Khomeini Threatens To Wage A Holy War

By RAYMOND WILKINSON

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini Saturday threatened to unleash a "holy war" in Iran unless Premier Shahpour Bakhtiar resigns. Thousands of followers took up his call, marching through the streets chanting, "Jihad! Jihad!"

Khomeini said he already had formed a Revolutionary Council to replace Bakhtiar's government and added unnamed "friendly powers" would supply weapons to his millions of followers in any civil war. He would not identify the council members he has chosen.

It was the first time Khomeini publicly had raised the specter of a holy war (jihad) in his escalating campaign to force Bakhtiar from office. Western diplomats said his threats, issued at a news conference, pushed Iran to the brink of civil war.

Khomeini told the news conference he had been in contact with Iran's top generals since his return from 15 years exile on Thursday and that he would hold further talks with the military commanders "if necessary."

Bakhtiar, who has adamantly refused any suggestion he resign and hand power to the 78-year-old Shiite Moslem leader, held a series of high-level meetings with both military and parliamentary leaders after the ayatollah made his threats.

Bakhtiar, who has drawn up plans to arrest anyone named to a Revolutionary Council by Khomeini, reiterated he would not resign and said he would not replace one dictatorship of the monarchy with a religious one.

The prime minister, named to run the government by Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi before his flight from Iran, said he would use the army to crush more street riots and "Molotov cocktail throwers."

Meanwhile, efforts by thousands of foreigners, including Americans, and Iranians alike to leave Iran were hampered when some foreign airlines canceled flights, ostensibly because of poor weather conditions.

The U.S. and other foreign embassies have ordered all non-vital personnel as well as their citizens working for private companies to leave Iran. Western embassies have warned that Iran is now closer to full-scale war than at any time during the past 14 months of anti-shah and anti-government rioting.

In another setback for Bakhtiar in his attempt to hold the government together, the mayor of Tehran resigned as a gesture of support for Khomeini and in protest of Bakhtiar's refusal to quit.

Khomeini aides claimed that 44 members of parliament so far had resigned to support the ayatollah.

Thousands of Khomeini supporters picketed parliament and marched through Tehran shouting "Jihad" but later the streets emptied except for a few army patrols and military helicopters clattering overhead.

Speaking without a trace of visible emotion, the black-robed Khomeini told a jammed news conference, "We want to solve this country's problems through non-violent means."

"However, if the government continues to resist with American support and assistance from Israel, then we will declare a holy war," Khomeini said. "When the time comes we will get weapons from friendly powers."

Khomeini refused to name the members of his Islamic Revolutionary Council to replace the current government apparently because of fears the army would immediately arrest them.

He said the council would name a provisional government shortly which, in turn, would prepare a general referendum to approve a new Islamic constitution which he said he had also already prepared.

Khomeini renewed his appeal to the army to "join our ranks as soon as possible."

Diplomatic source said his plea, and his statement he might hold further talks wth the military, indicated Khomeini thus far had been unsuccessful in winning the allegience of the army which still publicly supports Bakhtiar.

Final Day Of Visit

By NICHOLAS DANILOFF

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — Greeted by a fine drizzle and a friendly rooting section, Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping flew into the Pacific Northwest Saturday night to wrap up his historic, week-long U.S. visit with a tour of the big Boeing Co. aircraft plant, already a major supplier of airplanes to China.

Teng's jetliner landed at Boeing's private airport at dusk after a 4½-hour flight from Houston.

Before leaving Houston, Teng told a group of editors his nation will likely spend billions of dollars with American firms. He also took a tour of the Hughes Tool Co., makers of well-drilling equipment the Chinese need to tap their vast oil reserves.

On hand was a small friendly group representing the National Association of Chinese-Americans. Members shouted, "Welcome! Welcome!" in Chinese and erected a red banner with black Chinese characters saying, "Warm Welcome to Vice Premier Teng Hsaio-Ping."

There were no protesters he could see at the airport, but outside the facility there were 60 who shouted: "Death, death, death to Teng!" and "Long Live Mao Tse-tung!"

Boeing will put on its best for the Chinese delegation and Teng himself because the company would like to increase its business with China. In 1972 China bought 10 Boeing 707s and last month ordered three of the 747-SPs, planes capable of flying non-stop between Peking and New York City.

American enemies of Teng and his government have been kept away from him during his trip. Security has been its tightest.

Before going to Hughes Tool, Teng made a speech on economics for a group of publishers and editors. According to the ground rules, he could not be quoted directly.

Teng touched on the economic impact of the opening of relations between China and the United States, saying his nation would spend billions of dollars for American products and technology.

He said that, in particular, China wants to modernize its agriculture and petroleum industries. And, he added, his government wants to import feed grains from the United States.

Sources said China likely would sign contracts amounting to $60 billion in the next 12 months.

As for the political climate in China, Foreign Minister Huang Hua told the newspaper executives that the widow of Mao Tse-tung and the other three members of the now-purged Chinese "Gang of Four" are alive and living under "certain restrictions" in Peking.

Mao's widow, Chiang Chung, and the others — Yao Wen-yuan, Wang Hung-wen and Chang Chun-chiao — have been denounced by the current government leadership. They disappeared in October 1976 when Hua and Teng announced their influence had been "smashed."

Teng reaffirmed China's support for the communist Cambodian government of Pol Pot and said the remnants of the Pol Pot regime are waging a courageous fight against the new Cambodian leadership supported by Vietnam and the Soviet Union.

Teng will wind up his activities today in Seattle with a dinner and reception. And on Monday, after another breakfast meeting with newspaper executives, will fly back to his homeland.

The 10th To Flip

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (AP) — Sandra Rippey had been driving a tractor-trailer for just a month — no problem. And then, all of a sudden, she went the way of a number of veteran drivers before her — she flipped.

Mrs. Rippey was wheeling her 70,000-pound rig off of I-85 North into I-77 North when the vehicle went out of control on the exit ramp and turned over, sliding 70 feet to a stop.

The ramp is a tight S-curve with a dip in the center and it has flipped 10 tractor-trailers

Mistrial Rule In Flood Trial

BY GREGORY GORDON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal judge declared a mistrial in the bribery case against Rep. Daniel Flood Saturday when the foreman of the deadlocked jury told him, "I think it's impossible for this jury to reach a verdict."

The action by U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch means the Justice Department must decide whether to re-prosecute the 75 year-old Pennsylvania Democrat on 11 counts of bribery, conspiracy and perjury that accused him of taking more than $50,000 in payoffs.

Gasch, who used virtually every option available in trying to prod the jury into agreeing on a verdict, reached the decision after the panel had deliberated for a total 12½ hours over three days.

He summoned the jury into the courtroom and asked foreman Daniel Robinson: "Mr. Foremean, does it appear that with further deliberations that this jury is likely to reach a verdict?"

"I'm sorry to say, your honor, that at this time I think it's impossible for this jury to reach a verdict," Robinson said.

The judge asked Robinson whether the "climate would change" if the jury rested until Monday. After returning to seclusion to discuss that option with his weary-looking peers, the foreman said he also felt that option would be unproductive.

Gasch then declared: "It is with the utmost reluctance that I am forced to declare a mistrial in this case."

Flood, looking grim and sheltered by his lawyers, refused to comment because his case is still pending as a result of the uncertainties created by the mistrial.

Gasch would only say, as he hurried out of court, that he was disappointed the jury had been unable to render a decision one way or the other.

Flood's chief defense attorney, Axel Kleiboemer, told reporters: "I'm disappointed in the sense that I looked forward to the acquittal of my client."

In failing to reach a verdict, the jury did not find convincing enough the testimony of six prosecution witnesses who testified they gave money or stock directly to the congressman from 1971 to 1976 in return for the benefit of his influence as chairman of a key House Appropiations subcommittee.

The flamboyant congressman with the waxed mustache emerged from the courthouse with a broad smile and read this brief statement to reporters:

"I regret that the jury was unable to reach a unanimous verdict of acquittal in its deliberations. At this very moment, I maintain my innocence of any wrong doing on the charges which were considered against me. I have no further comment."

He refused to respond to questions about why he elected to not testify in his own defense and about whether he expects a second trial.

---Naval Blockade---

By MARILYN T. ODCHIMAR

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — Warning it will not become "the wastebasket of Asia," the Philippines ordered a massive naval blockade of its western coasts Saturday to prevent the arrival of more shiploads of Vietnamese refugees.

Navy chief Rear Adm. Ernesto Ogbinar said he had ordered a task force of ships, planes and marines to blockade more than 190,000 square miles of western coast and coastal waters to "prevent the entry of refugees."

The government toughened its stand on the entry of refugees after two ships carrying 2,000 Vietnamese slipped into a remote central Philippine island and put 604 people ashore before fleeing to the South China Sea.

Their illegal entry followed the arrival in Manila Bay Dec. 27 of the Hong Kong freighter Tung An packed with more than 2,000 Vietnamese seeking asylum.

Denied landing permission, the refugees are still stranded in the bay awaiting resettlement in third countries.

Officials said the blockade was mounted because of "the alarming" increase in arriving refugees in recent weeks.

Record Export

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Exports of flue-cured tobacco during 1978 reached 624 million pounds, an increase of 40 million pounds over the record established in 1974, tobacco export officials announced Saturday.

Joe R. Williams, president of Tobacco Associates, Inc., the farmer-financed export promotion organization, said the price paid for the tobacco also exceeded the $1 billion mark for the first time in history. The total paid for the tobacco was $1,022,568,000.

Williams said record exports were largely due to increased exports to the European Economic Community, especially the United Kingdom, Ireland, and France. He said exports were also increased substantially to Denmark, Finland, Spain, Taiwan, and Pakistan.

Factors contributing to the increases, Williams said, were the high quality of the tobacco, a decrease in the stocks of quality tobacco, and agressive selling on the part of exporters.

School Board Meets Monday

The proposed merger of Pitt County and Greenville Schools, a school law review, budget-finance items, and a review of self-study materials are on the agenda for the meeting of the Greenville Board of Education Monday, Feb. 5.

The meeting, to be held at 8 p.m. at Wahl-Coates School, is the informational meeting of the board to be followed by the board's action meeting on Monday, Feb. 19.

Tardif Performed At Teng Gala

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

"It was a frantic rush" pianist Paul Tardif commented, referring to the last minute call he received to perform in the Monday evening, January 29 gala reception for visiting Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-peng.

The entertainment gala for China's head of state was hosted by President and Mrs. Carter and featured a showcase of American entertainers.

"Nicholas Perrito, the musical director of the Kennedy Center Orchestra, asked his musical contractor to ask me to come to Washington immediately," Tardif explained.

Tardif, a member of the piano faculty of the School of Music at East Carolina University, noted "I've worked with Perrito before, and he obviously felt I could fill the bill as pianist with the orchestra on short notice, since I can play most any kind of music from ragtime to pop to classics."

Nevertheless, Tardif said it was a situation that required deadline preparation in order for it all to go smoothly. "When I got to Washington, I didn't know what I'd be playing or under what conditions. We rehearsed for 14 hours in the period of a day and a half."

Tardif, as piano player with the orchestra, had two solo spots — one during the performance of Aaron Copland's "Rodeo" danced by the Joffrey Ballet Company; and in one of the musical selections from a segment of "Eubie," a current Broadway musical with an all-black cast.

In addition to the Kennedy Center Orchestra, the Joffrey Ballet Company, and the cast of "Eubie," others summoned to perform included members of the Harlem Globe Trotters, Dick Cavett, Shirley MacLaine, and John Glenn.

Other than the President and Mrs. Carter, the by invitation only audience numbered many public notables — Vice President and Mrs. Mondale, Elizabeth Taylor Warner, Ted Kennedy, Ed Muskie and many others.

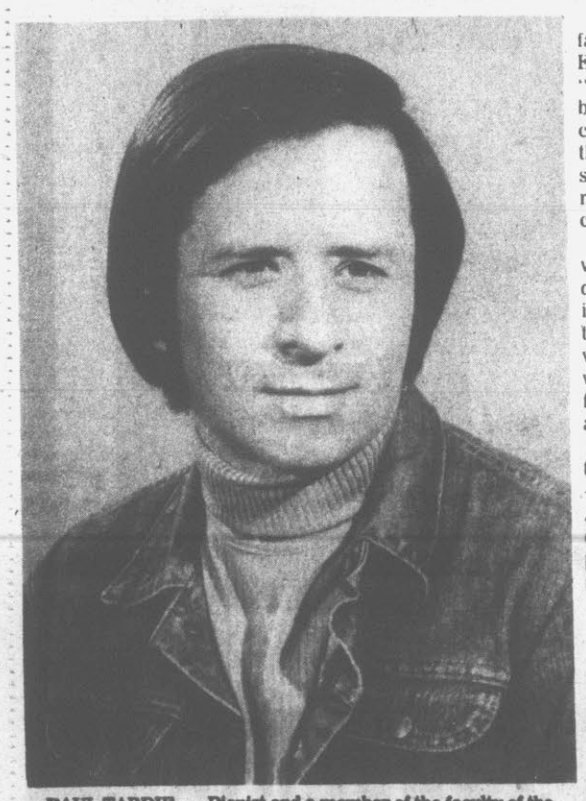

"When I left Greenville I didn't realize it would be such a big affair," Tardif commented. "But I was later told that the Teng reception gala perhaps reached the largest TV audience in broadcast history. It was shown live worldwide, which means literally millions of people had the chance to see it."

A native of Buffalo, New York, Tardif received his formal piano training at the Eastman School of Music, and has been on the ECU faculty since 1971.

In the past several years, the young pianist-teacher has received considerable critical acclaim, particularly for his interpretations of piano music of 19th and 20th century composers.

Highlights among his achievements have been a successful tour of Poland for the U.S. State Department; recipient of a Fulbright Grant for study in Munich, Germany; a first-prize winner in the prestigious Alfredo Casella Competition; and he has also been awarded an Artist's Diploma from the Salzburg, (Austria) Mozarteum.

In addition to numerous local recitals and performances, Tardif has performed with symphony orchestras and earlier this month was invited to play a solo recital at the N. C. Museum of Art, Raleigh.

Another Round For ERA

By GENE WANG

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Despite three previous rejections in the General Assembly, legislation to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment in the General Assembly, will be introduced this week in the Senate.

Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, says he will file the proposal Monday but he admits it faces a tought fight.

"The problem's in the Senate," said Lawing, the chamber's president pro tem. "If we can get it passed there, we can get it through the House."

While the Senate confronts the question of the ERA, the House will wrap up action on a proposal to raise the ceiling on the amount small loan companies can lend from $1,500 to $3,500.

The bill received tentative approval Friday in the House but was held over for final action Monday after opponents called it "insidious." It must also be approved by the Senate before becoming law.

The ERA bill will be introduced on the heels of proposals for a statewide referendum on ratification and a proposal for an amendment to the state constitution barring sex discrimination.

Rep. John Jordan, D-Alamance, an opponent of ERA, proposed the non-binding advisory referendum last week, while Rep. Vernon James, D-Pasquotank, proposed the change to the state constitution.

ERA supporters said last week they had commitments for support from 22 of the 50 members of the Senate, and another two or three were undecided. They asked Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. to help win the needed votes and predicted easy passage in the House.

While ERA and the small loan proposal were the dominant legislative issues, attention of the members also focused last week on two other matters — the selection of a new president for the state community college system and the appointment of Sen. Larry Leake, D-Buncombe, to a vacancy caused by the death of Sen. I.C. Crawford.

The state Board of Education voted to select Larry Blake, president of a community college in Canada, to head the state system despite a strong lobbying effort by former Gov. Robert Scott.

Scott openly sought the post and when reports of Blake's selection by a nominating committee leaked out, the Senate quickly passed a resolution encouraging the board to choose qualified North Carolinians for executive level posts in the state education system.

While the political battle between Blake and Scott supporters was continuing, Rep. Allen Barbee, D-Nash, introduced legislation requiring legislative confirmation for the job, a move that one legislative leader called "a rather pointed message."

While Scott was the apparent loser in the fight, political observers predicted Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. may have lost more, since Scott backers blamed the board's decision on Hunt's failure to intervene on behalf of the former governor.

Hunt may also have been scarred politically by the appointment of Leake to the Senate vacancy, although Leake was the nominee of a special selection committee from the four-county district.

Following Leake's selection last weekend, public discussion centered on a 1976 incident in which he was accused of making an obscene phone call to an Asheville teenager. Leake pleaded guilty to making an annoying phone call, a lesser offense, and called the incident a error in intelligence rather than morals.

However, some Hunt opponents claimed the governor chose Leake, the president of the state Young Democrats Club, because Leake is an ERA supporter while Crawford, who died of a heart attack, was an opponent.

SORRELLS GROVE, N. C. (AP) — Residents of this small Wake County community near Morrisville have raised more than $8,000 to help 2-year-old Scotty Holsclaw in his battle against leukemia.

Scotty, who will be 3 in May, was found to have leukemia, a disease of the blood, while a patient at Duke Medical Center for treatment of persistent colds, sore throats and ear infections.

Man Charged In Family Murder

SLAIN FAMILY — This family portrait shows three of the four persons slain in Columbia, S. C., Friday. They are Dr. James R. Clark, 41; his wife, Yvonne, 38 and their daughter, Yanola, 7. Also murdered was Mrs. Clark's mother. (AP Laserphoto)

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — Cyrus E. Allen, wanted in the quadruple slayings of a prominent Columbia doctor and his family, was arrested, Saturday in Atlanta, Ga., at the home of a friend.

Atlanta Lt. W.K. Perry said Allen, 60, offered no resistence when police picked him up about 11 a.m.

He is wanted for the murders of Dr. James R. Clark, 41, and three members of his family including Allen's estranged wife, Vivian Allen, 57, who was Clark's mother-in-law.

Allen was taken before a superior court judge in Atlanta and waived extradition, Perry said.

He was arrested just after six officials from Columbia arrived to help Atlanta police in the stake-out of the house, Perry said.

Allen is charged in the Friday shooting deaths of Clark, his wife, Yvonne, 38, and their daughter, Yanola, 7, as well as Mrs. Allen.

Mrs. Allen was Mrs. Clark's mother, and Allen was Mrs. Clark's stepfather.

Another Clark daughter, Ylida, about 18-months-old, survived the shootings. The baby was found in the bathroom, where police think she may have been put by Mrs. Clark when the shooting began.

Minor Damage

A building located off Memorial Drive, formerly the Pitt County Memorial Hospital, sustained minor damage due to fire and smoke Friday, according to Fire Chief Jenness Allen. The three-story building is presently being renovated for future office space.

The fire occurred at 1:58 p.m. while workers were using a welding torch to cut through pipes in a section of the building. Apparently, sparks from the torch went through a nearby wall into an adjoining room where janatorial supplies were being stored, Allen said.

The fire was extinquished at 2:39 p.m.

No injuries were reported, and no estimate of damages have been made at this time, Allen added.

Six Killed

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Six members of the United Nations peace-keeping forces in southern Lebanon were killed and three others wounded Saturday in a clash with Palestinian infiltrators and the crash of a Norwegian rescue helicopter, a U.N. spokesman reported.

The spokesman said Fijian troops of the U.N. peace force, "trying to prevent the penetration of Palestinian elements into the area under their control, had two men killed and three wounded.

"A Norwegian helicopter, which was sent to evacuate the wounded, crashed due to a technical failure and its crew of four were killed," the spokesman said.

Women's Conference

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Calls for increased union organization, repeal of the right-to-work law and establishment of a "good ole girl" network came out of the first statewide conference for females in low-paying, low-prestige jobs Saturday.

Nearly 200 women from 68 North Carolina cities and towns went to A&T State to confer, identify problems in their working world and possible ways to solve them.

Low wages and the lack of equal pay for comparable work were two of the biggest complaints.

"I'm ready to fight the damn thing," said Sally Alvarez of Greensboro of the right-to-work law. "All that law does is give you the right to starve."

She said the non-union textile mill for which she works does not pay an adequate living wage. "Union organization in my mind is clearly the way for working women in this state."

Wilbur Hobby, state president of the AFL-CIO, said in response to Ms. Alvarez's complaints that it was a "costly, uphill battle to try and prevail upon the 5½ million people in this state to take away what they think is someone's right to work."

The conference was aimed specifically at the state's "blue and pink collar" workers. These women make up 80 percent of the workforce and are employed in clerical, factory, sales and service occupations.

Among the complaints were fear of being penalized for speaking up about working conditions, a lack of job improvement opportunities and few adequate daycare facilities.

The women also listed as a problem the lack of a support network among women comparable to the "good ole boy system."

Nationally, the average working woman gets 59 cents for every dollar earned by a man, according to Elizabeth Koontz, chairman of the National Commission on Working Women.

In North Carolina, the working woman gets 64 cents to the man's dollar, she said.

Melodic Tribute

NEW YORK (AP) — To the lilting melody of "Sweet Georgia Brown" — the tune he used for political rally exits — family, friends and political foes offered a last tribute to Nelson A. Rockefeller.

Rockefeller, a four-time governor of New York who three times failed to gain the presidency, was eulogized Friday in a memorial service attended by 2,500 invited guests, including President and Mrs. Carter.

Jazz musician Lionel Hampton, who provided musical support for many of Rockefeller's rallies and campaigns, set another tone; performing the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" and a foot-tapping version of "Sweet Georgia Brown."

The music echoed gently through Riverside Church, a Gothic edifice built largely with Rockefeller money. President Carter's head bobbed to the music and many feet tapped quietly.

Other dignitaries at the hour-long service included former President Gerald Ford; Lady Bird Johnson, widow of former president Lyndon B. Johnson; Vice President and Mrs. Walter F. Mondale; Chief Justice Warren Burger; more than 70 members of Congress; and representatives of more than 70 nations.

Tentative Approval Given Loan Limit Bill

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state House gave tentative approval Friday to a bill that would raise the limit on loans by consumer finance companies.

The approval came on a 65-34 vote, however, with one opponent saying the bill would encourage people to go further into debt.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Jim Morgan, D-Guilford, would raise the limit on loans by finance companies from $1,500 to $3,500. It also calls for extending the maximum repayment period from 48 months to 61 months.

Rep. Ruth Cook, D-Wake, said the bill would allow loan-company customers to go deeper into debt with bigger loans and high interest.

Mrs. Cook attempted unsuccessfully to amend the bill in the House Banking Committee. Her amendment called for lowering the interest rates — which currently are 36 percent on the first $300 and 18 percent on the remainder — to 30 percent for the initial rate with a 12 percent limit on amounts above $1,500.

But Morgan said the amendment would make money less available to borrowers. He said the higher limit was needed so people wouldn't have to get loans from two or more companies and thus pay the higher rate on the first $300 on each loan.

In other legislative developments Friday:

Equal Rights

Rep. Vernon James, D-Pasquotank, filed an amendment to the North Carolina Constitution that would prohibit discrimination on the basis of sex and thus give the state its own equal rights amendment.

If approved by the General Assembly, the amendment would go to North Carolina voters.

James said his proposed amendment was not intended to block or support efforts to get the Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution ratified here.

A state constitutional amendment would leave the enforcement of equal rights with the state instead of the federal government, James said.

James voted against the ERA in 1977, but said he is uncommitted on the controversial amendment this session.

Elections

Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, filed a bill that would prohibit any state or local elected official from running for a different office unless his or her own term was expiring at the same time.

Lawing said it was not aimed at blocking any potential candidates in the 1980 elections and would not affect elected officials whose term was expiring and wanted to seek re-election or election to a different office.

Farm Forecast

Legislators were told Friday that while gross agriculture income is expected to be slightly higher in North Carolina this year, farmers probably will earn a smaller net income.

And W.D. Toussaint, head of the economics department at North Carolina State University, told the Senate Economy Committee the state's tobacco crop is likely to suffer from a reduced quota and higher production costs. But he said growers will continue to see high quality leaf.

Toussaint said that because of inflation and higher production costs, "net income from farming will be down in 1979 and stable relative to 1979 or slightly up in 1980."

News Briefs

No Increase In Abortions Noted

ATLANTA (AP) — The number of self-induced or illegal abortions has not increased with federal restrictions on abortion funding, the national Center for Disease Control reports.

The CDC said it began a hospital survey in October 1977 after regulations were issued allowing Medicaid funds only for abortions necessary to save a woman's life.

Results of the survey, involving 3,157 cases of abortion-related complications, were reported Friday in a weekly Morbidity and Mortality Report.

Only 10 cases were related to illegal or self-induced abortions, the CDC said. "None of these 10 complications occurred in women reported to be a Medicaid recipient," the study said. "No abortion deaths related to either illegal or legal abortions were detected through the hospital surveillance."

James Adams Acquitted

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Johnston County man was acquitted Friday on charges of murdering two men and seriously injuring four others when he drove his truck through the parking lot of a New Hill tavern last Aug. 16.

James Carl Adams Jr., 28, of Princeton sat impassively as the verdict was announced. But his father, James Carl Adams Sr., and his two older sisters, Jean Wiggs and Rose Edwards, all of Princeton, burst into tears.

Adams was acquitted by a Wake Superior Court jury on charges of murdering Dale Gordon Logue of Moncure and David John Simpson of Raleigh. The jury deliberated 45 minutes before reaching its verdict.

All Uranium Recovered

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — The FBI said Friday that all the uranium taken from a General Electric plant in an alleged $100,000 extortion scheme has been recovered.

Herber Monahan, special agent in charge of the FBI office in Charlotte, said checks made at the GE plant confirmed that the substance recovered following the arrest of David Learned Dale, 39, Thursday was low-grade radioactive material.

Claims Chines Crossed Border

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam says China sent its soldiers into Vietnam again and attacked a sugar mill in a northern border province, wounding an undisclosed number of workers and destroying several houses.

The Vietnamese news agency said the Chinese crossed the border early Friday and fired machine guns at a mill in Cao Bank Province, 124 miles northeast of Hanoi.

Vietnam already has protested three alleged "Chinese hostile actions" this week, filing formal notes with the Chinese Embassy in Hanoi.

Avows Tito Not Remarried

TRIESTE, Italy (AP) — Yugoslav border officials barred a truck carrying newspapers that reported 86-year-old President Tito had married a pop singer. Yugoslavia says the report is false.

The newspaper, Il Piccolo, was intended for distribution Friday to Italian-speaking residents of Istria, in Yugoslavia.

Il Piccolo referred to an article in an Austrian newspaper saying that Tito, who divorced his wife Jovanka last June, had married Gertruda Munetic, a singer in her 30s, last month.

Labels N.C. As Repressive

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Two U.S. Congressmen said Friday that the Wilmington 10 case has caused the United States to be listed by Amnesty International as a politically oppressive nation.

Reps. Don Edwards, D-Calif., and John Conyers, D-Mich., spoke at a news conference called by the North Carolina Alliance Against Racial and Political Repression to commemorate the third anniversary of the imprisonment of the Rev. Ben Chavis. Chavis is the only member of the group of nine men and one woman still in prison.

Gov. Jim Hunt reduced the sentences of the Wilmington 10 last January, allowing all but Chavis to be paroled.

Edwards and Conyers, along with officials of the Alliance, planned to meet with Chavis later in the day at the Orange County prison unit, where he is being held.

Edwards, sitting in front of a large poster that pictured Chavis behind bars and read "Free the Wilmington 10," said the Wilmington 10 case has been a source of embarrassment to the United States.

"Amnesty International, the Nobel-prize winning group for peace, has just listed for 1978 the countries who are oppressors all over the world," he said. "I regret to say that on page 138 the United States is listed in the same crowd. And why is the United States listed as an oppressor? Chiefly because of two North Carolina cases — the Charlotte 3 and the Wilmington 10."

Edwards, chairman of the House Judiciary Subcommittee on Civil and Constitutional Rights, said the federal government has had to intervene in the Wilmington 10 case because of mistakes made in the trial.

"Take the conservative position and just look at the law," Edwards said. "There was a massive miscarriage of justice. The state of North Carolina made a tremendous mistake, and it should be rectified.

"The Justice Department has filed an amicus brief (friend-of-the-court brief) listing thousands of errors connected with the trial of the Wilmington 10," he added. "We cannot rest until this matter is resolved. We are calling on the Justice Department to help the Wilmington 10 get a new trial."

The Justice Department filed a friend-of-the-court brief in federal court in Raleigh last November. The 89-page document, filed by the department's civil rights division, said there was evidence that the group did not get a fair trial.

Conyers, chairman of a subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee, said Chavis is not an isolated example of "racial and political injustice in this country."

"You can come to the state of Michigan," he said, "I can produce for you some cases that are so unjust...we could form 20 more committees to work for them.

Conyers, saying he has been working for a pardon for the Wilmington 10 since 1976, said he plans to continue to his efforts to get the group exonerated.

"The point is not how long we will keep doing what we're doing. Right now we're doing everything legally and governmentally possible. We are pushing for a pardon of 10 innocent people," he said.

Charlene Mitchell, national executive secretary for the Alliance, said the Wilmington 10 case showed "justice in this country is too often based on skin color or money."

"When President Carter wants to move, he can," Ms. Mitchell said. "He did that with Patty Hearst. He has got to move on the Wilmington 10 and Charlotte 3.

"We have half a million signatures calling for action on the Wilmington 10," she continued. "Still we have gotten nothing."

A spokesman for Hunt's office said Friday that Hunt would have no comment on the Alliance's action on behalf of the Wilmington 10.

"The governor is finished with the Wilmington 10," said Stephanie Bass, Hunt's deputy press secretary. "He felt the sentences were too harsh, so he reduced the sentences. But he felt they were guilty."

The Wilmington 10 were convicted of arson and conspiracy in connection with the burning of a grocery store during a week of racial unrest in Wilmington in 1971.

Exciting Pitt County Growth

The year 1978 was a good one for Pitt County in attracting new industry and encouraging expansion of existing ones.

There were three additional industries announced and major plant expansions at two industries already located in the county.

The new investment will be $18 million and over 640 jobs will be created, Bruce Beasley, Jr., chairman of the Pitt Development Commission said.

He sad that 17,409 new jobs were added in North Carolina in new industries and expansions, and 2,490 of these were in Eastern North Carolina.

Pitt County attracted nearly 20 percent of the new industrial jobs in the east.

He also cited the fact that there are 6,404 industrial employees in the county in the first quarter of 1978.

Citing the 4.3 percent unemployment rate for the county, Beasley said "our concern is trying not to grow so fast that we get a case of indigestion."

Other factors are accompanying the industrial growth, including the rapid enlargement of Pitt Memorial Hospital, a home building surge and construction of Carolina East Mall.

It has taken a lot of hard work by many people over several decades which allows us today to cite such exciting economic developments for Pitt County.

We can and will do more, and we need to continue the kind of positive economic growth in Pitt County which will benefit all our citizens.

Livestock A Healthy Diversification

It is fitting that there is such a group and outstanding work is being recognized.

Production of livestock is most important to the economy of our area. The livestock industry provides a market for corn and other grains, and the production of hogs, beef and other meat products can be profitable for the farmer.

Livestock production is a healthy diversification for area farms, and it is encouraging that the industry is organized and active in Pitt County.

"What! Me MELT?" cried Frosty. "Why, I'm just getting my second North wind!"

Lodges For State Parks?

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Political clout of North Carolina's established resorts has — at least temporarily — killed one of the bright ideas developed by planners of the state's park system.

Opposition from the N.C. Travel Council caused removal from a five-year-plan of development a suggestion that the state build vacation lodges at state parks and lease them to private operators.

The object, according to Howard Lee, secretary of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, was to provide recreational retreats for middle income people.

A main lodge, cabins, and motel-type housing located in areas where state park facilities would provide swimming, boating, fishing, horseback riding and other sports activities would open opportunities for those who otherwise couldn't afford the fun of the state's plush private resorts.

Other states, some close enough for Tar Heels to take advantage of the facilities (Virginia, West Virginia) have these resorts.

But Lee is not ready to abandon the notion completely. He plans to push for one resort development in the western part of the state as a demonstration of how the proposal would work to advantage of citizens, make money for the leasing firm, and not drain customers from the more expensive private retreats.

The Future

More and more North Carolinians are coming to realize that the state's beauty, open spaces, clean air and water — the environment — are a major attraction to present record growth in economic development.

But will such growth without regard for that environment destroy the very attraction which makes the state so desirable?

Even hardnosed businessmen are beginning to recognize that the state's environment is our "capital" and you don't spend capital to keep making dollars because then your "base" is gone.

BILL NOBLITT

Howard Lee believes this growing realization in the business community means that adequate environmental protection is possible through a cooperative approach involving state government, business leaders and local governments.

But the new ingredient he feels is necessary is to forecast what environmental problems will be created by particular types of growth, and work to solve them ahead of time. "We've got to become offensive in terms of predicting where and when problems will occur, and respond ahead of time rather than after a crisis has developed," Lee says.

Retired

They say Leo Jenkins retired as chancellor at East Carolina University. So, he is inflation advisor to Gov. Him Hunt, heads a development team in the Department of Commerce aimed at growth for small towns and rural areas, does the daily editorial comment and hosts a weekly talk show on a Washington (N.C.) television station, and still travels the state extensively for both fun and his projects.

Movie Time

A familiar face from the administration of President Lyndon Johnson caused a stir in Raleigh the other day. Jack Valenti, chief of the Motion Picture Producers Association visited Gov. Jim Hunt to talk about the state's quiet campaign to start attracting movie-making companies. The state's travel and tourism shop is already working on the project, pulling together information on film sites, accommodations, and ways to promote the business.

Sunday Morning Notes

It was $234.

That might not seem too bad for a house in this time of soaring electric rates, but Patsy knew that her family had been carefully conserving electricity.

She studied the bill and found that electrical usage was only $68 for the month. The big difference came in the water bill. It was $168.

Since the water bill normally ran only $4 or $5 per month she made a quick trip to Greenville Utilities.

It was finally determined that a new water meter had been installed during the month, bringing about a false reading.

The monthly utilities bill was adjusted to $72.

Tuned In On Deaths

By JACK STILLMAN
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — A small, inexpensive publication printed once a week in a basement room at the national Center for Disease Control provides the only official and up-to-the-minute report on the state of the nation's health.

Physicians, journalists and a broad spectrum of consumers such as coffin manufacturers, aspirin makers, pharmaceutical salesmen and travel agents read it avidly.

It is the 26-year-old MMWR — the Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report, published by the CDC's Bureau of Epidemiology and mailed every Friday to 85,000 subscribers.

The 12-page MMWR provides technical but fascinating accounts of obscure medical phenomenon. A recent item told of three Colorado women who were poisoned by a common herb used as a folk method for inducing abortion. Another explained how 13 Alaska natives were stricken with trichinosis after eating Alaskan black bear meat prepared in a wok.

Other items touch on outbreaks in other nations of dangerous diseases such as cholera, smallpox or yellow fever — diseases which the CDC's medical technicians identify and study in sealed laboratories.

The staple MMWR features, however, are the gray columns of statistics that chart the activities of various diseases, from measles to tuberculosis, typhoid fever and influenza.

A key section is Table No. 4, which appears every week on page 8. This table lists the number of deaths from all causes in 121 U.S. cities, as reported by state and local health authorities. Only pneumonia and influenza-related deaths are cited separately.

"It is the only summary of death matter on a weekly basis available in the United States," said Dr. Michael Gregg, deputy director of the epidemiology bureau and editor of the MMWR. "What it tells you is the num-

THE INSIDE REPORT

Carter, Ike And Kennedy

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The bland worldview of President Carter and his closest aides, critically important in shaping this nation's policies, produced private amusement inside the White House when they unearthed John F. Kennedy's first State of the Union speech.

Provoked by comparisons between Carter's prosaic homilies and Kennedy's call to greatness, the Carter aides had turned to the newly inaugurated JFK's message to Congress in 1961, and were rewarded with a few chuckles. Kennedy's warnings of parlous times ahead, they felt, were absurdly inappropriate then and remain alarmist even today.

Carter's recent State of the Union speech was a product of the mindset that belittled Kennedy rhetoric, far more than of the president's oratorical abilities or his speechwriters' talents. Jimmy Carter sees a relatively stable world, as it was perceived in Dwight D. Eisenhower's day, not the place of danger demanding heroism painted by John F. Kennedy.

This is reflected in not only the president's laudable restraint on social programs but also his questionable view of a world still safe for Americans. Carter's State of the Union intentionally ignored rising Soviet military power, Soviet adventurism in Africa and the Middle East and the frightening implications for this country of the crisis in Iran. These omissions were not overt coverup but, more alarmingly, a true picture of how the president looks at the world.

Early in the tedious process of preparing the Jan. 23 address to Congress, Carter's aides engaged in prolonged study of past State of the Union messages — especially Kennedy's first, delivered Jan. 30, 1961, 10 days after his inauguration. Since there is no constitutional requirement for a message from a newly inaugurated president, the Carter men wondered, why deliver it? Carter himself skipped the chance in 1977.

The Carter aides viewed with amused surprise Kennedy's 1961 opening: "I speak today in an hour of national peril and national opportunity. Before my term has ended, we shall have to test anew whether a nation organized and governed such as ours can endure. The outcome is by no means certain." The peroration of 18 years ago provided equal mirth at the White House: "Our problems are critical. The tide is unfavorable. The news will be worse before it is better." To Carter's young men, attending grade school at the time, 1961 was a time of peace and prosperity after eight years of Eisenhower. Kennedy's call for heroic action, they now believe, was a political ploy to stir the public's adrenalin. While in retrospect Kennedy's rhetoric may be interpreted today as an all too accurate prophecy, the White House shames it as pandering after votes.

"I suppose we could do that today," one Carter aide told us, "but it would be phony, and I don't even think it would be good politics." In short, the Carter White House recognizes no great peril facing this country; it assumes the American people perceive no such crisis.

In preparing the State of the Union speech, Carter aides recognized three distinct audiences: the public, the Congress and

Other Editors Say 'Stupid Mistake'

(Greensboro Daily News)

Out of all the dedicated citizens in Buncombe County, you'd think local Democrats would have been able to find someone better qualified than Larry B. Leake to replace the late Sen. I.C. Crawford.

Though he is president of the North Carolina Young Democrats Club, Leake also has the distinction of having been charged with making obscene phone calls to a high school girl two years ago. Leake entered a plea of no contest to a lesser charge, and was awarded a prayer for judgment continued, meaning that no sentence was given. In the past three years, Leake has also been handed five traffic violations, and recently required special permission to keep his driver's license.

Last weekend the 26th Senatorial Executive Committee chose Leake to fill Senator Crawford's seat. It's not entirely clear whether news of Leake's problems surfaced before or after his selection. But if the committee didn't know about them, it was deficient; if it did know, it was delinquent. Leake has indicated he made no attempt to hide his past.

Whatever the sequence involved, some desperate political scrambling has ensued, as you might imagine. Buncombe County's Democratic Party chairman accused Governor Jim Hunt and Madison County Democratic kingpin Zeno Ponder of having "engineered" the choice. Speculation has also centered on Leake's attractiveness to the Hunt wing of the party as a supporter of the Equal Rights Amendment (Crawford opposed it). The Governor's office has denied that the chief executive was directly involved in Leake's selection.

But the acute embarrassment of the incident is obvious. In advance of his swearing in Monday, Leake met for four hours in the Governor's office with high party and patronage chieftains in attendance. But since the executive committee's nomination is final, Leake could not be dissuaded from taking the post.

Senator Leake himself has admitted to having made a "stupid mistake". But the blunder belongs to his party, too.

40 Years Ago Today

Capt. F. W. Jacobs, superintendent of the Pitt County prison camp, said today he believed two convicts who escaped Thursday night had made their way out of this section.

The last definite trail seen by officials of the two escapees was in Pinetops, where they allegedly stole an automatic shotgun, abandoned the prison truck in which they had escaped and attempted to steal an automobile.

The two men had escaped in the truck after breaking the lock off the garage door. They had been assigned to kitchen duty washing dishes.

Greenville Sea Scouts, through their leader Charles Whedbee, have written Rep. Lindsay C. Warren asking him to use his influence to secure the necessary buoys, beacons and other equipment for marking the existing channel from Hardee's Creek to the Tar River bridge in Greenville.

The channel would be of use to the Sea Scouts' ship, William Pitt, as well as to other pleasure craft and any other boats not requiring more than a five-foot channel.

Strength For Today

THE WAY OF FAITH

What is salvation?

One of the simplest definitions is found in 1 Thessalonians 5:10. Paul says there that God has not appointed us unto wrath, but unto the obtaining of salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ who died for us, that whether we "wake or sleep we should live together with Him."

In other words, salvation is oneness with God. It involves belief, but it is more than belief. It is fellowship. Men and women are saved when their lives are no longer lived according to their own will, but according to the will of God. When every power is yielded to the use of the Most High, when every thought is brought into subjection to His providence, when every desire is mastered and disciplined by the higher desire to do the will of God — then and only then does a person experience the rewards of salvation.

We are to live with Him in the new, eternal dimension of life.

A Slugfest Between Brewers

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — In marketing circles, the figurative fistfight between Anheuser-Busch, the country's largest brewer, and Miller Brewing, the challenger, is considered one of the most direct slugfests ever.

Perhaps only out of a sense of what is proper, the leading citizens in any industry seldom fight it out in the town square. They settle for more subtle tatics, which leave the impression they are above it all.

But maybe the beer stakes are too high, because the two giants are swinging away at each other, and there's no question that each hopes to land a haymaker. That beer market is a lucrative one.

The United States has about 80 million beer drinkers, who consume more than 160 million barrels of brew in a year.

By 1985, a Wall Street research house believes, the number of beer drinkers will reach 89.4 million, their consumption 198.5 million barrels, or a per barrel average of 2.22, compared with 2.08 in 1977.

Any way you look at it, the market's a good one, and both Anheuser-Busch and Miller want a bigger share of it, even if they have to swing some heavy blows for it. Anheuser-Busch is the biggest. Miller is second.

One of the first encounters came when Miller, a subsidiary of Philip Morris, which also owns a cigarette company, began heavy promotions of its Lowenbrau beer, which many thought was imported.

They had good reason to so believe. The label looked the same, and the name Munich was prominent. But the product was made in the United States by Miller, which purchased rights from the German company.

Anheuser-Busch complained to the Federal Trade Commission that domestic Lowenbrau was not even the same beer as that which used to be sold under the imported Lowenbrau label.

Miller retaliated by announcing a new beverage, Gussie beer, presumably meant to irritate August Busch, III, the Anheuser-Busch chairman.

Anheuser-Busch publicized what it said were the natural ingredients and purity of its products, and disparaged additives Miller has been known to use.

Through its Lite Beer, Miller got the jump on Anheuser-Busch and other competitors for the low-calorie market.

But Anheuser-Busch entered the market with its Natural Light, a label that couldn't be overlooked by a nation increasingly conscious of ingredients. And then it emphasized the point by calling its new beer simply "Natural."

Anheuser-Busch called attention to other claims of purity.

It publicized its brown bottle as opposed to the clear glass used by Miller. "Brown bottles are beautiful, naturally," it advertised.

An ad claimed "a brown bottle can protect a beer that's made of all natural ingredients." If it weren't brown, light rays would damage the beer, it said.

Miller filed a complaint with the FTC this week to force Anheuser-Busch to halt this campaign, but that isn't likely to stop the battle.

Awareness Is Growing

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — While public awareness of the civil defense system remains shockingly low, Americans today favor increased efforts to protect the populace in the event of a nuclear attack.

When reminded or informed that Russia is spending many times as much as the U.S. in protecting its people from nuclear attack, 52 percent of persons interviewed say we should do more than we are presently doing. Two years ago, in late 1976, the comparable figure was 44 percent. Only 7 percent in the current survey say we should do less than at present, while 30 percent say we are doing "about the right amount."

Some civil defense experts, concerned over indications that the Soviet Union is conducting a massive program to protect its people and industry in the event of a nuclear attack, believe the U.S. has no alternative but to undertake an all-out civil defense program of its own. It is argued that the U.S. must do so to preserve the "balance of terror" which is the heart of the mutual deterrence doctrine.

Experts believe that the Russians have been building underground facilities since 1952 in an attempt to provide protection for virtually the entire population. It is pointed out that every industrial worker in Russia is required to take a 20-hour course in civil defense procedures. The Russian outlay for civil defense is believed to be several times the $80 million a year budgeted for the existing U.S. civil defense effort.

The Gallup Poll recently repeated a nationwide survey, first conducted in 1976, to learn what Americans know about the present civil defense program in the U.S., their state of preparedness in the case of attack and their views on ways to protect the populace.

The findings show the following:

*Nearly half (46 percent) of all persons interviewed said they did not know whether or not a civil defense organization exists in their communities. The figure is even higher among persons living in the nation's largest cities.

This figure matches the 1976 finding when 45 percent revealed an ignorance of whether or not there is a civil defense organization in their community.

*Only one in four (24 percent) say they know where the nearest publiic shelter, if any, is located. The figure is lower among inhabitants of large cities.

Again, the current finding is unchanged since 1976 when 74 percent could not say where the shelter nearest them was located.

*Although Americans reveal a lack of awareness regarding our civil defense system, considerable support is found for greater protection of the populace. About half the public (52 percent) think the U.S. should do more in this respect than we are now doing. Among the "aware groups" — those who know whether or not there is a civil defense organization in their communities or know where the nearest shelter is — support for greater protection is slightly higher.

*About one-third of Americans (35 percent) would favor having every new house built in the United States required to have a bomb shelter, with the federal government paying most of the costs. Predictably, the proportion in favor of this program — which is national policy in Switzerland — is higher among the aware groups.

The nationwide results remain unchanged since 1976 when 37 percent would have instituted such a requirement.

Here are the questions asked and the results by community or city size and by region, and the trends.

"Russia is said to be spending many times as much protecting its people from nuclear attack as the U.S. is spending. Do you think we should do more than we are doing, do less or do you think our present efforts are about right?"

It wasn't snowing at the time, and the judge added that he didn't expect it.

A hour later large snow flakes were swirling by the court room windows. Judge Allsbrook chuckled and acknowleged that he obviously wasn't a weather prognosticator.

The snow came down for awhile but didn't affect the roads in Pitt County too much, so court went on as scheduled.

Minnie Mae became jealous of a dog the family acquired and insisted on going along when the dog was walked at night.

The remarkable part though, was that Minnie Mae had given birth to 103 kittens before the Broaddrick's decided enough was enough. Minnie Mae was taken to be vet and fixed.

As I Recall It...

When Scott-Coltrane Alliance Became A Feud

By NOEL YANCEY

(Noel Yancey retired recently after 39 years of covering North Carolina news for the Associated Press. In this column, he retells some of the big stories he recalls.)

Kerr Scott was the most interesting and colorful governor that I can recall after covering 12 of the state's chief executives. Because he was always doing the unexpected, Scott was always creating news. One of the most interesting of the stories came when Scott fell out with Dave Coltrane who had been his closest associate at one time.

When Scott came to Raleigh in 1937 as commissioner of agriculture he brought Coltrane, an old college chum, with him as assistant commissioner. And after Scott was elected governor, he placed Coltrane in charge of the state Budget Office.

The parting of the ways came when Scott tried to get Hubert Olive of Lexington elected to succeed him as governor. In the Democratic primary of 1952, Scott went down the line for Olive, but Coltrane and some other top officials of the Scott administration backed William B. Umstead of Durham, the winner.

For Scott that was the last straw. He felt that Coltrane had been disloyal earlier when anti-Scott forces, who controlled the 1951 legislature, sought to strip Scott of his powers to control the state's contingency fund and the highway fund surplus. Scott charged that Coltrane had sat with a committee as these proposals were discussed and failed to tell Scott about it.

After the Umstead-Olive campaign, Scott swung the axe. He fired paroles boss Talmage C. Johnson and Motor Vehicles Commissioner Landon Rosser for supporting Umstead. Then he went after Coltrane. "Resign immediately," he wrote his budget boss.

But Coltrane had looked up the law. He found out that the budget appointment was for a definite period of years and that the appointee did not serve at the pleasure of the governor.

"You can't fire me," Coltrane replied. "I refuse to resign."

Whereupon, Scott proceeded to strip Coltrane of all his duties except for a few chores that were prescribed by law. For the next several months, Coltrane went to his office every day, but he had little to do. Each month he was on limited duty, he returned his salary check to the state auditor.

When Umstead took office, his first official act was to restore Coltrane to active duty, and later he appointed him to a full four-year term as budget officer.

Scott later was elected to the U.S. Senate. As for Coltrane, he was budget officer under Umstead and later under Gov. Luther Hodges until Hodges named him director of the Department of Administration. Under Gov. Terry Sanford, Coltrane served as chairman of the Advisory Budget Commission and as consultant to the governor on economy and efficiency in government. Finally Sanford named the old Scott antagonist as chairman of the state's Good Neighbor Council.

Meanwhile, the 1953 legislature amended the law so that budget officers would serve at the pleasure of the governor, and it passed an act directing the state auditor to return to Coltrane the pay checks he had refused to accept during the period he was on limited duty. This time, Coltrane accepted the checks.

Sportswriter Started As The Society Editor

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C. — Mary Garber has been a sportswriter since late in World War II, when a dearth of male staffers forced a sports editor to recruit women. "I'm probably the only sportswriter in the world who started as a society editor," smiles Garber, 62.

Although she always wanted "to go into newspaper work," covering the male-dominated world of sports wasn't what she'd had in mind. "At first, it was kind of hairy," recalls the former philosophy student, her eyes hard behind her horn-rimmed glasses. But as long as her beat remained high school sports and minor-league baseball, what discrimination she did encounter didn't interfere with doing her job.

Then she was assigned to cover a major college football game and found herself barred from the press box, relegated instead to an auxiliary area reserved for wives and children. "I was trying to cover the game," she says angrily, "while children were beating on the table and the wives were discussing recipes for what they were going to cook after the game. It was awful."

A letter from her newspaper to the president of the university quickly won Mary Garber a place in the press box. Not that a blow had been struck for women's rights; the issue was strictly one of freedom of the press. "I have been told," Garber notes with amusement, "that my editor said it wouldn't have made any difference if they'd sent a monkey."

Mary Garber's troubles performing her job didn't end there. Male sportswriters, a chummy lot, weren't particularly accepting of a woman in their midst. Regarded with condescension and annoyance, "kind of like when a little sister tags after you," it took years before the diminutive woman in the wool cap was treated as an equal. "I think women will always have to prove themselves," says Garber, who served as president of the Atlantic Coast sportswriters in 1977. "Women will feel they have to work a lot harder."

The fact that most athletes are males also creates special handicaps for a woman sportswriter. With increased coverage by radio and especially television, the nature of sportswriting itself changed around 1960, with more emphasis being placed on giving readers what the electronic media couldn't provide.

"You used to go to a game," recalls Mary Garber, "and just describe what happened." Now the press rushes to the locker rooms to fill out game stories with quotes from the participants. Until recently, those locker rooms were off-limits to women who, as the time to deadline ticked by, had to wait patiently until their male counterparts finished their interviews and the players could get showered, dressed, and come outside. Some teams now allow women into their locker rooms, a privilege Mary Garber, citing "old-fashioned" sensibilities, prefers not to accept.

Yet, for all the difficulties she encounters, the Winston-Salem Journal reporter readily admits, "I'm very very happy doing what I'm doing."

One reason is that through sportswriting she's able to dispel misconceptions which she's seen come back to haunt athletes in later life. Of the approximately 30,000 high school athletes she's watched over the years, Garber claims only eight have found a place in pro sports. "I think the cruelest thing in the world is the dream of pro ball," she maintains, "because your chance of success is so small."

The self-described tomboy, who used to play backyard football and field hockey, also believes sports has "a strong influence for good."

She speaks glowingly of attending an international track meet in Durham, North Carolina, several years ago at which athletes from round the world mingled with ordinary Americans, exchanging gifts, smiles, ideas. "To me," says Mary Garber, "that was one of the greatest things I've ever seen in my life."

As long as there are stories like that to tell, and "so many interesting people" in sports, Mary Garber intends to be there to write about them. Unless, of course, she falls prey to yet another prejudice. "I just hope they don't make me retire at 65," she says.

media commentators. Considering no better than a mixed appraisal possible from the commentators and conceding congressional reaction was hopeless, they aimed at the public. They believe they hit the bullseye.

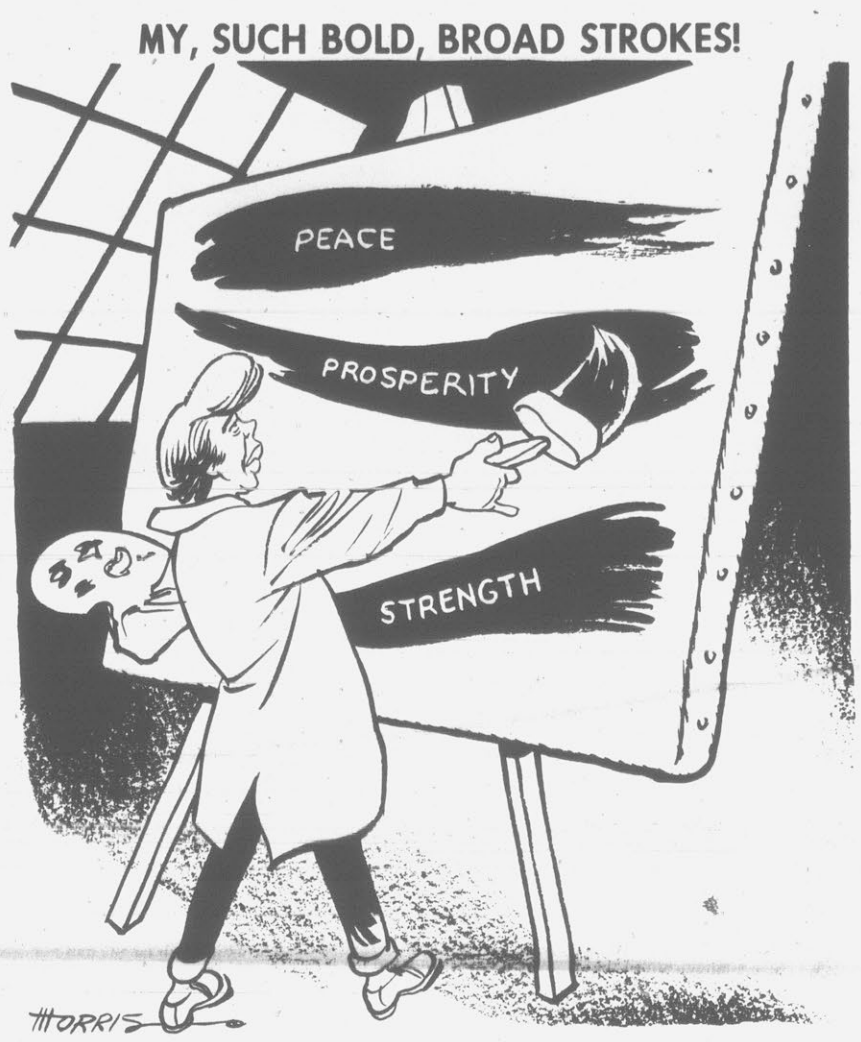

Calling for modest domestic goals and eschewing international alarms precisely fit today's public mood, the Carter men feel. As we reported last August, they see America trying to catch its breath — domestically and internationally and that means Eisenhower, not Kennedy.

This overlying political strategy has been obscured in backstage Washington conversation by peculiarities of the Carter presidency. His demoralized speechwriting team, decimated by resignations, scarcely sees or knows Carter and has no policymaking function.

Even if the speechwriters were closer to the president, the speech delivered Jan. 23 and those that follow would not markedly change. Carter himself is allergic to all efforts at eloquence, much less the challenging, hortatory prose of Jack Kennedy. "His crabbed little penmanship puts notes in the margin . like 'abbreviate,' 'condense,' 'cut this down,'" one frustrated writer confided to us.

What is really at stake is not Carter's prose, which will always be pedestrian, but the president's view of the world. Perhaps his use of Ike instead of JFK as model does fit the public's healthy new skepticism about the omnipotence of government.

But it may not at all fit the public's growing alarm about the shift in the world power balance toward Moscow. Viewing the world through Eisenhower's rather than Kennedy's eye may prove calamitous not only for the president but for the nation.

A Communication Gap That Keeps Growing

I read recently that every mother should devote at least two hours each day to communicating in a positive way with her children. Now, I have always tried to spend plenty of time with Meg, partly because it was the only way I could justify my other maternal shortcomings. When you've got a child who believes black bathtubs are the norm and safety pins are high fashion jewelry, you've got to make up for it in some way.

But lately communicating with Meg has become increasingly difficult. Not that she doesn't talk. She holds the record for longest monologue on one gulp of air. But Meg perceives the world in a somewhat unusual manner that continually dislocates the assumptions upon which normal adult communication rests. When I do try to enhance the quality of our relationship, I find that my efforts are never less than two steps behind whatever it is that is going on in her mind.

For instance, I thought it might help to start a meaningful dialogue if I asked her what she did at nursery school.

"Not much," she told me. "My lip hurt."

"I'm sorry. Did the cold weather make it split?"

"No, I fell on the sidewalk."

"Here?" I said, failing to detect any scrapes.

"No, when I was on my way to the campground."

"What campground?" I didn't remember her teacher mentioning any outings.

The one I went to with Aunt Marty and Uncle Brant."

I sighed. "Meg, you have never been camping."

"Yes, I have, and Uncle Brant built a big campfire," she said, throwing out her arms and widening her eyes for emphasis. "But Aunt Marty threw water on it. Uncle Brant got angry and chased her through the forest, but she dug a big hole to hide in."

Despairing of any other communication route, I decided to go along for the ride in this fantasy.

"Did Uncle Brant find her?"

"No. After she jumped in the hole, she taped it up."

Somehow I felt that the conversation had hopelessly derailed. I just sat there with my mouth open. Meg, on the other hand, didn't slow down a bit.

"That was before the Big Bad Wolf came along. Then Aunt Marty let us jump in with her because she is really a good aunt and didn't want us to be eaten. But that wolf growled so loud that Uncle Brant finally got angry, and he jumped out of the hole and shocked him."

I was intrigued in spite of myself. "How did he do that?"

"With a gun."

At that point I tuned out, but later I decided to try one more time. Meg was flailing across her bedroom floor on her stomach.

"I'm swimming in the ocean," she explained.

I crossed over the threshold to her room, but before I could say anything to her, she was pointing to my feet and shrieking. "Get off the water! You can't walk on water!"

Bundy Suggests Nation Requires A Reappraisal

(State Rep. Sam Bundy talked to the Major Benjamin May chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution in Farmville recently. February has been designated as American History Month by the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution and excerpts of Rep. Bundy's talk follow.)

Two years ago, 1976 in fact, we celebrated the 200th anniversary of the founding of the United States of America. Historians tell us that had it not been for patriotism exhibited in that era, we might not today be the great nation that we are. Patriots like Washington, Franklin, Jefferson, Adams and the untold number and unknown patriots of Valley Forge, Concord and Bunker Hill gave to this country what it desperately needed for the birth and formation of our nation. We are justifiably proud of the men and women who by their patiotism and sacrifice gave this nation its start. We need not recount here the bravery, the achievements, the sacrifices and suffering of those patriotic men and women. It is all a matter of record.

Since the founding of our nation and through the years thousands of patriotic men and women have paid the supreme sacrifice by the giving of their lives that this nation of ours could remain strong, and above all, free. What the patriots of the past have done stands as a memorial to themselves and is well known to all of us.

As we look back, all of this should revive in us a fresh and everlasting sense of patriotism, a new appreciation of and love for our country, a respect for the fundamental principles enunciated in the Declaration of Independence and repeated in our Constitution.

It should cause a reappraisal of our objectives as a people and nation. It should evoke a realization of the unique privilege which is ours of living in a country like the United States—even with all of its glaring faults and shortcomings—a willingness to appreciate and accept our responsibility to support it and most importantly a determination to do our utmost to correct its manifest errors.

I think we need a revival at this particular time in our history. Far too many of our people have forgotten, if they ever knew, what America stands for. The current generation of young people, and those to follow, must be made aware of their great heritage and their obligation to preserve it at all costs, or this country may go the way of many others which have flourished for a time and then vanished.

We must have an interest in a revival of patriotic fervor. First, because it is a matter of self-interest and survival; second, as an obligation to preserve and perpetuate a country and a form of goverment which our patriotic forbears forged out of years of privation and suffering. It is well for us to remember that they staked everything they had on the outcome of what they considered their fight for their rights. And, with right on their side, they had confidence and determination. Above all else, they had faith—faith in themselves, faith in their fellowman, faith in a Divine Providence and faith in their country. They humbly affirmed that faith in the last sentence of the Declaration of Independence in these words: "with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes and our sacred Honor". How many of us, do you suppose, would be willing to sign such a pledge today in order to save this country of ours?

To get a proper perspective of our country, it is helpful to review what has happened in a material way since the Constitution was ratified in 1788—just 190 years ago. Our population of about 2.5 million has grown to approximately 215 million. In 1788 there wasn't a paved road in the entire country. There was no railroad then. Today's railroad mileage equals that to the moon—250,000 thousand miles. And it is truly amazing how many things which we consider necessities did not even exist, even in imagination, seven generations ago. Then there was no telegraph, telephone, automobile, airplane, automatic refrigerator, radio, television, electric light. Even no football or basketball. We could go on and on. Many of these inventions actually have come within our lifetime, and most were made by Americans.

America is still the top place among nations, and has been since World War I. But today our position is being seriously challenged. Strong effort will be required to hold our place. We must not allow ourselves to relax for a moment. Our patriotic forbears had a decisive and determining part in the founding of our Nation. They did it against great odds. It is our duty as modern day patriots to preserve it. We owe it to ourselves— we owe it to our children and our grandchildren. We owe it to the memory of those who toil and sweat and suffering produced it and whose sacrifices have maintained it.

Let us then disprove the doomsayers by demonstrating a will, a determination and ingenuity in survival which will make the United States one exception in the history of nations—the history that records the average age of a civilization as being 200 years. Let us begin now to change direction.

What can we do, you ask? Where do we begin? The change must begin where every change begins—with the individual. It has been said: "I AM ONLY ONE—BUT I AM ONE. I CAN'T DO EVERYTHING, BUT I CAN DO SOMETHING, AND BY THE GRACE OF GOD I WILL DO WHAT I CAN DO."

Britain Ends Virginity Tests

By MICHAEL WEST
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Britain has ended virginity tests for Indian, Pakistani and Bangladesh women after lawmakers blasted the restrictive immigration procedure conducted by male doctors as "degrading," "monstrous" and "dreadful."

Immigration officials said the tests were performed on the Victorian notion that brides-to-be qualified as immigrants only if they were virgins. The tests were conducted under a law that allows entry to anyone engaged to marry someone in Britain.

Britain imposed strict quotas to curb immigration from its three former colonies in the face of clashes between Britons and immigrants. The government claims some would-be immigrants have used phony betrothal schemes to get around the quotas.

Home Secretary Merlyn Rees canceled the tests Friday, one day after a British newspaper disclosed that male doctors at London's Heathrow Airport were performing them.

The Guardian newspaper's report of the testing drew a formal protest from the Indian Embassy as well as protests from British lawmakers.

The newspaper reported the case of a 35-year-old Hindu schoolteacher from New Delhi who underwent such a test when she arrived at Heathrow last month to join her fiance here. She reportedly submitted to the test because she feared being sent back to India.

The paper quoted her as saying she was told to take off her clothes and a male doctor performed the examination. Her requests for a female doctor and a dressing gown to cover herself were both refused, the paper said.

The Home Office spokesman said virginity tests had been conducted "on rare occasions for several years," but he would not say whether any would-be immigrants had been rejected because of test results.

Between 1967 and 1976, the latest period for which official statistics are available, 2.1 million immigrants were admitted to Britain and 2.6 million people left the country.

British employers, particularly London Transport and the National Health Service, have brought in many Asians and others to fill numerous unpopular jobs such as transport workers and hospital porters.

Youth Legislative Event

RALEIGH — Approximately 400 young people will attend the 1979 Ninth Annual Youth Legislative Assembly to be held here March 9-11. The meeting will be held at the Royal Villa Hotel.

Delegates will participate in one of 12 different task forces on topics such as juvenile justice, state government reform and student rights.

Dudley Flood, assistant superintendent of the state Department of Public Instruction, will speak to the group during a banquet March 10.

All high school students are urged to register, but space is limited. The registration fee for youth is $37, which includes one lunch, one dinner, lodging for two nights, entertainment and conference materials. Registration for adults will be $67 for single occupancy and $47 for double occupancy.

The Assembly is sponsored by the Raleigh Youth Council and the state Youth Council, a division of the Department of Administration's Youth Involvement Office.

Deadline for registration is Feb. 16. For more information, call Pam Kohl, (919) 733-5966, or write Youth Involvement Office, Suite 115, Howard Bldg., 122 W. Lane St., Raleigh, N. C. 27611.

Joyce Daniels Is Chairman

Joyce Daniels, 4-H leader of the Simpson Pushers 4-H Club, is currently serving as the 1979 chairman of the Coastal Plains Development Association (CPDA) Youth Committee.

The CPDA is a ten county organization that is active in cultural, community, business and youth developments within the northeastern North Carolina area. Committee chairmen and members meet periodically to plan various projects, and an annual meeting is held in Greenville to review the year's work and present awards for outstanding achievement.

Miss Daniels has been a 4-H leader for five years, and she has also been active in other fields, including membership in the Phillipi Missionary Baptist Church in Simpson; as president of Pitt County Chapter of Concerned Women for Justice; and as a Pitt County registrar.

She is employed as a CIDA counselor for the Pitt County Manpower Program.

Tractors Gather Near Washington

FAITH, HOPE AND PARITY — John T. Whitford, a Craven Co., N.C. farmer, listens as he and other farmers discuss problems facing the nation's farmers. (AP Laserphoto)

By SONJA HILLGREN
UPI Farm Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The last portion of a farmers' tractorcade, delayed by foul weather, rolled toward Washington Saturday to rejoin its own caravan and then link up Monday with two others in a march on the Capitol to call for higher farm prices.

All 1,500 farmers in the group decided to stay in the Frederick, Md., area, 40 miles from Washington, for the time being rather than camp out closer to the city. The group encountered wind-driven snow squalls and ice while crossing the Appalachian Mountains in Western Maryland, delaying its arrival.

Two other American Agriculture Movement tractorcades, which reached the Washington outskirts by Wednesday night, waited at a pair of Virginia parks, one south and one west of the city.

Farmers driving an estimated 2,000 tractors and other vehicles set out Jan. 15 from several locations in the middle of the continent, with plans to drive into Washington Monday morning. Others arrived by plane.

Leaders said they expected more than the estimated 30,000 farmers who lobbied in Washington last year.

The second annual AAM trek to Washington is intended to persuade Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland to implement fully the 1977 farm law by raising government loans for farmers' crops to 90 percent of parity.

Parity is achieved when the price of farm products keeps pace with the cost of other goods and services.

"There's a determination that something has to be done to alleviate the crisis in rural America," said Lee Scheufler of Sterling, Kan. "They're concerned about their communities ... about losing their farms. It's extremely frustrating."

At January prices, the loan rate and price floor for corn would be $3.53 a bushel, if the AAM got its way. The current loan rate is $2.00 a bushel; farmers' average corn prices last month were $2.10 a bushel.

Police warned thousands of commuters to brace for heavy traffic and delays Monday caused by addition of the slow, lumbering vehicles to the usual congested traffic flow.

John Eberle, of York, N.D., estimated it would take all morning for tractors to parade into the city.

"They are not all maneuverable," he said. "They are certainly big and clumsy."

He spent Saturday messaging sympathizers throughout the nation to counteract reports that police were restricting their movement.

Police were "extremely cooperative," Eberle said. "I think they're being downright friendly."

Governors Take Issue On Revenue Proposal

By DONALD H. MAY

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Governors' Association took issue Saturday with a congressional proposal to end federal revenue sharing to state governments.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of Congress' Joint Economic Committee, introduced legislation this past week to halt the aid, saying it would save $2.28 billion in 1980.

His proposal would not affect federal revenue sharing to local governments.

Gov. Richard Snelling of Vermont wrote Bentsen that if Congress wants to trim federal spending it should start by reforming some of the federal government's 492 separate, special purpose grant programs for states and localities rather than with state revenue sharing.

Snelling is chairman of the association's Committee on Executive Management and Fiscal Affairs. His letter was made public Saturday.

"The fiscal problems of the federal government, with its $532 billion projected 1980 budget, have not been caused by the $2 billion state revenue sharing program, the cost of which has hardly changed in the last eight years," Snelling wrote.

"Rather the problems are caused by the inability of Congress, with its more than 300 committees and subcommittees, to control hundreds of billions of dollars in narrow, categorical grant programs, each supported by special interest groups and federal bureaucracies.

"The unnecessary administrative costs of these programs alone far outweigh the cost of the entire revenue sharing program, and it is these costs with which, as you said, the American people are fed up."

The governors have been urging the president and Congress to consolidate more of those programs and make them more efficient.

The president's budget calls for $83 billion in grants to state and local governments in 1980. About 78 percent of that is in special purpose, categorical programs.

Bentsen said 48 state governments are projecting a combined budget surplus of $4.3 billion this year, and the federal government, which runs a deficit, shouldn't share its revenue with them.

Snelling took issue with that, saying the $4.3 billion is a surplus only in states' operating budgets. Most states use a different system than the federal government and record their debts in separate capital budgets.

Chaos In England

By MICHAEL DENNIGAN

LONDON (UPI) — The government Saturday agreed to let volunteers start cleaning and cooking in Britain's strike-plagued hospitals, but some cancer patients were told their treatments may be delayed indefinitely because of the strikes.

Growing chaos in more than half the nation's 2,300 state-run hospitals added to walkouts in other public services such as gravedigging, water supplies, sewage processing, ambulance stations and public toilets.

Prime Minister James Callaghan, whose minority government is closely allied to the labor unions, bluntly told the strikers the government will not go along with their pay demands which average three and four times the government's anti-inflation "norm" of 5 percent.

Amid some heckling from his audience at a local government conference in Newcastle, Callaghan roundly condemned the rash of wildcat strikes and picket blockades that have paralyzed large sections of the economy and services since the New Year.

"Nowadays strikes are used even before a current agreement has expired. That is wrong," he said. "Strikes are used even before negotiations have begun for a new agreement. That is wrong. Strikes are used while negotiations are going on for a new agreement. That is wrong."

His appeal fell on deaf ears among several thousand cooks, cleaners, laundry workers, porters and other non-medical staff picketing more than 1,000 hospitals up and down the country.

Many refused new patients and some were reduced to emergency services only.

At Harold Wood hospital, women with breast cancer and other suspected malignancies were told they might to have to wait indefinitely for treatment.

Suicidal and dangerous patients who did not qualify for compulsory commitment under Britain's Mental Health Act were turned away at Clabury Hospital for the Mentally Ill.

The public service workers are seeking a basic weekly wage of $120, a 45 percent increase over what most now make.

MEETS PRESS — Four-time premier Giulio Andreotti meeting the press as he leaves the office of Italian President Sandro Pertini at Quirinal Palace in Rome today after he was named to try to form Italy's 37th post-war government in the face of a Communist bid for cabinet seats. (AP Laserphoto)

Andreotti Tapped

ROME (UPI) — Acting Premier Giulio Andreotti, tapped for the task of trying to put together a new government, asked for time Saturday to see if he can find a way of winning Communist support without giving them actual cabinet posts.

President Sandro Partini asked Andreotti in a 45-minute meeting to try to form post-Fascist Italy's 41st government after the Communists toppled his previous cabinet by withdrawing their outside backing.

No Word On Peace Talks

THURMONT, Md. (UPI) — A White House spokesman said Saturday he had "no word" of any effort by President Carter to consult Egypt's President Anwar Sadat on renewing the Middle East peace talks.

On Friday, Sadat said in Cairo he expected to be "hearing from President Carter in the near future." He did not elaborate.

Spokesman Jim Purks said the White House has a policy of not normally disclosing "private conversations of the president."

Smashes Into Ferry Landing

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — An out-of-control Spanish freighter smashed into a newly renovated ferry landing Saturday, knocking a hole in one ferry and sending it and another vessel floating down the Mississippi River.

No one was injured in the pre-dawn incident, but two people on board one of the ferries had to jump into the river to avoid the ship. Coast Guard officials said damage to the dock could be as high as $1 million.

"The ferry landing was wiped out," said Coast Guard Spokesman Dave Galgay.

Rescinds Pay Raise

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The State Board of Education has rescinded its decision to raise the pay for substitute teachers from $20 to $30 a day due to a computer error in the computation of an anticipated budget surplus.

The board, acting on a estimated $10 million salary budget surplus, voted last month to raise substitute pay by $10 a day for the remainder of the school year.

Board controller Joe Porter said Saturday a closer study of the budget showed a $3.5 million surplus rather than the anticipated $10 million surplus.

"We checked the budget because the surplus looked so voluminous," Porter said. "There was an error in computer programming that reduced the amount from $10 million to $3.5 million."

"Since the Daniel family started farming this land over 100 years ago, everything has changed but the land."

—Charlie Gaddy

Nobody can remember how long ago the Daniel family set down roots on their tobacco farm near the Granville County line.

Not even Needham Daniel. And he's 79.

What Needham can remember is the day his father passed the torch to him. The day he passed it to his son Ted. And he knows that one day Ted will pass it along to his son Tim.

The family stays, not because time stands still down on the farm. But because farming changes with the times.

Action News 5's Charlie Gaddy spent some time with the Daniel family to see how.

Charlie found sophisticated finances. More sophisticated machinery. And a life style that allows a "farmer's daughter" to write about Hemingway and ski at Beech Mountain between chores.

Watch Charlie's special series, "Life on the Farm". You'll see how deep the roots grow. And why.

Grand Sheik Vows To Fight Communism

By ALY MAHMOUD
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The new Grand Sheik of Al Azhar, head of Islam's most influential seat of religious learning, says he will "fight it out with communism," support advancement of women, and back efforts to achieve peace with Israel.

"Islam and communism are irreconcilable," said Sheik Mohammed Abdel Rahman Bissar in an interview. "The difference between the two is like between light and darkness, snow and fire."

He also expressed "boundless support" for Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's drive for peace with Israel, asserting the Jews are "brothers to Moslems in humanity."

Moslem-Jewish coexistence, he said, is "not only a must but a blessing as well ... The Jews of Israel are holders of a holy book, the Old Testament. And we respect their religion and honor their prophets. But peace with Israel must be based on sincere action to eliminate the tragic injustice that befell the Palestinian people."

The interview was held a few days after Bissar's appointment last Monday to the highest religious job in the Islamic world.

Bissar's appointment was made on the strength of Sadat's presidential decree approved by the Islamic Research Academy, whose 50 members are drawn from Egypt and 20 other Islamic countries.

The sheik has strong influence among the world's 600 million Moslems, but does not have a political base like that of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, who intends to set up an Islamic republic in Iran.

He said he is laying the groundwork in Egypt for enforcing Sharia, or the law of Islam's holy book, the Koran.

The bearded, 69-year-old sheik also warned against "this communist menace besetting Iran" and argued that, under Sharia, home-grown Moslem communists are classified as apostates.

"Any Moslem in Egypt, Iran, or elsewhere in the Islamic world who professes adherence to the atheist communist ideology is essentially a murtadd (renegade)," he said. "And, under Sharia, a murtadd is given three days to repent or, if he persists, be executed."

Egypt's 360-member parliament has been debating methods of enforcing Sharia and seems to still have a long way to go. But the grand sheik expressed hopes that Islamic laws will be observed in Iran as "the safety valve against straying into the pitfalls of communism.

As head of the 10-century-old Al Azhar Mosque and its affiliated university, the grand sheik is the leading Islamic authority empowered to re-interpret the Koran. He also heads the Islamic Research Academy and can issue fatwas, or religious rulings, on matters ranging from rituals to birth control, marriage and divorce.

But unlike the pope, who can issue edicts that apply to all Roman Catholics, Bissar's authority is weakened because he is appointed by a temporal head of state.

His fatwas, while binding on the Sunni Moslems of Egypt, can be challenged by Moslem leaders elsewhere, such as Khomeini in Iran, who belongs to the Shiite branch of Islam. But Bissar described Khomeini as a "brother-in-Islam."

His fatwas, while binding on the Sunni Moslems of Egypt, can be challenged by Moslem leaders elsewhere, such as Khomeini in Iran, who belongs to the Shiite branch of Islam. But Bissar described Khomeini as a "brother-in-Islam."

"I will arrange a program whereby Islamic unity can gradually be attained and Islamic orthodoxy be correctly spread throughout the world," he said. "This, Allah willing, will make us immune against the emerging wave of atheism, permissiveness and degeneration."

Bissar defended Moslem women who take office jobs and "participate in building the new, modern society of Islam everywhere."

"Women are the prime makers of society, they build the nation, and we hold them in the highest esteem," he said. "But we must protect them against disgrace and deviation."

Bissar, who has one doctorate from Al Azhar and another from Edinburgh University, is fluent in English, French and his native Arabic. He spent four years in the United States as director of the Islamic Center in Washington.

"I assimilated Western cultures adequately," he said. "But I believe that Islam is deeper, more realistic and practicable."

He said he wants to "eradicate social ills" by enforcing the harsh penalties of Sharia — including cutting off the hands of convicted thieves, stoning married adulterers to death, and whipping drunkards.

But these punishments, he said, can only be meted out when social and economic injustices are eliminated — "when a social welfare system leave no excuse for robbery."

HEADS ISLAMIC RELIGIOUS LEARNING CENTER — Mochammed Abdel Rahman Bissar, named the new Grand Sheik of Al Azhar this week, gestures recently in an interview with the Associated Press.

Not A Facelift

MIAMI (AP) — Anita Bryant is recuperating from "minor corrective surgery" around her eyes but, "it wasn't a facelift," says her husband, Robert Green.

Miss Bryant, a singer and evangelist who drew national attention with her fight against homosexual rights, was operated on Wednesday and released Thursday, Green said.

Boy Gets 48-Year Sentence

By RON HARRIST
Associated Press Writer

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Robert Earl May Jr. pleaded guilty to armed robbery and was sentenced to 48 years in jail — with no chance of parole. If he behaves, he can be free at age 46, authorities say. He's now 14.

Prison officials, who were besieged with angry calls Friday after a television station reported the boy's imprisonment, said the sentence was unusual for such a young offender.

"We don't get many 14-year-olds at the penitentiary," said Tom Gregory, spokesman for the state Department of Corrections. He told callers: "Our hands are tied. We just do what the court tells us."

May, who is 4-foot-7 and weighs 75 pounds, has been assigned to the prison hospital to isolate him from older inmates, he said. May was imprisoned on Monday.

The State Penitentiary at Parchman is Mississippi's main prison. May and three others — ages 17, 18 and 24 — were sent there after they pleaded guilty to armed robbery charges.

"He wasn't just whisked into the court one day and then railroaded off to Parchman," said District Attorney Jack Kitchens. "We're talking about a serious crime.

"When someone is looking down a gun barrel in an armed robbery, it makes no difference whether they (the gunman) are 40 years old or 14 — they're still strong enough to pull the trigger."

Circuit Judge Joe N. Piggott, who sentenced the boy — reportedly without a pre-sentence evaluation — was not available for coment.

A consideration in the sentence, Kitchens said, was fear that the boy might pose a threat to youths in a juvenile facility. May spent four months in a training school for vandalism as a 13-year-old.

The maximum sentence for armed robbery in Mississippi is life. Under the law, Gregory said, May is not eligible for parole, but could be released in 32 years with time off for good behavior.

May and his companions were accused of holding up three firecracker stands and a convenience store near Brookhaven, Miss., during the Christmas season. May carried a gun in one holdup, authorities said.

A woman clerk was beaten in one of the robberies. Gregory said he did not know if the boy was accused of taking part in the assault.

Two of the men, Bob Terrell and Ernest Toliver, also received four consecutive 12-year terms. The fourth man, Lawrence Williams, was sentenced to three 12-year terms.

State Reps. Fred Banks Jr., Doug Anderson and Horace Buckley, all of Jackson, conferred Friday with Gov. Cliff Finch and corrections officials about the matter.

Banks said the legislators plan to visit the penitentiary today.

VEPCO Invites Petition Filing

Officials of Operation Overcharge have been invited to file a petition of intervention on behalf of the people of northeastern North Carolina in a rate case currently before the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission from Virginia Electric Power Co.

The invitation was issued in Washington, D.C. during a conference between the leaders of a citizens protest against VEPCO in North Carolina and members of the staff of FERC.

Richard S. Coiner of Washington, N.C., chairman of Operation Overcharge, a group formed by chambers of commerce in the state's northeast region to fight VEPCO's retail and wholesale rates, said his organization will file the petition of intervention.

Attending from Greenville for Operation Overcharge were Charles Edwards, local manufactuerer, and Ed Walker of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce.

In its statement to the FERC officials, the Operation Overcharge leaders cited petitions signed by 46,000 residents of northeastern North Carolina calling on FERC to roll back wholesale electric rate increases recently granted VEPCO.

The statement also called for a full investigation of VEPCO's "poor management" which it pointed out "has resulted in electric rates that are out of line with other power company rates" in the state.

$43,000 Contract To History Museum

RALEIGH — The North Carolina State Museum of Natural History has received a $43,000 contract from the N. C. Wildlife Resources Commission for the first of year of an anticipated two-year study of the Neuse River Waterdog.

The waterdog is a nine-inch, aquatic salamander with feathery gills which occurs only in the Neuse and Tar River systems of North Carolina.

Funding is provided through a cooperative agreement between the Commission and the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service, aimed at determining the status of the salamander in response to a request from the federal Office of Endangered Species.

The major purpose of the study is to provide information on the distribution and probable abundance of the waterdog in the two river systems, and on certain aspects of its ecology and behavior.

Work in the first year will center the Neuse River and its tributaries. The second anticipated year will center on the Tar River.

Volunteer Greenville

—volunteers are needed to work with children after school in arts and crafts;

—volunteers are still needed to provide transportation occasionally for the elderly and disabled;

For further information on these and other volunteer opportunities, call Mrs. Harrington at 752-4137, ext. 262, or come by the office at 2000 Cedar Lane.

News Briefs

New Step In Little Case

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Attorneys Jerry Paul and William Kunstler took Joan Little's fight against her escape conviction one step further Friday when they filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus in U.S. District Court.

Paul said the petition seeks to overturn Miss Little's conviction on a charge of escape in Wake County Superior Court last summer. She was returned to North Carolina from New York last year after a six-month legal battle over extradition.

The petition says Miss Little was denied her constitutional right to effective assistance of counsel and that her extradition agreement formed a jurisdictional basis for further legal proceedings.

Should Hold Trial Soon

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — District Attorney Russell Walker Jr. said Friday that the trials of five men charged with murder and assault in the shooting of two teen-age girls last summer should be held as soon as possible. But Walker said he had not had time to prepare for them.

Ronnie Hoover, 21, his brother Joe, 14, Michael James Mabry, 18, Hubert Lee Miller, 19, and Tony Barnes, 21, were arrested last summer on charges of murder and assault with a deadly weapon.

The five men have been in jail since their arrest and an attorney for the Hoover brothers recently asked Superior Court Judge Charles Kivett to either set bond for them or set a time limit for bringing the case to trial. Kivett rejected the requests Thursday.

Six-Day Black Arts Festival

Plans for the 1979 Black Arts Festival have been announced by the East Carolina University Student Union.

Sunday, Feb. 11 is the opening date of the festival, which will conclude on Saturday, Feb. 17, under the coordination of the Student Union Minority Arts Committee with support and assistance from other committees of the Student Union.

A varied series of events are planned. These are:

— Sunday, Feb. 11 — A gospel concert at Hendrix Theater, featuring selections ranging from traditional Negro spirituals to the contemporary sound of gospel music today. The program will begin at 5 p.m. and is free and open to the public.

— Monday, Feb. 12 — Walter Aikens, founder of Poetry Pusher Productions, will present a reading of his poetry in the Ledonia S. Wright Afro-American Cultural Center. There is no admission charge, however, seating in the center is limited to 75 persons. Time of the event is 8 p.m.

— Tuesday, Feb. 13 — Two films will be shown in the Black Experience Film Festival to begin at 7 p.m. in Hendrix Theater. The films are "Imitation of Life" and "Blue Collar." Admission is by ID and Activity Cards and MSC Membership Cards.

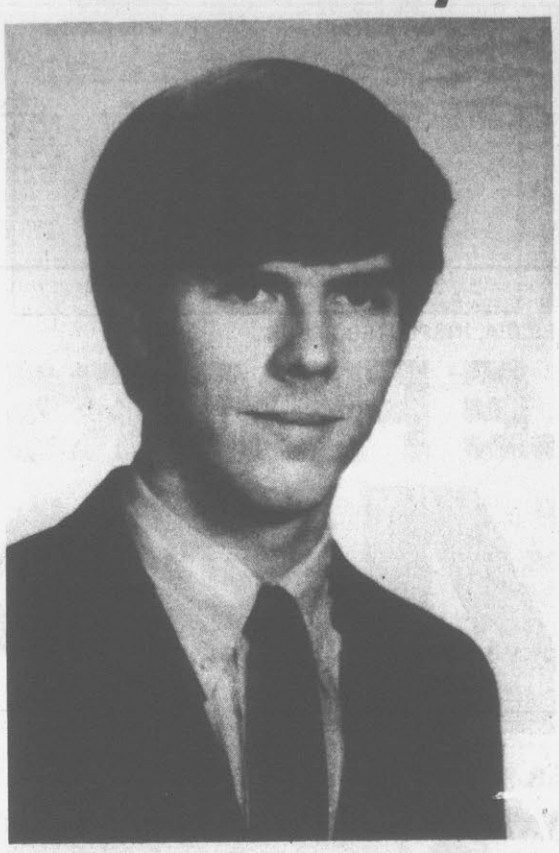

— Wednesday, Feb. 14 — The works of Richard Wright, Imamu Baraka, Nikki Giovanni, Sonia Sanchez and others will be incorporated in a dramatic presentation by Romona Austin, entitled "New Seed." Public tickets are priced at $1.50 each. The presentation will be in the Hendrix Theater.

— Thursday, Feb. 15 — Ed Bradley, the first black to host a network news program, the CBS Sunday Night News, is to be guest lecturer at 8 p.m. in Hendrix Theater. Bradley has covered assignments from Viet Nam to his present position as White House correspondent. Public tickets are priced at $3.00.

— Friday, Feb. 16 — A "Disco Jam" has been scheduled to be held at 8 p.m. in the Student Center Multi-Purpose Room. The Leroy Dawson Mobile Disco will provide music, and admission is $1.00.

— Saturday, Feb. 17 — The concluding event of the festival will be a showing of "Conrack," the film based on Pat Conroy's book, "The Water Is Wide." Showtimes are 7 and 9 p.m. and admission is by ID or MSC Card.

James Williams Recital Today

JAMES F. WILLIAMS . . . Member of the ECU School of Music faculty, will be in concert at 3:15 p.m. today in the A. J. Fletcher Music Center Recital Hall. There is no admission charge and the public is invited to attend.

James F. Williams, clarinetist and a member of the music faculty of the School of Music, East Carolina University, will be in recital in the A. J. Fletcher Music Center Recital Hall at 3:15 p.m. today.

Williams, who received his MM degree from the New England Conservatory of Music, is also a full-time instructor at N. C. Wesleyan College, Rocky Mount.

Brenda Ballard will appear with Williams as guest artist to perform the "Spohr Lieder." A resident of Rocky Mount, she was a member of the National Opera Company during its fall tour. She is a regular member of the Cincinnati Summer Opera Company.

Williams will be accompanied by two pianists — Everett Pittman, Dean of the School of Music, and Donna Coleman, a member of the music school faculty.

For his recital, Williams will perform works by Johan Baptist Wanhal, Louis Cahuzac and Brahms.

There is no admission charge and the public is invited to attend.

Annual Concert For Students

Students in grades three through six in Greenville City School are again being honored this year in being invited to attend the Eleventh Annual Children's Concert by the East Carolina University Symphony orchestra, at 1 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 7.

The symphony's conductor, Bob Hause, speaking of the big annual event for elementary students, attributes "much of the success of the well-received concerts to the cooperation and sponsorship of the . . Greenville City Schools."

Hause noted that Charles Ross, Director of Elementary Education, "has been instrumental in planning the program and arranging transportation for the school children."

As in past years, the annual concert will be held in Wright Auditorium.

Guest performers with the orchestra are to be two members of the ECU School of Music Keyboard Faculty— Dr. Charles Bath and Dr. Paul Tardif.

Also, Professor James L. Rees, member of the ECU Drama and Speech faculty, will read poems by Ogden Nash that were written to accompany the composition in which Bath and Tardif are to be featured, "Carnival of the Animals" by Camille Saint-Saens.

The program, which will open with the national anthem, will include Georges Bizet's "Carmen Suite No. 1;" "American Salute" by Morton Gould; the "Finale" from "Symphony No. 2 in D Major" by Jan Sibelius; Burt Bacharach's "Raindrops Keep Fallin' On My Head;" and three other short pieces — "This Is My Country;" "When Johnny Comes Marching Home;" and "Let There Be Peace on Earth."

The last four named compositons on the program have been arranged by Hause especially for this concert.

Auditions

WINSTON-SALEM — The School of Music of the North Carolina School of the Arts will audition college-bound music students at four off-campus locations on Saturday, Feb. 24.

Requests for audition information and application materials must be submitted by Feb. 19 for the Feb. 24 auditions. Requests are to be addressed to: Dirk Dawson, Director of Admissions, NCSA, P. O. Box 12189, Winston-Salem, N. C., 27107.

Auditions for qualified applicants are to be held between the hours of 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. on Feb. 24 at:

— Asheville, Asheville High School.

— Charlotte, Garinger High School.

— Raleigh, Sanderson Senior High School.

— Wilmington, E. A. Laney High School.

Applicants unable to audition Feb. 24 may schedule an on-campus audition at a later date. Auditions will be scheduled at least once each month through June for entrance at the start of the fall semester.

NC Symphony Schedule

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Symphony Orchestra has announced its schedule of performances for the month of February. Appearances in eastern North Carolina are scheduled for:

— Friday, Feb. 16 — Kinston, Northwest Elementary School Auditorium, 8 p.m. Admission, adults $6, students, $3 or by season tickets.

ECU Band Clinic Feb. 9-10

Band students from 30 eastern North Carolina high schools will be taking part in the annual East Carolina University Band Clinic to be held Feb. 9 and 10.

Each young musician was selected to perform in either of two bands — the Symphonic band to be conducted by guest conductor Alfred Reed; or the Concert Band, to be conducted by Dr. Ralph Shumaker of the faculty of the School of Music.

The ECU Band Clinic is sponsored by the N. C. Music Educators Conference and the ECU School of Music, and is directed by Herbert Carter, ECU, and Gene Lloyd of Jacksonville, chairman of the Eastern N. C. Band Directors.

Among events scheduled for the clinic is a Friday evening concert in Wright Auditorium to be performed by the ECU Symphonic Wind Ensemble. The concert will be conducted by Carter and Harold Jones, with George Broussard to conduct the ECU Jazz Ensemble.

Both of the high school clinic bands will perform in Wright Auditorium on Saturday evening, Feb. 10.

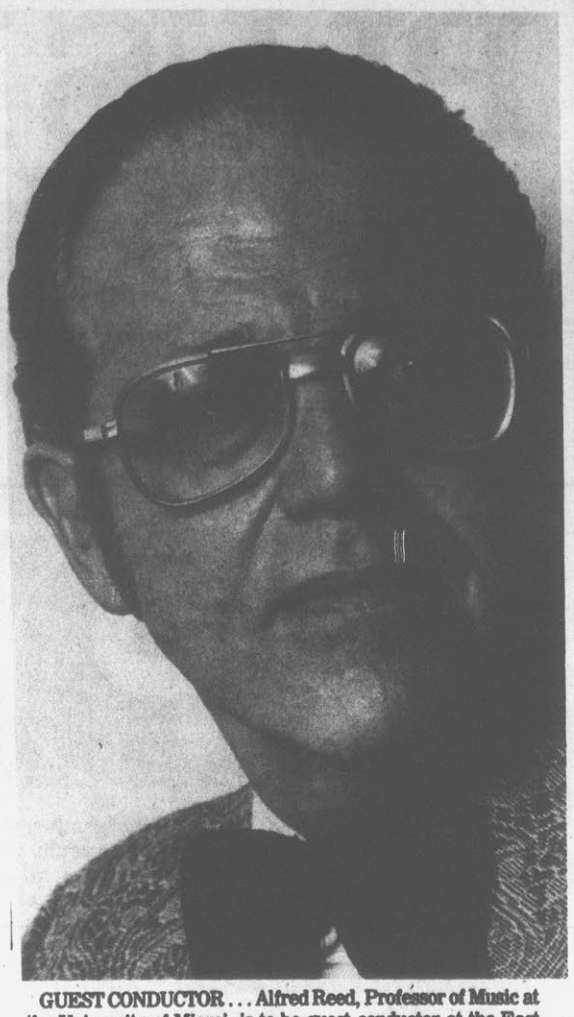

The clinic concert will feature several compositions for band by guest conductor Reed and works by other composers

This year's guest musician, Alfred Reed, is a native New Yorker who is currently a Professor of Music at the University of Miami in Coral Gables, Florida.

A prolific composer, he has been awarded more than 50 commissions, and his works as a guest conductor and clinician has taken him to about 45 states, as well as to Europe, Canada, Mexico, and South American. For six years, several of his compositions have been standard requirement for concert bands in Japan.

An Air Force veteran of World War II, Reed became deeply involved in the Concert Band and its music, and produced nearly 100 compositions and arrangements for band during his three and one-half years of service.

After studies at Juilliard School of Music, he became a staff composer and arranger with NBC, then later was with ABC in New York, where he wrote and arranged music for radio and television, record albums and films. In 1953 he became conductor of the Symphony Orchestra at Baylor University, and has been at the University of Miami since 1966. He earned his degrees from Baylor University and was awarded an honorary Mus.D. form the International Conservatory of Music, Lima, Peru, in 1968.

GUEST CONDUCTOR . . . Alfred Reed, Professor of Music at the University of Miami, is to be guest conductor at the East Carolina University Band Clinic to be held Feb. 9-10.

Impressive Talents Revealed In ECU Faculty Show

THE MYSTERY OF SPACE . . . is evoked in a painting by Iradj Rowshan-Araghi, a detail of which is shown here.

PEN AND INK SKETCHES . . . by Sam Guiffre. These half-dozen sketches are from about 30 contained in a collection within one frame.

Color is keynoted in this year's faculty art show now at the Wellington B. Gray Memorial Gallery on the East Carolina University campus. Multicolored canvases, paintings with solid fields of color, and muted monochromes are all generously present.

Other significant factors are apparent in the 1979 faculty show. Perhaps most important is the added vitality to the annual event by the inclusion of new faculty talent. The broad perspective of talent represented by the School of Art's faculty is truly impressive.

This new talent, coupled with new directions in the art of several long-time faculty members, totals up to an exhibition that is exciting, informative and visually rewarding.

Betsy Ross's small pencil drawings, with their subtle nuances of gentle surfaces, are strong counterpoints to the active texture of Aaron Karp's dense color filled paintings. Karp's art in turn, when compared to paintings by Clarence Morgan, reveal the extent of differences that can exist in paintings that at first glance seem similar. The work of both employ extensive detail and color. Essentially, Karp achieves a more contemporary ambience, whereas Morgan's paintings are like impressionistic variations of Oriental rugs.

Another case in point are the paintings of Ed Reep and Tran Gordley. Both artists at this point have similar involvements in the use or rich colors on large canvases. For several years, Gordley has focused on painting fruits and vegetables, close up and in assemblages. His "Mixed Fruits" clearly defines shapes in vivid colors; on the other hand, his "Cabbage V Section" becomes an abstraction in greens based on internal textures of a cabbage.

Reep's precise, controlled paintings are a radical departure from his intricately detailed paintings of a few years ago. These new paintings are pared down formal statements of line and color against line and color, shorn of emotional content, compelling in their bold simplicity.

A prolific artist, Smith also shows a music stand, a couple of seats, a violin and a stunning hurdy-gurdy, all in wood. Norman Keller's "Fragment for Richard" succeeds in harmonizing white marble, black metal, pink limestone and natural wood.

Along with Janet Fischer, Satterfield shows examples of magnificant hand-crafted jewelry the two are deservedly acclaimed for.

Among other pleasures of this fine show are Sam Guiffre's drawings, particularly a collection of miniature pen and ink sketches assembled in one frame; George Danhires' series of studio paintings with oddly stilted compositions; a small Paul Hartley painting; and a painting by Iradj Rowshan-Araghi that effectively evokes the mystery of space — whether outer space or desert stretches.

The 1979 faculty art show is well worth one, or better yet, a couple of leisurely visits.

Student Art Show At Wilson's ACC

WILSON — Works of art by junior and senior high school students from a 46 county region of North Carolina have been selected to appear in the Eastern North Carolina Regional Scholastic Art Award Exhibition now being held at Atlantic Christian College.

The show, conducted by Scholastic Magazines, Inc., and sponsored by WITN-TV in cooperation with the College, is coordinated by Norbert W. Irvine of the ACC Art Dept.

About 130 works are being shown in 16 different areas of art including two and three dimensional art as well as photography. This group was chosen from about 650 pieces submitted for consideration. All students with work in the show will be awarded a Certificate of Merit.

Art work judged to be the best 50 in the show have been awarded Gold Keys. Top entries from among this group will be forwarded to New York to the national headquarters of Scholastic Magazines, Inc., where they will compete with finalists from other regions for national awards.

The Wilson ACC show is at the Case Gallery on campus. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 1-3 p.m. on Saturday. The public is invited to see the show and there is no admission charge.

By Willie Mae Gibbs

Has the holiday season left you feeling a little out of shape? Two new books at the library can help you if your goal is to obtain a new look by Spring.

Wilhelmina Cooper, key executive of one of the two largest model agencies in the world and herself a former model featured many times on the covers of Vogue and other major fashion magazines, shares her secrets for health and beauty in a book called THE NEW YOU. Dispelling the idea that all successful models have a perfect nose, a flawless skin, or a refined bone structure, she emphasizes that the one single thing all beautiful women have in common is simply that they care enough so that through constant effort they can make the most of what was given to them at birth. In THE NEW YOU, Whilelmina shows you how to put this theory to work. You begin by looking at yourself constructively. A self-examination includes a posture, body, and beauty check. Then you move on to a beauty report list and plan, to body shaping exercises done three times a week. Other features in the book include Wilhelmina's Hummingbird Diet, a special section on body shaping clothes, advice for women with various figure problems, tips on the care of nails and hair, and a very informative section on make-up. Unlike the model, you may not be able to focus all your energies toward maximizing your total appearance, but drawing upon the expertise and experience of Wilhelmina Cooper can give you a new awareness of your own potential.

In WOMAN'S GUIDE TO SHAPING YOUR BODY WITH WEIGHTS Marge Covino and Pat Jordan banish the myth that exercising with weights is unfeminine, and results in ugly muscles. Rather they uphold that by following a simple program of weight lifting specifically designed for the female body, you can achieve a more beautiful figure, add to your grace, and increase your stamina. They indicate that this form of exercise is easier, less time-consuming, and gives faster results — the primary advantage being that you can isolate any body part you want and either enlarge or diminish it according to your tastes. In their book they offer an uncomplicated safe, step-by-step program that need not be performed more than three days a week, one hour a day. Light calisthentic exercises to loosen and stretch previously dormant muscles precede the weight lifting routines. Persons of any age can perform these exercises in their homes, outdoors, or at the local gym or health club. Advice on suitable equipment for home and the gym is included in the book. If your problem is a flat rear that needs shaping, a wide waist that needs slimming, a bustline that needs firming, or any of the other figure problems that women face, you can follow a personally tailored program suited to your particular figure problem.

Joint Program On Feb. 9

The joint annual winter concert of The Symphonic Wind Ensemble and The University Jazz Ensemble of East Carolina University will be presented at 8:15 p.m., Friday, Feb. 9 in Wright Auditorium.

Herbert L. Carter and Harold A. Jones, both of the School of Music, will direct the program which consists of compositions chosen to give a contrast of styles.

Wind Ensemble selections will include "The Klaxon" by Henry Fillmore, "Armenian Dances, (Part II)" by Alfred Reed, and "Bugler's Holiday," by Leroy Anderson.

George Broussard will conduct The Jazz Ensemble. He is a faculty member of the School of Music.

Compositions to be performed by this group include "Told You So" by Bill Holman; "I Remember Clifford," by Benny Golson; "Something" by Lenin/McCartney, "Blue Gene" by Gene Roland; and Rich Holly's "One Time Ago."

The concert is open to the public and there is no admission charged.

Madi Gras On Feb 27

By BILL CRIDER
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The annual spree of Mardi Gras comes so late this year — Feb. 27 — it may be enlivened by the rising sap of spring in addition to the usual exotic fuels.

Warm weather brings forth both the best and the beast in the annual street festival that packs the center of the city with half a million people or more.

Sunshine is kind to maidens who decide to go topless in the French Quarter, and for thousands numbed by wine it can turn the day into an affable golden blur — not at all like last year when the great event fell on a cold Feb. 7 with withering winds and temperatures in the upper 30s.

Mardi Gras is French for Fat Tuesday. It has pagan roots but for the past few centuries has been the Roman Catholic-style fling before Ash Wednesday and the austerity of Lent.

In New Orleans it is a variable feast — mainly sober family picnics beside the curb on the outskirts but growing progressively more exuberant toward its center, the seething and drunken Quarter.

Mardi Gras crowds in the city have been down to manageable size for the past couple of years because suburban parades have grown rapidly, siphoning off great herds of celebrators reluctant to brave the downtown pack.

Carnival is the period leading up to Mardi Gras and it officially begins on Twelfth Night, Jan. 6 this year.

Actually, it starts shortly after Christmas because everybody can't crowd their party or ball into a mere 53 days. Private Carnival "krewes" stage the fancy balls and private parties.

The krewes, a traditional misspelling of crews, also put on the great Carnival parades, with masked and costumed krewe members riding the floats and flinging necklaces and doubloons to the crowd.

There are 49 of them this Carnival, beginning Feb. 16, and making hash of normal traffic patterns. That's fewer than usual, since three krewes decided not to parade and two combined forces.

Student Recitals

Four recitals by students of the School of Music, East Carolina University, will be presented during the week. All will take place at the Recital Hall of the A. J. Fletcher Music Center on campus. The recitals are:

— Tuesday, Feb. 6 — Randall Bryant, alto saxophonist, will be in recital at 7:30 p.m. His program will include Bach's "Sonate No. 6;" the Walter S. Hartley "Duo for Alto Saxophone and Piano;" Ryo Noda's "Improvisation No. 1;" Jeanine Rueff's "Chanson et Passepied;" and Paul Creston's "Sonata for Alto Saxophone and Piano."

He will be assisted by George M. Stone, a graduate student in piano.

— Thursday, Feb. 8 — A trio of students will be giving recitals beginning at 7:30 p.m.

First on the evening's recital program are Richard Michael Eury, trombonist, and Michael Joseph Kincaid, saxophonist.

Eury will be accompanied by Joy Hinsley, piano and assisted by Joe Kasmark, Andy Gilbert, Glenn Johnson, Michael Alvey, Rick Vizachero and Dave Albert.

He will perform three compositions Hindemith, Faure, and Davison and Cole Porter's "It's All Right With Me."

Kincaid will be accompanied by Ann Gunn, piano, and assisted by Dave Albert.

For his program, he will include a sonata by Handel, V. Dyck's "Legende Hebraique;" and Ian's "At Seventeen."

The final performer in the trio of recitals will be Kathryn A. Law, pianist, who will perform at 9 p.m. For her program, she has selected works by Haydn, Schumann, Chopin and Bartok.

All the recitals are free and open to the public.

Senior Show

George Barry Jones, a senior student of the School of Art, East Carolina University, is having his senior show today through Feb. 10 in Mendenhall Student Center.

Included in the show are examples of work in acrylic paintings, graphic illustrations and photography, as well as ones in watercolor, gouache, colored pencil and crafts.

Norman Keller One-Man Show

Norman Keller, sculptor and faculty member of the School of Art, East Carolina University, currently has an exhibit of 27 sculptures in the Wyly Tower Gallery, Ruston, La.

The one-man exhibition, sponsored by the School of Art and Architecture, Louisiana Tech University, opened in January. Keller also gave a gallery talk about his work during the early part of the exhibition.

Film Jury

RALEIGH — Muffie Meyer of New York City, a director and editor of feature-length movies; Peter Crown of Amherst, Mass., a video artist; and Marjorie Short of Cambridge, Mass., nominee for an Academy Award for a recent short film are the three who have been chosen as jurors for the 1979 N. C. Film Festival.

The film competition, open to all North Carolina residents, is in eight categories. Entries will be received at the N. C. Museum of Art between April 2-13, and a $5 fee is required. Prizes include a $1,000 first prize donated by the N. C. Arts Council.

Dance Openings

NEW BERN — A new dance company based in New Bern, Dance Repertory, is beginning rehearsals for a spring dance concert to feature "Pas de Quatre," "A Suite of Celebration," and "Peter and the Wolf."

Some openings for roles in the three dances still exist, and interested persons in the Greenville area are asked to contact Delorese Clifford at 633-4303.

Mangione Concert

GREENSBORO — Chuck Mangione with his Quartet will be in concert at 4 p.m. Sunday, March 4, in the Colisueum in Greensboro.

Advance tickets (all seats reserved) are now available at $8.50 and $7.50. They will soon be on sale at the Coliseum Box Office, 1921 West Lee St., Greensboro, N.C. or by phone 294-2140.

Conversion Plans For Old Boston Navy Yard

BOSTON (AP) — Mayor Kevin H. White says a $200 million project to convert the abandoned Boston Navy Yard to a new community of housing, retail shops, a marina and seaside park is the "crown jewel" of Boston's redevelopment.

PAUL SIMON — has agreed to pay $1.5 million in an out-of-court settlement to get out of his contract with CBS Records. Simon will now record on the Warner Bros. label. (AP Laserphoto)

The city received 16 acres for the park free from the federal government, plus another 30 acres for a proposed "historical monument" section.

About 57 acres destined for private development was bought by the city from the federal government — a deal White described as a "mini-Louisiana Purchase."

Plans call for $175 million of the project to be developed privately by Immobiliare New England. The development firm is a joint venture of Societa Generale Immoliliare of Rome, and ICOS Group of Delaware.

Pirates Come Up Short In Second OT

Pirate George Maynor fights Old Dominion's Ronnie Valentine for rebound

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

There's an old axiom about going to the well too often.

East Carolina's found themselves in their third straight overtime game last night, but unlike the first two times, they were unable to pull it out this time, bowing to Old Dominion, 90-85, in a double overtime.

Both teams blew leads in the game, Old Dominion going out by as much as nine and East Carolina by eight. The game was tight all the way home after Old Dominion finally cut away the Pirate lead to tie it at 55-55 with 12:31 left in regulation.

But they traveled with two seconds left, and a desperation heave of 50 feet by Mack was far short, forcing the second overtime.

Tyson tied it one last time at 81-81 with 3:36 left, then put the Pirates ahead when he followed that up with a free throw to complete a three-point play. Ronnie McAdoo hit two free throws with 2:47 left, and the Pirates missed a chance and had to foul again to try and get it back. Bobby Vaughn hit the first for an 84-82 lead, but a steal and a basket by Vaughn after that put it out of reach, 86-82.

With the Pirates leading at 82-81, the Bucs had the ball, but elected to go for another score rather that hold the ball out and force ODU to foul.

"I started to tell them to hold it out," Coach Larry Gillman said, "but I wanted to try and get one more basket. I guess in looking back, we should have held it.

"Turnovers hurt us too. Twice we had cross-court passes intercepted at key times (both giving ODU four-point leads in each overtime). But Old Dominion has a very good team, and I think we played well against them."

Early in the game, the Monarchs swelled out to a nine point lead, and Gillman blamed that only early defensive problems by the Pirates. "We came out in a man-to-man, then switched off into our match-up zone. When we went to the zone, I think we gave them more problems."

Old Dominion came out in a man, but later switched to a zone, and cut off the inside for the Pirates, forcing them to take lower percentage shots from the outside.

It proved a good tactic, as the Pirates were not at their best shooting. The Bucs shot only 41.3 per cent, including 38.9 per cent in the second half. At the same time, the Monarchs hit on 45.9 per cent for the game and 50.0 per cent in the second half.

And overall, that was the big difference. Turnovers and rebounding were almost even, as were fouls and free throws scored.

Old Dominion seemed in trouble when, with 19:14 left in the second half, Ronnie Valentine, their top scorer, went to the bench with four fouls. He came back with 5:18 to go, and sparked the final drive, finally fouling out with 2:21 left in the first overtime.

But while he was out, freshman McAdoo more than took up the slack, scoring eight of 18 points over the span. He also had eight of the 19 points ODU got in overtime.

"When Valentine went to the bench, it really sort of picked them up," Gillman said. "And McAdoo is a player, a fine college player."

While he was not happy with the loss, Gillman did express pride in his players. "The kids tried hard, and I am proud of them. I'm not happy about losing, but we are proving that we can play with a lot of good people."

Getting inside early, Old Dominion scored the first four points of the game and steadily built up a nine point lead, that coming with 13:28 left in the first half at 21-12.

But the Pirates, who had not put two baskets together in the first six minutes, finally got three in a row, including two from Mack and one from Greg Cornelius, to cut it back to three. Then, near the midpoint of the half, four straight free throws trimmed it to two at 26-24.

Frank Hobson tied it for the

Spanarkel Ends Slump As Duke Defeats Terps

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Duke captain Jim Spanarkel has been in a scoring slump lately, but after the senior guard scored 27 points and was credited with eight assists in the third-ranked Blue Devils 87-78 victory over 17th-ranked Maryland Saturday, talk of the slump was over.

"Does anybody have any questions about Spanarkel's slump.." Duke Coach Bill Foster asked after the regionally-televised game. No one did.

But Spanarket wasn't alone in high scoring. Mike Gminski added 2 points and pulled down a game-high 14 rebounds.

The game had been billed as a battle between Gminski and the ACC's leading rebounder, Maryland's Charles "Buck" Williams. But Williams got into foul trouble early and was able to pull down only seven rebounds and score eight points.

High scorer for Maryland was Greg Manning with 17 points, who along with Larry Gibson kept the Terps in the game early in the first half. Gibson scored 15 points.

"Boy, we really did some things well out there this afternoon," Foster said. "Getting the ball down court and playing with such defensive intensity throughout the game, even when we were up," Foster said.

Foster also had praise for Duke's second team, naming guards Steve Gray and Vince Taylor. Kenny Dennard played one of his best games of the season for Duke, scoring 13 points, pulling down five rebounds and stealing the ball 11 times.

"I thought it was a typo (on the statistics sheet)," Foster said.

Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell declined to meet with reporters immediately after the game. He later told a reporter, "Three Saturdays in a row we've played the first-, second- and third-ranked teams, and we played them all very well.

"I think we were up by one and then 10 behind in what seemed like 20 seconds," Driesell said of the Terps' short-lived lead, 30-29, with seven minutes left in the initial period. "We came back from that but played catch-up the rest of the way."

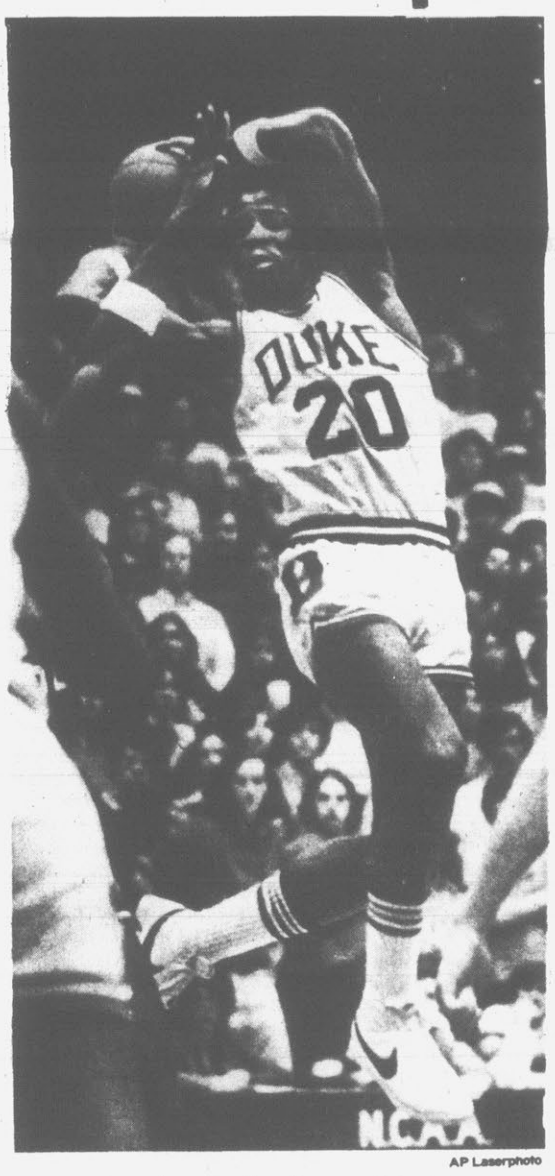

Duke improved to 16-3 overall and 6-1 in the ACC, while Maryland fell to 14-7 and 3-4.

Duke led by as many as 19 points early in the second half, but consistaent play from the Terps and a cold streak for Duke reduced the margin to six points, 78-72, on an Albert King basket with 3:11 to play.

Maryland remained within striking distance for more than a minute, but Spanarkel took a pass underneath from Bob Bender and pushed the Blue Devils back up to an eight-point lead, 80-72, with 1:52 remaining.

Duke increased its lead to 12, 84-72, with one minute to go on a drive by freshman Vince Taylor.

The Blue Devils led by 13 at intermission, 51-38, but the margin belied strong competition from Maryland during much of the first half, including a short span in which the Terps led, 30-29, with seven minutes left in the initial period.But Duke made short work of that slim margin and steadily pulled away.

N-S Doubleheader

Wood Blasts Tech In Overtime

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Forward Al Wood hit two clutch field goals and added two foul shots, all in overtime, as fourth-ranked North Carolina held off Virginia Tech 92-80 in college basketball Saturday night.

Wood, who scored 33 points during the game, helped the Tar Heels run off most of the five-minute overtime by using the four-corner delay offense.

Virginia Tech came from a 53-43 deficit early in the second half to pull even with the Tar Heels several times and tie the game with two seconds on the clock on a free throw by Dale Solomon.

Solomon, who had 15 points for the Gobblers, put Virginia Tech ahead 63-62 on a layup with 7:09 left in the game. The teams traded the lead until the final minute.

Solomon went to the free-throw line with two seconds left and two shots and facing a 78-77 North Carolina lead, but he was able to hit only one shot. The Tar Heels called time out with one second left but were unable to get the ball down the court in time for a shot.

Les Henson was high man for Virginia Tech with 18 points and Wayne Robinson had 16. The Gobblers, who lost to N.C. State Friday night in the first round, stood at 12-7 after their loss.

Wolfpack Gets Past Paladins

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Charles "Hawkeye" Whitney and Kenny Matthews each scored 16 points and Tony Warren added 11, all of his in the second half, as North Carolina State downed Furman 73-63 in college basketball Saturday night.

Furman, led by center Jonathan Moore's 28 points, jumped out to an early 10-2 lead but fell back and the score was tied 35-35 at the intermission.

The game was a see-saw battle until outside shooting by Warren and Matthews opened an eight-point lead for the Wolfpack. A jump shot by Warren with 6:52 left gave N.C. State its biggest lead 59-49 until the final seconds when the Wolfpack was again up by 10.

N.C. State, which boosted its record to 15-7 with the victory, limited the Paladins to mostly outside shooting opportunities, and despite Moore's effort, the Paladins were not able to hit often enough. The loss dropped Furman to 15-6.

Furman managed to pull within five points at 63-58 when Moore hit a bucket with just over three minutes left, but a basket by the Wolfpack's Clyde Austin saved N.C. State from the threat.

N.C. State came out of the North-South Doubleheader with the best record, winning both nights.

"This has been a real good weekend for us in a lot of ways," said Wolfpack Coach Norm Sloan.

"We beat two good teams. It should do a lot for us. I don't mean our confidence, because I don't think we ever lost our confidence — more for our morale," he said.

Sloan said he thought Warren played two of his best games of the season at the North-South.

Carew Dealt To Angels For Four Players, Cash

Rod Carew

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — The Minnesota Twins, who had been shopping around seven-time American league batting champion Rod Carew, much to his dismay, finally unloaded him Saturday, sending him to the California Angels for four players and cash.

The deal was completed shortly after George Steinbrenner, owner of the New York Yankees, said the world champions had withdrawn their offer for the 33-year-old first baseman.

In return for Carew, who would have become a free agent after the 1979 season if he had remained with the Twins and not signed a new contract, Minnesota received outfielder Ken Landreaux, pitchers Paul Hartzell and Brad Havens, third baseman-catcher Dave Engle and an undetermined amount of cash.

Last month, after Carew had agreed to a reported $4 million contract with the Angels, Griffith had rejected California's offer for him, demanding that young third baseman Carney Lansford be included in the deal. But California refused to part with Lansford, a .294 hitter, as a rookie last year, and Griffith reluctantly accepted the offer, realizing the possibility of losing Carew without compensation after the 1979 season.

Earlier this week, Carew had told The Associated Press that he resented being "pushed around" and said: "I am offended when I read all this stuff about the New York Yankees and what 'George wants, George gets.'

"I want everybody to know I can't be bought."

Saturday, Steinbrenner reacted angrily to Carew's comments.

"We have great respect for Rod Carew, as a player, but if a man doesn't understand the privilege of playing for the New York Yankees, in the greatest baseball city in the world, and has stated that New York would not be his first choice, and that he'd be more comfortable somewhere else, then I don't think we'd be fair to our fans in New York, or to our other ballplayers, who've won two World Championships in a row, to pursue the Carew matter any further," Steinbrenner said in a statement ...

"When a man is asking for $4,000,000 over five years, and then says he feels like he's being tossed around 'like a grocery item,' it's a little humorous," Steinbrenner added.

While Steinbrenner was not happy with the developments in the Carew sweepstakes, the Angels were elated.

"We obtained the best hitter in baseball," said Buzzie Bavasi, the Angels' executive vice president. "We expected it would cost us in player personnel."

"I think this is one of the best deals that has been made in the American League in many years," said Gene Autry, the Angels' president and chairman of the board. "When you can get a player like Carew, I feel it will have a great impact on the players on this team and on our fans.

"I know he's a great guy to have on a ballclub," added Autry. "I've met him several times ...I'm very happy about the deal."

Carew was not immediately available for comment, but his wife, Marilynn, said, "Rod will probably hit the roof when he hears what Steinbrenner said."

Carew spent only three years in the minor leagues before taking over as the Twins' regular second baseman in 1967. He responded with a .292 batting average in 137 games and was named the American League's Rookie of the Year.

He also was selected to the American League All-Star team, the first of 12 years on the team, the last three as a first baseman.

After hitting .273 in his second season, Carew came back in 1969 to win his first batting championship. He hit .332 that year and was enroute to a second straight batting title in 1970 when he suffered a knee injury and missed more than two months of the season.

His batting average at the time was .360, and an indication of the superlative years he would rattle off between 1973 and 1977.

The Panamanian-born Carew hit .307 in 1971, won his second AL batting title in 1972 with a a .318 aveerage, then put together five straight brilliant years.

In 1973, Carew hit .350, a feat that hadn't been accomplished in the American League since Norm Cash hit .361 for Detroit in 1961. Carew topped his 1973 season by compiling a .364 mark in 1974, then hit .359 in 1975.

Only George Brett, whose .333 average nipped Carew by two percentage points in 1976, stopped Carew's skein of batting titles. Carew then regained the batting crown in 1977 with one of the greatest seasons in modern baseball history.

Carew's 1977 season, highlighted by a .388 average, brought him the American League's Most Valuable Player Award and numerous other honors.

Carew also was selected to the AL All-Star team with the largest vote-total ever in either league.

Cavaliers Top Deacons

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Mike Owens came off the bench, hit 10 of 15 floor shots, scored 21 points and grabbed nine rebounds Saturday as he led Virginia's Cavaliers to an 83-76 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory over Wake Forest's Deacons.

Playing with a touch of the flu, Steve Castellan added 19 points and also pulled down nine rebounds in the regionally televised game, in which the Cavaliers went ahead for good with 5:54 left in the first half on a layup by Jeff Lamp.

The Cavaliers, 5-3 in the ACC and 14-6 overall, broke the game open with a 13-4 spree over a 6:40 span after intermission. Virginia went from a 42-40 lead to a 55-44 advantage and eventually built the difference to 13 points before the Deacons cut it back at the end.

Bobby Stokes added 16 points for Virginia and Lamp, defensed most of the way by a box and one, had 14. Nine of Virginia's last 11 points came at the foul line and Stokes scored eight of the last 10, six on free throws.

The Deacons, who fell to 2-6 in the ACC and 10-11 overall, were led by Frank Johnson with 27 points and Alvis Rogers with 18. Johnson also was playing ill, suffering from a cold and slight high blood pressure.

Virginia hit 16 of 24 shots from the floor in the second half in pulling away from its 38-35 margin at intermission.

"We did a good job of attacking their zone. They changed defenses in the first half, using a triangle and two and a two-three zone, and we did a good job against both of them," said Virginia Coach Terry Holland.

College Basketball

Notre Dame 86, Dayton 71

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Sophomore Kelly Tripucka scored a career-high 37 points Saturday night, including 17 straight in the closing minutes, as top-ranked Notre Dame wore down stubborn Dayton University 86-71.

The Flyers, who beat the Irish last year, got 32 points from guard Jim Paxson and held a nine-point lead early in the second half but fell apart down the stretch. Notre Dame rallied behind Tripucka, Tracy Jackson and Orlando Woolridge, and the Irish took the lead for good on two free throws by Tripucka with five minutes remaining.

Dayton managed two free throws two minutes later, but Tripucka hit a three-point play and then added 11 straight free throws to lock up the contest.

Indiana 70, Ohio State 62

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Mike Woodson made four free throws and Scott Eells three in the final two minutes as Indiana held off seventhranked Ohio State 70-62 in Big Ten college basketball Saturday.

The Hoosiers, 5-5 in the league, upset the conference leaders without making a field goal in the final seven minutes. Butch Carter's jump shot with 7:06 to play, giving Indiana its biggest lead of the second half at 57-48 was the Hoosiers' final field goal of the game.

Ohio State, 8-2 in the conference after its second loss in three days, cut the deficit to 61-60 on Kelvin Ramsey's field goal. Ramsey, who had 20 points and Williams, who scored 26, sparked the comeback.

Michigan 74, Illinois 65

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Michigan cocaptain Tom Staton hit both ends of a one-and-one free throw situation with 37 seconds left Saturday, leading the Wolverines to a 74-65 Big Ten basketball victory over 14th-ranked Illinois.

Staton's baskets put Michigan up by four, then Alan Hardy was fouled on a defensive rebound to seal the Illini's fate.

The Wolverines spent most of the second half at the free throw line, sinking 22 of their 40 points there. Staton hit for six of those.

Mike McGee led all scorers with 25 points for Michigan, while Illinois freshman James Griffin dumped in 16. Phil Hubbard had 14 for Michigan to round out the top scorers.

Detroit 91, Georgetown 71

DETROIT (AP) — Guards Wilbert McCormick and Terry Duerod teamed for 42 points Saturday as unranked Detroit stunned No. 9 Georgetown 91-71 in nonconference college basketball.

McCormick scored 22 points, including 12 free throws, and Duerod hit 20 as Detroit improved its record to 16-4.

The Titans raced to an early 10-2 lead. The Hoyas never were closer than five points throughout the game. At halftime, Detroit led 36-28.

UCLA 69, Oregon State 56

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) — Brad Holland hit nine of 12 shots from the floor and scored 23 points Saturday to lead fifth-ranked UCLA to a 69-56 Pacific 10 Conference basketball victory over Oregon State.

Holland scored 14 points in the second half as the Bruins steadily wore down the Beavers, repeatedly coming up with clutch shots and key rebounds.

The regionally televised victory kept the Bruins in first place in the Pac 10 at 9-2, while Oregon State fell to 6-4. UCLA is 16-3 overall, while Oregon State is 13-6.

The Bruins outscored the Beavers 17-4 over the last seven minutes of the game after Oregon State had rallied to tie the score 52-52.

Michigan St. 61, N'western 50

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Senior Gregory Kelser's scored 18 points as Michigan State blew open a close game in the second half and rolled to a 61-50 victory over Northwestern in Big Ten basketball Saturday.

The victory avenged the Wildcats' upset of MSU a week ago.

The Spartans, 6-4 in the conference, played largely without sophomore star Earvin Johnson. Court time for the 6-foot-8 point-man and playmaker was limited by a sprained right foot suffered in Thursday's overtime victory over Ohio State.

He played only the final two minutes of the game, favoring the leg slightly and scoring just four free throws.

Hinkle Takes Five-Shot Margin

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Lon Hinkle, playing in quiet solitude at Cypress Point while the show-business celebrities cavorted at Pebble Beach, cut out a 3-under-par 69 and took a whopping 5-stroke lead Saturday in the $300,000 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am.

"I guess he's got it," said Mark Hayes, whose 6-under-par 66 — the best round of the tournament — lifted him into second place going into Sunday's final round.

"If we have good weather tomorrow, he's got it. He'll hang on. With five shots and good weather, you should win every time."

The hard-hitting Hinkle, who scored his first tour triumph and collected more than $138,000 last year, compiled a 207 total, nine under par for one round on each of three Monterey Peninsula courses — Pebble Beach, Cypress Point and Spyglass Hill.

The field of 168 pros was cut to the low 60 for the final round at Pebble Beach. Hale Irwin, playing with a damaged wrist, failed to make it. It was the first time he'd missed the cut in 87 tournaments, going back to the 1975 Tucson Open.

Hayes, who had a strong finish in the Bob Hope Classic, compiled his 6-under-par effort at Pebble Beach, where the gallery congregated and the national television cameras focused on the celebrity amateurs and their antics.

Hayes, however, played the back nine first and thus missed most the congestion. He had a 54-hole total of 212, four under par.

No one else appeared to have any chance of denying Hinkle his second tour victory. Hayes was the only man within seven strokes.

The group at 214 included Brad Bryant, Curtis Strange and Grier Jones. Jones shot a 69 at Cypress Point. Strange had 74 at tough Spyglass and Bryant shot 73 at Pebble Beach.

Tom Watson, the winner of the last two Crosbys, shot 73 at Pebble Beach for a 221 total. Ben Crenshaw, the winner at Phoenix, had 78-224. John Mahaffey, the Bob Hope winner, was 75-220.

ODU Defeats ECU...

first time at 28-28 with two more charity shot, but ODU went back out on a free throw by Tommy Conrad.

George Underwood then hit two at the line to put the Pirates ahead for the first time, and after losing it to McAdoo, ECU got it back when Underwood tossed in a rebound for a 33-31 left. Clarence Miles followed with another rebounding shot and Maynor added two free throws for a 37-31 lead with 4:40 left.

Finally, a three-point play by Maynor with 49 seconds left ran the lead to 48-40, an eight-point spread. The Pirates had a chance at the end to run it to nine, but missed at the buzzer, taking a 48-41 lead at the half.

Old Dominion came out and pulled back in the early minutes of the second half, while the Pirates were trying to get through their zone. Conrad hit two free throws with 12:31 left to tie it at 55-55, and Billy Mann returned them to the lead at 59-57.

Herb Krusen hit a jumper to put the Pirates back up, 61-59, but the Pirates lost it again when Valentine came back in and hit six straight points for a 67-65 lead. East Carolina tied it up three times after that, with Mack's jumper with seven seconds left making it 71-71 and forcing the overtime.

A steal early in the first overtime helped ODU to a four-point lead, but a basket by Krusen and two free throws by Tyson tied it again, 77-77, and ODU failed to connect after holding the ball until a turnover with two seconds left.

Conrad got ODU the lead once more by getting a basket off the tap, but after Tyson gave the Pirates an 82-81 lead with 3:36 left, McAdoo hit two free throws to give ODU the lead, 83-82, and they never lost it again.

McAdoo finished up with 26 points, while Valentine had 25 and Vaughan had 10.

The Pirates were led by Mack with 25, running his career total to 1,063, ahead of Tom Miller's 1,048 for ninth place on the all-time list.

Maynor had 15, Krusen (who suffered through one of his worst nights shooting, 5-12) had 11 and Underwood had 10.

The loss spoiled the bid of the Pirates to go to .500 ball as they fell back to 9-11. Old Dominion is now 15-3.

Pirates Place 2nd

DURHAM — Karen Schramm of Duke won every event and the all-around competition to lift Duke to an easy win in a gymnastics tri-meet against East Carolina and Western Carolina yesterday. The Blue Devils scored 116 points to 108 for the Pirates and 105 for the Catamounts.

Schramm won the vaulting with an 8.6 score, the floor exercise at 8.2, the balance beam with an 8.1 mark and the uneven bars in 7.95. Her all-around total was 32.85 points.

Phyllis Nelson of East Carolina earned the highest place for the Pirates, using a 28.1 total for second in the all-around competition. In individual events, Carol Layton's third place on the balance beam at 6.65 was the only finish in the top three for the Pirates, now 3-4.

East Carolina will be idle until Feb. 17 when the Pirates meet Georgia College in Milledgeville, Ga.

NBA All-Stars Face Off Today

A record crowd of 30,000 is expected to assemble under the dome for the National Basketball Association's 29th annual All-Star game, and they'll have a hometown hero after all, thanks to league Commissioner Larry O'Brien.

With Philadelphia forward Doug Collins sidelined by a foot injury, O'Brien on Friday named Detroit center Bob Lanier to the East squad.

The absence of any Pistons in balloting by fans for the starting five and voting by NBA coaches for reserves threatened to make it three years in a row the All-Star host city wasn't represented in the game.

Milwaukee was snubbed two years ago, and Atlanta last season.

Lanier's appearance should help Houston's Moses Malone, who before Friday was the East's only center against Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of Los Angeles and Chicago's Artis Gilmore for the west.

Lanier won't be the only local hero. Pontiac's own Campy Russell of the University of Michigan and the Cleveland Cavaliers is a reserve for the East team of Washington Coach Dick Motta.

Also on the East team are starters Rudy Tomjanovich of Houston and George Gervin of San Antonio. Tomjanovich was a star at Hamtramck High School and the University of Michigan, while Gervin was a prep star at Detroit King and college standout at Eastern Michigan.

"It's the showcase of the stars," Gervin said. "Anybody can ignite it. I'm not coming in to steal the show. I'm just coming to be one of the stars."

Wolfpack Races Past Lady Pirates

Reflector Sports Writer

N. C. State's nationally-ranked women's basketball team took command early in the game Friday night en route to a 94-58 victory over East Carolina.

The tall and talented Wolfpack team shot out to a 10-point lead midway through the first half and used a balanced scoring attack and stingy 1-3-1 zone defense to hand the Pirates their worst defeat of the season.

About the only bright spot for East Carolina on the night was forward Rosie Thompson's 1,500th career point at ECU. The 5-9 junior came into the game needing seven points to reach the magic number and acheived it with just under 11 minutes left in the game. She received a standing ovation from the crowd of 1,000 and the game ball from Athletic Director Bill Cain.

"It's tough to lose, but in a way it's not as tough to lose to a team like N. C. State," first-year Pirate coach Cathy Andruzzi said after the game. "We were a little hesitant at first, but we were like the men in the valley against the green giants out there."

Andruzzi said her team's 26 first-half turnovers were a major factor in the Pirates' falling behind by a 45-26 halftime score. The game was all but over at intermission because the Wolfpack's defense was impervious to any type of Pirate rally.

"The first half was very slow for us offensively," Andruzzi said. "We weren't moving the ball and we didn't get any offense from Gail (Kerbaugh) and Rosie." Kerbaugh and Thompson are the leading scorers on the ECU squad, averaging 24.5 and 14.3 points per game, respectively.

Thompson scored just 11 points against the Wolfpack, her lowest total of the season. Her second-worst performance was 12 points in an earlier game against State, a 106-74 loss.

"Rosie had a lot of pressure on her tonight," Andruzzi explained. "They were on her like tooth and nails out there. She couldn't get the ball. She's more of a driving player and when she got two offensive fouls early, it took her out of the game a little bit."

Andruzzi said Thompson didn't find out she was close to the 1,500 point mark until early last week and that put additional pressure on her. Center Marcia Girven paced the Pirate scorers with 15 points and was the only other ECU player in double figures.

N. C. State coach Kay Yow was pleased with her team's performance. "We were very patient on offense, we worked the ball well and everybody got into the offense."

The balanced Wolfpack attack was led by substitute Connie Rogers' 18 points, while five other players were in double figures. Sub June Deby and All-American Genia Beasley had 15 each, Ronnie Laughlin had 13, Christy Earnhardt had 12 and Ginger Rouse had 10.

Yow termed the game "a good, team effort." The team has been playing well recently and has found the consistency it has been seeking.

"For about the last six games, we've played this type of ballgame. 'We're very consistent, and that's what we've been looking for. The effort and hustle just continue to be there game in and game out".

Beasley, a 6-2 forward, and Rouse, a 5-11 guard, both scored below their averages of 19.7 and 14.8 points, respectively. Both also missed part of the game due to injury problems.

Rouse suffered from a recurring back problem and was unable to play in the second half, while Beasley went out late in the game with an ankle injury. "It was a really costly game for us," Yow said, although she said Beasley's injury didn't appear serious. "It's a good thing it's Friday and they can both rest over the weekend."

Despite the fact that Andruzzi was hoping for a closer game than the previous 32-point loss to State, she did find a few things to be happy about Friday night.

"There was a lot of publicity about this game and that has given our girls some incentive. We're a young team, a building team. A game like this can only be experience for us. And we had probably the biggest crowd of the year tonight."

The Pirates were also able to rebound with the taller Wolfpack front line, getting 39 caroms to 40 for State. "To be able to hit the boards against a team like that is an accomplishment," Andruzzi said.

"And we didn't get into foul trouble like we used to get into in a game like this.'

"There is a lot we have to work on. We have youth, but we don't have the talent we need right now to go against a team like this."

Well, so much for the "breather' on North Carolina's schedule.

"I know no one last year or this year beat us like that," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith after a shocking 83-70 loss to Furman Friday night. "We've been in every game for the last two years with two or three minutes left. But that wasn't the case tonight."

The fourth-ranked Tar Heels were big favorites to beat the supposedly weaker Southern Conference team in the opener of the annual North-South basketball doubleheader at Charlotte, N.C.

But the Paladins beat the Tar Heels with what Coach Eddie Holbrook called "the best offensive execution we've had all year."

"It's a long way from Boiling Springs (North Carolina, where Holbrook coached Gardner-Webb) to the North-South," added the ecstatic Furman coach. "This has to be the highlight of my coaching career."

North Carolina State won the second game, beating Virginia Tech 97-88.

Marquette, No. 12, was the only other ranked team in action Friday night, stopping St. Louis University 71-51.

Forward Al Daniel scored 29 points to lead the Furman offense. The Paladins took a three-point halftime lead, outscored North Carolina by a 2-to-1 margin in the first 10 minutes of the second half and coasted to victory.

"That was just a marvelous effort by Furman," noted Smith, whose Tar Heels play Virginia Tech tonight as the two Carolina teams switch opponents.

Hawkeye Whitney scored 27 points and Clyde Austin had 17 as North Carolina State rallied from a 10-point deficit to beat Virginia Tech.

"Our defense was excellent," said Wolfpack Coach Norman Sloan. "VPI is a very fine team with a lot of veterans. Austin had a fine game for us. He's been struggling some but he broke through tonight at both ends of the floor."

Bernard Toone's 20 points led Marquette over St. Louis.

"It's one of the few games this season where we've played well over 40 minutes," said Marquette Coach Hank Raymonds.

Elsewhere, Yale beat Princeton 53-47 as Tim Daalman and Dick Shea scored 12 points each; Paul Mokeski's 23 points paced Kansas over Oklahoma State 82-71; Tony Price and Matt White each scored 17 as Penn beat Brown 72-60; Harvard whipped Cornell 70-64 behind Mark Harris' 19 points; Alton Byrd's 15 points led Columbia past Dartmouth 45-40; Joe Nehls scored 27 as Arizona defeated California 83-75 and Wolfe Perry's 22 points led Stanford past Arizona State 75-61.

ECU Swimmers Get Revenge Against Duke

Competing in their final dual meet of the season yesterday, the East Carolina men's swimming team avenged two previous losses to Duke, downing the Blue Devils 68-45. The ECU women fell to Duke 92-30.

In men's competition, the Pirates lost the first two events and then went on to take nine of the next 11 for a commanding lead. Six new meet records were set, four of those by East Carolina.

Ted Nieman established a new meet record in the 200 freestyle with a time of 1:41.88. Bill Fehling set a new mark in the 50 freestyle in 21.35 seconds and John Tudor swam the 100 freestyle in 46.18 seconds to improve that meet standard. In the last event of the day, the Pirate 400 freestyle relay team of Tudor, Jack Clowar, Fehling and Nieman took four seconds off the old meet record with a time of 3:07.45.

ECU coach Ray Scharf commented, "This was a good, good victory for us, coming off the loss to N. C. State. Duke had bumped us off the last two seasons, so the team was ready. We had a good team performance today, good team intensity."

Scharf felt that the women swam well, regardless of the final score. Julie Malcolm broke her own school record in the 200 breaststroke, swimming a time of 2:40.625. Freshman Karen Davidson set a new school record in the 200 backstroke with a time of 2:23.03 and then teamed with Paige Langston, Cindy Sailor and Sharon Burns to add another record in the 400 freestyle relay in 3:53.665.

In men's diving, Tom Bell of East Carolina took first place in both one and three meter competition with scores of 271.15 and 268.10, respectively.

The East Carolina men finished the season with a 5-3 record and the Pirate women dropped to 3-4.

Rocky Mount Rally Stops Rose, 60-56

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

ROCKY MOUNT — Rose High School's Rampants, not knowing that they had a chance to move into a tie for first place in Division I, blew their composure in the final period Friday night, and allowed Rocky Mount to rally for a 60-56 victory.

The Rampant girls also fell victim to the same situation, losing a late lead, then bowing in a double overtime, 53-46. Rose managed to win only the junior varsity game, 70-61.

Rose moved out in the first period to as much as a ten point lead, and again held that margin late in the second quarter before a three-point turnaround at halftime that left them up by nine.

Even then, Rose carried a seven point spread into the final quarter, only to see Rocky Mount, which had been icy from the floor, catch fire in the final eight minutes.

At the same time, Rose was guilty of only 40 per cent shooting, and committed twice as many turnovers in the period as did the Gryphons.

The real difference in the scoring came at the foul line, where the Gryphons cashed in on 14 of 28 shots from the line, while Rose made good on just six of eight.

"We just can't have that kind of a ball game, and hope to win," he said. "The turnovers might have hurt us in the late stages of the game, but I just can't say what I'd like to say."

Brewington added that he felt the Rampants played well enough to win. "It's just a tough break for the kids," he said. It was even tougher when the Rampants learned that Northern Nash, the conference leader, also lost, and Rose had thus had a chance to tie for first place, had they won.

"I really hate to lose like this after leading the whole game," he added.

Rose enjoyed a four-point margin from the floor in the game, hitting on 25 of 52 shots from the field. Rocky Mount made 23 of 61, in the final period, the Gryphons made seven of 11 shots, while Rose hit just four of ten. Rocky Mount was also seven of 12 at the line, while Rose was two of two.

In the turnover department, Rose committed 23 to Rocky Mount's 16, with eight of those turnovers coming in the final period, and 13 of them coming in the second half.

For a while, it looked like the Rampants would have little trouble with the Gryphons. From a 4-4 tie, Rose broke away on two baskets by Wallace Brown and Donald House to take an 8-4 lead. After another Gryphon basket, Rose pouned in seven in a row, including a three-point play by House to take a 15-6 margin with 2:09 left.

After a Gryphon free throw, Brown scored on a driving layup with 1:29 left to make it 17-7.

Rose then led, 19-10, at the end of the period.

Rocky Mount cut the lead back to four at 27-23 with 3:30 left in the half, but Rose pulled away again to lead by ten, 34-24 with 1:00 showing.

Then, the Rampants had the ball for the final shot, but missed, and Donald Mabry was fouled with only a fraction of a second left on the clock. He made that to cut it to 34-25, instead of Rose hitting and having a 12-point spread.

Rocky Mount again cut the lead to three, 36-33, But Rose pulled away again, building its lead back to seven on three occasions, the last time at 46-39 as the quarter ended.

After running it back to nine, 48-39 on two free throws by House, the Rampants fan into trouble, and were guilty of their eight turnovers and poor shooting the rest of the way.

Rose regained the lead on a baseline jumper by Tyrone Tucker, but Ricky Ricks hit with 4:17 showing for another tie, 52-52.

Ricks again was the hero, hitting with 3:04 showing to put the Gryphons ahead for the first time, 54-52, and they ran that out to 59-52 before Rose finally scored again, after a three-minute drought. By then, it was too late.

Lewis led Rocky Mount with 18 points, while Braswell had 15.

Dennis Ross paced Rose with 16, while Brown had 14 and Tucker pitched in 11.

The Rampettes suffered almost the same fate, losing a lead in the final period, although it did take two overtimes for Rocky Mount to win it.

Rose gained the lead for the first time at 7-6, and powered to a seven-point lead before the period ended at 15-8. They ran their margin to nine at 23-14, but led only 25-20 at halftime.

Rose maintained its lead in the third period, but carried only a 39-36 margin into the final quarter.

That period saw Rose score only a free throw, and that came in time to tie it up with 37 seconds left, at 40-40. Rocky Mount missed a chance to score at the end, forcing the first overtime.

Rose got the initial lead, and then went back ahead after Rocky Mount scored. But after it was tied again at 44-44 with 45 seconds left, neither team was able to hit again.

Finally, in the second overtime, Helen Thorpe hit after nearly 30 seconds to put Rocky Mount ahead for good. They added two more baskets before Rose scored, and the Rampettes never caught up again.

Jennifer Cherry led Rocky Mount with 21 points, while Bonnie Powell had 11. Rose was led by Sharon Williams and Margaret McGlohon, both with ten.

"We played well to do what we did," Coach Robert Carraway said. "We were missing Patricia Bynum, who sprained an ankle Thursday, and that really hurt us. But the girls felt they could win anyway, and I think they did a super job.

"It was probably the best team effort we've had this year. But we got into foul trouble late, and when they went to a delay we were content to let them play with it.

"What really hurt us was when they went to their man-to-man defense. For some reason, we have had trouble against that, and it killed us."

Washington Defeats 'Skins; Claims Title

WASHINGTON — Washington blew out to a 28-9 first-quarter lead and went on to easily defeat Roanoke 97-76 in a high school basketball game Friday night.

Dominique Wilkins led the Pam-Pack with 30 points. Three other Washington players were in double figures, James Barnes with 21, Antoine Jackson with 16 and Shawn Williams with 11. The win clinched the Northeastern Conference championship for undefeated Washington.

Edward Ward scored 19 for Roanoke, Jasper Martin had 17 and Hilton Griffin added 12.

The Washington girls knocked Roanoke out of a tie for first place in the conference by defeating the Squaws 63-54.

Washington led 10-8 at the end of the first period and upped that margin to 30-24 at the half. The Lady Pam Pack was up 46-37 going into the final period.

Hodges had 20 points to pace Washington and Brenda Minns added 16. Carolyn Jones had 14, Senfield Jones 13 and Sylvia Parker 10 for Roanoke.

Bullets Are Near Title

JAMESVILLE — Jamesville High School swept a pair of games from Aurora last night, and the boys team moved toward a Tuesday night showdown for the Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Conference championship.

The Bullets won their game, 71-64, while the Lady Bullets took a 37-33 decision. Aurora won the junior varsity game, 77-71.

In the boys, game, Jamesville edged ahead, 14-12, after one period of play, then pulled away to hold a 30-21 margin at the half.

The Bullets continued to pull away in the third frame, moving their lead out to 51-32. Aurora managed a 32-20 comeback in the final quarter, but fell well short.

Tommy DiNardo led the Bullets with 40 points. For Aurora, Brant Johnson had 23, Michael Simpson had 13, Vincent Blount had 12 and Edwin Moore had 11.

The Jamesville girls edged into a 9-6 lead after the first period, but saw Aurora come back to tie it at 17-17 at the half. Jamesville inched back out, 25-24, after three frames, then outhit Aurora, 12-9, down the stretch, for the win.

Joyce Manning led the Bullets with 13, while Lori Modlin added 10. J. Gray had 17 to lead Aurora.

Jamesville's boys are now 11-1 in league play and travel to Pantego on Tuesday. The Warriors are the only league team that had a chance to overcome the Bullets in the week of play remainin in the regular season. A Jamesville win would clinch the regular season title.

Falls Road In Winning Rally

Greenville jumped off to a 12-6 lead in the first period, but Falls Road came back in the second quarter to show it intended to make a game of it. They cut the lead back to 22-18 at halftime.

In the third period, the Knights pulled away again, running their lead out to 36-27. But the final period saw Falls Road outscore GCA, 24-10, making the most of free throw attempts, to come back and post the win.

The Falls Road junior varsity won its game, 44-39, while the girls also won. The score and details of the girls game were not available.

A SERIES OF legislative proposals has been prepared by the N. C. Wildlife Resources Commission to help alleviate the Commission's financial difficulties and will be introduced shortly to the N. C. General Assembly, according to Commission Field Representative Tim Hergenrader.

Faced with rising costs and an increased demand for services while some forms of revenue actually decrease, the Commission has come up with five proposals to increase revenue.

"If we continue with existing expenditures with no new funding, we will be $2.1 million in the red next year and $1.8 million in the red the following year," Hergenrader said. That is out of a $10 million budget, so you can see we're hurting."

Two major factors are contributing to the Commission's financial woes. The first is inflation. "We're hit just like everybody else." Secondly, license sales, a major source of revenue, are declining every year.'

Despite these two things, sportsmen are demanding more services from the Commission each year, Hergenrader said. "If we don't get an increase (in revenue), obviously we're going to have to cut back (on services). Something's got to give somewhere."

THE COMMISSION'S FIRST proposal is an increase in license fees. There are a number of different kinds of licenses issued by the Commission for hunting, fishing, trapping, etc. that the Commission wants to increase an average of 40 per cent per license.

For example, according to this proposal, a hunting or fishing license would be increased from $7.50 to $10; a combination hunting and fishing license would be increased from $10 to $12.50; a sportsman's license would be increased from $25 to $30; and a big game license would be increased from $3.50 to $10.

The second proposal is for a repeal of the live bait provision. This provision allows persons fishing in their own county of residence with live bait to fish without a license.

"That provision costs us a lot of money every year," Hergenrader said, and the Commission would like it to be abolished.

THIRDLY, THE COMMISSION would like an income tax refund check-off box included on state income tax forms that would allow taxpayers to donate $1, $5 or $10 of their tax refund money to the Commission.

"This money would be earmarked for non-game or endangered species work and is an attempt to get funding for these programs for some sources other than hunters or fishermen," Hergenrader said, who in the past have footed the major part of the bill for such programs.

A similar program in the state of Colorado has generated over $300,000, Hergenrader noted.

Another proposal would set up boat registration centers around the state and also increase the registration fees for boats.

Currently, boat owners must register their boats through the Commission's Raleigh office, but this proposal would set up several registration centers throughout the state.

In addition, fees would be increased from $3 to $5.50 for a one-year registration and from $7.50 to $13 for a three-year registration. The money from boat registration fees is used for boating education and building boat access areas.

The final proposal would provide compensation for the Commission for free permits issued to special groups.

According to Hergenrader, the legislature gives free hunting and fishing permits to such groups as those over 70 and the handicapped. "We don't mind doing it," he said of the Commission's duty to issue these permits, "but we think we ought to be reimbursed for that."

THE COMMISSION HAS no power to introduce bills into the General Assembly, Hergenrader said, so it must find a Senator or Representative to back these proposals and bring them before the legislature.

The list of proposals "will be introduced," Hergenrader said, "but whether it will pass again is another question."

Plymouth Tops Williamston

WILLIAMSTON — Plymouth had three players with 20 points or more Friday night as the Vikings defeated Williamston 76-51 in a high school basketball game.

Plymouth led nearly the entire way, building up a 29-18 halftime cushion and blasting the Tigers in the second half.

Terry Bell led the way with 26 points for the winners, while Jerry Johnson had 22 and Derrick Purkett 20. James Woolard was the only Tiger in double figures with 16.

The Tigerettes remained in a tie for the lead in the Northeastern Conference girls' race by defeating the Valkyries 52-32.

Williamston, led by a defensive performance that held Plymouth under 10 points in three of the game's quarters, had little trouble with the Valkyries. JoAnna Lilley paced the team with 18 points.

Rams Slip By Vikes, 47-45

HOLLYWOOD — Jay Ham scored a basket with 20 seconds left to give Greene Central a one-point lead and James Best hit a foul shot with one second on the clock as the Rams defeated D. H. Conley 47-45 Friday night.

Greene Central jumped out to a 10-5 lead in the first quarter, but Conley cut it to 24-21 at the half. It was 32-29 at the end of the third quarter and the Vikings had the lead before Ham's shot late in the game.

Best paced the Rams with 14 points, and Ham and Gralyn Edwards had 12 each. Mitchell Moore scored 16 for Conley and Shawn Little had 11.

Conley raced to a comfortable 15-8 margin in the first period and led 30-23 at the half. The Lady Rams outscored the Valkyries 19-12 in the second half to tie the game, but were outscored 4-2 in overtime.

Chargers Top Southern Nash

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton swept a pair of high school basketball games from Southern Nash Friday night, winning the girls' game 60-41 and the boys' game 55-47.

The Chargerettes held on to a share of first place in the Eastern Carolina Conference by downing the Lady Firebirds. They led only 15-12 at the end of the first quarter, but outscored Southern Nash 22-12 in the second period and coasted in to their victory.

Ayden-Grifton built up a 32-20 lead in the first half of the boys' game and then held off the Firebirds for an eight-point victory.

Mike Hardee paced the Charger attack with 17 points, while Donnie Jackson and Melton Cannon had 10 each. Anthony Crumel was high for Southern Nash with 20 points and Dexter High scored 16.

Wright Hooks

Hooks To Be Deacon

Wright Hooks, a former member of the Rose High School baseball team, has signed a grant-in-aid with Wake Forest University.

Hooks, who also played football at Rose, is currently attending Louisburg College, where he is the starting catcher for the Hurricane baseball team. Last year's Louisburg team had a 33-6 record and playing in the regional junior college tournament at Columbia, Tennessee.

An honor student at Louisburg, Hooks served as a marshall for the 1978 graduation exercises. He will enroll at Wake Forest in the fall, following the completion of the 1979 baseball season at Louisburg.

Hooks is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Edgar Hooks of Greenville.

Johnson Is Fired

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Light heavyweight champion Marvin Johnson has been fired from a federal public job he held while earning more than $45,000 in boxing, city officials said.

Johnson, who holds the World Boxing Council title, and heavyweight Tom Prater were fired Friday from their Comprehensive Employment and Training Act jobs, said Harry T. McFarland, director of the city's division of employment and training.

Both Johnson and Prater were unemployed when they were hired last year and met CETA's regulations, McFarland said. The program requires that persons applying for CETA jobs must have been unemployed for at least one month.

The two were hired by the city to train young fighters at the Indianapolis Police Department's Police Athletic League Club, said Lt. John B. Moore, club supervisor.

"We are not letting them go," Moore said. "The department may put them on its payroll. Johnson has really helped our program," he added.

Bears Take Two From Lakers

BEAR GRASS — Bear Grass exploded for 53 second-half points as the Bears routed Mattamuskeet 78-57 in a high school basketball game Friday night.

Bear Grass led only 14-11 at the end of the first quarter and the Lakers outscored the Bears in the second period for a 26-25 halftime lead.

But Bear Grass bombed Mattamuskeet 28-14 in the third quarter and went on to an easy victory.

Watson Rogers paced the Bears with 22 points, while Jackie Harrison had 19 and Jesse Bullock 13. Michael Toppings had 15 for Mattamuskeet, Benny Harris added 12 and Odell Spencer 11.

In the girls' game, Bear Grass pulled ahead of Mattamuskeet in the fourth quarter for a 48-45 victory.

The Lady Bears trailed 12-8 at the end of the first period and 26-20 at the half. They rallied to tie the game at 32-32 in the third quarter and then pulled ahead in the final period.

Joette Rogers scored 21 points and Paula Williams 14 for Bear Grass. Augusta Grays had 17 and Vanessa Credle 11 for Mattamuskeet.

Won't Go To Mat

BELLEVUE, Wash. (AP) — Bellevue High School's best-known wrestler is in a fighting mood because grapplers from other schools won't go to the mat with her.

Sophomore Rhonda Bingham is undefeated in three trips to the mat because her male opponents forfeited rather than face her in what they acknowledge is a ticklish situation.

"I like to wrestle. I have a right to wrestle," says the 5-foot-2 Bingham, who enters in the 115-pound weight class.

The latest forfeiture was by sophomore Lynn Martin of Interlake High School, who was so uncomfortable at the prospect of grappling with a girl that he bowed out Thursday night.

"I asked Martin if he was willing to wrestle with her and he told me he would be willing to wrestle if the team needed him but he really didn't want to," said Coach Thurmond Lander. "I decided I couldn't put him under that kind of pressure."

When Bingham made her solo trip to the mat to have the official raise her arm in victory, the Interlake team applauded her and fans cheered.

One Interlake sophomore said, "Martin, he just didn't want to be the first. You'd be teased, you know, about brutalizing a girl."

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, FEB. 4, 1979

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You may be tempted to make a commitment to others today which would be most unwise. Your time is best spent studying ethical, philosophical and spiritual thought.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You want to increase your present abundance, but this is not the day to take definite steps, but fine for studying and making plans.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Show your devotion to friends by helping them with their affairs. Your intuition is accurate at this time.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A good day for meditation and to put aside worldly matters for the time being. Take time for the social later.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Take time to study your true desires and plan just how to attain them. Show others that you have poise.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Be sure to study a community affair well before you attempt to handle it. Know your true status in life and take steps to improve it.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Take time to study a new project before making plans to put it in operation. Make it your business to find out who and what you are.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't try to renege on some promise you made or you could find yourself in a mess of trouble. Avoid one who has an eye on your assets.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A situation arises today that requires you to change your attitude, and it is to your best interest that you do. Be wise.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You are now able to return a favor which another has down for you in the past. Express happiness.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Study new interests that could give you added abundance in the days ahead. Show continued devotion to your mate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't upset anyone at home, especially in the afternoon since others are in a touchy mood. Make plans for the future.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A time to relax and enjoy yourself and remove any tensions you may have. Make plans to improve your career in some way.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one who can handle financial problems well, so be sure to give as fine an education as you can. Stress logic and economy. Be sure not to neglect spiritual training, but don't force sports on your progeny.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, FEB. 5, 1979

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Good opportunities present themselves that offer you a chance to get out of the rut you are in. Carry through with a logical course already begun.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Morning is best for communicating and corresponding with others. Relegate any visits to friends or kin to the evening.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Study financial affairs well before following through with concrete plans. An expert can be helpful if you confer with this person.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get into those personal activities that will best help you to gain your aims. Later, be with those who most admire you and find greater happiness in their company.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Take time to devise a more intelligent course of action that will make all of your activities work more efficiently, profitably. Show more affection for loved ones.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A fine time to contact others and communicate well with them. Also good for handling important business affairs. Spend some time with good friends.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Contact a bigwig you know and gain support for your finest talents. If you get involved in community projects you gain prestige you need.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get into new and clever outlets and put aside the dull routine for the time being and get ahead faster. Follow hunches since they are quite accurate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Find a better way to handle obligations and get better results. Please kin more and have more accord. Take no risks with health.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Plan how to deal with associates so there is more mutual success in the future. A new method for handling civic duties can yield fine benefits, results.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) If you use a new method in work ahead of you, you can derive fine benefits from it. Take special treatments that will build your vitality.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Make plans early for future amusement, then delve into work ahead of you. A gift to a loved one can get you out of the doghouse.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Put plans to work that will please kin more, bring more harmony at home. Look into a new project that could prove to be both interesting and profitable to you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will get along very well with others, especially those who are interesting and prominent. There is a fine mind here and an excellent physique also, as well as love of fellow man, plus a religious fervor that is well controlled.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Band Boosters In Monthly Meeting

Suggested fund-raising projects to help pay for the overlays and hat-plumes of the band's marching uniforms were a barbe-que dinner and an aluminum paper drive. Bruce Williams was elected chairperson of the dinner to be held April 7 at D. H. Conley High School. Chairpersons will be apponted at each of the county elementary schools for the aluminum paper drive.

Other committee chairpersons appointed were: publicity, Shirley Banks; hot dog wagon, Ruth Carson and Mr. and Mrs. James Heath; historian, Nancy Evans; finance, Jimmy Dunn.

Letters of sincere thanks are being sent to the County Board of Education and Commissioners for obtaining a mobile band room for the Chicod School.

The next meeting will be held at the G. R. Whitfield Elmentary School in Grimesland on February 22.

Traffic Reporter, 16, Is Heard But Never Seen

By MARK D. FRANK

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — Thousands of motorists take the sound advice of a radio traffic reporter who's barely old enough to have a learner's permit.

But 16-year-old David Armon, an aggressive, self-assured high school junior, prides himself on the reliability of his 19 daily reports, heard Monday through Friday on WHAM, Rochester, a 50,000-watt clear channel station, and its sister station WHFM.

During the morning rush hour, WHAM is the city's highest rated station. Armon's credibility cuts through the adolescent squeaking and crackling of a voice in the process of change. Other stations in town monitor his reports.

"I don't think my age should have anything to do with it," said Armon, who is sensitive about the subject. "I have the most complete, accurate and best traffic report in the area."

Using police scanners, a network of about 30 in-traffic citizens band reporters, 15 semi-regular spotters and telephone contacts with area police, it takes Armon about 10 minutes to put together his reports, which run from 20 seconds to as long as needed on bad days.

He disdains in-flight traffic reporters and gimmickry.

"In the Rochester area the weather is cloudy most of the time and it's difficult for a plane or helicopter to fly because of instrument flight conditions," said the bushy-haired, bespectacled Rochester native, who takes flying lessons in his spare time. "The worst days for motorists are days of rain and snow, and small planes can't fly. My in-traffic reporters go out in all kinds of weather and they're all over the area, not just in one spot."

Armon "was playing radio station" in his parent's basement at age 5. When he was 10, he had put together an in-house radio station. By his 12th birthday, he had joined neighborhood chums in establishing an on-air station.

But that wasn't enough for Armon, who admits to being "pushy" at times. "I wanted to work at 13 and I had a tough time finding something to do," he recalled. "Babysitting just wasn't it."

A paper route wasn't his style either, so in the summer of 1976 Armon started hanging around WAXC-AM, a top 40 oldies station, "conning disc jockeys" into letting him and some other hangers-on handle phone calls for the station's request line.

"The kids who hung out usually had an interest in radio," said Bob Scott, former WAXC program director. "We'd usually put them to work just to get them out of the way."

But Armon distinguished himself from the other kids. He began gathering news in the summer of 1977 and relayed traffic information to the morning disc jockey with a CB.

Scott wanted to create formal, scheduled traffic reports during rush hours when he took over as program director in July 1977. He was so impressed with Armon that he put him on the air on an irregular basis.

"It was kind of a joke at first because, after all, we were dealing with a 14-year-old kid," Scott recalled, "but it turned into a serious, sponsored venture because his reports were factual and credible." At the time, Armon had about five regular CBers calling in road information.

WAXC underwent major ownership, management, format and staff changes — and even changed its call letters — but Armon stayed through it all and his CB network grew to about 25 correspondents.

Still, the industrious Armon wanted to move on to a "bigger place." Scott moved over to WHAM as a part-time on-air personality and mentioned Armon's interest to WHAM program director John R. Murphy.

"We had a casual relationship with WHFM regarding our traffic reports, but it was more of a hit-and-miss operation," Murphy said. "We wanted to develop our own traffic reports and I had heard about the CB network Dave had built up."

Murphy was aware of Armon's age — sort of.

"My first impression was that he was so young," Murphy said. "I really didn't know how young he was. He was very self-assured. But even at that I thought he was 17 or 18. When I found out he was 15 I almost fell off my chair."

On Aug. 26, 1978, Armon became the youngest employee in WHAM's 56-year history.

"I was kidding with the general manager (Robert Luther) and said, 'Since you're trying to get a younger audience, I've gotten you a high school kid.'" Murphy laughed. Obviously, not your ordinary high school kid. Armon reports for work about 6 a.m., leaves for school at 9 and returns at 3 p.m. for afternoon reports.

Murphy says Armon provides "definitely the best report in town," and George Haefner, co-host of a popular morning show calls Armon "totally professional."

"I don't feel funny at all working with someone so young because he doesn't act his age," said Haefner, more than 40 years Armon's senior.

Armon's reports are so good a competing station wanted to pirate Armon's CB channel. "Dave went crazy when he heard that," Murphy said.

"Most kids his age would be going to the malt shop instead of doing this," said Murphy, perhaps recalling his younger days. "But he's got the greatest part-time job of any 16-year-old I know."

Dental Hotline Begins Feb. 5

CHAPEL HILL — Got a question about your child's teeth?

The North Carolina Orthodontic Society and the state Pedodontic Society will sponsor a Dental Health Answerline during Children's Dental Health Week Feb. 5-9.

The public can call (919) 933-0943 during 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. to ask questions about children's dental problems. The line will be staffed by dentists who have volunteered their time.

Teams of dentists and dental auxiliaries will visit many elementary schools statewide to talk about basic health care for teeth. Displays on children's dental activities will be set up in area shopping malls Feb. 10.

Public Invited To Open House

The public is invited to attend an open house at the Greenville Pre-release and Aftercare Center at 108 Dexter St. Monday from 10 a.m. until 11 o'clock.

Pat Higgins, center director, said the open house will be followed at 11:45 a.m. by graduation ceremonies for the center's first group of clients, which is by invitation only.

The graduation program will be held at the Memorial Baptist Church on Greenville Boulevard.

Principal's List Is Announced

FALKLAND — The Principal's List for the past marking period at Falkland Elementary School has been released.

Air In America Cleaner But Not Completely Safe

By JAMES PHILLIPS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eight years have passed since Congress passed the 1970 Clean Air Act — and America's air is getting cleaner.

But America's air still is not completely safe to breathe.

The Environmental Protection Agency estimates industries and governments have spent $67.4 billion on air pollution controls since 1970.

EPA administrator Douglas Costle says "sulfur dioxide is down 17 percent, carbon dioxide is down 20 percent, particulates are down 8 percent and urban smog levels are at least stable..."

But EPA statistics also show that of the 3,215 counties and parishes in the United States and territories:

—583 counties have levels of smog higher than permitted by law, and these encompass virtually every major urban area in the nation.

—413 counties exceed allowable levels for particulate matter such as dust, smoke and soot.

—165 counties have excesssive carbon monoxide.

—Seven counties have levels of nitrogen dioxide higher than permitted by law.

The 1970 law required everybody to meet the standards by 1975. Marvin Durning, EPA's chief of enforcement, notes that "we missed the deadline in some respects.

"But those who scoffed at the program were wrong. We've done a lot more than the scoffers and skeptics thought we could do."

And much work remains to be done.

EPA fights its air pollution war against two enemies — mobile sources such as autos, and stationary sources such as power plants, factories, smelters and refineries.

Autos present the most difficult problem because they contribute to urban smog, the single worst pollution problem in the United States.

One recent study found that only 31 percent of the exhaust emission controls on autos are working properly. Many were deliberately sabotaged to render them ineffective, the EPA study noted.

Durning believes one answer to this dilemma is to require all motorists to have their cars inspected annually to insure the pollution controls are working properly — an idea already in effect in Tucson and Phoenix, Ariz., and under consideration in other areas.

EPA recently relaxed its smog standard from 8 parts per million to 12 ppm, a decision based on new medical studies showing smog is not as harmful to health as once thought. But this relaxation is unlikely to herald any vast improvement.

Of all cities over 200,000 population, only Honolulu, Hawaii, and Spokane, Wash., meet the 8 ppm standard. EPA officials estimated another 10 to 20 cities might meet the revised standard.

Smog problems are aggravated by continued growth in the number of autos. In Denver, Colo., and Toledo, Ohio, smog has increased since 1970, but in the country as a whole, it has stabilized "despite a 30 percent increase in vehicle miles traveled," Costle said.

On the stationary front, EPA estimates there are 200,000 minor air pollution sources and 23,000 major sources. A major source emits 100 tons or more of regulated pollutants in a year. State agencies regulate the minor sources. EPA concentrates on the major ones.

Durning says 88 percent of the major sources are in compliance with the law, 4 percent are installing pollution controls and 8 percent have failed to set a timetable or plan to halt emissions.

But the compliance figures are "disproportionate" because the ones still polluting comprise some of the major headaches for the agency — power plants, steel mills, petroleum refineries and smelters.

EPA has recently achieved some success in dealing with major polluters, citing agreements with firms to curb emissions at Republic Steel plants in Youngstown and Warren, Ohio; at U.S. Steel's works in Fairfield, Ala., and at Keystone Coke in Conschohoken, Pa.

The General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, estimates another $175 billion will have to be spent by 1986 to meet federal pollution standards. Some think that amount is exorbitant.

The costs will be borne by virtually everyone in the United States — from the new car purchaser who pays about $150 for a catalytic converter to purify exhaust emissions, to the power consumer to whom a utility passes on the cost of scrubbers to cleanse power plant smokestack emissions. Scrubbers can cost several million dollars.

Durning defends the costly program, saying, "Every indication I've seen, every poll, indicates the public strongly supports the air pollution control efforts and is willing to pay the costs."

EPA also is reviewing existing standards to determine if they should be relaxed, made more stringent or left alone.

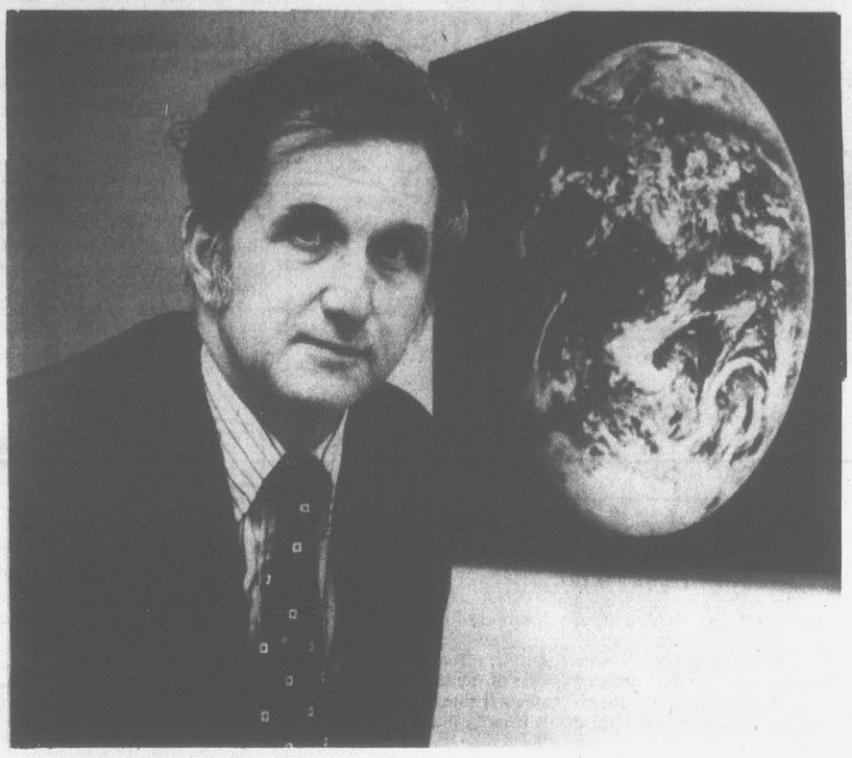

And more controls can be expected. EPA expects to attack specific pollutants soon. It recently set a level for lead in the air, and officials are trying to decide whether to set levels for arsenic, asbestos, benzine and diesel particulates, all of which may cause cancer.

Few believe the nation will meet the air pollution standards by 1982 — the latest deadline set by Congress.

But Durning says much progress has been made since 1970.

"The country has installed its system of state and local air agencies. They're all reducing air pollution," he says.

"The system is in place — and it works."

Rhythm For Skiing

FARMINGTON, Conn. (AP) — The secret to becoming a good skier, claims research scientist Walter L. Abel, is to get relaxed. The best way to do this is to get rhythm — and music can provide the body with the rhythm it needs, he adds.

Abel, vice president, research and development, for Emhart Corp. here, has spent considerable time researching and perfecting his skiing-to-music techniques. He noticed that some days he skied better than others even though he was, apparently, doing the routines the same way.

"I finally realized that those days when I was skiing well, I was also humming or singing to myself. My body was in tempo with the music, synchronizing my movements to the rhythm. That was it — the answer to better skiing," he said.

Today, with a tape recorder latched to his chest and a cassette blaring away, Abel can be seen schussing down slopes followed, like some snowbird version of a Pied Piper, by a stream of skiers eavesdropping on his tunes.

Does it work? Abel says he can transform a novice into an intermediate skier in one weekend of skiing-to-music.

The best music is something that makes you tap your toes, he says.

"It will take a few hours to get in tempo, to learn how to do the double time, half time or quarter time and to throw in those few hip wiggles to make the whole thing come out where you want the turn. When you do learn to do this, you will have become very relaxed — like a dancer."

PLAN YOUR HOME

The Delphi

Unique Plan Encircles Atrium

By Jerry Bishop

Allowing nature and sunlight to penetrate the interior of the home, the central atrium of the Delphi, an outstanding single level plan, is both attractive and functional.

Clean exterior lines, with privacy walls extending on either side, mark the facade of the Delphi. Inside, the effect is light-filled and airy.

Upon entering the gracious foyer, guests are within steps of the expansive living and dining room at left. A generous use of windows plus a cozy wood-burning fireplace give the area a brightness and charm that works well for formal or informal entertaining

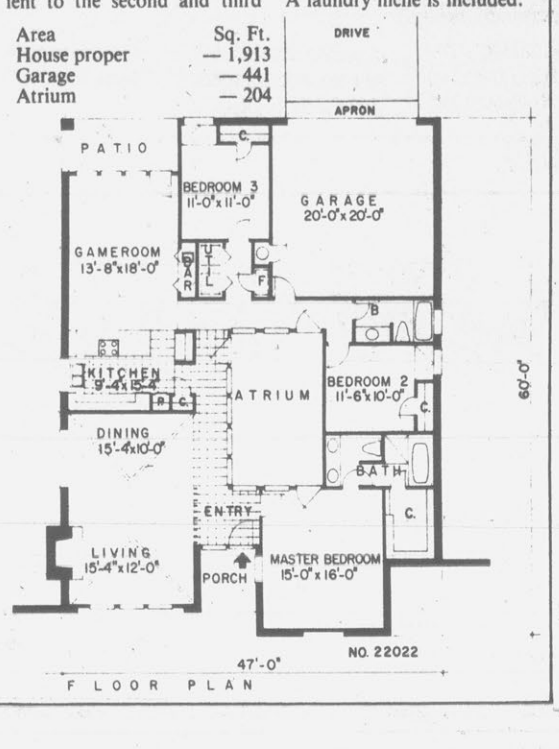

The entry hall also gives an immediate view of the atrium, glassed on three sides and an ideal spot for flowers and foliage. The atrium may be entered from the hallway or the master bedroom.

Edging the living/dining room is the compact kitchen, a U-shaped arrangement with built-in pantry. The kitchen is open to the gameroom with wet bar, and taken together, the area creates an informal activity center. A doorway links patio and gameroom.

Three bedrooms are specified in this design. Accessible from the foyer or atrium, the master bedroom shows 240 sq. ft. of floor space and annexes a compartmented bath with walk-in closet and dressing area. A second bath is convenient to the second and third bedrooms.

Notable is the rear entry garage, placed to maintain the lines of the home and offering an entry directly into the hall. A laundry niche is included.

Another Gold Rush In Home-Furnishing Area

By ELAINE Q. BARROW
AP Newsfeatures

A "gold rush" at the New York Merchandise Mart is expected to pan out for home decorators across the country.

In home furnishings, lighting and accessories, the "prospector" needn't look any further than gold-toned brass, according to Lenny Lubell at Raymor Richards, Morgenthau, Inc.

"There's been a big resurgence in brass in every home-furnishing area," Lubell says. "It has been a trend that started slowly a few years ago. People are getting tired of chrome. Brass is softer and it fits in with both contemporary and traditional styles — which chrome does not do."

Echoing the enthusiasm for brass, Wendy Fenton of Nora Fenton, Inc., says, "Brass is up, brass is big. We've made a lovely success story with it."

She pointed to a copy of an antique serpent vase, candlesticks and a new line of fireplace accessories. Among the novelties was a pinch scotch bottle, held by a brass frame with a brass cover that inverted to serve as a jigger.

"Brass is sold by the weight," she says. "There's so much brass in this that it retails for $400. But we're using this pair only for display. We'll have it knocked off with another factory which will reduce its weight and price."

Her company, she says, does not carry coated brass.

"The patina finish is not offensive to us and it can be polished with just regular brass polish," she says. "Sometimes firms that carry coated brass find that it peels and is ruined.

She acknowledges that although "it's not for Mrs. America to do, some large department stores polish brass with newspapers. They can't find people to do the time-consuming job of hand polishing."

In other displays at the Mart were brass pyramids, brass trim on wood accessories, and lamps with butterfly decorations fashioned in brass color. There were also reading lamps standing on brass bases, 5 inches tall; a glass apple with a brass stem; and even an antelope with gold antlers.

One showroom featured the robot C3PO from Star Wars, represented as a novelty overlayed with 22-karat gold. It can be used as a bank or cookie jar.

"I think brass is the whole boom," says Ruth Siegel at Decorative Crafts. "But Oriental, too, is coming in so strong you can't get the stuff."

On hand, however, were minutely detailed Oriental chests which she said had come from the Republic of China.

Gold-leaf paint added sparkle to Far Eastern tapestries in another showroom. There were also porcelain lamps from Paris, crystal accessories, stoneware and porcelains from the Far East, and composition materials formed to resemble "naturals."

Another firm presented a wealth of Oriental paintings and Oriental-mode furniture. Here again were bronzed mirror panels, one with brass-colored diagonal strips which obviously offered more to look at than into.

Opulence was carried still further by a 55-by 50-inch chromograph of a gold Rolls Royce.

In dinnerware, too, the gold theme was evident. At Rosenthal, white porcelain was highlighted with 24-karat gold in a burnished matte finish on the borders and on the tops of serving dishes.

The gold fever apparently hasn't affected the Syroco showroom, specializing in plastic KD or "lifestyle" furniture that the customer takes home and assembles.

"Although our biggest seller is wicker-appearing furniture," said Dan Sullivan, "we are still selling a lot of chrome, because we sell to the less sophisticated and those who are not as wealthy as those who are turning to brass."

An overall view is expressed by Roger Schumacher, executive director of the NYMM, which is a member of the New York Home Furnishings Council, sponsor of the winter market.

"We have returned to elegance and luxury in our homes and daily life," he said. "Here at NYMM, brass and gold-toned pieces, over the past few markets, have significantly risen in popularity."

To promote the theme, the Mart held daily drawings for $20 gold pieces.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I will soon have to cut some bottles for a project that I am working on. Can I use a hacksaw for making these cuts?

A. — Yes, but you must use one of the various blades made for such purposes. A friend of mine got good results about a year ago with a hacksaw blade that had a cutting edge made of tungsten carbide. Almost any hardware store, lumber yard or seller of do-it-yourself materials carries special blades for cutting glass. Ask the dealer's advice regarding your particular project, especially about the kind of bottles you intend to cut.

Q. — We have some cut-up wood from a cherry tree and wonder whether it is okay to use in the fireplace. Is it one of the woods that gives up a lot of heat?

A. — Yes, it is okay to use for firewood and, yes, it is one of the woods with a high heat value. Remember, though, that how much heat you get from a fireplace depends on a lot of factors besides the kind of wood. Also, when burning cherry wood, you will find it gives up a scent that is pleasant to most people.

Q. — I want to make a dry well near my house. How far away should it be from the foundation? How deep should the drainage tiles be?

A. — While a dry well usually will work effectively if it is about 8 feet from the house, it is better to place it even farther than that — 16 to 20 feet if possible. The tiles, which are more like pieces of pipe, should be laid in a trench one to two feet deep, slanted slightly in the direction of the well. While the joints need not be watertight, they should be covered with building paper.

Q. — I have read several interpretations of the new tax laws affecting the sales of homes by persons 55 years and older, but I have to admit that I am somewhat confused. As I understand it, the old law said that anyone 65 or over would not have to pay tax on the profit realized from a house that sold for $35,000 or less. I believe that sales price has now been raised to $100,000 and the age lowered 10 years. Yet I recently read that there would be no profit on the sale of a house even if it were sold for half a million dollars as long as the profit was $100,000 or less. It seems to me this is a horse of a different color or perhaps I should say a house of a different color. Am I right or am I getting dense in my old age?

A. — You aren't getting dense no matter how old you are. Since the law was signed the night before election day, I have heard discussions among tax experts as to the exact provisions of the Revenue Act of 1978. There were differences of opinion, too, so I did some research on the subject. First, let's start with the old law. Yes, it said that anyone 65 or older who sold a house would have to pay no tax on the profit realized from the first $35,000 of the sale. That meant that if you sold a house for $50,000, there would be a tax only on the profit from the amount over $35,000; that is, on $15,000. The new law, as far as I have been able to tell, says nothing about the sales price of a house sold by anyone 55 or older. It says such a person may exclude from gross income up to $100,000 of the GAINS realized from the sale of a principal residence. To put it another way, the sale price has nothing to do with the matter; the profit does. Of course, the seller must meet some other requirements besides age, so if you plan on selling a house, better check with the Bureau of Internal Revenue to see whether you fall into the right category. Another change in the law affects home sellers whatever their ages. Previously, you paid no tax on the profit from the sale of a house if you bought another house at the same or a higher price during a period of 18 months. While that provision still applies, an additional clause says that you can do this more than once in an 18-month period if you are relocating for employment reasons.

Q. —I need more humidity in my house, but do not want to have a central unit installed. Will one of the console models do for a five-room house?

A. — There are some large humidifiers on the market that wipl handle u number of rooms on one floor, depending on the square footage. To get the proper ons, take the measurements of all the rooms to a dealer and see what his chart shows regaridng the coverage of different modeps. If the five rooms are on two floors, not very likely but possible, you will need one humidifier for each floor for best results.

Q. Some woods, I have observed, smell better than others when burned in a fireplace. Which woods are generally regarded as smelling the best? (B.C., High Point)

Q. The only place that I have for a garden is low and wet. Any suggestions for growing vegetables in such an area? (S.C., Havelock)

A. A long-range solution might be the installation of drainage tile. A temporary solution might be to plow up high rows so the roots of your vegetables will more likely stay above water. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Q. What shrub would you recommend as a screen for a very shady location? The mature height should be around eight feet. I would like a fast growing shrub. (A.D., Cary)

A. Try Canadian hemlock (Tsuga canadensis). This is a fast-growing evergreen that can be grown as a formal or informal screen, depending on the way it is pruned. It can also double as a background in a natural area of rhododendron and azaleas. Canadian hemlock prefers moist, well-drained acid soil. Plant two rows for a formal hedge. Space the rows four feet apart and the plants four feet apart in the rows. Make sure the plants are staggered. Shear regularly during the growing season. Keep the top narrower than the base. You can find Canadian hemlock at most nurseries in North Carolina. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. I've heard foresters use the term "site index" as a guide for determining how successfully trees can be grown on an area. How does a person calculate a site index and what precisely does it tell you? (S.L., Kinston)

A. Site index is best determined by a professional forester. Two methods may be used. One involves determining the topsoil depth and subsoil texture. The other involves aging existing trees on the site and determining tree heights. The age and height data are then applied to site index curves. The site index is expressed in terms of how high a tree of given species will grow in 50 years. Contact your county agricultural extension office for assistance. (Rickey A. Hamilton, extension forestry specialist)

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

When windows, walls, pipes and other surfaces begin to sweat, it means there is excessive moisture in your home. That's a problem.

When there is static electricity in carpets and clothing, nasal passages dry out and wooden objects shrink, it means there isn't enough moisture in your home. That's also a problem.

Today, the problem of too much moisture. Next week, the problem of too little moisture.

Sweating is the result of condensation, which is the change in moisture from a vapor to a liquid. Condensation takes place when moist air — usually warm, because warm air holds more moisture than cold air — touches a cool surface. When cold air touches a cold surface or warm, moist air touches a warm surface, condensation will not occur. So, when water forms on a window, you know there is too much moist air in the house and that the window (either the pane or the frame) is cold. It's a bit more complex than that, involving relative humidity and other factors, but if you will just remember the four preceding sentences, you will have a very good idea of why condensation forms on certain materials in your house.

To prevent condensation, therefore, you must reduce the amount of moisture in your home and warm those cool surfaces. The moisture is produced by many ordinary household functions, such as cooking, dishwashing, bathing, showering, washing clothes, and so on. Some of it also comes from such things as human respiration and evaporation from plants. We can't stop breathing, we want to keep our plants and we must cook and bathe and wash clothes. But we can take steps to minimize the output of moisture and to get rid of some of it via exhaust fans and dehumidifiers.

Year after year, the most frequently asked questions involve sweating windows. What causes it? Why is it that, occasionally, after installing storm windows, the condensation still takes place, sometimes on the storm windows themselves, sometimes on the inside windows?

You now have a fairly good idea of what causes it, although necessarily in abbreviated form because of space limitations. As to the situation with storm windows, remember the principle that the condensation forms on the cool surfaces. Therefore, if sweating still takes place on the inside windows after the installation of storm windows, it must mean that the inside windows are continuing to get cold. And it must further mean that the storm windows are not airtight. Now, if the sweating stops on the inside windows, but takes place on the storm windows, we know that the warm, moist air in the house is getting past the inside windows. In this case, then, it is the inside windows that are not airtight.

As I said, we are only skimming the surface of a complicated subject — which also takes in attic areas, crawl spaces, furnace humidifiers, concrete slabs, paint peeling and many other things — but common sense will lead us to a solution in most cases if we remember that excessive moisture in the air condenses when it settles on cool surfaces.

Misconceptions Of Customers

NEW YORK (AP) — It's a misconception to think that utilities automatically give a customer the most preferential rate available, according to a utility-rate consulting firm.

The selection of rates is the customer's responsibility, says the National Utility Service.

Another common misconception, it says, is that state public service commissions establish utility rates and compel companies to see that each customer gets the lowest rate.

State commissions are primarily concerned with the utility's total annual revenue, according to the consultant.

New Trend In Condominiums

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Condominiums as rental property are a growing trend. The Community Associations Institute estimates more than half of all garden or mid-rise condominium units over five years old may be occupied by tenants. As a condominium community grows older, the institute says, the non-resident, or absentee, ownership within the condominium association tends to rise.

Firewood-Users Find Supplies Are Shrinking

By JOE WING
For The Associated Press

It's the firewood shortage, not the threatened oil shortage or the latest gas price rise, that is agonizing fully a third of the people on earth.

In developing countries where politicians and the affluent worry about oil for power plants and gasoline for autos, the poor are harder put than ever to find wood for cooking and heating.

"For the greater part of mankind wood is the energy source which satisfies the basic needs of cooking and warmth," a United Nations Environment Programme study says.

Villagers in many lands, who require a ton or more of wood apiece each year, have been going farther afield for trees and brush, baring the earth. Since reforestation is inadequate or nonexistent, the denuded land erodes, blocking dams with silt and causing floods.

Desperate peasants in Africa and the hills of Himalayas and the Andes burn dried dung, depriving the soil of fertilizer. In South Korea they have even burned leaves and forest debris that should be allowed to rot. A government commission in India, where 400 million tons of manure is burned a year, says that its use as fuel "is virtually a crime."

In some West African areas, writes Howard S. Ayensu, director of the Smithsonian's Office of Biological Conservation, a villager must walk 15 miles to find wood.

Sometimes natives poach on forest preserves, steal each others' hedges or filch scaffolding from building sites. Baobab trees, centuries or even thousands of years old, are stripped and mutilated, although they have always been regarded as fertility symbols guarded by taboos.

Some villagers in Ecuador have been reduced to one hot meal a day, says Lester Brown, director of the Worldwatch Institute, a non-profit research group in Washington.

Some African families spend a fourth of their income on wood, says Erik P. Eckholm of the Institute. Wood prices have tripled in two years in India, Central America and the West Indies, he says.

Landlords who once winked at people taking branches from their woodlots now sell them. Deep in the once remote and heavily forested foothills of Nepal, obtaining firewood and fodder takes one family member the whole day. A generation ago it took only an hour or two.

Not even the United States is immune to the problem. As recently as 1850 Americans depended on wood for 90 percent of their fuel. Then coal, oil and gas took over.

Zooming oil and gas prices have, however, created new interest in cooking and heating with wood stoves. Foundries can hardly keep up with the demand for old fashioned and new fangled stoves. Chain saw manufacturers are doing record business.

"Treenappers" have gone into isolated groves on Long Island and, no doubt, other places, too. And the price of seasoned cord wood has shot up — as high as $120 a cord in the New York City, for instance. At that rate, who can afford to do much cooking, let alone heating, with wood?

Peak Periods For A Suicide Hotline

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The telephone rings. It's late at night. An awkward silence greets the volunteer who answers the call.

"I don't want to die," is the caller's message.

"The calls to the hotline will most likely increase immediately after the holidays in January, again in June and again around September," said Cindy, a volunteer who would not give her last name.

Although some persons are depressed during the holidays, they generally talk to others about what is bothering them.

By January, however, there are no holidays to look forward to.

"You've got three or four months of bleakness," the volunteer said. "Winter will aggravate the loneliness and isolation a person is feeling. There are fewer hours of daylight to take advantage of. Snow may be keeping a person in and could even prevent them from getting out..."

If a person manages to make it through the spring, she adds, there is a feeling of hope. But if the problems aren't dealt with and no changes occur, the reverse happens.

"There's more daylight. More time to think about those problems. In the summertime, you see people out enjoying themselves. Consequently, the loneliness is increased.

Business Notes

RECORD FIGURES

Sales totaled $2.791 billion, compared to $2.111 billion in 1977. Net income rose to $131.3 million, up from the $106.3 million earned during the previous year.

Sales for the fourth quarter were $842 million compared to $545.3 million in the same period of 1977. Net income reached $31 million, compared to $26.3 million for 1977's fourth quarter.

Eaton's board of directors declared regular quarterly dividends on the company's three classes of shares. The dividends, payable Feb. 23 to shareholders of record Feb. 8, include: 56 and one-quarter cents per common share; 29.6875 cents per four and three-quarter percent cumulative convertible preferred share; and 57 and one-half cents per serial preferred share, series A.

NEW BROKER

Leonard E. Hignite and Randy Hignite of Pitt County Realty Inc. announced the association of J. W. Tadlock with the firm as a real estate broker, specializing in residential sales.

The firm's new office is located at 3014 Memorial Drive, they reported.

EXPANDS OPERATIONS

North American Insurance Co., which announced the establishment of its first district office in the state late last summer, reported that it has since expanded to cover practically the entire state through seven districts and 63 employees.

The districts are located in Greenville, Charlotte, Greensboro, Oxford, Raleigh, Rockingham and Rocky Mount. The Greenville district office, the first in the state, is managed by Robert E. Moseley Sr.

QUARTERLY DIVIDEND

Directors of Jefferson-Pilot Corp. declared a quarterly dividend of 26 cents per share, payable on March 2 to shareholders of record at the close of business on Feb. 9.

Life insurance subsidiaries of the corporation are Jefferson Standard and Pilot Life Insurance Companies.

NEW HIGHS

The Black and Decker Manufacturing Co. reported record highs in sales, net earnings, and earnings per share for the first quarter of fiscal 1979, which ended Dec. 24.

Francis P. Lucier, president and chief executive officer, said that sales for the quarter increased 29 percent to $306.5 million compared to $238.3 million last year. For the preceding 12-month period, sales were $1.03 billion, marking the first time the company has reached the $1 billion sales level.

Net earnings were $23.5 million, a gain of 53 percent from $15.4 million. Earnings per share were up 51 percent to 56 cents against 37 cents for the first fiscal quarter last year.

DIVIDEND DECLARED

A first quarter dividend of 19 cents per Wachovia Corp. common share was declared on Jan. 19 by the corporation's board of directors.

Directors also declared a dividend of 55 cents per share on the corporation's $2.20 convertible preferred stock.

GAINS REPORTED

Bill Jackson, local manager of Oakwood Mobile Homes, a subsidiary of Oakwood Homes Corp., reported an increase in sales and earnings for the second quarter of fiscal 1979 and the six months ended Dec. 31.

For the second quarter, according to Jackson, sales totaled $9,088,000, compared with $6,244,000 for the same period in fiscal 1978. Net income was $424,000 compared to $342,000, he said.

For the six months period, sales were $21,091,000, compared with $15,453,000 for the comparable period a year ago. Net income was $1,126,000 compared with $932,000.

Gospel Songstress, Barbara Rodgers

She Battles Cancer, Sings For The Lord

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

"Barbara Rodgers spends five days out of every month at Duke University Medical Center undergoing chemotherapy. Even there, though, she does what she loves most in the world to do — she sings.

She sings gospel music. "I sing for the Lord and I sing because the Lord has let me live to sing" the Greenville woman said.

Barbara, a 1971 graduate of Rose High School here, said she was at home for the summer after a year at Massey Business College in Jacksonville, Fla., when extreme eye pain and some vision impairment were diagnosed as "a rare type of eye cancer."

She had her right eye removed at Duke Hospital. "The doctors and nurses told me to scream, cry, do whatever I felt I had to when they took off the bandages following my surgery," she said. "But I didn't feel anything. I felt detached. I knew everything that was happening was of the Lord. I knew that eye they'd taken out wasn't me, that the part of me that is real couldn't be touched by something like cancer."

In 1974, she recalled, she had a recurrence of cancer. She underwent a craniotomy, once again at Duke, to have a tumor removed from the optic nerve area. "That time," she said, "they told me they almost lost me. I started bleeding and they thought for a while, they weren't going to be able to stop it. With God's help, though, they did.

"In October, 1978, they found cancer in my body once again," she went on, "a tumor at the base of my eye socket and nodules in my lungs. This time, though, I told them I wasn't going to have any more surgery."

Asked if her doctors opposed her decision, she said, "Yes, they argued, but I knew in my mind and heart that I was doing what was right for me. I agreed to chemotherapy, but not to more surgery."

"I get cytoxin, a crystalline medicine that kills good as well as harmful cells, once a month intravenously. It's no fun at all, but I do like going to Durham. I like singing for the other patients and seeing all my friends up there."

Barbara, 26, and her son, Rashaan, live with her parents, Roosevelt and Lillie Rodgers, here. She said she feels confident that her mother and other relatives will care for Rashaan, now a first grader at South Greenville Elementary School, if she dies before he is grown. "I don't know that I'm going to die real soon, though," she said. "God is keeping me here for a purpose and part of that purpose, I believe, is to sing for Him, as I've promised Him I will, and part is to raise my son. When my death comes, it'll be in the Lord's time and I hope my son will know I gave the fight all I had."

Barbara said she believes her illness has helped her to grow as a person and has made her life more meaningful for herself and others. "If the illness hadn't come along," she said, "I might have gotten away from the good that God meant for me. I was becoming enamored with the idea of being a model and had even done a little work for Sears and Roebuck while I was in school in Florida. I might have gone further down that road if I hadn't gotten sick."

Barbara said she's been singing as long as she can remember, publicly since she was 14. "My late grandmother, Mrs. Rena Boyd Rodgers, encouraged me," she said. "She started me singing for other people at St. Peter's Missionary Baptist Church out toward Pactolus. I've been singing in churches ever since."

She and Onession Brooks, who often accompanies her, are now accepting invitations to sing as far away as Washington, D. C. and New Jersey. "I go everywhere the Lord leads me," she said. "I never have met a stranger and I enjoy singing for the Lord more than anything."

She sings, too, when she can, with the Greenville Community Chorus, which, she says, is a charitable, as well as a musical, organization.

Asked if she had consciously worked to improve her speaking voice which is, in its way, as beautiful as her singing, she said, "Yes, my diction is important to me. And making my thoughts understood matters a lot to me, too. I've never been one to do anything half-way. I've observed that the really good singers in the pop field like Diana Ross and Aretha Franklin have excellent diction. I decided I could and would, too."

Asked if Ross and Franklin are the singers she admires most, she answered, "Oh, no! I admire some of their qualities, but the singer I would most like to be like is one who's become a personal friend to me during my illness — Shirley Caesar."

Known in gospel music circles as "The Gospel Princess," Miss Caesar lives in Durham. The Grammy Award-winning gospel artist and her mother, Mrs. Hallie Caesar, have befriended Barbara and had her as a guest in their home on several occasions.

"Shirley's everything I have always dreamed of being," Barbara said. "She sings all over the world and has made good-selling albums, yet she's humble and always willing to help her fellow man. She literally feeds the hungry with the profits from her music, and she's joined me personally in praying for a friend that doctors had said probably would not survive through an emergency operation at Duke. This friend has had cancer as long as I have and she's still living, too, thanks to Shirley's prayers, I feel."

Barbara will appear on the WNCT, Channel 9, "Carolina Today" program tomorrow morning at 7:30. Then, within a few days, she'll be heading back to Durham for more chemotherapy and more singing for fellow patients there.

"THE GOSPEL PRINCESS". . .Shirley Caesar is the person Barbara says she most admires as a person and as a singer. The two are friends.

Miss Kennedy Weds Yesterday

CHARLOTTE — Thea Marie Kennedy of Charlotte and Dennis Waverly Oglesby of Farmville were married Saturday at 3 p.m. at the Sharon Presbyterian Church here. The Rev. James H. McKinnon Jr. performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Glenn Kennedy of Charlotte. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Carroll D. Oglesby of Farmville.

Given in marriage by her mother and father, the bride wore a formal length gown of qiana, featuring an empire bodice, high neckline and long, slender sleeves. An elbow-length capelet fell from the neckline. Jewels enhanced a V-design at the neck and cuffs. The skirt was designed with a chapel length train. The bride chose a white horsehair and chiffon picture hat, with Venise lace daisy appliques, illusion bow and twin streamers as accents.

The attendants chose long gowns of light blue fabiana designed with spaghetti straps and a trapunta in the bodice. The skirt fell in a shirred effect from the empire waist, with a capelet of blue chiffon falling to the fingertips to complement the outfit.

The father of the bridegroom served as his son's best man. Ushers were Jerry Foster and Joe Johnson, of Boone, Barry Johnson of Largo, Fla., Dean and Mark Oglesby, of Raleigh, and David Smith of Carrboro.

A reception was held in the ballroom of the Carmel Country Club following the ceremony. The couple planned a wedding trip to Vermont.

The bride is a graduate of Appalachian State University with a BSBA degree. The bridegroom is a graduate of ASU with a bachelor's degree in industrial arts.

A wedding breakfast was given the day of the wedding by aunts, uncles and friends of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lynch, Mr. and Mrs. Don Livingston, Mr. and Mrs. John Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Hamlin Wade and Mr. and Mrs. John Kennedy.

At Wit's End

By ERMA BOMBECK

Don't you love those commercials of a woman propped up in bed who looks up from the novel she is reading and says, "I'm cleaning my oven"? Or how about the one where it shows her snoozing away and a voice from somewhere says, "Joyce's toilet bowl is getting clean as she sleeps"?

Nothing works when I sleep. Whatever is there the night before I climb into bed is there when I wake up.

Not only that, I am forever being accosted by people who implore me to devote just a minute or so a day to a chore that will eventually make my life easier.

I kept a count of these offers for one day and came up with the following tally:

My dentist asked me to brush and floss for just three minutes a day.

My minister asked me to pray and mediate for only five minutes a day.

My hairdresser suggested I brush my hair 99 strokes for just six minutes a day.

My doctor advised me to exercise daily by walking for only 30 minutes.

My mother said it would take only four minutes daily to clean up the splatters in my oven as soon as I made them.

My husband ragged me to death to put aside just two minutes a day to take an iron tablet.

Couple Weds In Saturday Ceremony

COLUMBIA, S. C. — Linda Manning Hayes and Charles Simpson Porter Jr. of Columbia were married Saturday in a high noon ceremony at the First Presbyterian Church here. Dr. Hugh M. McClure officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Gary Hayes of Latta, S. C. and the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Manning of Greenville, N.C. The bridegroom is the son of Charles Simpson Porter Sr. of Columbia, S. C., and Mrs. Opal C. Scott of Savannah, Ga.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of empire design, fashioned of white satin featuring a wedding band neckline and long, fitted sleeves closed with covered buttons. The gown was embellished with appliques of re-embroidered alencon lace and pearls, accented with a deep lace border and flowing chapel train. She wore a silk illusion mantilla with a matching alencon lace border and a single strand of pearls, worn by her maternal grandmother, Mrs. Manning, on her wedding day. She carried an heirloom handkerchief belonging to her paternal great-grandmother, the late Mrs. Thomas Bragg Manning, and a colonial bouquet of yellow sweetheart roses, stephanotis and baby's breath on an antique olivewood family Bible.

The father of the bridegroom served as his son's best man. Ushers included Lester H. Pullie of Latta, S. C., and Charles S. Porter III of Columbia, S. C. Acolyte was Stephen L. Pullie of Latta, S. C.

Ronald M. Miller, organist, provided a program of wedding music.

Following the ceremony, a champagne buffet reception was given at the Summit Club by the bride's parents. Music was provided by the Billie Musten Duo.

After a wedding trip to the Caribbean, the couple will reside in Columbia and Lake Murray, S. C.

The bride received a master's degree from the University of Tennessee and a doctorate in philosophy from the University of South Carolina. She is employed by the Lexington School District No. 2. The bridegroom is a senior partner in the law firm of McNair, Glenn, Konduros, Corley, Singletary, Porter and Dibble in Columbia, S. C.

In exchange for hard work through the year, a dance featuring Tenth Avenue, was recently held for members of the J. H. Rose High band.

During the year, the band participates in various projects such as competing in contests and raising money for the Greenville school bands.

Another activity some band members participate in is the All State Eastern Division Band Contest. As announced in the latest edition of the "Rampant Lines," Rose High winners are Ann Carol Banks, Jim Bearden, Hollie Frink, Steve Irwin and Holly Rodgers.

On Monday night, members of the Health Horizon Club heard a program presented by Dr. Jon Tingelstad on the heart. During the entire month of February, members of the club will be trying to raise money for the Heart Fund.

In addition to providing refreshments for the teachers on the last student holiday, Anchor Club members held a bake sale Saturday to raise money for club funds. The next project on their agenda is a dance to be held Feb. 24.

Members of the Spanish Club enjoyed a change of pace Wednesday night. Instead of having a usual meeting, members met at Taco Cid for supper.

Congratulations are extended to nine students chosen as members of Quill and Scroll, which is an honor society that recognizes high school students for their outstanding performance in journalism. New members are: Don Carr; Tom Chenier; Michael Crane; Jamie Johnson; Til Jolly; Clyde Owens; Dennis Teel; and Susan Tucker.

Miss Buck, Mr. Moore Speak Vows Saturday

MRS. ANDREW LEON MOORE JR.

MONROE — Shiloh Baptist Church was the scene of the Saturday wedding ceremony uniting Cindy Sue Buck and Andrew Leon Moore Jr. The Rev. John Wood officiated at the 3 p.m. double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Ball of Rt. 8, Monroe and Ronald Buck of Ayden. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Moore of Rt. 9, Monroe.

The bride, given in marriage by her stepfather, chose a sheer organza gown with a Queen Anne neckline, empire waist and sheer bishop sleeves. The bodice, neckline and cuffs were accented with imported chantilly lace. Vertical bands of lace accented the skirt which flowed into a chapel length train. A chantilly lace bandeau holding a cathedral length mantilla of English illusion was edged with scalloped matching lace. She carried a white Bible with white silk roses and matching streamers. The Bible was an heirloom gift from the bridegroom's parents, which the bridegroom's mother had carried in her wedding.

Rhonda Buck of Rt. 8, Monroe, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. She wore a floor length gown of winter burgundy qiana, with a modified cowl neck, blouson bodice and accordian pleats from the waist. She carried a single white silk chrysanthemum with matching streamers.

Bridesmaids were Miss Mitzi Moore of Rt. 9, Monroe, sister of the bridegroom, Miss Cindy Kesiah of Monroe, cousin of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Kathy Paramore of Greenville, cousin of the bride. They wore gowns identical to that of the honor attendant and carried single white silk chrysanthemums with matching streamers.

Miss Tracy Haddock of Wilmington, cousin of the bride, served as the miniature bride. She wore a floor length gown of white eyelet lace, with a square neckline and sheer long sleeves. She carried a basket of white silk daisies and matching streamers.

Leon Moore served as his son's best man. Groomsmen included Danny Helms of Monroe, cousin of the bridegroom, Billy Haddock of Wilmington, cousin of the bride, Jimmy Walters of Monroe, and Danny McClain of Hemby Bridge.

The mother of the bride chose a floor length gown of aqua qiana with a V-neckline and long sleeves. She wore a corsage of white silk roses. The mother of the bridegroom selected a formal gown of pink qiana featuring a V-neckline and long sleeves. She wore a white silk rose corsage.

Mrs. Ruth Secrest, organist, Tim Belk, pianist, and Miss Donna Hill, soloist, presented a program of nuptial music. Miss Hill sang "You Needed Me" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Cheryl Robertson of Charlotte presided over the register.

A reception hosted by the bride's parents was held after the ceremony in the church fellowship hall. Decorations included a long table covered in bridal sheer and trimmed with English lace, featuring two three-branch candelabra with fresh cut flowers in shades of pink and burgundy. Two matching round tables were used to hold a silver punch fountain and a four-tier wedding cake.

After a wedding trip to the North Carolina mountains, the couple will reside in Monroe.

The bride is a graduate of Sun Valley High School and is currently employed by the District Attorney's office in Monroe. The bridegroom, a graduate of Sun Valley High School and Wingate College, is employed by Scoville Security Products.

Couple Weds Saturday Evening

St. James United Methodist Church was the scene of the Saturday wedding ceremony of Sheila Elaine Everett of Greenville and Michael Lee Francis of Hendersonville. The Rev. Dewey Tyson performed the double ring ceremony at 6 p.m.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jarvis R. Everett of Rt. 3, Greenville. Mr. and Mrs. William Francis Jr. of Hendersonville are the parents of the bridegroom.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of white organza over peau de soie designed with a Queen Anne neckline outlined in scalloped chantilly lace beaded with pearl clusters. The empire bodice was overlaid in French chantilly lace with the waistline encircled with scalloped lace beaded with pearls. Matching lace was featured on shepherdess sleeves, with the modified A-line skirt enchanced by a double ruffle flounce of sheer chiffon topped by chantilly lace extending around the attached chapel length train. Cascading ruffles of organza with lace panels extended down the train. The bride chose a chapel length mantilla edged in chantilly lace and carried a colonial nosegay of white daisy pom pons, baby's breath and pink roses with white satin ribbon and pink shower ribbons. The bouquet featured a lift-away corsage of pink roses.

The church altar was centered with an arrangmenet of pink carnations, white daisy pom pons and baby's breath flanked by two 15-branch brass candelabra. Palms accented the altar, with white satin ribbons used to mark the family pews.

Mrs. Kathy Vaughan of Fayetteville served as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Pam Francis of Hendersonville, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, Mrs. Brenda Everett of Grimesland, Phyllis Whitehurst, and Helen Lemon, cousin of the bride, Trudy Stocks, of Greenville. The attendants chose formal length gowns of frost rose lustreglo designed with portrait necklines with miniature rolled tie bows at the shoulders. The gowns featured empire bodices designed in a blouson effect with frost rose crocheted lace and short split sleeves. Self-tie sashes accented the waistlines with full circular skirts. The maid of honor carried a colonial nosegay of pink miniature carnations with white daisy pom pons, baby's breath and satin ribbon. The attendants carried matching nosegays with pink satin ribbon.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers included Robert Newman, Trip and Scott Francis, brothers of the bridegroom, all of Hendersonville, and Barry Everett of Clarksville, Va.

Frances Cain, organist, presented the nuptial music.

Following a wedding trip to Raleigh, the couple will live in Hendersonville.

The bride is a graduate of D. H. Conley High School and attended Pitt Technical Institute.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Hendersonville High School and attended East Carolina University. He is in business with his father at Francis and Wright Hardware Store.

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

"It's a real trip. You can't get any higher than you are when you are in that world. It's hard to finish. You feel abandoned when your work is done," said Sue Ellen Bridgers, novelist.

Author of "Home Before Dark" and an about-to-be-published second novel, she sold the first short story she sent off, she sold her novel she thought was not marketable and then selling the second book was easy.

"I was in the right place at the right time," says Sue Ellen, who is teaching a fiction-writing workshop in Asheville through Western Carolina University.

A native of Pitt County, Sue Ellen's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Wayland Hunsucker of Winterville. She married an East Carolina University faculty member, Ben Bridges, during her junior year at ECU and they left for his four years in the U. S. Air Force. When they came back to North Carolina, Ben entered law school at the University of North Carolina.

Their third child was born in Chapel Hill. With three children five-years-old and under, Sue Ellen was taking in neighbor's children during the day for extra income while Ben delivered newspapers in the mornings and worked in the library at night.

She sent the first story she wrote to the Atlantic Christian Literary magazine contest and won a prize. Then she sold to "Ingenue," then later, to "Redbook."

"Home Before Dark" was selected as an American Library Association Notable Book of the Year and as a New York Times Outstanding Book of the Year. It is now used in high school English curriculums throughout the country.

In 1971, the Bridgers' moved to Sylva where Ben practices law. Sue Ellen returned to Western Carolina University to complete her college degree because it was "unfinished business."

In between keeping her family going, her house in order and her school work done (she got her degree in 1975), she was working on her second novel to be published by Knopf in April. The book is entitled "All Together Now."

His Kids Block Her Bridal Path

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 50-year-old divorcee and, if I say so myself, I am attractive and desirable. I recently met a gentleman, also divorced and equally attractive and desirable. He is 60. Sam has two married children living in another state.

He gave me a big rush and I know he wants to marry me, but he says he cannot formally propose marriage until after his children meet me and agree that we are right for each other.

Abby, I have grown children, too, but the man I marry doesn't have to pass my children's inspection. Naturally, I would hope that my children liked the man, but if they didn't, it wouldn't matter to me.

This business of having to get approval from Sam's children irritates me. In fact, it turns me off. Do you think it means anything?

LIL IN BROOKLYN

DEAR LIL: YES. It means that, after Sam's children, you come first.

DEAR READERS: There are thousands of people in hospitals, institutions and homes because the transplant organs they need are not available. These include kidneys, corneas, heart, pituitary glands and other organs and tissues that must be removed from accident victims quickly before oxygen starvation renders them useless.

What most people do not know is that most states now use the driver's license to identify organ donors. Under the Anatomical Gift Act, people who are killed in traffic accidents may avoid dying in vain.

The organ-donor sticker form (or decal) authorizes doctors to remove needed organs immediately after the victim's death, and to use those organs in transplant operations.

Readers may acquire the details of organ-donation laws by writing to the motor vehicle departments of their own states. They may write also to the National Kidney Foundation, 116 East 27th St., New York, N.Y. 10016.

"Gift of Life" laws are relatively new. Their application through the driver's license is increasing in all states. The universal adoption of the Anatomical Gift Act (with its strict safeguards to verify that the donor is in fact dead before organs may be removed) would offer new hope to the country's afflicted.

I have personally willed all my usable organs, and feel that nothing I could leave after my death will be of greater value.

LOVE, ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I recently ran into a girl with whom I had gone through school. I had heard she had married recently, so I said, "Oh, by the way, congratulations on getting married!"

She reacted in a peculiar way, and instead of thanking me for my congratulations, she said, "Why congratulate me as if I had accomplished the impossible? Didn't you think I was capable of getting a guy to marry me?"

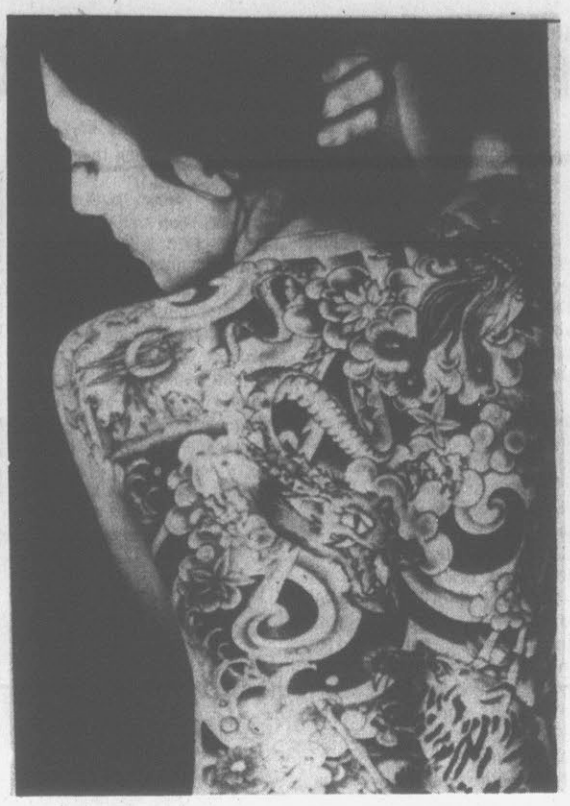

I was shocked, since this was the farthest thing from my mind.

When I told my mother what had happened, she said I had committed the cardinal sin—that one never congratulates a bride. The bride should be given best wishes and the groom congratulations.

Is this true?

NEW TO ME

DEAR NEWS: It's true. But if that's the greatest "sin" you ever commit, you may qualify for sainthood.

Supernova Linked To Ancient Symbol

EDITOR'S NOTE — Linking a discovery of modern astronomy with legends recorded in the ancient Sumerian language has caused one scholar to reinterpret a number of familiar Egyptian symbols — including one in King Tut's royal emblem.

By KEVIN McKEAN
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Some 6,000 years ago, not far from the Earth, a dim and unremarkable star suddenly exploded into the violent fireball that modern astronomers call a supernova.

On Earth it would have looked like a new star, brighter than the moon and visible even in the daytime for months.

Among the early peoples who saw it were the Sumerians — Persian Gulf farmers and fishermen poised at the brink of civilization. They recorded the event in their myths and gods.

Now the scholar who first identified their record says the legend linking the star to the origins of civilization has turned up in Egyptian hieroglyphs, written thousands of years later.

George Michanowsky, a New York linguist, author and historian, believes the legend was passed along in Sumerian symbols borrowed by the Egyptians.

If so, it would force a reinterpretation of such familiar hieroglyphs as the "ankh" — or symbol of life — and King Tut's royal emblem.

Some other scholars of the ancient Near East disagree with the theory. But Michanowsky, a self-described "lone wolf" who works without support from institutions or foundations, counters that his critics do not understand astronomy.

"He does careful work and he's not unskillful at languages," one museum curator concedes. "Cataclysmic things happen and I could believe some of them may be carried on in oral tradition."

Astronomers believe the supernova may have been the most cataclysmic sky event ever witnessed by men.

A radio telescope has detected the remnant of the explosion. It is a fast-spinning dense star called a "pulsar" in the constellation Vela of the southern hemisphere.

By timing radio pulses coming from the object, astronomers estimate that it erupted between 8,000 and 4,000 B.C. It was toward the end of that period that the Sumerians, living on the northern shore of the Persian Gulf, developed the world's first astronomy, mathematics and writing.

The Sumerians had a legend that they were taught these arts by a god called Ea, linked to a special star in the constellation Vela.

The reference has puzzled scholars because there are no bright stars today in that part of the sky.

But Michanowsky believes the reference was to the Vela supernova, a theory he propounds in a 1978 book, "The Once and Future Star."

The Vela star was two or three times closer to the earth than the famous supernova seen by Chinese astronomers in 1054. The Sumerians would have seen it rise and set each day low over the watery southern horizon, and Michanowsky believes the sight so impressed them that it was anthropomorphized into Ea and supporting legends and deities.

He also believes it fired the Sumerians' curiosity and may have sparked their investigations of nature.

For example, the Egyptian ankh, or looped cross, is usually thought to represent a sandle thong. But Michanowsky suggests its loop could represent the star, its cross bar the horizon of the Persian Gulf, and its descending bar the reflection of the star on the water.

And, he says, the Egyptian goddess Seshat, patroness of scribes, may derive from a Sumerian goddess called Nidaba who was patroness of mathematics, writing and astronomy.

Seshat is pictured with a seven-pointed headdress often interpreted as a flower. But Michanowsky thinks the headdress comes from a seven-fronded Sumerian palm tree symbol linked both to Ea and to the Vela star, and may represent the star itself rather than a flower.

He also believes the Vela star figures in one hieroglyphic symbol from Tut's cartouche, or royal emblem.

The symbol, a pillar, is among the last three in the cartouche. It usually is taken to refer to a southern Egyptian city, and the three symbols together are translated "Ruler of Southern Egypt."

But the translation has troubled Egyptologists since it seems to slight the northern part of Tut's kingdom.

Michanowsky believes the pillar is adapted from the Sumerian palm tree symbol and the cartouche reads "Ruler of the Southern Star."

"It's a sort of powerful evoking of a stellar event that signified a Golden Age at the beginning of civilization," Michanowsky says.

The new interpretation also squares with the conventional view that Tut, who lived about 1330 B.C., was a conservative figure in Egyptian religious history and harked back to earlier gods and beliefs.

Sumerian legend had it that the Vela star would return one day and bring back the Golden Age.

And in a sense, the Vela star has been seen again. Astronomers in 1977 used special instruments to pick up faint light pulses from the supernova remnant after pinpointing its location by radio telescope.

"Indeed, heaven has been pregnant with this once and future star for a very long time," Michanowsky wrote in a summary of his theories in the Explorers Journal. "It is now, at long last, slowly giving up its secret."

More To Dancing Than A Shimmy And Quiver

By GAIL WILLIAMS

ATLANTA (UPI) — Bellies roll, shoulders shimmy and hips quiver when Gaela Avrill holds classes for women seeking to learn the exotic and sensual — though often misunderstood — ancient art form of belly dancing.

There is a lot more to belly dancing than just learning to move one's belly, says the 33-year-old native Atlantan, and the faint-hearted often drop out of classes once they find out.

Moreover, she explains, the dance is intended to be sensual — not sexual — although many might think the latter.

Gaela, who has been belly dancing five years, decided to take up the art form after hearing classes would be offered in Atlanta. She had no idea she would get "hooked" on belly dancing and turn professional.

"I began taking lessons just because they offered it here for the first time that I ever knew about," she says in a soft southern drawl against a backdrop of haunting Middle Eastern music playing in the background.

It was her first instructor, Zira Yoseph, who encouraged Gaela to become a professional belly dancer. Zira, who now lives in New York, prepared Gaela for her first public dancing debut after only a year of "off and on again classes."

"And I was horrible," recalls Gaela, laughing. Her debut was at a restaurant-lounge in the famed Atlanta Underground called The Down Under, which is no longer in business.

Since that time, Gaela has danced at private parties as well as in restaurants and lounges in Atlanta, Rome, Ga., and Greenville, S.C.

Wrapped in layers of colorful chiffon veils and skirts, midsection bare and taut, with snake-like bracelets encircling her arms and ankles, Gaela interprets with her body the many moods of Middle Eastern music.

She began teaching belly dancing about as casually as she had begun taking classes.

"What made me decide to begin teaching was that a next door neighbor's daughter had to be in a talent show and had nothing to do. So I told her mother I would teach her to belly dance," recalls Gaela, adding, "I could barely do it myself."

She said the neighbor's daughter "really got a kick out of it," but that the performance was controversial for the times.

"It was quite controversial for her at that time to get up in high school and belly dance," says Gaela. Belly dancing was even controversial in her own home at first because her artist husband was not particularly interested in his wife becoming a professional belly dancer.

In fact, she added, "it was probably not something most southern women ever thought they would be doing."

But she said it "didn't take long" for her husband to change his mind.

"After all, what did he know about belly dancing (at first): what had he ever seen?"

Soon, said Gaela, some of the women in her husband's office wanted to take classes.

Presently, Gaela — who is four and a half months pregnant with her first child — teaches three classes a week, two for beginners and one for advanced students.

Gaela says her students, mostly working women between the ages of 20 and 40, take up belly dancing for different reasons. Many in the advanced class want to become professionals. Others pursue it as a hobby. Some do so in an effort to firm and strengthen the abdominal area.

Although she has known several women who have firmed their abdominal areas by taking classes, she feels belly dancing is an all-over body conditioner.

The term belly dancing, explains Gaela, is strictly American, noting that many dancers in the Middle East call themselves oriental dancers.

Local interest in belly dancing caught on here about four years ago, she said, and grew for two or three years. "But now I think interest in belly dancing is down to a more sensible level. Now it's down to those who are really, really interested."

Not Giving Up On 1922 Murder

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Just because the murder suspect escaped by stagecoach in 1922 doesn't mean that the Unsolved Cases Squad of the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department has given up all hope of finding him.

"I just read through it (the case file) the other day to keep it fresh in my mind," says Sgt. Jack Peace. "It's still open until we're positive the suspect is dead or until it has been adjudicated.

"Of course, about all we can do now is wait for a phone call or tip."

The 1922 murder, the oldest of about 500 homicide cases still in the department's active file, involves the shooting death of a woman named Andrea Hassa de Pacheco.

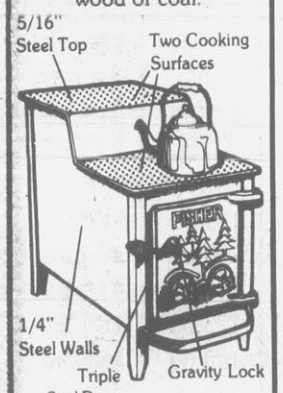

A murder warrant was put out for her husband, Quirino Pacheco, after a witness to the incident reported that Pacheco subsequently "forced him at the point of his gun to take him to. ..catch a stage."

China Revisited

Meals And Service On China's Trains Superb

EDITOR'S NOTE — This fifth in a series of seven articles by Shanghai-born Timothy T.S. Tung, who recently returned to China for the first time in 31 years, deals with train travel in China.

By TIMOTHY T.S. TUNG
For AP Newsfeatures

There are at least three good reasons for trying train travel in China: The train is cheaper, about half of what you pay for an airplane ticket; Chinese trains are modern and comfortable, with four berths to the compartment and a dining car offering gourmet meals; you see more from the ground.

I have traveled by train in Europe and in the United States. By comparison, Chinese trains are in immaculate condition, on a par with, if not better than, first-rate European trains.

The first-class berth ticket for the Canton-Shanghai express is 96 yuans (each yuan is worth 60 cents), covering 1,100 miles in 34 hours; for the Shanghai-Peking express, 83.20 yuans, covering 880 miles in 19 hours; and for the Peking-Canton express, 116.90 yuans, covering 1,400 miles in 33 hours.

What China has accomplished during the past three decades can easily be seen along the railroads. Old mud sheds, farmers' homes for centuries, are rapidly disappearing, replaced by neat brick houses. Tree-lined modern roads have been built connecting communes and farms. Motorized trucks and tractors, an uncommon sight 31 years ago, are seen often.

The often-written-about loudspeaker on Chinese trains is still there. It is a pleasant surprise that the broadcast is now neither loud, nor propaganda. You can control the volume with a knob, and the broadcast, in Chinese, consists of travel information, soothing music, and dialogues of a Chinese comedian team.

The conductor supplies you with tea as soon as you are settled and refills your cup with hot water at frequent intervals. And, yes, he mops floors, too. This can be annoying because a wet floor only produces more dirt from footsteps. But most first-class cars are thickly carpeted.

The dining cars are a special delight. On our first leg from Canton to Shanghai, the moment the train moved, a plump fellow in white came to our compartment and introduced himself as the chef.

Upon hearing that we had had no lunch, he arranged to have bowls of noodles prepared for us, although the dining car was not to open until five hours later. A Northerner, about 50, jolly and unusually uninhibited, he was beside himself on seeing my foreign wife and daughter. Thereafter, he was eager to prove his skills.

A bowl of noodles with shredded pork and pickled cabbage was a half yuan. For dinner we had soup, chicken, Chinese ham and eggs, mushrooms with broccoli, and rice and beer. All for 5 yuans. And he cooled the beer for us.

The chef would come around early before each meal to discuss menus and take orders. Then, after the masses of Chinese diners had finished, he would come again to usher us into the brightly lit, comfortable dining car. For such service we paid very little.

While thanking the chef after dinner, we heard a recital of the next morning's fare. He firmly announced that breakfast would be at 8 a.m. and that we'd have bacon and eggs, bread and milk. With pride he described the menu — apparently to show off his knowledge as to what a proper foreign breakfast consisted of.

When my wife asked whether tea could be substituted for milk, he looked pained, as though to say that Chinese tea had no place in his foreign scheme. We went along, and had a substantial breakfast for one yuan each. The milk, which he insisted foreigners should have, was condensed milk.

Passengers not wishing to spend money in the dining car can order a simple hot meal of rice with pork in a tin can for 30 fens (78 cents).

Still cheaper food can be bought from vendors at train stops. At station stops, it is a common sight to see hundreds of passengers rush down their hard-seat (third-class) cars and run toward food stalls to buy a cooked chicken or steamed bread with meat balls for an inexpensive meal.

The stop is usually for 12 minutes. Slow runners have to endure an empty stomach. They run back as the train is about to move. There are so many travelers that one gets an impression all of China is on the move.

DINING IN STYLE—Everyone is relaxed in the dining car of the Peking-Canton express, which offers passengers gourmet meals.

'Grief Seminar' Is Scheduled Tonight

A series of four seminars on "Coping With Grief" begins Sunday, February 4, at 7 p.m. in the Winterville Missionary Baptist Church. Dr. Spencer Raab of the Hematology — Oncology Department at Pitt County Memorial Hospital will present a topic for discussion on the subject "The Process of Grief".

Dr. Raab will outline and illustrate those stages of grief persons move in and out of while coping with their own terminal illness, as well as the feelings of bereavement family members have in coping with the loss of a loved one.

In the weeks to come, the topics of "Legal Preparation for Death", "The Funeral", and "Telling a Child About Death" will be considered. Guest discussion leaders will be Delyle Evans, attorney at law, Norman Wilkerson of Wilkerson's Funeral Home and Dr. Bob Dillard of the Pediatrics Department at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Interested persons are invited to attend these seminars which will be held in the church sanctuary. The church is located at the corner of Church and Cooper Streets in Winterville.

Gov. Brown On The Run

NO LONGER 'REMOTE' — Jerry Brown, carrying an increasingly conservative banner, no longer uses the word "remote" when talking about a run for the presidency in 1980. (AP Laserphoto)

By DOUG WILLIS
Associated Press Writer

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Jerry Brown, carrying an increasingly conservative banner, no longer uses the word "remote" when talking about a run for the presidency in 1980.

Instead, the California governor says he's giving a lot of thought to challenging President Carter in the primaries but an announcement would be "premature."

—He is strongly criticizing Carter on inflation.

—He has asked a national labor leader what his chances of an AFL-CIO endorsement would be.

At the same time, the 40-year-old Brown has stopped talking of an "era of limits" — his phrase for the need to save the environment and resources. And gone, too, are references to Zen and other counter-culture trappings that made the nation notice this odd Democrat.

It is time, he says, for America to get back to balanced budgets, less government, less meddling in the affairs of distant nations, and more belief in the country's fundamental soundness and future.

"America right now is not building for the future. It is stealing from it," says Brown, who defeated Carter in three 1976 primaries and challenged him in two others. "What we're seeing today is decline abroad and decadence at home."

And Brown comments: "I see a lack of faith in the future on the part of people about to retire. I see frustration at the supermarket. And obviously it's time for some kind of change."

This all has a populist ring reminiscent of the anti-government exhortations of Huey Long, George Wallace, Howard Jarvis and — on occasion — Jimmy Carter. And it is the sort of talk Brown has used since his political debut on a Los Angeles school board 10 years ago.

At a December meeting with labor leaders, which Brown says labor requested, he says he asked Al Barkan, national political director of the AFL-CIO, if organized labor would support him or Sen. Edward Kennedy. He said he got no commitment from Barkan.

Meanwhile, he works away at the issue he believes can be used to challenge both Carter and Kennedy. That is the proposal he embraced in a January speech for a constitutional convention to draft an amendment requiring a balanced federal budget.

Federal deficits, Brown says, are a root cause of inflation. Although Carter's 1980 budget proposal trims the deficit to $29 billion, Brown says it is still inflationary and unacceptable.

Brown is a late supporter of this convention, which has been endorsed by 24 states and needs 10 more states to be convened. But Brown is in the battle just as the proposal is gaining momentum.

This campaign also allows Brown to use the same tactic both he and Carter have used successfully in the past — to align himself with frustrated voters against government.

"The fiscal excess by the federal government is recognized by 75 percent of the American people...," he says. "So the only people who can't recognize this seem to be a rather limited group of experts that dwells in Washington."

Carter called a constitutional convention on the budget proposal a "dangerous" idea that might open the door to other amendments restricting civil liberties. Brown says this is a "scare tactic."

"I had never thought that balancing the federal budget was an unusual idea, or even a radical proposal. But given the reaction in Washington, it was as though I'd proposed a different form of government. Perhaps I had," Brown says.

Reaction in California to Brown's maneuvering is mixed. Some liberal Democrats are enraged by his adoption of a cause championed mostly by conservatives and by the tight state budget he unveiled in January.

"This man thinks he can become president of the United States by having Herbert Hoover capture the Democratic Party," said David Roberti, Democratic floor leader of the state Senate.

And state Sen. Barry Keene, a Democrat allied with Brown in the past, adds that he cannot support a candidate "who rides into the White House on a constitutional crisis ... he has perpetrated."

Some newspapers also have had critical editorials. The Los Angeles Times termed Brown's call for a constitutional convention "a clumsy grab for national attention."

More Than 100 Years Given To Settling Big Legacy In Brazil

By BRUCE HANDLER
Associated Press Writer

PELOTAS, Brazil (AP) — Comendador Domingos Faustino Correa died 105 years ago, but an army of heirs and would-be heirs is still fighting over his will. The legal complexities make the Howard Hughes legacy look simple.

And much less opulent, too, for Correa's estate is estimated at a staggering $50 billion. The Texas recluse left a conservatively estimated $168 million.

At stake in the Brazilian legacy are vast cattle and sheep ranches, huge rice and soybean plantations, grain warehouses, herds of livestock, choice urban real estate and bank accounts scattered throughout southern Latin America. One ranch alone, in central Uruguay, is larger by a third than the city of Los Angeles.

The Comendador — it means roughly Earl — accumulated all of this in the early 1800s. He was a personal friend and confidant of Brazilian Emperor Pedro II.

He died at the age of 82, a childless widower. In a complex will, he tried to divide his wealth among his actual relatives, his servants and friends, business associates, political cronies, godchildren and assorted hangers-on.

It has led to an incredible legal tangle after decades of trying to determine exactly what he owned, and legal experts say it might take another century to determine who is to get whatever it is.

For example, the Comendador provided that his slaves and their children — at least one of which he fathered — could use much of his property for free, for four generations. He also bequeathed specific amounts of money and minutely described possessions to family and various friends and acquaintances.

The rest of the estate was to go to the sons and daughters of his eight sisters and brothers — except for one, Bernardo, who was a Catholic priest and therefore celibate.

Because of early marriages, experts estimate that the Comendador's family now is in its tenth generation, although most of the persons affected by the will are fifth and sixth generation limbs of his family tree. There is one fourth generation descendant of Correa's slaves, now age 70.

So far, apparently, the slaves have fared very well in the last hundred years compared to other claimants.

They at least got free use of the Comendador's land and reaped the profits there from — cattle and grain.

So many others — and the number is not clear — have been waiting for a general settlement. There have been 14 executors, appointed by local Brazilian judges over the decades, who were either unwilling or unable to cope with the will and the holdings.

The 15th, a schoolteacher and descendant of the Comendador, is Dalva Rodrigues Merenda. She claims she can do it.

"I've read 13,460 pages of legal documents, word by word and letter by letter," she told a reporter in Pelotas, a southern Brazilian city near where the Comendador lived.

"During the week, after school, I spend entire nights going over the records, sometimes without sleeping. On weekends I go to a place in the country — I won't tell you where — and I go through the documents some more. I don't go to the movies on Saturday nights. I don't go to the beach in the summer. I don't even take a break for Brazil's carnival holiday. But I guarantee you: I'm going to get to the bottom of this."

Despite Miss Merenda's impressive determination, the problems she faces are enormous.

In the first place, some of the original deeds and titles simply have disappeared or, according to local gossip, were stolen. Second, the Comendador's original properties were measured in archaic units dating from the Roman Empire — "leagues," "armlengths," "sections."

Third, Correa's holdings extend from Brazil to neighboring Uruguay and perhaps to Chile, Argentina and Bolivia.

Fourth, much of what might be Comendador property has been occupied for generations by other people — tenants, government agencies, organizations of the Catholic Church, and just plain squatters. It will not be easy getting them to leave.

Finally, there are widespread tales of fake deeds, bought-off officials and other chicanery.

Overlaying everything is pressure. Miss Merenda is sometimes roused at 6 a.m. by would-be-heirs who camp out overnight in front of her house. In spite of the tens of thousands of allegations by people looking for their share, "at the most some 1,500 have claims that will hold up in court," she says.

Most of Brazil, it seems, wants to be in that 1,500.

The man who will decide ultimately is Judge Paulo Augusto Monte Lopes of the 2nd Civil Court in Rio Grande, another city in prosperous southern Brazil.

"It's very simple," the young judge says. "Brazil has precise laws regarding inheritances. These laws will be applied. I plan to treat this case as I would any other."

But things are not so simple, and after his decision, there are three more courts of appeal, ending in the Supreme Court. And no one knows how to coordinate any Brazilian verdict with those in other countries.

One wonders what the old Comendador would have thought. Popular as he was in his time, he certainly never had so many friends as he does now.

Early Pregnancy Class To Meet

An Early Pregnancy Class will be held Monday from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. in Conference Room B of Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

This class is open to all expectant couples in the early months of pregnancy. A film will be shown and material on nutrition and other aspects of pregnancy will be distributed. Information on prenatal services offered in the community will be presented. No registration is required and admission is free.

For more information, call 756-6304, 752-2077 or 756-0445.

Childbirth Film Showings Set

Greenville Childbirth Educators will sponsor the showing of three films Thursday, Feb. 8, at 7:30 p.m. at Pitt Memorial Hospital, conference room A.

The films are "Nan's Class," "Labors of Love" and "The Bonding Birth Experience."

The films are free and open to the public.

In The Event Of Snow, Crews Stand In Readiness

Text And Photograph By Lynn Caverly

PREPARING FOR THE WEEKEND — and any ensuing bad weather are employees of Greenville Public Works Department. Shown here loading dump trucks with sand are just a few pieces of equipment necessary to keep area streets clear during winter weather of snow and ice.

Residents of Greenville and Pitt County might not see much snow in any given winter, but when it does come work is already underway providing the safest traffic conditions possible.

Mayo Allen, Director of Public Works for the City of Greenville, and H. L. Vincent, Supervisor of Street Maintenance for N. C. Department of Transportation (DOT) in Pitt County, are two men who have a plan in such circumstances.

Both men are responsible for the upkeep of their respective thoroughfares and maintain priority systems so there is no question as to which areas get cleared first.

In Greenville, the first street to get cleared in the case of snow or freezing rain is Evans.

"If we clear Evans Street," said Allen, "then we can bring traffic all the way into the city."

After clearing the main thoroughfares in Greenville, public works employees then clear streets in residential sections and finally streets designated as "call-in".

Allen explained that these latter streets are ones on which only a few families live and they must call if they need the street cleared.

"We clear all the streets one time," said Allen, "before we make a second round."

About 1,050 miles of state owned roads in the county are also cleared on a priority basis. Vincent explained that primary roads such as 264-business (Tenth Street), N. C. 11 and 13, and others are cleared first. Secondary roads are then cleared, followed by unpaved roads.

"Usually the unpaved roads don't require much clearing," said Vincent. "Most of the work on these roads is done getting them back in shape after the weather clears up."

With a city work force of some 160 employees and about 90 state employees, there is no shortage of manpower during bad weather conditions.

"Our employees don't wait to be called," said Allen. "They make it their business to come down to the yard if bad weather seems likely."

Allen added that if the number of street maintenance employees is insufficient to get the roads cleared quickly, then employees from the other six public works divisions are used.

"For example," said Allen, "sanitation couldn't collect any trash until the streets were clear, so we would use them to clear the streets."

Both departments maintain specific crews to clear predesignated areas. The state even maintains employees in Shelmerdine, Winterville and Farmville with equipment nearby so a trip to the work yard is not necessary.

"The men who live in those areas," exp'ains Vincent,' "have a motorgrader nearby and know beforehand what streets they will need to clear."

Motorgraders, or road scrapers as they are more commonly referred to, as well as snow plows, front-end loaders and dump trucks are used along with the labor.

"But make no mistake about it," said Allen, "if we didn't have the work force, the machines would be useless."

The city owns one motorgrader, and according to Allen, more are available if needed through provisions of a contract the city has with a construction firm. The local DOT has 10 motorgraders, 12 front-end plows that can be attached to trucks and eight material spreaders used to distribute salt and sand. The city uses manual labor to spread these materials on the streets.

After the city scrapes with the motorgrader, front-end loaders follow behind and dump the snow into dump trucks. The snow is then hauled away to places where it can drain into the Tar River. One of these places is located at Washington and First Streets where there is a catch basin to direct the run off into the river.

Allen was quick to add that the city is very careful not to scrape any hilltops.

"We get so little snow in these parts for the children to enjoy," said Allen, "that we just barricade areas where they like to go sledding and call in the recreation department for any needed supervision."

Large quantities of salt and sand are maintained by both departments. The city must stock 5,000 pounds of salt and at least 4,500 average loads of sand. The state locally holds 300 tons of salt and "as much sand as I would want or need", according to Vincent.

"We also hold 200, 96-pound bags of calcium chloride," said Vincent. "This is used to melt ice that forms on bridges because regular rock salt will cause the steel in bridges to rust."

Both men are very dependent upon the Greenville Police Department, N. C. Highway Patrol and the Pitt County Sheriff's Office to alert them to trouble spots on the roads.

"Installing radio equipment in our trucks and cars has helped our efficiency tremendously," said Allen. "And barring any freak storms, I feel that area residents can rest assured that all attempts are being made to insure their safety and enjoyment during the winter months."

Latin American Religious Art

By JUAN O. TAMAYO

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — To the 300 million Latin American Catholics, the shrine to the Virgin of Guadalupe that Pope John Paul II blessed on his recent visit to Mexico is the shroud of Turin and the waters of Lourdes all rolled into one.

The Guadalupe cloak, showing what is believed to be the miracuously imprinted image of a dark-skinned Virgin Mary, is without doubt the most revered religious object south of the Rio Grande.

Each year millions of pilgrims from places as far away as Argentina, Peru and Brazil come to see the cloak which hangs behind the main altar at the ultra-modern Guadalupe Basilica in a northern suburb of Mexico City.

Despite its deep religious importance to Latin American Catholics, little can be found in the way of scientific studies of the cloak, like those being undertaken this year of the shroud of Turin in Italy, which believers say was miraculously imprinted with an image of Christ when it was used as his burial shroud.

At least one book appears to question the veracity of the tale behind the cloak, which began in 1531 when an Aztec Indian named Antonio Valeriano wrote a brief account of the recent events in the life of a poor Indian, Juan Diego.

Diego was walking by Tepeyac hill one day, the story went, when the Virgin Mary appeared to him in the guise of a dark-skinned Aztec princess and asked him to urge the local bishop to build a church atop the hill.

To prove the request came from the virgin, Diego picked a bunch of roses, put them inside his tilma — an Aztec cloak made from cactus fibers and tied toga-like around one shoulder — and took them to Bishop Juan de Zumarraga.

When the tilma was opened, it was found to be imprinted with an image of the virgin, her hands clasped in prayer, her head bowed to her right, a blue wrap covering a long white and gold dress, her feet planted atop a quarter moon held up by an angel.

Zumarraga built the church on Tepeyac hill and installed inside the tilmac, which soon was credited with miracles from resurrecting the dead to curing gangrene to reining in stampeding horses.

To the Indians of Mexico, conquered by white-skinned Spaniards and told to worship their white-skinned God and saints, the image bore a powerful message: The virgin, and her divine son, were as Indian as they were white.

Pilgrims poured in, the church was expanded to a basilica, and ailing people began drinking the water from a spring on the hill that was said to provide miraculous cures like Lourdes.

But American author David St. Clair, in his book "Pagans, Priests and Prophets: A Personal Investigation into the Living Traditions of Occult Mexico," cast some doubt on the Valeriano story.

St. Clair wrote that in the 1930s, Mexican painter Jorge Gonzales Camarena found in an ancient monastery a painting "almost identical" to the Virgin of Guadalupe and said both works appared to have been done "by the same artist."

He also wrote that in 1553, a Franciscan priest preached a sermon from atop Tepeyac hill "and then blasted the Indians for their belief in 'an idolatrous image painted by an Indian named Marcos.'"

STATUE OF VIRGIN — One of the many works of church art figuring in the recent visit of Pope John Paul II to Latin countries is this huge statue of the Virgin Mary holding Christ. The statue, in Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, was photographed at the time scaffolding surrounded it as work was carried out to construct an altar at the site for the Pope's visit. # PBS Events

CHAPEL HILL — The first of five new segments of "Country Matters," based on short stories by A. E. Coppard and H. E. Bates, will be broadcast on Channel 25, Greenville at 9 p.m. today. The first of the five plays is to be "Crippled Bloom."

Other dramatizations to be aired at later dates are: "Breeze Anstey;" "The Simple Life;" "An Aspidistra in Babylon;" and "The Sullen Sisters."

— Another PBS attraction airing this week is "Academy Leaders," featuring for the first time a showcase of 34 short films, all the nominee for, or the winner of, an Academy Award.

Writer-producer-director Norman Corwin is host for the short films which range from a 1949 Warner Brothers film on daredevil stunts, "Spills and Chills;" to "A Time Out of War," a black-and-white narrative of the Civil War; and "That's Me," a witty improvisation of a Puerto Rican social dropout featuring Alan Arkin.

— At 8 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 6, actor Roddy McDowall will be host for a look at seven of the most lavish musical films ever to come out of Hollywood. He will be joined by Gene Kelly and Debbie Reynolds in revisiting "On The Town," "Kiss Me Kate," "Silk Stockings," "The Great Caruso," "High Society," "The Band Wagon," and "Singin' in the Rain."

A Discovery Walk Across The United States

Text By John Blizzard, Dare County Tourist Bureau

NAGS HEAD — Stephan Foust stepped out this week on a journey which promises to be a fulfilling exploration — one on the order of explorers DeSoto, Lewis and Clark, or Daniel Boone.

"By the Boot Straps — A Walk Through America" is the description the 30-year old former history teacher turned wanderer-writer uses referring to his attempt to discover the true American "character" today as he travels across the United States on foot from the Atlantic to the Pacific, about 3,200 miles.

With two years of concentrated planning completed, Foust expects to complete his mid-America tour within a year to a year and a half.

Foust says "I was always a closet writer while I was a teacher." Since leaving his seven-year tenure in the classroom he has edited a weekly newspaper and handled free lance writing and editorial assignments.

A native of Elkhart, Indiana, Foust believes his discovery tour will reveal the true American "characters" which seem to have been overshadowed by media stereotypes. "We are not all homegenized John Travoltas and Olivia Newton-Johns," he commented.

Foust plans to compile his exploratory experiences into a book on the nature of people he discovers during his walking adventure. He will also document his experiences in articles for distribution through an agent in his hometown.

"Trusting, open people are still around," Foust said, "and not all of them are eccentric senior citizens. There are many up-beat stories about interesting individuals all across the country — and I hope to locate them."

A motivation behind Foust's walk is that same interest in discovery which prompted European explorers and pioneers — the big question "Why?" When teaching, Foust attempted to determine why explorers made their journeys, only to find that reference materials seemed to have left out that human motivation factor behind their ventures.

"My philosophy is that all people are potentially a book," Foust explained, displaying a cheerful smile as warm as the gold of his star earring and the red of his suspenders.

For the cross-continent walk, Foust has been given assistance by several sports and business firms that have outfitted him in rugged clothing and camping gear.

From his Cape Hatteras National Seashore beginning point, Foust will travel amost directly west through North Carolina, going through Raleigh, Winston-Salem and Asheville as he walks toward his ultimate destination of Point Reyes National Seashore near Oakland, California.

Foust's "By the Boot Straps — A Walk Through America" is his way of changing what he terms his "self developed writing craft" into a more fully developed artistic statement on the path he will follow across the United States in his search for the stories of American people.

Papers Reveal 1861 Rush To Arms

By DENNIS R. LAWSON
ECU Manuscript Curator

In May, 1861, North Carolinians joined other Southerners in the indignant, strident rush to arms precipitated by Abe Lincoln's call for troops.

The papers of Major Thomas Sparrow, preserved in the East Carolina Manuscript Collection, reveal the activities of this Washington, N. C. lawyer and politican during the Civil War era.

The Washington Grays, a volunteer Beaufort County company, elected Sparrow their captain, and embarked for duty amid the cheers of one of the largest assemblages ever held in Washington.

Ordered To Ocracoke

To their dismay, the Grays received orders to report to Ocracoke Island for garrison and patrol duty. Other local companies soon joined the Grays to form the 7th N. C. Volunteers, and they bore jaunty names such as the Hyde County Rifles, Tar River Boys, Hertford Light Infantry, and the Morris Guards.

Sparrow took the duty in stride, but agreed with a friend who commiserated that "it must require all your previous knowledge of Portsmouth to believe it ever could be a pleasant place to visit."

As much as they wanted active duty, the Grays resisted the idea of enlisting for the duration as regular troops, which would obtain for them a transfer to the Virginia front, where chances for excitement and glory flourished.

Friends urged Sparrow to sign with the regulars, since "where you now are, that opportunity will never (in all probability) be offered you . . . It will be a burning shame for you and your gallant company to be buried, literally buried, on the sand banks of Portsmouth."

Endured Jibes

The Grays endured caustic jibes of soldiers like Daniel M. Carter, who had joined a Virginia-bound regiment: "If you are disposed to permit a dozen or so of your adventurous young men to join me, I will exchange an equal number of good fishermen and crabbers with you."

Sparrow, who was senior officer of the companies at Portsmouth, endured trying responsibilities. He contended with rampant epidemics of disease, boredom, problems with alcohol among the troops, and even a mutiny.

Many of his officers, noted a local citizen, "have great LICQUID failings." In early August, 1861, Sparrow applied for a position in the Virginia-bound 2nd Regiment commanded by Colonel Charles C. Tew, but before their marching orders arrived a federal fleet beseiged Forts Hatteras and Clark at Hatteras Inlet, and the Grays volunteered in the defense of the forts.

Withstood Bombardment

At Hatteras, the Grays withstood a debilitating naval bombardment, made all the worse by the fact that the Confederate guns could not reach the invaders. The Grays, along with other North Carolina troops, surrendered, to be shipped as prisoners of war to Governor's Island, New York.

The responsibility of supplying the imprisoned Grays with necessities fell to Sparrow. Since prison officials allowed captured officers only ten dollars, Sparrow pledged that Beaufort County citizens would pay his accounts with Northern merchants, who supplied his needs. Northern friends of Sparrow helped alleviate material discomfort, and sent books, clothes, playing cards, and tobacco.

Little Sympathy

Many Northerners showed little sympathy and taunted the Grays for allowing themselves to be captured. "SAFE as I am," Sparrow stormed at a sneering New Yorker. "I would prefer to be in another 'Fort Hatteras' with guns that would reach, or on the tented battlefield."

By February, 1862 however, Sparrow and his men received exchanges and the Grays once again attempted to halt the activities of Union invaders in eastern North Carolina.

The ECU Manuscript Collection is open to the public Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. The Thomas Sparrow papers are available to researchers interested in Civil War history.

Tracing Survivors Of The Nazi Holocaust

BY GALE WILEY

AROLSEN, West Germany (UPI) — Once the allied victors of World War II quenched the flames of the Holocaust, the search began to determine who of the 12 million Europeans in Nazi concentration camps had died and who had survived.

The brunt of the task fell to the International Tracing Service (ITS), organized initially by the United States, Britain and France and now financed by West Germany.

Since 1945 ITS has assembled about 40 million card files on some 12 million victims of Nazi persecution.

"Of course, many of those 12 million — those from the labor camps especially — returned home alive and well," said Alfred Opitz, director of ITS archives at Arolsen.

But many other millions did not return.

As confiscated Nazi SS documents began to flow into ITS headquarters from the Nuremberg war trials, the horror of concentration camps, forced labor and mass murder sickened the world.

Detailed records of tens of thousands of names showed how Jews, Poles and others had been methodically shipped by cattle car to death camps.

"Imagine thousands of folders. And in every folder thousands of pages. And on these pages thousands of names," says Lithuania-born Teve Meskauskas, deputy chief of the master index file. "No one then had any idea what it all meant or where it all came from."

German thoroughness compiled detailed rosters of those sent to concentration camps, forced labor camps or the gas chambers, but the SS destroyed most of them — only Dachau's and Buchenwald's were complete.

Then ITS workers found that train transport records could roughly establish which prisoners had been at which camp and when. But all documents it found had one decisive loophole.

"Imagine some petty German official registering prisoners somewhere," Meskaukas said. "Thousands of people — Poles, Czechs, Jews. This petty official asks a prisoner, 'What's your name?' The person says, 'Banacheck.'

"And the official writes down the name the way he hears it. He never asks for a spelling."

Multiply that scene over and over, Meskaukas says, "and you have some idea of the inaccuracy of those lists."

Workers at Arolsen had to make sense of all the names, creating what some German newspapers have called a "library of horror."

Hungarian-born Stephan Osztroviczky, chief of the ITS master index, looks out across the huge second floor master index file with its row after row of file boxes, each file box containing thousands of flimsy and yellowing cards, each card with a name.

"I was 25 when I began working here," he said. "I've been at this post for 30 years. I constructed this card filing system. This is a piece of me."

Thirty years ago Osztroviczky and his co-workers faced the problem of organizing lists of names which mainly had been written down by ignorant, indifferent clerks, many of them prisoners themselves.

"Did you know that Schwartz, a simple German name, could be written 156 ways?" Ostroviczky asks.

He holds up a card with the name Szczepanskiewicz — 60 to 70 percent of all names on file are Slavic or Eastern European. "That name can be spelled 480 different ways," he said.

"It was clear that we had to develop an alphabetic-phonetic filing system."

In 1948, 250 workers from 13 countries began the Herculean task of assigning phonetic symbols to letter groupings.

They also had to cipher variations of first names, both Christian and Jewish, and to keep in mind that children taken by the Nazis invariably gave their nicknames rather than given names.

Despite more than three decades of work, ITS has been unable to catch up with inquiries flowing into Arolsen, said Opitz. In 1977 the ITS had a backlog of about 13,000 inquiries from 45 countries.

Typical is an inquiry from an elderly Polish woman who must prove that three years of her life were spent in a Nazi concentration camp. Without this proof she cannot get her pension from the Polish state, Opitz said.

"As early as 1948, our work began to shift from looking for missing persons to helping people prove they had been incarcerated so they could receive compensation for what happened to them," Opitz said. "Many others needed documents for immigration."

Over the years the ITS has assembled a host of fascinating cases.

—A Polish Jewish woman escapes the Nazis and reaches the United States, leaving behind her baby son. After years of searching for the boy, the woman is directed to Arolsen. There she learns that for nearly 20 years he has been living in New York — on the same street as his mother.

—A gypsy woman needs documentary proof that she had been in a Nazi concentration camp. She provides her tattoo number, which she has read from her forearm: "Z-6661." ITS workers can find neither the woman's name or her number. But a staffer discovers the woman has given the Czech version of her name and has read her tattoo upside down. Her number was "1999-Z".

—A Frenchman tries to locate a German girl who had offered him bread while he was a prisoner in Germany. A Nazi officer caught them, sending the Frenchman to a suicide squad assigned to clearing mines on the Russian front and the German girl to a concentation camp. Arolsen contained no record on the girl. But by using the Frenchman's old prisoner-of-war number, ITS discovered a file on the case in old Gestapo records in Duesseldorf. It told the Frenchman his benefactor had survived and where she lived.

—The ITS received a letter from a German separated as a boy from the rest of his family and adopted by an American couple. He wants to learn who and where his mother is. ITS not only finds his mother but tells the inquirer he has a brother who also was adopted by an American family.

"The best part of the story is that we even have photographs of the boys together," says Meskauskas. "That's what I call a really nice case."

Company Nurse Is Also A Counselor

NEW YORK (AP) — When employees go to the company nurse to consult about chest pain, a foreign object in the eye or other physical problem, they benefit from the nurse's communication and counseling skills as well as nursing skills, says an occupational health nurse.

Registered nurse Larry Hannigan points out this extra benefit in "Occupational Health Nursing," official journal of the American Association of Occupational Health Nurses.

Hannigan is vice president of the association, which has 10,000 members, all registered nurses employed by business, government and industry to protect the health and safety of the work force.

Seldom is an employee with a medical or surgical problem seen without need to consider the emotional effect of the illness or injury, notes Hannigan, divisional manager of nursing services for International Business Machines Corp., Franklin Lakes, N.J.

"Frequently," he points out, "the occupational health nurse serves as the first line of defense for an employee's 'disease.' "

As an example he cites the case of a 26-year-old man who returned to work after an absence caused by high blood pressure. On his return, the employee was depressed and unaccepting of his "potentially catastrophic" condition.

After counseling sessions with the occupational health nurse and conferences with management and private physicians, he accepted the recommendation of a job change.

"He then became an effective employee and was soon promoted," said Hannigan. "Not only were management and employee satisfied with the intervention of the company's nurse, but so was his wife."

Occupational health nurses, Hannigan notes, are obliged to keep current on trends in psychiatric treatment and new psychotropic drugs; to be familiar with community agencies and treatment centers; and to be able to recognize when it is necessary to make referral and recommend other professional treatment for employees with emotional difficulties.

Mavis Butts realty

Greenville

Mavis Butts Realty is pleased to announce the introduction to our area of the Federal Home Warranty program, a warranty service for existing homes.

When you list with Mavis Butts Realty, you affiliate yourself with Federal Home Warranty which guarantees your home against defect in the major working components of your home for one year from the date of purchase.

Before a home is listed under the FHW program an inspection is made of the home, checking such items as heating and air conditioning systems, hot water heating units, water system units, built-in appliances and any other items to be included in FHW's coverage. Then, if the homeowner has a problem with any of these systems, FHW sends a repairman immediately to handle it.

TV Time

For February 4-February 10, 1979

Stallone Stars In 'Rocky' Sunday

The blockbuster hit movie, "Rocky," starring Sylvester Stallone, will be broadcast for the first time on television Sunday, Feb. 4 (8 to 10:30 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

The 1976 United Artists release, winner of three Academy Awards, was one of the biggest box-office hits of all times. Stallone, who was nominated for an Oscar as best actor, also wrote the Academy Award-nominated screenplay.

Talia Shire, Burt Young, Carl Weathers and Burgess Meredith co-star.

The movie tells the uplifting story of the efforts of a small-time boxer and street punk in Philadelphia, Rocky Balboa (Stallone), who battles against over-whelming odds to make something of himself.

Rocky's life appears to be headed nowhere. He's had a few minor fights, but he earns his living as a strong arm for a local loan shark (Joe Spinell). He spends much of his time hanging around the shy, plain sister (Miss Shire) of his friend, Paulie (Young). No one has much respect for him, and even his crusty old trainer (Meredith) holds him in contempt.

His life changes when get gets an opportunity to meet Apollo Creed (Weathers), the World Heavyweight Champion, in the ring. Rocky is a substitute for the original challenger in a bout that is purely a publicity gimmick dreamed up by Creed and a fight promoter (Thayer David). It's a Bicentennial fight supposedly meant to give an unknown a chance at glory, but actually a showcase for the champ's showy style. Rocky has been chosen because Apollo likes his ring name, "The Italian Stallion," and nobody expects him to be a real contender.

But Rocky realizes that this is an opportunity to escape the nothingness of his life. The newly determined fighter pours his heart into preparing for the match, hoping to give the champ a run for his money and last the full 15 rounds in the ring.

His effort changes his outlook on life, brings his girl out of her shell, and reveals the darker side of her brother's nature.

Like the hero on 'Rocky," Stallone, previously an unknown, struggled against seemingly impossible odds to emerge a winner.

"'Rocky' happened to be my story," Stallone has said. "It was about my inability to be an actor, set in boxing trunks. Rocky had the drive and the talent to be a fighter, but no one noticed him. The fact that we both went the distance, when we were finally given the opportunity, that's the main parallel," he concluded.

Sylvester Stallone stars in the Oscar-winning hit film, "Rocky," airing for the first time on television, Sunday, Feb. 4 (8-10:30 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Film Process Aids New Comedy-Mystery Series

The biggest, jazziest, most luxurious train ever built will soon be taking television viewers on 200-miles-per-hour trips from coast to coast — with the help of a wall-sized motion picture screen.

The train will be one of the major stars of NBC-TV's new "Supertrain" series, which premieres Wednesday, Feb. 7 (8 to 10 p.m.).

It consists of a massive, bullet-shaped locomotive and nine magnificent, plush coaches, constructed on multi-million-dollar sets within three huge Hollywood sound stages. Among the features on Supertrain are a swimming pool, gymnasium, medical center, library, Presidential suite, beauty salons, boutiques and a discotheque.

Visitors to the stages are awed by the giant silver train (each car is 64 feet long, 26 feet wide and 22 feet high), which appears ready to zoom straight into the tunnel leading from New York's Grand Central Station.

The train is nearly twice the size of anything on today's rails, so how will NBC-TV race from coast to coast? Through the amazing art of the Process Screen.

Here's how it is accomplished.

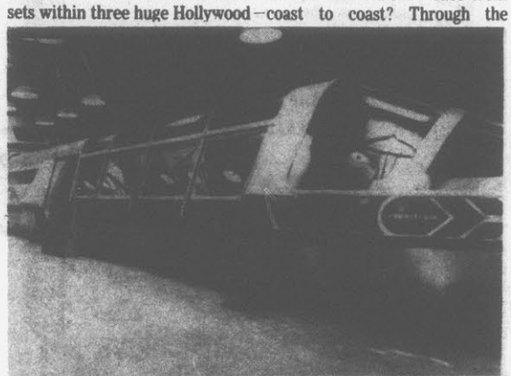

First you take 10 motion picture cameras and mount them, at various angles and heights, on a real train. Then, as the train rolls across the country, you take movies of the passing scenery.

Then you develop those movies and place them in a special film library, with all the scenes marked for future use. Soon the library will have an ample amount of pictures of seasides, forests, deserts, lakes and cities.

Once the filming of a segment is underway, all actors are inside the train. Behind them are Supertrain's big, glass windows, and outside there is a huge, blank motion picture screen. "Okay," says the director, "this shot takes place as we're rolling through the Rocky Mountains."

Library film, actually shot in the Rocky Mountains, is put into the process camera, projected on the screen, and suddenly, from inside Supertrain, you'd swear that you were indeed speeding through those mountains!

The comedy-mystery series will focus on the adventures of the passengers on the train as it zips between New York City and Los Angeles.

NUCLEAR-POWERED ENGINE-The bullet-shaped locomotive, with its atomic power plant, pulls railroad coaches up to 100 miles an hour, in "Supertrain," airing Wednesday, Feb. 7 (8-10 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Larry Andersons' Harlan Is A Combination Of Jerks

But he hopes to excel most as an actor, and his role as Harlan, the stuffed-shirt of Pi Nu fraternity in NBC's "Brothers and Sisters" (Fridays, 8:30 to 9 p.m), should give his career a considerable boost.

"I researched real-life brothers at local universities," said Anderson. "It was a common question of mine to find out their games, pranks and rituals. I got some marvelous information. They like to put Kool-Aid in showerheads and saran wrap over toilet seats. I want them to be able to watch us and say, 'Aha, that's it. You've got it!'

"As for my character, Harlan, he's a combination of a lot of jerks I know. He's 'holier than thou.' I picture him a lot like Maj. Frank Burns on 'M*A*S*H.'"

"I saw a lot of magicians when I was 12 years old," he said. "I didn't know what they were doing, but I knew I wanted to do it to, so I studied magic, put myself through high school and college."

He starred in "The Magic Show" in Australia and New Zealand in 1974-75.

Nostalgic Film Stars Streisand And Redford

Barbra Streisand and Robert Redford star in the bittersweet love story "The Way We Were," as part two of the "ABC Double Feature Movie," Sunday, Feb. 4 (9-11:20 p.m.).

Remember the good old days of movie-going? When Bette Davis could be counted upon to get at least one wad of Kleenex sopping wet, and Fred Astaire always had at least two sure-fire dance routines per musical? And, whenever you went to the movies, you'd sit back in your seat secure in the knowledge that no dreams would be disturbed that night. Bogey would never open his mouth and sing. Nor would Garbo ever be seen putting on tap shoes. Dreamland was taken so seriously by everyone else and meant so much to you.

It means about that much to "The Way We Were" too, which is why the film is an excellent depiction of the way movies once were. Viewing this movie is like retreating to the high-powered big-star weepies of the '40s.

The highly-acclaimed film will be rebroadcast on "The ABC Sunday Night Movie Double Feature," Feb. 4 (9 to 11:20 p.m.). Starring are Robert Redford and Barbra Streisand.

Set against the uneasy times of the 1950s, when political suspicions and accusations turned friends into betrayers and creative careers were smashed overnight, "The Way We Were" is the bittersweet story of two people who drift into marriage and out of love without ever really understanding why.

Katie (Streisand) is a socially-involved young radical who actually marries her Prince Charming — Hubbell (Redford) — a handsome, conservative young writer with a yearning for success in Hollywood and no particular convictions to be courageous about. When charges of "Communist infiltration" begin to fly fast and very loose, Katie goes to Washington to protest. Hubbell bends with the wind, and their marriage breaks in the process.

In her role as Katie, Streisand is her usual sly and saucy self. She is also a joiner, a demonstrator, a signer-up for virtually every protest march around, and throws out slogans like "You can still take Communion and like the Soviet Union" with admirable poise and a straight face. Nothing stops her: nobody gets in her way.

'Resurrection'

Eva Le Gallienne, who recently celebrated her 80th birthday, has been signed by Universal Studios for her first major motion picture role in "Resurrection," capping a career that began in 1915 when she appeared on the London stage in "Monna Vanna."

Role Is Herself

"I'm incredibly shy. I don't like to be me," says Talia Shire.

The talented actress was nominated for an Oscar as best supporting actress for a role that allowed her to use this quality. She played Adrian, the insecure and painfully shy girl in "Rocky," airing Sunday, Feb. 4 (8 to 10:30 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

"My acting came out of a necessity to overcome my shyness," Talia adds. "When I put myself in front of people, it was spooky to see if I could do it."

For Adrian, in the film, it is Rocky who helps her with her problem. By standing beside the determined boxer in his quest to prove himself in the ring when everyone else belittles his efforts, Adrian returns the favor. To many commentators, the relationship between the characters was one of the principal ingredients that made "Rocky" the tremendous hit it was.

"'Rocky' is a positive film," Miss Shire comments, "and there aren't many of them around anymore. When I read the script, I went crazy for it. I loved it."

The actress attributes her shyness to her childhood. "I traveled on the road as a kid," she explains. "I attended 13 schools in 12 years because my father is a musical composer and we traveled with different shows. I never really had time to make friends, which is necessary for identification at a young age.

"Besides, I came from a very overwhelming, talented and close Italian family, mostly men. I had two older brothers, and I had to get my sentences out real fast."

That talented family includes her father, arranger-conductor Carmine Coppola, who composed the musical scores for both parts of "The Godfather," winning an Academy Award for the sequel. Her brother is the Oscar-winning director, Francis Coppola.

Miss Shire's prescription for her shyness, pursuing an acting career, has led to considerable success. She played the Corleone daughter, Connie, in both 'Godfather' films and appeared in such other movies as "The Dunwitch Horror" and "The Outside Man." Her television starring roles include "Daddy, I Don't Like It Like This" and "Foster and Laurie."

A New Mary

There will be a new Mary Ryan on ABC-TV's daytime series "Ryan's Hope" soon, when Nicolette Goulet, daughter of singer Robert Goulet, replaces Kathleen Ryan Tolan in the role.

Actresses Say Roles Had A Sense Of Awe

The nine stars who portray U.S. Presidents' wives during the 51-year period dramatized in "Backstairs at the White House" (currently airing Mondays on NBC-TV) agree that they approached their roles with a certain sense of awe.

"The sets themselves, authentic replicas of the White House, provided an aura of truth," says Jan Sterling who plays Mrs. Herbert Hoover.

Miss Sterling is a direct descendent of two Presidents, John Adams and John Quincy Adams. "But this is the only time I've played a First Lady. Someday I'd like to be cast as Abigail Adams!"

Lee Grant, who appears as Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, wears a dress worn by the First Lady she portrays. "Grace Coolidge was a small town girl, outgoing, a contrast to her somewhat introverted husband. But it was he who picked out her clothing. If he saw something he thought suited her, he'd buy it. Our script is full of these little known sidelights of history. It was an interesting assignment."

Julie Harris plays Mrs. William Howard Taft. "I did some research on Nellie Taft," she says. "She went through an agonizing period after suffering a stroke. And, as the film points out, the patient persistence of her husband helped speed her recovery. There was a lot of love there."

Celeste Holm, whose performance as the vain Mrs. Warren G. Harding is one of the dramatic highlights, points out that "she was older than her handsome husband and was aware of his dalliances. She was also vindictive against those who had snubbed her before she became First Lady. It was a delicious part to play."

There were two Mrs. Woodrow Wilsons. Kim Hunter, who plays Ellen Wilson, says, "It was fun being on the sound stage the same time as my successor — Claire Bloom."

Miss Bloom, appearing as Edith Galt, the second Mrs. Wilson, whose marriage to the President a little over a year after Ellen's death raised some eyebrows, says, "I loved playing Edith, because she was an aristocratic Virginian."

Steam Engine Produced A Giant West

The romantic notion that America's West was won when horses and oxen first pulled plows through its rich carpet of virginal soil is only partially correct, according to actor and folklore enthusiast James Arness.

"It was the steam engine drawing 20 plows behind it that turned the United States into a corn and wheat producing giant," said Arness, star of "How the West Was Won," now airing Mondays (9 to 11 p.m.), on ABC-TV.

Arness gives the oxen and horses their due for getting the folks out West, and getting things started for the small farmers, adding: "The steam-belching machines became the real heroes in carving the lands into massive, productive grain fields. When one mentions steam engines, he immediately equates them with railroads, but old-timers will recall the pot-bellied monsters puffing across the flatlands and the rolling hills as the forerunners to the tractors that we know today.

"Following the plowing of the land, the engines were used to harrow, disc and level the fresh earth in preparation for the seed planters — pulled by the engines. sumptuous feasts to feed the traveling men and nearby farmers who came from everywhere to help haul in the grains. It was a great day for the farmer, too, if he got his crop in the granary before the frost and snow. It was a time for thanks as Of course, farmers, big and small, were still at the mercy of mother nature, as there was no irrigation. They always had an eye toward the heavens hoping for the life-giving rain, while the other eye was warily scanning the horizon for signs of trouble.

"Then, if the good Lord smiled on them and the grains grew tall enough to harvest, here came the steam engine again dragging along the mighty harvesting machine. It was the biggest day other than Christmas when the threshers would come. The women spent days preparing for the well, and on the next Sunday the farmer would load his brood in the buckboard and head for the ol' knotty-pine church."

Arness shook his leonine head and said, "But if the rains didn't come and drought left the grains rotting with blight, even the steam engine couldn't help them. It was a monumental feast just to survive."

David Leaves

Third Time

Emmy winner Robert Vaughn is seen in his third Presidential role in "Backstairs at the White House." He previously played Franklin D. Roosevelt (in a one-man show and Harry S. Truman (in a TV special). "I wonder," muses Vaughn, "if I'll ever be cast as a Republican?"

Perkins Hosts A History On 60 Years Of Horrors

Un-American or not, the subject has always fascinated audiences here. They have loved to be frightened — to be transferred back to the days of childhood, seemingly alone in the dark, with shadows flickering on the walls and with no one to share their fears.

Perkins leads television viewers through the history of the horror movie on "The Horror Show: 60 Years of Movie Monsters, Madmen and Other Creatures of the Night," Tuesday, Feb. 6 (8 to 10 p.m.), on CBS-TV. Perkins chronicles the subject, starting with the silent film classic, "The Cabinet of Dr. Calgari," to the more recent thrillers, "The Omen" and "Jaws."

Such favorite films as "King Kong" (1933), "The Fly" (1958), "Dracula" (1931), "The Phantom of the Opera" (1925) and "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" (1923) will be spotlighted on the program, as will other films including "Psycho" (1960), "Creature From the Black Lagoon" (1954), "Willard" (1970), "The Day the Earth Stood Still" (1951), "The Incredible Shrinking Man" (1957), "The Birds" (1963) and the ever-popular "Frankenstein" (1931).

Perkins explains why horror is un-American:

"Our big skies, open spaces, modern cities just don't suit the classic horror mood. Besides, we have always been a bit short of a lot of other things you need — remote castles, gloomy dungeons, various decadent and deranged aristocrats and superstitious peasants. Except for Edgar Allan Poe, the great Gothic literature, the starting point of horror movies, was written in Europe. So were the folk tales which inspired a lot of those movies. All of the first great classics of screen horror were set in Europe, and a lot of them were made there."

Perkins starred in what is probably the most famous terror sequence in the history of movies, in Alfred Hitchcock's thriller, "Psycho."

"Horror was coming closer to home by that time," Perkins explains, and 'Psycho' put it on our very doorsteps. Now it was in America. 'The Exorcist' showed us that it might be anywhere, or everywhere, and we found we couldn't even trust our feathered friends ('The Birds'), or animals ('Willard').

Romantic Comedy Sets Sail

A cruise ship filled with romance and comedy sets sail in "Love Boat III," the "Tuesday Movie of the Week" Feb. 6 (11:30 p.m.), on ABC-TV, which has almost as many stories as it has passengers and crew members.

Gavin MacLeod stars as Captain Merrill Stubing, making his first voyage on the Princess, whose interest in a beautiful young woman he thinks is a passenger, serves to link the lives of the crew members and passengers in a very personal way. What the very proper Stubing does not know it that the woman, Cleo, is a stowaway.

Also starring are Bernie Kopell as Dr. Adam Bricker, Fred Gandy as Burl "Gopher" Smith, the assistant purser; Ted Lange as Issac Washington, the ship's steward, and Lauren Tewes as Julie McCoy, the cruise director.

As the Princess sets out to sea, some of the crew members are in a panic. First, they've heard that their new captain is a veritable Attila the Hun. Secondly, "Gopher," who has had a run-in with Stubing, discovers that Cleo has smuggled herself aboard. Then the captain orders Julie to produce Cleo at his table. He wants to meet her. Many of the passengers become involved in the crew members' frantic efforts to conceal Cleo's stowaway status from Captain Stubing.

Virginia's Cavaliers Hopeful For ACC Title

Virginia Cavalier fans are a hardy lot. They have to be if they are Cavalier fans. After all, the Charlottesville squad has never won an ACC championship in basketball in almost 25 years of competition.

From 1954 to '70, the team failed to have a winning record. But things have changed since the arrival of one Terry Holland from Davidson College.

The Cavaliers face a stiff challenge towards a possible ACC crown when they play the Duke Blue Devils in a key ACC clash Tuesday, Feb. 6 (9 p.m.), on Channels (3,5,9,17).

When Gibson recruited Barry Parkhill in the late '60s, the Cavs began to win ball games. They took 19 in 1970 and continued to do well in succeeding years.

But the problem was that they were competing in what most experts consider the toughest conference in the nation. Then come tall, lanky Wally Walker.

The forward led the Cavs to their first-ever ACC tournament championship in '76 and an 18-11 record, defeating old nemesis North Carolina.

Suspense Thriller On 'The Big Event'

URGENT MISSION-Charlton Heston, right, is a police commander and John Cassavetes (l) plays one of his men in "Two-Minute Warning," airing on "The Big Event," Tuesday, Feb. 6 (8-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

When a team of theives set out to execute a multi-million dollar art heist, they plant a sniper in the Los Angeles Coliseum during a football game to cause a panic and divert attention from their theft in "Two-Minute Warning," a suspense thriller to be colorcast on NBC-TV's "The Big Event," Tuesday, Feb. 6 (8 to 11 p.m.). Charlton Heston and John Cassavetes star.

This special presentation includes new footage filmed especially for television and will include appearances by Rosanno Brazzi, Joanna Pettet, Paul Shenar, James Olsen and William Prince, none of whom were in the theatrical feature.

On a Sunday afternoon 100,000 fans have packed the Coliseum for a pro football game. Nearby, a major art exhibit is opening. A team of thieves conspire to steal the private art collection of art treasures on exhibition, which are valued at several million dollars. Headed by Richard Bates (Olsen), an international lawyer, and Tony Rodriguez (Shenar), the group includes a fine arts professor (Brazzi).

Tony's girlfriend, Patricia (Pettet), who works for Cooper Adams (Prince), the wealthy Texan who owns the entire collection, collaborates in the heist.

But on the day of the game, the plan is jeopardized when police are unexpectedly tipped off that there might be a robbery. Then the sniper begins to behave erratically and threatens to tip off the plan prior to the scheduled move when the game reaches the two-minute warning.

Part of the film's effectiveness can be gauged by the fact that although the real fireworks don't begin until fifteen minutes or so before the finale, the kaleidoscopic cutting between the cameo cast's stories, preparations by stadium and Los Angeles police squads and the periodic stirring of the fuzzily-seen sniper himself move along at a fast clip, generating a surprising amount of suspense along the way.

The climactic bloodletting is graphic and grimly realistic and, even more unsettling than the random shootings, the sense of mass panic is frightening and well handled. As the crowds punch, trample, fall from balustrades and claw towards safety at any cost, director Larry Peerce has presented what could be a text-book lesson in how to stage a rousing mob scene.

Comedy Film Airs

Oscar winners Walter Matthau and Tatum O'Neal transform the meanest pint-sized team in baseball history from cellar-dwellers to pennant contenders, breaking a few rules along the way, in "The Bad News Bears." The blockbuster comedy movie will be the first film airing on "The ABC Sunday Night Movie Double Feature," Feb. 4 (7 to 9 p.m.).

Morris Butterworth (Matthau) is a former baseball professional whose tales of major league glory aren't exaggerations — they're lies; he never made it above the minors — but he is still capable of being a pretty good coach if he is given the right team.

He isn't given the right team. The junior-league Bears — ages 10-13 — are as clumsy, confused and untalented a collection of born losers as ever set foot (and knees and sometimes heads) on a playing field. However, coaching them to some semblance of competence means a few badly needed dollars to Morris, so he hypes up the team by bribing an 11-year-old whizz-kid pitcher named Amanda Whurlitzer (O'Neal) to join the team.

The other players resent the presence of a girl on the team, but they don't resent the games she wins, and the Bears show signs of becoming the grizzliest team around.

McMahon Remembers

SUCCESSFUL FORMAT-Ed McMahon (l), shown with Johnny Carson, has been Carson's sidekick for more than 16 years on NBC-TV's "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson."

Viewers come to know and love the familiar routines, such as Carnac and Aunt Blabby, says McMahon.

"Viewers look upon us as a family, very much as they did with the late Jack Benny. He used Phil Harris, Don Wilson and Frankie Remley as foils. And in much the same way, Johnny Carson creates such images with me, Doc Severinsen and Tommy Newson. In many instances, audiences think our projected images are what we really are!"

Ed McMahon, Carson's sidekick for more than 16 years on NBC-TV's "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson," was reflecting on the continued success of the late-night Emmy award-winning program.

"My created image is that of the drinker — who's always trying to lose weight," Ed mused. "Doc's is that of the fancy dresser who has a stable of losing horses. Tommy is the dull one, in dress and appearance. And it works!"

Along the same lines, Ed points out that when audiences have accepted what you do, they enjoy anticipating.

"I don't think people mind that they know when something's coming, actually they like being 'in.' Like when we're doing Carnac and I come to the last envelope. The audience always applauds because they know that Johnny as Carnac will always react.

"When Johnny begins to read special material about a subject, as soon as he finishes and I go into my 'everything you ever wanted to know about . . . is right here . . . ' they begin to react because they've heard similar rountines and they know what follows will be a ridiculous extension of whatever the subject is at the time.

"I think it started years ago when Johnny would go into his 'It was so hot, or 'it was so cold,' and now of course, people shout it out as soon as Johnny makes such a statement."

Sometimes even a word or a phrase will alert an audience to what is coming up next.

"As I introduce Johnny's characters, I can hear the crowd begin to murmur. When I use the word 'a visitor from the East,' they know that Carnac is next. Or 'loveable, old,' then Aunt Blabby is coming out. And now when I talk about a TV rebuttal, they immediately can expect one of Johnny's more recent characterizations — Floyd R. Turbo."

Angles Go To The Slopes

In a special two-hour presentation, newlyweds Jaclyn Smith and Dennis Cole are teamed when the angels travel to a famous ski resort to help prevent the kidnapping of a handsome, athletic presidential aide who wins Kelly's heart, on ABC-TV's "Charlie's Angels," Wednesday, Feb. 7 (8 to 10 p.m.).

International screen favorite Rossano Brazzi makes a special guest appearance in the episode, "Terror on Skis," filmed entirely on location in Vail, Colo.

Vincenti Donettelli, his son, Paolo, and Franco Sorella are members of a European reform movement plotting to abduct presidential aide Carl Hansworth as a means of attracting worldwide attention to their cause. They plan to make their move as Hansworth participates in ski competition at Vail. U.S. security man Phil Chadway decides to take added precautions by calling in Charlie's Angels.

Brazzi guest stars as Donettelli, Cole as Hansworth, Christopher George as Phil Chadway, Cesare Danova as Franco Sorella, Kathleen Nolan as Elizabeth James, Francois-Marie Benard (cq) as Paolo and Burt Douglas as Bannock.

Mini-Series Airs

PBS has scheduled a four-hour mini-series, "The Scarlet Letter," for airing on four consecutive evenings in April.

Gloria's Dream Took Over

The role of 'Nurse No. 1' in the emergency room sequences of NBC-TV's "Women in White" — four-hour mini-series to be telecast in three parts — is portrayed by an actress who needed no technical assistance to play the part.

She's Gloria Delaney, an actress for the past eight years, who is a registered nurse.

"I'm a specialist in Public Health Nursing and I worked for the Los Angeles County Public Health Department," Delaney says. "But somewhere along the way, my dream of being an actress took over and the R.N. took a back seat."

"Women in White" will be presented on consecutive Thursdays, Feb. 8 (9 to 11 p.m), Feb. 15 and 22 (10 to 11 p.m.).

A graduate of Cal State L.A., Delaney has worked for L.A. County General and Cedars of Sinai, among other hospitals. Even now when the bank account is low, she will fill in for vacationing public health nurses. Mostly, though, she waits for her next TV or movie roles.

"I started acting as a hobby in the Mafundi Institute in Watts," Delaney recalls. "William Marshall, the Shakespearean actor, encouraged me and that gave me the push I needed."

The casting director of "Women in White" hired her because she was an actress who was a nurse, and they figured she'd look completely confidant handling the equipment.

"Actually, they had a doctor there as a technical adviser and a nurse from the hospital, so I just laid back and pretended I needed to be told everything.

"It was a difficult sequence, actually, but I felt that it came off realistically. They duplicated the dynamics of an emergency situation beautifully. They pretended to do both a laryngoscopy and a tracheostomy and it looked extremely accurate."

If you don't believe an actress, then ask Gloria Delaney, R.N.

What A Gift!

Peter Falk's Christmas present to his wife, Shera Danese, was also a first anniversary gift — a million-dollar mansion in Beverly Hills complete with swimming pool and tennis court.

Pike's Peek

BY CHARLIE PIKE
PFA Writer

HOLLYWOOD — HOWARD HESSEMAN, perhaps better known as Dr. Johnny Fever on "WKRP IN CINCINNATI," is making it no secret that he has a very special lady in his life who lives in San Francisco, but after two previous marriages that ended in divorce he's not anxious to try the 'charm' time.

ROBERT HAYES, who stars in the new ABC series, "ANGIE," which airs immediately after "MORK & MINDY," is fortunately a quick study. After numerous auditions and negotiations he didn't start work on the show until the first day of actual rehearsals and thus had not even seen a script until his first day on the set.

Sorry to report that JOHN McCOOK, Lance Prentice on daytime's "THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS," and his wife, JULIET PROWSE, have separated.

Speaking of that soap, that's the same TRISH STEWART on the new series "SALVAGE" who created the role of 'Chris' when 'Y&R,' debuted some six-plus years ago.

One additional note about 'Y&R,' JAMIE LYNN BAUER has signed a new one-year contract to remain with the serial with the promise of a pilot for a night show before the contract expires, as well as one TV movie.

A lot of today's TV stars might occupy their evening and weekends by crowding into a favorite disco or restaurant, but not VICTOR FRENCH of "CARTER COUNTRY." Vic, as he prefers to be called, bowls in two different leagues during the week and spends his weekends running an acting class.

If there's any doubt that PAUL NEWMAN still has a great impact on the feminine populace, one should have been in a certain Beverly Hills store recently. While a lady clerk and a lady customer were chatting, handsome Paul strolled to the counter to purchase an umbrella. Both women were fine until Paul removed his sun glasses and winked at them with those crystal-blue eyes. When he turned to leave, both ladies were speechless.

Scuttlebutt has it that HENRY WINKLER is fighting a battle of the waistline bulge, the obvious result of a lot of fine home cooking by his wife, STACEY.

Contribution

It would appear that the number one training school for television actors is the American Academy of Dramatic Arts — established in New York City in 1884, therefore the oldest professional acting school in the English-speaking world.

Many actors who have starring or continuing roles in TV series are alumni of the Academy. Among them are Kate Jackson, "Charlie's Angels"; Judd Hirsch and Danny DeVito, "Taxi"; Laurette Spang and Herb Jefferson, Jr., "Battlestar Galactica"; Ernest Thomas, "What's Happening!"; Linwood Boomer, "Little House on the Prairie"; Loretta Swit, "M*A*S*H"; James Keane, "Paper Chase"; Judy Landers, "Vega$"; Conrad Bain, "Diff'rent Strokes," and Gary Sandy, "WKRP in Cincinnati."

David Hartman is also an AADA graduate, and Michael Thoma, who appears in "Eight Is Enough," 'doubles' as Director of AADA's west coast campus.

Rock Artists Keep Rolling

"Rock and roll will never last. The music isn't really music and the singers don't have any talent."

These were some of the favorite rallying cries from rock's detractors 15 or 20 years ago. Such talk isn't heard much today, when a quick turn of the radio dial in any town in the land is enough proof that rock has grown into the most dominant and creative musical force of this century as well as the most financially rewarding. Rock is the "fad" that has lasted almost 25 years.

As for the "not talent" performers, you will have the chance to hear and see 82 of the rock world's biggest stars — including Elvis Presley, The Beatles, Chubby Checker and Janis Joplin — on "Heroes of Rock 'n' Roll" airing Friday, Feb. 9 (9 to 11 p.m.), on ABC-TV. Jeff Bridges hosts the special which will feature fascinating film and tape footage that contains never-before-seen clips from concerts, recording sessions and motion pictures.

Among the highlights are Elvis Presley's original screen test, previously unviewed footage of The Beatles, plus a historic finale composed of final performances by Joplin, Jimi Hendrix and Otis Redding.

In all, more than 400,000 feet of celluloid and electronic tape were culled to produce 100,000 feet of final footage gathered over a two-year period. Interwoven with the film and tape coverage of artists' performances are additional clips detailing the payola days, the twist with Chubby Checker, Elvis going into the Army, Phil Spector and rock festivals right up to the present.

Michele Will Tell

Q: My son-in-law and I have been arguing about the show "Gunsmoke." He says the show is still being filmed and that Dennis Weaver played Festus. I disagree with him. Who's right? N. CRUTCHER, WAGRAM, N.C.

A: You are! "Gunsmoke" stopped filming in 1975 and has been in syndication since. Dennis Weaver played Chester Goode, and Ken Curtis was Festus Haggen.

Q: Who plays the teen-age girl on "Diff'rent Strokes"? R. BLACKBURN, MORGANTON, N.C.

A: Dana Plato plays Kimberly Drummond, and she's been active in television since she was seven. Kim has made about 100 commerials and has appeared in several series and feature films. She's a ninth-grader and lives in Los Angeles.

Q: How did John Travolta start his acting career? E.M.F., MOORE, S.C.

A: John dropped out of high school when he was 16 and headed for New York City to pursue an acting career. In no time he began getting parts in plays and on his way to super stardom.

Q: Can you give me some information about Margot Kidder, Lois Lane in "Superman"? C. MOODY, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: Margot was born in Yellowknife, a little community in Canada's Northwest Territory, and lived in Canada until about 10 years ago when she moved to Hollywood. Her television credits include "Mod Squad" and several TV films. Write to her c-o Warner Bros. Studios, 4000 Warner Blvd., Burbank, Calif. 91505.

Q: My father and I have a bet that Robert Blake was a 'Little Rascal.' I bet he was. Who wins? J. HALCOMB, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: Tell your daddy to 'pay up,' because Blake was the 'Rascal' named Mickey.

Q: Who starred with Jimmy McNichol in "Champions: A Love Story?" Where can I write to her? M. REED, FALCON, N.C.

A: Joy Le Duc, who has been touring with the Ice Capades since she was a youngster. Write to her c-o CBS-TV, 7800 Beverly Blvd., Hollywood, Calif. 90036.

Welles Narrates Kipling

So popular were the writings of Rudyard Kipling, the great poet of English patriotism and writer of English tales, that one enthusiast mailed Kipling a quarter, a blank page, and a stamped, self-addressed envelope. He had heard that Kipling got 25 cents a word. Would he please, for the enclosed coin, forward just one word. Kipling did. He wrote "Thanks" and mailed it back.

Looking back across the long, downward slant of his work, it seems odd that, at the time of his death in 1936, Kipling was heralded as "The Voice of the Empire."

But one must imagine the blaze of glory that wrapped Kipling in the 1890's. Contributing to the glory was the author's classic, "The Jungle Book," from which "Rikki-Tikki-Tavi" will be rebroadcast as an animated special, Friday, Feb. 9 (8:30 to 9 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

"East is East and West is West, and never the twain shall meet

"You're a better man than I am, Gunga Din!"

"Without benefit of clergy."

"A woman is only a woman, but a good cigar is a smoke."

"Rikki-Tikki-Tavi" is based on Kipling's story of the mongoose who is saved from a storm-tossed drowning by a boy and his parents. In the story, the animal not only becomes a member of the household in the Segowlee cantonment of India, but the family's defender against Nag and Magaina, the dreaded cobras that roam the compound.

Orson Welles narrates the story and is also the voice of Rikki-Tikki-Tavi, the mongoose.

Newhart To Host

Bob Newhart, the television and nightclub star whose many appearances on "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson" have made him extremely popular with late-night viewers, will return as guest host of the program Feb. 12 and March 5 and 6.

Newhart has been a guest or guest host on 'Tonight' for more than 12 years.

No One Harder On Lefty Than Lefty

Many don't think Lefty Driesell, coach for the University of Maryland, is an especially quality mentor. But one look at his glittering record dispells that rumor. The Terps take on ACC foe Clemson in a crucial game Saturday, Feb. 10 at 2 p.m. on Channel 5 and 6.

A lot of people have criticized University of Maryland coach Charles (Lefty) Driesell as a coach who sometimes lets the game get away from him. But no one is harder on Lefty than Lefty.

After a bitter loss to the University of Virginia in the ACC Tournament several years ago, the volatile Terp mentor announced, "I stunk as a coach tonight. I must be the stupidest man alive because it took me this long to realize what was happening.

"I ain't ever gonna use three guards again."

But the records don't lie, and Lefty is approaching 400 victories in 18 years as head coach at both Maryland and Davidson. Few would call that mark, which includes a .730 winning percentage, one of a loser.

Driesell's Terrapins meet the challenge of ACC rival Clemson in Cole Field House on the Maryland campus Saturday, Feb. 10 (2 p.m.), on Channels (3,5,6,9).

Lefty has never recruited a player who didn't play for at least one Top Ten team, and seven of his squads have finished in the consensus Top Ten of the nation. His 1972 team won the National Invitational Tournament, something only one other ACC school (North Carolina in '71) has done.

Add to this the fact that, in 18 years as head coach, his teams have never been out-rebounded; that seven of those squads have shot better than 50 percent from the field; nine have averaged better than 80 points per game and 20 or more victories, and you begin to wonder where the losing myth started.

Maybe because he basically keeps his game plan simple. He says the fast break offense only works when a team shoots a high percentage.

"We don't have any plays as such," he explains. "That's why I'm not called a great coach.

"I'm a great recruiter," he continued. "We just try to beat you at the end of the transition and get as many layups as we can. I keep a very careful count on how many layups we get."

NHL Allstars Meet USSR

"CBS Sports Spectacular" will be at New York's Madison Square Garden for the second of three meetings this year between the National Hockey League All-Stars and the Soviet National Team, Saturday, Feb. 10 (4:30 to 6 p.m.).

Dick Stockton will host the broadcast, which will include same-day coverage of third-period action, and highlights of the first meeting (Feb. 8) and the first two periods of play on Feb. 10. Dan Kelly will provide the play-by-play.

This marks the third time in the last seven years that stars from the National Hockey League have met the Soviet National Team in one or more games. In 1972, Team Canada narrowly won an eight-game series by taking four victories, losing three, and tying one. In that series, four games were played in Moscow, and four in Canada.

In 1976, the teams met once in the Canada Cup, which was a round robin tournament that also included teams from Czechoslovakia, Finland, and Sweden. In that match, Canada took the measure of the Soviet National Team 3-1.

In the past two months, the Wings of the Soviet, one of the Soviet Union's best hockey teams, took on four NHL teams with great success. They defeated Boston 4-1 and Minnesota 8-5, while losing to Detroit 6-5 and tying Philadelphia. The Soviet National Team, however, is composed of stars from many of their teams, not just the Wings of the Soviet.

Another event featured on 'Sports Spectacular' will be the 20th annual L.A. Times Indoor Games. Included among those expected are Houston McTear, the world indoor record holder for 60 yards at 6.05 seconds; John Walker, who is the world record holder in the mile (3:49.4); and at 1500 meters indoors (3:37.2), and Mark Belger, the current AAU champion at 800 meters and world record holder at a half mile.

The International Professional Surfers' Women's Team Championship will also be highlighted. Competing in the event were teams from Hawaii and the mainland of the U.S.A. Heading up the Hawaiian team was Lynn Boyer, a 21-year-old, who in 1978 upset an excellent field to capture the I.P.S. world championship.

Pretty MICHELE TOBIN, who portrayed JACK ALBERTSON'S granddaughter on "GRANDPA GOES TO WASHINGTON," is one of Hollywood's busiest teens. She completed a pilot for CBS and has a contract calling for a TV movie for Paramount Studios and has upcoming guest appearances on "HAPPY DAYS," "LAVERNE & SHIRLEY" and "MORK & MINDY".

ROBIN WILLIAMS, by the way, is just as funny off the tube as he is on it. Robin recently visited the set of the new series, "ANGIE," and just in visiting caused so much laughter he had to leave the set so rehearsals could continue.

Big Ten Conference Gaining Respectability In Basketball

The Big Ten Conference is beginning to enjoy the same kind of reputation in basketball that it already has in the pigskin sport. Already, two teams from the conference have been tapped number one in the weekly NCAA polls.

But the conference has gotten so competitive that picking a winner from game to game is like walking through a mine field. You just never know who will come out on top.

Michigan State, who many think has the capability to take all the marbles, still has to be regarded as one of the favorites for the crown. But they face stiff competition every time they take the court against a Big Ten foe.

They should have just as rough a time when they play another powerhouse, the Big Eight kingpin, Kansas, on NBC-TV's "NCAA Game of the Week" Sunday, Feb. 4 (2 p.m).

The Spartans finished last season with a 15-3 record in the conference and return four of last year's starters. And a lot of people up in Michigan are still talking about the close game their team played in the Mideast Region finals.

At one point in the season, Michigan State was number one in the pubic polls after Duke University, who held the coveted position for almost a month, was knocked off two consecutive nights.

The Spartans' grip on the top lasted exactly one week, when they fell to a surprisingly tough Illinois team. The Illini then assumed the number one position before they were knocked off twice. One of those losses was to Ohio State.

If nothing else, Michigan State has one of the nation's top players in superguard Earvin "Magic" Johnson. Greg Kelser and Jay Vincent also return to anchor a rugged inside line for the Spartans.

But the Michigan team lacks a great deal of depth, and that's something the Kansas Jayhawks may be able to exploit. Six lettermen have left the Kansas campus, but there remains a strong corps of talented players to take up the slack.

Center Paul Mokeski (7-1) anchors the inside game for the Jayhawks, and sophomore guards Darnell Valentine and Wilmore Fowler have speed to burn. Brad Sanders, a key substitute last year at forward, is seeing action as a starter this year.

So look for a typical Midwest barn-burner when these potentially great teams clash. Both have the kind of striking power to make enough noise to be heard nationwide. If only they can get through those rugged conferences they're in.

Moses Malone Surprised All

The meteoric rise of Moses Malone in the NBA is almost unheard of. The first high school player in over 20 years to jump straight into the pros, Malone spurned offers from nearly every major college in the nation.

Many had doubts the then-skinny 6-11 center from Petersburg (Va.) High School could cut it with the rugged, experienced inside men in the NBA, most of whom had cut their teeth in the better conferences of collegiate basketball.

But Moses surprised them all, and he has suddenly emerged as a bonafide All-Pro prospect.

Moses will leave his Houston Rocket team temporarily to join the NBA West squad when they challenge their counterparts from the East in the annual NBA All-Star game Sunday, Feb. 4 (1:45 p.m. on CBS-TV).

Malone came into the league the same year as another high school prospect who made it big — Darryl Dawkins, of the Philadelphia 76ers, who had played high school ball in Florida.

Moses first shuffled between the Utah and St. Louis teams in the now-defunct ABA before signing with the Spurs in 1977. When John Lucas, former star with the University of Maryland, came to the Rockets last season, he was immediately in awe of his 6-11 teammate.

"They talk about Jim Willoughby and Dawkins a lot, but neither is in the class of Mo," he boldly declared. "People also ask me about Bill Walton and Kareem Abdul-Jabar, but to me, Mo's the best, and he's the best at 21 years old. It scares me how good he is. It's frightening."

Tom Nissalke, who coached Malone at Utah and now at Houston, has had a lot of time to give the young player a long look. To say the least, he's impressed with his young center.

"He's just going to be a tremendous player, if he already isn't," Nissalke says. "In comparison, I think he's much faster than Dawkins. He has much quicker reflexes and timing, and those are the important things."

Moses himself has no regrets about having passed up college for the pros.

Good Tour

The 1979 LPGA schedule represents the richest, most extensive and prestigious lineup of golf tournaments for the Association as it enters its 29th year.

Over 170 tournament players will compete for approximately $4.4 million in prize money with the Tour travelling to 38 cities in 5 countries and 21 states within the U.S.

Two young women joins forces to save an expensive trucking rig from the repossessor and keep it out of the clutches of hijackers, in "Flatbed Annie & Sweetiepie: Lady Truckers," a new motion picture-for-television, starring Annie Potts, Harry Dean Stanton and Kim Darby, airing on "The CBS Saturday Night Movies," Feb. 10 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Turning down an offer of financial assistance from her sympathetic Uncle Wally (Godfrey), she reluctantly decides to take his advice. She leaves her low-paying job and steps into the big rig, to keep her husband's truck out of the hands of C.W. Douglas (Santon), a most persistent repossessor.

Throwing all caution to the wind, Uncle Wally teams his niece, who has never driven a truck, with feisty, rough-and-tumble "Flatbed Annie" (Miss Potts), who can "push any rig" on the road.

Billy Carter, in his drama debut, plays a deputy sheriff, in "Flatbed Annie and Sweetiepie: Lady Truckers," a new motion picture-for-television airing on "The Saturday Night Movie," Feb. 10 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022.
We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR LOUIS NIZER, attorney and author of Reflections Without Mirrors: An Autobiography of the Mind

Do you favor the jury system, as opposed to a judge, deciding a guilty or innocent verdict? — J. Jones, Albany, N.Y.

● I favor the jury system because I think it is the microcosm of democracy and is based on a scientific principle; namely, as you multiply judgments you reduce the incidence of error. Two heads are better than one, and one thousand better than one hundred. On a question of right and wrong, I would rather have the opinion of several hundred million Americans than the 10 most brilliant professors in the world. The jury system works because the average man has more than five senses. He adds two others — horse and common. Also, prejudices are likely to be balanced out. The mind of a judge may not respond as well as a jury to the nontechnical stimuli of justice.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

I say that Christopher Reeve had to lose about 20 pounds to get the role of Superman, and my friend says he was born with that shape. Who's right? — S.P., Great Falls, Mont.

● We're sorry to say that you're both wrong. Chris had to gain 30 pounds before he could go before the cameras. Said Dave Prowse, the British heavyweight weight-lifting champ and actor (perhaps better known as the villainous Darth Vader of Star Wars): "The producers called me in, presented me with Christopher Reeve and said, 'Here he is. We want him to look like you. You have six weeks to build him up. You must not touch his legs — they're O.K. We want his arms, chest and shoulders to form a V.'" Prowse went to work. "Chris gained 30 pounds going from 180 to 216 through a combination of eating, working out and weight-lifting for three hours a day, six days a week."

FOR JOAN RIVERS, comedienne

Has your sense of humor ever embarrassed you? — J.R., Monterey, Calif.

● Of course. My most uncomfortable moment was during the time Gov. Jerry Brown (Calif.) was campaigning. He and I were alone in an elevator, and I said, "We've got to get you married. How about Jackie O? She'd be great for you." He explained why she wasn't right for him. His main objection was her extravagance. Why did I feel so stupid? He had no idea I was teasing him.

FOR CAROL MANN, NBC sports reporter

How did you get hung up on playing golf, and have you ever made a fool of yourself on the course? — B.J., Tupelo, Miss.

● My interest in the game was caused by an ulterior motive. My father played, and I wanted to be with him. I thought if I did well he'd always take me along (I'm the only girl in the family; I have four brothers). Once I wished the green would swallow me up — when I hit the ball into an outhouse, and the person in there came out screaming.

● TV glamorizes the role of the private detective — it's a must. But most of the investigations that detectives carry out are checking and researching through public records — in libraries, insurance companies, etc. Imagine a whole show centered around a man going through dusty files in a library! It would be pretty boring, wouldn't it? So, for entertainment purposes, we have to spice and liven things up a bit.

FOR STEVE KARMEN, creator of TV and radio jingles

I heard you once refused a request to work for a former President. Why? — T.R. Danbury, Conn.

● Because I refuse all political advertising. And I'm proud to say I've turned down two Presidents. It would be too easy to create an image with music and lyrics and then see my country governed by Senator Toothpaste and President Cola. The right advertising and the right song could elect anyone, and I think it is my obligation to the world in which I live not to use my talent in such an irresponsible manner.

● Since my 10th book will be out in the spring, and all my novels are loaded with men — I should only be so lucky to have so many beaux! Seriously, some of the men are composites, others are friends' boyfriends (disguised of course). Some are guys I had crushes on and chased, but didn't get to know well. Also I can invent an entire fictional character who becomes much more real to me than the real one.

FOR STELLA B. BACKEL, Director of the Mint

I'm always getting stuck with Canadian and other foreign coins. I've got quite a collection by now and am wondering how I can redeem them. — B.C. Kingsport, Tenn.

● The Bureau of the Mint does not redeem foreign coins, nor do we undertake to appraise them for their value as collector's items. To redeem foreign coins for their monetary value, the most accessible facility would be a commercial bank having an international exchange department.

PRO AND CON

Is Capital Punishment a Deterrent to Murder?

PRO Dr. Ernest van den Haag, author of Punishing Criminals

Other things being equal, severe punishment deters crime. The harshest constitutional penalty — the death penalty — deters most. It is final: no parole. Even though many irrational nonpremeditated murders cannot be deterred, the death penalty does deter premeditated murder and murder for money. While sociologists continue to defy common sense by "proving" that the death penalty is not a better deterrent than life imprisonment, sophisticated recent statistics confirm that in the U.S., between 1933-1969, with just "one additional execution per year [we would have had] on the average seven or eight fewer murders." The newest English and American studies confirm this.

CON Marvin E. Wolfgang, professor of Sociology, University of Pennsylvania

The preponderance of evidence from careful research indicates that historically, and in contemporary times, the death penalty does not function as a deterrent to criminal homicide. The common procedure for analyzing the issue has been to compare nations, or states within the U.S., that have abolished or retained the death penalty. Such comparisons consistently show that those nations or states that have retained the death penalty have murder rates per population that are as high or higher than those countries and states that have abolished the death penalty. A recent panel of the National Academy of Sciences concluded that the evidence does not show it to be a deterrent.

CONGRESSIONAL AIDES: THE MEN BEHIND BIG POWER IN D.C.

By Jim Dickenson

There's a story that's told on Capitol Hill in Washington about this Senator who delivers speeches that his staff people write, except that he neglects to read them in advance. And it's about what happens when one of his speech writers gets angry with him.

The Senator faces his expectant audience and begins to mouth the words he's seeing for the first time: "Today I am going to propose a permanent settlement for the Middle East, provide a definitive solution to the worldwide energy problem, present a way for ending the threat of nuclear war and propound a plan for eliminating hunger and poverty everywhere on the globe."

This daydream, or one like it, has probably occurred at one time or another to every Capitol Hill aide in his love-hate relationship with the Congressman he works for. The Congressman is, and always has been, boss, but the enormous increase in the numbers and influence of the staffs of the individual members and the growing number of committees over the last 20 years nurture such fantasies of ultimate power.

For example, a group of Senate aides writing an amendment to the Voting Rights Act contributed directly and significantly to passage of the Constitutional amendment that gave the vote to 18-year-olds. Another provided the network of information and intelligence that helped block funds for Nixon's controversial Anti-Ballistics Missile (ABM) program and the eventual cutoff of appropriations for the Vietnam war.

The great increase in the Capitol Hill staff—what Senator John Culver (D-Ia.) calls a "staff explosion"—was meant to offset what Congress considered the overweening "Imperial Presidency" that became so powerful after World War II.

This increase in Hill staff is both a symbol of and a reason for the new Congressional assertiveness that has given President Carter such trouble on his energy bill, the Panama Canal treaties and such other complicated issues as the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT).

This burgeoning new appointive federal bureaucracy has grown at the rate of about 10 percent a year over the past few years, although the growth last year slowed to just 2 percent, primarily because the new positions created recently are being filled. It turns over comparatively rapidly, however, because it is made up mostly of bright young men who stay on the Hill a few years and then go on to bigger things.

More than a dozen are now members of Congress, including the two Senators from Iowa and House Minority Whip Robert Michel, (R-Ill.). Charles Ferris, for 12 years chief counsel to former Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, is now chairman of the Federal Communications Commission. Michael Pertschuk, former chief counsel of the Senate Commerce Committee, is chairman of the Federal Trade Commission.

But the real object of the daydreams of the ambitious young on Capitol Hill is Dick Clark, a portly, 48-year-old former college professor from Upper Iowa University. In 1964 Senator Culver, then legislative assistant to freshman Senator Ted Kennedy, resigned to go home and run for the House of Representatives from his home state of Iowa.

He needed a campaign manager and Clark signed on. Culver won and over the next eight years his professor-administrative assistant worked out of their Cedar Rapids, Ia., office and began organizing the state for Culver's eventual run for the Senate. Clark was so successful that Iowa today has one of the most effective Democratic organizations in the nation with results to match—both U.S. Senators, four of six Congressmen and control of both houses of the state legislature.

In 1972 Republican Senator Jack Miller was up for reelection and was vulnerable. Culver, for various reasons, decided not to run. His aide, stunned because the plan was for him to run for Culver's House seat when Culver ran for the Senate, decided to use the organization he'd built for his own Senate race. Walking back and forth across the state almost constantly from April until November Clark got the publicity he needed to beat Miller and become Senator Dick Clark, (D-Ia.). Two years later Culver ran for Democrat Harold Hughes' vacated seat and became the junior Senator from Iowa to his former assistant.

There are less-inspiring stories, however. Stephen B. Elko, aide to Representative Daniel Flood (D-Pa.), a central figure in the recent firing of former U.S. Attorney David Marston of Philadelphia, has been convicted of taking a bribe of $15,000 to forge the Congressman's signature on letters seeking accreditation for a chain of trade schools. Martin Sweig, administrative assistant to former House Speaker John McCormack, was convicted of influence-peddling in 1970 by posing over the telephone as his powerful boss.

The quality of staff members that different Senators and Congressmen attract obviously varies. Ted Kennedy long has had the reputation of attracting some of the most able young men on the Hill.

"Kennedy and Javits accept the fact that they're managers of institutions—their staffs," says Jim Flug, formerly Kennedy's chief legislative aide. "They support you and trust you. We had a compatible staff with very little backbiting."

Some think of themselves as individuals, as stars, with staff members as their servants," says another top Senate aide. "They redo a lot of their staff work, they don't trust them, they think that anyone who works for them can't be any good, and they have bad tempers. As a result, they have high staff turnover."

Final control lies with the Congressman or Senator, however. John Ehrlichman, Richard Nixon's former White House aide, once described the Capitol Hill staffs as "bumblebees hovering over the honey of power." To help keep his staff members in line, Senator Warren Magnuson (D-Wash.) established a "Bumblebee Award" to be given to the staff member who had most exceeded his authority, opened his mouth to the press, or presumed to speak for a committee or an individual member.

"I won it about every week", laughs Pertschuk, a good-natured but aggressive man who was the driving force behind consumer-protection legislation while on the Senate Commerce Committee.

"We just fill in the lines. It's an illusion of power. Whenever you put in something that the member won't tolerate, that's the last time. You can't breach that relationship of trust, and it's very easy to do, or you're nowhere."

One aide agrees, "Good Senators have good political instincts and a broader perspective than we do because we get so engrossed in our projects." FW

TV HOST PHIL DONAHUE ON FAME, FAMILY, LOVE

By Norman Mark

Basically, Phil Donahue asks questions. Five days a week, an hour a day, 240 times a year on 155 television stations, his questions form the backbone of America's most popular, most critically praised and most often awarded daytime interview program.

When he is not on the air, he still asks questions—of his staff, his children, himself. And yet he admits that the question he can't answer is: What is Donahue really like?

Asking it, of course, implies that he is somehow quite different in real life from his television image, that after his show he takes off a mask and becomes Mike Douglas. After some consideration, Donahue thinks the main difference between his on-air persona and the "real" Donahue is energy. He has more energy on-camera.

Just before his program starts, Donahue stands to the rear of his live audience. He has been briefed, and he has met the guest. He has joked with the audience and asked them to please help him look good.

Before the program starts live in Chicago on WGN-TV, his engines rev into high. He is ready to charge past 200 people in his studio audience to become "Energy Man."

In 1974, when Donahue's office was a trailer in the WGN parking lot a guest was going to explain how he turned his daughter into a genius. The man asked for eight minutes, without interruption, to explain his methods.

Donahue said, "Too long."

"Five minutes? Four?"

"Too long," said the implacable Donahue. (Eight minutes is forever on television, and every minute must move.)

Donahue admits, "What worries me the most is keeping the ball in the air for 240 hours a year.

"This is an enormously competitive business. Dick Clark is on a channel opposite me with a game show in which people jump up and down and kiss. If I am going to stay alive, my show better be exciting, too.

"I have to have a new and different show every day. And it better be interesting for 60 minutes."

Donahue has done over 2,000 programs, and he still worries, "Will the guest talk too much? The audience I dream about has a sense of urgency to get into the act."

If there is any slogan running through Donahue's head while he is on the air, it is: "Right now Dick Clark is giving away $20,000."

He does it by loving every person in his studio and all those at home, by getting bored with a discussion before the home folks do, by "grabbing" each woman there, and communicating to her: "You've got to watch this. It's important."

After each program, Donahue shakes hands with every person there. He thanks them with the fervor of a small-town minister. He poses for every Instamatic snapshot and he patiently gives tips on how to make those flash cubes work.

Then, exhausted, he returns to his small WGN office. The TV set has video cassettes all around it. His shelves are filled with books written by upcoming guests. Way up on top, near a certificate saying he is an honorary citizen of the state of Maryland, is a color picture of Marlo Thomas, his friend.

To understand Donahue, you must understand a man who would air a program showing a live birth, certain to be controversial. Donahue's point is that daytime television can change American thought patterns.

The man we see on television, the man who dotes on his live-birth show, is still, in spirit, an altar boy from Cleveland, a virgin who married his college sweetheart, a business major at Notre Dame University, a guy who started in broadcasting as a prop man and later moved up to do the farm report, a TV host in Dayton, Ohio, a man whose later success led directly to a divorce which shook him emotionally, a bachelor father of four sons with a daughter who lives with his ex-wife, a man who dates Marlo Thomas in a cross-country romance, a guy who wants to be a news reporter or maybe a baseball player. He is a man whose doubts and concerns are played before an audience of millions every day.

When his work is done, Donahue goes home to suburban Winnetka, Ill., and his four sons. He seldom fraternizes with the guests after the program: "Out of 3,000 shows, I've taken three guests to lunch. I work worst with the people I know best. If I have a friend as a guest, I'm not sure I present him well."

Outside of program concerns, Donahue worries about his children and "their physical well-being. I have three kids who have drivers' licenses. I worry whether my kids truly appre

HOW TO USE EVERYBODY'S FAVORITE CHOCOLATE

By Marilyn Hansen

America's favorite flavor has its origins in the fruit of a tropical tree—the cacao, or cocoa tree. Yes, chocolate, the cocoa bean, actually, is the fruit of a lush green-leaved tree that grows only in humid tropical areas that run between 20 degrees north and 20 degrees south of the equator.

Most of the world's cocoa plantations are to be found in western Africa and in South and Central America. Cocoa trees also flourish in some of the islands of the West Indies, in Sri Lanka, the Philippines and many South Pacific Islands.

GERMAN CHOCOLATE CHEESECAKE SQUARES

- 1 bar (4 ozs.) sweet cooking chocolate
- 2 cups milk
- ¼ cup butter or margarine
- 1 cup flaked coconut
- 1 cup finely chopped pecans
- 2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
- ¾ cup sugar
- 3 eggs, separated
- 2 teaspoons vanilla extract
- 2 packages (8 ozs.) each cream cheese, softened

2. To remaining chocolate mixture, add butter and melt; stir in coconut and pecans. Press onto bottom of 9-inch square baking pan and chill.

3. In medium saucepan, combine unflavored gelatin and ½ cup sugar; blend in egg yolks beaten with remaining 1¾ cups milk. Stir over low heat until gelatin dissolves, about 5 minutes; add vanilla.

6. To 2 cups cheese mixture, blend in reserved chocolate; alternate spoonfuls of chocolate and plain mixtures in prepared pan. Gently marble with knife and chill until firm. To serve, cut into squares and garnish, if desired, with pecan halves.

Makes 9 to 12 servings

BLACK MAGIC CAKE

- 2 squares (2 ozs.) unsweetened chocolate
- ¼ cup water
- 2 tablespoons plus 1½ cups sugar, divided
- 6 large eggs, separated
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon cream of tartar
- ½ cup orange juice
- 1½ cups sifted cake flour
- 1 tablespoon grated orange rind
- ½ teaspoon baking soda

1. In top of double boiler, combine unsweetened chocolate with water and 2 tablespoons sugar. Place over simmering water and stir occasionally until melted and smooth. Remove from water and cool.

2. In large bowl of electric mixer, beat egg whites with salt and cream of tartar until soft peaks form.

3. Gradually beat in ½ cup sugar and continue to beat until stiff peaks form.

4. In another mixing bowl and using the same beaters, beat egg yolks until light and lemon-colored. Gradually beat in remaining 1 cup sugar and continue beating until thick enough to form a ribbon when beaters are raised.

5. Blend in orange juice (at low speed or by hand) alternately with flour. Pour over egg whites and fold in gently but thoroughly.

7 TIMES FASTER THAN LEADING 'FAT-BURN' DIET OR DIET PILLS!

GUARANTEED TO REDUCE YOUR WAIST, ABDOMEN, HIPS AND THIGHS A TOTAL OF 9 TO 18 INCHES IN JUST 3 DAYS–WITHOUT DIETING!

THE SLIM-SKINS EXPERIENCE

BEFORE:

Robin Allen about to try Slim-Skins for the first time and discover how–without any dieting–Slim-Skins can take off excess inches up to 7 times faster than any other method including diet pills and crash diets.
Before measurements:

Robin slips on her Slim-Skins–snaps the universal adapter to her vacuum cleaner and turns it on. Just 10 minutes of the rhythmic motions of the Slim-Skins "Permanent Inch Reduction" program and 15 minutes of pure relaxation––as the excess inches disappear like magic.

AFTER:

The Slim-Skins come off and instantly Robin knows why Slim-Skins is called 'the world's fastest slenderizer'–and her measurement losses immediately reflect the sudden and dramatic improvement in the appearance of her figure.
After measurements:

TOTAL INCH LOSS: 19⅞" TOTAL TIME: 25 MIN.

From coast to coast hundreds of thousands of users are discovering that Slim-Skins is indeed the world's fastest slenderizer taking off excess inches up to 7 times faster than diet pills, crash diets or any other method they have ever tried.

DOCTOR TESTED. Over 4" from each thigh–8" from tummy–7" from waist–and 3½" from hips: these are just some of the fantastic inch losses achieved by Slim-Skins users in just one to three days on a special slimming test conducted by a prominent American physician: losses 7 times faster than with diet pills or the leading 'fat burn' diet.

FANTASTIC INCH LOSS WITHOUT DIET. Developed in Europe, the sensational Slim-Skins are now achieving slenderizing results far beyond the scope of other reducing products. And Slim-Skins takes off the excess inches where you need to lose them, without dieting–and won't leave you with loose, flabby skin as 'crash diets' do. With Slim-Skins, as you lose inches, your body becomes tighter, sleeker, firmer and more shapely. And yet the Slim-Skins work so amazingly fast that you can actually measure the difference in just 25 minutes.

INCHES DISAPPEAR OR YOUR MONEY BACK. Slim-Skins is a new slenderizing concept that combines with your own vacuum cleaner to create a super new inch reducer so far ahead of its time that it reduces excess inches 7 times faster than 'crash diets'. Just step into the Slim-Skins, snap the attached hose to your vacuum cleaner with the universal adapter–which fits any make vacuum cleaner–and turn on your machine. Instantly the Slim-Skins seem to come alive with a delightful reducing action on every single inch of your body from beltline to knees. Not every user may experience the same degree of inch loss but you must lose a total of 9 to 18 inches on your waist, abdomen, hips and thighs in just 3 days or your money back.

THE MAN WHO HAS 60,000 LIGHT BULBS

By David Lampe

At the age of seven, Hugh Francis Hicks was hopelessly turned on by the old light bulbs in his grandmother's house. Today, this 54-year-old Baltimore dentist possesses 60,000 bulbs, altogether valued at a quarter of a million dollars; some individual bulbs are worth as much as $600. Hicks is the world's number-one collector of light bulbs.

Light bulbs weren't invented by Thomas Alva Edison, or, as the British believe, by Sir Joseph Swan. In 1845, when Edison was two years old and Swan 17, a bulb had already been manufactured in Eastern Europe — and it was by no means the first.

Edison and Swan, Hicks explains, were trying to make bulbs different enough to be patentable. Coincidentally, both patented their "inventions" in 1880. That year, Edison also completed the world's first electric-light installation—aboard the Pacific Ocean steamship Columbia. In his Mount Vernon Museum of Incandescent Lighting in Baltimore, the only such museum in the world, Hugh Hicks, of course, displays a Columbia bulb. From its base protrude two wires that had to be screwed down. It was clumsy, so Edison devised a screw base—cast from the neck of an oil can. Later he introduced a slimmer model. Then he brought out improved versions until 1881 or 1882, when he settled on today's standard American base.

Swan's first bulb—much like Edison's from the neck up—had a bayonet base, like an auto bulb's. Safer, Hicks thinks, than Edison's. Better still, Hicks believes, were the Westinghouse "Thompson-Houston" snap-ins. Edison liked these enough to buy the patent.

The earliest bulbs, Dr. Hicks explains, aren't the world's most valuable—because so many were saved. "Price is more a matter of rarity. Early Edisons, dating from 1890 to 1900, can still be bought in antique stores from $15 to $25. They're sold in junk shops for a lot less. Collectors even pay well for some burned-out rarities."

Hick's own prize restoration is a three-foot-tall, 50,000-watt job—the biggest light bulb ever. Its finger-thick filament contains enough tungsten for 2,000 ordinary 100-watters. Made for the Paramount Theater marquee in Times Square for the first run of The Edison Story, it later flashed atop La Guardia Airport's control tower. "You'd need two elevator generators to power it!" Hicks says.

How to start bulb collecting? "Anything with a point on it is worth something because it's old. Points were the only way most pioneer manufacturers could seal bulbs." Hicks says.

Detroiter Charles Sero, a hoarder for 80 years, willed his 40,000 bulbs to the Hicks museum in 1972; his collection included bulbs from Hitler's Mercedes-Benz limousine, the Spirit of St. Louis and the liner Normandie.

More than 100,000 different light-bulb models appeared between 1889 and 1900. And, more than 30,000 different models are being produced today. Hugh Hicks has 65-year-old Christmas-tree bulbs, bulbs with dancing filaments, oddly shaped bulbs and the world's smallest—a NASA bulb so tiny you need a 50-power microscope to see it. He even has bulbs not meant to light—the static electric paraphernalia of bygone quack physicians — and theftproof bulbs—some that can't be unscrewed till they burn out.

For devoting two days every week for six months to order the nation's collection ("Quite a good one, although much smaller and less representative than my own"), Hicks was made a Fellow of the Smithsonian Institution. He created the bulb display for the Bicentennial Freedom Train, later shown in Moscow.

Like most bulb buffs, Hicks rummages through the world's junk shops, dusty warehouses and derelict buildings. "In 1962," he recalls, "when I took my wife and daughters to France on vacation, we found a whole Paris Metro station lighted by prewar bulbs, unlike any I owned! "Well, I just had to have one, so I just reached up and twisted. And darned if the whole station didn't black out! Its lights—would you believe it?—were wired in series!

"All around us people were babbling in French, I panicked and tried to put the bulb back. Couldn't find the socket! So I just grabbed my family and fled to the street.

THE AMERICAN FAMILY IS THE "ROYAL FAMILY" TO OUR READERS, WHO SING ITS PRAISE

Their essays were touching and sincere, and their responses expressed the precious gift of love.

In Family Weekly's January 7 issue, winners of our contest were announced together with their essays. Each written piece, in its way, laid wreathes of devotion upon the family hearth. Each expressed that, with the many predicaments of mankind placed upon them, family members truly enjoy the immeasurable and priceless pleasures of caring and sharing. In this sense, there were only winners in the contest. All won because the prize was a self-examination of their blessings.

To the editors of Family Weekly and to the judges who read the thousands of essays, came, anew, the revelation that the human spirit remains at its highest.

"There is security and unity both in facing adversity and in enjoying accomplishments when they are shared."

How many people can say that not only their parents, brothers and sisters, but also most of their aunts, uncles and cousins live within a short drive of their home? I was fortunate to marry into a family which can claim that distinction, and I think it's marvelous! There are about 90 aunts, uncles, cousins and children of cousins in this clan. Family picnics are large and joyful events, but the size and closeness of this family have come to mean much more to me than frequent reunions.

Perhaps nothing strengthens family bonds more than being on the "firing line" together. There is security and unity both in facing adversity and in enjoying accomplishments when they are shared. Together in our sorrow, we have discovered joy; in the midst of our tears, we have found laughter; and with each tribulation, we have somehow tasted triumph. Being able to accept the bad with the good has been the test of our family-ness.

We laugh, cry, work, play and worship together. We love without smothering, touch without crowding, always allowing each other plenty of breathing room to explore and grow in the constant learning process of life. We respect individuality, encourage hard work and success and we don't demand perfection from each other.

We are a very informal family. Our gatherings usually mean wall-to-wall sleeping bags, cousins whispering ghost stories all night, the smell of beans and cornbread, and bantering back and forth. I enjoy good conversation with my mother, singing with my brother and sister, joking with my grandparents. There is no generation gap.

It's a real challenge to make it through each day. Just getting everyone up, dressed, fed and out the door is an adventure. # OVERCOMING SHYNESS ISN'T HARD

By Alan D. Haas

A middle-aged man enters a party. He can feel his heart pounding. His face is flushed, his stomach nauseous. When he speaks, his voice is barely audible.

A housewife commonly allows her husband to make most of the decisions in their marriage. In group situations, she lets her spouse do most of the talking. She is excessively grateful for praise that comes her way.

A child hides behind her mother whenever there are strangers in the room. She is unable to make friends or perform in school. She never does anything more than is asked of her.

All these people are suffering from extreme shyness, a human disorder which is receiving increased attention from social scientists. Statistics show that four out of every 10 of us suffer from some degree of shyness.

According to Philip G. Zimbardo, a psychologist at Stanford University, who has been running shyness clinics for the past three years and studying more than 5,000 persons, "the American's instant friendliness is easier for him than trying to cultivate more personal relationships."

Dr. Herbert Fensterheim, a psychologist at Cornell University Medical College in New York, conducts programs in "assertiveness training" to help people master social situations. "We all have a fear of strangers that dates back to primitive times when this behavior had a survival value," he points out. "But today's shy person begins to imagine that he's going to be rejected or made to look foolish. He becomes more anxious and avoids social situations."

"At the core of shyness is a fear of not being worthy of being liked or loved," adds Professor Zimbardo. "In an extreme form, it can result in pathological behavior."

For example, the mass murderer who is full of locked-in violence, "is in reality an overcontrolled, shy individual," claims Zimbardo, who has written Shyness, What It Is, What To Do About It (Addison-Wesley).

There are penalties for shy individuals. It can drive them to drink, it can turn them off sex. It creates problems with work, friends and family.

New York psychotherapist Bernard Green, an expert on shyness, suggests a biological cause. "About half of all the timid persons who come to me suffer from low blood sugar," notes Green. "I have had success by prescribing certain vitamins, jogging or meditation. It is important to try to create a harmony of mind, body and spirit, rather than just deal with one malfunction."

Professor Zimbardo feels that shyness can be readily unlearned. He has instructed some of his patients to introduce themselves to strangers on the street. He frequently asks people to hold hands and make eye contact with others while talking about themselves. "We give them very specific directions on how to start a conversation, how to be an attentive listener.

"The only way to start these people is at the very beginning. They need to learn how to say positive things about themselves, how to overcome being passive," the psychologist emphasizes.

NOW—Men and Women Can

SHAPE UP FAST!

New Home Jogger with Mileage Computer

fantastic price breakthrough at just $12.95

As Seen On TV!

Discover the fast, fun way to get into shape fast. The exclusive mileage computer lets you see at a glance exactly how far you've run. Use the fabulous Home Jogger Rain or Shine, day or night. You can even watch TV as you jog your way down the road to a trimmer, slimmer figure, bursting with exuberance and energy. Everyone knows that jogging has become the number one exercise program in the country today. But not everyone is able to run the roads... not everyone wants to run in public. Now, you can have the privacy of your own jogging path, plus an exclusive mileage computer that tells you exactly how far you've run.

WATCH THE MILES CLICK BY...SEE POUNDS AND INCHES PEEL OFF

- Jogging burns more calories per minute than any form of common exercise.
- Jogging is one of nature's most powerful and effective appetite suppressants.
- Jogging improves circulation which sharpens mental quickness... and *naturally combats stress, fatigue and depression.
- Jogging strengthens heart and lungs...*strength you feel in new energy and vigor.

Shape up in the Privacy of Your Home

If you are like thousands of men and women who may have "let themselves go" a bit in recent years, you might reasonably feel a little uncomfortable running on public roads or tracks. The HOME JOGGER gives you all the time and convenience you need to get back into shape... at your own pace any time of day or night in any kind of weather... without a word or glance from anyone.

And remember, the HOME JOGGER can be good for all ages. A 50 year old who works out regularly can look and feel better than many a 20 year old who does nothing to stay in shape. You'll be amazed to see how quickly you go from a quarter of a mile a day to a half mile... until you find yourself running three, maybe even five miles a week. And it's all between you and the mileage counter!

WATCH THE MILES CLICK BY ON YOUR PERSONAL COMPUTER

It's like a new game. The mileage counter tells you instantly how much ground you have covered. Works equally well for men and women... of every height. You easily convert your stride to mileage with one reading of the computer and one glance at the conversion chart. You will be amazed at how far you can run in just a brief morning workout. You'll actually have a good time running against the clock... at your own pace. Yes, the HOME JOGGER puts an end to exercise boredom for good. A special personal progress chart will give you an amazing record of your daily improvement... while your scale and your mirror confirm the results.

Special "SPRING BOARD JOGGING PAD"

Actually Helps You Run. Deep cushion tread gives you a "push back" action you feel with every stride. Most important it absorbs that hard shocks that can cause real problems when running on hard roads. Ankles and knees are pampered with a soft, cushioning effect that tones muscles without jarring.

30 DAY FREE TRIAL
MONEY BACK GUARANTEE

Shape up entirely at our expense! Enjoy the fun and excitement of running against the patented mileage counter for a full 30 days. If, at the end of that period, you don't feel younger and more alive... If your feeling of pride in your physical self has not done a complete turn-around... If you are not convinced that the HOME JOGGER is everything we say it is... RETURN IT!!

DON GARLITS: KING OF THE DRAGSTERS

By Norm Froscher

At an age when most football quarterbacks watch the game on television, and baseball sluggers have moved to a managerial role, drag racer Don "Big Daddy" Garlits isn't close to thinking of retirement.

King of the dragsters, the 46-year-old Seffner, Fla., legend is looking to a schedule this year which calls for 50 races around the country.

Garlits will compete in premier events of the National Hot Rod Association, International Hot Rod Association and American Hot Rod Association—and will also be in over two-dozen match races.

Why, at his age, with purse winnings of nearly $4 million in the last 27 years, does Garlits keep at the sport?

"It's still a pleasure and I really love speed," Garlits says. "Oh, when my reflexes falter or I can't see, then I'll hang it up," he says with a smile.

Garlits also admits to an inner drive that keeps him piloting an 1,800 horsepower, needle-nosed dragster. It goes back to the 1930s.

His father had put the family's savings in a bank. With the crash of 1929, the bank closed and the Garlits family was wiped out.

"My whole life style is based on what we went through. I saw what it did to my family."

But isn't close to $4 million in purses security?

"First, that's not all gravy. A race driver gets to keep only a small percentage after taxes.

"I'm still at a point in life where I can be productive in what I do best.

"If my wife Pat asked me to quit . . . well, yes, I'd quit. But she'd have to have a good reason."

A strongly religious man, Garlits campaigned much of the 1978 season —in which he won the AHRA title and placed in the NHRA and IHRA standings—in a blue-and-white dragster with a gold cross and the words, "God is Love," on the hood.

He'll probably use the same color scheme when he tries for the "Triple Crown" and unprecedented victory in each of the three associations this year.

It's a radically different design than the black, almost menacing, dragster that now stands in the Florida Sports Hall of Fame at Cypress Gardens.

Garlits was voted into the Florida Hall three years ago and, a year after, into the American Auto Racing Writers' and Broadcasters' Auto Racing Hall of Fame, located at Ontario, Calif. Motor Speedway.

He has been such a dominant figure in the sport that he's still the only drag racer in the shrine.

Since he won his first race in 1955, he became the first drag racer to go 170 miles an hour in 1957 and has been setting standards ever since.

The cars Garlits drives are powered by much the same engines as the rail-like top fuelers, but have brightly colored and streamlined plastic bodies similar to Detroit models.

In addition to his capture of nearly 60 national events, Garlits is the reason those rear-engine machines are just that, with the ground-shaking, nitro-burning power plant behind the driver.

In 1970, at a West Coast race, the engine in Garlits' dragster showered flame and debris back into the cockpit and Garlits lost a foot and suffered bad burns.

"Before that accident, I had called it the most ridiculous thing I ever heard of."

During his forced absence from the drag strips, Garlits said he felt that should he not perfect a rear-engine machine, he'd quit racing before climbing back in a car similar to the one in which he was so badly hurt.

But his most recent retirement lasted less than four months, after he won the NHRA in 1975.

He'd just become the first person to go over 250 miles an hour (at Ontario Motor Speedway) and set an elapsed-time mark (5.63 seconds) for the quarter mile, which still stands.

Before the winter was over, Garlits was lured by a big-paying contract to run races with the IHRA exclusively, and he was back in the cockpit.

And here he is in 1979, loving the speed, the challenge, but remembering, too, those days of the Depression and countering the recollection by doing what he does best. FW

Proven "Die-and-Goodbye" Program Kills Roaches Once and For All

MAKES YOUR HOME IMMUNE TO SWARMING ROACHES FOREVER!

- TESTS BY CALIFORNIA UNIVERSITY AND U.S. GOVERNMENT SCIENTISTS PROVE WONDER FORMULA UP TO 37 TIMES MORE EFFECTIVE THAN PROFESSIONAL EXTERMINATOR POISONS. PROVES SUPERIOR IN ELIMINATING ALL ROACHES AND PREVENTING REINFESTATION IN EVERY TEST RUN.
- LASTING 'DEATH-SHIELD' EFFECT KEEPS ITS KILL-POWER FOR YEARS AT A TIME — SO STARTING WITH A SINGLE ONE-SHOT TREATMENT YOU PROTECT YOUR HOME FOR LIFE!
- REGISTERED BY THE UNITED STATES ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY FOR USE IN ALL BUILDINGS, COMPLETELY ODORLESS . . . GIVES OFF NO UNPLEASANT FUMES. ONCE APPLIED YOU'RE NOT EVEN AWARE IT'S THERE.

The war against roaches is finally over! Never again will you have to constantly spray . . . dust . . . 'bomb' your home with evil smelling chemicals . . . only to walk into your kitchen, bathroom or bedroom a few weeks later . . . snap on a light, or open a drawer . . . and gag at the sight of a new colony crawling over walls, counters or sinks.

Because here from California's leading university . . . from U.S. Government research scientists . . . comes dramatic proof of an amazing 'DOOMSDAY FORMULA' that when used on this LIFETIME FREEDOM roach-kill program spells SURE, PERMANENT DEATH to every last creeping, crawling roach plaguing you today! — PLUS, completely protects against ants, silverfish, palmettos and waterbugs, too . . . all starting with just a SINGLE BLITZKREIG TREATMENT that launches you on the way to making your entire home IMMUNE TO PERPETUAL ROACH INFESTATIONS FOREVER! —

Even more startling, once you apply this amazing 'Doomsday Formula' and leave it in place, ITS KILLING POWER LASTS INDEFINITELY — NEVER FADES OR WEAKENS FROM AGE — in fact, is so utterly devastating . . . from your first sprinkle-on treatment, you're on the way to protecting your home FOREVER with a chemical "death-shield" that no roach can possibly come in contact with and survive! Yet it's safe to use around children and pets when applied as directed.

DRAMATIC PROOF! HOUSING OFFICIALS REPORT: NOT ONLY KILLED ALL ROACHES — BUT NOT A SINGLE ROACH COULD BE FOUND A FULL HALF-YEAR LATER! Yes, extensive test-results in San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego Municipal Housing Projects still have officials gasping in amazement as A SINGLE ONE-SHOT TREATMENT of this 'Doomsday Formula' completely roach-proofed scores of plagued apartments! In all dwellings tested NOT A SINGLE ROACH WAS EVER SEEN AGAIN! And mind you, this was after years of failure by professional exterminators desperately trying a battery of so-called "high-kill" chemicals.

MORE PROOF! CAFETERIAS AND RESTAURANTS WIN TOTAL FREEDOM FROM ROACHES AFTER JUST A SINGLE ONE-TIME TREATMENT! In test after test . . . location after location . . . food establishments that were prime roach-targets . . . that used to demand twice-weekly spraying by professional exterminators . . . DISCOVERED TOTAL FREEDOM FROM ROACHES . . . for the first time ever! Even more significant — they've stayed roach-free for MORE THAN A FULL YEAR AFTER JUST A SINGLE ONE-TIME TREATMENT!

STILL MORE PROOF! HOTEL TESTS PROVE: JUST A SINGLE, ONE-SHOT TREATMENT AND ROACHES VANISH FOREVER! It's a scientific fact! So effective is this miracle-killer . . . even in dark elevator shafts of commercial hotels, (normally a roach's playground paradise), not a single bug could be found in months and months after JUST A SINGLE ONE-SHOT treatment!

Yes, here is that lifelong dream of TOTAL VICTORY OVER ROACHES, ANTS, SILVERFISH AND WATERBUGS that science now offers you; and it's so easy for you to win in just 2 simple steps:

1. Wherever you have a problem or suspect a problem may arise (as explained in the program), you simply sprinkle a tiny dusting of "PERMA-KILL-100" wonder-formula. That's all there is to it.
2. Since this LIFETIME FORMULA never wears out . . . loses its strength . . . fades or weakens from age — you only reapply it if somehow it gets damp, wet or washed away — painted over or covered up — or, of course, if you move to a new dwelling.
   And since this entire anti-roach program not only kills all roaches plaguing you today — but CONTINUALLY KILLS OFF potential new invasions . . . YOU ARE PROTECTED FOREVER!

PROVE IT YOURSELF ENTIRELY AT OUR RISK

Send for wondrous "PERMA-KILL-100" today on this no-risk trial offer. When it arrives, simply sprinkle as directed. That's all there is to it.

And remember — if "PERMA-KILL-100" does not give your home the same TOTAL PROTECTION against roaches as proven by California University Scientists and Public Housing Officials . . . if 3 months from now — 6 months from now — even a full year from now you see a single roach in your home . . . simply return the label for a full refund of your purchase price, (less postage and handling, of course). You have tried it entirely at our expense . . . it has cost you not a single cent!

If your child is a poor reader

—see how phonics can help him

Try it at our risk— for two weeks!

See how your child can learn to read better and spell better in just a few weeks with records that teach him by phonics, at home! Mail Free Trial Coupon below.

Would you like to see your child gain as much as a full year's grade in reading in as little as six weeks' time? These are results parents have seen again and again with this simple home-tutoring course in reading.

Mrs. J. J. Webb, Napa, Cal. writes: "After sending my 10 year old son to Special Reading School at $12.50 per hour, spending $700 on this tutoring, I saw your ad and sent for The Sound Way to Easy Reading. In only 8 weeks he learned more from your course than from his Special Reading School. I am thrilled to see how well he reads."

Mrs. J. J. Webb is only one of over 500,000 parents who have turned to The Sound Way of Easy Reading for help in the frustrating problem of a child who can't read. And more than 47,000 schools use it.

Teaches with records

Don't think it's all your child's fault if he hasn't learned to read. Many of our brightest children are not able to grasp the "look-and-say" method taught in most schools today. Yet, many educators insist that at least 40% of our children must have formal training in phonics—that they will never master reading without it!

That is why so many poor readers show remarkable progress with The Sound Way to Easy Reading. It teaches reading by the phonics method (the method by which most parents learned to read years ago). Its phonograph records and charts show your child exactly what to do, so he can teach himself without any help from you.

The records drill him in the sounds of the 26 letters in the alphabet and their blends. Once he learns the 123 basic phonics sounds in this course he can read up to 85% of the words in the English language. It works for children of all ages—in the earliest grades, and even in high school.

Tested and proved

In a pilot study by university psychologists, children gained up to a full year's grade in oral reading skill after only 30 lessons with The Sound Way to Easy Reading.

A semester-long study involving 214 pupils in 4 Chicago schools proved that the classes given The Sound Way to Easy Reading showed marked improvement in reading and spelling over the control groups.

Help your child now

By starting your child on The Sound Way to Easy Reading now, you can change his entire attitude toward school—turn his sense of failure into the joy of sucess. Try it free for two weeks. You send no money—just mail this coupon now!

USED BY 500,000 PARENTS

Advanced two years—"Your course has made my son want to read. No more frustration with words he doesn't know, he just concentrates and sounds them out. In 7 months, Steve's reading level advanced two years."
Mrs. R. Collins, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

Better report cards—"If I had known about your course before, Gregory would not have had to repeat 3rd grade. In only 7 weeks, he reads and spells much better, and is bringing home better report cards."

IN 47,000 SCHOOLS
teachers are highly enthusiastic

Second grade "Your course is the best teaching aid a teacher could have. I have been using it for the past 2 years for my basic second grade reading course. My class looks forward to the record quizzes. Their improvement in reading and spelling has been outstanding."
Mrs. Diane Williamson, Chickasaw, Ala.

Remarkable improvement—"I have seen my remedial groups advance $1\frac{1}{2}$ to $2\frac{1}{2}$ levels in reading in 6 months and show 85% to 90% improvement in spelling. A low achievement 6th grade group showed remarkable improvement. I have convinced many teachers in our school to use your course."

A NEW WEAPON TO HELP FIGHT LONELINESS

When Henry H. lost his sight and one leg to illnesses, he felt he had little reason to live. Confined to his house, he lacked the social contact everyone needs, and even a simple pastime like television was denied him. Today, however, Henry is socially active, boasts many friends and makes new ones daily.

What made the difference in Henry's life was a CB radio. He was one of the first dozen persons to benefit from an experimental program in Monmouth County, N.J., a program which has already proved its worth and is being copied elsewhere.

Under the program, CB radios are installed in nursing homes and in the homes of selected senior citizens. "We give them to shut-ins," explains the program's co-director, Mrs. Pamela Martin of the Monmouth County Board of Social Services. "In every case, we have noticed a great improvement in the social conditions of the patients. It opens up contacts to them that they cannot possibly make otherwise."

The program was the brainchild of Edward Turcotte-Shamski, the associate director of the county's division of Family and Children's Services. An occasional CBer himself, he recognized the advantages the radio might have over the telephone.

"We use the telephone to call when we need to," Turcotte-Shamski explained. "It's restricted to those we know. No one would pull a name from a telephone book at random and call to make idle conversation, but that's what we do when we make an initial contact with a stranger on the air. We meet someone new."

Henry has met so many new persons that he now has regular friends, some of whom he talks to in the wee hours of the morning. "It's changed my whole life," he says.

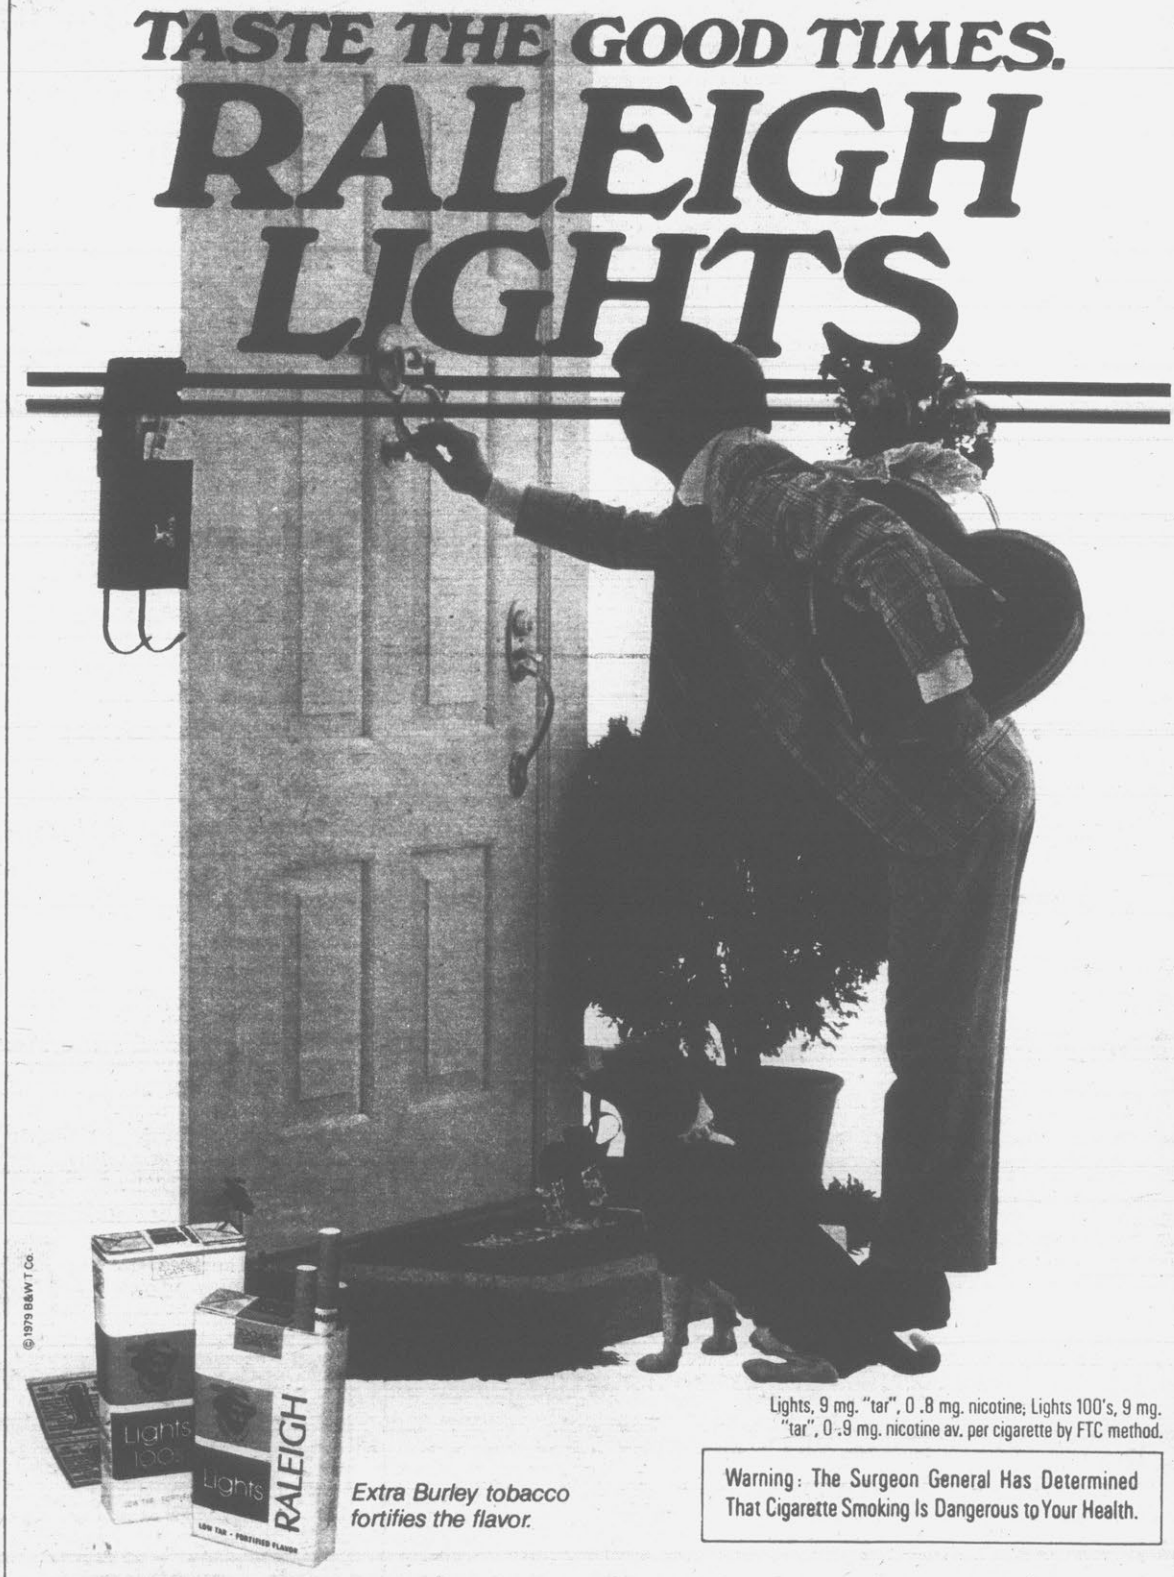

Occasionally, Henry and the others like him can even meet their friends. The county organizes coffee breaks at a CB-equipped nursing home, bringing the elderly there for an afternoon and taking them home later.

In Monmouth County, the program is moving slowly because the board still depends on donated radios and antenna to supply its clients. But Lawrence Township in neighboring Mercer County, alerted to the favorable reaction to the Monmouth County program, recently appropriated $41,000 to begin a pilot effort there. And Mercer County Executive Arthur Sypek said the county is thinking about joining the effort as well.

"The only problem we had was during the first week," says Mrs. Martin. "Some of the people are shy and are afraid to talk. But even listening is therapeutic, and they soon begin chatting." FW

The State Spoon Collection!

AS LOW AS 80¢ per spoon!

- Real demitasse-size spoons 3⅜" long
- Brilliant Silvertone finish!
- State Insignia in color in hard-baked enamel!

Since the turn of the century, souvenir spoons have been collectors' favorites! In addition to the magnificent display they make, each one is so unique, so individual, so fascinatingly different. Can't you just hear your guests exclaiming as they discover each different state in your display! Imagine the compliments when they admire the entire gleaming collection!

But when they discover how little your magnificent collection cost (if you tell them!) they'll be literally astonished! For never before, we believe, has a Matched Collection like this been offered at such an amazing price. Only $39.98 postage paid — less than 80¢ each for the entire 50-state collection, with a bonus Washington, D.C. spoon given to you at no extra cost!

Spoons also Available Separately or by 10-spoon Regional Collections. Most spoon collections are offered only as complete sets, but if you wish to buy a single state spoon, or your choice of several, you may order them for $2.98 each. Or, you may order 10-state sets for only $12.98 per set — a savings of over $16 over purchasing each separately.

Order risk free now! When your spoons arrive, inspect them, display them, admire them, show them to your guests. Then if you're not totally delighted, simply return them within 14 days for full refund (except postage and handling, of course). Mail coupon today!

PEOPLE QUIZ/By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Most men are just as sensitive and emotionally vulnerable romantically as women — and the idea that they are tougher-minded, are more callous and unfeeling is a myth.

2. The better-looking a woman is, the more attractive she is to men.

3. Men's eyes give away their innermost thoughts and feelings to a greater extent than women's do.

4. A man's attitude toward women — whether he accepts them as persons rather than sex objects or related stereotypes — depends on how he regards himself.

5. "Playing dumb" is a social ploy used by many women to gain advantage in involvements with the opposite sex; but men never do — their egos wouldn't permit it.

ANSWERS

1. True. According to a University of California study of myths about masculinity, it is pointed out that "Books, movies and television, as well as educators, from parents and teachers on down to 'the guys on the block,' all tend to promote unrealistic notions of how males are supposed to feel and act." Actually, a consensus of the findings indicates that where romantic relationships are concerned men are every bit as complex as women, just as sensitive emotionally and just as much in need of giving and receiving tender affection. It is noted that the reason some men mask these feelings by assuming aggressive attitudes, cool confidence or stony "strong and silent" behavior is simply because they're duped into believing they're different because of the Super Male Myth.

2. True. Studies conducted by a team of investigators from two universities (Kent State and DePaul) cite findings that "Other things being equal, men idealistically prefer to associate with the best-looking women," but the research also indicated that men expect a greater probability of rejection from the more attractive women than from the less attractive, and therefore prefer to seek out those who are closer to their own level.

3. True. Studies of Dr. Eckhard H. Hess, professor of psychology in the Department of Behavior Sciences, University of Chicago, have demonstrated the extent to which human responses can be studied and measured by watching the pupils of the eyes — a person's likes and dislikes being reflected in the dilation or contraction of the eye pupil. Example: when a man sees something he likes — a girl to whom he is especially attracted, or whatever, his eyes "get bigger." But if his reaction to something is negative, it's immediately telegraphed by the eye pupils contracting. Women's eyes, however, don't give away their feelings the way a man's do.

4. True. Psychological studies of men's attitudes toward women conducted at St. Francis College (Pa.) indicate that self-actualizing males — those who are on good terms with themselves, are self-accepting and have a healthy amount of self-esteem — "perceive others, males and females alike, not in a restricting socially stereotyped fashion but rather in the fullness of their unique individuality." The studies conclude that males will be able to relate more positively with others, especially women, when they can first relate acceptingly to themselves.

5. False. The University of Northern Colorado investigated this phenomenon: over three hundred men and women students were administered a questionnaire regarding the matter, and more than 80 percent indicated that they themselves had "played dumb." What was regarded as the most interesting finding, however, was that "the same proportion of males as females reported playing dumb." It is observed that playing dumb is usually understood to mean refraining from freely expressing one's self intellectually in order to gain advantage in an interpersonal situation. More simply, not letting your brains show too much.

6. True. Not infrequently the man who many women are inclined to regard as something special ("He's so attentive...always the perfect gentlemen and he treats me like a queen") employs chivalrous behavior as a smoke screen to mask his real feelings and attitudes toward the opposite sex. As psychologist Abraham H. Maslow has observed: "A good many of the so-called signs of respect for ladies are hangovers from a nonrespecting past and, possibly, are for some persons unconscious representations of a deep contempt for women." This doesn't mean that the man who is the perfect gentleman in his conduct toward ladies doesn't accord them due and proper respect — but if he bends over too far in that direction he may be suspect. ## World's Most Unique Time Piece!

Amazing 'WONDER CLOCK' Tells The Precise Time Without Hands, Face, or Digital Display!

It doesn't look like one, but this strange and fascinating electric clock tells amazingly accurate time. Holds family and friends spellbound as the pendulum swings, scoops up a steel ball and drops it on the top track once each minute. Every 5 minutes a ball rolls down to the 5-minute track; and every 60 minutes a ball drops to mark the hour. When 24 hours have elapsed, all the balls rotate to their original positions. Then, the process begins all over again. Constant. Never requires resetting, ever! Complete with simple instructions; assembles in 'no time flat.' Stands 5⅛" x 9¾" x 8". 110V motor with long 6'6" cord, both U.L. listed. A terrific conversation piece. An absolute must for clock collectors, gadget lovers. Hobbyists go wild! A super gift idea!

WHAT IN THE WORLD

Students On The Job

A well-paid, well-trained and bored pharmacist recently said that if she had been able to spend just two hours observing a pharmacist at work, she would never have chosen the profession. To help Georgetown University undergraduates avoid this situation, the school is instituting a new program that allows students to observe professionals at work.

In the "Career Observation Program" (COP) run by Judy Offerdahl, a counselor with GU's Office of Career Planning and Placement, the student may act more as an observer than in other internship programs.

"I find that people are often unrealistic when choosing careers," Offerdahl says. "It is often done with very little real career information. People sometimes glamorize the professions, and they're not aware of the hard realities of the work or of the options available within a field."

So far, law, business, communications, government, medicine and the social services are among the careers students are most interested in Offerdahl says. And after their time on the job she says, "Some come back more interested than ever. Others may change because their ideas were unrealistic."

Using Time Effectively

Find yourself wishing there were more than 24 hours in a day? You have plenty of company says Frank M. Sterner, associate dean of Purdue University's Krannert Graduate School of Management. "A great many people regularly complain to me, 'I don't have enough time to do everything I want,'" Sterner says. "I make the point that we all have the same amount of time—the real question is how we use it."

There are several proven ways to use time more effectively, Sterner says, and some should work even for those who hesitate to get too regimented. "Deciding what is important is half the battle because often people use up their time on low-priority activities," Sterner observes.

Here are some of Sterner's other time-organizing tips:

- Discover and protect your most creative/productive time of the day.
- Combine tasks when possible.
- Learn to say no—to long-winded telephone callers and other time wasters.
- Have a follow-up system of notes on your desk.
- Plan for the unexpected; don't schedule every minute.

Be reasonable in your plans. Sterner cautions, "Don't start out to beat the world. Plan for tomorrow and decide that you will simply concentrate on doing the most important things first."

Dartmouth College

Snow Rites

For three magic days next week Dartmouth College students will transform their northeastern campus with the help of giant snow sculptures into a winter wonderland as they celebrate the college's 69th annual winter festival. The carnival, sometimes called the "Mardi Gras of the North," is the oldest winter collegiate festival in the United States. And since its origin in 1911, its combination of athletic and cultural events and outdoor gallery of snow sculptures often attracts a large noncollege audience as well as the student community and guests.

The ice and snow sculptures, which are the centerpieces of the carnivals are built by residents of dormitories and members of fraternities and fashioned in snow by techniques passed down from class to class since the tradition began in the early 20s. Sculptures from last year's carnival, whose theme was "The Greatest Snow on Earth" (which proved prophetic as one of the big snowstorms of the winter occurred just before carnival) included a replica of the fabled castle from "The Wizard of Oz." The castle, bathed in deep-green floodlamps at night, was fashioned from nearly 400 tons of snow, and once completed, students, children and a number of very brave dogs had fun sliding down a circular chute built into the castle.

Nonrunners, Unite!

O.K., all you closet nonrunners out there, it's time to sit down for your rights and be counted. So say Vic Ziegel and Lewis Grossberger, two former sportswriters who saw the light and make a bid to become the gurus of the new nonrunning movement in The Non-Runners Book (Collier). Taking their inspiration from Calvin Coolidge, who once said, "I do not choose to run," Ziegel and Grossberger want to reassure the American people, "It's O.K. not to have pain, sweat and be out of breath.

"Why drive yourself to the point of exhaustion? Why pound your feet to bloody stumps . . . Why run? Instead, why not not-run?" they ask.

When interviewed in one of their favorite watering holes in Greenwich Village, both authors looked to be in peak nonrunning form, doing nothing more strenuous than hefting a glass of beer. But lately it's gotten harder for them to hold to their regimen; the growing popularity of the book is, perish the thought, threatening to keep them on the run.

Lifestyles

Jobs. Many Americans have become less satisfied with their jobs in recent years says a study just released by the Labor Department. And the decline in job satisfaction in the last four years was particularly high among college graduates. By contrast, self-employed people surveyed reported high levels of satisfaction.

Sexes. Women now account for 60 percent of all drug-related hospital emergency room cases in the U.S. reports the National Institute on Drug Abuse. Almost two of every three of these cases are suicide tries the agency says. Researchers note that women use more prescription drugs than men and may be more likely than men to intentionally overdose on drugs as a "cry for help" rather than as a genuine suicide attempt.

Business. How would you rate your doctor, hairdresser or mailman? When subscribers of one national magazine recently rated the 35 personal services they most commonly used, there were a few surprises. For example, although many people dread visits to the dentist, it seems they're pleased with the treatment once they get there—dentists topped the list. Lawyers ranked 22nd, just above laundrymen. And bringing up the rear were auto mechanics and railroads.
