Election Board Sets Referendum June 8

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt Board of Elections voted this morning to schedule a referendum for Friday, June 8 on the $9 million city and county schools bond issue, as requested by the County Commissioners.

The Elections officials, meeting at the board's E. Second Street office, voted to delay action on the scheduling of a referendum date on the sale of mixed beverages, pending the results of a meeting this afternoon of the County Commissioners.

The Commissioners, who had requested that the Board of Elections set June 8 as the referendum date on both issues, are expected to hear input today from a group of citizens on the liquor-by-the-drink issue.

Noting that the commissioners had rescinded an earlier resolution asking that May 18 be set as the date for the mixed beverage referendum, Elections board member David Duffus said that he would favor delaying a decision on the beverage question until after the county board meets this afternoon. He said "we wouldn't want to have to change it again."

Elections officials will meet Friday at 8:30 a.m. to consider the mixed beverage referendum date.

In discussing the matter of holding both referendums at the same time, it was pointed out that it would be less expensive to schedule both on the same date.

Board member Myra Cain said that she would prefer to have elections combined as much as possible but she added, however, that she did not think the school bond issue should be held up while a decision was being discussed on the beverage issue.

Paul Rasberry, principal at Aycock Junior High School, asked if there was a possibility that the polling site could be shifted from Aycock to another location on June 8 since that date marks the final day of school here.

Everett noted that the board would have problems in shifting polling places since the approval of the Justice Department is needed on such matters.

Reminded Of Tough Issues

Carter Warmly Greeted

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer
CAIRO, Egypt (AP) —

President Carter, beginning a pilgrimage for peace in the Mideast, received today both a warm welcome and a reminder that tough issues still stand in the way of an Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

Tens of thousands of enthusiastic Egyptians lined the street as Carter and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat stood in an open car while traveling from Cairo airport to the former royal palace where Carter will stay.

But at the palace Sadat issued a strong new call for "national rights" and "freedom" for Palestinians.

Even before Carter's arrival, Egyptian Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil said his country had counter-proposals to the compromise suggestions put forth by Carter, and said Egypt would continue to insist on a timetable for setting up an autonomous Palestinian authority in the Israeli-occupied West Bank.

In Israel, meanwhile, Prime Minister Menachem Begin said a peace treaty can be signed "in a few weeks time" provided some unspecified "still outstanding issues" are resolved.

Begin, speaking at an airport news conference on his return from the United States, called on his countrymen to welcome Carter warmly when he arrives in Tel Aviv Saturday night.

"This has been a good week for Israel," Begin said.

Carter said he still seeks a "comprehensive" peace that would include other Arab nations and "reflect the legitimate needs of all who have suffered in more than 30 years of conflict," a reference to the Palestinians.

Sadat kissed Carter on both cheeks as the American leader got off Air Force One at Cairo airport. Then the two presidents waved to the throngs who lined their route to the palace in the suburb of Kubeh.

As the motorcade passed about 300 doves were released and flew into the sky. Onlookers cheered, jumped up and down and waved handkerchiefs. The eight-mile drive took 55 minutes.

At the palace both leaders appeared on a balcony to speak. Sadat praised Carter warmly, calling him "My dear friend and brother."

"Never before has an American president been so firm in his devotion to peace," said Sadat, speaking in English.

But Sadat also said "We are determined to enable our Palestinian brothers to realize their national rights and regain their freedom. In the days ahead we will be working together to make these cherished hopes a living reality."

Food Prices Pace Gains

WASHINGTON (AP) — Food prices jumped sharply in February for the second straight month to pace a 1 percent increase in wholesale prices, the Labor Department reported today.

The wholesale price rises were not quite as steep as those recorded in January, but they were high enough to guarantee consumers a further boost in retail prices in coming months.

Wholesale price increases for beef and veal slowed from January, from 13.3 percent to 4.7 percent in February. But vegetables, pork, sugar, fruit and fish showed sharper boosts last month.

Hefty price rises also were recorded for shoes, tires, gasoline and alcoholic beverages.

The latest rise in wholesale prices, involving goods at the stage just before they reach store shelves, compared with a 1.3 percent jump in January, the sharpest one-month increase in four years.

The latest report gave the Carter administration another setback in its efforts to control inflation, which is running above 9 percent a year.

Last year, there was only one month — April — in which wholesale prices rose as much as 1 percent or more. The latest rise in wholesale prices translates into a 12.7 percent annual increase.

Food prices in February jumped 1.6 percent, equal to an annual rate of more than 21 percent. In January, food prices at wholesale rose 1.8 percent.

The report confirmed findings released by the administration Wednesday that farm prices have been rising at an annual clip of 40 percent since November.

In response to the sharp rise in farm prices, which the government concedes will continue for a while, President Carter's chief inflation fighter, Alfred E. Kahn, said Wednesday that officials are considering ways of slowing price hikes at the farm level.

Last month, the Labor Department reported that large price jumps for beef and veal boosted wholesale prices by 1.3 percent in January.

Vessel Moves

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A 550-foot Kuwaiti freighter moved from the Army's Sunny Point Military Ocean Terminal to the state port at Wilmington today for further negotiations between its striking crew and representatives of the Kuwaiti and Egyptian embassies.

The vessel, the Kuwait Horizon, was expected to dock at the port by 12:30 p.m. following the two-hour trip from the nearby Army terminal.

Sixteen Are Indicted For Multiple Crimes In Area

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Felony indictments have been returned against 16 persons following an extensive five-county investigation of armed robberies, safe crackings, breaking-entering and larcenies and related incidents dating back to January of 1977.

Pitt Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that six of the defendants have been charged by his department in connection with eight cases in Pitt that date as far back as December of 1977.

According to Nelson Sheppard, Beaufort County deputy who was involved in the overall investigation, the Beaufort County grand jury has returned 159 felony indictments involving Beaufort County cases.

Sheppard reported that charges in Pitt, Martin, Craven and Hyde Counties would reach approximately 60. He added that in addition to the eight Pitt cases, ten were investigated in Martin County, three in Craven and one in Hyde.

Seven of the 16 persons indicted in the five-county investigation had been arrested this morning, Sheppard pointed out, with apprehension expected later today of the remaining nine defendants.

The Beaufort County spokesman pointed out that the charges stemmed from incidents ranging from armed robbery, safe cracking, second degree burglary, breaking-entering and larceny, felonious larceny, felonious possession of stolen property, felonious receiving of stolen property, and accessory before and after the fact of armed robbery.

Sheppard, who said the investigation originated out of incidents in Washington and Beaufort County, noted that bonds for the defendants ranged from $5,000 up to $35,000. Trial dates have been set for April 19 in Beaufort County Superior Court.

Sheriff Tyson said that the six persons charged in Pitt included: Donald Eugene Banks, 18, of Rt. 4, Washington; Carl Wayne Moore, 24, of Chocowinity Trailer Park, Chocowinity; Brenda Gail Brown, 19, Stokes; Jerry Moore, 29, Chocowinity Trailer Park; Rufus Buddy Jones, 25, Chocowinity; and Sammy Davis Walls, 29, Rt. 1, Grimesland.

According to the sheriff, the Pitt incidents and charges included: Oct. 29, 1978 break-in at the Convenient World Store at Stokes, with Banks, Carl Moore and Brown charged with breaking, entering and larceny; May 13, 1978 break-in at Gaskin's Store, Calico, with Banks, Carl Moore, Jerry Moore and Jones charged with breaking, entering and larceny and Walls charged

Push Final Senate Vote On Four-Year Term

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Backers of a proposed constitutional amendment giving legislators terms lasting four years instead of two will try again today to bring the controversial measure before the Senate for a final vote.

The amendment won tentative Senate approval Tuesday, but supporters asked for a delay in final action Wednesday to avoid a move by opponents to send the measure to the Appropriations Committee, where they hope to delay or kill it.

Opponents, led by Sen. Billy Mills, D-Onslow, produced statements from state Elections Board Director Alex Brock and the legislature's fiscal research staff Wednesday showing the statewide vote on the constitutional amendment would cost at least $12,000 even if held with the 1980 general election.

That, opponents contend, means the measure should go to the appropriations panel. Committee chairman Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, said if his committee gets the legislation, it will not act until after passing the state budget — meaning a delay until perhaps May or June.

In addition to a battle over sending the bill back to committee, supporters of the longer-term proposal also faced erosion in their own ranks Wednesday. Two Republican senators, Bill Redman, R-Iredell, and Cass Ballenger, R-Catawba, voted for the amendment Tuesday but said they had since decided the measure would damage GOP efforts to gain strength in the legislature.

"I got to thinking, why did I do it?" said Redman. "I believe its selfish. I believe I'd be less responsive to the people if I only ran every four years. And I don't want that."

The bill won tentative approval on a 31-15 vote, just two votes more than the three-fifths needed for a constitutional amendment. But at least three other senators who failed to vote Tuesday said they intended to vote for the amendment if it reaches final Senate action.

Public TV Reports Funds Contributed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Public television stations around the country reported viewer pledges of about $2.48 million over the first weekend of a two-week national fund-raising campaign.

The Public Broadcasting Service said today that $1.5 million of the total resulted from audience reaction to a 6½-hour special broadcast live from the Grand Ole Opry last Saturday night. However, final figures will not be available for several weeks.

Pledges received by the 114 stations reporting were 24 percent larger than in the same period last year, the service said.

The effort, also aimed at introducing new viewers to public television, will run through the weekend of March 17-18, ending with a 30-hour nationwide program.

There will be songs by Sarah Vaughan, Ethel Merman, Billy Eckstine, George Shearing, Johnnie Ray, Jackie & Roy and Chet Atkins.

Also, there will be a film portrait of Arthur Fielder of the Boston Pops, excerpts from a new series called "Lillie" about Lillie Langtry, three favorite Hollywood musicals of the 1950s and spots from the most popular current public television programs.

BRITISH ACTION

LONDON (AP) — Britain has cut off or significantly reduced aid to Chile, Uganda, Ethiopia, Cambodia, Vietnam, South Yemen and Bolivia because of human rights violations, Minister for Overseas Development Judith Hart has notified the House of Commons.

Vote Oppose New School

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state's largest teachers organization has voted to oppose the proposed science and mathematics high school for gifted students.

The board of directors of the North Carolina Association of Educators recently voted to oppose legislation that would establish the N.C. School of Science and Mathematics in Durham.

C. Stewart Stafford, president of the association, said the group "had serious reservations about the commitment to a new program which may take away from the public schools."

The association represents about 50,000 of the state's 54,000 public school teachers.

Quentin W. Lindsay, Gov. Jim Hunt's science advisor, said the school would not compete with the public schools for resources.

"In fact, it will be more a complementary relationship than a competitive relationship," Lindsay said.

The education association charged that the school would draw its students from the state's wealthiest families. It added, "The proposed expenditure of $4,500 per student attending the school would be almost four times what the state spends on an average high school student."

Lindsay said that scholarships would be offered to students who could not afford the costs, estimated by him at $3,900 a year.

It could not be immediately determined how much of that total would be born by the individual student.

The school's board of directors has asked the legislature to appropriate $3.3 million over the next two years. The board has said it will also seek donations of $4.3 million from businesses and foundations.

Reunion Policy Recommended

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal money should be used to reunite children with their families, rather than keep them in foster homes, a new study says.

The report Tuesday by the Children's Defense Fund said little money is available "to prevent unnecessary removal of children from homes, to insure parent-child contact, to help reunite them... or to facilitate adoption." Marian Wright Edelman, the fund's director, said over a half million children grow up outside their own families.

Extra Time For Vaccinations

Pitt County Schools Assistant Superintendent Leck Keeter reminds parents that the county Board of Education has given children until March 15 to receive vaccinations for red measles.

The board voted Tuesday to give the extension. Originally, the board had voted to deny entrance to school as of Thursday, March 8, to those children who had not either received the needed vaccinations or brought medical documentation of having the shot to the school prior to today.

A total of 1,018 children received free vaccinations Wednesday throughout the county schools. A team of personnel from the Pitt County Health Department administered the shots, with help from the state Division of Health Services, Department of Human Resources.

Keeter pointed out that many children had had the measles vaccination prior to age one. State laws require children to receive a second dosage to remain in school.

Children who did not receive the vaccination Wednesday and still need the shot before March 15 should either go to a private physician or go to the county health department. There is no charge for the vaccination at the health department. The week grace period will also allow those who have medical records outside the county time to get documentation of their shot records. The school personnel must have medical proof that the child has had the needed shot. Those children who do not get either the shot or medical records before March 15 will be denied entrance to school March 16.

Asks Turnout

James A. Hackney III of Washington, president of the Highway 264 Association, today urged local area residents interested in improvements to U.S. 264 between Wilson and Greenville, to attend the Board of Transportation meeting in Raleigh, Friday.

Hackney said both Gov. Jim Hunt and Transportation Secretary Tom Bradshaw have repeatedly said the Wilson-Greenville project is the number one priority project in the state. "Your presence at this DOT board meeting will make sure this high priority is maintained," he emphasized.

The Board of Transportation will meet at 10 a.m. in the board room of the Highway Building in downtown Raleigh. The board is scheduled to consider a recommendation from DOT's professional staff that a freeway be constructed between Wilson and Greenville along a new corridor to the North of the present U.S. 264.

Fears Transfer Of Power With ERA

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Mrs. Alice W. Gatsis, chairman of North Carolinians Against ERA, told the Pitt-Beaufort Conservative Union Tuesday night here that the Equal Rights Amendment was defeated in the N. C. General Assembly "because the people of the state were against it."

She told the group that, in her opinion, one of the main things wrong with ERA is that it would transfer "a great deal of power from the states to the federal government."

"The people of North Carolina intend to work to preserve their state legislature against transfers of power to the federal government," she contended.

She predicted new attempts in 1980 which she expects to be heavily financed by out-of-state money to win control of the legislature for pro-ERA forces.

ERA will not be ratified by three-fourths of the states by the Mar. 22, 1979 deadline, she predicted. She said that ERA has already been defeated by a number of states this year and that Congress's attempt to extend this deadline "raised grave constitutional doubt."

Breathless Sleep Study

BOSTON (AP) — Researchers have found that healthy men often stop breathing for several seconds at a time when they sleep — a discovery they say may help explain why men have more heart attacks and die younger than women.

Two-thirds of the men who took part in a study breathed irregularly or had periods of lower-than-normal oxygen in their blood while they slept.

Although the significance of the finding is open to speculation, the doctors said irregular breathing during sleep may prove to be an underlying contributor to other diseases that are more common among men than women.

A report on the research, conducted at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Gainesville, Fla., was published in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

The doctors monitored the breathing of 30 normal, healthy men and 19 women while they slept.

Twenty of the men had 264 episodes of abnormal breathing or low oxygen levels, while three of the women had a total of nine such incidents. Of these, 12 men and all three women had apnea, or periods during which they stopped breathing for 10 seconds or longer.

The consequences of irregular breathing still are not clear.

Barbecuing A Buffalo

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The barbecue that Georgia-Pacific Corp. will throw for its building supply dealers Thursday won't be a lot of bull.

Instead, company officials will steer away from the traditional barbeque treat of roasted black Angus and serve 350 pounds of buffalo barbeque.

Sylvia deRosset, manager of a Charlotte catering service, will oversee the barbecuing of the buffalo.

Mrs. deRosset said the meat was purchased from Cook's Buffalo Ranch in Cabarrus County. The buffalo had been in a herd there for several years.

She said one of the animals costs about $600 dollars, regardless of its size. The taste, she says, is somewhere between venison and beef.

The secret to a good-tasting buffalo barbeque is in the way it is prepared, Mrs. deRosset said.

"It's coarser-grained than beef, and it doesn't have as much fat, so you have to watch to keep it from drying out."

She said she ate buffalo at a bicentennial event in Washington in 1976. "It was very good," she said.

HAS MEDAL, MAY SUE — Flight attendant Anne Picyk shows the medal she received from New York City Thursday, the first Mayor's Medal for Crime Victims. Last July Miss Picyk was robbed and thrown from a subway platform in front of a train. She escaped to the platform and helped police track down her assailant. Although Miss Picyk was all smiles as she accepted her medal, a newspaper report says she plans to sue the city and Transit Authority for $1 million on charges of negligence. (AP Laserphoto)

She Could Use A Clam Opener

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is a silent husband. He suddenly quit talking to me and he won't tell me why.

The first time he clammed up we were married only six months. All of a sudden he wasn't speaking to me, and no amount of begging on my part could make him tell me what I had done wrong. He wouldn't look at me or talk to me for three whole days. Then, all of a sudden, he started talking to me just like nothing had happened. I found out four years later that he stopped talking that first time because I used his car and didn't fill up the gas tank!

I could write a book on the different times he clammed up. The record was 13 days, and I still don't know the reason for that one. We have three children, the youngest is 5, so I'm trying to see it through, but it is rough.

What is the matter with a man who acts this way?

SILENT TREATMENT

DEAR TREATMENT: I don't know, but if I were you I would try to find out. He could be immature, sick, or just plain ugly. Your husband sounds as though he has a lot of words stored up which may need to be unloaded in a doctor's office. I recommend counseling. If he won't go, go alone, and learn how to communicate with your silent partner.

DEAR ABBY: If a person wants to be hypnotized to lose weight, quit smoking, eliminate pain during childbirth, surgery or dental work or for any other legitimate reason, where does he find an honest, qualified hypnotist?

I don't want one who hypnotizes people for fun or entertainment. I want a hypnotist with the best credentials who meets the highest professional standards.

INTERESTED IN OHIO

DEAR INTERESTED: Write to: American Society of Clinical Hypnosis, 2400 East Devon Ave., Suite 212, Des Plaines, Ill. 60018. They recommend only the most highly qualified hypnotists.

DEAR ABBY: The lady signed TRAPPED, who discovered that her husband had been unfaithful after 25 years, could have been written by my mother, only she and Dad have been married only 19 years.

About three months ago she caught Dad in a situation like that. She says there will be no divorce, but she has locked him out of their bedroom. Now Dad sleeps with my little brother.

He has begged Mom to give him another chance, but she won't. I am the eldest (16) but I am old enough to know that any woman trapped because she can't forgive, has trapped herself.

SORRY FOR DAD

DEAR SORRY: You may be young, but you are very wise.

Wisconsin's First Cookbook Identified Lady Gives Reply For Reader

By HARRIET LEEDS
MAPLE BLUFF, Wis. (UPI) — Who is Joyce Dreyfus and why are they saying those nasty things about her?

Her appearance has been described as flamboyant and theatrical. She has shoulder-length platinum blonde hair and wears many rings.

She also is Wisconsin's new first lady.

"I've had in fact some rather nasty things (said) to me, but this is part of our society," she said. "You see, suddenly because your husband becomes a political figure they expect the wives to look like movie stars and very few of us do."

"I think it is irrelevant whether I wear rings or do not wear rings, whether I am blonde or brunette. Those superficial things strike me as being very petty and childish."

A year ago Mrs. Dreyfus, 51 and a mother of two, was embarking on a new career as an elementary school teacher after 30 years as a housewife. Now she is, somewhat reluctantly, again starting a new career.

Gov. Lee Dreyfus jokes that his wife didn't like the outcome of the Nov. 7 election.

"She wanted me to win and not accept," he says, always to roars of appreciative laughter.

"It's true," Mrs. Dreyfus said. "Given the choice it would be nice to say, 'I accept this honor, but I won't accept.' I think it will change our lives. I like our life in Stevens Point very much. I loved being involved with the university."

Dreyfus took a leave of absence from his job as chancellor of the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point to run for governor.

Besides her appearance, Mrs. Dreyfus has drawn criticism about her plan to hire her daughter as a $19,000-a-year executive residence director and for a dog-run built at the mansion.

She said the cries of nepotism were "very predictable" when it became known she was considering hiring her daughter.

Susan Dreyfus Fosdick decided to accept a lower paying job with the state Republican Party instead — purely for professional reasons, Mrs. Dreyfus said.

Mrs. Dreyfus also said criticism from a legislator of a $750 fenced dog-run erected for Samantha, the family's 140-pound Great Pyrenees, was not justified.

She said "the state" told her it had to be done and even where to put it. She said she would have just chained the dog to the garage, as was done in Stevens Point.

The family also has an indoor dog, a poodle named Clouseau, which Mrs. Dreyfus said she plans to keep upstairs.

Although she is as forthright and colorful as her husband, she hinted she probably won't be the type of first lady who gets deeply involved in politics.

Questioned on her views, she repeatedly took lines identical to those of her husband, then admitted she couldn't think of anything that "truly concerns either one of us that we disagree on."

Mrs. Dreyfus has not yet moved all the family's belongings into the million-dollar executive residence. Dreyfus has joked often that he was waiting for the couple's double bed to be delivered so twin beds now in the master bedroom can be removed.

"We never slept in twin beds and we're not about to start now," Mrs. Dreyfus said. "Besides, my husband is very warm, like an electric blanket or hot water bottle."

The first floor den was lined with shelves of books, mostly political, when the previous governor and his family lived there. It now contains artifacts of the Dreyfus' world travel.

During the first few weeks of her husband's administration, Mrs. Dreyfus divided her time between Stevens Point and Madison.

In Madison, she has been hiring the household staff for the mansion, getting things organized and making official appearances. She has also been busy helping her daughter Susan, 31, and two grandsons, James, 8, and Christopher, 3, who recently moved to Madison, get settled.

"I'm a committee of one to do the packing in Stevens Point. I have saved almost 32 years of odds and ends. It's very hard to winnow and sift through those things. I'm a great saver."

Review Course To Continue

The series of review courses designed to prepare secretaries to take the Certified Professional Secretary Exam will conclude with the accounting course which will begin Tuesday, March 13, at Pitt Technical Institute.

Instructor for the course will be Betty Goetz, a PTI instructor. The course will be held on Tuesday nights from seven to 10 o'clock for six weeks.

The registration fee for the course is $5 and participation is not limited to secretaries or members of the National Secretaries Association, which is sponsoring the courses. Interested persons may register the first night of class.

DEAR CECILY: I am trying to recall the name and author of a great cookbook I encountered some time ago about the whys and wherefores of combining spices and herbs with foods. I think the name of one of the authors begins with S. The only other detail I can come up with is the time it was published — around 1965. If you know the book I mean, it would be great. I was inspired to write you after reading your recent columns about cookbooks. — FRUSTRATED.

DEAR FRUSTRATED: The book you ask about is "The Spice Cookbook" by Aveline Day and Lillie Stuckey. It was published in 1964 by David White Co. When we phoned Mr. White's office to ask whether the book was still available, he said it was "out of stock" but that he hoped it would be reprinted in 1979.

As it happens, I know both the authors. Mrs. Day is a home economist and an exceptionally good cook, and Lillie Stuckey is a marvelous researcher; between them they did indeed turn out a fine book.

Although you didn't request a spicy recipe, I can't resist including a delightful one for winter use just tried in my kitchen. — C.B.

SPICY APPLES

- 3 cups water
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1-3rd cup frozen orange juice concentrate
- 12 whole cloves
- 1 stick cinnamon
- 6 medium golden Delicious apples, 1 3/4 pounds
- 2 tablespoons rum, if desired

Into a large, wide saucepot turn the water, sugar, orange juice concentrate, cloves and cinnamon. Bring to a boil, stirring until the sugar is dissolved; simmer, uncovered, for 5 minutes. Core and pare the apples; add to the syrup. Cover and simmer, basting and turning often, until apples are tender but still hold their shape — 10 to 12 minutes. With a slotted spoon remove the apples. Gently boil the remaining syrup, uncovered, until it is reduced to 1 cup. Stir in the rum, if used. Pour over the apples. Serve warm as an accompaniment to a main course or as a dessert. If used as the latter, the apples may be served with creme fraiche or be offered "as is" to calorie-watchers. Makes 6 servings.

Slide Presentation Given

Dr. Jarlath McKenna spoke to members of the Greenville Service League Monday. He narrated a slide presentation on "High-Risk Pregnancies."

Dr. McKenna is assistant professor of obstetrics and gynecology with the ECU Medical School. He told of the need of equipment for the perinatal intensive care unit of Pitt Memorial Hospital. The unit now serves as the high-risk pregnancy center for 29 eastern North Carolina counties.

President Mrs. Jack Whichard continued the meeting with committee reports. Mrs. Raymond MacKenzie announced the collection of 112 units of blood with 34 workers giving 105 hours at the Feb. 6 visit at the Moose Lodge. She thanked the workers and requested additional volunteers for a two-day visit of the Bloodmobile at ECU March 28-29.

Finance Chairman Mrs. Charles Carter paid special tribute to Mrs. Frank Layne and Mrs. A. L. Ferguson, co-chairmen of the Charity Ball and thanked members also.

Mrs. R. K. Barnhill announced the need of a workshop to prepare tray favors for Pitt Memorial Hospital patients. Requests for Easter favors this year total 340 as compared with 238 last year.

Mrs. Donald Bailey, placement director, announced signing for the fall hospital work term would begin after the meeting. A new gift cart has been ordered to be used at the hospital to serve patients.

Emergency Charity Fund Chairman Mrs. Herbert Carter reported answering four calls and Laughinghouse Hospital Fund Chairman Mrs. Thomas Mallison received one memorial gift and answered five calls.

Mrs. Charles Stevens, representing sustaining members, issued an invitation to the group to join them for a coffee honoring provisional members at the home of Mrs. Plato Evans on the morning of March 21.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

The whole philosophy of Motherhood has been built around the theory that children may not act like they appreciate your sacrifices, but secretly, they think you're really swell.

You see it on commercials. The one where the frazzled mother is hustling the laundry from one room to another lamenting, "He won't even notice how fresh his underwear smells!" only to see the kid bury his face in it and look like he has just seen God.

I personally see children as a Christmas club where you make deposits all year long and get a pleasant surprise at the end of the year. There's no interest, but at least you get back what you put in.

One of those "cashing in" moments occurred this week when we were putting together our income tax.

We said to our son, "Do you have your W-2 form from when you worked this summer? We are going to declare you as an exemption."

He looked puzzled. "Why would you do that?"

"Because for the last year we have fed, clothed, boarded, transported, indulged, and kept you in good health."

"I'm filing separately," he said, "so I can get a refund."

"But if we claim you, the government allows us $750 right off the top. If we don't get that exemption, we're in a higher bracket."

"You should have thought of that before you bugged me to go to work this summer. I wanted to stay here at home and visit with you and Dad and discuss my philosophy of life, but no, you weren't happy until I was out taking a job away from some poor unfortunate who needed his character built."

I looked at this child and suddenly saw him for what he was — a person who would tell the Gestapo his parents listened to Radio Free Europe from a radio hidden under the floor. A child who would see us attend open house at camp and pretend he was an orphan. A child who would keep me in my old age and put a pay TV in my room.

As we pored over the return, I thought of the 16 hours of labor that went into his birth . . . the demanding infant years . . . the dedication to his bad skin . . . the years of caring, running, and fetching.

Somehow, it's hard to accept the fact that your kids will sell you down the river for a lousy $15.95 refund.

Decision On U.S. 264 At Hand

Tomorrow the N. C. Board of Transportation will consider a recommendation from its planning board for development of U. S. 264 to a point just west of Greenville.

The discussion among various groups and communities along the route has been spirited for many months. This is natural and to-be-expected since the nature of the construction will have a great effect on this area for many decades into the future.

Through it all, though, we think virtually everyone concerned recognized that improvements to U. S. 264 are important — even critical — to all of us along its way.

Improvements to U. S. 264 have been assigned top priority by the Hunt administration, an assessment with which we totally agree.

The strong debate over the kind of improvements that are needed for U.S. 264 over the past few months should be viewed primarily as evidence of the keen interest of the people along the route in developing an adequate highway.

We accept the plan which the DOT planning board has developed and recommended for construction of a new U. S. 264. It embraces the concept of a controlled access freeway and we will leave to the professional planners the mechanics for carrying it out.

It is our hope that the Board of Transportation tomorrow will approve the concept which the planning board has prepared for U. S. 264, and work on this long-held dream can proceed without delay.

Airline Service Feels Fuel Shortage

The latest victims of the energy crisis are some selected airline flights.

Some airlines are cancelling flights due to a shortage of jet fuel.

The flights cancelled are usually the lightly traveled ones.

Where this will lead is open to speculation. It could mean permanent cancellation of some marginal routes . . . and it could bring to an end the recent era of bargain air travel.

WASHINGTON TODAY

Not The Congress' Way

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) —

When in doubt, Congress follows its precedents and its habits. And nothing stirs more congressional doubt than an ethical question involving a colleague.

So the House followed precedent and overwhelmingly rejected a move to unseat Rep. Charles C. Diggs Jr. of Michigan, convicted of taking salary kickbacks from his staff.

At the same time, the Senate, where extravagant compliments are habitual, hailed the return of Sen. Herman Talmadge of Georgia from hospitalization for alcohol abuse, without a hint of concern at the investigation he faces for allegedly converting campaign money to his own use.

Diggs was convicted on Oct. 7, overwhelmingly re-elected to the House on Nov. 2, and sentenced to three years in prison on Nov. 20. He is free while appealing the conviction.

That presented the House with a nice puzzle, since his constituents certainly have a right to representation of their choosing. They chose Diggs. The advocates of expulsion wanted the House to tell the voters they were wrong.

But House Democratic Leader Jim Wright said Congress always has held that when a member's constituents have the facts in a case like that of Diggs, and re-elect him anyhow, "so far as our court is concerned, that is the final appeal."

"The will of the people, that is what this House is all about," said Rep. Parren J. Mitchell, D-Md. "And if the people want to elect Hitler, or a Klansman, that is their right, and you or I do not have any right to quarrel with it."

There is a House rule suggesting that a member convicted of a crime between elections abstain from voting, but it doesn't apply once the member has been re-elected.

Another rule says that members who have "a direct personal or pecuniary interest" in the outcome of a House vote should abstain from voting.

Diggs voted with the majority to send his own case to the ethics committee and thus shelve the expulsion resolution.

When that point was raised, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. said he doubted his constitutional right to forbid Diggs from voting, and cited House precedents leaving it to a member to decide for himself whether he should abstain because of personal interest in the question before the House.

On that point, at least, it may be time to set a new precedent. If Diggs didn't recognize his direct interest in the question of expulsion, he was the only one in the chamber who missed it.

While the House ethics committee tries to decide what to do about Diggs, the Senate ethics committee is investigating allegations against Talmadge.

The panel has told Talmadge that it has evidence indicating he kept campaign contributions for his own use, filed false campaign spending reports, and was reimbursed for non-existent Senate expenses. A federal grand jury is looking into the case, too, and the Senate has given it Talmadge's 1973 and 1974 expense vouchers.

Talmadge has denied wrongdoing, and says that he will run for re-election in 1980.

But it would seem that the prudent politician might want to welcome him back to the Senate without making a big deal out of it. That's not the Senate way, and Talmadge's return was the occasion for public praise from assorted colleagues, plus a telephone call from President Carter.

"If he has suffered any illness, it has been from the strain of hard work and dedication on behalf of the people," said Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C. "He is not a philanderer. He is not like some of these youngsters, taking trips and doing other things from time to time. He is there working, day and night."

HIS CURRENT CHIEF AIDES!

Restoration Of Reason

WASHINGTON — A special committee of the National Academy of Sciences last week came up with a delightfully encouraging report. The encouraging thought is that at long last, elements of reason and rationality may be restored to the regulation of food and drugs.

If so, that pleasant condition will have been a long time coming. For more than 20 years, from the time that Congressman James Joseph Delaney of New York added a little amendment to the Food and Drug Act, federal regulators, food processors and consumers have been trapped in the rigid language of the Delaney Clause.

Delaney's contribution was to say that every food product or food additive must be banned absolutely if after appropriate tests, it is found to induce cancer in man "or animals." Manifestly, so inflexible a rule leaves no room for scientific or political judgment. Under the Delaney Clause, it is immaterial if a particular product, such as saccharin, is of incalculable value to victims of diabetes. It is irrelevant that repeated studies have failed to prove that saccharin causes cancer in human beings. All that counted in the matter of saccharin was that one Canadian test indicated that massive doses of saccharin could cause cancer of the bladder in rats. The iron gates of Delaney clanged shut.

Well, not quite shut. Congress intervened to prevent the Food and Drug Administration from taking the drastic action the Delaney Clause would have required. Congress also directed the National Academy of Sciences to study and report on the whole situation. It was this report that appeared a few days ago.

With only seven of its 37 members dissenting, the academy's ad hoc committee denounced the "rigidity" and the "complicated, inflexible and inconsistent" requirements of the Delaney Clause. In its place, the academy suggested that consideration be given to new risk classifications for foods and food additives: high, moderate and low risk. And why not?

The idea makes great good sense. It accords with old ideals of personal responsibility, and it ties in with the idea of cost/benefit ratios. Yes, the academy's approach would require value judgments from key people in the FDA; they no longer could lock themselves safely within the iron bars of Delaney. But the public would benefit from a flexibility that would provide something better than the two extremes — unlimited use or absolute prohibition.

The problem of saccharin comes first to mind. The FDA's idea, in sedulous obedience to Delaney, is to ban the artificial sweetener altogether from diet foods and drinks. The unusual Canadian experiment, involving massive doses of saccharin to two generations of rats, did induce tumors in male animals. But studies involving thousands of diabetics (and different thousands of bladder cancer victims), have established no correlation between sac-

Strain On The Fleet

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration's apparent intention to show the flag indefinitely near the Arabian Peninsula could thin U.S. naval power in other critical areas and further stretch the smallest U.S. fleet since before World War II.

The 80,000-ton aircraft carrier Constellation is under orders to sail from the U.S. naval base at Subic Bay in the Philippines to the Arabian Sea area with several escorting warships and an oiler-supply vessel.

Administration officials say the move is intended to underscore U.S. concern about the security of Saudi Arabia and other oil-producing states in that region, especially after Soviet-supported South Yemen's occupation of North Yemeni territory and the instability following the Iranian upheaval.

Meanwhile, three other U.S. warships, two frigates and a destroyer, were refueling at Djibouti, on the Gulf of Eden, before taking up station, replacing three other warships heading back to the Pacific.

Officials said it is uncertain how long the Constellation and its escorts will remain in those waters, or whether the three other warships will conduct an extended cruise.

If President Carter decides to keep such a continuing naval presence in that critical region, it could reduce the striking power of the U.S. 7th Fleet in the western Pacific and possibly the U.S. 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean.

The departure of the Constellation will leave only one U.S. aircraft carrier in the western Pacific. The 7th Fleet is down to 50 ships, compared to about 125, including three carriers, before the Vietnam War.

The three smaller warships pausing at Djibouti were detached from the 6th Fleet, at least temporarily reducing that force, which normally has a total of about 45 vessels.

Policymakers would face the decision of whether to scale down the two key fleets to support a continued naval presence in the Indian Ocean and Arabian Sea, or to deploy replacements from the east and west coasts of the United States.

The Navy now has 453 ships, its fewest since the beginning of World War II, and only about half as many as at the

THE GALLUP POLL

Carter Versus Connally

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — President Jimmy Carter leads GOP challenger John Connally 53 to 33 percent in a trial heat among registered voters taken following Connally's recent announcement of his candidacy for the presidency.

While Carter leads Connally by a wide margin at the present time, Connally's current showing compares favorably with the vote given two other possible GOP contenders, former President Gerald Ford and former California Gov. Ronald Reagan. As reported by the Gallup Poll in January, Carter led Ford 53 to 39 percent and Reagan 57 to 35 percent.

Connally Now Third In Run For GOP Nomination
As reported by the Gallup Poll Sunday, Connally has moved into third place among the choices of Republicans for the GOP nomination in 1980.

Connally wins the support of 12 percent of GOP voters nationwide who were asked to choose from a list of 15 men who have been prominently mentioned as possible GOP nominees. Continuing to lead the pack, but now by a narrower margin, is Reagan, who wins the support of 31 percent of Republican voters. On Reagan's heels in the latest survey, with 26 percent, is Ford, whose 1980 presidential intentions are still unknown. Fourth behind Connally is Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee with 8 percent.

Here is the question asked:
"Suppose the presidential election were being held today. If President Jimmy Carter were the Democratic candidate and John Connally were the Republican candidate, which would you like to see win?" (Those who named another person or who were undecided were asked: "As of today, do you lean more to Carter, the Democrat, or to Connally, the Republican?")

Here are the results, based on registered voters:
Carter Vs. Connally

Carter	53%
Connally	33%
Other	3%
Undecided	11%

Analysis of Connally's regional support shows him to be stronger in the Midwest than elsewhere.

The regional results, based on registered voters:

	Carter	Connally	Other	Undecided
East	53%	31%	5%	11%
Midwest	53	38	2	7
South	57	33	3	7
West	46	30	2	22

The results reported today are based on in-person interviews with 1,098 registered voters out of a total sample of 1,512 adults, 18 and older. Interviews were conducted in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period Feb. 2-5.

Strength For Today

SENSITIVITY-LOSS

One of the noblest characters of modern times was Father Damien, the Catholic missionary who, many years ago, went to minister to the lepers of far-off Molokai. For thirteen years he shared their deprivations and hardships. Often he was warned against intimate contact with these people and was told that unless he took greater precautions the dread disease of leprosy would lay hold on him.

One day he chanced to spill some boiling water on his foot. To his amazement it produced no pain whatsoever. It was then that he knew his doom was sealed. His loss of sensitivity made plain that he had contracted leprosy.

People often have leprosy of the soul, and in this case also the spiritual malady is characterized by a loss of sensitivity. People in this condition are no longer touched by the pain of others. They can shrug their shoulders at the evil in the world, saying, "I didn't cause it, I can't cure it, it's none of my affair." The deadly disease is upon them.

Change In Corporate Reports

By JOHN CUNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Bigger and heavier than ever, they are now or soon will be weighing down the postman's bag, millions upon millions of them, many in full color. It is corporate annual report time.

Every shareholder gets one, and when you consider that just one company, American Telephone & Telegraph, has about 3 million of them, you get an inkling of the volume. But only an inkling.

A study by one of the leading producers of annual reports, Corpcom Services, says annual report distribution for a midsize company is likely to include twice as many copies for non-shareholders.

Those other copies go to analysts, investment clubs, students, colleges, libraries and any other individual or group that shows the barest interest. Most companies consider them good promotional tools.

But they pay the price for getting their companies known. Corpcom's 1974 survey of the 1,300 largest concerns showed the top third spent about 65 cents a copy, those in the middle $1 and the smallest $1.43.

The large companies obviously have the benefit of volume in lowering their price per copy, but prices for all companies have soared in the past few years, in some instances by an estimated 25 percent a year.

Nevertheless, company opposition to the reports is probably less than it used to be. In the 1960s, many companies complained the reports were a nuisance, mainly because they often were unread.

They changed their minds, however, as the consumer movement gained momentum and as government regulation became a bigger force to contend with. It became more important, they felt, to get their story told.

As a consequence, annual reports today are generally better designed and written. William Dunk, president of Corpcom, which produces or consults on more than 50 reports, says the goal now is to deliver a message rather than just disclose what is required. At least two messages can be discerned in this year's reports: the dangers of inflation and the difficulties of accurately reporting its impact; and "wasteful" federal regulations.

Of the latter, Dunk says "it's coming from everywhere." More companies than ever, he maintains, are becoming corporate advocates, proclaiming the merits of the private sector vs. Washington.

Year-to-year variations in these messages permit academics, among others, to assess some broad-gauge changes in the corporate psyche. Concern for environment one year, inflation worries in another.

Already Talking Use Of 'Banked' Oil

By BILL CRIDER
Associated Press Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Strategic Petroleum Reserve has thus far stored only 76 million barrels of crude oil but already there's talk in Washington about pumping it out and using it.

However, project manager Donald Mazur of New Orleans said Wednesday he knows of no decision by President Carter to start taking crude out of the underground caverns in the fall.

If the oil should be needed, he added, it will be available on demand. Energy Secretary James Schlesinger told reporters in Washington Tuesday there was a "lively possibility" the government might dip into its reserve by fall to bolster supplies of winter heating oil.

But Mazur said "There is no decision I know of to tap the reserve." Actually, if demand came suddenly there would be a 45-day delay. It would take that long to install extraction pumps, on a crash basis, that could put 200,000 barrels a day into the pipelines.

The reserve of crude oil is in big caverns scoured out within mountain-size underground salt domes along the Gulf Coast in Louisiana and Texas.

The eventual capacity of the reserve, conceived in 1975 as an insurance policy against another major energy crisis, was planned at 1 billion barrels. But in his 1980 budget, President Carter lowered the projected capacity to 750 million barrels.

The United States uses about 20 million barrels of crude a day.

Three storage sites are in operation — at Bryan Mound, near Freeport, Texas, at Hack-berry, La., which is near Lake Charles, and at Bayou Choctaw, near Baton Rouge.

All have connections to major pipelines which feed refineries, mainly in Louisiana, Texas and Oklahoma but some as far north as Chicago.

Normal construction plans call for pump-out capability to be completed before late September or early October. At that time, the system's "draw-down" capacity would be 1 million barrels a day.

Drawdown power would be increased to 3.5 million barrels a day a year later. A barrel, the common unit of oil measurement, is 42 gallons.

The reserve is far short of its goal of 500 million barrels in storage by the end of 1982 and the loss of Iranian crude has made the market so tight the reserve has difficulty finding oil to pour in the caverns.

"The program is not dead, but it is limping a bit," said Parker. "We can't get enough oil right now. We have only 15 million barrels on contract for the next three months, when we could pump in 30 million."

Psychiatrist Sentenced For Drug Distribution

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A U.S. District Court judge sentenced a Salisbury psychiatrist Wednesday to seven years in jail for illegal distribution of controlled drugs.

Judge Hiram H. Ward also sentenced two Rowan County pharmacists to three years each on charges of illegally distributing controlled drugs.

Dr. Edward R. Spicer of Salisbury was convicted on Tuesday of writing prescriptions for such drugs as Percodan and Quaalude without a legitimate medical reason. The two pharmacists, Billy T. Coward of Landis and Robert D. Coffey of Kannapolis, were convicted last month of conspiring with another psychiatrist to illegally distribute drugs.

The other psychiatrist, Dr. Gerald Shingleton, was to be tried with Coward and Coffey but was committed to a federal psychiatric hospital to determine his competency to stand trial.

The charges stem from an investigation last summer by state and federal agents who posed as patients.

Ward sentenced Spicer to two seven-year prison terms to run concurrently. Ward added a three-year special parole term to one term and a two-year parole to the other. The parole terms are to be served after the prison terms.

He sentenced Coward to two three-year terms, to run concurrently. As in Spicer's case, he added a three-year parole and two-year parole to the prison terms. Coffey's sentence was identical to Coward's.

Ward said he had to consider Spicer's blame greater than that of the two pharmacists because they could not have filled the prescriptions unless a doctor had first written them.

Attorneys for the two pharmacists asked Ward for probationary sentences for their clients in view of their good reputations. They argued that the pharmacists had no way of knowing whether there were legitimate medical reasons for the prescriptions and that they filled them in good faith.

Ward said that he was obligated as a federal judge to make no distinctions between individuals on the basis of their stations in life.

Spicer's attorney said the State Board of Medical Examiners has already revoked Spicer's license to practice medicine.

Ward called Spicer's case "a sad, sad, thing" but said that he felt obliged to impose an active sentence both as punishment and as a warning to other doctors.

Judge Refuses Dismiss PCB-Dumping Charges

HALIFAX, N. C. (AP) — A Superior Court judge has refused to dismiss charges against a father and his son who are accused of participating in the dumping of toxic PCB-laced oil along more than 200 miles of North Carolina roadside last summer.

The ruling was one of several handed down by Judge Donald L. Smith Wednesday on motions by defense attorneys for Robert E. "Buck" Ward Jr., his son, Robert E. Ward III, and their Raleigh firm, Ward Transformer Co., Inc.

The Wards were charged after three New York state men, Robert J. Burns and his sons, Timothy and Randall, pleaded guilty in federal court in Raleigh to dumping the PCBs along the roadsides. State charges still are pending against them.

Trial dates have not been set in the state charges.

Smith also ruled that one charge — conspiracy to dump the PCB material — must be reduced from felony to misdemeanor status.

The dumping of PCBs ordinarily is considered a misdemeanor under state law. However, there is a provision that a misdemeanor done with secrecy, malice, deceit or intent to defraud may be upgraded to a felony. State prosecutors brought the charges under that interpretation.

The same law also provides that a conspiracy charge cannot be upgraded to a felony, which carries a maximum of 10 years in prison. A misdemeanor carries a maximum of two years of imprisonment.

The judge also ruled that the search warrant, with which agents seized 268 items from the Ward firm offices, was invalid for prosecution of the company.

Donald W. Stephens, assistant state attorney general, contended in court earlier that tapes and statements seized were part of a cover-up plotted by Ward. Prosecutors say the seized material included PCB scrapings, and tape recordings and statements by Burns in which he took all the blame for the PCB dumpings.

FIRST SHAD — R. T. Daugherty of Kinston caught the first hickory shad of the annual Grifton Shad Festival Fishing Contest. The shad was taken Tuesday, Feb. 28, at Pitchkettle Creek east of Grifton, and weighed 1 pound, 12 ounces. Helms Offers Green Support

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., says he would support Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green if Green would switch to the Republican Party and run for governor in 1980.

Helms on Wednesday confirmed reports that he had discussed the matter with Green and told him he would have a better chance of becoming governor if he ran on the GOP ticket.

There had been reports earlier this week that Helms and former Gov. James Holshouser had asked Green to abandon the Democratic Party and become a Republican.

Helms said he and his political adviser, Thomas F. Ellis, discussed the situation with Green last fall. He said they met briefly when Green stopped by Helms' house after the senator had undergone back surgery.

The three discussed "the various elements of support available to a candidate in the Democratic Party and the Republican Party," Helms said. He said that was the only time he had discussed with Green the possibility of a switch in parties.

Gov. Jim Hunt, a Democrat, is expected to seek re-election next year.

"It was discussed, frankly, that Jimmy would have a far better chance if he switched parties," Helms said in a telephone interview from his Washington office. "I'm not playing any strategy game. As far as any plotting and scheming goes, there wasn't any, but a lot of things in the whole political spectrum were discussed."

Helms said the bipartisan N.C. Congressional Club, which has backed him, likely would support Green if the lieutenant governor decided to challenge Hunt in a Democratic primary.

charin and cancer in humans. The FDA's decree is irrational.

The academy committee's moderate recommendations echo the position that is constantly urged by the independent, non-profit American Council on Science and Health. Headed by Dr. Elizabeth N. Whelan, a research associate at the Harvard School of Public Health, the council provides a cool, intelligent counterweight to the fire-alarm frenzies of those who see cancer scares everywhere.

Dr. Whelan and her associated certainly do not pooh-pooh cancer as such — not when 400,000 persons die every year from the disease. They do criticize the hysteria that has invaded public debate on the relationship between cancer and the environment. They are skeptical of the evidence most often adduced to "prove" that such-and-such chemical "causes" cancer in humans. Over the past 30 years, while the use of new chemicals has increased, the incidence of cancer actually has declined.

What is most urgently needed in this whole emotional area is a measure of common sense. Whether we are talking about nitrates in bacon, or red dye in maraschino cherries, or cyclamates in soft drinks, or saccharin for a diabetic, the government's primary role should be to publicize the risk, the cost, and the benefit — and let the people find their own way.

peak of the Vietnam War in 1968.

Generally, the Navy tries to rotate ships so that for every one deployed overseas, about two are at home ports for training, repair and crew rest.

However, above average deployments from fleets based in the United States may cut into that pattern and lead to additional sea duty for sailors.

Extended deployments also may be harder on some older ships and add to overhaul and maintenance costs. The Navy is just now recovering from a long backlog of overdue ship overhauls stemming from extended fleet operations during the Vietnam War.

Since the Vietnam War, the Navy has been retiring sizable numbers of older ships, which are more costly to maintain, while investing money in expensive new ships, which are beginning to enter the fleet in numbers.

Report Measles Cases On Four N.C. Campuses

By The Associated Press
State health officials are stepping up efforts to immunize college students against German measles following outbreaks of the disease on four campuses of the University of North Carolina system.

Cases of German measles, rubella, have been reported at Appalachian State University in Boone, North Carolina State in Raleigh, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and East Carolina University in Greenville.

"The problem is students have gone home on spring break, taking the German measles with them," said Paul Renard, assistant immunization program coordinator for the Disease Control Branch of the state Division of Health Services.

"They will spread it everywhere they go," Renard said.

Will Compete As Trouble-Shooters

Students in D. H. Conley High School's auto mechanics class have entered the Plymouth Trouble Shooting Contest, an annual competition which recognizes outstanding high school mechanics. Winners are honored with more than $250,000 in scholarships and prizes.

D. H. Conley will select four of its best auto mechanics students for representation in the state competition. The state meet includes a written test, held across the state on March 26, and a mechanical competition to be held in Raleigh May 3.

Students must achieve a high score on the written test to qualify for the mechanical contest. During the mechanical meet, students are paired in teams and assigned new Plymouth cars, all with identical malfunctions deliberately installed. Teams race the clock and each other to restore their cars to proper operating conditions.

State champions win expense-paid trips to the National Finals at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, June 17-20. A total of $21,500 in scholarships are awarded to top ten teams, with $5,000 to be distributed among first-place winners. National champs will also be sent to Washington, D. C. and San Francisco to compete against teams from Canada and Mexico for the North American title.

Brown Lung Bill Sought

RALEIGH, N. C. (AP) — Members of the Carolina Brown Lung Association, declaring they are "treated like criminals" as a result of state compensation laws, have urged the Guilford County legislative delegation to work for legislation to ease the process of filing claims for compensation for the crippling ailment.

The association members, each ailing from brown lung after years of working in textile mills, told the legislators Wednesday that the process of filing a claim can take years, and they asked the delegation to sponsor four bills to speed up the system.

Members of the association, who planned to visit legislators from other areas today, said they need a law to speed the handling of claims under the Workmen's Compensation Act of persons who have brown lung.

The said a law also was needed that would presume anyone who has a lung disorder and has worked in cotton dust for seven years has brown lung.

They also proposed:

- A law requiring a textile firm's insurance company to pay legal fees of persons making brown lung claims. Fees now are paid from the Workmen's Compensation awards.
- A law allowing persons who worked in a cotton mill prior to 1963 to file for compensation for brown lung disability. Persons whose last exposure to cotton dust was prior to 1963 now are prohibited from filing for compensation.

The Farmville Center serves 40 mentally retarded children. Ms. Atkinson has been with the center for five years. She formerly taught school in Oklahoma.

"This is the danger we face. We will be able to set up clinics to do immunization when most of them return to school this next week."

He said 20 cases of German measles were reported at Appalachian State and there were 14 at N.C. State, nine at UNC-Chapel Hill and an undisclosed number at East Carolina.

Renard and nurses at Appalachian State gave inoculations for red and German measles to about 950 students on Wednesday and planned to continue administering the vaccine today. Spring vacation at the school in Boone begins Friday.

He said about 100 students at N.C. State were immunized before the spring break at the school began. Immunization programs will be set up next week after the students return to campus.

The state has six regional immunization coordinators who are in charge of setting up inoculation programs.

There was an outbreak of red measles in the state last month, with Mecklenburg County reporting 43 cases of the disease. Guilford County had five cases and eight other counties had one case each.

German measles is caused by a contagious virus that can cause birth defects when a pregnant woman is infected.

Space Shuttle Lumbers Across Mojave Desert

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer
PALMDALE, Calif. (AP) — The space shuttle Columbia that will eventually make 100 roundtrips into space lumbered from its hangar before dawn today for a snail-paced ride over 38 miles of dusty Mojave Desert roads.

The 157,000-pound shuttle — designed to leave Earth like a rocket and glide back home like an airplane — crept along at 5 mph to the Dryden Flight Research Center at Edwards Air Force Base near Los Angeles. There, the Columbia will be mounted atop a Boeing 747 jumbo jet for a two-day flight to its launch site at Cape Canaveral, Fla.

The two-day flight, which will include stopovers in El Paso and San Antonio, Texas, and Elgin Air Force Base, Fla., is to begin Friday.

Mounted on a gigantic 90-wheel trailer, the Columbia dwarfed its escort of more than a dozen vehicles, including police cars, a fire engine and a small bus filled with security personnel, when it emerged from its hangar at Rockwell International's assembly plant.

The shuttle, America's first reusable spaceship, is capable of hauling 65,000 pounds of cargo and seven people into space. It is designed for at least 100 trips into space and back.

The Columbia's maiden flight, already postponed several times, is tentatively scheduled for Nov. 9, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration says.

The 122-foot ship, with a tail fin towering five stories high, is a hybrid — part rocket, part airplane and part spacecraft.

The shuttle missions will include putting satellites into space for research, weather forecasting, communications and military reconnaissance. Eventually the shuttle fleet may ferry people and parts for building solar satellites, space factories, moon bases and habitats for colonies far from Earth.

students for the 1979-1980 school year is now underway.

For the past several days, forms and letters have been sent to known parents of children who will be entering these grades, with a request that they complete required forms and take steps to pre-register their children.

"This needs to be done at the earliest possible moment," Ross said, "so that we can have information on enrollment projections for the coming school year."

For those entering kindergarten, basic requirements are:

- That a child be five years old on or before October 16, 1979.
- That plans be made for a pre-school medical examination and for having the child get required immunizations needed for permission to enter public schools.

Requirements for children who will be entering the first grade for the first time in the Greenville City Schools are basically the same as for kindergartners, except that a child must be six years old on or before October 16, 1979.

Ross added that for children presently enrolled in a kindergarten program, it will not be necessary to complete the forms.

Additionally, parents of eligible children who have not yet received a census/pre-registration form, are urged to contact the principal of any of the elementary schools or the Central School Office, 752-4192 for guidance and assistance.

Completed forms can be turned in to any elementary school principal, who will see that it gets to the proper school within the system.

Immunizations required by state law can be procured from a family doctor or obtained through the Pitt County Community Health Dept. any day Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Arrest Two In Cigarette Theft

Edgar Earl Lloyd, 17 of 505A Darden Dr. and John Ray Cannon, 18 of 107A Howard Cir. were arrested yesterday by Greenville Police in connection with the theft of two cartons of cigarettes from Harris' Super Market at 2512 Memorial Dr.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Lloyd was charged with larceny and with assault with a deadly weapon in connection with the incident, while Cannon was charged with aiding and abetting in larceny.

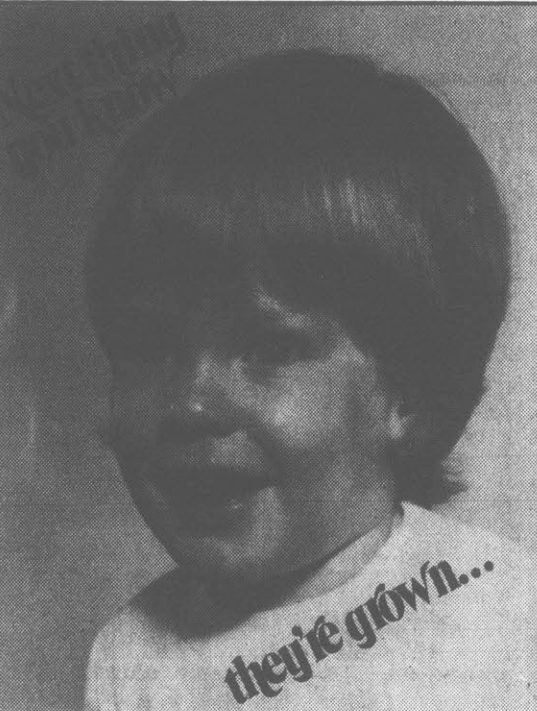

The chief said a store official attempted to stop the two men and failed when Lloyd allegedly pulled a pair of scissors from his pocket. The store official flagged down a passing North Carolina Highway Patrol trooper who stopped the two just as police arrived.

World Interdependence Topic Of Discussion By Economist

ECU News Bureau
The increase of nations' interdependence upon one another is as influential a "revolution" as the industrial revolution of the 18th and 19th centuries, says an East Carolina University economist.

Dr. Umesh Gulati, professor of economics at ECU, spoke on "Trade and the Dollar: Coping with Interdependence" at a recent Great Decisions '79 lecture/discussion here.

Signs of world interdependence are many, noted Gulati: the rising amount of international trade, the growing numbers of tourists traveling to foreign nations, increases in financial capital invested abroad, and higher levels of production originating from multinational companies.

Nearly a fourth of our imports are from U.S. companies located in foreign nations, he added, and the amount of "Eurodollars" (U.S. dollars banked in Europe) exceeds all checking and savings deposits in United States banks.

The immediate implication of interdependence is that no nation "can escape the effects of developments in another country," whether they be political or "due to natural causes," said Gulati.

The isolationist response to interdependence — cut our ties to foreign development, erect trade barriers against imports, control the movement of foreign capital — would have disastrous results, said Gulati.

"This would mean depriving ourselves of the advantage of getting cheaper and better goods and of maximizing returns for our investors."

"This would surely invite retaliation from foreign countries and our exports would be restricted, too."

A "more sensible" response to our interdependence with other nations is cooperation, he concluded.

"This would involve major industrial countries using various international forums as well as summit meetings to coordinate their policies to achieve agreed-upon goals."

The Great Decisions series, a national program co-sponsored locally by East Carolina University, is designed to inform the public on foreign affairs issues. Topics in this year's series of lecture/discussions include international terrorism, U.S. relations with African nations, and the NATO-Soviet balance.

Farmville Program Of Employee Assistance

FARMVILLE — Employees of the Town of Farmville are now eligible for help in coping with personal problems under a new program coordinated by the Pitt Co. Mental Health Center.

The program is designed to identify at an early stage problems that may affect work performance, provide the employee with assistance resources, and preserve the employee's ability to perform his or her job satisfactorily.

"The Employee Assistance Program will allow all employees and their immediate family members to seek help for personal and health problems such as alcohol abuse, family crises, marital difficulties, and financial and legal problems," said Town Administrator Patrick Thomas. "Many private and public employers have already recognized the importance of an assistance program, and this is a valuable addition to our employee benefits program."

"Job performance is the only reason for referrals to the Employee Assistance Program and employee participation is by choice. Voluntary referrals are encouraged. The town's program policy declares that the stigma sometimes associated with personal problems such as alcoholism or emotional upheaval is incorrect and out-of-date. In this increasingly complex world, many persons experience personal problems which may be difficult to handle without professional assistance."

Orientation sessions for supervisors and employees were held on two days recently by Occupational Program Consultant Teresa Lucas and Thomas. Approximately 200 employees in North Carolina have implemented Employee Assistance Programs to help restore troubled employees to acceptable job performance levels. The program is offered to businesses and industries of all sizes through the Pitt Co. Mental Health Center. Further information is available from Ms. Lucas, 752-7151.

Make up for three days lost because of a snow storm were announced. One will be a teacher work day, another one of the days scheduled for the Easter holiday, and the third make up day will be at the end of the school year.

Elder E. M. Davis invites the public.

Best Fertilizer In Chicken Coop

BOLINGBROKE, Ga. (AP) — Seaborn Howard says the best fertilizer is found in the chicken coop, although mule manure is most appropriate for growing watermelons.

Howard, who has a small farm in this central Georgia town, raises his fruits and vegetables without man-made chemicals.

The best fertilizer is "right over there in the chicken coop," he said, adding that he sometimes uses cow manure in his garden.

Howard, 69, scoffs at using the Farmer's Almanac for reference. He said it's used mostly by "city farmers" who'd be better off talking to an experienced farmer like him.

Howard also advises planting the first crop of the year on Good Friday and planting other crops during full moons.

Voted Teacher Supplement Pay

WILLIAMSTON — Members of the Martin County Board of Education Tuesday approved payment of a teacher's supplement to be funded from local sources. The action followed a request presented by representatives of the Association of Classroom Teachers.

Transportation for county students enrolled in the Extended Day Program located at Williamston High School was approved. This will entail transporting about 30 students from three pick-up points — Oak City, Jamesville and Robersonville, with the Robersonville run to go via Bear Grass. The Extended Day Program is held from 5 to 9 p. m.

New Recycling Processes Seen

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — New recycling processes are expected to help the textile industry curb the flow of chemicals into the nation's streams and the atmosphere.

The chemical-recycling technique shows great promise toward achieving the environmental goal of zero discharge, according to Nick Ince, manager of environmental engineering for J.P. Stevens.

Millions of pounds of polyvinyl alcohol (PVA) are already being recovered annually before it spills into the environment, he said. PVA is an agent used in sizing warp yarns prior to weaving textile products.

Previously, Ince said, chemicals removed from textiles were discarded into the effluent stream, requiring suitable waste treatment plants.

Pay Raise Is Voted To Substitute Teachers

By LORI COOKE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A joint resolution calling for a raise in pay for substitute teachers from $20 to $30 a day won final approval in the General Assembly Wednesday.

But once the resolution was approved, no one seemed to have any idea where the extra money would come from — or whether there really was any extra money.

The resolution, which received final approval in the House Wednesday, asks the state director of the budget to transfer funds within the education budget to fund the raise.

But state Budget Officer John Williams said his office only reacts to requests from the state Board of Education in making such transfers.

"We respect the resolution of the General Assembly," Williams said, "but we react to requests by the Board of Education."

The board's next meeting is scheduled for April 5.

Supporters of the bill said they hope enough surplus is available in the education budget for the current fiscal year to pay for the increase, estimated at $1 million. State fiscal analysts have predicted that there may not be enough money to last through the current school year.

The Joint Appropriations Committee on Education is now looking into ways to finance the increase during the next fiscal year.

Sen. Carolyn Mathis, D-Mecklenburg, who introduced the bill, said she had been told by people in the state Department of Public Education that there should be money available by the middle of March for this year's raises.

She said she could not recall who had told her, but that it wasn't Joe Porter, controller of the department.

Porter last month requested the state Board to rescind its expression of support for the higher salaries because he did not think there would be enough money to pay for them, Mrs. Mathis said. The board had expressed support in January and rescinded it at Porter's request.

ATLANTA (AP) — The U.S. Department of Labor has announced that 67 state and local governments in the Southeast will receive $118.8 million to operate the Summer Youth Employment Program this year.

The program provides 10-week jobs for economically disadvantaged youths aged 14 through 21 at the minimum wage of $2.90 an hour.

The 67 state and local governments, which serve as Comprehensive Employment and Training Act sponsors throughout the eight-state Southeast region, will share the $118.8 million, U.S. Secretary of Labor Ray Marshall announced Wednesday.

The region includes Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee.

Marshall said steps are being taken to improve the 1979 program because "there have been problems with the Summer Youth Program in the past."

The program will be monitored in 10 different cities to make certain that regulations governing the program are not abused, he said.

"I am convinced that this program can work only if the Labor Department applies a strong guiding hand to the program," he said. "We will continue to work in this direction to assure that youth this summer and in future years are providing meaningful work and job training."

Last summer, one million youths were employed nationally at approximately 165,000 worksites under the program, he said.

Williamston Bd. OKs Brochures

WILLIAMSTON — By a 2-2 vote, members of the Williamston Town Board at its March meeting approved the appropriation of $750 of revenue sharing money to be used for the publication and distribution of publicity brochures.

William D. Jenkins, president of the Williamston Chamber of Commerce, the sponsoring agent for the brochures, told board members that $2,000 of the total cost had been funded through a state grant, and that the county had agreed to pay $1,000. The town of Robertsville recently authorized $250 to the project, leaving Williamston to pay the remaining $750.

A package project covering 13 streets in Williamston was presented by Roger Mann, a consulting engineer with River and Associates, Greenville. Total costs for the project is set for $200,285. Currently, $13,000 in Powell Bill funds are available for the coming year to undertake some of the work.

A couple of problems in connection with the town's new fire station were brought to the attention of board members. One is that no sidewalks were installed in front of the new station, making it necessary for pedestrians to walk out into the street. Another problem is the absence of a buffer zone between the station and homes in the area, called for in zoning laws, but the architect's plans called only for seeding the vacant area. Action has been directed to install a sidewalk, but no action was taken on the absence of a buffer zone.

Note was made of the fact that this is the 200th anniversary of the founding of Williamston, and Speakers will include Mrs. R. T. Commander, who will speak at Watson's Chapel and Wharton Trinity, Mrs. James C. Lupton, at Lane's Chapel and Mrs. Mickie Robey at Ayden.

Mrs. Clara Jane Hardee, district president, and other members of the district team will attend all meetings.

Registration for all the meetings will begin at 9:30 a.m. with the program beginning at 10 o'clock. The host church will serve lunch.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill that would require every automobile in North Carolina to display a sticker proving county property taxes have been paid on it advanced in the state House Wednesday.

The recommendation of a special legislative study commission, the plan is strongly backed by most of the county governments in the state, and supporters said it could result in the collection of $5 million or more in delinquent taxes each year.

The House Highway Safety Committee approved the bill on a voice vote, but sent it to the Finance Committee rather than the full House for more study.

"It would give us an invaluable tool in getting property listed on the books, not only the automobiles but also the personal property that comes with it," said Wake County Commission Chairman Betty Knudson.

The bill was approved despite strong objection from Rep. Jim Morgan, D-Guilford, who said his county government was not interested in the stickers. Morgan said the sticker requirement would inconvenience drivers, who already must show license tag stickers, inspection stickers and often city stickers, in their car windows.

"You're penalizing the 90 percent ... or 98 percent of the people who pay their taxes, for a few that don't pay their taxes," he said.

Under the bill, drivers of cars without stickers could be fined $500 and face six months in prison. The owners would face payment of current and back taxes.

"We're now asking the Highway Patrol and police to enforce our tax laws, and I don't believe that's what they ought to do," Morgan said.

A bill filed for introduction today by Sen. Ralph Scott, D-Alamance, would revise a state law that now excludes persons who hold a seat on another state board from being on the University of North Carolina Board of Governors.

The bill is aimed at allowing J.J. Sansom of Raleigh to return to the board, if elected. Sansom resigned his seat on the board rather than give up his other seat on the state Banking Commission.

Gambling
Sen. Cecil Hill, D-Transylvania, filed a bill aimed at strengthening laws against gambling. The proposal is part of Gov. Jim Hunt's anti-crime package. Under the bill, a second gambling conviction within 10 years would be considered a felony. The bill also would allow the closing of any place where gambling violations occur.

SINGAPORE (AP) — Singapore is making it hot for smokers.

Tourists are being reminded that smoking in air-conditioned taxis is illegal and could result in a fine of $500 or three months imprisonment.

of a bill that would provide a tax cut for all North Carolinians. The subcommittee endorsed the bill, sponsored by Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, instead of the tax-relief proposal offered by Hunt. The bill now goes to the full House Finance Committee for consideration.

Lilley's bill would increase all income-tax exemptions — for spouses, dependents and heads of households — by 20 percent. Hunt's proposal, which was introduced by Rep. John Gamble, D-Lenoir, would benefit only families with children and other dependents by increasing the dependent exemption from $600 to $1,000.

Shipping

The House gave final approval to a bill which would exempt from the North Carolina state sales tax property purchased in North Carolina to be shipped abroad, Rep. Aaron Plyler, D-Union, who sponsored the bill, said it is designed to encourage the use of state ports at Wilmington and Morehead City.

He said goods purchased for use in foreign countries now can avoid the state sales tax if the buyer ships them out of state to ports such as those at Charleston or Norfolk. The bill now goes to the Senate.

A related bill, which would exempt cargo containers from any tax, will come up for a final vote today after the House gave it tentative approval Wednesday. Cargo containers are used by large ships for handling goods.

Gas

John Maxheim, president of Piedmont Natural Gas Co., told the Senate Public Utilities and Energy Committee that Piedmont will have 42 percent more natural gas this year than last because of a Court of Appeals decision in January.

The utility expects another increase of 13 percent in 1980, Maxheim said.

"The additions to our gas supply are good news for North Carolina," Maxheim said. "This means, hopefully, that no emergency gas will need to be purchased this year — which of course is more expensive."

Prisons

The House Corrections Committee gave a favorable report to a bill which makes technical changes in laws relating to criminal procedure. If the bill is passed, a prisoner serving a sentence of at least 30 days but less than 18 months would be eligible for parole after serving one-third of the maximum sentence.

David Blackwell of the state Corrections Department told the committee that under cur-

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market edged upward in moderate trading today with gambling stocks as the standouts for the second consecutive session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which had been up by nearly 2 points in the early going, gave ground later on. The Dow index was up .34 at 834.63 by noon. Overall, gainers outnumbered losers by a 7-4 margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

The market took in stride news of a 1 percent rise in the producer price index in February. The report, released before the market opened, indicates steep increases ahead in consumer prices. Analysts said that report was anticipated.

Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps said that disruptions in oil supplies mean that the department's forecast of a $9 billion improvement in the U.S. trade deficit this year will have to be revised.

Meanwhile, President Carter embarked on his Middle East peace mission. That trip had given the market a lift on Wednesday when the Dow industrial rose more than 7 points but that strength did not carry over early today.

Big Board volume was a moderate 11.96 million shares in the first two hours of trading, down from 13.04 million the previous day.

Golden Nugget which added 3 1/2 points on Wednesday added another 2 1/2 climbing to 26 1/2 by midday on the American Stock Exchange. The company plans to open a hotel-casino in Atlantic City. Resorts International Class A stock, which opened the first Atlantic City casino, rose 1/4 to 5 1/4 as the second most active Amex stock.

The NYSE composite index gained .09 to 55.31. The Amex market value index rose .84 to 165.66.

Deputy Injured During Arrest

WINTERVILLE — Pitt deputies and local police charged a Winterville man on an assortment of counts following an early morning incident today that left a deputy injured and a police vehicle damaged.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that his department received a call at 1:17 a.m. today from the C. O. Crawford residence on Rt. 7, Greenville reporting that a man had knocked on the door of the Crawford house and asked to use the telephone. Crawford told deputies he offered to make the call for the man and while he was doing so, the man began kicking in the front door.

Winterville Police and Pitt deputies responded to the call, it was pointed out, and apprehended William Manning, 30, Box 554, Winterville, the sheriff said. Manning allegedly resisted the arrest and escaped.

According to the sheriff, Manning was arrested some three hours later when he turned himself in at the magistrates office in Greenville.

Deputy Walter Cobb was reported injured slightly in the escape incident at Crawford's house, Sheriff Tyson said, and a radio in a patrol vehicle owned by the Town of Winterville sustained damages estimated at $200.

Manning was charged with damaging the Crawford residence, breaking and entering of an occupied dwelling, trespassing, resisting arrest and assault on an officer, and destroying property owned by the town of Winterville.

Bond for Manning was set at $15,000, Sheriff Tyson said.

New Offers By HEW Expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — Officials of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare are expected to offer new proposals to officials of the University of North Carolina today in an attempt to break the deadlock over desegregation.

Under the proposal, which has not been confirmed by HEW officials, North Carolina would be required to spend more money and authorize new programs at the five traditionally black campuses.

In exchange, HEW is believed willing to postpone its insistence that program duplication be eliminated at nearby white and black campuses, it was reported earlier this week by a Raleigh newspaper.

Duplication of programs has been a major stumbling block in reaching an agreement on the university system's desegregation plan.

The negotiations today come less than a week before a court-imposed deadline on HEW. The department must reach agreement with the university or begin cutting off its federal financial help by March 14. The university system gets about $89 million a year in federal aid.

But despite the apparent shift in HEW's position, North Carolina officials say reaching agreement still won't be easy.

One difficulty may be getting the legislature to commit large additional sums immediately for improving the black campuses. Gov. Jim Hunt said recently it would be difficult for the state to commit additional money to the black schools during the next two years.

John Williams, Hunt's chief budget officer, said the legislature would have to take the money out of the budgets of other schools.

Some reservations were also expressed by North Carolina officials.

Ship's Name To Be In Script

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The Navy is putting a "John Hancock" on the John Hancock, a new destroyer that will be commissioned Saturday in Pascagoula, Miss.

Unlike other Navy ships, which carry their names in block letters, the John Hancock's will be painted in script — a replica of Hancock's signature as it appears on the Declaration of Independence.

The Spruance class destroyer will be part of the Norfolk-based Atlantic fleet and will operate out of Charleston, S.C.

Display Of Unity...

ject was, "a touch-and-go situation." Now he emphasized, "I'm glad to see Farmville and Greenville together."

The Board of Transportation member was referring to support by Greenville area officials for a freeway to Wilson, while Farmville area spokesmen supported a plan that would include the present five-lane bypass to the South of that town in any U.S. 264 improvement.

The morning press conference, including representatives from Farmville and Greenville, was held to let Department of Transportation officials know that, "we are together," Charles Burnette, past president of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce and currently chairman of the chamber's transportation committee, said.

The DOT planning board last week approved the freeway concept, and suggested the new roadway be constructed in two stages.

The first stage would include acquisition of right-of-way for the entire route, and construction of the roadway between Wilson and Farmville and between Farmville and Greenville, including connectors to the East and West of Farmville which would join the freeway to the present Farmville bypass. The second stage of the project would include construction of the section of freeway to the North of Farmville, completing the project.

The Board of Transportation will consider the planning board's recommendations when it meets in Raleigh, tomorrow.

Burnette said, "an awful lot of work has been put into planning this highway," adding that, "the Department of Transportation has gotten some good input."

The alternate to the freeway project, according to Burnette, would be to dualize the present highway, which, he emphasized, would provide the, "least capacity...lowest level of service...displace more families," and, "be outdated within five years after completion."

The new corridor, he noted, will serve the area for 25 to 35 years.

Greenville attorney Tom Taft, chairman of the State Ports Authority and a past president of the Highway 264 Association, said completion of the U.S. 264 project would mean the, "fulfillment of a dream of several generations of Pitt County residents and residents of Eastern North Carolina. The people of this area want this road."

Saying the highway is the number one project of Gov. Jim Hunt's administration, Taft pointed to the fact that two years have been cut from the timetable for the project.

He said normally a project such as this takes seven years from start to finish...from the time it is made part of the State's transportation improvement plan until the project is completed.

The Wilson-to-Greenville project, he emphasized, will take, "five years from start to finish," indicating the importance of the route to the Governor.

"From the ports' point of view," Taft said, the new highway is, "very important to us. It allows commerce to move freely to and from our ports."

Greenville Mayor Percy Cox, expressing thanks to Gov. Hunt, Transportation Secretary Tom Bradshaw, and Harper, for their efforts toward improvements to U.S. 264, said "Greenville is on the move," and pointed out that the freeway is vital to the continued growth of the area.

David Stowe, a member of the Farmville town board said, "we in Farmville are excited about the location of the road," and are, "very pleased with the department's recommendations."

He said too that Farmville area residents are, "ready to see it go forward," and urged completion of the highway, "at the earliest possible time."

Farmville Economic Development Council spokesman Ann McGaughey said, "Farmville wants this road badly."

Harper, who said Farmville Mayor Sara Albritton is, "in full agreement," with the plan, said the highway will help Farmville and Greenville.

However, Harper urged, "be patient...be understanding. Let's work together as a big team to fulfill this dream."

The Transportation Board member pointed out that the 2500-foot-wide corridor is not the roadway but the "area we're considering putting the four-lane road in."

The actual right-of-way to be acquired could be located anywhere within the corridor and would be from 250 to 450 feet wide.

Harper noted that DOT would, "do the least damage as possible," in locating the highway.

Saying, "we want unanimity...cooperation," on the Wilson-Greenville freeway, Harper said when that improvement is completed work can begin on the Greenville-to-Washington route, "and on further."

Harper explained that the project will enter the design phase after Board of Transportation approval is given, then public hearings will be held on the location of the highway within the corridor.

ACC Teams Win NIT Openers

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Sports Writer

The Atlantic Coast Conference likes to think it's the best basketball league in the country...and you can't dispute the claim by Wednesday night's National Invitation Tournament results.

The ACC was a perfect 3-for-3 — by an incredibly slim total of four points — as the 42nd annual NIT got under way with a half-dozen first-round games.

Maryland was the ACC's "big" winner, defeating Rhode Island 67-65 at College Park, Md., but it took the Terrapins three overtimes to do it. Meanwhile, at Lexington, Ky., Clemson nipped Kentucky, the 1978 national champion, 68-67 in just one overtime while Virginia needed only the regulation 40 minutes to dispose of Northeast Louisiana 79-78 at Charlottesville, Va.

Elsewhere, Ohio State trounced St. Joseph's, Pa., 80-66 at Columbus, Ohio, Nevada-Reno outlasted Oregon State 62-61 at Corvallis, Ore., and Old Dominion shaded Wagner 83-81 at Norfolk, Va.

Tonight's remaining six opening-round contests find Central Michigan (19-8) at 16th-ranked Purdue (23-7), Holy Cross (17-10) at Dayton (18-9), Indiana (18-12) at Texas Tech (19-10), St. Bonaventure (19-8) at Alabama (19-10), Alcorn State (27-0) at Mississippi State (19-8) and Texas A&M (22-8) at New Mexico (19-9).

The 40-team NCAA Tournament begins Friday night.

Wednesday's NIT results also set up two second-round games — Ohio State (18-10) vs. Maryland (19-10) and Old Dominion (22-6) vs. Clemson (19-9). Virginia (19-9) will meet tonight's St. Bonaventure-Alabama winner while Nevada-Reno goes against the Texas A&M-New Mexico survivor.

Kentucky's Wildcats, who missed a chance to defend their NCAA laurels when they were beaten in the finals of the Southeastern Conference tourney by Tennessee, dropped out of the NIT when Clemson's Billy Williams sank two free throws with 12 seconds to go. Williams topped the Tigers with 16 points while Kentucky's Kyle Macy took game honors with 20.

Clemson used a delay game to kill the last 10 minutes of the first half.

Maryland's Albert King, who sat out the first 27 minutes with a foot injury, scored all four points in the third overtime to give the Terrapins their marathon triumph over Rhode Island. Larry Gibson led the winners with 17 points and King added 15. Jimmy Wright had 20 for Rhode Island, whose ace, Sly Williams, sat out almost 10 minutes and scored only 12 points before fouling out with 13 seconds left in regulation time.

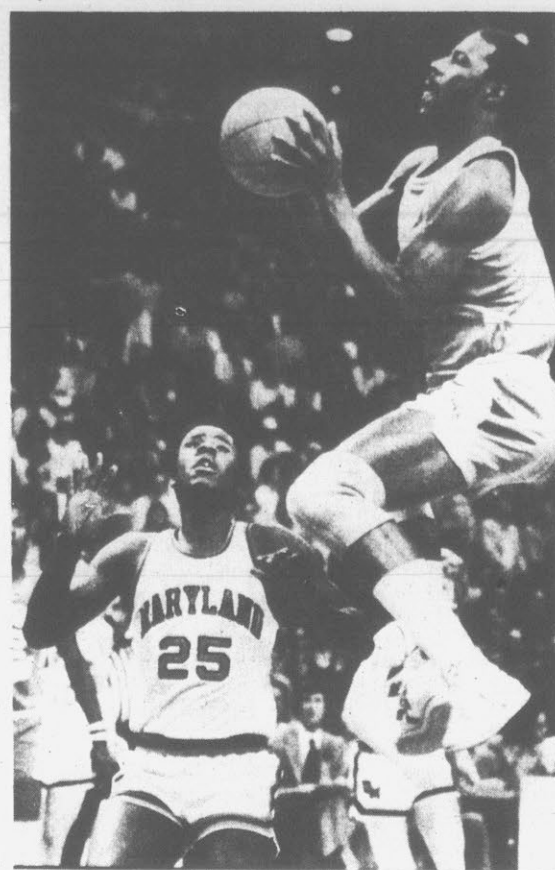

Virginia turned back Northeast Louisiana on Jeff Lamp's baseline jumper with seven seconds left. It came just 10 seconds after Calvin Natt, who finished with 38 points, had given the losers their only lead of the second half. Natt hit all 10 second-half shots — he was 15-of-18 overall — and scored 28 points after the intermission. Lamp scored 10 of his 20 points in the last six minutes.

Kelvin Ransey scored 18 points, Herb Williams added 16 and Mike Cline had 14 on 6-of-7 shooting as Ohio State overwhelmed St. Joe's. Norman Black's 21 points topped the losers. St. Joseph's remained within range until Ohio State uncorked a 15-5 burst and opened a 54-36 lead with 8:25 remaining.

Mike Gray made a jump shot with seven seconds left and then added a free throw to give the 11½-point underdog Wolf Pack its victory over Oregon State. Gray led all scorers with 27 points while Steve Johnson paced Oregon State with 22. Nevada-Reno converted 20 of 28 free throws to 7 of 15 for the Beavers.

Wuycik Sees Advantage For ACC In Regionals

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Dennis Wuycik, a former University of North Carolina basketball All-American, told the Greenville Sports Club that he felt the Atlantic Coast Conference teams had the advantage in the early rounds of the NCAA playoffs in a talk yesterday.

Wuycik, now involved in real estate in Chapel Hill, and in the publishing of a bi-weekly news letter, "The Pop Sheet," said that he felt both Duke and North Carolina had a good chance to meet again in the finals of the Eastern Regionals.

"People are always trying to compare the ACC to the rest of the country," Wuycik said. "But I believe on any given night, the ACC teams are as competitive as any one."

"Since they are playing in their home area, the ACC teams have an advantage in the first round games," he added. "Duke has to regroup after its injury problems, while Carolina has to come back down to earth after its winning in the ACC tournament. But I think there's a good chance for them to meet again in the finals."

Wuycik added that the rest of the field in the Eastern Regionals will be competitive, however, and cannot be taken lightly.

He said that he felt the overall field for the NCAA, expanded to 40 teams this year, had overall good balance. "No one team has dominated this year, the way Indiana did a couple of years ago, or the way UCLA used to do."

He defended Indiana State's number one ranking in the polls. "They were undefeated, they had a true All-American in Larry Bird, and they had a good appearance on national television. While their conference is not traditionally strong, and they don't have a great tradition, they are still a Cinderella team. They play sound basketball, have excellent talent and good coaching. But they won't sneak up on anyone. It takes some luck and some ability to go unbeaten, and very few teams do it on any level. But it will be interesting to see how they do in the playoffs."

Wuycik was asked who the top people he played against and with during his career, and he said, "A great player is one who makes the hard things look easy, and who enhances the players around him."

He singled out George McGuinness as the best he's played against. "He has all the moves and the talent." As the best teammate, he looked to Steve Previs of UNC. "While he didn't get a lot of credit for it, he played outstanding defense before Dudley Bradley got credit for it. Previs had so many intangibles that others didn't have."

Asked about the ECU coaching position, Wuycik said he felt it would be an excellent job. He did not feel that a successful head coach would take the job, however, but that it would go to an assistant coach. Asked to talk about the top assistants in the ACC, Wuycik said he didn't know any of them well enough to talk on their abilities.

He also commented on the failure of N.C. State to reach its pre-season ranking, saying that the Wolfpack seemed to have all the tools it needed for a high finish, but seemed to fall just short. He said Carolina proved that it was not a one-man team after losing Phil Ford by coming back to show that it had overall talent in winning the ACC title this year.

The final regular meeting of the Sports Club is scheduled for March 20, and it is hoped that the new East Carolina basketball coach will have been named by then, and will be the speaker.

The club's annual banquet will be held on Saturday, April 7, with Lefty Driessell as the speaker.

Britt Hurls Gem, But Tigers Nip Bucs, 2-1

CLEMSON, S.C. — A first-inning run spoiled a brilliant pitching performance by Mickey Britt and carried Clemson University to a 1-0 baseball victory over East Carolina University Wednesday afternoon. It was the second straight one-run loss for the Pirates against the Tigers.

The Tigers, now 7-1, scored in the opening frame when Billy Weems singled, stole second and scored on a single by Robert Bonnette. Britt retired the next 15 Clemson batters in a row before allowing a walk in the sixth.

In all, Britt faced only 24 batters to record the final 23 outs. The lone hit the Tigers could manage beyond the first was erased when Greg Guin was caught stealing in the seventh.

The Pirates, now 1-3, scattered four hits over the nine innings. East Carolina had two runners on in the second inning with two out but Jerry Carraway fled to center to end the inning. Billy Best singled in the sixth, Mike Sorrells in the seventh and Carraway in the eighth, but none could reach second base.

Clemson hurlers Bobby Kenyon, now 1-0, and Len Bradley combined to allow only one walk and to strike out eight Pirates for the afternoon. Britt walked one and strong out one en route to his first decision.

The Pirates play at UNC Charlotte today and open the home season Saturday at 2 p.m. against Connecticut. The Huskies remain for games Sunday at 2 p.m. and Monday at 3 p.m. as well.

Coach Unhappy Over Net Start

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina University's tennis team, hampered by bad weather this spring, isn't as far along as Coach Randy Randolph would like.

And with the tougher schedule the Pirates have this year, he's hopeful that the start the Bucs got off to will not carry on.

East Carolina has had only one match, while two others were postponed because of rain. The lone match saw Salisbury State take a 5-4 win over the Pirates.

"I was really disappointed to lose that one," Randolph said. "We lost to them by the same score last year, and I wanted to win it this year. We had them, 4-2, going into the doubles, and lost every one of them."

Three players return from last year's team, and Randolph considers this year's version to be a young one.

Back is number one player from last year, Curtis Tedesco, along with Kenny Love, who started as the number six singles player, who has moved to number two. Bobby Campbell who saw a little duty as the number six player last year, now occupies the number three spot.

Playing number four now is Bobby Winchester, a freshman; while Alex Cunningham, a senior out for the first time, is at number five. Another freshman, Keith Zengal, is the number six player.

Currently in doubles, Randolph is starting Tedesco and Love at number one, Rob Edmondson and Campbell at number two, and Cunningham and Winchester at number three.

"We have 12 people on the team, our largest ever," Randolph said. "The reason is that so many of them are close together that I didn't feel I could cut any of them." Others on the team include Steve Peterson, Bill Shipley, Mark Byrd, Wes Snead and Norman Bryant.

"We have a young team. Cunningham is the only senior, and he's not a senior as far as experience is concerned. Only Tedesco and Love have a lot of experience."

Randolph said it was hard to say how the Pirates would do. "With the schedule we have, plus being hampered by the weather, I don't want to make any predictions. We're going to take it one match at a time."

"I don't think we played as well as we can in our first match. We had a lot of first match jitters since some of the guys were playing varsity matches for the first time ever, plus Salisbury State played well, too."

Tarkanian: The Evidence Against Him

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer
LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Hear ye, hear ye, the case against Jerry Tarkanian is now in session.
Is "Tark the Shark" a cheater? How strong is the NCAA evidence against him? And if he does cheat, does the punishment fit the crime?
You be the judge.
Tarkanian was suspended in 1977 from coaching the University of Nevada-Las Vegas basketball team for two years, one of the worst punishments given a coach in NCAA history. Investigators say the penalty stemmed from Tarkanian's pattern of alleged past violations at Long Beach State and, more importantly, an alleged effort to interfere with the NCAA probe.

A Nevada judge found that the NCAA violated Tarkanian's due process and restored him to the sidelines. An appeal is pending in that case.

The Associated Press has gained possession of confidential documents and information pertaining to the cases against Long Beach and UNLV. Long Beach went on NCAA probation for three years for violations allegedly committed in football and basketball. Half the charges against the basketball program involved fraudulent ACT (American College Testing) scores, enabling three athletes to enroll.
But did Tarkanian arrange for someone else to take those exams?

"No, I'm an educator. I can't mess around with that stuff," The NCAA never connected Tarkanian with tampering, alleging that his assistant, Ivan Duncan, arranged for stand-ins to take the tests.

The only serious allegation linked to Tarkanian is that he promised Eugene Short, a high school All-American, that his family would be moved to Long Beach and that a job would be found for his mother.

Tarkanian denies the charge and says the Short did too. Tarkanian says his NCAA problems stem from a column he wrote, blasting the punishment of Centenary College. "I wrote that the charges were Mickey Mouse. It was the biggest mistake I ever made."

The Las Vegas charges provide less of a direct link to Tarkanian, which the NCAA attributes to "Tark the Shark" learning from mistakes and better insulating himself. The NCAA is also skeptical about the affidavits Tarkanian has produced from players which allegedly conflict with their previous testimony to investigators.

The NCAA says it never punishes anybody without proof. One coach feels otherwise in the Tarkanian case: "If you know Al Capone is killing people, you get him on income tax evasion."

Most of the big charges against UNLV are directed against Tarkanian's predecessor, John Bayer. The most serious allegations are that Tarkanian arranged for instructor Harvey Mumford to provide prospective student-athlete David Vaughn a "B" grade in a course without attending class and that he pressured ex-player Jeep Kelley to change his testimony to the NCAA.

Tarkanian denies both charges.

The NCAA investigators never interviewed anybody except Mumford, yet the Infractions Committee found Tarkanian and Mumford guilty of the charge, stating in its Confidential Report: "The Committee believes Mumford did, in fact, provide this information to the NCAA and is now attempting to remove himself from the case."

The charge of interfering with testimony strikes at the heart of the NCAA's investigative process. Since the NCAA lacks subpoena power, it must rely on the cooperation of players and coaches in reporting violations. The NCAA says Tarkanian coerced Kelley, its key witness, to change his testimony, prompting the severe 2-year suspension.

Kelley — considered "flaky" by both sides in this case — denied testimony he allegedly gave in May of 1975. He also has a different recollection of his phone conversations with the NCAA in 1976.

Thus, the evidence in the NCAA's harassment case comes down to a key witness who, at best, is unreliable and, at worst, is now hostile to the NCAA.

Tarkanian admits to contacting Kelley and asking him to sign some statements. He also admits offering to arrange for Kelley to get a tryout with a summer league, where he might be scouted by the Los Angeles Lakers, and arranging for Kelley to enter the University of Hawaii. "I would do that for all my players," he said.

The NCAA, contending all of Tarkanian's contacting and arranging came because Kelley was freely talking to the NCAA, found against Tarkanian on the interference charge.

Tarkanian does not claim to be a saint but can't understand why he's been singled out. "Maybe it's because we won too quickly and they assumed we were doing terrible things. We do so little cheating, it's incredible."

Tarkanian was one of several coaches who told of their ordeals during the Congressional investigations of the subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations which concluded that the NCAA has abused its power and recommended various procedural and policy changes. "Why have I had to suffer what I have suffered over the last six years at the hands of the NCAA? I honestly don't know."

Tarkanian can certainly be faulted for not stressing education, for breaking some of the NCAA's rules and looking the other way on the violations committed by assistants and others close to his program.

But the evidence against Tarkanian, after two of the most exhaustive investigations in NCAA history, would probably not convict him in any court in the land.

True or not, the NCAA punishment does not fit the crime; yet Tarkanian carries the reputation of a criminal.

Texas Coach Abe Lemons, a former president of the National Association of Basketball Coaches, has a down-home way of putting Tarkanian's travails into perspective:

"Reminds me of the guy drivin' down the road doin' '60 and everybody is passin' him goin' '80. A cop stops the guy and he says, 'Why me?' And the cop says, 'Cause you're easier to catch.'"

IN A SENSE, you might say that North Carolina's Tar Heels drew the Atlantic Coast Conference championship out of a hat.

That's how they acquired the first-round bye in the league's annual tournament after they finished the regular season tied with Duke. Given the balance in the ACC this year, the bye was a most important thing to have.

It gave the Tar Heels two distinct advantages over Duke, the team picked in the preseason to win the title, and a team which had already posted two victories over Carolina.

First of all, it meant the Tar Heels had to play only two tournament games, while the Blue Devils had to play three. It also meant that the Heels did not have to face one of the three top-seeded teams in the tournament until the final round.

What it finally boiled down to was that Duke had to play two close, physically and mentally exhausting games to get to Saturday night's finals, while Carolina, it turned out, had only to play a laugher on Friday.

Add to this the fact that Duke starting guard and quarterback Bob Bender was unable to play due to an emergency appendectomy, and you find that the Blue Devils were at a great disadvantage going into the game. They did well to stay as close as they did.

OF COURSE, THIS is not to say that Duke would have won the tournament had the roles been reversed and the Blue Devils gotten the bye. They might not have had as easy a time with Maryland as Carolina did, while the Tar Heels might have breezed through their first two games. And no one can judge the effect of Bender's absence.

But it goes to show that the bye is extremely important, probably too important to be decided by a mere drawing. With the entrance of Georgia Tech into the league next season, the need for the bye will be eliminated. But should it come back into existence, a new method for breaking ties should be devised.

Perhaps a formula taking into consideration scores against each other and other league teams could be worked out. Or maybe ties could be broken by a playoff game. That would certainly draw a lot of fan interest and added revenue.

THOSE WHO COMPLAIN that defensive prowess goes unrecognized in sports these days will undoubtedly find a ray of hope in the fact that Dudley Bradley of UNC was named the winner of the Everett Case Award as the most valuable player in the tournament.

Bradley, noted all season for his defensive skills, had a total of seven steals in the Duke game. Many of those thefts came in key situations, allowing the Tar Heels to get out to an early lead in the first half and hold on to it late in the game.

Bradley has an uncanny knack for knocking the ball away from an opposing dribbler. Few will ever forget his breathtaking steal and slam dunk against N. C. State in Raleigh this season that provided a UNC victory with just seconds left.

Besides the seven steals, which tied his season high set against Wake Forest, Bradley scored 16 points and handed out four assists. "Dudley's performance against Duke may have been the greatest of his career," UNC coach Dean Smith said. "He has the reputation of just being a superb defensive player, but I think he showed Saturday night that he is a truly great all-around player."

Bradley's MVP award was the fifth time in the past six years that a player not on the first team all-conference squad won the Everett Case trophy. That is the way of tournament competition. Nearly any player, just like any team, can put together three good games and walk away with all the marbles.

Have A Seat, Any Seat

Nehemiah Tries For NCAA Title

DETROIT (AP) — Record holder Renaldo Nehemiah will be trying to make up for a "Lost Weekend" in the NCAA Indoor Track and Field Championships Friday and Saturday at Cobo Arena.

Nehemiah, the resilient University of Maryland sophomore who has set indoor bests this year in the 50- and 60-yard hurdles, and the 50- and 55-meter hurdles, will be trying to overcome the embarrassment of a rare disqualification during a heat of the 60-yard hurdles at the ICAA Championships last Saturday at Princeton, N.J.

"I have to wipe it out," said Nehemiah, who had been unbeaten in 16 indoor meets since last year before beating himself in the ICAA. "I have to say it happened, it's part of the breaks."

The 19-year-old Nehemiah is the defending champion in the NCAA 60-yard hurdles, a race he won last year after much controversy. After Nehemiah, teammate Greg Robertson and James Walker of Auburn crossed the line in a blanket finish, the judges were unable to decide on their placing order for 20 minutes. Finally Robertson was announced as the winner, with Nehemiah second and Walker third.

Thirty minutes later, the result was changed, and Nehemiah was placed first, with Walker second and Robertson third.

"I want to regain my championship, but I want to win it easier than I did last year," said the world's top-ranked hurdler. "I don't want a photo finish again."

Franklin Jacobs also wanted to erase the memory of a lost weekend, but will have to wait. Jacobs, the American indoor record holder in the high jump from Fairleigh Dickinson University, will miss the NCAA meet because of strained ligaments in his left ankle, it was announced Wednesday.

Jacobs suffered the injury Monday night while playing intramural basketball. On Wednesday, the ankle was placed in a soft cast for two weeks by Dr. Chris Mattheou.

Jacobs did not compete in the ICA meet because of tendinitis in his left heel and suffered his only loss of the season in 10 meets the previous week in the National AAU Championships, finishing second to Benn Fields.

While Nehemiah will be trying to redeem himself, defending champion Texas-El Paso and ICAA winner Villanova are expected to stage a stirring battle for the team title.

The Miners, NCAA winners four of the past five years, will be led by Suleiman Nyambui, the 25-year-old freshman from Tanzania who is the favorite in the mile and the two-mile, and Kenyan Peter Lemashon, doubling in the 880 and 1,000.

Don Paige, defending champion in the 1,000, leads Villanova, the NCAA champion in 1968 and 1971.

Two Vets Are Given Honor

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Lewis "Hack" Wilson, who drove in a major league record 190 runs in 1930 and set the National League mark of 56 homers the same year, has been elected to baseball's Hall of Fame posthumously along with former NL President Warren Giles.

Giles, whose entire career was spent organizing and running baseball franchises until he became NL president in 1951, served as general manager of the Syracuse and Rochester minor league teams before moving to Cincinnati as president of the Reds in 1936.

Both rotund men, Wilson and Giles were chosen by the 18-member Veterans Committee, which reviews the careers of players bypassed by the Baseball Writers Association of America during their period of eligibility, as well as executives, umpires and Negro Leaguers.

Wilson, who played for the New York, Chicago, Brooklyn and Philadelphia National League teams, was a heavy drinker who died broke on Nov. 23, 1948, at age 48.

Giles, who served as president of the National League for 18 years, died Feb. 8 at age 82. He is credited with helping develop such managers as George Sisler, Burt Shotton, Billy Southworth, Eddie Dyer and Bill McKechnie.

Wilson and Giles were chosen from a list 20 players and officials who received votes. As in the regular Hall of Fame balloting conducted by the writers, a 75 percent vote by the committee is needed for election.

The two new honorees will be inducted along with Willie Mays at the annual Hall of Fame ceremonies in Cooperstown, N.Y., Aug. 5. Mays was chosen earlier this year by the BBWAA.

Wilson was a standout hitter from the time he entered the majors with the New York Giants in 1923 until he closed his career with the Dodgers and Phillies in 1934.

In his big 1930 season with the Cubs, the hard-hitting outfielder also compiled a .356 batting average. His lifetime mark was .307.

Burlingame Grimes, one of the top pitchers in National League history and a member of the Veterans Committee, recalled Wilson's batting prowess.

"He was a short man, only 5-foot-6 and 190 pounds," Grimes said. "He was hard to pitch to and he had tremendous power. He was one of the most dangerous men I ever faced. You had to be careful as hell against him and it wasn't until late in my career that I was able to get him out effectively."

The committee did not disclose the percentage of voting. Others who received votes were Glen Wright, Cyclone Joe Williams, Charlie Grimm, Jimmy Dykes, Lefty O'Doul, Vic Willis, Jake Daubert, Chuck Klein, Johnny Mize, Wilbur Cooper, Biz Mackey, Ray Dandridge, Fred Tenney, Freddy Fitzsimmons, Urban Shocker, Babe Herman, Tom Yawkey and Walt Alston.

Joe Gminski Has Only One Interest In Life: Son Mike

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Joe Gminski's dream of watching his son crack a homerun out of Yankee Stadium never materialized, but he feels pretty good about Mike's success as Duke's potent 6-11 starting center.

"I think I've done a pretty good job on my part," said the 44-year-old Gminski, whose fanatical devotion to his son's athletic career is legend. "I helped to get him this far."

His son, a 19-year-old junior, will be making his second appearance in the NCAA playoffs this weekend. Last year, Duke's Cinderella team advanced to NCAA finals where the Blue Devils were defeated by Kentucky.

But basketball to Joe Gminski is inconsequential. "I wouldn't walk across the street to see a basketball game unless Mike's playing," said the 6-4 Gminski, who played for Connecticut only because of an athletic scholarship. "I only have one interest in life and that's Mike Gminski."

Gminski, who has tutored his son since Mike was two years old, quit his sales job, packed his belongings and moved his wife, Chris, from their home in Monroe, Conn., to a small apartment in Durham to watch "the fruits of my labor." He now delivers newspapers, plays golf and cheers for Mike at Cameron Indoor Stadium.

Once Mike's collegiate career is finished, Gminski plans to leave Durham.

Earlier in the season, he wrote a letter to the local newspaper critical of Duke Coach Bill Foster after the Blue Devils, then ranked No. 1, lost to

STALWART SWEDES
NEW YORK (AP) — Anders Hedberg and Ulf Nilsson, the "Swedes" of the New York Rangers, are the best-paid players in the National Hockey League and, according to Coach Fred Shero, they earn every penny.

"You have to watch the Swedes every day to appreciate them," Shero said. "They play hockey the way it was meant to be played. They do it all."

"They aren't fighters — they aren't really big enough for that — but they'll go in the corners to dig out the puck and they'll mix it up in front of the net. They have courage."

Penn State University was originally known as Farmers High School.

Ohio State and St. John's in the Holiday Festival Tournament at New York. He refuses to comment now on the letter, but he indicated that it temporarily chilled the relationship between himself and his son.

St. John's battles 13th-ranked Temple on Friday at Raleigh for the right to meet the second-seeded and sixth-ranked Blue Devils on Sunday. Iona and Penn are paired on Friday and the winner of that matchup meets the NCAA tournament's top seed in the East, third-ranked North Carolina.

Gminski used baseball to keep his son interested in athletics, and he envisioned a major league career for Mike. But as his son grew, Gminski watched regretfully as Mike's strike zone got out of hand.

"He was the one who chose basketball," Gminski said. "I just trained him to be an athlete."

One room of Gminski's apartment is decorated with trophies, cover photographs from magazines and, in the center of one wall, Mike's high school jersey, which was retired.

"This is from last year alone," said Gminski, pulling down several scrapbooks of newspaper clippings and photographs extolling his son's ability.

"This is my favorite," he said, pointing to a photo of Mike towering over Virginia's Jeff Lamp and Steve Castellani with a rebound.

"Mike played his high school days in a suburban league and some people questioned whether he was really that good," Gminski said. "When it came time to pick a college, he narrowed it to the ACC. He said he wanted to play in the toughest conference there is."

Gminski said he is surprised at the enthusiasm for basketball in North Carolina.

"They've got basketball on the brain," he said.

Gminski said the close relationship between himself and his son is fading as Mike builds his own life at Duke. He said Mike's success is his own, and he defends his son's upbringing.

"You're looking at a man who doesn't give a damn what other people say," Gminski said. "Mike has been rewarded for his work. I fail to see the difference between bringing an athlete along and someone with musical ability."

Mike is Gminski's only child. "You can only do this with one."

Atlanta Hawks Stretch Winning Streak To Eight; Kings Defeated

By The Associated Press

It was the same old story for the Atlanta Hawks: another victory, their eighth in a row; another home triumph, their 10th in a row.

And it was the same old thing for the Kansas City Kings: another loss, in overtime.

"We've lost five straight," moaned Kings Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons, "and in the last four, we lost by one point on a last-second shot and three straight in overtime."

That's the way it went Wednesday night. The Hawks tied the game at 111 on John Drew's 24-foot jump shot at the buzzer, then got six points from Drew in overtime for a 122-120 triumph over Kansas City.

In the other National Basketball Association games Wednesday night, Philadelphia bested Boston 114-107, Seattle topped Detroit 99-93, Indiana trimmed Washington 109-105, Milwaukee bombed New Jersey 133-98, Portland edged New Orleans 103-102, San Diego downed Houston 138-115, and Cleveland nipped Golden State 103-101.

76ers 114, Celtics 107
Philadelphia got a season-high 33 points from Bobby Jones, offsetting 33 by Boston's Chris Ford and carrying the 76ers past the Celtics.

Boston, trailing by 20 points with 3:31 left in the second period, pulled within 87-85 with 8:43 remaining. But Philadelphia ran off the next 11 points to snap a five-game losing streak.

SuperSonics 99, Pistons 93
Seattle pulled away in the final 52 seconds to beat Detroit and win for only the second time in their last 10 road games. The game was tied with 1:06 to play, but Fred Brown made a basket and two free throws, then Gus Williams added a field goal to pull the second-place SuperSonics within one-half game of Pacific Division-leading Los Angeles.

Brown finished with 27 points. Leon Douglas had 21 for the Pistons.

Pacers 109, Bullets 105
Elvin Hayes scored 34 points to pace a Washington comeback, but Indiana got 20 points each from Johnny Davis and Alex English to pull out the victory.

"I don't know if they played bad or we played good," said Pacers Coach Bobby Leonard.

Bucks 133, Nets 98
Milwaukee made 15 steals to just five by New Jersey, made 55.1 percent of its field goal attempts to 38.1 percent by the Nets, and got a career-high 27 points from Kent Benson to earn Coach Don Nelson's 100th career victory.

The Bucks led 40-17 after the first quarter and never looked back, keeping alive flickering playoff hopes. Any combination of nine San Diego victories and Milwaukee losses would eliminate the Bucks from a chance at postseason play.

Trail Blazers 103, Jazz 102
Bob Gross made a long jump shot and two free throws in a six-second span for the points that insured the Trail Blazers' narrow victory over the Jazz — their first triumph ever at New Orleans.

Clippers 138, Rockets 115
San Diego won its ninth game in 10 tries, getting 34 points from Lloyd Free to blast the Rockets. The Clippers never trailed.

Houston got 19 points each from Moses Malone and Robert Reid while Calvin Murphy added 18.

Cavaliers 103, Warriors 101
Mike Mitchell's five-foot shot with one second remaining vaulted Cleveland past Golden State.

"This is the first time I've ever won a game in the pros like this," said the 6-foot-7½ rookie.

The Cavaliers' Campy Russell led all scorers with 26 points. Robert Parish had 20 points for the Warriors, who have lost 20 of their last 29.

Perfect, Except The Neighborhood Objected

By MARC WILSON
Associated Press Writer
McHENRY, Ill. (AP) — It seemed the perfect neighborhood for them: Towering elms along quiet streets. Transportation, shopping, banking, medical care, churches and recreation nearby.

So the McHenry County Association for the Retarded bought a vacant lot in the neighborhood. The federal Department of Housing and Urban Development agreed to loan money to build a one-story brick home with 11 bedrooms, one for each of the 11 moderately retarded people to live there. The association said the group home wouldn't detract from the neighborhood. There would be full-time supervision.

All seemed perfect — until the neighbors found out.

The association requested a zoning variance so non-related persons could live on the residential property. Neighbors hired an attorney and protested to the city zoning board, which will vote on the request Friday.

"We have no lack of compassion for the cause," says Bea Newkirk, one of the 67 neighbors who signed a petition opposing the home. "It's just that we just want to keep the neighborhood the way it is. We object to changing the character of the neighborhood."

Mrs. Newkirk refused to be more specific about her fears, but David Mack of the HUD office in Chicago said the typical objections to group homes are fears that the retarded persons are "perverted people. They have these false impressions about retarded people. The neighbors are afraid their children will be molested."

Max Addison of the National Association for Retarded Citizens noted that the problems in McHenry are not untypical. He says there are 165,000 retarded persons living in institutions and with relatives nationwide who could live in community homes, if space could be found. But efforts to build homes have met resistance nationwide.

Mack said that in Illinois, HUD funding for such homes has been available since 1974, but no projects have gotten beyond the planning stage, mostly because of problems similar to those in McHenry.

"The biggest problems," said Addison, "are zoning requirements and the misguided belief that a retarded person is a sick, dangerous person."

But, he added, moving retarded persons out of institutions "is a trend that won't be stopped. In the past, these people were just stashed into a corner. They never had a future. They weren't expected to contribute to society. That's all changing now."

Opposition to the McHenry project was organized at a meeting of neighbors, but one neighbor who wasn't invited was Kathy Alvary. She lives about a block from the proposed home and she and her husband have a daughter with learning disabilities who lives in New York.

"My neighbors know I've represented this community on the special education board and would speak out in favor of a group home. But they didn't want to hear the positive side," she said.

Mrs. Alvary testified before the zoning board in February, urging approval of the variance.

"I've been neighbors with the people for many years and I'm very disappointed. I'll never feel the same again about my immediate community," she added.

"I'm pretty sure we'll lose, both at the zoning board and the city council," said Robert Lambourn, executive director of the association for the retarded.

Lambourn described the neighborhood, which includes the country club, as one of the best in this city of 10,100.

"Sure, we'd have an easier time in a less desirable neighborhood," he said, "but who says retarded persons can't live in the best environment?"

Joseph Condon, attorney for the neighbors, said his clients feel "the area is the most stable and long-standing single-family neighborhood in the city, and are only interested in maintaining that status." He added that his clients would oppose "any commercial facility in the neighborhood, whether it be a Lions Club Hall, hardware store or doctor's office."

"I've had the sense that some people suspect my clients have a 19th century mentality toward the developmentally disabled," Condon said. "This is not true, in fact many of my clients have been financial contributors to the cause of the developmentally disabled."

Lambourn said, "The communities in McHenry County have always been wonderful about supporting our programs. But everything we have so far is...away from the neighborhoods where people live."

Lambourn's association, private and non-profit, runs programs for the mentally retarded including vocational rehabilitation, day care for children and adults and a community living facility for 20 mildly retarded persons on the outskirts of nearby Woodstock.

The group home would be for persons more retarded than those living at Woodstock. No residential facility for moderately retarded adults exists in the county — a gap the group home would fill.

Charged In Fatal Attack

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A Gastonia man has been charged with voluntary manslaughter in the death of a Spartanburg, S.C., businessman who died after being beaten at a Charlotte restaurant.

Mecklenburg County district attorneys issued a warrant Wednesday for Jeff D. Stowe, a 49-year-old industrial-supplies salesman, after reviewing the results of an autopsy on the victim, Jim Williamson of Spartanburg.

Williamson was having dinner in a Charlotte restaurant on Jan. 31 when, according to a witness, he exchanged words with another customer. The other man hit Williamson and, the witness said, kept punching Williamson after he fell to the floor.

Mecklenburg County medical examiner Hobart Wood said Williamson suffered a brain hemorrhage because of the incident. Williamson developed pneumonia and died at Charlotte Memorial Hospital on Feb. 6.

But Wood said with the exception of a mark on the bridge of Williamson's nose, his face was not bruised. Wood said that indicated Williamson may not have been hit repeatedly as one witness in the restaurant said.

Charlotte police, acting on a tip from an anonymous caller who had seen a composite drawing of Williamson's attacker in a newspaper, interviewed Stowe in Gastonia last week.

Charlotte detective Charles Fisher, who met with Stowe and his attorney, said later that Stowe "...admits being in the restaurant and he admits hitting a man."

THE PERFECT PLOT — Robert Lambourn, executive director of the McHenry County association for the retarded stands in a vacant lot bought by the association. The land was to be used for construction of a home for 11 moderately retarded people and all seemed perfect until the neighbors found out. (AP Laserphoto)

$339,208 In Grants

ECU News Bureau
Federal grants totaling $339,208 were awarded to East Carolina University during February, for the support of four research and training programs.

A total of $260,000 was awarded the ECU School of Medicine by the Health Resources Administration for a Health Professions Start-Up Assistance Program.

Dr. Jon Tingelstad of the ECU medical school faculty received $57,520 from the National Institutes of Health for his research into the components of milk and infant health.

The bidding:
South West North East
2 NT Pass 3 ♦ Pass
3 NT Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Jack of ♠.

Playing at three no trump, South was faced with a choice of finesses for his fulfilling trick. He made his contract by spurning both.

Since his hand was weighted with aces and kings, South elected to open two no trump—it was a stronger hand than the point count suggested. North showed his five-card major suit, but was content when South denied three-card support by rebidding no trump.

West led the top of his spade sequence, and South was perfectly satisfied with his contract. He could count eight tricks in top cards, and the ninth would appear if East had either the king of diamonds or the ace of hearts—there were sufficient entries to dummy to test both possibilities—or if the spades split no worse than 4-2. A glance at the diagram, however, shows that all of these chances were doomed to failure. Yet South made his contract without resorting to double-dummy play, and there was nothing the defenders could do to thwart him.

Declarer won the opening lead in his hand perforce, then cashed the remaining high spade. Next came four rounds of clubs, ending in dummy. The stage was set for a throw-in.

With the safe exit cards removed from the West hand, declarer continued with the queen of spades and another. On these two tricks he discarded two diamonds from his hand. West won the fourth spade but he did not enjoy his position. To delay the inevitable, he cashed his last spade, but declarer was still safe—he could afford to let go a heart.

Now West was on lead with nothing left but red cards. No matter which suit he led, he would present declarer with his ninth trick.

This hand is a graphic illustration of winning technique. First you discover that you can make your contract with the help of one of two finesses—a 75 percent chance. Then you look around to see whether there is any way you can avoid taking a finesse.

On this hand, once neither defender was void in a black suit and West was proven to hold the long spades, declarer increased his chances from 75 percent to 100 percent—a good deal any time.

Water Filters Not Purifiers

LOMBARD, Ill. (AP) — Those water-filtering devices that fit on the faucet or go under the sink can be called almost anything you like, but don't call them purifiers, advises the Water Quality Association.

According to government regulations, the association says, a purifier is a device that makes water safe to drink. The term cannot be applied to other treatment units that merely produce clearer water or get rid of bad tastes and odors.

A device of that kind, explains the association, can legally be called a water clarifier, a water deodorizer, or a water filter.

Revolt Signs Among Soviet Women

By NIKKI FINKE
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet

women are taking a holiday today from cooking, cleaning and riveting to mark International Women's Day amid signs that a female revolt against overwork is brewing.

PEANUTS

It's "Queen for a Day" as men bring chocolates and flowers to their wives, mothers or female colleagues. The nationwide celebration is one of the most important of the year though the holiday goes mostly unnoticed in the West.

President Leonid I. Brezhnev, Premier Alexei N. Kosygin and the Communist Party Central Committee congratulated Soviet women and thanked them for their "contribution to the strengthening of internationalistic solidarity" and their work for peace and détente.

But while the Communist regime pats itself on the back for constitutionally guaranteeing its women "real equality," working wives and mothers are rebelling against their lot.

Writing in a recent issue of the magazine Journalist, prominent economist Viktor Peredentsev denounced the unequal burdens women have along with their equal rights.

"The overwhelming majority of women have literally two work periods a day," he said,

"seven to eight hours at their production sites and four to six hours at home. This makes for a very difficult life."

Nadezhda Sidorova, a chief designer at a Moscow watch factory, was recently interviewed by the newspaper Sovietskaya Rossiya. Described as very "businesslike," she was responsible for the production work of 8,000 employees, one of a select group of Soviet women who occupy high-level management positions.

"You can see it on my boss's desk — my letter of resignation," she told the interviewer. "Since I became the chief designer," she explained, "I would come home, switch off the television and shut the windows. During the nights, I could think only about the problems of designing. And in these 2½ years, I've lost my friends."

Mrs. Sidorova said the Soviet Union has reached the stage of emancipation where it is "common sense" for women to want to limit their careers, especially when they have families to care for.

"Look, we already have proved that we can do everything — head factories, make discoveries, fly into space, write laws," she told the interviewer. "And now we should say with pride and confidence that it is in our power to establish limits for ourselves."

A talk with any career-minded

ed university woman student reveals that she realizes the difficulties she faces in taking part in the work force and still shouldering the household chores. For in the Soviet society, it is still "unmasculine" for men to help out in the kitchen or change diapers. Yet a woman is welcomed into the ranks of construction crews or farmwork.

One official study showed that Russian men do only 3 percent of the household shopping, 7 percent of the cooking, 17 percent of the dishwashing and 2 percent of the laundry and ironing.

Though they make up 51 percent of the total Soviet work force, the vast majority of women are employed in unskilled or semi-skilled jobs. In positions of responsibility in industry, only 10 percent of the chief specialists, 16 percent of the shop, shift and section superintendents and 26 percent of the department heads are women.

Though the Soviet Union is still the only country to have sent a woman into space, its ruling Politburo has no women on it and only a few women are full members of the prestigious Academy of Sciences.

There is also resentment among men who don't want to work for a female boss or come home to a factory foreman at night.

"I don't want to kiss a director," said one Russian man. "She must decide if she is happier with the factory's production or with my production."

Hopeful News in Medicine

In a recent column, I referred to two substances which were captivating the imagination of pure scientists and practical physicians. These were "interferon" and "prostaglandins."

Interferon is a protein manufactured by the body; it is one that prevents viruses and some cancer cells from reproducing. The prostaglandins, too, are substances produced by the body. They are now expected to play an important role in arthritis, high blood pressure, ulcers of the stomach and many other conditions I previously mentioned.

Now it comes to light that the prostaglandins themselves can actually bolster the production of interferon to fight body infections and some forms of cancer.

Although this work on prostaglandins and interferon is highly technical and even speculative, I mention it to illustrate the hope that lies within modern medicine.

A new approach to the problem of obesity is being tried by Dr. Rosalyn Yalow, a Nobel prize winner known for her exciting experimental studies with hormones. Dr. Yalow believes that obesity in some people may be caused by a deficiency of a specialized hormone, chole-cysto-kinin (CCK). Dr. Yalow had observed, in recent experiments with overweight laboratory mice, that inadequate amounts of CCK in the brain produced uncontrolled appetites and then, obesity.

Dr. Yalow believes that the administration of this hormone may be an important lead to the control of obesity in people with voracious appetites.

An interesting approach to cancer of the cervix is being tried in Finland. There, a mass screening program showed that women who had electro-coagulation of the cervix have about one-sixth of the risk of developing cancer of the cervix.

The study included more than 400,000 women. It was found that the risk of cancerous lesions in the 15 percent who were "electro-coagulated" was lower than among all other women in all age groups. The researchers believe that electro-coagulation may yet play a greater role in stopping cervical cancer.

This work will undoubtedly be repeated elsewhere to make sure that the findings are substantiated.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH... No one ever expects to fall asleep while smoking in bed, or in an armchair. It's the kind of thing that always happens to "other people" and never to yourself. Think about it. It may save your life.

DR. COLEMAN welcomes letters from readers. Please write to him in care of this newspaper.

Grill Is Open As Herring Run Retreat At Emerald Isle

JAMESVILLE — The traditional late winter herring run has begun on the Roanoke River and fried fish lovers know that the opening of the Cypress Grill here coincides with the annual run.

Mrs. Leslie Gardner, manager of the popular riverside hut, said that the facility opened Feb. 8 following early herring catches in the Columbia area.

The Cypress Grill, a seasonal facility that has become known quite well as a result of its exposure in several statewide magazines and "word of mouth" endorsement from customers, usually remains open until the week after Easter, according to Mrs. Gardner.

The fish house is open Monday through Saturday from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m. and from 5-8 p.m.

Mrs. Gardner said Wednesday that netting activity was picking up slightly on the Roanoke here as the herring season progressed into March.

The Vestry of St. Timothy's Episcopal Church of Greenville took part in an overnight retreat and workshop at Emerald Isle this past weekend.

Leader of the retreat was the Rev. King Cole, rector of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, Morehead City. The Rev. Cole is also director of camps and conferences, Diocese of East Carolina.

Those attending the retreat were the Rev. John Randolph Price, associate rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Greenville, and vicar in charge of St. Timothy's; Helen Rountree, senior warden; Tom Tucker, junior warden; Bob Adams, Cyndra Gasperini; Betsy White and Doug Gerry.

St. Timothy's was formed in January 1978 and is a parochial mission of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. The congregation presently meets at the Seventh-Day Adventist Church on Tenth St.

Viets Announce Slow Chinese Troop Withdrawal

Associated Press Writer

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam announced today that the Chinese were withdrawing troops from some areas of Vietnam "very slowly and in very small numbers" but also had staged new attacks and occupied more land in other parts of the frontier region.

In the first official admission from Vietnam that some form of pullout was occurring, Hanoi Radio accused the Chinese of looting property and burning homes in their "retreat."

The broadcast also said Chinese artillery fired hundreds of shells Wednesday into the capital of Lang Son province.

In response to a Peking report that Chinese troops "love the Vietnamese people," the official broadcast replied: "Instead of loving our people, they love our chickens, ducks, clothes and other property."

Reliable sources in Bangkok said there were "definite signs" of a cautious Chinese withdrawal. These analysts said some infantry and armored units had pulled out of the Long Son area, perhaps the most contested in the nearly three-week-old frontier war. It was not known in Bangkok whether any Chinese units actually had returned to China.

But the Yugoslav news agency Tanjug reported from Peking that the first Chinese troops had arrived back home, and that other units will follow shortly to facilitate the start of negotiations between China and Vietnam on possession of islands in the South China Sea. The islands were not named but presumably oil is believed to be in the surrounding seabeds.

Kyodo, the Japanese news agency, reported from Peking that Chinese sources there estimated the withdrawal would take two more weeks because "pulling out is more difficult militarily than advancing." The sources said the Vietnamese were expected to make small-scale attacks on the departing units but were not capable of a major attack.

The Chinese invaded Vietnam on Feb. 17 after months of clashes between Vietnamese and Chinese border forces and the Vietnamese invasion of Cambodia Dec. 25 which drove a Communist government allied with Peking from Phnom Penh.

The Chinese said their aim was to "punish" their southern Communist neighbor for border provocations and to teach them a lesson. Peking announced Monday it was withdrawing its troops after achieving its goals. On Wednesday, Vietnam said the Chinese had been defeated and would be allowed to pull out peacefully. But Hanoi said the Chinese would be "duly punished" if they renewed the fighting.

The latest battle report from Hanoi said fighting was continuing around Lang Son, 80 miles northeast of Hanoi, which the Chinese were reported to have captured, and the Chinese were still shelling Cao Bang, 70 miles northwest of Lang Son and 20 miles from the border. Hanoi also said the invaders were still digging trenches and attacking civilians in other areas.

The official Vietnam News Agency said a Hanoi correspondent for Japan's Communist Party newspaper Akahata was killed by Chinese snipers Wednesday in Lang Son, and that two Vietnamese escorts were wounded.

It said 35-year-old Isao Takano was shot in the head while taking pictures of the ruined city by Chinese snipers who "still infested the southern side" of the Ky Ung River, which crosses the town from east to west.

Hanoi said the Chinese in Lang Son set fire to many buildings, blew up bridges and looted property which they shipped back to China on trucks and trains.

How's The Weather?

FORECAST

Until Friday

Figures show low temperatures for area

Data from NATIONAL WEATHER SERVICE NOAA U.S. Dept. of Commerce

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are expected in the forecast period until Friday morning from the western Gulf to the lower Midwest and eastern Plains. Snow is due from North Dakota to the upper Great Lakes. Cold weather is expected for the central sections but most areas will be mild. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

Dense fog developed along the North Carolina coast and over Pamlico and Albemarle sounds this morning, prompting a travelers advisory in some areas. Visibility dropped to zero in some places and the fog wasn't expected to burn off until well into the morning.

Meanwhile, a fast moving area of low pressure moved into the Appalachians and was expected to pass over the state during the day. It was accompanied by cloudy skies and scattered showers. There was a possibility of thundershowers near the coast.

Temperatures climbed to the 50s and 60s around the state Wednesday. The forecast today called for a range from the 40s and 50s in the mountains to near 60 eastward.

Low readings tonight are expected to drop to the 30s, with some readings in the 40s along the coast.

It will be cloudy in the mountains and fair elsewhere Friday, and cloudy with a chance of rain Saturday and mainly in the east Sunday. Highs will be generally in the 60s.

Euthanasia Opposition Cited In Singh Studies

ECU News Bureau

A study by an East Carolina University sociologist indicates that certain strata of society will not accept a "mere medical verdict" as a basis for a practice such as euthanasia, mercy-killing, even with the consent of the patient himself.

A "popular response was that man should not play God regardless of the circumstances surrounding a patient," Dr. Avtar Singh reported in a paper "Religiosity and Attitude Toward Euthanasia," presented at a recent symposium in Richmond, Va.

A feeling that "only God can take or end a human life at what He thinks is the most appropriate moment," was a prevalent finding in the study based on data of a selected sample of people in San Juan, Puerto Rico, Singh said. Fifty-five percent of the respondents were Catholic, 24 percent Protestant and the rest indigenous, believing in such practices as witchcraft. The sampling included persons from all walks of life and different social classes, he said.

"An interesting finding was that both the Catholics and the Protestants consistently opposed the practice of euthanasia, whether the patient was young or old, in pain or not, conscious or in coma."

"A particularly large majority was against ending human life 'painlessly' (a terminal patient) with the recommendation of a doctor or team of doctors, although they also opposed euthanasia even with consent of the patient himself and his family," Singh said.

Singh adds, "The study would indicate that before such a practice is even considered for adoption as a social policy, the societal milieu should be taken into account. A mere medical verdict regarding chances of a patient's survival will not be enough."
