U.S. Embassy In Tehran Stormed By Guerrillas

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer
TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Scores of guerrillas firing automatic weapons stormed the U.S. Embassy in downtown Iran today, wounded two Marine guards and took the ambassador and 101 other Americans hostage before rival guerrillas rescued them in a 3 1/2-hour gun battle.

Guerrillas loyal to the new government said those who attacked the embassy were communists. One of the attackers also said communists participated in the assault.

Lt. Col. Leland Holland, the embassy's security chief, later told reporters gathered outside the building that the Americans had been placed under the protection of guerrillas loyal to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's government. He said staff members were free to go but were remaining inside the embassy on the guerrillas' advice.

Holland said the 3 1/2-hour battle for control of the embassy began at about 10:30 a.m. when snipers opened up with heavy rifle fire from the roof of a hotel across the street from the embassy. The attackers then penetrated the city-block square compound and began pulling down the American flag.

"Marines at the embassy started shooting in the air and also firing tear-gas canisters," said George B. Lambrakis, an embassy staffer.

Ambassador William Sullivan ordered the embassy's 20 Marine guards to cease resistance and to surrender with the rest of the staff. They all were taken hostage inside the building.

Khomeini guerrillas rushed to the scene and announced they had moved into the embassy to protect the compound from the attackers. The firing died down for a while then resumed.

Sullivan told a reporter,

"Later on, all the embassy personnel gathered in my office and we started phoning out to various people we knew who are connected with Khomeini asking them for urgent help."

He said Deputy Prime Minister Ibrahim Yazdi soon arrived on the scene and "told us we are all safe and our welfare will be looked after under his custody."

A U.S. military spokesman reported one of the Marines and another American were wounded. A nearby hospital said five wounded Iranians were received there, and a press photographer said he saw a body he could not identify carried from the compound.

The ayatollah, who led the year-long campaign that drove Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi from the country, has repeatedly urged his followers not to attack foreigners or their embassies.

Spent machine-gun cartridges littered the walkways inside the compound. The main building was pock-marked with bullet holes and the iron gratings over its windows were bent or ripped aside. An embassy official said top secret radio equipment worth $500,000 was blown up by staff members as the attackers closed in on the embassy's communications center. The official said employees also set fire to secret files, but that many classified documents survived and were left unharmed in areas penetrated by the attackers.

U.S. Afghanistan Ambassador Slain

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The U.S. ambassador to Afghanistan, Adolph Dubs, was kidnapped from his car today in Kabul and later killed in a shoot-out between his Shiite Moslem abductors and police, U.S. officials here and in Pakistan reported.

They said the kidnappers had taken him to a hotel in Kabul, the Afghan capital, and demanded freedom for three jailed Moslem clergymen. But the government refused to negotiate, police stormed the building and after a gun battle the American ambassador was found dead, they said.

U.S. sources in Islamabad, Pakistan, said Dubs, 58, was killed during the police attack. But it was not known whether the kidnappers or police bullets killed him.

It also was not known immediately whether the unidentified kidnappers, numbering two or three, were killed or captured.

In Washington, a State Department spokesman said the United States had asked the Afghan government to negotiate with the kidnappers to save Dubs' life but its request went unheeded.

Arthur Lefkowitz, spokesman at the U.S. Embassy in New Delhi, said two or three men stopped Dubs' automobile, which was driven by an Afghan chauffeur, as the ambassador was riding to work at about 8:45 local time. They opened the door and told Dubs they were "arresting" him, Lefkowitz said.

The kidnappers took him to the Kabul Hotel in the heart of the city, took over a guest room and demanded the release of three Shiite mullahs, or religious teachers, recently arrested by Afghanistan's leftist government, the spokesman said.

The government refused to negotiate and a police force attacked the hotel, the U.S. officials said. Afterward, the U.S. Embassy in Kabul was informed Dubs had been killed.

Utilities Talk Revising Charge On Water Rates

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Utilities Commission agreed in principle last night to move toward a uniform flat rate charge for its water customers — possibly in July — under which residential users, commercial customers and industries would pay the same amount for each hundred cubic feet of water used. The commission currently uses a step rate structure under which industrial customers pay a lower rate than commercial customers, and commercial customers are charged a lower rate than residential users.

The move from the present step rate structure to a flat rate charge would result in a sizable increase in industrial water bills, a smaller increase in commercial charges, and mean that industries and commercial establishments would be paying a greater portion of the water system operating costs.

Three bond referendums will be voted on by Greenville residents in April: a $5 million issue for improvement to the electric system, a similar issue for improvements to the sewage system, including the construction of a new waste water treatment plant; and a $14 million issue for improvements to the water system, including construction of a new water treatment plant.

If the bonds are approved, there should be no increase in electric rates, while maximum increase for the average residential water sewer customer would be less than $1.25. However, for the average residential customer, the projected rate increase needed to repay the bonds could add $2 to $3 to the monthly bill.

"The commission last night — assuming the water bonds are approved — discussed the possibility of increasing the water rates over the next several years to meet the bond obligations, rather than having customers face one large increase at one time.

Commission members again tabled action on a proposal to add another employee in the Office of Energy Conservation and Management to allow time to further study the need, and adopted a resolution accepting a state grant of up to $40,500 to defray part of the cost of extending a water line along the Allen Road, West of the city.

After formally accepting the state grant, the Commission accepted the low bid of $104,726 — submitted by Hendrix-Barnhill Co. — for construction of the line.

A total of nine bids were received for the project, ranging from the $104,726 low to a high of $151,184.

Acceptance was also given to low bids for 3,000 feet of six-inch cement pipe ($6,660 from Pump and Lighting Co.), eight fire hydrants, (W. H. Ashworth and Associates, $2,748), three 10-inch mechanical joint gate valves ($1,064 from Pump and Lighting Co.), a metal control house for an electric substation ($6,600 from Miller and Davis Associates), 50,445 pounds of aluminum wire

UNIVERSITY FM?

Many major universities have a public broadcasting service and an FM station. The university provides an excellent television and public broadcasting service also, however, can the university or will the university in the future be able to provide an FM radio service for this region? BN

Hotline talked to John Jeter, general manager of WECU, who said the campus media board last May submitted an application to the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) for an FM construction permit.

"We are expecting a construction permit from the FCC; right now we're just waiting for it," Jeter said.

"The system will be capable of 91.3 megahertz, and it will have an effective radiating power of 100 watts," he added.

Jeter further said that the radiating element will be located on a small, 45-foot tower positioned on the roof of Tyler Hall on campus.

"We will be in operation 24 hours a day unlimited. However, due to a recent inter-collegiate ruling, we will remain off the air whenever the university is closed; for example, during vacations," he explained.

He further explained that, of the media board's annual budget of $32,585, some $18,000 will be allocated for the purchase of the new FM equipment. Such equipment as Dolby FM and stereo will be included.

"With a range from 20 to 25 miles, it will be heard throughout Greenville and Pitt County," Jeter added.

One Person Dies, Two Injured In 2-Car Crash

One person died and two were injured as a result of a two-car collision on Greenville Boulevard just East of the Hooker Road intersection about 2:27 p.m. yesterday.

Jesse Thomas Bradshaw of 208 Pine St., the driver of one of the cars, died in Pitt Memorial Hospital later in the afternoon from multiple injuries received in the crash.

Mrs. Bonnie Little Evans of Route 1, Greenville, the driver of the second car, and Mary Newcomb Sutton of Maury, a passenger in the vehicle, were admitted for treatment of their injuries.

Police Department investigators reported the Bradshaw car, traveling East on the boulevard, ran up on the right curb, struck a speed limit sign, then swerved back across the roadway, colliding with the State-owned car driven by Mrs. Evans, which was headed West.

The force of the collision caused the car occupied by the two women — both employees of the Department of Corrections — to overturn.

Officers estimated damage to the Bradshaw car at $3,000 and set damage to the State car at $2,100.

Bradshaw was trapped in the floor of his car for a short while until rescue squad officers could free him, investigators said.

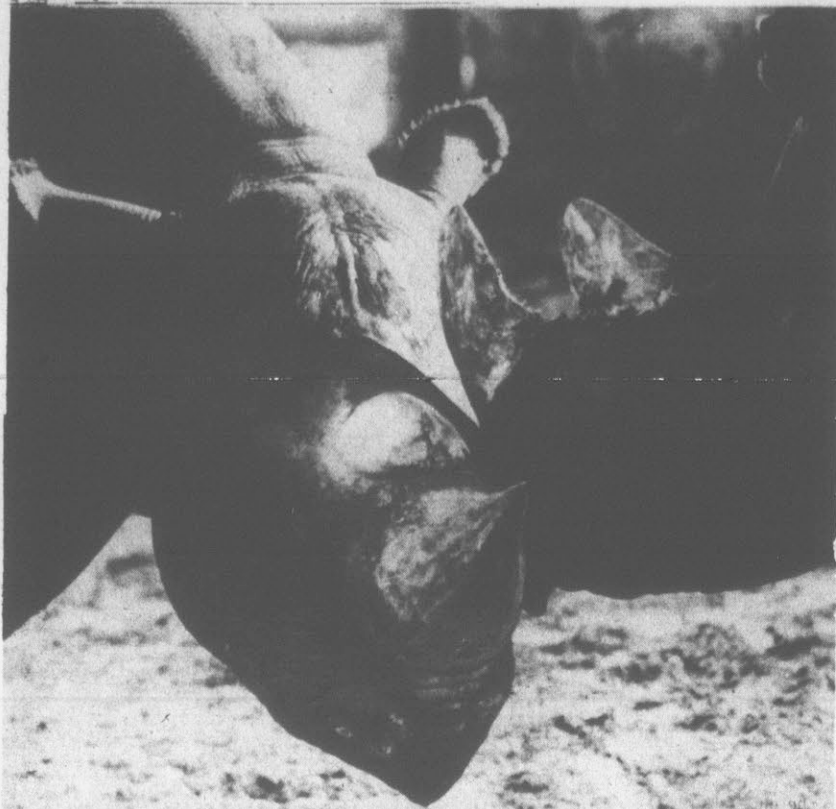

Because the two West-bound traffic lanes were blocked by the wreckage of the two vehicles, traffic headed West on Greenville Boulevard was backed up almost to the Evans Street intersection.

Two Greenville rescue units, a fire engine and several police officers, responded to the call.

Greenville Woman Entered For N.C. Mother Of The Year Honor

Mrs. Mildred Holley Derrick of Greenville has been nominated as a candidate for North Carolina Mother of the Year.

The retired East Carolina University professor and her husband, Dr. J. O. Derrick, will be participating in state-level American Mothers Committee Inc. activities in Raleigh Thursday and Friday. The announcement of the N. C. Mother of the Year will be made Friday shortly after noon.

Mrs. Derrick's nomination is being sponsored by the Greenville-Pitt County Women's Political Caucus.

Dr. and Mrs. Derrick will attend an afternoon tea at the home of Mrs. Jane Purser Thursday afternoon and dinner in the President's Dining Room of Meredith College Thursday evening. Friday morning, they and Ms. Fredricka Jacobsen, president of the sponsoring organization, and Mrs. Tennala Gross, also a member of the Women's Political Caucus, will attend a coffee hour at the Governor's Mansion and then the concluding awards gathering at the Downtown Holiday Inn, where the North Carolina nominee for National Mother of the Year will be announced.

Mrs. Derrick taught mathematics in the public school for a number of years and for 19 years at East Carolina University. She and Dr. Derrick, who moved to Greenville from Augusta, Ga., her birthplace, in 1946, have three children: Betty is professor of chemistry at Valdosta State College in Valdosta, Ga.; Jack is an attorney practicing in Elizabeth City; and Fred is assistant professor of statistics and economics at the University of Maryland, College Park. Betty has a Ph. D. in chemistry from Emory University in Atlanta; Jack, a J. D. from Wake Forest University; and Fred a Ph. D. in statistics and economics from N. C. State University.

Her husband, J. O., who has a Ph. D. from the University of North Carolina, taught for 46 years, 26 of them as a professor of general and analytic chemistry at East Carolina University.

Mrs. Derrick was graduated with honors from the University of Georgia at the age of 18 with a double major in mathematics and physics. Some 20 years and three children later, she received the M. A. degree in mathematics at East Carolina University and did additional study at the University of Georgia, Carlton College, Tufts University, and at a National Science Foundation Institute at San Jose State College.

She was an organizer of the Our Redeemer Lutheran Church, which she has served as a member of the Church Council, the building committee, the president of the Lutheran Women's group, a Sunday School teacher and a member of the Pastoral Selection Committee.

Aliens Must Report On Ownership

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Aliens who own or have a financial interest in more than one acre of U. S. farm land or who gross more than $1,000 from any plot of U. S. land must now report their holdings to the federal government, according to regulations issued recently by Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland.

Under the regulations, aliens of foreign interests who owned farmland before Feb. 6 must report ownership by Aug. 6, and those acquiring land after Feb. 6 must report the transfer within 90 days.

Reports are made at the county ASCS office in the county where the land is located. Failure to report could result in a fine of up to 25 percent of the property's assessed value.

For purposes of this report, the Department considers agricultural land as any tract of more than one acre now in agricultural, forestry or timber production. This generally excludes small plots, such as household gardens.

Financial interest in agricultural land means any portion of ownership in farmland, such as a partnership, trust, or shares in a corporation that owns farmland.

Reporting forms will soon be available in all of the approximately 2,700 county ASCS offices located in all 50 states and Puerto Rico.

Real estate dealers, farm managers, banks, holding companies or other institutions that specialize in land holdings, transfer or management can report on behalf of foreign clients.

More Widows Than Widowers

WASHINGTON (AP) — A recent survey shows there are more than 10 million widows in the United States, and they outnumber widowers 5 to 1.

The American Council of Life Insurance says women not only outlive men in this country by an average of about eight years, they also tend to marry men who are at least several years their seniors.

Driver's License Not Just For Driving Car

By EDGAR MILLER
Associated Press Writer
CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — "May I see your driver's license?"

Chances are you've been asked that question many times. And chances are that usually it wasn't by a policeman but by a store clerk.

The driver's license has become such a universal identification card that since last July Tennessee has been issuing similar cards for identification purposes to blind persons and others who cannot drive.

Jim Henderson, public relations director for the Department of Public Safety, said 424 of the $2 ID licenses had been issued so far.

Henderson said a study was under way on whether to add a photograph to licenses to further assist identification. Many states already require photos on licenses.

"It can be done," he said in a recent telephone interview. "If it is done it will have to be paid for by somebody."

He pointed out that the camera work, processing and affixing the photos would probably require additional personnel.

The result would be to make the present driver's license more expensive. Tennessee's charge of $6 for a four-year license is one of the lowest in the nation, Henderson said. "It's really not our business to provide identification as such," Henderson said. "Our business is to insure safety on the highways."

Nonetheless, a driver's license is almost as essential for check-cashing or buying as it is for driving.

Frank King, manager of the J.C. Penney store in Chattanooga's suburban Eastgate Shopping Center, said his store, as most large retail outlets, required both a driver's license and a credit card as identification for check-cashing, unless the person has a Penney's charge account.

Why the driver's license as opposed to some other identification?

"Most people travel by automobile, and it is against the law to drive without a driver's license ... and in suburban shopping centers they have to arrive by automobile. Most people guard their driver's licenses jealously. It's about as good identification as you can get," he explained.

Some stores are even more demanding. One Chattanooga store photographs check cashers and another requires a thumb print.

Robert Turner, customer-service manager to Loveman's Department Store, said that without a driver's license or voter registration card and a credit card, a customer would have to know somebody in the store before he could buy with a personal check.

Many store clerks and bank tellers are inflexible on the license requirement.

One person who had been living abroad recently returned to Tennessee, where he had a bank account but not a driver's license. At his bank, when asked to produce identification, he handed over his passport.

"I'm sorry, sir, but this won't do," the teller said after looking it over. "I'll still need to see your driver's license."

Phelps New Pres.-Elect

ECU News Bureau
Herman Phelps, associate dean of the East Carolina University Division of Continuing Education, is the new president-elect of the Association for Continuing Professional Education.

He previously served as a director and national membership chairman for the association, whose current president is Charles Koelling of the University of Missouri.

The association will convene in Greenville during the spring of 1980.

Phelps joined the ECU faculty in 1962 after several years on the Campbell college faculty, and was appointed to an administrative position in ECU's Continuing Education Program in 1963.

He is active in several professional educators organizations, and previously served as editor of "The New Campus," a national publication of the Association for Field Services in Teacher Education.

Musical Sounds Put Into Images

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — A University of Michigan research team has developed computerized equipment that not only transcribes music automatically but also produces a three-dimensional picture of the sound.

The two-year project to develop a program to process musical sound was handled by Professor Bernard A. Galler and a research associate, Martin B. Piszczalski.

The researchers say their system is based solely on tape recordings of sounds from a wide variety of musical instruments, which are fed into a computer.

After the musical stream is converted into digits, the sequence of numbers may be analyzed in several stages of processing leading to the final music notation, they explain.

Shower Given Miss Johnston

BELL ARTHUR — Miss Jessica Johnston, bride-elect of John Shimer Jr., was honored at a miscellaneous floating bridal shower Sunday afternoon in the Smith Fellowship Hall of the Arthur Christian Church.

A Valentine's Day motif was used in decorating. The refreshment table was covered with a white linen cloth trimmed with red hearts. The centerpiece was a spray of red carnations and white chrysanthemums. Auxiliary tables were covered with matching cloths with red hearts. The center of the table featured a gold candelabrum and red candles.

Special guests included Mrs. J. C. Johnston Jr. and Mrs. Raye C. Shimer.

The bride-elect wore a black sheer qiana dress with a floral design complemented with a corsage of white carnations trimmed in red.

Hostesses were Mrs. Ardeen Powell, Mrs. Margaret McLawhorn, Mrs. Jean McLawhorn, Mrs. Edith Willoughby and Mrs. Georgia White.

Mother's Picture Needs New Place

DEAR ABBY: My wife keeps a picture of her mother in our bedroom and I have to look at it more than I care to. In case you suspect that I am not too fond of my wife's mother, you are correct.

My wife has plenty of other places to display her mother's picture, but she insists on keeping it in the bedroom.

At first I hinted, then I moved it, but my wife always puts it back on my dresser. (It's not even nicely framed.) Should I throw it, my wife, or myself out?

DEAR ABBY: How does a decent, naturally passionate, deeply religious widow overcome her desire to be loved by a man?

After having been married 38 years to the only man in my life, widowed a year, not exactly ancient (61), I live with memories constantly revived by TV, movies, literature, all ending with sexual fulfillment that stirs up desires difficult to suppress.

Having once had pure gold, I couldn't settle for brass. No man could ever replace the one I lost.

I feel ashamed and unclean, and am miserable beyond words. Is there a solution?

HUNGRY FOR LOVE

DEAR HUNGRY: You have no reason to feel "ashamed" or "unclean" because your natural desire to be loved remains undiminished at 61.

Instead of trying to suppress your desires, look for someone who's in the same boat, someone to whom you can give love. And don't be so quick to evaluate "metal." You need an ALLY—not an ALLOY.

Birthday Night Held By Greenville BPW Club

The Greenville Business and Professional Women's Club celebrated its 41st birthday at a birthday night meeting Thursday.

State BPW President Laura Williams, speaker for the evening, told of the heritage and history of BPW. She said North Carolina is number one in membership for the federation and North Carolina equalized in January. The state and National Federation are celebrating the 60th year this year.

Mrs. Williams said women today would not turn back the clock even if they could do so. She cited several examples of progress women have made, particularly that girls years ago were not expected to be educated.

BPW was organized in 1919 in Louisville, Ky., with the goal of high standards of achievement in business and professions. There are now 3,700 clubs in 53 federations. North Carolina has 94 active clubs and 4,000 members.

Colleen Cargile introduced the speaker. Other guests recognized by Naomi Edwards were Elsie Clark, District 10 director, and Patsy Smith, District 10 treasurer, both of Rocky Mount.

President Estella Dunbar presided during the evening. Other guests included Mrs. Anna Tyson, Grace Forrest, Terry Saied, Loretta Collins, Julia Talbutt and from Tarboro, Sarah Windley, Vivian Morgan and Ophelia Baker. Elizabeth Leonard of Rocky Mount responded to the welcome given by the president. Chaplain Elvira Allred gave the invocation.

After dinner Betty LeRoux presented a reading "Life's Mirror."

Mrs. Williams was presented a gift by the president, Mrs. Cora Powell, a charter member of the club, was given special recognition.

Mrs. Dunbar announced the Spotlight on Women meeting to be held in Chapel Hill March 3-4.

No Choice If Funding Stops

Pitt County faces a cutback in state funds for its Health Department services.

Since late 1974, the state has been paying some 52 percent of the Pitt Health Department's budget, this year $370,000.

The plan was made at the state's urging, in order to establish a model health center.

The arrangement has meant increased expenditures for the county, too, including the construction of a $447,700 addition to the Health Department building.

County commissioners chairman R. L. Martin says the county entered into the agreement in good faith. It was understood that the state funding would be continued and "for the state to fail to live up to its end of the agreement at this late date would constitute a break of good faith."

If the state funding is ended the county will have no choice but to discontinue a number of services, many of which are delivered to residents of counties other than Pitt.

There are ample reasons for the state to continue the funding. The program is delivering health services to an area which is still one of the poorest in health care in the nation.

The matter is coming before the Appropriations Committee in Raleigh. Our elected representatives to the General Assembly should fight to keep these funds in the state budget. The work of the Pitt Health Department is important to Eastern North Carolina in many ways and we shouldn't stand by and see this taken away from us without a fight.

High-Risk Driving When It Snows

Automobile insurance companies must hate snow in the Greenville area. It's a money-losing proposition.

Take last Friday. True to their promises, city crews were on the job keeping streets open, spreading sand, etc.; and by mid-afternoon the blue-and-whites were out in force, keeping an eye out for troubles and potential troubles.

It must have helped, but the accident count was grim at best. Eighteen accidents with 34 vehicles involved; fortunately no serious accidents, no serious injuries, no fatalities.

Snow is so rare in our part of the country that our drivers simply are not familiar with the finer points of coping with weather that would be a breeze to drivers closer to the real snow belt.

Math School Issue Looms

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — If the intention of Gov. Jim Hunt in tucking away in the Department of Administration rather than Public Education his Math and Science High School proposal was to avoid argument, the opposite may result.

Educators at the state level are privately stunned at the maneuver, although they are keeping quiet publicly. Outspoken complaint isn't likely to result since early criticism of the proposal by high-level officials of the Department of Public Instruction resulted in a prompt muzzling from the governor's office.

ment of Public Education for the N.C. School of Science and Mathematics ... shall be used to establish the (school) which shall operate under the general auspices of the State Board of Education, but which shall be governed by the following new article ... and there follows the description of the school's framework.

Switched

But when Gov. Hunt and his Advisory Budget Commission made up the new budget proposals for 1979-80 and 1980-81, the entire Science and Math section were tucked away in the middle of the operating budget for the Department of Administration.

It calls for more than one million next fiscal year and two million the following to get the school under operation in Durham with 300 students the first year and an additional 300 the next. Not detailed is an estimated $5 million needed for renovations at the Watts Hospital location donated for the school. When fully operational, the new residential school will require about $5 million annually.

Why, though, is the appropriation buried in the Department of Administration instead of outlined in the Department of Public Instruction budget?

BILL NOBLITT

A spokesman for the governor says it is because the specialty school "won't be run by the public schools, but by a separate board of trustees. This is especially important in getting private grants and donations.

"Still, top public education officials sit on that board." A legislator member of the Advisory Budget Commission said the decision was made to put the facility in the Department of Administration because "that is where Jim Hunt wants it."

The immediate result of the shift from one department of government to another, however, is that debate in the General Assembly would be muted. The Department of Administration budget goes before the General Government committees, notably routine ones.

No Fight?

Thus, argument before the Education Committees would be avoided. In those groups is where private opposition from educators could be brought to bear through legislators, and where the outspoken opposition of local school boards could be focused.

One of Gov. Hunt's legislative liaison team denies that the transfer was designed to blunt opposition. "It is simply that this is a project very close to the Governor's heart, and he prefers it to be handled in this manner," he says.

But smooth sailing still is not guaranteed. State Senator Jim Edwards, D-Catawba, is chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee for education. "I think we will simply ask the membership of the committee if they would like to request that the school be placed on our agenda for consideration ... and see what happens," Edwards said.

ASSESSING TENG'S VISIT!

Goodbye To Mister Big

WASHINGTON — Something happened in Washington last week that has caused great consternation in the power structure of this town. Paul de Lisle, the maitre d'hotel at the Sans Souci Restaurant, resigned, leaving a vacuum in the luncheon scene that is hard to fill. There are better restaurants than the Sans Souci in the capital, and one would be hard pressed in recent years to give it even one star. But the Sans had other things going for it — the most important being Paul.

Paul was really the Mr. Big in this city — the man to whom all of us went to get our orders. He never took credit for it, but it was his idea to send Henry Kissinger to China during the Nixon Administration.

He got the idea when he overheard the Soviet ambassador tell the Polish minister at Table 5 that the Russians would take a very dim view of the United States recognizing the People's Republic of China.

During the Cuban missile crisis, Paul was constantly on the phone to President Kennedy. "I heard an NKVD man," Paul told the President, "say that if you eyeballed it, the Russians would be the first to blink."

This is probably the first time it's appeared in print, but Paul came up with the idea for President Johnson's domestic program. Jack Valenti, who then worked for Johnson, was sitting at Table 12 with Bill Moyers. Paul stopped by the table and Jack said, "Paul, who are the people who eat here?" Paul replied, "To my knowledge, they are all members of a great society."

At that very moment Johnson called and said, "Where are you, Jack?" "I'm eating with the great society," Jack replied.

ART BUCHWALD

"That's it," President Johnson said. "What would you think about calling my program 'The Great Society'?"

"It sounds great to me," Valenti said. "Who asked you?" Johnson wanted to know.

There was some talk at the time of Watergate that Paul was "Deep Throat." My suspicions were aroused early in the scandal when Paul did not recognize Bob Woodward or Carl Bernstein when they came into the restaurant. He told Bernstein he couldn't seat him unless he wore a tie and a jacket. Bernstein said, as he left in a huff, "We'll talk about this in the garage tomorrow morning."

As for myself, it is no secret that I ate at the Sans Souci for lunch every day at the same table. The reason for this was that Paul was my main source of news for the column. We had our own code. When he said, "The roast lamb is very good today," that meant we were sending 50 more fighter planes to Saudi Arabia. Or if he handed me the wine list and remarked that the Beaujolais Villages was drinkable, it really meant that the Fed was going to raise interest rates by 2 percent.

It was no accident that I found 18 1/2 minutes of Nixon's

Public Dissent Barred

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — With President Carter as with his predecessors, the bottom-line is loyalty to the administration once the president has set its course.

Presidents never have taken kindly to public disclosure of the private debates that shape policy, or to public dissent within the official family.

"Once I make that decision, I expect my policy to be carried out, with loyalty and with enthusiasm," Carter said Monday.

Enthusiasm may be a bit much to expect from an aide who has seen his counsel rejected, but a president certainly is entitled to expect loyalty from his advisers even if they don't agree with something he has decided to do.

In that situation, loyalty can simply mean silence.

All of this came up after Carter lectured his top aides in three White House meetings, telling them to be careful what they say to reporters.

Carter was quoted as saying that "those of us in responsible positions ought to be very careful about making public comments which could contribute to a misapprehension about what our policy was."

The subject is a difficult one because Richard M. Nixon gave confidentiality a bad name by invoking national security and the privacy of White House conversations in the attempted Watergate cover-up.

But the excesses of the Nixon administration don't change the fact that a president couldn't function if everything he and his staff said to each other was available for publication.

Carter came to office promising an open administration, and suggesting at one point that even the meetings of his Cabinet might be open to coverage by newsmen. He dropped the latter idea, but not the commitment to openness.

The question becomes how open. An administration in which every adviser was free to recount every conversation would be a free-for-all in which debate would substitute for policy.

Carter said he never told his aides to stop talking to report-

The river had been expected to crest at 17 feet Thursday, but it was explained that the rains experienced this week in the upper reaches probably would send the stream to an even higher level.

Jack Spain, well-known attorney and businessman of Greenville, today formally announced his candidacy for mayor, the first to officially toss his hat in the ring for the position.

Candor Failed Impress

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — It was first-term, Republican senators fresh from taking their oath of office who, over breakfast at the White House last week, dared tell Jimmy Carter that the emperor has no clothes.

President Carter had opened the session by informing the nine new senators (two other freshman Republicans were absent) that U.S. prestige was high and climbing all over the world, threatened only by possible Senate rejection of SALT.

That view is shared almost nowhere outside the White House and the seventh floor of the State Department. What makes it so worrisome is that Carter truly believes the American eagle is as splendidly garbed as ever, both in fact and in the eyes of the world.

Even in the post-imperial phase of the presidency, nobody — including Republican leaders — usually talks back to the nation's chief executive. But two of the freshman senators — Colorado's Bill Armstrong and Maine's William Cohen — violated protocol by saying what they and most of Washington think: the U.S. is in deepening trouble around the world; it is viewed as a paper tiger by most of its friends and adversaries alike.

Although the president appeared startled by this unaccustomed candor, it would be naive to suppose the encounter changed Carter's world view. But it surely dented illusions that techniques used to ratify the Panama Canal treaty would work for the new strategic arms control treaty (SALT II). The breakfast exchange carried clear warning that the new pact cannot be sold with generalities and that the moderate Republicans cannot be taken for granted.

In his warmup to the new Republicans, Carter was long on rhetoric, short on specifics. He declared the U.S. is most highly regarded within the family of nations. "You would think we had never had it so good," said one senator later. The only menace to this utopia depicted by the president was possible Senate rejection of the SALT II treaty, an agreement he said is urgently desired by our allies and the U.S. military.

In the ensuing question period, Armstrong refuted the president's rose-colored vision. The Colorado senator contended that the U.S. had declined so badly that it would lose a war at sea today and that NATO forces are badly outnumbered by the Warsaw Pact.

That was not a surprising statement by Armstrong, considering his record in the House as a hard-nosed conservative. Less expected was an equally tough riposte from Cohen, considered a liberal in

Other Editors Say A Cop On The Beat

(High Point Enterprise)

Time was when every business street corner was home base for a police officer, when the friendly "cop on the beat" was a downtown fixture.

But he finally gave way to "progress." As day-to-day crime moved out into the industrial and residential areas, he went with it — into a prowler car that improved both visibility and availability of law enforcement. His going also served to make downtown and other business groupings more impersonal — no familiar figure to help strangers with directions, no ever-present symbol of security.

Over a period of a quarter-century High Point's progression has been from many cops on the beat — to none — to one. And the people who make their livings downtown couldn't be happier about that one.

Two months ago Officer R.V. Evans was assigned to walking duty downtown — with almost instantaneous results in the reduction of criminal offenses, reports the current bulletin of the High Point Economic Development Corp. His presence is credited with a key role in apprehension of shoplifters, thwarting assaults and sharply reducing the numbers of drunks and vagrants.

The president of the Downtown Business Assn., Steve Sugg, said, "Just being able to see a policeman on the street gives an extra feeling of security to downtown retailers, employees and customers. We definitely need him and we're glad to have him."

It's what is known as progress meeting itself coming back.

Promises Result In Suspicion

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Promises, wishes and alibis all have more than a few things in common, but in this era of doubt it may be their propensity to arouse suspicion that constitutes their most obvious link.

Those three elements play a large role in economic news, in recent years for certain, and perhaps on investigation a long history can be found. It might even be that they are endemic to the specie.

Under "promises" you must file most economic forecasts, no matter by whom — the President, the professors, the consultants, the corporate chairmen, or the local seer who lives on publicity.

Almost all such promises are accompanied by asterisks, and the asterisks are followed by the conditions, which generally begin with "if."

Earlier this month one of the nation's largest banks won headlines with the suggestion that current economic conditions indicate an orderly business slowdown might occur without a recession.

Good news? Probably more promise than substance. The final sentence: "Still, the greatest threat to this outlook is that a substantial worsening of inflation could bring about a serious business downturn."

That's as reliable as a promise in a publication of the U.S. Savings Bond Program, that "Savings Bonds are never worth less than the amount paid for them." Come on, Sam! At 9 percent inflation a year?

The line that separates promise from wish is almost indiscernable.

A good many economic forecasts — the very optimistic ones issued by automakers, for example — contain elements of both. And private sector economists will tell you that President Carter's projections do too.

Stock analysts are pumped full of hope, no matter the documentation and reasoning that accompanies them. The market, in fact, is built on hope, no matter how "promising" certain stocks might be.

The real estate agent's assurance that you'd better buy now because prices will only get higher and mortgage terms tougher is documented by past experience, but still highly leavened with hope.

True, a combination of factors strongly suggests that housing will continue to rise faster than prices generally, but in some high price categories in some geographical areas, prices have dipped.

Unlike the distinction between promise and wish, the difference between wish and alibi is as clearly defined as that between profit and loss. It is often wistfully expressed, "If only I had..."

Sometimes, however, you can have it both ways. Bethlehem Steel managed in 1975 through the intricacies of accounting and the code of the Internal Revenue Service.

It reported a pretax profit of more than $200 million to its shareholders, and a pretax loss of nearly $65 million to the IRS.

In economic news, especially when promises, wishes and alibis play a role, as they seem always to do, be a bit suspicious and look for the asterisk.

WORDS OF SOCRATES ON EDUCATION

Centuries ago the Greek philosopher Socrates had some words to say about education which are as important today as they were at the time he uttered them.

"Whom, then, do I call educated?" Socrates asked. "First, those who control circumstances instead of being mastered by them; those who meet all occasions with courage and act in accordance with intelligent thinking; those who are honorable in all dealings, who treat good-naturedly persons and things that are disagreeable; furthermore, those who keep their pleasures under control and are not overcome by misfortune. Finally, those who are not spoiled by success."

Socrates lived in an age when great thinkers were emerging, but neither he nor his comrades had the vast background of information which all of us enjoy today. Yet he, and many who were associated with him, had the capacity to pierce into the very center of truth and reveal it to others.

ers. "I do, however, have to insist upon a degree of teamwork once a decision is made that relates to a sensitive issue, like the Middle East, or like SALT negotiations or like the relationships with Iran in recent months," he said at his news conference. "That's what I have admonished them to do, to have a free expression of opinion and to let me have their individual opinions up to the time that I make a decision. Once I make a decision, to comply with it."

Carter said he wasn't ordering his advisers to clam up, but neither was he issuing "a blanket permit" for his aides to express publicly their personal views on his policies. He said if aides cannot accept his decisions, "then the only option for them is to resign."

The net result of the Carter the House and a pariah in the Republican cloakroom for being a leader of impeachment proceedings against Richard M. Nixon.

Vice President Walter F. Mondale had urged the freshmen Republicans that morning to broaden themselves by world travel. He had done just that, said Cohen, with visits to five lectures is sure to be a more reticent administration. His aides and advisers won't get into trouble by keeping their mouths shut.

Asian countries since the election. He found they regarded the U.S. as "a crippled giant," paralyzed into inaction and declining militarily.

The Maine senator next pointed to Carter's claim in his State of the Union address that one Poseidon submarine "carries enough warheads to destroy every large and medium-sized city in the Soviet Union." While ballyhooed by administration officials as proof of Carter's tough-mindedness, his bellicose talk was in fact a replay of the old MAD (mutual assured destruction) theory favored by the arms control lobby.

Accordingly, Cohen challenged Carter about what he would do if a Soviet attack destroyed J.S. ground missiles. Would he push the button sending submarine-launched missiles against Moscow and Leningrad, knowing that would doom New York and Chicago? Although this question is frequently asked by SALT critics, the president seemed agitated—as though hearing it for the first time.

Carter responded that SALT II would reduce the possibility of this horrible dilemma being imposed on an American president by limiting Soviet missile. No, Cohen corrected him. It did limit only deployment of missiles—not their production. The president accepted the correction, but he did not retreat from his point. This was the Billy Cohen automatically listed on the White House headcount as "leaning" pro-SALT after his election. Surprising such colleagues as Bill Armstrong by asking and getting a seat on the Armed Services Committee, he has started to educate himself on SALT. His vote cannot be won by generalized appeals to save Carter's and the nation's prestige.

Carter's fervent efforts for acceptance on blind faith that the emperor really does have his clothes on will never persuade enough senators to approve SALT. None of the nine Republican freshmen is quite so blind. What worries them is that the president may not open his own eyes.

I've had a lot of calls since Paul's departure asking me where I planned to eat lunch, now that he is no longer at the Sans Souci.

Duke Zeibert has offered me a free baked potato with my steak. Paul Young says I can have all the after-dinner mints I can eat, and the Maison Blanche, a new restaurant in the Federal Home Loan Bank Building on 17th and G Streets, has offered me the same interest rate on my house as the National Bank of Georgia gave Jimmy Carter on his farm.

But I'm keeping my options open. This is a very class-conscious town, and as Pierre Salinger told me when I first got here, "You are where you eat."

Says Doctor Favored 2

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP)—The receptionist of a former Landis physician testified Tuesday the doctor urged his patients to patronize two pharmacists in the area.

Janet Moss Allen contradicted an earlier sworn statement and told the U.S. District Court that Dr. Gerald Shingleton urged patients to go to either Billy T. Coward, owner of Landis Drug Co., or Robert Dixon Coffey, pharmacist at Baxter's pharmacy in Kannapolis.

Shingleton and Dr. Edward Spicer of Salisbury have been charged with improperly issuing prescriptions for pain killing and depressant drugs, and of steering patients toward the two pharmacists. The pharmacists are charged with knowingly filling prescriptions that had been improperly issued.

A warrant for failure to appear for trial was issued for Shingleton Tuesday, as the trial of the two pharmacists got under way. Shingleton, who closed his practice and left Landis in November, was arrested in Atlanta in December.

He has been named in a 51-count indictment along with Coffey and Coward. Spicer, a psychiatrist formerly associated with the Tri-County Mental Health Clinic in Salisbury, was named in a 42-count indictment, also with the pharmacists.

Miss Allen, who worked for Shingleton from May 1 to July 1, 1978, said she had no medical training, but testified Shingleton authorized her to give shots after demonstrating the method on an orange.

A spokesman in the court clerk's office said Shingleton has forfeited a $3,000 bond and will be subject to imprisonment without bond if he is taken into custody.

20th Child Of Unusual Family

By JOHN C. EAGAN
Associated Press Writer
PIEDMONT, Calif. (AP) — A week ago 13-year-old Reynaldo had never heard of the DeBolts. Now he is one, the 20th child in a most unusual family.

The new adoptive parents of the beaming Mexican-born youngster are Robert and Dorothy DeBolt, known to millions around the world through a book, "19 Steps Up the Mountain," and an Academy Award-winning film called, "Who are the DeBolts? And where did they get 19 kids?"

The couple is dedicated to raising children — especially youngsters who are so handicapped that most people wouldn't take them in.

Reynaldo is in that category. He has a leg paralyzed by polio, and was a victim of child abuse before being placed in a series of foster homes.

Now, with the DeBolts, he has a permanent home. The DeBolts, each in their second marriage, have six biological children; Reynaldo is their 14th adopted youngster.

There are Korean and Vietnamese war orphans — crippled, blind, abused. Two of the children survived the Air Force C5A Galaxy plane crash in Vietnam in 1975 that killed nearly 200 persons — mostly orphans being airlifted to America before the Communist takeover.

There's a black girl born with no arms or legs. There are two paraplegic Korean boys, one who stepped on a land mine, another wounded by an artillery shell. There's also a severely crippled Caucasian boy, "just to show we're not prejudiced," Mrs. DeBolt, 55, has said.

The DeBolts invited reporters to their home Tuesday to introduce their latest family member.

"We swore for the past four years that we wouldn't adopt any more children, and then we found out about Reynaldo, and he needed a home badly and he needed it right away."

Bishops Vow Strenuous Effort

PUEBLA, Mexico (AP) — Latin America's Roman Catholic bishops ended their conference setting their policy for the next 10 years with a promise of increasingly vigorous efforts on behalf of the poor.

The document released Tuesday condemned both materialistic capitalism and atheistic Marxism, saying neither is a solution to the grinding poverty of Latin America, where nearly half the world's 750 million Roman Catholics live.

It called for action to end oppression exercised in the name of "national security" and vigorously denounced persecution, torture and other repressive tactics to control the poor and illiterate.

It also called for a return to the church's pastoral role, as demanded by conservatives, but within a larger framework demanded by activist clergy of the "liberation" school.

It said the church "will give importance to urban ministry, rural ministry, the importance of the laity, recognize the validity of basic communities, give greater importance to the means of social communication and become involved for the sake of evangelization."

Bishop Nevin Hayes of Chicago said the document "in no way" conflicts with Pope John Paul II's instructions to the conference Jan. 27 when he inaugurated the session at the Palofoxian Seminary on the outskirts of Puebla.

Militant priests and lay people who feared a retreat from activism generated by the bishops' 1968 conference held a counter-conference in a Puebla hotel but also approved the bishops' long declaration.

"It is doubtful that the military regimes will be able to take advantage of the document," the counter-conference said. "On the other hand, it will allow the church to continue its work in favor of the poor and oppressed."

The conference secretary, conservative Archbishop Alfonso Lopez Trujillo of Colombia, said there was unity in the conference on the document. But an Argentine delegate said the counter-conference's criticism of conservatism within the church was a "mosquito bite" compared to the debate inside the seminary.

The conference, held behind closed doors, ended with a secret vote on the document. The vote count was not released.

The final document denounced "the lack of respect for human dignity expressed by the lack of labor unions." Military regimes, it said, repress "organization of labor, of peasants and of popular groups."

Senate Approves Review Of Community Colleges

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A joint resolution calling for a commission to study the structure of the state's community colleges was passed by a vote of 40-5 in the Senate Tuesday.

The resolution, introduced by Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, now goes to the House.

The 12-member commission would recommend whether the administration of the 57-unit community college system should remain under the state Board of Education, be placed under the University of North Carolina Board of Governors or come under a new and independent board of trustees.

The panel would also study the possibility of consolidating institutions in the system into eight to 12 clusters with one administration serving each cluster. The consolidation was suggested as a means of cutting administrative costs.

Sen. William Mills, D-Jones, introduced a bill in the Senate that would place the community colleges under a separate board of trustees. The bill was referred to the Senate Education Committee.

In other legislative action:

Tax Bills
A bill that would allow the state to collect debts from income tax refunds was sent to a Senate appropriations committee after receiving a favorable report from the Senate Finance Committee.

The bill would allow state agencies to find out which of their debtors are scheduled to get income tax refunds and then deduct the amount of the debt from the refund.

Attorney General Rufus Edmisten said if the bill is passed, the state could collect between $4 million and $5 million in unpaid debts during the first year alone.

State revenue officials said 25 to 30 percent of income tax refunds are paid to persons who owe the state money.

A House subcommittee is considering a companion House bill.

Bus Drivers
Rep. Gus Economos, D-Mecklenburg, filed a bill in the House that would require all school bus drivers to be at least 17 years old and have a minimum of one year of driving experience.

Currently anyone who is 16 years old and has a driver's license meets the qualifications for driving a school bus.

Aging
A joint resolution on the elderly was filed in the Senate by Sen. James Edwards, D-Caldwell.

The resolution states that older people should be able to choose their own lifestyle, have available transportation and have increased employment opportunities and options in housing.

Untrained For The New Role

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Police department attorneys told a Senate committee Tuesday that a bill giving police officers greater authority in dealing with domestic violence would burden the officers with responsibilities they are not trained to handle.

"Our police officer has become our modern crusader, our social worker, our judge — he's not trained for that," Kurt Stakeman, attorney for the Raleigh Police Department, told the Senate Judiciary II Committee.

Reece Trimmer, attorney for the Durham Police Department, said police are concerned with part of the bill which says an officer "shall" arrest a person who violates a court order not to enter the home of a victim of domestic violence or not to harass a victim.

Trimmer said police would prefer to see the word "shall" changed to "is authorized to," allowing officers more leeway in individual cases.

Trimmer made the same objection to a requirement that a police officer provide emergency assistance to a victim of domestic violence.

He also questioned the constitutionality of a section of the bill which would allow a person who is charged with domestic violence to be kept in jail for 24 hours to cool off. Sen. William Creech, D-Wake, agreed that authorizing the jailing of an individual for 24 hours could set "a very dangerous precedent."

State Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, who testified in favor of the bill, agreed the language "needs tightening up." Edmisten said he is "not totally wedded" to the word "shall" in the portions of the bill where Trimmer objected to its use.

But he said the requirements would free police officers from liability if a civil suit were filed against them.

Trimmer and Jane Garvey, attorney for the Wake County sheriff's department, said the requirement that police provide emergency assistance, transportation and protection to victims would strain the resources of most departments.

Sen. Charles Vickery, D-Orange, one of the bill's sponsors, said: "There is no law giving law enforcement officers the authority to do something in the home" when they are called to the scene of a domestic quarrel.

New SBI Job

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The State Bureau of Investigation has assumed full responsibility for North Carolina's role in stopping cigarette smuggling.

Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, whose office includes the SBI, decided to actively enforce a federal cigarette contraband law, despite little interest in the past in curbing the illegal cigarette trade.

Edmisten has insisted since he became attorney general in 1974 that smuggling is not a problem for North Carolina. He has said the problem was created by states such as Florida and New York, where taxes amount to as much as 21 cents per pack, compared to two cents in North Carolina.

Edmisten's position changed after Congress made it a federal crime to transport large quantities of cigarettes across state lines without paying taxes.

Swine Meetings On February 16

Swine production meetings will be held Friday, Feb. 16, in Black Jack and Stokes. The Black Jack meeting will be held at 10 a.m. in Black Jack and 1 p.m. in Stokes.

Dr. Charles Stanislaw, extension swine specialist, and Mike Regans, Pitt County extension agent, will discuss swine management practices, followed by a question-answer session.

For more information, call Regans at the Pitt County Extension office, 758-1196.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecast until early Thursday predicts snow for the northern part of the Great Lakes, across New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania and into the lower New England states. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press

Increasing cloudiness was in prospect over North Carolina today, but it heralded an advancing warm front.

The leading edge of the warmer air will be moving into the state early Thursday, and with southerly breezes helping, temperatures should reach the 60s except in the mountains where highs will be in the 50s.

There was a chance of some sprinkles of rain around the state this afternoon, but they were expected to be light if they did develop.

Some light snow fell Tuesday over the northeast portion of the state, including the Outer Banks, while more light snow fell Tuesday evening over the northwest mountains, where the chance of more light snow continued today.

Temperatures today were expected to get no higher than the 40s, and not quite that high in the northwest mountains. Tonight's readings will be mainly in the 30s, and then the forecast is for partly cloudy and warmer Thursday.

Speaking to a capacity audience at Mendenhall Student Center, Bradley focused on the responsibilities of the press and also talked about his experiences as a correspondent in Vietnam.

"The American press cannot have responsibility legislated upon it," he said. "If that happened, the government would have to say what a free press is."

"There is a profound connection between freedom and responsibility. The First Amendment is the linchpin of a viable society."

A reporter also has personal responsibilities to the public, Bradley pointed out. "A reporter must be objective in his reporting." Relating to his Vietnam tour, Bradley remarked "as a reporter, I had to tell the story honestly, while separating personal feelings from my job. As a human being, I was against the war."

He added that journalists are human, and sometimes make mistakes. "We must open our minds to criticism. This criticism of the press will not go away, and it shouldn't."

"I do wish that this criticism would be on a higher plane," he added.

In talking about Vietnam, Bradley noted "Vietnam is an experience from which we have yet to recover. Too many of us want to forget it."

Bradley was one of the last journalists to leave Saigon when American forces and personnel were evacuated. He related some of his experiences of those final hectic days, saying newsmen had been told to keep their radio tuned to the Armed Forces radio network because the evacuation would take place in a few days.

"When it was time for the evacuation," Bradley said, "the radio announcer was to say it was '100 degrees in downtown Saigon,' and then play Bing Crosby's 'White Christmas.'"

But the first awareness Bradley had of evacuation being underway was when he saw westerners running through the streets with suitcases in their hands. The given signal was never played over the radio.

CBS Newsman Bradley Cites Censorship Price

By MARC BARNES

Declaring that censorship is a threat to free society, CBS Television correspondent Ed Bradley commented that "if censorship existed, the Bert Lance affair and the secret bombing of Cambodia stories would never have been told to the public."

Bradley, the first black news commentator to serve as a major news anchorman — for CBS Sunday Night News — is also the CBS White House Correspondent. His lecture last night in Greenville is part of a week long Black Arts Festival being held on the East Carolina University campus.

Speaking to a capacity audience at Mendenhall Student Center, Bradley focused on the responsibilities of the press and also talked about his experiences as a correspondent in Vietnam.

"The American press cannot have responsibility legislated upon it," he said. "If that happened, the government would have to say what a free press is."

"There is a profound connection between freedom and responsibility. The First Amendment is the linchpin of a viable society."

A reporter also has personal responsibilities to the public, Bradley pointed out. "A reporter must be objective in his reporting." Relating to his Vietnam tour, Bradley remarked "as a reporter, I had to tell the story honestly, while separating personal feelings from my job. As a human being, I was against the war."

He added that journalists are human, and sometimes make mistakes. "We must open our minds to criticism. This criticism of the press will not go away, and it shouldn't."

"I do wish that this criticism would be on a higher plane," he added.

In talking about Vietnam, Bradley noted "Vietnam is an experience from which we have yet to recover. Too many of us want to forget it."

Bradley was one of the last journalists to leave Saigon when American forces and personnel were evacuated. He related some of his experiences of those final hectic days, saying newsmen had been told to keep their radio tuned to the Armed Forces radio network because the evacuation would take place in a few days.

"When it was time for the evacuation," Bradley said, "the radio announcer was to say it was '100 degrees in downtown Saigon,' and then play Bing Crosby's 'White Christmas.'"

But the first awareness Bradley had of evacuation being underway was when he saw westerners running through the streets with suitcases in their hands. The given signal was never played over the radio.

Bradley found himself waiting for a bus to Ton Son Nhut Air Base on the outskirts of Saigon. When the bus arrived, it was discovered the man had never driven a bus before and the keys were not to be found. "Every time the bus stalled, we had to cross wires to get it started again."

Bradley described the confusion of a capital city in a state of siege, with Vietnamese blocking the way into the air base, necessitating the bus going to a port facility.

"Thousands of Vietnamese were running toward helicopters," Bradley said. "There was no security to allow Americans to board the helicopters."

Boarding the bus again and fighting his way back to the American Embassy, Bradley found embassy personnel busy burning paper money.

"The defense community had often spoke of a 'light at the end of a tunnel,'" Bradley commented, and added "the only time I saw this light was at the end of a long corridor, in a conference room in the embassy on that last day before I escaped to safety."

Change Charge To Son's Murder

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Charges against a Wayne County man accused of shooting his 13-year-old son were changed Tuesday from manslaughter to murder.

Charles L. Bivens, 43, was charged Monday with manslaughter in the death of his son, Charles L. Bivens Jr. with a 22-caliber pistol. The charge was changed on the advice of District Attorney Donald Jacobs, according to Wayne County Sheriff W.I. Adams.

Bivens told police he and his son were playing cowboys and Indians when his pistol fired. The younger Bivens was found dead at his Goldsboro home, when deputies arrived about 9:30 a.m. Monday.

Bivens is being held without bond in Wayne County Jail. He is scheduled to appear for a probable cause hearing in Wayne County District Court on Feb. 21.

Correction

The article in Tuesday's paper headed "Still Tickets To Hear Bradley" contains erroneous information relative to the date of the speaking engagement of CBS television news correspondent Ed Bradley.

Due to a change in scheduling, Bradley was at East Carolina University last night for his lecture, which earlier had been scheduled for Feb. 15.

Title I Council Meeting Held

The City-Wide ESEA Title I Parent Advisory Council met Tuesday night at the Greenville City Schools Administrative Office.

Mrs. Betty Quinn, Reading Coordinator, presented details on a simulated reading experience. "A Primer for Parents," ESEA Title I Director Freager Sanders, Jr. discussed several aspects of the Title I project.

Reports were given by representatives from Greenville Middle, South Greenville, Eastern, and Elmhurst Schools.

Cars Collided At Intersection

An estimated $2,350 property damage resulted from an 8 a.m. collision yesterday at the intersection of Tenth Street and College Hill Drive.

Police identified the drivers of the cars involved as Edward Ambrose Compton of Route 1, Grimesland and Mary Burnette Carr of Route 2, Farmville.

Officers estimated damage to the Compton car at $1,000, set damage to the Carr vehicle at $1,200, and said an estimated $150 damage resulted to a high voltage transformer struck by one of the two autos.

Investigators charged Carr with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of the collision.

Reappointed To 4-Year Terms

Ronald Rice, Willie Mae Hawkins and Leolia Dixon have been reappointed to four-year terms on the Pitt County Area Mental Health Board.

Bob Martin, chairman, expressed appreciation to the appointees for their continued service to Mental Health and its programs. The board is composed of 25 members appointed by the County Commissioners to four-year terms. Meetings are held the third Wednesday of each month in the Mental Health Center Conference Room and are open to the public, he said.

AYDEN, N.C. GREENVILLE, N.C.

NOTICE TO TELEPHONE CUSTOMERS

We are planning changes that will increase some rates to five countries and introduce a lower international dial rate to sixteen countries.

The American Telephone & Telegraph Company (AT&T) has filed a new schedule of overseas rates with the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) which accomplishes the introduction of international dialing to 17 additional countries. This brings the total of internationally dialable countries to 64. The scheduled changes include substantial rate decreases for 16 countries and selective rate increases in 5 of those 16 countries for calls billed on the United States mainland. There will be no rate changes for the 17th country, the Netherlands Antilles.

The decreases are scheduled to become effective on February 17, 1979, and the increases are scheduled to become effective May 15, 1979.

Increases and decreases of rates to five countries.

The increases, which are limited to the initial period rates and are scheduled to become effective on May 15, 1979, will raise the Sunday Operator Station and Person-to-Person rates to Argentina; the Sunday Person-to-Person rate to Colombia; the night and Sunday Person-to-Person rate to Haiti; and the night and Sunday Operator Station and Person-to-Person rates to Honduras and Nicaragua. For example, the rate for Argentina goes from $6.50 to $8.00 for Operator Station and from $9.00 to $12.00 for Person-to-Person; for Colombia, from $8.25 to $12.00 for Person-to-Person; for Haiti, from $9.00 to $12.00 for Person-to-Person; and for Honduras and Nicaragua, from $5.00 to $6.00 for Operator Station and from $6.00 to $9.00 for Person-to-Person. There are no increases in the additional minute charge. These increases will make the initial period charge for these calls the same as the existing daytime rates.

The new International Dial rates, which are lower than all rates presently in effect, will become effective February 17, 1979.

International Dial rates.

With the introduction of International Dial rates on February 17, 1979, customers can save from 10% to 42% compared with the current lowest cost day call.

For example, a three-minute daytime call to Iran, Iraq, Malaysia, Saudi Arabia, Tahiti, Turkey or Yugoslavia, which now costs $9.00 at the Operator Station rate, would cost $7.80 if dialed. Similarly, an $8.10 call to Kenya would be $7.20, the $8.00 call to Argentina would be $7.05, a $6.75 call to German Democratic Republic would be $6.00, and a $6.00 call to Honduras or Nicaragua would be $5.40.

New Operator Station and International Dial rates for countries.

AT&T's proposal includes introducing both International Dial and Operator Station rates to four countries—Bahrain, Belize, Colombia, and Haiti. These rates will be lower than current daytime rates. A three-minute daytime call to Bahrain, if dialed, would cost $9.00; to Belize, the rate would vary from $3.45 to $5.40; to Colombia, from $4.50 to $7.05; and to Haiti, from $3.45 to $7.05, depending on which state you're calling from.

It is important to note that customers calling from areas not presently equipped for International Dial would benefit from the lower dial rates even though the call would have to be completed by the operator. However, if the customer requests special operator assistance or special billing, the Operator Station rate would apply.

Yesterday's Cryptiquip — IGNORANT AGENT IGNORES PROGRESS REPORTS.

Today's Cryptiquip clue: K equals D

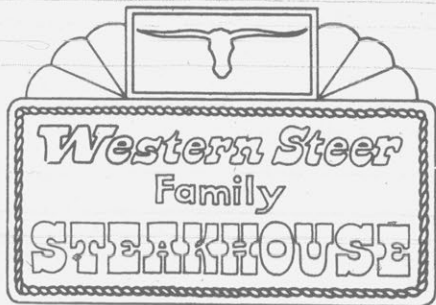

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Rustlers In England Active

LONDON (AP) — Many English farmers lost animals in 1978, and the farming industry is taking action to curb rustling. Figures compiled by the National Farmers' Union show losses last year amounted to several hundred thousand dollars.

Rewards as high as $20,000 are being offered for information leading to the conviction of rustlers.

O'Berry Center Worker Sues Over Job Choice

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An employee of the O'Berry Center for the Mentally Retarded in Goldsboro has filed a $1.4 million suit against Gov. Jim Hunt, the center's director and other state officials over the choice of a new chief patient advocate at the clinic.

Mike H. Shane, 38, claims he was turned down for the job in August by O'Berry Director Jerry H. Lyall because he is Jewish. He also claims that Hunt intervened to help win the job for Henry Groves Barnes of Baily, Hunt's former barber and close friend.

Shane, who has submitted his resignation effective March 31, filed suit Feb. 8 in U.S. District Court in Raleigh.

When Barnes was first hired at the center as a patient advocate in January 1978, Shane complained to the Regional Grievance Hearing Committee that Barnes did not meet qualifications for the job. The committee concluded in November 1978 that Barnes was not qualified for the initial appointment because he did not have a college degree.

Since then, the requirements have been changed to include a provision that the applicant may have an "equivalent combination of education and experience." The committee's report stated there were "implications of political intrusion" in Barnes' initial appointment as an advocate, but said the committee was unable to determine who made the appointment. The lawsuit is based on Barnes' promotion in August to chief patient advocate, a job for which Shane was rejected.

Barnes, 49, said Tuesday he has a high school education and is currently attending night school at Wesleyan College. He is also a licensed United Methodist minister and served on the Nash County Board of Social Services about four years. Barnes acknowledged that Hunt endorsed his application, but said, "This was no executive mandate or anything."

In the suit, Shane also names Dr. Sarah T. Morrow, secretary of human resources, who notified Shane that his request for the chief advocate's job had been denied.

The secretary said Tuesday that she understood from the personnel office that Barnes is qualified for the job. "I couldn't see firing Mr. Barnes and hiring Mr. Shane when Mr. Barnes was fully qualified for the job," she said.

Shane is the second O'Berry employee with a discrimination suit pending against the center. Ruby S. Whitted, 50, filed suit in January charging state officials, including Hunt, with racial and sexual discrimination.

Will Speak On Hospice Service

A service, new for Eastern North Carolina for the terminally ill child or adult and his or her family will be presented Thursday, Mar. 1, from 7 to 10 p. m. in the Allied Health Auditorium on the ECU campus.

Speakers will be representatives of Hospice of North Carolina, Peter Keese, president, and Carl Whitney, executive director. The model for the modern hospice, program of specialized care for the dying, was in England, where today both home and institutional care are available. Several are in operation in North Carolina.

According to Mrs. Lib LeConte, coordinator, there is no admission charge for this program.

The hospice subject will be discussed Friday, Feb. 23, at 7:30 a. m. on Channel 9 television.

Cub Roundtable Set Thursday

The Pitt District Cub Scout Roundtable will be held Thursday, Feb. 15, at 7:30 p. m. at Memorial Baptist Church on Greenville Boulevard.

The program for the meeting will consist of a magic theme, crafts, and important dates of upcoming activities.

All Cub Scout leaders are welcome.

When In Belhaven Dine At The River Forest Manor

Once Luxury Tomb Shows Its Neglect

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Rustling leaves, scurrying lizards and the whirr of traffic are the only sounds at Beulah Acklin's mausoleum now. But it wasn't always that way.

There used to be the shrill tangle of a telephone bouncing off the walls of the red brick structure, and loudspeakers inside to broadcast short speeches. There were fluorescent red and yellow lights, and a blue neon sign that flashed the word "Beulah" in 6-inch script over the ornate casket bearing her remains.

Clearly, Beulah's tomb was no ordinary resting place. The 15-foot-square structure, with an awning and iron fence around the patio, was built by fiancé at the Greenwood Cemetery by her husband, Roy, who wasn't ready to give her up to the ground.

Beulah was 52 when she died on May 15, 1948. And Acklin set out to build the monument while her body remained in a funeral home receiving vault.

He covered the interior walls with wallpaper, and furnished the tomb with lamps, plants, vases, a picture, smoking stands, china figures and other keepsakes. He had an electric meter installed at the back of the building.

He spent much of his free time there and as word spread about the unique place, visitors flocked to the cemetery. Acklin began holding an open house at the tomb every Wednesday night until 10, and each visitor signed a guest register.

So much time was spent there that Acklin added other conveniences — a phonograph, electric fan and a telephone. By 1951, curiosity had drawn so many visitors that Acklin had 14,000 signatures in his guest books.

"He put in a public address system," says Paul Thompson, a local embalmer who remembers the days when people made pilgrimages to see the tomb.

"You could hear music all over the neighborhood. He had calling hours, and if you could persuade him to, he'd open up the casket and display Beulah," he recalls.

As the years wore on, Acklin's visits slackened and the phone was removed. Eventually, he remarried. On Feb. 3, 1969, he had a heart attack and died. The mausoleum fell into disrepair.

Now, only an occasional wanderer in the cemetery stops by Beulah's house to peer through a broken window in the front door. An oak tree twists its way up through the iron fence and the withered remains of potted plants gather dust inside.

The sign has been unlighted since the last time the steel doors clanged shut. And only eternally blooming plastic flowers keep vigil at Beulah's rusting casket.

When Acklin died, he didn't join Beulah. He was buried somewhere else.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market: continued its rally of the past four sessions with another moderate advance today.

Gainers held a 3-2 advantage over losers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

And the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 1.30 to 831.51 in the first half hour. The market's recent strength has come despite a generally gloomy news background.

While concern persists about the energy outlook following the revolution in Iran, analysts say the takeover by supporters of Ayatollah Khomeini may have raised hopes that the worst of the Iranian news may be in the past.

The prospect of new problems in world oil supplies, meanwhile, has spurred buying of stocks with domestic energy interests, such as coal companies.

Occidental Petroleum rose 1/4 to 18 3/4, and Continental Oil was up 1/4 at 31 3/4 among the early volume leaders today. Both companies have extensive coal operations.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 5.37 to 830.21, bringing its advance in the past four sessions to 14.20 points.

Advances outnumbered declines by a 5-2 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume came to 28.47 million shares, up from 20.61 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index rose .42 to 55.46.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gained 1.11 to 161.82.

Greenville Ranked Second In Building

Embassy Seized.... Auto License Deadline Near

reports on who was responsible for the attack. Americans inside the embassy said they agreed with Holland that the attack was unprovoked. A heckler interrupted Holland's exchange with reporters outside the embassy to say "SAVAK agents," the shah's dreaded secret police, were inside the building and the reason for the attack.

"There was no SAVAK," one American said. "It was an unprovoked attack, maybe by leftists, to embarrass Khomeini."

One wounded Marine, Sgt. Ken Kraus of Lansdale, Pa., reported by telephone that he was grazed on the forehead and wounded in the arm after the ambassador ordered them to surrender.

Kraus said one of the leaders of the attack asked "where our weapons were. I took them into the restaurant where we had hidden two or three weapons. He insisted there were more and that he would shoot me if I didn't tell him where. I said it was all we had and he hit me in the chest with the gun butt and I fell to the floor. Next I heard a blast and started to bleed...."

"We never fired a shot. The ambassador told us not to fire so as not to jeopardize our own lives and those of Iranian workers in the kitchen."

"And we shouted, 'taslim,' 'we surrender.'"

An embassy official said Prime Minister Mehdi

Bazargan left the first meeting of his new cabinet when informed of the attack, and a spokesman for Khomeini said: "The direct orders of the ayatollah, who has repeatedly stated that embassies should not be molested."

Motor vehicle license tags and stickers for 1979 must be bought and displayed by midnight Thursday.

Having them inside the vehicle won't be good enough to prevent being a citation if one is stopped by a law enforcement officer after midnight Thursday, Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon said. His officers have been instructed to give citations, not warnings, if '79 stickers or tags are not displayed.

Mrs. Anna O. Garris, Greenville license agent, said she has been pleasantly surprised — that lines are not so long this morning. Her store closing time Thursday, as every weekday, will be 5:30 p. m. Her agency is located in Home and Auto Supply, 718 Dickinson Avenue.

Mrs. Ruby L. Johnson, Farmville license agent, said business at her agency, located at D. C. Johnson Locksmith & License Agency, 113 E. Wilson Street, Farmville, said license business is "hectic, very hectic — has been since Monday morning." Closing time for the Farmville agency is 5 p. m. Thursday.

Greenville ranked second in the state in building permit totals for November of 1978 among 38 North Carolina cities of more than 10,000 population. N.C. Labor Commissioner John Brooks reported that Greenville ranked only behind Asheville in November as permits totaled $9,058,225. Asheville recorded $22,259,263, of which $19.6 million was allocated cost of a new hospital.

The Greenville permit total, Brooks pointed out, included one for a $5.7 million expansion at Procter & Gamble Co. and a permit for $1.7 million for alterations to the old hospital structure.

Ranking behind Greenville for the month were Raleigh with $8,119,529, Charlotte with $7,804,881, and Greensboro with $5,643,350.

Brooks said that Greenville's permit total for the first 11 months of 1978 amounted to $48,558,525, ranking it only behind Raleigh ($116,592,838), Charlotte ($100,360,111), and Greensboro (66,282,806).

Permit totals for November and first 11 months in several neighboring cities included:

Elizabeth City, $196,100, $3,969,865; Goldsboro, $1,000,000, $11,183,602; Jacksonville, $428,558, $9,088,511; Kinston, $857,497, $8,486,782; New Bern, $573,560, $8,133,353; Roanoke Rapids, $329,010, $5,075,873; Rocky Mount, $2,232,958, $19,465,664; and Wilson, $1,912,744, $16,315,306. Brooks said that permits totaling $78,324 were issued in November in the 38 cities, up 27.3 percent from the 1977 figure, while permits for the first 11 months totaled $762,476,158, up 21.2 percent from the 1977 total.

(Rigby Electric Supply Co. for $32,385), 49,920 pounds of aluminum wire (Rigby Electric Supply Co. for $34,968), and 25-75 KVA transformer ($17,825 from Rigby Electric Supply Co.).

Approval was also given for the construction of a water line loop off the Belvoir Road, using GUC crews, at a cost of $16,000. The loop would serve a number of mobile homes located to the West of the Department of Corrections' facility and tie into an existing eight-inch main.

Money Drive....

"everyone will have the opportunity to contribute to this most worthwhile cause, one in which the community will benefit from the services provided by the Boys' Club."

At the recent annual meeting of the Board of Directors Britt accepted an invitation from the directors to head the campaign which gets underway officially on March 1.

A founding member of the local Boys' Club, Britt has long been active in giving his time and efforts to support the club in the ten years since it was first established.

Bob Mallard has been named by Austin to serve as campaign treasurer for the $500,000 fund drive. Currently, the club's executive director is Chet Emerson. Anyone interested in details on the campaign are asked to call 756-7505 for information.

Obituaries

Bradshaw
The Rev. Jessie Thomas Bradshaw, 53, of 208 S. Pine Street died Tuesday of injuries received in an automobile accident.

The funeral service will be held Thursday at 3:30 p. m. in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by his pastor, the Rev. Nathan F. Hanchev and the Rev. Herbert F. Carter, Superintendent of the Pentecostal Free Will Baptist Church Inc. of Dunn. Burial will be in Pinewood Memorial Park.

The Rev. Bradshaw, a Pitt County native, attended Chicod School, and as a Pentecostal F.W.B. minister had pastored churches in Trenton, Gastonia, Rocky Mount and Hassell prior to his retirement in 1975. He was a member of the Black Jack Pentecostal F.W.B. Church and, since 1950, had made his home in Greenville.

Surviving him are his wife, Mrs. Edna Buck Bradshaw; a daughter, Mrs. Brenda B. Martin of Orange, Va.; a brother, the Rev. T. R. Bradshaw of Greenville; three foster sisters, Mrs. Stewart Harris of Greenville, Mrs. Otis R. Stokes of Ayden, and Mrs. Ervin Buck of Chicod; five foster brothers, William H. Mills of Cox's Mill, Hubert Mills of Greenville, Lester Mills of Shelmerdine, Rufus Mills of Hudson's Crossroads, and J. H. Mills of Chicod; and two grandchildren.

The family will receive friends at the funeral home tonight from 7 to 9 o'clock.

Creegan
Mrs. Faye Johnson Creegan, 73, died at her home near Greenville this morning.

The funeral service will be conducted Friday at 11 a. m. in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by the Rev. John Brown of Rocky Mount. A graveside service will be held at 3 p. m. in Montlawn Cemetery in Raleigh by the Rev. T. Marshall Collins of Raleigh.

Mrs. Creegan, a Conway, S. C. native, was an East Carolina University graduate. She had taught in the Raleigh City Schools and at St. Timothy's School in Raleigh. A member of Tabernacle Baptist Church of Raleigh, she had made her home with her daughter, Miss Faye Marie Creegan, here since her retirement in 1970.

Embroiders' Chapter Met

The North Carolina Chapter of the Embroiders' Guild of America Inc. held its February meeting recently at Oakmont Baptist Church.

Kitty Tilson of Lexington, Va. presented the program, "Embroidery on Clothing," and taught the ladies how to embellish ready-to-wear as well as home sewn clothing.

The chapter members were served a covered-dish luncheon. The next meeting of the organization on March 6 and 7 will involve a two-day workshop conducted by Linda Jane Webster from Summerville, S.C. Techniques of drawn thread, needle lace, needleweaving and pulled thread will be presented.

Pirate Rally Sinks Seahawks, 78-70

Rebound Battle

WILMINGTON — East Carolina University held UNC-Wilmington to only eight points in the final six minutes of play last night, as they fought back from as much as nine points down to take a 78-70 win over the Seahawks.

The Pirates' win enabled them to take a sweep over the Seahawks, having earlier beaten them in Greenville, 92-79.

Led by the play of Herb Krusen, George Maynor and David Underwood, the Pirates used a strong second half to overcome the Wilmington team, which threatened to gain revenge for its earlier loss through strong board play.

Wilmington, helped along by a 21-12 rebounding margin in the first half, built up a nine-point lead with just under two minutes left in the first half, but the Pirates were able to cut that back to five in the final minute and a half.

Then, in the second period, the Pirates attacked the boards better, although Wilmington still held a 19-17 advantage. But what also helped was that the Pirates improved their field goal shooting from 42.9 per cent in the first half to 58.1 in the second. Their defense, at the same time, held Wilmington to just 40.0 per cent as compared to 46.9 per cent in the first half.

The Bucs took the lead for good with 5:56 left in the game when Frank Hobson scored off a drive. Oliver Mack followed with a three-point play for a four-point lead, which the Pirates held over the next three minutes.

Underwood, who had a perfect ten-for-ten night at the free-throw line, upped the lead to six with two charity shots, then Krusen, working from a new delay offensive pattern, similar to that used by both Clemson and Wilmington, scored from underneath all alone. Mack added two more free throws with 24 seconds left before Delaney Jones got a basket for Wilmington, the Seahawks only score in the final two minutes. Maynor finished up the scoring with two more free throws with nine seconds left.

"I'm happy to win," Larry Gillman, the ECU coach said. "This is one of the few gyms in the country where I'm undefeated," he added, referring to last year's 90-85 win in Trask Coliseum.

"We didn't play with a lot of aggressiveness in the first half, the boards show that. But I think we handled ourselves with poise when we needed it. It was not one of our better games, but I think our schedule is paying dividends in games like this.

"Our goal is a winning season, and we still have a shot at it," he added.

The Pirates switched from their usual matchup zone to a man-to-man for most of the second half, going back to the zone late in the contest after the Pirates had regained the lead. "The zone worked well for us in the first half, but we seemed to be just about a half-a-step slow in the second half, we wanted to put more pressure on their guards, and I think that could have been one of the key differences in the game. We got to standing around a little in the zone, and when we went back to the matchup, it befuddled them at the end."

Gillman praised the play of Underwood, saying it was his best game since the New York trip when he became eligible at the start of the second semester. "Hobson also came in and gave us a lift with a key basket and a couple of good rebounds."

The going was tight through much of the first half. East Carolina moved out to an early four-point lead, 6-2, but lose the lead at 11-10 and also fell back by four, 16-12. The Bucs tied it up at 16-16, however, and the two teams matched points until John Haskins hit a jumper for a 24-22 lead. Danny Davis added two jumpers for a 28-22 lead, and after a free throw by Hobson, Haskins tapped back a missed shot for a seven-point edge, 30-23. Two Davis free throws with 1:42 left gave the Seahawks their biggest lead, 36-27, but the Pirates came back on a jumper by Maynor and two free throws by Underwood to cut it to 36-31 at the horn.

After nearly five minutes of the second half, the Pirates regained the lead, 44-43, on a jumper by Hobson, but Ralph Peterson hit from the baseline for a 45-44 Seahawk lead.

The Pirates tied it again, 47-47, but again fell back, tying it three more times before Krusen hit his fourth straight basket for a 55-53 lead.

After two more ties, a three-point play by Dave Wolff put Wilmington back up, 58-57, and the two teams swapped the lead 5:56 left for a 63-62 lead, and the Pirates never trailed again.

Underwood paced the Pirate scoring with 22 points, while Maynor had 17, Mack had 15 and Krusen had 12. Mack's points pushed his career total to 1,108 and he passed Billy Brogden (1,098) for eighth place on the all-time scoring list. Ironically, Brogden is from Wilmington.

Wilmington is now three points behind number seven, Lacy West, who had 1,111.

Wilmington was paced by Wolff with 15, Haskins with 14, Davis with 13 and Garry Cooper with 11.

East Carolina's record is now 31-47-78.

A-G Girls Win; Rams Defeated

SPRING HOPE — Ayden-Grifton's girls, along with the North Lenoir and C.B. Aycock boys moved ahead in the Eastern Carolina Conference Tournament, winning first round games.

Ayden-Grifton topped North Pitt, 56-47, and will play the winner of tonight's Conley-Farmville Central game on Thursday at 5:30 p.m. North Lenoir's boys "downed" Greene Central, 46-44, holding off a Ram rally, and C.B. Aycock's fifth seeded Falcons tripped Southwest Edgecombe's fourth-seeded Cougars, 74-60, in a mild upset.

Aycock takes on Farmville Central Thursday at 7:15 p.m., while North Lenoir meets the winner of tonight's North Pitt-Conley game at 9 p.m., Thursday.

Ayden-Grifton sailed out to an early lead in its game, building up a 12-5 first period advantage. But the Pant-HERS fought back and cut the lead down to 23-20 by halftime. In the third period, North Pitt moved out to a three-point advantage, but the Chargers rallied to take the lead again, 35-32, as the period ended.

Ayden-Grifton steadily pulled away in the final quarter, outshooting the Pant-HERS, 21-15. Mary Rowe and Irene Lewis each scored 14 points to lead Ayden-Grifton, while Aretha Cannon added 11, Carolyn Best paced the North Pitt girls with 28, while Starla Singleton added 13.

In the North Lenoir-Greene Central game, the Rams threatened an upset by pulling away to a 13-8 lead by the end of the first period.

But the Hawks fought back and regained control, taking a 27-23 lead into the dressing room.

The Rams refused to wilt, however, and regained the lead in the third period, 37-33. But the upset wasn't to be as North Lenoir came back to outscore the Rams, 13-7, in the final period, and a number of missed shots in the closing seconds allowed the Hawks to take a four-point lead in the closing seconds and hold off the Rams.

Amos Pearce led North Lenoir with 14, while Johnny Wiggins added 10. James Best led Greene Central with 15 points.

In addition to the North Pitt-Conley boys game and the Conley-Farmville girls' game, Southwest Edgecombe takes on North Lenoir in a girls' game tonight.

The tournament continues through Friday at Southern Nash High School.

Faith Tops GCAKnights

GOLDSBORO — Faith Academy took advantage of a flu-weakened Greenville Christian Academy team last night to take a 51-42 victory.

GCA's junior varsity won its tenth game in 11 starts, however, 29-25.

In the varsity affair, Faith jumped off to an 11-4 lead in the first period and never trailed after that. They held onto their margin, leading 23-16 at the half.

GCA managed to cut two points off that during the third period, but still trailed 36-31 going into the final quarter. In that, Faith outthit the Knights, 16-11, to take the win.

Floors led Faith with 23 points, while Waters had 13. Steve Tyburski led GCA with 14 points, while Ben Haddock added 10.

Faith travels to Calvary on Friday.

Bird Heralded Sycamore Rise To Top

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (AP) — Indiana State University's rise from virtual obscurity to national prominence in basketball began with the arrival of Larry Bird three years ago. But what happens when the 6-foot-9 All-American graduates this spring?

"A super player always helps your program," says Athletic Director Bob King, who doesn't expect a dramatic backslide when Bird departs.

"Anytime you have someone that good, he's going to draw a lot of attention. Not only from the fans, but from the media as well," said King, who signed Bird four years ago, red-shirted him one season and coached him two years before stepping down because of illness.

"As far as recruiting, we can talk with the best now. We don't have to compete with Bobby Knight or any of them."

King, who came here as athletic director and basketball coach in 1974 after 12 years at the University of New Mexico, inherited a program that had produced just one winning season in the previous four years. Attendance at home games averaged barely over 2,000 in the 10,000-seat Hulman Center.

"Sometimes, you could have fired a shotgun at the stands and not hit anybody," said sports information director Ed McKee.

The caliber of basketball "had been a .500 situation," King recalled. "They had just moved to (NCAA) Division 1 a few years earlier, and our biggest problem was the schedule, getting a major schedule."

"My first job as athletic director was to get us into a good major league. We were able to move into the Missouri Valley Conference, and this was a big help to our program."

Then, of course, came Bird, who had left Knight's squad at Indiana University and enrolled at tiny Northwood Institute near his southern Indiana home at French Lick. Aided primarily by Bill Hodges, who moved up from an assistantship after King suffered a serious heart attack last summer and later an aneurism, the Sycamore coach lured Bird back to school.

King's first year produced a 13-12 record. The next year, with Bird in the lineup, the Sycamores were 25-3 and earned a National Invitational Tournament bid. They were 23rd with another NIT bid last year, and they are unbeaten in 23 games so far this season with the conference championship already assured.

The Hulman Center, draped with signs and banners, now is referred to on campus as "the house that Bird filled," and students line up hours before each game and still find the only space left is standing-room only.

Hodges' goal all along has been to win the Missouri Valley championship and earn a berth in the NCAA tourney, where he hopes to stifle critics who contend the Sycamores' schedule hasn't been rugged enough to warrant the nation's No. 1 ranking. But the long-range effect of the Bird-era success, especially in a state long dominated by Indiana, Purdue and Notre Dame, could snowball.

Overshadowed by Bird's glory is a supporting cast that will return four starters and two of the top three subs next year. The heir apparent as team leader is junior guard Carl Nicks, who played for King as a freshman two years ago, then spent a year at Gulf Coast Community College in Florida before returning to Terre Haute this season.

The 6-foot-2 Nicks, who averaged just 2.2 points a game for Indiana State two years ago, is second to Bird in scoring this season with a 19.6 average. Also back next year will be 6-7 forward Alex Gilbert, a junior college All-American who also transferred here this year; 6-8 forward Brad Miley, known more for defense than scoring, and 6-2 point guard Steve Reed.

Chenier Returns To Action And Paces Washington Overtime Win

By The Associated Press
Phil Chenier was around for the first time in a long time — and he was around at the right time, too.

Washington's veteran guard, who hadn't played in a National Basketball Association game since Jan. 8, 1978, and had undergone back surgery last September, was activated Tuesday, before the Bullets' game in San Diego.

He wound up playing 21 minutes, scoring six points and collecting a pair of assists, a rebound and a steal in the Bullets' 138-136 double-overtime victory over the Clippers. More important, he was in the game when it meant something, playing in both overtimes.

Nets 111, Kings 102
When Ralph Simpson moved up the road a piece from Philadelphia to Piscataway, N.J., last week, he also moved up in the eyes of the guy calling the shots from the bench on which he sat. He spent 16 minutes in action for New Jersey Tuesday night and scored 14 points.

Cavaliers 117, Lakers 111
Campy Russell, who is expected to pump in the points for Cleveland, scored 24 of them.

Nuggets 104, Bulls 94
Chicago Coach Larry Costello was distraught after the Bulls, with the Western Conference's worst record, lost their third in a row. Costello moaned after David Thompson's 28 points and George McGinnis' 24 topped the Nuggets, who turned a 51-48 halftime deficit into a 75-63 lead in the third period.

Pacers 124, Rockets 120
Johnny Davis hit half of his 28 points in the fourth quarter of the Pacers' first victory ever in Houston.

Blazers 120, Jazz 101
Portland, riding Lionel Hollins' 28 points and Maurice Lucas' 20, made it five in a row with its victory over the Jazz, leading from the opening minute.

Nothing Drastic From Wolfpack

By The Associated Press

North Carolina State coach Norm Sloan has promised his Wolfpack won't "try anything drastic" in tonight's Atlantic Coast Conference basketball meeting with league-leading Duke, but it's just that kind of promise that should forewarn the Blue Devils to be wary.

Duke, 7-1 in the conference and ranked fifth nationally, has beaten N. C. State twice this season, but is coming off a loss to unranked Pittsburgh. The Wolfpack, 1-7 in the conference and at the tail end of the conference race, will be looking for an upset in the regionally televised 9 p.m. game at Duke's Cameron Indoor Stadium.

The game is one of two ACC meetings on tonight's schedule. Virginia will be seeking its third ACC road victory of the season in a 7:30 p.m. game with Clemson at the Tigers' Littlejohn Stadium.

Virginia is 5-4 going into the game while the Tigers are 4-5. A nonconference game has fourth ranked North Carolina at home to William and Mary. The tipoff at Chapel Hill's Carmichael Auditorium is at 7:30 p.m.

The game with N. C. State launches a crucial eight-day stretch for Duke, which visits Maryland Friday night and meets Louisville in Charlotte on national television Sunday.

The Blue Devils have two more ACC games after Maryland, including the finale with North Carolina a week from Saturday. By winning their four remaining ACC games, the Blue Devils can cinch their first regular season title in 13 years.

North Carolina, second in the league and 18-4 overall, will be seeking revenge in the game with William and Mary, which last year stunned the Tar Heels who were ranked No. 2 in the nation at the time.

MARKETING MEMORABILIA — A white farmer carrying an automatic rifle holds up a Rhodesian flag in downtown Salisbury, Rhodesia as he follows a current trend among whites of buying Rhodesian memorabilia before the country changes rule in two months. On the counter is a collection of bullet souvenirs, including, left to right: a bottle opener, bell, a measurer, chess set, cuff links, and a coaster all made from bullets. Other objects are: a map of Rhodesia outlining operational war zones, coin bracelets, a mug with "Rhodesia is Super" sticker, and bullet penknives. (AP Laserphoto)

Plan To Tell 'Other Side'

By MELANIE RIGNEY
PINE RIDGE, S.D. (UPI) — South Dakota Indians, disenchanted with the news media, have decided to set up publicity outlets of their own, including a television station.

American Indians represent about 20 percent of the state's population. Yet only four of South Dakota's nine reservations have newspapers, and only one has a radio station. "We'll alleviate some misconceptions," said Tim Giago, Oglala Sioux information officer. "This (office) is where it's all at right now."

Clarence Skye, executive director of the United Sioux Tribe, said a new service called the American Indian News Media Network is being established by the tribes. "Indians are doing a lot of good things, but the media only focuses on the sensational," Skye said. "We're trying to show the other side."

Most of the state's Indians are concentrated on the Pine Ridge and Rosebud reservations in western South Dakota and in Rapid City, the state's second largest city. One Rapid City station is an NBC affiliate; the other, an ABC affiliate.

Giago said CBS officials seem receptive to making a proposed Indian UHF station an affiliate. He said the tribe is seeking Federal Communications Commission approval. Giago said, if all goes well, the station could be on the air this fall.

Once the facility is under construction, the tribe will apply for a license to operate a FM radio station, Giago said. Broadcasting facilities should cost about $400,000 to build, he said, but $1.5 million will have to be spent on equipment and general operation.

Initially, the tribe has a $100,000 grant through the Labor Department's Native American Economic Stimulus Program to buy equipment, hire instructors and travel to see stations in operation. The Bureau of Indian Affairs has been asked to guarantee or to find a bank which will guarantee a $2 million loan for the project.

Six students who are learning the mechanics and will be the staff nucleus are being paid through a Comprehensive Employment Training Act grant. The United Methodist Communications and United Church of Christ Communications have been asked to help pay for workers' salaries once the station is on the air.

Like many other stations aimed at minority audiences, Giago said, newscasts will be offered in two languages.

Giago said area studies have shown an advertising revenue potential of $13 million, more than enough to sustain the two Rapid City stations and the tribe's outlet.

He said the station's audience will have a buying power of $40 million. a statistic that should attract advertisers.

"We'll use it as a sale pitch," Giago said. "We'll tell them we buy trucks, we buy appliances, we buy furniture. They should put a little more back in."

Represented Weather Expert To At Sessions Speak February 22

ECU News Bureau
Members of East Carolina University's correctional services, political science and mathematics faculties represented the campus at recent educators' meeting.

Herman Moeller of the ECU School of Allied Health and Social Professions attended the mid-winter meeting of the American Correctional Association in New Orleans.

He is one of four educators serving on the ACA's House of Delegates and is vice chairman of the organization's Publications Policy Board.

Moeller and J. Robert Weber, also a member of ECU's corrections faculty, attended a meeting of the association's Commission on Accreditation for Corrections. Weber is treasurer of the commission.

Dr. Oral Parks of the political science faculty was a participant in a Washington, D.C. conference sponsored by the Educational Communications Network.

Drs. Milam Johnson and Katye Sowell attended the second annual meeting of Mathematics Educators. Principals and Superintendents in Southern Pines.

Allen Pearson, recognized as a world expert on tornadoes, will speak at the Craven County Courthouse superior court room in New Bern at 7 p.m. February 22.

Pearson's New Bern presentation is part of a National Weather Service program on severe weather designed especially for news media representatives, law enforcement officers, safety officials and citizens interested in severe weather safety.

In addition to the New Bern visit, Pearson will speak at 7:30 p.m. February 21 at the EPA Office of Administration Building auditorium on Alexander Drive in the Research Triangle Park, and at 10 a.m. February 22 in the Law Enforcement Center auditorium in Fayetteville.

Pearson, director of the National Severe Local Storm Forecast Center at Kansas City, Mo., will talk about what to do when a severe weather warning is issued.

During the past 20 years, 180 confirmed tornadoes have been reported in North Carolina. Eleven persons have been killed and millions of dollars in property damage have resulted from the severorms.

The greatest number of tornadoes occurs in the State during the month of May, although a significant increase begins during the month of March.

Ball Keynotes

Recent Seminar

ECU News Bureau
Dr. John Ball, chairperson of the East Carolina University Department of Social Work and Correctional Services, was keynote speaker at a recent legislative seminar sponsored by the N.C. Council of Churches and the State Council for Social Legislation.

Topics raised in his address, "Where is North Carolina?" were responded to by three panelists: N.C. Rep. Ruth Cook (D-Wake), Rev. Joy Johnson of the N.C. Parole Commission, and Vernol Robert Jansen, general secretary of the N.C. Synod, Presbyterian Church-U.S.

Protection Need Ended By Surgery

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — For the first time in more than 10 years, 14-year-old Katrina Ooms is able to go outdoors without a helmet, thanks to special surgery that "built" a forehead to protect her brain. "It feels great," says the ninth-grader from Bethesda, Md. "There are the little things I've never been able to do before — like wear hats and earrings. I got two wool hats for Christmas. And I'm looking forward to going horseback riding."

Late last year Katrina underwent surgery in Tampa to reconstruct a portion of her skull that had been shattered by an auto accident at age 3. The accident left only skin to protect a section of brain.

Her forehead was slightly concave and soft like a baby's. Any puncture or bad fall could easily have caused brain damage, says her mother, Theodora. So Katrina had to wear football-style headgear for protection.

"I guess I got used to the helmets. I always wore them. But they were hot, especially in summer," Katrina said in a telephone interview from her Maryland home.

The operation was performed just after Thanksgiving. Katrina was able to return to Maryland in time to celebrate Christmas at home.

The Ooms' physician in New York had known of a new surgical technique being performed by two Tampa doctors and had referred the family to them.

"The field is a completely new frontier in reconstructive plastic surgery," says Dr. Mutaz Habal, who performed the surgery with Dr. Jack Maniscalco.

"We used the latest in space-age technology and polymer biochemistry. We made a template in the shape of her forehead and placed it right under the skin," Habal explained.

"Then we coated it with a paste that we grind in a special way from her own bones. This paste will revascularize (become diffused with tiny blood vessels) from the surrounding tissue, and she will grow her own skull bone there," he said.

The plastic mesh template, which serves as a kind of tray in which the bone can form and grow, is attached to the existing bones of the skull or face with tiny screws that won't react with fluids in the central nervous system.

The bone transplanted to the template came from Katrina's ribs and hip. Katrina has a slight limp, but Habal said the "borrowed" bone will grow back completely in a year or two.

Evening Classes Set

ECU News Bureau
Evening programs in aspects of business and organizational communications will be offered this spring by East Carolina University.

A four-session class, "Business and Technical Writing," is scheduled for Wednesdays, March 14 - April 14. The program involves practice and study for persons whose work requires them to be clear, correct, tactful and persuasive in written communications.

A one-session workshop, "Persuasive Communications," will be offered Thursday evening, March 15. The program is designed for sales personnel and others who wish to develop more effective written and oral persuasive communication skills.

Instructors are Sparrow and James Rees of the ECU speech faculty, a specialist in conference leadership and business communications.

Further information is available from the Office of Non-Credit Programs, Division of Continuing Education, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C., telephone 757-6143.

Worms Seen As Answer To Wastes

By MARCELLA S. KREITER
KALAMAZOO, Mich. (UPI) — Mary Appelhof sees worms as the answer to the nation's solid waste disposal problem. She has a $2,500 grant from the National Center for Appropriate Technology to help prove her theory.

Mrs. Appelhof, a housewife in suburban Portage, has been raising worms for seven years. Now she has recruited eight families for a garbage-disposal experiment involving worms at the Kalamazoo Nature Center.

Worms are "convenient, simple and they do the job," Mrs. Appelhof said in an interview. "We have to find a way to process the organic components of solid waste in a sensible biological way so we can reduce the amount of landfill that will be required to handle those components."

For 14 weeks her experimenters are dumping their household refuse into a cardboard-lined trash bin that worms use as a dining room. They gorge themselves on such delicacies as leftover lettuce, potato peels, coffee grounds and tea bags.

In fact, the worms can eat just about anything except plastic, glass, aluminum and rubber containers.

"We're calling it vermicomposting because we figure the more complicated it sounds the better Americans like it," Mrs. Appelhof said. "We get overly impressed with machines and high technology. We tend to overlook the simple things like worms."

Within the next two years she expects large, worm garbage disposal stations to be set up. She says homeowners could have home size units much like trash compactors "but better. You can produce your own potting soil as well."

During the life of the nature center project, two pounds of worms are expected to eat 196 pounds of garbage and produce 200 pounds of humus — potting soil.

Experts estimate it would take 17,000 pounds of worms — at 800 to 1,000 worms per pound — to eat their way through a typical township landfill.

Michigan has hundreds of worm growers without a market for their produce. Many were lured into business by slick, out-of-state firms that promised to buy back whatever the growers produced.

But the out-of-state firms sold the worms to other potential growers with the same proviso and no hope of establishing a self-sustaining market.

Many companies are now defunct and others are under investigation by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Dr. Robert George of Michigan State University's Department of Fisheries and Wildlife said there is a future for worms in both solid waste disposal and water sewage treatment.

George is conducting an experiment in which sludge is dumped into a body of water and plants growing in that water are harvested and fed to worms. The process aims to remove impurities from the water that would eventually kill off the fish.

Evening Course In Braille Set

Maine Plans Addition To Sheep Herds

By ELAINE APOSTOLA
AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — State officials think sheep may soon join potatoes as one of Maine's largest farm industries.

"Sheep is a natural," Joseph M. Williams, commissioner of the Maine Department of Agriculture, said with one eye on rising beef prices and the other on the popularity of natural wool.

In the 1800s, about a million sheep roamed the meadows of Maine's tiny coastal islands. But, by a few years ago, the herds had dipped to about 8,000. The sheep population has now bounced back to 13,000 and agriculture authorities are taking the initiative to make certain Maine flocks grow larger.

Williams said that as the prices of petroleum products increase, the cost of synthetic materials skyrockets. He said that leaves "natural" products such as wool and cotton in high demand. And the commissioner said lamb meat could start appearing on more tables as the price of beef climbs.

With more than 75 percent of the nation's lamb consumption concentrated along the eastern seaboard, and the bulk of that market located between Boston and New York, the possibilities for lamb dishes appear almost limitless, he said.

There are now 180 sheep growers in Maine.

Maine is located within hours of some of the largest population centers of the United States, the belt of cities stretching south from Boston. The market is accessible by rail, truck or ship.

A 15-member Sheep Industry Task Force — composed of bankers, financial advisors, marketers, producers, state agriculture officials and others — is studying the feasibility of expanding sheep production. The committee says the "backbone" of the Maine sheep industry is small flocks of between 10 and 50 ewes. It says a 200-ewe flock can be raised in conjunction with an on-going agricultural operation. But it has some concern about huge sheep operations.

A flock of 1,000 ewes could be raised in Maine only under special conditions. Due to "poorly drained soil" and other problems, the raising a flock of such size would be difficult, the committee says.

The task force says possibilities for financing a sheep producer who wants to enlarge his flock includes help from the Farmers Home Administration, commercial banks, Farm Credit Service, savings institutions and trade and dealer credit.

The feed committee of the task force determined that products already grown in Maine which could be used to feed Maine's sheep. "Calculated use of tater meal, pro-cell, and sea life and soybean meal will contribute significantly to enhanced bottom-line figures for practically any size sheep operation," the committee said.

"More importantly, the carrying capacity of the farmers' land will be increased when basic needs are satisfied by use of these products as opposed to converting valuable pastureland into less valuable crop acreage."

The committee concluded there are three important crops growing in Maine — potatoes, oats and corn — which can be incorporated into "highly nutritional feed programs."

The education sub-committee said the quickest educational impact for the promotion of the sheep industry is to provide training for people already involved. It recommends adult education courses be used to reach present growers.

Plan Workshop On Solar Energy

ECU News Bureau
The U.S. Department of Energy has awarded $17,688 to the East Carolina University physics department to support a solar energy workshop for college faculty this summer.

About 24 persons from across the U.S. are expected to participate in the workshop, which will feature lecture and experimental work in ECU's solar energy laboratory.

The workshop is scheduled for June 4-15 and will be directed by Drs. J. William Byrd and Carl Adler. A similar program was offered by ECU last year, with U.S. DOE financial support.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, FEB. 15, 1979

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The daytime is ideal for working out any arrangements of interest to you with others and reconciling any differences of opinion. The right tact can produce the right results.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Display your talents and gain the respect of others. Be sure to handle any civic duties that apply to you. Use care in motion.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Get an early start on work that requires neatness and precision and do an excellent job. Takes no risks with your health.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Put your finest talents to work now and get excellent results. Sidestep one who is jealous of you and could cause trouble.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You want to improve conditions at your abode, but first get the okay of family members living with you and all its fine.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Obtain the information you need in order to make your regular routines more efficient. Take no risks with your money at this time.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Find a better system that will help you improve your monetary position. Obtain the advice you need from a financial expert.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You are magnetic today and can easily get what you want of a personal nature. Use common sense in all your dealings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Make sure all of your affairs, business and personal, are well organized. Strive for true accord with loved one.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A good day to see as many persons as you can who can be of assistance to you in some way. Express happiness.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get in touch with persons who can help you become more active in civic matters. Avoid one who is jealous of you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Put those ideas you have in mind to help you expand in your line of endeavor. Forget a tendency to criticize others.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You are able to charm others now and gain your aims. Find new ways to attend to your responsibilities so you'll have more time.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have a very sweet nature and will be most popular with others. Teach early to be more objective, otherwise your progeny could be hurt by the demands of others. Don't neglect ethical training. Sports are a must here.

Tonight's TV Remake Tops Original

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There's a television remake of a movie classic tonight that is not a cheap, clumsy embarrassment. In fact, it's good, and in many ways better than the original.

"From Here to Eternity," a six-hour miniseries beginning tonight on NBC, is not so much a remake of the 1953 Montgomery Clift-Deborah Kerr-Burt Lancaster film as it is a new version of the James Jones novel.

Curiously, Jones' novel of passion, principles and infidelity seems better suited for a 1979 television adaptation than it was for a theatrical film adaptation 26 years ago. It is a story of lust and physical and emotional cruelty in the Army just prior to World War II, skirt back in the 1950s.

Contemporary television, though, has shown itself adept at steamy, suggestive productions. True, these are usually trashy, "soft porn" numbers; but in this case, the story requires a kind of restrained titillation, more suggestive than was allowed in the movies 26 years ago, less explicit than would be allowed in the movies today.

It's an approach television uses all the time, though usually on behalf of less worthy causes.

William Devane is a little too loud and a little too smug in Burt Lancaster's role, Sgt. Milt Warden, but Devane has an inner appeal as an actor that can make you overlook the shortcomings of his performance.

Steve Railsback is fine in the pivotal role of Pvt. Robert E. Lee Prewitt, the principled small-town kid who refused to box because he once blinded an opponent. Railsback, who was brilliant as Charles Manson in the TV movie "Helter Skelter" a couple of years ago, lacks Montgomery Clift's palpable air of mystery, but then, so does every actor. A strong performance here.

Peter Boyle is perfect as Fatso Judson, the sadistic sarge who runs the stockade, a horrifying den of meanness. The stockade scenes, by the way, constituted one of the key sections of the book, consuming one third of the text. But the stockade was not seen in the original movie because of Army objections.

Then there is Natalie Wood. If cars aged like this, there'd be no such thing as depreciation. At 40, she is more beautiful and sensuous than she was 10 years ago, and more polished an actress.

She plays Karen Holmes, the fetching wife of a jackass Army captain, who drums out the hatred in her bitter life with a torrid affair with Sgt. Warden. The relationship is handled nicely; erotic, but not pornographic.

One of the strengths of this TV version of "From Here to Eternity" is that it is more than reasonably true to the text and spirit of Jones' novel, which the first film version was not.

Orchestra To Play In Kinston

A program of 18th and 19th century music has been announced for the North Carolina Symphony concert in Northwest Elementary School Auditorium at 8 p.m. Friday, Feb. 16.

The orchestra will play two pieces — Carl Maria von Weber's "Overture to Der Freischuetz" and Tchaikovsky's "Symphony No. 5 in E minor." Soloists Michael and Margaret Ma will perform with the orchestra Bach's "Concerto in D minor for Two Violins and Orchestra."

Admission is by season ticket or individual tickets at the door, priced at $6 each for adults and $3 for students.

Drefuss Tapped For Oscar Show

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Richard Dreyfuss, who won the Oscar for best actor ("The Goodbye Girl") last year, is the first star set by the Motion Picture Academy as a presenter at this year's award ceremonies. Dreyfuss, who won't be a nominee himself this year, will make the presentation to the best actress of 1978. The Oscars for outstanding film achievements of the past year will be presented April 9 at the Los Angeles Music Center and will be telecast by ABC.

Bee Gees Top List Of The Grammy Nominees

By ROBERTA G. WAX
LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The high-pitched, disco recordings of "Saturday Night Fever" and "Stayin' Alive," nominated for Grammys as album and record of the year, helped the Bee Gees capture six nominations and top the list of musicians vying for the Grammy Awards Thursday night.

Former President Richard Nixon also has a shot at one of the recording industry's highest awards, for his interviews with David Frost.

John Denver will host and perform at the 21st annual Grammy Awards, to be televised live from the Shrine Auditorium in a two-hour presentation over CBS starting at 9 p.m. EST.

The 4,700-member National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences voted secretly on the 52 performance and craft awards. Only 12 awards will be presented during the live broadcast, which will also feature a special salute to the San Francisco recording scene and announcement of inductees into the academy's Hall of Fame.

Besides Denver, performers will include Chuck Mangione, Eubie Blake, the Imperials, Oscar Peterson with Joe Pass, Lou Belson and John Herd, Taste of Honey, Kenny Rogers and Dottie West, Olivia Newton-John, Boz Scaggs, Barbara Mandrell, Johnny Paycheck and Alicia Bridges.

Presenters will include Andy Gibb, Barbra Streisand, Barry Manilow, Lily Tomlin and Steve Martin.

Anne Murray and Mangione each received four nominations, including song of the year for Miss Murray's "You Needed Me" and Mangione's "Feel So Good."

Miss Murray was also nominated in both pop and country vocal performance by a female. The Canadian singer, pregnant with her second child, withdrew as a presenter because of illness.

Other multiple nominees included Earth, Wind and Fire, up for three performance awards and four craft nominations: John Williams, with four nominations for his "Close Encounters" score; and Quincy Jones and Chick Corea, with three each.

Besides the Bee Gees' "Stayin' Alive," Miss Murray and Mangione, nominees for record of the year also went to Gerry Rafferty for "Baker Street" and Billy Joel for "Just the Way You Are."

"Some Girls," the controversial album by the Rolling Stones, was also vying with "Saturday Night Fever," the largest-selling soundtrack album ever with more than 15 million sold, for album of the year. The Stones' title tune was heavily criticized because of a reference to black women.

Also nominated in that category were Manilow's "Even Now," the original soundtrack from "Grease," with John Travolta and Miss Newton-John; and Jackson Browne's "Running on Empty." Joel's "Just the Way You Are" and the Gibb brothers' "Stayin' Alive" are up against "Three Times a Lady," "You Don't Bring Me Flowers" and "You Needed Me" for song of the year.

Barbra Streisand, who recorded "You Don't Bring Me Flowers" alone and with Neil Diamond, goes against Miss Murray for best pop female vocal performance for her solo version of the tune.

Seemingly insignificant cards can be of vital importance. Study the diagram above and see if you can spot which card took the setting trick against South's contract of four hearts.

South led his 100 honors and distributional hand go to his head. He would have been better off to pass three no trump, which would have been made in comfort.

It seems that declarer has to lose only the three aces. However, careful defense promoted West's eight of hearts to the setting trick, and declarer was helpless to prevent it. Hats off to you if you spotted the winning defense. If not, watch the play unfold.

East won the king of spades and returned the three. This was not a haphazard selection but a suit-preference signal showing that his outside entry was in the lower-ranking of the side suits—in this case, clubs.

To prevent West from ruffing with a low trump, declarer trumped with the king. West made a good defensive play when he refused to overruff—had he taken the ace, declarer would have had no further problems.

Just in case East held the ace of trumps, declarer crossed to the queen of diamonds and led a trump to the ten. West won the ace and dutifully returned a club. East took the ace and led another spade. Declarer had no counter.

If he ruffed low, West would overruff. Declarer's only hope was that trumps were going to divide evenly, so he ruffed with the jack. Now he had only one high trump remaining—the queen. He cashed it, but West's eight now became the fourth defensive trick.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? ATTENTION! PLEASE READ THIS AD

ATTENTION BUYERS!

ATTENTION SELLERS!

Do interest rates, "points", taxes, market trends in various locations, construction, mortgages, market values, etc., frighten you? Let us help, it's our job. You can DEPEND on us to answer all your questions and to help you make the right decision about buying. After all, buying a home is probably the biggest financial decision the average family will EVER make. Let our qualifications in every phase of home buying work for you. Don't make the mistake of over buying—paying too much for your dream home. We have the "know how" and the experience to better serve you.

Feel better? YOU SHOULD? You can depend on us. Our reputation and 25 years of experience in developing, building and professional appraising proves it.

If you have a home to sell, whatever the reason, you have a problem and we are the problem-solvers!! Do you know the current market value for YOUR home in YOUR particular location? Do you have the ability to negotiate a sale? How about arranging financing, pro-rating taxes and escrow accounts, loan assumptions, etc.? We have the "know how" to solve these and other questions. We can determine a price that will realize you the maximum and fairest value in a reasonable length of time. Don't take the chance of underselling! Your home is probably your most valuable asset. You should rely on a professional to do this job. We ARE professionals, and selling is our job. So why not let US help YOU.

Now relax, and give us a call. THERE'S NO OBLIGATION.

FOOD, DRUGS AND GENERAL MDSE. UNDER ONE ROOF!

We've got it Together!

Just park your car once, browse through our wide uncluttered aisles, check out once, let us carry out your parcels...and you've done the biggest part of your weekly shopping at Kroger Sav-On. This easy, pleasant way of one-stop shopping will make even more sense when you've compared our store-wide low prices with those you've been paying!

KEEPING YOU POSTED

When you complain...We Say "THANK YOU"

All of us at Kroger Sav-On work very hard to give you the kind of shopping service and product quality you want and deserve. We want to please you. That's why we guarantee everything we sell on a replacement or money-back basis.

We enjoy hearing from you when you are pleased. But once in a while something can go wrong. And if it does, we want even more to know about that. If you are dissatisfied for any reason — particularly if our service doesn't please you — your Kroger Sav-On manager wants to know about it.

In the case of a problem with a product, we need some information to help us check out the problem: 1) Brand, size and name of product, 2) The date and the Kroger Sav-On where the product was purchased, 3) A description of the problem, and — very important — 4) The code number that is stamped or embossed on the package, usually on the lid or flap (Note: This is not the same as the number which is under the rectangular bar symbol on the label). The code number tells when and where the product was packaged, so we can trace how the problem occurred.

When you tell us about a problem, you are giving us the opportunity to show you that we care. You are asking us to keep you as a Kroger Sav-On customer. You also are helping us to identify and correct problems — and thus to serve all customers better in the future. So, unusual as it seems, that's why we say "Thank You" when you complain!

KROGER SAV-ON --- A WHOLE LOT MORE THAN JUST ONE STORE

Kroger Sav-on garden

WHERE SERVING YOU COMES FIRST

Kroger Sav-on gardeners take special pride in every item they sell. They'll be happy to help with your selection, tell you new ways to serve your favorites, and introduce you to new ones you haven't tried yet. And when you've made your choices, they'll weigh and price them with a smile.
