Chemical Fire Smoulders; Run-Off Causes Concern

by STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

A large high expansion foam generating truck from Seymour Johnson Air Force Base arrived at the Coastal Chemical Company fire site about 11 a.m. Tuesday and prepared to attempt to extinguish the still-smouldering chemical fire.

At the Winterville Town Hall Tuesday morning, officials from various agencies involved with combatting the fire and protecting the public health and environment met with Pitt County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner.

Joyner explained that the foam was being tried in an effort to reduce the amount of water needed to extinguish the fire. The foam, normally used in petroleum fires, extinguishes the blaze by cutting off the oxygen supply.

Chemically-contaminated water running off from the fire site is probably the largest problem facing the officials.

Air and water quality control officials said at the meeting that they felt pretty good about the smoke coming from the fire. Joyner reported that residents can return to all areas, except in the immediate vicinity of the chemical company.

An estimated 1,000 persons were evacuated yesterday.

Officials at the meeting said caustic soda and lime are being put in streams in the area of the fire in an effort to break down harmful chemicals that entered the streams.

Health officials said that residents of the area who are serviced by a public water supply have nothing to worry about as far as contaminated water is concerned. Those who have protected wells are safe for the time being, health officials noted.

Homes with open wells or pitcher pumps should contact the Pitt County Health Department before using water from them.

Persons living in the area were urged to call the Health Department if they have any questions regarding the safety of food, water or anything of that nature.

Environmentalists were checking streams to determine the presence of contaminated run off Tuesday, saying that the run off from the area would go to the Neuse River rather than the Tar River.

It was the smoke from the fire that caused the evacuation of subdivisions within the Greenville City Limits and the area between Greenville and Winterville. Officials feared the black, billowing smoke contained toxic fumes from the burning chemicals.

State air and water quality officials said yesterday afternoon that the smoke contained organic vapors that could possibly cause breathing difficulties, skin irritations and rashes, and nerve problems.

The fallout of particles from the smoke gave snow to the East of the chemical plant a yellowish cast, and health officials warned those in the area not to touch the contaminated snow.

Joyner said officials are still not sure what clean-up measures will be necessary, until laboratory tests are performed on the snow, the soil and the water to determine just how hazardous they are.

Joyner added that air and water quality experts said the polluted snow presented a problem in that it would add many gallons of water to the potential runoff entering ditches and streams in the area.

Greenville residents were allowed to return to their homes last night because winds were blowing the smoke away from subdivisions within the city limits. However, they were told to be prepared to leave their homes again if the wind shifted.

North Carolina State Highway Patrolmen and Pitt County Sheriff's deputies set up road blocks to the south of the burning chemical company to keep anyone from entering the area.

No residents of the area were reported injured, although six firemen were treated at Pitt Memorial Hospital for smoke inhalation and chemical burns.

The fire, which began in the office area of the chemical firm, spread to an adjoining warehouse, was confined before it engulfed another large warehouse to the rear.

Coastal Chemical Co. president J. C. Whitehurst estimated damage to the building and contents at between $1.5 million and $2 million.

COLD WORK... above firemen waded through frigid water to pull a hose in to the gutted warehouse. Fire officials were still concerned about the problems of water runoff and smoke today. (Reflector Photo by Stuart Savage).

Chinese Pullback From Vietnam Seen By Sources

By V. SANGUANPONG
Associated Press Writer

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Intelligence sources said today China's invasion columns have resumed their advance into Vietnam, but an official in Peking reportedly told a diplomat that Chinese troops have halted their drive and will soon pull out of Vietnam.

A Lebanese Embassy source in Peking said Chinese Deputy Foreign Minister Ho Ying told Lebanese Ambassador Elie J. Boustany that Chinese forces would move no deeper into Vietnamese territory and would soon withdraw, Japan's Kyodo news service reported.

It said the Foreign Ministry official did not divulge a timetable for the expected pullout.

Another Japanese report from Peking said Chinese troops in north China have been alerted for possible war with the Soviet Union and civilians have been evacuated from some border areas.

The intelligence sources in Bangkok said that after withdrawing some units Monday the Chinese sent in replacements and pushed ahead a mile or more.

Previously the Chinese were reported to have penetrated no more than six miles along any of the various invasion corridors they used across a 450-mile front.

Kyodo said Soviet and Vietnamese sources in the Chinese capital said heavy fighting was continuing between Chinese and Vietnamese forces in the area of Lao Cai, a northwest Vietnamese city just south of the border.

Since launching the invasion Saturday, China has stressed that it would be a limited military operation aimed at "teaching a lesson" to Vietnam.

The Bangkok sources reported Monday that the Chinese advance had halted and some of the invaders might be pulling back, arousing speculation that the invasion was over. But U.S. analysts in Washington said at that time they were unaware of any withdrawal or of a slackening of the assault.

The local analysts also reported indications of Chinese aerial reinforcements, saying they believed more MiG-19s and MiG-21s had been moved to South China fields within striking distance of the border war. But the sources discounted reports of Chinese air attacks along the Red River north of Hanoi. Thai intelligence officials said the only planes the Chinese were using so far were spotter planes directing artillery fire.

Peking said it invaded its southern neighbor Saturday to put a stop to Vietnamese attacks across the border and not to take Vietnamese territory.

$753,485 To Pitt County

Pitt County received $753,485 in net distributable proceeds for the quarter ending Dec. 31, according to figures reported by Mark Lynch, Secretary of the N.C. Department of Revenue.

On a per capita distribution basis figured relative to population, Greenville received $194,509 of the total amount. The population here was listed as 33,590.

Farmville, based on a population of 5,090, received $29,474 of the total distribution. Lynch said, while Ayden, with a population of 3,890, received $22,525.

Other Pitt towns, their populations and receipts included: Grifton (Pitt's share), 2,190, $12,681; Winterville, 2,130, $12,334; Bethel, 1,900, $11,002; Simpson, 530, $3,069; Fountain, 450, $2,805; Grimesland, 420, $2,432; and Falkland, 130, $752.

Total population for Pitt County was listed as 79,800 with the county itself receiving $462,097 of the total proceeds and the balance allotted to the ten towns in the county.

Greene County, figured on an ad valorem basis, received $44,830 in net distributions with $42,064 going to the county itself and the balance allotted to Snow Hill, $2,174; Hookerton, $382; and Walstonburg, $208.

Lenoir County received $514,688 based on ad valorem tabulations with $395,622 going to the county and the rest distributed to Kinston, $107,049; La Grange, $8,899; Pink Hill, $2,885; and Grifton (Lenoir's share), $232.

Martin County, figured on an ad valorem levy, received $163,661 with $132,927 going to the county and the balance allotted to nine towns. Receiving shares were: Williamston, $23,834; Robertsonville, $4,222; Jamesville, $961; Oak City, $607; Hamilton, $484; Everetts, $326; Parmele, $165; Bear Grass, $69; and Hassell, $63.

Beaufort County totals, figured on a per capita basis, included $319,721 in total distributions with $236,365 of the total allotted to the county itself. Seven towns shared in the balance, including: Washington, $55,411; Belhaven, $14,122; Aurora, $4,248; Chocowinity, $3,650; Washington Park, $3,291; Bath, $1,316; and Pantego, $1,316.

Life Almost Back To Normal In Greenville After Big Snow

by REBECCA BUFFALO
Reflector Staff Writer

Life in Greenville returned to almost normal as residents went back to work and school after some five and a half inches of snow brought things to a halt Monday.

Pitt County schools remained closed Tuesday due to a few bad road conditions in the Fountain, Belvoir, Stokes and Bethel areas, according to Ott Alford, school superintendent.

"We want to let the conditions get a little less hazardous on the campuses," Alford commented. "Chances are, we'll be back in operation Wednesday."

Greenville City Schools opened an hour later Tuesday, said Greenville City Schools superintendent Glenn Cox.

"As far as we know, there have been no problems," Cox noted. He pointed out that operations at J. H. Rose High School were going along smoothly Tuesday. Rose was used as an evacuation center for residents evacuated during the fire at Coastal Chemical Company early Monday morning.

Cox also said that the meeting with the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools would go on as planned Wednesday at the Ramada Inn. The board of education meeting was rescheduled for Thursday evening, according to Cox.

The Greenville Utilities Commission had no weather related problems Monday, according to Malcolm Green. Green pointed out that the Commission had noted heavy electrical usages during February, and again reminded GUC customers to practice conservation.

All primary main roads in eastern North Carolina were termed passable but icy in spots, according to a spokesman at the Highway Patrol Division in Greenville. A traveler's advisory was issued for secondary roads in the western part of the state, where ice and snow still remained.

Gentry Mills, superintendent of the streets division, Greenville Public Works Department, said that two sand trucks were assigned to the Greenville area Tuesday, looking for icy patches.

Six trucks and two front end loaders were assigned to the downtown Greenville area to haul away snow, according to Mills. Motor graders were assigned to the residential areas to smooth out icy patches.

All trash collection schedules were working toward being on schedule, said Mills. He pointed out that it was hard for sanitation workers to get to some collection cans because of the snow build-up in some yards.

"They're doing the best they can," said Mills of the sanitation and road workers. He noted that one motor grader operator worked 28 hours straight during the two days, trying to help Greenville residents get back in a normal routine.

Charles Snell, division engineer for the state Department of Transportation, reported that all paved roads were cleared to a "passable" extent as of Tuesday, with motor graders working on dirt roads Tuesday. The dirt roads should be passable as of Wednesday, according to Snell.

East Carolina University students tried to return to school Monday at 11 a.m., when the classes resumed. However, many students who were in the western part of the state were unable to get back to Greenville until Tuesday.

ECU Dean of Men Jim Mallory stated that the university absence policy called for agreements between professors and students in this kind of case, but felt that there would be no problems with excuses.

"Many staff personnel and professors were unable to come yesterday," said Mallory. "I don't envision any problems (with excuses)."

Charles Russell of Pitt Technical Institute said that classes resumed regular schedule Tuesday after being closed Monday.

"I've heard of no problems," said Russell of the Monday closing. "We announced the closing on radio and television Sunday evening. We probably would have had to close with the chemical fire Monday anyway."

The Greenville Utilities Commission Water Department reported Monday's high

Sue May at the Pitt County Extension Office told us she would run a request for information about quilting frames in the newsletter her office sends out.

Will Prosecute Hundreds In Baltimore's Looting

BALTIMORE (AP) —

Authorities say they will prosecute all 303 persons arrested in connection with 1,335 looting incidents that occurred after a record 20-inch snowfall crippled the city. An additional 265 persons were arrested for violating an all-night curfew.

Mayor William Schaefer imposed the 10-hour curfew, from 7 p.m. Monday to 5 a.m. today, "in the interest of public safety" after widespread looting broke out Monday.

About 100 Maryland State Police helped city police through the night.

By early this morning, police spokesman Dennis Hill said 568 persons had been arrested — 303 on suspicion of looting and 265 for curfew violations.

Curfew violations are a misdemeanor, and often violators are merely taken to a police station and then sent home. State's Attorney William Swisher advised officers to charge each person arrested in looting incidents with breaking and entering, which carries a maximum sentence of 10 years in jail.

Police said liquor and grocery stores, bakeries, auto supplies and furniture stores had been hit.

Looters were seen lugging a refrigerator down Pennsylvania Avenue. In the Oldtown area, people carried armloads of clothing still on hangers through the streets, the Baltimore Sun reported.

The looters included two middle-aged women hauling a large piece of furniture, still in its cardboard packaging. One woman said she didn't know what it was, "but whatever it is, I'm going to take it home."

The owner of The Furniture Connection said: "They took everything — television sets, color consoles, everything." The owner, who declined to be identified, said he and two assistants were going to spend the night in the store.

"We've got enough ammunition for an army. Machine guns. Everything," he said.

Shortly after the curfew went into effect, police broadcast a report that the Central District jail, the largest in the city, was filled with looters.

"I think they declared World War III on us," said

Officer David Buschman of the Western District, where 37 persons were arrested before dark.

Police Commissioner Donald Pomerleau donned a cowboy hat, found a horse and joined members of his mounted police division, reportedly helping break up at least one looting party.

Elsewhere, police plowed through the snow in four-wheel-drive vehicles driven by National Guardsmen.

AFTERMATH — The smoldering ruins of Coastal Chemical Corp. still burns early this morning after firemen from about 15 Pitt County volunteer fire departments fought the blaze for more than 14 hours. The blaze caused Pitt County and Greenville residents to flee their homes because of

Carter Defends Arms Treaty Effort

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — President Carter offered his first broad defense of a U.S.-Soviet arms treaty today but warned the Kremlin that interference in Iran could jeopardize Russian relations with the United States.

Delivering a major speech outlining his administration's foreign policy at the midpoint of his term, Carter also revealed that, as a result of the Chinese invasion of Vietnam, the United States has "consulted directly with leaders around the world."

"austere" budget proposal.

He said the nation must continue to meet the needs of the poor and elderly, but added "there is a clear limit on the ability of the American people to pay higher and higher taxes to finance new programs."

The president, emphasizing the need for restraint in writing the budget, which Congress is now taking up, said "the inevitable pressures to spend just a little more here or a little more there for someone's pet project or someone's favorite interest group have begun. I am determined to fight those pressures."

Speaking on the strategic arms limitation treaty, which has been under negotiation for more than six years by three administrations, he said agreement "has been reached on most of the major components of a sound and verifiable... treaty."

Asked whether this meant the treaty had finally been completed, White House press secretary Jody Powell said, "We're still not there yet. There are still some details, some important details, to be worked out."

Carter stated that he would not let competition between Washington and Moscow "overwhelm possibilities for cooperation." But, in comments clearly meant for the Kremlin, he said interference in Iran by other nations "will have serious consequences and will affect our broader relationship with them."

The president said that while the United States does not oppose change, change can have a "darker side when countries in turbulence provide opportunities for exploitation by outsiders who seek not to advance human aims but rather to extend their own power and position at the expense of others."

Carter also revealed he will consult with Congress on additional military assistance for Asian allies "to stand by our friends and help meet their security needs." Powell, without offering any details, said this aid would go to Singapore, Malaysia, Thailand, Indonesia and the Philippines, the members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations.

Summing up what he called the nation's role and purpose in a world of change and turbulence, Carter said: "We provide the bedrock of global security and economic advance in a world of unprecedented change and conflict."

Aides have spent considerable time recently defending what one called Carter's "careful, thoughtful approach" in foreign policy, under attack in Congress.

Carter took up the challenge today, referring to the leftist guerrilla assault on the U.S. Embassy in Tehran last Wednesday and stating:

"Those who argue that the United States should or could intervene directly to thwart these events (in Iran) are wrong about the realities of Iran. So, too, are those who spout propaganda that protecting our own citizens is tantamount to direct intervention."

On the arms limitation treaty, Carter said it would establish equal numbers of strategic arms for both the United States and the Soviet Union, reversing a Soviet numerical advantage established in the 1972 arms treaty.

He said the pact would require Moscow to destroy 250 missiles or bombers, 10 percent of its strategic force, and would provide limits on new types of weapons.

Without the pact, he said, "the Soviet Union could have nearly one-third more strategic forces by 1985" than with it.

The president brought along a makeup woman, Lillian Brown, "to see if we can catch up the damage" caused by a tumble Carter took while cross-country skiing Monday, spokesman Powell said.

The president cut his lip and forehead in the accident near his retreat at Camp David, Md.

Deaf Ears To U.S. Complaint

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Afghanistan rejected as "completely baseless" the U.S. government's charge that it mishandled the abduction of U.S. Ambassador Adolph Dubs and caused his death.

Vice Premier Hafizullah Amin, who is also Afghanistan's foreign minister, told a news conference Monday he saw no grounds for blame for any aspect of his government's handling of the kidnapping Feb. 14.

It was the government's first public reaction to a strong American protest that Afghan authorities ignored the advice of the U.S. Embassy to avoid force in trying to free Dubs from the hotel room where he was being held.

"We consider the protest completely baseless because we took measures with a high spirit of humanity and purpose of saving the life of the ambassador," Amin said.

"No American in the entire world can tell me to allow the terrorists to assassinate the ambassador and not act."

Dubs was killed during a gun battle between police and four men who took him from his car and demanded the release of a political prisoner identified only as Bahrudin Bahes.

Amin said Dubs refused an offer three months ago of a police escort despite a warning from security forces that he was being followed.

He also denied Soviet officials were advising the police at the hotel despite reports from diplomatic sources that two Soviet police advisers and Soviet embassy security official Sergei Bakhturin conferred with the Afghans during the 3½-hour siege.

Amin said the government has not established the identity of the kidnappers, all of whom were reported slain. He added that he hoped his government's condolences to the U.S. government for the tragedy would lessen the strain between them.

More Ready To End Bias

WASHINGTON (AP) — Discrimination against blacks is still prevalent in the United States, but Americans are more ready to root out racial biases than some might believe, pollster Louis Harris says a new survey indicates.

Poll results, released today at a meeting of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, shows "the readiness of the American people to make new strides forward in reducing and eliminating prejudice is far greater than is commonly assumed by the establishment," Harris said.

For example, he said, large percentages of blacks and whites say they oppose busing school children for racial purposes. But, he added, of the 35 percent of black families and the 10 percent of white families whose children have been bused, majorities say it worked out "fully satisfactorily."

And 53 percent of whites believe that within five years "most black and white children will be going to school together," he said.

He made his comments in a speech prepared for release at the meeting today in Washington.

The nationwide poll by Louis Harris and Associates Inc. and prompted by the NCCJ, was financed in part by business and labor groups, Harris said.

Boys Crushed By A Snowplow

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — Two young brothers were crushed beneath a snowplow Monday afternoon, authorities said.

The driver of the snowplow, Dorus Flowers, was taken to Richmond Memorial Hospital for treatment of shock. No charges were filed.

According to investigators, William Robert Bowles Jr., 12, and Charles Franklin Bowles, 10, were riding tandem on a bicycle behind the snowplow on a city street. Flowers brought the machine to a halt to begin backing up and ran over the brothers, who had run into the back of the plow when it stopped.

Church Holding Baby Contest

A baby contest will be held at Rock Spring F. W. B. Church, Rt. 1, Falkland Highway, Sunday, Feb. 25, 7:30 p.m.

All sponsors and babies are asked to be at the church at 7 p.m.

Each baby will receive one fourth of the money she or he raises for the contest. The largest fund raiser will be crowned king or queen.

For more information, persons may contact Sister Magnolia Daniels, 1011 Ward St., Greenville, 758-4901, or any member of the reserve usher board, who are serving as sponsors. The public is invited to attend.

Jetliner 'Gone'

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — The crew of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's personal Boeing 707 jetliner flew the plane back to Tehran from Morocco today and delivered it to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolutionary forces, a spokesman for the new government said.

The spokesman said the crew "hijacked" the plane but he would give no details. He said the crew was escorted to Khomeini's headquarters.

The shah was at the controls of the plane, which he had named Shahin or Shah's Falcon, when he and Empress Farah left for Egypt on Jan. 16. After a visit to President Anwar Sadat, the royal couple took the plane to Morocco, where they and the rest of their family are now guests of King Hassan II in Rabat.

Snow Cancels Recital Date

The recital by Gordon Stout, marimbist, scheduled for Wednesday, Feb. 21 in the A. J. Fletcher Music Center Recital Hall, has been cancelled.

Stout, a resident of Maryland, has been snowed in at his home there and is unable to come to Greenville for the recital.

No information is available at this time relative to the possible rescheduling of the recital, which was to be a joint one with ECU faculty pianist Donna Coleman.

Couple Lost Home To Blaze This Morning

FALKLAND — The home of Ricky and Cookie Hamill at Dupree's Crossroads near here was destroyed by fire this morning.

Pitt County Fire Control said a neighbor spotted the house "already in a rolling blaze" at 8:20 a. m. No one was in the house. Both the Hamills had already gone to work, leaving their two children with relatives, it was reported.

The Falkland Fire Department was assisted by Belvoir

Station House, Red Oak, Bell Arthur, Farmville and Fountain. The "quick dump" system was used to extinguish the blaze, the Fire Marshal's office said, but the two-story frame house was already gutted too badly to save it or any of its contents.

One Falkland fireman, Mike Cobb, was reported to have suffered to some degree from smoke inhalation.

Other homes that burned in the county during the weekend were those of Eugene Swindell in Bethel Saturday and Kenneth Briley's in the Staton House Fire District. Bethel, Stokes and Pictious assisted Staton House in fighting the fire at the Briley home located on State Road 1517.

A duplex in Grimesland also burned yesterday, but no details were available. It was going on at the same time as the Coastal Chemical Fire which involved most of the firefighters of the county, the Fire Marshal's office reported.

Bella Abzug—'I'm Gonna Remain In Public Life'

By CATHY BOOTH
NEW YORK (UPI) — Although he fired her weeks ago, Jimmy Carter's grin still beams from Bella Abzug's office wall.

But where a graffiti artist might have added a mustache, an office wag has inked in the distinctive outline of the former congresswoman's trademark — a floppy hat — atop the president's head.

The Carter photograph remains in its honored place, along with those of China's Great Wall, feminist Gloria Steinem and a batch of signed cartoons, despite Mrs. Abzug's ouster Jan. 12 as co-chairwoman of the president's National Advisory Committee on Women.

"It wasn't personal, though they tried to use my image as a coverup," she says, pacing about the Wall Street area office. "Fundamentally, it was the committee under attack."

The committee's duty, as she saw it, was to comment on all issues that affect women. Carter apparently wanted the advisory group to stick to "women's issues."

"He drew a line around which women were capable of commenting — ERA, abortion and the like — but not the budget or the economy. They were only for grownups, not women."

Yet women, she argues, comprise 41 percent of the work force, all on the lowest rung of the economic ladder. Eighty percent of all working women are in the lowest paying jobs. A majority live below the poverty level.

"Carter's budget is the clearest statement of our nation's values — that programs directly affecting women are still not the top priority, even though they are the majority of its poor," she says.

Carter did not take well to what he called the committee's "lecturing" about economic priorities and fired Mrs. Abzug from the women's advisory committee. Twenty-four other members quickly quit in protest.

"Apparently there's a double standard as to how you rid yourself of committee heads," says the banished Mrs. Abzug. "(Bert) Lance was accused of wrongdoing; all women have to do is speak up on the issues."

Yet Carter apparently has not lost out with women in Mrs. Abzug's estimation.

The Equal Rights Amendment, which Carter supports, remains the "heart of their consensus," but she predicts women will organize more carefully for the 1980 elections to look at candidates and their positions on the economy, as well as ERA and abortion.

For the flamboyant former congresswoman herself, the firing could well be politically fatal. A loser in her last three electoral outings in New York, she used the president's committee as a national forum for her ideas.

Yet she does not seem worried.

"I'm out of it!" she laughs breezily. "The phone's ringing off the wall. Jeez, who would have believed it a couple of weeks ago?"

Reporters who had been calling three weeks earlier to do New Year's stories on her trimmer-by-45-pounds figure (a story idea she considered idiotic), were now calling to talk about women's issues (a subject she warms to immediately.)

Her calendar is a storm of appointments and appearances: testifying before a congressional committee, appearing on television shows, writing, lecturing, attending party meetings, lobbying for ERA, organizing a "tight inflation" group.

"I'm a person with some pretty strong ideas," she says. "and I'm gonna continue to have them. I'm gonna remain in public life, whether in public office or not."

But the question on most everyone's mind now is whether or not Bella Savitzky Abzug, the daughter of a Russian Jewish immigrant, will seek elective office again.

"I'm working out my options," she says, dropping hints of a possible radio or television job, some writing, some lawyering, but never denying her yearning for Congress.

Always in motion, she ticks off her Congressional accomplishments while shuffling incessantly through a pile of overstuffed satchels stacked on her office sofa (making it of little use to visitors).

"I was the author of the Sunshine Law, co-author of the Privacy act. I was the first to expose the fact that the government was reading people's mail illegally...." In the middle of this, she stops to answer the phone — still standing — and begs a few sheets of a reporter's paper to take notes.

Afterwards, the storm of activity subsides. She sits and leans back.

"Of all the things I've done — my 25 years in law, my activities in the peace and women's movement — I think that I did my best work in Congress."

A product of the 40's labor movement, the 50's anti-McCarthyism drive, the 60's anti-Vietnam demonstrations, Bella Abzug went to the House of Representatives in 1970. In 1976, she gave that up for a chance at the Senate.

But in Daniel Patrick Moynihan, Mrs. Abzug found an opponent her equal in the parry and thrust of political infighting — and lost. A year later, she finished a dismal fourth in a seven-way primary for New York City's mayoralty.

In her last attempt to return to the House, a relatively unknown Republican, S. William Green — using massive amounts of money — defeated her in Manhattan's so-called "Silk Stocking District."

Political writers wrote a sheaf of obits for her career, blaming its demise on her personality — an idea she finds sexist.

"When a woman is strong, she's acerbic, she's aggressive, she's belligerent. I'll grant," she says with a smile. "I've shown a lot of forcefulness, but the press has never been accustomed to politicians that are that open and particularly a woman politician who is open."

FORMER CONGRESSWOMAN. Bella Abzug predicts women will organize more carefully for the 1980 elections. (AP Laserphoto)

Dutch Present New Cheese To Market

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

It has been many years since I visited the picturesque little nation of the Netherlands, but I still have a vivid memory of the many cheeses it offers.

Holland has been making this dairy product for many centuries and has a wide selection to choose from, far wider than many foreigners realize.

The wheel-shaped Gouda is well known to Americans. So is the bright-red, round Edam. That red wax, incidentally, is a protective covering for export use only. In its natural habitat, Edam is a yellow-brown hue.

Other Dutch cheeses, some of them farm-made, are rarely exported. They include Leyden, flavored with cumin seeds, Friesland, spiced with cloves, the tangy, blue-veined Bluefort and aromatic Kermhenn, made from a centuries-old recipe.

The Dutch enjoy their cheese in many ways. They top cubes of it with ginger. They also combine equal amounts of grated cheese and soft butter, creaming them together into small balls and then rolling the pellets in dark-rye bread crumbs.

Cheese plays an important role in the Dutch breakfast, since it goes well with creamy butter and the numerous Dutch breads, like dark rye, black bread and spiced rolls.

Holland's cheeses have been sold in the market places of Europe since the 12th century. By the 1500s, they had reached not only Germany and the Baltic states, but also France, Spain and Portugal.

Historians tell us that when the Pilgrims set sail aboard the Mayflower, they took along a supply of round Dutch cheeses.

Now, centuries later, the Dutch have brought forth a new cheese which they call Holland. Rindless and lemon-hued, it is made from part-skim milk, and the Dutch are introducing it abroad.

Departing from the customary wheels and spheres, this new entry is made in rectangular blocks. I sampled some at a reception given by the Netherlands' consul general in New York and found its delicate flavor appealing.

I also noted that Holland melts quickly and lends itself easily to cooking. Here's a recipe the consulate gave me for cheese steak rolls.

16 slices old pickle, about 2½ inches long
8 sticks of Holland about ½ inch wide by 2½ inches long
8 sandwich-size, thin-sliced steaks
8 toothpicks
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon cooking oil
18-ounce can tomato sauce
1 tablespoon fresh dill
1 pinch mace
Salt and pepper

Place pickle slice on either side of a cheese stick and roll tightly in a slice of steak. Secure with toothpick. In skillet on top of stove at medium heat, melt butter, add oil and brown steak rolls. Place steak rolls in baking dish, pour tomato sauce over and sprinkle with dill and mace. Salt and pepper to taste. Cover baking dish and place in 350-degree oven, baking 60 to 90 minutes till steaks are tender. Top each steak roll with spoonful of sauce and serve. Serves 4. Good with a robust, red Burgundy wine.

She Wants To Retire From His Retirement

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My husband recently retired, and he is driving me crazy. Julius and I have been married for 44 years and we're both in good health. He was always so involved in his business he had no time to develop any hobbies. He worked and I took care of the house. Now he's home and underfoot all day supervising the cleaning, laundry and cooking!

When the phone rings, Julius runs to answer it. If it's for me he has to know who it was and what was said. When my bridge club meets here, he hangs around listening to every word. The ladies feel inhibited and uncomfortable.

I find myself looking for excuses to get out of the house alone. (Julius even goes with me when I go marketing!) I love him, but I hate to think of spending the rest of my life under these conditions. So what can I do about Julius? FRUSTRATED IN FLORIDA

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Your problem isn't Julius—it's your reluctance to level with him. Tell him what's on your mind. Gently, lovingly, honestly and IMMEDIATELY! Then together investigate activities for retirees in your community. (Florida is loaded with them.) Search out other couples like yourself. Get involved in community service, politics and volunteerism. Enroll in adult education classes and discover the arts, music, painting or gardening. Get into nutrition, meditation or travel! There's a whole new world out there just waiting to be discovered. And don't forget to thank God you still have your health and each other!

DEAR ABBY: I work in a very pleasant office and enjoy my job. My boss is kind and friendly, but he's fat, incredibly dull, and old enough to be my father.

He often asks me to have lunch with him, but I usually refuse. I accepted a few times last year only because I didn't want to hurt his feelings. But I do not enjoy spending my lunch hours with a boring old man.

Another girl I work with is having the same problem with him. You could help us both by answering this. Are we obligated to go to lunch with him? FED UP WITH LUNCH

DEAR FED UP: No. Lunching with the boss does not come with the territory.

CONFIDENTIAL TO VIRGO IN CAMDEN, N.J.: Up front is best. Tell him you're gay. If he can't handle it, it's HIS problem.

DEAR ABBY: I read with interest the letter concerning the disposition of Grandma's personal effects not provided for in her will.

I submit the perfect plan used by us four children when Mother's estate was settled. Rule one was that anything given to Mother by any of us went back to the donor.

Rule two was that all items not specifically mentioned in Mother's will (dishes, silver, jewelry, furniture, etc.) would be auctioned off to the four of us. No money was used—just bookkeeping; the amount of the winning bid was deducted from the winner's cash inheritance. (Mother's will stated that we were all to share equally in her estate.) That way, everyone got exactly what he or she wanted—or the cash equivalent. W.C. PICKARD: CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA

CONFIDENTIAL TO "KEEP ME NAMELESS IN ORANGE CITY, FLA": Please send me your name and address. I have help and hope for you. I agree with Orson Welles, who said, "Gluttony is not a secret vice."

Cents-Off Coupons Used

Nearly four out of five American families use cents-off coupons to help pare down food costs.

More than 1,000 manufacturers now offer coupons and their face value in 1977 totaled over $500, according to NCSU agriculture extension specialists.

The biggest coupon clippers are middle income households and families with higher grocery bills.

However, higher income shoppers are increasing their use of coupons.

Safety, Security Products Increasing

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

CHICAGO (UPI) — The purchase of smoke alarms for home use has grown from nothing seven to 10 years ago to more than 10 million annually, says one manufacturer.

It is part of a very strong trend in home security and safety products generally, said Brian J. Abdella, vice president-marketing for Westclox, one of many manufacturers who showed such devices at the 70th semi-annual National Housewares Exhibition in Chicago last month.

Abdella said consumers' concerns with security and safety also extend to break-ins, theft, muggings and other crimes.

"The FBI reports more than three million burglaries a year, and they imply many break-ins go unreported," Abdella said. "Conceivably we may have as many as four or five million. That means 10-to 20-million people a year are affected by break-ins alone."

"You get two or three break-ins in a neighborhood and people get paranoid about it," he added. "We are involved in consumer attitude studies in New York and Chicago. Statistics show crime has moved to the suburbs."

National surveys reflect the same changes, which obviously accounts for the surge in introductions and promotions of safety and security products at the January trade show — everything from hand-held devices to scare off muggers to lights and alarms for indoor and outdoor use.

Other products included: — A portable, combined smoke and burglar alarm for use almost anywhere: hotels, motels, recreation vehicles, dormitories, boats. The unit hangs over a door and requires no tools for installation. It sounds separate alarms for fire and intrusion warnings. — An electric detector that warns of natural gas and propane leaks.

— A portable, steel strong box with a flip-up lid designed for storage in furniture drawers. To lower the lid and remove the box requires use of a combination lock with three digits set by the box owner.

— A smoke alarm with a wireless transmitter detector that sounds a bedside alarm if fire breaks out in another room.

— A battery-operated alarm designed to alert people when an electrical power failure occurs. The device plugs into any standard 110 volt receptacle and sounds a loud alarm when normal current is interrupted. The manufacturer's suggested uses include monitoring of life-support systems in sickrooms, warning sleeping householders against sump pump failures in basements and guarding against food spoilage in refrigeration systems.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

A southern newspaper has, as one of its features, a column devoted to exposing the sanitation or the lack of it in local restaurants.

The list of improprieties consisted of the following: Food not covered in refrigerator.

Improper dishwashing practices.

Hot dogs soaking in water in refrigerator.

Tank top broken in women's restroom.

Restrooms not labeled.

Cutting board not smooth.

Thermometers needed in refrigerator.

Back door open to flies.

Employees working without proper hair restraint.

Carbon build-ups on pans.

Corroded vent fan.

No soap or towels at sink.

Outdated buttermilk possibly unwholesome.

I had to stop reading. The list had just described my kitchen.

Keeping a kitchen clean is like trying to tidy up after a sandstorm. Besides, I employ cheap labor. My own kids. Somehow you don't get the pride from them that you'd get from, say, a transient Mexican alien.

The other night, I walked into the kitchen with a clipboard and made out my own list of health violations.

Dog drinking water out of Old Fashioned glass.

Wet finger running around rim of mashed potatoes pan.

Hair dryer on countertop.

Half-eaten sandwich and glass on back of commode.

Ice cream in carton at room temperature.

Melted ice cubes on floor creating safety hazard.

Fight among kitchen help using cold, hard peas as ammunition... possible danger to cook.

Loading dishwasher while diner is still eating off plate.

Emptying raw garbage into wastebasket with no plan of removing it from kitchen.

As I was writing down the violations, my mother came in, her eyes panning the kitchen area slowly. "This place is a dump!" she said.

My face brightened. "Thank you! I thought you were going to be sarcastic."

Much Was Done In Emergency

A fire of the magnitude of that which struck the Coastal Chemical Co. early Monday morning is terrible at any time.

Coming as it did on a bitter cold night in the wake of the worst snow and ice storm of recent years added greatly to the problems of all concerned.

Because of the chemical nature of the fire public officials decided that certain areas should be evacuated. This was done and, while preliminary planning for such a situation might not have been of the best, a lot of people did a huge amount of work in a hurry.

First of all, most of the county's firemen had to report for duty to fight the blaze. Then law enforcement officers and rescue personnel had to institute an evacuation plan on short notice.

School officials were quick to act to open shelters for those who had to leave their homes and various businesses and organizations responded to provide necessities for those at the evacuation centers.

There have been questions raised about civil preparedness direction for the evacuation, and certainly this needs to be studied so that we can do a better job in the future.

Nevertheless, there were many people who performed well in an emergency situation including those evacuated, and we can take pride in the way those involved reacted to a potentially dangerous situation.

Heavy Risks In Southeast Asia Clash

The world faces an extremely dangerous situation in the Chinese invasion of Vietnam.

The Soviet Union is closely allied to Vietnam and could be expected to take action if the war continues.

China says its warfare is designed to teach Hanoi a lesson, rather than to capture territory.

We hope this is the case and the Chinese troops will withdraw shortly.

Farmers Gain Strength

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — There aren't any farmers from North Carolina in the Washington protest because things are looking pretty good down on the Tar Heel farm, says Agricultural Commissioner Jim Graham.

When you look at how North Carolina ranks among the 50 states, at last year's income figures, and especially at what the future holds, Graham is encouraged.

But especially, he is happy at the "strong, viable, and diverse economy we are building in North Carolina — a balance between industry, recreational activities, transportation and agriculture.

"That is why we don't have any of our people up there in Washington pulling up trees and burning things", Graham told a legislative committee.

Take hog farmers, for instance. Several years ago a statewide association meeting drew only a couple of hundred representatives.

This year the number topped 700.

New Cars

"Five years ago they were riding in pickup trucks; now they're driving Mercedes and Imperials", Graham said.

Pork, as a matter of fact, leads Graham's agenda for the future. "That's where our next big push in North Carolina will be."

But things are looking good for other farming operations. Beef has gone through four bad years, but a trimmed production nationwide and Tar Heel farmers learning more about the business means "for those with good operations, they can't help but enjoy a profit in the next four years."

Graham told the Senate Agriculture Committee that diversity is the key to prosperity in agricultural economics. Those states which have all their farming in one key product are the ones hard hit by changes in weather or the economy.

Of course, North Carolina has been in that situation with tobacco — and with cotton — in years long past.

"But we are now in a position that if anything happens to tobacco God forbid hogs can take up the slack", Graham remarked.

BILL NOBLITT

Meanwhile, strong diversification continues in other areas: North Carolina now ranks first nationally in tobacco, farm forest products, and sweet potatoes; second in chickens, cucumbers for pickles; third in turkeys and peanuts; fourth in broilers, eggs, and blueberries; and fifth in apples and peppers.

Total farm exports produce nearly a billion, ranking the state eighth in the nation. And that is where a lot of future growth can take place, Graham says.

Effort

Graham is serving this year as president of the national association of state agricultural commissioners, and said that in his contacts nationwide he finds envy for North Carolina's aggressive farm programs and willingness to invest public money in such programs.

He detailed a variety of those activities operated by his agency such as farmers' markets, plant and soil analysis, animal research, seed and fertilizer inspection and certification, animal grading, and nine state-owned research farms.

But there are some threatening signs on the horizon which need attention now. The rapid growth of urban areas taking farmlands, and the press for environmental regulation by people who don't know farming "can put us out of business unless we work hard to keep the farms strong," Graham said.

HARDLY THE BEST SORT OF TIMING!

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Burger The Boss Man

WASHINGTON — Warren Earl Burger, fourth chief justice of the United States, will mark his tenth year in office in June. He has served long enough to permit this critical judgment: He is not the most brilliant, or most innovative, or most quotable man who ever held the post, but as boss man of the federal judiciary he is the best thing that ever happened to our courts.

The Chief turned up, in Atlanta a week or so ago to deliver his annual State of the Judiciary address before the American Bar Association. In his usual imperious fashion, he ordered TV cameramen out of the hall — Burger is the stuffiest chief justice in history — and then he covered the whole judicial scene.

None of his predecessors — at least none who comes readily to mind — ever shared Burger's intense interest in the problems of judicial administration. His immediate predecessor, Earl Warren, was bored by the very thought. Neither Vinson nor Stone is remembered in this regard. But Burger has not hesitated, even when hesitation might have been the prudent course, to let his views be known on litigation and legislation.

In his Atlanta speech, he returned to several themes he has harped on before. On the question of bail, for example, Burger made it clear that he believes the cause of "bail reform" has gone too far and needs to be brought back to reality. The 1964 and 1966 laws that eased bail requirements "responded to a need that was perceived at that time." The ensuing years have exposed vexing problems that were not anticipated. Now it appears that a high percentage of persons released on bail already have charges pending against them. An impression is created that habitual criminals can commit two or more crimes "for the price of one."

Burger would take a much harder line toward persons charged with serious offenses. In another area, he also would take a harder line against lawyers who come into the trial courts ill-prepared in the arts of advocacy.

This is one of the Chief's pet campaigns, to demand specialized training and greater expertise for trial counsel. He makes an equation of law and medicine. Without specialized training in surgery, no mere graduate of a medical school is permitted to perform a kidney transplant or a herniotomy. By the same token, Burger insists, no mere graduate of a law school should be permitted in a courtroom until he has earned his boards in the techniques of trial practice.

(In passing, I hazard the guess that every newspaper

Other Editors Say Staggered Terms

(The Shelby Daily Star)

A constitutional amendment pending in the General Assembly deserves some comment, as much for what it would do as for what it wouldn't.

In essence, the amendment would — if approved by both houses of the legislature and if then approved by voters in a statewide referendum — allow legislators to serve four-year terms. That is, the senators and representatives would be elected every four years, allowing them to serve twice as long without facing the voters.

We've heard the arguments about how such a situation would supposedly create better government, and we know, as every voter knows, that the four-year terms would substantially reduce legislator dependency on the voters.

And, frankly, we could sit here and make a lot of fun of the proposal.

But we aren't, at least not right now. Indeed we tend to see some merit in legislators' serving longer terms. At the same time, however, all legislators shouldn't be elected in the same year. Their terms should be staggered, so that one-half the House of Representatives and one-half the Senate would be elected every two years. The first time around, half the senators and half the representatives would be elected to two-year terms and half to four-year terms. No senatorial or House district should be forced to endure all two-year terms that first time, however.

After the first election, the two-year legislators would be up for election to four-year terms. Four years after the first election under the change, the four-year legislators would be up for election.

That would give the kind of continuity in the General Assembly that could serve the state efficiently, but also give voter notice to all the legislators what voters are thinking about. If a legislator with time left to serve understands that the voters have kicked half the Legislature out, he, too, may change his tune.

The four-year term proposal should not be approved as it stands, but a staggered four-year term for legislators deserves considerable attention and thoughtfulness.

$50,000 For Each Factory Job

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Beneath every factory job in America is a foundation of capital, more than $50,000 of it by even conservative estimates, but even that may not be enough.

That, at least, is the contention of many economists, who equate the country's sluggish productivity growth with both a lack of capital and a reluctance of manufacturers to make sizeable capital commitments.

The capital lack, it is said, results from a relatively low savings rate, one that fell well below 5 percent in 1977 and which remained under 6 percent for most of 1978.

Most countries greatly exceeded that rate. In the past 15 years, for example, Germany's savings rate has never fell below 10 percent of disposable income. And Japan's rate in 1974 topped 25 percent.

The reluctance to make commitments, the economists explain, emanates from a fear that the return on investments may be inadequate.

And, of course, the two factors feed on themselves, because without savings to be invested in upgrading factories and techniques, people and companies consequently earn less — and have less to save.

It's been happening, and productivity experts say it is one reason why the rate at which U.S. factories become more efficient is one of the lowest of the entire industrialized world, half that of many countries.

And it is falling. From 1955 to 1965, nonfarm output per manhour rose at a yearly rate of 2.6 percent. From 1965 to 1973 it rose less than 1 percent. In 1978 it fell to 0.4 percent. It might disappear.

The shrinkage explains much about the U.S. trade imbalance, the budget deficits, the rise of household debt, inflation, unemployment and many of the economic ills that have become almost daily front page news.

Without productivity increases, it is all but impossible for living standards to rise.

All this gives significance to U.S. Commerce Department figures that show capital formation as a percent of output lags badly behind France, Germany, Italy, The Netherlands, United Kingdom, Japan and Canada.

From 1968 through the first quarter of 1978, U.S. capital formation, or savings invested in productive

Baker: Debate Is Due

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) —

Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. says it's time to make the Democratic administration's foreign policy a legitimate subject for partisan political debate.

"Times have changed," said Baker, in urging Republicans to abandon altogether a generation-old belief that "politics stops at the water's edge."

Not that the belief was absolute. Politics moved well beyond the water's edge in debates as long ago as the 1950s over China and Korea. Nevertheless, the Tennessee senator's advice has attracted attention because he is a Republican presidential hopeful.

Even before Baker's call for partisan debate, members of Congress — both Republicans and Democrats — showed little reluctance to criticize President Carter's foreign policy.

Republicans, after all, Baker among them, gave Carter the votes he needed to go ahead with plans to sell jet fighters to Egypt and Saudi Arabia. A majority of Senate Democrats voted against their president's proposal.

Democratic Sen. Frank Church of Idaho, the new chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, is one of the most prominent critics of Carter's Middle East policy.

And Church was joined by Democratic Sens. Richard Stone of Florida and John Glenn of Ohio in questioning the administration's handling of the China-Taiwan issue.

Carter enjoyed a brief respite from congressional criticism of his foreign policy, during the euphoria that followed the Camp David summit. He emerged from the Maryland mountains as the man who had brought two old enemies together and persuaded them to work together for peace in the Middle East.

But the promised peace treaty eludes the principals.

Add to that the collapse of a U.S.-supported regime in Iran, continuing weakness of the dollar abroad, and a feeling among some members of the House and Senate

County Farm Agent R.R. Bennett declared today that a number of Pitt County farmers are planning to attend a meeting tomorrow in Raleigh. The meeting will be sponsored by the North Carolina-Virginia section of the National Cotton Council of America.

The council's purpose is to promote the cotton industry as a whole and to aid in securing better prices for cotton. The North Carolina division is in the organization stages and membership will be composed of producers, ginners, cottonseed crushers, dealers, warehousemen and others handling cotton or cotton products.

The Raleigh meeting will be addressed by Oscar Johnson, president of the National Cotton Council of America.

facilities, ranged from 16.3 percent to 18.4 percent of gross national product. The others topped 20.

Understanding these facts, there is little mystery to the country's economic problems. The mystery, say those who study the underlying causes of economic distress, is why so little is done about them.

In fact, say critics, the mystery is even deeper: Why so much is done to exacerbate the problems. Why, for example, capital formation through savings is discouraged, why spending and debt are encouraged.

But, you say, that's not so. "Every day I read and listen to ads that encourage people to save and invest." Yes, but savings and investments are taxed; debt is government subsidized by making it tax-deductible.

RESPONSIBILITY OF GREAT GIFTS

Alexander Graham Bell, while still a young man, was working with his first experiments with the telephone. He asked his teacher, Joseph Henry, "What could advise me to do; publish the results of these experiments and let others work them out, or attempt to solve the problems myself?"

"You have the germ of a great invention," said Joseph Henry. "Work at it yourself."

There are, of course, very few geniuses in the population at large. Men like Bell or Thomas Edison or Albert Einstein made discoveries enough to keep generations of scientists and workers busy. But, the same basic facts of character operate with these men as with the ordinary run of us. Many a genius languishes and dies because he does not have the willingness to work or the patience to hold out to the end. On the other hand, most of us have a trace of genius ourselves. Like Alexander Graham Bell, we should make the most of it.

Hearing On Vote Plaints

CLINTON, N.C. (AP) — The state Board of Elections has scheduled public hearings March 19 and 20 to investigate charges of election violations in Sampson County.

The board said it will investigate charges involving "any member of the Sampson County Board of Elections" and to "establish the identity of those persons who allegedly effected the registration of voters in apparent violation" of state election laws.

The charges resulted from earlier reports that the elections board had received affidavits charging illegal registration of voters by unauthorized campaign workers.

County Elections Board chairman Raymond Harrell said he received the affidavits and confirmed that he spoke to other voters who said they were registered by campaign workers.

"We have a number of individuals who are anxious to have to testify," said state Elections Director Alex Brock. Asked if the board would subpoena anyone failing to appear voluntarily, Brock said, "Let me say that we are confident that they will testify."

The state board plans to look into possible violations of an elections law that permits that the China-Taiwan issue was mishandled — and, once again, members of Congress view Carter as an outsider with little aptitude for handling the complexities of foreign policy.

And the Vietnam War remains fresh in the memory of Congress. It keeps members of both houses determined to question foreign policy as they now believe they should have during the buildup in Southeast Asia.

So there is no shortage of congressional criticism of foreign policy from Democrats as well as Republicans.

What Baker appears to be seeking is the leadership of a united band of Republicans who can establish themselves as a large and responsible faction offering alternatives to administration policies.

If he succeeds, the senator can use his leadership position not only to question Carter policies but to offer alternatives.

reporter who covers the trial courts would second Burger's proposal. It is a painful business to watch an inexperienced lawyer fumble his client's case away in court.

I am not so sold on another of the Chief's propositions, this one having to do with the problem of the bad federal judge. He would leave it to brother judges within a particular circuit to investigate complaints of misconduct. In my own cynical observation, judges are not to be distinguished from gynecologists: Faced with a malpractice charge, they stick together in bonds of rubber cement. Independent bodies, with heavy representation from the non-professional public, will inspire greater public confidence.

Burger has trod on a few toes and offended a few purists by his unabashed intervention in congressional activities affecting the judiciary. The criticism, in my own view, is misplaced. More than any other person, Burger has put Congress on sible violations of another elections statute. The board is looking into allegations against elections officials who "knowingly make any false or fraudulent entry ... on an election book."

Instead, he accepted a lesser post in the Reagan campaign, probably as his emissary to Congress.

But Keene came close to taking the Bush job and turned it down only because of personal loyalty to Reagan. That he even considered leaving Reagan is the significant fact — reflecting more internal turmoil among Reagan aides and advisers than is generally realized.

Two Are Honored At 'Anthony Party'

Mrs. Johnetta Webb Spilman and Miss Lella Higgs were special guests at the "Susan B. Anthony Birthday Party" held under the sponsorship of the Greenville-Pitt County Women's Political Caucus recently.

The observance marked the 150th anniversary of the birth of one of the leaders of the movement for women's rights.

Mrs. Spilman and Miss Higgs were active in the effort in North Carolina for the ratification of the 19th amendment which made it illegal for the federal government, or any state government, to deny voting rights on the basis of sex. The amendment became law in 1920.

Another guest at the session was Jane Welborn, an 18-year-old high school student, who chose the party at the Board of Elections as the occasion to register for the first time as a voter.

Miss Margaret Register, supervisor of the Pitt Board of Elections, reported that at the present time, there are more women than men registered in the county as voters.

Freddy Jacobson, president of the Women's Political Caucus, presented visitors with a fact sheet on the life of Susan B. Anthony. It was mentioned that the familiar Anthony profile will appear on a new silver dollar which is to be issued in the spring. The new issuance will mark the first time a woman, except for symbolic figures, has been featured on a United States coin.

Offer A Course In Landscaping

A landscape maintenance short course will be offered Tuesday and Wednesday, Feb. 20 and 21, at the American Legion Building, St. Andrews St., Greenville, from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. each day.

The meeting, open to professional landscape personnel, will feature updated technical information from industry representatives and North Carolina State University extension specialists. Some topics to be discussed will include insects, diseases of turf and ornamentals, as well as maintenance of landscaped areas.

A $1 registration fee will be charged at the door. It is stressed that this meeting will be for professional landscapers only, not homeowners or gardeners.

For more information, call Sam Uzzell at the Agricultural Extension Service, 758-1196.

"Losing Hair? Try This At No Risk"

HOUSTON, Texas—If you don't suffer from male pattern baldness, you can now stop your hair loss...and grow more hair.

For years "they said it couldn't be done". But now a firm of laboratory consultants has developed a treatment for both men and women, that is not only stopping hair loss...but is really growing hair!

They don't even ask you to take their word for it. They invite you to try the treatment for 32 days, at their risk, and see for yourself! Naturally, they would not offer this opportunity unless the treatment worked. However, it is impossible to help everyone.

The great majority of cases of excessive hair fall and baldness are the beginning and more fully developed stages of male pattern baldness and cannot be helped.

But, if you are not already slick bald, how can you be sure what is actually causing your hair loss? Even if baldness may seem to "run in the family," it is certainly not proof of the cause of YOUR hair loss. Hair loss caused by sebum can also run in your family, and many other conditions can cause hair loss. If you wait until you are slick bald and your hair roots are dead, you are beyond help. So, if you still have any hair on top of your head, and would like to stop your hair loss and grow more hair...now is the time to do something about it before it's too late.

Loesch Laboratory Consultants, Inc., will supply you with treatment for 32 days—at their risk—if they believe the treatment will help you. Just send them the information listed below. All inquiries are answered confidentially, by mail. ADV.

Poultry
RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina F.O.B. dock broiler market was steady, supplies moderate to short, demand good, weights desirable. The dock weighted average price for this week is 49.17 for small purchases of plant grade broilers picked up at processing plants. Estimated slaughter today was 900,000.

Hens
 Too few sources to report.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market posted a slight gain today, registering no strong reaction to the border conflict between China and Vietnam.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 1.99 to 829.00 by noon.

Gainers slightly outnumbered losers in the mid-morning tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Today's trading was the first for the market since Chinese forces pushed several miles into Vietnam over the weekend.

There were reports today, unconfirmed by U.S. officials, of a pullback by the Chinese. American officials did say they didn't expect the fighting to spread much beyond the border areas.

Analysts noted that the dollar was generally steady in foreign exchange today, reinforcing a cautious but stable atmosphere in the stock market.

American Telephone & Telegraph rose 1/8 to 64 amid expectations that the company will raise its dividend Wednesday.

Electrical Fire Brings State Office Work To Halt Monday

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An electrical fire knocked out power in five state government offices Monday, including the Capitol, and forced more than 100 state workers to evacuate the education and labor departments.

Power remained out for the buildings late Monday, but state officials said crews were working to provide makeshift power and heating in the Capitol. The Capitol will be open Tuesday. Employees in the Education building were told not to report to work Tuesday.

"They told us we'd be lucky if we get back in there Thursday," said Craig Phillips, state superintendent of public instruction, who watched from the street as firefighters used large fans to clear the building of smoke.

Fire was contained to part of the basement of the Education building, but smoke damage was reported up to the second floor of the structure. Smoke also traveled through a tunnel and entered the Labor Department building, said district fire chief J.A. Ennis.

The power failure and fire was caused by a transformer burning out at 1:45 p.m. "The cables leading to it caught on fire and just filled the building with smoke," Ennis said.

The other buildings not damaged by smoke but without power housed the Department of Agriculture, Museum of Natural History, and the governor and his staff in the Capitol. The Agriculture Building, the Museum of Natural History and the Labor Building will be closed Tuesday but will reopen Wednesday, officials said.

Because of the heavy snow that fell Sunday, only about 100 persons, or one-third of the usual number of employees, were in the Education building, Phillips said.

There were no injuries reported.

"We got everybody out before there really was a lot of smoke," Phillips said.

Pirates Nail Monarchs

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

NORFOLK, Va. — Playing one of their best games of the season, the East Carolina University Pirates shot down Old Dominion University last night, 99-84, handing the Monarchs one of their worst defeats of the year.

Old Dominion, going in the game for its 20th win of the year, instead lost its fifth, while the Pirates gained some revenge for an earlier 90-85 overtime loss to the Monarchs on the ECU home court. It marked the second straight year the Pirates have beaten Old Dominion in the Scope.

The Bucs hit 69.7 per cent of their shots in the first half to lead practically all the way, and they continued to hit well in the second half, 55.2, ending up with 62.9 per cent for the game.

Old Dominion, which had plenty of trouble with the Pirate match-up zone defense, shot only 43.3 per cent for the game, and really only threatened once after the first ten minutes of the game.

A technical foul on Coach

Larry Gillman helped the Monarchs cut the lead to 84-77 with two minutes left to play, but the Bucs ran off the next six points in a row to move back out by 13, and wrap up the contest.

The technical came when Gillman charged out on the floor when fistfuffs threatened to erupt between Frank Hobson and ODU's Bobby Conrad. Conrad fouled Hobson on a rebound, and bumped him, but referee John Moreau quickly stepped between the two, and Hobson turned away. As he stepped toward the scorer's table to report the foul, he met Gillman on the floor and slapped him with the technical.

Gillman later said he was trying to make sure that Hobson did not follow the same fate as David Underwood, who was ejected from the game with 9:20 left in the first half, only a minute after he came in the game.

Underwood decked ODU's Tommy Branch for the count of ten. He was asked later what happened, and said that Branch had tagged him on the jaw with a fist, and when he retaliated, he was caught by the officials. A Norfolk newspaper reporter noted that this was the second straight game that a man assigned to Branch had been ejected from the game after the two came to blows, reportedly with Branch hitting the first shot each time.

The contest was very physical, with 46 fouls called, 23 on each team. Of East Carolina's last 20 points, 16 of them came at the foul line. Four players fouled out of the game, three of Old Dominion's and one of East Carolina's, along with Underwood's ejection. Two others finished the game with four fouls.

For a while Monday morning, after a heavy snowfall hit the East Coast Sunday, it was doubtful that the game would be played. Not until midmorning was it decided to make the trip to Norfolk for the game, but it was a decision that made Gillman happy in retrospect.

"They were looking for their 20th win and an ECAC tournament bid with a victory," Gillman said. "It's nice to be able to disappoint someone else for a chance."

"(Oliver) Mack was just great, wasn't he?" Gillman asked. The senior guard hit on 11 of 18 shots from the floor and had 25 points, and accounted for eight assists. His scoring tied him with Jim Modlin for sixth place on the all-time career list with 1,174 points. He now needs 20 against Notre Dame to move into fourth place, his best hope.

"(Herb) Krusen gave us a real lift in the second half, too. And Greg Cornelius played one of his best games. (George) Maynor was outstanding. (Clarence) Miles came off the bench to play very well. He had eight rebounds in 15 minutes, some of them in very crucial situations. He's coming on stronger here at the end of the season."

For Cornelius, it was a fine night. The senior center hit on six of nine shots from the floor, all eight free throws, snatched off 15 rebounds, and scored 20 points in addition to having four assists.

With Cornelius and Miles on the boards, the Pirates totally dominated that phase of the game, 41-27.

"We just couldn't stop them with anything," ODU Coach Paul Webb said. "We did everything we could to stop them, and nothing worked."

The Pirates grabbed the initial lead in the game, and after ODU tied it at two, the Bucs scored the next four points but the Monarchs moved ahead for the only time at 9-8 on a three-point play by Mike Ray and two free throws by Conrad.

But Hobson hit on a jumper, followed by ones by Mack and Maynor to move out to a 14-9 lead, and the Pirates never trailed again.

Near the midpoint of the half, Underwood came in and hit a baseline jumper, followed by two more by Maynor, moving it to 26-19. Underwood then went out as the two teams headed back down the court after the last Maynor basket.

Maynor hit a jumper and Krusen scored on a four-point play, getting undercut for two shots as he made a basket. That ran the score to 34-21, and two minutes later, Kyle Powers hit for the biggest lead of the half, 40-25. The Pirates took a 48-35 lead into intermission.

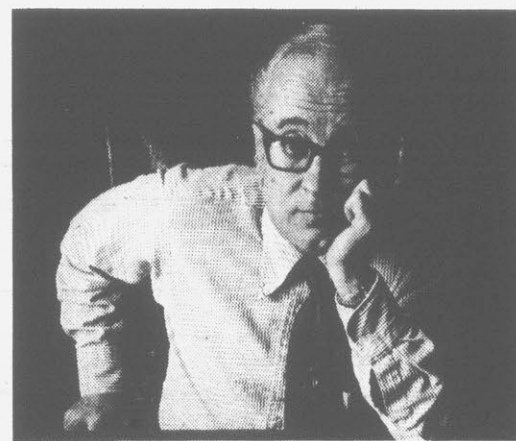

Midway through the second half, two jumpers by Krusen and one by Mack ran the lead to 66-49, and two minutes later, keeps your building from costing too much and taking too long:

Putting up a new building too often means paying more than you expected and taking longer than you thought.

The most frequent reason? No one person is clearly in control. That can cause a basic communication breakdown among all parties involved, resulting in confusion, cost overruns and missed deadlines.

But we offer you a team of construction professionals capable of controlling your entire project...concept to completion.

We can handle all the details—planning, rights-of-way, permits, construction, even landscaping. We'll make sure you get your building on-time and on-budget. And we'll do it using construction methods and building systems that can cut up to 40% off some conventional building timetables.

So if your next building has time and budget limitations, call us. We'll give you both the building and the control you need.

Missouri Chancellor Hits At Title Nine

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Government anti-sex-discrimination guidelines could lead to the disbanding or reduction of college football programs, says Barbara S. Uehling, chancellor of the University of Missouri.

Though the preamble to HEW Secretary Joseph Califano's interpretation of the anti-discrimination law hints at an exemption for football, Uehling said no specific exemption is spelled out.

When the Health, Education and Welfare secretary's interpretations were announced in December, they were widely believed to create an exemption for football from the equal-spending rules.

"Some people have interpreted it that way, but it doesn't read that way to me," Uehling said Monday night. "I can tell you that the NCAA is not interpreting it that way. And my contacts at other Big Eight institutions have suggested the same thing."

Uehling, the first woman chancellor of the University of Missouri, said she expected other college leaders to issue statements attacking the guidelines.

"I think others are concerned about this too. They just haven't gotten mobilized yet," Uehling said.

Uehling sent a letter Monday to David S. Tate, director of HEW's civil rights office in Washington, complaining that the federal agency's most recent interpretation of the law, known as Title IX, remains an "unwarranted burden" that "is not in the best interests of either men or women."

HEW only suggests in its interpretation of the law that consideration might be given in determining whether a school has complied to differences in expenditures in men's and women's sports.

"It does not specifically, within the body of the guidelines, exclude revenue from the sports," Uehling said.

"Revenue-producing sports are not specifically spelled out. The criteria by which exceptions are to be made are not very specifically spelled out. The interpretations would be left to teams which would visit campuses," she said.

"It's a possibility football would not be exempted by a particular team at a particular site."

Uehling sent copies of the HEW letter to Missouri's congressional delegation, asking for its support. She suggested HEW adopt an earlier interpretation which granted football specific exemption from the equal funding guidelines.

"This institution is committed to the goal of providing equal opportunity for its women students in all of its educational programs," she wrote. "But it strenuously protests the unwarranted burden of equalizing expenditures for men and women in intercollegiate athletics on either a per capita or aggregate basis."

The chancellor said it will cost the University of Missouri's Columbia campus $400,000 in direct costs to comply with the guidelines if football is not exempted. Even with an exemption, the cost would be between $250,000 and $300,000 a year, she said. The school budgeted $500,000 for women's athletics this year, up from $15,000 just five years ago.

Joe McCarthy, as manager of the New York Yankees and the Chicago Cubs, was 29-13 in World Series games.

"The polls are good in that they get in the newspapers day after day and increase fan appeal but more weight should be placed on the number of No.1 votes," Hodges said.

"There's no way a team should be No.2 after getting almost twice as many first-place votes. I'm not saying I'm not happy under the present situation. We've got a good schedule, and you don't win 24 straight without deserving a high ranking."

Although it may be one place too low for Bill Hodges, UCLA, 20-3, and Indiana State were named on each of the ballots. The Bruins, who nipped Arizona State 85-83 and crushed Arizona 110-86 last week, were tabbed no lower than fourth. The Sycamores, who blasted West Texas State 100-75 and struggled past Southern Illinois 69-68, were ranked as low as seventh by one voter.

Notre Dame and North Carolina maintained the No.3 and No.4 positions after easy victories. The Irish, 19-3, collected 1,073 points following triumphs over Manhattan and West Virginia last week, while the Tar Heels, 20-4, received 978 points after beating William & Mary and Virginia.

The District 3-A Basketball Tournament will get underway tonight in Williamston after a one-day delay.

The District 4-A and 1-A will begin play Wednesday. Tonight in the 3-A tournament, Farmville Central, the Eastern Carolina Conference champion, will play Tarboro, the Northeastern fourth place team at 7:30 p.m., following a meeting of the ECC girls' champ, Southwest Edgecombe and Roanoke Rapids of the NEC, set for 6 p.m.

Wednesday, NEC girls' champ Williamston meets C.B. Aycock at 6 p.m., with NEC boys' champ Washington taking on Southwest Edgecombe. Thursday, Ayden-Grifton's girls face Roanoke, followed by North Lenoir and Williamston's boys. Friday, in the final night of first round play, Washington's girls meet D.H. Conley, with Roanoke's boys facing North Pitt.

No decision has been made yet on whether semifinal play will begin on Saturday, or will be delayed until Monday. If Saturday is used, the tournament could wind up on schedule on Tuesday.

Rose High School's games with Beddingfield in the first round of the District 4-A tournament, have been set for Wednesday night. The girls' game will start at 7 p.m. with the boys' at about 8:45 p.m. on the Bruins' home court.

Other play in the league will also begin on Wednesday, and it is expected that doubling up will occur the rest of the week, to finish the tournament by Friday.

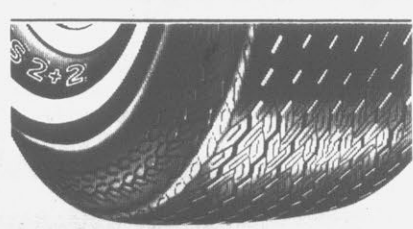

The District One, 1-A Tournament will open, on schedule, Wednesday night, with first-round girls' play.

In first round games, Belhaven will meet Bath, Columbia will take on Chocowinity, Chowan meets Aurora and Pantego is host to Manteo. All games will be at 7 p.m. on the home court of the first named team. Semifinals for the girls will be Friday and Saturday at Plymouth, with the finals at Plymouth on Tuesday.

In the boys' bracket, Pantego meets Belhaven, Chowan takes on Chocowinity, Manteo faces Bear Grass and Jamesville meets Creswell, again with the first-named team as the host on Thursday. Semifinals and finals will be at Plymouth, on Friday, Saturday and Tuesday.

Kentucky May Be Peaking As Tournament Time Draws Near

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Kentucky's perennial Southeastern Conference champs have been also-rans this year, but the Wildcats may be peaking as tournament time approaches.

You remember Kentucky...the team that captured the national championship last year. The Wildcats are only 14-10 this season, 9-8 in SEC play, and it took a 90-74 triumph over Georgia Monday night to reach those levels.

Freshman Dwight Anderson scored 23 points to lead the Wildcats, who connected on 20 of 21 free throws. Also in double figures were Lavon Williams with 18 points, Kyle Macy with 13 and Jay Shidler and Fred Cowan with 12.

Elsewhere in the SEC, fifth-ranked Louisiana State was idle but clinched one of the two byes in next week's tourney when Tennessee defeated No. 19 Vanderbilt 83-78. That left only Alabama, a 90-76 winner over Florida, with a chance to tie LSU for the title, although 11-5 Bama, 11-6 Vandy and 10-6 Tennessee all have a shot at the other bye into the semifinals.

Tennessee was led by Reggie Johnson's 27 points and Terry Crosby's 22, but needed a tip-in and a three-point play by Howard Wood to stave off Vanderbilt, which got a game-high 28 points from Charlie Davis.

Meanwhile, Reggie King became Alabama's all-time scoring leader. King scored 27 points against Florida, giving him a total of 1,929, bettering the mark of 1,909 set by Leon Douglas, now with the Detroit Pistons.

Vanderbilt was the only member of The Associated Press Top Twenty in action. The game between No. 15 Temple and Rider was postponed because of a snowstorm that blanketed the Eastern seaboard.

Meanwhile, Turk Tillman poured in 42 points as Eastern Kentucky trounced Tennessee Tech 100-72 and captured the Ohio Valley Conference regular-season championship. The Colonels were locked in a 68-64 squeaker with 8:42 left but outscored Tech 32-8 the rest of the way. Runnerup Western Kentucky was eliminated when John Randall's 24 points led last-place Murray State to a 66-64 upset of the Hilltoppers.

Lamar maintained a half-game lead in the Southland Conference by swamping McNeese State 103-83 as B.B. Davis scored 27 points and Clarence Kea added 25. Southwestern Louisiana remained on Lamar's heels with a 115-103 victory over Texas-Arlington despite an SLC record 20-of-20 free throws by UTA's Paul Renfro. USL's Andrew Toney didn't start for the first time in 79 games but came off the bench and erupted for 32 points.

New Mexico State solidified its hold on second place in the Missouri Valley Conference by downing Southern Illinois 86-76 as Slab Jones scored 22 points.

Rutgers virtually assured itself of a homecourt advantage in the Eastern Eight playoffs by crushing Massachusetts 95-76 as James Bailey and Kelvin Troy split 42 points.

Earl Evans and Tony Smith scored 22 points apiece to lead Nevada-Las Vegas to a 95-86 victory over Utah.

Appalachian State's Southern Conference champs posted their first 20-victory season in 12 years — and only the third ever — by smashing East Tennessee State 83-56 as Darryl Robinson and Mel Hubbard had 17 points apiece.

Another Southern Conference team, The Citadel, recorded a school record 18th triumph by defeating Marshall 75-69. Rick Sling slung in 17 points.

Iona came away with victory No. 20 by edging Siena 70-68 behind Jeff Ruland's 19 points.

Northeast Louisiana's David Hall was perfect on 11-of-11 floor shots and scored 25 points as the Indians, 24-2, beat Georgia Southern 82-70. Northeast's 17-game winning streak is the nation's third longest among Division I teams.

Finally, Washington's birthday was a bummer for George Washington. A player with that handle scored 16 points for Marshall but it wasn't enough to prevent a loss to The Citadel. And George Washington University was beaten by Boston University 87-76.

Weather Slows Sports Parade

By The Associated Press

College basketball, hockey, horse racing, track, soccer, tennis and boxing were all affected by Monday's storm that left much of the Eastern seaboard under a foot or more of snow.

The storm forced the postponement of the scheduled basketball game between 15th-ranked Temple and Rider at Lawrenceville, N.J. Other contests affected included Furman at VMI, Catholic U. at Seton Hall and Randolph-Macon at Navy.

In addition, tonight's Atlantic Coast Conference game between Maryland and Wake Forest at Greensboro, N.C., was put off until Wednesday night.

Aqueduct, Bowie, Keystone, Penn National and Waterford Park all canceled Monday's racing cards. Bowie and Keystone will also be shut down today.

Bowie's track and parking lots were buried under two feet of snow, forcing cancellation of the $35,000 General George Stakes for the first time.

Also wiped out was Monday night's harness card at Roosevelt Raceway in the New York City suburb of Westbury.

The American Hockey League had to postpone Monday night's scheduled game between the Maine Mariners and Hershey Bears in Portland when the Bears were unable to get out of Pennsylvania.

The Metropolitan Intercollegiate Track and Field Championships at Princeton University were put off until today and the Philadelphia Fever postponed Monday night's Major Indoor Soccer League game with the New York Arrows.

The semifinals of a national indoor junior tennis tournament at Port Washington, N.Y., were put off until today and today's press conference for World Boxing Council heavyweight champion Larry Holmes at a New York hotel was pushed back until Friday.

The weather problems were not confined to the eastern U.S. All scheduled English Cup soccer games were postponed because of ice and snow while in Scotland; the Scottish Cup game between Inverness Thistle and Falkirk was put off — for the 27th time.

And Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog spent 25 hours on planes and in airports traveling from Kansas City to the Royals' spring training camp in Fort Myers, Fla.

Herzog started out Sunday but his Kansas City-Atlanta flight was diverted to Memphis because of fog. After a five-hour wait, he returned to Kansas City, but learned that the Atlanta airport had reopened.

So he boarded another flight, this time with pitcher Steve Mingori. They made it to Atlanta, but a connecting flight to Tampa was rerouted to West Palm Beach, again because of fog. When it lifted, they flew to Fort Myers via Tampa and Miami.

"I feel like I've been traded seven times," said Mingori.

Steve Long Pins His Toughest Foe—Cancer

VERMILION, Ohio (AP) — Steve Long has pinned cancer.

The Vermilion High School senior's battle with the dreaded disease began after his sophomore wrestling season with "a pain in my left arm that wouldn't go away."

Physicians first thought he had a chipped bone. A biopsy at the Cleveland Clinic showed it was a malignant tumor. Long, 15 at the time, had Ewing's Sarcoma, a fairly rare bone cancer that seems to strike athletes.

"They gave me one year to live if I didn't undergo treatment. I didn't think much when I first got the news. But I knew I like life so much, I had to beat it," he said.

Despite having cancer, Long wrestled last season as a junior, failing to win in eight matches. He only weighed 170 pounds but wrestled as a heavyweight, simply because Vermilion had no one in that weight class.

"I just think he's someone that all of us can look up to. He goes out there and fights that obstacle and wins. He's been incredibly inspiring for the rest of our team," said Long's coach, Mark Toomey.

Two years later, most of Long's hair, which fell out during chemotherapy, has grown back. The painful shots that left him nauseous for three-day stretches have disappeared.

The big news for Long came last month when a physical examination turned up no trace of cancer.

"My doctor (Paul Dymont) says personally he thinks I've licked it. Five years from now he'll put it in writing," said the teenager.

Long drifted back to his junior wrestling season and said, "My opponents were undefeated, but I was at a slight disadvantage."

His coach appreciated Long's determination to compete under the most trying of circumstances.

"He was incredible," said Toomey. "For three days after those shots he'd be sick, but he'd keep working. Sometimes it was obvious his arm was really in pain. I'd have to practically force him to go sit down."

Because he had tender scar tissue, Long wrestled with a bandage on his arm. Most of his opponents were unaware of his affliction. "I liked it that way," he said.

He's come out for wrestling again as a senior, competing in the 167-175 pound class. He won his first start in an 11-2 decision.

"How can I lose?" asked Long. "It's such a great feeling when all those people are cheering for you."

If Pro Basketball Dying, Why Are So Many Cities Asking In?

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

What's wrong with pro basketball?

From boring games with selfish players who don't hustle to a grilling long season and many other problems, one might draw the conclusion that the National Basketball Association is on its death bed, or at least the critical list.

And a look at the ratings for the NBA on CBS, down some 27 percent from last season (prior to the Feb. 4 All-Star Game), might reinforce that opinion.

But if that's the case, then how come so many people are clamoring to get in? The NBA already has received formal or informal inquiries about expansion franchises from groups in Dallas, Minneapolis-St. Paul, Miami and Toronto, and has voted to admit up to two new members by the 1980-81 season. NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien isn't hearing any death knell.

"Stable — that is the best one-word description of the NBA at this time," he said following the mid-winter Board of Governors meeting, at which it was decided to expand.

But stability is not what pro basketball moguls had in mind at the start of this decade, when they called their product the "Sport of the Seventies" and hoped for a boom similar to that which pro football enjoyed in the 1960s.

The sometimes hot, sometimes cold war between the NBA and the American Basketball Association cut into the sport's development over the first half of the decade. It also ripped off his jersey and flung it into the stands and Blazermania reigned supreme.

O'Brien says last season's leveling of attendance and dip in TV ratings were a natural reaction to the boom of the previous year, a matter of the league finding its level. But when the same symptoms showed up the first half of this season, the league announced plans for a new publicity campaign to promote its product.

Latest figures show the NBA has wiped out its early-season attendance drop, an encouraging sign since turnstiles usually spin even faster as playoff time approaches.

meeting with the Fighting Irish at Notre Dame next Monday night. The Pirates will, in addition, play the Russian National Team in an exhibition next Tuesday at the Greensboro Coliseum.

Krusen hit again for the biggest lead the Pirates were to enjoy, 18 points at 75-57.

Old Dominion then began to spurt that cut the lead back to nine, and the technical helped them add two more to that. Hobson made both of his free throws when fouled by Conrad, but Conrad then made two on the technical and followed that eight seconds later with two more free throws, lowering the lead to 84-77.

But the Pirates were dead-eyes on the freethrow line as ODU was forced to foul, and that extended the lead back out to 13 with less than a minute to play, wrapping up the win.

Besides Mack's 25 and Cornelius' 20, Maynor finished with 19 and Krusen had 18. Branch finished with 18 for Old Dominion, while Ray had 13, Conrad and Ronnie McAdoo had 12 and Bobby Hainthcock had 10.

"They were without Ronnie Valentine (broken ankle), but they filled in well without him," Gillman pointed out. "In fact, they beat Virginia Commonwealth a couple of days ago without him — at Richmond."

Yesterday's Cryptopquip — CELEBRATIONS ARE LOST AT CELEBRATIONS.

Today's Cryptopquip clue: J equals A

The Cryptopquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

When the ostrich buries his head in the sand, he convinces no one but himself that he cannot be seen. At the bridge table, you can't deny the existence of a threat by pretending it isn't there.

Despite his weak doubleton, South decided that an opening bid of one no trump would describe his hand more accurately and present fewer rebid problems than would an opening bid of one club. Since North had no desire to play an eleven-trick contract on his balanced hand, he made the value raise to three no trump, a contract he expected his partner to fulfill with ease.

Since neither of his four-card suits offered reasonable prospects of producing the necessary tricks to defeat the contract, West chose to lead his top heart in the hope that he would hit his partner's suit. He succeeded beyond his wildest expectations. Declarer played low from dummy, but East did not make the mistake of winning the king. Instead, he signalled encouragement with the seven.

Declarer won the ten of hearts and led the nine of diamonds. West made a fine play by rising with the king to lead another heart. Declarer again played low from dummy. East won the king and removed declarer's last heart stopper.

In the hope that West had started with both missing diamond honors, declarer persisted with that suit. Unfortunately, East held the ace and took two more heart tricks to defeat the contract.

Declarer ignored the facts. If West held two sure side entries, he would not have led a short suit—he would have tried to establish his long suit. Therefore, it was very likely that East held one of the diamond honors, so continuation of that suit was suicidal.

Declarer could count three spade tricks, plus two heart tricks already in the bank. If he could collect four tricks in

Tony Orlando Says Drugs Snared Him

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Tony Orlando says he lived and worked "night and day" in a Hollywood saturated with drugs and that he never paid for cocaine because, "People would say, here's a little gift."

Orlando also says that when he was hospitalized in July 1977 for a nervous breakdown, he was suffering from "drug psychosis, which is not too far removed from an acid (LSD) trip."

TONY ORLANDO

Orlando, in the March issue of Ladies Home Journal magazine, says a "three-month involvement with cocaine" triggered his nervous breakdown.

The article reported it is common for Hollywood agents to provide clients with drugs, especially cocaine.

Orlando said he was having "personal and professional problems," and cocaine became a "synthetic boost." The drug's effects became "a nightmare" later, he said.

The magazine said that just before his hospitalization, Orlando's sister had died and his friend, actor-comedian Freddie Prinze, killed himself. Orlando is now performing again, but not with the duo, Dawn.

clubs, he would have nine tricks without the diamond suit. The best percentage play for four club tricks was to finesse dummy's ten.

Theoretically, the finesse was only a 50-50 proposition, but the fact that West was short in hearts suggested length in clubs. If that were the case, West was likely to have the jack of clubs. Since this was the only realistic chance for the contract, declarer should have crossed to his hand with a high spade and led a club to the ten. When that held, the contract would be secure.

Mary Tyler Moore To Try New TV Venture

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In her successful TV incarnations, we knew her as Laurie Petrie, a slightly dizzy suburban housewife, then as Mary Richards, an on-her-own TV news producer. She came to represent a certain style, combining wit and grace, that stood out in the passing television parade.

Mary Tyler Moore has long been television's class act. She quieted the sitcom, showing that a raised eyebrow, a well-timed nod, even silence, worked as well as a pratfall or a loud guffaw. And she introduced to television a new type of woman, an educated, independent lady who didn't need pots and pans as gag props.

"The Dick Van Dyke Show" (in which she played Laura Petrie) is a television classic, and "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" (Mary Richards) not only delivered healthy ratings but also contributed to CBS' schedule with two spinoffs, "Rhoda" and "Phyllis."

So, there was disappointment all around when "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" crew disbanded after the 1976-77 season; and there was joy when she returned to CBS' schedule last fall. Until the ratings started rolling in.

"Mary," a variety show, was an utter bomb, and was mercifully yanked from the schedule after three airings. It was clear that TV audiences didn't want to see Mary Tyler Moore sing and dance and deliver one-liners.

Variety wasn't what her fans wanted, but it was what she wanted. Miss Moore admits that singing and dancing are her first loves, and that she became an actress primarily to put food on the table.

"I don't delude myself about being the world's best singer and dancer," she'll tell you, "but I'm good enough." She defends "Mary," contending that her audience wasn't ready to accept her in anything but the sitcom roles she usually assumed.

Maybe. But tuning in to see Mary Tyler Moore sing and dance — "good enough" though she may be — is like going to a baseball game to hear the shortstop sing the "National Anthem." You'd much rather see him execute a clean double play.

So, a compromise of a sort is in the works. On March 4, Miss Moore begins a new series, "The Mary Tyler Moore Hour," a sitcom in which she plays a TV variety performer. The variety is for her, the sitcom for her fans.

Even Miss Moore doesn't sound overly optimistic about the venture. "The acting scenes are played more simply (than in 'The Mary Tyler Moore Show')," she says. "Because it's a weekly hour, there isn't the time to evolve those deeper nuances we achieved in the old 'Mary Tyler Moore Show.'"

"But that show had such a high level of quality, I think anything would suffer by comparison."

True. But I wish they'd give Miss Moore something that could even begin to compare. She's an artist as a comedy actress, and she should be allowed her canvas. TV could use her class.

Oscar Candidates Are Being Announced Today

By BOB THOMAS

Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Films about women and the Vietnam War are the critics' favorites as front-runners for the top prizes in this year's Academy Award nominations.

The candidates for the 51st annual Oscar presentation were to be announced here today.

For the second straight year, the best actress category was crowded with solid contenders.

Three previous Oscar winners are mentioned this year — Jane Fonda for "Coming Home," Ingrid Bergman for "Autumn Sonata" and Ellen Burstyn for "Same Time, Next Year." Also strongly supported are Geraldine Page for "Interiors" and Jill Clayburgh for "An Unmarried Woman."

Two films about the Vietnam war are favorably mentioned by critics in both best picture and best actor categories — "Coming Home" with Jon Voight and "The Deer Hunter" starring Robert DeNiro.

Other films ranking high as best picture candidates were "An Unmarried Woman," "Days of Heaven" and "Midnight Express."

For best actor, in addition to Voight and DeNiro, likely nominees included Brad Davis for

"Midnight Express," Gary Busey for "The Buddy Holly Story" and Alan Bates for "An Unmarried Woman."

Among those awaiting the nominations announcement at the glittering new headquarters of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in Beverly Hills were a hundred Hollywood press agents, all hoping their studios and clients would appear on the magic list.

Publicists with nominated films planned to waste little time before buying advertising space in trade papers to continue their campaigns. An estimated $2.5 million will be spent to win attention and votes from the Academy's 3,600 voting members.

Oscar nominations are made by individual branches of the Academy, so that actors nominate for acting awards and writers for writing. All members select a choice for best picture. The total Academy membership will vote for the final awards, which will be presented Monday, April 7, in a ceremony televised nationally by ABC from the Los Angeles Music Center.

The scientific and technical awards have already been released, as have the special Oscars. The latter included Sir Laurence Olivier for his contributions to the art of film, director King Vidor "for his incomparable achievements as a cinematic creator and innovator," cartoon producer Walter Lantz, the Museum of Modern Art's film library and "Superman" for visual effects.

Farmers Market Meeting

An organizational meeting will be held Tuesday, Feb. 20, at the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office, 203 W. Third St., for farmer's market producers at 7:30 p.m.

Plans are under way for a farmer's market to open in the Pitt County area in the early summer. Many growers are needed to supply quality vegetables. Some growers may decide to plant over their usual allotment to supply produce to local customers.

For more information, call Sam Uzzell, 758-1196, at the Extension Office.

Cold 'Remedies' Carry A Risk

By KEVIN MCKEAN
AP Science Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — It's an intimate scene. A young couple in bathrobes confront us at their medicine chest. The husband says he has everything he needs for a cold, and opens his side of the cabinet to reveal a dozen powders, liquids and pills.

But the wife, looking smug, says she too has everything she needs for a cold. Her side contains a single product that combines the active ingredients of all the others.

That's cold fighting, television-commercial style.

It is the kind of pitch that helped make multi-ingredient products perennial leaders of the $843 million a year cough and cold industry, the largest over-the-counter drug market.

Nobody claims these products cure a cold. All they do is ease the symptoms during the week or more a disease hangs on.

But some doctors and druggists are questioning the wisdom of the "shotgun" approach to cold relief.

"Too many ingredients can work at cross purposes," says Joe Graedon, pharmacologist and author. "There's an expectorant to get mucus out of the lungs, a cough suppressant to keep it in the lungs, and an antihistamine to thicken the mucus that's there."

A U.S. Food and Drug Administration study panel said it was "irrational" to combine more than three classes of ingredients because almost no one has that many symptoms at once.

But the drug companies say the FDA is wrong: more than half of cold sufferers have multiple symptoms.

"Advertising only encourages the consumer to try the product once. If it doesn't work, he'll stop buying it," says George F. Hoffnagle, vice president for scientific and regulatory affairs for Richardson-Merrell, maker of Vicks.

Hoffnagle says it's cheaper and safer for a cold victim who has several symptoms to buy one combination remedy than to experiment with different single-ingredient products.

The FDA panel found that the 50,000 cold remedies it studied all contained one or more of about 120 basic ingredients.

Of these, the panel said 44 were both safe and effective. But 22 others were branded as unsafe or mislabeled, and 54 were said to be safe but of dubious value.

The FDA panel added: "Cold product labeling often is 'overly complicated, vague, unsupported by scientific evidence and in some cases is misleading.'"

—Advertising claims such as "cold medicine," "cold formula," or "for the relief of colds" should be banned.

—More research is needed into how the products affect children.

The FDA is moving toward new regulations for cold products based on the panel's work. But the regulations are at least a year away.

The Romans sipped onion broth for a cold. American colonists relied on herbs like sage, buckthorn and bloodroot. Today's cold remedies have ingredients with even more obscure names; there is a quick guide to translating some of them.

—ANALGESICS (pain relievers): often listed on the label as aspirin, acetaminophen.

These cut fever and reduce aches and pains. Acetaminophen, an aspirin substitute, provokes less stomach upset. Some doctors say aspirin causes more cold virus to be shed in the mucus and may make a cold more contagious.

—DECONGESTANTS: often phenylephrine, phenylpropanolamine, pseudoephedrine, oxymetazoline, propylhexedrine, xylometazoline, naphazoline.

These reduce swelling by shrinking tiny blood vessels in the nose. Nasal sprays work best because they deliver a concentrated dose. But because of the effect on blood vessels, some products warn against use by people with cardiovascular problems.

—COUGH SUPPRESSANTS: often codeine, dextromethorphan.

These reduce the desire to cough. But coughing is a reflex to rid the lungs of congestion and some physicians say if a cough is productive — that is, if it's not a dry cough that brings up nothing — it should not be suppressed entirely.

—ANTIHISTAMINES: often chlorpheniramine, methapyrilene, pyrilamine, phenindamine, thendylamine, phenyltoloxamine, pheniramine, diphenhydramine, doxylamine.

These relieve sneezing and watery eyes of hay fever and allergies. There is some controversy whether antihistamines have any effect on a cold, but they are included in almost every leading cold product. Caution: antihistamines can cause drowsiness.

—EXPECTORANTS: often guaifenesin (or glyceryl guaiacolate), ipecac syrup, potassium guaiacolsulfonate or terpin hydrate.

These are intended to thin congestion in the lungs so mucus can be coughed up. However, an FDA panel said it could find no evidence that any of expectorants now in use work very well.

—ANTICHLORINERGICS: often atropine, belladonna preparations.

These are intended to dry watery eyes and runny nose. The FDA panel said it could find no evidence these were effective either.

—THREE OTHERS: caffeine, alcohol and Vitamin C (ascorbic acid).

Caffeine, a stimulant, is added to offset drowsiness of antihistamines. Alcohol is used to dissolve other ingredients (the FDA panel said any product with more than 10 percent alcohol was not for children under 6). Proponents of Vitamin C recommend doses of several grams a day for the cold. Most cold preparations contain less than 1 percent of that (less than 50 milligrams).

In general, it's a good idea to take no more drugs than needed and to consult a doctor before taking cold remedies if already taking other medications.

Texas Magnate Says He Organized Rescue In Iran

By JAMES R. KING
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) — Texas millionaire H. Ross Perot says he unsuccessfully sought help from the U.S. government before sending his own elite squad of combat-hardened men to Iran to stage a daring rescue of two imprisoned employees of his computer firm.

"We went to the Department of Defense, the State Department, the White House and every other level of our government. But there was nothing, absolutely nothing, they could do," said Perot.

So, the crew-cut tycoon calmly told reporters Monday, his men paid Iranian revolutionaries in Tehran to storm the Gasre prison Feb. 11, freeing about 11,000 prisoners. Among them were engineers William Gaylord and Paul Chiapparoni, employed by Perot's Dallas-based Electronic Data Systems Inc.

Part of Perot's 15-man squad then led the engineers on a 450-mile journey to the Turkish frontier where they crossed the border to freedom, Perot said.

The leader of the patrol was retired Green Beret Col. Arthur "Bull" Simon, 60, who in 1970 led an Army mission to the outskirts of Hanoi in an unsuccessful attempt to rescue American prisoners of war in North Vietnam.

The other squad members were EDS employees with prior military experience — all volunteers, Perot said.

Perot's story could not be independently confirmed, and the State Department said in Washington it knew only that the two men had been jailed in Iran at one time.

Perot, who graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy and built a billion-dollar computer business after training as an IBM salesman, left many questions unanswered, including how they traveled and crossed the border and how much money was paid.

"I'm not going to get into details for obvious reasons," he said.

Gaylord and Chiapparoni, both 39, were jailed for seven weeks, apparently in connection with allegations of official corruption involving a contract won by Perot's computer firm.

Perot said the escape plan was activated only after he failed to negotiate a $12.75 million ransom he said was demanded by the Iranian government.

"Our first preference was to pay the ransom, but our efforts to pay it failed because the banking system in Iran no longer functioned," Perot said. "We then arranged with revolutionary leaders in Iran to have the prison mobbed."

He would not say how much money the riot cost, but he said it was paid in U.S. currency. "The American dollar is not as strong as it used to be, but it is still the best thing in the world to get you out of trouble," Perot said.

Perot said the prison guards dropped their weapons and scattered during the rescue operation.

"Paul and Bill climbed the walls and fled through intense gunfire for about two miles to a designated hotel for a rendezvous." There, they met members of the EDS squad, he said, but Simon learned the revolutionaries had tracked them and ordered the hotel evacuated.

Perot, who said he orchestrated the escape from Turkey, said within two hours revolutionaries located the EDS hotel rooms and sprayed them with machine-gun fire. He declined to say whether his men were armed, but he said, "They had the equipment they needed."

The squad then took Gaylord and Chiapparoni across Iran's rugged terrain toward Turkey, Perot said, arriving at the border about five days later. Several members of Perot's team waited on the Turkish side, poised to fly into Iran in case the original plan failed, added Perot.

Perot said he had a chartered Boeing 707 airplane waiting to fly the team out of Turkey. They arrived in Dallas Sunday night and were greeted by several hundred jubilant friends and workers.

"It's wonderful to be an American and wonderful to work for EDS," said an elated Gaylord, who spoke briefly during the news conference but declined to elaborate on his adventure. "If you'd seen those wives and families, you'd understand our joy."

Perot said he began to prepare for the clandestine mission as one option after the two men were arrested Dec. 28. He said the men were arrested because the Iranians, who Perot said were more than $5 million behind in their payments to EDS, feared the firm would leave the country and not stay to operate the computers, used in Iran's welfare and national health programs.

Perot conceded the mission was a probable violation of Iranian law and a possible violation of American neutrality statutes.

"I suppose our attorneys will be working on this for next several months," he said. "But that was not the issue. To save the men was."

Youth Revival Series Planned

WINTERVILLE — Revival services will be held at the Winterville Pentecostal Holiness Church Thursday through Sunday.

Services will begin each evening at 7:30. The guest evangelist is Phillip Lewis of Lowland, who will speak Sunday morning at 11 a.m. and again at 7 p.m.

Special singing will be held during each service.

The public is invited to attend according to Kader Rawls, pastor.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, FEB. 21, 1979

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A beautiful day for tuning in on what you most like to do and for finding a new slant on such an expression and then for thoroughly enjoying it. But the evening can bring a considerable amount of discontent, so be sure to avoid any arguments.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Morning is fine for working on a new interest, but take it easy in the evening, restore your energies. Show respect for an out-of-towner.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Handle responsibilities with good conscience during day. Please loved ones and get into their good graces. Take no risks with savings.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Work out better arrangements with associates during day and have more success in the future. Hunches are good during day, but erroneous in the evening.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You get much done during the day, but evening should be spent relaxing. A better understanding with fellow workers is possible during day hours.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Plan amusements early that include good friends. Put more thought into how best to commercialize on your particular talents.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Morning is fine for improving conditions at home, but don't irk kin in evening in any way. Entertain friends in the early evening only for best results. Show all that you are charming.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You are able to get much done in your special endeavors now, so get an early start. Persevere and your benefits are great. Get more rest and build up your energies.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Contact persons you know who can help you to have more security in the days ahead. Improve your property so it becomes more valuable.
