Nuclear Plant Problem Seen Dwindling

By BOB DVORCHAK
HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Company officials at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant said today that a dangerous gas bubble has all but disappeared from the nuclear reactor and the reactor is being prepared for a final cool-down.

But he would not elaborate. NRC and Metropolitan Edison utility officials were to meet this morning to discuss the cool-down operation. "It's true. The bubble is gone from the pressure vessel," spokesman George Troffer of Metropolitan Edison told The Associated Press.

He added that radioactive gas emissions have apparently been sealed and said, "The reactor is completely stable and ready for the final cool-down."

Sunday, John Harrington, another utility spokesman, said the company was told by the White House "that all releases would be given out by the NRC."

about a million residents. Schools remained closed and the governor extended his advisory that pre-school children and pregnant women and young children keep their distance. Civil Defense officials estimated that 50,000 persons have left the area.

State government was open as usual, but the governor said there would be generous leaves granted for "absentees."

the utility that runs Three Mile Island said the bubble, made up of hydrogen and oxygen from chemical decomposition inside the reactor core, was measured at about 400 cubic feet. In the five days since the plant was disabled by a cooling system failure, the bubble has swelled as high as 1,800 cubic feet. In recent days, it averaged 600 feet. The bubble was being bled slowly by letting the gas dissolve in the constantly circulating cooling water and then allowing it to escape from the water outside the reactor.

Three Bond Issues Await Greenville Vote Tuesday

Greenville voters will go to the polls tomorrow to decide on three utility bond issues, totaling $24 million.

facility; and a new elevated storage tank. The $5 million sewage bond proposal would provide funds to build a new sewage treatment plant, and expand the GUC sewage collection system.

The third proposal is a $5 million issue for improvements to GUC's electric transmission and distribution system.

CO.) Water and Sewer rates will increase if the proposals are approved, spokesmen noted, in order to repay the bonds.

A Dehydrating Day

WATER, WELCOME WATER!... Unseasonable 86-degree weather yesterday afternoon made the Greenville Road Race an ordeal for many. Some 388 persons finished the 6.2-mile course. A number of runners suffered heat exhaustion, but Race Director Bob Gotwals checked on all reports and found no lasting injuries as of late yesterday afternoon, the Easter Seal Society, beneficiary of the registration fees reports. The event drew a large crowd at the starting-finishing point on Reade Street here.

Poll Hours

The polls will open in Greenville at 6:30 a.m. Tuesday for voting on the $24 million utilities bonds issue and close at 7:30 p.m.

FISH?

Who does one contact to see about stocking a farm pond? H.T.

The Soil Conservation Service can order fish fingerlings for you from the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service, which has a hatchery in the Edenton area. You must make application with the local SCS office, located in the federal building at the corner of Evans and Third streets here, and must meet several requirements. It must be verified by the SCS that your pond is a new one or one that has been drained or otherwise ridden of the major part of the fish that may have been in it. The pond must have more than a quarter-acre surface area. It cannot be a commercial operation, though whether it's to be publicly or privately used does not matter.

The fish will be brought to your pond by an employee of the Fish and Wildlife Service at the appropriate time to release the fingerlings. Usually bluegill bream and red-eared sunfish are released in the spring and bass and catfish in the fall, says Tim Garrett, Acting District Soil Conservationist, who provided the answer to this question.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Here's a knit you'll wear forever — a classic V-neck vest with cable panels back and front, bordered in contrasting stripes. It's designed to be made with easy-care orlon acrylic sportswear yarn with a gauge of five and a half stitches per inch. Directions are for small (8-10) and medium (12-14) sizes.

To obtain directions for making this carefree vest, send your request for Leaflet No. MH-2 with $1.00 and a long, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, "The Daily Reflector," P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. MH-2 by sending check or money order for $13.70 for small size or $15.50 for medium size to Pat Trexler at the same address. Kit contains the instruction leaflet and Bucilla Spectator yarn in white with scarlet and navy trim. Price includes postage and handling charges.

HI, PAT! As a self-taught knitter, I find your column very helpful. Now, I am wondering if you can help me with a particular problem.

I want to knit a sweater in the following way. My plan is to knit all the pieces (the back, both fronts and both sleeves) to the underarm and then put all the pieces on one needle in the right order and finish it in one piece with raglan sleeves.

I have knitted raglans from the neck down in one piece, but I don't know how to do the decreases when working in the manner I have described. It seems to me that working from the underarm up would allow you to adjust to many different types of sweaters. Could you please help? JEWELL G., HUNTINGTON, PENN.

Yes, Jewell, you definitely can work a raglan in one piece from the underarm up, with the main advantage being that you have no sleeve seams to sew when you finish the knitting.

I could give you some lengthy mathematical formulas for working out such directions, but these would be much too long and involved to give in this column. So, let me just give you a few simple tips which I think will allow you to do what you want.

The easiest way would be to find a raglan-sleeve pattern and follow the directions exactly as far as the number of stitches for each section. The only difference then is you would be following the directions for all pieces simultaneously.

If, on the other hand, you have your heart set on a design with set-in sleeves, here is how you can adapt it. When you reach the correct length to the underarm for each piece, bind off one to two inches of stitches at each side of each piece. For the exact number, use your basic pattern as a guide.

After these bind-offs are made, place all of the pieces on a circular needle in the proper order. If you are making a cardigan, you will work back and forth on the needles, while you will work in rounds for a pullover.

Place a marker on the needle between each piece. These markers will mark the armhole edges where decreases are to be made. With a cardigan, your row will start at the right-front edge when the right side of your work is facing you.

With the right side facing you, work across until there are four stitches before the first marker. Then, knit two stitches together, knit two, pass the marker from left to right needle, knit two, slip one stitch, knit one stitch and pass the slipped stitch over the knit stitch.

Work in this same way on the four stitches before and after each marker all across the row. As a general rule, you would repeat this decrease row on every right-side row for a cardigan. If you are working a pullover in rounds, you will always have the right side facing you, so just figure on making the decreases on every other round.

That's all there is to it until you reach the point where you must do some shaping for the front neckline, which is generally lower than the back neck edge.

Unless you are interested in designing, I would suggest that you follow the neckline shaping from another pattern with same gauge as the one you have on your garment.

After making all bind-offs and decreases necessary at the neck edge, continue making the arm-edge decreases until only one or two stitches remain in each front section. This should automatically give you the correct proportion of stitches in each of the other sections.

You may have to make a minor adjustment in the sleeve section decreases. Unless the sleeves are very full at the point where you start your decreases, you should make the decreases in the sleeve section on every fourth row instead of every other row for the first two to four inches.

I am sorry that I can't be more specific on this last instruction but there are too many variables for me to do so. I'm afraid you will just have to do some experimenting to find out what is best.

To ease your mind that the shaping is going well, slip the stitches from the needle to a strand of contrast yarn and try the garment on at any stage. This can show you whether you need to adjust any of the decreases in any section.

Finally, do make notes as you go and use these notes as guidelines for future designing.

Pancakes Oldest Form Of Bread

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Golden brown pancakes, slathered with butter and liberally laced with maple syrup or jam, appease the appetites of millions of Americans every morning.

The variety is almost without limit. One restaurant chain offers such offbeat griddlecakes as chocolate chip and banana nut.

Aside from these oddball offerings, there are a number of basic cakes that have been conceived in American kitchens. To name a few: sourdough cakes which some consider the most flavorful of all, New England griddlecakes, flannel cakes, buckwheat cakes and the classic johnnycake.

Americans tend to believe the pancake is strictly an American food like the hot dog. But, like the frankfurter we claim as our own, the griddlecake existed long before America adopted it.

Pancakes are the oldest form of bread. The first ones were made of pounded grain mixed with water and spread over a hot rock. In ancient times, the Hebrews cooked their unleavened bread on a griddle, and centuries ago the Chinese stumbled upon a pancake they named the egg roll — despite the rumor it was conceived in Brooklyn.

Most nations have pancakes of their own that range from appetizer to main dish to dessert.

For appetizers try the famous Russian blini, which resembles the buckwheat cake except that a little sugar is added. They are usually served hot and topped with sour cream which in turn is topped with caviar or sliced smoked salmon.

As a main course there is Italian cannelloni, a small cake filled with cooked meat or fish, rolled and placed on a buttered baking dish after being soaked with melted butter and olive oil and finally sprinkled with grated cheese and baked till the cheese melts.

For dessert you can't do better than the French crepes suzette, rich cakes spread with jam, jelly or fruit, rolled, doused with cognac and set aflame. Here's a recipe.

4 eggs, well beaten
1 cup milk
1 cup all-purpose flour
1/2 cup melted butter
1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
2 teaspoons sugar
1 teaspoon dark rum
Mix all ingredients; let stand in refrigerator 3 hours. Stir again and if mixture is thicker than heavy cream add a little more milk. Heat 8-inch skillet greased with melted butter and drop in heaping tablespoon batter. Quickly tip pan so that batter flows evenly over bottom. As soon as pancake browns, turn and brown other side. Stack and keep cakes warm till all are made. Makes about 32 crepes. Put sweet of your choice on each crepe, roll, flame with cognac and serve.

No Thanks For The Memories

By Abigail Van Buren

1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: In reference to the third grader who wanted to give out 23 invitations to her birthday party when there were 29 in her class:

Bless you, Abby, for siding with the teacher who wouldn't let her give out the invitations at school unless everyone in the class was invited. (You said, "The pain of having been left out will remain with those six who were uninvited long after the fun has been forgotten by those who attended.")

You are so right, Abby. I'm 29, and I still get pains in my stomach when I recall how one popular girl in my sixth grade class invited everybody but me and another girl to her Halloween party. She gave out printed invitations, then, the day before the party, she must have realized that we knew about it and felt hurt, so she "invited" us, but told us the wrong time!

My mother hurriedly made me a costume and dropped me off at the girl's house. I kept ringing the doorbell for the longest time. When nobody answered, I walked home crying.

I hated school the rest of the year.

PAINFUL MEMORIES

DEAR MEMORIES: I received a surprising number of letters from others who also had some painful memories:

DEAR ABBY: The pain of being left out is still remembered by this 59-year-old reader.

I remember when a girl in my class had a sweet-16 party and I wasn't invited because I wore a heavy brace on my leg as a result of polio.

I'll never forget this heartless girl telling me to my face that she really liked me, but didn't invite me to her party because there would be dancing and I wouldn't have a very good time sitting and watching everyone else dance!

J.W.D., CHICAGO

DEAR ABBY: A letter in your column certainly jogged some unhappy memories of my school days. When I was in the eighth grade, a girl in my room had a birthday party and invited everybody in the class but me and another girl. Her party was held on a Friday night and I skipped school that day because I was so humiliated I didn't think I could face my classmates without breaking down in tears.

That was 53 years ago, but I remember it as though it was yesterday.

CELIA IN CLEVELAND

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for siding with the teacher who wouldn't let a student pass out invitations to a party. I am a retired schoolteacher who frequently had to fight the same battle with some of my students' mothers. You would not believe how insensitive some people could be!

Some kids would have parties and exclude all the Jewish kids . . . or the black kids . . . or the Indian kids.

Small wonder some of those youngsters grew up to be bigots. They were carefully taught at home that anybody who was "different" was inferior. Thank heavens things are different now.

FORMER TEACHER: S.D.

DEAR ABBY: When I was in fifth grade, we moved out of state and I had to change schools. Being very shy, I didn't make friends very easily at my new school, so when the popular boy in the class had a party, he invited everyone except me and a very fat boy. I felt terribly hurt.

One of the kids in our class liked the fat boy, and refused to attend the party unless he was invited, too. The fat boy in turn said HE wouldn't go unless "the new kid" (me) was invited. So as it turned out everyone in the class went and had a good time!

Gold Star Parents Entertained Friday

The Ladies Auxiliary to the Veterans of Foreign Wars entertained Gold Star parents at its annual banquet Friday evening at the Post Home.

Mrs. Ralph Bailey, Gold Star chairman, presided. Mrs. Carrie West, chaplain, gave the invocation, and Mrs. Frank Moseley, auxiliary president, and Cmdr. Leo Evans welcomed honored guests.

Parents attending were Mrs. J. B. Spilman, Mrs. E. E. Rawl, Mrs. Margaret Tetterton, Mrs. Virginia Alcock, Mrs. Odell Conway, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Whelihan, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Sutton, Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie McGowan and Mr. and Mrs. Emil Vleck. The women were remembered with a corsage and gift.

Special guests included Mayor and Mrs. Percy Cox, DAV Cmdr. Herman Dail and his wife, DAV Cmdr. Mrs. James Nelson and her husband, DAV District Cmdr. Woodrow Boyd and Roy Boyles of Kinston.

Mrs. Boyles, state president of the ladies auxiliary, was guest speaker. She told of the purpose and value of work done by the VFW. She gave highlights of her trip to Hawaii, where she was honored by the National VFW Auxiliary because North Carolina was third in the nation in membership.

Mayor Cox paid tribute to the honored guests with responses by Mrs. Spilman, Mrs. Vleck and Mrs. Whelihan.

Mrs. Bailey recognized members of her committee including Mrs. Boyd, co-chairman, decorations, Mrs. Mary Lucy Taylor and Mrs. Martha Burroughs, gifts, Mrs. Margaret Brown, food, Mrs. West and Mrs. Moseley.

The Post Home was decorated with spring flowers and an Easter motif. The speaker's table was centered with an arrangement of yellow, white and pink carnations and snapdragons flanked with yellow burning tapers and Easter arrangements. Yellow candles and Easter arrangements were used on auxiliary tables.

Approximately 60 were present for the banquet.

Training Session Held

The Pitt County Association of Insurance Women met last week. The program was a personal lines training session led by Dallas Campbell.

President Audrey Stillwell conducted the meeting and announced the club won two awards at the Regional Insurance Convention, the Safety and Education Awards.

Plans were made to attend state convention to be held in Wilmington May 18-20. The Greenville Club will host and make centerpieces for the banquet tables Friday night.

Guests present were from Ahsokie and Greenville.

It was announced a table decorations workshop will be held April 10 with Mary Stoneham. A bake sale will be held at Pitt Plaza April 21.

Jean Kim Is Group Speaker

Alpha Iota Chapter of Alpha Delta Kappa, sorority for women educators, held its March meeting Tuesday evening at the Three Steers.

Jean Kim, Greenville's community ambassador, discussed his visit to Holland last summer. He showed slides taken during his stay there.

President June Carson conducted the meeting.

Secret Honeymoon For Patty And Her Husband

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Newlyweds Patricia Hearst and Bernard Shaw, her former bodyguard, are honeymooning today in a secret spot after a gala wedding that capped five years of national attention for the kidnapped coed turned convict.

The couple boarded a private Lockheed jet Sunday night, hours after a double-ring Episcopal ceremony in a flower-bedecked chapel on the Treasure Island naval base in San Francisco Bay.

"I've never seen Patty so happy. Don't you think it's about time?" said Janey Jimenez, a federal marshal who befriended Miss Hearst during her bank robbery trial.

Ms. Jimenez was one of more than 300 guests at the mid-afternoon wedding under cloudless skies. The ceremony came two months to the day after Miss Hearst, 25, was released from federal prison on a presidential commutation of her seven-year sentence.

The guests, many in expensive furs, crowded the simple chapel for the traditional ceremony, which began with the wedding march and ended with "I do." But no rice was thrown and guests said neither the couple nor their families shed any tears.

Shaw, 33, is a divorced San Francisco police officer who met his bride while moonlighting as her bodyguard and proposed while she was behind bars. She has decided to keep her own surname while adding his — Patricia Hearst Shaw.

The bride stepped from a polished black limousine to the applause of spectators crowded around the chapel with nearly 100 reporters and photographers who were barred from the ceremony and reception.

The bride, smiling broadly, said nothing to reporters who shouted questions at her. But her mother, Catherine, said after the ceremony: "It was wonderful. I've waited five years for it."

The new Mrs. Shaw wore a bare-shouldered white gown of silk organza, satin and French lace. Around her neck hung an heirloom from her grandmother — a white gold and diamond pendant on a strand of pearls. She carried a lily-of-the-valley bouquet.

The mustachioed Shaw wore black tails, satin-striped trousers and a striped cravat.

The bride's maid of honor was her girlhood friend, Patricia Tobin, whose father is president of the San Francisco bank Miss Hearst was convicted of robbing with the Symbionese Liberation Army terrorists who kidnapped her in early 1974.

After the ceremony Sunday, the millionaire Hearst family threw a three-hour reception at a nearby Navy community center. Waiters poured from magnums of Taittinger French champagne and guests nibbled on a buffet dinner including chilled oysters.

The base, accessible only via the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge, was chosen for the wedding because no one can get past sentries at the gate without a pass. The family also hired private security guards, and chartered 18 black limousines to carry many of the guests to and from the celebration.

Shaw, who makes about $20,000 a year, and his unemployed wife have said little about their plans for the future. Friends say they will live in his home in San Mateo County, south of San Francisco.

Anti-Nuke Groups Revitalized

By ELLEN NIMMONS
Associated Press Writer
Effects of the Three Mile Island radiation accident rippled through the nation, as the California governor sought a federal order to shut down a power plant and the protest cry of "No Nukes" was heard across the land.

Some nuclear opponents saw some good in the accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant near Harrisburg, Pa. "I think Harrisburg was a very bittersweet incident," said Mark Haim, a leader of Mis-sourians For Safe Energy. "We are all saddened by the fact that radiation has been released. We are all saddened that people are being exposed to this radiation. But I think it's waking up America."

He said 10,000 signatures had been gathered on petitions seeking a new study of a planned nuclear plant in Reform, Mo.

While officials worried about the crippled reactor in Pennsylvania, agencies in nearby states kept their eyes on radiation monitors and gathered samples of air, water and raw milk.

Protesters marched several miles to the Winthrop home of Massachusetts Gov. Edward J. King, a nuclear advocate, after a demonstration Sunday on the Boston Common. There, they delivered a petition demanding an end to nuclear power operations in the state.

About 300 demonstrators went to the Pilgrim 1 nuclear plant in Plymouth, Mass., on Sunday, where "minor confrontations" with police were reported. No arrests were made.

Outside the Rhode Island Statehouse, about 250 demonstrators called on Gov. Joseph Garrahy to stand against construction of a proposed atomic plant in Charlestown. In California, Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. called on the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to shut down of a nuclear plant near Sacramento that is a virtual duplicate of the Harrisburg reactor.

"There is significant uncertainty about just what happened in Pennsylvania, how much of it was human error and how much was mechanical," Brown said Sunday. "I get the impression that it's lucky the impact wasn't worse than it was."

Both the Rancho Seco facility near Sacramento and the Three Mile Island plant were designed and built by Babcock & Wilcox Co. of Lynchburg, Va.

Babcock and Wilcox also designed Florida Power Corp.'s Crystal River plant, and the utility sent scientists and engineers to Harrisburg. A spokesman said it would be "virtually impossible" for Crystal River to have a problem like that at Three Mile Island.

Pro-nuclear forces in Texas worried about the accident's effect on a vote Saturday on a planned nuclear plant project.

Austin voters are to decide if they want to keep their 16 percent interest in the $2.07 billion South Texas Nuclear Project.

Firm Agrees To Reimburse

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Virginia attorney general's office says as many as 300 North Carolinians bought the rights to distribute a gasoline-saving device that was never produced.

The product, called a Thervac, was marketed by the C.F. Vesley's Systems Corp. of Richmond. When placed over a car's carburetor, the device was supposed to cut pollution and nearly double gas mileage.

But, none of the businessmen ever received the product, said Toni Radler of the Virginia attorney general's office.

After investigating complaints, the office announced recently that the corporation had agreed to stop selling rights to the product and to reimburse more than $450,000 to an estimated 2,500 customers in five southern states.

In signing an Assurance of Voluntary Compliance, the company agreed to end all claims on the fuel-saving ability of the device until the claims can be substantiated by an independent laboratory, she said.

In a letter to distributors last August, the corporation said it would achieve a production rate of 5,000 units per day by mid-October.

"As far as I know, only one Thervac was ever in existence," Ms. Radler said.

"You can't sell something indefinitely without producing. You have to have a device before you can sell it. Something has to exist," she said.

By mid-October, the company told distributors that there were production delays, according to reports.

The corporation charged $32 for the right to sell the product and $450 to $528 for the device itself.

Paul Jones, president of the company, said recently that the company could not live up to its promises.

"We had very serious problems," he said in an interview with a Richmond newspaper. "At one point, we were ready to go, and then we found out that the manufacturer had made a serious mistake in the model and we were stuck with 200 units that did not work."

The Thervac was developed by 21-year-old Daniel Lee Vesley of Virginia. He could not be reached for comment.

LWV Backs Bond Issue

The Board of Directors of the Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters came out in support of positive votes for the water and sewer bond referendums to be held Tuesday, April 3, during a recent meeting.

The League of Women Voters has called for improvement of water quality and planning and management of water resources to meet area needs since a water resources study was initiated in 1956. The League has held periodic reviews of the study since 1956.

The Board of Directors did not have any recommendation on the electric bond referendum. After several years' study, the local League, as well as chapters across the nation, agreed that national energy growth can and should be reduced to less than two percent by the end of the century.

However, the study was not concerned with improving and extending distribution systems.

Recover Body

From Haw River

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Rescue workers recovered the body of a 15-year-old boy from the Haw River Sunday. The car he was in went into the river during a high-speed chase Saturday by Alamance County deputies.

Authorities identified the youth as Michael Lewis Pulliam of Burlington.

A girl in the car at the time of the accident, Shirley Crawley, 15, also of Burlington, escaped with minor injuries, deputies said.

The accident occurred about 1:30 a.m. Saturday on N.C. 62 near the Glencoe Bridge.

Super Champs Are Announced

Approximately 140 children from across Pitt County participated in a Super Champ Basketball competition held at D. H. Conley High School Saturday.

The competition, developed by the Pitt County Community Schools Program, offered four areas of competition so that each young person could compete on an individual basis with children of his/her own age.

Winners were as follows: Boys, ages 8-9, Al Davis of Ayden, first, Joey Williams of Winterville, second and Jeff Mahoney of Grifton, third; Boys, ages 10-11, Dan Andrews of Wellcome Middle, first, Chuck Bollinger of Grifton, second and Olinka Little of Stokes, third; Boys, ages 12-13, Andre Hemby of Ayden, first, Mike Dixon of Ayden, second and Darryle Wells of Whitfield, third.

Winners in the girls' competition were as follows: ages 8-9, Climmie Harris of Stokes, first, Lisa Andrews of Bethel, second and Gwendolyn Pilgreen of Pacolus, third; ages 10-11, Cynthia Hicks of Ayden, first, Carla Gray of Grifton, second and Kim Tuton of Winterville, third; ages 12-13, Lisa Mills of Chicod, first, Vonda Stokes of Chicod, second and Josie Braxton of Ayden, third.

First place winners received sports towels, sweat bands and gold basketballs. Second place winners won bike flags and gold basketballs, while third place winners received sports hats and gold basketballs. McDonalds provided prizes, drinks and certificates for the competition. Approximately 200 spectators came to the event Saturday.

Ex-Police Chief Files Complaint

SARATOGA, N.C. (AP) — Gregory A. Umbaugh, former police chief, has charged in a lawsuit that his dismissal last month was illegal.

In the complaint filed last week in Wilson County Superior Court, Umbaugh is seeking $100,000 in damages and reinstatement to the position, which he held for five months.

Umbaugh said he was not given a reason for his dismissal and that he did not receive a hearing. Saratoga Mayor C.T. Hawkins said that town commissioners followed proper procedures.

Umbaugh had a series of disputes with town officials over his enforcement of speeding laws in the town on U.S. 264 east of Wilson.

Ground-Breaking A Proud Day

It was fitting that Gov. Jim Hunt was there. So was the man most responsible for the event, retired ECU Chancellor Leo Jenkins. So, too, was the president of the UNC System Dr. William Friday. The present chancellor of ECU Thomas Brewer was on hand, as was trustees chairman Troy Pate.

ECU Vice Chancellor for Health Affairs Ed Monroe, who carried so much of the fight, took part.

It was the historic day when ground was broken for the medical science building which will house the ECU School of Medicine.

Dean William Laupus, who has performed so outstandingly in developing the school to the present point and planning the nine story building participated. Many other trustees, staff, faculty, legislators, public officials and and friends who supported the medical school effort, and still do so, came to share in the great pride of the day.

The Friday groundbreaking was, of course, ceremonial. Some medical school construction at the Pitt County Memorial Hospital is already complete. Auxiliary buildings are well underway on the medical campus and construction crews have already moved in to begin the main building. The school itself, operating in interim facilities, currently has almost completed its second year, and the effect of the school's medical services has long been felt throughout Eastern North Carolina.

All of that, however, only added to a tremendously proud day for Eastern North Carolina and the state as a whole.

WELL, THEY'VE GOT THE FIRST STONE IN PLACE!

Boyle's Glory Lingers

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
NEW YORK (AP) — A theatrical press agent called the other day asking if Hal Boyle would be interested in interviewing a client who had taught a cheetah to play "Somewhere My Love" on the zither.

His man also had an armadillo who could both rumba and do disco dancing.

Well, I had to tell him that Hal Boyle has been dead these past five years but it was good to know that his glory as a writer goes marching on. There's no one around today who could do justice to the impresario of the musical mammals, because right off Hal would have been more interested in the man than his animals.

I can hear him now conducting the interview in a back booth at Moriarty's. He would be asking the man what he did for fun on his days off from the act, how difficult was it to register a cheetah and an armadillo in a downtown hotel and how did he go about getting baby sitters? And, oh yes, what he would like to have for an epitaph on his tombstone?

Boyle asked that question at every interview. He had an Irishman's fascination, mystical not morbid, with death and the grave, although not everyone shared his enthusiasm for the subject.

Cary Grant, he once told me, wept into his weight-watchers salad when called upon to contemplate an exit line for the stone cutters, and Frank Faye, the marvelous Irish actor who created "Harvey" on Broadway, abruptly stumbled up the street to St. Malachy's to go to confession.

Somewhere on his desk, Boyle collected the last words of famous people, like Stonewall Jackson's "Let us cross the river and rest in the shade" (Continued on page 5)

TV Peace In Our Time

WASHINGTON — It was the media event of the decade. The signing of a peace treaty between Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, with President Carter sitting at the table on the lawn of the White House.

And yet there was something missing. Suddenly I realized what it was. Walter Cronkite, Barbara Walters and John Chancellor were not up there to initiate the treaty. How, I thought to myself, could there be peace in the Middle East when these three television newscasters were not part of the agreement?

For over two years I had gotten all my news about the negotiations from Cronkite, Walters and Chancellor, as had everyone else in the United States. President Carter occasionally made a statement. Begin and Sadat were constantly being interviewed by their own press, but night after night it was the role of the American TV commentators to give us the good and bad news of the negotiations.

ART BUCHWALD

the most optimistic. I could never tell watching him when he was willing to throw in the towel.

But in fairness to all three, they took risks that no other anchorpersons had ever taken before in trying to get the parties together.

When Walter decided to go to the Middle East with President Carter, in a final last-ditch effort to save the peace, his advisers at CBS were almost all against it. "It's okay for Carter to go," one of them told him, "he has nothing to lose. But if you go, Walter, and come back empty-handed, your credibility as the most trusted man in the United States will be jeopardized, and your rating in the polls could plummet."

Walter was adamant. "The peace means more to me than my popularity. I know the chances are slim, but I have some new ideas for Begin and Sadat which could mean a breakthrough."

ABC had mixed feelings about Barbara Walters. Since it was still No. 3 in the nightly news' Nielsen's, the feeling was that if an agreement failed, Walter would get most of the blame, and then Barbara's stature would go up. But if there was the slightest chance of success, both Begin and Sadat would insist on giving her the credit.

Other Editors Say Emmett Kelly

(Greensboro Daily News)

Weary Willie was a cartoon before he was a clown. He came to life on the drawing board at the Ad. Film Co. in Kansas City, Mo. in 1920. A year later he ran away and joined the circus.

Weary Willie turned out to be a famous clown by the end of his career. Millions learned to love the sad eyes, the sorrowful mouth, the stoved-in hat, the baggy clothes and the cigar that always looked like last year's model. Weary Willie was one of life's luckless wonders who made success out of failure.

Did his sad lot bother Willie? Apparently not. "He is a man who has given up. The boat has gone and left him. The cards are stacked against him. He's content to make out with what he's got ... he knows he'll go no further," Emmett Kelly once said of Willie; and if anyone should have known about such things, Kelly was the man, for he was the power behind the clown.

When the clown jumped off the drawing board, Kelly threw down his artist's brush and chased after him. Kelly helped Willie crawl under the Big Top, slogged with him through countless "mud shows", as circuses used to be called and aided and abetted his clown's every move on countless television shows. With boundless generosity, Kelly gave Willie the benefit of his muscles and bones so that Willie could make us laugh and fall in love with sadness.

On Wednesday, Weary Willie died. Coincidentally, Emmett Kelly died the same day. He was taking the garbage out when he dropped dead of a heart attack. He was wearing pajamas. Weary Willie's dilapidated costume was hanging in a closet in Kelly's Sarasota, Fla. home.

Just down the Gulf coast from Sarasota is Venice, a small town that has a school for clowns. The school is owned by Ringling Bros., Barnum and Bailey Circus. The circus is owned by a conglomerate. You can't run away to join the circus any more the way Willie and Emmett did. You have to go to school and get a degree like everyone else.

"He was a good, good man", his wife said. And so he was. And Weary Willie was a good, good clown.

Confusing Economic Struggle

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The battle continues. Poring over their diagrams, and conferring, hoping, and promising, they seek to cool a system gone haywire. There is little public understanding; there is great fear.

The fight described is not to cool the Three Mile Island power plant, although the words fit neatly, so neatly that the comparison teaches a lesson. The words relate instead to the battle of the economy.

The challenges are remarkably similar. How do you cool the machinery without creating worse conditions? How do you contain the consequences? How do you translate the complexities into meaningful information?

The inflated economy is an uncontrolled chain reaction, a wage-price spiral that feeds on itself and radiates problems throughout society, defying proposals of the nation's best economic brains.

It isn't localized; it can't be. Its impact spreads. Whatever it touches becomes the source of more, and in the process is sometimes devoured. Night and day it spreads, and the populace gets weaker.

Everyone, right from the president on down, talks about stamping it out, but it doesn't work that way. If force worked, then it would have been tried by now. How do you use force against a chain reaction?

The measures used, economists say, must be more subtle. Education, sacrifice (of wage or price increases, for example), patriotism, guidelines, persuasion, leadership must substitute for direct force.

But, the same economists say, there is another solution. Economic collapse, they tell us, is the most immediate corrective. It ends the chain reaction, or rather the chain reaction ends the economy.

Only then, some students say, does the public recognize the full consequence of an overheated economy. Only when it happens, they claim, does the lesson become real. Too often, admonitions go unheeded.

Nevertheless, President Carter has little choice but to go that route. At first he tried to advise; he pleaded; then he proffered voluntary guidelines, and now he has pounded the guidelines into demands.

As he stepped up his demands, inflation worsened, and now a good many people believe the next move might be to involuntary controls, for which presumably he needs congressional sanctions.

Should the president move in that direction, the critics will swarm all over him. The imposition of controls, they will say, is the equivalent of trying to stop a nuclear reaction by stopping on it.

But what remains to the president? Should he let the economy fall into the pit of recession and possible depression? Or should he abide some of the damaging radiation while waiting for the system to cool?

And can the president afford the time?

Less School Regulation?

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Suppose for a moment that the impending relaxation of state regulatory authority over private schools demonstrates something which most knowledgeable people already feel is true: that students in private schools, by and large, get a good education.

If those students get a good education — even in many instances a superior education — does it follow that a lot of state regulation and supervision is not a critical part of providing a good education whether the school be private, or public?

Action in the General Assembly, removing the bulk of state regulation of private schools, has moved speedily and with a surprising weight of endorsement from a number of education leaders whom you would have thought might be opposed.

The State Board of Education has remained silent; tacit endorsement of the move. Gov. Jim Hunt has publicly endorsed the change.

Future

This surprising development has more to do with things developing for the future than with good politics or defense of freedom of religion — both sufficient in themselves to cause such speedy action.

For within the circumstances are strong signals that Gov. Hunt sees in the removal of state regulation of private schools the chance to prove another of his pet theories of reform of public school education in North Carolina.

The governor pushed hard, against strong opposition, to gain the laws establishing all-student annual testing, and the high school competency test as a requirement for graduation. He made it clear at the time — and has since repeated his position — that this testing was just part of a package of reform. Other parts include the Community School Act to open the buildings and programs to citizen participation, along with his push for volunteers in the schools. A proposed academy for principals awaits legislative action.

But all along, apparently, there has been more in the wings. While campaigning for office, Hunt talked at length about "measuring output instead of input". He elaborated: we have tried to beef up spending, measured per-student dollars, strived for lower student-teacher ratios, worked to improve teacher qualification. All has been "input". It was widely held that the student tests were the "output" measures.

Suppose that "output" could be improved without increasing all that "input" of supervisors, class size, standard curricula, uniform texts and materials, ever-rising salaries, more and more administrators. Suppose Raleigh doesn't really know best; that local communities can devise flexible and different ways to suit local school needs and problems.

Escape

A final bit of background. The state regulation of private schools was imposed when the Pearsall Plan was close to reality as the escapist answer to public school desegregation. If all schools were to become private schools, then state supervision was seen as critical. That drastic step never occurred, but the state regulations were imposed nonetheless on private schools.

With this framework in mind, consider what Gov. Hunt is now saying of the deregulation of private schools. There is a Constitutional mandate to provide an adequate education, and the key word is "adequate". There are two principles: to ascertain health and safety minimums; and to assure a good education.

Assuring a good education, it has been shown, has little to do with measuring student-teacher ratios, salaries, possibly even teacher certification. Those are inputs. "Measuring the output is far better than measuring input ... and now we have other measures which are far superior."

"And now, some of these other things (input) we could ease off on ... certainly in the private schools; and in the future, in the public schools," Hunt is saying.

THE INSIDE REPORT

The Subversives In Iraq

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
BAGHDAD — Behind the tough talk against the Egyptian-Israeli treaty in this militant, oil-rich country is a danger scarcely mentioned in the controlled press: the danger of Soviet subversion and takeover.

That danger is regarded as acute by the handful of top officials who are pushing Iraq to lead the third world and who exert total political control. Indeed, in a heavy irony, the anti-Soviet warning being sounded throughout the Middle East by President Carter and his men in seeking Arab acceptance of the new treaty finds a powerful (though publicly silent) echo here. Yet this is the only Arab state that has a "friendship" treaty with Moscow.

In addition to justifiable fear over Soviet efforts to use the small and virulent Communist party as a lever to heighten Soviet influence — or eventually actual control — the ruling, highly nationalistic Baath party faces potential harassment from other quarters: the two million Kurds, one-sixth of the population, and sectarian troubles between Moslem sects. Iraq could be infected by both the Kurdish revolt and Shiite fundamentalism which are helping fuel the revolution in Iran.

But with both the Kurdish and sectarian dangers now under tight control, the persistent threat to Iraq's decade of unaccustomed calm and isolation from the world lies in Soviet style communist subversion. That provides the first faint shadow of mutuality between the U.S. and Iraq. It is a mutuality neither country publicly admits in their arm's-length relationship, conducted without benefit of formal diplomatic ties. But it could conceivably become important in the future, even though Iraq's game today is to lead the Arab pack against President Carter and the new Egyptian-Israeli treaty.

The event that tipped Iraq to the approaching disaster of close relations with Moscow was last year's Soviet-engineered coup in Afghanistan. Although the secretive government says almost nothing about that takeover publicly, one respected authority here described it as "a matter of nothing less than life or death" as a forewarning to Iraq.

Afghanistan galvanized the politically-led army to check on activities by known members of the legalized Communist party within its ranks. The discovery was quickly made that party cadres had set up forbidden cells inside the army — the obvious first stage of a possible future coup like Afghanistan.

At least 21 party members (some say as many as 40) were executed by firing squads. Nothing has ever appeared in the controlled press, but angry organs in other countries, including Italy's party newspaper Unita, thundered against such nasty measures of self-protection.

At least four separate protests from the Soviet Union and its Eastern European satellites were summarily rejected by the government on

Strength For Today

WORD OF POWER
"This saith the Lord."

It has been a very long time since any religious leader has spoken with such a voice of authority. We generally look upon the prophets of the Old Testament as men who foretold things. Often they did so, but more often these prophets were preachers. Occasionally they foretold; continually they proclaimed. And their proclamations began or ended with the words, "Thus saith the Lord."

God's revelation certainly did not cease with the compilation of the Bible. It goes on today as it has always gone on. Although it is not the custom today to begin or end sermons or speeches or friendly advice with "Thus Saith the Lord", God still speaks through men and women who put themselves in His hands with a surrender akin to that of the prophets of old.

God may speak through a minister, priest, rabbi, or a thoughtful friend who patiently awaits the word. And we should be as attuned to listen to the one who transmits this word to us.

ing her equal time with Cronkite. Besides, Barbara didn't even discuss it with her bosses. She was on a plane the minute Carter announced he was going.

Chancellor also insisted he would rather come back from the Middle East empty-handed than not go at all. He had NBC draw up a new map for him, which he hoped might break the deadlock between the Egyptian and Israeli leaders.

We may never know the roles these three played in bringing about the White House signing, but at our house, where we watched these three shuttling back and forth between Cairo and Jerusalem, standing in front of the Wailing Wall and broadcasting on the banks of the Nile, Cronkite, Walters and Chancellor were our only source of information on what was going on.

When they were up, we were up. When they were down, a black cloud descended over our TV screens.

I don't want to take anything away from President Carter or Anwar Sadat or Menachem Begin, but it is inconceivable to me that these three men would have come to a meeting of the minds if they weren't aware that Cronkite, Walters and Chancellor were waiting outside to report on their negotiations.

It was one thing for these three leaders to report back to their constituents that they had been unable to reach a peace agreement. But none of them had the nerve to walk out of the meetings and look Walter Cronkite in the eye and say, "We failed."

If nothing else, each of them should at least be given a pen.

grounds of outside intervention with a purely domestic affair.

In addition, the government is continuously worried about Soviet pressure for more oil from the country whose reserves may prove to be larger even than Saudi Arabia's. Typically, Moscow in the past has bought oil from Iraq, then sold it to satellites for huge profits. The "friendship" treaty still has half a dozen years to run, and Moscow holds one ace — spare parts for Iraq's mainly Soviet-equipped military hardware — which Baghdad cannot trump for now.

Fear of Soviet subversion, so heightened by Afghanistan, explains Iraq's key role in helping defuse the border war between Saudi Arabia-backed North Yemen and Soviet-backed South Yemen. Not only was Iraq the only Arab state both able and willing to help primitive North Yemen with its Soviet-built military gear when South Yemen attacked it, it and Syria were the two Arab states to bring at least a temporary truce to the border war.

In Yemen, Afghanistan or any future Soviet "destabilizing" campaigns in the Mideast, Iraq's mutuality with the U.S. to deny Moscow an entry permit now seems assured. Considering Baghdad's potential as the only Mideast state with rich resources in both oil and agriculture, this narrow confluence of interests deserves more attention in Jimmy Carter's Washington than it gets, despite Iraq's demands on behalf of Palestinian nationalism.

Sports Arena

Backers Gather

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (AP) — A meeting is scheduled this morning among backers for a huge sports arena for the Triangle area.

The meeting is set for 10 a.m. at the National Humanities Center.

Terry Sanford, president of Duke University and a former governor, is one of the effort's backers.

A legislative study commission has recommended that an arena with a seating capacity of at least 25,000 be built in either the Triangle, Charlotte or the Greensboro-Winston-Salem area.

— The Superintendent will into executive session for recommend that the board enter various matters.

Heavy Damage In City Parking Lot

An estimated $4,000 damage resulted from two collisions investigated here Sunday by Greenville Police.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from an 11:45 a.m. incident in the city's parking lot (Number 7) off Evans Street near the Fifth Street intersection.

Investigators reported a car driven by Earl Gaddie Beard of Route 1, Farmville, turned into the parking lot, then struck a parking meter pole. The car continued on and collided with a parked vehicle owned by Jerry A. Flake of 1108 East Tenth St., then struck another parked auto owned by Bobby Bowden of Ayden.

Beard's car then allegedly collided with the Belk-Tyler Company building, then collided with a parked vehicle owned by Evelyn R. Bullock of Route 4, Greenville, forcing the Bullock car into a parked car owned by Robert L. Belcher of 1713 Hopkins Dr.

Officers, who charged Beard with driving under the influence, hit and run driving, and driving while his license was permanently revoked, estimated damage at $1,500 to the Beard car, $35 to the Flake auto, $50 to the Bowden car, $350 to the Bullock vehicle, $250 to the Belcher car and $150 to the meter pole and building.

A 5:40 p.m. mishap on West Gum Road, 60 feet East of the Holbert Street intersection involved vehicles driven by Alfred Ray Crawford of Route 4, Greenville, and William Bryon Mercer, of 156 West Gum Road, investigators reported.

Police estimated damage at $900 to the Crawford truck and $800 to the Mercer car.

Mercer was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety.

Politics Remains Name Of The Game

By SAM D. BUNDY
N. C. House of Representatives

Politics is the name of the game and it was apparent to everybody in the Legislative Building this week. What about? The election of 10 people to the Board of Governors of the North Carolina University System. Letters were written in support of this candidate or that candidate and placed on the desk of legislators. Phone calls were made to suggest swaps such as "you support my candidate and I will support yours." Small groups standing here and there discussing strategy. Candidates themselves visiting offices of the legislators and making themselves known and seeking votes. Joint Session of the House and Senate on Wednesday for the nominations to be made. Voting by secret ballot separately in the House and Senate on Thursday. What did it all amount to? The election of the following who had been on the board previously, i. e. E. B. Turner, William A. Johnson, Roddy Jones, Irvin Boyle, William Dees and Jake Froelich. New ones elected were Grace Eppes, John Ed Davenport, Jack O'Kelly and former Gov. James Holshouser.

The big social event of the week occurred at the Scott Building in the State Fairgrounds when 600 people sat down to a festive meal of which everything served was grown, produced and processed in North Carolina.

Schools visiting the Legislative Building in recent days were about 60 students, teachers and parents from the G. R. Whitfield School in Pitt County and 50 students and teachers from the Mt. Calvary Christian Academy in Greene County. Good to see young people interested in their government.

See you next week.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A showdown is nearing in the House over a bill that would let the government borrow more money, some of it to help cover $7.5 billion in Social Security checks already in the mails.

The debt limit measure has been held up by disagreement over a proposed amendment to require a balanced federal budget.

A vote on the bill — this year's first major battle over deficit spending — was expected today when Republicans try to bring up a stringent balanced budget amendment.

The old debt limit of $798 billion expired Saturday, throwing the government into a fiscal crisis and raising the possibility that there might not be enough money to cover Social Security checks scheduled for delivery Tuesday to 35 million Americans.

Treasury Department officials have refused to say flatly that there won't be enough money in government accounts to back the Social Security checks.

EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N.C.

Cooler with chance of showers each day Wednesday through Friday. Highs in low 60s Wednesday and low 70s Thursday and Friday. Lows in 40s except 30s in the mountains.

But a department statement said that without an increase in the debt limit, "the Treasury will be unable to meet its obligations on Tuesday."

Department sources, who asked to remain anonymous, raised the possibility of the government being able to pay its most pressing bills by shifting available funds from accounts where they were not urgently needed to those where the need was greater.

Democratic leaders were counting on the prospect of the government not being able to pay its bills to help pressure Republicans into passing the bill without the amendment.

The Democrats argue that adding the Republican amendment would further delay enactment of the bill and force the government to begin defaulting on its financial obligations as early as Tuesday.

The Republican-backed amendment would require three-fifths majorities in both houses of Congress to raise the debt limit to pay for unbalanced federal budgets starting with fiscal 1981, the budget year beginning Oct. 1, 1980.

A nearly identical amendment, sponsored by Sens. Bob Dole, R-Kan., and William Armstrong, R-Colo., was defeated by only two votes in the Senate last week.

The Democrats say a milder balanced budget amendment approved by the Senate is sufficient to move Congress toward ending deficit spending by fiscal 1981.

The Democratic-supported amendment, approved by the Senate as a substitute for the Dole-Armstrong proposal, would require the congressional budget committees to offer balanced budgets for fiscal 1981 and fiscal 1982.

The debt limit bill would raise the government's temporary borrowing authority from $798 billion to $830 billion through Sept. 30.

In other action today, a Senate consumer subcommittee was opening hearings on whether certain hair dryers containing asbestos might pose a cancer risk, and California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. was to testify before a House subcommittee on the Sohio pipeline project to carry Alaska oil from California to Texas.

How's The Weather?

Ex-Congressman Held Innocent

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain and showers are expected in the forecast period until Tuesday morning, for the eastern Gulf and Atlantic coast states. Snow flurries are forecast for the upper Great Lakes. Rain is due along the Northwest coast and mild weather along the Atlantic coast, but most of the nation is expected to be cool or cold. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press
A complex frontal zone meandered through central Virginia, westward into Kentucky, and then southwest into eastern Texas this morning, and it heralded April showers east of the North Carolina mountains by tonight. Scattered rain will continue through Tuesday.

South and southwest winds during the past few days, along with the sunshine, have pushed temperatures well above seasonal normals. Temperatures climbed to the mid 80s over much of the state Sunday afternoon. New Bern registered 86 degrees for one of the warmest readings.

Cape Hatteras with 72 degrees had the distinction of being the coolest east of the mountains. Variable high cloudiness overnight with a light south and southwest wind helped keep temperatures mild with upper 50s to mid 60s common during the wee hours of this morning.

The recreational weather outlook for North Carolina for the next few days will change from the fair weather pattern to a more showery outlook beginning today over the mountains and moving eastward tonight. And it will be turning some cooler by Tuesday, with showery conditions prevailing through Friday.

By GUY COATES
Associated Press Writer
MONROE, La. (AP) — Otto Passman no longer holds the office that was his for 30 years; he is ailing, deaf and nearly 79. But he is free — declared innocent on five counts by a federal jury.

"Did he say guilty? Did he say guilty?" Passman asked as the verdict was read Sunday.

"No, Otto, he said 'Not guilty,'" said defense attorney Camille Gravel.

The former congressman jumped to his feet like a healthy young man, hugging Gravel.

On trial in his home town for more than four weeks, Passman was accused of conspiring to take as much as $213,000 from Tongsun Park to help the South Korean hang onto the post of sole agent of U.S. rice sales to his country.

He was also accused of accepting $193,000 in illegal gratuities and failing to report $143,000 of the money on his tax returns.

A jury of nine men and three women deliberated about 90 minutes before returning the innocent verdict on all five counts.

"It's great to be a citizen of the greatest nation on Earth," Passman told reporters on the federal courthouse steps. "I was prepared for either verdict. I am absolutely innocent. I'm proud to be an American."

The decision came one year and a day after Passman was indicted by a grand jury in Washington, D.C. The trial was moved to Monroe because of the former congressman's age and ill health.

Passman, who lost a re-election bid in 1976 after 30 years representing Louisiana's 5th District, said he had no immediate plans. He added he was not bitter about the trial.

"I'll be 79 in June," Passman said. "I have a few years left, I hope. I'm getting old and lame. I plan to do something constructive."

He declined comment about Park, saying: "I think it's unfair to get into personalities."

Passman wept during the final minutes of Gravel's closing statement, as he heard his attorney describe him as a frail old man who had little time left and who wanted only to protect his reputation.

In his closing statement, prosecuting attorney Morris Silverstein described Passman, chairman of the House subcommittee on foreign aid for 22 years, as a greedy man who wanted money.

"One of the most powerful men in the United States Congress violated a sacred bond by accepting money for services rendered to a citizen of a foreign nation while he was already being paid a salary by you, the people. His motive: greed."

But Gravel told the jury that Park used Passman as a scapegoat in "an evil Korean conspiracy."

Boarding Home Fire Kills Nine

By GARY MIHOCES
Associated Press Writer
CONNELLSVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Nine of the 12 residents of a boarding home were killed and two were seriously hurt when a fire swept through the rear of the three-story frame house, officials said.

Officials said all the dead were elderly except for a 30-year-old male resident, James McCormick.

Assistant Fire Chief Leland Williams said the fire started Sunday night in the basement where five elderly residents slept, killing all five.

He said the flames spread rapidly, blocking the two exits from the basement — a door to the outside and a staircase to the first floor.

"The fire started by the one door and moved across the ceiling to the stairway," he said. "They really didn't have a chance to get out."

Four other residents, pronounced dead at Connelville State Hospital, were found on the first and second floors, firefighters said.

Deputy Coroner L. John Powell said most of the victims died from smoke inhalation.

The owner of the home, Helen Marietta, 54, was hospitalized for shock. Her 76-year-old mother, Leona Porterfield, was among those killed.

The hospital said Elizabeth Zamarrelli, 74, was in critical condition, and Bessie Richter, 77, was in poor condition.

Also killed, authorities said, were George Kooser, in his 80s; Mary Dzurik, 78; Laura Pringle, 76; Hilda Harky; and Edmond Zientarski, age unknown. The names of two others were being withheld.

Williams, who said the cause of the fire was still under investigation, described the residents of the home as people unable to find places in state nursing homes and unable to afford private homes.

Registration At Nursery School

Registration for the 1978-79 school year has been announced by the Lutheran Church Nursery School.

The program, coordinated by Mrs. Sheila Kupec and Mrs. Mary Muzzarelli, is designed to provide informal learning enrichment through group discussions, art, music, rhythm, number and shape concepts and beginners experiments.

Children who will be three years of age before Oct. 15 are eligible for registration. Classes are held on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 9 a.m. until noon.

For further information call Mrs. Muzzarelli, 758-5621, or Our Redeemer Lutheran Church, 756-2058. The church is located at 1801 S. Elm St.

Guest Speaker On Wednesday

The Rev. Virgil Whitehurst, a Winterville native, will be the guest speaker at the Wednesday, April 4, 7 p.m., meeting of the Bell Arthur Christian Church Men's C.M.F.

Wallace Avery, president of the group, will assist in the program presentation.

Death Shot Said Self-Inflicted

WASHINGTON, N.C. — A Pactus man apparently drove himself to the parking lot of the funeral home here which he wished to handle his funeral arrangements and killed himself.

The Washington Police Department reports that W. Bundy Satterthwaite, 70, of the Pactus community of Pitt County died Sunday morning in his car in the parking lot of the Paul Funeral Home here. The cause of death was reported to be a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head. The police department reported that the call reporting the incident came in at 8:32 a.m.

Arrest Duo On Break-In Count

Greenville police yesterday arrested Kenneth Wayne Gardner, 21 of 1904 Chestnut St., and Elizabeth Ann Jollie, 19 of Route 1, Winterville on charges of breaking, entering and larceny, in connection with an incident here March 28.

Chief Glenn Cannon said the pair was charged in connection with a break-in at Mattie's Lounge at 415 South Memorial Dr.

Impact Is Felt

ATLANTA (AP) — United Airlines ticket counters in the Southeast were almost deserted Sunday as travelers adjusted to the machinists' strike against the country's largest commercial passenger air carrier.

The 14 southeastern cities the airline serves were "reporting some activity, but it has slowed down considerably since Saturday," Bill Davis, Southeast regional manager for United public relations, said Sunday.

United serves cities in Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, North Carolina, Louisiana and Florida with 85 flights carrying between 7,000 and 8,000 passengers per day, Davis said.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market posted a broad loss today, weighed down by energy worries.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 8.84 at 853.34.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than a 3-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts noted some relief over the latest news from the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant near Harrisburg, Pa., where an accident occurred last week.

Company officials said today that a dangerous gas bubble in the plant's nuclear reactor had all but disappeared, and preparations were being made for a final cool-down.

But analysts said that the incident, whatever its outcome, posed new problems for the nation's energy plans, since it seemed likely to lead to added constraints on the use of nuclear power.

General Public Utilities, parent company of the utility that operates the Pennsylvania plant, asked today that the trading halt it requested for its stock on Friday be continued.

Among other issues with links to the nuclear-energy industry, J. Ray McDermott was down 3/4 at 18 1/4; Westinghouse lost 3/4 to 18 1/4; Kerr-McGee fell 2 1/4 to 48 1/4, and General Electric dropped 3/4 to 47 1/4.

Coal stocks, meanwhile, were strong for the second straight session. Eastern Gas & Fuel rose 3/4 to 20 and Pittston 1/4 to 22 1/4.

The NYSE's composite index dropped .51 to 56.62, and the American Stock Exchange market value index lost 1.75 to 177.95.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 13.80 million shares at noon.

The first week of spring is known as "Good Seed Week." Good seed is sometimes more expensive, but it is a bargain because of better growth and germination.

Good seed should bear a label on the package that indicates the variety, germination percentage and other quality factors. The label will also include the percentages of weed seed and other plants in the package. Quality seed is certified to be free of disease organisms and may be chemically treated to reduce damage from soil-borne organisms.

Good seed is a bargain purchase because it develops good quality plants with strong root systems and improved growth.

Seed supplies vary from year to year, as shown in 1978, when peanuts and late planted soybeans were struck by late drought conditions. With the dry soil conditions, peanuts were not able to take up needed calcium during the kernel filling stage.

When calcium is deficient in peanuts, germination may or may not be reduced. As of this year, minimum allowable germination percentage has been reduced from 75 to 70 percent on peanut seed stocks. There is an ample supply of peanut seed in North Carolina, especially if orders are filled early.

There is a possibility that the NC-6 variety may be in short supply due to strong grower demand. However, the Florigiant variety should be widely obtainable.

Soybean seed supplies should be adequate, but it is advisable to obtain the desired variety early. There may be local shortages of certain varieties for a temporary period.

Proper seed treatment should include fungicide and/or insecticide application. Also, many farmers plant seed too early in cool soil that impedes rapid germination.

Avoid the factors that risk the chance of replanting seed. Use the best seed available, with the necessary fungicide/insecticide treatments.

If an inoculation treatment is required, treat the seed properly. It is beneficial to inoculate land-planted legumes, such as peanuts and soybeans, at least once every three years. Including inoculant in the seed hooper each year insures that plants will be able to form their own beneficial bacteria.

Publicity In Big Spud Giveaway

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A lot of city folks got a lot of free potatoes and eastern Idaho farmers got a lot of free publicity, which they say is exactly what they need to draw attention to their plight.

Farmers estimate the week-end giveaway — 400,000 pounds of potatoes — cost them about $10,000. Farmer Kent Remington of St. Anthony said the demonstration was designed to draw attention to the low prices farmers are getting for potatoes as well as lower supermarket prices and increase demand. He said farmers are getting as little as 1 cent a pound for their potatoes. Supermarkets here were charging between 15 and 39 cents a pound for Idaho potatoes last week.

Uganda War Stepped Up

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Tanzanian forces stepped up their war against President Idi Amin today with an air attack on Jinja, Uganda's second largest city, and renewed shelling of Kampala, his capital, after apparently pushing his Libyan defenders back, diplomatic sources reported.

Residents of Jinja, 50 miles east of Kampala, said three fighters made a brief bombing run over the city but missed their apparent target, the local army garrison. Instead, their bombs fell near the Libyan Arab Uganda Bank, causing few injuries and doing little damage, the sources said.

The Tanzanian air force made its first attack of the five-month-old war on Sunday, cratering the main runway of the international airport at Entebbe. But Ugandan exiles in Nairobi expressed surprise at the raid on Jinja. Some of them suggested the attackers were Amin's Libyan allies threatening the Ugandan troops at Jinja, who the exiles said had refused to go into action against the invasion force of Tanzanian troops and Ugandan exiles.

Diplomats in Nairobi said the shelling of Kampala, the Ugandan capital, resumed early this morning and at least five artillery shells landed on the city. They said an oil storage tank was hit and a pall of black smoke rose from the industrial area on the eastern side of the city.

Rhodesia Girds For Elections

By CYNTHIA STEVENS
Associated Press Writer

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Rhodesia's army, gearing up to combat guerrilla threats to sabotage elections this month for this nation's first black-majority government, has begun calling up reservists up to the age of 60, the military command said.

A spokesman said orders went out over the weekend for some 600 civilians to report for reserve duty during the week. An undisclosed number of men between 50 and 60 were to be given medical examinations to determine if they were fit for duty, the military said.

The fact that the government was calling up men in the grandfather category underlined the manpower problems the army is facing after more than six-years of war against black nationalist guerrillas.

At the same time, worried parents of more than 50 children are planning to send them to neighboring South Africa during the election period, the Rand Daily Mail newspaper reported today in Johannesburg. It said the Rhodesian Rotary Club was handling the evacuation.

The pre-election precautions increased here, guerrillas launched another rocket and small arms attack on a big fuel depot in the heart of Salisbury's industrial district.

Police said no damage or injuries were reported in the Sunday night raid. Guerrillas fired rockets at the depot last December, setting millions of gallons of precious fuel ablaze.

The black nationalist guerrillas have vowed to sabotage the elections in Rhodesia, claiming that black politicians seeking office are "stooges" who will let Rhodesia's white minority pull the strings and continue 90 years of white domination.

Citing security, the government has kept the exact date of the universal suffrage elections a secret. An announcement is expected on Friday. Sources say the vote is expected to begin April 17 and end April 20.

YOUR CORN CROP DESERVES A GOOD SWIFT KICK.

Year after year you push for higher and higher yields, and it takes more than the standard servings of NPK to do it. Every year you could very well be draining calcium, magnesium, sulfur and other nutrients from your soil. We recommend a good Swift® kick for your corn.

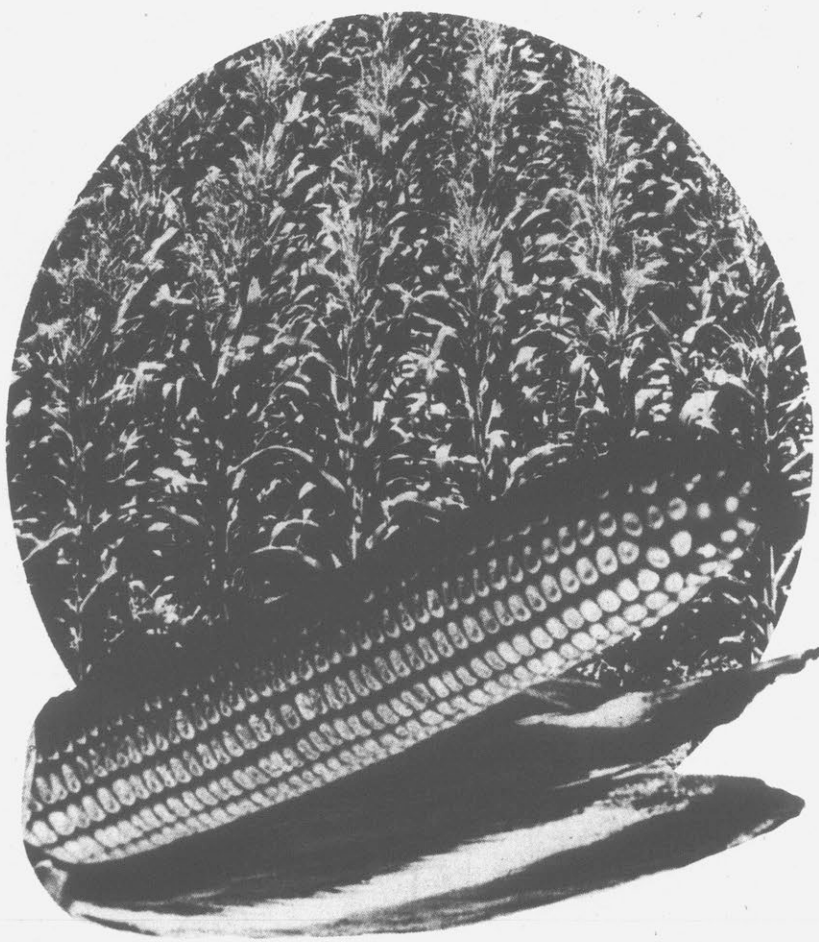

Swift Certified Harvest King® fertilizer provides an NPK formulation plus important extras you may not be getting — a proper balance of secondary elements and micronutrients. Be assured of all the calcium, sulfur and magnesium as well as micronutrients such as boron, copper, molybdenum, manganese and zinc.

TOBACCO GROWERS TALK ABOUT VIKING SHIP® CALCIUM NITRATE

"Best body of tobacco I've ever had"

J. O. 'Tommy' Naylor
Spivey's Corner, N.C.

"I used Calcium Nitrate for the first time in 1976 after great results with 'CN' on my produce crops. 'CN' contributed to the growth and weight of my crop. My tobacco grewed off faster than ever before. It put early body and length to the leaf and made my tobacco mellow all the way up the stem. I'll be using Calcium Nitrate again this year."

McEnroe Posts Milan Victory

MILAN, Italy (AP) — The oft-posed question of who is the world's No. 1 tennis player, Jimmy Connors or Bjorn Borg, may soon have an answer — John McEnroe.

Only 20, the Douglaston, N.Y., tennis phenom is the rising star of this year's World Championship Tennis (WTC) circuit after winning two tournaments in a week — in New Orleans and Milan. He has now picked up 390 points to take the lead in the WTC standings, ahead of Connors.

Vitas Gerulaitis, who lost in the semifinals here to McEnroe, winning only three games in two sets, is sure the hard-hitting left-hander will be the future king of tennis.

McEnroe is more cautious, and modest, apparently.

Aware he has won only one of five matches against Connors, McEnroe says Jimmy is still Professional pride is nice, but Maurice Lucas had a more tangible explanation for his 14-point burst in the final 4:02 that gave the streaking Portland Trail Blazers a 109-107 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks Sunday.

"I wanted the ball, I wanted it badly," explained the veteran forward. "I want to get into the playoffs because I want the extra income."

Lucas' spurt helped the Blazers to their eighth victory in the last nine games and kept them 2½ games ahead of San Diego in the race for the last playoff spot in the National Basketball Association's Western Conference.

In other NBA games Sunday, the Philadelphia 76ers edged the Los Angeles Lakers 112-111, the San Antonio Spurs nipped the Boston Celtics 112-110, the Cleveland Cavaliers beat the Houston Rockets 114-105, the Washington Bullets defeated the Denver Nuggets 105-89, the San Diego Clippers topped the New York Knicks 126-116, the Phoenix Suns beat the Detroit Pistons 116-105, the Seattle SuperSonics edged the Golden State Warriors 102-97 and the Atlanta Hawks defeated the New Jersey Nets 109-98.

Lucas finished with 30 points for the Blazers. His short bank shot with 27 seconds left gave them a 108-107 lead and his free throw with 11 seconds to play produced the final margin.

76ers 112, Lakers 111
Los Angeles, trailing 109-100 with 1:38 left, reeled off 11 in a row to take the lead before Philadelphia bounced back to win on Darryl Dawkins' three-point play with five seconds left.

"Somebody's got to shoot it," Dawkins said of his winning play. "If I make it I'm the hero, if I miss it I get boos. But I don't care, I'll always try it. The foul shot I made was the biggest one of my life."

The Lakers' Kareem Abdul-Jabbar led all scorers with 38 points.

Spurs 112, Celtics 110
San Antonio erased an 18-point third-quarter deficit and won on James Silas' 20-foot jumper over Chris Ford with four seconds remaining. George Gervin led the Spurs with 34 points and Silas scored 25.

"I was surprised," said Silas. "He gave me the shot I wanted. I was looking for the medium-range jumper and that's what I got."

"I knew what he was going to do — run the clock down and go over me," said Ford. "That's just what he did."

Cavaliers 114, Rockets 105
Campy Russell scored 21 of his 25 points in the second half as Cleveland beat Houston and dropped the Rockets 1½ games behind first-place San Antonio in the Central Division. Moses Malone led Houston with 24 points and 20 rebounds.

Bullets 105, Nuggets 89
Elvin Hayes scored 30 points as Bullets Coach Dick Motta became the third coach in NBA history to win 500 games, joining Red Auerbach and Red Holzman in that select circle. Motta's teams in Chicago and Washington have lost 397 games in 11 years.

The loss put Denver one-half game behind first-place Kansas City in the Midwest Division.

Clippers 126, Knicks 116
Lloyd Free scored 28 points and Nick Weatherspoon added 24 as the San Diego snapped a four-game losing streak to stay within reach of Portland in the playoff chase. The Clippers outscored the Knicks 22-8 in the last 5:42 of the third period to take control.

Suns 116, Pistons 105
Phoenix won its sixth in a row behind 23 points and 12 rebounds by center Alvan Adams. The Suns' 48-30 record is the third best in the NBA, but they still trail Seattle by two games in the Pacific Division.

Sonics 102, Warriors 97
Seattle, the NBA's top defensive team, held Golden State without a basket for five minutes of the final period. Guards Dennis Johnson and Gus Williams led the Sonics with 24 and 21 points, respectively.

Hawks 109, Nets 98
Dan Roundfield had eight of his 31 points in a 20-4 Atlanta

Carner Wins Playoff

COSTA MESA, Calif. (AP) — In an era when age 30 is considered past prime for athletes, JoAnne Carner, a few days shy of 40, is a rarity.

"I've never felt younger," said Carner after surviving a five-way playoff Sunday to capture the $150,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament at Mesa Verde Country Club.

The $22,500 first prize propelled her into the LPGA money lead past Nancy Lopez, who saw a 2-stroke lead disappear over the last six holes.

Lopez, gunning for her third 1979 victory, faltered at the end by bogeying four of the final eight holes for a round of 75, her worst of the tournament.

That left her tied with Carner, Jan Stephenson, Chako Higuchi and Donna Young at 286 at the end of regulation play in the 72-hole event.

"The golf course beat everybody," said Carner, who fired a closing round of par, 71, then defeated Higuchi on the second overtime hole after the other three had bogeyed the first extra hole.

"I never dreamed I'd be sitting here," she said afterward, clutching a bouquet of roses as she met with reporters. It was her second tour victory of 1979 — upping her earnings to $61,300 — and 23rd title since turning pro in 1970.

After trailing by four strokes much of the week, her 2-foot par putt ended the nationally televised drama. Higuchi, needing a 6-foot putt for par, slid the ball past the hole for a bogey.

Stephenson rallied with a 71 Sunday, while Higuchi and Young had closing 73s. All collected $9,675.

An item in "Basketball Weekly" came to our attention over the weekend as it passed our desk in the mail.

The publication in one of its stories named its All-Junior College team, which consisted of four sophomores and one freshman.

The freshman is 6-5 Kevin Stallings of Belleville (Ill.) Area Community College.

Stallings led his team to a 28-7 regular season record, the Region 4 championship, and a berth in the NJCAA tournament.

During the year, he averaged 16 points a game, along with nine assists. He broke the school's season record for assists with 289, including 21 in one game.

He hit 80 per cent of his free throw shots and 50 per cent of his field goals.

"He could have averaged a lot more points," his coach, Bill Franey, is quoted in the article, "but he passed the ball off a lot. Some four year coaches say he's the best passer they've seen besides Earvin Johnson."

Stallings, at the end of his high school career, was courted by many colleges, and finally signed a grant-in-aid with the University of Minnesota. But the man who signed him left that school to take a job elsewhere, and Stallings, first thinking of joining that coach, finally decided to go to a junior college for a year instead.

He was recently contacted by that same coach, who was then up for a head coaching job. He verbally committed to attend the school if the coach got the job.

As it turned out, the assistant didn't get the job. Stallings, reluctantly, will go elsewhere now, probably to a school in the Big Ten.

That coach is currently closing out a year at East Carolina. He's Terry Kunze.

This is not to condemn those who picked Dave Odom for the head coaching job over Kunze. They could not be guided by the basis of one recruit alone. There were many other factors involved in the selection.

We report this here merely to show that Kunze has appeal with top players, and we aim it at those who were opposed to him without knowing the caliber of person he is.

Dave Odom appears to have found out quickly the type man Kunze is. While there has been no commitment between the two, except that Kunze still has a job to do before his contract runs out, he is helping Odom with recruiting.

At first glance, the two appear to be working well together. What the future holds, however, is entirely up to them, and them, alone.

We believe that East Carolina has made the decision it felt was best for it. We back Dave Odom as head coach. We only oppose those who condemn a man for things he had no control over.

We anticipate a bright future for both Dave Odom and Terry Kunze, regardless of what may come in the next weeks and months.

Carew Sub Keys Angels

By The Associated Press
They say you can't replace Rod Carew, but Willie Mays Aikens didn't do a bad job Sunday.

Aikens subbed for Carew after the seven-time batting champion was ejected, and hit a two-run homer to help the California Angels beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 7-4 in exhibition baseball at Anaheim.

Carew was thumped out of the "Freeway Series" game when he bumped plate umpire Jim Scott in the fifth inning while protesting he hadn't swung on a third strike.

In the next inning, Dan Ford singled and Aikens hit his second homer of the spring for the Angels.

Bobby Grich, claiming some assistance from Carew, also was a hero for the winners with two RBI singles, including a rally-capping hit in a two-run third against Andy Messersmith.

liss singled home the winning run in the 10th inning, giving the New York Yankees a 4-3 victory over the Detroit Tigers. Joe Wallis' five hits helped the Oakland A's beat the Chicago Cubs 9-8. Rookie Eric Wilkens earned his first Cactus League victory, allowing two runs and five hits in six innings, as the Cleveland Indians beat the Seattle Mariners 7-3.

Shah Considers Argentina Home

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, a man without a country since the revolt in Iran, is reportedly considering settling in Argentina.

The newspaper La Nacion said Sunday that friends of the deposed monarch had contacted government officials concerning the move. Government sources refused to comment on the article.

La Nacion said President Jorge R. Videla was consulting other nations to test international reaction before deciding whether the shah would be allowed to move here.

The shah and his family have spent most of their exile in Morocco since leaving Iran on Jan. 16. The royal family flew to the Bahamas on Friday and is expected to stay about three weeks.

The revolutionary government in Iran has said it will ask the government of whatever nation the shah settles in to extradite him to Iran to be tried for alleged crimes against the nation.

'The Scarlet Letter' Pleases Critics

INTO CHEERLEADING — Joe Namath is the master of ceremonies and Suzanne Somers stars in "The 2nd Annual National Collegiate Cheerleading Championships", a 90-minute entertainment special featuring five cheerleading squads in competition for the national title. The show is to be aired Monday, April 16 on the CBS Television Network. (AP Laserphoto)

Banishment 'Okay' Avers Armstrong

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Radio evangelist Garner Ted Armstrong, ousted last year from his father's Pasadena-based religious empire, now credits his father with "one of the greatest favors of my life" and says he regrets not being banished much earlier, the Pasadena Star-News reported today.

"I can only wish my father would have done it 10 years ago, when I would have had a few more years of my prime left before me," Garner Ted said of his excommunication by Herbert W. Armstrong, founder of the $80-million-a-year Worldwide Church of God.

"I am all over the trauma and shock of it," he said, noting he had been expelled from the organization nearly a year ago.

In ousting his son, the 86-year-old Armstrong claimed Garner Ted was trying to take control over the Worldwide Church of God.

In the past year, Garner Ted has formed the Church of God International, based in Tyler, Texas, and claims to be heard on 31 radio stations across the nation. In addition, he says is planning to launch a televised religious program soon.

He estimated his following has grown in the first eight months to between 5,000 and 6,000, with over 40 congregations around the world. The Worldwide Church of God has about 80,000 members.

The scope is smaller, he acknowledged, but he said he finds it much more fulfilling.

Garner Ted said his church's income so far this year has been $197,229, which he said is "two percent or less of the income of the Worldwide Church of God." But he added, "The Church of God International is on only one-third as many radio stations."

Valerie Harper Likes 'Causes'

SEATTLE (AP) — Valerie Harper may be without a television show, but the star of "Rhoda" is not without a cause.

Ms. Harper has been involved with political issues such as support for the United Farm Workers and the Hunger Project, and has campaigned for clean air and racially integrated television commercials.

"It's not that I'm suddenly jumping up and getting into it," she said. "I've always been involved."

Ms. Harper, in Seattle to appear at a "speaking" for the proposed Equal Rights Amendment on Saturday, said: "Personal conduct is not touched by ERA. Men opening doors for women and who does the cooking are not addressed in it, it just makes the law equal for men and women."

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Public TV's "The Scarlet Letter" has prompted a jocular shriek from a whole chorus of culture guardians across the country who see the made-in-America production as nothing less than television's equivalent of the American Revolution.

Indeed, the miniseries adaptation of Nathaniel Hawthorne's classic (beginning tonight) does present literate programming the likes of which Americans have had to import from England and the British Broadcasting Corporation. But wishful thinkers who have pointed to "The Scarlet Letter" as the harbinger of an American "Masterpiece Theatre" series are in for a disappointment.

"The Scarlet Letter," Hawthorne's masterpiece of guilt, vengeance and redemption, was four years in the making, and it cost $2.9 million, not a sum suggesting a series from fund-poor PBS. There are presently no funds for another such production, said a staffer at Boston's WGBH, which produced "The Scarlet Letter."

"Everybody says this will counteract the tide of British imports," says Rick Hauser, "Scarlet Letter" producer-director. "I say, 'God, I hope not.'"

"They say this is the first American triumph, finally an answer to British imports and things of that sort. When it's put on that level ... let me just say this is not a perfect piece."

I'm pleased with it, and within its limits, it's a good effort.

"It would be great if it were the first of many, but it's not likely. So, for the moment, all I can ask is that viewers look at it thoughtfully, and know the work was done carefully."

The series was shot on tape inside Fort Adams on the harbor at Newport, Rhode Island, on a set meticulously constructed to represent 17th century Boston.

Hauser cut away some of the gloom and moral meanderings of Hawthorne's novel, and heightened its passion. And Hauser did his homework. He was acutely aware that Hawthorne, who wrote in 1850, saw America of the 17th century as a race of hardy, red-cheeked Elizabethans, and faithfully presented them as such, rather than as colorless Puritans.

Meg Foster is Hester Prynne, the strong, quiet adultress sentenced by her fellow Bostonians to wear the scarlet "A" on her bosom for life. If you know of Meg Foster, she of the opal eyes, you know it takes a few minutes to quit looking at her face and concentrate on the story. On the whole, she handles her part nicely, though at times she seems to confuse seriousness with low volume, and she mumbles through her lines.

John Heard is a little too heroic for the role of secret-lover Arthur Dimmesdale, but Kevin Conway is wonderful as Roger Chillingworth, the bent-on-revenge wronged husband.

The miniseries runs on consecutive nights, tonight through Thursday, a programming idea borrowed from commercial TV. It's a masterful story, a masterful bit of television.

"All I ask is that people will be calm when viewing it, that they see it with thoughtfulness," says Hauser. "It's not like Kleenex, to be used and thrown away."

Radio Pioneer A.J. Fletcher Succumbs

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Alfred Johnston "A.J." Fletcher, chairman and chief executive officer of Capital Broadcasting Co., died Sunday night at Rex Hospital after a brief illness. He was 91.

Funeral services will be at 2 p.m. Tuesday at the Hayes Barton Baptist Church, which Fletcher founded. Burial will be private.

Fletcher was born in Ashe County and in his early career served as a newspaper editor for the Enterprise in Mooreville and the Journal in Apex.

A graduate of the Wake Forest College Law School, he practiced law in Sparta and Fuquay before he opened his Raleigh office in 1919. In addition to his law practice, Fletcher was active in the business community.

In 1939, he established Capital Broadcasting Co., which operates WRAL-TV, WRAL-FM, the Tobacco Radio Network, the North Carolina News Network, Capitol Publications, Capitol Background Music and Seeburg Music Library. Capitol Broadcasting recently agreed to purchase WKEE-AM and WKEE-FM in Huntington, W. Va.

Fletcher was a founder of Dixie Life Insurance Co., which became Southern Life Insurance Co., which has its headquarters in Greensboro.

He started the Grass Roots Opera Company in 1948 to introduce the art form to students. It later became the National Opera Company.

Fletcher's philanthropy has included grants to churches, the Baptist State Convention and several educational institutions.

In 1975, he was elected to the North Carolina Association of Broadcasters Hall of Fame.

East Carolina University in 1971 named its music complex "The A.J. Fletcher Music Center" in recognition of Fletcher's contribution to the arts. The Baptist State Convention in 1975 dedicated its new communications facility in Raleigh as "The A.J. Fletcher Baptist Communications Center."

Fletcher is survived by his wife, Mrs. Margaret Fletcher of Raleigh; three sons, Fred Fletcher of Raleigh, Frank Fletcher of Washington, D.C., Floyd Fletcher of Durham; a sister, Mrs. Annie Bingham of Lexington; 11 grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren.

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A1093 ♥J98 ♦AQJ954
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—You have several choices—you can rebid your diamonds, raise hearts or introduce your spade suit. Our choice would be to bid one spade. We believe that a good four-card major should always be shown at the one-level, if possible. While this bid is, technically, not forcing, the odds are that partner will bid again. And if he does not, you probably have missed nothing.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKJ98753 ♥A ♦QJ102
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?

A.—Despite the fact that the hand could be a misfit, chances for slam are excellent. Your spade suit is virtually self-sustaining, and as little as one diamond honor in partner's hand might make twelve tricks a laydown. The way to flash the slam signal to partner is to jump shift to two spades.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AK765 ♥KQ7 ♦AQ4 ♠J3
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 4 ♦ Pass

What action do you take?
A.—You have a find hand, but partner has announced a hand that is strong only in terms of distribution. In high cards he cannot have much—certainly not two aces. While it is tempting to make one try for slam in the hope that partner has the right hand, you have no safety at the five level. Therefore, pass and settle for what appears to be a sure vulnerable game.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J2 ♥A54 ♦Q1096 ♠K1053
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♦ 2 ♦ ?

What action do you take?
A.—Resist the impulse to bid two no trump. You have a hand that rates to take at least four tricks on defense against a diamond contract, and partner has opened the bidding. The opponents are in deep trouble, and you must not allow them to escape unpunished. Double.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K642 ♥Q743 ♦Q765 ♠8
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?

A.—When partner opens the bidding with one club and we have only enough for one response, it is usually our desire to introduce a four-card major if we hold one. Here, however, we are perfectly placed if we respond one diamond. That gives partner the opportunity to show a major at the one level, but also leaves him free to raise diamonds if he holds a minor two-suiter.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ7 ♥65 ♦K92 ♠AQ982
Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?

A.—You have 14 high-card points and a balanced hand. You gain nothing with this type of holding by temporizing with a bid of two clubs. Your most descriptive response, showing your distribution and stoppers in the unbid suits, is a jump to two no trump.

Q.7—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ97653 ♥107 ♦KJ ♠82
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
3 ♦ Pass 3 ♦ Pass
4 ♦ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Thus far, you have promised partner no more than a rebid-able spade suit and about 7 points. In actual fact you have a strong playing hand, which is improved by the fact that you hold two key honors even though you might be off two fast club tricks, and our recommendation is to simply bid what you think you can make—six spades. The drawback to a cue-bid of five diamonds is that it will tip off the opponents to your club weakness. They might not lead a club on a less revealing auction.

Q.8—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ1083 ♥94 ♦AJ105 ♠J5
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ 1 ♥ 1 ♦ 2 ♥
2 ♦ 4 ♥ 4 ♦ Pass
Pass 5 ♥ Dbic. Pass
Pass Pass

What is your opening lead?
A.—It is clear that your side has the preponderance of high cards, and that you have all three side suits, well under control. Obviously, the opponents are relying on distributional holdings to produce most of their tricks. To prevent declarer from scoring more tricks on a crossruff than his right, lead a trump—and another as soon as you regain the lead.

'Man-Rems' Calculation

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — When officials estimated that the odds were at least 5-to-1 against even one cancer resulting from the accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant, the calculation was based on a measure called man-rem.

A man-rem, or a person-rem, is a way of measuring radiation exposure to a large number of people.

It is the product of the average exposure times the number of persons. Exposing 100 persons to one rem each is 100 person-rem. So is exposing 10 persons to 10 rem each.

Harold Denton of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission said Friday that total exposure in the first three days since the accident occurred Wednesday morning totaled 1,000 person-rem, including all areas no matter how remote from the site.

A National Academy of Sciences committee has estimated that one to two cancers eventually will occur when a group of people receives 10,000 person-rem. That estimate is based on animal studies and data on persons exposed to radiation.

Thus, the risk for 1,000 person-rem is only 0.1 to 0.2 cancers. Since it's meaningless to talk about a tenth of a cancer, this can be avoided by saying the chances of even a single cancer due to the incident ranges from 5-to-1 against to 10-to-1 against.

However, Denton acknowledged that as more radiation was released in coming days, this risk would rise.

At Least Fifteen Dead From N.C. Accidents

By The Associated Press
The state Highway Patrol reported that at least 15 persons died in traffic accidents on North Carolina roads over the weekend.

The fatalities brought the number of deaths for the year to 325, compared to 337 at this time last year, the patrol said. Two Fort Bragg soldiers died early Sunday when the motorcycle on which they were riding went out of control and crashed head-on into a car just north of Fayetteville, the patrol said.

The patrol identified the two as Fred Odell Hatley Jr., 25, of Charlotte, and Edward Fithian, 22, of Pennsylvania, N.J.

In another accident involving a Fort Bragg soldier, Ralph Andrew Lail, 20, died early Sunday when the car he was driving went off U.S. 401 in Harnett County and struck a culvert.

A 21-year-old Zebulon man died in a one-car accident early Saturday. The patrol said Johnny Ray Smith was killed four miles north of Zebulon when his car ran off a rural paved road and down an embankment onto U.S. 64.

In Wayne County Friday night, William Joseph Padgett, 16, of Pikeville, was killed when his car ran off a road a few miles south of Goldsboro and overturned.

James Franklin Walker, 16, of Hickory, was killed Friday night in an accident in Catawba County. State troopers said Walker's car ran off N.C. 127, struck a culvert and flew 75 feet in the air. Walker was thrown from the car, which landed on the highway and was struck by another vehicle.

Wilson Woodrow Sledge, 66, of Pleasant Hill, was killed when his car collided with another car in Gaston in Northampton County.

Sandra E. Kirkland, 22, of Ray Road in Harnett County, was killed early Saturday when the car in which she was riding ran off the road and hit a bridge abutment near Spring Lake.

Gary F. Holmes, 39, of Richmond; Va., was killed early Saturday when his car wrecked on a rural road near Thomasville.

A pedestrian, Clyde Mackie Pope, 37, of Claremont, was struck from behind by a car and fatally injured as he walked along a road near Conover.

A Cleveland County wreck Saturday night near Kings Mountain took the life of Donald Lee Arrowood, 30, of Cherryville, when his car crossed the center line and struck another car head-on.

Chester Allen Pearce, 19, of Henderson, was killed when he was struck by a car on U.S. 1 near Wake Forest. The patrol said Pearce was lying in the road when he was struck.

A collision in Charlotte early Saturday killed Eric Karl Mable, 18, of Charlotte.

Bobby Lee Gillespie, 29, of Rt. 3, Leicester, was fatally injured when his car ran off a rural road and over an embankment north of Asheville.

Andrew E. Smith, 20, a Camp Lajeune Marine, was killed when the car in which he was riding wrecked early Saturday near Richlands. The patrol said the car went out of control and struck a culvert.

Sprinklers Fail In Fire Crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) — Firefighters would have had an easier time bringing under control Washington's worst fire in 30 years if a sprinkler system inside the vacant building had been working, a fire investigator says.

Investigator Thomas Dodson said Sunday the sprinkler system inside Kann's department store was shut off several years ago because standing water in the pipes froze during the winter. About 150 firefighters battled the five-alarm blaze for 12 hours Saturday. The department store, a Pennsylvania Avenue landmark, went out of business in 1975. The cause of the fire has not yet been determined.

Fewer Dying In Tornadoes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fewer people died in tornadoes last year than normally do, although more twisters struck the United States than usual, the government says.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said Sunday that 788 tornadoes hit the country in 1978, an increase over the 28-year average of 667 per year. The storms claimed 62 lives, a sharp drop from the average annual death rate of 111. The agency issued the report as the tornado season in the United States approaches.

Jack Carter Is Eyeing Congress

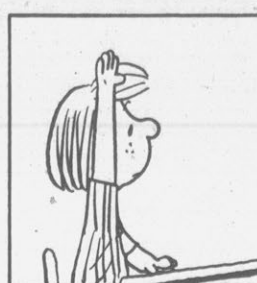

CALHOUN, Ga. (AP) — Northwest Georgians will have to wait until next December to find out whether they'll get a chance to vote for another Carter.

President Carter's 31-year-old son, Jack, says he'll wait that long before announcing whether he will run for the congressional seat representing that section of the state.

If he makes it to Capitol Hill, with his father down the street at the White House, Jack Carter says he believes he could still maintain his independence.

"I don't think that I am duty bound to vote as my father tells me. Carters are just not naturally agreeable as a group," he said.

ELECTED TO BOARD

The board of directors of Branch Banking and Trust Co. elected Albert S. Wylie and L. Vincent Lowe Jr. to the board of BB&T. Both men serve on the Branch Corp. board.

Wylie, a 37-year veteran of the banking industry, was recently promoted to senior executive vice president and controller in charge of the Bank Operations and Control Division. He is president and chief administrative officer of Branch Corp.

Lowe, who joined the bank in 1961, is head of the Branch Administration and Credit Administration Divisions. He was promoted to senior executive vice president in February.

LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE

James B. Powers, chairman and president of Planters National Bank and Trust Co., was a participant in the American Bankers Association's Banking Leadership Conference, held recently in Washington.

Powers attended as a member of ABA's governing council which formulates policy positions for the associations.

Primary purpose of the conference, composed of over 400 bankers from across the nation, was to provide position opinions for the ABA with regards to congressional proposals for restructuring the Federal Reserve system.

CREDIT ROSE

According to weekly figures released by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, bank credit at 19 large commercial banks in the Fifth District rose $358,567,000 in the week ended March 21, raising bank credit outstanding to a level of $27,945,758,000.

Total loans, adjusted — total loans exclusive of loans to domestic commercial banks — increased $373,538,000, while total investments fell $14,971,000.

Included in the Fifth District are North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, Maryland, the District of Columbia, and most of West Virginia.

WINE SEMINAR

The Introductory Wine Seminar Program at The Gathering Place Dinner Restaurant will hold its final session with a tasting of German wines on April 2, conducted by Dr. William C. Smith of New Bern.

The session will be held at 7 p.m. at the restaurant, located on Dickinson Avenue. Fee for the session will be $5 per person.

The Money Is Growing

EMPORIA, Kan. (AP) — Kansas.

Banker Glenn Tague can identify with the fictional television benefactor who gave away millions of dollars.

Tague, senior vice president and trust officer of Citizens National Bank and Trust Co., expects to give away $1 million this year as administrator of the Walter S. and Evan C. Jones Trust.

The Joneses were ranchers from Lebo, Kan., who died in the 1950s. They directed that income from 56,000 acres of pasture in Kansas and Texas be used for medical aid and educational assistance for young people in Lyon, Coffey and Osage counties in southeast

The income has exceeded the most optimistic expectations.

The Kansas land, which rented for $4.45 an acre in 1962, went for $15 an acre this year. Gas and oil royalties that totaled $11,900 in 1962 reached $559,000 last year. Annual net profit from the trust has gone from $245,000 in 1962 to $965,000 in 1978. Tague says he believes it will surpass $1 million this year.

The foundation has also helped 20 communities build parks and recreation facilities. Its contributions have ranged from $41,950 for a 9½-acre park at Admire to $180,367 for a 62-acre park in Emporia.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, APRIL 3, 1979

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You are now able to make whatever long-range plans you wish that have to do with home, family, property and possessions. Entertain at your own residence and make headway where money, stocks or bonds are concerned. Be very fundamental in your interests now.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Try to gain the goodwill of close ties and show generosity, thoughtfulness. Put more money away for a rainy day. Get away from persons who cause you to spend foolishly.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Make a better impression on friends, business contacts, etc., by being charming with them. Seek out information that is important to your well-being, and use it wisely. Be more attentive to loved ones.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Show that you are sensible where practical matters are concerned. Find a better way to add to holdings also. Show more gumption with your mate and come to a better understanding.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Know what it is you want in personal life and how best to go after it, get better results than in the past. Do some entertaining or accept invitations from good pals.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Good time to quietly reflect on the future and how to make greater progress. Listen to what a good adviser has to suggest also. Avoid one who has an eye on your assets.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You need companionship now, so see good friends you like and can trust. Gain some cherished longing by being more aggressive.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Know what your ambitions are and plan how to gain them with less effort than usual. Join in community affairs and let your voice be heard.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) It is well to get into new interests today that can improve your lot in life. Making many contacts is wise. Be careful you do not get conned into anything. Be alert.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Study financial status well and know what to do to improve it. Make it a point to show more devotion for your family.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Arrange association affairs wisely now so that they work well in the future. Take care of civic affairs later so that you add to prestige.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Schedule your work intelligently and then carry through in a positive manner, and persevere until it is done. Let co-workers understand what you have in mind and then they cooperate.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Getting in touch with congenials early can make this a happy time for you and them. Bring some talent you have to the attention of a prominent person.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have fascinating talents of a practical nature, so be sure to encourage your progeny and give as wide an education as you can afford. Do not push this child too much and you avoid a feeling of martyrdom that would be difficult to get rid of later in life.

Uncertainty In Nuclear Waste Cargos

By The Associated Press
Radiation officials contend that the shipment of nuclear plant wastes through North Carolina and South Carolina poses little hazard to public health, but others are not so sure.

An opponent of the shipments of the radioactive materials calls it a venture into the unknown.

All agree that shipments of the wastes will increase dramatically in the 1980s and that the Carolinas will bear a disproportionate share of the transportation accident risks.

William "Chip" Reynolds, a staff member of the American Friends Service Committee, which opposes the shipments, said fuel and waste shipments will more than double nationwide.

"We're (in the Carolinas) going to see some radioactive shipments quadruple in the 1980s," Reynolds said.

Reynolds based his estimate on a U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission study that forecasts a leap in power-plant shipments between 1975 and 1985 and a rise in total radioactive shipments — excluding nuclear weapons — from 2.2 million to 5.6 million each year. In addition, it is expected that the country will have 151 nuclear reactors by 1985, compared with 72 now.

And the spent fuel now stored at power plants likely will begin to move in two or three years to regional storage sites. Depending on federal policy, one such place may be the uncompleted Allied-General Nuclear Services reprocessing plant at Barnwell, S.C.

These shipments increasingly will be funneled along interstates 40, 77, 85 and 95 through the Carolinas to facilities serving the East Coast.

Donald Hopkins, a senior health physicist for the NRC, agreed that Carolinians will bear a disproportionate share of transportation accident risks.

"You are bearing a greater part of the risk than people in other parts of the country," Hopkins said. "It will be that way for some time because the East Coast is a greater user of nuclear power."

Hopkins said the Carolinas will also share in the benefits of nuclear energy. By 1985, utilities expect to have 13 nuclear reactors generating nearly half the electricity in the two states.

NRC experts acknowledge the increased shipments will be accompanied by increased radiation and higher risks of an accident that could injure or kill hundreds of people and cost millions of dollars. However, they say that transportation-related radiation in the United States each year will cause life-shortening cancers in only three persons and that the risks of catastrophic accidents are negligible because of the strong shipping casks that are required.

North Carolina requires that shippers of nuclear wastes notify the highway patrol before sending spent fuel into the state, but South Carolina has no such law.

OPEN TO FOREIGNERS

TOKYO (AP) — The birthplace of the Chinese philosopher Confucius was opened to foreigners Sunday after restoration of relics "seriously damaged" on orders of the radical "Gang of Four", China's Sinhua (Hsinhua) news agency reported.
