Cautious Over Peace Gamble By Carter

By FRANK CORMIER Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) - U.S. officials are being consistently cautious about President Carter's peace gamble in the Middle East despite more optimistic assessments in Israel and Egypt.

American sources, even when talking privately, emphasize the pitfalls that could again derail the signing of an Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty - Carter's unspoken goal as he sets out tonight for Cairo on the first leg of a journey that will last at least a week.

A White House official who asked not to be identified cautioned late Tuesday that at best it will be impossible to conclude all formal action on a treaty during Carter's trip.

The closest thing to public optimism from a U.S. leader came Tuesday when House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said, "I truly believe that he (Carter) not only hopes for success but he feels success is there."

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, who was leaving New York today to prepare for Carter's Saturday night arrival in Jerusalem, told reporters:

"There is euphoria, not only in this country, but in Jerusalem and Cairo and throughout the world. Now we must be very careful. I am hopeful."

Egyptian officials, led by Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil, were equally positive about the treaty outlook.

In Cairo, President Anwar Sadat met Tuesday with U.S. National Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski to hear the outline of Carter's proposals. Sadat's reaction was not immediately known, but Egyptian officials said Carter's trip may mean "the final sprint" to a peace treaty.

Because of Carter's absence from Washington, Vice President Walter F. Mondale is canceling a six-day Latin American trip next week. He was to have attended presidential inaugurations in Brazil and Venezuela.

Carter will devote most of his time to business during the trip, but does plan to see Egypt's pyramids.

And a White House official said Carter is seriously considering a train trip Friday from Cairo to Alexandria in anticipation of drawing a large crowd to demonstrate Egyptian support for a peace treaty.

There were also reports in Cairo that Carter might address a special session of the Egyptian Parliament Saturday before leaving for Israel.

Plans have already been announced for him to address the Israeli parliament.

U.S. officials maintained a tight secrecy lid on the treaty suggestions broached by Carter to Begin last Sunday - proposals that broke a stalemate threatening collapse of peace efforts. However, a White House official who asked not to be identified confirmed Tuesday that Carter discussed "in passing" the possibility of a U.S.-Israeli mutual defense treaty with Begin.

Pitt School Bd. Adopts Snow Make-Up Schedule

By REBECCA BUFFALO

Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Education voted Tuesday for county children to go to school a half day March 9 and April 27, with a full day April 13, Good Friday.

Superintendent Ott Alford noted that children will be released from school after lunch on the half days, with the other half of the days to be used as teacher workdays. Children will have April 16, Easter Monday, as a holiday, with teachers utilizing the day for work. June 15, formerly noted as a vacation day, will be used by teachers for a teacher workday. Children will not attend school June 15.

The change in the school calendar was made to make up for the three school days lost to the snow conditions.

After hearing a report made by board members Dr. J. O. Carson, Jim Black and Beverly Congleton, the board voted to uphold its decision that all racial balances be erased as to academic honors, such as marshals and graduation speakers.

Superintendent Alford explained that as of now, the board will expect principals to do away with racial quotas in other areas, such as selection of cheerleaders, club officers and homecoming queens.

The board, in its decision, has entrusted the principals to work out their own timetables in erasing such balances, with all uses of quotas to be extinct by 1983. The board also added that as of now, no racial balances will be noted in the middle schools.

The committee had studied the racial balance question after a request was made by a group of Pitt County principals to reinstate some form of quota in county schools.

Bill Wiggins, principal at Ayden-Grifton High School, told board members that he personally felt that Ayden-Grifton could work with the phasing of quotas, rather than abolishment. He added that he didn't want any race to feel "ostracized" from school activities.

Energy Control Officer George Laws reported to the board concerning efforts toward better energy conservation in the school. After discussion, the board voted to abolish all interior night lighting at all county schools, with exterior lights to be extinguished at night at 12 schools.

It was noted that lights would not be cut off when activities were held at school at night.

The board voted approval of a 25-year lease for school property incorporated in the county Community Schools Program. Alice Keene, program coordinator, explained to the board that federal monies could not be obtained until approval of the lease was made. She also noted that schools utilizing Community Schools monies would be able to use new facilities when community-related activities were not scheduled.

Assistant Superintendent Leck Keeter reported on the Wednesday, March 7, county-wide vaccination for red measles in county schools. He told board members that state officials had found a few more cases in schools where children needed to have red measles vaccinations.

Board member Carson stated that those students who had just found out this week that they needed vaccinations may need an extension on getting the needed treatment.

The board had voted Feb. 27 to deny school entrance to those had not received the vaccination as of Thursday, March 8.

The board, however, voted Tuesday to give an extension until Thursday, March 15, for students to either get vaccinations from the county health department or private NATO's Secrets Go East?

BERLIN (AP) - East Germany claims a defector from the NATO secretariat staff in Brussels brought the Communists war plans of the North Atlantic Alliance.

A NATO spokesman at the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's headquarters in the Belgian capital confirmed that Ursel Lorenzen, a West German employed by NATO for 11 years, defected on Monday. He refused to say how much access she had to the alliance's secrets but reported that she worked in the Office of Council Operations and Communication, which he said helps prepare for military exercises.

Officials will meet this week "to assess what damage she could do," the spokesman said.

ADN said Miss Lorenzen decided to defect because of stepped-up NATO "war preparations," including plans for an "atomic attack against the socialist camp" during the Wintex-Cimex exercise now being held by NATO.

But the NATO spokesman said the exercise is "a paper exercise, involves no troops at all," and will conclude in about two weeks.

The East German news agency ADN said Miss Lorenzen decided to defect because of stepped-up NATO "war preparations," including plans for an "atomic attack against the socialist camp" during the Wintex-Cimex exercise now being held by NATO.

But the NATO spokesman said the exercise is "a paper exercise, involves no troops at all," and will conclude in about two weeks.

ADN said another factor in the woman's decision to defect was her learning of the "fascist past" of NATO Secretary-General Joseph Luns, who last month was listed as a member of the Dutch wing of Hitler's National Socialist movement from 1933-36.

Luns, NATO's top civilian official, was foreign minister of the Netherlands for 19 years after World War II. He acknowledged he is listed in Nazi membership archives at the Dutch government's War Documentation Center in Amsterdam. But he claimed the listing was a mistake and that he was never an active member of the Dutch party.

There was no indication the defection was related to the recent roundup of at least 12 East German spies in West Germany.

GARDEN SOIL CONTAMINATED?

We have a garden in the vicinity of the Coastal Chemical fire site and I wonder if there is any danger involved in planning a garden for the summer and eating the vegetables from the garden. Should the soil be tested? B. W.

Pitt County Health Department Director Dr. Robert Ehinger said you have absolutely nothing to fear. Any chemicals released into the air at the time of the fire has long since been biodegraded, he said. This would be true, anyway, he said, but is all the more definite because of the large amount of precipitation the Greenville area has had during the past two weeks. The chemicals that may have fallen onto the soil in your garden will do you no harm nor will they kill bugs and weeds for you now or in the months to come, he indicated.

WITNESS?

I had my car, a maroon and gray Monte Carlo Chevrolet, parked in the front parking lot of Pitt County Memorial Hospital the morning of Monday, Feb. 23. I was parked right beside the handicapped parking space. When I came out from visiting my grandfather in the ICU unit, I found that someone had sideswiped my car, leaving no name or anything. The security guard told me the parking lot company carries no insurance on customers' cars, so I'd just have to file with my insurance company. I have a $131 body work bill, $50 deductible, which someone should feel obligated to help me pay. If anyone saw someone hit my car that morning or if the person who hit it has had pangs of conscience, I'd like to know it. M. D.

Anyone who has information about this accident is asked to contact M. D. at 753-3395.

Martin County Allots Money To Courthouse

WILLIAMSTON - Surplus funds amounting to $2 million dollars have been approved by Martin County Commissioners to be applied to the cost of constructing a new courthouse in Williamston.

The board at its March meeting voted unanimously to transfer the surplus money to a specially designated fund. At the same time, commissioners named a nine-member committee to study the acquisition of land and plans for a better facility.

For more than ten years commissioners have sought a source of federal and/or state funds for the construction of a new courthouse, but has been unable to come up with a source.

The action to designate surplus funds for this purpose, a spokesman noted, should quell long-standing criticism that has been directed at the commissioners for the size of the county's surplus fund.

Synanon Suing For $40 Million

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Synanon Foundation has filed suit in federal court seeking at least $40 million in damages against Marin County, the board of supervisors and the grand jury for libel and conspiracy to violate civil rights.

The alternate lifestyle group contends the investigations by the defendants resulted in decreased values on some of its Marin County properties and threatened civil actions against its members because of their religious activity.

Chemical Link Said Difficult

HOUSTON (AP) - Studies at two chemical plants where vinyl chloride was produced show 15 employees have died from brain tumors, but federal investigators say it is difficult to link the disease with the chemical because the tumors take about 20 years to appear.

A complaint by a Union Carbide plant worker resulted in the discovery of 10 deaths by federal investigators between 1962 and 1978. A spokesman for the nearby Monsanto plant said a study revealed five such deaths. George Pettigrew, regional director of the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health, said about 10,000 past and present employees are being studied.

DECISION REVERSED

MONROE, N.C. (AP) - Voters in Monroe on Tuesday reversed an earlier decision and approved a $4.5-million bond issue for water and sewer facilities.

Rountree Considering Bid For Speakership In 'Alternative' Role

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - The third member of the state House to show an interest in the post of speaker floated a trial balloon for his candidacy this week.

"I might run. I might very well run," said Rep. Horton Rountree, D-Pitt. "But I've got to make a decision in the next week or two."

Rountree, now in his second term as speaker pro tem, wrote a letter to all members of the House this week, urging them to keep their options open in supporting candidates in upcoming speaker's races.

Two state representatives are already running for speaker in the next two legislatures.

The House speaker is elected by majority party members of each House session. Rep. Carl Stewart, D-Gaston, a close ally of Rountree, is now serving an unprecedented second term.

Rountree didn't say so in his letter, but he told The Associated Press in an interview that he may offer himself as an alternative candidate for speaker in the 1981 session.

Rep. Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, is generally acknowledged to be the front-runner in the speaker's race in 1981, and Rountree's letter was widely interpreted as an attempt to derail Ramsey's campaign.

In his letter to House members, Rountree said he did not believe it wise for future speakers to serve more than one term. Ramsey has acknowledged he will probably seek a second term if he wins the first one.

Ramsey is being challenged by Rep. Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg, who is seeking commitments for the speakership during the 1983 session. Rountree said he believed Helms might find stiff opposition from those who do not want a second speaker from the Charlotte-Gastonia region.

Rountree said if he does seek the speakership, it would be for the 1981 session only. "After that, I'll go home and practice law," he said.

Rountree praised Stewart in his letter for opening the legislative process to more representatives and warned - in a veiled reference to Ramsey - that another speaker might put the real power of the House in the hands of a few.

"The chair should never be controlled by a few but should be open to the entire membership," he said.

In the interview, Rountree said during the 1975 session, Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green was House speaker and that power was in the hands of a clique that included Ramsey.

"Under Green, there was a cabinet that ran the whole show," Rountree said.

Farmville Board OK's Two Zoning Changes

By CAROL TYER

Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE - Approval was given last night during the Farmville Commissioners' meeting for two zoning changes.

The W. R. Duke Jr. property on South Main Street in the block where Lee's Warehouse used to be was changed from light industrial to general business on the Main Street frontage and residential (R-5) in the portion facing Walnut Street.

The F. M. Davis heirs land on Highway 264 across from Fields Street was changed from light industrial to highway business.

Administrator Patrick Thomas reported that the town will be seeking exemption from the Environmental Protection Agency's requirement for development of a pretreatment program for industrial waste. If this effort is not successful, considerable engineering and lab work will be necessary, he indicated.

The refuse collection-transfer site on Highway 121 just outside Farmville to the north is now operable and the last day of operation of the town landfill on State Road 1200 will be Friday.

An ordinance was adopted requiring attendance by a Planning Board member of at least half of the meetings in a calendar year to retain membership.

Confirmation was made of several street improvement assessment rolls drafted in the summer of 1974. This was a technical matter, because the record of the action at that time was unclear, it was pointed out.

Discussion was made of the need to move a pole placed within the Downtown revitalization area near the railroad by the phone company. The Commissioners indicated they did not feel the town should pay for the removal, but agreed that it should be moved. They asked the administration to contact the railroad about the running of underground lines in its right of way.

EPSDT PROGRAM...started in Pitt County.

Child Screening Program Started

"Good health is the greatest gift children can have", might be the motto of the new Child Screening Program begun in Pitt County recently.

Pitt County is participating in the preventive EPSDT (Early and Periodic Screening, Diagnosis and Treatment) Program. EPSDT is one aspect of the Medicaid program which provides health care for low income persons. EPSDT concentrates on serving children and is a cooperative effort through the Department of Social Services and the Pitt County Health Department.

Entry into the EPSDT program is available only to Medicaid eligible children through a referral from the Pitt County Department of Social Services or Health Department school nurses. After referral, the EPSDT staff visits the home of the child where they explain the program, set up an appointment for the child at a screening clinic, and advise about the child's health.

The next step is for the child to be screened. Many health problems, if caught in time, can save needless suffering and prevent permanent impairment or disability. Among the health signs checked at the clinic are dental, visual and hearing problems, anemia, sickle cell trait, tuberculosis, immunization record, physical and emotional development and many others as correct for the child's age. Because no additional charges are made for receiving the program it is easy for low income parents to take this step toward improving their child's health.

If problems are found during the screening, the child is referred to the correct source of medical care. In the Pitt County program, most common problems found among children requiring further medical care are dental work and evaluation of heart murmurs. The medical care is paid for through Medicaid to participating private doctors, dentists and optometrists. The parent or guardian chooses the source of medical provider from those participating in the program.

The child is scheduled for a return visit and screening at least once a year. Parents are encouraged to provide their own transportation for screening and medical treatment but emergency transportation is provided if needed. If a child misses an appointment, a new appointment is made. If the second appointment is missed, a visit is made to the home. Seventy-five percent of all EPSDT referrals based on national studies result in the child receiving diagnostic and treatment services.

There is a 50 percent higher rate of disabilities for lower income people based on national estimates. This is a major reason for the amending of the Medicaid program in 1967 to include preventive health services for children. The target group for the EPSDT program is all Medicaid eligible children under the age of 21. One of the most important reasons for EPSDT is that it makes available medical care for these children. By carrying out early screening and providing needed health care early, children will get off to a good start. They will generally be better able to contribute productively to the economy of the community where they live. One study of low income 18-year-olds rejected by Selective Service found 33 percent of their health conditions could have been prevented or corrected before age 15. EPSDT has also been found to improve the efficient use of health services and reduce the use of hospital care, physicians' services and prescription drugs thus lowering the overall Medicaid cost to the public.

For further information, contact the EPSDT Department, 752-4141.

Miss Freeman, Mr. Dillahunt Wed

MAURY — Miss Loraine Freeman and Mark Randall Dillahunt were united in marriage Sunday, Feb. 25, in Maury Chapel Church. The Rev. J. E. Reddick officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Freeman of Maury. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Plummer Webster Dillahunt Sr. of Grifton.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Dolly Bryant of Snow Hill, organist, a trio by Pevrella Barfield, Ann Miller and Faye Edwards and Clarence Hicks, soloist.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her uncle, Averon Olds. She wore a white gown of organza and alencon lace fashioned with a Queen Anne neckline, empire bodice trimmed with seed pearls, long bishop sleeves and alencon lace trimmed cuffs. The full skirt, with sun burst pleats and matching lace, flowed into a chapel train. Her headpiece was bameleau alencon lace crystal and seed pearls attached to tiers of silk illusion trimmed with lace. She carried a Bible decorated with red and white carnations.

Mrs. Linda Corbett, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and Miss Teresa Gooding, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids included Sandra Freeman of Maury, sister of the bride, Renee and Kaye Barfield of Maury, cousins of the bride, Gail Dillahunt of Grifton, sister of the bridegroom, Sandra Dillahunt of Durham, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, Cheryl Grant of Brown Town, and Iva Smith of Snow Hill.

Kimberly Dillahunt of Grifton, sister of the bridegroom, and Tamara Gaskins of Washington, D. C., cousin of the bridegroom, were junior bridesmaids. Meloney Reeves of Temple Hill, Md., and Nicha Coward of Upper Marlboro, Md., cousins of the bridegroom, were flower girls. Rico Smith of Snow Hill was ring bearer.

Plummer W. Dillahunt Jr. of Durham, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers included Willie and Jesse Freeman of Maury, brothers of the bride, Curtis Strayhorn of Kinston, cousin of the bride, Freddie Mills of Winterville, cousin of the bridegroom, Edward Huggins of Fort Barnwell, Douglas Olds of Washington, D.

C., uncle of the bride, Frank Croom of Hookerton, cousin of the bride, and Donald Bryant of

Mrs. Mark Randall Dillahunt

Snow Hill.

Mothers of the couple were presented long-stemmed red silk roses at the end of the ceremony by the bridal couple.

Following the ceremony, the bride's parents entertained at a reception at the K and W Cafeteria, Kinston. Georgia Lanier presided at the bride's book, which was placed on a table with a portrait of the bride.

The bride's table was covered with an English lace cloth and centered with a silver bowl holding red and white carnations and gypsophilia flanked by white tapers in silver candelabra. Assisting in serving were Levenia Becton, Fannie Comings and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Randolph.

The couple will live in Grifton after a wedding trip to unannounced points.

Programs Given At Chapter Meets

The Eta Delta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi held its meetings for February at the homes of Cindy Hart and Joyce Sawyer.

Programs were given by Kathy Shepherd on "Love" and Ron Jones of Garner-Wynne-Manning on "Biorhythms." Cindy Lewis, social chairperson, reported on the rush social held at the Holiday Inn. Further plans for casino night were given by Jackie Brown, coordinator. It will be held March 17 at the Ayden Golf and Country Club with proceeds going to the United Cerebral Palsy Developmental Center here.

President Jackie Gehrlein read a thank you note from the Prenatal Clinic for the donation of blankets. A surprise bridal shower was given for Carol Glover.

Wedding Strife: Dad's New Wife

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am planning my wedding and need some advice. My parents were divorced four years ago. Dad married again last year. Mom is still single and has a lot of bitterness toward Dad, although I must say in all fairness that she nagged him so much he did well to stay married to her as long as he did.

Also, Dad didn't meet Joyce (his present wife) until his divorce was final, so no one can say she broke up his marriage.

Abby, I want my wedding to be perfect. I want Dad to give me away, and I want Mom and Dad to be there as a couple on that day. Mom doesn't want to face Dad's new wife, and if Dad brings her it will spoil everything for Mom.

My minister says I should invite Dad and Joyce. Should I? Deep down, I hope Joyce will be wise enough to let Dad come alone, but what if she decides to come with him?

Please help me.

IN BETWEEN

DEAR IN: If you're old enough to be married, you're old enough to accept the fact that your parents are divorced and your father has another wife. Quit living in the past when you mother and father were a couple, and get on with the business of living life as it is. Invite your father and Joyce, and let them decide whether Joyce stays home or accompanies her husband.

DEAR ABBY: I have on occasion found the man I date sucking his thumb while watching TV or napping. He is 41. This shocked me, so I called his attention to it. He became very defensive and quite irritated, and an argument ensued.

Abby, do other adults regress to this kind of infantile behavior? Is this serious enough to require professional help?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Yes, other adults have been known to regress to thumb-sucking when they're tired or in need of relaxation and comfort. Aside from the humiliation and teasing they might suffer if this babyish habit is discovered, there's no harm done. If your friend is mature in other ways, overlook it.

DEAR ABBY: To GRANNY, whose grandchildren never send thank-you notes for the gifts she sends:

Don't blame the kids. It's their parents' fault!

I never knew if my grandson received my gifts since he never bothered to thank me for them. One day while talking on the phone with my son, I asked, "Did Jamie ever get the present I sent him?"

My son called out, "Hey, Jamie, did you ever get Grandma's present?"

Then I heard someone yell, "Yeah. Tell her thanks." Well, that did it. Now I send greeting cards. And if the subject ever comes up, I will explain why.

FED UP WITH BAD MANNERS

DEAR FED UP: I'm sure your cards conveyed the message.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. Please enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope.

ADK Members Have Fashion Show Thursday

A fashion show and new hairstyles were shown at the meeting of Alpha Nu Chapter of Alpha Delta Kappa Thursday evening.

The fashion show was coordinated by Thelma Flye, manager of Brody's, Pitt Plaza. The hairstyles were by Tori Hair of La Kosmetique Beauty Salon. Carol Brewer, Peggy Conleton, Sue Creech and Cleve Wallace, sorority members, were models.

Guests for the meeting included Brenda Roebuck and Rose Rowe, ADK members-at-large, Leslie Brinson, and Edsil Gordon, "Carolina Today" panelist, was moderator for the fashion show.

President Evelyn Finch presided at the business meeting and the April state convention was discussed.

University Tuition Hike Not Yet Out Of Picture

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Action Tuesday by a joint appropriations committee lifted, at least temporarily, the threat of a tuition increase for the students enrolled in the University of North Carolina system.

But a tuition increase is not definitely out of the picture. The legislator who headed the tuition subcommittee that recommended the increase said she has no plans to bring the matter up again.

"I don't know about the rest of the subcommittee members," said Sen. Carolyn Mathis, D-Mecklenburg. "Some of those people might be interested in doing it in the full appropriations committee."

Mrs. Mathis' subcommittee had recommended that tuition at the 16-campus system be increased by 10 percent for in-state students, beginning next fall, and that tuition for out-of-state students be boosted 5 percent next fall, to be followed by a second 5 percent increase the next year.

The subcommittee also recommended the budget for a tuition remission program for talented students be cut in half, from $3 million to $1.5 million for the next two years.

But the Joint Appropriations Committee on Education rejected all three suggestions after appeals from UNC President William Friday, university students and several committee members.

"The tuition increase will affect those least able to pay," Friday said. "The out-of-state rates now in North Carolina are the second-highest in the nation and the highest in the Southeast."

And Friday said cutting the budget for tuition remission to talented students would severely handicap university research. That money is used to pay graduate assistants who also teach in the research programs and by athletic departments on the UNC campuses.

In other legislative action: A House committee held up a bill that would make North Carolina's Department of Revenue a collection service for bad debts which have not been paid to other state agencies. The action was taken after some members said they doubted the constitutionality of the measure.

The bill, introduced by Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, would require a group of agencies, including the University of North Carolina and state-run hospitals, to send records of their uncollected accounts to the revenue department.

The bill would then require the department to deduct the amounts from any state income tax refunds the debtors stood to receive.

"I frankly don't think it's constitutional," said Rep. George Miller, D-Durham. "Despite all the good intentions, I just don't think this is a good bill."

Committee support for the measure was widespread, but Miller warned that it could be unconstitutional because it would enforce debt collections without the debtors having a reasonable opportunity to challenge the state's claim.

Jim Lore of the state attorney general's office said debtors could appeal to Superior Court and said a similar law had been upheld in Oregon. The bill was recommended by a legislative study commission. The committee postponed action on the bill until next week.

A bill that would set up separate regulations for the state's fundamentalist Christian schools, removing them from the stricter state Board of Education regulations, was filed in the Senate Tuesday.

Sponsored by senators Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, and Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, the bill would allow the schools to give their own competency test instead of the state version and would exempt them from having to hire certified teachers.

It would also exempt them from certain parts of the board's required annual reports. Since January of last year, the schools have waged a court fight over filing the reports, saying they interfered with their freedom of religion.

The bill would require the Christian schools to send the state notice of their intent to operate and to provide the names and addresses of the schools and the names of owners and chief administrators.

It would also require them to maintain annual attendance and disease-immunization records for students and to meet health, fire, and safety standards.

But the bill says the schools would not be required to comply with any other provision of the laws relating to education. Harris said last week he doesn't think there are any Christian schools in his home county. But he said he agreed to sponsor the legislation because the dispute between the state and the schools is something the General Assembly ought to take up.

Substitutes
The House Education Committee unanimously approved and sent to the House a resolution authorizing the state to increase the pay for substitute teachers by using surplus education appropriations. Under the measure, which has been passed by the Senate, pay for qualified substitute teachers would be increased from $20 to $30 a day.

The measure would authorize higher pay immediately. But state budget analysts have warned there may not be enough money for the increased pay to last until the end of the school year.

Open Meetings
A Senate judiciary committee took up a House-passed bill that would revise the state's open meetings law. Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, chairman of the committee, scheduled a public hearing for Tuesday, March 20, at 3:30 p.m. in the Legislative Building, on the measure.

Sales Tax
The House will take a final vote on a bill which exempts from the state sales tax personal property purchased in North Carolina for use abroad, as long as it is exported within 90 days.

Rep. Aaron Plyler, D-Union, said the purpose of the bill is to encourage the shipment of goods through the state ports of Wilmington and Morehead City instead of through Charleston, S.C., and Norfolk, Va.

McKissick In Hospital

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Floyd McKissick, a civil rights leader and founder of Soul City, was admitted to a hospital here Tuesday following a car accident in which he suffered head injuries, according to the state Highway Patrol.

A spokesman at Durham County General Hospital said McKissick was in stable condition early today. He underwent surgery for a fractured shoulder and for cuts on his skull, the spokesman said.

Trooper E.D. Wright said late Tuesday that the accident occurred about 6:15 p.m. about four miles north of Durham.

Wright said McKissick was pinned in his car about 45 minutes after it went off a bridge on Interstate 85 and landed on the road below.

The cause of the accident was under investigation, Wright said.

McKissick was head of the civil rights group Congress of Racial Equality for several years.

He and several others began organizing Soul City, one of a number of federally financed "new towns," about 10 years ago.

McKissick is a native of Asheville and practiced law in Durham for many years. He was the first black to attend the University of North Carolina law school and was active in desegregation cases involving a number of public schools.

Pursued To Ultimate Depths

A royal "We are not amused" reaction to suits brought by former live-in partners, seeking monetary compensation for past "services and companionship" is appropriate. It is no joke.

However... If one were to pursue the theme to an ultimate pinnacle (or depth), we might one day see a lawyer representing a cat down to its ninth life, in a court of law.

The complaint is that after giving four of its best years as a companion, solace, and only friend of a struggling young reporter; to be evicted when said reporter became rich and his fame extended one block in each direction of his modest residence.

The jury is called upon to decide whether said cat is now entitled to share in that newfound wealth and fame or continue to subsist on plate-scraps and the nonentity of life at a house three doors down the block.

Never happen! you say? Don't bet on it. There is no sure thing in today's world.

Thankfully, Tuition Hike Turned Down

Thankfully a joint appropriations committee in the Legislature has voted to reject a subcommittee recommended tuition increase for the UNC system.

In-state tuition would have risen by $27 to $36 and out-of-state by $87 to $109.

No doubt the tuition increases were tempting to legislators who are hard pressed to find funds to meet all state needs.

Nevertheless young people trying to go to college are hard pressed, too. Everything from housing to books is soaring. Thus holding the line on tuitions can mean a lot to the university students and their families.

Total Health Care Vision

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — There is much more to good health care in a community than just a hospital. But lack of thoughtful planning, and the hindrances of local, state and federal bureaucratic fragmentation stand in the way of change.

That is the conclusion of a retired physician from Vermont who settled in Sanford at a time when that community was deeply involved in making decisions about a new hospital.

Dr. Robert L. Richards feels that Sanford made some good moves as local citizens were involved in site selection and structural design of the hospital. But, he believes, "goals and vision are limited", and can be applied to many North Carolina locations.

Richards makes a major point from experiences: "The more continuing medical education, physical therapy, rehabilitation and preventive services are privately financed and provided outside of hospitals, the less hospital care will cost."

Emerging from his study of the Sanford hospital is a blueprint for a total health community, largely privately owned and operated.

Locate the hospital near an interstate highway, and make it the nucleus of health activities: a convalescent home and/or nursing facility so residents can have close medical supervision and be at the hospital for emergencies, lab work or admissions; nearby housing, apartments, and a motel should be available; as well as a "general store, drug store, auto service station, recreation center surrounded by communal garden plots (for) retirees with space for craft center and occupational therapy and physical therapy for handicapped patients recovering from injury, surgery or strokes," are all in Richards' vision.

Nearby, he suggests, a day care center, or kindergarten, where retirees might offer special skills and serve as surrogate grandparents would serve the community and hospital staff.

Equally important, the hospital should be a center of activity as health agencies, medical lectures, community college or nursing school classes, public school students, civic groups, and citizens come together to learn about public and private health issues.

BILL NOBLITT

"The problem is that industrial and public health includes mental health, health education in schools and welfare aid to dependent children, home health care by visiting nurses, family planning... convalescent homes and housing for the aged, food stamp programs that should include nutritional and dietary services — all of which are administered and funded by federal, state and local governments and private agencies.

Conflict "There is imperfect cooperation and coordination of and often duplication of services due to conflicting laws and regulations that control these various agencies and hospitals," Richards says.

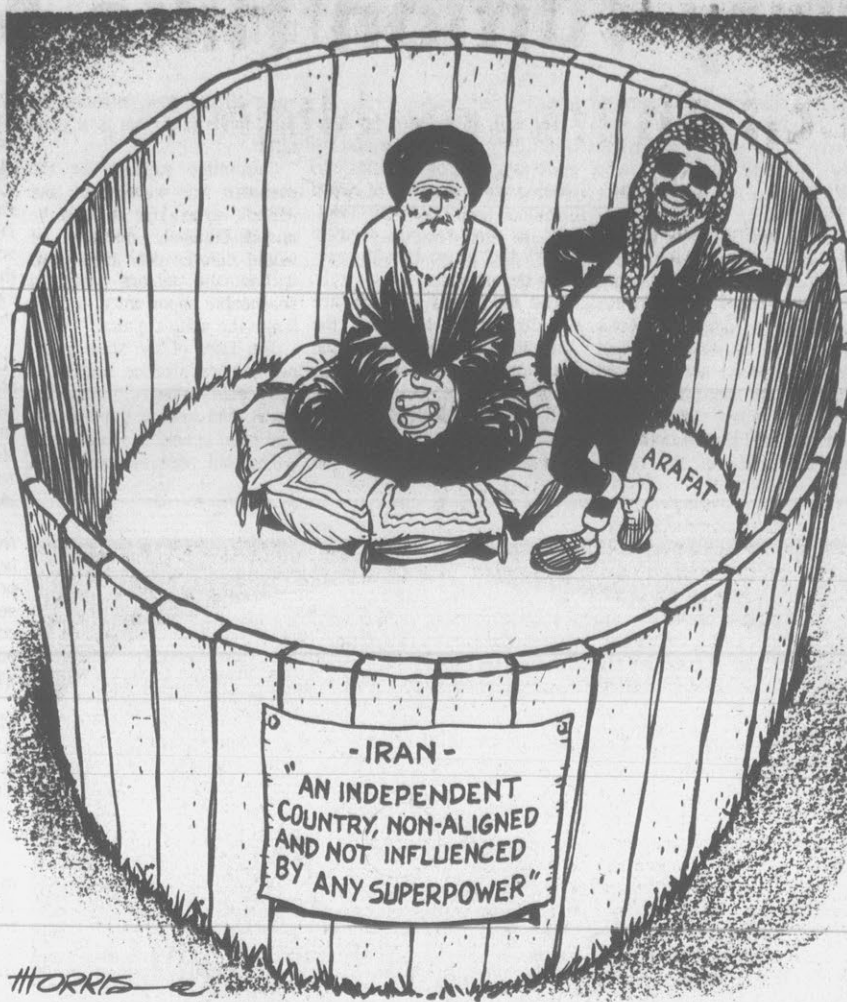

He envisions a "general services corporation" to direct nursing services, home health aides, housekeepers, baby sitters, craftsmen to teach, and to provide part-time employment to high school students and others to do chores for retirees, the disabled, and others confined at home. Welfare recipients could be hired as companions for the elderly or disabled, and to deliver meals, etc.

As for prevention, which so many experts agree is a key to good health, Richards suggests an "industrial, health service corporation" to provide smaller business operations with nurses, physical exams, periodic checks for blood pressure, overweight, diabetic, heart problems; early attention to pregnant women; information on health and nutrition; and individual assistance in diagnosing problems and locating the proper treatment.

"With a little imagination and private initiative," Richards is convinced, "Sanford... could lead the U.S.A. in health care services without dependence on federal and state bureaucracies." Other communities might consider some of his ideas, as well.

Who Failed In Chicago?

WASHINGTON — There is a bitter debate now going on in Washington as to who lost Chicago. The downfall of Mayor Bilandic and the Daley machine came as a shock to the White House, which had been assured by the CIA that Bilandic, backed by a powerful Department of Sanitation, had no chance of being overthrown. The CIA had told the President that the stories of unrest emanating from Chicago had been planted by reformers and opposition leaders in downstate Illinois.

When Bilandic was thrown out, President Carter was furious and demanded to know why he had been so misled.

Chicago analysts, in retrospect, now say that Bilandic tried to modernize Chicago too fast, and the Chicagoans could not absorb all the changes in such a short span of time.

They also said that Bilandic was far more interested in purchasing every new snow removal piece of hardware that came on the market, despite the fact that no one in the city was capable of knowing how to use it.

Although American snow removal companies had sent technicians to Chicago to train Bilandic's people in the use of this equipment, most of it sat in garages for the lack of personnel who knew how to drive them.

ART BUCHWALD

As one Chicago-watcher put it, "We gave them bulldozers when most of them were just getting used to shovels. Bilandic had delusions of grandeur and dreamed of Chicago becoming a major city in one generation."

"He was encouraged in this thinking by officials in Washington, who gave the mayor any advanced snow removal equipment he asked for and talked themselves into thinking that Bilandic was capable of handling any blizzard that came along."

"When push came to shove, Bilandic's people could neither push nor shove the snow off the streets. And the writing was on the wall." Henry Kissinger blames Carter for the downfall of the Daley machine. He told a reporter from "The Economist": "We did not give Bilandic the support he needed when he was in trouble. We should have sent in the 82nd Airborne Snow Plow Brigade from Fort Bragg, and ice breakers from the Sixth Fleet to show that we were behind him. When the Chicago voters realized that the United States would not do anything to help him, they were encouraged to go out into the streets."

Kissinger was asked if he thought Carter's human rights policies had played any part in Bilandic's downfall? "Absolutely," he said. "Chicago's standards of human rights may not have been everything we wanted

There Is No Crisis

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — Take it from the White House: there's no energy crisis right now.

President Carter said the other day that the current oil price and supply situation is serious but not critical.

He said the other month that energy shortages could become catastrophic, threatening raging inflation and unemployment.

That's the way it's been on the government's energy fever chart, up one season, down the next. Those changing diagnoses may account, at least in part, for the evident public confusion and suspicion about the causes and handling of energy shortages.

One winter, factories are closed and people are shivering for lack of natural gas. This year, natural gas is abundant and Secretary of Energy James Schlesinger says it should be used wherever possible.

Carter has asked, again, for voluntary energy conservation. He said Tuesday that the situation is not serious enough to warrant mandatory moves now. Schlesinger said Wednesday that before summertime, the government may have to order weekend closings of gasoline stations and order fuel-saving thermostat setting in public buildings.

That hardly sounds like the moral equivalent of war, the slogan Carter adopted in proposing energy legislation nearly two years ago.

At the time, Carter ordered the accelerated buildup of a billion-barrel strategic oil reserve, as insurance against emergency shortages. According to the National Journal, the government so far has managed to stockpile 72 million gallons, little more than one quarter of what was supposed to be in storage by now.

40 Years Ago Today

March 7, 1939

The N.C. House of Representatives in Raleigh today refused by a 56 to 52 vote to place a tax on "illegal punch boards."

Last night, the representatives voted to license slot machines used for purposes of amusement only, with proponents of the levy arguing it would not license slot machines that "pay off" while opponents argued "it opens the gate wide open for any kind of slot machine."

The finance committee proposed a $1 tax on "illegal punch boards" and estimated the state could get $40,000 a year in revenue from the tax.

Rep. Cherry of Gaston County, who led the unsuccessful assault on the slot machine section, had better luck on punch boards after he told the house "there is absolutely no moral or legal justification for this section in the revenue act."

"If you are going to do that, let's put in horse races and license bawdy houses," he added. "Let's get the big boys and not play around with three by four punch boards."

McBryde of Cumberland County offered the amendment which struck the tax completely from the bill.

To the editor:

Thanks for the support you gave to the recently organized Pitt County Court Monitoring Program. As you pointed out in your editorial of Mar. 1, it is our purpose to provide a public presence in the courtroom to facilitate justice for all defendants.

We have established a Speakers Bureau to inform area residents of the CMP's objectives and methods. Any club or group may arrange for a speaker by calling Mary Cochran, 756-3863, or Roy Schaal, 758-4895.

The initial need is for citizens to serve as volunteer court monitors. Those with a few hours a week free time to volunteer for this project are asked to sign up with Carroll Webber, 758-4906. This is one positive way in which citizens can "be involved" and contribute to the smooth operation of the democratic process.

We wonder where we have gone wrong in raising our children. We pray, we teach, we carry them to Sunday School and church. We try the best way we can to raise them to be ladies and gentlemen when they grow up. Sometimes we make it and sometimes we fail.

TV is no help. If we try to look at our own station, Channel 9, after housework and dinner are over, we're faced with "Newlyweds." Why can't the manager run this show at a later time? And while he is at it, why not carry "The Dating Game" along with it?

We have no control over what is on, but he does. Are we going to have to stop supporting our own station? I'm not the only one who is kicking these shows.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Unwelcome Soviet Guest

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Just when Soviet broadcasts were raising anti-American passions among Marxist guerrillas in Tehran to highest pitch, the No. 2 Soviet diplomat here was invited to be an unprecedented guest at a routine, two-hour staff meeting of the State Department's Bureau of Soviet Affairs on the department's sixth floor.

Vladilen Vasev, minister-counselor under Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin, arrived at the 9 a.m. staff meeting with one aide on Feb. 2. Before he left, he treated the 20-odd U.S. diplomats and a half-dozen officials from the Commerce Department and the United States Information Agency to a standard, wholly predictable anti-U.S., anti-Carter administration lecture.

With other developments in Jimmy Carter's confused handling of his Soviet problem, this strange invitation unintentionally symbolizes a State Department compulsion to prove to the Kremlin that, no matter what anyone else is saying, it is really and truly loved in Carter's Washington. "But what is transmitted to Moscow," one American long skilled in dealing with the Russians told us, "is not love but obsequiousness and even fear, and that is bad."

The extraordinary invitation to Vasev was specifically approved by Dr. Marshall Shulman, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's Soviet adviser, and at least one other top official. It caused a furious reaction among the few insiders who found out about it in the Carter administration, particularly in the Pentagon and Dr. Zbigniew Brzezinski's National Security Council staff.

Indeed, we found no officials anywhere — including experienced Soviet experts — who, when informed of Vasev's attendance at the staff meeting, were not astonished and angered. William Shinn, chief of the Soviet desk, told us it was simply an experiment in diplomacy with no sequel planned.

U. Alexis Johnson, who was the department's top career diplomat and Shinn's boss in arms control talks with the Russians a few years ago, said he had "enormous regard" for career diplomat Shinn. Now retired, Johnson told us: "I simply cannot understand this."

That lack of understanding goes to the heart of Vance-

Shulman diplomatic management of the frayed U.S.-Soviet connection. The invitation to Vasev seems clearly tied to the Vance-Shulman policy — often but not always echoed by Carter — of putting the brightest face on a clearly deteriorating picture: in this case, despite incendiary anti-American broadcasts in Iran, show Vasev how hard Carter is trying to get along, and the Soviets will follow suit.

To much of official Washington beyond the panelled chambers of Messrs. Vance and Shulman, that policy invites not reciprocity but but Soviet audacity. Worse, it betrays a kind of diplomatic masochism that lies just under the administration's surface attitude of occasional hard-headed diplomacy.

This ambivalence reinforces the Carter-Vance-Shulman refusal to link strategic arms talks (SALT II) to Soviet expansion throughout Africa and South Asia; it informs the Kremlin that the more successful it is

Strength For Today

SOUL'S REAL ENEMY

Moral compromise is often a major obstacle to living an upright life. Occasionally we are overcome by some great temptation. Usually, however, we descend from higher to lower ideals by an incline which is sometimes so gradual that we are not conscious of the fact that we are on the way down. Some little moral compromise, almost unnoticed at the time it is made, results later in a transgression of such size and significance that our whole lives may be shaken to their foundations.

In the course of this descent, many admirable moral qualities are subtly corrupted. For example, thrift becomes avarice. Striving grows into self-centered ambition which dominates and warps the lives of others. Little grudges, never put out of mind, become inveterate hatreds with the passing of time. Evil thoughts establish a mental pattern hard to change.

And the whole transformation often begins by the little moral compromises which are such deadly foes of the soul.

Sees Timidity In Investment

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans are not by nature timid souls, but sometimes they may act that way, says William Batten, head of the New York Stock Exchange. They avoid risk-taking; they seek security, he suggests.

Batten's focus, of course, is the stock market, where risk is the name of the game, a game at which fewer and fewer individuals seem to participate. It is from this specific that his generality develops.

The chairman may have a firm handle on the subject. Stock ownership that rose to 31 million in 1970, a reflection of the post-World War II investment aggressiveness, has now fallen to 25 million or less.

Much of the market participation today is through intermediaries rather than directly, with individuals giving their money to pension funds and mutual funds, and leaving investment decisions to them.

This practice, it has been observed by independent students of the marketplace, can sometimes be considered a copout. Fearful of decisions, it is said, the individual turns the matter over to others.

And what do the recipient institutions do? Well, sometimes they do the same thing. That is, rather than buying equities, which entail risk, they put the money into fixed-return bonds or other debt instruments.

In January, which is the same month the Investment Company Institute chose to reprint a Batten speech on the subject of timidity, mutual funds bought $948 million of stocks — but sold $1.23 billion.

That was not the extent of it either. They bought $923 million of low-risk, non-stock securities, they announced, but sold only $749 million of the same. Riskless investments, that is, were more attractive.

Timidity? If it is, it is not isolated. Batten speaks also of the big corporations that avoid start-up risks by buying existing concerns — concerns that by luck or expertise already have overcome the odds.

But in his speech, given before an Opinion Research Corp. group shortly after it had done a census for the exchange, he reminds us that timidity did not build the nation. It was risk-taking that did, he says.

"Our early captains of industry and the venture capitalists who helped finance ideas and enterprises that often must have seemed extravagant were not — whatever their other faults — timid souls."

"The key trait that helped build this nation was boldness — boldness tempered by sound judgment of what was possible, and a willingness to take risks to make things happen."

31-Item Agenda To Confront City Council Thursday Night

A 31-item agenda, including several public hearings, is scheduled for consideration Thursday at the City Council's 8 p.m. meeting at city hall.

Items scheduled under "old business" include: appointments to boards and commissions; public hearing on a petition for annexation of Section II of North River Estates located south of Greenfield Terrace, along State Road 1419;

Public hearing on rezoning property on the north side of Sixth Street west of Hollowell's Pharmacy from Medical Arts to Downtown Commercial Fringe; public hearing on rezoning property on the north side of US 264 Bypass West from RA-20 to R-6 and R-9;

Public hearing on rezoning property south of Greenville Boulevard, adjoining Belvedere Subdivision, from R-9 to R-6; public hearing on the closing of an unnamed dirt street south of Farmers Warehouse on N. Green Street;

Consideration of guidelines for naming recreation facilities; authorization for the submission of the 1979-80 Community Development hold-harmless application; and applications for renewal of mobile home permits.

"New business" on the agenda includes: applications for mobile home permits; consideration of a request to erect crypt tombs in Greenwood Cemetery; authorization to apply for transit planning grants revisions; consideration of an agreement for architectural services for the Public Works facility;

Consideration of an amendment to the engineering contract for 14th Street improvements; resolutions approving the sale of disposal parcels in Southside; requests by Greenville Cable TV Inc. regarding a resolution approving a capital stock exchange and an amendment to the ordinance relative to the transfer of control;

Consideration of budget amendments; Traffic Commission recommendations; application for beer and wine privilege license; scheduling of rezoning requests for public hearings; receipt of the semi-annual reports of the local planning boards;

Submission of an application for a Historic Preservation Inventory Grant; consideration of extension of the extraterritorial limits to conform with the Utilities Commission water district line;

Scheduling of a public hearing on the Thoroughfare Plan; consideration of tax releases and refunds; request for a building permit refund; consideration of police uniform bids; and review of Greenville Utilities budget amendments.

Death-Ray Is Nearer Reality

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Death rays," used by generations of science fiction warriors to zap each other, are moving closer to being real-life battlefield weapons, says a new Defense Department report.

The report, filed by a Pentagon research agency to support its request for more money, provides these other glimpses into weapons development:

Mears Col. . . .

gram that the imports should be reduced to 6 million or 7 million by 1985. Schlesinger has since said that won't be possible and that, in fact, oil imports will be up to 9 million or 10 million barrels a day by then.

—Work is proceeding on "spy in the sky" satellites that could gather intelligence, track potential targets with pinpoint accuracy whatever the weather and defend themselves with energy beams.

Under Richard M. Nixon's all-but-forgotten Project Independence, 1985 was supposed to be the year the United States ended its dependence on foreign oil.

—Researchers are developing a gun using electricity rather than explosives to fire projectiles at hypersonic — or faster than supersonic — speeds and a weapon designed to wipe out tank squadrons massed behind enemy lines.

Varying signals may be one of the reasons Americans give Carter low marks on his handling of energy problems.

What few details are given on any of the programs are largely couched in language that only superficially resembles English. But the report, prepared by the Pentagon's Advanced Research Projects Agency and released by a House Armed Services subcommittee, does provide a look at the kinds of weapons Uncle Sam hopes to one day have in his arsenal.

An Associated Press-NBC News poll taken before the Iranian oil cutoff became a major concern showed 33 percent rate Carter's performance on energy as poor.

The report says the United States is far ahead of its potential adversaries in computer technology.

Only 19 percent rated it good to excellent, while 44 percent called it only fair. Four percent of the 1,600 people in the nationwide survey said they weren't sure.

This ability to store massive amounts of information and computing functions on small silicon chips gives the United States "the option of pulling significantly ahead of our adversaries in capabilities for surveillance, target acquisition and homing guidance," the report says.

The AP-NBC News survey and other polls have found the public skeptical of government and industry explanations of energy shortages. Generally, the polls find that people suspect energy shortages are ploys to force up prices.

When it comes to lasers and charged particle beams, however, "It is not as clear that we have a unique technology base," the report says.

A survey in December showed that 85 percent believed gasoline shortages were only a cover for price increases.

The report says substantial progress has been made in demonstrating a high-efficiency chemical laser — the possible precursor of a "death ray."

Evans-Novak . . . Buchwald Col. . .

in weakening U.S. influence in the world, the harder the U.S. will try to make a deal with Moscow. Examples are numerous:

Item: Despite severe presidential protests over Soviet treatment of Anatoly Shcharansky (jailed as an alleged American spy) along with trials of other Soviet dissidents last year, not a single piece of drilling equipment from the controversial Dresser industries deal on down has been cancelled. Yet, hundreds of noisy hours were consumed in top-level meetings to arrange legal procedures to halt some of these technology sales, creating a hard-line public image.

Item: The White House removed the usual net assessment of U.S.-Soviet military strength from the first draft of the Joint Chiefs of Staff annual "posture" statement in January. It showed bad deterioration in relative military strengths over the year and might therefore have acted as a further prod to higher defense spending, offending Moscow, history's greatest weapons procurers.

them to be. But it is unfair to impose our standards on an entirely different culture. By insisting Chicago stop voting in dead people more than once, we undermined the government of one of our strongest allies in the Midwest.

Item: Inadvertently or not, in his Feb. 27 press conference Carter junked the careful formulation of U.S. displeasure for Vietnam's Soviet-backed "invasion" of Cambodia and China's "frontier penetration" into Vietnam. Those were Carter's words on Feb. 20 at Georgia Tech and Brzezinski's on the March 1 CBS "Morning Show". But in his press conference, Carter equated the two events with the same language, thus muting the anti-Soviet signal.

The biggest mistake we made, according to Kissinger, was emasculating the CIA's covert capabilities in the Windy City. "When the CIA was forced to give up its domestic operations, the opposition was not afraid to challenge the Daley machine."

George Ball disagrees strongly with the Kissinger analysis. He blames Nixon and Kissinger for making Bilandic believe he was unbeatable.

"There wasn't anything Washington could have done to prevent Ms. Byrne from taking over once the snow started falling," said Ball.

The big question now being asked in the capital is whether Washington can live with the new Chicago government. President Carter said he was sending his son Chip Carter to talk with the new leaders and assure them that with or without the Daley machine we wanted their friendship.

When asked if he thought he had done enough to prevent a Bilandic defeat, the President angrily replied, "The United States cannot be the policeman of the world."

Set Open House At Pope AFB

FAYETTEVILLE — The annual open house at Pope Air Force Base this year will be held on Saturday, April 7 and will celebrate the base's 60th anniversary.

Peaches, Greenville's Adult Disco Is Proud To Announce "The Best Is Getting Better"!

Peaches will be closed Sunday, March fourth through Monday, March twelfth.

But it'll be worth it. We will reopen Tuesday, March thirteenth with a face lift and an all new system to make convenience for you a key word in our operation. The all new management places the emphasis on service with the introduction to Eastern Carolina of the total tab system. The beauty of this setup is that each individual will have to pay only once prior to leaving Peaches at the end of the evening. More time to do other things you'd rather be doing at Peaches.

More changes! Peaches will be open a new night beginning in March. Introducing Backgammon night, Sundays with the emphasis on easy listening music, good conversation, (you supply), a relaxed atmosphere, and of course, backgammon. Peaches will have backgammon boards available, but we encourage you to bring your own. See you Sundays at seven P.M.

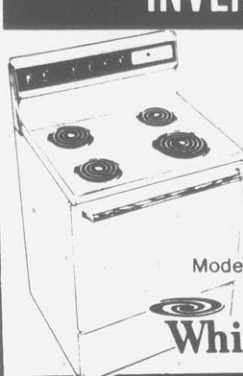

Peaches will also be continuing the tradition of Beach Nite on Tuesdays. Our oldies D.J., Collins Cooper, plays some of the best 50's & beach music around, so you won't want to miss the fun every Tuesday at 8:00 P.M.

Of course, Foxy Lady Night every Thursday Nite 8:00 P.M. and 10:00 P.M.

South Africa Bars Change In Election

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The U.N. peace plan for South-West Africa was threatened anew today by South African raids on guerrilla bases in Angola and the South African government's rejection of alleged modifications favorable to the guerrillas.

South Africa has agreed to the U.N. proposal for a cease-fire in the territory March 15 provided the guerrilla South-West Africa People's Organization "undertakes to stop violence ..."

BORDER RAID — Map locates the Angola-Namibia border where South African troops supported by warplanes struck Tuesday. (AP Laserphoto)

But the government ordered strikes against the guerrilla bases Tuesday because it said SWAPO was stepping up raids and there were new interpretations to the U.N. plan for South-West Africa, also known as Namibia.

Under the U.N. plan, a peace-keeping force of up to 7,500 troops and administrators would supervise the cease-fire, universal voter registration among the territory's 1 million inhabitants and establishment of an independent government.

The plan also calls for all but 1,500 of the estimated 30,000 South African troops in the territory to pull out, while those remaining would be confined to bases monitored by the United Nations.

But Prime Minister Pieter W. Botha told Parliament in announcing the raids, "If there are others who wish to deviate from the plan, they must bear the consequences. Our position remains unchanged."

South Africa says its objections to the latest proposals by U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim are that SWAPO guerrillas would be permitted to occupy bases inside the territory once the cease-fire begins March 15.

Serving Divorce Papers Saturday At 10,000 Feet

ANTIOCH, Calif. (AP) — Gene Ballard is bailing out of his marriage but his divorce plans are up in the air.

Ballard is to serve divorce papers on his wife, Lynda, on Saturday at about 10,000 feet.

Ballard, a carpenter, and his wife plan to skydive one last time together — for old times' sake. They are friends and have been separated for four years. The divorce is uncontested but the in-the-sky ceremony will include Ballard's at-torney.

And if things go as planned, Ballard says, he'll give his soon to be ex-wife a kiss as they open their chutes at 4,000 feet above the Antioch Airport, about 40 miles east of San Francisco.

"There have been a lot of marriages in the air, but as far as I know this is the first time divorce papers will be served like this," said fellow skydiver Steven Schlosser.

Held Up Store To Pay His Fine

CASPER, Wyo. (AP) — Wyoming law officers are looking for an armed robber who stuck up a Casper liquor store to raise money to pay a fine in Gillette.

The gunman walked into the liquor store Monday night and demanded $125 — no more, no less, Casper authorities told Campbell County Sheriff D.B. "Spike" Hladky.

The robber told the clerk he needed $125 to pay a fine in Gillette or go to jail. He took only $125 and left the rest of the money, the lady said Tuesday.

TO BE EXECUTED — John Louis Evans III, 29, is scheduled for electrocution at Holman Prison in Alabama on April 6. The warden of the prison said Tuesday he is trying to find someone to throw the switch on the electric chair where the convicted triple slayer is scheduled to die. (AP Laserphoto)

Immolation
By Gasoline

ERIE, Pa. (AP) — A Chicago man bought a gallon of gasoline at a service station, doused himself with it, struck a match "and just blew up in flames," a witness says.

The man, identified as Kenneth Ziemba, 31, was listed in critical condition early today at St. Vincent Health Center with burns over 98 percent of his body, a hospital spokesman said.

Police said the incident occurred Tuesday at a service station along U.S. 20 in Millcreek Township.

The station attendant, Bill Whiteford, said he sold the man a gallon of gasoline in a can.

"I thought he had just run out of gas. That's what people usually come in for," said Whiteford.

"He started walking towards the road. Then he poured the gasoline on himself.

"He tried to light one match. It didn't work. He lit another match and just blew up in flames."

The man then ran across the highway and threw himself into a pile of road salt at a Pennsylvania Department of Transportation storage area, police said.

Passing motorists stopped and tried to extinguish the flames. Police arrived quickly, responding to an earlier call that the same man had been seen trying to jump in front of autos along the highway.

Illegal Animal Pelts Seized

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly 18,000 wild animal pelts, apparently destined for sale in Europe, have been seized by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Agency officials placed the value of the seized pelts Tuesday at $1.1 million, representing the largest fur haul in the agency's history. Among the seized skins were those of Mexican bobcats, coyotes, badgers, raccoons, gray foxes and skunks. The animals were believed killed in Mexico and smuggled across the border to Texas. Agency official Clark Bavin said the skins apparently were to be sold in Europe and made into fur coats.

Blames Skipper For Collision

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Coast Guard's commandant says the skipper of the ill-fated cutter Cuyahoga was "lulled by the good weather and good visibility" the night the craft collided with an Argentine freighter in the Chesapeake Bay. Eleven men died in the October crash.

Adm. John B. Hayes told a House panel Tuesday that "it is quite clear where the responsibility for this casualty lies ... command was the crucial element." Warrant Officer Donald K. Robinson was commander of the Cuyahoga when it collided with the Santa Cruz II. Hayes' testimony represented the Coast Guard's first public assessment of fault in the accident.

Gems, Rare Treasures Lavished On Elizabeth II

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II is home from the shores of Araby with a fortune in gems, but Buckingham Palace says her loyal subjects may not get a glimpse of them.

The queen, already one of the world's richest women, reportedly was astounded by the splendor of the presents showered on her by oil-rich rulers in the Persian Gulf during her 18-day tour of seven countries which ended last Friday.

But a palace spokeswoman, asked Monday about suggestions that everyone would be delighted to have a peep at the wonders, said cautiously: "We haven't heard that there is to be a show."

The queen brought some of the gifts home with her by plane. "The heavier ones are coming on Britannia, the royal yacht," the palace said.

The 45 journalists accompanying the queen said she frequently was overwhelmed and even embarrassed by the munificence of her hosts. Every day when she returned to the Britannia, more treasure had been added to the trove of precious stones, gem-encrusted ornaments and rich carpets.

Queen Victoria, the famous great-great-grandmother of Elizabeth, didn't travel much. In her day, as paintings of the period confirm, princes of the far-flung empire came to London bearing gifts, and knelt before their empress to present them.

Nowadays, oil and other vital interests have reversed things. Elizabeth's tour was the first ever by a reigning British sovereign to Arabia, and the rulers showed their delight.

In Dubai the queen gasped. It happened when Sheikh Rashid presented her with a 2-foot square box containing a necklace of sapphires and surrounded by 300 diamonds, with matching earrings and a ring.

There also were two model camels sculptured in gold, standing beside an 18-inch high golden palm tree with pearls and rubies for dates.

Nobody really knows the value of all the gifts. Reports talk of anything up to $6 million, and the presents are the queen's personal property. She won't have to give a reckoning to the customs; Her Majesty's Customs says gifts from heads of state to the head of state aren't dutiable.

And "she wouldn't put jewelry into a museum unless it was utterly unwearable," Buckingham Palace said.

In Kuwait, the queen's first stop, Emir Sheikh Jaber launched the treasure train with three strands of pearls as big as marbles. The queen, reputedly worth a billion dollars and herself the owner of no mean jewel collection, put on the choker for dinner and said to her entourage, "Don't you think my pearls are lovely?"

The queen collects a lot of things on every trip. Past gifts

Emir Sheikh Khalifa of Qatar gave her a knee-length necklace of gold that an awed British reporter said looked "like chain-mail." Also: an oyster shell containing a huge pearl, a lapis lazuli fruit bowl supported by prancing golden horses studded with diamonds, a five-strand pearl and diamond necklace, a gold and diamond watch and a gold handbag.

The queen collects a lot of things on every trip. Past gifts have included a 110-foot totem pole, a painting of a power station and a mink coat from Canada, a bronze cauldron and an umbrella from Australia, a Nepalese yak's hair fly-whisk, and talking-drums from Ghana. Everything is catalogued, stored and looked after so that it can be displayed whenever the donor visits England.

The queen gave her Arabian hosts silver salvers engraved with a picture of her yacht.

They reportedly cost $30,000 each from Plante and Johnson, court silversmiths of Bury Street, St. James's, and the queen was said to have brought seven of them along. Sheiks' wives received signed photographs and other small gifts and a book on Bedouin jewelry. Presenting a pendant to one Gulf princess, the queen said, "I'm afraid it's rather small."

"We know we can't compete," a royal official explained. "What a wonderful plus for Great Britain," wrote Londoner Clive Phillips in a letter to the Evening Standard. "Almost all the jewelry given to the queen was made in London, paid for in valuable foreign currency, and given back forever to us free of charge."

GIFTS FIT FOR A QUEEN — Britain's Queen Elizabeth II smiles at girls in the national costume during a visit to the Bahrain Museum at Muharraq, Bahrain, last month. Officials presented the Queen with a pottery jar more than 4,000 years old as a souvenir. The queen was reportedly astonished by the splendor of presents showered on her by rulers of the oil-rich states along the Persian Gulf. (AP Laser-photo)

Treasure In Film Found

OTTAWA (UPI) — More than 500 reels of vintage film unearthed last summer in frozen tundra behind the Yukon's only legal gambling hall are being painstakingly restored.

Produced between 1903 and 1929, the movies include the lone surviving print of Samuel Goldwyn's "Polly of the Circus," a 1917 silent film starring Mae Murray, and "Wild Fire," a 1915 picture featuring Lionel Barrymore.

"So far, about one third of the collection has been restored. It will take another few months to complete the work," said Sam Kula, director of Canada's National Film Archives.

Most important is footage of World War I. Canada lost much of the filmed record of its role in the 1914-18 war in a warehouse fire in 1967.

"Some are official British and Canadian allied war releases. There is lots of news film from the 1920s," Kula said.

Unfortunately, the nitrate films are volatile and deteriorate rapidly. "We may have to destroy some of the originals, but we'll copy what we can," he said.

Kula said some reprints are being sent to Washington for the Library of Congress — "because they believe some of the film to be the sole surviving copies."

Distributors shipped film up to the Yukon for about 25 years starting in the early 1900s to entertain miners caught up in the gold rush. And because of shipping costs, distributors left the film there.

Eventually it was frozen at the bottom of a swimming pool that had been turned into a hockey rink behind Golden Tooth Gerby's gambling hall in Dawson City.

Workmen clearing a vacant lot for a recreation center uncovered the film last August.

Kula said that in a few weeks more than 500 reels were unearthed.

Rats Can Sniff Out Explosives

TORONTO (AP) — Rats are far more effective than dogs in sniffing out explosives, says Dr. Sidney Weinstein, a U.S. Army researcher.

Weinstein, in Toronto to attend a seminar recently, said rats were also cheaper to buy and train than dogs "and you can take a rat just about anywhere."

The Pitt County Farm Bureau has initiated a property protection service designed to reduce the incidence of rural crime.

Farm Bureau president Atlas Wooten said the local effort is part of a state and national program in which participants are urged to mark all farm equipment and similar items with an individual identification number. The numbering system, which includes 10 characters, tells the state and county of residence and other information that can be used in tracing ownership.

Wooten said the identification number, which can also be used to mark household and personal items, can be obtained by contacting the Pitt County Sheriff's Department.

An identification manual, showing uniform locations for marking various pieces of machinery, as well as confetti for identifying grain, can be obtained from the Pitt Farm Bureau office.

According to Wooten, the coding system enables law enforcement officers anywhere in the United States to prove theft and to trace stolen items back to their rightful owner.

Wooten said, "we feel this program has the potential of reversing the rapid rise in rural crime. We therefore urge all rural people in the county to participate."

The program is a cooperative effort involving the Farm Bureau, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the N.C. Sheriff's Association, the Farm Equipment Dealers association, the N.C. Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, the N.C. Department of Justice, the N.C. Crime Prevention Officers Association, the N.C. Agricultural Extension Service, and the N.C. Department of Agriculture.

physicians, or get medical documentation concerning immunization to show to school officials.

Keeter again pointed out that children who received the vaccination prior to age one would still have to have another shot according to state laws. The board noted that those who had not gotten their shots or received medical documentation of having the shot would be denied entrance to school as of Friday, March 16.

Representatives from the Stokes Advisory Council came before the board with a request to place Stokes Elementary on a priority list for renovation monies in the upcoming school budget.

According to the advisory council members, Stokes school is in "critical" condition, and should be replaced. The board informed the members that priorities were being drawn up, and that further visits were being made to county schools to ascertain school needs.

According to a report given by Alice Keene, members of the Stokes community have requested to use the old Stokes High School building for Community Schools Program projects. Plans for the school would include using money to renovate the high school lunch room, with possible work to be done on the gym in the future.

The board voted for the Community Schools Program to allot approximately $1,200 toward use of the old high school lunchroom, and agreed to send a county maintenance person to work on the electrical system.

Board member Beverly Congleton noted that use of the old high school might prevent further destruction of the building.

School Finance Officer Dan Thomas reported to the board on the school system's annual audit, noting that all school records had been found in good order, except for minor problems at Bethel Elementary and G. R. Whitfield. Thomas added that over $1 million flowed through county schools during fiscal year 1977-78.

Assistant Superintendent Kathryn Lewis reported that the cultural arts program in the county was going well, but noted that cultural arts teachers were being over-extended in their use in different schools. According to Mrs. Lewis, one teacher presently serves 946 students in different schools.

Mrs. Lewis stated that meetings held with high school, middle school and elementary school principals were progressing smoothly, saying that principals enjoyed meeting with feeder school principals.

Mrs. Lewis addressed the problem of student pull-out, whereby students are "pulled out" of regular classrooms to attend remedial classes or cultural arts programs.

"Teachers feel like dispatchers," said Mrs. Lewis of the pull-out problem. She noted that she was not condemning special programs, but just wanted to point out to the board the growing pull-out situation.

Mrs. Lewis asked the board to allow her to work on assembling a middle school task force to work on the diversified programs offered at middle schools. The board gave Mrs. Lewis approval to work on the matter.

The board voted to revise the present county retirement policy so as to allow Pitt County Schools employees to work past the age of 65 if they wish to do so.

In other actions, the board made change in special legislation for allowance of eight board members in compliance with state laws. The board also agreed to seat new board members June 1 after May primaries rather than the first Monday in December as previously designated.

Sees Small Risk

Dr. Robert Ehinger, Director of the Pitt County Health Department, has reported that a dike at the Coastal Chemical Company cleanup site broke some time between midnight and 8 a. m. Tuesday.

He said about 200,000 gallons of water were released and that he believes there is little danger involved since dilution has occurred because of the large amount of rain that has fallen recently. "The solution to pollution is dilution, they say," he commented, "and if so, we've gone a long way toward the solution recently with the amount of rain we've had. He added, however, that persons having cattle in the Fork Swamp area below the spill area should not allow them back into the swamp area till the weekend.

Amendment Action Due

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Final Senate action is likely today on a proposed constitutional amendment, tentatively approved Tuesday, that would allow state legislators to face election every four years instead of every two years.

The Senate vote was 31-15 Tuesday, one vote more than the three-fifths majority required to approve amendments to the state constitution.

The proposed amendment would make future state representatives and senators serve four-year terms, rather than two-year terms. "The cost of running a campaign is increasing tremendously," said one of the bill's sponsors, Sen. Herson Barnes, D-Wayne. He said that campaigning every four years instead of every two was one way to cut those costs.

The bill received wide support when it was introduced by a freshman, Sen. Robert Davis, D-Rowan. Initially, 40 of 50 Senate members signed the measure indicating their support, but several said they had a change of heart by the time it came up for a vote.

Secrets...

They were fingered by Werner Schiller, an East German security officer who defected in January from the East with a store of secret files. Authorities said another dozen operatives unmasked by the defector managed to elude police and cross into East Germany.

Schiller's information triggered a spy hunt in West Germany, Austria and France, but authorities say the hunt is concentrated in West Germany, where 3,000 Soviet Bloc spies are believed to be operating.

West Germany has arrested more than 100 Communist operatives since 1974, including a close adviser to Willy Brandt while he was chancellor. Defense Minister Georg Leber resigned under pressure last year after a spy ring was found in his department.

Chicago Landmark Doomed

By ARTHUR H. ROTSTEIN
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — The Loop, perhaps Chicago's best known landmark, may be doomed.

For 82 years, trains have whooshed and roared around the elevated tracks that mark the borders of downtown. They lurch around 90-degree turns, third rail flashing, cement canyons magnifying shrill screech of metal on metal, assailing eardrums, smothering conversation.

The Loop has been as symbolic of Chicago's identity as Lake Michigan. It's a survivor, a utilitarian device uniquely delineating the city's business and financial hub and carrying the public there in unequalled numbers.

It's been loved and hated, its demise predicted since its inception. The latest threat: City Hall wants to tear down the two square miles — 11,000 tons — of 25-foot-high riveted plate steel. Merchants long have howled it's an eyesore, a nuisance, a blight, a deterrent to business.

The Chicago Urban Transportation District says the Loop is doomed. It will take about $400 million to build a partial replacement, a subway businessmen insist will spur more than $1 billion in new development west and northwest of the Loop.

And so the brouhaha: "The Elevated and the Loop are as much a part of Chicago as the cable car is to San Francisco," says architect Doug Schroeder.

"If anybody is interested in preservation of the elevated structure for historical purposes, we have some sections of it on 63rd Street I'm sure we could keep," says Mayor Michael Bilandic. "But downtown, clearly the best thing we could do is to take it down."

Since the Union Loop Elevated was completed by Charles Tyson Yerkes in 1897, an estimated 2.7 billion passengers have ridden the "iron collar" around a 7-by 10-block downtown area.

Yerkes devised the Loop, bringing rail lines from north, south, west into common circling trackage above the congestion. For real estate and businessmen, it meant more shoppers and land development.

But it brought dire warnings: of rush-hour trains stacking up at its ridiculous 90-degree curves, of packed behemoths plunging into streets teeming with pedestrians, cars, trolleys and trucks.

And it quickly brought complaints about light blotted out and noise that made thinking impossible. But Yerkes scoffed at replacing the elevated with subways.

Now merchants were complaining about the Loop. It stifled already-jammed streets, magnifying the tumult, and provided a haven for deadened pigeons.

In 1916, the Chicago Traction and Subway Commission was ordered to extend the transit system by elevated lines, noting, "A subway costs about four times as much per mile as an elevated railroad and will furnish no more passenger carrying capacity, speed or other advantages."

Business interests, and mayors — Ed Kelly, Richard J. Daley, Bilandic — said most of the Loop could or would be removed. But the general manager of the Rapid Transit Lines, predecessor of the Chicago Transit Authority, said in 1940: "The Loop occupies only 8½ percent of the street area in the downtown business center and is the greatest asset the other 91½ percent has. It is the greatest passenger pickup system in the world."

The present plan stems from a 1968 study that includes a $750 million program for an underground replacement and an east-west line past major railroad terminals. The CUTD was set up in 1970 to carry it out. But there wasn't enough federal money, so the agency trimmed its plans to intersecting north-south and east-west axes.

At $50 million to $100 million a mile, there's enough money now only for one line.

Meanwhile, Harry Weese, an architect, nominated the Loop for the National Register of Historic Places. He contends it "ranks with the original Ferris Wheel and the Eiffel Tower in its rivets tracery, canopied stairs, railings, girders and laced columns." The Illinois Historic Sites Advisory Council rejected it, but the national Advisory Council on Historic Preservation is studying alternatives to demolition.

Meanwhile, the Urban Mass Transit Administration is studying whether the service will be worth the estimated $490 million. Subway projects in San Francisco and Washington have led to huge cost overruns and some transit experts now see subways as too costly.

The CUTD's environmental impact statement said a proposed subway on the downtown area's western edge, "would not be a significant catalyst to major new development" and would bring "an increased reliance on motor vehicle transportation" with noise, pollution, accident and energy problems.

Defenders say the Loop has few marks against it. Although a crash in February 1977 killed 11 people and injured 189, the National Transportation Safety Board determined the cause was human error, not the structure. During January's blizzard, which disrupted most transportation, the Loop elevated functioned 24 hours a day.

Defenders say it could be upgraded to lessen noise and restored for much less than constructing a subway. With hundreds of millions of dollars then remaining, additional service could be provided elsewhere.

They also point out that subway construction and dismantling the el could create havoc, noise and air pollution for 10 years.

"By God, you trifle with your urban images at your peril. We're not Des Moines or Kansas City; we're Chicago, and it's because of the lake and the Loop," Schroeder says.

See Microwave Hazard Growing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Hazards from microwave radiation are increasing, says the General Accounting Office, which wants a performance standard set and enforced promptly for microwave medical diathermy machines to protect patients, operators and the public. In a recent report, the congressional investigative agency cited Food and Drug Administration estimates that 15,000 such machines are used in the United States anywhere from once a week to 12 times daily.

Grizzlies Cause Controversy At Yellowstone Park

By JAMES R. SCHIFFMAN
CHEYENNE, Wyo. (UPI)—Thousands of years before European man inched across the American West, there was the grizzly.

Scientists say the species at one time numbered in the hundreds of thousands and was found from California to South Dakota, from Arizona to Montana. Grizzlies perhaps came across the Bering Strait, possibly up to 30,000 years ago.

Gradually the bears were pushed from their habitats by hunters and trappers and by a westward movement of people that crowded them into progressively more desolate country.

The grizzly found refuge in remote areas, including the region of forests, mountains and geysers where Yellowstone National Park, the nation's oldest, was created. Today the surviving bears roam in an 8,000-square-mile area that extends beyond the confines of the park into the neighboring wilderness of Wyoming, Montana and Idaho.

Frank and John Craighead from the 1950s until the early 1970s gained fame as private researchers of Yellowstone grizzlies. Since leaving the park in an angry dispute over bear management policy, the Craigheads have been at loggerheads with the National Park Service.

The researchers loudly declared that Federal officials were too hasty during the early 1970s in removing garbage dumps that for years had been feeding grounds for grizzlies. The practice, the Craigheads said, resulted in unnecessary killing of bears that did not quickly adjust and harassed park visitors. Part of the controversy that continues today concerned the actual number of grizzlies in the Yellowstone area.

"Our studies reveal probably not over 135 grizzlies in 1974 in the Yellowstone eco-system,"

Frank Craighead said from his home in Moose, Wyo., near the park. "There is no evidence that that population has increased."

"If not properly managed and their numbers continue to decline and the reproductive rate continues to decline, we may reach a point beyond which they cannot recover."

However, Richard R. Knight, the leader of a federally commissioned group called the Interagency Grizzly Study Team, disputed — albeit with a qualification — Craighead's contention.

"There's no good solid scientific evidence," Knight said from his headquarters in Bozeman, Mont. "I think there are 300 to 350 grizzlies. The population is probably either stable or increasing a little bit, depending on how widespread the killing of bears is."

"Maybe the mortality that we don't know about (from poaching or killing by sheepmen) may be fairly significant."

Craighead questioned results from "in-house" researchers, saying federal agencies tailor their findings to desires of superiors. But Yellowstone Park Superintendent John Townsley rejected the accusation and said the interagency team is independent.

"I have no desire, nor is there any record of anything going on in my park, to suggest what kinds of answers we are looking for," Townsley said.

"The continuing disagreement among bear biologists is one that I don't view as being terribly helpful to the grizzly bear himself."

The Craigheads and the Knight group tracked grizzlies by trapping bears, placing radio-controlled collars on them, and returning them to the wilds. In addition, the interagency team has used aircraft to spot grizzlies.

Craighead advocates placing animal carcasses at strategic, remote locations throughout the park to attract grizzlies and keep them away from people. Townsley said he has seen no evidence suggesting that would help the situation.

"When you get into this business of proposing to feed bears, I would judge that during the time of year you have campers in Yellowstone, probably natural food is fairly abundant," the superintendent said.

The main effort, Townsley said, has been and should be to keep food carried by people away from bears. In recent years, a few "problem" grizzlies that consistently sought food at campsites have been shot to death.

Townsley said another problem is a dump at Cook City, Mont., outside the park, where bears feed on garbage left by people. "We're working toward the elimination of that dump," the superintendent said.

Dumps for bear feeding were common in Yellowstone until they were eliminated. In the 1920s and 1930s, stands were built for people to sit and watch the bears. Armed rangers stood by to protect against possible advances by aggressive bears.

"It was a real circus back then," said Bart Koehler, executive director of the Wyoming Outdoor Council, an environmental group. "It's amazing what they did in the parks in the early days."

Through all the years of study, the grizzly has remained an elusive animal. However, Knight said, a picture of an independent animal that follows the path of least resistance has emerged:

—Grizzlies may return to places they find food, but otherwise, there appears to be no pattern to their meanders. "They seem to be very independent. They pick up and go for no apparent reason," Knight said.

—Grizzlies generally are wary of people, a trait that may be passed from one generation to another via a learning process. However, they are dangerous. Contacts with humans are not making them domesticated.

—The hibernation period begins anywhere between late October and early December and runs until February, March or April, depending on the bear. Except for females with cubs, grizzlies hibernate alone and do not seem to have a particular preference for den locations.

—Cubs are born in the hibernation den, but, Knight said: "We've never witnessed a birth. All births anybody has any record on have taken place in zoos." Two is the most common number in a litter, but occasionally four will be born at one time.

—Grizzlies often rest during the heat of the day and set out at night. Except for females and cubs, they usually travel alone. "Very seldom will you find two adults traveling together. Occasionally it's seen, but we don't know what the connection is," Knight said.

—Bears like to follow trails as much as possible, which accounts for some of the encounters with people.

—Bears tend to eat whatever is easiest to find, whether it be meat, fish during spawning season, grasses or roots.

—Grizzlies in the wild will live about 20 years, some 10 years less than their counterparts in zoos.

Conventional wisdom has it that the best course of action when encountering a grizzly along the trail is to lie down and play dead. Climbing a tree is another possibility.

"Some of the grizzlies can climb trees," Knight said. "If he can climb a tree, too, you're just out of luck."

Knight gave the following advice:

"Stay calm and don't panic. Look the situation over. See if the bear's really going to do a thing first. You might be able to stare him down."

Farmville Board... City Counts

that they intend to hold a public hearing concerning the construction of a drainage ditch for the block bordered by Williams, Thorne, Cameron and Bennett streets.

An ordinance was adopted governing conduct in the public parks of the town.

Considerable discussion was given to the need for safety measures at the intersection of Fields and Wilson streets. The Commissioners modified the Police Chief's recommendation for sight distance revision and decided to designate 30 feet from the intersection in each direction as a no parking area, with the exception of the area in front of Stencil's Garage, where no parking would extend to the driveway.

The administrator was directed to find out the Southern Railway's feelings concerning making the railroad right of way that has been used as a street on the north side of the railroad between S. Main and S. George streets into a more usable town-maintained street.

The Commissioners agreed to let it be known that the town plans to go ahead with water system improvements that would make use of State Clean Water funds currently allocated to the town in the amount of $243,000. There was some discussion as to whether more wells or more water lines should be constructed with this matching money.

Preparation is being made for Farmville's participation in the May 23 Highway Improvements hearing. The Commissioners indicated they feel the four-laning of 264 is still No. 1 priority, but cited other needs, including the need for parallel service roads on existing 264 and possibly for the extension of Mandarin Drive to 264 to provide another outlet in that area of town. The Mandarin Drive extension idea was turned over to the Planning Board for study.

David Shackelford and Albert Ellis were appointed by Mayor Sara Albritton to the Recreation Committee, replacing Clover Phillips and S. T. Collins, who have resigned.

The budget was amended to accommodate the town's $2,700 solid waste planning grant.

Thomas was given the go-ahead to begin developing a proposal to seek funds for a 701 Planning and Management Assistance Grant. The deadline is Mar. 12. A 50 percent local match is required.

A newly drafted town charter was gone over and plans were made to submit it to the General Assembly by the Mar. 9 deadline for local bills. The new charter has only minor changes, but has a number of deletions of outdated processes such as election procedure, which is no longer handled by the town, and mayor's court, which is no longer in existence.

Looking For A Creative Excuse

WARREN, Mich. (AP) — The Michigan policeman who comes up with the most outlandish excuse by a motorist caught speeding probably won't have to worry about making up an excuse if he's caught speeding.

Michigan's Fraternal Order of Police is holding a statewide contest during March to see who has heard the most "creative" excuse for speeding.

First prize, to be announced in June, is a device used to locate radar detection units before they detect speeders.

The contest is being held to put a little humor in an unpopular job, says Tony Malta of the Dale Corp., which publishes the FOA's semi-monthly magazine, "The Peace Officer," in which the contest was announced.

Creativity aside, says Malta, a speeder probably will get a ticket anyway.

2 Accidents

An estimated $3,200 property damage resulted from two collisions investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Heaviest damage resulted from an 11:50 a.m. mishap at the intersection of Greene and Martin Streets involving a truck driven by Norman Earl Revel of Route 4, Greenville, and Benita Delcasse Ruffin of Route 4, Goldsboro.

Damage was estimated by officers at $800 to the Revel truck and $2,000 to the Ruffin car.

An estimated $200 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 9:07 a.m. collision at the intersection of Fifth and Elm Streets.

Police identified the drivers of the vehicles as Danny Ray Short of 4008 Roundtree Dr., and M. Cooper Beland of 212 Shady Knoll Trailer Pk.

Took His 'Coon

SILER CITY, N. C. (AP) — The Chatham County sheriff's office was looking for a raccoon — and two cans of shortening — and deputies were hoping to find all three in time for a birthday party today.

Colon Austin told deputies the raccoon had been skinned and dressed and was destined to be the main course for his 53rd birthday party. He said he and his wife returned home Sunday afternoon to find the house had been entered through a window.

The 22-pound raccoon was missing from the refrigerator where it had been soaking in preparation for cooking, and also missing was the shortening.

Mrs. Austin said a squirrel or rabbit might be substituted for the main dish, along with something additional to feed 26 grandchildren expected for the meal.

Austin, meanwhile, was still upset over the loss of his favorite meal. "Somebody done me a dirty deal," he said.

Utilities Bonds Vote Supported By C-of-C

The promotion of proper and orderly growth is one of the major reasons the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce is supporting the Greenville Utilities bond referendums, according to Jerry Powell, GACOC Chairman of the Board.

The Board of Directors of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce voted Feb. 15 to support the three utility bond referendums totaling $24 million.

According to Powell, the Greenville Utilities Commission Committee of the Chamber studied information concerning the water, sewer and electric referendums and then recommended that the board support the referendums.

Advantages listed by the committee include the following:

passage of the three bond referendums will provide for orderly expansion of the utilities capacity for the Greenville area; passage of the referendums will insure a growth policy rather than a no-growth policy, increasing Greenville's ability to attract new industries; the general obligation bonds will be cheaper than revenue bonds which could be released to continue growth even if the referendums fail; passage will allow expansion for the future at a lower cost today; and passage of the bonds would not cause an electric rate increase.

The committee cited that the bond referendums will be affected by prevailing high interest rates, with water and sewer rates increased by bond passage as disadvantages to the issue.

According to the Chamber's Greenville Utilities Commission Committee Chairman, Charles Schwidde, the committee decided that the real need for expansion is a present problem in the areas of water and sewer services.

The committee's report was also submitted to Charles Horne, Director of Greenville Utilities.

The Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce will assist the Utilities Commission in promoting the passage of the three bond referendums during the next few weeks.

Church Service Planned Tonight

Services will be held at Brown's Chapel Holiness Church tonight at eight o'clock.

The guest speaker will be Elder Freddie Farmer, who will be accompanied by the youth choir of the church.

Plan Microwave Cooking Class

SNOW HILL — The Greene County Unit of Lenoir Community College will sponsor a 30-hour class in Microwave Cooking beginning Tuesday, March 13 at the college unit in Snow Hill.

Mrs. Frankie Hardy will teach the class which will cover various topics, including safety techniques.

The non-credit class is open to anyone 18 or older. A tuition fee of $5 will be charged except for those 65 or older, who can enroll free of charge.

Foreign Language Interest Still Weak

By DEAN REYNOLDS
WASHINGTON (UPI) — It is coming increasingly clear that the average American doesn't know his unilaut from his tide and apparently doesn't care to.

Nine out of 10 Americans cannot speak, read or effectively understand any language but English and the President's Commission on Foreign Language and International Studies, at work since October, is trying to come up with ways to change that.

About 90 percent of all colleges today have no language requirement for admission. A quarter of all high schools do not teach a foreign language of any kind.

Oddly enough, it is the Helsinki Accords of 1975 that may trigger a renaissance of foreign language study in the United States. While much of the interest in the East-West pact boiled down to a peace-through-strength declaration, a bit of culture seeped through the agreement.

Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill., points out a little known part of the accords that commits the nations who signed it to encourage the study of foreign languages and cultures. Simon is a member of the commission and also of a congressional panel that monitors observance of the Helsinki agreements.

"We are living in a new world economically just as we have moved into a new world militarily," Simon said in an interview.

All of a sudden we find this balance of trade deficit. We have to get out and sell. We have to communicate with others and part of this is the language thing. We're the only industrial nation in the world that does not require foreign language exposure by all students."

Simon thinks one way to influence colleges to expand their foreign studies curriculum is through federal grants.

If the commission came up with a program where we said, 'For every student you have enrolled in foreign language for at least three hours a semester, we'll pay you X number of dollars,' all of a sudden you're going to find a lot of places interested."

Here's a look at what the commission is up against.

Between 1968 and 1974 there was a drop of 15 percent in high school language studies. In 1975, only 24 percent of American high school students were studying a foreign language. In 1976, only four percent of the graduating students had two years of foreign language studies.

But there are incentives to change the situation.

For one thing, the commission has found that 100,000 jobs were probably lost to foreign nationals because Americans cannot speak foreign languages. The Ford Foundation stated in a recent report, "The principal obstacle to the development of first class competence in the foreign and international field is the low level of language teaching in the United States."

But there has always been a kind of, "Let them learn English," attitude. Simon says this parochialism shocks scholars and businessmen of other nations "because they see us turning our backs on what could be a sure way of improving our image and position in the world."

"We are culturally isolated," Simon said. "There's just no question about it. And we suffer for it."

Some of the problems arising from the language barrier are humorous.

Simon said, "General Motors put out the Nova (car model) and they got into Latin America and it didn't sell at all until someone figured that 'no va' in Spanish means 'doesn't go.'"

Then there is the story of the Parker Pen Co. Simon said the company was running an advertisement throughout Latin America that had been mistranslated somehow, and "indicated that the pen had contraceptive benefits."

But there are just as many stories that are not funny.

"When the Vietnam War broke out," Simon said, "we did not have a single American-born specialist on Vietnam or Cambodia or Laos in any American university or the State Department — anyone who spoke the language or understood the environment."

"If we'd have had 10 academicians or people who understood Vietnam, maybe we would have saved 50,000 American lives and hundreds of billions of dollars."

"It's amazing. There are 300 million people on the face of the earth that speak Hindi, (yet) we have fewer than 300 students of Hindi in the United States."

Simon said he believes the commission is really calling for a "minor cultural revolution" in America.

ECHSA Meet Slated Mar. 14

The monthly meeting of the Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency will be held Wednesday, Mar. 14, at 7:30 p. m. in the Ramada Inn, Greenville.

Agenda items include, but will not be limited to, the following: action on by-laws revisions; project review reports on a six-bed addition to the existing facility at Edgecombe-Nash Mental Health Center; Medical Park Nursing Center; Children's Resources Services of Edgecombe-Nash Mental Health Center; Essential Services of the N. C. Department of Human Resources Migrant Health Program (continuation), and a continuation staffing grant for Wilson-Greene Mental Health Center.

The public is invited to this meeting.

"And it's important that we do it," he said. "It's important for our cultural enrichment, it's important for our economy, it's important for our security."

Simon and his fellow commission members are not kidding themselves. An attempt to win support by pushing the purely intellectual merits of bilingualism will fail, they believe.

So a different approach must be taken. That approach, like so much else today, targets the pocketbook. "This is a pocketbook issue," Simon said.

"The man on the street may not react immediately by saying we've got to have foreign languages, but he or she is concerned about inflation. And about 1.5 percent of inflation last year was caused by the balance of trade deficit."

"I think the pocketbook issue has to sell it. The economic issue is the one that has the appeal."

For instance, said Simon, "One out of every three farm acres goes for farm exports." If a Brazilian is going to import farm products and the choice is between a Russian who can speak Portuguese or an American who can speak only English, the American is at a distinct disadvantage, Simon said.

"You're just not likely to buy something from a guy you don't understand."

So what will the commission recommend. Probably not much beyond bringing the matter before the people.

There is talk of an advertisement campaign to make people aware of the need to acquire a second or third language. There may even be funding for some education acts that have been in limbo since passage by Congress.

The 1966 International Education act, for instance, has never been funded.

So while the commission busies itself with its monumental job of salesmanship, consider this amazing statistic that Simon has unearthed, and then think again about the need for foreign language study:

"There are more teachers of English in the Soviet Union than there are students of Russian in the United States."

Oh yes. A tilde is a diacritical mark written over "n" in Spanish. An unilaut is the two dots used in German to indicate a changed vowel.

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — North Carolina broilers: market steady. Supply moderate. Demand very good. North Carolina dock weighted average price is 46.33 cents per pound this week for small purchases of plant grade broilers picked up at processing plants. Estimated slaughter Tuesday totaled 1,482,000 head and average live weight 4.04 Pounds per bird on March 2.

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — State farmers market: (wholesale prices) apples - bushels 5.00-7.00, tray pack cartons 8.50-13.00; snap beans - bushels 15.00; cabbage - 50 pound bags 12.50-13.00; collards - bushels 5.00-6.00; corn - crates 7.00-8.00; cucumbers - bushels 11.00-13.00; oranges - cartons 6.00-7.00; grapefruits - cartons 4.00-4.75; greens - bushels 6.00; lettuce - cartons 12.50-15.00; peppers - bushels 8.00-11.00; Irish potatoes - 50 pound bags 3.50-4.50.

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — New York broiler-fryers: truck-lot buying interest has improved for end of the week needs. Fill-in loads have sold at 47 cents on plant grade and 48 cents on U.S. Grade A with shippers now becoming reluctant to sell additional product at these levels. Advanced interest is fairly good. However, current retail and distributive movement is light to fair.

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — N.C. eggs: Market higher. Supplies moderate. N.C. weighted average price for small sales of consumer Grade A eggs in cartons delivered to retail stores: 73.62 cents per dozen for large white: medium 70.69; small 49.61.

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — New York eggs: Prices advanced. The market is fully steady with most traders cautious. Inquiry exceeds available offerings as all levels of trading hold inventories with confidence. Major buyers that are featuring eggs are ordering very heavy. Cartoned-egg movement is fair to good. Prices to retailers, sales to volume buyers, consumer Grade A white eggs in cartons delivered store door: A extra large 72-75, A large 71-73; A medium 67-69.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices gained ground today amid hopes for a Middle East peace agreement.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 1.82 to 828.40 in the first half hour. Gainers took a 5-3 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

President Carter is due to leave this evening on his trip to Egypt and Israel seeking to help bring about a peace treaty.

Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil of Egypt said today he believed the chances for an agreement were "rather good in my opinion."

Parent Volunteer Program Operating

A parent volunteer program is now in operation at Bethel Elementary School. All parents interested in becoming a volunteer must attend a workshop to prepare them for serving as a volunteer.

The program began operation on Wednesday, February 21. Topics discussed at the initial workshop included "How to Listen to a Student Read", by Mrs. Linda McLawhorn, reading resource consultant for Pitt County Schools; "Skills in Teaching a Student to Memorize Math Facts", by Mrs. Jane Huffman, math consultant for Pitt County Schools; "Proper Procedures in Performing Health Screening", by Mrs. Joanne Tetterton, social counselor of Pitt County Schools; "Ethics and Techniques Used in Assisting in a Classroom", by Mrs. Janie Manning, principal of Bethel Elementary School; and "The Importance of a Parent Volunteer Program", by Ott Alford, superintendent of Pitt County Schools.

Schedules of parent volunteers vary according to the amount of time parents are serving as volunteers as well as to the time of day and number of days a week they choose to serve. Any interested parents or community persons may contact Bethel Elementary School.

Nebraska Few Unemployed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nebraska had the lowest average unemployment rate among the states last year, while Alaska had the highest, according to new government figures.

The Labor Department said Tuesday that Nebraska had a 2.9 percent unemployment rate while Alaska's was 11.2 percent. Among the four regions, the Northeast led last year with a 6.9 percent jobless rate, down from 8.4 percent in 1977. The Midwest had the lowest regional rate at 5.3 percent. Unemployment in the South averaged 5.6 percent last year, and 6.6 percent in the West.

Carter Probe?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department acknowledges there is a possibility a special prosecutor will be named to look into President Carter's family peanut warehouse business. But the department adds such an action would be "a rather extraordinary step."

Federal investigators have been investigating operations of the warehouse, including $6.5 million in loans it obtained from the National Bank of Georgia in 1975 and 1976, when former Budget Director Bert Lance was president of the bank.

In a meeting Tuesday with Republican members of the House Judiciary Committee, Justice Department officials said they had received a lengthy FBI report on the case and would decide soon how to proceed with the case.

Terrence Adamson, department spokesman, said several possible options were listed for the legislators, including "the rather extraordinary step of appointing a special prosecutor."

But analysts said a good many stock traders seemed to be wary of becoming prematurely optimistic. They noted fears that the market might be vulnerable should Carter's mission not succeed.

Geosource was the early volume leader among NYSE issues, off 1/4 at 29. Polychrome climbed 1/4 to 25%. A bidding war between French and Japanese companies apparently ended when the Japanese concern's American subsidiary raised its offer from $25 to $26 a share.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average slipped .78 to 826.50.

Declines outnumbered advances by a 6-5 spread on the NYSE.

Big Board volume came to 24.49 million shares against 25.69 million in the previous session.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .34 at 164.15.

PVM-Maker To Pay Civil Fine

WASHINGTON (AP) — The maker of the diet product, P.V.M., has agreed to pay a $75,000 civil fine to settle a false advertising case, the Federal Trade Commission says.

FTC attorney Arthur B. Patrizio said Tuesday that ads run from December 1977 to May 1978 made it appear the product caused weight loss. "Instead, it was the diet, which limits calories, that caused the weight loss," he said. The fine is against J.B. Williams Company, Inc., and its ad agency, Parkson Advertising Agency, Inc. The firm did not acknowledge any wrongdoing in settling the case.

Bad Day For 2 Pitt Families

Tuesday was a bad day for the families of two Pitt County Sheriff's Department deputies.

The wife of Deputy Jimmy Evans was hospitalized from injuries received in an 8:50 a.m. collision on Memorial Drive just South of the Greenville Boulevard intersection, and the 10-year-old daughter of Deputy Jimmy Harrell was injured when struck by a car near Black Jack about 5:30 p.m.

Highway Patrolman Wayne Taylor reported that Crystal Michele Harrell was injured when struck by a car driven by James C. Mills of Route 2, Greenville, as she crossed secondary road 1774 in front of her home.

Trooper Taylor said the child had crossed the roadway and was returning to her home at the time of the mishap.

No damage resulted to the Mills car and no charges were made, he said.

Greenville Police reported that Linda Evans of Grifton was injured when her car struck the median on Memorial Drive, went out of control, flipped two times in the air, and came to rest against a car driven by Leonard Bostic of Ayden.

No charges were reported by officers who estimated damage at $3,500 to the Evans car and $300 to the Bostic auto.

Whitfield Talks To Bethel Club

BETHEL — Carl E. Whitfield was guest speaker at the meeting of the Bethel Rotary Club last night.

"The Governor's Highway Safety Program: Its Objectives and Operations" was Whitfield's program topic. He is field representative, Governor's Highway Safety Program, eastern district.

The Governor's Highway Safety Program is the coordinating agency for federal, state and local traffic safety activities, he said.

"This program functions primarily as an administrative office to help state agencies and local political subdivisions obtain grant-in-aid funds. It provides technical assistance to cities and towns in establishing goals and in evaluating the results of safety projects implemented throughout the state," Whitfield added.

Burned Her?

Clinton Earl Wilson, 19 of 1912 Norcott Cir. has been arrested by Greenville Police on charges that he caused malicious injury by the use of incendiary material, Chief Glenn Cannon said this morning.

Cannon said the charges against Wilson stemmed from an 8:30 p.m. incident at the home of Dorothy Matthews at 1206 South Pitt St. Monday.

The chief said Wilson allegedly poured kerosene on Ms. Matthews as she lay on her bed and set the fuel on fire.

Ms. Matthews, Cannon noted, suffered second and third degree burns over about 30 percent of her body.

Bond for Wilson was set at $50,000 pending court action in the case.

Exhibitions Open...

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The cry of "Play ball!" will be heard at five exhibition baseball locations today...but major league umpires won't be doing the shouting.

In fact, if the contract dispute between the 51 umpires and the two major leagues isn't settled by Friday, the Chicago Cubs' head groundskeeper at Ho Ho Kam Park in Mesa, Ariz., will help officiate the game against the Seattle Mariners. "He can make up his own ground rules. Nobody will be able to argue with him," quipped General Manager Bob Kennedy.

The dispute, of course, is somewhat more serious than that. The umpires have authorized Richie Phillips, head of the Major League Umpires Association, to try and renegotiate individual contracts even though the union and baseball have a contract in force for a few more years.

"I see no possibility that this thing will be settled in time," Phillips said Tuesday from his Philadelphia law office. "Without individual contracts, the umpires will not work."

"It's an individual action on the part of 51 individuals who are unhappy. I'm not feeling any pressure to give in. In fact, the only pressure I'm getting is that some of the individuals are thinking of re-evaluating their situations to ask for more money."

Dick Butler, supervisor of umpires for the American League, said the exhibition games would be officiated by former minor league umpires and college baseball arbiters.

"We don't foresee any problem," Butler said. "Every town's got plenty of umpires. Most of these guys will have done umpiring for us before. They won't be as good as our guys, but the players probably won't notice. They're concentrating more on getting in shape and making the ballclub than on umpiring."

Only one of today's five scheduled exhibitions pairs two major league teams — the California Angels entertaining the San Diego Padres at Palm Springs, Calif.

Meanwhile, the world champion New York Yankees face Grambling State University at Grambling, La., the St. Louis Cardinals meet the University of Missouri at St. Petersburg, Fla., while Pittsburgh and Seattle oppose a couple of Japanese clubs — the Pirates against the Seibu Lions at Bradenton, Fla., and the Mariners vs. the Yakult Swallows at Tempe, Ariz.

The Yankees' weekly brouhaha involves, of all people, shortstop Bucky Dent, who never makes waves. The Yanks' postseason hero, who can become a free agent following the 1979 season, says he will do just that if he isn't signed by the start of the campaign.

"They don't want to talk before the season, then I don't want to talk at all," Dent said. "I just would rather not talk during the season. I'm not threatening; I just feel that way."

"I don't want to play out my option and leave New York. I like playing in New York. I have one thing on my mind and that's playing baseball during the season. I'll honor my contract and play as hard as I can."

The Los Angeles Dodgers, the Yankees' World Series victims the past two seasons, are far ahead of where they were last year at this time, according to Job opportunity. Forty dollars a day, plus carfare, for three hours work in the sun. That's the glamorous part.

On the negative side there will be no overtime, even though there may be extra innings. And, of course, there will be plenty of chances to be abused by players, managers and fans.

With five games on tap, spring training exhibitions were to begin today — without major league umpires. But there should be no lack of replacements.

"We'll have ex-minor league umpires, college baseball umpires and the doctor around the corner," said Dick Butler, American League supervisor of umpires. "I think it will work out all right."

The reason for this call for pinch umpires is that the 51 regular arbiters won't be working because of a dispute over individual contracts. They want more money and their attorney, Richie Phillips, is bargaining to get it for them.

"I see no possibility that this thing will be settled in time," Phillips said Tuesday. "Without individual contracts, the umpires will not work."

Phillips, who has had meetings with American League President Lee MacPhail and National League President Chub Feeney, said the umpires want to reach parity with officials in other sports. He pointed out that an umpire with 10 years of major league experience would have a minimum salary of $32,500 while a National Basketball Association referee is guaranteed $45,000 after 10 years.

"It's an individual action on the part of 51 individuals who are unhappy," said Phillips by phone from his law office in Philadelphia. "I'm not feeling any pressure to give in. In fact, the only pressure I'm getting is that some of the individuals are thinking of re-evaluating their situations to ask for more money."

Baseball has been preparing for the possibility the umpires

IOC After Chinese

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) - The executive board of the International Olympic Committee will try again this weekend to get Mainland China into the Olympic Games.

But the closer the IOC gets to the 1980 Games in Moscow, the more formidable the Chinese puzzle becomes. China has said it will not compete unless the IOC drops Taiwan. And that is not as easy as it sounds.

Lance Cross, IOC member for New Zealand who led a three-man team to China this winter, is to report his findings to the executive board Friday and Saturday. The board could make a recommendation to the full session of the IOC, set for April 3-8 in Montevideo, Uruguay.

Lord Killanin, president of the IOC, newly home from a fact-finding tour of seven African countries, said: "All I can tell you is that the Chinese want to compete in Moscow. Beyond that I cannot begin to predict what might happen."

wouldn't be working today. A teletype has been sent from the two league offices, asking the clubs to make preparations to have local umpires available.

Another teletype was sent out Tuesday, informing the clubs that it didn't appear that the regular umpires would be working and that local officials would be needed to fill in.

Butler said the void would definitely be filled. "We don't foresee any problem," he said from Sarasota, Fla. "Every town's got plenty of umpires. So much college baseball is played down here and in Arizona, anyway."

Butler pointed out that when the major league teams play "B" or split-squad games, extra umpires are used. "Most of these guys will have done umpiring for us before," he said. "They won't be as good as our guys but the players probably won't notice. They're concentrating more on getting in shape and making the ballclub than on umpiring."

Phillips said he welcomed the fill-in umpires. "There's no problem at all with these other guys going to work. We urge them to work," he said. "The contrast would just emphasize the quality of our umpiring."

Knights Take Tourney Win

KINSTON — Greenville Christian Academy's varsity and junior varsity joined the girls in the finals of the Bethel Academy Invitational Basketball Tournament with victories last night.

In the varsity game, Greenville rolled to a 61-53 victory over Mt. Calvary. The junior varsity downed Bethel, 46-23.

In the varsity game, Greenville built up a 15-10 lead over Mt. Calvary, then saw their opponent rally in the second period to take over the lead, 27-24, at the half.

Greenville regained control in the third period, moving into a 40-37 lead. Then, in the final period, the Knights outscored Mt. Calvary, 61-53.

Ben Haddock led Greenville with 22 points, while Steve Tyburski had 15 and Marshall Crumpler had 10. K. Letchworth led Mt. Calvary with 16, while Glenn Mitchell had 14 and Charles Taylor had 11.

The finals of the tournament will be played Thursday night. Bethel faces Greenville Christian in the girls' final, while Mt. Calvary and Greenville collide for the junior varsity title. Greenville faces Bethel for the varsity championship.

Clemson Slips Past Pirates By 2-1

CLEMSON, S.C. — Clemson University won its sixth straight baseball game here Tuesday afternoon, defeating East Carolina University by a score of 2-1.

The Tigers are now 6-1 on the year, while the Pirates dropped to 1-2. The same two teams met again this afternoon at 3 p.m. Righthander Mike Brown went recording his second win in three decisions. He let the Pirates down on four singles, struck out eight and walked two. Bobby Patterson, the East Carolina starter, hurled four innings and took the loss, evening his record at 1-1.

Brown lost his shutout in the fifth inning when Rick Derechallo walked to open the inning and went to third on two ground outs. Mike Sorrells drove the run in with a single.

Two singles and an error on a scarfie loaded the bases with two out in the seventh, but Brown got Tim Hardison on a pop up to second to end the threat.

The Pirates also threatened in the eighth, putting two on with none out, and loading the bases with two outs, but they failed to produce once again.

Tim Teufel opened the Clemson second with a single, stole second and rode home on Robbie Allen's single. The Tigers scored what proved to be the winning run in the fourth as Tony Masone singled to open the inning, stole second and came in when Robert Bonnette singled. Allen singled again and Billy Weems walked, but Patterson got Dave Bufamoyer to pop up to short.

Allen and Bonnette each had two hits for the Tigers and Sorrells collected two of the Pirates' four hits. There was not an extra base blow by either team.

Following today's game, the Pirates move on to Charlotte to face the UNCC 49ers, then come to Greenville for their home opener against the University of Connecticut on Saturday.

Defense Gets Praise After Spurs Trim New Jersey Club

By The Associated Press
Who says the San Antonio Spurs don't play defense? Not Coach Doug Moe...or New Jersey Nets Coach Kevin Loughery.

"They have a great offense, but they also have one of the better defensive teams," Loughery said Tuesday night after the usually high-scoring Spurs defeated the Nets 103-99. "A lot of people look at the stats, but they play good defense. You have to play defense to win in this league."

That would be the National Basketball Association, where the Atlanta Hawks beat the Philadelphia 76ers 94-91, the Houston Rockets edged the Denver Nuggets 119-118 and the Portland Trail Blazers downed the New York Knicks 118-110 in other action Tuesday. San Antonio nailed down its triumph when James Silas connected on a tie-breaking jump shot and two free throws in the final 25 seconds. The Nets led 85-76 entering the final quarter but the Spurs pulled even at 95 on George Gervin's jumper with 1:15 to play.

Gervin and New Jersey's Bernard King took scoring honors with 27 points apiece.

The contest included a fourth-quarter shouting match between Loughery and Allan Bristow of the Spurs. The San Antonio player claimed New Jersey's Winford Boynes spit on him while they were jockeying for position under the boards. Boynes declined to comment on whether he spit at Bristow.

Hawks 94, 76ers 91
Despite their defeat, the third-place Nets remained just 1½ games behind Philadelphia in the Atlantic Division. Atlanta turned back the 76ers when Tom McMillen sank a pair of free throws with 1:28 remaining for the Hawks' seventh consecutive victory and Philly's fifth straight loss.

Atlanta, paced by Eddie Johnson with 22 points and John Drew with 20, trailed only once — by one point in the third period. The Hawks got the lead back 64-63 on two free throws by Dan Roundfield and then got six more points, including a pair of baskets by Johnson.

Rockets 119, Nuggets 118
Houston's Moses Malone blocked George McGinnis' shot attempt as the final horn sounded to preserve the Rockets' victory, their second in a week over Denver. With regular center Dan Issel out, Denver used Kim Hughes and Tom Boswell in the pivot. Malone finished with 26 points, but the Denver duo helped keep the game close and it was tied 29 times.

Trail Blazers 118, Knicks 110

Injury-plagued Portland was led by Tom Owens' 34 points and moved within one-half game if San Diego in the race for the final Western Conference playoff spot despite the absence of Maurice Lucas and Lionel Hollins. The Trail Blazers blew an 18-point lead before Dave Twardzik threw in two long-range jumpers and added six free throws in the last four minutes to seal the victory. The Knicks suffered their 40th setback, one more than all last season. They still have 14 games remaining.

National Invitation Tourney, Truly National, Begins Tonight

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The nation's oldest post-season basketball tourney, the 42-year-old National Invitation Tournament, gets under way tonight and, for a change, it is truly national in scope.

The NIT, which has been criticized in the past for loading up with Eastern teams when the entire tourney was held at New York's Madison Square Garden, has gone national in recent years, holding the first round or two at various sites around the country and bringing only the survivors to the Big Apple.

This year, the NIT boasts a 24-team field, including 16th-ranked Purdue. The Boilermakers will host Mid-American Conference runnerup Central Michigan in one of Thursday night's six opening-round games.

Tonight's six-game schedule features the meeting at Lexington, Ky., between Clemson (17-9) and fast-coming Kentucky (19-11), which narrowly missed a chance to defend its 1977-78 NCAA crown by losing a 75-69 overtime thriller to Tennessee in the final game of last week's Southeastern Conference post-season tourney.

The rest of tonight's slate finds St. Joseph's (19-10) at Ohio State (17-10), Rhode Island (20-8) at Maryland (18-10), Northeast Louisiana (23-5) at Virginia (18-9), Nevada-Reno (20-6) at Oregon State (18-9) and Wagner (21-6) at Old Dominion (21-6).

On Thursday night, it's Central Michigan (19-8) at Purdue (19-7), Texas A&M (22-8) at New Mexico (19-9), St. Bonaventure (19-8) at Alabama (19-10), Indiana (18-12) at Texas Tech (19-10), Holy Cross (17-10) at Dayton (18-9) and Cinderella Alcorn State, one of the nation's two major unbeaten teams with a 27-0 mark, at Mississippi State (19-8).

Central Michigan "won" its NIT berth Tuesday night by losing 72-65 to Toledo in a play-off at Ann Arbor, Mich., to decide the MAC champ. Both teams finished the regular season with 13-3 league records. The winners gained a berth in the NCAA Tournament, which begins Friday.

Toledo trailed 37-28 at half-time but Stan Joplin scored 15 points in the second half to spark the Rockets' comeback in which they outscored the Chipewas 14-3 over the final five minutes.

"We made mistakes on offense in the first half," said Toledo Coach Bob Nichols. "We weren't attacking the basket. In the second half, we did better going to the basket."

The regular season also came to an end Tuesday night when Tony Smith and Brett Vroman combined for 47 points to lead Nevada-Las Vegas to a 91-89 victory over Colorado State. Smith scored 27 points and Vroman added 20 as UNLV, 22-8, held on after leading by 16 points late in the first half.

The Rams, sparked by the 32-point performance of Barry Young, climbed within 90-89 with six seconds left before Smith hit an insurance free throw.

Kentucky climaxed what Coach Joe B. Hall called a rebuilding year by coming within an eyelash of winning the SEC tourney — and an automatic NCAA berth — after upsetting nationally ranked Louisiana State in the semifinals.

The Wildcats are led by guards Kyle Macy and Truman Claytor, a pair of long-range bombers, but will be hurt by the absence of lightning-quick freshman Dwight Anderson, their No. 2 scorer, who suffered a broken wrist in the opening second against LSU.

"To be picked for a national tournament at the end of the season is a compliment to the way this young club has come together," Hall said.

Defeats Haunt Vegas Coach Jerry Tarkanian

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — "Pay attention," demanded Prof. Jerry Tarkanian between halves of Nevada-Las Vegas' game with San Diego State. "Maybe if we get our heads in the game we can go out and do it."

"I would love to see us play 20 full minutes of basketball. Dammit, you've got to get yourself ready to play."

This is Tarkanian's classroom. Nowhere else are his eyes so alive, his spirit so high and his personality so dominating.

The lecture wasn't inspirational Knute Rockne, and it wasn't very successful as UNLV lost to San Diego 94-91 last month for the third home loss of the season, the most games any Tarkanian-coached team had ever lost at home.

"This is an all-time low," moaned Tarkanian after the Rebels' record dropped to 17-7. Tarkanian, who has the highest winning percentage of any active coach, brought a major college career mark of 244-44 into the 1978-79 season. That's in five years at Long Beach State — where he never lost a home game — and five years at UNLV.

After the loss, Tarkanian was near tears. Constantly haunted by his troubles with the NCAA, Tarkanian used to be able to take solace in the fact his team was winning consistently.

"We've been through so much; I just don't know how much we have left to draw on," said Tarkanian's wife, Lois, who has been the coach's most vocal defender throughout his troubles with the NCAA because of alleged rules violations at Long Beach State and UNLV.

"I never was paranoid, but because of this NCAA thing, I think everyone's out to get me now," Tarkanian said.

Since Tarkanian became a major college coach, 12 of his players have played in either the National or American Basketball Associations, although only Ricky Sobers and Reggie Theus have really starred in the pros. At UNLV, 14 of his players have been drafted. NBA scouts like his teams because they play a fast-paced game.

His Runnin' Rebels have been near the top of the team scoring charts all season, even though he says he doesn't have a good shooting club. In the 1975-76 season, UNLV set an NCAA record, averaging 110.5 points a game. The next season, the Rebels had at least 100 points in a record 12 straight games, reached the Final Four of the NCAA Tournament and had a record six players drafted by the NBA.

At Long Beach, Tarkanian used a 1-2-2 zone and a power forward offense. He adapted his style to the personnel he inherited at Vegas in 1973, the Rebels became the Runnin' Rebels and Tarkanian became a believer. This fast town fell in love with the fast game and would scream if the Rebels tried a slow down. So Tark recruits greyhounds, most of whom happen to be black players who love to run and gun.

Jack Opens Inverrary Defense Amid Criticism Of His Playing

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, winner of the last two Jackie Gleason-Inverrary Golf Classics, not only is the defending champion, but also seems just a bit defensive coming into this week's chase for a $54,000 first prize.

Nicklaus, winner of almost everything the game has to offer and generally considered the finest player golf has ever known, has been the subject of considerable criticism for the reduced schedule — if that's what it is — he's playing this year.

"Coming into this tournament, I've played as much golf this year as I did last," Nicklaus said before a practice session over the 7,127-yard, par-72 Inverrary Country Club course, site of the 72-hole test that begins Thursday.

That involves the late fall and early winter.

One tournament in question is the prestigious World Series of Golf in September. At the moment, it isn't on his schedule.

"I haven't yet qualified for it," Nicklaus pointed out. "Let's talk about it when and if I qualify." Last year he commuted between the World Series in Akron, Ohio, and his home in Florida in order to watch his sons play high school football. And, again, he drew some criticism.

The same situation could exist this year and that, obviously, was in his mind when he said: "I don't want to go through that again."

Nicklaus has added one event to his schedule, the Tournament of Champions the week following the Masters. Other additions are possible.

He has played twice coming into this event, but failed to finish in the top 10 in either the Bob Hope Desert Classic or last week's Bay Hill Citrus Classic. He moved into a contending position early in the final round, then blew to a fat 78 that took him out of it.

"Obviously, I didn't play very well," he said.

This week he's playing on one of his more productive courses, a layout on which he is unbeaten in three years. Not only has he won the last two Gleason's, he also won the 1976 Tournament Players Championship on the same course.

"Generally, I feel I'm playing pretty well, striking the ball pretty well. I just need some tournament competition," he said.

Six winners of 1979 titles — Ben Crenshaw, Lon Hinkle, Bruce Lietzke, Bob Byman, Lanny Wadkins and Fuzzy Zoeller — top the strong field that opposes Nicklaus.

Other standouts include Lee Elder, Ray Floyd, Hale Irwin, Gil Morgan, U.S. Open champ Andy North, Jerry Pate, Lee Trevino, Tom Weiskopf and Andy Bean. Tom Watson, John Mahaffey and Hubert Green are not competing.

CBS will provide national television coverage of portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

Hall Of Fame Vets Committee Sets Vote

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Three sluggers known for their muscle but who each finished distinguished careers with lifetime batting averages over .300 were the top possibilities when the Hall of Fame Veterans Committee met today.

Hack Wilson, Johnny Mize and Chuck Klein were overlooked by the writers in the Hall of Fame balloting, but they were expected to be strongly considered by the 18-member committee, comprised of six former players, six executives and six writers. The committee requires 75 percent affirmative votes from the attending members for election.

Klein batted .320 and belted 300 homers in 17 seasons with Philadelphia, Chicago and Pittsburgh in the National League. In his first six seasons, he hit .360, .356, .386, .337, .348 and .368. With Philadelphia in 1929, the left-handed hitting outfielder slugged 43 homers, knocked in 145 runs and batted .356. The next year, he had 40 homers, 170 RBI and a .386 batting average.

Hack Wilson played 12 seasons for New York, Chicago, Brooklyn and Philadelphia in the NL, finishing with lifetime marks of 244 homers and a .307 batting average. In 1930, the right-handed hitting outfielder had 56 homers, an alltime high 190 RBI and .356 average.

Mize, a left-handed hitting first baseman, played 18 seasons with St. Louis, the Giants and Yankees, finishing with a career total of 359 homers and a lifetime batting average of .313. In 1947, Mize belted 51 homers and knocked in 138 runs for the Giants.

Defeats Haunt Tarkanian...

point is his rapport with blacks. Many of his ex-players have become unofficial recruiters in black areas, spreading the word that Tark can be trusted. One coach likens Tarkanian to "a hoodlum priest. He knows some of his kids are bad, but he tries to build them into better people. Some of his kids are out-and-out punks but he'll protect them."

The two-year NCAA probation at UNLV — mostly for violations committed before Tarkanian came to Las Vegas — is supposed to end after this season. The probation prohibits the Rebels from playing in the NCAA Tournament that begins Friday and reduces their basketball scholarships to three a year.

The NCAA says one reason it has such a hard time getting the goods on Tarkanian is that his players are too loyal. Cash transactions aren't done in front of cheering crowds, either, the NCAA says.

"The boosters here will slip you something, just like everywhere else," said senior Eddie McLeod. "And when you go to the coach with a problem, he'll steer you to someone. Boosters know how to handle this type of thing. It's done privately."

Tarkanian says he's clean now. If a player asks for help, "I'll say 'you know people in this town as well as I do, keep me out of it.'" Either way, Tarkanian's attitude is that he either cannot or does not want to turn off the flow of illegal booster activities.

"It's really uncontrollable, there are rabid people in any town," he said.

Tarkanian says he was aware of his players being helped at Long Beach, things like plane rides which were arranged by an assistant coach, Ivan Duncan. "I knew the players didn't walk," he said.

But his philosophy is that these are actions taken for humanitarian reasons. "If I were a mathematics professor and tried to help one of my students with a problem, then I would be considered a caring educator," he said. "But I am a basketball coach, and if I care about my players, the NCAA calls me a 'cheat.'"

Tarkanian says, however, he draws the line at buying recruits.

"You can't coach bought players. They don't have respect for you or themselves," he said. "We've been in the running with kids being offered $50,000 (by another school) by selling them on having pride and dignity. But we don't usually get those kids. We have never gotten any of the superstar players to come here. Not one."

The AP interviewed a number of coaches who know Tar-

Softballers To Be Improved

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina University's women's softball team will be looking for a 20-game-plus winning season this year, despite the fact that only four regulars return from last season's 19-13 team.

Coach Alita Dillon said that while the team plays pretty much the same schedule as last year's, she looks for improvement from the Lady Pirates. "Nearly everyone else will be improved, too, but I'll still be disappointed if we don't win at least 20. I think we are capable of winning several more than we did last year."

While the women haven't had much time out on the field as yet, Dillon feels they've done well in practice so far. "They are not as far along as I'd like them to be, but I don't guess that they ever are. They'll be back on campus for practice on Sunday, and we've got several days before we play a scrimmage game, and then a few more before we open the season."

The first game on the schedule is on Tuesday, March 20, against Pembroke State, last year's Division II state champion. The four returning regulars from last year's team include pitcher Mary Bryan Carlyle, first baseman Theresa Whitley; left fielder Donna LaVictorie and short fielder Robin Faggart.

"The outfield will be fairly experienced," Dillon said. "We have two returning, plus several others who played some last year. The infield lost a lot of people, but we have some who played some and some other good new people, so we should be all right here too. We're young in the infield, but the players have a good background." Dillon is looking for a strong defense from the Lady Pirates, but hitting right now is a question mark. "If I had to put them into a batting order right now, it would be difficult," she said. "We just haven't had enough time on the field hitting yet. We lost several of our top hitters, although Whitley and LaVictorie are both good ones. We do have one or two newcomers who could be consistent long-ball hitters."

Jan McVeigh, who was the back-up at first base last year, has moved behind the plate this year to assume the catching duties. Carlyle will handle much of the pitching, but Dillon is hoping that Donna Eason, who is also slated for utility work, will come along as her backup.

Whitley returns to first base, while Cindy Meekins, who will also be a backup at third, behind her.

Janis Paron, a freshman, appears slated for second base, with Tricia Pearce behind her. Mary Powell will handle the shortstop duties. A transfer from Coastal Carolina College, she played as a freshman at UNC-Greensboro on the state championship team. "She and Mary Bryan played last summer on a team that went to the world tournament and finished fourth," Dillon added.

LuAnn Davis, who was a backup last year, takes over at third, with freshman Maureen Buck challenging her for the spot.

In left, LaVictorie returns, with freshman Kim Holmes as a backup. Shirley Brown, a freshman, and veteran Jo Carol Barrow are battling for the centerfield spot, while Addie Carter, who saw some action, will be in right.

"Lillian Barnes, who is coming off basketball, may challenge in the outfield once she gets acclimated to softball. She played a lot last year."

Faggart will handle the short field position, with Lynn Hurdle as backup, while Dawn Cayton could play any one of the outfield spots.

"I really think we have the makings of a good year," Dillon said. "Having our new field ready to play on, and having it on campus will help us a lot. I think interest in the sport will improve because of it. It won't be so hard for the students to come to games, and people passing by on Charles Blvd. will see us and maybe stop in. There won't be any admission charged."

"I really think we can have a good team," she said.

Purdue's football players were originally called either "Blacksmiths," "Rail Splitters" or "Boilermakers" and wound up settling for the last of those three.

—He is one of the best technical coaches in America.

—He does allow illegal things to go on with his players, but it's small scale compared to many other schools. Several of the coaches listed Kentucky, UCLA and USC as the biggest violators.

—The NCAA's punishment does not fit Tarkanian's crimes. He has been unfairly singled out by the NCAA.

—He genuinely cares about the welfare and pro aspirations of his players but is less concerned about their education.

Few Student Defaults Said 'Willfull'

By ELIZABETH LELAND
Associated Press Writer
The number of students who willfully default on federally-funded student loans is small, according to the executive director of the North Carolina Educational Assistance Authority.

"Many of the defaulters we run into are those who are having difficulty finding a job, or are underemployed, or are foolish enough to extend their credit beyond their ability," director Stan Broadway said Tuesday.

"So the student loan suddenly falls at the bottom of the priority heap," he said. "Unemployment, underemployment and inflation all work against students paying back their loans." Five North Carolina colleges are among 275 in the nation with default rates above 50 percent on National Direct Student Loans as of June 30, 1978, according to a list released Monday by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. In all, more than 800,000 ex-students across the nation owe about $702 million on loans that date back as far as 1959.

The amount of the loans outstanding from North Carolina was not available. North Carolina colleges with default rates above 50 percent are Durham College, 65 percent; Guilford Technical Institute, 56; North Carolina A&T, 52; North Carolina Central, 51; Roanoke-Chowan Technical Institute, 63, and Shaw University, 64. The average rate in the state is 23 percent. Officials of at least one North Carolina college are so frustrated with the high default rate that they plan to discontinue participation in the NDSL program. Guilford Tech President J. James Owen said he believes there are other, more efficient ways of helping students. Other colleges are working on ways to collect the outstanding debts — either by mailing payment requests to ex-students or by depending on the federal government's help in tracking down the former students. "We will consider whatever alternative is required to bring down the default rate," said Alberta Dalton, director of financial aid at North Carolina A&T in Greensboro. Five weeks ago, HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. announced that he was stepping up a drive to improve the National Direct Student Loan collection rate. HEW plans to take over the collection of loans that have been in default the longest. The state attorney general's office, as lawyer for state schools, has taken students to court over the years in an effort to collect outstanding debts. But, as Blackwell put it, "We turn them (students) over to the attorney general and he has to decide whether to go after a drug trafficker or a loan defaulter."

Registration

Stokes Elementary School will hold pre-school registration Wednesday, March 28, from 8 a.m. to 12 noon.

Those children who live in the Stokes attendance area and will be five years old on or before Oct. 16, 1979 are asked to bring his/her birth certificate and shot record to the school. Children who enter kindergarten are required to have the following shots: three DPT's, three polio, one for rubella (German measles) and one for rubella (red measles).

Community Funds

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The town of Milwaukee no longer exists in North Carolina law, but its treasury is still in the bank.

The tiny Northampton County town of Milwaukee was chartered in 1915 and had its charter abolished in 1971. But the town's revenues have remained solid, growing with interest from less than $2,000 to $4,592.83 today.

So to do something with all that money, Rep. Guy Revelle, D-Northampton, introduced a bill in the General Assembly Tuesday. It would authorize the money, now in a bank in Woodland, N.C., to be given to the Bethany United Methodist Church.

The money may only be used, the bill says, for the upkeep of the old Milwaukee town cemetery, which the church is now maintaining.

"They've been after me for five years to get that money for them," Revelle said Tuesday. "I tried to get them to have that charter renewed. But there just isn't any leadership in the town."

There aren't many of the others, either. Revelle said the town population is now about 50 or 60 persons.

"They're all real good old country people," he said. Milwaukee, or what remains of it, is located three miles south of Conway on N.C. 35. In its better days, Revelle said, Milwaukee's main industry was a basket-manufacturing plant.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: J equals N

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Airlines Are Curbing Service

By The Associated Press
Fuel shortages have forced two additional air carriers — United and Delta — to cancel hundreds of flights, and airline industry officials are predicting the tight supply picture could endanger some cheap fares and plans to expand routes.

"The idea is to save fuel," said United's Williams. "Shell Oil has told us we can't get our normal supply of fuel temporarily, so we're cutting back through the end of the month."

He said the schedule reduction went into effect Saturday with no problems and future cancellations will be determined by bookings. "If we have several flights to the same city, we'll cancel one flight and try to book the passengers on an earlier or later one," he said.

United will not cancel service to cities with only one flight a day, or to locations where bookings are heavy, he said. Spokesmen for the Air Transport Association, which represents the nation's scheduled carriers, said the cancellations represent only a fraction of the 13,500 daily flights nationwide. "We expect adequate supplies with only spot shortages," said Daniel Henkin. "To date, we are experiencing only temporary problems. We've been able to meet more than 99 percent of our flights." Airline officials say it's too early to tell how long the tight fuel situation — precipitated by oil production slowdowns in Iran — will persist or what the ultimate impact may be. However, a Delta official said if the fuel picture doesn't improve, the airline could be forced to delay plans to add flights and routes to its system.

Cemetery Vase Thefts Add Up

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — The value of bronze vases placed on graves has attracted the interest of thieves in Gaston County, according to officials.

A Gastonia police spokesman said the vases disappear from local cemeteries and never reappear on the local marketplace.

According to police records, 77 vases disappeared from Westview Cemetery in Gaston County in 1977, followed last December by 400 stolen from Hillcrest Cemetery in Mount Holly.

But police say a considerably higher number of the vases, which have a wholesale value between $30 and $45, may have been taken.

The problem is nationwide, police say, but North Carolina and Florida have reported the largest number of cemetery-vase thefts.

Cemetery operators say many of the grave thefts go unreported in order to avoid publicity.

Many cemetery owners, including some on the N.C. Cemetery Commission, said they suspect an unscrupulous foundry operator is melting the vases and selling the bronze. Gaston County sources have said that the vases are reprocessed in West Virginia, the site of several small foundries.

But West Virginia police records show no cemetery-vase thefts, and police in that state said there have been no reports that foundries are receiving stolen vases to be melted down.

Marvin Kaiman, president of a scrap-processing facility in Pensacola, Fla., dismissed the theory of the foundry connection.

"In Florida, we've tracked the stolen vases to the flea markets, because they're worth more there than melted down," Kaiman said.

Meanwhile, North Carolina and Florida authorities are looking for a ring of professional thieves that moves its operation around the country taking cemetery vases.

ANNIVERSARY SUNDAY

The Simpson Gospel Singers will celebrate their 10th anniversary Sunday at 2 p. m. at English Chapel F.W.B. Church.

The president, Thomas Best, invites the public.

Pursch, the head of the facility's alcohol and drug rehabilitation unit.

Pursch also was in charge of caring for Mrs. Ford in 1978 and Sen. Talmadge of Georgia earlier this year. Both suffered from alcoholism problems. In addition, the former first lady became dependent on drugs taken to relieve arthritic pain.

Medical experts consider the Long Beach facility's alcoholism treatment program one of the best in the country.

Lt. Cmdr. F.W. Ohnemus, officer of the day at the medical facility, said he could not say for certain under what authority the president's brother was brought to the hospital. But he added, "The secretary of defense can designate whoever he wants to be admitted, and I am assuming he was a secretary-designate."

As to who would pay the bill for Carter's treatment, Ohnemus said, "I assume he will receive a bill the same as any other civilian at the rate of $266 a day. Whether he will pay it or an insurance company will pay it, I don't know at this time."

Carter was admitted only hours after leaving the Americus-Sumter County Hospital in Americus, Ga., where he underwent 10 days of treatment for bronchitis, hospital administrator James Griffith said.

The Washington Star reported last week that White House physician William Lukash had been seeking help for Carter from specialists in alcohol rehabilitation. At a recent press conference, President Carter said his brother was "seriously ill" but he did not elaborate.

By The Associated Press
Drier air continued to move eastward across North Carolina today behind the cold front that brought the recent rains. This morning, the front was located just off the coast where showers lingered.

per plains area this morning and it should be moving across the mid-Atlantic states on Thursday. This could bring showers to North Carolina, possibly starting in the mountains tonight.

The scattered rain along the coast this morning was expected to be followed by considerable cloudiness during the day, while some clearing was expected inland.

Temperatures were expected to climb to the 50s before dropping tonight to the 30s.

Friday is expected to be fair, with cloudy weather over the weekend.

Billy Carter Admitted To Alcohol Abuse Care

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Billy Carter, the president's beer-guzzling brother, has been admitted to the alcohol abuse center where Betty Ford and Sen. Herman Talmadge underwent intensive treatment.

The 41-year-old Carter, who once said his beer drinking has been exaggerated but that "some days maybe I drink 20 to 25 beers," was spirited into the sprawling Long Beach Naval Hospital Tuesday evening while reporters were kept away from the admitting area.

A brief statement released by the hospital said only that Carter "has been admitted as a voluntary patient" and was under the care of Dr. Joseph

Advices Learn Enough To Set Own Pace In Fitness

By FRED T. FERGUSON
NEW YORK (UPI) — The average American is going to have to decide for him or herself what is a common-sense approach to fitness and health.

At least, that is the opinion of Dr. Robert Arnot. He'll be glad to provide a few tips along the way, as will lots of others. And he's pretty strong about what he believes.

But he says that when 300 doctors at a Boston marathon for the medical professions were asked how they would approach physical fitness last year, there were just about 300 different answers.

As for massive national funding and organized education on fitness, both of which he'd like to see, he says, "it just isn't going to happen, at least, any time real soon."

"There was a lot of talk about it at the Kennedy conference in Washington last fall, but when it came down to who was going to do it, there was just no one equipped or capable of tackling it," he said. Lacking a tremendous number of trainers and enough of the kind of training centers and education on fitness to do the job in schools and out, he believes people probably are best off learning enough about fitness to plan their own exercise program.

The average general practitioner — and most other doctors, for that matter — is going to be "safe and conservative" but not necessarily right on how to go about getting fit, he says.

Because of this, he even suggests, if you lack the wherewithal for a fitness specialist, that you seek a doctor's advice only when they have an injury or health problem.

Who is this Arnot? He's just 30, looks younger. Handsome, dashing, debonair

Can't Trust A Flippant Sign

ABINGDON, Va. (AP) — The boy insisted that the marquee he'd seen outside an office-supplies business here proclaimed "Only 150 More Shopping Days Until Easter," but his father didn't believe it.

The father was sure his son misread the sign, and that it probably had something to do with the number of shopping days until Christmas.

The father was wrong. It was not the first time the marquee, which has its message changed every week or so, had caused some confusion. When it said, "Welcome Greta Garbo," a woman called the business and became irate when she learned the actress was not coming after all.

Sam Guza, who runs the business, said he started putting flippant messages on the marquee simply for fun.

"It's becoming a problem to try and top myself," he admitted.

and a twinkling eye, dimpled smile. He must have been the idol of the girls when he was at Dartmouth and McGill, where he picked up degrees. He's also a world class cross-country skier.

More to the point, he is director of sports medicine for the U.S. Winter Olympics.

And he is a recognized authority in the field of clinical sports physiology, physician for the U.S. Ski Team, director of Lake Placid Sports Medicine, sports physiology consultant to Massachusetts General Hospital.

He's doing some exciting research at the moment on the effects of exercise stress on athletes and its utilization in designing individualized training programs.

Arnot says it's just fine that the number of fitness freaks has more than doubled since the '60s. But what's needed now is for those doing all this exercise to start really working on getting fit by picking up some knowledge about how to do it. Not that some don't, but that so many more could do it and avoid injury in the process.

Arnot delivered a drumfire lecture on some of the new developments of determining what an athlete can do and how he can best be trained at a conference to announce the findings of a Louis Harris Fitness in America poll for the Perrier bottled water company.

For example, "We've got to get away from the idea of running just to try to slim down."

The survey said 59 percent of all adult Americans are now into fitness in one way or another.

Arnot said the East Germans and the Russians, in whose sports medicine labs he has spent a lot of time studying, have demonstrated that the incidence of disease can be greatly reduced through massive fitness education and training programs.

Despite his belief that America's present approach to fitness is all wrong and the nation is "way behind the ball" when compared with other countries, he's hopeful. But he says this country needs to get with it quick.

He believes billions of dollars can be saved, social security and medical insurance programs protected and hospital costs and facilities alleviated if more Americans can find a way to achieve fitness.

Lacking a massive federal program emulating, say, the East Germans, he believes what is beginning to happen is that Americans are taking over their own fitness destiny.

"The general public is much smarter than it is given credit for," he says. "It's what they are going to do for themselves that will work."

"The Scandinavians say train

It would help, he says, if grade schools taught more about how the heart, lung and brain work and if the biology of human activity were taught more thoroughly in high schools. But barring that, "we can learn from commercial television and the press."

"What I say is that, if people are shown a very legitimate, scientific approach to fitness, then they will listen. What we want to encourage is a very slow, gradual approach to fitness, a change in lifestyle."

He gives an example. "Just about anyone can knock off five pounds pretty quick, but what good is it going to do for you? Most of it won't stay off."

"The safest way is to lose about a quarter of a pound a week, but not for how thin it's going to make you, for how fit you will be."

"I hope what the public will say is, 'I don't need any of this sophisticated equipment to get started on fitness for health.'"

"You can take a calorie book, figure out how many calories you eat each day and get a chart, figure out how many calories you use up running or doing some other exercise in an hour. The average American now eats about 3,500 calories a day. But after 21, most people use about 500 calories a day less than that. They need to use up those calories."

a lot, eat a lot." He tells of an Olympic weightlifter who eats 11,000 calories a day, of an oarsman who consumes 7,000. But they are in great shape because they work it all off. Not that he's suggesting the novice fitness freak do anything like that.

He notes everyone is different. Each program needs to be tailored to the individual. "It's a terribly individual thing."

From experience, most people find out how many calories they use up and can compensate with the appropriate amount of exercise.

The kind of exercise is another matter. He talks of muscle fiber studies which show some people are unsuited to, say, distance running while others will not achieve anything with weightlifting. To some extent, this becomes apparent by what you do best, although for world class athletes there are scientific and complex tests that can be used.

What good will it all do? He likes to cite a Harvard study. "It shows you could start at 30, 35 even 45 and live longer. But the key really is how well you can perform."

"And it's clear to me that a certain amount of exercise correlates not only with better health but an improved mental fix and a feeling of well being."

Consumption Of Wine Growing

NEW YORK (AP) — The consumption of wine will register the highest annual growth-rate among America's favorite beverages from now until 1990, according to an industry magazine.

Soft drinks, however, will continue to be the nation's top beverage, gaining from a per capita intake of 36 gallons in 1978 to 50 gallons by 1990, says the publication Impact.

Wines are expected to show an annual growth rate of 8 percent, enjoying benefits from increased social and mealtime usage, it was explained.

Pioneer Sub Heading For Final Berth

By DAN HALL

Associated Press Writer
GROTON, Conn. (AP) —
After a quarter-century without conflict, the world's first nuclear-powered submarine finds itself in the midst of a battle over its final resting place.

Two of the leading site proposals for the USS Nautilus are Groton, where it first slid into the water 25 years ago on Jan.
21, and Annapolis, Md., home of the U.S. Naval Academy. Locations in California, South Carolina and Washington State also are being touted.

If Navy Secretary W. Graham Claytor has made a decision, he isn't saying what will happen to the sleek No. 571, which left a wake of records after paving the way for the nuclear underwater navy.

In fact, he said recently the Nautilus might be kept in service for another five years if the Navy Department decided to recondition older nuclear attack submarines as an economy move.

"Any decision on possible retention of the USS Nautilus will be made prior to her scheduled summer deactivation," he said in a statement.

But a former submariner who is leading the effort to bring the aging submarine back to its birthplace is skeptical.

"It's an iron coffin now. Another five years..." said contractor and developer Frank Sheetz, who retired as a chief quartermaster 21 years ago.

He set up a nonprofit group to display the USS Croaker, a World War II submarine, and now wants to place the history-making Nautilus at the Croaker's Thames River mooring.

He has even leased his nearby restaurant to demonstrate that he wasn't interested in financial gain in bringing the Nautilus to Groton.

Meanwhile, another group including a number of admirals has created a USS Nautilus National Monument Committee that favors placing 571 in Annapolis, said Melinda Hamilton, vice chairman of the group.

As a national monument, the submarine would have to go on a federal site and would be maintained by federal personnel, much like the Revolutionary warship Constitution in Boston Harbor.

Sheetz argues the taxpayers would have to bear the cost "in perpetuity." He said he would prefer the Nautilus be maintained without cost to taxpayers, but would not oppose making it a national monument if that's what it takes to get it in Groton.

Retired Lt. Cmdr. Stuart N.
Nelson of Norwich is a former Nautilus crew member who favors the Annapolis proposal.

"I believe that that boat, like any other history-making part of this country, should be a national monument," he said.
"We have an institution for old airplanes, for civil war equipment. Why shouldn't we have a Smithsonian for submarines?"

At a Nautilus crew reunion in August, a majority also backed the Annapolis proposal, Nelson said.

Groups in Charleston, S.C., Bremerton, Wash., San Diego and San Francisco also have put in bids for the Nautilus, the Navy says.

The interest isn't purely historic or patriotic. "Somebody is going to make money," Nelson said.

Unofficial predictions on the amount of tourist wealth that should come in on the Nautilus range up to $60 million yearly.

Fellowship For Satellite Plan

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.
(UPI) — Dr. John R. Pierce, the Des Moines, Iowa, scientist, who offered the first concrete proposals for satellite communications two years before the first satellite was launched, has been named winner of the fifth annual $25,000 Marconi International Fellowship.

The award, named after Guglielmo Marconi, inventor of the wireless, will help finance new work of an international dimension that will benefit mankind, according to Intellectual Property Owners, a non-profit organization dedicated to the preservation of patents.

The fellowship was founded by Mrs. Gioia Marconi Braga, daughter of the Italian inventor, and is funded with $500,000 from 26 corporations and organizations from 10 different countries.

Sale ends Saturday,
March 10th.
We reserve the right to limit quantities.

Fuel-Waste By Tractors In Capital

By PAMELA J. HUEY
CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (UPI) — The American Agriculture Movement's tractorcade to the nation's capital is over but a flap goes on as to one aspect — fuel waste by the clanking vehicles.

President Carter's chief inflation fighter, Alfred Kahn, chided farm protestors for wasting fuel when they traveled to Washington to demonstrate.

But, an AAM member in Illinois argued that if leaders in Washington had done their job they would not have to worry about tractorcades or the demonstrating farmers.

"I would say that the tractors do not bode well for food prices, or even for energy consumption in the United States today," Kahn said in Washington.

"If government would have listened to us without this (the tractorcade) and enacted the 1977 farm bill, they could have saved the whole mess," retorted farmer Vince Klay in Illinois' Christian County.

Still, there has been criticism, both in government and from the general public, of some of the farmers' tactics — especially the use of large, expensive machinery to protest low farm prices.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland said the demonstrations had been very damaging for the farmer in terms of public relations.

"They can't be all that bad off when they drive around on $30,000 tractors," said one Champaign resident recently.

At the request of UPI, Royce Hinton, a University of Illinois farm management economist, calculated the cost of operating a 100-horsepower, $30,000 tractor, taking into consideration fuel consumption, depreciation of the implement, repairs, tire wear and interest on the investment.

First, Hinton cautioned his cost figures applied to normal farm activities and not to driving on Interstate highways. For normal farm use and without considering fuel consumption, Hinton said such a tractor costs between $9 and $11 an hour to operate.

Assuming the farmer paid 60 cents per gallon for diesel fuel (figure includes tax on the fuel), and burned five gallons per hour, the farmer paid about $3 per hour in fuel costs.

Hinton then added the $3-per-hour fuel cost to the initial $11 cost-of-operation figure, and calculated it would cost the farmer $14 an hour to operate the tractor on his trip to Washington. If the farmer averaged 20 mph, the approximate cost would be 60 cents per mile.

Taking that one step further, if the farmer traveled from Springfield to Washington and back again — a distance of 1,516 miles — the travel cost would be $909.60.

"It's not a very economical way to travel," Hinton said.

However, Klay said tractors make much better mileage traveling on interstate highways than they do in the field.

Klay, whose wife, Janet, traveled to Washington for the protest activities, said the farmer held the key to the nation's energy woes through the production of gasohol (a blend of 90 percent gasoline and 10 percent ethanol) and/or the production of just straight ethanol (grain alcohol).

If the federal government lifted present restrictions, farmers could build old-fashioned stills on their farms and become energy self-sufficient in no time, he said.

"Our big problem is the government is being manipulated by the large oil companies," Klay also disagreed with contentions the farmers had done more harm than good while protesting in Washington.

His wife told him reaction all the way had been positive and capital city residents offered to open their homes to the protesters.

As for the use of expensive tractors, Klay said, "The tractor is the tool of the farmer's trade. He must have good tools. It's not a prestige item."

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Wyandotte County District Court Judge John Mahoney has had his gavel stolen from the top of his bench.

Mahoney believes it disappeared a day before he discovered the loss, but he admits it could have been missing for as long as 10 days.

"I don't have much use for it to pound lawyers into submission," he said, chucking.

Oil-Pricing Makes Alternatives More Reasonable

By MARK POTTS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Higher oil prices and spot shortages brought on by the shutdown of Iranian oil production are focusing interest on several alternate forms of supply that a few years ago were little more than dreams.

While commercial solar, wind and geothermal power are decades away, other alternate sources — like oil from tar sand and shale, and natural gas made from coal — may be practical in the next few years.

"The Iranian situation points up the United States' vulnerability," says Gary Ross, an analyst for the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation, an industry group. "Therefore, from both economic and political considerations, we have to look more favorably on alternate energy sources."

The sources of two of the three most practical sources are plentiful in the United States: oil shale and coal. And large deposits of tar sand lie just over the border in Canada.

Known in the trade as synfuels — short for synthetic fuels — the three processes involve producing ordinary types of crude oil and natural gas from unlikely sources. Shale oil production involves mining oil-bearing shale and using heat to squeeze the oil out of the rock. Experts estimate there is enough oil shale in Wyoming, Colorado and Utah to supply the United States' oil needs for nearly a century.

To get oil out of tar sand — also known as bitumen — the heavy, sticky sand is washed with hot water to separate the sand and oil. In coal gasification, the coal is smashed to bits and heated until it turns into a mixture of gases. The better quality gases can be mixed with natural gas to augment supply of that fuel. The low-quality gases produced can be used to power the gasification plant itself.

Although the technology for synfuels has been in place for several years — small-scale coal gasification projects existed before World War II — the cost has been seen as prohibitive. The price tag on extracting crude oil from shale, for example, is estimated by most experts to be about $20 a barrel.

That's 50 percent higher than the $13.35 a barrel OPEC began charging Jan. 1. But the Iranian situation is narrowing the margin. Independent price increases by many oil-producing nations have raised their prices to nearly $15 a barrel. And the Iranian-caused shortage of supply on the spot oil market has pushed some prices there up over $20 a barrel. General crude-oil prices may not be far behind.

"If we end up in that range, it will send the right signals through the private sector and maybe we'll get some oil from shale out of the ground in about five years," said Arnold E. Saffer, an analyst at Irving Trust Co.

The cost of getting oil from tar sands is several dollars more per barrel than with shale. Gas produced from coal costs about $5 per 1,000 cubic feet, some three times what natural gas now costs.

But Eugene Nowak, who analyzes energy for the Blyth Eastman Dillon brokerage house, feels these methods may be practical soon, too. "Every time the price of a major fuel like petroleum rises, it does bring us somewhat closer to development of other energy sources," he said. "At some point it could trigger a substantial effort in one of these fuels."

Opposition from some parts of the oil industry and a meager amount of encouragement from the Department of Energy, analysts say, has retarded growth in the technologies that could bring prices down still further.

And production of these forms of fuel on a full-scale commercial basis is still at least a decade away, although pilot plants are already in operation.

"It's a longer-term proposition," says Ross. "It can't help us today, but it can help us in the future."

Says Nowak: "We ought to be thinking about these things very hard very simply because of the long time lags involved." Nowak says that the large amounts of capital involved in starting full-scale production of synfuels may be more than one company can bear. "One of the problems, of course, is that these are massive projects, these are billion-dollar projects," he says. So he suggests that it could take a consortium of companies — or government incentives — to bring synfuels into commercial production.

In addition to price constraints, synfuels have other problems, many of them environmental. Strip-mining to get at shale and tar sand is not looked on favorably by environmentalists, and the manufacturing processes for those fuels and coal gasification can cause pollution.

Similar, but more acute problems, are dooming a much more common fuel source, coal, which has been all but written off by the energy industry and government as a long-term answer to energy problems.

But backers of synfuels think their problems are surmountable. And at the right price, analysts say, synfuels could play a significant part in the nation's energy picture. "It's just a matter of trying to get them out," says Nowak. "That costs money."

Opening lead: King of ♣.

As a defender, your play at trick one simply shows whether or not you like partner's lead. However, third hand's signal is not an absolute command. On this hand, West could have defeated the contract had he ignored partner's disinterest. North showed his extra values for his takeout double by voluntarily raising partner's one spade response. Since South might have had nothing when, in fact, he was close to a jump response, he was fully justified in going on to game.

West led the king of hearts and East played the discouraging two. West dutifully shifted to the queen of clubs, won by the king. Dummy's queen of spades lost to the ace, and West continued with another club to the ace.

Declarer drew the outstanding trumps, then surrendered a trick to the ace of hearts. West had no more clubs, so he exited with a diamond. Declarer won in dummy, discarded two clubs from his hand on dummy's high hearts and claimed the contract.

Instead of blindly switching the attack after he received a discouraging signal on the opening lead, West should have considered ways to neutralize the threat posed by dummy's hearts.

East was virtually certain to have length in hearts, so declarer could not be prevented from getting one discard on the hearts. West's plan should have been to see that declarer did not utilize both of dummy's hearts.

All West had to do was to continue with the ace of hearts at trick two, and then lead a third round of the suit. Declarer can get one club discard, but he cannot take another before trumps have been extracted. But when declarer leads a trump, West wins the ace and returns a fourth round of hearts. East ruffs dummy's winner and South is forced to overruff. Now South still has three clubs in his hand, and try as he might, he cannot avoid surrendering a club trick for down one.

MTM Show Falls Short In Ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — Mary Tyler Moore's first effort of the season, a comedy-variety show on CBS called "Mary," lasted only a few weeks. The extraordinary Miss Moore returned to prime-time Sunday, and the ratings for her new show were far from spectacular.

"The Mary Tyler Moore Hour" on CBS was 29th of 63 programs rated by the A.C. Nielsen Co. during the week ending March 4.

Indeed, another CBS show "Stockard Channing in Just Friends," did much better, 14th in the ratings.

CBS, in fact, had four shows in the Top 15, including No. 5 "60 Minutes" and "All in the Family" in ninth place. But it was ABC, with seven of the week's 10 top-rated shows, that came in first over-all.

That's nothing new. ABC has been first eight weeks in a row, and 20 of 25 weeks this season.

The week was marked by a return to normal programming. February was perhaps the most competitive month in the medium's history, with programs like "Roots: The Next Generations" on ABC up against major miniseries, and first-run movies.

The week's top-rated show was ABC's "Three's Company," and the network's "Mork and Mindy," No. 1 the previous three weeks, dropped to fourth. ABC's rating for the week was 20.8, followed by CBS' 18.1 and NBC's 17.5.

The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 20.8 percent of the TV-equipped homes in the country were tuned to ABC.

NBC scored a moderate success with a two-hour pilot, "Mrs. Columbo," but the first regularly scheduled episode in the comedy-mystery series finished 45th.

Both NBC and CBS had two programs among the bottom five in the ratings: CBS' "Kaz" was No. 59, followed by NBC's "Supertrain," "Makin' It" on ABC, "Leopard of the Wild" on NBC and "Boston and Kill-bride" on CBS.

Here are the week's Top 10 shows:

- "Three's Company," with a rating of 32.5 representing 24.2 million homes, "Laverne & Shirley," 31.4 or 23.4 million, "Happy Days," 29.7 or 22.1 million, and "Mork and Mindy," 29 or 21.6 million, all ABC; "60 Minutes," 27.9 or 20.8 million, CBS; "Eight is Enough," 27.4 or 20.4 million, "Angie," 27.3 or 20.3 million, and "Taxi," 27 or 20.1 million, all ABC; "All in the Family," 26.9 or 20 million, CBS, and "Little House on the Prairie," 26.4 or 19.7 million, NBC.

The next 10 shows: "M-A-S-H," CBS; "Barney Miller" and "Charlie's Angels," both ABC; "Stockard Channing in Just Friends," CBS; "Soap" and "Sunday Movie—The Ordeal of Patty Hearst," both ABC; "WKRP in Cincinnati," CBS; "Monday Movie—Mrs. Columbo," NBC, and "Fantasy Island" and "Vegas," both ABC.

Warns Chinese Are Puritanical

BOSTON (AP) — Male musicians in the Boston Symphony will fly off Monday for the orchestra's China tour armed with an opening line for approaching Chinese women and with advice that it probably won't work.

"China is a fairly puritanical society," advised Jan Berris, a University of Michigan China specialist. She briefed the 103 men and women of the orchestra Tuesday on their tour, the first by a major American musical organization since the U.S. and China established diplomatic relations.

"Chinese women find it difficult to cope with compliments," she said. "Tell a woman she is lovely and she finds it very embarrassing."

"If you want to compliment a woman, tell her what a lovely political ideology she has."

Year Of Not Drinking Set Off A Celebration

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (AP) — When Smith College sophomore Mary Dickinson won a $2,500 bet that she could forego alcohol for a year, she celebrated with a midnight gulp of peppermint schnapps.

Then the real celebration began. Her small party in her dormitory room spread spontaneously from dorm to dorm as hundreds of "Smithies," some in nightgowns, cavorted across campus at 1 a.m. Tuesday.

Bell-ringing in the first dorm sparked the revelry. Women drank and danced on the quadrangle. They sent music blaring across the quad from stereo speakers in dorm windows. "It was crazy. It was incredible. It was just terrific," said Ms. Dickinson, an economics and history major from Braintree, N.Y.

The ruckus awoke Jill Ker Conway, president of the 2,200-student college, and the revelers — recalling that Ms. Conway had missed the traditional Christmas caroling last year — serenaded her with "Silent Night."

The anything-but-silent night was the result of a bet made a year ago between the 20-year-old student and her mother, Eileen Dickinson.

The bet required Ms. Dickinson to go without booze for one year — her mother's way of showing her how to get along socially as a non-drinker.

"It was a really good experience," the daughter said Tuesday. "I don't feel like I need to have a drink to function socially."

She said the toughest challenge came last summer in Washington, D.C., where she worked as an intern in the office of Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y.

The "Washington party circuit" provided strong temptation almost every evening, Ms.

Will Launch Fund Drive

"The official kick-off of the Boys' Club of Pitt County Development Fund starts on Thursday, March 8," Austin Britt, campaign chairman, commented on the completion of a training program for volunteer solicitors.

More than 50 volunteer solicitors, Britt added, "are eager to start canvassing the Pitt County area, and will be working on the project which we hope will be completed by May 1."

The goal, Austin notes, "is $500,000 and we are asking that businesses and individuals pledge their gifts over a five-year period." He added that "all donations to the campaign will be tax deductible."

Campaign funds will be used to build the new Boys' Club facilities, and none of the money raised will be used for salaries or operation of the club.

In another related event, members of the Progressive City Kiwanis Club of Greenville had as their guest speaker Chet Emerson, the Boys' Club executive director, at its Tuesday morning 7:30 a.m. breakfast meeting. Emerson discussed plans of the campaign to raise funds for the new building.

Aged Actor Is Fatally Beaten

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Charles Wagenheim, an 84-year-old character actor who appeared on such television shows as "Gunsmoke," "All in the Family" and "Baretta," has been found bludgeoned to death in his bedroom, police said.

Wagenheim's wife, Lillian, an invalid under the care of a nurse, was in the living room at the time of the attack Tuesday evening but heard nothing, Los Angeles police said.

The nurse had gone downstairs to the laundry room for 10 minutes and when she came back she found the body and called police, officers said.

Police Capt. Mark Kroeker said the bedroom window was found open.

In "Gunsmoke," Wagenheim played a sidekick to Festus, Dodge City's deputy marshal. In other shows, he generally played drunks or comic figures.

Investigators said there was no known motive for the attack. Funeral arrangements were pending.

However, the end of the year-long bet "was one hell of an excuse for a party," she said with a laugh.

The college president joined in the high spirits, coming out of her campus house and walking students back to their dorms.

Before parting with Ms. Dickinson, the president joined her in a ceremonial drink of tequila as students sang, "Goodnight, Ladies."

Ms. Dickinson, who has had a year to think about how she'll spend the $2,500 she won from her mother, says the money will go toward a trip to Antigua later this month — and toward liquor for a "huge" campus party she'll throw this Thursday.

'Studs Lonigan' Good Fodder For 1979 TV

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — When James T. Farrell released a three-segment novel called "Studs Lonigan" in the early 1930s, it wasn't called "a classic American trilogy," as it is now. It was called trash in three parts.

"Lonigan" said much about urban America, its mores and its spiritual bonds of family and religion. They were powerful statements, not so much condemnation as illumination. And they were shocking enough to prompt a ban on the books in parts of the country.

Perfect fodder for a 1970s made-for-TV movie, NBC, the network of the novel, has learned that American books considered too bold in their day fit nicely into the miniseries format. The network proved it with the successful TV adaptation of "From Here to Eternity" and is trying again with the three-part "Studs Lonigan," both appearing in the "Novels for Television" series.

Of course, what was hot and controversial in 1932 can seem tepid in 1979, and NBC's "Lonigan," which begins tonight, could have been made into a quaint little period piece. But Farrell's story of a street-hardened Chicago youth trying to grow up in the World War I years transfers in this TV version quite nicely. And though Studs' conflicts may seem a bit dated, the pain of making choices and living with wrong turns rings modern.

Studs is a young man fighting with himself; his father (Charles Durning) is the very personification of a repressive father. Studs tries to jibe the tough-guy image he projects to his peers with a vigilant conscience instilled by his Irish Catholic family. This duality makes Studs more than just a street punk, it makes him human, and the actions of his mundane life are made dramatic by the incessant raging of this inner war — boy vs. man.

Studs is every bit the swaggering hero when he leads a group of his pals to the seamy digs of a local harlot; but in the next scene, we see Studs wrestled to his knees by guilt, begging God's forgiveness.

And when Studs falls in love with the beautiful Lucy, he is angered and frightened by what he feels. A friend chastises him for behaving as though "being soft were some kind of disease or something" but Studs relents to the taunts of the street

Crew Takes Over Ship During Labor Dispute

THPORT, N.C. (AP) — Sunny Point munitions terminal Egyptian crew of a Kuwaiti ship has taken over the ship in a labor dispute, it was reported Tuesday.

Col H.K. Stevenson, commandant of the terminal, said indications are that the captain has lost control of the ship and that he and the ship's first mate are being held on board the Kuwaiti Horizon.

The 550-foot freighter carrying tobacco had planned to load an assortment of armaments aboard at the terminal late last week when it was taken over by its 20-man crew last Friday, according to Stevenson and a State Department spokesman in Washington.

The spokesman, who was not identified, said the department had been informed of the takeover by the Coast Guard but that he had no further details.

The dispute is apparently over wages. WWAY, a Wilmington television station, reported that the crew was demanding at least $100,000 in back and current wages.

Stevenson said negotiations were underway between the crew and the ship's owner. The ship is owned by the National Maritime and Agency of Kuwait, according to William B. Harris III, attorney for the ship's owners in Wilmington. Kuwait is an oil-rich country on the Persian Gulf.

Harris said he was on board the freighter Friday, but he declined comment.

"This is a sensitive and delicate matter at this time," he said.

Stevenson said that as far as he knew, none of the crew had left the ship since it docked at Sunny Point last Thursday.

"As far as I know, it's purely a labor dispute," Stevenson said, adding that he has received no reports of injuries.

Stevenson denied reporters access to the Military Ocean Terminal, which is closed to the public. He said he wanted to give the owners a chance to settle the dispute without "any more publicity than necessary."

He said personnel at the terminal are taking precautions to see that the situation does not get out of hand. He declined to elaborate.

An FBI spokesman told the television station that it was not actively in the case but was researching the matter to see if any federal laws were involved.

The ship is reported based in Beirut, Lebanon, and was on its way to Singapore and to Bangkok, Thailand, when the incident occurred.

Call For State To Act Quickly

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Seven boards of county commissioners have urged the state to find a prompt solution to the PCB disposal problem.

The toxic chemical has lain along 210 miles of roadway in those and eight other counties since August.

However, the seven governments had several different ideas about the best way to remove or treat the chemical, which is believed to cause cancer and other ailments in laboratory animals and in man.

The actions by the counties came after Warren County officials invited representatives of the state's other PCB-contaminated counties to Warren to ask them to exert pressure on the state.

The Warren board and the Region K Council of Governments have criticized the state proposal to bury an estimated 10,000 truckloads of contaminated soil in Warren County. They asked the state to instead haul the dirt to a federally approved dump in Alabama.

Herbert L. Hyde, secretary of crime control and public safety, said Tuesday that he hopes to recommend a solution to Gov. Jim Hunt within two weeks.

"I was hoping in two weeks to come up with something, I'm still trying to point to that, if it's at all possible... Lord knows, I want to get it over with as much as these county commissioners," Hyde said.

A check of the 10 boards of commissioners that sent representatives to Warren County found that seven of them adopted PCB resolutions Monday. Four of them — Chatham, Franklin, Granville and Person counties — essentially endorsed the Warren County stand.

Alamance and Halifax county commissioners supported a proposal to study treating the soil where it lies with activated carbon to neutralize the chemical.

"They felt like to pick it up from our roads and to move it would endanger other people's lives wherever it was moved," said Alamance County Manager Don C. Flowers of that county board's decision.

Wake County commissioners urged Hunt to seek a speedy solution but did not take a stand on what method should be used.

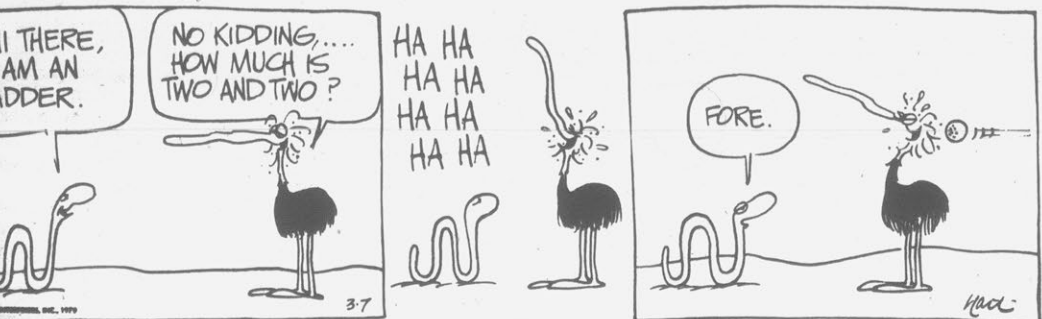

Three New York men have pleaded guilty to charges that they dumped PCB-laden oil along the roads, and two Raleigh men have pleaded innocent to related charges.

RALEIGH — St. Mary's College campus in Raleigh has been listed in the National Register of Historic Places, according to Dr. Larry Tise, Director of the state Division of Archives and History.

The listing includes the historic portion of the campus, most of which faces on Hillsborough Street. Among buildings included are Smedes Hall, a four-story Greek Revival brick building built in 1835-39; East Rock and West Rock, built in 1833-35 of stone discarded during the construction of the State Capitol; and St. Mary's Chapel, a simple, one-story board and batten Gothic Revival structure built in 1855. # Employment Picture In U.S. Shifts

INTERSTATE SECURITIES
CORP.

Unemployment statistics are a widely followed, economic indicator. In earlier periods of economic expansion, this figure declined to relatively low levels: 3.6 percent in 1950-53 and 3.7 percent in 1966-69. Currently, the rate is at a high 5.8 percent, despite four years of economic growth and record levels of total employment.

For the ten years ended 1978, the U.S. labor force increased by almost 28 percent compared with total population growth of only 9 percent. Increased participation by women and the coming of age of the World War II "baby boom" are responsible for this growth in the work force, and may well make the four percent "full employment" standard: obsolete. A 6-6.5 percent rate may be much more realistic.

Sixty percent of adult women are working or seeking work today compared with 40 percent in 1965. Since 1968 alone, the growth rate of women in the work force has resulted in an additional seven million people looking for jobs or working.

Except for the World War II baby boom, the rate of growth of the U.S. population has been in a long term decline. But these baby boom individuals began entering the work force in the mid-60's, swelling the growth of the total work force.

These two factors have important implications for the future. The baby boom was followed by a decline in the number of births in the sixties and seventies. Thus, the 16-24 age group is expected to increase 19.6 percent for 1970-80, but only 10 percent from 1980-90. The maturing of baby boom workers is expected to result in 70 percent of the work force being in the 25-54 age bracket by 1990, compared to 61 percent today.

Women are expected to represent about 46 percent of the labor force in 1990 compared to 42 percent currently. This would represent a slowing in the growth rate of the proportion of women to total population.

The results of changing growth rates and age mix are several. Competition among younger workers should be reduced for entry level jobs and the gap between teenage jobless rates and those for older workers should narrow. This should lower the overall unemployment rate.

The greater percentage of more mature, experienced, better educated workers presents the potential for sharp gains in productivity. But it may also result in a lower number of workers seeking work in the trades, which would necessitate sharp increases in wages to avoid labor shortages. The increase in the proportion of women in the work force could also affect productivity, depending on how many seek only part time work and the willingness of employers to accommodate this segment of the labor force.

Changes in total population growth and in the age of that population will certainly affect unemployment rates in the next 10 years. Near term, however, the cyclical nature of our economy indicates that unemployment is likely to rise from now until the end of the year.

'Year Of Child' Stamps Ahead

NEW YORK (UPI) — With the United Nations designating 1979 as the "International Year of the Child," many countries are expected to issue special stamps commemorating the period, with Great Britain and the United States leading the way, according to Alain de Cadenet, consultant to the British Post Office.

The BPO also will mark the 100th anniversary of the death of Sir Rowland Hill, "father" of the postage stamp, with a set of four commemoratives, de Cadenet said.

The London International Stamp Exhibition is scheduled for May, 1980.

FRENCH BREAD PANS
TERRE HAUTE, Inc. (UPI) — A housewares manufacturer has added French style bread pans to its line of Early American-style cast iron utensils for range-top and oven use. The boat-shaped baking pans come in single and double loaf size.

How Tar Heel Senators And Congressmen Voted

By Roll Call Report
WASHINGTON — Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Feb. 22 through Feb. 28.

HOUSE
$2 BILLION CONGRESS? — The House approved, 249 for and 121 against, a $2.44 billion budget for the Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committee. This will fund committee operations during 1979, including salaries for the 100-plus staff members. The aggregate 1979 budget for all House committees will total more than $75 million.

Rep. Frank Thompson, D-N.J., a supporter of the full $2.44 billion banking committee outlay, said: "We are dealing with a $3 trillion economy, and members up here (are) asking such absurd things, or making such absurd statements, as to say that we are in a never-ending upward spiral, that we have a billion dollar Congress. Maybe it ought to be a $2 billion Congress, to operate a little bit more efficiently."

Rep. Ron Paul, R-Tex., an opponent, said: "If this Congress is serious about reducing bureaucracy, cutting waste, balancing the budget and reforming regulations, then let it begin at home by slashing funds" from committee budgets. Paul favored cutting every committee budget by 25 per cent.

Members voting "yea" favored the higher budget for the banking committee.

Reps. L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Richardson Preyer, D-6, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, James Broyhill, R-10, and Lamar Gudger, D-11, voted "yea."

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, and James Martin, R-9, voted "nay."

BALANCED BUDGET — The House quashed, 222 for and 197 against, a budget-cutting gesture put forth by fiscal conservatives. With this vote, it refused to call up for debate an amendment which, if adopted, would have required the House to spell out "a method through which a balanced federal budget shall be required." Fiscal conservatives acknowledged that their balanced-budget language was mostly symbolic. The vote came during debate on HR 18964, a bill to increase the national debt ceiling above its soon-to-be-reached $796 billion level. HR 18964 was later defeated.

Members who voted to quash the balanced-budget amendment wanted the fewest possible amendments to be offered to the debt-ceiling bill, which they favored. One of them, Rep. Richard Bolling, D-Mo., called the conservatives' amendment not germane to the debt ceiling bill and said "in the end it will be a futility."

Rep. John Rousselot, R-Calif., who voted "nay," said it is essential for the House "on the first important vote of the 96th Congress to demonstrate a real...commitment to the balanced budget concept so widely supported by the American people."

Members voting "yea" opposed the balanced-budget language.

Jones, Whitley, Andrews, Preyer, Rose, Hefner and Gudger voted "yea."

Fountain, Neal, Martin and Broyhill voted "nay."

SENATE
FILIBUSTER — The Senate voted, 78 for and 16 against, to make it more difficult for a minority of senators to tie up floor business with extended debate. This rules change put an end to the so-called "post-cloture filibuster." Under that now-prohibited strategy, senators could keep a filibuster going even after its cloture had been voted, by means of introducing hundreds of amendments. The rule imposed by this vote in essence sets a limit of 100 hours debate after cloture has been voted.

Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., a supporter, said: "I believe that this is the area of self-discipline, and we all have to discipline ourselves...We have got to do that lest we destroy the nature of this body."

Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, an opponent, said "our real problem is how do you accommodate the guarantee of rights for each individual member of the Senate and, at the same time, preserve the inviolability of the 100-hour cap?"

Senators voting "yea" favored tightening filibuster rules.

Sen. Robert Morgan, D, voted "yea."

Sen. Jesse Helms, R, did not vote.

AVIATION FUEL — The Senate failed, 34 for and 53 against, to postpone and possibly prevent the removal of federal price and allocation controls from airplane fuel. This vote was on a motion to pry the Administration decontrol measure from the Energy Committee and send it to the floor, where it stood the possibility of being vetoed by the full Senate. Either the Senate or House may veto an Administration energy proposal such as this deregulation of both general and commercial aviation fuel. As a result of this vote and inaction by the House, the deregulation took effect Feb. 24.

Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, a supporter of killing the decontrol plan, said decontrol would raise prices of other types of oil, and asked: "How can we possibly justify decontrolling an oil product at the same time we are giving serious thought to rationing?"

Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., said: "There is no reason to continue controlling a product when its users want it decontrolled, and when the ultimate beneficiaries, the airplane passengers, are certainly better off than the average American." Senators voting "nay" favored removing federal controls from aviation fuel.

Morgan voted "nay." Helms did not vote.

Develop Train Without Wheels

HAMBURG, Germany (UPI) — A train without wheels, dubbed "The Float-Thing," will probably be the popular hit at the International Transport Exhibition in Hamburg June 8-July 1.

The train, known in technical circles as the "mag-lev train," (for magnetic levitation), "floats" on a magnetic "pillow" about one-half inch thick, which lifts it off the track and propels it forward. There's practically no sound, no air pollution and no bouncing during operation and the train can achieve speeds up to 250 miles an hour over longer stretches.

Exhibition visitors will at least get the feel of it at 50 mph on a three-quarter-mile stretch of track.

44 Is Standard Police Gear

DALLAS (AP) — Police in Dallas have adopted a new 44 as standard equipment. Its firing takes only a fraction of a second, and there's no noise.

Forty-four is the number of solid-state pushbuttons that control each of 10 sophisticated consoles in the new Dallas police communications center.

With the help of the pushbuttons from Honeywell, one console operator can coordinate mobile units, helicopters and a computer.

That's why the officer in the patrol car who stops you may know nearly as much about your car as your neighbors do.

HAND EXERCISE — A resident of Shanghai rotates two heavy steel balls in his hand, an exercise that strengthens the hands and improves health. He practiced this traditional Chinese activity during a walk on the Shanghai Bund, or waterfront. (AP Laserphoto)

Ex-Farm Boy Tries Hand At Beefalo

By SAMUEL O. HANCOCK
XENIA, Ill. (UPI) — A former Iowa farm boy has found a Southern Illinois home where the beefalo roam.

Chester Cooper, 65, who spent almost 40 years working in Chicago as an electrician, after forsaking farm life in southwestern Iowa, settled two years ago on a 40-acre Clay County farm he bought three years earlier.

He then became interested in beefalo — a cross between buffalo and domestic cattle.

Cooper said he probably will know about November whether his modest start in the beefalo business will prove to be more than "just a plaything as my wife says." He said he was encouraged by early prospects.

"One thing about it is nice — I don't have to depend on it for my next meal.

"They gain weight faster than domestic cattle and so far they have been immune to pink eye. I battled pink eye all last summer with my regular cows."

And even as the temperature dipped toward zero, Cooper said his beefalo ignored the comforts of a barn for the frigid outdoors.

"All they need is a little brush or a thicket for cover."

Cooper's beefalo "herd" numbers only three now. It began when "after much reading and research," he bought a beefalo cow with calf at auction in September 1977. A young male was born last April.

"One of the bulls is cream colored and one is coal black," said Cooper. "The mother is coal black. Her breeding is predominantly black angus."

Beefalo became a recognized breed 21 years ago, Cooper said, and is a hybrid of 3/4 buffalo and 1/4 domestic cattle.

"I found this place just like I discovered Chicago and a job there — just out driving," said Cooper. "I saw the white-faced cattle standing in lush grass up to their bellies and it was really beautiful."

Cooper said he met his wife, Phyllis, who "was secretary to my boss" in Chicago. She is a native of Crookston, Minn. "There's only a screen door between it and the North Pole," she said.

Cooper has 13 domestic cows which should have little beefaloes this spring and he expects to know by November how far he will go in the business.

"Today the market is for fast-growing beef," said Cooper.

Cooper became familiar with the cattle business while growing up on his father's farm near Red Oak, Iowa.

He tried farming on his own on his grandfather's farm near Red Oak starting in 1933 during the depression.

"It took me three years to go completely broke," Cooper recalled. "I sold corn for 13 cents a bushel and got 2 1/2 cents a pound for hogs."

"They can have their good old days, I'll settle for today."

No Fine If In 'Magic Circle'

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Municipal Judge Leonard Hughes Jr. scanned the traffic ticket of an elderly man recently and said, "You're in the magic circle. No fine, just the points."

With that, the man was directed out the main door of the courtroom, penalty points having been assessed against his license but his wallet no lighter.

The "magic circle?"

"Yeah," Hughes explained during a recess. "I don't fine anyone over 65. Not after all they've done for the community."

Dental Program Aiding Elderly

NEW YORK (AP) — A pilot program, launched last June by the New York University College of Dentistry, is bringing dental treatment directly to the elderly residents of two Staten Island nursing homes.

Twice a week teams of senior dental students and their faculty supervisor travel to the homes, treating up to 40 geriatric patients a week while gaining experience in the problems of geriatric dentistry.

Help Cities With Buried Bomb Legacy

By EDELGARD SIMON
HAMBURG, West Germany (UPI) — Two thousand aerial photos of Hamburg's destruction after 213 Allied air raids during World War II may help save lives today.

Britain's Royal Air Force recently turned the pictures over to Hamburg, where they eventually will become part of the city archives.

"In addition to being a document of the destruction of Hamburg between 1940 and 1944, they will be a valuable aid in detecting left-over unexploded bombs in this city," said Volker Lange, Hamburg's senator for urban planning.

Specialists are poring over the pictures in an attempt to pinpoint areas where this potentially lethal legacy of World War II may be hidden in the ground.

"I would not say we are sitting on a powder keg, but some places come pretty close to it. Every German city that was heavily bombed during the war has duds buried somewhere," said Heinz Gaebler, head of Hamburg's bomb disposal team of five specialists and 25 assistants.

Most unexploded World War II left-overs turn up during excavation work on new building sites or during road construction.

Motorists often learn that they have driven over a live bomb for years, until it was found by chance.

In the Ruhr city of Rheine last year three people died, nine suffered serious injuries, and property damage came to nearly $539,000 when a bulldozer nudged a bomb from its hiding place.

"The problem is that the longer they remain in the ground, the more dangerous they get," Gaebler explained.

Fuzes get rusty and may detonate a bomb at the slightest touch, he said.

Finds in Hamburg, including its port, total 4,363 high explosive bombs, 9,600 incendiary bombs, 207,000 grenades and shells, 5,300 hand grenades, 1,952 bazookas, and 371 tons of assorted ammunition.

According to Gaebler and other experts, West Germany will have to live with its old bombs for at least another 70 years.

Detecting and defusing them is especially difficult for the experts in Berlin, who have to deal with an international arsenal — British, American, Russian and old German Wehrmacht arms and ammunition.

Few records exist showing where the bombs hit in any one raid.

Hamburg had a headstart in removing the live bombs. A police office managed to save records, including reports by witnesses, showing the approximate position of 1,400 bombs that failed to go off.

Since 1956, a specially developed probe, the "Foerstersonde," has aided in detecting buried explosives. In 1962, the United States turned over a batch of aerial photos made after raids on Hamburg.

But the British pictures are of much better quality, permitting enlargement and processing for detailed study.

Hamburg owes much of its safety to Walter Merz.

In 1940, the then 34-year-old engineer was drafted and assigned to a demolition squad to "clean up" after air raids. When the war ended, he happened to be in Hamburg. He could have returned to his home in the Black Forest, left mostly untouched by the destruction of the war.

When Merz learned that in the first week after the end of the war, 40 children in Hamburg were killed and many seriously injured by live ammunition and bombs scattered in the ruins, he volunteered for more "clean up" work.

"I could not just run away," he once said. Merz retired in 1961, but until his death at 72 in December, he served as adviser and consultant to the city.

Merz once described his work this way:

"It was always the same. You turned over your papers and billfold to one of your assistants, somebody wished you luck and then the others ran for cover.

"You were totally alone. You knew that you would not feel much, if the thing went off.

"And then you concentrated on your work. Afterwards the sky looked bluer and the sun was brighter. You felt as if you had been born again."

Heinz Gaebler, who holds Merz' position today, says nothing has changed.

T-Shirt Gallery
Sees Success

HAMBURG, Germany (UPI) — Art for art's sake it is not — but what might be the world's first T-shirt gallery in Hamburg seems to be catching on anyway.
 Erwin Schulz, who opened the gallery about a year ago at Eppendorfer Weg, now holds chamber music nights and discussion sessions in the surroundings of T-shirt prints ranging from the Beatles to Kojak and Mickey Mouse.
 T-shirts, says Schulz, can tell you a lot about the psychological make-up of the wearer, but they also provide clues to contemporary political, consumer and art trends.

Sign Language Changes Life For The Retarded

By MARY A. DEMPSEY
MONROE, Mich. (UPI) — For 21 years, guttural sounds and awkward gestures were my brother Michael's only means of communication. Sign language has changed all that. Michael has been severely retarded since birth and unable to speak because of a muscular disability. He lives at home and has been enrolled in special education classes since he was old enough for kindergarten. But until he began studying sign language — a speech alternative formerly the exclusive province of the hearing impaired — he was unable to communicate with people outside the family. "The whole idea is, very new in the speech and language realm," said Katherine Zychowicz, Michael's speech teacher at the Monroe County Educational Center. "It's modifying the sign language of the hearing impaired population so it can be used for anyone with no oral communication. "It once was felt that using sign language impaired speech development because a person can't develop abstract ideas without speech," she said. "But it turns out just the opposite is true, and the new trend is toward using any means available to communicate." While the 18-month experiment at the Monroe center has opened new vistas for Michael, the transition has been like trying to learn a foreign language, Ms. Zychowicz said. At first, Michael was self-conscious and easily frustrated. In the past he had communicated with his parents and six brothers and sisters with yes or no answers to their questions or an easily recognizable sound or gesture. Sometimes even those methods didn't work. For instance, there was the time the family thought he had a stomach ache because he was rubbing his stomach. It turned out he was trying to let us know he wanted pizza. Now he can ask for it in sign language. Michael grew up reserved and quiet. He still is shy, but the sign language studies have made him more persistent in striving to be understood and to take part in family activities. "Now he wants to be a part of everything going on," his mother said. "What I like about it is that for the first time in his life he can ask questions. "He can ask where his brother is. He can inquire about things. "It's difficult for the rest of us to learn the signs because it isn't necessary. But the others have picked it up. His brothers make signs to each other to tease him, but he laughs. It makes him feel like part of the group — for the first time in his life." Michael still sometimes accentuates his signs with guttural noises and, from time to time, has to be reminded of the newly found talents of his hands. But as he progresses, the sign language gestures are becoming more and more automatic. He is livelier and more eager to be with others. He becomes excited when his gesturing is understood. "No one ever said he wouldn't speak when he was a child," his mother said. "We always asked why he couldn't talk, but the doctors didn't have any answers. "It wasn't until he 16 that we found out about the muscle problems. Then we accepted the fact that he couldn't talk and we just adjusted to that. "Now at 21 years of age he

Small Town Claims A Life Of Its Own

By CHARLOTTE PORTER
Associated Press Writer
PIERRE, S.D. (AP) — Living in a small town means the barber leaves his shop open when he goes to lunch. And he unlocks the cash register so people can make change for the pop machine while he's gone. "I've been here since 1952, and the only time I got burned was a kid a while back," says the barber. "And he paid me back." South Dakota is the 44th largest state in the union. Its capital town, Pierre — pronounced "peer" — has about 9,000 residents. And some consider it the best-kept secret since the Sun Belt. "I helped some people from New York with a home once," says Tom Farus of Pierre National Bank. "They couldn't believe what they discovered here. "They were writing to their friends and relatives," Farus says. "and I was telling them, 'Don't do that!'" What the New Yorkers found was a town in which volunteer firemen hear the fire siren and tune to the local radio station to find out where the fire is. The same siren sounds at 10 p.m., a gentle reminder that it's bedtime. A recent newspaper ad entitled "Please Save This Kitty" not only located the cat's owner, but 15 other people called to say they were willing to take the half-grown stray in. The governor's home telephone number is listed in the city directory, and his wife answers the phone. "Ann speaking." There is no fence around the mansion and a neighborhood basketball game is often in progress on the driveway. Asked to describe Pierre's last major crime, businessmen and community leaders have to stop and think a while. "There was a murder, let's see, in 1962," they'll tell you. "Well, no, there was a murder-suicide about two years ago in the motel. Then those out-of-staters who tried to cash the phony traveler's checks, they got caught."

2 pounds fresh broccoli
 1/2 teaspoon oregano, crushed
 1/2 cup mayonnaise or salad dressing
 1/4 cup shredded sharp process cheese
 1 tablespoon milk

Cook broccoli until tender in boiling water with oregano; drain. In top of double boiler, mix mayonnaise, cheese and milk; heat over hot, not boiling, water, stirring until cheese melts and mixture is hot. Serve with broccoli. Makes 6 servings.
