C-of-C Asks Mixed Drink Referendum

by REBECCA BUFFALO
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors voted Thursday to send a resolution to the Pitt County Board of Commissioners requesting that the commissioners call for a referendum on liquor by the drink in the county either May 4 or May 18.

The board, in other actions, came out in support of the Greenville electric, water and sewer bonds to be voted on in referendum on April 3.

GACOC Chairman of the Board Jerry Powell pointed out that a Chamber-appointed committee, chaired by Mark Tipton, had studied the mixed drink situation and had presented its results to the board at the Thursday meeting prior to the vote.

"The reason for the May referendum date is so people will have a chance to vote before crop work and vacations," said Powell. "It's not a case of trying to rush the issue through."

The chamber mixed drink task force was comprised "of a lot of people from all walks of life," Powell noted.

"The task force members were carefully selected to represent a true cross section of the county," the chairman continued.

Powell pointed out that the Chamber Board of Directors did not vote to support the mixed drink issue, but wanted Pitt County voters to have a chance to voice their opinions on the matter.

R. L. Martin, chairman of the Board of Commissioners said this morning that he would talk with other board members about the Chamber's resolution and possibly call a meeting next week to consider the request.

Last week, Martin said, "we've had talks with the Chamber of Commerce at their request," regarding the liquor-by-the-drink question.

"If people in the county show an interest and want a referendum, we would act on it," Martin said at that time.

"There is no opposition on the part of the board," Martin said. "We just want to know there is some interest before we call a referendum. It seems everyone is waiting for someone else to act," he added.

Killings Begun By Khomeini's Regime

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — A revolutionary firing squad executed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's hated secret police chief and three other generals at Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's headquarters during the night. It was reported 26 other officers and officials of the old regime will be executed.

Fearful Americans were packing their bags for a massive air evacuation set to begin Saturday. A preliminary flight took off today with 167 of them.

Tehran radio reported that pro-Khomeini forces appealed for tear gas to disperse an attacking mob after a night-long street battle in eastern Tehran. But three days of fierce fighting in the northwestern city of Tabriz have ended, the radio said, and the government is in control.

Unconfirmed reports put the casualty toll in Tabriz as high as 700 dead with thousands wounded. Tehran Radio blamed the fighting on "counter-revolutionary SAVAK agents" and said a nightly curfew remained in effect.

Thousands of youths marched in Tehran in celebration of the reported victory in Tabriz.

Three other generals were killed last weekend by guerrillas as Khomeini's forces were taking over the country, but the government said the four just executed were "the first group of traitors" to be tried by revolutionary courts. It said

Contracted

East Carolina University Chancellor Dr. Thomas Brewer said today that contracts have been awarded for the $26 million medical education facility for the School of Medicine.

Brewer said contracts should be signed for the 451,000 square foot Medical Science Building within 30 days.

Bids for the facility were received in December, and were some 18 per cent more than the funds available for construction. Negotiations were concluded last week to bring the cost of the facility within the budget.

D. R. Allen and Sons of Fayetteville, received the general construction contract, while Poole and Kent Corp. of Washington, D. C. won the plumbing bid. W. H. Sullivan Co. of Greensboro received the heating, ventilation and air conditioning contract, while the contract for electrical work on the building went to Richards and Associates of Carrollton, Ga.

The nine-floor facility will be located on a 40-acre tract adjacent to Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

General Visitor At ECU

By CAROL TYER

The Chief of the Shah of Iran's National Police visited his children who were students at East Carolina University here several times during the past few years.

Today Gen. Fazlollah Jafari is thought by some who knew him here to be one of 30 officials of the shah's police and military forces to be executed already or slated for execution by the new Khomeini government.

His son, Jamshid Jafari was a well-liked student and campus leader at ECU, according to both Dr. David Middleton of the ECU Department of Continuing Education and Dr. Norman Pendered of the School of Industrial Technology. He got his B. S. degree and his M. A. degree, in 1974 and 1975 respectively, from the School of Industrial Technology. He was a student helper in the Department of Continuing Education. Both Middleton and Pendered have continued to correspond with Jamshid, who is now an oil company executive in Tehran — or was the last time they heard from him. Both said they have been told by the Post Office that no mail from the United States can go in or out of Iran, so writing now would be futile.

Jamshid was extraordinarily personable and well-liked on campus and in the community alike, Middleton said. He was instrumental in opening a house for international students on campus, he recalled.

Both Middleton and Pendered said they met and were favorably impressed by Jamshid's father. "He did a lot of traveling on business for the Shah," Middleton said. "The last time I saw him, he had been to Brazil, I believe, before coming here."

Gen. Jafari's daughter, Parvin, also has been a student at East Carolina University, but is now living in Oxon Hills, Md. with a married sister and her physician husband. She is employed in her brother-in-law's office.

Mrs. Jafari visited in Maryland for some time last year, but is now back in Iran, Middleton said he was told in a phone conversation with Parvin. He said she believes her family to be safe, but not yet out of danger. They waited too long to get out of the country, she said, adding that both her parents and her brother, Jamshid, and his wife were being hidden by anonymous friends at the time she last heard from them about a week ago.

Starvation Believed To Trigger Death Of Gulls

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Seagulls discovered dead at the Pitt County Landfill and in the adjacent Greenwood Cemetery this week probably died from starvation-induced lowered resistance to naturally-occurring bacteria in their digestive systems.

This is the opinion of Dr. Thomas B. Bruce of the N. C. Agriculture Department's Animal Laboratory in Edenton, according to Tom Monschein, a State Wildlife Resources Commission biologist who came here earlier this week to collect and study some of the dead birds and a few live ones.

Monschein, interviewed by telephone at his New Bern office this morning, said he had just been told by Dr. Bruce that e. coli bacteria which is almost always in the birds' digestive systems, probably overtook them because of the stress caused by lack of a sufficient supply of food during the recent snowy, icy weather. There was little or no food in the studied birds' stomachs, he said, and their breast muscles appeared to have deteriorated.

Further tests on the birds will be made, Monschein said, but it appears now, he said, that no toxic material was responsible for the deaths of a few of the thousands of birds which populate the landfill scavenging for food. Most of the birds that died were herring gulls and ring-billed gulls, he said.

Willie Pate, Director of the Environmental Health for the Pitt County Health Department called in Monschein after the gulls were discovered Tuesday afternoon, some dead or dying and some in a "seemingly drunk or tranquilized state." Pate said he also saw a few dead blackbirds, but none could be found after Monschein arrived to begin the investigation, according to Monschein.

Sewell Named City Engineer

City Manager Ed Wyatt announced the appointment of Ronald R. Sewell as city engineer, effective immediately.

Sewell, Wyatt noted, has been serving as acting city engineer in Greenville since the Dec. 31 retirement of Charlie Holliday.

A native of Roanoke Rapids, Sewell joined the city staff in June of 1974 as assistant city engineer. He received his B.S. degree in civil engineering in May of 1974 from North Carolina State University.

During his four years as State, Sewell was a member of the Wolfpack football team and was the team's field goal and extra point kicker for two years.

He is a registered land surveyor and a registered professional engineer. Sewell has extensive background in traffic engineering and presently serves as executive secretary of the city's Traffic Commission.

WHAT'S "VICIOUS"?

I would like to know if owners of vicious dogs can be compelled to confine their animals to their own property. My small dog is still in "intensive care" at our veterinarian's office because she was attacked about a week ago by two large dogs as she walked with my young daughter and me. I shudder to think what would have happened if I had not been with my child and she had tried to intervene. As it is, our dog had to have "more stitches than the vet has ever had to put into one dog," but my child is fine except for the traumatic memory. I have been promised that my veterinarian's bill will be paid by the owners of these two dogs. This I appreciate and I do not wish to sue for any kind of punitive damages, but I do wish there were some way these people could be compelled, for the public safety, to confine their pets.

Hotline, with the help of Willie Pate, director of the Environmental Health Division of the Pitt Co. Health Department which administers the county's rabies control program, surveyed the dog laws of this state (contained in the N. C. Dog Law Manual, available from the N. C. Institute of Government).

It appears, Pate said, that his rabies control personnel could not prevail upon the owners of these dogs (who live in Pitt County, but not within Greenville which would have an applicable leash law) to confine their dogs. The only way this could be done, he said, is, if it were proved in court, that the dogs are "vicious." Pate said he is not a lawyer, but it appears to him, on reading the state's dog laws, that the only way a dog can be called vicious, according to N. C. law is "if the dog has earlier bitten someone (i. e. a human being) without being provoked."

It is legal, he said it appears, to kill a dog that is attacking livestock or other domestic animals while the act is underway, but not afterwards.

Pate said state laws seem inconsistent concerning protection of and from dogs and make administration by a department such as county rabies control difficult.

You said this incident may have inspired you to work for a county-wide leash law.

ERA Again Fails Grade

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Supporters of the Equal Rights Amendment saw their hopes for ratification in North Carolina dashed for the fourth time Thursday, and immediately began looking toward their next chance in the 1981 legislative session.

Facing insurmountable Senate opposition, ERA's backers moved to put the controversial amendment to death quickly in a Senate committee Thursday rather than see it mangled in the full chamber.

"I think this will be a matter before each legislative session until it passes, and it eventually will pass," said Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, a leading proponent of the amendment.

The Senate Constitutional Amendments Committee, dominated by supporters of ERA, effectively killed the amendment with a voice vote to give it an unfavorable report. A reversal of the decision in the current two-year legislative session would be virtually impossible, requiring a two-thirds vote of the Senate. "Two more years," a group of ERA supporters in the Legislative Building began chanting after the final killing blow was applied. "Don't get mad. Get even," another ERA backer said.

The action marked the fourth time in as many legislative sessions that an ERA ratification bill has failed. It was a blow to ERA forces in the nation. Thirty-five states have ratified ERA but three more are needed to write it into the Constitution.

Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, ERA's floor leader, said the vote would have been 28-22 or 27-23 against, had the measure gone to the full Senate.

"I cannot see any good that would come from voting on this on the floor of the Senate," he said. "It grieves me more than anything I've ever done before in my life," he said, in requesting the bill be killed.

Other supporters said some of ERA's Senate foes would face strong opposition at the polls next year.

Portillo, Carter Part With Concluding Barb

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico's President Jose Lopez Portillo has had the last word again during his summit session here with visiting President Carter, declaring that too often his poor countrymen who go the United States "have to sell themselves."

Lopez Portillo, who surprised and irritated U.S. officials Wednesday when he in effect accused the United States of deceit and abuse, threw a fresh discordant note into the across-the-border summit early today.

Responding to a toast at a dinner given in his honor by the U.S. president, Lopez Portillo said:

"This, Mr. President, I believe, is the most serious matter of our times — the fact that there are men that can buy men and that there are men that have to sell themselves. And this is what happens very frequently with our poor people that go to the United States."

Carter and his associates had thought the summit talks were back on track after the shaky start Wednesday when Carter was given a correct but cool reception and was lectured by Lopez Portillo in the first toast of the summit during a luncheon given in Carter's honor.

A high White House official who asked not to be named said Thursday night that Lopez Portillo had indicated agreement when Carter, at an unannounced private 10-minute session earlier in the day, suggested that too

Tuition Boost Proposed For University System

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Students attending the 16 colleges in the University of North Carolina system will find it more expensive if a legislative subcommittee's recommendation becomes law.

A subcommittee of the joint House and Senate appropriations committees on education recommended a 10 percent tuition increase for in-state students and a 24 percent increase for out-of-state students.

Tuition amounts vary throughout the 16-campus system.

University officials are expected to ask members of the full appropriations committees to block the increases.

University officials also objected to a recommended cut in funds for the tuition-remission program for talented students. The subcommittee recommended that $1.5 million be cut from the $2.9 million allotted for that program for the next two years.

The money is used to pay graduate assistants as well as going to athletic departments at the UNC campuses.

The subcommittee also recommended that state aid to private colleges be increased $75 per undergraduate student each year of the two-year budget period, which begins July 1.

Currently, private colleges get a total of $600 per undergraduate student.

The subcommittee's recommendations on private college aid are the same as those of Gov. Jim Hunt and the Advisory Budget Commission.

There were these highlights in other legislative action Thursday:

Insurance Laws

Bills were filed in both the House and Senate to amend insurance laws. However, the proposed amendments do not include restoring prior-approval power over certain policy rates to Insurance Commissioner John Ingram.

Ingram was stripped of that power by the controversial 1977 insurance law and has fought to get it back. Industry lobbyists have fought to make certain Ingram doesn't get it.

The proposed legislation does include a change in the way automobile-insurance rate increases are filed. At present, the North Carolina Rate Bureau, an agency of the industry, files rate-increase proposals for all companies. But the bill would allow each insurance company to file its own rate increases. Sen. Carolyn Mathis, D-Mecklenburg, said the individual filing was proposed to increase price competition among insurance companies, in hope that competition might lower rates.

Tax Bills

The old $500 tax on gypsies will finally be taken off the books. The Senate gave final approval to bill calling for repeal of the tax Thursday. The House had already approved the bill, and it now becomes law.

The bill was one of several recommended by a legislative study committee that attempted to eliminate outdated revenue laws.

Arrests

A bill that would give arrest powers to theft investigators in the Division of Motor Vehicles was approved by the Senate and sent to the House. Under present law, DMV investigators must turn cases over to local authorities after identifying suspects.

Exhaust Systems

A bill that would require motor vehicles to be equipped with exhaust systems in good working order and free from gross defects has been sent to the Senate with a favorable report from a Senate judiciary committee.

The bill also holds that exhaust systems should include mufflers that prevent too much noise.

The sponsor, Sen. Charles Vickery, D-Orange, said the bill was intended as a safety measure. State health officials say 72 North Carolinians have died due to accidental carbon-monoxide poisoning in the last six years.

Bus Accidents

A resolution has been filed in the House calling for a study of the increased number of deaths in accidents involving school buses.

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, says the study is needed due to the nine deaths resulting from school bus-related accidents this school year. Only three such deaths occurred in the preceding three school years. The resolution calls for studies of the status of school bus drivers, condition of buses and bus equipment, traffic laws and a look for alternative means of transporting children to and from school.

'Get Tough' On Measles

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Principals at junior high schools in the Charlotte area have threatened to get tough on a worsening red-measles problem, even if it means suspending students who have not been immunized against the disease.

The educators have told parents with children in the Charlotte-Mecklenburg system that more than 2,000 students who aren't vaccinated for red measles that their children can't return to school until the parents talk with school officials about immunization.

If a parent doesn't respond within three days, principals say they will suspend the parent's child.

Officials say 27 cases of measles have been reported in Charlotte schools since Jan. 14, and prior attempts at immunizing students have not been completely successful.

Of 5,209 Charlotte junior high students initially without immunization records, 1,974 have taken shots at school. Another 1,357 have provided school officials with records or information verifying immunization.

But 2,135 students either have not been vaccinated or cannot prove they are immunized.

State health officials said the red-measles outbreak has spread from Charlotte to Iredell and Caldwell counties, which have reported one case each of the highly contagious disease.

LIFE SAVING FOOD — A helicopter, rented by the Colorado Division of Wildlife, drops bales of hay to five of nearly 1500 elk trapped by heavy snows in Gunnison County. The helicopter is able to fly in about 200 bales a day to herds in 24 different areas. Each group is fed every other day at a cost of $2,000 per day, including $1,200 for the helicopter rental. Court Cases Rescheduled

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Superior Court judge Thursday ordered that 249 Lincoln County court cases be rescheduled after state officials advised him charges may have been improperly dropped.

Most of the cases involved drunken driving and speeding and were all dismissed after magistrates or clerks found "no probable cause" to prosecute the criminal citations.

Superior Court Judge John R. Friday ordered Lincoln County magistrates and clerks not to dismiss any more cases until the Administrative Office of the Courts could clarify the court officers' powers in finding "no probable cause."

Friday said he issued the order after Bert M. Montague, director of the administrative office, told him that the practice of dismissing the cases after finding "no probable cause" might be improper.

Friday ordered the cases placed back on the prosecution docket "in an effort to be fair to the state and to the people involved."

Montague said magistrates and clerks have the power to find "no probable cause" when a police officer was seeking an arrest warrant, but said the authority is limited to that circumstance. Some of the dismissals occurred several days after police officers issued citations, Montague said.

Friday said the dismissals might have resulted from confusion over a memo from the administrative office in 1975.

The memorandum ordered magistrates to make a "no probable cause" designation on citations if that was their finding, Friday said. The memo was issued shortly after the effective date for a new set of criminal procedural laws.

Aloofness In Neighborliness

It has never seemed logical nor prudent (to us) that the United States' attitude toward its closest neighbors should remain so consistently aloof.

As a people we feel quite complacent with the undeniable fact that neither to the north nor to the south are there armed frontiers; but we do shy away from any close relationships or shared warmth.

It is almost as though there was an unspoken conspiracy to deter such a closeness. Our school children are aware Mexico has states and Canada has provinces; but numbers and names elude them as well as their parents.

The song "Getting To Know You" carries a lot of truths in its lyrics, but they are hardly a matter of public policy insofar as people are concerned in relating to other countries.

On the other hand, another school of thought is bound to be raised in contemplating our neighbors.

Could be, one big reason for the lack of border tension to the north and to the south is that very quality of aloofness. It does not necessarily follow that knowing Americans is to like them.

So maybe there is some "method" in what appears to be a madness.

Risks In Censorship Again Underlined

Ed Bradley, CBS television news correspondent, very properly expressed concern for the threat of censorship to our society, in a talk on the ECU campus this week.

He pointed out that if censorship existed the Bert Lance story and the secret bombing of Cambodia would not have been told.

We in the news field cannot emphasize too much the dangers of censorship to a free government... and it is a danger, not so much involving the official appointment of a government censor, but the subtle erosion of our access to information. We fear it is a process that is ongoing right now.

Burden Of State Jobs

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — "The total state budget from all sources is doubling every seven years."

With that blunt observation as the lead sentence, the General Assembly is now digging deeply into the proposed budget for North Carolina State Government for the coming two fiscal years.

But the legislators are reluctant in coming to grips with one simple bit of logic. What made the budget double? State government jobs is the simple answer.

In 1968, the state's budget was $1.3 billion. There were 112,245 persons on the state payroll that year, drawing down $704.6 million in salaries and fringe benefits. In 1978-79 the state's budget is $4.4 billion. There are 174,530 employees, drawing $2.2 billion.

The percentages: jobs up 62,285 for a 55.5 percent jump; salaries up more than $1.5 billion for a 221.9 percent increase.

Growth in state government is essential, say the state's leaders, to keep up with population growth. More people demand more service.

Difference
During this same 10-year period, the state's population grew from slightly more than five million to 5.6 million — only a 13.5 percent increase.

Another popular explanation given by officials is that public kindergartens and the elementary reading program required an influx of new personnel.

True. Public school employment increased nearly 30 percent in 10 years.

But that was far below the average of 55.5 percent, and a pittance compared to the super-accelerated growth in jobs in higher education.

The universities jumped from 5,000 educators to 26,950 for a 439 percent increase. Community Colleges went from 2,265 jobs to 7,915 for a 250 percent growth.

State Rep. John M. Jordan, D-Alamance, has been taking a close look at these figures, and concludes that what North Carolina needs is something akin to California's Proposition 13 — but pegged to state jobs rather than property taxes.

BILL NOBLITT

Jordan introduced a bill requiring that state jobs be pegged to the percentage rate of increase in statewide population over a 10-year period. The idea almost died in committee, but was resurrected in the form of a resolution rather than law. Thus, it would reflect the "sentiment" of the General Assembly, but without the force of law.

"The President has been saying we need to bring the bureaucracy under control. The Governor has been saying it. Everybody says it, but when you get around to doing it... nobody is willing to take that step," Jordan laments.

Say No
A strict limit on jobs would "give legislators and other state leaders the backbone to say No. We have strict limits on revenues, and we can tell people there is only so much to spend and they understand and appreciate this.

"Why not be able to tell them there are limits on state jobs... there are just so many, and no more?" Jordan wonders.

Taking the track record into future years, Jordan figures that by fiscal year 1984-85 there will be nearly 150,000 state jobs, and salaries will require more than $4 billion per year. Given that salaries represent about half the total state budget, then the requirements that year would total better than $8 billion.

Clamping the lid on, based on statewide population growth, would slow that trend; keep jobs at about 115,000 and salaries at just over $3 billion for a savings of nearly a billion dollars, Jordan believes.

It is still questionable whether the simple resolution will be approved by the General Assembly.

The Friendship Society

WASHINGTON — I had a visit from Bellicose the other day and he asked me to become a sponsor of the Mexican-American Friendship Society.

"Why?" I wanted to know.

"Don't you read the newspapers?" he said. "Mexico is swimming in oil and bubbling with gas. They could have more fuel underground than Saudi Arabia. We've been ignoring the Mexicans for years, and we have to make it up to them fast or they may sell the stuff to somebody else."

"That's a good point," I said. "Any country that has that much oil has to be treated with respect. What can we do?"

"Remember the Alamo?" "Yes."

"Well, forget it."

"That's a step in the right direction," I admitted. "I never really believed the Alamo was that important to Texas in the first place. How much oil did you say Mexico had?"

"Nobody knows. But every time you put a stick into the ground oil starts shooting 300 feet into the air."

"I've always liked the Mexican people," I said. "I never mentioned it before but I even admired Pancho Villa."

"He was the greatest," Bellicose said. "One of the goals of the Mexican-American Friendship Society is to declare Pancho Villa's birthday a national American holiday."

"That's a great idea," I said. "We could burn Gen. Pershing in effigy for hunting down Pancho."

"We don't want to go too far," Bellicose said. "When Pershing went after Pancho Villa he didn't know that Mexico was sitting on all that oil."

"I've always liked the Mexican people," I said. "I never mentioned it before but I even admired Pancho Villa."

"He was the greatest," Bellicose said. "One of the goals of the Mexican-American Friendship Society is to declare Pancho Villa's

"He should have known it," I said indignantly. "What kind of military intelligence did he have? What else can the society do?"

"We have to get Americans to stop referring to Mexicans as 'illegal aliens' just because they cross the border without proper papers."

"What should we call them?"

"Spanish-speaking tourists who have lost their way."

"I like that. I imagine we also have to forget the term 'wetbacks'."

"You better believe it," Bellicose said.

"What should we call the wetbacks?"

"Olympic swimmers who are practicing the breast stroke in the Rio Grande River."

"The Mexicans will appreciate that."

"And we want to outlaw all jokes about 'Montezuma's revenge.'"

"What can we call that?"

Sugar Price Hike?

By BRIAN B. KING, Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The price of a 5-pound bag of sugar, forced up almost 17 cents in 13 months by government action, could rise 5.5 cents more by early next year under legislation before the House.

By raising both domestic and imported raw sugar prices, the bill would hike the retail cost of soft drinks, canned goods and bakery products as well.

But the two House committee chairmen who introduced the legislation Thursday say many sugar-beet and cane farmers and processors, unable to make ends meet, will go out of business unless they find some relief.

To the editor:

As a child, I went to school in our Nation's Capitol. The dear lady who taught my fifth-grade American history class no doubt filled our heads with much of what I would now consider gobbledeygook about the country's beginnings. But in some areas she really hit the mark. She had a way of teaching us not only what to remember, but how and why. I recall her saying, "Now, children, remember this: whenever someone asks you, 'What was the first State ever to... whether it is to draft resolves condemning the tyranny of the British Crown, or to boycott taxed tea, you may be fairly certain that the correct answer is either Massachusetts, Pennsylvania... or North Carolina."

When I later found myself in North Carolina, I immediately recognized it as a place where American could live as Americans should — with good, clean air and room to breathe it, surrounded (but not too closely) by people who cling fiercely to the principles of individual freedom. I took North Carolina right to heart, much as an orphaned child might "choose" his new parents.

My belief in this State as a seat of true democracy has been challenged, but never broken. Those who govern the State in my name and in the names of my friends, neighbors and family can dash my belief and make that teacher of so many years ago look like a fool. They can convince me that North Carolina has forsaken its role as a bellwether for the Nation, surrendered its position at the front, willing to follow anyone who can shout loud enough and spread the most outrageous lies and distortions with a sweet-smelling veneer of plausibility. They can shatter that belief by refusing to ratify the 27th Amendment to the U. S. Constitution.

Or they can reaffirm the principles on which this State and Nation are built, by voting to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment, because — like so many other great things North Carolina has done — it is the right and good thing to do.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Andy Young Of Israel

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — While Iran severs its intimate Western ties for a Moslem-style republic, one of Israel's more charismatic leaders is talking tougher than ever about his country's long-range plans to bring the Palestinian West Bank under permanent Israeli control.

Gen. Ariel Sharon, who was put in charge of the torrid Jewish settlements issue by Prime Minister Menahem Begin, is publicly plotting a future for more than one million West Bank Palestinians — most of them Moslems — that could drastically lengthen the odds against success of President Carter's newest Jerusalem-Cairo mediation effort. That effort starts next week when Israeli and Egyptian foreign ministers meet in a renewal of Camp David, but under conditions alarmingly pessimistic compared to the outcome of Carter's Camp David summit last fall. What disturbs top officials is that Sharon risks stirring up dormant religious passions on the West Bank and in East Jerusalem, one of Islam's holiest places, at a time when Moslem fundamentalism showed sufficient strength to fire up the Iranian revolution and now threatens sectarian reactions elsewhere. "The Israeli claim to legal rights in Samaria and Judea (the West Bank) is purely biblical," one American official told us. "The Moslem claim to East or Old Jerusalem also has a religious derivation. Any fool can see the lethal potential in the aftermath of Iran."

Such caveats have not quieted Sharon. The public airing of Sharon's latest West Bank plans came in late January when he conjured up a "metropolitan Jerusalem (that), with its surrounding towns, will have a population of one million Jews." State Department statisticians put Jerusalem's total population today at 300,000, with Arab Palestinians outnumbering Jews two-to-one.

Sharon's call for a Jerusalem with one million Jewish inhabitants is not part of Begin's public plans, and probably not his secret plans either. Indeed, Sharon's glowing aspirations for Israel's future holdings on the West Bank may be tinged with the same kind of fancy that has made Ambassador Andrew Young, the chief U.S. delegate to the United Nations, the most controversial official in the Carter administration.

"Sharon is Begin's Andy Young," one extremely well-placed authority told us. "He speaks with Young's conviction about the way things ought to be, but in his heart he must know they never will be that way."

That may be wishful thinking. Sharon, a true hero in the October 1973 Israeli-Egyptian war, is a convinced territorialist at a time when Israeli hawks are on the increase. What some critics term his territorial romanticism could become tomorrow's political realism, a fact that may have influenced Begin himself in giving Sharon so much freedom for public announcement of future plans.

The plans Sharon announced in his Jan. 26 interview with Ma'ariv, one of Israel's foremost journals, are breathtaking in their scope and sweep. Casting aside much of Begin's promise of self-rule or local autonomy to the Palestinians, Sharon said the process of Israel's control and absorption of vast West Bank lands "will take many years." But he wants the decision to do so to be made publicly right now, before any peace agreement is signed with Egypt.

Strength For Today

THE WHITE LINE

Driving on an open highway in broad daylight is not difficult. We can see the road stretching ahead of us and we have landmarks on both sides to indicate how far we have gone. But driving on a dark and foggy night is a quite different matter. Then the only thing we have to guide us is the white line in the center of the road. As long as we can see this, we can stay on the road and get to where we want to go.

There should be something in everyone's life which corresponds to this white line. The Ten Commandments are one manifestation of it. So is a sensitive moral conscience. A loving family life and religious instruction also constitute a white line, as do education and firm friendships with worthy people.

When the night is stormy, when we are not sure where the road is leading, each and all of these elements of our life will act as a white line keeping us on the road and away from disaster.

Dinner Table A Battlefield

BY GAIL MICHAELS

Meal time has become a nightmare at our house. Meg eats nothing voluntarily. The minute I say, "Come to dinner," she says, "I don't like it." This response is so automatic that the meal could consist of M & Ms and ice cream, and she'd still turn it down.

When she first began to fast, Phillip and I tried a little psychology. "Oh, that's all right," Phillip would say. "This food is only for big people."

We tried that approach for a week. And in a way, it worked. By the end of the week, anytime she was offered something, she shook her head, and said, "No, I'm sorry. I can't eat that, I'm just too little."

That was when Phillip decided that stronger action must be taken. He wanted her to eat at least one bite of everything. Now I was dead set against this. I remembered only too vividly sitting at a table for hours staring at cold macaroni and cheese. Besides, Meg is in her age group's 75th percentile in height and weight, and she's got legs like Joe Namath. So I found it hard to believe that she was in any immediate danger of drying up and fading away.

Unfortunately, Phillip prevailed, and our table became a battleground. Every night Meg would cry, Phillip would shout, and I would feed an ulcer. For the first time in my life the thought of doing dishes became attractive. In fact, I got so enthusiastic about it that I started getting up right after the blessing.

After several months of this I just couldn't take it any longer. I pulled Phillip aside one evening before supper and said, "You have got to soften your approach. I will not look on in silence anymore while my daughter's mouth is pried open as if she were an entry in a cattle show."

"I know, I know. I just don't know what else to do with her," he sighed. "She cannot live off potato chips, cheese burgers, and peanut butter for the rest of her life."

"Well, try something," I said. "I hear aspirin is bad for ulcers."

Come to find out, we weren't the only ones grappling with this problem. That night, Meg didn't scream, kick, or snarl as she was being helped into her booster seat. On the contrary, she smiled sweetly and said, "What's for dinner, Mommy?"

"Vegetable soup." "Yum, yum, yum. I love vegetable soup." My jaw went slack. Was this the same old child whose bottom teeth had sprayed silk screen designs all over my yellow tablecloth at the last soup supper?"

"This is so good, Mommy. Thank-you for fixing it for me." Phillip was as amazed as I. We were even afraid to look at her for fear we would break the spell. I have never heard such smacking and slurping, but we just tried to pretend that we noticed nothing different.

When I had finished, I got up to wash the dishes, and Phillip followed me. Pretty soon, Meg popped in, too. "That was delicious, Mommy. May I go play now?"

"Certainly, sweetheart," I cooed.

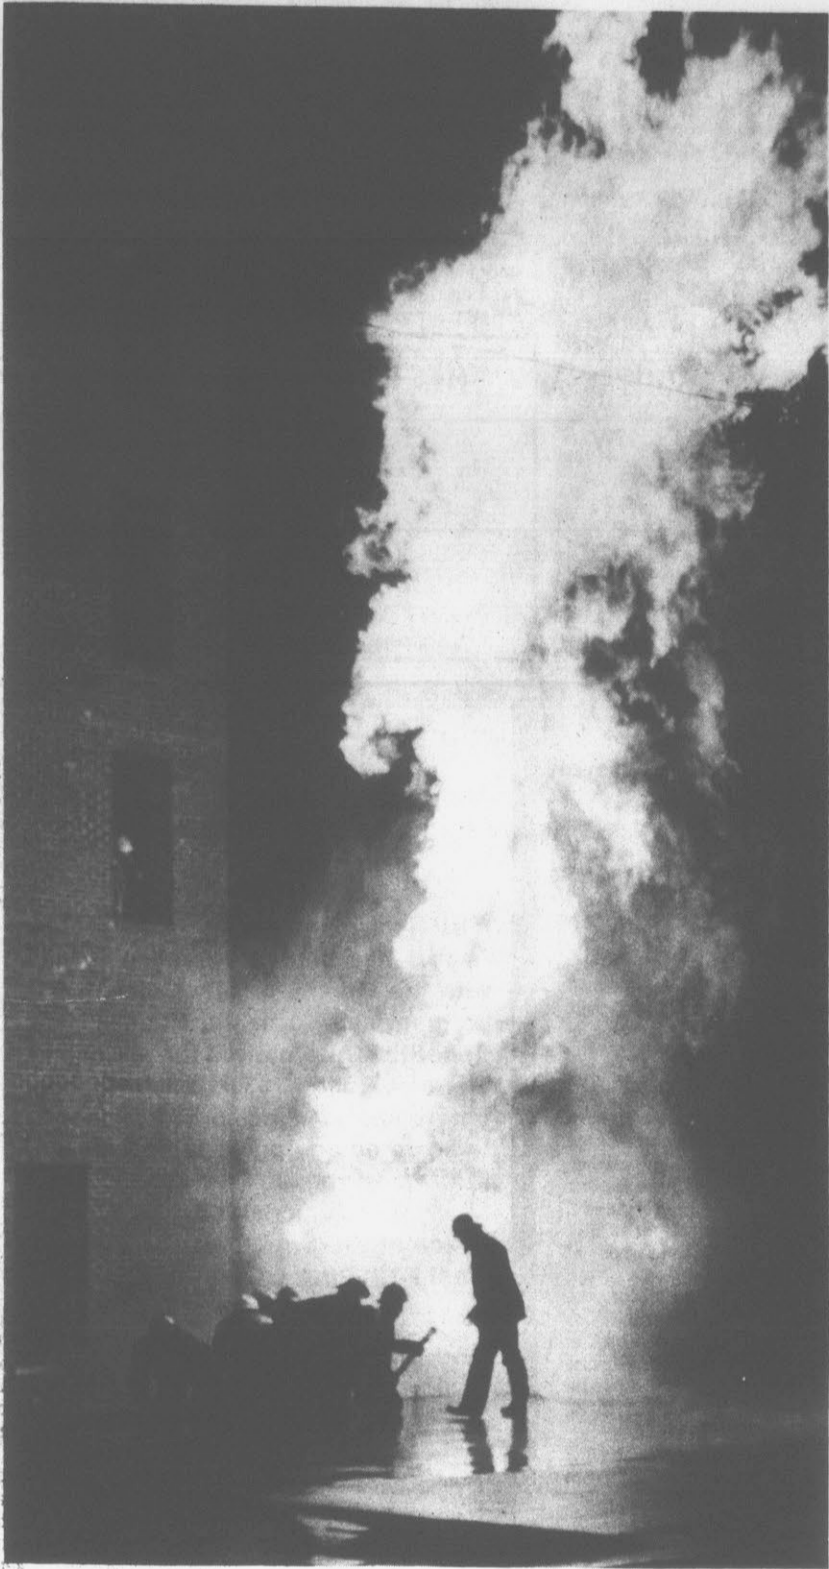

"I can't believe it," Phillip said as we walked into the dining room to get her bowl. "I absolutely can't believe it." But the light began to dawn as we both stared at her bowl. It was completely full.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Cold to very cold weather is expected for most of the country in the forecast period until Saturday. Mild temperatures are expected for southern Georgia and Florida. Rain is forecast for east Texas. Snow is due from Oklahoma to the northern Plains. Snow flurries are predicted for the northern Rockies. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press
Thursday's touch of springtime was to disappear late today with a new system bringing cold temperatures and strong winds into North Carolina.

Most of the state was expecting temperatures in the 60s and even some low 70s before the cold front began moving through North Carolina from the west. Lows tonight should drop into the teens in most areas.

The front's strong winds pushed away the morning's cloudy skies, and the winds were expected to make the cold temperatures seem even colder.

Temperatures in the mountains fell most of the day from a morning high of around 50 degrees. East of the mountains, temperatures were expected to begin falling by late afternoon.

Some scattered showers could accompany the front, but skies will be clear tonight and through the weekend. The precipitation was expected to be in the form of snow flurries in the northwest mountains.

Warm, springlike air was reported in most of the state Thursday. Highs were mostly in the mid 60s to the low 70s, with Cherry Point and Jacksonville reporting readings of 73 degrees. The northeast was relatively cool, however, with Elizabeth City reporting a high of only 48 degrees.

Overnight, a front in southern Virginia brought cooler air to the northern half of the state. Skies were cloudy most of the night.

No precipitation has been reported in the state over the last 24 hours.

Saturday will be sunny but quite cold. Highs Saturday will be in the 30s.

Windy conditions were expected to prompt a small craft warning along the entire coast late today.

Returns With His 3rd Heart

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Dr. Jerry Young, the only person in history to have three heart transplants, came home on Valentine's Day, with a heart pinned to his sweater and his sense of humor intact.

After greeting his family, Young opened his jacket to expose a 3-inch heart bearing the words: "My heart beats for you."

Young turned a crank on the back of the heart and it began to buzz and jump. "That's exactly how I feel," he said, laughing.

Young, a 43-year-old Cherry Hill, N.J., podiatrist, underwent his first heart transplant at Stanford University in May 1976, seven months after suffering a massive heart attack.

His body began to reject the heart in the summer of 1977 and his health declined.

Last September, he returned to Stanford and underwent a second heart transplant Oct. 3. The heart never pumped properly, however, and surgeons were forced to remove it and put in another heart Oct. 6.

Despite problems with rejection, pneumonia and depression caused by prescription drugs, Young grew stronger. On Jan. 10 he moved into an apartment a mile from the medical center.

Young pedaled a rented bicycle to the center twice a week for a checkup. His examinations showed continued improvement, and doctors gave him the go-ahead to return home after his 17th heart biopsy showed no sign of rejection.

So 131 days after his history-making operation, Young's plane arrived at the Philadelphia International Airport. His wife, Naomi, and three children — Hilary, 9; Erica, 13, and Seth, 20 — waited with a heart of their own, a three-foot, homemade valentine that said: "Welcome home, happy heart transplant, Feb. 14."

Young's plane was slightly delayed, and as the family waited, his son spoke of his feelings.

"I knew this day would come," said Seth. "I've been a realist all along. I knew it was life or death, win or lose, and that there was nothing in between. But I knew he'd make it. There never was a time — except maybe right in the beginning, after the heart attack — when I didn't feel he'd make it."

"We're so close to the end of it," said Mrs. Young. "I can't believe it's happening. Right up until the end I thought they'd find a sign of rejection and he wouldn't be able to come home."

But it was over and Young's plane did arrive.

"Oh God, I'm home," Young cried as he embraced his family. "It's so good to be home."

Bank, "and not just settlements," he said. He promises "roads and highways to ensure territorial continuity between (new) cities and settlements. And not just roads but an extensive infrastructure with army camps, firing ranges, fire areas for training."

The land for this Israeli takeover of large portions of the West Bank must be seized "without any delay." Asked if such seizure of lands might not weaken the chances of Egypt signing a peace agreement with Israel, and of Jordan and the Palestinians negotiating self-rule, Sharon said it would not. "Seizure of lands does not increase friction with the Arab population," he told Ma'ariv. "It will prevent such friction in the future."

That view of Arab reactions to the loss of their historic lands reminded some authorities here of Andy Young's view of Fidel Castro's Cuban troops in Angola as a "stabilizing" force. Neither view is in accord with political facts. Accordingly, some officials doubt Sharon's ability to talk Begin's government into anything like so ambitious a development plan for the West Bank.

Instead, the few settlements Sharon has been able to get through Begin's cabinet could turn out to be more like Potemkin villages than the beginnings of serious future towns. That is the rosy view of Sharon's public declamations. If it is wrong, the religious fanaticism unleashed in Iran could spread to Moslem Jerusalem and the West Bank, introducing a lethal element not yet felt in that tortured land.

Rep. Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., chairman of the Agriculture Committee, and Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., chairman of the Ways and Means Committee.

Ullman's panel shares jurisdiction over the sugar program with the Agriculture Committee because domestic crop prices are set by the duties imposed on foreign shipments, which account for about 45 percent of U.S. consumption.

The Carter administration will soon offer legislation that top-level sources, who asked for anonymity, say is "very close" to the Foley-Ullman bill.

By increasing import duties a quarter-cent per pound, the legislation would let American farmers raise their prices a like amount for the 1978 crop.

Wholesale sugar, whether foreign or domestic, would then cost 15.25 cents per pound — up from the current 15 cents.

The legislation would increase the farmers' guaranteed price to 16.1 cents for the 1979 crop, meaning a 1.1 cent increase per pound that likely would be passed on to consumers.

Wholesale prices could rise up to 7 percent more a year through 1982 to account for higher production costs. U.S. growers would also be given a direct subsidy of up to a halfcent a pound.

If imported sugar, relatively cheap now because of excess supplies, were allowed to enter the country duty-free, domestic prices would be forced down 8 to 9 cents a pound.

The price at which foreign sugar is sold in this country has for decades set domestic prices.

Congress in October killed a bill hiking duties enough that the 1978 sugar price would be 15 cents a pound. But President Carter used discretionary power given him under tariff legislation to do the same thing.

Opponents of the presidential action said it resulted in a price increase of about 1.5 cents for a 5-pound bag.

Legislation passed by Congress in 1977 set a 13.5-cent per pound price for that year and a 14.7-cent price for 1978. Within three months of the action, which hiked the guarantee from a prevailing price of about 10 cents per pound, the retail price of a 5-pound bag rose 15 cents.

Portillo-Carter....

strident Mexican references to disagreements between the nations could be counterproductive.

Carter's session with Lopez Portillo was followed by reports of summit progress and the scheduling of a breakfast meeting between the two leaders — actions seen as indications that the Carter visit was going well.

Then came Lopez Portillo's emotional toast, during which he told Carter, "I am deeply moved, and I shall try to be more stable."

The Mexican chief executive went on, however, to ask rhetorically, "What is happening to the free world? ...Is it possible for the human being to be free and at the same time to be just, is it possible to conceive of an international order that can avoid the state of affairs in which a man would sell himself and another would buy another human being?"

But Lopez Portillo's also said, "Our friendship has made it possible to be frank."

U.S. sources, reporting on Thursday's talks, said progress was made on energy issues. But no progress was reported on at least one major issue, illegal immigration.

Lopez Portillo's second dose of strong criticism overshadowed what Carter hoped would be the climactic event of his three-day visit, an address in Spanish today to Mexico's Chamber of Deputies.

Carter declared in the address that he and his host "have begun to define a common vision of a better future."

In an upbeat assessment of his talks with Lopez Portillo, Carter acknowledged that many key issues on which the two countries disagree will only be resolved with "patient work over a long period of time."

But he expressed confidence that his conversations here will speed progress "toward fuller cooperation, understanding and mutual respect."

Carter made these statements in his text for a formal address to Mexico's Chamber of Deputies.

Reaching out to his audience, he began by saying: "As president of the fourth largest Spanish-speaking nation, I speak to you — as best I can — in the language of Mexico, the largest Spanish-speaking nation on Earth."

In the Chamber of Deputies speech, Carter did not attempt to hide differences between the countries.

"Our friendship has at times been marred by mistakes and even by abuses of power," he said. "Our perceptions of each other have sometimes been distorted."

But he predicted greater progress toward mutual respect and understanding "if the relations between us are the product of an honest dialogue such as President Lopez Portillo and I have had during the last few days."

Although progress on several fronts was reported during their talks, Carter acknowledged no solutions had been found in three major areas. He said:

"Difficult problems remain — especially in the areas of trade, energy and migration. Each of these issues defies easy solution. Now and for years to come, each will require our best efforts to narrow our differences and to find common ground."

Khomeini attended the trial.

The newspaper Ettelaat said 26 other officials and military officers of the shah's regime had been convicted of crimes and would be executed. It gave no further details, and Khomeini spokesmen declined comment.

The executions by a 10-man firing squad were announced by state radio accompanied by martial music.

The state radio said the generals were convicted on charges of "torture, massacre of people, treason to the country and earthly corruption. They were sentenced to death and the verdict was immediately carried out by Islamic armed forces." It also said their property had been confiscated.

The generals were Nematollah Nassiri, chief of SAVAK, the shah's dreaded secret police and one of the most hated men in the country; Manuchehr Khosrowdad, head of the elite paratroopers; Mehdi Rahimi, martial law governor of Tehran, and Reza Naji, governor-general of the central city of Isfahan.

Each was riddled by at least eight bullets. The bodies were transferred from Khomeini's headquarters to Tehran's central morgue.

Nassiri appeared on state television Monday night with his face bruised and bandaged.

He had difficulty speaking because a mob pummeled his throat when it seized him Sunday at a ransacked army barracks.

The TV interviewer asked Nassiri if he ever expected to be tried by revolutionaries, and the general replied: "In this world anything is possible."

Nassiri had been held in a stockade since November awaiting trial on charges of corruption and of torturing and killing prisoners of SAVAK. The charges were preferred by the old regime while the shah was still in the country.

Radio Tehran also announced that Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan and his Cabinet unanimously approved a decree confiscating all properties of the royal family in Iran, including palaces, lands, and stock in banks, factories and businesses.

Jews See Menacing Prospects

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The horizon seems particularly clouded these days for Jews in two strife-torn countries — the taunted Jewish residents of Iran and the "black Jews" of Ethiopia.

Their situation, in the midst of upheavals in heavily Moslem lands, is bleak. It was reported at a special "Sabbath of Solidarity and Concern for Endangered Jews."

It was sponsored by the Manhattan's historic Congregation B'nei Jeshurun, with a panel of experts detailing firsthand accounts of rising pressures against Jews in the Moslem areas.

The purpose was to "highlight their condition and awaken us to take the first steps for their rescue and relief," says Rabbi William Berkowitz, leader of the 153-year-old synagogue.

The black Jews of Ethiopia, long an object of fascination and the only Jews of their color to be recognized as authentic by official branches of Judaism, are called "Falashas" by other Ethiopians. The term is derogative, meaning "strangers" or "dwellers in exile."

They call themselves "Beta Israel," the House of Israel, and according to ancient legend, trace their origins back about 3,000 years as lineal descendants of King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba.

While they used to number nearly half a million, less than 28,000 reportedly remain, isolated in villages in Ethiopia's highlands, their ranks thinned recently by raids and being victimized as slaves.

As a result of the 1974 revolution, overthrowing the late Christian Emperor Haile Selassie, and continuing civil war, "the Falashas have been caught in the ideological cross fire" from left and right, says Rabbi Marc H. Tanenbaum, interreligious affairs director of the American Jewish Committee.

It has resulted in "hundreds of black Jews being massacred or driven from their lands, their wives and daughters raped or sold into slavery in the Sudan," he says.

"Their poverty is beyond imagining... They have no hospitals or physicians. They suffer from disease and malnutrition and their present life expectancy is 36 years. Despite their tragic, even abominable conditions, they have remained faithful Jews.

Most Western church workers have left. About 300 Falashas have managed recently to find their way to Israel, the "promised land" of their prayers.

But for most of them, their "prayers have not yet been responded to either by God or by man," says Tanenbaum. "The Falashas are today the most forgotten Jews in the world."

But an even larger Jewish community, the 80,000 of riot-torn, predominantly Moslem Iran, have come under sharp-edged uncertainties with the government-toppling revolution of the Moslem religious leader, Ayatollah Khomeini.

An estimated 5,000 of them have fled the country. Reports received by U.S. Jewish officials say there has been a rising clamor of anti-Jewish threats and personal slurs, with the term "Zionist" used as a synonym for "Jew."

Concerned Over 'Electronic' Church Appeal

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — A United Methodist official has expressed concern that a future "electronic church" is developing that "pulls people away from local churches and face-to-face encounter."

The Rev. Dr. Curtis A. Chambers, head of denominational communications, referred to the growing number of independent radio and television programs and stations in a letter to the Dayton Daily News.

He said he fears "the substitution of an undemanding kind of commitment to the church and its mission with no person-to-person involvement," which always has characterized historic Christianity.

He said that some good is done by the independent religious broadcasters, "but the local church — the community of believers — is an essential part of our Christian faith and life, and the electronic church can never substitute for personal encounter and the resultant influence in society which is best nurtured in that involvement."

REACHING TOWARD GOD

People keep teaching their children to say their prayers at bedtime; but how many do it themselves?

Maybe sometimes they pray in the darkness, silently, so that no one will know. But why the secrecy? Because prayer is a very deep, personal kind of expression? Because we reveal ourselves through it?

The truth is that more of us sense the reaching of our souls toward God than have yet openly admitted our religious need.

Why wait? In church you can pray alone or with others... in darkness or in light. But always in peace... reaching toward God.

Waiting For Kidney Transplant

By NAOMI KAUFMAN
Associated Press Writer
About 350 persons in North Carolina are waiting for kidney transplants.

And those who run the transplant programs say most of the 350 will have to wait for months, even years. The state needs twice as many donors as it finds, to meet the demands for kidney transplants.

"If you look at the number of deaths and the number (of people) needing kidneys, there is not an absolute shortage of transplantable kidneys," said Dr. Delford L. Stickel, a professor of surgery and director of the transplant program at Duke Medical Center.

Stickel says the kidney-donor problem comes from what he calls "a lack of public knowledge, awareness and understanding of what's involved."

Kidney donors come in two classes — a living family member or someone who dies with useable kidneys that can be donated.

Stickel says the latter group accounts for 80 percent of the donations, but also accounts for the largest problem area. That is because few people make preparations to donate organs. Stickel says a donor must have either signed a Uniform Donor Card in advance or the next-of-kin must give permission for the kidney to be donated. Not enough persons do either, Stickel said.

Stickel performed the first kidney transplant in the state in 1964. The patient is still living. Last year, Stickel and other doctors performed about 50 transplants at Duke and at Durham's Veterans Administration Hospital.

There are now at least 50 persons still waiting for transplants at both hospitals. Joann Brickell of Charlotte knows how it feels to wait.

Mrs. Brickell had kidney disease for nine years. In the summer of 1975, her kidneys failed and she went on dialysis while waiting for a kidney donation. She said no one in her family was able to provide a kidney, so she had to wait for a suitable kidney from a death.

"Every time your phone rings you get a surge of hope," Mrs. Brickell said. "We were depending on a cadaver donor."

Finally in November 1975, a kidney was donated, and Mrs. Brickell said it has worked well since it was implanted at Charlotte Memorial Hospital, one of the state's four transplant centers.

Of the donor's family, she said, "They are very special, thoughtful people to me."

Mike Phillips, a physician's assistant at Duke, arranged the donation. Phillips is the coordinator of the procurement program at Duke, the veterans hospital and N.C. Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill.

North Carolina kidneys don't necessarily remain in the state. They go anywhere there is a recipient whose tissues show a compatible match. One kidney donated in North Carolina went to Copenhagen, and kidneys have come to Duke from as far away from Texas and Minnesota.

Phillips travels to community hospitals around eastern and central North Carolina to get kidneys. He said community hospitals play a major role in ensuring that enough kidneys are available.

When he gets a call that a person is near death and that the patient or the family has agreed to donate the kidneys, Phillips goes to the hospital and assists local surgeons in removing the kidneys after the patient has died.

Packed on ice, the kidneys are taken back to Duke, where they are hooked up to a special machine that pumps a cold liquid through them.

But kidneys are not carburators. Phillips and the surgeons at Duke and the other centers cannot merely take the first name on the waiting list. The blood type and other factors in the donated kidney must be matched to those of the recipients. After the tissue type is determined, a computer matches up the donor and recipient.

Most of the donated kidneys come from persons who have had accidents and whose hearts kept on beating after their brains have died. Under North Carolina law, a person is considered dead once the brain dies.

Neither the donor nor the recipient is charged for the cost of the kidney donation, although the patient is charged for having a kidney implanted. Even so, said Phillips, the cost of implanting a kidney is far less than the yearly cost of cleansing a person's blood artificially by dialysis.

The state is also active in the procurement effort. To date, said Ray Schackelford of the Human Tissue Donor Program, the state has distributed more than 3 million donor cards with state drivers-license renewal forms.

Those running the program work with local doctors to encourage them to call the transplant center nearest them when they have a possible donor. In addition to the centers in Durham, Chapel Hill and Charlotte, Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem has a transplant program. Nineteen transplants were performed there last year, 15 of them using kidneys from persons who had died.

HEW Tour Is Revised

WASHINGTON (AP) — Department of Health, Education and Welfare officials have changed their itinerary for an inspection tour next week aimed at looking into the continuing controversy over alleged racial segregation at the University of North Carolina's 16 campuses.

The tour will cover eight campuses. Mary Berry, HEW assistant secretary for education, and David S. Tatel, director of the HEW's Office for Civil Rights, will visit the state. They will be accompanied by Albert T. Hamlin, HEW counsel for the civil-rights office, and Colleen O'Connor, public-affairs director for the civil-rights office.

HEW spokesmen said the officials want "to see first-hand what the situation is" in the controversy over desegregation within the UNC system.

HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano said last week that the latest desegregation plan submitted to by UNC is unacceptable.

A court order gives both sides until March 14 to reach agreement on a desegregation plan. If the issue is not resolved, HEW might begin withholding all or portions of the $89 million the UNC gets from the federal government each year.

The group is scheduled to visit Fayetteville State University and Winston-Salem State University Monday, the University of North Carolina at Greensboro and A&T State University in Greensboro Tuesday, North Carolina State University and North Carolina Central University in Raleigh Wednesday and Elizabeth City State University Thursday.

Also on the agenda is a meeting with the N.C. Alumni Coalition in Raleigh Tuesday and an 8:30 a.m. meeting Thursday with UNC President William C. Friday.

HOW TO DO A LITTLE BUSINESS ON YOUR OWN...

Holding a garage sale is a fun way to do a little business on your own... but it takes a bit of planning.

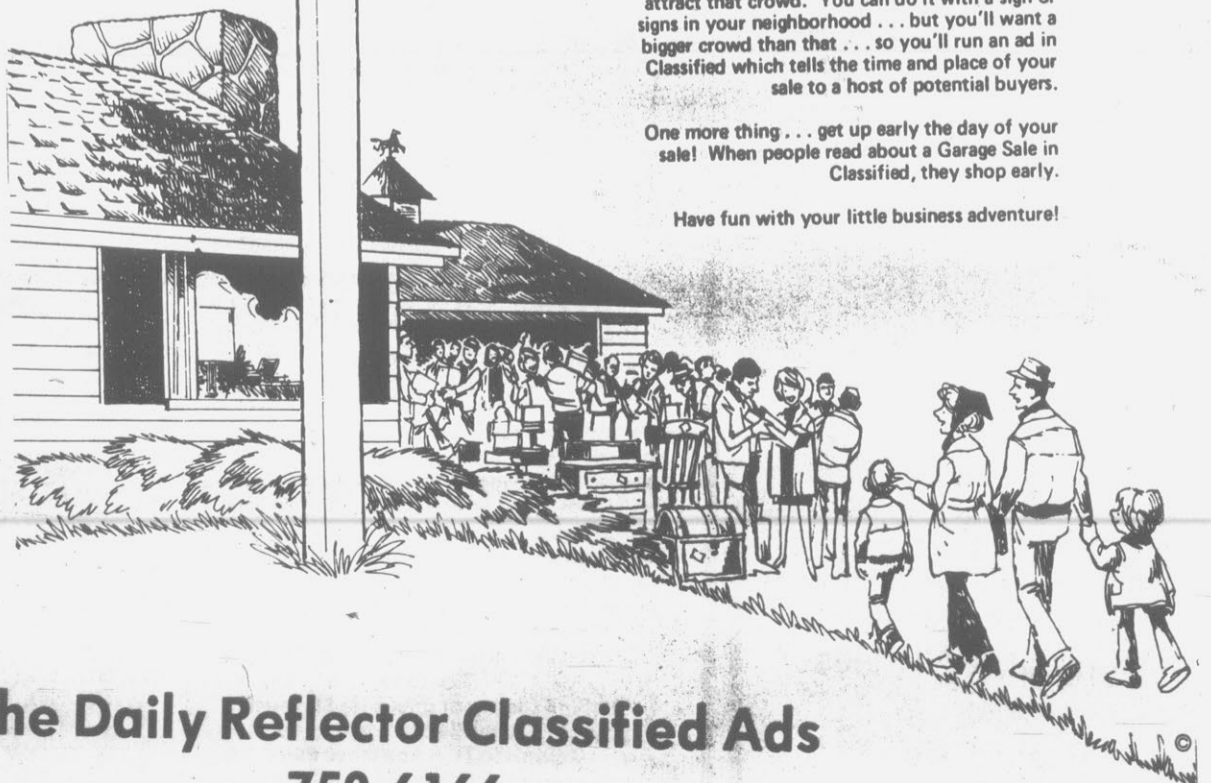

Like you'll want to decide what to sell and how much to charge for each item... and then you'll need price tags so other people will know what you're charging.

And you'll have to be able to make change for all your customers... so that means you should have lots of one dollar bills and an assortment of coins.

Then you'll want to advertise your sale to attract that crowd. You can do it with a sign or signs in your neighborhood... but you'll want a bigger crowd than that... so you'll run an ad in Classified which tells the time and place of your sale to a host of potential buyers.

One more thing... get up early the day of your sale! When people read about a Garage Sale in Classified, they shop early.

Have fun with your little business adventure!

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was little changed in slow pre-holiday trading today, stuck in neutral for the third straight session. Gainers slightly outnumbered losers in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off 1.21 at 827.88 at noon. The Dow average would have been unchanged from Thursday's close had it not been for ex-dividends, or dividend-payment adjustments, involving three of its component stocks.

Analysts had generally expected a quiet day with a long Washington's Birthday weekend approaching. Weekly statistics issued by the Federal Reserve late Thursday showed a jump in the money supply for the latest reporting week. But brokers noted that one week's figures weren't enough to demonstrate any change in the basic trend of slow monetary growth in recent months.

McGraw-Hill rose 1/4 to 28 3/4 on word that a committee of stockholders had been formed, apparently to survey other shareholders about their views on the company's rejection of a $40-a-share offer from American Express.

The NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks edged up .01 to 55.39. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose .14 to 162.72.

Volume on the Big Board came to 9.01 million shares at noon, against 9.42 million at the same point Thursday.

Teacher Bill Is Advanced

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A proposal to increase the pay for substitute school teachers from $20 to $30 a day cleared another legislative hurdle today and was sent to the full Senate.

The Senate Ways and Means Committee approved the bill which, if approved, would immediately raise the pay for substitute teachers in the public schools. The bill had previously been approved by the Senate Rules Committee.

An amendment added by the committee, however, will make the higher pay scale apply only to substitute teachers who hold a regular teaching certificate. Others will be paid at the existing rate.

As introduced, the bill would have applied only in areas where substitutes cannot be obtained for $20 a day. But the committee made another change in the bill so that it will apply equally across the state.

The Charlotte-Mecklenburg school system sought the increase because it had been unable to obtain enough substitute teachers with the lower pay rate, Sen. Carolyn Mathis, D-Mecklenburg said.

The measure is aimed at raising the pay between now and the end of the current fiscal year, June 30. The higher figure is included in next year's proposed budget also.

Budget analysts said the cost of applying the higher rate across the state would be $1 million. Money is to come from other education appropriations, but assistant state budget officer Marvin Dorman said there may not be a large enough surplus to continue the $30 pay for the rest of this school year.

Under the bill, the higher pay would continue as long as the money holds out.

Mocs Nip Pirates In Overtime, 78-77

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

James Jones came off the bench to score 20 second half points and lead the University of Tennessee-Chattanooga to a 78-77 overtime victory over East Carolina University last night.

Jones, along with Norm Anchrum, paced a comeback from as much as 11 points down by the Moccasins, but even then, it took some of the worst play of the year by the Pirates to allow them to pull it out.

"We didn't handle ourselves with poise tonight," a very disappointed Larry Gillman said afterwards. "We blew chances at the free throw line, we lost our aggressiveness on the boards, and we had mental lapses—quite a few of them. We just didn't have the intensity we needed in the second half to win it."

The Pirates did have the chance to win it, however, with 0:00 showing on the clock. Down 71-70, Oliver Mack went to the line with a two-shot foul, giving the Pirates a chance to pull it out at regulation time. But his first missed, leaving only the chance for an overtime. He sank the second, tying the game at 71-71.

"I didn't think Mack would miss one of those shots," UT-C coach Ron Shumate said. "He's a great player, and it's unusual for someone of his caliber to miss. But I have to give him a lot of credit. He had a whole lot more pressure on him to sink the second one than the first. It showed what a great player he really is."

Gillman echoed Shumate's sentiments. "I can't think of anyone else I'd rather have at the line in the same situation. He made a lot of crucial baskets for us down the stretch."

But overall, it was a poor performance. Gillman noted that the first Chattanooga game was the worst the Pirates played since their horrible Florida trip. "And the second half was the worst we've played since then," he added.

The Pirates were guilty of 20 turnovers in the game, eight of them by the usually steady George Maynor. Herb Krusen, usually a deadeye shooter, was off his pace, hitting just seven of 19 shots. Greg Cornelius twice went to the line late in the game with key free throws, and failed to connect on three tries. Mack hit just seven of 17 shots from the floor. Three times on breakaway fast breaks the Pirates went for poor shots instead of passing off to players with better position. Al Tyson took a 20-footer once; Cornelius tried for a stuff and another time, attempted to drive through a defender, when each time another player was open and clear for a layup.

It was play like this that killed the Pirate chances.

But at the same time, the Pirates also had great play. Cornelius pulled off a season-high 16 rebounds and led the team in scoring with 21 points. Mack, as Gillman said, made a number of key baskets, as did Krusen.

And while the Pirates were frittering away their lead, shooting only 35.8 per cent in the second half, and 39 per cent for the game, the Mocs were coming back off a 31.4 per cent first half to shoot 51.4 per cent in the second half and 41.4 per cent overall.

Much of that came from Anchrum and Jones. Anchrum kept the Mocs in the game in the first half with shots from the low post position, and after the Pirates began doubling up on him to stop his scoring, lob passes to Jones under the basket opened up that phase of the game.

For a while, however, it looked like the Pirates could do no wrong. After Keith Parker put the Mocs into a 2-0 lead, a three-point play by Mack put the Pirates ahead after 1:07. Underwood and Maynor added baskets and Cornelius hit two at the line followed by another Maynor basket for an 11-2 margin. After another Parker score, Underwood added a basket and Cornelius, two free throws, to make it 15-4 with 14:57 left in the half.

But the Pirates began to get sloppy after that, turning the ball over when they should have been padding their lead even more. "We got a little greedy," Gillman said. "Instead of making good passes, we began to make ones that were almost good."

It all allowed the Mocs to cut the lead back to four, 34-30, before the Pirates added three quick scores at the end of the half to take a 40-30 halftime lead.

The Pirates held to the lead throughout most of the second half. The Mocs closed the gap several times, to as little as three a number of times throughout the middle portions of the half.

After East Carolina went back out by six, the Mocs kept close, and finally a turnaround jumper by Anchrum with 2:43 left pulled them to within one, 68-67. After Cornelius missed two shots at the foul line, Anchrum hit with 2:16 remaining for a 69-68 lead. Cornelius again missed, and with 1:28 left, Jones hit two free throws for a 71-68 lead. Krusen hit a jumper from the lane with 1:12 left, and then the Pirates beat the Moc stall.

Mack forced a jump ball with Darryl Yarborough with 35 seconds left, and the Pirates got the ball after the tap went out of bounds. But after moving under the basket, shots by Mack, Hobson and Underwood all missed, and Mack was fouled right at the horn. He missed the first, but made the second, tying it up and forcing the overtime.

Maynor got a basket on a goal-tending call to put the Pirates up, but Anchrum tied it with two free throws. After getting the ball back, Parker had an easy shot underneath blocked by Hobson, but Maynor then missed a layup with 1:34 left. Parker was called for walking with 45 seconds left, but Dan Moore then stole the ball and drove for a stuff to put the Mocs up, 75-73.

After Krusen missed from the lane, Jones added two free throws, and after Mack hit off a rebound with nine seconds left, Jones hit a free throw when the Pirates were called for a technical for calling an excess time out. That gave the Mocs a three-point edge, and a tap by Krusen with two seconds left brought it to the final one-point margin.

Anchrum finished with 27 points and 16 rebounds, while Jones had 26 points. Parker added 12 points.

Besides Cornelius' 21 points, Mack had 19, Krusen had 14 and Maynor had 19.

The loss dropped the Pirates to 11-13 on the year, meaning they must win their remaining three games to avoid their fourth straight losing season, and their second in a row under Gillman.

The Pirates play host to Georgia Tech on Saturday at 8:30 p.m. in Minges. The game is the second part of a doubleheader, which sees the ECU women hosting Appalachian State at 6:30 p.m. in the first game.

UCLA Rallies To Slip Past Arizona State

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Those Hollywood endings are all the same: It's UCLA every time, it seems.

Hard to beat anywhere — but almost impossible at home — the second-ranked Bruins turned an apparent loss into a victory at Pauley Pavilion Thursday night, beating Arizona State 85-83 with some late-game theatrics.

"We had the game absolutely won," said Arizona State Coach Ned Walk, stunned by the dramatic turn of events. "It was completely disheartening to lose. Everything was happening at the other end of the court and we couldn't get any information to the players."

What happened was certainly enough to frustrate any coach.

The Sun Devils had an 83-79 lead with nine seconds left, but fouled Roy Hamilton at this point and the UCLA guard made two free throws. Then UCLA's Kiki Vandeweghe stole the inbound pass from Arizona State's Tony Zeno and was fouled by Zeno in the resulting action. Vandeweghe made two shots to tie the game at 83 with seven seconds to play.

Blake Taylor missed a 20-foot shot for the Sun Devils with five seconds to play and Zeno fouled Holland on the rebound.

"There was no doubt that Brad Holland was fouled," said UCLA Coach Gary Cunningham. "The only question was, had time expired?"

It hadn't — and the call went UCLA's way. Whereupon, Holland converted both shots with many UCLA fans hanging expectantly at the rim of the court. Holland sank the first shot of the one-and-one situation for the winning point, then put in the other while the UCLA fans swarmed around him at the foul line.

"We just have to make it exciting, I guess," said Vandeweghe.

Elsewhere, top-ranked Indiana State remained undefeated after 24 games, beating Southern Illinois 69-68; third-ranked Notre Dame blasted Mahattan 86-63; No. 8 Michigan State stopped Indiana 59-47; No. 9 Louisville tripped St. Louis 78-62; No. 14 Iowa turned back No. 13 Purdue 75-72 and No. 17 Ohio State stopped Minnesota 74-68.

UCLA, the Pac-10 leader with an 11-2 record and 19-3 overall, trailed 40-27 at halftime before rallying to take the lead late in the game. Then the Bruins lost it for a while before their heart-stopping finish.

"Luck was just with us tonight," said Cunningham. "I felt my team thought the game was over (when they were down by four points in the last nine seconds.) But I never felt we were out of the game. I never do. I've seen teams win like that in the last seconds. For one of the few times this year, everything I planned in the end worked out."

"It was one of the greatest victories I've ever experienced in college."

Larry Bird scored 20 points and Steve Reid sank two free throws in the final 14 seconds to seal Indiana State's victory over Southern Illinois.

"We feel we are as good as anyone on a given night and on a neutral court and, on this night, better than UCLA," said Indiana State Coach Bill Hodges after the game at Carbondale, Ill.

Hodges said the criticism his team has received about playing a soft schedule is unjustified.

"The people who are saying that haven't done their research," he stated. "Purdue is as tough as anyone in the nation to beat on its home court, a task we accomplished early in the year."

Bird's point total moved him past Notre Dame's Austin Carr into eighth place on the NCAA all-time scoring list.

Kelly Tripucka's 18 points led a balanced attack as Notre Dame defeated outmanned Manhattan in the second game of a doubleheader at New York's Madison Square Garden. Rutgers beat Seton Hall 88-67 in the first game as James Bailey scored 29 points and grabbed 9 rebounds.

Earvin "Magic" Johnson scored 15 points to lead Michigan State past Indiana. The Spartans scored eight straight points to break a 30-30 halftime tie and never were headed.

Darrell Griffith scored 15 points and Larry Williams added 14, leading Louisville over St. Louis, nailing down the Metro Conference title for the Cardinals.

"It's the most aggressive and hardest we've played in 2-3 weeks," said Louisville Coach Denny Crum. "We had been in a mental slump. Defense is a mental thing. You can't play good defense unless you're right mentally. Tonight, I thought our defense was outstanding."

Steve Kracisin scored 17 points to lead Iowa over Purdue. Ohio State defeated Minnesota as Herb Williams scored 26 points and grabbed 12 rebounds.

In other games, Calvin Garrett's 30 points led Oral Roberts past Tulsa 91-86; Kevin McKenna's 19 points powered Creighton over Bradley 87-81; Tommy Conrad's 16-foot jumper at the buzzer gave Old Dominion a 72-71 overtime victory over Virginia Commonwealth; Ronnie Perry's 32 points triggered Holy Cross over New Hampshire 73-58 and Illinois defeated Wisconsin 81-64 as Mark Smith scored 14 points.

Also, Frank Johnson scored 15 points as Wake Forest defeated Georgia Southern 77-69; Pat Cummings scored 26 points, leading Cincinnati over Tulane 88-66; Ron Jones and Derrick Mayes combined for 39 points to pace Illinois State over South Alabama 77-70; Ken Williams' 27 points led Houston over Texas Tech 103-89; Keith Smith had a career-high 22 points to lead Michigan over Northwestern 78-67; James Tillman scored 34 points, including the game-winning jumper with 11 seconds left, to lift Eastern Kentucky over West Virginia 93-91 and Mike Gray and Johnny High teamed for 48 points as Nevada-Reno held off a late San Francisco charge to beat the Dons 87-83.

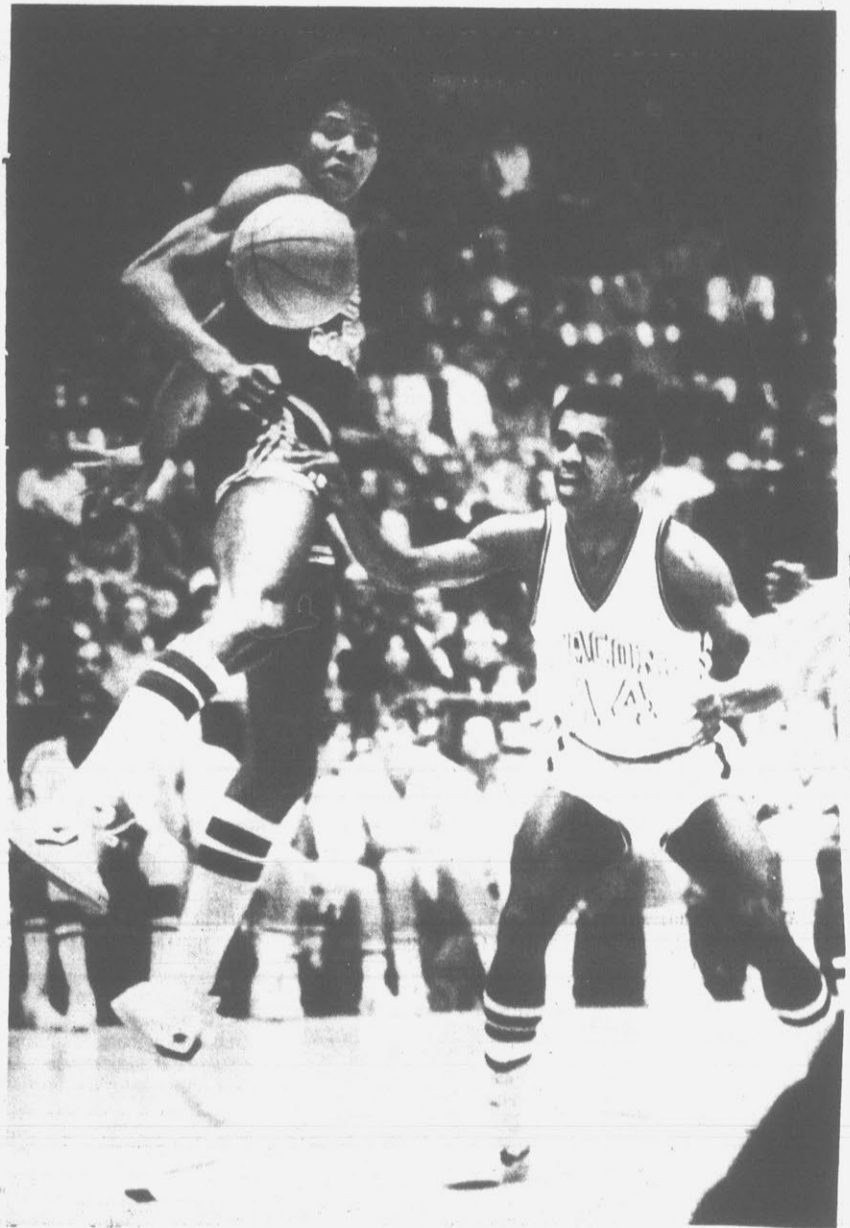

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Wake Forest Coach Carl Tacy is gaining confidence from his new lineup.

For the second straight game, Frank Johnson started at point guard for the Deacons and Wake Forest recorded a second consecutive victory, defeating Georgia Southern 77-69 Thursday night in a non-conference basketball game.

"Frank ran a great offense for most of the time," Tacy said. "He handled the ball well in the transition, and is still improving as the point guard. I'm happy to see that."

Tacy said the Deacons still showed some signs of inconsistency. And he said the mistakes must be eliminated before the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament next month.

"How we play from now on is terribly important in getting ready for the ACC tournament," Tacy said. "With the right approach, we have as good a shot as any team in the league."

Tonight's ACC schedule has Duke at Maryland. Johnson paced Wake Forest, now 12-12, with 15 points. Georgia Southern, led by Kevin Anderson's 21 points, fell to 9-14.

The Eagles led only twice, 2-0 on a dunk by John Fowler on the game's opening jump, and 40-39 after two free throws by Anderson with 15:32 left in the second half.

But the Deacons scored eight unanswered points and built up a 65-50 lead capped by slam dunks by Jim Johnstone and Alvis Rogers within 12 seconds of each other with five minutes remaining.

Rogers had six points in a two-minute span to key the 26-10 outburst.

"We can't win if the shots won't go through the basket," said Georgia Southern Coach J.B. Searce. "We had the shots, but they wouldn't go through in the second half."

Wake Forest centers shot a combined 11-14 from the floor, as the Deacons used an inside attack against the shorter Eagles.

"We got hurt inside because they were a lot bigger," Searce said.

Williamston and Washington, the number one and two teams in the Northeastern Conference girls' division, won their way into the finals of the league tournament with wins last night.

Williamston downed Roanoke Rapids, 52-33, while Washington nipped Roanoke, 47-44. The two winners meet tonight for the title in Ahsokie, while the Washington and Roanoke boys clash in the second championship game.

In Washington, the Lady Pam Pack moved out to an 11-9 lead in the first period, but Roanoke reversed that and claimed a 21-21 tie at halftime. Washington inched back into the lead in the third period, 35-33, and held off Roanoke, 12-11, in the final quarter to claim the victory.

Terri Andrews led Washington with 13 points, while Brenda Minns had 12 and Marcia Boyd had 10. Sinfield Jones led Roanoke with 15.

At Williamston, the Tigerettes got away to a slow start as Roanoke Rapids took a 4-2 lead after the first period. But after that, Williamston took charge and roared out to a 24-11 halftime lead.

Top Seeded Teams Move Into Finals

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer
SPRING HOPE—There were some upsets along the way, but when the Eastern Carolina Conference tournament finals get underway tonight at Southern Nash High School, it will be the number one seeds against the number two seeds in both the boys' and girls' brackets.

Last night's three games completed the semifinal round in the tournament. In the first game, the number two Ayden-Grifton girls knocked off third-seeded D. H. Conley 51-49. Then, the top-rated Farmville Central boys downed fifth-seeded C. B. Aycock 80-61. North Lenoir's second-place boys followed with a 74-63 win over number six Conley.

In tonight's final games, the Ayden-Grifton and Southwest Edgecombe girls will play at 7 p.m., with the boys' game between Farmville Central and North Lenoir to follow at around 8:45.

A-G Girls Stop DHC
Ayden-Grifton blew a nine-point halftime lead against the Valkyries, but was able to hold on in the final moments for a narrow 51-49 victory.

The Chargerettes led 16-9 at the end of the first quarter and upped that margin to 31-22 at intermission.

But Conley, paced by the outstanding play of Glenda Green, who led all scorers in the game with 29 points, began to chip away at the Ayden-Grifton margin. It was Green's consecutive shots from underneath late in the third quarter that gave Conley the lead for the first time 36-35.

The Chargerettes scored the last five points of the third period to go back up by four, but Green got five straight points to start the fourth period and give the Valkyries a one-point lead.

It was a see-saw battle from that point until the Chargerettes got baskets from Marie Lewis and Shonda Brock to give them a 50-47 lead.

Annie Hardy hit a driving shot from the lane with 12 seconds left to pull the Valkyries to within one, but Marie Lewis sealed the Ayden-Grifton win with a foul shot with two seconds showing.

Chargerette coach Kathy Purvis was pleased with the victory, but a bit disappointed in her team's play. "They had that nine-point lead at halftime and should have never lost it," she said. "My players went through a cold streak, and we weren't doing anything on defense."

She gave the Valkyries credit for making a good comeback. "Conley came out strong in the second half like we came out strong in the first half. Everytime we've played them, they've always played a better second half."

Conley coach Norma Respass commented, "I thought the comeback we made was tremendous. I'm just real proud of Glenda Green. She kept us in the game."

Green was the only Conley player in double figures. Marie Lewis had 18 and Brock 12 for Ayden-Grifton.

FC Overcomes CBA
The Southern Nash gym was steaming, but C. B. Aycock's Falcons found themselves out in the cold in the second quarter last night as they went nearly seven minutes without scoring.

That dry spell allowed Farmville Central to break out of the 17-17 deadlock at the end of the first quarter and build up a 39-17 lead before the Falcons could score again.

The two team's came out dead even at the end of the hard-fought first-quarter. Aycock's 17-10 rebounding advantage was a key to the Falcons being able to stay with the talented Jaguars.

Then, the roof fell in. The cold spell started innocently enough with a couple of missed shots, but then it began to snowball. There were four more misses and then three straight turnovers, and by the time the Falcons could reverse themselves, they were out of the ballgame.

"Our press in the second quarter, that was it—that was the difference," Jaguar coach Mike Terrell said. "They got intimidated and confused on offense and we took advantage."

Terrell said he felt the Falcons would make a run at the Jaguars in the third quarter, but "we didn't give them a chance to."

The Jags increased their lead to 24 and then 26 in the third period. It was only after Terrell inserted his substitutes that Aycock was able to cut substantially into Farmville's lead.

"We played very well on offense," Terrell noted. "We shot well and got the ball inside to (Jeff) Tyson. We hit the open spots well against their zone."

The Aycock zone was set up in a way that allowed Farmville to get the ball inside to their high post man at the free throw line and the Jags took advantage of the situation for a number of easy shots. "I thought they would adjust to that, but they didn't," Terrell said.

Five Jaguars scored in double figures, Donald Reid with 14, substitute Johnny Carlton with 12, James Tyson with 11 and Donald Freeman and Jeff Tyson with 10 each.

"I'm real pleased. We played a lot better," Terrell concluded. "Five players in double figures—you can't ask for any better than that, can you?"

Barry Uzzell paced Aycock with 19, while Dave Thomas had 12 and James Whitley 11.

NL Downs DHC
D. H. Conley built up an eight-point lead in the first quarter and trailed by only two at the half, but, like Aycock, experienced a shooting drought in the third quarter that spelled doom.

The Vikings, fighting for a spot in the district playoffs, came up short against the tall Hawks as they dropped a 74-63 decision.

Shawn Little came out with both guns blazing in the first quarter for Conley, scoring 10 points in the opening period. The Vikes built up a 14-6 lead with 2:54 left, but North Lenoir came back to cut the Conley margin to 16-14 going into the second period.

With Amos Pearcill dominating the inside and Johnny Wiggins bombing in jumpers from the outside, the Hawks went up by two at the half, 33-31, on a jumper from the corner by Pearcill.

Conley still trailed by two, 39-37, with just under four minutes left in the third quarter when the bottom fell out. The Vikes didn't score for nearly four minutes, while the Hawks put in seven straight points to build their lead to nine.

Then, the Hawks scored the first eight points of the fourth quarter for a 54-39 margin.

But Conley didn't give up at that point. The Vikes, with Little doing much of the work, snipped away at the North Lenoir lead and got it down to six, 65-59 on a jumper by O'Hara Parker with 54 seconds left.

Little hit a driving shot across the lane with 44 seconds showing that made it 67-61 and the Vikings fouled Hawk Randy Johnson with 40 seconds on the clock.

He missed the shot, but Pearcill was there to stick it back in and that ended the Viking hopes.

"They really hurt us on the offensive boards," Conley coach Shelly Marsh said. "It's the same old story—we can't rebound with most of the teams in our league."

"They (the Hawks) were shooting well, plus they had a rebounding advantage. We just didn't have much of a chance, once we got out of our game plan."

Marsh said the Vikes wanted to keep the tempo down a bit, and that play worked until their cold spell in the third quarter.

"They all tried," Marsh said of his players' efforts. "A few mental lapses beat us."

Marsh said Little, who led all scorers with 28 points, played the game he is capable of, while Daryl Thompson also did a real good job in the first half.

Johnny Wiggins had 23 points for North Lenoir and Pearcill had 21. John Cratch also scored in double figures with 16. The Hawks had a 37-30 advantage on the boards.

Baker, Waltrip Set For Daytona Battle

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP)—After dominating the qualifying races here this week, Buddy Baker and Darrell Waltrip expect to see a lot of each other in Sunday's $600,000 Daytona 500 stock car classic.

They ran 1-2 in last Sunday's sprint race, 1-3 in pole qualifying, and each won in Thursday's 125-mile qualifying races.

"I'm glad to see my teammate win his race; he's my drafting partner," said Baker, who came back to beat Cale Yarborough by a car length in the first race before Waltrip held off A.J. Foyt by two lengths in the second race.

"He's kind of easy to draft because you know he's just going to put his foot on the throttle all the way," laughed Waltrip.

"Basically, his strategy and our strategy are very similar," Waltrip said. "Buddy likes to lead, and I like to lead, and we're going to be out in front on Sunday."

Waltrip, like Baker seeking his first Daytona 500 victory in an Oldsmobile this year, had to contend with another master drafter in his race.

"On that caution flag, A.J. was saying let's draft together the rest of the race," Waltrip said. "He was giving me one of those 'I won't pass you' looks. That's when I knew I was experienced, because I didn't fall for that."

"I've had to race A.J. before. He's kind of a sly old fox."

Baker, who won the pole position last Sunday at 196.049 mph, turned 197 mph laps Thursday to catch Yarborough. But he insisted that the high speeds were normal on the newly resurfaced Daytona International Speedway track.

"There is no such thing as a critical speed. The racing surface is better, we have safe

Lietzke Fires 63 To Take Lead At Tucson

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP)—Bruce Lietzke said he knew it had to happen. It was just a matter of when.

"My putting always comes around," he said. "Sometimes I can get pretty frustrated waiting for it, but I always know it will come around sometime."

Now it's back; back to the tune of a pace-setting 7-under-par 63 in the first round of the $250,000 Joe Garagiola-Tucson Open golf tournament. His only question now is: how long will it last?

"If I keep on putting like this, and I have a certain amount of confidence in my putting now, it's going to be a wild weekend. And I'm talking about low numbers. Very low numbers. Maybe even lower than this."

Lietzke, the cross-handed putter who holds the Canadian Open title, one-putted nine times in the warm sunshine to establish a 1-stroke lead Thursday. Just off his shoulder at 64 were former Masters champ Tommy Aaron, rookie Mike Brannan, Curtis Strange and Jim Nelford, a left-handed putter from Canada.

Frank Beard, who has been, within sight of the $1 million mark in career earnings for the past two seasons; Frank Conner and John Schroeder shot 65s on the 6,708 yard Randolph Municipal course, which is being played this season on a once-only basis while Tucson National, the traditional site for this event, is being renovated.

A group of 10 followed at 66, while defending titleholder Tom Watson and Lee Trevino headed a big group at 67.

Arnold Palmer struggled to a 72 — only 2 over par but a relatively high number in the extremely low overall scoring — and must improve if he is to make the cut for the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

Hubert Green, the winner of last week's Hawaiian Open, had a 74 and also was in danger of failing to qualify.

Court In Carteret To Decide Who Owns Salter Path Land

SALTER PATH, N.C. (AP) — Who owns Salter Path? Five weeks have been set aside in Carteret County Superior Court to try to answer that question, and attorneys feel it's going to take at least that long.

At issue are some unpaid taxes Carteret County officials would like to collect. The taxes are due on 25 to 30 acres of land on which about 300 Salter Path residents live.

In 1975, county attorney Pat Mason filed suit against those residents to collect the taxes, which have not been paid since 1973, when a revaluation sharply increased the amount due.

The residents hired their own attorneys to fight the county. Complicating the matter is that no resident holds a deed to any land in Salter Path, because the land belongs to the heirs of Alice Hoffman, who was a descendant of the famed Roosevelt family. In 1923, a judge ruled that Mrs. Hoffman owned the land, but said squatters who had moved to the area could remain.

The arrangement caused no evident trouble until 1973, when the revaluation raised the property's value to $900,000, taxable at $4,500 annually.

The original owners, the Roosevelts, made their one and only statement on the matter in 1975 after the county filed suit for the taxes. Theodore Roosevelt III said in the statement: "For many years, we paid taxes to Carteret County for our interest as owners of the bare legal title to the communicity of Salter Path. However, when the county revalued Salter Path lands and assessed us taxes of more than $4,500 a year, we objected to this taxing procedure, claiming the $900,000 valuation was not in fact a 'fair market value' as it could not be sold or disposed of in any way.

"We sincerely hope," the 1975 statement said, "that the present suit by Carteret County will result in the people of Salter Path at long last receiving title to the land on which they live. We are happy to divest ourselves of whatever legal title we may have in this land, without any compensation."

But residents of Salter Path have not been able to agree on who owns what land or even where the property boundaries are located. The county's lawsuit brought response from several groups, each of which wants the 1923 ruling interpreted its way.

One group wants to take what the Roosevelts offered and pay the taxes themselves. Another group claims it is entitled to live on the land, but its members want the Roosevelts to pay the taxes. Still another group claims other parts of Salter Path, saying they were not included in the 1923 judgement.

County officials say they just want the taxes paid.

"The primary purpose of the suit is to collect the taxes and, secondarily, to find out who to collect them from," Mason said.

The trial is scheduled to get under way in April.

PARTISANS KEEP MOVING — A truck load of Cambodian partisan troops loyal to the ousted Pol Pot regime leaves a temporary base camp earlier this week in a rain forest area near the border with Thailand. They were among the forces banded together in groups of about 100 who have launched harrassing attacks on the Vietnamese forces, and then moved away to avoid retaliation. There were many women and youngsters in the partisan bands. (AP Laserphoto)

Lumbees Angry Over 3 Alleged Beating Cases

PEMBROKE, N.C. (AP) — Lumbee Indians, who make up one-third of Robeson County's 100,000 citizens, are angry with the N.C. Highway Patrol over three beating incidents involving Lumbees and Highway Patrol officers.

In all three cases, which stretch from 1977 to last month, the troopers said they believed the suspects were under the influence of alcohol. Each suspect ended up in the hospital with head injuries.

Troopers have been ordered not to comment. Patrol officials have told local leaders the beating incidents were regrettable.

Observers say tension in the Eastern North Carolina county has mounted since the latest incident.

On Jan. 14, Tony Blue was arrested near Pembroke for driving under the influence and resisting arrest. Blue spent 20 days in the hospital, recovering from head injuries.

"From May 20, 1978 up to Jan. 14, there was no trouble," Bobby Ray Chavis, who represents the N.C. Commission of Indian Affairs in Robeson County, said this week.

"The tension and everything had eased."

But Blue's arrest and hospitalization changed the climate.

About 1,000 persons gathered at a Feb. 2 rally and raised $500 for Blue's defenses.

"When you pull 1,000 out of the community to a meeting, that's evidence of concern," said McDuffie Cummings, Pembroke town manager and a Lumbee.

Cummings said he was a witness on April 22, 1977 when troopers were arresting a Lumbee named Oneal Oxendine.

"The troopers had the guy subdued," Cummings said. "And then a trooper walked up to (Oxendine's) back and put 23 stitches in his head."

Cummings filed a complaint against troopers T.J. Evelyn and H.L. Covington. The patrol's internal-affairs division concluded both troopers acted properly.

Cummings wasn't satisfied. He said no one from the patrol's internal-affairs division had asked him what he had seen.

After an incident last May 20, in which Terry Martin Locke was beaten while being arrested, Cummings and Chavis prepared a report containing 14 recommendations.

Among the suggestions is one that troopers who work in Robeson County be given social-behavior training. Another recommendation is that the county patrol activities be investigated.

Nineteen troopers are assigned to Robeson. The county got its first and only Indian trooper in December.

Herbert Hyde, state secretary of crime control and public safety, refused to discuss the charges.

"According to me, not the patrol, many people believe that there is undue force...police brutality, if you will," Hyde said. "I'm not going to discuss the merits of that argument."

Hyde has met with representatives from Robeson County and the Commission on Indian Affairs. He said he is working on possible solutions he cannot discuss.

Would Return From Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Marine who was reported captured in Vietnam in 1965, and may have stayed there after other prisoners of war were released, could collect $144,000 in back pay and allowances after returning to the United States, the Marine Corps says.

The corps said Thursday that Pvt. 1 Robert R. Garwood, now 33, will be entitled to the money "unless it is determined that his conduct while in the hands of North Vietnam forces legally precludes such payment."

Garwood, of Indianapolis, Ind., has been officially listed as a POW since he disappeared Sept. 28, 1965.

The State Department said Wednesday that Garwood told a foreign national traveling in Vietnam that he "wants to return home."

The department added that Garwood's fellow U.S. POWs "reported to us after their release that Mr. Garwo voluntarily stayed behind in Vietnam."

The Marine Corps said "the assertion that...Garwood may have voluntarily remained in Vietnam raises substantial questions about the propriety of his actions." But it added that information on Garwood's "life style" after disappearing from his unit in Da Nang "is sketchy, unconfirmed and not in a form suitable for release."

The Marine Corps did not indicate what action it may take after Garwood returns to the United States.

Rep. G.V. Montgomery, D-

Miss., said Thursday that Garwood was an unnamed defector that his committee on POWs and those missing in action had cited as leading North Vietnamese units against U.S. patrols.

A committee report said, "The defector was observed by American captives and was seen to bear arms with the enemy, and to participate in interrogation of other American prisoners of war"

Correction

An error appeared in "The Daily Reflector" February 14 in an article listing cases disposed of in District Court in Pitt County during the week of January 8.

The report incorrectly said that Harry Clayton Roberson Jr. of Robersonville was convicted of indecent exposure.

Actually, Roberson pled guilty to disorderly conduct charges.

"The Reflector" regrets the error and any embarrassment it may have caused.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: J equals S

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Opening lead: Queen of ♣.

In the second world war there was a slogan plastered all over England: "Loose lips sink ships." They can also ruin hopes at the bridge table.

The bidding was routine. Once North showed good heart support and opening bid values, South pressed on to slam.

West led the top of his club sequence, and when dummy appeared, declarer was delighted with his prospects. The slam depended on little more than finding West with at least one trump—even if he held all three, declarer could assure the contract with the safety play of running the jack on the first lead of the suit.

East was also delighted with dummy. He took one look at the ace of hearts on the table and remarked: "This is one slam you won't make!"

Declarer was the late British internationalist and former world champion, Kenneth Konstant. He needed no further clue to the winning line—it was obvious from his hand that East's claim had to be based on holding all three missing trumps.

Konstant won the king of clubs, then cashed the ace of clubs and ace-king of spades. He needed three entries to dummy to bring out an end play, so he led a low diamond and finessed the jack. A spade ruff was followed by a diamond to the ace and another spade ruff. The high king of diamonds was ruffed in dummy and a club ruff reduced dummy, East and declarer to nothing but three trumps each.

Now declarer ran the jack of trumps. East won, but had to return a trump into declarer's combined ace-ten tenace, so an "impossible" slam rolled home.

The only player who was harmed was West. He had to pay for a vulnerable slam instead of collecting 100 points. East received his just due for not keeping quiet during the play of the hand!

'Roots II' No Rip-Off From That First Epic

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — No matter what happens, it won't be just another TV show. "Roots: The Next Generations," Sunday night on ABC, is already past the point where it can just be a flop or a hit. Because the first "Roots" did the things it did (like drawing the biggest audience in history), "Roots II" will be a "social phenomenon" or an "American experience" if it works. If it fails, we'll hear a lot of talk about backlash, white guilt and the American viewer's sparse appetite for things intelligent.

But down there beneath all the popcorn analysis and extraneous wrapping sits a television show. A very fine television show.

The best thing going for "Roots II" is not "Roots I." This is no rip-off of that first gargantuan. The story in "Roots II" stands by itself and, in many ways, is more powerful than the first part. The seven episodes beginning Sunday night and extending through next Sunday pick up the story of Alex Haley's lineage where "Roots I" left us, in post-Civil War Hennings, Tenn. These stories are as integral to Haley's complete work as the account of Kunte Kinte and his early progeny.

The characters in this continuation are free men and women. So, gone are the harsh images of slavery that lent visual and emotional impact to the first "Roots" — chains, whippings, rapes and the like.

The drama is subtler, yet better. Sunday's first episode sets the tone for the second "Roots" series by focusing on the conflicts facing Tom Harvey, Haley's great-grandfather and the great-great grandson of the old African himself, Kunta Kinte. Tom (played by George Stanford Brown) was a born slave who, as a freeman, struggles with his hatred of whites. But his bitterness goes against the grain of the new times and the changing sentiments of his family.

"Roots II" takes the Haley saga through four more generations, up to 1970 and Alex Haley himself. In the 14 hours of this new series, we see the emergence of an upwardly mobile, middle-class family. The themes are less stark than in "Roots I," less a matter of good-versus-evil; but the experience of the Black American is certainly central to the drama.

Producer Stan Margulies and others connected with "Roots II" are often asked whether — to put it inelegantly — "Roots" without chains and whippings can carry the big numbers of "Roots" with chains and whippings. The questions are prompted in part by the dismal failure a few seasons back of "King," the fine dramatization of the life of Martin Luther King, which bombed in the ratings.

"Let me tell you about 'King.' That was subliminally a defeating, 'down' story. You start watching 'King' and you know he is going to be assassinated. There is no victory there.

"There has always been, even in the first 'Roots,' a subliminal sense of accomplishment and triumph because the ultimate member of the Haley family is Alex Haley," he said.

TV Debut Film On N.C. Inlets Sunday

A film on North Carolina's inlets will make its television debut Sunday, Feb. 18, 11:30 a.m., on Channel 12, WCTI-TV.

The 28-minute film "Gateways to the Sea," illustrates the dynamic behavior and value of good, navigable inlets to the state's economy.

According to Loie Priddy and Rick Carroway, producers of the film and employees of the North Carolina Division of Marine Fisheries, the movie begins with a short introduction to coastal North Carolina and the Outer Banks.

Several animation scenes and location footage are then used to illustrate the mechanics of an inlet system, to trace the movement of one inlet over 130 years, and to demonstrate the dangers of recent construction too near an inlet.

Sponsor Evening At The Movies

The Christian Women Fellowship Club of Philippi Church of Christ in conjunction with the South Greenville Recreation Center, will sponsor an evening at the movies Saturday, Feb. 17, 5 p.m. at the South Greenville Recreation Center, corner of Howell and Hudson Streets.

"Sounder II," a film portrayal of a black Southern family and its struggle in obtaining education, will be shown. No admission will be charged. A coffee and tea break will be held after the film so interested persons may tour the facilities. The public is invited to attend.

Oscar-Voting Now Underway

Julie will play Amanda, an heiress who fronts a gambling operation to regain the estate her father lost. Matthau plays Sorrowful Jones, the dyspeptic bookie who takes a little girl as a "marker" for her father's bet.

SIMPSON'S DEAL

Bee Gees Lead Grammy Awards Field

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The Bee Gees, whose best-selling soundtrack for the film "Saturday Night Fever" was shut out of last year's Academy Award nominations, were vindicated with four prizes at this year's Grammy awards. "Saturday Night Fever" was voted album of the year, and the Bee Gees took home three other Grammys as disco music came of age at the 21st annual awards by the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences.

Billy Joel was the roadblock that kept disco sound from sweeping the music industry's most prestigious awards at the nationally televised ceremonies Thursday night.

Cars, Toto and Chris Rea. Disco queen Donna Summer, clutching the victrola-shaped trophy she earned as best female rhythm and blues performer for "Last Dance," applauded the record academy for coming around to the disco craze that has swept the country in the last year.

"Last Dance" also won the best rhythm and blues song award for songwriter Paul Jabara.

The New York singer-writer scored a mini-sweep of his own, taking song of the year and record of the year for his melow love song, "Just the Way You Are."

Barry Manilow, named best male pop performer for his disco-flavored "Copacabana," seemed surprised the tune had won him his first Grammy.

Comedian Steve Martin took the stage to present the pop male vocalist award, dressed in a tuxedo jacket and boxer shorts. His missing trousers were produced on a dry cleaner's hanger and Martin put them on to renewed guffaws.

But in addition to album of the year, brothers Robin, Barry and Maurice Gibb also won best pop vocal by a group and best arrangement for voices, both for "Stayin' Alive," and producer of the year, an honor the veteran Australian rock musicians shared with Albhy Galuten and Karl Richardson.

While disco artists were present to collect their winnings, many honored performers were absent, including Joel and Anne Murray, whose "You Needed Me" won the best pop female performance award.

A trio of long-time stars, all no-shows at the ceremony, took top country honors. Willie Nelson was named top male volunteer and a loser — former President Richard Nixon. The album of Nixon's televised interviews with David Frost was nominated in the spoken word category, but was aced out by Orson Welles' recent album of the soundtrack to "Citizen Kane."

Barry Manilow, named best male pop performer for his disco-flavored "Copacabana," seemed surprised the tune had won him his first Grammy.

Martin also won the best comedy recording award for the second year running. This year's winning effort was "A Wild and Crazy Guy."

The two-man, two-woman disco group A Taste of Honey — who scored a hit with "Boogie Oogie Oogie" — was something of a dark-horse winner in the new artist category, beating out more traditional rock performers Elvis Costello, the

Open Meetings Bill Is Due For A Vote Today

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill that would revise the state's open-meetings law, which includes a controversial provision dealing with court cases, was expected to come up for a vote today in the House.

The proposal was approved by the Judiciary III committee on Thursday.

It was praised by an attorney for the North Carolina Press Association, which is seeking a major revision of the open-meetings law, but criticized by a lobbyist for the League of Municipalities.

Ernie Ball, speaking for the municipalities' organization, said he was not satisfied with several provisions of the bill as it was approved by the judiciary committee. He refused to say whether the league would seek to have it amended before a vote is taken in the House.

Ball offered five amendments to the committee but all were rejected. A subcommittee had considered more than a dozen amendments to the proposal.

Ball said the league objected to a provision that deals with court cases involving the open-meetings law. It would allow a judge to require a person who accuses a public board of violating the law to pay attorney fees if the case was declared "frivolous."

Conflict over the provision centered on the use of "clearly frivolous" or "frivolous" and the committee decided to use the one-word definition.

Rep. Louise Brennan, D-Mecklenburg, said the bill should be written to make it difficult for government bodies to win attorney fees from persons who file suits against them but lose. Otherwise, she said, people would be discouraged from bringing suit over open meetings violations, for fear of having to pay defense attorney fees if they lose.

The bill is based on recommendations of a legislative study commission that was created by the 1978 General Assembly after a state Supreme Court opinion gutted the state's open-meetings law.

William Lassiter, attorney for the North Carolina Press Association and leader of a drive to revise the open-meetings law, said he was satisfied with the bill.

He said a section that would allow individuals to ask for written notification of special board meetings was one of the reasons the bill drew favorable response from the press association.

The current law permits news services to ask for written notification of meetings but gives public agencies the authority to charge $10 a year for the service. That charge is eliminated in the revised bill.

"I think we sometimes forget who owns the government," Lassiter said. "If every citizen of Raleigh wanted to be put on a mailing list, we ought to hire extra people and buy a printing press if that's what it took."

Ball said another concern of the League of Municipalities was the rejection of an amendment that would have allowed public agencies to go into closed session to discuss the disposition of property. Currently boards are allowed to discuss property acquisition in executive session.

Ball said the league objected to a provision that deals with court cases involving the open-meetings law. It would allow a judge to require a person who accuses a public board of violating the law to pay attorney fees if the case was declared "frivolous."

We gift wrap your home with lots of ribbon... and no red tape.

We've got the know-how... plus.

Get out the ribbon and forget the red tape. We can make selling a home easier than most people would believe, because we know how to show it... to buyers not "lookers".

Our lookers are buyers because they've done their browsing with our Homes For Living magazine. They've already seen your home, pictured clearly on a page of our monthly magazine. They know what features it has to offer, and they know your price. It's all right there in print.

And we find our buyers in places you wouldn't think to look. Hundreds of our magazines are distributed locally. And copies are sent to our offices in all 50 states, so that out-of-town buyers, who are relocating here, can get a good look at your home before they arrive.

We show your home to interested "lookers" across the country. We bring you the "buyers" to wrap up the deal.

It's "ribbon" and not "red tape" when we sell a home... because we've got the know-how... Plus!

China's Oil Will Have To Pay For New Know-How

By ROBERT CRABBE
 SHENGLI, China (UPI) — In just 14 years, the 200,000 people of Shengli have built China's second largest oil field, producing more than 128 million barrels of oil a year. Shengli (Victory) near the mouth of the Yellow River ranks next in importance to the famous Taching oil field near the Soviet border. Men and women work on the rigs and the women also grow 22,000 tons of rice annually in about 17,000 acres of reclaimed and irrigated land. Shengli and other new oil fields like it are vital to China's modernization program aimed at making China an advanced industrial country by the end of this century. Oil will have to pay for the transfusions of European, Japanese and American industrial knowhow needed to bring this about. Shengli is a crude oil production center, not a petrochemical complex. It's reserves are secret. Officials say most of its production is for domestic use, although some is exported. Three pipelines deliver Shengli oil to the outside world. One, completed in 1974, runs to the Huang Tao tanker port near the city of Tsingtao at the tip of the Shantung peninsula. Another, built last year, links the oil field to Nanking in the south. A third connects the field with Chipu City where a large refining complex is located. All pipelines carry both oil and natural gas. Shengli officials say the complex at Chipu can produce 300,000 tons of ammonia a year, the only statistic they furnished. Shengli itself has only a small refinery that makes products for local use like ammonia and gasoline. This refinery is attached to the Eastern Petroleum Institute, Shengli's technical college, and is partly a training facility. Shengli has used quite a bit of foreign equipment in its time. Its managers and working-level engineers say they are eager to acquire American equipment, especially for drilling and extracting. A computer installed by France's C.I.I. processes results of seismic testing. Dresser Corp. of the United States installed logging facilities over a one-year period ending in 1978. Smith Drilling Bit Co., also a U.S. firm, has supplied bits and anti-corrosion pipe. Some Soviet-made drilling rigs were used in Shengli's early days. Now all rigs are Chinese, officials of the field said, except for one from Romania, which is being used for Shengli's deepest test boring project. Shengli officials say the deepest productive well at present is a 16,568-foot borehole completed in 1970. The shallowest wells are variously reported to be from 4,000 to 5,000 feet deep. Shengli's first big well, completed in 1965, was an 8,140-foot affair that reportedly produced 1,250 tons of crude a day at discovery. The 147-foot high Romanian rig is currently being used for test boring to a depth of 18,700 feet, officials said.

Chinese drilling rigs used at Shengli have a rated depth of 13,000 feet but on occasion have been worked over capacity. Shengli is an on-shore oil field and drilling stops at the coastline on the north shore of the Shantung Peninsula near the mouth of the Yellow River. In recent years Taching has been believed to supply about half of China's crude. National production this year is guessed at around 700 million barrels. After Shengli, according to spokesmen, comes the North China Oil Field, located further up the Pohai gulf near Tientsin. North China includes two fields known as Takang and Jen Chiu, formerly separate but now administered-together. Sinkiang and Szechuan provinces are listed as the fourth and fifth largest oil production areas with no figures available. Shengli originally was settled by "pioneers" from the oil fields at Taching and at Urumchi in Sinkiang. Today, most of the work force comes from Shantung province and was trained at Shengli. It is a hardship post. The average base wage is around 65 yuan (a little over $40 a month) compared to around 40 yuan for China as a whole. But workers receive other economic benefits like free housing.
