Begin's Hardline Stance Publicly Ignored By U.S.

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter and Menachem Begin, publicly ignoring the Israeli prime minister's tough arrival statement, are casting their efforts at reviving stalled Mideast peace talks in a hopeful light.

After meeting alone for nearly two hours Thursday night, Carter and Begin got together again in mid-morning today, with the prime minister driving to the White House a few minutes ahead of schedule.

The two leaders also planned an afternoon session in crucial talks that could lead to a new Camp David summit, and agreed to a festive evening dinner with their wives at the start of the Jewish Sabbath.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance also arranged a luncheon meeting with the prime minister at the State Department.

The encouraging tone was in sharp contrast to the blunt thrust of Begin's vow, voiced upon arrival at Andrews Air Force Base, Md., that his government "cannot be pressed into signing a sham document" with Egypt.

Mincing no words, Begin said, "We are asked to sign documents which are in contradiction of the Camp David peace agreements (reached last September) and enabling our southern neighbor (Egypt) at any moment to declare the treaty null and void and to make war against Israel."

Later, though, declaring himself encouraged by his initial discussion with Carter at the White House, Begin told reporters, "There was not even one difficult moment."

As he entered Blair House, the official guest residence across Pennsylvania Avenue, Begin added, "I think it was one of the most important and constructive talks I ever had with the president."

Before their discussions in the White House Oval Office, Carter and Begin stood shoulder to shoulder, and talked with muted optimism about the task before them.

"There may be ups and downs," Begin told reporters, "but when it comes to a time of crisis, we make another intellectual effort and we overcome the difficulties. Hopefully, this will be the case also during my several days in Washington." There has been no indication when the talks will conclude.

Fast Payment By China In Accord

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
SHANGHAI, China (AP) — China agreed today to pay $80.5 million in cash and in record time to settle U.S. claims for property seized by the Communists when they took over the Chinese mainland in 1949.

With the U.S. claims totaling $196.34 million, China will pay 41 cents on the dollar, the same basis on which most other Communist governments have settled with the United States. But a senior U.S. official said the period of payment — five years — is the shortest achieved in a claims settlement with a Communist government. He said most settlements are paid over 20 years.

Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal said the settlement was "very good and very fair." He initialed the agreement with Finance Minister Chang Ching-fu at the Peking airport just before he flew to Shanghai to tour local industries and visit his boyhood home during World War II, after his parents fled with him from Nazi Germany.

A senior member of Blumenthal's party said the next step will be to negotiate a trade agreement with China, and this is expected to be accomplished in the next few months.

The United States in exchange for the claims settlement will release $80.5 million in Chinese bank accounts and other assets in the United States that it froze in 1950 in retaliation for the Communists' expropriation of U.S. property. But U.S. officials said China may be able to recover only some $30 million of this amount, and will get only about $13 million immediately.

However, China's payments do not depend on its recovering its assets in the United States. The first payment, $30 million, is due Oct. 1 and the remaining $50.5 million is to be paid in five equal installments before Oct. 1, 1984.

Nineteen Nations Agree To Reduce Oil Consumption

PARIS (AP) — The United States and 19 other leading industrial nations have agreed to reduce oil consumption by 5 percent in order to offset the shortfall of Iranian oil, the International Energy Agency announced today.

The IEA's 20 members agreed unanimously on the need to take "firm, prompt and coordinated action," Chairman Niels Ersboll of Denmark told a news conference after a two-day meeting.

Ersboll said the oil supply situation was sufficiently serious for prompt action, but that it had not reached the point at which the organization's mandatory emergency sharing plan would have to be implemented.

"It is vital for action to be taken now when there is still time and in order to prevent a deterioration of the situation," Ersboll said.

The IEA has left policy decisions on how to achieve the 5 percent reduction to individual members, he said, adding: "But we expect contributions from individual members to be similar."

In Tokyo, officials said before the action was announced that they believed Japan can meet the target with an energy conservation program it adopted last month. The program calls on government ministries and agencies to lower their room temperatures 2 degrees and to cut the use of cars by 20 percent.

The planned 5 percent reduction, two million barrels of oil per day, compares with an estimated 4 percent shortfall because of the Iranian cutoff, which has been compensated in part by increased production by other Persian Gulf states, and use of stockpiles in consumer nations.

Ersboll said the IEA had also informed the major international oil companies on the need for a fair distribution of available supplies to all members as well as to non-IEA members and especially to developing nations.

The IEA membership, which rose to 20 on Thursday with the admission of Australia, includes all the leading non-Communist industrialized nations except France.

Survived A Fire At Sea

ATLANTIC BEACH, N.C. (AP) — The chief officer of the freighter St. Chris, heavily damaged when its cargo holds exploded in flames in the Atlantic Ocean Tuesday, said today it was almost a miracle that only one crewman died in the blast. "We were very lucky because the explosion happened (at) 7:58 a.m. and nobody was on deck," Haralampos Panagakis said this morning after he and 35 other crewmen from the St. Chris arrived at the Port Macon Coast Guard Station aboard the Coast Guard Cutter Chilula.

Panagakis said most of the 41 crewmen were below deck and getting ready to return to their duties after breakfast when the explosions occurred about 330 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras, N.C.

"If the explosion started only two minutes later, about 15 people was dead," he said in halting English.

One crewman was killed in the blast. Panagakis identified the man as Ismael Lizama of Honduras and said his body has not been found. He speculated Lizama was thrown into the ocean.

The 36 crewmen brought to the Coast Guard station aboard the Chilula were sent to a hotel for rest. They were 19 Greeks, 15 Hondurans and two Filipinos.

Say 'No' To Peace Talks

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam today rejected a Chinese proposal for talks to end their two-week-old war, calling it a "trick" to hide Peking's "war intensification." Sources here said Chinese troops meanwhile were closing a vise on the Vietnamese defenders of Lang Son.

In a televised address in Moscow today, Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev demanded that China immediately halt its invasion of Soviet-allied Vietnam and withdraw its troops "to the last soldier." Brezhnev threatened no specific action, however.

Intelligence sources in Bangkok and elsewhere have been expecting the war's major battle to be fought around Lang Son, a strategic crossroads town 80 miles northeast of Hanoi and 10 miles south of the Chinese border.

Bangkok sources said today the Chinese have virtually encircled the Lang Son and cut off its highway arteries — Highway 4 running east-west and Highway 1a connecting the front-line town with Hanoi.

Voice of Vietnam radio said Vietnamese troops killed almost 2,500 Chinese soldiers in fighting Thursday around LANG SON. It was unclear whether the Chinese would try to seize the town.

Hanoi Radio said China's call for negotiations was "a trick" that Peking authorities are using "to fool the public and to cover up their war intensification."

Covered By A Foggy Blanket

A heavy blanket of fog, which the National Weather Service said should burn off by noon, covered the Greenville area this morning and made driving conditions more hazardous.

According to the weather service, skies in the Raleigh area were clearing by 11 a.m., and sunny skies were predicted for the Greenville area this afternoon.

Both the North Carolina Highway Patrol and the Greenville Police Department said the fog added to the normal hazards facing the motoring public this morning, but noted that no abnormal increase in the number of wrecks had been reported.

The fog did lead to an increase in the number of cars seen parked along city streets and in parking lots with their headlights left burning, however, as drivers hurried to their jobs, forgetting to turn their car lights off.

The Greenville Utilities Commission weather station reported yesterday's high temperature reached 58 degrees, while the low for the day was recorded at 33 degrees.

At 8 a.m. today, the temperature stood at 44 degrees, with the Tar River level at 16.8 feet.

At 8 a.m. yesterday, the Tar had reached the 16-foot mark, some two feet over the 14-foot flood stage.

The National Weather Service this morning predicted that the Tar River at Greenville, would crest at 17 to 18 feet late Saturday.

A HOTLINE APPEAL

Mr. & Mrs. Robert E. "Hack" Hackney Jr.

COUPLE NEEDS HELP

"Hack" and Denise Mobley Hackney, 26 and 25, former East Carolina University students and Greenville area residents, were critically injured in a motor vehicle accident in Naples, Fla. Valentine's Day. Their van was struck head-on by a dump truck on which the owner had no liability insurance.

A fairly detailed report of the accident was published in last Friday's "Daily Reflector."

While they lived in this area, Hack worked as a carpenter and Denise was an occupational education teacher. They left here last September and had worked since as a waiter and waitress at the Beach Club Hotel in Naples. They had no health insurance.

Denise's condition seems to be improving, their friends here hear from Denise's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Earl Mobley of Williamston, who have been in Naples since shortly after the accident. But Hack remains in a coma. Their medical bills at Naples Community Hospital increase by the hundreds and thousands daily.

Friends in this area have started a Hackney Fund to help the couple. Contributions may be sent to Hackney Fund, c/o Branch Bank and Trust Company, Arlington Boulevard, Greenville, N.C. 27834. Inquiries may be made of Ellis and Toni Banks, 756-7877.

Future Gasoline Crunch Feared By Tar Heels

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gasoline allocation cutbacks announced this week by seven major oil companies won't affect supplies in North Carolina this month, distributors say.

But they're afraid further cuts could mean an end to self-service islands and Sunday gasoline sales.

"We have a rough time ahead," said Bill L. Weddington, president of the North Carolina Service Station Association. "It (the cutbacks) means that some dealers may have to work around hours more beneficial to them. There are already two (stations in Charlotte) that have started closing on Sundays."

Cutbacks were announced this week by Citgo, Mobil, Texaco, Shell, Phillips, Amoco and Union. Spokesmen for Sunoco, Exxon and Gulf said cutbacks may come later this month.

President Carter has asked Congress for standby powers to close stations on Sunday and implement rationing if energy supplies drop dangerously low because of increased consumer demand and the lack of oil from Iran.

"Man it'll hurt us," said Earl E. Taylor, general manager of Turner Oil Co. in Wilson which distributes Citgo gasoline to 24 stations in Wilson County. "A five percent cut hurts, but when you start talking 20 percent it's going to be real close."

The cutbacks won't mean price increases at the pumps because no oil company has raised gasoline prices, Weddington, a Charlotte service station operator, said.

"Some dealers may close their self-service islands and just go with full-service," Weddington said. "They'll go back to what it was a couple of years ago and check the tires, clean the windshield and check under the hood. The price (of full-service, which is higher than self-service) helps pay the man to do that."

the twins who shared a common heart was sacrificed by the doctors in hopes of saving life of the other. From left are Doctors Laurence A. Somers, head of the team, V.L. Shaskumar, Roy Balsara and Jeffrey M. Dunn. (AP Laserphoto)

One Tiny Siamese Twin Dies In Surgery Trying To Save Sister

By CHRIS ROBERTS
Associated Press Writer
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Four tiny hands flailed in the air as surgeons separated Siamese twins in a court-ordered operation, taking the life of one so her sister could have the heart they shared since birth. The surviving infant, called "Baby A" or "Twin A" since she was delivered first by Caesarean section on Feb. 20, was listed in critical condition. The six-hour operation — performed Thursday at St. Christopher's Hospital for Children — commanded the skills of eight doctors, six nurses and three heart pump technicians. "Twin B was sacrificed in order to save another life," Dr. Laurence Somers, the chief surgeon, told reporters an hour after the operation. "I'm quite optimistic. Twin A...is doing as well as can be expected."

The surgical team knew from the start that one girl would have to die if the other was to live. After an anesthetic was administered, the team gingerly positioned the lone, six-chambered heart and a common liver in the chest and abdominal cavities of Twin A.

At 1:28 p.m., Dr. R.K. Balsara clamped off Twin B's primary heart artery. "The baby was then taken out of the operating room, dead," Somers said. "It wasn't difficult to detect an emotional upheaval among the nurses when the life support systems were unhooked."

"We did something today that resulted in the death of an individual," he said. "We ended up in court yesterday to get a court order for the separation in order to protect ourselves and the hospital" from liability. "That's only been done once before. But we were participating in a procedure in which someone would die. In effect there was a homicide," the surgeon added.

The twins' parents, a Philadelphia couple who have requested anonymity, have two other children — a boy and girl. "They knew it would be twins, but not Siamese twins," Somers said. "It took a while for us to get consent for the operation. Birth of such twins is a shock to any parents. The prospect of surgery is another shock. But of course the biggest shock is the realization one of your children is going to die."

Before Thursday's surgery, four operations had been performed on Siamese twins sharing a common heart. None survived infancy.

The last such operation was performed Oct. 11, 1977, at Children's Hospital here, also with a court order.

The survivor of that operation, also a girl, lived for three months. Siamese twins occur when a fertilized egg begins to divide, but fails to complete the separation into two embryos. This occurs in one out of every 65,000 or so births. Babies with joined hearts occur only once in 100,000 births.

Snow Record

GRANDFATHER MOUNTAIN, N.C. (AP) — February dumped 37 inches of snow on Grandfather Mountain this year, breaking the old record set in 1960.

Hugh Morton of Grandfather Mountain said this February's snowfall broke the 19-year record of 32 inches.

Morton said that with January's 23 inches added to February's 37 inches, a combined total of five feet has fallen on Grandfather in 1979.

It rained or snowed on 21 of the 28 days in the month to continue the trend of this winter being the wettest ever, Morton said. In the first two months of the year it rained 14.48 inches, compared to 5.52 on the average. It snowed 60 inches, 32 inches more than the average for this time of year.

Settlement By 'Yellow Pages'

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The owners of the Texas Best Bar-B-Que No. 2 didn't like it at all, so they sued. And on Thursday, it was agreed they would receive $14,750 in cash and $966.60 in free advertising because the eatery was listed in the 1977 Yellow Pages under "kennels."

The owners — William Chapman, who has since sold his interest, and Ralph Tanasoca — sued Southwestern Bell and Gulf Printing Co. of Houston for $200,000, saying the incorrect listing was libelous and damaging to their business.

A deposition filed by a telephone company official said the error was one of 159 made in that year's Yellow Pages.

The settlement was reached as the case was going to trial.

Shrimp Disaster Loans Approved

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Small Business Administration has approved $1.3 million in shrimp disaster loans for North Carolina shrimpers, according to Mike Street of the N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries.

Street said 85 of 135 applications for loans have been approved. The average loan is $13,000, Street said.

Loan applications will be accepted through June 6. North Carolina shrimpers suffered financial losses because a poor shrimp season last year when catches were about 52 percent below normal.

Hospice Role Described In Area Meeting Here

Approximately 150 persons from Pitt and surrounding counties attended the Thursday presentation on hospices, featuring the Rev. Peter Keese, president of the North Carolina Hospice, and Carl Whitney, executive director of the organization.

Dr. Charles Mitchell, president of the Pitt County Mental Health Association, introduced the speakers, who gave information on the philosophy, history and dynamics of hospices as one approach for care of the terminally ill.

According to Whitney, the Hospice of North Carolina acts as a clearing house, offering up-to-date information for interested communities. Whitney noted that it usually takes from eighteen months to two years to establish a well-organized hospice program.

The Rev. Keese pointed out that hospice care is coordinated with existing services as a patient-family unit of care. The hospice program is physician-directed, with control of physical symptoms of the patient as first priority.

According to the Rev. Keese, home care in the New Haven Hospice in Connecticut cost approximately $750 for 3.1 months of care, as compared to an approximate three-day cost at Duke Hospital.

After films were shown on the New Haven Hospice, Jeff McAllister, Director of Pitt County Council on Aging, led a discussion period with questions answered by Whitney and the Rev. Keese.

The meeting was co-sponsored by the Mental Health Association in Pitt County, the Rehabilitation Center, Pitt County Memorial Hospital, the East Carolina University School of Medicine, ECU School of Nursing, Eastern AHEC, ECU School of Allied Health and Social Professions, Pitt County Mental Health Center and the Pitt County Council on Aging.

Interested persons who wish to obtain information on hospices may call the Mental Health Association, 752-7448, or the Pitt County Council on Aging, 752-1717.

Fashionplate Asymmetry Called Wave Of Future

By JOHN MOODY
UPI Men's Fashion Editor

So how did a 26-year-old kid from New Jersey who buys his own clothes at thrift shops get to be the top designer for an Italian fashion house?

"I faked it," giggles Bill Rancitelli, the slightly outrageous rising star of San Remo clothes.

Rancitelli, a native of Caldwell, N.J., says he knew he wanted to be a fashion designer since he was 10. "My parents thought I was a little strange, and they were right," he says, his right hand moving furiously over a sketch book as he carried on a perfectly normal conversation.

By the time he is finished talking, he has drawn what may be his latest fashion innovation—a double-breasted shirt with one button missing.

"The idea of asymmetry in fashion really fascinates me," he said. "I think it's the wave of the future."

And, indeed, many of his spring designs for San Remo have a spaceman look—the result of Rancitelli's overactive imagination and ever-active sketching hand.

"I just sketch the most ridiculous, crazy clothes I can think of—things I would wear. Then I water them down as I design them until I think it's something most people would put on."

It was not always so.

"Back in 1973 I was doing ladies evening gowns and coats for Oleg Cassini. But that's very limiting and I knew my creativity was being wasted." Then in July of last year, Peter Haspel bought San Remo, an Italian government subsidized designing firm, and Rancitelli had a new job.

"They hired me and took their chances. They really didn't know what I would do in my first collection." The fruits of his efforts include shirts with pleated shoulders—"why not?" he asks innocently.

Unlike many designers who will be seen in nothing but their own handiwork, Rancitelli often shows up wearing his latest purchases from the local thrift shop, near his apartment in Greenwich Village.

"You see, everything in fashion is really just a revision of an old style. The things they wore 30 years ago suddenly become stylish again. I'd rather have the original old things, and thrift shops are the best place to find them."

It's also the place he can find sizes to fit his unusually tall, broad-shouldered frame.

"I design all my clothes with broad shoulders out of sympathy for people built like me. If you're broad shouldered, you can say it's the new loose look. It doesn't really matter."

And in a world with no set rules, that fashion philosophy makes as much sense as any other.

Not A Problem Child, A Child With Problems

DEAR ABBY: I'm 17, pregnant, and not sure what I want to do about it. Some say I should marry the father, but I'm not sure who the father is because I was going with three guys at the same time.

I'm afraid of abortion, although I've heard there's nothing to it. I sure don't want to raise a kid without a husband, but I wouldn't feel right about giving it away to strangers either. I suppose my mother would take it, but she's got her hands full with 12 kids, and the youngest is only 2.

I'm nearly three months along. Everybody I talk to tells me something different. I'm confused and need some good advice fast.

IN A MESS IN L.A.

DEAR IN: Please quit talking to friends. Get some sound advice from a professional counselor. Call Planned Parenthood. It's listed in your phone book. Tell them Abby told you to call for an appointment for counseling.

The counselor will help you make a decision you can live with. You will also be taught how to prevent unwanted pregnancies in the future.

DEAR ABBY: I am happily married to a handsome, hard-working, successful executive. I've never had any reason to doubt him until last week. While hanging up his overcoat, a key from a local motel fell out of the pocket. Since we live in town, I wondered why my husband would need a motel room, so I asked him.

He told me he has a lot of business to talk over with his new secretary, and that he can't very well take her out to lunch because she's an attractive young divorcee with a reputation as a swinger, and people might talk. Since he values his reputation as a straight-laced family man, he rents a motel room occasionally so they can have lunch and talk business without stirring up gossip.

What do you think about this?

Candybar Cookies Store Well

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: Have you a recipe for bar cookies that will taste good even after they have been stored at room temperature for several weeks? My husband and I hardly ever eat sweets, so I make few desserts. However, we often want to serve a cup of coffee or tea with some cookies when neighbors or other friends come to see us. I've been buying very good cookies but now, for a change, I'd like to have a box that holds homemade ones on hand. — RETIRED.

DEAR RETIRED: Here's a recipe for long-lasting bar cookies that I consider well worth baking. They're as crunchy as some candy bars and their flavor is excellent.

I discovered the recipe, after your query came, in a booklet published about 25 years ago by an Illinois utility company. It was heartening, on testing, to find the formula so good it needed little updating.

I kept these cookies on hand in a tightly covered tin box at room temperature for about a month and even the last one tasted delicious. Thanks for your request. The recipe came in handy in my own household. — C.B.

CRUNCH CANDYBAR PEANUT COOKIES

Topping, see below
2½ cups fork-stirred all-purpose flour
1¼ cups firmly packed dark brown sugar, sieved if lumpy
1 cup butter or margarine
1-3rd cup crunchy peanut butter
1 large egg yolk
1 teaspoon vanilla

Prepare the Topping and set aside. In a large bowl stir together the flour and sugar; with a pastry blender cut in the butter and peanut butter until the particles are fine. In a cup, with a fork, beat together the egg yolk and vanilla; add to the flour mixture and mix well. Press over the bottom of an ungreased 15 by 10 by 1-inch jellyroll pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven for 25 minutes; leave oven control on. Cool crust for about 5 minutes. Drop the Topping by teaspoonfuls, at even intervals, over the warm cookie crust. Return to the 350-degree oven for about 2 minutes. Remove from oven and at once spread Topping over crust. Cool, but while still slightly warm, loosen edges with a small spatula. Refrigerate briefly—just until the chocolate is firm enough to cut the cookies into bars. Remove to a wire rack. When the topping is dry enough to do so, store in single layers, between sheets of saran, in a tightly covered tin box. Or wrap each bar separately in saran before storing. Makes twenty-eight 2½ by 2-inch bars.

Topping: In a small bowl mix together ½ cup crunchy peanut butter, ½ cup chopped peanuts (skinned and unsalted and roasted) and 1 cup semi-sweet chocolate pieces.

PITT PLAZA

Pleased By Addition To Pitt

Gov. Jim Hunt Thursday announced a major new industry for Pitt County with the decision of TRW, Inc. to utilize the old Container Corp. building on N. Greene Street.

Now it is anticipated that TRW, Inc. will use the space for a larger industrial operation engaged in the manufacture of rack and pinion steering components for automotive units.

The local plant will be a part of the Michigan division of TRW, Inc.. It will begin production with about 85 persons and expansion is expected in the future.

TRW, Inc. is a major United States corporation with annual sales now in the $3.5 billion category. It employs 87,500 people worldwide.

In making the announcement of the new industry for North Carolina and our area, Gov. Hunt cited TRW as a company which is "typical of the kind of corporate citizen which we are seeking to attract to our state."

George E. Irvine, vice president and general manager, expressed the company's pleasure in locating here. He said the company is "enthused about the Greenville area and know our plant will make a contribution to the community."

We can assure the governor and the company that the people and officials of our area are pleased to learn that such an outstanding industry will be locating in Pitt County. We foresee a cordial and productive relationship between the people of Pitt County and TRW, Inc.

Good Example Of Using Our Resources

Some years back the sport of skiing was virtually unknown in North Carolina.

This year, the N. C. Ski Area Association reports, some 508,000 persons visited the state ski slopes, a 50 percent increase over the previous winter.

The skiers left behind $30.3 million to bolster the mountain economy.

It's a glowing example of what can be done to attract travel dollars using our natural resources.

THIS AFTERNOON

Treat Or Shelter Them?

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The freezing death of a Raleigh derelict, huddled in the snow at an abandoned ballpark, has brought wide attention to North Carolina's method of handling drunks.

The man had been turned away from two alcoholic treatment centers: one operated at state-owned Dix Hospital, the other a local detoxification center.

Brought into sharp focus are several different aspects of how drunk programs operate:

- Treatment programs which are heavily funded and provide a high level of professional care are having little success in "curing" drunks;
- Complaints that treatment centers are overnight flop houses for drunks who commit themselves, get a place to eat and sleep, then return to the bottle appear to have validity;
- The recent change in state law which removed public drunkenness as a criminal offense and keeps the drunks out of jail was made without allowing for some other way to keep the fellows alive;

No Solution

Comments by retiring Superior Court Judge Hamilton Hobgood that generation after generation of effort to deal with drunks have produced nothing but frustration and failure were given added significance:

— Perhaps most importantly, the fine distinction between trying to treat drunks, and simply protecting them, was brought into sharp focus.

That final point is one which most people are having difficulty understanding.

Till now, North Carolina's drunk program has concentrated on mental hospitals as prime treatment facilities for drunks, with community mental health centers providing local services.

Convinced that this system wastes millions of dollars with little result, the United Health Services division of United Way of North Carolina is pushing a proposal in the General Assembly to break up that concentration.

Tony Mulvihill, director of the Durham-based health agency, claims more than $22 million is spent each year on rehab programs and another $12 million in detox (drying out) centers.

The health group is pushing the measure to switch some $7 million from the mental health programs into local centers where drunks would be treated less from medical-professional viewpoints; more by proven methods of Alcoholics Anonymous which rests on the premise that a drunk has got to admit his failings and seek help.

BILL NOBLITT

Gov. Jim Hunt — without endorsing the whole new approach at this time — still agrees that community treatment is the correct approach, and that mental health programs are not working because the drunks don't want help. "The reason it isn't solved is because most alcoholics don't want to solve it ... most alcoholics don't want to change."

No Shelter
But even if the switch in method of treatment and spending takes place, that doesn't speak to the problem of simply giving a drunk a place to sleep and something to eat. Local law enforcement officials have been complaining for months that decriminalization of public drunkenness has left them helpless in handling the problem.

"There is a great danger, perhaps, from decriminalization," Hunt says now. But his feeling is that the state should continue in treatment efforts while local communities must pick up the ball on sheltering the drunks. "If we can't do it otherwise, maybe we ought to let them go back in the jails and spend the night."

Some see that comment as a signal that unless some other way is found to protect the drunks — and that is completely apart from the expensive professional treatment programs and facilities — then the state might reconsider public drunkenness as a crime.

It is senseless, Hunt aides say, to spend millions on fancy programs and facilities for drunks who don't want them, and allow people to be unhoused and unfed.

OH, OH, MISTER---BE VERY CAREFUL!

Strain On The Smiles

By BARRY SCHWEID

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's talks here with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin are off to an unhappy start. And the outcome could be even gloomier.

It's no secret that Carter and Begin don't get along well. That need not be a big problem, however.

It's an open secret that West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and some other world leaders aren't impressed with Carter.

Yet U.S. relations with Bonn haven't suffered any noticeable setback as a result.

But apart from their very different outlooks and personalities, Carter and Begin are approaching the Middle East in divergent ways.

Carter told the nation's governors the other night that the issues separating Egypt and Israel are "absolutely insignificant."

Begin does not see them that way.

"With all due respect," he said, they are big issues, affecting Israel's future and security.

Besides their different perspectives, there is the feeling in Israel that Carter is out to pressure Begin.

That's denied at the State Department where spokesman Hodding Carter says "we neither mean to imply, nor do we wish anyone to infer that."

But the feeling persists.

And, of course, there is the very real problem that the United States supports Egypt in most of the key unresolved issues.

There is little in the American package that leans toward the Israelis.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat wants the treaty linked, with a timetable, to Palestinian autonomy.

The United States approves. Sadat does not want the treaty to take priority over Egypt's defense ties to other Arab countries.

The United States is for that. And Sadat, again with U.S. support, wants to hold back on an exchange of ambassadors with Israel until there is total Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai Peninsula and steps are taken toward Palestinian self-rule.

Fuel-Gougers Organized

WASHINGTON — The president of the American Assn. of Fuel Gougers, Sidney Fiddler, was ecstatic about recent events in Iran. "It's been a long drought between gouging," he said. "We haven't been able to dicke the public royally since 1974."

"It seems like only yesterday," I said. "You're really going to give it to us this time?"

"What choice do we have?"

We haven't gouged the country since 1974 and the Arab oil embargo. Since then we've barely made expenses."

"But doesn't the government have laws about oil gouging?" I asked.

Fiddler roared with laughter. "The Department of Energy has 20,000 employees, of which 1,400 are supposed to keep up on gouging. Of these 1,400, two understand what they're supposed to do, and they're still trying to figure out what happened in 1974."

"You read a lot about oil gouging in the business, but no one knows how it really works on a large scale. How does it?"

ART BUCHWALD

"Okay, it's simple," Fiddler said. "Come upstairs with me." We went up to the next floor where there was a series of offices with names of different oil companies on the doors. Fiddler went into one of them, the Prairie Dog Oil Co., and he introduced me to Hart Hegler. "Hart, my friend here has never seen a daisy chain. How about setting one up for him?"

"No problem, I was about to do the 2 o'clock one anyway," Hart said. "Now, the first thing you have to keep in mind is that there's a bunch of oil tanks in Galveston loaded with 100,000 tons of old fuel oil which I own and which should sell for $5 a barrel. I pick up the phone and call the Rattlesnake Petroleum Co., which is in the next office." Fiddler and I went into the next office which, sure enough, had "Rattlesnake Petroleum Co." on the door. The man sitting at the desk was an exact replica of Hart.

"That's Hubbard," Fiddler whispered to me. "He's Hart's twin brother." The phone rang and Hubbard picked it up.

"Hart, well I'll be damned. I haven't heard from you in a long time. Whatcha got on your mind? You want sell me 100,000 barrels of new crude at $16 a barrel? Isn't that a might high? No, no, I'll take it, just send over the vouchers and I'll give you a check, you lowdown thief."

"He called his brother a thief," I whispered to Fiddler. "That's just in case

Public Forum

To the editor

The recent unfortunate incident of the person who died from exposure in Raleigh prompts clarification for public information of two of our nation's serious human problems.

The first is alcoholism — our No. 1 health problem, affecting millions of our people and their families. It's a disease that is democratic in nature, in that it affects people of all classes, races and religions.

The second problem is our orphaned and family-less adults, most of whom are male. By our attitudes, we forget their humanness and categorize and label them with such words as derelict, mope, lazy, bum, etc.

The major problem is we connect the disease of alcoholism with this family-less population, who make up five percent of the people suffering from alcoholism. We then illogically classify the monies and treatment for these people as alcoholism monies and not habilitation funds, because alcoholism is only one of the many disabilities germane to this population.

We could be doing an injustice to both the suffering alcoholics and to the suffering lonely orphaned adults of our society.

We need funds for both, but separate treatment modalities, treatment structures and treatment plans. The homeless family-less orphaned adult needs long-range habilitation, alcohol detox is only one step in this lengthy treatment.

The detox of most alcoholics is taking place daily in our hospitals by private physicians, in many cases without the diagnosis of alcoholism. The reason for masking alcoholism with different diagnoses vary — e. g. insurance payments, family pride, supply by the patient of wrong information — but most hospitals have a population of 25 percent alcohol-related problems.

The person diagnosed with the disease of alcoholism who has a family, home and job needs a separate individualized treatment plan. The orphaned adult also needs a separate individualized long-range treatment plan.

There is not one single answer to these two complex problems — but there is a need for education, understanding and clarification of these problems for future prevention of human loss.

WASHINGTON DATELINE

Inflation Will March On

By HENRY HAZLITT

There is no prospect for a halt to the inflation or even for a slowdown in its rate. Instead, we have the strange spectacle of Mr. Carter's railing against the consequences that his own policies have brought about and must continue to bring about.

He complains about "skyrocketing hospital costs," and proposes stringent controls. But the reason for the rise in hospital costs is not mysterious. In addition to the issuance of too many paper dollars, which raise all costs, it is caused by the provision of Medicare and Medicaid. When the government pays the major share of hospital bills, the demand for hospital services is certain to soar. But Mr. Carter not only favors Medicare and Medicaid, but also promises that "this year we will take our first steps to develop a national health plan."

If price controls are imposed on hospitals, they can only discourage the expansion of hospital facilities and the increase in the number of doctors and nurses necessary to relieve the shortage and ultimately lower hospital costs.

Mr. Carter expresses to Congress his deep concern about this country's lagging economic productivity — the slowdown in output per worker-hour, and in the growth of jobs. But this again has been obviously caused by the policies that Mr. Carter has favored and followed — heavy taxation of corporate earnings, double-taxation of dividends, Draconian tax rates on the higher personal incomes, price and profit controls, accusations of so-called "obscene" profits — in short, the discouragement of saving, investment, and business expansion. But these are the very things necessary to provide additional jobs and to make them more productive. It is increased capital investment, the provision of more and better equipment, that is needed to increase such productivity.

Now Mr. Carter fulminates against inflation. It "is a burden for all Americans, but it's a disaster for the poor, the sick and the old ... I am determined, as President, to bring inflation under control."

How is he going about that? Not in his budget plans, certainly. The rhetoric that accompanied the budget was all about its "austerity" and "restraint". The people who accepted this rhetoric at face value couldn't have looked closely at the actual figures. The expenditures for the current fiscal year — which does not end till September 30 — will be $493.4 billion, the highest on record. The budgeted outlays for 1980 will rise to $531.6 billion, still a further new high record. The planned outlays for 1980 have grown as expected — but not quite as fast as for 1979. If you can call that "restraint", so be it.

Much is made of the fact that the planned deficit for 1980 will be "only" $29 billion, compared with an expected deficit of $37.4 billion in the current fiscal year. Even if this $29 billion figure is realized, it would still be an enormous spur to inflation. Even so it will be achieved only because American taxpayers are counted on to pay $46.6 billion more in taxes in 1980 than in the current fiscal year. But there are too many over-optimistic expectations

Strength For Today

TAKE NO THOUGHT

The words, "Take no thought", were constantly on the lips of Jesus. He urged men to take no thought about what they should eat or drink or wear. He conveyed the impression that as soon as we begin to worry about how life is lived and what is going to happen to us, then complications set in which destroy both happiness and efficiency.

Our food digests best if we eat sensibly and give no thought to the digestive process.

A person can induce tension and irregular heartbeat if he anxiously listens to his heart and continual continually takes his pulse. The less we think about our organs, the better they perform. "The centipede was happy quite until a toad in fun said 'Pray, which leg goes after which?'"

That worked her mind to such a pitch. She lay distracted in a ditch. Considering how to run."

An Escape From Cabin Fever

By GAIL MICHAELS

When God wanted to punish mankind for his sins, He sent the flood and the telephone.

My list of grievances against the telephone is long and bitter. For instance, it invariably rings 30 minutes after Meg has gone down for a nap. She hasn't slept long enough to dispel her grouches, but she's slept too long to go back to sleep.

Then there are the times I've broken my neck to get out of the shower and to pad dripping wet into the kitchen, only to find that it's the wrong number. And we get plenty of wrong numbers. Once we were assigned the number of a defunct all night deli. You've never lived until you've been awakened from a sound sleep at two in the morning to hear, "Garbage pizza and hold the anchovies."

Worst of all, I hear my daughter echoing all my mannerisms over the phone. I cringe every time I hear her say, "You've got to be kidding," or "Talk to you later. Bye-bye now," in deep Georgia drawl. But I must admit that the phone is a house-bound parent's only salvation. Meg and I were cooped up together for three days during the last snowstorm, and if I hadn't been able to call out, I would have gone berserk. The first day Meg played in the snow, but she was tired of it by the second day. So she followed me around the house and whined until I thought my eardrums would burst.

By the third day we both had cabin fever. I drank ten cups of coffee and got the shakes. She, on the other hand, began to develop pronounced delinquent tendencies. At 9 a.m. I found her sitting backwards on the commode with her feet in the toilet surrounded by clouds of fluffy toilet tissue. She had unrolled every bit we had in the house.

At about 10 a.m. I walked into her bedroom and found her fingernail painting the rug. I tried to clean it up while she stood over me and squealed, "Why are you taking it off? It looks so pretty!"

Not long afterwards I heard a crash and ran to her room again. She was sitting on the top of her bookcase, and her china music box which should have been up there with her was in pieces on the floor.

A phone call to a friend provided my only means of coping. She and I commiserated over our sorry lot for about thirty minutes, and when I hung up, I felt much better.

Then my mother called long distance and wanted to speak to Meg, who came rolling into the room with a doll stroller crammed full of naked baby dolls.

"And how do you like all that snow you're having up there?" my mother asked.

"Oh, I guess it's okay," Meg sighed, "but honest to goodness, Grandmommy, these babies are about to drive me crazy!"

Four-Year Legislative Terms Bill Sent To Senate

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill that would increase the terms of legislators from two years to four was voted out of the Senate Constitutional Amendments Committee without prejudice Thursday.

The subcommittee studying the bill advised that it be given a favorable report. But when several committee members said they were not sure how they would vote on the bill when it came to the floor, the committee decided to report the bill out without prejudice, or without an unfavorable or favorable report, instead.

The report will not affect the progress of the bill. It now goes to the Senate floor. Sen. Robert Davis, D-Rowan, said the bill's supporters would bring it before the Senate Monday night and that he was confident it would pass. Sen. Fred Alexander, D-Mecklenburg, the only black in the Senate, said after the committee vote that he supported the bill because it would improve the position of blacks in state government. "The problem in trying to get black candidates to run for statewide office has been that the cost is too high to run for a two-year term," Alexander said.

The committee effectively killed another proposed amendment by reporting it out without prejudice, but with the understanding that the bill would be postponed indefinitely. Rep. Anne Bagnal, R-Forsyth, sponsored the bill, which would have added the powers of initiative and referendum to the state constitution.

The bill would have given voters the right to initiate legislation or to vote approval or disapproval of legislation already approved by the General Assembly.

In other legislation:

Bank Boards

A bill that would increase the number of public members on three commissions regulating the banking industry was sent to a subcommittee after a review from the House Banks and Thrift Institutions Committee.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Ruth Cook, D-Wake, would require the Banking, Credit Union and Savings and Loan commissions to have public members comprising 51 percent of their membership.

This would mean that at least seven of the 13 members of the Banking Commission would have to be representatives of the borrowing public, and four members of both the Savings and Loan and Credit Union commissions — which have seven members — would have to be a public representative.

Action on the bill was delayed after several committee members said they supported the measure but had technical questions about the bill.

UNC Money

The University of North Carolina system is asking for an additional $50 million for its budget for the next two years.

UNC President William Friday made that request to the Joint Appropriations committees that are now hearing supplemental-budget requests from all state agencies. The hearings give the agencies a chance to convince the legislature to restore funds to their budgets that were cut by the Advisory Budget Commission or to ask for money to cover needs unforeseen when the commission made its recommendations.

Friday has asked for $9,049,987 for current operations for 1979-80 and $22,317,968 for current operations for 1980-81 and $20,610,400 for capital improvements for the biennium.

Friday told the committee the extra money would be used for expansion and improvement of academic programs throughout the university system, capital improvements on several campuses, salary increases for all academic personnel, expansion of the Agricultural Experiment Station and extension service and capital improvements at North Carolina Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill.

Banks

The Senate Banking Committee gave a favorable report to a bill stipulating which bank records are confidential and which may be open to the public.

The bill designates as confidential records compiled by an examination, audit or investigation of a bank and any records compiled in anticipation of litigation. Records of bank loans and collateral are to be kept confidential, except for reports of insider transactions made by a bank. These must be filed with the appropriate state or federal agency and be open to the public.

Insider transactions are those between the bank and its officers or directors.

The committee gave a favorable report to a committee substitute for a bill requiring that the public convenience and advantage be served before a new savings and loan association is chartered by the state Savings and Loan Commission. The committee amended the bill to take effect on June 30 instead of upon ratification by the General Assembly.

Liquor Sales

The House Alcoholic Beverage Committee delayed action for a week on a bill that would be the first step in controlling the sales of whiskey on military bases.

The bill would require all liquor manufacturers to report to the state how much liquor the bases are buying.

Representatives of the state Alcoholic Control Board told the committee they believe liquor delivered to military bases is being sold to unauthorized persons and they want to know how much liquor the bases are actually receiving.

Insurance

Bills were filed in the House and Senate to make it possible for drivers to get their collision as well as liability insurance through the state's reinsurance facility.

The bills would also provide for a clean-risk classification within the reinsurance pool. The classification would mean drivers in the pool would have their insurance rate based on assigned risk, rather than on a flat surcharge.

Sen. Carolyn Mathis, D-Mecklenburg, sponsor of the Senate bill, said state Insurance Commissioner John Ingram supports the bills.

Rep. Hartwell Campbell, D-Wilson, is sponsoring the bill in the House.

Begin has resisted these Egyptian demands until now.

There seems little reason to believe he will give ground, especially on all of them, now.

Carter is not entirely defenseless, however, in trying to gain Israeli concessions to wrap up the treaty.

He can offer U.S. bankrolling for the new Israeli airfields to be constructed in the Negev desert after the Sinai bases are relinquished to Egypt.

He can speed up delivery of top-notch U.S. fighters and other advanced weapons.

And, if he finds Begin in any sort of a compromising mood, he can get on the telephone and urge Sadat to join them.

Another three-way summit just might clear the remaining hurdles. It just might duplicate the amazing success of last September's Camp David summit.

That, after all, set the stage for completing about 95 percent of the treaty.

On the key, unresolved issues, Sadat also has resisted compromise. In fact, in many ways, he has hardened his position since Camp David.

But he, too, needs U.S. aid.

A poor country, Egypt has a growing population. In the last five months, half a million Egyptians were born. The total is now 40.5 million people.

Transportation, telephone service, housing, sewage and agriculture pose enormous problems.

There is talk in Cairo now of an ambitious "Carter plan," rivaling the Marshall plan of post-war Europe.

Up to $15 billion in U.S. aid would be pumped into the Egyptian economy over five years.

The figure is astronomical, but Egypt now gets about $1 billion a year from this country and it could surely get more if it comes to terms with Israel.

But that's looking at the brighter side.

There are the facts, too, of deep disagreement, even distrust between Egypt and Israel, between Israel and the United States.

There is Carter's impatience with what he sees as hair-splitting.

There is his desire to move on to other international problems, which have been piling up at an accelerated rate over the last several months.

Carter has spent more of his personal time on the Arab-Israeli conflict than on any other foreign issue.

He feels he can't keep that up.

Nor is Cyrus Vance, his secretary of state, prepared to embark on open-ended shuttles to the Middle East, despite the precedent set by his predecessor, Henry Kissinger.

Should the talks with Begin fail, Carter might just wash his hands of the treaty and let Egypt and Israel try to work it out alone.

begin has resisted these Egyptian demands until now.

There seems little reason to believe he will give ground, especially on all of them, now.

Carter is not entirely defenseless, however, in trying to gain Israeli concessions to wrap up the treaty.

anyone's tapped the line," Fiddler explained. "Now let's go to the next office of the Wildcat Crude Oil and Gas Bros."

There was a fellow sitting on a sofa with a girl next to him and a gold phone cradled in his chin. He dialed a number. "Hubbard, you got any new crude to spare? I'll pay you $20 a barrel."

Fiddler said, "That's the Heggles' nephew. He's part of the daisy chain. In 12 minutes the Heggles have sold the oil three times and each has made a profit. The only thing about it is they're all the same company with different names. Now, the nephew will sell the oil to his brother for $22 a barrel, and that brother will sell it to his eight-year-old son for $24 a barrel. The umbrella company that owns all the oil companies is called All in the Family."

"So that's why they call it daisy chaining. Doesn't the government know what's going on?"

"Well, they have oil tasters who can tell the difference between old oil and new oil."

"Where do they find them?"

Fiddler smiled. "They're on loan from the major oil companies."

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Rep. Sam Bundy, D-Pitt, has a booming, stentorian voice, well-suited to making announcements or requests in the large state House chamber. It's a voice that commands attention no matter what he has to say.

Thursday afternoon, when Bundy entered the House chamber, he had no trouble getting everyone's attention as he delivered the news each member was waiting to hear. "Duke 25, Wake Forest 18," Bundy boomed to the House members who were taking their seats.

House Speaker Carl Stewart gavelled the chamber to order. In an apparent attempt to maintain decorum by delivering regular reports, Stewart interrupted the reading of bills to intone, "The score is Duke 31, Wake Forest 25."

As the reading of the long list of bills went on, a steady flow of House members slipped from their seats at regular intervals and glided out the doors, to where television sets in nearby offices and the hallways outside the chamber were turned to the opening game of the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament.

built into this budget to make this result likely. Revenue estimates are based on the assumption of improving business; expenditure estimates on the assumption that Congress will accept the few cuts that Mr. Carter has recommended.

And finally, both the expenditure figure and the deficit figure for 1980 simply leave out $13.9 billion of "off budget" expenditures. Hence, the officially planned expenditures for 1980 jump to $545.5 billion, and planned deficit to some $43 billion. Readers who are looking for a more realistic estimate of the 1980 deficit will find it in the official estimates of the federal debt. This is expected to increase $59.88 billion (to $898.96 billion) at the end of fiscal 1980. The interest charge on this alone will come to $57 billion. Mr. Carter's new budget must be listed under best-selling fiction. Meanwhile his earlier pledge to balance the budget in 1980 has been completely forgotten. Inflation will go marching on.

(Henry Hazlitt is an economist, author, lecturer and former columnist for Newsweek. His latest book is "The Inflation Crisis: and How to Resolve It", Arlington house.)

Periodically, they would re-enter to join in debate or cast their votes.

When the bills were finished and the House was preparing to get down to its daily job of enacting legislation, Rep. Foyle Hightower, D-Anson, rose to inquire whether the chair knew the latest score.

"The score is Duke 31, Wake Forest 24 at halftime," declared Stewart. The traffic to the doors slowed.

The Senate, which had gone into session at 1:15 p.m., adjourned in time for most of the second half of the Duke-Wake Forest matchup.

Angered Over Delayed News

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — About 75 day-care representatives who showed up for a hearing Thursday to protest regulations that licensed day-care centers must meet to receive federal funds were angry when they found out that the requirements they came to protest were no longer in effect.

Sarah T. Morrow, secretary of the state Department of Human Resources, announced just before the meeting that the standards were "unnecessarily complicated and required far too much documentation of cost by the operators (of the centers)."

Jack Nichols, staff attorney for Mrs. Morrow and a hearing officer, said statements made in the public hearing will be used to draw up new rules that will, in turn, be presented to the public for comment in a future hearing.

The old regulations required day-care centers to submit a detailed 10-page budget by March 1 in order to receive federal reimbursement for services to children in the state. The rules were intended to reduce the cost of day care, Mrs. Morrow said in a written statement.

Day-care representatives said they were angry that Mrs. Morrow waited until Thursday to drop the budget requirement. "Thousands of hours of time were spent in drawing up the budgets," said Dick Clifford of the Frank Porter Graham Child Development Center in Chapel Hill. "So they (day-care administrators) were dissatisfied the decision came so late, though they did like the decision."

All members of the Interdenominational Choir Union are asked to meet at the Morning Star Holiness Church, East Ave., Ayden, Sunday, March 4, 6 p.m., for a business meeting.

Presently a note was handed to Stewart, who said, "The score is Duke 50, Wake Forest 32 with nine minutes to play." Several representatives rose from their chairs and headed for the doors. Others cast anguished looks after them.

"The score is Duke 54, Wake Forest 48," Stewart said a few minutes later.

Debate in the North Carolina legislature droned on.

Angered Over Delayed News

The day-care representatives argued the budget requirement was unnecessary and said they should have more input in the drafting of regulations.

Nichols said opinions expressed at the hearing will be taken into account when new regulations are drafted.

"I assured them that once we draft the regulations, they will be mailed copies of them and there will be a second public hearing on changes in the regulations. I'm going to summarize the comments at today's hearing and present them to Dr. Morrow," Nichols said.

The pace in the House quickened noticeably. The bills which had been expected to draw debate were finished quickly. The members listened to brief explanations of bills and voted briskly. Several more headed for the door.

"The chair," Stewart said, "will observe we are beginning to run out of Baptists."

A series of screams came from outside the chamber in the vicinity of one television set. Several members turned in that direction and half-rose in their seats.

Bundy returned to the chamber. "Duke 56, Wake Forest 52," he said, his voice appropriately muted for the session.

Rep. Chris Barker, D-Craven, rose to explain a bill. "This won't take long, will it?" hissed Rep. Horton Rountree, D-Pitt, from his seat behind Barker. Barker shook his head. He rose. His microphone would not work. He crossed to Bundy's seat and zipped through an explanation of the bill. Barker rushed back to his seat to vote to mumble approval from his colleagues. He had 20 seconds, the usual time limit for a vote in the House.

A roar and the sound of clapping could be heard from outside.

"With 11 seconds to go, the game is tied," Stewart said.

Barker rose to explain the final bill of the day. He dashed through and whipped back to his place.

"The members have 10 seconds to vote," Stewart said, closing in on the clock.

Stewart galloped through the day's announcements. Rountree rose to announce an invitation from the Daughters of the Confederacy. The members tensed. The motion was made to adjourn.

"Aye," shouted North Carolina's representatives, charging for the doors.

A few rushed to the desk of Rep. Casper Holroyd, D-Wake, who whipped out the battery-operated television with a four-inch black and white tube he had secreted under his desk when the session began.

They were in time to see Jim Spanarkel win it for the Blue Devils, 58-56, in the final two seconds.

A Review
Recreated Orwell
Visions Of Society

The Ayden Theater Workshop, in its production of the stage adaptation of George Orwell's novel, "1984," again shows that amateur theatrical groups with enthusiastic local talent and a lot of determination can provide good entertainment.

The play, which opened last night at Ayden-Gritton High School, has one more performance scheduled — for 8 p.m. tonight. Tickets are $1, available at the door.

As the year 1984 draws nearer, the insidious implications of Orwell's 1949 prophetic visions of a monstrous homogenized society ruled by a nebulous "big brother" takes on more sinister applications. This is particularly true in light of today's constant flare-up of hostilities globally, a reality paralleling the plays references to African and Asian upheavals.

In this well-directed production, the old bugaboo of stilted delivery of dialogue, and sometimes the inability to hear what is being said, remains the company's chief drawback. This is compensated to a great degree by the superb use of special effects, which, considering an amateur's group limited funds, are really remarkable.

Of equal importance to the overall enjoyment of this "1984" are the fine performances turned in by actors in lead roles. Willis Manning is consistently convincing, and at times moves us, as he projects the subtly changing character of a comrade determined to hold steady to his growing belief that emotion, including love, is more powerful than base power.

Heidi Anderson Lane, in the role of Comrade Julia, Winston's love and fellow sufferer, successfully captures nuances of tenderness and strength in the constant shadow of fear.

As the ruthless, calculating inner circle official, O'Brien, Patrick Riggs brings an imposing physical and mental power to his role as manipulator and destroyer of lives. Anita Brehm once more contributes her zestful probing of the character she plays.

Kenneth Langston as Comrade Syme and Gloria Hooker as the Landlady would do well to raise the volume of their delivery several decibels so that lines important to the play are not missed.

Doug Mitchell's handling of the final scene is daring and caught the attentive audience by surprise — yet it proved to be an effective conclusion to the play.

For the modest $1 admission fee, "1984" is a top entertainment bargain — and it offers food for thought, with 1984 only five years away.

Jenkins Advocates
Relief For Athletes

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Leo Jenkins, retired chancellor of East Carolina University, says he believes if college athletes are expected to compete in the classroom, they should be allowed to take only one course or no courses at all during an athletic season.

"An athletic scholarship should pay for the summer-school terms," said Jenkins, who was chancellor of ECU for more than three decades before retiring last year. "Or we could let an especially bright boy, such as a Bill Bradley (a people in schools where they were not going to get a career but were going to be used as athletes," he said.

Jenkins said members of the National Collegiate Athletic Association need to study the issue. "They're only people, and I think they're going to sit down and think this thing through."

He said it is unfair to an athlete to get through college with the help of a professor or a tutor who does most of the work.

"The student will see through this when he gets out in life and starts looking for a job," Jenkins said. "You see so many of these boys often not getting their degrees. That isn't what education is all about."

promise

The Saxons had a word for Spring. It was Lencten, shortened, in time, to Lent.

So the name Lent was given to that springtime period of 40 fast days from Ash Wednesday until Easter.

Lent came to mean a time of penitence. And it is. But it is also a time of preparation, and of promise. For because Lent means Spring, it heralds good things to come. "It forecasts the glorious message of Easter. It is the dawn of the most beautiful season of the year."

The bare branches of these trees will burst into bud and leaf with the touch of Spring. Our thoughts during Lent, our personal preparations, also will reach fruition when the 40 days are through.

Lent is the time for prayer and self-examination. Make this Lenten season really mean something by seeking help and guidance at your church services.

The Day Of JUBILEE

Many shall come far and near to witness this great God sent Event.

The most recent achievements of Alfred Eisenstaedt, a living legend among photojournalists, place him once again in the photo spotlight.

Eisie, as he is affectionately known by his colleagues, was the focal point of four newsworthy events recently:

1. The publication of his eighth book, "Eisenstaedt's Guide to Photography," by Viking Press ($17.95), a helpful manual for amateurs based on a pro's half-century of experience.

2. The celebration of his 80th birthday, a party hosted by LIFE magazine, which brought top celebrities in photography and communications to cheer him on further.

3. His participation in the recent rebirth of LIFE, photojournalism's most potent popular publication. Eisie, one of LIFE's four original staff photographers, who remained throughout its 36 years of existence, was on hand again with an assignment for the opening issue of the new LIFE. And once again he will be an active contributor to today's pictorial history.

4. And the presentation by the American Society of Magazine Photographers of their ASMP Lifetime Achievement Award, a recognition by his peers of Eisie's dedication to photojournalism.

A PARIS STREET SCENE was deserted when first seen by Alfred Eisenstaedt, veteran LIFE photographer, now 80 years old. He waited an hour until two figures enhanced the composition with the right touch of human interest. It's from his new book, "Eisenstaedt's Guide to Photography."

While his colleagues know him by his remarkable record and as the recipient of the profession's highest awards, the public has a chance to know him by his books. His latest, "Eisenstaedt's Guide to Photography," can be a valuable teaching tool for anyone, from beginners to advanced photographers, if they absorb his thoughts and study his illustrations. He writes simply and clearly, stating his ideas on how to make better pictures. His topics include composition, lighting, portraits, children, travel and special effects, among others. He has made his share of mistakes and tells about them to avoid their being repeated. His ideas, technical guidance and pictorial illustrations provide a personal home study course which, if studied and applied, can improve anyone's photography. None of it is unusual, startling or out of reach but all of it is time-tested, professional and proven.

Acquiring skill in photography, just as in any art or craft, takes practice and learning from mistakes made. "Anything that makes you stop, look and ponder for a second is probably a good picture possibility," Eisie says. "But what doesn't particularly interest you may attract another photographer who has other ideas in mind. Everyone's point of view is a little different."

Always prepared for the unexpected, he carries a 35mm rangefinder camera with him almost everywhere he goes. He constantly checks the exposure situation for the film in the camera and sets the shutter speed and aperture for anything that might catch his eye. He suggests shooting anything of interest immediately, then, if there is time, improving the first quickie shot by shifting to a more suitable lens or a different angle.

For good composition, he believes nature does a beautiful job of arranging things and the photographer's job is to select the best view of natural arrangements. But patience is often required and one has to wait for better lighting perhaps, or more interesting shadows or the arrival of a missing element — human, animal or maybe an object such as a sailboat or vehicle — that can enhance the setting or provide a scale.

Good composition can be learned by studying the paintings of old masters, he suggests, and then it becomes a matter of good judgment and taste. In time, one becomes aware of balancing light areas with dark ones, large objects with small. It's also important to review one's work frequently, to analyze the shortcomings and see where improvement can be made.

The direction of light in relation to the camera makes an enormous difference in the mood of photographs and must be studied always, Eisie emphasizes. Strong side lighting brings out textures; back lighting can be dramatic and objects become silhouettes. Direct sunlight produces strong shadows which are too harsh and contrasty for photographing people. Eisie prefers sunlight diffused by overcast because it gives good modulation of tones and is a soft, pleasing light.

In shooting formal portraits, he usually has the camera on a tripod so that he can talk to the subject without continually raising the camera to his eye — an action likely to make a sitter nervous. For informal portraits, he doesn't bother with the tripod but tries to establish an atmosphere of ease for the sitter. People are apt to be tense and self-conscious at first but you should keep shooting — even wasting some film — until the initial inhibition passes away and the subject becomes used to the camera.

For vacation and travel pictures, Eisie advises traveling light and not taking all the equipment you possess. Your concern should be in making a good picture, not in choosing a piece of equipment. Three lenses are enough to cover nearly every situation: a normal lens for general coverage; a wide-angle lens for confined spaces; and a telephoto lens when it's not possible to get closer. A monopod or tripod is helpful for dimly-lit interiors and night photography. Eisenstaedt's advice is practical and serious, a reflection of his own personal nature.

Stamps In The News

By SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

Many countries have been accused of issuing too many stamps. But not Bhutan. The last time this small country in the Himalayas issued a stamp was two years ago. Now it has released a new set of seven to honor special events of the past two years.

The first stamp marks the 25th anniversary of Queen Elizabeth II and bears a smiling portrait of the monarch. The souvenir sheet features Westminster Abbey and the Silver Jubilee symbol.

The second stamp hails the American Bicentennial and shows the Liberty Bell. The souvenir sheet illustrates the American flag and the Bhutanese flag.

Another stamp celebrates the 100th anniversary of the telephone with a portrait of Alexander Graham Bell and his first phone. A fourth is a tribute to Lindbergh's flight across the Atlantic and shows the Spirit of St. Louis flying low over the waves. The souvenir sheet has the Lindbergh plane landing at Le Bourget Field.

A fifth stamp is dedicated to the Olympic Games and depicts an archer, the Olympic symbol and the Bhutanese Sports Seal. The souvenir sheet features a shot put with Olympic symbol and Olympic torch.

The sixth stamp is for the anniversary of the zeppelin with a design of a zeppelin docking. The last stamp in the set honors the Nobel Peace Prizes and bears a likeness of Alfred Nobel.

All the stamps in the set have the same value and can be purchased at your local stamp dealer.

Those who specialize in stamps of Great Britain will 1930 single-engine plane on Zanzibar Island. The third illustrates a British Airways Supersonic Concorde while the highest value bears a design of the Wright Brothers' 1903 first flight from Kitty Hawk, N.C.

Another commemoration of the Wright Brothers' anniversary is in the form of a special cover by the International Stamp Collectors Society. The cachet depicts the 6-cent airmail stamp of 1949 (which honored the Wrights). One cover bears the Kitty Hawk, N.C., handstamp cancellation dated Dec. 17, 1978, while the second cover, postmarked Devil Hills, N.C., reproduces the Wright Brothers monument there, located on the hill where the first powered flight occurred.

The set of two costs $3.95 and it can be purchased from the International Stamp Collectors Society, Equitable Bldg. Vine Street, Hollywood, Calif. 90028.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were little changed today, hesitating after Thursday's rally.

Gainers held a 3-2 edge on losers in the mid-day count of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

But the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, coming off a 7.02-point rally Thursday, pulled back .35 to 815.49 by noon.

Analysts said investors seemed to have mixed feelings about the government's report Thursday that the index of leading economic indicators fell 1.2 percent in January, for its biggest drop in four years.

While the decline raised the specter of a possible economic slowdown later in the year, analysts said investors seemed to conclude that it might also portend a moderation of inflationary pressures and interest rates.

Similar expectations also were prompted by the decline in the basic measure of the money supply reported by the Federal Reserve late Thursday.

Boeing rose 1/2 to 64 1/2 in active trading. British Airways agreed to buy 19 Boeing 757 medium-range jets.

Foster-Wheeler gained 1 1/4 to 41 1/4 on top of a 4 1/4-point jump Thursday, when McDonnell Douglas said it had acquired nearly 400,000 Foster-Wheeler shares.

The NYSE's composite index rose .03 to 54.33. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .51 at 162.78.

Volume on the Big Board came to 11.04 million shares at noon, up from 10.09 million at the same point Thursday.

Apparent Mutiny By Troops Of Idi Amin

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Fierce fighting with jet planes and tanks broke out today in barracks of the Tororo Battalion in eastern Uganda, in an apparent battle between forces loyal to President Idi Amin and others opposed to him.

Officials at Mbale Hospital, 25 miles to the north, said they had received an undetermined number of dead and wounded.

Residents said the fighting began about dawn and was continuing late this afternoon.

"It started about 6 a.m. So far, it has been confined to the barracks, about 1 1/2 miles from town," said a Tororo resident telephoned from Nairobi.

"There are jet fighters flying overhead and tanks and armored personnel carriers in the town. We don't know exactly what is going on but we can see the barracks burning."

Some informants said it was a mutiny within the 1,000 men of the air and waterborne battalion at Tororo, eight miles west of the Kenyan border. Others said a force fought their way to Tororo from the area of Lake Victoria a few miles to the south.

Either way, the fighting posed what could be the gravest threat so far to the eight-year rule of Amin, who in recent weeks of war against Tanzanian invaders has had reported mutinies in the Suicide and Lion Battalions in the key southern towns of Masaka and Mbarara.

Tororo controls the road and rail routes from Kenya, over which Uganda receives virtually all its civilian and military supplies.

Ugandan exiles in Nairobi described the Tororo fighting as a mutiny. They said anti-Amin soldiers removed weapons from the battalion armory and distributed them to civilians.

Military sources in Jinja, near Kampala, the Ugandan capital, said Amin ordered troops from the Khaddafy barracks at Jinja to go to Tororo, 75 miles to the east. But they said the Khaddafy units were blocked on the Jinja-Tororo road by anti-Amin forces.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers and rain are expected in the forecast period until Saturday morning from the eastern Gulf to the Midwest and Great Lakes. Showers are expected in the Pacific Northwest. Mild weather is due from the Southwest through the East Coast, but most of the country will be cold. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Clear skies and light winds allowed very dense fog to form over most sections of North Carolina this morning, reducing visibility to near zero for many areas of the state.

And the sunny skies that followed the foggy morning will be short lived. A frontal system moving out of the Rockies will be picking up Gulf moisture as it moves eastward today and by Saturday will affect North Carolina. Cloudiness will increase on Saturday and rain is likely to begin in the mountains and spread eastward during the day.

There are indications the front could stall and place the state in another rainy period.

Highs today should be mostly in the low and mid 60s with some mid to upper 50s in the mountains. Lows tonight will be mostly in the upper 30s and low 40s, but a bit warmer in the southeast and a bit cooler in the mountains.

Highs should be a little warmer Saturday thanks to more southerly winds, despite the cloudiness and rain.

Thursday a weak cold front kept cloudy skies over the state and helped produce some very light showers. Most rainfall amounts were less than a tenth of inch and high temperatures were in the 50s and 60s across the state. A 69 degree reading at Wilmington was the warmest temperature from the weather stations reporting.

Pirates Fourth After One Day

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. — East Carolina held down fourth place after the first day of competition yesterday in the Eastern Intercollegiate Swimming and Diving championships at Penn State.

The Pirates recorded three second-place and two third-place finishes and set two school records as they amassed 79 points. Pittsburgh holds down first place with 127, West Virginia is in second with 83, followed closely by Maryland with 82. Syracuse rounds out the top five with 61 points.

The Pirates had their best showing in the 200 interindividual medley, capturing three places. Jack Clower finished second in the event in 1:54.04, a new varsity record. John Tudor was third for the Pirates in 1:55.52, while Doug Nieman was 10th in 1:58.04. Ted Nieman took second place in the 500 freestyle in 4:32.83, Bill Fehling was second in the 50 freestyle in 21.27 and Tom Bell was 12th in one-meter diving with a total of 373.05.

The ECU 400 medley relay team set a varsity record in a third-place finish of 3:30.79. That team consists of Tudor, Dan Newhall, Clower and Ted Nieman.

The meet continues today and tomorrow.

Gymnasts In State Meet

East Carolina's women's gymnastics team will compete Saturday in the NCAAIAW championships at Duke University. Five teams are entered in the state competition, including Duke, North Carolina, Appalachian State and Western Carolina.

East Carolina has met only Duke and Western Carolina in regular season competition, losing to Duke and defeating WCU.

Coach Stevie Chepko sees some tough competition for her team in tomorrow's meet. "Carolina is the defending champion and Appalachian, who may be a contender for the regional crown, is very strong. We also hope to avenge our earlier loss to Duke."

Three ECU all-around gymnasts, Phyllis Nelson, Susan McKnight and Elizabeth Jackson, can qualify for the regionals if they score 28 or more points and several others have a chance to qualify in one event with a score of 8.0 or better.

The Lady Pirates, who finished 4-6 for the year, placed fourth in last year's state meet.

They got a sparkling 20-point performance from sophomore Albert King and led by as many as 15 points, the Tigers battled to within one point with 2:45 to go.

Then King took charge, however, with back-to-back inside baskets that took Clemson out of things for good.

"Albert took some bad shots in the beginning, but he came through for us at the end," Driesell said. "We like to go inside when the game gets tough."

Maryland also was paced by Ernest Graham's 18 points, Larry Gibson's 15 and Buck Williams' 14.

For Clemson, Billy Williams had 15, Derrick Johnson, 12 and Marvin Dickerson had 11.

Clemson was hurt by a dismal 39 percent average from the line.

"For us to play a team like Maryland and hope to win, we cannot afford to go 5 of 13 from the free-throw line," said Clemson Coach Bill Foster. "They shot the ball extremely well. We made some mistakes late when we got within one."

N.C. State's Charles "Hawkeye" Whitney suffered a sprained thumb in the closing minutes of the Wolfpack's win over Virginia and was taken to a local hospital for X-rays. "We will start Hawkeye and then take it from there as to how much he can play," said coach Norman Sloan.

Preparing to face Duke, Sloan said the Wolfpack planned to run with the Blue Devils, avoiding any fancy strategy or delaying tactics.

"I really haven't had time to think about it, but I know one thing. We're not going to come up with any gimmicks. You won't see any Wolf-pack of five-and-a-half corners," he said in sarcastic reference to stalls used against Duke by Clemson and North Carolina this season.

N.C. State won despite a frantic, foul-plagued finish that saw Virginia recover from 15-points down with 2:48 remaining to the final four-point spread. Five Virginia players fouled out as 62 fouls were called in the game.

"We didn't play well at all at the end," said Sloan. "It was a mistake to put ourselves in a position to commit fouls. We just didn't have as much of a lead as our players thought we had."

N.C. State's Kendal "Tiny" Pinder had 20 points, while

Arnie Angry Over Scores

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Andy Bean shot a 64 — then apologized for it.

Arnold Palmer shot a 70 — his best round of the year — and was fuming.

"They used all the soft pin placements," said Arnold, his discomfort growing as more and more subpar numbers were splashed across the scoreboard. "And they used two members' tees. I can fix that. I'll plow 'em up. That's what I'll do. I'll get a tractor and plow 'em up."

Absolutely ideal playing conditions — mild to warm temperatures and no wind — and the perfect condition of the golf course combined for some extremely low scores Thursday in the first round of the $250,000 Bay Hill Citrus Golf Classic. In all, 53 players — more than one-third of the field — was at par or better on the Bay Hill course, owned by Palmer and being used as the site of a PGA tour event for the first time.

Bean's superb, 7-under-par effort was the best. "Arnold's not gonna like you shooting that kind of number on his golf course," chided Jack Nicklaus, who had a 68 that left him in solid contention.

"I know," said Bean. "I apologized to him, but I told him I'd like to have three more just like it."

Beddingfield landed Ed Farmer, a sophomore, and Harold Tillery, a senior, while Northeastern listed Mike Nixon, and Dudley White, both seniors.

Others selected included Ben Howell, a Fike junior; Mitch Braswell, a Rocky Mount junior; Anthony Robbins, a Bertie senior, and Dwight Taylor, a Hunt senior.

East Carolina University's young golf team will open the 1979 season on Sunday, as it participates in the Coastal Carolina Golf Classic at the Bay Tree Country Club in Myrtle Beach, S.C.

Seven members of the team from last year return, but new coach Bob Helmick feels that overall, inexperience will be the keynote of the team.

"It is especially true when you see the caliber of competition we've got to face," Helmick said. "We'll be going up against some of the toughest competition in the country."

Among foes on the schedule are teams like Duke, East Tennessee, Florida State, Georgia Southern, Marshall, N.C. State, Ohio State, Oklahoma State, Oral Roberts, Texas A & M, Alabama, Georgia, Houston, North Carolina, South Florida, Florida, Texas, Wake Forest and Louisiana State.

These seven players, Helmick said, will see most of the action.

"We've got a long road trip when we leave here Saturday. We won't be back until March 25, so we'll be on the road three weeks. I hope that Saleeby will be well by the time we go into Pinehurst (for the Intercollegiate Invitational, March 13-15)."

No one on the team is a senior, and Helmick feels this is definitely a transition year. "We didn't get to do any recruiting last year, so we're rebuilding for sure. We have several players with a lot of promise, but the lack of experience, plus the weather conditions keeping us off the course have hurt. We're untested right now."

Also on the team are Mark Smith, Tom Pupa, Mark Watts, Sidney Davis and Bob Jones, both are not counted on this year, due to inexperience.

"We have the ability to play well, to play good competitive golf if we can stay healthy and hit some good weather."

Others expected to play a lot include Carl Beaman, Stan Stewart, Joey Hines, and a freshman, Jerry Lee.

These seven players, Helmick said, will see most of the action.

We have several players with a lot of promise, but the lack of experience, plus the weather conditions keeping us off the course have hurt. We're untested right now."

Also on the team are Mark Smith, Tom Pupa, Mark Watts, Sidney Davis and Bob Jones, both are not counted on this year, due to inexperience.

"We have the ability to play well, to play good competitive golf if we can stay healthy and hit some good weather."

Others expected to play a lot include Carl Beaman, Stan Stewart, Joey Hines, and a freshman, Jerry Lee.

These seven players, Helmick said, will see most of the action.

"We've got a long road trip when we leave here Saturday. We won't be back until March 25, so we'll be on the road three weeks. I hope that Saleeby will be well by the time we go into Pinehurst (for the Intercollegiate Invitational, March 13-15)."

No one on the team is a senior, and Helmick feels this is definitely a transition year. "We didn't get to do any recruiting last year, so we're rebuilding for sure. We have several players with a lot of promise, but the lack of experience, plus the weather conditions keeping us off the course have hurt. We're untested right now."

"It was pretty much on line but maybe a step or two too long. But with no time outs, that's all we had time for," said a disappointed Wake coach Carl Tacy, whose Deacons finished with a 12-15 mark.

Tacy marked it up for experience, however, since he started four freshmen. "There are better coaches in the league than I, but none more brave," he quipped.

points mid-way through the second half.

Duke was paced by Spanarkel's 20 points, along with Mike Gminski's 17 and Gene Banks' 15. For Wake Forest, Mike Helms and Jim Johnstone had 16, and Gay Morgan scored 12.

Pirate Golfers Set To Open 1979 Season

East Carolina University's young golf team will open the 1979 season on Sunday, as it participates in the Coastal Carolina Golf Classic at the Bay Tree Country Club in Myrtle Beach, S.C.

Seven members of the team from last year return, but new coach Bob Helmick feels that overall, inexperience will be the keynote of the team.

"It is especially true when you see the caliber of competition we've got to face," Helmick said. "We'll be going up against some of the toughest competition in the country."

Among foes on the schedule are teams like Duke, East Tennessee, Florida State, Georgia Southern, Marshall, N.C. State, Ohio State, Oklahoma State, Oral Roberts, Texas A & M, Alabama, Georgia, Houston, North Carolina, South Florida, Florida, Texas, Wake Forest and Louisiana State.

These seven players, Helmick said, will see most of the action.

Sometime in the next few days or weeks, East Carolina University will pick its new basketball coach.

Terry Kunze, currently the lone member of the staff, is the leading candidate for the job. He is our personal choice.

During the past two days, we have given Kunze's background an extensive looking-into, and we find nothing that would cause us to change our mind.

We received a phone call from someone who made accusations against him, from claiming that he has been fired from every job he's had, to having him up before the NCAA for recruiting violations.

None of them are true, so far as we can learn.

Kunze started his professional coaching career at Mora (Minn.) High School, where he coached for one season. Dr. Pius Locher, superintendent of Mora City Schools, told us yesterday that Kunze was a fine coach and a fine man, but was handicapped that year by the fact that it was his first year in coaching.

"I have nothing but compliments for him, however," Dr. Locher told us. "Everything I have heard about him since he went to Minnesota has been favorable. I have talked with players from here who have been to basketball camps at Minnesota, and they were highly impressed with Kunze. And a couple of players I've talked with on the Minnesota team now have expressed disappointment that he is no longer on the staff."

Dr. Locher said Kunze left Mora on his own and was not fired or threatened with firing. He left to move into the college ranks.

Jim Dutcher, currently the coach at Minnesota, and the school's athletic director, Paul Giel, both give Kunze outstanding recommendations. Both insisted that Kunze never was involved in any basketball recruiting violations against the school.

We called Jud Heathcoat, the head coach at Michigan State, to get another view of Kunze, and again came away with a glowing recommendation.

"He did an outstanding job of recruiting for Minnesota," Heathcoat told us. "From the dealings I've had with him, I'd recommend him highly. In every instance, I've found him to be first class, first rate." Heathcoat said he had never heard anyone accuse Kunze of any dishonesty, either in his personal life or in recruiting.

One charge made was that Kunze was kicked out of the university, and never graduated from Minnesota. His resume at East Carolina never said he graduated from Minnesota, but gives his bachelor's degree from the University of Wisconsin-Falls River. The current ECU brochures list him as a graduate from Minnesota, but Sports Information Director Walt Atkins said that he could have just assumed that Kunze graduated from there, since his college was played at Minnesota.

According to official college records, there is no reason given for Kunze's leaving the school, and he was eligible to return there.

However, he admits that he was suspended for one quarter when he and two football players (also suspended) came into possession of a routine quiz. Kunze turned himself in to a dorm counselor before the test, and according to John Kundla, who was head coach at Minnesota at the time, was "railroaded."

"It was only a ten-point test, and the whole thing would have been dropped but for one guy who pushed it."

This is the only spot we can find on Kunze's record, and since even Minnesota considers it trivial, we cannot find any basis for anyone else attaching significance to it, especially since it occurred nearly 15 years ago. If one mistake as a youth condemns a man, no one would be working.

Kunze's background in his profession, both as a player and coach, is excellent. He comes with great recommendations from all his former employers.

He has the backing of the returning players at East Carolina, and of many of those people who are close to the basketball program.

If there is anything that might stand in his way, it is the fact that he is at East Carolina now. But he is not, as some have charged, "Gillman's boy."

Kunze came here uncertain of the situation. He had known Gillman slightly when Gillman was an assistant involved mainly in recruiting on the road when Kunze was a graduate assistant his first year at Minnesota. But there was little contact between the two due to the nature of their jobs.

He came here to move up from a "number two" to a "number one" assistant's role. And if the program were successful, he expected Gillman to move on, giving him a good shot at a head job.

Gillman has moved on, now, but not quite in the way either expected.

We would also say this. Gillman is to be com-

Allisons, Cale Up Front For Carolina

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — "This oughta sell some tickets," commented Bobby Allison after he and his brother Donnie beat out Cale Yarborough for the front row starting positions for Sunday's $155,000 Carolina 500 Grand National stock car race.

"Well, it is kinda interesting, ironic anyway," Allison said, referring to the much-publicized battle the trio had two weeks ago in the Daytona 500, which netted them all disciplinary action.

But the 41-year-old Allison dismissed the possibility of renewed warfare.

"It should be forgotten," he said of the post-race fight at Daytona between himself and Yarborough, and the last lap crash of his brother and Yarborough while dueling for the lead. "It is as far as I'm concerned. It should be for all of us. We need to leave Daytona at Daytona.

"If we didn't it would be a sorry state of affairs. Eventually that kind of happening would have a very deadening effect on the enthusiasm and excitement in the sport."

All three were fined $6,000 for fighting — $5,000 of which will be returned over the next five races, assuming there is no more trouble. Donnie Allison was placed on six month's probation for allegedly running Yarborough off the track. The Allison has appealed.

Bobby Allison, who noted his fine was deducted from his Daytona winnings, said, "I've run side by side with another car for a full lap at Darlington and never had a problem. When you can ride side by side and make it there, you oughta be able to run side by side and stay out of trouble any place on the circuit."

Based on the closeness of Thursday's qualifying at North Carolina Motor Speedway — the day's 15 qualifiers were separated by less than half a second — Allison predicted plenty of close competition Sunday.

"Cale ran away from everybody in this race last fall, but we feel we've caught up with him a little. And the rest of competition is much tougher too — much tougher," Allison said, shaking his head.

"It should be a close race." Allison commented that, to his best recollection, this is the first time since 1971 that he and his brother have qualified 1-2 in a Grand National stock car race.

Their speeds were only .033 of a second apart; Bobby at 136.780 mph and Donnie at 136.612 mph. Yarborough was another .038 of a second slower at 136.418 mph.

Kentucky Wins First Game In SEC Tourney

By ALEX SACHARE

Kentucky and Duke, who fought it out for college basketball's national championship a year ago, had their hands full turning back challengers in their own conference tournaments.

Kentucky, which beat Duke 94-88 for the NCAA title a year ago, hit 68.3 percent of its shots from the field but needed a free throw by freshman Dwight Anderson with eight seconds remaining to edge Alabama 101-100 Thursday night in the second round of the Southeastern Conference tourney.

Duke, the preseason favorite and currently ranked fifth, got two free throws from Jim Sparnkel with two seconds left to nip Wake Forest 58-56 in the first round of the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament.

Meanwhile, top-ranked Indiana State raised its record to 28-0 by beating Southern Illinois 79-72 in the semifinals of the Missouri Valley Conference tourney. All-American Larry Bird led the Sycamores with 25 points.

In non-tournament games involving ranked teams, No. 3 UCLA defeated California 77-68, No. 4 Michigan State whipped Minnesota 76-63, No. 10 Marquette overpowered Air Force 61-43, No. 11 Iowa was upset by Michigan 61-53, No. 17 Ohio State bowed to Wisconsin 76-73 and No. 19 Purdue beat Indiana 55-48.

Truman Clytor, making his first start in seven games, hit nine shots in a row in the second half to help Kentucky beat Alabama and move into a semifinal matchup against eighth-ranked Louisiana State, the Southeastern Conference's regular season champion.

"I just had the feeling he was going to have a good game," said Kentucky Coach Joe B. Hall. "I needed to give him a shot of adrenalin so I gave him the start. He didn't know until about three minutes before the game."

In another second-round Southeastern Conference game,

Auburn got last-minute layups from Bobby Cattage and Eric Stringer to outlast Georgia 95-91 in four overtimes.

Duke blew a 14-point halftime lead but recovered to win on the foul shots by Spanarkel, who led all scorers with 20 points.

"We didn't show much at the end," said Duke Coach Bill Foster. "We didn't show the poise we have. Thank goodness for Jimmy Spanarkel at the end."

In other ACC first-round action, Kendal Pinder's 20 points helped North Carolina State hold off Virginia 82-78 and Albert King's 20 points led Maryland past Clemson, 75-67.

Indiana State trailed 32-23 in the first half but closed the gap to two by halftime, then took control in the final 20 minutes.

"They just took us out of our offense in the second half," said Illinois State Joe Gottfried. "And everything has got to be perfect to beat Indiana State."

Next in line for the unbeaten Sycamores is New Mexico State, which beat Wichita State 85-81 in the other Missouri Valley Conference semifinal behind 26 points and 19 rebounds by Robert Gunn.

New Bern Woman, Children, Escaped Iran

By MEG GUNKLE
The Sun-Journal
NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — A New Bern woman living in Iran for the past 11 months had less than 24 hours' notice of evacuation before she left with her two children last week.
Her husband, a native of Iran, was not allowed to leave the country.
Jessie Dixon Tehrani moved to a suburb of Tehran last year with her husband, Jamshid, and two children, David, 5, and Michael, 3.
Tehrani had a job as a structural engineer and since he was a citizen of Iran, Mrs. Tehrani was also given an Iranian passport.
She was not allowed out of the country when the first evacuation of Americans began.
"One day I didn't think I could go and the next I was on a plane," she said. "Things change very quickly there."

Mrs. Tehrani left Iran on the fifth "Freedom Flight" evacuation plane on Feb. 18 and reached New Bern two days later.
When interviewed, she said she had just returned from "treating" herself and the children to MacDonald's hamburgers.
She said the family had been housebound since the revolution against Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi drove him into exile.
"It was sort of like being under house arrest," she said about her last months in the war-torn country. "It's never been very safe since September for me to go out alone very far, and since December I wouldn't have thought of it." After the revolution, when Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime took over, life became scarier, she said. "Absolutely. Very much scarier," she said. "Before the revolution, arms were only in the hands of the Army, but after, everyone had them," Mrs. Tehrani said. "After dark it is not safe to go into the streets. There are no uniforms so you don't really know who it is. That's what makes it dangerous. They can stop a car and drag you out. As long as I was in the house, I felt safe."

Mrs. Tehrani said she was afraid for her children "because if something happened and they would need to go to the hospital, it might be possible."
She also said that gunfire could be heard every night. She said she was used to gunshots during hunting season, "but it's different in the city."
"I heard guns at night," said her son, David. Asked if it scared him, he said, "Yes."
"There was lots of shooting going on every night, and some of it was going on not too far away," Mrs. Tehrani added.

The Tehranis lived in Shemiran, a northern suburb of Tehran, and most of the demonstrations and fighting took place in the center of town, about a 15-minute drive from Shemiran.
One demonstration was about a half a mile from her home, she said. "There was a demonstration in Pateromi Street, but there was no shooting, just shouting."
Mrs. Tehrani said the family could have left the country while Shahpour Bakhtiar was in power, and she said she and her husband had decided to leave in January because the economy was at a standstill. There was no work for her husband, although he was still being paid.
"When we got there, immense high-rise apartments were under construction, very modern apartments, very luxurious, with swimming pools," she said. "By December, everything had stopped and it looked like a ghost town."
Mrs. Tehrani said the family was "in the process of selling out" for the move back to the United States when the new regime came into power and closed the airport.
"Everyone kept thinking the war was going to be over," she said, "first when the shah left and Bakhtiar came into power and then when Khomeini took over." She said many people in Tehran looked on Khomeini, a 78-year-old Moslem leader, as a "messiah."

She said that when the American evacuation began, they were told that it was not an order to leave the country "but if we didn't leave with the Americans, there would be no protection or guarantee we could get out later because the airport was closed."
'Ice Bank' Used To Supply Heat
HAMBURG, Pa. (UPI) — An experimental ice machine which was used to cool an office building here in summer is warming the same office this winter.
The original equipment, known as an "ice bank," made ice at night, when electricity is cheaper, to cool the offices in daytime, explains Robert W. Smith, consumer affairs manager for General Public Utilities Corporation.
Now the system has been adapted also to heat water in winter to take advantage of the lower night rates.

Because she had an Iranian passport, Mrs. Tehrani was a citizen of Iran and was not allowed to leave at first.
"They were letting Iranian wives of Americans leave, but not American wives of Iranians," she said. She said she needed approval from the new government to leave.
On Feb. 17, she said, the American Embassy told her they had received permission to allow American wives of Iranians on evacuation flights.
Mrs. Tehrani said she was required to pay a $300 exit fee to Iran in order to leave the country.
Safe and back with her family in New Bern, she said she was not sure of the future. "We don't know what's going to happen," adding that "it could be years" before her husband is allowed to leave Iran.
"I'm going to assume I'm going to be living in New Bern for a while," Mrs. Tehrani said.

"I can't act like he's going to be coming tomorrow. I'm going to just act like this is home."
Advises Turn To 9-Day Week
NEW YORK (UPI) — Economist Carlos Varsavsky thinks America needs a nine-day week. The New York University economist, astrophysicist and industrialist has received a Ford Foundation grant to work out details of his proposed triad system that would have staggered shifts of employees working two triads (three days each) and taking one off. Varsavsky claims the system would make business more efficient by keeping offices, institutions and schools open continuously with full staffs and making weekends less congested.

Bidding a reasonable contract is only half the battle. You also need the skill to reel in the necessary tricks. South's technique on this hand merits study.

When North bid two suits and then jumped in support of South's suit, he was marked with no more than a singleton in the unbid suit. Therefore, South decided that his good trump intermediates, in conjunction with the ace-queen of diamonds, merited pushing on to slam.

West led the king of hearts, ruffed in dummy. As the cards lie, it is very easy to go down in six clubs. Assume declarer cashes the king of clubs and continues with the jack. When East shows out, declarer must win the ace and try for discards.

Film Exec Claims Eliminating 'Blind Bidding' Will Hike Prices

By SHARON BOND
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Hollywood movie executive Thursday told members of the General Assembly they will be responsible for driving the price of movie tickets up if they enact proposed legislation prohibiting blind bidding on movies.

Jack Valenti, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, spoke to a standing-room-only crowd in the House Judiciary I Committee meeting. But most of the people there, including the cluster outside the committee room, were not there because they liked what the movie executive had to say.

Most were exhibitors and theater owners who now are forced by movie-makers and distributors to bid to get a movie before they see it. They support the legislation, which was introduced by Rep. Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg, because they say it will keep them from buying a "pig in a poke."

But Valenti said the bill would hurt the consumer because it will drive the cost of making movies up and eventually do the same thing to the price of movie tickets.

"This is special interest legislation designed to benefit the large theater chains in the country," Valenti said. "The negative impact of it will be enormous. It will raise the cost of movie making and eventually the cost of movie tickets. It will violate the Constitution because it will rupture the rights of free businessmen."

Exhibitors and theater owners should take their complaints about the blind-bidding system to the courts instead of seeking recourse through the legislature, Valenti said.

Legislators were warned not to tell the manufacturer how to market his product.

"If you do this it will soon spread to other areas," Valenti said. Builders of shopping centers would soon be required to guarantee a certain number of customers before the shopping center can be built, he warned.

Those in favor of the bill were represented by attorney Chris Meacham who begged the legislators to do away with the blind-bidding practice. Meacham represents Martin Theater, one of the larger theater chains in North Carolina.

"All we're asking for is an opportunity to see the product before we have to submit to contractual obligations," Meacham said. "Let us see what we're buying before we buy it."

"Your concern is public interest," he said. "The exhibitors are people in North Carolina and they need this legislation."

A motion was made to approve the bill and send it to the full House, but the committee meeting was adjourned before any action was taken on it.

WITH OPRY — Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd will play his fiddle Saturday night on a nationally televised edition of the Grand Ole Opry. "I haven't decided what to play," he said in a telephone interview, but said it's likely that "Turkey in the Straw," "Red Bird," or "Will the Circle Be Unbroken?" will be among the choices. Flat Tire Put Driver In Court KENTWOOD, Mich. (AP) — A flat tire apparently proved to be too much for Michael Shemonski. It has put him in court.

Police in this Grand Rapids suburb said Shemonski, 33, was arrested after he allegedly beat the windshield, rear window, lights, hood and trunk of a rented car early Thursday, causing about $1,000 damage.

Police Sgt. Hiram Collins said: "He couldn't change the tire, so he beat the car." Shemonski was freed on his own recognizance until a March 22 hearing.

Rentals By Bonnie Are 'Events'

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
NEW YORK (AP) — Bonnie Schachter is five-three, black eyes, a face as bubbly as the Dom Perignon champagne she pours for breakfast. Not her breakfast. Yours — if you're willing to fork over, say, $1,000. The fee also covers the caviar, strawberries Parisienne, fresh roses and whatever else you might fancy with your cafe au lait not excluding belly dancers.

Today's LAW: CASH FLOW ALWAYS IS A DOWNSTREAM DIRECTION.

Ms. Schachter, who is 26, got into the events business last August by way of the tour-guide business. Oddly, her calling after college was not to indulge the privileged but to help the handicapped. She organized tours for blind tourists — "tactile tours" — and for the deaf. "I relied on exciting the senses of taste and touch and smell. That's what I do with Rent-An-Event, excite the senses."

She operates a theatrical talent agency for physically disabled artists and actors, Momentum Talent Management, but, at least at this stage, Rent-An-Event is what subsidizes the talent agency.

Has any Rent-An-Event request stumped her? "Yes, one. A big Texan wanted to wrestle a woman wrestler in the mud. I couldn't put it together. No, I didn't ask why he wanted to do that. What can I tell you? He was a Texan."

One needed cheering up. She rented — what else? — a cheerleader. One felt out of touch. She rented a newscaster.

A group in Queens, angry with a neighbor who wouldn't tidy up his property, summoned Bonnie Schachter. She rented Lady Godiva, in a body stocking, galloping a white horse through the neighborhood shouting, "Mr. Jones is a litter-bug."

A Manhattan dame wanted a birthday surprise for her husband, a man who, of course, had everything. She buzzed Ms. Schachter.

When the big day arrived the indulgent wife shook her spouse awake and led him to the window. Across the street, on the broad steps of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, in the first rays of morning, 10 ballerinas danced. "Just for you, dear."

"What I do," Bonnie Schachter said, "is put emotions in motion for people for whom money is no object. There are

'Hard Look' At Monitor

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The U.S.S. Monitor will get a hard look this summer in the most extensive research operation to date on the Civil War iron clad.

The diving and testing, to be done in August, is not expected to give a definite answer on whether the ship can be brought to the surface, according to Gordon Watts, head of the underwater archeology branch. With enough money, he said, an answer might be available in three years.

From an archaeologist's standpoint, the ship is in good condition, Watts said. "It all depends on your definition of ships and junk."

"To the untrained eye at the moment, the Monitor would appear to be a pile of junk," said Dr. Larry Tise, who announced the 28-day exploration recently. Tise is director of the state Division of Archives and History.

"It's going to look like any other object that has been subject to 100 years of weather. It will look like a lot of junk," Tise said.

The research will be the first archaeological testing of the ship. It is a project of state agencies, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and the Florida-based Harbor Branch foundation. Some artifacts will be brought up, Tise said.

A committee of the Monitor Research Council has recommended that a full-size reproduction of the ship be built at the same place a laboratory to handle artifacts is planned. No site has been selected.

Tise said the copy will be built, but two council members say it is still under study.

Tise said he has heard that the copy would cost $250,000 to $500,000.

Shanghai Was Haven To Jews Fleeing Holocaust

BY NADINE JOSEPH
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Treasury secretary Michael Blumenthal's trip to China highlights an intriguing footnote to the Holocaust — the survival of almost 20,000 Jewish refugees from Adolf Hitler in a crowded ghetto in Shanghai during World War II.

About 18,000 German, Austrian and Polish Jews arrived in Shanghai, then an international settlement already including many Jewish refugees, between 1933 and 1941. Blumenthal was one of them.

"Shanghai was a real haven for Jews fleeing Nazi Germany, it was the only place you could get to without a visa," said David Kranzler, author of "Japanese, Nazis and Jews."

Many were penniless. Some found it hard to adjust to the semitropical climate and contracted typhus, dysentery, beriberi, cholera and other diseases.

After the war, virtually all the Jews left China. Half of them moved to Israel. Others landed in San Francisco, where they remain a close-knit community.

"In this ghetto, we developed deep roots," said Hans Cohn, a 52-year-old cantor of a Redwood City, Calif., synagogue that recently was gutted by fire. "There was a lot of hardship and suffering, disease and poverty, but people discovered their internal strength."

Cohn left Berlin at age 13 after seeing the Nazis burn his synagogue to the ground. He and his parents escaped through Italy and took a boat to Shanghai.

He quit school to support his family as a restaurant cook, learned Chinese and sang at religious services. After the war, he stowed away to Australia and made his way to the United States.

"I came here with $80 in my pocket, but I had a tremendous sense of commitment and a willingness to work and get ahead," says Cohn.

"This is something I share with all the Shanghai refugees," he added. "All of them had enormous energies and a desire to rebuild their lives."

Kranzler describes the Shanghai community as "disparate groups that worked together" in a teeming city of four million Chinese and 100,000 foreigners.

About 2,000 Jews had come to Shanghai before those who fled Hitler after 1938. There were also two groups of Jews long established in the city — the Sephardim, who came from Baghdad via India in the 19th century, and Russian Jews who fled the revolution.

About half the newer refugees were totally or partially dependent on relief committees for their room and board and medical expenses. Most of them lived in the dark, rubble-strewn ghetto known as Hongkew.

Refugees opened restaurants, dry-cleaning shops, bookstores and other businesses.

"One man had a fine pastry shop, but couldn't afford to eat any of the pastries himself," said Kranzler, an assistant professor at Queensborough Community College in New York.

Despite the poverty, the ghetto produced three daily newspapers, a first-rate symphony and 60 plays, as well as original scripts, Kranzler said.

"To support ourselves, we sold everything, even our wedding rings," said Hede Heyman, 81, interviewed at her home here. "It was terribly dirty in Shanghai. Dead bodies lay on the streets, surrounded by hungry rats. The bodies were picked up in bundles, like garbage."

During an American bombing of Japanese-occupied Shanghai on July 17, 1945, the compound she lived in took a direct hit which killed 12 and wounded 40.

"It was so terrifying, fragile houses collapsed, we were black from dirt and smoke," she said. "I wore a kitchen pot on my head for days. But throughout my experiences in Shanghai, I felt lucky to be alive."

The Japanese restricted the Jews — giving passes outside the ghetto only to those with jobs — because they believed much of the anti-Semitic propaganda that Jews were wealthy and powerful, according to Kranzler's research.

But, unlike the Nazis, they made no attempt at genocide. Instead, trying to harness the Jews' alleged power, the Japanese used them in China to send peace-keepers to the United States.

"There were atrocities, but they weren't daily occurrences," said Trixie Wachsner of Los Angeles, who met her husband in Shanghai and was married there. "We had our trials and tribulations. As a result, we are very clannish and tight-knit. We stay in touch."

Mrs. Wachsner and her husband Frank were visiting China when the United States announced plans to recognize China. "We were excited," said Mrs. Wachsner. "All in all, China was good to us."

But not everyone has fond memories of Shanghai.

Blumenthal, who fled Germany at 13 and is in Shanghai today, once described the wartime city as a "cesspool" and a "den of iniquity."

His family lived in a ghetto and Blumenthal took odd jobs to help support them. Blumenthal's mother sold the family's possessions to buy her husband's freedom from Buchenwald and to book passage out of Germany. They went in 1939 to Shanghai, where no visa was required.

The treasury secretary attended a British private school where he learned English, until the Japanese closed it. The Blumenthal family was sent by the Japanese to an internment camp for two years.

Other Shanghai refugees point to Blumenthal and others as examples of the drive and success war-time Shanghai produced.

"There are a lot of American success stories," said one refugee. "Many of them are Shanghaianders" — Shanghai Jews.
