98TH YEAR NO. 35

PRICE 15 CENTS

Wholesale Prices Jumped 1.3 Percent

By MICHAEL DOAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices, spurred by soaring prices for beef and veal, rose by 1.3 percent in January — the biggest monthly increase in four years, the Labor Department reported today.

The report means consumers can expect hefty increases in grocery prices in the next few months.

Last month alone, wholesale beef and veal prices rose 13 percent, the department said. That was equal to about half the beef and veal increases in all of 1978.

Wholesale price boosts last month were widespread and included sharp gains in gasoline, fuel oil, cosmetics, tobacco, autos, tires, machinery and a variety of other products.

Not since November 1974, when the increase was 1.8 percent, have wholesale prices risen so rapidly in one month. Those prices usually are harbingers of trends in retail prices.

Last November and December, wholesale prices were climbing rapidly but at a slower rate of 0.8 percent. If the January increase continued for a year, the rate would be more than 16 percent.

The report was a not-unexpected disappointment to the Carter administration, which is soliciting help from consumers in its anti-inflation fight.

Alfred Kahn, director of President Carter's four-monthhold anti-inflation program, said Thursday. "We have to depend on alert consumers to monitor prices." He suggested that consumers demand explanations from retailers for stiff price boosts that seem unjustified, and that they refuse to buy products that seem to be overpriced.

The administration has cautioned that results of its program to curb wage and price increases probably will not become evident until late spring or summer.

Council Moving Toward April Bond Referendum

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The City Council last night approved resolutions providing for the adoption of orders authorizing $24 million in utilities bonds and scheduled a special referendum on the bonds for April 3.

Charles Horne, director of Greenville Utilities, said the bond program is needed to handle the growth that has taken place here in the last ten years and the growth that is continuing.

Horne noted the city has reached peak capacity of its water facilities and the $14 million in water bonds is proposed to help fund a new water treatment plant north of the river.

Citing also the need for a new waste water treatment facility, Horne said that the present system is operating at peak capacity. A $5 million sanitary sewer bond program is proposed, it was mentioned.

Additional electric transmission lines needed to improve the electrical distribution system will be funded through the $5 million electric system bonds.

Horne, mentioning that state and federal grant money is being sought to supplement the bonds, said that the city has few alternatives to upgrading the facilities if continued growth is expected. He said that the program will involve general obligation bonds.

The Council conducted a public hearing on the city's final year of Community Development discretionary funding. It was pointed out that Greenville is applying for some $660,000 for the next fiscal year.

Mayor Percy Cox cited the need for the funds to be used for things that could not be funded through other avenues. The money, he added, can be used for such things as streets, sidewalks, lighting and other community improvement projects.

Citizens appearing during the public hearing reiterated many of the requests and suggestions for use of the money that had been expressed at earlier hearings and neighborhood meetings.

Among the requests were funding for: tennis courts and recreation center at Greenfield Terrace; neighborhood park and construction of a community building in West Meadowbrook; playground equipment for Sadie Sautter School and curb, gutter and paving of Spruce Street from Watauga Avenue to Line Avenue and Higgs Street from Spruce to Murtle Avenue.

Improvements to existing lighting in the Lincoln Park area; construction of sidewalks and paving of Contentnea Street from Colonial Avenue to the school maintenance facility in Riverdale; installation of storm drainage line on Chestnut Street from Columbia Avenue to 14th Street; traffic signalization at 14th and Fleming Streets; sidewalk construction in the CD area.

Utility improvements in Southside; renovation and staffing of the community building in East Meadowbrook; additional lights in the area between Dickinson Avenue and Chestnut Streets, on McDowell Street, and on Fifth Street near the old Epes High football field; alcoholism education funds; sidewalks in the area of Third Street School and more lighting in the area; and the reopening of the Moyewood Center as a community facility rather than a day care center.

The Moyewood request generated the most public expression at the hearing as several residents requested Council consideration in returning the facility to the community, especially black citizens, for use.

Mildred Council contended that adequate facilities are not available now for community services and she recalled that prior to the city's discontinuance of the community service program at Moyewood, the facility was heavily used.

It was pointed out that since day care is only a service that involves day time use of the facility, the possibility of using the facility for multi purposes, including night use for other programs, should be considered.

Mayor Percy Cox informed the spokesmen that the city turned the operation of the facility over to the county and the city had no way of becoming involved.

Donovan Phillips said that where the Moyewood facility was once multi-purpose, it is not being used at night now. He asked that the Council "for once...listen to the community" rather than just deciding for the community.

Council member Mrs. Mildred McGrath said that money is available now to utilize local schools for community facilities.

Ed Carter, a member of the city school board, said that he knew of a number of instances where school principals discouraged use of their facilities. He said there are no assurances that if funds are secured, the schools would be available.

John Day asked if the city would use CD funds for the preservation of the some of the historic homes in the city, particularly the Humber house on Fifth Street.

Cox said that the city will study the requests and place items that could not be undertaken through other means on the top of the priority list.

In other business on a lengthy agenda, the Council

Subsidy Brawl

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A state representative and 12 other persons were arrested after a brawl broke out during a City Council discussion about how to divvy up $4 million in federal subsidies.

Desks and chairs were overturned during the fracas Thursday morning, police swung nightsticks, a demonstrator hit one officer on the head with a walking cane and Council President George Schwartz called for order through a borrowed bullhorn.

The demonstrators were protesting the awarding of federal Community Development money, claiming certain city neighborhoods perpetually are neglected.

Thirteen demonstrators, including state Rep. T. Milton Street, D-Philadelphia, and two sons of Council member Lucien Blackwell were arrested and released on their own recognizance.

Dr. Herbert Hadley, chairman of the committee, said that the members held no malice toward anyone and had no axes to grind in seeking autonomy for the rescue

Snow Covers State

By The Associated Press

A winter storm blanketed the state with snow today from the mountains to the coast for the second time this week.

Snow started falling in the mountains about 6 a.m. and had spread into the Piedmont and Triad areas an hour later. Northeast and coastal counties were reporting snow by midmorning.

The National Weather Service had predicted accumulations of one inch east of the mountains. But by mid-morning the weather service changed the forecast to one to three inches. Heavy snow warnings were posted for the northwest mountains, where 14 inches of snow fell Tuesday night and Wednesday.

Travelers advisories were in effect across the state, with schools closing early in many areas. Some schools were already closed because of the snow earlier in the week.

The Piedmont and Triad areas reported wind-driven snow and reduced visibility this morning. Chapel Hill and Durham had accumulations of more than one inch of snow at mid-morning, with snow still falling, while Winston-Salem reported only snow flurries with no accumulation.

A deep cold front was expected to move through the state behind the snow, sending temperatures plummeting into the low teens in most areas of the state and around the zero mark in the mountains.

Skies were expected to clear by afternoon. Gusty winds up to 25 mph were forecast for tonight.

Contract-Signing On Medical School Bldg. Next Week

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Contracts are expected to be signed next week for construction of the medical science building for East Carolina University's School of Medicine.

University of North Carolina general administration officials said in Chapel Hill today that agreement has been reached with low bidders for construction of the facility.

Bids totaling $33.91 million were received December 13 for the proposed 450,000 square-foot medical school home — well over the money appropriated by the North Carolina General Assembly for the project.

"We are very hopeful, on the basis of recent developments," medical school dean Dr. William Laupus said, that construction contracts will be signed, "soon... perhaps as early as next week."

Dr. Laupus said the negotiation of the contracts, "reflects several weeks of effort on the part of the University and State administration to reduce the size of the contract award to fit the available funds." He noted that there is approximately $26 million available for construction of the building.

As designed, the main portion of the medical science building — to be located on a site adjacent to Pitt Memorial Hospital — would be eight stories high, including the penthouse. One two-story wing would house administrative offices and a library, while another wing would include an auditorium.

Low bidder for the general construction contract was D. R. Allen and Sons of Fayetteville.

Scout Handbook Shifted Course

NORTH BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — The new Boy Scout handbook is shifting back from asphalt basketball courts to nature trails because that's where the "romance" is, says the author. Besides, he says, some city kids "can't take it" in the wild.

"You take the inner city boys away from the neon lights, the noise and the asphalt and a number of them can take it out in the country, but a lot of them can't," William Hillcourt, 78, said Thursday as the 576-manual was released.

DRIVER'S EDUCATION COURSE

My son, who dropped out of high school, is now attending an extended day program. He wants to take a driver's education course to obtain his license, but cannot afford to wait to take the course offered by the high school, which takes too much time. Is there anyone in the Greenville-Pitt County area who is certified to teach my son so he may obtain his license?

Sorry, but it appears your son will have to take the course offered by the local high schools. According to Jim Brown, Director of General Adult Education at Pitt Technical Institute, PTI offers an adult driver's education course, but your son must be at least 18 years old to attend. Also, his high school class must have graduated in order for him to enroll at PTI.

According to a spokeswoman for the Department of Motor Vehicles, Driver's License Division, the division is unaware of any other programs besides the ones offered by the public schools and PTI. She also did not know of any private driving instructors.

Claude Kennedy, a driving instructor at Ayden-Gritton High School, said he did not know any private driving instructors in this area. According to Kennedy, the closest private driving school is in Raleigh.

Hotline will be happy to do a feedback if anyone has information concerning area private driving instructors.

Discuss Proposed Autonomous Rescue Squad

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Spokesmen for an ad hoc committee of interested citizens asked last night that the City Council consider an "autonomous administration" for the rescue squad with direct responsibility to the city manager.

Offering their views at a 6:30 p.m. workshop on why the rescue squad should operate as a separate unit from the fire department, the committee spokesmen requested Council consideration in the interest of emergency medical care for area citizens.

Dr. Herbert Hadley, chairman of the committee, said that the members held no malice toward anyone and had no axes to grind in seeking autonomy for the rescue unit. Hadley said that he feels personnel "should be well trained in the field of rescue."

Dr. Jack Welch offered his support of a rescue system having its own facility and "more control and more direction as to training, needs and goals." Citing the rapid growth of the city and medical community, Welch said that continued professional growth is also necessary in support of the hospital, including the area of rescue.

Welch pointed out the local squad's success in state and national competition and asserted that in order to maintain growth in the level of service, the rescue system must be able to submit its own budget, request pieces of equipment that it needs, ask for more people and have its own building.

Currently, rescue department requests are channeled through the chief of the fire department who holds administrative authority over both fire and rescue operations.

Recognizing that the present facilities housing both fire and rescue units are limited, it was noted that even if a separate building is not possible immediately, the rescue squad should still have autonomy in its present location.

Dr. Dick Douglas contended that rescue personnel are "frustrated because they can't come to you (Council) directly." He said the rescue unit needs someone as a spokesman who has a feeling

House Bill Aims At Those Letting Drunks Drive

By SHARON BOND
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill that would make it an offense for anyone to allow a drunk person to drive was given tentative approval in the state House Thursday by a 70-40 vote.

The bill is on today's calendar for final approval by the House.

If the bill is enacted, a person who is the owner or who has possession or control of a vehicle and causes or knowingly permits another person under the influence of liquor or drugs to drive would be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Conviction would mean revocation for a year of the driver's license of the person who allowed the drunk person to drive. A House committee added a provision that would allow a jury to convict a person with a lesser offense, avoiding the suspended license.

Final approval of the bill was scheduled for Thursday but was delayed until today due to confusion over exactly who could be convicted if the bill becomes law. Rep. Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, was one of those members opposed to the bill. "I just don't think we ought to convict two people for driving one car,"

Ramsey was referring to the fact that the person driving the car could be convicted of drunk driving and the person, if he was the owner or controlled the use of the car, who allowed him to drive would also be convicted under the bill.

In other legislative developments Thursday: Loan Limits The Senate Banking Committee approved a bill to increase the amount of money small loan companies are allowed to lend. But the committee reduced the amount of the increase called for in the bill by $500.

The original bill would have increased the loan limit from $1,500 to $3,500, and was approved in the House.

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a face-to-face session, militant farmers say they find Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland courteous, good-natured, willing to listen — and zealously unwilling to yield to their demands.

Nonetheless, when a 90-minute meeting between five protest leaders and Bergland ended Thursday, much of the week's accumulated tension seemed dissipated.

Farmers said just the fact that their encounter went so well was encouraging.

"We're talking, and maybe that's the first step," said Gene Schroder of Campo, Colo., a leader of the protest group.

Said Gerald McCathern of Hereford, Texas: "He listened, and listened well."

Both sides seemed conciliatory, though Bergland said he remains opposed to the farmers' demands for higher grain support prices and he feels in no mood to take back his characterization of some of the protesting farmers as "greedy."

The word, he said, was "carefully chosen." Farmers and a few congressmen have taken offense.

Relaxed and in good humor, Bergland lunched with some reporters following the meeting, recalling his own days as a farmer protesting the policies of Ezra Taft Benson, the secretary of agriculture in the Eisenhower Administration.

Today the farmers are laying their case before a friend — Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., who is acting chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee in the absence of Sen. Herman Talmadge, hospitalized for treatment of alcohol abuse.

McGovern has sided with the farmers and is cosponsoring a resolution to raise crop support prices to their legal limits. Bergland is dead set against any such step, contending it would dry up the export market for U.S. grain and leave the farmers worse off than before.

Thursday night at their tractor campsite the farmers found encouragement from two members of Congress — Rep. Marvin Leath, D-Texas, who represents some of the protesting cotton growers, and Rep. Dawson Mathis, D-Ga.

After Georgia farmer Tommy Kersey urged the protesters to leave their tractors in Washington if they had to go home, Mathis jumped on a tractor and agreed.

"It's important that you leave your tractor here!" he shouted. "Keep applying the pressure."

Mathis wore boots, blue jeans and a peaked cap that is the symbol of his movement.

Earlier, the farmers had their daily, police-sanctioned "tractorcade" through downtown Washington, this time driving up to the building housing the American Farm Bureau Federation, an outfit the protesters call nothing but an insurance company that works against the interests of small farmers.

Farm Bureau spokesmen said protesters who entered the building damaged furniture and threw flowerpots out a window. The police, present at the time, said they felt any damage was accidental.

Actor's Income Ruling Seen Growth Told Killing Suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Lee Marvin's gross income was $4.2 million during the years he lived with Michelle Triola Marvin, an accountant says.

Richard LeRoy, the accountant, was expected to return to the witness stand today in the $1 million property suit brought by Miss Marvin, who lived with the actor between 1964 and 1970.

She seeks a $1 million share of the actor's assets in return for her companionship and services as a homemaker.

Earlier Thursday, a personal manager who once groomed Miss Marvin as a singer testified that the actor and his mistress were once "a couple of fantastic lovebirds."

Mimi Marleaux said she remembered the night when Marvin looked at his lover across the dinner table, and said, "I'll always take care of you, baby."

LeRoy, a specialist in "dis-solution accounting" told of examining the records of Marvin's accountant to establish the actor's earnings.

He displayed charts outlining how Marvin's fortune grew from $49,000 at the start of the love affair to millions when it ended. The charts showed the Marvin's income jumped after 1966 when he won the Oscar for best actor in "Cat Ballou."

LeRoy said Marvin quickly invested his money in real estate — apartment houses, a shopping center and a two-bed-room Malibu beachhouse.

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) —

A state Supreme Court ruling that college students should not be denied voting privileges in towns where they go to school is expected to kill a suit filed by an Orange County group challenging the registration of students as voters.

Lucius M. Cheshire, attorney for the Orange Committee, said further action by the group would be "an exercise in futility."

Monday's court ruling said that college students should not be denied voting rights in their college towns simply because they don't intend to live there after graduation.

The decision vacated an order by Wake County Superior Court Judge James H. Pou Bailey that instructed the Orange County Board of Elections to purge the names of students at the University of North Carolina from county voting rolls if they had listed a home address outside Orange County.

The voter-roll purge would have removed the names of about 2,000 students.

The Supreme Court sent the case back to the lower court where it was originally filed for further proceedings.

The Orange Committee filed a suit against the state Board of Elections, the Orange County board and 117 other county precinct and election officials, contending that the county was illegally registering students without properly determining if the students were residents of the county.

Share Shower Of Valentines

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The men of the Richard E. Byrd probably expected a shower of affection when they returned from seven months at sea. They didn't expect to be showered with valentines from a helicopter.

But as the Navy destroyer entered Chesapeake Bay Thursday after a Mediterranean tour, hundreds of hand-made paper valentines rained down.

The love notes — printed on crepe paper so they wouldn't pollute the bay — fell from a helicopter chartered by the crewmen's wives, who apparently couldn't wait the extra hour until the ship docked at Norfolk.

Besides the valentines, some personal notes were lowered by rope.

"It's Thanksgiving, Christmas, New Year's and Valentine's day — all the days we've missed," said the wife of one crewman as she awaited his homecoming.

The Richard E. Byrd's 350 crewmen seemed delighted. They videotaped the "bombardment" to show to the wives later.

The helicopter reached the ship as it crossed the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel en route to the Norfolk Naval Station.

To explain their madness, the wives had Navy Signalman 2nd Class Thomas Robishaw stationed on the rocks on the bridge-tunnel's south island to send this message — by flashing lights and waving flags — to the crew:

"Who has channel fever? The answer is blowing in the wind."

"Channel fever" is a sailor's term for homesickness. Robishaw's sister, Mrs. Pat Roberts, put him up to sending the message. She's the wife of a Byrd crewman, Boatswain's Mate I.C. Dwight J. Roberts.

"The wives wanted to do something really special for the crew," said Page Bishop, wife of the Byrd's commanding officer, Lt. Cmdr. Ron F. Bishop. "We wanted them to know they were missed."

At pier-side, more greetings were waiting.

A large wooden arch had been erected at the base of the gangway. It said: "Through this arch walk the most wanted men in the world."

Will Preach At Sunday Service

Eldress Cynthia Smallwood will preach at Sweet Hope F.W.B. Church Sunday at 7 p.m.

She will be accompanied by the New Eastern Travelers and the Stevenson Singers of Grimesland. Della Smith and Magalene Stephenson are sponsoring the program.

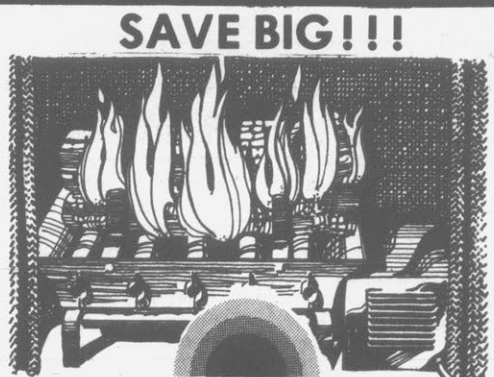

The pastor, Rev. W. J. Best, invites the public to attend.

Arrest Youth For Exposure

Charles Michael Edmundson, 17 of 405B Perkins St. was arrested last night on two counts of indecent exposure and count of assault on a female, Chief Glenn Cannon said.

According to the Chief, Edmundson was taken into custody at 7 p.m. at the Fast Fare at 220 Cotanche St. after allegedly exposing himself to a clerk in the store and another young woman.

Cannon said Edmundson was also charged with indecent exposure and assault on a female in connection with a February 2 incident at the Stop-N-Go on Hooker Road at the Arlington Boulevard intersection.

Voting Today

By The Associated Press

The fate of liquor-by-the-drink was to be decided today in Greensboro, High Point, Burlington, Graham and in the county of Alamance.

The weather was expected to play a role in voter turnout, with additional snow predicted for today.

In Wake and Durham counties earlier this year, an ice storm slightly reduced the turnout. Mixed-drink referendums passed in both counties.

In Greensboro, mixed drink opponents used the telephone Thursday night to contact registered voters and urge them to vote their convictions.

In Alamance County voters were also deciding whether to have ABC stores.

Burlington and Graham, which are in Alamance County, already have liquor stores.

Mrs. Roberson Gives Program

WILLIAMSTON — The annual planning meeting of the CPDA Home Economics Division was held here last week at the Town and Country Restaurant.

Mrs. Elizabeth Roberson, CPDA second vice president, presented the program on "A Visit With the Tuscaroas." Mrs. Roberson is an eighth grade teacher in Bear Grass.

She showed a film about the Tuscaroas, which was written, directed, acted in and filmed by her class. Mrs. Roberson described the life of the Indians then and now.

Mrs. T. J. Benthall, chairman of Hertford County, conducted the meeting, which included reports from the clothing, food and nutrition, housing and house furnishings and publicity committees.

Attending from Pitt County were Mrs. R. A. Davis, Mrs. Jerry Bailey, Mrs. Larry Howard and Mrs. Evelyn L. Spangler.

Use Winter Lemons In Ice Cream

E-Z Fresh Lemon Ice Cream is a good way to put the winter lemon supply to use to impress family and friends.

According to NCSU agricultural extension specialists to make this quick dessert you should combine two cups whipping cream or half and half with one cup sugar. Stir to dissolve the sugar.

Blend in one tablespoon grated lemon peel and one-third cup fresh squeezed lemon juice. Pour mixture into a shallow pan and freeze until firm. About four hours. Makes three cups.

'From Whence' Comes Offense

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: You wrote, "Ten whacks for me with a stack of Presbyterian Outlooks, from whence came this ... etc."

Ten more whacks for that sentence, Abby. From where did you get "from whence"?

"Whence" means from which place, or from where, which makes the "from" before the "whence" redundant.

LESTER COLE, SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR LESTER COLE (You merry old soul): You are absolutely right! Add another 10 whacks with that hefty volume, "The Careful Writer (A Modern Guide to English Usage," by Theodore M. Bernstein in which he says: "Despite the fact that 'from whence' has occasionally been used by good writers, it is a pleonasm and is best avoided." So I plead pleonasm.

DEAR ABBY: Al is 47 and divorced. I'm 33 and have never been married, and our relationship is getting serious. But there is something about Al that turns me off. He's forgotten how to court a woman. He's a wonderful lover, but he's all action and no talk, and a woman likes to hear her man verbalize his feelings. Never a compliment, never a word of appreciation, never any of those sweet, endearing words a woman loves to hear.

Al has never sent me flowers or given me a gift. He has never taken me to a really nice restaurant. It's always, "Let's catch a quick bite at one of those fast food joints." Then, "My place or yours?"

I've tried to set an example by giving him gifts, sweet love talk, and nice dinners at my place with candlelight, music and wine, but Al doesn't get the message.

This one-sided giving is driving me up a wall. How do I get him to treat ME the way I treat HIM?

FRUSTRATED IN TARENTUM, PA.

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Quit showing him. TELL him. If he doesn't deliver after that, face it—he either can't change or doesn't want to. Same difference.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my 7-year-old daughter (I'll call her "Cindy.") She's in the second grade and has always liked school—until about two months ago.

Every morning she gets up complaining that she doesn't feel well and wants to stay home. When I take her temperature and find it normal, I insist that she dress and get ready for school. Then she cries and says she hates school because she has no friends and nobody likes her.

Abby, it breaks my heart to send a child to school crying, but what can I do? If she's not sick, I can't let her stay home. By the time Cindy is out of sight, I'm in tears too.

Is there something I should do? Or will Cindy outgrow it?

CINDY'S MOM

DEAR MOM: When a child suddenly feels friendless and disliked at school, there is a reason. Try to find out what it is. Spend as much time with Cindy as possible and give her every opportunity to confide in you. If she doesn't, have a consultation with her teacher. If that fails, and Cindy continues to hate school, seek professional help. But don't let it go.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lucky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

China's Man In A Big Hurry

It occurs to us that China's Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping is behaving much like a man in a hurry.

He is racing time ... that ruthless enemy of people with dreams and those who eye the future with misgivings. Teng is both of these.

He is 74 years old, and a pragmatist; filled with an awareness that China has had enough of revolutions that prohibit sharing in the world's outreach for personal freedoms and technology, for knowledge and skills, for a more bountiful life.

There is more than that. The Vice Premier is afire with awareness that no country with the uncounted millions of people that make up his homeland can or should be left out of the role it abandoned toward making a better and safer world.

In the relatively few months since Teng was returned first to favor, then to power, China has done the inconceivable: an about-face from which it will be increasingly difficult to turn back.

Hundreds, more likely thousands, of their best and brightest have flocked to the United States to make up for a generation isolated from the growth of knowledge in the rest of the world. The resulting impact of tasting strange cultures, absorbing their sciences and technology, is immeasurable. There is but one sure thing: life will never be the same in China.

Teng and his government have another spur to their near-frantic scramblings to make up for the isolation of almost 30 years.

That is their oft-repeated belief a day is drawing ever-nearer when a neighbor, the Soviet Union, is going to stretch the fabric of uneasy peace to the breaking point.

Rightly or wrongly they are convinced that closer ties to the West offer the best hope for a balance of power to perhaps deter that day.

A man in a hurry? It is more likely we are watching a nation in a hurry; a mighty scramble to overcome the past and win a chance to insure their future.

University Has A Thin Line To Walk

Officials of the University of North Carolina have to be befuddled as they continue to grapple with various court and HEW orders concerning discrimination and desegregation.

Even as the university system attempts to come to terms with HEW over a desegregation plan, it is hit with a federal appeals court ruling that it is guilty of reverse discrimination.

Walking the thin line between what HEW, under court order, wants, and what the court of appeals order requires is going to mean a real blanching act for UNC.

It may, in fact, turn out to be impossible.

THIS AFTERNOON Takes Top Of The Budget

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Just how much is Medicaid costing North Carolina? Not to argue with the merits of this program which provides medical help to needy people, Dr. Sarah Morrow, secretary of the Department of Human Resources, has this to say:

"Before considering what can be done in any other division of this department we have to look at how much Medicaid is costing."

This means simply that all other human services offered by the state — mental health, health, children, the blind, the crippled, etc. — must take back seat to this out-of-control system of providing health care to welfare cases and other needy citizens.

The figures are boggling: from a relatively comfortable beginning figure of $98 million in 1970, Medicaid has marched uncontrollably upward, passing $200 million in 1974; and $300 million in 1978.

Budget projections before the General Assembly call for expenditures of $440 million next fiscal year, and $489.8 million the next.

Upward

In just 10 years, then, this aid program has grown to the half-billion dollar point in North Carolina and shows no signs of slackening its pace.

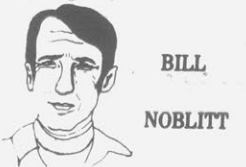

Why can't this monstrous spending program which has prompted more than one legislator and high government official to warn that it threatens to bankrupt the state treasury be controlled?

In simplest of terms it is because more and more Tar Heels are becoming eligible for assistance as the qualifications change due to increased incomes allowed under federal law, but more importantly because of inflation in the entire medical field.

Legislative study committees have wrestled with Medicaid from time to time, but so far haven't laid a hand on the problem.

Bluntly told that to control Medicaid costs means to control health care costs — obviously an impossibility for a state government when federal efforts have likewise proved futile — legislative groups tend to either abandon the pursuit, or to look in some other direction where a measure of limited success might be available.

BILL
NOBLITT

Such is the current case in which a medical cost containment committee has switched tracks and begun to look at pre-paid health plans for state employees as an alternative to rising insurance costs.

Dr. Morrow cuts right to the heart of the problem: "Frankly, we simply do not have the control mechanisms. Much of it is out of the state's control."

The federal government holds the upper hand in Medicaid, both in terms of dollars invested and eligibility criteria. This year, for example, nearly 400,000 Tar Heels qualified for aid. Federal dollars totaled $246.3 million; state dollars were $94.4 million, and counties put up another $27.7 million.

No Solution

There are, Dr. Morrow confirms, no specific recommendations forthcoming either from the General Assembly or her agency to curtail Medicaid spending.

That money could have been available for other programs if Medicaid were under control. But this is not critical of Medicaid. The people do need the assistance ... it is essential.

"But at the same time you can see how much would have been possible in other areas," she commented.

The future course is only upward. More and more people are qualifying, particularly the elderly. And that is where the big dollars go because the elderly require longer hospitalization, more expensive care, and are the primary users of nursing homes and other long-term care facilities. In fact, figures show that 40 percent of those receiving Medicaid (the elderly) account for 76 percent of the total dollars spent.

WASHINGTON TODAY If Congress Retaliates----

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — Those born-again budget cutters in the statehouses had better beware. Congress is getting tired of political heat from people who complain about a spendthrift federal government while taking every dollar they can get from Washington.

And that's a lot of dollars, $82.9 billion in the new budget.

So far the congressional talk is no more than that.

There is a bill in the Senate to cut off $2.28 billion in nostrings-attached federal aid to state governments, but it doesn't appear likely to pass.

To the members of Congress who vote on federal aid money, that pressure looks like grandstanding by state politicians who can boast of balancing their own budgets because of the money they get from Washington.

Senate Majority Leader

Robert C. Byrd noted that aid to state and local governments has gone up from $24.2 billion to $77.9 billion over the past nine years.

That's not a giveaway. Much of the money goes to support programs Congress ordered set up in the first place.

"Every one of these states that is passing these resolutions to balance the federal budget is taking a ton of money from the federal government every year," said Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo.

"There is a great deal of political hypocrisy in this country, and I think it is time we ended it."

Byrd said the 26 states advocating balanced budget amendments shared a total of $31 billion in federal aid last year. That counts money that went to local as well as state governments.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., proposed the bill that would end general revenue sharing with state governments. That is a program started in 1972 to send federal money to state and local governments to spend as they see fit. In the new budget, it will cost about $6.9 billion, one-third for state governments and two-thirds for local governments.

Bentsen wants to cut out the state share. "It is illogical for the federal government to increase the size of its deficits in order to provide money which contributes to surpluses accumulated by state governments," Bentsen said.

The National Governors Association says the states are expected to be in the black by a total of $4.3 billion this year. But that counts only their operating ex-

LIVING THE TRUTH

Beliefs never really become true for us until they begin to make a difference in the way we act. In the same way, no one ever understands truth until he begins to live it. The long arguments over religion are made by people for whom they are interesting intellectual exercises. People who really believe in religious truths seldom feel a need to argue about their beliefs. These simply become a part of their lives.

This is why few people who really believe in God work out philosophical justifications for their belief. They live every day in the consciousness that they are in the hollow of His hand. They talk with Him and are conscious that He finds a variety of ways to answer their petitions and requests. For them to believe is to know and to act.

The way to understand a truth, therefore, is not to brood over it but to live it. When it becomes integrated into life it becomes as luminous, as warming, as sunshine.

THE L.A. TIMES SYNDICATE

"Oh, dear! I was rather counting on the labour chaps to bail me out ... but it seems they're all out on strike."

By ART BUCHWALD Secret Paper Shortage

WASHINGTON — They've been trying to keep it a secret, but there is a serious paper shortage in Washington. A strike of Western paper workers, which is expected to be taken up by workers on the East Coast, has caused a paper deficit in Washington. The reason the government has been keeping it a secret is it fears that if the word gets out, panic will set in and different departments and agencies will start hoarding paper, while others might resort to some very dirty tricks to ensure that its memo flow is not turned off.

One department, which shall remain anonymous, got wind of the shortage and has already held 27 meetings on the crisis.

At the last meeting it was decided to alert all employees to the situation.

In a memo, which was sent to the agency's 27,500 workers, a deputy director wrote: "It has been brought to my attention that we can expect a serious paper shortage in the next few months, which could affect productivity and the morale of this agency. Therefore, I am asking everyone to conserve every sheet of paper possible, even if it involves such dire emergencies as using both sides of the paper. I am also requesting all employees to submit to me in writing how the agency can conserve paper. These suggestions should be made out in triplicate with one copy for me, one for your supervisors and one to keep for yourself in case any action is taken."

"Supervisors are requested to submit weekly reports to the Administrative Supply Office as to how many employees are following this directive, and if this memorandum has increased or decreased the use of present supplies. If an employee does not send in a suggestion, his or her supervisor must put in writing to the personnel director why he or she failed to do so. The personnel director will evaluate and report on Form 2-D to his superior whether or not the excuse is valid."

"What we plan to do with the suggestions is have the public affairs division compile a collection of the most interesting ones, which will then be distributed to all personnel — not only from this agency but from corresponding agencies, which find themselves in the same short-fall position."

"It is my hope that this

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

Concerning the controversy over separate facilities and leadership for the Greenville Rescue Squad, I totally support the Rescue Squad in its struggle to be a unit operating more efficiently under men trained solely in this field. Everybody knows of the outstanding job in emergency work that this squad has accomplished. Every success this squad has had has come under the leadership of rescue squad officers and rescue personnel, both paid and volunteer.

It's common knowledge to everyone, except city officials, that every accomplishment made by the squad has been an uphill battle against fire department officers. The squad cannot continue to grow and keep abreast of providing top emergency service to its people and be expected to perform under conditions now prevailing.

It is refreshing to learn that a concerned citizens' group for the squad has already been formed and has put into action a plan to help put the squad in its own facilities. Land has already been offered free to the city as a construction site. The rescue building will also be built through fund-raising efforts of the squad at no cost to the city. In fact, the conversion of the squad into its own department will not cost the city a dime. What more could be asked of a squad that has taken on this kind of project to provide better emergency service to Greenville?

Where does this kind of dedication come from? I think we all know the answer to that, based on what we see this squad do every day. The Greenville Rescue Squad deserves far better treatment than they've received from the fire department and city officials. I hope, though this concerned citizens' group for Rescue, that the city officials will accept what is being offered to this city free of charge.

Double Standard For Families

By GAIL MICHAELS

I don't know one family that doesn't operate on a double standard for parent and child.

We're all aware of the most blatant examples. Like the kid who gets grounded for writing test answers under his fingernails, then hears his father brag about cheating on his income tax. Or the kid who gets regular lectures on the value of honesty, then hears her mother telling the minister that she's had a deadly virus for the last four Sundays in a row.

But what about the less obvious instances? Like "I don't like that tone of voice, and if you ever use it again, I'll do more than just scream." Or "I'm sleepy, so you have to take a nap."

Phillip and my worst pitfall is in the area of "love" names. We call Meg everything from "Baby" to "muffin" to "monkey". When she first objected on the grounds that her name was Meg, we explained that the other names were just special nicknames that showed our love for her.

The next week she called my mother-in-law a clown.

"Meg," I gasped. "That wasn't a nice thing to say!"

Her eyes began to fill with tears. "But you told me it was a love name. You call me that."

I hemmed and hawed and finally said, "Well, that's different. Grown-ups don't like to be called clowns."

"They don't like love names?"

"Sure they do, but they don't like the love name 'clown.'"

"Why?" Because it sounds as if they aren't too smart."

"But I'm smart."

"I know you are," I sighed.

"Then why do you call me a clown?"

I let the matter drop and tried to avoid calling her clown. But love names are a hard habit to break. It wasn't long before "clown" got substituted for "clown."

"Why did you say 'clown'?" Meg asked when I first called her that.

"Because your hair is so soft and blond that it looks like the down on a little yellow chick. Granddaddy used to call me that."

"It's good?"

"Sure, it is, chicken."

Not long afterwards, she walked up to a blond neighbor

Notes From Mexico

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
GUADALAJARA, Mexico (AP) — Confetti from the pages of a reporter's notebook found along the pilgrim path of a pope in Mexico:

—In Santo Domingo, the first stop on his first trip outside Italy, the pope blessed the crowds from a mechanized platform that looked like a stripped-down bowl parade float. The vehicle was dubbed "the 'popemobile' by newsmen trying to keep track of the papal procession by walkie-talkie radios. When preceded by the two flatbed trucks fitted out with wooden bleachers to accommodate photographers, the three vehicles were designated the Nina, the Pinta and the Santa Maria.

—Mexican laws that separated church and state still forbid wearing clerical garb in public. The pope, as a distinguished unofficial visitor, wore his white cassock everywhere. This encouraged hundreds of priests and nuns to appear on the downtown streets in religious garb. Years before his arrival, however, many young priests had adopted a mod improvised habit of dark slacks and a light turtleneck sweater, topped off by a black beret.

—Unfortunately, the karate team turned out by the security people to handle crowd control during the pope's visit also wore black slacks and berets and white turtle-necks, but their manners were hardly those of a doctor of divinity. The rugged hombies were nicknamed the "papal bulldozers" for the brisk way they karate-chopped a path for the motorcade through the masses of humanity.

—In Guadalajara, a soccer stadium full of labor union members cheered Juan Pablo Segundo, as the Mexican called him. Four decades ago, on July 31, 1926, this same city saw the start of the only nationwide priests strike in the history of the Catholic Church. Angered at the strict enforcement of anti-clerical laws that brought about the deportation of 200 foreign priests, the native clergy refused for three years to say Mass, perform marriages or conduct other services.

—Besides politics and the revolution, earthquakes and shifting foundations have helped bring the old Spanish church to its knees in Mexico.

40 Years Ago Today

Boy Scouts of Greenville have been invited to be guests of the Pitt Theater tomorrow afternoon to see "Brother Rat."

T.Y. Walker, manager of the theater, invited the scouts in return for services rendered in gathering toys during the Christmas holidays. However, the invitation does not include Cub Scouts.

Scout Executive Thompson publicly expressed thanks to Walker in behalf of the scouts.

All scouts are requested to meet at 3:30 p.m. in front of the high school in uniform. If a scout does not wear his uniform, he is asked to bring his registration card. If it is raining, the scouts are to meet at the Pitt Theater.

whom she adores and said, "You look like a chicken."

I figured that the worst had happened. But I hadn't counted on Meg's encounter with my grandfather over the Christmas holidays. He has a string of unusually colorful nicknames, and Meg was soon dubbed, "You cute little buzzard."

Weeks went by, and she didn't try it out. Then one day when we were standing in the check-out line at the supermarket, the lady in front of us started flirting with Meg.

"You are one of the cutest little girls I've ever seen," the lady said.

Meg reached over, patted her hand, and said, "Well, aren't you nice, you old buzzard?"

Only If They Tell

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hundreds of banks will have to hand out cash refunds to many of their borrowers, but you won't know if your bank is one of them unless it tells you.

Because of mistakes in arithmetic, banks will have to refund millions of dollars to many customers who borrowed money in the past five years, federal officials said Thursday.

The banks will start notifying people by mail, probably in about six months, that they will get refunds because the banks inadvertently misstated interest rates, the officials said.

The comptroller of the currency's office, which surveyed 4,700 national banks, is working on a letter telling many of them to go through their books and reimburse every customer shortchanged.

"The names of the banks will not be available because the banks were examined through the examination process," said Caryl Austrian, communication officer for Comptroller of the Currency John G. Heimann.

"All such information is exempt from the Freedom of Information Act," she said.

Filing Petition Of Intervention

Officials of Operation Overcharge, an organization formed by Chambers of Commerce in the region to fight electric rates charged by Vepco, announced that a petition of intervention will be filed with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

Richard S. Coiner of Washington, chairman of the organization, said Operation Overcharge will pursue the matter on behalf of the people of the northeastern section of the state.

Coiner said the Commission is being asked to assign an attorney from its legal staff "to the people, on a temporary basis, to represent them in the matter."

Specifically, he added, the organization will intervene in Docket No. ER78522, a matter currently before the FERC in which Vepco has asked for a 19.86 percent increase in the rate it charges wholesale to municipal electric systems and to electric co-ops in the region.

"This is the same matter in which Gov. Jim Hunt instructed the attorney general to start an intervention action Monday on behalf of the state of North Carolina," the spokesman said. Coiner contended the FERC has no public advocate to represent the people and he said the "people need representation against Vepco."

He said the petition will ask the FERC to carry out a management audit of Vepco.

Semifinalists

Eight Rose High School juniors have been chosen as a field of semi-finalists in the competition for selection of the 1979 Greenville Community Ambassador.

The Greenville Ambassador Committee and a panel composed of Rose High faculty members screened applicants this week and selected the following:

Beth Bailey, Patricia Bath, Margaret Cain, Kevin Clark, Skip Hill, Mark Grossnickle, Chris Ross and Melissa Suggs.

The student to be designated as the 1979 Community Ambassador will be selected on Monday, Feb. 12.

Two N.C. Ports Show Healthy Tonnage Boost

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The executive director of the State Ports Authority says the state's two ports showed a tonnage increase of nearly 15 percent during 1978, despite a 34-day dock strike last spring.

William M. A. Greene said the increase amounts to a 4.39 percent increase over that of 1977.

"The recovery (from the strike) was excellent and we are extremely pleased with what was accomplished," Greene said.

Morehead City's increase in the number of tons of cargo handled was 15 percent and Wilmington's was 13 percent. The Morehead City port broke the two-million-ton mark for the first time.

The total for 1978 at Morehead City was 2,017,573 tons, compared with 1,744,905 in 1977. The increased shipments of tobacco, lumber, phosphoric acid, bunker C fuel and phosphate contributed to the increase, port officials said.

Wilmington handled 1,968,042 tons during 1978, compared with 1,731,324 in 1977. Major shipments were salt, steel, DMT, xylene, urea, wood pulp and tobacco.

Although tonnage increased at both ports, the number of ships calling decreased by 8 percent. In 1978, 655 ships called at the ports, compared with 713 in 1977. But the ship count was up to 200 at Morehead City, compared with 197 in 1977.

Several shipping lines announced new service to the ports last year, Greene said. He said Sea-Land Service Inc.

will call weekly at the Wilmington port.

"This links North Carolina with Sea-Land's worldwide shipping network, which provides transportation service between 138 ports in 54 countries around the world," Greene said.

Of the Morehead City port, which has been embroiled in a dispute with the ports authority over the removal of its container crane, Greene said, "We will continue our efforts to promote the Port of Morehead as strongly as ever, placing strong emphasis on developing its existing potential. The port still has container-handling capabilities with its two gantry cranes."

The authority plans to move the container crane to the Wilmington port.

The federal budget does include capital spending. If construction and other capital outlays weren't counted, it would show a paper surplus, too.

—In anti-clerical but overwhelmingly Catholic Mexico, the pope was greeted everywhere with enthusiasm sometimes bordering on fanaticism. Wherever he visited, security guards remained on duty all night to keep the faithful from ripping up the paving stones he had trod for relics and souvenirs.

—Thousands of gringos, including a number of Polish Americans flew south of the border to see the pope. In downtown Monterrey they shouted "Viva la papa." Their message must have amazed him as much as their fervor, since they were shouting "Long live the potato" instead of long live the pope, which is "viva el papa."

—All ages, races, classes and professions waited long hours to catch a glimpse of the first pope ever to visit Mexico. In Mexico City's Zocalo,

'Clinic' Said A Violation

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A Mecklenburg County Superior Court jury has ruled that a massage parlor that prosecutors say was a front for prostitution is in violation of the state's public nuisance law.

The jury issued its ruling Thursday after hearing several undercover police officers testify they were solicited for crimes against nature and prostitution while posing as customers at the Pair-a-Dice Health Clinic.

Defense attorneys conceded during the trial that prostitution may have occurred at the clinic, but they said it consisted only of "isolated incidents" and took place without the knowledge of the owner.

An appeal is planned, and Judge Robert Gavin withheld action against the clinic pending the outcome.

But Gavin said there should be an accounting of money taken in for alleged illegal activities from July 1976, when vice officers first made arrests at the massage parlor, up to this week. If the appeal fails, the money will go to Charlotte and Mecklenburg County treasuries. Prosecutor Paul Whitfield tallied the ruling "a moral victory" even though the parlor was not immediately closed. He said he would ask attorneys for other massage parlors involved in court action to abide by the outcome of the Pair-a-Dice appeal.

Handbook...

It was the 69th birthday of the Boy Scouts of America, which has its national headquarters here.
The last scout manual, published in 1972, was designed for relevance to city youths, scout spokesman Thomas Dew said, although it did not dispense with the outdoors expertise required of scouts.
It pictured scouts in such urban settings as outdoor basketball courts. In a picture of hikers, skyscrapers could be seen in the background.
But the idea "kind of fizzled out" said Dew, and Hillcourt, alarmed by plummeting membership, volunteered to write a "return-to-the-fundamentals" manual emphasizing knots, maps, nature trails and wilderness survival techniques.
"Boys lose the romance of scouting by hanging out in cities — they've got to get out in the country," Hillcourt said.
In the last six years, total U.S. scouting membership — including boy scouts, cub scouts, explorers and adult leaders — dropped about 2 million to 4.5 million, said publications editor Judd Compton.
The new handbook is filled with Norman Rockwell illustrations. And it takes a firm stand on the side of chivalry.
"The knights of old were pledged to protect women. It was their duty to keep them from harm. The scout of today treats them with the same high regard," the manual says.
Both included the scout motto — Be Prepared — and the tenets of loyalty and good works.
Hillcourt says he "volunteered a year of my life" to help return scouting to its basics.
Since 1932, he has written the "Green Bar Bill" column for Boys Life Magazine.

Special Awards In Oscar Rites

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The Museum of Modern Art in New York and the movie "Superman" are pretty special to the movie industry.
Both will receive special awards from the Board of Governors of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences April 9 at the 51st Annual Oscars awards ceremony.
The academy directors Thursday also announced honorary awards to Sir Laurence Olivier, filmmaker King Vidor and cartoonist Walter Lantz.
"Superman" will be honored for its special effects, while the museum's Department of Film has been cited for its contribution "to the public's perception of movies as an art form."

Confirm Death Due Overdose

NEW YORK (AP) — The Medical Examiner says results of an autopsy have confirmed that punk rock star Sid Vicious died of a heroin overdose.
Dr. Michael Baden said Thursday that final toxicological tests were not complete, but enough information was available to make the determination of death.
Vicious, whose real name was John Simon Ritchie, died last Friday, one day after his release from jail. He was being held on a murder charge in the stabbing death of his girlfriend.

authorize the city officers to go forward with condemnation proceedings. He said the resolution action put the matter in the hands of the proper authorities to negotiate with the property owner for the purchase of land needed to widen 14th Street "and if that fails, then they can go ahead with condemnation without coming back to the Council."
City Attorney Louis Singleton pointed out that the resolution envisioned some slight changes in the property alignment and the intent was to go ahead and negotiate on the amount of property to be taken.

Councilman Clarence Gray expressed reservations concerning the resolution, questioning whether adoption would close out the possibility for negotiations with Brown.
Attorney M. E. Cavendish, representing Brown, said that the resolution indicated that property would be taken only on Brown's side of 14th Street. He noted that the city attorney had been sent a letter asking that property be taken on both sides of the street to lessen the burden of loss on Brown.

Cavendish said that his client did not dispute the necessity for widening 14th but it was felt that it would be fair if property was taken from both sides of the street. He added that Brown does not wish to lose any of his property but since he recognizes the city needs land for widening, it appeared something should be worked out that would hurt Brown the least.

The attorney said that, at this point, the city has not made an offer to Brown that he could consider.

Cox noted that the alignment of 14th Street was laid off several years ago. Brown, he added, purchased a piece of property behind the Brown-Wood Inc. automobile business that would give him more frontage on 14th Street.

Cavendish said the acquisition proposed by the city would put Brown out of business.

In voting on the resolution, Council members Mildred McGrath, Judy Greene and Joseph Taft Jr. voted in favor of the measure while Gray opposed adoption. Cox also offered an affirmative vote.

The Council, following a public hearing, voted by a three to two margin (with Cox breaking the tie) to rezone property owned by Harvey Bradshaw on the west side of Hooker Road across from Wilson Rhodes property from R-15 to R-6 and Highway Commercial.

The commercial property would be located across the road from the Wilson Rhodes commercial property and the commercial zone would end at the same point as the Rhodes tract.

Cox said that he had taken a long look at the Bradshaw request and he felt it represented good planning. He said since property across the street is commercial, it would not be feasible to develop the highway tract with residential usage.

Mrs. McGrath recalled that she opposed the rezoning of the Wilson Rhodes tract to commercial and she also opposed the Bradshaw request for commercial zoning. She said she would never propose to have R-15 zoning abutting commercial property, noting that the property owner could come back and request additional commercial designation.

Bradshaw noted that he has already submitted a plan of residential development for the proposed R-15 tract.

Taft and Mrs. Greene voted in favor of the rezoning while Mrs. McGrath and Gray opposed the motion to rezone. With Council members Charles Vincent and John Howard absent, Cox broke the two-to-two tie with a vote in favor of rezoning.

The Council gave unanimous approval to a request by J. H. Blount Jr. for rezoning 50.6 acres lying west of Evans Street Extension from RA-20 to R-6, Office and Institutional, Highway Commercial and Unoffensive Industry.

Approval was also given, following a public hearing, to a request by Leroy Cherry and Associates for rezoning, from RA-20 to R-9 and R-6, of property located on the east side of 14th Street Extension just south of the Southern Railroad.

The Council voted to rescind an ordinance adopted on Jan. 11 stating the Council's intent to implement four-year staggered terms for the board and setting a public hearing for Feb. 8. Cox explained that following last month's action, state elections officials were contacted and it was found that the city needed approval from the Department of Justice for the action.

It was decided that the January resolution should be rescinded and that a new resolution be adopted stating the Council intent to implement the staggered terms. The new resolution also calls for a March 8 public hearing.

Gray stated his opposition to the implementation of staggered terms, citing concern as to continued minority representation on the Council.

A representative of the Pitt County Black Assembly offered petitions opposing the staggered term proposal, saying that the method would eliminate black representation.

Cox said that the Justice Department has the final say on the matter, regardless of the Council action.

Seven Churches To Participate

Seven churches will participate in a special service to be held Saturday at 7:30 p. m. at Cherry Lane F.W.B. Church.

Those leading the service will be Eldress Evorn Best, the Rev. James Ward, Eldress Shirley Braxton, Eldress Shirley Atkinson, the Rev. Blake Phillips, Eldress Mary Phillips, and the Rev. W. L. Best. Music will be supplied by the Gospelaires of Greenville and a choir from Antioch Holy Church.

Sunday at 7:30 p. m. a service will be held at Cherry Lane, also, with the sermon by the Rev. Wilkes and music by his choir from Burney Chapel F.W.B. Church of Black Jack.

The public is invited to each of these services, says the pastor, the Rev. C. R. Parker.

Board Tightens Rules On Loans

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The N.C. Savings and Loan Commission Thursday made it virtually impossible for savings and loan officials to make business loans with institutions they serve.

Small savings and loans have protested the regulations adopted Thursday, arguing that the restrictions will discourage business leaders in small towns from serving on the board of directors of a savings and loan.

The regulations are aimed at restricting "insider deals" between savings and loan officials and the institutions they serve. The new rules bar loans to officers and directors, except to buy a house, add to a house or pay education expenses.

Restrictions are placed on two of those exceptions. The rules set ceilings of $50,000 on home improvement loans and $20,000 for education loans to officers and directors.

The vote came despite opposition by the N.C. Savings and Loan League, the trade association, which had urged the commission to allow business loans to directors up to some "reasonable" percentage of all outstanding loans.

But proponents said the rules were necessary to prevent conflicts of interest between directors' personal business and the welfare of the company.

In other action, the commission voted to:

—Bar savings and loans from conducting real estate business with their officers and members of their board.

—Bar insiders from bidding on property that the company is foreclosing.

—Limit board membership to no more than two members of the same family and to only one attorney from the same law firm. No more than a third of the board members can be officers of the association and no more than a third can be directors, officers or employees of a competing financial institution.

—Require savings and loans that want to open a branch office to have at least $10 million in assets or to have been in operation for 10 years. The companies are also required to have a net worth of at least five percent of their total deposits.

Report Another Film Of Assassination Site

DENVER (AP) — A Dallas man reportedly has supplied federal authorities with a film made in Dealey Plaza when President John F. Kennedy was assassinated.

The Denver Post, in a copyright story Thursday, said the film has been described as giving a clear view of the grassy knoll at Dealey Plaza, a site from which some investigators have theorized a second gunman may have shot at Kennedy.

The Warren Commission concluded Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone in shooting Kennedy Nov. 22, 1963. But six weeks ago, the House Assassinations Committee issued a disputed report saying Kennedy's death probably resulted from a conspiracy.

The Post said the film was shot by Jack Daniels of Dallas and was provided to the Assassinations Committee three days before it disbanded.

Jack Sigalos, an attorney for Daniels, said his client offered the film to the Dallas sheriff's department after the assassination but that it was returned to him a short time later.

Sigalos said the 8mm color film may shed light on the location of motorcycle policeman H.B. McLain at the time of the shooting.

Hit Man Informant On Organized Crime Roles

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Federal investigators say a hit man has provided them with information on more than 20 organized crime figures and labor leaders that could help solve dozens of crimes — including the disappearance of Jimmy Hoffa.

U.S. Attorney Peter F. Vaira disclosed Thursday that Charles Allen had secretly recorded more than 50 conversations with persons allegedly having ties to organized crime since September 1978.

The taped conversations, which an FBI agent said could "break the back of organized crime along the Eastern Seaboard," involve murder, arson, thefts and drugs.

Allen has admitted committing three gangland style executions himself and has agreed to help investigators probing the disappearance of Hoffa, the former Teamsters boss.

He said he conspired in a plot to kill Frank Fitzsimmons at the request of Hoffa. Fitzsimmons was a Hoffa rival who now heads the International Brotherhood of Teamsters.

The disclosures were contained in an agreement between Allen and the federal government that was released Thursday by U.S. District Court Judge Stanley Brotman in nearby Camden, N.J.

Hoffa vanished on July 30, 1975, and FBI agents believe he was slain by organized crime figures who wanted to halt his campaign to recapture the presidency of the 2.2 million-member Teamsters union, the nation's largest.

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's choice to take over the government of Iran declared today he will introduce God into all phases of Iranian life, revamp the economy and hold free elections before resigning to make way for an Islamic regime.

Speaking to 100,000 of the religious leader's supporters at a mosque overlooking Tehran University, Mehdi Bazargan also made an implied new appeal to the armed forces to abandon Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar and support him.

"The army is the heart of the people and should not be used as a tool of imperialism for the benefit of other countries," he said. "Most of the soldiers want the same things we do."

Bazargan said he was still selecting members of the provisional government which Khomeini hopes popular acclaim will force Bakhtiar to accept as the replacement for his cabinet. He gave no indication of when he would announce his lineup.

As Bazargan spoke, about 20,000 Bakhtiar supporters filled a soccer stadium nearby to demonstrate support for the royalist constitution which Khomeini vows to replace. Armed riot troops with automatic rifles stood guard outside and shooed away a small group carrying pictures of the Shiite Moslem patriarch, and 10 soldiers with Iranian flags were among the demonstrators inside the stadium.

In contrast to the small pro-Bakhtiar crowd, Khomeini brought out a million supporters Thursday to march through Tehran in support of Bazargan, and many thousands more in other cities around the country. But Bakhtiar told a news conference he would not surrender the government to a "mob."

Although most of the demonstrations Thursday were non-violent, Radio Tehran reported that troops opened fire on demonstrators setting fire to banks, shops and other buildings in Gurgan, on the Caspian Sea.

The government station said clashes and shooting continued until 9 p.m., and by then 12 person were dead and 45 wounded persons were in hospitals.

The Khomeini camp reported that in the town of Koi, near the Turkish border, a group of

Sentence Attorney On Fogery Counts

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A former Durham attorney received a three-year suspended sentence Thursday in Durham Superior Court after pleading guilty to 11 counts of forgery.

Vann was charged with filling in judgments and signing a judge's name on traffic citations.

Art Vann III was charged with filling in judgments and signing a judge's name on traffic citations.

Two charges of false pretense were dropped as part of an agreement between the defense and District Attorney Dan Edwards Jr.

A State Bureau of Investigation conducted a probe of Vann's actions in September. SBI agent Pam McDuffie testified during the trial that investigators checked more than 100,000 District Court files for forgeries by Vann. She said he admitted committing forgeries in 121 cases. She said Vann told her he had received fees ranging from $1,000 to $2,500, including fines and court costs.

The SBI investigation led to 13 indictments returned against Vann by a Durham County grand jury in November.

Art Vann Sr., Vann's father, and former law partner, told Judge D. B. Herring that he had already reimbursed some of his son's clients a total of $10,000.

Herring said after the sentencing that he considered giving Art Van III 60 days in jail but said an active sentence would serve no purpose since "the tragedy is severe enough as it is."

Herring fined the younger Vann $3,000 and ordered him not to practice law in North Carolina during the three-year probationary period. Vann turned in his law license four months ago.

muliahs — Moslem clerics — on their way to a demonstration was attacked and badly beaten by supporters of the government.

Radio Tehran estimated that a million people marched in the capital to express support of Mehdi Bazargan, the veteran anti-shah politician named by Khomeini to supplant Bakhtiar and head a provisional government. The prime minister told a news conference he would not surrender to a "mob."

"Bazargan, Bazargan, you are our prime minister," and "Bakhtiar, Bakhtiar, you take orders from the U.S.A!" were among the more popular slogan.

Western reporters counted some 200 uniformed men of the air force among the Tehran marchers, and Khomeini's aides claimed there were 2,000 to 3,000 from the army and air force.

It was the largest number of uniformed military men seen among pro-Khomeini marchers so far. But even the largest estimate was less than 1 percent of the 430,000 men in the armed forces.

The loyalty of the army is considered the key to control of the nation, and both sides are vying for its support. So far the commanders remain solidly loyal to Bakhtiar, who was named prime minister by the shah before he left the country three weeks ago.

Bazargan told the government television service that the U.S. government had "indirectly" expressed a desire to establish friendly relations with him and the government he said he would name soon. Washington's support for Bakhtiar has been less than rousing recently, and on Thursday, when asked at news conference about U.S. support, the prime minister replied in English: "I don't know. You can ask President Carter, not me."

Speaking in French, he added: "If the American government gives its assistance, so much the better. If it doesn't, so what?"

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

A Discreet Billy Carter Left Early

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — I think Brother Billy has found a way to redeem himself for past embarrassments he may have caused the president. He appears Saturday night in the opening scenes of the CBS TV movie "Flatbed Annie and Sweetie Pie: Lady Truckers."

The First Brother delivers his two lines at the top and, in a rare display of discretion, quickly gets out of the thing. Had he lingered in a more substantial role, it would have cost the president some votes.

"Flatbed Annie" tries to be "Smokey and the Bandit" in skirts. Instead, it is a sloppily constructed mish-mash on wheels. Eighteen wheels.

The story is about the wife of an independent trucker who has to learn to drive the family rig while her husband is laid up in the hospital. He was put there when two hijackers ambushed him to get at some contraband they'd hidden in the cab of his truck.

(This, by the way, is where Billy Carter makes his debut as a dramatic actor, playing the role of Deputy Sheriff Miller, who tells the trucker's wife about the ambush. "I'm sorry to tell you, Mrs. La Rosa," Billy mumbles. "Jack's in a hospital in L.A. Hijackin' or some-thing.")

The truck is in a police im-pound station, costing many dollars a day while it's there. This is not good, we learn, be-cause the trucker and his wife (Kim Darby) already owe back payments on the truck. In fact, there is a comical knuckle-cruncher from the loan com-pany (Harry Dean Stanton) try-ing to repossess the beloved rig.

Anyway, Miss Darby decides to drive the truck herself, mak-ing enough hauls to pay off the loan company and get Stanton off her back. Nice Uncle Wally (Arthur Godfrey) tells her there's only one proper way a woman can learn to handle a rig, and that's by having Flatbed Annie teach her.

Flatbed Annie, natch, is a fe-male Fonzie, down to the leath-er jacket — a tough-talking truck-driving woman who's really hiding a broken heart. She is played by Annie Potts. She does much hollering throughout the movie.

The two women form a part-nership and head for Los Ange-les, where they find they are being chased not only by the loan company, but by the hijackers, who want their contraband. The rest of the movie consists of chases and foils, including some car wreckate and the standard truck-driving posse coming to the rescue.

You'd think with all of that happening, this story couldn't possibly drag, but drag it does. The story gets lost in its pur-suit of chasings, and halfway through you realize they're not even trying to make sense. The hijackers, for example, have plenty of opportunities to snatch their smuggled dope out of the truck cab, but postpone it, presumably so they won't miss any of the chases.

Trucker movies can be fun; this one isn't. Brother Billy's the best thing in it.

Public TV Will Offer All Shakspeare Plays

By MIKE SILVERMAN
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — With fanfare befitting the kings he chronicled, Shakespeare comes to public television next week.

All of him. All 37 plays by the man generally acknowledged to be the preeminent master of the English language. Seven-teen comedies, 10 histories and 10 tragedies written in the 23 years from 1591 to 1613.

The series, produced by the British Broadcasting Corp. and cast entirely with British ac-tors, is being shown in this country by the Public Broad-casting Service. It is one of the most ambitious and expensive projects ever undertaken for television. For a while, it seemed on its way to becoming one of the most controversial as well.

Six years will pass before the series is completed. What starts here on Wednesday, Feb. 14, with "Julius Caesar," won't end until the spring of 1984, with a play yet to be chosen and a cast yet to be hired.

In between, millions of view-ers will see the whole range of Shakespeare's art — the early works of developing genius like "Romeo and Juliet," and "Richard III"; the mature mas-terpieces like "King Lear" and "The Tempest"; the puzzling tragicomedies like "Measure for Measure" and "A Winter's Tale"; and even a couple of clinkers, "Titus Andronicus" and "Henry VIII," that are re-membered only because of the man who wrote them.

The Shakespeare cycle, bud-geted at more than $14 million, is the biggest project in the BBC's 51-year-history. Time-Life Television is helping fi-nance the project, while Exxon, Metropolitan Life, and Morgan Guaranty Trust are each con-tributing about $35,000 per play to help secure the American rights for 10 years.

When plans to show the series on U.S. television were first announced, some Ameri-can actors and producers pro-tested. Chief among them was Joseph Papp, head of the New York Shakespeare Festival, which performs Shakespeare for free every summer in Cen-tral Park and is responsible for the current Broadway smash, "A Chorus Line."

Papp and the others objected to so much American money and television time being de-voted to a completely British project. They said many un-employed American actors were just as qualified to participate. Some also worried that hearing all the plays performed by ac-tors with British accents would make it harder for American audiences to accept American actors in the roles.

Some plays are being filmed in the BBC studios, some on lo-cation. The longer ones will be cut to fit into a 2-1/2 hour pack-age.

The plays are not being shown in chronological order. That would have meant a pre-ponderance of weaker works at the beginning, when the prod-ucers want to build an audience that will see the series through.

Besides "Julius Caesar," the plays during the first season are "As You Like It" on Feb. 28, "Romeo and Juliet" on March 14, "Richard III" on March 28, "Measure for Meas-ure" on April 11, and "Henry VIII" on April 25.

Jazz Artist In A Minifestival

NEW YORK (AP) — Jazz fans will get three chances in March to see and hear singer Sarah Vaughan at Carnegie Hall. Authorities say it's the first such minifestival for a jazz performer.

"I hope we're establishing a tradition," said jazz impresario George Wein, who will present the shows.

"I've seen Arthur Rubinstein do a cycle of concerts in Car-negie Hall in one month and sell out. I feel jazz artists can do the same thing," he said.

Miss Vaughan will sing on March 21 with Mel Torme and saxophonist Gerry Mulligan. Two days later she will appear with singers Betty Carter and Eddie Jefferson and a 20-piece string orchestra. And on March 30, she will sing with the Count Basie Band.

SHAD MEETING

GRIFTON — All Grifton citizens and interested persons are urged to attend a Grifton Shad Festival planning session Monday, Feb. 12, 7:30 p.m., in the Grifton Library. The Shad Festival will be held April 20-22.

Declarer failed to heed the warning implicit in the auc-tion, and as a result he went down in a slam which should have been made.

This hand was partly a triumph for "Standard Inter-national," the bidding methods devised by Dr. George Rosenkranz of Mex-ico City. North's opening bid of two clubs showed either a no trump type of hand of 19-21 points or an unbalanced hand with no more than 4 losers. Thus, when East at-tempted to create a barrage with his leap to four diamonds, South was confident that he had the values for game because his side rated to have a fit in either hearts or clubs. North was delighted by the develop-ments, and not even East's Lightner double of six hearts tempered his satisfaction.

A Lightner double asks for an unusual lead, so West im-mediate ruled out a dia-mond. From his hand it was obvious what lead his part-ner wanted. With his spade length, it was quite likely that his partner was void, so he led the king of spades. Declarer blithely called for RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock broiler market was higher for next week, supplies moderate, demand very good, weights desirable. The dock weighted average price for next week was 48.17 for small purchases of plant grade broilers picked up at processing plants. Estimated slaughter today, 1,496,000.

Hens

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — Market steady, supply moderate, demand good. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm Wednesday, Thursday and Friday slaughter 24½ to 26.

By CHET CURRIER AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gained ground today in the face of a wholesale price report that one government official called "a catastrophe."

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 3.81 to 822.68 by noon.

Gainers outpaced losers by close to a 2-1 margin in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Labor Department reported this morning that prices charged by producers for finished goods jumped 1.3 percent last month — the equivalent of a 15.6 percent annual rate.

That marked the sharpest monthly increase for that measure of inflationary pressures since it climbed 2 percent in November 1974.

But analysts pointed out that such negative news had been widely anticipated on Wall Street. And traders seemed to feel that the market had already taken it into account with its broad decline earlier in the week.

Citibank of New York, meanwhile, lowered its prime lending rate from 11½ to 11 percent, matching a reduction posted 10 days ago by New York's Chase Manhattan Bank.

Coal issues advanced for the second straight day amid expectations that the industry might benefit from reduced world oil supplies as a result of the shutoff of oil from Iran. Pittston gained ¾ to 19½, and Eastern Gas & Fuel was up ¼ at 18½.

The NYSE's composite index rose 19 to 54.93. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.04 at 159.78.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 11.14 million shares at noon.

To Distribute Bond-Vote Information

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

J. E. "Ed" Waldrop, a former chairman of the Greenville Utilities Commission and past president of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce, has been named as chairman of a special information committee organized to distribute facts about the utility bond referdums to be voted on by Greenville residents in April. GUC director Charles Horne said the special information committee will be responsible for meeting with local clubs and organizations throughout February and March in an effort to inform local residents of the facts dealing with the bond vote.

Registered Greenville

voters will go to the polls April 3, to decide whether to issue $24 million in general obligation bonds to finance improvements to GUC's water, sewer and electrical systems.

In three separate proposals, voters will decide whether or not to:

— Issue $5 million in bonds to finance upgrading and expansion of the commission's electric distribution system.

— Issue $5 million in bonds to extend sewage outfall and collector lines and finance construction of a new waste water treatment plant that will allow the city to comply with required Environmental Protection Agency regulations.

— Issue $14 million in bonds to fund construction of a 12 million gallon per day water treatment facility (the city has already outgrown the capacity of its present plant), erect two elevated storage tanks to insure adequate water pressure, and build a six million gallon water storage facility.

Issuance of the bonds will mean no increase in city taxes or electric rates. However, for the average residential water customer the projected rate increase could add $2 to $3 to a monthly bill. Average residential sewer customers could expect a maximum rate increase of less than $1.25 per month.

According to utilities officials, the alternative to issuing the bonds would be to establish a "no growth" policy which in effect would prohibit new customers from being added to the electric, water and sewer systems.

"We believe that every citizen should decide how to vote on these important questions based on the facts, and not on rumors and misinformation," Waldrop said.

"We have developed a special slide program and a question-and-answer brochure covering the facts surrounding the referendum," he continued, "and will be attempting to get before as many groups as possible within the next few months."

Waldrop, who is president of Smith-Waldrop Motors, has served two terms on the Greenville Board of Aldermen, is a past chairman of the Pitt-Greenville Airport Commission, and was a charter member of the Greenville Jaycees. He has been an active member of the Greenville Kiwanis Club, holding a number of local and regional offices with the organization, and is a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

Two Injured In Accident

In a Thursday afternoon accident near Greenville, two persons were reported injured.

According to Trooper A. G. Wright, a car driven by Bennie Joyner, Jr., of Rt. 2, Greenville was headed south on rural paved road 1704, 14th Street extension, when it apparently failed to stop for a stop sign.

Wright said the car crossed the intersection, of rural paved road 1725 and struck a ditch bank head-on.

A passenger in the car, listed as Kim Heathercutt, of Greenville was also reported injured, and admitted to Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Wright said Joyner was treated and released.

Members of the Greenville Rescue Squad worked for about 45 minutes to free the two men from the wreckage.

The investigator said Joyner was charged with failing to stop for a stop sign and driving while license permanently revoked.

Wright also said Heathercutt was charged with allowing an unlicensed person to operate a motor vehicle.

Damage to the car was listed as a total loss.

Investigation into the accident is continuing.

Ransey Leads Buckeyes To Win

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Sports Writer

Maybe Ohio State's football team should recruit Kelvin Ransey. He knows how to score against Michigan.

However, Ransey plies his wares for Ohio State's basketball team rather than the footballers, who haven't scored a touchdown in three years against Michigan. And the 6-foot-1 junior did Michigan in Thursday night by scoring his team's last six points in the final 3½ minutes as the 13th-ranked Buckeyes made off with a 63-60 triumph and regained undisputed possession of first place in the Big Ten.

Ransey's heroics included both ends of a one-and-one free throw situation with 20 seconds left among his 18 points.

"The man at the line isn't a bad one to have there," said Coach Eldon Miller.

But he didn't know how nervous Ransey was with Ohio State clinging to a one-point lead.

"I started shaking when I went to the bench for the time-out," Ransey said. "I told myself, 'No, no, not now.' Then I got hold of myself. I concentrated on the rim. I put more dip, more wrist in my shot."

Ohio State sits atop the Big Ten thanks to 10th-ranked Michigan State's 60-57 triumph over No. 15 Iowa as Earvin Johnson and Greg Kelsner teamed up for 25 points and 26 rebounds. Iowa's Ronnie Lester, the league's scoring leader, was held to a season-low 5 points and fouled out with 11½ minutes left.

While Iowa bowed to a ranked Michigan State team, No. 20 Illinois succumbed to unranked Purdue 71-65 as 7-foot-1 Joe Barry Carroll poured in 24 points and led the Boilermakers from an early 12-4 deficit to their sixth consecutive victory.

"They killed us inside," said Illinois Coach Lou Henson. "Carroll is great — an NBA player."

The other members of The Top Twenty survived. Fifth-ranked Louisville defeated Metro Conference rival Tulane 77-66 while No. 8 Louisiana State shaded Mississippi State 52-48 and No. 16 Alabama trimmed Mississippi 83-73 in South-eastern Conference action.

Bobby Turner scored 18 points and Louisville sank 20 of 25 free throws down the stretch to post its 13th consecutive victory. Darrell Griffith added 14 points. Scooter McCray had 12 and Larry Williams grabbed 11 rebounds as Louisville improved its record to 21-3.

LSU remained atop the SEC, one-half game ahead of Alabama. Al Green's 15 points paced the Tigers over Mississippi State while Rickey Brown had 16 for the losers, who played without leading scorer Ray White and lost another starter, Greg Grim, with a sprained ankle early in the contest.

Alabama's Reggie King and Eddie Phillips put on a two-man show against Ole Miss. King scored 30 points and grabbed 10 rebounds while Phillips, a freshman, had 25 points. "We shot well, we handled the ball well and we boarded well," said "Bama Coach C.M. Newton. "I have to be pleased with the way we played."

In a stunning upset, Rhode Island, New England's No. 1 team, was knocked off by Boston University 75-69 as Tom Channel poured in a career-high 35 points. Channel scored 24 points in the second half, including a jump shot that put BU on top for good with 2:41 remaining. Rhody's Sly Williams had 26 points but only seven after the intermission.

Rounding out Big Ten play, Indiana whipped Northwestern 82-57 as guards Randy Wittman and Butch Carter combined for 31 points while Kevin McHale scored 32 points as Minnesota held off Wisconsin 74-72.

In the Pacific-10, Peter Gudmundson's 37 points paced Washington over California 71-56.

ACC Women In Second Round

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Clemson Coach Annie Tribble says her Tigers were anticipating tonight's match against North Carolina State when they defeated Duke 81-56 Thursday as the 2nd Atlantic Coast Conference Women's Basketball Tournament got under way.

But Tribble admits it will be hard to beat the Wolfpack on its own territory. N.C. State also scored a win Thursday, romping Wake Forest 100-43. In the third game of the day, North Carolina shot by Virginia, 86-51.

The Clemson-N.C. State contest is at 9 p.m. today, following a 7 p.m. match between North Carolina and Maryland, the number one seed in the tournament. The championship match is set for 4 p.m. Saturday.

Tribble said Thursday's contest wasn't one of Clemson's better games, but she said the team played with confidence. Clemson got off to a fast start, scoring the first eight points of the game, and led 42-22 at the halfway mark.

Duke staged a comeback in the second half. But Drema Greer's 13 assists put a stop to that and helped the Tigers outscore the Blue Devils 14-2 and seal the victory.

Barbara Kennedy was high-scorer for Clemson with 29 points. Duke's Lisa Warren led her team with 17 points.

N.C. State is hoping to make a comeback against Clemson which defeated the Wolfpack in their last meeting, 86-73.

"The team doesn't feel we played our best against Clemson last time," Wolfpack Coach Kay Yow said. "The team is looking forward to playing them again to prove something."

Genia Beasley poured in 20 points to lead Wolfpack to its lopsided victory Thursday. The game was never close as N.C. State opened the second half with a 19-2 scoring streak to increase their 50-20 halftime lead.

The Deacons were unable to crack the Wolfpack's zone and N.C. State's defense forced Wake Forest to commit 31 turnovers.

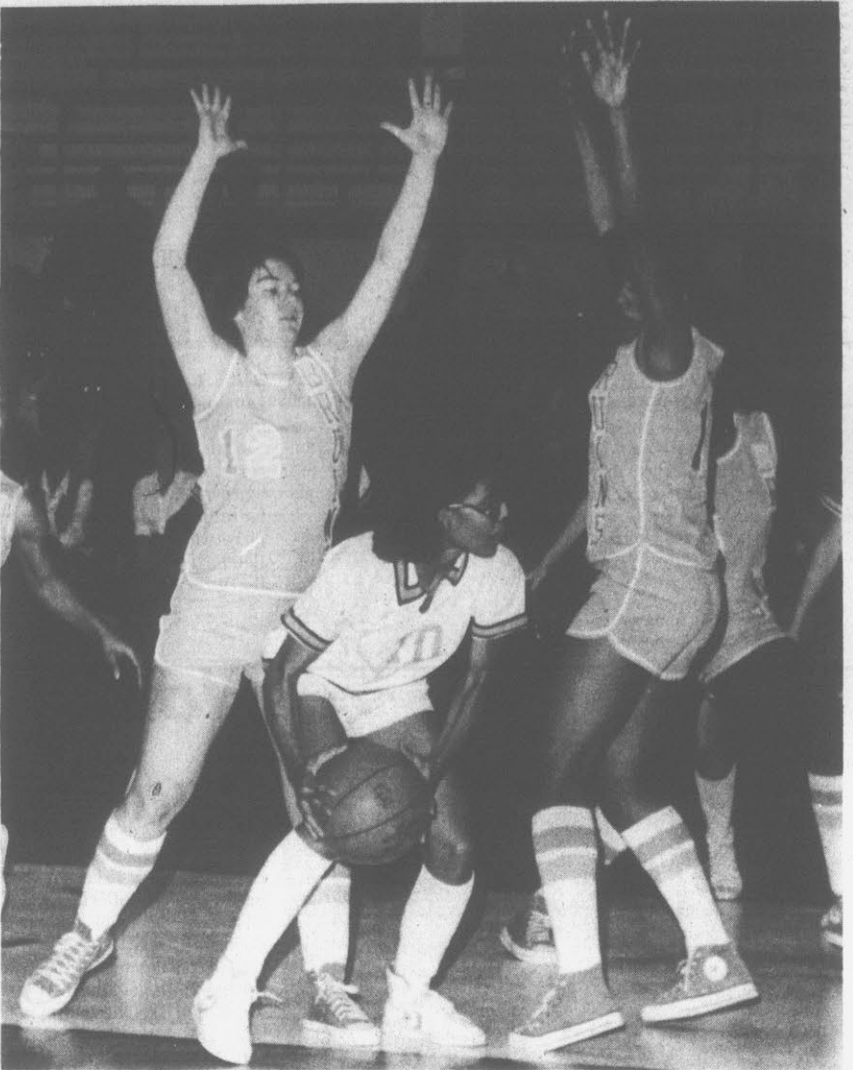

"Our defense is improving," Yow said. "How far we go will depend on our defense."

In the third game of the evening, Bernie McGlade scored 25 points for the Tar Heels. North Carolina forced Virginia into 25 turnovers in the second half and quickly widened its 36-27 halftime margin to a 20-point lead.

From then on, the Cavaliers never threatened.

Leading scorers for Virginia were Valerie Ackerman and Melissa Maahony with 14 points apiece. Double-figure scorers for North Carolina were McGlade, Linda Matthews with 15 and Kelly Roache with 14. The Tar Heels worked the ball inside and took advantage of many snowbirds under the boards, as North Carolina dominated rebounds 48-25.

The Tar Heels hit 52 percent from the field, compared to Virginia's 40 percent.

Looking For Help

Haas, Wadkins Tied

By BOB GREEN

HONOLULU, Hawaii (AP) — Andy Bean had just fired a 6-under-par 66 — spectacular in most cases — and casually shrugged it off.

"Just trying to keep my two cents-worth in," he said.

In the incredible scoring that was produced in Thursday's first round of the $300,000 Hawaiian Open, that's all he did. Got his two cents worth in.

It wasn't good enough to lead.

That spot went to a trio of 65s posted by Lanny Wadkins, Jay Haas and rookie Lindy Miller. While their scores were the same, they arrived at the lead by different routes over the beautifully conditioned, 7,234-yard Waialae Country Club course. Miller one-putted the perfect greens 11 times. Haas — who now has led or shared the first round lead in three of five events on the Tour this year — didn't make a bogey.

at 15 at 28-13 midway through the period. They held that margin at halftime, 32-17.

But in the second half, Beddingfield came out in a zone trap defense, and it caused the Rampettes a great deal of trouble. Rose managed only six points, all by Sharon Williams, in the third period, while the Lady Bruins were cutting the lead to 38-29.

In the final quarter, Beddingfield kept the pressure up, and although down by seven, 46-39, with 1:29 to go, put on another rally and closed to within one at 46-45 with 36 seconds left. Donna Cullipher hit a free throw with 25 seconds left for the final score of the game.

"We played well in the first half," Coach Robert Carraway said. "If we'd hit our free throws, we'd probably have had 40 points. I'm really not sure why we were bothered by their zone trap so much. I don't think we rebounded well either in the second half."

"But I really didn't expect to win by much, and I've got to give Beddingfield a lot of credit for their comeback."

Rose was led by Kathy Streeter, Williams and Margaret McGlohan, all with ten each, while JoAnn Griffin had 13 to lead the Bruins.

If East Carolina University's basketball team hasn't set some sort of record, it's a wonder.

The Pirates have been involved in five overtime contests so far this year. They've played 21 games, so that's almost one in four—25 percent of the schedule.

But perhaps the oddest part of this is that four of these games have come in a row, two of them going double overtime.

Of the five, the Pirates have lost three of them, but only one by more than two points. That was to Old Dominion, 90-85.

Looking back into the season, the Pirates, since the start of the New Year, have lost six games and won five. Of those five defeats, three of them came in the overtimes by a total of nine points. The other losses included a run-away by Tennessee-Chattanooga; an 81-69 loss to Detroit, a team making noises like a post-season contender (beating two ranked teams last week); and a 104-88 loss to N.C. State that was closer than the score would show.

That 81-69 loss is another that looks more than it really is. Just add two points to each team's total, and it looks like an entirely different score...83-71. It's still 12 points, but to glance at either one, most people would swear that the latter is closer than the former. The eye sees only the "8" and "6" in the first, making it a 20-point blowout, where the "8" and "7" of the second make it look much closer.

In all the games, except the UT-Chattanooga one, the Pirates were in the running all the way. Even in the two losses just prior to the end of the year, to Connecticut and to Maryland, were not blowouts, and the Pirates were involved in the game all the way.

Following the disastrous trip to Florida that saw the Bucs twice blown away, there has been a new outlook for the team, and it has shown in the games since then.

Only a handful of points at the right places could turn the record completely around, to, at worst, 12-9.

As Larry Gillman points out, it is a shame that the Pirates are having to suffer through a year like they are having as far as their record is concerned, only to see teams like Old Dominion and Virginia Commonwealth—certainly not one bit better, have outstanding records and probably will see some post-season action.

In talking with one of the Virginia Commonwealth radio crewmembers following Wednesday night's game, he commented to us that the Pirates were not as bad as their record showed.

The agreement was that the Pirates lack of a strong inside game is the key factor. "If you had a strong inside man like (VCU's Ren) Watson, you'd probably have a real good winning record," he said.

We fully agree. While the Pirates have the potential, and in some cases, are getting top play from those on the court, there is still not a dominator inside like Watson, who averages 12.4 rebounds a game, and 14.6 points.

East Carolina's scoring comes basically from the outside, where Oliver Mack, George Maynor and Herb Krusen operate. Greg Cornelius adds some power inside, but he is more of a forward than a center and doesn't dominate like Watson does.

With only two losses from this year's team—Mack and Cornelius—the Pirates can, with a little good recruiting, come on to have an outstanding team next year, despite another tough schedule.

Tom Szymansky, 6-10, already on campus, and eligible next January, will add some strength to the inside as a transfer. The other recruits will be watched carefully, as will the progress of those already on the team.

The Legislature....

The reduction in the limit to $3,000 was seen as a compromise between the finance companies and banks. The companies are in favor of the higher limit, but banks fear it would result in a loss of some automobile loan business.

Consumer advocates have opposed the bill saying it encourages people to go further into debt. But sponsor Rep. Jim Morgan, D-Guilford, said it would prevent persons who need more than $1,500 from going to several finance companies and paying the higher interest rate on the first $300.

The amended bill now goes to the full Senate and if it is approved, it must go back to the House for concurrence on the amendment.

Teachers

The Senate Rules Committee has approved a measure that would immediately increase the daily pay for substitute teachers from $20 to $30. But instead of sending the bill to the full Senate, the committee referred it to the Special Ways and Means Committee.

The $1 million that analysts say is needed for the increase for the rest of the current school year would come from education funds allocated for other purposes.

Unaffiliated Candidates

Two House-passed bills that will restrict the activities of unaffiliated candidates running for election were approved by the Senate.

The first, a bill that would keep a candidate who has lost a primary from filing to run as an independent in the general election, was approved by a 42-2 vote.

That bill was labeled as the "McDuffie bill" because Sen. James McDuffie, D-Mecklenburg, filed to run as an independent after he lost the Democratic primary last year. He also lost the general election.

The second bill would require an unaffiliated candidate who affiliates with a party to do so 90 days before he files to run in an election. The bill was approved by a 44-2 vote.

Domestic Violence

A Senate Judiciary Committee that will act on a domestic violence bill has raised questions about whether recognition of unmarried couples under the law would set a precedent for recognition in other areas.

The bill, which addresses the problem of domestic violence and proposes remedies for the situation and relief for the abused partners, would apply to unmarried couples who live together as well as married couples.

Sen. R.C. Soles, D-Columbus, asked if recognizing such unions in a domestic violence law would set a precedent for lawsuits similar to the one actor Lee Marvin is now involved in. Marvin is being sued for property and money by his former live-in girlfriend.

The committee is expected to act on the bill next week.

Religious Wages

The House Manufacturers and Labor Committee approved a bill that would increase from $2 to $2.50 per hour the minimum wage paid to seasonal employees of religious or nonprofit educational centers. These centers are exempted from paying the state minimum wage.

Currently the state minimum wage is $2.50 per hour, but Labor Commissioner John Brooks has said he will push for legislation to increase it to $2.90 an hour.

Coroner

Three members of the Cumberland County delegation filed a bill Thursday that would abolish the office of coroner in that county.

The person currently holding that office, Norma Currie, was elected after campaigning against the office and saying she would try to do away with it.

The bill was filed by Reps. Billy Clark, Charles Holt and Lura Tally.

False I.D.

Soles filed a bill that would make it a crime to sell false operators' or chauffeurs' licenses or learners' permits.

If the bill is enacted, persons convicted would be guilty of a misdemeanor and punishable by a fine of $500 to $1,000.

Cosmetologists Meet Monday

Mrs. Polly Troutman will give an electrolysis demonstration Monday, Feb. 12, 7:30 p.m., as part of the monthly meeting of the Pitt County Affiliate of the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association.

All members are invited to attend the meeting, to be held at Mitchell's Hairstyling Academy.

Pitt NAACP To Celebrate Emancipation Proclamation

The Pitt County Branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) will observe its Emancipation Proclamation Celebration this weekend. The theme for 1979's celebration is "New Horizons."

Saturday, Feb. 10, an open "rap" session will be held at St. Gabriel's School from 8:45 a.m. to 3 p.m. Such topics will be discussed as students' rights and responsibilities, competency testing, youth and adults in politics, and hiring and firing of teachers. There will be no charge for the "rap" session.

Saturday, 7 p.m., Mayor Leander "Lee" Morgan of New Bern will be featured speaker at a freedom banquet at the Holiday Inn, Greenville. Price will be $8.50 per person.

Morgan received his bachelor's degree from Howard University and a master's degree in Administration from George Washington University.

Morgan, vice president of Rivers Funeral Home, Inc., was appointed by N.C. Gov. Holshouser and Gov. Jim Hunt to the state Health Planning Board. He was also appointed to the North Carolina Local Government Commission in 1977.

In 1971, Morgan was elected as the first black to serve on the Alderman's Council in New Bern. In October, 1977, he was elected the first black mayor of New Bern.

Morgan and his wife, the former Barbara Rivers of New Bern, have five children.

The climax of the weekend services will be the Mass Meeting and Freedom Rally at Mount Calvary F. W. B. Church, Ward and Hudson Streets, Greenville.

The Rev. J. Joy Johnson, president of the General Baptist State Convention of North Carolina, Inc., will be the featured speaker.

Johnson, a native of Laurel Hill, received his bachelor's and L.L.D. degrees from Shaw University, as well as an honorary doctorate from Friendship College, Rock Hill, S.C.

In addition to serving as minister of the First Baptist Church, Fairmont, the Rev. Johnson served two terms as Fairmont Town Commissioner before his election in 1971 to the General Assembly from the 21st district.

Johnson resigned his post in the General Assembly in 1978 to accept an appointment to the state Parole Commission from Gov. James Hunt.

Married to the former Omega Foster Johnson of Burlington, Johnson is involved in Masonic and Shrine work, as well as serving as a life member of the NAACP and trustee of Shaw University.

D. D. Burge Sr. and Purvis Cohens are serving as chairmen of the emancipation proclamation celebration.

Other Pitt officers of the NAACP include the following: D. D. Garrett Sr., president; the Rev. David Hammond, chairman of church work; John W. Maye Jr., chairman of membership; and Mary Daughtry, secretary.

Applauding Import Curb

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — Domestic clothespin manufacturers, feeling the pinch of foreign competition, are applauding President Carter's decision to limit clothespin imports.

The White House announced Thursday that Carter has slapped a three-year quota on clothespin imports, limiting them to 2 million gross per year. The International Trade Commission had recommended a five-year quota with a yearly import limit of 3.2 million gross.

Only four U.S. firms, three in Maine and one in Vermont, manufacture wooden clothespins. The firms provide hundreds of jobs in their communities, but with higher wages and higher materials costs, profit margins have slipped lower and lower.

Officials of the firms, feeling that cheaper imports were putting the squeeze on their markets, petitioned the ITC for its initial investigation, which focused solely on imports from communist countries. Besides Forster Manufacturing, the other producers are Penley Corp. of West Paris; Diamond International Corp. of West Peru and National Clothespin Co. of Montpelier, Vt.

Clothespin use declined in the 1950s and early 1960s when automatic dryers became popular, but picked up in recent years because of high energy costs.

Robert L. Martin, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, presented awards to corn and soybean production winners Thursday at the American Legion Bldg., Greenville.

The contest, sponsored by the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service and local grain dealers, honored corn and soybean farmers in Pitt County for exceptional yield.

Tommie Hooks of the Winterville community won first place honors for raising 165.3 bushels of corn per acre. Gary Stocks of the Chicod community placed second with a yield of 164.8 bushels per acre.

In the soybean section, Robert May of the Farmville community placed first with a yield of 40.85 bushels of soybeans per acre. Mrs. Clifton Cannon of Black Jack was honored with a second place prize for raising 37.08 bushels per acre.

Corn yields were determined by harvesting a minimum of one acre, with soybean yield deducted from a minimum of three acres.

First place winners were awarded $100 and plaques. Second place winners won $75 and plaques.

Dr. Gene Krenzer and Dr. George Naderman, extension specialists with North Carolina State University, presented a program on production recommendations for 1979 for corn and soybeans.

$400,000 To Fund Projects

An appropriation of $400,000 has been allocated by the General Assembly to assist local governments and state agencies in providing the non-federal share of funds for community development projects.

Wayne Harris, Local Government Coordinator for the Mid-East Commission, explained that, in most cases, local governments applying for federal funds must match dollar-for-dollar the amount of grant money awarded.

"In this instance, the $400,000, under the State Community Development Grant Program, will lend support for the matching funds required by local governments applying for a federal grant," Harris said.

Within the Mid-East region, four applications have been submitted to the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

The village of Simpson has requested $5,600 to match a $5,600 grant from the Heritage Conservation and Recreation Service (a federal agency). The grant monies will be used to construct a public recreation facility, including a basketball court and playground area.

GOP MEETING

The Pitt County Republican Party will meet Monday at 8 p.m. at the Arlington Boulevard office of Home Savings and Loan Assn.

The meeting is opened to the public.

Installation Held By Group

ATTENTION TOBACCO FARMERS

Ralph C. Tucker, Sr. and Ralph C. Tucker, Jr. will be operating TUCKER WAREHOUSE No. 514, located downtown Farmville in the old Gordon Lee House.

We realize that you have an entire year of hard work and money invested in your tobacco crop. With so much at stake, we urge you to be careful to choose a warehouse firm that will handle and protect your tobacco from abuse. Those of us that depend on tobacco for our livelihood understand the sacrifices and work involved in getting our crop to the warehouse floor.

Please, before you choose a place to market your 1979 crop, consider the people that you will be dealing with. If you do not have someone in whom you can place your trust, the final step—marketing—may be the most costly step of all.

Honesty and integrity are the only promises that we at TUCKER WAREHOUSE No. 514 can offer the farmers that market their tobacco with us. We hope each of you will give us an opportunity to market your tobacco at TUCKER WAREHOUSE No. 514 downtown Farmville. We invite you to place your confidence and your crop with us in 1979. Your trust in our operation will be greatly appreciated.

Thank you

Step-By-Step Review For Anti-Pollution Proposal

By LORI COOKE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A package of bills designed to bring state laws in line with federal environmental protection legislation underwent a piece-by-piece explanation in the Joint Natural and Economic Resources Committee Thursday.

Milton S. Heath Jr. of the University of North Carolina Institute of Government at Chapel Hill told legislators the bills would bring state legislation on the environment in line with 1977 amendments to the federal clean air and water acts.

Currently, the state enforces environmental regulations on its own. If it is to continue to do so, state laws must be updated to match standards set in the 1977 federal legislation.

Steve Meehan, public affairs director for the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, which favors the legislation, said the federal Environmental Protection Agency prefers states to handle day-to-day regulation. EPA monitors their performance.

Natural Resources Secretary Howard Lee said at an earlier meeting that the state also prefers to do its own environmental regulation so state officials who understand industry problems can work with an industry to come up with a plan to control pollution. If the federal government handled the regulation, industry officials would have to travel to Washington to meet with federal administrators unfamiliar with their problems, Lee said.

As part of the legislative package, Rep. John W. Varner, D-Lexington, has introduced a joint resolution calling for legislation that would set up a motor vehicle inspection program in areas of the state which are not in compliance with federal air quality standards. Varner has asked that a study commission be set up to study the issue and make a recommendation to that effect by Feb. 1, 1980.

Mecklenburg County is the only area in the state currently in need of such a program, but Meehan said densely populated areas like Raleigh, Winston-Salem and Asheville might soon be compelled to develop one.

The resolution will allow North Carolina to develop its own plan rather than have one imposed on it by the federal government. Meehan and Lee said the proposal is an example of how the state can get the kind of anti-pollution programs it wants by retaining state regulation.

A bill amending the state Clean Air Act, introduced by Sen. Rachel Gray, D-Guilford, would allow a county or municipal governing body to establish and enforce a local air pollution control program under the guidance of the state. The bill would require approval by a majority of the governing body's members on permits or enforcement orders.

Some fines would be stiffened from $5,000 to $25,000. Heath said state laws need stiffer fines for certain offenses in order to conform with the 1977 federal legislation.

A bill amending the state law governing the discharge of wastewater would stiffen some fines from $5,000 to $10,000 and some from $15,000 to $50,000. The bill was introduced by Sen. Robert Wynne, D-Wake.

A bill to amend the 1973 state Oil Pollution Act, introduced by Rep. Charles Holt, D-Cumberland, would include other hazardous substances besides oil under its provisions.

The bill would require anyone dumping oil or other hazardous substances in waters in violation of the act to pay the cost of damages. The damages would include the cost of investigations made by the state Environmental Management Commission and the cost of returning the waters to their original condition, including restocking them with fish and marine life.

Rep. Judson D. DeRamus, D-Forsyth, introduced a bill aimed at controlling toxic chemicals, particularly PCBs. The bill would require the Environmental Management Commission to draw up a schedule of controlled toxic substances.

PCBs are listed in the bill as falling in that category, and any spilling, dumping or burning of PCBs without a permit would be a felony if the bill is approved. Any violation would be punishable by a fine of up to $100,000 a day, imprisonment for an unspecified time, or both.

Rep. James Ezzell, D-Nash, said he has given up on his plan to amend the bill to permit any government board or committee to meet in secret by declaring itself a "study or research commission."

Ezzell, who drafted the amendment Tuesday, was stung by a front-page editorial in his hometown paper, The Rocky Mount Evening Telegram, that called the amendment "irresponsible and unacceptable."

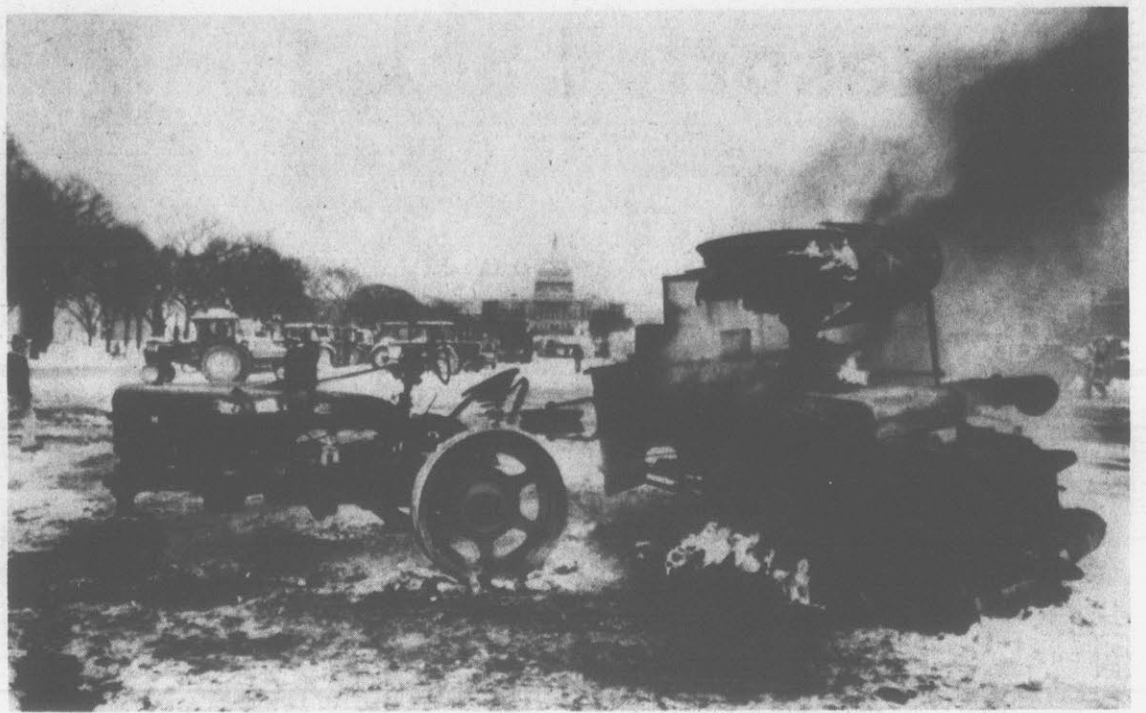

"I called my children to see if they still loved me," he quipped Thursday.

Backers of the open meetings law revision, led by N.C. Press Association attorney William Lassiter, said the effect of Ezzell's amendment would have been to allow any government board to declare itself a "study commission," and exclude the public.

Lassiter called it a "subterfuge" for holding closed meetings. And he said if the amendment was included, "We might as well not have an open meetings law."

"I'm not going to fight it," Ezzell said after a meeting of the House Judiciary III Committee considering the open meetings bill. "I got memorialized on it yesterday."

Ezzell had not yet introduced his amendment, and said he would not do so now. But he added that he was not bowing to pressure.

Mere Handful Of N.C. Farmers In Washington

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — While 2,000 tractors rumbled through the streets of Washington and several hundred farmers jeered U.S. Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland this week, North Carolina farmers stayed home and tended to their farms.

One state congressional aide said Thursday that only 40 or 50 of the state's 150,000 farmers joined the tractorcade to Washington.

The aide said the American Agriculture Movement, which sponsored the protest, has little support among the state's farmers. Only 150 persons turned out in Raleigh this past weekend for an American Agriculture Movement rally — none from the state Farm Bureau Federation, the state's leading farm lobby.

Most of the protestors were grain farmers from the Deep South and the Midwest, observers said. Those farmers suffered heavy losses last year from a drought and depressed prices.

On the other hand, North Carolina farmers had good weather conditions and strong markets for most farm commodities in 1978.

"It's just the nature of agriculture in North Carolina that we are blessed with a diverse agricultural economy," said John W. Sledge, president of the Farm Bureau Federation. Sledge's farm includes tobacco, peanuts, corn and hogs.

While many grain and cotton farmers are dissatisfied with federal programs, two leading state crops, peanuts and tobacco, are supported by federal programs that are generally popular.

"Most of these fellows in-involved in this thing are from areas of the country where there's been severe drought, and they're dependent almost entirely on grains, mostly corn and soybeans," said James A. Graham, state agriculture commissioner, who met in Washington with Bergland and President Carter and protesting farmers earlier this week.

"Of course, we've got a long way to go before the farmer feels he is at the standard of living he wants," Graham said.

But there were North Carolina farmers who supported the protestors. Charles L. Hart stayed at home on his Granville County dairy and tobacco farm, but his heart and some of his money went with several hundred farmers who passed through the state last weekend on their way to Washington.

Hart and other Granville County farmers pitched in to refuel the tractor caravan with 3,800 gallons of diesel fuel because he said North Carolina farmers might need their help some day.

"I think North Carolina farmers should support this...Sure, we've got a good tobacco program, but the four or five Southern tobacco states did not get this program alone. They had help from the other states," Hart said.

Wide Rift Still Exists

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The President of the University of North Carolina says major disagreement still exists between UNC and federal civil rights officials concerning university desegregation.

William C. Friday said he knew of no breakthrough in the controversy, but declined comment on remarks by gubernatorial assistant John A. Williams Jr. who suggested earlier this week a settlement with the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare could be reached.

A delegation from North Carolina visited HEW officials this week to discuss the desegregation process. HEW is pressuring the state to shift and relocate academic programs in order to speed up desegregation in the 16-campus system.

Friday said the biggest disagreement remaining was the issue of program duplication. The state has agreed to upgrade the five traditionally black campuses and recruit more blacks to the 11 traditionally white campuses, but has opposed merging or shifting programs.

HEW has until March 14 to respond to UNC's latest desegregation plan. The federal government could move to cut off about $89 million in aid to UNC if an agreement is not reached.

DSA Winner In Laurinburg

LAURINBURG — John H. Horne, Jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. John H. Horne, Sr. of Greenville has received the Jaycee Distinguished Service Award from the Laurinburg Jaycees.

The award, honoring Horne for community work achieved during 1978, was presented to him at the annual banquet at which the award is given to the most outstanding young man for the past year.

Horne, an attorney, is a 1964 graduate of Rose High School and a 1972 graduate of the School of Law, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. He is a member of the law firm Gordon and Horne, P.A., in Laurinburg.

Ski Resorts Look For Record Turnout

By ELISSA McCARY
Associated Press Writer

Forecasters say they expect this week's snowfall to attract a record number of skiers to the slopes this weekend. The winter storm that moved across the state Tuesday night dumped 14 inches of snow in the northwest mountains, up to six inches in the Piedmont and dusted the coast with a few flurries.

Another winter storm was expected to bring snow to the western part of the state Thursday night and Friday morning.

"I love snow for only one reason. It gets people excited," said Randy Banks, general manager of Seven Devils ski resort between Boone and Banner Elk.

Erich Bindlechner, manager of Sugar Mountain ski resort said, "There's no substitute for the real stuff, as far as excitement goes." He said man-made snow can make conditions excellent even on a sunny day, but people in the Piedmont don't think of skiing until it snows.

Asked what kind of weekend he is expecting, Grady Moretz, ski director at Appalachian Ski Mountain, said "super."

"Let me put it this way. If I were humble, I'd say I was optimistic," Moretz said. "I think it's going to be between great and out of this world."

Col. Norman Smith, manager of Ski Beech in Banner Elk, said the snow conditions are excellent.

"The snow is in the best shape, and it will stay in the best shape because of the cold weather," Smith said. "I think we will have a really fine weekend."

The weekend is shaping up to be a busy one for motels in the Boone-Blowing Rock area. All rooms were reserved by the first of the week.

"We don't have anything left for Friday or Saturday," a spokesman at the Village Inn in Beech Mountain said. "And I don't think anyone in the area has anything. With all the snow, skiers will be pouring in here Friday night."

A check with other area motels found that skiers without reservations for lodging won't be staying near the slopes this weekend. One motel operator said he believed motels as far east as Hickory would be booked up.

The Highway Patrol said it will be warning motorists heading into the ski areas that main roads are still slippery, with some icy patches and snow. But the patrol denied rumors that troopers will be ticketing motorists who do not have snow tires or chains on their vehicles.

"We don't have the authority to give tickets for not having chains on," said Lt. J.G. Thomas, district commander of Troop G of the patrol in Asheville. "We will have patrol in the area warning people that the roads may be hazardous in spots, and we will assist anyone needing help. But we won't be giving out tickets."

Investigation Of GSA Stalls

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The internal investigation of corruption at the General Services Administration has been "basically brought to a halt" by uncertainties over the investigation's leadership, says the agency's just-departed general counsel.

Irwin Borowski, who directed the GSA investigation for the past 2½ months, quietly left the scandal-plagued agency last Friday after President Carter selected another candidate to fill the newly created job of inspector general.

GSA Administrator Jay Solomon's strong support for Borowski to be inspector general is reported to have contributed to the White House decision last month to seek a replacement for Solomon, who is expected to leave this spring.

Asked about his departure Thursday, Borowski said: "It was cruel and inhumane punishment for me staying there... You can't do anything unless you can plan ahead."

He said the changeover at the top of GSA's investigation has left the internal corruption probe in "limbo" although some old cases still are being pursued. He added that Solomon's "lameduck" status also has caused problems for the investigation.

The White House announced last week that the president will nominate Kurt Mueller-Berg, head of the Justice Department's organized crime section, to be GSA's inspector general.

Borowski has returned to the Securities and Exchange Commission, where he had been assigned before taking the GSA job. The GSA issued no public statement announcing his departure.

Borowski reportedly was opposed for the inspector general's job by the Justice Department, which is conducting a separate investigation of corruption at the GSA. Some department officials considered Borowski overly aggressive and abrasive.

ATTENTION BUYERS!

Do interest rates, "points", taxes, market trends in various locations, construction, mortgages, market values, etc., frighten you? Let us help, it's our job. You can DEPEND on us to answer all your questions and to help you make the right decision about buying. After all, buying a home is probably the biggest financial decision the average family will EVER make. Let our qualifications in every phase of home buying work for you. Don't make the mistake of over buying—paying too much for your dream home. We have the "know how" and the experience to better serve you.

Feel better? YOU SHOULD? You can depend on us. Our reputation and 25 years of experience in developing, building and professional appraising proves it.

ATTENTION SELLERS!

If you have a home to sell, whatever the reason, you have a problem and we are the problem-solvers!! Do you know the current market value for YOUR home in YOUR particular location? Do you have the ability to negotiate a sale? How about arranging financing, pro-rating taxes and escrow accounts, loan assumptions, etc.? We have the "know how" to solve these and other questions. We can determine a price that will realize you the maximum and fairest value in a reasonable length of time. Don't take the chance of underselling! Your home is probably your most valuable asset. You should rely on a professional to do this job. We ARE professionals, and selling is our job. So why not let US help YOU.

Now relax, and give us a call. THERE'S NO OBLIGATION.

TENNESSEE MAKES IT ON HIS OWN — Tennessee, a giraffe with a broken leg in a fiber glass cast, struggles to his feet on the grounds of Lion Country Safari near Irvine, Calif. Tennessee, named for his birthplace, became mired in the mud in the park during a rainstorm and as he maneuvered to free himself, twisted and fractured the bone in his left leg. (AP Laserphoto)

On Saturdays, No Pretense Of Working; They Choose To Play

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — Joe Dobbs works in a dishwasher in a little shop where the tart smell of old-fashioned hide glue mingles with the sweet sound of old-fashioned mountain music and the wonder is that any work gets done at all.

"On Saturdays," Dobbs said, "we don't even make any pretense at working. We push everything aside and play."

What Joe Dobbs plays is that ancient music of Appalachia, music brought here by pioneers, handed down by tune from fiddler to fiddler, and somehow kept intact for 200 years.

When he isn't, oh, fiddling around, Joe and his brother, Dennis, repair the instruments that make those soulful sounds: dulcimers, fiddles, mandolins, banjos, instruments literally as old as the hills.

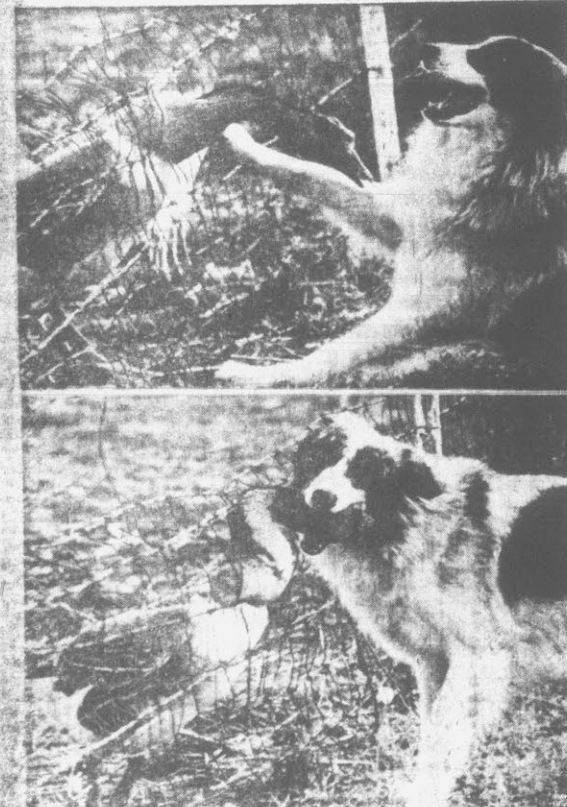

Sample Of Goldsboro Sand In Tree-Planting

When "The Conservation Tree" is presented to the nation in Washington Sunday, the state of North Carolina will be represented by a sample of Goldsboro sand, dug from a farm in eastern North Carolina.

The tree will be presented by the National Association of Conservation Districts Sunday, Feb. 11, as the kickoff for the 33rd annual NACD convention.

The tree, a 20 foot Green Mountain sugar maple, will be planted near the Jefferson Memorial on the banks of the Potomac River, where the Japanese cherry trees draw thousands of visitors each year.

rich soil is found in many of our most productive agricultural areas, including tobacco-producing farms, and is truly an example of prime farmland of the type we have in North Carolina.

FRIENDS AT PLAY — It may look like Bandit, an Australian shepherd owned by Jan Stratford of Carmichael, Calif., is about to devour the family's pet goose. Actually the two are best of friends and are playing a friendly game of bit and nip before their feeding time. (AP Laserphoto)

Former Strangers Share Hunt For Small Airplane

By BETSY KENEDY
Associated Press Writer
LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — In the mountainous northern corner of New York, shielded by the gentle but threatening Adirondacks and overshadowed by the 1980 Olympics, a group of people, previously strangers, have abandoned daily routines to search for one small airplane.

A month has passed since the official search stopped. The local newspaper no longer runs a story each day. The plane that disappeared Christmas night is no longer the main topic of conversation. The winter Olympics to be staged here next year once again takes precedence.

But a search continues, largely through the efforts of a young woman who abandoned her sunny Key West home in Florida to lead the search in the gray winter of the North Country.

That search is fueled by love, an unerring belief in man's capacity for survival, and a mongrel dog that had been on board the crashed plane and showed up here two weeks later.

For 22-year-old Lisa Teifer it's a question of family — her fiancée Chris Ray, and her brother Kip were aboard the 10-seat Piper Navajo that missed the runway at Adirondack Airport in Lake Clear Dec. 25.

Kip Teifer and Ray, both 26, and pilot Dick Pierce, 32, were flying to here from Key West for a ski vacation when radar lost track of them.

People living near the airport heard a plane buzz perilously close. One woman heard a "going down" report on a radio, Ms. Teifer said.

But Ms. Teifer says she believes the men survived — because all were in excellent physical condition, were equipped for survival with training and the proper attitude, and had food and sleeping bags.

In addition, there's Aquí — a chocolate-brown mutt with one blue eye and one green, who appeared at a farmhouse on Bear Cub Lane 12 days after the plane went down. He had lost 10 pounds and was weak.

But he was alive. "Aquí is the key," says Ms. Teifer.

Jon Coughtry, a local pilot who manages a flight school, agrees. He says he has geared all operations at his school around the search with Ms. Teifer, whom he calls "tough and resilient."

"If anyone could survive, these men could," Coughtry says. "We've had people survive as long as 90 days with less. Unless they hit a ledge, these people are still alive."

Starting from the farm on Bear Cub Lane and working with ground reports and the last radar sighting, 24 searchers each paid $30 a day are scouring the wilderness, Ms. Teifer said. A helicopter provides assistance at $125 an hour.

She says she already has spent more than $25,000, mostly for flight time rental — money from the Key West construction company Ray owns and for which she worked.

"It's Chris's money," she says, "and it should be used to help find him. After all, what good is it to him if he's dead?"

A California dog trainer who also says she is a psychic came last week to work with Aquí, hoping he will lead searchers to the plane.

She is the third clairvoyant to contribute. Ms. Teifer says four dog teams have also aided the search, and Coughtry says he has prevailed on his comrades to take to the air, many on vacation from other jobs.

The Civil Air Patrol, state police and forest rangers searched on and off when the weather permitted for 2½ weeks.

"We just didn't find anything in the area where the aircraft went down," said Lt. Col. Herman Botie, CAP wing commander for New York.

Citing bad weather and time of year, Botie said that their search was adequate — "given the circumstances."

"The search has not been terminated just suspended," said Lt. Col. Eugene McCordie, senior CAP commander for the Adirondack area. "The signs indicate there is no life. There's been no radio communication, no smoke and no emission from the locator beacon."

If new leads prove otherwise, or if an early thaw permits, Botie said, the official search would resume.

However, Coughtry resigned his position as commander of the Tri-Lakes Division of the CAP in protest, calling the search "insufficient."

Coughtry says he and the other pilots keep up the search because "it could just as well be us or the people we train out there."

When the official search ended, Ms. Teifer's began. "If I don't do it, nobody will," she says.

In her crusade, she is backed by Jim and Valerie Deaton, pre-medical students who dropped out of Eastern Kentucky University to help.

"He's our best friend. That's no sacrifice," Deaton says of Ray.

Another volunteer is a stranger to Ms. Teifer, but not to the Adirondacks, which took his younger brother three years ago and never gave him back.

Bob Thomas, 29, a mason contractor with his own business, drove up from suburban Utica, N.Y., after he read about Aquí's return.

And townspeople have rallied around, going into the woods, loaning snowmobiles, opening their homes and offering suggestions and solace.

When Lisa walks down the main street of this bustling ski resort, strangers say hello and inquire about the search.

"I am resigned to whatever is the outcome of the search," she says during a lunch interrupted by well-wishers. "I just have to know."

So she keeps looking, not dwelling on what each passing day represents to those possibly waiting for rescue. "I go along day to day, thinking, 'hang in there guys, I'm doing all I can.'"

She has no doubts about why: "I would hate to give up and then learn they were found dead with a diary showing they lived for 33 days and I gave up on the 32nd. I just couldn't live with myself."
