Approve Minimal Transfer Of Students

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer
Retention of the current kindergarten through grade six structure within Greenville's elementary schools carried both public and school board sanction at the public hearing held on the issue Tuesday night at the action meeting of the Greenville Board of Education for the month of March.

After a long (three hours plus) input from a large number of spokesmen from more than 200 attending the meeting at Agnes Fullilove School, members of the school board voted five to three for Plan A.

Plan A, one of three plans presented by Superintendent Cox, is the plan calling for minimal changes in student transfer in order to achieve a racial balance within the schools. The other two plans, B and C, were designed to provide two possible clustering structuring alternatives to be considered.

The adopted plan, the one recommended previously by Cox, prior to a request from the board for alternative plans to be considered at a public hearing, will result in the move of 78 students to achieve the racial balance based on current policy.

Students to be moved are from two basic areas. Of the 78 total, 25 are from an area east of the Green Mill Run and north of U.S. 264; 18 are from Oakhurst Subdivision east of Greenville and south of U.S. 264; 25 are from Stratford and Stratford Arms — accounting for 68 students, all white.

Another ten students, non-whites, will be moved to provide the 78 students to be moved to achieve the racial balance.

Plan B, one of the two plans based on clustering, was projected on four schools — Eastern, Elmhurst, Sadie Sautler, and Third Street and Elmhurst grades five and six. Explaining the basic structure of the three plans prior to input and action, Cox stressed that the figures projected for 1979-80 enrollment did not include estimates for kindergarten grades, but that the figures did include the 74 students who have recently moved to Hopkins Park and under Plan A are assigned to South Greenville School.

From the beginning of the public input, it was apparent that the majority of the public attending was in favor of Plan A, which was several times termed "the least disruptive."

Plan C, the second of the clustering plans, was predicated on the school district being divided into north and south zones, with Wahl-Coates and South

Greenville having kindergarten through grade two; Eastern and Sadie Sautler grades three and four; and Third Street and Elmhurst grades five and six.

Additionally, petitions were submitted by four segments of educators which all advocated maintaining the current K-6 grade structure outlined in Plan A. These were: the Association of Classroom Teachers of Greenville City Schools; the Greenville chapter of the N. C. Association of Educators; the principals of the six elementary schools; and the staff of Wahl-Coates School.

Each of these petitions expressed a desire that the current pattern be maintained with the least possible changes involved. Another factor stressed by Cox and members of the school board is that the effort to achieve a racial ratio presented last night applies only to a racial balance within the schools, and does not apply to individual classrooms. Several questions were asked about the racial ratio policy currently in effect. Cox explained that the racial composition of the student population for children in kindergarten through grade six is 47.9 percent white, and 52.1 percent non-white. The board's policy is to maintain a distribution level of five percent above or below this percentage, and that when it exceeds that percentage either way, redistricting will take place to alleviate any imbalance.

At this time, the only im-

Israel And Egypt Clash Over Palestinian Role

By The Associated Press
Israel and Egypt clashed today over the future of Jerusalem and the Palestinians in their first public disagreement since President Carter's visit to iron out final obstacles to a peace treaty.

But Egyptian Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil said he doubted the dispute would impede the treaty signing.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin told Parliament in Jerusalem that Israel would never allow a Palestinian state in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River or the Gaza Strip or return East Jerusalem to the Arabs.

"It will not happen," Begin told the Knesset, opening debate on the treaty. "We won't agree to it, we won't allow it, we won't make it possible."

Begin said he was replying to a statement by Khalil that Israel would have to withdraw to the borders that existed before the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, surrender Arab Jerusalem and accept Palestinian statehood.

"My dear, honorable Dr. Khalil," said Begin, "write this down: Jerusalem, the one Jerusalem, is Israel's eternal capital. It will never be divided again."

In Cairo, Khalil said Begin's statement "spoils the atmosphere" of the treaty and said it was "an unsuccessful beginning to a period in which we had hoped that all parties would work...for a just and lasting peace and a comprehensive settlement in the Middle East."

Khalil said: "As for the Palestinian question, the Camp David accord clearly stipulates the necessity of solving the question from all its aspects, thus taking into consideration the legal rights of the Palestinians. It is along this principle that they will decide their future."

When asked if the dispute could block a signing, Khalil said, "No, I don't think so."

As the Israeli debate opened, right-wing opponents of the pact set up two makeshift settlements in the northern Sinai Desert, and a shouting Communist member was expelled from the Knesset after accusing Begin of "selling Israel to the Americans." But observers predicted at least 100 of the 120 members would endorse the pact Wednesday at the end of the two-day debate, which was being broadcast live on television and radio.

Begin planned to leave Friday for Washington to sign the treaty, and Al Ahram, the semi-official Egyptian newspaper, said Egyptian President Anwar Sadat would leave Saturday. The signing at the White House is expected Monday.

Al Ahram said Sadat would spend five days in the United States, then return to Egypt to submit the treaty to the 360-member National Assembly for ratification.

Govm't Investigator Appointed To Review Bank Loans To Carters

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Griffin B. Bell announced today the appointment of Paul J. Curran, a New York lawyer, as a special counsel to investigate bank loans made to President Carter's family peanut business by the National Bank of Georgia.

Bell said a Justice Department investigation into the Carter family loan transactions "did not resolve all factual and legal issues."

"Therefore, the department has carefully considered available courses of action to pursue the inquiry," he said. "It is in the best interest of the administration of justice and the public's perception of the fairness and impartiality of justice that an independent special counsel be appointed."

Curran was U.S. attorney for the southern district of New York from 1973 until 1975 and is now a member of the law firm of Kaye, Scholer, Fierman, Hays & Handler. He was a member of the New York State Commission of Investigation for five years and was appointed its chairman in 1969 by former New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, a Republican.

There have been no formal public accusations that President Carter or his brother, Billy, have engaged in wrongdoing.

A federal grand jury that has been investigating the banking practices of former budget director Bert Lance opened an inquiry late last year into $6.5 million in loans made to the Carter peanut warehouse by the National Bank of Georgia in 1975 and 1976 when Lance was bank president.

Bell's decision to appoint a special counsel instead of a special prosecutor means Assistant Attorney General Philip B. Heymann, chief of the Justice Department's criminal division, will retain ultimate decision-making control in the case. Bell was reported to have based his decision on a recommendation by Heymann.

A special report issued by two bank directors in January concluded that the bank did a poor job in handling the warehouse loans.

The president's 63 percent share of the business is in a blind trust while he is in office.

CBS News reported Monday night that the Justice Department will ask the grand jury in Atlanta to indict Lance and three unidentified associates next week.

Over-Regulation Cited By Graham

By REBECCA BUFFALOE
Reflector Staff Writer
Pitt County took time out Monday to salute its farmers through the county-wide observance of "Agriculture Day," as declared by the Pitt County Commissioners.

The Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce and WNCT Radio sponsored an "Ag Day" social hour and dinner, featuring North Carolina Commissioner of Agriculture Jim Graham Monday night at the American Legion building.

Approximately 75 persons connected with agriculture and agribusiness within the county were present to hear comments by Graham, who cited over-regulation as the greatest threat to North Carolina small family-owned farms.

"We must address ourselves to land use planning, so we can keep people in business, not drive them out," Graham stated. "Land use planning should be done on the local level, with help from the area Soil Conservation Service and county commissioners."

Graham pointed out that inflation, labor and the energy crunch were also factors in forcing small producers off the land.

"Agriculture, as we know it, will cease in North Carolina and the nation unless these problems are solved," Graham declared. "We can start by undoing the man-made problems of over-regulation."

According to Graham, environmental, safety and health laws involving fertilizer, pesticides and land use are some of the "unnecessary" problems forced on farmers by federal agencies.

"Farmers believe in a clean, safe environment but we can't grow food without using the tools science has given us," said Graham. "Federal agencies talk about all this runoff, but if that were true, how could a farmer maintain his topsoil?"

Jerry Powell of First State Bank and Chairman of the Board for the GACOC, followed Graham's remarks, with an explanation on the continuous cycle of lending money in the agricultural process.

"Farming is a big business here," said Powell. "A lot of people do not understand this cycle."

Mrs. Wilbur L. Worthington, publicity chairman for the Pitt County Farm Bureau, pointed out that agricultural production makes the United States the most affluent country in the world.

"One farmer grows enough for himself and 56 other people to these days," said Mrs. Worthington. "Our agricultural products help balance our trade deficits."

Mrs. Worthington pointed out that farmers will not stay on the land today if a profit is not made.

J. C. Whitehurst of the Coastal Chemical Corporation told how chemicals aid the farmer in cutting costs and fuel use, noting that farmers usually look for a $5 to $10 return on every dollar spent on agricultural chemicals.

Whitehurst also thanked all

Equal Rights

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The federal government is suing a wealthy wife to recover legal fees incurred by her unemployed husband.

"This is the first lawsuit of its kind that we know of," U.S. Attorney Peter Vaira said Monday in disclosing the action against Sally Friedland O'Neill, heiress to a supermarket fortune.

"We think the money is there and we should have it," Vaira added. "The taxpayers shouldn't have to bear the brunt of such an expense when the wife is wealthy."

"If the wife needed a lawyer, the husband would be obligated to pay her legal fees. What's good for the goose is good for the gander."

Alfred E. Smith O'Neill, 50, the husband, was convicted of 52 counts of mail fraud earlier this month after a seven-week trial, and is now awaiting sentencing.

O'Neill had claimed he was broke after he was indicted, and the federal judge appointed a lawyer which cost taxpayers more than $10,000, Vaira said.

At the time, he had two privately-retained lawyers but they withdrew after Mrs. O'Neill, whose father was one of the founders of the Food Fair supermarket chain, now undergoing reorganization in federal bankruptcy court, refused to pay their fees.

"We contend that under the equal rights amendment in the Pennsylvania Constitution the wife is under the same obligation to support her husband as the husband is required to support his wife," Vaira said.

Stand Behind Friday

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A legislative appropriations committee voted unanimously today to give University of North Carolina President William Friday a vote of confidence in UNC's continuing desegregation dispute with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Friday received the vote from the joint House and Senate Appropriations Committee on Education, after briefing legislators on the university's latest negotiations with HEW.

Friday said the university's new Washington attorney, Charles Morgan, met last night with Richard Beattie, assistant to HEW Secretary Joseph Califano. Friday said he did not know the outcome of those negotiations, but assumed they would continue this week.

"It's counsel to counsel now," he said. Friday said he also expected HEW to announce its next move in the deadlock within the next five to 10 days.

HEW let a court-imposed deadline pass last week without saying whether it accepts, rejects, or needs more time to talk about UNC's plan to desegregate the 16-campus system.

The committee gave Friday a warm reception, and gave him the vote of confidence on a motion by Rep. Jo Graham Foster-D-Mecklenburg, who praised Friday and the university's position in the dispute. "I think people should know great strides have been made in North Carolina," she said.

HEW has threatened to cut off the university's $89 million in federal aid received each year.

Friday told the panel he did not believe a fund cutoff was imminent. But he also said the department could be quickly effective by stalling future requests for federal research grants.

"I don't feel that is imminent with us right now," he said of the full cutoff. "There are long legal procedures they have to go through."

Federal Government Is Potential Buyer Of Currituck's Beaches

CURRITUCK, N.C. (AP) — The Currituck County Commission Monday night voted to ask Gov. Jim Hunt for an emergency meeting to discuss a possible move by the federal government to buy the beaches along the Currituck Outer Banks.

Commissioners sought the meeting after an official of the U.S. Department of Interior wrote Rep. Walter Jones, D-N.C., that the government has the money to purchase part of the oceanfront land along the narrow, 26-mile-long island off the coast.

Federal officials said in January that they were considering the purchase of part or all of the land in order to protect wildlife along the coast. However, they said at the time that there was no money earmarked for acquisition in the near future.

County Commissioner Ernie Bowden said the information in the letter to Jones was "in direct conflict with what we heard from officials on Feb. 5 in a meeting in Washington. We had not anticipated this so soon."

environmental study of the scenic beach strip to determine what effect development of the land would have on wildlife. There are about 40 permanent residents of the beach area, but almost 100 summer homes are located along the coastline.

County Manager Webb Fuller said local officials hope to obtain advice and assistance from the state in opposing the purchase of the land by the Interior Department.

"We have received more support from Virginia than from North Carolina in this process," County Manager Webb Fuller said. "We need more than just state support. We need direction. We need to put funds for it."

Bowden has said the value of the property on the island is about $125 million to $150 million and that the county would suffer a considerable loss in property taxes if the government took it over.

If the Interior Department decided to buy the land, it would have to deal with individual property owners.

Chains' Push Private Label Health, Beauty Cut Rate

By JOSEPH ST. AMANT LOS ANGELES (UPI) — There's a revolution afoot at the retail level of business — more and more big chains are offering health and beauty aids under private labels at reduced prices.

The consumer, hit by inflation, is trying to stretch the household budget and has become more price-conscious than ever.

The quality of the private label item is as good or better than the same national brand which must sell at a higher price due to the cost of advertising.

The man who offers these conclusions is Lawrence Weisberg, president of Iodent Company, which, he said, is the largest independent manufacturer of private labels.

"Hypothetically," he said, "take an item that sells under a national brand at $1. You can sell the same item — totally equivalent — under a private label at 69 cents."

"For national brands, one-third to 60 percent of the sales dollar is spent in advertising. I know of one big company that has spent $15 million to market a new shampoo. This is an item that sells for $1.59. How long will it take them to break even?"

"We basically are producing the same product as the national advertisers. We cut out the excessive costs."

Iodent once manufactured only a nationally advertised toothpaste. Now this is only a minor part of their business. Weisberg, explained how the transition from a single product to more than 300 items came about.

"You can call it a revolution of sorts. Four or five years ago, some retail people came to us. They told us they were selling name brands at a loss in many cases, using them as loss leaders. They said, 'We'd like to have a dentrice we could sell at a profit.' That's how we got started in private labels."

"Basically, the consumer has to perceive that the quality of the house brand or private brand is totally equivalent with the national brand."

"In the past three or four years, private brands have grown by leaps and bounds for two reasons — retailers were pressed to look for greater areas of profitability, and the consumer has been caught with a budget hit by inflation. The consumer is trying to make her budget go further and further but is looking for quality as well as price."

"Nationally, 30 percent of all food sales are in private brands. Relate that to toiletries and it isn't the case. Only 5 percent of toiletries are in house brands but it's growing. The consumer can get the exact same thing at a price 40 to 50 percent lower. Every major drug and food chain is reaching out more and more for price and quality."

Weisberg, 54, Chicago-born, began his business career as an accountant after graduation from the University of Illinois. He went to Iodent as comptroller in the early 1950s and 13 years later became president. He is now a merchandiser on the wholesale level and does a lot of traveling to drum up business and visit Iodent plants at Elizabethton, Tenn., and Walnut, Calif., near Los Angeles. The company is headquartered at Bloomfield Hills, Mich., near Detroit, where Weisberg makes his home. As a result of expanding business, another plant is under construction at Hightstown, N.J.

Iodent has its own laboratories to make sure the private brand products measure up to the nationally advertised brands and also uses independent laboratories to double-check quality.

"The consumer must have faith in the private brand or she will not buy" he said.

Health and beauty aids gross $12 billion a year so there's a lot at stake.

Weisberg has developed private brand business in South America, Europe and Hong Kong and domestically has contracts from many big chains such as A&P, Fed Mart, K-Mart and big grocery and drug firms in Southern California such as Ralphs and Sav-On.

"I couldn't have foreseen this trend to private labeling," he said, "but I couldn't have planned it any better for our purposes."

Organization Is Cooking Key

By CECILY BROWNSTONE Associated Press Food Editor — Myrtle Singer began cooking for charity when she was a young woman. That was about 30 years ago, but you would never know it from the way she looks: young, pretty and full of energy.

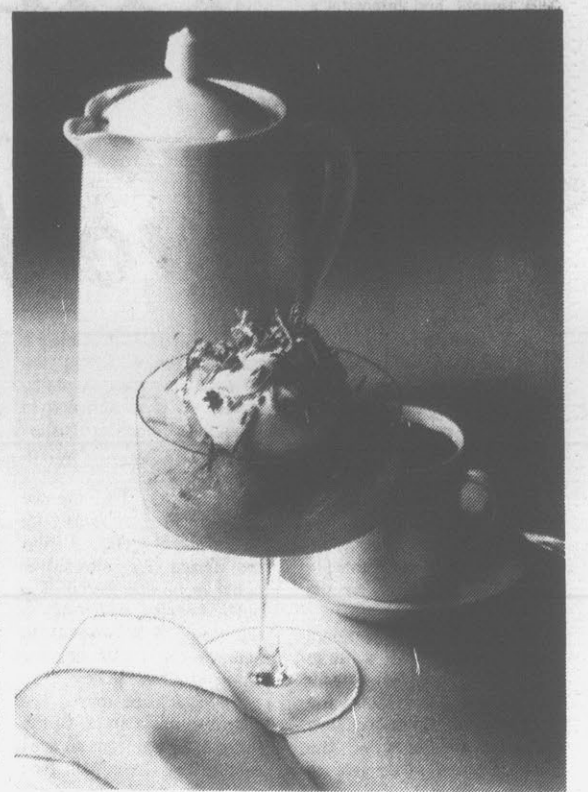

Way back in the late '40s, when her home was in Philadelphia, she joined a sisterhood and began preparing luncheons for the group's monthly meetings. These developed into cooking classes. Since then she has given the classes in Maine, where she and her husband spend their summers, and in Florida, where they live in winter. The proceeds are always used for charitable purposes.

Although Mrs. Singer is self-taught, cooking has never scared her. Her key to confidence? Organization.

For the cooking classes, given outside her home, she arrives with pots, pans, food processor, knives, spoons, copper bowl and whisk and a double hot plate. All ingredients are measured onto numbered trays, each corresponding to a numbered recipe.

For relaxed home entertaining, Mrs. Singer advises preparing ahead. When we asked her for a make-ahead dessert she herself enjoys serving to guests, she gave us her recipe for Orange Rum Compote. What distinguishes it is an amber-colored brittle that glitters like gold!

ORANGE RUM COMPOTE
8 large navel oranges
1/4 cup dark rum
1 cup sugar
1 cup water
1 cup heavy cream whipped until stiff with 2 teaspoons sugar and 1 teaspoon dark rum
Shredded coconut, toasted
Cut peel away from oranges so no white membrane remains; cut sections away from dividing membranes; sprinkle with rum and chill. In a 1-quart saucepan bring the sugar and water to a boil, stirring until the sugar dissolves; boil without stirring until amber color. Using pot holders because the syrup will be very hot, carefully pour it onto a buttered cookie sheet. Let stand until cold and brittle. Break up, then crush — there should be both crumbs and pieces about the size of peas. At serving time, sprinkle the oranges with the brittle and top with the whipped cream and coconut. Serve at once. Makes 8 servings.

A New Wrinkle On Growing Old

By Abigail Van Buren
1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I just saw you on the Phil Donahue show and I can't believe you were born in 1918. Have you ever had a face-lift? If not, please tell me how to keep from growing old.

ANOTHER 1918 MODEL

DEAR MODEL: I've never had a face-lift. And to keep from growing old—die young.

DEAR ABBY: I read with great interest the letter from the lady who couldn't warm up to her daughter-in-law. (She said, "I always felt that my son could have done a lot better." I wonder if she ever realized that he also could have done a lot worse?)

I, too, felt that my son could have done a lot better, but I wasn't very good at concealing my feelings. I always found something to criticize my daughter-in-law for.

I soon noticed that my son would always take her part, and it was then against me. That's when I began to analyze my own feelings and had to admit that the fault was with me—not her.

That was seven years ago. Thank heaven I woke up in time to improve the relationship before it was too late. When I warmed up to her, she quickly warmed up to me. I have two beautiful grandchildren now, and I am closer to my son than I've ever been.

Abby, edit this any way you wish, but please tell mothers-in-law to make the first move in reaching out to their daughters-in-law. They will be pleasantly surprised.

JUST IN TIME

DEAR JUST: No editing necessary. You said it very well. Thanks for some horse sense straight from the horse's mouth.

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I'd be writing, but after yesterday's column I felt compelled to do so.

My heart goes out to EASY IN ST. LOUIS. Tell her she is not alone in her fight for sexual sanity.

I, too, was raped by a relative when I was a teenager. I spent the next five years searching desperately for love through numerous brief sexual encounters. I felt cheap and dirty and was convinced that no one could love or want me.

Then I met a very special young man who convinced me that God loved me just the way I was, and that I was precious in His sight. I then let go of my burdensome past, and by accepting God's forgiveness, I started on the long road to forgiving myself.

It works. Believe me. Sign me...

Cousins To Release Wines

CONESUS, N.Y. (UPI) — Two cousins and fourth generation members of a California winemaking family have bought an upstate New York wine company and will release their first premium, cork-finished wines this month in their growing area. Skip and Ted Cribari said production will be limited to 200 to 500 cases per label of the Barry Reserve bottlings. In addition, the Cribaris said their Barry Wine Company Inc., producers and merchants, will market 12,000 cases of a dozen different wines this year besides Barry Reserves. Their winery was first established in 1872 by Bishop McQuaid of Rochester, N.Y.

Since I work from home, I fantasize a lot on how it would be to climb into the car every morning and drive into the city to an office in carpetland.

I see me sitting behind the wheel looking cool... my lip gloss shimmering and my solar hair looking like an unmade bed as I sip my Spartan breakfast of black coffee from a steaming mug.

Sometimes, a man three times larger than his sports car with license plates "MACHO 1" pulls next to me and tries to catch my eye, but I stick-shift into low gear and pull off, leaving him in a cloud of exhaust without a thread of hope.

Oh, I could pull it off! After all, I'm not without credentials. I have transported three dogs to the vet with three children (one with stomach flu and one blowing bubbles from his own saliva in my ear) arguing over two windows in the back seat when an umbrella opened automatically.

It's just that the opportunity didn't present itself until yesterday when I found myself in the early morning traffic going into the city. This was my chance to fulfill my fantasy.

I ran a brush through my hair, put on a skirt, topped by a jacket with one of those five-foot scarfs that just hang around the neck. Next came the lip gloss, and finally the mug of steaming hot coffee.

When the motor finally turned over, the vibration spilled part of the coffee all over the dashboard where it dripped down, on my leg, causing me great pain.

I balanced it on the console and reached for it a few times but cars were passing me on the right and cutting in. One time when I shifted gears, my entire hand went into the cup and sloshed coffee all over the carpet.

Once, I nearly had it to my lips when the cars in front of me braked suddenly and I got a lap full.

Ahead, I could see a light. If I timed it right, I could put the cup to my lips and look cool. We inched our way forward and finally my moment had come. I brought the cup back with my side, threw my hair back with the assuredness of a woman executive on the move, and started to sip my coffee.

The light changed. The car behind me blew his horn. I jumped a mile. The coffee dribbled down my chin and onto my jacket. My scarf fell into what was left of the cold coffee. The man in the sports car alongside me laughed until I thought he would have a hernia.

I drink too much coffee anyway.

Document Confirms Cambodia A Sanctuary For Viet Cong Army

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A document issued by Cambodia four months before its recent fall to Vietnam said up to 2 million Viet Cong were in Cambodia in 1970, the year of the American incursion into that country during the Vietnam war.

The figure is much higher than even the United States had claimed.

The paper, dated September of last year, hinted at the fate about to befall the country, claiming the Vietnamese were out to "swallow" Cambodia and set up a Hanoi-dominated Indochina federation.

Today, Vietnam dominates Cambodia and Laos, has troops in both countries and daily talks about the bonds that link the Indochinese nations.

On April 30, 1970, then-President Richard M. Nixon announced U.S. troops would go into Cambodia to seek the control center for communist activities in South Vietnam.

The paper, made available here, said the control center was just where Nixon had said — in the so-called fishhook along the Vietnamese-Cambodian border.

The capture of part of the headquarters was reported May 17, 1970 north of the Minot rubber plantation. The document says the attack forced the headquarters deeper into Cambodia, to the West Bank of the Mekong River in Kratie province.

The Viet Cong then attacked U.S. and South Vietnamese troops from Prek Prasap, a district in Kratie, the paper says. The American attack into Cambodia sparked violent anti-war and anti-Nixon protests in the United States.

The paper claims, as the United States did at the time, that Cambodia was crawling with Vietnamese communist troops and support facilities.

The paper said that in 1970 between 1.5 million and 2 million Viet Cong had moved into Cambodia.

The thrust of the document is that Vietnam has had designs on Cambodia since the 17th century when the Vietnamese were moving south and taking land in what is now southern Vietnam, then under Cambodian control.

The cooperation of communist forces of the two nations in fighting the French and later the Americans and the governments these powers supported is viewed as a mask to hide Hanoi's real ambition.

The Vietnamese are branded as "crocodiles" and "swallowers of territory" in the paper which is entitled "Facts and Evidences of the Acts of Aggression and Annexation of Vietnam against Kampuchea (Cambodia.)"

The document is one of several written by the now-toppled regime of Premier Pol Pot after it said in December 1977 that a state of war existed between Vietnam and Cambodia.

Vietnamese invasion forces and the Cambodian liberation movement it fostered drove into Cambodia last December and Phnom Penh fell Jan. 7.

DDT In The Blood Of Community Residents

TRIANA, Ala. (AP) — Under threat of DDT contamination, residents of this predominantly black community today must change their fishing habits and cast away from streams containing pesticide residue.

The Center for Disease Control in Atlanta said Monday that blood tests from a dozen residents of the north Alabama town reflect a DDT residue two to three times that found in similar population groups and comparable to levels found in workers in DDT plants.

One of those tested, 83-year-old Felix Wynn, was found to have an unheard of 3,347 parts per billion of DDT related compounds in his blood. Wynn is hospitalized at Huntsville with a urinary infection.

Triana Mayor Clyde Foster

described Wynn as "a life-long fisherman" who has regularly eaten fish caught from streams near Triana.

Creeks located downstream from a now-defunct Olin Chemical Corp. plant at Redstone Arsenal is where an estimated 4,000 tons of DDT residue lies. The Olin plant was the world's largest DDT manufacturing facility for 22 years until it was dismantled in 1970.

Foster said Monday he still hopes to get medical examinations for some 1,100 Triana residents who eat fish from Indian Creek.

"I would like to see tests run on everybody willing to submit themselves because this is not going to get any better. It's just going to get worse," the mayor said.

Meanwhile, the Tennessee Valley Authority, the Army, the Environmental Protection Agency all said Monday they would attempt to remedy the situation.

Dr. Ralph Brooks, chief of TVA's water quality and ecology branch, said the agency rushed commercial fishing equipment and experts to Triana Monday in an effort to find a local nonpolluted source for fish and possibly set up a co-op to provide the town with food. "Fish from the DDT-polluted streams has been the primary staple in the diet of Triana's mostly poor and low-educated residents."

Redstone Arsenal Army spokesman Dave Harris said, "The Army and TVA have agreed to cooperate to develop alternative fishing supplies for the people in Triana."

EPA's regional administrator, John C. White, said, "A number of EPA's top scientists will be in Atlanta today and will carefully review" the results of the CDC blood tests.

The CDC said the amount of DDT found in Triana residents' blood "has not been shown to cause harm to working males, but little is known about the effect of such levels on other segments of the population."

"Since there is no proven harm, but also no guarantee of safety, persons must be warned that local fish consumption may be hazardous."

Kurds Resume Iran Fighting

By RICHARD TOMKINS Associated Press Writer SANANDAJ, Iran (AP) — Sporadic gunbattles continued around a besieged army barracks in this Kurdish city today as residents counted their dead and wounded, victims of bloody fighting between Kurdish rebels and government troops.

There was no immediate word of casualties when the new battle erupted after a brief truce in Sanandaj, the capital of the Kurdistan region 250 miles west of Tehran.

At least 170 people were reported killed in fighting Sunday and Monday before the cease-fire, but Deputy Prime Minister Abbas Amir Entezam today put the official toll at 86 dead and 200 wounded.

Throughout the city groups of armed Kurdish fighters manned road blocks in the victually empty streets as army helicopters flew overhead. The city apparently was in the control of the Kurdish guerrillas except for the army barracks under siege.

The government said it was sending reinforcements to relieve the siege of the barracks after an overnight cease-fire was broken by the rebels.

Ten helicopters, apparently ferrying in reinforcements, flew into the airport of the town during the morning. But on the drive to Sanandaj from Tehran there were no signs of major troop movements.

Residents reported that Sunday, after the fighting first flared, four helicopter gunships circled the city firing indiscriminately on people in the streets.

At the Khanh Hospital, doctors said they had the corpses of 21 people killed in the fighting and 133 wounded. Another hospital, they said, reported 30 more dead.

In the Khanh Hospital morgue several bodies were placed in cubicles with ice preserving them and others were laid out on the floor. One young girl, no more than 3 years old, had the side of her head blown open by shrapnel. Her father was crying uncontrollably nearby.

Four surgeons and 10 doctors from outlying areas were manning the hospital.

The hospital staff has been working around the clock since Sunday night treating the wounded in the 200-bed hospital. "There is no question of sleep. There is far too much to do," said Dr. D.K. Singh, from India.

Moore was elected on a third term on the national board at the annual meeting of the N. C. Association of Electric Cooperatives.

The state organization represents all 28 of North Carolina's electric cooperatives, while the national association represents about 1,000 cooperatives.

Moore, a member of the Board of Directors of the Pitt and Greene Electric Membership Corporation, serves as Greene County's fire marshal. He is also assistant chief of the Snow Hill Fire Department and member of the executive board of the state Firemen's Association.

Farm Policy Unchanged

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Farmers who took their complaints to Washington in a tractorcade last month did not succeed in getting changes made in federal farm policy, according to U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Robert Bergland.

"We're not changing the basic policies," Bergland said Monday on the occasion of the 6th Annual Agriculture Day. "We don't intend to change anything."

Bergland, speaking by telephone hookup between his office in Washington and the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization office in Raleigh, said the only thing the tractorcade accomplished was enabling farmers to bring their criticisms and complaints to federal officials.

Asked if he favors restricting tobacco exports to Japan in retaliation for Japan's limits on American imports, Bergland said wasn't sure America would benefit from such restrictions.

"Japan is a $4½ billion customer of American products," he said. "I'm not sure how much leverage we could derive from such a move."

Bergland also said he does not foresee federal regulations governing the purchase of American farmland by foreign investors.

"I'm going to review the federal tax policy, and if, for example, the capital gains tax is providing a haven for speculators at the expense of farm families, then I will recommend some changes," Bergland said. "But I don't think federal restrictions should be placed on foreigners buying farmland. I think it should be left up to the state."

Appears Before FTC

Dr. Richard F. Murphy of Greenville, dental supervisor for the eastern region of the state Division of Health Services, appeared before the Federal Trade Commission in Washington, D. C. Thursday.

Dr. Murphy presented testimony of the American Association of Public Health Dentists as to the Commission's proposed regulation of the advertising of sugared products directed to children.

The Association supports the position that the Federal Trade Commission should ban televised advertising for sugared products directed to, or seen by, audiences composed of a significant proportion of children, unless the advertisements are balanced by health hazard disclosures and messages of nutrition funded by the advertisers.

Dr. Murphy is a past president of the American Association of Public Health Dentists.

Apparent In The Community

Yesterday we commented on the potential at ECU to bring in some of the outstanding academic leadership of the nation to fill administrative positions which have been vacated by resignations and deans returning to teaching.

To the non-academic community it won't be quickly apparent whether or not the people brought in for the positions are filling the academic leadership role properly.

We will know quite soon, however, whether the new administrators are true leaders, . . . for if they are they will rapidly put their leadership ability to work in the community.

The campus and the community are really inseparable, just as the personnel brought in by new industries are inseparable from community life.

We have had outstanding examples recently of both industrial and academic administrators becoming community leaders in short order.

There have been a number of new industries to come into Pitt County in recent years and, very soon, we have seen their administrative personnel become actively involved in community affairs.

On the campus we have had the development of the medical school taking place. The administrative staff has sought out some of the top medical education leadership of the nation, and we think an indication of its success has been the degree of involvement of medical school personnel in community affairs. That has been outstanding.

The success of the ECU administration in attracting true leaders will mean as much to the community as it does to the campus, for if they are leaders they will exert a great and welcome influence on the lives of our citizens.

Stern Sentences Can Work Wonders

Deputy Attorney General Benjamin R. Civilette has told a Senate committee that waste and fraud in government is easy to find; just look anywhere.

When investigators dig deep enough they can usually find significant fraud and abuse.

Obviously some who handle our tax dollars don't have much respect for the taxpayers who earned and paid their share to the government.

Respect for tax dollars can be generated, however. Some convictions and stern sentences would work wonders in reversing this deplorable attitude.

Juvenile Courts' Failure

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Times have changed in ways of dealing with children in trouble as more advanced social and psychological techniques have been developed and perfected.

But North Carolina's juvenile and family courts have for the most part failed to take advantage of new opportunities, and are not measuring up to what the public and recent U.S. Supreme Court rulings seem to desire.

"The lawyers in juvenile courts — and the judges particularly — are not quite prepared to deal with the responsibilities placed on them," says Samuel M. Streit, a lawyer, a former juvenile court probation officer, and an associate of the Frank Porter Graham Child Development Center at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The revolution came about 10 years ago when the Supreme Court ruled that juveniles convicted of a crime which could lead to prison or training school were entitled to all due process rights.

Defense

The chief right, Streit explains, was having a lawyer to represent the juvenile in the courtroom. "Prior to this, the social workers and the court counselors and the judge literally ran the courts any way they saw fit."

The result was often a "benevolent" star chamber in which the judge and his staff attempted to perform in a relaxed, informal setting without regard for rules of evidence or legal technicalities.

Then the revolution came, and the courts were told to change their way of doing business. But there were no guidelines for implementing the change, or serious study as to how to go about changing.

Take the defense lawyer, for example. Trained in school — and often by instinct — an aggressive individual whose methods are to argue and cross examine and create an adversarial relationship on the part of the client, these techniques were particularly unsuccessful in juvenile courts. The juvenile, often, needed understanding and treatment rather than a defense.

BILL NOBLITT

And judges, court counselors, and social workers who had tried to provide those elements greatly resented the intrusion into their domain of the defense lawyer.

Additionally, the judges suddenly found their discretion sharply limited by the requirement that they adhere to rules of evidence, legal technicalities, and sentencing procedures.

"And you must remember," says Streit, "that court discretion is often nothing more than an excuse for the judge to do whatever his individual moral conviction may dictate . . . it is, really, a vehicle for individual preferences."

No Effort

Some of the courts attempted to change; some didn't even make the effort. The end result is a mixture of good, bad and indifferent juvenile justice in the state. And the bad indifference would cause the public to rise up and protest if the truth were known.

But the public and the press largely stay away from juvenile court proceedings in the mistaken belief that those trials are off limits. That is not true. "The public and the media feel the juvenile court is unapproachable. That you can't go in there and find out what is really going on. There is no rule restricting publication or broadcast of the results) of any court proceeding, and no contempt process can be used to restrict publication," Streit said.

"Nobody goes to juvenile or family courts because you must stand and face court intimidation. You can insist on knowing why and the judge can close the proceedings only when he can provide a reasonable explanation of why the subject matter may be sensitive and secrecy is needed. They close the doors now because nobody disputes them," Streit said.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Risks Of Leak Stop CIA

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Although details are veiled in "top secret" national security files, the State Department recently decided against an extremely important but relatively simple cloak-and-dagger operation in a Southeast Asian country. The reason: the CIA decided it would have to be reported to Congress.

That decision, reached after agonizing deliberations, reflected fear — born of past experience — that the operation would assuredly be leaked by one of the scores of congressmen or their staff aides.

Under oversight rules insisted on by Congress in the post-Watergate climate, eight congressional committees must be informed, in secret, about all undercover or clandestine operations to be undertaken by the CIA's once formidable cloak-and-dagger division. Such broadcasting of super-secret operations has played into the hands of the anti-CIA clique on Capitol Hill and encouraged systematic leaking aimed at further discrediting the CIA.

When high officials at State were finally told that the CIA's lawyers had ruled that the operation fell within legal reporting rules, it was immediately cancelled. Risks of disclosure and subsequent political embarrassment, it was felt, outweighed the value of the operation.

Baker Stays

Defense-oriented Republicans can abandon hope that Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee will be replaced by Sen. John Tower of Texas as Senate minority leader in time for the SALT II debate.

Baker previously had promised he would "step aside" as floor leader when his campaign for the Republican presidential nomination got going. That spawned hope among hard-liners that Tower, chairman of the Senate Republican Policy Committee, would defeat Sen. Ted Stevens of Alaska, assistant floor leader, as Baker's replacement. Tower would provide a more partisan Republican voice on the strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT).

But Baker is in no hurry to leave. "It was too hard to win the job in the first place for him to go quickly," one Senate insider explained to us. In particular, he wants to be at the helm for the SALT debate. Therefore, Baker may stay as leader for a while after announcing his presidential candidacy — perhaps keeping the job for the rest of the year.

Moreover, to "step aside" does not necessarily mean to resign, in Baker's opinion. He may merely take a leave of absence from the leadership, during which Stevens — not Tower — would automatically succeed him.

Strength For Today

AN EVERLASTING COMMANDMENT

In the Sixth chapter of Deuteronomy occurs the famous Shema. It is the commandment that we love God with all our hearts, souls, and might; and that we teach God's commandments to our children, and that we bind these commandments to our sign upon our hands and wear them as frontlets between our eyes.

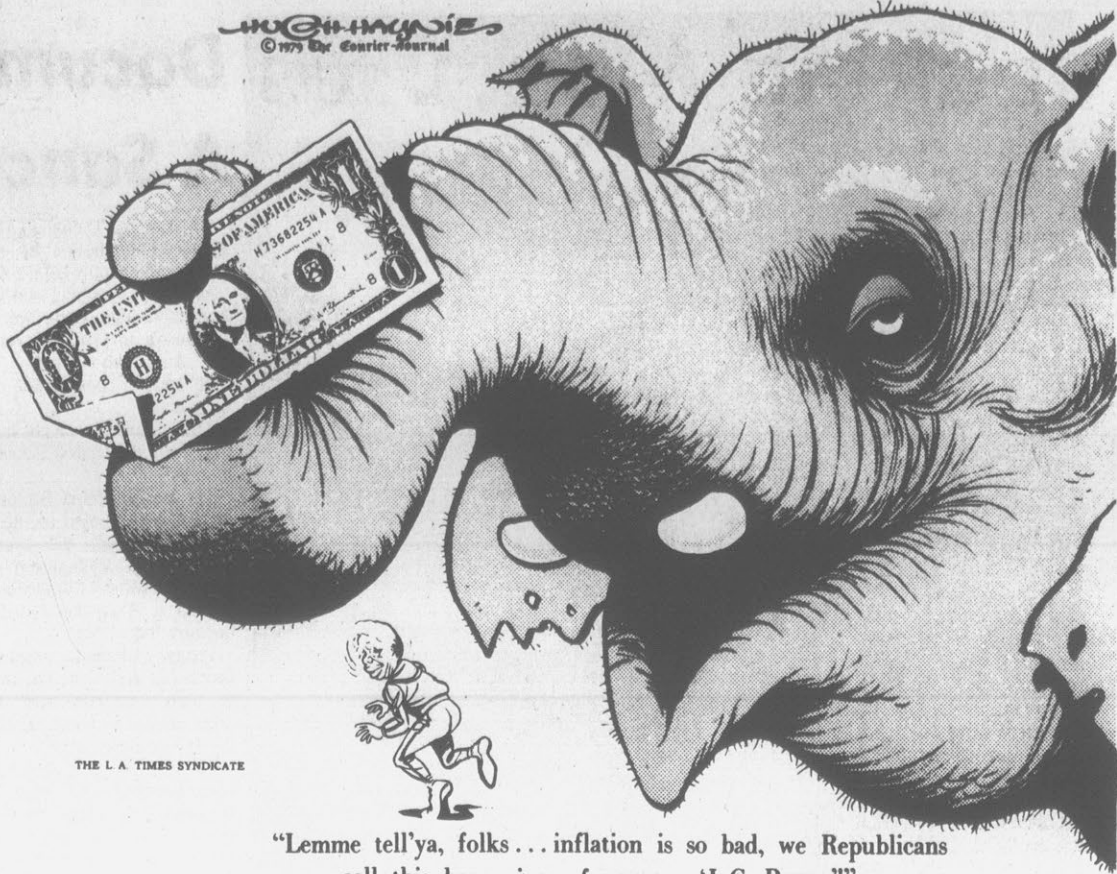

These latter references have to do with the practice prevalent at the time Deuteronomy was written of binding on the arm during prayer a little box containing these precious verses, and wearing one of these boxes suspended on a string bound about the forehead.

The meaning is clear. No commandment of God means anything until we really make it a part of our inner lives.

Binding God's law upon the arm — our acts are to be guided by divine principles. Wearing God's words as frontlets between our eyes — this indicates the necessity of thinking in a sound, pure fashion, and of looking upon life with a vision derived from the word of God.

Walter Mitty Prevails

SCRABBLE, Va. — We are not much at watching sitcoms on the kitchen TV at our house, but one evening last week a new program suddenly had me hooked. It is called "Billy", not after you-know-who, but after a 19-year-old dreamer who fantasizes himself in all kinds of heroic positions. Empathy flowed like wine.

In my own fantasy, I am driving along the Interstate in my Mercedes-Benz at a decent 60 miles an hour, when I see in the rearview mirror that a pickup truck is coming up behind me at high speed. The driver is a scraggly punk with a scraggly beard, dark sunglasses, a sneering mouth. Now he is tailgating me in heavy traffic, inches from my back bumper.

I press a concealed button on the dashboard, and a gunport opens in my trunk. A machine gun slides into position aimed squarely at the tailgater's radiator. Ack-ack-ack-ack! His engine blows up. The pickup truck pulls off to the side and I maneuver my Mercedes-Benz behind him.

"Tailgater!" I cry, "you had it coming!" The driver of the truck is uninjured. I pull him from his seat and rip the dark glasses from his face. His eyes are pale with fright. Thwup! I give him a karate chop on the left side. Thup! Another karate chop on the right side. He grovels on his knees. At 6-foot-even and weighing 180, I tower over him. "Top the tailgating, kid," I say, and I rev up the 300 horses under my hood and roll on.

The highway takes me to Manhattan, to the Four Seasons restaurant. My usual table is waiting for me. The captain brings a folded note from a beautiful woman across the room. "I feel as if I know you from television," it says. It is signed, Candice. I look at her. Her eyes crinkle with humor, warmth and zest for living. I invite her to join me for a cocktail. I am 6-foot-2, at 200 pounds, without an ounce of fat. I smile at her and my eyes crinkle with humor, warmth and zest for living. She puts her hand on my sleeve; her fingers tremble.

It is the captain again. Mr. Bernstein is on the line. He has taken to bed with arthritis; no guest conductors are available for this very evening, and a packed house is expected for the Beethoven Third. Could I take the baton for him? Just as a favor? Bidding farewell to Candice, I rush to the hall, where my valet has brought my tailcoat. Thumwp! Thumwp! Thumwp! Without a score, but from unerring memory, I lead the orchestra through the Eroica. The next morning's Times is ecstatic. "The best Beethoven of this year or any year."

Back at my penthouse, the phone rings. It is Jimmy Con-

To the editor:

This might be of some help in reference to your Hotline article on Mar. 12 on loud television commercials. I have worked as a technician in radio stations and with the Voice of America, so I have had lots of experience on this subject.

Radio and television stations are supposed to use "level amplifiers." These amplifiers back off any high sound passages coming in to them. They also will build up any low passages. The result is an even volume output. I have seen them work very capably in this respect. I would wonder if the local group of stations has the knowledge or personnel to adjust these amplifiers properly.

Another solution to this loud over-commercial problem is to sit close to the tv set and, when the numerous commercials come on, turn down the volume control.

The best solution is to convert over to Public Broadcasting on Channel 25. This has no commercials. All tv sets for many years have been required to receive these UHF stations. They have many good programs and, I repeat, NO COMMERCIALS. The program content certainly will upgrade the mentality of the people.

Bryce W. Tharp

To the editor:

It should be brought to the public's attention that the article in Sunday's edition of the Daily Reflector on film flam artists can and does pertain to residents of the City of Greenville. In the past we have had film flam groups to stop and operate in the City of Greenville. These groups give outstanding prices on painting, repairing of roof tops and other types of construction. Prior to anyone allowing any repairs, alterations, additions or modifications of any type to be done on any structure they own, they should first ask and be sure that the persons involved have a privilege license to operate in the City of Greenville. Second, a permit is required for all construction over $100 valuation. Third, it is a bad policy to pay by cash as there is no record of who or when such payment was made. I would remind all residents that we have had these people in Greenville in the past.

Regulatory Costs Skyrocket

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — You cannot buy shares in it, and since it doesn't make any money you wouldn't want to, but regulation is probably America's number one growth industry.

Federal spending to administer it cost the government $866 million in fiscal 1970. The fiscal 1980 budget allocates regulatory expenditures of $6.04 billion, an increase of nearly 600 percent.

That growth, says Kenneth Chilton, assistant director of the Center for the Study of American Business, St. Louis University, "would be the envy of any business executive tracking a company's sales."

Similar to the pattern in business, he observes, "it is the newer 'product lines' — consumer safety and health, job safety, and environment and energy — that show the most rapid expansion." While he was at the Brookings Institution, Charles Schultze, now chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisors, offered another telling observation about regulation's growth:

"Relying on regulation rather than economic incentives to deal with the highly complex areas of behavior has a built-in dynamic that inevitably broadens the scope of regulation."

Mightn't goals be more efficiently achieved, he asked then, if we used market incentives instead, such as fees related to a firm's pollutant activities, with the money used to maintain environmental standards?

The reflections are from two studies released during the past few days, by the St. Louis study center and by The Business Roundtable, the latter a small organization of big business chief executives. They're not the only ones concerned. Slowly, it appears, everyone is getting worried about regulation's growth, even consumer groups that actively pursued it, even officials charged with implementing it.

Congress now has before it a number of reform bills. The White House has issued executive order 12044, on improving government regulation. It has also formed a regulatory analysis review group.

Reformers aren't all of a fabric. Some seek more efficiency, nothing more, and some want the machinery dismantled. One thread, however, is woven through all: They fear a monster has been loosed.

The monster gobbles dollars, and the common fear is that unless given better training and more direction, it might degenerate into doing little but that.

Haste Makes Waste

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — There's an air of excitement in Washington these days about the remarkable record of the 96th Congress.

Everyone is asking whether the new Congress can make it through two years without passing a major bill.

The 96th convened on Jan. 15, and since then, three items have cleared the House and Senate.

Gone are the invitations to bill-signing ceremonies, social highlights of the Lyndon B. Johnson administration. And who can recall the last vitriolic veto message?

The new Congress roared off to a deceptively fast start on Jan. 18, when it passed a resolution giving President Carter an extra week to send his economic report to Capitol Hill.

40 Years Ago Today

March 20, 1939

30 Pitt County farmers have participated in the shipment of nine cars of sweet potatoes to northern markets during the past two weeks, it was revealed today.

This marks the first time in many years that farmers of this county have shipped their potatoes cooperatively. In order to get the best prices, the potatoes are being graded and packed in paper-lined baskets. A government inspector, provided by the Department of Agriculture, is inspecting each car before it is shipped.

Each basket of potatoes is labeled to show the quality of its contents. Prices obtained so far range from 60 cents to $1.01, net to the farmer. C. C. Hilton, director of the fruit and vegetable marketing service of the Farmers Cooperative Exchange, is assisting farmers in the marketing of potatoes.

Banking Measures Had Easy Time In N.C. Senate

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A series of bills sought by banks and savings and loan associations had an easy time in the state Senate Monday, including one measure aimed at encouraging lenders to offer graduated payment mortgages.

Graduated mortgages, say the bill's supporters, make it easier for younger persons to buy a home by allowing lower monthly payments in the first few years of the mortgage, and increasing the payments after several years.

The deferred payments are already being made by some federally-chartered savings and loans, and were allowed for state-chartered associations in 1977. But few state associations have offered the loans because of uncertainty about the legality of their interest charges, said the bill's sponsor Sen. Cecil Hill, D-Transylvania.

The bill, backed by the N.C. Savings and Loan League, would allow lending associations to charge interest on unpaid interest that had been deferred by the graduated payments. It was approved on a 44-4 vote and sent to the House.

"It covers the young man who is on the way up, who doesn't really have the money now to buy a house large enough for his growing family," Hill said. "I think this is some of the most progressive legislation we have considered."

Opposing the bill was Sen. Ed Renfrow, D-Johnston, who said paying interest on interest created questions about whether the payments could be deducted on state and federal income taxes. And he said the bill would be inflationary.

"I don't see how a person could ever hope to own his own home," Renfrow said. "You could pay and pay and pay, and never make a dent on your principal."

In addition, the bill would allow reverse annuity mortgages. Under that plan, an older person who owns his home could borrow against his house and receive monthly payments until his death or a fixed date, Hill said.

Another bill, approved on a 47-0 vote and sent to the House, revises the state's banking statutes and raises the limits on loans which bank employees can receive. It was recommended by state Banking Commissioner James Currie.

Two more bills, introduced by Sen. John Henley, D-Cumberland, would make changes in savings and loan association law, and were approved overwhelmingly. One bill would allow state-chartered savings and loans to make any loan permitted for a federally-chartered association. The other would permit bank officers to serve on loan committees.

In other legislative action: UNC

Members of the University of North Carolina Board of Governors could serve on other state boards and commissions under a bill approved 45-2 and sent to the House. It was introduced in response to an attorney general's opinion that forced board member J.J. Sansom to resign because of his position on the state Banking Commission.

ERA

It's dead for this session, but Equal Rights Amendment supporters haven't forgotten the issue. Sen. Rachel Gray, D-Guilford, a strong ERA supporter, took the Senate Floor Monday night to read a poem lamenting the amendment's demise last month.

She then presented a dark and withered rose to an ERA opponent, Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne. When fresh, the rose had been presented to Barnes by groups opposing ERA after its defeat, and Barnes had given it to Mrs. Gray in jest.

Hearings

On Wednesday, joint appropriations committees will hold a 3 p.m. hearing on the planned special state high school for science and mathematics. The proposed state budget has a $3 million appropriation for the controversial school, which is one of Gov. Jim Hunt's pet projects.

Retirement

State Sen. Walter Cockerham, R-Guilford, who has questioned the propriety of the state's retirement system for law enforcement officers, filed a bill that would change that system.

The measure would provide that money for the state's Law Enforcement Officer's Retirement and Benefit Fund come from general tax collections. Under the current system, three dollars goes into the fund from court costs on each traffic ticket or criminal violation.

Taxes

Among other new bills introduced was one by Rep. Clyde Auman, D-Moore, that would repeal the state's intangibles tax. The tax is a small levy on money deposited in banks, in bonds or in shares of stock.

Under the bill, the repeal would be offset by an increase in the franchise tax paid by corporations.

Kemp Bombs

A hint of how ill-prepared Rep. Jack Kemp is for the presidential race he is contemplating was his abysmal performance at the Midwestern Republican Conference in Indianapolis March 10.

Along with five other Republicans entered in the presidential "cattle show" at the conference, Kemp was allotted 8 to 10 minutes. Unlike the others, Kemp had prepared no special material. His staff simply was not equipped for the task. What's more, just as he began to speak, he was disconcerted as questionnaires for a CBS presidential preference poll were passed through the audience.

The usually dynamic Kemp wandered listlessly through 25 minutes of disconnected fragments from his regular speeches. The CBS poll put Kemp dead last in all categories — including "best speaker," where he barely nosed out George Bush for the booby prize.

A footnote: Bush's performance was not helped by granny glasses that make him look faintly professorial and absentminded. But he is about to discard them for proper spectacles. Bush is also taking lessons to unlearn what he learned in earlier exercises about how to make a long, serious speech; now he is undergoing a cram course in stump-speaking and crowdpleasing rhetoric.

Three weeks later, Congress repealed a law requiring banks to notify customers of their rights under the Right to Financial Privacy Act.

The first substantive piece of legislation, sent to the White House Feb. 26, authorized public sale of 3 million rare silver dollars.

This week will test the 96th's record of non-accomplishment. Congress might complete action on legislation defining the new relations between the United States and Taiwan.

Also likely to receive final action is a bill to increase the federal debt limit.

If Congress gets by those hurdles, it will be clear sailing through April. Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., announced the other day that he would slow the pace of floor action and avoid Friday sessions at least through April.

A senator caught speechless is an occasion worth noting. The senator in this case was Joe Biden, D-Del.

During debate on the Taiwan bill, Biden was caught with too little time to speak and not enough time to do anything else.

Advised by the presiding officer that he had only 20 seconds, not enough time to ask for a quorum call or to yield the floor to another senator, Biden said, "Then I suggest I keep speaking . . . I do not really have much more to say, especially in 20 seconds. I have difficulty saying my name in 20 seconds."

Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, a frequent witness before congressional committees, has developed a consistent pattern.

After reading his opening statement, Blumenthal invariably leans back in his chair, lights up a cigar and awaits questions.

On a recent appearance before the Senate Finance Committee, he was about to light up when he realized there was no ashtray on the table.

Immediately aware of the secretary's problem, Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., spotted an ashtray in front of another senator, whisked it away, walked down from the committee dais and plunked the ashtray in front of Blumenthal.

"It's a pleasure seeing a senator work so hard," said Blumenthal.

Will Appeal Ban On School Fees

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The state and the Greensboro school system are expected to appeal a ruling by a Superior Court judge Monday that collecting school fees is unconstitutional and must be halted immediately.

Greensboro School Superintendent Kenneth Newbold called the decision by Judge Charles Kivett "the most significant in North Carolina in the past five years." He said the ruling will, in effect, cut $325,000 out of the school budget.

Newbold said the school board will have to ask the county commission for more money to maintain the level of educational services provided in the system this year.

The board must decide whether to appeal the ruling, and an attorney for the school system said an appeal is almost certain. Andrew Vanore, state deputy attorney general whose office asked to be allowed to join as defendants in the case, said the state would join in an appeal.

Kivett ordered an immediate and permanent halt to:

—Charging or collecting instructional fees and fees required for elective courses offered for academic credit.

—Requiring parents and students to provide items, such as gym suits, which are necessary elements in required and elective courses or activities offered for academic credit.

—Penalizing a student who, prior to the date of the order, failed to pay fees.

Three mothers of children in the Greensboro school system sued the system on June 12, 1978, claiming the school's practice of collecting fees denied their children a free education provided for in the state constitution.

The school system contended it had the authority to collect the fees under a state statute, but Kivett ruled that statute unconstitutional.

If Kivett's ruling is upheld by the state Court of Appeals, all school fees could be halted in schools throughout the state until the Supreme Court rules on the case.

nors, in town for a major tournament. He has been trouble getting his first serve in. Could I come out to Forest Hills at 8 in the morning to coach him through a couple of practice sets? Of course. We exchange pleasantries. I take him 6-4, 7-5. My own service, smashing in with all the power of 6-foot-5 and 220 pounds, never has been better.

A spectator comes up after the match. "Ms. Bacall, I believe?" She looks at my deeply chiseled face, bronzed from the sun. "Call me Betty," she breathes, and her eyes crinkle with humor, warmth and zest for life. She puts her hand upon my sleeve. Her fingers tremble.

I am back on the Interstate, this time in the Ferrari. Eight hundred horses purr and snarl under the hood. The Rolls ahead of me is in trouble. It is out of control! It smashes into a concrete abutment and bursts into flame. In a single smooth bound, I leap from my machine. I am 6-foot-6 and carry 230 pounds of muscle, but I move like a jungle cat. The woman driver is alive! I carry her from the wreck and recognize her flowing hair. "Farrah!" She looks up, and her eyes crinkle. She loses consciousness as her trembling fingers grasp my sleeve.

I had just crossed swords with a scoundrelly French nobleman — Thrust! Parry! Riposte! — when I became vaguely aware that my wife was speaking. "I don't get much out of this 'Billy' show," she was saying. My eyes crinkled with warmth, humor and a zest for life. "Yeah," I said. "Pretty dumb." Pocketa, pocketa, pocketa! With Walter Mitty I felt the clean cold steel of my foil. My eyes, which ordinarily crinkle, were chips of ice. "En garde," I cried, as the rogue turned pale with fright. . . .

Checkmate. The plastic check that tells everybody you're somebody.

When you want to buy something, it can seem like your check's not worth the paper it's printed on. You have to show a driver's license, credit cards, give phone numbers—sometimes even your thumbprint.

All this is not only inconvenient, it can be downright embarrassing. That's why NCNB is introducing Checkmate, the plastic check. It lets you use your NCNB Checking Account just as easily as you use a Visa Card.

The Checkmate card goes through an imprinter just like a credit card. You sign your name, get a receipt. And you're on your way. It's that simple.

You can use Checkmate wherever you see a Visa sign, at 2½ million places, all over town, all over the country and even all over the world. What's more, you can also "cash a check" at any NCNB Banking Machine across North Carolina.

So, if you have a Checking Account with us, ask us about adding Checkmate. If you don't have an NCNB Checking Account, come see us. Soon.

NCNB Checkmate. It's the kind of service that you'd expect from the bank that wants to be the best in the neighborhood.

NEW YORK (AP) — Troubled by the prospect of further Federal Reserve credit tightening, stock prices slipped slightly today, continuing the erosion of prices that began late in Monday's session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial issues was off 2.51 to 855.08 at noon.

Declining issues held a 3-2 lead over those advancing on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts said the market seemed to be nervous about the Federal Reserve's open market committee meeting today, at which the Fed could decide to further tighten interest rates. Results of the meeting will not be made public for a couple of weeks, but the Fed's decision could be felt on money markets almost immediately.

And while the market has gained much of its power in recent days from rising oil-company stocks, those issues were hindered today, analysts said, by lack of indication of what President Carter and his top aides decided at their Camp David meeting Monday to do about crude oil deregulation.

At the top of the active list, Walt Disney Productions fell 1/4 to 37, with a 300,000-share block trading at 36 1/2.

The noon NYSE composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks was down 13 to 56.55. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 34 to 173.52.

Volume on the Big Board was 12.57 million shares at noon, off from Monday's noontime pace of 15.48 million shares.

Among the oil issues, Exxon rose 1/2 to 53 1/2, Texaco dipped 1/2 to 26 1/2, Standard Oil of Indiana dropped 1/4 to 60 1/2, Gulf Oil slipped 1/4 to 26 1/2 and Atlantic Richfield fell 1/2 to 62 1/2.

Dismay At Profit Rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said today that profits of the nation's corporations increased 26.4 percent last year, the most in nearly three decades, in what Carter administration officials said was a "catastrophe" for the nation's anti-inflation program.

It also reported that the nation's economy, as measured by the gross national product, expanded at a 6.9 percent rate in the final three months of the year, up from the 6.4 percent estimated previously. The gain in GNP for the year was 4 percent.

The gains in profits and economic growth were both disturbingly high and constituted a setback to the nation's anti-inflation drive, officials said.

The Commerce Department said corporate profits before taxes totaled $225.3 billion in the final three months of 1978, up $19.9 billion or 9.7 percent over the third quarter and up $47 billion or 26.4 percent over the fourth quarter of 1977.

Alfred E. Kahn, the administration's chief inflation-fighter, said in advance of the report that the increase in profits last year was a "catastrophe" that underscores "a strong belief that the business community has not been doing its share in the anti-inflation fight."

However, financial analysts say much of the increase in profits results from inventory gains caused by inflation and does not significantly benefit the corporations.

The 16-day money-raising drive ended Sunday night.

Investigate School Board... Break-Ins

The Pitt County Sheriff's Department is investigating two break-in incidents and an attempted break-in reported Sunday morning at businesses near Farmville.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson reported that an estimated $1,500 in damages resulted from a break-in at Carraway's Restaurant on Highway 264 west of Marlboro. The facility was ransacked, he said, and heavy damages occurred in the office area.

The sheriff said that $9 was reported taken from the restaurant in the incident.

A break-in at Farrior & Sons Inc. on the 264 Bypass resulted in damages estimated at $100 to the door locks at the business and $3 taken. Sheriff Tyson said that the facility was also ransacked.

An attempted break-in was reported at Marl Oakley's Store at Joyner's Crossroads on Rt. 2, Farmville, it was noted, with damages to the door of the store estimated at between $50 and $100.

According to the sheriff, all three incidents took place sometime Saturday night or early Sunday.

Final speaker was Billy Yeargin of the Tobacco Growers Information Committee, who pointed out that total U. S. consumption of cigarettes reached 620 billion in 1978, with 10.2 billion cigarettes exported to overseas consumers.

Yeargin declared that if North Carolina was to "wean" itself from tobacco production, it would take cultivation of 42 million acres in peanuts, the second largest state cash crop, to make up for the deficit.

Yeargin again urged farmers not to harvest the bottom four leaves of tobacco on the stalk this year, so that a 2 1/2 year supply of downstalk tobacco could be sold from Stabilization warehouses.

Bob Anderson of WNCT Radio and chairman of the dinner, closed the remarks with a question-answer discussion.

14th Skeleton Now Identified

CHICAGO (AP) — The skeleton of William Carroll, a 16-year-old boy missing since 1976, has been identified as one of 29 skeletons found at the suburban home of John W. Gacy Jr.

The medical examiner's office said Carroll, whose skeleton was identified Saturday, was the 14th body identified. His identity was disclosed Monday.

Fifteen skeletons found at Gacy's home remain unidentified. Gacy has been charged with seven counts of murder and is being held without bond. He reportedly told police he killed 32 young men and boys.

Paraphernalia Penalties Eyed

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A bill to provide tough penalties for possession of drug paraphernalia was given first-round approval by the Missouri Senate.

The measure, which must be given final approval in the Senate before being sent to the House, would make it a misdemeanor to possess devices used in smoking marijuana or hashish, its sponsor, Sen. Harold Caskey, said Monday. It would make it a felony to possess devices used to take hard drugs, he said.

Opponents of the bill said it could lead to police harassment but Caskey said the bill required the state to prove that the defendant possessed the device for the "express purpose" of using it to take illegal drugs.

VCU's Dana Kirk Said Headed For Memphis

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — News reports say Memphis State's six-week-old search for a new basketball coach will end today when Dana Kirk of Virginia Commonwealth accepts the job.

The Commercial Appeal, the morning newspaper in Memphis, said in a copyrighted story today that Kirk will be introduced at a news conference this morning on the MSU campus.

The Richmond Times-Dispatch carried a story today saying Kirk is likely to accept the position, and several Memphis television stations named Kirk as the choice to replace Wayne Yates.

The hiring of the former University of Tampa coach and Louisville assistant ends a search that began Feb. 7 when Yates announced his resignation, effective at the season's end.

The Commercial Appeal said Kirk will apparently receive a contract in the same financial range as Yates with a $27,500 base salary. The package for Kirk, the newspaper said, reportedly will include an additional $12,000 from radio and TV and a summer camp project that could produce another $10,000. Length of the contract is not known.

Kirk was the third candidate interviewed for the MSU job. The first choice, former Denver Nuggets coach Larry Brown, could not be persuaded to accept.

In his three seasons at Virginia Commonwealth, Kirk's teams posted records of 13-13, 24-5 and 20-5.

Tigers Capture Track Victory

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston High School's boys' track team gained a 60-57 victory over Perquimans High School yesterday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Purdue University and Indiana University are a mere 120 miles apart and brothers in the Big Ten Conference, but now their basketball teams are even closer than that — right next to each other in the final round of the National Invitation Tournament.

The first NIT championship game between two schools from the same state in 20 years was set up Monday when the 15th-ranked Boilermakers, 27-7, from West Lafayette, Ind., and the unrated Hoosiers, 21-12, from Bloomington, Ind., won semifinal games at Madison Square Garden. They play Wednesday night in the first intrastate NIT final since 1958 when Xavier, Ohio defeated Dayton 78-74 in overtime.

Purdue, led by Joe Barry Carroll's 42 points, destroyed Alabama 87-68 and Indiana, behind Mike Woodson's 20 points and a suffocating defense, beat Big Ten Conference rival Ohio State 64-55 Monday night in the semifinals of the 42nd NIT.

In their two prior meetings this season, Indiana won at home 63-54 and Purdue took the second game on its court 55-48.

"The Big Ten is king in the Midwest, it doesn't worry about the rest of the country," said Indiana Coach Bobby Knight.

If the Big Ten is as dominating a conference as Knight suggests, then the individual king in the Midwest is the massive, 7-foot-1, 240-pound Carroll.

In scoring nearly half his team's points and reaching a career high against Alabama, the third-team All-American junior center awed a crowd of 14,632, including many pro scouts, general managers and coaches.

"He's very agile," marveled Ken Norton, the long-time coach at Manhattan and now a member of the NIT Selection Committee. "And what a touch he has."

"He has a real good touch for a big man," observed Butch Beard, assistant coach of the New York Knicks of the National Basketball Association.

The Crimson Tide, 21-11, used three players — Eddie Phillips, Phil Lockett and Reggie King, the Southeastern Conference Player of the Year — in trying to defend Carroll. But none could stop his sweeping right-handed hook shots, his soft layups or his one-handed slam dunks. Phillips and Lockett both fouled out and King was taken off Carroll after getting two quick fouls.

Carroll, a 22.6 scorer during the regular season with a high of 36 against Iowa, hit all eight of his field goals attempts and collected 20 points in the first half when the Boilermakers, Big Ten tri-champions, took a commanding 43-32 lead.

He added 22 points after intermission as the potent and poised Boilermakers broke open the game.

"Joe Barry played a great game, an exceptional game," said Purdue Coach Lee Rose. "But he's played like this all year. I don't think he's played any better, but he has played this well."

"We tried to double up on Carroll," said Alabama Coach C.M. Newton, "but we had trouble because their guards played so well."

Of the Boilermakers' guards, Jerry Sichting scored 20 points and had seven assists, and Brian Walker contributed nine assists.

King and Robert Scott scored 21 points apiece for Alabama, which faces Ohio State in the third-place game preceding the title contest.

"Don't make the mistake of thinking that Carroll is a one-man team," warned Knight.

"They (the Boilermakers) have some good guards who can hurt you."

Still, Carroll was awesome against Alabama. His point production equaled the sixth highest total in NIT history — the record is 65 by Anthony Roberts of Oral Roberts in 1977. In four NIT games, Carroll has accumulated 112 points, only 17 shy of the all-time record set by Bobby Lloyd of Rutgers in 1967.

Neither is Indiana a one-man team.

In addition to Woodson's team-high total against Ohio State, guards Butch Carter and Randy Wittman each scored 12 points and combined for 12 assists, while center Ray Tolbert had 10 points and a game-high 10 rebounds.

Kelvin Raney led Ohio State, 19-11, with 25 points and center Herb Williams scored 14.

But the Buckeyes' inability to get the ball consistently into Williams against Indiana's tight zone defense was costly. The 6-10 Williams, a 19.9 scorer during the season, took only eight shots against the Hoosiers.

"Indiana's defense collapsed on Williams," said Ohio State Coach Eldon Miller. "We had no balanced offense to overcome this. Indiana plays as good a defense as any team in the country."

Pirates Are 16th

DURHAM — East Carolina placed 16th out of a field of 18 in the Iron Duke Classic golf tournament here yesterday with a three-day total of 948.

Duke University golfer Bob Stanger was the medalist with a score of 211, taking a sudden death playoff over Ryan Norton from Oral Roberts on the second hole.

The Duke white team won the event with a total of 868, followed by Oral Roberts at 870, Clemson at 873, Duke blue at 879 and Virginia at 884.

Steve Jones was low man for the Pirates at 226, while Frank Acker finished at 234, Carl Beaman at 244, Jerry Lee at 248 and Joey Hines at 252.

No Word Expected Today

East Carolina officials were expected to meet sometime today to make recommendations to Chancellor Dr. Thomas Brewer on the hiring of a new basketball coach.

While word on the selection had been expected this morning, officials had no comment on when it might occur.

Meanwhile, at Western Carolina University, head coach Steve Cottrell, said he had removed himself from consideration for the ECU job. Cottrell said that ECU Athletic Director Bill Cain had contacted Western Carolina officials for permission to talk with Cottrell following the resignation of Larry Gillman on Feb. 28.

No official contact was made, however, although the coach was approached for informal talks.

Cottrell added that ASU Coach Bobby Cremins had also been on the original list of candidates.

The position is believed to now be between ECU assistant Terry Kunze, Virginia assistant Richard Schmidt, and former UNC player Dick Grubar.

Bruce Harper of the New York Jets led the National Football League in total yardage in 1978 with 2,157, the result of kickoff returns, punt returns, pass receptions and rushing attempts.

Larry Bird: Basketball's Mr. Big

CHICAGO (AP) — The blue and white Cessna cut smartly through the crisp, clear Midwest morning and purred to a stop on the tarmac at Meigs Field, Chicago's downtown airport. The door flopped open and three rather ordinary men stepped out and shook themselves like chickens, as if to shed the wrinkles of the flight. Then in one sighting motion that allowed the little plane to rise perceptibly on its wheels, the Cessna disgorged Larry Bird. The young man who is one of the finest basketball players the game has seen wore neatly pressed slacks and a loose-fitting sweater. The sun sparkled in his sandy hair. He carried a styrofoam cup into which he casually spat tobacco juice.

The first impression of him is one of awe. Larry Bird is built exactly like a tree trunk.

It isn't the height. Six feet, nine inches is not out of the orinary for today's basketball players. But Bird is not one of those people who look like they were put on a rack and stretched. He is perfectly proportioned — shoulders broad enough to handle the height. Shaking hands with him is like being grabbed by a steamsho-

vel. He is truly a giant. Human beings aren't supposed to come in that size.

Bird and his Indiana State University coach, Bill Hodges, had flown up to Chicago from Terre Haute to receive AP college player of the Year and coach of the year awards. It was the morning after they had beaten Virginia Tech at Lawrence, Kan., in the second round of the NCAA tournament. Bird had to be a little tired, but he didn't show it.

In the question and answer period that followed the trophy presentation, Bird explained one of his reasons for not talking to reporters. He said they wanted to write only about him and not about the other players, and Bird considered that bad for the team and for the morale of his teammates.

To anyone who has been around athletes and heard them talk for public consumption, this sounds like a tired old slab of baloney. The difference is, Bird means it. According to Landini, he means it for the same reason that he is as good at passing the ball as he is at shooting it.

When you begin understanding that, you realize that Larry Bird may be exactly what he appears to be. Bird comes from the plateau country of southern Indiana around the town of French Lick, whose claim to fame is the fact that it is the place where ketchup was invented. If there are purebred country folk anywhere in the world, it is there, far enough south of Chicago and east of St. Louis not to be troubled by city influences, and just north of the Kentucky bluegrass which lures most of its good basketball players.

Bird is unassuming and without affectation, but he is not inarticulate. He just doesn't have much to say, especially to strangers. Asked how he thought he'd get along in pro ball with so many reporters looking for stories, Bird said "I think I'll do fine because they'll be talking to a lot of players. They'll be talking to everyone and I'll just be one of them."

He was asked a tough question about what he thought of being pro basketball's "white hope." Bird was drafted a year ago by the Boston Celtics. More than 70 per cent of the players in the National Basketball Association are black, and there is a theory that this keeps some white people from buying tickets to games.

Such a question could give a lot of people trouble. Bird explained bluntly that he was not a racist and did not intend to sound like one. He said there are so many great black players in the NBA, and he just hopes he can keep up with them. In a sense, he ducked the question, the only articulate thing to do aside from telling the questioner that such queries are in bad taste and impossible to answer.

On the court, he is the complete player. Hodges calls him the smartest basketball player he's ever seen. Bird seems to know, as if directed by radar, just where and when to shoot, jump, pass — do everything that one in his sport is supposed to do. His passing is the most startling aspect of his game, especially considering his size.

"You know how kids on playgrounds are all gunners? How they all shoot every time they get the ball?" Hodges asked. "Around Terre Haute all the kids are passing the ball. They're actually practicing passing because they're emulating Larry."

Bird and Hodges and everyone else at Indiana State have experienced frustration on their way to a 32-0 record and a place in the NCAA's final four this weekend. All along, they have had to listen to skeptics talk about a weak schedule. The pollsters seemed to almost grudgingly rank them first in the nation. After all, they were untested by the Top Ten and they played in what some called an easy conference, the Missouri Valley.

It is the typical frustration of the team that comes from nowhere to the glare of national recognition. No one believed the Sycamores were as good as they knew they were. Fighting off the frustration probably made them stronger.

Youngsters Are Headed Upward

By The Associated Press
Their names are not yet among the pitching stars of the American League. But if their performances this spring are an indication, watch out for a pair of youthful right-handers: Kip Young of Detroit and Mark Clear of California.

Neither has allowed a run this spring. The 24-year-old Young has pitched 12 pre-season innings, including five in Monday's 2-1 victory over the Montreal Expos. He struck out seven in his stint, polishing his breaking pitches in preparation for his first full season with the big-league club.

Most of his victims flailed feebly at his curve. "That makes you feel like you must be doing something right," said Young, who was promoted to the Tigers from the minors midway through last season and managed a 6-7 record with a 2.81 earned run average.

"They're just disgusted," he said of the batters. "It's early in the spring and they're not used to seeing that many breaking balls."

They can expect plenty more when the season begins. The 22-year-old Clear has been working on his control...successfully. The 6-foot-4, 200-pounder — a nephew of Angels first base coach Bob Clear — has pitched nine spring innings, striking out 16 while allowing just two hits and three walks.

"My uncle and my dad have been doing a lot of work with me," he said after striking out the side twice in three innings Monday as the Angels beat the Chicago Cubs 5-3. "I'm excited about my chances of making the Angels this season. I'd just like to make this club. I think I'm capable of starting, but I'm just happy to get a chance."

In the other exhibition games, the New York Yankees trimmed the Atlanta Braves 2-1, the Houston Astros nipped the Minnesota Twins 4-3, the Los Angeles Dodgers drubbed the Baltimore Orioles 8-2, the Cincinnati Reds edged the Philadelphia Phillies 4-3 in 13 innings, the Toronto Blue Jays topped the Boston Red Sox 10-8 and the Texas Rangers beat the Kansas City Royals 6-2.

Meanwhile, the Oakland A's bested the Cleveland Indians 8-3 in a game shortened to seven innings by rain, the Seattle Mariners drubbed the Milwaukee Brewers 8-3, the San Diego Padres topped the San Francisco Giants 5-3, the St. Louis Cardinals tripped the Chicago White Sox 5-3 and the New York Mets beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-4.

After the Yankees had won their second game this spring — and their second against the Braves — Manager Bob Lemon expressed his reaction to the latest communique by Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Kuhn, alleging some clubs had fielded lineups of backup players, directed each team to field "representative squads" for exhibition games at which admission is charged.

"I'm not going to kill my club trying to entertain people during spring training," said Lemon. "It's not like a nightclub act. You shouldn't have to play their favorite songs."

There's no sense bringing the kids to spring training if you're not going to play them," Lemon continued.

Jim Obradovich cracked a ninth-inning single to score Julio Gonzalez with the run that carried the Astros past the Twins.

Davey Lopes had a double and two singles as the Dodgers collected 18 hits off the Orioles and cruised to victory. Baltimore's Jim Palmer gave up 13 hits and all eight Los Angeles runs, six of them earned.

Champ Summers homered with two out in the top of the 13th inning to carry Cincinnati past Philadelphia. The Phillies' Jim Kaat pitched six shutout innings, allowing four hits.

Rick Bosetti's three-run ninth-inning homer carried Toronto past Boston. That was the bad news. The good news for Red Sox Manager Don Zimmer was that pitcher Bill Campbell and his tender right shoulder had tossed batting practice for the first time in three weeks and reported no ill effects.

Campbell, the 1977 Fireman of the Year, pitched just 50 innings last season. Monday he pitched to Carlton Fisk and Butch Hobson, who said Campbell "threw better than at any time last year."

Zimmer rejoiced. "I love it! I just love it," he said. John Ellis drove in three runs as the Rangers took advantage of seven Kansas City errors for their victory over the Royals. Wayne Gross hit a two-run triple and Joe Wallis added a two-run single as Oakland beat Cleveland before the rains came.

Ruppert Jones drove in three runs, two of them with a first-inning homer, to power Seattle past Milwaukee. The Cardinals played six walks and three Chicago wild pitches into their victory over the White Sox.

San Diego's Eric Rasmussen pitched six solid innings and doubled home a run as the Padres beat San Francisco. A two-run pinch homer by Joel Youngblood carried the Mets past the Pirates at San Juan, Puerto Rico. The game was part of a benefit series, the revenues of which are donated to construction of the Roberto Clemente Sports City.

itation Tournament Monday night against Purdue. The Boilermakers sent Alabama tumbling with a runaway 87-68 victory. (AP Laser-photo)

DePaul's Ray Meyer Suddenly Popular Guy

CHICAGO (AP) — In his 37th year as a college coach, Ray Meyer finally has the nation's media hovering at his doorstep — and in his office and his home — but he's anxious to get back to basketball.

"From 7:30 this morning until 5:30 tonight I was being interviewed by either a newspaper or radio or TV station from Boston to California," DePaul's affable coach said Monday night.

He expected more of the same this morning. A local television station planned to spend the day with him and he was to appear on a network show. Even his wife was going to be interviewed.

All because his Blue Demons, unranked almost all season, surprised the nation by making it to the Final Four of the NCAA tournament and a date Saturday with top-ranked and undefeated Indiana State.

But, starting at noon today, Meyer was to declare a moratorium on interviews until practice was over.

He needs time to figure out how to hold All-American Larry Bird to his usual outstanding game and still beat the Sycamores.

"I want to have time to coach," he said. "I owe it to the school, to the team and to myself. I have to prepare. I want to be fair and accommodating to all the press but I can't just ignore the team."

One of Meyer's primary concerns is the left knee of Curtis Watkins, the man slated to put the clamps on Bird. He strained a ligament when teammate Mark Aguirre fell on him late in Saturday's 95-91 upset of UCLA in the finals of the West Regional.

Meyer said he thinks Watkins will be at full strength Saturday and his assistant, son Joey Meyer, said, "the doctor seems very confident. That's all you can go by."

The team had the day off Monday, but Watkins will not practice before Thursday. If he can't play against Indiana State, seldom-used reserves Bill Madey and Dennis McGuire will fill in, said Ray Meyer. "Right now Michigan State is playing the best of all the colleges," he said. "I'd much prefer to play Indiana State now than Michigan State. I'm sure Indiana State would rather play us than Michigan State." The Spartans play Penn in the other semifinal.

DePaul and Indiana State run a lot and Meyer expects a high-scoring game.

Joey Meyer says DePaul will start in a man-to-man defense, as usual, then adjust as the situation changes. His approach to Bird? "We're figuring more on letting him get his points and us just stopping everybody else."

Win or lose, Ray Meyer says he's already achieved his main goal — reaching the Final Four for the first time in his legendary career with tournament wins over Southern California, Marquette and UCLA.

"That is more important than the championship," he said. "When we played USC we said just one more game. Then when we played Marquette, we said just one more, then with UCLA we said one more. Now we just want to get into the championship game."

Goldsboro Nips Rose Thinclads

Goldsboro was able to overcome Rose High's domination of the field events to defeat the Rampancs 74-66 in a track meet here yesterday.

The Rampancs won five of the six field events, but the Cougars fought back, behind double winner Daniels, to win the meet. Daniels was first in the long jump at 18-8 and the 440 at :51.9.

Rose's next meet is Thursday at Hunt.

Fearlessness is a necessary attribute for any successful competitor. But it is a quality that can easily turn into complacency—a condition which has caused the downfall of many a champion—whenever success seems assured. At the bridge table, the time for boldness is when the outlook is darkest. When everything seems rosy, that's the time to be at your most pessimistic. Since his hand might be worthless at a no trump contract, South corrected to four spades. North had no option except to pass. He had already shown his 25 points, and unless his partner could bid spades at the five-level, there seemed to be little chance for slam. North might have been wrong if his partner had as little as six spades to the king—but his pessimism was justified by South's performance in the play.

West led the top of his diamond sequence, and declarer felt on top of the world. He won the king of diamonds in dummy and laid down the ace of spades. East discarded a diamond and declarer found that he had no way to avoid losing three trump tricks and the ace of hearts for down one.

Since the contract appeared to be ironclad, declarer should have taken time out to consider what evils could be lurking in the distribution. The answer could only be: "All four trumps in one hand!"

If all four trumps are with East, it makes no difference what declarer does. Declarer cannot lose more than two trump tricks no matter how he plays the suit. But if West holds all the missing trumps, caution is required.

After winning the king of diamonds, declarer should lead a low trump from dummy. When East fails to follow to the first trump, declarer plays the queen (or any of his intermediates) and West wins the king.

Half-Hour Comedy Gets Chance

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Just when it seemed that television was bound to become a blob of indistinguishable, sugar-coated parts, here comes something different. It's a half-hour comedy show — not a sitcom — which is different enough.

And the comedy ... well, the show is called "Bizarre." But it's not just hip college humor aimed at a special late-night audience, a la "Saturday Night Live." The host is mainstream, regular-guy Richard Dawson, and the aim is clearly to get mainstream, regular-guy prime-time audiences to issue forth belly laughs.

Tuesday's pilot appearance of "Bizarre" on ABC offers its comedy in the form of skits, just as in all those hour-long (and failed) variety shows networks were forever stuffing their schedules with in the last decade.

But "Bizarre" is different. For one thing, its half-hour format allows for only trimmed-down bits, all the fat and padding has to be cut away. And, gratefully, there is not time for displaced guest stars, the staple of the hour-long varieties. You won't see Arnie Palmer singing "Moon River" or the Bee Gees trying to be funny.

The best thing about "Bizarre" is its style. It was created by two nearly certifiable lunatics, Allan Bye and Bob Einstein, alumni of "The Red Foxx Show" and the "Smothers Brothers," and their show takes pains to avoid formula comedy.

Some of it hits, some fails; but you appreciate the effort. One of the skits, about the rigorous training methods of football coach George Allen, is outlandishly funny. Allen is asked by sportscaster Tom Harmon about the "neck drill," which, Harmon has heard, prompted several players to walk out of training camp.

"Well, it is tough," Coach Allen concedes, adding straight-faced, "but when the going gets tough, the tough get going." Harmon asks for a demonstration of the neck drill. Allen complies. The result is a little sicko — bizarre, if you will — but very, very funny.

Bye and Einstein have been trying for years to get a network half-hour comedy show, but networks are so used to variety in hour-long packages that the idea was never seriously considered.

ABC decided to give "Bizarre" a try Tuesday because it had a half-hour slot to fill, behind their new spinoff sitcom, "The Ropers." Even at that, the network doesn't seem really excited about the show, not even giving "Bizarre" the standard publicity sheet blizzard.

The network ordered only one show, but when "Bizarre" was tested before an audience, it fared well enough to earn a promise from ABC that good ratings Tuesday might result in a series.

"Bizarre" is not really bizarre, and lacks the reckless craziness of "Saturday Night Live," but it is something different for prime time, a breath of freshness that deserves a chance.

Michelle Brings Lawyer Fame

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former showgirl Michelle Triola Marvin's landmark lawsuit against actor Lee Marvin has brought her lawyer fame but is not contributing much to his fortune.

Marvin Mitchelson, fast gaining a reputation as a wronged woman's best friend, says he's not really concerned whether he gets paid.

"This is not where I make my money," says Mitchelson, 50, a veteran divorce lawyer whose star-studded client list ranges from Pamela Mason to Bianca Jagger. In between, he has represented Connie Stevens, Rhonda Fleming and Eden Marx, former wife of the late Groucho Marx.

Grateful divorcees, whose settlements run into millions, have subsidized Mitchelson's taste for such luxuries as the two Rolls Royces parked in his driveway.

"Obviously this has done things for me," he says of the Marvin case, in which he opens his crucial rebuttal phase today after the actor's lawyers rest their case. "But I believe the legal concept of this case was more important than any fame that came with it."

In 1976, after five years of litigation, the state's high court upheld Mitchelson's contention that unmarried cohabitants have property rights and can file suit for a just share.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Warm weather is expected for the East in the forecast period until Wednesday morning. Cold weather is due for the central states and near-normal temperatures for most of the West. Showers are forecast from West Texas into the southern Plains. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Variable cloudiness was forecast over North Carolina today, with a chance of showers or thundershowers in the mountains tonight and Wednesday.

Light rain spread into the north central section of the state Monday night, but only traces of precipitation were reported as the showers spread to the southern coastal areas before ending shortly after midnight.

High temperatures around the state today were expected to range from the 50s along the north coast to the upper 60s and low 70s in western sections, much as occurred Monday.

Readings were warmer in the western part of the state Monday with Hickory's temperature climbing to a high of 78 degrees. Asheville had a high of 76 and Charlotte followed with 75. However, on the coast, Cape Hatteras had a high of only 52 degrees.

Load Of Local Bills Flood Committees

By Rep. Sam D. Bundy
N. C. House of Representatives
The deadline for local bills to be introduced was Mar. 9 and they came in by great numbers on the last two or three days prior to and including that date. So much so that the Local Government Committees 1 and 2 are having to meet two or three times a week instead of just once. It will take several days just to process these local bills and get them to the Floor of the House. Once there the local bills pass without difficulty unless there is controversy among the delegations representing the county involved. This is seldom the case, for the bills deal with charter amendments' charter revision, increasing or decreasing the members of boards of education, boards of county commissioners, town councils and the like. Would you believe that, to date, 856 bills have been introduced in the House and 527 bills have been introduced in the Senate for a total of 1,383 bills. My prediction is that the total by the end of the session will approximate 2000 in number. Entirely too many. From now on, only statewide bills can be introduced and this will slow the number down to some extent. A bill was introduced this week to return to the Insurance Commissioner the powers he states were taken away from him in the 1977 session and another bill was introduced to simply make minor amendments to the present legislation as recommended by the Insurance Study Commission. The fat is in the fire and the fur will fly in the House and Senate Insurance Committees for two or three weeks.

Recently a group of 32 Future Homemakers of America from D. H. Conley High School visited the Legislative Building and it was my privilege to talk to them on the organization and working of the General Assembly. My page this week was Mary Jo Stevens from Greene County and on Tuesday night she accompanied Mrs. Bundy and me to the Legislative Dinner given by the Electric Membership Corporation. See you next week.

'Bargain House' Open To Weekend Business

The Bargain House, a weekend business offering flea market services and auction sales, opened this past weekend at the new Pitt County Fairgrounds site. The business, operated by Wayne Hardee and David Wiseman, will be housed in the exhibit facility at the fairgrounds, located at the corner of Rams Horn Road and 264 Bypass. Operating hours for the flea market and auction will be from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. on Saturdays and from 1-5 p.m. on Sundays. A spokesman for the new business, who noted that the facility is being rented from the fairground owners, said that space is available for rent in the building on a daily basis for sales display. Farmers will be able to rent space for the sale of produce and non-profit organizations will have access to display space free of charge. Inside rentals are on a first-come, first-served basis, it was explained, and the facility will be open Fridays from 2-5 p.m. in order for displays to be set up. According to the spokesman, ten feet by ten feet spaces are available with electrical outlets located at each booth. In addition to yard sale items, the spokesman pointed out, it is expected that various antiques will be displayed for sale, as well as hand crafts and other items. Dealers must be licensed by the state. The Bargain House will sell items on consignment, it was added, with advance rental necessary on items that are left at the site.

The business will operate year round, with the exception of the week before and week of the Pitt County Fair in the fall.

Bonds Endorsed By Commission

The board of the Pitt County Development Commission has gone on record "strongly supporting" the April 3 utility bond referendum, according to commission chairman Bruce Beasley Jr.

Beasley said that in a recent meeting of the board, Charles Horne, director of Greenville Utilities Commission, detailed the upcoming electrical, water and waste-water system improvements, outlining the key elements of the project. "The importance of this election on the overall program of the commission was emphasized," the spokesman said, "and the Development Commission went on record as being unanimously in favor of this $24 million bond referendum to increase the electrical, water and waste-water capacities for...Greenville." Beasley commented, "All the citizens of Pitt County, no matter where they live, will be affected by the future growth of...Greenville. If the effort is not made to insure this growth to be positive, then everyone in the county will suffer." He added, "The hard work done to get new industry, the Medical School and the Carolina East Mall will have been in vain if the utilities needed for the orderly future growth of Greenville are neglected. This is why we have given our unanimous support...and why we urge the citizens of Greenville to vote on April 3."

The Development Commission, founded in 1957, is the tax-supported economic and industrial development agency for the county.

A Certificate of Deposit yielding over 8% might very well be your best investment. And then again, it might not.

Naturally you want the highest possible return on the money you invest in savings. But one type of certificate may tie up your money longer than you like, while the interest rate on another may not be as attractive. So how do you know which is best for you?

That's where you have a distinct advantage if you bank at Wachovia. Because you have a Personal Banker to turn to. Someone with whom you can sit down and examine the advantages of all available plans. And put together a combination which will give you the highest possible yield without tying up your money unnecessarily. It's an advantage you can enjoy simply by stopping by your nearest Wachovia office. Why not do it this week?

At Wachovia, your Personal Banker has the answers.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, MARCH 21, 1979

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Daytime finds it difficult to get your affairs on a solid structure as you would like to have them. Wait until evening to organize your efforts sensibly for good results. Plan with care.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Wait until the end of the day to seek support from a bigwig for good results. Take no risks with reputation in your community. Curb temper.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Study new outlets carefully before you commit yourself to anything. You are apt to encounter delays during daytime, but you meet new associates in the evening and everything works speedily for you.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You find it difficult to meet your obligations early in the day, but later all works out satisfactorily. Try to help mate with problems and be happier together.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Don't antagonize a partner who is important to you or you could get into a serious argument. Study a situation that is puzzling you before you take action.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You may find it hard to put new ideas in operation early, but tonight you can do so easily. Keep silent if a co-worker is out of sorts and avoid arguments. Evening is fine for socializing.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Improve talents during daytime, and later enjoy inexpensive but wholesome pleasures. You can make considerable headway in career work now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Show more devotion for kin and avoid a possible argument at home. Avoid trouble of all kinds by being ahead of the game. Take no risks with credit. Be sure to keep accurate accounts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Drive or walk with utmost care if you are to avoid danger since the air is filled with it. Show more courtesy toward partners and get good results. Soothe their jangled nerves.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You think you can buy your way out of anything now, but you had better save your money and be wiser. Build a reserve for the future, when you may need it badly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Pursue anything of a personal nature in the evening, since daytime is adverse for such. Keep busy at business matters during the day.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Tackle annoying chores early so that you have more time for important matters. An adviser could be of help to you if you consult early and later follow advice given.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Be kind to a good friend who is prejudiced but who can be of assistance to you. Daytime could be frustrating but by evening everything is fine for fun with kin, good friends.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have the ability to solve problems well and could make a fine trouble shooter. Teach early to be more objective and avoid trouble with others. There could be a good ballplayer or referee in this chart.
