Shortly after Ricky and Lois Hamill left for work yesterday morning, their house in the Dupree's Crossroads community on Highway 222 between Falkland and Fountain burned. Only the shell of the house remains; all of its contents were destroyed.

Friends of the Hamills and their two sons have asked Hotline to appeal for gifts. Contributions may be made through the Falkland Presbyterian Church, Mrs. Julia Lawrence, treasurer, Falkland, N.C. 27827. Gifts may be brought to the home of an uncle, Thomas Lee Hamill, on State Road 1245 adjacent to the burned house. Or they may be brought to the Falkland Presbyterian Church, where a pounding for the family will be held Sunday from 2 to 4 p.m.

Sizes of the family members are as follows: Ricky — 33 waist; 30 long pants; Lois, 9-10; Mark, 10 pants, 12 shirt; Parker, 18 months, size two or three shirt.

Inquiries may be made of Mr. or Mrs. Thomas Lee Hamill, 758-1941.

Firefighters yesterday afternoon finally put an end to a fire which destroyed offices and a chemical storage warehouse at the Coastal Chemical Co. just south of the Greenville city limits. Officials are now faced with the question of what to do with solid and liquid waste created by the destructive blaze.

An end to the fire, which was reported about 4 a.m. Monday, came late Tuesday afternoon after a large foam generating unit from Seymour-Johnson Air Force Base in Goldsboro pumped some 8,000 to 10,000 gallons of the fire-retarding chemical on the smoldering ruins; and the Greenville Fire Department's snorkle dumped thousands of gallons of water on "hot spots" as a bulldozer and back-hoe moved twisted masses of metal that had been the building and stack-after-stack of charred chemical containers.

Health officials, N.C. Department of Agriculture pesticide experts, and Division of Environmental Management air and water quality professionals were meeting this morning to finalize plans for the disposal of the solid waste and the thousands of gallons of chemical laced water at the site.

Pitt County Commissioners scheduled a special session to deal with the disposal of the waste at 5:15 p.m. today at the Court House.

Pitt County Health director Dr. Robert Ehinger said environmental officials have established a command post at the site.

Ehinger noted that although the smoke generated from the burning chemicals had a bad odor, it may not have been as toxic as officials first feared.

William B. Buffalo, administrator of the Agriculture Department's pesticide division said a large percentage of chemicals involved were herbicides which used kerosene as a solvent.

Health officials cautioned persons living in the path of the smoke not to use food or animal feed exposed to the air, and not to use water from open wells, pitcher pumps or shallow wells until they contact the Pitt County Health Department. Water from public water systems and

Hanoi Claims Heavy Fighting On Border

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam claimed today that its army put more than 3,000 Chinese troops out of action in a major battle on the eastern front of their five-day-old border war.

At the other end of the front, the Chinese captured Lao Cai, northwest Vietnam's major communications and railway center on the Red River. The invaders were said to be 10-12 miles inside Vietnamese territory at some points, and they, too, claimed inflicting thousands of casualties.

Radio Hanoi reported a big battle Tuesday between Lang Son, the major town in the northeast frontier area, and the border village of Dong Dang seven miles away and 78 miles northeast of Hanoi.

In an assault on Peak 409 south of Dong Dang and at Marker Post 15, 3½ miles northeast of the village, Vietnamese forces "put a company of Chinese troops out of action, destroyed five tanks, and captured all the enemies' weapons," the broadcast said.

Radio Hanoi also reported the Chinese extended the invasion front eastward to the coast Tuesday. It said a Chinese division "attacked the area of Than Phung, Po Hen and Cao Ba Lanh" in the coastal province of Quang Binh, but Vietnamese forces "trounced three battalions and wiped out 700 Chinese aggressors."

The Vietnamese government took a party of foreign correspondents to Lang Son

Tuesday, and the garrison commander there told them fighting was raging around Dong Dang.

The commander said the Chinese appeared to be regrouping after making a partial retreat from five towns along the border they had overrun.

Kazuhisa Ikawa of the Tokyo newspaper Asahi reported Vietnam was rushing reinforcements to the Lang Son sector.

"Several thousand men of regular and regional units with heavy arms are advancing toward Chinese positions in the Lang Son area," he wrote.

Ikawa said Vietnamese trucks were hauling 105mm guns from Dong Mo, 37 miles from the frontier, and that vehicles carrying troops, weapons, ammunition and fuel streamed northward on the main road to the border.

WAR FRONT — Heavy fighting is reported at the eastern end of the China-Vietnam border with Lao Cai falling to Chinese troops. Fighting is also reported at Dong Dang and Lang Son. (AP Laser-photo)

Trio Reappointed To Hospital Board

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Reappointments to the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees announced last night were those of Mrs. Mildred Indorf of Greenville; Ephraim Smith of near Greenville, and Robert Monk of Farmville.

Monk, who has served as chairman of the nominating committee, announced the following nominations to be voted on during the March "annual meeting": Harry Leslie, chairman; James Cheatham, vice chairman; Ephraim Smith, secretary; Norfleet Sugg, treasurer; Mildred Indorf, assistant treasurer; and other members of the executive committee — Glenn Strickland, Billy Phillips, Albert Martin and Dr. John L. Wooten.

Following a recommendation from the Executive Committee, it was voted to amend a contract with Pitt Pathologists Inc. to change from the pathologists who practice in the hospital's making a $110,000 payment to the hospital and the hospital's in turn making a $55,000 payment to them, to the pathologists' making a $55,000 payment only. This measure was needed, it was reported, to comply with Medicaid requirements for the channeling of funds. Trustee J. B. Kittrell voiced his opinion that the hospital-pathologists contract was written with much study and due to run until Aug. 1, 1979 and should not be amended. He and Trustee Helen Moseley cast dissenting votes.

It was announced that the "Long Range Plan" for the hospital drawn up by a consulting firm will be presented during the Mar. 20 meeting. man Norfleet Sugg reported that the hospital's income for the year is running much ahead of budget. Net income through the fourth month of the fiscal year, he said, has been $692,000, with $448,000 budgeted. He said it's a case of increased activity and good cost containment. He praised the efforts of those who collect, saying that most hospitals have about 10 percent uncollected bills, that seven percent was budgeted for this year, and uncollectibles are running only about four percent.

A trustee asked if a room rate decrease might be considered if this financial trend continues.

Director Jack Richardson reported the following: that patient days during the past month have been up 34 percent over the same month last year and that there has been a 20 percent increase in admissions. He said 10 more beds have been opened in the Three-South Wing, partially eliminating the crowded situation reported last month.

— that the Duke Endowment Fund has given the hospital $15,245, based on patient days of unreimbursed care.

— that the recently reported Blue Cross restrictions concerning routine testing do not affect Pitt Memorial, since routine testing has never been a policy here anyway.

Bob Barnes, Surgery Coordinators, reported on the recent gift of a family of a person who had suffered "brain death" in Pitt Memorial. The person's corneas of the eye and both kidneys were given to four different recipients — this organ removal was a first for Pitt Memorial, Barnes reported.

Assistant Administrator Rick Gilstrap reported that hospital's campaign to enlist employee suggestions as to ways to contain or reduce expenses has worked well. The implementation stage is in progress now, he said, and within about two months, it is expected that approximately $80,000 will be saved as a result of this program.

Personnel Manager Craig Quick reported on recruiting that has gone on in Canada recently. He and other members of his staff visited technical schools and other nursing training centers in several parts of Canada telling the merits of working in Greenville to senior nursing students. He said response

The Lesson: No Rehearsals For Disaster

By REBECCA BUFFALO
Reflector Staff Writer

As Greenville residents know by now, there's no dress rehearsal for a disaster.

As smoke billowed from a raging fire at the Coastal Chemical Company building early Monday morning, persons from many organizations in the Pitt County area joined hands in aiding the more than 300 Greenville and Winterville residents who were evacuated from their homes.

The bulk of the evacuees were housed at J. H. Rose High School Monday, with many residents able to return to homes late Monday afternoon. However, 20 persons spent the night in Rose High gymnasium, and were released to go home Tuesday morning. "Everyone that was called on bent over backwards," said Pitt County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner, who also serves as head of the county's civil preparedness. "No one refused help."

"This is the first time anything of this nature has happened in Pitt County," continued Joyner. "Things will go smoother next time, but I hope that next time never happens."

HARD TO GET THOUGHTS GOING

It was early Monday morning when Dave Bumgarner, assistant principal at J. H. Rose, made his way to the high school to prepare the facility for the evacuees. "At 5:30 a.m., it's hard to get your thoughts going," said Bumgarner. "However, we were more than pleased to offer our facilities."

According to Bumgarner, school dietician Mary Mallow and two school custodians worked hard to make the evacuees comfortable, with volunteers and donations from several area businesses contributing to the cause.

American Red Cross chapter executive secretary Ruth Taylor spent a majority of the day at Rose, working closely with the Salvation Army in providing food, cots and medical care for the crowd.

"There was a real fine spirit of community fellowship, and I was pleased with the outcome," Taylor commented. "I think the needs of the people were met, and that is what counts."

Red Cross volunteer Chuck Owens, a student at East Carolina University, served as a medical services technician during the day, using his training as an emergency medical technician to make sure everyone was all right.

"I don't think things could have been better under the circumstances," Owens noted. "I was never tense or nervous."

Mrs. Arnold Williford of the Salvation Army and seven workers stayed at Rose while Major Williford headed a group at the actual fire site.

"Things were hectic we when we first got there, but evened out soon after," said Mrs. Williford. "So many people offered to help, and the folks were grateful in the way it was handled."

Mrs. Williford explained that Major Williford and his crew stayed out at the fire site, dispensing coffee, donuts and sandwiches donated by local businesses to the firemen.

"My husband said the firemen were very appreciative, since they couldn't take a break to go get things to eat," Mrs. Williford explained. "My husband particularly commended the fire marshal for his good work."

Gene Prescott, one of the evacuees, said that his family "stayed put" at Rose Monday until they were sure what was going to happen for their area.

"It went as well as it could (Continued on page 14)

Create Festive Mood To Celebrate

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday was our ninth anniversary and my husband didn't remember it. I was heartsick all day. I suppose I should be over it by now, but I'm not.

Dick is a good provider, a considerate husband and father, but he's not at all sentimental. Birthdays, anniversaries and most holidays are overlooked. If the children didn't make such a big fuss about Christmas, I'm sure he'd forget that too.

Last year I tried giving Dick a taste of his own medicine, so I "forgot" his birthday, but it didn't work because he forgot it too. I can't help feeling hurt and resentful. Any suggestions?

DICK'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Yes. Create a festive mood by planning in advance to celebrate occasions. On HIS birthday, bake a cake and invite friends in. Or make plans to go out to celebrate. On YOURS, do the same.

Repeat on Mother's Day, Father's Day, anniversaries and any other day you're sentimental about. If you suffer in silence, feeling sorry for yourself, you have no one to blame but yourself.

DEAR ABBY: A woman I work with asked me if I had ever had an affair. I was dumbfounded and didn't answer one way or the other because I felt it wasn't any of her business.

She took my refusal to answer to mean "yes"—saying, "If the answer had been 'no,' you would have said 'no.'"

Abby, can you suggest a snappy or clever comeback for a question I don't want to answer?

TONGUE-TIED IN TORRANCE

DEAR TIED: Don't feel obligated to provide a snappy or clever comeback for a rude and insolent question. Silence is golden, but not necessarily guilt.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the mother whose 8-year-old was sulking because her mother wouldn't buy her a brassiere brought back a lot of memories.

My now lovely 28-year-old (I'll call her Sally) was 11 when she gave me the same fit. A neighbor had given Sally some bras her daughter had outgrown, and I carried on the way most mothers do when faced with that kind of situation. I said, "You don't NEED a bra yet—it's silly. I'll tell you when you're ready for one!"

Then I asked myself a few questions. "Am I just trying to show my daughter who's boss? (I was.) Also, 'Who will she be hurting if she wears a bra?' (No one.) And, 'How much will it cost me?' (Nothing.)"

Then I told myself that I had better save my "absolutely not" for more important things. So, I gave Sally a big hug and told her she could wear a bra to school the next day!

I could hardly wait for her to get home from school. When she walked through the door, I asked if any of her friends had told her how much better she looked in a bra.

Her reply, "Oh, gee, I forgot to wear it."

"THANKS FOR THE MEMORIES"

DEAR THANKS: Thanks for a delightful day-brightener.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. Please enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Crab Quiche For Parties

By CECILY BROWNSTONE,
Associated Press Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: My daughter, newly married and learning to cook, loves a recipe of yours I passed along to her. It's for a crab quiche made in a 9-inch pie plate to serve as a main course for a company lunch or supper. The recipe's big attraction for her is its pat-in-the-pan crust because she is not yet adept at rolling out pastry.

Now she is having a cocktail party and wondered whether you would give a recipe for the crab quiche made in a square or oblong pan so that it can be cut in bite-size pieces for finger food. I volunteered to ask you.

DEAR HELPING HAND: Here's an oblong quiche for willing fingers. Patting the dough over the bottom and partly up the sides of the large pan isn't as speedy a process as one might think, but it certainly is easy. Tell your daughter not to worry about pressing out the pastry absolutely evenly; a slight variation in thickness doesn't seem to matter in this recipe. If she does the best she can, all will be well. — C.B.

CRAB PICKUPS

Finger Pastry: see below
1 tablespoon butter
1 cup finely chopped mild sweet onion
1 tablespoon flour
1 cup grated Parmesan cheese
6 to 8-ounce package frozen (thawed) or 7½-ounce can Alaska king crab, well-drained
1 cup lightly packed grated (medium-fine) Swiss cheese
3 large eggs
1 cup milk
1½ teaspoon salt
1½ teaspoon pepper
Make up the Finger Pastry. Shape into a flat rectangle; cut into 4 equal portions and place in a 13 by 9 by 2-inch baking pan. Pat dough evenly to cover the bottom and extend ½ inch up the sides of the pan.
In a medium skillet in the hot butter, gently cook the onion until wilted; stir in the flour, then the Parmesan and crab. Spread over pastry. Sprinkle with the Swiss cheese.

In a medium bowl beat together until blended the eggs, milk, salt and pepper. Carefully pour over the crab and cheese.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven on the rack below center for 35 to 40 minutes. Cool slightly. Cut into squares—each about 2 by 2 inches. Remove with a small spatula and serve at once or keep warm in a low oven for a short time.

Makes 24.
FINGER PASTRY: Stir together 1 and 1-3rd cups fork-stirred all-purpose flour and ½ teaspoon salt. With a pastry blender, cut in ½ cup (one quarter-pound stick) butter. Sprinkle with just enough cold water (about 3 tablespoons) to have dough hold together, mixing with a fork as you add the water.

Awesome Project Soon Starting

Very shortly the people of North Carolina will see a realized dream taking shape as the new ECU Medical School building begins to rise adjacent to the Pitt County Memorial Hospital complex.

Negotiations with contractors who bid on the $26 million project have been completed and the actual execution of the documents is now in progress.

It is anticipated that a construction starting date of March 15 will be met.

The project is large by any standards, and awesome as compared to any other office or institutional building constructed in the county previously.

Some 3½ years will be required to complete the project. It will loom nine stories high and include 451,000 square feet of usable space.

Some portions of the support facilities—the utilities plant and animal research—are already under construction.

Some planned equipment will have to come later since bids were far over the funds available and long hours of negotiating and study were needed to allow the awarding of contracts.

It will be difficult to specify a date when the ECU Medical School became a reality, as future generations look back. The admission of the first one year class was significant, as was the beginning of the first class which would complete the full program.

The taking shape of the multi-million dollar home of the Medical School in the months ahead, however, will be a symbol to the public that the ECU School of Medicine is indeed an entity.

The Savings Make 55 MPH Sensible

Apparently many U. S. motorists are exceeding the 55 mile per hour speed limit.

The Federal Highway Administration reports that more than half do.

Yet surveys indicate that the lowered speed limit is saving both lives and fuel.

It's not easy to hold the speed down on a freeway, but the savings in gasoline and lives make the 55 mile limit a sensible one.

Differ On Farmland Sale

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — There are two outspoken schools of thought in North Carolina regarding the recent increased interest of foreign owners in Tar Heel farmland.

Nationwide, some 11 million farm acres have been bought by foreign interests. North Carolina is among the states in which such investments have already taken place or are developing rapidly.

Japanese and Italian interests have a hand in major farm developments in several coastal counties; Arabian contacts have been exploring with keen interest, and a Holland chicken hatchery operation is already operating in this state with tentative plans to expand.

Is this foreign interest a threat to North Carolina's economy?

Some say yes, and some say no. At a recent exchange of views the two sides in this issue were outlined by two key people in the state's agricultural economy.

To Senator Vernon White, D-Pitt County, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee and active in a variety of farming groups, there is a distinct threat.

Bid High

"I worry that in just a few years it may be impossible to find the capital to buy the land and equipment needed to operate a farm," says White. The foreign buyers are driving land prices higher and higher.

"They come in and are willing to pay from $300 to $500 per acre more than the going rate. If somebody matches their offer, they just go on again. Money is of no concern."

"We are going to lose some of our farmers because of these high prices being offered, and the competition," White fears.

The competition from foreign producers can be unfair to domestic farmers. Whatever the crop, the Tar Heel farmer must worry with locating a market, paying taxes, transporting the goods, and so on.

The foreign firms quite often raise a special product such as soybeans and export them at once to the country where the owners operate. No sales taxes are paid, there is no concern for local market

BILL NOBLITT

State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham, however, looks at the situation from another viewpoint. "You can't build a fence around the land.... a fence works two ways: it keeps people out as well as in."

There is keen interest and competition in North Carolina for the export market in farm goods, and obviously if stringent methods were adopted to bar a country from land ownership, it would be difficult if not impossible to do business with them otherwise.

"The governor and other leaders have been going overseas and saying we want to do business with you. We want foreign firms to build plants and hire people.

No Problem

"If we want to do business, it must go both ways. It doesn't bother me right now. I think if there are legitimate business or farming operations properly identified and engaged in a legitimate business deal... then there's nothing wrong with that", Graham feels.

Much of the foreign interest in American farmland comes from the attraction of our competitive free enterprise economy, and the advanced agricultural technology available here, Graham says.

But another attraction is the land itself as worldwide economic unrest causes fluctuations in other commodities and especially gold. "This will definitely inflate the value of our farmland as people invest in the land for its own self... this gives land a price standard beyond its own value at this time," Graham explains.

Free enterprise cuts two ways, also, Graham adds. Look at the tractors and farm equipment (as well as numerous other consumer items) made in foreign countries and for sale in this state.

Found 'Easy' Career

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor
NEW YORK (AP) — "Writing," says Wilfrid Sheed, after drawing carefully on his long cigar and then leaning back, eyeing it with satisfaction, "is something I sort of backed into."

He studies the smoke a moment, then offers that the cigar "is a sinister brand out of Miami — no questions asked," before continuing:

"You see, I found I could do it — write that is, and the minute you find that you can do it you find that you can't do anything else. It makes you instantly unemployable."

Sheed now has 11 books behind him — the latest is a collection of critical literary essays titled "The Good Word & Other Words" — but he recalls that the first thing he wrote was a book review for an Australian newspaper.

Sheed, who was born in Britain, says he did it while spending a year in Australia. "I had gone there because my father is Australian and I felt the pilgrimage had to be made."

Returning to the United States, Sheed says, "things began looking up when I was introduced to a newspaper editor to whom I sold several pieces."

Then, the soft-spoken, amiable 48-year-old says, "I wrote a short story and The New Yorker magazine published it. Whereupon I spent a year fruitlessly trying to repeat this success by writing about sensitive, small boys. At the end of the year I felt I really didn't give a damn about sensitive, small boys, and I started trying to write a novel."

He decided to devote his time to writing and has turned out numerous magazine pieces as well as seven novels — the latest was "Transatlantic Blues" — a pair of novellas in one book, two collections of non-fiction, and the text "for what essentially was a picture book: I was adorning a collection of pictures and you might call my writing a libretto, if it was reviewed it was similar to having an opera reviewed just for the words."

If he had to choose between fiction and non-fiction writing, Sheed says emphatically, "Fiction all the way!"

"You feel so good after you've done fiction. I would rather be a third-rate novelist than a first-rate essayist — and there are those who say I have had my wish."

The Snowbound People

WASHINGTON — You're stuck in the airport and your plane has been delayed, and they're trying to clear the runway of snow, and there are no motel rooms available within the area, and you've been to the airline counter six times and the magazine counter four times, and you've looked at every souvenir they sell, and you've had it with the Moonies and their smelly carnations, and you've run out of quarters for the pinball machines on the balcony. What do you do?

I discovered the other day one of the fun things to do is to listen in on other people's telephone calls. Most telephones at airports are located 12 inches from each other and there is no problem pretending you're on the phone when in fact you're eavesdropping on the person next to you.

Here are some of the better conversations I heard while I was killing time at National Airport during the last snowstorm.

ART BUCHWALD

To the editor:

Signing up for Cable TV recently presented a number of problems to the residents of Lakewood Pines who for the most part are avid gardeners. It was necessary to dig into the lawns, shrubbery, and yards in order to run underground lines.

We were comforted by the announcement that all would be restored to good order when finished; further that lawns would be "reseeded and dressed."

After considerable delay in "renovating" the damaged portions of our lawn (it was explained that the company was experiencing difficulties in obtaining grass seed, I peered out of my study window one day to note a pick-up truck parked by the driveway area, and a young man getting out of the vehicle with a brown bag in his hand. I went downstairs to greet him and inquired as to what he was doing. He nonchalantly explained that he was about to "fix up our yard." In truth, he had already begun this task by sprinkling seed about, here and there. I pointed out to him that the bulk of the seed lay on a manhole cover; however, he smiled and continued his task. I asked him if he was going to "dress" the area, perhaps rake or spread a cover of fertilizer or something over the seeded area. He said simply that he didn't have a rake or anything else, for that matter — just the little brown bag of seed.

Well, I mused to myself, this is all new to me. I have some difficulty in getting grass to grow in certain areas; still the Cable TV people are friendly and cooperative, and the cable works — hence, I forgot about the entire matter. I assumed they just weren't adept as landscape gardeners.

What disturbs me is that at present we have a nice lawn thriving on our manhole cover.

Ed Reep

"Hello, honey. I'm stuck in Washington and won't get home tonight. Honest, to pete, the planes aren't flying... I'm not lying. What do you mean I sound happy? Why should I be happy because I can't get home tonight? I'm not with anybody... I'm by myself. Why do you always keep bringing up O'Hare Airport and the stewardess every time I get stuck? That was two years ago... I haven't seen her since. Do we have to go through this again? We were just lonely and had dinner and a few drinks together. I don't care what nosy Margie told you we were doing. So she saw us go up in the elevator together at the O'Hare Hilton. Is that a crime? How were we supposed to get to our rooms? Margie's a well poisoner. Look, I wouldn't have called

Those California Blues

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
LOS ANGELES — Having done nothing about laying the groundwork for a 1980 presidential campaign in California, President Carter's political operatives are now compounding that error by scheduling no activity before or after his March 2 fundraising speech in Los Angeles.

That has encouraged the conclusion here that the president's sole interest in the nation's most populous state is to take the California money and run. The state's Democratic politicians believe the White House has conceded California, both for the Democratic primary and general election, and is interested only in tapping the eternal fountain of Los Angeles green.

Correct or not, this appraisal contributes to the widespread conclusion here that Jimmy Carter is among the walking dead politically. He is seen a sure loser to Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. or Sen. Edward M. Kennedy in the Democratic primary and to Ronald Reagan in the general election. A 34 percent statewide approval rating in a new private poll confirms that judgment.

While Carter's declining political health is under preliminary diagnosis in Washington, he has been interred in California as a political corpse. Reagan's principal professed worry is that he will be denied the Carter record to run against in 1980 if the Democratic nominee is Brown or, more likely, Kennedy.

Nothing trivial ails Carter here. Both of California's presidential hopefuls, Republican Reagan and Democrat Brown, will attack him for ignoring world and domestic crises. Both these camps attack the Pollyanna tone in his State of the Union address.

But Carter's deterioration could at least be controlled by prudent political management. His schedule for the California trip reveals a primitive White House political operation. At this writing, two weeks before the event, plans call for a Washington-to-Los Angeles roundtrip to address the March 2 dinner raising Democratic National Committee funds — and nothing more.

In response to pleas that the president show his flag to more than merely $1,000-a-plate black-tie dinners at the Beverly Hilton Hotel, White House aides have entertained the possibility of one brief appearance on the way back to the airport the morning after the dinner. National Democratic finance chairman Charles T. Manatt, a leading California politician, has suggested a quick visit to UCLA (though college campus appearances on Saturday mornings are earmarked for disaster).

Lack of interest in expanding the president's trip reflects his overall approach to California. Experienced Democratic politicians with no love for Brown — state Treasurer Jesse Unruh, state Controller Ken Cory, state Assembly Speaker Leo McCarthy — would relish charting Carter's campaign plan. None has been approached.

This becomes even more difficult to understand in that chief Carter political operative Tim Kraft was a former Unruh aide (in Unruh's abortive campaign for mayor of Los Angeles). The fact that Kraft's principal activity on trips out West has been to court Brown money men strengthens the theory that his interest here is primarily financial.

The president's greatest weakness in California is the influential Jewish community. A "counter-Carter" dinner is being held March 1, the night before Carter's — in black tie, in the same hotel, with about the same number of people, but at only $25 a shot. A potpourri of anti-Carter Democrats is being sought as speakers: Cesar Chavez, Adm. Elmo Zum

February 21, 1939
S. Everette of Fountain, whose story that he saw an alligator on his Pitt County farm two miles from Falkland on the Pinetops Highway was doubted, went with several of the skeptics to this farm this morning to show them the tracks and found plenty of proof — another alligator.

Everette said he was positive the alligator he saw this morning was not the same one he saw yesterday afternoon.

He said the tracks made by the left foot were three feet from those made by the right foot and estimated the tail of the alligator to be four feet long.

The alligators were seen in the lowground about 70 yards from the Tar River and on the edge of the overflow water five feet deep.

Strength For Today

YOUTH OF ATHENS

The young men of ancient Athens took this oath upon reaching the age of citizenship:

"We will never bring disgrace to this our city by any act of dishonesty or cowardice; we will fight for our ideals and the sacred things of the city both alone and with many; we will reverse and obey the city's laws and do our best to incite a like respect and reference in those about us; we will strive unceasingly to quicken the public's sense of civic duty; and thus in all these ways we will strive to transmit this city not only the less but the greater, better and more beautiful than it was transmitted to us."

This last statement is particularly arresting. Can it be said of us that if we were to leave our communities, we would be leaving them in better and more exalted condition than we found them, and leaving them so because of something we had done for their betterment?

Last, Best Hope In Khomeini

By GEORGE GEDDA
WASHINGTON (AP) — When Ayatollah Khomeini was directing the Iranian protest movement from his Parisian exile last year, he was viewed here as a medieval obscurantist threatening a vital American interest.

Now, with Khomeini's followers in power, the American perception of the 78-year old Islamic chieftain has taken a 180-degree turn.

Khomeini is now seen as the last, best hope for a continuing cooperative relationship between Iran and the United States.

American officials who once derided Khomeini are now hopeful his forces can cope with the challenge posed by an array of leftist groups disappointed with the limited role given them in Iran's new government.

Just two months ago, when Shah Mohammad Reza

Pahlavi was still on the throne, President Carter denounced Khomeini's "uncontrolled statements...that encourage bloodbaths and violence."

The prevailing view here was that only the shah could ensure that Iran would remain faithful to the West.

Khomeini and his followers were seen as anti-American, anti-Semitic and incapable of running a modern industrialized state.

But based on the brief period the provisional government has been in power, officials believe a working relationship — if not outright friendship — can be established with Iran.

Moreover, recent events in Iran hardly seem calculated to ingratiate Khomeini with leftist forces in Iran. These elements fought shoulder to shoulder with Islamic militants to oust the shah but now have turned on Khomeini.

They have urged defiance of government orders to end the strikes, which have paralyzed the country's economy, and to return weapons seized 10 days ago when the constitutional government collapsed.

These events could sharpen one aspect of Khomeini's philosophy regarded here as a major asset for Washington: his anti-communism.

But the question being asked here is whether Khomeini and the inexperienced leadership of the new government can effectively confront the well-organized leftist opposition headed by the so-called People's Fedayeen.

It was the very situation Iran now confronts that American officials have feared all along — well before the shah's ouster.

According to this view, a continuation of the leftist-led strikes and attacks on government installations, combined with the steady disintegration of the Iranian military, could make conditions ripe for a leftist takeover.

Thus far, Soviet actions have not been reassuring to officials here. Soviet broadcasts directed at Iran have accused the United States of trying to provoke a crisis in Iran to justify American military intervention.

The result has been the most severe crisis of confidence between Washington and Moscow since the Carter administration took office.

Washington and Moscow are facing a dangerous situation in which each believes the other is willing to sacrifice friendly relations for the sake of strategic advantage.

walt, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, Gloria Steinem.

Sponsors of the counter-dinner complain that holding the president's dinner on Friday night, the Jewish Sabbath, demonstrates "insensitivity" — which only proves that a declining politician can do no right. In fact, Friday night political affairs have been commonplace here, without criticism. Stressing that he himself is Jewish, national Democratic treasurer Evan Dohelle told us: "I suspect the criticism is political, not religious."

But that only begs the question of why there is political criticism, apart from Carter's lack of a California base. Even Brown's enemies concede his balanced budget theme is far more relevant to voters than Carter's claim that they never had it so good. The president is suffering here not only because of what he is but because of what he says.

The consensus within the White House is that those sunbleached Californians who give huge majorities to the likes of Ronnie Reagan and Jerry Brown should not be taken seriously. Since Carter won in 1976 while losing California, why consider the state as anything more than a campaign warchest? That attitude ignores what happens to residents who misread the issues and are clumsy in their politics. It can only heighten what is already a high degree of peril in Carter's presidency.

Sheed — who also is a judge of the Book-of-the-Month Club, "selecting from a morass of books what I guess might be a likely candidate" — says of his books that "each has sold better than the one before. Actually, my books are very popular at the library, so the number of my readers is out of proportion to the number of my purchasers."

As critic — a person whose role is "to start and sustain intelligent conversation about the arts" — Sheed doesn't like "doing contemporary novelists, because you can't really work in the fields with the pickers and then go out and be the boss. There is a natural hostility between writers and critics."

Sheed lives and writes at his home in Sag Harbor, N.Y., and currently is working on a book about Clare Boothe Luce — "it will be an affectionate portrait" — and a novel — "of which about 100 pages are done, but I won't talk about it because it's bad luck to do so."

"I find writing easy compared with everything else in life," says Sheed. "Compared with the most minor problem of daily life, writing seems to me fool's gold — even though I'm not sure what that means."

Poultry Losses From Snowfall

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — Farm officials in Union County say Sunday's heavy snowfall caused an estimated $500,000 in losses to poultry farmers and processors and may result in higher prices to consumers.

M.C. Howell Jr., Union County agriculture extension chairman, said he has received reports that 10 poultry houses in the area buckled under the weight of the six-inch snowfall. He said the result is a "severe economic loss" for individual farmers and the processors they serve.

He said losses may run considerably higher than the $500,000 estimate because of the additional factors of time out of production, work time spent on repairing and rebuilding houses and investments to rebuild flocks.

Eight chicken houses and two turkey houses are reported destroyed or severely damaged as a result of the snowstorm. Howell said the average cost of a chicken house is $25,000 and the average cost of a turkey house is $40,000. The value of birds in a typical chicken house is $18,000 and in a turkey house $48,000.

Howell said poultry farmers will bear the burden of the property losses because they usually raise birds on contract for processors and processors will absorb the losses on the birds.

The typical hazard-insurance policy for poultry houses does not cover damage caused by snow. A policy must contain a clause covering stress loads of snow for the farmer to be able to recover losses.

However, some aid may be available to farmers in the form of disaster loans from lending agencies for agriculture. Union County has already been declared a disaster area by President Carter following the Feb. 6 snows, and farmers with losses are urged to contact the Farmers Home Administration, which has special loan programs for emergency damages.

Artist Will BeLecturing

Michael Tyzack, a noted British painter now a Professor of Fine Arts at the College of Charleston, S.C., will lecture at East Carolina University on Thursday, Feb. 22 at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium of the Leo Jenkins Fine Arts Center.

His lecture, "Painting as Celebration," will document Tyzack's personal philosophy of admiration of artists who, "despite personal tragedy or public set-back, maintain a rational optimism and through their art communicate positive and life-enhancing forces."

Tyzack's contribution to European art in the 1960's led to an invitation by the University of Iowa to join the School of Art and Art History as a Visiting Professor of Art. In 1976 he left Iowa to accept his present position in Charleston.

Winner of numerous prizes, his work has been shown in one-man and group shows extensively in England, the U.S. and in several European countries.

His lecture is part of the Visual Arts Forum being held this spring at ECU. There is no admission fee and the public is invited to attend.

Mardi Gras Parades Die

By BILL CRIDER
Associated Press Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) —
Mardi Gras season in New Orleans had a new look today — stripped of its gaudy parades by Carnival captains who said they wanted to keep the festival from being held "hostage" by striking police.

Carnival captains canceled all remaining city parades Tuesday — the first such action since the Korean War — to eliminate them as a factor in negotiations with the Teamsters-affiliated Police Association of Louisiana.

The decision means the city will be without the showpiece of its $50-million festival and merchants will face a painful economic loss, although no specific estimates were available. "Devastating," said one captain. "It's devastating to the economy."

Negotiations, with a federal mediator professing optimism, were to resume today — along with a civil district court hearing on a back-to-work order which, so far, the union has ignored.

The order, obtained by the city after 1,100 of New Orleans' 1,514 policemen walked out five days ago, contends the strike is illegal.

The captains of 18 Carnival "krewes," or private social clubs, said the cancellations were "a needed thing."

"We are not going to let Mardi Gras be held hostage by the Teamsters," the captains said. "They were holding Mardi Gras hostage. Well, we've taken the ransom."

"But Mardi Gras is not dead," emphasized Blaine Kern, an authority on the ancient and boozy festival coming up on Feb. 27. "This is just something that bumped into it."

One captain said processions could be quickly rescheduled if a settlement is reached.

There were plans to move some parades to suburbs, out of the strike zone. But many captains felt it would not be the same.

Union officials declined comment on the cancellations.

About 800 National Guardsmen and state troopers patrolled the city, but only the police were deemed to have the expertise in crowd control necessary for a normal Mardi Gras.

Union officials regarded that factor as "our four aces" in pressing for quick contract settlement.

"Now the card game is over," said the captain of Endymion, one of the krewes which stage the famed parades as part of their festivities. Krew captains traditionally are anonymous.

The union has been demanding compulsory binding arbitration of unresolved issues and inclusion of ranking officers in the bargaining unit.

City officials say the demands would give the Teamsters control of the police department.

Before the strike, parades were canceled only seven times — because of war and epidemic. The last time was during the Korean War.

THREAT? — Vincent Bruno, head of the New Orleans police union, was quoted in the States-Item Tuesday as threatening "to wreck the city" if necessary to win the police strike. Later the union issued a statement that Bruno "was only kidding". (AP Laserphoto)

Two Collisions In Greenville Tuesday

An estimated $2,875 property damage resulted from two collisions investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 5:27 p.m. mishap near the intersection of Third and Jarvis Streets, when a car driven by Elmer Eugene Cuthrell III of 401 Meade St. rounded a corner and struck a parked car owned by Nash W. Love Jr. of 108 Dogwood Dr.

The force of the impact caused the Love car to strike parked cars owned by William Henry Cobb of 302 South Library St. and Bruce Brooks Beddingfield of 1701 Rosewood Dr.

Damage was set at $950 to the Cuthrell car, $700 to the Love vehicle, $200 to the Beddingfield car and $75 to the Cobb auto.

Cuthrell was charged with driving under the influence and careless and reckless driving.

Police reported the second mishap, which occurred at 5:45 p.m. on Charles Street, 250 feet South of the Greenville Boulevard intersection, involved a car driven by Charles Edwin Williams Jr. of Route 1, Apex and a vehicle owned by Faye Harrell Goff of Route 4, Greenville.

Damage was set at $800 to the Williams car and $150 to the Goff auto.

from deep wells would not be affected, they noted.

Spokesmen also suggested that cooking utensils, clothing, and even pets exposed to the smoke be washed.

Pitt County Manager Reginald Gray said experts have said the solid waste at the site can be disposed of in a landfill without harmful effects to humans. Gray emphasized, however, that the Greenville landfill operated by the county would not be used as a disposal site.

BILBAO, Spain (AP) — Basque separatists abducted the manager of the Michelin tire plant in the Basque city of Vitoria and have announced they will kill him if Michelin fails to give workers higher pay.

Horne Explains Needs To Expand Utilities

Charles Horne, Director of Greenville Utilities, explained the system's need for capital expansion during a meeting of the League of Women Voters Tuesday night.

He and Ed Waldrop, former head of the Utilities Commission and present chairman of a committee to educate the public as to the need for a bond issue, gave a slide show and answered questions.

Several questions dealt with plans for a new water plant, the biggest money item at $16 million. Ruth Trevathan, former chairman of the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission, asked about overlap with rural systems funded by the Farmers Home Administration and the possibility of letting these systems supply outlying areas. Horne said that the size of their mains and their water pressure would not be sufficient for fighting fire and would cause trouble if the areas were annexed later. He said that service areas in Pitt County have been divided up and that there is little overlap.

Plans Laid By Seniors

The Town and Country Senior Citizens met last Thursday at St. Paul Episcopal Church with 85 members present.

Plans were made for an arts and crafts and bake sale to be held on Evans Mall. It was asked that articles be brought to the next meeting.

Reservations must be made for the April Chapel Hill trip, too, it was reminded.

Guests, Mrs. Ann Fornes and Mrs. Marjorie Angstadt were welcomed.

Nathan Johnson and Joe Keeter of the Roy Rogers Restaurant showed a Roy Rogers-Dale Evans film and gave out Pioneer Club cards.

Donations were agreed upon to the Winterville Christian Church in memory of former member, Maurice Houle, and to the library of Atlantic Christian College, in memory of former member, Mrs. Louise Briley, who was a member of the first graduating class of ACC.

Colloquium Held At Court House

The Greenville Alumnae Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority held its annual Black Awareness and Career Emphasis Week Colloquium in the Law Library of the Pitt County Court House Saturday afternoon.

Participants were Miss College Bound contestants, their parents and sorors.

Consultants were Ray Rogers, branch manager of Wachovia Bank and Trust Company; Eve Rogers, Chief Juvenile Court Counselor; Dr. Hazel J. Brown, dentist; Dr. E. C. Land, physician; and Addie Gore, home economist. Each consultant shared the advantages and disadvantages of his profession with related career, according to Gladys Sanders, sorority president and Rebecca Norcott, project chairman.

A large number of non-credit courses are being offered.

tional water from wells rather than from the river. The Utilities Commission does plan to drill a couple of new wells, Horne said, but has been advised that there will not be enough ground water to meet the city's needs. Dr. Kane said he deprecates the practice of shunting water off paved areas into water courses while the ground water is not recharged and the water table falls. He reported that, on field trips to the system with his students, he has observed the tightness of water.

Dick McKee, member of the committee which studied the bond issue for the Chamber of Commerce, reported that the Chamber supports them. However, he said the group "recommends a high visibility of energy conservation as it relates to the bond referendum and the utilities expansion" and also recommends that "before bonds are sold... a report should be made to fulfill the promise of spending only the funds which are needed."

Vincent Bellis of the ECU Biology Department asked about the location of sewer lines which, because of the need for gravity flow, often go through low-lying areas, perhaps the only places available for green space as the city becomes more urbanized. He expressed fear that 40- and 50-foot wide accessways would be cleared of trees. Horne acknowledged the need for "a good clean white way" for maintenance, but noted that sewer lines do not have to be laid in a completely straight line, as electric lines must, and said that is is often less expensive to avoid big trees than to remove them.

Alcohol - A Clean Fuel Not Subject To OPEC

By LEIGH WILSON
Associated Press Writer
FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — The oil embargo several years back got Stanley Barber thinking about alternatives, and he started fooling around with alcohol as a fuel for his Pontiac. It worked well enough, he says, but he has since found a more practical, if more limited, application — forklifts, the squat, yellow workhorses of industry that require a clean-burning fuel because they are used indoors.

Whirlpool Corp. and Gerber Products Co. agreed to let him experiment at their plants here. Today four forklifts are rolling about under alcohol power, and Barber has begun selling conversion kits to others.

Spending Less On Clothing

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Consumers are spending less money per capita on clothing these days, says a family economics expert. Kathy Prochaska-Cue says they spend about six percent of their take-home income on clothing now, down from 8.2 percent in 1960. She attributes the trend partly to resistance to higher clothing prices, but also to a more casual lifestyle and a slowdown in the growth rate of 14-34-year-olds, who have highest clothing expenditures. The extension specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln says consumers appear to be cost-conscious in their apparel shopping. They buy at sales, compare prices, buy fewer garments and choose durable, high-quality clothing over in-fashion items even if the former cost more.

PRODUCTIVITY GOALS
TOKYO (AP) — China plans to produce 300 new lines of "good quality" consumer goods in the next two years, including watches, bicycles, sewing machines and washing machines, the official Hsinua news agency reports.

"They had an environmental interest in this thing — holding down pollution in their plant," says Barber, 48, who owns a bridge-building company. "The other reason was the fact that propane (the typical forklift fuel) could become short in supply if we had another oil embargo, and they're looking for an alternate route to go." "And they were very interested in getting a cleaner-burning machine."

Alcohol, and blends of alcohol and gasoline, have been tried elsewhere, including in the Nebraska Gasahol program in which drivers used more than 90,000 gallons of gasoline-alcohol with good results.

The difference between his experiments and others, Barber says, is his success in squeezing reasonable mileage from alcohol.

His 1974 Pontiac, with a 453-cubic-inch V-8 engine, gets nine to 11 miles per gallon on either gasoline or alcohol, he says. Barber applied for patents on his auto and forklift designs, and in 1977 wrote General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co., suggesting they explore the use of alcohol. Both replied that their tests using 100 percent alcohol had shown that it would yield only half the mileage of gasoline.

Barber says he has achieved good mileage in part because the fuel is heated to form a vapor before it is burned in the engine. And he tunes the engine to where it would "knock" if burning gasoline. But he is concentrating on forklifts now, and has given a Tulsa, Okla., company permission to market conversion kits. Alcohol can't compete with gasoline in automobiles yet, he says, because of the quantities needed — Americans use about 100 billion gallons of gasoline a year, compared with 50 million gallons of alcohol — and the lack of a distribution system.

But forklift users are accustomed to storing their fuel on site. "It's slightly more expensive to run a forklift on alcohol than it is on propane, at today's prices," Barber says. "It all boils down to availability." Alcohol can be bought in 7,000-gallon lots for 52 cents a gallon, compared with 42 cents to 48 cents a gallon for propane, he says. But Whirlpool had trouble getting enough propane last winter during a long cold period, Barber says, and in an oil embargo, propane, a petroleum product, "gets in shorter supply faster than gasoline." The Whirlpool forklift using 100 percent alcohol ran 1,200 hours without an oil change — which normally comes every 100 hours, says Barber, who has told a U.S. Senate committee and an Energy Department panel about his experiments. "The only thing contaminating the oil is the dirt in the air. You're not getting any of the sulfur or hydrocarbons you'd get in gasoline," he says.

Join Pheresis Day Campaign

McDonald's of Greenville has joined with the local Jaycees and the Tar River Blood Center here in the sponsorship of a McDonald's-Pheresis Machine Day on Saturday, Feb. 24.

On Saturday, McDonald's has agreed to donate 50 percent of all french fry sales from the chain's three Greenville restaurants toward the purchase of the Pheresis machine.

Jim Wilson, chairman of the Pheresis project for the Greenville Jaycees, said that local Jaycees and Jaycettes will be at the three McDonald's on Saturday accepting donations towards the project and also providing information regarding the machine.

The Pheresis machine, according to Wilson, is used in the treatment of several blood disorders such as leukemia and other types of cancer. In separating the four major components within the blood, the machine enables doctors to transfuse concentrated doses of a particular component and reduces the chances of transmitting diseases to the patient.

The Greenville Jaycees are spearheading the project to purchase the sophisticated piece of equipment, which will be located at the Blood Center here. The cost of the machine, which will be used to serve people throughout eastern North Carolina, is $17,000, he pointed out.

According to the project chairman, the nearest Pheresis machine is located in Norfolk.

"Please support McDonald's Pheresis Machine Day by buying french fries on Saturday and also by making a donation," Wilson urged the public.

The Red Cross is preparing display boards regarding the Pheresis project for display at the three McDonald's locations.

Censorship Is A Daily Thing For Most Brazilians

By DIGBY A. SOLOMON

SAO PAULO, Brazil (UPI) — The 85 million Brazilians who listen to the radio every day never heard a word about the 200,000 metalworkers who paralyzed Sao Paulo industries for three days last October.

And the 45 million who watch television every night never heard Gen. Euler Bentes Monteiro when he stumped Brazil seeking the presidency, though they saw a lot of his government-backed opponent on their screens.

Both Monteiro and the strikers were barred from the airwaves by federal police censors whose job it is to ban any news their bosses fear may arouse the average Brazilian.

Their work extends to popular and highbrow art, too. Movies, plays, books, records and even soap operas must all obtain the censorship office's seal of approval before they can be offered to the public. Even paintings and statues that offend the censors have been removed from art galleries.

About the only medium free of censors these days, in fact, is the press which is quick to take the government to task for its failings.

And that is only because President Ernesto Geisel decided to make a show of his pledge to bring back democracy to Brazil by ordering censors removed from magazine and newspaper offices in 1977 — a process that was completed in May 1978.

Thus came the current strange situation in which Brazilians, who pass newspaper stands and see headlines attacking the government, never hear a word about its alleged misdeeds mentioned on their newscasts.

"The government knows the people who read the newspapers are an elite who would find out what the government is doing even if the papers were censored," explains one reporter. "What they want is to keep the masses, the average person, uninformed."

Former presidential press secretary Toledo Camargo almost admitted as much in 1977 when he told broadcasters they needed to be censored because in Brazil, where half the population is illiterate, "this medium has such a tremendous impact potential, such tremendous power to influence public opinion."

Brazilian newspapers have a combined daily circulation of 20 million copies, while radio reaches 85 million of Brazil's 125 million people and 45 million watch TV nightly.

So censors go to broadcasters to ban news of events they believe will upset people — stories about police brutality, human rights violations, strikes, student protests and the like.

Those who disobey, Communications Minister Euclides Quandt de Oliveira warned broadcasters, may have their station licenses revoked by the government.

That kind of economic pressure prods journalists into obeying censors' orders, which now come by telegram but until recently were conveyed in brief phone calls.

"A strange voice would call you and say, 'So and so is forbidden,' and that was that," recalls Marco Antonio Gomes, Sao Paulo radio news editor for TV Globo, Brazil's largest network.

"People didn't even know whom they were talking to," he says. "We probably got some calls from people who weren't really censors but didn't want certain things publicized. But we obeyed anyway. Who wanted to take the chance?"

Newsmen got so many calls — Rio de Janeiro broadcasters received 270 calls from censors between 1973 and 1978 — they soon learned to predict what story would elicit police interest. Before long, many newsrooms simply refused to answer telephones near air time.

When they're not complaining about censorship, Brazilian broadcasters laugh about the ludicrous situations that occur because of the censors' inefficiency — a trait they share with many other public servants.

Censors often forget to call every station. While most broadcasters were forced to ignore a national reunion of human rights groups in Sao Paulo last November, the Bandeirantes television network, unaware the censors had prohibited news on it, went on reporting the event.

Other times broadcasters get news from censors before it happens. In 1973, when one censor ordered perplexed newsmen not to broadcast anything about "the imminent kidnap of a Uruguayan citizen."

Some times censors even blunder into publicizing what they want to hide.

So much outcry was raised by the 1976 banning of a book by author Rubem Fonseca that novelist Guilherme Figueiredo (brother of the new president) said, "If it were not for the censors, I would never have heard about this excellent Brazilian writer."

Censors say they will ban or at least abridge any television or radio show, record, book, movie or play they consider immoral or which they find damaging to national security — something they do not define.

Most often, they simply ban a piece without explaining why. "That's the worst thing about it," laments playwright and journalist Alberto Boynton

Miller. "They never tell you why they prohibit something."

There are signs that censorship may be lessened, if not stopped outright, if the incoming Figueiredo administration keeps its promise to liberalize Brazilian public life.

Only 14 formal censorship orders were recorded by broadcasters in 1978, compared to 111 in 1974.

Stanley Kubrick's "Clockwork Orange," which had been banned for years, was finally allowed onto Brazilian screens last September.

The Bolshoi ballet, banned from touring in 1977, came to Brazil in 1978. Popular singer Chico Bouarque, whose highly political songs had long been banned, was allowed to release a controversial album recently — although two of its tracks were banned from radio play January 11.

Power Outage Today Due Cable Explosion

An underground cable explosion at 9:30 this morning resulted in a power outage for a 50 minute period in a relatively small downtown area.

Malcolm Green, Assistant Director of Greenville Utilities,

The Lesson...

(Continued from page 1) under the given circumstances," Prescott pointed out. "As far as the school officials, Red Cross, Salvation Army and all others involved, they all functioned very well."

According to Wellcome Middle School principal Richard Stevens, approximately 20-25 evacuees came to the school during the day, but left to go to Rose to spend the night.

North Pitt High School had five persons to show, but directed them to Rose where cafeteria services were offered.

28 Hours, 15 Minutes, Without Sleep

Although a majority of residents were allowed to return to their homes late Monday afternoon, Chuck Owens, two East Carolina University volunteers and the Rose custodians spent the night with the remaining 20 persons who were unable to go home.

Owens, who went without sleep 28 hours and 15 minutes, stated that those who stayed were "very complimentary" of the services offered to them.

"They were appreciative to have a place to sleep and food to eat," said Owens. "Our biggest problem was keeping warm in the Rose gym, but we had plenty of blankets, so it really wasn't that much of a problem."

Kim Gupton and Lisa Danley, two ECU students, volunteered their time to come to Rose and answer phones and play cards with the remaining evacuees.

"It may sound strange, but it was a lot of fun," said Miss Gupton. "It was good to meet people, although they were upset about going home."

PREPARED NEXT TIME

Tuesday served as a day of reflection for the many people who had been involved with the evacuation. All residents were able to return to their homes, with warnings from the county Health Department about the chemical after effects from the fire site water run off.

"I think this situation shows that we need to get together and work out a plan so we don't overlap next time," said Mrs. Taylor of the Red Cross. "We need to get organization so we'll know what to do."

David Nichols of the county Sheriff Department stated, "From our standpoint, things went extremely well for a not-everyday occurrence. The fire marshal did an extremely good job."

Fire Marshal Joyner pointed out that the County Board of Commissioners had assigned him the two duties said the "cable blew up underground at the corner of Second and Washington Streets. This knocked off power in the CBD area along First and Second Streets, Pitt Street on to Reade Street and out beyond to of fire marshal and head of civil preparedness because "they are so closely knit."

"When something like this happens, people will usually call the fire department first," Joyner explained. "When we had a tornado a couple of years back, the firemen were the first to be called."

"When a situation like this arises, people will do what they've got to do," said Dave Bumgarner. So people from around the county mustered determination, services and time to make sure that the people's needs were met.

Hospital Bd....

(Continued from page 1) has been good and that the frigid weather in Canada, 81 below chill factor at times while they were there, might influence Canadian nurses to come south.

It was reported a meeting on nurse recruitment held recently here has also brought insights into how to up the Pitt Memorial staff, which is now 230 and should be 400 within a short time.

Chief of Staff Dr. William S. Bost Jr. received approval for provisional active staff privileges for the following: Dr. Naheed A. Khan, rehabilitation and physical medicine; Dr. Leonard E. Masters, family practice; Dr. Paul Samuel Camnitz, ear, nose and throat and maxillofacial surgery; Dr. Yash P. Kataria, internal medicine and pulmonary diseases; and Ms. Kiane Janell Lancaster, R.N., practice for Dr. Donald Weir in rehabilitation medicine.

Dr. William Laupus, Dean of the School of Medicine, praised the efforts of Dr. Bost and others who have worked to relieve the dilemma of having to turn away persons slated for elective surgery in recent weeks. He said the situation here is good proof of need for medical school facilities here.

Whether the hospital is still in the market for a chaplain was discussed. It was pointed out that the need is still felt, but that money is a factor, that it appears that at least $30,000 a year would be needed for salary, secretary, office facilities, etc.

It is hoped that the new doors for the lobby will be installed this month — the problem has been delayed delivery. Plant Manager Ralph Hall reported — and that work on the lobby ceiling also can be completed soon.

Approval was given for the funding of a salary for an associate administrator for nursing service.

Third Street past the Overton Supermarket site."

Green explained that a delay was experienced by repair crewmen who encountered a water filled manhole in the first attempt to make repairs. To minimize the time factor for repairs, the maintenance crew dug in on both sides of the manhole and made a temporary by-pass to restore power.

"The crew will be working today until the damaged cable is fixed," Green said. "The recent weather, even the water in the manhole did not contribute to the explosion, it was just one of those malfunctions that happen sometimes."

Since the outage included the plant of "The Daily Reflector," this could possibly entail some delay in the printing of today's paper.

Plan Construct Office Complex

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Construction is scheduled to get under way in April on a $4 million office complex in Research Triangle Park.

The complex, to be built on an 8.5-acre tract, will house additional office space for firms located in the park, according to Robert B. Teer Jr., assistant vice president for Nello L. Teer Co. of Durham.

Teer said the complex will also house space for businesses that supply the park and service firms currently located in the park.

The new complex will have two buildings and will cover 82,000 square feet.

Jaguars Have It Easy In First Round

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer
WILLIAMSTON — There was very little good Farmville Central coach Mike Terrell could find to say about the Jaguars' 64-49 win over Tarboro last night, except that it was a victory that keeps the Jags alive in the Division I 3-A tournament.

The top-seeded team from the Eastern Carolina Conference had its troubles against the Vikings, the number four team from the Northeastern Conference, and was only able to pull away late in the third quarter, despite a 29 per cent Tarboro shooting effort.

In last night's game, the ECC's top-seeded girls' team, Southwest Edgecombe, defeated Roanoke Rapids 70-31 behind Alphonse Jenkins' 31 points.

"I thought we played very poorly—about as sorry as you could play," Terrell said after the game. "I can't think of a single good thing about the game, except that we won."

Even that was in doubt for much of the contest as Tarboro came back from a six-point deficit in the first quarter to tie 12-8 at the end of the period.

It was nip-and-tuck through the second quarter and Viking Kelvin Bryant canned a jumper from the left side with 11 seconds left in the half to make it 24-22 Tarboro at intermission.

James Tyson hit three straight shots, two from the top of the key, in the third quarter to give Farmville a 32-28 lead. It was a lead the Jags never gave up, although they were tied a couple more times in the third quarter.

But it was Tyson who put his team ahead for good with a jumper from the right side with 2:51 left in the third that made it 36-34. And he completed a three-point play with 26 seconds on the clock for a 43-34 Farmville lead going into the final period.

Tarboro could get no closer than five points in the last quarter, despite a Jaguar drought at the foul line late in the period. Donald Reid canned four straight free throws in the closing seconds to give the Jags the win going away.

"They definitely don't have a good team," Terrell said of the Vikings. "I guess sometimes when you play a team like that, you play like they do."

Terrell made no bones about the fact that he didn't think the Vikings could compete in the Eastern Carolina Conference.

The Jaguars were supposed to play Monday night, but couldn't due to Sunday's snowfall. Terrell felt the time off may have had an adverse effect on his team.

"We have gone three days without a workout. You need a good workout before a game. We were not very sharp at all. We rebounded poorly, threw the ball away and made mistakes on defense. When we stole the ball, we couldn't take advantage of it. "I think the thing was timing. Our timing was off. I think that was due to the days off."

The Jaguars only hit 44.1 per cent of their attempts from the field and held a 51-43 rebounding advantage, due mainly to a 20-13 margin in the final period. Farmville committed 21 turnovers to 18 for Tarboro.

Four Jaguars were in double figures. Tyson led the way with 15, Donald Reid had 14, Calvin Horne 13 and Earl Harris 10. Kelvin Bryant scored 18 for Tarboro, while Greg Heath and Tony Hyman added 12 each.

The Jaguars will play the winner of Thursday night's North Pitt-Roanoke game on either Saturday or Monday night.

Despite his team's poor showing last night, Terrell is not worried about the Jags giving up. "Usually, when we play poorly, we come back and play well the next game."

"They'll want to work hard; they know they played poorly."

Smith Inks ECU Pact

Doug Smith, a lineman from Pamlico County High School, has signed a national letter of intent with East Carolina University.

Smith was named the Most Valuable Player in the Shrine Bowl game in December, and is one of the top prospects in the state. He had earlier signed non-binding grants-in-aid with both East Carolina and the University of North Carolina.

Today is the first day that football prospects may sign the nationally binding letter of intent, recognized by nearly all NCAA schools.

Teammate Keith Cowell, who also signed both with ECU and UNC, reportedly elected to attend the University of North Carolina.

Pirates Face Duke In State Opener

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
East Carolina University's women's basketball team, which finished third in the North Carolina AIAW standings, opens play in the state tournament Thursday at Appalachian State University.

The Lady Pirates will be facing sixth-seeded Duke University in the first round. Also in the same bracket with the Pirates are second-ranked North Carolina and seventh place Wake Forest.

N.C. State, the regular season leader, faces last-place UNC-Greensboro, while number four Appalachian State takes on Western Carolina in the other first round game.

The Pirates are scheduled to play at 6 p.m. Thursday, with the winner advancing into a semifinal game Friday at 9 p.m.

The championship will be played, along with a consolation game, on Saturday. All East Carolina games will be broadcast locally over WOOW by the Pirate Sports Network.

The Lady Pirates finished the year with a 16-10 record, actually second best in the state overall. N.C. State was 21-6, with North Carolina, 15-12, trailing the Pirates. Duke finished up with an 11-9 mark.

The Pirates had expected to play a warmup game for the tournament with Virginia Commonwealth on Monday, but the game was cancelled because of the snow.

"I really hated to lose that game," Coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "I think we had a very good chance to win in that one, and it would have given us a real good shot at equaling the 19 wins of last year."

Andruzzi added that she was very proud of her players. "At the start of the year, I would have been very surprised to have won 15 games. But the girls have worked very hard and done an outstanding job."

While East Carolina's women beat Duke, 81-66, in their only meeting of the year, Andruzzi added that it was early in the season, and that in the tournament, everything goes out the window.

"Crazy things happen in tournament play. People do unexpected things, so you can't rely on what happened in the past. I know that we are working very hard to get ready for the tournament. If we do well, we have a chance to get into the regionals, and we'd really like to do that."

Andruzzi said that one of her biggest disappointments of the season was the lack of publicity received by Rosie Thompson outside the immediate area of Greenville.

"She's probably the best player ever at East Carolina, but she isn't being recognized enough. She's the leading scorer and rebounder in the state, and she's also the leading scorer in the region, and ranks sixth in the whole country, where she's ninth in rebounding."

"She against a lot of good players, but it's important for us to go all out if she is to get the All-America recognition she deserves."

Thompson currently is averaging 24.5 points a game, and is pulling down 12.5 rebounds a contest.

Three other Pirates are in double figures, Gale Kerbaugh at 13.5, Lydia Rountree at 13.6 and Marcia Girven at 11.3. Girven is also averaging 9.8 rebounds a game.

"I couldn't be more pleased with the progress of the team this year," the coach, who is finishing her first season as coach here, said. "They have worked hard to get where they are. We had five games that we lost by five or less points, so we really could have had a 20-plus victory season with a little more effort or luck."

Unless the Lady Pirates receive a bid to the regional tournament, the state event will wind up their season.

Thompson Paces All-State Team

East Carolina University's Rosie Thompson and N.C. State's Genia Beasley were unanimously selected to the NCAIA Division I basketball team by the league's eight coaches yesterday.

The two head a six-woman team selected to the first team, with five others named on the second unit.

Thompson is the state's leading scorer for the second straight year, and also leads the state in rebounding. Beasley is the center for N.C. State's top-seeded team in the state tournament, which opens Thursday in Boone.

Beasley is a 6-2 junior from Benson, while Thompson is a 5-9 junior from Blounts Creek.

Joining them on the first team were Trudi Lacey of N.C. State, a 5-10 forward from Clifton Forge, Va.; Jayne Arledge of Western Carolina, a 5-6 senior forward from Candler; Carol Almond of Appalachian State, a 5-6 senior guard from Salisbury; and Bernie McGlade of North Carolina, a 6-0 junior center from Glouster City, N.J.

Lacey and Arledge were also unanimous choices to the team, but not to the first unit.

The second unit consists of Linda Matthews of North Carolina, a 5-8 senior guard from Charlotte; Ginger Rouse of N.C. State, a 5-11 sophomore guard from Fairfax, Va.; Cathy Shoemaker of North Carolina, a 5-10 senior forward from North Charleston, S.C.; and Anna Parker, UNC-Greensboro, a 5-10 junior forward from Monroe.

Falls Road Trips Knights

Falls Road Academy swept a trio of games from Greenville Christian Academy last night. The visitors won the varsity boys' game, 55-53, took the girls' game, 47-7, and downed the Knight junior varsity, 47-29.

In the girls' game, it was all over after the first period, which saw Falls Road take a 10-2 lead. That was upped to 24-3 by halftime and to 41-7 during the third period. Falls Road shut out the Lady Knights, 6-0, in the final quarter.

Melody Garnell led Falls Road with 19, while Vickie Wells had 18.

In the boys' game, Falls Road romped out to a 22-9 lead in the first period. Greenville was unable to cut into that in the second quarter and trailed, 36-21, at the half.

But during the third period, the Knights rallied cutting the margin back to 42-33. In the last quarter, Greenville Christian managed to pull back into a tie, but Falls Road scored with ten seconds left for a 55-53 lead, and GCA's final shot at the basket was off the mark.

John Chambers led Falls Road with 22 points, while Tim Winstead added 10. Greenville Christian was led by Ben Haddock with 22, while Steve Tyburski had 13 and Marshall Crumpler had 12.

The conference tournament will be played starting Friday at Falls Road.

Duke, Clemson Meet Tonight

By The Associated Press
The Atlantic Coast Conference basketball race is going down to the wire with fourth ranked North Carolina and sixth ranked Duke neck-and-neck. Three crucial conference games remain, with one coming tonight in the Duke-Clemson meeting.

Duke carries its 8-2 record to Tiger territory for tonight's 7:30 contest at Clemson's Littlejohn Coliseum, where North Carolina, North Carolina State and Wake Forest have met defeat this season.

The Blue Devils, who meet North Carolina in a regular season finale Saturday, have lost previously at North Carolina and Maryland in conference play. They are 8-2 in league action and 20-4 overall, while Clemson is 4-7 and 16-8.

Three other ACC teams see action tonight, Wake Forest entertaining Maryland in Greensboro in an 8 p.m. tipoff, and Virginia going to William and Mary for a non-conference contest.

Duke defeated Clemson by a 73-54 margin in their meeting in Durham, and a victory for the Blue Devils tonight would keep them in the favorite's role for top seeding in the ACC tournament March 1-3.

Maryland carries a 5-5 ACC record against the Wake Forest Deacons, who are 3-7.

Tough Schedule For ECU Baseballers

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

East Carolina University's baseball program began on the small college level in the post-war era and has evolved into one of the top major college independent teams in the Southeast, head coach Monte Little told the Greenville Sports Club yesterday.

With that evolution has come a number of changes, both good and bad, according to Little.

East Carolina Teachers College started playing baseball in the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics after World War II. The team played 15 to 20 games a season and could get by with a small number of players.

In 1964, the Pirates joined the Southern Conference and came under the rules of the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA). Those rules required more ballgames, which necessitated the need for more players, especially pitchers.

But while the ECU schedule was increasing in both quantity and quality, the NCAA limit on the number of grants a school could offer in baseball dropped from 21 to 19 to 13.

Now, most schools are forced to break up their 13 full grants into a number of partial grants, since they have a 25-player roster, Little said, and this fact has caused some problems for coaches.

Little's first season at the Pirate helm was 1977, the school's last year in the Southern Conference. The former Ayden High School all-American, who spent several years in the Cardinal organization, led the team to a 30-10 record and the league championship. He was named the SC's coach of the year.

The Pirates received an automatic bid to the NCAA playoffs that season. But the next year they became independents and Little found that NCAA bids are difficult to come by for independents, especially in the Southeast.

"There are just too many good teams in the South and Southeast," he said. "I hope they (the NCAA) will realize that, so we will get more bids in the South and Southeast."

The Pirates now find themselves in a position where they must schedule the best teams they can in order to draw enough attention to get an NCAA bid. "Look at Indiana State (in basketball)." They're undefeated, but they're still number two because of their schedule."

The Pirates will play a 49-game slate this season, with four exhibition games, including games against South Carolina, Clemson, North Carolina and Virginia Tech, all reputable teams. "We have to schedule the best people we can with our independent status," Little emphasized.

With that type of schedule, the Pirates will have to depend on a great number of quality athletes to be successful, Little said, including at least four dependable pitchers. For that reason, recruiting is of prime importance.

"You have to be concerned with what kind of athletes you recruit," Little told the group. The Pirate baseball staff is first concerned with "good citizenship", and then ability, he said.

"You also have to find out what their priorities are. A lot of guys think their social life is first, athletics second and academics third. You've got to have people whose academics are first, athletics second and social life third."

Little said the ECU coaches must make the players realize that it is a privilege to play college athletics. "We try to push them to the very limit. We lose a lot of athletes that way."

Another problem is the senior who has no aspirations to play professional baseball. Sometimes that player will tend to concentrate more on other things in his final season and not produce like he should.

Fan support is very important to the Pirate baseball program, Little said, and the team has done a number of things to generate that support. "Without fans, we don't have a program," he said.

The Pirates started playing night baseball last season so that working people would have a chance to attend the games. The team also does its best to speed up the game and make it exciting, Little said.

This season, the Bucs will play 33 home games, a large percentage of the total schedule, to try and generate interest.

Fielding questions from the audience, Little said this year's team is better than last season's, especially in the pitching department where there is more depth.

He also said that Title IX, the federal anti-discrimination law, poses a great problem to the ECU baseball program.

"It is more than a threat, it is a reality," Little told the group. "I am concerned greatly with the problem we are facing with Title IX. I'm not opposed to Title IX, but I am opposed to when it hurts our young men, or when we (Title IX supporters) are being unrealistic with our demands. We have to compromise."

Little said the needs of the Pirate baseball program are so great, they can not be immediately met without Title IX. "With Title IX, it stagnates us," he said.

Another question concerned the ECU participation in the North Carolina Summer League. The Pirates discontinued their summer league program last season, due to insufficient funds, but are hoping to participate again this summer.

"I feel a great need for the summer program," Little said.

Freestylers Continue To Pace Buc Times

One of the critical factors to consider when judging the strength of a swim team is the squad's ability in the freestyle events. This barometer of swimming is effective because of the flexibility involved in the freestyle.

A 200-yard swimmer can shorten the distance to 100 or 50 yards, or possibly lengthen it to 500. A 100-yard free swimmer can also shorten the swim to 50 yards or may lengthen it to 200. Both swim well on relays where team points abound in big meets.

East Carolina swimmers hold first place in both the 200-yard and 100-yard freestyle events in the current top 12 ranking for eastern swimmers and have earned seven of the top 11 spots in the two events combined.

John Tudor holds the top position in both events. His 200-yard free time of 1:39.24 is closely followed by Ted Nieman's 1:39.67. Bill Fehling ranks fourth with a time of 1:43.36, and Jack Clowar stands sixth with a time of 1:43.89.

Tudor's 100 yard time of 45.81 ranks him 1:29 seconds ahead of the nearest contender. Fehling and Nieman also ranked in the 100-yard free at the fourth and fifth spots, respectively.

In the 500-yard free, Nieman owns second with a time of 4:38.52. Kevin Miesel, Tudor and Doug Brindley also ranked in the 500-yard freestyle.

East Carolina also holds the number three position in the medley relay with a time of 3:36.45. The team that captured this position is comprised of David Moodie, Dan Newhaller, Clowar and Fehling. Kevin Miesel's time of 9:32.89 retains first place in the 1,000 yard freestyle this week. Nieman and Brindley also ranked in the 1,000 yard free.

Clowar clocked in at 1:55.54 to acquire the top position in the 200-yard individual medley. Tudor, Nieman, Doug Nieman and Mike Triau also placed in this event.

In the 50-yard free, Fehling and Tudor won, first and second places. Fehling was just .21 seconds ahead of Tudor with a time of 21.09.

The 200-yard butterfly leaders include Clowar, fourth at 1:55.36, and Tudor, 11th at 1:59.43. Tudor and Doug Nieman placed sixth and ninth in the breaststroke. Tudor's time of 2:14.39 was just .68 ahead of teammate Nieman. Tudor, Clowar and Doug Nieman ranked second, third and fourth in the 200-yard backstroke with teammate Ross at ninth.

East Carolina's team of Tudor, Clowar, Fehling and Ted Nieman captured the first position in the 400-yard freestyle relay. Their time of 3:04.89 is .89 better than second-ranked Pitt.

East Carolina's strength in the freestyle events lends the team added strength in the relay and other events. In all, the Pirates placed first in six of the 11 events on the most recent top 12 listing. East Carolina swimmers ranked in the top two positions in all freestyle events.

The next Pirate competition is Thursday through Saturday at UNC-Wilmington in the Seahawks' annual invitational meet.

Plane Trip Making NCAA Take New Look

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — Two hotshot football prospects who mysteriously disappeared in a private plane four days ago must surely land today to sign a national letter of intent, figures the NCAA.

And the minute they show up they'll become the first case investigated in an aggressive new crackdown on recruiting violations.

"They haven't been seen around town or around their schools since they took off in the private aircraft," NCAA enforcement director David Berst said Tuesday, on the eve of national letter of intent signing day.

He declined to identify the prospects or say where they're from but added, "Their families say they don't know where they are and their friends say they don't know where they are." Significantly, the families don't appear worried about the missing young men and haven't bothered to go looking for them.

Their mysterious disappearance is one of many "provocative things" NCAA investigators have picked up since they spread out across the country three weeks ago with a list of the top 100 prospects. It was the first time investigators had hit the recruiting trail alongside coaches and prospects for a first-hand look at the rules they are pledged to enforce.

"I think we've developed some information that will lead to cases and appearances before the Committee on Infractions," Berst said. "From our point of view, it looks like the program is going to be a big success." For example, the NCAA has a description of the plane the two missing recruits took off in.

"We intend to find out who owns the plane, where the kids went and who paid their expenses to get there," Berst said. "There could be a connection between the plane and the school they sign with." To "hide" a prospect from rival coaches just before before national signing day is very much against NCAA rules.

The new program, first revealed in an Associated Press story Feb. 1, has evidently acted as a strong deterrent against cheating, Berst said. "We found out a lot of coaches were carrying the AP article around with them and showing it to the prospects," he said.

But not every lead and tip is leading to pay dirt. In one instance, investigators learned two high school students had witnessed a coach stuff a roll of cash into a blue-chipper's pocket and say, "Merry Christmas."

"We had two guys who happened to be in that area and so we talked to the students who supposedly saw the whole thing that very day," Berst said. "They each gave stories that were very consistent with each other and that clearly showed it was impossible for the allegation to be true."

The coach stuffed the kid's pocket with cash as he walked off the field after an all-star game, the two students swore.

The problem is, football uniforms don't have pockets.

Qualifying For GGO

Under new PGA Tour rules, the Carolinas Section of the PGA will conduct two local qualifying rounds for the Greater Greensboro Open, which is scheduled for April 5-8.

The first qualifier will be for Carolinas Section PGA members and will be played at Foxfire Golf and Country Club on Monday, March 26, beginning at approximately 11:30 a.m. This is open to PGA members of the Carolinas only and is not open to apprentices or others. The lowest four will be exempted into the GGO field. A $50 entry fee is charged, and those who do not qualify will be refunded $20 of this.

The second qualifier, open to all professionals, apprentices, and any amateurs with a handicap of two or less, will be played at The Cardinal Club in Greensboro on Thursday, March 29. There are no refunds on the $50 entry fee in this event, and the two lowest scorers qualify for the GGO.

Entry forms are available at the host clubs or by contacting the Carolinas PGA, Box 209, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

A maximum of 140 entrants will be accepted for each qualifier, based on the order of receipt at the Carolinas PGA office.

Ump Clinic Scheduled

LITTLEFIELD — The East Carolina Officials Association will hold its annual Baseball Umpire's Clinic at Ayden-Grifton High School on Saturday.

Instructors for the clinic are Malcolm Sykes, 14-year veteran of professional baseball umpiring, who will serve as clinic coordinator; Joe West, National League umpire; and Drew Coble, American Association umpire.

The clinic will get underway at 10 a.m. at Ayden-Grifton High School, with the first session covering 1979 high school baseball rules, interpretations, and rule differences in high school, college and professional baseball.

A Dutch luncheon will be available at the school, with a break from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m.

From 1:30 to 4 p.m., on-field instruction will be held, with game-type situations.

Allison Violated Gent's Agreement

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Donnie Allison waited too long to protect his lead, and when he finally made his move, it violated "a gentleman's agreement" to give the trailing driver an escape route, says Cale Yarborough of the last-lap crash in Sunday's Daytona 500.

Yarborough was interviewed by telephone from his Sardinia, S.C., home after officials of the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing placed Donnie Allison on six month's probation because of the incident. Yarborough was not disciplined for the crash, but he and Donnie and Bobby Allison were each fined $6,000 for fighting afterward.

NASCAR exonerated Bobby Allison of any involvement in the accident, even though Yarborough's key contention had been "they double-teamed me."

The Allison's had only a terse statement. "We are shocked by the amount of the fines and equally shocked at the unfairness of the whole thing. We have requested a fullscale hearing and legal counsel is considering further action. No further statement will be issued until the hearing."

That statement aside, Yarborough read the NASCAR action as complete vindication for him.

He explained, "It's always been kind of a gentleman's agreement that you can use all the race track you want when you are out front, but don't never leave a man without an escape route. He's gotta go somewhere. When a man's up alongside of you, don't put him out of the race track."

"That's what happened to me. If I had been behind him, he could have gone anywhere he wanted to. I would have come in second, and I wouldn't have had any gripe at all. But when I get beside a man, it's a different situation."

When Yarborough veered back up on the track after being blocked into the grass, he said he wasn't trying to hit anybody with his car, he was just out of control at that point. Both cars collided several times before ricocheting off the retaining wall outside Turn 3 and into the infield.

"You know I'd already beat him twice before to the start-finish line on the cautions, and I beat Benny Parsons one time. I knew what I had to do and I know where I had to do it. There's no doubt in my mind that if I'd followed him all the way down the race track he'd have never gotten out of his tracks," Yarborough said. "He'd have run a straight line down the track. He wouldn't have been down there for nothing."

Yarborough said that if he had it to do all over again, he'd do it the same way, even though he knew Allison was anticipating his move.

"I'd still have to do the same thing. That was my route. That was where I had to go. You don't have time from the fourth turn to the start-finish line anymore," he said.

That used to be the best place to make a desperate last lap pass, but it's been less popular since the famed David Pearson-Richard Petty crash there at the end of the 1975 race.

NASCAR Competition Director Bill Gazaway said he was taking a firm stand because "we cannot let it get to the point where every time two cars take the white flag together that one or both of them doesn't finish."

"I'm glad NASCAR's taken their stand. I think they clarified it pretty well," Yarborough said. "It definitely wasn't my fault. I think the films show it. I think you (the press) should have looked at the films a little closer before you came out crucifying me."

"You know 80 million people saw that on TV and I believe half of 'em called me and they saw all the same, so..."

Yarborough said he expected no more unpleasantness between himself and the Allison brothers. He added, "As far as I'm concerned it's history. We gotta keep on getting down the road."

FBI Lists 11 Suspects In Carolina Gambling

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Ten North Carolina men and one South Carolina man are suspects in an FBI investigation of sports-gambling operations in North and South Carolina, according to an affidavit unsealed in District Court Tuesday. The affidavit showed that James C. Lawson and John J. Patella of King are suspected of having been involved in gambling operations during the 1977-1978 football and basketball seasons. The affidavit, signed by two FBI agents, also named George East and Bobby Setzer of Winston-Salem as suspects in illegal gambling activities.

The statement also identified Tommy Hollingsworth and Al Peel of Mount Airy and Kent Rhodes of North Wilkesboro as suspects in the case.

The agents, George Alznauer and Allen L. Emory, presented the affidavit to U.S. Magistrate Herman A. Smith. Smith issued search warrants last week based on the document, authorizing agents to search 10 establishments suspected of being gambling sites. The searches were conducted this past weekend and included seven sites in the northern Piedmont, two in Charlotte and one in South Carolina.

No arrests have made in the case, but Alznauer said that evidence seized in the searches will be presented to a federal grand jury. The grand jury is expected to meet in April, he said.

Alznauer and Emory said they used surveillance, information from two confidential sources, telephone company records and wiretaps in their investigation.

The affidavit says the surveillance was concentrated at an apartment in King where Lawson and Patella were seen frequently. Agents said they found scraps of paper in the trash from the apartment that led them to other suspects, including Earl B. Furr, owner of a bowling establishment in Reidsville.

The agents said telephone intercepts linked the King men to the Winston-Salem suspects.

Charlotte resident Donald G. Lomas and another unidentified Charlotte man and William Wise of Lake City, S.C., were also engaged in gambling-related telephone conversations with the King apartment, according to the statement filed by the FBI.

Patella and Lawson declined to comment on the case Tuesday night.

Furr denied that he was involved in illegal gambling.

"The only thing I could be guilty of would be betting on a basketball game now and then," Furr said Tuesday night.

The Winston-Salem Police Department became involved in the case about two years ago after a tip from an informant, according to the affidavit. Chief Thomas A. Surratt said the department turned the case over to the FBI in March 1978 when they found evidence that the case went beyond their jurisdiction.

Pitt Countian At Short Course

Michael Tyson of the Ayden community recently attended a tobacco short course conducted by the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service with assistance of a grant-in-aid from Philip Morris U. S. A.

Tyson, along with 51 other tobacco farmers, made an all-day bus trip to Richmond, Va., to visit the Philip Morris research and manufacturing facilities. Other sessions were also held at the McKimmon Center on the North Carolina State University Campus.

Certificates were presented to those who completed the three day course.

'Off Guard' On Key Port Vote

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Boosters of the state port at Morehead City scored a surprise victory Tuesday when a House committee voted unanimously to approve a bill that would block plans to move their containerized freight crane to Wilmington.

The vote by the State Properties Committee caught Commerce Department and Hunt administration officials — who have backed moving the crane — off guard. No top ports officials were at the meeting.

The House panel voted despite a public hearing Wednesday on a Senate bill that would do the same thing.

The state Ports Authority has already voted to move the $2.5 million crane, citing insufficient container freight business at Morehead City, and signed a $563,000 contract with a Virginia firm to move it by barge. Ports officials wanted it to serve as a supplement to the Wilmington crane.

But the bill's supporters said Morehead City's port would be seriously damaged if the crane were moved, and the port would be forced to rely on smaller gantry cranes which are not as efficient at moving containerized freight.

"It's imperative, we think, to keep that container crane there to keep Morehead City a functioning port," said the bill's sponsor, Rep. Malcolm Fulcher, D-Carteret.

The committee voted after Russell Hoehn, vice president of Trans Freight Lines of New Jersey, said his company planned to have a container ship call every other week at Morehead City and might abandon those plans if the crane is moved. Hoehn said his company would contribute $80,000 to $100,000 to the Morehead City port in a year.

Clint Abernathy, a department spokesman, defended the decision to move the crane. He said the port must move 6,000 containers a year to justify such a crane, and their projections are for only 1,200 containers at Morehead City.

Only one representative, a Republican, defended the Hunt administration's plan to move the crane before the committee.

"It just depends on whether the General Assembly wants to do the political thing or the business thing," said Rep. Tommy Rhodes, R-New Hanover, who appeared before the committee but was not a member.

In other legislative action:

Teacher Pay

A measure that would boost the pay for substitute teachers from $20 a day to $30 a day was approved by the Senate Tuesday.

The resolution calling for the pay hike had originally said the raise would be for "certified" substitutes only but was amended to apply to "qualified" substitutes.

The Senate vote was 36-11. Opponents said they were not against the raise itself but the granting of it in the middle of a fiscal year and the precedent it might set.

Supporters said the pay increase — which will come from $1 million in education money earmarked for other purposes — is necessary to enable school systems to get substitutes. Many local officials say they are having trouble finding substitutes who will work for $20 a day.

The measure now goes to the House.

Insurance

Insurance Commissioner John Ingram said Tuesday he doesn't like the proposed legislation amending the state's insurance laws and will offer his own proposals, including one to restore his power to block rate increases on certain policies.

Ingram held a news conference Tuesday and criticized the bills introduced in the House and Senate last week, saying the proposed amendments do not include the restoration of his prior-approval power.

Ingram was stripped of that power by the 1977 legislature. The bills now before the Senate and House are amendments to that insurance law.

Ingram said that if the legislature doesn't give him the power back, it won't be living up to the public's expectations.

Taxes

Nearly a dozen House-passed bills that will repeal a number of outdated tax laws were approved by the Senate.

This means license taxes on horse and mule dealers, phenologists, cotton presses, amusement parks and traveling theatrical companies, among others, will be taken off the books.

Drivers' License

A bill that would require anyone who holds a North Carolina driver's license and moves to a new address to obtain a duplicate license with the correct address within 60 days was approved by a Senate judiciary committee.

Under current law, drivers who move must notify the division of motor vehicles but are not required to get a license, said the bill's sponsor Rep. George Miller, D-Durham.

The bill now goes to the full Senate.

Handicapped

A bill that would allow increased enforcement of illegal parking in spaces designated for the handicapped was approved by the House and sent to the Senate.

The bill would authorize a $10 fine for violations, and give law enforcement officers power to enforce the law in parking lots on private property.

Banking

A bill filed by Sen. John Henley, D-Cumberland, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, would make private certain banking records, such as those prepared during examinations and audit, complaints and loan transactions.

Wintry Storm Brings More Coastal Erosion

WRIGHTSVILLE BEACH, N.C. (AP) — The severe winter storm that dumped snow all over the state Sunday brought gale-force winds and pounding waves to coastal areas to eat away more of the already eroded beaches.

Although the damage to Wrightsville and Carolina beaches was not much worse than usually caused by a "northeaster," the situation has become critical because of earlier erosion, according to Wrightsville Beach Town Clerk Hugh Perry.

The ends of streets that run toward the beach have been undermined by the ocean, and the dropoff where dunes have been undercut by the waves is now 16 feet from dune-top to beach level in some areas.

Perry said erosion control measures planned by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers are not scheduled to begin until the fall of 1980.

"That's two hurricane seasons from now," Perry said. "And if we have even a moderately severe hurricane, there are some homes that will be in real trouble."

He said the berm and dune system, constructed more than a decade ago by the corps, has already been breached in some places.

"Unless we can get the corps to agree that an emergency situation exists, which they have declined to do so far, all we can do is just pray for good weather," Perry said.

Although longtime beach residents say the beachfront is in better condition and wider now than it was before the berm and dune system began, several beachfront homes are already threatened by erosion.

Two Shell Island homes sit on peninsulas of sand at the southern tip of Wrightsville Beach, surrounded on three sides by sea walls.

At Carolina Beach, the weekend storm carried away as much as 12 feet of beachfront and broke away the center of a fishing pier at the north end of the beach.

Officials of the towns say they are considering applying for federal emergency funds to help alleviate the situation.

International Loans - Which China Will Get Them

By R. GREGORY NOKES
WASHINGTON (AP) — A potential financial windfall of at least $700 million a year, much of it from the United States, could go to Communist China if it claims a seat in the world's two most important economic institutions.

China's seat in the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank is occupied by Taiwan, a situation that can't continue much longer, officials agree. However, rather than oust Taiwan in favor of Peking, they are trying to find a way to make room for both.

"We do not want to see Taiwan dumped from these institutions," a Carter administration official said. "We would like Taiwan to have some independent status, but nobody has worked out a legal formula yet."

The Peking government hasn't made any move to join, although it has declared in the past that Taiwan is illegally representing China.

One official — who like other authorities quoted here asked to remain anonymous — said the pressure from Peking for a change could come in October at the annual joint meeting of the IMF and the World Bank in Yugoslavia, the first time they have met in a Communist country.

"They are sort of suggesting there will be Chinese around," said one official. "If I were looking for a solution to the problem, I'd look in that direction."

The 137-nation IMF and the World Bank distribute billions of dollars each year in aid and loans to underdeveloped member countries. World Bank lending totaled $8.4 billion last year, including $2.3 billion in interest-free loans to the very poorest members.

Financial support from the two institutions could be extremely helpful to Peking in carrying out its ambitious development plans.

One official said China and its one billion people would qualify for aid equal to what India receives, nearly $1.3 billion last year, including about $1 billion in interest-free loans.

However, since the bank's resources are limited, it would probably mean a cutback in aid to India in future years, leaving around $600-700 million for each country, one official calculated.

U.S. taxpayers provide about 20 percent of all financing for the World Bank and the IMF, and 33 percent — about $800 million last year — of the interest-free aid. The Bank and the IMF make the decisions on how the money should be used.

Among reasons they are reluctant to oust Taiwan is that the Taiwan government still owes a significant amount of money from past loans — $250 million to the World Bank and $190 million to the IMF.

One institution official suggested Taiwan may have incurred its debts partly to give it leverage against being ejected.

Another official said one solution might be for Taiwan to give up its China seat and reapply for membership on some other basis. But he admitted the mechanics of that approach aren't worked out since there is no provision for membership by non-nations.

"It will be one hell of a complex legal problem ... All kinds of options are being drafted here and drafted there, but nothing is decided," another said. The official did not want to be identified because the issue is a sensitive one.

The decision may be dictated by the United States, which has been the controlling power in both institutions since it spearheaded their establishment after World War II to help run the post-war global economy.

One official said the subject may come up in talks that Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal will hold with Peking leaders during a visit to China later this month.

"The triggering point for a decision would be an expression of interest by Peking," he said.

In making their decision, officials will have to consider the following:

—Only a handful of the 137 members of the IMF — fewer than 20 — still recognize Taiwan. All of the major western nations that provide the vast bulk of the financial support recognize Peking.

—The seat occupied by Taiwan is the seat created for China when the organizations were established in the months following World War II.

—As long as the single most important member of the IMF, the United States, recognized Taiwan, it made sense from the U.S. point of view to continue Taiwan's membership. But on Jan. 1, the United States switched to Peking.

A nation must belong to the IMF to qualify for World Bank membership.

But joining would also carry a few strings for Peking. One is that Peking, as any other member, would have to open its economic books to scrutiny by the IMF — sort of an international audit — and possibly adopt IMF recommendations for changes in its economic policies.

There is also the question of whether Peking would assume Taiwan's indebtedness. Taiwan has not received any loans from the World Bank since 1971, apparently sensitive to its precarious international position and therefore not wanting to encourage any confrontation over its membership. It has made repayments of past loans on schedule.

The two organizations' only communist members are Yugoslavia, Romania, Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos — and the last three all took over the memberships held by the former non-communist governments, a precedent that could apply to China.

Find Seven Victims Of 'Slashing'

By JERRY SCHWARTZ
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Detectives today searched the "bloody mess" of a Harlem brownstone for clues to who slashed the throats of six men and a woman in what police said appeared to be a drug-related massacre.

A blood-encrusted 13-inch knife was found on a bed next to three of the victims, according to Chief of Detectives James Sullivan.

All but one of the victims, reportedly Dominicans between the ages of 20 and 35, were found with their hands and legs bound with rope, cords and "anything else that was around," said Sgt. Thomas Curley, first officer to reach the apartment Tuesday night.

Police said the killings were first reported by Jose Crispin, the building's landlord who lives in an apartment on the ground floor. Officers said they could not immediately locate Crispin, and they did not know how he discovered the killings.

None of the victims was immediately identified. Police said it appeared they had been dead since mid-afternoon.

Four of the bodies were in the rear bedroom of the first-floor apartment — three of them on the bed and the other on the floor. In another room, three men were on the floor. All were dressed in "normal street clothes," police said.

"It doesn't appear one person could do this," said Sullivan, adding that the apartment was in disarray, but there was no sign of a struggle.

Authorities said they found scales with drug residue in the apartment, leading them to believe the slayings were drug-related.

Police also said there was no sign that the murders were "ritualistic."

Arrest Man On Murder Charge

Chief Glenn Cannon reported yesterday that James Arthur Reddick, 34 of 807G West 14th St. was arrested by police Saturday on murder charges.

Reddick, Cannon said, was charged in connection with the shooting death of Ronald Langley Brown, 25 of 411 West Roundtree Dr. February 15 in the 1900 block of Pitt Street.

The chief said Reddick allegedly shot Brown by mistake as he was attempting to break up a fight.

Arrest Suspect As A Fugitive

Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon said this morning that Doug Wayne Caldwell, 31 of Columbus' Ga., was arrested here yesterday on fugitive from justice charges.

Cannon said Caldwell was wanted by Columbus officers on two auto theft counts.

The fugitive was taken into custody about 10:15 p.m. at a local motel, the chief noted.

Spelunkers Visit Statue

CAVE-LIKE — Taking the only spelunkers' tour in the nation's capital, David Randolph, 3, accompanied by his father, George, points to formations in cave-like foundation of the Lincoln Memorial. (UPI Photo)

By MINDY YOCHELSON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Abraham Lincoln sits serenely in his marble chair, gazing out of his temple-like memorial at the distant Capitol. Far below his feet, the only spelunkers' tour in the nation's capital is underway.

The daily tour, conducted by the National Park Service, is called "Looking Under Lincoln." While most tourists at the memorial are looking at the imposing 33-foot statue of the 16th president, 15 people each day are taken 45 feet below the surface into the famous structure's cave-like foundation.

Inside it is dark, wet and musty smelling, like many excavations. "We use the word cave in quotations," says Carolyn O'Hara, the Park Service's site manager. "It's like a cave because it's an open area, with dripping and stalactites and stalagmites."

Those formations of carbonate of lime, built drip-by-drip, are the tour's prime attraction. They are formed the same way as in a natural cave, except the water percolates through cracks in the memorial's limestone foundation, rather than through grooves in limestone beds, the Park Service said.

As the group walks along, on graveled ground or walkways, the ranger will stop and shine his flashlight on a particularly interesting limestone formation.

Many of the stalactites, the formations on a cave's roof, are known as "soda straws" because of their long, thin hollow shape.

Some grow up to eight feet long, and some grow at an angle, probably due to wind currents or airplane vibrations, a ranger said.

They grow about an inch a year, depending on the amount of water "feeding" the formation. This is much faster than in a natural cave because of the high humidity and fossil fuels in the air, the Park Service said.

The stalagmites, formations built up on a cave's floor, are more varied in appearance. Some look like fried eggs, the orange color of the "yolk," coming from iron oxide in the air.

Some resemble mushrooms, others bacon strips. A "drapery" formation covers an entire wall, where water has run down an incline, leaving layers of calcium carbonate deposits in the form of a sheet or "flowstone."

Besides nature's artwork, there is human art as well. While the central foundation was being completed in 1915, workmen took time from their labors to draw on the piers with coal.

The Park Service considers these old scrawlings and drawings "classic graffiti" that "reflect a great deal of artistic talent."

They appear on the concrete piers which support Lincoln's statue and the chamber above. There is a drawing of a fat man with his hands in his pocket, smoking a pipe.

"We figure that's the boss," a ranger said. Other characters resemble Mutt and Jeff, President Woodrow Wilson, a "vamp" with a cigarette, and Henry Bacon, the architect.

The hour-long tour began in the spring of 1977 as a "brainchild" of park ranger James Burgess who "was looking for interesting places to take visitors," Ms. O'Hara said. Burgess began approaching visitors at the memorial, asking them if they would like to take a peek below. Ms. O'Hara said. The pilot program proved so popular, the Park Service opened the tours for reservations later that spring. They continued three times a week until the Park Service stopped them to improve conditions inside the foundation.

They resumed eight times a week last October, she said. During the eight months the foundation was closed, the Park Service installed walkways and electric lines. Visitors had been walking on bare ground, or on three-foot high concrete piers. "They'd climb up on one and jump to the next," Ms. O'Hara said.

The new electric lights are used on part of the tour, but for the most part the only illumination is from flashlights visitors are instructed to bring, along with their old clothes and sturdy shoes.

"We decided not to use the lights because it would spoil the effect," one ranger said. The tours have become so popular they are booked on weekends through June, Ms. O'Hara said. The foundation is closed to visitors during July and August because of the high humidity and extreme heat retained in the foundation.

Oil Wells Brought Vast Changes To Abu Dhabi

CHANGING SCENE—Skyscrapers sprout out of the desert around Abu Dhabi, capital of the United Arab Emirates. The construction boom is financed by the oil wealth that brings in nearly a million dollars an hour.

By THOMAS KENT

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — Twelve years ago, there were only two concrete buildings in this desert sheikdom and most of its residents lived in huts of dried palm leaves. Today, Abu Dhabi is rolling in oil wealth and things will never be the same again.

Under the latest oil-price rise decided on recently by a meeting here of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), Abu Dhabi's oil revenues should be worth some $840,000 per hour for all of next year. The wealth is enormous, but just a continuation of what has already been happening here since the big oil-price rises of 1973-74.

Abu Dhabi, a state of 300,000 people on the shore of the Arabian Gulf, now has a capital city that is wall-to-wall skyscrapers. Gas-guzzling automobiles race with horns blaring down its new highways, past green strips of trees.

Wherever the ground is not watered, it reverts to the sand of the desert. Temperatures in summer reach 150 degrees Fahrenheit.

None of the Abu Dhabi residents are short of cash, and stores carry nothing but the best lines of imported goods. A $3 paperback book goes for $9.72 at Abu Dhabi prices. A man's jacket costs well over $100 and a $25 lunch is a bargain.

The capital city, called Abu Dhabi Town, is also the capital of the United Arab Emirates, an 8-year-old grouping of the former British Trucial Protectorates that is the only federation in the Arab world. The per capita income of the seven members — more than $16,000 a year — puts them among the richest states in the world.

Oil is the main national business, with production in Abu Dhabi alone around 1.45 million barrels per day. New oil fields are being developed offshore in the Arabian Gulf. The sheikdom is also laying plans to capture and sell the 1 billion cubic feet of natural gas that are now burned off into the air every day at oil drilling sites.

But the sheikdom is also diversifying into other projects, including cement and fertilizer production, petrochemicals and agriculture, and is continuing its traditional fishing business.

The streets of Abu Dhabi's capital are strewn with construction material and debris, the result of development at a breakneck pace. Its souk, or bazaar, is crowded with stores offering traditional gold jewelry as well as the latest consumer electronic equipment from Japan. Arab music blares from cassette recorders on sale at the souk as loudspeakers at a nearby mosque call the faithful to prayer.

But just off the island that contains Abu Dhabi Town, the desert begins, and there is little sign there that the drifting sands belong to one of the wealthiest states in the world.

resident says it is going through "future shock with a vengeance" and the signs of sudden transformation are everywhere.

To build up the country, Abu Dhabi imported so many foreign workers that its own citizens now make up only 20 percent of the total. Since most come without their families, the sheikdom's population is now nearly 75 percent male.

Indians, Pakistanis and other Arabs do almost all the menial work while local residents profit from the generosity of the state's ruler, Sheikh Zayed bin Sultan al Nahayan.

Zayed's government provides free land and housing to its citizens.

Many Abu Dhabi residents have obtained additional plots of land to build the bright, white office buildings that cover the sheikdom's skyline, gleaming in the desert sun. Only now, with fears growing of a crash some day in real-estate values, is the building of new structures being limited.

Abu Dhabi, which had no compulsory education until 1971, has been invaded by foreign cultures. Indian movies play in most of the local theaters, special schools operate for a variety of nationalities and a Kentucky Fried Chicken stand adjoins a "Chic Baby" children's clothing store on Hamdan Street, a main avenue.

But despite its leap into the future, the country remains a nation of devout Moslems. Local newspapers feature photographs of Sheikh Zayed and his ministers at prayer, and a local bookstore was barred from selling a shipment of cookbooks because they had recipes using wine and pork.

Tandem Bikers To Try A Global Trip

By ERIK A. WOLD

Stavanger, Norway (AP) — Phileas Fogg traveled around the world in 80 days. The Norwegian "Biking Vikings," Marit Voster, 21, and 25-year-old Tore Naerland, who is 95 percent blind, will do it in 79 days.

The Biking Vikings is an independent committee working to activate handicapped people in Norway and abroad. As part of its public relations work, the group arranges tandem biking tours by its "biking ambassadors," Marit and Tore.

During 1978 they rode tandem from Anchorage, Alaska, to Miami, Fla., in the spring; from Rome to Oslo last summer, and from Stavanger to Madrid last fall.

This spring they will go on their longest and toughest tour so far — round the world from London via France, Italy, Egypt, India, China (or Hong Kong), Japan, the United States and back to London.

They expect to pedal more than 6,000 miles in the trek.

"Where Phileas Fogg used ship or train between countries and cities, we'll have to use planes on some occasions," said Naerland.

He and Ms. Voster have calculated the tour will cost them about $25,000 and they have already gotten sponsor backing.

On their previous tours in 1978, Naerland said they had persuaded about 700 handicapped people to accompany them on tandem or single-seater bicycles.

"We concentrate on the tandems, because they are ideal to help make handicapped people active," Naerland said. "So far we have been joined by blind people, deaf people, people who have suffered heart attacks, former narcotic and alcohol addicts and people with other physical or psychological problems."

"What we hope for and aim at is that we can develop friendship and cooperation between people with and without handicaps."

"But we also like to see biking cooperation between two people with different handicaps. We had many with us on a tandem, with one seeing deaf person on the front seat and a blind hearing person on the back seat," said Ms. Voster.

"Now we'll try to go around the world in 79 days on a bicycle built for two and we'll pedal under the motto 'Bike for peace,'" Naerland said. "We also want to remind people that wars and unrest are often the cause of handicaps."

Naerland said Lions Clubs in various cities had promised to help with local arrangements.

"We hope to meet mayors of the cities we visit to inform them about what can be done to help handicapped people," he said.

FIRE FATALITIES

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (UPI)

Catastrophic fires that cause numerous deaths get the biggest headlines, but 65 percent of fire fatalities occur by ones and twos in home fires, according to a recent study.

Prepare for the worst at the bridge table. If it doesn't happen, no harm will have been done. However, if you blindly tackle a hand on the assumption the gods of distribution will be merciful, you may not be able to recover from a bad break.

After South's jump, North simply rebid his hearts to stress the quality of his suit. Even though he did not get any encouragement from his partner, North judged that the hands should offer good play for slam.

West led the top of his spade sequence, and declarer was delighted when dummy appeared on the table. He won the king of spades and led a diamond to his queen. West's club discard was a rude shock. No matter how he wriggled, declarer could not collect more than the ten tricks he had in top cards.

It is the seemingly simple contract that often requires the most care. When dummy appeared, declarer should have realized that he could not lose his contract if the diamonds were no worse than 4-1. Therefore, he should have directed his attention toward overcoming a possible 5-0 diamond division.

Once the problem has been recognized, the solution is simple. All declarer has to do is win the opening lead in his hand with the ace of spades and lead a low diamond toward the ten. If West has all five missing diamonds, dummy's ten will prevent West from taking more than one trick, no matter what he does.

As the cards lie, West discards on the first diamond, but that doesn't bother declarer. The ten loses to East's jack, but now the rest of East's diamonds can be neutralized.

Declarer wins any return in dummy and continues with a diamond to his eight. The ace, king and queen of diamonds draw East's remaining cards in the suit, and declarer scores two spades, three hearts, five diamonds and two clubs to make his slam.

PLAYBOY ON BROADWAY
NEW YORK (UPI) — A partly nude musical based on Playboy's interpretation of American sexual mores, entitled "Playboy on Broadway" is scheduled to open on Broadway this fall.

'Roots II' Off To Good Start

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC's sequel to its record-setting "Roots" miniseries is off to a good start — and apparently picking up viewers in the process.

The rating for Part I of "Roots: The Next Generations," broadcast Sunday night, was 27.8, compared 40.5 for the first chapter of the original, aired the night of Jan. 23, 1977.

The second installment Monday night in the seven-part "Roots II," as the sequel is familiarly known, did slightly better in New York and Chicago than Part I the night before, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. show. National ratings on Parts II-VII will be included in next week's ratings.

Though "Roots II" Sunday night beat a couple of first-run movies, "American Graffiti" on NBC and "Marathon Man" on CBS, ABC's "Mork and Mindy" had the biggest audience for the week ending Feb. 18.

The rating for "Mork and Mindy" was 33.7. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country, slightly more than a third saw at least part of the situation comedy.

ABC, in fact, listed the week's five most-watched programs, with Part I of "Roots II" tied for eighth. "American Graffiti" was No. 18 and "Marathon Man" tied for 33rd. CBS's best for the week was the conclusion of a two-part broadcast of the classic film, "Gone with the Wind," in sixth place, and NBC's top-rated show was the third chapter in the four-part "Backstairs at the White House" miniseries, No. 12.

ABC's rating for the week was 22.2, with CBS second at 19.1 and NBC back in third, after a week as runnerup, at 17.4.

The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 22.2 percent of the homes in the country with TV were tuned to ABC. NBC suffered again at the bottom, with five of the week's six lowest-rated programs. Two NBC programs, "America vs. the World: Circus Challenge," and "Brothers and Sisters," tied for 59th place, followed by ABC's "Makin' It" and three other NBC shows, "Turnabout," "Sweepstakes" and "Little Women."

IN NJINSKY ROLES
NEW YORK (UPI) — Rudolf Nureyev will dance three roles created by the great Vasily Nijinsky during his fifth Broadway season. He appears with the Joffrey Ballet at the Mark Hellinger Theater for four weeks starting March 7.

Here are the week's Top 10 shows:

Steiger's Wife

Sues For Share

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The estranged wife of Rod Steiger has filed suit seeking a $2.5 million settlement from the actor in a suit similar to one filed against Lee Marvin by his former live-in lover Michelle Triola Marvin.

Marvin Mitchelson, attorney for Miss Marvin's suit to obtain half the assets Marvin accumulated while they lived together, filed the suit Tuesday.

Sherry Steiger, 41, seeks to overturn a pre-nuptial agreement with Steiger that prevents her from recovering property accumulated in their nine-year relationship.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, FEB. 22, 1979

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The last two days were excellent for deciding on future plans and today is the right time for putting these plans into operation.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Good day to contact a powerful individual you know and gain the backing you need. Evening is not good for socializing.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Get out of the rut you are in and improve conditions around you. Contact those who can help to raise your level of consciousness. A time for new beginnings, both in business and personal affairs.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Find better ways and means of attending to obligations and get better results. Get the help of your family. Make the most of the friendly atmosphere now existing at home.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Butting up a partner can bring good results. Do whatever will make your public position more tenable. Avoid those with strange ideas.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Plan early how to best handle all that work ahead of you. Seek the cooperation of co-workers. Enjoy the social side of life in the evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Include good friends you have not seen lately in plans for a social evening at home. Avoid one who is a pain in the neck to you, though.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) If you are more practical at home, you can start an upswing there. Do some entertaining at home also that can prove most pleasurable. Show you are a charming host or hostess.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Set those persons who can assist you in a new undertaking. Don't discount close ties either. A civic expression is especially good on this day.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You have ideas of real scope and should put them in operation to better your position in life. Study your financial structure well and know where and how to make improvements.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Go after what you most desire and get good results. Plan some time for social get-togethers with friends and relatives.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Stop daydreaming now and get right down to brass tacks and handle practical affairs wisely. Plan how to have more accord with loved ones. Show more affection for best results.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Forget that lone wolf attitude and get about socially. Accomplish much now. You can gain personal aims with relative ease. Obey rules and regulations that apply to you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will like to sit around and have fun even though the talents here may be varied and many. Teach early to make something of his or her life and to use the energies in the right direction. Make sure the education is adequate and of a practical nature.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Nearing End Of Wilson Sheriff Trial

By LORI COOKE

Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Final arguments were to be heard by the jury of six men and six women today in the corruption trial of Wilson County Sheriff Robin Pridgen before the case goes to the jury.

Testimony concluded Tuesday as Pridgen took the stand to deny testimony by the operators of houses of prostitution in the Wilson area that he accepted payoffs and sexual favors in return for protecting their operations.

Pridgen was followed to the stand by Rudolph Baker, owner of a truck stop with a prostitution operation, who denied knowing Pridgen or making payoffs to him. Baker was the final defense witness in the case.

Pridgen is charged with violating a federal anti-racketeering law by accepting bribes to protect gambling and prostitution operations in Wilson County. In addition, he is charged with submitting false income tax returns. Baker is charged with conspiracy to violate federal anti-racketeering laws.

Pridgen blushed and answered in the negative when his attorney, J. Russell Kirby, asked whether he had sex with women in motels in the Wilson area. He denied allegations by operators of houses of prostitution that he accepted payoffs from them.

"She must have me mixed up with someone else," Pridgen said when asked about testimony last week by Billie O'Barr, who said she had sexual relations with him while he was chief deputy. Miss O'Barr said she helped run a prostitution operation at the Forest Inn.

He denied taking any money from managers of the prostitution establishments. Operators of the houses of prostitution testified earlier that they made payments to Pridgen when he was chief deputy.

Pridgen's son, Wilbur Thompson "Butch" Pridgen, 26, testified Tuesday that he visited the Forest Inn "five or six times" while he was a special deputy. He said the first time he visited the place, he was in uniform but was too drunk to engage in sex.

Butch Pridgen said on later occasions he did have sexual relations with women at the motel. He said he offered to pay for their services but Sula O'Barr, who earlier testified that she was the madam there, said she would take care of it. He said he "might have mentioned" that his father was the sheriff.

He testified that he didn't want his father to learn about his visits to the Forest Inn. "I'd rather my wife found out than my Daddy," Butch Pridgen said. He said he told his wife of the visits "this Valentine's Day."

Butch Pridgen said he didn't want to tell his father of his visits because "I knew it would hurt him bad. He'd probably kill me."

Rudolph Baker followed Pridgen to the stand and denied knowing the sheriff or making payments to him while Baker owned the Bel-Air Truck Stop. "If I was going to run an illegal business and pay off," he said, "I'd close up and put in a legal business."

Baker said he has already been convicted on a related charge and sentenced to 10 years in prison, which he is appealing.

He said Judy Bollinger, identified by prostitutes in earlier testimony as the madam at the Bel-Air Truck Stop, ran the business for herself and not for him. Mrs. Bollinger has since died.

Her daughter, Sheila Smith, 17, testified earlier that she shot herself because she was hopelessly in love with Baker. She said Baker told her he could have been arrested because of the shooting, except that he had connections in the sheriff's department. Baker denied her testimony.

Pridgen also testified that he assigned Special Deputy Kenneth Woodward to check on the Forest Inn and report if there were any activities there that needed to be investigated.

Patience Is Key Word In S. Lebanon

BY BJORN EDLUND
EBEL ES SAKI, Lebanon (UPI) — Patience is the main weapon of United Nations peacekeeping troops in south Lebanon.

"Our negotiations with the two sides take much of our time," Maj. Arvid Gronning of the Norwegian U.N. battalion, "patience is our main weapon."

The United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL) was deployed along the Litani river from the Mediterranean to the Syrian border last April as a buffer between Christian militias and Palestinian guerrillas when the Israeli army withdrew after its blitz invasion in March.

The 5,150 UNIFIL troops from Norway, Ireland, France, Nepal, Nigeria, Senegal and Fiji were mandated to clear the area of gunmen and prepare its hand-over to Lebanese authorities.

North of the UNIFIL strip, some 5,000 to 6,000 Palestinian guerrillas plus radical Lebanese Moslem militiamen hold virtual control up to the Zaharani river south of Sidon.

Some 1,500 Israeli-backed Christian irregulars control the nine-mile area along the Israeli border, south of the U.N. buffer.

"We are neutral. We are under strict orders to use our weapons only if needed to save our own lives," said Capt. Ole Ostgaard.

"We have patrols with dogs who walk the area day and night," Gronning said.

"There are three kinds of dogs, tracers used for patrols, mine-sniffers used by pioneer troops who defuse mines, and explosive-sniffers used at checkpoints."

Gronning said fields and roads had been mined by both by the Palestinians, before they retreated during the Israeli invasion, and by the Israelis prior to their withdrawal in April.

"We find U.S. and Soviet mines side by side," he said. Ostgaard said negotiations solve most problems between the U.N. units and the battling factions.

"Recently we went to Hasbaya, which is controlled by a radical Palestinian group, to buy propane gas for our cookers. Before, we got our supplies from Israel, but we have started to buy locally to support the Lebanese economy," Ostgaard said.

"But when we got to Hasbaya, the shop owner quickly locked his store and left. We were told the guerrillas believed we had been over-supplying and providing propane gas to the Christian militias."

He said he arranged a meeting with the guerrilla leaders and explained to them that UNIFIL was favoring neither side and that supplies were bought only for UNIFIL use.

"They saw our point and said we were welcome to shop at Hasbaya. We will meet once a week from now on, at their request," Ostgaard said.

Standing outside the bombed-out church of Ebel Es Saki, he motioned across a shallow valley to the village of Marjayoun on the opposite hilltop.

"That's the headquarters of Maj. Saad Haddad, and those are his artillery positions," he said, pointing at six sand-bagged cannon emplacements. Haddad commands a renegade unit of the Lebanese Army and the southern Christian militias.

"He maintains two observers at one of our checkpoints, where we search people and cars for weapons, in order to stop infiltration of armed elements," Ostgaard said. "One Sunday the two observers decided our checking was too slack. Haddad's people started shelling the checkpoint with 120mm artillery, dropping shells as close as 70 yards (m) to show their displeasure."

The matter was settled after negotiations.

Marjayoun's electricity and water supplies can be turned off by the Palestine Liberation Organization, who control the area north of the village. Haddad is a tough negotiator on this sensitive issue.

"One day our operations center here at Ebel Es Saki was contacted by Haddad, who said he would flatten (Palestinian-held) Hasbaya if his lights didn't go on at a certain time," one Norwegian soldier said.

Asked what it felt like, sitting with Israelis on Mount Hermon to the east, the PLO to the north and Lebanese Christians to the west and south, Gronning said:

"That's our job. We are here to try to decrease tensions, and we have to sit in the middle."

New Status For Potato

SEATTLE (AP) — The potato has finally earned the status of main course, moving from its traditional place as an accompaniment or filler, at least in one Seattle restaurant.

Restaurateur Dennis Weaver opened The Price Is Right and developed the Entree Baked Potato, a name copyrighted in 1976. A 1½ pounder in its naked state, this tempting tuber is dressed up 30 different ways — with embellishments such as cream cheese, crab and shrimp, tomatoes and hollandaise sauce.

And, for the diehard "meat and potatoes" man, Weaver has a potato stuffed with steak.

"We're out to convince people that the potato is a fun food. The potato today is where the pizza was six or seven years ago," said Weaver.

His downtown restaurant uses four tons of potatoes a month and Weaver eats a potato meal at least four times a week.

He thinks his fancy food in a plain brown wrapper could be the next fad, the hula hoop of dining.

Locomotives

NEW YORK (UPI) — Theola Dority Hollingsworth, a slim attractive 24-year-old woman, does on-location inspection of railroad locomotives.

These enormous, gleaming, hulks of steel and iron weigh anywhere from 200,000 pounds (a SW1001 model) to 420,000 pounds (a SD40-2 model) and are capable of hauling heavy coal drags, high-speed freight and passenger trains.

Children Said Less Bloodthirsty

BY GALE WILEY
BADEN-BADEN, West Germany (UPI) — West German researchers trying to teach children how to watch television more critically have discovered that kids are a lot less bloodthirsty than many of their elders.

Imme de Haen, head of a research team at the Sudwestfunk radio and TV station, says investigators learned that while the children know the formula plots of most American cops and robbers series, for instance, they also can suggest a number of endings they consider more appropriate than the usual climatic trouncing of the bad guys by the good guy cop or private detective.

The researchers first discovered a year ago that a threat to Lassie frightens young viewers much more than a blackjack bouncing off Rockford's skull.

A similar survey of 200 television-watching children in Kiel more recently confirmed their earlier finding.

"Children prefer stories such as 'Hansel and Gretel' over westerns and thrillers," says Kiel lecturer Gerhard Heuer. "But ironically, such family stories dealing with separation from mothers, for example, leave deep scars."

Mrs. de Haen carried her own researches forward, filming children watching various American crime shows. She learned they not only do not scare the children but that the children see right through the unreality.

"Kojak is always right," one 11-year-old commented drily. "He never gets hurt," added a girl.

"It's always the same," said a third child viewer. "Somebody commits a crime. Kojak goes after him. Things get better and better for Kojak and worse and worse for the bad guy. Kojak always wins."

"Without a doubt, American shows such as 'Kojak' and 'Colombo' are worldwide favorites," says Mrs. de Haen. "And yet there is little variation in the plots of these shows."

If the children see through the facade, then why do they watch the shows? Probably for the same reasons that most of their parents watch — for the action, thrills, triumph of good over evil, escapism, says Mrs. de Haen.

Other researchers have expressed concern that adults who watch a lot of television begin to lose touch with reality.

George Gerbner of the University of Philadelphia reports in a recent article in a West German periodical that his own tests over a long period have shown that those who watch a lot of television generally are more fearful than those who watch it rarely, are more likely to own a gun, and declare themselves more willing to use violence in an argument.

Yet, Mrs. de Haen's studies indicate child viewers still believe arguments and crises can end in non-violent ways.

She asked some children to act in and film their own crime show.

Their plot: a group of children at a playground exclude a boy. The hero tells him to leave. The boy returns and breaks a tape recorder belonging to the heroine. The hero tracks down the boy and

"The kids showed the basic idea of cops and robber shows, the good guy hero, bad guy loser, the crime, the girl, the chase," Mrs. de Haen said.

Discussing how to end the film, one child asked, "why can't the good guy help the bad guy?"

"Maybe the bad guy says he's sorry and turns himself in," suggested another.

They concluded the best ending would be one in which the hero and followers try to understand the bad guy, a long way from the traditional end.

Dog Can Suffer

'Cabin Fever'
CHICAGO (UPI) — Dogs need special care in winter to avoid weight gain, shedding and cabin fever, says a pet food manufacturer. They should be exercised outside, even in snow, at least twice a week, to benefit their general physical condition, circulation and mental health. Vegetable fat or lard added to a dog's diet helps keep it warmer outdoors and promotes a healthy, shiny coat, a company spokesman said.

'Dragon Will Swallow The Sun' In Monday Eclipse

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Next Monday, over North America, a giant dragon will seize the sun in its colossal jaws and try to devour it in a mighty battle across the sky.

That, at least, is what the ancient Chinese thought was happening in an eclipse of the sun — a struggle between light and darkness.

They banged gongs, shouted, shot off rockets and firecrackers, and generally raised a big commotion to scare the beast away.

And it worked. The dragon always released its bite on the orb.

Although there may not be a lot of gong clanging this time, the latest eclipse should attract some attention as sunlight fades and a subdued hue settles across the land.

The event takes on added significance because it is the last total eclipse visible in North America this century. It will be 2017 before the moon's shadow again totally blocks view of the sun from this continent.

Solar eclipses occur when the moon lines up between the Earth and the sun on the same plane. The moon blocks out some sunlight and casts shadows upon the earth.

To those in the deepest shadow, the moon seems to cover the sun. Actually, the sun's diameter is 400 times greater than the moon's, but the moon is far closer — producing the illusion.

Practically all of North America will experience at least a partial eclipse, with a portion of the sun's disk covered over. And over parts of the Northwest and Canada, the whole sun will be obscured because they lie along the narrow path the moon's shadow will follow.

The closer a person is to this path of totality, the greater the portion of the sun that will be covered at maximum eclipse. For example, in Bismarck, N.D., 99 percent of the sun will be hidden, compared with 61 percent in New York City and 32 percent in Miami.

The eclipse will begin at about sunrise on the West Coast and about mid-morning in the East. It should last about two and one-half hours.

The moon's shadow, about 170 miles wide, will race eastward at 1,700 miles per hour from northern Oregon and southern Washington across northern Idaho and central Montana. It then will swing northeastward across northwestern North Dakota, into Canada and onward through Greenland.

A potential hazard posed by this and any eclipse is eye damage from staring directly at the sun. The American Medical Association, the American Association of Ophthalmology (AAO) and others concerned with eye problems are warning people to be careful.

All warn against viewing the eclipse with the naked eye. And it also is not safe to use sunglasses, smoked glass, photographic film or negatives, camera filters or other devices, even in combination.

"Those who have used such things in the past and escaped injury were just plain lucky," says AAO President Dr. Whitney G. Sampson, of Houston.

Sampson says that when a person looks at the sun, the eye focuses light on the retina, the sensitive layer of cells in the back of the eyeball. These intense rays "cook" part of the retina, causing permanent, incurable damage. And because the retina is insensitive to pain, a person can't tell when the damage is taking place.

The experts say the best way to watch the eclipse is indirectly, using a simple pinhole projector.

A projector is made using a shoe box or two sheets of stiff, white paper. Poke a pin or pencil hole in one end of the box or one sheet of paper.

Standing with your back to the sun, focus light through the hole onto the other end of the box or other sheet of paper. When using papers, the size and focus of the image may be changed by altering the distance between the sheets.

Scientists using much more sophisticated devices than these also will be observing the eclipse. The National Science Foundation is coordinating the work of hundreds of researchers, including those from 20 universities, who will position themselves along the path of totality.

With the glare of the sun blocked out by the moon, scientists can study the sun's corona, or outermost atmosphere, mapping its density, cataloging composition and looking at radio emissions.

This eclipse will not imperil these scientists as the earliest recorded one did the royal Chinese astronomers, Hi and Ho.

According to historical accounts, the eclipse on Oct. 22, 2137 B.C. undid Hi and Ho when they drank too much wine and failed to perform their duties of beating drums and shooting arrows to drive the dragon away.

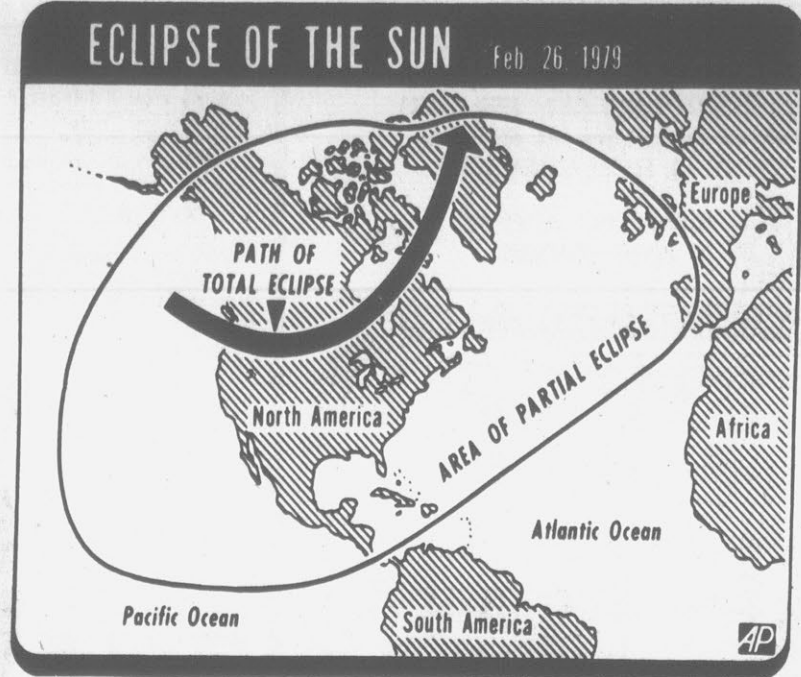

Because of the confusion that prevailed, Emperor Chung K'ang ordered Hi and Ho beheaded.

The following is a list of cities and the maximum amount sun that will be covered at each location. Other communities in each general vicinity will see a similar partial eclipse.

Juneau, Alaska, 86 percent; Eugene, Ore., 99; San Francisco, 86; Los Angeles, 78; Boise, Idaho, 98; Salt Lake City, 92; Phoenix, Ariz., 75; Cheyenne, Wyo., 90; Denver, 88; Albuquerque, N.M., 78; Sioux Falls, S.D., 90 percent; Omaha, Neb., 85; Tulsa, Okla., 74; Houston, 58; Minneapolis, Minn., 91; St. Louis, 75; New Orleans, 54; Milwaukee, Wis., 82; Chicago, 79; Detroit, 75; Memphis, 66; Mobile, Ala., 53; Cleveland, Ohio, 72; Buffalo, N.Y., 72; Portland, Maine, 63; Boston, 61; Philadelphia, 60; Washington, D.C., 60; Charlotte, N.C., 56; Atlanta, 57; and Tallahassee, Fla., 48.

ECLIPSE — An eclipse of the sun will be seen in North America on Feb. 26. The path of total eclipse will pass through Oregon and Montana; a partial eclipse will be seen as far south as Central America. (AP Laserphoto Map)

Modern Features In New Winn-Dixie Store

The grand opening of the new Winn-Dixie Store at Rivergate Shopping Center, E. Tenth Street Extension, is scheduled for Thursday at 8 a.m.

C. R. Weaver, manager of the new Winn-Dixie, said that the modern food facility will feature a combination delicatessen-bakery (deli-bakery) similar to the one at the Greenville Boulevard store. Hot foods, doughnuts, fresh bread, cakes, plate lunches and other take-out foods will be featured, he noted.

In addition, the store will have complete produce, meat and grocery departments, the manager pointed out.

Weaver said that the Rivergate store will be equipped with a scanning register system whereby check-out items will be tabulated by code. He added that the store is the first that he knows of in Greenville that has the new scanning-by-code feature.

Another feature of the store will be the addition of a quick-express checkout lane that will be operated during all business hours.

The new store, Weaver reported, will operate Monday through Saturday from 8 a.m. until 10 p.m. and Sundays from 10 a.m. until 7 p.m.

Ample parking has been provided for customers, he added.

The Rivergate facility is Winn-Dixie's second Greenville store. Weaver said the store has some 19,850 square feet.

In addition to Weaver, John Braxton will serve as assistant manager while Brently Register will manage the produce section, C. C. McGrady will be in charge of the meat department, and Ruth Sowers will be the manager for the deli-bakery.

Show Increasing Electricity-Use

READING, Pa. (UPI) — Higher rates are not the only reason for today's higher electricity bills: growing use of electricity in homes also is responsible.

Serving four million people in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, General Public Utilities Corporation reports that at the end of World War II its average residential customer used about 1,250 kilowatt-hours a year. In 1977, the average home used some 7,700 kilowatt-hours.

KEEPING YOU POSTED

BREAD...

an important part of your Daily Diet

Bread is an important element of your daily diet, providing energy, B-vitamins and iron. Kroger, which has been baking bread to serve our shoppers since before the turn of the century, helps you get more for your baked foods dollar in these important ways:

QUALITY!...From the basic ingredient to the finished loaf, Kroger baked foods are quality-controlled, with testing laboratories right in our eight bakeries.

FRESHNESS!...Kroger baked foods are open-dated, clearly marked with the final day they may be sold to assure freshness.

VARIETY!...Choose from among 120 bread, cake or pastry items...or more than 100 cookie, cracker or snack items.

NUTRITION!...No guessing needed. Kroger bread and buns are nutrient-labeled to show the calories and nutrients they contain. Kroger was the first grocer and baker to enrich all white flour used in its baked foods as recommended by the White House Conference on Food, Nutrition and Health.

LOWER-PRICED!...Because we bake our own, you save 20% or more compared with national or regional brands.

Usage Tips: Bread is at its fullest flavor at room temperature. For long storage, freeze it. Don't throw away the ends - a few turns in the blender and you have breadcrumbs to use in cooking.

We hear you and we're trying to help!
