from the Valley of the Ignorant, let me tell you it would have been far easier if someone had taught me how to understand "teenagese."

"Awriiiiiiiite!": This is a term of jubilation accompanied by one of those rare teenage smiles usually directed at someone on the telephone. Worry a lot when you hear it.

"You know?": These two words are used in place of periods at the end of a sentence. They are not to be taken literally. "You know?" does not require an answer . . . or for that matter does it deserve one.

"Really!": One "Really!" is worth a thousand kisses. It's as close to civility as you get. It means they agree to something you have said.

"Who cares?": This is a mechanical retort that often comes out of their mouth even before you have said something.

"I hear you": Don't get your hopes built up on this one. It only means you are audible and that your request has been acknowledged. It does not mean anything will come of it.

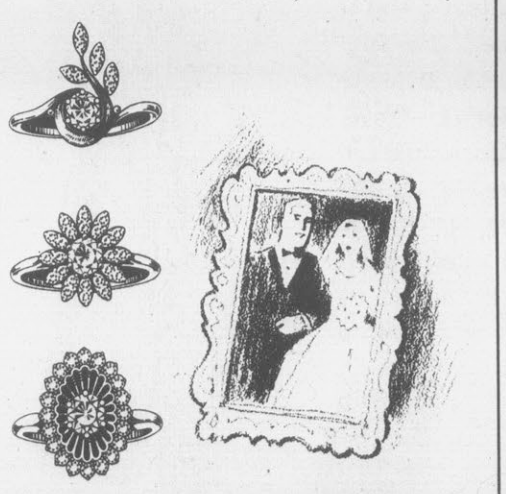

"You going out tonight?": This phrase holds as much sentiment as Daniel when he was led out to the lion's den and asked, "You wanta go out for dinner?" It's a subtle way of asking you if the car is or is not available.

"Who used up all the hot water?": This is another rhetorical question. They know before they asked, but they are trying to make you feel guilty about rinsing your toothbrush in hot water when they, in effect, have just emptied a 30-gallon tank to rinse their hair.

"When do we eat?": Teenagers do not consider this a question, but a salutation. It takes the place of "Hello, how are you? Was your surgery bad? Did anyone get hurt in the other car? You and Dad are getting a what?"

My favorite is "Everybody Else's Mother." A lot of parents interpret this saying as a collective group of liberal mothers who allow their kids to do as they please. Like Mary Poppins, Santa Claus, Tinkerbell and The Incredible Hulk, it's a convenient myth. If you don't believe me, ask for her phone number.

Well, parents, Hang Tough. That's Teenagese for Good Luck!

MRS. JOHN ALEXANDER BASSOS

Couple Marries Saturday Evening

DILLON, S. C. — Paula Ann Worthington and John Alexander Bassos, both of Greenville, N. C., were united in marriage in a double ring ceremony performed here last night at seven o'clock.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Milton Kennedy Worthington Sr. of Rt. 1, Grifton, and Mrs. Daisy W. Bassos of Greenville, and the late Mr. Alexander Bassos.

The couple will live in Greenville following a wedding trip to unannounced points.

The bride is associated with the East Carolina University Computing Center. The bridegroom is associated with the sales department of Hasting's Ford, Inc.

Traveling Men Depend On Wife's Vital Role

By AP Newsfeatures

A handful of Connecticut businessmen whose jobs involve thousands of miles of international travel each year say their lives really aren't as glamorous as some may think.

But the global commuters agree they wouldn't consider any other kind of job.

Jim Kennedy, vice president of international marketing for the commercial products division of Pratt & Whitney Aircraft Group, spends about 50 percent of his time traveling, the bulk of it abroad. In 1978 he logged more than 250,000 miles, he said.

He's done it for 20 years, so exchange rates and time changes come naturally to him.

"These are things that you learn after a while," Kennedy said.

Stephen Ruffi, president of the machinery group of Emhart's USM division, estimates he's flown 50,000 miles to 16 countries since July 1978.

"My suitcase never gets in the closet," he said with a laugh.

Mastery of a foreign language isn't necessary, they say, but physical stamina, self-reliance and an iron stomach are.

But that's only half the story. Their wives and children are the other part of the picture. Many executives said they relied completely on their wives to run things at home.

Jim Carros of Harwinton, Conn., manager of licensing for Combustion Engineering's international group, confesses that he wouldn't even know how to call someone to clear their driveway of snow.

"The wife has to be extremely capable of running the house and taking care of the problems that arise with raising children," says Ruffi's wife, Audrey. But she insists, "It isn't as difficult as it sounds."

Rosemary Carros and Mrs. Ruffi agree that the wife of a traveling businessman must have interests of her own.

"I think you have to enjoy the independence thrust upon you," said Mrs. Carros, adding that she thoroughly enjoys running their home and working full time for the Planned Parenthood League of Connecticut.

The social life is unpredictable, but Mrs. Carros said that doesn't bother her.

"I have to make sure I have something to do so I don't feel cheated," she said. "If you're not a whole person, you could be unhappy."

The global commuters have their problems too. "I'll tell you, it's awfully lonely sometimes," Carros said.

Kennedy met his German wife, Annemarie, while traveling and feels his children have benefited from their exposure to different cultures. He admits that he has missed a lot of his children's development, but feels that sharing his experiences with them has given them a "realistic point of view" of the world.

Cheese, Egg Dishes Good Protein Source

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

These days there is a constant quest for filling dishes that will pack enough protein without involving the purchase of costly pieces of beef, pork or lamb.

Two relatively economical foods that are high in protein and other nutrients are eggs and cheese. Both are adaptable and both have proven their worth for many centuries. Among other things, they make a fine fondue.

Cheese is believed to be the oldest food created by man, appearing in one form or other wherever he has grazed animals and used their milk. For cheeses, and their number is legion, all have one thing in common: all are made from milk, whether it be from cows, goats, yak or reindeer.

Cheese is regarded as a nearly perfect food, with many of the essential food elements the body requires. The amount of these nutritional elements varies with different kinds of cheese, but it is there — protein, fat, vitamins and so on.

Pliny, the Roman chronicler, tells of the Persian philosopher, Zoroaster, who was said to have lived for 20 years on nothing but cheese.

Cheese was made in biblical times and references to it go back to the Old Testament. The ancient Romans were great cheese makers and introduced it to England and other parts of their empire.

Throughout the Middle Ages, many of the great monasteries became famous for the cheeses made by their monks. And when the Pilgrims set forth on the Mayflower, they took along a quantity of round Dutch cheeses.

Eggs are as much a part of man's history as cheese. From earliest times, the egg has been a basic food, generally from the hen but also from the duck, goose and plover.

So it is inevitable these days that people should turn to the fondue made famous by the Italians, French and Swiss. The English made good ones too, like this creation made from cheddar. Americans have given it a gourmet touch with a dollop of rum.

1 tablespoon flour 1½ ounces Puerto Rican dark rum
7 ounces club soda
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
Dash Tabasco ¼ teaspoon dry mustard
1 tablespoon butter
1 egg yolk, lightly beaten
French bread cut in chunks, eac crust

Toss shredded cheese with flour. Combine rum, club soda, seasonings and butter in saucepan and bring to simmer. Add cheese, handful at a time, stirring constantly, and allowing to melt before adding more. Cook, stirring till all cheese melts and mixture thickens. Remove from heat. Add a little warm cheese mixture to beaten egg yolk and stir back into pan. Simmer again 5 to 10 seconds but don't allow mixture to boil, stirring constantly. Serve with chunks of bread for dipping. Serves 4.

Deserted Preacher Feels Preyed Upon

By Abigail Van Buren

1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am an ordained minister in the Presbyterian Church. I have tried in all good faith to fulfill my duties as a husband and father (we have two young children), but my efforts have been rejected by my wife.

She left me for another man. Soon after, she decided she wanted our house and children (but not me), so she petitioned the court and was awarded temporary custody of the children plus possession of our home. This meant that I, who had cared for the children after she deserted us, had to pack up and leave.

Abby, this automatic favoritism the courts have toward mothers is unjust. My wife has shown herself to be unfaithful and unfit to raise the children. Yet I am the one who is being punished.

I want my house and children back. What should I do? (P.S. Yes, I have a good lawyer.)

BACHELOR FATHER

DEAR FATHER: You say you have a good lawyer. Good. You need one. Take his advice. Be patient. The wheels of justice sometimes grind slowly. Practice what you preach: "The Lord never gives us a heavier load than we can carry."

DEAR ABBY: In response to the dieter who finds it tough to turn down dessert-pushing hostesses, may I offer the following solution:

When the insistent hostess brings on the dessert, simply say, "Sorry, I'm allergic to it." Then add, "It makes me break out in fat!"

WEIGHT WATCHER

DEAR WATCHER: Thanks for a timely reminder to take off those extra five pounds we put on over the holidays. I've already done it, which entitles me to the "no-belly prize."

CONFIDENTIAL TO A.R. IN BEVERLY HILLS: To put it succinctly: Psychoanalysis is confession without absolution.

As in the past two years, the Rose High School Student Government Association is sponsoring a flower sale for Valentine's Day.

For 50 cents, a student may order a carnation and have it sent to another person within the school. The meaning of the carnation varies along with the color. A white flower means "I'd like to get to know you," a pink one, "I like you a lot" and a red one, "I love you."

Orders for the carnations will be accepted through Jan. 24.

On Tuesday night, members of the Anchor Club held a covered-dish supper followed by a talk by Dan Kelly, a representative from the Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center.

The annual pig-in-a-poke auction sponsored by the Rose High Wildlife Club was held Wednesday night. Each club member donated a hunting or fishing item worth at least $1.00 and approximately $128 was earned. The next club project is a fishing trip planned for spring.

Onions and garlic can be peeled more easily if they are first placed in rapidly boiling water. Immerse garlic for five seconds, white onions for 10 and large old onions for five minutes. Drain and rinse in cold water. (From Family Circle's "Quick & Easy Meals")

To brown ground beef, shape meat into large patty, place in hot skillet over high heat for five minutes.. Then cut patty into quarters; turn; brown for five minutes and drain fat and crumble.

Junk Food Talks Set

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The public is going to get more time to comment on a proposed ban on "junk foods" in schools.

More than 2,100 persons commented, mostly favorably, on the Agriculture Department's proposal in April last year to restrict the sale of "competitive foods" in schools that participate in the National School Lunch Program.

Additional time for comments is being given, says a USDA official, because the earlier ones raised some significant issues that deserve additional public reaction.

In making her announcement, assistant secretary Carol Tucker Foreman said the department was withdrawing the April proposal and would use three upcoming public meetings and written comments to help draw up a new proposal.

County School Lunch Menu

Lunchroom menus for the coming week at the Pitt County schools have been announced as follow:

Monday — Sloppy Joe on bun, buttered corn, lima beans, applesauce, milk;

Wednesday — Turkey and Pastry, garden peas, cranberry sauce, candied yams, hot rolls, milk;

Thursday — TEACHER WORKDAY

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, JAN. 21, 1979

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The daytime has no very good aspects in effect until evening and it is necessary to live the Golden Rule and refrain from making vital decisions for best results.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Making radical changes in your life-style is not wise at this time. Make sure your surroundings are in good condition.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Be certain to carry through with promises made and not try to get out of them. Follow your hunches which are accurate now.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Showing appreciation to those who have been loyal to you in the past is wise now and right. Try to be more cheerful.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Plan how to better express your finest talents. Your mate may be irritable during daytime but by evening will be cheerful.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Use tact at home and maintain harmony and then the evening becomes a happy one. Make sure your activities are well organized.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Think along lines of the highest precepts through which to regulate your life in the future. Try to please your mate more.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Be careful not to get into any money troubles with others today. Take no risks with your reputation. Be logical.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Wait until evening to go after a particular aim and get excellent results. Take time to make plans for the days ahead.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) It is to your best interest to handle a family situation in the evening when the planets are favorable. Be ready for the new week.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Avoid certain friends who are very determined to get what they want at your expense. Take no risks with your reputation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Make sure you do nothing that could irk a long-time friend or you could seriously regret it later. Strive for happiness.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You will get into trouble if you fail to keep a promise today. Get together with family members and make plans for the future.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those interesting young persons who will be very good at planning a course of activity and carrying through with it to a successful conclusion, provided your progeny is not too demanding with others.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, JAN. 22, 1979

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You are under good influences for seriously considering a new and improved set of circumstances whereby you can gain a well-rounded expression of your goals. Good for investigating what you do not understand.

ARIES (March 21 to Apr. 19) A good time to clear the slate for bigger activities ahead. Be more supportive of your loved ones and get good results.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Cement better relations with associates through discussions and operate more intelligently in the future. Don't take on any unnecessary expenses.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Schedule your time so that you can accomplish a great deal. Talk over work with co-workers and plan it well as to individual duties.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Show more affection for loved ones and get good response. Plan for amusements you want to enjoy later on.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Improve conditions at home where needed so that you don't have to worry about them. Be careful of details in an important matter.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Organize routines better so that they work more efficiently in the future. Confer with associates and come to a fine meeting of minds.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You now understand better how to handle important monetary affairs and make progress. If you have any doubts, consult with an expert.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You are capable of getting whatever you want most, so go after such now. Be charming with those you love and admire.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Take time to be alone and plan the future with greater clarity and intellect. Meet with an adviser and be well guided.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get in touch with clever friends and gain their advice, support for your aims. Enjoy socializing together later. Pay bills on time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Make good use of today by handling personal and business matters efficiently. Use standard, orthodox methods.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You get many brilliant ideas now and should make notes of them. Plan a trip for some good purpose. Take no risks where health or reputation is concerned.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be magnetic and full of vim and vigor and will have a great ability in investigative matters. Be sure that the environment is good so that an inferiority complex does not develop. There could be a fine acting ability here, also.

Pleased With Solar Progress

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Almost 50 years after he began a personal crusade to tap the sun's energy and convince the world of its usefulness, Dr. Erich Farber is seeing evidence that the solar age has arrived.

"You could just about say Gainesville is the solar-energy capital of the world as far as commercial buildings are concerned," said Farber, who founded the University of Florida's solar house and energy conversion laboratory.

Because of his work on behalf of solar energy, including 500 scientific papers, Farber was recently inducted with three other Americans as charter members of the Solar Hall of Fame.

"The new metropolitan airport is the largest commercial solar building in the world at the present time," Farber said. "It's the first airport in the world to be solar operated."

All the equipment at the terminal, for which Farber was a consultant, is visible. Its large purple, green and white insulated pipes are explained by schematic diagrams. The hot-water storage tank is under the parking lot in front of the building, which has more than 16,000 square feet of collectors on the sawtooth-style roof.

"For many years, solar energy had to be a sideline for me," Farber said.

Baltimore Keeps Memory Of H.L. Mencken Alive

By MIMI WHITEFIELD

BALTIMORE (UPI) — It has been nearly 23 years since the news of H. L. Mencken's death shared top billing in the Baltimore newspapers with the city's first bus strike and a fire that killed 10 persons. But the journalist, author and critic is far from forgotten in his hometown.

Mencken fell out of favor during the 1930s, but the "bad boy of Baltimore" appears to be making a national comeback and is attracting new fans, according to Mencken scholar Carl Bode, a professor of American literature and American studies at the University of Maryland.

As a columnist for the Baltimore Evening Sun, and editor of "Smart Set" and "The American Mercury" magazines, Mencken made a career of lampooning those in authority and the values so-called respectable people held dear.

He was never a writer for the faint-hearted.

Not everyone appreciated his ribald style or his vitriolic attacks on what he considered low levels of culture and taste. He was variously described as "a howling hyena," "the boy pervert from Baltimore," "the buzzard of American literature," and "a plain ass" by less-admiring contemporaries.

But two main factors led to Mencken's eclipse, according to Bode.

Mencken, who reveled in his German heritage, was accused of anti-semitism and "he was slow in realizing that Hitler was a genuine menace," Bode said. "These are two counts against him. They have been exaggerated, but there is something to them. This cast an aura — a bad aura."

In addition, Mencken's jabs at American democracy, which suited the tone of the 1920s so well, just were not funny after the stock market crash and during the depression, Bode said.

Mencken recouped some of his former stature in the 1930s after writing his reminiscences — "Happy Days," "Heathen Days," and "Newspaper Days" — but the Sage of Baltimore was still rather unfashionable in the 1960s. Bode's 1969 Mencken biography did "pretty well," but he said his colleagues still "scolded me every now and then" for working on someone as "tacky" as Mencken.

"But you look now and I think I see something like the new conservatism and I find there's much more interest in Mencken. I think the temper of the country is changing," Bode said. "Some of Mencken's economic ideas, which 10 years ago sounded outrageous, begin to have a certain kind of awkward credibility.

"Mencken never changed, but some of his ideas are becoming a little bit more widespread and a little bit more acceptable than they were."

Despite Mencken's decline on the national scene, he always had a corps of loyal supporters in the city he once described as "anything but perfection," yet unsurpassed in charm.

Mencken himself epitomized Baltimore in many ways.

"He had a lot of bourgeois tastes, which are Baltimore tastes," said Bode. "He liked good food — and there's a lot of that in Baltimore. He liked the sort of settled, comfortable existence.

"Also it's an unpretentious city and Mencken didn't have many pretentions. There are very few marble palaces in Baltimore."

Mencken was so fond of his hometown he resisted efforts to lure him to New York — which he labeled "a third-rate Babylon" — to carry out his editing duties. Instead, he had "Smart Set" manuscripts sent to him in Baltimore.

Eating places

In many ways, the Baltimore of today has not changed a great deal from the city Mencken knew.

In "Happy Days," Mencken wrote that "Baltimore lay very near the immense protein factory of the Chesapeake Bay and out of the bay it ate divinely."

Two of Mencken's favorite eating places — Marconi's, where he used to take his wife Sara Haardt, and Schellhase's, a German restaurant where members of the Saturday Night Club used to gather for musical evenings — are still in business.

One of the club favorites was a dish called cannabalia — cannibal food — "raw beef with spices, chopped and prepared at the table," said Louis Cheslock, 80, a former Peabody Conservatory professor who played violin and primo piano with the club.

Two club specialists did the spicing and the mixture was spread on thick slices of rye bread. "And of course, we washed it down amply with the appropriate liquid," Cheslock said.

The back room where club members clapped the tops of their seidels — large glass steins capped with pewter lids — for refills at 15 cents a pint is gone now, the victim of modernization.

But wiener schnitzel, sauerbraten with potato dumplings, bratwurst and even cannabalia — listed as a raw beef with chopped onions sandwich — still appear on Schellhase's menu.

And Mencken's seidel, along with those of two dozen other patrons and club members, is prominently displayed in a glass case under lock and key.

Mencken Society

Mencken's memory is kept alive in a room named in his honor at the Enoch Pratt Free Library, and his fans have formed the Mencken Society.

Most of his books and papers, including back issues of the "American Mercury" and the "Smart Set," the books he reviewed and research materials used in preparing "The American Language," are housed in the Mencken Room.

A portrait of Mencken in his shirt sleeves with the inevitable cigar in his hand looks down upon his rickety Corona typewriter and the desk he occupied at the Evening Sun. An old collar, a bit of sealing wax and a cigar case still lie in the desk drawer.

Long wooden tables and comfortable leather chairs are arranged around the room for scholars who pore through Mencken's typescripts, clipping books, correspondence and other papers.

The room is usually closed to all but scholars and authors doing advance research, but the doors are thrown open to the public for Mencken Day, which is usually celebrated on the second Saturday in September to mark Mencken's Sept. 12 birthday.

The Mencken Society, founded about three years ago, now boasts approximately 200 members. These Mencken connoisseurs meet in Baltimore three times a year and subscribe to "Menckeniana," a quarterly journal published by the library.

Mencken Fountain

Mencken fans also played a key role in the restoration of Union Square, the Southwest Baltimore park where Mencken played as a boy. It had become a gathering place for derelicts and only a few scrawny blades of grass remained.

Dedication of the H. L. Mencken Fountain — a replica of the cast iron fountain that once graced the park — on Sept. 12, 1971, the 91st anniversary of the sage's birthday, was the first step toward restoration of the park.

Mencken probably would feel at home in Union Square today. The street lights are similar to the gas lamps that lit the pink diamond-patterned concrete walkways when Mencken lived across the street at 1524 Hollins St.

The walkways have been restored and the old herringbone pattern of the brick sidewalks around the perimeter of the park carefully copied. Restorationists even studied old photos so they could plant trees and shrubs that were popular in the Victorian era.

After Mencken's death Jan. 19, 1956, there were a few attempts to rename the park Mencken Square, but Mencken's brother August resisted.

"Mencken would be the first to say the hell with it," said R. P. Harriss, an arts critic for the Baltimore News American and a longtime friend of Mencken's. "Fortunately they put it down. Mencken would have said 'I knew it as Union Square.'"

Keeping The Elderly In Own Homes

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A demonstration project designed to assist the elderly to live as independently as possible is also saving money for Utah taxpayers.

The Alternative Project, known as TAP, provides services that allow the elderly to stay in their homes rather than enter nursing homes or convalescent hospitals.

Approved by the state legislature and administered by The Utah Department of Social Services Division on Aging, the program "taps" existing community resources to help older people who do not need fullservice care provided by nursing homes.

It focuses on those, generally without close relatives, who ordinarily might be admitted to a nursing home for social reasons — those with no one to help them with the everyday tasks they are unable to perform for themselves.

It is also saving money for Utah, which undertook the experimental project because skyrocketing Medicaid costs had become a concern of the legislature, as well as of the general public.

Emil Anderson, 71, a retired carpenter from Minnesota, says he has found TAP a godsend.

Anderson, placed in a nursing home by relatives who felt that he couldn't care for himself, was costing Utah taxpayers $1,080 a month for his care. Now he is in a residential retirement center with TAP's help at a cost of $350 a month. Soon he will be in an apartment of his own, also arranged by TAP, at even greater savings.

"Anderson is capable of helping himself," explains Louise Lintz, project director. "He's fiercely independent. He is also in good health and is so anxious to be helpful at the center that he mows the lawn and has helped build a tool shed just to keep busy."

Lilly Haley, 91, a long-time resident of nearby Ogden, is blind, almost totally deaf and confined to be.. But she has a fear of hospitals. Through TAP she gets around-the-clock support services, such as day housekeeper, homemaker and chore services, night sitter and meal delivery. And the state is saving $202 a month by helping her stay in her home.

"What is unique about the project and personally gratifying thus far," says Ms. Lintz, "is the tremendous cooperation we are getting from the community.

"In Mrs. Haley's case, a neighbor provides night care for her at a fraction of the usual cost. The other services she receives are part of the normal care provided by the Ogden Area Agency on Aging. And she contributes, too. She pays the state $40 a month out of a widow's railroad retirement pension. She wants to do her share."

In another example of helping people in the project, Ms. Lintz notes, the neighbor of a woman who needs regular chemotherapy treatments refuses any payment, even for expenses, for driving the patient 200 miles round-trip each week for treatments. "He sees it as his Christian duty," she says.

TAP began in July with a budget of $200,000 for 144 persons. Already 20 persons in 25 Utah counties are benefiting from the project.

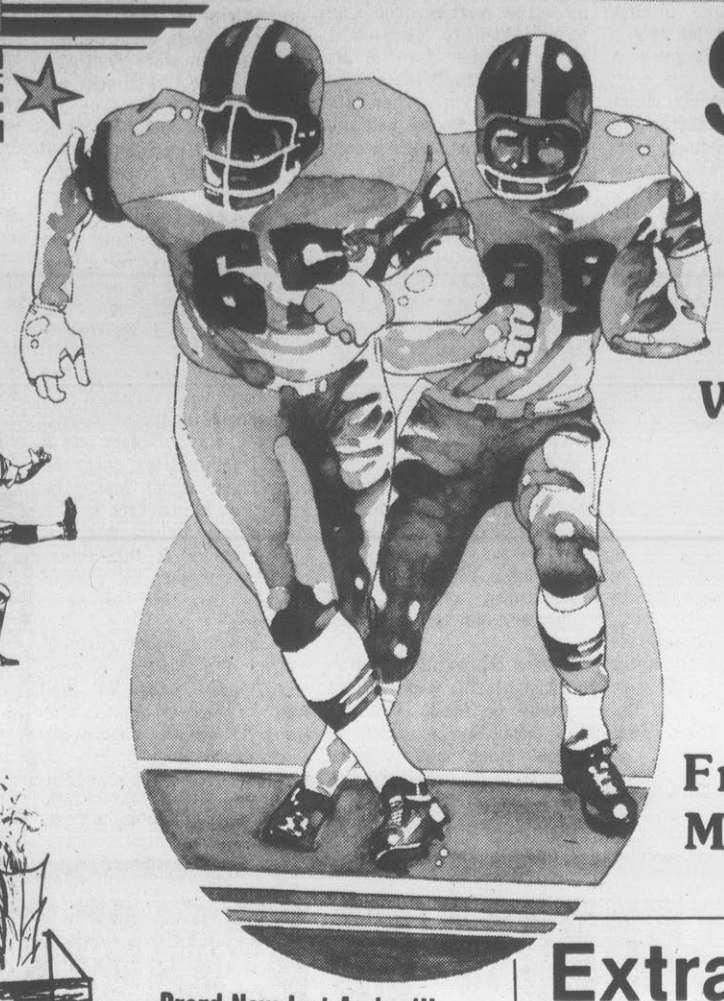

Federal funding through the Older Americans Act and the state-administered Social Services program help make it possible for TAP to provide alternative methods of care for the elderly.

HEW Assistant Secretary for Human Development Services Arabella Martinez heads the federal umbrella agency responsible for administering these funds nationally.

"For a long time, communities didn't have the kinds of coordinated services TAP is providing to help older people," said Ms. Martinez. "Services were non-existent or fragmented and difficult for the elderly to find. Today, we are encouraging states and communities to develop projects such as this which draw on the existing strengths within a community to provide services, not only to the elderly, but for children, youth and handicapped individuals."

District Of Columbia Amendment Faces Hard Sell

By ELAINE S. POVICH

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The proposed constitutional amendment to give the District of Columbia votes in Congress faces a tough sell in the rest of the country. But the proposal's backers, mostly black legislators, feel they can do it.

That picture of the prospect for the constitutional amendent approved last fall by Congress emerged from a recent sampling of legislators' sentiment across the nation. Thirty-eight states must ratify the measure before it can become part of the Constitution.

Despite arguments that residents of the nation's capital have been unjustly denied a voice in government for nearly 200 years, some of the same anti-Washington feelings that helped President Carter in 1976 appear to be facing the amendment, which would allow Washington's 700,000 people to elect two senators and one or two members of the House. The district now has one non-voting delegate in the House.

"Any two senators from D.C. would be full-time, paid, voting lobbyists for the bureaucracy," said Georgia House Speaker Tom Murphy.

"People in Washington are all federal employees," said Nevada Assemblywoman Karen Hayes. "Their representation would be all federal. We have too much federal control anyway."

Those sentiments, along with partisan politics, a general conservative trend, some racism and misunderstanding of the District's situation, make the prospect for ratification seem dim.

"The real problem is our image of 'Official Washington,' against which presidential candidates run," said Walter E. Fauntroy, the District's congressional delegate and No. 1 amendment salesman.

"People out in Oklahoma think 'Official Washington' and say, 'And they want two senators?'" he said. "But the fact is that only 25 percent of the city's people work for the government. It takes that basic kind of education."

The spot check of legislators showed many against, few positively for, and most ambivalent about the amendment, which squeaked through Congress by a one-vote margin in August.

"I really don't think this is an issue that is demanding a great deal of attention in Mississippi right now," said state Sen. John Corlew, chairman of the Constitution Committee.

"I don't feel strongly one way or the other," commented Rhode Island House Majority Leader Michael Higgins. "It's certainly not going to be a burning issue."

"Frankly, it's ironic that the only people in our country that can't vote for national office are those at the very seat of government itself," said House Speaker Kenneth J. Rothman of Missouri, where the amendment is expected to pass by a 2-to-1 margin.

"Those who have to live there and put up with its excesses and problems should have an opportunity to vote on national office."

Three states — New Jersey, Ohio and Michigan — had ratified the amendment by the second week of January. At most, it appears that the amendment's backers can count on only 15 states to ratify quickly, most of those Northern and urban.

Another 15 or so states — mostly rural and Southern — are among the most probable "no's." That leaves a large number undecided, but even if those 20 or so states come over, it won't be enough.

Despite the numbers, Fauntroy, a civil rights veteran who helped the amendment win approval by Congress, remains optimistic.

"I have a feeling," he said. "I know it looks almost impossible now, but with careful planning and careful projection of the issues as those of basic equality and fairness, we will get it ratified."

Fauntroy has reason to believe. He says few people took him seriously several years ago when he said the amendment could pass Congress.

"They used to look at me and say 'Walter, are you crazy?' The most difficult thing in getting this drive started was to get people to believe it was possible," he said.

After Congress approved the amendment, several states rushed to ratify it, with New Jersey becoming the first. But prospects quickly took a downturn.

It was brought up — and rejected — in a one-day Delaware House session called for other matters. The California Assembly approved it, but it bogged down in the Senate when it refused to waive procedural rules.Then the Pennsylvania House, following approval by that state's Senate, sent it back to committee.

"We didn't develop the broad base of advocacy and didn't have the proper research and development tools," he said.

Fauntroy said he is putting together "bi-racial, bi-partisan" coalitions in each state to back the amendment. But in most states, those groups have not yet jelled.

Although both both major national parties have endorsed the amendment, Democrats are pursuing it with more vigor. The District has almost no Republicans, assuring that any congressmen elected would almost certainly be Democrats.

Elected representatives from the District also would almost certainly be black. Washington's population is about 80 percent black, and a large majority of its public officials are also black.

Around the country, blacks are pushing the issue.

Alabama Rep. Alvin Holmes, an outspoken black legislator, predicted the amendment will be introduced in his state and there will be opposition along racial lines. He predicted it will be killed quietly in committee, because of the legislators' biases, not the public's.

If it is killed, he said, there will be some "hell-raising from black legislators. I don't see how they can deny representation to the people in the District of Columbia."

In Illinois, black legislators say they will introduce the amendment and that opposition will be in part anti-black and in part from feelings that the amendment would make the District equal to a state.

State Sen. Harold Washington, a leader in the Illinois black caucus, said: "I've got to assume there will be some problems."

He added that the "conservative trend" in both the country and Illinois, shown by that state's failure to approve the Equal Rights Amendment, cannot be discounted.

Fauntroy admitted the ERA will hurt his cause.

"The ERA has made the words 'constitutional amendment' such an issue that we can't help but have controversy," he said. "My hope is that people will judge this on it's own merit and not relate it to the ERA."

Kansas Senate President Ross Doyen remembered how much state lawmakers were lambasted after they ratified the ERA on short notice, with no committee hearings, in 1972.

"I can tell you we're going to look at it (the District amendment) harder than we did at the ERA," he said. "I have some real reservations about it myself.

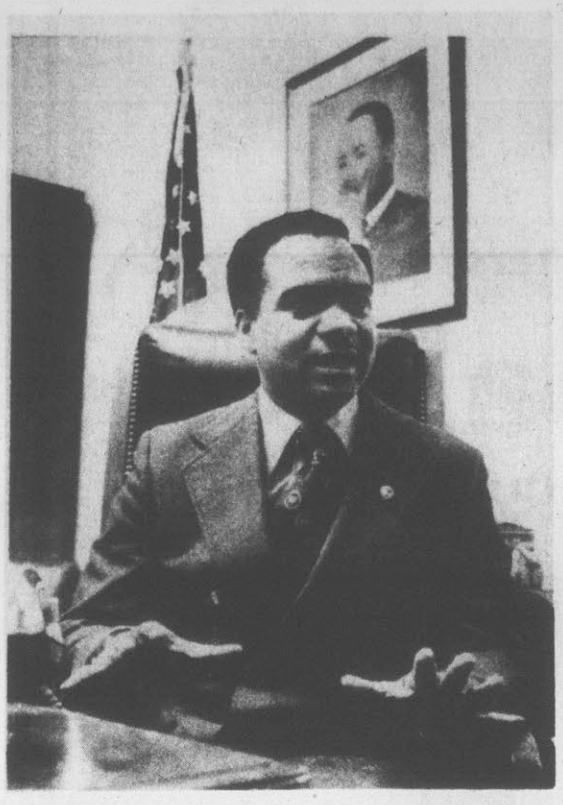

"But we're not going to rush."

Fauntroy isn't rushing, either. It will take a long time to get his bi-partisian, bi-racial effort together, and he has seen that half-cocked attempts bring full-fledged failures.

But the 45-year-old delegate is still bubbly when he thinks of the day when his constituents will have voting senators and representatives.

Does he hope to be among those voted a "real" congressional seat? The question brings a gentle smile.

"My prescription for rabbit stew is first to catch the rabbit," he said.

A New Breed Of Oystermen

GRASONVILLE, Md. (AP) — A new breed of waterman is harvesting oysters with scuba gear and making waves in the process.

The divers are licensed oystermen working for a livelihood in competition with traditional hand tongers.

The divers are so successful at picking oysters from the bottom of the Chesapeake Bay that local tongers are getting up petitions to put them out of business.

Estimates of the number of divers oystering in Maryland waters range from 20 to 30, with perhaps a dozen working the Eastern Bay near here.

They hardly seem a match for the state's 4,730 licensed oystermen, who harvest by the time-honored means of hand or patent tonging, or by sailing dredge boats.

But the divers may be the ripple of the future in the change-resistant oyster industry. Some of the younger tongers here have switched to scuba diving and more are doing so.

One of them is David A. Tedford, 20, the son of a waterman and himself a hand tonger until about a year ago when he and his partner, Patrick Vanskiver, 21, took diving lessons. Tedford is glad he changed.

"Hand tonging was hard manual labor, like something you'd do in a prison camp. Scuba diving is not as hard and, besides, you get better oysters and a better price," he said.

One of the pioneering oyster divers is Frederick Kayhoe, 24, a doctor's son from Kensington who took up scuba diving while he was in high school.

Kayhoe and a friend came to the Eastern Shore in 1975 and began diving for oysters. Eventually, they split up and took on local oystermen as partners because "they knew the waters here."

Admitting that the hand tongers are bitter about competition from the divers, Kayhoe claims that the divers harvest bigger, meatier oysters and get $7 to $8 a bushel for them, while the tongers find it difficult to market the small oysters at lower prices.

Norman L. Jubb, secretary of the Watermen's Protective Association Inc., said that — unlike tongers — scuba divers don't loosen, wash and redistribute the waste shells or cultch as they pick across oyster bottoms.

Jubb says this activity encourages the breeding of young oysters and, thus, keeps the beds viable.

The tongers also object to state regulations barring them from working within 150 feet of a scuba diver who has already set up and is in operation. The rules forbid divers from setting up within 500 feet of a tonger.

This can lead to confusing situations and arguments with Marine Police over who was set up first, said Jubb, whose association has 99 members, mostly hand tongers, in Queen Annes County.

LAST WEEK

How do you know what to buy?

It must be difficult for a consumer to decide what and where to buy and how much to spend for a carpet. Certainly during the last week you have seen and heard dozens and dozens of carpet ads, many of them promoting carpet at very low prices and very large savings. You can't shop all the ads. So how do you know what to buy.

Consider this fact:

Lees, America's number one manufacturer makes a wide variety of carpets, some selling for as little as $8.95 per square yard plus padding and installation. Yet the best selling carpets in the entire Lees line sell for about $16.95 per square yard plus padding and installation. This is true not just here, but throughout the entire country.

Why are so many people willing to pay so much for a carpet?

There are a number of reasons. The carpets are beautiful, thick heavy. The kind of carpet texture that most people seem to want these days. These carpets are made in solid colors and subtle tone-on-tone patterns. The colors available are magnificent. But the beauty of these carpets is only part of the reason for their popularity.

The face yarns in these carpets are made of 100% Antron* nylon by Du Pont. The development of Antron* has been one of the significant happenings in the history of the carpet industry.

Antron* is special

Antron* is a special kind of nylon. What makes Antron* special is its ability to resist dirt and stay cleaner-looking longer than ordinary nylon. When finally it does get dirty, carpet of Antron* will clean beautifully. And because it's nylon, it is the strongest, toughest, and most wear-resistant fiber known.

Lees means quality

Another important consideration is that these carpets are made by a large, reliable quality manufacturer, Lees Carpets. Lees maintains one of the largest most professional quality control organizations in the industry.

Lees offers wide selection

We have a selection of styles made of Antron* nylon pile fiber with over one hundred colors to fit practically every taste and need.

And they're on sale

As a further inducement for you to come and see these very special carpets, we are offering them at substantial savings during this sale.

Doesn't it make sense to buy a carpet you'll really love with the assurance that you're buying the very best at the best possible price.

Handful Push For A Peace Academy

By DALE SINGER

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Peace is more than the absence of war.

Peace is justice, harmony, a lack of tension, a creative atmosphere and a positive force, says James H. Laue. It doesn't just happen. It can be waged as methodically and efficiently as war.

Moving from this belief, Laue and others are working to create the United States Academy of Peace and Conflict Resolution, an institution to be organized like the service academies at West Point and Annapolis.

But the peace academy, Laue said, would help antagonists learn to solve their disputes without raising voices, firing guns or taking lives.

"Once disputes escalate to violence, the most powerful parties exercise their power," said Laue, bringing his fist crashing down into his palm. "It becomes a win-lose situation.

"With accepted techniques of conflict resolution, we try to meet some of everyone's needs. It becomes a real win-win situation."

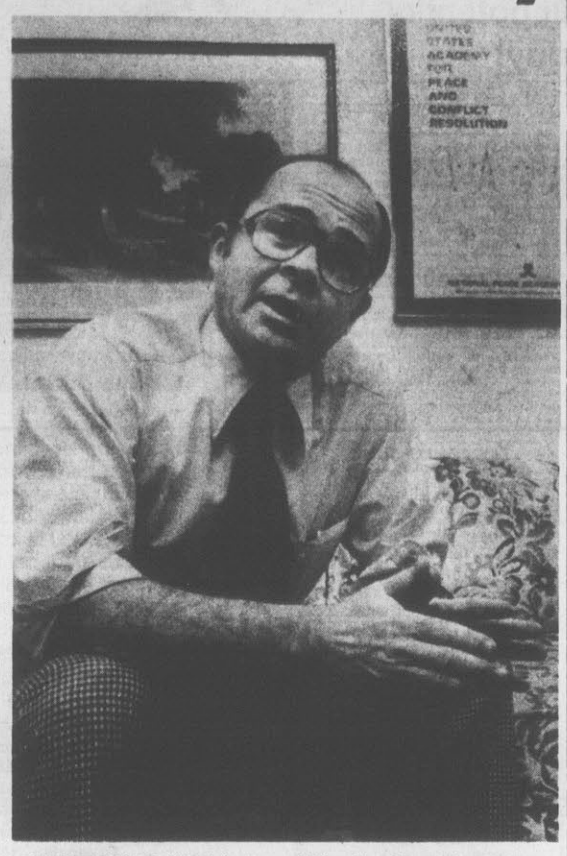

As a co-chairman of the National Peace Academy Campaign, Laue has helped steer through Congress legislation signed in November by President Carter creating a nine-person commission to study creation of the academy. The commission is expected to be in operation by spring.

Laue, director of the Center for Metropolitan Studies at the University of Missouri-St. Louis, said the legislation was the end of a long process that began with George Washington's proposal for a "proper peace establishment" in 1783.

Since 1935, he said, 140 such bills had been introduced, but the concept of peace always has seemed too vague to fit into a working agency. As a result, said Laue, quoting the words of Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va., such bills have been "loved to death."

Now, he said, peace has been linked with accepted techniques of conflict resolution that have been developed during the last 20 years in such areas as labor negotiations, school desegregation disputes and inmate grievances.

"The notion of peace is nice, but vague," Laue said. "Linking it with peacemaking on a community level has allowed us to define what peace is. The continuous development of techniques to resolve conflicts that come up every day, at home or in school, can help bring peace between nations.

JAMES H. LAUE is one of the leaders of a campaign to create the United States Academy of Peace and Conflict Resolution. (UPI Photo)

"What peace has meant for so many years has been negative — the absence of tension and conflict. We've tried to draw on work in conflict resolution so we can talk about causing peace as well as about causing war."

Helping the peace academy campaign are such people as Dr. Jonas Salk, Coretta Scott King, Paul Newman and Andrew Young, who joined the movement before being named ambassador to the United Nations. Laue is excited about what he sees as the Carter Administration's commitment to the concept of making peace.

"What happened at Camp David is precisely what we're talking about," he said. "You find the right forum and get the right parties to discuss an issue out of the glare of publicity and away from their own constituencies, which may urge them to take a harder position.

"What the president and his advisers did at Camp David was to accomplish more than could be accomplished on the battlefield. You don't always come out with a precise solution, but you get a framework for proceeding."

There has been some opposition to the academy movement, Laue said. Much of it, he said, has come from the State and Defense departments, which say work on conflict resolution is already being done through the government.

"But we tell them that in what's being done now, we act as an advocate for United States interests," Laue said. "The academy would stress the role of a mediator, which requires different goals and techniques."

With 200,000 scientists conducting military research and 200 persons studying peace, Laue said the balance should be shifted toward non-violent conflict resolution.

"We kept saying that if they would give us just two minutes of the defense budget — that's $500,000 — we could set up the commission to study the peace academy."

Parents Can 'Run Away From Home' In Seattle

MARY KOCH
Associated Press Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — So you'd like to run away from home but feel you shouldn't, after all, you're the parent. Running away is the child's privilege.

Not in Seattle. "The Parent Place," a non-profit, private agency, welcomes runaway moms and dads — if only for an hour or two.

"It's kind of a place of relaxation," says Sharon Stitt, founder and non-salaried executive director. "There are no teen-agers lying around smoking."

The only teen-agers in sight at Parent Place are doing volunteer work — cleaning, office chores or caring for smaller children. A nursery is provided for children of parents taking classes or seeing a counselor.

The parents, Ms. Stitt says, range from 17 to 84 years old. Most are white, middle class, and their problems are not too serious. They come for how-to classes in parenting, "rap" sessions, individual counseling or just to get away from it all for awhile.

Ms. Stitt, 39, a divorced mother of four, began Parent Place in 1977. She was working for a youth advocacy agency, which she decided was solving only half the problem.

"If you work your fanny off to get a kid's gear together and send them back to the same environment, it's for nothing," she says.

No one has kept track, but Ms. Stitt figures that the number of families helped by Parent Place in the past year is in the hundreds.

A parent's first contact with Parent Place might be through the Parent Panic Line, a 24-hour phone service. The idea is to offer immediate help instead of an appointment for several weeks hence. Frequently, all that is needed is a sympathetic ear.

The Parent Place clientele is 70 percent women. "Men do not have problems, of course," Ms. Stitt says with a laugh. "But men get scared, especially when their kids are screwing up."

Parent Place operates in a remodeled military building constructed as a "temporary" hospital in World War II. "The rent's cheap," says Ms. Stitt. The decor is hand-me-down living room, with inspirational mottos ("Insanity is hereditary. You get it from your kids.") on the walls.

"I don't like the word authoritarian, but I do believe in discipline. I feel I should be the boss. I pay the bills. The parent, in most cases, is the marshmallow, being ruled by a kid who appears twice the age they are," Ms. Stitt says.

"But when kids get messed up," she adds, "parents forget to love them. It has to be discipline with love."

"We talk a lot about guilt. Parents seem to have a need to take on guilt," says Ms. Stitt. "But they must feel good about themselves first. We push a lot that you were a person before you were a parent.

"One woman calls all the time. Her kids are grown and don't need her anymore. She can't handle that. Parenting is only a part of yourself — a nice part, but just a part."

A discussion topic at a recent reunion of "Parenting Secrets" graduates was "Keeping the romance alive, in spite of the kids." Others were "Maintaining your sanity and raising a 2-year-old," "Living with a teenager," and "Pre-teens can be icky."

With three full-time and three part-time staff members, the agency's operating budget for the first nine months of 1978 was $25,800. Parents pay from $2 to $4 for class sessions or from $2 to $30 for individual counseling — depending on their ability to pay.

The agency has received a few small federal grants, is trying for more and would like to become affiliated with United Way. But Ms. Stitt, who was temporarily paid under a federal Comprehensive Employment and Training Act grant, has mixed feelings about the bureaucracy that accompanies outside funding.

"I can't understand when a person wants to speak with a counselor, they have to go through everything from Grandma's maiden name to the witness stand," she complained in a recent Parent Place newsletter. "We are very proud of our system, which is professional, but far from bureaucratic."

Sales Grow For Paperback Club

NEW YORK (UPI) — The only paperback book club in the country, the Quality Paperback Book Club, celebrates its fifth anniversary this month. Founded in 1974 as "the book club for people who don't join book clubs," its appeal has from the start been primarily to a younger market.

With 1978 net sales up 20 percent over the previous year, the club has a current backlist of 300 titles and has distributed more than three million books since its inception.

A Capitol Hill powerhouse.

FOR THOMAS P. O'NEILL, Speaker of the House

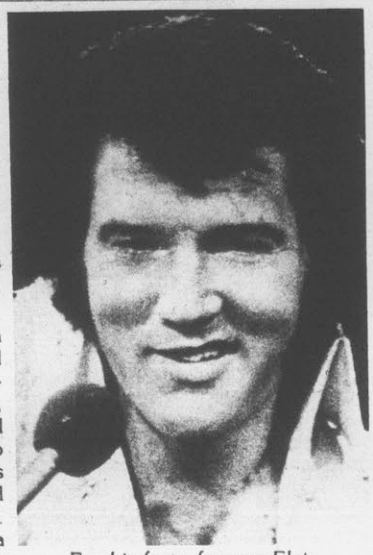

Exactly what does your job entail? — T.I. Joplin, Mo.

● Very few people are aware of the duties of the Speaker. They see him behind the President, delivering his State of the Union Address before a Joint Session of the Congress, and that's about it. Of course, the Speakership is a powerful office; a constitutional officer who heads one of the two parts of the legislative branch, coequal to the executive and the judicial branches. We make the laws that address the challenges of our ever-changing society. The Speaker is also the chief parliamentarian in the House, he controls the House side of the Capitol and all House office buildings, he controls scheduling of all legislation, he is the chief spokesman for his political party, and he appoints many committees, commissions and all conference committees.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

● But they're not! There are now 304 in existence; 102 sprang up after Elvis died on Aug. 16, 1977. The singer's popularity is rising abroad, too. In England alone, fan-club membership totals 30,000. All the U.S. clubs are banding together to win congressional approval for an Elvis Presley national holiday, stamps and coins. Right now, in Tupelo, Miss. (where Presley was born Jan. 8, 1935), a memorial chapel is being erected. On Feb. 2, 3 and 4, there'll be a big tribute to him at the Scottsdale, Ariz., Safari Convention Center, where 5,000 people are expected daily. In early February, ABC airs its movie, Elvis, starring Kurt Russell, Shelley Winters and Pat Hingle, and at the end of 1978, sales of his records passed the billion mark.

FOR CHRISTINA CRAWFORD, author of Mommie Dearest

Your book is a moving account of all the agony you endured as a child. But is there one moment which you cherish more, a time when you felt your mother, Joan Crawford, loved you? — V.B. Fort Collins, Colo.

● The times Mother took us on vacations and picnics. When I was a very small child, I went everywhere with my mother, and we were inseparable. Throughout our relationship, there were moments when we were very close.

FOR BERNIE KOPELL, star of ABC-TV's The Love Boat

Is it true you get horribly seasick? — J.F., Eureka, Calif.

● What is true is that I get homesick for the sea. During my tour in the Navy, I was often on the water for nine months at a time. And even if I did get pangs of nausea, the knowledge that I'm playing a leading man for the first time in my career would cure me of any queasiness.

FOR KRESKIN, mentalist

Why do you insist your fees get hidden in the theaters where you work, and what are some of the more bizarre hiding places? — Buell R. Snyder, Beachwood, N.J.

● As Houdini placed his life in jeopardy in his famed escapes, I test my skills to the ultimate by finding my checks. At a dinner for Bob Hope, the check was encased in the stuffing of a turkey; at the University of Alabama, my check was shoved into the barrel of a revolver.

FOR DINAH SHORE, entertainer

Have you ever turned down work that you considered would be harmful to your image? — Etta Schultz, Hallandale, Fla.

● I'm always hearing about my "image," and that puzzles me — I don't think I've got one. I'm me, and whatever I do is part of me, and I do it because I like it, not because I want to live up to whatever I'm supposed to be. As for turning work down, I'm constantly saying "No" to commercials. Two years ago, I declined a $2 million endorsement of a car.

FOR GOVERNOR JAMES R. THOMPSON, Illinois

Does the bill you signed permitting the use of marijuana for medical patients mean a step toward legalization? — Mrs. L. Mills, Hobart, Ind.

● I know drugs in both their aspects — one life-sustaining and the other life-threatening. The difference is how you use them. Marijuana has been shown to be effective in reducing the side effects of chemotherapy on cancer patients and in reducing eye pressure in glaucoma patients. These people have a right to be given marijuana for medical treatment.

FOR GEMMA JONES, star of PBS-TV's The Duchess of Duke Street

Are you as terrific in your kitchen as you are on the show? — Virginia C. Thompson, Santa Fe, N.M.

● The producers will be furious with me, but I'm a fraud. I'm far from a gourmet cook and, even if I was, I wouldn't eat most of the fancy stuff I turn out. I'm a vegetarian, and my stomach turns over every time I mention meat. I've never really "cooked" on the show. All I do is chop herbs or break an egg. My "cooking" is an optical illusion.

PRO AND CON

Should the Federal Government Subsidize Child Day Care?

PRO Jackqueline T. Cook, executive director, Day Care and Child Development Council of America

The role of the federal government has historically been to subsidize programs in the public interest. With more than 50 percent of all mothers in the work force, millions of young children are dependent on day care to meet their basic needs for healthy growth and development. Since most women work for the same reason as men, economic necessity, the full cost of developmental child care is often beyond the financial capacity of the parent. An appropriate combination of parent fees, community sponsorship and government participation promotes self-sufficiency and contributes to a healthy economy. It's clear that family economic stability is in the national interest and that day care is a vital service.

CON Phyllis Schlafly, author, The Power of the Positive Woman

Nothing is so cold and impersonal as a government institution. Federal child-care centers would have about as much love and tenderness as your local office of the Internal Revenue Service. It's the nature of the bureaucracy to give impersonal service at a high and ever-increasing cost. Despite the large numbers of working mothers, most children today are cared for within the family unit (such as when mother and father work different shifts). Federal child-care should be used only when a child has no available mother, father or other concerned relative, friend, neighbor, church or local facility. Family care is infinitely preferable to any taxpayer-financed institution.

The Eisenhowers brought back formality

A WHITE HOUSE MAID RECALLS EIGHT FIRST FAMILIES

By Leslie Savan

She lives in a miniature White House: an immaculate three-room, second-floor flat in a lower-middle class area of Washington, D.C. The stairway is lined with photographs of Presidents, First Ladies and their children. Most are autographed with warm personal messsages. Mixed with her own simple furnishings are White House paraphernalia: Mrs. Calvin Coolidge's perfume bottles, Mrs. Herbert Hoover's phonograph, F.D.R.'s china figurines.

Lillian Rogers Parks and her late mother, Maggie Rogers, were as close to eight First Families as one could get. They shared their joys, their griefs and their everyday worries. Although they were in a sense a world apart, they knew the rarefied world of the White House and its secrets intimately.

Mrs. Parks, now 81, and her mother were maids at the White House, each for 30 years. For a combined 52 years they were privy to the personal lives of the Tafts, Wilsons, Hardings, Coolidges, Hoovers, Roosevelts, Trumans and Eisenhowers.

In 1961, when she retired, Mrs. Parks wrote, in collaboration with Frances Spatz Leighton, a best seller, My Thirty Years Backstairs at the White House. Because of its revelations, from the trivial (Bess Truman wanted all bars of soap replaced after even one use) to the scandalous (Florence Harding yelled over the banister to her husband Warren, "Don't you dare leave this house tonight!"), incoming First Lady Jacqueline Kennedy had her servants sign pledges (which didn't hold up in court) never to write such memoirs.

Mrs. Parks' book has now been turned into a nine-hour NBC mini-series, Backstairs at the White House, a sort of Upstairs/Downstairs, American-style, starring Leslie Uggams as Mrs. Parks and Olivia Cole as her mother.

Mrs. Parks, a light-skinned, tiny (4′ 10″) black woman with neat, wavy gray hair, is happy but not overwhelmed by her media success. But she still loves to tell her stories. With the help of one of the same crutches she used in the White House — she had polio in her childhood which affected her left leg — Mrs. Parks proudly shows a visitor her home so full of history. And Mrs. Parks, still a zestful woman, is a walking history book of the nonpublic passions and peccadillos of the Presidents and their families.

"We knew those people, their peculiarities, what they liked and didn't like," she says as she fondles the gold-charm replica of the White House on a necklace she rarely takes off. "Once the visitors left and the doors were closed, they were like any other, as good or as bad,"

Grace Coolidge — Maggie's favorite First Lady — was "a perfect lady," says Mrs. Parks. But she had one strange aversion — women's voices on the radio.

The regal Mrs. Herbert Hoover's aversion was giving verbal directions. So she half-consciously devised a system of sign language — a step forward, for instance, meant the servant was dismissed. Even stranger, in the Depression-gloomy Hoover Administration, was the system of bells. Three bells ringing signaled that Hoover was leaving a room and anybody in the way had better get out of it — even if that meant the servants had to hide in hallway closets.

Then, like a much-needed rain, came the rambunctious Roosevelts and their never-ending guests. For Mrs. Parks, who by then began full time as maid and seamstress (as her mother began her retirement), the Roosevelts "couldn't be beat. They were my favorite First Family," she says. "It was an exciting household. You worked hard but you were never under pressure. Twelve long years and you became a part of them."

While Mrs. Parks loved and admired Eleanor Roosevelt — "That woman, she could work," she says — Bess Truman was Mrs. Parks' first First Lady. "We became very close during those four years in the Blair House. I just grew to love her humor so much."

Of all the Presidential marriages she came to know, the Trumans seemed by far the best. "Harry and Bess — now that was a real marriage," says Mrs. Parks. "I don't think he ever looked at another woman." As for the other Presidents, she says discreetly, "They had their ways."

When the Eisenhowers moved into the White House in 1953, formality straightened its back again. She found Mamie incredibly fussy. Foot impressions on rugs had to be smoothed over immediately. The affectionate nicknames used among the servants were no longer permitted; neither were the customary tips, and many of the lowly paid staff were forced to moonlight. "Mamie didn't know a thing about working with servants," says Mrs. Parks. "She was used to Army people. She had no idea of how long it would take a person to do a job."

Although Mrs. Parks was as loyal as possible to each First Family, her ultimate loyality was to the White House itself. "The White House belongs to the American people, not to the families who live there temporarily," she says. "Everything has been written about the Presidents and their wives and their children, but the servants were the ones who really made the place go."

"When you work at the White House it's like taking the veil," says Mrs. Parks. "You never know when you're getting out." Though her days were long, her mother's were even longer. "There was a time when my mother was working 14, 16 hours a day and no extra pay and only half a day off a week. When she started in 1909 she was getting $20 a month."

When Mrs. Parks left in 1961, she was doing a little better — $103.60 every two weeks. The unexpectedly paltry pay in such palatial surroundings was made up for, the government said, by the staff's free meals and uniforms.

There were numerous unwritten rules that came as second nature to the "backstairs" crew: give the families as much privacy as possible. Never, ever tell the incoming First Lady how her predecessor liked things done. (One housekeeper was fired by Bess Truman for doing just that.) And don't gossip.

Mrs. Parks obeyed this rule faithfully. When her book came out, she had already retired, and it came about partly as a deathbed request by Mrs. Parks' mother, who died in 1953. She had wanted to write her own book but never got the chance. So she passed her notes and clippings on to her daughter.

Mrs. Parks, who notes that Eleanor Roosevelt herself encouraged her to write her memoirs, doesn't consider her book gossipy, and to this day defends every juicy morsel. "I figured I had a right to tell. It's part of history," she says. "And, besides, I didn't feel that what I told was gossip. Because, you see, I didn't tell everything I knew. Personal things, things you just don't talk about. The kinds of arguments that occur in any family, between any husband and wife."

With her book and now the mini-series, life has naturally changed for Mrs. Parks. She has not made a fortune and she certainly lives modestly. "But," she says, "since the book came out, I haven't wanted for anything. I've had trips every year. But I only buy what I have to have."

Mrs. Parks is proud of her profession. "I never had any negative feelings about it. Neither did my mother, and she had been in service since she was 13."

But still, for all the beds she's made, all the tables she's dusted and all the thousands of stitches she's sewn, no job well-done has given Mrs. Parks as much pride as the job of putting her life first into a book and now on to television for millions to share. "I guess I don't show excitement much, but I am excited," she says. "I feel I've accomplished something." What Mrs. Parks — the woman who has witnessed decades of history being made — has accomplished is the writing of a new page of history itself. FW

PETE ROZELLE: SUPERSALESMAN BEHIND THE SUPER BOWL

By David Grunwald

Once upon a time, when there was no Super Bowl and no lucrative league pact with the three television networks, the NFL owners gathered together in a Miami Beach hotel across Biscayne Bay from Miami and the Orange Bowl to pick a new commissioner. Eisenhower was still President, the New York Giants still fielded winning teams, and there were only 12 clubs, two of which were in Chicago. Pro football was big, but not that big, a national sport only because there were two teams west of the Mississippi, in Los Angeles and San Francisco.

It was January 1960, and the owners were deadlocked. The previous commissioner, Bert Bell, had died in October. He had suffered a fatal heart attack while watching an Eagles game, and now, after more than 20 ballots and a week of day-and-night sessions, they still couldn't decide who would lead them into the 60s and polish pro football's image.

As the owners broke for dinner, two of them approached the 33-year-old general manager of the Rams and told him they were going to consult with the other owners about putting his name up.

"I was totally stunned," recalls Pete Rozelle. "I said I felt I didn't have the experience and didn't really want to get involved." As it turned out, it took the owners only 15 minutes to elect him.

Wide World

Flanked by Super Bowl XI hostesses, the Pete Rozelles are warmly greeted in Los Angeles.

NFL Properties

Rozelle with referee Jim Tunney at an NFL game.

Yet, one of the first questions asked at the subsequent press conference was, "Commissioner Rozelle, do you consider yourself a compromise selection?"

Smooth, solid, bright, articulate, obviously competent, the one-time college basketball player from Lynwood, Calif., moved quickly to consolidate his position and establish in the minds of everyone that he was his own boss.

In one case, he called the Chicago Bears' owner George Halas to the commissioner's office in New York for a meeting about the crusty curmudgeon's excessive baiting of officials. Halas said he would meet Rozelle at the Chicago airport. But Rozelle had the last word: "You will come to New York," Halas came.

But it was more than just a matter of style and tone. Having gotten his start in college when he was athletic news director, first at Compton Junior College and then at the University of San Francisco, before he became the Rams' publicity man at 26, Rozelle instinctively knew that if the league was to grow and prosper it had to be properly packaged and marketed; he knew that image and accessibility were everything, especially with a new pro football league getting underway, threatening to take away not only fans, but quality players.

Establishing a unified television policy, with each team sharing equally in television receipts was obviously important. Up until then, each team negotiated its own television contract, some with CBS, two with NBC, and others through special networks. The fees varied enormously, resulting in the bigger-city teams getting richer and the Green Bays getting poorer, which lessened their ability to compete on an equal footing. But by 1962, Rozelle had negotiated the league's first two-year contract with CBS, with each team receiving $326,000 per year. Now, each team receives $5,000,000 annually, which either matches or exceeds each club's gate receipts, insuring that they're all on sound, solid financial footing.

With expansion and the merger with the upstart American Football League, Rozelle now heads a 28-team sports conglomerate that grosses over $300,000,000 yearly, funneled through spacious office headquarters on the 13th floor of a nondescript Park Avenue office building. On an average fall weekend, most of us can see up to three different televised NFL games on Sunday, plus another one Monday night. Despite this plethora of televised games, average game attendance has increased from 40,000 in 1960 to 56,000 last year. As for the Super Bowl, if last year was any indication, over 102 million of us will be glued to the tube to watch.

Not that there haven't been endless problems — lawsuits, player strikes, recalcitrant owners, drug scandals and the costly player wars that led to the great merger of 1966. But these days, at least on the surface, it's relatively placid. The NFL's biggest problem, Rozelle believes, is no longer lengthy litigation and worries about an individual team's economic stability, but "living with success."

Actually, Rozelle's present function is to sustain the image, smooth out the ripples and eliminate the sources of discontent. There have been times when a few of the owners, such as Carroll Rosenbloom, have been highly critical of Rozelle — Rosenbloom once sardonically called him "his majesty" — but mostly the problems seem to originate with the resentment of strong-willed persons for someone who can be just as determined and tough as they are.

Indeed, even the toughest critics within the NFL say the trim, 52-year-old Rozelle does a very difficult job extremely well. If there are any problem areas at all as far as they're concerned, says one club official, it's that there's no one in the league office who truly understands the sport, since much of the staff comes out of public relations. Also, there are times when being on Park Avenue isolates the office from other viewpoints and influences. (Married for the second time five years ago, Pete and his wife Carrie have three boys and two girls and reside in Westchester County.)

But after all, someone has to hold the disparate desires of 28 highly competitive teams together and provide cohesion and direction. "In this job, you're going to make someone reasonably happy or not so happy with everything you do that affects them," notes Rozelle wryly. As commissioner, he's responsible to three groups: the owners, the players and coaches, and the fans. "What we try to do here is reject those policies that would give an inordinate edge to any one of the three. We've got to keep a balance so that all three get a fair shake."

Still, there are some problems that just won't go away, problems that even a master conciliator and negotiator can't simply smooth over. There are some that could embarrass the league and even call its integrity into question, and there are others that are simply a nuisance.

Officiating: This season there seems to have been an inordinate number of calls botched (from overly quick whistles to clearly bad calls) that have affected the outcome of too many games, prompting Sports Illustrated to declare "It's Open Season On The Zebras."

While conceding that officials "are obviously wrong some of the time," Rozelle feels that they are right over 90 percent of the time. And those that are wrong are not necessarily wrong because of the official's poor judgment but simply because, unlike a camera, an official isn't in a position to see everything going on.

The controversy has been compounded, adds Rozelle, for two basic reasons: "the closeness of the competition — through the first 12 weeks of the season we've had half our games decided by seven points or less — and by the closeness of the divisional races. Having been with a club, I know that it's human nature to want to lay defeat, consciously or subconsciously, on the officials."

As for using television to review controversial calls, there is considerable concern that it will overly complicate and extend the game's length. Over and beyond that, depending on the camera angles available, a review of the videotape won't necessarily make things clearer. And then, there is the potential problem of what to do if yet another infraction is uncovered in reviewing the tape. Says Rozelle, "If we can eliminate major negatives, I would love it because you obviously don't like to have any more controversy about officiating than is necessary."

Injuries: There are periodic outcries against the violence in a contact sport like football that are particularly focused on the number of injuries that have laid up such quarterbacks as Bert Jones, Richard Todd and Bob Griese. The NFL, says Rozelle, is constantly considering rule changes to minimize injuries and "taking strong action up to and including suspension, which we've done, for flagrant personal fouls, whether they've been called by officials or we've picked them up on the film."

Whether or not anything can be done without changing the nature of the game is questionable. And the suggestions made are not necessarily the panaceas they seem to be at first glance. Rozelle cites the case of one "simplistic suggestion" that he contends would cause more injuries than it would prevent, putting a soft outer shell on a helmet. With this, the helmet would not just slide off if you struck someone, says Rozelle. "There's going to be friction, and you're going to cause the wearer of the helmet neck and spine injuries."

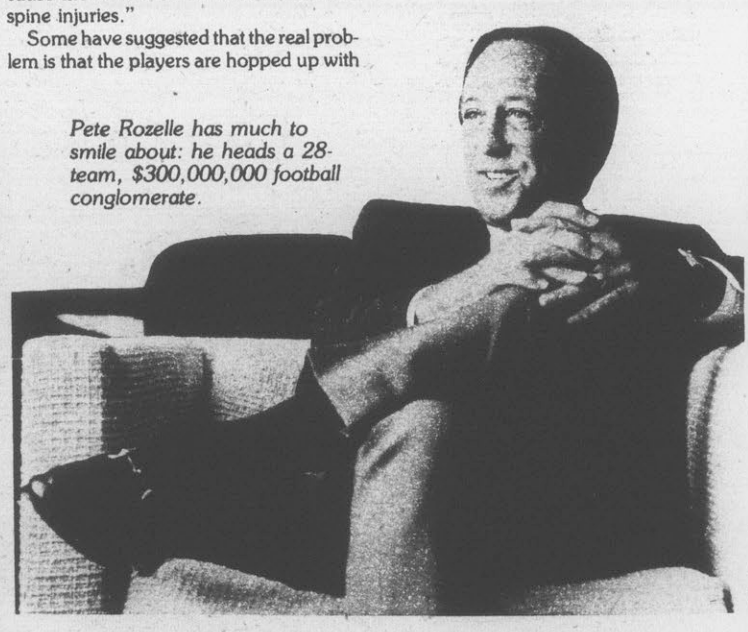

Some have suggested that the real problem is that the players are hopped up with pills and that if urine tests were administered to players the severity of injuries would drop drastically. But, while readily conceding that some players might use drugs, Rozelle stresses that there are already strict controls to keep clubs from providing drugs to their players, adding that they don't need crutches like that to get them up for a game — professional pride and emotion are more than enough.

Other problems include one-sided and/or dull games that turn off fans, possible oversaturation of games aired on the tube and legalized gambling. Because of its controversial nature, equal access to the players after games to all accredited members of the media, whether women or men, is a potential time bomb. Rozelle says that "clubs must make players available to the media after the game," but that it's up to the clubs to arrange access however they wish because clubhouse facilities vary radically. As for today's Super Bowl, the NFL "will provide equal access."

For the future, Rozelle, who has eight years to go on a 10-year contract, thinks that, in time, more clubs will probably be added, but not for several years. He does not foresee a switch from network coverage to pay-cable, but there could be a time when pay-cable might carry additional games. As for those four extra prime-time games next season, three of them will probably be on Thursday nights, spaced a month apart.

Oh, yes, about the Super Bowl. Rozelle is the first to admit that there have been times when teams who have reached the Big Event have been so determined not to lose that they played overly cautious, excessively dull football. But he is optimistic that the rule changes introduced this season to encourage the passing game — the liberalization of offensive holding, the adding of a seventh official, the prohibition against bumping a potential receiver beyond five yards from scrimage — will mean a more open, more exciting contest and will keep this game from becoming Stupor Bore.

After all, as Pete Rozelle says, beyond anything else, pro football "is very simply a form of entertainment." FW

MAKES ROUND-STEAK TASTE LIKE PORTERHOUSE!

It's a revolutionary way to cook! This gourmet "hotstone" is made of special volcanic rock found only in Northern Italy's wine country, where some of the world's best cooking is found. This porous rock works like magic to draw out fat, bitterness and acidity from food. Five different lead-free stones are ground together in a secret formula, then molded into the cookware, aged, sun dried. The result is a revolutionary new way to cook . . . a new taste experience.

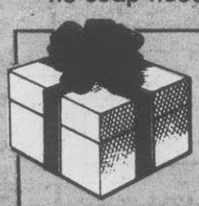

FREE RECIPES INCLUDED!

La Cotta Recipe Collection

We first introduced La Cotta cooking in 1972. Today over 1 million are in use! Now the new King Size makes it possible to feed a crowd. Try this exciting new way to cook — make steak, chops, chicken, fish so unbelievably succulent and tender, guests will beg for the secret! Order risk-free, if not delighted return within 14 days for full refund (except postage and handling). Recipes included — mail coupon today.

OBSOLETES THE METAL PAN

It doesn't build up the intense temperatures that toughen meat • Porosity draws out fats, bitterness, acidity — lets you taste natural food flavors • Spreads and holds heat evenly, so there's less shrinkage • Self-basting, preserves natural juices • Makes meat tender, succulent without tenderizers or spices • Cleans in plain hot water — no soap necessary.

FAMILY WEEKLY COOKBOOK

RESOLVED FOR 1979: GOOD, CHEAP FOOD

GOOD, CHEAP FOOD

By Marilyn Hansen

You can feast like royalty (or almost) without spending a king's ransom at the grocery store. Simply add a generous dash of food sense to your recipes and meal plans; extend expensive protein foods with dried beans, pasta, grains and potatoes — tasty additions that stretch out portions and make a little go a long way. Foreign cooks have always done this well, and it's an approach to cooking that Americans will find creative and fun, as well as thrifty!

CHICKEN COUSCOUS-MOROCCO

- 1½ cups couscous wheat*
- 3½ cups chicken broth, divided
- 6 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 cup chopped onion
- 2 tomatoes, peeled and cubed
- 2 carrots, pared and diagonally sliced
- 1 green pepper, cut in strips
- ½ small butternut squash, pared and cubed (2 cups)
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 zucchini, unpared, sliced
- 1 can (20 ozs.) chick peas, drained
- ½ cup raisins
- 2 cups cubed cooked chicken
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- ¼ teaspoon ground turmeric
- ½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
- ¼ teaspoon paprika
- ½ teaspoon Tabasco pepper sauce

1. Place couscous wheat in bowl. Add 1½ cups broth and soak 20 minutes or until all broth is absorbed. Rub couscous between fingers to remove any lumps.

2. Place in colander over simmering water. Cover; let steam 1 hour.

3. In large saucepan, melt 3 tablespoons butter; sauté onions until tender. Add tomatoes, carrots, green pepper, butternut squash and salt. Cover, cook over low heat 30 minutes.

4. Add 1 cup chicken broth, zucchini, chick peas, raisins, chicken, lemon juice, turmeric, cinnamon, paprika and Tabasco sauce. Cook, covered, 10 minutes longer.

5. Drain off 1 cup broth to make Hot Sauce.

6. Add remaining 3 tablespoons butter to couscous and mix well. To serve couscous, mound in serving casserole. Top with chicken vegetable mixture, Hot Sauce and pass remaining 1 cup clear chicken broth to pour over.

Makes 6 servings

Illustration: Tom Cavanaugh

*Buy couscous wheat in food specialty stores. If not available, cook brown or white rice in chicken broth and serve with chicken and vegetable mixture, following step 3 on.

NOTE: 2 cans (6½ or 7 ounces each) tuna in vegetable oil may be substituted for chicken.

HOT SAUCE

- 1 cup broth drained from chicken vegetable mixture
- ½ to ¾ teaspoon Tabasco pepper sauce
- ½ teaspoon paprika

Mix all ingredients in small bowl.

COCOA DATES

- Whole unblanched almonds
- Whole pitted dates
- Unsweetened cocoa
- Confectioners' sugar

1. Insert whole almond into each date.

2. Roll in mixture of unsweetened cocoa and confectioners' sugar. Serve as a dessert or a sweet snack.

THE SPANISH TUNA TORTILLA

- ¼ cup vegetable or olive oil
- 1 large Idaho potato, cooked, pared and thinly sliced
- ½ cup chopped red onion
- 6 eggs
- 2 tablespoons chopped parsley
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon dried leaf thyme, crumbled
- 1 can (6½ or 7 ozs.) tuna in vegetable oil

2. In large bowl, beat together eggs, parsley, salt and thyme.

When I was a little kid it was hard to make a good glass of chocolate milk.

The powder we used floated on top  or got wasted on the bottom.  Boy, was I glad to find new Milk Mate chocolate flavored syrup.  There's no messy spooning. You just squeeze the bottle!  New Milk Mate mixes lickety split  and stays mixed.  So your chocolate milk tastes Milk Mate smooth and chocolaty  right to the bottom!

Milk Mate. Things sure are better than when I was a little kid!

'Vantage. I just won't compromise on taste.'

"I'm willing to make some concessions, but taste isn't one of them. Even though I've heard the tar stories, I still want a cigarette with good taste.

"That's why I'm glad I switched to Vantage.

"With Vantage, I get the taste I smoked for in the first place. And that wasn't easy to find in a low tar.

"For me, Vantage is the best tasting low tar cigarette there is."

3. Drain tuna and flake, add to egg mixture; pour over potatoes. Cook, covered, over low heat until bottom of tortilla is lightly browned.
4. Place large plate over skillet; invert tortilla onto plate, slide back into skillet; cook other side until lightly browned. Turn out onto serving plate; serve warm or at room temperature.
5. Or finish cooking in 350°F. oven for 5 to 10 minutes. Makes 6 servings

Tonight, try healthy Lentil Soup.

ORANGE HALVAH CAKE

¾ cup butter or margarine
¾ cup sugar
4 eggs
1 lb. imported semolina or cream of farina cereal
½ cup blanched almonds
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1¼ cups sugar
1½ cups orange juice
2 tablespoons honey
Whole blanched almonds

1. In medium bowl, with electric mixer, beat butter until creamy.
2. Gradually beat in sugar, then the eggs, one by one, then the semolina.
3. Chop almonds. Add to batter along with cinnamon; blend.
4. Pour batter into a greased 9- × 9- × 2-inch baking pan and bake in preheated 350°F. oven for about 40 minutes or until cake tests done.
5. Meanwhile, make syrup: in medium saucepan, combine 1¼ cups sugar, orange juice and honey.
6. Heat to boiling, stirring until sugar dissolves. Boil over moderate heat 10 minutes. Cool.
7. When cake is done, spoon the syrup over the hot cake, allowing it to soak in.
8. Cool cake to room temperature, then cut into fingers or squares. Place a whole blanched almond on top of each serving. Makes 12 to 16 servings

ORANGE BANANA COMPOTE

4 large oranges
1½ cups water, divided
½ cup sugar
1 stick (3½ inches) cinnamon or ½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
2 tablespoons Grand Marnier or orange-flavored liqueur
3 bananas, peeled and sliced
2 tablespoons toasted slivered almonds
2 tablespoons fresh pomegranate seeds, or slivered pitted prunes or dates

1. Remove the rind from one orange with a vegetable peeler and cut into very thin strips.
2. In a saucepan, combine rind in ⅔ cup water; bring to boiling, cook 10 minutes. Remove rind and rinse with cold water; discard water.
3. In medium saucepan, combine remaining ⅔ cup water, ½ cup sugar and cinnamon stick. Heat to boiling, stirring, until sugar dissolves and mixture is slightly thickened. Remove cinnamon stick; discard. Stir in Grand Marnier. Cool.
4. Peel remaining 3 oranges in spiral-fashion, removing skin and white membrane. Slice crosswise in ¼-inch slices. Layer orange slices and banana slices in medium bowl; pour syrup over. Sprinkle with almonds and pomegranate seeds, if desired. Makes 6 to 8 servings

LENTIL SOUP HOME-STYLE

¼ cup vegetable oil
3 cups diced cooked ham
½ lb. Italian or Polish sausage, cut in ½-inch slices
2 cups chopped onion
1 clove garlic, crushed
2 cups chopped celery with leaves
1 large tomato, peeled, seeded and cut in wedges
1 lb. dried lentils, rinsed
3 qts. water
½ teaspoon Tabasco pepper sauce
1½ teaspoons salt
1 pkg. (10 ozs.) frozen chopped spinach, thawed

1. In large kettle, heat oil. Add ham, sausage, onion and garlic; cook 5 minutes.
2. Add celery, tomato, lentils, water, Tabasco and salt. Heat to boiling; cover; simmer 2 hours, stirring once or twice.
3. Add spinach and cook 10 minutes.
4. Taste; add additional salt and several twists freshly ground black pepper if desired. Makes 4 quarts

MICROWAVE LENTIL SOUP

½ lb. Polish sausage, cut in ½-inch slices
½ cup chopped onion
½ small clove garlic, crushed
½ cup chopped celery with leaves
1 small tomato, peeled, seeded and cut in wedges
½ cup dried lentils, rinsed
3½ cups water
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon Tabasco pepper sauce
½ pkg. (10 ozs.) frozen chopped spinach, thawed

1. In a 2-qt. heatproof glass or porcelain baking dish, combine all ingredients except spinach; mix well. Cover with glass cover or waxed paper.
2. Cook in microwave oven for 15 minutes. Stir; turn dish and cook, uncovered, for an additional 15 minutes.
3. Stir in spinach, turn dish and cook, uncovered, 10 minutes. Let stand 5 minutes. Serve. Makes about 1 quart

FREE! Personalized Brass Plate With Your Initials

It has no face and no hands. But this WonderBall Electric Clock tells time with unfailing accuracy to the minute, hour after hour, day after day—year after year. And its unique continuing action is so fascinating to watch you will hardly be able to take your eyes off it!

HOW IT WORKS!

A rotating electric pendulum scoops up one of 32 steel balls every minute, and starts it in motion down a series of precisely balanced "tracks." Each ball changes the balance of the mechanism, causing the balls to roll from one "track" down to another. And you can instantly read the time in minute, five-minute, and hourly units, by looking at the number of balls stacked on each of the three numbered time tracks.

ACCURATE RELIABLE CLOCK!

It's all utterly absorbing to watch. And your family and friends will find it hard to believe this is really an accurate, reliable clock. But it is—a unique, highly efficient timepiece that never needs re-setting.* The rotating pendulum is powered by a precision-made motor. The nickel-plated steel balls roll in scientifically engineered tracks that snap-fit together. To protect your WonderBall Clock, a stylish, see-through dust cover is included. Simple illustrated instructions show you how to assemble your Clock in as little as an hour.

UL APPROVED MOTOR!

The WonderBall Clock is 5½". Deep X 9⅝" High. It is made of rich Jet Black plastic and has a UL approved motor. Just plug it in and let WonderBall do the rest! Order this fascinating, useful timepiece for your home now! $29.99.(Including personalized brass plate with your initials!)

"Your years of 'just living' may have already prepared you for an enjoyable high-pay job."

SUCCESSFUL WORKING WOMEN TELL HOW THEY GOT THERE

By Shirley Sloan Fader

The Record, Bergen, N.J.

New Jersey working wife Pat Mandel: oil leaks, cars, motors "turn me on."

Though her unemployment insurance was running out, Amy Spielen hesitated about looking for another clerical job. "It was the only thing I seemed qualified for. Yet, desk work just isn't for me," she lamented. While Amy was stalled, she busied herself hanging wallpaper for a friend who had moved to a new home. Years before, when she first married, Amy taught herself wallpapering because, "my husband doesn't want to have anything to do with such things." And she has been doing it ever since for herself, her mother, sister, mother-in-law. Other women in the Michigan housing development she had worked in admired the rooms Amy had completed for her friend and began calling her to ask about rates. "Rates?" asked Amy, "what did I know? It had never occurred to me."

Now, three years later, she runs a very profitable business with a housewife partner who is another wallpaper enthusiast. Amy also discovered the average homemaker welcomes a competent woman worker. The homemaker knows she doesn't need to hover about to guard her furniture from careless mishandling. And housewives often feel more comfortable alone all day in their homes with another woman than with a strange man. Today, word of mouth from satisfied customers, together with an ad in the town paper, bring Amy and her partner more business than they can handle.

Since the early 1970s, it has been almost impossible to read your local newspaper without stories about women like Amy Spielen who are earning high pay in what used to be thought of as a "man's job." We read about policewomen, fire inspectors, pastors, assembly-line forewomen, insurance adjusters, bus drivers, telephone installers, nuclear engineers; you name them. While women have the same inborn variety of abilities and interests as men have, the Bureau of the Census list of 250 distinct occupations indicates half of all women workers are crowded into only 21 of the 250 occupations, with a heavy emphasis on clerical.

Of course, many women do enjoy their clerical jobs! But many other women have temperaments and aptitudes which are better suited to other of the 250 occupations. In many of these other jobs, women will earn more money, and, if they have the temperament for it, they will enjoy the work more.

Latest government statistics reveal that the average woman's median salary is 108 percent less than the average man's median salary. Yet it is unrealistic to blame most of the discrepancy on employment discrimination. As long as most apply only for such traditionally "feminine" jobs as clerical workers, salesclerks, waitresses and such, they will inevitably draw the modest salaries these occupations command. Only by avoiding stereotyped "women's jobs" and entering the jobs where the better salaries are, can woman obtain the pay their interests and abilities may entitle them to.

Perhaps you, like Amy Spielen, are already well-prepared for an enjoyable, high-pay job. Your years of "just living" may have prepared you. Pat Mandel, a New Jersey housewife in her 30's loves cars and motors. "They turn me on," she says. "If you want to make me happy, show me a foreign car with an oil leak."

Others learn from books, from relatives, from simple curiosity. Arden Scott, a young mother of four, watched plumbers work at the family farmhouse. She opened a thriving home-plumbing repair business. Sandra Gourley, a divorced young mother of three, was hired as a model by Rockwell Manufacturing Company, a power-tool concern. Accidentally discovering she was using power tools at home as a hobby, they gave her a new job as a consumer adviser and sent her touring at a far higher salary to give demonstrations of equipment.

Another woman in Missouri does inside and outside house renovations and painting "for relaxation." Her family buys and restores older houses and sells them at a profit. Her husband's craft contributions are minimal. "I adore doing it. He doesn't," the lady declares.

An Arizona housewife builds fine furniture and has turned herself into a skilled carpenter. No one knows the exact number of woodworking craft hobbyists who are women, but they are not rare. If any of these women want paid jobs/careers, they are well-prepared to do work they enjoy at high pay — unless they disappear into low-paying jobs because it doesn't occur to them to use the skills acquired during the years spent at home "doing nothing."

Many other women who do enjoy office work but who want more money in their pay envelopes find that as soon as they begin to think beyond the boundaries of their particular job, they find practical solutions. They must realize that some of the ordinary office experience they have can be used as a springboard to much better opportunities.

Louise Higgins is a case in point. She had been a clerk/typist/secretary in a small insurance office for years. This ordinary everyday job had methodically, if unconsciously, prepared her for more expansive work, and it finally occurred to her that she ought to stop processing salesmen's commission accounts for her mediocre salary and go out and earn those commissions for herself by becoming an insurance saleswoman.

Mary Anne Wexler had been a third assistant in a small-town advertising firm. When she abandoned her stereotyped, "feminine" job ideas and began thinking on her own, she took her general advertising experience and a group of campaign ideas she had developed for her job interview and applied for executive director of her town's chamber of commerce. Mary Anne's "town" is really a city with a population of 35,000 and a city-sized business district to match. It is a very well-paying, prestige job that she won and now holds.

When she realized she was never going to get much of a pay increase, Caroline Jackowski took her ordinary office experience as a Spanish-English typist-clerk with an import-export firm and approached a competitor who was glad to hire her as a knowledgeable assistant.

Janet Jones, a partner in the New York executive recruiting firm, Management Woman, suggests that moving outside women's standard occupations may be the quickest way to earn more money. She points out that once in a nonstandard field, if you are competent, you are also visible and therefore very promotable by companies feeling legal pressures to promote women.

Talk to your men friends and acquaintances. Ask what jobs their companies are hiring and training men for. If you consider them with an open mind, you will realize that few, if any, of these positions are intrinsically masculine. Women just have not thought of applying for them. What talents do the men who are being hired have? Perhaps you have similar ones. Do the new male employees have to be trained for their new work? If so, their lack of experience may instantly make you as qualified as they. You both have to learn. Are men in their 40's and 50's being hired and trained? Then for you, too, age is irrelevant.

How Men and Other Women Will React to Your New Job:

A magazine cartoon shows a little girl saying to another, "By the time we grow up there won't be any 'firsts' left." That time is almost here. North Carolina and California have had women as chief justices of the state supreme court. New York had a woman as lieutenant governor and Connecticut continues to have a woman as governor. In fact, there are now probably some women in almost every occupation you can name. In short, if you follow where your talents, life experience and inclination lead you, you may still be a pioneer of sorts, but you will not be alone. And you need never be concerned that you will be considered "odd." Instead, as a major article in The Wall Street Journal reported, women working in nonstereotyped occupations are usually envied for the good pay they receive.

The idea of men's occupations and women's occupations, like the idea of a flat world, is a mistaken notion. There are only jobs and careers for people. FW

Janet Jones, head of the executive recruiting firm, Management Woman

ITALIAN-STYLE POLENTA CASSEROLE

Polenta:

1 cup enriched cornmeal
1 cup cold water
1¼ teaspoons salt
3 cups boiling water

Meat Sauce:

1 lb. ground beef
½ cup chopped onion
⅓ cup chopped green pepper
1 garlic clove, crushed
1 can (16 ozs.) tomatoes
1 can (6 ozs.) tomato paste
1 can (4 ozs.) mushroom slices, drained
1¼ teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon oregano leaves
½ teaspoon basil leaves
Few twists freshly ground black pepper
1½ cups (6 ozs.) shredded mozzarella cheese

1. First, make polenta. In small bowl, combine cornmeal, cold water and salt.
2. In large, heavy saucepan, bring 3 cups water to a rapid boil.
3. Add cornmeal mixture slowly to boiling water, stirring constantly until thickened.
4. Cover; continue cooking over very low heat about 15 minutes, stirring occasionally.
5. Pour hot cornmeal mixture into ungreased 13- × 9- × 2-inch baking pan. Refrigerate about 1 hour or until firm.
6. Make meat sauce: brown meat, onion, green pepper and garlic in large skillet; drain off fat if necessary.
7. Add tomatoes, tomato paste, mushroom slices, salt, oregano, basil and pepper. Mix well.
8. Heat to boiling, reduce heat and simmer about 20 minutes, stirring occasionally.
9. Cut chilled polenta into 8 pieces.
10. Place 4 polenta slices onto bottom of ungreased 8-inch-square baking dish; spoon half of sauce over and around polenta.
11. Sprinkle with ¾ cup cheese. Place remaining polenta slices over cheese.
12. Spoon remaining sauce over and around polenta; sprinkle with remaining cheese.
13. Bake in preheated 350°F. oven about 30 to 35 minutes. Let stand about 5 minutes before serving. Cut into squares to serve. Makes 6 servings

SOLE GRANADA WITH BANANAS

8 fillets of sole
½ cup dry white wine
2 tablespoons chopped shallot
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon ground black pepper
¼ cup fresh lemon juice
3 eggs
½ cup (1 stick) butter or margarine
3 medium bananas

1. Fold fillets in half, crosswise, and place in large skillet.
2. Add wine, shallot, salt, pepper and lemon juice. Heat to boiling, reduce heat and simmer for 3 to 5 minutes or until just done, spooning liquid over fish frequently.
3. Gently lift fillets from skillet and place on ovenproof serving platter. Cover and keep warm.
4. Reserve 1 cup of the liquid from cooking the fish.
5. In top of double boiler, beat eggs until slightly thickened. Place over simmering water.
6. Add butter, cut in pieces, and cook, stirring constantly until the consistency of a hollandaise sauce.
7. Slowly add reserved 1 cup fish liquid, stirring constantly.
8. Peel bananas and slice on the diagonal. Arrange slices over each fish fillet. Cover with sauce and place under preheated broiler until sauce is golden, approximately 2 minutes. Serve with boiled potatoes. Makes 6 servings

FAMILY WEEKLY COOKBOOK

NEIGHBORS' RECIPE EXCHANGE

Now Your Favorite Recipe Can Earn You $10!

If you have a recipe and some cooking advice to share, write: Marilyn Hansen, Neighbors' Recipe Exchange, FAMILY WEEKLY magazine, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. For every recipe published, FAMILY WEEKLY will pay $10.

Recipes must include your name, address, telephone number and the newspaper in which you read FAMILY WEEKLY. Due to the volume of mail, we cannot answer letters or return recipes. In the case of similar recipes, the one with the earliest postmark will be used. All recipes become the property of FAMILY WEEKLY.

Mrs. Peter Ward of Lansing, Ill. sends us her recipe for "Grandma's Casserole." Mrs. Ward relates, "I usually prepare this for a large group and serve hot rolls, whole kernel corn and a lime gelatin salad with pineapple with it. Ice cream for dessert tops it off nicely. I have already won two contests with it and hope I do as well with you people."

GRANDMA'S CASSEROLE

In Dutch oven, sauté 1 cup chopped onion and 1 green pepper, cut in strips in 2 tablespoons butter or margarine for 3 minutes. Add 1½ lbs. lean ground chuck and brown meat, breaking up meat with spoon as it cooks. Add 1 teaspoon seasoned salt, 1 teaspoon monosodium glutamate, optional, ½ teaspoon pepper and 1 tablespoon sugar. Stir in 1 qt. or 1 can (1 lb. 12 ozs.) whole tomatoes, 1 can (15 ozs.) tomato sauce and 2 cups water. Heat mixture to boiling, reduce heat and simmer 15 minutes.

Into a 13- × 9- × 2-inch pan, layer tomato meat mixture and 1 pkg. (8 ozs.) uncooked wide noodles. Top with 1 pkg. (8 ozs.) mozzarella, sliced. Make sure noodles are well covered by sauce.

Makes 8 to 10 servings

The Wards read Family Weekly in the Hammond, Ind. Times.

Mrs. Marjorie Bruce of Savannah, Ga., sends her recipe for "Quickie Chocolate Layer Cake." Marjorie says, "Here's a tender, rich chocolate layer cake my family still considers tops. The big surprise is that the shortening and eggs are already in the mayonnaise. Not only is the preparation time cut in half, so is the price of its ingredients. And that's a plus today."

QUICKIE CHOCOLATE LAYER CAKE

On large sheet of waxed paper, combine 2 cups unsifted all-purpose flour, 1 cup sugar, 4 tablespoons dry, unsweetened cocoa, ½ teaspoon salt and 1 teaspoon baking soda. Sift together twice into large bowl. In separate bowl, blend 1 cup mayonnaise, 2 teaspoons vanilla extract and 1 cup water: whip together thoroughly with rotary beater, wire whisk or spoon. Add to dry ingredients and blend.

Pour batter into two 9-inch layer-cake pans and bake in preheated 350°F. oven for 25 to 30 minutes. Ice with your favorite chocolate or white frosting.

Makes two 9-inch layers

Norman Rockwell
1894-1978

Announcing The Official Tribute To America's Most Beloved Artist From The Norman Rockwell Museum.

In more than 2,000 artworks, Norman Rockwell honored America, creating a pictorial history of our times . . . illuminating our lives with gifted warmth and insight.

In appreciation, the Norman Rockwell Museum is proud to issue this official dedication to his memory . . . a fine china Commemorative Plate, entitled "Norman Rockwell Remembered".

The front bears an original portrait of Mr. Rockwell exclusively created for the edition. In beautiful detail it recalls the spirit of Mr. Rockwell's works in images from his Saturday Evening Post covers and noted illustrations. On the back is the seal of the Norman Rockwell Museum, certifying the authenticity of this limited edition.

In addition, each collector will receive an honorary membership in the Norman Rockwell Museum Society free of charge.

You have this one opportunity to order. This edition will be strictly limited to the number of plates that can be produced within a short 30 day firing period.

This is the only edition ever offered. So please order early to be sure of acquiring this rare and treasured tribute to America's favorite artist, and to receive a lower, more desired serial number.

Mail this order form now. Or you may call toll-free anytime, (24 hours a day, 7 days a week), (800) 241-8444, ask for Operator 77 to order using any of your credit cards listed in order form. [Georgia residents call (800) 282-1333.]

"Once in A Lifetime" Opportunity

1979 LIMITED EDITION
"The Roadside Mill"

ORIGINAL HAND CRAFTED

Currier & Ives Genuine Porcelain Bell

Hand Decorated In Full Color

Each Pure White Bell Trimmed In 22 Karat Gold, Hallmarked, Serially Numbered And Comes With Certificate

Now available — EXCLUSIVELY by Mail — the first in our 1979 series of beautiful genuine porcelain bells to be issued by Amercian Treasury! It's the newest offering in gleaming, pure white bells honoring Currier & Ives.

The entire surface of this lovely bell depicts, in delicate full color, the Currier & Ives original of "The Roadside Mill". Each limited edition bell is trimmed in 22 karat gold . . . and bears the American Treasury hallmark number on its inner surface! The handle is detailed with a unique 22K. gold "filigree", our exclusive design. Each issue in this rare series will illustrate a different Currier & Ives classic! This valuable limited edition "collector's choice" bell is 5¼ inches high, can be displayed to beautify your home on table, glass case, etagere, or bookshelf.

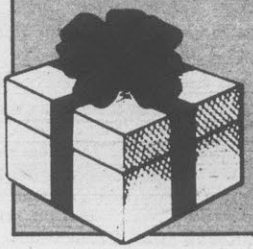

Buy back Guarantee for 5 years! You know your Limited Edition Currier & Ives Bell can't go down in value, for we put in writing that we will buy it back anytime within the next 5 years, and you will receive a certificate guaranteeing this with your bell!

A truly Limited Edition. (The beautiful 1978 bells are no longer available except by purchase from a collector who ordered them before the cut-off date.) So act now! Hurry — your order for this 1979 bell must be received by May 31, 1979. All orders received after that date will be returned, since only enough bells to satisfy the orders received before the cut-off date will be manufactured.

Your order enables you to collect all bells in the series as they are offered. Your order is for this bell only — you will not receive any others unless you specifically order them. There is a good reason for this — Your bell is not hallmarked and numbered until your order and payment are received. It is literally made to order for you!

Hurry . . . order yours right now for the unheard of price of $9.98 plus $1 postage, insurance, and handling.

CUTTING DOWN ON CALORIES? THERE'S NO NEED TO CUT OUT GOOD FOOD

Illustration: Tom Cavanaugh

BEEF AND VEGETABLE CASSEROLE

1½ tablespoons olive or vegetable oil
1½ lbs. lean beef, cut in ½-inch cubes
1 medium eggplant, peeled and thinly sliced
1½ cups sliced onions
1 can (1 lb.) tomatoes, crushed
2 medium green peppers, cut in strips
¼ lb. mushrooms, sliced
2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon instant bouillon
1 teaspoon ground black pepper
1 bay leaf, crumbled

1. Heat oil in heavy skillet. Use a Teflon skillet if you have one.
2. Brown beef cubes over high heat; will take about 10 minutes.
3. Preheat oven to 350°F. Lightly oil a 2-qt. casserole.
4. Layer beef, eggplant, onions, tomatoes, green peppers and mushrooms, sprinkling each layer with mixture of salt, bouillon, pepper and bay leaf.
5. Cover tightly. Bake for about 2½ hours or until meat is tender.

Makes 6 servings, 290 calories each

WILTED LETTUCE SALAD

2 slices bacon, diced
¼ cup cider vinegar
2 tablespoons water
1 tablespoon sliced green onion
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon sugar
Few twists freshly ground black pepper
2 tablespoons sliced pitted black olives
2 heads iceberg lettuce, rinsed, drained and cored

1. Fry bacon until crisp. Drain off fat, leaving bacon in skillet. Crumble bacon.
2. Add vinegar, water, green onion, salt, sugar and pepper to skillet. Heat to boiling.

TOMATO-WINE MADRILENE

2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
½ cup cold water
4 beef bouillon cubes
3 cups boiling water
2 cups tomato juice
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons dry vermouth
Good dash Tabasco sauce
Lemon wedges and parsley, garnish

1. Soften gelatin in cold water.
2. Dissolve bouillon cubes in boiling water. Add softened gelatin and stir until dissolved.
3. Stir in tomato juice, lemon juice, vermouth and Tabasco..
5. Spoon into chilled cups; garnish with lemon wedges and parsley.

Makes 6 to 8 servings
Approximately 20 calories per serving

YOGURT FRUIT WHIP

1 can (16 ozs.) crushed pineapple, in its own juice or
1 pkg. (10 ozs.) frozen strawberries, or
1 pkg. (10 ozs.) frozen raspberries
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1 container (8 ozs.) fruit-flavored low-fat yogurt (pineapple, strawberry or raspberry flavor)
1 egg white
½ teaspoon vanilla extract

1. Drain fruit well. Reserve 1 cup of the juice, adding water if necessary.
2. Pour off ¼ cup juice and soften gelatin in it.
3. Heat remaining juice in a small saucepan to boiling. Stir in softened gelatin until dissolved. Add drained fruit. Chill.
4. In small bowl, beat egg white until soft peaks form. Fold egg white and yogurt into partially set gelatin. Add vanilla. Chill.

Makes 8 servings

PEOPLE QUIZ/By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Many parents fail to recognize one of the strongest indications that they have a highly creative child.
2. Children who bite their fingernails are more anxious than those who don't.
3. A baby's crying behavior provides a clue to how well nourished he is.
4. Often a child who will not reveal his inner feelings to human beings will talk freely to a dog or other domestic animals.
5. Don't make promises to a child unless you are certain you can keep them.

ANSWERS

1. True. Harvard University studies show that one of the most significant indications is the child's ability to write before he knows how to read. This ability of some children to invent spellings and to write before they can read has, so far, gone largely unrecognized by parents.
2. False. A Virginia Commonwealth University study showed that nail biters are not necessarily more nervous or anxious than nonnail biters. Ninety children were divided into nail-biting and nonnail-biting groups and subjected to a standard manifest anxiety-scale test. Results: "The scores did not differ significantly for the two groups."
3. True. According to National Institute of Child Health and Human Development studies, in which "the cry sounds of well-nourished and malnourished infants were compared using behavioral and acoustic measures," the cry of the malnourished infants had a longer initial sound, higher pitch, lower intensity, less rhythm and a longer time lapse between cry sounds than the cry of the well-nourished infant.
4. True. Social psychologists Valerian J. Derlega and Alan L. Chaikin report that psychological counselors at the Old Dominion University Child Study Center constructed a giant, stuffed "talking dog" with a two-way radio built into it that is used in work with emotionally disturbed children. The child is left alone with the dog, which "talks" to him via a counselor in the next room. A transmitter inside the dog allows the counselor to hear the child's conversation. Children who are afraid to talk to people become extremely open and honest with the "talking dog."
5. True. A study sponsored by the National Institute of Mental Health cites findings showing that parents who keep their promises have children who grow up to be trusting adults. Parents who are careless about making promises, who are unable to keep them or who promise the child anything to keep him quiet or to modify his behavior can do the offspring irreparable harm by causing him to develop a deep suspicion of others and a pessimistic expectancy of what life has to offer him. HERBAL DIURETIC TABLETS

HELPS REDUCE EXCESS BODY FLUID AND THE WEIGHT THAT GOES WITH IT.

If your clothes are too tight from time to time even though you haven't changed your eating habits, you may be retaining excess body fluid. This condition affects your whole body right down to your ankles.

Feeling bloated and puffy can be the result of water retention. Also, extra weight is another factor. It is a fact that a quart of water weighs over two pounds.

Safe, mild HERBAL DIURETIC TABLETS help eliminate excess water in your body so you can feel slimmer and more comfortable.

A NEW DRUG THAT RELIEVES THE PAIN OF ARTHRITIS

By Paula Dranov

It's the oldest disease known to man. Signs of arthritis have been found in the skeletons of the ape men who inhabited earth two million years ago, in prehistoric Lansing man, in Egyptian mummies of 8000 B.C. Socrates spoke of it as the most common disease of the Greeks. But for all its long history, arthritis remains an unsolved medical mystery, its cause and its cure both unknown. Even today, the most doctors can offer the millions who suffer from its various forms are drugs to ease the pain.

The latest of these, a nonsteroid compound called Clinoril, was introduced with great fanfare last year. It's the first drug to be approved by the Food and Drug Administration for treatment of all of the five major arthritic conditions — the others available are prescribed only for specific forms of the disease.

Although the symptoms of arthritis (the word itself means inflammation of a joint) can be as minor as occasional stiffness, there's little doubt that it is a very serious disease — the leading chronic illness and number-one crippler in the United States. Of the 30 million victims, about 6.5 million suffer from the most severe form, rheumatoid arthritis, and about half of them are partially or totally disabled. Another 16 million Americans have osteoarthritis or degenerative joint disease. Doctors say we all can look forward to it if we live long enough — it comes with age. Osteoarthritis usually is mild, not inflammatory and rarely disabling.

The other three major forms are ankylosing spondylitis, a chronic inflammatory disease of the spine that may be hereditary and can result in rigidity or curvature of the spine; gout, an inflammatory attack that most often affects the big toe; and the acute shoulder pains associated with bursitis and tendinitis. Treatment depends on the form of the disease and the severity of the attack and can include anything from bed rest to exercise, medication and, in some cases, surgery.

Despite the fact that some forms of arthritis (ankylosing spondylitis and gout) appear to be hereditary and that rheumatoid arthritis is three times more common among women than men, there's no predicting who the disease will strike. Neither diet nor climate seems to have anything to do with who gets it.

Until Clinoril, the drug most commonly used to treat arthritis was aspirin, simple aspirin. However, as an anti-inflammatory agent, aspirin can leave something to be desired — to get the full effect, high doses must be taken, about 12 to 16 tablets a day. That much aspirin can cause some unpleasant side effects, primarily upset stomach and ringing in the ears. The chief advantage claimed for Clinoril is that one or two tablets per day work as well as eight to 16 aspirin and cause significantly fewer adverse side effects. In comparing the two drugs, it was found that aspirin caused gastrointestinal distress in 19.4 percent of the patients tested while only 10.2 percent had similar problems with Clinoril. The new drug also compared favorably with existing medications used to treat akylosing spondylitis, gout and shoulder pains. The worst of Clinoril's side effects were a rash, dizziness, headache and nervousness.

A miracle drug it clearly is not, although Clinoril does offer advantages to some arthritis patients. For those who have gotten relief and have had no problems with aspirin, its introduction probably means very little. The big breakthrough — if, after two million years, there is to be a big breakthrough — is yet to come. As one doctor put it, "Advances against arthritis do not come in miracles...but step by step." Significant though it may be, Clinoril is just the latest step. FW

YOU CAN GROW THESE WORLD'S MOST UNUSUAL and GIGANTIC VEGETABLES!

YARD LONG BEAN!

This variety produces bright green 25"-36" pods and can grow right in your back yard. Very productive plant with pencil thick, tender beans and excellent flavor. Pods set easily in high summer heat. Pick and use like snap or string beans.

200528—Yard Long Bean Seeds Pk. $1.19

Ed Weeks is a North Carolina farmer who loves to grow giant vegetables. In 1975, he set a new World Record when he grew a 197 lb. watermelon! He developed the winner from a sweet and juicy variety called NC Giant Watermelon. Now you too can try for a prize-wining giant!

200542—Giant Watermelon Seeds Pack .. $1.50

The DELICIOUS TOMATO produced the 6 lb. 8 oz. Guiness Book of World Records tomato. Thirteen years of breeding and selection led to this prize winner. It consistently produces large, meaty juicy tomatoes and has an excellent flavor — great for salads, as a garnish, baked in casseroles. We especially like it because the solid centers make perfect slices. Just think how far one of these hefty deep-red tomatoes can go. One can feed the whole family! What a thrill to grow such magnificent tomatoes right in your own garden!

200580—World's Largest Tomato Seeds Pack $1.19

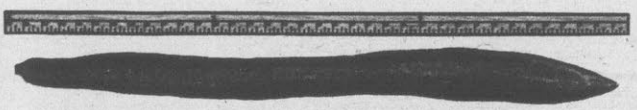

In 1976, Clarence Dailey of Monona, Wisc., harvested this 6 lb. 8 oz. new World Record. He used barnyard manure, lots of compost, and aerated the roots frequently with a pitch fork. He won $250 in prize money.

3-Foot KYOTO CUCUMBER!

The longest slender cucumber we have grown. Most will be about 2 feet long and 2" in diameter — with many in the 3 feet range! Grow vigorous vines for maximum length and straight fruit. Crisp, firm and tender, even after weeks in the refrigerator.

200535—Kyoto 3 ft. Cucumber Seeds Pack $1.19

SWEET 100 CHERRY TOMATOES!

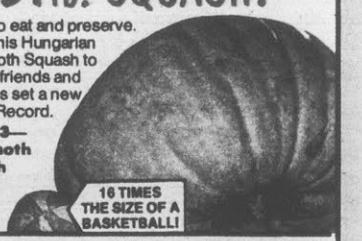

New Cherry Tomato — perhaps higher in Vitamin C than any other tomato. Produces amazingly high yields of one-inch diameter fruits. Produces huge clusters containing up to 100 tomatoes on each cluster. Bears heavily 'til frost.

200597—Cherry Tomato Seeds Pack $1.19

200573—Mammoth Squash Seeds Pack $1.50

23' 6½" SUNFLOWER!

Mr. Frank Kelland of Exeter, England grew a 23' 6½" tall Sunflower which set a new World Record and put his plant in the Guiness Book of World Records. We love Giant Sunflowers for their towering size and beauty and because they're so easy to grow and produce delicious, nutritious, plump seeds. With just the right amount of sun, water and care, you might beat Frank Kelland's record with your own glorious Sunflower!

100 lb. PUMPKIN!

Grow BIG MAX and have a 100 lb. Jack O'Lantern! Up to 72" in circumference. Ideal color and shape for carving Jack-O-Lanterns! Water and feed heavily for best results. Makes wonderful pies. And you can roast the seeds for a delicious snack!

1ft. CHILI PEPPER!

NuMex BIG JIM, the World's Longest Chili Pepper, is medium hot with thick, fleshy fruit. Ideal for spicing chow-chow, canned vegetables and your own "hot peppers". High yields of 25-40 pods per plant will attract gardeners with limited space. Grow 16"-24" tall with 8"-12" pods, each weighing 4-6 oz. It produces readily under hot, dry conditions.

BABY TALK

Babies — and this doesn't vary —
Have a small vocabulary.
All they possess, and use full steam,
Is just a loud and piercing scream.
The scream may mean that it's too hot
Or cold or wet or, like as not,
It's very hungry or a pin
Is somewhere sticking in its skin,
Or it has heard the one who pats it
Say "itsy-bitsy" — maybe that's it.
—Richard Armour

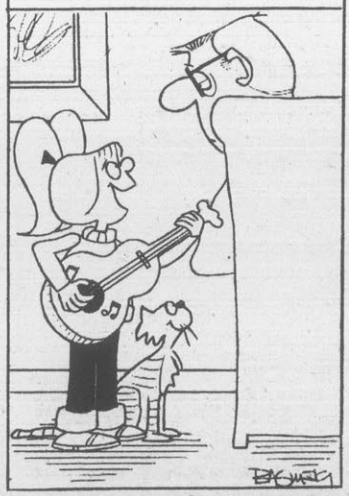

The lady had charged her husband with mental cruelty so severe that she lost 20 pounds. The judge thought the grounds were ample and was about to issue a divorce decree when the lady spoke up: "Judge, can you delay the decree for a month; I'd like to lose another 10 pounds." —Conrad Fiorello

It may be a case of head-on collusion, but I saw this sign in a coffeeshop: "We have an agreement with our local bank: it serves no sandwiches — we cash no checks."
—Lucille Goodyear

A food statistician reports that in an individual's lifetime he eats 30,000 eggs, 6,000 loaves of bread, 9,000 pounds of potatoes, 8,000 pounds of beef, 12 sheep, 15 pigs, 5 calves and 7,000 pounds of fish — so why shouldn't I have this pie à la mode for dessert? —Henry Leabo

WHAT IN THE WORLD

Give Yourself Credit

Whether you're borrowing money for a new car or just to help pay holiday bills, it pays to shop around for the best deal you can find. For example, if you want to borrow $2,000 to help buy a used car, your interest charges for a 24-month loan could range anywhere from $198-$684!

The most important factor to know in comparing credit terms is the Annual Percentage Rate (APR), which tells you what you will have to pay for the money you borrow. By law, the APR must be written to facilitate comparison of credit offerings. Rates depend on the type and source of credit you buy. For example, banks usually charge from 8%-18% (the lower rates are for loans secured by collateral, such as savings or a car title.

Finance companies generally charge between 12%-30% to borrow money, and retail credit-card charge accounts may charge 12%-18%. But you'll save all finance charges for retail credit if you pay your bill within the 25-30 days allowed without penalty.

When shopping for credit, find out how much the down payment will be — and beware of borrowing this from a second source since it means 2 payments instead of 1. Find out what the penalty charges are for late or missed payments and what will happen if you can't pay and default on your loan.

For more information to help you decide what type of credit is best for you, request your free copy of the Government booklet, "Shopping for Credit Can Save You Cash," by sending a postcard to: Consumer Information Center, Dept. 627G, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Utah State University

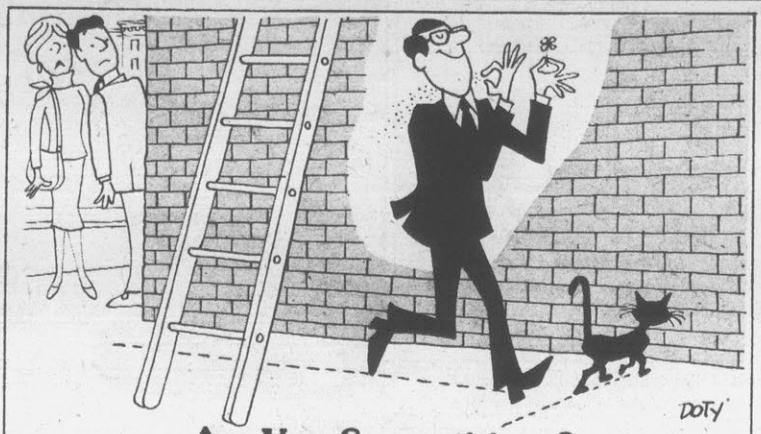

The Extra Family Member

Does one of your kids look kind of fuzzy, walk on four legs and wag his tail when you talk to him? If you're one of America's pet owners, he probably does, say two Utah State University researchers after studying pets as members of the American family.

"Our research shows an overwhelming love and value of pets," says Dr. Jay D. Schvaneveldt, head of the university's Family and Human Development Dept. Dr. Schvaneveldt, who did the research with Lynne W. Myers, a research associate in the department, continues, "We spend the money to prove it. Some say that pet lovers spend enough on their animals to feed the starving people of the world."

For many people, pets really are treated like members of the family, Schvaneveldt says. About 90% of those surveyed said they talked to their pets as if they were human — and about 73% believed that their pets could "talk" back!

"I suppose one reason people talk to their pets is that a pet won't tell your secrets," says Schvaneveldt. "They give us a legitimate opportunity to dote without being told off."

Are You Superstitious?

Even if you love black cats and blithely break mirrors, you're probably superstitious says a University of Alabama professor. That's because after interviewing hundreds of people, Dr. Elaine S. Katz, an assistant professor in the university's Program in American Studies, claims everyone — from illiterates to Phi Beta Kappas — is superstitious. "Over and over, I interview people who say, 'Oh, I'm not superstitious, but...' and right after that 'but' you can collect a wealth of beliefs that fall under the category of superstitions," Katz says.

Superstitions fulfill the need we all have to seek explanations for occurrences we can't understand, Katz believes. So, as science explains events that were formerly mysterious, Katz believes the type of superstitions may change but not the degree of belief.

Katz, who is the author of the new book, Folklore for the Time of Your Life (Oxmoore House, Birmingham), says that the adage, "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," plays a part in superstitious behavior. "Even though people have no idea how throwing spilled salt over their shoulders is supposed to ward off bad luck, they do it anyway."

Is Katz herself superstitious? She laughs at the question, then replies, "I looked down in the grass before going in to take my comprehensive exam for my master's degree and spotted a four-leaf clover. Let me assure you, I took it with me!"

Dial-A-Diet

The American Dream used to be a chicken in every pot. But today, according to Dr. Sarah Short, professor of nutrition at Syracuse University, the real dream is a computer in every kitchen. And the time when it becomes a reality is not as far off as you may think.

In fact, Dr. Short is already using a computer for nutritional analysis and diet-planning at Syracuse, as a teaching aid in her nutrition classes and to chart diets for Syracuse athletes.

How will computers be used by the family of the future? Dr. Short envisions a terminal in every home that can be used for everything from planning budgets to designing personalized menus for each member of the family.

"The computer can take the guesswork out of diet-planning," Dr. Short says. "It can keep track of inventory in the kitchen, plan shopping lists, write menus, provide recipes — and even turn on the microwave oven!"

Lifestyles

Health. Despite increasing public concern about health and fitness, many Americans are still in pretty bad shape, according to a recent Harris survey. According to the study, done for Pacific Mutual, almost ⅔ of those surveyed were overweight, only 37% take regular exercise, 1 in 5 say they don't get enough sleep and many millions drink too much alcohol.

Education. To be sure, they get tempting summer vacations and there are attractive fringe benefits, but America's college professors are a hard-working group says a survey by the Institute for Research in Social Behavior. A recent Institute study found that regular full-time faculty members at the University of California spend an average of 62 hours a week on university-related activities. The findings came as a shock even to the educators. After keeping an hour-by-hour diary of daily activities, one professor commented, "It's depressing to figure all this out. Getting to the bottom of my diary I realized...I had 8 hours of other time (per day) — for eating and sleeping."

Television. What happens when a group of high-school seniors go through a "let's pretend" marriage as part of a modern family-planning class? You'll find out on the ABC After-School Special, "Make-Believe Marriage," which will appropriately be aired on Valentine's Day, Feb. 14, from 4:30-5:30 p.m. E.S.T.

PEACE

Most nearly perfect rose of all. Past "ALL AMERICAN" winner. Produces dozens of blooms up to 6" across almost all summer and fall. Red tinged in ivory, cream, sunshine yellow.

BLANCHE MALLERIN

CRIMSON GLORY

Deep velvety blooms are highest red of all, and most fragrant, too. Blooms in profusion all summer long.

MONTEZUMA

TIFFANY

MIRANDY

ECLIPSE

Profuse and remarkably long pointed buds open to deep-cupped, long-lasting double golden yellow blooms that come in waves far into fall.

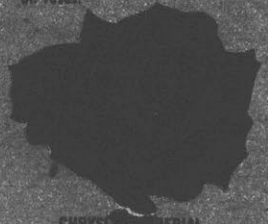

CLIMBING PEACE

Flowers generously all summer long with dozens of vivid yellow blooms tinged in red or pink. Quickly clambers over fence, arbor or trellis in a rolling blanket of golden blooms.

QUEEN ELIZABETH

Truly one of the most breathtaking roses, its lovely pink flowers bloom early June to frost. Former "ALL AMERICAN ROSE SELECTION" winner.

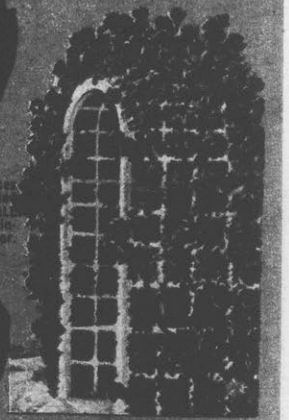

CHRYSLER IMPERIAL

FORTY-NINER

Blooms all summer long with brilliantly contrasting petals, vivid gri-enbla red inside and chrome yellow outside. Former "ALL AMERICAN ROSE SELECTION".

CLIMBING BLAZE

This champion climber produces a vivid blanket of big, 2 to 3 inch scarlet-red double blooms on many branched canes. Blooms again and again, summer into fall, covering trellis, walls, fence with vivid color.

Superbowl XIII: An Extravaganza

America's greatest sports extravaganza; the annual battle for all the marbles in pro football; the day when nearly everyone — whether at home or in the local tavern — is wagering silently, or vocally, who they think will win the big one; that's the aura surrounding Super Bowl Sunday.

The Dallas Cowboys and the Pittsburgh Steelers, both fresh from convincing victories in their respective conference finals, square off for a rematch when NBC televises Super Bowl XIII (Jan. 21, 4 to 7 p.m).

The last matchup between these two powerhouses in Super Bowl X featured an extremely close tilt. Culminating in a Steeler victory, many still consider this to be the most exciting Super Bowl ever.

Both teams have an unusual chance to set records straight merely by winning. Not since the realignment of the league has any team won back-to-back Super Bowls, and the Cowboys now have that chance.

Also, both squads have an opportunity to set a record for the most victories in the classic — three.

A lot may hinge on how quickly both teams get out of the starting blocks. Dallas has made a habit of starting slow. In the four games they lost this season, the Cowboys were outscored in the first quarter 41-0.

Meanwhile, the Steeler defense has been an absolute terror in the first period. If the Cowboys can manage a first-quarter touchdown, they will be the first and only squad to do so this season against Pittsburgh.

No one knows better than Dallas coach Tom Landry just how crucial these opening moments will be. "There's no advantage in getting behind Pittsburgh that I know of," he readily admits.

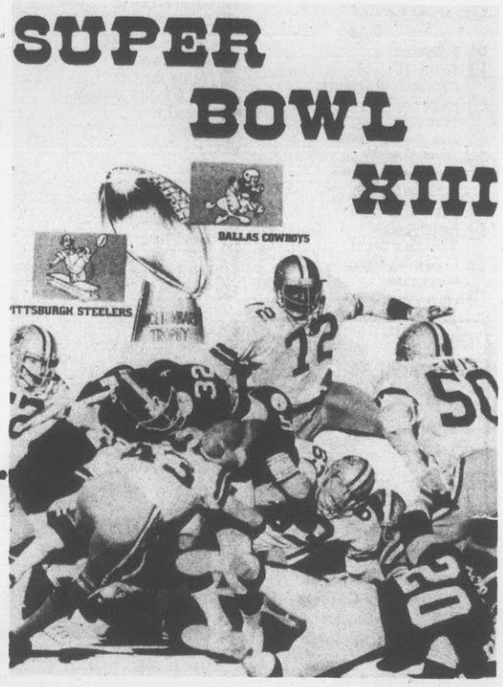

The Cowboy mentor also knows it's almost impossible to cover Lynn Swann, John Stallworth and Franco Harris at the same time, so the key seems to be obvious; Bradshaw.

"They have a very good, solid offensive line," said Landry. "I think there is no question that you have to have pressure on Bradshaw. He can, with the flick of the wrist, throw the ball on target."

"There's not much difference between the teams in the NFL, and there's almost nothing we can do better — or worse — than the Cowboys," Noll declared.

Whoever does their thing the best will obviously win, but considering the competitive nature and talent of both teams, it should be interesting to find out who is able to pull the trick.

SUPERBOWL XIII-Live from the Orange Bowl in Miami, Fla., NBC Sports presents exclusive coverage of this annual gridiron event when the Pittsburgh Steelers take on the Dallas Cowboys.

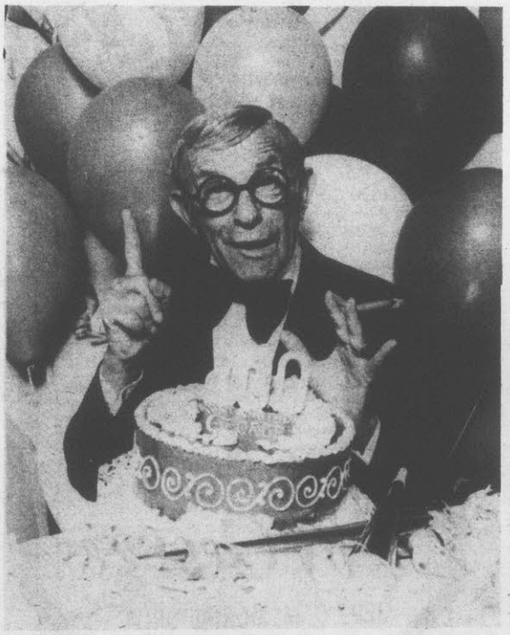

Burns Celebrates 100th Birthday

George Burns has always been a man ahead of his time, and he keeps his record intact by celebrating his centennial a few years early in "George Burns' 100th Birthday Party," an hour-long variety special to be broadcast Monday, Jan. 22 (8-9 p.m.) on CBS-TV, with party guests Milton Berle, Debby Boone, Pat Boone, Johnny Carson, Bob Hope, George Jessel, Dean Martin, Steve Martin, Gregory Peck, Helen Reddy, Don Rickles, and Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Stewart, and with guest stars Goldie Hawn and Andy Gibb.

Burns, who will actually be a mere 83 on Jan. 20, explains that he is celebrating his birthday in advance because when he is 100 years old (in 1996), he'll be out of town, playing the Palladium in London.

While the revelers assemble and party festivities swing offstage, Burns greets his guests and regales the studio audience with his own special repertoire of songs and with stories of his career adventures. Singer-songwriter Andy Gibb, in an infrequent television appearance, performs his newest hit, "Our Love, Don't Throw It Away." The dance ensemble is featured in a production number, "Food, Glorious Food." Ms. Hawn joins Burns in a special rendition of "Some of These Days," and Burns closes the show with "The Party's Over."

The noted entertainer began his show business career at the age of 7 in the Pee Wee Quartet, a foursome of Lower East Side youngsters who sang for pennies on New York street corners. Before he was 20, he had been a trick roller skater, a dance teacher and a vaudeville comedian. Burns and his late wife and partner, Gracie Allen, played the vaudeville circuit for several years, then went on to gain fame as a team in radio, television and motion pictures.

ABC Airs Four New Programs

Three new contemporary comedies and a new hour adventure series are now being incorporated into ABC-TV's prime time schedule. These new programs will be introduced on four different evenings, and there will be no changes in the Tuesday and Wednesday schedules.

Scheduled at begin airing soon on Mondays (8 p.m.), is "Salvage I," starring Andy Griffith as boss of an imaginative and resourceful crew of retrieval experts who tackle seemingly impossible tasks.

"Angie," starring Donna Pescow as an ex-waitress who married the wealthiest and most eligible bachelor in Philadelphia, has been given the 8:30 p.m. time slot on Thursdays, and "Makin' It," a disco-oriented series with the beat of the Bee Gees musical group and starring David Naughton as a young college student torn between campus life and the disco scene will air Firdays (8 p.m.).

The third comedy, "Delta House," a campus caper based on the smash National Lampoon motion picture, "Animal House," and starring a fraternity of young actors, will be broadcast Saturdays (8 p.m.).

Also, "The Osmond Family Hour," a comedy-variety series newly designed for the younger audience, will be seen on Sundays at 7 p.m. This new show will star Donny and Marie Osmond and willcontain elements of the "Donny & Marie" series and new segments with specific appeal to children.

"What's Happening!!," the highly rated comedy, is being moved to Fridays (8:30 p.m), and "Welcome Back Kotter" will be seen on Saturdays (8:30).

"Carter Country" will continue in production and will return to the network lineup when "Soap" completes its run of original episodes.

In addition to these regularly scheduled programs, ABC will present a number of limited series and made-for-television movies throughout the first half of 1979.

These will be highlighted by "Roots: The Next Generations," a continuation of Alex Haley's memorable family saga: "Ike," a dramatization of the war years of Dwight D. Eisenhower; "Friendly Fire," starring Carol Burnett in a searing drama of the heartbreak of war; two "ABC Theatre" presentations, "The Hollow Image," a drama by a new playwright in the series being developed in association with the Eugene O'Neill Memorial Theatre Center, and "The House of Garibaldi Street," a tense drama about the search for a Nazi criminal; "The Jericho Mile," starring Peter Strauss in a revealing story filmed entirely in California's Folsom Prison; "The Child Stealer," a wrenching film dealing with legal kidnapping.

Elvis On ABC-TV

Starring in the title role is Kurt Russell with Shelley Winters as his mother, Season Hubley as his wife, Bing Russell as his father, and Pat Hingle as manager Col. Tom Parker.

Con Artist Role Fun

When it came time to cast Maude Wendell, the cunning con artist "but fun person," in NBC-TV's blockbuster adaptation of James A. Michener's novel, "Centennial," Lois Nettleton's skills were sought.

In "The Crime," Chapter Nine, airing Sunday, Jan. 21 (8 to 10 p.m.), Maude, and her partners in the old badger game, husband, Mervin (Anthony Zerbe), and son, Philip (Doug McKeon), run into complications. They have a dead body on their hands.

And getting rid of the evidence is no small feat, but one that mother and son are up to despite Mervin's weakness, and the suspicions of Sheriff Dumire (Brian Keith).

But back to the role of Maude. It is a demanding one requiring Lois to perform on stage, to sing, to be coy, to be scheming, and at the time to endear herself to the less glamorous residents of the fictional town of Centennial in the 1800s.

"I never wanted to be anything but an actress, and I started as a youngster in community theater productions," Lois said.

"I headed for New York and landed a role in 'God and Kate Murphy' which won me the Clarence Derwant Award — a very satisfyling feeling."

Nettleton, like Zerbe, who plays her husband in "Centennial," has done Shakespeare, and in the next segment of "Centennial," the Wendells will do a bit of Shakespeare for the folks in Colorado.

"But playing Maude, the temptress, performer and glamour girl of the community was fun," says Lois, "and of course who wouldn't be proud to be associated with anything written by Michener."

She won an Emmy for a special daytime presentation, "The American Woman: Portraits of Courage" in 1976, and she has been nominated for Emmy Awards for her work in the television movies, "The Man in the Glass Booth" and "The Last Bride of Salem."

Lois Nettleton portrays Maude Wendell, a cunning con artist in "The Crime," Chapter Nine of the NBC drama "Centennial," to be telecast Sunday, Jan. 21 (8-10 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

'Black Sunday' Airs Tonight

A fanatical band of political terrorists hold the fate of thousands of Super Bowl spectators in their hands in "Black Sunday," a suspense thriller directed by John Frankenheimer and starring Robert Shaw, Bruce Dern and Marthe Keller, to be broadcast for the first time on television as a special movie presentation, Sunday, Jan. 21 (9 to approximately 12-midnight), on CBS-TV.

The story opens in Lebanon, where leaders of a terroist organization are plotting their next venture, an attack that is to take place in the United States with the aid of a collaborator, Michael Lander (Dern), an emotionally scarred Vietnam War veteram who now flies the television blimp at major athletic events.

A group of Israeli commandos under the leadership of Major Kabakov (Shaw) raid the terrorist headquarters, but one of them, a beautiful Palestinian, Dahlia Iyad (Keller), escapes.

She comes to the United States to work out the details of their plans with Lander. Meanwhile Kabakov and FBI agent Corley (Fritz Weaver), aware that the terrorists have something major underway, are hot on their trail, finally catching up with the fanatics just after they put their plot in action. Landers and Dahlia have commandeered a blimp from which they plan to attack thousands of spectators at the Super Bowl, including the President of the United States, by firing half a million steel darts at them.

Kabakov finally manages to disable the blimp and hoist himself onto the dirigible from an overhead helicopter to guide the lethal payload out to sea.

The cast is excellent, and Dern is convincing as the anguished ex-officer who was brainwashed as a POW and came home a hero with little life left to him. As his manipulator-lover, Keller is properly glacial and heatedly fanatic, while Shaw, as a man who has lost most of his family to political terrorists, is as cold-blooded and pragmatically cruel as his adversaries.

Remember Donna?

Remember Donna Douglas, the blonde star of "The Beverly Hillbillies"? Donna, who has had a successful career in real estate since the series ceased filming, has now decided to make a comeback. She will be returning to the stage, but not as an actress. Donna wants to launch a new career — as a country-western singer, and is now in negotiation with the produces of "Hee Haw" about appearing on the show.

Plenty Of Roles For Clayburgh

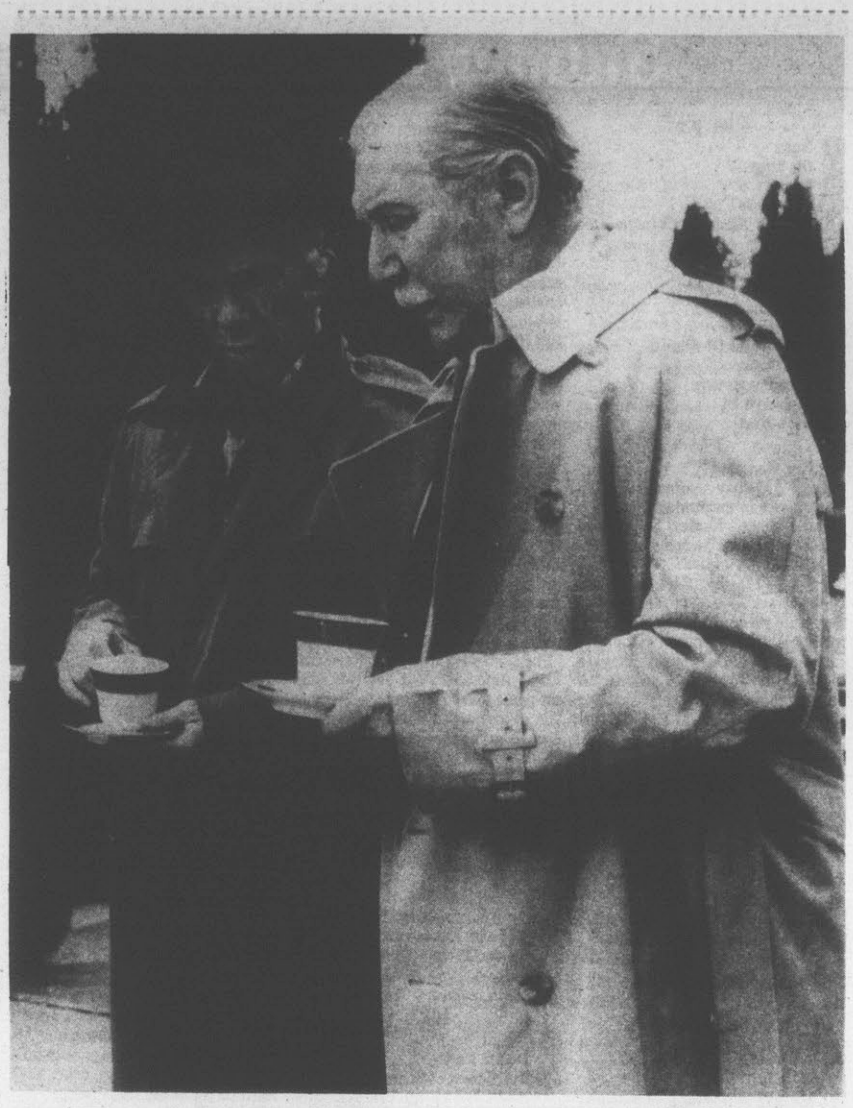

At a time when many actresses are complaining about the dearth of good female roles in films, Jill Clayburgh has found the proverbial end of the rainbow. She's had three consecutive roles that would be the envy of any actress.

Last year Miss Clayburgh co-starred with Lee Remick in the critically acclaimed TV film, "Hustling." She followed that with one of the most coveted film roles in years when she won the role of Carole Lombard in "Gable and Lombard" with James Brolin, who stars in "Marcus Welby, M.D." Her latest role is opposite Peter Falk in "Griffin and Phoenix: A Love Story," a gentle drama airing on "CBS Late Movie" Monday, Jan. 22 at 12:30 a.m.

"I guess I'd have to say that I was very lucky," she admitted. "I think the thing I like most about those three parts is that they are each so different. Going from a streetwalker to a role like Carole Lombard was a big jump, but I think that the girl I play in 'Griffin and Phoenix: A Love Story' is someone I'll remember all my career. It's a very special part."

Jill is cast as a lonely young woman whose whirlwind affair with an equally lonely man brings her the first happiness in her life. The film also gave her an opportunity to play opposite Peter Falk, a man she has long admired.

"I always had a fondness for Peter's work, especially in some of his films and early TV dramas," she said. "Working with him is a joy because he's completely dedicated to his art. I was afraid that after all those years with 'Columbo' that he would probably be rather relaxed about acting. He's not. He wants to make sure that every scene works perfectly, but that's the kind of acting that brings out the best in me. We liked each other as people and I think that will show up on the screen.

CHEATED-Anders (Ray Walston, l) tells Wellington (Robert Coote), head of an elite organization set up to correct wrongdoing against the defenseless, that he has been swindled out of his life savings, in "Institute for Revenge," an action-adventure on "Monday Night at the Movies," Jan. 22 (9:30-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

For Revenge

"I.F.R." is an action-adventure about an elite organization founded to correct wrongdoing committed against the defenseless. The drama, starring Sam Groom as head of the investigative team of the Institute for Revenge — the activities of which are programmed by a computer — will be the "NBC Monday Night at the Movies" presentation Jan. 22 (9:30 to 11 p.m.).

The cast also features P.J. McCavitt as Bradley, Lane Binkley as Jo Ann, George Hamilton and Ray Walston.

Anders (Walston), cheated out of his life savings by Allan Roberto (Hamilton) — a con-artist-entrepreneur who has made millions swindling rich and poor alike — seeks the help of I.F.R.

Schroeder (Groom), the organization's chief operative, plots the financial destruction of Roberto, who has been an I.F.R. target for years.

Physical agility is a 'must' for Sam Groom's role as Schroeder, and the actor has the necessary ingredient. His father, Frank Groom, was a middle-weight boxing champion in his college days, and Sam himself starred on his high school track, basketball and football teams in Springfield, Mass. Today Sam still keeps to a trim 176 pounds with tennis, baseball, swimming and jogging.

It wasn't until he had two years at Holy Cross College under his belt, as a math major, that Sam decided to be an actor. "I hitchhiked around the country for a year, picking fruit, washing dishes and parking cars. It was a 'sorting out' period, and during that time I made my decision." Sam's family was disappointed — the theater seemed unreal, impractical, so he went back to school, obtained his degree and then started his theatrical career.

He has since acquired several impressive television credits. He had a regular role on "Another World," has made several pilots, starred in the "Police Surgeon" series and guest-starred in numerous other series.

Fonda And Heston Star In War Movie 'Midway'

Charlton Heston and Henry Fonda head an all-star cast in the television premiere of "Midway," an epic drama based on the momentous World War II, air-naval battle between the Japanese and American Pacific fleets, the outcome of which paved the way for the eventual Allied victory. The drama, with James Coburn, Glenn Ford, Hal Holbrook, Toshiro Mifune and Robert Mitchum also featured, airs on "The Big Event" Tuesday, Jan. 23, (8 to 11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Four months after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, an American Air Force squadron, led by Jimmy Doolittle, stages a successful surprise attack on Tokyo.

Back at Pearl Harbor, Capt. Matt Garth informs Navy Combat Intelligence that Adm. Nimitz expects a reprisal from the Japanese fleet commander and needs an intelligence report of the enemy's intentions.

Aboard the flagship of the Japanese fleet, Adm. Yamamoto is, in fact, sure that the American fleet can be lured into battle and destroyed at the mid-Pacific island of Midway.

Aware that the Japanese have assembled their largest armada ever, the American command organizes a task force in hopes of surprising the Japanese.

The battle begins when Japanese bombers attack the island of Midway, hoping to draw the American fleet into the open. Soon, scout plans from both fleets are searching for the enemy's warships. Once sighted, an all-out battle is underway, with implications for future control of both the crucial island and superiority on the seas.

The U.S.S. Lexington was one of several locations for the filming of "Midway," and the 50-odd men of the movie's cast and crew were assigned quarters aboard the huge ship. During a week at sea, they fell into the ship's daily schedule of living and operating on an aircraft carrier.

MORTAL ENEMIES—Henry Fonda and Toshiro Mifune star as the two admirals who pitted their fleets against each other during World War II in a Japanese-American battle for control of the Pacific in "Midway," an action drama to be colorcast on "The Big Event," Tuesday, Jan. 23 (8-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Liz Taylor In Effective Role

Elizabeth Taylor, in one of her most effective performances, stars as a middle-aged woman who undergoes head-to-toe plastic surgery in a vain attempt to recapture her husband's waning affection in "Ash Wednesday." The film will air as the "Tuesday Movie of the Week," Jan. 23, at 11:30 p.m. on ABC-TV. Co-starring as the disinterested husband is Henry Fonda.

The film begins at an exclusive Italian clinic where Miss Taylor — convincingly made up with the jowls, wrinkles and pallor of a woman in her fifties — decides to take the plunge and submit to a head-to-toe cosmetic overhaul.

Very gradually, as the bruises subside and stitches are removed, it becomes apparent that she has slipped off for a few weeks under the guise of a 'rest cure' without telling her husband, hoping that an instant reversion to youth might change his indifference.

She leaves the clinic to await her husband's arrival at a ski resort, develops a flirtatious relationship with an arrogant young gigolo, and is thrown into deep depression when her daughter arrives to tell her that her husband has a mistress and wants a divorce.

Finally, her husband does arrive, and Miss Taylor's final confrontation with Fonda is genuinely affecting, mustering a surprising amount of conviction into her ultimate pathos.

The musical score is by Maurice Jarre. It is initially pleasing and underscores the arch romanticism of the film which Peerce frequently reinforces with slow zoom effects and lush, sillouhetted dissolves.

Upgrade Shows

Mulholland said he believed television is doing its job responsibly where the young viewer is concerned, but can do more. Some critics of the medium, he added, have espoused blatant misconceptions about television and its relation to its young audience.

NBC will use the United Nations' designation of 1979 as "The International Year of the Child" as the springboard for a company-wide commitment to upgrade and increase its children's programming service, Robert E. Mulholland, President of NBC-TV, announced recently.

Reynolds As Football Hero

Burt Reynolds, who was slated for a pro-football career with the Baltimore Colts until a knee injury ended those plans, stars as a jailed ex-superstar quarterback who mobilizes his fellow convicts for gridiron battle against their oppressive prison guards in "The Longest Yard," to be rebroadcast as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," Jan. 21 (9 to 11:26 p.m.).

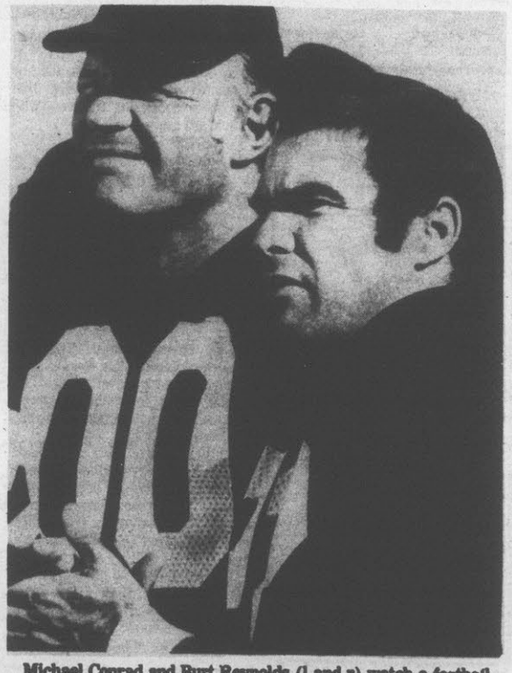

Also starring are Eddie Albert as a sly and sinister prison warden, and Ed Lauter as a mean guard captain. Michael Conrad portrays a fellow inmate and veteran footballer assisting Reynolds with his team, and Jim Hampton is cast as a lovable con whose resourceful good nature proves to be his tragic downfall.

Several ex-NFL stars form the supporting cast of prisoner and guard team members, including Ray Nitschke, Joe Kapp, Mike Henry, Pervis Atkins, Dino Washington, and Ernie Wheelright.

Paul Crewe (Reynolds) a former pro-football hero forced to retire from the sport following a point-shaving scandal, winds up in Florida's Citrus State Prison, convicted of resisting arrest for auto theft. After Crewe receives a taste of prison life through punishment detail and solitary confinement, he accepts an offer from Warden Hazen (Albert): a speedy parole in return for organizing a prisoners' football team which will play the guards' semi-pro squad in a public scrimmage four weeks away. The Guardsmen, vying for the U.S. inter-prison championship under the coaching of hostile guard captain Knauer (Lauter), must win the game, but the convict team should appear to be a formidable rival.

With the help of fellow inmates Nate Scarboro (Conrad) and The Caretaker (Hampton), Crewe assembles a roster of players whose qualifications for girdiron savvy rest on the severity of their criminal records. Fired by revenge for their ill-treatment and united by a common desire to regain their dignity as men, the "Mean Machine" progresses to the point of being able to beat the Guardsmen and expose the hated warden to public humiliation.

With the starting whistle of the big game, it's apparent that both teams have the same motto: it's not how you play the game that counts but whether you win or lose.

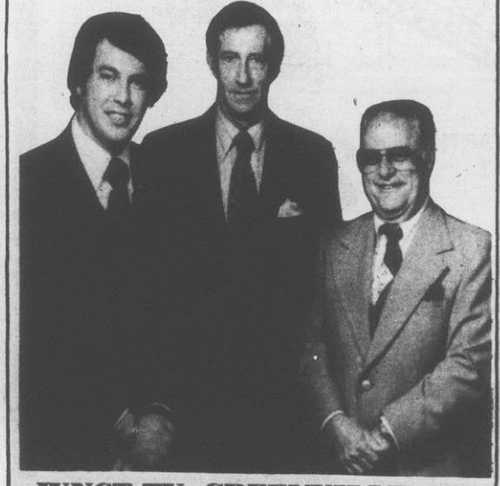

Michael Conrad and Burt Reynolds (l and r) watch a football game that threatens to become a football war in "The Longest Yard," a modern drama of prison life which has its television premiere on "The Sunday Night Movie," Jan. 21 (9-11:30 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Magical 'Mandrake' Airs

Anthony Herrera has a favorite line. "There is real magic." It's all around us all the time. To experience it you need only to open your mind and heart."

It explains his character as "Mandrake" — who uses his special powers to combat a madman and his henchmen in crime — airing on "NBC Wednesday Night at the Movies" Jan. 24 (8 to 10 p.m.).

The movie, based on the King Features comic strip "Mandrake the Magician," also stars Simone Griffeth and Ji-Tu Cumbuka as Stacy and Lothar, Mandrake's aides and Hank Brandt as government agent Alec Gordon. Special guest star Robert Reed portrays Raymond Arkadian, a business tycoon being blackmailed for $10 million. Gretchen Corbett guest-stars as Jennifer Lindsay, a woman trying to find out what happened to her father, a renowned research scientist who vanished under mysterious circumstances. Also starring is Peter Haskell as William Romero, a mystery man who once worked for the top-secret government agency that hires Mandrake for special cases.

"Mandrake is not just a slick crime fighter," said Herrera. "He's a magician by profession. He deals with magic on two levels — on stage, and, what he calls, 'real' magic, the magic of the universe and life force. His mysticism is the core of the character."

Herrera not only did his own stunts ("I took karate in college"), but his own magic, which involved a couple of tigers, a bed of nails ("the most dangerous"), an eagle, a snake and an Oriental vulture.

He was fascinated with the tigers. "Getting that close to that much power was intriguing. I didn't want to leave them. I wanted to pet them and communicate with them. Their presence was magnificent. When they walked on stage, they knew exactly who was in control. They were!"

Herrera got assistance from an unexpected source in preparing for the Mandrake role. "Shakespeare helped me prepare to play a magician. Most modern characters are not totally powerful people. But playing kinds who are omnipotent without it going to their heads helped me understand Mandrake. He has power, he knows it, but he doesn't have to flaunt it."

MANDRAKE AND ASSISTANT-Anthony Herrera stars as Mandrake and Simone Griffeth plays his assistant, Stacy, in the "Wednesday Night Movie," telecast of "Mandrake," based on the comic strip feature, Jan. 24 (8-10 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Yune To Star

Johnny Yune, the clever and innovative young nightclub comedian from Korea who won nationaL acclaim from his recent laugh-provoking appearances on "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson," stars in the title role of an NBC-TV development project, "Sgt. T.K. Yu," Wednesday, Jan. 24 (10 to 11 p.m.). Yune recently signed a contract with the network.

Yune, who also sings and dances, portrays a non-uniformed police detective who works the Beverly Hills, Calif., area while posing as a comedian in a local nightclub.

John Lehne is featured as Lieutenant Ridge. Guest stars are Harold Gould, John Colicos, Monica Gayle, Martin Brill, Steve Easton, Tim Thomerson, Barbara Samath, Mike Mazurki, Bruce Glover and Jim Canino.

In the story, Yu is inquiring into the death of a famous rock singer. Pressure from the commissioner forces the police to take a closer look at what was originally believed to be a suicide. Yu, employing his acting ability and brilliant logic, manages to solve the crime, much to the surprise of his superiors.

Dickson Takes Baton

Two For Cindy

Cindy Williams, co-star of "Laverne & Shirley," has been signed to star in two feature films: "Sex and Violence," which she describes as an "outrageous comedy," and "Radio Land Murders."

Ebsen To Dance

Buddy Ebsen began dancing professionally while he was still a college student in Florida and won his first Broadway role as a dancer in the 1928 Ziegfeld production of "Whoopee," with Eddie Cantor. His sister became his dancing partner, and the team of Vilma and Buddy Ebsen played club engagements, road tours, and such musicals as "Flying Colors," a top revue of 1932.

Hollywood beckoned, and Ebsen's dancing style graced many films. Returning to the stage as a single, he performed in more musicals, and later successfully tried his hand at songwriting.

Then he tired of dancing his way across the stage and turned to drama. As a dramatic actor, he has had major roles in "Attack," "Between Heaven and Hell," "The House," "Night People," "Breakfast at Tiffany's," "The Interns," "Mail Order Bride" and "The Family Band."

He is now the star of the long-running series, "Barnaby Jones," and in the episode airing Thursday, Jan. 25 (10 to 11 p.m. on CBS-TV), he gets a chance to once again demonstrate his choreographic prowess. His dancing partner is guest star Sandra Kern, who portrays a disco dancer hunted by a murderer.

Sanders Leaps Into Role

Brad Sanders, a 28-year-old black stand-up comedian, had no problem identifying with the character he plays in "The Roast," an hour-long comedy special airing Thursday, Jan. 25 (8 p.m.), on NBC-TV.

He portrays Ghetto Man, the first black superhero, a role expecially created for him by the show's writers.

The promising and struggling young satirist, who usually writes his own material, is teamed with a number of established actors and comedians in what Producer-Director William Carruthers contends will be television's first fantasy 'roast' in which famous comic book superheroes are roasted by infamous comic book villains.

Having spent his childhood growing up in a government housing project in Chicago's westside, Sanders has been earning a living as a stand-up comic since he was 19. "I didn't earn enough to spoil me, but I did make enough to prove to myself that I could eke-out a living making people laugh."

"They were the kind of clubs where you had to step over the crap game to get to the bar," recalls Sanders. "You knew you were bombing when they started playing the juke box in the middle of your routine."

HOLLYWOOD — There's growing speculation that "Battlestar Galactica" is headed for the exit door on ABC's primetime schedule. ANNE LOCKHART, daughter of JUNE, has been added to the cast to play opposite RICHARD HATCH, but the move may be too late. Though Hatch, DIRK BENEDICT, MAREN JENSEN and LAURETTE SANG are marginal favorites with the youthful viewers, the Neilsen numbers continue to falter.

At CBS, meanwhile, "FLYING HIGH" has been promised an earlier evening timeslot for it's last five episodes on the premise that the majority of the audience is with yongsters. It'll have to do well in the ratings to get a renewal for next season.

"HOW THE WEST WAS WON" is back and as James Arness vowed, he'll have featured roles in four of the ten episodes. Bruce Boxleitner will carry a majority of the scripts. Is there a spin-off in the back of the minds of the decision makers?

CAROLYN CLINE, whom viewers may remember was the second runner-up in the Miss America Pageant, so impressed ABC Records that she's been signed to an exclusive recording contract.

There's growing rumor that the romance between JEFF CONAWAY of "TAXI" and RONA NEWTON-JOHN, OLIVIA'S older sis, has cooled.

On a day when KEN HOWARD and the cast and crew of CBS' "WHITE SHADOW" had to go on location in an L.A. suburb (which was substituting for Las Vegas), the cold front of an approaching rain storm dipped temperatures into the low 40s. And there was the cast attired in light-weight wind breakers and short-sleeved shirts!

LINDSAY WAGNER has been conspicuously absent from the Hollywood social scene and the reason why is because she's now making her home on a ranch she purchased in Oregon during "BIONIC WOMAN." She maintains a residence in Malibu but is there only when she has to be in L.A. to work.

Award For Drama

Tickles Audience Pink

The legions of fans who delighted in watching Inspector Clouseau match his bumbling wits and fractured malapropisms against the international underworld in three earlier "Pink Panther,' outings will be tickled pink to know that "The Pink Panther Strikes Again"; this time in your own home via the "ABC Friday Night Movie," Jan. 26 (9 to 11 p.m).

Producer, director and co-writer Blake Edwards, working in tandem with Peter Sellers as Clouseau has again proved singularly adept at tapping funnybones with looniness and unbashed slapstick, polished and played with all stops out.

The storyline picks up a few years after "The Return of the Pink Panther" as former chief inspector Dreyfus (Herbert Lom), having been driven into the funny farm by his successor Clouseau, is about to be released.

Stevenson In New Comedy

McLean Stevenson stars as radio talk show host Larry Alder in the new funfilled comedy series "Hello Larry," premiering Friday, Jan. 26 (9:30 to 10 p.m.), on NBC-TV.

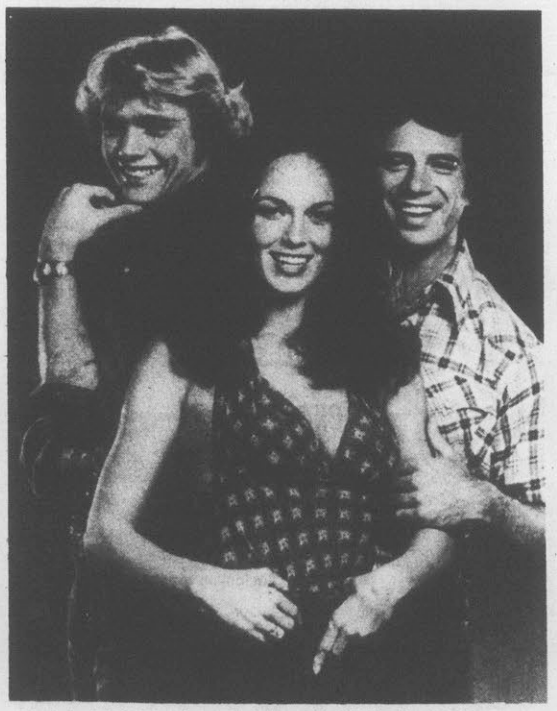

In the premiere segment, "How To Not To," Alder unwittingly gives spicy advice to a listener, then realizes too late the caller is his own daughter, Diane (Donna Wilkes).

With her witty younger sister, Ruthie (Kim Richards), Diane has a comical time trying to explain her problems with her boyfriend to her father. When she gets the idea to call him anonymously on the air, Diane doesn't realize, dizzy producer Morgan Winslow (Joanna Gleason) has urged Larry to spice up his show, and she gets some way-out advice from her father.

George Tibbles, who has been associated with some of television's biggest hit series, has been named producer of "Hello, Larry." He produced and wrote many episodes of the long-running hit series "My Three Sons" and has written for "Alice," "Maude," "The Betty White Show" and wrote 30 episodes of "Leave It to Beaver."

A piano player and songwriter (he has the "Woody Woodpecker Theme" to his credit), Tibbles was elevated to producer of "The Al Jarvis Show" in Los Angeles when the show's producer left. He produced and wrote three Betty White series in the fifties, "Life With Elizabeth," "Date With the Angels" and "The Betty White Show," a talk-variety program.

Tibbles has also written 10 plays, including "Patches," "Later, Leonardo," "The Latest Mrs. Adams" and "Who Wants Fat Hair?"

Left to right, John Schneider plays Bo, Catherine Bach appears as Daisy, and Tom Wopat plays Luke, in "The Dukes of Hazzard." The new comedy-adventure series, recounting the triumphs and misadventures of three cousins who fight corruption in the rural South, premieres Friday, Jan. 26 (9-10 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Michele Will Tell

Q: Please give me some information about Dack Rambo. V. PENDERGRASS, HENDERSON, N.C.

A: Dack and his identical twin, Dirk (later killed in an auto accident), were 'discovered' in church by Loretta Young who immediately put them in her TV series. He has been starring in NBC-TV's "Sword of Justice," and his other television credits include co-starring roles in "The Guns of Will Sonnet," "Dirty Sally" and the daytime series "Never Too Young." Dack's single, owns a farm in California where he raises cotton and alfalfa, and plans to resume his 'country-pop' recording career soon.

Q: I want to know more about Ike Eisenman, who co-starred in the TV movie, "Terror Out of the Sky." K. LAWSON, WILMINGTON, N.C.

A: 16-year-old Ike started acting several years ago as a means of financing his college education. His first TV role was in an episode of "Gunsmoke," and he has since acquired an impressive list of acting credits in other series, several Disney productions and 'Afterschool Specials.' Born in Houston, Ike now lives with his parents in L.A. and his hobbies include collecting stamps, rocks and coins. Another favorite pasttime is building model airplanes. He is also an artist and one day hopes to work as an animator.

Q: Has Phil Foster always played the part of Laverne's father in "Laverne & Shirley"? F. STOKES, HENDERSON, N.C.

A: Yes, although his part was much smaller when the show premiered. Since the second season, however, Frank De Fazio has been more prominent in the scripts. Phil has been active in show business for almost 50 years, but this is the first time he's ever been a 'regular' in a TV series.

Q: I would like the studio address of Christopher Reeve, star of "Superman." G. DAUGHTRY, ROANOKE RAPIDS, N.C.

A: Warner Bros., 4000 Warner Blvd., Burbank, Calif. 91505. Reeve, whose only drama credit before 'Superman' was a recurring part on "Love of Life," was cast in the role after Robert Redford, James Caan and Clint Eastwood turned it down.

Puppy Searches For Stray Boy

Roles are reversed when a puppy goes in search of a stray boy to be his best friend in "The Puppy Who Wanted a Boy," an animated canine romp which airs as an "ABC Weekend Specials" presentation Saturday, Jan. 27, 12-noon to 12:30 p.m..

There just aren't enough boys and girls to go around when a large litter of pups is born in a small town, so the one puppy who is left nameless and boyless goes off to the city to adopt a boy of his own.

"The task isn't as easy as it sounds, since the other dogs he meets certainly aren't interested in giving up their own boys," says Marilyn Olin, Director, Children's Programs, ABC Entertainment. "Fortunately, he meets an older, wiser dog who advises him that 'If there's something you want, you have to go after it. If you don't you'll be disappointed in yourself the rest of your life'."

The search for an available boy leads the puppy through a series of harrowing adventures, including a chase through a restaurant he accidentally wrecks, an encounter with two street dogs who have no use for puppies or boys and a mysterious stranger who collects dogs for dark purposes.

Kelly Tripucka Makes Things Happen

Notre Dame's forward Kelly Tripucka has always had a 'yen' for challenges, and he continues to starve for athletic competition.

"I really miss playing in three sports," he admits.

And he could probably master three — maybe more — sports at Notre Dame, because he bounced from one to another attending high school in Bloomfield, N.J. He played football in the fall, basketball in the winter and then participated in track in the spring.

But right now Kelly is concentrating totally on basketball, and because of the presence of this fiercely competitive 6-7, 215-pound forward, Maryland's basketball team will have their hands full when they play Notre Dame Saturday, Jan. 27. (3:30 p.m. on NBC-TV.)

Kelly began making things happen in his first college basketball game last year when he scored 16 points as a reserve against Mississippi.

But that was only the beginning. Kelly eventually squeezed his way into the Notre Dame starting lineup and he was the one who fueled the Irish trip to the NCAA finals. He was subsuquently named the most valuable player in the Midwest Regional after-scoring 20 points in a victory over Utah and 18 in a game with De Paul.

Overall, Kelly finished his rookie season with an impressive 11.7 scoring average and .517 in field-goal shooting.

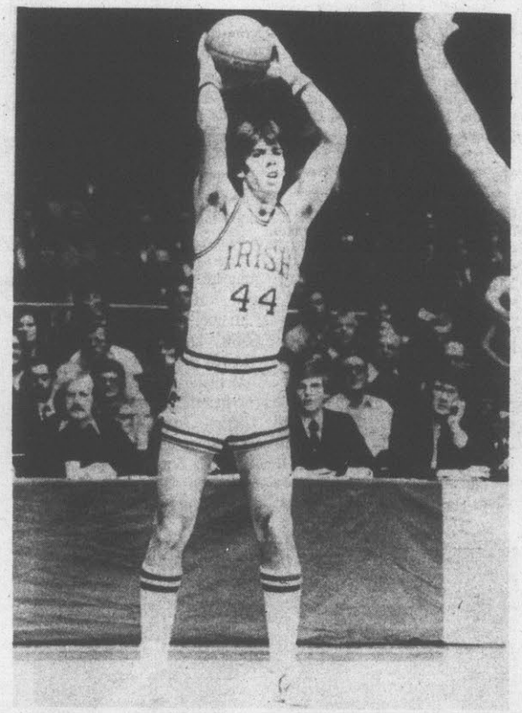

Kelly's father is Frank Tripucka, Notre Dame's outstanding quarterback in 1945-48, and there are five more sons — all equally impressive athletes.

"Dad never liked for us to sit around inside and not do anything," Kelly remembers. "He didn't care which sport we played. He just wanted up to go outside and do something, anything, just something to be active.

"Whenever we played basketball together in the back yard, it seemed like we would always end up arguing or fighting," Kelly recalled. "We are all brought up to win."

"Kelly is our power forward," says Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps. "He's like a fullback in football. He goes out and gets three yards and three yards, then all of a sudden he'll come up with seven yards. He makes things happen. He will accept any challenge."

Notre Dame's Kelly Tripuka, a power forward who makes things happen, will see plenty of action when the Fighting Irish play the University of Maryland Saturday, Jan. 27 at 3:30 p.m. on NBC-TV.

The Teen Scene

Though it's never aired there, "THE HARDY BOYS" is in big demand in Germany. It seems the youth of that country already know SHAUN CASSIDY because of his records and they've got enough knowledge about PARKER STEVENSON to have already begun a letter campaign to get the show on German TV.

The odds are less than 50-50 that LEIF GARRETT will end up in a nighttime TV series next fall. Negotiations between Leif and NBC, with whom he's got a contract, continue to fall short of what he and his representatives are seeking in the way of a series.

Ever since MARILU HENNER was quoted as saying that her rapport with JOHN TRAVOLTA is more than mere friendship, the two have been seen together less and less!

Observers suggest that the move by ABC in putting DONNY and MARIE OSMOND'S show in the 7 p.m. Sunday night timeslot is the first step towards cancellation since no show has been able to compete against CBS' "60 MINUTES."

Both the DOOBIE BROTHERS and the ALESSI BROTHERS are the subject of a lot of conversation at all three networks these days. There's a rumor that one of the two might very well front a summer replacement series.

ROD STEWART'S new Warner Brothers LP, "BLONDES HAVE MORE FUN," has been certified a Gold album for sales in excess of a million.

Singleton Is A Familiar Sight

A familiar sight during Wake Forest's basketball games last year was that of forward Will Singleton responding with a driving basket, a stuff show off the rebound, or a defensive carom that would set up another Deacon basket. The Sumter, S.C. native played 279 minutes as a rookie and averaged 5.7 points and 2.4 rebounds per game. But this wasn't good enough for 6-6 Singleton, who'll be responding with more baskets when Wake Forest plays UNC Thursday, Jan. 25 (9 p.m., Channel 3,5,6,9).

"Last season was tough to adjust to," he says. "I wasn't quite satisfied with the way I played at times."

So, he went about the business of honing his talents and abilities off-season.

"I ran a great deal last summer to improve my stamina, and I worked on my shooting to improve the range of my shot so I don't have to rely on driving to the basket so much of the time."

As fall practice got underway, Singleton found himself faced with stiff competition from junior John Hendler and freshman Guy Morgan and Alvis Rogers, but he can see definite improvement as a result of his off-season efforts.

"I can sense improvements in a variety of areas," he says. "I think I'm a better offensive player than last season and I've worked on my defensive game which was my biggest weakness last year. In high school I didn't have to play that hard, but I've learned now that I have to play hard all the time at both ends of the court. I'm running and moving better this season."

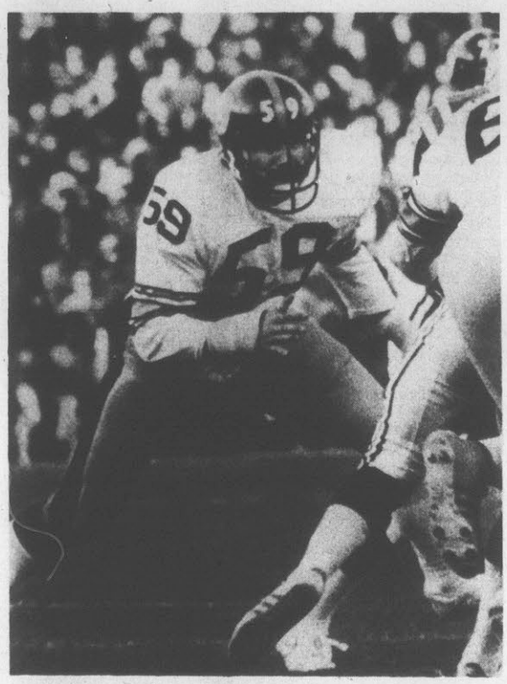

Like all his teammates, Singleton has off-court and on-court interests that are coming closer to reality now.

"If I had to say what my ultimate goals are, I would like to play well within the league and become a good ACC player. I'd like to play pro ball someday, but that's a while away yet." Singleton admits that he was "bothered" by the number of younger players who joined the team last year, but now that he has seen just how good they are, he says "I'm glad they are here."

Singleton sees medical school in is future if a professional contract isn't waiting for him following graduation.

"Medical school is a big challenge and there seem to be a lot of obstacles in the way. But if I want to do it enough then I'll do it. I won't give up on that goal."

Meanwhile, Will Singleton is concentrating on what he is presently doing best — playing outstanding basketball for the Wake Forest Deacons.

Linebacker Jack Ham, of the Pittsburgh Steelers, will face the revenge-minded Dallas Cowboys in Super Bowl XIII, Sunday, Jan. 21 in Miami, Fla., at 4 p.m. on NBC-TV.

CBS Televises Golf Tour

Undertaking the most extensive schedule of televised golf in network television history (20 events), CBS Sports kicks off the 1979 season with exclusive coverage of the closing two rounds in the $250,000, 72-hole Phoenix Open, Saturday, Jan. 20 (4 to 5 p.m.), and Sunday, Jan. 21 (2 to 4 p.m.).

Play that will be coverend by the telecast will be at the par 4, 375-yard 14th hole; the par 3, 204-yard 15th hole; the par 4 265-yard 16th hole; the par 4, 420-yard 17th hole; and the par 5, 524-yard 18th hole, with 13 cameras (including two minicams), two videotape machines, and two sol-motion stop-action machines. Two vidifonts will be utilized for supering scores, the leaderboard and other pertinent information.

New 'Miller' Spin-Off?

Maxwell Gail, who plays Wojehowicz, the Polish detective in "Barney Miller," may be departing the series for one of his own.

Gail is starring in an hour-long 'spin off' of 'Miller," and if the ratings are high, chances are strong that he will have his own series soon.

A Real Chiller Airs Saturday

Chris Sarandon and Christina Raines (of NBC-TV's "Centennial") star as a young professional couple whose lives are forever changed when she moves into a sinister New York brownstone, in "The Sentinel," a thriller about the supernatural based on the best-selling novel by Jeffrey Konitz. The feature will be colorcast on "NBC Saturday Night at the Movies" Jan. 27 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Martin Balsam, John Carradine, Jose Ferrer, Ava Gardner, Arthur Kennedy, Burgess Meredith and Sylvia Miles also star.

Alison Parker, a successful model, is undecided about her relationship with attorney Michael Lerman, whose wife died tragically two years earlier.

Having recently lost her father, Parker's anguish is complicated by remembrances of an unhappy relationship and then sudden faintig attacks after she moves into the apartment. There is a blind priest living on the top floor of the otherwise deserted building and soon Alison is plagued by a series of frightening incidents in her new home.

Concerned, Lerman hires a private detective to investigate her complaints about the building — but he is soon discovered slain.

When Lerman sets out determinedly to discover the hidden mysteries of the building, he places both Alison and himself in a position to suffer a terrifying experience as they near the truth.

Raines makes a beauteous and convincing victim, and she is ably supported by Deborah Raffin portraying her friend, Jennifer, and Burgess Meredith as Chazen, a male version of Ruth Gordon's eccentric character from "Rosemary's Baby."

Strange neighbors, things that go bump in the night, stabbing headaches and loud thuds are enough to scare a viewer out of his wits, which is exactly what Director Michael Winner had in mind when he made "The Sentinel." Its share of scares could easily fill two horror films.

A Trend Is Emerging

The announcement that Chuck Fairbanks was leaving the New England Patriots as head coach to return to the college ranks at Colorado, appears to be a definite sign of a trend: pro coaches returning to the college scene.

Lou Holtz left the Jets for the Arkansas position; Dan Devine departed Green Bay for Notre Dame, and Lou Saban went to Miami after coaching Buffalo and Denver. All four men were successful head coaches in college, then tried pro football and evidently decided they liked college coaching better.

Starr Speaks

Bart Starr, a former quarterback who is now coaching the team he played for — the Green Bay Packers — spoke out recently about the cry for more protection for quarterbacks: "Accepting the threat of danger is a big part of the job — if we remove that threat, anyone can come off the street and play."

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

by HAL FOSTER

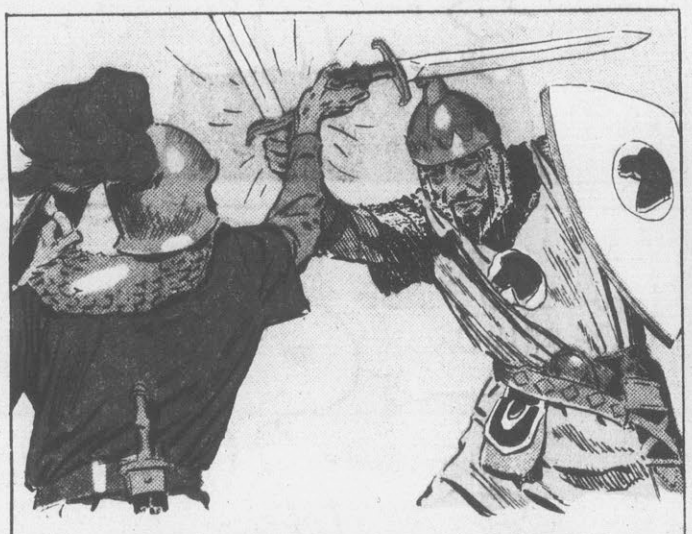

Our Story: ALTHOUGH OUTNUMBERED, HROTHGAR ORDERS HIS MEN TO BEACH THE SHIPS AND FORM RANKS ASHORE. AGUAR HAD ALWAYS FAVORED PEACEFUL NEGOTIATIONS AND SUCH A MILKSOP COULD ALWAYS BE BLUFFED.

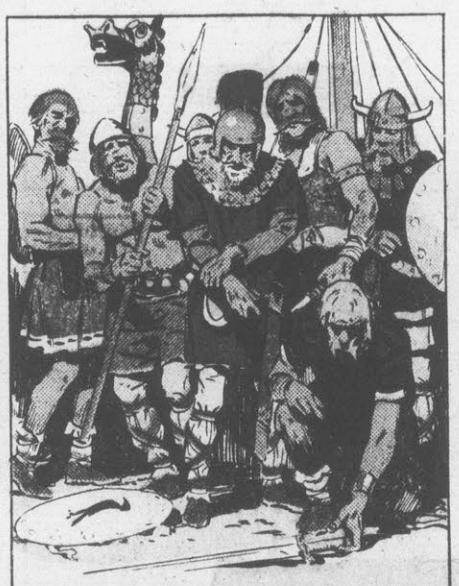

HROTHGAR WALKS SLOWLY TOWARD KING AGUAR: "IT IS A FOUL DEED FOR AN OLD, DECREPIT LECHER LIKE YOU TO SEEK MARRIAGE WITH A PURE YOUNG GIRL LIKE MY LITTLE DAUGHTER, SIGRID."

"YOU SHOWED ME THE WAY. DID YOU NOT FORCE EARL CNUTE TO SIGN A MARRIAGE AGREEMENT GIVING YOU HIS YOUNG DAUGHTER IN WEDLOCK? DRAW, YOU HYPOCRITE!"

MANY A DAY WILL PASS ERE HROTHGAR CAN AGAIN SWING A WEAPON. BUT HE COULD STILL HATE.

KING AGUAR CALLS HIS SECRETARY WHO HAS ALREADY MADE OUT AN AGREEMENT FREEING THE LADY GRACE FROM THE FORCED MARRIAGE CONTRACT.
