ERA Ratification Bill Is Offered In N.C. Senate

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Equal Rights Amendment, defeated three times in the General Assembly, was given another chance for ratification in North Carolina when an optimistic group of supporters filed a ratification bill Monday night in the state Senate.

The bill was filed with the Senate principal clerk just before the evening session began, for introduction today.

Sponsored by Senate majority leader Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, it bears the signature of 19 co-sponsors, less than the number of votes needed to pass the measure in the 50-member Senate.

But Lawing said three more signatures would soon be added, and he believed the controversial amendment will have the votes of several more senators when it reaches the floor.

Although House supporters held up their plans to file a companion measure in the lower chamber, many backers on both sides of the hall were optimistic.

"We have it," said Rep. Louise Brennan, D-Mecklenburg.

"I feel better about it this time than I have anytime since 1973," she added. "Unless we thought we could win, we wouldn't introduce the bill.

"I think we've got 24 votes right now, and I think the other side will conceed us that right now," said Lawing.

Gov. Jim Hunt, traveling in Switzerland on an industry-hunting trip, issued a statement Monday night calling for ERA's ratification.

"I hope very much that ERA will be ratified in North Carolina this year, because I believe strongly, as does my wife, that it will result over time in us valuing women in our society more," Hunt said. "We do not presently show enough appreciation for women who choose to be full-time mothers and

County To Offer Lease Wing Of Old Hospital

Pitt County Manager Reginald Gray was given authority yesterday by the Board of County Commissioners to submit a proposal for the lease of one wing of the old Pitt Memorial Hospital building for the East Carolina University School of Medicine to the State.

The old hospital facility is now being renovated for use as a county office building.

Commissioners approved a recommended $5.50 per gross square foot area rental fee for the building's "A" wing, the newest portion of the building. The gross square foot rental fee would result in a charge of $136,285 per year for the facility.

Similar leases in the area, the board was told, range from $5.23 to $5.69 per square foot.

The board also accepted a proposal from Charles Stocks to lease seven acres of land at the old county landfill on the Allen Road for $15 per acre per year. In addition to the $15 per acre, Stocks has agreed to put the land in farming condition, and keep other county property in the area mowed.

Gray pointed out that the

Bhutto Death Upheld

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (AP) — The Supreme Court upheld the conviction and death sentence for political murder given deposed Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, Pakistan's dominant political figure from 1971 to 1977, and four members of his special police.

The court rejected an oral request by Bhutto's lawyer for a 30-day stay of execution while it carried out a final judicial review of the case. The court advised the defense attorney to file a formal request for more time and the judicial review. Meanwhile, it assured him, Bhutto will not be hanged for at least a week because he is allowed that length of time to petition for clemency.

The court split 4-3 today in favor of hanging Bhutto and one co-defendant, Mian Mohammad Abbas, the former operations chief of Bhutto's federal security force. It voted unanimously to uphold the convictions and death sentences of the three other co-defendants.

President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq's military government tried to head off demonstrations in support of the nation's best-known politician. Schools were closed in three provinces. Bhutto's politically-active wife was put under house arrest, and most of the leaders and workers of his People's Party were in jail.

The three judges who dissented on Bhutto's verdict favored acquittal, and his lawyer, former Attorney General Yahya Bakhtiar, told reporters this provided "sound grounds" for a judicial review.

Zia, the army chief who overthrew Bhutto in 1977 after nationwide demonstrations charging the political leader with rigging his re-election, said previously he would not change the Supreme Court's ruling.

Classroom Threat By 2 Armed Boys

MARIANNA, Fla. (AP) — A cocked revolver pressed to her head, 14-year-old Teresa Hill listened and looked at her 11year-old assailant.

"He had a serious face," the pert honor student said later. "He kept saying he wasn't fooling around."

Miss Hill would learn later that the .22 caliber revolver had a faulty hammer, and would not have fired. But for a time, Miss Hill, about 30 other pupils and a teacher were shocked by the pistol-packing schoolboy and another knife-wielding classmate.

The two boys were in custody today, held by youth services officials. Marianna Police Chief Wiley G. Pittman says the boys were "just vying for attention," but, "...there will be charges filed, aggravated assault at least."

No injuries were reported in the incident, which occurred Monday at the Middle School in this Florida community west of Tallahassee.

The boys were not identified by police because of their ages.

Principal M.R. Stokes said Miss Hill, an eighth grader, went to the language arts classroom to give a message to teacher Karen Hughes.

One youth jumped up with a gun, pressing it to Miss Hill's head, police said. Mrs. Hughes shoved the boy from the room and told another pupil to call the principal.

But when that boy tried to leave to sound an alarm, another youth threatened him with an eight-inch hunting knife, police said. The youth fled after he was disarmed by another student, Stokes said.

The two boys were picked up about eight hours later by an unidentified Marianna man about seven miles from town. Police said a loaded .22 caliber revolver was discovered nearby.

Schools' Merger Order Studied At Board Meet

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

A two-pronged viewpoint of the question of merger of Pitt County and Greenville City Schools was considered at the informational meeting of the Greenville Board of Education Monday night.

One phase of the discussions centered on a letter dated Monday, Feb. 5 from the Pitt County Board of Commissioners outlining that commissions's "School Unification Study Request;" the second phase centered on a "Memorandum of Law" presented by Phillip R. Dixon, school board attorney for the city schools.

Board chairman Mrs. Theresa Shank, cited the commission's point five in reasons for the merger study — that the $9 million bond issue requested by the two boards is an integral part of any plan of consolidation and should be presented to the voters of Pitt County after the boards have determined . . . what the future plans for education in Pitt County should be she said "the question occurs to me that if the bond issue is tied-in to a time schedule of after a public referendum, that our bond request as presented on a pro-rata share is no longer a valid issue."

Supt. of Greenville Schools Glenn Cox said he interprets the commissioner's letter to the two boards as clearly signifying that "they are not going to hold a referendum on the bond issue vote until a merger plan has been accepted or rejected."

References to prior developments of the proposed merger plan included a previously directed October 1, 1979 deadline to the two boards to present a merger plan agreed on by both boards.

The Monday letter from the commissioners further reiterates action on the part of the two boards "to appoint a committee from each Board to study and propose a plan of unification of merger of the two school districts ."

Airport Funds

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Congressman Walter B. Jones announced the approval by the Department of Transportation of an airport development grant in the amount of $857,680 to the Pitt-Greenville Airport Monday.

These funds will be used in reconstructing Runway 7-25/Phase II; reconstruction and connection of taxiways; regrading of runways and taxiways shoulder areas; and drainage improvements.

Housing Authority To Present $16,955 Check In Lieu Of City Taxes

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The Housing Authority is presenting a check to the city in the amount of $16,955.43 as the Authority's annual payment in lieu of taxes.

The executive director of the Authority, Joe Laney, said the payment in lieu of taxes, for the fiscal year ending 1978, will accompany the agency's annual report to the city.

In the annual report to Mayor Percy Cox and members of the City Council, the Authority points out that the 1978 payment has increased 77 percent over the 1977 amount since there were no emergency gas surcharge payments made by the authority as required the previous year. The report explains that the payment is lieu of taxes is based on rent less utility costs.

In addition, an improvement in the Authority's overall income by 20 percent in order to maintain financial solvency helped increase the payment amount for 1978.

The annual report, which will be delivered this week, indicates that the new Hopkins Park housing development was occupied during December, providing 111 additional units to help lower income and elderly citizens.

The mayor and council are informed that the mid-rise complex for the elderly, pro-

ALMOST DROWNED

During any rainy day, I hate to go in the Tenth Street (ECU) branch of the Greenville Post Office because I almost drown. It's part of my job to get the mail for my office each day, though, so I have to. The problem seems to be that there are no gutters to channel any of the runoff from the roof anywhere but on customer's heads. This is a federal facility — can't something be done? Ms. M. D.

Hotline contacted Greenville Post Master Lloyd Mills who informed us that he has had similar complaints about the situation. However, the building is privately owned and he suggested that you write a letter to him describing the situation and he would mail it with a cover letter to the Post Office Department to see if they would take care of the situation.

Van Fleming Jr. is the owner of the building and he informed us that he has believed the built-up design of the roof negated any need for gutters when the building was erected. He added that he hasn't heard any complaints about the situation, but would take the matter into consideration.

Militant Farmers Draw Rebuff From Bergland

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of militant farmers were dealt stern words by Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland today while police stymied their traffic-snarling tactics by encircling their tractors with a wall of squad cars and other vehicles.

Bergland said the demonstrators, who tied the capital in knots Monday in a motorized display of force, "can't get their act together — so until they do, I'm not going to respond to their individual complaints."

In the first of several public appearances in which he was expected to reiterate a tough Carter administration line, Bergland said many of the farmers who participated in the American Agriculture movement protest were "generally representing what we describe as local problems."

"There are others who have made bad business judgments, paid too much money for land ...others are seeking publicity and others are driven by oldfashioned greed," Bergland said on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" program.

Meanwhile, the capital's morning rush hour went smoothly as the farmers were denied their principal weapon of protest by police who kept their tractors penned on the Mall behind hundreds of cruisers, buses, garbage trucks, cranes and wreckers.

The police encircled the farm vehicles as they were parked during a rally at the Capitol Monday afternoon. The tactic guaranteed a smooth evening rush hour, and there was no letup today despite the farmers' intention to put the tractors back on the streets.

"We feel like we're in bondage. I don't trust anybody I see out there," said Jerry Hanning, a farmer from near Lansing, Mich.

While the movement tried to get its machines in motion again — claiming a constitutional right to petition the government from the seat of a tractor — the indications were that this time the farmers would find stiff resistance in the government.

UNC Held Guilty Of Reverse Discrimination

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A federal appeals court rule Monday that the University of North Carolina is guilty of reverse discrimination by requiring black representation on the school's honor court and its student government.

The majority opinion of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals cited the Bakke case, saying, "Bakke, we recognize, unequivocally pronounces that in state educational institutions race may be a consideration in fixing the rights of students, but at no stage did the court affirm that race could be the sole determinant..."

The appeals court ruled the university's practices invalid and said there was no point in sending the case back to a lower court, whose decision the appeals court had earlier upheld, for further deliberations. Monday's ruling reversed the lower court decision.

The Supreme Court ordered the review of the earlier ruling in view of its own ruling that the University of California had discriminated against Allan Bakke, who is white, by giving preferential treatment to members of minority races seeking to enroll in medical school merely because they are minorities.

Two white students, Lawrence A. Uzzell and Robert L. Arrington, filed suit in 1974 against UNC, its officials, officials of the student government and the school's Black Student Movement. They challenged the requirement that the 18-member Campus Governing Council include at least two councilors of a minority race within the student body.

They also challenged a rule that any student to be tried by the Honor Court is entitled, upon request, to have four of the seven judges of the court of his or her own race or sex.

Uzzell and Arrington contended the regulations denied them their rights of equal protection and violated the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

Three of the appeals court judges dissented in the ruling Monday, stating, "Bakke does not hold that in all events racial critieria may not be the sole determinant in fixing the rights of students" although "it recognizes that race is a suspect classification."

But One Death In County Fires

The annual report of the Pitt County Fire Marshal's office has been made by County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner. Copies of this report may be viewed at the Fire Marshal's office, 119 S. Cotanche Street, Greenville.

The only fire fatality of the year, Joyner said, was Mrs. Emma Cannon Powell, who died by being overcome by smoke when her mobile home in the Staton House district burned Jan. 31, 1978.

Destroyed by fire were the New Hope Church School in the Belvoir district Jan. 1, 1978; the Candlewick Inn restaurant Mar. 1, 1978 in the Bell Arthur district, house in the Farmville district plus a number of homes and bulk and conventional tobacco barns.

Total alarms were classified as follows: 165 houses; 72 buildings; 117 motor vehicles; 142 grass and woods; 27 false alarms; 133 "others" and 82 mutual aids, a total of 738 alarms answered.

The dollar value of property involved in fire was $4,737,990; the dollar value exposed to fire, $12,591,068 — total potential loss, $17,329,058. The dollar value lost was counted at $1,796,656, so the value counted as saved was $15,532,402.

1978 fire loss was $46,761 less than that of 1977. The average loss per fire was $2,739.

The man hours spent fighting fires, by department, were as follows: Ayden, 70,737; Bell Arthur, 8,085; Belvoir, 5,820; Bethel, 133,164; Black Jack, 4,675; Clark's Neck, 3,553; Eastern Pines, 25,896; Falkland, 17,877; Farmville, 19,933; Fountain, 256; Gardnerville, 6,972; Grifton, 17,572; Grimesland, 7,344; Pactolus, 3,591; Red Oak, 4,312; Simpson, 658; Staton House, 105,984; Stokes, 1,302; Winterville, 42,228 — total 479,959. Multiply that figure by $2.65 per hour — minimum wage last year — to see how much volunteer firefighters are doing for us, Joyner said.

Man hours spent training, by department, from July 1, 1977 to June 30, 1978 were reported as follows: Ayden, 2,760; Bell Arthur, 682; Belvoir, 722; Bethel, 2,162; Black Jack, 1,029; Clark's Neck, 1,767; Eastern Pines, 3,665; Falkland, 1,794; Farmville, 2,921; Fountain, 334; Gardnerville, 973; Grifton, 467; Grimesland, 1,425; Pactolus, 1,818; Red Oak, 506; Simpson, 505; Stokes, 1,145; Staton House, 2,913; and Winterville, 1,239 — total, 28,827.

A Copy Of Pitt Bd. Resolution Ordered Sent School Boards

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Commissioners yesterday took steps to forward each member of the Pitt County and Greenville city school boards a copy of a resolution approved by commissioners last month calling for a study aimed at unifying the two administrative units.

The Board of Commissioners in September 1977, asked the two school boards to develop and implement a plan to merge the systems, and last month called on school officials to report what progress had been made toward that goal.

After representatives of both boards indicated that no planning had taken place, Commissioners again instructed the school administrative units to appoint a joint committee, "to study and propose a plan of unification or merger of the two school districts that would improve the curriculum, enrichment programs and physical facilities for the future advantage of educational opportunity in Pitt County."

The Commissioner's resolution said the paramount consideration of any plan would be, "the best interest and equal opportunity of each school child as required by thetion of North Carolina."

The resolution, indicating the Commissioners are, "seeking ways of improving education and accountability of tax money," said the board will, "assist the school boards in any way possible in such study and will provide for consultants to assist," and suggested that the committee, "also call on the State Board of Education for assistance."

Following the Commissioners' 1977 request for a merger plan, the Boards of Education had the State's Division of School Planning conduct a comprehensive survey of the two systems. However, the two boards asked that the survey team not make any recommendations regarding the question of merger.

In addition to the use of consultants, the resolution suggested that public hearings, "for public participation in any plan of improvement or consolidation," should be held.

Emphasizing that any proposed plan of unification must be approved by both boards of education before being submitted to the State Department of Public Instruction and to the Board of County Commissioners for approval, the resolution said any plan submitted, "should be voted on by the people...before implementation."

"We feel sure that you will devise a first class school system that will supply the proper educational opportunity for the children of Pitt County, and as soon as the plan has been accepted or rejected by the people, we can proceed with a referendum on your capital outlay needs which you have requested," the resolution said.

The reference to, "capital outlay needs," refers to a request by the two school boards for a $9 million bond issue for construction of school facilities made to the Board of Commissioners at the mid-January session.

Commissioners have, for more than two years, urged the two school boards to request a bond referendum in order to provide funds for school construction, saying the county is not able to provide the needed facilities on a pay-as-you-go basis through current appropriations each year.

Until recently, the school boards have been unable to agree on the amount of bond funds that would be needed.

However, after commissioners gave notice early in January that they would meet with school officials for a report on the merger plans and progress toward a bond vote, the two school bodies agreed on the figure of $9 million — a week before the January 15 meeting.

Continuous disagreement over school district lines, disagreement over the division of capital expenditures, and competition for school funds were listed in the resolution as three reasons for the proposed merger.

"Under present conditions," the resolution said, "the Greenville School District will remain forever locked in and will not be able to expand regardless of the future extension of the city limits, and in the forseeable future a large percent of the children living in Greenville would be required to go to county schools, and the Greenville School census will continue to plunge downward."

The disagreement over district lines and competition for funds results, according to the resolution, in the employment of legal firms by each of the school boards and could evolve, "into court battles...costing the taxpayers considerable sums of money," which, "should be used for the education of our children."

Saying the student population and school census does not justify two school systems, the resolution indicated that unification would eliminate any disagreements — as there have been in the past — over the distribution of capital expenditures.

The differences over capital divisions should be eliminated," the resolution continued, "because the voters of Pitt County in a referendum, voted for the county to assume all bonded indebtedness for both school units without regard to school districts," several years ago.

The resolution also said the proposed $9 million bond issue, "is an integral part of any plan of consolidation and should be presented to the voters ... after the boards have determined, through careful study, what the future plans for education in Pitt County should be."

The competency testing of students, the resolution pointed out, "places a heavy responsibility upon school administration to find a way whereby the student is better prepared through improved curriculum, enrichment programs and expanded opportunities."

"We told the boards they would get a resolution. This is it," Bob Martin, chairman of the Board of Commissioners commented.

homemakers. I believe ERA will help us do that, both legally and in terms of attitude."

But House Speaker Carl, Stewart, D-Gaston, a supporter of ERA, was more cautious in his appraisal of its chances.

"There is a danger. The vote in the House is likely to be closer," he said, referring to a six-vote margin in the last session.

"The issue is still in doubt. I believe there are 56 votes each way, and eight undecided," he added. "It's just as close in the House as it is in the Senate."

ERA came close to ratification in the last session, clearing the House but failing in the Senate by two votes. Because of that loss, supporters have concentrated their efforts in the Senate this time.

Supporters have picked up at least four Senate votes in recent days, and Hunt has been credited with using his influence to cause much of that shift.

Under the timetable proposed by supporters, the bill would go to the Senate Constitutional Amendments Committee this week, and a public hearing would be held next week. Committee Chairman Sen. Cecil Hill, D-Transylvania, supports ERA.

Lawing said he expects the full Senate to vote on the measure later next week.

If approved, Mrs. Brennan said supporters would press for House committee action quickly, perhaps the day it is sent over from the Senate.

Lawing said the hearing would be scheduled at the insistence of Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green. Although Green has opposed the measure in the past, Lawing and Green are close allies, and Lawing said the lieutenant governor was remaining neutral.

"If he comes out and tries to beat it, and ever runs for state wide office again, he's in trouble and I told him that," Lawing said. "I think the women would say, 'shame on him,' and if you don't believe it go ask Jim McDuffie."

McDuffie was a state senator from Charlotte in 1977 who cast the deciding vote against ERA after first saying he would vote for the measure. He was soundly defeated in the next Democratic primary and in the general election as an independent.

Also filed Monday was a bill by Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, that would authorize a non-binding statewide referendum on ERA. A similar measure has already been introduced in the House.

In other legislative action:

Loans

The House approved on an 8030 vote a bill that extends the limit on loans by consumer finance companies from $1,500 to $3,500. The House sent the bill to the Senate after tabling an amendment that would have forced lower interest rates over the life of the loan.

The bill, backed by the finance companies, also extends to 61 months the length of time a borrower has to repay his loan.

Opponents of the measure, who offered the amendment, contend the bill will make it easier for persons to get into debt. Small loan companies charge generally higher interest rates than do banks, with a legal limit of 36 percent on the first $300 borrowed and 18 percent on the remainder.

Holiday

A bill filed by Rep. Ted Kaplan, D-Forsyth, would make the Jewish holiday Yom Kippur a "public holiday."

Elections

The House gave tentative approval to a bill that would authorize absentee ballots in soil conservation and sanitary district elections. Originally the bill would have authorized the ballots in liquor elections, but that provision was removed in committee.

Kaplan said he planned to offer an amendment today that would return the alcohol vote provision to the measure.

Merger...

Relative to this request, Mrs. Shank said she had on Monday had an opportunity to talk to Pitt County Board Chairman Mark Owens. She added she would like for the city board to make a recommendation that three members from each board be appointed to serve on a merger committee, with a chairman to be selected by the six from the committee's membership.

"I strongly feel that equal representation in numbers from each board is essential as it involves two systems, two entities," Mrs. Shank stated.

The board unanimously accepted her recommendation for the six-member, equally representative committee.

The second phase of consideration of the merger question, Dixon's "Memorandum of Law," centered on legal requirements to be met in conjunction with a merger of the two systems.

Some of the primary items contained in Dixon's extracts of Section 115-74.1 of the General Statutes of North Carolina, the statute governing school merger, include:

— The establishment and maintenance of a new board of education — and the method of constituting and continuing the board of education . . .

— The authority, powers and duties of the board . . . in employment of personnel, preparation of budgets, and any other related matter . . .

— Whether or not there shall be continued in force any supplemental school tax which may be in effect . . .

— A statement as to whether the question of merger is to be contingent upon approval of the voters . .

Answering questions about basic authority involved in directing a merger proposal, Dixon said "it is the perogative of the county commissioners to direct a merger study," and later he added "it is strictly discretionary on the part of commissioners to decide whether the merger plan is to be submitted to the voters for approval."

Subdivision Residents Ask Cleanup For Lots

WINTERVILLE — The Winterville Town Board of Commissioners heard a request from residents of the Shamrock Terrace subdivision Monday to have the town clean up several vacant lots in the Terrace area.

The board informed the residents that the town's ordinances were in the process of being reviewed, and that the town would add an ordinance concerning the cleaning problem during the reviewing process.

The board voted to purchase a 1978 Truxmore Ford 23 cubic yard garbage truck for the town. Minus the trade-in value on the old town model, the cost for the new truck will be $23,000.

The board noted that several Winterville residents had not been receiving proper garbage service in the past few weeks because of problems with the old truck, and decided to put the new model in operation as of Tuesday morning. The board also reminded residents to be patient for garbage services to return to normal.

The board approved a proposal from the Warren-Gardner Subdivision, making the town responsible for water, sewer and electric services, with reimbursement on the water and sewer services. The subdivision contractors will be responsible for the curbing, guttering and blacktoping. The subdivision is located near Jones Rest Home.

A public hearing was set for March 5, 7 p.m., concerning the intent to adopt an ordinance granting a non-exclusive franchise to Greenville Cable TV, Inc. Town attorney David Duffus is in the process of reviewing the ordinance.

On March 19, the Winterville Planning-Zoning Board, Board of Adjustments, and town Board of Commissioners will meet at 7 p.m. to recode all zoning ordinances.

Final approval on Section III of Weathington Heights Subdivision was tabled until plans are made for a connecting street from Weathington Heights to Robinson Heights.

The board authorized Mayor Walter Dail to proceed with sale of land on Jones St. that the town has deemed surplus. The lot is located opposite the town water tank.

Fourth Graders Meet An Author

Students in Mrs. Debra Morrisette and Mrs. Maurine Garrison's fourth grade classes at Sadie Saulter School spent an hour Thursday in the school media center talking with Ovid Pierce, former writer in residence at East Carolina University.

Pierce, introduced by Dr. James Kirkland of the English Department of ECU, spoke to the children about writing, authors and books in general.

Pierce, who has written several novels, won the Sir Walter Raleigh award for his novel, "The Plantation."

Title One Meet Held At School

A Title One Parent Visitation session was held at Chicod Elementary School Thursday from 8:30 a.m. to 12 noon.

Parents were able to observe their children in reading labs and tutorial programs. Geraldine Smith, PAC chairman, and Frances Edwards, medical-social counselor, assisted in welcoming parents and directing them to Title One sessions. Bernard Haselrig, county Title One coordinator, was also in attendance.

Aunt Jenny Wilson Is A Walking Folk Song

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

CROOKED CREEK, W.Va. (AP) — The snow lies deep and even on the mountains and the sense of isolation even deeper, quilting time in Appalachia.

"Ive made six quilts so far this winter and I'm working on two more," Aunt Jenny Wilson said with undisguised pride.

"Quilt patterns have such grand names: Jacob's Ladder, Bear's Paw, Milky Way, Texas Star, Clay's Choice. I couldn't tell you all the patterns I've made in my time.

"Whenever I get a quilt done, a hand is there to put it in, and that pleasures me.

"I have three children, 11 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren. I'm 79 years old, or will be on Feb. 9, and hain't spent a day in a hospital in my life. If any woman has had more pleasure than I, well, buddy, I'd like to meet her."

Aunt Jenny Wilson, matriarch of Crooked Creek hollow, is a walking folk song.

She is a mountain woman with all that that implies, a life shaped by remoteness, danger, blood feuds, hot passions and a stoic resignation to what may come. "If you're born to hang you'll never drown," Aunt Jenny says. "Let the big cat jump."

She has seen it all and endured it all, all the joys and horrors that have made Appalachia less a place name than a mystique.

She buried her husband too young. Coal mine cave-in. She carries knife scars on her back and arm, souvenirs of a square dance that went sour when the moonshine jug appeared. Yet the same nimble fingers that work a quilting needle also pluck a rollicking banjo; homespun song and laughter abide. A mountain woman.

Aunt Jennys' banjo — she pronounces it, musically, banjer — has brought her not only pleasure, but in recent years, fame.

She has been, Lord help us, discovered. Students of Appalachian folkways for miles around have invited her to music festivals to listen to her play, question her, cherish her as a relic.

"Last year I went all the way to Arlington, Texas. My grandson and I drove out in his pick-up truck."

For her, old mountain traditions are not a matter of academic research but simple remembering.

"I was the youngest of 11. I was like a toy to my brothers. They called me sparrow. I was so little and scrawny. I was always pestering to go with them but they wouldn't let me.

"One day my brother said, 'Sparrow, if you can learn to shoot a gun, ride a horse and play a banjer, you can go where the boys go.'

"I learned all three. I was playing the banjer when I was 9 and by the time I was 14 I was playing at every dance around. ...

"I don't dance anymore. I leave that to the others, and I do enjoy watching them.

"But, my, yes, I still love to play. Come spring I'll put new strings on that banjer and be off playing again. There's seven or eight places I've already been invited to.

"Not now, though. Buddy, you couldn't get me out in that weather. I'll just stay home and tend to my quilting."

He's Not Buying Companionship

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm 33, divorced, and have been dating Gary for two years. He says he loves me and wants to marry me, but I'm not ready for another marriage just yet.

My problem is the way Gary holds on to his money. He's never offered to pay my baby-sitter. (I have two children.) Twice I've had to ask Gary to lend me money for the sitter because I was short.

Now he wants me to go on an ski vacation with him and expects me to pay all my own expenses—plane fare, lodging, meals and even the ski-lift tickets!

My girlfriends tell me that when they go on trips with their boyfriends, the guys pay for everything. It's not that Gary can't afford to treat me. Far from it. He is very well-heeled.

This money problem is making me resent him. Am I expecting too much? What do you think?

MONEY TROUBLE

DEAR TROUBLE: Generous he's not. But before you label him a well-heeled heel, consider this. Gary may need to prove to himself that he's not buying your companionship. Rejoice. If you decide to say goodbye, you'll owe him nothing.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 23-year-old woman who gave birth to a fine, healthy baby boy three weeks ago.

What should I say to women who criticize me for not breast-feeding my baby?

My mother-in-law suggested I tell them I don't have enough milk to nurse my baby, but that isn't the case. My decision was a personal choice, and one I am happy with.

I talked it over with my doctor, and he assured me that a bottle-fed baby gets as much nourishment as a breast-fed baby, and as long as a close physical contact is maintained during feeding time my baby will not suffer feelings of neglect.

Please help me.

NEW MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Your honest response: "My decision is a personal choice, and one I am happy with" is far better than the cop-out suggested by your mother-in-law. Use it.

DEAR ABBY: Now that so many couples are living together without marriage, how does one address letters, cards and invitations to both of them?

My wife says if HE is living in HER home, they are addressed Mary Jones and John Brown. But if SHE is living in HIS home, they are addressed John Brown and Mary Jones.

Who is right?

US IN GALLATIN, TENN.

DEAR US: No matter whose home it is, they are addressed alphabetically—each name written on a separate line.

Example:

Mr. John Brown
Ms. Mary Jones

Fashions Reflected Nostalgia

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI) — In Paris fashion this is the year of the Marlene, Joan, Ginger and the rest.

The Paris spring-summer high fashion collections presented Jan. 28-Feb. 2 dripped with nostalgia for the days when movie stars decorated the screen with peplums, plunging necklines, wide shoulders and other sensual styles.

The one major designer who stayed aloof from "retro" was Yves Saint Laurent — who started it all when he overturned the ample, soft look last year in favor of a slender line with wider shoulders.

While others translated this new silhouette into the 1938-1950's period, Saint Laurent's sensational collection just hinted at past decades. His broader shoulders, little hats and marked waists were diluted in a show of Saint Laurent classic styles so that the clothes looked, well, very 1979.

Nostalgic or not, the revolution now is complete with the ample, layered look that hid the body virtually axed out of Paris. Firmly established is the skinny shape that reveals the form, for better or worse.

The collections were awash with suits, both for daytime and cocktail. The new straight, narrow skirt and jackets with broader shoulders and waists definitely marked by curves or belts. More suits were shown with skirts than with trousers (although Saint Laurent and Dior, two of the most influential houses, paraded lots of trouser suits).

Little peplums flared from under belts on many suit or dress jackets. Dior's theme was a long, loose jacket strangled at the waist by a wide, soft leather belt that produced a flare below. The Saint Laurent new jackets included a buttonless bolero.

The prettiest 1940s peplum look surfaced at Hubert de Givenchy: a black suit with a tube skirt and fitted jacket that curved in at the waist and then curved out to ripple in soft folds.

Coats with matching skirts or dresses made a comeback in line with the mood away from jeans-and-sweaters. Coats often had wide shoulders and were narrow except for the "princess" style — the coat fitted at the waist and flaring below that Britain's Princess Margaret liked in her youth.

Afternoon dresses were back with cape or puffy sleeves. The short cocktail dresses also was brought out of the designers' books of souvenirs — draped or shirred or tucked to outline the hip and bosom, with plunging neckline, wider shoulder.

The new look called for stiffer and more dramatic fabrics. Lacquered satin in wild purples gleamed at the Emanuel Ungaro show. Taffeta rustled in many collections. Gun moll pin-stripes flourished at nearly every salon. And the shows rained with polka dots of all sizes, a favorite with the French for spring.

The collections bared a lot of skin. Tops under suits were more likely to be strapless chest-huggers instead of real blouses (in fact, some suits had no blouses at all or just silk T-shirts).

Scholarship Deadline Set

The Alpha Nu Chapter of Alpha Delta Kappa, professional sorority for women educators, met Thursday evening at the Ramada Inn for its regular meeting.

Guests Angela Brickhouse, Allyson Block and Gay Harrell were welcomed by President Evelyn Finch.

Ada Bett Savage, chairman of the scholarship committee, reported March 15 was the deadline for any member to submit an applicant for the Alpha Nu Scholarship.

Plans were finalized for the Alpha Delta Kappa Executive Board and Presidents'' Council meetings to be held Feb. 9-10 in Greenville at the Holiday Inn. Co-hostesses will be the Greenville Alpha Iota Chpater and the Alpha Nu Chapter.

Beverly Honeycutt was named a new member.

The group's next meeting will be March 1 at the Ramada Inn.

Delta Sigma Meeting Held

The Greenville Alumnae chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority met at the home of Soror Gladys Sanders Saturday.

Membership Chairperson Lillian Jones, Project Chairperson Rebecca Norcott and Corresponding Secretary Argie Cannon made reports.

It was reported 14 senior high school girls from the Pitt County Schools and Rose High are contestants for Miss College Bound, the sorority's annual fund-raising activity for scholarship purposes.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Soror Paulette Dove, Mar. 3.

Memorial Service Held At Meet

A memorial service was held at the meeting of American Legion Auxiliary Unit No. 39 Thursday night at the American Legion Building.

Mrs. Lois Dail, past department chaplain, conducted the service for Mrs. Maude Bowen and Mrs. Susie Rollins.

Mrs. Janie Adams opened the meeting. Mrs. Sarah Ashton reported the District Three meeting will be held at Unit 15, Washington. Reservations must be made with Mrs. Ashton. A poppy arrangement will be made by Faye Adams.

The Spring Conference will be held Feb. 16-18 at the Bordeaux Motel, Fayetteville.

Donations were made to Care, Heart Fund, Cancer Fund and the Easter Seal fund.

Mrs. Ashton and Betty A. Levey served refreshments.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Thanks to the popularity of movies like "Paper Chase" and "Animal House," television will go off this season on a college kick.

The two movies, both dealing with the academic community, have clearly divided parents of college students into two groups: those who consider "Paper Chase" a documentary of campus life and "Animal House" science fiction . . . and those who believe Peter Pan had a wire in his back and that things haven't changed a bit since they went to school.

I am one of those parents who wants to believe.

I want to believe my son does not write home because he dropped a Bible on his foot and cannot hobble to the mailbox to post his letter.

I want to believe he intercepted his grades before they fell into our hands because he wants to have them framed and given to me for Mother's Day.

I want to believe he postdated a check for $100 to buy a jacket to go with his tie for the evening a week they dress for dinner at the dorm.

I want to believe he needs a car on campus to transport a backseat of reference books which he tried to strap to his back on a bicycle, but couldn't.

I want to believe when they call at the house and ask for "Suds" they dialed the wrong number.

I want to believe the two hollow eyes and the pale face are from stuyding into the wee hours of the morning.

I want to believe . . . but I know better.

I know that no mother in her right mind should ever pay a surprise visit to her son's room on campus.

I know for her own mental health she should never ask, "How long has it been since you've washed these towels?"

I know that the pajamas she sent with him in September will be the same pajamas that will return in June . . . complete with pins.

I know he will never know the school song, the school motto or the state flower.

I told my husband I had a dream the other night in which I saw my son sitting in a classroom of serious students in a jacket with suede patches on the sleeve, with pencil poised, looking intense when a Prof. Kingsfield said, "Mr. Bombeck! The answer please!"

"That's funny," said my husband, "I had a dream too where our son was in a fraternity house that had to be cleaned before they could condemn it. There he was surrounded by stale food, broken springs in the chairs, and bodies wearing wrinkled shirts. They were all in a Conga line shouting, "Tora! Tora! Tora!"

"Are you sure it wasn't Toga! Toga! Toga!"

"Same thing," he shrugged.

Farmer Sympathy Runs High

A survey conduction by Leo Shapir and Associates for the American Farm Bureau Federation shows that 60 percent of the public feels that farmers get less income than they deserve.

No doubt that majority of the public finds itself in agreement with the farmers, themselves.

Farming is, after all, a business, but one with some factors which are absolutely beyond control. The prime one of these is growing conditions. A drought or an extremely wet year can cause a disaster for the individual farmer.

While there are good years when crop yields and quality are high and farmers make good money, there are also those years when it becomes barely possible to make ends meet.

Despite all this the farmers continue to produce ample goods for our needs and obviously the public appreciates this and is in sympathy with the farmer.

The survey also showed that only eight percent of those polled felt farmers got too much income.

The same questions were asked the respondants about their own income and half felt they got less than they deserved. Four percent believed they receive more pay then they deserved and 46 percent felt their income was about right.

Precautions Now Could Avert Big Loss

Cold temperatures of recent weeks have produced the usual number of home fires, including one fatality in Pitt County.

It's a good time to inspect heating plants, flues and all heating appliances. It is also a good time for families to develop plans for escaping from the house in case of a fire.

Smoke and/or heat detectors might be a good investment for a family.

Fires can leave a family homeless, and they can kill. Taking precautions now could prevent a fire or minimize the damage.

"But, of course we're friends. Mr. Teng . . . uh . . . but . . ."

THIS AFTERNOON

Why The Assembly Rush?

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Political motives above all else appear to be the reason behind the inordinate rush of the North Carolina General Assembly to finish work and pack it up within four months.

Not all of the lawmakers are happy with that pressure, either.

"We are moving entirely too fast right at the beginning. Lots of people here haven't even gotten to know one another," a veteran leiglator grumbled.

A glance at the statistics would make it seem that the Legislature is indeed moving fast. More than 400 proposed laws or changes to previous laws have already been fed into the machinery.

But a careful review of many of those proposals show them to be mere housekeeping measures — cleaning up the language and patching errors made in previous actions — or so-called "administration bills" which are relatively minor actions sought by state agencies.

An example will serve to illustrate: a law on the books requires that wreckers be equipped with amber lights to warn motorists. The change will require that the amber lights be turned on when towing a vehicle.

Pressure

Committee chairmen are under pressure from legislative leaders to keep moving rapidly. A deadline for local bills (measures needed by city or county governments and affecting particular locations rather than the entire state) has been set for mid-March, much to the dismay of some legislators who think more time is needed to see what needs to be done, and then move carefully to accomplish that.

There is general agreement that the state would be better served if legislators convened in January, organized, got acquainted, then returned to their homes until March when serious work would get underway.

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green suggested that, and pegged his idea to state revenue figures. After all, the main work is to hammer out a budget, and that must be founded on state income. Filing deadline for state income tax, the state's main revenue, is April 15. It takes three weeks to tabulate the figures and come up with firm information on how much money there is to work with.

Green's proposal was rejected immediately by Gov. Jim Hunt and HOUSE Speaker Carl Stewart. Most observers agree the rejection had as much to do with the source of the proposal as the merit of it.

BILL NOBLITT

Usually the opening weeks of a legislative session are devoted to leisurely committee sessions and much visiting as lawmakers learn the names of newcomers and get a feeling for where various people stand on significant matters which will be coming up.

This year there are 10 freshmen in the Senate, 30 in the House.

Meanwhile, the assembly is moving ahead under pressure to be finished early in May — about the same time the needed revenue figures become available.

Benefits

Early adjournment suits Gov. Hunt who will get his budget through essentially without change since the legislators won't have contradictory figures. Additionally, the governor knows that the less time legislators spend in town meddling in agency affairs and occupying the time and energies of agency chiefs, the better for him.

The rush suits those politicians who plan to run for higher offices in 1980, since it represents their concerns for less government and serves the public mood of cutting the costs of government. Additionally, early adjournment will clear the way for Speaker Stewart and Lt. Gov. Green to declare their intentions and launch campaigns for whatever post they will seek. Also important is the consideration that the less time the General Assembly spends in session, the less opportunity for either Green or Stewart to stub their political toes thereby injuring chances at higher office.

Still, among the rank and file there are rumblings of discontent and it is just as likely as not that the pace will change and the Legislature will move as past ones have — remaining in session till mid-summer rather than early May.

Battleground Is Chosen

WASHINGTON — Use any metaphor that comes to mind — the flung gauntlet, the toe in the sand, the chip on the shoulder. Senator Edward Kennedy is lusting for battle on the issue of national health insurance, and President Carter is asking for a fight on the containment of hospital costs. In this Congress, health care will be the biggest battleground of them all.

The two major actions will provide a test of the supposed conservative gains in the Congress. Ever since the November elections, we have been hearing about these gains. Members of the House who once were flaming liberals ran on campaigns of simmering moderation. On the Senate side, such moderates as Percy of Illinois, having been baptized in the waters of Proposition 13, emerged as born-again disciples of the new conservative religion.

The tests on health insurance and hospital costs go squarely to the heart of one's political philosophy. They pose a fundamental question: What is the properrole of government in a gree society?

To Senator Kennedy, comprehensive health care at government expense is a "right." He believes passionately — and his sincerity cannot be doubted — that essentially private medicine simply has not worked; it has not delivered a high level of medical care at a cost within reach of low-incmoe and middle-income families; a federal program, vaguely in the pattern of such programs in Canada or Great Britain, strikes him as the only workable answer.

When one asks the senator precisely how he would finance his program, or what its probable costs would be, the senator's attention tends to wander. Millions of American workers and their families now have comprehensive health insurance as a fringe benefit from their employers; it never has been clear what would happen to these contracts. Other millions of families arrange their own health and hospital insurance, buying coverage tailored to their individual needs. Under national health insurance, one plan would fit all.

To his credit, Mr. Carter has backed away from his own campaign pledge to pursue the same kind of comprehensive health insurance program that Senator Kennedy is urging. Mr. Carter has not backed away at all from his ill-advised bill to impose a ceiling on the annual rate of increase in hospital costs. In his State of the Union Address, he went out of his way to push this proposition anew.

No one doubts that hospital costs have increased at a dismaying pace in recent years, but the raw figures that Mr. Carter is so fond of using tell only a superficial story. Why is it that hospital expenses "have quadrupled in the last ten years"? Much of the increase is attributable to higher wage costs, and much of that increase, in turn, is attributable to the government's higher minimum wage. Higher food and fuel costs also are factors. But the most visible factor in rising hospital costs is the soaring cost of federal regulation.

Listen to the clear, cold voice of Dr. Edward S. Hyman of Louisiana, vice president of the American Council of Medical Staffs, in testimony to a Senate committee:

"The abnormal rise in the costs of private hospitals began with the featherbedding of personnel and the extra accounting required by Medicare. A hospital that has 12 technicians in the biochemistry laboratory to serve sick patients now has another 12 in the personnel office and 27 more employees in the catacombs of a Medicare office to serve sick paper. Each is paid a salary by the hospital. This costs money and it interferes with good medical care. While the nurse treats sick paper, an untrained aide treats the sick patient... At a little 17-patient hospital in Georgia, the business office has expanded from two to 11 persons since Medicare, and the flood of paperwork has added $11 a day to patient costs."

At the tag end of the 95th Congress last October, the Senate passed a watered-down version of Mr. Carter's original bill, but the House showed no enthusiasm for it. Given the changed political climate of the 96th Congress, it seems even less likely that a hospital cost containment bill or a national health insurance bill will make headway this time. What is more likely, unless I miss my guess, is that Congress will look at the appalling picture painted by Dr. Hyman and see that some surgery needs to be done.

Doubt Effort Impact

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The General Accounting Office, concluding that President Carter has no authority to withhold government contracts to force compliance with his anti-inflation campaign, is preparing legislation to give him that power.

But even if such authority is granted, GAO says, that element of Carter's fight against inflation is expected to have little impact.

Despite the laudable intentions behind the program, said Jerome H. Stolarow of GAO, the proposal "is primarily a psychological device to focus attention on the wage and

THE INSIDE REPORT

The Teng Fortune Cookie

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Handwringing by champions of U.S.-Soviet detente, in and out of the Carter administration over the theme of Teng Hsiao-ping's visit confirms the timely warning he trumpeted: be on guard!

In private meetings with President Carter and public utterances, Teng has exhorted Americans to stand up to the Soviet Union — especially in his Tuesday meetings with Congressman. His message then: Sign all the agreements with Moscow you want. But be resolute in facing Soviet "hegemonists"; that means you must act, not just talk.

That is dissonant language for the ears of Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and his principal adviser on Soviet affairs, Dr. Marshall Shulman, because it undercuts their global strategy: do not offend Moscow. That strategy is precisely why Teng feels a lecture for Americans on the menace of the polar bear is essential.

Thus is the first visit here of a Chinese communist leader filled with irony. The very diplomats, academicians and politicians who have clamored for ties with Peking for a generation are embarrassed by Teng's warning that the U.S.-Soviet cold war persists. Some of the very Carter administration officials who insisted on "normalization" want to gag Peking's anti-Soviet voice.

Nothing better illustrates this than the experience at Monday's state dinner of actress Shirley MacLaine, one of the legion of American visitors the past decade entranced by the totalitarian cadence of Maoist dictatorship. When she exclaimed delightedly about her experiences in China in 1973, she was hurried down the receiving line by Teng. Undismayed, Ms. MacLaine proceeded at the Kennedy Center gala to praise China's Maoist leaders now believed to be under house arrest at Teng's orders.

Teng's preference ran not to Shirley MacLaine or even such longtime crusaders for "normalization" as Harvard's Dr. John Fairbank, placed at the No. 1 table with Carter and Teng. It was only Sen. Henry M. Jackson, a Democrat long denigrated by the Shirley MacLaines of his party as a cold warrior, who received special attention and warmth from the Chinese leader in the White House receiving line.

Jackson had long and amicable talks with Teng in Peking in 1974 and 1978 (in between which Teng was purged by the Maoists), and he probably has a closer relationship with the vice premier than any other U.S. official. But beyond friendship, Teng's embrace of the Senate's most important critic of U.S.-Soviet detente was an intentional message.

One reason that message was necessary was that only a bland press statement, not an official communique putting forth a common front against Moscow, ended the Washington phase of Teng's visit. U.S. officials say the

"Ask not what your country can do for you, rather what you can do for your country." — John Kennedy

"You can't imagine the junk. . .the crap that public officials have to take." — The Honorable Rufus "He won't spoof us" Edmisten, N. C. Attorney General.

Since Mr. Edmisten's present staff is only stopping one percent of North Carolina's drug traffic, we can assume doubling his staff would stop two percent of the drug traffic in North Carolina.

Somehow the eloquence, and I suspect the ability, of public officials has gone to pot in recent years. May I suggest the Attorney General realign his priorities. In the future, spend more time fighting drug pushers and less time fighting small businessmen, e. g., Barlow in Barlow V. OSHA.

40 Years Ago Today

February 6, 1939

Official announcement was made today of the opening of the Nisbet-Proctor Men's Shop in the Mumford Building at Five Points.

A separate department has been added to the store previously operated by W. L. Nisbet and which carried only women's clothing. The new department will be devoted entirely to handling men's clothing at popular prices.

A ball at the Armory on February 17 will be the Service League's first public entertainment for the maintenance of the free bed space the League is providing at Pitt General Hospital. Thurston's Orchestra will furnish the music, and the ball promises to be a gala occasion.

It is hoped the public will manifest its interest in providing this particular hospitalization for the needy of the community by patronizing this entertainment liberally. The entire net proceeds from the ball will go for the maintenance of the hospital bed space, and as all other projects of the League at present, will be self-supporting.

Strength For Today

WHAT IS SUCCESS?

Great success in business, science and the professions usually seems to be achieved by those who give themselves to nothing but their work.

And yet we sometimes wonder if these successful people are really successful in the broadest sense of the term. Are they happy? Are they really getting much out of life? Are they beloved by their families and do they enjoy a wide circle of friends?

Occasionally we see a person who takes life very much as it comes, not paying a great deal of attention to success and yet who obviously has made a great success out of living. A poet has written about these people:

The world is wide
In time and tide,
And God is guide.
That man is blest
Who does his best
And leaves the rest,
And does not worry.

Demographics Foretell Future

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — You seldom hear them mentioned along with the other leading economic indicators, but demographics certainly are. In fact, their lead time is in years rather than months.

Take the baby boom of the years 1946 through 1964, during which 76.4 million babies were born, creating a child-centered society in which school costs soared and baby food companies thrived.

Before the end of the baby boom the population bulge was felt in entertainment, sports and adolescent rebellion, somewhat later in college and university enrollments, and then in the job market.

The impact continues, and to some extent it explains today's high housing prices and a continued boom in housing sales despite those prices and mortgage rates that now are well into double digits.

In the first issue of the magazine "American Demographics", Conrad Taeuber, a demographer, dispels such notions, forecasting the impact for decades ahead of the 46.5 million births between 1954 and 1964, the boom's peak.

In 1980 these people will be between 16 and 26 years old, and will furnish the last large classes of college undergraduates until their own children reach the same ages. Less than half will be married.

In 1990 most of them will have spouses and have children. They will have moved up from beginner work levels and be eligible for supervisory positions. About 40 percent will own their own homes.

In 2000, now between ages 36 and 46, about 68 percent will be home owners. Most will have had their last child. More of family income will go for food and clothing than at any other time of their lives.

In 2010 these babies of 19541964 will be at the peak of the earning and spending power. Most will not change jobs again. Health and personal care expenses will begin to rise.

Ten years later, in 2020, their household income should be falling, but if traditional criteria prevail, their personal care and recreation expenditures will rise. And 10 years later, most of them will be out of the labor force, dependent upon Social Security and savings.

Demographics goes into greater detail of course. It can foretell personnel bottlenecks in business, shortages of skilled help, demand for specific products, pressures on social services and the like.

It examines the characteristics of groups and foretells the likely impact. Taeuber observes, for example, that "the typical American baby is born with a car key in its mouth instead of the proverbial silver spoon."

South African Gold Keeps Oil Supplies Adequate

By JOHN EDLIN
Associated Press Writer

OHANNESBURG, South Af-a (AP) — South African omises of gold for oil are re-tedly keeping open vital sup-es cut this month by the untry's traditional oil sup-er, Iran.

South African salesmen-diplo-ats have been conferring se-etly with oil producing na-ns and multinational market-g giants in a bid to replace 90 rcent of the fuel imports pre-ously supplied by Iran.

And, according to government and industry sources, South Africa has averted an immediate fuel crisis by securing guarantees of oil shipments from undisclosed sources — among them virulent critics of the white minority government's race segregationist policies.

Officially, the government refuses to say where its oil is flowing from. But Western diplomats here believe that gold-for-fuel deals were struck with Saudi Arabia and other conservative Middle East states "at a high premium."

South Africa produces more than two thirds of the world's gold.

The replacement oil supplies come at higher than world prices.

Still, a special government commission set up this month to recommend ways of saving fuel and seeking fresh supplies seems likely to fall short of recommending fuel rationing.

Instead, according to industry sources, the commission is expected to urge voluntary conservation through reduced gas station hours, speed limits and industrial switches to other energy sources.

"Rationing would be a blow to morale, already at a low ebb," a South African newspaper editor who would not be identified said. He was referring to United Nations threats to impose economic boycotts on Africa's richest and most industrialized nation.

Such boycotts would inevitably include oil.

The oil bill is expected to burgeon this year, fueled by the latest oil producers' price increase, the extra "blackmail' prices South Africa says it must now pay on spot markets, and the country's desire to stockpile for emergencies provoked by the U.N. threat.

Third World and Communist nations in the U.N. have stepped up their demands for economic sanctions against South Africa because of its apartheid policies, decreeing racial separation.

Iran earlier this month heeded the call, announcing a halt of all oil shipments to South Africa at the same time as it said shipments to Israel would end. But while South Africa had traditionally imported most of its crude oil from Iran, it had already become accustomed to curtailed Iranian supplies during three months of strikes and civil unrest in that country. Already, tankers were arriving in South African ports from other countries.

"As long as crude oil fetches such a high price you will always have international jobbers," the independent daily Johannesburg Star said recently, referring to producers and marketing multinationals that might sell to the highest bidders.

Meanwhile, South Africa has stepped up its so-far fruitless search for offshore oil, hiring a second rig from the North Sea fields.

Figures for imports, reserves and expenditures for fuel are kept secret, but authoritative estimates of imports range from 350,000 to 400,000 barrels per day, at a total annual cost of $1.5 to $2.2 billion a year. South Africa is also known to have at least 18 months' worth of reserves stored in played-out mines.

But the country produces only about 10 percent of its oil needs — fuel converted from coal at a state-owned plant near Johannesburg.

Now the government plans two more such plants, and experts say that such plants can produce a third of the country's needs by 1984.

South African leaders are not so much worried that they won't be able to maintain supplies from abroad, as they are concerned that the cost will prune balance of payments surpluses, braking the economy.

But many South Africans like to point out that any major oil crisis would bring suffering to more people than the 4.3 million whites who wield political power over the voteless 19 million blacks.

They say critical shortages would disrupt foreign-owned businesses and industries, toss hundreds of thousands of South African blacks and migrant black workers from poor neighboring countries out of jobs, and damage the economies of landlocked Botswana, Lesotho, Swaziland, and Zambia, which rely on South Africa for fuel shipments.

"If we come under pressure," one oil company executive said, "we'd be fools not to pass those pressures onto client states."

Embattled Rhodesia, South Africa's northern neighbor, would also suffer. "Oil is the Achilles heel of Southern Africa," white Prime Minister Ian D. Smith said recently, following renewed U.N. demands for South Africa to stop sending fuel to that country. Rhodesia gets all of its oil from South Africa.

In addition to the oil, South Africa is losing large export sales to Iran — $115 million dollars worth last year. South African exporters, alarmed at the Tehran government's apparently hostile attitude, have lately halted shipments including 3,000 German-designed BMW cars worth $35 million, 1,500 tons of frozen chickens worth $1 million, and a shipload of flour and grain.

South Africa has one hold over Iran, whose traditional strong economic ties with South Africa date back to World War II, when the Iranian royal family stayed in exile here.

Iran has a 17.5 percent stake — worth millions of dollars — in a state-owned refinery for Iranian crude oil. And South Africa, which boasts it has never nationalized or seized shares in foreign-owned interests, has yet to decide the fate of the Iranian stake.

GOLD FOR OIL — Thousands of gold bars are checked in the South African Reserve bank in Pretoria by Marlene van Nierk. With the Shah of Iran out of power, oil shipments to South Africa have been halted. But South Africa is using its gold to keep oil flowing from sources it will not name. (AP Laserphoto)

Overwhelmed By Regulators

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Last onth, Gov. Jim Hunt asked e General Assembly to ange every state law on gulatory agencies. This onth, the members wish he dn't.

Legislators say the problem that more than 200 official ate commissions, boards, uncils and committees are atched to all the state's major ecutive agencies. Almost all e groups have something to with the regulation of prossions or government operions.

The idea of changing the laws regulatory agencies began ore than a year ago as an effrt to make sure the state nking Commission is not minated by the banking instry. Now lawmakers are ying to decide how to go bout that.

Many of the committees hich would be affected by Hunt's recommendation have ittle to do with pocketbook isues and nearly half could be ruled out because of their nature, according to Jack Cozort, Hunt's legal counsel.

"A lot are innocuous," Cozort said. "You're not going to have much conflict of interests on the state Arts Council or the Human Relations Council, but the question is, where do you draw the line? It's going to be tough to figure out."

In his State of the State address Jan. 15, Hunt proposed that legislators change the state's regulatory laws.

"Regulatory boards should have a majority of members without ties to the industry which is being regulated," Hunt said. "I urge this legislature to change every law on our books necessary to ensure this fairness and give careful attention to the recommendations of the Sunset Commission regarding licensing boards."

The state Governmental Evaluation Commission, known as the Sunset Commission, has been working for more than a year to determine not only whether such boards should exist but also whether their makeup is biased toward the industry or profession regulated.

Chinese made clear from the outset they normally do not issue communiques. If so, that practice evoked sighs of relief at the State Department.

Teng's visit has been dreaded in Foggy Bottom by Prof. Shulman and his followers who fear any provocation of the Kremlin might not only endanger the SALT II arms control pact but so disturb the Russians that they would further destabilize world order. Word seeped out of the State Department to beware of the charismatic Teng sucking us into the new Indochinese war.

As Teng arrived, State Department officials also leaked worries that a dozen Chinese divisions massed on the border might invade Vietnam. Actually, U.S. intelligence has no reason whatever to believe that troops brought up to the border following Vietnam's conquest of Cambodia meant anything more than a futile show of force.

Sen. George McGovern, typifying the longtime "normalizers" now appalled to find an anti-Soviet message in the Chinese fortune cookie, issued a gratuitous warning to Teng during the senatorial luncheon. Responding to McGovern's plea not to repeat "tragic" U.S. intervention in Vietnam, Teng replied: we do not intend intervention but are opposed to Hanoi's "provocations." He then reaffirmed Peking's intent to combat Soviet-sponsored "hegemony" in Southeast Asia.

Carter found no need to hector Teng on Indochina. Rather, their private discussions produced general agreement, except for SALT. Teng told the president his government did not object to SALT II but pointed out that three previous U.S.-Soviet arms control agreements had not prevented the phenomenal rise of Soviet military might. That viewpoint might not be far from national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski's.

Furthermore, there are officials in the administration who see danger in the Vance thesis, publicly sounded by the president, of keeping Washington equidistant between Moscow and Peking. That is the message brought here by Teng Hsiao-ping, causing such anguish for Sen. McGovern, Ms. MacLaine and their friends. It would better be taken as a signal that, for the U.S., it is later than we think.

price spiral."

While the congressional auditing agency was raising doubts Monday about one part of the president's effort against inflation, another portion of the program was winning a major endorsement.

The 650,000-member Communications Workers of America announced its approval of Carter's wage-insurance tax credit, proposed as an incentive for workers to hold their 1979 pay-raise demands to 7 percent or less.

Glenn E. Watts, president of the union, said Monday the executive board voted last week to support the plan, which is being considered by the House Ways and Means Committee.

The communications workers union, which represents many employees of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co., was the second major union to endorse the tax credit. The United Auto Workers gave its endorsement last week. The nation's biggest labor organization, the AFL-CIO, opposes the plan.

Rep. Fernand St. Germain, D-R.I., indicated he will offer legislation making clear that the president has authority to withhold large government contracts from companies that do not comply voluntarily with his wage and price guidelines.

At St. Germain's request, GAO General Counsel Milton J. Socolar told the House Government Operations subcommittee on commerce, consumer and monetary affairs that he will draft such a bill.

Farmville Bd. Meets Tonight

FARMVILLE — There will be a public pre-development hearing on the fiscal year 1980 town budget tonight at 7:30 p. m. during the monthly meeting of the Farmville Board of Commissioners.

Administrative reports will be given on federal Wage and Price guidelines, the budget development schedule, and the senior services coordinator program.

Unfinished business includes discussion of the Belcher Street realignment, sewer surcharge rates, a petition for speed bumps in the Pine Grove Apartments area, Community Development Program policies, and the scheduling of a planning retreat.

New business includes acceptance of the Clean Water grant for the Mandarin Drive sewer, authorization for finance department personnel increase, a maximum limit on residential sewer use charge; legislative matter and Congressional conference; scheduling a tax lien sale, a subdivision application from the F. M. Davis heirs on the Farmville Motors site; rezoning requests for the Farmville Motors new site and the W. R. Duke Jr. property on South Main Street; bid awards for a compact police vehicle, portable bleachers, and downtown landscaping; budget amendments for finance personnel and streets improvements, scheduling for special meetings for audit presentation and setting of board budget goals; and discussion of Planning Board attendance.

Applications may be obtained from the church office or by calling 756-5314.

Arrest Youth For Break-In

FARMVILLE — A Farmville youth has been charged with breaking and entering at the Norris Lewis Amoco Station on W. Wilson Street here early Saturday morning.

The arrest of Leslie Thomas Moore, 17, of Eason's Trailer Park took place Saturday night, Police Chief Ron Cooper said. About $10 in rolls of change were taken, he indicated.

Revival Series Now In Progress

Revival services are now in progress through Thursday at Soul Saving Station, Winterville, with guest speakers Evan, Willie and Violena Britt from Mona Chapel Holiness Church in Saratoga.

Church pastor, Elder Ella Prayer, invited the public to attend.

Safe And Truck Reported Stolen

FARMVILLE — Farmville authorities are searching for leads in the theft of a five-foot high safe and a two-ton truck here sometime after midnight Monday.

The safe, which held only records, and the flat bed truck with a hydraulic lift, probably used to load the safe, were taken from the FCX office on Fields Street here. Entry to the office was gained by forcing open a window, Farmville Police Chief Ron Cooper said.

April Ballot In Carteret

MOREHEAD CITY, N. C. (AP) — Carteret County voters will ballot in April on whether they want to legalize mixed drinks.

The five-member Carteret Board of County Commissioners voted unanimously Monday to hold a referendum and tentatively set the date for April 20. The commissioners acted after receiving petitions representing 20 percent of the county's registered voters.

Meanwhile, Vance County commissioners turned down a request Monday from a motel representative for a mixed drink referendum. Four of the five commissioners voted against holding a referendum and there was one abstention.

In Carteret County, Stoney Creech, executive director of the county chamber of commerce, said approval of mixed drinks could bring an untold amount of additional revenue to the resort area, which is being considered by the state as the site for a $3 million convention center.

State liquor laws require that mixed drink referendums be held separately from other elections, and Vance commissioner J. Timothy Pegram said this prompted him to vote against the request. He said he thought requiring a separate vote was unfair because voter turnout was usually small.

Two other commissioners said they regarded legalization of liquor by the drink as a breakdown in morals.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market drifted lower today, still weighed down by concern over energy prospects and inflation.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off more than 35 points in the last six trading days, was down another .96 at 823.02 by noontime today.

Losers outnumbered gainers by a 7-5 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said political upheaval in Iran, and the resulting cutoff of oil exports from that country, had prompted fears of increasing energy problems in the months ahead.

That in turn has helped stir up new inflation worries at a time when prices of a number of commodities — silver, gold and copper, for example — are on the rise.

Wall Street was bracing for more unpleasant news, meanwhile, when the government makes its monthly report on the trend of producer prices on Friday.

Among copper stocks, Kennecott was up ¾ at 24; Asarco ½ at 18⅛, and Phelps Dodge ⅞ at 26⅞.

The NYSE's composite index eased .02 to 54.99, and the American Stock Exchange market value index was off .02 at 157.97.

Volume on the Big Board came to 10.88 million shares at noontime, down from 12.01 million at the same point Monday.

property — not now in condition to be farmed — has been advertised for lease in the past and no offers were received.

Commissioners also instructed Gray to have the county's Johnston Street property — formerly occupied by the Department of Social Services — appraised with and without the building on the lot, prior to offering the property for sale.

Gray pointed out that the boiler, water coolers, air conditioning units and other items in the building would be removed before the property is sold at public auction.

The board also accepted the resignation of county planner Larry Hurlocker, effective February 16.

County Engineer Charles Holliday was named acting planner by Commissioners.

posed for construction off E. Third Street, was redesigned and the number of units increased from 50 to 60. New bids were taken on the project, resulting in a "more favorable construction cost," the report notes, "and the Authority is currently attempting to obtain Section Eight tax exempt bond financing."

According to the report, the Authority now has 642 units fully occupied. Some 43 percent of the tenants are elderly, disabled, or handicapped, while approximately 27 percent are full time working families who receive no public assistance.

In other business last night, Laney reported that he had received a letter of approval from the Department of Housing and Urban Development regarding changes in the mid-rise housing project for the elderly.

Laney said that Interstate Securities of Charlotte, which was looking for a buyer for the project bonds, has determined that the only way it can market the bonds is through a rated sale. He noted that a rated issuance will require additional time and paperwork and the Authority does not have that time.

New bids were taken for the project nearly six months ago, it was pointed out, and the contractors were asked to hold their bids until financing is worked out. Laney mentioned that while overall project costs have increased since the bids were taken, there are a number of deductions in the project specifications that could be made to get the package within the money.

The official said that in an effort to look into the possibility of marketing the bonds through an unrated issuance, he contacted several other bond underwriting companies that had expressed an interest in the project. An Atlanta firm, Jared, Mulcay & Co., sent a representative to Greenville to discuss the project and Laney said that the representative was optimistic the unrated sale could be made.

Laney said the Jared, Mulcay representative specializes in Section Eight financing and has had bond experience in several other projects, including one in North Carolina. Fewer prospects are available for marketing unrated bonds, it was noted, but the representative was optimistic that he could find a buyer, Laney added.

Commissioners agreed to have Laney pursue the matter with the Atlanta firm.

Sallye Streeter, director of tenant affairs, reported that all but five units were occupied at the end of January and rent averages included: N.C. 22-1 (Meadowbrook), $70.35; N.C. 22-2 (Kearney Park), $81.46; N.C. 22-3 (Moyewood), $84.20; N.C. 22-4 (Moyewood), $82.47; N.C. 22-5 (Hopkins Park), $61.15; and N.C. 22-6 (Newtown), $75.15; for an overall average of $76.92.

Laney said that the sale of the Authority's former central office site at 316 Roundtree Drive to Dr. Cyril Khanyile was completed during January.

A Missing Girl Sought

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston police and other officers are looking for an 18-year-old local girl missing since Sunday.

Chief Willie Rogers said Sylvia Bowers, of 120 East Main St. left her home about 3:30 p.m. Sunday, enroute to Mount Olive College where she is a student.

Rogers said Miss Bowers apparently never reached the school. Her car was found parked at the bus station in Robersonville, about 6:30 or 7 p.m. Monday.

The chief, who said Miss Bowers has a sister attending Mt. Olive College, reported investigators learned that the missing girl stopped at a Robersonville service station Sunday afternoon to have a radiator hose on her car repaired.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bowers. Her mother, Patsy, has served as chairman of the Martin County Board of Elections.

Elementary Schools To Be Subject Of Survey

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Visitation committees representing the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools are due in Greenville on Feb. 21 and 22 to conduct studies and surveys of each of the six elementary schools, the middle school, and the Central School Office.

In preparation for the visitation, each schools and the central office has prepared an extensive "Self- Study" document covering all fields of interest applicable to the total educational pattern.

At the informational meeting of the Greenville Board of Education Monday night, Director of Education Charles Ross noted "for the past two years, our staffs, interested persons in the community, and consultants in specialized fields have been at work preparing these studies in conjunction with accreditation."

Principals of each school also briefly spoke about their individual studies, stressing the goals hoped to be attained through the self-analysis process involved in the studies, and mentioning that shortcomings as well as strong points form an integral part of the document.

Typical of attitudes expressed by the principals in explaining the purposes of the studies was that of Dr. Eugene Piner, principal at Wahl-Coates: "I feel these studies are just the tip of the iceberg, a stepping stone, something essential at this time and place. I do not think these studies are an end in themselves."

The booklets cover policies, curriculum, facilities, staff make-up, and many other phases of internal structures and procedures.

The study for the Central Office also encompasses a history of Greenville, a history of public schools in Greenville, budget preparation, local government bodies, and other data directly and indirectly related to the city school system.

Because of the scope and the cost of publication of these documents, they have been printed in limited numbers.

Superintendent Glenn Cox said that any interested person will have access to these publications at the Central Office, 431 W. 5th Street, or at the office of the Chamber of Commerce.

MATRON CLUB MEETING

The Matron Club will meet with Miss Lucille Sharp Wednesday, Feb. 7, 8 p.m. All members are urged to attend.

Student Voter Status Upheld

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Supreme Court has struck down a ruling by a Superior Court judge that would have removed the names of more than 2,000 students at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill from the voter rolls in Orange County.

The court sent the case back to Orange County Superior Court Monday with guidelines for the judge and the Orange County Board of Elections for determining the eligibility of students to vote.

Judge James H. Pou Bailey issued an order last March 7 requiring the county elections board to check its voter rolls against UNC records and remove any full-time students whose hometowns were listed by the university as being out of the county. He held that a large number of students registered in Orange County were "not bona fide residents of Orange County."

State law generally requires a person to be a resident of a community for 30 days to be eligible to vote there.

The state Court of Appeals held delayed of Bailey's order on March 22 pending an appeal to the Supreme Court.

Justice James G. Exum said in Monday's ruling that a student should be considered a resident of his college town for voting purposes if he has "abandoned his prior home, has a present intention to make the college place his home, and intends to remain in the college town at least as long as he is a student there and until he requires a new (residence)."

The voter-registration issue went to court last February when a group known as the Orange Committee filed a complaint in Wake County Superior Court accusing the Orange County Board of Elections of allowing students who were not residents of the county to register and vote.

Will Track Defaulters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two private collection agencies enlisted by the government to track down $121 million in defaulted student loans will get to keep roughly one-third of the money they recover.

For the first time, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare has signed contracts with private bill collectors to track down 94,000 ex-students from the South and West who failed to repay their Guaranteed Student Loans for college or vocational school.

Payco-American Corp. of Milwaukee will go after 58,000 persons who owe $81 million in California, Arizona, Nevada and Hawaii. It will get to keep 32 to 44 percent of whatever it brings back.

Financial Collection Agencies of Bala-Cynwyd, Pa., will keep 27 percent of whatever it recovers from 36,000 persons who owe $40 million in Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Kentucky, Mississippi, Tennessee, North Carolina and South Carolina.

The two firms won competitive bids for the 18-month pilot project aimed at recovering about one-third of the defaulted Loans.

HEW boasts that its own in-house program has reduced the number of loans in default from 430,000 for $430 million last March to 348,000 for $407 million currently. The default rate has fallen from more than 13 percent to 10 percent.

National Service

WASHINGTON (AP) — A private group, saying that alarming numbers of American youth are unemployed and unoccupied, advanced today a proposal for voluntary, non-military national service for young men and women.

The young people could be put to work caring for the sick, tutoring low-achievement pupils and providing day care for children, said the Committee for the Study of National Service.

The group suggested a program involving a million or more young people for at least a full year after secondary or higher education. It suggested those taking part receive living expenses plus post-service benefits and estimated the program could be conducted at an annual cost of about $8,000 per person.

The report said national service could be a powerful force in meeting the needs of the nation and in strengthening the spirit of service.

"Today, little is asked of young people except that they be consumers of goods and services," it said. While noting that unemployment adds to the forces that encourage anti-social behavior, the report also said that "too many sons and daughters of the suburbs are drifting without purpose."

'Dream Budget' Given At Board Meet

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

A "dream" budget, a summary of the estimated school facility needs for the Greenville City Schools, was presented to members of the Greenville Board of Education on Monday night by Supt. Glenn Cox.

Cox prefaced the $8,657,500 facility budget by noting "this is in effect a study of all needs prepared at the request of Lacy M. Presnell, Jr., Director of the Division of School Planning for the state.

"Presnell requested this full items list in connection with the proposed $500 million statewide bond issue," Cox said, "so this summary in fact constitutes a dream budget."

Eight categories are listed in the summary. These are:

— Replacement of temporary facilities, $3,124,000— primarily consisting of the building of the second portion of the middle school which in turn would eliminate most mobile units in the system.

— Replacement of obsolete facilities, $1,200,000. This item is based on future plans to eventually replace Agnes Fullilove School.

— New or renovated facilities for exceptional children - no funds projected at this time.

— Accessibility for the handicapped, $48,000, with the largest single item for renovation of access to the library at Rose High.

— Renovations for energy conservation, $325,500. This item would cover conservation measures in existing facilities, such as dropping ceilings, installing different types of hot water systems, insulations, etc.

— New or renovated facilities for administration, maintenance, transportation and warehousing, $345,000. The basic facilities in this item would be the construction of an administrative building and a maintenance building.

— Other needs, $2,100,000. Two constructions would be entailed in this amount — a football stadium and an auditorium at Rose High.

Piano Student In Recital Tonight

Piano student Valerie Joan Wood, a senior in the School of Music, East Carolina University, will present her senior recital at 9 p.m. tonight in the A. J. Fletcher Music Center Recital Hall.

For her program, she has chosen Beethoven's "Adieu to the Piano;" two works by Chopin, "Waltz in b minor" and "Raindrop Prelude;" Debussy's "Clair de Lune;" and Howard Hanson's "Clog Dance."

The public is invited to attend and there is no admission charge.

Pirates Take On VCU For Second Time

Perry Suffers Hand Injury

Gaylord Perry, Cy Young Award winning pitcher of the San Diego Padres, suffered a four-inch cut on the heel of his right palm yesterday when he fell in his home near Williamston.

Perry was treated at Pitt Memorial Hospital for the injury, which was not believed serious. He is expected to report on time for spring training, which starts next week.

According to reports following the accident, Perry, while coming down the stairs in his house, stumbled, and reached out to right himself on a television set, bruising and cutting his hand in the act. The television screen or tube was not involved.

He was then transported to Greenville, where he entered the hospital about 5 p.m. and was treated by Dr. Kelly Wallace. According to Rick Gilstrap, associate director of the hospital, Perry was given an in-depth check to make sure that there were no nerve or ligament damages from the cut, and he was released between 8 and 9 p.m.

"There would appear to be no problem with the cut as far as his pitching is concerned," Gilstrap said.

Perry was the winningest pitcher in the National League last season and won the Cy Young Award for his efforts. He is the only man to have won the award in both the American and National Leagues.

East Carolina University's basketball Pirates return to the road Wednesday night, seeking to gain revenge for an earlier loss.

The Pirates will be in Richmond, Va., to face strong Virginia Commonwealth, in an 8 p.m. game in the Richmond Coliseum.

The two teams met earlier in Greenville, with Virginia Commonwealth taking an 85-83 overtime victory in the contest.

The Rams have a nine-game winning streak going into the game, not having lost since dropping two in a row, to Old Dominion, 70-68, and to St. Francis, 65-61, several weeks ago. The overtime win over the Pirates, actually, was their closest call during the nine-game streak.

Overall, Virginia Commonwealth is now 17-3.

The Pirates come into the game following a double overtime loss Saturday night to Old Dominion, 90-85, that snapped a three-game winning streak.

"We just missed too many free throws in the first half," Coach Larry Gillman said in retrospect. "And we didn't have the aggressiveness on offense that we had in the first half. Our defensive aggressiveness was okay in the second half, but we fell down on offense."

The Pirates shot less then 40 per cent in the second half, and Old Dominion hit on 50 per cent of their shots.

"Turnovers were also a key factor in the overtimes," Gillman added. "We had two key turnovers in both periods. On one of them, we were able to recover and get back in the game, but the other one cost us."

The Pirates were unable to get the ball inside during the second half, as Old Dominion played mostly a zone defense. "I don't think they went to the zone so much to try and stop us inside as they did to protect themselves due to the foul situation," Gillman said. "And our inside people just weren't looking for the ball as much as they did in the first half."

Gillman then said that the thing that bothers him the most of that teams like Old Dominion and VCU have 15 or 17 wins against only three or four losses, while the Pirates are now 9-11. "And I think we are just as good as they are," he said. "And it looks like they'll be going to postseason play, while we stay at home."

Gillman believes that the game at Richmond will be different from the one in Greenville. "I don't see any way they can shoot 66 per cent against us again. Their guards certainly can't have another night like they had then."

VCU, however, has been bolstered by the return of Penny Elliott, who missed the first ECU game with an injury. Elliott is the leading scorer for the Rams.

"We have a chance to make amends for some earlier losses, and to double up on some teams in the final weeks of the season," Gillman said. "Besides playing VCU, we've got another shot at Old Dominion and at Chattanooga, along with the chance to win another game over Georgia Tech and Wilmington."

The Pirates also play USC-Aiken and Notre Dame in the closing weeks of the year.

Golf Success Helped Nancy Lopez Grow Up

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — She was a little worried that the victories and the accompanying money and attention might spoil her. But Nancy Lopez says that her golf success in 1978 helped her grow up.

A year ago, Lopez was a 21-year-old rookie on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, looking for her first victory. She was a promising newcomer, certainly, but even she couldn't imagine the success that awaited her.

"I look back at everything that's happened to me in just one year and it's hard to believe," Lopez said. "I couldn't have dreamed it."

She became the tour's superstar in 1978, winning nine tournaments — five in a row — and $189,813. The victories and the earnings were women's golfing records, and at the end of the year, she received nearly every honor bestowed by the LPGA.

Lopez seems to have handled the fame and pressure in stride, appearing little changed by events of the past year.

"I consider myself very lucky," she said. "I'm very happy with the things that have happened to me. I grew up a lot; I had to in order to be able to handle everything happening so fast.

"I did well in golf, I married a wonderful man. I feel like if I were to die tomorrow, I'd still consider myself fortunate because I've done what I wanted to do."

Lopez married Tim Melton, a sportscaster from Harrisburg, Pa., last month. She said they realized her traveling on the tour would pose some problems, but added that her husband intended to join her at tournaments whenever possible.

"And, I'm not going to play in as many tournaments as I did last year," she said, although not specifiying how many events she planned to skip. "There are more important things to life than golf, and I'm determined to keep my priorities in order."

Lopez lost her opening match in last week's Triple Crown tournament to Silvia Bertolaccini, but won all her succeeding matches in the consolation bracket and earned $5,000.

She said she had been experiencing some tightness in the muscles of her arms, but added that it didn't seem to be affecting her play. She added, though, that she planned to visit Dr. Robert Kerlan, a noted sports physician, in the near future.

Lopez' father, Domingo, taught her to play golf, and frequently is in the gallery when she's playing.

"My dad's very happy with the way things have turned out," said Lopez. "He worked with me for a long time, and I'm happy to be able to repay some of that.

"He always had a lot of confidence in me, but even he's amazed I did so well so quickly."

Smith Trial In 2nd Run

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The attorney for former Baltimore Colts defensive end Bubba Smith told jurors in the retrial of Smith's $2.5 million suit against the National Football League that Smith was struck down at "the zenith of his career."

Smith filed suit against the league in 1974 after he ended his career because of a knee injury suffered in an exhibition game between the Colts and Pittsburgh Steelers at Tampa Stadium.

A six-member jury is hearing the retrial of the case before U.S. District Judge Ben Krentzman. A trial last year ended in a hung jury.

Smith's attorney, Tony Cunningham, said in his opening statement that Smith had a sizeable income reduced as a result of the injury, from which he never fully recovered.

Cunningham said, "He was at the zenith of his career and he was deprived of what he worked for all his life — to be the best and to be paid as the best."

Cunningham contended the NFL is reponsible because the former Michigan State All-America was injured when he slammed into a sideline marker. He said head linesman Ed Marion and Robert Laftra, a Tampa businessman holding the marker, were employees of the NFL and were responsible for the injury.

NFL attorney Dan Burton told jurors that the injury occurred on the field, and that players know and accept the risk of playing football.

Jurors will see filmed replays of the disputed play, in which former Colt safety Rick Volk intercepted a pass and Smith turned to block for his teammate. Smith stepped over Steeler Franco Harris, and the injury occurred immediately afterward.

Members of the 1972 Colts team involved will be called to testify during the trial, which is expected to last a week.

Lady Pirates Face Tar Heels

East Carolina's women's basketball team plays the first of four road games this week tonight in Chapel Hill against North Carolina. The return match with the Tar Heels, who beat ECU 78-73 three weeks ago, will be broadcast over WNCT-AM and FM. Game time is 7:30 p.m.

The Pirates, now 11-8 overall, have completed their official league schedule with a 5-2 mark, good for no worse than third seeding in the state tournament set for Feb. 22-24 in Boone.

Rosie Thompson continues to lead the Pirates and the state's women in scoring with a 23.8 average, and in rebounding with a 12.3 mark. She is also the state's top free throw shooter, making .764 of her attempts for the year.

In all, the Pirates send four double figures scorers into the fray against the Tar Heels. Gale Kerbaugh, closing in on the 1,000-point plateau for her career with 944, owns a 14.1 average, while Lydia Roundtree is at 12.9 and Marcia Girven stands at 11.6. Girven is the club's only other double figures rebounder at 10.3.

The Tar Heels, 12-10, are led in scoring by guard Linda Matthews at 14.6, followed closely by center Bernie McGlade at 13.5 and forward Cathy Shoemaker at 12.0. McGlade leads the team in rebounding at 9.6.

In the first meeting of the two teams this year, McGlade Matthews and Kelly Roche each scored 15 points and helped the Tar Heels break open a tight game in the closing minutes for the win. Thompson led all scorers with 27 points and also collected a game-high 15 rebounds.

The Pirates next play in the Winthrop Invitational Tournament in Rock Hill, S.C., opening against the College of Charleston Thursday. The next home game will be against Old Dominion, currently undefeated and the nation's number one team, Monday, Feb. 12.

Duke Starts Rush On First

NEW YORK (AP) — Notre Dame and Indiana State continue to run a fast-paced 1-2 in The Associated Press college basketball poll, with surging Duke coming on strong in the No. 3 spot.

The Irish held the lead today by a total of 33 points over the Sycamores, 1,036 to 1,003, with the help of 25 first-place ballots after posting victories last week over Brown, Xavier of Ohio and Dayton for a 15-2 record.

Indiana State, at 20-0 after decisions over New Mexico State and Tulsa, was given 20 votes for the top position this week by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Duke made the race more interesting, inching up to the leaders with 904 points. The Blue Devils were awarded seven votes for first after victories over Wake Forest and Maryland.

Notre Dame and Indiana State were named on all the voters' ballots. The Irish received nothing below a No. 6 ballot while the Sycamores were named as low as No. 9 on one ballot.

UCLA moved up one spot to No. 4 with 918 points, followed closely by Louisville in No. 5 with 874.

North Carolina dropped three spots to No. 6 after a loss to Furman, collecting 729 points. Syracuse was close behind in No. 7 with 718 points; Louisiana State moved up two places to No. 8 with 673 points, followed by Marquette, 619, and Michigan State, 498.

The Second Ten was headed by two Southwest Conference rivals — Texas A&M and Texas. Ohio State, ranked No. 7 last week, fell to No. 13 after a loss to Indiana.

Arkansas was No. 14, followed by Iowa, Alabama, Vanderbilt, Georgetown, Temple and Illinois.

Iowa, tied for leadership in the Big Ten, was the only new member of the Top Twenty this week. Maryland, No. 17 last week, dropped out after losses to Virginia and Duke.

The Top Twenty teams in The Associated Press college basketball poll, with first place votes in parentheses, season records and total points. Points based on 20 19 18 17 16 15 14 13 12 11 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1:

Ayden-Grifton Girls Seek To Wrap Up Championship Tonight

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

As the Eastern Carolina Conference enters the final week of the basketball season, both the boys' and girls' championships are ready to be settled. Ayden-Grifton's girls need a victory over Southwest Edgecombe to wrap up the regular season title tonight, while Farmville Central's boys can do the same with a win over Greene Central tomorrow night.

Southwest Edgecombe is the new kid on the block, having just entered the conference at the start of basketball season, and the Lady Cougars have shown they can compete by compiling a 12-2 league mark. Ayden-Grifton is on top of the stack at 13-1.

The Chargerettes are characterized by balanced offense and strong, pressure defense. "I'd say probably the strong point of the team is our defense," according to first-year coach Kathy Purvis. "We usually run a full-court pressure defense, and it forces a lot of turnovers for us."

Ayden-Grifton uses three basic defenses, Purvis said, full man-to-man and 2-2-1 zone and 3-1-1 halfcourt zone.

The top two players on the team are Shanda Brock and Mary Rowe, although neither is among the top scorers in the conference. In fact, the Chargerette scoring is so balanced that no one on the team is listed among the league's top 10 in scoring.

"Mary is my center. She helps out a lot on offense. Friday night, she scored 24 points. She works real well in the center." Rowe is a good shooter, fifth best in percentage in the league, and also averages over two assists per game.

Assists are where the unselfish Chargerettes excel. The entire starting five for Ayden-Grifton is ranked in the ECC's top 10 for assists, with Irene Lewis leading the way with an average of 4.5 per game.

Brock, along with leading the team in rebounding with an average of over eight per game, is one of the top defensive players on the team, Purvis said. She plays at one of the forward positions.

The two wing spots are taken by sisters Irene and Mary Lewis. Both have done well this season, their coach said. "Irene is a good defensive player and Marie works well on offense." Irene averages 7.7 rebounds per game.

Aretha Cannon is the point guard and she brings the group together, Purvis said. "She keeps the team going."

Southwest Edgecombe poses a big problem for the Chargerettes: Alphelia Jenkins. The Lady Cougar center leads the ECC in scoring, rebounding and foul shooting. "She is a real strong offensive player," according to Purvis.

"She is the biggest problem we will have. We had a hard time stopping her last time." She scored 19 points the first time the two teams met, a 47-40 Chargerette victory.

Jenkins plays well both inside and outside, Purvis said. "She started going to the outside against us, and that's where she got most of her points." She averages 22.3 points per game and 13.1 rebounds. She is hitting 73 per cent of her free throws.

As a team, the Lady Cougars are fast. "That was another one of our weaknesses when we played them—we're not as fast as we should be. They are good ballhandlers and move the ball really well."

Purvis expects a tight ballgame, "but a good one. I'd like to think that my team's favored."

The game will be played at Southwest Edgecombe, but Purvis feels the home court advantage is weakened some by the fact that the Lady Cougars have only been playing at the new gym for a week.

The Chargerettes' lone loss this season came at the hands of C. B. Aycock 50-48, a game that the Ayden-Grifton girls may have been looking past. "I think the girls took it a little too lightly. It went into two overtimes. We were down by 12 points with two minutes left and tied it, but we just waited too late to put it all together."

With just two games left in the regular season, the league is beginning to look toward next week's conference tournament. "I feel anybody can come up and win that," Purvis said. Along with Ayden-Grifton and Southwest Edgecombe, Conley is strong and Southern Nash is much-improved.

But Purvis is hoping for a replay of tonight's game. "I hope it will end up us and Southwest Edgecombe," she said.

NBA Set For Expansion Year

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Bring a few hundred basketball people together under one roof and something strange is bound to happen.

That's one way to explain the National Basketball Association's decision to begin the expansion process that is expected to add two clubs to the league by the 1980-81 season.

At a time when more than half the teams are experiencing attendance declines, when TV ratings are down for the second year in a row and when just about everyone involved in sports has a pet theory as to what is wrong with pro basketball, the NBA decided last weekend to expand to 24 teams.

Commissioner Larry O'Brien, announcing the Board of Governors' decision to begin processing expansion applications, emphasized that the league has not sought out new investors. "All the flow has been in the other direction, with people coming to us," said O'Brien. "What we are doing is responding to that interest."

What they also are doing is setting the stage for a one-shot windfall for the existing 22 teams, who would share in the expansion fee. Keeping that in mind, maybe the decision to expand at this time isn't as strange as it seems.

How much will a new franchise cost? O'Brien wouldn't even offer a guess.

When four teams were admitted from the dying American Basketball Association in June 1976, each paid $3.2 million. Inflation over the past three years pushes that figure to $4 million. The two new teams also have to be stocked with players, raising the cost more. And there's always the greed factor.

If the admission fee is $8 million — $2 million more than the last expansion team, New Orleans, paid to join the league in 1974 — each existing team would get nearly $750,000. If the fee is $11 million, each of the 22 clubs would get an even $1 million. Those are the kind of numbers that turn red ink into black.

And that, say the cynics, is why the NBA is talking expansion.

Formal applications already have been received from groups in Dallas and Minneapolis-St. Paul. There have been informal talks with groups from Miami and Toronto. O'Brien also mentioned Cincinnati, Pittsburgh and St. Louis as "cities that appear to have the greatest potential for success," although one Cincinnati official said the expansion talk caught him "completely off guard."

Washington Bullets Coach Dick Motta was participating in his first All-Star Game Sunday, when his East team lost to the West 134-129 before a record crowd of 31,745 in the Silverdome at Pontiac, Mich.

Motta described the All-Star Game as "a very sophisticated pickup game, sort of like the kind you play at the 'Y,' only at a much higher level."

Motta was handicapped because there were only three guards on his roster. In order to prevent that happening again, he suggested that in the future the coaches pick the reserves by position.

LSU Overcomes Vandy, Moves Into SEC Lead

By KEN RAPPOPORT

The Louisiana State basketball team showed Vanderbilt all the moves — and as a result, moved into first place in the Southeastern Conference race.

"We were just physically overpowered," said Vanderbilt Coach Wayne Dobbs after a 92-71 loss to eighth-ranked LSU in an SEC showdown game Monday night. "Tonight LSU was about as good as any team in the country and could go to the (NCAA's) final four if they play this well every night. They pulled every card out of the hat and couldn't do anything wrong."

DeWayne Scales and Lionel Green took the inside game away from the 17th-ranked Commodores, teaming for 41 points and 31 rebounds.

"I wouldn't know how to guard him," Dobbs said of Scales, who had 24 points and 10 rebounds. "You have to keep him away from the ball and we couldn't do that."

Elsewhere, top-ranked Notre Dame blasted Loyola of Chicago 84-66; fifth-ranked Louisville defeated Memphis State 103-82 and No. 16 Alabama stopped Georgia 67-59.

Vanderbilt led briefly in the early stages of the game with LSU, but the Tigers then outscored their SEC foes 12-2 to take an advantage they never relinquished. The Tigers built their lead to 20 points early in the second half, virtually locking up the contest.

Tracy Jackson came off the bench to score 18 points and lead Notre Dame past Loyola. The Irish never trailed in the game at South Bend, going ahead for good with 9:42 left in the first half.

Bobby Turner scored 23 points and Larry Williams added 16 as Louisville defeated Memphis State in a Metro Conference game. The victory was the Cardinals' 12th straight and 20th in 23 games.

Freshman Ken Johnson poured in 20 points and Reggie King contributed 18 as Alabama whipped Georgia. The Crimson Tide led by as many as 16 points in the game.

In other games, Steve Johnson's 33 points sparked Oregon State over Southern Cal 70-67; Wiley Peck scored 25 points as Mississippi State defeated Tennessee 90-84 in double overtime; John Johnson's 24 points powered Creighton to a 74-68 decision over Southern Illinois; Kyle Macy's 20 points led Kentucky over Mississippi 87-82; Pat Cummings poured in 23 points as Cincinnati whipped Georgia Tech 55-51 and North Texas State trounced Portland State 102-78 behind Jon Manning's 34 points.

Guard Greg Webb grabbed a game-high 12 rebounds and scored 16 points, leading New Mexico State past Tulsa 85-78; Colgate upset Army 77-75 in overtime as Dave Hargett scored 29 points; Carlyton Neverson put in 16 points to pace Pitt over Hawaii 71-53; John Schweiz provided the winning points with two free throws near the end as Richmond nipped Niagara 66-65 and Kevin King scored 20 points to pace UNC-Charlotte over Georgia State 90-69.

Winfred Reid and D.C. Smith combined for 33 points to lead East Tennessee State over Austin Peay 85-73; Mike Reese's free throw with 18 seconds remaining lifted Western Kentucky over Eastern Kentucky 78-77.

Parker Will Play

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — The man who negotiated Dave Parker's $6.7 million contract, making the hulking Pittsburgh outfielder the highest paid player in baseball, recognizes the intrinsic hazards in such a cushion of long-range security.

The biggest danger: Complacency and self-satisfaction. Why go out and break your neck now that you've got it on paper and in the bank?

"It might happen to some people but not to Dave," promised Tom Reich, a youngish, curly-haired Pittsburgh lawyer and ardent Pirates' fan who handles the business affairs of some 60 professional baseball and football athletes.

"If Dave made $2 million a year, he would tear through the wall at Three Rivers Stadium if he had to. He is that devoted to the game."

Parker, the National League's Most Valuable Player Award winner last season, and Ron Guidry, the New York Yankees' Cy Young Award winner, were in New York Monday to collect some additional ancillary loot. Each received tape machines as Baseball Magazine's Player of the Year in his respective league.

They are the two hottest commodities in the sport at the moment and, while strikingly different in size and personality, they share the same attitude toward the sport that has made them men not only of national reknown but also great wealth.

Guidry, for instance, is in a position to ask for renegotiation or extension of his contract, which expires after the 1981 season, but he is not rocking any boats.

"I figure I am pretty lucky," said the wiry, 151-pound left-hander who blew down the opposition while compiling a 25-3 regular season record and pitched his team to victory in the league playoffs and the World Series.

"I am not looking for any get-rich-quick or long-range contracts. I am 28 and have been in the major leagues only three years."

VMI Sets Pace, Walks Away With A Victory

By The Associated Press

VMI Coach Charlie Schmaus said his Keydets deliberately played a slow-down offense Monday night against Marshall because they "didn't want a running match against Marshall."

"We wanted to take our time, get the very best shots and make them work for everything they got," said Schmaus whose team walked off the court with a 63-58 Southern Conference basketball victory.

In other league action Monday, The Citadel defeaated Davidson 79-70 with the help of a clutch second-half performance by center Tom Slawson. East Tennessee State romped Austin Peay 85-73, and the University of Tennessee-Chattanooga defeated Western Carolinaa 73-70.

No Southern Conference team will see action tonight.

The Keydets, now 11-9 overall and 2-4 in the conference, took the lead for good at 50-49 on a John Goode layup. Goode added another bucket a minute later, at the 7:20 mark, and VMI went into a four-corner stall, forcing Marshall to foul.

Kelly Lombard was fouled three times down the stretch and converted each time on the 1-and-1.

VMI's Andy Kolesar led all scorers with 17 points. George Washington and Robert Price led Marshall with 15 points apiece.

"We shot poorly early in the game, but we still jumped to a seven-point lead" said Marshall Coach Stu Aberdeen. "After that, we played our way into a loss."

CIT 79, DAV 70

With a victory over Davidson under its belt, The Citadel has grabbed a share of the Southern Conference basketball lead. The Bulldogs now have a 6-2 conference record, the same as that of Furman.

The triumph also assured The Citadel of its first winning season since 1971 and left the Bulldogs undefeated at home this season.

The Wildcats were behind 40-31 at intermission, but managed to tie the game 52-52 with 12:14 left. But Davidson was plagued by fouls in the final minutes, as three Wildcat players fouled out.

John Gerdy led Davidson with 27 points, and Rick Swing scored 18 points for the Bulldogs.

ETSU 85, Aus Peay 73

Winfred Reid pumped in 17 points to lead East Tennessee State to its 12th win of the season in 20 tries.

D.C. Smith added 16 points, including a seven-foot jumper that gave the Buccaneers the lead for good at 19-18 with less than 10 minutes left in the first half.

The Governors had the lead 18-17 with 9:47 to go in the first half, but lost it when East Tennessee ran off eight unanswered points, including Smith's field goal.

Alfred Barney hit 13 of 14 field goal attempts and converted three of four three throws for 29 points for Austin Peay, now 6-14 overall.

UTC 73, WCU 70

With less than three and one-half minutes left in the game, junior guard Delta Brogden sank two free throws that netted a win for the University of Tennessee-Chattanooga over Western Carolina.

The shots followed Brogden's jumper with the Mocs trailing 64-61 to bring them within range of visiting Western Carolina. Forward James Jones paced Tennessee-Chattanooga with 16 points, followed by Brogden's 12 and Darryl Yarbrough's 10.

Junior High Basketball

MAURY — Chicod's girls took a 31-25 victory over Maury yesterday, but the Maury boys came back to defeat Chicod 35-32 in overtime.

Diann Roach paced the Chicod with 21 points and was the only girl in double figures. Taylor led the Maury boys with 10, while Eddie Roberson had 14 and Billy Roberson 14 for Chicod.

GRIFTON — Wellcome won a pair of games against Grifton yesterday, 30-12 in girls' play and 47-37 in the boys' game.

Tonya Hardison led all scorers with 14 points for the Wellcome girls. In the boys' game, Charles Harris had 16 and David Langley 10 for Wellcome, while Joey Kennedy had 10 for Grifton.

FARMVILLE — Farmville Middle School's boys routed Ayden 64-30 yesterday, while the Farmville girls also won, 31-28.

Billy Joyner paced Farmville with 14 points in the boys' game, while T. Anderson had 15 for Ayden. Ayden's L. Brown led all scorers with 23 in the girls' game, while Karen Dunn had 15 and Denise Baptist 12 for Farmville.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — SOTTED EMPEROR EMPTIED EMPIRE'S TILL.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: F equals I

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR WED., FEB. 7, 1979

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You are restless and nervous and need to calm yourself so you can attend to whatever duties require a more poised and collected attitude. You are faced with a number of basic problems but don't feel you are being imposed upon.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Handle correspondence and other communications and then get busy around your home, make improvements, etc. Drive with care. Study into new interests.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You have pressing financial matters which need immediate attention. Recheck reports and statements for possible errors.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Improve appearance and health and then out to the important activities that will advance your position in life. Show that you are clever in monetary matters.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A personal problem should be handled intelligently. Listen to what a good adviser has to suggest regarding friends.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A pal could be disappointing so take in your stride and keep busy at solving own problems. Plan how to make your routines work out more efficiently.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Handle a community problem wisely and then you can get at pressing personal affairs. Handle credit matters wisely. See good friends later.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Keep your focus on a new interest. Handle routines with a clear mind. This is not the right time for a trip you have in mind.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Pay bills first and then delve into progressive projects and make big headway. Don't neglect to do little errands for loved ones. Show affection for friends also.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Try to find out what partners expect of you and then carry through with needed work. A community matter is upsetting early but by evening it all works out fine. Study it well.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Handle odds and ends of work neatly and then be with partners to other interests. Take better care of health. Add to savings account.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Make plans for recreation early so that you can later get work done knowing that all is well arranged. Try to please mate too. Avoid a troublemaker.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Take care of home affairs before you go off for a good time with friends. Please kin first and then work on your finest talents and improve them. Dress well, dine well.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have an interest in anything of a mechanical nature and will love to work with the hands so be sure to give an education that will fit your progeny better for all such types of work. A family man or woman is definitely in this chart also and your progeny will be very adept in such spheres, build a good home for self, etc.

No Residuals For 'Our Gang' Years

By ROBERT McEWEN
Associated Press Writer

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Allen Hoskins says he has fond memories of playing Farina in "Our Gang" almost 50 years ago — but he hasn't any residuals.

"THE HORROR SHOW" — Actor Anthony Perkins, famed for his role as the psychotic killer in the movie "Psycho", will host a two-hour special on CBS-TV tonight dedicated to the horror film in all its gory glory titled, "The Horror Show: 60 Magical Years of Movie Monsters, Madmen and Other Creatures of the Night." (AP Laserphoto)

"I'm sick and tired of people thinking I get residuals," or payment for replays of the still-popular series, Hoskins said in a recent interview. "I haven't got no pot of money. I have never tried to trade off the name 'Farina.' I haven't done that — I don't do that."

Instead the 58-year-old Hoskins said he struggled through years of housepainting and dishwashing before landing his present job as public information officer for the Alameda County Chapter of the Association for Retarded Children.

Until three years ago, Hoskins said he concealed from friends that he had been Farina in the celebrated movie shorts. He knew his wife, Franzy, for more than six months before divulging his secret, and that was only "because I didn't want anyone else telling her."

Hoskins also refused all interviews and honors until agreeing in 1976 to accept an award from the Black Filmmakers Hall of Fame.

"I figured ... I owe it to them," he said.

But he recalls with fondness his days as Farina.

"The first black kid on the show was Sunshine Sammy. Then came Pineapple and his sister Mongo, then me, then Stymie and his brother Cotton, then Buckwheat," he said.

"The gang was unique, well-integrated, ahead of its time. There was nothing else to compare with it in its day. I'd fall in a bucket of feathers; a white kid would fall in a bucket of feathers."

But Hoskins ran into trouble when he outgrew his role and sought other jobs in the race-conscious Hollywood of the 1930s and '40s. He tried radio, but opportunities for black actors were limited.

During the McCarthy era, Hoskins was questioned by the House Un-American Activities Committee which found that as a teen-ager, he had attended dances sponsored by the Young Communist League and the Socialist Workers Party.

The committee took his passport and Hoskins was blacklisted. "But it didn't matter. I wasn't working anyway. But I didn't want to stick around and be another has-been. I wanted to do something."

Hoskins left Hollywood in 1952 and headed for the San Francisco Bay area. There he painted houses, washed dishes, "anything to make an honest buck," before entering a training program which led to a job as a psychiatric technician and eventually to his present position.

Recently he wrote and produced a radio documentary on the retarded children's group. "I'm finally getting a chance to work in radio," he said.

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

It pays to go to great lengths to keep the danger hand off lead. South, declarer at four hearts, found an unusual avoidance play to assure his contract.

North-South bid smoothly to their normal spot, although three no trump, with South declaring, would have been impregnable. North made a temporizing bid at his first turn because he had only three-card heart support, then jumped to game when South rebid his suit.

West led the top of his spade sequence, and declarer was quite content with his contract. At first glance it seemed that a diamond finesse would be required, and in view of West's overcall, the monarch was surely well placed. However, South looked deeper into the position and came up with a line that would guarantee the contract even if East held the king of diamonds.

On the queen of spades declarer followed with a low spade from dummy! He gave up a trick he did not need to lose, but was repaid with interest. West shifted to a diamond, but declarer was not about to be deflected from his plan. He took the ace of diamonds, cashed the ace of hearts and entered dummy by leading a low heart to the nine, drawing the opponents' trumps in the process.

With the scene set, declarer cashed the ace and king of spades, discarding his remaining diamond. Now he led the queen of diamonds. Had East followed with a low diamond, declarer intended discarding a club. West could win the king of diamonds, but the defenders would then be able to get only one club trick in addition to the two tricks they already had. When East covered the queen of diamonds with the king, declarer ruffed, crossed to dummy with a trump and cashed two high diamonds, discarding two clubs from his hand. The defenders' only other trick was the ace of clubs, so declarer scored five-odd.

Observe that if declarer wins the first spade and then relies on the diamond finesse, East's shift to the nine of clubs will permit the defenders to collect three club tricks for a one-trick set.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Cults May Face Inquiry

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress may look into the financial status of the Unification Church and some other groups claiming religious tax exemptions to determine whether tax laws are being violated, say two U.S. legislators.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., who co-chaired an unofficial hearing Monday into the growing cult movement in America, said afterwards, "We will be asking serious questions of the tax exempt status of Mr. Moon's wealth."

The Rev. Sun Myung Moon is the founder of the Unification Church, which has vast holdings in real estate, banks, and other businesses, including a New York-based newspaper, "News World."

Rep. Richard Ottinger, D-N.Y., the other co-chairman of the hearing, agreed that Congress must get "into the fine lines" of what and what is not a bonafide tax-exempt religious group.

Dole, ranking Republican on the Senate Finance Committee, is urging the chairman, Russell B. Long, D-La., to delve into the tax-exempt status of some controversial organizations which claim tax exemptions on religious grounds.

At the hearing Monday, several church leaders asked Congress to be cautious when stepping into matters of religious beliefs and church affairs.

Radio Moscow Gets An Outlet In Illinois

By MICHAEL PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — The manager of WSDR, who wants to broadcast tapes supplied by Radio Moscow, says he's "overjoyed" by the government's ruling that his small-town radio station does not have to register as a foreign agent.

"I'm glad the Justice Department decided in our favor. We saw a real possibility of getting involved in a basic First Amendment conflict over this thing," said station manager Carey Davis in a telephone interview Monday.

Station WSDR, located in Sterling, Ill., a town of about 16,000 people 100 miles west of Chicago, received a letter in December from Radio Moscow offering free use of the tapes and it accepted, Davis said.

Then Broadcast magazine informed the station of a conflict in federal laws, Davis said, and "we wrote the Justice Department asking them to rule in our favor."

The Foreign Agents Registration Act of 1938 requires anyone airing tapes from the Soviet Union to register with the government as a foreign agent, but the Communications Act of 1934 says foreign agents cannot hold radio licenses in the United States, Davis said.

The station would have had to choose between the tapes and its license if the Justice Department had ruled against it, he said.

In a letter to WSDR's lawyers, the Justice Department said the station has no obligation to register as a foreign agent although "based on the description of the programming you furnished, it appears that much of the material would fall within the definition of political propaganda."

Joel S. Lisker, head of the department's foreign agents registration office, said the station is not a foreign agent as defined by the law because it plans to exercise control over what will be broadcast and because it will not be paid to broadcast the tapes.

The 10 Radio Moscow tapes received by WSDR include political commentary by top Soviet commentators, a question-and-answer program "similar to Ann Landers' column," book reviews, folk music, and commentary on art, music, science and technology, Davis said.

"We're a hometown-oriented station in the heart of a very conservative area. We want to give people a chance to hear what the other side is saying," said Davis.

"We just thought this might be an interesting thing to do. We had no idea it was going to become big news," he added. "Listener response to this thing has just been tremendous."

A recent Washington Post article quoted a Soviet official as saying Radio Moscow has sent tapes to about 400 U.S. radio stations, Davis said. The same article quotes a federal official as saying only a few small stations, mostly at colleges, have aired the tapes, he added.

Giving Recital At Greensboro

GREENSBORO — Christi Hearne of Greenville will hold her junior clarinet recital Saturday, Feb. 10, at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Miss Hearne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Walter Hearne of 107 Greenbriar Dr., Greenville, is a music education major at UNC-G. A Katharine Smith Reynolds Scholar at the University, she is a member and officeholder in Mu Phi Epsilon, international honor society in music.

The J. H. Rose High School graduate is a former Governor's School student and a member of the National Honor Society.

The recital will begin at 6:30 p.m. in the Recital Hall of the Music Building on campus. The public is invited.

NATALIE'S DAY — Singer Natalie Cole, left, and her mother, Maria Cole, widow of the late singer Nat "King" Cole, show off the star presented to Natalie Monday after being honored in Hollywood's Walk of Fame. Her father's stars, (two, one for television and the other for recording) were placed in the walk in 1961. This is the first time that a father and daughter have had stars placed in the Walk of Fame. Musical Parody Results In Suit

NEW YORK (AP) — A musical parody on NBC television's popular "Saturday Night Live" program has prompted a $350,000 damage suit, claiming copyright infringement.

Elsmere Music Inc., publisher of the song "I Love New York," filed suit Monday, claiming the words "I Love Sodom" were substituted in unauthorized performances of the tune on the program's May 30 show, which was later rerun.

Thousands Of Children Lacking Immunization

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A state survey shows that thousands of North Carolina students are not protected against polio, measles, German measles, tetanus, whooping cough and diphtheria.

"In some school systems, more than 30 percent of the student immunization records did not show a date of measles immunization," said Frank Lewis, head of the state immunization program that prepared the survey. "More than 50 percent in some high school grades were apparently susceptible.

Lewis called the results frightening.

State law requires immunization against all the diseases before a child is admitted to school, but some diseases were added to the law after some of today's older students started school.

The survey involved school records of 4,359 randomly selected students from across the state in grades five through eleven.

The survey showed, for example, that one out every five eleventh-graders had no protection from tetanus or diphtheria. Lewis said that is unacceptable, adding "even in modern day America, two out of three tetanus victims die."

Diphtheria is a bacterial infection that begins with a sore throat and fever and often invades the heart. The death rate is between 10 and 30 percent. Tetanus, or lock jaw, is a bacterial infection that usually follows a wound.

Overall, 10.9 percent of students had never been immunized against either disease. And 20.1 percent overall and 31.1 percent of 11th graders were unprotected or inadequately protected from polio.

The survey also showed that 30 percent of the students never had the German measles vaccine.

When all the vaccines are adeed together only 46.7 percent of the state's 11th graders met requirements.

Doctor J.N. MacCormack, head of the Communicable Disease Branch of the state's Division of Health Services, said percentages that low create a "ripe situation for an outbreak."

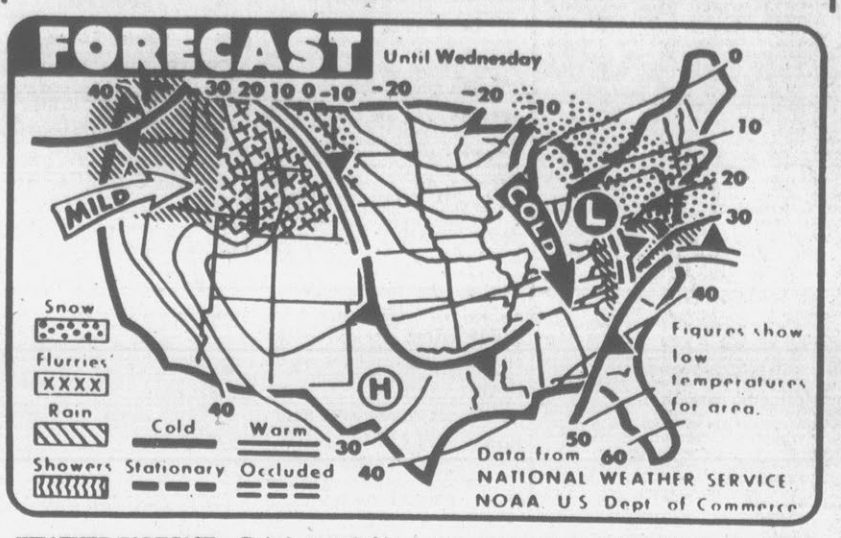
How's The Weather?



WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is expected in the forecast period until Wednesday morning for the Northwest, changing to snow over the northern Rockies that will extend into the northern Plains. Snow is due for the Northeast.

The southern half of the nation will be mostly sunny. Cold weather is forecast except for the Pacific Northwest which will have milder temperatures. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

A winter storm warning has been issued for inland North Carolina, effective late today and tonight and covering the mountains, foothills, Piedmont and coastal plain.

A storm working its way northeastward from the Gulf of Mexico was expected to deliver a mixture of snow, sleet, freezing rain, and rain to North Carolina with snow beginning in the mountains by this evening.

The mountains can expect its snow to be mixed with freezing rain, while elsewhere the forecast calls for freezing rain possibly beginning as sleet or snow tonight.

Along the coast, the precipitation is expected to be in the form of rain although it could begin as freezing rain across the northern coastal area early tonight.

The freezing rain will change to rain across the foothills, Piedmont and coastal plain Wednesday as the storm moves through the state northeastward into Virginia.

Temperatures in the 20s were reported this morning, reaching lows of 20 at Greensboro, 21 at Rocky Mount, 23 at Raleigh, Elizabeth City and Asheville, 25 at Fayetteville, and 27 at Jacksonville, Goldsboro and Wilmington.

Temperatures today were expected to get no higher than the 20s and 30s in the mountains and range to the 40s on the coast.

The range is expected to be about the same tonight and again Wednesday although it may warm up a little more on the coast Wednesday.

The outlook is for fair and cold Thursday with a chance of rain Friday and Saturday, accompanied by a warming trend.

Speaker Advises A Press Law

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — House Speaker Carl Stewart, citing a "tightening noose" around the press, says North Carolina needs a state law protecting news organizations from searches by police.

Stewart said the press "has something to fear," in the trend of recent decisions by the U.S. Supreme Court, particularly the case involving the Stanford University daily newspaper in which a police search of the newsroom was upheld.

"We need a state act speaking directly to the holding" in that case, Stewart said in a speech to the Society of Professional Journalists Monday night.

Stewart did not elaborate on the proposal, but said passage of a state law would be "a proper response" to the Supreme Court's decision in the Stanford case.

Acknowledging an "inclination" to run for lieutenant governor in 1980, Stewart also told the group he would likely make an announcement about seeking another office this fall.

Stewart, a Gastonia Democrat serving his second term as speaker, said he has not ruled out running for an office other than lieutenant governor, including a possible challenge of Gov. Jim Hunt.

And Stewart said he would not shy away from running for lieutenant governor if the incumbent, Jimmy Green, should seek re-election.

"It wouldn't really bother me one way or another whether the present lieutenant governor sought re-election," Stewart said.

A member of the House since 1967, Stewart has already said he will not seek re-election to his House seat next year, and he ruled out running for a state Senate seat Monday.

Beyond that, "I wouldn't rule anything out," Stewart said. But he added that a congressional seat, or the seat of U.S. Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., who will be up for re-election in 1980, does not interest him as much as a state office.

"I'm really not interested in going to Washington. If I have any expertise, it is in state government," he said. "My present inclination is to stay on track, toward lieutenant governor."

Stewart, who backed a resolution calling for a constitutional convention to order a balanced budget, said he did not believe a convention would ever be held. North Carolina's General Assembly approved the resolution last month.

Although 24 of the needed 34 states have called for a convention, there are legal disputes over some of the resolutions. Stewart said he believed Congress and the courts would delay a convention for as much as 10 years, but the message sent with the resolution could spur Congress to act to balance the federal budget on its own.

Stewart also said he was seriouis about a push to have the current General Assembly session adjourn by mid-May.

"I know you don't believe me when I say we're going to be out of here by May 10. But we're going to be out of here by May 10," Stewart said.

Choir Concert On February 11

The Interdenominational Youth for Christ Fellowship Choir of Winston-Salem State University will be in concert at Little Creek Free Will Baptist Church on Sunday, Feb. 11 at 4 p.m.

The church pastor, Elder J. L. Wilson, invited the public to attend the concert. Little Creek Free Will Baptist Church is located on Highway 102-903 five west of Ayden.

Awaits A Surge In Unionization

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Three years ago, state AFL-CIO President Wilbur Hobby said public workers in North Carolina were ready for a big surge in unionization.

"It's gonna bust right in on us," Hobby said.

But the state law prohibiting collective bargaining with public employees still stands and a surge of public employees clamoring to join unions has not developed.

North Carolina has been a tough state for unions to get a foothold in for two reasons. The state's right-to-work law says workers do not have to belong to a union to get a job or keep it, and North Carolina is the only state that specifically forbids collective bargaining with public employees.

The one exception has been the state Ports Authority, which has bargained and signed a union contract with the International Longshoremen's Association.

The state recognized the union after a federal court ruled in 1974 that dock workers were covered by the National Railway Labor Act because the ports use railroads.

North Carolina's level of industrial unionization is about 7 percent, the lowest percentage in the nation.

James French, director of personnel and employee relations for the state League of Municipalities, said union interest among public workers has remained "stable." The league opposes public employee unions.

French said one way to keep unionizing activities to a minimum in the state is to improve personnel practices and policies. He said pay and benefits for public employees have improved "maybe to the point they feel they can get along without a union."

But union leaders say they see a growing discontent among public employees.

"I think these people have gotten to the point where they're somewhat frustrated," said R.V. Durham, president of Teamsters' Local 390 in Greensboro, which is talking with Winston-Salem police.

"If people don't recognize the problem, the lid's gonna blow off one of these days."

Braille Course Begins Feb. 11

Fundamentals of Braille will be taught in an eight-session course taught through the East Carolina University Division of Continuing Education Feb. 22 through Apr. 19 from 7 to 9 p. m.

Teaching the course will be Robert R. Gotwals Jr., a Braille transcriber with 15 years experience. Persons completing the course should be able to produce reading materials in Braille and interpret blind persons' written materials. Materials to be used include a slate, stylus, eraser and paper. Tuition is $20 and materials should cost about $11.

The class will meet in the Media Center Conference Room of Joyner Library on the ECU campus. Registration forms may be obtained from the ECU Division of Continuing Education.

Erred In Time For Oil Class

The time for an oil painting for young people class to be held at the Elm Street Recreation Center was incorrectly reported last week.

The time of the class is from 7 to 10 p. m. Tuesday evenings, rather than Tuesday afternoons as was reported. The class is being taught by Mrs. Betty Rodabaugh of Greenville.

Served As N.C. Senate Page

AYDEN — Maria L. Jones served as a page in the North Carolina Senate last week.

She was sponsored by Senator James Harrell Edwards, of District No. 24, Granite Falls, originally of Rt. 2, Ayden.

Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Jesse B. Jones of Rt. 2, Ayden. Maria is a student at D. H. Conley High School.

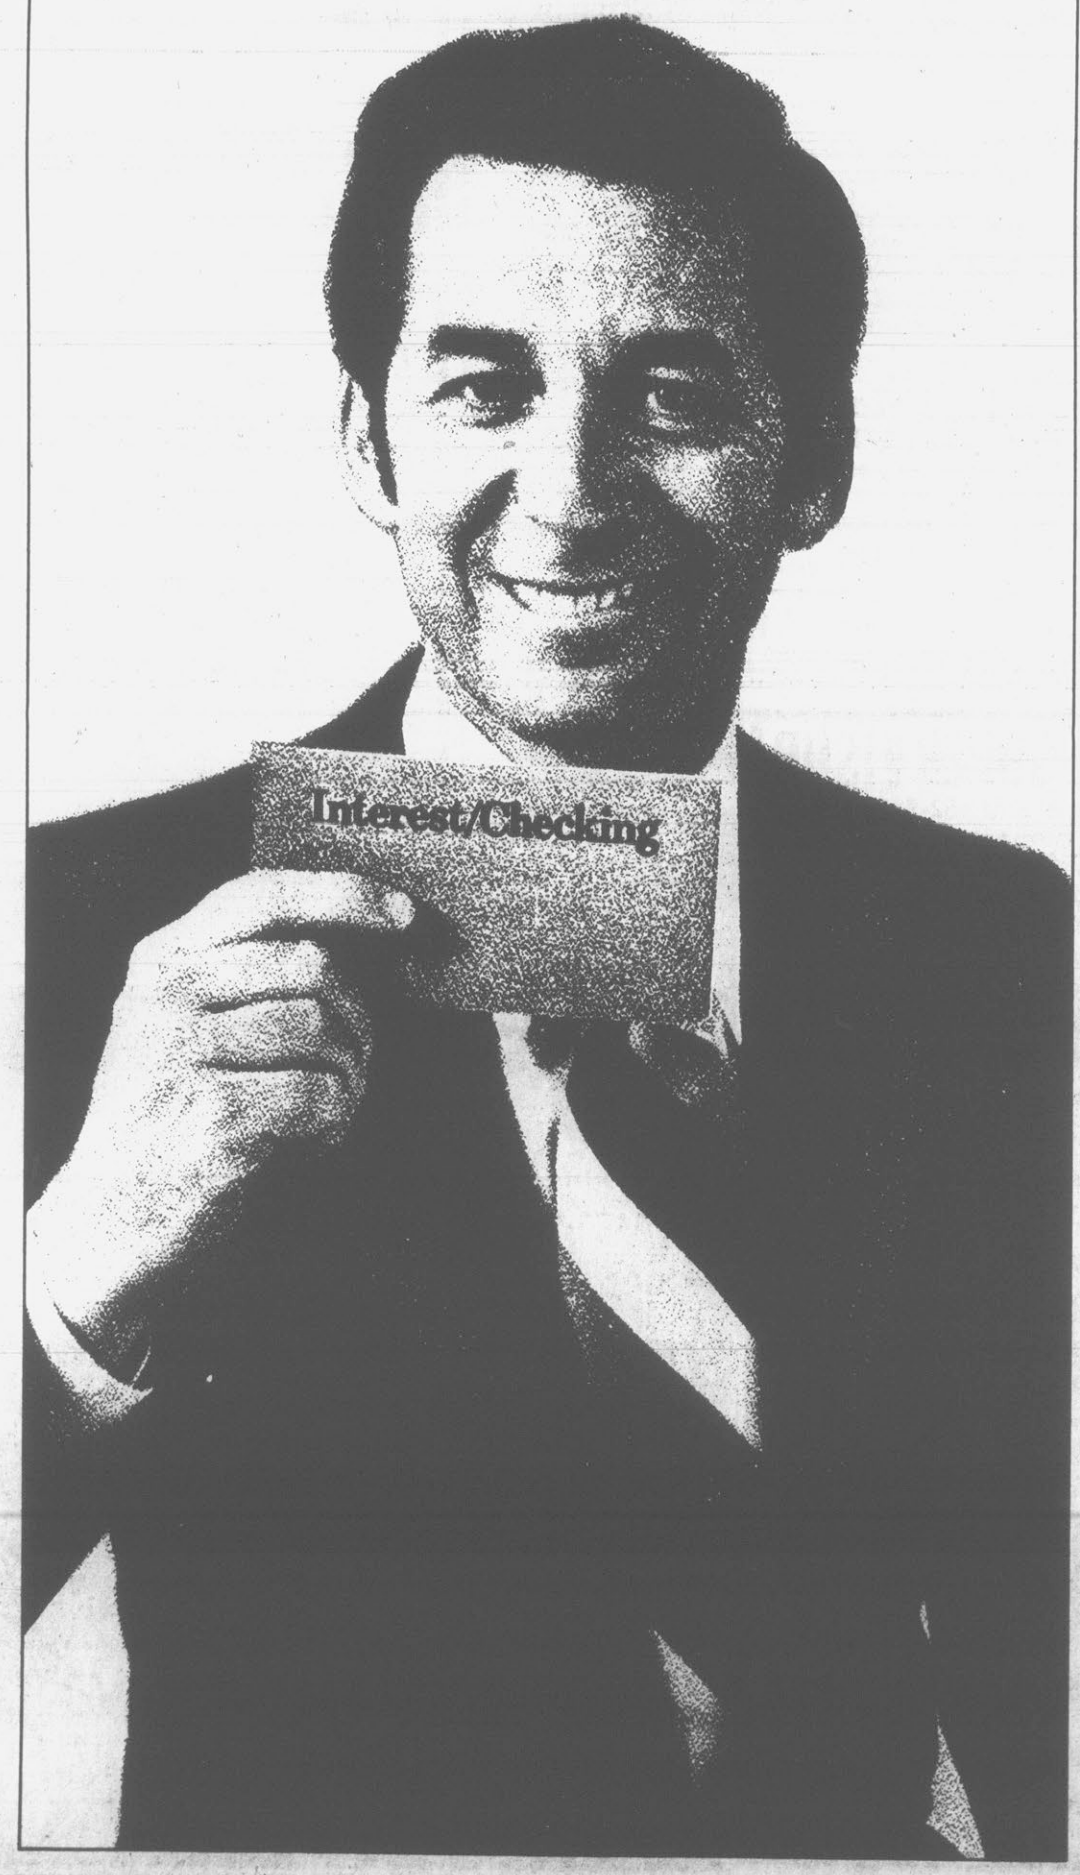
Now you can earn interest on all the money you have in the bank.



Wachovia Interest/Checking℠ is here.

How much money do you deposit in your checking account each year? For many people, it's a substantial amount.

Now, Wachovia introduces a new kind of service that makes it possible for you to earn interest on that money — and still enjoy the convenience of writing checks as usual.

We call it Interest/Checking.℠ And it works like this. Your checking account deposits go into a special interest paying account. As you write checks, we transfer your money from this account to cover them.

Here's What You Can Earn With Interest/Checking℠

Average Monthly Balance	Your Monthly Interest Earnings
$2500	$10.29
$2000	$ 8.24
$1500	$ 6.17
$1000	$ 4.12
$ 500	$ 2.05

Based on a 30-day month.

Keep $1,000 In Your Account And Pay No Service Charges

Lowest Balance In Your Account	Your Monthly Service Charge
$2500 or more	None
$2000 to $2499	None
$1500 to $1999	None
$1000 to $1499	None
$0 to $999	$2.00 plus .15 per check/item paid

Of course, Interest/Checking is optional. If you do not choose to apply for it, you may continue with any Wachovia Checking Account you now have, including Free Way. And whether you choose Interest/Checking or not, your regular Wachovia Passbook Savings Account will remain unchanged.

Is Interest/Checking for you? Your Personal Banker can help you decide. Stop by any Wachovia office and we'll be glad to tell you more.

(We regret that because of government regulations we cannot offer Interest/Checking to any business or organization. It is for personal accounts only.)
