Carter's Middle East Peace Mission At Crucial Crossroad

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer
JERUSALEM (AP) — President Carter, his Mideast peace mission at a crucial crossroad, said today he has fallen short of an Egyptian-Israeli treaty. He told the Israeli parliament more flexibility is needed.

After hearing the results of an all-night Israeli cabinet meeting, Carter told the Knesset that leaders of the two nations are not yet ready to risk a peace treaty, although their people are now ready for peace.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin told reporters afterward, "We must all be patient." He said a new meeting had been scheduled between key members of his cabinet and U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance.

Carter told reporters he did not know whether he would remain in Israel to make further efforts toward a treaty, or return to the United States today as originally scheduled.

Earlier, both U.S. and Israeli officials said Carter was likely to spend an extra day in Israel and return Tuesday.

The officials originally held out hope that a treaty could be initiated before the president's return, but Begin said after the Knesset speech that he doubted if all issues could be worked out within 24 hours.

Earlier, at dawn, Begin said that his cabinet had made "reasonable" decisions on Egyptian peace terms during their 6½-hour session.

Israeli radio said the cabinet had accepted some parts of the latest U.S. compromise, but rejected others.

Officials said the Israelis had agreed to discuss a compromise plan on linking a treaty to fulfillment of Begin's promise to set up self-ruling authorities for Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza.

The proposal calls for moving more quickly on setting up Palestinian autonomy in the Gaza Strip than on the than on the occupied West Bank.

About 400,000 Palestinians live in Gaza, captured by Israel from Egypt in the Six Day War of 1967. The Israeli-occupied West Bank, former Jordanian territory, contains another 700,000 Palestinians.

Begin said at dawn he expected Vance to fly to Cairo to brief Egyptian President Anwar Sadat. Begin said he anticipated a "positive reply" from Sadat.

But U.S. officials said it was uncertain whether Vance would go to transmit the latest Israeli position, an indication that Vance would press for further changes during the afternoon.

Carter met with the Israeli cabinet over breakfast and then said in a speech to the full Knesset that "we still fall short" of a treaty.

"We have not yet fully met our challenge," Carter said.

"The people of the two nations are ready now for peace," Carter said. He spoke the sentence twice, first emphasizing the word "now" and then emphasizing the word "people."

"The leaders have not yet proven that we are also ready for peace, enough to take a chance," Carter added.

"We must proceed with due caution, I understand that, but we must proceed," Carter said.

The speech was followed by pandemonium in the Knesset, and one right-wing member of Begin's own party was ejected after heckling Begin as he tried to speak.

Carter, sitting on the Knesset podium, smiled wanly as he watched the heckling. About three members of Begin's ruling coalition accused Begin of selling out Israel, and about five diehard Communists charged he was oppressing the Palestinians.

Begin has vowed he won't sign any treaty without Knesset approval. Carter blew up in frustration when Begin reminded him of this commitment Saturday night, according to officials who asked not to be named.

Almost none of Begin's rank-and-file supporters in the Knesset came to his defense today during the heckling.

Carter opened his remarks by saying that in the preceding 24 hours he had discarded two draft speeches, one "a speech of despair" and the other "a speech of glad tidings and celebration."

"I have decided to deliver a speech of concern and caution," Carter said.

He said it is now the responsibility of all parties "to contemplate the tragedy of failure and the legitimate exultation if we bring peace ... Our vision must be as great as our goals. Wisdom and courage are required of us all."

He held out a promise of increased U.S. aid for Israel once a treaty is signed, pledging "new and stronger and more meaningful dimensions" to U.S.-Israeli relations.

Before the all-night meeting, Begin had told Carter in a dinner toast: "We have serious problems."

Speaking to reporters at the first light of day, Begin refused to reveal the decisions, saying he wanted the Egyptians to learn about them from Vance and not from news reporters.

"This is a very delicate stage of the negotiations," the prime minister said. "We must be very careful not to spoil this."

"I am hopeful, always," Begin said. "I expect a positive reply from Egypt. But whether they will give such a reply, how can I know? How can I say?"

"I think we took very reasonable decisions," the prime minister said, adding that some were by majority vote, others by consensus of the cabinet members.

Begin, sounding weary and conceding he was "quite tired," called the long cabinet meeting "important, very interesting and, I suppose, a unique session." The cabinet, he said, debated Egypt's treaty proposals "issue by issue."

The meeting lasted from 11 p.m. Sunday until 5:30 a.m. today.

Although Vance was available to the cabinet throughout the night for questions about Sadat's views on the issues, Begin said "it was not necessary to put questions to him."

BUDGET DEBATE
WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, spurred by the demands of state legislatures, today is launching its first full-scale debate on amending the Constitution to require a balanced federal budget.

RESTRICTED FROM KNESSET — Mrs. Geula Cohen, a member of the Begin-party in the Knesset, the Israeli parliament, leaves her seat today after the house voted to restrict her from the meeting. Mrs. Cohen was restricted for heckling during Prime Minister Menachem Begin's speech. (AP Laserphoto)

Chinese And Viet Clashes Continue

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer
BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam and China charged each other today with new attacks in their border war, but Western intelligence officers in Bangkok reported that the slow Chinese withdrawal was continuing.

Radio Hanoi said that as of late Sunday, the Chinese were shelling, burning and plundering areas of all six Vietnamese provinces along the northern border.

Xinhua, the official Chinese news agency, said Vietnamese forces shelled parts of Guangxi Province in southeast China and attacked withdrawing Chinese troops inside Vietnam.

"Chinese forces responded with an immediate counterattack on enemy positions," said Xinhua. "In every instance Chinese troops inflicted heavy losses on the ... Vietnamese."

Hanoi had a counter-charge for the eastern end of the border. It said Chinese artillery there fired more than 3,000 rounds into an area of Vietnam's coastal Quang Ninh Province, destroying homes and a ceramics factory.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, said in a dispatch from Hanoi that the Vietnamese Red Cross accused the Chinese of the "massacre of hundreds of civilians — children, women and old people."

Another Tass report from Hanoi said the Chinese were moving frontier marker posts to the south, deep into Vietnamese territory in Lang Son Province and were resettling ethnic Chinese there who had "fled" from the area earlier. It said that in one instance 1,000 ethnic Chinese had been resettled.

The Chinese government charged that Soviet and Vietnamese pressure forced the Laotian Communist government last week to expel Chinese advisers and technicians building highways in northern Laos. It accused Hanoi of tightening its grip on its northwestern neighbor in furtherance of its plans to dominate it and Cambodia, the two other Indochinese states.

Six Persons Injured In Three-Vehicle Collision

GRIMESLAND — Six persons were reported injured in a three-vehicle collision 1.6 miles East of here on N.C. 33 about 6:10 p.m. Sunday. Highway Patrolman Fred Davis reported a truck driven by Jimmy Oliver Vernon of Grimesland and cars driven by Fred Thomas Edwards of Route 1, Greenville and Harvey Ray Green of Grimesland, were headed East on N.C. 33 following one another, when Green pulled into the left-hand lane to pass the Edwards car.

Favor Connally Over Reagan

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — For the first time, former Texas Gov. John Connally was favored over former California Gov. Ronald Reagan in the race for the 1980 Republican presidential nomination, according to a CBS News poll taken among delegates attending a Midwestern GOP Leadership Conference.

The weekend gathering of delegates from 13 states was billed as an early barometer of the 1980 campaign in the nation's heartland. The CBS poll surveyed 254 of the 600 delegates. The poll wasn't scientific and didn't assure Connally of any votes at the national convention, but it marked the first time he has topped Reagan in any candidate ranking so far. Reagan did not attend because of prior commitments.

Davis said as the Green car began to pass the Edwards vehicle, Edwards pulled out to pass the Vernon truck and the Greene car ran onto the left-hand shoulder to make way. The Greene car went out of control, struck the Edwards vehicle which went out of control and both vehicles overturned on the right side of the highway.

Meanwhile, Vernon, seeing what was happening, pulled off the roadway, and his vehicle collided with a tree.

Trooper Davis, who charged Edwards with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety, reported one passenger in the Edwards car and five passengers in the Green vehicle were injured.

Damage from the incident was set at $1,500 to the Vernon truck, $2,000 to the Edwards car, and The Green vehicle, according to the officer, was a total loss.

SIX WERE INJURED ... in this 6:10 p.m. collision Trooper Fred Davis of the North Carolina Highway East of Grimesland on N.C. 33 Sunday, according to Patrol. (Staff Photo by Tommy Forrester)

COMMERCIALS SEEM LOUDER

I wonder why every time a commercial comes on television, the volume is increased tremendously. I've noticed this many times during all types of programs. I would really like to know and I'm sure others would, too. K. B.

WNCT-TV Chief Engineer Heber Adams said that volume increases according to the average number of words spoken during a given interval of time. The closer together the words come, the greater the volume appears to be. It's an aural illusion, but the effect is real. Adams said that the station is equipped with measuring devices that limit the levels on the average peaks of loudness, but he also noted that a better way of controlling volume is being engineered. This unit, he said, will work on averages of volume, instead of the heretofore used peak method of control.

Name-Change Wins 'Preferential' Treatment

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — Robert Earl Lee was brought up in the Southwest and thinks his grandfather was of Spanish origin. He says he plans to retire in South America. So Lee, a former Naval Academy classmate of President Carter, changed his name recently to Roberto Eduardo Leon.

The name change makes him eligible for preferential treatment under a county affirmative action program. It also has raised "some eyebrows" among his colleagues, officials say.

Leon, 56, a retired Naval captain, works in the Montgomery County Environmental Protection Department. Immediately after the name change, he asked to be reclassified as a member of a minority group and was granted the new status last week.

County guidelines say that because of Leon's Spanish surname, he is eligible for promotion over other white males.

"He has a knack for figuring out loopholes in things," Eric Mendelsohn, Leon's supervisor, said. "Bob, I mean, Roberto, is a highly regarded professional, a little eccentric in some ways. It's nice to have a Hispanic on our staff."

"It's confusing, I know," Leon said in an interview with The Washington Post.

He said he had considered changing his name from time to time.

He did not do it to gain a minority status for job-related reasons, he said, although he acknowledged that he has applied for other jobs.

Leon said he was brought up in the Southwest and was told his grandfather was of Spanish origin. He plans to retire in Chile and "when you live in a particular culture, you should adapt. It would be easier for me to blend in" with a Spanish surname.

In his current $27,857-a-year job, Leon does not have an advantage over other workers because his department is not under-represented by minorities. But if he seeks another job in an under-represented office, he would have an advantage, Mendelsohn said.

DEAR PAT: Some time ago, you had a pattern for using leftover yarn, similar to the sample enclosed. I made an afghan and a tote bag, using this pattern. My one big problem was keeping the edge even, but I found that by not making the double crochet stitch less than three single crochets from the edge, I could easily overcome the problem.

I also like to needlepoint and prefer working from charts. I have been searching for a chart for the "Last Supper." It is available in painted canvas but I have trouble with shading on this type of canvas. Do you know anyone who has this chart? MRS. R. H., WESTMINSTER, COLO.

Taking your question first, Mrs. H., I do not have or know where to get the chart you want, but I am almost certain some of my readers will know. If any of you do, please send me a postcard and I will forward it to Mrs. R. H.

I had completely forgotten about the multicolored pattern stitch Mrs. H. sent to me and am delighted that she jogged my memory. I have a bad habit of "filing" things away in boxes or drawers and forgetting about them.

To practice this stitch, which I call the stairstep stitch, why not make a pot holder with your leftover knitting worsted weight yarns? With a size G or H hook, chain 44 stitches. For the first row, work a single crochet in the second chain from hook and in each remaining chain across. This will give you 43 single crochets. At the end of the row, fasten off and cut yarn.

Each row of this pattern is started at the right edge with the right side of work facing you. Attach yarn of another color at beginning of row, chain one and work a single crochet in each of the next 7 stitches. (Then, double crochet in the row below and then single crochet in each of the next 7 stitches.) Repeat the steps within the parentheses all across the row, ending with a single crochet in each of the last 3 stitches. Cut yarn and fasten off.

To double crochet in the row below, you do not work a stitch in the 8th stitch. Instead, yamover and insert the hook into the space just under that stitch, pull yarn through and complete the double crochet. Cut yarn and fasten off.

For the next row, attach another color, chain one and single crochet in each of the next 6 stitches; then repeat the steps given in parentheses for the previous row all across, ending with a single crochet in each of the last 4 stitches. Cut yarn and fasten off.

Continue working in this manner, working 1 less single crochet at the beginning of each row and 1 more single crochet at the end of each row and you will see the stairstep pattern of double crochets emerge.

You will discontinue the first diagonal line when you have a double crochet within three stitches of the right hand edge, but by then you will have another started at the opposite end. This may sound confusing, but it should be quite clear as your diagonal pattern develops.

Use as many colors as you like — this is a case of the more the merrier! On larger projects, you will want to plan your color sequences so that they are a pleasing mix. You can find out how much yarn you will need by ripping out and measuring the yarn used for one row.

This pattern does leave a strand of yarn at each end of every row. I would suggest that you work a row or two of single crochet around the edges, covering the loose ends as you go.

Or, for an afghan, you could just leave them all about six inches long and add additional strands to make a fringe all around.

Just let your imagination go and have fun with this stitch!

Because of the large volume of mail she receives, Pat is unable to answer your letters personally. However, she welcomes all questions and hints, and will use those of general interest in the column whenever possible.

Burglars Robbed Her Of Faith In Society

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: If you have never had the privacy of your home violated by burglars, skip this column.

If you have... welcome to the club. I want to share a particularly timely and enormously moving piece I recently read in the Los Angeles Times. I welcome your reactions.

AN OPEN LETTER TO BURGLARS

By Fay Cohen

Dear burglars:

Having spent my childhood in a clean but poorly furnished home, I set out in marriage to make up for this by decorating our abode in an attractive and cheerful manner. My furniture is comfortable and tastefully coordinated; the wall hangings are equally eye-appealing. My housework and leisure time are made pleasant by up-to-the-minute appliances.

If you want all this, boys, you'd better bring a moving van. Pull it right up to my apartment door next time. No one will notice or question you—or will they?

You already have taken what could be carried away in a sack.

How much did you get for my string of pearls, given to me by mother more than 30 years ago? Did the love that permeated them enhance their value?

My late husband's watch was cold metal when you snatched it. He often laid it on his nightstand, and I'd feel the warmth of his body still on it, giving it momentary life.

And that gold wedding band with the Hebrew lettering—King Solomon's lovely: "I am my beloved's and my beloved is mine." How much did that net you?

After the police dusted for your prints, I was left alone, by choice, to try to put myself together. I scrubbed your presence away with soap and water, angry but not afraid.

You did frighten me two years ago when you broke in and took my son's photography equipment and my color television set. It wasn't so much what you took—how can one become sentimental over things that are so easily replaced? What upset me so much was that my secure home was intruded upon. It took me a long time to return to normal and lose the fear that you might return.

And return you did, last week. This time my reaction is not one of fear, but livid anger. I'm mad at the world, at my vulnerability, at a society where even things under lock and key are not safe—and I'm very angry with you!

Did I say I'm not afraid? Yes, I am—not of you, but of myself and the way I shouted to the police—"If you were to find them now and bring them here, I'd kill them!"

Do you know what disturbs me about that threat? I really, really meant it. For one insane moment I was capable of committing a crime. If I'd had a gun, I might have used it, thereby stooping to your gutter level. No, no guns in my house, thank you.

You took my precious possessions and you stole one thing more: my former self, the non-violent, secure, trusting person I used to be. I am sad—depressed—here in my fortress, now secured with double-bolts and a burglar alarm.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. Please enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Rumors, No Clues, On Stolen Painting

By JOHN C. EAGAN
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Where a $1 million Rembrandt masterpiece hung for 30 years, the M.H. de Young Memorial Museum now displays a portrait of the 17th century painter by an unidentified disciple.

Rembrandt's "Portrait of a Rabbi" and three less valuable paintings were stolen last Christmas Eve by a burglar who pried open a skylight and lowered himself into the museum. Police report that their investigation is at a dead end, but the FBI still has an active investigation under way in other cities.

Two days after the San Francisco burglary, the Art Institute of Chicago was victimized by thieves who stole 19th century paintings by Paul Cezanne from a storage room. The value: $3 million.

Chicago police also say they have no suspects or leads in their case. The Art Institute is offering a $100,000 reward for information leading to recovery of the three paintings.

"There are a lot of rumors — that they went out of the state, that they went out of the country. But we haven't been able to substantiate anything yet," said FBI agent Joe Aaron of the paintings stolen in San Francisco. "There's still a lot of work to be done in various places around the country."

"We're just sitting and waiting now — we've exhausted all of our leads," said city burglary inspector Tom Smith.

"Whoever got in there was a pretty good burglar, but not a good art thief," Smith added. "If he knew art, there are many valuable paintings that were left behind."

Smith added, however, that it is possible the burglar may have been a steal-to-order thief, who got exactly what he wanted.

What the thief took was Rembrandt's 31-by-25½-inch painting of a bearded rabbi wearing a red cap and gold chain, plus three other 17th century paintings worth a total of $62,000 — a night river scene by Aert Van der Neer, a harbor scene by Willem Van der Velde and a Rotterdam church interior by Anthony Delorme. None of the paintings was insured, which is policy for the city-owned museum, said de Young information officer Charles Long.

"One person could have done it — easily," Smith said. The inspector added there is no evidence the painting has left the state or the country. But the Paris-based international crime-fighting agency Interpol is aiding in the investigation.

There has been speculation that the paintings may have entered the world of international art thievery, and perhaps were sold to a wealthy art collector who will keep them hidden.

Alan Baer, president of the International Association of Art Security in New York, says some 15,000 art works are stolen in the United States in a year, and less than 2 percent are recovered.

After the San Francisco theft, two guards were suspended for five days for allegedly failing to make their rounds. The museum hired a private consulting firm, SRI International, to recommend new security measures — all of which have been adopted. One of the recommendations was to refuse to talk to the news media about security measures, Long said.

Post Office Keeps Town On The Map

GULF, N.C. (AP) — For some people, a trip to the post office is the highlight of the day.

For others, it's one of the few things that keeps Gulf, population 300, on the map.

That's why a recent proposal by the U.S. Postal Service caused such a ruckus.

The postal service plan may still go through, but it will be over the objections of the Gulf townspeople.

"We're interested in saving our identity as a community," said the Rev. R.C. Roper, pastor of the Bethany Baptist Church. "If everything here becomes Route 1, Goldston, or something like that, there won't be a Gulf anymore."

June Osborne, who runs the post office, opens up the small red brick building each weekday at 7 a.m., unbolting the glass doors and letting in the people who pick up their mail, buy stamps and catch up on the latest community news.

The people of Gulf are proud of their community, named in the 19th century for a turning basin in the nearby Deep River. They're proud of the handful of stores, five industries and the post office — a century-old town institution.

"Now you wouldn't give five cents for Gulf if they tied a ribbon around it," merchant Gus P. Murchison Jr. said. "But I love it. My grandmother was postmistress here, and I've had P.O. Box 86 for 25 years. My daddy had it before that."

"You know that feeling you get in your stomach when you're on a ride at the fair and your stomach goes up inside your chest? That how I felt when they said they wanted to close the post office."

Murchison, a Chatham County commissioner, and other local people fired off letters to their congressional representatives in February. Some reminded Rep. Ike F. Andrews, D-N.C., that the post office at nearby Bonlee, where he was raised, stayed open even after the Postal Service threatened to close it a few years ago.

Others letters and petitions went to the Postal Rate Commission, an independent body that will recommend whether the Gulf post office should be closed.

The campaign brought results. Local newspapers reported Thursday that the commission would not make its recommendation until June 27.

If the post office does close, the people will get their mail from a ruralcarrier based in Goldston. To them, having Gulf addressed as Route 1, Goldston, would be like saying Raleigh is on Route 1, Wake Forest.

"There's a little rivalry between Gulf and Goldston," said Roper. "It's kinda like Carolina and Duke."

Pitt NAACP Workshop Set For Thursday

The Political Action Committee of the Pitt County chapter of the NAACP will hold a "How To Workshop" Thursday beginning at 6:30 p. m. in the Auditorium of St. Gabriel's School here.

Speakers will be Joseph E. Madison, Director of the NAACP V/E, Detroit, Mich.; Leslie Myrie, N. C. State P. E. A., Southport; Willie Reddick of Washington, D. C., and James Andrews, Director of N. C. Outreach Program, AFL-CIO, Raleigh.

Calvin Henderson, chairman of press and publicity, said that the NAACP, along with the Pitt Co. Black Assembly, has kicked off a county-wide voter registration drive. The aim is to get every black eligible citizen registered to vote and to get at least 3,000 registered to vote by 1980. It is important that all minister, teachers and other leaders in the community attend this very important workshop, Henderson said.

N.C. Dance Company To Perform Here Tuesday

Greenville area balletomanes will have the chance to observe some superior dance performances when the North Carolina Dance Company visits the East Carolina University campus Tuesday, March 13, and Wednesday, March 14.

The company will give a matinee performance Tuesday at 1 p.m. An 8 p.m. performance is scheduled for Wednesday, with both to be held in ECU's Wright Auditorium.

The programs, offered by the ECU Student Union Theater Arts Committee, will be made possible with monies from the National Endowment for the Arts and the North Carolina Arts Council.

Different repertoires will be used for the two shows, with one piece, "The Grey Goose of Silence," to be performed at each event.

"The Grey Goose of Silence," made possible by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts, deals with a mythical town, Silence, located in the Appalachian Mountains. The piece was created especially for the North Carolina Dance Company, with choreography by Norbert Vesak and music by Ann Mortifree.

The Company also performs selections choreographed by George Balanchine and Alvin Ailey, an honor accorded to only a few dance companies.

Tickets for the Tuesday performance will be $3. With $2 charged a piece for groups of 20 or more. Wednesday tickets will be $4, with $3 charged per person with groups of 20 or more. Tickets are still available and may be obtained by calling 757-6611, extension 266, or going by the Mendenhall Student Center on the ECU campus. Tickets will also be available at the door.

Jury Rules Against Contracting Firm

A Pitt County Superior Court jury Friday night found the Gasco Corp. of Raleigh, guilty on charges of attempting to obtain property by false pretenses and obtaining property by false pretenses in connection with two February 1977 incidents here.

Judge Richard Allsbrook delayed sentencing until April 2. The jury found the company not guilty on three similar counts and Gasco president G. L. Gaskins not guilty on three counts of aiding and abetting in connection with the case.

Gasco, the general contractor on an expansion project at Burroughs-Wellcome Co. here, allegedly took money from Burroughs-Wellcome in payment for work done at the site and failed to pay subcontractors. The charges stemmed from incidents between September 1976 and February 1977.

Gasco was found not guilty in cases involving $95,321, $85,305 and $92,092, and found guilty in connection with obtaining $58,430 from the drug firm. The firm was also found guilty of attempting to obtain $42,202 by false pretenses, although no payment was made by Burroughs-Wellcome in that case.

A mistrial was declared in one case against Gaskins, whose firm is now in bankruptcy.

Yemeni Claim New Clashes

KUWAIT (AP) — Conservative North Yemen today accused Marxist South Yemen of new air attacks on its border posts despite Arab League demands for a cease-fire.

A North Yemeni broadcast said South Yemeni planes bombed positions in the area of Harib, a border town almost 100 miles southeast of San'a, the North Yemeni capital.

Meanwhile, an Arab League committee was trying to set up observance of the truce that the two governments at the southern tip of the Arabian peninsula agreed to nine days ago.

The committee, which conferred with the North Yemenis in San'a Sunday, includes six Arab foreign ministers and representatives of the Arab League and the Palestine Liberation Organization. San'a Radio said the panel "adopted a number of measures to resolve the conflict" which were conveyed to the North Yemeni government. It did not elaborate.

The committee flew to Aden early today to discuss its proposals with South Yemeni officials.

The Arab League appointed the political committee and a truce supervision committee at a meeting in Kuwait last week.

Each of the Yemenis accused the other of starting the latest fighting Feb. 23. Such outbreaks have been frequent along the craggy mountain border between the two Yemenis for the past ten years.

The United States is sending a naval task force led by the carrier Constellation to make a show of force in the area and is speeding up shipment of $400 million worth of arms to North Yemen. A Kuwait newspaper reported last week that the Soviet Union was flying 2,700 Cuban troops and 300 Soviet military advisers from Ethiopia to South Yemen.

Fragmented Service Is Fading

It is rapidly becoming clear that the age of fragmented air service is coming to an end in Eastern North Carolina.

The latest evidence is Piedmont Airlines decision to cease service to New Bern and Rocky Mount-Wilson.

Piedmont also provides service to Jacksonville and Kinston and officials of the company said there is too heavy a concentration of airports in the area. Piedmont feels it can give better service through fewer airports.

It gives us no pleasure that New Bern and Rocky Mount-Wilson may lose their scheduled air service and we can understand the desire of officials in those areas wanting to keep the service.

It is, however, a fact of the modern age of air travel that service cannot be maintained to several small airports.

That is being done in by the traveling public's wish to go by jet, rather than on prop or prop-jet airliners.

Piedmont is planning to convert to all-jet service, which will eliminate the short hop prop jets it now operates on some runs.

We in the East can wind up with better over-all air service if we will concentrate the service in one location. Every city and county may have to give a little to accommodate this concept, but if we don't do it we may find our area with no regular jet service at all.

Opportunities For Commuter Service

While Piedmont Airplanes is reducing the number of airports it serves in the East, Wheeler Airlines, a commuter service, is expanding its runs.

Wheeler is purchasing a 38-seat F-27 propjet to serve its customers. Included are stops at the Pitt-

Greenville Airport.

Cummuter air service is rapidly coming into its own in Eastern North Carolina, and through Wheeler Airlines this type of service is already available to Pitt County.

Change A Franchise Law?

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Two years ago the General Assembly adopted a change in the law governing use of school buses. Previously restricted to school use only, the buses can now be made available for groups of senior citizens.

Legislators proved that their hearts were in the right place in expressing concern for the elderly. But it was clear at the time that use of school buses by the elderly was simply not practical.

The school buses have hard seats, no air conditioning, ride rough, and are hard to get on and off.

Now, realizing that the change didn't solve the problem, State Rep. Edd Nye, D-Bladen, says another change in law is being pushed which might work somewhat better.

Bus lines would be exempted from the normal route restrictions and tariff rate schedules set forth by the Utilities Commission for common carriers when hired to transport a group of elderly citizens.

This exemption is already in effect for church groups, local governments, and schools," Nye explained.

What the change would mean is that competition could be provided without regard for franchise areas so that senior citizen groups could get the lowest rates and best service.

Opposition
People can get all exercised in opposition to nearly anything.

As a legislative committee argued local opposition to a proposed Therapeutic Wilderness Camp for children in Surry County the other day, State Rep. Henry Frye, D-Durham, recalled this incident.

A library was proposed in a certain neighborhood in his hometown and residents of the area got all upset. "They didn't want that library coming in there and disrupting

BILL NOBLITT

Leadership
State Rep. Clyde Auman, D-Moore, is a great champion for children, and stood up for the camping proposal. There is one in Montgomery County near Auman's home which is "working beautifully. It is one of the greatest things we have seen."

Wondered.
State Senator George Marion and State Rep. David Diamond are leading the opposition to the camp in the General Assembly. The Surry County Democrats say they are not personally opposed to the camp, but are representing their constituents who are opposed to such a facility in their community.

The Crane
When Morehead City business leaders trooped into the Legislative Building recently to argue against relocating the container crane from that port city to Wilmington, they sported lapel pins reading "Save the Crane."

One legislator told another there was an environmental group visiting — trying to save the crane. "What kind of crane?" wondered Legislator Number One.

CAPITOL LETTER

Jim Hunt Should Smile

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Watching all the political scurrying in the state capital, Gov. Jim Hunt must have been smiling last week.

A series of political events, unrelated on their surface, together pointed out just how solid Hunt's position for re-election appears to be a year before the Democratic primary and how his succession chances have muddled the outlook for lesser political figures.

—There was Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, failing to flatly spurn overtures from the Republican Party that he join them to run against Hunt in 1980. Green let the talk go on, and he didn't say no.

—There was House Speaker Carl Stewart, a bit embarrassed but hardly shaken by reports he had vacated with a Raleigh lawyer who was later sent to prison as a dope ring's bag man. Investigations showed Stewart was clean.

—And there was state Sen. Bill Whichard, D-Durham, who withdrew his name from the 1980 lieutenant governor's race after being considered one of the main contenders. Whichard said he'd wait for another chance.

That Green would even consider departing the Democratic Party at age 58 is evidence, observers in both parties agreed, that he recognizes the odds are against him in a challenge of Hunt in the spring primary.

Hunt, of course, hasn't said he is seeking re-election next year. But with his backing, the state constitution was changed in 1977 to allow gubernatorial succession, and few doubt he will take advantage of it.

There is precedent for such a political conversion — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who said he talked to Green about a switch, was a Democrat before he ran. And Republican leaders have been generally receptive to the idea, feeling a combination of their normal voter strength — 40 percent to 50 percent — might be molded into a majority coalition with Green's strength among Democratic conservatives.

Yet few on either side expect Green to actually do it. "I know several Republicans that have talked to him about it ... And he didn't say no," said Sen. Cass Ballenger, R-Catawba. "But you know, it's like asking him to cut off his own finger or something. It's got to hurt."

Whichard, bowing out of the lieutenant governor's race, did so convinced that Green wasn't going to challenge Hunt from either party.

He pointed out the obstacles placed in their way by the succession amendment and said he believes Green will choose to seek re-election next year.

"My guess is at this point it's basically a race between the lieutenant governor (Green) and the speaker (Stewart) for lieutenant governor," Whichard said.

For his part, Stewart said he plans to run for lieutenant governor — with or without Green as his main opponent.

"I think it's better really in the long run, if your political

EAGLE'S WINGS
In the 32nd Chapter of Deuteronomy we find Moses speaking of God as a mother eagle that "stirreth up her nest, fluttering over her young" and spreading abroad her wings, bearing up her young lest they fall.

It is the picture of the way the mother eagle teaches her brood to fly. She practically pushes them off the precipice, and as they plunge to earth she flies beneath them, lifting them on her broad wings and sustaining them until they have found a safe place to alight.

This is in some respects a picture of how God teaches us to use our powers. As the eagle "stirreth up her nest", so God sees to it that we get forced out of our comfort and indulgence in order to use our own powers. And as we plunge toward destruction, we are conscious of a power which like eagle's wings bears us up and preserves us. We need have no fear. He is near us and sustaining.

Save The U.S. Potholes

By ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON — Not every lobbyist in Washington is working against the public interest. There are many young, idealistic people in Washington living on a pittance to preserve the great natural beauty of this country.

One of them is Robert Frisco who represents the "Society to Save the American Pothole."

He came to my office hoping I would help publicize his cause.

"The American pothole is becoming extinct," he said, "and may go the way of the American buffalo."

"I didn't know that," I said. "It seems to me that everywhere I drive I see a pothole."

"That's what the pothole repairers want you to think. But 20 years ago this country had 40 billion potholes. In one generation we're down to 30 billion. By the end of the century there could be less than a billion potholes in the entire nation."

"What can we do to preserve them?" I asked.

"We have to get Congress to pass a law declaring the American pothole a national landmark."

"Of course," I said.

"But the law has to have

To the editor:
We hear more and more about the value of daily exercise for physical fitness. Since walking, jogging and running do just that, it also increases the number of pedestrian accidents and deaths as the people take to the streets and sidewalks.

Statistics indicate that more than 300,000 pedestrian accidents occurred across the country in 1976 of which approximately 8,300 were fatal. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration points out that a pedestrian may be someone who "walks, stands, runs, roller skates, wheelchair or rides a skateboard". About 25 percent of the fatalities are children under the age of fifteen and more than 50 percent are adults over the age of forty.

Studies conclude that pedestrian accidents have certain common characteristics. The seven predominant types are:

1. DARTOUT & Most common type and accounts for approximately one-third.
2. INTERSECTION DASH — A person runs across the intersection but is not seen by the driver until it's too late.
3. VEHICLE TURN — A driver's attention is focused on the traffic heading in one direction and does not see pedestrian dart out from different direction.
4. MULTIPLE THREAT — Vehicles traveling in two lane lanes in opposite directions and pedestrian walks between cars.
5. BUS STOP RELATED — Persons leaving a stopped bus, start to cross the street in front of the bus and are hit by a vehicle.
6. VENDOR-ICE CREAM TRUCK — Person going to or from vendor or ice cream truck especially small children.
7. BACKING UP — Most common victims are the elderly, either failing to see a vehicle is backing up or not being seen by the driver.

So remember, take a little extra time. Be in a little less hurry and you will have a better chance of being able to "Ease on Down the Road" for many years to come.

teeth in it. Anyone caught filling a pothole must be subject to a stiff fine and even a prison term. The Department of Transportation has to set up a national police force which would guard the potholes against the vicious repair crews in the cities and counties who go out at night and try to fill in the hole."

"That could cost a lot of money," I said.

"What are a few dollars compared to the life of a pothole?" Frisco said. "Have you ever seen what man does when he finds a pothole?"

"I have on television, but not in real life."

"It's pitiful. First they take axes and chip away at the sides of the hole. Then they batter it with heavy shovels. And finally they pour hot black tar and asphalt into the hole. It makes you sick. The pothole doesn't have a chance."

"No wonder they only do it at night. But why do grown men want to fill potholes?"

"For the sport of it. They justify their bloodthirstiness by saying that potholes are dangerous to automobiles and trucks and school buses. But potholes don't cause accidents, people cause them."

"The Anti-Pothole lobby in this country is very strong. What happens if you can't get a bill through to preserve them?"

"Then we'll go into the streets. Our people are prepared to throw their

'Meals-On-Wheels' Eye Future

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
For thousands of homebound Americans, the difference between hardship and happiness is a private volunteer program that provides them with lowest meals and a friendly face.

The program is Meals-on-Wheels and it is celebrating its 25th anniversary in the United States this year.

The Meals-on-Wheels concept began in England during World War II. It was introduced to this country in 1954 by Mrs. Clarence Toy, a Pennsylvania woman who heard about the project from a British exchange student.

The programs are locally run; most are affiliated with religious or community service organizations.

Neil Scott, a political consultant who is a Meals-on-Wheels volunteer and is editor of the International Directory of Meals-on-Wheels, estimates that there are almost 2,000 programs across the country, each serving 30 to 50 persons.

(Scott's directory is available at a cost of $1.25 from Directory, 421 Seward Square SE, Washington, D.C. 20003.)

Although the programs operate independently, they are organized along similar lines. Volunteers deliver meals to participants' homes once a day, five days a week. Each delivery includes two meals — one hot, one cold. Participants pay a sum equal to the cost of the meals, usually $10 to $16 a week, according to Scott.

Most of the people receiving the meals are elderly, Scott said, but the program is open to anyone who is unable to get and prepare his or her own food and cannot afford to hire someone else to do it.

Most of the Meals-on-Wheels programs are self-sufficient. They can qualify for federal aid under the Older Americans Act of 1965. But Scott said recent amendments to the act will make it difficult for most programs to qualify unless they change their methods of operation and limit their services to people over 60. He said there is a difference between government programs and Meals-on-Wheels.

"I think there's a vital difference for the recipients between having a federal volunteer stand at their doorstep with a meal they paid for with their taxes and having a neighborhood volunteer stand there with a meal which they also paid for, but which they know is there because the volunteers in the community care about them," said Scott. "It says to them: 'You're a valued person in our community.'"

Talk of an energy shortage has Scott and others in the Meals-on-Wheels program worried. During the 1974 crisis, he said, "lots of people said they couldn't get gasoline or couldn't afford to pay." They faced long lines and closed service stations. "Lots of meals were missed," Scott said.

To avoid similar problems, Meals-on-Wheels volunteers are being urged to plan now to find alternate ways of delivery — on foot, by bicycle or by public transit.

'Nitty-Gritty' Due Soon In Assembly

By Rep. Sam D. Bundy
 N. C. House of Representatives
 This week was fairly routine, with no big issues at stake; however, in the next week or two we will be getting down to the "nitty-gritty" of some burning issues. The Governor is ready with his Crime Control package, of which the main issues will be Presumptive Sentencing and Merit Selection of Judges. The present system gives judges a wide latitude, which means one person could receive six months, while yet another person could receive 20 years. A "presumed" prison term for each category of felony would be established and imposed by the judge unless he finds that there are mitigating circumstances. Also, the parole system would be done away with and sentences would automatically be reduced by one day for each day of good behavior. Thus, a person with a 10-year sentence could be released after five years based on good behavior. This part of the package has met with some favorable reaction and may become law.

This Merit Selection of Judges, in my opinion, will be defeated. First of all, it would take a three-fifth vote in the House and Senate. That means 72 House members and 30 Senate members would have to vote for it. I don't believe the votes are there and I predict the merit selection of judges will be defeated again, as it was in 1971, 1973, 1975 and 1977, because it removes the right of the people to vote in selection of judges.

Andrea Jones was my page this week and it was my pleasure to have her and her roommate, Donna Cullipher, for lunch on Tuesday.

 See you next week.

Former Dropout Now 'Achiever'

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Twice a week, Dona Patterson makes a drive of 90 miles from Charlotte to attend her classes at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

She's taking two courses that she hopes will lead to admission in a doctoral program in child development.

Eleven years ago at age 25, Mrs. Patterson says she got tired of her life. At 36, she's a symbol of academic achievement.

bug. "Working with children, one of the first things I learned was you can't help other people until you first help yourself," she said.

The road hasn't been entirely smooth. Mrs. Patterson says her abilities are average and that she has to work very hard.

In February, she learned that she was not selected for doctoral work at UNC-G because her six-year-old Graduate Record Examination scores weren't high enough. She must repeat the exam but will continue classes in the meantime, she said. "She will be re-evaluated in April," said Dr. James A. Watson, head of the UNC-G child development and family relations department. "Those (earlier) scores are not representative of her abilities. She's had to overcome one hurdle after another. There's just no doubt she can raise (the scores)."

"It's like stumbling blocks being put in your way. Taking into account I got my master's and made good grades, I have mixed feelings. But I have no plans of quitting. I'm even more determined now," Mrs. Patterson said.

Humane Soc. Adds Two New Members

The Pitt County Humane Society met Saturday at the Greenville Women's Club Building and added two new members to the Society, Barbara Haddock and Della Harrell.

A certificate of recognition was presented to Lorraine Graff for her humane care of several cats prior to becoming a member of the society last month.

After the meeting, in line with a request and a donation to the Society by Charles Martocia to feed the starving seagulls at the Greenville Landfill, society members went to the landfill to distribute fish and meat scraps and 80 loaves of bread to the gulls there. Heywood McKinney drove his truck there loaded with the food and several members did the feeding.

Plans are made to continue the feeding from time to time as long as donations continue to be received for this special fund.

The next meeting of the society is to be held Apr. 7 at 10 a.m.

A motion was made by Ada Jones to include the committee chairmen as board members. A board meeting will be held prior to April. Board members will be contacted personally.

I told Frisco, "I admire you for taking on a lost cause. But it seems to me that most people couldn't care less about preserving the country's potholes."

"We're getting a lot more support than you think. For one thing time is now on our side, and many governors and mayors are reluctant to spend money to fill their potholes. If we can get Congress to pass a pothole preservation law, they will have a perfect excuse not to fill any of them."

"You're doing great work," I said.

"We're not doing it for ourselves, but for our children and their children. When you talk about potholes, you're talking about people's roots. No one has a right to cover this country with concrete. Every time someone fills in a pothole, something in all of us dies."

 Vietnam, Carter shows dogged determination to remain on course, focusing on arms limitation, the Middle East and inflation, among the issues that have caused him the most difficulty.

Carter's mission to Cairo and Jerusalem in quest of peace could, if successful, silence his critics for a time. If it isn't successful, the opposition likely will be gaining some converts.

Occupied with Middle East peace talks, Carter last week skipped a trip to address a Democratic fund-raising dinner in Los Angeles, an outing that would have put him face to face with critical Democrats.

Vice President Walter F. Mondale stood in for him. Two groups of dissident Democrats marked the event with a counter-Carter dinner, and with newspaper advertisements of their dissatisfaction.

In New York, Paul O'Dwyer, the former City Council president, is spearheading an East Coast "Dump Carter" drive.

O'Dwyer says he spent nearly two months in a "low key" survey of potential support for a move against

Carter. "We knew the discontent was there, but whether the people have enough energy to protest within the Democratic Party we did not know," he said. "We have come to the conclusion it is a viable thing and can be done."

ON TOP OF OLD KNOBBY — Eighty-eight-year-old Minnie Cook points toward Carpenter's Knob as she tells Joe Z. Cooke about the time she saw "Knobby"

— Cleveland County's mysterious creature some people call Bigfoot, Jr. (AP Laserphoto)

By JOE DePRIEST
Shelby Daily Star
CASAR, N.C. (AP) — Knobby doesn't pose for pictures, but Elbert Cook still hopes to get one someday.

Cleveland County's mysterious creature some people call Bigfoot Jr. hasn't been spotted lately, and the number of casual sightseers around Carpenter's Knob, which furnishes Knobby the name, has diminished.

Gone, too, are the big game hunters, the TV cameras, Florida tourists, and live radio broadcasts. There are still T-shirts for sale depicting Knobby as a Pogo-like animal holding a can of pork and beans, along with Knobby posters and at least one ballad.

But the sound and the fury is dying down.

Cook is only one of many people thankful for that. When the hulabaloo stops altogether, Knobby, whatever it is, may come out again and Cook, a store owner in the area, can get a photo.

Sightings began last December. Cook's 88-year-old mother, Minnie, was among the first to see the creature. One morning when her dog barked, Mrs. Cook went outside to investigate. In a nearby pasture what she first thought was a cow "rared up on its hind legs" and stared at Mrs. Cook and her dog, she said. It wasn't a cow and it wasn't a bear and if anything, it looked like an ape, she said.

"Boy, if you'd see it one time you wouldn't want to see it no more," said Mrs. Cook.

Other sightings brought descriptions of something slightly bigger than a newborn calf and black with a slender waist and flat face.

Mrs. Clayton Earles heard the creature howl once like a "woman or a hoot owl." Someone dubbed it Knobby, and Knobby was a natural.

With the right manager, it might have made a million.

Advertising was free, courtesy of the media. But curiosity seekers who flocked to the area didn't get to see anything except nice hill-country scenery.

Good management would have provided something, real or otherwise, in a sideshow and charged admission. That thought crossed Joe Z. Cooke's mind — having a real live Knobby in a cattle trailer and selling tickets to the attraction.

In reality, all Knobby ever meant to Cooke was an aggravation, he said. The whole episode definitely had a sideshow atmosphere, he thinks.

Cooke owns Carpenter's Knob. He bought the 1,600-foot-high hill in 1950 from his grandfather and lives there on a dead-end road. Knobby-hunters, thinking that the road led to the top of the knob, rambled into Cooke's drive at all hours of the day and night.

A TV camera crew acted like they owned the place, he said.

"The whole country flocked in," he said, adding that he feared someone would get hurt.

Stories about a "black panther" living in a bone-littered cave atop the knob and a lantern-bearing ghost searching for his murdered wife only fanned the flames of Knobby fever.

Then Jim Hollingsworth, an amateur Bigfoot investigator, from Pikeville, entered the picture. A member of the North American Wildlife Research Association of Eugene, Ore., Hollingsworth does independent research on primitive hominids — upright-walking creatures. He made several trips to Cleveland County.

"I'm reasonably sure some people were seeing a big cat," Hollingsworth said recently. Still, he hasn't lost interest in Knobby, he said.

A big cat or bear or two roaming the same area may have added to the confusion of Knobby sightings, he suggested.

The ground was too frozen to make much out of some tracks residents showed him. But Hollingsworth played a tape with a number of animal sounds for several people who claimed they had heard Knobby, and the one they picked was a reputed recording of Bigfoot below in the Pacific Northwest, he said.

Bigfoot Jr. was quickly added to the list of Knobby's names.

School children drew their impressions of the creature for class projects.

In Kinston, Martha Queen Barrett, a Cleveland County native, asked her Westminster Methodist Day School nursery pupils to imagine Knobby was Bongo, the circus bear that broke out of a cage and rode into the woods on a bicycle. Mrs. Barrett sent a sampling of the drawings to the Shelby Daily Star, along with a letter from the children. "If you succeed in capturing Knobby, please let us know if it is Bongo," they wrote.

As Knobby's fame grew, so did its dimensions — at least 10 feet tall, according to one story; bloodshot eyes as big as silver dollars. Chased a man into a barn and bit the heads right off a dozen horses. Never even slowed down. Someone claimed he saw a footprint six inches wide and 15 inches long.

Lewis Bart, county game warden, heard all the stories and his opinion remained unchanged: Knobby was just a bear — of the non-bike riding variety.

Bears wander down from the mountains occasionally; it's nothing unusual, said Elbert Cook.

But he doesn't think Knobby is a bear.

"I've lived in this area about 40 years, and I've never seen nothing like this," he said.

Whatever Knobby may be, "I don't want nobody putting it in a cage. It's not a bothering anybody. Let it roam free," said Cook.

Fear Cultists Stole 2 Winston-Salem Babies

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A search was underway Sunday for two babies believed taken from their beds Saturday, and police say what they call a cult-like church may be involved.

The missing children are 22-month-old Sheba Jeter and 21-month-old Monique Latoya Brown, police say.

Sgt. Frank Mabry of the Winston-Salem police detective bureau said Sunday that warrants have been issued for two men, both of whom he said are members of New Hope Deliverance and Miracle Center. A third man is also being sought, he said.

The children's mothers, who share a house, told police that three men broke the glass on the front door of their home about 4:30 a.m. Saturday and searched the house for the children, who were taken from their beds. The mothers, Pauline Jeter and Carlotta Brown, are also church members, police said.

"We're talking to former (church) members and seeing what we can get," said Mabry. Charged with two counts of kidnapping each were Marion Martin Jr., 38, and Norman Wilson, 18, Mabry said. Neither they nor the children had been located late Sunday night. No warrants have been issued for the third man.

New Hope has been under investigation by police since last spring, when a police officer looked into a kidnapping complaint involving church members.

In the early 1970s, the church had a membership of more than 300, but it has since dwindled to about 30 children and 30 adults, police said.

Former members told the Winston-Salem Journal that the church abandoned its Christian principles when it was taken over by Demorie Ray Robinson, son of the church's founder, Dollie May Bynum, who died in 1976.

The church has become a personality cult financed by members' pay and welfare checks and dominated by violence, the newspaper reported that former members told it.

Transcripts of taped interviews now in the hands of the district attorney describe a kidnapping, shootings, beatings and the use of drugs by children at church houses, the newspaper said. District Attorney Donald Tisdale is reviewing the file and is expected to decide soon whether to seek indictments against some church members.

After the children were reported missing Saturday, police say they started surveillance at church members' houses and searched three of them looking for the missing children.

"We sent two officers to the front door (at each house) and had three in the back, as well as about 10 uniformed police standing by," said Lt. C.E. Koontz. "We wanted to have a show of force."

In a possibly related incident, police say Wilson's brother, David Lee Wilson, 19, was charged with second-degree larceny in connection with a break-in at the house next door to the children's home about four hours before the abduction. Officer B.M. Owens said David Wilson was also charged with assault on a police officer with a firearm and "possessing a weapon of mass death and destruction." Owens said two M-1 30-caliber carbines were found.

Police Check 2 Accidents

An estimated $3,400 property damage resulted from two collisions investigated here Sunday by Greenville Police.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 6:30 p.m. collision on Memorial Drive, 50 feet North of the Maxwell Street intersection.

According to Police, a car driven by David Lee Brown of Route 2, Ayden, collided with a utility pole, causing the pole to break and strike two pick-up trucks parked at Phelps' Chevrolet Co., resulting in an estimated $200 damage to the Brown car, $500 damage to one truck and $900 to another, and $1,000 damage to the pole.

Brown who left the scene of the mishap, was taken into custody by Ayden Police officers on charges of driving under the influence. He was charged by Greenville investigators with hit and run driving.

Carolyn Jean Bibbs of Route 1, Grimesland, was charged with driving under the influence following investigation of a 1:05 a.m. mishap at the intersection of Tenth Street and Riverbluff Drive.

Investigators reported the Bibbs car collided with a car driven by James Earl Long of Philadelphia, Pa., causing an estimated $600 damage to the Long vehicle and $200 damage to the Bibbs car.

Plan Inspection Of Bridges In N.C.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — One-third of the state's 15,470 bridges need to be repaired or replaced, according to Billy Rose, state highway administrator.

The Division of Highways will be making an inspection of the bridges soon, he said.

"I would say, in general terms, our bridges are in sorry shape," Rose said. Almost a third of the bridges in the state can't support a loaded school bus. More than a third of the bridges need to be repaired or replaced. More than half the bridges are posted, which means that they cannot carry the legal load limit, he said.

"We've got some bridges we don't know how old they are," Rose said. "Some were built in the late 1800s. We consider the life of the bridge to be 40 years.

Iran's Women Still Protesting

By BRIAN JEFFRIES
Associated Press Writer
TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Ten thousand women marched through the streets of Tehran today, demonstrating for the fourth day against Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's threat to restrict the freedoms granted them by Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

The turnout was much less than organizers of the demonstration expected and far less than the tens of thousands of women who marched through Tehran on Saturday. A statement from Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan's government that women would not be required to wear the chador, the heavy, full-length traditional black veil, appeared to have eased the fears of many women.

Although feminists fear that the Islamic republic the ayatollah plans will reduce the political and economic rights granted them under the shah's Westernization program, the issue of dress has become the most emotional one because it is the most visible.

Deputy Prime Minister Abbas Amir Entezam, in a government statement, said women civil servants were not required to wear the veil to work of even scarves "but they should dress with dignity and avoid appearing cheap or exposed in their offices."

Students in jeans, working women and housewives were among the marchers. A sprinkling of men was seen accompanying wives or friends.

A small group of Moslem zealots stood behind a fence as the marchers assembled at Tehran University and chanted Islamic slogans but made no attempt to attack the women. Another group passed out handbills calling on the women to conform to Islamic tradition and wear the chador.

The women carried placards saying "We want equal rights" and "No to the chador."

American feminist Kate Millett, who arrived in Tehran last week to give her support to the women's movement, was at the rally. Addressing a news conference Sunday, she lumped Pope John Paul II and Khomeini together, saying both are "male chauvinists because as leaders they are attempting to curtail women's rights." were reported.

The 44-year-old author of "Sexual Politics" said she had worked against the shah's regime as a member of the American Committee for Artistic and Intellectual Freedom in Iran.

Meanwhile, the ayatollah's revolutionary committees and courts, operating independently of Bazargan's government, executed six more men and flogged eight more men and a woman in accordance with Islamic law.

The revolutionary committees have executed at least 16 persons for sexual crimes and at least 25 for political killings and torture.

The Foreign Ministry announced that the government has decided to withdraw Iran from the Central Treaty Organization, or CENTO, because it no longer protects the rights and interests of its member states.

CENTO, one of the series of anti-Soviet alliances conceived by U.S. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, has been virtually defunct for years. The last royal government announced it was going to pull out but didn't last long enough to do it.

EXECUTED — Two Iranians are shown being executed Sunday by Islamic firing squad at Tehran's Qasr Prison. The revolutionary committee of Ayatollah Khomeini have executed at least 16 persons for sexual crimes and another estimated 25 for political reasons. Eight men and a woman have been flogged in accordance with Islamic law. (AP Laserphoto)

Doctors Checking Up On That Annual Check-Up

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Doctors are checking up on the checkup.

Long a medical standby, the annual physical may not be necessary, some doctors say.

"We suggested abandoning the complete physical, especially for healthy adults ages 16 to 44, and targeting specific diseases at certain ages," said Dr. Suzanne W. Fletcher of a task force in which she participated.

Ms. Fletcher, of the University of North Carolina Medical School, said curtailing the annuual checkup is part of an evolutionary process in health care.

The two-year study recommended that doctors screen for diseases only in people most likely to suffer from them, she said.

The annual physical detractors also cite rising medical costs as a reason for doing away with them and their attendant battery of tests.

Supporters of the physical say that it is needed to determine a person's medical norm — knowing the patient over a period of time.

But doctors on both sides agree that the importance is related to the age and health of the patient.

Dr. Wallace N. Evans, a family practice doctor in Cary, makes the distinction between two patients.

"If you're 60 years old with chronic insulin-dependent diabetes, heart disease, high blood pressure, anemia and have had a mastectomy, you're going to need closer following than someone 20 years old out running track, who doesn't smoke, whose mother and father are 70 years old and whose every family member died at age 90 because a truck hit them," he said.

The cost of a thorough exam, estimated costing $150 on average by the N.C. Medical Society, is a big factor in that group's urging a narrower screening for patients who feel fine, said Dr. D.E. Ward of Lumberton, the society's president.

"We are all trying to cut down on lab tests for cost containment," Ward said, adding that some tests are ordered by doctors more out of habit than of necessity.

Dr. Lyndon K. Jordan of Smithfield, president of the N.C. Academy of Family Physicians, said, however, that he administers a comprehensive exam to all new patients.

"If a doctor only sees a patient when he is sick, he is at a disadvantage," said Jordan. "He doesn't know what the norm is, the condition he is trying to go back to."

It Helps To Be N.C. Democrat

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Farming out some of the state's legal work has been done for years, state officials say.

And it certainly helps to be a Democrat, preferably prominently, if you're a lawyer wanted some of the business, it appears.

For example, the law firm to which House Speaker Carl Stewart, D-Gaston, belongs handled about $265,000 worth of title work for the state in recent years, according to a running tab kept on all lawyers on the list.

The Winston-Salem firm of Jenkins, Lucas, Babb and DeRamus got even more title work — $328,000 worth over the past four years, the list shows.

Babb is state Elections Board Chairman Kenneth Babb and DeRamus is state Rep. J. David DeRamus, D-Forsyth.

Asked if there were any Republicans on the list, Jack Cozart, Gov. Jim Hunt's legal advisor, said he thought there were some left over from the administration of Gov. Jim Holshouser.

Added Charles H. Smith, an assistant attorney general who, along with Cozart, maintains the list, "Let's say there are no obvious ones (Republicans). But we've never sat down and checked their registration."

The men say, however, that it isn't a way for lawyers to get rich.

"We have so many (names on the list) out there now that we could never get to them all," Smith said. "And we haven't changed the fees in years, and they're so low now that pretty soon a lot of the older, more experienced lawyers won't even want to mess with it."

The fee schedule for title work ranges from $100 for transactions of $5,000 or less to one-fourth of a percent on transactions between $50,000 and $200,000. Fees on titles worth more than $200,000 are negotiable.

Title work comes almost totally from Department of Administration property officers for state offices and parks and schools and from the Department of Transportation for highways, ports and the like.

Gacy's Home To Be Destroyed

CHICAGO (AP) — Plans are being drawn by law enforcement authorities for the demolition of John Gacy Jr.'s suburban home, where the bodies of 28 young men have been found.

The meeting will be Thursday at the house, where the 28th body was found Friday. Three bodies found in a river also have been linked to Gacy. Only the outside walls and roof of the house still stand, but investigators want to dig around the footings. Authorities also want to dig to a depth of 6 feet throughout the property to ensure that no evidence or remains are missed.

Employ The Older Worker Week Set

Citing a proclamation issued by President Carter, the manager of the local Employment Security Commission, James Hannan, has announced the office's participation in National Employ The Older Worker Week which began March 11 and continues through March 17.

"Age, as much as race, sex, national origin or physical handicap is a significant source of employment discrimination today," Hannan said. "The National Employ The Older Worker Week is a good time for all of us to remember that capability, not chronological age, is the true measure of a worker's worth."

Hannan noted that the Federal Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 prohibits any form of job or hiring bias by an employer on account of age. This applies particularly to persons between the ages of 40 and 70.

In fiscal year 1978, the Greenville Job Service Office placed 193 older workers in jobs, which Hannan says is about eight percent of the office's total placements.

Each Employment Security Commission office, Hannan notes, has a trained Older Worker Specialist to help those 40 or older in seeking a job. The specialist in the Greenville office is David M. Settle.

Carolina, Duke Ousted In First Round

Duke's John Harrell sits on the bench in anguish

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Pennsylvania's first trip to the NCAA East Regional under Coach Bob Weinbauer was cut short by the Atlantic Coast Conference last year, but the ACC failed to arrest the Quakers' quest for the national championship Sunday as they upset third-ranked North Carolina 72-71.

"We absolutely fear no one," said Weinbauer after unranked Pennsylvania, the Ivy League champion, shocked the Tar Heels. "Other people have to prepare for us and try to stop what we do best."

The Quakers do best when forward Tony Price is hot, and the 6-7 senior was sizzling as he drilled in a game-high 25 points. Pennsylvania, now 23-5, advances to the East Regional semifinals at Greensboro next weekend opposite Syracuse, 26-3.

In the second game of the doubleheader, sixth-ranked Duke, the Quakers' stumbling block in the NCAA Tournament last year, was stumbled itself 80-78 by St. John's. The Redmen, now 20-10, are paired with Rutgers, 22-8, at Greensboro.

North Carolina closed its season at 23-6, while the Blue Devils finished at 22-8.

Price said Penn's victory should change the weak-sister stigma of Ivy League basketball.

"I just wanted to play a team of that caliber and show that we could stay with them," he said. "I think the Ivy League — the so-called weak league — deserves some respect and we got it."

The Quakers' tight zone defense was effective as North Carolina, led by Al Wood's 20 points, was forced to pick up most of its points from the perimeter.

"Don't mistake the zone as the key," Weinbauer said. "It was those five players on the floor. They are the ones who cut off the passing lanes. They are the ones who got the big rebounds."

North Carolina Coach Dean Smith said despite Penn's control of the game from the midway point of the second half, "I felt we could win. We still had a chance at the end, except they sank their foul shots."

Smith said guard Dudley Bradley, the Tar Heels' defensive ace, "got a couple of steals, but he just couldn't get a handle on them."

St. John's, which rallied to defeat Duke 69-66 earlier this season in a holiday tournament at Madison Square Garden, eliminated the Blue Devils from the playoffs as guard Reggie Carter scored on a six-foot baseline jump shot with four seconds remaining.

"It was a set play but it wasn't for that shot," said the 6-3 Carter, who led the Redmen with 21 points. "I was supposed to go to the middle but I just stayed on the baseline."

Duke, paced by Gene Banks' 24 points, fell behind 59-58 with 9:02 left to play. The Blue Devils, last year's national runner-up after losing to Kentucky in the finals, knotted the score, 78-78, on a 25-foot jumper by reserve forward Jim Suddath with 31 seconds left.

The Redmen used the clock to their advantage for Carter's game-winning shot. Duke center Mike Gminski, who played despite a stomach virus, tried a half-court shot that rimmed the basket at the buzzer.

Redmen Coach Lou Carnesecca said St. John's was not intimidated by Duke's national ranking.

"When you play basketball, you can't be afraid of even your mother," Carnesecca quipped.

The Redmen's upset of Duke, then ranked No. 1, in the holiday tournament was excused by many as the aftereffect of dropping a game the previous night to Ohio State — the Blue Devils' first loss in the young season.

"We played them earlier and they were talking consolation and that they weren't up for it," said St. John's forward Rudy Wright. "I'm glad we got another chance."

Center Wayne McKoy, who scored 18 points for St. John's despite early foul trouble, said Gminski gave him several opportunities for jump shots.

"If he was going to give them to me, I was going to take them," Wright said, adding that he felt Duke was baffled by the Redmen's changing defenses. "They weren't ready for it. The half-court zone really threw them."

Duke Coach Bill Foster said the two clubs appeared to be equally matched, but that the game simply hinged on Carter's last shot.

"Carter just basically shot over us," Foster said. "It was a heckuva play and excellent timing."

Pirates Take Shutout To Snap Losing String

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina University's Pirates rode the strong right arm of Mickey Britt, who hurled shutout ball, to a 4-0 victory over the University of Connecticut yesterday.

The win snapped a four-game losing streak that had plagued the Pirates since they won their opening game against the University of South Carolina. The Bucs are 2-4 on the year now.

Connecticut could do little with Britt, although they did manage a couple of early threats. With two down in the first inning, Al Garray and Mark McMahon managed back-to-back singles before a fly-out ended the inning. Then, in the third, Gary Woodfield got a double to center with two away that put the last Huskie into scoring position.

And even that was questionable success for UConn because of a call that came just before the hit. Woodfield batted the ball down the first base line two pitches earlier, and base umpire Joe Kolenda ruled it fair. Plate umpire Ed Nelson, however, called it foul. First baseman Max Raynor had already played the ball and had an easy out, but Nelson's call prevailed, and Woodfield got his second chance.

For the rest of the game, Britt, who evened his record at 1-1 for the year and claimed his 20th career win overall against just five losses, was in complete control. He walked a batter in the fourth and then retired the next 16 in a row, facing just four batters over the minimum 27.

He struck out nine along the way. That was all with a strong wind coming over his shoulder. "It didn't hurt me at all," he said. "In fact, it might have helped me a little. Everything felt good and was going good."

Coach Monte Little agreed. "Mickey pitched a masterful game. He hit the spots and did a fine job. The defense only had to make a couple of tough plays because of the job Mickey did."

Little was also pleased with the revived Pirate hitting, although it was the eighth inning before the Bucs finally got it all together and put the game away. Until then, they had ridden a one-run single by Raymie Styons along before getting three more in the bottom of the eighth.

"Having Styons back gave us a big lift," Little said. "He makes a big difference; he carries the team. But he's playing in a lot of pain. I know." Styons suffered a slight shoulder separation in the first South Carolina game, and made his first appearance since then in the game. "We still need to hit the ball better, but I think the win will perk us up and get us back off our heels and onto our toes. We ran the bases well today (three stolen bases), and a game like this has got to help us."

The Pirates had their first threat in the second, putting two on via a walk and a double by Tim Hardison, but failed to cash in.

Sooner or later, you'll own Generals

When Duke and North Carolina were paired in the same regional, many Atlantic Coast Conference fans hit the ceiling. They didn't want their teams to meet again until the NCAA finals at Indiana and Michigan a couple of years ago.

This morning, it is all academic. Duke won't be meeting North Carolina. Neither of them will be meeting anyone. It's all over for the ACC in 1979.

The odds of both Duke and Carolina getting beaten in the first games would probably drive a mathematician crazy trying to figure. It's unbelievable.

North Carolina shot poorly in the second half and Penn shot well, reversing the first half trend. But even with Penn's poor shooting in the first half, they stayed with the Heels.

All year long, the Tar Heels have shot well and won that way. Sunday afternoon, they were never even able to get into a position to go to the four-corner offense.

Duke, meanwhile, can at least take some solace in that fact that two of their starting team were sidelined. Having both Bob Bender and Kenny Denard on the bench was a little too much for them to overcome. They should have had the edge mentally since they lost to St. John's earlier in the year.

In both games, the Redmen came back from good-sized deficits to win.

We'll be curious to see how many fans show up Friday and Sunday for the Eastern semifinals and finals in Greensboro with the ACC gone.

Who would have believed it?

New Coach This Week?

The odds, however, might favor the announcement of a new head basketball coach at East Carolina University sometime this week, most likely late in the week.

It is known that some interviews were conducted over the weekend, when the least likely publicity would surround it.

East Carolina has been playing this one very close to the vest, and very few names of candidates have leaked out. Besides assistant coach Terry Kunze, seen as one of the top candidates, we have heard little about the prospects. It is believed that one of the state's top high school coaches may be in the running, along with an assistant or two from the ACC, and possibly even a head coach or two from other schools.

The Greenville Sports Club, at its last meeting, expressed the hope that it could have the next coach for its next speaker on March 20. We will be very surprised if the announcement hasn't been made by then.

We look for it no later than next Monday.

Season Ends For Eight Ranked Teams

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

North Carolina has learned the power of the Penn. On the Sunday that shocked the South, the unranked Quakers upended the third-ranked Tar Heels 72-71 before an unbelievably crowd of 12,400 at Reynolds Coliseum in Raleigh, N.C. Hours later, the stunned through hushed as Reggie Carter's six-foot jump shot with four seconds left helped St. John's, N.Y., sink sixth-ranked Duke 80-78.

Those two strong swings toppled two mighty trees from the Atlantic Coast Conference, capping a weekend that sent eight ranked teams to the sidelines of the NCAA basketball tournament.

Hawks Defeat Sonics In OT

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

"We played like a yoyo," said Atlanta Hawks Coach Hubie Brown, "up and down all night."

But when the buzzer sounded ending the five-minute overtime period Sunday night, the Hawks were up — 113-111 over the Seattle SuperSonics for their ninth consecutive National Basketball Association victory.

The winning basket was a layup by Dan Roundfield, which came with just one second left in overtime.

In other NBA games Sunday, Boston defeated Los Angeles 108-106, New Jersey nipped Philadelphia 104-103, Washington beat Denver 119-98, Chicago defeated Golden State 109-107, Indiana edged Phoenix 112-111, Detroit beat Milwaukee 125-115 and Portland topped Kansas City 115-100.

Celtics 108, Lakers 106
The Celtics, who were clobbered by Detroit 160-117 Friday, heard a pre-game talk from Red Auerbach, the team's president and general manager, and then went out and beat the Lakers behind player-coach Dave Cowens' 27 points and rookie Jeff Judkins' basket and four free throws in the final 1:22.

Nets 104, 76ers 103
Sixers Coach Billy Cunningham was at a loss for words after his team blew a nine-point lead in the last 3:52 and gave up two baskets in the final nine seconds to lose for the 12th time in its last 15 games.

"We had the game won and then we lost it," said Cunningham, his head bowed. "I really don't know what to say."

Bullets 119, Nuggets 98
Kevin Grevey matched his season high with 28 points for Washington, which dealt Denver its worst home loss ever at McNichols Arena. Nuggets star David Thompson did not play because of a strep throat.

Blazers 115, Kings 100
Forwards Mychal Thompson and Maurice Lucas scored 25 points each as the Blazers won their fourth game in the last five starts and moved within one game of San Diego in their race for the last Western Conference playoff berth. Thompson also had 16 rebounds as the Blazers enjoyed a 51-36 edge off the boards.

Pacers 112, Suns 111
Ex-Phoenix guard Ricky Sobers scored 26 points for Indiana, which survived when a steal and layup by Garfield Heard of Phoenix at the buzzer rolled off the rim.

Bulls 109, Warriors 107
Artis Gilmore made two free throws and Mickey Johnson one in the final 12 seconds to secure Chicago's victory. Gilmore scored 28 points and grabbed 13 rebounds, bouncing back from a seven-point, seven-rebound game Friday night.

Pistons 125, Bucks 115
Kevin Porter scored 18 of his 28 points in the final period as the Pistons rallied from an early 18-point deficit to beat the Bucks. Porter also had 19 assists, the most ever by a Milwaukee opponent.

"We absolutely fear no one," said Penn Coach Bob Weinhauer, after his Quakers practiced unfriendly persuasion on the Tar Heels. "Other people have to prepare for us and try to stop what we do best."

What they did Sunday was take the lead 55-50 with nine minutes left, survive North Carolina's comeback within a point with 1:26 remaining, and put the game away as James Salters scored four of the Ivy League champions' next six points.

"I think the Ivy League — the so-called weak league — deserves some respect ... and we got it," said the Quakers' Tony Price, who made 12 of his 18 field goal attempts, scored 25 points, collected nine rebounds and had six assists. "I just wanted to play a team of that caliber and show that we could stay with them."

They did that, and more. So did St. John's, which won a nail biter from Duke on Carter's clutch shot.

"I wanted to redeem myself," said Carter, who missed a 1-and-1 free-throw situation with 49 seconds left but still gave the Redmen their second tournament triumph over the Blue Devils this season. St. John's had beaten Duke 69-66 in a consolation game matchup at the ECAC Holiday Festival at Madison Square Garden.

"They were talking consolation and that they weren't up for it," said Rudy Wright of St. John's. "I'm glad we got another chance."

They got that chance against a Duke squad that was missing starters Kenny Dennard and Bob Bender and had Mike Gminski at less-than-full strength with a stomach virus.

Gminski gave the Redmen their final scare when his 45-foot heave at the buzzer bounced off the rim to sum up the day's frustrations for the ACC powers. North Carolina finished 23-6 and Duke ended up 22-8, while Penn improved to 23-5 and St. John's to 20-10.

Meanwhile, in other games Sunday, top-ranked Indiana State breezed past Virginia Tech 86-69; second-ranked UCLA trimmed tenacious Pepperdine 76-71; fourth-ranked Michigan State hammered Lamar 95-64, and No. 5 Notre Dame dropped 20th-ranked Tennessee 73-67.

Also, seventh-ranked Arkansas beat Weber State 74-63 and No. 8 DePaul defeated Southern Cal, 89-78.

Thus the tournament moves into regional semifinals, which will present the following matchups:

EAST, at Greensboro, N.C., on Friday — St. John's against Rutgers 22-8 and Penn against No. 10 Syracuse, 26-3.

MIDEAST, at Indianapolis, Friday — Michigan State, 22-6, against ninth-ranked Louisiana State, 23-5 and Notre Dame, 23-5, against Toledo, 22-7.

WEST, at Provo, Utah, on Thursday — DePaul, 23-5, against No. 12 Marquette, 22-6, and UCLA, 24-4 against No. 19 San Francisco, 22-6.

Yarborough Wins 'Clean' Richmond

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Cale Yarborough has recorded his 60th victory on the Grand National stock car racing circuit in a remarkably clean race

MIDWEST, at Cincinnati, on Thursday — Arkansas, 24-4, against No. 18 Louisville, 24-7, and Indiana State, 30-0, against Oklahoma, 21-9.

Indiana State star Larry Bird easily overcame his fractured left thumb and the top-ranked Sycamores easily handed Virginia Tech. Bird scored 22 points and collected 13 rebounds and Indiana State went on a 20-0 scoring spree midway through the first half.

Carl Nicks added 22 for the unbeaten Sycamores. "They've won 30 in a row," said Virginia Tech Coach Charles Moir. "They're for real."

Virginia Tech, 22-9, which blasted Jacksonville 70-53 Friday night to earn its meeting with the Sycamores, got 18 points from Les Henson.

UCLA, playing on its Pauley Pavilion home court, used a 206 spurt in the early stages of the second half to hold off Pepperdine. The Waves, 22-10, pulled within three points with nine seconds remaining before the Bruins' Brad Holland sank two free throws for insurance.

"Pepperdine deserves a tremendous amount of credit," said UCLA Coach Gary Cunningham. "They are an outstanding team but do not get the publicity we do."

The Waves, whose campus is just 15 miles from UCLA, got 27 points from guard Ricardo Brown.

Michigan State, with Greg Kelsner scoring 31 points and four others in double figures, toyed with Lamar.

"If I'm gonna get beat," said Lamar Coach Billy Tubbs, "I would want to get beaten by a team like Michigan State."

The Spartans were only too happy to oblige. They built a 48-27 halftime lead and waltzed from there.

Notre Dame's Kelly Tripucka scored 21 points to carry the Irish past the Volunteers. Notre Dame unlocked a 32-32 half-time tie with a 14-4 scoring spree and the Southeastern Conference champs were never closer than five after that — to the chagrin of Coach Don DeVoe.

"This is the poorest game of the year for us in terms of concentration," said DeVoe.

Arkansas concentrated on getting the ball to All-American Sidney Moncrief, who scored 19 points against Weber State and became the first Razorback player to pass the 2,000 mark in career points.

"I'm not out to score points," he said after raising his total to 2,009. "I'm just out to win a national championship and I'll do whatever I have to do."

DePaul's Blue Demons broke away with a 15-point burst in the final three minutes to top Southern Cal. Freshman Mark Aguirre scored 25 points, 16 of them in the first half, and Curtis Watkins scored 27 points — 16 of them in the second half for DePaul.

"Aguirre is going to make me a good coach," said Ray Meyer, the Blue Demons' coach.

Nelson Hangs On

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (AP) — The key to Larry Nelson's front-running, 3-shot victory in the Jackie Gleason Inverrary Golf Classic may have centered around a tactical decision made on the 11th hole of the final round.

"I had a perfect lie in the rough and 230 (yards) to the pin," Nelson said Sunday of the par-5 hole. "I could have reached it. I also could have hit it in the water on the right. So I took out a 6-iron, hit it up short, chipped up and made an easy 5."

"Two years ago I'd have gone for the green, hit it in the water and lost by 2."

But Nelson, who said he played "the smartest four and occasional bumps and scrapes, there were only two caution flags as Yarborough, starting from the ninth position, overtook pole-sitter Bobby Allison on the 225th lap and pulled away to win the Richmond 400 Sunday.

Only Dale Earnhardt's spin into the rail on the first lap — when the track was still slick from a morning rain — and Baxter Price's skid into the infield on the 215th lap marred the race.

For their part, Yarborough and the Allison never kissed bumpers.

Yarborough, in winning for the first time in four races this season, said his Oldsmobile sustained only one scratch, "and Darrell Waltrip put it in with just three laps to go. I think everybody drove cautiously."

Bobby Allison finished second, Darrell Waltrip was third in a Chevrolet followed by outside pole-winner Benny Parsons in a Chevrolet an Richard Petty, also in a Chevrolet.

The race had been billed as Round 3 between Yarborough and Donnie Allison following their much-publicized jousting

Biblical Artifacts: God To Some, Gold To A Few

By KENNETH R. CLARK
And
PETER MACKLER
United Press International
Religious artifacts are big business.

Religion offers faith, hope and the promise of eternal life for millions. But for a few, it means money.

It was big business in Jesus' day when he kicked the moneychangers out of the temple, charging they'd turned it into "a den of thieves."

It remained big business in subsequent centuries when hawkers of relics sold vials of Mary's milk, St. Joseph's beard, hairs from Noah's beard and enough splinters from the "true cross" to build a fleet of ships.

All that's needed are the right artifacts — from splinters of the "true cross" to Jesus T-shirts.

Today, the business is bigger and better than ever: —Crowds all over America are lining up to see the treasures of King Tut's tomb, including the religious artifacts found there.

—The Shroud of Turin, believed for centuries by some to be the cloth that wrapped the body of Christ, has spurred a spate of commercial ventures on the strength of scientific testing that might authenticate that claim.

—Archaeological digs — particularly the dig at Ebla in Syria, where 15,000 clay tablets bearing such ancient biblical names as Abraham, Sodom and Gomorrah have touched off a political furor — are suffering eclipse of what scholars call the real historical meaning.

—A claim by Egyptian monks that they have found the bones of John the Baptist and the prophet Elisha brings headlines all over the world and a steady stream of curiosity seekers to the "gravesite" at a remote monastery in Egypt's western desert.

—"The Word," Irving Wallace's novel about the intrigue over the reported find of a new Gospel, hits the best-seller lists and several years later draws an audience of some 60 million people as a television mini-series.

—Thousands of people each year flock to shrines like Lourdes in France or Guadalupe in Mexico. There is even a steady traffic to Lake Arthur, N.M., to see the "Sacred Tortilla," the mournful image of Jesus Christ burned into the dinner a woman was cooking for her husband.

—Amateur archaeologists, spade in one hand and the Bible in the other, still search for ancient artifacts such as Noah's Ark, and items supposedly dating from biblical times do a brisk business in shops throughout the Near East.

Why all the fuss? "I think people have a very strong gut interest in their own history and sources," says Madeline Noveck, associate curator in charge of Middle Eastern Art and Archaeology for the Brooklyn Museum in New York City.

"The thing that I'm seeing happen in the world is a renewing of the Holy Spirit in the charismatic movement, particularly in the historic churches," said evangelist Oral Roberts.

"It's a question of need," said Jerome Goldblatt, a New York holography and communications expert converted from agnosticism to Christianity through his study of the shroud. "We all need God — whether we know it or not. And whether we know it or not, we're all searching for him."

The relics business
Historically, that need has taken some bizarre side trips, and aside from the emotional impact of what is handed down as living proof of scripture, the remnants of the religious past have exerted a tremendous gravitational pull on the politics of the day.

Christianity early on abandoned the Hebrews' loathing of contact with corpses and fear of idolatry and became heavily immersed in relics — the material remains of a saint or objects that came in contact with his body.

By the fifth century, it was standard practice to break into the tombs of Christian saints and martyrs to cut off parts of their bodies for distribution to the faithful.

The search for relics was so intense that at least one potential saint was known to have fled for his life in the fear his devoted followers would not be able to wait until his death before dismembering him for veneration.

Wars were fought and cities ransacked for relics. Troops were rallied with them; diseases treated with them. The early popes gave whole bodies of martyrs to important visitors as a diplomatic gesture and relics were used to cement the faith of new followers.

One group of monks fleeing the Norman invasion in the ninth century carried with them the body of St. Philibert of Beaulieu and simply hacked off a piece to place in each monastery they founded along the way.

Relics also were hot items on the market. So hot, in fact, that in the ninth century a corporation was formed in Rome to discover, sell and ship them to all parts of Europe.

And authenticity had little meaning despite church attempts to regulate abuses. Peddlers did a brisk trade foisting everything from Jesus' tears to Job's dung heap on a gullible public.

An item didn't even have to be mentioned specifically in the Bible to be considered biblical and put on the trading block.

In the 1840s, for example, a dig at the 27-centuries-old palace of the Assyrian kings in the Near East turned up rooms full of giant stone reliefs depicting bird-headed and winged human figures with horned crowns.

The pieces, weighing several tons each, were shipped off to missionary and religious schools around the world as proof of ancient heathenism and an incentive to Christian youth to aspire to greater religious zeal.

Some might be inclined to write off such cases to the superstition and ignorance of an earlier time. But the 20th century has shown itself to be no less susceptible to the influence of scriptural hardware.

"There is no question that it is modern religious interest and modern politics that makes these discoveries of the ancient world spectacular to people today," said the Brooklyn Museum's Mrs. Noveck.

Bible fever
Scholars generally agree the Bible has been a prime force behind most of the archaeological work in the Middle East. In fact it's much harder to raise money for a dig if it's not biblically oriented.

"If the excavation is directly connected with the Bible, people assume it's a valuable project," said Mrs. Noveck. "Other projects which are not so directly related take a bit more educating to make their value apparent to the general public."

Syrian authorities found themselves in the middle of an epidemic of Bible fever when researchers poring over the Ebla tablets happened upon some names remarkably similar to the Old Testament heavyweights.

Not only does Abraham appear on the tablets, but Micah, Israel, Ishmael and David as well. Not only Sodom and Gomorrah, whose existence had been disputed, but the cities of Admah, Zeboim and Zoar — in the same order as listed in Genesis.

Scholars exulted when the discovery was announced in 1976 — the 4,500-year-old lost city of Ebla was a worthy competitor to the Dead Sea Scrolls and King Tut's tomb as the find of the century.

But the public at large yawned and the dig remained largely grist for the archaeological journals — until those names came to light.

Suddenly, the dig was out of the journals and onto the front page.

"Tablets shed new light on the Bible," blared one headline. "Hebrew Patriarch Link Discovered," said another. Even the London Observer, not easily given to sensationalism, couldn't restrain itself on this one. It called Ebla "The Abraham Connection."

Arabs upset by the suggestion the ancient Jews came from Syria screamed "Zionist plot" and some scholars countered with shrill cries of "coverup." As two writers said later in a book about the find, "the rest is hysteria."

'Abraham connection'

The Ebla find has led to speculation — hotly debated — that the ancient Israelites may have had their roots in Syria, a notion not calculated to win friends among Arabs given the current state of Middle East politics.

David Noel Freedman, professor of biblical studies at Michigan University and editor of the respected journal "Biblical Archaeologist," was one of the first to advance the possible "Abraham connection." He remembers the Syrian reaction.

"They never said anything to me, but I heard from other sources that they thought it was part of a Zionist plot and that I was an Israeli agent," said Freedman, born Jewish but now a Presbyterian.

"It seems to me that something like this should have no political implications. But I guess that's a pipe dream."

Other scholars say all the furor has obscured the real value of the baked clay tablets unearthed by University of Rome Prof. Paolo Matthiae — the wealth of information they provide on the trade, politics, and even the beers of a hitherto unknown civilization that rivaled Egypt and Mesopotamia.

"The important things at Ebla are how did urbanization begin and how did the economy function and many other fascinating things," said Dr. Helga Seeden, professor of archeology at American University in Beirut, Lebanon.

"Now we have people looking for something that's impossible to prove and is the least interesting thing about it. I hate to see archeology used in this fashion."

Another potentially thorny situation is brewing in the Sinai desert, where monks at St. Catherine's monastery reportedly stumbled across a hidden room that contained thousands of priceless ancient manuscripts.

But here again, politics intrudes.

For the monastery happens to house Greek monks living at the foot of Mount Sinai in Egyptian territory now occupied by Israeli troops. Who eventually will get charge of the documents is anybody's guess. Researchers are having a tough enough time just finding out who has the manuscripts now, and where.

"There's bound to be a bonanza if squabbling authorities will let the scholars examine it," said Freedman. "All my efforts to get information so far have been rebuffed."

Shroud of Turin

If scholars find it difficult to sift nuggets of knowledge from the dross of politics, churchmen, interested in spiritual nuggets for the mass of mankind are likely to find the mining equally difficult in the sands of commercialism.

Father Peter M. Rinaldi,

Now preliminary tests, indicating to some scientists that the image may have been formed by an intense burst of coherent light — a billionth-of-a-second thermonuclear flash — have moved that veneration tantalizingly near the realm of empirical proof of the resurrection.

The shroud has been displayed on very rare occasions this century, the last time last year. But the surge of scientific interest in the cloth put it squarely in the public light — somewhat to Rinaldi's distress.

When scientists started proclaiming the shroud a possible "snapshot" of the resurrection, Richter rumblings rocked scientific and religious communities. Suddenly, it was "Jesus Christ, Superstar" all over again. Christ erupted from the Bible to the pages of Rolling Stone and People magazines and was being promoted for that most reverent of all pop worship rites — his picture on a T-shirt.

When permission for scientific testing finally was given, the Guild set out to raise $500,000, both to pay expenses for the scientific team and to produce a documentary film — "Silent Witness" — to popularize it.

"The drive fell far short the mark," Rinaldi said. "We're desperate for money. The foundations won't touch it. The subject is too controversial. And the church has no wish to become involved directly ... preferring to remain impartial on the question of the relic's authenticity."

As a result, the scientists have been forced to work, without remuneration, on their own time and the much-vaunted movie, which played to enthusiastic crowds at its London premiere, has fundered for want of distribution money.

But the commercial aspects of funding and distribution aren't the only worries for Rinaldi and the Guild. Others are following the spoor of money, with little regard for spiritual or scientific aspects of the shroud — or for the fact that the Guild holds copyright on pictures taken of it.

"We've taken some people to court for some terrible things that have been run in the papers," he said. "I was shocked — ads offering pictures of the image on the shroud, offering a money back guarantee of a miracle if you pray in front of these pictures."

"And — you'd be astounded — we have an application from a concession in England that wants to use the picture on T-shirts! There is no end of what might be."

Even a scientific exposition staged late last year held the ring of money — for everyone but the scientists. "The exposition brought 3½ million people into town," Rinaldi said. "I understand the restaurants did a fine business."

God and gold
God and gold, of course, always may be found in competition, and Turin is not their only marketplace.

In France, the shrine of Lourdes — where St. Bernadette is said to have seen the Virgin Mary and where the sick have come for healing ever since — drew 3,806,000 visitors in 1976, 4,056,000 in 1977 and more than 4 million are expected to have registered in 1978 when the count is in.

And the multitudes brought money. The once obscure village now thrives on cottage industries catering to the demand for bottles of holy water from baths near the grotto of St. Bernadette, statuettes of the saint herself, candles, headscarves and rosaries.

In Mexico, a similar shrine draws pilgrims by the hundreds of thousands every year to Guadalupe where a boy named Juan Diego in 1531 is said to have seen a dark-skinned Virgin Mary whose image subsequently appeared on a scarf or "shroud."

The government and some church authorities privately frown on the cult of the shroud of Guadalupe, but so deep is its veneration by the people that no effort is made to discourage it lest the reaction be violent. During his recent visit to Mexico, Pope John Paul II prayed before the Virgin, lending the shrine uncontested pontifical credentials.

As at Lourdes, a lively business flourishes in shops above and below ground where huge gold and silver medals bearing the image of the virgin are the hottest items. One tiny shop sports a papier mache statue of Juan Diego, standing against a painted background of the virgin hovering over Tepeyac hill for the benefit of the faithful who wish to have their pictures taken beside him.

The Middle East, of course, is a bonanza for the well-heeled biblical shopper and merchants aren't above pumping the value of their wares with a little scriptural name dropping.

"In shops in Jerusalem and any other part of the Near East, if you can tie something to, say, the time of Solomon, well then a pot, a grotty little pot that is not extraordinarily well made or interesting, takes on value," said Mrs. Noveck.

Tourists are not the only targets of Bible-thumping peddlers. Even the most reputable art houses are pitched.

"I had a fellow who wrote to me two or three times 15 years ago. He said he had the jar that Jesus used at Canaan when he turned water into wine," recalled Vaughn Crawford, curator in charge of ancient Near Eastern art for New York City's Metropolitan Museum of Art.

"This sort of thing happens very often." Michigan University's Freedman said that just one Ebla tablet — the size of the palm of the hand — was sold for $1,500. "And there are 15,000 of them!" he exclaimed.

Even the sale of religious articles — rosaries, crucifixes, nativity scenes, dashboard figurines — is going strong. Frank Loffredo, of Loffredo Bros. importers and manufacturers in New York, estimated the industry does $300 million to $400 million a year in trade and business is getting better after a slump four or five years ago.

The people at the Devon Trading Co., a wholesaler of Catholic novelties in North Bergen, N.J., run by two Jews, also were upbeat.

"All of a sudden there is a demand for rosaries you wouldn't believe," piped one secretary.

'The numinous effect'
For all the hype and huckstering, however, something else hovers over such things as the waters of Lourdes and the Shroud of Turin — something no silver bullet.

GOREN BRIDGE

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠954 ♥A84 ♦K963 ♣AJ7

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 2 ♦ Pass
2 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Don't let your 12 high-card points and fine heart support go to your head. You have a perfectly balanced hand, and you should deduct one point for that flaw. Also, your hand is almost devoid of intermediate cards. Three hearts is quite adequate—if partner can't bid on, you probably haven't missed a game.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ1074 ♥A ♦962 ♣AQ104

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♣ Pass 1 NT Pass
2 ♠ Pass 2 ♥ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—What are your options? Partner has virtually denied three-card spade support by failing to take a preference to two spades. And he didn't have the values for a two-over-one response. In view of the misfit, pass and hope you have enough to enable partner to make his contract.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q1072 ♥84 ♦9 ♣KJ10762

The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 NT Dble. Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Your side has the balance of power, so it is very tempting to pass and hope to collect a penalty. Indeed, we would endorse that action if we were sure partner would lead a black suit. More likely, however, he will lead a red suit, giving declarer the tempo and a probable trick. To avoid this fate, we suggest a jump to three clubs. That can't show a good hand, for we would have passed with strength. At the same time it suggests more power than a weak takeout of two clubs, and partner should convert to three no-trump with a club fit and stoppers in the other suits.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A1054 ♥Q1083 ♦7 ♣8752

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 2 ♥ Pass
2 NT Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—By inviting game, partner has shown a better than minimum opening bid—at least 16 points. In support of hearts your hand is worth 10 points, so you should accept. Bid four hearts.

Q.5—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠6 ♥AJ95 ♦862 ♣AK1053

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♣ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
1 NT Pass 3 ♣ Pass
3 ♥ Pass ?

make the no-trump game a secure contract. However, four hearts on a 4-3 fit (partner cannot have four-card support) might be no better. For the moment, all you can do is bid four clubs and allow partner to select the final contract.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠752 ♥KQJ8 ♦KQ74 ♣83

The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
3 ♣ Dble. Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—If partner has full values for his vulnerable takeout double at the three-level, your side could easily have a slam. Unfortunately, there is no safe way to investigate the possibilities. Settle for four hearts, and if it turns out that you did miss a slam, write it off as another victory for preemptive tactics.

Q.7—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A7 ♥A109865 ♦Q7 ♣AK3

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—With 17 points in high cards and a six-card suit, some jump rebid is needed to show your values. Your only reasonable choice is three hearts, despite the fact that you would prefer to have a better suit for this action.

Q.8—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ52 ♥AJ8 ♦763 ♣952

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♣ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
3 ♦ Pass 3 NT Pass
4 ♣ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—From his bidding, partner has shown a very powerful minor two-suiter and is making an effort to get to slam. With an ace and a king, you should be ready to cooperate, even though your holdings in his suits are far from robust. We suggest a cue-bid of four hearts to show the ace and a willingness to play slam if that's the control he needs.

Dramatizing Updike Stories Tonight

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — If you like troubled marriages, infidelity and suburban despair, you probably like many of John Updike's short stories; and if you like John Updike's short stories, you will probably like "Too Far To Go" tonight on NBC Theater.

"Too Far To Go" is the dramatization of Updike's Maples stories, featuring those characters, Richard and Joan Maple. The Maples are fond of going to cocktail parties, to psychiatrists' offices, and to bed with other people's spouses.

And they like to guess about each other's partner(s) in adultery. Sort of upper-middle-class domestic version of 20 Questions. How many times? Which motel did you go to? Did you wear special perfume?

The Maples are very attractive people — witty, educated and very, very up-to-date. But they are not great people, in spirit or deed, and their downfall doesn't seem tragic. Just depressing.

But the decline and fall of an American marriage does make for good soap-opera theater, and the acting and direction are superb.

Kenny Rogers Leads In Country Music Ballots

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kenny Rogers' name appears more than any other on ballots mailed today to determine who will take home the 1979 Country Music Awards.

The awards will be voted on by 2,000 members of the Academy of Country Music and presented during nationally televised ceremonies at the Hollywood Palladium on May 2.

Rogers was nominated for Top Male Vocalist and Entertainer of the Year, as well as in the Vocal Group of the Year section along with Dottie West.

His philosophy-of-life song, "The Gambler," has also been nominated for Song of the Year.

Although none of Dolly Parton's efforts was nominated in the song or record categories, she is a candidate for Entertainer of the Year and as Top Female Vocalist of the Year, along with Crystal Gale, Loretta Lynn, Barbara Mandrell and Anne Murray.

Miss Lynn is another entry in the Entertainer of the Year race, which includes Roy Clark and Willie Nelson.

Vying with Rogers for Top Male Vocalist honors are Larry Gatlin, Merle Haggard, Eddie Rabbitt and Don Williams.

Miss Murray's "You Needed Me," is a contender for Song of the Year against Rogers' "Gambler," Charley Pride's "Burgers and Fries," Haggard's "I'm Always On a Mountain When I Fall," and "Mamas Don't Let Your Babies Grow Up to Be Cowboys," by the writing team of Jennings-Nelson.

The Jennings-Nelson song is also in the running for Top

Single of the Year. Other nominees include: Nelson's "Georgia on My Mind," Miss Gayle's "Talking in Your Sleep," Williams' "Tulsa Time," and Miss Lynn's "Out of My Head and Back in My Bed."

The Album of the Year nominees are: Nelson's "Star Dust"; "Y'all Come Back Saloon," by the Oak Ridge Boys; Ronnie Milsap's "Almost Like a Song"; Rogers' and West's "Every Time Two Fools Collide," and Miss Murray's "Let's Keep It That Way."

In addition to the Oak Ridge Boys and the Rogers and West team, the nominees for Vocal Group of the Year are Dave and Sugar, The Statler Brothers, and Miss Lynn's team-up with Conway Twitty.

In contention for honors in Top New Male Vocalist category are John Conlee, Kenny O'Dell, Ronnie McDowell, Con Hunley and Lee Dresser.

Nominees for Top New Female Vocalist are Susie Allanson, Christy Lane, Zella Lehr, Bonnie Tyler and Charly McClain.

Nearly in broadcasting history have the critics been as unanimous in their praise of a new series.
"The Paper Chase" is a sensitive look at the lives of a group of first-year law students—their dreams, triumphs and disappointments. And one particular student, James Hart, whose unorthodox and places him in conflict with a brilliant, but tyrannical professor with the power to make him or break him.
The distinguished actor John Houseman plays Professor Charles Kingsfield, re-creating the role which won him an Academy Award. James Stephens co-stars as young James Hart.
The reviewers, who see all the new shows, have singled out "The Paper Chase" as the season's finest. See for yourself right here tonight.

however cynically aimed, is able to bring down.

Some call it "the numinous effect" — an indefinable but undeniable force within an inanimate object that often has a profound effect upon those who come in contact with it.

Jerome Goldblatt, the New York communications expert, was an agnostic Jew when he first encountered the Shroud. Now he's an ordained Christian minister with a book in the works: "Snapshot of the Resurrection."

Ken Stevenson, of New Orleans, one of the scientists on the shroud investigating team, said Goldblatt was not alone in his reaction to the cloth.

"One Jewish photographer told me he even gets periodic chills as the project continues," Stevenson said. "I have to believe someone is working on him."

The Sacred Tortilla of New Mexico may be so much corn to non-believers but to Maria Rubio, who discovered the Christ image in her cooking, it meant a renewal of faith and the end of her husband's drinking problem.

Father Albert Gallegos, of the archdiocese of Santa Fe, said local clergymen were inclined to adopt a laissez faire attitude toward veneration of the tortilla.

"We have to let it go on because there are good things coming out of it," he said.

For all the hype and holy hardware of a biblical wonderland filled with T-shirts and tortillas, something indefinable and unassailable remains in the most mundane act of faith.

Perhaps the old hymn says it all after all:

"God moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform."

Kenneth R. Clark, 46, joined UPI 12 years ago in Edinburg, Texas, following several years with newspapers and radio stations in Colorado, Wyoming and Montana.

Clark served as bureau manager at Santa Fe, N.M., regional executive for Colorado and Wyoming and on the national broadcast desk in Chicago before transferring to the New York general news desk three years ago where he is an editor and author of the daily "Peopletalk" column. A native of Fort Collins, Colo., he is a graduate of the University of Colorado.

Peter Mackler, 29, was a newsroom intern at UPI while attending Brooklyn College. He served in UPI's White Plains, N.Y. bureau after graduating in 1974 and a year later became a staffer on the New York city desk. He moved to UPI's general desk in 1977 where he is an editor.

Lack Room For Young In Egypt

By W. G. Kirolos
CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — Last July a four-story house collapsed in the working-class district of El-Sharabiya, killing about 30 persons. Its residents, warned in advance, refused to leave because they had nowhere else to go.

A month later police forced out the tenants of another house two hours before it collapsed.

Some of the newly homeless move in with relatives. Others live in tents or camp in graveyards, living beside the dead.

Egypt's 40 million people are crammed into the narrow Nile Valley, 5.5 percent of the country's total area. The rest is a vast, barren desert.

The population is exploding with a baby born every 20.2 seconds.

Because of an old government policy that sought to keep rents low, Egyptian landlords traditionally collect "key money" from new tenants. That initial charge, often between $2,500 for a small apartment and $37,500 for a spacious one, can reach $250,000 if a Nile-view is included.

Key money is banned by law but extracted anyway by landlords who argue that government-controlled rents — averaging between $12 and $100 a month — allow too low a return on their investment.

Key money often is collected from prospective tenants even before a building's foundation is laid. Or the non-existent apartment may be rented to more than one person.

A judge may order a refund, but for the couple that waited two years for a non-existent apartment, getting their money back is no consolation.

Newspaper articles and letters complain the housing crisis makes it difficult for the young to wed and could lead them to "immorality." To most of Egypt's Moslems, marriage is an essential part of religion.

One government employee in his early 30s with a monthly salary of $100 complained that, even if he saved half his salary, it would take 20 years to save the $12,500 needed for a "conjugal nest."

On Cairo's co-op market an average apartment sells for $50,000. In a luxury building overlooking the Nile the price is 10 times that.

Belatedly, the government has begun to grapple with the housing problem.

President Anwar Sadat, urging Egyptians to move out of the Nile Valley, has ordered construction of several new desert towns.

The first is the "10th of Ramadan City," northeast of Cairo along the highway to Ismailia on the Suez Canal. The first houses, mostly prefabricated, will be completed next year.

Other cities will follow, notably "Sadat City," about 30 miles northwest of Cairo, along the desert highway to Alexandria.

The government has begun several housing projects in Cairo itself but the apartments are for sale, not rent, and the price — usually $15,000 to $28,000 with half required as a down payment — is beyond the reach of most young workers.

The government estimates 4 million apartments are needed over the next 20 years.

Farm Scene

By LEROY JAMES
County Extension Chairman

Changes made in the tax law by the Revenue Act of 1978 provide substantial encouragement to farmers to increase their capital investment. The new act extends the investment credit to the construction of agricultural facilities and the rehabilitation of buildings used in business or productive activities. The act also resolves the conflict concerning the application of the investment tax credit to agricultural and horticultural structures.

Effective for taxable years ending after August 15, 1971, the Revenue Act of 1978 makes the investment tax credit available for new construction of single purpose livestock and horticultural structures and enclosures. In order to qualify, the livestock structure must be specifically designed, constructed and used for the housing, raising and feeding of a particular type of livestock and their produce.

The structure must also contain the equipment necessary for provision of water and feed and, if necessary, temperature control. The credit is specifically for such buildings as swine confinement buildings, milking parlors, poultry houses and other facilities used to produce milk, feeder cattle, pigs, sheep, broiler chickens or eggs, or to breed hogs, cattle, sheep or chickens.

Another revenue act provision, making the credit available for expenditures incurred in the rehabilitation of a building, can also benefit farmers. These amendments are effective for taxable years ending after Oct. 31, 1978. In order to qualify, the building must be used for business or productive activities and must have been in use for at least 20 years.

The building may not be enlarged in the rehabilitation process, and not more than 25 percent of the existing external walls may be replaced. Any improvements must have a useful life of at least five years. The costs for renovating old barns or general storage buildings, as well as livestock and horticultural facilities, are eligible for the credit.

Seven Dead In Traffic

By The Associated Press
Traffic accidents in North Carolina during the weekend killed at least seven persons, including three killed when their pickup truck collided with a tractor-trailer in Mount Airy.

The Highway Patrol said the death toll for the year climbed to 242 compared with 248 killed in the period last year.

The Mount Airy accident occurred Saturday when the pickup truck ran beneath the side of the tractor trailer. Police said the top of the pickup was sheared off and one person in the vehicle was decapitated.

The dead were identified as Gordon Hodge, 22, and Timothy Don Creed, 15, both of Mount Airy, and 21-year-old Bobby Dale Cain of Ararat, Va.

In a death about 7:20 p.m. Sunday in Rutherford County, Otis Wade Street, 14, of Bostic died when a car in which he was riding ran off a rural paved road near Forest City and hit a fence, the patrol said.

The Highway Patrol reported that Nathaniel Parson, 18, of Boomer, died early Saturday in a head-on collision in Wilkes County. The patrol said Boomer's car was traveling on N.C. 18 when it crossed the center line and ran head-on into another vehicle.

Rodney John Wright, 18, of Raleigh, was killed Saturday night on a rural road north of Raleigh when the car in which he was riding ran off the side of the road and hit a bridge railing.

John Glenn Hughes, 38, of Rt. 2, Westfield, was killed Saturday when the car in which he was riding ran through an intersection 11 miles west of Danbury. The car hit an embankment and turned over.

Horticulture Crops To Expand

By BILL HUMPHRIES
NCSU Agricultural Information
RALEIGH — Production of fruits, vegetables and ornamentals will continue to expand in the Tar Heel state, say extension horticultural specialists at North Carolina State University.

Total farm sales of horticultural crops rose in value from $96.7 million in 1965 to $245.6 million in 1977, according to estimates by county agents with the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service.

Sales of vegetables rose from $56.7 million to $142.4 million; tree fruits, from $12.7 million to $37.8 million; small fruits, from $8.3 million to $10.3 million; and ornamental crops, from $19 million to $55.1 million.

In 1978, the Campbell Soup Company announced it would construct a vegetable processing plant in the southeastern part of North Carolina within two to five years. This, say NCSU specialists, will have a significant impact on vegetable production in the state.

In the past, Tar Heel farmers have produced vegetables largely for the fresh market. Much future expansion, however, is expected to be in processing crops. It is anticipated that other firms will follow Campbell Soups' lead and establish processing plants in the state.

Processing crops likely to increase, according to extension specialists, are asparagus, snap beans, lima beans, carrots, beets, Irish potatoes, sweet corn, English peas, Southern peas, greens, okra, peppers, tomatoes, squash and pumpkins.

North Carolina leads the nation in production of sweet potatoes, which are the state's most important horticultural crop. Value of sweet potato production was $41 million in 1977 and $46.6 million last year. Increased processing of yams is expected, with industrial uses of the crop to be studied, according to specialists.

Tar Heel farmers are also Number One in the nation in acreage planted to pickling-type cucumbers. Farm sales of cucumbers for processing exceeded $17.3 million in 1977. Fresh market cucumbers added another $9.4 million.

Acres of Irish potatoes, which brought in $18.9 million to farmers in 1977, has remained fairly constant over the past several years. Most of the crop is processed into chips. The potential for both fresh-market needs and for processing of other products needs to be evaluated, according to NCSU specialists.

The pepper crop, especially in the mountains, is another potential enterprise for processing. Yields of up to 20 tons per acre have been obtained.

Greenhouse vegetable production, which accounted for $3 million in farm sales in 1977, could expand five to ten fold in the next decade, say experts.

Expansion in greenhouse flower production has been significant and is expected to continue as growers become more efficient and diversified. Bedding plant production continues to expand as homeowners become more garden conscious. The primary emphasis will be on potted plants.

Significant expansion in woody ornamentals' production has occurred and will continue. North Carolina has an excellent potential for production of numerous native species for in-state and out-of-state markets.

Production of apples, the state's most important tree fruit, is likely to continue to increase because of the early marketing period. Apples for processing will increase.

Volume of peach production in the Sandhills has changed very little in recent years. With newer varieties and pest control methods, volume should increase not only in the Sandhills but in other areas of the state as well.

"We foresee increase for roadside markets and pick-your-own operations for peaches and many other horticultural crops," said the NCSU specialists.

PENS OF THE FUTURE — The research department of the Parker Pen Co. recently released these designs for pens of the future. The pen at top would be programmed to respond to the human voice. Characters on the rapidly rotating ball would enable the writer to produce finished, legible copy. The pen at bottom would be programmed to store a letter in its tiny, built-in computer. By plugging it into the transcriber unit, it would then type out the letter automatically. The company did not say when, or if, such pens would be produced. (AP Laser-photo)
