Carter Says Ingredients Of Egypt-Israel Peace 'Defined'

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer
CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Carter said today he is confident he has "defined all of the main ingredients of a peace treaty between Egypt and Israel."

Reporting "substantial" progress toward a treaty before leaving Israel, Carter then flew to Cairo and conferred for more than two hours with Egypt's President Anwar Sadat.

Emerging from that meeting, Carter said he gave a full report to Sadat on his meetings with Prime Minister Menachem Begin and other Israeli officials in Jerusalem.

"The United States made proposals for resolving a number of outstanding issues," Carter said. "President Sadat has now accepted these proposals."

The president also said Begin had agreed to present the U.S. proposals to the Israeli Cabinet for consideration quickly.

Carter said he had informed Begin by telephone from Cairo of Sadat's decision to accept the U.S.-proposed compromise on the last treaty issues.

Carter was expected to return to Washington today from Cairo, ending his six-day Mideast peace mission without the peace treaty he had hoped for, but reporting progress that had seemed unlikely 24 hours earlier.

Carter said he and Begin had narrowed the remaining issues in a breakfast meeting today.

These issues were believed to be Israel's desire for Sinai oil, Egypt's desire for liaison officials to supervise Palestinian self-rule in the Gaza Strip and Israel's desire for a quick exchange of ambassadors with Egypt.

Carter gave no indication, either in Israel or in Egypt, of the shape of the U.S.-proposed compromises.

As he left Israel, Carter said "good progress was made" toward a treaty and vowed, "we will not fail."

Carter said progress was made Monday night in a meeting of U.S. and Israeli cabinet officials, and further progress was achieved this morning in a breakfast meeting between himself and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

Begin, also speaking at Ben Gurion airport, said Israel had now gone as far as it could go toward meeting Egypt's terms, and "Now of course, it's the turn of Egypt to reply."

Carter headed home without the treaty he had hoped to forge during his Mideast mission, and before his upbeat statement at Tel Aviv's Ben Gurion airport the mood of Carter's party was gloomy.

But at Ben Gurion Carter vowed that negotiations would continue and said, "There are fewer differences than when I first arrived. And those few differences which

Two Men Sought In Child-Stealing Turned Selves In

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Two men sought in the abduction of two children over the weekend surrendered to Winston-Salem police today and returned the infants unharmed.

Police detective D.R. Isaacs said Marion Martin Jr., 38, and Norman Wilson, 18, walked into city hall with the babies about 6 a.m. They were held on kidnapping charges and a bond hearing was scheduled for 2 p.m.

Isaacs said they believed a controversial religious group to which the mothers of the two babies once belonged was involved in the abductions of the youngsters from a Winston-Salem residence early Saturday.

Isaacs said the children were taken to their mothers and, because of the mothers' involvement with the group, the New Hope Deliverance and Miracle Center, police would keep the mothers and the children under wraps.

"They will be afforded all the protection they want," Isaacs said. "It will be up to them as to what extent."

The two women — Pauline Jeter and Carlotta Brown — had been members of the religious organization until recently. Authorities said former members of the center have accused it of carrying out beatings and harassment of members and former members.

Mrs. Jeter and Mrs. Brown said three men smashed a glass door before dawn Saturday and kidnapped Mrs. Jeter's 22-month-old son, Sheba, and Mrs. Brown's 21-month-old daughter, Monique Lotaya.

Winston-Salem police on Monday tracked down and questioned Demorie Ray Robinson, 24, of Winston-Salem, reputed head of the New Hope Deliverance and Miracle Center. Isaacs said Robinson and other members of the organization were found at a rooming house about 20 miles away in Guilford County but the missing infants were not there.

"We put the head man (Robinson) under surveillance and all the members there under sur-

Ayden Board Votes To Rezone Area To Allow Building Of Rest Home

By REBECCA BUFFALO
Reflector Staff Writer
The Ayden Town Board of Commissioners voted Monday to rezone property on Old Snow Hill Road for the building of a 60-patient rest home.

Mrs. Pauline Barfield, co-partner in the rest home with Ann Barfield, came before the board, saying that all federal and state regulations had been met for the building.

The board queried Mrs. Barfield during the public hearing session, learning that the building would house patients who required a minimal amount of medical supervision.

According to Mrs. Barfield, she is a registered nurse, as well as a certified nursing home administrator. She also said that Ann Barfield was a registered nurse.

Town Manager Don Russell, after hearing that October was cited as the nursing home's probable opening date, said that an eight-inch water line should be connected near the proposed property sometime in July or August, which would give the facility increased water pressure.

The board adopted an ordinance granting a franchise for the construction, operation and maintenance to Greenville Cable TV, Inc. after having a second and final reading on the matter.

Following a public hearing, the board approved the sublease of railroad and street property to Marshal Desten's Wild West Show. According to Russell, the business should be in operation sometime in the summer.

Approval was given to a lease agreement for property owned by T. G. Worthington for use as a public parking

Voluntary Curtailing Of Fuel-Use Seen A Failure

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — With Americans ignoring pleas to hold down fuel consumption voluntarily, mandatory controls may be needed by this summer, says

Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger.

The first step probably would be maximum and minimum thermostat settings in public buildings, he said.

Even with a resumption of oil imports from Iran, shortages of unleaded gasoline, jet fuel and home heating oil are likely, Schlesinger told a Senate committee Monday.

Administration officials were going before a House Commerce subcommittee today to discuss gasoline supplies and prices.

And another House panel was beginning hearings on auto fuel economy rules amid charges by consumer advocate Ralph Nader that the auto industry is gearing up for a major attack on those standards.

"In private meetings of attorneys and allied groups in Washington, the auto companies are preparing to launch one of their characteristic 'big lie' campaigns, replete with phony premises and contrived conclusions," Nader said Monday in a letter to Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich.

Nader said the the auto makers plan to use as "one of their springboards" hearings opening today before a subcommittee headed by Dingell.

Under a 1975 law, automakers are required to make their cars average 27.5 miles per gallon by 1985 as an energy-saving measure.

Dingell, a major supporter of the 1975 law, was not available for comment on Nader's letter. A Dingell aide, who asked that his name not be used, said the auto industry has advocated lessening interim standards for the early 1980s, but, "We haven't heard anything about watering down the 27.5 mile-per-gallon standard."

Reacting to Senate critics who have called for his resignation on grounds the administration is not doing enough to drive home the seriousness of the energy crisis, Schlesinger told the Senate Energy Committee Monday he has already tried to quit — several times.

Sen. John Durkin, D-N.H., accused Schlesinger of "stumbling through" the current crisis and told him he should resign.

"This country faces a serious crisis ... the opportunities are splendid for demagoguery," Schlesinger responded. "As to my own resignation, I have offered it several times. This is not a responsibility that is entirely pleasurable on a day-to-day basis."

Talking to reporters later, Schlesinger declined to elaborate on his resignation offers beyond saying that he tried to quit several times and had his efforts rejected by President Carter.

In another development Monday, Barbara Blum, deputy administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, told the House Commerce oversight and investigations subcommittee that her agency and the Department of Energy have informally reached agreement on a rule to prohibit price differences between leaded and unleaded gasoline of more than 5 cents a gallon.

FARM CHEMICAL CONTAINER DISPOSAL?

I am a farmer and the growing season is fast approaching. What does the county recommend as the best place to dispose of pesticide and herbicide containers? R. B.

County Environmental Health Division Director Willie Pate said the landfill is the best place to dispose of farm chemical containers. It's fine, he said, to put them in the new roadside disposal sites that are being opened around the county. He asked that each container be rinsed out with water and that holes be knocked in the bottoms so water cannot collect in them.

These containers should not be left on the farm, he said, and should not be burned on the farm, as the smoke generated by such burning would likely be toxic.

Parcel Transfers Postponed For Renegotiation

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Action on a proposed transfer of interest between two parties, involving a parcel in the Central Business District, was tabled by the Redevelopment Commission pending renegotiations by the parties on an agreed transfer price.

The proposed transfer of interest in a parcel at the corner of Third and Washington Streets involves the current owners, T and C Co., and the potential new owners, Howard, Vincent & Duffus, local law firm.

It was pointed out at last night's meeting that T and C Co., consisting of Clarence Tugwell and Louis Clark, have owned the CBD parcel since August of 1975 when they purchased the tract from the Redevelopment Commission. The partnership has not completed the development plan for the tract, it was noted.

At the present time, according to Commission executive director Joe Laney, the board feels that an agreed amount of the transfer from T and C Co. to the law firm has not been established.

Tugwell and Clark purchased the tract for $32,060, it was explained last night, and have certified that they have nearly $13,000 more tied up in the property or a total of roughly $45,000.

A transfer of interest has been proposed at a price "not to exceed $45,000 as approved by the Redevelopment Commission," Laney reported. The wording of the proposal, he said, places the Commission in the position of having to negotiate with a party.

The Commission has approved transfers of interest in the past but they have not involved agreed prices between the two parties involved at full certified compensation.

The director said that he feels it is not the function of the Commission to determine what is legal and eligible costs. In the current case, if the transfer is approved by the board in the full amount proposed, the present property owners do not lose any money on their investment and the Commission is in effect, guaranteeing that there will be no loss, Laney added.

He said that such action by

Blood Drive At Rose High School 'Spectacular'

Monday's Bloodmobile visit at Rose High School, the first blood drive conducted at the school, provided "spectacular" results, according to Ott Alford, Pitt Blood Committee chairman.

Alford said today that Rose High's initial visit resulted in the collection of 167 pints of blood with only nine deferrals. Of the total donorship, he reported, 26 involved staff members.

The blood chairman, noting that the city school board earlier approved the local visit, said that the school drive was sponsored by Mrs. Scott Allen and the Rose High Juniors.

Alford offered his "strong appreciation" to Principal Howard Hurt and the rest of the administrative staff, other personnel at Rose and especially the student body for the "very fine turnout and outstanding job done by everybody."

Next year, beginning with the July 1 calendar period, a minimum of one visit will be scheduled to each of the four county high schools and Rose High School here. The high school having the highest percentage of eligible donors, including the 17-year-olds on through staff members, will be recognized by the blood program.

Faith Healer Launched Controversial 'Church'

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A former member of the New Hope Deliverance and Miracle Center, a controversial church that police say is apparently involved in the disappearance of the children of two church members, says the church has become a one-man personality cult since its founder died three years ago.

The church, an all-black organization now estimated by authorities to have about 60 members, was founded about 10 years ago by Dollie May Bynum, a flamboyant faith healer. Under her leadership, the organization built up a membership of about 300 in the early 1970s.

Upon her death, her son De-morie Ray Robinson took over. "He said he had the power. He said he was Jesus," said Elizabeth Wilson, a 40-year-old member of the church until she quit seven months ago.

Police say former members have reported beatings and drug abuse within the church, and Mrs. Wilson told similar stories.

Child-Stealing...

veillance," Isaacs said. "We told them we'd be with them until something happened."

Isaacs said he had not questioned Martin or Norman and did not know what they said, if anything, when they returned the children.

"But I've got my ideas," he said. Asked to elaborate, he added, "I think Robinson told them (to surrender the children)."

Although Robinson could not be reached for comment, he has denied allegations that the New Hope Deliverance and Miracle Center has developed into a personality cult centered on him or that the group has sanctioned violence or harassment.

Isaacs said the group checked into the facility Saturday, a few hours after the kidnapping allegedly took place in Winston-Salem.

Two female members of the church told police that three men broke into a house where they were staying and abducted their children. The mothers, Pauline Jeter and Carlotta Brown, told police the men pulled the children out of bed and fled with them. The children were identified as Sheba Jeter, a 22-month-old boy, and Monique Lotaya Brown, a 21-month-old girl.

Police continued their search today for two male members of the church who have been charged with kidnapping in connection with the incident. Warrants charging Marion Martin Jr., 38, and Norman Wilson, 18, with two counts of kidnapping were issued earlier, police said.

Isaacs said none of the church members questioned Monday were taken into custody or charged. But he said "some of the people in there said they'd make an attempt to find the children."

Winston-Salem police issued a statement Monday which said: "The people involved in this episode are former or present members of a religious group that may have been originally based on Christianity. But through changes in leadership in recent years it has developed into a one-man ideology with a declining membership that was exploited by the leadership for financial gain."

Membership of the church, which was started by Robinson's mother, was estimated at more than 300 in the early 1970s under its founder, faithhealer Dollie May Bynum.

But since her son took over after her death in 1976, authorities say, membership has dwindled to about 30 adults and 30 children.

Former members of the church have told police the organization has become a personality cult financed by members' pay and welfare checks and dominated by violence.

Robinson said in an earlier interview that none of the allegations is true. "It seems like they're trying to make this a Jim Jones (People's Temple) thing... this is no cult... this is a religion that is based on Christianity," he said.

Isaacs said police have gotten "too many reports to count" in connection with the church in recent months. The police file contains more than 50 separate complaints spanning several years.

One former member, Mrs. Elizabeth Wilson, 40, said in an interview Monday night that Robinson "has set himself up as a type of God."

"He says, 'I suffered for you, now you got to suffer,'" Mrs. Wilson said.

Mrs. Wilson said she left the church seven months ago, after having been a member for 10 years, because of a beating.

"They came to my home, and they jumped on me. I got tired of what I saw them do to members, the harassment and all, and you had to give all you had," Mrs. Wilson said. Norman Wilson, one of the men charged, is her son.

Mrs. Wilson's other son, David Lee Wilson, 19, remained in jail today on charges of second-degree burglary, possessing a weapon of mass destruction and assaulting a police officer with a firearm in connection with an incident at a house next door to the site of the al-

Suing Three Sales Firms

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state has filed suit against three out-of-state magazine sales companies alleging that the firms have used deceptive selling techniques and have threatened persons who decide to cancel subscriptions.

Named in the suit are Magazine Circulation Services, Inc., a Virginia corporation based in Norfolk, Va., and with offices in Miami, Fla. and Toledo, Ohio; Allied Publishers Services, Inc., a Delaware corporation based in Fresno, Calif., with offices in Charlotte; and Periodical Publishers' Service Bureau, Inc., a Delaware corporation with offices in Charlotte and Atlanta, Ga.

State Attorney General Rufus Edmisten said a temporary restraining order has been granted against the companies.

None of the defendants is registered to do business in North Carolina, according to the attorney general's office. All of the firms sell magazines over the telephone.

"They claim that oral agreements on the telephone are legally binding contracts and they threaten people who decide to cancel," Edmisten said. "But North Carolina law requires that retail installment sales contracts be in writing, dated and signed by the buyer. If there is no signature, then there is no binding contract."

The state's suit asks for injunctions, refunds, cancellations of agreements and civil penalties. A hearing has been set for March 22 in Wake County Superior Court.

U.S. Military Advisers To Be Sent To Train North Yemeni

Several Interested In Filling Vacancy

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — A number of persons have expressed interest in filling the seat vacated by Wilson County Sheriff W. Robin Pridgen, who resigned Monday after sentenced in connection with corruption charges.

The county Board of Commissioners faces the politically sensitive job of finding a replacement and was set to meet today to begin the selection process.

Pridgen was sentenced to six years for taking bribes, conspiracy to violate racketeering laws and filing false income tax returns. He submitted his resignation at 5 p.m. Monday.

One of the most visible candidates for the job is Chief Deputy Tony M. Owens, who became acting sheriff when Pridgen resigned.

"... I am most definitely a candidate and ready to fight for it," said Owens.

Owens was acquitted Feb. 24 of charges that he took bribes to obstruct enforcement of state gambling laws in Wilson County. He was also found innocent March 6 of lying to a federal grand jury investigating corruption in the county.

Owens, 36, has 15 years experience in local law enforcement, the last nine with the sheriff's office. He was named chief deputy in 1975.

Roy L. Champion, chairman of the county commissioners, said that in order to eliminate extended politicking by various candidates, the board would move as quickly as possible to replace Pridgen.

In his resignation letter to Champion, Pridgen wrote, "... I sincerely regret that circumstances have brought me to this decision. I appreciate the cooperation that I have had from other officials of the county during my tenure in office and I hope that good law enforcement shall always be the goal of all of us."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, already speeding up arms deliveries to help North Yemen wage a border war with its Marxist neighbor, will soon send military advisers to train the Yemeni forces in using the sophisticated weapons, administration officials say.

As many as 300 military advisers may be sent to the mountainous Arabian Peninsula country over the next two to three years, Deputy Secretary of State William R. Crawford told a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee Monday.

The advisers will not engage in combat operations or be stationed near combat areas, said Pentagon sources who asked not to be identified. It is not considered unusual for advisers to accompany weapons shipments to other countries.

North Yemen has been engaged in its border war with South Yemen for about three weeks. Each side blames the other for beginning the conflict.

U.S. officials estimate the Soviet Union has sent about 800 advisers to South Yemen, the only Marxist-ruled country in the Arab world. Cuba and East Germany have also sent advisers, they say.

Pentagon sources said 11 Army personnel — comprising a "mobile training team" — will be going to North Yemen soon to train soldiers to use the Vulcan gun, a multi-barrel, 20mm anti-aircraft weapon.

Four military personnel from the Office of Defense Cooperation have been in North Yemen for several months, helping with logistics, the sources said.

Last week, President Carter announced he was speeding up the shipment of U.S. weaponry to North Yemen. Among the arms being sent are 12 F-5E fighters, 50 armored personnel carriers and 64 tanks.

Carter signed a waiver last Wednesday to permit delivery of the weapons without the normal 30-day congressional review period.

Crawford told the subcommittee the president took the emergency action at the request of Saudi Arabia and North Yemen.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., blasted the administration's Yemeni policy in a sharply worded attack on the House speech.

"The administration is about to change its foreign policy from relatively passive to intensely active, yet in a highly arbitrary fashion," he told the House on Monday.

"The president now feels that it's time we looked concerned and tough, and he is simply picking the first bet to come along," he said.

Aspin also told the House that State Department officials "are saying the atmosphere is reminiscent of Vietnam in 1963."

Crawford said Saudi oil is not directly threatened by the border war. But he added, "The outcome of the current attack will have a direct impact on the security and stability of our friends in the region and therefore on our security interests."

Asked if the United States would "go to war" to protect the Saudi oil fields, he said it might, echoing a statement made by Secretary of Defense Harold S. Brown two weeks ago.

'Shocked' By Court Ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hancho C. Kim says he is shocked but hasn't decided whether to appeal a court ruling that upheld his conviction on charges of conspiring to influence congressmen and then lying about receiving $600,000 from the South Korean CIA.

The U.S. Court of Appeals ruled 3-0 Monday that U.S. District Judge Thomas A. Flannery committed no serious errors during the trial. "I always felt I was going to win. I'm shocked," Kim said following the decision.

BRUNCH FARE

Eggs Ham

Fresh Fruit
LIGHT ROLLS

They're the spongy, soft variety.

1 package dry yeast
¼ cup very warm (105 to 115 degrees) water
1 cup skim milk
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup butter
1 teaspoon salt
1 large egg

¾ cups (about) flour

Dissolve the yeast in the water in the large bowl of an electric mixer. Heat the milk, sugar, butter and salt until lukewarm; butter doesn't have to melt; add to the yeast mixture with the egg and 1 cup of the flour; beat at medium speed, scraping bowl, for about 2 minutes. Gradually stir in enough of the remaining flour to make a soft dough; do not knead.

Cover with saran and let rise in draft-free warm (80 degrees) place until doubled — 2 hours. Punch down dough. Shape into 15 equal balls and place in a buttered 13 by 9 by 2-inch pan in a single layer. Cover and let rise as previously until doubled — about 45 minutes. Bake, on the rack below center, in a preheated 400-degree oven until golden brown — 10 to 12 minutes. If bottom of rolls are not brown enough, invert in pan and return to rack above center in the 400-degree oven for about 5 minutes. Makes 15.

DEAR ABBY: My father makes a good living and Mom has never had to work. She has lots of friends and is always doing something for our church.

Now for my problem: Mom shoplifts. I've known it for a long time, but she doesn't know that I know. I've seen her take small cans of stuff in the supermarket, dress patterns, cosmetics — anything she can slip into her purse or pockets. We're not poor, Abby. Mom can buy just about anything she wants. She even steals things she has no use for.

What gets me is how Mom is always lecturing me to be honest and truthful.

What should I do? I'm afraid Mom will get caught and sent to jail and the reputation of our whole family will be ruined. Should I tell my father?

I can't take a chance of getting a letter from you at home, so please answer in the paper, but leave out my city. Thank you.

A DAUGHTER (12)

DEAR DAUGHTER: Your mother could be a kleptomaniac — a person who has an uncontrollable urge to steal. Kleptomania can be cured with treatment.

Tell your mother you know about her problem, and urge her to get professional help. If she refuses, and continues stealing, tell your father . . . not as a tattletale, but as a loving daughter.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in hopes of comforting the many wonderful, loving parents who live in shame because their child has chosen to live with his or her mate without marriage.

My girlfriend (18) and I (21) have lived together now for three years. We share all the responsibility equally — the bills, rent, laundry, dishes — everything.

We help each other, and are each other's best friend. We are together because we love each other, and are very happy.

My parents and hers love us and are quite proud of us. As a matter of fact, they are overjoyed to see us so happy and fulfilled. Now, does that sound so bad?

RICH IN LOVE

DEAR RICH: No. It sounds almost too good to be true. A little quick arithmetic shows that you were 18 and your girlfriend was 15 when you started living together. I can understand parents being overjoyed to see their adult children "happy and fulfilled" — but I'll bet they weren't all that overjoyed three years ago.

DEAR ABBY: In response to FEELING GUILTY: Her story sounds like a carbon copy of my life. I'm 27, and when I was younger I had an abortion. It was the only thing to do at the time, but I am a good Catholic and I was scared to go to confession.

After seven years of great anxiety, I finally went. The priest never said a word. I'm sure he has heard the same story many times. I was not excommunicated (he didn't even know who I was) but granted absolution.

I wish I had gone sooner. I am glad you told FEELING GUILTY to go to a priest and confess. If she follows your advice, she will feel like a new person.

Spring Handbags Fit Many Roles

NEW YORK (AP) — Spring '79 is a time of change in fashion. Never have accessories, especially handbags, played as important a role in accenting the wardrobe as this spring, reports the National Handbag Association.

"No longer can one outfit carry you through the day," says NHA consultant Erica Fineberg. "There's a dress code for the business day, which changes after 5, perhaps for active sports — tennis, jogging or other exercise — and then on to dinner or dance dressing. The same holds true for accessories."

For day there are modified attaché-style organizers for business, which are accompanied by handbags carried in the hand, under the arm or around the shoulder.

For active sports there are body bags, belt bags, even sports bags big enough carry all the sports needs.

For evening, whether for dining or dancing, glitter is a favorite and it sparkles in unusual shapes.

The newest shapes in all categories are structured. Texture also plays a new role in handbags made in brass and lizard; crocheted straw; cork and leather; perforated leather, and even wood.

The trends in fashion include Western looks, shorts, dresses, retro looks and pants, and handbag designers have bags to fit every mood, Ms. Fineberg points out.

The Western look is casual and easy for weekend or after-work relaxation, showing up in pants with a Western-type shirt, fully flounced skirt with a flirt of a petticoat showing, or a country-like shirt. Here, can'teen-style handbags or saddle bags fit this country feeling.

Whether short or long, shorts are coming back into the fashion scene, especially in bright colors. Jacketed and classic for city dressing, or casual and easy for suburban wear, shorts are more of a fashion statement than ever before. To coordinate with this look are hot-colored carryalls in duffle shapes or crocheted straw with extra-long straps to wear across the body.

This is definitely the year of the dress. Dresses in all shapes and designs will make the fashion scene, along with coordinating bags. The dress to watch is the T-dress; relaxed and easy, it works beautifully as the day goes on. The length depends on the designer and the wearer's choice. On-the-body, under-arm, around-the-shoulder bags will complete the look. There are many styles to choose from.

Retro looks, which were strong for fall, are carrying on through spring. Beaded cardigan or polo-style sweaters will ward off a spring chill. Suits with padded shoulders and narrower skirts with belted waists will also be strong. And the winning silhouette is the Joan Crawford style in this year's shimmery fashion fabrics: wider gathered shoulders, shorter skirt with a slit.

Handbag designers have been inspired by days gone by, notes Ms. Fineberg. The softly shirred accents, the glitter of rhinestones, the touch of satin, are borrowed from the past, but what is new is the shape, the fabric and the handbag itself.

Not to be overlooked is the pantsuit. It's comfortable and easy to wear and travel in. It looks even newer with the shorter jacket, feminine yet still classic. The pants taper to the ankle and sport pleats around the waist. Tailored shoulder bags, clutches and blazer bags will complete the pantsuit fashionably.

The late 1950s, is still vividly remembered in West Germany. "Doctors are watching the growing interest in herbal teas with satisfaction. They hope it will help to stop the growing misuse of pills and other medicines," says Dr. Bernard Noche, a retired Hamburg physician and expert on herbs.

A colleague, Dr. Rudolf Fritz Weiss, cautiously recommends potential users consult a doctor before imbibing — since herbs are medicine.

Studies show about half of all West Germans now reach for herbs occasionally, about one in five does so regularly, and women are more likely to use them than men.

"Among the women, elderly ladies living alone and educated hausfraus (housewives) tend to drink herbal teas," says Dr. Eckhard Weber, spokesman for one of West Germany's largest herbal tea packers. "But businessmen in their mid-forties and family men also like herbal teas."

Smalltown people drink more herbal tea than urbanites. Southern Germans like them better than northerners.

In many south German restaurants guests must specify "black tea" or choose from a variety of herbal teas.

I am in the process of covering an old trunk. The other evening, I was loading staples into my staple gun when my husband said, "I don't want to interfere with your project, but I do want to warn you that if you point that staple gun into your eye and squeeze the trigger, you could hurt yourself."

"You've ruined my surprise," I said dryly.

"You don't have to be testy about it," he said. "I was only trying to help."

"You are always doing that," I charged.

"Doing what?"

"Assuming that I am going to do something stupid to hurt myself."

"I assume nothing of the kind. I just know that women are not used to the hazards of things mechanical, electrical, or that have sharp edges."

Men are so naive. Women live in danger every moment of their day. Why, I have cut off the bottom of a Christmas tree using a serrated bread knife.

Opened a No. 2 can of kidney beans at Girl Scout camp with an axe.

I've shaved my legs with a double-edged blade that took the hems out of draperies, paint off the windows, and gum out of the dog's whiskers.

I've rescued a piece of bread on fire in a toaster with a paring knife while the toaster was plugged in behind the refrigerator.

Would a man have the courage to separate frozen pork chops with a screw driver and a mallet?

I've pried open paint-can lids with the handles of iced teaspoons and cut the kids' hair with embroidery scissors. I've stirred paint with ballpoint pens and driven nails into wires hidden in the walls.

I've clipped hedges during the rain, plucked a sweater with a label reading "DRY CLEAN ONLY" out of the washer during the spin cycle, and forced ice cubes out of a tray with a steak knife.

I've painted myself into a closet, chased a naked toddler over a wet tile floor, and stored thumbtacks in my mouth.

I've even stapled my fingernail to the lining of a trunk, but it's too soon to talk about it.

Reasonable Decisions Needed

The Pitt County Board of Elections has formally set June 8 as the referendum date for the $9 million school bond issue and also for deciding on mixed drinks sales in Pitt County.

There was considerable debate about the timing of the voting, with some concern expressed about holding the election on two such diverse issues on the same date.

It was, however, the opinion of both the county commissioners and the board of elections that cost of holding two separate referendums was a factor to be considered.

New Strides By Our Medical Complex

As construction nears its start on the ECU medical sciences building, things are moving along on the next addition to the hospital.

Pitt Memorial has filed a notice of intent to construct 166 additional hospital beds and to modify existing beds for 20 intensive care unit patients.

We think we would have preferred an earlier date for the mixed drink referendum, based on the probability that all that needs to be said on such an emotional issue could be accomplished during a relatively short campaign.

Regardless, the voting date has been set for both issues and no matter what is said between now and June 8 the voters will ultimately decide.

There is no reason for one issue to have any effect on the other. We think the registered voters of the county have the wisdom to separate the two in their minds and they will make intelligent and reasonable decisions on both issues.

Cost is estimated at $5.3 million with the funds coming from the state.

The new bedtower will be a major addition to the hospital, which is growing as was anticipated with its ECU Medical School affiliation.

Hope In Tax Credit Jobs

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Federal tax credits for private business willing to hire disadvantaged people could open up as many as 20,000 jobs in North Carolina in the coming two years.

This simplified approach to encouraging private industry to hire the unemployed and underemployed has long been regarded by specialists as a much-needed final stage of the Concentrated Employment and Training Act.

For what good does it serve if people encouraged to prepare for jobs find none, or wind up in sometimes unnecessary governmental jobs requiring little if any skill, and offering scant chance for future advancement?

As Gov. Jim Hunt sees the Targeted Jobs Tax Credit Program, it "can and should facilitate efforts ... to move people out of training programs and public service jobs into jobs in the private sector of the economy."

Cutback

But it strikes many observers as ironic that at this time when private sector jobs are being pushed for the disadvantaged in order to get them off governmental payrolls, numerous local officials across North Carolina are creating an uproar over the loss of the federally funded CETA people working in county and municipal jobs.

Some of those jobs have been called critical to the ongoing operations of local governments and officials have complained they are being undercut by the program change.

Most people seem to have forgotten that public service jobs as the final step in the Concentrated Employment and Training Act were put there only as a last resort, to be used if private sector jobs couldn't be located. And, local governments have been told time and again that those jobs were to be funded only for three years, and that at the end of that period the local government must either lose the job slot, or pick up the tab itself. But now that the time has come, the uproar continues to rise.

Meanwhile, final procedures for the private sector job program have been ironed out. The effort will be directed by the Employment Security Commission which promises to keep red tape and bookkeeping to a minimum.

BILL NOBLITT

Basically, the tax credits will be available in 1979 and 1980, with the private business allowed to claim up to 50 percent of first-year wages paid eligible employees, up to a maximum salary of $6,000; and 25 percent of the second year's pay.

No contract would be required, only a relatively simple agreement between the employer and the state job service. Workers hired after September 26, 1978, can be certified.

Any Job

J.B. Archer, chairman of the Employment Security Commission, said another advantage to business is that no criteria are spelled out for types of private sector jobs to be involved.

But there are seven categories of eligible workers: older people or the handicapped young people receiving supplemental security income; handicapped who have completed or are engaged in vocational rehabilitation; Vietnam veterans from poor families; youths from poor families; recipient of general welfare aid; former prison inmates from poor families; and youths taking part in the cooperative education programs.

Federal officials estimate the two-year program will create up to 100,000 jobs nationwide, and 20,000 in this state.

These private economy jobs, say officials, would effectively offset the cutback in public service jobs under CETA.

Many of those public jobs, investigations have shown, were "makework" things, including grass cutting, trash collection, etc.

Energy Test For Carter

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — President Carter's policymakers have travelled a tortuous two-year path to this unexpected conclusion: decontrol of crude oil prices is essential to any sensible energy program, despite the political retaliation it would provoke.

Carter's men have grudgingly come around to accepting the oil industry's insistence that this country will never shake off dangerous dependence on foreign oil until exploration and production are encouraged by removal of artificial price restraints. But such economic sense could be political suicide, considering how it would outrage Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and the environmentalist-consumer constituency.

Beleaguered Jimmy Carter, therefore, is faced with a major energy test of political courage. Shielded by aides from the contamination of even meeting with oil industry leaders, he must decide soon whether to provoke the Kennedys by not merely talking to oilmen but granting their desires.

The necessity of removing stultifying oil price curbs has been pressed in the government's inner council by its wiser heads: Energy Secretary James Schlesinger, Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, Federal Reserve Chairman William Miller. Nevertheless, it has been widely assumed their council would be over-riden by Carter's domestic policy staff.

That assumption was jolted by the policy staff's chief, Stuart Eizenstat, when interviewed on NBC's "Today" program Feb. 28.

Describing the question as to whether to "deregulate the price of domestically produced crude oil, which is now controlled at artificially low prices", this senior presidential aide continued: "To the extent that we do de-regulate, there would be a mild inflationary impact. However, it would have positive response in terms of additional supply on this country and additional conservation."

In essence, Eizenstat concluded, "We do have to balance off what might be good energy policy against what temporarily might have a mild inflationary impact."

"I can't believe it," one corporate expert on oil questions told us, when he read the transcript of the largely overlooked "Today" interview. "Eizenstat sounds like Bill Simon." It was less surprising to oil lobbyists who have found Eizenstat's door as open as the president's Oval Office is inaccessible. Increasingly, Eizenstat has been agreeing with them.

Eizenstat's lingering concern is that oil decontrol, while boosting inflation insignificantly, could be psychologically debilitating in fighting inflation. Anti-inflation chief Alfred Kahn has warned the White House it could encourage unions toward higher settlements in current negotiations. Yet, as Eizenstat hinted over nationwide television, the tradeoff is obviously in favor of decontrol.

The problem is political. Since Kennedy is viewed at the White House as the only real threat to the president's reelection, it is worthwhile to bait him on a domestic question dear to his heart?

One of the few oil industry figures with good political connections to the White House believes that is why Carter's door is closed to oilmen. Giant oil company presidents do not even get the courtesy of a reply to their requests to see the president, and independent producers fare little better. A Dec. 12 request by the independents to see Carter was denied, and was renewed Feb. 28.

Strength For Today

WE SHOULD NOT LOSE HOPE

The incongruities and injustices of human life are sufficient to drive us to despair. There has been a war every four years for the past two centuries. One-half of the world's people never has enough food to satisfy hunger. Hundreds of millions of people the world over can neither read nor write. The powerful impose on the weak; the rich rob the poor; the poor retaliate and destroy the rich.

The pages of history are red with blood. One cynic has described life as "a terminal disease". And yet, life is not only good, but divine. God has a stake in it, not only because He made men in His own image, but because with all the world's evils, injustice and folly, there are still millions who press toward the divine ideal of righteousness and justice.

We solve our problems slowly, but we find a solution to a surprising number of them with the passing of time. We have a solid foundation for hope.

Biting Hand That Feeds

WASHINGTON — The formula has several variations, beginning with man bites dog, extending in the case at hand to woman bites Senator and agency bites committee. No matter how you spice it, the recipe still makes news, and a witness named Arabella Martinez made such news the other day.

Ms. Martinez is Assistant Secretary for Human Development Services within the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. She turned up before a Senate subcommittee, prepared to testify in the matter of Senator Alan Cranston's Child Care Act of 1979.

Now you should know, O Best Beloved, as Mr. Kipling used to say, that the Senator's child care bill is a direct descendant of the child development bill that in 1972 was pushed with such great enthusiasm, and thankfully with such little success, by his quondam colleague, Walter Mondale of Minnesota. Since that time Mr. Mondale has slipped downhill on the social scale, but he remains in a position of some modest prestige and power. He is Vice President of the United States.

It was therefore to be supposed, once Senator Cranston fathered this legislative grandchild, that the Carter administration would come to the aid of the Cranston Child Care Act of 1979. After all, what are Vice Presidents for? It is an interesting question, but we pass it by. It was to be expected that Vice President Mondale, at the very least, would hustle up some four-star support for the Cranston bill — Welfare Secretary Califano, for example, or perhaps a deputy secretary or two.

Alas, no. There appeared before the Senate Subcommittee on Child and Human Development the administration's no-nonsense witness, Ms. Martinez, onetime welfare case worker, former executive director of the Spanish-Speaking Unity Council of Oakland, Calif., and now Assistant Secretary

Crisis Brings Action

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Faced with the prospect of long lines at beer halls and ice cream parlors, the Carter administration and Congress are considering stringent action to end America's dependence on imported pistachio nuts.

The crisis atmosphere developed when Agriculture Department officials disclosed that Iran is the source of about 65 percent of the pistachios consumed in the United States.

In the best of times, Iran supplies the United States with 39,000 pounds of pistachios daily. An Agriculture Department official said that because of recent unrest, imports from Iran have dropped 28 percent since the first of the year.

And no one at the State Department could say when, if ever, the new Iranian government will restore pistachio nut production to the high levels of recent years.

All these factors have spurred efforts to reduce American dependency on imported pistachios.

But, so far, progress toward pistachio independence has been uncertain. In California, 30,000 acres of pistachio trees produced nine million pounds of nuts in 1977, but poor weather conditions last year cut the California crop to seven million pounds.

There is talk on Capitol Hill of encouraging higher domestic production by boosting the price of pistachio nuts beyond the anti-inflation guideline set by the administration.

"We can't let pistachio ice cream become a casualty of the war on inflation," said an advocate of price increases.

However, President Carter is understood to oppose deregulating pistachio prices.

Administration sources say the president believes that once Americans become aware of the gravity of the crisis, they will voluntarily cut back on consumption.

While emphasizing that no final decisions have been made on proposed voluntary standards, administration officials

40 Years Ago Today

March 13, 1939

W. G. Cherry, Jr., manager of the local Employment Service, today declared that there is much interest concerning the availability of skilled mechanics in view of the improving business outlook and the increased activity in the aviation field.

As a result, the local Employment Service offices are interested in securing the names and addresses and records of all experienced, skilled machinists and mechanics who are not now working at their trade, but who have had such experience and would be interested in securing training in aircraft mechanics.

All previous registrants should renew their applications and unregistered mechanics and machinists should get in touch with their local employment office.

This is not to be construed as the promise of a job, but may be important to the applicant when openings are presented, according to Cherry.

To the editor

The first of 1977 I wrote Gov. James Hunt concerning the litter on Road 1401 near Belvoir. It was deplorable and I was ashamed of the disgraceful looks of such a scenic road in North Carolina. It is a winding road with a creek running beside it. It used to be called Sandusty.

Gov. Hunt referred the request for cleanup to Tom Bradshaw, Secretary of the Department of Transportation, who in turn notified Pitt Co. officials. They cleaned the shoulders and it was again a beautiful road. But today, it is nearly as bad as it was two years ago.

It probably would be possible to find names and addresses among the garbage. Those people could be notified and made to clean up the mess. A letter should be sent out to each of them. Also, a no litter sign and garbage cans could help. If no steps are taken, this road will be a permanent garbage dump. I'll write to Gov. Hunt again if no steps are taken.

Angered By U.S. 'Settlement'

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The settlement of $196 million in claims against China for less than 41 cents on the dollar can hardly bring cheer to those whose property was seized by Fidel Castro.

They try to remain confident that the U.S. Government will do better by them because, among other things, their $2 billion in losses are thoroughly documented. But they worry, and often they get angry.

As one corporate claimant put it, "If we were reimbursed we'd invest it in plants and machinery to make jobs for Americans. When Castro doesn't pay us it means he can pay his big debts to the Russians."

Trying to be optimistic, David Wallace, chairman of Bangor Punta Corp., which has a U.S.-certified $53 million claim against Cuba, said the China settlement "puts a floor under our negotiations."

But Bangor and other companies have been waiting a long time too, since 1959 and 1960, and not a penny has been paid. Their only relief, they say, has been relatively minor — through income tax deductions.

Meanwhile, the debt rises. Unilaterally, the U.S. Foreign Claims Settlement Commission says claimants are entitled to 6 percent interest a year. But even that isn't likely to cover replacement costs.

Said Wallace: "Even if we got 100 percent and interest it wouldn't equal replacement," which he set at $250 billion. "We lost fields, sugar, refineries, a railroad and the most modern wharf in Cuba."

Bangor Punta and about 50 other institutions — Allied Chemical, the First National Bank of Boston, the University of Chicago among them — meet regularly as the Joint Corporate Committee on Cuban Claims.

While some, such as Bangor Punta, may have been approached separately by Cuban officials, they choose to put their faith in Washington.

The files show claims of $1,851,057,358, growing at a about a year since 1962. About $1.6 billion is owed corporations; private citizens lost $233 million, churches and schools about $13 million.

Under the Cuban Claims Act of 1964, the government certified these amounts and, in the words of President

Pupils Put Harry Truman On Trial For Dropping A-Bombs

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer
INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — President Harry Truman is on trial in his hometown for deciding to drop atomic bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki in 1945. A dozen ninth-graders are on the jury.

Participants in the mock trial are all students — acting out the roles of Truman, Josef Stalin, Dwight Eisenhower and others who figured in the events of World War II.

Stalin and Eisenhower were called by the prosecution. The defense, which is scheduled to open its case today, plans to put the defendant himself on the stand.

At issue is whether Truman made a morally correct decision in authorizing the dropping of atomic bombs on those Japanese cities. He is "charged" with war crimes in the deaths of more than 100,000 Japanese.

Janet Fielder, the social studies teacher who organized the trials after getting the idea from an educational aid packet, says it is meant as a learning experiment. She adds that she expects "some static" from those outside the school.

After a story on the trial was published in a local newspaper, Mrs. Fielder said she began receiving telephone calls from supporters who feared she would be taken before the school board and fired.

School officials could not be reached for comment immediately.

"We as a class have the highest respect for Truman and in no way is this meant to embarrass Truman or the people of Independence," Mrs. Fielder said.

The students have "researched the past, learned about the relationships between the United States and other countries and studied how one person can make a decision that affects many lives," she said Monday.

"It's an interesting way to get away from the books. They've researched this particular topic in detail, and they're really excited about it,"

The trial is being held in both Mrs. Fielder's morning class, with 47 students, and her afternoon session, with 27.

The proceedings at Bridger Junior High School moved smoothly Monday with one exception. Stalin was held in contempt of court and had to be removed bodily from the courtroom.

"Those attorneys were almost throwing fists today — they were very upset with the judge's ruling," said Mrs. Fielder.

Phyllis Sloezen, Truman's 14-year-old defense attorney, said her case would revolve around the testimony of her fellow student playing Truman.

"We're going to prove that it was justified because it saved 250,000 to a million American and Japanese lives," she said. "The Japanese would not have surrendered, so it (the war) would have gone on for a while longer."

Mrs. Fielder said she would not be upset if the jury reached a verdict of guilty.

"I want them to come to that decision on their own," she said. "And I hope everyone will be able to look at both sides."

bureaucratic combat, that is the ten count, the coup de grace, the old heave-ho. Senator Cranston inquired forlornly of the witness if she had cleared her prepared statement with the administration and the Office of Management and Budget. Yes, sir, she said. And that was that.

On the record, Ms. Martinez may thus have blown the Senator's steamboat out of the water, but doubts remain. This child care bill is a bad bill; at monstrous cost it would create a monstrous bureaucracy; it would open a path to all the murky swamps of "child development" so beloved by Mr. Mondale. It's hard to believe the Cranston bill is sunk without a trace. But Ms. Martinez, O Best Beloved, was a witness the Senator will not forget.

In the interim, the president did grant an audience to consumer and environmental lobbyists opposing decontrol, headed by ex-Kennedy aide James Flug. On Jan. 4, shortly after that meeting, Carter wrote a gushy letter to Flug praising "a process of constructive consultation and cooperation between us" and "look(ing) forward confidently to our continuing collaboration." Moves toward decontrol would end "collaboration" with instantly escalated attacks from Flug — and from Kennedy.

Against that, the president must weigh what many Dept. of Energy officials now admit: the federal government's strangulation is primarily responsible for the acute shortage of lead-free gasoline, drastic reduction in drilling operations and continued dependence on foreign oil. If the president does not begin phased decontrol under law beginning June 1, it is highly improbable that controls will end abruptly as scheduled on Oct. 1, 1981. It is, then, truly a last chance.

A decision, which had been expected by mid-March, now may be delayed by Carter's Mideast mission. But there are signs that he has begun to focus on this problem as one that surmounts his old neopopulist hazing of big oil and actually goes to the heart of national security.

Very soon, the president must decide whether to follow Eisenhower's "good energy policy" at the risk of antagonizing Teddy Kennedy. Apart from deciding the nation's energy future, it will tell much about the Carter presidency. (Copyright 1979 Field Enterprises, Inc.)

said the one most often mentioned is one nut to a glass of beer.

There are sharp differences within the administration over the question of whether it is possible to eat one pistachio nut.

Members of Congress who doubt that a voluntary program would work want the administration to take stronger action.

They are pressing Carter to form an interagency task force, under strong leadership, to coordinate governmental efforts to combat the crisis.

Joseph A. Califano Jr., secretary of health, education and welfare, is being mentioned as a likely pistachio czar.

The first job of the task force would be to draw up an allocation system to ensure that no area of the country is deprived of a fair share of the nuts. Some members of Congress, most notably the Wisconsin delegation, want allocations based on beer consumption. However, the ice cream lobby has vowed to fight any such plan.

Bill Revising Rape Law In N.C. Prepared For House

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Legislation revising the state's rape laws, including a provision that would allow a separated wife to charge her husband with rape, was filed in the state House for introduction today.

The bill, modeled after Maryland law, would rewrite the legal definition of rape and also create four categories of lesser sexual offenses.

It is sponsored by Reps. Louise Brennan and Ruth Easterling, D-Mecklenburg, and is supported, Mrs. Brennan said, by the Council on the Status of Women, a state agency.

The bill would set the penalty for first-degree rape at 30 years to life in prison, changing the current mandatory life sentence for first degree rape.

"Women's groups, and others, feel strongly that with harsh penalties, you don't get convictions," said Rep. Patricia Hunt, D-Orange, a backer of the bill.

The bill would allow marriage to be a defense against rape, as it is now in North Carolina law. But it would drop the marriage defense if the couple were legally separated.

In another departure from existing law, the bill does not say that a victim must be a female or that the attacker be male.

"It reflects a non-sexist attitude toward the law, so it would be possible to have a male rape (conviction), which is not possible under North Carolina law now," Mrs. Hunt said.

Mrs. Brennan said the clearly-defined categories for various sex crimes would limit the ability of prosecutors to reduce the charges against the accused.

In other legislative action:
Age

Legislation raising the mandatory retirement age for state and local government employees from 65 to 70 won tentative approval in the state House by a 106-4 vote. Final House action was held over until today.

The bill, which must still go to the Senate, was introduced by Rep. Ernest Messer, D-Haywood, to bring state law in line with changes in federal law.

Joining The Teamsters

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Final affiliation of rank-and-file members of the Winston-Salem Police Department and the Teamsters union could come as early as Wednesday, union officials said Monday.

Patrol officers and corporals who have signed union cards will vote Wednesday on whether to ratify the Teamsters as their representative.

The announcement was made Monday night after a meeting of Local 391 officials and the police organizing committee in which the officers tentatively decided to affiliate.

Christopher Scott, who is leading the organizing drive for Local 391, said the union's decision to represent the officers was made after 80 percent of the 212 active corporals and patrol officers signed union affiliation cards.

The unionization drive has been underway since last September.

City Manager Orville Powell has repeatedly said he will not bargain with the union because North Carolina law prohibits public employees and their employers from engaging in collective bargaining.

He said Monday that he was disappointed by the officers' decision.

"But I am not disappointed in what I have done," Powell said. "I have been acting in the employees' best interests. I want to be on record in the history books as opposing this."

"This is a sad day," he said. "I believe the community is overwhelmingly against the police being represented by the Teamsters."

Scott said that if formal affiliation action is taken Wednesday, the cards will be validated and the union will inform the city that it is the bargaining agent for the police department.

"Then we, as any other union would do, will present our concrete demands to the city; our ideas on how they can improve the working conditions of the men as individuals," Scott said.

"Let these people who are capable and able work until they're 70 if they want to," he urged. "Many, when they reach 65, aren't ready to quit and can't afford to quit, but we kick them out anyway and their income keeps dropping with inflation."

The higher retirement age would apply to state government workers; city, town and county workers and to public school teachers. It would not apply to law enforcement officers, who must retire at 62.

Liquor

The House voted 78-31 to approve a bill extending the hours for selling beer and liquor. The bill will have a third reading in the House today. Sales are now banned after 1 a.m., except during daylight savings time, when the deadline is 2 a.m. The bill would make the 2 a.m. time uniform.

It was opposed by Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, a frequent foe of alcohol legislation. "The purpose of this bill is to allow more people to drink more whiskey longer," he said.

Movies-TV

Rep. Byron Haworth, D-Guilford, filed a resolution calling on Congress to enact legislation that discourages the showing of motion pictures and television programs depicting violence, crime and immorality.

The resolution states that movies and television shows "sometimes tend to justify and glorify" crime and immorality. The resolution says that the programs and movies have destructive effects on society and the young.

In asking for congressional action, however, the resolution says any legislation should be within the guarantees of the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

Taxes

The House approved and sent the Senate two minor tax change bills. One would raise the inheritance-tax deduction for funeral expenses from $500 to $1,200, and the other would raise the deduction for grave-maintenance purchases from $1,000 to $2,500.

Trains

The House passed and sent to the Senate a bill that would create a misdemeanor for vandalizing railroad trains and tracks.

Black History

The House approved unanimously and sent the Senate a resolution that would designate the second week in February of each year Black History Week in North Carolina.

'Saucer' Proved To Be Illusion

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — One look and Frederick Farmer was convinced that something was dreadfully wrong.

Farmer and several other residents of the Raleigh Rescue Mission were among the first to see it early Monday — a long, shimmering, bone-white object hovering in the sky above.

"I said, 'Get somebody out to the airport. Call the newspapers. It's a flying saucer or something foreign from Russia,'" Farmer recalled later Monday.

Although the source of the concern later turned out to be an optical illusion, for a few hours the object captured the imagination of those who looked into the sky above East Hargett Street in downtown Raleigh.

At first glance, it looked like a crack against the pale blue sky, but the object did not stay still.

At times, it would rise slowly in the air, hover for a minute and fall back to its starting place on the horizon. At other times, it would glide lazily back and forth across a small portion of the sky.

After staring at the object for a few awhile, Bernard Egglester, another mission resident, flagged down a passing police car. "I told them it was a flying saucer. I figured they would want to know about it," said Egglester.

"It's weird. I can't account for it. It's the weirdest thing I've ever seen," said Officer J.R. Knox, who arrived later.

But Knox wanted to look at the object from another angle, and the mystery was solved.

Knox went to a parking lot about a block away and discovered a plastic kite string that appeared to be caught between two trees.

The Hargett Street flying saucer was merely a ray of reflected sunlight dancing across the plastic string.

"It's an optical illusion, and a good one at that," said Knox.

Closing Landfill

FARMVILLE — Due to the dedication on Monday of a new refuse collection and transfer site on N.C. 121 at Farmville's northern edge, the town has announced the closing of operations at the municipal landfill on Stantonburg Road, effective at the end of the day Friday, March 9.

Municipal sanitation trucks began using the new collection and transfer site, from which trucks will haul compacted waste to the Pitt County Landfill. The new collection site also includes an area for 24-hour use by town and rural residents to dispose of solid waste.

Persons or firms with bulky waste not suitable for dumping at the collection site may transport such refuse to the Pitt County Landfill in Greenville.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market crept ahead today, cautiously optimistic about the latest developments in President Carter's bid for a Mideast peace agreement.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrial issues was up .87 to 845.55.

Advances held a 7-5 lead over declines on the New York Stock Exchange.

Carter, after a meeting with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, said he was confident that he has "defined all of the main ingredients of a peace treaty between Egypt and Israel." Carter said the United States had made proposals on resolving the remaining issues blocking an Egyptian-Israeli treaty which are being considered by the governments of the two nations.

Before meeting with Sadat, Carter said "substantial" progress had been made toward narrowing the differences between Egypt and Israel during a late-night meeting Monday between U.S. and Israeli officials in Tel Aviv. "We will not fail," Carter vowed.

American Motors led the active list, up 1/4 to 7 1/2. The NYSE composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks rose .06 to 55.93. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gained 1.35 to 169.74.

Big Board volume was 13.09 million shares at noon, compared to 10.27 million shares at the same point in Monday's session.

Other active issues included Texas International, up 3/4 to 12 1/2; Exxon, up 3/4 to 52 1/2; and Allegheny Airlines, up 3/4 to 10 1/2.

J.C. Penney, which reported a sag in fourth-quarter profits, dipped 1/4 to 29 3/4.

Black Monday Follows Black Sunday

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

While six teams waited to see which clubs would draw byes into the National Invitation Tournament semifinals, six other clubs said their goodbyes to college basketball for the season.

Tournament officials were to gather in New York this morning to decide the dates, locations and matchups of the four teams which will play quarterfinal contests later this week.

Two squads from among Old Dominion, Alabama, Indiana, Ohio State, Purdue and Texas A&M, were to obtain byes into the semifinals.

One thing was certain after Monday night's action: the Atlantic Coast Conference is through for the year. A day after highly ranked North Carolina and Duke were upended in the NCAA tournament, Clemson, Maryland and Virginia were ousted from the NIT.

Thus five of the seven ACC teams entered postseason play, and by midnight Monday, all had been eliminated.

Old Dominion dropped Clemson 61-59 in double overtime, Ohio State topped Maryland 79-72 and Alabama trimmed Virginia 90-88 in NIT action Monday. Meanwhile, Indiana beat Alcorn State 73-69 to hand the mini-power its first loss of the year, Purdue beat Dayton 84-70, and Texas A&M trimmed Nevada-Reno 67-64.

"I'm not going to say the ACC is better or that the Big Ten is better than us," said Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell after the Buckeyes got 23 points from Kelvin Ransey to finish the Terrapins.

"No matter what I say, they're going to continue to say they have the best league in the

Pirates Add Two More Shutouts Vs. Huskies

By WOODY PEELE

East Carolina University's Pirates apparently didn't like the fact that Connecticut spoiled its home opener on Saturday afternoon, taking a 4-3 victory.

To make sure that it didn't happen again, they got three fine pitching performances on Sunday and Monday, and ended up with three shutout victories.

Yesterday, the Pirates came up with 5-0 and 6-0 decisions to go with the 4-0 win they claimed on Sunday.

The sweep of the last three games evened the Pirate record a 4-4 for the season.

"It's always good to win two and get back to .500," Coach Monte Little said. "That's three shutouts in a row, isn't it. We've played pretty good defense in these games."

Little added that the Pirates needed the victories to start believing in themselves again.

"We need a couple of strings of nine or ten victories in a row to have a good year. This would be a nice time to start one of those streaks."

Parker Davis hurled the first game of the day on Monday, twirling a fine two-hitter. He didn't allow a hit until the sixth inning, when Tally Nobles reached on a roller down the third base line that Jerry Carraway couldn't reach in time to make the play. Rich Tasi followed that up with a clean single to left in the seventh inning.

Prior to that, Davis had issued four walks, but thanks to two men caught stealing, Davis had faced only one over the minimum through the first five innings. Only once, in the sixth, did Connecticut reach as far as second base, and then the runner was cut down in a double play and Billy Best made a fine stab of a line drive to right center, then doubled Nobles off second.

In the second game, starter Bobby Patterson also did well. He pitched the first five innings, giving up a walk and two hits. Only one runner got as far as second on him, via a single and a wild pitch, with two away in the second. Reliever Earle Mobley, while tagged for three hits in the sixth, got help with a double play and also saw only one man reach second base. He retired the side in order in the seventh.

"Both starting pitchers did quite well," Little said. "Right now, we feel we have four or five capable of getting the job done for us. Our earned run average should be super now, below 1.00. We really haven't had a bad game pitched this season."

ECU's era did drop after the three shutouts, to 1.09, not quite what Little had hoped for.

"Now we just need to start hitting more," Little added. "The guys are swinging freer now, and that's going to help us."

In the first game, the Pirates collected eight hits, including two each by Billy Best, Macon Moye and Bob Neff. In the second, they got six, with no one getting more than one.

After a mild threat in the first inning of the opener, the Pirates came up with one in the second. With one down, Tim Hardison walked and moved up with Mike Sage also got a free pass. Then, after a fly out, Neff singled to left, scoring Hardison for a 1-0 lead.

The other three came in the third. Best led off with a single off the pitcher's glove and Butch Davis singled to left center when his shot caromed off the shortstop's wrist as he leaped to make a stab for the ball. Davis stole second and both runners scored on a double by Moye to right center. Raymie Styons singled in Moye and moved up on a balk. Hardison walked and with two away, Neff again singled, scoring Styons with the final run of the game.

The Pirates had a chance in the fourth, but left two men stranded.

Three runs came over in the first inning of the second game, getting the Pirates off to a good start. Best reached on a bunt single and David and Moye both walked to load them up. Max Raynor's single to right scored two, and a sacrifice fly by Hardison brought in Moye.

Two more came in the second. Jerry Carraway reached on an error and was sacrificed up. Mike Sorrell doubled down the line to score Carraway, and Sorrell took third on an out. He country and we in the Big Ten will say we're the best," offered Ohio State Coach Eldon Miller.

Ransey, who scored in double figures for the 61st consecutive game, ignored the mild controversy.

Speaking for the players, Ransey said: "We just think mostly that any team in Division I can beat any other team on a given night."

That's the way it turned out Monday.

Alcorn State, which had won 28 straight, fell to Indiana after a staging a late rally. The Hoosiers got 19 points from forward Mike Woodson, but the Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell after the Buckeyes got 23 points from Kelvin Ransey to finish the Terrapins.

Rampettes Bow In First Game

Rose High School's softball team opened the 1979 season yesterday, falling short in a last-inning rally to bow to Washington, 14-13.

Washington had scored four runs to take the lead in the top of the first and added four more in the second. Rose came back and scored once in the bottom of the first and two more in the third.

After another Washington run in the fifth, Rose got four more in its half of the frame to close the score to 9-7. Three more Rampettes runs in the sixth put Rose into a 10-9 lead.

But Washington came back with five in the top of the seventh to regain the lead and a three-run rally by Rose in the bottom of the inning fell one short.

Marge Melder was the winning pitcher, while Betty Tripp took the loss.

Robin Edwards led the Rose hitting with four, while Sherri Holmes had two, including a home run.

Rose travels to Kinston on Friday.

'For Real' Sycamores Top Poll Again

Midget League Champs

NEW YORK (AP) — It wasn't unanimous, but not everyone believes Indiana State is for real this year — except, of course, those teams who've had the misfortune to play against them.

The Sycamores, 30-0, retained the No.1 position in the final Associated Press college basketball poll for the 1978-79 season Tuesday, collecting 50 of 54 first-place votes and 1,072 points in balloting by a nationwide committee of sport writers and broadcasters. UCLA was a distant second.

"They've won 30 in a row," Virginia Tech Coach Charles Moir said after watching his Gobblers lose to Indiana State 86-69 last Sunday in a second-round NCAA Midwest Regional game. "They're for real."

UCLA, which beat a stubborn Pepperdine 76-71 in a second-round NCAA West Regional game last Sunday, collected two first-place votes and 997 points — 23 more than Michigan State, No.3 this week. The Spartans, who were ranked fourth last week when they clobbered Southland Conference champion Lamar 95-64 on Sunday in a Midwest Regional game, received the other two first-place votes.

The NCAA playoffs played havoc with the remainder of The AP Top Twenty, as five teams dropped out of the poll and the remainder played a wild game of musical chairs.

Notre Dame, which defeated Tennessee 73-67 in a second-round Midwest Regional game, moved up a notch to No.4 with 917 points.

Arkansas and up-and-coming DePaul also moved up as North Carolina, No.3 last week and Duke, No.6 a week ago, were upset in the NCAA tournament play last week. The Razorbacks, No.7 last week, jumped to fifth with 779 points, while the Blue Demons, unranked a month ago, climbed from No.8 to sixth with 732 points.

Louisiana State, with 662 points, edged Syracuse for the No.7 spot by a scant 5 points.

North Carolina, surprised by Pennsylvania 72-71 last weekend, fell to No.9 with 594 points while Marquette rounded out the Top 10 with 573 points.

Injury-plagued Duke, the pre-season favorite, headed the Second 10 with 484 points. The Blue Devils, who finished second to Kentucky in the NCAA playoffs last year, dropped a 80-78 decision to St. John's but played without starters Kenny Derrard and Bob Bender, both out with injuries.

San Francisco, No.19 last week, jumped to 12th followed by Louisville, Pennsylvania, Purdue, Oklahoma, St. John's, Rutgers, Toledo and Iowa. Penn, Oklahoma, St. John's, Rutgers and Toledo are all newcomers to the Top Twenty this week, replacing George-town, Temple, Texas, Detroit and Tennessee — all of whom lost in the NCAA playoffs last week.

Eastern Tickets For Sale—Cheap

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A week ago, says the manager of the Greensboro Coliseum, everybody had the fever — basketball fever.

Now it turns out that the fever was deadly. Two North Carolina teams, Duke and North Carolina, were defeated Sunday in Raleigh by out-of-state teams in the second round of the East Regional of the NCAA Basketball Tournament played in Raleigh.

The regional semifinals and final will be played at the Greensboro Coliseum this weekend.

And the question around the state is, "Want to buy some tickets for the games — cheap?"

James Oshust, manager of the coliseum, said that callers besieged the ticket office Monday wanting to return their tickets. "No chance," they were firmly told by the staff, which was well aware that almost no resale market exists for the $23 tickets.

Oshust says he'll be happy if the attendance for Friday's and Sunday's games reaches 10,000, or about two-thirds capacity.

St. John's beat Duke 80-78 and will meet Rutgers. Penn, which defeated North Carolina 72-71, plays Syracuse. The winners of those games will play next Sunday.

Fans in North Carolina are calling the defeats "Black Sunday."

And the mood in Greensboro was positively funeral Monday.

"We ought to put brass handles on the side of the building (coliseum) and line it with velvet," said Oshust.

He estimated that if Duke and North Carolina had advanced to the semifinals, Greensboro businesses would have been enriched by $1 million.

"But now we're looking at a loss of over 70 cents on every dollar that would have been generated by fans attending the tournament," Oshust said.

"A week ago, everybody had the fever — finals fever. You sure don't feel that now," he said.

Oshust said he didn't expect the four schools from the Northeast to sell their allotments of 750 tickets each gloomy prediction probably isn't true. Spokesmen for all the schools but Syracuse said they expected no trouble selling their share.

As for the other 11,000 tickets, which were sold to people banking on seeing at least one North Carolina team in action, it's anybody's guess. But Oshust and others say anyone expecting to turn a profit will probably be disappointed.

Girl Identifies Man Who Cut Off Her Hands

SAN DIEGO (AP) — "I looked at my hand and I couldn't see it, just the blood spurting out. I thought I was going to die," said 15-year-old Mary Vincent, tearfully pointing to Lawrence Singleton and saying he was the man who raped her, then hacked off her arms with an ax.

"I saw the ax swinging down at my left hand. I started to pull it away but he had hold of my hand," she testified Monday in Superior Court. "He chopped it three times. The blood was spurting all over."

Singleton, of Sparks, Nev., was arrested last October, nine days after the girl was found wandering nude, dazed and bloody with both arms chopped off below the elbows in a rural area near Modesto.

He was charged with attempted murder, mayhem, kidnapping, forcible rape, sodomy and oral copulation in the attack.

"Is the person who did those things to you in this courtroom?" asked Don Stahl, district attorney for Stanislaus County.

"He's right there," she said, raising her right arm and pointing the hook which replaces her severed hand at Singleton.

The girl described how she was tossed over a guard rail, stuffed into a culvert beneath a road and how she pretended to be dead, waiting for her assailant to leave.

Miss Vincent told the nine-man, three-woman jury she met Singleton while hitchhiking in Berkeley. He promised to take her to Los Angeles, she testified, but instead she fell asleep and "when I woke up, we were almost in Nevada."

As her parents listened, Miss Vincent described how the man she identified as Singleton drove to a canyon area near Interstate 5 where he began beating her and threw her into the back of his pickup truck.

"He grabbed a rope and tied my hands," she cried, dabbing her eyes with a tissue. "Then he turned me over, tore my blouse open."

She detailed how she was sexually assaulted, was forced to drink alcohol until she lost consciousness and later dragged from the truck and attacked with an ax.

"I was aware that I had blood all over me," she said, recalling the hours after she was left to die.

The girl said she slept until sunrise and then wandered back to the road to seek help. Two men in a red sports car saw her, got scared and drove off, after one said, "Let's get the hell out of here," she testified.

Judge Earl Maas Jr. is hearing the case after the trial was shifted to San Diego because of extensive pretrial publicity in northern California.

Would Import Mexican Gas

By KEVIN M. KELLEGHAN
Associated Press Writer
MEXICO CITY (AP) — Three U.S. companies are reported negotiating to import a billion cubic feet of Mexican natural gas daily at $2.6 million beginning in late 1980.

A foreign market analyst said the firms are Tenneco, El Paso Natural Gas and Texas Eastern. They will pay $2.60 per thousand cubic feet, the same price the Carter administration rejected two years ago, the source said.

"By then, $2.60 will be a bargain," said the analyst, who asked not to be identified by name.

Another source said the contract would not contain two clauses to which Energy Secretary James Schlesinger objected in previous negotiations. One would have let the price rise according to market conditions, and the other would have required U.S. companies to take a specified amount of gas no matter what the price was.

The contract now being negotiated will provide for a long-term supply at a stable price, the market analyst said.

"Even after the contract is signed, it still has to go to two federal regulatory commissions and might even go to court," he continued. "But President Carter can be expected to cut red tape and accelerate the deal through statute."

"The gas cannot be delivered until the end of 1980 because it will take that long to build and test a pipeline to Monterrey and then to the border. By then, $2.60 will be a bargain."

The United States is now paying $2.16 per thousand cubic feet for Canadian gas and $1.80 for Algerian gas. By late 1980, the source said, "Canada will have had two price revisions, but Mexico's $2.60 price will still be the highest in the world."

He said the cost to Mexico will be about 40 cents for the gas, 10 cents for transportation and 10 more to pay for the pipeline.

Expedition By Gold-Hunters

CAPE HATTERAS, N.C. (AP) — The steamship Central America set sail from Havana, Cuba, on Sept. 8, 1857 and headed north into a violent storm.

Four days later, on Sept. 12, she sank off Cape Hatteras, taking the 482 persons on board and a cargo of gold with her.

This summer, a group of treasure hunters plans to search for the gold, worth an estimated $30 million.

A Florida company, Expeditions Unlimited, will use scientific treasure-hunting equipment to try to recover the cargo. A spokesman for Expeditions Unlimited said the estimated value of the wreck and its cargo, worth $2 million when the ship sank, was based on research, which showed the ship carried gold and gold dust from the California gold rush and gold bullion and coins.

The Central America project is a private undertaking tentatively scheduled to begin July 1.

The gold is more than 100 feet below the ocean's surface in the Central America, which was a U.S. Mail steamship.

Expeditions Unlimited has long been involved in searching for treasures. Among the group's successful exploits are the excavation of a sacrificial well at Chichen Itza, Mexico, and the recovery of a 300-year-old Spanish galleon wreck which yielded more than 400 coins and 13 silver bars.

The Expeditions spokesman said the length of time spent excavating the Central America will "depend on what we find as we go along ... you never know. It depends on what the wreck is like. If the vessel is intact it's a lot easier."

The group will use a 136-foot boat for its daily excavation work.

Newspaper accounts at the time of the shipwreck say the passengers did whatever was necessary to keep the ship afloat — primarily bailing water — but to no avail.

Historians Advised To Fix 'Time Dimension'

ECU News Bureau
Hugh Wease, Associate Professor of History, and Joseph Congleton, Professor of Education, East Carolina University, presented the results of a research study at a recent conference of the North Carolina Council of Social Studies in Charlotte.

The study, concerned with how elementary and secondary school students respond to indefinite expressions of time, was conducted in selected schools in the Pitt County area during the fall of 1978. A representative group of teachers and professional historians were asked to respond for purposes of comparison.

Approximately 200 students from the fifth through the eleventh grades were asked to provide a definite date for 22 historic time expressions, normally used in social studies classes. Expressions such as "colonial period," "The beginning of modern times," "The old west," and "Middle Ages" were included.

It was found that high school students do not perceive these time expressions in the same way as teachers and professional historians. Although other studies have shown that children in the upper elementary and junior high schools can effectively be taught historic time concepts, fifth and eighth graders in this study showed little understanding of the time expressions.

The use of indefinite time expressions without proper instruction contributes little to the development of an understanding of chronology and a mature sense of time, the researchers said. For example, the expression: "The beginning of modern times" may take some students as far back as 1,000 years, while for other students the length of time is limited to the 20th century. For some high school students, the beginning of "modern times" does not go beyond their own life span.

The study further indicated that students can provide accurate meanings for such time concepts as "century" and "decade" but when asked to apply these meanings to such expressions as "previous decade" or the "next decade" or the "late 18th century" they are unable to do so.

Professors Wease and Congleton believe that if history is indeed a "time-conditioned" discipline, teachers run the risk of destroying its nature by ignoring the time dimension. Students need explicit instruction with their interpretation and use of time concepts.

Approximately 700 social studies teachers throughout North Carolina attended the two-day conference in Charlotte.

Expects Better Testing Scores

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The head of the state's Annual Testing Commission says he expects to see scores improve on this year's tests.

Dr. J. Frank Yeager, who is also superintendent of the Durham County schools, said an increased emphasis on high standards and the effects of the state's primary reading program should show results.

Students across the state in grades 1, 2, 3, 6, and 9 will take the tests between March 20 and April 9. The tests were first given last April to measure achievement in mathematics, reading and language arts.

"Overall, I felt good about what happened last year, but our biggest problem statewide is getting educators to use the data," Yeager said. "Most teacher-training and administrator-training programs offer very little training for using this test information in a productive way."

Scores for third-graders may be the best indicator that the tests are as reliable as educators claim, Yeager said.

He noted that the highest scores reported last year were from the first and second grades, but the scores tapered off in the third grade.

"If the third grades hold up — if they are consistent with last year's second-grade scores — then clearly we'll have something more significant to go on," Yeager said.

"We'll be looking at the third-graders very carefully, and we may find that something is happening in early childhood education to make a difference in the students' achievement," he said.

Some educators, including Yeager, have speculated that because the first-and second-

Gets Results

BERLIN, Vt. (AP) — Some impromptu poetry brought quick relief from paving problems for an anonymous central Vermont motorist.

Taking a cue from the Burma-Shave signs that once graced the nation's highways, the poet — identified only as "Need-a-Pave" — tacked this bit of doggerel on trees along ice-covered Vine Street in Berlin:

"This is the bottom of Hazard Hill,

"Try and climb it if you will.

"And if your wheels slide off the track,

"Floor that sucker and don't look back."

A short while later, a town highway truck appeared on the scene to sand and grade the roadway.

Park Status Foes 'Win'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yancey County residents opposed to making Mt. Mitchell a national park have succeeded in their opposition.

Rep. Lamar Gudger, D-N.C., announced Monday that the Department of Interior has dropped its consideration of Mt. Mitchell, the state's loftiest peak, for national park status.

When Congress directed the National Park Service in 1975 to make a feasibility study of certain areas for inclusion in the National Park system, Mt. Mitchell was one of the sites being considered. There was a lot of opposition to the proposal among Yancey County residents who owned year-round homes, stores and other property on the Yancey County side of the mountain.

"I conducted public meetings and issued questionnaires on this and came to the conclusion that general sentiment in the Mt. Mitchell area did not favor making a national park of this historic state park and its vicinity," Gudger said.

He said he was advised by Howard Lee, state secretary of Natural Resources and Community Development, that "under no circumstances would North Carolina approve transfer of its state park into the national park system."

Gudger recommended against including Mt. Mitchell in the system.

Attended Band Clinic

Twenty-one students of the Aycock Junior High School Band attended the Junior High School Band Clinic in Wilson, accompanied by band director James E. Rodgers.

Alayna Keller, ninth grade student, was winner in the literary arts contest sponsored by the Greenville Woman's Club. She was also winner of the District Division Contest for the Woman's Club of North Carolina. Her work will be entered in the state contest.

In another literary event, Mrs. Anna Cartner's Reading Classes are competing in the annual Creative Poetry Writing Contest. Poems will be compiled into a booklet to be presented to the library.

Sonya Morris and Gordon Walker will appear on WOOW Radio Station on behalf of the Mental Health Program, "Listen," with John Maye, Durg and Alcohol Educator. The program is to be aired at 8 a.m. Sunday, March 18.

Other recent and future activities of Aycock students is that Mrs. Lyles Russell will demonstrate basket weaving in the library on March 15; and the school's newspaper, "Jaguar Journal," will go on sale March 20.

There can be too much science in bridge. In this hand from the Pan American Championships held in Venezuela, the young East West pair, Ronnie Rubin and Neil Silverman, bid to a reasonable slam. Unfortunately, they described their hands to each other so well that they pinpointed the killing lead.

South started out with only one story to tell. He had a good seven-card spade suit, and his first three bids said so. Since North had promised at least two spades with his no-trump rebid, his bid of four clubs was obviously a cue-bid in support of spades.

That launched a cue-bidding sequence in which both players showed their first- and second-round controls. When South discovered that all suits were controlled, he opted for the spade slam.

Unfortunately for declarer, West had also been paying careful attention to the auction. He heard the heart control bid at his left, and since he was looking at the ace, he knew that North had to be showing the king — it couldn't be a singleton since North's no-trump rebid had promised a balanced hand.

The auction was no sooner over than West had his opening lead ready — a low heart. It was a devilish attack, and in declarer's place we would probably have done exactly what he did — played low under dummy. After all, who underleads an ace against a slam?

East played the queen and was astonished when that held the trick. However, he was not too stunned to forget to return a heart, and West's ace had the hand beaten before declarer could even get started.

Surgeon General Backs Children's TV Rules

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. surgeon general today backed the Federal Trade Commission in considering the regulation of television advertising aimed at children who consume sugary food.

Dr. Julius B. Richmond said sugar consumption is "unquestionably" a cause of dental cavities, the leading chronic disease of American children.

His testimony at a hearing on the proposed FTC regulation differed with earlier statements by representatives of industries that oppose controls on the estimated $600 million a year in children's TV advertising.

"Tooth decay is a preventable disease. Dietary modification — specifically reducing the amount and frequency of sugar consumption — is one of the most effective measures an individual can take towards prevention" of cavities, Richmond said in prepared testimony.

He said "appropriate FTC regulation" of the advertising of sugared products aimed at children is consistent with the Public Health Service's efforts to reduce cavities.

He said TV advertising of sugary foods "is among those factors which shape the nutritional habits of young children. I seriously question the wisdom of permitting a steady stream of advertising promoting consumption of sugared foods to children who are too young to make informed judgments about risks to their health."

The regulation officially proposed last year by the FTC would limit television advertising aimed at children. Several alternatives were proposed to do this, the most drastic being a ban on commercials to those deemed too young to understand they were watching an ad. Another alternative would restrict commercials promoting sugary foods.

Dr. Richmond said, "I heartily endorse FTC consideration of these issues. ... I think we should consider seriously the need for government intervention to protect the very young from unfair commercial exploitation."

His testimony differs with that of Robert W. Harkins, vice president of the Grocery Manufacturers of America, who said last week, "Television does not cause cavities, directly or indirectly. There is absolutely no correlation between the frequency or amount of advertising for any product or product group and the number of cavities experienced by children."

A report on the hearings, to be written by hearing officer Morton Needleman, will be considered by the commissioners before any regulation is issued.

HONORED — Actor-author Peter Ustinov, new winner of the "Noble Prize" from the Paris-based Association for the Promotion of Humor in International Affairs, says there is plenty to laugh at in the field these days. The problem according to the author of "Dear Me" and other books of wit, is that so few people recognize the humor. (AP Laserphoto)

Marvin Denies Intent To Share

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Lee Marvin, defending himself in a landmark $1.8 million lawsuit, contends he never meant to share his life or property with his former live-in lover, Michelle Triola Marvin.

black holes, curved space, relativity — a breeze. Well, not a breeze. But not in comprehensible sciencebabble, either.

Einstein, the gentle, rumpled genius whose theories changed our notions of nature, would have approved.

Tuesday's "Nova" episode focuses on Einstein's life, using rare photographs and archives footage to create a picture of Einstein as a revolutionary thinker, passionate pacifist and a rebel against standardized ideas who quietly advanced theories scientists are just now proving.

Einstein's beginnings never suggested even the shadow of what he was to become. He couldn't speak until he was 3 years old. He was a poor student. He failed his college-level entrance exams. He was a clerk in a patent office tooling around with the farfetched notions of others when he came upon one of his own — the special theory of relativity.

Later, we're shown his general theory of relativity, and the sad irony of Einstein's life. It is this theory that produced the equation of matter and energy, and led to the development of the atom bomb.

In "Einstein's Universe," tonight, Peter Ustinov assumes the role of the layman seeking to understand Einstein's theories. If ever the nether reaches of Einstein's wonderful imaginings can be understood by just plain folk, here it is.

It is an entertaining lesson, using animation, curved pool tables and little dramatic bits to illustrate Einstein's abstract theories. To explain the special theory of relativity, for example, Ustinov takes a trip to the center of a black hole, returning to Earth only to discover he's hardly aged at all.

A nifty illustration of Einstein's theory regarding the relationships between matter, energy, time and the speed of light.

Well, it's nice to meet you, Mr. Einstein. And happy birthday.

Gospel Group Giving Program

WINTERVILLE — The Heaven Bound gospel group will present a program of music and preaching at the Winterville Free Will Baptist Church Friday at 7:30 p.m.

Pastor Bobby Futrell and advisor Ron Braxton extend an invitation to the public to attend.

The program is being sponsored by The Proclaimers and admission is free.

The 55-year-old Marvin concludes his testimony today as the star witness for the defense and then faces attorney Marvin Mitchelson's efforts to shake his story.

Miss Marvin, 46, who lived with the film star for six years, claims she should receive half the assets he accumulated during that time — from 1964 to 1970. The assets are estimated at $3.6 million.

A portion of her claim seeks payment for such services as homemaker, companion and personal adviser.

But Marvin, in his testimony Friday, tried to show that Miss Marvin spent little time with him and that when they traveled, homemaking was done by maids and Miss Marvin hardly ever cooked.

The former showgirl, who says she is a gourmet cook, was visibly angered by Marvin's comments. After listening to his testimony, Miss Marvin told reporters bitterly: "I should have slapped his face a long time ago."

Marvin was solemn as he testified about the affair which ended nine years ago on the beach at Malibu. He spoke of arguments with Miss Marvin, of times that were "tolerable," but never mentioned romance or happy days.

What broke up the love affair? Marvin said he and Miss Marvin argued constantly about his close friendships with stuntmen and crew members on his movies.

"She disapproved of the men I spent my time with and admired," he said.

Superior Court Judge Arthur Marshall has estimated that testimony and final arguments will conclude March 28.

Einstein's Birthplace Is Observing Anniversary

EINSTEIN HONORED — Dr. Hans Eugen Sprecker, director of the Ulm (West Germany) archives, points to official posters advertising a centennial exhibition of pictures and documents at Albert Einstein's birthplace. (AP Laserphoto)

By DAVID MINTHORN
Associated Press Writer
ULM, West Germany (AP) — They haven't put up a memorial yet at Albert Einstein's birthplace in Ulm, but it and other German cities are not neglecting the 100th anniversary of his birth. A major theme is remorse about Nazi persecution of Einstein and other Jews.

"For us it is a point of honor," said Lord Mayor Hans Renscher of Ulm. "Einstein was born here. His family came from this region. We deeply regret that Einsteinstrasse was renamed by the Nazis."

Einstein, who would have been 100 this Wednesday, revolutionized physics with his Theory of Relativity decades before he fled the Nazis. Now he is being honored not only by Ulm, but by Munich, where he was educated, and in Berlin, where he was a professor.

West German President Walter Scheel, at ceremonies in West Berlin, noted that Einstein would not return to Germany after the war because "he didn't think the German people were able to live in freedom."

"We have proven the opposite," said Scheel. "This is a free country" — one he says is entitled to honor the late scientist.

East Germany, too, has commemorated Einstein's birth. Prime Minister Willi Stoph said Einstein was not a Marxist, but was "a great humanist whose work and personality served humanity and peace."

In Ulm, a 1,100-year old town of half-timbered homes and narrow, cobbled streets on the Danube River, Einstein is the most famous native. In 1929, he wrote to an Ulm townsman:

"The town of one's birth clings to one's life as something equally unique as the origin of one's own mother. We owe part of our being to our birthplace. Thus do I regard Ulm with thankfulness, because it combines noble artistic tradition with an unpretentious and healthy character."

Then came the Nazis. A decree issued here in 1934 stripped Einstein of his German citizenship, and Einsteinstrasse — a street that had been named in his honor after he won the 1921 Nobel Prize for physics — was renamed Fichtestrasse after a 19th-century German nationalist.

But that was minor compared with the destruction of Ulm's 500-member Jewish community. The synagogue was burned in 1938 and at least 180 Jews, including four of Einstein's relatives, were dragged away to death camps.

An "Einstein and Ulm" exhibit opened Saturday, with 800 persons at the ceremony. The mayor announced a scholarship to go to a Jewish graduate student from a foreign country for study at Ulm University.

Although Einstein refused the city's offer of honorary citizenship after the war, Ulm officials say he reached a sort of reconciliation with his hometown. Archive Director Hans Eugen Specker cites letters he wrote to Ulm in 1949 and 1954 thanking it for birthday greetings.

But Alfred Moos, Einstein's 65-year-old cousin who lives in Ulm, is skeptical. "He had very ambiguous feelings about Germany. He didn't want to insult anyone," Moos said. "I'm convinced Einstein himself would never have given his permission for this exhibit."

Moos said the tributes fail to mention that Einstein "was a pacifist and a Zionist who even helped Communists who were persecuted after World War I. He helped dozens of people immigrate to the United States (fleeing the Nazis) by writing immigration affidavits."

Einstein was born in Ulm on March 14, 1879, and spent only the first 15 months of his life here. His family moved to Munich when his father's business failed in Ulm.

Nothing For Something

LOVELAND, Colo. (AP) — And now, for those who appreciate the value of nothing: the Nothing Card.

It is honored everywhere, comes with a lifetime guarantee, a portrait of Millard Fillmore and is good for absolutely nothing.

"Take this card and enough cash into any store and you can buy whatever you want," says Bryan Sennett.

Sennett, along with B.J. Clark and Jan Kieser, are founders of the Nothing Co., which is licensed to sell Nothing Cards.

"We're a basic honest American corporation," said Ms. Clark. "We have nothing to offer."

Millard Fillmore was a natural for the front, Ms. Clark explained. Besides being the only president to accomplish absolutely nothing, she said, "He even ran on the Know-Nothing ticket."

Each card really is something: embossed with the owner's name, a space on the back for the owner's signature and a number that's all your own.

But the card doesn't cost "nothing." The charge is $5.

Bogue Inlet Point Will Keep No Parking Rule

EMERALD ISLE, N.C. (AP) — No parking will remain the rule at Bogue Inlet Point, according to officials.

The point is a popular spot for visitors, but the nearest public parking is five miles away at the Bogue Inlet Fishing Pier.

Visitors who want to park closer have been leaving their cars on streets in a neighborhood near the point, bringing complaints from residents. A town ordinance also prohibits parking at the point.

Recently, a majority of Emerald Isle's five-member town board voted to cancel a grant from the state Coastal Resources Commission to study ways to resolve the conflict over parking and the possibility of building at least one public lot at the point.

The board also voted to remove board member Richard

Smith from his post as police commissioner in an apparent move to get strict enforcement of the no-parking ordinance.

Smith and Mayor Ronnie Watson favor creating public parking at the point.

J.D. Baker, one of the majority, said the board was misled about the study when they voted last year to accept the grant.

The parking lot at the fishing pier is owned by board member Joe Stanley, another of those voting against more parking at the point. Another parking lot is owned by Tom Singleton, the third member of the majority voting to remove Smith and reject the grant.

Smith was not present at the special meeting Friday night when he was replaced as police commissioner by Baker. The three voting for the change said their action was a simple reorganization of the board.

Smith appeared at the regular board meeting Saturday and demanded to know the reason for his removal as police commissioner. Stanley replied, "I wanted a change, and I will make no further comment."

Radical Young Mayor's Term Approaching End

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer
MADISON, Wis. (AP) — When he walks out of the office for the last time, he will take with him the sign on the door that reads, "Hizzoner da Mare."

Paul Soglin, who went from being an antiwar activist at odds with police to being mayor of this city of 170,000, is leaving office after six years.

Soglin will turn 34 five days after his third term expires April 17. He was the youngest person ever elected mayor of a city of this size when he first took office in 1973.

He had been an antiwar activist of the 1960s; police clubbed him, arrested him and once cut his hair after a street demonstration.

Yet while still a law student, Soglin developed a solid reputation as alderman for the downtown area dominated by the University of Wisconsin campus.

By the time he announced 15 months ago that he would not seek re-election, Soglin's political base also encompassed both the blue-collar East Side and the liberal Democratic West Side.

"I think things have gone really well the last six years," he said in an interview. "There's nothing I would do differently."

Things he did included presenting the key to the city to Fidel Castro on one of his three trips to Cuba, stridently supporting labor groups, and presiding over last Halloween's "City Council meeting in a 'lame duck' costume of feathers and crutches.

What Soglin calls his "radical perspective" has not been universally accepted, however, particularly by conservatives, who criticize him for not enforcing sex-for-sale ordinances, and government traditionalists, who say he used the power of his office too strongly in some areas, such as education.

Soglin prefers to talk about what he sees as his legacy for this city: one of the best public transit systems in the nation, a downtown mall and civic center project, bureaucratic reorganization, expanded and more efficient human services programs and a "triple-A" municipal bond rating.

Prodded, he becomes reflective on his role as a symbol of his generation and his country.

"During the first week in office in 1973, and I've had the feeling ever since, I've had the responsibility that those of us who came out of the antiwar movement could be competent and administer important programs," Soglin said.

Overseeing a $60 million annual city budget and taking a personal role in everything from welfare to bike paths, Soglin is confident he is not a poor representative of his generation.

"I know I haven't been a liability," he said, adding that while most protesters have exchanged jeans and long hair for three-piece suits and razor cuts, their radical perspective is intact.

"We haven't substantially changed our politics," he said. "What's changed is our ability to communicate. We've become more effective, and that gives us greater freedom to make changes."

Compromise, he said, no longer means "selling out."

"There was always a need to compromise, but now where compromise is called for, I'm in a position where very little has to be given up. Eight years ago compromise meant giving up the shop," Soglin said.

Is this new communication the result of the maturing of his angry generation or a new tolerant attitude on the part of the rest of the nation?

"A bit of both," a pensive Soglin replied. "The country is more accepting in terms of listening to us. And we've demonstrated, through time, our competence."

In recent years, he said, voters have come to look at the competence a candidate inspires rather than right-or-left stances.

Soglin, however, said he is frightened by the "new politics" of stylized, one-issue or no-issue campaigns.

"When you get an attractive candidate with little or no experience, who doesn't state a position on the issues, you can end up with a very dangerous situation," Soglin said.

Ironically, neither candidate seeking Soglin's job in the April 3 election has any previous elected experience. Former Soglin aide James Rowen, vowing to carry on Soglin's programs, is an underdog to university administrator Joel Skornicka.

"For me," Soglin said, "the scariest thing is not knowing in an unforeseen crisis what an elected official will do."

Yet barely a month before voluntary unemployment, Soglin himself has no definite plans. "I want to write," he said. "I may do some consulting or practice law. I want to maneuver myself into a position where I have the flexibility to write."

But there was more behind his decision to leave politics: "It's mostly just to be free. I don't mind working 60-70 hours a week, but I want to have more control over my time."

Soglin used to set up a card table on the street and make notes of citizens' comments and complaints. But in the last year, since his divorce from his wife of nine years, he has become more private.

"I'm enjoying it," he said. "It reaches the point where the attention, while in many cases flattering, doesn't allow you to become free of the responsibility of the office."

He said he will not miss the innumerable meetings or the frustrations of working with ill-prepared politicians, but he will miss behind-the-scenes planning and desk work.

He has been mentioned for Congress, lieutenant governor, a federal job and perhaps someday the ambassadorship to Cuba, but Soglin said any political future depends on how well he adjusts to being a private citizen for the first time in his adult life.

"I don't know how well I'll stay out of it," he said, "how much I'll miss it."
