

Mideast Peace Will Cost U.S. $5 Billion; Said 'Cheap'

By BROOKS JACKSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter estimates an Egyptian-Israeli treaty will cost American taxpayers about $5 billion. Key members of Congress say that's a small price to pay for peace. Both Republicans and Democrats said Wednesday they foresee little trouble in approving new military and economic aid requests associated with the treaty. Carter, who planned to begin a long weekend at Camp David today, briefed about 50 members of the Senate and House on his peace mission Wednesday at the White House. Afterward, Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., said, "We are talking about something in the range of four to five billion dollars" in U.S. aid over the next three or four years. Carter was deliberately vague in his estimates to the legislators, stressing that costs could go up if, for example, oil-rich Saudi Arabia withdraws its military aid to Egypt to punish it for signing a treaty with Israel. Military aid under the treaty is now estimated to cost the United States about $4 billion, divided about equally between Israel and Egypt. There would be an additional $1 billion in economic aid to bolster Egypt's relatively backward economy. "I think it's worth it,"

Baker said. "I think if this is a fair estimate of cost it's a good buy." One participant in the briefing, who requested anonymity, said Congress would not be asked to approve the bulk of the aid package until 1981 and 1982. Baker and others said the United States made neither a commitment to a defense treaty with Israel nor a commitment to use U.S. forces to guarantee that the two nations abide by the treaty. The Israeli Cabinet approved key sections of the treaty Wednesday and will meet Sunday to vote on the pact as a whole. It must still win approval from the Israeli Parliament, the Knesset, but Israeli political analysts said that was a foregone conclusion. There were indications the treaty could be signed as early as next week. Although refusing to discuss cost figures, Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., said the additional aid requests stand "an excellent chance of being approved by Congress."

House Majority Leader James Wright, D-Texas, said Carter's figures given "were very imprecise," but added that, "within the range that he discussed, for peace on earth, we shouldn't hesitate a minute." Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., who put the cost at about $4 billion, said, "This is a relatively small price to pay for peace."

Heavier Oil Shortage Is Feared Confronting U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States was reported today to be threatened with a much heavier shortage of oil imports than that caused by the Iranian crisis because of a change in the way oil companies allocate world supplies. The report by The New York Times quoted Energy Secretary James R.

Schlesinger as predicting the U.S. import shortage would creep upward from the loss of about 500,000 barrels daily to 800,000 barrels a day under the new distribution formula. The newspaper quoted unnamed Carter administration and industry officials as attributing the expected growing gap between U.S. petroleum supplies and demand to a decision by international oil companies to distribute available oil on the basis of how much a nation normally consumes, rather than how much it imports. The Times said this new allocation formula means the U.S. share of the world oil supply shortage would rise from 25 percent to 40 percent. Because the United States produces about half the oil it consumes, and imports the rest, it would have its imports reduced more sharply to make its shortage commensurate with that of other importing nations that have no domestic oil supply, the Times said. Meanwhile, the General Accounting Office, the congressional watchdog

New Lights For Stadium

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer
A repair project to increase the intensity of light level at Guy Smith Stadium was approved by members of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission Wednesday night. Action to improve the below-standard night lighting at the field will be achieved primarily through replacement of burned out lights with standard light bulbs. This type of light is priced at $11 for each replacement. Earlier, the commission had considered the possibility of using a new higher intensity, longer-lasting light bulb; these, however, are priced at $37 each and sufficient funds cannot be found within the current budget to use the higher priced items exclusively. Commissioners directed Recreation and Parks Director Boyd Lee to use some of the new type bulbs interspersed with standard type bulbs, particularly in the infield area. Lee said he estimated replacements sufficient to make the field safe for this season would run somewhere in the vicinity of $1,500, as compared to $4,000 it would take if only the new higher intensity bulbs were used. Replacement of the lighting system at Guy Smith, Lee reported, had been accepted by the City Council as the number one priority item to be allocated the department under Community Development funds. Since, however, even if HUD approves the lighting item, which has recently been sent to Atlanta headquarters along with the Community Development funds package, it would be after July 1 before funds would be available for the project. At last month's meeting, the commission approved and recommended to the City Council three priority items — the Guy Smith lighting; purchase of additional recreation land at Greenfield Terrace; and development of a park area in the Meadowbrook area to be funded through Community Development funds. The council, Lee reported, did not approve purchase of additional land at Greenfield Terrace as a priority item, but did approve a park develop-

Marketing Rules Revised

WASHINGTON (AP) — Changes aimed at tightening flue-cured and burley tobacco marketing quota programs have been announced by the Agriculture Department, which says they are aimed at discouraging farmers from overproduction. Proposals for the changes were announced on Feb. 14. They were open to comment until the end of the month. Beginning with this year's crops of burley and flue-cured, marketing agents of farmers no longer will be permitted to store carryover tobacco, Ray Fitzgerald, administrator of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, announced Wednesday. He said the previous carryover provision "may have stimulated excess tobacco production and could have some effect on the price support program." Under another major change, flue-cured producers will be allowed to plant up to 110 percent of their effective allotments and get price supports if they agree not to harvest the four lower leaves from their tobacco plants. Previously, tobacco farmers were allowed 120 percent of their allotments under the same agreement on the lower leaves, which are of lower quality. Other changes adopted by the Agriculture Department for both burley and flue-cured, or for one of the two as noted, included: —Producers of burley and flue-cured will be required to file reports of tobacco on hand at the end of the marketing season. —Supplemental reports will be required from dealers and buyers that reflect tobacco acquired by them and not previously reported in seasonal reports, due Feb. 1 for flue-cured and April 1 for burley. —May 1 will be the final date to file requests for lease and transfer of flue-cured farm marketing quotas, except when late filing is beyond a producer's control. Lease and transfer may be approved after June 14, provided certain specified conditions are met. —Producers who plant flue-cured tobacco in excess of their farm acreage allotments will not be eligible to lease and transfer quotas after June 14. —With some exceptions, a farm may not transfer a burley quota both to the farm and from it in the same year.

HEW Fails Court Deadline On UNC Deregulation Decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — The deadline for action on North Carolina's college desegregation plan slipped by Wednesday without the Department of Health, Education and Welfare taking action, and the university system's president said he expects the UNC Board of Governors to decide Friday whether there is any point in continuing negotiations.

HEW officials declined comment on whether they would accept North Carolina's revised plan for eliminating vestiges of segregation in its 16 public universities. Wednesday was the court-ordered deadline for HEW to accept or reject the plan North Carolina submitted 90 days ago. North Carolina is the last of six southern states still negotiating with HEW over an acceptable plan. Georgia, another state that was involved in long-running negotiations with HEW, came to terms with the federal agency on Feb. 9, several days after its 90-day deadline had elapsed. Government sources said the decision to delay action on UNC's plan was made to allow university officials at least 24 hours to give some signal that they were prepared to move toward a negotiated settlement. The university system could lose about $89 million a year in federal funds if an agreement is not reached. Meanwhile, the Associated Press learned that Tatel and system president William Friday met at an undisclosed location in North Carolina on Tuesday to try to reach a last-minute agreement. Aides to Tatel and Friday refused to discuss the meeting or indicate whether any progress toward a settlement was made.

Student Loans Collection At ECU 'Good'

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
Officials at East Carolina University over the years have consistently taken steps to collect on loans to students here.

Grace Cannon, a spokesman for ECU's student loan office explained. "If we do not hear from a student in six months, we send the account to the Attorney General."

"That's why we have the lowest uncollected rate in the state," Vice-chancellor for Business Affairs C. G. Moore said today. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare a week ago released, for the first time, a list of student loan default rates for some 4,500 post-secondary institutions, saying the worst rates are among trade school and community college programs, although the bulk of the $702 million in defaulted loans is owed by students who attended four-year colleges and universities.

The Attorney General's office then will write to the student involved and if no response is forthcoming, a complaint is filed. After another waiting period, a judgment is filed with the Clerk of Court in an effort to recover the money. According to Ms. Cannon, since the student loan program began in 1957, more than $6.68 million has been loaned to some 7,600 individuals. As of June 30, 1978, some $3.18 million was outstanding, meaning some 3,659 loans were fully retired and some 3,941 were still active.

As of June 30, 1978, according to Ms. Cannon, only 83 accounts, involving $63,132 were delinquent and involved in legal proceedings. The average student loan, she noted, runs between $1,000 and $1,500.

As an illustration of the ECU efforts, judgments were filed with the Pitt County Clerk of Superior Court March 1 against 17 individuals seeking to recover $11,756.10. The individual amounts ranged from a low of $27, to a high of $1,544.55.

Sadat's Cabinet Okays Mideast Peace Terms

By The Associated Press
The Egyptian Cabinet today approved the proposed Egypt-Israel treaty, but, as a peace pact neared, violence mounted on the West Bank of the Jordan River where Israeli troops killed two Arab student protesters in the week's bloodiest clash. In Israel, Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan disclosed that under terms of the compromise engineered by President Carter Egypt will take early control of the Sinai capital of El Arish, a Dayan spokesman said. The Israeli minister also reportedly disclosed that Egypt has demanded further "goodwill gestures" from Israel, but for now has dropped its demand that Egyptian officers be stationed in the Gaza Strip to oversee autonomy. In Cairo, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat said he thinks "we have achieved peace thanks to Jimmy" and he praised President Carter for his "marvelous" job of peacemaking. The Egyptian Cabinet's approval of the treaty had been expected. Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil announced the 32-member body had voted unanimously in favor of it after a four-hour debate. The Egyptian Parliament's approval is considered certain. The Israeli Cabinet is expected to endorse the full treaty Sunday, and the Israeli Parliament soon afterward. In announcing the Cabinet approval today, Khalil said he hoped that soon "the past enmity between the two nations will be something of a memory." But he added, "The Palestinian question can never be ignored." Palestinians in Israeli-occupied territories fear that their chances for statehood will be eclipsed by the proposed treaty. Arab protesters demonstrated today in Halhoul and five other towns in the occupied West Bank. The military command said Israeli troops opened fire when "a group of soldiers and civilians was caught in a violent outburst by hundreds of students on the main road in Halhoul," 20 miles south of Jerusalem.

Catalyst Gives Women Boost Up Career Ladder

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — In the 17 years since Felice Schwartz founded Catalyst, the organization's focus has shifted from counseling women re-entering the work force to expanding the career options of women already working.

But its goal has remained constant: to see women in productive careers, to the benefit of themselves, of their families, of industry and of society.

"Our goal has always been one responsive to the needs of women, whatever the period," said Ms. Schwartz, president of the national non-profit organization that helps women choose, launch and advance their careers. "The emphasis has changed by virtue of the needs of women changing."

She started Catalyst in 1962 with the help of five college presidents — "The only people who tended to be interested in careers of women then were college presidents who had educated them" — and in its early years it concentrated on persuading employers that they would get "the cream of people" if they would accept women as part-time workers. "I happened to be in the class of '45," said Ms. Schwartz, 54, a graduate of Smith College, "the year in which the revolting concept of cohesiveness was discovered, the idea of going to the suburbs and doing all those terrible things we were conditioned to do."

As this isolated group of upper-middle-class women saw their children grow up and leave, they became frustrated and angry, groping for something useful to do, she adds.

"I'm not going for a minute to deprecate the experience of raising kids," says Ms. Schwartz, who has three grown children. "It's rewarding, but not as a life work. I had spent eight years with my kids exclusively and had time to think about what I wanted to do next."

"My peers were anxious about what they would do, wanting to work but also to keep a foot in the door at home. Catalyst's concern in the early years was to see whether what they wanted was possible and to try to help them get it."

As women began having fewer children, and returned to work when the youngest went to nursery school instead of after a 20-year hiatus, thus lessening the re-entry problem, the group's emphasis shifted to helping the woman already working.

"We started dealing with the socialization gap," Ms. Schwartz explained. "Woman has been a nurturer, not programmed to the qualities business needs: aggression, concern with the bottom line."

"It will take three generations to change: the first generation, the vanguard, breaking through; the second generation, they're beginning to move up the corporation ladder but haven't had a role model; the third generation, daughters of career women. By then it will be truly accepted that women will have careers."

At the start, the average age of women helped by Catalyst was 45, but now it is reaching girls as young as 14, using filmstrips and publications to make even the high-school student aware that she can have a career, and to expose her to the choices.

"Because of legislative pressure, the careers previously most closed to women are most open now, since they have the greatest deficit to make up," Ms. Schwartz points out.

Educational and career counseling, among other services, are offered by Catalyst's 200 local resource centers over the country. Its publications include manuals on resume preparation and how to conduct an interview and a series on career opportunities, a list of which can be obtained from the organization's headquarters at 14 East 60th St. New York, N.Y. 10022.

"The message has to filter out larger and stronger and further than it has to college women, who are not planning for a career as males are," Ms. Schwartz declares. "We're trying to tell them, 'the voice in the back of your head that says someone will take care of you is a deceptive one. (If you're divorced) where are you at 30 with one or two children and no career plans?'"

The Diet Workshop recently came up with a survey that didn't hold too many surprises. The most hated food among dieters is liver.

Anybody's. Personally, I don't like to eat anything that moves when I cook it, excites the dog, or inflates on impact with your teeth.

I used to go to a weight-control group that preached the gospel of liver. I think the slogan they used was "Drink a liver malt with someone you love." We all tried to disguise liver by working our quota of it into other parts of the diet. I did everything but put a dress on mine. It didn't help.

Liver is not like any other food I know. It's the kind that when you drop it, you find yourself apologizing to it. I have met a few pro-liver people in my time, although I try not to cultivate them. They are usually people who sit around and make ridiculous statements like, "Can you get any rhubarb in this town?" or "I didn't like eels either until I tried them in butter."

They will regale you for hours on their favorite methods of cooking liver and what you have to do to kill the taste, but I've never converted.

Even in my fantasies, I can't see Sophia Loren, Jaclyn Smith or Cheryl Tiegs having liver breath — even for hipbones.

I've done a lot of compromis-

With married women's pursuing serious careers, Ms. Schwartz sees "a greater change in society than anything since the industrial revolution. We are on the verge of a tremendous upheaval in values and modes of operation. The couple has to perceive itself as one in which the career of each is equally important, crossing boundaries of salary and status."

FELICE SCHWARTZ
"They will progress their careers by taking steps that serve their aggregate need, making a move if the total package is better, regardless if one stands still and the other moves forward."

"There must be sharing up and down the line, not assuming it's the woman who is responsible for home and children. Nobody sacrifices, and the total best interest of the family is served: both have careers; both have children; the children have two parents."

Society Induction Is Announced

The East Carolina University chapter of Sigma Theta Tau National Honorary Nursing Society will hold its annual induction of new members Saturday.

The ceremony, which will be held in the Carol G. Belk Building on the ECU campus, will begin at 2 p. m. Dr. Thomas B. Brewer, ECU Chancellor, will be the speaker. Some 27 undergraduates, graduate students and School of Nursing faculty will be inducted.

These new members will include Mohammed A. Ahad, Judy E. Barnes, Doris A. Bell, Helen W. Brinson, Glenda F. Carroll, Cathy Critchfield, Rhonda C. Crutchfield, Anita J. Davis, Carol L. Harreid, Darlene F. Hubson, Vida K. Jackson, Jo Anne Johnson, Sussan J. Kallini, Holly M. Karonis, Kathleen J. Kasper, Cheryl L. Knight, Wanda Sue Oaks, Kathleen M. Pierce, Christina G. Priestly, Jennifer L. Rayford, Pamela J. Ryan, Laurel Shackelford, Robin C. Smith, Edna M. Stokes, Karen L. Weber, Margaret E. Wells, and Sarah L. York.

The public is welcome.

Birthday Dinner Held

The Rev. Joseph Randolph Person was honored at a birthday dinner Saturday night at the home of the Rev. and Mrs. James Harris.

Members of the Pastor's Aid Club of the St. John Missionary Baptist Church, Falkland, gave the dinner.

The program was presented by the Rev. Harris, the Rev. Farney Moore, the Rev. Leroy Person, the Rev. H. L. Hill, the Rev. Robert Bynum and the Rev. Charles Dickens. Carrie Williams expressed appreciation from the church and invocation was said by the Rev. Moore. Arrangements of spring flowers decorated the tables. Special guests included a group from Craven Corner Church, Havelock, Mrs. Minnie Williams, Mrs. Annie Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Williams, Mrs. Juanita Burnett, Mrs. Luesta Ennis, Mr. and Mrs. Donnie Phillips and Mrs. Annie B. Jefferson.

A Life In Need Of A Hope-Buoy

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am 40 and my life is worth absolutely nothing. This is not just middle-age depression. I've been this way all my life. I have failed in every relationship I've ever had, beginning with my family while growing up.

I was a complete failure as a wife, too. (I cannot have children, but I probably would have failed as a mother, too.) I have failed in the business world also. I can't seem to succeed in anything. I have really tried, Abby, but everything I do ends in failure. Suicide seems to be the only solution. Please don't tell me I need a psychiatrist. I have been going to the same one every week for 14 years, and he hasn't helped me. If he had, I wouldn't feel this way.

Other than suicide, is there any answer for someone who is so hopelessly miserable?

I guess maybe I'm trying to find some reason to go on living because I'm really afraid to die. Please help me.

DISCOURAGED IN ARLINGTON

DEAR DISCOURAGED: Your letter tells me that you DO have hope and WANT to live.

If your doctor hasn't been able to help you after 14 years of weekly treatment, ask him to refer you to another therapist.

Please write again in two weeks, and tell me how you feel. I care.

DEAR ABBY: My husband had too much to drink last night and confessed that the reason he bought me a lovely overnight bag for Valentine's Day was because he'd bought one for his girlfriend, and he felt guilty. Now I don't even want the bag.

What do you think?

B.J. IN WASHINGTON, N.C.

DEAR B.J.: I think you husband should quit drinking and looking at bags.

DEAR ABBY: My mother recently remarried and told us she was selling the family farm. Because my sisters and brothers (and I) loved the farm so much, we asked her to sell it to us to keep it in the family.

Without telling any of us, my mother sold the farm to a total stranger!

Abby, we are all so hurt that we are going out of our way to avoid seeing or talking to our mother.

I feel guilty about avoiding my own mother, but I just can't bring myself to forgive her. The others feel the same way.

Can you or one of your readers who has experienced the same situation help us?

Right now, I don't care if I never talk to my mother again.

DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: See your mother and ask her to explain her actions and talk about her feelings frankly. Don't judge her until you have all the facts.

DEAR ABBY: Can a girl get pregnant from kissing with her mouth open?

CONNIE IN ANCHORAGE

DEAR CONNIE: No. But it's a good beginning.

At Wit's End

The Diet Workshop recently came up with a survey that didn't hold too many surprises. The most hated food among dieters is liver.

Anybody's. Personally, I don't like to eat anything that moves when I cook it, excites the dog, or inflates on impact with your teeth.

I used to go to a weight-control group that preached the gospel of liver. I think the slogan they used was "Drink a liver malt with someone you love." We all tried to disguise liver by working our quota of it into other parts of the diet. I did everything but put a dress on mine. It didn't help.

Liver is not like any other food I know. It's the kind that when you drop it, you find yourself apologizing to it. I have met a few pro-liver people in my time, although I try not to cultivate them. They are usually people who sit around and make ridiculous statements like, "Can you get any rhubarb in this town?" or "I didn't like eels either until I tried them in butter."

They will regale you for hours on their favorite methods of cooking liver and what you have to do to kill the taste, but I've never converted.

Even in my fantasies, I can't see Sophia Loren, Jaclyn Smith or Cheryl Tiegs having liver breath — even for hipbones.

I've done a lot of compromising during my diet years, which began the year after I was married and my knees began to blouse. I pretended to crave lettuce, sneaked carrot sticks into my bedroom and ate them under the covers and even layered cottage cheese and pretended it was cake... but liver!

I have done a lot of thinking on the subject as to why liver is thinning. Some people think it is because food has to taste bad to make you look good. This is an old wives' tale and is simply not true.

The reason why liver makes you thin (and why two percent of the dieters polled refused to even try it) is because liver goes a long way. Not only will a pound of it feed a city the size of Seattle for an entire month, but a single spoonful of liver into the mouth of a dieteer will be chewed for three days, thus eliminating all the fattening food you might have eaten.

Grandma's Haystacks Have Toasted Coconut

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: A few months ago you wrote about a spice cake that "grandma never baked" because it was made with liquid brown sugar, a new product that wasn't around in her day. I beg to differ. Seventy years ago my father used to buy soft brown sugar that was scooped from a barrel in the grocer's store. When the barrel got nearly empty he would purchase it and bring it home with its "liquid brown sugar" in the bottom. Mother would heat it and store it in cans for use in making cakes, cookies and candies. It was wonderful. I particularly remember a coconut candy that she made up in pyramids and that was delightfully chewable. Some older folks remember these things! — OLD-TIMER.

DEAR OLD-TIMER: When your charming letter came I delved into a coconut booklet published 50 years ago and found a recipe for the "coconut candy pyramids" you remember so vividly. They were called "haystacks" and we updated the recipe in my test kitchen. These candies are for people who love the flavor of penuche — the old-fashioned brown-sugar fudge — plus oodles of toasted coconut. — C.B.

HAYSTACKS
(For Coconut Fans)
1 and 1-3rd cups lightly packed flaked coconut
1/2 cup firmly packed dark brown sugar
2 tablespoons honey
2 tablespoons light cream
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
Pinch of salt

Store potatoes in a cool, dark place, never in an air-tight container and don't buy more than you can use in three to four weeks.

In a 15 by 10 by 1-inch jelly-roll pan, spread the coconut — it will be a thin layer. Bake in a preheated, 350-degree oven, stirring or shaking often to toast evenly, until golden — 5 to 7 minutes.

Into a small saucepan turn the sugar, honey, cream, butter and salt. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until the syrup reaches 248 degrees on a candy thermometer (a teaspoonful of the syrup dropped into a cup of very cold water will form a firm ball that does not flatten when removed from the water). Remove from heat. Stir in the coconut.

On a sheet of buttered wax paper, drop level tablespoons of the mixture well apart; with your fingers quickly shape into cones. Let stand until cold and hardened. Store in a single layer in an airtight container. Makes about 1 1/2 dozen.

Vote Today On Limiting Defective Product Suits

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill which would limit areas in which North Carolina consumers may sue for injury by defective products will come before the Senate for final approval today.

Many of the opponents of the uniform product-liability bill are trial lawyers and claim it will take away the consumer's chance to sue for injury from defective products. Manufacturers and other supporters of the bill see it as a means of stopping frivolous products-liability suits and checking the rising costs of products-liability insurance. One of the opponents' main objections was to a provision in the original bill that would have allowed manufacturers to use as an indisputable defense the contention that a product was manufactured according to prevailing standards of the time.

But the Senate Manufacturing, Labor and Commerce Committee amended the bill to a defense, but not an indisputable one.

The bill was tentatively approved in the Senate Wednesday on a 39-8 vote after an hour-and-a-half of debate.

Most of the debate centered on a time limit for consumer suits, which is included in the bill. It says no action may be brought more than 10 years after the date of manufacture of a product. However, several amendments that would have eliminated or modified the limit failed to win approval.

The Senate committee that considered the bill before sending it to the floor added 11 amendments, two of which afforded more protection for the consumer.

The committee also amended the bill to allow consumers to sue manufacturers directly in some cases. North Carolina does not have a third-party warranty. This means consumers cannot sue manufacturers for injury by products under implied warranty; they must sue the seller. An implied warranty means that a product is expected to be fit for the ordinary purpose for which it is sold.

The amendments made the bill more palatable to lawyers but not entirely acceptable. "Initially I viewed this bill as a consumer's nightmare," Sen. Cecil Jenkins, D-Cabarrus, said during the debate Wednesday. "Now I view it just as a consumer's bad dream."

Unions A Senate committee approved and sent to the full Senate Wednesday a bill that could have the effect of ending union representation among state ports workers.

The Senate Public Utilities Committee approved the bill, which would remove workers employed at the two state-owned ports at Wilmington and Morehead City from the jurisdiction of the National Railway Labor Act.

If the bill is approved, the 324 state ports employees could then be removed from union representation allowed under the federal railway act. They are the only state employees in North Carolina who are unionized, since state labor laws prohibit collective bargaining with state agencies.

In the case of the state ports employees, state labor laws are superseded by the National Railway Labor Act, even though only 16 of those 324 employees work for the ports' two small railroads.

Health A state study has found that 2.8 million people in North Carolina are not able to get adequate health services, and 1.7 million of them live in rural areas.

The state Health Planning and Development Agency and the Department of Human Resources released the figures in a preliminary state health plan, which was given to the joint legislative health committees. The plan is to serve as information for decisions on health care in North Carolina.

Alcohol A bill requiring all beer and liquor sales to end at 1 a.m. daily now goes to the Senate. The bill was approved by the House. The cutoff time is now 1 a.m., except during daylight savings time, when it is 2 a.m.

The original House bill would have made 2 a.m. the daily cutoff time, but it was amended on the House floor.

Terms Two proposals to lengthen the terms of state legislators from two to four years were sent to subcommittee for further study by a House committee. Both proposals are constitutional amendments, and one has already been approved by the Senate.

Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, told the House Constitutional Amendments Committee that the Senate version would help prevent a shift to a professional legislature and help cut down on costly campaigns. His proposal would have both House and Senate members up for election every four years beginning in 1982, so they would run during off-year elections.

The other version, sponsored by Rep. John Jordan, D-Alamance, would have the House members run one year and the Senate members two years later.

Sunset The first major recommendation by the state Governmental Evaluations Commission, or sunset commission, received an unfriendly reception from two legislative committees. The commission recommended abolishing the state Board of Examiners for Watchmaking and Repairing, one of more than 30 licensing agencies scheduled to be abolished this year unless extended by the General Assembly.

The House State Government Committee voted unanimously Wednesday not to accept the report. A Senate committee voting at the same time debated but took no action on the recommendation.

Credit Union Reserve The House unanimously passed a bill which would require credit unions to set aside a portion of their gross income as a reserve against losses.

The bill would require a credit union that has been in operation for more than four years and has assets of more than $500,000 to accumulate a reserve equalling 6 percent of the total of outstanding loans and risk assets.

A credit union that has not been in operation for four years or has less than $500,000 in assets is to accumulate a regular reserve equalling 10 percent of outstanding loans.

Special Olympics Get 2 Big Contributions

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Two contributions, one from a sporting firm, the second from a local agency, amounting to $900, were presented Wednesday night for use in the Special Olympics program.

John Hill, representing H. L. Hodges & Co. sporting goods, and Bill Hall, representing the Association for Retarded Children, presented checks of $500 and $400, respectively, to Bill Twine, coordinator of the Special Populations Program of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department. This was done at the beginning of the March meeting of the Recreation and Parks Commission meeting.

Twine then presented certificates of appreciation to the two donors, and noted "that both agencies have helped a great deal in the work of the Special Olympics."

Hill commented that the Hodges firm "will continue our support each year. We think it is a most worthy project, and since we are in the sporting goods business, we cannot think of a better way to help out in these sports projects for the handicapped."

Twine explained that although Special Olympics is operated by the city's Recreation and Parks Dept., "all funds used in Special Olympics are funds donated to us. Tax funds are not used."

He mentioned that for several years McDonald's has provided something like 1,000 hamburgers for each meet, plus drinks and other refreshments.

"Also," Twine added, "about 330 students from East Carolina University, under the guidance of Catherine Bolton, assist in all our big meets. In addition, students from Rose High and Pitt County schools, Girl Scouts, and other students help in these programs, so that we have something like 400 volunteers."

Special Olympics, first undertaken six years ago as a one-shot affair, has continued and has now grown, Twine said, "to a broad program with 430 people from Greenville and Pitt County in the program. Actually, we anticipate 450 when the final count is made for the upcoming spring events."

The next big Special Olympic meet will be the spring games scheduled for Wednesday, April 11. "Soon after that, on Saturday, April 28," Twine revealed, "Greenville will be host to the Area I Spring Games, which will draw contestants from 17 eastern North Carolina counties."

He remarked that since the program depends solely on volunteer funds, and because of the rapid acceleration of numbers, "we will be seeking additional donors to help us. The single biggest expense is providing Special Olympic T-shirts to each participant, and with the rising costs of these shirts and the ever increasing number of participants, you can see we will have to have more help to keep the program active and growing."

Inducted into FBLA Club

Some 26 students were inducted as charter members of the E. B. Aycock Junior High School Future Business Leaders of America Wednesday.

The club received its charter as a state and national organization affiliate in February. Aycock is the first junior high school in North Carolina to receive an FBLA charter. The J. H. Rose High School FBLA serves as the club's sponsor. Every member must be taking one or more business courses during the year.

The Rose High FBLA members were present at the induction. Mary Grace Pate, president of the Rose FBLA, installed the Aycock officers and presented the club its charter. Phyllis Williams, Aycock FBLA president, inducted the members.

Randy Collier is faculty advisor of the new club and Mrs. Clara Carr is faculty advisor of the Rose High group.

Quarterly Meet This Weekend

A quarterly meeting will be observed at the St. John F. W. B. Church, Farmville, this weekend.

Friday, 7:30 p.m., a quarterly conference will be held. Holy Communion will be held Saturday, 7:30 p.m., with Bishop W. L. Phillips and English Chapel F. W. B. Church in charge of services. Sunday, 11 a.m., Elder J. S. Lucas, pastor, senior choir and ushers will be in charge of services.

Sunday, 3 p.m., Bishop Robert Gorham and Rouses's Chapel F. W. B. Church will be in charge. Dinner will be served at 2 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

Another Recall By Ford Motors

DETROIT (AP) — Almost 17,000 1979-model cars, trucks and buses are being recalled by Ford Motor Co. after the automaker discovered possible steering and air-brake defects.

Ford said Wednesday it will notify 14,600 U.S. car owners and more than 1,200 in Canada that their Mustangs and Capris may experience "a reduction or loss of steering control" due to an "incorrect" part of the steering assembly. It also said brake tubing on F-700 and F-800 trucks and B-700 buses could be damaged by muffler heat. Owners will be asked by mail to take advantage of free inspections and repairs if necessary at local dealerships, Ford said.

Focal Point Is The Industry

Congressman Stephen Neal of Winston-Salem has gone off on the old tangent that "what's good for R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company is good for the tobacco industry of North Carolina."

In this instance, as in similar instances in the past, the assertion is not necessarily true.

Congressman Neal has taken it upon himself to issue a stern warning to Japanese officials to ease trade restrictions on American-made cigarettes or face retaliatory measures from the United States. He says he became involved in the matter after talking with officials of R. J. Reynolds in his home district.

Japan does place severe tariffs on American-made cigarettes; and if those were lowered, he says, American cigarettes could capture a much greater share of the Japanese market. So far so good.

But there is another side to the coin. Japana has its own cigarette manufacturing industry, and each year that industry is purchasing 100 million pounds or more of leaf tobacco produced in North Carolina and neighboring states. That tobacco is purchased on the warehouse floors in Greenville, Farmville, Williamston, Washington and other markets throughout the tobacco producing region. It puts dollars directly into the pockets of tobacco growers for their leaf. It does so without sending the tobacco through the cigarette manufacturers that would change it into cigarettes before sending it to Japan at a considerably higher price.

Congressman Neal's proposal obviously would help the cigarette manufacturers. We suspect, however that it would seriously penalize tobacco growers by actually reducing millions of pounds annually the amount of North Carolina tobacco sold in the Japanese market.

We don't fault Congressman Neal for being particularly responsive to the desires of his immediate constituents in Winston-Salem. But when it comes to tobacco and North Carolina, the focal point is not Winston-Salem. The focal point is the First Congressional District.

The first consideration should be what's good for the farmers and the tobacco industry; not what's good for RJR.

His Lid Can't Deliver

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's hard sell for a lid on hospital cost increases may promise more than his bill can deliver.

Whatever the merits of a ceiling on soaring hospital rates, it won't make an immediate dent in the overall rate of inflation, and it won't be a decisive step toward balancing the federal budget.

What it will do, if Congress agrees, is put limits on the future price of hospital rooms and services, a difficult area because the consumer buys out of need, not choice, and because most bills are paid indirectly.

"In the past, hospitals have had little incentive to be efficient," Carter said in proposing his bill, a toned-down version of one that died in Congress last year. "The hospital sector is fundamentally different from any other sector in our economy. Normal buyer-seller relationships and normal market forces do not exist."

That's because people don't usually choose to spend money at the hospital. And about 90 percent of those who are hospitalized have insurance to cover the bills.

So Carter wants to set a "national voluntary limit" of 9.7 percent on hospital cost increases in 1979, and then put mandatory limits on hospitals that fail to meet that goal.

In 1978, hospital costs rose 12.8 percent, well above the overall increase of 9 percent in consumer prices. The American Hospital Association says that shows the success of voluntary efforts, since prices rose by 15.6 percent the year before.

But it wasn't entirely voluntary. Nine states have imposed

An Irresponsible Press

WASHINGTON — Let me sort out, if I may, some of the issues that have become entangled in the matter of the Progressive magazine and its temporarily suppressed article on "How a Hydrogen Bomb Works." The case provides a melancholy example of a thoroughly irresponsible press and a remarkably witless bureaucracy.

The case hit the front pages a week ago when the Justice Department, in a panicky misjudgment of cause and effect, rushed into a federal court in Milwaukee to obtain an injunction against the magazine. The object was to prevent publication of an article worked up by freelance writer Howard Morland. From what we know of the article, Morland has worked from unclassified material in the public domain, from his own research at atomic installations and from other sources. It is not contended that he stole any government material.

For reasons that baffle understanding, the Progressive's own editors sought governmental review of the article in advance of publication. The cynical thought cannot be dispelled that the editors hoped to provoke precisely the magnificent bonanza of publicity the Justice Department has now given them. In any event, that is the only benefit to any party that can now be perceived.

Let us assume for the sake of discussion that Morland, by some stroke of intuition and deduction, had come up with designs and drawings that no other outsider had divined. He had in fact figured out how an H-bomb is triggered. He and his editors, by some bizarre process of rationalization, supposed that publication of these drawings, which would teach scientists in various nations how to manufacture atomic weapons, would promote their own pacifist desire to halt the proliferation of atomic weapons. This is a screwy line of reasoning, but we are asked to accept.

Very well. So perceived, the editors' insistence on publishing the piece, over the violent objections of government scientists, has to be seen as a staggering exercise in irresponsibility. We may all of us doubt gravely that a spy from, say, Israel or India or South Africa would have been much impressed by a freelance piece in the Progressive if the government had not gone to court. Now the article takes on an importance it never should have acquired.

But the editors' irresponsibility goes beyond the damage they might do to the national security. They have performed an act of consummate disservice to their brothers of the press who are fighting a battle against prior restraint censorship. Because of this H-bomb affair, we may wind up with a Supreme Court decision that will place judges in our press rooms in new and disturbing ways.

As a matter of law, the key case is the Pentagon Papers case of 1971 (Times v. U.S., 403 U.S. 713). There the Court refused to prohibit the New York Times from publishing purloined documents having to do with the war in Vietnam. But under a different set of facts — and a different piece of statutory law as well — there is no reason to believe today's Court would dissolve the temporary injunction just granted in Milwaukee.

On the contrary, there is every reason to believe that all of the justices, save possibly Brennan, would side

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:
Mrs. Betty Ford's successful battle with drug and alcohol dependency has a poignant and triumphant new chapter printed in the February issue of "The Reader's Digest." She calls herself "an alcoholic"; her physician called her a person with a "chemical dependency" on alcohol and prescription drugs. Betty Ford licked her problem! Her candid and forthright description of her detoxification treatment is most accurately described, complete with her tears, her fears, and her eventual joy. Her confession is a tribute to a great lady.
Dependency on drugs and alcohol is a staggering problem right here in Greenville. Perhaps the saddest part of this situation here is that we have great numbers of 13- and 14-year-olds who are using both alcohol and illegal drugs daily. These young people attend parties (no parents at home, of course) at which they become terribly sick, throw up, and go back into the house for more. Where are the parents? I'm told that around $250,000 in cash is stolen just in Greenville every week to finance these drug parties and addictions. Every teenager in town knows this, and so do some of their parents. Parents who have drug-addicted children are not alone! Why not take courage from the example of Betty Ford? We can lick this terrible enemy of the lives of our children! Maybe we could start by facing up to the problem truthfully, as did Mrs. Ford.

Reminder: There's Always Next Year

For practical purposes, basketball ended in North Carolina Monday when Maryland, Virginia and Clemson lost out in National Invitational competition.

The day before, UNC-Chapel Hill and Duke had both lost in NCAA post season competition. Appalachian, the Southern Conference representative, had already lost.

There's lots of basketball left nationally with the championships to be decided for both the NCAA and the NIT... but neither North Carolina nor the Atlantic Coast Conference will be represented; consequently interest wanes.

Ah well, basketball operates on the Big Bang theory. All will be wiped clean following the final basket of the NCAA and NIT tournaments. There's always next year, and the coliseums of North Carolina will be filled again with cheering, fanatical fans.

THIS AFTERNOON

Stress On Job-Training

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — There is a small, yellow sign with black, plastic letters which has been standing out front of the Square D Company near Wake Forest for several years.

That sign is destined to become famous in North Carolina history. It reads, simply: "Die and Tool Makers Wanted".

Those highly skilled technicians have been wanted, are wanted; and will be wanted for some time to come. Not only at Square D, but at hundreds of industrial and research operations across the state.

In recent months, the Square D sign has been prominently mentioned by any number of state officials as symbolic of a problem in the state.

Labor Commissioner John Brooks was not the first to call attention to the sign, nor the need for skill-training of Tar Heel employees.

A Charge
But he was the first to point a blunt charge at the state's fragmented and competing job training programs as being too little, without control or direction, and not filling identified needs.

And Brooks was the first to stand up publicly and lay a burden of blame on the community colleges and technical institutes for turning out what he calls "entry-level" trainees capable only of doing routine jobs; not capable of stepping into the high paying technical jobs and supervisory roles.

There was defensiveness at the beginning from the establishment, including Gov. Jim Hunt.

But over the months, that yellow sign remained in front of the Square D Company, and soon even the governor was talking about it... using it as a symbol.

What happened? As Brooks, and eventually others, called public notice to what they perceived as a problem, the governor and members of the State Board of Education began to hear similar accounts. Most importantly, Gov. Hunt began hearing from major national and international corporate chiefs whom he was wooing for growth in North Carolina, that this state simply couldn't provide essentially high-skilled labor.

The other day, Gov. Hunt convened a meeting of an Employment and Training Council... the beginning of something which will gain in significance in coming months and years.

It can mean major changes in direction and policy in the public schools; in the community colleges and technical institutes; and even in four-year colleges, some of which might well become smaller versions of N.C. State University, specializing in technology.

Ahead
Nobody knows, just now, what the future will bring. But change is certain, especially with the public attention and economic impact inherent in the jobs dilemma. The Employment and Training Council includes representatives from the Labor Department, the Employment Security Commission, the Community College System, the public schools, and the Department of Natural and Economic Resources... all of which play their own part in skills training, largely without talking to one another.

Hunt set the tone for what must happen when he sent this message to the group: A record 54,500 new jobs are coming to the state, and that is a bright picture. "But there is a dark spot; we absolutely must do a better job of training our workers...."

"Most of those are high-skill jobs. But I regret to say that I don't know whether we are training people for them. I honestly don't know — and I don't think anybody knows — whether we are offering that training now and, if so, where people can get it.

"That is a serious gap in our economic development efforts in this state, and we must close it," Hunt said. Find out, Hunt told the committee of bureaucrats, we can determine what to do.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Despairing Americans

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
TORRANCE, Calif. — Despair over the decline of American power compared to the Soviet Union is unmistakable in this pleasant

Los Angeles county suburb of middle-income families who gave slightly more than half their votes to Jimmy Carter in the 1976 election.

By an astonishing 98 percent, the 62 registered voters

we interviewed — with the help of experts from Pat Caddell's Cambridge Survey Research — said that the U.S. has been in a steady decline. More important, 98 percent also agreed that this perceived decline would continue over at least the next 10 years.

Why is that? "Because we are letting everyone step all over us," a 47-year-old auto mechanic told us. A 24-year-old carpenter expressed the same thought differently: "My opinion is that the country is going downhill."

Assisted by Caddell field supervisor Lyn Phelps, and pollsters Barb Mirabal and Phyllis Barish, we found near unanimity in this middle-income ($19,000 average family income), heavily white suburb. Fifty voters held that President Carter and his administration could "do a lot more" to maintain the U.S. position in the world. Eight of the remaining 12 voters felt that Carter could do "somewhat more," if he so desired, to restore U.S. influence around the world.

The despair surfaced in the

Strength For Today

THAT UPPER ROOM
When the disciples of Jesus made ready to observe the last Passover, they secured at his direction "a large upper room". There he indicated to them the meaning of his death and appointed the Sacrament whereby the memory and significance of it were always to be recalled. It is interesting that after his death on the cross, the disciples again sought the upper room, that they might counsel and comfort each other. Furthermore, it was in this same upper room that Jesus twice appeared to his disciples, the second time instructing and strengthening the doubter, Thomas. The upper room signifies symbolically a place where Christ returns to assure believers, and doubters also, of his eternal existence and significance. It should come to mean for us a place of private devotions. If it does, we will find that it becomes a place where Christ is made new to our lives, where his presence is again made manifest.

Policies And Needs 'At Odds'

By JOHN CUNNIFF
NEW YORK (AP) — Sometimes official policies seem at odds with the national interest.

We are concerned about household debt, for example, but we subsidize it through tax deductions. We badly need greater productivity, but we regulate and harass the factories we depend upon to bring it about.

A couple more are worth considering: We need oil but, say producers, we discourage the search for it; we need jobs for teenagers but, say the critics, we eliminate jobs by raising the minimum beginning wage.

And, almost everyone agrees, we need more savings if we are to have capital sufficient to build more factories to make more jobs to raise living standards.

But we discourage savings by taxing their earnings.

There's little mystery to why the U.S. savings rate recently fell to 4.6 percent of disposable income, while it has at times exceeded 20 percent in Japan, and smaller double digits in Western Europe.

The reason, according to savings institutions, is that these countries encourage savings through financial incentives. In West Germany, for example, a bonus is given after 4 to 6 years of saving for a house.

The American saver receives a penalty. He and she must pay taxes on the alleged income from savings. Consider that the highest passbook savings rate is 5.25 percent; consider that inflation eliminates it.

The small saver, therefore, has been in the position of paying taxes on an illusion, the illusion being that the savings produced income, when in fact the savings shrank, even before the taxes.

So when and from where is help liable to come? From Congress, perhaps, or maybe from regulatory agencies. Sentiment to exclude from taxes the first $500 of interest income may be growing. The pressure surely is.

Savings and loan officials point out, for example, that an exclusion of $500 per person or $1,000 per couple, might draw $24 billion in added deposits, leading to 750,000 mortgages and 500,000 new jobs.

Now the dilemma: Do we need more housing? The concern at the moment is that too much money might be available to that market, thus encouraging speculation, higher prices and maybe overbuilding.

Those concerns, in fact, were among reasons why federal regulators require, as of today, that savings institutions cease daily compounding of 6-month savings certificates, thus reducing the effective return.

The reduction shouldn't hurt small savers much. To begin with, those savings certificates are issued in $10,000 denominations. Secondly, the reduction of yield amounts to only $45 or so over a 6-month period.

What might very well benefit smaller savers is the lowering of the denomination to perhaps $2,000. Nobody has said this will be done, but regulators are known to be considering such action.

Evans-Novak . . .

follo-up question: the way things are going today, do you think the Soviet Union will be stronger or weaker compared to the U.S. 10 years from now? Of 23 Carter voters, only one had enough confidence in their president to answer "weaker". Of the 39 voters who voted for Jerry Ford or have forgotten how they voted, all replied that Moscow would be relatively "stronger" than it is today.

Not since we started interviewing voters nearly 16 years ago has there been such monolithic agreement on an issue so politically explosive. Significantly, the pessimism expressed about the Carter administration changing the downward course of American power does not apply to other major issues facing the president — and the voters of Torrance. Asked whether the administration "can control" inflation, these voters by 4-to-1 said inflation definitely is controllable and implied they think it will be controlled.

But on Carter's recent efforts abroad, disapproval outweighed approval. Negotiations for a new strategic arms limitation agreement (SALT II) with the Russians got less than 25 percent approval, Carter's conduct during the Iranian crisis less than 20 percent, and his diplomacy on the recent Mexico City Trip about the same. Only normalization with communist China received more "approvals" than disapprovals.

The White House is known to be deeply disturbed by its own secret voter surveys showing politically-damaging concern over the perceived decline of the U.S. The president dispatched the aircraft carrier Constellation to the Indian Ocean, without knowing its exact destination — in on getting a badly needed headlines.

Such imagery is not likely to make much of a dent in the perceptions of the voters here. Those perceptions have congealed to a point requiring extensive political surgery. "Every administration back to Kennedy seems to have made a decision to make our country weaker," a 32-year-old foreman at Western Airlines said. "President Carter doesn't seem to be informed about what is going on."

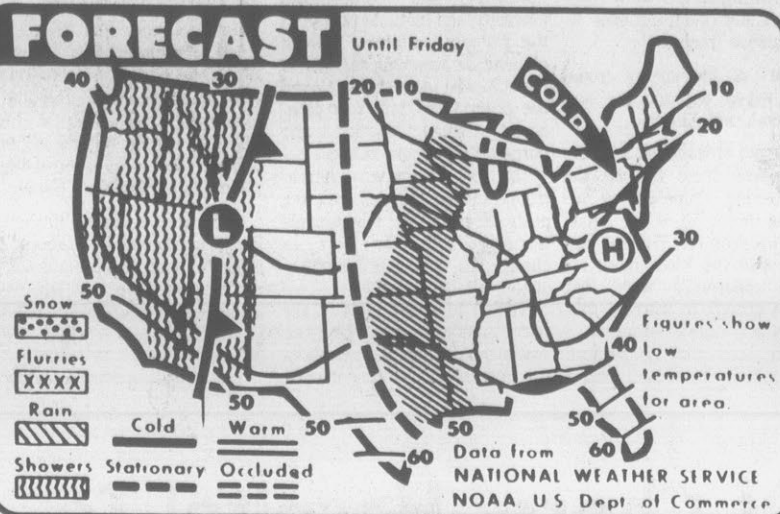

We also found a surprising correlation between the perceived decline of military and political power and the decline of the dollar, a connection that Gov. Edmund G. Brown consistently emphasizes in his national campaign for a balanced-budget constitutional amendment. "Our dollar is declining," a 51-year-old line assembler said. "That is hurting our economy and that is making use look weak in foreign countries. We need a new dollar and a new foreign policy."

Carter had not left for Cairo on his peace mission when we conducted our interviews here. Success in reaching a peace treaty between Egypt and Israel would undoubtedly have an overnight impact on perceptions of America's influence.

But judging from the despair expressed so vividly and with such near unanimity by the citizens of Torrance, not even an Egypt-Israel peace treaty will be more than a blip in the downward graph line of America's role in the world. That helps explain why Republican presidential candidates are suddenly so interested in world affairs.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are expected in the forecast period until Friday morning for almost all of the West. Rain is due from the western Gulf to Michigan. Cold weather is forecast east of the Mississippi with mild or cool temperatures for the rest of the country. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Generally sunny weather was forecast over North Carolina today with the exception of the northwest mountains, where there was the prospect of some light snow during the morning. It was expected to be windy and cold over the state, with a return of winter tonight. A freeze warning is in effect for the coast. Temperatures are expected to drop to the teens in the mountains and range to about 30 on the Outer Banks.

The forecast today was for high temperatures ranging in the 30s in the northwest mountains and from the 40s to low 50s elsewhere. Friday should be somewhat warmer in the west portion of the state, with highs ranging upward from around 50 in the northeast to the mid and upper 50s in the southwest. A strong cold front passed through the state Wednesday, triggering showers and thundershowers in the mountains and Piedmont during the morning. The thundershowers increased in intensity as they moved on to the eastern half of the state, spewing some small hail along the way from the central section to the coast. Some wind damage was reported in coastal sections in the afternoon and some waterspouts were reportedly sighted over the sounds. High winds destroyed a grain bin at Tanglewood Farms near Elizabeth City, causing damage estimated at $500,000. The winds, gusting to 67 miles per hour, also toppled the tower at radio station WGAI-AM in Elizabeth City.

Winds gusting to 81 miles per hour struck Jacksonville, according to the National Weather Service, but police said no damage was reported.

Mixed-Drink Vote Friday In Wilson

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt will travel to Wilson County Friday to cast his vote against a liquor-by-the-drink proposition, said Hunt's father, James B. Hunt, who is a local leader of the anti-liquor forces. The elder Hunt leads an organization seeking to defeat the proposition in Friday's county-wide referendum. "Jim's told me, 'Daddy, I'll be down there Friday to vote against it,'" the governor's father said.

The outcome of the Wilson County vote is expected to be closely watched by opponents and supporters of the issue in the non-metropolitan, largely agricultural counties in Eastern North Carolina. It represents the first mixed-drink campaign in a small county where travel, tourism and convention business are not issues.

Although he stopped short of characterizing the campaign by the Wilson County Committee Against Liquor By the Drink as an uphill battle, the elder Hunt predicted the outcome would be close.

"We're keeping the ministers in the background," he said. "The preachers just get too emotional. We're trying not to let them hurt us."

While opponents are trying to keep the preachers in the background, spokesmen for supporters of mixed drinks said local restaurant operators were keeping a low profile because of allegations that they are involved solely because of the potential profit.

"We really have people wound up for this election," said Helen Saleeby, executive secretary of the Wilson County Board of Elections.

"Some people said they didn't vote for president or mayor, but were going to vote in this," she said. About 24,000 persons are registered to vote in Wilson County.

Benefit Horse Show Sunday

TARBORO — A benefit horse show, with proceeds going to the Heartsease Volunteer Fire Department in Edgecombe County, is being held beginning at 1 p.m. Sunday, March 18.

The show, which will consist of events in game and western pleasure horses, is being held at the Tarboro Saddle Club grounds in Tarboro.

In addition to the horse show, there will be Bluegrass entertainment by Dr. Peter Temple and the Tar River Boys.

their own hospital cost controls. Carter said those controls have worked without impairing the quality of hospital care.

The industry says it should be allowed price increases of 11.6 percent in 1979. That's nearly two points higher than the administration wants, although its proposed limits could be relaxed if costs exceed current forecasts.

In proposing the bill, Carter said hospital cost inflation is uniquely severe, and uniquely controllable. "It offers us one of our best opportunities to bring down the rate of overall inflation," he said.

It could, if administration forecasts prove accurate. But not quickly, and not directly.

The price of services for hospital patients represents .363 percent of the overall Consumer Price Index, the government's basic measure of inflation. Hospital services plus health insurance represent 2.133 percent of the index.

So it would take a drastic change in hospital costs to show up as a change in the cost-of-living figures.

That's not to say that the savings aren't worth having. But they would not be as dramatic as administration arguments suggest.

"Through this one piece of legislation we can, at a stroke, reduce inflation, cut the federal budget and save billions of dollars of unnecessary public and private spending," Carter said.

with the government in favor of suppression. In the Pentagon Papers case, Justices White, Stewart and Marshall indicated that if a statute provided for prior restraint injunctions in matters involving the national security, it would make a big difference to them. In the Progressive case, they have precisely such a statute in the Atomic Energy Act.

Recent months have seen some dismaying decisions in this whole area of the courts and the press. Judges are imposing gag orders in criminal trials. The Supreme Court, while generally protecting our rights to publish information, increasingly inhibits our power to gather information. From our point of view in the press, it is a most unhappy situation. The Progressive is making it worse.

Chinese Withdrawal Harassed

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer
BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam's troops were reported harassing withdrawing Chinese troops today as Hanoi accused the Chinese of moving border markers south into Vietnamese territory to alter the frontier.

Kyodo, the Japanese news service, said a Chinese official in Peking told it the bulk of the Chinese invasion force has withdrawn from Vietnam, and the pullout "will take another day or so" to complete.

Xinhua (Hsinhua), the official Chinese news agency, said the withdrawing forces were fighting off harassing attacks by Vietnamese troops.

"Part of the enemy troops were wiped out and the rest scuttled," said Xinhua.

Analysts in Bangkok said the Vietnamese were trailing the withdrawing Chinese and attacking them in some areas along the frontier. But one diplomat said the Vietnamese attacks apparently were not serious enough to warrant major Chinese counterattacks.

Nhan Dan, the Vietnamese Communist Party's Hanoi newspaper, said Vietnam "with sincerity and humane policy let the Chinese withdraw without chasing or attacking them. But the Chinese not only delayed the withdrawal but also plundered, looted, shelled and burned Vietnamese houses."

"In many areas, Chinese troops moved (border) marker posts deep inside Vietnamese territory with the aim to change the historical boundary of the two countries."

Radio Hanoi said its correspondent saw Chinese troops building emplacements in the past few days to entrench themselves in border areas.

Hanoi claimed that its troops killed or wounded 1,100 Chinese and knocked out 104 military vehicles "in fierce fighting" Monday and Tuesday in the Lao Cai border region, at the head of the Red River valley 155 miles northwest of Hanoi.

Nhan Dan repeated the earlier Vietnamese invitation to China to open negotiations once all its troops were withdrawn. The newspaper urged Peking to prove its sincerity "right now, by deeds and not by words."

The Chinese pushed into Vietnam on Feb. 17 after a year of cross-border skirmishes and the Vietnamese invasion of Cambodia, a Chinese ally. The Vietnamese claimed the Chinese were forced by heavy losses and foreign condemnation to make their announcement March 5 that the invaders were withdrawing.

Peking has issued few reports of the fighting, and correspondents have not been allowed onto the battlefield to see the fighting first hand.

Scrutiny Of Cherry Hospital To Follow Discrimination Claim

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Cherry Hospital will be under the scrutiny of project teams working to eliminate discrimination, the director of the state Division of Mental Health-Retardation Services said Wednesday.

The announcement comes following the release of a task-force report that found racial and sex discrimination in hiring and promotional policies at the state hospital.

The 53-page report also said officials of the institution had poor communication and inadequate involvement with the public.

The report was released at a news conference at the hospital Wednesday.

Ben Aiken, director of the mental health division, said hospital administrator Field Montgomery will remain in charge of the institution despite criticism of Montgomery by the task-force.

He said Montgomery would "take the lead" in setting up the project teams to work on the issues raised in the report. He also said a review team will be established at the state level to monitor progress of the effort.

Aiken praised Montgomery and Cherry Hospital employees for achieving maximum accreditation this year. The accreditation requires adherence to more than 600 standards of excellence.

The task force was appointed last summer at the request of the Wayne County chapter of the NAACP following the dismissal of David Plummer, a black personnel officer at the hospital.

On Plummer's dismissal, the task force said, "The perceived conspiracy by several white managers toward the former personnel director was interpreted as a blatant act of discrimination and an improper use of managerial time."

It also found that "more than 40 complaints against his performance were made known to the hospital director roughly two months before termination." The task force called for an investigation by the state Department of Human Resources.

According to the report, the task force found morale at the hospital low. It concluded that employees were motivated by their concern for good patient care rather than by employee rewards.

The task force, contending that racism has affected employment and promotions, said that the hospital has 32 managerial and administrative positions but only three are filled by blacks, seven by white females and none by black females.

Encyclical Warns Of Enslavement To Things

By EDWARD MAGRI
Associated Press Writer
VATICAN CITY (AP) — In his first encyclical, Pope John Paul II warned today that technologically advanced, consumer societies threaten to make human beings "the slave of things."

He also assailed nations that give "only atheism the right of citizenship," pledged the church to defend human freedom, condemned the widening gap between rich and poor and denounced the arms buildup.

"We all know well," he said, "that the areas of misery and hunger on our globe could have been made fertile in a short time if the gigantic investments for armaments at the service of war and destruction had been changed into investments for food at the service of life."

The 18,000-word encyclical, an authoritative form of papal teaching, was addressed to the world's Roman Catholics and also to "all men and women of good will."

In it, the pope from Communist Poland specified no nations by name, but he said "the curtailment and violation of religious freedoms are in contrast with man's dignity and his objective rights...."

"It is therefore difficult, even from a 'purely human' point of view, to accept a position that gives only atheism the right of citizenship in public and social life, while believers are... barely tolerated or are treated as second-class citizens or are even — and this has already happened — entirely deprived of the rights of citizenship."

In the "name of all believers," he appealed to governments everywhere to "respect the rights of religion and of the church's activity. No privilege is asked for, but only respect for an elementary right."

The pope said the modern age has brought "a time of great progress" but also "a time of threat in many forms for man."

Already, he said, there is a "real perceptible danger" of man losing "his dominion" and becoming "subject to manipulation in many ways" by organizational, production and communication systems.

"Man cannot relinquish himself or the place in the visible world that belongs to him," the pope said.

Gas Crunch Signal

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The gas crunch appears to have begun in Durham, where first signs of Iran's oil drought were detected Wednesday.

John Faucette, who has operated Faucette's Exxon Service-center for 33 years, wrapped his self-service pumps in plastic, limiting gasoline sales to his full-service pumps.

Faucette said he was doing this to conserve gasoline, which he is selling now at 74.9 to 79.9 cents per gallon. He said his distributor is limiting his supply of gasoline, by allocation, to 100 percent of what he received in March 1978.

"I was getting my tanks filled every six or seven days. Now, I only get gas every eight days," he said. He said he had to limit his sales to last from one load to the next.

Elsewhere in the city, a convenience store had a sign on its "regular" pump. The sign said "OUT." Another station operator said his supply had been cut 5 to 10 percent but he had not felt any pinch.

One operator said his station was getting only 70 percent of what was being delivered in March of last year, while another operator said he was not being limited — at least, not yet.

Last month, the Department of Energy in Washington told oil companies they could peg allotment of gasoline to stations on what they sold last year instead of 1972. This could hurt independents who filled up in January and February last year when gasoline was plentiful, but cut back in March, the month governing current allotments.

On Plummer's dismissal, the task force said, "The perceived conspiracy by several white managers toward the former personnel director was interpreted as a blatant act of discrimination and an improper use of managerial time."

It also found that "more than 40 complaints against his performance were made known to the hospital director roughly two months before termination." The task force called for an investigation by the state Department of Human Resources.

Peking Factory Hit By Plane; 200 Dead

TOKYO (AP) — Troops continued searching today for victims of the plane crash in a Peking factory that killed about 200 persons, most of them workers in the plant, Western diplomats in the Chinese capital reported.

The sources said about a dozen of those killed were aboard the British-built Trident jet transport when it crashed into the factory in the western suburbs of Peking about 8:45 a.m. Wednesday.

The plane was reported in full operation, but it could not be learned what it was producing.

Chinese sources in Shanghai said the plane, which can carry up to 180 passengers, was a military aircraft. The diplomatic sources in Peking, reached by telephone, said the crash took place about 1 1/2 miles from a training airfield, and there was speculation the plane was on a training flight.

Kyodo, the Japanese news agency, reported from Peking that the crash occurred shortly after the plane took off. The diplomats said a witness reported the plane slowed up before it crashed.

The Chinese government issued no report on the crash.

Charges Agreement On Employment 'Broken'

Lorraine Buck Waters of Winterville, is seeking $50,000 in damages from Union Carbide Inc. for allegedly breaking an employment agreement before she began work with the firm.

The complaint, filed with the Hart County Clerk of Superior Court on January 17, alleged that Mrs. Waters applied for a job with Union Carbide in September 1978, and that on November 13, 1978, she was interviewed by an official of the company, who informed her, "her application was accepted and approved, that she was hired," and was told when she would begin work.

The complaint also alleges that Mrs. Waters was also told to "give notice," to terminate her employment with Winterville Machine Works where she had been employed for nine years as a lab technician or analyst, which she did on November 14.

Mrs. Waters charges in the complaint that on December 8, the defendant informed her father and brother that Union Carbide had, "repudiated the employment agreement...and could not permit," her to begin, "the agreed employment."

Then on December 10, according to the complaint, Mrs. Waters received a telephone call from a Union Carbide official who, "informed her that the employment agreement with her was terminated and that she could not begin...employment with the defendant because, 'the job had fallen through.'"

According to the complaint, Winterville Machine Works will not rehire her and that she has been unable to find other employment.

Union Carbide filed a motion with the court to dismiss the complaint on February 20, "for failure to state a claim on which relief can be granted."

The motion said Mrs. Waters, "fails to establish that an employment contract of a definite duration existed," and that, "in the absence of an employment contract for a definite duration, such contract is terminated at will," by either party, "and no cause for action exists."

Heart Attack Kills 747 Pilot While Airborne

DALLAS (AP) — The scene in the cockpit was frantic. Doctors and crew members labored to save the life of Capt. Lloyd Wilcox, stricken by a massive heart attack as his gleaming orange Boeing 747 cruised 33,000 feet over the Pacific Ocean.

But beyond the cockpit door was calm. The 331 passengers on Braniff International Flight 502 from Honolulu to Dallas were unaware of the drama.

Not even Wilcox's wife of three years, Theresa, who supervised the plane's team of 16 stewardesses, was told her husband was dead until shortly before the plane landed in Dallas.

Wilcox, 59, two months away from retirement and the end of a distinguished 35-year career, was stricken about 3 a.m. Wednesday as Braniff's "Great Pumpkin," with its orange body, white tail and black nose, was about a half hour west of Los Angeles.

Co-pilot James Cunningham and 2nd Officer Robert Barnes landed the plane without incident at 6:19 a.m., 19 minutes behind schedule at Dallas-Fort Worth Airport.

Wilcox had chatted with Cunningham and watched the computerized controls guide the 747 as passengers drifted into sleep or followed the disco gyrations of John Travolta in "Saturday Night Fever."

He locked the plane on automatic pilot. Small talk gave way to silence.

A stewardess poked her head into the darkened cockpit to ask the captain if he wanted anything. Wilcox, his chin resting on his chest, didn't reply. Cunningham nudged him.

When nothing happened, Cunningham nudged again, then rose and shook hard.

"It was then that I became concerned," said Cunningham, a 21-year veteran with Braniff. He reached for an overhead oxygen mask, fastened it over Wilcox' face and ordered a flight attendant to inquire if a doctor was aboard.

Dr. Ronald Stockstill and his wife, Dr. Dianne Beach, both pathologists at a Dallas hospital, were flying home after a week's vacation. But it was too late.

"By the time we got upstairs, his eyes weren't reacting to light," Dr. Beach said. They administered mouth-to-mouth resuscitation while massaging the captain's heart. They took turns for 40 minutes as stewardess Deborah Head wiped the sweat from their foreheads.

Finally, it was no use. The decision was made to keep the news from Terry Wilcox. Just minutes before the plane landed, Stockstill, accompanied by another stewardess, told Mrs. Wilcox her husband had died of a heart attack. "She obviously was very much in love with him," the doctor said. He said it probably would have made little difference if Wilcox' attack had occurred on the ground.

Area Growth Cite Rural

GREENSBORO, N. C. (AP) — The eight rural counties in North Carolina's northern Piedmont are growing faster than the area's urban counties, according to a study by the Center for Applied Research at the University of North Carolina-Greensboro.

The study, prepared for the Piedmont Triad Council of Governments, notes the shift of growth from urban areas to more rural locales. "Growth is going to the areas that need it and want it the most," said Donald Jud, director of the Center for Applied Research, who reported the study's conclusions Wednesday.

He said population, employment and income all are expanding more rapidly in the rural areas which need the economic benefits the most. There is no sign the urban counties have ceased to grow, they're just expanding more slowly, he said.

"Growth is no longer proceeding outward from the center, but inward from the fringe," the study concluded. "Growth occurs on the fringe because of the cheaper, more abundant resources (including the presence of amenities)."

The study concluded that the historic pattern of migration from the rural areas to cities has been reversed.

The economic status of the poorer rural population should improve, the study said, "relieving some of the growth pressures on larger cities that many have feared would damage severely the quality of urban life in North Carolina."

The study listed as rural counties: Caswell, Davidson, Davie, Randolph, Rockingham, Stokes, Surry and Yadkin. Urban counties were listed as Alamance, Forsyth, and Guilford.

See Big Profits In New Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional auditors say a Pentagon policy in effect for a couple of years is resulting in higher profits for defense contractors.

The General Accounting Office said Wednesday that a survey of 71 recent contracts found profits were 7.8 percent higher than they would have been under the old policy. In effect since Oct. 1, 1976, the new policy makes some allowances designed to encourage investments in new machinery and equipment. But it was not intended to let profits rise.

Many people are tempted to let down their "winter precautions" during the spring. It should be remembered that viruses do not

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Surgical Cure for Tingling Fingers

For a number of years I've been treated for tingling and numbness of the fingers of my right hand. This has never left me. Recently, I went to see another doctor who told me that I have "tunnel disease," and only an operation will help me. Can you give me more information about it? — Mr. R.Y., Kan.

Dear Mr. Y.: Your doctor is undoubtedly referring to a condition known as "carpal tunnel syndrome." It is a relatively uncommon condition and, consequently, may sometimes be overlooked diagnostically.

There is a tight compartment in the wrist through which passes one of the major nerves to the hand. This "median" nerve can become compressed by injury, inflammation or by hemorrhage into the wrist. The result can be numbness, swelling, a pins-and-needles sensation and impaired movement of some of the fingers.

The surgical cure for this condition is most gratifying. Almost always the operation is done under local anesthesia. When the carpal ligament is cut there is release of the pressure on the median nerve. The symptoms subside dramatically. If your doctor has advised surgery, by all means follow his advice.

I've had a bad attack of flu. I wonder if I will now have immunity against another attack. I am prone to these, and sometimes I even have an attack up until late spring. — Mrs. E.F., N.H.

Dear Mrs. F.: There are so many different viruses responsible for influenza and influenza-like illnesses that one infection can rarely produce immunity to others. This, in fact, is the reason why so many people are disappointed when they develop colds and gripes even though they have had a flu shot in the late fall.

Another thing must be considered. Many types of ordinary cold are frequently lumped into the category of "flu." The symptoms can be so similar that only a laboratory test can make the distinction.

Many people are tempted to let down their "winter precautions" during the spring. It should be remembered that viruses do not attack according to seasons. A sensible diet, moderation of tobacco and alcohol, sufficient rest, adequately warm clothing, avoidance of excess fatigue and overexposure to drafts, cold and dampness all play an important role in reducing the frequency and severity of these infections.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH... The police and fire departments are dependable safeguards to health. They, in conjunction with paramedics, are trained to handle with confidence many severe emergency situations. With a two-way radio, they can be in immediate and constant contact with hospital emergency rooms.

Opposes Convention Bid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is on record as opposing a constitutional convention to draft an amendment requiring a balanced federal budget.

Benjamin L. Hooks, NAACP executive director, said Wednesday in a news conference that the poor and disadvantaged would be the first to suffer from severe budget restrictions. "The NAACP believes very strongly that if a constitutional convention is convened for this, or any other purpose, it would have disastrous consequences and foreboding implications for civil rights," Hooks said.

Ask Observers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee thinks the United States should have some observers on hand next month to watch elections in Rhodesia leading to a black majority government.

The committee voted 8-2 Wednesday to recommend that Congress send 25 to 50 observers to judge the fairness of the election. Sens. George McGovern, D-S.D., and S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., sponsors of the resolution, said reports from the observers could help President Carter decide whether to lift economic sanctions against the African country.

See Spread Of Measles

By The Associated Press
Outbreaks of German measles continue to spread as vacationing students return to school from spring break, sometimes bringing the disease with them.

Eighteen new cases of German measles, or rubella, have been reported at North Carolina State University since the students returned from spring break Monday. These cases bring the total to 32, according to Dr. Lee Sanders, medical director of the NCSU Health Services.

One High Point student contracted the disease from an N.C. State student, said Dr. Joel Holliday, head of the Guilford County Health Department. He said people who may have been in close contact with the infected student at High Point have been informed by medical personnel and their immunization status is being checked.

Sanders said more than 100 N.C. State students were immunized against measles at a clinic Tuesday. He said the clinic is open this week for all students who want to be immunized.

An official of the state Division of Health Services' Communicable Disease Control Branch said five new cases of German measles have been confirmed at Camp Lejeune Marine Base in Jacksonville.

Mixing business with pleasure is big business.

Persons who like to shop and to get together with friends can do both at the growing number of home selling parties — a perfect opportunity to socialize and buy products for themselves and their families in a relaxed atmosphere.

The sellers have advantages too. They become their own bosses, set their own hours and work as hard as their personal schedules allow.

Initial investments usually are small and the return corresponds to the amount of effort involved.

A UPI survey shows that more than common names like Tupperware are involved in party-plan selling. Plants, jewelry, cosmetics, framed reproductions, even magazine subscriptions all are available, just by going to a party.

Tupperware — the name most often associated with selling parties — had worldwide sales of $509 million in 1977, the last year for which figures are available. More than half of that total is from outside the United States, the company said, showing that sales parties are not just an American phenomenon.

The Direct Selling Association, an industry group representing party-plan companies and door-to-door sellers, said the two types of selling combined involve two million Americans and account for $6 billion in sales in more than 35 million homes each year.

Advantages of party selling were spelled out by Jim Wiggins of Houston, who works with his wife in managing Deco Plants, a division of Ralston Purina Co.

"It's a quick easy way to contact more people," he said. "If you go door-to-door and knock on doors, you're going to get probably seven out of 10 doors shut in your face. Two of them might listen to you — and one might buy. This way, people that come know what they're coming for."

Products sold at parties often have to be demonstrated, explained or sampled in ways that are difficult to do in a busy department store.

Aileen Van Tyle, vice president for communications for Sarah Coventry of Newark, N.Y., said her firm has thousands of salespersons nationwide to help customers find the jewelry they want.

"It's very inconvenient for a woman to shop for jewelry in a store if she has a coat on and has to fiddle with her purse and try to point out to the sales clerk exactly what she wants in the jewelry case," she said.

"At our parties, all the jewelry is put on the table. It's demonstrated by a fashion show director and modeled by those at the party. It's sort of like an audience participation thing and a way for a woman to accessorize her entire wardrobe all at once."

Harry Welch, vice president for advertising at Tupperware in Kissimmee, Fla., said his company's product has to be demonstrated properly for customers to take full advantage of it.

"The most common complaint about retail stores is that clerks don't know anything about the products they're selling," Welch said. "Tupperware has a product uniquely geared to a selling party plan because the product is easy to understand once it's demonstrated."

Cosmetics, which account for a large share of home purchases, pose a different type of personal problem.

"Consumers do not want to let their hair down and try face creams and the like in a retail store," said Monty C. Barber, vice president of Mary Kay Cosmetics in Dallas. "They will in a neighbor's home."

The operation of Natural Life in Orem, Utah, which distributes natural foods, is fairly typical of the way party-plan sales companies operate.

Spokesman Robert Hughes

said Natural Life has between 4,000 and 5,000 representatives across the country. Each pays a $5 fee to receive product information, then sponsors meetings and lectures with a speaker who is an expert on natural foods, herbs and other related products.

The representatives sell what they can, file the order with the company and receive a certain percentage of the sale.

"It's a vehicle for selling products to people," Hughes said. "It's a way for people to earn money — they get out of it what they put in."

"We never titled our meetings parties. We just have distributors out in the field who talk about the product. Then if someone wants to buy or start in the business, they can."

Operations of party sellers may be similar, but the terminology varies.

At Deco Plants, sales representatives are consultants, while Transart, which handles framed reproductions, calls its people accessory designers who organize shows, not parties.

Mary Kay Cosmetics employs beauty consultants who have beauty shows, while at Sarah Coventry, sales are made by fashion show directors.

In most cases the sales representatives are women, although Aileen Van Tyle at Sarah Coventry said some sales are handled by men. "Women buy very quickly from a man," she said.

At holiday time, she said, the company organizes all-male parties. "They're very successful because they can get ideas on what to buy their wives."

The Direct Selling Association profiles the typical sales representative this way:

Most are women who tend to be young, outgoing and knowledgeable with a sense of humor and a flair for showmanship. They are looking for a second income to stretch the family budget or buy luxuries, but they also enjoy free time from everyday responsibilities and the satisfaction of making money on their own.

In many cases, they not only are selling products — they are selling selling as well, trying to convince others to join them in organizing parties. Many companies give extra fees for recruiting and overseeing new sales representatives.

Those who buy at selling parties may fit a profile similar to that of the sellers. They enjoy getting out of the house and finding a good buy. They may feel obligated to buy in exchange for being entertained, although they also feel it's a cheap price for an afternoon or evening out.

But Charles Lapp, visiting professor of marketing at the University of Dallas, said there is no real need for anyone to succumb to such pressure.

"There is a choice," he said. "For example, I avoid stores I know are high pressure. My wife won't go to these parties, as she knows she'll feel obligated to buy and she can't take the pressure. I don't think many women can."

Party-plan products may cost more than products in stores, but Lapp said comparisons are difficult because the products at parties and in stores are not exactly the same.

"They have a unique product," Lapp said. "Therefore, people are willing to buy at a higher price, especially because of the attention they get. The parties help communicate news as well as being purveyors of goods. They serve a social purpose which is not so costly as compared to other social functions."

Some persons may be wary of investing in home-selling plans because of adverse publicity from so-called "pyramid schemes" in recent years, but Lapp doesn't feel pyramiding is a danger. Neither does Jim Wiggins of Deco Plants.

"It's associated with the pyramid deal quite a lot," Wiggins said. "We're just a little over three years old, and a lot of people haven't heard of us yet. So the first thing we have to get over is we're not a fly-by-night company."

All involved agree that home selling is big business, and getting bigger all the time.

"It's a growing trend," said Kenneth Robar, executive vice president of Sarah Coventry. "It takes a lot of accumulated expertise and is far more complex than meets the eye. More retailers are going into this all the time. Companies like Sears and J.C. Penney are doing more of it."

Late last year readers of The Nation began seeing the following classified ad:

"Take part in The Nation's novel subscription building campaign. Invite like-minded friends to your home to subscribe to The Nation and meet The Nation's Publisher, Editor and well-known authors."

Karen Polk, assistant to publisher Hamilton Fish, said the subscription-selling parties are part of Fish's drive to make the magazine self-supporting after many years of a deficit underwritten by a financial benefactor.

One of the first get-togethers, held in New York, attracted about 200 people, who joined former Attorney General Ramsey Clark and Carol Bellamy, president of the City Council in New York. The price of admission was a $21 one-year subscription.

"At the party we urged people who were there to buy subscriptions for libraries or for schools," Ms. Polk said. "We raised about $4,000."

The parties, she said, provide a fresh approach to a perennial problem.

"With the small circulation that The Nation has now (about 30,000), 200-plus subscriptions is a substantial amount, especially when we're making money."

"The usual methods — direct mail, blow-in cards, things like that — are a shot in the dark. It's not a sure thing that you'll even make all your money back. In this case we made money."

"It's a long and tedious process but people who are subscribing get a familiarity with the people who are running the magazine. We get a loyal following that way — and that's important when you're trying to build a solid circulation base."

For about a year Diane Schuch, 36, has conducted shows for Transart.

A widow, she needed a way to make money and still have enough time to spend with her 4-year-old daughter, Gretchen. But her old job at a downtown St. Louis department store, plus some university classes, took too much of her day.

"I had to drop Gretchen off at day-care at 8 o'clock in the morning, because I worked downtown until 5:30," she said. "I couldn't even get back to day-care before it closed. It meant being away from her from 8 in the morning until after 6 at night."

Joining a friend who had been successful at Transart, she invested $125 for a portfolio of sample prints, mats and frames, plus business needs such as catalogs, order forms

VEPCO Generator Shutdown Will Prove Costly

RICHMOND (AP) — An immediate, forced shutdown of one of its two nuclear power generating units at Surry will cost ratepayers more now but could save them money this summer, says Virginia Electric & Power Co.

Vepco spokesman Doug Cochran said Wednesday if the Surry plant is shut down for only about three weeks "it would work to the customers' advantage."

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission on Tuesday ordered the nuclear unit shut down for inspections because of the possibility the pipes that carry coolant for the reactors might not withstand the pressures of an earthquake.

An NRC spokesman said Stone & Webster Engineering Corp., which designed the nuclear units shut down in Virginia and two other states, had admitted there was a flaw in its computer model which led to installation of the faulty pipes.

A State Corporation Commission lawyer said Vepco customers will see no immediate effect in their bills, but the SCC did order Vepco to make a prompt report on the financial impact on ratepayers.

Vepco apparently expects to pass the extra costs along to consumers through the fuel factor, but SCC General Counsel Richard D. Rogers Jr. said any adjustment first will have to go through commission review at its next quarterly hearing.

Nuclear power is much cheaper than power generated by the use of coal or oil, and Vepco said using fossil-fuel generating units while the Surry units are shut down could cost Virginia ratepayers as much as $250,000 a day in higher bills.

Vepco Board Chairman T. Justin Moore said he expects the plant to be closed for about three weeks, and NRC Assisant Director Bryan Grimes said analysis of a design flaw in Surry's piping system should take until early April.

These calculations, however, do not take into account the possibility that the NRC might require design modifications to ensure that Surry's nuclear units can withstand a major earthquake.

Vepco officials have expressed confidence the plant is safe.

Cochran said the timing could negate additional costs down the road because Vepco will use the down time to do routine preventive maintenance and inspection work now that had been scheduled later in the year.

"By scheduling it now," he said, "it will allow the unit to operate in the late spring and summer during the peak period. The increased cost of power now would be offset by that."

He also said that because of a greater demand for power during the peak periods of electricity consumption the customers actually could pay a little less.

Asked what would happen if the Surry unit remains down longer than three weeks, Cochran said, "we would have to sit down and calculate that." But he acknowledged the longer the plant is out of service the more fossil fuel would have to be burned to generate the power.

Consumer Congress of Virginia spokesman Taylor Cousins urged the SCC Wednesday to make Vepco collect from Stone & Webster. He said at a news conference, "If Vepco has been sold a bill of goods in faulty design, it should go after the designer and contractor, not the consumer."

The NRC action affected only one of the two nuclear units at Surry. The No. 2 unit had been off the line since Jan. 26 for steam generator repairs and refueling and is not expected to be back in service until mid-summer.

The shutdown of the Surry plant leaves Vepco with only one nuclear unit operating — Unit 1 at the utility's North Anna plant in Louisa County, where four units eventually will be in operation.

Vepco has 1.2 million customers in Virginia and in parts of North Carolina and West Virginia.

'78 Fish Catch Record In N.C.

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — Commercial fishermen in North Carolina sold fish worth $41.6 million during 1978, a record for the state and almost 47 percent more than was sold in 1977.

At least part of the increase was due to inflation and better reporting methods, according to fisheries officials. The 1978 catch fell just short of 300 million pounds, the third highest on record and the most in 10 years.

The shrimp catch, the state's most valuable fishery from 1966 to 1977, was just over half the 10-year average in 1978. Two cold winters and unusually wet springs virtually wiped out pink shrimp, which winter in the mud beneath Pamlico Sound.

The federal Small Business Administration has made disaster loans totaling $1.4 million to 135 hard-pressed shrimp fishermen in 10 coastal counties.

Dennis Spitzbergen, shrimp specialist with the North Carolina Division of Marine Fisheries, said heavy rainfall in February and March has lowered salinity in the state's estuaries again this year, possibly setting the stage for another poor shrimp crop. He said April rainfall will be crucial in determining the size of the 1979 crop.

"It may still be able to right itself," Spitzbergen said. "We're still crossing our fingers. Right now, the estuaries are fresher than we would prefer. We are not optimistic."

The sharply reduced shrimp catch was more than balanced by greatly increased landings of blue crabs, sea scallops and menhaden. Some North Carolina shrimp fishermen refitted their boats for scalloping and ranged as far north as New Jersey.

The 1978 scallop catch was three times as large as the 1977 catch and brought fishermen a record $4.4 million.

The menhaden fishery continued to have the biggest economic effect in the state's seafood industry. The 1978 catch of $8.5 million was the best ever and landings of more than 191 million pounds were the highest since 1961.

Home Sales....

and finished samples.

Now, Ms. Schuch works with her partner between 40 and 60 hours a month, calling on commercial clients and organizing home showings. She figures her earnings at anywhere from $15 to more than $100 an hour, depending on sales. Her biggest sale was $420 in two hours, from which she earned a 40 percent commission.

Besides being a big help financially, her job with Transart has helped her keep in touch with her daughter.

"I only have to leave her perhaps an hour and a half before she goes to bed, if I limit myself to home shows at night. So except for the time that she's in preschool three days a week, we can be together."

"Now Gretchen plays Transart lady. She uses her lunch box and a tote bag and pictures cut out from magazines."

On a snowy January day Ms. Schuch presided over a show for 10 young women at the home of Mindy Sciales, who was recruited when she attended an earlier showing and bought two pictures now hanging over her couch.

For acting as hostess, Mrs. Sciales earned a free gift plus a discount ranging from 10 to 30 percent, depending on how many sales Ms. Schuch made plus how many of the guests signed up to have their own shows in the future.

After the guests socialized over cookies and cups of hot spiced wine, Ms. Schuch stationed herself on the floor in the center of the room and began taking prints, mats and frames out of two large sample cases.

Her sales pitch occasionally had to compete with the exuberant babbling of four toddlers who tagged along.

She explained that each order is custom made, matching picture, frame and mat to the buyer's home decor. The finished product, costing between $10 and $86, is guaranteed, she said, with one exception:

"If you get angry at your husband, take it off the wall and throw it at him and the glass breaks, we won't replace that."

Ms. Schuch took out about 225 samples, one by one — from Monet and Renoir to Winslow Homer and Norman Rockwell, florals, hunting scenes, "abstracts, discreet nudes. The prints were passed from hand-to-hand, and each guest was asked to pick those she may want to work with later.

"Don't worry," Ms. Schuch said. "This isn't how I sell. If you pick four or five prints, I'm not going to come in with a hard sell. Just choose ones you can play around with and have a little fun on a snowy day."

While Mrs. Sciales and her mother helped mind the children, the guests looked over the prints. Half an hour later, when the sample cases were empty, Ms. Schuch asked everyone to take the prints they liked, sit on the floor and experiment with colors that would be right for them.

The women spent some time with the prints — comparing how they looked with different combinations of frames and mats. Ms. Schuch drifted through the group, gave suggestions and answered questions.

After the show, when the orders had been taken and the samples put away, Ms. Schuch assessed how things went.

"It was a really good show, surprisingly enough," she said. "The girls weren't very attentive. It's very unusual for babies to be along, because most of my shows are at night. But it worked out fine, because the women wouldn't have been able to come otherwise."

"It was a $240 show, and the national average is $150. So for about two hours work, I earned $96."

Workshop Held Here

A Student Financial Aid Drive In Workshop was held on the Pitt Technical Institute campus Saturday, sponsored by the North Carolina Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators, in cooperation with the State Training Grant Program.

Hosts for the workshop were Nancy Taylor, director of financial aid, and Sue Glisson, both of PTI. Bob Boudreaux, Financial Aid Director at East Carolina University, conducted the event.

The workshop's purpose was to discuss issues, problems and training concepts on an up-to-date basis, centering on 1979-80 needs and changes in financial aid.

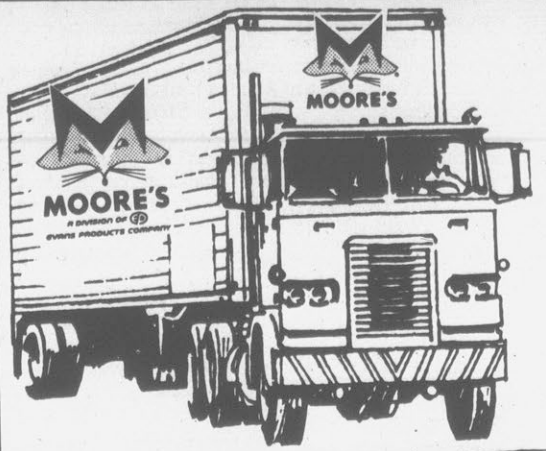

Twenty persons from 15 community colleges, technical institutes, and four-year colleges and universities in eastern North Carolina attended the workshop.

Aron A. Modlin of Jamesville, Pace Program officer with the state Department of Human Resources, and Gwen Davis of Raleigh, program administrator for the College Foundation, shared current information concerning their programs.

Army Looks For Bonus-Takers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army is looking for more young people willing to accept $1,500 in cash to sign up for six years in the Army Reserve or National Guard.

The $1,500 cash bonus — or $2,000 in education aid — has been offered for enlistment in certain units since last Dec. 1. The Army said Wednesday that it will offer the same deal to anyone joining any unit during the next three months. The new program, aimed at overcoming "severe shortages," goes into effect today.

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil issues dominated activity as the stock market staged a moderate rally today.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 4.08 at 849.45.

Advances led declines by about a 4-3 margin in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Actively traded oil stocks included Gulf Oil, up 1/2 at 25 1/2; Standard Oil of Ohio, up 1/4 at 48; Texaco, ahead 1/2 at 25 1/2; Occidental Petroleum, up 1/2 at 25 1/2; and Reserve Oil & Gas, 1 higher at 14 1/2.

On Wednesday Rep. Jim Wright, D-Texas, the House majority leader, said he believed a majority of Congress would go along should President Carter propose energy measures, such as removal of domestic price controls, to stimulate production.

Carter is expected to announce soon his proposals for dealing with the nation's energy problems.

In addition, analysts noted widespread expectations that oil-industry earnings for the first quarter will generally show strong gains because of rising prices and heavy demand.

Scott Paper led the active list, up 1/2 at 18 1/2 in trading including several large blocks.

The NYSE's composite index rose 21 to 56.16. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.21 at 172.04.

Volume on the Big Board came to 12.15 million shares at noontime, against 12.28 million at the same point Wednesday.

agency, was reported to have questioned in a preliminary report the necessity of some oil companies' big cutbacks in jet fuel supplies to airlines.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer said today the GAO had calculated, for example, that Texaco imported only 0.3 percent of its total crude oil needs from Iran, yet blamed the Iranian crisis for a 20 percent cutback in jet fuel shipments.

An unnamed Texaco official was quoted as saying the situation "does look like something fishy." But he suggested one explanation might be that Texaco was diverting oil to companies it operates internationally which were harder hit by the Iranian oil cutoff than were Texaco's domestic operations.

On another energy-related issue, major automakers told a House energy subcommittee Wednesday that the government's schedule for boosting car gasoline mileage could trigger an economic disaster for the industry and consumers, while saving little or no gasoline.

Industry spokesmen testified they could meet the overall goal of producing cars that average 27.5 miles per gallon by 1985. But they criticized the Transportation Department's step-by-step schedule for meeting that target.

However, year-to-year decreases are likely in the reporting periods ahead because the spring of 1978 saw a dramatic sales recovery from a winter slump.

The performance put the domestic industry 11.4 percent ahead of 1978 for the year to date and showed no early signs of the slowdown forecast by most analysts for later this year.

DETROIT (AP) — Car sales continue to outpace 1978 levels as the U.S. industry posted a 5.2 percent increase for the first 10 days of March over the same period last year.

The five U.S. automakers delivered an estimated 233,736 cars during the period with small cars making another strong showing, the industry reported Wednesday.

Hunt Sees 'Unbalanced' Tour By HEW

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt said today that officials of the federal Department of Health, Education and Welfare made "unbalanced" comparisons in their visit to predominantly white and black University of North Carolina campuses two weeks ago.

Hunt, at a morning news conference, also said he received a telephone call Wednesday night from HEW Secretary Joseph Califano about the desegregation dispute, and believed there would be a resolution of differences "in the next few days."

The governor tempered that assessment, however, by saying later, "I have no idea what the prospects are for settlement."

The visit was by top HEW officials to a number of the 16 UNC campuses. During their visit, the officials called some of the facilities at predominantly black campuses inadequate — at one point saying some facilities would be inadequate for a high school.

Hunt said the officials' visit was "unbalanced" because they compared facilities that offer only four-year liberal arts programs with campuses such as N.C. State University, which offer Ph.D. programs.

"Certainly they did compare very different things," he said. "Certainly they found some things that were inadequate. But you can't really compare those two programs."

Hunt said that "in fairness," the officials should have compared predominantly black four-year degree granting programs with predominantly white campuses offering the same programs.

He did not name the campuses he contended should have been visited. And Hunt said neither he nor UNC President William Friday were consulted by the officials prior to their visit.

Hunt said Califano called him to say HEW had not made a decision on UNC's desegregation plans by the Wednesday, court-imposed deadline. But Hunt said he did not discuss with Califano the issues involved in the dispute, and was staying out of the negotiations by UNC and HEW officials.

Hunt said he told Califano he was concerned that a settlement be reached swiftly, and that Califano said he was becoming "more personally involved" in the negotiations.

"Any reasonable discussion that can be held forthwith would be appropriate," Hunt said. "But I don't think it should extend any great length of time, and I think it would be resolved in the next few days."

At stake in the negotiations are an estimated $80 million to $100 million in federal aid received by the UNC system. HEW has threatened to cut that money off for non-compliance, but Hunt repeated his view that it would take a long time for HEW to be able to cut off a large amount of money.

Most of the trials have been held secretly, but spectators, supporters of the revolution, have been allowed to view some.

The trial opened as Prime Minister Medhi Bazargan renewed his criticism of Iran's revolutionary leader, the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and the revolutionary trials and executions held secretly.

"It is a pity that the trials are taking place behind closed doors and are now becoming unreligious and inhuman," Bazargan said in an hour-long nationwide radio broadcast.

Five executions were reported Wednesday in Kuzestan Province. The dead were convicted of murder and torture.

The prime minister also criticized Khomeini for issuing orders without consulting him. He cited the ayatollah's order to provide free water, electricity and bus services to the lower classes. As a result, Bazargan said, the city of Qom went bankrupt overnight.

Former Iranian Chief On Trial

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Former Prime Minister Amir Abbas Hoveida went on trial for his life today before an Islamic revolutionary court, charged with offenses that included "creating corruption on earth" and "entering into battle against God and his emissaries."

The former prime minister is the closest adviser to deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi known to be in the custody of Iran's revolutionary government.

The 57-year-old former government leader, his head bent and hands crossed, sat in a stark makeshift courtroom as the indictments were read and the prosecutor asked the Islamic tribunal for the death penalty.

The trial was attended by about 200 spectators. About 62 persons have been executed since the monarchy was toppled in a popular uprising last month. Most of them were convicted of political crimes but some were executed for sexual offenses.

Most of the trials have been held secretly, but spectators, supporters of the revolution, have been allowed to view some.

Baker Roars To Pole Spot

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — Buddy Baker is back in his element. He's back on the super-speedways of Grand National stock car racing, where his throttle-mashing, ragged-edge-of-control style reaps the most rewards.

On Wednesday in the first round of qualifying for Sunday's $220,000 Atlanta 500 Grand National stock car race, Baker again put himself back in the spotlight.

Second fastest behind Baker's 165.951 mph was Bobby Allison at 164.905, two-tenths of a second off Baker's speed — quite a sizable margin for the track.

"I'm still not used to coming to a race track and winning pole positions," said Baker, who joined the Harry Rainier team this season after a couple of disappointing campaigns. "This is a super race car, backed by a super team, and I guess I've got to be pleased with the run."

"I never know what this car's going to accomplish. It's capable of anything sometimes."

Baker downplayed his own role in setting the fastest qualifying speed, but his fellow drivers did not.

"You've got to hand it to anyone who could go out in this wind and run 166 mph," said Bobby Allison, who said he was surprised speeds have dropped off so much here since last fall. "Someone just forgot to tell Baker the speeds were slower."

Allison said he thought his run was good enough for the No. 1 starting berth, except, "I wasn't counting on Baker. I caught him a couple of times on the clock in practice and he sure wasn't running that fast."

Baker noted it was a very good lap that won him the pole and $2,000 in cash, but not a perfect one.

"It might have seemed like a perfect lap to the people in the stands, but it wasn't," he said. "The car really did push some going into the second turn. But it accelerated good enough when I punched the throttle to cure that."

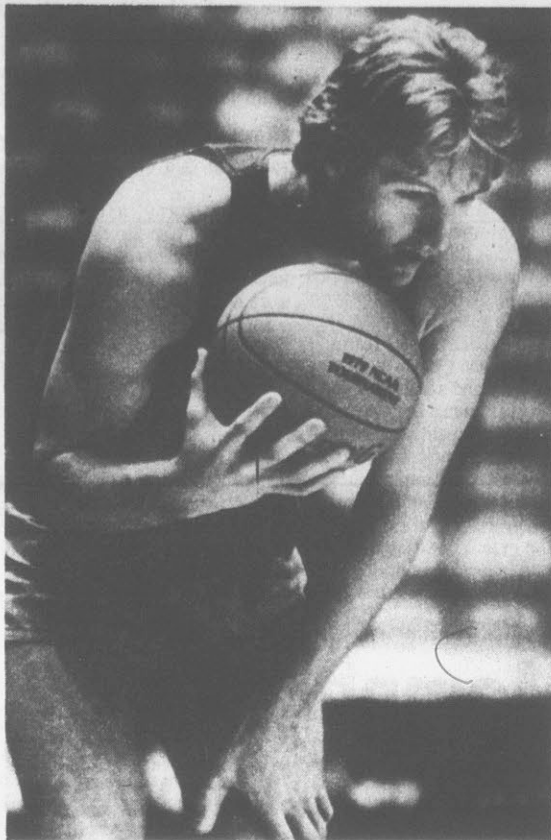

Bucs Slip To 27th

PINEHURST — East Carolina's golfing fortunes took a dip yesterday in the second round of the Pinehurst Intercollegiate Invitational, as the Bucs slipped from 24th to 27th in the 28 team field. Only Pembroke State trails the Pirates.

East Carolina finished the day with a total of 822. Steve Jones leads the Pirates with 79-79-180. He is followed by Joey Hines at 81-80-161; Frank Acker, 82-83-165; Stan Stewart, 85-83-168; and Carl Beaman, 86-86-172. Not counting in the team score is Jerry Lee, 84-96-180.

Wake Forest has taken the team lead with a total of 754, three strokes ahead of Oklahoma State and North Carolina, tied for second at 757. Centenary and Texas A&M are next at 765, followed by Houston at 766, Oral Roberts at 768, South Carolina at 770, N.C. State at 773 and Clemson at 775.

Wake's Gary Hallberg leads individually with 68-72-140. The tournament concludes today.

Lady Pirates To Be Stronger

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina University's women's track team is coming off a state championship year last season, and Coach Laurie Arrants faces this season with mixed emotions.

The Pirates should be stronger individually this year, but there is less depth this season, and that might make it tough for them to successfully defend their title.

"Our outlook is pretty good," Arrants said. "We're going to be stronger in several areas, and I think we have several people who could meet national qualifying standards."

One thing Arrants has done to strengthen the team is to move Cookie McFatter from the 400 to the 800 meters, where she is a stronger runner. "She's already run some times that are just a half-second off national qualifying times," the coach said.

The other strong unit is the 400-meter relay team over Dawn Henderson, Catherine Suggs, Marie Gudjohnsen and Venita Williams. All are sophomores, except for Williams, who is a freshman. "They really have a good shot at reaching the nationals, too," Arrants said.

While the Lady Pirates are stronger, they don't have the depth they had last year. "We only have 14 on the squad. Last year, we won simply by having more seconds and thirds that any one else. This year, it's going to be a lot tougher in team meets."

The Pirates have no high jumper, no javelin hurler, and no one in the 400-meter hurdles, so this will hurt them in team-scored meets. Also, Arrants feels that her schedule is tougher this year.

In the long jump, Gudjohnsen and freshman Roz Majors also rank as possibles to crack the national qualifying standards, although Arrants calls it long-shots now.

Carol Belcher and Carolee Davis, both freshmen, should do well in the 400-meter dash, while Joy Forbes joins McFatter in the 800 for added strength.

Linda Mason, who came to ECU as a hurdler, switched to the 400, and now to the mile, appears to be a coming threat in that event. Williams will also run in the 100 hurdles and do well, as well as anchor the 400-relay. "She won the state high school hurdles last year, and should be real strong for us."

NCAA Regional Semifinals Open With Four Games Set Tonight

By The Associated Press

In case you hadn't heard, Marquette and DePaul and Louisville and Arkansas are playing basketball tonight in the National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament.

The problems those four teams face are the same ones that San Francisco and Oklahoma face, but in a far different way.

You see, second-ranked UCLA and No. 1 Indiana State are also playing tonight and, as might be expected, the Bruins and Sycamores are getting the lions' share of the attention.

Marquette, ranked 10th, faces sixth-ranked DePaul in the opener of the West Regional semifinals at Provo, Utah. Then San Francisco, ranked 12th, goes against a bunch of Bruins intent on proving that UCLA belongs back at the top, where it reigned for so many years.

In the Midwest Regional semifinals at Cincinnati, No. 13 Louisville opposes fifth-ranked Arkansas, then 16th-rated Oklahoma takes on the Sycamores, who are equally intent on proving that Indiana State belongs right where it is — No. 1 in the rankings.

There are eight other teams — all ranked — waiting in the wings for their chance to advance to the regional finals. On Friday night in the East semis, it's No. 8 Syracuse facing No. 14 Pennsylvania and No. 17 St. John's playing No. 18 Rutgers at Greensboro, N.C. And on the same night, the Midwest semis at Indianapolis send No. 4 Notre Dame against No. 19 Toledo and No. 3 Michigan State against No. 7 Louisiana State.

The NCAA has to share the spotlight tonight with the National Invitation Tournament's third-round games. Old Dominion visits 15th-ranked Purdue and Alabama takes on Texas A&M in Houston, with the winners playing each other next Monday night in the semifinals at Madison Square Garden. Indiana and Ohio State, who received third-round byes, will play the other semifinal leading to next Wednesday night's NIT championship matchup.

UCLA, which had a few centers of note (Lew Alcindor, Steve Paterson, Swen Nater and Bill Walton) during its championship seasons, now must overcome San Francisco's 7-foot-1, 255-pound All-America Bill Cartwright, owner of a 24.1-point scoring average and an NCAA-leading 16 rebounds a game. Among the Dons' other starters are 6-8 Guy Williams, 6-8 Bart Bowers and 6-6 Doug Jemison.

"They are big and physical and also very quick," acknowledges Bruins Coach Gary Cunningham. "They'll be the biggest team we've played this season."

The Marquette-DePaul game is a rematch of the teams' regular-season thriller, when Gary Garland's basket just before the buzzer gave DePaul a 61-60 victory. "We always play close," says DePaul Coach Ray Meyer. "They know us. We know them. They know our style. We know their style. It should be a good game and it will go one way or the other by a point or two."

Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton naturally has Louisville's Cardinals on his mind at the moment. "Anyone of their starters could have a 20-point night. They're explosive. They have as much talent as anyone we've played," he says.

But he's also looking ahead to a possible date with the unbeaten Sycamores. "Indiana State, day in and day out, may be the better team (than his Razorbacks) but at this stage of the game anyone who's left has a shot."

Denny Crum, Louisville's coach, expressed a bit of concern over Arkansas' methodical style. He said he would have preferred to face a run-and-gun team.

"They do an excellent job of controlling the tempo," Crum said of the Razorbacks. "Personally, I don't like their tempo, but I can't argue with their results. They do what they have to do to win."

Lee Rose, Purdue's coach, is also looking ahead — a lot further ahead than Sutton. "We've been learning to play together and I think we're beginning to develop some confidence," he said of his Boilermakers, the only ranked team left in the NIT.

Decision Near On ECU Coach

East Carolina University may be close to naming its new basketball coach.

Athletic Director Bill Cain said the selection committee, which has not been announced, is to meet sometime today to go over the situation, and could reach its final choice and pass it along to Chancellor Thomas Brewer.

Cain declined to say how many candidates for the job have been interviewed, but it is believed that around five were contacted by the group. Some of the interviews, it is understood, were conducted out of town to avoid publicity.

"We are going to make absolutely certain we are getting the best man we can," Cain said.

While it is possible that the new coach could be named as early as Friday morning, it was likely that the announcement would not come until Monday or

Tuesday. "In our meeting, we will decide on whether we feel we have found our top candidate, or whether we need to do some more searching," Cain said.

The new coach will replace Larry Gillman, who resigned just over two weeks ago after serving two years of a three year contract.

Aside from assistant coach Terry Kunze, no names have been officially announced as candidates for the job. Speculation has listed a number of people including several head coaches from smaller schools, at least one high school head coach, and several assistants both from the ACC and outside it.

Softball Meetings

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will hold organizational meetings for various softball leagues in the next two weeks.

The Industrial League will hold its meeting on Monday, March 26 at 7 p.m. The Church League will meet the same night at 8 p.m.

The Women's League will meet Wednesday, March 28, at 7 p.m., with the City League meeting the same night at 8 p.m. All meetings will be held in the Recreation and Parks auditorium at Jaycee Park. Team managers should attend the meetings.

If interest warrants, leagues may also be formed for 35 and over men, or for women in a church league.

For further information, contact the department's athletic director's office, 752-4137, extensions 220 or 248.

Ayden-Grifton Sees Bright Spring

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer
Ayden-Grifton's spring sports coaches are optimistic about their teams this season. Baseball should be better defensively, softball should have good hitting, golf is brand new and track is looking for an elusive victory.

key players returning this season, and although coach Allan Wilson is not sure about his pitching, the team should be better defensively than last year. Wilson made some shifts in his defensive lineup which he feels will help the team. "We're probably a little better defensively right now than we were last year," he said.

Pitching is the biggest question mark. Three Ayden-Grifton hurlers have experience, seniors Jolly Dail, David Smith and Mike Teachey. In addition, two freshmen, Bernard Riccarelli and Art Rouse will help out on the mound. "That's one big plus—two young pitchers. We hope to let them pitch a little bit in our next two non-conference games."

Riccarelli and Rouse are starters in the field. Riccarelli is the team's second baseman, while Rouse plays right field. Other top fielders include junior Clayton McLawhorn in left, senior Wayne Newton in center, first-year senior Hector Lewis at first and senior Ed Coley behind the plate. McLawhorn can also pitch, while Newton is a two-year starter and Coley was all-conference last year. Hitting could also be a problem for the Chargers as the team's top hitter a year ago transferred to another school just before the season. Wilson noted, however, that he was pleased with the team's 11-hit effort in its second game against Kinston.

Some good batters, as well as good infielders and outfielders. The lack of practice could hurt the squad early in the year, Purvis said, but after a few games, things should be back to normal. Senior Shanda Brock, the team's third baseman, is a four-year player and is providing leadership this season, Purvis said. She is a quick defensive player.

The other infielders, sophomores Ann Strong at first and Edna Braxton at second and junior Marie Lewis at short, work well together. Senior Mary Rowe plays left field and is the leader of the outfield, Purvis said.

Anderson expects junior John McDougald to do well for the team this year. "He is a real strong player. I've had him in my junior program over here." Other top players are Alan Daughtry, Randy Taylor, Craig King and Cynthia Lilley, who "might be a sleeper."

Track The Ayden-Grifton track team didn't win a single meet last season and coach Leonard Rowe is hoping he can improve on that record.

"To tell you the truth, I'm guardedly optimistic," he said. "Last year we didn't win any, and I'm certainly hoping to improve on that."

The Chargers are hampered by the fact that the school doesn't have a track. "I'm not sure what to expect. Our major handicap is that we don't have a track to practice on every day."

In addition, there are only two people on the team with any experience, senior Cleveland

MSU job. Murphy told reporters late Wednesday he thought the chances of luring Brown to Memphis State had dwindled considerably.

"I'm not optimistic, but coach Brown still has not completely closed the door," Murphy said. "I know this is a very difficult decision for him and I told him to go back to Denver to give it some more thought. In the meantime, we will continue with more interviews as soon as possible in hopes of naming a new basketball coach by this weekend."

Brown was the first person to interview for the job after Yates announced his resignation Feb. 7, effective the end of the season.

Brown first met with MSU officials Feb. 28. Assistant Tiger coach Vertie Sails and Virginia Commonwealth coach Dana Kirk have since interviewed for the job.

"I'm going to go home and keep in touch with coach Murphy," Brown told reporters before departing for Denver, where he coached the National Basketball Association club.

Brown and his wife, Barbara, arrived in Memphis on Tuesday night, kindling speculation that he was ready to take over the operations and hospital rooms cost a lot more than you think."

There is little doubt that, from top to bottom, the ACC is as good or better than any other league in the country. Only the Big Ten really has grounds to challenge the ACC this season.

But only two ACC teams have ever won the national title, North Carolina in 1957 and N. C. State in 1974. In 12 of the league's 26 years, the conference representatives in the NCAA have not made it out of regional competition.

Besides that, college basketball is becoming much more balanced. Going into the tournament, most experts agreed that any one of nearly 20 teams was capable of winning it all.

The teams that beat the five ACC schools are all good teams, but probably only Ohio State was known by most fans in this area, although St. Johns defeated Duke earlier this year and Alabama knocked Carolina out of the Mideast Regional in 1976.

Many ACC fans become so involved in their team and league that they overlook the fact that there are a lot of good teams around the country that can beat any other team on a given night. It's unfortunate that they all surfaced at once against the ACC.

Wilkins, Worthy Bolster McDonalds Lineup
Washington's Dominique Wilkins and Gastonia Ashbrook's James Worthy announced yesterday that they will participate in the McDonald's All-American high school all-star basketball game in Charlotte this month.

That announcement must have been music to the ears of the game's sponsors, who are virtually assured of good attendance with the addition of the state's two best players to the lineup.

By agreeing to play in the game, which is unsanctioned by the North Carolina High School Athletic Association, the two give up the right to participate in spring sports or the East-West all-star game in Greensboro this summer.

The NCHSAA said earlier that it would not sanction the McDonald's game because it considers such contests exploitation of high school athletes. But by taking that position, the group has hurt the East-West game, which will lose fan interest without Wilkins and Worthy.

It might be worth the NCHSAA's while to reverse its decision on the McDonald's game.

Memphis Won't Accept Answer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Refusing to take "No" for an answer, Memphis State University officials have asked former Denver Nuggets coach Larry Brown to reconsider taking a job as Tiger basketball coach.

Brown, who was approached by MSU officials more than a month ago after the resignation of basketball coach Wayne Yates, said Wednesday he is inclined to turn down the job.

But before leaving the city with his wife, Brown promised athletic director Billy "Spook" Murphy he would ponder the matter.

"I'm going to go home and keep in touch with coach Murphy," Brown told reporters before departing for Denver, where he coached the National Basketball Association club.

Brown and his wife, Barbara, arrived in Memphis on Tuesday night, kindling speculation that he was ready to take over the

THE HEADS OF a lot of Atlantic Coast Conference basketball fans are hanging low this week after all five of the seven league members who made it to post-season tournaments were ousted from those events in just over 24 hours' time.

First, there was what has come to be known as "Black Sunday." Playing their first games in the NCAA Eastern Regional, North Carolina and Duke were both upset. The third-ranked and top-seeded Tar Heels fell to Pennsylvania 72-71 and the sixth-ranked and second-seeded Blue Devils were defeated by St. Johns 80-78.

Black Sunday was followed by "Black Monday." Much to the surprise and chagrin of ACC fans, who turned their attention to the National Invitation Tournament after Sunday's results, all three ACC teams in that event were beaten Monday night.

Virginia, Clemson and Maryland had all won in the first round of the NIT, but by midnight Monday their seasons were also over. Old Dominion defeated Clemson 61-59 in double overtime, Ohio State topped Maryland 79-72 and Alabama edged Virginia 90-88.

It was only the second time since 1971 that an ACC team failed to win a single NCAA tournament game and one of the earliest ends ever to an ACC basketball season.

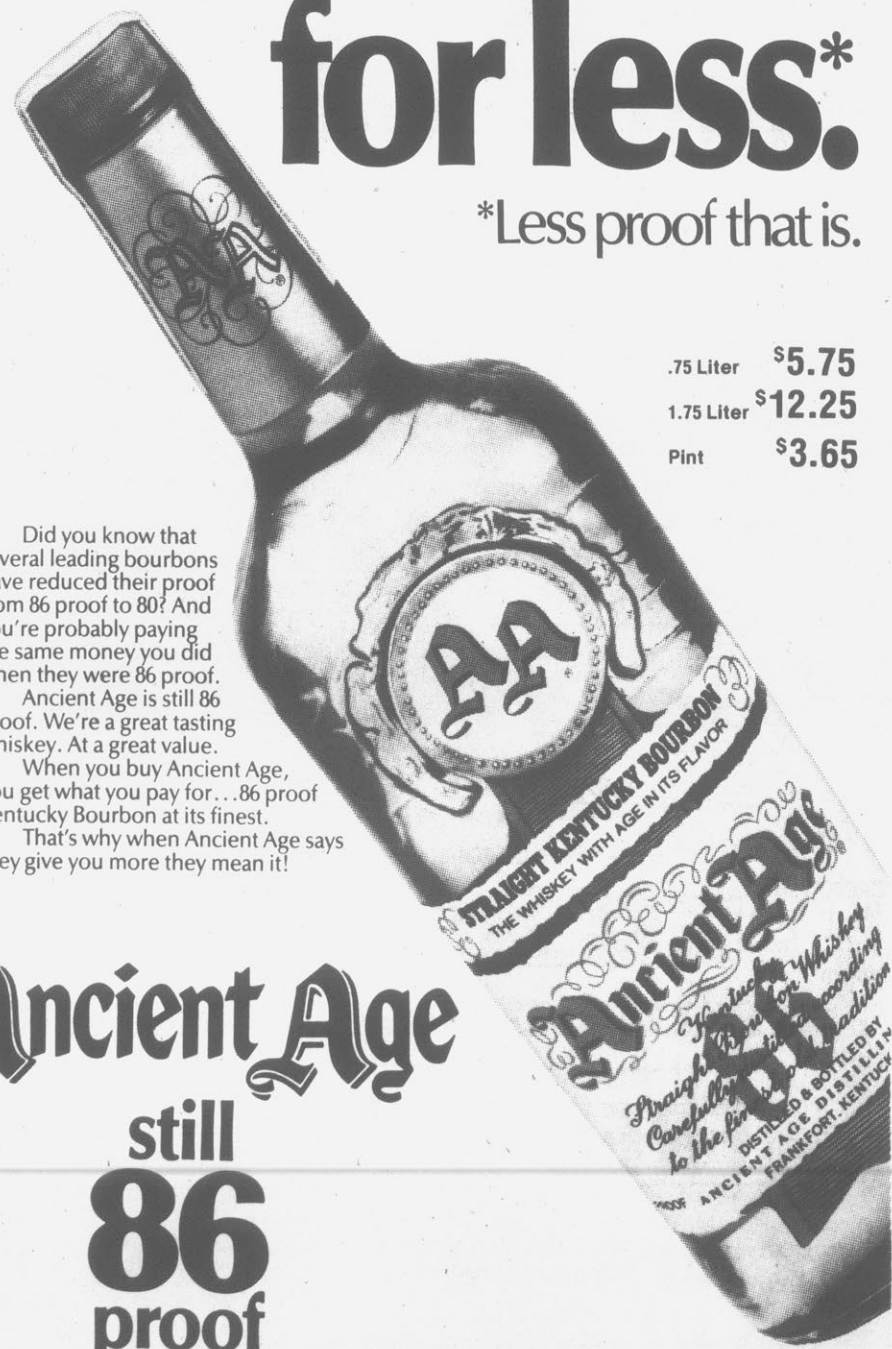

WHAT DO THESE results say about the ACC? Is the conference slipping, or was fan expectation just too great?

Fan expectation has always been high in the ACC. They have long espoused their league as the best in the country and have been downright arrogant about the brand of basketball played in this area.

It might be worth the NCHSAA's while to reverse its decision on the McDonald's game.

Never settle for less.*

Milwaukee Sets Record Against Jazz

By The Associated Press
According to Milwaukee's Junior Bridgeman, the best of defense is a good offense. "The key was our pressure defense," Bridgeman said Wednesday night after scoring

25 points and leading the Milwaukee Bucks to a club-point mark as they played a 158-102 tune on the hapless New Orleans Jazz. "We got them down and wouldn't let up," Bridgeman added. "It became a fun sort of thing." The Bucks scored the game's first seven points and gradually stretched their lead to 48-27, 71-47 at halftime, 115-74 after three periods and 142-92 on a fourth-quarter basket by Lloyd Walton. Spurs 125, Lakers 112 George Gervin pumped in 34 points to reach the 12,000-point plateau in only his seventh pro season as San Antonio handed Los Angeles its fifth consecutive loss. Rockets 129, Kings 107 Rudy Tomjanovich scored 30 points to lead six Rockets in double figures. Tomjanovich connected on nine of 12 shots in the first half. Warriors 113, Hawks 96 John Lucas scored 21 points and backcourt partner JoJo

White added 18 as Golden State handed Atlanta its second consecutive setback after a nine-game winning streak. Clippers 110, Trail Blazers 105 Lloyd Free scored 29 points and led San Diego to its 12th victory in 13 games. The triumph was the third in a row for San Diego, which has been the NBA's hottest team in the last two months with an 18-6 straight defeat. Nuggets 120, Nets 110 Dan Issel scored 24 points to pace Denver, which opened a 55-38 halftime lead and was never challenged in the final two periods. Suns 126, Celtics 117 Paul Westphal scored 39 points and Walter Davis added 24 to lead Phoenix.

Pollsters Claim Skepticism Over Security In SALT II

WASHINGTON (AP) — Challenging polls that show the public backing a new strategic arms limitation treaty, an anti-SALT group said today that its own survey found Americans skeptical and uninformed about any new agreement with the Soviet Union.

In particular, the Committee on the Present Danger said its survey found that the public is concerned about how well the United States would be protected under a new arms agreement.

"The American people are skeptical about SALT II, don't know much about it and, clearly, are not prepared to support the treaty without additional safeguards," said a statement released by the group.

The committee's poll did not include any questions directly asking for a "yes" or "no" on a new agreement.

Instead, the poll, conducted by a private New York firm, offered a series of possible positions ranging from strong support for to strong opposition to a new arms pact — called SALT II — now being negotiated between this country and the U.S.S.R.

About 30 percent of the 1,211 persons interviewed said they don't know enough about SALT II to have an opinion.

Some 8 percent said they "strongly support SALT II" and 12 percent said that "on balance" they would have to support it.

At the other end of the spectrum, 9 percent said they "strongly oppose" SALT II.

In between was a group of 42 percent who agreed with the statement: "I would like to see more protection for the United States before I would be ready to support SALT II."

The committee said the poll has an error margin of 3 percentage points either way simply because of sampling problems.

The committee said it commissioned its own poll because it is "puzzled and even disbelieving" of polls showing strong support for a new agreement limiting nuclear weapons.

The committee criticized polls conducted by The Associated Press and NBC News and by The New York Times and CBS, saying their questions on SALT are "highly generalized, hypothetical and simplistic" and are "apt to be completely misleading."

"If you ask the wrong questions, you get the wrong answers," a statement by the committee said.

The AP-NBC News poll taken Feb. 5-6 found 81 percent of the public backing a new agreement, 14 percent opposed and 5 percent not sure.

The AP-NBC News question was: "Do you favor or oppose an agreement between the United States and Russia which would limit nuclear weapons?"

School Held Science Fair

BETHEL — Seventh and eighth grade students at Bethel Elementary School participated in the school's annual science fair last week.

Seventh grade students constructed life science projects, with eighth graders involved in earth science projects. The top winners will display their projects in the East Carolina Regional Science Fair.

The first place in earth science projects was won by Emily Smith with "Volcanism." Ken Whitehurst was honored with second place for "Seismograph." Honorable mentions went to Lee Manning, Billie Lynn Briley, Sheila Everette, and Becky Clemmons.

David Copeland won first place honors in the life science division for his project, "The Heart." Second place honors went to Lee Stocks for his project, "Herbicides." Martha Rollins, Ricky Hines, Chris Ayers and Trevor Swindell all won honorable mentions.

Director Lauran Oppenheimer, science teacher, served as director for the event. All students at Bethel were able to tour the projects.

Clash During Peace Protest

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli troops killed a Palestinian demonstrator and wounded two others today in the sixth straight day of protests against an Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty, the mayor of Halhoul in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River said.

In addition to Halhoul, demonstrations flared in five other West Bank towns. Outlawed Palestinian flags were raised in Bir Zeit and Jericho. Youths erected stone barricades on roads in Beit Jalla, Jericho, Hebron and Halhoul, and students stayed away from school in Ramallah.

Mayor Mohammed Milhem said in a telephone interview that Nasri Anani, about 21, was shot dead and the others were wounded in Halhoul, 15 miles south of Jerusalem. Israel's military government in the West Bank had no immediate comment.

Milhem said trouble in his town started Wednesday night when an Israeli bus was stoned. Milhem said he and the members of the town council were summoned to the local military governor's office at 2 a.m. and were detained "in a very humiliating way" until 10 a.m. They had to stay under a stairway in the governor's office, Milhem said.

Earlier this week four Palestinian youths were wounded as Israeli troops opened fire to break up a demonstration in Bir Zeit, and local Arabs charged that the Israelis were aiming to kill.

Ask Penalty Set Aside

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Attorneys for Robin Pridgen filed a motion Wednesday asking that the former Wilson County sheriff's recent conviction and sentence be set aside.

Pridgen, 55, was convicted of taking bribes to protect prostitution, conspiracy to violate a federal racketeering law and failure to report earnings from the bribes in his federal income tax reports. He resigned as sheriff Monday, the day he was sentenced to six years in prison.

In another motion, the attorneys ask for a new trial, contending that the prosecution failed to provide them with evidence that could have damaged the credibility of key prosecution witnesses.

The motion, filed in U.S. District Court in Raleigh, charged the federal government with six errors in the trial.

Among other allegations, the motion said federal prosecutors failed to provide to defense attorneys a statement from an FBI agent denying that he had sex with a former prostitute.

Billie Dean O'Barr of Houston, who has said she is a former prostitute, testified that she had sex with the agent and twice had sex with Pridgen as payment for protecting prostitution.

The motion also says that Pridgen and his attorneys were denied adequate time to prepare for the trial.

Island Paradise For Bird-Lovers

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — Jamaica is a bird-lovers' paradise, with nearly 300 different varieties in an area roughly the size of the state of Connecticut. The swallow-tail hummingbird is known in Jamaica as the "doctor bird" because of its long, forked, black tail, reminiscent of the black frock coats worn by physicians in Jamaica a century ago. The U.S. turkey vulture is called "today" and Jamaica's "John crow" is more familiar to North Americans as "robin redbreast."

Smith Bagley And Four Others Charged In Stock Manipulation

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Indictments returned against Smith Bagley and four others Wednesday charge that they engaged in a scheme to defraud purchasers of Washington Group stock by artificially inflating its price. It said they encouraged company employees to buy stock by arranging for them to borrow money from the Northwestern Bank for the purchases.

The indictment said the loans were inadequately secured, financially unsound and "made in reckless disregard for the interests of the Northwestern Bank." It said the five concealed from the bank the personal interests of Bagley, Gilley and Chapple in the loans.

The indictments climaxed a year-long investigation of the company, a financially troubled food and textile conglomerate based in Winston-Salem. Bagley is a former company president and lives in Washington.

Others named in the 11-count indictment were Dewey Chapple Jr., former executive vice president of the Northwestern Bank; James R. Gilley, a former president of the company; Shirley Grubb, Bagley's secretary; and William F. Thomas, head of the Winston-Salem office of Interstate Securities Corp. of Charlotte.

Chapple declined comment, and the others could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

The grand jury accused the defendants of taking part in a scheme to defraud purchasers of Washington Group stock by artificially inflating its price. It said they encouraged company employees to buy stock by arranging for them to borrow money from the Northwestern Bank for the purchases.

The indictment said the loans were inadequately secured, financially unsound and "made in reckless disregard for the interests of the Northwestern Bank." It said the five concealed from the bank the personal interests of Bagley, Gilley and Chapple in the loans.

The defendants were charged with one count each of conspiracy to manipulate stocks and one count of manipulating stocks of the Washington

Group. Gilley, Bagley and Chapple were also charged with two counts of misapplying bank funds of the Northwestern Bank.

In addition, Bagley, Gilley and Thomas were charged with three counts each of defrauding employee participants at Washington Group's profit-sharing program by causing about half the assets of the fund to be sold at a loss of about $480,000, with the proceeds of the sale being invested in the company.

Bagley, Gilley and Thomas were also charged in three counts with defrauding employee participants in a stock-purchase plan.

Chapple also was charged with making false statements to a bank in order to secure a loan. The indictment said he stated that the loan was for consolidation of debts but that he used it to pay for the purchase of Washington Group stocks.

The conspiracy and securities fraud charges each carry a maximum penalty, upon conviction, of $10,000 or five years in prison or both.

Actor Ends Testimony

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lee Marvin, star witness in his own defense, has left the witness stand after the judge ruled the actor's sex life is not relevant to the landmark lawsuit by his former lover, Michelle Triola Marvin.

The key ruling by Superior Court Judge Arthur Marshall came when Miss Marvin's attorney, Marvin Mitchelson, asked Marvin: "While you were in London (in 1966), did you have sex with any woman or anyone other than Michelle?"

Marvin's chief lawyer, A. David Kagon, objected, and the judge ruled in his favor, barring Marvin's answer.

Mitchelson protested that Marvin's defense team was permitted to open the issue of extracurricular sex with the testimony of a witness who claimed he had an affair with Miss Marvin while she was living with the actor.

"If Mr. Marvin can make inquiry into her sex life...I think I should have the right to inquire of him," Mitchelson said.

The judge disagreed. He said evidence of infidelities by Marvin would only support the actor's contention that he felt no ties to the former singer he lived with for six years.

Strike Fails To Idle Disneyland

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Despite a strike by 530 maintenance workers, the seven-day schedule is underway at Disneyland, where supervisors and workers brought in from Disney World and Disney studios are staffing all attractions.

The world-famous amusement park went to its expanded schedule Wednesday. Disneyland spokesman Bob Roth said all rides have continued to operate during the five-day walkout, and daily admissions have been running ahead of the same period last year. The company has offered a 14 percent raise over two years.

Pledges 'Reality' In Rare PBS Sitcom

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's hardly news here when a new TV sitcom goes into production. Hollywood churns out sitcoms as fast as Detroit produces cars. Only, sitcoms have a higher recall rate.

But it is a development worthy of note when the Public Broadcasting System gets into the sitcom game. Public TV is many wonderful things, but a barrel of yuks, it's not.

Yet, here it is: "The Righteous Apples," a sitcom scheduled for PBS this fall. So what gives?

"I'm not sure the term 'sitcom' best characterizes what we're doing," says Topper Carew, the show's writer and producer. "It's more a 'reality-based comedy. Ah, now that sounds like public TV.

There are more sitcoms on commercial TV than any other type of program, and "most of what you see," Carew contends, "is absolutely mindless. No tooth or bite, no substantive reality."

Carew promises plenty of substantive reality with "Apples." It's about race relations at an integrated school in Boston. In the first episode, a black girl gets pushed around by some white kids. Remember, this is reality-based comedy.

"Unfortunately, I think the perspective of the creative community in this town comes from the side of a Beverly Hills swimming pool, rather than from contemporary, day-to-day realities that people experience," Carew says.

Some of the substantive realities from which Carew's show will draw its humor:

"Inflation, unemployment, gross alienation and deterioration of the family structure." Tee hee.

Carew says that as a black producer, his job is to "produce programs for the general public that are rooted in the minority experience."

"I know people don't want to deal with the hard realities of racial discrimination in our society," he says. "But we chose comedy because we thought it would make it (the message) more palatable. Racial discrimination is widely misunderstood, it's been with us for hundreds of years, and we want to bring that to the attention of the American public on a wide basis."

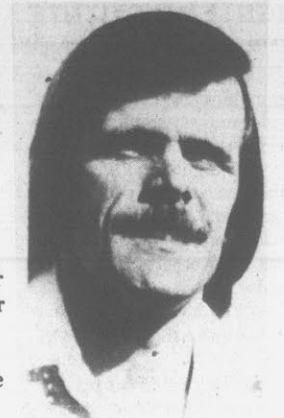

Carew, who produced the kiddie show "Rebop" for public TV, said he wanted his show to reflect ugly realities the way Norman Lear's shows, such as "All in the Family," sometimes do. Lear's production companies, in fact, have helped "Apples" get started by offering production consultation and other assistance for a $1-per-month fee.

Carew says the plan is to generate interest among teenagers and minorities — public

TV's most elusive audience — and then hope "The Righteous Apples" catches on with others. "I'm convinced that what we're doing is going to have an impact on commercial television," he says. "I think we're going to establish that there is another way to do things, that, in fact, the American public is ready. I'm tired of people telling me I'm overestimating the intelligence of the American public. I'm putting my tail on the line to prove it."

74,000 Kids Go Back To School

ST. LOUIS (AP) — It's back to the books for 74,000 students following the end of the longest school strike in the state's history. But educators say they are not sure how they will make up for 56 days of idleness.

Wednesday was the first day of school here since teachers walked out of the classrooms Jan. 16, demanding a $3,150 pay raise. The school board offered $2,150. The strike officially ended Monday night when teachers approved a new two-year $2,625 pact. Superintendent Robert Wentz said one way to make up lost classroom time would be to extend the semester into July.

You can flout most of the accepted canons of bidding — if you possess the skill of Benito Garozzo to make your contract. Garozzo's decision to bid at the two-level on two queens is recommended only if you possess his flair. It was based on his fit for his partner's suit — if North retreated to two spades, it would be fine, and if he bid another suit, Garozzo could give preference back to spades. East made a well-judged bid of three no-trump — a contract he would probably have made had he been allowed to play there. But Garozzo went on to the heart game.

West led the king of clubs, ruffed by declarer. The ten of diamonds was won by the ace, and the club returned was ruffed. A diamond to the jack won, and Garozzo paused to survey his prospects.

It was nearly certain that East held the ace of spades and king of hearts for his bidding. Thus, it seemed that declarer must lose a heart and two spades in addition to the diamond for down one. But watch Garozzo's wizardry at work.

He cashed the ace of trumps and ruffed dummy's last club. A diamond to the king stripped that suit from his hand and dummy, and the groundwork was complete. Now he exited with a trump to the king.

Since a minor suit return would permit Garozzo to discard a spade from his hand while ruffing in dummy, East did the best he could by returning a low spade. But Garozzo knew the position. He played low from his hand and won in dummy with the king. Now he simply led another spade, intending to go up with the queen if East played low. East just made matters a little quicker by rising with the ace, to complete the defensive book, and Garozzo claimed the balance and his contract.

Cultists Facing Varied Action By The Courts

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. have in custody on various (AP) - Police either seek or charges five members of a church police say is a personality cult that may use violence.

The five are members of New Hope Miracle and Deliverance Center, a cult that police say bases its doctrine on violence. Two cult members were recently charged with kidnaping two children of former cult members.

Laura Walls was charged with trespassing at the house of a former sect member Wednesday. She was released on $200 bond Wednesday afternoon.

The former New Hope member, Lillian Robinson, said Mrs. Walls came to her 14th Street house on March 1. Police said they had tried earlier to serve the warrant drawn against Mrs. Walls March 3, but were told by New Hope members she did not live with them.

Mrs. Robinson has told police in taped interviews that New Hope is a personality cult based on violence.

She also drew a warrant for Catherine Sumpter on March 3. Mrs. Robinson said Mrs. Sumpter came to her home March 3. Mrs. Sumpter has not been arrested, police said.

In an unrelated matter involving New Hope members, Norman Wilson, 18, and Marlon Martin Jr., 38, were served with first-degree burglary warrants Wednesday.

Wilson and Martin are also charged with two counts of kidnaping in the abduction of 21-month-old Monique Latoya Brown and 22-month-old Sheba Jeter Saturday morning. The men were being held in Forsyth County Jail Wednesday night.

Bond for the two New Hope men was raised yesterday from $20,000 to $40,000. Police said they talked with Wilson and Martin about the charges Wednesday but declined to discuss the interviews.

Wilson's brother, David Lee Wilson, 19, is also being held in Forsyth County Jail under $25,000 bond on charges of second degree burglary, assault with a firearm on a police officer and possession of a weapon of mass destruction.

Those charges stem from a break-in at the house next door to the abducted children's home a few hours before the children disappeared. Police confiscated two M-1 .30-caliber rifles in the incident.

An official from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms said the rifles are not illegal weapons. He said the M-1s were at one time issued to paratroopers but cannot be bought on the retail market. The ATF is now tracing the rifles, he said.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: It's not the right time to try and make progress in communicating and coming to an agreement with others, so sidestep attempting to do so for now. Concentrate on plans for the future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Not a good day to expect associates to do what you desire, since they are concerned with their own affairs. Use care in motion.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Be prepared to do your own work today without assistance from others. The use of tact can produce the right results now.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have good creative ideas but you have to work hard to make them successful. Be alert at all times today.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Don't become too concerned with the problems of others now, or you could come out the loser. Be wise.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A letter that is annoying should not be answered until your temper cools off. Then you can do so intelligently. Be logical.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Not a good day to make decisions on important business matters since your thinking is not quite up to par now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A personal matter should be well thought out before do anything about it. Show increased devotion to loved one.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Don't try to obtain information you need that would require unorthodox methods. Handle a credit matter wisely.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Steer clear of irate friends and avoid arguments. Know what your aims are, personal and in business. Make plans to gain them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Do nothing that could irritate anyone who has power over your affairs or you could later regret it. Show that you have poise.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Not a good time to start a new project. You don't need a new ally at this time, so discourage one who is pressuring you.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You want to renege on some promise, but it's to your best interest to carry through. Don't lose your temper with anyone.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have a pleasant disposition, plus the ability to become a peacemaker, so encourage this and your progeny could be a positive force in society. There is a fine musician in this chart. Don't neglect ethical training.

Woman Says She Saw Cross-Burning

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) - A woman in the Forsyth County community of Lewisville says she saw men in Ku Klux Klan robes at a recent cross burning in front of a black family's home.

The woman, who asked not to be identified, also said that people in the neighborhood are worried about Klan activity there.

"We're really scared of these people," she said. "It's just demonic."

Two cross burnings at the beginning of the month are recent examples of apparent renewed Klan activity in the county. A recent exhibit of Klan memorabilia at the county public library sparked violence.

In the first cross burning, Forsyth County deputies report that a cross was burned on the front lawn of the home of James Stowe and his family March 5.

In the second incident, on March 10, 20 to 30 men in Klan robes marched to the Stowe's house chanting "white power" and carrying shotguns, rifles and clubs, according to deputies.

Just before the march, a 15-to-20-foot cross was ignited in the yard of William Joe Transou, a member of the Federated Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, according to deputies.

Mrs. Stowe reported to deputies that her husband was not at home at the time of the second cross burning, and she and her baby fled the house.

Stowe could not be reached for comment. Neighbors say they believe the family, which had lived in the neighborhood a short time, has moved.

Transou said Wednesday that he lit the cross the night of the march but that he did not know who was responsible for lighting the first one.

Burning a cross on someone else's property is a felony, but it is legal to burn a cross on one's own property.

Transou said he had organized the march as a warning to his neighbors. "I wanted to let people know that if they're messing with me, they're in for trouble," he said.

He said that 15 of the Klansmen had carried shotguns but had not taken them off his property.

Participant In Assembly

Kevin Andrew O'Neal of Greenville, son of Mrs. Willene O'Neal, was among approximately 400 high school students who participated in the ninth Youth Legislative Assembly held March 9-11 in Raleigh. He is a student at E. B. Aycock Junior High School.

During the three-day event, the students met to discuss a number of issues including juvenile justice, students' rights, health care, adolescent sexuality and local government. After meeting in small task forces to discuss issues and develop recommendations, the participants held a mock legislative session. There the entire group voted on "bills" presented by each of the task forces. A final report of their recommendations will be prepared for state government administrators and legislators.

Governor Jim Hunt spoke to the students at a luncheon on Friday, March 9.

The Youth Legislative Assembly was sponsored by the Raleigh Youth Council and by the State Youth Council which is a component of the N. C. Department of Administration's Youth Involvement Office.

Charge Lawmen In Wiretapping

BURNET, Texas (AP) - The local sheriff, a deputy and another man have been charged with federal wiretapping violations in connection with an investigation of drug smuggling. Burnet County Sheriff R.C. Hullum, deputy Chuck Johnston and Bill Lintz, a resident of nearby Bertram, were arraigned Wednesday. The charges include conspiracy to perform wiretapping and possession of wiretapping equipment. The arrests came while this small central Texas town was still buzzing from the arrest on counterfeiting charges of banker-civic leader, Herman Braley.

Varied Reaction, From Afar, To Iran Revolution

By MARC CHARNEY
Associated Press Writer
EDITOR'S NOTE: The following was prepared with the help of interviews conducted by Iranian journalists Kamran Baigan and Jamshid Shafiei who are in the United States on temporary assignment as trainees with The Associated Press.

NEW YORK (AP) — Tens of thousands of Iranians are in the United States today, deeply affected by a revolution they can only watch. They keep a sometimes hopeful, sometimes wary eye on their homeland.

They worry about families back home. Many have had difficulty getting cash from Iran. Some talk of returning home now. Others wait to see what the new government will be like.

They are a varied group, with a broad range of hopes and fears. That range — if not a consensus, which would be impossible to measure — can be seen in the examples of several Iranians now in New York:

—A photographer, 36, sympathetic to the revolution and critical of what he called arbitrary, confusing work conditions under the shah: "I am happy with what the Imam Khomeini (the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, leader of the revolution) has done during this short time, including his declaring Iranian independence from foreigners... After 11 years of working in Tehran, I took the time for myself to come to the U.S. and to establish myself in photography. But now I am planning to send my wife back to Iran to see what the situation is; and if the work is suitable, I will decide to go back to my country... now, all people will have the right to work, and will not be forced to depend on decisions by one individual, the shah. In that case... I would like to go back and be among my nation."

—A student who says he left Iran against his will last year because his college was shut down by strikes and he could not continue his studies: "I agree that we definitely needed a revolution, but not necessarily an armed one in the streets." But, he adds, "If the majority of people in Iran want the country in a certain shape, it is their absolute right and I do not want to interfere." He also says: "The main thing I worry about at the moment is my family."

—Other students, members of radical groups, criticize such attitudes as selfish and petty. Some are deeply religious; others want the revolution to concentrate more on redistribution of wealth. Many are suspicious of the motives of Western news organizations and will not discuss their personal feelings with reporters.

—A woman, 29, married and a beautician: "I feel freedom (coming) from Iran; would that the same freedom existed for men and women!... (Under the shah) women could dress like Western women and took part in social functions, but within various organizations, those women who were most attractive and pretty were employed first, and others later... I hope for an Islamic republic that would follow the Imam Ali's philosophy that said: 'So train your children to live and be useful for the time that they live in.' The Imam Ali, who lived about 1,350 years ago, was the founder of the Shiite branch of Islam, formed after the death of the prophet Mohammed.

—An Iranian Jew, a recent arrival, who did not believe assurances of safety extended by Iran's revolutionary government: "Our people have been mistreated in almost all religious-oriented states in the Middle East. Why should I think Iran is going to be any different?"

—A stage designer who feels that under the old regime his real abilities were hidden because job preference went to foreigners. He plans to return soon, keeping in mind Iran's centuries-old history and rich culture: "Although Iran was conquered by Arabs about 13 centuries ago and we accepted Islam since then, we never lost our national identity and never adopted the 'Islamic' culture... No matter what the movement in Iran is called at the moment, there is no reason for me to believe it is any stronger than the original Islamic movement 13 centuries ago. If we could fit that into our own social and cultural mold, we can do it again."

There is no way to tell how representative these views are. Nobody has conducted a poll of Iranians in the United States, and when they deal with reporters many — including these — won't be quoted by name. It is also difficult to find out even how many are here, or how many have arrived recently. The State Department says 30,722 non-immigrant visas for America were issued in the Iranian cities of Shiraz, Tabriz and Tehran during the last three months of 1978, nearly double the 16,372 issued in those months of 1977. But immigration officials have counted only students — some 50,000 — actually in this country, and say they don't know how many non-students are here.

Radical students have occasionally made headlines — as when anti-shah protesters stormed a Beverly Hills mansion where relatives of the shah were living — but it appears far more have quietly gone about their studies. When cut off from funds, many sought extensions on tuition, and immigration officials said they could work part time.

Now, however, officials at the New York Institute of Technology, the University of Southern California, and the University of Texas — all with substantial Iranian populations — say students appear to have come up with cash on their own, or with help from other Iranians. Only 15 of 1,000 at USC, and perhaps 10 of 230 at Texas, dropped out. Immigration officials in both Dallas and Los Angeles say they have heard of no big jump in applications for work permits.

And, says Vance T. Peterson, USC director of academic relations: "The students are managing. They've gone to the Iranian business community and borrowed money and have borrowed money from each other. Their persistence is amazing. We were pleasantly surprised that so many are sticking it out."

Chapter Plans Mar. 17 Meet

The Pitt County Chapter No. 1530 of the National Association of Federal Retired Employees will meet Saturday, March 17, 12 noon, at the Three Steers Restaurant, for a Dutch luncheon.

Ms. Vickie Smith, an electrologist from Ayden, will give the program. Members are urged to be present and visitors are welcome.

SATURDAY NIGHT SING

There will be a gospel sing at the Meadowbrook Pentecostal Holiness Church, Mumford Rd., Saturday, March 17, 7:30 p.m.

"The Travelers" from Elizabeth City will be the guest speakers. The Rev. William Tyson, pastor, invites the public to attend.

Mail Delays

Mail intended for both Vietnam and Jamaica is being delayed because of existing conditions in those countries, according to the U. S. Postal Service.

Post offices in the United States are continuing to accept mail for both nations, but delays may add weeks to delivery times. Both airmail and surface mail to Vietnam have been delayed since the China-Vietnam border was closed by the present conflict. U. S. Postal officials are now attempting to find an alternate route for Vietnam mail.

The Postal Service is also holding air and surface mail intended for Jamaica because of the strike of postal workers in that island nation.
